229 notion understanding; discernings faculties 230 lethargied paralyzed 233–34 marks of sovereignty i.e., tokens that Lear is king, and hence father to his daughters 234 false falsely 236 Which whom (Lear) 238 admiration (affected) wonderment; is . . . savor smacks much 239 other your others of your 243 deboshed debauched 245 Shows appears; Epicurism riotous living 247 graced dignified 248 desired requested 250 disquantity your train reduce the number of your dependents. 251 remainders those who remain; depend attend on you 252 besort befit 255 Degenerate unnatural 264 kite scavenging bird of prey 265 parts accomplishments 267 exact regard strict attention to detail 268 worships honor 270 engine destructive contrivance 270–71 wrenched . . . place i.e., disorders my natural self

And added to the gall.° O Lear, Lear, Lear!
Beat at this gate that let thy folly in [Striking his head.]

And thy dear judgment out. Go, go, my people.

ALBANY

My lord, I am guiltless, as I am ignorant
Of what hath moved you.

LEAR

It may be so, my lord.

Hear, Nature, hear; dear goddess, hear:
Suspend thy purpose if thou didst intend
To make this creature fruitful.
Into her womb convey sterility,
Dry up in her the organs of increase,°
And from her derogate° body never spring
A babe to honor her. If she must teem,°
Create her child of spleen,° that it may live
And be a thwart disnatured° torment to her.
Let it stamp wrinkles in her brow of youth,
With cadent° tears fret° channels in her cheeks,
Turn all her mother's pains and benefits°
To laughter and contempt, that she may feel How sharper than a serpent's tooth it is To have a thankless child. Away, away!

Exit.

ALBANY

Now, gods that we adore, whereof comes this?

GONERIL

Never afflict yourself to know the cause,
But let his disposition° have that scope
As° dotage gives it.

Enter LEAR.

LEAR

What, fifty of my followers at a clap?°
Within a fortnight?

ALBANY

What's the matter, sir?

LEAR

I'll tell thee. [To GONERIL.] Life and death, I am ashamed

That thou hast power to shake my manhood° thus!
That these hot tears, which break from me perforce,° Should make thee worth them. Blasts and fogs upon thee!

Th' untented woundings° of a father's curse
Pierce every sense about thee! Old fond° eyes,
Beweep° this cause again, I'll pluck ye out
And cast you, with the waters that you loose,°
To temper° clay. Yea, is it come to this?

Ha! Let it be so. I have another daughter,
Who I am sure is kind and comfortable.°
When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails
She'll flay thy wolvisish visage. Thou shalt find 275

280

285

290

295

305

310

That I'll resume the shape° which thou dost think
I have cast off for ever.

Exit [LEAR, with KENT and ATTENDANTS].

GONERIL

Do you mark that?

ALBANY

I cannot be so partial, Goneril,
To the great love I bear you°—

GONERIL

Pray you, content. What, Oswald, ho!

315

[To the FOOL.]

You, sir, more knave than fool, after your master!

FOOL Nuncle Lear, nuncle Lear, tarry. Take the Fool°
with thee.

A fox, when one has caught her,
And such a daughter,
Should sure to the slaughter,
If my cap would buy a halter.°
So the Fool follows after.°

320

Exit.

GONERIL

This man hath had good counsel. A hundred knights!
'Tis politic° and safe to let him keep
At point° a hundred knights: yes, that on every dream,
Each buzz,° each fancy, each complaint, dislike,
He may enguard° his dotage with their pow'rs
And hold our lives in mercy.° Oswald, I say!

325

ALBANY

Well, you may fear too far.

GONERIL

Safer than trust too far.

330

Let me still take away the harms I fear,
Not fear still to be taken.° I know his heart.
What he hath uttered I have writ my sister.
If she sustain him and his hundred knights,
When I have showed th' unfitness—

Enter OSWALD.

How now, Oswald? 335

What, have you writ that letter to my sister?

OSWALD Ay, madam.

GONERIL

Take you some company,° and away to horse.
Inform her full of my particular° fear,
And thereto add such reasons of your own
As may compact° it more. Get you gone,
And hasten your return. [Exit OSWALD.] No, no, my
lord,
This milky gentleness and course° of yours,
Though I condemn not,° yet under pardon,
You are much more attasked° for want of wisdom
Than praised for harmful mildness.°

340

345

ALBANY

How far your eyes may pierce I cannot tell;

272 gall bitterness 281 increase childbearing 282 derogate degraded 283 teem conceive 284 spleen ill humor 285 thwart disnatured perverse unnatural 287 cadent falling; fret wear 288 benefits the mother's beneficent care of her child 294 disposition mood 295 As that 296 at a clap at one stroke 299 shake my manhood i.e., with tears 300 perforce involuntarily, against my will 302 untented woundings wounds too deep to be probed with a tent (a roll of lint) 303 fond foolish 304 Beweep if you weep over 305 loose (1) let loose (2) lose, as of no avail 306 temper mix with and soften 308 comfortable ready to comfort

311 shape i.e., kingly role 313-14 I cannot . . . you i.e., even though my love inclines me to you, I must protest 317 Fool (1) the Fool himself (2) the epithet or character of "fool" 322-23 halter, after pronounced "hauter," "auter" 325 politic good policy 326 At point armed 327 buzz rumor 328 enguard protect 329 in mercy at his mercy 332 Not . . . taken rather than remain fearful of being overtaken by them 338 company escort 339 particular own 341 compact strengthen 343 milky . . . course mild and gentle way (hendiadys) 344 condemn not condemn it not 345 attasked taken to task, blamed 346 harmful mildness dangerous indulgence

Striving to better, oft we mar what's well.

GONERIL Nay then—

ALBANY Well, well, th' event.° Exeunt. 350

Scene V. [Court before the same.]

Enter LEAR, KENT, and FOOL.

LEAR Go you before to Gloucester with these letters.

Acquaint my daughter no further with anything you know than comes from her demand out of the letter.°

If your diligence be not speedy, I shall be there afore you. 5

KENT I will not sleep, my lord, till I have delivered your letter. Exit.

FOOL If a man's brains were in's heels, were't° not in danger of kibes?°

LEAR Ay, boy. 10

FOOL Then I prithee be merry. Thy wit shall not go slipshod.°

LEAR Ha, ha, ha.

FOOL Shalt° see thy other daughter will use thee kindly;° for though she's as like this as a crab's° like 15 an apple, yet I can tell what I can tell.

LEAR Why, what canst thou tell, my boy?

FOOL She will taste as like this as a crab does to a crab. Thou canst tell why one's nose stands i' th' middle on's° face? 20

LEAR No.

FOOL Why, to keep one's eyes of° either side's nose, that what a man cannot smell out, he may spy into.

LEAR I did her wrong.

FOOL Canst tell how an oyster makes his shell? 25

LEAR No.

FOOL Nor I neither; but I can tell why a snail has a house.

LEAR Why?

FOOL Why, to put's head in; not to give it away to 30 his daughters, and leave his horns° without a case.

LEAR I will forget my nature.° So kind a father! Be my horses ready?

FOOL Thy asses are gone about 'em. The reason why the seven stars° are no moe° than seven is a pretty° 35 reason.

LEAR Because they are not eight.

FOOL Yes indeed. Thou wouldst make a good fool.

LEAR To take't again perforce!° Monster ingratitude!

FOOL If thou wert my fool, nuncle, I'd have thee 40 beaten for being old before thy time.

LEAR How's that?

FOOL Thou shouldst not have been old till thou hadst been wise.

LEAR

O, let me not be mad, not mad, sweet heaven! 45

Keep me in temper;° I would not be mad!

[Enter GENTLEMAN.]

How now, are the horses ready?

GENTLEMAN Ready, my lord.

LEAR Come, boy.

FOOL

She that's a maid now, and laughs at my departure, 50

Shall not be a maid long, unless things be cut shorter.°

Exeunt.

A C T I I

Scene I. [The Earl of Gloucester's castle.]

Enter EDMUND and CURAN, severally.°

EDMUND Save° thee, Curan.

CURAN And you, sir. I have been with your father, and given him notice that the Duke of Cornwall and Regan his duchess will be here with him this night.

EDMUND How comes that? 5

CURAN Nay, I know not. You have heard of the news abroad? I mean the whispered ones, for they are yet but ear-kissing arguments.°

EDMUND Not I. Pray you, what are they?

CURAN Have you heard of no likely° wars toward,° 10 'twixt the Dukes of Cornwall and Albany?

EDMUND Not a word.

CURAN You may do, then, in time. Fare you well, sir. Exit.

EDMUND

The duke be here tonight? The better!° best! 15

This weaves itself perforce° into my business.

My father hath set guard to take my brother,

And I have one thing of a queasy question°

Which I must act. Briefness° and Fortune, work!

Brother, a word; descend. Brother, I say! 20

Enter EDGAR.

My father watches. O sir, fly this place.

Intelligence° is given where you are hid.

You have now the good advantage of the night.

Have you not spoken 'gainst the Duke of Cornwall?

He's coming hither, now i' th' night, i' th' haste,° 25

And Regan with him. Have you nothing said

Upon his party° 'gainst the Duke of Albany?

Advise yourself.°

EDGAR I am sure on't,° not a word.

46 in temper sane 50-51 She . . . shorter The maid who laughs, missing the tragic implications of this quarrel, will not have sense enough to preserve her virginity ("things" = penises)

II.i.s.d. severally separately (from different entrances onstage) 1 Save God save 8 ear-kissing arguments subjects whispered in the ear 10 likely probable; toward impending 15 The better So much the better 16 perforce necessarily 18 of . . . question that requires delicate handling (to be "queasy" is to be on the point of vomiting) 19 Briefness speed 22 Intelligence information 25 i' th' haste in great haste 27 Upon his party censuring his enmity 28 Advise yourself Reflect; on't of it

350 th' event i.e., we'll see what happens

I.v.3. than . . . letter than her reading of the letter brings her to ask 8 were't i.e., the brains 9 kibes chilblains 11-12 Thy . . . slipshod Your brains shall not go in slippers (because you have no brains to be protected from chilblains) 14 Shalt thou shalt 15 kindly (1) affectionately (2) after her kind or nature; crab crab apple 19 on's of his 22 of on 31 horns (1) snail's horns (2) cuckold's horns 32 nature paternal instincts 35 seven stars the Pleiades; moe more; pretty apt 39 To . . . perforce (1) of Goneril, who has forcibly taken away Lear's privileges; or (2) of Lear, who meditates a forcible resumption of authority

EDMUND

I hear my father coming. Pardon me:
In cunning° I must draw my sword upon you. 30
Draw, seem to defend yourself; now quit you° well.
Yield! Come before my father! Light ho, here!
Fly, brother. Torches, torches!—So farewell.

Exit EDGAR.

Some blood drawn on me would beget opinion°

[Wounds his arm.]

Of my more fierce endeavor. I have seen drunkards 35
Do more than this in sport. Father, father!
Stop, stop! No help?

Enter GLOUCESTER, and SERVANTS with torches.

GLOUCESTER

Now, Edmund, where's the villain?

EDMUND

Here stood he in the dark, his sharp sword out,
Mumbling of wicked charms, conjuring the moon 40
To stand auspicious mistress.

GLOUCESTER

But where is he?

EDMUND

Look, sir, I bleed.

GLOUCESTER

Where is the villain, Edmund?

EDMUND

Fled this way, sir, when by no means he could—

GLOUCESTER

Pursue him, ho! Go after. [Exeunt some SERVANTS.]

By no means what?

EDMUND

Persuade me to the murder of your lordship; 45
But that I told him the revenging gods
'Gainst parricides did all the thunder bend;°
Spoke with how manifold and strong a bond
The child was bound to th' father. Sir, in fine,°
Seeing how loathly opposite° I stood 50
To his unnatural purpose, in fell° motion°
With his preparèd sword he charges home
My unprovided° body, latched° mine arm;
But when he saw my best alarumed° spirits
Bold in the quarrel's right,° roused to th' encounter, 55
Or whether gasted° by the noise I made,
Full suddenly he fled.

GLOUCESTER

Let him fly far.

Not in this land shall he remain uncaught;
And found—dispatch.° The noble duke my master,
My worthy arch° and patron, comes tonight. 60
By his authority I will proclaim it,
That he which finds him shall deserve our thanks,
Bringing the murderous coward to the stake.
He that conceals him, death.°

EDMUND

When I dissuaded him from his intent, 65
And found him pight° to do it, with curst° speech

I threatened to discover° him. He replied, “Thou unpossessing° bastard, dost thou think,
If I would stand against thee, would the reposal°
Of any trust, virtue, or worth in thee 70
Make thy words faithed?° No. What I should deny—
As this I would, ay, though thou didst produce
My very character°—I'd turn it all
To thy suggestion,° plot, and damnèd practice.°
And thou must make a dullard of the world,° 75
If they not thought° the profits of my death
Were very pregnant° and potential spirits°
To make thee seek it.”

GLOUCESTER

O strange and fastened° villain!

Would he deny his letter, said he? I never got° him.

Tucket° within.

Hark, the duke's trumpets. I know not why he comes. 80
All ports° I'll bar; the villain shall not 'scape;
The duke must grant me that. Besides, his picture
I will send far and near, that all the kingdom
May have due note of him; and of my land,
Loyal and natural° boy, I'll work the means 85
To make thee capable.°

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, and ATTENDANTS.

CORNWALL

How now, my noble friend! Since I came hither,
Which I can call but now, I have heard strange news.

REGAN

If it be true, all vengeance comes too short
Which can pursue th' offender. How dost, my lord? 90

GLOUCESTER

O madam, my old heart is cracked, it's cracked.

REGAN

What, did my father's godson seek your life?
He whom my father named, your Edgar?

GLOUCESTER

O lady, lady, shame would have it hid.

REGAN

Was he not companion with the riotous knights 95
That tended upon my father?

GLOUCESTER

I know not, madam. 'Tis too bad, too bad.

EDMUND

Yes, madam, he was of that consort.°

REGAN

No marvel then, though he were ill affected.°
'Tis they have put° him on the old man's death, 100
To have th' expense and waste° of his revenues.
I have this present evening from my sister
Been well informed of them, and with such cautions
That, if they come to sojourn at my house,
I'll not be there.

CORNWALL

Nor I, assure thee, Regan. 105

30 In cunning as a pretense 31 quit you acquaint yourself
34 beget opinion create the impression 47 bend aim 49 in fine finally 50 loathly opposite bitterly opposed 51 fell deadly; motion thrust (a term from fencing) 53 unprovided unprotected; latched wounded (lanced) 54 best alarumed wholly aroused 55 Bold . . . right confident in the rightness of my cause 56 gasted struck aghast 59 dispatch i.e., he will be killed 60 arch chief 64 death the same elliptical form that characterizes “dispatch,” line 59 66 pight determined; curst angry

67 discover expose 68 unpossessing beggarly (landless) 69 reposal placing 71 faithed believed 73 character handwriting 74 suggestion instigation; practice device 75 make . . . world think everyone stupid 76 not thought did not think 77 pregnant teeming with incitement; potential spirits powerful evil spirits 78 fastened hardened 79 got begot 79 s.d. Tucket Cornwall's special trumpet call 81 ports exits, of whatever sort 85 natural (1) kind (filial) (2) illegitimate 86 capable able to inherit 98 consort company 99 ill affected disposed to evil 100 put set 101 expense and waste squandering

Edmund, I hear that you have shown your father
A childlike° office.

EDMUND It was my duty, sir.

GLOUCESTER

He did bewray his practice,° and received
This hurt you see, striving to apprehend him.

CORNWALL

Is he pursued?

GLOUCESTER Ay, my good lord.

CORNWALL

If he be taken, he shall never more
Be feared of doing° harm. Make your own purpose,
How in my strength you please.° For you, Edmund,
Whose virtue and obedience° doth this instant
So much commend itself, you shall be ours.
Natures of such deep trust we shall much need;
You we first seize on.

EDMUND I shall serve you, sir,

Truly, however else.

GLOUCESTER For him I thank your grace.

CORNWALL

You know not why we came to visit you?

REGAN

Thus out of season, threading dark-eyed night.
Occasions, noble Gloucester, of some prize,°
Wherein we must have use of your advice.
Our father he hath writ, so hath our sister,
Of differences,° which° I best thought it fit
To answer from° our home. The several messengers
From hence attend dispatch.° Our good old friend,
Lay comforts to your bosom,° and bestow
Your needful° counsel to our businesses,
Which craves the instant use.°

GLOUCESTER I serve you, madam.

Your graces are right welcome. Exeunt. Flourish. 130

Scene II. [Before Gloucester's castle.]

Enter KENT and OSWALD, severally.

OSWALD Good dawning° to thee, friend. Art of this house?°

KENT Ay.

OSWALD Where may we set our horses?

KENT I' th' mire.

OSWALD Prithee, if thou lov'st me, tell me.

KENT I love thee not.

OSWALD Why then, I care not for thee.

KENT If I had thee in Lipsbury Pinfold,° I would make thee care for me.

107 childlike filial 108 bewray his practice disclose his plot 112 of doing because he might do 112-13 Make . . .
please Use my power freely, in carrying out your plans for his capture 114 virtue and obedience virtuous obedience 121 prize importance 124 differences quarrels; which referring not to "differences," but to the letter Lear has written 125 from away from 126 attend dispatch are waiting to be sent off 127 Lay . . . bosom console yourself (about Edgar's supposed treason) 128 needful needed 129 craves . . .
use demands immediate transaction

II.ii.1 dawning dawn is impending, but not yet arrived 1-2
Art . . . house Do you live here? 9 Lipsbury Pinfold a pound or pen in which strayed animals are enclosed ("Lipsbury" may denote a particular place, or may be slang for "between my teeth")

OSWALD Why dost thou use me thus? I know thee
not.

KENT Fellow, I know thee.

OSWALD What dost thou know me for?

KENT A knave, a rascal, an eater of broken meats;° 15 a base, proud, shallow, beggarly, three-suited,° hundred-pound,° filthy worsted-stocking° knave; a lily-livered, action-taking,° whoreson, glass-gazing,° superserviceable,° finical° rogue; one-trunk-inheriting° slave; one that wouldst be a bawd in way of good 20 service,° and art nothing but the composition° of a knave, beggar, coward, pander, and the son and heir of a mongrel bitch; one whom I will beat into clamorous whining if thou deniest the least syllable of thy addition.° 25

OSWALD Why, what a monstrous fellow art thou, thus to rail on one that is neither known of thee nor knows thee!

KENT What a brazen-faced varlet art thou to deny thou knowest me! Is it two days since I tripped up 30 thy heels and beat thee before the king? [Drawing his sword.] Draw, you rogue, for though it be night, yet the moon shines. I'll make a sop o' th' moonshine° of you. You whoreson cullionly barbermonger,° draw!

OSWALD Away, I have nothing to do with thee. 35

KENT Draw, you rascal. You come with letters against the king, and take Vanity the puppet's° part against the royalty of her father. Draw, you rogue, or I'll so carbonado° your shanks. Draw, you rascal.
Come your ways!° 40

OSWALD Help, ho! Murder! Help!

KENT Strike, you slave! Stand, rogue! Stand, you neat° slave! Strike!

[Beating him.]

OSWALD Help, ho! Murder, murder!

Enter EDMUND, with his rapier drawn, CORNWALL,
REGAN, GLOUCESTER, SERVANTS.

EDMUND How now? What's the matter? Part! 45

KENT With you,° goodman boy,° if you please!
Come, I'll flesh° ye, come on, young master.

GLOUCESTER Weapons? Arms? What's the matter
here?

CORNWALL Keep peace, upon your lives. He dies 50 that strikes again. What is the matter?

15 broken meats scraps of food 16 three-suited the wardrobe permitted to a servant or "knave" 17 hundred- pound the extent of Oswald's wealth, and thus a sneer at his aspiring to gentility; worsted-stocking worn by servants 18 action-taking one who refuses a fight and goes to law instead;
glass-gazing conceited 19 superserviceable sycophantic, serving without principle; finical overfastidious; one-trunk- inheriting possessing only a trunkful of goods 20-21 bawd
. . . service pimp, to please his master 21 composition compound 25 addition titles 33 sop . . . moonshine i.e., Oswald will admit the moonlight, and so sop it up, through the open wounds Kent is preparing to give him 34 cullionly barbermonger base patron of hairdressers (effeminate man) 37 Vanity the puppet's Goneril, here identified with one of the personified characters in the morality plays, which were sometimes put on as puppet shows 39 carbonado cut across, like a piece of meat before cooking 40 Come your ways
Get along! 43 neat (1) foppish (2) unmixed, as in "neat wine" 46 With you i.e., the quarrel is with you; goodman boy young man (peasants are "goodmen"; "boy" is a term of contempt) 47 flesh introduce to blood (term from hunting)

REGAN The messengers from our sister and the king.

CORNWALL What is your difference?° Speak.

OSWALD I am scarce in breath, my lord.

KENT No marvel, you have so bestirred° your valor. 55

You cowardly rascal, nature disclaims in thee.° A tailor made thee.°

CORNWALL Thou art a strange fellow. A tailor make a man?

KENT A tailor, sir. A stonecutter or a painter could 60 not have made him so ill, though they had been but two years o' th' trade.

CORNWALL

Speak yet, how grew your quarrel?

OSWALD This ancient ruffian, sir, whose life I have spared at suit of° his gray beard— 65

KENT Thou whoreson zed,° thou unnecessary letter!

My lord, if you will give me leave, I will tread this unbolted° villain into mortar and daub the wall of a jakes° with him. Spare my gray beard, you wagtail!°

CORNWALL

Peace, sirrah! 70

You beastly° knave, know you no reverence?

KENT

Yes, sir, but anger hath a privilege.

CORNWALL

Why art thou angry?

KENT

That such a slave as this should wear a sword,

Who wears no honesty. Such smiling rogues as these, 75

Like rats, oft bite the holy cords° atwain

Which are too intrince° t' unloose; smooth° every passion

That in the natures of their lords rebel,

Being oil to fire, snow to the colder moods;

Renege,° affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks° 80

With every gale and vary° of their masters,

Knowing naught, like dogs, but following.

A plague upon your epileptic° visage!

Smile you° my speeches, as I were a fool?

Goose, if I had you upon Sarum Plain,° 85

I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot.°

CORNWALL

What, art thou mad, old fellow?

GLOUCESTER

How fell you out? Say that.

KENT

No contraries° hold more antipathy

Than I and such a knave. 90

CORNWALL

Why dost thou call him knave? What is his fault?

KENT

His countenance likes° me not.

CORNWALL

No more perchance does mine, nor his, nor hers.

KENT

Sir, 'tis my occupation to be plain:

I have seen better faces in my time 95

Than stands on any shoulder that I see

Before me at this instant.

CORNWALL

This is some fellow

Who, having been praised for bluntness, doth affect

A saucy roughness, and constrains the garb

Quite from his nature.° He cannot flatter, he; 100

An honest mind and plain, he must speak truth.

And° they will take it, so; if not, he's plain.

These kind of knaves I know, which in this plainness

Harbor more craft and more corrupter ends

Than twenty silly-ducking observants° 105

That stretch their duties nicely.°

KENT

Sir, in good faith, in sincere verity,

Under th' allowance° of your great aspect,°

Whose influence,° like the wreath of radiant fire

On flick'ring Phoebus' front°—

CORNWALL

What mean'st by this? 110

KENT To go out of my dialect,° which you discom-mend so much. I know, sir, I am no flatterer. He° that beguiled you in a plain accent was a plain knave, which, for my part, I will not be, though I should win your displeasure to entreat me to't.° 115

CORNWALL

What was th' offense you gave him?

OSWALD

I never gave him any.

It pleased the king his master very late°

To strike at me, upon his misconstruction;°

When he, compact,° and flattering his displeasure, 120

Tripped me behind; being down, insulted, railed,

And put upon him such a deal of man°

That worthied him,° got praises of the king

For him attempting who was self-subdued;°

And, in the fleshment° of this dread exploit, 125

Drew on me here again.

53 difference quarrel 55 bestirred exercised 56 nature . . . thee nature renounces any part in you 56-57 A tailor made thee from the proverb "The tailor makes the man" 65 at suit of out of pity for 66 zed the letter Z, generally omitted in contemporary dictionaries 68 unbolted unsifted, i.e., altogether a villain 69 jakes privy; wagtail a bird that bobs its tail up and down, and thus suggests obsequiousness 71 beastly irrational 76 holy cords sacred bonds of affection (as between husbands and wives, parents and children) 77 intrince entangled, intricate; smooth appease 80 Renege deny; halcyon beaks the halcyon or kingfisher serves here as a type of the opportunist because, when hung up by the tail or neck, it was supposed to turn with the wind, like a weathervane 81 gale and vary varying gale (hendiadys) 83 epileptic distorted by grinning 84 Smile you do you smile at 85 Sarum Plain Salisbury Plain 86 Camelot the residence of King Arthur (presumably a particular point, now lost, is intended here) 89 contraries opposites

92 likes pleases 99-100 constrains . . . nature forces the manner of candid speech to be a cloak, not for candor but for craft 102 And if 105 silly-ducking observants ridiculously obsequious attendants 106 nicely punctiliously 108 allowance approval; aspect (1) appearance (2) position of the heavenly bodies 109 influence astrological power 110 Phoebus' front forehead of the sun 111 dialect customary manner of speaking 112 He i.e., the sort of candid-crafty man Cornwall has been describing 114-15 though . . . to't even if I were to succeed in bringing your graceless person ("displeasure" personified, and in lieu of the expected form, "your grace") to beg me to be a plain knave 118 very late recently 119 misconstruction misunderstanding 120 compact in league with the king 122 put . . . man pretended such manly behavior 123 worthied him made him seem heroic 124 For . . . self-subdued for attacking a man (Oswald) who offered no resistance 125 fleshment the blood-thirstiness excited by his first success or "fleshing"

KENT None of these rogues and cowards
But Ajax is their fool.^o

CORNWALL Fetch forth the stocks!
You stubborn^o ancient knave, you reverent^o braggart,
We'll teach you.

KENT Sir, I am too old to learn.
Call not your stocks for me, I serve the king, 130
On whose employment I was sent to you.
You shall do small respect, show too bold malice
Against the grace and person^o of my master,
Stocking his messenger.

CORNWALL Fetch forth the stocks. As I have life and honor, 135
There shall he sit till noon.

REGAN Till noon? Till night, my lord, and all night too.

KENT Why, madam, if I were your father's dog,
You should not use me so.

REGAN Sir, being his knave, I will.

CORNWALL This is a fellow of the selfsame color^o 140
Our sister speaks of. Come, bring away^o the stocks.
Stocks brought out.

GLOUCESTER Let me beseech your grace not to do so.
His fault is much, and the good king his master
Will check^o him for't. Your purposed^o low correction 145
Is such as basest and contemnèd'st^o wretches
For pilf'rings and most common trespasses
Are punished with.
The king his master needs must take it ill
That he, so slightly valued in^o his messenger,
Should have him thus restrained.

CORNWALL I'll answer^o that. 150

REGAN My sister may receive it much more worse,
To have her gentleman abused, assaulted,
For following her affairs. Put in his legs.
[KENT is put in the stocks.]
Come, my good lord, away!
[Exeunt all but GLOUCESTER and KENT.]

GLOUCESTER I am sorry for thee, friend. 'Tis the duke's pleasure, 155
Whose disposition^o all the world well knows
Will not be rubbed^o nor stopped. I'll entreat for thee.

KENT Pray do not, sir. I have watched^o and traveled hard.
Some time I shall sleep out, the rest I'll whistle.
A good man's fortune may grow out at heels.^o 160

126-27 None . . . fool i.e., cowardly rogues like Oswald always impose on fools like Cornwall (who is likened to Ajax: [1] the braggart Greek warrior [2] a jakes or privy) 128 stubborn rude; reverent old 133 grace and person i.e., Lear as sovereign and in his personal character 140 color kind 141 away out 144 check correct; purposed intended 145 contemnèd'st most despised 149 slightly valued in little honored in the person of 150 answer answer for 156 disposition inclination 157 rubbed diverted (metaphor from the game of bowls) 158 watched gone without sleep 160 A . . . heels Even a good man may have bad fortune

Give^o you good morrow.

GLOUCESTER The duke's to blame in this. 'Twill be ill taken.^o Exit.

KENT Good king, that must approve^o the common saw,^o
Thou out of heaven's benediction com'st 165
To the warm sun.^o
Approach, thou beacon to this under globe,^o
That by thy comfortable^o beams I may 170
Peruse this letter. Nothing almost sees miracles
But misery.^o I know 'tis from Cordelia,
Who hath most fortunately been informed
Of my obscurèd^o course. And shall find time
From this enormous state, seeking to give Losses their remedies.^o All weary and o'erwatched,
Take vantage,^o heavy eyes, not to behold
This shameful lodging. Fortune, good night; 175
Smile once more, turn thy wheel.^o
Sleeps.

[Scene III. A wood.]

Enter EDGAR.

EDGAR I heard myself proclaimed,
And by the happy^o hollow of a tree
Escaped the hunt. No port is free, no place
That guard and most unusual vigilance
Does not attend my taking.^o Whiles I may 'scape, 5
I will preserve myself; and am bethought^o
To take the basest and most poorest shape
That ever penury, in contempt of man,
Brought near to beast;^o my face I'll grime with filth,
Blanket^o my loins, elf^o all my hairs in knots, 10
And with presented^o nakedness outface^o
The winds and persecutions of the sky.
The country gives me proof^o and precedent
Of Bedlam^o beggars, who, with roaring voices,
Strike^o in their numbed and mortified^o bare arms 15
Pins, wooden pricks,^o nails, sprigs of rosemary;
And with this horrible object^o from low^o farms,
Poor pelting^o villages, sheepcotes, and mills, Sometimes with lunatic bans,^o sometime with prayers,

161 Give God give 162 taken received 163 approve confirm; saw proverb 164-65 Thou . . . sun i.e., Lear goes from better to worse, from heaven's blessing or shelter to lack of shelter 166 beacon . . . globe i.e., the sun, whose rising Kent anticipates 167 comfortable comforting 168-69 Nothing . . . misery i.e., True perception belongs only to the wretched 171 obscurèd disguised 171-73 shall . . . remedies a possible reading: Cordelia, away from this monstrous state of things, will find occasion to right the wrongs we suffer 174 vantage advantage (of sleep) 176 turn thy wheel i.e., so that Kent, who is at the bottom, may climb upward II.iii.2 happy lucky 5 attend my taking watch to capture me 6 am bethought have decided 8-9 penury . . . beast poverty, to show how contemptible man is, reduced to the level of a beast 10 Blanket cover only with a blanket; elf tangle (into "elflocks," supposed to be caused by elves) 11 presented the show of; outface brave 13 proof example 14 Bedlam see I.ii.138-39 15 Strike stick; mortified not alive to pain 16 pricks skewers 17 object spectacle; low humble 18 pelting paltry 19 bans curses

Enforce their charity. Poor Turlygod, Poor Tom,^o 20
That's something yet: Edgar I nothing am.^o Exit.

[Scene IV. Before Gloucester's castle. KENT in the stocks.]

Enter LEAR, FOOL, and GENTLEMAN.

LEAR
'Tis strange that they should so depart from home,
And not send back my messenger.

GENTLEMAN As I learned,
The night before there was no purpose^o in them
Of this remove.^o

KENT Hail to thee, noble master.

LEAR Ha! 5
Mak'st thou this shame thy pastime?^o

KENT No, my lord.

FOOL Ha, ha, he wears cruel^o garters. Horses are tied by the heads, dogs and bears by th' neck, monkeys by th' loins, and men by th' legs. When a man's overlusty at legs,^o then he wears wooden netherstocks.^o 10

LEAR
What's he that hath so much thy place mistook
To set thee here?

KENT It is both he and she,
Your son and daughter.

LEAR No.

KENT Yes. 15

LEAR No, I say.

KENT I say yea.

LEAR No, no, they would not.

KENT Yes, they have.

LEAR
By Jupiter, I swear no! 20

KENT
By Juno, I swear ay!

LEAR They durst not do't;
They could not, would not do't. 'Tis worse than murder

To do upon respect^o such violent outrage.
Resolve^o me with all modest^o haste which way
Thou mightst deserve or they impose this usage, 25
Coming from us.

KENT My lord, when at their home
I did commend^o your highness' letters to them,
Ere I was risen from the place that showed
My duty kneeling, came there a reeking post,^o
Stewed^o in his haste, half breathless, panting forth 30
From Goneril his mistress salutations,
Delivered letters, spite of intermission,^o
Which presently^o they read; on^o whose contents

20 Poor . . . Tom Edgar recites the names a Bedlam beggar gives himself 21 That's . . . am There's a chance for me in that I am no longer known for myself

II.iv.3 purpose intention 4 remove removal 6 Mak'st . . . pastime Are you doing this to amuse yourself? 7 cruel (1) painful (2) "crewel," a worsted yarn used in garters 9-10 overlusty at legs (1) a vagabond (2) sexually promiscuous (?) 10 netherstocks stockings (as opposed to knee breeches, or upperstocks) 23 upon respect (1) on the respect due to the king (2) deliberately 24 Resolve inform; modest becoming 27 commend deliver 29 reeking post sweating messenger 30 stewed steaming 32 spite of intermission in spite of the interrupting of my business 33 presently at once; on on the strength of

They summoned up their meiny,^o straight took horse,
Commanded me to follow and attend 35
The leisure of their answer, gave me cold looks,
And meeting here the other messenger,
Whose welcome I perceived had poisoned mine,
Being the very fellow which of late
Displayed^o so saucily against your highness, 40
Having more man than wit^o about me, drew;
He raised^o the house, with loud and coward cries.
Your son and daughter found this trespass worth^o
The shame which here it suffers.
FOOL Winter's not gone yet, if the wild geese fly that 45 way.^o

Fathers that wear rags
Do make their children blind,^o
But fathers that bear bags^o
Shall see their children kind. 50
Fortune, that arrant whore,
Ne'er turns the key^o to th' poor.
But for all this, thou shalt have as many dolors^o for thy daughters as thou canst tell^o in a year.

LEAR
O, how this mother^o swells up toward my heart! 55
Hysterica passio,^o down, thou climbing sorrow,
Thy element's^o below. Where is this daughter?

KENT
With the earl, sir, here within.

LEAR Follow me not;
Stay here. Exit.

GENTLEMAN
Made you no more offense but what you speak of? 60
KENT None.

How chance^o the king comes with so small a number?
FOOL And^o thou hadst been set i' th' stocks for that question, thou'dst well deserved it.

KENT Why, Fool? 65

FOOL We'll set thee to school to an ant, to teach thee there's no laboring i' th' winter.^o All that follow their noses are led by their eyes but blind men, and there's not a nose among twenty but can smell him that's stinking.^o Let go thy hold when a great wheel runs 70 down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following. But the great one that goes upward, let him draw thee after. When a wise man gives thee better counsel, give me mine again. I would have none but knaves follow it since a fool gives it. 75

34 meiny retinue 40 Displayed showed off 41 more . . . wit more manhood than sense 42 raised aroused 43 worth deserving 45-46 Winter's . . . way More trouble is to come, since Cornwall and Regan act so ("geese" is used contemptuously, as in Kent's quarrel with Oswald, II.ii.85-86) 48 blind i.e., indifferent 49 bags moneybags 52 turns the key i.e., opens the door 53 dolors (1) sorrows (2) dollars (English name for Spanish and German coins) 54 tell (1) tell about (2) count 55-56 mother . . . Hysterica passio hysteria, causing suffocation or choking 57 element proper place 62 How chance how does it happen that 63 And if 66-67 We'll . . . winter in the popular fable the ant, unlike the improvident grasshopper, anticipates the winter when none can labor by laying up provisions in the summer; Lear, trusting foolishly to summer days, finds himself unprovided for, and unable to provide, now that "winter" has come 67-70 All . . . stinking i.e., all can smell out the decay of Lear's fortunes

That sir, which serves and seeks for gain,
And follows but for form,^o
Will pack,^o when it begins to rain,
And leave thee in the storm.
But I will tarry; the Fool will stay,
And let the wise man fly.
The knave turns Fool that runs away,
The Fool no knave,^o perdy.^o

KENT Where learned you this, Fool?

FOOL Not i' th' stocks, fool.

Enter LEAR and GLOUCESTER.

LEAR

Deny^o to speak with me? They are sick, they are weary,

They have traveled all the night? Mere fetches,^o

The images^o of revolt and flying off!^o

Fetch me a better answer.

GLOUCESTER

My dear lord,
You know the fiery quality^o of the duke,
How unremovable and fixed he is
In his own course.

LEAR

Vengeance, plague, death, confusion!

Fiery? What quality? Why, Gloucester, Gloucester,

I'd speak with the Duke of Cornwall and his wife.

GLOUCESTER

Well, my good lord, I have informed them so.

LEAR

Informed them? Dost thou understand me, man?

GLOUCESTER

Ay, my good lord.

LEAR

The king would speak with Cornwall. The dear father Would with his daughter speak, commands—tends^o—service.

Are they informed of this? My breath and blood!

Fiery? The fiery duke, tell the hot duke that—

No, but not yet. May be he is not well.

Infirmity doth still neglect all office

Whereto our health is bound.^o We are not ourselves

When nature, being oppressed, commands the mind

To suffer with the body. I'll forbear;

And am fallen out^o with my more headier will^o

To take the indisposed and sickly fit

For the sound man. [Looking on KENT.] Death on my state!^o Wherefore

Should he sit here? This act persuades me

That this remotion^o of the duke and her

Is practice^o only. Give me my servant forth.^o

Go tell the duke and's wife I'd speak with them!

Now, presently!^o Bid them come forth and hear me,

Or at their chamber door I'll beat the drum

Till it cry sleep to death^o

GLOUCESTER

I would have all well betwixt you.

Exit.

LEAR

O me, my heart, my rising heart! But down!

FOOL Cry to it, nuncle, as the cockney^o did to the eels when she put 'em i' th' paste^o alive. She knapped^o
'em o' th' coxcombs^o with a stick and cried, "Down, wantons,^o down!" 'Twas her brother that, in pure kindness to his horse, buttered his hay.^o

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GLOUCESTER, SER-VANTS.

LEAR

Good morrow to you both.

CORNWALL

Hail to your grace.

KENT here set at liberty.

REGAN

I am glad to see your highness.

LEAR

Regan, I think you are. I know what reason

I have to think so. If thou shouldst not be glad,

I would divorce me from thy mother's tomb,

Sepulchring an adultress.^o [To KENT.] O, are you free?

Some other time for that. Beloved Regan,

Thy sister's naught.^o O Regan, she hath tied

Sharp-toothed unkindness, like a vulture, here.

[Points to his heart.]

I can scarce speak to thee. Thou'lt not believe

With how depraved a quality^o—O Regan!

REGAN

I pray you, sir, take patience. I have hope

You less know how to value her desert

Than she to scant her duty.^o

LEAR

Say? how is that?

REGAN

I cannot think my sister in the least

Would fail her obligation. If, sir, perchance

She have restrained the riots of your followers,

'Tis on such ground, and to such wholesome end,

As clears her from all blame.

LEAR

My curses on her!

REGAN

O, sir, you are old,

Nature in you stands on the very verge

Of his confine.^o You should be ruled, and led 116 cry . . . death follow sleep, like a cry or pack of hounds, until it kills it 119 cockney Londoner (ignorant city dweller) 120 paste pastry pie; knapped rapped 121 coxcombs heads 122 wantons i.e., playful things (with a sexual implication) 123 buttered his hay i.e., the city dweller does from ignorance what the dishonest ostler does from craft: greases the hay the traveler has paid for, so that the horse will not eat 128-29 divorce . . . adultress i.e., repudiate your dead mother as having conceived you by another man 131 naught wicked 134 quality nature 135-37 I have . . . duty despite the double negative, the passage means, "I believe that you fail to give Goneril her due, rather than that she fails to fulfill her duty" 144-45 Nature . . . confine i.e., you are nearing the end of your life

77 form show 78 pack be off 82-83 The . . . knave i.e., the faithless man is the true fool, for wisdom requires fidelity;
Lear's Fool, who remains faithful, is at least no knave 83 perdy by God (French par Dieu) 86 Deny refuse 87 fetches subterfuges, acts of tacking (nautical metaphor) 88 images exact likenesses; flying off desertion 90 quality temperament 99 tends attends (i.e., awaits); with, possibly, an ironic second meaning, "tenders," or "offers" 104 Whereto . . .
bound duties which we are required to perform, when in health 107 fallen out angry; headier will headlong inclination 109 state royal condition 111 remotion (1) removal
(2) remaining aloof 112 practice pretense; forth i.e., out of the stocks 114 presently at once

By some discretion that discerns your state
Better than you yourself.° Therefore I pray you
That to our sister you do make return,
Say you have wronged her.

LEAR Ask her forgiveness?
Do you but mark how this becomes the house:°
“Dear daughter, I confess that I am old.

[Kneeling.]

Age is unnecessary. On my knees I beg
That you'll vouchsafe me raiment, bed, and food.”

REGAN

Good sir, no more. These are unsightly tricks.
Return you to my sister.

LEAR

[Rising.] Never, Regan.

She hath abated° me of half my train,
Looked black upon me, struck me with her tongue,
Most serpentlike, upon the very heart.
All the stored vengeance of heaven fall
On her ingrateful top!° Strike her young bones,°
You taking° airs, with lameness.

CORNWALL

Fie, sir, fie!

LEAR

You nimble lightnings, dart your blinding flames
Into her scornful eyes! Infect her beauty,
You fen-sucked° fogs, drawn by the pow'rful sun,
To fall and blister° her pride.

REGAN

O the blest gods!

So will you wish on me when the rash mood is on.

LEAR

No, Regan, thou shalt never have my curse.
Thy tender-hefted° nature shall not give Thee o'er to harshness. Her eyes are fierce, but thine
Do comfort, and not burn. 'Tis not in thee
To grudge my pleasures, to cut off my train,
To bandy° hasty words, to scant my sizes,°
And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt°
Against my coming in. Thou better know'st
The offices of nature, bond of childhood,°
Effects° of courtesy, dues of gratitude.
Thy half o' th' kingdom hast thou not forgot,
Wherein I thee endowed.

REGAN

Good sir, to th' purpose.°

Tucket within.

LEAR

Who put my man i' th' stocks?

CORNWALL

What trumpet's that?

REGAN

I know't—my sister's. This approves° her letter,

180

That she would soon be here.

Enter OSWALD.

Is your lady come?

LEAR

This is a slave, whose easy borrowed° pride
Dwells in the fickle grace° of her he follows.
Out, varlet,° from my sight.

CORNWALL

What means your grace?

LEAR

Who stocked my servant? Regan, I have good hope 185
Thou didst not know on't.

Enter GONERIL.

Who comes here? O heavens!

155

If you do love old men, if your sweet sway
Allow° obedience, if you yourselves are old,
Make it° your cause. Send down, and take my part.

[To GONERIL.]

160

Art not ashamed to look upon this beard?
O Regan, will you take her by the hand?

190

GONERIL

Why not by th' hand, sir? How have I offended?
All's not offense that indiscretion finds°
And dotage terms so.

LEAR

O sides,° you are too tough!

Will you yet hold? How came my man i' th' stocks? 195

CORNWALL

I set him there, sir; but his own disorders°
Deserved much less advancement.°

LEAR

You? Did you?

REGAN

I pray you, father, being weak, seem so.°
If till the expiration of your month
You will return and sojourn with my sister, 200
Dismissing half your train, come then to me.
I am now from home, and out of that provision
Which shall be needful for your entertainment.°

LEAR

Return to her, and fifty men dismissed?
No, rather I abjure all roofs, and choose 205
To wage° against the enmity o' th' air,
To be a comrade with the wolf and owl,
Necessity's sharp pinch.° Return with her?
Why, the hot-blooded° France, that dowerless took
Our youngest born, I could as well be brought 210
To knee° his throne, and, squirelike,° pension beg
To keep base life afoot. Return with her?
Persuade me rather to be slave and sumpter°
To this detested groom. [Pointing at OSWALD.]

GONERIL

At your choice, sir.

LEAR

I prithee, daughter, do not make me mad. 215
I will not trouble thee, my child; farewell.

146-47 some . . . yourself some discreet person who understands your condition more than you do 150 becomes the house suits my royal and paternal position 156 abated curtailed 160 top head; young bones the reference may be to unborn children, rather than to Goneril herself 161 taking infecting 164 fen-sucked drawn up from swamps by the sun 165 fall and blister fall upon and raise blisters 168 tender-hefted gently framed 172 bandy volley (metaphor from tennis); scant my sizes reduce my allowances 173 oppose the bolt bar the door 175 offices . . . childhood natural duties, a child's duty to its parent 176 Effects manifestations 178 to th' purpose come to the point 180 approves confirms

182 easy borrowed (1) facile and taken from another (2) acquired without anything to back it up (like money borrowed without security) 183 grace favor 184 varlet base fellow 188 Allow approve of 189 it my cause 193 finds judges 194 sides breast 196 disorders misconduct 197 advancement promotion 198 seem so act weak 203 entertainment maintenance 206 wage fight 208 Necessity's sharp pinch a summing up of the hard choice he has just announced 209 hot-blooded passionate 211 knee kneel before; squirelike like a retainer 213 sumpter pack horse

We'll no more meet, no more see one another.
But yet thou art my flesh, my blood, my daughter,
Or rather a disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine. Thou art a boil,
A plague-sore, or embossèd carbuncle°
In my corrupted blood. But I'll not chide thee.
Let shame come when it will, I do not call it.
I do not bid the Thunder-bearer° shoot,
Nor tell tales of thee to high-judging° Jove.
Mend when thou canst, be better at thy leisure,
I can be patient, I can stay with Regan,
I and my hundred knights.

REGAN Not altogether so.
I looked not for you yet, nor am provided
For your fit welcome. Give ear, sir, to my sister,
For those that mingle reason with your passion°
Must be content to think you old, and so—
But she knows what she does.

LEAR Is this well spoken?

REGAN
I dare avouch° it, sir. What, fifty followers?
Is it not well? What should you need of more?
Yea, or so many, sith that° both charge° and danger
Speak 'gainst so great a number? How in one house
Should many people, under two commands,
Hold° amity? 'Tis hard, almost impossible.

GONERIL
Why might not you, my lord, receive attendance
From those that she calls servants, or from mine?

REGAN
Why not, my lord? If then they chanced to slack° ye,
We could control them. If you will come to me
(For now I spy a danger), I entreat you
To bring but five-and-twenty. To no more
Will I give place or notice.°

LEAR
I gave you all.

REGAN And in good time you gave it.

LEAR
Made you my guardians, my depositaries,°
But kept a reservation° to be followed
With such a number. What, must I come to you
With five-and-twenty? Regan, said you so?

REGAN
And speak't again, my lord. No more with me.

LEAR
Those wicked creatures yet do look well-favored°
When others are more wicked; not being the worst Stands in some rank of praise.° [To GONERIL.] I'll go
with thee.

Thy fifty yet doth double five-and-twenty,
And thou art twice her love.°

GONERIL Hear me, my lord.
What need you five-and-twenty? ten? or five?

To follow° in a house where twice so many
Have a command to tend you?

REGAN What need one? 260

220 LEAR
O reason° not the need! Our basest beggars
Are in the poorest thing superfluous.°

225 Allow not nature more than nature needs,° Man's life is cheap as beast's. Thou art a lady:
If only to go warm were gorgeous, 265

Why, nature needs not what thou gorgeous wear'st,
Which scarcely keeps thee warm.° But, for true need—
You heavens, give me that patience, patience I need.
You see me here, you gods, a poor old man,
As full of grief as age, wretched in both. 270

230 If it be you that stirs these daughters' hearts
Against their father, fool° me not so much
To bear° it tamely; touch me with noble anger,
And let not women's weapons, water drops,
Stain my man's cheeks. No, you unnatural hags! 275
I will have such revenges on you both
That all the world shall—I will do such things—
What they are, yet I know not; but they shall be
The terrors of the earth. You think I'll weep.
No, I'll not weep. 280

Storm and tempest.

240 I have full cause of weeping, but this heart
Shall break into a hundred thousand flaws°
Or ere° I'll weep. O Fool, I shall go mad!

Exeunt LEAR, GLOUCESTER, KENT, and FOOL.

CORNWALL
Let us withdraw, 'twill be a storm.

REGAN
245 This house is little; the old man and's people
Cannot be well bestowed.° 285

GONERIL
'Tis his own blame; hath° put himself from rest°
And must needs taste his folly.

REGAN
For his particular,° I'll receive him gladly,
But not one follower.

250 GONERIL So am I purposed.° 290
Where is my Lord of Gloucester?

CORNWALL
Followed the old man forth.

Enter GLOUCESTER.

He is returned.

GLOUCESTER
255 The king is in high rage.

CORNWALL Whither is he going?

GLOUCESTER
He calls to horse, but will I know not whither.

259 follow attend on you 261 reason scrutinize
262 Are . . . superfluous have some trifle not absolutely necessary 263 needs i.e., to sustain life 265-67 If . . .
warm If to satisfy the need for warmth were to be gorgeous,
you would not need the clothing you wear, which is worn more for beauty than warmth 272 fool humiliate 273 To bear as to make me bear 282 flaws (1) pieces (2) cracks (3) gusts of passion 283 Or ere before 286 bestowed lodged 287 hath he hath; rest (1) place of residence (2) repose of mind 289 his particular himself personally 290 purposed determined

221 embossèd carbuncle swollen boil 224 Thunder-bearer Jupiter 225 high-judging (1) supreme (2) judging from heaven 231 mingle . . . passion i.e., consider your turbulent behavior coolly and reasonably 234 avouch swear by 236 sith that since; charge expense 239
Hold preserve 242 slack neglect 246 notice recognition 248 depositaries trustees 249 reservation condition 253 well-favored handsome 254-55 not . . . praise i.e., that Goneril is not so bad as Regan is one thing in her favor 257 her love i.e., as loving as she

CORNWALL

'Tis best to give him way, he leads himself.° 295

GONERIL

My lord, entreat him by no means to stay.

GLOUCESTER

Alack, the night comes on, and the high winds
Do sorely ruffle.° For many miles about
There's scarce a bush.

REGAN

O, sir, to willful men

The injuries that they themselves procure 300
Must be their schoolmasters. Shut up your doors.
He is attended with a desperate train,
And what they may incense° him to, being apt
To have his ear abused,° wisdom bids fear.

CORNWALL

Shut up your doors, my lord; 'tis a wild night. 305
My Regan counsels well. Come out o' th' storm.Exeunt.

A C T I I I

Scene I. [A heath.]Storm still.° Enter KENT and a GENTLEMAN severally.

KENT

Who's there besides foul weather?

GENTLEMAN

One minded like the weather most unquietly.°

KENT

I know you. Where's the king?

GENTLEMAN

Contending with the fretful elements;
Bids the wind blow the earth into the sea, 5
Or swell the curlèd waters 'bove the main,°
That things might change° or cease; tears his white hair,
Which the impetuous blasts, with eyeless° rage,
Catch in their fury, and make nothing of;
Strives in his little world of man° to outscorn 10
The to-and-fro-conflicting wind and rain.
This night, wherein the cub-drawn° bear would couch,°The lion, and the belly-pinched° wolf
Keep their fur dry, unbonneted° he runs,
And bids what will take all.°

KENT

But who is with him? 15

GENTLEMAN

None but the Fool, who labors to outjest
His heart-struck injuries.

KENT

Sir, I do know you,

And dare upon the warrant of my note°

295 give . . . himself let him go; he insists on his own way 298 ruffle rage 303 incense incite 303-04 being . . . abused he being inclined to harken to bad counsel III.i.s.d. still continually 2 minded . . . unquietly disturbed in mind, like the weather 6 main land 7 change (1) be destroyed (2) be exchanged (i.e., turned upside down) (3) change for the better 8 eyeless (1) blind (2) invisible 10 little . . . man the microcosm, as opposed to the universe or macrocosm, which it copies in little 12 cub-drawn sucked dry by her cubs, and so ravenously hungry; couch take shelter in its lair 13 belly-pinched starved 14 unbonneted hatless 15 take all like the reckless gambler, staking all he has left 18 warrant . . . note strength of what I have taken note (of you)

Commend a dear thing° to you. There is division, 20
Although as yet the face of it is covered
With mutual cunning, 'twixt Albany and Cornwall;
Who have—as who have not, that° their great stars
Throned° and set high?—servants, who seem no less,°
Which are to France the spies and speculations 25
Intelligent° of our state. What hath been seen,
Either in snuffs and packings° of the dukes,
Or the hard rein which both of them hath borne°
Against the old kind king, or something deeper,
Whereof, perchance, these are but furnishings°— 30
But, true it is, from France there comes a power°
Into this scattered° kingdom, who already,
Wise in our negligence, have secret feet
In some of our best ports, and are at point°
To show their open banner. Now to you:
If on my credit you dare build° so far 35
To° make your speed to Dover, you shall find
Some that will thank you, making° just° report
Of how unnatural and bemadding° sorrow
The king hath cause to plain.°
I am a gentleman of blood and breeding,° 40
And from some knowledge and assurance° offer
This office° to you.

GENTLEMAN

I will talk further with you.

KENT

No, do not.

For confirmation that I am much more 45
Than my out-wall,° open this purse and take
What it contains. If you shall see Cordelia,
As fear not but you shall, show her this ring,
And she will tell you who that fellow° is
That yet you do not know. Fie on this storm!
I will go seek the king. 50

GENTLEMAN

Give me your hand. Have you no more to say?

KENT

Few words, but, to effect,° more than all yet:
That when we have found the king—in which your pain°
That way, I'll this—he that first lights on him,
Holla the other. Exeunt [severally]. 55

Scene II. [Another part of the heath.]Storm still. Enter LEAR and FOOL.

LEAR

Blow, winds, and crack your cheeks. Rage, blow!
You cataracts and hurricanoes,° spout

19 Commend . . . thing entrust important business
22 that whom 22-23 stars Throned destinies have throned
23 seem no less seem to be so 24-25 speculations Intelli- gent giving intelligence 26 snuffs and packings quarrels and plots 27 hard . . . borne close and cruel control they have exercised 29 furnishings excuses 30 power army 31 scattered disunited 33 at point ready 35 If . . . build if you can trust me, proceed 36 To as to 37 making for making; just accurate 38 bemadding maddening 39 plain complain of 40 blood and breeding noble family 41 knowledge and assurance sure and trustworthy information 42 office service (i.e., the trip to Dover) 45 out-wall superficial appearance 48 fellow companion 52 to effect in their importance 53 pain labor
III.ii.2 hurricanoes waterspouts

Till you have drenched our steeples, drowned the cocks.°

You sulph'rous and thought-executing° fires,
Vaunt-couriers° of oak-cleaving thunderbolts, 5 Singe my white head. And thou, all-shaking thunder,

Strike flat the thick rotundity° o' th' world,
Crack Nature's molds,° all germains spill° at once,
That makes ingrateful° man.

FOOL O nuncle, court holy-water° in a dry house is 10 better than this rain water out o' door. Good nuncle, in; ask thy daughters blessing. Here's a night pities neither wise man nor fools.

LEAR

Rumble thy bellyful. Spit, fire. Spout, rain!
Nor rain, wind, thunder, fire are my daughters. 15
I tax° not you, you elements, with unkindness.
I never gave you kingdom, called you children,
You owe me no subscription.° Then let fall
Your horrible pleasure.° Here I stand your slave,
A poor, infirm, weak, and despised old man. 20
But yet I call you servile ministers,°
That will with two pernicious daughters join
Your high-engendered battles° 'gainst a head
So old and white as this. O, ho! 'tis foul.

FOOL He that has a house to put's head in has a good 25
headpiece.°

The codpiece° that will house
Before the head as any,
The head and he° shall louse:
So beggars marry many.° 30
The man that makes his toe
What he his heart should make
Shall of a corn cry woe,
And turn his sleep to wake.°

For there was never yet fair woman but she made 35 mouths in a glass.°

Enter KENT.

LEAR

No, I will be the pattern of all patience,
I will say nothing.

KENT Who's there?

FOOL Marry,° here's grace and a codpiece; that's a 40 wise man and a fool.°

KENT

Alas, sir, are you here? Things that love night
Love not such nights as these. The wrathful skies Gallow° the very wanderers of the dark
And make them keep° their caves. Since I was man, 45
Such sheets of fire, such bursts of horrid° thunder,
Such groans of roaring wind and rain, I never Remember to have heard. Man's nature cannot carry°
Th' affliction nor the fear.

LEAR

Let the great gods
That keep this dreadful pudder° o'er our heads 50
Find out their enemies now.° Tremble, thou wretch,
That hast within thee undivulged crimes
Unwhipped of justice. Hide thee, thou bloody hand,
Thou perjured,° and thou simular° of virtue
That art incestuous. Caitiff,° to pieces shake, 55
That under covert and convenient seeming°
Has practiced on° man's life. Close° pent-up guilts,
Rive° your concealing continents° and cry
These dreadful summoners grace.° I am a man
More sinned against than sinning.

KENT

Alack, bareheaded? 60
Gracious my lord,° hard by here is a hovel;
Some friendship will it lend you 'gainst the tempest.
Repose you there, while I to this hard house
(More harder than the stones whereof 'tis raised,
Which even but now, demanding after° you, 65
Denied me to come in) return, and force
Their scanted° courtesy.

LEAR

My wits begin to turn.
Come on, my boy. How dost, my boy? Art cold?
I am cold myself. Where is this straw, my fellow?
The art° of our necessities is strange, 70
That can make vile things precious. Come, your hovel.
Poor Fool and knave, I have one part in my heart
That's sorry yet for thee.

FOOL [Singing.]

He that has and a little tiny wit,
With heigh-ho, the wind and the rain, 75
Must make content with his fortunes fit,°
Though the rain it raineth every day.

LEAR True, my good boy. Come, bring us to this hovel. Exit, [with KENT].

FOOL This is a brave° night to cool a courtesan. I'll 80 speak a prophecy ere I go:

40 Marry a mild oath, from "By the Virgin Mary" 40-41 here's . . . fool Kent's question is answered: the king ("grace") is here, as well as the Fool—who customarily wears an exaggerated codpiece; but which is left ambiguous, since Lear has previously been called a codpiece 44 Gallow frighten 45 keep remain inside 46 horrid horrible 48 carry endure 50 pudder turmoil 51
Find . . . now i.e., discover sinners by the terror they reveal 54 perjured perjurer; simular counterfeiter 55 Caitiff wretch 56 seeming hypocrisy 57 practiced on plotted against; Close hidden 58 Rive split open; continents containers 58-59 cry . . . grace beg mercy from the vengeful gods (here figured as officers who summoned a man charged with immorality before the ecclesiastical court) 61 Gracious my lord my gracious lord 65 demanding after asking for 67 scanted stinted 70 art magic powers of the alchemists, who sought to transmute base metals into precious 76 Must . . . fit must be satisfied with a fortune as tiny as his wit 80 brave fine

3 cocks weathercocks 4 thought-executing (1) doing execution as quick as thought (2) executing or carrying out the thought of him who hurls the lightning 5 Vaunt-couriers heralds, scouts who range before the main body of the army 7 rotundity i.e., not only the sphere of the globe, but the roundness of gestation (Delius) 8 Nature's molds the molds or forms in which men are made;
all germains spill destroy the basic seeds of life 9 ingrateful ungrateful 10 court holy-water flattery 16 tax accuse 18 subscription allegiance, submission 19 pleasure will 21 ministers agents 23 high-engendered battles armies formed in the heavens 26 headpiece (1) helmet (2) brain 27 codpiece penis (literally, padding worn at the crotch of a man's hose) 29 he it 30 many i.e., lice 27-30 The . . .
many The man who gratifies his sexual appetites before he has a roof over his head will end up a lousy beggar 31-34 The . . . wake The man who, ignoring the fit order of things, elevates what is base above what is noble, will suffer for it as Lear has, in banishing Cordelia and enriching her sisters 35-36 made . . . glass posed before a mirror (irrelevant nonsense, except that it calls to mind the general theme of vanity and folly)

When priests are more in word than matter;
 When brewers mar their malt with water;
 When nobles are their tailors' tutors,
 No heretics burned, but wenches' suitors;° 85
 When every case in law is right,
 No squire in debt nor no poor knight;
 When slanders do not live in tongues;
 Nor cutpurses come not to throngs;
 When usurers tell their gold i' th' field,° 90
 And bawds and whores do churches build,°
 Then shall the realm of Albion°
 Come to great confusion.
 Then comes the time, who lives to see't,
 That going shall be used with feet.° 95
 This prophecy Merlin° shall make, for I live before his time. Exit.

Scene III. [Gloucester's castle.]

Enter GLOUCESTER and EDMUND.

GLOUCESTER Alack, alack, Edmund, I like not this unnatural dealing. When I desired their leave that I might pity° him, they took from me the use of mine own house, charged me on pain of perpetual displeasure neither to speak of him, entreat for him, or s any way sustain° him.

EDMUND Most savage and unnatural.

GLOUCESTER Go to; say you nothing. There is division° between the dukes, and a worse° matter than that. I have received a letter this night—'tis dangerous 10 to be spoken°—I have locked the letter in my closet.° These injuries the king now bears will be revenged home;° there is part of a power° already footed;° we must incline to° the king. I will look° him and privily° relieve him. Go you and maintain talk with the duke, 15 that my charity be not of° him perceived. If he ask for me, I am ill and gone to bed. If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king my old master must be relieved. There is strange things toward,° Edmund; pray you be careful. Exit. 20

EDMUND

This courtesy forbid° thee shall the duke
 Instantly know, and of that letter too.
 This seems a fair deserving,° and must draw me

82-85 When . . . suitors the first four prophecies are fulfilled already, and hence "confusion" has come to England: the priest does not suit his action to his words; the brewer adulterates his beer; the nobleman is subservient to his tailor (i.e., cares only for fashion); religious heretics escape, and only those burn (i.e., suffer) who are afflicted with venereal disease 90 tell . . . field count their money in the open 86-91 When . . . build the last six prophecies, as they are Utopian, are meant ironically; they will never be fulfilled 92 Albion England 95 going . . . feet people will walk on their feet 96 Merlin King Arthur's great magician who, according to Holinshed's Chronicles, lived later than Lear

III.iii.3 pity show pity to 6 sustain care for 9 division falling out; worse more serious (i.e., the French invasion) 11 spoken spoken of; closet room 13 home to the utmost; power army; footed landed 14 incline to take the side of; look search for; privily secretly 16 of by 19 toward impending 21 courtesy forbid kindness forbidden (i.e., to Lear) 23 fair deserving an action deserving reward

That which my father loses—no less than all.
 The younger rises when the old doth fall. Exit. 25

Scene IV. [The heath. Before a hovel.]

Enter LEAR, KENT, and FOOL.

KENT

Here is the place, my lord. Good my lord, enter.
 The tyranny of the open night's too rough
 For nature to endure. Storm still.

LEAR

Let me alone.

KENT

Good my lord, enter here.

LEAR

Wilt break my heart?°

KENT

I had rather break mine own. Good my lord, enter. 5

LEAR

Thou think'st 'tis much that this contentious storm
 Invades us to the skin: so 'tis to thee;

But where the greater malady is fixed,°

The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a bear;

But if thy flight lay toward the roaring sea, 10

Thou'dst meet the bear i' th' mouth.° When the mind's free,°

The body's delicate. The tempest in my mind

Doth from my senses take all feeling else,

Save what beats there. Filial ingratitude,

Is it not as° this mouth should tear this hand 15

For lifting food to't? But I will punish home.°

No, I will weep no more. In such a night

To shut me out! Pour on, I will endure.

In such a night as this! O Regan, Goneril,

Your old kind father, whose frank° heart gave all— 20

O, that way madness lies; let me shun that.

No more of that.

KENT

Good my lord, enter here.

LEAR

Prithee go in thyself; seek thine own ease.

This tempest will not give me leave to ponder

On things would hurt me more, but I'll go in. 25

[To the FOOL.]

In, boy; go first. You houseless poverty°—

Nay, get thee in. I'll pray, and then I'll sleep.

Exit [FOOL].

Poor naked wretches, wheresoe'er you are,

That bide° the pelting of this pitiless storm,

How shall your houseless heads and unfed sides, 30

Your looped and windowed° raggedness, defend you

From seasons such as these? O, I have ta'en

Too little care of this! Take physic, pomp;°

Expose thyself to feel what wretches feel,

That thou mayst shake the superflux° to them, 35

And show the heavens more just.

III.iv.4 break my heart i.e., by shutting out the storm which distracts me from thinking 8 fixed lodged (in the mind) 11 i' th' mouth in the teeth; free i.e., from care 15 as as if 16 home to the utmost 20 frank liberal (magnanimous) 26 houseless poverty the unsheltered poor, abstracted 29 bide endure 31 looped and windowed full of holes 33 Take physic, pomp Take medicine to cure yourselves, you great men 35 superflux superfluity

EDGAR [Within.] Fathom and half, fathom and half!^o Poor Tom!

Enter FOOL.

FOOL Come not in here, nuncle, here's a spirit. Help me, help me!

KENT

Give me thy hand. Who's there?

FOOL A spirit, a spirit. He says his name's Poor Tom.

KENT

What art thou that dost grumble there i' th' straw?
Come forth.

Enter EDGAR [disguised as a madman].

EDGAR Away! the foul fiend follows me. Through the sharp hawthorn blows the cold wind.^o Humh! Go to thy cold bed, and warm thee.^o

LEAR Didst thou give all to thy daughters? And art thou come to this?

EDGAR Who gives anything to Poor Tom? Whom the foul fiend hath led through fire and through flame, through ford and whirlpool, o'er bog and quagmire;
that hath laid knives under his pillow and halters in his pew,^o set ratsbane^o by his porridge,^o made him proud of heart, to ride on a bay trotting horse over four-inched bridges,^o to course^o his own shadow for^o a traitor. Bless thy five wits,^o Tom's a-cold. O, do, de, do, de, do, de. Bless thee from whirlwinds, star-blasting,^o and taking.^o Do Poor Tom some charity, whom the foul fiend vexes. There could I have him now—and there—and there again—and there.

Storm still.

LEAR

What, has his daughters brought him to this pass?^o Couldst thou save nothing? Wouldst thou give 'em
all?

FOOL Nay, he reserved a blanket,^o else we had been all shamed.

LEAR

Now all the plagues that in the pendulous^o air
Hang fated o'er^o men's faults light on thy daughters!

KENT

He hath no daughters, sir.

LEAR

Death, traitor; nothing could have subdued^o nature
To such a lowness but his unkind daughters.

Is it the fashion that discarded fathers
Should have thus little mercy on^o their flesh?
Judicious punishment—'twas this flesh begot
Those pelican^o daughters.

37 Fathom and half Edgar, because of the downpour, pretends to take soundings 45–46 Through . . . wind a line from the ballad of "The Friar of Orders Gray" 46–47 Go . . . thee a reminiscence of The Taming of the Shrew, Induction, lines 9–10, which themselves are an echo of a line in Thomas Kyd's The Spanish Tragedy 53–54 knives . . . halters . . . ratsbane the fiend tempts Poor Tom to suicide 54 pew gallery or balcony outside a window; porridge broth 55–56 ride . . . bridges i.e., risk his life 56 course chase; for as 57 five wits common wit, imagination, fantasy, estimation, memory 58–59 star-blasting the evil caused by malignant stars 59 taking pernicious influences 62 pass wretched condition 64 blanket i.e., to cover his nakedness 66 pendulous overhanging 67 fated o'er destined to punish 69 subdued reduced 72 on i.e., shown to 74 pelican supposed to feed on its parent's blood

EDGAR Pillicock sat on Pillicock Hill.^o Alow, alow, 75
loo, loo!^o

FOOL This cold night will turn us all to fools and madmen.

EDGAR Take heed o' th' foul fiend; obey thy parents;
keep thy word's justice;^o swear not; commit not^o 80 with man's sworn spouse; set not thy sweet heart on proud array. Tom's a-cold.

LEAR What hast thou been?

EDGAR A servingman, proud in heart and mind; that curled my hair, wore gloves in my cap;^o served the 85 lust of my mistress' heart, and did the act of darkness with her; swore as many oaths as I spake words, and broke them in the sweet face of heaven. One that slept in the contriving of lust, and waked to do it. Wine loved I deeply, dice dearly; and in woman out- 90 paramoured the Turk.^o False of heart, light of ear,^o bloody of hand; hog in sloth, fox in stealth, wolf in greediness, dog in madness, lion in prey.^o Let not the creaking^o of shoes nor the rustling of silks betray thy poor heart to woman. Keep thy foot out of brothels, 95 thy hand out of plackets,^o thy pen from lenders' books,^o and defy the foul fiend. Still through the hawthorn blows the cold wind; says suum, mun, nonny.^o
Dolphin^o my boy, boy, sessa!^o let him trot by.

Storm still.

LEAR Thou wert better in a grave than to answer^o 100 with thy uncovered body this extremity^o of the skies.
Is man no more than this? Consider him well. Thou ow'st^o the worm no silk, the beast no hide, the sheep no wool, the cat^o no perfume. Ha! here's three on's^o are sophisticated.^o Thou art the thing itself; unaccom- 105 modated^o man is no more but such a poor, bare, forked^o animal as thou art. Off, off, you lendings!^o
Come, unbutton here.

[Tearing off his clothes.]

FOOL Prithee, nuncle, be contented, 'tis a naughty^o night to swim in. Now a little fire in a wild^o field 110 were like an old lecher's heart—a small spark, all the rest on's^o body, cold. Look, here comes a walking fire.

Enter GLOUCESTER with a torch.

75 Pillicock . . . Hill probably quoted from a nursery rhyme, and suggested by "pelican"; "pillicock" is a term of endearment and the phallus 75–76 Alow . . . loo a hunting call, or the refrain of the song (?) 80 keep . . . justice i.e., do not break thy word; commit not i.e., adultery 85 gloves . . . cap i.e., as a pledge from his mistress 90–91 out-paramoured the Turk had more concubines than the sultan 91 light of ear ready to hear flattery and slander 93 prey preying 94 creaking deliberately cultivated, as fashionable 96 plackets opening in skirts; pen . . . books i.e., do not enter your name in the moneylender's account book 98 suum, mun, nonny the noise of the wind 99 Dolphin the French dauphin (identified by the English with the devil; Poor Tom is presumably quoting from a ballad); sessa an interjection: "Go on!" 100 answer confront, bear the brunt of 101 extremity extreme severity 103 ow'st have taken from 104 cat civet cat, whose glands yield perfume; on's of us 105 sophisticated adulterated, made artificial 105–06 unaccommodated uncivilized 107 forked i.e., two-legged; lendings borrowed garments 109 naughty wicked 110 wild barren 112 on's of his

EDGAR This is the foul fiend Flibbertigibbet.^o He begins at curfew,^o and walks till the first cock.^o He gives the web and the pin,^o squints^o the eye, and makes 115 the harelip; mildews the white^o wheat, and hurts the poor creature of earth.

Swithold footed thrice the old;^o

He met the nightmare,^o and her nine fold;^o

Bid her alight^o

And her troth plight,^o

And aroint^o thee, witch, aroint thee!

KENT

How fares your grace?

LEAR What's he?

KENT

Who's there? What is't you seek?

GLOUCESTER

What are you there? Your names?

EDGAR Poor Tom, that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the todpole, the wall-newt and the water;^o that in the fury of his heart, when the foul fiend rages, eats cow-dung for sallets,^o swallows the old rat and the ditch-dog,^o drinks the green mantle^o of the standing^o pool; who is whipped from tithing^o to tithing, and stocked, punished, and imprisoned; who hath had three suits to his back, six shirts to his body, 130

Horse to ride, and weapon to wear,

But mice and rats, and such small deer,^o

Have been Tom's food for seven long year.^o

Beware my follower!^o Peace, Smulkin,^o peace, thou fiend!

GLOUCESTER

What, hath your grace no better company?

EDGAR

The Prince of Darkness is a gentleman.

Modo^o he's called, and Mahu.^o

GLOUCESTER

Our flesh and blood, my lord, is grown so vile

That it doth hate what gets^o it.

EDGAR Poor Tom's a-cold.

GLOUCESTER

Go in with me. My duty cannot suffer^o

T' obey in all your daughters' hard commands.

Though their injunction be to bar my doors

And let this tyrannous night take hold upon you,

Yet have I ventured to come seek you out

And bring you where both fire and food is ready.

LEAR

First let me talk with this philosopher.

What is the cause of thunder?

KENT

Good my lord, take his offer; go into th' house.

LEAR

I'll talk a word with this same learned Theban.^o 155

What is your study?^o

EDGAR

How to prevent^o the fiend, and to kill vermin.

120 LEAR

Let me ask you one word in private.

KENT

Importune him once more to go, my lord.

His wits begin t' unsettle.

GLOUCESTER

Canst thou blame him? 160

Storm still.

125

His daughters seek his death. Ah, that good Kent,

He said it would be thus, poor banished man!

Thou say'st the king grows mad—I'll tell thee, friend,

I am almost mad myself. I had a son,

Now outlawed from my blood;^o he sought my life 165

But lately, very late.^o I loved him, friend,

No father his son dearer. True to tell thee,

The grief hath crazed my wits. What a night's this!

I do beseech your grace—

LEAR

O, cry you mercy,^o sir.

Noble philosopher, your company.

170

EDGAR Tom's a-cold.

GLOUCESTER

In, fellow, there, into th' hovel; keep thee warm.

LEAR

Come, let's in all.

KENT

This way, my lord.

LEAR

With him!

I will keep still with my philosopher.

KENT

Good my lord, soothe^o him; let him take the fellow. 175

GLOUCESTER

Take him you on.^o

145

KENT

Sirrah, come on; go along with us.

LEAR

Come, good Athenian.^o

GLOUCESTER

No words, no words! Hush.

150

EDGAR

Child Rowland to the dark tower came;^o 180

His word was still,^o "Fie, foh, and fum,

I smell the blood of a British man."^o

Exeunt.

Scene V. [Gloucester's castle.]

Enter CORNWALL and EDMUND.

CORNWALL I will have my revenge ere I depart his house.

155 Theban i.e., Greek philosopher 156 study particular scientific study 157 prevent balk 165 outlawed . . . blood disowned and tainted, like a carbuncle in the corrupted blood 166 late recently 169 cry you mercy I beg your pardon 175 soothe humor 176 you on with you 178 Athenian i.e., philosopher (like "Theban"). 180 Child . . . came from a lost ballad (?); "child" = a candidate for knighthood; "Rowland" was Charlemagne's nephew, the hero of The Song of Roland 181 His . . . still his motto was always 181–82 Fie . . . man a deliberately absurd linking of the chivalric hero with the nursery tale of Jack the Giant-Killer

113 Flibbertigibbet a figure from Elizabethan demonology 114 curfew 9 P.M.; first cock midnight 115 web . . . pin cataract; squints crosses 116 white ripening 118 Swithold . . . old Withold (an Anglo-Saxon saint who subdued demons) walked three times across the open country 119 nightmare demon; fold offspring 120 alight i.e., from the horse she had possessed 121 her troth plight pledge her word 122 aroint be gone 128 todpole . . . water tadpole, wall lizard, water newt 130 sallets salads 131 ditch-dog dead dog in a ditch; mantle scum; standing stagnant 132 tithing a district comprising ten families 136–37 But . . . year adapted from a popular romance, "Bevis of Hampton" 136 deer game 138 follower familiar 138–42 Smulkin . . . Modo . . . Mahu Elizabethan devils, from Samuel Harsnett's Declaration of 1603 144 gets begets 146 suffer permit me

EDMUND How, my lord, I may be censured,^o that nature thus gives way to loyalty, something fears^o me to think of.

CORNWALL I now perceive it was not altogether your brother's evil disposition made him seek his death; but a provoking merit, set a-work by a reprobable badness in himself.^o

EDMUND How malicious is my fortune that I must repent to be just! This is the letter which he spoke of, which approves^o him an intelligent party^o to the advantages^o of France. O heavens, that his treason were not! or not I the detector!

CORNWALL Go with me to the duchess.

EDMUND If the matter of this paper be certain, you have mighty business in hand.

CORNWALL True or false, it hath made thee Earl of Gloucester. Seek out where thy father is, that he may be ready for our apprehension.^o

EDMUND [Aside.] If I find him comforting^o the king, it will stuff his suspicion more fully.—I will persevere^o in my course of loyalty, though the conflict be sore between that and my blood.^o

CORNWALL I will lay trust upon^o thee, and thou shalt find a dearer father in my love. Exeunt.

Scene VI. [A chamber in a farmhouse adjoining the castle.]

Enter KENT and GLOUCESTER.

GLOUCESTER Here is better than the open air; take it thankfully. I will piece out the comfort with what addition I can. I will not be long from you.

KENT All the power of his wits have given way to his impatience.^o The gods reward your kindness. Exit [GLOUCESTER].

Enter LEAR, EDGAR, and FOOL.

EDGAR Frateretto^o calls me, and tells me Nero^o is an angler in the lake of darkness. Pray, innocent,^o and beware the foul fiend.

FOOL Prithee, nuncle, tell me whether a madman be a gentleman or a yeoman.^o

LEAR A king, a king.

FOOL No, he's a yeoman that has a gentleman to his son; for he's a mad yeoman that sees his son a gentleman before him.

LEAR To have a thousand with red burning spits Come hissing^o in upon 'em—

EDGAR The foul fiend bites my back.

FOOL He's mad that trusts in the tameness of a wolf, a horse's health, a boy's love, or a whore's oath.

LEAR

It shall be done; I will arraign^o them straight.^o

[To EDGAR.]

Come, sit thou here, most learned justice.^o

[To the FOOL.]

Thou, sapient^o sir, sit here. Now, you she-foxes—

EDGAR Look, where he^o stands and glares. Want'st thou eyes at trial, madam?^o

Come o'er the bourn,^o Bessy, to me.

FOOL

Her boat hath a leak,

And she must not speak

Why she dares not come over to thee.^o

EDGAR The foul fiend haunts Poor Tom in the voice of a nightingale.^o Hoppedance^o cries in Tom's belly for two white herring.^o Croak^o not, black angel; I have no food for thee.

KENT

How do you, sir? Stand you not so amazed.^o

Will you lie down and rest upon the cushions?

LEAR

I'll see their trial first. Bring in their evidence.^o

[To EDGAR.]

Thou, robèd man of justice, take thy place.

[To the FOOL.]

And thou, his yokefellow of equity,^o

Bench^o by his side. [To KENT.] You are o' th' commission;^o

Sit you too.

EDGAR Let us deal justly.

Sleepest or wakest thou, jolly shepherd?

Thy sheep be in the corn;^o

And for one blast of thy minikin^o mouth

Thy sheep shall take no harm.^o

Purr, the cat is gray.^o

LEAR Arraign her first. 'Tis Goneril, I here take my oath before this honorable assembly, she kicked the poor king her father.

FOOL Come hither, mistress. Is your name Goneril?

LEAR She cannot deny it.

20 arraign bring to trial; straight straightaway 21 justice justicer, judge 22 sapient wise 23 he i.e., a fiend 23-24 Want'st . . . madam (to Goneril) i.e., Do you want eyes to look at you during your trial? The fiend serves that purpose 25 bourn brook (Edgar quotes from a popular ballad) 26-28 Her . . . thee the Fool parodies the ballad 30 nightingale i.e., the Fool's singing; Hoppedance Hoberdidance (another devil from Harsnett's Declaration) 31 white herring unsmoked (as against the black and sulfurous devil?); Croak rumble (because his belly is empty) 33 amazed astonished 35 evidence the evidence of witnesses against them 37 yokefellow of equity partner in justice 38 Bench sit on the bench; commission those commissioned as king's justices 41-44 Sleepest . . . harm probably quoted or adapted from an Elizabethan song 42 corn wheat 43 minikin shrill 45 gray devils were thought to assume the shape of a gray cat

III.v.3 censured judged 4 something fears somewhat frightens 8-9 a provoking . . . himself a stimulating goodness in Edgar, brought into play by a blamable badness in Gloucester 12 approves proves; intelligent party (1) spy (2) well-informed person 12-13 to the advantages on behalf of 20 apprehension arrest 21 comforting supporting (a legalism) 22 persevere persevere 24 blood natural feelings 25 lay trust upon (1) trust (2) advance

III.vi.5 impatience raging 6 Frateretto Elizabethan devil, from Harsnett's Declaration; Nero who is mentioned by Harsnett, and whose angling is reported by Chaucer in "The Monk's Tale" 7 innocent fool 10 yeoman farmer (just below a gentleman in rank; the Fool asks what class of man has most indulged his children, and thus been driven mad) 16 hissing hissing

FOOL Cry you mercy, I took you for a joint stool.°

LEAR

And here's another, whose warped looks proclaim
What store° her heart is made on. Stop her there!
Arms, arms, sword, fire! Corruption in the place!
False justicer, why hast thou let her 'scape?

55

EDGAR Bless thy five wits!

KENT

O pity! Sir, where is the patience now
That you so oft have boasted to retain?

EDGAR [Aside.]

My tears begin to take his part so much
They mar my counterfeiting.°

60

LEAR

The little dogs and all,
Tray, Blanch, and Sweetheart—see, they bark at me.

EDGAR Tom will throw his head at them. Avaunt, you curs.

Be thy mouth or black or° white,

65

Tooth that poisons if it bite;

Mastiff, greyhound, mongrel grim,

Hound or spaniel, brach° or lym,°

Or bobtail tike, or trundle-tail°—

Tom will make him weep and wail;

70

For, with throwing° thus my head,

Dogs leaped the hatch,° and all are fled.

Do, de, de, de. Sessa!° Come, march to wakes° and fairs and market towns. Poor Tom, thy horn° is dry.

LEAR Then let them anatomize Regan. See what 75 breeds about her heart.° Is there any cause in nature that make° these hard hearts? [To EDGAR.] You, sir, I entertain° for one of my hundred;° only I do not like the fashion of your garments. You will say they are Persian;° but let them be changed. 80

KENT

Now, good my lord, lie here and rest awhile.

LEAR

Make no noise, make no noise; draw the curtains.°

So, so. We'll go to supper i' th' morning.

FOOL And I'll go to bed at noon.°

Enter GLOUCESTER.

GLOUCESTER

Come hither, friend. Where is the king my master? 85

51 Cry . . . stool proverbial and deliberately impudent apology for overlooking a person; a joint stool was a low stool made by a joiner, perhaps here a stage property to represent Goneril and, in line 52, Regan, "joint stool" can also suggest the judicial bench; hence Goneril may be identified by the Fool, ironically, with those in power, who judge 53 store stuff 54 Corruption . . . place bribery in the court 60 counterfeiting i.e., feigned madness 65 or . . . or either
. . . or 68 brach bitch; lym bloodhound (from the liam or leash with which he was led) 69 bobtail . . . trundle-tail short-tailed or long-tailed cur 71 throwing jerking (as a hound lifts its head from the ground, the scent having been lost) 72 leaped the hatch leaped over the lower half of a divided door (i.e., left in a hurry) 73 Sessa Be off!; wakes feasts attending the dedication of a church 74 horn horn bottle which the Bedlam used in begging a drink (Edgar is suggesting that he is unable to play his role any longer) 75-76 Then . . .
heart i.e., If the Bedlam's horn is dry, let Regan, whose heart has become as hard as horn, be dissected 77 make subjunctive 78 entertain engage; hundred i.e., Lear's hundred knights
80 Persian gorgeous (ironically of Edgar's rags) 82 curtains
Lear imagines himself in bed 84 And . . . noon the Fool's last words

KENT

Here, sir, but trouble him not; his wits are gone.

GLOUCESTER

Good friend, I prithee take him in thy arms.

I have o'erheard a plot of death upon him.

There is a litter ready; lay him in't

And drive toward Dover, friend, where thou shalt 90 meet

Both welcome and protection. Take up thy master.

If thou shouldst dally half an hour, his life,

With thine and all that offer to defend him,

Stand in assured loss. Take up, take up,

And follow me, that will to some provision° 95

Give thee quick conduct.°

KENT

Oppressed nature sleeps.

This rest might yet have balmed thy broken sinews,°

Which, if convenience° will not allow,

Stand in hard cure.° [To the FOOL.] Come, help to 100 bear thy master.

Thou must not stay behind.

GLOUCESTER

Come, come, away! 100

Exeunt [all but EDGAR].

EDGAR

When we our betters see bearing our woes,

We scarcely think our miseries our foes.°

Who alone suffers suffers most i' th' mind,

Leaving free° things and happy shows° behind;

But then the mind much sufferance° doth o'erskip 105

When grief hath mates, and bearing fellowship.°

How light and portable° my pain seems now,

When that which makes me bend makes the king bow.

He childed as I fathered. Tom, away.

Mark the high noises,° and thyself bewray° 110

When false opinion, whose wrong thoughts° defile
thee,

In thy just proof repeals and reconciles thee.°

What will hap more° tonight, safe 'scape the king!

Lurk,° lurk. [Exit.]

Scene VII. [Gloicester's castle.]

Enter CORNWALL, REGAN, GONERIL, EDMUND, and SERVANTS.

CORNWALL [To GONERIL.] Post speedily to my lord your husband; show him this letter. The army of France is landed. [To SERVANTS.] Seek out the traitor Gloucester. [Exeunt some of the SERVANTS.]

REGAN Hang him instantly. 5

GONERIL Pluck out his eyes.

CORNWALL Leave him to my displeasure. Edmund, keep you our sister company. The revenges we are

95 provision maintenance 96 conduct direction 97 balmed . . . sinews soothed thy racked nerves 98 convenience fortunate occasion 99 Stand . . . cure will be hard to cure 102 our foes enemies peculiar to ourselves 104 free carefree; shows scenes 105 sufferance suffering 106 bearing fellowship suffering has company 107 portable able to be supported or endured 110 Mark . . . noises observe the rumors of strife among those in power; bewray reveal 111 wrong thoughts misconceptions 112 In . . . thee on the manifesting of your innocence recalls you from outlawry and restores amity between you and your father 113 What . . . more whatever else happens 114 Lurk hide bound° to take upon your traitorous father are not fit for your beholding. Advise the duke where you are going, to a most festinate° preparation. We are bound to the like. Our posts° shall be swift and intelligent° betwixt us. Farewell, dear sister; farewell, my Lord of Gloucester.°

Enter OSWALD.

How now? Where's the king?

OSWALD

My Lord of Gloucester hath conveyed him hence.
Some five or six and thirty of his knights,
Hot questrists° after him, met him at gate;
Who, with some other of the lords dependants,°
Are gone with him toward Dover, where they boast
To have well-armèd friends.

CORNWALL Get horses for your mistress.
[Exit OSWALD.]

GONERIL

Farewell, sweet lord, and sister.

CORNWALL

Edmund, farewell. [Exeunt GONERIL and EDMUND.]

Go seek the traitor Gloucester,

Pinion him like a thief, bring him before us.

[Exeunt other SERVANTS.]

Though well we may not pass upon° his life
Without the form of justice, yet our power
Shall do a court'sy to° our wrath, which men
May blame, but not control.

Enter GLOUCESTER, brought in by two or three.

Who's there, the traitor?

REGAN

Ingrateful fox, 'tis he.

CORNWALL

Bind fast his corky° arms.

GLOUCESTER

What means your graces? Good my friends, consider
You are my guests. Do me no foul play, friends.

CORNWALL

Bind him, I say. [SERVANTS bind him.]

REGAN

Hard, hard! O filthy traitor.

GLOUCESTER

Unmerciful lady as you are, I'm none.

CORNWALL

To this chair bind him. Villain, thou shalt find—

[REGAN plucks his beard.°]

GLOUCESTER

By the kind gods, 'tis most ignobly done
To pluck me by the beard.

REGAN

So white, and such a traitor?

GLOUCESTER

Naughty° lady,

These hairs which thou dost ravish from my chin

Will quicken° and accuse thee. I am your host.

40

With robber's hands my hospitable favors°

You should not ruffle° thus. What will you do?

CORNWALL

Come, sir, what letters had you late° from France?

REGAN

Be simple-answered,° for we know the truth.

CORNWALL

And what confederacy have you with the traitors

45

Late footed in the kingdom?

REGAN

To whose hands you have sent the lunatic king:

Speak.

GLOUCESTER

I have a letter guessingly° set down,

Which came from one that's of a neutral heart,

50

And not from one opposed.

CORNWALL

Cunning.

REGAN

And false.

CORNWALL

Where hast thou sent the king?

GLOUCESTER

To Dover.

REGAN

Wherefore to Dover? Wast thou not charged at peril°—

CORNWALL

Wherefore to Dover? Let him answer that.

55

GLOUCESTER

I am tied to th' stake, and I must stand the course.°

REGAN

Wherefore to Dover?

GLOUCESTER

Because I would not see thy cruel nails

Pluck out his poor old eyes; nor thy fierce sister

In his anointed° flesh rash° boarish fangs.

60

The sea, with such a storm as his bare head

In hell-black night endured, would have buoyed° up
And quenched the stellèd° fires.

Yet, poor old heart, he holp° the heavens to rain.

If wolves had at thy gate howled that dearn° time,

65

Thou shouldst have said, "Good porter, turn the key."°

All cruels else subscribe.° But I shall see

The wingèd° vengeance overtake such children.

CORNWALL

See't shalt thou never. Fellows, hold the chair.

Upon these eyes of thine I'll set my foot.

70

GLOUCESTER

He that will think° to live till he be old,

Give me some help.—O cruel! O you gods!

REGAN

One side will mock° another. Th' other too.

41 hospitable favors face of your host 42 ruffle tear at violently 43 late recently 44 simple-answered straightforward in answering 49 guessingly without certain knowledge 54 charged at peril ordered under penalty 56 course coursing (in which a relay of dogs baits a bull or bear tied in the pit) 60 anointed holy (because king); rash strike with the tusk, like a boar 62 buoyed risen 63 stellèd (1) fixed (as opposed to the planets or wandering stars) (2) starry 64 holp helped 65 dearn dread 66 turn the key i.e., unlock the gate 67 All . . . subscribe All cruel creatures but man are compassionate 68 wingèd (1) heavenly (2) swift 71 will think expects 73 mock make ridiculous (because of the contrast)

III.vii.9 bound (1) forced (2) purposing to 11 festinate speedy 12 posts messengers; intelligent full of information 13-14 Lord of Gloucester Edmund, now elevated to the title 18 questrists searchers 19 lords dependants attendant lords (members of Lear's retinue) 25 pass upon pass judgment on 27 do . . . to indulge 30 corky sapless (because old) 35 s.d. plucks his beard a deadly insult 38
Naughty wicked 40 quicken come to life

CORNWALL

If you see vengeance—

FIRST SERVANT Hold your hand, my lord!

I have served you ever since I was a child;

But better service have I never done you

Than now to bid you hold.

REGAN

How now, you dog?

FIRST SERVANT

If you did wear a beard upon your chin,

I'd shake it° on this quarrel. What do you mean!°

CORNWALL My villain!°

Draw and fight.

FIRST SERVANT

Nay, then, come on, and take the chance of anger.

REGAN

Give me thy sword. A peasant stand up thus?

She takes a sword and runs at him behind, kills him.

FIRST SERVANT

O, I am slain! my lord, you have one eye left

To see some mischief° on him. O!

CORNWALL

Lest it see more, prevent it. Out, vile jelly.

Where is thy luster now?

GLOUCESTER

All dark and comfortless. Where's my son Edmund?

Edmund, enkindle all the sparks of nature°

To quit° this horrid act.

REGAN

Out, treacherous villain,

Thou call'st on him that hates thee. It was he

That made the overture° of thy treasons to us;

Who is too good to pity thee.

GLOUCESTER

O my follies! Then Edgar was abused.°

Kind gods, forgive me that, and prosper him.

REGAN

Go thrust him out at gates, and let him smell

His way to Dover. Exit [one], with GLOUCESTER.

How is't, my lord? How look you?°

CORNWALL

I have received a hurt. Follow me, lady.

Turn out that eyeless villain. Throw this slave

Upon the dunghill. Regan, I bleed apace.

Untimely comes this hurt. Give me your arm. Exeunt. 100

SECOND SERVANT

I'll never care what wickedness I do,

If this man come to good.

THIRD SERVANT

If she live long,

And in the end meet the old course of death,°

Women will all turn monsters.

SECOND SERVANT

Let's follow the old earl, and get the Bedlam

To lead him where he would. His roguish madness

Allows itself to anything.°

79 shake it an insult comparable to Regan's plucking of Gloucester's beard; What . . . mean i.e., What terrible thing are you doing? 80 villain serf (with a suggestion of the modern meaning) 84 mischief injury 88 enkindle . . . nature fan your natural feeling into flame 89 quit requite 91 overture disclosure 93 abused wronged 96 How look you How are you? 103 meet . . . death die the customary death of old age 106-07 His . . . anything his lack of all self-control leaves him open to any suggestion

THIRD SERVANT

Go thou. I'll fetch some flax and whites of eggs

To apply to his bleeding face. Now heaven help him.

[Exeunt severally.]

A C T I V

Scene I. [The heath.]Enter EDGAR.

EDGAR

Yet better thus, and known to be contemned,°

Than still contemned and flattered. To be worst,

The lowest and most dejected° thing of fortune,

Stands still in esperance,° lives not in fear:

The lamentable change is from the best,

The worst returns to laughter.° Welcome then,

Thou unsubstantial air that I embrace!

The wretch that thou hast blown unto the worst

Owes° nothing to thy blasts.

Enter GLOUCESTER, led by an OLD MAN.

But who comes here?

My father, poorly led?° World, world, O world!

But that thy strange mutations make us hate thee,

Life would not yield to age.°

OLD MAN

O, my good lord,

I have been your tenant, and your father's tenant,

These fourscore years.

GLOUCESTER

Away, get thee away; good friend, be gone:

Thy comforts° can do me no good at all;

Thee they may hurt.°

OLD MAN

You cannot see your way.

GLOUCESTER

I have no way and therefore want° no eyes;

I stumbled when I saw. Full oft 'tis seen,

Our means secure us, and our mere defects

Prove our commodities.° Oh, dear son Edgar,

The food° of thy abused° father's wrath!

Might I but live to see thee in° my touch,

I'd say I had eyes again!

OLD MAN

How now! Who's there?

EDGAR [Aside.]

O gods! Who is't can say, "I am at the worst"?

I am worse than e'er I was.

OLD MAN

'Tis poor mad Tom.

EDGAR [Aside.]

And worse I may be yet: the worst is not

So long as we can say, "This is the worst."°

IV.i.1 known . . . contemned conscious of being despised 3 dejected abased 4 esperance hope 6 returns to laughter changes for the better 9 Owes is in debt for 10 poorly led
 (1) led like a poor man, with only one attendant (2) led by a poor man 11-12 But . . . age We should not agree to grow old and hence die, except for the hateful mutability of life 16 comforts ministrations 17 hurt injure 18 want require 20-21 Our . . . commodities Our resources make us overconfident, while our afflictions make for our advantage 22 food i.e., the object on which Gloucester's anger fed; abused deceived 23 in i.e., with, by means of 27-28 the . . .
 worst so long as a man continues to suffer (i.e., is still alive), even greater suffering may await him

OLD MAN

Fellow, where goest?

GLOUCESTER Is it a beggar-man?

OLD MAN

Madman and beggar too.

GLOUCESTER

He has some reason,° else he could not beg.

I' th' last night's storm I such a fellow saw,

Which made me think a man a worm. My son

Came then into my mind, and yet my mind

Was then scarce friends with him. I have heard more since.

As flies to wanton° boys, are we to th' gods,

They kill us for their sport.

EDGAR [Aside.] How should this be?°

Bad is the trade that must play fool to sorrow,

Ang'ring° itself and others. Bless thee, master!

GLOUCESTER

Is that the naked fellow?

OLD MAN

Ay, my lord.

GLOUCESTER

Then, prithee, get thee gone: if for my sake

Thou wilt o'ertake us hence a mile or twain

I' th' way toward Dover, do it for ancient° love,

And bring some covering for this naked soul,

Which I'll entreat to lead me.

OLD MAN

Alack, sir, he is mad.

GLOUCESTER

'Tis the time's plague,° when madmen lead the blind.

Do as I bid thee, or rather do thy pleasure;°

Above the rest,° be gone.

OLD MAN

I'll bring him the best 'parel° that I have,

Come on't what will.

GLOUCESTER

Sirrah, naked fellow—

EDGAR

Poor Tom's a-cold. [Aside.] I cannot daub it° further.

GLOUCESTER

Come hither, fellow.

EDGAR [Aside.]

And yet I must.—Bless thy sweet eyes, they bleed.

GLOUCESTER

Know'st thou the way to Dover?

EDGAR

Both stile and gate, horse-way and footpath.

Poor Tom hath been scared out of his good wits.

Bless thee, good man's son, from the foul fiend!

Five fiends have been in Poor Tom at once; of lust, as Obidicut;° Hobbididence, prince of dumbness;° Mahu, 60 of stealing; Modo, of murder; Flibbertigibbet, of mopping and mowing;° who since possesses chambermaids and waiting-women. So, bless thee, master!

31 reason faculty of reasoning 36 wanton (1) playful (2) reckless37 How . . . be i.e., How can this horror be? 39 Ang'ringoffending 43 ancient (1) the love the Old Man feels, by virtue of his long tenancy (2) the love that formerly obtained between master and man 46 time's plague characteristic dis-order of this time 47 thy pleasure as you like it 48 the restall 49 'parel apparel 52 daub it lay it on (figure fromplastering mortar) 60 Obidicut Hoberdicut, a devil (like thefour that follow, from Harsnett's Declaration); dumbness muteness (like the crimes and afflictions in the next lines, the result of diabolic possession) 62 mopping and mowing grimacing and making faces

GLOUCESTER

Here, take this purse, thou whom the heavens' plagues

Have humbled to all strokes:° that I am wretched 65

Makes thee the happier. Heavens, deal so still!

Let the superfluous° and lust-dieted° man,

That slaves° your ordinance,° that will not see

Because he does not feel, feel your pow'r quickly;

So distribution should undo excess,° 70

And each man have enough. Dost thou know Dover?

EDGAR Ay, master.

GLOUCESTER

There is a cliff whose high and bending° head

Looks fearfully° in the confinèd deep:°

Bring me but to the very brim of it, 75

And I'll repair the misery thou dost bear

With something rich about me: from that place

I shall no leading need.

EDGAR

Give me thy arm:

Poor Tom shall lead thee.

*Exeunt.*Scene II. [Before the Duke of Albany's palace.]Enter GONERIL and EDMUND.

GONERIL

Welcome, my lord: I marvel our mild husband

Not met° us on the way.

Enter OSWALD.

Now, where's your master?

OSWALD

Madam, within; but never man so changed.

I told him of the army that was landed:

He smiled at it. I told him you were coming; 5

His answer was, "The worse." Of Gloucester's treachery,

And of the loyal service of his son

When I informed him, then he called me sot,°

And told me I had turned the wrong side out:

What most he should dislike seems pleasant to him; 10

What like,° offensive.

GONERIL [To EDMUND.]

Then shall you go no further.

It is the cowish° terror of his spirit,

That dares not undertake:° he'll not feel wrongs,

Which tie him to an answer.° Our wishes on the way 15

May prove effects.° Back, Edmund, to my brother;

Hasten his musters° and conduct his pow'rs.°

I must change names° at home and give the distaff°

65 humbled . . . strokes brought so low as to bear anything humbly 67 superfluous possessed of superfluities; lust-dieted whose lust is gratified (like Gloucester's) 68 slaves (1) tramples, spurns like a slave (2) tears, rends (Old English slaefan) (?); ordinance law 70 So . . . excess Then the man with too much wealth would distribute it among those with too little 73 bending overhanging 74 fearfully occasioning fear; confinèd deep the sea, hemmed in below

IV.ii.2 Not met did not meet 8 sot fool 11 What like what he should like 13 cowish cowardly 14 undertake venture 15 tie . . . answer oblige him to retaliate 15-16 Our . . . effects Our desires (that you might be my husband), as we journeyed here, may be fulfilled 17 musters collecting of troops; conduct his pow'rs lead his army 18 change names i.e., exchange the name of "mistress" for that of "master"; distaff spinning stick (wifely symbol)

Into my husband's hands. This trusty servant
Shall pass between us: ere long you are like to hear, 20
If you dare venture in your own behalf,
A mistress's° command. Wear this; spare speech;

[Giving a favor.]

Decline your head.° This kiss, if it durst speak,
Would stretch thy spirits up into the air:
Conceive,° and fare thee well. 25

EDMUND

Yours in the ranks of death.

GONERIL

My most dear Gloucester!
Exit [EDMUND].

O, the difference of man and man!
To thee a woman's services are due:
My fool usurps my body.°

OSWALD Madam, here comes my lord. Exit.

Enter ALBANY.

GONERIL

I have been worth the whistle.°

ALBANY

O Goneril!

You are not worth the dust which the rude wind
Blows in your face. I fear your disposition:°
That nature which contemns° its origin
Cannot be bordered certain in itself;°
She that herself will sliver and disbranch° 35
From her material sap,° perforce must wither
And come to deadly use.°

GONERIL

No more; the text° is foolish.

ALBANY

Wisdom and goodness to the vile seem vile:
Filths savor but themselves.° What have you done? 40
Tigers, not daughters, what have you performed?
A father, and a gracious aged man,
Whose reverence even the head-lugged bear° would lick,
Most barbarous, most degenerate, have you madded.°
Could my good brother suffer you to do it? 45
A man, a prince, by him so benefited!
If that the heavens do not their visible spirits°
Send quickly down to tame these vile offenses,
It will come,
Humanity must perforce prey on itself, 50
Like monsters of the deep.

GONERIL

Milk-livered° man!

That bear'st a cheek for blows, a head for wrongs;

22 mistress's lover's (and also, Albany having been disposed of, lady's or wife's) 23 Decline your head i.e., that Goneril may kiss him 25 Conceive understand (with a sexual implication, that includes "stretch thy spirits," line 24; and "death," line 26: "to die," meaning "to experience sexual intercourse") 29 My . . . body My husband wrongfully enjoys me 30 I . . . whistle i.e., Once you valued me (the proverb is implied, "It is a poor dog that is not worth the whistling") 32 disposition nature 33 contemns despises 34 bordered . . . itself kept within its normal bounds 35 sliver and disbranch cut off 36 material sap essential and life-giving sustenance 37 come . . . use i.e., be as a dead branch for the burning 38 text i.e., on which your sermon is based 40 Filths . . . themselves the filthy relish only the taste of filth 43 head-lugged bear bear-baited by the dogs, and hence enraged 44 madded made mad 47 visible spirits avenging spirits in material form 51 Milk-livered lily-livered (hence cowardly, the liver being regarded as the seat of courage)

Who hast not in thy brows an eye discerning
Thine honor from thy suffering;° that not know'st
Fools do those villains pity who are punished 55
Ere they have done their mischief.° Where's thy drum?
France spreads his banners in our noiseless° land,
With plumèd helm° thy state begins to threat,°
Whilst thou, a moral° fool, sits still and cries,
"Alack, why does he so?"

ALBANY

See thyself, devil!

60

Proper° deformity seems not in the fiend
So horrid as in woman.

GONERIL

O vain fool!

ALBANY

Thou changèd and self-covered° thing, for shame,
Be-monster not thy feature.° Were't my fitness°
To let these hands obey my blood,° 65
They are apt enough to dislocate and tear
Thy flesh and bones: howe'er° thou art a fiend,
A woman's shape doth shield thee.

GONERIL

Marry, your manhood mew°—

Enter a MESSENGER.

ALBANY What news? 70

MESSENGER

O, my good lord, the Duke of Cornwall's dead,
Slain by his servant, going to° put out
The other eye of Gloucester.

ALBANY

Gloucester's eyes!

MESSENGER

A servant that he bred,° thrilled with remorse,°
Opposed against the act, bending his sword 75
To his great master, who thereat enraged
Flew on him, and amongst them felled° him dead,
But not without that harmful stroke which since Hath plucked him after.°

ALBANY

This shows you are above,

You justicers,° that these our nether° crimes 80
So speedily can venge.° But, O poor Gloucester!
Lost he his other eye?

MESSENGER

Both, both, my lord.

This letter, madam, craves° a speedy answer;
'Tis from your sister.

GONERIL

[Aside.] One way I like this well;

53-54 discerning . . . suffering able to distinguish between insults that ought to be resented, and ordinary pain that is to be borne 55-56 Fools . . . mischief Only fools are sorry for criminals whose intended criminality is prevented by punishment 57 noiseless i.e., the drum, signifying preparation for war, is silent 58 helm helmet; thy . . . threat France begins to threaten Albany's realm 59 moral moralizing; but also with the implication that morality and folly are one 61 Proper (1) natural (to a fiend) (2) fair-appearing 63 changèd and self-covered i.e., transformed, by the contorting of her woman's face, on which appears the fiendish behavior she has allowed herself (Goneril has disguised nature by wickedness) 64 Be-monster . . . feature do not change your appearance into a fiend's; my fitness appropriate for me 65 blood passion 67 howe'er but even if 69 your manhood mew (1) coop up or confine (pretended) manhood (2) molt or shed it, if that is what is supposed to "shield" me from you 72 going to as he was about to 74 bred reared; thrilled with remorse pierced by compassion 77 amongst them felled others assisting, they felled 79 plucked him after i.e., brought Cornwall to death with his servant 80 justicers judges; nether committed below (on earth) 81 venge avenge 83 craves demands

But being widow, and my Gloucester with her, 85
 May all the building in my fancy pluck
 Upon my hateful life.° Another way,°
 The news is not so tart.°—I'll read, and answer. Exit.

ALBANY

Where was his son when they did take his eyes?

MESSENGER

Come with my lady hither.

ALBANY

He is not here. 90

MESSENGER

No, my good lord; I met him back° again.

ALBANY

Knows he the wickedness?

MESSENGER

Ay, my good lord; 'twas he informed against him,
 And quit the house on purpose, that their punishment
 Might have the freer course.

ALBANY

Gloucester, I live 95

To thank thee for the love thou showed'st the king,

And to revenge thine eyes. Come hither, friend:

Tell me what more thou know'st. Exeunt.

[Scene III. The French camp near Dover.]

Enter KENT and a GENTLEMAN.

KENT Why the King of France is so suddenly gone back, know you no reason?

GENTLEMAN Something he left imperfect in the state,° which since his coming forth is thought of, which imports° to the kingdom so much fear and danger that his personal return was most required and necessary.

KENT

Who hath he left behind him general?

GENTLEMAN The Marshal of France, Monsieur La
 Far. 10

KENT Did your letters pierce° the queen to any demonstration of grief?

GENTLEMAN

Ay, sir; she took them, read them in my presence,

And now and then an ample tear trilled° down

Her delicate cheek: it seemed she was a queen 15

Over her passion, who most rebel-like

Sought to be king o'er her.

KENT

O, then it moved her.

GENTLEMAN

Not to a rage: patience and sorrow strove

Who should express her goodliest.° You have seen

Sunshine and rain at once: her smiles and tears 20

Were like a better way:° those happy smilets°

That played on her ripe lip seemed not to know

What guests were in her eyes, which parted thence

As pearls from diamonds dropped. In brief,

86–87 May . . . life These things (line 85) may send my future hopes, my castles in air, crashing upon down the hateful (married) life I lead now 87 Another way looked at another way 88 tart sour 91 back going back

IV.iii.3–4 imperfect . . . state unsettled in his own kingdom
 5 imports portends 11 pierce impel 14 trilled trickled 19 Who . . . goodliest which should give her the most becoming expression 21 Were . . . way i.e., improved on that spectacle; smilets little smiles

Sorrow would be a rarity most beloved, 25
 If all could so become it.°

KENT

Made she no verbal question?

GENTLEMAN

Faith, once or twice she heaved° the name of "father"

Pantingly forth, as if it pressed her heart;

Cried, "Sisters! Sisters! Shame of ladies! Sisters!"

Kent! Father! Sisters! What, i' th' storm? i' th' night? 30

Let pity not be believed!"° There she shook

The holy water from her heavenly eyes,

And clamor moistened:° then away she started

To deal with grief alone.

KENT

It is the stars,

The stars above us, govern our conditions;° 35

Else one self mate and make could not beget

Such different issues.° You spoke not with her since?

GENTLEMAN No.

KENT

Was this before the king returned?

GENTLEMAN

No, since.

KENT

Well, sir, the poor distressed Lear's i' th' town; 40

Who sometime in his better tune° remembers

What we are come about, and by no means

Will yield to see his daughter.

GENTLEMAN

Why, good sir?

KENT

A sovereign° shame so elbows° him: his own unkindness

That stripped her from his benediction, turned her 45

To foreign casualties,° gave her dear rights

To his dog-hearted daughters: these things sting

His mind so venomously that burning shame

Detains him from Cordelia.

GENTLEMAN

Alack, poor gentleman!

KENT

Of Albany's and Cornwall's powers you heard not? 50

GENTLEMAN

'Tis so;° they are afoot.

KENT

Well, sir, I'll bring you to our master Lear,

And leave you to attend him: some dear cause°

Will in concealment wrap me up awhile;

When I am known aright, you shall not grieve 55

Lending me this acquaintance. I pray you, go

Along with me. [Exeunt.]

[Scene IV. The same. A tent.]

Enter, with drum and colors, CORDELIA, DOCTOR, and SOLDIERS.

CORDELIA

Alack, 'tis he: why, he was met even now

As mad as the vexed sea; singing aloud;

25–26 Sorrow . . . it sorrow would be a coveted jewel if it became others as it does her 27 heaved expressed with difficulty 31 Let . . . believed Let it not be believed for pity 33 clamor moistened moistened clamor, i.e., mixed (and perhaps assuaged) her outcries with tears 35 govern our conditions determine what we are 36–37 Else . . . issues otherwise the same husband and wife could not produce such different children 41 better tune composed, less jangled intervals 44 sovereign overpowering; elbows jogs his elbow
 (i.e., reminds him) 46 casualties chances 51 'Tis so i.e., I have heard of them 53 dear cause important reason

Crowned with rank femiter and furrow-weeds,
 With hardocks, hemlock, nettles, cuckoo-flow'rs,
 Darnel,^o and all the idle weeds that grow 5
 In our sustaining corn.^o A century^o send forth;
 Search every acre in the high-grown field,
 And bring him to our eye. [Exit an OFFICER.] What can man's wisdom^o
 In the restoring his bereavèd^o sense?
 He that helps him take all my outward^o worth. 10

DOCTOR

There is means, madam:
 Our foster-nurse^o of nature is repose,
 The which he lacks: that to provoke^o in him,
 Are many simples operative,^o whose power
 Will close the eye of anguish.

CORDELIA

All blest secrets, 15
 All you unpublished virtues^o of the earth,
 Spring with my tears! be aidant and remediate^o
 In the good man's distress! Seek, seek for him,
 Lest his ungoverned rage dissolve the life
 That wants the means to lead it.^o

Enter MESSENGER.

MESSENGER

News, madam; 20

The British pow'rs are marching hitherward.

CORDELIA

'Tis known before. Our preparation stands
 In expectation of them. O dear father,
 It is thy business that I go about;
 Therefore^o great France 25
 My mourning and importuned^o tears hath pitied.
 No blown^o ambition doth our arms incite,
 But love, dear love, and our aged father's right:
 Soon may I hear and see him! Exeunt.

[Scene V. Gloucester's castle.]

Enter REGAN and OSWALD.

REGAN

But are my brother's pow'rs set forth?

OSWALD

Ay, madam.

REGAN

Himself in person there?

OSWALD

Madam, with much ado:^o

Your sister is the better soldier.

REGAN

Lord Edmund spake not with your lord at home?

OSWALD

No, madam. 5

IV.iv.3-5 femiter . . . Darnel femiter fumitory, whose leaves and juice are bitter; furrow-weeds weeds that grow in the furrow, or plowed land; hardocks hoar or white docks (?), burdocks, harlocks; hemlock a poison; nettles plants that sting and burn; cuckoo-flow'rs identified with a plant employed to remedy diseases of the brain; Darnel tares, noisome weeds 6 sustaining corn life-maintaining wheat; century sentry (?); troop of a hundred soldiers 8 What . . . wisdom what can science accomplish 9 bereavèd impaired 10 outward material 12 foster-nurse fostering nurse 13 provoke induce 14 simples operative efficacious medicinal herbs 16 unpublished virtues i.e., secret remedial herbs 17 remediate remedial 20 wants . . . it i.e., lacks the reason to control the rage 25 Therefore because of that 26 importuned importunate 27 blown puffed up
IV.v.2 ado bother and persuasion

REGAN

What might import^o my sister's letter to him?

OSWALD

I know not, lady.

REGAN

Faith, he is posted^o hence on serious matter.

It was great ignorance,^o Gloucester's eyes being out,
 To let him live. Where he arrives he moves 10
 All hearts against us: Edmund, I think, is gone,
 In pity of his misery, to dispatch
 His nighted^o life; moreover, to descry
 The strength o' th' enemy.

OSWALD

I must needs after him, madam, with my letter. 15

REGAN

Our troops set forth tomorrow: stay with us;
 The ways are dangerous.

OSWALD

I may not, madam:

My lady charged my duty^o in this business.

REGAN

Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you Transport her purposes^o by word? Belike,^o 20
 Some things I know not what. I'll love thee much,
 Let me unseal the letter.

OSWALD

Madam, I had rather—

REGAN

I know your lady does not love her husband;
 I am sure of that: and at her late^o being here
 She gave strange eliads^o and most speaking looks 25
 To noble Edmund. I know you are of her bosom.^o

OSWALD I, madam?

REGAN

I speak in understanding: y' are; I know't:
 Therefore I do advise you, take this note:^o
 My lord is dead; Edmund and I have talked; 30
 And more convenient^o is he for my hand
 Than for your lady's: you may gather more.^o
 If you do find him, pray you, give him this;^o
 And when your mistress hears thus much from you,
 I pray, desire her call^o her wisdom to her. 35
 So, fare you well.
 If you do chance to hear of that blind traitor,
 Preferment^o falls on him that cuts him off.

OSWALD

Would I could meet him, madam! I should show
 What party I do follow.

REGAN

Fare thee well.

Exeunt. 40

[Scene VI. Fields near Dover.]

Enter GLOUCESTER and EDGAR.

GLOUCESTER

When shall I come to th' top of that same hill?

6 import purport, carry as its message 8 is posted has ridden speedily 9 ignorance folly 13 nighted (1) darkened, because blinded (2) benighted 18 charged my duty ordered me as a solemn duty 20 Transport her purposes convey her intentions; Belike probably 24 late recently 25 eliads amorous looks 26 of her bosom in her confidence 29 take this note take note of this 31 convenient fitting 32 gather more surmise more yourself 33 this this advice 35 call recall 38 Preferment promotion

EDGAR

You do climb up it now. Look, how we labor.

GLOUCESTER

Methinks the ground is even.

EDGAR

Horrible steep.

Hark, do you hear the sea?

GLOUCESTER

No, truly.

EDGAR

Why then your other senses grow imperfect

By your eyes' anguish.^o

GLOUCESTER

So may it be indeed.

Methinks thy voice is altered, and thou speak'st

In better phrase and matter than thou didst.

EDGAR

Y' are much deceived: in nothing am I changed

But in my garments.

GLOUCESTER

Methinks y' are better spoken.

EDGAR

Come on, sir; here's the place: stand still. How fearful

And dizzy 'tis to cast one's eyes so low!

The crows and choughs^o that wing the midway air^oShow scarce so gross^o as beetles. Half way downHangs one that gathers sampire,^o dreadful trade!

Methinks he seems no bigger than his head.

The fishermen that walk upon the beach

Appear like mice; and yond tall anchoring^o barkDiminished to her cock;^o her cock, a buoy

Almost too small for sight. The murmuring surge

That on th' unnumb' red idle pebble^o chafes

Cannot be heard so high. I'll look no more,

Lest my brain turn and the deficient sight

Topple^o down headlong.

GLOUCESTER

Set me where you stand.

EDGAR

Give me your hand: you are now within a foot

Of th' extreme verge: for all beneath the moon

Would I not leap upright.^o

GLOUCESTER

Let go my hand.

Here, friend, 's another purse; in it a jewel

Well worth a poor man's taking. Fairies^o and gods

Prosper it with thee! Go thou further off;

Bid me farewell, and let me hear thee going.

EDGAR

Now fare ye well, good sir.

GLOUCESTER

With all my heart.

EDGAR [Aside.]

Why I do trifle thus with his despair

Is done to cure it.^o

GLOUCESTER

O you mighty gods!

He kneels.

This world I do renounce, and in your sights

Shake patiently my great affliction off:

If I could bear it longer and not fall

IV.vi.6 anguish pain 13 choughs a kind of crow; midway air i.e., halfway down the cliff 14 gross large 15 sampire samphire, an aromatic herb associated with Dover Cliffs 18 anchoring anchored 19 cock cockboat, a small boat usually towed behind the ship 21 unnumb' red idle pebble innumerable pebbles, moved to and fro by the waves to no purpose 23-24 the . . . Topple my failing sight topple me 27 upright i.e., even up in the air, to say nothing of forward, over the cliff 29 Fairies who are supposed to guard and multiply hidden treasure 33-34 Why . . . it I play on his despair in order to cure it

To quarrel with^o your great opposeless^o wills,My snuff^o and loathèd part of nature should

Burn itself out. If Edgar live, O bless him!

Now, fellow, fare thee well. He falls.

EDGAR

Gone, sir, farewell.

And yet I know not how^o conceit^o may rob

The treasury of life, when life itself

Yields to^o the theft. Had he been where he thought,

By this had thought been past. Alive or dead?

Ho, you sir! friend! Hear you, sir! speak!

Thus might he pass^o indeed: yet he revives.

What are you, sir?

GLOUCESTER

Away, and let me die.

EDGAR

Hadst thou been aught but gossamer, feathers, air,

So many fathom down precipitating,^o

Thou'dst shivered like an egg: but thou dost breathe;

Hast heavy substance; bleed'st not; speak'st; art sound.

Ten masts at each^o make not the altitude

Which thou hast perpendicularly fell:

Thy life's^o a miracle. Speak yet again.

GLOUCESTER

But have I fall'n, or no?

EDGAR

From the dread summit of this chalky bourn.^oLook up a-height;^o the shrill-gorged^o lark so far

Cannot be seen or heard: do but look up.

GLOUCESTER

Alack, I have no eyes.

Is wretchedness deprived that benefit,

To end itself by death? 'Twas yet some comfort,

When misery could beguile^o the tyrant's rage

And frustrate his proud will.

EDGAR

Give me your arm.

Up, so. How is't? Feel you^o your legs? You stand.

GLOUCESTER

Too well, too well.

EDGAR

This is above all strangeness.

Upon the crown o' th' cliff, what thing was that

Which parted from you?

GLOUCESTER

A poor unfortunate beggar.

EDGAR

As I stood here below, methought his eyes

Were two full moons; he had a thousand noses,

Horns whelked^o and waved like the enridgèd^o sea:It was some fiend; therefore, thou happy father,^oThink that the clearest^o gods, who make them honorsOf men's impossibilities,^o have preserved thee.

GLOUCESTER

I do remember now: henceforth I'll bear

Affliction till it do cry out itself,

"Enough, enough," and die. That thing you speak of,

37-38 fall . . . with rebel against 38 opposeless not to be, and not capable of being, opposed 39 snuff the guttering (and stinking) wick of a burnt-out candle 42 how but what; conceit imagination 44 Yields to allows 47 pass die 50 precipitating falling 53 at each one on top of the other 55 life's survival 57 ourn boundary 58 a-height on high; gorged throated, voiced 63 beguile cheat (i.e., by suicide) 65 Feel you have you any feeling in 71 whelked twisted; enridgèd i.e., furrowed into waves 72 happy father fortunate old man 73 clearest purest 73-74 who . . . impossibilities who cause themselves to be honored and revered by performing miracles of which men are incapable

I took it for a man; often 'twould say,
 "The fiend, the fiend"—he led me to that place.

EDGAR

Bear free° and patient thoughts.

Enter LEAR [fantastically dressed with wild flowers].

But who comes here? 80

The safer° sense will ne'er accommodate°
 His master thus.

LEAR No, they cannot touch me for coining;° I am the king himself.

EDGAR

O thou side-piercing sight! 85

LEAR Nature's above art in that respect.° There's your press-money.° That fellow handles his bow like a crow-keeper;° draw me a clothier's yard.° Look, look, a mouse! Peace, peace; this piece of toasted cheese will do't. There's my gauntlet;° I'll prove it on° a giant. 90
 Bring up the brown bills.° O, well flown,° bird! i' th' clout, i' th' clout:° hewgh!° Give the word.°

EDGAR Sweet marjoram.°

LEAR Pass.

GLOUCESTER

I know that voice. 95

LEAR Ha! Goneril, with a white beard! They flattered me like a dog,° and told me I had white hairs in my beard ere the black ones were there.° To say "ay" and
 "no" to everything that I said! "Ay" and "no" too was no good divinity.° When the rain came to wet 100 me once and the wind to make me chatter; when the thunder would not peace at my bidding; there I found
 'em, there I smelt 'em out. Go to, they are not men o' their words: they told me I was everything; 'tis a lie,
 I am not ague-proof.° 105

GLOUCESTER

The trick° of that voice I do well remember:
 Is't not the king?

LEAR Ay, every inch a king.

When I do stare, see how the subject quakes.

I pardon that man's life. What was thy cause?°
 Adultery? 110

80 free i.e., emancipated from grief and despair, which fetter the soul 81 safer sounder, saner; accommodate dress, adorn 83 touch . . . coining arrest me for minting coins (the king's prerogative) 86 Nature's . . . respect i.e., a born king is superior to legal (and hence artificial) inhibition; there is also a glance here at the popular Renaissance debate concerning the relative importance of nature (inspiration) and art (training) 87 press-money paid to conscripted soldiers 88 crow-keeper a farmer scaring away crows; clothier's yard the standard English arrow was a cloth-yard long; here the injunction is to draw the arrow back, like a powerful archer, a full yard to the ear 90 gauntlet armored glove, thrown down as a challenge; prove it on maintain my challenge even against 91 brown bills halberds varnished to prevent rust (here the reference is to the soldiers who carry them); well flown falconer's cry; and perhaps a reference to the flight of the arrow 92 clout the target shot at; hewgh imitating the whizzing of the arrow (?); word password 93 Sweet marjoram herb, used as a remedy for brain disease 97 like a dog as a dog flatters 97-98 I . . . there I was wise before I had even grown a beard 100 no good divinity bad theology, because contrary to the biblical saying (II Corinthians 1:18), "Our word toward you was not yea and nay"; see also James 5:12, "But let your yea be yea, and your nay, nay; lest ye fall into condemnation"; and Matthew 5:36-37 105 ague-proof secure against fever 106 trick intonation 109 cause offense

Thou shalt not die: die for adultery! No:

The wren goes to't, and the small gilded fly
 Does lecher° in my sight.

Let copulation thrive; for Gloucester's bastard son
 Was kinder to his father than my daughters 115
 Got° 'tween the lawful sheets.

To't, luxury,° pell-mell! for I lack soldiers.°

Behold yond simp'ring dame,

Whose face between her forks presages snow,°

That minces° virtue and does shake the head 120

To hear of pleasure's name.°

The fitchew,° nor the soiled° horse, goes to't

With a more riotous appetite.

Down from the waist they are Centaurs,°

Though women all above: 125

But to the girdle° do the gods inherit,°

Beneath is all the fiend's.

There's hell, there's darkness, there is the sulphurous pit, burning, scalding, stench, consumption; fie, fie, fie!

pah, pah! Give me an ounce of civet;° good apothecary, 130 sweeten my imagination: there's money for thee.

GLOUCESTER

O, let me kiss that hand!

LEAR Let me wipe it first; it smells of mortality.°

GLOUCESTER

O ruined piece of nature! This great world

Shall so wear out to nought.° Dost thou know me? 135

LEAR I remember thine eyes well enough. Dost thou squiny° at me? No, do thy worst, blind Cupid;° I'll not love. Read thou this challenge;° mark but the penning of it.

GLOUCESTER

Were all thy letters suns, I could not see. 140

EDGAR

I would not take° this from report: it is,

And my heart breaks at it.

LEAR Read.

GLOUCESTER

What, with the case° of eyes?

LEAR O, ho, are you there with me?° No eyes in your 145 head, nor no money in your purse? Your eyes are in a heavy case,° your purse in a light,° yet you see how this world goes.

GLOUCESTER

I see it feelingly.°

LEAR What, art mad? A man may see how this world 150 goes with no eyes. Look with thine ears: see how yond

113 lecher copulate 116 Got begot 117 luxury lechery; for . . . soldiers i.e., (1) whom copulation will supply (?) (2) and am therefore powerless (?) 119 Whose . . . snow whose cold demeanor seems to promise chaste behavior ("forks" = legs) 120 minces squeamishly pretends to 121 pleasure's name the very name of sexual pleasure 122 fitchew polecat (and slang for prostitute); soiled put to pasture, and hence wanton with feeding 124 Centaurs lustful creatures, half man and half horse 126 girdle waist; inherit possess 130 civet perfume 133 mortality (1) death (2) existence 134-35 This . . . nought i.e., The universe (macrocosm) will decay to nothing in the same way as the little world of man (microcosm) 137 squiny squint, look sideways, like a prostitute; blind Cupid the sign hung before a brothel 138 challenge a reminiscence of lines 89-90 141 take believe 144 case empty sockets 145 are . . . me is that what you tell me 147 heavy case sad plight (pun on line 144); light i.e., empty 149 feelingly (1) by touch (2) by feeling pain (3) with emotion justice rails upon yond simple° thief. Hark, in thine ear: change places, and, handy-dandy,° which is the justice, which is the thief? Thou hast seen a farmer's dog bark at a beggar?

GLOUCESTER Ay, sir.

LEAR And the creature run from the cur? There thou mightst behold the great image of authority:° a dog's obeyed in office.°

Thou rascal beadle,° hold thy bloody hand!

Why dost thou lash that whore? Strip thy own back; Thou hotly lusts to use her in that kind°

For which thou whip'st her. The usurer hangs the cozener.°

Through tattered clothes small vices do appear;

Robes and furred gowns° hide all. Plate sin with gold, 165

And the strong lance of justice hurtless° breaks;

Arm it in rags, a pygmy's straw does pierce it.

None does offend, none, I say, none; I'll able° 'em:

Take that° of me, my friend, who have the power

To seal th' accuser's lips. Get thee glass eyes,°

And, like a scurvy politician,° seem

To see the things thou dost not. Now, now, now, now.

Pull off my boots: harder, harder: so.

EDGAR

O, matter and impertinency° mixed!

Reason in madness!

LEAR

If thou wilt weep my fortunes, take my eyes.

I know thee well enough; thy name is Gloucester:

Thou must be patient; we came crying hither:

Thou know'st, the first time that we smell the air

We wawl and cry. I will preach to thee: mark.

GLOUCESTER

Alack, alack the day!

LEAR

When we are born, we cry that we are come

To this great stage of fools. This° a good block.°

It were a delicate° stratagem, to shoe

A troop of horse with felt: I'll put't in proof;°

And when I have stol'n upon these son-in-laws,

Then, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill, kill!

152 simple common, of low estate 153 handy-dandy i.e., choose, guess (after the children's game—"Handy-dandy, prickly prandy"—of choosing the correct hand) 158 image of authority symbol revealing the true meaning of authority 158-59 a dog's . . . office i.e., whoever has power is obeyed 160 beadle parish constable 162 kind i.e., sexual act 163 The usurer . . . cozener i.e., The powerful money-lender, in his role as judge, puts to death the petty cheat 165 Robes . . . gowns worn by a judge 166 hurtless i.e., without hurting the sinner 168 able vouch for 169 that the immunity just conferred (line 168) 170 glass eyes spectacles 171 scurvy politician vile politic man 174 matter and impertinency sense and nonsense 183 This' this is; block various meanings have been suggested, for example, the stump of a tree, on which Lear is supposed to climb; a mounting-block, which suggests "horse" (line 185); a hat (which Lear or another must be made to wear), from the block on which a felt hat is molded, and which would suggest a "felt" (line 185); the proposal here is that "block" be taken to denote the quintain, whose function is to bear blows, "a mere lifeless block" (As You Like It, I.ii.247), an object shaped like a man and used for tilting practice; see also Much Ado About Nothing, II.i.231-32, "She misused me past the endurance of a block!" and, in the same passage, the associated reference, "I stood like a man at a mark [target]" (lines 237-38) 184 delicate subtle 185 put't in proof test it

Enter a GENTLEMAN, [with ATTENDANTS].

GENTLEMAN

O, here he is: lay hand upon him. Sir,

Your most dear daughter—

LEAR

No rescue? What, a prisoner? I am even

The natural fool° of fortune. Use me well;

You shall have ransom. Let me have surgeons;

I am cut° to th' brains.

GENTLEMAN

You shall have anything.

LEAR

No seconds?° all myself?

Why, this would make a man a man of salt,°

To use his eyes for garden water-pots,

Ay, and laying autumn's dust.

GENTLEMAN

Good sir—

LEAR

I will die bravely,° like a smug° bridegroom.° What!

I will be jovial: come, come; I am a king;

Masters, know you that?

GENTLEMAN

You are a royal one, and we obey you.

LEAR Then there's life in't.° Come, and you get it, you shall get it by running. Sa, sa, sa, sa.°

Exit [running; ATTENDANTS follow].

GENTLEMAN

A sight most pitiful in the meanest wretch,

Past speaking of in a king! Thou hast one daughter

Who redeems Nature from the general curse

Which twain have brought her to.°

EDGAR

Hail, gentle° sir.

GENTLEMAN

Sir, speed° you: what's your will?

EDGAR

Do you hear aught, sir, of a battle toward?°

GENTLEMAN

Most sure and vulgar:° every one hears that,

Which can distinguish sound.

EDGAR

But, by your favor,

How near's the other army?

GENTLEMAN

Near and on speedy foot; the main descry

Stands on the hourly thought.°

EDGAR

I thank you, sir: that's all.

GENTLEMAN

Though that the queen on special cause is here,

Her army is moved on.

EDGAR

I thank you, sir. Exit [GENTLEMAN].

GLOUCESTER

You ever-gentle gods, take my breath from me;

191 natural fool born sport (with pun on "natural" = imbecile) 193 cut wounded 194 seconds supporters 195 man of salt i.e., all (salt) tears 199 bravely (1) smartly attired (2) courageously; smug spick and span; bridegroom whose "brave" sexual feats are picked up in the pun on "die" 203 there's life in't there's still hope 204 Sa . . . sa hunting and rallying cry; also an interjection of defiance 207-08 general . . . to (1) universal condemnation which Goneril and Regan have made for (2) damnation incurred by the original sin of Adam and Eve 209 gentle noble; speed Godspeed 210 toward impending 211 vulgar common knowledge 214-15 the main . . . thought we expect to see the main body of the army any hour

Let not my worser spirit° tempt me again
To die before you please.

EDGAR Well pray you, father. 220

GLOUCESTER

Now, good sir, what are you?

EDGAR

A most poor man, made tame° to fortune's blows;
Who, by the art of known and feeling sorrows,°
Am pregnant° to good pity. Give me your hand,
I'll lead you to some biding.°

GLOUCESTER Hearty thanks; 225

The bounty and the benison° of heaven
To boot, and boot.°

Enter OSWALD.

OSWALD A proclaimed prize!° Most happy!°
That eyeless head of thine was first framed° flesh
To raise my fortunes. Thou old unhappy traitor,
Briefly thyself remember:° the sword is out 230
That must destroy thee.

GLOUCESTER Now let thy friendly° hand
Put strength enough to't. [EDGAR interposes.]

OSWALD Wherefore, bold peasant,
Dar'st thou support a published° traitor? Hence!
Lest that th' infection of his fortune take
Like hold on thee. Let go his arm. 235

EDGAR

Chill° not let go, zir, without vurther 'casion.°

OSWALD

Let go, slave, or thou diest!

EDGAR Good gentleman, go your gait,° and let poor volk° pass. And chud ha' bin zwaggered° out of my life, 'twould not ha' bin zo long as 'tis by a vortnight. 240
Nay, come not near th' old man; keep out, che vor' ye,° or I'se° try whether your costard° or my ballow° be the harder: chill be plain with you.

OSWALD Out, dunghill!

They fight.

EDGAR Chill pick your teeth,° zir: come; no matter 245
vor your foins.°

[OSWALD falls.]

OSWALD

Slave, thou hast slain me. Villain, take my purse:
If ever thou wilt thrive, bury my body,
And give the letters which thou find'st about° me
To Edmund Earl of Gloucester; seek him out 250
Upon the English party.° O, untimely death!
Death! He dies.

219 worser spirit bad angel, evil side of my nature 222 tame submissive 223 art . . . sorrows instruction of sorrows painfully experienced 224 pregnant disposed 225 biding place of refuge 226 benison blessing 227 To . . .
boot also, and in the highest degree; proclaimed prize
i.e., one with a price on his head; happy fortunate (for Oswald) 228 framed created 230 thyself remember i.e., pray, think of your sins 231 friendly i.e., because it offers the death Gloucester covets 233 published proclaimed 236 Chill I will (Edgar speaks in rustic dialect); vurther 'casion further occasion 238 gait way 239 volk folk; And . . . zwaggered if I could have been swaggered 241-42 che vor' ye I warrant you 242 I'se
I shall; costard head (literally, "apple"); ballow cudgel 245 Chill . . . teeth I will knock your teeth out 246 foins thrusts 249 about upon 251 party side

EDGAR

I know thee well. A serviceable° villain,
As duteous° to the vices of thy mistress
As badness would desire.

GLOUCESTER What, is he dead? 255

EDGAR

Sit you down, father; rest you.
Let's see these pockets: the letters that he speaks of
May be my friends. He's dead; I am only sorry
He had no other deathsman.° Let us see:
Leave,° gentle wax;° and, manners, blame us not: 260
To know our enemies' minds, we rip their hearts;
Their papers° is more lawful.

Reads the letter.

"Let our reciprocal vows be remembered. You have many opportunities to cut him off: if your will want not,° time and place will be fruitfully offered. There is 265 nothing done, if he return the conqueror: then am I the prisoner, and his bed my jail; from the loathed warmth whereof deliver me, and supply the place for your labor.

"Your—wife, so I would° say—affectionate servant, 270 and for you her own for venture,°
Goneril."

O indistinguished space of woman's will!°
A plot upon her virtuous husband's life;
And the exchange° my brother! Here in the sands 275
Thee I'll rake up,° the post unsanctified°
Of murderous lechers; and in the mature° time,
With this ungracious paper° strike° the sight
Of the death-practiced° duke: for him 'tis well
That of thy death and business I can tell. 280

GLOUCESTER

The king is mad: how stiff° is my vile sense,°
That I stand up, and have ingenious° feeling
Of my huge sorrows! Better I were distract:°
So should my thoughts be severed from my griefs,
And woes by wrong imaginations° lose 285
The knowledge of themselves. Drum afar off.

EDGAR

Give me your hand:
Far off, methinks, I hear the beaten drum.
Come, father, I'll bestow° you with a friend. Exeunt.

Scene VII. [A tent in the French camp.]

Enter CORDELIA, KENT, DOCTOR, and GENTLEMAN.

CORDELIA

O thou good Kent, how shall I live and work, 253 serviceable ready to be used 254 duteous obedient 259 deathsman executioner 260 Leave by your leave; wax with which the letter is sealed 262 Their papers
i.e., to rip their papers 264-65 if . . . not if your desire (and lust) be not lacking 270 would would like to 271 and . . . venture i.e., and one who holds you her own for venturing (Edmund had earlier been promised union by Goneril, "If you dare venture in your own behalf," IV.ii.21) 273 indistinguished . . . will unlimited range of woman's lust 275 exchange substitute 276 rake up cover up, bury;
post unsanctified unholy messenger 277 mature ripe 278 ungracious paper wicked letter; strike blast 279 death- practiced whose death is plotted 281 stiff unbending; vile sense hateful capacity for feeling 282 ingenious conscious 283 distract distracted, mad 285 wrong imaginations delusions 288 bestow lodge

To match thy goodness? My life will be too short,
And every measure fail me.

KENT

To be acknowledged, madam, is o'erpaid.
All my reports go° with the modest truth,
Nor more nor clipped,° but so.

CORDELIA

Be better suited:°

These weeds° are memories° of those worser hours:
I prithee, put them off.

KENT

Pardon, dear madam;

Yet to be known shortens my made intent:°
My boon I make it,° that you know me not Till time and I think meet.°

CORDELIA

Then be't so, my good lord. [To the DOCTOR.] How does the king?

DOCTOR

Madam, sleeps still.

CORDELIA

O you kind gods!

Cure this great breach in his abusèd° nature.
Th' untuned and jarring senses, O, wind up°
Of this child-changèd° father.

DOCTOR

So please your majesty

That we may wake the king: he hath slept long.

CORDELIA

Be governed by your knowledge, and proceed
I' th' sway of° your own will. Is he arrayed?

Enter LEAR in a chair carried by SERVANTS.

GENTLEMAN

Ay, madam; in the heaviness of sleep
We put fresh garments on him.

DOCTOR

Be by, good madam, when we do awake him;
I doubt not of his temperance.°

CORDELIA

Very well.

DOCTOR

Please you, draw near. Louder the music there!

CORDELIA

O my dear father, restoration hang
Thy medicine on my lips, and let this kiss
Repair those violent harms that my two sisters
Have in thy reverence° made.

KENT

Kind and dear princess.

CORDELIA

Had you not been their father, these white flakes°
Did challenge° pity of them. Was this a face
To be opposed against the warring winds?
To stand against the deep dread-bolted° thunder?
In the most terrible and nimble stroke
Of quick, cross° lightning to watch—poor perdu!°—
With this thin helm?° Mine enemy's dog,

Though he had bit me, should have stood that night

Against my fire; and wast thou fain,° poor father,
To hovel thee with swine and rogues° forlorn,
In short° and musty straw?° Alack, alack!

'Tis wonder that thy life and wits at once
Had not concluded all.° He wakes; speak to him.

DOCTOR

Madam, do you; 'tis fittest.

CORDELIA

How does my royal lord? How fares your majesty?

LEAR

You do me wrong to take me out o' th' grave:
Thou art a soul in bliss; but I am bound
Upon a wheel of fire,° that mine own tears
Do scald like molten lead.

CORDELIA

Sir, do you know me?

LEAR

You are a spirit, I know. Where did you die?

CORDELIA

Still, still, far wide.°

DOCTOR

He's scarce awake: let him alone awhile.

LEAR

Where have I been? Where am I? Fair daylight?
I am mightily abused.° I should ev'n die with pity,
To see another thus. I know not what to say.
I will not swear these are my hands: let's see;
I feel this pin prick. Would I were assured
Of my condition.

CORDELIA

O, look upon me, sir,

And hold your hand in benediction o'er me.
You must not kneel.

LEAR

Pray, do not mock me:

I am a very foolish fond° old man,
Fourscore and upward, not an hour more nor less;
And, to deal plainly,
I fear I am not in my perfect mind.
Methinks I should know you and know this man,
Yet I am doubtful; for I am mainly° ignorant
What place this is, and all the skill I have Remembers not these garments, nor I know not Where I did lodge last night. Do not laugh at me,
For, as I am a man, I think this lady
To be my child Cordelia.

CORDELIA

And so I am, I am.

LEAR

Be your tears wet? Yes, faith. I pray, weep not.
If you have poison for me, I will drink it.
I know you do not love me; for your sisters
Have, as I do remember, done me wrong.
You have some cause, they have not.

CORDELIA

No cause, no cause.

IV.vii.5 go conform 6 clipped curtailed; suited attired 7 weeds clothes; memories reminders 9 Yet . . . intent to reveal myself just yet interferes with the plan I have made 10 My . . . it I ask this reward 11 meet fitting 15 abusèd disturbed 16 wind up tune 17 child-changèd changed, deranged (and also, reduced to a child) by the cruelty of his children 20 I' . . . of according to 24 temperance sanity 29 reverence revered person 30 flakes hairs (in long strands) 31 challenge claim 33 deep dread-bolted deep-voiced and furnished with the dreadful thunderbolt 35 cross zigzag; perdu (I) sentry in a forlorn position (2) lost one 36 helm helmet (his scanty hair)

38 fain pleased 39 rogues vagabonds 40 short when straw is freshly cut, it is long, and suitable for bedding, given its flexibility and crispness; as it is used, it becomes musty, shreds into pieces, is "short"; in contemporary Maine usage, "short manure" refers to dung mixed with straw that has been broken up, "long manure" to dung mixed with coarse new straw 42 concluded all come to a complete end 47 wheel of fire torment associated by the Middle Ages with hell, where Lear thinks he is 50 wide i.e., of the mark (of sanity) 53 abused deluded 60 fond in dotage 65 mainly entirely

LEAR

Am I in France?

KENT In your own kingdom, sir.

LEAR

Do not abuse° me.

DOCTOR

Be comforted, good madam: the great rage,°
 You see, is killed in him: and yet it is danger
 To make him even o'er° the time he has lost. 80
 Desire him to go in; trouble him no more Till further settling.°

CORDELIA

Will't please your highness walk?°

LEAR You must bear with me.

Pray you now, forget and forgive. I am old and foolish. Exeunt. Mane[n]t° KENT and GENTLEMAN.

GENTLEMAN Holds it true, sir, that the Duke of 85
 Cornwall was so slain?

KENT Most certain, sir.

GENTLEMAN Who is conductor of his people?

KENT As 'tis said, the bastard son of Gloucester.

GENTLEMAN They say Edgar, his banished son, is 90 with the Earl of Kent in Germany.

KENT Report is changeable.° 'Tis time to look about;
 the powers° of the kingdom approach apace.

GENTLEMAN The arbitrement° is like to be bloody.
 Fare you well, sir. [Exit.] 95

KENT

My point and period will be thoroughly wrought,°
 Or well or ill, as this day's battle's fought. Exit.

A C T V

Scene I. [The British camp near Dover.]

Enter, with drum and colors, EDMUND, REGAN, GENTLEMEN, and SOLDIERS.

EDMUND

Know° of the duke if his last purpose hold,°
 Or whether since he is advised° by aught
 To change the course: he's full of alteration
 And self-reproving: bring his constant pleasure.°
 [To a GENTLEMAN, who goes out.]

REGAN

Our sister's man is certainly miscarried.° 5

EDMUND

'Tis to be doubted,° madam.

REGAN

Now, sweet lord,
 You know the goodness I intend upon you:
 Tell me, but truly, but then speak the truth,
 Do you not love my sister?

EDMUND

In honored° love.

77 abuse deceive 78 rage frenzy 80 even o'er smooth over by filling in; and hence, "recollect" 82 settling calming 83 walk perhaps in the sense of "withdraw" 84 s.d. Mane[n]t remain 92 Report is changeable rumors are unreliable 93 powers armies 94 arbitrement deciding encounter 96
My . . . wrought the aim and end, the close of my life, will be completely worked out

V.i.i Know learn; last purpose hold most recent intention (to fight) be maintained 2 advised induced 4 constant pleasure fixed (final) decision 5 miscarried come to grief
 6 doubted feared 9 honored honorable

REGAN

But have you never found my brother's way 10
 To the forfended° place?

EDMUND

That thought abuses° you.

REGAN

I am doubtful that you have been conjunct
 And bosomed with her, as far as we call hers.°

EDMUND

No, by mine honor, madam.

REGAN

I shall never endure her: dear my lord, 15
 Be not familiar with her.

EDMUND

Fear° me not.—

She and the duke her husband!

Enter, with drum and colors, ALBANY, GONERIL, [and] SOLDIERS.

GONERIL [Aside.]

I had rather lose the battle than that sister
 Should loosen° him and me.

ALBANY

Our very loving sister, well be-met.° 20
 Sir, this I heard, the king is come to his daughter,
 With others whom the rigor of our state°
 Forced to cry out. Where I could not be honest,°
 I never yet was valiant: for this business,
 It touches us, as° France invades our land, 25
 Not bolds the king, with others, whom, I fear,
 Most just and heavy causes make oppose.°

EDMUND

Sir, you speak nobly.

REGAN

Why is this reasoned?°

GONERIL

Combine together 'gainst the enemy;
 For these domestic and particular broils° 30
 Are not the question° here.

ALBANY

Let's then determine

With th' ancient of war° on our proceeding.

EDMUND

I shall attend you presently at your tent.

REGAN

Sister, you'll go with us?°

GONERIL No. 35

REGAN

'Tis most convenient;° pray you, go with us.

GONERIL [Aside.]

O, ho, I know the riddle.°—I will go.

Exeunt both the ARMIES.Enter EDGAR [disguised].

EDGAR

If e'er your grace had speech with man so poor,
 Hear me one word.

11 forfended forbidden; abuses (1) deceives (2) demeans, is unworthy of 12-13 I . . . hers I fear that you have united with her intimately, in the fullest possible way 16 Fear distrust 19 loosen separate 20 be-met met 22 rigor . . .
state tyranny of our government 23 honest honorable 25 touches us, as concerns me, only in that 26-27 Not . . .
oppose and not in that France emboldens the king and others, who have been led, by real and serious grievances, to take up arms against us 28 reasoned argued 30 particular broils private quarrels 31 question issue 32 th' ancient of war experienced commanders 34 us me (rather than Edmund) 36 convenient fitting, desirable 37 riddle real reason (for Regan's curious request)

ALBANY [To those going out.]
I'll overtake you. [To EDGAR.] Speak. 40
Exeunt [all but ALBANY and EDGAR].

EDGAR
Before you fight the battle, ope this letter.
If you have victory, let the trumpet sound
For° him that brought it: wretched though I seem,
I can produce a champion that will prove°
What is avouchèd° there. If you miscarry, 45
Your business of° the world hath so an end,
And machination° ceases. Fortune love you.

ALBANY
Stay till I have read the letter.

EDGAR I was forbid it.
When time shall serve, let but the herald cry,
And I'll appear again. 50

ALBANY
Why, fare thee well: I will o'erlook° thy paper.
Exit [EDGAR].

Enter EDMUND.

EDMUND
The enemy's in view: draw up your powers.
Here is the guess° of their true strength and forces
By diligent discovery;° but your haste
Is now urged on you.

ALBANY We will greet° the time. Exit. 55

EDMUND
To both these sisters have I sworn my love;
Each jealous° of the other, as the stung
Are of the adder. Which of them shall I take?
Both? One? Or neither? Neither can be enjoyed,
If both remain alive: to take the widow 60
Exasperates, makes mad her sister Goneril;
And hardly° shall I carry out my side,°
Her husband being alive. Now then, we'll use
His countenance° for the battle; which being done,
Let her who would be rid of him devise 65
His speedy taking off. As for the mercy
Which he intends to Lear and to Cordelia,
The battle done, and they within our power,
Shall never see his pardon; for my state
Stands on me to defend, not to debate.° Exit. 70

Scene II. [A field between the two camps.]

Alarum° within. Enter, with drum and colors, LEAR, CORDELIA, and SOLDIERS, over the stage; and exeunt.

Enter EDGAR and GLOUCESTER.

EDGAR
Here, father,° take the shadow of this tree
For your good host; pray that the right may thrive.

42-43 sound For summon 44 prove i.e., by trial of combat 45 avouchèd maintained 46 of in 47 machination plotting 51 o'erlook read over 53 guess estimate 54 By diligent discovery obtained by careful reconnoitering 55 greet i.e., meet the demands of 57 jealous suspicious 62 hardly with difficulty; carry . . . side (1) satisfy my ambition (2) fulfill my bargain (with Goneril) 64 countenance authority 69-70 for . . . debate my position requires me to act, not to reason about right and wrong
V.ii.s.d. Alarum a trumpet call to battle 1 father i.e., venerable old man (Edgar has not yet revealed his identity)

If ever I return to you again,
I'll bring you comfort.

GLOUCESTER Grace go with you, sir.
Exit [EDGAR].

Alarum and retreat° within. [Re]enter EDGAR.

EDGAR
Away, old man; give me thy hand; away! 5
King Lear hath lost, he and his daughter ta'en:°
Give me thy hand; come on.

GLOUCESTER
No further, sir; a man may rot even here.

EDGAR
What, in ill thoughts again? Men must endure
Their going hence, even as their coming hither: 10
Ripeness° is all. Come on.

GLOUCESTER And that's true too. Exeunt.

Scene III. [The British camp near Dover.]

Enter, in conquest, with drum and colors, EDMUND; LEAR and CORDELIA, as prisoners; SOLDIERS, CAP- TAIN.

EDMUND
Some officers take them away: good guard,°
Until their greater pleasures° first be known
That are to censure° them.

CORDELIA We are not the first
Who with best meaning° have incurred the worst.
For thee, oppressèd king, I am cast down; 5
Myself could else out-frown false Fortune's frown.
Shall we not see these daughters and these sisters?

LEAR
No, no, no, no! Come, let's away to prison:
We two alone will sing like birds i' th' cage:
When thou dost ask me blessing, I'll kneel down 10
And ask of thee forgiveness: so we'll live,
And pray, and sing, and tell old tales, and laugh
At gilded butterflies,° and hear poor rogues
Talk of court news; and we'll talk with them too,
Who loses and who wins, who's in, who's out; 15
And take upon's the mystery of things,
As if we were God's spies:° and we'll wear out,°
In a walled prison, packs and sects of great ones
That ebb and flow by th' moon.°

EDMUND Take them away.

LEAR
Upon such sacrifices, my Cordelia, 20
The gods themselves throw incense.° Have I caught
thee?

4 s.d. retreat signaled by a trumpet 6 ta'en captured 11
Ripeness maturity, as of fruit that is ready to fall
V.iii.i good guard let them be well guarded 2 their greater pleasures the will of those in command, the great ones 3 censure pass judgment on 4 meaning intentions 13 gilded butterflies i.e., gorgeously attired courtiers, fluttering after nothing 16-17 take . . . spies profess to read the riddle of existence, as if endowed with divine omniscience 17 wear out outlast 18-19 packs . . . moon intriguing and partisan cliques of those in high station, whose fortunes change every month 20-21 Upon . . . incense i.e., the gods approve our renunciation of the world

He that parts us shall bring a brand from heaven,
And fire us hence like foxes.° Wipe thine eyes;
The good years° shall devour them,° flesh and fell,° Ere they shall make us weep. We'll see 'em starved first. 25

Come. [Exeunt LEAR and CORDELIA, guarded.]

EDMUND

Come hither, captain; hark.
Take thou this note: go follow them to prison:
One step I have advanced thee; if thou dost
As this instructs thee, thou dost make thy way 30
To noble fortunes: know thou this, that men
Are as the time is:° to be tender-minded
Does not become a sword:° thy great employment
Will not bear question;° either say thou'lt do't,
Or thrive by other means.

CAPTAIN I'll do't, my lord. 35

EDMUND

About it; and write happy° when th' hast done.
Mark; I say, instantly, and carry it so°
As I have set it down.

CAPTAIN

I cannot draw a cart, nor eat dried oats;
If it be man's work, I'll do't. Exit CAPTAIN. 40

Flourish. Enter ALBANY, GONERIL, REGAN [another
CAPTAIN, and] SOLDIERS.

ALBANY

Sir, you have showed today your valiant strain,°
And fortune led you well: you have the captives
Who were the opposites of° this day's strife:
I do require them of you, so to use them 45
As we shall find their merits° and our safety
May equally determine.

EDMUND

Sir, I thought it fit
To send the old and miserable king
To some retention and appointed guard;°
Whose° age had charms in it, whose title more,
To pluck the common bosom on his side,° 50
And turn our impressed lances in our eyes°
Which do command them. With him I sent the queen:
My reason all the same; and they are ready
Tomorrow, or at further space,° t'appear
Where you shall hold your session.° At this time 55
We sweat and bleed: the friend hath lost his friend;
And the best quarrels, in the heat, are cursed
By those that feel their sharpness.°

22-23 He . . . foxes No human agency can separate us, but only divine interposition, as of a heavenly torch parting us like foxes that are driven from their place of refuge by fire and smoke 24 good years plague and pestilence ("undefined malefic power or agency," N.E.D.); them the enemies of Lear and Cordelia; fell skin 32 as . . . is i.e., absolutely determined by the exigencies of the moment 33 become a sword befit a soldier 34 bear question admit of discussion 36 write happy style yourself fortunate 37 carry it so manage the affair in exactly that manner (as if Cordelia had taken her own life) 41 strain (1) stock (2) character 43 opposites of opponents in 45 merits deserts 48 retention . . . guard confinement under duly appointed guard 49 Whose i.e., Lear's 50 pluck . . . side win the sympathy of the people to himself 51 turn . . . eyes turn our conscripted lancers against us 54 further space a later time 55 session trial 57-58 best . . . sharpness worthiest causes may be judged badly by those who have been affected painfully by them, and whose passion has not yet cooled

The question of Cordelia and her father
Requires a fitter place.

ALBANY Sir, by your patience, 60
I hold you but a subject of° this war,
Not as a brother.

REGAN That's as we list to grace° him.
Methinks our pleasure might have been demanded,
Ere you had spoke so far. He led our powers,
Bore the commission of my place and person; 65
The which immediacy may well stand up
And call itself your brother.°

GONERIL Not so hot:
In his own grace he doth exalt himself
More than in your addition.°

REGAN In my rights,
By me invested, he compeers° the best. 70

GONERIL
That were the most,° if he should husband you.°

REGAN

Jesters do oft prove prophets.

GONERIL Holla, holla!
That eye that told you so looked but a-squint.°

REGAN

Lady, I am not well; else I should answer
From a full-flowing stomach.° General, 75
Take thou my soldiers, prisoners, patrimony;°
Dispose of them, of me; the walls is thine:°
Witness the world, that I create thee here
My lord, and master.

GONERIL Mean you to enjoy him?

ALBANY

The let-alone° lies not in your good will. 80

EDMUND

Nor in thine, lord.

ALBANY Half-blooded° fellow, yes.

REGAN [To EDMUND.]

Let the drum strike, and prove my title thine.°

ALBANY

Stay yet; hear reason. Edmund, I arrest thee
On capital treason; and in thy attaint°
This gilded serpent [pointing to GONERIL]. For your 85 claim, fair sister,
I bar it in the interest of my wife.
'Tis she is subcontracted° to this lord,
And I, her husband, contradict your banes.°
If you will marry, make your loves° to me;
My lady is bespoke.°

GONERIL An interlude!° 90

61 subject of subordinate in 62 list to grace wish to honor 65-67 Bore . . . brother was authorized, as my deputy, to take command; his present status, as my immediate representative, entitles him to be considered your equal 69 your addition honors you have bestowed on him 70 compeers equals 71 most most complete investing in your rights; husband you become your husband 73 a-squint cross-eyed 75 From . . . stomach angrily 76 patrimony inheritance 77 walls is thine i.e., Regan's person, which Edmund has stormed and won 80 let-alone power to prevent 81 Half-blooded bastard, and so only half noble 82 prove . . . thine prove by combat your entitlement to my rights 84 in thy attaint as a sharer in the treason for which you are impeached 87 subcontracted pledged by a contract which is called into question by the existence of a previous contract (Goneril's marriage) 88 contradict your banes forbid your announced intention to marry (by citing the precontract) 89 loves love-suits 90 bespoke already pledged; interlude play

ALBANY

Thou art armed, Gloucester: let the trumpet sound:
 If none appear to prove upon thy person
 Thy heinous, manifest, and many treasons,
 There is my pledge^o [throwing down a glove]: I'll make^o
 it on thy heart,
 Ere I taste bread, thou art in nothing less
 Than I have here proclaimed thee.

REGAN

Sick, O, sick!

GONERIL [Aside.]If not, I'll ne'er trust medicine.^oEDMUND [Throwing down a glove.]

There's my exchange:^o what in the world he is
 That names me traitor, villainlike he lies:^o
 Call by the trumpet:^o he that dares approach,
 On him, on you—who not?—I will maintain
 My truth and honor firmly.

ALBANY

A herald, ho!

EDMUND

A herald, ho, a herald!

ALBANY

Trust to thy single virtue:^o for thy soldiers,
 All levied in my name, have in my name
 Took their discharge.

REGAN

My sickness grows upon me.

ALBANY

She is not well; convey her to my tent.

[Exit REGAN, led.]Enter a HERALD.

Come hither, herald. Let the trumpet sound—
 And read out this.

CAPTAIN Sound, trumpet!

A trumpet sounds.

HERALD (Reads.) "If any man of quality or degree^o within the lists^o of the army will maintain upon Edmund, supposed Earl of Gloucester, that he is a manifold traitor, let him appear by the third sound of the trumpet: he is bold in his defense."

EDMUND Sound!

First trumpet.

HERALD Again!

Second trumpet.

HERALD Again!

Third trumpet.

Trumpet answers within. Enter EDGAR, at the third sound, armed, a trumpet before him.^o

ALBANY

Ask him his purposes, why he appears
 Upon this call o' th' trumpet.

HERALD

What are you?

Your name, your quality,^o and why you answer

This present summons?

EDGAR

Know, my name is lost;

By treason's tooth bare-gnawn and canker-bit:^o

Yet am I noble as the adversary

I come to cope.^o

ALBANY

Which is that adversary?

EDGAR

What's he that speaks for Edmund, Earl of Gloucester?

EDMUND

Himself: what say'st thou to him?

EDGAR

Draw thy sword,

That if my speech offend a noble heart,

Thy arm do thee justice: here is mine.

Behold it is my privilege,

The privilege of mine honors,

My oath, and my profession.^o I protest,Maugre^o thy strength, place, youth, and eminence,Despite thy victor sword and fire-new^o fortune,Thy valor and thy heart,^o thou art a traitor,

False to thy gods, thy brother, and thy father,

Conspirant^o 'gainst this high illustrious prince,And from th' extremest upward^o of thy headTo the descent and dust below thy foot,^oA most toad-spotted traitor.^o Say thou "No,"This sword, this arm and my best spirits are bent^oTo prove upon thy heart, whereto I speak,^o

Thou liest.

EDMUND In wisdom^o I should ask thy name,

But since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,

And that thy tongue some say^o of breeding breathes,What safe and nicely^o I might well delay^o

By rule of knighthood, I disdain and spurn:

Back do I toss these treasons^o to thy head;With the hell-hated^o lie o'erwhelm thy heart;

Which for they yet glance by and scarcely bruise,

This sword of mine shall give them instant way,

Where they shall rest for ever.^o Trumpets, speak!Alarums. [They] fight. [EDMUND falls.]

ALBANY

Save^o him, save him!

GONERIL

This is practice,^o Gloucester:

By th' law of war thou wast not bound to answer

An unknown opposite;^o thou art not vanquished,

But cozened and beguiled.

ALBANY

Shut your mouth, dame,

123 canker-bit eaten by the caterpillar 125 cope encounter 130–32 it . . . profession my knighthood entitles me to challenge you, and to have my challenge accepted 133 Maugre despite 134 fire-new fresh from the forge or mint 135 heart courage 137 Conspirant conspiring, a conspirator 138 extremest upward the very top 139 the . . . foot your lowest part (sole) and the dust beneath it 140 toad-spotted traitor spotted with treason (and hence venomous, as the toad is allegedly marked with spots that exude venom) 141 bent directed 142 whereto I speak
 Edgar speaks from the heart, and speaks to the heart of Edmund 143 wisdom prudence (since he is not obliged to fight with one of lesser rank) 145 say assay (i.e., touch, sign) 146 safe and nicely cautiously and punctiliously; delay
 i.e., avoid 148 treasons accusations of treason 149 hell-hated hated like hell 150–52 Which . . . ever which accusations of treason, since as yet they do no harm, even though I have hurled them back, I now thrust upon you still more forcibly, with my sword, so that they may remain with you permanently 153 Save spare; practice trickery 155 opposite opponent

94 pledge gage; make prove 97 medicine poison
98 exchange technical term, denoting the glove Edmund throws down 99 villainlike he lies the lie direct, a challenge to mortal combat 100 trumpet trumpeter 104 single virtue unaided valor 111 quality or degree rank or position 112 lists rolls 118 s.d. trumpet before him trumpeter preceding him 121 quality rank

Or with this paper shall I stop it. Hold, sir;^o
Thou^o worse than any name, read thine own evil.
No tearing, lady; I perceive you know it.

GONERIL

Say, if I do, the laws are mine, not thine: 160
Who can arraign me for't?

ALBANY

Most monstrous! O!

Know'st thou this paper?

GONERIL

Ask me not what I know. Exit.

ALBANY

Go after her; she's desperate; govern^o her.

EDMUND

What you have charged me with, that have I done;
And more, much more; the time will bring it out. 165
'Tis past, and so am I. But what art thou
That hast this fortune on^o me? If thou'rt noble,
I do forgive thee.

EDGAR

Let's exchange charity.^o

I am no less in blood^o than thou art, Edmund;
If more,^o the more th' hast wronged me. 170
My name is Edgar, and thy father's son.
The gods are just, and of our pleasant^o vices
Make instruments to plague us:
The dark and vicious place^o where thee he got^o
Cost him his eyes.

EDMUND

Th' hast spoken right, 'tis true; 175

The wheel is come full circle; I am here.^o

ALBANY

Methought thy very gait did prophesy^o
A royal nobleness: I must embrace thee:
Let sorrow split my heart, if ever I
Did hate thee or thy father!

EDGAR

Worthy^o prince, I know't. 180

ALBANY

Where have you hid yourself?
How have you known the miseries of your father?

EDGAR

By nursing them, my lord. List a brief tale;
And when 'tis told, O, that my heart would burst!
The bloody proclamation to escape^o 185
That followed me so near—O, our lives' sweetness,
That we the pain of death would hourly die
Rather than die at once!^o—taught me to shift
Into a madman's rags, t' assume a semblance
That very dogs disdained: and in this habit^o 190
Met I my father with his bleeding rings,^o
Their precious stones new lost; became his guide,
Led him, begged for him, saved him from despair;
Never—O fault!—revealed myself unto him,
Until some half-hour past, when I was armed, 195
Not sure, though hoping, of this good success,

157 Hold, sir to Edmund: "Just a moment!" 158
Thou probably Goneril 163 govern control 167 fortune on victory over 168 charity forgiveness and love
169 blood lineage 170 If more if I am more noble
(since legitimate) 172 of our pleasant out of our pleasurable
174 place i.e., the adulterous bed; got begot 176 wheel
. . . here i.e., Fortune's wheel, on which Edmund ascended, has now, in its downward turning, deposited him at the bottom, whence he began 177 gait did prophesy carriage did promise 180 Worthy honorable 185 to escape (my wish) to escape the sentence of death 186–88 O . . . once How sweet is life, that we choose to suffer death every hour rather than make an end at once 190 habit attire 191 rings
sockets

I asked his blessing, and from first to last
Told him our pilgrimage.^o But his flawed^o heart—
Alack, too weak the conflict to support—
'Twixt two extremes of passion, joy and grief, 200
Burst smilingly.

EDMUND

This speech of yours hath moved

me,

And shall perchance do good: but speak you on;
You look as you had something more to say.

ALBANY

If there be more, more woeful, hold it in;
For I am almost ready to dissolve,^o 205
Hearing of this.

EDGAR

This would have seemed a period^o

To such as love not sorrow; but another,
To amplify too much, would make much more,
And top extremity.^o
Whilst I was big in clamor,^o came there in a man, 210
Who, having seen me in my worst estate,^o
Shunned my abhorred^o society; but then, finding
Who 'twas that so endured, with his strong arms
He fastened on my neck, and bellowed out
As he'd burst heaven; threw him on my father; 215
Told the most piteous tale of Lear and him
That ever ear received: which in recounting
His grief grew puissant,^o and the strings of life
Began to crack: twice then the trumpets sounded,
And there I left him tranced.^o

ALBANY

But who was this? 220

EDGAR

Kent, sir, the banished Kent; who in disguise
Followed his enemy^o king, and did him service
Improper for a slave.

Enter a GENTLEMAN, with a bloody knife.

GENTLEMAN

Help, help, O, help!

EDGAR

What kind of help?

ALBANY

Speak, man.

EDGAR

What means this bloody knife?

GENTLEMAN

'Tis hot, it smokes;^o 225

It came even from the heart of—O, she's dead!

ALBANY

Who dead? Speak, man.

GENTLEMAN

Your lady, sir, your lady: and her sister
By her is poisoned; she confesses it.

EDMUND

I was contracted^o to them both: all three 230
Now marry^o in an instant.

EDGAR

Here comes Kent.

ALBANY

Produce the bodies, be they alive or dead.

[Exit GENTLEMAN.]

198 our pilgrimage of our (purgatorial) journey; flawed cracked 205 dissolve i.e., into tears 206 period limit 207–09 but . . . extremity just one woe more, described too fully, would go beyond the extreme limit 210 big in clamor loud in lamentation 211 estate condition 212 abhorred abhorrent 218 puissant overmastering 220 tranced insensible 222 enemy hostile 225 smokes steams 230 contracted betrothed 231 marry i.e., unite in death

This judgment of the heavens, that makes us tremble,
Touches us not with pity.

Enter KENT.

O, is this he?

The time will not allow the compliment^o
Which very manners^o urges. 235

KENT I am come
To bid my king and master aye^o good night:
Is he not here?

ALBANY Great thing of^o us forgot!
Speak, Edmund, where's the king? and where's
Cordelia?
See'st thou this object,^o Kent? 240

The bodies of Goneril and Regan are brought in.

KENT
Alack, why thus?

EDMUND Yet^o Edmund was beloved:
The one the other poisoned for my sake,
And after slew herself.

ALBANY
Even so. Cover their faces.

EDMUND
I pant for life:^o some good I mean to do,
Despite of mine own nature. Quickly send,
Be brief in it, to th' castle; for my writ^o
Is on the life of Lear and on Cordelia:
Nay, send in time. 245

ALBANY Run, run, O, run!

EDGAR
To who, my lord? Who has the office?^o Send Thy token of reprieve.^o 250

EDMUND
Well thought on: take my sword,
Give it the captain.

EDGAR Haste thee, for thy life.
[Exit MESSENGER.]

EDMUND
He hath commission from thy wife and me
To hang Cordelia in the prison, and
To lay the blame upon her own despair,
That she fordid^o herself. 255

ALBANY
The gods defend her! Bear him hence awhile.
[EDMUND is borne off.]

Enter LEAR, with CORDELIA in his arms, [GENTLEMAN, and others following].

LEAR
How, howl, howl, howl! O, you are men of stones:
Had I your tongues and eyes, I'd use them so
That heaven's vault should crack. She's gone for ever.
I know when one is dead and when one lives;
She's dead as earth. Lend me a looking-glass;
If that her breath will mist or stain the stone,^o

235 compliment ceremony 236 very manners ordinary civility 237 aye forever 238 thing of matter by 240 object sight (the bodies of Goneril and Regan)
241 Yet in spite of all 245 pant for life gasp for breath 247 writ command (ordering the execution) 250 office commission 251 token of reprieve sign that they are reprieved 257 fordid destroyed 264 stone i.e., the surface of the crystal looking-glass

Why, then she lives.

KENT Is this the promised end?^o 265

EDGAR

Or image^o of that horror?

ALBANY Fall and cease.^o

LEAR

This feather stirs; she lives. If it be so,
It is a chance which does redeem^o all sorrows
That ever I have felt.

KENT O my good master.

LEAR

Prithee, away.

EDGAR 'Tis noble Kent, your friend. 270

LEAR

A plague upon you, murderers, traitors all!
I might have saved her; now she's gone for ever.
Cordelia, Cordelia, stay a little. Ha,
What is't thou say'st? Her voice was ever soft,
Gentle and low, an excellent thing in woman. 275
I killed the slave that was a-hanging thee.

GENTLEMAN

'Tis true, my lords, he did.

LEAR

Did I not, fellow?

I have seen the day, with my good biting falchion^o
I would have made them skip: I am old now,
And these same crosses^o spoil me.^o Who are you? 280
Mine eyes are not o' th' best: I'll tell you straight.^o

KENT

If Fortune brag of two^o she loved and hated,
One of them we behold.

LEAR

This is a dull sight.^o Are you not Kent?

KENT

The same,

Your servant Kent. Where is your servant Caius?^o 285

LEAR

He's a good fellow, I can tell you that;
He'll strike, and quickly too: he's dead and rotten.

KENT

No, my good lord; I am the very man.

LEAR

I'll see that straight.^o 255

KENT

That from your first of difference and decay^o
Have followed your sad steps. 290

LEAR

You are welcome hither.

KENT

Nor no man else:^o all's cheerless, dark and deadly.
Your eldest daughters have fordone^o themselves,
And desperately^o are dead.

LEAR

Ay, so I think.

ALBANY

He knows not what he says, and vain is it 295

265 promised end doomsday 266 image exact likeness;
Fall and cease i.e., Let the heavens fall, and all things finish
268 redeem make good 278 falchion small curved sword 280 crosses troubles; spoil me i.e., my prowess as a sword-man 281 tell you straight recognize you straightaway 282 two i.e., Lear, and some hypothetical second, who is also a prime example of Fortune's inconstancy ("loved and hated") 284 dull sight (1) melancholy spectacle (2) faulty eyesight (Lear's own, clouded by weeping) 285 Caius Kent's name, in disguise 289 see that straight attend to that in a moment 290 your . . . decay beginning of your decline in fortune
292 Nor . . . else no, I am not welcome, nor is anyone else
293 fordone destroyed 294 desperately in despair

That we present us to him.

EDGAR Very bootless.°

Enter a MESSENGER.

MESSENGER

Edmund is dead, my lord.

ALBANY That's but a trifle here.

You lords and noble friends, know our intent.

What comfort to this great decay may come°

Shall be applied. For us, we° will resign,

During the life of this old majesty,

To him our absolute power: [to EDGAR and KENT] you,
to your rights;

With boot,° and such addition° as your honors

Have more than merited. All friends shall taste

The wages of their virtue, and all foes

The cup of their deservings. O, see, see!

LEAR

And my poor fool° is hanged: no, no, no life?

Why should a dog, a horse, a rat, have life,

And thou no breath at all? Thou'lt come no more,

Never, never, never, never, never.

Pray you, undo this button.° Thank you, sir.

Do you see this? Look on her. Look, her lips,

296 bootless fruitless 299 What . . . come whatever aid may present itself to this great ruined man 300 us, we the royal "we" 303 boot good measure; addition additional titles and rights 307 fool Cordelia ("fool" being a term of endearment; but it is perfectly possible to take the word as referring also to the Fool) 311 undo this button i.e., to ease the suffocation Lear feels

Look there, look there. He dies.

EDGAR He faints. My lord, my lord!

KENT

Break, heart; I prithee, break.

EDGAR

Look up, my lord.

KENT

Vex not his ghost:° O, let him pass! He hates him 315

That would upon the rack° of this tough world

Stretch him out longer.°

EDGAR

He is gone indeed.

KENT

The wonder is he hath endured so long:

He but usurped° his life.

ALBANY

Bear them from hence. Our present business 320

Is general woe. [To KENT and EDGAR.] Friends of my soul, you twain,

Rule in this realm and the gored state sustain.

KENT

I have a journey, sir, shortly to go;

My master calls me, I must not say no.

EDGAR

The weight of this sad time we must obey,° 325

Speak what we feel, not what we ought to say.

The oldest hath borne most: we that are young

Shall never see so much, nor live so long.

Exeunt, with a dead march.

315 Vex . . . ghost do not trouble his departing spirit 316 rack instrument of torture, stretching the victim's joints to dislocation 317 longer (1) in time (2) in bodily length 319 usurped possessed beyond the allotted term 325 obey submit to

THE TRAGEDY OF MACBETH

EDITED BY SYLVAN BARNET

Introduction

The date of Macbeth, like that of many of Shakespeare's plays, is not beyond all dispute, but there are good reasons for believing it was written in 1605–06 and was performed at Hampton Court in 1606 before James I of England and his brother-in-law, Christian of Denmark. The play, indeed, seems to have been written to please James (and perhaps thus to further the fortunes of Shakespeare's theatrical company, which in 1603 had been named the King's Men). The evidence that Shakespeare sought to please James ranges from the highly favorable portrait of Banquo, from whom the Stuarts claimed descent (the pageant in IV.i of Banquo and the eight kings seems to be a polite tribute to James, who was the ninth Stuart monarch), to such a small detail as the omission of a defeat of the Danes—this to avoid embarrassing the visiting Danish king. But for a discussion of all such evidence, the reader must consult Henry N. Paul's The Royal Play of Macbeth. Our concern here will not be with the play Shakespeare wrote for the two kings, but with the play he wrote for us.

Although Macbeth draws its material from Holinshed's Chronicles, a historical compilation that provided Shakespeare with much of the material for the ten plays that in the Folio of 1623 comprise the section labeled "Histories," Macbeth was entitled a tragedy and was printed among the tragedies in the Folio. James may have looked on the play as history, but it is not history. (Banquo, for example, was a convenient invention of a Scottish historian who in the early sixteenth century needed to give the Stuart line a proper beginning.) It is something that poets and literary critics customarily consider superior to history: a vision of life that has the concreteness of history and yet the wisdom of philosophy. Of course none of Shakespeare's history plays is satisfactory history; the exclusion of Macbeth from the "Histories" does not mean that the editors of the Folio recognized in it any unusual departure from fact. Perhaps Macbeth was excluded simply because its dramatis personae are Scottish, not English. But its presence among the "Tragedies" may mean that the editors saw a fundamental difference between Macbeth and, say, Richard III, which had earlier been published as a tragedy and which is called a tragedy even while it is placed among the "Histories." When one reads or sees Richard III, one cannot help feeling—even despite some familiarity with modern historical accounts that have demonstrated Shakespeare's distortions of fact—that one is experiencing a re-creation or re-presentation of what men did to other men during a segment of English history. When one reads or sees Macbeth, one cannot help feeling that one is experiencing a re-creation or re-presentation of what a man is, in the present, even in the timeless.

Suppose we take a definition of tragedy and apply it to Macbeth. We may find that the play helps to support the definition, and that when we apply this touchstone we see things in the play that we might otherwise have missed. (But we will also see that the definition shrinks the play, and that after it has served its purpose it must be discarded for another that may further illuminate the play.) Let us take as our first touchstone a line uttered in Cyril Tourneur's The Revenger's Tragedy, a play apparently written about the same time as Macbeth:

When the bad bleed, then is the tragedy good.

In this view, tragedy shows the punishment of evildoers; at its conclusion (to quote the Duke of Albany, in King Lear)

All friends shall taste
The wages of their virtue, and all foes
The cup of their deservings. (V.iii.304–06)

What is there of this in Macbeth? If Tourneur's "bad" includes, as it must, a man who knowingly kills his benefactor, and who follows this murder with tyrannical assaults upon the lives of his countrymen (including women and children), then the formula has some relevance to Macbeth. For although most discussions of tragedy start from Aristotle's assumption that the best tragedy concerns a man who does a deed of horror in ignorance (Oedipus kills an old man who, unknown to him, is his father; Othello kills Desdemona in the mistaken belief that she is unchaste; Brutus makes errors of judgment that undercut his high-minded aspirations), Macbeth is not confused about the criminal nature of his deed. When he kills the king who is his guest and generous lord, he knows, as Oedipus, Othello, and Brutus do not, that he does a "horrid deed." Even before he does the deed he foresees the outcome, apparently sensing that in the nature of things something rather like Albany's view will come about through the workings of even-handed justice. In his first soliloquy he says:

we but teach
Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return
To plague th' inventor: this even-handed justice
Commends th' ingredients of our poisoned chalice
To our own lips.¹ (I.vii.8-12)

Nor does Macbeth lose his moral sense after his first crime. Midway in the play, when he has already suffered violent feelings of guilt, he determines to toughen himself in villainous practice; he has seen the ghost of one of his victims because (he thinks) he is still a fearful novice in crime and he has not yet inured himself by "hard use." A little later, when he fears he is losing his control, he determines that his course must be bloodier:

From this moment
The very firstlings of my heart shall be
The firstlings of my hand. And even now,
To crown my thoughts with acts, be it thought and done:
The castle of Macduff I will surprise;
Seize upon Fife; give to th' edge o' th' sword
His wife, his babes, and all unfortunate souls
That trace him in his line. No boasting like a fool;
This deed I'll do before this purpose cool. (IV.i.146-54)

Another way of seeing something of Macbeth's calculated villainy—something of the quality that puts him in Tourneur's classification of "the bad"—is to see what his opponents are like. Who are they? Chief of them is Malcolm, the heir to the throne—a man chaste, trustworthy, and patriotic—and they include men who are distressed to hear that Macbeth has made "each new morn/ New widows howl, new orphans cry." To these enemies of Macbeth, he is a butcher, a tyrant, a hell-kite, a hellhound. Malcolm and his allies, on the other hand, are the instruments of the powers above, and are God's soldiers. The concluding speech sharply contrasts the defeated tyrant (at whose fall, Dr. Johnson says, "every reader rejoices") and the rightful king:

What's more to do,
Which would be planted newly with the time—
As calling home our exiled friends abroad
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny,
Producing forth the cruel ministers
Of this dead butcher and his fiendlike queen,
Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent hands
Took off her life—this, and what needful else
That calls upon us, by the grace of Grace

¹ By the way, although the idea that an evil act engenders its own punishment is scarcely novel, Shakespeare's use of it here is probably indebted to a passage in Holinshed's Chronicles: "For the prick of conscience, as it chanceth ever in tyrants and such as attain to any estate by unrighteous means, caused him ever to fear, lest he should be served of the same cup as he had ministered to his predecessors."

We will perform in measure, time, and place:
So thanks to all at once and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crowned at Scone.

(V.viii.64-75)

Macbeth has been allied with witches or fiends, but the rightful ruler will work "by the grace of Grace." Macbeth has been unable to "buckle his distempered cause/Within the belt of rule," but the rightful ruler will perform his actions "in measure, time, and place." Macbeth had heard Duncan say to him "I have begun to plant thee, and will labor/To make thee full of growing," yet he had turned against the source of his growth, killed Duncan, and so made of himself a rootless branch that must become desiccated; the rightful ruler's mind turns to planting newly with the time.

It can be put this way: Macbeth's action is contrary to nature, and he knows it. The mere thought of his deed makes his body function unnaturally. The witches' solicitation, he says,

doth unfix my hair
And make my seated heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature. (I.iii.135-37)

The wounds inflicted on Duncan look like "a breach in nature," and the sun feels the effect of the murder:

By th' clock 'tis day,
And yet dark night strangles the traveling lamp:
Is't night's predominance, or the day's shame,
That darkness does the face of earth entomb,
When living light should kiss it? (II.iv.6-10)

To which the Old Man replies: "'Tis unnatural,/Even like the deed that's done."

By turning against the source of his growth, then, Macbeth becomes infected:

Who then shall blame
His pestered senses to recoil and start,
When all that is within him does condemn
Itself for being there? (V.ii.22-25)

But of course this is not the whole story, and the Macbeth that has been thus far discussed is only a part of Shakespeare's Macbeth. At the outset of the play we meet not Macbeth but the Weird Sisters. The next time they assemble, the third one says, it will be to meet with Macbeth. The incantatory quality of their verse—the power of the rhyme, the alliteration, and the mysterious paradoxes—can be felt even in a single couplet:

Fair is foul, and foul is fair.
Hover through the fog and filthy air. (I.i.10-11)

We may insist, on reflection, that Macbeth is a free agent who need not have yielded to the witches' hints; certainly he harbors within him what they present to our eye. Yet can we feel sure that he has not been ensnared: the charm has been wound up, and if he is the tyrant, viewed another way he is the victim of infernal tyranny. "The instruments of darkness tell us truths,/Win us with honest trifles, to betray's/In deepest consequence." The witches can control the winds, and we first see Macbeth on a "blasted heath." The very air he breathes, as it is in part made up of the witches who "melted as breath into the wind," is infected. This second view, of Macbeth as victim, though it must not be pressed (the noble Duncan finds the air sweet—but, in another way, he too is a victim), finds support in Shakespeare's other tragedies and even in his use of the word "tragedy" and its derivatives. He seems never to use it in a context that bears much resemblance to Tourneur's line, "When the bad bleed, then is the tragedy good." Always, or almost always, the word is linked with a violent death that evokes woe or is said to be woeful. Because he does not mention "tragedy" in Macbeth, an example must be drawn from another play. One of his earliest uses of the word will suffice. In 1 Henry VI, Salisbury, an English commander, has been killed by a hidden French gunner. Talbot, Salisbury's cohort, laments the sudden fall:

Accursèd tower! Accursèd fatal hand
That hath contrived this woeful tragedy! (I.iv.76–77)

The reference to the tower, and the word "fatal" ("destined," "fated") are important, for they suggest that tragedy sets its woeful happenings against a mysterious backdrop of inhuman and inscrutable forces.

The Weird Sisters in Macbeth are of course part of this inscrutable surrounding. In the Folio their name is spelled "weyard" or "weyward" (perhaps with a glance at "wayward"?) but the stage directions and speech prefixes call them witches. They have the traditional petty malice (and beards) of witches, and they acknowledge "masters," but they also have properties not associated with witches: they vanish like bubbles, and they speak authoritatively. In the fourth act they are closer to the Furies than to mischievous hags. No English play before Macbeth has such imposing witches, and if the Weird Sisters resemble witches in their ability to sail in a sieve and in their animal-killing and in their cookery and in their revenge on the sailor's wife, they nevertheless seem also to merit the title Macbeth gives them—"juggling fiends." Their name suggests the Fates (Old English wyrd, fate), and Holinshed conjectures that they may be "the goddesses of destiny," though of course Holinshed's view need not be Shakespeare's.

Is it, then, Macbeth's bad luck that the witches wait for him? Or is there something within himself that has attracted them, and that makes him recognize his kinship with them? Are they the dramatist's concrete embodiments of a part of Macbeth? As soon as we ask these questions we realize that debate is futile; we cannot reply by pointing to Elizabethan treatises on demonology; we can only repeat portions of the play; and the play does not provide unequivocal answers.

Equivocation, in fact, is in part what the play is about. The Porter (II.iii) soliloquizes about an equivocator, but we do not have to wait for him to introduce the theme of doubleness or ambiguity. The Weird Sisters, in the first scene, will meet "when the battle's lost and won," and for them "fair is foul, and foul is fair." A few moments later Macbeth will enter, and his first line will be "So foul and fair a day I have not seen" (I.iii.38). One aspect of this pervasive doubleness is in the word-play. The Porter has his quibbles, of course, but so do Macbeth and Lady Macbeth. Second meanings, however, lurk not only under words (for example, gild/guilt); there are second meanings under whole speeches and actions. This is not surprising in a play in which the protagonist is advised to "look like th' innocent flower,/But be the serpent under't," and in which we hear "Away, and mock the time with fairest show:/False face must hide what the false heart doth know." Still, it was not inevitable that Shakespeare should so brilliantly follow the innocent Duncan's observation that "There's no art/To find the mind's construction in the face:/He was a gentleman on whom I built/An absolute trust" with a stage direction, "Enter Macbeth," that is, enter another whose appearance will deceive Duncan.

It is time that we look more closely at Macbeth's double nature, for if he is the "devilish Macbeth" that Malcolm says he is, he is also something else.

Very early in the play—immediately after the odd ritual of a dozen lines in which the Weird Sisters inform us that they will meet with Macbeth—we get a report of Macbeth's loyalty and courage. He is "brave Macbeth," "valiant cousin! Worthy gentleman," and "noble Macbeth," and by his deeds against rebels and foreign invaders he has earned these words. His first appearance on the stage does not quite confirm this report, but if anything it even more potently engages our sympathetic interest; he starts and seems "to fear/Things that do sound so fair." With hindsight we can say that he starts because he has already harbored criminal impulses that respond to the witches' words, but what is more important is that his apprehensiveness suggests both an apartness from others and a self-division that will make us see in him a good deal more than the blackguard. Twice in this first view of Macbeth we hear him described as "rapt," and his asides—confessing his uncertainties—complicate him and make him more than the hero described in the previous scene. There he had unseamed a rebel from the nave to the chops, had been an eagle, a cannon, and valor's minion. That is, when we first hear of Macbeth we hear of a man of noble and unambiguous action; when we first see Macbeth, we see a man of uncertainty. His first appearance puts him in the company of sympathetic tragic heroes such as Hamlet and Romeo. (Hamlet's first remark is an aside, and his next few speeches reveal he is not at one with his surroundings or himself. When we first see Romeo he is so abstracted that he is unaware of the time of day, and he endures "sad hours.") Conversely, Macbeth is far from the evil Richard III, whose history Shakespeare presented in the tragic shape of a rise and fall. Richard is unambiguously a villain. As early as the thirtieth line of the play he begins

I am determinèd to prove a villain,
And hate the idle pleasures of these days.
Plots have I laid, inductions dangerous,
By drunken prophecies, libels, and dreams,
To set my brother Clarence and the king
In deadly hate, the one against the other.
And if King Edward be as true and just
As I am subtle, false, and treacherous. (I.i.30–37)

This unmitigated villainy is not without its attractions, but contrast it with Macbeth's recoil at his own murderous thoughts:

My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical,
Shakes so my single state of man that function
Is smothered in surmise, and nothing is
But what is not. (I.iii.139-42)

It is not, then, that he commits crimes and at the end suffers; he suffers even before he commits his first criminal action, and because he is his own tormentor he scarcely needs the spectator's punishing eyes. Immediately after killing Duncan he is afflicted with doubts and has a premonition of the sleeplessness that will ensue. Lady Macbeth takes a simpler view: "Consider it not so deeply," "These deeds must not be thought/After these ways; so, it will make us mad," "A little water clears us of this deed:/How easy is it then!" (But if she here seems as black as the evil angel that prompts Mankind to illicit deeds in the old morality plays, she too reveals inner depths in the sleepwalking scene, when we see that like her husband she is troubled with thick-coming fancies that keep her from her rest.)

Macbeth early recognizes the unnaturalness of his thoughts, and, as the asides in the first act make clear, they estrange him from his fellows and even almost from himself. They make my seated heart knock at my ribs,

Against the use of nature. (I.iii.136-37)

The soldier who fought along with his countrymen—who is described as a savior—becomes, by the last act, a man who knows that he has no friends (enemy troops, rather than troops of friends, surround him); his soldiers at the end—those who do not desert him—are mere "constrained things/Whose hearts are absent too." His course in blood has separated him not only from God ("wherefore could I not pronounce 'Amen'?"), and from his subjects (he cannot banquet at ease with them), but even from his wife. At the start of the play she is his "dearest partner of greatness," and his "dearest love." But midway in the play (though she is "dearest chuck") he keeps from her the plot against Banquo, and at the end he seems almost insensible to her death: "She should have died hereafter." There are many ways of responding to the news of the death of a beloved one, and in this play Shakespeare gives us three. It is instructive to compare Macduff's response (IV.iii) and Old Siward's (V.viii), very different yet not totally so, and to contrast them to Macbeth's utterly dissimilar response.

What of Macbeth's own death? Its effect on us is complex. When his severed head is brought in, perhaps we sense a parallel between Macbeth's career and that of the treacherous Macdonwald, whose head Macbeth had justly fixed upon the battlements, and a contrast between, first, Macbeth and the Thane of Cawdor, who confessed his treasons and yielded up his life "as 'twere a trifle," and, second, between Macbeth and Young Siward, who died as "God's soldier"; but perhaps too we feel that there is something of the soldierly Macbeth in his final contest, and, equally important, that his death is the release (hence it is not wholly painful to him) of one who knows he harvested what he sowed, and who is weary of the sun.

The speech Macbeth makes before he dies can here be used to remind us that he holds our interest partly by his language. It is not a matter of confusing the character with the author, but simply a matter of recognizing that one of the things that makes us interested in Macbeth (and in all the people embodied in the play, or, rather, the people who embody the play) is memorable speech. The point might be made by printing the lines he utters on the nothingness of life just after he learns of Lady Macbeth's death—lines so potent that although they fit exactly into their place in the drama they have often been taken out and held to represent Shakespeare's own view—yet the role that Macbeth's language plays can be still better seen by quoting a dying speech that David Garrick composed for Macbeth in the eighteenth century. Even the reader who has read only as much of the play as has been quoted in this introduction must recognize that every word of Shakespeare's Macbeth will engage him as Garrick's does not. Garrick's Macbeth says:

Hell drags me down. I sink,
I sink. Oh! my soul is lost forever.
Oh!

Dies.

The final speech of Shakespeare's Macbeth is an almost indescribable blend of corrupted pride, desperation, animal fury, and courage; it is not one of the meditative or descriptive passages that even out of context has a life of its own, but like all the other lines in the play it holds us rapt.

A NOTE ON THE SOURCES

Literature commonly has two sources: it owes something to the thoughts and activities of the day, and it owes much to earlier literature. Macbeth is no exception.

First, Macbeth is indebted to the fact that a Scot had acceded to the English throne. More specifically, James I had written a book called Demonology, and in it Shakespeare could have learned, for example, that witches can foretell the future. If Shakespeare wanted to please or honor James, who was supposedly descended from Banquo, he would naturally write a play about Scottish history showing James' ancestor in a favorable light and making use of James' interest in witchcraft. (Henry N. Paul's The Royal Play of Macbeth discusses in great detail the connections between the play and the king.) Yet another, though smaller, influence of the age is seen in the discussion of equivocation in II.iii, a topic much in the air after the trial of the Jesuit Father Garnet (March 1606), who had admitted that he believed equivocation was justifiable if used for a good end.

If we turn to books, it is evident that Shakespeare's chief debt is to Holinshed's Chronicles of England, Scotland, and Ireland. In Holinshed Shakespeare found not only the story of Macbeth, who killed King Duncan, but another story of regicide that suited his purposes even better. Holinshed says that Duncan was "negligent," and that during his reign "many misruled persons took occasion thereof to trouble the peace and quiet state of the commonwealth." According to the Chronicles, Macbeth, with Banquo, openly killed the king; Macbeth's wife is mentioned only once. Shakespeare, clearly, had to dissociate Banquo from Macbeth, and perhaps give Macbeth some other ally. He found a way in Holinshed's story of Donwald, who, urged by his wife, killed his guest, the pious King Duff. But even the story of Donwald and his wife did not contain the sleep-walking scene that Shakespeare invented for Lady Macbeth. A study of the episodes in Holinshed shows that Holinshed actually provided only the broad outline of the story and some hints for particular episodes rather than the characters as we know them or the moral feeling as we sense it.

Other books provided some additional material: possibly Shakespeare browsed through several works on witchcraft and on Scottish history; possibly Seneca's Agamemnon helped him (in its portrait of Clytemnestra) to draw Lady Macbeth; certainly Agamemnon gave him a few verbal tags, as did the Bible, which also gave him, more important, a conception of the consequences of sin. Finally, it should be mentioned that Shakespeare, like other writers, borrowed from himself. Macbeth owes something to Tarquin in Lucrece, who at night performs a deed he knows is repellent and who is aware of his shortsightedness in giving up what Macbeth calls his "eternal jewel":

Who buys a minute's mirth to wail a week?
Or sells eternity to get a toy? (lines 213-14)

A NOTE ON THE TEXT

Macbeth, never printed during Shakespeare's lifetime, was first printed in the Folio of 1623. The play is remarkably short, and it may be that there has been some cutting. That in I.v Lady Macbeth apparently proposes to kill Duncan, and that later in the play Macbeth kills him, is scarcely evidence that a scene had been lost, but the inconsistent stage directions concerning Macbeth's death (one calls for him to be slain on stage, another suggests he is both slain and decapitated offstage) indicate some sort of revision. Nevertheless, when one reads the account of Macbeth in Holinshed (Shakespeare's source), one does not feel that the play as it has come down to us omits anything of significance. If, as seems likely, the play was presented at court, its brevity may well be due to King James' known aversion to long plays. On the other hand, it is generally believed that Hecate is a non-Shakespearean addition to the play (she dominates III.v and has a few lines in IV.i), but the evidence is not conclusive, although the passages (along with IV.i.125-32) sound un-Shakespearean.

The present division into acts and scenes is that of the Folio except for V.viii, a division added by the Globe editors. The present edition silently modernizes spelling and punctuation, regularizes speech prefixes, and translates into English the Folio's Latin designations of act and scene. Other departures from the Folio are listed below. The reading of the present text is given first, in boldface type, and then the reading of the Folio (F) in roman.

I.i.9 Second Witch . . . Anon [F attributes to "All," as part of the ensuing speech]

I.ii.13 gallowglasses gallowgrosses 14 quarrel Quarry 26 thunders break Thunders 33-34 Dismayed . . . Banquo [one line in F] 33-35 Dismayed . . . lion [three lines in F, ending: Banquoh, Eagles, Lyon] 42 But . . . faint [F gives to previous line] 46 So . . . look [F gives to next line] 59 Sweno . . . king [F gives to previous line]

I.iii.5 Give . . . I [F prints as a separate line] 32 weïrd weyward [also at I.v.8; II.i.20; "weyard" at III.i.2;

III.iv.133; IV.i.136] 39 Forres Soris 78 Speak . . . you [F prints as a separate line] 81-82 Into . . . stayed [three lines in F, ending: corporall, Winde, stay'd] 98 Came can 108 why . . . me [F gives to next line] III-14 Which . . . not [five lines in F, ending: loose, Norway, helpe, labour'd, not] 131 If ill [F gives to next line] 140-42 Shakes . . . not [F's lines end: Man, surmise, not] 143 If . . . crown me [two lines in F, ending: King, crown me] 149-53 Give . . . time [seven lines in F, ending: fauour, forgotten, registred, Leafe, them, vpon, time] 156 Till . . . friends [two lines in F, ending: enough, friends]

I.iv.1 Are not Or not [given in F to next line] 2-8 My . . . died [seven lines in F, ending: back, die, hee, Pardon, Repentance, him, dy'de] 23-27 In . . . honor [six lines in F, ending: selfe, Duties, State, should, Loue, Honor]

I.v.22-23 And yet . . . have it [three lines in F, ending: winne, cryes, haue it]

I.vi.1 the air [F gives to next line] 4 martlet Barlet 9 most must 17-20 Against . . . hermits [F's lines end: broad, House, Dignities, Ermites]

I.vii.6 shoal Schoole [variant spelling] 47 do no 58 as you [F gives to next line]

II.i.4 Hold . . . heaven [two lines in F, ending: Sword, Heauen]

7-9 And . . . repose [F's endings: sleepe, thoughts, repose]

13-17 He . . . content [F's endings: Pleasure, Offices, withall, Hostesse, content] 25 when 'tis [F gives to next line] 55 strides sides 56 sure sowre 57 way they they may

II.ii.2-6 What . . . possets [6 lines in F, ending: fire, shriek'd, good-night, open, charge, Possets] 13 s.d. Enter Macbeth [F places after "die" in line 8]

14 I . . . noise [two lines in F, ending: deed, noyse] 18-19 Hark . . . chamber [one line in F] 22-25

There's . . . sleep [F's endings: sleepe, other, Prayers, sleepe]

32 Stuck . . . throat [F gives to previous line] 64-65 To wear

. . . chamber [three lines in F, ending: white, entry, Chamber]

68 Hath . . . knocking [two lines in F, ending: vnattended, knocking]

72-73 To . . . couldst [four lines in F, ending: deed, my selfe, knocking, could'st. The s.d. "Knock" appears after "deed"]

II.iii.23-25 Faith . . . things [two lines of verse in F, the second beginning "And"] 42 s.d. Enter Macbeth [F places after line 42]

51-52 I'll . . . service [one line of prose in F] 54-61 The night

. . . shake [10 lines in F, ending: vnruely, downe, Ayre, Death, terrible, Euent, time, Night, feurous, shake] 64 Tongue nor heart [F gives to next line] 86-87 O . . . murdered [one line in F]

137-43 What . . . bloody [nine lines in F, ending: doe, them, Office, easie, England, I, safer, Smiles, bloody]

II.iv.14 And . . . horses [F prints as a separate line] 17 make

[F gives to next line] 19 They . . . so [F prints as a separate line]

III.i.34-35 Craving . . . with you [three lines in F, ending: Horse, Night, you]

42-43 The sweeter . . . you [three lines in F, ending: welcome, alone, you]

72 Who's there [F prints as a separate line] 75-82 Well . . . might [ten lines in F, ending: then, speeches, past, fortune, selfe, conference, with you, crost, them, might]

85-91 I . . . ever [nine lines in F, ending: so, now, meeting, predominant, goe, man, hand, begger'd, euer] III I do

[F gives to previous line] 114-15 Both . . . enemy [one line in F]

128 Your . . . most [two lines in F, ending: you, most]

III.ii.16 But . . . suffer [two lines in F, ending: dis-ioynt, suffer]

22 Duncan . . . grave [F prints as a separate line] 43 there . . .

done [F gives to next line] 50 and . . . crow [F gives to next line]

III.iii.9 The rest [F gives to next line] 17 O . . . fly, fly, fly

[two lines in F, the first ending: Trecherie] 21 We . . . affair

[two lines in F, ending: lost, Affaire]

III.iv.20-21 Most . . . perfect [four lines in F, ending: Sir, scap'd, againe, perfect] 48 Here . . . Highness [two lines in F, ending: Lord, Highness]

109 broke . . . meeting [F gives to next line] 121 s.d. Exeunt Exit 122 blood will have blood

[F prints as a separate line] 144 in deed indeed

III.v.36 back again [F prints as a separate line]

III.vi.1 My . . . thoughts [two lines in F, ending: Speeches, Thoughts]

24 son Sonnes 38 the their

IV.i.46-47 Open . . . knocks [one line in F] 59 germens

Germaine 71 Beware Macduff [F prints as a separate line] 79

Laugh to scorn [F prints as a separate line] 86 What is this

[F gives to next line] 93 Dunsinane Dunsmane 98 Birnam

Byrnan [this F spelling, or with i for y or with a final e, occurs at V.ii.5, 31; V.iii.2, 60; V.iv.3; V.v.34, 44; V.viii.30]

119 eighth

eight 133 Let . . . hour [F prints as a separate line]

IV.ii.27 Fathered . . . fatherless [two lines in F, ending: is, Father-lesse] 34 Poor bird [F prints as a separate line] 36-44 Why . . . for thee [ten lines in F, ending: Mother, for, saying, is dead, Father, Husband, Market, againe, wit, thee] 50-51 Every . . . hanged [two lines of verse in F, ending: Traitor, hang'd] 59-60 [two lines of verse in F, ending: Monkie, Father] 79 What . . . faces [F prints as a separate line] IV.iii.4 down-fall'n downfall 15 deserve discern 25 where

. . . doubts [F prints as a separate line] 102 Fit to govern [F gives to next line] 107 accursed accust 133 thy they 140 I pray you [F prints as a separate line] 173 O, relation [F gives to next line] 211-12 Wife . . . found [one line in F] 212-13 And . . . too [one line in F] V.iii.39 Cure her Cure 55 senna Cyme V.vi.1 Your . . . down [F prints as a separate line] V.viii.54 behold . . . stands [F prints as a separate line]

THE TRAGEDY OF MACBETH

[Dramatis Personae

DUNCAN King of Scotland

MALCOLM
DONALBAIN } his sons

MACBETH
BANQUO
MACDUFF
LENNOX
ROSS
MENTEITH
ANGUS
CAITHNESS } noblemen of Scotland

FLEANCE son to Banquo

SIWARD Earl of Northumberland, general of the English forces

YOUNG SIWARD his son

SEYTON an officer attending on Macbeth
SON to Macduff

AN ENGLISH DOCTOR

A SCOTTISH DOCTOR

A PORTER

AN OLD MAN

THREE MURDERERS

LADY MACBETH

LADY MACDUFF

A GENTLEWOMAN attending on Lady Macbeth

HECATE

WITCHES

APPARITIONS

LORDS OFFICERS SOLDIERS

ATTENDANTS MESSENGERS

Scene: Scotland; England]

A C T I

Scene I. [An open place.]

Thunder and lightning. Enter three WITCHES.

FIRST WITCH

When shall we three meet again?
In thunder, lightning, or in rain?

SECOND WITCH

When the hurlyburly's done,
When the battle's lost and won.

THIRD WITCH

That will be ere the set of sun.

FIRST WITCH

Where the place?

SECOND WITCH Upon the heath.

THIRD WITCH

There to meet with Macbeth.

FIRST WITCH

I come, Graymalkin.°

The decorative border shown above appeared on the first page of Macbeth in the First Folio edition of Shakespeare's plays, 1623.

I.i.8 Graymalkin the witch's attendant spirit, a gray cat

SECOND WITCH

Paddock° calls.

THIRD WITCH Anon!°

ALL

Fair is foul, and foul is fair.

Hover through the fog and filthy air.

Exeunt.

10

Scene II. [A camp.]

*Alarum within.° Enter KING [Duncan], MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, LENNOX, with ATTENDANTS, meeting
a bleeding CAPTAIN.*

KING

What bloody man is that? He can report,
As seemeth by his plight, of the revolt
The newest state.

MALCOLM

This is the sergeant°

9 Paddock toad; Anon at once

I.ii.s.d. Alarum within trumpet call offstage 3 sergeant i.e., officer (he is called, perhaps with no inconsistency in Shakespeare's day, a captain in the s.d. and speech prefixes;
Sergeant is trisyllabic)

Who like a good and hardy soldier fought
'Gainst my captivity. Hail, brave friend!
Say to the king the knowledge of the broil^o
As thou didst leave it.

CAPTAIN Doubtful it stood,
As two spent swimmers, that do cling together
And choke their art.^o The merciless Macdonwald—
Worthy to be a rebel for to that
The multiplying villainies of nature
Do swarm upon him—from the Western Isles^o
Of kerns and gallowglasses^o is supplied;
And Fortune, on his damnèd quarrel^o smiling,
Showed like a rebel's whore:^o but all's too weak:
For brave Macbeth—well he deserves that name—
Disdaining Fortune, with his brandished steel,
Which smoked with bloody execution,
Like valor's minion^o carved out his passage
Till he faced the slave;
Which nev'r shook hands, nor bade farewell to him,
Till he unseamed him from the nave to th' chops,^o
And fixed his head upon our battlements.

KING
O valiant cousin! Worthy gentleman!

CAPTAIN
As whence the sun 'gins his reflection^o
Shipwracking storms and direful thunders break,
So from that spring whence comfort seemed to come Discomfort swells. Mark, King of Scotland, mark:
No sooner justice had, with valor armed,
Compelled these skipping kerns to trust their heels
But the Norwegian lord, surveying vantage,^o
With furbished arms and new supplies of men,
Began a fresh assault.

KING Dismayed not this
Our captains, Macbeth and Banquo?

CAPTAIN Yes;
As sparrows eagles, or the hare the lion.
If I say sooth,^o I must report they were
As cannons overcharged with double cracks;^o
So they doubly redoubled strokes upon the foe.
Except^o they meant to bathe in reeking wounds,
Or memorize another Golgotha,^o
I cannot tell—
But I am faint; my gashes cry for help.

KING
So well thy words become thee as thy wounds;
They smack of honor both. Go get him surgeons.
[Exit CAPTAIN, attended.]

Enter ROSS and ANGUS.

Who comes here?
MALCOLM The worthy Thane^o of Ross.

6 broil quarrel 9 choke their art hamper each other's doings 12 Western Isles Hebrides 13 Of . . . gallow-glasses with lightly armed Irish foot soldiers and heavily armed ones 14 damnèd quarrel accursed cause 15 Showed . . . whore i.e., falsely appeared to favor Macdonwald 19 minion favorite (trisyllabic) 22 nave . . . chops navel to the jaws 25 reflection four syllables; the ending -ion here and often elsewhere in the play—is disyllabic 31 surveying vantage seeing an opportunity 36 sooth truth 37 cracks explosives 39 Except unless 40 memorize another Golgotha make the place as memorable as Golgotha, "the place of the skull" 45 Thane a Scottish title of nobility

LENNOX

5 What a haste looks through his eyes! So should he look

That seems to^o speak things strange.

ROSS

God save the king!

KING

Whence cam'st thou, worthy thane?

10 ROSS

From Fife, great king;

Where the Norwegian banners flout the sky

And fan our people cold.

Norway^o himself, with terrible numbers,

Assisted by that most disloyal traitor

15 The Thane of Cawdor, began a dismal^o conflict;

Till that Bellona's bridegroom, lapped in proof,^o

Confronted him with self-comparisons,^o

Point against point, rebellious arm 'gainst arm,

Curbing his lavish^o spirit: and, to conclude,

20 The victory fell on us.

KING

Great happiness!

ROSS

That now

Sweno, the Norway's king, craves composition;^o

Nor would we deign him burial of his men

Till he disbursèd, at Saint Colme's Inch,^o

Ten thousand dollars^o to our general use.

25 KING

No more that Thane of Cawdor shall deceive

Our bosom interest:^o go pronounce his present^o death,

And with his former title greet Macbeth.

ROSS

I'll see it done.

KING

What he hath lost, noble Macbeth hath won. Exeunt.

Scene III. [A heath.]

Thunder. Enter the three WITCHES.

35 FIRST WITCH

Where hast thou been, sister?

SECOND WITCH

Killing swine.

THIRD WITCH

40 Sister, where thou?

FIRST WITCH

A sailor's wife had chestnuts in her lap,

And mounched, and mounched, and mounched.

"Give me," quoth I.

"Aroint thee,^o witch!" the rump-fed ronyon^o cries.

Her husband's to Aleppo gone, master o' th' Tiger:

But in a sieve I'll thither sail,

And, like a rat without a tail,

I'll do, I'll do, and I'll do.

SECOND WITCH

I'll give thee a wind.

FIRST WITCH

Th' art kind.

47 seems to seems about to 51 Norway the King of Norway 53 dismal threatening 54 Bellona's . . .
proof the mate of the goddess of war, clad in tested (proved) armor 55 self-comparisons counter-movements
57 lavish insolent 59 composition terms of peace
61 Inch island 62 dollars Spanish and Dutch currency
64 Our bosom interest my (plural of royalty) heart's trust; present immediate

I.iii.6 Aroint thee begone; rump-fed ronyon fat-rumped scabby creature

THIRD WITCH

And I another.

FIRST WITCH

I myself have all the other;

And the very ports they blow,^o

All the quarters that they know

I' th' shipman's card.^o

I'll drain him dry as hay:

Sleep shall neither night nor day

Hang upon his penthouse lid;^o

He shall live a man forbid:^o

Weary sev'nights nine times nine

Shall he dwindle, peak,^o and pine:

Though his bark cannot be lost,

Yet it shall be tempest-tossed.

Look what I have.

SECOND WITCH

Show me, show me.

FIRST WITCH

Here I have a pilot's thumb,

Wracked as homeward he did come.

Drum within.

THIRD WITCH

A drum, a drum!

Macbeth doth come.

ALL

The weird^o sisters, hand in hand,

Posters^o of the sea and land,

Thus do go about, about:

Thrice to thine, and thrice to mine,

And thrice again, to make up nine.

Peace! The charm's wound up.

Enter MACBETH and BANQUO.

MACBETH

So foul and fair a day I have not seen.

BANQUO

How far is't called to Forres? What are these

So withered, and so wild in their attire,

That look not like th' inhabitants o' th' earth,

And yet are on't? Live you, or are you aught

That man may question?^o You seem to understand
me,

By each at once her choppy^o fingers laying

Upon her skinny lips. You should be women,

And yet your beards forbid me to interpret

That you are so.

MACBETH

Speak, if you can: what are you?

FIRST WITCH

All hail, Macbeth! Hail to thee, Thane of Glamis!

SECOND WITCH

All hail, Macbeth! Hail to thee, Thane of Cawdor!

THIRD WITCH

All hail, Macbeth, that shalt be king hereafter!

BANQUO

Good sir, why do you start, and seem to fear

Things that do sound so fair? I' th' name of truth,

Are ye fantastical,^o or that indeed

Which outwardly ye show? My noble partner

You greet with present grace^o and great prediction 55

Of noble having^o and of royal hope,

That he seems rapt withal:^o to me you speak not.

15 If you can look into the seeds of time,

And say which grain will grow and which will not,

Speak then to me, who neither beg nor fear 60

Your favors nor your hate.

FIRST WITCH Hail!

20 SECOND WITCH Hail!

THIRD WITCH Hail!

FIRST WITCH

Lesser than Macbeth, and greater. 65

SECOND WITCH

25 Not so happy,^o yet much happier.

THIRD WITCH

Thou shalt get^o kings, though thou be none.

So all hail, Macbeth and Banquo!

FIRST WITCH

Banquo and Macbeth, all hail!

MACBETH

Stay, you imperfect^o speakers, tell me more: 70

By Sinel's^o death I know I am Thane of Glamis;

But how of Cawdor? The Thane of Cawdor lives,

30 A prosperous gentleman; and to be king

Stand not within the prospect of belief,

No more than to be Cawdor. Say from whence 75

You owe^o this strange intelligence?^o Or why

Upon this blasted heath you stop our way

With such prophetic greeting? Speak, I charge you.

WITCHES vanish.

BANQUO

The earth hath bubbles as the water has,

And these are of them. Whither are they vanished? 80

MACBETH

Into the air, and what seemed corporal^o melted

As breath into the wind. Would they had stayed!

BANQUO

Were such things here as we do speak about?

40 Or have we eaten on the insane^o root

That takes the reason prisoner? 85

MACBETH

Your children shall be kings.

BANQUO

You shall be king.

45 MACBETH

And Thane of Cawdor too. Went it not so?

BANQUO

To th' selfsame tune and words. Who's here?

Enter ROSS and ANGUS.

ROSS

The king hath happily received, Macbeth,

The news of thy success; and when he reads^o 90

Thy personal venture in the rebels' fight,

His wonders and his praises do contend

Which should be thine or his.^o Silenced with that,

55 grace honor 56 having possession 57 rapt withal entranced by it 66 happy fortunate 67 get beget 70 imperfect incomplete 71 Sinel Macbeth's father 76 owe own, have; intelligence information 81 corporal corporeal 84 insane insanity-producing 90 reads considers 92-93 His wonders . . . his Duncan's speechless admiration, appropriate to him, contends with his desire to praise
you (?)

15 ports they blow harbors to which the winds blow (?)
17 card compass card 20 penthouse lid eyelid (the figure is of a lean-to) 21 forbid cursed 23 peak wasteway 32 weird destiny-serving (?) 33 Posters swift travelers 43 question talk to 44 choppy chapped 53 fantastical imaginary

In viewing o'er the rest o' th' selfsame day,
He finds thee in the stout Norweyan ranks,
Nothing afeard of what thyself didst make,
Strange images of death. As thick as tale
Came post with post,^o and every one did bear
Thy praises in his kingdom's great defense,
And poured them down before him.

ANGUS We are sent
To give thee, from our royal master, thanks;
Only to herald thee into his sight,
Not pay thee.

ROSS
And for an earnest^o of a greater honor,
He bade me, from him, call thee Thane of Cawdor; 105
In which addition,^o hail, most worthy thane!
For it is thine.

BANQUO What, can the devil speak true?

MACBETH
The Thane of Cawdor lives: why do you dress me
In borrowed robes?

ANGUS Who was the thane lives yet,
But under heavy judgment bears that life 110
Which he deserves to lose. Whether he was combined^o
With those of Norway, or did line^o the rebel
With hidden help and vantage,^o or that with both
He labored in his country's wrack,^o I know not;
But treasons capital, confessed and proved, 115
Have overthrown him.

MACBETH [Aside.] Glamis, and Thane of Cawdor:
The greatest is behind.^o [To ROSS and ANGUS.] Thanks for your pains.

[Aside to BANQUO.]

Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
When those that gave the Thane of Cawdor to me
Promised no less to them?

BANQUO [Aside to MACBETH.] That, trusted home,^o 120
Might yet enkindle you unto the crown,
Besides the Thane of Cawdor. But 'tis strange:
And oftentimes, to win us to our harm,
The instruments of darkness tell us truths,
Win us with honest trifles, to betray's
In deepest consequence.^o
Cousins,^o a word, I pray you.

MACBETH [Aside.] Two truths are told,
As happy prologues to the swelling^o act
Of the imperial theme.—I thank you, gentlemen.—
[Aside.]

This supernatural soliciting^o 130
Cannot be ill, cannot be good. If ill,
Why hath it given me earnest of success,
Commencing in a truth? I am Thane of Cawdor:
If good, why do I yield to that suggestion
Whose horrid image doth unfix my hair
And make my seated^o heart knock at my ribs,
Against the use of nature?^o Present fears

97–98 As thick . . . post as fast as could be counted came messenger after messenger 104 earnest pledge 106 addition title 111 combined allied 112 line support 113 vantage opportunity 114 wrack ruin 117 behind i.e., to follow 120 home all the way 126 In deepest consequence in the most significant sequel 127 Cousins i.e., fellow noblemen 128 swelling stately 130 soliciting inviting 136 seated fixed 137 Against . . . nature contrary to my natural way

Are less than horrible imaginings.
My thought, whose murder yet is but fantastical,^o 140
Shakes so my single^o state of man that function
Is smothered in surmise, and nothing is
But what is not.

BANQUO Look, how our partner's rapt.

MACBETH [Aside.]

100 If chance will have me king, why, chance may crown
me,
Without my stir.

BANQUO New honors come upon him,
Like our strange^o garments, cleave not to their mold 145
But with the aid of use.

MACBETH [Aside.] Come what come may
Time and the hour runs through the roughest day.

BANQUO
Worthy Macbeth, we stay upon your leisure.^o

MACBETH
Give me your favor.^o My dull brain was wrought
With things forgotten. Kind gentlemen, your pains 150
Are registered where every day I turn
The leaf to read them. Let us toward the king.

[Aside to BANQUO.]

Think upon what hath chanced, and at more time,
The interim having weighed it,^o let us speak
Our free hearts^o each to other.

BANQUO Very gladly. 155

MACBETH
Till then, enough. Come, friends. Exeunt.

Scene IV. [Forres. The palace.]

Flourish.^o Enter KING [Duncan], LENNOX, MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, and ATTENDANTS.

KING
Is execution done on Cawdor? Are not
Those in commission^o yet returned?

MALCOLM My liege,
They are not yet come back. But I have spoke
With one that saw him die, who did report
That very frankly he confessed his treasons, 5
Implored your highness' pardon and set forth
A deep repentance: nothing in his life
Became him like the leaving it. He died
As one that had been studied^o in his death,
To throw away the dearest thing he owed^o 10
As 'twere a careless^o trifle.

KING There's no art
To find the mind's construction in the face:
He was a gentleman on whom I built
An absolute trust.

135 Enter MACBETH, BANQUO, ROSS, and ANGUS.

O worthiest cousin!
The sin of my ingratitude even now 15

139 fantastical imaginary 140 single unaided, weak (or "entire"?) 145 strange new 148 stay . . . leisure await your convenience 149 favor pardon 154 The . . . it i.e., when we have had time to think 155 Our free hearts our minds freely I.iv.s.d. Flourish fanfare 2 in commission i.e., commissioned to oversee the execution 9 studied rehearsed 10 owed owned 11 careless uncared-for

Was heavy on me: thou art so far before,
That swiftest wing of recompense is slow
To overtake thee. Would thou hadst less deserved,
That the proportion^o both of thanks and payment
Might have been mine! Only I have left to say, 20
More is thy due than more than all can pay.

MACBETH

The service and the loyalty I owe,
In doing it, pays itself.^o Your highness' part
Is to receive our duties: and our duties 25
Are to your throne and state children and servants;
Which do but what they should, by doing every thing
Safe toward^o your love and honor.

KING

Welcome hither.

I have begun to plant thee, and will labor
To make thee full of growing. Noble Banquo,
That hast no less deserved, nor must be known 30
No less to have done so, let me enfold thee
And hold thee to my heart.

BANQUO

There if I grow,

The harvest is your own.

KING

My plenteous joys,

Wanton^o in fullness, seek to hide themselves
In drops of sorrow. Sons, kinsmen, thanes, 35
And you whose places are the nearest, know,
We will establish our estate^o upon
Our eldest, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter
The Prince of Cumberland: which honor must
Not unaccompanied invest him only, 40
But signs of nobleness, like stars, shall shine
On all deservers. From hence to Inverness,
And bind us further to you.

MACBETH

The rest is labor, which is not used for you.^o
I'll be myself the harbinger, and make joyful 45
The hearing of my wife with your approach;
So, humbly take my leave.

KING

My worthy Cawdor!

MACBETH [Aside.]

The Prince of Cumberland! That is a step
On which I must fall down, or else o'erleap,
For in my way it lies. Stars, hide your fires; 50
Let not light see my black and deep desires:
The eye wink at the hand;^o yet let that be
Which the eye fears, when it is done, to see. Exit.

KING

True, worthy Banquo; he is full so valiant,
And in his commendations^o I am fed; 55
It is a banquet to me. Let's after him,
Whose care is gone before to bid us welcome.
It is a peerless kinsman. Flourish. Exeunt.

Scene V. [Inverness. Macbeth's castle.]

Enter Macbeth's wife [LADY MACBETH], alone, with a letter.

LADY MACBETH [Reads.] "They met me in the day

19 proportion preponderance 23 pays itself is its own reward 27 Safe toward safeguarding (?) 34 Wanton unrestrained 37 establish our estate settle the succession 44 The . . . you Repose is laborious when not employed for you 52 wink . . . hand be blind to the hand's deed 55 his commendations commendations of him of success; and I have learned by the perfect'st report they have more in them than mortal knowledge.

When I burned in desire to question them further,
they made themselves air, into which they vanished. 5
Whiles I stood rapt in the wonder of it, came missives^o from the king, who all-hailed me 'Thane of Cawdor';
by which title, before, these weird sisters saluted me,
and referred me to the coming on of time, with 'Hail, king that shalt be!' This have I thought good to 10 deliver thee,^o my dearest partner of greatness, that thou mightst not lose the dues of rejoicing, by being ignorant of what greatness is promised thee. Lay it to thy heart, and farewell."

Glamis thou art, and Cawdor, and shalt be 15

What thou art promised. Yet do I fear thy nature;
It is too full o' th' milk of human kindness^o

To catch the nearest way. Thou wouldst be great,
Art not without ambition, but without
The illness^o should attend it. What thou wouldst 20 highly,

That wouldst thou holily; wouldst not play false,
And yet wouldst wrongly win. Thou'dst have, great Glamis,

That which cries, "Thus thou must do" if thou have it;
And that which rather thou dost fear to do
Than wishest should be undone. Hie thee hither, 25
That I may pour my spirits in thine ear,
And chastise with the valor of my tongue
All that impedes thee from the golden round^o
Which fate and metaphysical^o aid doth seem
To have thee crowned withal.^o

Enter MESSENGER.

What is your tidings? 30

MESSENGER

The king comes here tonight. 45

LADY MACBETH

Thou'rt mad to say it!

Is not thy master with him, who, were't so,
Would have informed for preparation?

MESSENGER

So please you, it is true. Our thane is coming.
One of my fellows had the speed of him,^o 35
Who, almost dead for breath, had scarcely more
Than would make up his message.

LADY MACBETH

Give him tending;

He brings great news. Exit MESSENGER.

The raven himself is hoarse

That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan 40
Under my battlements. Come, you spirits
That tend on mortal^o thoughts, unsex me here,
And fill me, from the crown to the toe, top-full
Of direst cruelty! Make thick my blood,
Stop up th' access and passage to remorse,^o
That no compunctious visitings of nature^o 45
Shake my fell^o purpose, nor keep peace between
Th' effect^o and it! Come to my woman's breasts,
And take my milk for^o gall, you murd'ring ministers,^o

I.v.6 missives messengers 11 deliver thee report to you
17 milk . . . kindness i.e., gentle quality of human nature
20 illness wickedness 28 round crown 29 metaphysical supernatural 30 withal with 35 had . . . him outdistanced him 41 mortal deadly 44 remorse compassion 45 compunctious . . . nature natural feelings of compassion 46 fell savage 47 effect fulfillment 48 for in exchange for;
ministers agents

Wherever in your sightless° substances
 You wait on° nature's mischief! Come, thick night, 50
 And pall° thee in the dunnest° smoke of hell,
 That my keen knife see not the wound it makes,
 Nor heaven peep through the blanket of the dark,
 To cry, "Hold, hold!"

Enter MACBETH.

Great Glamis! Worthy Cawdor!
 Greater than both, by the all-hail hereafter!° 55
 Thy letters have transported me beyond
 This ignorant° present, and I feel now
 The future in the instant.°

MACBETH My dearest love,
 Duncan comes here tonight.

LADY MACBETH And when goes hence?

MACBETH Tomorrow, as he purposes.

LADY MACBETH O, never 60
 Shall sun that morrow see!
 Your face, my thane, is as a book where men
 May read strange matters. To beguile the time,°
 Look like the time; bear welcome in your eye,
 Your hand, your tongue: look like th' innocent 65
 flower,
 But be the serpent under't. He that's coming
 Must be provided for: and you shall put
 This night's great business into my dispatch;°
 Which shall to all our nights and days to come
 Give solely sovereign sway and masterdom. 70

MACBETH We will speak further.

LADY MACBETH Only look up clear.°
 To alter favor ever is to fear.°
 Leave all the rest to me.

Exeunt.

Scene VI. [Before Macbeth's castle.]

Hautboys° and torches. Enter KING [Duncan], MALCOLM, DONALBAIN, BANQUO, LENNOX, MACDUFF, ROSS, ANGUS, and ATTENDANTS.

KING
 This castle hath a pleasant seat;° the air
 Nimbly and sweetly recommends itself
 Unto our gentle° senses.

BANQUO This guest of summer,
 The temple-haunting martlet,° does approve°
 By his loved masionry° that the heaven's breath 5
 Smells wooingly here. No jutty,° frieze,
 Buttress, nor coign of vantage,° but this bird
 Hath made his pendent bed and procreant° cradle.

49 sightless invisible 50 wait on assist 51 pall enshroud; dunnest darkest 55 all-hail hereafter the third all-hail (?)
 the all-hail of the future (?) 57 ignorant unknowing 58 instant present 63 To . . . time i.e., to deceive people of the day 68 dispatch management 71 look up clear appear undisturbed 72 To alter . . . fear To show a disturbed face is dangerous

I.vi.s.d. Hautboys oboes 1 seat site 3 gentle soothed 4 temple-haunting martlet martin (swift) nesting in churches; approve prove 5 mansionry nests 6 jutty projection 7
 coign of vantage advantageous corner 8 procreant breeding

Where they most breed and haunt,° I have observed
 The air is delicate.

Enter LADY [MACBETH].

KING See, see, our honored hostess! 10
 The love that follows us sometime is our trouble,
 Which still we thank as love.° Herein I teach you
 How you shall bid God 'ield° us for your pains
 And thank us for your trouble.

LADY MACBETH All our service 15
 In every point twice done, and then done double,
 Were poor and single business° to contend
 Against those honors deep and broad wherewith
 Your majesty loads our house: for those of old,
 And the late dignities heaped up to them,
 We rest your hermits.°

KING Where's the Thane of Cawdor? 20
 We coursed° him at the heels, and had a purpose
 To be his purveyor:° but he rides well,
 And his great love, sharp as his spur, hath holp° him
 To his home before us. Fair and noble hostess,
 We are your guest tonight.

LADY MACBETH Your servants ever 25
 Have theirs, themselves, and what is theirs, in compt,°
 To make their audit at your highness' pleasure,
 Still° to return your own.

KING Give me your hand.
 Conduct me to mine host: we love him highly,
 And shall continue our graces towards him. 30
 By your leave, hostess. Exeunt.

Scene VII. [Macbeth's castle.]

*Hautboys. Torches. Enter a SEWER,° and diverse SER-VANTS with dishes and service over the stage. Then enter
 MACBETH.*

MACBETH
 If it were done° when 'tis done, then 'twere well
 It were done quickly. If th' assassination
 Could trammel up° the consequence, and catch,
 With his surcease,° success;° that but this blow 5
 Might be the be-all and the end-all—here,
 But here, upon this bank and shoal of time,
 We'd jump° the life to come. But in these cases
 We still° have judgment here; that we but teach
 Bloody instructions, which, being taught, return
 To plague th' inventor: this even-handed° justice 10
 Commends° th' ingredients of our poisoned chalice
 To our own lips. He's here in double trust:
 First, as I am his kinsman and his subject,
 Strong both against the deed; then, as his host,
 Who should against his murderer shut the door, 15

9 haunt visit 11-12 The love . . . love The love offered me sometimes inconveniences me, but still I value it as love 13 'ield reward 16 single business feeble service 20 your hermits dependents bound to pray for you 21 coursed pursued 22 purveyor advance-supply officer 23
 holp helped 26 Have . . . compt have their dependents, themselves, and their possessions in trust 28 Still always
 I.vii.s.d. Sewer chief butler 1 done over and done with 3 trammel up catch in a net 4 his surcease Duncan's death
 (?) the consequence's cessation (?); success what follows 7 jump risk 8 still always 10 even-handed impartial 11
 Commends offers

Not bear the knife myself. Besides, this Duncan Hath borne his faculties° so meek, hath been
 So clear° in his great office, that his virtues
 Will plead like angels trumpet-tongued against
 The deep damnation of his taking-off;
 And pity, like a naked newborn babe,
 Striding° the blast, or heaven's cherubin horsed
 Upon the sightless couriers° of the air,
 Shall blow the horrid deed in every eye,
 That° tears shall drown the wind. I have no spur
 To prick the sides of my intent, but only
 Vaulting ambition, which o'erleaps itself
 And falls on th' other—

Enter LADY [MACBETH].

How now! What news?

LADY MACBETH

He has almost supped. Why have you left the chamber?

MACBETH

Hath he asked for me?

LADY MACBETH

Know you not he has?

MACBETH

We will proceed no further in this business:
 He hath honored me of late, and I have bought°
 Golden opinions from all sorts of people,
 Which would be worn now in their newest gloss,
 Not cast aside so soon.

LADY MACBETH

Was the hope drunk

Wherein you dressed yourself? Hath it slept since?
 And wakes it now, to look so green° and pale
 At what it did so freely? From this time
 Such I account thy love. Art thou afeard
 To be the same in thine own act and valor
 As thou art in desire? Wouldst thou have that
 Which thou esteem'st the ornament of life,
 And live a coward in thine own esteem,
 Letting "I dare not" wait upon° "I would,"
 Like the poor cat° i' th' adage?

MACBETH

Prithee, peace!

I dare do all that may become a man;
 Who dares do more is none.

LADY MACBETH

What beast was't then

That made you break° this enterprise to me?
 When you durst do it, then you were a man;
 And to be more than what you were, you would Be so much more the man. Nor time nor place
 Did then adhere,° and yet you would make both.
 They have made themselves, and that their° fitness now
 Does unmake you. I have given suck, and know
 How tender 'tis to love the babe that milks me:
 I would, while it was smiling in my face,
 Have plucked my nipple from his boneless gums,
 And dashed the brains out, had I so sworn as you
 Have done to this.

MACBETH

If we should fail?

LADY MACBETH

We fail?

But° screw your courage to the sticking-place,°

17 faculties powers 18 clear spotless 22 Striding bestriding
 23 sightless couriers invisible coursers (i.e., the winds)
 25 That so that 32 bought acquired 37 green sickly 44 wait upon follow 45 cat which wants fish but fears to wet its paws 48 break broach 52 adhere suit 53 that their their very 60 But only; sticking-place notch (holding the bowstring of a taut crossbow)

And we'll not fail. When Duncan is asleep—
 Whereto the rather shall his day's hard journey
 Soundly invite him—his two chamberlains
 Will I with wine and wassail° so convince,°
 That memory, the warder° of the brain,
 Shall be a fume, and the receipt of reason
 A limbeck only:° when in swinish sleep
 Their drenchèd natures lies° as in a death,
 What cannot you and I perform upon
 Th' unguarded Duncan, what not put upon
 His spongy° officers, who shall bear the guilt
 Of our great quell?°

MACBETH

Bring forth men-children only;

For thy undaunted mettle° should compose
 Nothing but males. Will it not be received,
 When we have marked with blood those sleepy two
 Of his own chamber, and used their very daggers,
 That they have done't?

LADY MACBETH

Who dares receive it other,°

As we shall make our griefs and clamor roar
 Upon his death?

MACBETH

I am settled, and bend up

Each corporal agent to this terrible feat.
 Away, and mock the time° with fairest show:
 False face must hide what the false heart doth know.
Exeunt.

A C T I I

Scene I. [Inverness. Court of Macbeth's castle.]

40 Enter BANQUO, and FLEANCE, with a torch before him.

BANQUO

How goes the night, boy?

FLEANCE

The moon is down; I have not heard the clock.

BANQUO

And she goes down at twelve.

FLEANCE

I take't, 'tis later, sir.

BANQUO

Hold, take my sword. There's husbandry° in heaven.
 Their candles are all out. Take thee that too.
 A heavy summons° lies like lead upon me,
 And yet I would not sleep. Merciful powers,
 Restrain in me the cursèd thoughts that nature
 Gives way to in repose!

Enter MACBETH, and a SERVANT with a torch.

Give me my sword!

Who's there?

MACBETH

A friend.

BANQUO

What, sir, not yet at rest? The king's a-bed:
 He hath been in unusual pleasure, and

64 wassail carousing; convince overpower 65 warder guard 66–67 receipt . . . only i.e., the receptacle ("receipt"), which should collect the distillate of thought—reason—will be a mere vessel ("limbeck") of undistilled liquids 68 lies lie 71 spongy sodden 72 quell killing 73 mettle substance 77 other otherwise 81 mock the time beguile the world

II.i.4 husbandry frugality 6 summons call (to sleep)

Sent forth great largess to your offices:^o
 This diamond he greets your wife withal,
 By the name of most kind hostess; and shut up^o
 In measureless content.

MACBETH Being unprepared,
 Our will became the servant to defect,^o
 Which else should free have wrought.

BANQUO All's well.
 I dreamt last night of the three weird sisters:
 To you they have showed some truth.

MACBETH I think not of them.
 Yet, when we can entreat an hour to serve,
 We would spend it in some words upon that business,
 If you would grant the time.

BANQUO At your kind'st leisure.

MACBETH
 If you shall cleave to my consent, when 'tis,^o
 It shall make honor for you.

BANQUO So^o I lose none
 In seeking to augment it, but still keep
 My bosom franchised^o and allegiance clear,^o
 I shall be counseled.

MACBETH Good repose the while!

BANQUO Thanks, sir. The like to you!
Exit BANQUO, [with FLEANCE].

MACBETH
 Go bid thy mistress, when my drink is ready,
 She strike upon the bell. Get thee to bed.
Exit [SERVANT].

Is this a dagger which I see before me,
 The handle toward my hand? Come, let me clutch
 thee.
 I have thee not, and yet I see thee still.
 Art thou not, fatal vision, sensible^o
 To feeling as to sight, or art thou but
 A dagger of the mind, a false creation,
 Proceeding from the heat-oppressed brain?
 I see thee yet, in form as palpable
 As this which now I draw.
 Thou marshal'st me the way that I was going;
 And such an instrument I was to use.
 Mine eyes are made the fools o' th' other senses,
 Or else worth all the rest. I see thee still;
 And on thy blade and dudgeon^o gouts^o of blood,
 Which was not so before. There's no such thing.
 It is the bloody business which informs^o
 Thus to mine eyes. Now o'er the one half-world
 Nature seems dead, and wicked dreams abuse^o
 The curtained sleep; witchcraft celebrates
 Pale Hecate's offerings,^o and withered murder,
 Alarumed^o by his sentinel, the wolf,
 Whose howl's his watch, thus with his stealthy pace,
 With Tarquin's^o ravishing strides, towards his design 55

14 largess . . . offices gifts to your servants' quarters
 16 shut up concluded 18 Our . . . defect our good will was hampered by our deficient preparations 25 cleave
 . . . 'tis join my cause, when the time comes 26 So provided that 28 franchised free (from guilt); clear spotless 36 sensible perceptible 46 dudgeon wooden hilt;
 gouts large drops 48 informs gives shape (?) 50 abuse deceive 52 Hecate's offerings offerings to Hecate (goddess of sorcery) 53 Alarumed called to action 55 Tarquin
 Roman tyrant who ravished Lucrece

Moves like a ghost. Thou sure and firm-set earth,
 Hear not my steps, which way they walk, for fear
 Thy very stones prate of my whereabouts,
 And take the present horror from the time,
 Which now suits with it.^o Whiles I threat, he lives: 60
 Words to the heat of deeds too cold breath gives.

A bell rings.

I go, and it is done: the bell invites me.
 Hear it not, Duncan, for it is a knell
 That summons thee to heaven, or to hell. Exit.

Scene II. [Macbeth's castle.]

Enter LADY [MACBETH].

LADY MACBETH
 That which hath made them drunk hath made me
 bold;
 What hath quenched them hath given me fire. Hark!
 Peace!

It was the owl that shrieked, the fatal bellman,
 Which gives the stern'st good-night.^o He is about it.
 The doors are open, and the surfeited grooms 5
 Do mock their charge with snores. I have drugged their possets,^o
 That death and nature^o do contend about them,
 Whether they live or die.

MACBETH [Within.] Who's there? What, ho?

LADY MACBETH
 Alack, I am afraid they have awaked
 And 'tis not done! Th' attempt and not the deed 10
 Confounds^o us. Hark! I laid their daggers ready;
 He could not miss 'em. Had he not resembled
 My father as he slept, I had done't.

Enter MACBETH.

My husband!

MACBETH
 I have done the deed. Didst thou not hear a noise?

LADY MACBETH
 I heard the owl scream and the crickets cry. 15
 Did not you speak?

MACBETH When?

LADY MACBETH Now.
 MACBETH As I descended?

LADY MACBETH Ay.

MACBETH Hark!
 Who lies i' th' second chamber?

LADY MACBETH Donalbain.

MACBETH This is a sorry^o sight. 20

LADY MACBETH

A foolish thought, to say a sorry sight.

MACBETH

There's one did laugh in's sleep, and one cried,
 "Murder!"

That they did wake each other. I stood and heard them.

59-60 take . . . it remove (by noise) the horrible silence attendant on this moment and suitable to it (?)

II.ii.3-4 bellman . . . good-night i.e., the owl's call, por-tending death, is like the town crier's call to a condemned man 6 possets bedtime drinks 7 nature natural vitality 11 Con-founds ruins 20 sorry miserable

But they did say their prayers, and addressed them
Again to sleep.

LADY MACBETH There are two lodged together. 25

MACBETH
One cried, "God bless us!" and "Amen" the other,
As they had seen me with these hangman's^o hands:
List'ning their fear, I could not say, "Amen,"
When they did say, "God bless us!"

LADY MACBETH Consider it not so deeply.

MACBETH
But wherefore could not I pronounce "Amen"? 30
I had most need of blessing, and "Amen"
Stuck in my throat.

LADY MACBETH These deeds must not be thought
After these ways; so, it will make us mad.

MACBETH
Methought I heard a voice cry "Sleep no more!
Macbeth does murder sleep"—the innocent sleep, 35
Sleep that knits up the raveled sleeve^o of care,
The death of each day's life, sore labor's bath,
Balm of hurt minds, great nature's second course,^o
Chief nourisher in life's feast—

LADY MACBETH What do you mean?

MACBETH
Still it cried, "Sleep no more!" to all the house: 40
"Glamis hath murdered sleep, and therefore Cawdor Shall sleep no more: Macbeth shall sleep no more."

LADY MACBETH
Who was it that thus cried? Why, worthy thane,
You do unbend^o your noble strength, to think
So brainsickly of things. Go get some water, 45
And wash this filthy witness^o from your hand.
Why did you bring these daggers from the place?
They must lie there: go carry them, and smear
The sleepy grooms with blood.

MACBETH I'll go no more. 50
I am afraid to think what I have done;
Look on't again I dare not.

LADY MACBETH Infirm of purpose!
Give me the daggers. The sleeping and the dead
Are but as pictures. 'Tis the eye of childhood
That fears a painted^o devil. If he do bleed, 55
I'll gild^o the faces of the grooms withal,
For it must seem their guilt. Exit. Knock within.

MACBETH Whence is that knocking?
How is't with me, when every noise appalls me?
What hands are here? Ha! They pluck out mine eyes!
Will all great Neptune's ocean wash this blood
Clean from my hand? No; this my hand will rather 60
The multitudinous seas incarnadine,^o
Making the green one red.^o

Enter LADY [MACBETH].

LADY MACBETH
My hands are of your color, but I shame
To wear a heart so white. (Knock.) I hear a knocking

At the south entry. Retire we to our chamber. 65

A little water clears us of this deed:
How easy is it then! Your constancy Hath left you unattended.^o (Knock.) Hark! more knocking.
Get on your nightgown,^o lest occasion call us
And show us to be watchers.^o Be not lost 70
So poorly^o in your thoughts.

MACBETH
To know my deed, 'twere best not know myself.
(Knock.)

Wake Duncan with thy knocking! I would thou couldst! Exeunt.

Scene III. [Macbeth's castle.]

Enter a PORTER. Knocking within.

PORTER Here's a knocking indeed! If a man were porter of hell gate, he should have old^o turning the key.
(Knock.) Knock, knock, knock! Who's there, i' th' name of Beelzebub? Here's a farmer, that hanged himself on th' expectation of plenty.^o Come in time! 5
Have napkins enow^o about you; here you'll sweat for't.
(Knock.) Knock, knock! Who's there, in th' other devil's name? Faith, here an equivocator,^o that could swear in both the scales against either scale; who committed treason enough for God's sake, yet could 10 not equivocate to heaven. O, come in, equivocator.
(Knock.) Knock, knock, knock! Who's there? Faith, here's an English tailor come hither for stealing out of a French hose:^o come in, tailor. Here you may roast your goose.^o (Knock.) Knock, knock; never at quiet! 15
What are you? But this place is too cold for hell. I'll devil-porter it no further. I had thought to have let in some of all professions that go the primrose way to th' everlasting bonfire. (Knock.) Anon, anon! [Opens an entrance.] I pray you, remember the porter. 20

Enter MACDUFF and LENNOX.

MACDUFF
Was it so late, friend, ere you went to bed,
That you do lie so late?
PORTER Faith, sir, we were carousing till the second cock:^o and drink, sir, is a great provoker of three 25 things.
MACDUFF What three things does drink especially provoke?
PORTER Marry, sir, nose-painting, sleep, and urine.
Lechery, sir, it provokes and unprovokes; it provokes
the desire, but it takes away the performance: therefore 30 much drink may be said to be an equivocator with lechery: it makes him and it mars him; it sets him on and it takes him off; it persuades him and disheartens

67-68 Your . . . unattended Your firmness has deserted you 69 nightgown dressing-gown 70 watchers i.e., up late 71 poorly weakly

II.iii.2 should have old would certainly have plenty of 4-5 farmer . . . plenty the farmer hoarded so he could later sell high, but when it looked as though there would be a crop surplus he hanged himself 6 enow enough 8 equivocator
i.e., Jesuit (who allegedly employed deceptive speech to further God's ends) 14 French hose tight-fitting hose 15 goose pressing iron 23-24 second cock about 3 A.M.

27 hangman's executioner's (i.e., bloody) 36 knits . . .
sleeve straightens out the tangled skein 38 second course
i.e., sleep (the less substantial first course is food) 44 unbend relax 46 witness evidence 54 painted depicted 55 gild paint 61 incarnadine redden 62 the . . . red perhaps "the green one" means "the ocean," but perhaps "one" here means "totally," "uniformly"

him; makes him stand to and not stand to; in conclusion, equivocates him in a sleep, and giving him the 35 lie, leaves him.

MACDUFF I believe drink gave thee the lie^o last night.

PORTER That it did, sir, i' the very throat on me: but I requited him for his lie, and, I think, being too strong for him, though he took up my legs sometime, yet I 40 made a shift to cast^o him.

MACDUFF Is thy master stirring?

Enter MACBETH.

Our knocking has awaked him; here he comes.

LENNOX

Good morrow, noble sir.

MACBETH Good morrow, both.

MACDUFF

Is the king stirring, worthy thane?

MACBETH Not yet. 45

MACDUFF

He did command me to call timely^o on him:

I have almost slipped^o the hour.

MACBETH I'll bring you to him.

MACDUFF

I know this is a joyful trouble to you;

But yet 'tis one.

MACBETH

The labor we delight in physics pain.^o 50

This is the door.

MACDUFF I'll make so bold to call,
For 'tis my limited service.^o Exit MACDUFF.

LENNOX

Goes the king hence today?

MACBETH He does: he did appoint so.

LENNOX

The night has been unruly. Where we lay,
Our chimneys were blown down, and, as they say, 55
Lamentings heard i' th' air, strange screams of death,
And prophesying with accents terrible
Of dire combustion^o and confused events
New hatched to th' woeful time: the obscure bird^o
Clamored the livelong night. Some say, the earth 60
Was feverous and did shake.

MACBETH 'Twas a rough night.

LENNOX

My young remembrance cannot parallel
A fellow to it.

Enter MACDUFF.

MACDUFF

O horror, horror, horror! Tongue nor heart
Cannot conceive nor name thee.

MACBETH AND LENNOX What's the matter? 65

MACDUFF

Confusion^o now hath made his masterpiece.
Most sacrilegious murder hath broke ope
The Lord's anointed temple, and stole thence
The life o' th' building.

MACBETH What is't you say? The life?

LENNOX

Mean you his majesty? 70

MACDUFF

Approach the chamber, and destroy your sight

With a new Gorgon:^o do not bid me speak;

See, and then speak yourselves. Awake, awake!

Exeunt MACBETH and LENNOX.

Ring the alarum bell. Murder and treason!

Banquo and Donalbain! Malcolm! Awake! 75

Shake off this downy sleep, death's counterfeit,^o

And look on death itself! Up, up, and see

The great doom's image!^o Malcolm! Banquo!

As from your graves rise up, and walk like sprites,^o

To countenance^o this horror. Ring the bell. 80

Bell rings. Enter LADY [MACBETH].

LADY MACBETH

What's the business,

That such a hideous trumpet calls to parley

The sleepers of the house? Speak, speak!

MACDUFF O gentle lady,

'Tis not for you to hear what I can speak:

The repetition,^o in a woman's ear,

Would murder as it fell. 85

Enter BANQUO.

O Banquo, Banquo!

Our royal master's murdered.

LADY MACBETH Woe, alas!

What, in our house?

BANQUO Too cruel anywhere.

Dear Duff, I prithee, contradict thyself,

And say it is not so. 90

Enter MACBETH, LENNOX, and ROSS.

MACBETH

Had I but died an hour before this chance,

I had lived a blessed time; for from this instant

There's nothing serious in mortality:^o

All is but toys.^o Renown and grace is dead,

The wine of life is drawn, and the mere lees^o

Is left this vault^o to brag of. 95

Enter MALCOLM and DONALBAIN.

DONALBAIN

What is amiss?

MACBETH You are, and do not know't.

The spring, the head, the fountain of your blood

Is stopped; the very source of it is stopped.

MACDUFF

Your royal father's murdered.

MALCOLM

O, by whom? 100

LENNOX

Those of his chamber, as it seemed, had done't:

Their hands and faces were all badged^o with blood;

So were their daggers, which unwiped we found

72 Gorgon creature capable of turning beholders to stone 76 counterfeit imitation 78 great doom's image likeness of Judgment Day 79 sprites spirits 80 countenance be in keeping with 85 repetition report 93 serious in mortality worthwhile in mortal life 94 toys trifles 95 lees dregs 96 vault (1) wine vault (2) earth, with the sky as roof (?) 102 badged marked

37 gave . . . lie called you a liar (with a pun on the sense of "stretched you out") 41 cast with a pun on the sense of "vomit" 46 timely early 47 slipped let slip 50 The . . . pain Labor that gives us pleasure cures discomfort 52 limited service appointed duty 58 combustion tumult 59 obscure bird bird of darkness, i.e., the owl 66 Confusion destruction

Upon their pillows. They stared, and were distracted.
No man's life was to be trusted with them.

105

MACBETH

O, yet I do repent me of my fury,
That I did kill them.

MACDUFF

Wherefore did you so?

MACBETH

Who can be wise, amazed,° temp'rate and furious,
Loyal and neutral, in a moment? No man.

The expedition° of my violent love

110

Outrun the pauser, reason. Here lay Duncan,
His silver skin laced with his golden blood,
And his gashed stabs looked like a breach in nature

For ruin's wasteful entrance: there, the murderers,

Steeped in the colors of their trade, their daggers

115

Unmannerly breeched with gore.° Who could refrain,°

That had a heart to love, and in that heart

Courage to make's love known?

LADY MACBETH

Help me hence, ho!

MACDUFF

Look to° the lady.

MALCOLM [Aside to DONALBAIN.]

Why do we hold our tongues,

120

That most may claim this argument for ours?°

DONALBAIN [Aside to MALCOLM.]

What should be spoken here,

Where our fate, hid in an auger-hole,°

May rush, and seize us? Let's away:

Our tears are not yet brewed.

125

MALCOLM [Aside to DONALBAIN.]

Nor our strong sorrow

Upon the foot of motion.°

BANQUO

Look to the lady.

[LADY MACBETH is carried out.]

And when we have our naked frailties hid,°

That suffer in exposure, let us meet

And question° this most bloody piece of work,

130

To know it further. Fears and scruples° shake us.

In the great hand of God I stand, and thence

Against the undivulged pretense° I fight

Of treasonous malice.

MACDUFF

And so do I.

ALL

So all.

MACBETH

Let's briefly° put on manly readiness,

135

And meet i' th' hall together.

ALL

Well contented.

Exeunt [all but MALCOLM and DONALBAIN].

MALCOLM

What will you do? Let's not consort with them.

To show an unfelt sorrow is an office°

Which the false man does easy. I'll to England.

DONALBAIN

To Ireland, I; our separated fortune

140

Shall keep us both the safer. Where we are

There's daggers in men's smiles; the near in blood,

The nearer bloody.

MALCOLM

This murderous shaft that's shot

Hath not yet lighted, and our safest way

Is to avoid the aim. Therefore to horse;

145

And let us not be dainty of° leave-taking,

But shift away. There's warrant° in that theft

Which steals itself° when there's no mercy left.

*Exeunt.*Scene IV. [Outside Macbeth's castle.]Enter ROSS with an OLD MAN.

OLD MAN

Threescore and ten I can remember well:

Within the volume of which time I have seen

Hours dreadful and things strange, but this sore° night

Hath trifled former knowings.°

ROSS

Ha, good father,

Thou see'st the heavens, as troubled with man's act,

5

Threatens his bloody stage. By th' clock 'tis day,

120

And yet dark night strangles the traveling lamp:°

Is't night's predominance,° or the day's shame,

That darkness does the face of earth entomb,

When living light should kiss it?

OLD MAN

'Tis unnatural,

10

Even like the deed that's done. On Tuesday last

A falcon, tow'ring in her pride of place,°

Was by a mousing° owl hawked at and killed.

ROSS

And Duncan's horses—a thing most strange and certain—

Beauteous and swift, the minions° of their race,

15

Turned wild in nature, broke their stalls, flung out,°

Contending 'gainst obedience, as they would make

War with mankind.

OLD MAN

'Tis said they eat° each other.

ROSS

They did so, to th' amazement of mine eyes,

That looked upon't.

Enter MACDUFF.

Here comes the good Macduff.

20

How goes the world, sir, now?

MACDUFF

Why, see you not?

ROSS

Is't known who did this more than bloody deed?

MACDUFF

Those that Macbeth hath slain.

ROSS

Alas, the day!

What good could they pretend?°

MACDUFF

They were suborned:°

25

Malcolm and Donalbain, the king's two sons,

Are stol'n away and fled, which puts upon them

146 dainty of fussy about 147 warrant justification 148 steals itself steals oneself away

II.iv.3 sore grievous 4 trifled former knowings made trifles of former experiences 7 traveling lamp i.e., the sun

8 predominance astrological supremacy 12 tow'ring . . .

place soaring at her summit 13 mousing i.e., normally mouse-eating 15 minions darlings 16 flung out lunged wildly 18 eat ate 24 pretend hope for; suborned bribed

108 amazed bewildered 110 expedition haste 116
Unmannerly . . . gore covered with unseemly breeches of blood; refrain check oneself 119 Look to look after 121 That . . . ours who are the most concerned with this topic 123 auger-hole i.e., unsuspected place 125-27
Our tears . . . motion i.e., we have not yet had time for tears nor to express our sorrows in action (?) 128 naked frailties hid poor bodies clothed 130 question discuss 131 scruples suspicions 133 undivulged pretense hidden purpose 135 briefly quickly 138 office function

Suspicion of the deed.
ROSS 'Gainst nature still.
Thriftless° ambition, that will ravin up°
Thine own life's means! Then 'tis most like
The sovereignty will fall upon Macbeth.
MACDUFF
He is already named,° and gone to Scone
To be invested.°
ROSS Where is Duncan's body?
MACDUFF
Carried to Colmekill,
The sacred storehouse of his predecessors
And guardian of their bones.
ROSS Will you to Scone?
MACDUFF
No, cousin, I'll to Fife.
ROSS Well, I will thither.
MACDUFF
Well, may you see things well done there. Adieu, Lest our old robes sit easier than our new!
ROSS Farewell, father.
OLD MAN
God's benison° go with you, and with those
That would make good of bad, and friends of foes!
Exeunt omnes.

A C T I I I

Scene I. [Forres. The palace.]

Enter BANQUO.
BANQUO
Thou hast it now: king, Cawdor, Glamis, all,
As the weird women promised, and I fear
Thou play'dst most foully for't. Yet it was said
It should not stand° in thy posterity,
But that myself should be the root and father
Of many kings. If there come truth from them—
As upon thee, Macbeth, their speeches shine—
Why, by the verities on thee made good,
May they not be my oracles as well
And set me up in hope? But hush, no more!
Sennet° sounded. Enter MACBETH as king, LADY
[MACBETH], LENNOX, ROSS, LORDS, and ATTEN-DANTS.

MACBETH
Here's our chief guest.
LADY MACBETH If he had been forgotten,
It had been as a gap in our great feast,
And all-thing° unbecoming.

MACBETH
Tonight we hold a solemn° supper, sir,
And I'll request your presence.

BANQUO Let your highness

28 Thriftless wasteful; ravin up greedily devour 31 named elected 32 invested installed as king 40 benison blessing

III.i.4 stand continue 10 s.d. Sennet trumpet call 13 all-thing altogether 14 solemn ceremonious

Command upon me, to the which my duties
Are with a most indissoluble tie
For ever knit.

MACBETH
30 Ride you this afternoon?

BANQUO Ay, my good lord.

MACBETH
We should have else desired your good advice 20
(Which still° hath been both grave and prosperous°)
In this day's council; but we'll take tomorrow.
Is't far you ride?

BANQUO
35 As far, my lord, as will fill up the time
'Twixt this and supper. Go not my horse the better,° 25
I must become a borrower of the night
For a dark hour or twain.

MACBETH Fail not our feast.

BANQUO
My lord, I will not.

MACBETH
We hear our bloody cousins are bestowed°
In England and in Ireland, not confessing 30
Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers
With strange invention.° But of that tomorrow,
When therewithal we shall have cause of state
Craving us jointly.° Hie you to horse. Adieu,
Till you return at night. Goes Fleance with you? 35

BANQUO
Ay, my good lord: our time does call upon's.

MACBETH
I wish your horses swift and sure of foot,
And so I do commend you to their backs.
Farewell. Exit BANQUO.

Let every man be master of his time 40
Till seven at night. To make society
The sweeter welcome, we will keep ourself
Till supper-time alone. While° then, God be with you!
Exeunt LORDS [and all but MACBETH and a SERVANT].

5 Sirrah,° a word with you: attend° those men
Our pleasure?

ATTENDANT
They are, my lord, without° the palace gate.

MACBETH
10 Bring them before us. Exit SERVANT.
To be thus is nothing, but° to be safely thus—
Our fears in° Banquo stick deep,
And in his royalty of nature reigns that 50
Which would° be feared. 'Tis much he dares;
And, to° that dauntless temper° of his mind,
He hath a wisdom that doth guide his valor
To act in safety. There is none but he Whose being I do fear: and under him 55
My genius is rebuked,° as it is said
Mark Antony's was by Caesar. He chid the sisters,

21 still always; grave and prosperous weighty and profitable
25 Go . . . better unless my horse goes better than I expect 29 are bestowed have taken refuge 32 invention lies 33-34 cause . . . jointly matters of state demanding our joint attention 43 While until 44 Sirrah common address to an inferior; attend await 46 without outside 48 but unless 49 in about 51 would must 52 to added to; temper quality 56 genius is rebuked guardian spirit is cowed

When first they put the name of king upon me,
 And bade them speak to him; then prophetlike
 They hailed him father to a line of kings. 60
 Upon my head they placed a fruitless crown
 And put a barren scepter in my gripe,^o
 Thence to be wrenched with an unlineal hand,
 No son of mine succeeding. If't be so,
 For Banquo's issue have I filed^o my mind; 65
 For them the gracious Duncan have I murdered;
 Put rancors^o in the vessel of my peace
 Only for them, and mine eternal jewel^o
 Given to the common enemy of man,^o
 To make them kings, the seeds of Banquo kings! 70
 Rather than so, come, fate, into the list,^o
 And champion me to th' utterance!^o Who's there?

Enter SERVANT and two MURDERERS.

Now go to the door, and stay there till we call.

Exit SERVANT.

Was it not yesterday we spoke together?

MURDERERS

It was, so please your highness.

MACBETH

Well then, now 75

Have you considered of my speeches? Know
 That it was he in the times past, which held you
 So under fortune,^o which you thought had been
 Our innocent self: this I made good to you
 In our last conference; passed in probation^o with you, 80
 How you were borne in hand,^o how crossed;^o the instruments,^o
 Who wrought with them, and all things else that might
 To half a soul^o and to a notion^o crazed
 Say, "Thus did Banquo."

FIRST MURDERER

You made it known to us.

MACBETH

I did so; and went further, which is now 85
 Our point of second meeting. Do you find
 Your patience so predominant in your nature,
 That you can let this go? Are you so gospelled,^o
 To pray for this good man and for his issue,
 Whose heavy hand hath bowed you to the grave 90
 And beggared yours for ever?

FIRST MURDERER

We are men, my liege.

MACBETH

Ay, in the catalogue ye go for^o men;
 As hounds and greyhounds, mongrels, spaniels, curs,
 Shoughs, water-rugs^o and demi-wolves, are clept^o
 All by the name of dogs: the valued file^o 95
 Distinguishes the swift, the slow, the subtle,
 The housekeeper,^o the hunter, every one
 According to the gift which bounteous nature
 Hath in him closed,^o whereby he does receive

Particular addition, from the bill^o 100
 That writes them all alike: and so of men.
 Now if you have a station in the file,
 Not i' th' worst rank of manhood, say't,
 And I will put that business in your bosoms
 Whose execution takes your enemy off, 105
 Grapples you to the heart and love of us,
 Who wear our health but sickly in his life,^o
 Which in his death were perfect.

SECOND MURDERER

I am one, my liege,

Whom the vile blows and buffets of the world
 Hath so incensed that I am reckless what 110
 I do to spite the world.

FIRST MURDERER

And I another

So weary with disasters, tugged with fortune,
 That I would set^o my life on any chance,
 To mend it or be rid on't.

MACBETH

Both of you

Know Banquo was your enemy.

BOTH MURDERERS

True, my lord. 115

MACBETH

So is he mine, and in such bloody distance^o
 That every minute of his being thrusts
 Against my near'st of life:^o and though I could
 With barefaced power sweep him from my sight 120
 And bid my will avouch^o it, yet I must not,
 For^o certain friends that are both his and mine,
 Whose loves I may not drop, but wail his fall^o
 Who I myself struck down: and thence it is
 That I to your assistance do make love,
 Masking the business from the common eye 125
 For sundry weighty reasons.

SECOND MURDERER

We shall, my lord,

Perform what you command us.

FIRST MURDERER

Though our lives—

MACBETH

Your spirits shine through you. Within this hour at most
 I will advise you where to plant yourselves,
 Acquaint you with the perfect spy^o o' th' time, 130
 The moment on't;^o for't must be done tonight,
 And something^o from the palace; always thought^o
 That I require a clearness:^o and with him—
 To leave no rubs^o nor botches in the work—
 Fleance his son, that keeps him company, 135
 Whose absence is no less material to me
 Than is his father's, must embrace the fate
 Of that dark hour. Resolve yourselves apart:^o
 I'll come to you anon.

MURDERERS

We are resolved, my lord.

MACBETH

I'll call upon you straight.^o Abide within. 140

62 gripe grasp 65 filed defiled 67 rancors bitter enmities 68 eternal jewel i.e., soul 69 common . . . man i.e., the devil 71 list lists 72 champion . . . utterance fight against me to the death 77-78 held . . . fortune kept you from good fortune (?) 80 passed in probation reviewed the proofs 81 borne in hand deceived; crossed thwarted; instruments tools 83 half a soul a halfwit; notion mind 88 gospelled i.e., made meek by the gospel 92 go for pass as 94 Shoughs, water-rugs shaggy dogs, long-haired water dogs; clept called 95 valued file classification by valuable traits 97 housekeeper watchdog 99 closed enclosed

100 Particular . . . bill special distinction in opposition to the list 107 wear . . . life have only imperfect health while he lives 113 set risk 116 distance quarrel 118 near'st of life most vital spot 120 avouch justify 121 For because of 122 wail his fall bewail his death 130 perfect spy exact information (?) (spy literally means "observation"; apparently Macbeth already has the Third Murderer in mind) 131 on't of it 132 something some distance; thought remembered 133 clearness freedom from suspicion 134 rubs flaws 138 Resolve yourselves apart Decide by yourselves 140 straight immediately

It is concluded: Banquo, thy soul's flight,
If it find heaven, must find it out tonight. Exeunt.

Scene II. [The palace.]

Enter [LADY MACBETH] and a SERVANT.

LADY MACBETH

Is Banquo gone from court?

SERVANT

Ay, madam, but returns again tonight.

LADY MACBETH

Say to the king, I would attend his leisure
For a few words.

SERVANT

Madam, I will. Exit.

LADY MACBETH

Nought's had, all's spent,

Where our desire is got without content:

'Tis safer to be that which we destroy

Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy.

Enter MACBETH.

How now, my lord! Why do you keep alone,

Of sorriest^o fancies your companions making,

Using those thoughts which should indeed have died 10

With them they think on? Things without^o all remedy

Should be without regard: what's done is done.

MACBETH

We have scorched^o the snake, not killed it:

She'll close^o and be herself, whilst our poor malice^o

Remains in danger of her former tooth. 15

But let the frame of things disjoint,^o both the worlds^o suffer,

Ere we will eat our meal in fear, and sleep

In the affliction of these terrible dreams

That shake us nightly: better be with the dead,

Whom we, to gain our peace, have sent to peace, 20

Than on the torture^o of the mind to lie

In restless ecstasy.^o Duncan is in his grave;

After life's fitful fever he sleeps well.

Treason has done his^o worst: nor steel, nor poison,

Malice domestic,^o foreign levy, nothing, 25

Can touch him further.

LADY MACBETH

Come on.

Gentle my lord, sleek^o o'er your rugged^o looks;

Be bright and jovial among your guests tonight.

MACBETH

So shall I, love; and so, I pray, be you:

Let your remembrance apply to Banquo;^o 30

Present him eminence,^o both with eye and tongue:

Unsafe the while, that we must lave^o

Our honors in these flattering streams

And make our faces vizards^o to our hearts,

Disguising what they are.

LADY MACBETH

You must leave this. 35

MACBETH

O, full of scorpions is my mind, dear wife!

III.ii.9 sorriest most despicable 11 without beyond 13 scorched slashed, scored 14 close heal; poor malice feeble enmity 16 frame . . . disjoint universe collapse; both the worlds heaven and earth (?) 21 torture i.e., rack 22 ecstasy frenzy 24 his its 25 Malice domestic civil war 27 sleek smooth; rugged furrowed 30 Let . . . Banquo focus your thoughts on Banquo 31 Present him eminence honor him 32 Unsafe . . . lave i.e., you and I are unsafe because we must dip 34 vizards masks

Thou know'st that Banquo, and his Fleance, lives.

LADY MACBETH

But in them nature's copy's^o not eterne.

MACBETH

There's comfort yet; they are assailable.

Then be thou jocund. Ere the bat hath flown 40

His cloistered flight, ere to black Hecate's summons

The shard-borne^o beetle with his drowsy hums

Hath rung night's yawning peal, there shall be done

A deed of dreadful note.

LADY MACBETH

What's to be done?

MACBETH

Be innocent of the knowledge, dearest chuck,^o 45

Till thou applaud the deed. Come, seeling^o night,

Scarf up^o the tender eye of pitiful day,

And with thy bloody and invisible hand

Cancel and tear to pieces that great bond^o

Which keeps me pale! Light thickens, and the crow 50

Makes wing to th' rooky^o wood.

Good things of day begin to droop and drowse,

Whiles night's black agents to their preys do rouse.

Thou marvel'st at my words: but hold thee still;

Things bad begun make strong themselves by ill: 55

So, prithee, go with me. Exeunt.

Scene III. [Near the palace.]

Enter three MURDERERS.

FIRST MURDERER

But who did bid thee join with us?

THIRD MURDERER

Macbeth.

SECOND MURDERER

He needs not our mistrust; since he delivers

Our offices and what we have to do

To the direction just.^o

FIRST MURDERER

Then stand with us.

The west glimmers with some streaks of day. 5

Now spurs the lated^o traveler apace

To gain the timely inn, and near approaches

The subject of our watch.

THIRD MURDERER

Hark! I hear horses.

BANQUO (Within.)

Give us a light there, ho!

SECOND MURDERER

Then 'tis he. The rest

That are within the note of expectation^o 10

Already are i' th' court.

FIRST MURDERER

His horses go about.

THIRD MURDERER

Almost a mile: but he does usually—

So all men do—from hence to th' palace gate

Make it their walk.

Enter BANQUO and FLEANCE, with a torch.

38 nature's copy nature's lease (?) imitation (i.e., a son) made by nature (?) 42 shard-borne borne on scaly wings (?) dung-bred (?) 45 chuck chick (a term of endearment) 46 seeling eye-closing 47 Scarf up blindfold 49 bond i.e., between Banquo and fate (?) Banquo's lease on life (?) Macbeth's link to humanity (?) 51 rooky full of rooks III.iii.2-4 He needs . . . just We need not mistrust him (the Third Murderer) since he describes our duties according to our exact directions 6 lated belated 10 within . . . expectation on the list of expected guests

SECOND MURDERER

A light, a light!

THIRD MURDERER 'Tis he.

FIRST MURDERER Stand to't. 15

BANQUO

It will be rain tonight.

FIRST MURDERER Let it come down.

[They set upon BANQUO.]

BANQUO

O, treachery! Fly, good Fleance, fly, fly, fly!

[Exit FLEANCE.]

Thou mayst revenge. O slave!

[Dies.]

THIRD MURDERER

Who did strike out the light?

FIRST MURDERER Was't not the way?°

THIRD MURDERER

There's but one down; the son is fled. 20

SECOND MURDERER

We have lost best half of our affair.

FIRST MURDERER

Well, let's away and say how much is done. *Exeunt.*Scene IV. [The palace.]Banquet prepared. Enter MACBETH, LADY [MACBETH], ROSS, LENNOX, LORDS, and ATTENDANTS.

MACBETH

You know your own degrees;° sit down:

At first and last, the hearty welcome.

LORDS

Thanks to your majesty.

MACBETH

Ourself will mingle with society°

And play the humble host. 5

Our hostess keeps her state,° but in best time

We will require° her welcome.

LADY MACBETH

Pronounce it for me, sir, to all our friends,

For my heart speaks they are welcome.

Enter FIRST MURDERER.

MACBETH

See, they encounter° thee with their hearts' thanks. 10

Both sides are even: here I'll sit i' th' midst:

Be large in mirth; anon we'll drink a measure°

The table round. [Goes to FIRST MURDERER.] There's blood upon thy face.

MURDERER

'Tis Banquo's then.

MACBETH

'Tis better thee without than he within.° 15

Is he dispatched?

MURDERER

My lord, his throat is cut;

That I did for him.

MACBETH

Thou art the best o' th' cutthroats.

Yet he's good that did the like for Fleance;

If thou didst it, thou art the nonpareil.

19 way i.e., thing to do

III.iv.I degrees ranks 4 society the company 6 keeps her state remains seated in her chair of state 7 require request 10 encounter meet 12 measure goblet 15 thee . . . within outside you than inside him

MURDERER

Most royal sir, Fleance is 'scaped. 20

MACBETH [Aside.]

Then comes my fit again: I had else been perfect,

Whole as the marble, founded° as the rock,

As broad and general as the casing° air:

But now I am cabined, cribbed,° confined, bound in

To saucy° doubts and fears.—But Banquo's safe? 25

MURDERER

Ay, my good lord: safe in a ditch he bides,

With twenty trenchèd° gashes on his head,

The least a death to nature.

MACBETH

Thanks for that.

[Aside.]

There the grown serpent lies; the worm° that's fled

Hath nature that in time will venom breed, 30

No teeth for th' present. Get thee gone. Tomorrow

We'll hear ourselves° again. Exit [FIRST] MURDERER.

LADY MACBETH

My royal lord,

You do not give the cheer.° The feast is sold

That is not often vouched, while 'tis a-making,

'Tis given with welcome. To feed were best at home;° 35

From thence, the sauce to meat° is ceremony;

Meeting were bare without it.

Enter the GHOST of Banquo, and sits in Macbeth's place.

MACBETH

Sweet remembrancer!°

Now good digestion wait on appetite,

And health on both!

LENNOX

May't please your highness sit.

MACBETH

Here had we now our country's honor roofed,° 40

Were the graced person of our Banquo present—

Who may I rather challenge for unkindness

Than pity for mischance!°

ROSS

His absence, sir,

Lays blame upon his promise. Please't your highness

To grace us with your royal company? 45

MACBETH

The table's full.

LENNOX

Here is a place reserved, sir.

MACBETH

Where?

LENNOX

Here, my good lord. What is't that moves your highness?

MACBETH

Which of you have done this?

LORDS

What, my good lord?

MACBETH

Thou canst not say I did it. Never shake 50

Thy gory locks at me.

ROSS

Gentlemen, rise, his highness is not well.

22 founded firmly based 23 broad . . . casing unconfined as the surrounding 24 cribbed penned up 25 saucy insolent 27 trenchèd trenchlike 29 worm serpent 32 hear ourselves talk it over 33 the cheer a sense of cordiality 33-35 The feast . . . home The feast seems sold (not given) during which the host fails to welcome the guests. Mere eating is best done at home 36 meat food 37 remembrancer reminder 40 our . . . roofed our nobility under one roof 42-43 Who . . . mischance whom I hope I may reprove because he is unkind rather than pity because he has encountered an accident

LADY MACBETH

Sir, worthy friends. My lord is often thus,
And hath been from his youth. Pray you, keep seat.
The fit is momentary; upon a thought°
He will again be well. If much you note him,
You shall offend him and extend his passion.°
Feed, and regard him not.—Are you a man?

MACBETH

Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on that
Which might appall the devil.

LADY MACBETH [Aside to MACBETH.] O proper stuff! 60

This is the very painting of your fear.
This is the air-drawn dagger which, you said,
Led you to Duncan. O, these flaws° and starts,
Impostors to° true fear, would well become
A woman's story at a winter's fire,
Authorized° by her grandam. Shame itself!
Why do you make such faces? When all's done,
You look but on a stool.

MACBETH

Prithee, see there!

Behold! Look! Lo! How say you?
Why, what care I? If thou canst nod, speak too.
If charnel houses° and our graves must send
Those that we bury back, our monuments
Shall be the maws of kites.° [Exit GHOST.]

LADY MACBETH What, quite unmanned in folly?

MACBETH

If I stand here, I saw him.

LADY MACBETH

Fie, for shame!

MACBETH

Blood hath been shed ere now, i' th' olden time,
Ere humane statute purged the gentle weal;°
Ay, and since too, murders have been performed Too terrible for the ear. The times has been
That, when the brains were out, the man would die,
And there an end; but now they rise again,
With twenty mortal murders on their crowns,°
And push us from our stools. This is more strange Than such a murder is.

LADY MACBETH My worthy lord,

Your noble friends do lack you.

MACBETH

I do forget.

Do not muse at me, my most worthy friends;
I have a strange infirmity, which is nothing
To those that know me. Come, love and health to all!
Then I'll sit down. Give me some wine, fill full.

Enter GHOST.

I drink to th' general joy o' th' whole table,
And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss;
Would he were here! To all and him we thirst,°
And all to all.°

LORDS

Our duties, and the pledge.

MACBETH

Avaunt! and quit my sight! Let the earth hide thee!

55 upon a thought as quick as thought 57 extend his passion lengthen his fit 63 flaws gusts, outbursts 64 to compared with 66 Authorized vouched for 71 charnel houses vaults containing bones 72-73 our
. . . kites our tombs shall be the bellies of rapacious birds 76 purged . . . weal i.e., cleansed the state and made it gentle 81 mortal . . . crowns deadly wounds on their heads 91 thirst desire to drink 92 all to all everything to everybody
(?) let everybody drink to everybody (?)

Thy bones are marrowless, thy blood is cold;
Thou hast no speculation° in those eyes
Which thou dost glare with.

95

LADY MACBETH

Think of this, good peers,

But as a thing of custom; 'tis no other.
Only it spoils the pleasure of the time.

MACBETH

What man dare, I dare.

Approach thou like the rugged Russian bear,
The armed rhinoceros, or th' Hyrcan° tiger;
Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves°
Shall never tremble. Or be alive again,
And dare me to the desert° with thy sword.

100

If trembling I inhabit then, protest me

105

The baby of a girl.° Hence, horrible shadow!

Unreal mock'ry, hence!

[Exit GHOST.]

Why, so: being gone,

I am a man again. Pray you, sit still.

LADY MACBETH

You have displaced the mirth, broke the good meeting,
With most admired° disorder.

MACBETH

Can such things be,

110

And overcome us° like a summer's cloud,
Without our special wonder? You make me strange
Even to the disposition that I owe,°
When now I think you can behold such sights,
And keep the natural ruby of your cheeks,
When mine is blanched with fear.

115

ROSS

What sights, my lord?

LADY MACBETH

I pray you, speak not: he grows worse and worse;
Question enrages him: at once, good night.
Stand not upon the order of your going,°
But go at once.

LENNOX

Good night; and better health

120

Attend his majesty!

LADY MACBETH

A kind good night to all!

Exeunt LORDS.

MACBETH

It will have blood, they say: blood will have blood.
Stones have been known to move and trees to speak;
Augures and understood relations° have
By maggot-pies and choughs and rooks brought forth°
The secret'st man of blood. What is the night?°

125

LADY MACBETH

Almost at odds° with morning, which is which.

MACBETH

How say'st thou, that Macduff denies his person
At our great bidding?

LADY MACBETH

Did you send to him, sir?

MACBETH

I hear it by the way,° but I will send:

130

There's not a one of them but in his house

95 speculation sight 101 Hyrcan of Hyrcania (near the Caspian Sea) 102 nerves sinews 104 the desert a lonely place 105-06 If . . . girl If then I tremble, proclaim me a baby girl 110 admired amazing 111 overcome us come over us 112-13 You . . . owe i.e., You make me wonder what my nature is 119 Stand . . . going do not insist on departing in your order of rank 124 Augures . . . relations auguries and comprehended reports 125 By . . . forth by magpies, choughs, and rooks (telltale birds) revealed 126 What . . .
night What time of night is it? 127 at odds striving 130
by the way incidentally

I keep a servant fee'd.° I will tomorrow,
 And betimes° I will, to the weird sisters:
 More shall they speak, for now I am bent° to know
 By the worst means the worst. For mine own good 135
 All causes° shall give way. I am in blood
 Stepped in so far that, should I wade no more,
 Returning were as tedious as go o'er.
 Strange things I have in head that will to hand,
 Which must be acted ere they may be scanned.° 140

LADY MACBETH

You lack the season of all natures,° sleep.

MACBETH

Come, we'll to sleep. My strange and self-abuse°
 Is the initiate fear that wants hard use.°

We are yet but young in deed. Exeunt.

Scene V. [A witches' haunt.]

Thunder. Enter the three WITCHES, meeting HECATE.

FIRST WITCH

Why, how now, Hecate! you look angrily.

HECATE

Have I not reason, beldams° as you are,
 Saucy and overbold? How did you dare
 To trade and traffic with Macbeth
 In riddles and affairs of death;
 And I, the mistress of your charms,
 The close contriver° of all harms,
 Was never called to bear my part,
 Or show the glory of our art?
 And, which is worse, all you have done 5
 Hath been but for a wayward son,
 Spiteful and wrathful; who, as others do,
 Loves for his own ends, not for you.
 But make amends now: get you gone,
 And at the pit of Acheron° 10
 Meet me i' th' morning: thither he
 Will come to know his destiny.
 Your vessels and your spells provide,
 Your charms and everything beside.
 I am for th' air; this night I'll spend 20
 Unto a dismal and a fatal end:
 Great business must be wrought ere noon.
 Upon the corner of the moon
 There hangs a vap'rous drop profound;°
 I'll catch it ere it come to ground:
 And that distilled by magic sleights° 25
 Shall raise such artificial sprites°
 As by the strength of their illusion
 Shall draw him on to his confusion.°
 He shall spurn fate, scorn death, and bear 30
 His hopes 'bove wisdom, grace, and fear:

And you all know security°
 Is mortals' chiefest enemy.

Music and a song.

Hark! I am called; my little spirit, see,
 Sits in a foggy cloud and stays for me. [Exit.] 35

Sing within, "Come away, come away," &c.

FIRST WITCH

Come, let's make haste; she'll soon be back again.

Exeunt.

Scene VI. [The palace.]

Enter LENNOX and another LORD.

LENNOX

My former speeches have but hit your thoughts,°
 Which can interpret farther. Only I say Things have been strangely borne.° The gracious
 Duncan

Was pitied of Macbeth: marry, he was dead.
 And the right-valiant Banquo walked too late; 5

Whom, you may say, if't please you, Fleance killed,
 For Fleance fled. Men must not walk too late.

Who cannot want the thought,° how monstrous
 It was for Malcolm and for Donalbain

To kill their gracious father? Damnèd fact!° 10

How it did grieve Macbeth! Did he not straight,
 In pious rage, the two delinquents tear,

That were the slaves of drink and thralls° of sleep?
 Was not that nobly done? Ay, and wisely too;

For 'twould have angered any heart alive 15
 To hear the men deny't. So that I say
 He has borne° all things well: and I do think

That, had he Duncan's sons under his key—
 As, an't° please heaven, he shall not—they should find

What 'twere to kill a father. So should Fleance. 20
 But, peace! for from broad words,° and 'cause he failed

His presence at the tyrant's feast, I hear,
 Macduff lives in disgrace. Sir, can you tell
 Where he bestows himself?

20

LORD

The son of Duncan,
 From whom this tyrant holds the due of birth,° 25

Lives in the English court, and is received
 Of the most pious Edward° with such grace

That the malevolence of fortune nothing
 Takes from his high respect.° Thither Macduff 25

Is gone to pray the holy king, upon his aid° 30
 To wake Northumberland° and warlike Siward;

That by the help of these, with Him above
 To ratify the work, we may again

30

Give to our tables meat, sleep to our nights,
 Free from our feasts and banquets bloody knives, 35

32 security overconfidence

132 fee'd i.e., paid to spy 133 betimes quickly 134 bent determined 136 causes considerations 140 may be scanned can be examined 141 season . . . natures seasoning (preservative) of all living creatures 142 My . . . self-abuse my strange delusion 143 initiate . . . use beginner's fear that lacks hardening practice

III.v.2 beldams hags 7 close contriver secret inventor 15 Acheron river of Hades 24 profound heavy 26 sleights arts 27 artificial sprites spirits created by magic arts (?) artful (cunning) spirits (?) 29 confusion ruin

III.vi.1 My . . . thoughts My recent words have only coincided with what you have in your mind 3 borne managed 8 cannot . . . thought can fail to think 10 fact evil deed 13 thralls slaves 17 borne managed 19 an't if it 21 for . . . words because of frank talk 25 due of birth birthright 27 Edward Edward the Confessor (reigned 1042-66) 28-29 nothing . . . respect does not diminish the high respect in which he is held 30 upon his aid to aid him (Malcolm) 31 To wake Northumberland i.e., to arouse the people in an English county near Scotland

Do faithful homage and receive free° honors:
All which we pine for now. And this report Hath so exasperate the king that he Prepares for some attempt at war.

LENNOX Sent he to Macduff?

LORD

He did: and with an absolute "Sir, not I," 40
The cloudy° messenger turns me his back,
And hums, as who should say, "You'll rue the time
That clogs° me with this answer."

LENNOX And that well might

Advise him to a caution, t' hold what distance 45
His wisdom can provide. Some holy angel
Fly to the court of England and unfold
His message ere he come, that a swift blessing
May soon return to this our suffering country
Under a hand accursed!

LORD I'll send my prayers with him.

Exeunt.

A C T I V

Scene I. [A witches' haunt.]

Thunder. Enter the three WITCHES.

FIRST WITCH

Thrice the brinded° cat hath mewed.

SECOND WITCH

Thrice and once the hedge-pig° whined.

THIRD WITCH

Harpier° cries. 'Tis time, 'tis time.

FIRST WITCH

Round about the caldron go:
In the poisoned entrails throw. 5
Toad, that under cold stone
Days and nights has thirty-one
Swelt' red venom sleeping got,
Boil thou first i' th' charmed pot.

ALL

Double, double, toil and trouble;
Fire burn and caldron bubble.

SECOND WITCH

Fillet° of a fenny° snake,
In the caldron boil and bake;
Eye of newt and toe of frog,
Wool of bat and tongue of dog, 15
Adder's fork° and blindworm's° sting,
Lizard's leg and howlet's° wing,
For a charm of pow'rful trouble,
Like a hell-broth boil and bubble.

ALL

Double, double, toil and trouble;
Fire burn and caldron bubble. 20

THIRD WITCH

Scale of dragon, tooth of wolf,

Witch's mummy,° maw and gulf° 25
Of the ravined° salt-sea shark,
Root of hemlock digged i' th' dark,
Liver of blaspheming Jew,
Gall of goat, and slips of yew
Slivered in the moon's eclipse,
Nose of Turk and Tartar's lips, 30
Finger of birth-strangled babe
Ditch-delivered by a drab,°
Make the gruel thick and slab:°
Add thereto a tiger's chaudron,°
For th' ingredience of our caldron.

ALL

Double, double, toil and trouble;
Fire burn and caldron bubble. 35

SECOND WITCH

Cool it with a baboon's blood,
Then the charm is firm and good.

Enter HECATE and the other three WITCHES.

HECATE

O, well done! I commend your pains;
And every one shall share i' th' gains: 40
And now about the caldron sing,
Like elves and fairies in a ring,
Enchanting all that you put in.

Music and a song: "Black spirits," &c.

[Exeunt HECATE and the other three WITCHES.]

SECOND WITCH

By the pricking of my thumbs,
Something wicked this way comes: 45
Open, locks,
Whoever knocks!

Enter MACBETH.

MACBETH

How now, you secret, black, and midnight hags!
What is't you do?

ALL

A deed without a name.

MACBETH

I conjure you, by that which you profess, 50
Howe'er you come to know it, answer me:
Though you untie the winds and let them fight
Against the churches; though the yesty° waves
Confound° and swallow navigation up;
Though bladed corn be lodged° and trees blown 55
down;
Though castles topple on their warders' heads;
Though palaces and pyramids do slope°
Their heads to their foundations; though the treasure
Of nature's germens° tumble all together,
Even till destruction sicken,° answer me 60
To what I ask you.

FIRST WITCH Speak.

SECOND WITCH Demand.

THIRD WITCH We'll answer.

23 Witch's mummy mummified flesh of a witch; maw and gulf stomach and gullet 24 ravined ravenous 31 Ditch-delivered . . . drab born in a ditch of a harlot 32 slab viscous 33 chaudron entrails 53 yesty foamy 54 Confound destroy 55 bladed . . . lodged grain in the ear be beaten down 57 slope bend 59 nature's germens seeds of all life 60 sicken i.e., sicken at its own work

36 free freely granted 41 cloudy disturbed 43 clogs burdens

IV.i.i brinded brindled 2 hedge-pig hedgehog 3 Harpier an attendant spirit, like Graymalkin and Paddock in I.i 8 Swelt'red . . . got venom sweated out while sleeping 12 Fillet slice; fenny from a swamp 16 fork forked tongue; blindworm a legless lizard 17 howlet owl

FIRST WITCH

Say, if th' hadst rather hear it from our mouths,
Or from our masters?

MACBETH

Call 'em, let me see 'em.

FIRST WITCH

Pour in sow's blood, that hath eaten
Her nine farrow;° grease that's sweaten°
From the murderer's gibbet throw
Into the flame.

65

ALL

Come, high or low,

Thyself and office° deftly show!

Thunder. FIRST APPARITION: an armed head.

MACBETH

Tell me, thou unknown power—

FIRST WITCH

He knows thy thought:

Hear his speech, but say thou nought.

70

FIRST APPARITION

Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth! Beware Macduff!
Beware the Thane of Fife. Dismiss me: enough.

He descends.

MACBETH

Whate'er thou art, for thy good caution thanks:
Thou hast harped° my fear aright. But one word more—

FIRST WITCH

He will not be commanded. Here's another,
More potent than the first.

75

Thunder. SECOND APPARITION: a bloody child.

SECOND APPARITION

Macbeth! Macbeth! Macbeth!

MACBETH

Had I three ears, I'd hear thee.

SECOND APPARITION

Be bloody, bold, and resolute! Laugh to scorn
The pow'r of man, for none of woman born
Shall harm Macbeth.

80

Descends.

MACBETH

Then live, Macduff: what need I fear of thee?
But yet I'll make assurance double sure,
And take a bond of fate.° Thou shalt not live;
That I may tell pale-hearted fear it lies,
And sleep in spite of thunder.

85

Thunder. THIRD APPARITION: a child crowned, with a tree in his hand.

What is this,

That rises like the issue° of a king,
And wears upon his baby-brow the round
And top of sovereignty?°

ALL

Listen, but speak not to't.

THIRD APPARITION

Be lion-mettled, proud, and take no care
Who chafes, who frets, or where conspirers are:
Macbeth shall never vanquished be until
Great Birnam Wood to high Dunsinane Hill
Shall come against him.

90

Descends.

MACBETH

That will never be.

Who can impress° the forest, bid the tree
Unfix his earth-bound root? Sweet bodements,° good!
Rebellious dead,° rise never, till the Wood
Of Birnam rise, and our high-placed Macbeth
Shall live the lease of nature,° pay his breath
To time and mortal custom.° Yet my heart
Throbs to know one thing. Tell me, if your art
Can tell so much: shall Banquo's issue ever Reign in this kingdom?

95

100

ALL

Seek to know no more.

MACBETH

I will be satisfied.° Deny me this,
And an eternal curse fall on you! Let me know.
Why sinks that caldron? And what noise° is this?

105

Hautboys.

FIRST WITCH Show!

SECOND WITCH Show!

THIRD WITCH Show!

ALL

Show his eyes, and grieve his heart;
Come like shadows, so depart!

110

A show of eight KINGS and BANQUO, last [KING] with a glass° in his hand.

MACBETH

Thou art too like the spirit of Banquo. Down!
Thy crown does sear mine eyelids. And thy hair,
Thou other gold-bound brow, is like the first.
A third is like the former. Filthy hags!
Why do you show me this? A fourth! Start,° eyes!
What, will the line stretch out to th' crack of doom?°
Another yet! A seventh! I'll see no more.
And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass
Which shows me many more; and some I see
That twofold balls and treble scepters° carry:
Horrible sight! Now I see 'tis true;
For the blood-boltered° Banquo smiles upon me,
And points at them for his. What, is this so?

115

120

FIRST WITCH

Ay, sir, all this is so. But why
Stands Macbeth thus amazedly?
Come, sisters, cheer we up his sprites,°
And show the best of our delights:
I'll charm the air to give a sound,
While you perform your antic round,°
That this great king may kindly say
Our duties did his welcome pay.

125

130

Music. The WITCHES dance, and vanish.

MACBETH

Where are they? Gone? Let this pernicious hour
Stand aye accursèd in the calendar!
Come in, without there!

95 impress conscript 96 bodements prophecies 97 Rebel- lious dead perhaps a reference to Banquo, but perhaps a misprint for "rebellion's head" 99 lease of nature natural lifespan 100 mortal custom natural death 104 satisfied i.e., fully informed 160 noise music 111 s.d. glass mirror 116 Start i.e., from the sockets 117 crack of doom blast (of a trumpet?) at Doomsday 121 twofold . . . scepters coronation emblems 123 blood- boltered matted with blood 127 sprites spirits 130 antic round grotesque circular dance

65 farrow young pigs; sweaten sweated 68 office function 74 harped hit upon, struck the note of 84 take . . . fate get a guarantee from fate (i.e., he will kill Macduff and thus will compel fate to keep its word) 87 issue offspring 88–89 round . . . sovereignty i.e., crown

SON Who must hang them?
LADY MACDUFF Why, the honest men. 55
SON Then the liars and swearers are fools; for there are liars and swearers enow° to beat the honest men and hang up them.
LADY MACDUFF Now, God help thee, poor monkey!
But how wilt thou do for a father? 60
SON If he were dead, you'd weep for him. If you would not, it were a good sign that I should quickly have a new father.
LADY MACDUFF Poor prattler, how thou talk'st!
Enter a MESSENGER.
MESSENGER
Bless you, fair dame! I am not to you known, 65
Though in your state of honor I am perfect.°
I doubt° some danger does approach you nearly:
If you will take a homely° man's advice,
Be not found here; hence, with your little ones.
To fright you thus, methinks I am too savage; 70
To do worse to you were fell° cruelty,
Which is too nigh your person. Heaven preserve you!
I dare abide no longer. Exit MESSENGER.
LADY MACDUFF Whither should I fly?
I have done no harm. But I remember now
I am in this earthly world, where to do harm 75
Is often laudable, to do good sometime
Accounted dangerous folly. Why then, alas,
Do I put up that womanly defense,
To say I have done no harm?—What are these faces?
Enter MURDERERS.
MURDERER
Where is your husband? 80
LADY MACDUFF
I hope, in no place so unsanctified
Where such as thou mayst find him.
MURDERER He's a traitor.
SON
Thou li'st, thou shag-eared° villain!
MURDERER What, you egg!
[Stabbing him.]
Young fry° of treachery!
SON He has killed me, mother:
Run away, I pray you! [Dies.] 85
Exit [LADY MACDUFF], crying "Murder!"
[followed by MURDERERS].

Scene III. [England. Before the king's palace.]

Enter MALCOLM and MACDUFF.
MALCOLM
Let us seek out some desolate shade, and there
Weep our sad bosoms empty.
MACDUFF Let us rather
Hold fast the mortal° sword, and like good men 57 enow enough 66 in . . . perfect I am fully informed of your honorable rank 67 doubt fear 68 homely plain 71 fell fierce 83 shag-eared hairy-eared (?) with shaggy hair hanging over the ears (?) 84 fry spawn
IV.iii.3 mortal deadly

Bestride our down-fall'n birthdom.° Each new morn
New widows howl, new orphans cry, new sorrows 5
Strike heaven on the face, that° it resounds
As if it felt with Scotland and yelled out
Like syllable of dolor.°
MALCOLM What I believe, I'll wail;
What know, believe; and what I can redress,
As I shall find the time to friend,° I will. 10
What you have spoke, it may be so perchance.
This tyrant, whose sole° name blisters our tongues,
Was once thought honest:° you have loved him well;
He hath not touched you yet. I am young; but something
You may deserve of him through me;° and wisdom° 15
To offer up a weak, poor, innocent lamb
T' appease an angry god.
MACDUFF
I am not treacherous.
MALCOLM But Macbeth is.
A good and virtuous nature may recoil
In° an imperial charge. But I shall crave your pardon; 20
That which you are, my thoughts cannot transpose:°
Angels are bright still, though the brightest° fell:
Though all things foul would wear° the brows of grace,
Yet grace must still look so.°
MACDUFF I have lost my hopes.
MALCOLM
Perchance even there where I did find my doubts. 25
Why in that rawness° left you wife and child,
Those precious motives, those strong knots of love,
Without leave-taking? I pray you,
Let not my jealousies° be your dishonors,
But mine own safeties. You may be rightly just° 30
Whatever I shall think.
MACDUFF Bleed, bleed, poor country:
Great tyranny, lay thou thy basis° sure,
For goodness dare not check° thee: wear thou thy wrongs;
The title is affeered.° Fare thee well, lord:
I would not be the villain that thou think'st 35
For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp
And the rich East to boot.
MALCOLM Be not offended:
I speak not as in absolute fear of you.
I think our country sinks beneath the yoke;
It weeps, it bleeds, and each new day a gash 40
Is added to her wounds. I think withal°
There would be hands uplifted in my right;°
And here from gracious England° have I offer
Of goodly thousands: but, for° all this,
When I shall tread upon the tyrant's head, 45
Or wear it on my sword, yet my poor country

4 Bestride . . . birthdom protectively stand over our native land 6 that so that 8 Like . . . dolor similar sound of grief 10 to friend friendly, propitious 12 sole very 13 honest good 15 deserve . . . me i.e., earn by betraying me to Macbeth; wisdom it may be wise 19–20 recoil In give way under 21 transpose transform 22 the brightest i.e., Lucifer 23 would wear desire to wear 24 so i.e., like itself 26 rawness unprotected condition 29 jealousies suspicions 30 rightly just perfectly honorable 32 basis foundation 33 check restrain 34 affeered legally confirmed 41 withal moreover 42 in my right on behalf of my claim 43 England i.e., the King of England 44 for despite

Shall have more vices than it had before,
More suffer, and more sundry ways than ever,
By him that shall succeed.

MACDUFF What should he be?

MALCOLM

It is myself I mean, in whom I know
All the particulars° of vice so grafted°
That, when they shall be opened,° black Macbeth
Will seem as pure as snow, and the poor state Esteem him as a lamb, being compared
With my confineless harms.°

50

MACDUFF Not in the legions
Of horrid hell can come a devil more damned
In evils to top Macbeth.

55

MALCOLM I grant him bloody,
Luxurious,° avaricious, false, deceitful,
Sudden,° malicious, smacking of every sin
That has a name: but there's no bottom, none,
In my voluptuousness:° your wives, your daughters,
Your matrons and your maids, could not fill up
The cistern of my lust, and my desire
All continent° impediments would o'erbear,
That did oppose my will. Better Macbeth
Than such an one to reign.

60

65

MACDUFF Boundless intemperance
In nature° is a tyranny; it hath been
Th' untimely emptying of the happy throne,
And fall of many kings. But fear not yet
To take upon you what is yours: you may Convey° your pleasures in a spacious plenty,
And yet seem cold, the time° you may so hoodwink.
We have willing dames enough. There cannot be
That vulture in you, to devour so many
As will to greatness dedicate themselves,
Finding it so inclined.

70

75

MALCOLM With this there grows
In my most ill-composed affection° such
A stanchless° avarice that, were I king,
I should cut off the nobles for their lands,
Desire his jewels and this other's house:
And my more-having would be as a sauce
To make me hunger more, that I should forge
Quarrels unjust against the good and loyal,
Destroying them for wealth.

80

MACDUFF This avarice
Sticks deeper, grows with more pernicious root
Than summer-seeming° lust, and it hath been
The sword of our slain kings.° Yet do not fear.
Scotland hath foisons to fill up your will
Of your mere own.° All these are portable,°
With other graces weighed.

85

90

MALCOLM

But I have none: the king-becoming graces,

As justice, verity, temp'rance, stableness,
Bounty, perseverance, mercy, lowliness,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no relish of° them, but abound
In the division of each several crime,°
Acting in many ways. Nay, had I pow'r, I should Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Uproar° the universal peace, confound
All unity on earth.

95

MACDUFF O Scotland, Scotland!

100

MALCOLM

If such a one be fit to govern, speak:
I am as I have spoken.

MACDUFF

Fit to govern!
No, not to live. O nation miserable!
With an untitled tyrant bloody-sceptered,
When shalt thou see thy wholesome days again,
Since that the truest issue of thy throne
By his own interdiction° stands accursed,
And does blaspheme his breed?° Thy royal father
Was a most sainted king: the queen that bore thee,
Oft'ner upon her knees than on her feet,
Died° every day she lived. Fare thee well!
These evils thou repeat'st upon thyself
Hath banished me from Scotland. O my breast,
Thy hope ends here!

105

110

MALCOLM Macduff, this noble passion,
Child of integrity, hath from my soul
Wiped the black scruples,° reconciled my thoughts
To thy good truth and honor. Devilish Macbeth
By many of these trains° hath sought to win me
Into his power; and modest wisdom° plucks me
From over-credulous haste: but God above
Deal between thee and me! For even now
I put myself to° thy direction, and Unspeak mine own detraction; here abjure
The taints and blames I laid upon myself,
For° strangers to my nature. I am yet
Unknown to woman, never was forsworn,
Scarcely have coveted what was mine own,
At no time broke my faith, would not betray
The devil to his fellow, and delight
No less in truth than life. My first false speaking
Was this upon myself. What I am truly,
Is thine and my poor country's to command:
Whither indeed, before thy here-approach,
Old Siward, with ten thousand warlike men,
Already at a point,° was setting forth.
Now we'll together, and the chance of goodness
Be like our warranted quarrel!° Why are you silent?

115

120

125

130

135

MACDUFF

Such welcome and unwelcome things at once
'Tis hard to reconcile.

Enter a DOCTOR.

95 relish of taste for (?) trace of (?) 96 division . . . crime variations of each kind of crime 99 Uproar put into a tumult 107 interdiction curse, exclusion 108 breed ancestry
111 Died i.e., prepared for heaven 116 scruples suspicions 118 trains plots 119 modest wisdom i.e., prudence 122 to under 125 For as 135 at a point prepared 136-37 the chance . . . quarrel May our chance of success equal the justice of our cause

51 particulars special kinds; grafted engrafted 52 opened in bloom, i.e., revealed 55 confineless harms unbounded evils 58 Luxurious lecherous 59 Sudden violent 61 volup- tuousness lust 64 continent restraining 67 In nature in man's nature 71 Convey secretly manage 72 time age, i.e., people 77 ill-composed affection evilly compounded character 78 stanchless never-ending 86 summer-seeming befitting summer, i.e., youthful (?) transitory (?) 87 sword
. . . kings i.e., the cause of death to our kings 88-89 foisons
. . . own enough abundance of your own to satisfy your covetousness 89 portable bearable

- MALCOLM
Well, more anon. Comes the king forth, I pray you? 140
- DOCTOR
Ay, sir. There are a crew of wretched souls
That stay^o his cure: their malady convinces
The great assay of art;^o but at his touch,
Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand,
They presently amend.^o
- MALCOLM I thank you, doctor. 145
Exit [DOCTOR].
- MACDUFF
What's the disease he means?
- MALCOLM 'Tis called the evil:^o
A most miraculous work in this good king,
Which often since my here-remain in England
I have seen him do. How he solicits heaven,
Himself best knows: but strangely visited^o people, 150
All swoll'n and ulcerous, pitiful to the eye,
The mere^o despair of surgery, he cures,
Hanging a golden stamp^o about their necks,
Put on with holy prayers: and 'tis spoken,
To the succeeding royalty he leaves 155
The healing benediction. With this strange virtue^o
He hath a heavenly gift of prophecy,
And sundry blessings hang about his throne
That speak^o him full of grace.
- Enter ROSS.*
- MACDUFF See, who comes here?
- MALCOLM
My countryman; but yet I know him not. 160
- MACDUFF
My ever gentle^o cousin, welcome hither.
- MALCOLM
I know him now: good God, betimes^o remove
The means that makes us strangers!
- ROSS Sir, amen.
- MACDUFF
Stands Scotland where it did?
- ROSS Alas, poor country!
Almost afraid to know itself! It cannot 165
Be called our mother but our grave, where nothing^o
But who knows nothing is once seen to smile;
Where sighs and groans, and shrieks that rent the air,
Are made, not marked;^o where violent sorrow seems
A modern ecstasy.^o The dead man's knell 170
Is there scarce asked for who, and good men's lives
Expire before the flowers in their caps,
Dying or ere they sicken.
- MACDUFF O, relation
Too nice,^o and yet too true!
- MALCOLM What's the newest grief?
- ROSS
That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker;^o 175
- Each minute teems^o a new one.
- MACDUFF How does my wife?
- ROSS
Why, well.
- MACDUFF And all my children?
- ROSS Well too.
- MACDUFF
The tyrant has not battered at their peace?
- ROSS
No; they were well at peace when I did leave 'em.
- MACDUFF
Be not a niggard of your speech: how goes't? 180
- ROSS
When I came hither to transport the tidings,
Which I have heavily^o borne, there ran a rumor
Of many worthy fellows that were out;^o
Which was to my belief witnessed^o the rather, 185
For that I saw the tyrant's power^o afoot.
Now is the time of help. Your eye in Scotland
Would create soldiers, make our women fight,
To doff their dire distresses.
- MALCOLM Be't their comfort
We are coming thither. Gracious England hath Lent us good Siward and ten thousand men; 190
An older and a better soldier none
That Christendom gives out.^o
- ROSS Would I could answer
This comfort with the like! But I have words
That would^o be howled out in the desert air,
Where hearing should not latch^o them.
- MACDUFF What concern they? 195
- The general cause or is it a fee-grief
Due to some single breast?^o
- ROSS No mind that's honest
But in it shares some woe, though the main part Pertains to you alone.
- MACDUFF If it be mine,
Keep it not from me, quickly let me have it. 200
- ROSS
Let not your ears despise my tongue for ever,
Which shall possess them with the heaviest sound
That ever yet they heard.
- MACDUFF Humh! I guess at it.
- ROSS
Your castle is surprised;^o your wife and babes
Savagely slaughtered. To relate the manner, 205
Were, on the quarry^o of these murdered deer,
To add the death of you.
- MALCOLM Merciful heaven!
What, man! Ne'er pull your hat upon your brows.
Give sorrow words. The grief that does not speak Whispers the o'er-fraught heart,^o and bids it break. 210
- MACDUFF
My children too?
- ROSS Wife, children, servants, all
That could be found.
- MACDUFF And I must be from thence!

142 stay await 142-43 convinces . . . art i.e., defies the efforts of medical science 145 presently amend immediately recover 146 evil scrofula, called "the king's evil" because it could allegedly be cured by the king's touch 150 strangely visited oddly afflicted 152 mere utter 153 stamp coin 156 virtue power 159 speak proclaim 161 gentle noble 162 betimes quickly 166 nothing no one 169 marked noticed 170 modern ecstasy i.e., ordinary emotion 173-74 relation Too nice tale too accurate 175 That . . . speaker The report of the grief of an hour ago is hissed as stale news

176 teems gives birth to 182 heavily sadly 183 out i.e., up in arms 184 witnessed attested 185 power army 192 gives out reports 194 would should 195 latch catch 196-97 fee-grief . . . breast i.e., a personal grief belonging to an individual 204 surprised suddenly attacked 206 quarry heap of slaughtered game 210 Whispers . . . heart whispers to the overburdened heart

My wife killed too?
ROSS I have said.
MALCOLM Be comforted.
Let's make us med'cines of our great revenge,
To cure this deadly grief.
MACDUFF
He has no children. All my pretty ones?
Did you say all? O hell-kite!° All?
What, all my pretty chickens and their dam
At one fell swoop?
MALCOLM
Dispute° it like a man.
MACDUFF I shall do so;
But I must also feel it as a man.
I cannot but remember such things were,
That were most precious to me. Did heaven look on,
And would not take their part? Sinful Macduff,
They were all struck for thee! Naught° that I am,
Not for their own demerits but for mine
Fell slaughter on their souls. Heaven rest them now!
MALCOLM
Be this the whetstone of your sword. Let grief
Convert to anger; blunt not the heart, enrage it.
MACDUFF
O, I could play the woman with mine eyes,
And braggart with my tongue! But, gentle heavens,
Cut short all intermission;° front to front°
Bring thou this fiend of Scotland and myself;
Within my sword's length set him. If he 'scape,
Heaven forgive him too!
MALCOLM This time goes manly.
Come, go we to the king. Our power is ready;
Our lack is nothing but our leave.° Macbeth
Is ripe for shaking, and the pow'rs above
Put on their instruments.° Receive what cheer you may.
The night is long that never finds the day. Exeunt. 240

A C T V

Scene I. [Dunsinane. In the castle.]

Enter a DOCTOR of physic and a waiting-GENTLEWOMAN.

DOCTOR I have two nights watched with you, but can perceive no truth in your report. When was it she last walked?
GENTLEWOMAN Since his majesty went into the field, I have seen her rise from her bed, throw her 5 nightgown upon her, unlock her closet,° take forth paper, fold it, write upon't, read it, afterwards seal it, and again return to bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.
DOCTOR A great perturbation in nature, to receive at 10

once the benefit of sleep and do the effects of watching!° In this slumb'ry agitation, besides her walking and other actual performances,° what, at any time, have you heard her say?
215 GENTLEWOMAN That, sir, which I will not report 15
after her.
DOCTOR You may to me, and 'tis most meet° you should.
GENTLEWOMAN Neither to you nor anyone, having no witness to confirm my speech. 20
Enter LADY [MACBETH] with a taper.
Lo you, here she comes! This is her very guise,° and, upon my life, fast asleep! Observe her; stand close.°
DOCTOR How came she by that light?
GENTLEWOMAN Why, it stood by her. She has light by her continually. 'Tis her command. 25
DOCTOR You see, her eyes are open.
GENTLEWOMAN Ay, but their sense° are shut.
DOCTOR What is it she does now? Look, how she rubs her hands.
GENTLEWOMAN It is an accustomed action with her, 30 to seem thus washing her hands: I have known her continue in this a quarter of an hour.
LADY MACBETH Yet here's a spot.
DOCTOR Hark! she speaks. I will set down what comes from her, to satisfy° my remembrance the more 35 strongly.
LADY MACBETH Out, damned spot! Out, I say!
One: two: why, then 'tis time to do't. Hell is murky.
Fie, my lord, fie! A soldier, and afeard? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our pow'r 40 to accompt?° Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him?
DOCTOR Do you mark that?
LADY MACBETH The Thane of Fife had a wife.
Where is she now? What, will these hands ne'er be 45 clean? No more o' that, my lord, no more o' that!
You mar all with this starting.
DOCTOR Go to,° go to! You have known what you should not.
GENTLEWOMAN She has spoke what she should not, 50
I am sure of that. Heaven knows what she has known.
LADY MACBETH Here's the smell of the blood still.
All the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh, oh, oh!
DOCTOR What a sigh is there! The heart is sorely 55 charged.°
GENTLEWOMAN I would not have such a heart in my bosom for the dignity° of the whole body.
DOCTOR Well, well, well—
GENTLEWOMAN Pray God it be, sir. 60
DOCTOR This disease is beyond my practice.° Yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep who have died holily in their beds.
LADY MACBETH Wash your hands; put on your nightgown; look not so pale! I tell you yet again, 65
Banquo's buried. He cannot come out on's° grave.

217 hell-kite hellish bird of prey 220 Dispute counter 225
Naught wicked 232 intermission interval; front to front forehead to forehead (i.e., face to face) 237 Our lack . . .
leave We need only to take our leave 239 Put . . . instruments arm themselves (?) urge us, their agents, onward (?)
V.i.6 closet chest

11-12 effects of watching deeds of one awake 13 actual performances deeds 17 meet suitable 21 guise custom 22 close hidden 27 sense i.e., powers of sight 35 satisfy confirm 41 to accompt into account 48 Go to an exclamation 56 charged burdened 58 dignity worth, rank 61 practice professional skill 66 on's of his

DOCTOR Even so?

LADY MACBETH To bed, to bed! There's knocking at the gate. Come, come, come, come, give me your hand! What's done cannot be undone. To bed, to bed, 70 to bed! Exit LADY [MACBETH].

DOCTOR Will she go now to bed?

GENTLEWOMAN Directly.

DOCTOR

Foul whisp'rings are abroad. Unnatural deeds
Do breed unnatural troubles. Infected minds 75
To their deaf pillows will discharge their secrets.
More needs she the divine than the physician.
God, God forgive us all! Look after her;
Remove from her the means of all annoyance,^o
And still^o keep eyes upon her. So good night. 80
My mind she has mated^o and amazed my sight:
I think, but dare not speak.

GENTLEWOMAN Good night, good doctor.
Exeunt.

Scene II. [The country near Dunsinane.]

Drum and colors. Enter MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, LENNOX, SOLDIERS.

MENTEITH

The English pow'r^o is near, led on by Malcolm,
His uncle Siward and the good Macduff.
Revenge burn in them; for their dear^o causes
Would to the bleeding and the grim alarm
Excite the mortified man.^o

ANGUS Near Birnam Wood 5
Shall we well meet them; that way are they coming.

CAITHNESS

Who knows if Donalbain be with his brother?

LENNOX

For certain, sir, he is not. I have a file^o
Of all the gentry: there is Siward's son,
And many unrough^o youths that even now 10
Protest^o their first of manhood.

MENTEITH What does the tyrant?

CAITHNESS

Great Dunsinane he strongly fortifies.
Some say he's mad; others, that lesser hate him,
Do call it valiant fury: but, for certain,
He cannot buckle his distempered^o cause 15
Within the belt of rule.^o

ANGUS Now does he feel
His secret murders sticking on his hands;
Now minutely revolts upbraid^o his faith-breach.
Those he commands move only in command,
Nothing in love. Now does he feel his title 20
Hang loose about him, like a giant's robe
Upon a dwarfish thief.

MENTEITH Who then shall blame
His pestered^o senses to recoil and start,

79 annoyance injury 80 still continuously 81 mated baffled

V.ii.1 pow'r army 3 dear heartfelt 4-5 Would . . . man i.e., would incite a dead man (or a paralyzed man) to join the bloody and grim call to battle 8 file list 10 unrough i.e., beardless 11 Protest assert 15 distempered swollen by dropsy 16 rule self-control 18 minutely revolts upbraid rebellions every minute rebuke 23 pestered tormented

When all that is within him does condemn
Itself for being there?

CAITHNESS Well, march we on, 25
To give obedience where 'tis truly owed.
Meet we the med'cine^o of the sickly weal,^o
And with him pour we, in our country's purge,
Each drop of us.^o

LENNOX Or so much as it needs
To dew^o the sovereign^o flower and drown the weeds. 30
Make we our march towards Birnam.

Exeunt, marching.

Scene III. [Dunsinane. In the castle.]

Enter MACBETH, DOCTOR, and ATTENDANTS.

MACBETH

Bring me no more reports; let them fly all!
Till Birnam Wood remove to Dunsinane
I cannot taint^o with fear. What's the boy Malcolm?
Was he not born of woman? The spirits that know
All mortal consequences^o have pronounced me thus: 5
"Fear not, Macbeth; no man that's born of woman Shall e'er have power upon thee." Then fly, false thanes,
And mingle with the English epicures.
The mind I sway^o by and the heart I bear
Shall never sag with doubt nor shake with fear. 10

Enter SERVANT.

The devil damn thee black, thou cream-faced loon!^o
Where got'st thou that goose look?

SERVANT

There is ten thousand—

MACBETH

Geese, villain?

SERVANT

Soldiers, sir.

MACBETH

Go prick thy face and over-red^o thy fear,
Thou lily-livered boy. What soldiers, patch?^o 15
Death of^o thy soul! Those linen^o cheeks of thine
Are counselors to fear. What soldiers, whey-face?

SERVANT

The English force, so please you.

MACBETH

Take thy face hence. [Exit SERVANT.]

Seyton!—I am sick at heart,
When I behold—Seyton, I say!—This push^o 20
Will cheer me ever, or disseat^o me now.
I have lived long enough. My way of life
Is fall'n into the sear,^o the yellow leaf,
And that which should accompany old age,
As honor, love, obedience, troops of friends, 25
I must not look to have; but, in their stead,
Curses not loud but deep, mouth-honor, breath,

27 med'cine i.e., Malcolm; weal commonwealth 29 Each
. . . us i.e., every last drop of our blood (?) 30 dew bedew, water (and thus make grow); sovereign (1) royal (2) remedial
V.iii.3 taint become infected 5 mortal consequences future human events 9 sway move 11 loon fool 14 over-red cover with red 15 patch fool 16 of upon; linen i.e., pale 20 push effort 21 disseat i.e., unthroned (with word-play on "cheer," pronounced "chair") 23 sear withered

Which the poor heart would fain deny, and dare not.
Seyton!

Enter SEYTON.

SEYTON

What's your gracious pleasure?

MACBETH

What news more? 30

SEYTON

All is confirmed, my lord, which was reported.

MACBETH

I'll fight, till from my bones my flesh be hacked.

Give me my armor.

SEYTON

'Tis not needed yet.

MACBETH

I'll put it on.

Send out moe° horses, skirr° the country round. 35

Hang those that talk of fear. Give me mine armor.

How does your patient, doctor?

DOCTOR

Not so sick, my lord,

As she is troubled with thick-coming fancies

That keep her from her rest.

MACBETH

Cure her of that.

Canst thou not minister to a mind diseased, 40

Pluck from the memory a rooted sorrow,

Raze out° the written troubles of the brain,

And with some sweet oblivious° antidote

Cleanse the stuffed bosom of that perilous stuff

Which weighs upon the heart?

DOCTOR

Therein the patient 45

Must minister to himself.

MACBETH

Throw physic° to the dogs, I'll none of it.

Come, put mine armor on. Give me my staff.

Seyton, send out.—Doctor, the thanes fly from me.—

Come, sir, dispatch.° If thou couldst, doctor, cast 50

The water° of my land, find her disease

And purge it to a sound and pristine health,

I would applaud thee to the very echo,

That should applaud again.—Pull't off, I say.—

What rhubarb, senna, or what purgative drug, 55

Would scour these English hence? Hear'st thou of them?

DOCTOR

Ay, my good lord; your royal preparation

Makes us hear something.

MACBETH

Bring it° after me.

I will not be afraid of death and bane°

Till Birnam Forest come to Dunsinane. 60

DOCTOR [Aside.]

Were I from Dunsinane away and clear,

Profit again should hardly draw me here. Exeunt.

Scene IV. [Country near Birnam Wood.]

Drum and colors. Enter MALCOLM, SIWARD, MACDUFF, Siward's son, [YOUNG SIWARD], MENTEITH, CAITHNESS, ANGUS, and SOLDIERS, marching.

MALCOLM

Cousins, I hope the days are near at hand

35 moe more; skirr scour 42 Raze out erase 43 oblivious causing forgetfulness 47 physic medical science 50 dispatch hurry 50–51 cast The water analyze the urine 58 it i.e., the armor 59 bane destruction

That chambers will be safe.°

MENTEITH

We doubt it nothing.°

SIWARD

What wood is this before us?

MENTEITH

The Wood of Birnam.

MALCOLM

Let every soldier hew him down a bough

And bear't before him. Thereby shall we shadow 5

The numbers of our host, and make discovery°

Err in report of us.

SOLDIERS

It shall be done.

SIWARD

We learn no other but° the confident tyrant

Keeps still in Dunsinane, and will endure°

Our setting down before't.

MALCOLM

'Tis his main hope, 10

For where there is advantage to be given°

Both more and less° have given him the revolt,

And none serve with him but constrained things

Whose hearts are absent too.

MACDUFF

Let our just censures

Attend the true event,° and put we on 15

Industrious soldiership.

SIWARD

The time approaches,

That will with due decision make us know

What we shall say we have and what we owe.°

Thoughts speculative their unsure hopes relate,

But certain issue strokes must arbitrate:° 20

Towards which advance the war.° Exeunt, marching.

Scene V. [Dunsinane. Within the castle.]

Enter MACBETH, SEYTON, and SOLDIERS, with drum and colors.

MACBETH

Hang out our banners on the outward walls.

The cry is still "They come!" Our castle's strength

Will laugh a siege to scorn. Here let them lie

Till famine and the ague° eat them up.

Were they not forced° with those that should be ours, 5

We might have met them dareful,° beard to beard,

And beat them backward home. A cry within of women.

What is that noise?

SEYTON

It is the cry of women, my good lord.

[Exit.]

MACBETH

I have almost forgot the taste of fears:

The time has been, my senses would have cooled 10

To hear a night-shriek, and my fell° of hair

Would at a dismal treatise° rouse and stir

As life were in't. I have supped full with horrors.

V.iv.2 That . . . safe that a man will be safe in his bedroom; nothing not at all 6 discovery reconnaissance 8 no other but nothing but that 9 endure allow 11 advantage . . . given afforded an opportunity 12 more and less high and low 14–15 just . . . event true judgment await the actual outcome 18 owe own (the contrast is between "what we shall say we have" and "what we shall really have") 20 certain . . . arbitrate the definite outcome must be decided by battle 21 war army

V.v.4 ague fever 5 forced reinforced 6 met them dareful i.e., met them in the battlefield boldly 11 fell pelt 12 treatise story

Direness, familiar to my slaughterous thoughts,
Cannot once start° me.

[Enter SEYTON.]

Wherefore was that cry? 15

SEYTON

The queen, my lord, is dead.

MACBETH

She should° have died hereafter;
There would have been a time for such a word.°
Tomorrow, and tomorrow, and tomorrow
Creeps in this petty pace from day to day, 20
To the last syllable of recorded time;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death. Out, out, brief candle!
Life's but a walking shadow, a poor player
That struts and frets his hour upon the stage 25
And then is heard no more. It is a tale
Told by an idiot, full of sound and fury, Signifying nothing.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Thou com'st to use thy tongue; thy story quickly!

MESSENGER

Gracious my lord, 30
I should report that which I say I saw,
But know not how to do't.

MACBETH Well, say, sir.

MESSENGER

As I did stand my watch upon the hill,
I looked toward Birnam, and anon, methought,
The wood began to move.

MACBETH Liar and slave! 35

MESSENGER

Let me endure your wrath, if't be not so.
Within this three mile may you see it coming;
I say a moving grove.

MACBETH If thou speak'st false,
Upon the next tree shalt thou hang alive,
Till famine cling° thee. If thy speech be sooth,° 40
I care not if thou dost for me as much.
I pull in resolution,° and begin
To doubt° th' equivocation of the fiend
That lies like truth: "Fear not, till Birnam Wood
Do come to Dunsinane!" And now a wood 45
Comes toward Dunsinane. Arm, arm, and out!
If this which he avouches° does appear,
There is nor flying hence nor tarrying here.
I 'gin to be aweary of the sun,
And wish th' estate° o' th' world were now undone. 50
Ring the alarum bell! Blow wind, come wrack!
At least we'll die with harness° on our back. Exeunt.

Scene VI. [Dunsinane. Before the castle.]

Drum and colors. Enter MALCOLM, SIWARD, MACDUFF, and their ARMY, with boughs.

MALCOLM

Now near enough. Your leavy° screens throw down,

15 start startle 17 should inevitably would (?) 18 word message 40 cling wither; sooth truth 42 pull in resolution restrain confidence 43 doubt suspect 47 avouches asserts 50 th' estate the orderly condition 52 harness armor
V.vi.1 leavy leafy

And show like those you are. You, worthy uncle, Shall, with my cousin, your right noble son,
Lead our first battle.° Worthy Macduff and we° Shall take upon's what else remains to do, 5
According to our order.°

SIWARD Fare you well.

Do we° but find the tyrant's power° tonight,
Let us be beaten, if we cannot fight.

MACDUFF

Make all our trumpets speak; give them all breath,
Those clamorous harbingers of blood and death. 10
Exeunt. Alarums continued.

Scene VII. [Another part of the field.]

Enter MACBETH.

MACBETH

They have tied me to a stake; I cannot fly,
But bearlike I must fight the course.° What's he
That was not born of woman? Such a one
Am I to fear, or none.

Enter YOUNG SIWARD. 30

YOUNG SIWARD

What is thy name?

MACBETH Thou'lt be afraid to hear it. 5

YOUNG SIWARD

No; though thou call'st thyself a hotter name
Than any is in hell.

MACBETH My name's Macbeth. 35

YOUNG SIWARD

The devil himself could not pronounce a title
More hateful to mine ear.

MACBETH No, nor more fearful.

YOUNG SIWARD

Thou liest, abhorrèd tyrant; with my sword 10
I'll prove the lie thou speak'st.

Fight, and YOUNG SIWARD slain.

MACBETH Thou wast born of woman.

But swords I smile at, weapons laugh to scorn, Brandished by man that's of a woman born. Exit.

45 Alarums. Enter MACDUFF.

MACDUFF

That way the noise is. Tyrant, show thy face!
If thou be'st slain and with no stroke of mine, 15
My wife and children's ghosts will haunt me still.
I cannot strike at wretched kerns,° whose arms
Are hired to bear their staves.° Either thou, Macbeth,
Or else my sword, with an unbattered edge,
I sheathe again undeeded.° There thou shouldst be; 20
By this great clatter, one of greatest note
Seems bruited.° Let me find him, Fortune!
And more I beg not. Exit. Alarums.

Enter MALCOLM and SIWARD.

4 battle battalion; we Malcolm uses the royal "we"
6 order plan 7 Do we if we do; power forces
V.vii.2 course bout, round (he has in mind an attack of dogs or men upon a bear chained to a stake) 17 kerns foot soldiers (contemptuous) 18 staves spears 20 undeeded i.e., having done nothing 22 bruited reported

SIWARD

This way, my lord. The castle's gently rend'red:^o
 The tyrant's people on both sides do fight;
 The noble thanes do bravely in the war;
 The day almost itself professes^o yours,
 And little is to do.

MALCOLM We have met with foes
 That strike beside us.^o

SIWARD Enter, sir, the castle.
Exeunt. Alarum.

[Scene VIII. Another part of the field.]

Enter MACBETH.

MACBETH

Why should I play the Roman fool, and die
 On mine own sword? Whiles I see lives,^o the gashes
 Do better upon them.

Enter MACDUFF.

MACDUFF Turn, hell-hound, turn!

MACBETH

Of all men else I have avoided thee.
 But get thee back! My soul is too much charged^o
 With blood of thine already.

MACDUFF I have no words:
 My voice is in my sword, thou bloodier villain
 Than terms can give thee out!^o Fight. Alarum.

MACBETH Thou lovest labor:

As easy mayst thou the intrenchant^o air
 With thy keen sword impress^o as make me bleed:
 Let fall thy blade on vulnerable crests;
 I bear a charmed life, which must not yield
 To one of woman born.

MACDUFF Despair^o thy charm,
 And let the angel^o whom thou still hast served
 Tell thee, Macduff was from his mother's womb
 Untimely ripped.

MACBETH

Accursèd be that tongue that tells me so,
 For it hath cowed my better part of man!^o
 And be these juggling fiends no more believed,
 That palter^o with us in a double sense;
 That keep the word of promise to our ear,
 And break it to our hope. I'll not fight with thee.

MACDUFF

Then yield thee, coward,
 And live to be the show and gaze o' th' time:^o
 We'll have thee, as our rarer monsters^o are,
 Painted upon a pole,^o and underwrit,
 "Here may you see the tyrant."

MACBETH

I will not yield,
 To kiss the ground before young Malcolm's feet,

24 gently rend'red surrendered without a struggle 27 itself professes declares itself 29 beside us i.e., deliberately miss us (?) as our comrades (?)

V.viii.2 Whiles . . . lives so long as I see living men 5 charged burdened 8 terms . . . out words can describe you 9 intrenchant incapable of being cut 10 impress make an impression on 13 Despair despair of 14 angel i.e., fallen angel, fiend 18 better . . . man manly spirit 20 palter equivocate 24 gaze . . . time spectacle of the age 25 monsters freaks 26 Painted . . . pole i.e., pictured on a banner set by a showman's booth

And to be baited^o with the rabble's curse.

Though Birnam Wood be come to Dunsinane,
 And thou opposed, being of no woman born,
 Yet I will try the last. Before my body
 I throw my warlike shield. Lay on, Macduff;
 And damned be him that first cries, "Hold, enough!"
Exeunt, fighting. Alarums.

[Re]enter fighting, and MACBETH slain. [Exit MACDUFF, with MACBETH.] Retreat and flourish.^o Enter, with drum and colors, MALCOLM, SIWARD, ROSS, THANES, and SOLDIERS.

MALCOLM

I would the friends we miss were safe arrived.

SIWARD

Some must go off;^o and yet, by these I see,
 So great a day as this is cheaply bought.

MALCOLM

Macduff is missing, and your noble son.

ROSS

Your son, my lord, has paid a soldier's debt:
 He only lived but till he was a man;
 The which no sooner had his prowess confirmed
 In the unshrinking station^o where he fought,
 But like a man he died.

SIWARD

Then he is dead?

ROSS

Ay, and brought off the field. Your cause of sorrow
 Must not be measured by his worth, for then
 It hath no end.

SIWARD

Had he his hurts before?

ROSS

Ay, on the front.

SIWARD

Why then, God's soldier be he!

Had I as many sons as I have hairs,
 I would not wish them to a fairer death:
 And so his knell is knolled.

MALCOLM

He's worth more sorrow,

And that I'll spend for him.

SIWARD

He's worth no more:

They say he parted well and paid his score:^o
 And so God be with him! Here comes newer comfort.

20

Enter MACDUFF with Macbeth's head.

MACDUFF

Hail, king! for so thou art: behold, where stands
 Th' usurper's cursèd head. The time is free.^o
 I see thee compassed^o with thy kingdom's pearl,
 That speak my salutation in their minds,
 Whose voices I desire aloud with mine:
 Hail, King of Scotland!

ALL

Hail, King of Scotland!

Flourish.

MALCOLM

We shall not spend a large expense of time
 Before we reckon with your several loves,^c

29 baited assailed (like a bear by dogs) 34 s.d. Retreat and flourish trumpet call to withdraw, and fanfare 36 go off die (theatrical metaphor) 42 unshrinking station i.e., place at which he stood firmly 52 parted . . . score departed well and settled his account 55 The time is free
 The world is liberated 56 compassed surrounded 61 reckon . . . loves reward the devotion of each of you

And make us even with you. My thanes and kinsmen,
Henceforth be earls, the first that ever Scotland
In such an honor named. What's more to do,
Which would be planted newly with the time°— 65
As calling home our exiled friends abroad
That fled the snares of watchful tyranny,
Producing forth the cruel ministers°
Of this dead butcher and his fiendlike queen,

64-65 What's . . . time what else must be done which should be newly established in this age 68 ministers agents

Who, as 'tis thought, by self and violent° hands 70
Took off her life—this, and what needful else
That calls upon us,° by the grace of Grace
We will perform in measure, time, and place:°
So thanks to all at once and to each one,
Whom we invite to see us crowned at Scone. 75

Flourish. Exeunt omnes.

70 self and violent her own violent 72 calls upon us demands my attention 73 in . . . place fittingly, at the appropriate time and place

THE TRAGEDY OF ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA

EDITED BY BARBARA EVERETT

Introduction

Antony and Cleopatra was written in 1607, or a little earlier. That is, it probably followed immediately after the four great tragedies, Hamlet, Othello, King Lear, and Macbeth, all of which were written in the half-dozen years after the turn of the century—the period during which Shakespeare's genius was at its most assured, mature, and profound. And Antony and Cleopatra itself witnesses to this authoritative mastery of an artistic maturity: Coleridge, in a fine phrase, spoke of the play as being "in all exhibitions of a giant power in its strength and vigor of maturity, a formidable rival of the Macbeth, Lear, Othello, and Hamlet." But whether the play is, in reality, a tragedy, is a more open question: its uniqueness of form and mood is a part of its power, and unique things are not easy to classify. When the Folio editors came to collect the plays together after Shakespeare's death, they named this The Tragedie of Anthonie, and Cleopatra (unless the title was Shakespeare's own) and placed it in the "Tragedies" section that closed the Folio. But the play is, in its total effect, so unlike the tragedies that preceded it, that for long now critics have hesitated to group it with them. The words with which Coleridge praises the play are in themselves suggestive of a distinction; Bradley, later, did not include it in his Shakespearean Tragedy, and G. Wilson Knight similarly excludes it from his study of the tragedies, The Wheel of Fire—though both discuss it elsewhere. New classifications of the play have been made in the attempt to specify its highly individual quality. It is most usually referred to, now, as a "Roman play" and grouped as such with Julius Caesar and Coriolanus: on the grounds that all three, in taking their materials from North's Plutarch, take also from these "Lives of the Noble Grecians and Romans" an interest that is at least as historical and political as it is tragical, and an ethos that is at least as classical as it is Christian. A recent study has classified it anew as a "problem play," and grouped it as such with Julius Caesar and Measure for Measure, arguing that all three are alike, and unusual, in presenting a specifically moral problem in such a way as to leave radical indecision about the rights and wrongs of the case. And lastly, though no critic has ever gone so far as to group the play with the comedies, several have pointed out—and with good reason—how comic its effect sometimes is.

Obviously, categorizing a play is not vital to understanding it. Moreover, the exercise of classifying a thing can only aim at the comparative, and hope to create some limited definition within which unlike things may be compared and contrasted, and so throw light on one another. However, the attempts to classify Antony and Cleopatra—and the difficulties met with in the process—do have an unusual interest. For it is "uncategorizable" in a new and special way. There are one or two plays of Shakespeare—Troilus and Cressida and Measure for Measure are probably the best examples—which are similarly hard to classify, but which remain much simpler propositions. Though brilliant and full of interest, they are far from perfect or coherent works of art; and it is therefore easier to see in them (or to imagine one sees) the marks of changing purpose, or of discordances within the given materials, that make the act of classification so difficult. It is possible to suggest that Measure for Measure was intended to be a comedy on a not unfamiliar pattern, though in an unfamiliar milieu, but that the development in Shakespeare's artistic vision broke apart the preconceived notion on which the play began. Similarly, it is possible to suggest that Troilus and Cressida may have begun as a love tragedy on the same design as Romeo and Juliet, but that a greatly changed mood and insight destroyed that simpler romantic formula. Both plays at least offer materials for such hesitant suggestions with their sudden changes of mood, their strange discordances in characterization, their awkward or seemingly patched-up endings. Antony and Cleopatra, by contrast, suggests no such change of purpose or uncertainty in handling materials. It is, in final poetic and dramatic effect, one of the most triumphantly harmonious, coherent, and "finished" plays that Shakespeare ever wrote, from first to last line bearing the impress of a unified purpose powerfully carried out. Coleridge, again, seizes on this dominant effect of the play when he points out the degree to which Shakespeare "impresses the notion of giant strength. . . . This [is] owing to the manner in which it is sustained throughout—that he lives in and through the play." And yet, though the impression of a unified purpose is so strong, it is far from easy to decide what that unified purpose is.

One of the reasons for this is that the play "works" at many different levels and in many different ways. In it, many different—and even contradictory—kinds of experience are fused together; with the result that the play is continually suggestive of different kinds and categories of drama. Diversity and complexity of experience are of course a part of the strength and power of the preceding tragedies: but in them all diversities are subsumed under a dominating tragic discipline, by which the play moves steadily to its catastrophic climax. Hamlet's Gravedigger, Lear's Fool, Macbeth's Porter do not provide "comic relief," though this phrase is sometimes used of them: rather, they substantiate the tragic experience from a point of view at a large distance from the heroic—and therefore substantiate it the more impressively. In Antony and Cleopatra, the tragic and the comic experience coexist, among others. It is tragic not only in the sense of containing the "sad" and the "serious" (for many of Shakespeare's best and truest comedies also do that) but also in the expression of an irremediable loss, incurred consciously and borne responsibly: Antony reaches "the very heart of loss," and knows it. And yet it is also comic, not only in the sense of containing the satirical or the farcical (for Shakespeare's tragedies also do that) but also in the expression of an ineffaceable lightheartedness: as when Cleopatra, preparing for death, says:

go fetch

My best attires. I am again for Cydnus,
To meet Mark Antony. (V.ii.227–29)

and, to the asp that kills her:

O, couldst thou speak,

That I might hear thee call great Caesar ass
Unpolicied! (V.ii.306–08)

"Lighthearted" is not, admittedly, a complete enough word for this: the somewhat old-fashioned word "high-hearted" is perhaps closer to it. But however it is named, the mood evoked here, and elsewhere in the play, is nearer to the experience evoked in the mature comedies than it is to the gravely responsible tone of Hamlet at his death, Othello's solemn bravura, Lear's agonized questioning, or Macbeth's desperate obduracy. The tone and presentation throughout the play is thus so compounded of strangely blended elements as to be elusive of a final classification. The play can be described from several different points of view, and in the terms of several different categories, and each would point to elements really present in it: but none would describe it quite completely enough.

There is, for instance, good reason to call Antony and Cleopatra a "Roman play," and to point out the historical and political interest that distinguishes it from the earlier tragedies. As in Julius Caesar, which had been written some eight years earlier (that is, just before Hamlet, the first of the mature tragedies), Shakespeare has taken his materials from well-known history—so well known, in fact, as in part to circumscribe his treatment of it. The basis of Hamlet, King Lear, and Macbeth is also of course historical, but presented Shakespeare with nothing as radically unalterable as the murder of Julius Caesar, the fate of Antony, or the coming to power of Octavius Caesar.

Shakespeare's Octavius—Caesar, as he is always called in Antony and Cleopatra—was to become Augustus, perhaps the greatest of Roman emperors, creator of the Pax Romana that closed the long period of unrest, revolution, and war, with the time of peace in which Christ was to be born. Thus, in the war with Antony, when Antony's allies have deserted and sympathy for him is at its strongest, Caesar redresses the balance by a brief but significant reminder of his future role in history:

The time of universal peace is near.
Prove this a prosp'rous day, the three-nooked world
Shall bear the olive freely. (IV.vi.5–7)

Antony's course is as much a "given factor" as Caesar's. Plutarch's "Life of Antony" (perhaps somewhat romanticizing the case) had established the cause of Antony's downfall: he had lost the world because of his love for Cleopatra. Whether that love were treated with some severity (as Plutarch treated it) or with tender admiration (as Chaucer and many others had treated it), its fatality had become an historical fact.

The political battle, then, is between two men sharply distinguished in their roles: Caesar, the young, sober, peace-loving imperial administrator, and Antony, the middle-aged soldier, orator, and lover, a hardened campaigner in war, politics, and love. And the battle is fought for a large enough issue: the rule of the whole civilized world some forty years before the birth of Christ. For Antony and Caesar are two of the triumvirs who rule the Empire between them, and early in the play it becomes clear that the third, Lepidus, is an insignificant go-between. The scale of the prize that the two men are fighting for is also established at once in the play. Philo bitterly sees Antony as

The triple pillar of the world transformed
Into a strumpet's fool. (I.i.12–13)

And Antony himself turns an exhilarated affirmation of his love into a rejection of the whole Empire:

Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide arch
Of the ranged empire fall! Here is my space. (I.i.33–34)

On Antony's second appearance in the play, he is presented in a scene all the more sharply effective for its contrast with the immediately preceding scene of the fortune-telling, which is slow, sleepy, and casual: he appears as a man facing a rapid and cumulatively urgent succession of news from all over the Empire—the wars of his wife Fulvia and his brother Lucius, their conjunct war against Caesar, the swift and victorious invasions of the Parthian Labienus, Fulvia's death, the threats of Pompey, and the dangerously shifting sympathies of the Roman people. Caesar, in his turn, is presented on his first appearance in an exactly comparable way, as a man habituated to an enormous and urgent sphere of action. Both these scenes are brilliantly effective in their conversion of necessary exposition to purely dramatic purposes: they move with an almost breathless speed and energy, and establish Antony and Caesar as men of affairs at a very high level indeed. This effect is maintained, though by less concentrated means, throughout the play. The action moves rapidly from place to place in the great Empire, from Alexandria to Rome, from Misenum to "a plain in Syria," from Athens to Rome again. The characters think and plan—sometimes rhetorically, sometimes merely with an easy and businesslike precision—in terms of the whole world:

[his] quality, going on,
 The sides o' th' world may danger. (I.ii.192-93)
 thou, the greatest soldier of the world (I.iii.38)
 The demi-Atlas of this earth (I.v.23)
 The third o' th' world is yours (II.ii.63)
 To you all three,
 The senators alone of this great world (II.vi.8-9)
 Wilt thou be lord of all the world? (II.vii.63)
 These three world-sharers (II.vii.71)
 Wars 'twixt you twain would be
 As if the world should cleave. (III.iv.30-31)
 The greater cantle of the world is lost
 With very ignorance (III.x.6-7)

Such language (of which this is only a selection) is the medium of the play, and it establishes the size of the battlefield—real and metaphorical—on which the contest for power is being fought.

The course of this battle for power is simple in outline. The first appearance of Antony and Caesar—Antony in his "Egyptian fetters," though still able to throw them off: Caesar revealing in clear, precise terms his cool disgust at Antony's way of life and aware also of the dangers of such a political associate—presents them as personally incompatible and potentially rivals. As Caesar says:

[it] cannot be
 We shall remain in friendship, our conditions
 So diff'ring in their acts. (II.ii.113-15)

The two are reconciled under the pressure of Pompey's threat to the triumvirate and seal their peace by Antony's marriage to Octavia, Caesar's sister. The desertion of Octavia by Antony gives Caesar the pretext for war, once he has himself gained some advantage in power. After the ruinous defeat at Actium, Antony's fall is rapid: his allies and his armies desert to the more powerful man, and he is lost. Through an apparently leisurely and circuitous stream of events that keeps closely to the historical sequence, there emerges into prominence the political theme: the maneuvers and manipulations, the honors and dishonors, of a battle between incompatible standards for the government of the whole Roman world.

To describe the play in these terms is to give it something of the discipline, and something of the limitation, of any game of power—say, a game of chess played out on the board of the world. And such an image would not be entirely alien to the mood of the play: Antony, for instance, accuses Cleopatra in similar terms, in a moment of despairing anger:

she, Eros, has
 Packed cards with Caesar, and false-played my glory
 Unto an enemy's triumph. (IV.xiv.18-20)

And yet to use this image of the game is to realize how much in the play it does not comprehend: indeed, even as Antony uses this image, there is a sudden and significant sense that he has lost even his imaginative command of the full weight of the situation. If the play presents a game of history and politics, it presents also something deeper and more important: a tragedy of human experience. When Antony finds himself at "the very heart of loss," he is maddened at both the loss of the world and the loss of all trust in Cleopatra; but in losing both, he is also crying out at the loss of himself.

It is not enough to say, simply, that Shakespeare is far more interested in the loser, Antony, than he is in the winner, Caesar; or even to say that his interest is with that relation between Antony and Cleopatra that caused the loss of the world. It is rather that the whole situation is presented so that the historical and political interest—the gain or loss of world power—becomes a part or facet of another and greater subject: the ruin of two people, and with them, of a whole sphere of human experience. Any political history may have its "human interest"; Plutarch's "Life of Antony" is vivid, shrewd, and alive in its portraiture, and Shakespeare is largely and unusually indebted to Plutarch's characterization of Antony. What differentiates Antony and Cleopatra is not merely a livelier or even a deeper characterization, but a transformation of all action and event into a process of tragic and individual experience.

This touches several characters besides the hero and heroine. The mere opportunist, Pompey, soon to disappear from the play, has a moment of sudden importance, seriousness, and dignity in the galley scene, when he rejects the chance of world power on a point of honor. The tough, cynical, common-sense soldier, Enobarbus (who in Plutarch dies of an ague), dies of a broken heart at his desertion of Antony, and the scene has, again, a weight of dignity and solemnity. Caesar himself, on hearing of the death of Antony, is moved—for the first time in the play—by a sudden access of personal feeling, in the awareness of what he has lost of himself by that death. None of these incidents could have any historical or political importance, though they might, perhaps, be shown as having historical and political effects; their significance and their weight lie in a different sphere of value. It is significant that each of these small incidents has the effect of isolating the person concerned, so that he appears for a moment as detached from, or even alien to, the world around him; for tragedy deals with the experience of a man, or of Man, rather than of men.

The greatest individuals in the play are, of course, Antony and Cleopatra: it is on their absolute selfhood that they base their glory. "We stand up peerless." And it is this arrogant and obdurate sense of themselves that distinguishes them from Caesar—though all three are, in fact, engaged on a quite similar quest for power that makes them, on a detached view, remarkably alike. Caesar can speak as nobly, as authoritatively, and as impressively as the other two; but he speaks a different language. His words have, at their best, the stature of judgment: of a rational social wisdom that takes its force from its generality. To him, Antony is

A man who is th' abstract of all faults
 That all men follow. (I.iv.9-10)

He surveys Antony with a level detachment that reduces his actions to caricature, and gives the final condemnation a rigorous justice:

to confound such time
That drums him from his sport and speaks as loud
As his own state and ours, 'tis to be chid
As we rate boys who, being mature in knowledge,
Pawn their experience to their present pleasure
And so rebel to judgment. (I.iv.28-33)

This is powerfully spoken, and its effect is largely that of the judicial and weighty summary of a situation from outside; it is the voice of common judgment and social wisdom. This voice interposes its realities throughout the play, and is not confined to Caesar alone: Antony too can speak with the voice of "Rome." But the language that Antony and Cleopatra make their own is something very different, and challenges the sober judgment of Rome. It is a language expressive of a whole radically different way of living and feeling: a language of immediate individual experience, sensory in its apprehension, exalted or intense in its tone, and arrogant in its claims. Love or desolation, exhilaration or rage become their own argument, and the intense experience of an exceptional individual becomes its own rationale. So Antony, proclaiming his love for Cleopatra, converts his profession into a challenge of Rome and all that Rome stands for:

Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide arch
Of the ranged empire fall! Here is my space,
Kingdoms are clay: our dungy earth alike
Feeds beast as man. The nobleness of life
Is to do thus; when such a mutual pair
And such a twain can do't, in which I bind,
On pain of punishment, the world to weet
We stand up peerless. (I.i.33-40)

So also Cleopatra, exquisitely lamenting the death of Antony, transforms her desolation into a vision of an empty world:

O, see, my women,
The crown o' th' earth doth melt. My lord!
O, withered is the garland of the war,
The soldier's pole is fall'n: young boys and girls
Are level now with men. The odds is gone,
And there is nothing left remarkable
Beneath the visiting moon. (IV.xv.62-68)

Both these speeches reveal an element vital to the characterization of Antony and Cleopatra. The first is more than a profession of love—whether we choose to regard that love as the glorification of sensual excitement or as the affirmation of a noble passion; the second is more than a woman's lament for a dead man—whether we choose to regard that lament as profound insight or as delusion. Each is an affirmation of selfhood, and a proclamation that this self is "peerless," "remarkable," incomparable, in its love and in its loss and in its very existence. Antony and Cleopatra are—to put the matter at its simplest—proud: proud of being themselves, and proud of being greater than anyone else in the world. Nor are they monstrous in this, for the whole world of the play is governed by the ideal of pride, and in it "honor" and "nobility," "greatness" and "reputation," are the very fabric of existence. Antony's fame, eminence, and power; Cleopatra's royalty; their love for each other; the admiration of their followers—all these things feed their pride and are fed by it. And all their great and good qualities serve it: Antony's courage and generosity and largeness of spirit, Cleopatra's wit and charm and enormous abundance of life. When their "greatness" is destroyed, the world is empty to them, for the loss of pride is a death:

The soul and body rive not more in parting
Than greatness going off. (IV.xiii.5-6)

The tragedy of Antony and Cleopatra, then, is not simply their loss of the world, nor even their death, but the destruction of pride that accompanies both. All that makes them admirable is inextricably confused with its own corruptions: their energy, vitality, and power are self-defeating. Antony is caught between the dual and mutually destructive sources of his pride, power in Rome and pleasure in Egypt; Cleopatra discovers or proves at Actium her full power over Antony, and in doing so loses both him and the world. Cleopatra fights to hold Antony, and Antony fights to hold the world, and in the process all Antony's courage reveals itself as inextricable from blind and irrational violence, and his generosity from sensual obsession; all Cleopatra's vitality and self-possession reveals itself as wayward, demanding, and treacherous. Caesar sees clearly when he calls Antony "the old ruffian," and Antony knows Cleopatra for a "boggler ever." In defeat—a defeat which is the loss of an ideal, as well as the loss of the world—both grow, paradoxically, more gentle, more human, and more wholly sympathetic. But both choose the "Roman" death of suicide, which is itself a last affirmation of pride in themselves and a refusal of the humiliation of walking in Caesar's triumph. Cleopatra places on her head the crown of a country she no longer rules, prepares to join a husband she never had, and rejects with contempt a world which has humiliated her, dying a death fitting for a princess

Descended of so many royal kings. (V.ii.326-27)

This tragic subject Shakespeare has created out of his historical and political materials; and it is a subject that merits Caesar's words at the close of the play:

High events as these
Strike those that make them; and their story is
No less in pity, than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. (V.ii.359-62)

Yet there can be a large difference between a play's "subject," summarized in detachment, and the full effect of the play itself; and this is true of Antony and Cleopatra. It certainly contains the "high events," the "pity" and "glory" that Caesar suggests as he closes the play on a fittingly high and sober note. But to leave the account of the play here would be as partial as to describe it, simply, as a historical and political drama.

In the first place, Antony's and Cleopatra's fates and fortunes are not presented with the kind of tragic or dramatic intensity that such an outline might suggest. Rather, they and their world are presented in a series of leisurely—at first sight, almost casual—insights, that include in their range the great and the small, the significant and the insignificant: a fortunetelling and a great battle, a political conference and a wild party, a memory of the lovers' first meeting and a death in a monument, a woman slapping a messenger and a countryman giving a lecture on the nature of asps. Instead of the cumulative intensity of the earlier tragedies, which speed and slacken and speed again to their catastrophic climaxes, the play presents something more leisurely, more spacious, and more impassive; its structure lies in the panoramic or kaleidoscopic display of diverse aspects of a world, seen in all its variety. At one moment, we watch a conference of world leaders, attempting with some dignity and seriousness to come to terms with each other—an attempt that justifies Antony's earlier bitter self-accusations; after the briefest of pauses, they are all celebrating in a farcical party that ends with a Bacchic version of ring-a-ring-a-roses. Cleopatra speaks, over the dead Antony, her exquisite lament for the loss of all that is valuable in the world; shortly after, she is doing her best to cheat Caesar of her jewels. The whole play is constructed, in this manner, out of a pattern of juxtapositions and contrasts, with the point of view continually shifting and changing; and the effect is something very different from "tragic" intensity, though full of a complex and absorbing life.

Closely related to this fluid and changing dramatic vision is the presentation of the characters themselves; indeed, it might be more proper to say that the concept of "character" itself is transformed. The earlier tragic heroes change, where they change at all in the course of the play, by a process of development; inner potentialities for good and evil are gradually brought to the view as the play proceeds. This is only very partially true of Antony and Cleopatra. They display, rather, a succession of different moods and impulses, continually changing. This is, of course, most true of Cleopatra, who is "infinite variety" itself; but there is hardly a character in the play who is not capable, to some degree, of being and doing the unexpected. The result is that a quick fluidity and changeableness of character becomes the norm, almost the rule: and in such a world, tragic motivation becomes impossible, and tragic responsibility is largely absent. Men seem to be moved by impulse and instinct, chance and expediency; and the guilts and terrors, shames and miseries of the earlier tragedies are very largely absent.

This is to suggest a world that relatively lacks psychological and metaphysical depth. It would be truer to say that Antony and Cleopatra creates a physical rather than a metaphysical world and that its density of substance rather than its depth of treatment commands the attention. It creates a world that is triumphantly "natural" rather than "supernatural"—although the natural, in this play, is not without its mysteries. The soothsayer reads, and reads correctly, in "Nature's infinite book of secrecy"; and when the soldiers, on guard by night in the streets of Alexandria, hear "Music i' th' air," they recognize it as the departure of a god from a defeated man:

'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony loved,
Now leaves him. (IV.iii.15-16)

To say that the world of Antony and Cleopatra is "natural" is to say that it presents all experiences and all events as rooted in the "dungy earth" or the "varying tide" of physical existence. And that physical existence is itself a "varying shore," subject to continual change in the battle of the elements. In politics as in love, the procession of times moves in a continual destruction; so Antony, in the proclamation of his love that challenges the power of the great Roman Empire, is making a proclamation and a challenge that time itself will silently verify:

Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide arch
Of the ranged empire fall! Here is my space:
Kingdoms are clay. (I.i.33-35)

The great lyrical image for the triumph of time is the image of the setting of the sun and the coming on of night; and this image fittingly colors the close of the play. The suicide of both Antony and Cleopatra is prefaced by the same echoing image:

Unarm, Eros. The long day's task is done,
And we must sleep. (IV.xiv.35-36)

Finish, good lady, the bright day is done,
And we are for the dark. (V.ii.193-94)

Wherever such imagery occurs in the play, it has an effect that is undoubtedly complex. One of the many things it does is to suggest that Antony's political defeat and his and Cleopatra's individual tragedy are both set within the context of a larger process, simpler and more universal. All that happens in the play—the reversals of fortune, the victories and defeats, the alienations and reconciliations—all are a part of the "interchange of state" that rules the whole natural world,

Increasing store with loss, and loss with store. (Sonnet 64)

Antony, in his "dotage," and Cleopatra, "wrinkled deep in time," suffer a defeat at the hands of a power greater than Caesar; and the cold politician Caesar himself has fought his way to the possession of an empire that will crumble in his hands to "dungy earth."

This fact Antony and Cleopatra know, and Caesar does not; their wisdom and their folly derives from their knowledge of it, and Caesar's power and his limitations derive from his ignorance or denial of it. Caesar's ambition is to "possess the time," by possessing the world for a while: Antony and Cleopatra live only in the present instant, and lose the world for good:

There's not a minute of our lives should stretch
Without some pleasure now. (I.i.46-47)

To give up the battle with time and live intensely in the present instant; to create a small and circumscribed area in which to exist, in an exhilarated moment of freedom and vitality—this is a way or vision of life more native to comedy than to tragedy. And it is the way of life that Cleopatra, above all, represents.

That time—O, times!—
I laughed him out of patience; and that night
I laughed him into patience; and next morn,

Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed;
Then put my tires and mantles on him, whilst
I wore his sword Philippan. (II.v.18-23)

Cleopatra's world is essentially a world of "play": a world, that is, that studies to find fit expression for the exuberance of natural energies and needs no justification for what it does. Her world is self-justifying, self-delighting, perhaps self-destroying; as such it is a perpetual challenge and threat to Caesar's vision of universal power and universal peace. The two cannot coexist: and in any battle between Cleopatra's devious wits and Caesar's steady will-to-power, the latter must triumph. Yet Cleopatra will live out even defeat on her own terms, as though it were an exuberant and triumphant game, the rules of which are her own and no one else's; her image of the dead Antony is of a god who has eluded, by the play of his intense natural energies, the restraining world of time:

For his bounty,
There was no winter in't: an autumn 'twas
That grew the more by reaping. His delights
Were dolphinlike, they showed his back above
The element they lived in. (V.ii.86-90)

Just such an image she makes of her own death: she "plays till doomsday," secure and free within the limited dream she has created.

Certainly that dream is a limited one, always circumscribed by the opposed realities of Caesar and of time:

CLEOPATRA

Think you there was or might be such a man
As this I dreamt of?

DOLABELLA Gentle madam, no. (V.ii.93-94)

In presenting these realities side by side, and involved with each other—the comic and tragic deeply interfused—Antony and Cleopatra creates a world that is as complex as it is profoundly original. One phrase of Cleopatra's—her "Here's sport indeed," as she draws the dying Antony to her—bears all the profound comic pathos and tragic irony that fills and characterizes the play. Yet this mingled experience is as strong as it is complex; it has a power and vitality that is Antony's when, in defeat, he "mocks the midnight bell":

Let's have one other gaudy night: call to me
All my sad captains; fill our bowls once more;
Let's mock the midnight bell. (III.xiii.183-85)

A NOTE ON THE SOURCE

The principal source of Antony and Cleopatra is the "Life of Marcus Antonius," in Sir Thomas North's translation of Plutarch's Lives of the Noble Grecians and Romans (published 1579). Shakespeare seems to have known parts, at least, of North's Plutarch for some ten years before he wrote Antony and Cleopatra; and he had already used the early part of the "Life of Marcus Antonius" when gathering materials for Julius Caesar, seven or so years before. The use Shakespeare makes of this "Life" for Antony and Cleopatra, however, is far more thorough, more extensive, and more interesting. Considerable insight into Shakespeare's artistry and method of working may be gained from a comparison of the source with the play: so much does Shakespeare take from Plutarch, and so radically does he transform it. From Plutarch's whole conception of Antony, down to the last few words of his Charmion, Shakespeare borrows heavily and directly, humanizing and deepening all that he borrows; and the process is illuminating.

Shakespeare's handling of his main source may be briefly outlined as follows. Plutarch's life of Antony is full, leisurely, and detailed. Shakespeare takes from Plutarch all the major events of Antony's later life, with one exception: the long and unsuccessful campaign against the Parthians; he also makes use of events that take place before the opening of the play, such as Antony's first meeting with Cleopatra and what ensues from it. In addition, he borrows—sometimes to an exceptional degree—from Plutarch's vivid, pithy, and dignified narration of speeches and events. In each case, the rehandling is instructive.

Two examples of the first kind of borrowing must suffice here. First, the situation at the opening of the play. Plutarch recounts how Antony, while with Cleopatra in Alexandria, hears news both of Fulvia's and Lucius' wars against Caesar, their defeat and expulsion from Italy, and of Labienus' victories in Asia; Antony prepares to meet the Parthians but is recalled to Italy by letters from his wife, and on the journey hears of her death. At a later point, after his marriage to Octavia, the threat from Sextus Pompeius arises. All this Shakespeare compacts into the news brought, with an effect of rapidly mounting disaster, to Antony in Cleopatra's court, violently challenging his former mood of serene and triumphant exhilaration and necessitating his immediate departure. Thus, in the first two scenes of the play, Shakespeare uses Plutarch's materials cogently and with strong effect, establishing thereby the major conflict of the play. For a second example: his handling of the events succeeding Actium. Shakespeare abbreviates and rearranges, so that the defeat's importance and finality (and Cleopatra's blame in it) are accentuated; the desertion of Domitius (a minor character in Plutarch, whom Shakespeare converts into the far more important Enobarbus) is moved from before Actium to after it, accentuating Antony's isolation in defeat, and the deserter dies not of illness but of a broken heart; and the one successful sally against Caesar, Shakespeare places after, instead of before, Antony's farewell to his servants and the departure of Hercules—thus making the isolated Antony's last exhilaration of victory the more ironic and pathetic, and yet paradoxically heroic. In each of these examples, Shakespeare is not merely compacting and rearranging for dramatic purposes; he is making great tragedy out of good history.

The same may be said of some of the passages where the verbal echoes and reminiscences are strongest. For example, Enobarbus' famous "The barge she sat in, like a burnished throne . . ." is extremely close to Plutarch's beautiful description of Cleopatra at Cydnus. But where Plutarch is describing a rich and exquisite scene, Shakespeare is creating—by small additions and alterations—the extraordinary power of Cleopatra that draws the people, the winds, and the water longingly after her. By giving the speech of reminiscence to the tough and common-sense Enobarbus, and touching it with his humor and "Roman" sanity, Shakespeare heightens, by contrast, the hyperbolic praise of Cleopatra; and, more, he brings alive the conflicting values of the play. Antony is about to marry Octavia; Enobarbus' speech revives the full and fatal power of Cleopatra, at her first meeting with Antony. Both the re-creation of the speech and its placing in the play throw the greatest light on Shakespeare's artistic intentions.

A reader interested in the other works that contributed to the play (to a much smaller degree, but still interestingly) will find a discussion of them in Kenneth Muir's useful study, Shakespeare's Sources (1957), Vol. I, "Comedies and Tragedies," pp. 201-19.

A NOTE ON THE TEXT

Antony and Cleopatra was entered in the Stationers' Register in May 1608. Though this procedure normally suggested that publication would follow shortly, the play remained, in fact, unprinted until 1623, when it appeared in the "Tragedies" section of the First Folio. This First Folio text of the play is therefore the single authoritative one, and all succeeding editions—including of course the present one—derive from it.

It is widely agreed that the Folio text of Antony and Cleopatra was almost certainly printed directly from Shakespeare's own manuscript, and not from a transcript or prompter's copy. The features of the Folio text that suggest a source in Shakespearean manuscript may be briefly summarized as follows. First, it contains unusual spellings and word usages, some of which seem to be peculiar to Shakespeare, and some of which were, at any rate, archaic by the time the Folio was printed. Second, many of the Folio misprints are of the kind (occurring also in other texts of the plays) that would seem to arise from the individual character of Shakespeare's own handwriting. Third, it lacks all act and scene divisions, except for the opening "Actus Primus, Scoena Prima"; a lack that indicates copy prepared primarily for the theater. Fourth, its stage directions are unusually full and detailed, and are often of the nature of an author's "notes on the text"; for example, "Alarum afar off, as at a sea fight." And lastly, the Folio text contains a passage in the first scene at the monument (IV.xv.12-29) that suggests the direct carrying over of the author's deletions and rewritings (see relevant footnote to text). None of this is absolutely conclusive, but taken together the evidence leaves little doubt that the Folio text was printed directly from Shakespeare's manuscript.

As a text, it is relatively good: it contains many slips but few real difficulties. Its major flaw is the occurrence of very frequent mislineation. This has been silently adjusted in the present edition, as the "correct" lineation is either clear, or, where doubtful, immaterial. The present edition also adds a list of dramatis personae, which is lacking in the Folio; and it adds act and scene divisions, and indications of locality, except for the Folio's opening "Actus Primus, Scoena Prima" which is here translated. It also supplements the existing stage directions. All such additions and supplementations are indicated by brackets. The positions of a few stage directions have been slightly altered; speech prefixes and other abbreviations are expanded, punctuation and spelling are modernized. The spelling of proper names is regularized: for example, "Cleopatra" is given, though in F "Cleopater" also appears; again, "Decretas" is given though in F "Decretus" also appears;

"Canidius" is given for F's "Camidius," "Camidias," and "Camindius"; and so forth. (In a few instances, where the change is more marked, the reading is listed below.) All other departures from the Folio text are listed below, and utilize earlier editorial emendations; the adopted reading is given in boldface type, and then the original reading in roman. As in the footnotes to the text, a line number followed by "s.d." indicates the stage direction that follows the given line, or that interrupts it.

I.i.39 On One 50 whose who

I.ii.4 charge change 41 fertile foretell 64 Alexas [F treats "Alexas" as a speech prefix and gives him the rest of the speech here given to Charmian] 81 Saw Saue 113 [F adds s.d.: "Enter another Messenger"] 114 ho, the news! how the newes? 115 First Attendant 1 Mes 116 Second Attendant 2 Mes 119 Messenger 3 Mes 131 Ho now, Enobarbus! How now Enobarbus 138 occasion an occasion 180 leave loue 185 Hath Haue 194 hair heire

I.iii.25 first fist 43 services Seruicles 82 by my sword by Sword

I.iv.3 Our One 8 Vouchsafed vouchsafe 9 abstract abstracts 44 deared fear'd 46 lackeying lacking 56 wassails Vassailes 58 Pansa Pausa 75 we me

I.v.34 s.d. Antony Caesar 50 dumbled dumbe 61 man mans II.i.16, 18, 38 [F's speech prefix here, as for all speeches in the scene other than those of Pompey and Varrius, is "Mene." But the context clearly indicates that Menas as well as Menecrates speaks in the scene] 21 waned wand 41 warred wan'd

II.ii.121 not so not, say 122 reproof prooffe 172 s.d. Exit Exit omnes. Manet 206 glow gloue 208 gentlewomen Gentlewoman 225 heard hard 234 pow'r breathe powr breath

II.iii.21 afeard a feare 29 away alway

II.v.12 Tawny-finned Tawny fine 43 is 'tis 52 jailer laylor

II.vi.s.d. Agrippa, with Agrippa, Menas with 19 is his 58 composition composon 66 meanings meaning 69 more of more

II.vii.1 their th' their 4 high-colored high Conlord 13 lief liue 36 pyramises Pyramisis 92 then then he 101 grows grow 112 bear beate 125 Splits Spleet's 129 father's Father 130-34 Take . . . out [F gives all to Enobarbus, mistaking (?) speech prefix "Menas" for vocative]

III.i.5 Silius Romaine [so throughout scene] 8 whither whether III.ii.10 Agrippa Ant 16 figures Figure 60 wept weepe

III.iv.9 took't look't 24 yours your 30 Your You 38 has he's III.v.14 world, thou hast would thou hadst 16 the one the other the other

III.vi.13 he there hither; kings of kings King of Kings 74 Comagene Comageat

III.vii.4 it is it it 5 Is't If 23 Toryne Troine 35 muleters Militer 51 Actium Action 69 led leade 72 Canidius Ven

III.x.s.d. Enobarbus Enobarbus and Scarus 14 June Inne 27 he his

III.xi.19 that them 44 He is Hee's 47 seize cease 51 whither whether 58 tow stowe 59 Thy The

III.xiii.10 merèd meered 55 Caesar Caesars 56 embraced embrace 74 deputation disputation 104 errand arrant 162 smite smile 165 discandying discandering 168 sits sets 199 preys on prayes in 201 s.d. Exit Exeunt

IV.ii.1 Domitius Domitian

IV.iii.7 Third Soldier 1

IV.iv.5-8 Nay . . . must be [F gives all to Cleopatra, mistaking (?) speech prefix "Anthony" for vocative, and misplacing (?) it after "help too"] 8 Sooth, la Sooth-law 13 daff't daft 24 Captain Alex

IV.v.1, 3, 6 Soldier Eros

IV.viii.2 gests guests 23 favoring sauoring

IV.xii.4 augurers Auguries 21 spanieled pannelled

IV.xiv.4 towered toward 10 dislimns dislimes 19 Caesar Caesars 104 ho! how?

IV.xv.76 e'en in 94 s.d. off of

V.i.s.d. Maecenas Menas 28, 31 Agrippa Dol 59 live leaue

V.ii.56 varletry Varlotarie 81 little O, th' earth little o' th' earth 87 autumn 'twas Antony it was 104 smites suites 216 Ballad Ballads; o' tune a Tune 228 Cydnus Cidrus 318 awry away 319 s.d. rustling in rustling in and Dolabella

THE TRAGEDY OF ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA

[Dramatis Personae]

MARK ANTONY
OCTAVIUS CAESAR
M. AEMILIUS LEPIDUS } triumvirs

SEXTUS POMPEIUS
DOMITIUS ENOBARBUS
VENTIDIUS
EROS
SCARUS
DECRETAS
DEMETRIUS
PHILO } friends to Antony

CANIDIUS lieutenant general to Antony
SILIUS an officer in Ventidius' army

MAECENAS
AGRIPPA
DOLABELLA
PROCULEIUS } friends to Caesar
THIDIAS
GALLUS

TAURUS lieutenant general to Caesar

MENAS
MENEKRATES } friends to Pompey
VARRIUS

ROMAN OFFICER under Ventidius

AN AMBASSADOR from Antony to Caesar

ALEXAS
MARDIAN
SELEUCUS } attendants on Cleopatra
DIOMEDES

A SOOTHSAYER

A CLOWN

CLEOPATRA Queen of Egypt

OCTAVIA sister to Caesar and wife to Antony

CHARMIAN } attendants on Cleopatra
IRAS

OFFICERS SOLDIERS MESSENGERS
ATTENDANTS

Scene: several parts of the Roman Empire]

A C T I

Scene I. [Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.]

Enter DEMETRIUS and PHILO.

PHILO

Nay, but this dotage of our general's O'erflows the measure. Those his goodly eyes
That o'er the files and musters of the war
Have glowed like plated° Mars, now bend, now turn
The office° and devotion of their view 5
Upon a tawny front.° His captain's heart,

The decorative border shown above was used in the First Folio edition of Shakespeare's plays, 1623.

I.i.4 plated armored 5 office service 6 tawny front dark face (with a pun on the military sense of front, "first line of battle")

Which in the scuffles of great fights hath burst
The buckles on his breast, reneges all temper°
And is become the bellows and the fan
To cool a gypsy's° lust.

Flourish.° Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, her LADIES, the TRAIN, with EUNUCHS fanning her.

Look where they come: 10
Take but good note, and you shall see in him
The triple pillar° of the world transformed
Into a strumpet's fool. Behold and see.

CLEOPATRA

If it be love indeed, tell me how much.

8 reneges all temper gives up all self-control 10 gypsy's gypsies were believed to have come from Egypt, hence "gyptians"; they had a reputation for trickery, sorcery, and lechery 10 s.d. Flourish fanfare of trumpets 12 The triple pillar i.e., one of the triumvirs who ruled the world

ANTONY

There's beggary in the love that can be reckoned. 15

CLEOPATRA

I'll set a bourn^o how far to be beloved.

ANTONY

Then must thou needs find out new heaven, new earth.

Enter a MESSENGER.

MESSENGER

News, my good lord, from Rome.

ANTONY

Grates me! The sum.^o

CLEOPATRA

Nay, hear them, Antony.

Fulvia^o perchance is angry; or who knows 20
If the scarce-bearded Caesar^o have not sent
His pow'rful mandate to you, "Do this, or this;
Take in^o that kingdom, and enfranchise^o that.
Perform't, or else we damn thee."

ANTONY

How,^o my love?

CLEOPATRA

Perchance? Nay, and most like: 25
You must not stay here longer, your dismissal^o
Is come from Caesar; therefore hear it, Antony.
Where's Fulvia's process?^o Caesar's I would say? Both?
Call in the messengers. As I am Egypt's queen,
Thou blushest, Antony, and that blood of thine 30
Is Caesar's homager:^o else so^o thy cheek pays shame
When shrill-tongued Fulvia scolds. The messengers!

ANTONY

Let Rome in Tiber melt, and the wide arch
Of the ranged empire fall! Here is my space,
Kingdoms are clay: our dungy earth alike 35
Feeds beast as man. The nobleness of life
Is to do thus;^o when such a mutual pair
And such a twain can do't, in which I bind,
On pain of punishment, the world to weet^o
We stand up peerless.

CLEOPATRA

Excellent falsehood!

Why did he marry Fulvia, and not love her? 40
I'll seem the fool I am not. Antony
Will be—himself.^o

ANTONY

But stirred^o by Cleopatra.

Now for the love of Love and her soft hours,
Let's not confound^o the time with conference harsh. 45
There's not a minute of our lives should stretch
Without some pleasure now. What sport tonight?

CLEOPATRA

Hear the ambassadors.

ANTONY

Fie, wrangling queen!

Whom everything becomes—to chide, to laugh, 50
To weep; whose every passion fully^o strives
To make itself, in thee, fair and admired.

16 bourn limit 18 Grates . . . sum It's irritating!
Be brief 20 Fulvia Antony's wife 21 scarce-bearded Caesar Octavius, then twenty-three, was some twenty years younger than Antony 23 Take in occupy; enfranchise set free from slavery 24 How a common exclamation, like
"What!" 26 dismissal dismissal 28 process summons
(i.e., to appear in court) 31 homager vassal; else so or else 37 thus perhaps they embrace, but perhaps "thus" alludes to their way of life 39 weet know 43 himself (1) the peerless Antony (2) the fool he is; stirred (1) angered (2) inspired, inflamed 45 confound waste 50 fully absolutely and successfully

No messenger but thine; and all alone

Tonight we'll wander through the streets and note

The qualities of people. Come, my queen;

Last night you did desire it. [To ATTENDANTS.] Speak 55 not to us. Exeunt [ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, with the TRAIN.

DEMETRIUS

Is Caesar with^o Antonius prized so slight?

PHILO

Sir, sometimes, when he is not Antony,
He comes too short of that great property^o
Which still^o should go with Antony.

DEMETRIUS

I am full sorry

That he approves^o the common liar, who 60
Thus speaks of him at Rome; but I will hope
Of better deeds tomorrow. Rest you happy! Exeunt.

[Scene II. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.]

Enter ENOBARBUS, LAMPRIUS, a SOOTHSAYER, RANNIUS, LUCILLIUS, CHARMIAN, IRAS, MARDIAN
the eunuch, and ALEXAS.

CHARMIAN Lord Alexas, sweet Alexas, most anything Alexas, almost most absolute Alexas, where's the soothsayer that you praised so to th' queen? O, that I knew this husband, which, you say, must charge his horns with garlands!^o 5

ALEXAS Soothsayer!

SOOTHSAYER Your will?

CHARMIAN Is this the man? Is't you, sir, that know things?

SOOTHSAYER

In Nature's infinite book of secrecy 10
A little I can read.

ALEXAS Show him your hand.

ENOBARBUS

Bring in the banquet^o quickly: wine enough
Cleopatra's health to drink.

CHARMIAN Good sir, give me good fortune. 15

SOOTHSAYER

I make not, but foresee.

CHARMIAN Pray then, foresee me one.

SOOTHSAYER

You shall be yet far fairer^o than you are.

CHARMIAN He means in flesh.

IRAS No, you shall paint when you are old. 20

CHARMIAN Wrinkles forbid!

ALEXAS Vex not his prescience; be attentive.

CHARMIAN Hush!

SOOTHSAYER

You shall be more loving than beloved.

CHARMIAN I had rather heat my liver^o with drinking. 25

ALEXAS Nay, hear him.

CHARMIAN Good now, some excellent fortune! Let 56 with by 58 property quality 59 still always 60 approves corroborates

I.ii.4-5 charge . . . garlands be a blindly happy cuckold of a husband (charge = load; horns = symbol of a cuckold;
garlands = bridegroom's chaplet, and sign of happy prosperity) 13 banquet light refreshment of fruit and wine 18 fairer more beautiful (though in the next line Charmian pretends to take it another way, "plumper") 25 liver believed to be the seat of sexual desire me be married to three kings in a forenoon and widow them all; let me have a child at fifty, to whom Herod of Jewry° may do homage; find me to marry me with 30 Octavius Caesar, and companion me with my mistress.

SOOTHSAYER

You shall outlive the lady whom you serve.

CHARMIAN O excellent! I love long life better than figs.°

SOOTHSAYER

You have seen and proved a fairer former fortune 35
Than that which is to approach.

CHARMIAN Then belike my children shall have no names.° Prithee, how many boys and wenches must I have?

SOOTHSAYER

If every of your wishes had a womb, 40
And fertile every wish, a million.

CHARMIAN Out, fool! I forgive thee for a witch.°

ALEXAS You think none but your sheets are privy to your wishes.

CHARMIAN Nay, come, tell Iras hers. 45

ALEXAS We'll know all our fortunes.

ENOBARBUS Mine, and most of our fortunes, tonight, shall be—drunk to bed.

IRAS There's a palm presages chastity, if nothing else.

CHARMIAN E'en as the o'erflowing Nilus presageth 50 famine.

IRAS Go, you wild bedfellow, you cannot soothsay.

CHARMIAN Nay, if an oily palm° be not a fruitful prognostication,° I cannot scratch mine ear. Prithee, tell her but a workyday° fortune. 55

SOOTHSAYER Your fortunes are alike.

IRAS But how, but how? Give me particulars.

SOOTHSAYER I have said.

IRAS Am I not an inch of fortune better than she?

CHARMIAN Well, if you were but an inch of fortune 60 better than I, where would you choose it?

IRAS Not in my husband's nose.°

CHARMIAN Our worser thoughts heavens mend!
Alexas—come, his fortune, his fortune! O, let him marry a woman that cannot go,° sweet Isis,° I beseech 65 thee, and let her die too, and give him a worse, and let worse follow worse till the worst of all follow him laughing to his grave, fiftyfold a cuckold! Good Isis, hear me this prayer, though thou deny me a matter of more weight: good Isis, I beseech thee! 70

IRAS Amen. Dear goddess, hear that prayer of the people! For, as it is a heartbreaking to see a handsome man loose-wived,° so it is a deadly sorrow to behold a foul° knave uncuckolded. Therefore, dear Isis, keep decorum,° and fortune him accordingly! 75

CHARMIAN Amen.

29–30 Herod of Jewry i.e., even that blustering tyrant who slaughtered the innocents of Judea 34 figs phallic allusion 37–38 have no names be bastards 42 I . . . witch (1) You have no power of prophecy, so I absolve you from the charge of being a witch (2) A sorcerer like you is allowed to be outspoken 53 oily palm sign of a lascivious nature 53–54 fruitful prognostication omen of fertility 55 workyday commonplace 62 husband's nose bawdy, hence “worser thoughts” in next line 65 go satisfactorily copulate (?) bear children (?); Isis goddess of fertility and the moon 73 loose-wived with a faithless, lecherous wife 74 foul ugly 74–75 keep decorum i.e., act like a just goddess

ALEXAS Lo, now, if it lay in their hands to make me a cuckold, they would make themselves whores but they'd do't.

ENOBARBUS

Hush, here comes Antony.

CHARMIAN Not he, the queen. 80

Enter CLEOPATRA.

CLEOPATRA

Saw you my lord?

ENOBARBUS No, lady.

CLEOPATRA Was he not here?

CHARMIAN No, madam.

CLEOPATRA

He was disposed to mirth; but on the sudden
A Roman thought° hath struck him. Enobarbus!

ENOBARBUS Madam? 85

CLEOPATRA

Seek him, and bring him hither. Where's Alexas?

ALEXAS

Here at your service. My lord approaches.

Enter ANTONY, with a MESSENGER [and ATTENDANTS].

CLEOPATRA

We will not look upon him. Go with us.

Exeunt [all but ANTONY, MESSENGER, and ATTENDANTS].

MESSENGER

Fulvia thy wife first came into the field.

ANTONY

Against my brother Lucius? 90

MESSENGER Ay.

But soon that war had end, and the time's state
Made friends of them, jointing their force 'gainst
Caesar,

Whose better issue° in the war, from Italy

Upon the first encounter drave them.

ANTONY Well, what worst? 95

MESSENGER

The nature of bad news infects the teller.

ANTONY

When it concerns the fool or coward. On.
Things that are past are done, with me. 'Tis thus:
Who tells me true, though in his tale lie death,
I hear him as° he flattered.

MESSENGER Labienus— 100

This is stiff news—hath with his Parthian force
Extended° Asia: from Euphrates°
His conquering banner shook, from Syria
To Lydia and to Ionia,
Whilst—

ANTONY Antony, thou wouldst say—

MESSENGER O, my lord. 105

ANTONY

Speak to me home, mince not the general tongue:°
Name Cleopatra as she is called in Rome;
Rail thou in Fulvia's phrase, and taunt my faults
With such full license as both truth and malice

84 Roman thought (1) thought of Rome (2) serious reflection 94 better issue greater success 100 as as if 102 Extended seized upon; Euphrates accented on first syllable 106 Speak . . . tongue Be blunt, don't diminish what everyone is saying

Have power to utter. O, then we bring forth weeds 110
When our quick winds° lie still, and our ills told us
Is as our earing.° Fare thee well awhile.

MESSENGER

At your noble pleasure. Exit MESSENGER.

ANTONY

From Sicyon, ho, the news! Speak there!

FIRST ATTENDANT

The man from Sicyon—is there such an one? 115

SECOND ATTENDANT

He stays upon your will.°

ANTONY

Let him appear.

These strong Egyptian fetters I must break
Or lose myself in dotage.

Enter another MESSENGER, with a letter.

What are you?

MESSENGER

Fulvia thy wife is dead.

ANTONY

Where died she?

MESSENGER

In Sicyon.

Her length of sickness, with what else more serious
Importeth thee to know, this bears. [Gives a letter.]

ANTONY

Forbear me.° [Exit MESSENGER.]

There's a great spirit gone! Thus did I desire it:
What our contempts doth often hurl from us,
We wish it ours again. The present pleasure,
By revolution low'ring,° does become
The opposite of itself: she's good, being gone;
The hand could° pluck her back that shoved her on.
I must from this enchanting° queen break off:
Ten thousand harms, more than the ills I know, 130
My idleness doth hatch. Ho now, Enobarbus!

Enter ENOBARBUS.

ENOBARBUS What's your pleasure, sir?

ANTONY I must with haste from hence.

ENOBARBUS Why, then we kill all our women. We see how mortal an unkindness is to them. If they suffer 135 our departure, death's the word.

ANTONY I must be gone.

ENOBARBUS Under a compelling occasion let women die.° It were pity to cast them away for nothing, though between them and a great cause they should 140 be esteemed nothing. Cleopatra, catching but the least noise of this, dies instantly; I have seen her die twenty times upon far poorer moment.° I do think there is mettle° in death, which commits some loving act upon her, she hath such a celerity in dying. 145

ANTONY She is cunning past man's thought.

ENOBARBUS Alack, sir, no; her passions are made of nothing but the finest part of pure love. We cannot call her winds and waters sighs and tears; they are greater storms and tempests than almanacs can report. 150

III quick winds lively winds (that ventilate the soil) III–12
our ills . . . earring i.e., when our faults are told to us, it is like plowing (that makes the ground fertile) 116 stays . . . will awaits your pleasure 122 Forbear me leave me 126 By revolution low'ring sinking in our estimation (as the wheel of time turns and spins the present moment downward) 128 could would like to 129 enchanting spellbinding 139 die throughout this speech Enobarbus puns on a second meaning of die, "to experience sexual orgasm" 143 moment cause 144 mettle strength

This cannot be cunning in her; if it be, she makes a show'r of rain as well as Jove.

ANTONY Would I had never seen her!

ENOBARBUS O, sir, you had then left unseen a wonderful piece of work, which not to have been blest 155 withal would have discredited your travel.

ANTONY Fulvia is dead.

ENOBARBUS Sir?

ANTONY Fulvia is dead.

ENOBARBUS Fulvia? 160

ANTONY Dead.

ENOBARBUS Why, sir, give the gods a thankful sacrifice. When it pleaseth their deities to take the wife of a man from him, it shows to man the tailors of the earth; comforting therein, that when old robes are 165 worn out, there are members to make new. If there were no more women but Fulvia, then had you indeed a cut,° and the case to be lamented. This grief is crowned with consolation: your old smock brings forth a new petticoat, and indeed the tears live in an 170 onion that should water this sorrow.

ANTONY

The business she hath broach'd in the state
Cannot endure my absence.

ENOBARBUS And the business you have broached
here cannot be without you; especially that of 175
Cleopatra's, which wholly depends on your abode.°

ANTONY

No more light° answers. Let our° officers
Have notice what we purpose. I shall break°
The cause of our expedience° to the queen
And get her leave to part. For not alone 180
The death of Fulvia, with more urgent touches,°
Do strongly speak to us, but the letters too
Of many our contriving friends° in Rome
Petition us at home. Sextus Pompeius
Hath given the dare to Caesar and commands 185
The empire of the sea. Our slippery people,
Whose love is never linked to the deserver
Till his deserts are past, begin to throw
Pompey the Great and all his dignities
Upon° his son; who, high in name and power, 190
Higher than both in blood and life,° stands up
For the main soldier;° whose quality, going on,
The sides o' th' world may danger.° Much is breeding,
Which, like the courser's hair,° hath yet but life
And not a serpent's poison. Say our pleasure, 195
To such whose places under us require,
Our quick remove from hence.

ENOBARBUS I shall do't. [Exeunt.]

168 cut (1) severe blow (2) pudendum (the entire speech infuses bawdy meanings [e.g., of "tailors" and "members"] into the conceit of the world as a tailor's shop, with the gods as tailors cutting new clothes out of old, replacing old people with new;
the tailor's shop is where men make love and breed) 174–76
And . . . abode bawdy again 177 light indecent; our royal plural 178 break tell 179 expedience (1) haste (2) expedition 181 more urgent touches more pressing reasons 183
many . . . friends many who plot on my behalf 188–90 throw . . . Upon transfer . . . to 191 blood and life courage and energy 191–92 stands . . . soldier sets himself up as the greatest soldier in the world 192–93 whose . . .
danger whose character may, if his fortunes prosper, threaten the structure of the world 194 courser's hair a horse's hair placed in water was thought to turn into a serpent

[Scene III. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.]

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, ALEXAS, and IRAS.

CLEOPATRA

Where is he?

CHARMIAN I did not see him since.°

CLEOPATRA

See where he is, who's with him, what he does:

I did not send you. If you find him sad,°

Say I am dancing; if in mirth, report

That I am sudden sick. Quick, and return. 5

[Exit ALEXAS.]

CHARMIAN

Madam, methinks, if you did love him dearly,

You do not hold the method to enforce

The like from him.

CLEOPATRA What should I do, I do not?

CHARMIAN

In each thing give him way, cross him in nothing.

CLEOPATRA

Thou teachest like a fool: the way to lose him! 10

CHARMIAN

Tempt° him not so too far. I wish, forbear.

In time we hate that which we often fear.

Enter ANTONY.

But here comes Antony.

CLEOPATRA I am sick and sullen.

ANTONY

I am sorry to give breathing° to my purpose—

CLEOPATRA

Help me away, dear Charmian! I shall fall. 15

It cannot be thus long; the sides of nature

Will not sustain it.°

ANTONY Now, my dearest queen—

CLEOPATRA

Pray you, stand farther from me.

ANTONY

What's the matter?

CLEOPATRA

I know by that same eye there's some good news. 20

What, says the married woman you may go?

Would she had never given you leave to come!

Let her not say 'tis I that keep you here.

I have no power upon you; hers you are.

ANTONY

The gods best know—

CLEOPATRA

O, never was there queen

So mightily betrayed! Yet at the first 25

I saw the treasons planted.°

ANTONY

Cleopatra—

CLEOPATRA

Why should I think you can be mine, and true

(Though you in swearing shake the thronèd gods)

Who have been false to Fulvia? Riotous madness,

To be entangled with those mouth-made vows 30

Which break themselves in swearing.°

ANTONY

Most sweet queen—

I.iii.1 since recently 3 sad serious 11 Tempt try 14 breathing utterance 16-17 sides . . . it the human frame will not stand it 26 planted like seeds, and like mines 31 Which . . . swearing which are broken the second they are uttered

CLEOPATRA

Nay, pray you seek no color° for your going,

But bid farewell, and go. When you sued staying,°

Then was the time for words: no going then;

Eternity was in our lips and eyes, 35

Bliss in our brows' bent,° none our parts so poor

But was a race of heaven;° they are so still,

Or thou, the greatest soldier of the world,

Art turned the greatest liar.

ANTONY

How now, lady?

CLEOPATRA

I would I had thy inches; thou shouldst know 40

There were a heart in Egypt.°

ANTONY

Hear me, queen:

The strong necessity of time commands

Our services awhile; but my full heart

Remains in use with you.° Our Italy

Shines o'er with civil swords;° Sextus Pompeius 45

Makes his approaches to the port of Rome;

Equality of two domestic powers

Breed scrupulous faction;° the hated, grown to strength,

Are newly grown to love;° the condemned Pompey,

Rich in his father's honor, creeps apace 50

Into the hearts of such as have not thrived

Upon the present state, whose numbers threaten;

And quietness, grown sick of rest, would purge

By any desperate change.° My more particular,°

And that which most with you should safe my 55

going,

Is Fulvia's death.

CLEOPATRA

Though age from folly could not give me freedom,

It does from childishness. Can Fulvia die?

ANTONY

She's dead, my queen.

Look here, and at thy sovereign leisure read 60

The garboils° she awaked. At the last, best,°

See when and where she died.

CLEOPATRA

O most false love!

Where be the sacred vials° thou shouldst fill

With sorrowful water? Now I see, I see,

In Fulvia's death, how mine received shall be. 65

ANTONY

Quarrel no more, but be prepared to know

The purposes I bear; which are, or cease,

As you shall give th' advice. By the fire

That quickens Nilus' slime,° I go from hence

32 color pretext 33 sued staying pleaded to stay 36 brows' bent eyebrows' arch 37 race of heaven (1) of heavenly flavor (2) of heavenly origin, rooted in heaven 41 Egypt here, as elsewhere, Cleopatra as well as the country 44 in . . . you for you to possess 45 civil swords swords drawn in civil war 47-48 Equality . . . faction Where the rule at home is equally divided between two, parties grow up, quarreling over tiny points 48-49 the hated . . . love The hated begin to be loved as they gain power 53-54 quietness . . . change i.e., a long peace has developed disease in the body politic, which demands to be made well by the blood-letting of war and revolution 54 My more particular my own more personal reason 61 garboils commotion; best i.e., best news of all 63 sacred vials the bottles of tears supposedly placed by Romans in friends' tombs 68-69 By . . . slime by the sun that generates life in the Nile's mud

Thy soldier-servant, making peace or war
As thou affects.^o

CLEOPATRA Cut my lace,^o Charmian, come—
But let it be: I am quickly ill, and well,
So Antony loves.^o

ANTONY My precious queen, forbear,
And give true evidence to his love, which stands^o
An honorable trial.

CLEOPATRA So Fulvia told me.
I prithee turn aside and weep for her;
Then bid adieu to me, and say the tears
Belong to Egypt. Good now, play one scene
Of excellent dissembling, and let it look Like perfect honor.

ANTONY You'll heat my blood: no more. 80

CLEOPATRA You can do better yet; but this is meetly.^o

ANTONY Now by my sword—

CLEOPATRA And target.^o Still he mends.
But this is not the best. Look, prithee, Charmian,
How this Herculean Roman does become
The carriage of his chafe.^o

ANTONY I'll leave you, lady. 85

CLEOPATRA Courteous lord, one word.
Sir, you and I must part, but that's not it:
Sir, you and I have loved, but there's not it:
That you know well. Something it is I would—
O, my oblivion is a very Antony,
And I am all forgotten.^o 90

ANTONY But that your royalty
Holds idleness your subject,^o I should take you
For idleness itself.

CLEOPATRA 'Tis sweating labor
To bear^o such idleness so near the heart
As Cleopatra this. But, sir, forgive me,
Since my becoming^o kill me when they do not
Eye well to you. Your honor calls you hence;
Therefore be deaf to my unpitied folly,
And all the gods go with you. Upon your sword
Sit laurel victory, and smooth success
Be strewed before your feet!

ANTONY Let us go. Come:
Our separation so abides and flies
That thou residing here goes yet with me,
And I hence fleeting here remain with thee.
Away! Exeunt. 105

[Scene IV. Rome. Caesar's house.]

Enter Octavius [CAESAR], reading a letter, LEPIDUS, and their TRAIN.

71 affects choosest; Cut my lace of her tight bodice, i.e.,
"Give me air" 73 So Antony loves (1) if Antony loves me (2) in just such a changeable way does Antony love me
74 stands sustains 81 meetly suitable 82 target small shield
84-85 How . . . chafe how gracefully this descendant of Hercules acts out his rage 90-91 my . . . forgotten (1) My forgetful memory is like Antony and has deserted me (2) My forgetfulness even, like my memory, is consumed by the image of Antony, and my mind is empty of all else 91-92 But that . . . subject if you were not queen over trifling 93-94 labor
To bear pun on childbirth 96 becoming^o graces

CAESAR
You may see, Lepidus, and henceforth know
It is not Caesar's natural vice to hate
Our great competitor.^o From Alexandria
This is the news: he fishes, drinks, and wastes
The lamps of night in revel; is not more manlike 5
Than Cleopatra, nor the queen of Ptolemy^o
More womanly than he; hardly gave audience, or Vouchsafed to think he had partners. You shall find there
A man who is th' abstract of all faults
That all men follow.^o

LEPIDUS I must not think there are 10
Evils enow^o to darken all his goodness;
His faults, in him, seem as the spots of heaven,
More fiery by night's blackness, hereditary
Rather than purchased,^o what he cannot change 15
Than what he chooses.

CAESAR
You are too indulgent. Let's grant it is not Amiss to tumble on the bed of Ptolemy,
To give a kingdom for a mirth, to sit
And keep the turn of tippling^o with a slave,
To reel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet 20
With knaves that smells of sweat. Say this becomes him
(As his composure^o must be rare indeed
Whom these things cannot blemish); yet must Antony
No way excuse his foils^o when we do bear
So great weight in his lightness.^o If he filled 25
His vacancy^o with his voluptuousness,
Full surfeits and the dryness of his bones
Call on him for't.^o But to confound^o such time
That drums him from his sport and speaks as loud
As his own state and ours, 'tis to be chid 30
As we rate boys who, being mature in knowledge,
Pawn their experience to their present pleasure
And so rebel to judgment.^o

Enter a MESSENGER.

LEPIDUS Here's more news.

MESSENGER 100
Thy biddings have been done, and every hour,
Most noble Caesar, shalt thou have report 35
How 'tis abroad. Pompey is strong at sea,
And it appears he is beloved of those
That only have feared Caesar: to the ports
The discontents^o repair, and men's reports
Give him^o much wronged.

CAESAR I should have known no less. 40
It hath been taught us from the primal state^o

I.iv.3 competitor partner 6 queen of Ptolemy Cleopatra had nominally married her brother Ptolemy, who was only a child, at the command of Julius Caesar 9-10 abstract . . .
follow symbol of universal weakness 11 enow enough 14 purchased acquired 19 keep . . . tippling exchange toasts 22 composure character 24 foils stains 24-25 when
. . . lightness when his triviality throws such a burden on us 26 vacancy leisure 27-28 Full . . . for't let him pay the price in sickness and syphilis 28 confound waste 30-33 'tis . . . judgment deserves the considered rebuke we give to boys who, though old enough to know better, give up all the wisdom they have learned in exchange for a moment's pleasure 39 discontents malcontents 40 Give him say he is 41 from
. . . state since governments began

That he which is was wished until he were;°
 And the ebb'd man, ne'er loved till ne'er worth love,
 Comes deared by being lacked. This common body,°
 Like to a vagabond flag° upon the stream, 45
 Goes to and back, lackeying the varying tide,
 To rot itself with motion.

MESSENGER Caesar, I bring thee word
 Menecrates and Menas, famous pirates,
 Makes the sea serve them, which they ear° and wound
 With keels of every kind. Many hot inroads 50
 They make in Italy; the borders maritime
 Lack blood to think on't, and flush° youth revolt.
 No vessel can peep forth but 'tis as soon
 Taken as seen; for Pompey's name strikes more
 Than could his war resisted.

CAESAR Antony, 55
 Leave thy lascivious wassails.° When thou once
 Was beaten from Modena,° where thou slew'st
 Hirtius and Pansa, consuls, at thy heel
 Did famine follow, whom thou fought'st against (Though daintily brought up) with patience more 60
 Than savages could suffer.° Thou didst drink
 The stale° of horses and the gilded° puddle
 Which beasts would cough at. Thy palate then did deign°
 The roughest berry on the rudest hedge.
 Yea, like the stag when snow the pasture sheets, 65
 The barks of trees thou browsed. On the Alps
 It is reported thou didst eat strange flesh,
 Which some did die to look on. And all this
 (It wounds thine honor that I speak it now)
 Was borne so like a soldier that thy cheek 70
 So much as lanked° not.

LEPIDUS 'Tis pity of him.

CAESAR
 Let his shames quickly
 Drive him to Rome. 'Tis time we twain
 Did show ourselves i' th' field; and to that end Assemble we immediate council. Pompey 75
 Thrives in our idleness.

LEPIDUS Tomorrow, Caesar,
 I shall be furnished to inform you rightly
 Both what by sea and land I can be able°
 To front° this present time.

CAESAR Till which encounter,
 It is my business too. Farewell. 80

LEPIDUS
 Farewell, my lord. What you shall know meantime
 Of stirs abroad, I shall beseech you, sir,
 To let me be partaker.

CAESAR Doubt not, sir;
 I knew it for my bond.° Exeunt.

[Scene V. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.]

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

CLEOPATRA Charmian!

CHARMIAN Madam?

CLEOPATRA [Yawning.]

Ha, ha.

Give me to drink mandragora.°

CHARMIAN Why, madam?

CLEOPATRA

That I might sleep out this great gap of time 5

My Antony is away.

CHARMIAN You think of him too much.

CLEOPATRA

O, 'tis treason!

CHARMIAN Madam, I trust, not so.

CLEOPATRA

Thou, eunuch Mardian!

MARDIAN What's your highness' pleasure?

CLEOPATRA

Not now to hear thee sing. I take no pleasure

In aught an eunuch has: 'tis well for thee 10

That, being unseminared,° thy freer thoughts

May not fly forth of Egypt. Hast thou affections?°

MARDIAN Yes, gracious madam.

CLEOPATRA Indeed?

MARDIAN

Not in deed, madam; for I can do nothing 15

But what indeed is honest° to be done:

Yet have I fierce affections, and think

What Venus did with Mars.°

CLEOPATRA

O, Charmian,

Where think'st thou he is now? Stands he, or sits he?

Or does he walk? Or is he on his horse? 20

O happy horse, to bear the weight of Antony!

Do bravely, horse, for wot'st° thou whom thou mov'st?

75 The demi-Atlas° of this earth, the arm

And burgonet° of men. He's speaking now,

Or murmuring, "Where's my serpent of old Nile?" 25

(For so he calls me.) Now I feed myself

With most delicious poison. Think on me,

That am with Phoebus'° amorous pinches black

And wrinkled deep in time. Broad-fronted Caesar,°

80 When thou wast here above the ground, I was 30

A morsel for a monarch; and great Pompey°

Would stand and make his eyes grow in my brow;

There would he anchor his aspect,° and die

With looking on his life.

Enter ALEXAS from Antony.

ALEXAS Sovereign of Egypt, hail!

42 That . . . were that a man in power had supporters until he gained power 44 common body populace 45 vagabond flag aimlessly drifting iris 49 ear plow 52 flush vigorous, lusty 56 wassails revelry 57 Modena accented on second syllable 61 suffer summon up 62 stale urine; gilded i.e., yellow with scum 63 deign not disdain 71 lanked thinned 78 I . . . able my powers can be 79 front confront 84 bond duty

I.v.4 mandragora mandrake (a strong narcotic) 11 unseminared unsexed 12 affections passions 16 honest chaste 18 Venus . . . Mars Venus, goddess of love, and Mars, god of war, were lovers 22 wot'st knowest 23 demi-Atlas the Titan Atlas supported the heavens on his shoulders 24 burgonet visored helmet 28 Phoebus' the sun's 29 Broad-fronted Caesar wide-browed Caesar (i.e., Julius Caesar, whose mistress she had been in youth) 31 great Pompey Cneius Pompeius (son of Pompey the Great) 33 aspect gaze (accented on second syllable)

CLEOPATRA

How much unlike art thou Mark Antony!
Yet, coming from him, that great med'cine hath
With his tinct gilded thee.^o
How goes it with my brave Mark Antony?

35

ALEXAS

Last thing he did, dear queen,
He kissed—the last of many doubled kisses—
This orient^o pearl. His speech sticks in my heart.

40

CLEOPATRA

Mine ear must pluck it thence.

ALEXAS

"Good friend," quoth he,

"Say the firm^o Roman to great Egypt sends
This treasure of an oyster; at whose foot,
To mend the petty present, I will piece^o
Her opulent throne with kingdoms. All the East (Say thou) shall call her mistress." So he nodded,
And soberly did mount an arm-gaunt^o steed,
Who neighed so high that what I would have spoke
Was beastly dumb^o by him.

45

CLEOPATRA

What was he, sad or merry? 50

ALEXAS

Like to the time o' th' year between the extremes
Of hot and cold, he was nor sad nor merry.

CLEOPATRA

O well-divided disposition!^o Note him,
Note him, good Charmian, 'tis the man;^o but note him.
He was not sad, for he would shine on those
That make their looks by his; he was not merry,
Which seemed to tell them his remembrance lay
In Egypt with his joy; but between both.
O heavenly mingle! Be'st thou sad or merry,
The violence of either thee becomes,
So does it no man else.—Met'st thou my posts?^o

55

60

ALEXAS

Ay, madam, twenty several^o messengers.
Why do you send so thick?

CLEOPATRA

Who's born that day

When I forgot to send to Antony
Shall die a beggar. Ink and paper, Charmian.
Welcome, my good Alexas. Did I, Charmian, Ever love Caesar so?

65

CHARMIAN

O, that brave^o Caesar!

CLEOPATRA

Be choked with such another emphasis!^o
Say "the brave Antony."

CHARMIAN

The valiant Caesar!

CLEOPATRA

By Isis, I will give thee bloody teeth
If thou with Caesar paragon^o again
My man of men.

70

CHARMIAN

By your most gracious pardon,
I sing but after you.

CLEOPATRA

My salad days,

When I was green^o in judgment, cold in blood,
To say as I said then. But come, away,
Get me ink and paper.
He shall have every day a several greeting,
Or I'll unpeople Egypt.

75

Exeunt.

[A C T I I]

[Scene I. Messina. Pompey's house.]

Enter POMPEY, MENECRATES, and MENAS, in warlike manner.

POMPEY

If the great gods be just, they shall^o assist
The deeds of justest men.

MENECRATES

Know, worthy Pompey,
That what they do delay, they not deny.^o

POMPEY

Whiles we are suitors to their throne, decays
The thing we sue^o for.

MENECRATES

We, ignorant of ourselves,
Beg often our own harms, which the wise pow'rs
Deny us for our good; so find we profit
By losing of our prayers.

5

POMPEY

I shall do well:

The people love me, and the sea is mine;
My powers are crescent,^o and my auguring^o hope
Says it will come to th' full. Mark Antony
In Egypt sits at dinner, and will make
No wars without doors.^o Caesar gets money where He loses hearts. Lepidus flatters both,
Of both is flattered, but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him.

10

15

MENAS

Caesar and Lepidus

Are in the field;^o a mighty strength they carry.

POMPEY

Where have you this? 'Tis false.

MENAS

From Silvius, sir.

POMPEY

He dreams: I know they are in Rome together,
Looking for Antony. But all the charms^o of love,
Salt^o Cleopatra, soften thy waned^o lip!
Let witchcraft join with beauty, lust with both!
Tie up the libertine in a field of feasts,
Keep his brain fuming. Epicurean cooks
Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite,
That sleep and feeding may prorogue^o his honor
Even till a Lethe'd^o dullness—

20

25

Enter VARRIUS.

How now, Varrius?

36-37 that . . . thee alchemists long tried to make or discover the "philosopher's stone" or elixir vitae—known as the "great medicine" and the "tincture"—which had the property of turning base metals to gold, and of restoring youth 41 orient eastern, bright 43 firm constant 45 piece add to 48 arm-gaunt battleworn (?) battle-hungry (?) 50 beastly dumb^o silenced by a beast 53 disposition temperament 54 'tis the man that's exactly what he is like 61 posts messengers 62 several separate 67 brave splendid, fine 68 emphasis forceful statement 71 paragon compare

74 green young, silly

II.i.1 shall surely must 3 what . . . deny i.e., delay in performing does not necessarily imply a refusal 5 sue beg 10 crescent growing (i.e., waxing like the moon—hence the following image); auguring prophesying 13 without doors out-of-doors (contrasted with the indoor "wars" of love) 17 in the field ready for battle 20 charms spells 21 Salt lustful; waned pale and thin (like the old moon) 26 prorogue suspend 27 Lethe'd oblivious (from Lethe, a river in Hades; those who drank of the water forgot all)

VARRIUS

This is most certain, that I shall deliver:
Mark Antony is every hour in Rome
Expected. Since he went from Egypt 'tis
A space for farther travel.^o 30

POMPEY I could have given less matter

A better ear. Menas, I did not think
This amorous surfeiter would have donned his helm
For such a petty war. His soldiership
Is twice the other twain; but let us rear
The higher our opinion,^o that our stirring
Can from the lap of Egypt's widow pluck
The ne'er-lust-wearied Antony.

MENAS I cannot hope^o

Caesar and Antony shall well greet^o together;
His wife that's dead did trespasses to Caesar;
His brother warred upon him—although I think
Not moved^o by Antony. 40

POMPEY I know not, Menas,
How lesser enmities may give way to greater.
Were't not that we stand up against them all,
'Twere pregnant they should square between themselves,^o 45

For they have entertained cause enough
To draw their swords; but how the fear of us
May cement^o their divisions and bind up
The petty difference, we yet not know.
Be't as our gods will have't! It only stands
Our lives upon,^o to use our strongest hands.
Come, Menas. Exeunt.

[Scene II. Rome. Lepidus' house.]

Enter ENOBARBUS and LEPIDUS.

LEPIDUS

Good Enobarbus, 'tis a worthy deed,
And shall become you well, to entreat your captain
To soft and gentle speech.

ENOBARBUS I shall entreat him

To answer like himself: if Caesar move^o him,
Let Antony look over Caesar's head
And speak as loud as Mars. By Jupiter,
Were I the wearer of Antonio's beard,
I would not shave't today!^o 5

LEPIDUS 'Tis not a time
For private stomaching.^oENOBARBUS Every time
Serves for the matter that is then born in't. 10LEPIDUS
But small to greater matters must give way.

30-31 'tis . . . travel there has been time for an even longer journey 35-36 let . . . opinion let us think all the better of ourselves 38 hope believe 39 well greet meet amiably 42 moved encouraged 44-45 Were't . . . themselves Had we not challenged them (and thus united them) they would probably have quarreled among themselves 48 cement accented on first syllable 50-51 It . . . upon only, it is a matter of life and death to us all

II.ii.4 move irritate 8 I . . . today (1) I would not do him the courtesy of clean-shaving (2) I would not remove the temptation of plucking it (an incitement to fight) 9 private stomaching personal resentment

ENOBARBUS

Not if the small come first.

LEPIDUS Your speech is passion;

But pray you stir no embers up. Here comes
The noble Antony.

Enter ANTONY and VENTIDIUS [in conversation].

ENOBARBUS And yonder, Caesar.

Enter [from the other side] CAESAR, MAECENAS, and AGRIPPA [in conversation]. 35

ANTONY

If we compose^o well here, to Parthia. 15
Hark, Ventidius.

CAESAR I do not know,

Maecenas; ask Agrippa.

LEPIDUS

Noble friends,
That which combined us was most great, and let not
A leaner action rend us. What's amiss,
May it be gently heard. When we debate 20
Our trivial difference loud, we do commit
Murder in healing wounds. Then, noble partners,
The rather for I earnestly beseech,
Touch you the sourest points with sweetest terms,
Nor curstness grow to th' matter.^o

ANTONY 'Tis spoken well. 25

Were we before our armies, and to fight,
I should do thus.^o Flourish.

CAESAR

Welcome to Rome.

ANTONY

Thank you.

CAESAR

Sit.

ANTONY

Sit, sir.

CAESAR

Nay then.

[They sit.]

ANTONY

I learn you take things ill which are not so,
Or being, concern you not.

CAESAR

I must be laughed at 30
If, or for nothing or^o a little, I

Should say myself offended, and with you Chiefly i' th' world; more laughed at that I should Once name you derogately,^o when to sound your name

It not concerned me.

ANTONY

My being in Egypt, Caesar, 35
What was't to you?

CAESAR

No more than my residing here at Rome
Might be to you in Egypt: yet if you there
Did practice on my state,^o your being in Egypt
Might be my question.

ANTONY

How intend you? Practiced? 40

CAESAR

You may be pleased to catch at mine intent
By what did here befall me. Your wife and brother

15 compose come to an agreement 25 Nor . . . matter and do not let ill temper be added to the problem at hand 27 thus perhaps Antony embraces Caesar, but perhaps he means his words would be temperate in any circumstance 31 or . . . or either . . . or 34 derogately disparagingly 39 practice . . . state plot against my rule

Made wars upon me, and their contestation
Was theme for you;° you were the word of war.°

ANTONY

You do mistake your business: my brother never 45
Did urge me° in his act. I did inquire it
And have my learning from some true reports°
That drew their swords with you. Did he not rather Discredit my authority with yours,
And make the wars alike against my stomach,° 50
Having alike your cause? Of this, my letters
Before did satisfy you. If you'll patch a quarrel,
As matter whole you have to make it with,°
It must not be with this.

CAESAR

You praise yourself
By laying defects of judgment to me, but 55
You patched up your excuses.

ANTONY

Not so, not so:
I know you could not lack, I am certain on't,
Very necessity of this thought, that I,
Your partner in the cause 'gainst which he fought,
Could not with graceful eyes attend° those wars 60
Which fronted° mine own peace. As for my wife,
I would you had her spirit in such another;°
The third o' th' world is yours, which with a snaffle
You may pace° easy, but not such a wife.

ENOBARBUS Would we had all such wives, that the 65 men might go to wars with the women.

ANTONY

So much uncurbable, her garboils, Caesar,
Made out of her impatience—which not wanted
Shrewdness of policy too—I grieving grant
Did you too much disquiet: for that you must 70
But° say, I could not help it.

CAESAR

I wrote to you;
When rioting in Alexandria you
Did pocket up my letters, and with taunts
Did gibe my missive° out of audience.

ANTONY

Sir,
He fell upon me, ere admitted, then: 75
Three kings I had newly feasted, and did want
Of what I was i' th' morning; but next day
I told him of myself,° which was as much
As to have asked him pardon. Let this fellow
Be nothing of° our strife: if we contend, 80
Out of our question wipe him.

CAESAR

You have broken
The article° of your oath, which you shall never Have tongue to charge me with.

LEPIDUS

Soft,° Caesar!

ANTONY

No,

Lepidus; let him speak.
The honor is sacred which he talks on now, 85
Supposing that I lacked it. But on, Caesar,
The article of my oath—

44 Was . . . you had you as root cause (?) provided you with a pretext (?); you . . . war The war was about you 46 Did urge me made use of my name 47 reports reporters 50 stomach desire 52–53 If . . . with if you want to fabricate a quarrel out of odds and ends, though in fact you have more substantial materials for one 60 with . . . attend look favorably on 61 fronted attacked 62 I . . . another I wish you were married to just such a wife 64 pace train (used of horses) 71 But only 74 missive messenger 78 myself my condition 80 Be nothing of have no place in 82 article precise terms 83 Soft be careful

CAESAR

To lend me arms and aid when I required them,
The which you both denied.

ANTONY

Neglected rather:

And then when poisonèd hours had bound me up 90
From mine own knowledge. As nearly as I may,
I'll play the penitent to you: but mine honesty
Shall not make poor my greatness, nor my power
Work without it.° Truth is, that Fulvia,
To have me out of Egypt, made wars here, 95
For which myself, the ignorant motive, do
So far ask pardon as befits mine honor
To stoop in such a case.

LEPIDUS

'Tis noble spoken.

MAECENAS

If it might please you, to enforce no further
The griefs° between ye: to forget them quite 100
Were to remember that the present need
Speaks to atone you.°

LEPIDUS

Worthily spoken, Maecenas.

ENOBARBUS Of, if you borrow one another's love for the instant, you may, when you hear no more words of Pompey, return it again: you shall have time 105 to wrangle in when you have nothing else to do.

ANTONY

Thou art a soldier only; speak no more.

ENOBARBUS That truth should be silent I had almost forgot.

ANTONY

You wrong this presence;° therefore speak no more. 110

ENOBARBUS Go to, then; your considerate stone.°

CAESAR

I do not much dislike the matter, but
The manner of his speech; for't cannot be
We shall remain in friendship, our conditions°
So diff'ring in their acts. Yet if I knew 115
What hoop should hold us stanch, from edge to edge
O' th' world I would pursue it.

AGRIPPA

Give me leave, Caesar.

CAESAR

Speak, Agrippa.

AGRIPPA

Thou hast a sister by the mother's side,°
Admired Octavia: great Mark Antony 120
Is now a widower.

CAESAR

Say not so, Agrippa:

If Cleopatra heard you, your reproof
Were well deserved of rashness.°

ANTONY

I am not married, Caesar: let me hear
Agrippa further speak. 125

AGRIPPA

To hold you in perpetual amity,
To make you brothers, and to knit your hearts
With an unslipping knot, take Antony
Octavia to his wife; whose beauty claims

94 it honesty (?) 100 griefs grievances 102 Speaks . . . you demands your reconciliation 110 presence dignified company 111 your considerate stone I will be silent as stone about what I am thinking 114 conditions temperaments 119 by . . . side i.e., half-sister (though actually Octavia was a full sister of Octavius) 122–23 your . . . rashness You would get a deserved reproof for being foolhardy

No worse a husband than the best of men;
 Whose virtue and whose general graces speak
 That which none else can utter. By this marriage
 All little jealousies,^o which now seem great,
 And all great fears, which now import^o their dangers,
 Would then be nothing: truths would be tales,
 Where now half-tales be truths:^o her love to both
 Would each to other, and all loves to both,
 Draw after her. Pardon what I have spoke;
 For 'tis a studied, not a present^o thought,
 By duty ruminated.

ANTONY Will Caesar speak?

CAESAR
 Not till he hears how Antony is touched^o
 With what is spoke already.

ANTONY What power is in Agrippa,
 If I would say, "Agrippa, be it so,"
 To make this good?

CAESAR The power of Caesar, and
 His power unto Octavia.

ANTONY May I never
 To this good purpose, that so fairly shows,
 Dream of impediment! Let me have thy hand.
 Further this act of grace,^o and from this hour
 The heart of brothers govern in our loves
 And sway our great designs.

CAESAR There's my hand.
 A sister I bequeath you, whom no brother
 Did ever love so dearly. Let her live
 To join our kingdoms and our hearts; and never Fly off our loves^o again.

LEPIDUS Happily, amen.

ANTONY
 I did not think to draw my sword 'gainst Pompey,
 For he hath laid strange courtesies and great
 Of late upon me. I must thank him only,
 Lest my remembrance^o suffer ill report:
 At heel of that,^o defy him.

LEPIDUS Time calls upon's.
 Of us must Pompey presently^o be sought,
 Or else he seeks out us.

ANTONY Where lies he?

CAESAR
 About the Mount Mesena.^o

ANTONY
 What is his strength by land?

CAESAR
 Great and increasing; but by sea
 He is an absolute master.

ANTONY So is the fame.^o
 Would we had spoke together! Haste we for it,
 Yet, ere we put ourselves in arms, dispatch we
 The business we have talked of.

CAESAR With most gladness;
 And do invite you to my sister's view,
 Whither straight I'll lead you.

133 jealousies suspicions 134 import bring 135-36 truths would . . . truths Things true would be disbelieved, whereas now half-truths are believed 139 present momentary 141 touched affected 148 grace reconciliation 154 Fly . . .
loves May our love for each other desert us 158 remem- brance memory (of kindnesses done) 159 At . . . that immediately after 160 presently at once 162 Mesena
 Misenum, an Italian port 165 fame report

130 ANTONY Let us, Lepidus,
 Not lack your company. 170

LEPIDUS Noble Antony,
 Not sickness should detain me.

Flourish. Exit [all but] ENOBARBUS, AGRIPPA, MAECENAS.

MAECENAS Welcome from Egypt, sir.

ENOBARBUS Half the heart^o of Caesar, worthy Maecenas. My honorable friend, Agrippa. 175

AGRIPPA Good Enobarbus.

MAECENAS We have cause to be glad that matters are so well digested.^o You stayed well by't^o in Egypt.

ENOBARBUS Ay, sir, we did sleep day out of countenance^o and made the night light with drinking. 180

MAECENAS Eight wild boars roasted whole at a breakfast, and but twelve persons there; is this true?

ENOBARBUS This was but as a fly by^o an eagle: we had much more monstrous matter of feast, which worthily deserved noting. 185

MAECENAS She's a most triumphant lady, if report be square^o to her.

ENOBARBUS When she first met Mark Antony, she pursed up^o his heart, upon the river of Cydnus.

AGRIPPA There she appeared indeed; or my reporter 190
 devised^o well for her.

ENOBARBUS

150 I will tell you.

The barge she sat in, like a burnished throne,
 Burned on the water: the poop was beaten gold;
 Purple the sails, and so perfumèd that
 The winds were lovesick with them; the oars were silver,

Which to the tune of flutes kept stroke and made
 The water which they beat to follow faster,
 As amorous of their strokes. For her own person,
 It beggared all description: she did lie 200

In her pavilion, cloth-of-gold of tissue,^o
 O'erpicturing that Venus where we see
 The fancy outwork nature:^o on each side her
 Stood pretty dimpled boys, like smiling Cupids,
 With divers-colored fans, whose wind did seem 205
 To glow the delicate cheeks which they did cool,
 And what they undid did.^o

AGRIPPA O, rare for Antony.

ENOBARBUS

Her gentlewomen, like the Nereides,^o
 So many mermaids, tended her i' th' eyes,
 And made their bends adornings.^o At the helm 210
 A seeming mermaid steers: the silken tackle
 Swell with the touches of those flower-soft hands,

174 Half the heart dear friend (though possibly the idea is that Caesar is equally devoted to Agrippa and to Maecenas) 178 digested digested; stayed well by't "lived it up."
179-80 we . . . countenance We disconcerted the day by sleeping through it 183 by compared with 187 square just, true 189 pursed up put in her purse, took possession of 191 devised invented 201 cloth-of-gold of tissue a rich fabric interwoven with gold threads 202-03 O'erpicturing
 . . . nature surpassing that painting of Venus where we can see the imagination excelling nature itself in creative ability 207 And . . . did i.e., and seemed to produce the warm color they were cooling 208 Nereides sea nymphs 209-10 tended . . . adornings stood before her and waited on her, their bowing movements being works of art in themselves

That yarely frame the office.^o From the barge
A strange invisible perfume hits the sense
Of the adjacent wharfs.^o The city cast
Her people out upon her; and Antony,
Enthroned i' th' marketplace, did sit alone,
Whistling to th' air; which, but for vacancy,^o
Had gone to gaze on Cleopatra too,
And made a gap in nature.

AGRIPPA Rare Egyptian!

ENOBARBUS

Upon her landing, Antony sent to her,
Invited her to supper. She replied,
It should be better he became her guest;
Which she entreated. Our courteous Antony,
Whom ne'er the word of "No" woman heard speak, 225
Being barbered ten times o'er, goes to the feast,
And, for his ordinary,^o pays his heart
For what his eyes eat only.

AGRIPPA Royal wench!
She made great Caesar lay his sword to bed;
He plowed her, and she cropped.^o

ENOBARBUS I saw her once
Hop forty paces through the public street;
And having lost her breath, she spoke, and panted,
That^o she did make defect perfection,
And, breathless, pow'r breathe forth.

MAECENAS

Now Antony must leave her utterly.

ENOBARBUS

Never; he will not:
Age cannot wither her, nor custom stale
Her infinite variety: other women cloy
The appetites they feed, but she makes hungry
Where most she satisfies; for vilest things
Become themselves^o in her, that the holy priests
Bless her when she is riggish.^o

MAECENAS

If beauty, wisdom, modesty, can settle
The heart of Antony, Octavia is
A blessed lottery^o to him.

AGRIPPA Let us go.

Good Enobarbus, make yourself my guest
Whilst you abide here.

ENOBARBUS Humbly, sir, I thank you. Exeunt.

[Scene III. Rome. Caesar's house.]

Enter ANTONY, CAESAR, OCTAVIA between them.

ANTONY

The world and my great office will sometimes
Divide me from your bosom.

OCTAVIA

All which time
Before the gods my knee shall bow my prayers
To them for you.

ANTONY

Good night, sir. My Octavia,
Read not my blemishes in the world's report:

213 yarely . . . office deftly perform the task 215 wharfs banks 218 but for vacancy i.e., but for the law that nature abhors a vacuum 227 ordinary public dinner in a tavern 230 she cropped i.e., had a child (Caesarion) 233 That so that 241 Become themselves are becoming 242 riggish wanton
245 lottery allotment

I have not kept my square,^o but that to come Shall all be done by th' rule. Good night, dear lady.

215 Good night, sir.

CAESAR Good night. Exit, [with OCTAVIA].

Enter SOOTHSAYER.

ANTONY

Now, sirrah: you do wish yourself in Egypt?

10

SOOTHSAYER

Would I had never come from thence, nor you thither.

ANTONY

If you can, your reason?

SOOTHSAYER

I see it in my motion,^o have it not in my tongue,
But yet hie you to Egypt again.

ANTONY

Say to me,
Whose fortunes shall rise higher, Caesar's, or mine? 15

SOOTHSAYER Caesar's.

Therefore, O Antony, stay not by his side.
Thy daemon,^o that thy spirit which keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable, 20
Where Caesar's is not. But near him thy angel Becomes afeard, as being o'erpow'ed: therefore
Make space enough between you.

ANTONY

Speak this no more.

SOOTHSAYER

235 To none but thee; no more but when to thee.

If thou dost play with him at any game,
Thou art sure to lose; and of^o that natural luck 25
He beats thee 'gainst the odds. Thy luster thickens^o
When he shines by: I say again, thy spirit
Is all afraid to govern thee near him;
But he away, 'tis noble.

240

ANTONY

Get thee gone.
Say to Ventidius I would speak with him. 30

Exit [SOOTHSAYER].

He shall to Parthia. Be it art or hap,^o
He hath spoken true. The very dice obey him,
And in our sports my better cunning faints
Under his chance:^o if we draw lots, he speeds;^o
His cocks do win the battle still^o of mine 35
When it is all to naught,^o and his quails ever
Beat mine, inhooped,^o at odds. I will to Egypt:
And though I make this marriage for my peace,
I' th' East my pleasure lies.

Enter VENTIDIUS.

O, come, Ventidius,

You must to Parthia. Your commission's ready: 40
Follow me, and receive't. Exeunt.

[Scene IV. Rome. A street.]

Enter LEPIDUS, MAECENAS, and AGRIPPA.

II.iii.6 kept my square kept straight 13 motion mind 18
daemon guardian angel 25 of by 26 thickens dims 31 art or hap skill or chance 34 chance luck; speeds is successful 35 still always 36 it . . . naught the odds are all to nothing (against him) 37 inhooped confined within a ring

LEPIDUS

Trouble yourselves no further: pray you, hasten
Your generals after.

AGRIPPA

Sir, Mark Antony

Will e'en but kiss Octavia, and we'll follow.

LEPIDUS

Till I shall see you in your soldier's dress,
Which will become you both, farewell.

MAECENAS

We shall,

As I conceive^o the journey, be at Mount^o
Before you, Lepidus.

LEPIDUS

Your way is shorter;

My purposes do draw me much about:^o

You'll win two days upon me.

BOTH

Sir, good success.

LEPIDUS

Farewell.

Exeunt. 10

[Scene V. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.]

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

CLEOPATRA

Give me some music: music, moody^o food
Of us that trade in love.

OMNES^o

The music, ho!

Enter MARDIAN the eunuch.

CLEOPATRA

Let it alone, let's to billiards: come, Charmian.

CHARMIAN

My arm is sore; best play with Mardian.

CLEOPATRA

As well a woman with an eunuch played
As with a woman. Come, you'll play with me, sir?

MARDIAN As well as I can, madam.

CLEOPATRA

And when good will is showed, though't come too short,

The actor may plead pardon. I'll none now.

Give me mine angle,^o we'll to th' river: there,

My music playing far off, I will betray

Tawny-finned fishes. My bended hook shall pierce

Their slimy jaws; and as I draw them up,

I'll think them every one an Antony,

And say, "Ah, ha! y' are caught!"

CHARMIAN

'Twas merry when 15

You wagered on your angling, when your diver

Did hang a salt^o fish on his hook, which he

With fervency drew up.

CLEOPATRA

That time—O times!—

I laughed him out of patience; and that night

I laughed him into patience; and next morn,

Ere the ninth hour, I drunk him to his bed;

Then put my tires^o and mantles on him, whilst

I wore his sword Philippan.^o

Enter a MESSENGER.

O, from Italy!

II.iv.6 conceive understand; Mount i.e., Misenum 8 My

. . . about My plans take me the long way around

II.v.1 moody melancholy (with pun on musical mood or key)

2 Omnes all (Latin) 10 angle fishing tackle 17 salt dried

22 tires headdresses 23 Philippan Antony's sword is named after Philippi, where he conquered Brutus and Cassius

Ram thou thy fruitful tidings in mine ears,
That long time have been barren.

MESSENGER

Madam, madam— 25

CLEOPATRA

Antonio's dead! If thou say so, villain,
Thou kill'st thy mistress: but well and free,
If thou so yield him. There is gold and here
My bluest veins to kiss, a hand that kings
Have lipped, and trembled kissing.

30

MESSENGER

First, madam, he is well.

CLEOPATRA

Why, there's more gold.

But, sirrah, mark, we use

To say the dead are well:^o bring it to that,

The gold I give thee will I melt and pour

Down thy ill-uttering throat.

35

MESSENGER

Good madam, hear me.

CLEOPATRA

Well, go to, I will:

But there's no goodness in thy face if Antony

Be free and healthful; so tart a favor^o

To trumpet such good tidings? If not well,

Thou shouldst come like a Fury crowned with snakes, 40

Not like a formal^o man.

MESSENGER

Will't please you hear me?

CLEOPATRA

I have a mind to strike thee ere thou speak'st:

Yet, if thou say Antony lives, is well,

Or friends with Caesar, or not captive to him,

I'll set thee in a shower of gold, and hail

Rich pearls upon thee.

45

MESSENGER

Madam, he's well.

CLEOPATRA

Well said.

MESSENGER

And friends with Caesar.

CLEOPATRA

Th' art an honest man.

MESSENGER

Caesar and he are greater friends than ever.

CLEOPATRA

Make thee a fortune from me.

MESSENGER

But yet, madam—

CLEOPATRA

I do not like "But yet"; it does allay

The good precedence:^o fie upon "But yet";

"But yet" is as a jailer to bring forth

Some monstrous malefactor. Prithee, friend,

Pour out the pack of matter to mine ear,

The good and bad together: he's friends with Caesar, 55

In state of health, thou say'st, and thou say'st, free.

MESSENGER

Free, madam, no: I made no such report;

He's bound unto Octavia.

CLEOPATRA

For what good turn?^o

MESSENGER

For the best turn i' th' bed.

CLEOPATRA

I am pale, Charmian.

MESSENGER

Madam, he's married to Octavia.

60

33 well i.e., in having gone to heaven 38 tart a favor sour an expression 41 formal (1) sane (2) normally shaped 50–51 allay . . . precedence qualify the good news before it 58 For . . . turn she takes his "bound" in the sense "indebted to"; he then takes up her "turn," or "act," in a sexual sense

CLEOPATRA

The most infectious pestilence upon thee!

Strikes him down.

MESSENGER

Good madam, patience.

CLEOPATRA What say you? Strikes him. Hence,

Horrible villain! Or I'll spurn° thine eyes

Like balls before me: I'll unhair thy head,

*She hales him up and down.*Thou shalt be whipped with wire and stewed in brine, 65
Smarting in ling'ring pickle.°

MESSENGER Gracious madam,

I that do bring the news made not the match.

CLEOPATRA

Say 'tis not so, a province I will give thee,

And make thy fortunes proud: the blow thou hadst

Shall make thy peace for moving me to rage, 70

And I will boot thee° with what gift beside

Thy modesty° can beg.

MESSENGER He's married, madam.

CLEOPATRA

Rogue, thou hast lived too long. Draw a knife.

MESSENGER Nay, then I'll run.

What mean you, madam? I have made no fault. Exit.

CHARMIAN

Good madam, keep yourself within yourself, 75

The man is innocent.

CLEOPATRA

Some innocents 'scape not the thunderbolt.

Melt Egypt into Nile, and kindly creatures

Turn all to serpents! Call the slave again:

Though I am mad, I will not bite him. Call! 80

CHARMIAN

He is afraid to come.

CLEOPATRA I will not hurt him.

[Exit CHARMIAN.]

These hands do lack nobility, that they strike

A meaner than myself; since I myself

Have given myself the cause.°

Enter [CHARMIAN and] the MESSENGER again.

Come hither, sir.

Though it be honest, it is never good 85

To bring bad news: give to a gracious message

An host of tongues, but let ill tidings tell

Themselves, when they be felt.

MESSENGER I have done my duty.

CLEOPATRA

Is he married?

I cannot hate thee worser than I do 90

If thou again say, "Yes."

MESSENGER He's married, madam.

CLEOPATRA

The gods confound° thee! Dost thou hold there still?

MESSENGER

Should I lie, madam?

CLEOPATRA

O, I would thou didst,

63 spurn kick 66 pickle pickling solution (of painful salt or acid) 71 boot thee compensate you 72 modesty humble rank 84 the cause i.e., by loving Antony 92 confound destroy

So° half my Egypt were submerged and made

A cistern for scaled snakes! Go get thee hence; 95

Hadst thou Narcissus in thy face,° to me

Thou wouldst appear most ugly. He is married?

MESSENGER

I crave your highness' pardon.

CLEOPATRA

He is married?

MESSENGER

Take no offense that I would not offend you:°

To punish me for what you make me do 100

Seems much unequal:° he's married to Octavia.

CLEOPATRA

O, that his fault should make a knave of thee,

That art not what th' art sure of!° Get thee hence,

The merchandise which thou hast brought from Rome

Are all too dear for me. Lie they upon thy hand, 105

And be undone° by 'em! [Exit MESSENGER.]

CHARMIAN

Good your highness, patience.

CLEOPATRA

In praising Antony I have dispraised Caesar.

CHARMIAN

Many times, madam.

CLEOPATRA

I am paid for't now.

Lead me from hence;

I faint. O, Iras, Charmian! 'Tis no matter. 110

Go to the fellow, good Alexas; bid him

Report the feature° of Octavia: her years,

Her inclination,° let him not leave out

The color of her hair. Bring me word quickly.

[Exit ALEXAS.]

Let him forever go!—let him not!—Charmian, 115

Though he be painted one way like a Gorgon,

The other way's a Mars.° [To MARDIAN.] Bid you

Alexas

Bring me word how tall she is.—Pity me, Charmian,

But do not speak to me. Lead me to my chamber.

Exeunt.[Scene VI. Near Misenum.]

Flourish. Enter POMPEY [and MENAS] at one door, with drum and trumpet: at another, CAESAR, LEPIDUS, ANTONY, ENOBARBUS, MAECENAS, AGRIPPA, with SOLDIERS marching.

POMPEY

Your hostages I have, so have you mine;

And we shall talk before we fight.

CAESAR

Most meet°

That first we come to words, and therefore have we

Our written purposes before us sent;

Which, if thou hast considered, let us know 5

If 'twill tie up thy discontented sword

94 So even if 96 Hadst . . . face even if you were as handsome as Narcissus (Greek youth of great beauty) 99 Take . . . you Do not be angry at me for hesitating to tell you what I know will anger you 101 unequal unjust 103 That . . . of who are not really as wicked as the news you insist on 106 undone bankrupted 112 feature appearance (not limited to facial characteristics) 113 inclination character 116–17 Though . . . Mars alluding to "perspective" pictures, trick paintings that showed contrasted figures—here a monstrous woman and the god of war—when looked at from opposite sides

II.vi.2 meet fit

And carry back to Sicily much tall° youth
That else must perish here.

POMPEY To you all three,
The senators alone of this great world,
Chief factors° for the gods: I do not know 10
Wherefore my father should revengers want,°
Having a son and friends, since Julius Caesar,
Who at Philippi the good Brutus ghosted,°
There saw you laboring for him. What was't
That moved pale Cassius to conspire? And what 15
Made all-honored, honest, Roman Brutus,
With the armed rest, courtiers of beauteous freedom,
To drench the Capitol—but that they would
Have one man but a man?° And that is it
Hath made me rig my navy, at whose burden 20
The angered ocean foams; with which I meant
To scourge th' ingratitude that spiteful Rome
Cast on my noble father.

CAESAR Take your time.

ANTONY
Thou canst not fear° us, Pompey, with thy sails.
We'll speak with thee° at sea. At land thou know'st 25
How much we do o'ercount thee.

POMPEY At land indeed
Thou dost o'ercount° me of my father's house:
But since the cuckoo builds not for himself,
Remain in't as thou mayst.°

LEPIDUS Be pleased to tell us
(For this is from the present°) how you take 30
The offers we have sent you.

CAESAR There's the point.

ANTONY
Which do not be entreated to, but weigh
What it is worth embraced.°

CAESAR And what may follow,
To try a larger fortune.°

POMPEY You have made me offer
Of Sicily, Sardinia; and I must 35
Rid all the sea of pirates; then, to send Measures of wheat to Rome; this 'greed upon,
To part with unhacked edges° and bear back
Our targes° undinted.

OMNES° That's our offer.

POMPEY Know then
I came before you here a man prepared 40
To take this offer. But Mark Antony
Put me to some impatience. Though I lose
The praise of it by telling, you must know,
When Caesar and your brother were at blows,

Your mother came to Sicily and did find
Her welcome friendly. 45

ANTONY I have heard it, Pompey,
And am well studied for a liberal thanks,
Which I do owe you.°

POMPEY Let me have your hand:
I did not think, sir, to have met you here.

ANTONY
The beds i' th' East are soft; and thanks to you, 50
That called me timelier° than my purpose hither;
For I have gained by't.

CAESAR Since I saw you last
There's a change upon you.

POMPEY Well, I know not
What counts° harsh Fortune casts° upon my face,
But in my bosom shall she never come 55
To make my heart her vassal.

LEPIDUS Well met here.

POMPEY
I hope so, Lepidus. Thus we are agreed.
I crave our composition° may be written,
And sealed between us.

CAESAR That's the next to do.

POMPEY
We'll feast each other ere we part, and let's 60
Draw lots who shall begin.

ANTONY That will I, Pompey.

POMPEY
No, Antony, take the lot:
But, first or last, your fine Egyptian cookery
Shall have the fame. I have heard that Julius Caesar Grew fat with feasting there.

ANTONY You have heard much. 65

POMPEY
I have fair meanings, sir.

ANTONY And fair words to them.

POMPEY
Then so much have I heard:
And I have heard Apollodorus carried—

ENOBARBUS
No more of that: he did so.

POMPEY What, I pray you?

ENOBARBUS
A certain queen to Caesar in a mattress. 70

POMPEY
I know thee now; how far'st thou, soldier?

ENOBARBUS Well;
And well am like to do, for I perceive Four feasts are toward.°

POMPEY Let me shake thy hand;
I never hated thee: I have seen thee fight
When I have envied thy behavior.

ENOBARBUS Sir, 75
I never loved you much; but I ha' praised ye
When you have well deserved ten times as much
As I have said you did.

POMPEY Enjoy thy plainness,

7 tall brave 10 factors agents 11 want lack 13 ghosted haunted 19 but a man merely a man (and not a king or demi-god) 24 fear frighten 25 speak with thee meet you 27 o'ercount cheat (Antony had used it in the sense of "outnumber," but Pompey punningly alludes to a house Antony bought from the elder Pompey but did not pay for) 28–29 But . . . mayst But since cuckoos can't build (and therefore have to steal other birds' nests), keep it if you can hold on to it (Pompey includes in this sentence a jeering suggestion that Antony is a cuckold, a lover of a faithless woman) 30 from the present beside the point 33 embraced if accepted 33–34 And . . . fortune (1) and what the result may be, if you try to do better for yourself (i.e., risk war) (2) and the even greater things you may gain, if you join us and our affairs prosper 38 edges swords 39 targes shields; Omnes i.e., Caesar, Antony, Lepidus

47–48 am . . . you I am ready indeed to give you the free and full thanks that I owe you 51 timelier earlier 54 counts reckonings; casts (1) throws (2) sums up (the lines and wrinkles resulting from a hard life are compared to a bill of costs written out by a cruelly precise Fortune) 58 composition agreement 73 toward in the offing (accented "toward")

It nothing ill becomes thee.^o

Aboard my galley I invite you all:

Will you lead, lords?

80

ALL Show's the way, sir.

POMPEY Come.

Exeunt. Manet^o ENOBARBUS and MENAS.

MENAS [Aside.] Thy father, Pompey, would ne'er have made this treaty.—You and I have known,^o sir.

ENOBARBUS At sea, I think.

MENAS We have, sir.

85

ENOBARBUS You have done well by water.

MENAS And you by land.

ENOBARBUS I will praise any man that will praise me; though it cannot be denied what I have done by land.

MENAS Nor what I have done by water.

90

ENOBARBUS Yes, something you can deny for your own safety: you have been a great thief by sea.

MENAS And you by land.

ENOBARBUS There I deny my land service.^o But give me your hand, Menas: if our eyes had authority,^o 95 here they might take two thieves kissing.^o

MENAS All men's faces are true,^o whatsome'er their hands are.

ENOBARBUS But there is never a fair woman has a true face.

100

MENAS No slander; they steal hearts.

ENOBARBUS We came hither to fight with you.

MENAS For my part, I am sorry it is turned to a drinking. Pompey doth this day laugh away his fortune.

ENOBARBUS If he do, sure he cannot weep't back 105 again.

MENAS Y' have said, sir. We looked not for Mark Antony here. Pray you, is he married to Cleopatra?

ENOBARBUS Caesar's sister is called Octavia.

MENAS True, sir, she was the wife of Caius Marcellus. 110

ENOBARBUS But she is now the wife of Marcus Antonius.

MENAS Pray ye,^o sir?

ENOBARBUS 'Tis true.

MENAS Then is Caesar and he forever knit together. 115

ENOBARBUS If I were bound to divine of this unity, I would not prophesy so.

MENAS I think the policy^o of that purpose made more in the marriage than the love of the parties.

ENOBARBUS I think so too. But you shall find the 120 band that seems to tie their friendship together will be the very strangler of their amity: Octavia is of a holy, cold, and still conversation.^o

MENAS Who would not have his wife so?

ENOBARBUS Not he that himself is not so; which is 125 Mark Antony. He will to his Egyptian dish again: then shall the sighs of Octavia blow the fire up in Caesar, and, as I said before, that which is the strength of their amity shall prove the immediate author of their variance. Antony will use his affection where it is. 130 He married but his occasion^o here.

MENAS And thus it may be. Come, sir, will you aboard? I have a health for you.

ENOBARBUS I shall take it, sir: we have used our throats in Egypt. 135

MENAS Come, let's away.

Exeunt.

[Scene VII. On board Pompey's galley, off Misenum.]

Music plays. Enter two or three SERVANTS, with a banquet.

FIRST SERVANT Here they'll be, man. Some o' their plants^o are ill-rooted already; the least wind i' th' world will blow them down.

SECOND SERVANT Lepidus is high-colored.

FIRST SERVANT They have made him drink alms 5 drink.^o

SECOND SERVANT As they pinch one another by the disposition, he cries out, "No more";^o reconciles them to his entreaty, and himself to th' drink.

FIRST SERVANT But it raises the greater war between 10 him and his discretion.

SECOND SERVANT Why, this it is to have a name in great men's fellowship. I had as lief have a reed that will do me no service, as a partisan^o I could not heave.

FIRST SERVANT To be called into a huge sphere,^o 15 and not to be seen to move^o in't, are the holes where eyes should be, which pitifully disaster^o the cheeks.

A sennet^o sounded. Enter CAESAR, ANTONY, POMPEY, LEPIDUS, AGRIPPA, MAECENAS, ENOBARBUS, MENAS, with other CAPTAINS.

ANTONY

Thus do they, sir: they take^o the flow o' th' Nile

By certain scales i' th' pyramid. They know

By th' height, the lowness, or the mean, if dearth 20

Or foison^o follow. The higher Nilus swells,

The more it promises; as it ebbs, the seedsman

Upon the slime and ooze scatters his grain,

And shortly comes to harvest.

LEPIDUS Y' have strange serpents there. 25

ANTONY Ay, Lepidus.

LEPIDUS Your^o serpent of Egypt is bred now of your mud by the operation of your sun: so is your crocodile.

ANTONY They are so.

POMPEY Sit—and some wine! A health to Lepidus! 30

LEPIDUS I am not so well as I should be, but I'll ne'er out.^o

131 occasion convenience

II.vii.2 plants pun on foot or sole of foot 5–6 alms drink (1) remains of liquor usually saved for alms people (2) drinking done kindly, i.e., toasts given to smooth over quarrels 8 No more (1) no more quarreling (2) no more to drink 14 partisan great long-handled spear 15 sphere (1) area of influence (2) revolving circle holding a star or planet, in the old astronomy 16 move (1) be active, influential (2) circle, like a planet 17 disaster ruin (with a suggestion of a star's malignant influence) 17 s.d. sennet trumpet call signaling the entrance of a great man 18 take measure 19 scales i' degree marks on 20–21 dearth Or foison famine or plenty 27 Your a colloquialism suggesting casual knowledgeableness 31–32 I'll ne'er out I won't give in

79 It . . . thee It suits you very well 81 s.d. Manet Latin for "remains"; the plural is properly manent, but the singular is often used for the plural, just as "exit" is often used for "exeunt" 83 known met 94 deny . . . service a quibble: "I claim exemption from military service" and "I deny that I have been a thief" 95 authority authority to arrest 96 two thieves kissing (1) two crooks fraternizing (2) two thieving hands clasping 97 true (1) honest (2) natural, without make-up 113 Pray ye pardon me (incredulous) 118 policy political expediency 123 still conversation quiet manner

ENOBARBUS Not till you have slept; I fear me you'll be in° till then.

LEPIDUS Nay, certainly, I have heard the Ptolemies' 35 pyramises° are very goodly things; without contradiction I have heard that.

MENAS [Aside to POMPEY.]

Pompey, a word.

POMPEY [Aside to MENAS.] Say in mine ear: what is't?

MENAS [Aside to POMPEY.]

Forsake thy seat, I do beseech thee, captain,

And hear me speak a word.

POMPEY [Aside to MENAS.] Forbear me till anon.° 40

[MENAS] whispers in's ear.

This wine for Lepidus!

LEPIDUS What manner o' thing is your crocodile?

ANTONY It is shaped, sir, like itself, and it is as broad as it hath breadth; it is just so high as it is, and moves with it° own organs. It lives by that which nourisheth 45 it, and the elements once out of it, it transmigrates.

LEPIDUS What color is it of?

ANTONY Of it own color too.

LEPIDUS 'Tis a strange serpent.

ANTONY 'Tis so; and the tears of it are wet. 50

CAESAR Will this description satisfy him?

ANTONY With the health that Pompey gives him;
else he is a very epicure.

POMPEY [Aside to MENAS.]

Go hang, sir, hang! Tell me of that? Away!

Do as I bid you.—Where's this cup I called for? 55

MENAS [Aside to POMPEY.]

If for the sake of merit thou wilt hear me,

Rise from thy stool.

POMPEY [Aside to MENAS.]

I think th' art mad. The matter?

[Rises and walks aside.]

MENAS

I have ever held my cap off to° thy fortunes.

POMPEY

Thou hast served me with much faith. What's else to say?

Be jolly, lords.

ANTONY These quicksands, Lepidus, 60
Keep off them, for you sink.

MENAS

Wilt thou be lord of all the world?

POMPEY What say'st thou?

MENAS

Wilt thou be lord of the whole world? That's twice.

POMPEY

How should that be?

MENAS

But entertain it,°

And though thou think me poor, I am the man 65
Will give thee all the world.

POMPEY Hast thou drunk well?

MENAS

No, Pompey, I have kept me from the cup.

Thou art, if thou dar'st be, the earthly Jove:

Whate'er the ocean pales,° or sky inclips,°

Is thine, if thou wilt ha't.

POMPEY

Show me which way.

70

MENAS

These three world-sharers, these competitors,°

Are in thy vessel. Let me cut the cable;

And when we are put off, fall to their throats.

All there is thine.

POMPEY

Ah, this thou shouldst have done,

And not have spoke on't. In me 'tis villainy, 75

In thee't had been good service. Thou must know,

'Tis not my profit that does lead mine honor;

Mine honor, it. Repent that e'er thy tongue

Hath so betrayed thine act. Being done unknown, 80

I should have found it afterwards well done,

But must condemn it now. Desist, and drink.

MENAS [Aside.]

For this,

I'll never follow thy palled° fortunes more.

Who seeks, and will not take when once 'tis offered,

Shall never find it more.

POMPEY

This health to Lepidus!

85

ANTONY

Bear him ashore. I'll pledge it for him, Pompey.

ENOBARBUS

Here's to thee, Menas!

MENAS

Enobarbus, welcome.

POMPEY Fill till the cup be hid.

ENOBARBUS There's a strong fellow, Menas.

[Points to the SERVANT who carried off LEPIDUS.]

MENAS Why? 90

ENOBARBUS 'A° bears the third part of the world, man; see'st not?

MENAS

The third part then is drunk. Would it were all,
That it might go on wheels!°

ENOBARBUS

Drink thou: increase the reels.° 95

MENAS Come.

POMPEY

This is not yet an Alexandrian feast.

ANTONY

It ripens towards it. Strike the vessels,° ho!

Here's to Caesar!

CAESAR

I could well forbear't.

It's monstrous labor when I wash my brain 100

And it grows fouler.

ANTONY

Be a child o' th' time.

CAESAR

Possess it, I'll make answer;°

But I had rather fast from all, four days,

Than drink so much in one.

ENOBARBUS

Ha, my brave emperor!

Shall we dance now the Egyptian bacchanals° 105

And celebrate our drink?

POMPEY

Let's ha't, good soldier.

69 pales fences in; inclips embraces 71 competitors partners
83 palled decayed 91 'A he 94 go on wheels (1) go easily
(2) spin wildly 95 reels (1) revels (2) staggering movements
98 Strike the vessels broach the casks 102 Possess . . .
answer Master the time (rather than be mastered by it), is my answer 105 bacchanals riotous salute to Bacchus, god of wine

34 in (1) in the game (2) in liquor 36 pyramises a false plural made up from the Latin singular; Lepidus is pretentious and drunk 40 Forbear . . . anon Leave me alone for a minute 45 it its 58 held . . . to treated respectfully 64
But entertain it only accept it

ANTONY

Come, let's all take hands
Till that the conquering wine hath steeped our sense
In soft and delicate Lethe.^o

ENOBARBUS

All take hands:

Make battery to our ears with the loud music;
The while I'll place you; then the boy shall sing.
The holding^o every man shall bear as loud
As his strong sides can volley.

Music plays. ENOBARBUS places them hand in hand.

The Song.

Come, thou monarch of the vine,
Plumpy Bacchus with pink eyne!^o
In thy fats^o our cares be drowned,
With thy grapes our hairs be crowned.
Cup us till the world go round,
Cup us till the world go round!

CAESAR

What would you more? Pompey, good night. Good brother,

Let me request you off:^o our graver business
Frowns at this levity. Gentle lords, let's part;
You see we have burnt our cheeks: strong Enobarb
Is weaker than the wine, and mine own tongue
Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise^o hath almost Anticked^o us all. What needs more words? Good night.

Good Antony, your hand.

POMPEY

I'll try you^o on the shore.

ANTONY

And shall, sir. Give's your hand.

POMPEY

O, Antony,

You have my father's house. But what, we are friends!

Come down into the boat.

[Exeunt all but ENOBARBUS and MENAS.]

ENOBARBUS [To MENAS.] Take heed you fall not.

MENAS

I'll not on shore; no, to my cabin!
These drums! These trumpets, flutes! What!
Let Neptune hear we bid a loud farewell
To these great fellows. Sound and be hanged, sound out!

Sound a flourish, with drums.

ENOBARBUS

Hoo, says 'a. There's my cap.

[Throws his cap in the air.]

MENAS

Hoa! Noble captain, come.

Exeunt.

[A C T I I I]

[Scene I. A plain in Syria.]

Enter VENTIDIUS as it were in triumph, the dead body of Pacorus borne before him; [with SILIUS and other ROMANS].

VENTIDIUS

Now, darting^o Parthia, art thou struck; and now
Pleased Fortune does of Marcus Crassus^o death
Make me revenger. Bear the king's son's body
Before our army. Thy Pacorus, Orodes, Pays this for Marcus Crassus.

SILIUS

Noble Ventidius,

Whilst yet with Parthian blood thy sword is warm,
The fugitive Parthians follow. Spur through Media,
Mesopotamia, and the shelters whither
The routed fly. So thy grand captain, Antony, Shall set thee on triumphant chariots, and Put garlands on thy head.

VENTIDIUS

O Silius, Silius,

I have done enough: a lower place,^o note well,
May make too great an act. For learn this, Silius,
Better to leave undone, than by our deed
Acquire too high a fame when him we serve's away.
Caesar and Antony have ever won
More in their officer than person. Sossius,
One of my place^o in Syria, his^o lieutenant,
For quick accumulation of renown,
Which he achieved by th' minute,^o lost his favor.
Who does i' th' wars more than his captain can Becomes his captain's captain; and ambition
(The soldier's virtue) rather makes choice of loss
Than gain which darkens him.
I could do more to do Antonius good,
But 'twould offend him, and in his offense
Should my performance perish.^o

SILIUS

Thou hast, Ventidius, that

Without the which a soldier and his sword
Grants scarce distinction.^o Thou wilt write to Antony?

VENTIDIUS

I'll humbly signify what in his name,
That magical word of war, we have effected;
How, with his banners and his well-paid ranks,
The ne'er-yet-beaten horse of Parthia
We have jaded^o out o' th' field.

SILIUS

Where is he now?

VENTIDIUS

He purposeth to Athens; whither, with what haste
The weight we must convey with's will permit,
We shall appear before him.—On, there; pass along.

Exeunt.

III.i.i darting the Parthians' method of attack was to fling darts and then retreat swiftly, shooting arrows 2 Marcus Crassus treacherously killed by Orodes, King of Parthia and father of Pacorus 12 lower place subordinate 18 place rank; his Antony's 20 by th' minute every minute, incessantly 27 perish i.e., lose its value to me 27–29 that . . . distinction that quality (i.e., discretion) without which it is hard to see any difference between a soldier and his sword 34 jaded driven like nags

109 Lethe forgetfulness 112 holding refrain 115 pink eyne half-closed eyes 116 fats vats 121 request you off beg you leave the ship with me 125 disguise drunken revelry 126 Anticked made fools of 127 try you test your power (to hold liquor)

[Scene II. Rome. Caesar's house.]

Enter AGRIPPA at one door, ENOBARBUS at another.

AGRIPPA

What, are the brothers parted?°

ENOBARBUS

They have dispatched with Pompey; he is gone;
The other three are sealing.° Octavia weeps
To part from Rome; Caesar is sad, and Lepidus
Since Pompey's feast, as Menas says, is troubled
With the green-sickness.°

AGRIPPA

'Tis a noble Lepidus.

ENOBARBUS

A very fine one. O, how he loves Caesar!

AGRIPPA

Nay, but how dearly he adores Mark Antony!

ENOBARBUS

Caesar? Why, he's the Jupiter of men.

AGRIPPA

What's Antony? The god of Jupiter.

ENOBARBUS

Spake you of Caesar? How! The nonpareil!°

AGRIPPA

O Antony! O thou Arabian bird!°

Would you praise Caesar, say "Caesar": go no further.

AGRIPPA

Indeed, he plied them both with excellent praises.

ENOBARBUS

But he loves Caesar best, yet he loves Antony:

Hoo! Hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets, cannot

Think, speak, cast,° write, sing, number—hoo!—

His love to Antony. But as for Caesar,

Kneel down, kneel down, and wonder.

AGRIPPA

Both he loves.

ENOBARBUS

They are his shards,° and he their beetle. [Trumpet within.] So—

This is to horse. Adieu, noble Agrippa.

AGRIPPA

Good fortune, worthy soldier, and farewell!

Enter CAESAR, ANTONY, LEPIDUS, and OCTAVIA.

ANTONY

No further, sir.

CAESAR

You take from me a great part of myself;

Use me well in't. Sister, prove such a wife

As my thoughts make thee, and as my farthest band

Shall pass on thy approof.° Most noble Antony,

Let not the piece° of virtue which is set

Betwixt us as the cement° of our love

To keep it builded, be the ram to batter

The fortress of it: for better might we

Have loved without this mean,° if on both parts
This be not cherished.

ANTONY

Make me not offended

In° your distrust.

CAESAR

I have said.

ANTONY

You shall not find,

Though you be therein curious,° the least cause

For what you seem to fear. So the gods keep you

And make the hearts of Romans serve your ends!

We will here part.

CAESAR

Farewell, my dearest sister, fare thee well.

The elements be kind to thee, and make

Thy spirits all of comfort. Fare thee well.

OCTAVIA

My noble brother!

ANTONY

The April's in her eyes: it is love's spring,

And these the showers to bring it on. Be cheerful.

OCTAVIA

Sir, look well to my husband's house; and—

CAESAR

What,

Octavia?

OCTAVIA

I'll tell you in your ear.

ANTONY

Her tongue will not obey her heart, nor can

Her heart inform her tongue; the swan's-down feather

That stands upon the swell at the full of tide,

And neither way inclines.°

ENOBARBUS [Aside to AGRIPPA.]

Will Caesar weep?

AGRIPPA [Aside to ENOBARBUS.]

He has a cloud in's face.

ENOBARBUS [Aside to AGRIPPA.]

He were the worse for that, were he a horse;°

So is he, being a man.

AGRIPPA [Aside to ENOBARBUS.] Why, Enobarbus,

When Antony found Julius Caesar dead,

He cried almost to roaring; and he wept

When at Philippi he found Brutus slain.

ENOBARBUS [Aside to AGRIPPA.]

That year indeed he was troubled with a rheum.°

What willingly he did confound° he wailed,

Believe't, till I wept too.

CAESAR

No, sweet Octavia,

You shall hear from me still: the time shall not

Outgo my thinking on you.

ANTONY

Come, sir, come,

I'll wrestle with you in my strength of love:

Look, here I have you; thus I let you go,

And give you to the gods.

CAESAR

Adieu; be happy!

LEPIDUS

Let all the number of the stars give light

To thy fair way!

III.ii.1 parted departed 3 sealing making the last arrangements 6 green-sickness anemia supposed to affect lovesick girls (Lepidus' hangover is attributed to his love of Antony and Octavius) 11 nonpareil unequalled thing 12 Arabian bird phoenix (unique and immortal) 17 cast count 20 shards wings 26-27 As my thoughts . . . approof as I believe you to be, and such as I would give my utmost bond that you will triumphantly prove to be 28 piece masterpiece 29 cement accented on first syllable

32 mean intermediary 34 In by 35 curious overscrupulous 49-51 swan's . . . inclines pressure of feeling urges Octavia to speak but prevents her from finding the words; she hesitates—like a feather held immobile by cross-currents at the turn of the tide—between husband and brother, love and sorrow, speech and silence 53 horse a horse with a dark face, or without a white star on its face, was less prized 58 rheum watering at the eyes 59 confound destroy CAESAR Farewell, farewell! Kisses OCTAVIA.

 ANTONY Farewell!
Trumpets sound. Exeunt.

[Scene III. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.]

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and ALEXAS.

CLEOPATRA

Where is the fellow?

ALEXAS

Half afeard to come.

CLEOPATRA

Go to, go to.

Enter the MESSENGER as before.

Come hither, sir.

ALEXAS

Good majesty,

Herod of Jewry^o dare not look upon you

But when you are well pleased.

CLEOPATRA

That Herod's head

I'll have: but how, when Antony is gone

Through whom I might command it? Come thou near.

MESSENGER

Most gracious majesty!

CLEOPATRA

Didst thou behold Octavia?

MESSENGER Ay, dread queen.

CLEOPATRA Where?

MESSENGER

Madam, in Rome.

I looked her in the face, and saw her led

Between her brother and Mark Antony.

CLEOPATRA

Is she as tall as me?

MESSENGER

She is not, madam.

CLEOPATRA

Didst hear her speak? Is she shrill-tongued or low?

MESSENGER

Madam, I heard her speak; she is low-voiced.

CLEOPATRA

That's not so good.^o He cannot like her long.

CHARMIAN

Like her? O Isis! 'Tis impossible.

CLEOPATRA

I think so, Charmian. Dull of tongue, and dwarfish.

What majesty is in her gait? Remember,

If e'er thou look'st on majesty.

MESSENGER

She creeps:

Her motion and her station are as one.^o

She shows a body rather than a life,

A statue than a breather.

CLEOPATRA

Is this certain?

MESSENGER

Or I have no observance.

CHARMIAN

Three in Egypt

Cannot make better note.

CLEOPATRA

He's very knowing,

III.iii.2 s.d. as before i.e., nervously, as he left her 3 Herod of Jewry i.e., even the fiercest of tyrants 17 That's . . . good (1) That's a nuisance. Nevertheless . . . (2) That's a bad thing to be 22 Her motion . . . one Moving and standing still are the same thing with her

I do perceive't. There's nothing in her yet.
 The fellow has good judgment.

CHARMIAN

Excellent.

CLEOPATRA

Guess at her years, I prithee.

MESSENGER

Madam,

She was a widow—

CLEOPATRA

Widow? Charmian, hark.

MESSENGER

And I do think she's thirty.^o

CLEOPATRA

Bear'st thou her face in mind? Is't long or round?

MESSENGER

Round, even to faultiness.

CLEOPATRA

For the most part, too, they are foolish that are so.

Her hair, what color?

MESSENGER

Brown, madam; and her forehead

As low as she would wish it.^o

CLEOPATRA

There's gold for thee.

Thou must not take my former sharpness ill;

I will employ thee back again: I find thee

Most fit for business. Go, make thee ready;

Our letters are prepared. [Exit MESSENGER.]

CHARMIAN

A proper^o man.

CLEOPATRA

Indeed he is so: I repent me much

That so I harried him. Why, methinks, by him,

This creature's no such thing.^o

CHARMIAN

Nothing, madam.

CLEOPATRA

The man hath seen some majesty, and should know.

CHARMIAN

Hath he seen majesty? Isis else defend,^o

And serving you so long!

CLEOPATRA

I have one thing more to ask him yet, good Charmian;

But 'tis no matter, thou shalt bring him to me

Where I will write. All may be well enough.

CHARMIAN

I warrant you, madam.

Exeunt.

[Scene IV. Athens. Antony's house.]

Enter ANTONY and OCTAVIA.

ANTONY

Nay, nay, Octavia, not only that,

That were excusable, that and thousands more

Of semblable import^o—but he hath waged

New wars 'gainst Pompey; made his will, and read it

To public ear;^o

Spoke scanty of me: when perforce he could not

But pay me terms of honor, cold and sickly

He vented them, most narrow measure^o lent me;

31 thirty Cleopatra, being thirty-eight, lets this pass 37 As low . . . it colloquial phrase: low enough, and I hope she's pleased with it 41 proper excellent 44 no such thing nothing very much 46 Isis else defend Isis forbid III.iv.3 semblable import similar significance 4-5 made . . . ear i.e., like Julius Caesar, made a will benefiting the people and so worked up popular support 8 narrow measure little credit

When the best hint was given him, he not took't,
Or did it from his teeth.°

OCTAVIA O, my good lord, 10
Believe not all; or, if you must believe,
Stomach° not all. A more unhappy lady,
If this division chance, ne'er stood between,
Praying for both parts.
The good gods will mock me presently° 15
When I shall pray, "O, bless my lord and husband!"—
Undo that prayer by crying out as loud,
"O, bless my brother!" Husband win, win brother,
Prays, and destroys the prayer; no midway
'Twixt these extremes at all.

ANTONY Gentle Octavia, 20
Let your best love draw to that point which seeks Best to preserve it. If I lose mine honor,
I lose myself: better I were not yours
Than yours so branchless.° But, as you requested,
Yourself shall go between's: the meantime, lady, 25
I'll raise the preparation of a war
Shall stain° your brother. Make your soonest haste;
So your desires are yours.

OCTAVIA Thanks to my lord.
The Jove of power make me, most weak, most weak,
Your reconciler! Wars 'twixt you twain would be 30
As if the world should cleave, and that slain men
Should solder up the rift.

ANTONY
When it appears to you where this begins,
Turn your displeasure that way, for our faults
Can never be so equal that your love 35
Can equally move with them. Provide your going;
Choose your own company, and command what cost
Your heart has mind to. Exeunt.

[Scene V. Athens. Antony's house.]

Enter ENOBARBUS and EROS.

ENOBARBUS How now, friend Eros?

EROS There's strange news come, sir.

ENOBARBUS What, man?

EROS Caesar and Lepidus have made wars upon
Pompey. 5

ENOBARBUS This is old. What is the success?°

EROS Caesar, having made use of him in the wars
'gainst Pompey, presently denied him rivalry,° would not let him partake in the glory of the action;
and not resting here, accuses him of letters he had 10
formerly wrote to Pompey; upon his own appeal,° seizes him; so the poor third is up,° till death enlarge his confine.

ENOBARBUS

Then, world, thou hast a pair of chaps,° no more;
And throw between them all the food thou hast, 15
They'll grind the one the other.° Where's Antony?

10 from his teeth grudgingly 12 Stomach resent 15 presently immediately 24 branchless mutilated 27 stain eclipse (the reputation of)

III.v.6 success sequel 8 rivalry partnership 11 upon . . .
appeal on his (Caesar's) own accusation 12 up shut up, imprisoned 14 chaps jaws 15-16 And . . . other and feed them with all the victims in the world, they (Caesar and Antony) will nevertheless meet, and one consume the other

EROS

He's walking in the garden—thus, and spurns
The rush that lies before him; cries "Fool Lepidus!"
And threats the throat of that his officer
That murd'ed Pompey.°

ENOBARBUS Our great navy's rigged. 20

EROS

For Italy and Caesar. More, Domitius:
My lord desires you presently. My news
I might have told hereafter.

ENOBARBUS 'Twill be naught;

But let it be. Bring me to Antony.

EROS Come, sir. Exeunt. 25

[Scene VI. Rome. Caesar's house.]

Enter AGRIPPA, MAECENAS, and CAESAR.

CAESAR

Contemning° Rome, he has done all this and more
In Alexandria. Here's the manner of't:
I' th' marketplace on a tribunal silvered,
Cleopatra and himself in chairs of gold 5
Were publicly enthroned; at the feet sat
Caesarion, whom they call my father's° son,
And all the unlawful issue that their lust
Since then hath made between them. Unto her
He gave the stablishment° of Egypt; made her
Of lower Syria, Cyprus, Lydia, 10
Absolute queen.

MAECENAS This in the public eye?

CAESAR

I' th' common showplace, where they exercise.
His sons he there proclaimed the kings of kings:
Great Media, Parthia, and Armenia
He gave to Alexander; to Ptolemy he assigned 15
Syria, Cilicia, and Phoenicia. She
In th' habiliments of the goddess Isis
That day appeared, and oft before gave audience,
As 'tis reported, so.

MAECENAS Let Rome be thus informed.

AGRIPPA

Who, queasy° with his insolence already, 20
Will their good thoughts call from him.

CAESAR

The people knows it, and have now received
His accusations.

AGRIPPA Who does he accuse?

CAESAR

Caesar: and that, having in Sicily
Sextus Pompeius spoiled,° we had not rated° him 25
His part o' th' isle. Then does he say he lent me
Some shipping, unrestored. Lastly, he frets
That Lepidus of the triumvirate
Should be deposed; and, being, that we detain
All this revenue.°

AGRIPPA Sir, this should be answered. 30

20 Pompey Pompey has by now been murdered, according to Plutarch, by Antony's command; Pompey would have proved useful to Antony in the coming war

III.vi.1 Contemning despising 6 my father Octavius had been adopted by Julius Caesar 9 stablishment possession 20 queasy disgusted 25 spoiled despoiled; rated allotted 30 revenue accented on second syllable

CAESAR

'Tis done already, and the messenger gone.
I have told him Lepidus was grown too cruel,
That he his high authority abused
And did deserve his change; for what I have conquered,
I grant him part; but then in his Armenia,
And other of his conquered kingdoms, I Demand the like.

MAECENAS He'll never yield to that.

CAESAR

Nor must not then be yielded to in this.

Enter OCTAVIA, with her TRAIN.

OCTAVIA

Hail, Caesar, and my lord, hail, most dear Caesar!

CAESAR

That ever I should call thee castaway!

OCTAVIA

You have not called me so, nor have you cause.

CAESAR

Why have you stol'n upon us thus? You come not Like Caesar's sister. The wife of Antony
Should have an army for an usher, and
The neighs of horse to tell of her approach
Long ere she did appear. The trees by th' way
Should have borne men, and expectation fainted,
Longing for what it had not. Nay, the dust
Should have ascended to the roof of heaven,
Raised by your populous troops. But you are come
A market maid to Rome, and have prevented
The ostentation° of our love; which, left unshown,
Is often left unloved.° We should have met you
By sea and land, supplying every stage
With an augmented greeting.

OCTAVIA

Good my lord,

To come thus was I not constrained, but did it
On my free will. My lord, Mark Antony,
Hearing that you prepared for war, acquainted
My grievèd ear withal; whereon I begged
His pardon for return.

CAESAR

Which soon he granted,

Being an abstract° 'tween his lust and him.

OCTAVIA

Do not say so, my lord.

CAESAR

I have eyes upon him,

And his affairs come to me on the wind.

Where is he now?

OCTAVIA

My lord, in Athens.

CAESAR

No, my most wrongèd sister, Cleopatra
Hath nodded him to her. He hath given his empire
Up to a whore, who now° are levying
The kings o' th' earth for war. He hath assembled
Bocchus, the King of Libya; Archelaus,
Of Cappadocia; Philadelphos, King
Of Paphlagonia; the Thracian king, Adallas;
King Mauchus of Arabia; King of Pont;
Herod of Jewry; Mithridates, King

52 ostentation public display 53 left unloved (1) unrequited
(2) thought not to exist 61 abstract (1) immaterial, merely notional thing (2) shortcut (3) symbol (of what prevented him from indulging his lust) 67 who now and they now

Of Comagene; Polemon and Amyntas,
The Kings of Mede and Lycaonia;
With a more larger list of scepters.

75

OCTAVIA

Ay me most wretched,

That have my heart parted betwixt two friends
That does afflict each other!

35

CAESAR

Welcome hither.

Your letters did withhold our breaking forth,
Till we perceived both how you were wrong led
And we in negligent danger.° Cheer your heart:
Be you not troubled with the time, which drives
O'er your content these strong necessities;
But let determined things to destiny
Hold unbewailed their way. Welcome to Rome,
Nothing more dear to me. You are abused°
Beyond the mark° of thought: and the high gods,
To do you justice, makes his ministers
Of us° and those that love you. Best of comfort,
And ever welcome to us.

80

85

AGRIPPA

Welcome, lady.

90

MAECENAS

Welcome, dear madam.

Each heart in Rome does love and pity you.

Only th' adulterous Antony, most large°

45

In his abominations, turns you off

And gives his potent regiment to a trull°

95

That noises it° against us.

OCTAVIA

Is it so, sir?

CAESAR

Most certain. Sister, welcome. Pray you

50

Be ever known to patience. My dear'st sister! Exeunt.

[Scene VII. Near Actium. Antony's camp.]

55

Enter CLEOPATRA and ENOBARBUS.

CLEOPATRA

I will be even with thee, doubt it not.

ENOBARBUS

But why, why, why?

CLEOPATRA

60

Thou hast forspoke° my being in these wars,

And say'st it is not fit.

ENOBARBUS

Well, is it, is it?

CLEOPATRA

Is't not denounced against us?° Why should not we
Be there in person?

5

ENOBARBUS [Aside.] Well, I could reply:

If we should serve with horse and mares together,

The horse were merely° lost; the mares would bear

65

A soldier and his horse.

CLEOPATRA

What is't you say?

ENOBARBUS

Your presence needs must puzzle° Antony;

10

Take from his heart, take from his brain, from's time,

70

81 in negligent danger endangered by doing nothing 86 abused deceived 87 mark reach 88-89 makes . . . us make us their agents of justice 93 large loose, licentious 95 potent . . . trull powerful authority to a prostitute 96
noises it is clamorous

III.vii.3 forspoke spoken against 5 denounced against us
Caesar had declared, or denounced—the technical term—war on Cleopatra personally 8 merely utterly 10 puzzle bewilder, bring to a standstill

What should not then be spared. He is already Traduced for levity; and 'tis said in Rome
That Photinus an eunuch and your maids
Manage this war.

CLEOPATRA Sink Rome, and their tongues rot 15
That speak against us! A charge we bear i' th' war,
And as the president of my kingdom will Appear there for a man. Speak not against it,
I will not stay behind.

Enter ANTONY and CANIDIUS.

ENOBARBUS Nay, I have done.
Here comes the emperor.

ANTONY Is it not strange, Canidius, 20
That from Tarentum and Brundisium
He could so quickly cut the Ionian sea
And take in° Toryne?—You have heard on't, sweet?

CLEOPATRA
Celerity is never more admired
Than by the negligent.

ANTONY A good rebuke, 25
Which might have well becomeed the best of men
To taunt at slackness. Canidius, we Will fight with him by sea.

CLEOPATRA By sea; what else?

CANIDIUS
Why will my lord do so?

ANTONY For that° he dares us to't.

ENOBARBUS
So hath my lord dared him to single fight. 30

CANIDIUS
Ay, and to wage this battle at Pharsalia,
Where Caesar fought with Pompey: but these offers,
Which serve not for his vantage, he shakes off;
And so should you.

ENOBARBUS Your ships are not well manned;
Your mariners are muleters,° reapers, people 35
Ingrossed by swift impress.° In Caesar's fleet
Are those that often have 'gainst Pompey fought;
Their ships are yare,° yours, heavy: no disgrace
Shall fall you for refusing him at sea,
Being prepared for land.

ANTONY By sea, by sea. 40

ENOBARBUS
Most worthy sir, you therein throw away
The absolute soldiership you have by land,
Distract° your army, which doth most consist
Of war-marked footmen, leave unexecuted
Your own renowned knowledge, quite forgo 45
The way which promises assurance, and Give up yourself merely to chance and hazard'
From firm security.

ANTONY I'll fight at sea.

CLEOPATRA
I have sixty sails, Caesar none better.

ANTONY
Our overplus of shipping will we burn, 50
And with the rest full-manned, from th' head of Actium

Beat th' approaching Caesar. But if we fail,
We then can do't at land.

Enter a MESSENGER.

Thy business?

MESSENGER

The news is true, my lord, he is descried;
Caesar has taken Toryne. 55

ANTONY

Can he be there in person? 'Tis impossible;
Strange that his power° should be. Canidius,
Our nineteen legions thou shalt hold by land
And our twelve thousand horse. We'll to our ship.
Away, my Thetis!°

Enter a SOLDIER.

How now, worthy soldier? 60

SOLDIER

O noble emperor, do not fight by sea,
Trust not to rotten planks. Do you misdoubt
This sword and these my wounds? Let th' Egyptians
And the Phoenicians go a-ducking:° we Have used to conquer standing on the earth 65
And fighting foot to foot.

ANTONY

Well, well: away!

Exit ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, and ENOBARBUS.

SOLDIER

By Hercules, I think I am i' th' right.

CANIDIUS

Soldier, thou art; but his whole action grows
Not in the power on't:° so our leader's led,
And we are women's men.

SOLDIER

You keep by land

The legions and the horse whole, do you not? 70

CANIDIUS

Marcus Octavius, Marcus Justeius,
Publicola, and Caelius are for sea;
But we keep whole by land. This speed of Caesar's Carries° beyond belief.

SOLDIER

While he was yet in Rome, 75

His power went out in such distractions° as Beguiled all spies.

CANIDIUS

Who's his lieutenant, hear you?

SOLDIER

They say, one Taurus.

CANIDIUS

Well I know the man.

Enter a MESSENGER.

MESSENGER

The emperor calls Canidius.

CANIDIUS

With news the time's with labor, and throws forth 80
Each minute some.° Exeunt.

23 take in conquer 29 For that because 35 muleters mule drivers 36 Ingrossed . . . impress collected by hasty conscription 38 yare swift, nimble 43 Distract (1) divide
(2) confuse

57 power army 60 Thetis sea goddess, mother of Achilles
64 a-ducking (1) swimming like ducks (2) tipped underwater 68-69 his . . . on't his entire plan of action has developed away from its sources of power 75 Carries shoots him forward 76 distractions divisions 80-81 With . . . some More news is born every minute

[Scene VIII. A plain near Actium.]

Enter CAESAR, with his ARMY, marching.

CAESAR Taurus!

TAURUS My lord?

CAESAR

Strike not by land; keep whole, provoke not battle Till we have done at sea. Do not exceed
The prescript of this scroll. Our fortune lies
Upon this jump.^o Exit, [with TAURUS and the ARMY]. 5

[Scene IX. Another part of the plain.]

Enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

ANTONY

Set we our squadrons on yond side o' th' hill
In eye of Caesar's battle;^o from which place
We may the number of the ships behold,
And so proceed accordingly. Exit, [with ENOBARBUS].

[Scene X. Another part of the plain.]

CANIDIUS marcheth with his land ARMY one way over the stage, and TAURUS, the lieutenant of Caesar, [with his ARMY,] the other way. After their going in is heard the noise of a sea fight. Alarum. Enter ENOBARBUS.

ENOBARBUS

Naught,^o naught, all naught! I can behold no longer.
Th' Antoniad, the Egyptian admiral,^o
With all their sixty, fly and turn the rudder:
To see't mine eyes are blasted.

Enter SCARUS.

SCARUS Gods and goddesses,
All the whole synod^o of them!

ENOBARBUS What's thy passion? 5

SCARUS
The greater cantle^o of the world is lost
With very ignorance;^o we have kissed away
Kingdoms and provinces.

ENOBARBUS How appears the fight?

SCARUS
On our side like the tokened pestilence,^o
Where death is sure. Yon ribaudred^o nag of Egypt— 10
Whom leprosy o'ertake!—i' th' midst o' th' fight,
When vantage like a pair of twins appeared,
Both as the same, or rather ours the elder,^o
The breese^o upon her, like a cow in June,
Hoists sails, and flies.

ENOBARBUS That I beheld: 15
Mine eyes did sicken at the sight, and could not Endure a further view.

III.viii.6 jump risk

III.ix.2 battle battle line

III.x.1 Naught i.e., all's come to nothing 2 admiral flagship 5 synod assembly 6 cantle segment of a sphere 7 With very ignorance by utter stupidity 9 tokened pestilence first fatal symptoms of the plague 10 ribaudred apparently from ribald, but of uncertain meaning; probably just a cursing word;
"filthy" 13 elder greater 14 breese gadfly (with pun on breeze, wind)

SCARUS She once being loofed,^o
The noble ruin of her magic, Antony,
Claps on his sea wing, and (like a doting mallard^o)
Leaving the fight in height, flies after her. 20
I never saw an action of such shame;
Experience, manhood, honor, ne'er before
Did violate so itself.

ENOBARBUS Alack, alack!

Enter CANIDIUS.

CANIDIUS

Our fortune on the sea is out of breath,
And sinks most lamentably. Had our general 25
Been what he knew himself,^o it had gone well.
O, he has given example for our flight
Most grossly by his own.

ENOBARBUS Ay, are you thereabouts?^o
Why then, good night indeed.

CANIDIUS

Toward Peloponnesus are they fled. 30

SCARUS

'Tis easy to't; and there I will attend
What further comes.

CANIDIUS To Caesar will I render
My legions and my horse; six kings already
Show me the way of yielding.

ENOBARBUS

I'll yet follow
The wounded chance^o of Antony, though my reason 35
Sits in the wind against me.^o [Exeunt.]

[Scene XI. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.]

Enter ANTONY, with ATTENDANTS.

ANTONY

Hark! The land bids me tread no more upon't,
It is ashamed to bear me. Friends, come hither.
I am so lated^o in the world that I
Have lost my way forever. I have a ship
Laden with gold: take that, divide it; fly, 5
And make your peace with Caesar.

OMNES

Fly? Not we.

ANTONY

I have fled myself, and have instructed cowards
To run and show their shoulders. Friends, be gone.
I have myself resolved upon a course
Which has no need of you. Be gone. 10
My treasure's in the harbor. Take it. O,
I followed that^o I blush to look upon.
My very hairs do mutiny, for the white
Reprove the brown for rashness,^o and they them
For fear and doting. Friends, be gone; you shall 15
Have letters from me to some friends that will Sweep your way for you. Pray you, look not sad,
Nor make replies of loathness; take the hint^o

17 loofed (1) luffed, i.e., with the head of a ship turned into the wind (2) aloofed, rapidly departing 19 mallard wild duck 26 Been . . . himself been his true self—and he knew what that was 28 are you thereabouts Is that where your thoughts are? 35 wounded chance broken fortunes 36 Sits . . .
me is opposed to me
III.xi.3 lated belated (as of a traveler, caught by the encroaching night) 12 that what 14 rashness foolishness 18 hint opportunity

Which my despair proclaims. Let that be left
Which leaves itself.^o To the seaside straightway! 20
I will possess you of that ship and treasure.
Leave me, I pray, a little: pray you now,
Nay, do so; for indeed I have lost command,^o
Therefore I pray you. I'll see you by and by.

Sits down.

Enter CLEOPATRA led by CHARMIAN, [IRAS,] and EROS.

EROS Nay, gentle madam, to him, comfort him. 25
IRAS Do, most dear queen.

CHARMIAN Do: why, what else?

CLEOPATRA Let me sit down. O, Juno!

ANTONY No, no, no, no, no.

EROS See you here, sir? 30

ANTONY O, fie, fie, fie!

CHARMIAN Madam!

IRAS Madam, O, good empress!

EROS Sir, sir!

ANTONY

Yes, my lord, yes. He^o at Philippi kept 35
His sword e'en like a dancer,^o while I struck
The lean and wrinkled Cassius; and 'twas I
That the mad Brutus ended: he alone
Dealt on lieutenantry,^o and no practice had
In the brave squares^o of war: yet now—No matter. 40

CLEOPATRA Ah, stand by.

EROS The queen, my lord, the queen.

IRAS

Go to him, madam, speak to him;
He is unqualitied^o with very shame.

CLEOPATRA

Well then, sustain me. O! 45

EROS

Most noble sir, arise. The queen approaches.
Her head's declined, and death will seize her, but^o
Your comfort makes the rescue.

ANTONY

I have offended reputation,^o
A most unnoble swerving.

EROS Sir, the queen. 50

ANTONY

O, whither hast thou led me, Egypt? See
How I convey my shame out of thine eyes
By looking back^o what I have left behind
'Stroyed in dishonor.

CLEOPATRA O my lord, my lord, 55
Forgive my fearful sails! I little thought
You would have followed.

ANTONY Egypt, thou knew'st too well
My heart was to thy rudder tied by th' strings,
And thou shouldst tow me after. O'er my spirit
Thy full supremacy thou knew'st, and that

Thy beck might from the bidding of the gods 60
Command me.

CLEOPATRA O, my pardon!

ANTONY

Now I must
To the young man send humble treaties, dodge
And palter in the shifts of lowness,^o who
With half the bulk o' th' world played as I pleased, 65
Making and marring fortunes. You did know
How much you were my conqueror, and that My sword, made weak by my affection,^o would Obey it on all cause.

CLEOPATRA Pardon, pardon!

ANTONY

Fall^o not a tear, I say; one of them rates^o
All that is won and lost. Give me a kiss; 70
Even this repays me. We sent our schoolmaster:^o
Is 'a come back? Love, I am full of lead.
Some wine, within there, and our viands! Fortune knows
We scorn her most when most she offers blows.

Exeunt.

[Scene XII. Egypt. Caesar's camp.]

Enter CAESAR, AGRIPPA, DOLABELLA, [THIDIAS,] with others.

CAESAR

Let him appear that's come from Antony.
Know you him?

DOLABELLA Caesar, 'tis his schoolmaster:
An argument that he is plucked, when hither
He sends so poor a pinion of his wing,
Which had superfluous kings for messengers 5
Not many moons gone by.

Enter AMBASSADOR from Antony.

CAESAR

Approach and speak.

AMBASSADOR

Such as I am, I come from Antony.
I was of late as petty to his ends
As is the morn-dew on the myrtle leaf
To his grand sea.^o 10

CAESAR Be't so. Declare thine office. 10

AMBASSADOR

Lord of his fortunes he salutes thee, and Requires^o to live in Egypt; which not granted,
He lessons^o his requests, and to thee sues
To let him breathe between the heavens and earth,
A private man in Athens: this for him. 15
Next, Cleopatra does confess thy greatness,
Submits her to thy might, and of thee craves
The circle^o of the Ptolemies for her heirs,
Now hazarded to thy grace.^o

CAESAR For Antony, 20
I have no ears to his request. The queen

19-20 Let . . . itself Leave the man who has taken leave of his senses (?) Leave the man who has given himself up for lost (?)
23 I . . . command (1) My feelings are becoming uncontrollable (2) I have lost the right to order you 35 He Octavius
36 like a dancer i.e., for ornament only 39 Dealt on lieutenantry told his subordinates how to fight 40 squares squadrons 44 unqualitied beside himself 47 but unless 49 reputation honor 53 By looking back i.e., by averting my eyes and by lonely meditation on

63 palter . . . lowness employ the tricks of a man brought low 67 affection love 69 Fall let fall; rates (1) is worth (2) berates, rebukes as unimportant 71 our schoolmaster i.e., the tutor of his and Cleopatra's children
III.xii.10 To . . . sea (1) to the great sea that is its source and end (2) to the great sea that is Antony 12 Requires requests 13 lessons disciplines (though perhaps the word should be emended to "lessens") 18 circle crown 19 Now . . . grace now dependent for its fate on your favor

Of audience nor desire shall fail, so° she
From Egypt drive her all-disgracèd friend
Or take his life there. This if she perform,
She shall not sue unheard. So to them both.

AMBASSADOR

Fortune pursue thee!

CAESAR Bring him through the bands. 25
[Exit AMBASSADOR.]

[To THIDIAS.]

To try thy eloquence now 'tis time. Dispatch.
From Antony win Cleopatra: promise,
And in our name, what she requires; add more,
From thine invention, offers.° Women are not
In their best fortunes strong, but want will perjure 30
The ne'er-touched vestal.° Try thy cunning, Thidias;
Make thine own edict° for thy pains, which we
Will answer as a law.

THIDIAS Caesar, I go.

CAESAR

Observe how Antony becomes his flaw,°
And what thou think'st his very action speaks 35
In every power that moves.

THIDIAS Caesar, I shall. Exeunt.

[Scene XIII. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.]

Enter CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, and IRAS.

CLEOPATRA

What shall we do, Enobarbus?

ENOBARBUS

Think, and die.

CLEOPATRA

Is Antony, or we, in fault for this?

ENOBARBUS

Antony only, that would make his will°
Lord of his reason. What though you fled
From that great face of war, whose several ranges 5
Frighted each other? Why should he follow?
The itch of his affection° should not then
Have nicked° his captainship, at such a point,
When half to half the world opposed, he being
The merèd question.° 'Twas a shame no less 10
Than was his loss, to course° your flying flags
And leave his navy gazing.

CLEOPATRA

Prithee, peace.

Enter the AMBASSADOR, with ANTONY.

ANTONY

Is that his answer?

AMBASSADOR

Ay, my lord.

21 so provided that 27-29 promise . . . offers possibly corrupt; rearranges to the much more lucid: "promise/What she requires and in our name add more/Offer from thine invention" 30 perjure make a perjurer of 31 ne'er-touched vestal immaculate virgin 32 Make . . . edict decree what you think the right reward 34 becomes his flaw takes his fall

III.xiii.3 will desire, lust 7 affection passion 8 nicked (1) maimed (2) got the better of 10 merèd question sole ground of dispute 11 course pursue

ANTONY

The queen shall then have courtesy, so° she 15
Will yield us up.

AMBASSADOR He says so.

ANTONY

Let her know't.

To the boy Caesar send this grizzled head,
And he will fill thy wishes to the brim
With principalities.

CLEOPATRA

That head, my lord?

ANTONY

To him again! Tell him he wears the rose 20
Of youth upon him; from which the world should note

Something particular.° His coin, ships, legions
May be a coward's, whose ministers would prevail
Under the service of a child as soon
As i' th' command of Caesar. I dare him therefore 25
To lay his gay comparisons° apart
And answer me declined,° sword against sword,
Ourselves alone. I'll write it: follow me.

[Exeunt ANTONY and AMBASSADOR.]

ENOBARBUS [Aside.]

Yes, like enough: high-battled° Caesar will Unstate his happiness and be staged to th' show 30
Against a sworder!° I see men's judgments are
A parcel° of their fortunes, and things outward
Do draw the inward quality after them
To suffer all alike.° That he should dream,
Knowing all measures,° the full Caesar will 35
Answer his emptiness! Caesar, thou hast subdued
His judgment too.

Enter a SERVANT.

SERVANT

A messenger from Caesar.

CLEOPATRA

What, no more ceremony? See, my women,
Against the blown rose may they stop their nose
That kneeled unto the buds. Admit him, sir. 40
[Exit SERVANT.]

ENOBARBUS [Aside.]

Mine honesty and I begin to square.°
The loyalty well held to fools does make
Our faith° mere folly: yet he that can endure
To follow with allegiance a fall'n lord
Does conquer him that did his master conquer 45
And earns a place i' th' story.

Enter THIDIAS.

CLEOPATRA

Caesar's will?

THIDIAS

Hear it apart.

CLEOPATRA None but friends: say boldly.

THIDIAS

So, haply,° are they friends to Antony.

15 so if 22 Something particular i.e., a fact concerning Caesar 26 comparisons i.e., the ships, etc., which make him Antony's superior by comparison 27 declined i.e., in years and fortunes 29 high-battled elevated high by great armies 30-31 Unstate . . . sworder strip his good fortune of all its power, and make a public exhibition of himself against a gladiator 32 parcel part 34 suffer all alike deteriorate together 35 knowing all measures having experienced every measure of fortune 41 square quarrel 43 faith faithfulness 48 haply perhaps

ENOBARBUS

He needs as many, sir, as Caesar has,
Or needs not us. If Caesar please, our master
Will leap to be his friend; for us, you know,
Whose he is we are, and that is Caesar's.

THIDIAS

So.

Thus then, thou most renowned: Caesar entreats
Not to consider in what case thou stand'st
Further than he is Caesar.°

CLEOPATRA

Go on: right royal.

THIDIAS

He knows that you embraced not Antony
As you did love, but as you feared him.

CLEOPATRA

O!

THIDIAS

The scars upon your honor therefore he Does pity, as constrained blemishes,
Not as deserved.

CLEOPATRA

He is a god, and knows

What is most right. Mine honor was not yielded,
But conquered merely.°

ENOBARBUS

[Aside.] To be sure of that,

I will ask Antony. Sir, sir, thou art so leaky
That we must leave thee to thy sinking, for Thy dearest quit thee. Exit ENOBARBUS.

THIDIAS

Shall I say to Caesar

What you require° of him? For he partly begs
To be desired to give. It much would please him
That of his fortunes you should make a staff
To lean upon. But it would warm his spirits
To hear from me you had left Antony,
And put yourself under his shroud,°
The universal landlord.

CLEOPATRA

What's your name?

THIDIAS

My name is Thidias.

CLEOPATRA

Most kind messenger,

Say to great Caesar this: in deputation°
I kiss his conqu'ring hand; tell him I am prompt
To lay my crown at's feet, and there to kneel.
Tell him, from his all-obeying° breath I hear
The doom of Egypt.°

THIDIAS

'Tis your noblest course:

Wisdom and fortune combating together,
If that the former dare but what it can,°
No chance may shake it. Give me grace to lay
My duty° on your hand.

CLEOPATRA

[Giving her hand.] Your Caesar's father oft,
When he hath mused of taking kingdoms in,
Bestowed his lips on that unworthy place,
As° it rained kisses.

Enter ANTONY and ENOBARBUS.

ANTONY

Favors, by Jove that thunders!

What art thou, fellow?

THIDIAS

One that but performs

The bidding of the fullest° man, and worthiest
To have command obeyed.

50

ENOBARBUS

[Aside.] You will be whipped.

ANTONY [Calling for SERVANTS.]

Approach there!—Ah, you kite!° Now, gods and devils!

Authority melts from me. Of late, when I cried,
"Ho!"

90

Like boys unto a muss° kings would start forth,
And cry, "Your will?" Have you no ears? I am Antony yet.

Enter a SERVANT [followed by others].

Take hence this Jack° and whip him.

ENOBARBUS [Aside.]

'Tis better playing with a lion's whelp
Than with an old one dying.

60

ANTONY

Moon and stars!

95

Whip him! Were't twenty of the greatest tributaries
That do acknowledge Caesar, should I find them
So saucy with the hand of she here—what's her name
Since she was Cleopatra? Whip him, fellows,
Till like a boy you see him cringe his face
And whine aloud for mercy. Take him hence.

100

THIDIAS

Mark Antony—

ANTONY

Tug him away. Being whipped,

Bring him again. The Jack of Caesar's shall Bear us an errand to him.

70

Exeunt [SERVANTS,] with THIDIAS.

You were half blasted° ere I knew you. Ha!
Have I my pillow left unpressed in Rome,
Forborne the getting° of a lawful race,
And by a gem of women, to be abused
By one that looks on feeders?°

105

CLEOPATRA

Good my lord—

ANTONY

You have been a boggler° ever:

110

But when we in our viciousness grow hard
(O misery on't!) the wise gods seel° our eyes,
In our own filth drop our clear judgments, make us
Adore our errors, laugh at's while we strut
To our confusion.°

80

CLEOPATRA

O, is't come to this?

115

ANTONY

I found you as a morsel cold upon
Dead Caesar's trencher:° nay, you were a fragment°
Of Gneius Pompey's, besides what hotter hours,
Unregist' red in vulgar fame,° you have
Luxuriously picked out.° For I am sure,
Though you can guess what temperance should be,
You know not what it is.

120

CLEOPATRA

Wherefore is this?

87 fullest greatest (in character and fortunes) 89 kite ignoble bird of prey 91 muss scramble; fighting heap of bodies 93
Jack fellow, knave 105 blasted worn out 107 getting begetting 109 feeders servants, parasites 110 boggler waverer 112 seel blind (in falconry, a hawk's eyelids are seeled, or sewn up, before it grows used to being hooded) 115 confusion destruction 117 trencher wooden dish;
fragment leftover 119 vulgar fame common knowledge, popular rumor 120 Luxuriously picked out lecherously selected

55 Caesar i.e., famous for generosity 62 merely utterly 66 require request 71 shroud protection 74 in deputation by proxy 77 all-obeying which all obey 78 doom of Egypt judgment of the Queen of Egypt 80 If . . . can if a wise man has the courage merely to go on being wise 82 duty i.e., a kiss 85 As as if

ANTONY

To let a fellow that will take rewards
 And say, "God quit° you!" be familiar with
 My playfellow, your hand, this kingly seal
 And pligher of high hearts. O, that I were
 Upon the hill of Basan to outroar
 The hornèd herd!° For I have savage cause,
 And to proclaim it civilly were like
 A haltered neck which does the hangman thank
 For being yare° about him.

Enter a SERVANT, with THIDIAS.

Is he whipped?

SERVANT

Soundly, my lord.

ANTONY

Cried he? And begged 'a pardon?

SERVANT

He did ask favor.

ANTONY

If that thy father live, let him repent
 Thou wast not made his daughter; and be thou sorry
 To follow Caesar in his triumph, since Thou hast been whipped for following him. Henceforth

The white hand of a lady fever thee,
 Shake thou to look on't. Get thee back to Caesar,
 Tell him thy entertainment:° look thou say
 He makes me angry with him; for he seems
 Proud and disdainful, harping on what I am,
 Not what he knew I was. He makes me angry,
 And at this time most easy 'tis to do't,
 When my good stars that were my former guides
 Have empty left their orbs° and shot their fires
 Into th' abysm of hell. If he mislike
 My speech and what is done, tell him he has Hipparchus, my enfranchèd° bondman, whom
 He may at pleasure whip, or hang, or torture,
 As he shall like, to quit me. Urge it thou.
 Hence with thy stripes, be gone! Exit THIDIAS.

CLEOPATRA

Have you done yet?

ANTONY

Alack, our terrene moon°

Is now eclipsed, and it portends alone
 The fall of Antony.

CLEOPATRA

I must stay his time.°

ANTONY

To flatter Caesar, would you mingle eyes
 With one that ties his points?°

CLEOPATRA

Not know me yet?

ANTONY

Cold-hearted toward me?

CLEOPATRA

Ah, dear, if I be so,

From my cold heart let heaven engender hail,
 And poison it in the source, and the first stone
 Drop in my neck: as it determines,° so

Dissolve my life! The next Caesarion smite,
 Till by degrees the memory° of my womb,
 Together with my brave Egyptians all,
 By the discandying° of this pelleted storm,
 Lie graveless, till the flies and gnats of Nile
 Have buried them for prey!

ANTONY

I am satisfied.

Caesar sits down in Alexandria, where
 I will oppose his fate.° Our force by land
 Hath nobly held; our severed navy too
 Have knit again, and fleet,° threat'ning most sealike.
 Where hast thou been, my heart?° Dost thou hear,
 lady?

If from the field I shall return once more
 To kiss these lips, I will appear in blood;°
 I and my sword will earn our chronicle.°
 There's hope in't yet.

CLEOPATRA

That's my brave lord!

ANTONY

I will be treble-sinewed, hearted, breathed,°
 And fight maliciously; for when mine hours
 Were nice° and lucky, men did ransom lives
 Of me for jests; but now I'll set my teeth
 And send to darkness all that stop me. Come,
 Let's have one other gaudy° night: call to me
 All my sad captains; fill our bowls once more;
 Let's mock the midnight bell.

CLEOPATRA

It is my birthday.

I had thought t' have held it poor. But since my lord
 Is Antony again, I will be Cleopatra.

ANTONY

We will yet do well.

CLEOPATRA

Call all his noble captains to my lord.

ANTONY

Do so, we'll speak to them; and tonight I'll force
 The wine peep through their scars. Come on, my queen,
 There's sap in't yet! The next time I do fight,
 I'll make death love me, for I will contend
 Even with his pestilent scythe.

Exeunt [all but ENOBARBUS].

ENOBARBUS

Now he'll outstare the lightning. To be furious
 Is to be frightened out of fear, and in that mood
 The dove will peck the estridge;° and I see still
 A diminution in our captain's brain
 Restores his heart. When valor preys on reason,
 It eats the sword it fights with. I will seek
 Some way to leave him.

Exit.

124 quit reward 126-28 O . . . herd i.e., Antony is so well provided with the cuckold's horns that he should be among the "fat bulls of Basan" of Psalm 22 131 yare deft 140 entertainment reception 146 orbs spheres 149 enfranchèd freed 153 terrene moon earthly Isis (goddess of the moon) 155 stay his time i.e., wait till his rage ends 157 one . . . points one who laces up his clothes, i.e., a valet 161 determines comes to an end, melts

163 memory memorials, heirs 165 discandying melting 169 oppose his fate challenge his destiny 171 fleet float 172 heart courage 174 in blood (1) covered with blood (2) in full vigor 175 chronicle place in history 178 I . . . breathed I will have the strength, courage, and expertise of three men 180 nice delicate, wanton 183 gaudy joyful 197 estridge goshawk (?) ostrich (?)

[A C T I V]

[Scene I. Before Alexandria. Caesar's camp.]

Enter CAESAR, AGRIPPA, and MAECENAS, with his ARMY, CAESAR reading a letter.

CAESAR
He calls me boy, and chides as he had power
To beat me out of Egypt. My messenger
He hath whipped with rods; dares me to personal combat.
Caesar to Antony: let the old ruffian know
I have many other ways to die; meantime
Laugh at his challenge.

MAECENAS Caesar must think,
When one so great begins to rage,° he's hunted
Even to falling. Give him no breath, but now
Make boot of his distraction:° never anger
Made good guard for itself.

CAESAR Let our best heads
Know that tomorrow the last of many battles
We mean to fight. Within our files° there are,
Of those that served Mark Antony but late,
Enough to fetch him in.° See it done,
And feast the army; we have store to do't,
And they have earned the waste. Poor Antony!
Exeunt.

[Scene II. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.]

Enter ANTONY, CLEOPATRA, ENOBARBUS, CHARMIAN, IRAS, ALEXAS, with others.

ANTONY
He will not fight with me, Domitius?

ENOBARBUS No.

ANTONY
Why should he not?

ENOBARBUS
He thinks, being twenty times of better fortune,
He is twenty men to one.

ANTONY Tomorrow, soldier,
By sea and land I'll fight: or° I will live,
Or bathe my dying honor in the blood
Shall make it live again. Woo't° thou fight well?

ENOBARBUS
I'll strike, and cry, "Take all!"°

ANTONY Well said, come on;
Call forth my household servants; let's tonight
Be bounteous at our meal.

Enter three or four SERVITORS.

Give me thy hand,
Thou hast been rightly honest—so hast thou—
Thou—and thou—and thou: you have served me well,
And kings have been your fellows.°
CLEOPATRA [Aside to ENOBARBUS.] What means this?

ENOBARBUS [Aside to CLEOPATRA.]
'Tis one of those odd tricks which sorrow shoots
Out of the mind.

ANTONY And thou art honest too.
I wish I could be made so many men,
And all of you clapped up together in An Antony, that I might do you service
So good as you have done.

OMNES The gods forbid!

ANTONY
Well, my good fellows, wait on me tonight:
Scant not my cups, and make as much of me
As when mine empire was your fellow too
And suffered my command.°

CLEOPATRA [Aside to ENOBARBUS.]
What does he mean?

ENOBARBUS [Aside to CLEOPATRA.]
To make his followers weep.

ANTONY Tend me tonight;
May be it is the period° of your duty.
Haply° you shall not see me more; or if,
A mangled shadow. Perchance tomorrow
You'll serve another master. I look on you
As one that takes his leave. Mine honest friends,
I turn you not away, but like a master
Married to your good service; stay till death.
Tend me tonight two hours, I ask no more,
And the gods yield° you for't!

ENOBARBUS What mean you, sir,
To give them this discomfort? Look, they weep,
And I, an ass, am onion-eyed; for shame,
Transform us not to women.

ANTONY Ho, ho, ho!
Now the witch take me° if I meant it thus!
Grace° grow where those drops fall! My hearty friends,
You take me in too dolorous a sense,
For I spake to you for your comfort, did desire you
To burn this night with torches. Know, my hearts,
I hope well of tomorrow, and will lead you
Where rather I'll expect victorious life
Than death and honor.° Let's to supper, come,
And drown consideration. Exeunt.

[Scene III. Alexandria. Before Cleopatra's palace.]

Enter a company of SOLDIERS.

FIRST SOLDIER
Brother, good night: tomorrow is the day.

SECOND SOLDIER
It will determine one way: fare you well.
Heard you of nothing strange about the streets?

FIRST SOLDIER
Nothing. What news?

SECOND SOLDIER
Belike° 'tis but a rumor. Good night to you.

IV.i.7 rage grow mad 9 Make . . . distraction profit from his rage 12 files ranks 14 fetch him in capture him
IV.ii.5 or either 7 Woo't wilt 8 Take all all or nothing 13 kings . . . fellows kings have served me too, but no better

23 suffered my command served under my authority 25 period end 26 Haply perhaps 33 yield reward 37 the witch take me may I be bewitched 38 Grace (1) God's grace, favor (2) herb of grace, rue 44 death and honor honorable death
IV.iii.5 Belike probably

FIRST SOLDIER

Well, sir, good night. They meet other SOLDIERS.

SECOND SOLDIER Soldiers, have careful watch.

THIRD SOLDIER

And you. Good night, good night.

They place themselves in every corner of the stage.

SECOND SOLDIER

Here we;° and if tomorrow

Our navy thrive, I have an absolute hope

Our landmen will stand up.

FIRST SOLDIER

'Tis a brave army,

And full of purpose.

Music of the hautboys is under the stage.

SECOND SOLDIER Peace! What noise?

FIRST SOLDIER

List, list!

SECOND SOLDIER

Hark!

FIRST SOLDIER Music i' th' air.

THIRD SOLDIER

Under the earth.

FOURTH SOLDIER

It signs° well, does it not?

THIRD SOLDIER

No.

FIRST SOLDIER

Peace, I say!

What should this mean?

SECOND SOLDIER

'Tis the god Hercules, whom Antony loved,

Now leaves him.

FIRST SOLDIER

Walk; let's see if other watchmen

Do hear what we do.

SECOND SOLDIER How now, masters?

OMNES (Speak together.)

How now?

How now? Do you hear this?

FIRST SOLDIER

Ay. Is't not strange?

THIRD SOLDIER

Do you hear, masters? Do you hear?

FIRST SOLDIER

Follow the noise so far as we have quarter.

Let's see how it will give off.°

OMNES

Content. 'Tis strange.

Exeunt.

[Scene IV. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.]

Enter ANTONY and CLEOPATRA, with [CHARMIAN and] others [attending].

ANTONY

Eros! Mine armor, Eros!

CLEOPATRA

Sleep a little.

ANTONY

No, my chuck.° Eros! Come, mine armor, Eros!

Enter EROS [with armor].

Come, good fellow, put thine iron° on.

8 Here we here is our post 13 signs signifies 22 give off ceaseIV.iv.2 chuck chick 3 thine iron that armor (of mine) you hold

If Fortune be not ours today, it is Because we brave her.° Come.

CLEOPATRA

Nay, I'll help too.

What's this for?

ANTONY

Ah, let be, let be! Thou art

The armorer of my heart. False.° false; this, this.

CLEOPATRA

Sooth, la, I'll help: thus it must be.

ANTONY

Well, well,

We shall thrive now. See'st thou, my good fellow?

Go put on thy defenses.

EROS

Briefly,° sir.

CLEOPATRA

Is not this buckled well?

ANTONY

Rarely, rarely:

He that unbuckles this, till we do please

To daff't° for our repose, shall hear a storm.

Thou fumblest, Eros, and my queen's a squire

More tight° at this than thou. Dispatch. O, love,

That thou couldst see my wars today, and knew'st

The royal occupation:° thou shouldst see

A workman° in't.

Enter an armed SOLDIER.

Good morrow to thee; welcome:

Thou look'st like him that knows a warlike charge.°

To business that we love we rise betime

And go to't with delight.

SOLDIER

A thousand, sir,

Early though't be, have on their riveted trim,°

And at the port° expect you.

Shout. Trumpets flourish. Enter CAPTAINS andSOLDIERS.

CAPTAIN

The morn is fair. Good morrow, general.

ALL

Good morrow, general.

ANTONY

'Tis well blown,° lads.

This morning, like the spirit of a youth

That means to be of note, begins betimes.

So, so. Come, give me that: this way; well said.°

Fare thee well, dame; whate'er becomes of me,

This is a soldier's kiss. Rebukable

And worthy shameful check° it were to stand

On more mechanic compliment.° I'll leave thee

Now like a man of steel. You that will fight,

Follow me close; I'll bring you to't. Adieu.

Exeunt [all but CLEOPATRA and CHARMIAN].

CHARMIAN

Please you retire to your chamber?

CLEOPATRA

Lead me.

He goes forth gallantly. That he and Caesar might Determine this great war in single fight!

Then Antony—but now—Well, on.

Exeunt.

4-5 If . . . her (1) If Fortune is not friendly to us today, it will be because we defy her (2) We shall be fortunate today, or we shall defy Fortune 7 False i.e., wrong piece 10 Briefly soon 13 daff't put it off 15 tight skilled 17 royal occupation kingly trade 18 workman professional 19 charge duty 22 riveted trim armor 23 port gate 25 well blown (1) i.e., on the trumpets (2) in full flower (of the morning) 28 well said well done 31 shameful check shaming rebuke 31-32 to . . . compliment to make a business of vulgar civilities

[Scene V. Alexandria. Antony's camp.]

Trumpets sound. Enter ANTONY and EROS, [a SOLDIER meeting them].

SOLDIER

The gods make this a happy^o day to Antony!

ANTONY

Would thou and those thy scars had once prevailed
To make me fight at land!

SOLDIER

Hadst thou done so,
The kings that have revolted, and the soldier
That has this morning left thee, would have still Followèd thy heels. 5

ANTONY

Who's gone this morning?

SOLDIER

Who?

One ever near thee: call for Enobarbus,
He shall not hear thee, or from Caesar's camp
Say, "I am none of thine."

ANTONY

What sayest thou?

SOLDIER

Sir,

He is with Caesar.

EROS

Sir, his chests and treasure

He has not with him. 10

ANTONY

Is he gone?

SOLDIER

Most certain.

ANTONY

Go, Eros, send his treasure after; do it;
Detain no jot, I charge thee. Write to him
(I will subscribe^o) gentle adieus and greetings;
Say that I wish he never find more cause
To change a master. O, my fortunes have Corrupted honest men! Dispatch. Enobarbus!
Exit, [with EROS and SOLDIER]. 15

[Scene VI. Alexandria. Caesar's camp.]

Flourish. Enter AGRIPPA, CAESAR, with ENOBARBUS, and DOLABELLA.

CAESAR

Go forth, Agrippa, and begin the fight.

Our will is Antony be took alive:

Make it so known.

AGRIPPA

Caesar, I shall. [Exit.]

CAESAR

The time of universal peace is near. 5
Prove this a prosp'rous day, the three-nooked^o world
Shall bear the olive freely.

Enter a MESSENGER.

MESSENGER

Antony

Is come into the field.

CAESAR

Go charge Agrippa

Plant those that have revolted in the vant,^o

That Antony may seem to spend his fury 10

Upon himself. Exeunt [all but ENOBARBUS].

ENOBARBUS

Alexas did revolt and went to Jewry on Affairs of Antony; there did dissuade^o

IV.v.1 happy fortunate 14 subscribe sign

IV.vi.6 three-nooked three-cornered (Europe, Asia, Africa)

9 vant first lines 13 dissuade i.e., persuade to leave Antony

Great Herod to incline himself to Caesar
And leave his master Antony. For this pains 15
Caesar hath hanged him. Canidius and the rest
That fell away have entertainment, but
No honorable trust. I have done ill,
Of which I do accuse myself so sorely
That I will joy no more.

Enter a SOLDIER of Caesar's.

SOLDIER

Enobarbus, Antony 20

Hath after thee sent all thy treasure, with
His bounty overplus. The messenger
Came on my guard, and at thy tent is now
Unloading of his mules.

ENOBARBUS

I give it you.

SOLDIER

Mock not, Enobarbus: 25
I tell you true: best you safed the bringer
Out of the host;^o I must attend mine office
Or would have done't myself. Your emperor Continues still a Jove. Exit.

ENOBARBUS

I am alone the^o villain of the earth, 30
And feel I am so most.^o O, Antony,
Thou mine of bounty, how wouldst thou have paid
My better service, when my turpitude Thou dost so crown with gold! This blows^o my heart.
If swift thought^o break it not, a swifter mean 35
Shall outstrike thought; but thought will do't, I feel.
I fight against thee! No, I will go seek
Some ditch wherein to die: the foul'st best fits
My latter part of life. Exit.

[Scene VII. Field of battle between the camps.]

Alarum. Drums and trumpets. Enter AGRIPPA [and SOLDIERS].

AGRIPPA

Retire; we have engaged ourselves too far:
Caesar himself has work,^o and our oppression^o
Exceeds what we expected. Exit, [with SOLDIERS].

Alarums. Enter ANTONY, and SCARUS wounded.

SCARUS

O my brave emperor, this is fought indeed!
Had we done so at first, we had droven them home 5
With clouts^o about their heads.

ANTONY

Thou bleed'st apace.

SCARUS

I had a wound here that was like a T,
But now 'tis made an H.^o [Retreat sounded] far off.

ANTONY

They do retire.

26-27 best . . . host you had better see that the man who brought them has safe-conduct through enemy lines 30 alone the the only 31 And . . . most and no one could be more bitterly aware of it 34 blows swells 35 thought sorrow
IV.vii.2 has work is hard-pressed; our oppression the pressure on us 6 clouts (1) blows (2) bandages 8 H pun on ache, pronounced "aitch"

SCARUS

We'll beat 'em into bench holes.^o I have yet
Room for six scotches^o more.

Enter EROS.

EROS

They are beaten, sir, and our advantage serves
For a fair victory.

SCARUS

Let us score^o their backs
And snatch 'em up, as we take hares, behind:
'Tis sport to maul a runner.

ANTONY

I will reward thee
Once for thy sprightly^o comfort, and tenfold
For thy good valor. Come thee on.

SCARUS

I'll halt^o after. Exeunt.

[Scene VIII. Before Alexandria.]

Alarum. Enter ANTONY again in a march; SCARUS, with others.

ANTONY

We have beat him to his camp. Run one before
And let the queen know of our gests.^o Tomorrow,
Before the sun shall see's, we'll spill the blood
That has today escaped. I thank you all,
For doughty-handed are you, and have fought
Not as you served the cause, but as't had been
Each man's like mine: you have shown all Hectors.
Enter the city, clip^o your wives, your friends,
Tell them your feats, whilst they with joyful tears
Wash the congealment from your wounds, and kiss
The honored gashes whole.

Enter CLEOPATRA.

[To SCARUS.] Give me thy hand;
To this great fairy^o I'll commend thy acts,
Make her thanks bless thee.—O thou day o' th' world,
Chain mine armed neck; leap thou, attire and all,
Through proof of harness^o to my heart, and there
Ride on the pants triumphing.

CLEOPATRA

Lord of lords!
O infinite virtue,^o com'st thou smiling from
The world's great snare uncaught?

ANTONY

Mine nightingale,
We have beat them to their beds. What, girl! Though gray
Do something mingle with our younger brown, yet ha' we

A brain that nourishes our nerves, and can
Get goal for goal of youth.^o Behold this man:
Commend unto his lips thy favoring hand.—
Kiss it, my warrior.—He hath fought today
As if a god in hate of mankind had Destroyed in such a shape.

CLEOPATRA

I'll give thee, friend,
An armor all of gold; it was a king's.

9 bench holes holes in a privy 10 scotches gashes 12 score slash 15 sprightly high-hearted 16 halt limp
IV.viii.2 gests deeds 8 clip embrace 12 fairy enchantress
15 proof of harness impenetrable armor 17 virtue valor 22 Get . . . youth keep pace with every point won by youth

ANTONY

He has deserved it, were it carbuncled^o
Like holy Phoebus' car.^o Give me thy hand.
Through Alexandria make a jolly march;
Bear our hacked targets^o like the men that owe^o them.
Had our great palace the capacity
To camp this host, we all would sup together
And drink carouses to the next day's fate,
Which promises royal peril. Trumpeters,
With brazen din blast you the city's ear,
Make mingle with our rattling tabourines,^o
That heaven and earth may strike their sounds together, Applauding our approach. Exeunt.

[Scene IX. Caesar's camp.]

Enter a SENTRY and his COMPANY. ENOBARBUS follows.

SENTRY

If we be not relieved with this hour,
We must return to th' court of guard. The night
Is shiny, and they say we shall embattle
By th' second hour i' th' morn.

FIRST WATCH

This last day was

A shrewd^o one to's.

ENOBARBUS

O, bear me witness, night—

SECOND WATCH

What man is this?

FIRST WATCH

Stand close, and list him.

ENOBARBUS

Be witness to me, O, thou blessed moon,
When men revolted shall upon record
Bear hateful memory, poor Enobarbus did
Before thy face repent!

SENTRY

Enobarbus?

SECOND WATCH

Peace:

Hark further.

ENOBARBUS

O sovereign mistress^o of true melancholy,
The poisonous damp of night disponge^o upon me,
That life, a very rebel to my will,
May hang no longer on me. Throw my heart
Against the flint and hardness of my fault,
Which, being dried with grief, will break to powder,
And finish all foul thoughts. O, Antony,
Nobler than my revolt is infamous,
Forgive me in thine own particular,^o
But let the world rank me in register^o
A master-leaver^o and a fugitive.

O, Antony! O, Antony!

[Dies.]

FIRST WATCH

Let's speak to him.

SENTRY

Let's hear him, for the things he speaks
May concern Caesar.

SECOND WATCH

Let's do so. But he sleeps.

28 carbuncled jeweled 29 Phoebus' car the sun god's chariot 31 targets shields; owe own 37 tabourines small drums
IV.ix.5 shrewd curst, bad 12 mistress i.e., the moon 13 disponge drip 20 in . . . particular yourself 21 in regis- ter in its records 22 master-leaver (1) supreme traitor (2) runaway servant

SENTRY

Swoons rather, for so bad a prayer as his
Was never yet for° sleep.

FIRST WATCH Go we to him.

SECOND WATCH

Awake, sir, awake; speak to us.

FIRST WATCH Hear you, sir?

SENTRY

The hand of death hath raught° him. Drums afar off.

Hark! The drums

Demurely° wake the sleepers. Let us bear him 30
To th' court of guard: he is of note. Our hour
Is fully out.

SECOND WATCH

Come on then; he may recover yet.

Exeunt, [with the body].

[Scene X. Between the two camps.]

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS, with their ARMY.

ANTONY

Their preparation is today by sea;
We please them not by land.

SCARUS For both, my lord.

ANTONY

I would they'd fight i' th' fire or i' th' air;°
We'd fight there too. But this it is: our foot 5
Upon the hills adjoining to the city
Shall stay with us—order for sea is given;
They have put forth the haven—
Where their appointment we may best discover
And look on their endeavor. Exeunt.

[Scene XI. Between the two camps.]

Enter CAESAR and his ARMY.

CAESAR

But being charged,° we will be still by land—
Which, as I take't, we shall, for his best force
Is forth to man his galleys. To the vales,
And hold our best advantage.° Exeunt.

[Scene XII. Before Alexandria.]

Enter ANTONY and SCARUS.

ANTONY

Yet they are not joined.° Where yond pine does stand
I shall discover all. I'll bring thee word Straight how 'tis like to go. Exit.

27 for a prelude to 29 raught reached 30 Demurely soberly, with a low sound

IV.x.3 i' th' fire or i' th' air i.e., as well as the other two elements, earth and water (land and sea)

IV.xi.1 But being charged unless we are attacked 4 hold . . . advantage take up the best position we can

IV.xii.1 joined i.e., in battle

Alarum afar off, as at a sea fight.°

SCARUS

Swallows have built

In Cleopatra's sails their nests. The augurers
Say they know not, they cannot tell, look grimly, 5
And dare not speak their knowledge. Antony
Is valiant, and dejected, and by starts
His fretted° fortunes give him hope and fear
Of what he has, and has not.

Enter ANTONY.

ANTONY

All is lost!

This foul Egyptian hath betrayèd me: 10
My fleet hath yielded to the foe, and yonder
They cast their caps up and carouse together
Like friends long lost. Triple-turned° whore! 'Tis thou Hast sold me to this novice, and my heart
Makes only wars on thee. Bid them all fly; 15
For when I am revenged upon my charm,°
I have done all. Bid them all fly, be gone.

[Exit SCARUS.]

O sun, thy uprise shall I see no more.
Fortune and Antony part here, even here
Do we shake hands. All come to this? The hearts 20
That spanieled me at heels, to whom I gave
Their wishes, do discandy,° melt their sweets
On blossoming Caesar; and this pine is barked,°
That overtopped them all. Betrayed I am.
O this false soul of Egypt! This grave charm,° 25
Whose eye becked forth my wars, and called them home,
Whose bosom was my crownet, my chief end,°
Like a right° gypsy hath at fast and loose°
Beguiled me, to the very heart of loss.
What, Eros, Eros!

Enter CLEOPATRA.

Ah, thou spell! Avaunt!° 30

CLEOPATRA

Why is my lord enraged against his love?

ANTONY

Vanish, or I shall give thee thy deserving
And blemish Caesar's triumph. Let him take thee
And hoist thee up to the shouting plebeians;° 35
Follow his chariot, like the greatest spot°
Of all thy sex: most monsterlike be shown
For poor'st diminutives,° for dolts, and let Patient Octavia plow thy visage up
With her preparèd nails. Exit CLEOPATRA.

'Tis well th' art gone,

If it be well to live; but better 'twere. 40

3 s.d. Alarum . . . fight the Folio prints this direction just before the entrance of Antony and Scarus; if F's placement is correct, the noise fills the otherwise empty stage for a moment and makes ironic Antony's first line, but probably the direction should be placed either in its present position or in the middle of line 9 8 fretted (1) checkered (2) worn, decayed 13
Triple-turned i.e., from Pompey, from Julius Caesar, from Antony 16 charm witch 22 discandy dissolve 23 barked stripped bare 25 grave charm deadly witch 27 crownet
. . . end crown and end of all I did 28 right true; fast and loose a cheating game played by gypsies, in which the dupe inevitably fails to make fast a coiled rope 30 Avaunt Begone!
34 plebeians accented on first syllable 35 spot blemish 37
diminutives little people, i.e., the populace

Thou fell'st into my fury, for one death
 Might have prevented many. Eros, ho!
 The shirt of Nessus is upon me; teach me,
 Alcides, thou mine ancestor, thy rage.
 Let me lodge Lichas on the horns o' th' moon,° 45
 And with those hands that grasped the heaviest club
 Subdue my worthiest self. The witch shall die:
 To the young Roman boy she hath sold me, and I fall
 Under this plot: she dies for't. Eros, ho! Exit.

[Scene XIII. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.]

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, MARDIAN.

CLEOPATRA

Help me, my women! O, he's more mad
 Than Telamon° for his shield; the boar of Thessaly°
 Was never so embossed.°

CHARMIAN

To th' monument:

There lock yourself, and send him word you are dead.
 The soul and body rive° not more in parting 5
 Than greatness going off.

CLEOPATRA

To th' monument!

Mardian, go tell him I have slain myself:
 Say that the last I spoke was "Antony"
 And word it, prithee, piteously. Hence, Mardian,
 And bring me how he takes my death. To th' monument! Exeunt. 10

[Scene XIV. Alexandria. Cleopatra's palace.]

Enter ANTONY and EROS.

ANTONY

Eros, thou yet behold'st me?

EROS

Ay, noble lord.

ANTONY

Sometime we see a cloud that's dragonish,
 A vapor sometime like a bear or lion,
 A towered citadel, a pendant rock,
 A forkèd mountain, or blue promontory 5
 With trees upon't that nod unto the world
 And mock our eyes with air. Thou hast seen these signs:
 Thy are black vesper's pageants.°

EROS

Ay, my lord.

43-45 Nessus . . . moon the death of Antony's ancestor Hercules—called Alcides in line 44—is here recalled; Hercules killed the centaur Nessus with a poisoned arrow, for trying to rape his wife Deianira; the dying Nessus in revenge gave his robe, soaked in poisoned blood, to Deianira, pretending it would act as a love charm; she sent it to her husband for this purpose; in his dying agonies Hercules hurled the bringer of it, Lichas, high in the air

IV.xiii.2 Telamon Ajax, who went mad and killed himself when he lost the contest between himself and Odysseus for the arms and shield of Achilles; boar of Thessaly sent by Artemis to ravage the country of King Oeneus, and killed by his son Meleager 3 embossed (of a hunted animal) foaming at the mouth from fury and exhaustion 5 rive rend

IV.xiv.8 black vesper's pageants evening's brightly colored but unreal scenery ("pageants" = floats of the mystery plays, hence plays, masques, etc.)

ANTONY

That which is now a horse, even with a thought
 The rack dislimns,° and makes it indistinct 10
 As water is in water.

EROS

It does, my lord.

ANTONY

My good knave° Eros, now thy captain is Even such a body: here I am Antony,
 Yet cannot hold this visible shape, my knave.
 I made these wars for Egypt; and the queen— 15
 Whose heart I thought I had, for she had mine,
 Which, whilst it was mine, had annexed unto't
 A million moe,° now lost—she, Eros, has
 Packed cards with Caesar, and false-played my glory
 Unto an enemy's triumph.° 20
 Nay, weep not, gentle Eros, there is left us
 Ourselves to end ourselves.

Enter MARDIAN.

O, thy vile lady!

She has robbed me of my sword.°

MARDIAN

No, Antony;

My mistress loved thee, and her fortunes mingled
 With thine entirely.

ANTONY

Hence, saucy eunuch, peace! 25

She hath betrayed me and shall die the death.

MARDIAN

Death of one person can be paid but once,
 And that she has discharged. What thou wouldst do
 Is done unto thy hand.° The last she spake
 Was "Antony! most noble Antony!" 30
 Then in the midst a tearing groan did break
 The name of Antony; it was divided Between her heart and lips: she rend'red° life,
 Thy name so buried in her.

ANTONY

Dead, then?

MARDIAN

Dead.

ANTONY

Unarm, Eros. The long day's task is done, 35
 And we must sleep. [To MARDIAN.] That thou depart'st hence safe
 Does pay thy labor richly: go. Exit MARDIAN.

Off, pluck off:

The sevenfold shield of Ajax° cannot keep
 The battery° from my heart. O, cleave, my sides!
 Heart, once be stronger than thy continent,° 40
 Crack thy frail case! Apace, Eros, apace.
 No more a soldier. Bruisèd pieces,° go;
 You have been nobly borne.—From me awhile.

Exit EROS.

I will o'ertake thee, Cleopatra, and
 Weep for my pardon. So it must be, for now 45
 All length° is torture: since the torch is out,
 Lie down, and stray no farther. Now all labor

9-10 even . . . dislimns as swift as thought the cloud formation ("rack") obliterates 12 knave boy 18 moe more 19-20 Packed . . . triumph stacked the cards to favor herself and Caesar, and so treacherously played her hand as to allow Caesar to trump my glory 23 sword i.e., soldiership, masculinity 29 unto thy hand already for you 33 rend'red surrendered 38 sevenfold . . . Ajax made of brass and lined with seven layers of oxhide 39 battery bombardment 40 thy continent what holds you in 42 pieces armor 46 length length of life

Mars what it does; yea, very force entangles
 Itself with strength.° Seal then,° and all is done.
 Eros!—I come, my queen.—Eros!—Stay for me. 50
 Where souls do couch on flowers, we'll hand in hand,
 And with our sprightly° port° make the ghosts gaze:
 Dido and her Aeneas° shall want troops,°
 And all the haunt be ours.—Come, Eros, Eros!

Enter EROS.

EROS
 What would my lord?
 ANTONY Since Cleopatra died, 55
 I have lived in such dishonor that the gods
 Detest my baseness. I, that with my sword
 Quartered° the world and o'er green Neptune's back
 With ships made cities, condemn myself to lack°
 The courage of a woman; less noble mind 60
 Than she which by her death our Caesar tells
 "I am conqueror of myself." Thou art sworn, Eros,
 That, when the exigent° should come, which now
 Is come indeed, when I should see behind me
 Th' inevitable prosecution° of 65
 Disgrace and horror, that on my command
 Thou then wouldst kill me. Do't, the time is come.
 Thou strik'st not me, 'tis Caesar thou defeat'st.
 Put color in thy cheek.

EROS The gods withhold me!
 Shall I do that which all the Parthian darts, 70
 Though enemy, lost aim and could not?

ANTONY Eros,
 Wouldst thou be windowed in great Rome and see
 Thy master thus: with pleached° arms, bending down
 His corrigible° neck, his face subdued
 To penetrative shame,° whilst the wheeled seat 75
 Of fortunate Caesar, drawn before him, branded
 His baseness that ensued?°

EROS I would not see't.

ANTONY
 Come then; for with a wound I must be cured.
 Draw that thy honest sword, which thou hast worn
 Most useful for thy country.

EROS O, sir, pardon me. 80

ANTONY
 When I did make thee free, swor'st thou not then
 To do this when I bade thee? Do it at once,
 Or thy precedent° services are all
 But accidents unpurposed. Draw, and come.

EROS
 Turn from me then that noble countenance 85
 Wherein the worship of the whole world lies.

48-49 very . . . strength the image probably is of a creature caught more tightly in a net by the very violence of its struggles 49 Seal then finish then (i.e., the final act of sealing a document, especially a will) 52 sprightly (1) high-hearted, gay (2) ghostly; port bearing 53 Dido . . . Aeneas the legendary lovers are brought together, though in Virgil, Dido repulses forever the faithless Aeneas; want troops lack retinue 58 Quartered (1) covered with troops (2) carved up 59 to lack for lacking 63 exigent need 65 inevitable prosecution unescapable pursuit 73 pleached folded (twisted behind?) 74 corrigible submissive 74-75 subdued . . . shame filled with the humiliation of deepest shame 76-77 branded . . . ensued made as hideously clear as the mark branded on a criminal or animal the abject nature of the man who followed 83 precedent former

ANTONY
 Lo thee!°
 [Turns from him.]

EROS
 My sword is drawn.

ANTONY Then let it do at once
 The thing why thou hast drawn it.

EROS My dear master,
 My captain, and my emperor, let me say, 90
 Before I strike this bloody stroke, farewell.

ANTONY
 'Tis said, man, and farewell.

EROS
 Farewell, great chief. Shall I strike now?

ANTONY Now, Eros.

EROS
 Why, there then! Thus I do escape the sorrow
 Of Antony's death. Kills himself.

ANTONY Thrice-nobler than myself, 95
 Thou teachest me, O valiant Eros, what
 I should, and thou couldst not. My queen and Eros
 Have by their brave instruction got upon me
 A nobleness in record.° But I will be
 A bridegroom in my death, and run into't 100
 As to a lover's bed. Come then; and, Eros, Thy master dies thy scholar. To do thus

[Falls on his sword.]

I learned of thee. How? Not dead? Not dead?
 The guard, ho! O, dispatch me!

Enter [DECRETAS and] a [company of the] GUARD.

FIRST GUARD What's the noise?

ANTONY
 I have done my work ill, friends. O, make an end 105
 Of what I have begun.

SECOND GUARD The star is fall'n.

FIRST GUARD
 And time is at his period.°

ALL Alas, and woe!

ANTONY
 Let him that loves me strike me dead.

FIRST GUARD
 Not I.

SECOND GUARD Nor I.

THIRD GUARD Nor anyone. Exeunt [GUARD].

DECRETAS
 Thy death and fortunes bid thy followers fly. 110
 This sword but shown to Caesar, with this tidings,
 Shall enter° me with him.

Enter DIOMEDES.

DIOMEDES
 Where's Antony?

DECRETAS There, Diomed, there.

DIOMEDES Lives he?
 Wilt thou not answer, man? [Exit DECRETAS.]

87 Lothee There you are, then! 98-99 got . . . record beaten me in achieving a noble place in the story 107 period end 112 enter recommend

ANTONY

Art thou there, Diomed? Draw thy sword, and give me
Sufficing strokes for death.

DIOMEDES

Most absolute lord,

My mistress Cleopatra sent me to thee.

ANTONY

When did she send thee?

DIOMEDES

Now, my lord.

ANTONY

Where is she?

DIOMEDES

Locked in her monument. She had a prophesying fear
Of what hath come to pass; for when she saw
(Which never shall be found) you did suspect
She had disposed^o with Caesar, and that your rage
Would not be purged,^o she sent you word she was dead;

But, fearing since how it might work, hath sent
Me to proclaim the truth, and I am come,
I dread, too late.

ANTONY

Too late, good Diomed. Call my guard, I prithee.

DIOMEDES

What ho! The emperor's guard! The guard, what ho!
Come, your lord calls!

Enter four or five of the GUARD of Antony.

ANTONY

Bear me, good friends, where Cleopatra bides;
'Tis the last service that I shall command you.

FIRST GUARD

Woe, woe, are we, sir, you may not live to wear
All your true followers out.^o

ALL

Most heavy day!

ANTONY

Nay, good my fellows, do not please sharp fate
To grace it with your sorrows. Bid that welcome
Which comes to punish us, and we punish it,
Seeming to bear it lightly. Take me up:
I have led you oft; carry me now, good friends,
And have my thanks for all.

Exit [the GUARD,] bearing ANTONY.

[Scene XV. Alexandria. The monument.]

Enter CLEOPATRA and her MAIDS aloft,^o with CHARMIAN and IRAS.

CLEOPATRA

O, Charmian, I will never go from hence.

CHARMIAN

Be comforted, dear madam.

CLEOPATRA

No, I will not.

All strange and terrible events are welcome,
But comforts we despise. Our size of sorrow,
Proportioned to our cause, must be as great
As that which makes it.

Enter DIOMED [below].

How now? Is he dead?

122 disposed settled things 123 purged cured 132-33 live . . . out outlive all your faithful men

IV.xv.s.d. aloft presumably on the upper stage at the back of the main stage

DIOMEDES

His death's upon him, but not dead.
Look out o' th' other side your monument;
His guard have brought him thither.

Enter, [below,] ANTONY, and the GUARD [bearing him].

CLEOPATRA

O sun,

Burn the great sphere thou mov'st in: darkling^o stand 10
The varying shore o' th' world! O Antony, Antony, Antony! Help, Charmian, help, Iras, help:
Help, friends below, let's draw him hither.^o

ANTONY

Peace!

Not Caesar's valor hath o'erthrown Antony,
But Antony's hath triumphed on itself. 15

CLEOPATRA

So it should be, that none but Antony
Should conquer Antony, but woe 'tis so!

ANTONY

I am dying, Egypt, dying; only
I here importune^o death awhile, until
Of many thousand kisses the poor last
I lay upon thy lips. 20

CLEOPATRA

I dare not,^o dear;

Dear my lord, pardon: I dare not,
Lest I be taken. Not th' imperious show
Of the full-fortuned Caesar ever shall 25
Be brooch'd with me,^o if knife, drugs, serpents have Edge, sting, or operation. I am safe:
Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes
And still conclusion,^o shall acquire no honor
Demuring^o upon me. But come, come, Antony—
Help me, my women—we must draw thee up: 30
Assist, good friends.

ANTONY

O, quick, or I am gone.

CLEOPATRA

Here's sport indeed! How heavy weighs my lord!
Our strength is all gone into heaviness,^o
That makes the weight. Had I great Juno's power,
The strong-winged Mercury should fetch thee up 35
And set thee by Jove's side. Yet come a little,
Wishers were ever fools. O, come, come, come.

They heave ANTONY aloft to CLEOPATRA.

And welcome, welcome! Die when thou hast lived,
Quickened^o with kissing. Had my lips that power,
Thus would I wear them out.

ALL

A heavy sight! 40

ANTONY

I am dying, Egypt, dying.

Give me some wine, and let me speak a little.

CLEOPATRA

No, let me speak, and let me rail so high

10 darkling in darkness 12-13 Help . . . hither Shakespeare appears to have made a false start, afterward left uncanceled, in lines 12-13, or even to line 29; Cleopatra's plan for getting Antony in is passed over, then repeated, in a curious way; and Antony's "I am dying" is also repeated 19 importune beg 21 dare not i.e., dare not descend, or open the gates 25 Be . . . me have me as its ornament 28 still conclusion (1) silent judgment (2) impassive finality 29 Demuring looking soberly 33 heaviness (1) weight (2) sorrow 39 Quickened come to life

That the false housewife^o Fortune break her wheel,^o
Provoked by my offense.^o

ANTONY One word, sweet queen. 45

Of Caesar seek your honor, with your safety. O!

CLEOPATRA

They do not go together.

ANTONY Gentle, hear me:

None about Caesar trust but Proculeius.

CLEOPATRA

My resolution and my hands I'll trust,

None about Caesar. 50

ANTONY

The miserable change now at my end

Lament nor sorrow at, but please your thoughts

In feeding them with those my former fortunes,

Wherein I lived; the greatest prince o' th' world, 55

The noblest; and do now not basely die,

Not cowardly put off my helmet to

My countryman; a Roman, by a Roman

Valiantly vanquished. Now my spirit is going,

I can no more.

CLEOPATRA Noblest of men, woo't die?

Hast thou no care of me? Shall I abide 60

In this dull world, which in thy absence is

No better than a sty? O, see, my women,

[ANTONY dies.]

The crown o' th' earth doth melt. My lord!

O, withered is the garland^o of the war,

The soldier's pole^o is fall'n: young boys and girls 65

Are level now with men. The odds^o is gone,

And there is nothing left remarkable^o

Beneath the visiting moon.

[Faints.]

CHARMIAN O, quietness, lady!

IRAS She's dead too, our sovereign. 70

CHARMIAN Lady!

IRAS Madam!

CHARMIAN O madam, madam, madam!

IRAS Royal Egypt! Empress!

CHARMIAN Peace, peace, Iras! 75

CLEOPATRA

No more but e'en a woman, and commanded

By such poor passion as the maid that milks

And does the meanest chares.^o It were for me

To throw my scepter at the injurious gods,

To tell them that this world did equal theirs 80

Till they had stol'n our jewel. All's but naught.

Patience is sottish,^o and impatience does

Become a dog that's mad: then is it sin

To rush into the secret house of death

Ere death dare come to us? How do you, women? 85

What, what, good cheer! Why, how now, Charmian?

My noble girls! Ah, women, women, look,

Our lamp is spent, it's out. Good sirs,^o take heart:

We'll bury him; and then, what's brave, what's noble, 90

Let's do't after the high Roman fashion,

And make death proud to take us. Come, away.

This case of that huge spirit now is cold.

Ah, women, women! Come; we have no friend

But resolution, and the briefest^o end.

Exeunt, bearing off Antony's body.

[A C T V]

[Scene I. Alexandria. Caesar's camp.]

Enter CAESAR, AGRIPPA, DOLABELLA, MAECENAS, [GALLUS, PROCULEIUS,] with his COUNCIL OF WAR. 55

CAESAR

Go to him, Dolabella, bid him yield:

Being so frustrate, tell him, he mocks

The pauses that he makes.^o

DOLABELLA

Caesar, I shall. [Exit.]

Enter DECRETAS, with the sword of Antony. 60

CAESAR

Wherefore is that? And what art thou that dar'st

Appear thus^o to us?

DECRETAS

I am called Decretas. 5

Mark Antony I served, who best was worthy

Best to be served. Whilst he stood up and spoke,

He was my master, and I wore my life

To spend upon his haters. If thou please

To take me to thee, as I was to him 10

I'll be to Caesar; if thou pleasest not,

I yield thee up my life.

70

CAESAR

What is't thou say'st?

DECRETAS

I say, O Caesar, Antony is dead.

CAESAR

The breaking^o of so great a thing should make

A greater crack.^o The round world 15

Should have shook lions into civil^o streets

And citizens to their dens. The death of Antony

Is not a single doom; in the name lay

A moiety^o of the world.

DECRETAS

He is dead, Caesar,

80

Not by a public minister of justice

Nor by a hired knife; but that self^o hand

Which writ his honor in the acts it did

Hath, with the courage which the heart did lend it,

Splitted the heart. This is his sword,

I robbed his wound of it: behold it stained 25

With his most noble blood.

CAESAR

[Weeping.] Look you, sad friends.

The gods rebuke me, but it is tidings

To wash the eyes of kings.

AGRIPPA

And strange it is

94 briefest swiftest

V.i.2-3 Being . . . makes Tell him that, since he is truly defeated, these delays are a mere mockery 5 thus i.e., holding a naked sword 14 breaking (1) destruction (2) disclosure, report 15 crack (1) breach (2) explosive sound 16 civil city 19 moiety half 21 self selfsame

44 false housewife treacherous hussy, strumpet; wheel (1) spinning wheel (the especial property of a "housewife") (2) wheel of Fortune, whose turns govern the affairs of men 45 offense insults 64 garland flower, crown 65 pole (1) standard (2) polestar (3) Maypole (suggested by "garland") 66 odds measure, distinctive value 67 remarkable wonderful 78 chares chores 82 sottish dully stupid 88 sirs used of women, as of men

That nature must compel us to lament
Our most persisted° deeds.

MAECENAS His taints and honors
Waged equal with° him.

AGRIPPA A rarer spirit never Did steer humanity; but you gods will give us
Some faults to make us men. Caesar is touched.

MAECENAS
When such a spacious mirror's set before him,
He needs must see himself.

CAESAR O Antony,
I have followed° thee to this. But we do launch°
Diseases in our bodies. I must perforce
Have shown to thee such a declining day
Or look on thine: we could not stall° together
In the whole world. But yet let me lament
With tears as sovereign° as the blood of hearts
That thou, my brother, my competitor
In top of all design,° my mate in empire,
Friend and companion in the front of war,
The arm of mine own body, and the heart
Where mine his° thoughts did kindle—that our stars,
Unreconcilable, should divide
Our equalness to this. Hear me, good friends—

Enter an EGYPTIAN.

But I will tell you at some meeter season.
The business of this man looks out of him;
We'll hear him what he says. Whence are you?

EGYPTIAN
A poor Egyptian yet.° The queen my mistress,
Confined in all she has, her monument,
Of thy intents desires instruction,
That she preparèdly may frame herself
To th' way she's forced to.

CAESAR Bid her have good heart:
She soon shall know of us, by some of ours,
How honorable and how kindly we Determine for her. For Caesar cannot live
To be ungentle.

EGYPTIAN So the gods preserve thee! Exit. 60

CAESAR
Come hither, Proculeius. Go and say
We purpose her no shame: give her what comforts
The quality of her passion° shall require,
Lest, in her greatness, by some mortal stroke
She do defeat us. For her life in Rome
Would be eternal in our triumph.° Go,
And with your speediest bring us what she says
And how you find of her.

PROCULEIUS Caesar, I shall.
Exit PROCULEIUS.

CAESAR
Gallus, go you along. [Exit GALLUS.] Where's
Dolabella,
To second Proculeius?

ALL Dolabella! 70

30 persisted persisted in 31 Waged equal with were equally matched in 36 followed pursued; launch lance 39 stall dwell 41 sovereign potent 42–43 my competitor . . .
design my partner in noblest enterprise 46 his its 52 yet still (though Egypt will soon be Roman) 63 passion strong emotion (here, grief) 65–66 For . . . triumph Alive, in Rome, walking in my triumphal procession, she would manifest my power to the end of time

CAESAR
Let him alone, for I remember now
How he's employed. He shall in time be ready.
Go with me to my tent, where you shall see
How hardly° I was drawn into this war,
How calm and gentle I proceeded still
In all my writings. Go with me, and see What I can show in this.

Exeunt.

[Scene II. Alexandria. The monument.]

Enter CLEOPATRA, CHARMIAN, IRAS, and MARDIAN.

CLEOPATRA
My desolation does begin to make
A better life. 'Tis paltry to be Caesar:
Not being Fortune, he's but Fortune's knave,°
A minister of her will. And it is great
To do that thing that ends all other deeds,
Which shackles accidents and bolts up change;
Which sleeps, and never palates° more the dung,
The beggar's nurse and Caesar's.°

Enter, [to the gates of the monument,] PROCULEIUS, [GALLUS, and SOLDIERS].

PROCULEIUS
Caesar sends greeting to the Queen of Egypt,
And bids thee study on what fair demands
Thou mean'st to have him grant thee.

CLEOPATRA What's thy name?

PROCULEIUS
My name is Proculeius.

CLEOPATRA Antony
Did tell me of you, bade me trust you, but I do not greatly care to be deceived,°
That have no use for trusting. If your master
Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him
That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom: if he please
To give me conquered Egypt for my son,
He gives me so much of mine own as I
Will kneel to him with thanks.

PROCULEIUS Be of good cheer:
Y' are fall'n into a princely hand, fear nothing.
Make your full reference freely° to my lord,
Who is so full of grace that it flows over
On all that need. Let me report to him
Your sweet dependency, and you shall find
A conqueror that will pray in aid for kindness,°
Where he for grace is kneeled to.

CLEOPATRA Pray you, tell him
I am his fortune's vassal, and I send him
The greatness he has got. I hourly learn
A doctrine of obedience, and would gladly
Look him i' th' face.

PROCULEIUS This I'll report, dear lady.

74 hardly reluctantly
V.ii.3 knave servant 7 palates tastes 7–8 dung . . .
Caesar's the dungy earth, whose fruits are the source of life to beggar and to emperor 14 to be deceived whether or not I am deceived 23 Make . . . freely hand your affairs fully 27 pray . . . kindness beg you to assist him to be kind to you

Have comfort, for I know your plight is pitied
Of him that caused it.

[Enter GALLUS and SOLDIERS behind.]°

You see how easily she may be surprised.

[They seize CLEOPATRA.]

Guard her till Caesar come.

IRAS Royal Queen!

CHARMIAN O, Cleopatra! Thou art taken, queen.

CLEOPATRA

Quick, quick, good hands! [Draws a dagger.]

PROCULEIUS Hold, worthy lady, hold!

[Disarms her.]

Do not yourself such wrong, who are in this Relieved,° but not betrayed.

CLEOPATRA What, of death too,
That rids our dogs of languish?°

PROCULEIUS Cleopatra,

Do not abuse my master's bounty by
Th' undoing of yourself: let the world see
His nobleness well acted, which your death
Will never let come forth.°

CLEOPATRA Where art thou, death?

Come hither, come! Come, come, and take a queen Worth many babes and beggars!

PROCULEIUS O, temperance, lady!

CLEOPATRA

Sir, I will eat no meat, I'll not drink, sir—
If idle talk will once be necessary—
I'll not sleep neither. This mortal house I'll ruin,
Do Caesar what he can. Know, sir, that I
Will not wait pinioned° at your master's court
Nor once be chastised with the sober eye
Of dull Octavia. Shall they hoist me up
And show me to the shouting varletry°
Of censuring Rome? Rather a ditch in Egypt
Be gentle grave unto me! Rather on Nilus' mud
Lay me stark nak'd and let the waterflies Blow° me into abhorring! Rather make My country's high pyramides° my gibbet
And hang me up in chains!

PROCULEIUS You do extend
These thoughts of horror further than you shall Find cause in Caesar.

Enter DOLABELLA.

DOLABELLA Proculeius,
What thou hast done, thy master Caesar knows,
And he hath sent for thee. For the queen,
I'll take her to my guard.

PROCULEIUS So, Dolabella,
It shall content me best: be gentle to her

[To CLEOPATRA.]

To Caesar I will speak what you shall please,
If you'll employ me to him.

CLEOPATRA Say, I would die. 70
Exit PROCULEIUS, [with SOLDIERS].

DOLABELLA

Most noble empress, you have heard of me?

CLEOPATRA

I cannot tell.

DOLABELLA Assuredly you know me.

CLEOPATRA

No matter, sir, what I have heard or known.

You laugh when boys or women tell their dreams;
Is't not your trick?°

DOLABELLA I understand not, madam. 75

CLEOPATRA

I dreamt there was an Emperor Antony.

O, such another sleep, that I might see
But such another man.

DOLABELLA If it might please ye—

CLEOPATRA

His face was as the heav'ns, and therein stuck
A sun and moon, which kept their course and lighted 80
The little O, th' earth.

DOLABELLA Most sovereign creature—

CLEOPATRA

His legs bestrid the ocean: his reared arm
Crested the world: his voice was propertied
As all the tuned spheres,° and that to friends;
But when he meant to quail° and shake the orb, 85
He was as rattling thunder. For his bounty,
There was no winter in't: an autumn 'twas
That grew the more by reaping. His delights
Were dolphinlike, they showed his back above
The element they lived in. In his livery° 90 Walked crowns and crownets:° realms and islands were

As plates° dropped from his pocket.

DOLABELLA Cleopatra—

CLEOPATRA

Think you there was or might be such a man
As this I dreamt of?

DOLABELLA Gentle madam, no.

CLEOPATRA

You lie, up to the hearing of the gods. 95
But if there be nor ever were one such,
It's past the size of dreaming;° nature wants stuff
To vie strange forms with fancy, yet t' imagine
An Antony were nature's piece 'gainst fancy, Condemning shadows quite.°

DOLABELLA Hear me, good madam. 100

75 trick way 83–84 propertied . . . spheres musical as the spheres (referring to the belief in the music of the spheres, made by the harmonious blend of each planet's "note" and normally too fine for human ears to catch) 85 quail make quail 90 livery (1) service (2) possession, guardianship (legal term) 91 crowns and crownets i.e., kings and princes 92 plates silver coins 96–97 But . . . dreaming but suppose you were right, and no such man exists, and never did exist, how can I have imagined such a man, for no mere dreaming fantasy could make something so great 97–100 nature . . . quite reality lacks the material to compete with imagination in the creation of strange forms, yet the creation of an Antony would be a masterpiece of conception on the part of reality, surpassing and discrediting all the illusions of imagination

34 s.d. the Folio gives no stage direction here; it was presumably left to the stage performance to decide on the procedure by which the Romans capture the tomb 41 Relieved rescued 42 languish lingering illness 46 let come forth allow to be revealed 53 pinioned with clipped wings 56 varletry mob 60 Blow swell 61 pyramides four syllables, accented on second

Your loss is as yourself, great; and you bear it
As answering to the weight. Would I might never O'ertake pursued success, but I do° feel,
By the rebound of yours, a grief that smites
My very heart at root.

CLEOPATRA I thank you, sir.
Know you what Caesar means to do with me?

DOLABELLA
I am loath to tell you what I would you knew.

CLEOPATRA
Nay, pray you, sir.

DOLABELLA Though he be honorable—

CLEOPATRA
He'll lead me, then, in triumph?

DOLABELLA
Madam, he will. I know't.

Flourish. Enter PROCULEIUS, CAESAR, GALLUS, MAECENAS, and others of his TRAIN.

ALL
Make way there! Caesar!

CAESAR
Which is the Queen of Egypt?

DOLABELLA
It is the emperor, madam.

Cleopatra kneels.

CAESAR
Arise! You shall not kneel:
I pray you rise; rise, Egypt.

CLEOPATRA Sir, the gods
Will have it thus. My master and my lord
I must obey.

CAESAR Take to you no hard thoughts.
The record of what injuries you did us,
Though written in our flesh, we shall remember
As things but done by chance.

CLEOPATRA Sole sir o' th' world,
I cannot project° mine own cause so well
To make it clear,° but do confess I have Been laden with like frailties which before
Have often shamed our sex.

CAESAR Cleopatra, know,
We will extenuate rather than enforce.°
If you apply° yourself to our intents,
Which towards you are most gentle, you shall find
A benefit in this change; but if you seek
To lay on me a cruelty by taking
Antony's course, you shall bereave yourself
Of my good purposes, and put your children
To that destruction which I'll guard them from
If thereon you rely. I'll take my leave.

CLEOPATRA
And may, through all the world: 'tis yours, and we,
Your scutcheons° and your signs of conquest, shall Hang in what place you please. Here, my good lord.

[Hands him a paper.]

CAESAR

You shall advise me in all for Cleopatra.

CLEOPATRA

This is the brief° of money, plate, and jewels
I am possessed of. 'Tis exactly valued,
Not petty things admitted. [Calling.] Where's Seleucus? 140

[Enter SELEUCUS.]

SELEUCUS Here, madam.

CLEOPATRA

This is my treasurer; let him speak, my lord,
Upon his peril, that I have reserved
To myself nothing. Speak the truth, Seleucus.

SELEUCUS

Madam,
I had rather seel° my lips than to my peril
Speak that which is not.

CLEOPATRA What have I kept back?

SELEUCUS

Enough to purchase what you have made known.

CAESAR

Nay, blush not, Cleopatra, I approve
Your wisdom in the deed.

CLEOPATRA

See, Caesar: O, behold,
How pomp is followed! Mine° will now be yours,
And should we shift estates, yours would be mine.
The ingratitude of this Seleucus does
Even make me wild. O slave, of no more trust Than love that's hired! What, goest thou back? Thou shalt 155

115 Go back, I warrant thee; but I'll catch thine eyes,
Though they had wings. Slave, soulless villain, dog!
O rarely° base!

CAESAR Good queen, let us entreat you.

CLEOPATRA

O Caesar, what a wounding shame is this,
That thou vouchsafing here to visit me,
Doing the honor of thy lordliness 160
To one so meek, that mine own servant should Parcel° the sum of my disgraces by Addition of his envy.° Say, good Caesar,
That I some lady° trifles have reserved, 165
Immoment° toys, things of such dignity
As we greet modern° friends withal; and say
Some nobler token I have kept apart
For Livia° and Octavia, to induce
Their mediation—must I be unfolded 170
With° one that I have bred? The gods! it smites me
Beneath the fall I have. [To SELEUCUS.] Prithee go
hence,
Or I shall show the cinders° of my spirits
Through th' ashes of my chance.° Wert thou a man,
Thou wouldst have mercy on me.

CAESAR Forbear, Seleucus. 175
[Exit SELEUCUS.]

CLEOPATRA

Be it known that we, the greatest, are misthought°

103 but I do if I do not 121 project set forth (accented on first syllable) 122 clear innocent 125 enforce emphasize 126 apply conform 135 scutcheons armorial bearings (alluding to the captured shields displayed by a conqueror)

138 brief summary 146 seel sew up 151 Mine i.e., my followers 158 rarely exceptionally 163 Parcel piece out 164 envy malice 165 lady lady's 166 Immoment unimportant 167 modern ordinary 169 Livia Caesar's wife 170-71 unfolded With exposed by 173 cinders burning coals 174 chance fortune 176 misthought misjudged

For things that others do, and when we fall,
We answer others' merits in our name,^o
Are therefore to be pitied.

CAESAR Cleopatra,
Not what you have reserved, nor what acknowledged, 180
Put we i' th' roll of conquest: still be't yours,
Bestow it at your pleasure, and believe
Caesar's no merchant, to make prize^o with you
Of things that merchants sold. Therefore be cheered,
Make not your thoughts your prisons: no, dear queen, 185
For we intend so to dispose you as Yourself shall give us counsel. Feed and sleep:
Our care and pity is so much upon you
That we remain your friend; and so adieu.

CLEOPATRA
My master, and my lord!

CAESAR Not so. Adieu. 190
Flourish. Exeunt CAESAR and his TRAIN.

CLEOPATRA
He words me, girls, he words me, that I should not Be noble to myself! But hark thee, Charmian.

[Whispers to CHARMIAN.]

IRAS
Finish, good lady, the bright day is done,
And we are for the dark.

CLEOPATRA Hie thee again:
I have spoke already, and it is provided; 195
Go put it to the haste.

CHARMIAN Madam, I will.

Enter DOLABELLA.

DOLABELLA
Where is the queen?

CHARMIAN Behold, sir. [Exit.]

CLEOPATRA Dolabella!

DOLABELLA
Madam, as thereto sworn, by your command
(Which my love makes religion to obey) 200
I tell you this: Caesar through Syria
Intends his journey, and within three days
You with your children will he send before.
Make your best use of this. I have performed
Your pleasure, and my promise.

CLEOPATRA Dolabella,
I shall remain your debtor.

DOLABELLA I, your servant. 205
Adieu, good queen; I must attend on Caesar.

CLEOPATRA Farewell, and thanks. Exit [DOLABELLA].

Now, Iras, what think'st thou?
Thou, an Egyptian puppet,^o shall be shown
In Rome as well as I: mechanic slaves^o
With greasy aprons, rules, and hammers shall 210
Uplift us to the view. In their thick breaths,

Rank of gross diet,^o shall we be enclouded,
And forced to drink their vapor.

IRAS The gods forbid!

CLEOPATRA
Nay, 'tis most certain, Iras. Saucy lictors^o
Will catch at us like strumpets, and scald^o rhymers 215
Ballad us out o' tune. The quick comedians
Extemporally will stage us, and present
Our Alexandrian revels: Antony
Shall be brought drunken forth, and I shall see
Some squeaking Cleopatra boy my greatness^o 220
I' th' posture of a whore.

IRAS O, the good gods!

CLEOPATRA
Nay, that's certain.

IRAS
I'll never see't! For I am sure mine nails
Are stronger than mine eyes.

CLEOPATRA Why, that's the way
To fool their preparation, and to conquer 225
Their most absurd intents.

Enter CHARMIAN.

Now, Charmian!
Show me, my women, like a queen: go fetch
My best attires. I am again for Cydnus,
To meet Mark Antony. Sirrah^o Iras, go. 230
Now, noble Charmian, we'll dispatch indeed,
And when thou hast done this chare,^o I'll give thee leave
To play till doomsday.—Bring our crown and all.
[Exit IRAS.] A noise within.
Wherefore's this noise?

Enter a GUARDSMAN.

GUARDSMAN Here is a rural fellow
That will not be denied your highness' presence:
He brings you figs. 235

CLEOPATRA
Let him come in. Exit GUARDSMAN.
What poor an^o instrument
May do a noble deed! He brings me liberty.
My resolution's placed,^o and I have nothing
Of woman in me: now from head to foot
I am marble-constant: now the fleeting moon^o 240
No planet is of mine.

Enter GUARDSMAN and CLOWN^o [with basket].

GUARDSMAN This is the man.

CLEOPATRA
Avoid,^o and leave him. Exit GUARDSMAN.
Hast thou the pretty worm of Nilus^o there,
That kills and pains not?

178 We . . . name (1) we have to be responsible for faults committed in our name ("merits" = deserts, acts deserving punishment) (2) our name is used to validate the actions of others 183 make prize haggle 208 puppet she envisages Iras as a doll manipulated by the puppeteer, Octavius—i.e., a figure posed on a float following Caesar in the triumphal procession 209 mechanic slaves vulgar workmen

212 Rank . . . diet stinking of bad food 214 Saucy lictors insolent officers 215 scald scurvy 220 boy my greatness reduce my greatness to the crude imitation that a boy can manage (in England women's parts were acted by boys or young men) 229 Sirrah an address to inferiors, used equally of men or women 231 chare chore 236 What poor an what a poor 238 placed fixed 240 fleeting moon a symbol of fickleness, especially in women; and Cleopatra's special symbol, as being Isis or moon goddess 241 s.d. Clown rustic 242 Avoid depart 243 worm of Nilus serpent of Nile, i.e., asp or small viper

CLOWN Truly I have him; but I would not be the party that should desire you to touch him, for his biting is immortal:° those that do die of it do seldom or never recover. 245

CLEOPATRA Remember'st thou any that have died on't? 250

CLOWN Very many, men and women too. I heard of° one of them no longer than yesterday; a very honest° woman, but something given to lie, as a woman should not do but in the way of honesty; how she died of the biting of it, what pain she felt; truly, she makes a very good report o' th' worm; but he that will believe all that they say shall never be saved by half that they do; but this is most falliable, the worm's an odd worm. 255

CLEOPATRA Get thee hence, farewell.

CLOWN I wish you all joy of the worm. 260

[Sets down his basket.]

CLEOPATRA Farewell.

CLOWN You must think this, look you, that the worm will do his kind.°

CLEOPATRA Ay, ay, farewell.

CLOWN Look you, the worm is not to be trusted but in the keeping of wise people: for indeed there is no goodness in the worm. 265

CLEOPATRA Take thou no care; it shall be heeded.

CLOWN Very good. Give it nothing, I pray you, for it is not worth the feeding. 270

CLEOPATRA Will it eat me?

CLOWN You must not think I am so simple but I know the devil himself will not eat a woman. I know that a woman is a dish for the gods, if the devil dress° her not. But truly, these same whoreson devils do the gods great harm in their women; for in every ten that they make, the devils mar five. 275

CLEOPATRA Well, get thee gone, farewell.

CLOWN Yes, forsooth. I wish you joy o' th' worm. Exit.

[Enter IRAS with a robe, crown, etc.]

CLEOPATRA

Give me my robe, put on my crown, I have Immortal longings° in me. Now no more The juice of Egypt's grape shall moist this lip. Yare,° yare, good Iras; quick: methinks I hear Antony call: I see him rouse himself To praise my noble act. I hear him mock The luck of Caesar, which the gods give men To excuse their after wrath.° Husband, I come: Now to that name my courage prove my title! I am fire, and air; my other elements I give to baser life.° So, have you done? 280 285 290

Come then, and take the last warmth of my lips.

Farewell, kind Charmian, Iras, long farewell.

[Kisses them. IRAS falls and dies.]

Have I the aspic° in my lips? Dost fall?

If thou and nature can so gently part,

The stroke of death is as a lover's pinch,

Which hurts, and is desired. Dost thou lie still? 295

If thus thou vanishest, thou tell'st the world

It is not worth leave-taking.

CHARMIAN

Dissolve, thick cloud, and rain, that I may say

The gods themselves do weep.

CLEOPATRA

This proves me base: 300

If she first meet the curlèd° Antony,

He'll make demand of her, and spend that kiss

Which is my heaven to have. Come, thou mortal wretch,°

[To an asp, which she applies to her breast.]

With thy sharp teeth this knot intricate°

Of life at once untie. Poor venomous fool,

Be angry, and dispatch.° O, couldst thou speak,

That I might hear thee call great Caesar ass

Unpolicied!° 305

CHARMIAN O eastern star!°

CLEOPATRA

Peace, peace!

Dost thou not see my baby at my breast,

That sucks the nurse asleep?

CHARMIAN

O, break! O, break! 310

CLEOPATRA

As sweet as balm, as soft as air, as gentle—

O, Antony! Nay, I will take thee too:

[Applies another asp to her arm.]

What° should I stay—

Dies.°

CHARMIAN

In this wild world? So, fare thee well.

Now boast thee, death, in thy possession lies

A lass unparalleled. Downy windows, close;

And golden Phoebus° never be beheld

Of eyes again so royal! Your crown's awry;

I'll mend it, and then play— 315

Enter the GUARD, rustling in.

FIRST GUARD

Where's the queen?

CHARMIAN

Speak softly, wake her not. 320

FIRST GUARD

Caesar hath sent—

CHARMIAN

Too slow a messenger.

[Applies an asp.]

O, come apace, dispatch; I partly feel thee.

FIRST GUARD

Approach, ho! All's not well: Caesar's beguiled.

247 immortal his blunder for mortal 251 heard of heard from 252 honest (1) chaste (2) truthful (similar innuendoes fill the speech, with puns on "lie" and "die") 263 do his kind act according to his nature 274 dress (1) prepare (i.e., of food) (2) clothe, equip 281 Immortal longings (1) the desires of a goddess (2) longings for immortality 283 Yare quickly 287 their after wrath the retributive punishments heaped by the gods on those who have been too proud of their good fortune 289-90 I am . . . life man was believed to be made up of four elements, two higher—fire and air—and two lower or baser—earth and water

293 aspic asp 301 curlèd freshly barbered 303 thou mortal wretch you deadly little object ("wretch," like "fool" in line 305, is often an affectionate term, used especially of children) 304 intricate intricate 306 dispatch quickly end it 308 Unpolicied lacking statecraft; eastern star morning star, Venus 313 What why 313 s.d. Dies modern actresses prefer to die upright, seated regally, but Caesar's penultimate and final speeches suggest that Cleopatra dies—as in Plutarch—"upon a bed" 317 Phoebus sun god

SECOND GUARD

There's Dolabella sent from Caesar; call him.

FIRST GUARD

What work is here! Charmian, is this well done? 325

CHARMIAN

It is well done, and fitting for a princess

Descended of so many royal kings.

Ah, soldier!

CHARMIAN dies.Enter DOLABELLA.

DOLABELLA

How goes it here?

SECOND GUARD All dead.

DOLABELLA

Caesar, thy thoughts

Touch their effects° in this: thyself art coming 330

To see performed the dreaded act which thou

So sought'st to hinder.

Enter CAESAR and all his TRAIN, marching.

ALL

A way there, a way for Caesar!

DOLABELLA

O, sir, you are too sure an augurer:

That you did fear is done.

CAESAR

Bravest at the last,

She leveled at° our purposes, and being royal, 335

Took her own way. The manner of their deaths?

I do not see them bleed.

DOLABELLA

Who was last with them?

FIRST GUARD

A simple countryman, that brought her figs.

This was his basket.

330 Touch their effects meet with realization 335 leveled at (1) guessed (2) fought against

CAESAR

Poisoned, then.

FIRST GUARD

O, Caesar,

This Charmian lived but now, she stood and spake; 340

I found her trimming up the diadem

On her dead mistress; tremblingly she stood,

And on the sudden dropped.

CAESAR

O, noble weakness!

If they had swallowed poison, 'twould appear

By external swelling; but she looks like sleep, 345

As she would catch another Antony

In her strong toil° of grace.

DOLABELLA

Here, on her breast,

There is a vent° of blood, and something blown;°

The like is on her arm.

FIRST GUARD

This is an aspic's trail; and these fig leaves 350

Have slime upon them, such as th' aspic leaves

Upon the caves of Nile.

CAESAR

Most probable

That so she died: for her physician tells me

She hath pursued conclusions° infinite

Of easy ways to die. Take up her bed, 355

And bear her women from the monument.

She shall be buried by her Antony.

No grave upon the earth shall clip° in it

A pair so famous. High events as these

Strike° those that make them; and their story is 360

No less in pity, than his glory which Brought them to be lamented. Our army shall

In solemn show attend this funeral,

And then to Rome. Come, Dolabella, see

High order in this great solemnity. Exeunt omnes. 365

347 toil snare 348 vent discharge; blown swollen 354 conclusions experiments 358 clip clasp 360 Strike touch

THE TRAGEDY OF CORIOLANUS

EDITED BY REUBEN BROWER

Introduction

The closing speech of Coriolanus reminds us of similar speeches at the end of other plays by Shakespeare:

Take him up.
Help, three o' th' chiefest soldiers; I'll be one.
Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully;
Trail your steel pikes. Though in this city he
Hath widowed and unchilded many a one,
Which to this hour bewail the injury,
Yet he shall have a noble memory.
Assist. Exeunt, bearing the body of Marcius.
A dead march sounded.

So Julius Caesar:

According to his virtue, let us use him
With all respect and rites of burial.
Within my tent his bones tonight shall lie,
Most like a soldier, ordered honorably.

And Hamlet:

Let four captains
Bear Hamlet like a soldier to the stage,
For he was likely, had he been put on,
To have proved most royal; and for his passage
The soldiers' music and the rite of war
Speak loudly for him.

Though we recognize in all these endings the convention by which the curtainless Elizabethan stage was cleared of its actors, yet we can easily imagine that the convention might have been expressed in different language, and without this special emphasis on the protagonist—borne from the scene “like a soldier,” with “music and the rite of war”—particularly when he happened to be Hamlet. It seems certain that the gesture so expressed was more than a stage convention, or rather that it represented another and deeper convention about the nature of the chief actor in a tragedy. The modern reader certainly feels some strain in speaking of The Tragedy of Coriolanus, particularly if he has just been reading King Lear or Antony and Cleopatra, plays that most of us regard as prime examples of that ever-debatable term. George Bernard Shaw has called Coriolanus Shakespeare's “finest comedy”; one critic has described it as a satire; another, as debate rather than a tragedy. Most of us will agree that when we speak of Coriolanus as a “tragedy,” we mean something rather peculiar. But those who admire the play will rejoice in that “peculiarity.” The aim of this introductory essay is to give some clue to its essence, to its rare and special value. (The editor assumes that the reader will have read the play at least once before turning to the Introduction.)

The more alert and more literate members of Shakespeare's audience—not to be identified with any one social class—would have recognized that the three processional speeches above marked the death of a hero in a more than modern conventional sense. Even if they were relatively unread, they were literate in a most relevant respect, through hearing in the theater the language of dying heroes in these and in many other plays. They would have sensed much by way of implication in “virtue,” “like a soldier,” and “a noble memory,” just as they would have appreciated the special force of “deeds” in the great speech of Cominius:

COMINIUS

I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus
Should not be uttered feebly. It is held
That valor is the chiefest virtue and
Most dignifies the haver. If it be, 85
The man I speak of cannot in the world
Be singly counterpoised. At sixteen years,
When Tarquin made a head for Rome, he fought
Beyond the mark of others. Our then dictator,
Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight, 90
When with his Amazonian chin he drove
The bristled lips before him. He bestrid
An o'erpressed Roman, and i' th' consul's view
Slew three opposers; Tarquin's self he met,
And struck him on his knee. In that day's feats, 95
When he might act the woman in the scene,
He proved best man i' th' field, and for his meed
Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age heroic ideal implied by Cominius' speech and by Coriolanus' further history in the play.

Shakespeare himself was familiar with the ancient heroic tradition in various forms. If he knew little Greek, he had access to Latin and French translations of Homer, to Virgil, Ovid, and Seneca in the original and translation, and to the early books of Chapman's Iliad, of which he had made use in Troilus and Cressida (1601-02). Although Chapman considerably revised his earlier version before publishing his complete Iliad in 1611, his translation may serve as a relevant example of the Renaissance remaking of the ancient heroic ideal. Back of Chapman stands the Homeric hero as he is presented in the Iliad: he is the man who "goes forward" in battle to display his excellence in fighting, who faces death with clear-eyed awareness and with very human fears, knowing that his lot or moira is unchangeable, that his every act is related to divine if only partially understood powers. The greatest of heroes, Achilles, goes well beyond the typical heroic norms, both in the excesses of his wrath and in the assertion of an absolute superheroism that aims at being "godlike" indeed, and that makes him finally a deeply tragic figure. In asserting his own will, Achilles ironically brings on himself the death of Patroclus, and in living out the violence of wrath, he comes to recognize the uselessness and the inevitability of all violence. In the scene with Priam near the close of the Iliad, he sees that both the hero and his victim are acting parts within a pattern controlled by the gods.

The Renaissance image of the ancient hero, though ultimately inherited from Homer, had been much affected by the two great Roman transformations of Virgil and Seneca, and by the reshaping of the Greco-Roman tradition in the medieval romances. These various traditions were complexly blended in the Renaissance theory of the Heroic Poem, an ideal pattern that attempted to strike a compromise between Romance and ancient epic. (The Faerie Queene is the unclassic example of what happened when traditions so opposed were combined in a single work.) But the theory itself was much more classical than romantic and much more Virgilian than Homeric. The true heroic poem was like the Aeneid, required to have an abstract subject, preferably Christian and explicitly moral, and a hero who equaled and surpassed Aeneas as an exemplar of virtue.

There are many signs in Chapman's Iliad of his response to this Renaissance theory: for example, his view that the Iliad is "the true image of all virtues and humane government." Homer embodies all truth, and the highest truth is "learning," learning in a very special sense:

this is learning; to have skill to throw
Reins on your body's powers that nothing know,
And fills the soul's powers so with act and art
That she can curb the body's angry part,
All perturbations; all affects that stray
From this one object, which is to obey
Her sovereign empire. The Tears of Peace (1609)

In the first word of the Iliad—"wrath"—Homer "contracts" his "Proposition," his subject: "predominant perturbation," that is, "the body's fervor and fashion of outward fortitude, to all possible height of heroical action." The "affects," the passions when "predominant," do not obey the rule of "the soul," or "reason," as Chapman says elsewhere. We have in Chapman the translator a heroic poet who distrusts heroic passion—since it leads almost inevitably to a failure of "learning"—but who has the wisdom to admit that this same passion offers the greatest occasions for the exercise of moral control.

Consider now Chapman's version (1611) of the scene in the Iliad, Book I, in which Achilles is tempted to draw his sword, but on Athena's advice decides not to:

Thetis' son at this stood vext. His heart Bristled his bosom and two ways drew his discursive part—
If, from his thigh his sharp sword drawn, he should make room about
Atrides' person, slaught'ring him, or sit his anger out And curb his spirit. While these thoughts strived in his blood and mind
And he his sword drew, down from heaven Athenia stooped and shined . . .
He, turning back his eye, amaze struck every faculty,
Yet straight he knew her by her eyes, so terrible they were Sparkling with ardor, and thus spoke: "Thou seed of Jupiter,
Why com'st thou? To behold his pride, that boasts our empire?
Then witness, with it, my revenge, and see that insolence die
That lives to wrong me." She replied: "I come from heaven to see
Thy anger settled, if thy soul will use her sovereignty
In fit reflection. I am sent from Juno, whose affects Stand heartily inclined to both. Come, give both respects And cease contention. Draw no sword. Use words, and such as may
Be bitter to his pride, but just. For, trust in what I say,
A time shall come when thrice the worth of that he forceth now
He shall propose for recompense of these wrongs. Therefore throw
Reins on thy passions, and serve us."

Chapman, we see, has turned the episode into one of "learning" in his sense. First, the inner action is given much greater importance than in the original. This Achilles is more of a meditator than Homer's: "his heart . . . two ways drew his discursive part," that is, the part that reasons. In Homer we have simply a very physical heart in a "shaggy chest," whereas in Chapman we find Hamlet's contrast of man and "beast that wants discourse of reason." The process by which Chapman's Achilles "curbs his spirit" is a good example of how Chapman takes over an elementary form of thought from Homer and gives it a new and complex interpretation. So we hear of various powers of mind: "amaze struck every faculty." More significant is Athena's advice on the right way to settle anger. Homer's goddess says merely, "Stop quarreling; don't draw your sword." But Chapman's says:

"Therefore throw
Reins on thy passions, and serve us."

This Athena adds another note; like Hamlet, Achilles is to "speak daggers," but use none: "Draw no sword. Use words . . . but just" ones. The addition is important, since Chapman is in fact eager to make Achilles' wrath moral by substituting controlled anger for mere passion. Achilles' reply to Athena is another example of "learning":

"Though my heart

Burn in anger, yet my soul must conquer th' angry part
And yield you conquest. Who subdues his earthly part for heaven,

Heaven to his prayers subdues his wish."

The basic opposition of passions and soul may be either Platonic or Christian, but Chapman's language is so emphatically Christian that we may wonder whether we are listening to a hero or a saint. (At other points in Chapman's Iliad, Achilles is as bloodthirsty and cruel as Homer's hero at his worst.) Whatever Chapman's intention may have been, his true hero seems more often to be Hector, who displays the self-control, the self-knowledge, that Achilles aspires to but rarely achieves.

Although Chapman has so completely reinterpreted the ancient heroic image in Renaissance terms, we can still trace in his heroes the main outlines of the heroic role as it appears in the Iliad. But it is the Renaissance transformation of the ancient ideal that is most instructive if we are to understand the heroes of Shakespeare: in particular, Chapman's tendency to regard the heroic career as moral education or as a tragic failure to live up to a moral ideal. Modern readers, it should be added, are in general too prone to see the meditateness of the Renaissance hero and to miss the complete heroic image as Shakespeare and Chapman understood it.

For a practicing dramatist, this ideal, a blend of the ancient and modern, pagan and Christian, held important possibilities. A Renaissance Achilles or Hector who faced the irony of his situation, who clearly recognized the conflict of allegiances, would be tragic in the fullest sense. He would be, for example, the Antony of Antony and Cleopatra. The ideal that Shakespeare had encountered in Chapman's Iliad and elsewhere was wonderfully renewed for him by his reading of another ancient classic, one that he read with the closest attention, Plutarch's Lives of the Noble Grecians and Romans in North's translation. It is worth noting here that twice in the "Life of Coriolanus" Plutarch illustrates his point by quoting Homer, and especially interesting that in defending Homer's allowance for "our own free will and reason" he quotes, in a fairly lax version, the lines on Achilles' "angry heart."

The concept of the true hero implied in the North-Plutarch "Life," on which Shakespeare's play is largely based, is very close to Chapman's, as may be seen from some of the more general comments on the hero's character:

this Martius' natural wit and great heart did marvelously stir up his courage to do and attempt notable acts. But on the other side, for lack of education, he was so choleric and impatient, that he would yield to no living creature: which made him churlish, uncivil, and altogether unfit for any man's conversation. Yet men marveling much at his constancy, that he was never overcome with pleasure nor money and how he would endure easily all manner of pains and travails, thereupon they well liked and commended his stoutness and temperancy. But for all that, they could not be acquainted with him, as one citizen useth to be with another in the city. His behavior was so unpleasant to them by reason of a certain insolent and stern manner he had, which, because he was too lordly, was disliked. And to say truly, the greatest benefit that learning bringeth unto men is this: that it teacheth men that be rude and rough of nature, by compass and rule of reason, to be civil and courteous, and to like better the mean state than the higher. Now in those days, valiantness was honored in Rome above all other virtues, which they call virtus, by the name of virtue itself, as including in that general name all other special virtues besides. So that virtus in the Latin was as much as valiantness.

(Plutarch, "Life of Coriolanus")

Note first the high praise of Martius' "great heart" and "notable acts," and more especially what follows: "But on the other side"—here North sounds exactly like Chapman—"for lack of education, he was so choleric and impatient, that he would yield to no living creature." North reinforces this with a remark showing clearly that "education" means "learning" in Chapman's sense of the word: "And to say truly, the greatest benefit that learning bringeth into men is this: that it teacheth men that be rude and rough of nature, by compass and rule of reason, to be civil and courteous." But in the next sentence we are reminded that Coriolanus was the pattern of virtus. Yet according to North's view—and it would be Chapman's, too—Coriolanus was not fit to be "a prince" or "governor," because he "lacked the gravity and affability that is gotten with judgment of learning and reason." He has another characteristic that is connected with his "choler" and his "self-will and opinion" (we should say, "pride"): "[he] remembered not how willfulness is the thing of the world, which a governor of a commonwealth for pleasing should shun, being that which Plato called solitariness." Note how Coriolanus' obstinacy and pride are described as "solitariness," the uncivil "aloneness" of men "who will never yield to others' reason."

Bearing in mind Plutarch's picture of heroic Coriolanus, and this brief sketch of the ancient hero in Renaissance guise, let us return to the "deeds of Coriolanus" in Shakespeare's play. We can now appreciate more fully certain features of Cominius' narrative: the august and at times coldly Latin style, the nobility of this display of virtue, the terrifying energy of a hero who is a lone instrument of death and destiny. We see in Coriolanus a figure like Achilles in his most vengeful phrase, hurrying for slaughter, who "did/Run reeking o'er the lives of men." We recall, too, how in earlier scenes Shakespeare has stressed by imagery and stage business the "bloodiness," "aloneness," and other nonhuman qualities underlined also in Cominius' portrait. Coriolanus has been pictured as "mantled," "painted," "smeared," and "masqued" in blood; heard with the "thunder-like percussion" of a cannon; seen swordlike "outdaring his senseless sword" and acting alone, apart from his plebeian followers—both impressions being vividly merged in the scene when his men "wave their swords" and "take him up in their arms":

O me alone! Make you a sword of me?

(I.vi.76)

Whether these cries are to be read as questions or as exclamations—and there is no certainty—it is clear that in uttering them Coriolanus sees himself in splendid isolation, like a sword swung aloft in battle.

But this very emphasis on a nonhuman aloneness is a sign that Shakespeare was not writing an ancient heroic tragedy, not even of the Renaissance type of Antony and Cleopatra. He had seen in Plutarch's "solitariness" another subject and another possible treatment. "Suppose we set Achilles down in the Roman forum—what then?" There are subtle hints in Cominius' speech of this other subject and attitude: "It is held/That valor is the chiefest virtue . . . if it be. . . ." Menenius' comment, "He's right noble./Let him be called for" is just, but also offhand and curt in Coriolanus' own manner. "Enough of that," Menenius seems to say—and irony breaks in. "Say more," he implies, "and you may remind people of this hero's immense pride," "his haughty obstinate mind," as North puts it, a quality that Shakespeare stresses much more than Plutarch. But Shakespeare does not limit himself, as some critics suppose, to portraying a flawed proud and angry man. He had grasped in the Lives and in the Roman historians the importance of the forum, of the Roman state, which he viewed with his contemporaries as an example both of "the mischiefs of discord and civil dissension" and of the well-ordered society, a model of a true commonwealth. Shakespeare sets the "deeds of Coriolanus" against the great parable of Menenius, "the body's members" and their revolt "against the belly" (I.i.97–156). There are many contemporary documents that show a familiarity with this figure and with the related metaphor of the "disease" and "health" of the body politic. To the Elizabethan mind, the state, in more than a modern figurative sense, embodies a natural order: the parts receive from the governing center "that natural competency/Whereby they live." The dramatic point of the brilliantly comic scene in which this fable is presented does not lie in the fable itself, but in the way it is acted out by Menenius in cooperation with the citizens. The good-natured insolence and sturdy candor, the tough repartee of the exchanges, belong to a game played between patrician and people. The "belly-smile" of the patrician, and the "great toe" of the plebeian, help to impart the feeling of healthy relatedness in a civil society. To that, "Enter Caius Marcius"—followed by Menenius' greeting:

Hail, noble Marcius!

with the answer:

Thanks. What's the matter, you dissentious rogues
That, rubbing the poor itch of your opinion,
Make yourselves scabs? (I.i.165–68)

The "nature" of the state is henceforth counterpoised by the "nature" of Coriolanus: "What he cannot help in his nature," one citizen says to another in the beginning of this same scene, "you account a vice in him." From here to the end of the play Shakespeare keeps dramatizing this clash of natures until Coriolanus, still protesting, hears "great Nature" cry, "Deny not." and

He bowed his nature, never known before
But to be rough, unswayable, and free. (V.vi.24–25)

In North's version of the climactic scene where Coriolanus gives in to his mother's pleas (V.iii), there is considerable emphasis on the claims of "nature" and the "natural" in various senses. But there is nothing in the "Life" as a whole like Shakespeare's interweaving throughout his drama of variations on this central theme. The opposition of "natures" in Coriolanus produces a continuous play of irony, as every protestation of the hero, or of his friends and enemies, is heard against a suppressed negation.

Again taking a hint from Plutarch—which he develops fully and explicitly—Shakespeare introduces one further strand of ironic ambiguity into his picture of Coriolanus, the link between his heroic energy and his love of his mother. "There's no man in the world," she explains near the end of the play, "More bound to's mother." (Such is the stuff of heroes: Achilles must have his guardian Thetis.) "What he hath done famously," a citizen says, "though soft-conscienced men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother and to be partly proud, which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue" (I.i.36–40). More curious still, warmaking, love, and marriage are closely related and almost identified in the minds of Volumnia and her son. Coriolanus has a way of embracing generals as if they were brides of war:

MARCIUS [To COMINIUS.]

O, let me clip ye
In arms as sound as when I wooed; in heart
As merry as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burned to bedward! (I.vi.29–32)

Much later—with the inevitability ironic echo—Aufidius answers him in kind:

that I see thee here,
Thou noble thing, more dances my rapt heart
Than when I first my wedded mistress saw
Bestride my threshold. (IV.v.119–22)

If we keep in mind these many contrasts in the nature of Coriolanus, and the heroic image that his role evokes by similarity and by contrast, and if we remember, too, the vision of society symbolized by Menenius' fable, we shall appreciate better the Shakespearean complexity of the climactic scenes of the play. We shall also reach a truer measure of its peculiar flavor as tragedy. Consider first the scene where Coriolanus, about to be made consul, makes his magnificent attack on the tribunes and their officers. To him, the advice to abolish the tribuneship is a call to a godlike "noble life":

Therefore, beseech you—
You that will be less fearful than discreet;
That love the fundamental part of state
More than you doubt the change on't; that prefer
A noble life before a long, and wish
To jump a body with a dangerous physic
That's sure of death without it—at once pluck out
The multitudinous tongue; let them not lick
The sweet which is their poison. Your dishonor
Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state
Of that integrity which should become't;
Not having the power to do the good it would,
For th' ill which doth control't. (III.i.149–61)

By this point in the play the noble life is not only being equated with the "deeds of Coriolanus," but with the ironic qualifications of his pride. "A 'noble' life" on his lips can be taken by the tribunes and people simply as "the life of the nobles, the Senate." Coriolanus' plea for the "fundamental part of state," his concern for the "integrity" of the body politic, seemingly echoes Menenius' fable; but "to pluck out/The multitudinous tongue," to eliminate the tribunes, is effectively to deny the people any part in the government. Coriolanus does not want a "blended" voice, but only one. He alone, he half implies, is the proper voice of the state. He is making this plea, he says, in the interest of avoiding "confusion." But the hero who pleads for order, who fears revolution, speaks revolutionary doctrines and nearly starts one. He of course intends a counterrevolution; but he very nearly sets a true popular revolution under way.

The metaphor that runs through Coriolanus' speech is the familiar medical one of the play (used once, but only once, by Plutarch): he offers "a dangerous physic," and in his view he is the health of the state. But to the tribune Sicinius, "He's a disease that must be cut away" (III.i.294). Menenius accepts the implication, but proposes "a cure" rather than "surgery." He would proceed by "the humane way" of compromise; that is, by Chapman's (and Plutarch's) way of "humane government." But the fatality of Coriolanus' nature—his pride and "choler," his lack of temperance—carries him on to destroy what he thinks he is saving. "His nature is too noble for the world," says Menenius,

He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,
Or Jove for's power to thunder. His heart's his mouth:
What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent;
And, being angry, does forget that ever
He heard the name of death. (III.i.255-59)

Here is the man who will equal the gods, the forgelike machine of war and death, deafened by wrath.

Coriolanus' insistence on being true to his heroic nature is constantly to the fore from this point to the end of the play. So in the next scene with the nobles and Volumnia, a scene that has no parallel in Plutarch, he asks with boyish puzzlement,

Why did you wish me milder? Would you have me
False to my nature? Rathe say I play
The man I am. (III.ii.14-16)

Volumnia's sensible advice fits—up to a point—Chapman's and North's concept of "education":

I have a heart as little apt as yours,
But yet a brain that leads my use of anger
To better vantage. (III.ii.29-31)

Menenius comments, "Well said, noble woman!" But this is not Coriolanus' nobility; his is of the pure Homeric type, absolute and without compromise. "You are too absolute," Volumnia well says,

Though therein you can never be too noble
But when extremities speak. (III.ii.40-41)

But Volumnia does not altogether understand her son: it is exactly in "extremities" that the hero must be "too noble," that his nature clearly cries out. Coriolanus faces a dilemma similar to Antony's—how to be both noble and politic. Volumnia attempts to make him feel that the politic can be identified at one and the same time with nobility, with loyalty to the better part of the state and to the family, and most significantly, with loyalty to herself:

I am in this
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles.
(III.ii.64-65)

Her despairing

Do as thou list.
Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'st it from me,
But owe thy pride thyself. (III.ii.128-30)

only increases the sense of their likeness, of the physical bond between them: they are one flesh and one blood.

But the physical intensity of the appeal is persuasive for the moment, and for the first time in the scene, Coriolanus calls her "mother":

Mother, I am going to the marketplace. (III.ii.131)

What this curbing of his nature costs him has been suggested earlier in the same scene, when like Othello he says farewell to arms:

Away, my disposition, and possess me
Some harlot's spirit! My throat of war be turned,
Which quired with my drum, into a pipe
Small as an eunuch. (III.ii.111-14)

and when he suddenly reverses himself:

I will not do't;
Lest I surcease to honor mine own truth,
And by my body's action teach my mind
A most inherent baseness. (III.ii.120-23)

Though the words Coriolanus uses are very like Chapman's his actions have really turned the ideal upside down. While everyone is urging him to conquer his body's "angry part" by discipline of "spirit," he sees only a betrayal of spirit by flesh.

He will seek "a world elsewhere," outside state and family, out of the ordered nature he had known in Rome, and fight, now truly "alone,/Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen/Makes feared and talked of more than seen" (IV.i.29-31). With splendid irony he asserts that though outside society he will still be the same noble hero: "you shall/Hear . . . never of me aught/But what is like me formerly" (IV.i.51-53). In the flattering talk of the Volscians he seems to recover his old nobility, "as if he were son and heir to Mars," but this new-found independence is an illusion, as Aufidius' ominous hints make clear. Aufidius' explanation of why Coriolanus was "hated" and "banished"—though it neglects some reasons, and though it is not Shakespeare's "last word" on his hero—does offer one important hypothesis borne out by much of the play:

whether ['twas] nature,
 Not to be other than one thing, not moving
 From th' casque to th' cushion, but commanding peace
 Even with the same austerity and garb
 As he controlled the war. (IV.vii.41-45)

In this last phase of Coriolanus' career there is, as in Achilles' last battles, something much more frightening about his pride and his wrath. "He was," says Cominius a kind of nothing, titleless,

 Till he had forged himself a name o' th' fire
 Of burning Rome. (V.i.13-15)

He harshly rejects his "old father," Menenius,

Away!

Wife, mother, child, I know not. (V.ii.79, 81)

The Second Watch gives one final impression of Coriolanus' dehumanization just before the women come to beg him to save the city: "He's the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken" (V.ii.110). What then will happen to the man who supposes he is "author of himself," the absolute hero detached from humanity?

As when Menenius pleads with him earlier, he will attempt to separate personal allegiance from allegiance to country. When the women approach, his eye moves quickly from his wife to his mother, who claims and receives his attention during most of the scene. He speaks to her first in the strange impersonal style that others have used of him: "the honored mold/Wherein this trunk was framed" (V.iii.22-23); but at once he is stressing the close physical bond of mother and son: "and in her hand/The grandchild to her blood." With a typical turn, he at once denies this and all similar bonds: "All bond and privilege of nature, break!" He will be deliberately unnatural; but when he sees those "doves' " eyes, he "melts"—and how wonderfully the imagery recalls the hard god-like self he has tried to be: "I melt, and am not/Of stronger earth"—he is not the metallic machine man of earlier scenes. When his "mother bows," it is indeed a "perturbation" in nature, and "great Nature" cries out against it (V.iii.33). He denies "instinct," innate impulse, and, with consummate irony, declares that he is "author of himself," as it were, self-born!

But soon he is yielding to nature in the sense of family affection, as he gives his wife "a kiss/Long as my exile," while still insisting that he is not yielding to nature in the sense of allegiance to his country. When he sees his mother kneeling, he comes out with great hyperbolic oaths in the best heroic vein:

Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach
 Fillip the stars! Then let the mutinous winds
 Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun.
 (V.iii.58-60)

Like Othello and Lear, Coriolanus invokes the very disorder he fears, the disorder of which he is the unconscious instrument. Like Hector, he sees his son as the reincarnation of his own heroism, his words recalling his own nobility and his lonely strength and inhumanity. He prays that the boy may prove

To shame invulnerable, and stick i' th' wars
 Like a great sea-mark, standing every flaw. (V.iii.73-74)

But he is still trying to hold off the claims of wife and mother: "Tell me not," he shouts, "Wherein I seem unnatural."

Then come Volumnia's two great appeals in answer to his poignantly absurd assertion. The keynote of the first is struck in thy sight, which should Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comforts,

 Constrains them weep and shake with fear and sorrow,
 Making the mother, wife, and child, to see
 The son, the husband, and the father tearing
 His country's bowels out. (V.iii.98-103)

The body of the state, here realized with such physical vividness, is equated with mother, wife, and child, as if to say "tearing that body is tearing us." During the rest of the speech, Volumnia's language intensifies this identification until the climax,

thou shalt no sooner
 March to assault thy country than to tread
 (Trust to't, thou shalt not) on thy mother's womb
 That brought thee to this world. (V.iii.122-25)

This violent image is Plutarch's, and the identification of the mother with the body of the state is suggested by one of his comments; but the comment shows also the relative simplicity of his analysis, and his unawareness of the emotional confusion that Volumnia is exploiting so successfully:

yet he had no reason for the love of his mother to pardon his country, but rather he should in pardoning his country, have spared his mother, because his mother and wife were members of the body of his country and city, which he did besiege.

(Plutarch, "The Comparison of Alcibiades with Marcus Coriolanus")

Volumnia's second appeal falls into three distinct phases. First she urges him to reconcile the Romans and the Volscs, offering the same kind of sensible advice she had given earlier when begging him to be "mild" to the tribunes. Next she makes a masterly attack on the very nobility that stands in the way of compromise, pointing out that the only practical "benefit" of being so absolutely noble is to destroy his country and gain a "name . . . /To th' ensuing age abhorred." She enforces her argument with a satirical picture of the godlike role Coriolanus has aimed at, seeking "To imitate the graces of the gods" as if he were to "thunder" like Jove, and yet to "charge" his lightning with a "bolt" that would only split "an oak" (V.iii.140-53). Something, yes, but hardly a cosmic catastrophe. She keeps reminding him that she speaks for wife, son, and mother; and in her final stroke she reinforces all three claims:

This fellow had a Volscian to his mother;
His wife is in Corioles, and his child
Like him by chance. (V.iii.178-80)

Again she identifies personal and social bonds, as she reads him out of family, Rome, and humanity. His reply is one of the great speaking silences in Shakespeare:

Holds her by the hand, silent.

O mother, mother!

What have you done? Behold, the heavens do ope,
The gods look down, and this unnatural scene
They laugh at. (V.iii.182-85)

"Unnatural"—just when he is responding to all these most natural claims. For a moment he seems to see his dilemma more clearly, and to understand that in giving in to his mother he is responding to the demands of his native country and state. But he soon is talking as if all can be well: he can give in to his mother, be false to the Volscians, and "frame convenient peace."

The last scene of the play begins as an ironic repetition of the scene in which he had "mildly" given in to his mother's advice. At that time he had not been able to sustain the part; but now he "bows his nature" and comes "marching" in, "the commoners being with him." In contrast to the usual isolation of his figure from the plebeians, Coriolanus is seen with the people, and we catch another ironic reflection from the past: Menenius' easy companionship with the lower orders. Coriolanus seems for once to "belong," and he cries happily, "I am returned your soldier;/No more infected with my country's love" (V.vi.70-71). What was once his health is now disease, and loyalty to the enemies of Rome is his "cure." He is so terribly unaware of what he has been doing that he responds with dreamlike deafness to Aufidius' cry of "traitor"—the exact echo of the tribunes' earlier "H" as spoken like a traitor" (III.i.162).

When he finally takes in Aufidius' cruel caricature of how he had given in to his mother, he can hardly speak: "Hear'st thou, Mars?" His incoherent cry, reminding us of the godlike soldier he had been, is inadequate, but dramatically concentrated in the highest degree. Shakespeare was never more successful than in this brief dialogue in focusing the rich meanings of a whole play in the slightest verbal gestures. To Aufidius' slanderous "boy of tears," he cries:

Cut me to pieces, Volscies, men and lads,
Stain all your edges on me. "Boy"! False hound!
If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,
That, like an eagle in a dovecote, I
Fluttered your Volscians in Corioles.
Alone I did it. "Boy"? (V.vi.110-15)

"Alone" and "'Boy'?" carry the weight of his whole dramatic career. In "Alone" we recall his cult of independence, his integrity, his insistence on being "Coriolanus." But we hear also the opposite theme in a play in which wholeness of the state is the public ideal, in which metaphors of the body politic keep reminding us that the great natural order is realized in a whole of which the single man is only a part. This is his final denial of nature's bond, making only clearer his real dependence on Rome, his mother, Menenius, and now on the Volscians. "'Boy'?" in its scornful tone is Coriolanus' way of saying "man-hero." But the hero cannot act in this setting; he can only utter frustrated cries. He is in part behaving like a boy, and he had responded to his mother. The single word recalls too a long history of boyish irresponsibility and lack of control.

But there is another view, as always in this play: "The man is noble," one of the Volscians says, "and his fame folds in/This orb o' th' earth" (V.vi.123-24). The "deeds of Coriolanus" cannot be forgotten any more than "the impatience" that North finds so dangerous in the "governor of a state." The closing processional speech, with which we began, marks the death of a hero: "Yet he shall have a noble memory."

If we now compare Coriolanus with the model of all Greek and Roman literary heroes, Achilles, and with the Renaissance counterpart in Chapman and North, and finally with the chief characters of other Shakespearean tragedies, we can define more clearly the character of the play—surely the most original of Shakespeare's heroic dramas, whatever we choose to call it. Throughout Coriolanus Shakespeare is continually recalling the ancient model in imagery associating his hero with divinities and "shunless destiny." Like Menenius, Shakespeare has "godded him indeed." Perhaps Coriolanus is most like Achilles in his passionate pride, in his "choler," in his shifting from "rage to sorrow," emotions that lie very close together, as Plutarch had noted. But he comes nearest to the essence of Homer's hero in his absoluteness, in his determination to imitate "the graces of the gods," in his will to push the heroic to the limit until he destroys his own society along with his enemy's. In reducing all virtues to virtus, he is the Greek hero Romanized, while in his assertion of his own nature in the face of "great Nature," he betrays the Senecan ancestry of the Elizabethan hero. Though many read him lessons in patience, he is incapable of true "learning."

But there is no moment when, like Achilles, he sees his anger and curses it, nothing to correspond to the scene with Priam, no vision of himself and a higher order within which his action and suffering are placed and made more comprehensible. His last gesture is like his first, to "use his lawful sword." He knows little of what Chapman calls the soul's "sovereignty in fit reflection," not to mention "subduing his earthly part for heaven." He is the most Roman, the least Christian, of Shakespeare's major heroes.

This Roman-ness is felt in the austerity of a style that lends itself so well to irony, and that is the best index to the quality of the play. In Coriolanus, Shakespeare seems to turn his back on the richness of language in Antony and Cleopatra, with the deliberate intention of creating a protagonist who will deny much that is common to his own and the Renaissance heroic ideal. And yet there are in Coriolanus the makings of a tragedy in Shakespeare's more typical manner: he is a man nobly conscious of his role, a "governor" like Lear or Macbeth on whom the health of society depends, a person like Lear and Othello of immense impatience in a situation calling for utmost patience, a man like Antony whose action is godlike and connected with dimly perceived supernatural forces. Both are instruments of the mighty Roman state, for Romans a prime symbol of the directing power of fate.

But there is of course an obvious defect that makes even Macbeth tragic in a sense of the word that does not fit Coriolanus: the lack of the troubled conscience that separates Macbeth from the tyrant he seems to be to his enemies. In the final scene with his mother, Coriolanus is barely conscious that he is betraying the Volscians, just as in his last entrance he does not realize that he has been "infected by his country's love." His whole career is based on an illusion of aloneness, the belief that a man, a general, a statesman, can act alone. Hence the bafflement and humiliation when he must bow to others—feelings he can express only in rotelike speeches. It is the spectator, not Coriolanus, who feels the poignancy of this betrayal of others and himself. Like a "dull actor," as he says, he performs dully, and when out of his part, he is completely "out."

For Coriolanus has only one way of meeting the world—assertion of simple soldierly nobility. In this he has much in common with Othello, who also lives by absolutes, whose world collapses at any suggestion that he is not a soldier. But there is no terrible recognition by the hero, as there is in the final scenes of Othello, that simple soldiery and simple justice have not been enough, that they have indeed brought chaos again. Damnation, which Othello calls on himself, and which presupposes a sense of sin, is incomprehensible to this noble Roman. He is equally incapable of "noble" Antony's "I am so lated in the world that I/Have lost my way for ever."

One last comparison with Achilles is to the point. In comparison with Shakespeare's "men," these two are great boys. Both are strangely allied with their mothers, both produce "confusion" by their overdeveloped sense of self and their disregard of the claims of society. The difference in the result depends on the difference noted earlier: Shakespeare sets his hero in a much more complex social world. The noble voice that calls to battle may no longer sound noble in the Capitol. Though it calls for order, it becomes indistinguishable from the voice of tyrant and traitor. The man who fears innovation, who has no gift for making compromises and dealing "mildly," may prove the most violent of innovators, worse than a mere mob. Shakespeare's picture of the people is not flattering, but not unintelligent: one cannot build an orderly society by following the whims of the many-headed monster. But fixity of principle in a prince can be as dangerous to the state as the fickleness of a mob.

Shakespeare's state is necessarily not that of the Roman Republic, since both society and cosmos have been translated in Elizabethan-Jacobean terms. His subject—apart from the peculiar character of Coriolanus—is implicit in the "degree" speech of Troilus and Cressida (I.iii.75 ff.). It should be remembered that Ulysses' speech was occasioned by Achilles' revolt and that Ulysses later tried to show Achilles the evils resulting from his loss of heroic nobility. Shakespeare returns in Coriolanus to the subject implied in these scenes of Troilus and Cressida, but with a new Achilles and a new certainty of aim, and with a resultant concentration lacking in the earlier play. In Troilus and Cressida, Achilles was an ambiguous creature, a lover and a gangster, and the drama of disunity in the state was crossed by a drama of disunity in love. The end, appropriately, is sound and fury, signifying nothing. But in Coriolanus Shakespeare limits the social subject more severely, and though his picture of the social order is highly particularized, it does not lose a large clarity. As in Antony and Cleopatra, the "wide arch/Of the ranged" Roman state is never lost from view.

Against that ordered complexity the simple extremism of Coriolanus stands out in all its nobility and absurdity. The noble simplicity of the hero, the certainty with which issues are expressed and arguments are presented by Coriolanus and by his enemies, and the high decorum of the rather chill oratorical style take us in the direction of French classical drama. This is, after Julius Caesar, Shakespeare's most Latin play.

It was "all in Plutarch," we may be tempted to say. But when we read Plutarch we discover what Shakespeare was capable of learning—how wonderfully he selected and how skillfully he concentrated on his themes, embodying them in particular dramatic expressions. We can almost feel Shakespeare's excitement as he read; his recognition that here was a subject he had wanted to handle as early as when he was writing Julius Caesar and Troilus and Cressida. What a discovery—after reading late medieval versions of the ancient heroic in which the hero is reduced to a chivalric lover or worse, to find that the hero is a man who has never ceased loving his mother, a man for whom marriage is second to war, whose true love is his own heroic image. Hints of these and other traits of Shakespeare's hero—his nobility and heroic virtue, his obstinate pride and lack of self-control—can be found in the "Life of Coriolanus." Other basic features of Shakespeare's drama—the picture of the Roman state and society, the debate over the claims of nature, great and small—can also be traced to Plutarch's text. But though many separate elements of Shakespeare's grand design are Plutarchan, it is Shakespeare who has "put them together," and the "putting together" is a dramatic and poetic feat. The imagery of Volumnia's appeal, for example, is resonant with the sense of the state and society that Shakespeare had presented early in the play. In reporting Coriolanus' death, Plutarch merely says the conspirators "all fell upon him, and killed him in the marketplace, none of the people once offering to rescue him." There is no speech from Aufidius, and, more notable, none from Coriolanus, nothing to correspond to "Alone I did it. 'Boy'?" Those few words show that Shakespeare had combined perfectly an intense and rich understanding of the hero-boy, mother's son, and noble Roman with his sharply outlined picture of the social and political world, in a total vision that makes the cry so large in reference, so poignantly absurd, so tragic in a curiously ironic sense.

A NOTE ON THE SOURCE

The main source used by Shakespeare in writing Coriolanus is the "Life of Coriolanus" in Sir Thomas North's translation of Plutarch's Lives of the Noble Grecians and Romans (first published in 1579). Comparison of the play with the "Life" will remind us that both "source" and "use" are misleading terms for describing what happens when a writer of the first rank makes a new work out of an old one. In writing Coriolanus, Shakespeare was not merely borrowing discrete items from Plutarch; he was engaged in a total imaginative act, seeking to satisfy his inner measure of what was right for his own sensibility, for his sense of the hero's character, and for his complex "feel" of the dramatic world that was coming into being as he wrote. Our certainty that the play is one of Shakespeare's "most assured artistic successes," as T. S. Eliot has said, is strengthened when we discover what he accepted and what he rejected, and particularly when we see how he adapted his borrowings to his vision of Coriolanus and the tragedy as a whole.

Shakespeare's vision—though for all time—was not timeless in origin, but shaped in part by the social and literary culture in which he lived and by the audience for which he produced his plays. We have seen in the Introduction (pp. 1313–15) how the Greco-Roman heroic ideal in its Renaissance form had an effect on Coriolanus and on its meaning for contemporary and succeeding audiences. Shakespeare's treatment of civil disorders in Republican Rome was almost certainly affected also by popular protests and uprisings in England during the early 1600's, disturbances brought on by the enclosure of farm lands and by the lack of grain and the consequent "dearth." That Shakespeare takes the famine as the principal cause for the plebeians' complaints, rather than as in Plutarch "the sore oppression of usurers," is almost certainly traceable to the unrest in England, and, more especially, to the Midlands revolt of 1607. The extensive emphasis in the play—as compared with the "Life"—on the body-state metaphor is probably to be explained in part by the contemporary concern with the dangers of insurrection. Shakespeare also elaborated on Plutarch's brief tale of the body and its members by drawing on Sidney's Apology for Poetry, Livy's Roman History, both in the original and in the translation of Philemon Holland (1600), and William Camden's Remains of a Greater Work Concerning Britain (1605).

The main events of Shakespeare's play, including the important scenes of Coriolanus' attack on the tribuneship (III.i), his banishment and his joining Aufidius (IV.i, v), and the climactic scene with his mother (V.iii), are all based on Plutarch. The principal features that Shakespeare stresses in his portrayal of Coriolanus have their origin, at least in an elementary form, in the pages of the "Life." But Shakespeare has given even greater importance than Plutarch to Coriolanus' pride and uncontrollable temper and especially to the close emotional bond to his mother. Some critics have seen in the prominent role of Menenius, of which there is only the slightest hint in Plutarch, Shakespeare's intention of minimizing the social isolation that Plutarch ascribes to his hero, his unfitness for association with other men. But Menenius spends much of his time warning Coriolanus of these deficiencies, and of the likely consequences of his heroically simple and inept behavior. It should also be noted that in spite of his temperamental aloneness, Plutarch's hero, like Shakespeare's, has strong political supporters among the patricians. Where Shakespeare departs, and significantly, is in eliminating all references to political maneuvering by Coriolanus, of which there are fairly many instances in the "Life." Other critics have noted that Plutarch attributes a reputation for eloquence to Coriolanus, whereas Shakespeare seems to stress his lack of ability as a speaker and debater. But the point surely is that Shakespeare, as Menenius explains, endows Coriolanus with the eloquence of a soldier—violent and powerful, though often tactless, utterance. He has but one style, and hence his calls for the defense of the state sound strangely like his calls to battle. (Compare III.i.149–57 and I.vi.67–75.)

A survey of the principal scenes that are wholly or largely invented by Shakespeare will give some idea of how thoroughly he adapted Plutarch's moral history to fit his peculiar dramatic subject of the Achillean hero exposed to the complexities and necessary compromises of the Roman-Jacobean political world. First, there are all the episodes in which Menenius figures prominently, with the exception of that part of the first scene in which he tells his fable. The occasion for this moral lesson, the retreat to the Sacred Mount, is passed over by Shakespeare, though Plutarch's narrative of it contains his sole mention of Menenius. (In Livy's History, Menenius dies soon after this event takes place.) All the other scenes in which Menenius does so much to defend Coriolanus against his enemies, or to enhance his noble exploits, or to temper his wrath, are entirely of Shakespeare's making. In II.i, there is the bitterly comic telling-off of the tribunes, followed by the joyous welcome of the returning hero; in II.iii, the dialogue with Coriolanus and with the tribunes during the election scene; and the further exchanges with the tribunes in III.i, after Coriolanus has been accused of being a traitor. Although in some of these earlier scenes Shakespeare is using Menenius to voice arguments advanced by the more politic patricians of the "Life," he had little basis in Plutarch for the prominent part taken by Menenius in a number of the scenes that follow Coriolanus' banishment. As often in this play, Shakespeare telescopes two or three Plutarchan scenes into one, centering the action on one of his more important characters. The scene in which Menenius begs Coriolanus to spare Rome is—like Cominius' report of his own attempt—a substitution for one of several embassies from Rome described in Plutarch's narrative.

Shakespeare has invented all the scenes in which Volumnia figures, with the exception of the women's embassy of V.iii. The scene that introduces Volumnia, Virgilia, and Valeria (I.iii), in which Volumnia shows that she had indeed made Coriolanus after her own image of "valiantness," grows from a single remark in the "Life" about the "joy his mother did take of him." The later scene in which she and Menenius urge Coriolanus to act "mildly" in answering the tribunes (III.ii) is a brilliant piece of dramatic foreshadowing, preparing for the final submission of son to mother in Act V. (One characteristic of the play is the number of scenes that have close parallels, in which Coriolanus goes through the same routines but under changed circumstances, which he alone seems not to notice. Hence the odd déjà vu, almost nightmarish quality of much of the action in the latter part of the play.) Shakespeare also introduces a number of other scenes or episodes in which Volumnia has an important part, such as her rejoicing over her son's return from war (II.i), her farewell at the gate and her railing afterward (IV.i, ii), and her triumphant return from the final embassy (V.v). The speeches and scenes in which Shakespeare builds up the ambiguous hate-love relationship between Aufidius and Coriolanus in anticipation of their meeting in IV.v grow from a single reference to their rivalry in the "Life."

No listing of inventions, or of parallels between Coriolanus and Plutarch's narrative, can give a true impression of how wonderfully Shakespeare has transformed the Plutarchan original, even when seeming to follow it closely. The most obvious example, Volumnia's great appeal (V.iii), offers the most telling proof of the art with which Shakespeare adapted North's language to suit the immediate context while keeping in view the larger dramatic and poetic design of the play. A few instances may suggest what can be learned by comparing the scene with the original in North's translation. Where Plutarch's Coriolanus is "overcome with natural affection" even before his mother speaks, Shakespeare's hero is caught in a violently shifting debate between the claims of nature, great and small, a conflict expressed in direct speech wholly invented by Shakespeare (lines 22-37). As we have seen in the Introduction (p. 1316), the debate is not limited to this speech but runs deeply through the play. In the play, in which the bond with the mother is so central to the hero's character, the son is the first to kneel, and in the wholly new passages between Coriolanus and his son, we are reminded of the parallel to Hector (in a domestic and "natural" moment Coriolanus becomes less Achillean); we are reminded too of the early scene in which the boy-killer of butterflies is Coriolanus in miniature. The image he invokes of "a great sea-mark" is rooted in the imagery of natural forces and "things" so characteristic of Shakespeare's awesome and nonhuman hero. An example of where the verbal parallels are closest will indicate the remarkable depth and consistency of Shakespeare's dramatic and poetic art:

VOLUMNIA thou shalt no sooner
March to assault thy country than to tread
(Trust to't, thou shalt not) on thy mother's womb
That brought thee to this world. (V.iii.122-25)

thou shalt see, my son, and trust unto it, thou shalt no sooner march forward to assault thy country, but thy foot shall tread upon thy mother's womb that brought thee first into this world.

(Plutarch, "Life of Coriolanus")

Shakespeare has closely imitated in his verse the climactic form of North's sentence, with its skillful suspension through well-placed pauses and the repeated "thou shalt"; but by building the whole speech to end at this point, he has exploited the emotional climax much more fully than North, who has Volumnia go straight on with "And I may not defer to see the day . . ." More important, Shakespeare anticipates the image earlier in the speech in a way to make inescapable the identification of the mother's physical self with "mother Rome." North has Volumnia say earlier, "making myself to see my son, and my daughter here her husband, besieging the walls of his native country." Shakespeare brings his triple allegiance home and focuses it in a metaphor of such violence that even Coriolanus must feel the unnaturalness of his behavior and recognize in advance the implication of the final image:

Making the mother, wife, and child, to see
The son, the husband, and the father, tearing
His country's bowels out. (V.iii.101-03)

The identity of "mothers," human and national, is quietly underlined a moment later in Volumnia's passing reference to "The country, our dear nurse." Compare with this North's relatively aloof and cold "the nurse of their native country." But the full impact of the appeal would be lost if we did not feel behind these physical mother-and-country images the recurring metaphors of the body politic and the large dramatic and philosophic premise they express. The personal and the patriotic appeals, which Shakespeare found in Plutarch, have been fused with a local intensity of feeling and with a far-reaching reference to Shakespeare's view, both of his individual characters and of the society in which they act. Dryden once spoke of Shakespeare as having "all the images of Nature . . . present to him" as he wrote. In comparing Volumnia's speech with its "source," we see Shakespeare writing Coriolanus with one eye on North, to be sure, but with all the images of the play and all their dramatic values present to his plastic imagination.

A NOTE ON THE TEXT

The text of Coriolanus has survived only in the First Folio (1623), on which the present edition is based. There are no records of performances earlier than 1623, but there is a mocking imitation of the curious phrase, "lurched all swords of the garland" (II.ii.101), in Ben Jonson's Epicoene, or The Silent Woman (1609). It is therefore almost certain that the play was written and performed not later than 1609. The use in Menenius' fable of the body and its members and of expressions from William Camden's Remains of 1605, and the probable allusion to the Midlands revolt of 1607, point to a date of 1607 or later. (See A Note on the Source.) There is also the possible reference to the Great Frost of 1607-08 in the phrase "the coal of fire upon the ice" (I.i.174). It seems safe to assume that Coriolanus was written after Antony and Cleopatra, somewhere between 1607 and 1609.

The Folio text of Coriolanus might be described, like that of The Tempest, as a distinguished one; it was prepared with great care and is especially remarkable for its elaborate stage directions. W. W. Greg's assertion that the text was printed from the author's manuscript is now widely accepted. The stage directions, presumably Shakespeare's own, are those of a man of the theater who has his eye on the stage and the actors. For example: "Enter Marcius and Aufidius, at several doors" (I.viii); "They all bustle about Coriolanus" (III.i.184); and the most telling gesture of the play, "Holds her by the hand, silent" (V.iii.182).

But though the text brings us so close to the practicing hand of the poet-playwright, it was edited and printed by mortal men. It has a fairly high number of errors, and emendations have been found necessary in at least twenty to twenty-five places. One line has been omitted (II.iii.245), and in two passages the style is so cryptic as to seem almost surely corrupt (III.ii.74-80; V.i.67-69). The most disturbing defect of the Folio text of Coriolanus is the widespread mislineation. There are many lines that are either too short or too long, as measured by the usual blank-verse norm, and it is often very hard to determine where the line division should occur. Most of these abnormalities, it has been pointed out, come in short speeches, or at the end or beginning of speeches in rapid dialogue. There are a relatively few instances in which speeches are assigned to seemingly inappropriate speakers. There are also variations in the names of speakers, most of them of little significance, and usually in names of minor persons. The town that gives the hero his honorific title is usually called "Corioles," though "Coriolus" and "Corialus" also occur. There is considerable uncertainty as to how both "Corioles" and "Coriolanus" are to be accented. The common reader, like the learned editor, is free to follow his rhythmic sense in particular lines: "Coríoles" or "Corióles"? "Coriolánus" (the usual pronunciation) or "Coríolanus"?

The present edition follows the Folio text closely, but spelling and punctuation are modernized, abbreviations are amplified, names of speakers are regularized, and some stage directions are moved slightly. The act divisions (translated from Latin) are those of the Folio; no scenes, except the first, are indicated in the Folio text. All other scene divisions printed here (in brackets) are those of the Globe edition. The list of readings given below includes only those words in the Folio that have been omitted or emended. The reading adopted in this edition is printed in boldface type, followed by the original reading in roman.

I.i.7 Marcus Martius (throughout the play) 16 on one 28 First Citizen All 35 Second Citizen All 57 First Citizen 2 Cit. (throughout the rest of Scene i) 93 stale't scale't 112 tauntingly taintingly 216 Shouting Shooting 220 unroofed vnroo't 228 s.d. Junius Annus 241 Lartius Lucius
I.ii.s.d. Corioles Coriolus 4 on one 30 They've Th'haue
I.iii.36 that's that 43 sword, contemning. Tell sword. Con-tenning, tell 82 Virgilia Vlug, 84 yarn yearne 85 Ithaca Athica 98 whom who
I.iv.s.d., 12 s.d. Corioles Corialus 31 herd of—boils Heard of Byles 42 trenches. Follow's Trenches followes 45 s.d. Enters the gates Enter the Gati 56 Were Weare 57 Cato's Calues
I.vi.21 Who's Whose 22 flayed Flead 53 Antiates Antients 70 Lesser Lessen
I.viii.7 Holloa hollow

I.ix.46 coverture Ouerture 50 shout shoot 65 Caius Marcus Caius (in this order throughout)
I.x.30 cypress Cyprus
II.i.24 how are ho ware 58 cannot can 63 you you you 65 bisson beesome 170 Coriolanus Martius Caius Coriolanus 182 wear were 184 Coriolanus Com. 190 You yon 207 s.d. Brutus Enter Brutus 216 flamens Plamins 237 napless Naples 258 touch teach
II.ii.25 ascent assent 50 state's states 81 one on's on ones 91 chin Shinne 92 bristled brizled
II.iii.28 wedged wadg'd 43 all together altogether 69 Ay, not I, but 116 hire higher 117 toge tongue 245 And Censorinus that was so surnamed [F omits; this line, invented by N. Delius in his edition of 1872, is indebted to Plutarch 256 Citizens All
III.i.33 herd Heard 48 Coriolanus Com. 91 good God! 92 reckless wreaklesse 126 Their There 143 Where one Where-on 185 All [F has no speech prefix here, but gives "All" before line 187] 214 All [Citizens] All Ple. 228 him! him. Exeunt. 229 your our 230 Coriolanus Com. 236 Cominius Corio. 237 Coriolanus Mene. [speech assigned to Menenius through line 241] 239 Menenius [see preceding note] 287 our one 323 bring him bring him in peace
III.ii.21 thwartings things 32 herd heart 55 roted roasted 115 lulls lull
III.iii.32 for th' fourth 36 Throng Through 55 accents Actions 89 flaying Fleaing 99 do doth 110 for from 136 s.d. The other Senators Cumalijs
IV.i.24 thee the 34 Whither wilt Whether will IV.iii.33 will well
IV.iv.23 hate haue
IV.v.3 master M. 82 Whooped Hoop'd 98 Thou'rt Th'art 113 clip cleep 183 lief liue 236 sleepy sleepe
IV.vi.4 do do we 34 lamentation Lamention 90 wi' th' with 138 one oue
IV.vii.34 osprey Aspray 37 'twas 'was 39 defect detect 49 virtues Vertue 55 founder fouler
V.i.16 wracked fair wrack'd for
V.ii.s.d. on or 16 haply happely 60 errand arrant 63 but by my but my 100 swoon swoond
V.iii.48 prate pray 63 holp hope 104 enmity's enmities 141 war's Warres 149 fine fiue 152 charge change 169 him with him with him with 192 stead steed
V.iv.49 s.d. all together altogether
V.v.4 Unshout Vnshoot
V.vi.114 Fluttered Flatter'd 129 s.d. the Conspirators both the Conspirators

THE TRAGEDY OF CORIOLANUS

[Dramatis Personae]

CAIUS MARCIUS *afterwards Caius Marcius
Coriolanus*
TITUS LARTIUS } generals against the Volscians
COMINIUS }
MENENIUS AGRIPPA friend to Coriolanus
SICINIUS VELUTUS } tribunes of the people
JUNIUS BRUTUS }
YOUNG MARCIUS son to Coriolanus
A ROMAN HERALD
A ROMAN named Nicanor
TULLUS AUFIDIUS general of the Volscians
LIEUTENANT to Aufidius
CONSPIRATORS with Aufidius

A VOLSCIAN named Adrian
A CITIZEN of Antium
TWO VOLSCIAN GUARDS
VOLUMNIA mother to Coriolanus
VIRGILIA wife to Coriolanus
VALERIA friend to Virgilia
GENTLEWOMAN attending on Virgilia
USHER attending on Valeria
ROMAN AND VOLSCIAN SENATORS
PATRICIANS AEDILES LICTORS
SOLDIERS CITIZENS MESSENGERS SERVANTS to Aufidius OTHER
ATTENDANTS

Scene: Rome and the neighborhood; Corioli and the neighborhood; Antium]

A C T I

Scene I. [Rome. A street.]

Enter a company of mutinous CITIZENS with staves, clubs, and other weapons.

FIRST CITIZEN Before we proceed any further, hear me speak.

ALL Speak, speak.

FIRST CITIZEN You are all resolved rather to die than to famish? 5

ALL Resolved, resolved.

FIRST CITIZEN First you know, Caius Marcius is chief enemy to the people.

ALL We know't, we know't.

FIRST CITIZEN Let us kill him, and we'll have corn° 10 at our own price. Is't a verdict?

ALL No more talking on't; let it be done. Away,
away!

SECOND CITIZEN One word, good citizens.

FIRST CITIZEN We are accounted poor citizens, the 15 patricians good.° What authority surfeits on would relieve us. If they would yield us but the superfluity while it were wholesome, we might guess° they relieved us humanely; but they think we are too dear;°
the leanness that afflicts us, the object° of our misery, is 20 as an inventory to particularize their abundance;° our sufferance is a gain to them. Let us revenge this with our pikes° ere we become rakes.° For the gods know
I speak this in hunger for bread, not in thirst for revenge. 25

SECOND CITIZEN Would you proceed especially against Caius Marcius?

16good well-off 18guessthink 19dear expensive 20object sight 21 inventory . . . abundance list in which to read a detailed account of their wealth as compared with our poverty
23 pikes pitchforks; rakes cf. lean as a rake

The decorative border shown above appeared on the first page of Coriolanus in the First Folio edition of Shakespeare's plays, 1623.
I.i.10 corn grain (wheat, barley, etc., not Indian corn)

FIRST CITIZEN Against him first: he's a very dog to the commonalty.^o

SECOND CITIZEN Consider you what services he 30 has done for his country?

FIRST CITIZEN Very well, and could be content to give him good report for't, but that he pays himself with being proud.

SECOND CITIZEN Nay, but speak not maliciously. 35

FIRST CITIZEN I say unto you, what he hath done famously he did it to that end; though soft-conscienced men can be content to say it was for his country, he did it to please his mother and to be partly proud,^o which he is, even to the altitude of his virtue.^o 40

SECOND CITIZEN What he cannot help in his nature you account a vice in him. You must in no way say he is covetous.

FIRST CITIZEN If I must not, I need not be barren of accusations. He hath faults (with surplus) to tire in 45 repetition. (Shouts within.) What shouts are these? The other side o' th' city is risen. Why stay we prating here? To th' Capitol!^o

ALL Come, come.

FIRST CITIZEN Soft,^o who comes here? 50

Enter MENENIUS Agrippa.

SECOND CITIZEN Worthy Menenius Agrippa, one that hath always loved the people.

FIRST CITIZEN He's one honest enough; would all the rest were so!

MENENIUS

What work's, my countrymen, in hand? Where go you 55

With bats and clubs? The matter? Speak, I pray you.

FIRST CITIZEN Our business is not unknown to th' Senate; they have had inkling this fortnight what we intend to do, which now we'll show 'em in deeds. They say poor suitors have strong breaths; they shall 60 know we have strong arms too.

MENENIUS

Why, masters, my good friends, mine honest neighbors,

Will you undo yourselves?

FIRST CITIZEN We cannot, sir; we are undone already. 65

MENENIUS

I tell you, friends, most charitable care Have the patricians of you. For your wants, Your suffering in this dearth,^o you may as well Strike at the heaven with your staves as lift them Against the Roman state, whose course will on 70 The way it takes, cracking ten thousand curbs^o Of more strong link asunder than can ever Appear in your impediment.^o For the dearth, The gods, not the patricians, make it, and Your knees to them (not arms) must help. Alack, 75 You are transported^o by calamity

Thither where more attends you; and you slander The helms^o o' th' state, who care for you like fathers, When you curse them as enemies.

FIRST CITIZEN Care for us! True, indeed! They 80 ne'er cared for us yet. Suffer us to famish, and their storehouses crammed with grain; make edicts for usury, to support usurers; repeal daily any wholesome act established against the rich, and provide more piercing statutes daily to chain up and restrain the poor. 85 If the wars eat us not up, they will; and there's all the love they bear us.

MENENIUS

Either you must Confess yourselves wondrous malicious, Or be accused of folly. I shall tell you 90 A pretty tale; it may be you have heard it; But since it serves my purpose, I will venture To stale't^o a little more.

FIRST CITIZEN Well, I'll hear it, sir. Yet you must not think to fob off^o our disgrace^o with a tale. But, 95 and't^o please you, deliver.

MENENIUS

There was a time when all the body's members Rebelled against the belly; thus accused it: That only like a gulf^o it did remain I' th' midst o' th' body, idle and unactive, 100 Still cupboarding the viand,^o never bearing Like labor with the rest; where th' other instruments^o Did see and hear, devise, instruct, walk, feel, And, mutually participate,^o did minister Unto the appetite and affection^o common 105 Of the whole body. The belly answered—

FIRST CITIZEN Well, sir, what answer made the belly?

MENENIUS

Sir, I shall tell you. With a kind of smile, Which ne'er came from the lungs, but even thus— 110 For, look you, I may make the belly smile As well as speak—it tauntingly replied To th' discontented members, the mutinous parts That envied his receipt;^o even so most fitly As you malign our senators for that 115 They are not such as you.

FIRST CITIZEN Your belly's answer—What? The kingly crownèd head, the vigilant eye, The counselor heart, the arm our soldier, Our steed the leg, the tongue our trumpeter, With other muniments^o and petty helps 120 In this our fabric, if that they—

MENENIUS

What then? 'Fore me,^o this fellow speaks! What then? What then?

FIRST CITIZEN

Should by the cormorant belly be restrained, Who is the sink^o o' th' body—

MENENIUS

Well, what then?

29 commonalty common people 39 to be partly proud in part from pride 40 virtue valor (Latin sense) 48 Capitol Capitoline Hill, on which the Temple of Jupiter stood (here and often, for the Senate House nearby) 50 Soft stop (an interjection) 68 dearth famine 71 curbs restraints 73 in your impediment in any hindrance you make 76 transported carried out of your minds

78 helms helmsmen 93 stale't make it stale 95 fob off set aside with a trick; disgrace misfortune 96 and't if it 99 gulf whirlpool 101 viand food 102 instruments organs 104 mutually participate taking part in common 105 affection inclination 114 his receipt what he received 120 muniments furnishings (fortifications) 122 'Fore me by my soul 124 sink sewer

FIRST CITIZEN

The former agents, if they did complain,
What could the belly answer?

MENENIUS

I will tell you;

If you'll bestow a small (of what you have little)
Patience awhile, you'st° hear the belly's answer.

FIRST CITIZEN

Y' are° long about it.

MENENIUS

Note me this, good friend

Your most grave belly° was deliberate,
Not rash like his accusers, and thus answered:
"True is it, my incorporate friends," quoth he,
"That I receive the general food at first,
Which you do live upon; and fit it is,
Because I am the storehouse and the shop°
Of the whole body. But, if you do remember,
I send it through the rivers of your blood,
Even to the court, the heart, to th' seat o' th' brain;
And, through the cranks° and offices° of man,
The strongest nerves° and small inferior veins
From me receive that natural competency°
Whereby they live; and though that all at once"—
You, my good friends, this says the belly, mark me—

FIRST CITIZEN

Ay, sir; well, well.

MENENIUS

"Though all at once cannot

See what I do deliver out to each,
Yet I can make my audit up, that all
From me do back receive the flour of all,
And leave me but the bran." What say you to't?

FIRST CITIZEN

It was an answer. How apply you this?

MENENIUS

The senators of Rome are this good belly,
And you the mutinous members. For examine
Their counsels and their cares, digest° things rightly Touching the weal o' th' common,° you shall find
No public benefit which you receive
But it proceeds or comes from them to you,
And no way from yourselves. What do you think,
You, the great toe of this assembly?

FIRST CITIZEN

I the great toe! Why the great toe?

MENENIUS

For that, being one o' th' lowest, basest, poorest,
Of this most wise rebellion, thou goest foremost.
Thou rascal,° that are worst in blood° to run,
Lead'st first to win some vantage.°
But make you ready your stiff° bats and clubs;
Rome and her rats are at the point of battle;
The one side must have bale.°

Enter Caius MARCIUS.

Hail, noble Marcius!

MARCIUS

125 Thanks. What's the matter, you dissentious rogues
That, rubbing the poor itch of your opinion,
Make yourselves scabs?°

FIRST CITIZEN

We have ever your good word.

MARCIUS

He that will give good words to thee will flatter
Beneath abhorring. What would you have, you curs, 170
That like nor peace nor war? The one affrights you,
The other makes you proud. He that trusts to you,
Where he should find you lions, finds you hares;
Where foxes, geese. You are no surer, no,
Than is the coal of fire upon the ice, 175
Or hailstone in the sun. Your virtue is
To make him worthy whose offense subdues him°
And curse that justice did it.° Who deserves greatness
Deserves your hate; and your affections° are 180
A sick man's appetite, who desires most that
Which would increase his evil. He that depends Upon your favors swims with fins of lead
And hews down oaks with rushes. Hang ye! Trust ye?
With every minute you do change a mind,
And call him noble that was now your hate, 185
Him vile that was your garland. What's the matter
That in these several places of the city
You cry against the noble Senate, who (Under the gods) keep you in awe, which else
Would feed on one another? What's their seeking? 190

MENENIUS

For corn at their own rates, whereof they say
The city is well stored.

MARCIUS

Hang 'em! They say!

They'll sit by th' fire, and presume to know
What's done i' th' Capitol: who's like to rise,
Who thrives and who declines; side factions° and give 195
out
Conjectural marriages, making parties strong,
And feebling° such as stand not in their liking,
Below their cobbled shoes. They say there's grain enough!
155 Would the nobility lay aside their ruth,°
And let me use my sword, I'd make a quarry° 200
With thousands of these quartered slaves, as high
As I could pick my lance.

MENENIUS

160 Nay, these are almost thoroughly persuaded;
For thou abundantly they lack discretion,
Yet are they passing° cowardly. But, I beseech you, 205
What says the other troop?

MARCIUS

They are dissolved. Hang 'em!

They said they were an-hungry;° sighed forth proverbs°—

That hunger broke stone walls, that dogs must eat,
That meat was made for mouths, that the gods sent
not

128 you'st you'll (for "you shalt") 129 Y' are you're 130 Your . . . belly this most grave belly we speak of 135 shop factory 139 cranks winding paths; offices parts of a house where household work is done, e.g., kitchen 140 nerves tendons 141 natural competency supply adequate to their nature 152 digest digest 153 weal . . . common welfare of the people 161 rascal a lean deer, or a hound; blood condition 162 vantage advantage 163 stiff stout 165 bale harm

168 Make yourselves scabs make scabs for yourselves (also, "make yourselves into loathsome fellows") 177 subdues him lays him low 178 that . . . it the justice that punished him 179 affections desires 195 side factions take sides (form parties) 197 feebling weakening (bringing down) 199 ruth compassion 200 quarry heap of dead (usually of game animals) 205 passing exceedingly 207 an-hungry hungry; sighed forth proverbs implying that they talk like rustics

Corn for the rich men only. With these shreds
 They vented their complainings, which being answered,
 And a petition granted them, a strange one,
 To break the heart of generosity°
 And make bold power look pale, they threw their caps
 As they would hang them on the horns o' th' moon, 215
 Shouting their emulation.°

MENENIUS What is granted them?

MARCIUS
 Five tribunes to defend their vulgar° wisdoms,
 Of their own choice. One's Junius Brutus—
 Sicinius Velutus, and—I know not. 'Sdeath!
 The rabble should have first unroofed the city,
 Ere so prevailed with me; it will in time
 Win upon power° and throw forth greater themes
 For insurrection's arguing.°

MENENIUS This is strange.

MARCIUS
 Go, get you home, you fragments!

Enter a MESSENGER, hastily.

MESSENGER
 Where's Caius Marcius?

MARCIUS Here: what's the matter? 225

MESSENGER
 The news is, sir, the Volsces are in arms.

MARCIUS
 I am glad on't: then we shall ha' means to vent°
 Our musty superfluity. See, our best elders.

Enter SICINIUS Velutus, Junius BRUTUS, COMINIUS, TITUS Lartius, with other SENATORS.

FIRST SENATOR
 Marcius, 'tis true that you have lately told us;
 The Volsces are in arms.

MARCIUS They have a leader, 230
 Tullus Aufidius, that will put you to't.°
 I sin in envying his nobility;
 And were I anything but what I am,
 I would wish me only he.

COMINIUS You have fought together.

MARCIUS
 Were half to half the world by th' ears, and he 235
 Upon my party, I'd revolt, to make Only my wars with him. He is a lion
 That I am proud to hunt.

FIRST SENATOR Then, worthy Marcius,
 Attend upon Cominius to these wars.

COMINIUS
 It is your former promise.

MARCIUS Sir, it is, 240
 And I am constant.° Titus Lartius, thou
 Shalt see me once more strike at Tullus' face.
 What, art thou stiff?° Stand'st out?°

TITUS No, Caius Marcius;

I'll lean upon one crutch and fight with t' other
 Ere stay behind this business.

MENENIUS O, true-bred! 245

FIRST SENATOR
 Your company to th' Capitol; where I know
 Our greatest friends attend us.

TITUS [To COMINIUS.] Lead you on.

[To MARCIUS.]

Follow Cominius; we must follow you;
 Right worthy you priority.°

COMINIUS Noble Marcius!

FIRST SENATOR [To the CITIZENS.]

Hence to your homes; begone! 250

MARCIUS Nay, let them follow. 250

The Volsces have much corn; take these rats thither
 To gnaw their garners. Worshipful mutineers,
 Your valor puts well forth.° Pray, follow. Exeunt.

CITIZENS steal away. Manet° SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

SICINIUS
 Was ever man so proud as is this Marcius?

BRUTUS
 He has no equal. 255

SICINIUS
 When we were chosen tribunes for the people—

BRUTUS
 Marked you his lip and eyes?

SICINIUS Nay, but his taunts.

BRUTUS
 Being moved, he will not spare to gird° the gods.

SICINIUS
 Bemock the modest moon.

BRUTUS
 The present wars devour him; he is grown 260
 Too proud to be so valiant.°

SICINIUS Such a nature,
 Tickled with good success,° disdains the shadow
 Which he treads on at noon. But I do wonder
 His insolence can brook to be commanded Under Cominius.

BRUTUS Fame, at the which he aims, 265

In whom already he's well graced, cannot Better be held, nor more attained, than by
 A place below the first. For what miscarries
 Shall be the general's fault, though he perform
 To th' utmost of a man; and giddy censure 270
 Will then cry out of Marcius, "O, if he Had borne the business!"

SICINIUS Besides, if things go well,
 Opinion, that so sticks on Marcius, shall
 Of his demerits° rob Cominius.

BRUTUS Come: 275
 Half all Cominius' honors are to Marcius,
 Though Marcius earned them not; and all his faults
 To Marcius shall be honors, though indeed
 In aught he merit not.

SICINIUS Let's hence, and hear

249 Right . . . priority you well deserve first place 253 puts well forth gives fair promise (literally, buds) 253 s.d. Manet remains (Latin; although the subject is plural, this form, the third person singular, commonly appears in Elizabethan stage directions) 258 gird taunt 260–61 grown . . . valiant i.e., such pride is not permissible in one so warlike (because dangerous) 262 success outcome 274 demerits deserts

213 break . . . generosity give the deathblow to the nobility
 216 Shouting their emulation expressing envious joy 217 vulgar common, plebeian 222 Win upon power get the better of authority 223 For insurrection's arguing for rebels to debate in action (abstract for concrete, as often in Coriolanus)
 227 vent get rid of 231 put you to't test you severely
 241 constant faithful 243 stiff obstinate, set (on not fighting);
 Stand'st out You're staying out of it?

How the dispatch^o is made; and in what fashion,
 More than his singularity,^o he goes
 Upon this present action.
 BRUTUS Let's along. Exeunt.

[Scene II. Corioli. The Senate House.]

Enter Tullus AUFIDIUS, with SENATORS of Corioles.

FIRST SENATOR

So, your opinion is, Aufidius,
 That they of Rome are ent' red in^o our counsels,
 And know how we proceed.

AUFIDIUS

Is it not yours?

What^o ever have been thought on in this state
 That could be brought to bodily act ere Rome
 Had circumvention?^o 'Tis not four days gone
 Since I heard thence—these are the words—I think I have the letter here. Yes, here it is:

"They have pressed a power,^o but it is not known Whether for east or west. The dearth is great;
 The people mutinous; and it is rumored,
 Cominius, Marcius your old enemy
 (Who is of Rome worse hated than of you),
 And Titus Lartius, a most valiant Roman,
 These three lead on this preparation^o
 Whither 'tis bent—most likely 'tis for you.
 Consider of it."

FIRST SENATOR Our army's in the field.

We never yet made doubt but Rome was ready
 To answer us.

AUFIDIUS

Nor did you think it folly

To keep your great pretenses^o veiled till when They needs must show themselves; which in the hatching,

It seemed, appeared to Rome. By the discovery
 We shall be short'ned in our aim, which was
 To take in^o many towns ere almost Rome
 Should know we were afoot.

SECOND SENATOR

Noble Aufidius,

Take your commission; hie you to your bands:
 Let us alone to guard Corioles.

If they set down before's,^o for the remove^o
 Bring up your army; but I think you'll find They've not prepared for us.

AUFIDIUS

O, doubt not that;

I speak from certainties. Nay, more,
 Some parcels^o of their power are forth already,
 And only hitherward.^o I leave your honors.
 If we and Caius Marcius chance to meet,
 'Tis sworn between us we shall ever strike
 Till one can do no more.

ALL

The gods assist you!

AUFIDIUS

280 And keep your honors safe!

FIRST SENATOR

Farewell.

SECOND SENATOR

Farewell.

ALL Farewell.

Exeunt omnes.^o

[Scene III. Rome. A room in Marcius' house.]

Enter VOLUMNIA and VIRGILIA, mother and wife to Marcius. They set them down on two low stools, and sew.

VOLUMNIA I pray you, daughter, sing, or express yourself in a more comfortable^o sort. If my son were my husband, I should freelier rejoice in that absence wherein he won honor than in the embracements of his bed where he would show most love. When yet 5 he was but tender-bodied, and the only son of my womb; when youth with comeliness plucked all gaze^o his way; when, for a day of kings' entreaties, a mother should not sell him an hour from her beholding; I, considering how honor would become such a person^o— 10 that it was no better than picture-like to hang by th' wall, if renown made it not stir—was pleased to let him seek danger where he was like to find fame. To a cruel war I sent him, from whence he returned, his brows bound with oak.^o I tell thee, daughter, I sprang 15 not more in joy at first hearing he was a man-child than now in first seeing he had proved himself a man.

VIRGILIA But had he died in the business, madam,
 how then?

VOLUMNIA Then his good report should have been 20
 my son; I therein would have found issue. Hear me profess^o sincerely: had I a dozen sons, each in my love alike, and none less dear than thine and my good Marcius, I had rather had eleven die nobly for their country than one voluptuously surfeit out of action. 25

Enter a GENTLEWOMAN.

GENTLEWOMAN

Madam, the Lady Valeria is come to visit you.

VIRGILIA

Beseech^o you give me leave to retire myself.

VOLUMNIA

Indeed, you shall not.

Methinks I hear hither your husband's drum;

See him pluck Aufidius down by th' hair— 30

As children from a bear, the Volsces shunning him.

Methinks I see him stamp thus, and call thus:

"Come on, you cowards, you were got^o in fear, Though you were born in Rome." His bloody brow
 With his mailed hand then wiping, forth he goes, 35
 Like to a harvest-man that's tasked to mow
 Or^o all or lose his hire.

VIRGILIA

His bloody brow? O Jupiter, no blood!

VOLUMNIA

Away, you fool! It more becomes a man

38 s.d. omnes all (Latin)

I.iii.2 comfortable cheerful 7 plucked all gaze drew the eyes of all 10 person handsome figure 15 oak "garland" of honor for saving a fellow Roman in battle 22 profess declare 27 Beseech I beg 33 got begotten 37 Or either 279 dispatch execution of the business 280 More . . .

 singularity apart from his usual peculiarity of manner
 I.ii.2 ent' red in initiated into (familiar with) 4 What plural, i.e., "counsels," line 2 6 circumvention means to circumvent 9 pressed a power collected troops 15 preparation force that has been prepared 20 great pretenses main intentions (cf. grand design) 24 take in capture 28 set down before's lay siege to us; remove raising of the siege 32 parcels portions 33 hitherward i.e., to attack Rome

Than gilt his trophy.° The breasts of Hecuba,°
When she did suckle Hector, looked not lovelier
Than Hector's forehead when it spit forth blood
At Grecian sword, contemning.° Tell Valeria
We are fit° to bid her welcome.

Exit GENTLEWOMAN.

VIRGILIA

Heavens bless° my lord from fell° Aufidius! 40

VOLUMNIA

He'll beat Aufidius' head below his knee,
And tread upon his neck.

Enter VALERIA, with an USHER° and a GENTLEWOMAN.

VALERIA My ladies both, good day to you.

VOLUMNIA Sweet madam!

VIRGILIA I am glad to see your ladyship. 50

VALERIA How do you both? You are manifest housekeepers.° What are you sewing here? A fine spot,° in good faith. How does your little son?

VIRGILIA I thank your ladyship; well, good madam.

VOLUMNIA He had rather see the swords and hear a 55 drum than look upon his schoolmaster.

VALERIA O' my word, the father's son! I'll swear 'tis a very pretty boy. O' my troth, I looked upon him o' Wednesday half an hour together; has such a confirmed° countenance! I saw him run after a gilded 60 butterfly; and when he caught it, he let it go again;
and after it again; and over and over he comes, and up again; caught it again; or whether his fall enraged him, or how 'twas, he did so set his teeth, and tear it.
O, I warrant, how he mammocked° it! 65

VOLUMNIA One on's° father's moods.

VALERIA Indeed, la, 'tis a noble child.

VIRGILIA A crack,° madam.

VALERIA Come, lay aside your stitchery; I must have you play the idle huswife with me this afternoon. 70

VIRGILIA No, good madam; I will not out of doors.

VALERIA Not out of doors!

VOLUMNIA She shall, she shall.

VIRGILIA Indeed, no, by your patience;° I'll not over the threshold till my lord return from the wars. 75

VALERIA Fie, you confine yourself most unreasonably; come, you must go visit the good lady that lies in.

VIRGILIA I will wish her speedy strength, and visit her with my prayers; but I cannot go thither. 80

VOLUMNIA Why I pray you?

VIRGILIA 'Tis not to save labor, nor that I want° love.

VALERIA You would be another Penelope;° yet, they say, all the yarn she spun in Ulysses' absence did but fill Ithaca° full of moths. Come; I would your cambric 85 were sensible° as your finger, that you might leave pricking it for pity. Come, you shall go with us.

VIRGILIA No, good madam, pardon me; indeed, I will not forth.

VALERIA In truth, la, go with me, and I'll tell you ex- 90 cellent news of your husband.

VIRGILIA O, good madam, there can be none yet.

VALERIA Verily, I do not jest with you; there came news from him last night.

VIRGILIA Indeed, madam? 95

VALERIA In earnest, it's true; I heard a senator speak
it. Thus it is: the Volsces have an army forth; against whom Cominius the general is gone, with one part of our Roman power. Your lord and Titus Lartius are set down before their city Corioles; they nothing 100 doubt prevailing, and to make it brief wars. This is true, on mine honor; and so, I pray, go with us.

VIRGILIA Give me excuse, good madam; I will obey
you in everything hereafter.

VOLUMNIA Let her alone, lady; as she is now, she will 105
but disease our better mirth.°

VALERIA In troth, I think she would. Fare you well, then. Come, good sweet lady. Prithee, Virgilia, turn thy solemnness out o' door, and go along with us.

VIRGILIA No, at a word,° madam; indeed, I must not. 110
I wish you much mirth.

VALERIA Well then, farewell. Exeunt LADIES.

[Scene IV. Before Corioli.]

Enter MARCIUS, Titus LARTIUS, with drum and colors, with CAPTAINS and SOLDIERS, as before the city Corioles. To them a MESSENGER.

MARCIUS

Yonder comes news: a wager they have met.

LARTIUS

My horse to yours, no.

MARCIUS

'Tis done.

LARTIUS

Agreed.

MARCIUS

Say, has our general met the enemy?

MESSENGER

They lie in view, but have not spoke° as yet.

LARTIUS

So, the good horse is mine.

MARCIUS

I'll buy him of you. 5

LARTIUS

No, I'll nor sell nor give him; lend you him I will
For half a hundred years. Summon the town.

MARCIUS

How far off lie these armies?

MESSENGER

Within this mile and half.

MARCIUS

Then shall we hear their 'larum,° and they ours.

Now, Mars, I prithee, make us quick in work, 10

That we with smoking° swords may march from
hence

To help our fielded° friends! Come, blow thy blast.

106 disease . . . mirth spoil our fun, which would be better
(without her) 110 at a word to put it briefly

I.iv.4 spoke engaged 9 'larum alarum, call to arms 11 smoking reeking (with blood) 12 fielded in the field of battle

40 trophy monument; Hecuba Queen of Troy and mother of Hector, who defended the city from the Greeks 43 contemning in scorn 44 fit ready 45 bless guard; fell savage 47 s.d. Usher servant accompanying a lady 51-52 manifest housekeepers clearly stay-at-homes 53 spot pattern in embroidery 60 confirmed determined 65 mammocked tore to pieces 66 on's of his 68 crack rascal
74 patience leave 82 want am lacking in 83 Penelope
Ulysses' faithful wife, who by using her weaving as an excuse, postponed her answer to offers of marriage 85 Ithaca Ulysses' home city 86 sensible sensitive

They sound a parley. Enter two SENATORS, with others, on the walls of Corioles.

Tullus Aufidius, is he within your walls?

FIRST SENATOR

No, nor a man that fears you less than he;
That's lesser than a little. (Drum afar off.) Hark, our drums

Are bringing forth our youth. We'll break our walls
Rather than they shall pound us up.° Our gates,
Which yet seem shut, we have but pinned with rushes;
They'll open of themselves. (Alarum far off.) Hark you, far off!

There is Aufidius. List what work he makes Amongst your cloven° army.

MARCIUS

O, they are at it!

LARTIUS

Their noise be our instruction.° Ladders, ho!

Enter the ARMY of the Volsces.

MARCIUS

They fear us not, but issue forth their city.
Now put your shields before your hearts, and fight
With hearts more proof° than shields. Advance, brave
Titus.

They do disdain us much beyond our thoughts,
Which makes me sweat with wrath. Come on, my fellows.

He that retires, I'll take him for a Volsce,
And he shall feel mine edge.

Alarum. The ROMANS are beat back to their trenches.
Enter MARCIUS, cursing.

MARCIUS

All the contagion of the south° light on you,
You shames of Rome! You herd of—boils and plagues
Plaster you o'er, that you may be abhorred
Farther than seen, and one infect another
Against the wind a mile!° You souls of geese
That bear the shapes of men, how have you run
From slaves that apes would beat! Pluto and hell!
All hurt behind, backs red, and faces pale
With flight and agued° fear! Mend° and charge home,°

Or, by the fires of heaven, I'll leave the foe
And make my wars on you. Look to't. Come on;
If you'll stand fast, we'll beat them to their wives,
As they us to our trenches. Follow's!°

Another alarum; and MARCIUS follows them° to [the] gates and is shut in.°

So, now the gates are ope. Now prove good seconds!°

17 pound us up shut us in (cf. dog pound) 21 cloven divided 22 be our instruction be a lesson to us 25 proof tested (and so impenetrable) 30 south south wind (pestilential) 34 Against . . . mile i.e., the infection carrying a mile in the face of a contrary wind 38 agued i.e., shaking as if from an aguefit ("ague" = malarial fever); Mend do better (with pun on the hygienic sense); home i.e., into the heart of the enemy's forces 42 Follow's follow us, i.e., follow me (the Folio gives "trenches followes"; the adopted reading makes sense out of the Folio reading, but it is ugly and anticlimactic; perhaps "followes" is a misplaced stage direction) 42 s.d. them the Volsces; is shut in i.e., at the end of this speech Marcius enters the gates and is shut in 43 seconds helpers

'Tis for the followers° Fortune widens them,
Not for the fliers. Mark me, and do the like.

Enters the gates.

FIRST SOLDIER

Foolhardiness; not I.

SECOND SOLDIER Nor I.

FIRST SOLDIER

See, they have shut him in. Alarum continues.

ALL

To th' pot,° I warrant him.

Enter Titus LARTIUS.

LARTIUS

What is become of Marcius?

ALL

Slain, sir, doubtless.

FIRST SOLDIER

Following the fliers at the very heels,
With them he enters; who, upon the sudden,
Clapped to their gates. He is himself alone,
To answer all the city.

LARTIUS

O noble fellow!

Who sensibly° outdares his senseless sword,
And when it bows stand'st up! Thou art left, Marcius!
A carbuncle° entire, as big as thou art,
Were not so rich a jewel. Thou wast a soldier
Even to Cato's° wish, not fierce and terrible
Only in strokes; but with thy grim looks and
The thunderlike percussion of thy sounds
Thou mad'st thine enemies shake, as if the world
Were feverous and did tremble.

Enter MARCIUS, bleeding, assaulted by the enemy.

FIRST SOLDIER

Look, sir.

LARTIUS

O, 'tis Marcius!

Let's fetch him off, or make remain alike.°

They fight, and all enter the city.

[Scene V. Within Corioli.]

Enter certain ROMANS, with spoils.

FIRST ROMAN This will I carry to Rome.

SECOND ROMAN And I this.

THIRD ROMAN A murrain on't!° I took this for silver.

Exeunt.

Alarum continues still afar off.

Enter MARCIUS and Titus LARTIUS, with a TRUMPET.°

MARCIUS

See here these movers° that do prize their hours
At a cracked drachma!° Cushions, leaden spoons,
Irons of a doit,° doublets that hangmen would
Bury with those that wore them, these base slaves,
Ere yet the fight be done, pack up. Down with them!
And hark, what noise the general makes! To him!
There is the man of my soul's hate, Aufidius,

44 followers pursuers 47 To th' pot to destruction (cf. gone to pot) 53 sensibly though subject to feeling 55 carbuncle
a red precious stone 57 Cato the Censor, stern upholder of old Roman virtues 62 make remain alike stay like him ("remain," a noun, means "a stay")
I.v.3 murrain on't plague on it 3 s.d. Trumpet trumpeter
4 movers active fellows (ironical) 5 drachma Greek coin
6 of a doit worth a doit (coin of little value)

Piercing our Romans. Then, valiant Titus, take Convenient numbers to make good° the city;
Whilst I, with those that have the spirit, will haste
To help Cominius.

LARTIUS Worthy sir, thou bleed'st;
Thy exercise hath been too violent
For a second course° of fight.

MARCIUS Sir, praise me not;
My work hath yet not warmed me. Fare you well.
The blood I drop is rather physical° Than dangerous to me. To Aufidius thus
I will appear, and fight.

LARTIUS Now the fair goddess, Fortune, 20
Fall deep in love with thee; and her great charms
Misguide thy opposers' swords! Bold gentleman, Prosperity be thy page!°

MARCIUS Thy friend no less Than those she placeth highest! So farewell.

LARTIUS
Thou worthiest Marcius! [Exit MARCIUS.] 25
Go, sound thy trumpet in the marketplace;
Call thither all the officers o' th' town,
Where they shall know our mind. Away! Exeunt.

[Scene VI. Near the camp of Cominius.]

Enter COMINIUS, as it were in retire, with SOLDIERS.

COMINIUS
Breathe° you, my friends; well fought; we are come off°
Like Romans, neither foolish in our stands
Nor cowardly in retire.° Believe me, sirs,
We shall be charged again. Whiles we have struck,
By interims and conveying gusts° we have heard 5
The charges of our friends. The Roman gods,
Lead their successes° as we wish our own,
That both our powers, with smiling fronts° encount'ring,
May give you thankful sacrifice!

Enter a MESSENGER.

Thy news?

MESSENGER
The citizens of Corioles have issued,
And given to Lartius and to Marcius battle.
I saw our party to their trenches driven,
And then I came away.

COMINIUS Though thou speakest truth,
Methinks thou speak'st not well. How long is't since?

MESSENGER
Above an hour, my lord.

COMINIUS
'Tis not a mile; briefly° we heard their drums.
How couldst thou in a mile confound° an hour,
And bring thy news so late?

MESSENGER Spies of the Volsces

Held me in chase, that I was forced to wheel
Three or four miles about; else had I, sir, 20
Half an hour since brought my report.

Enter MARCIUS.

15 COMINIUS Who's yonder
That does appear as he were flayed? O gods!
He has the stamp° of Marcius, and I have Before-time seen him thus.

MARCIUS Come I too late?

COMINIUS The shepherd knows not thunder from a tabor° 25
More than I know the sound of Marcius' tongue
From every meaner man.

MARCIUS Come I too late?

COMINIUS
Ay, if you come not in the blood of others,
But mantled in your own.

MARCIUS O, let me clip° ye 30
In arms as sound as when I wooed; in heart
As merry as when our nuptial day was done,
And tapers burned to bedward!°

COMINIUS Flower of warriors!
How is't with Titus Lartius?

MARCIUS
As with a man busied about decrees:
Condemning some to death and some to exile; 35
Ransoming him, or pitying, threat'ning th' other;
Holding Corioles in the name of Rome,
Even like a fawning greyhound in the leash,
To let him slip° at will.

COMINIUS Where is that slave
Which told me they had beat you to your trenches? 40
Where is he? Call him hither.

MARCIUS Let him alone;
He did inform° the truth. But for our gentlemen,°
The common file°—a plague! tribunes for them!—
The mouse ne'er shunned the cat as they did budge
From rascals worse than they.

COMINIUS But how prevailed you? 45

MARCIUS
Will the time serve to tell? I do not think.
Where is the enemy? Are you lords o' th' field?
If not, why cease you till you are so?

10 COMINIUS Marcius,
We have at disadvantage fought and did
Retire to win our purpose. 50

MARCIUS
How lies their battle? Know you on which side
They have placed their men of trust?

COMINIUS As I guess, Marcius,
Their bands i' th' vaward° are the Antiates,
Of their best trust; o'er them Aufidius,
Their very heart of hope.

MARCIUS I do beseech you, 55
By all the battles wherein we have fought,
By th' blood we have shed together, by th' vows

12 make good make sure of 16 course bout 18 physical beneficial 23 page attendant

I.vi.1 Breathe rest; are come off leave the field 3 retire retreat 5 By . . . gusts at intervals, by gusts of wind carrying (the sound) 7 successes outcomes 8 fronts first lines (also, "faces") 16 briefly a short time ago 17 confound waste

23 stamp characteristic features (metaphor from coining)
25 tabor small drum 29 clip embrace 32 burned to bed-ward burned low, announcing the time for bed 39 let him slip unleash him 42 inform report; gentlemen ironical 43 common file the plebeian soldiers 53 vaward vanguard, advance troops

We have made to endure friends, that you directly
Set me against Aufidius and his Antiates;
And that you not delay the present,^o but,
Filling the air with swords advanced and darts,
We prove^o this very hour.

COMINIUS Though I could wish
You were conducted to a gentle bath,
And balms applied to you, yet dare I never Deny your asking. Take your choice of those
That best can aid your action.

MARCIUS Those are they
That most are willing. If any such be here—
As it were sin to doubt—that love this painting
Wherein you see me smeared; if any fear
Lesser his person^o than an ill report;
If any think brave death outweighs bad life,
And that his country's dearer than himself;
Let him alone, or so many so minded,
Wave thus, to express his disposition,^o
And follow Marcius.

They all shout, and wave their swords; take him up in their arms, and cast up their caps.

O me alone! Make you a sword of me?
If these shows be not outward, which of you
But is four Volsces? None of you but is Able to bear against the great Aufidius
A shield as hard as his. A certain number,
Though thanks to all, must I select from all. The rest
Shall bear the business in some other fight,
As cause will be obeyed.^o Please you to march;
And four shall quickly draw out my command,
Which men are best inclined.

COMINIUS March on, my fellows: 85
Make good this ostentation,^o and you shall Divide in all with us. Exeunt.

[Scene VII. The gates of Corioli.]

Titus LARTIUS, having set a guard upon Corioles, going with drum and trumpet toward COMINIUS and Caius MARCIUS, enters with a LIEUTENANT, other SOLDIERS, and a SCOUT.

LARTIUS
So, let the ports^o be guarded; keep your duties
As I have set them down. If I do send, dispatch
Those centuries^o to our aid; the rest will serve
For a short holding. If we lose the field,
We cannot keep the town.

LIEUTENANT Fear not our care, sir. 5
LARTIUS
Hence, and shut your gates upon's.
Our guider, come; to th' Roman camp conduct us.
Exit, [with the rest].

60 delay the present put off the present occasion 62 prove make trial of 69–70 fear . . . person fear less for his body 74 disposition inclination 83 cause . . . obeyed occasion shall demand 86 ostentation display
I.vii.1 ports gates 3 centuries companies (smallest units of a Roman legion)

[Scene VIII. A field of battle.]

60 Alarum as in battle. Enter MARCIUS and AUFIDIUS, at several doors.^o

MARCIUS
I'll fight with none but thee, for I do hate thee
Worse than a promise-breaker.

AUFIDIUS We hate alike:
65 Not Afric^o owns a serpent I abhor
More than thy fame and envy. Fix thy foot.

MARCIUS
Let the first budger^o die the other's slave, 5
And the gods doom him after!

AUFIDIUS If I fly, Marcius,
70 Holloa^o me like a hare.

MARCIUS Within these hours, Tullus,
Alone I fought in your Corioles walls,
And made what work I pleased. 'Tis not my blood
Wherein thou see'st me masked. For thy revenge 10
Wrench up thy power to th' highest.

AUFIDIUS Wert thou the Hector
That was the whip of your bragged progeny,^o
Thou shouldst not scape me here.

Here they fight, and certain VOLSCES come in the aid of Aufidius. MARCIUS fights till they be driven in breathless.
Officious, and not valiant, you have shamed me
In your condemnèd seconds.^o 15

[Scene IX. The Roman camp.]

Flourish. Alarum. A retreat is sounded. Enter at one door, COMINIUS with the ROMANS; at another door, MARCIUS, with his arm in a scarf.

COMINIUS
If I should tell thee o'er this thy day's work,
Thou't^o not believe thy deeds. But I'll report it
Where senators shall mingle tears with smiles;
Where great patricians shall attend, and shrug,^o
I' th' end admire; where ladies shall be frighted, 5
And, gladly quaked,^o hear more; where the dull
tribunes,
That with the fusty^o plebeians hate thine honors,
Shall say against their hearts, "We thank the gods
Our Rome hath such a soldier."
Yet cam'st thou to a morsel of this feast,^o 10
Having fully dined before.

Enter Titus [LARTIUS], with his POWER, from the pursuit.

LARTIUS O general,
Here is the steed, we the caparison!^o
Hadst thou beheld—

MARCIUS Pray now, no more. My mother,
Who has a charter^o to extol her blood,

I.viii.s.d. at several doors from different entrances 3 Afric
Africa 5 budger one who moves 7 Holloa shout "halloo" after (in hunting) 12 whip . . . progeny the whip used by your boasted ancestors, the Trojans, against the Greeks 15 In . . . seconds by your damnable help (cf. I.iv.43)
I.ix.2 Thou't thou wouldst 4 shrug i.e., in disbelief 6
quaked made to shake 7 fusty moldy 10 cam'st . . . feast refers to Marcius' coming to support Cominius in the latter part of the battle just ended 12 caparison the (mere) trappings 14 charter privilege granted her

When she does praise me grieves me. I have done 15
As you have done, that's what I can; induced
As you have been, that's for my country.
He that has but effected his good will°
Hath overta'en° mine act.

COMINIUS You shall not be
The grave of your deserving; Rome must know 20
The value of her own. 'Twere a concealment
Worse than a theft, no less than a traducement,°
To hide your doings; and to silence that
Which, to the spire and top of praises vouched,°
Would seem but modest. Therefore, I beseech you, 25
In sign of what you are, not to reward
What you have done, before our army hear me.

MARCIUS
I have some wounds upon me, and they smart
To hear themselves rememb'red.

COMINIUS Should they not,
Well might they fester 'gainst° ingratitude, 30
And tent themselves° with death.° Of all the horses—
Whereof we have ta'en good, and good store°—of all
The treasure in this field achieved and city,
We render you the tenth; to be ta'en forth
Before the common distribution at 35
Your only choice.

MARCIUS I thank you, general;
But cannot make my heart consent to take
A bribe to pay my sword. I do refuse it,
And stand upon my common part with those
That have beheld the doing. 40

A long flourish. They all cry, "Marcius! Marcius!" cast up their caps and lances. COMINIUS and LARTIUS stand bare.

MARCIUS
May these same instruments, which you profane, Never sound more! When drums and trumpets shall I' th' field prove flatterers, let courts and cities be Made all of false-faced soothing!°
When steel grows soft as the parasite's silk, 45
Let him° be made a coverture° for th' wars!
No more, I say! For that° I have not washed
My nose that bled, or foiled° some debile° wretch,
Which without note here's many else have done,
You shout me forth 50
In acclamations hyperbolical;
As if I loved my little should be dieted
In° praises sauced with lies.

COMINIUS Too modest are you;
More cruel to your good report than grateful
To us that give° you truly. By your patience, 55
If 'gainst yourself you be incensed, we'll put you (Like one that means his proper° harm) in manacles,
Then reason safely with you. Therefore, be it known,
As to us, to all the world, that Caius Marcius

Wears this war's garland: in token of the which, 60
My noble steed, known to the camp, I give him,
With all his trim belonging;° and from this time,
For what he did before Corioles, call him,
With all th' applause and clamor of the host,
Caius Marcius Coriolanus. 65
Bear th' addition° nobly ever!

Flourish. Trumpets sound, and drums.

OMNES°

Caius Marcius Coriolanus!

CORIO LANUS

I will go wash:
And when my face is fair, you shall perceive 70
Whether I blush, or no. Howbeit, I thank you.
I mean to stride your steed, and at all times
To undercrest your good addition°
To th' fairness° of my power.

COMINIUS So, to our tent;

Where, ere we do repose us, we will write
To Rome of our success. You, Titus Lartius, 75
Must to Corioles back; send us to Rome
The best,° with whom we may articulate°
For their own good and ours.

LARTIUS I shall, my lord.

CORIO LANUS

The gods begin to mock me. I, that now
Refused most princely gifts, am bound to beg 80
Of my lord general.

COMINIUS Take't; 'tis yours. What is't?

CORIO LANUS

I sometime lay here in Corioles
At a poor man's house; he used me kindly.
He cried to me; I saw him prisoner;
But when Aufidius was within my view, 85
And wrath o'erwhelmed my pity. I request you
To give my poor host freedom.

COMINIUS O, well begged!

Were he the butcher of my son, he should Be free as is the wind. Deliver him, Titus.

LARTIUS

Marcus, his name?

CORIO LANUS By Jupiter, forgot! 90

I am weary; yea, my memory is tired.

Have we no wine here?

COMINIUS

Go we to our tent.

The blood upon your visage dries; 'tis time

It should be looked to. Come.

Exeunt.

[Scene X. The camp of the Volsces.]

A flourish. Cornets. Enter Tullus AUFIDIUS, bloody, with two or three SOLDIERS.

AUFIDIUS

The town is ta'en!

18 good will firm intention 19 overta'en surpassed 22 traducement slander 24 to . . . vouched though attested in the highest terms of praise 30 'gainst against, in the face of 31 tent themselves be cleansed (refers to cleaning a wound with a linen roll, a "tent"); death the "tent" being "death," the wounds would prove fatal 32 good store plenty 44 soothing flattery 46 him it; coverture clothing 47 For that because 48 foiled defeated; debile weak 52-53 dieted In fed by 55 give report 57 proper own

62 his trim belonging the equipment that goes with it 66 addition title 67 Omnes all (Latin) 72 undercrest . . . addition support the fine title you give (a "crest" in heraldry is a figure above a shield; the suggested image is of a shield with a man on horseback [line 71], beneath a crest [the "addition"]) 73 To th' fairness to the exact measure 77 best chief men; articulate make terms

FIRST SOLDIER

'Twill be delivered back on good condition.°

AUFIDIUS

Condition!

I would I were a Roman; for I cannot,
 Being a Volsce, be that I am. Condition!
 What good condition° can a treaty find
 I' th' part that is at mercy?° Five times, Marcius,
 I have fought with thee; so often hast thou beat me;
 And wouldst do so, I think, should we encounter
 As often as we eat. By th' elements,
 If e'er again I meet him beard to beard,
 He's mine or I am his. Mine emulation
 Hath not that honor in't it had; for where
 I thought to crush him in an equal force,
 True sword to sword, I'll potch° at him some way,
 Or wrath or craft may get him.

FIRST SOLDIER

He's the devil.

AUFIDIUS

Bolder, though not so subtle. My valor's poisoned
 With only suff'ring stain° by him; for him
 Shall fly out of itself.° Nor sleep nor sanctuary,
 Being naked,° sick, nor fane° nor Capitol,
 The prayers of priests nor times of sacrifice,
 Embarquements° all of fury, shall lift up
 Their rotten privilege and custom 'gainst
 My hate to Marcius. Where I find him, were it
 At home, upon my brother's guard,° even there,
 Against the hospitable canon,° would I
 Wash my fierce hand in's heart. Go you to th' city;
 Learn how 'tis held, and what they are that must Be hostages for Rome.

FIRST SOLDIER

Will not you go?

AUFIDIUS

I am attended° at the cypress grove. I pray you—
 'Tis south the city mills—bring me word thither
 How the world goes, that to the pace of it
 I may spur on my journey.

FIRST SOLDIER

I shall, sir.

[Exeunt.]

A C T I I

[Scene I. Rome. A public place.]

Enter MENENIUS, with the two tribunes of the people, SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

MENENIUS The augurer° tells me we shall have news tonight.

BRUTUS Good or bad?

MENENIUS Not according to the prayer of the people,
 for they love not Marcius.

SICINIUS Nature teaches beasts to know their friends.

I.x.2 condition terms 6 condition with pun on sense of "quality" 7 I' . . . mercy on the side that is vanquished (at the mercy of the victor) 15 potch poke (thrust, in fencing) 18 stain darkening 19 fly . . . itself go out of its natural course 20 naked unarmed; fane shrine 22 Embarquements restraints 25 upon . . . guard with my brother on guard (over him) 26 hospitable canon law of hospitality 30 attended awaited

II.i.1 augurer more correctly "augur," Roman official who foretold the future

MENENIUS Pray you, who does the wolf love?

SICINIUS The lamb.

MENENIUS Ay, to devour him, as the hungry plebeians would the noble Marcius.

BRUTUS He's a lamb indeed, that baas like a bear.

MENENIUS He's a bear indeed, that lives like a lamb.
 You two are old men: tell me one thing that I shall ask you.

BOTH Well, sir.

MENENIUS In what enormity° is Marcius poor in,
 that you two have not in abundance?

BRUTUS He's poor in no one fault, but stored with all.

SICINIUS Especially in pride.

BRUTUS And topping all others in boasting.

MENENIUS This is strange now. Do you two know how you are censured° here in the city—I mean of us o' th' right-hand file?° Do you?

BOTH Why, how are we censured?

MENENIUS Because you talk of pride now—will you not be angry?

BOTH Well, well, sir, well.

MENENIUS Why 'tis no great matter; for a very little thief of occasion° will rob you of a great deal of patience. Give your dispositions the reins, and be angry at your pleasures; at the least, if you take it as a pleasure to you in being so. You blame Marcius for being proud?

BRUTUS We do it not alone, sir.

MENENIUS I know you can do very little alone; for your helps are many, or else your actions would grow wondrous single:° your abilities are too infantlike for doing much alone. You talk of pride: O that you could turn your eyes toward the napes of your necks, and make but an interior survey of your good selves!
 O that you could!

BOTH What then, sir?

MENENIUS Why, then you should discover a brace of unmeriting, proud, violent, testy° magistrates (alias fools) as any in Rome.

SICINIUS Menenius, you are known well enough° too.

MENENIUS I am known to be a humorous° patrician, and one that loves a cup of hot wine with not a drop of allaying° Tiber in't; said to be something imperfect in favoring the first complaint,° hasty and tinderlike upon too trivial motion;° one that converses° more with the buttock of the night than with the forehead of the morning. What I think I utter, and spend my malice in my breath. Meeting two such wealsmen° as you are—I cannot call you Lycurguses°—if the drink you give me touch my palate adversely, I make a crooked face at it. I cannot say your worships have delivered the matter well, when I find the ass in compound with the major part of your syllables;° and 16 enormity fault 22 how . . . censured the opinion held of you 23 o' . . . file of the upper classes, patricians 28–29 very . . . occasion i.e., a very little occasion is a thief who 37 single weak, slight 44 testy snappish 46 known well enough i.e., notorious 48 humorous whimsical 50 allaying diluting 50–51 something . . . complaint somewhat at fault in siding with the party who first puts his case 52 motion impulse; converses associates 55 wealsmen statesmen 56 Lycurguses Lycurgus was a Greek lawgiver 59–60 ass . . . syllables pun on overuse of "as-es" in legal expressions, e.g., "whereas"

though I must be content to bear with those that say you are reverend grave men, yet they lie deadly that tell you you have good faces. If you see this in the map° of my microcosm,° follows it that I am known well enough too? What harm can your bisson con- 65 spectuities° glean out of this character, if I be known well enough too?

BRUTUS Come, sir, come, we know you well enough.

MENENIUS You know neither me, yourselves, nor 70 anything. You are ambitious for poor knaves' caps and legs.° You wear out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause° between an orange-wife and a forset-seller,° and then rejourn° the controversy of threepence to a second day of audience. When you 75 are hearing a matter between party and party, if you chance to be pinched with the colic, you make faces like mummers,° set up the bloody flag° against all patience, and, in roaring for a chamber pot, dismiss the controversy bleeding, the more entangled by your 80 hearing. All the peace you make in their cause is calling both the parties knaves. You are a pair of strange ones.

BRUTUS Come, come, you are well understood to be a perfect giber° for the table than a necessary bench 85 in the Capitol.°

MENENIUS Our very priests must become mockers, if they shall encounter such ridiculous subjects as you are. When you speak best unto the purpose, it is not worth the wagging of your beards; and your beards 90 deserve not so honorable a grave as to stuff a botcher's° cushion or to be entombed in an ass's packsaddle. Yet you must be saying Marcius is proud; who, in a cheap estimation, is worth all your predecessors since Deucalion;° though peradventure some of the best of 95 'em were hereditary hangmen. Good-e'en to your worships. More of your conversation° would infect my brain, being the herdsmen of the beastly plebeians. I will be bold to take my leave of you.

BRUTUS and SICINIUS [step] aside.

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and VALERIA.

How now, my as fair as noble ladies—and the moon, 100 were she earthly, no nobler—whither do you follow your eyes so fast?

VOLUMNIA Honorable Menenius, my boy Marcius approaches; for the love of Juno, let's go.

MENENIUS Ha? Marcius coming home? 105

VOLUMNIA Ay, worthy Menenius; and with most prosperous approbation.°

MENENIUS Take my cap, Jupiter,° and I thank thee. Hoo! Marcius coming home!

TWO LADIES Nay, 'tis true. 110

VOLUMNIA Look, here's a letter from him; the state hath another, his wife another; and, I think, there's one at home for you.

MENENIUS I will make my very house reel tonight. A letter for me? 115

VIRGILIA Yes, certain, there's a letter for you; I saw't. MENENIUS A letter for me? It gives me an estate° of seven years' health; in which time I will make a lip° at the physician. The most sovereign prescription in Galen° is but empiricute,° and, to this preservative, of 120 no better report° than a horse-drench.° Is he not wounded? He was wont to come home wounded.

VIRGILIA O, no, no, no.

VOLUMNIA O, he is wounded; I thank the gods for't.

MENENIUS So do I too, if it be not too much. Brings 125 'a° victory in his pocket? The wounds become him.

VOLUMNIA On's brows, Menenius. He comes the third time home with the oaken garland.

MENENIUS Has he disciplined Aufidius soundly?

VOLUMNIA Titus Lartius writes they fought together, 130 but Aufidius got off.

MENENIUS And 'twas time for him too, I'll warrant him that. And° he had stayed by him, I would not have been so fidiused° for all the chests in Corioles, and the gold that's in them. Is the Senate possessed° of 135 this?

VOLUMNIA Good ladies, let's go. Yes, yes, yes. The Senate has letters from the general, wherein he gives my son the whole name of° the war. He hath in this action outdone his former deeds doubly. 140

VALERIA In troth, there's wondrous things spoke of him.

MENENIUS Wondrous! Ay, I warrant you, and not without his true purchasing.°

VIRGILIA The gods grant them true! 145

VOLUMNIA True? Pow waw!°

MENENIUS True! I'll be sworn they are true. Where is he wounded?—[To the TRIBUNES.] God save your good worships! Marcius is coming home. He has more cause to be proud.—Where is he wounded? 150

VOLUMNIA I' th' shoulder and i' th' left arm. There will be large cicatrices° to show the people, when he shall stand for his place.° He received in the repulse of Tarquin seven hurts i' th' body.

MENENIUS One i' th' neck, and two i' th' thigh— 155 there's nine that I know.

VOLUMNIA He had before this last expedition twenty-five wounds upon him.

MENENIUS Now it's twenty-seven: every gash was an enemy's grave. (A shout and flourish.) Hark! the 160 trumpets.

VOLUMNIA These are the ushers of Marcius. Before him he carries noise, and behind him he leaves tears. Death, that dark spirit, in's nervy° arm doth lie, Which, being advanced, declines, and then men die. 165

64 map i.e., face; microcosm little world, i.e., body 65–66 bisson conspectuities blind visual powers 71–72 caps and legs salutes and bows 73 cause case 74 forset-seller seller of taps for wine kegs; rejourn adjourn 78 mummers Christmas masquers, who act impromptu plays; bloody flag war flag 85 giber joker 85–86 necessary . . . Capitol indispensable judge in the Senate (cf. the bench for court) 91 botcher mender of old clothes 95 Deucalion the Noah of Greek myth 97 conversation cf. line 52 106–07 with . . . approbation with signs of the greatest success 108 Jupiter god of the sky and upper air

117 estate state (fortune?) 118 make a lip make a face 120 Galen Greek physician; empiricute quackish 121 report reputation; horse-drench drink of horse-medicine 126 'a he 133 And if 134 fidiused "Aufidius-ed" (cf. line 129, "disciplined Aufidius soundly") 135 possessed duly informed 139 name of credit for 144 true purchasing really earning (the praise) 146 Pow waw a Volumnian "pooh-pooh" 152 cicatrices scars (Latin) 153 place the consulship 164 nervy sinewy

A sennet.° Trumpets sound. Enter COMINIUS the general and Titus LARTIUS; between them, CORIOLANUS, crowned with an oaken garland; with CAPTAINS and SOLDIERS, and a HERALD.

HERALD

Know, Rome, that all alone Marcius did fight
Within Corioles gates, where he hath won,
With fame, a name to Caius Marcius; these
In honor follows Coriolanus.

Welcome to Rome, renownèd Coriolanus!

Sound. Flourish.

ALL

Welcome to Rome, renownèd Coriolanus!

CORIOLANUS

No more of this, it does offend my heart;
Pray now, no more.

COMINIUS

Look, sir, your mother!

CORIOLANUS

You have, I know, petitioned all the gods
For my prosperity! Kneels.

VOLUMNIA

Nay, my good soldier, up;

My gentle Marcius, worthy Caius, and
By deed-achieving° honor newly named—
What is it?—Coriolanus must I call thee?—
But, O, thy wife!

CORIOLANUS

My gracious silence, hail!

Wouldst thou have laughed had I come confined home, 180
That weep'st to see me triumph? Ah, my dear,
Such eyes the widows in Corioles wear,
And mothers that lack sons.

MENENIUS

Now, the gods crown thee!

CORIOLANUS

And live you yet? [To VALERIA.] O my sweet lady, pardon.

VOLUMNIA

I know not where to turn. O, welcome home!
And welcome, general: and y' are welcome all.

MENENIUS

A hundred thousand welcomes. I could weep,
And I could laugh, I am light and heavy.° Welcome!
A curse begin at very root on's heart
That is not glad to see thee! You are three 190
That Rome should dote on. Yet, by the faith of men,
We have some old crab-trees here at home that will
not

Be grafted° to your relish. Yet welcome, warriors.
We call a nettle but a nettle, and
The faults of fools but folly.

COMINIUS

Ever right.

CORIOLANUS

Menenius, ever, ever.

HERALD

Give way there, and go on.

CORIOLANUS [To VOLUMNIA and VIRGILIA.]

Your hand, and yours!

Ere in our own house I do shade my head,
The good patricians must be visited;

165 s.d. sennet set of notes for trumpet or cornet to herald an important person, differing from a "flourish" or "fanfare"; cf. s.d. line 160) 177 deed-achieving achieved by deeds (cf. "the deeds of Coriolanus," II.ii.82) 188 light and heavy both merry and sad 193 grafted i.e., improved

From whom I have received not only greetings,
But with them change of honors.°

200

VOLUMNIA

I have lived

To see inherited° my very wishes
And the buildings of my fancy. Only There's one thing wanting, which I doubt not but
Our Rome will cast upon thee.

CORIOLANUS

Know, good mother,

205

I had rather be their servant in my way
Than sway with them in theirs.

COMINIUS

On, to the Capitol!

Flourish. Cornets. Exeunt in state, as before.

BRUTUS and SICINIUS [come forward].

BRUTUS

All tongues speak of him, and the blearèd sights
Are spectaclèd to see him. Your prattling nurse
Into a rapture° lets her baby cry 210
While she chats° him; the kitchen malkin° pins
Her richest lockram° 'bout her reechy° neck, Clamb'ring the walls to eye him. Stalls, bulks,° windows,

Are smothered up, leads° filled and ridges horsed°
With variable complexions,° all agreeing 215

In earnestness to see him. Seld-shown flamens°
Do press among the popular throngs, and puff
To win a vulgar station.° Our veiled dames Commit the war of white and damask in
Their nicely gawded° cheeks to th' wanton spoil 220
Of Phoebus'° burning kisses. Such a pother,°
As if that whatsoever god who leads him
Were slyly crept into his human powers,
And gave him graceful posture.

SICINIUS

On the sudden,

I warrant him consul.

BRUTUS

Then our office may,

225

During his power, go sleep.

SICINIUS

He cannot temp'rately transport his honors
From where he should begin and end,° but will Lose those he hath won.

BRUTUS

In that there's comfort.

SICINIUS

Doubt not

The commoners, for whom we stand, but they 230
Upon° their ancient malice will forget
With the least cause these his new honors; which°
That he will give them make I as little question
As° he is proud to do't.

BRUTUS

I heard him swear,

Were he to stand for consul, never would he 235
Appear i' th' marketplace, nor on him put
The napless° vesture of humility;

201 change of honors fresh honors 202 inherited in my possession 210 rapture fit 211 chats gossips about; malkin slut 212 lockram coarse linen; reechy dirty 213 bulks stalls (stands for goods to be sold) 214 leads leaded roofs; horsed "ridden" by viewers 215 variable complexions different physical types 216 Seld-shown flamens priests rarely seen in public (each flamen was in charge of the cult of a particular deity) 218 vulgar station place with the common people 220 gawded adorned 221 Phoebus sun god; pother commotion 228 and end i.e., to where he should end 231 Upon on account of 232 which i.e., "cause" 234 As as that 237 napless threadbare

Nor, showing, as the manner is, his wounds
To th' people, beg their stinking breaths.

SICINIUS 'Tis right.

BRUTUS
It was his word. O, he would miss it rather Than carry° it but by the suit of the gentry to him
And the desire of the nobles.

SICINIUS I wish no better
Than have him hold that purpose and to put it
In execution.

BRUTUS 'Tis most like he will.

SICINIUS
It shall be to him then as our good wills:°
A sure destruction.

BRUTUS So it must fall out
To him or our authorities. For an end,°
We must suggest° the people in what hatred
He still° hath held them; that to's power he would Have made them mules, silenced their pleaders and Disproportioned° their freedoms, holding them,
In human action and capacity,
Of no more soul nor fitness for the world
Than camels in their war, who have their provand°
Only for bearing burdens, and sore blows
For sinking under them.

SICINIUS This, as you say, suggested
At some time when his soaring insolence
Shall touch the people—which time shall not want,°
If he be put upon't,° and that's as easy
As to set dogs on sheep—will be his fire
To kindle their dry stubble; and their blaze
Shall darken him forever.

Enter a MESSENGER.

BRUTUS What's the matter?

MESSENGER
You are sent for to the Capitol. 'Tis thought
That Marcius shall be consul.
I have seen the dumb men throng to see him and
The blind to hear him speak. Matrons flung gloves,
Ladies and maids their scarfs and handkerchers,
Upon him as he passed; the nobles bended,
As to Jove's statue, and the commons made
A shower and thunder with their caps and shouts.
I never saw the like.

BRUTUS Let's to the Capitol,
And carry with us ears and eyes for th' time,
But hearts for the event.°

SICINIUS Have with you.° Exeunt.

[Scene II. Rome. The Senate House.]

Enter two OFFICERS, to lay cushions,° as it were in the Capitol.

FIRST OFFICER Come, come, they are almost here.
How many stand for consulships?

241 carry win 245 as . . . wills as we strongly desire 247
For an end to force the issue (?) finally (?) 248 suggest insinuate into the minds of 249 still ever 251 Disproportioned dispossessed them of 254 provand provisions 258 want be lacking 259 put upon't provoked to it 273 event outcome;
Have with you Coming with you!
II.ii.s.d. cushions seats for dignitaries

SECOND OFFICER Three, they say; but 'tis thought of everyone Coriolanus will carry it.

FIRST OFFICER That's a brave fellow; but he's ven- 5
geance° proud, and loves not the common people.

240 SECOND OFFICER Faith, there hath been many great men that have flattered the people, who ne'er loved them; and there be many that they have loved, they know not wherefore; so that, if they love they know 10 not why, they hate upon no better a ground. Therefore, for Coriolanus neither to care whether they love or hate him manifests the true knowledge he has in their disposition,° and out of his noble carelessness lets them plainly see't. 15

FIRST OFFICER If he did not care whether he had their love or no, he waved° indifferently 'twixt doing them neither good nor harm. But he seeks their hate with greater devotion than they can render it him, and leaves nothing undone that may fully discover° 20 him their opposite.° Now, to seem to affect° the malice° and displeasure of the people is as bad as that which he dislikes, to flatter them for their love.

SECOND OFFICER He hath deserved worthily of his country; and his ascent is not by such easy degrees as 25 those who, having been supple and courteous to the people, bonneted,° without any further deed to have them at all into their estimation and report.° But he hath so planted his honors in their eyes and his actions in their hearts that for their tongues to be silent and 30 not confess so much were a kind of ingrateful injury;
to report otherwise were a malice° that, giving itself the lie, would pluck reproof and rebuke from every ear that heard it.

FIRST OFFICER No more of him; he's a worthy 35
man. Make way, they are coming.

A sennet. Enter the PATRICIANS and the TRIBUNES of the people, LICTORS° before them; CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, COMINIUS the consul. SICINIUS and BRUTUS take their places by themselves. CORIOLANUS stands. 265

MENENIUS
Having determined of° the Volsces, and
To send for Titus Lartius, it remains,
As the main point of this our after-meeting,
To gratify° his noble service that 40
Hath thus stood for° his country. Therefore, please
you
Most reverend and grave elders, to desire
The present consul and last° general
In our well-found° successes, to report
A little of that worthy work performed 45
By Caius Marcius Coriolanus; whom
We met here both to thank and to remember°
With honors like himself.

5-6 vengeance frightfully (cf. with a vengeance) 13-14 in their disposition of their mood 17 waved would waver 20 discover show 21 opposite opponent; affect aim at 22 malice ill will 27 bonneted took off their caps (in flattery) 27-28 to have . . . report to get themselves at all into (win their way into), their esteem 32 malice act of ill will 36 s.d. Lictors attendants who preceded Roman officials to announce their approach 37 determined of decided concerning 40 gratify reward 41 stood for defended 43 last late 44 well-found fortunately met with 47 remember distinguish

FIRST SENATOR Speak, good Cominius:
 Leave nothing out for length, and make us think
 Rather our state's defective for requital 50
 Than we to stretch it out.° [To the TRIBUNES.] Masters
 o' th' people,
 We do request your kindest ears; and, after,
 Your loving motion toward the common body,°
 To yield° what passes here.

SICINIUS We are convented°
 Upon a pleasing treaty,° and have hearts 55
 Inclunable to honor and advance
 The theme of our assembly.

BRUTUS Which the rather°
 We shall be blessed° to do, if he remember
 A kinder value° of the people than
 He hath hereto prized them at.

MENENIUS That's off,° that's off; 60
 I would you rather had been silent. Please you
 To hear Cominius speak?

BRUTUS Most willingly.
 But yet my caution was more pertinent
 Than the rebuke you give it.

MENENIUS He loves your people;
 But tie him not to be their bedfellow. 65
 Worthy Cominius, speak.

CORIOLANUS rises and offers to go away.

Nay, keep your place.

FIRST SENATOR
 Sit, Coriolanus; never shame to hear
 What you have nobly done.

CORIOLANUS Your honors' pardon:
 I had rather have my wounds to heal again
 Than hear say how I got them.

BRUTUS Sir, I hope 70
 My words disbenched° you not.

CORIOLANUS No, sir. Yet oft,
 When blows have made me stay, I fled from words.
 You soothed° not, therefore hurt not; but your people,
 I love them as they weigh—

MENENIUS Pray now, sit down.

CORIOLANUS
 I had rather have one scratch my head i' th' sun 75
 When the alarum were struck than idly sit
 To hear my nothings monstered.° Exit CORIOLANUS.

MENENIUS Masters of the people,
 Your multiplying spawn how can he flatter—
 That's thousand to one good one—when you now see
 He had rather venture all his limbs for honor 80
 Than one on's ears° to hear it? Proceed, Cominius.

COMINIUS
 I shall lack voice: the deeds of Coriolanus
 Should not be uttered feebly. It is held
 That valor is the chiefest virtue° and

Most dignifies the haver. If it be, 85
 The man I speak of cannot in the world
 Be singly counterpoised.° At sixteen years,
 When Tarquin° made a head for° Rome, he fought
 Beyond the mark of others. Our then dictator,
 Whom with all praise I point at, saw him fight, 90
 When with his Amazonian° chin he drove
 The bristled lips before him. He bestrid
 An o'erpressed Roman, and i' th' consul's view
 Slew three opposers; Tarquin's self he met,
 And struck him on his knee.° In that day's feats, 95
 When he might act the woman in the scene,°
 He proved best man i' th' field, and for his meed°
 Was brow-bound with the oak. His pupil age°
 Man-ent'red° thus, he waxed like a sea;
 And, in the brunt of seventeen battles since, 100
 He lurched° all swords of the garland. For this last,
 Before and in Corioles, let me say,
 I cannot speak him home.° He stopped the fliers,
 And by his rare example made the coward
 Turn terror into sport; as weeds before 105
 A vessel under sail, so men obeyed
 And fell below his stem.° His sword, death's stamp,°
 Where it did mark, it took;° from face to foot
 He was a thing of blood, whose every motion
 Was timed with dying cries. Alone he ent'red 110
 The mortal gate of th' city, which he painted
 With shunless destiny;° aidless came off,
 And with a sudden reinforcement struck
 Corioles like a planet.° Now, all's his,
 When by and by the din of war 'gan° pierce 115
 His ready° sense, then straight his doubled° spirit
 Requick'ned what in flesh was fatigate,°
 And to the battle came he; where he did Run reeking o'er the lives of men, as if
 'Twere a perpetual spoil;° and till we called 120
 Both field and city ours, he never stood
 To ease his breast with panting.

MENENIUS Worthy man!

FIRST SENATOR
 He cannot but with measure fit° the honors
 Which we devise him.

COMINIUS Our spoils he kicked at,
 And looked upon things precious as they were 125
 The common muck of the world. He covets less Than misery° itself would give, rewards
 His deeds with doing them, and is content

50-51 our . . . out our government (the Senate) is lacking in the resources for reward rather than we in our effort to extend it 53 motion . . . body influence with the common people 54 yield approve; convented convened 55 treaty proposal for discussion 57 rather sooner 58 blessed happy 59 value estimate 60 off not to the point 71 disbenched unseated 73 soothed flattered 77 monstered turned into marvels 81 Than . . . ears than venture one of his ears 84 virtue cf. Latin virtus, manly strength; on this speech, see Introduction pp. 1312-13

87 singly counterpoised matched in value (literally, in weight) by one man 88 Tarquin early king of Rome, expelled from the city; made . . . for raised a force against 91 Amazonian i.e., beardless 95 on his knee to his knees 96 in the scene on that stage 97 meed reward 98 His pupil age the years when he was learning (the art of war) 99 Man-ent'red having been initiated into manhood 101 lurched robbed 103 speak him home find words to match his merit 107 stem bow; stamp a die for stamping a coin or medal 108 took made its mark; killed (perhaps also, "infected fatally"; cf. "struck," line 113) 111-12 painted . . . destiny smeared with blood of dying men, who could not shun their fate 113-14 struck . . . planet planets supposedly had power to "strike," infect with disease 115 'gan began to 116 ready responsive; doubled renewed 117 fatigate fatigued 120 spoil slaughter 123 with measure fit measure up to; or, "bear with self-control" (?) 127 misery poverty

To spend the time to end it.^o

MENENIUS He's right noble.

Let him be called for.

FIRST SENATOR Call Coriolanus.

OFFICER

He doth appear.

Enter CORIOLANUS.

MENENIUS

The Senate, Coriolanus, are well pleased
To make thee consul.

CORIOLANUS I do owe them still^o

My life and services.

MENENIUS It then remains

That you do speak to the people.

CORIOLANUS I do beseech you 135

Let me o'erleap that custom, for I cannot

Put on the gown,^o stand naked,^o and entreat them,

For my wounds' sake, to give their suffrage. Please you

That I may pass^o this doing.

SICINIUS Sir, the people

Must have their voices;^o neither will they bate^o

One jot of ceremony.

MENENIUS Put them not to't.^o

Pray you, go fit you to the custom, and Take to you, as your predecessors have,

Your honor with your form.^o

CORIOLANUS It is a part

That I shall blush in acting, and might well

Be taken from the people.

BRUTUS [To SICINIUS.] Mark you that.

CORIOLANUS

To brag unto them, "Thus I did, and thus!"

Show them th' unaching scars which I should hide,

As if I had received them for the hire

Of their breath only!

MENENIUS Do not stand upon't.^o 150

We recommend to you, tribunes of the people,

Our purpose^o to them; and to our noble consul

Wish we all joy and honor.

SENATORS

To Coriolanus come all joy and honor!

Flourish cornets. Then exeunt. Manet

SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

BRUTUS

You see how he intends to use the people. 155

SICINIUS

May they perceive's intent! He will require^o them,

As if he did condemn what he requested

Should be in them to give.

BRUTUS Come, we'll inform them

Of our proceedings here. On th' marketplace.

I know, they do attend us. [Exeunt.] 160

[Scene III. Rome. The Forum.]

Enter seven or eight CITIZENS.

FIRST CITIZEN Once if he^o do require our voices,
we ought not to deny him.

SECOND CITIZEN We may, sir, if we will.

THIRD CITIZEN We have power in ourselves to do it, but it is a power that we have no power to do; for 5 if he show us his wounds and tell us his deeds, we are to put our tongues into those wounds and speak for them; so, if he tell us his noble deeds, we must also tell him our noble acceptance of them. Ingratitude is monstrous; and for the multitude to be ingrateful, 10 were to make a monster of the multitude; of the which we being members, should bring ourselves to be monstrous members.

FIRST CITIZEN And to make us no better thought of, a little help will serve; for once we stood up^o about 15 the corn, he himself stuck not to call us the many-headed multitude.

THIRD CITIZEN We have been called so of many;
not that our heads are some brown, some black, some abram,^o some bald, but that our wits are so diversely 20 colored. And truly I think, if all our wits were to issue out of one skull, they would fly east, west, north, south, and their consent of^o one direct way should be at once to all the points o' th' compass.

SECOND CITIZEN Think you so? Which way do 25
you judge my wit would fly?

THIRD CITIZEN Nay, your wit will not so soon out as another man's will; 'tis strongly wedged up in a blockhead; but if it were at liberty, 'twould, sure, 30 southward.

SECOND CITIZEN Why that way?

THIRD CITIZEN To lose itself in a fog; where being three parts melted away with rotten^o dews, the fourth would return for conscience sake, to help to get thee a wife.^o 35

SECOND CITIZEN You are never without your tricks.
You may, you may.^o

THIRD CITIZEN Are you all resolved to give your voices? But that's no matter, the greater part^o carries it.
I say, if he would incline to the people, there was never 40 a worthier man.

*Enter CORIOLANUS in a gown of humility, with
MENENIUS.*

Here he comes, and in the gown of humility. Mark his behavior. We are not to stay all together, but to come by him where he stands, by ones, by twos, and by threes. He's to make his requests by particulars;^o 45 wherein every one of us has a single honor, in giving him our own voices with our own tongues. Therefore follow me, and I'll direct you how you shall go by him.

ALL Content, content. [Exeunt CITIZENS.]

129 To spend . . . it to kill it in action ("to live it up in action") 133 still always 137 gown "vesture of humility" (cf. II.i.237); naked i.e., "without any coat underneath" (North) 139 pass pass over 140 voices votes; bate deduct 141 Put . . . to't Don't test them (by omitting any part of the ceremony) 144 Your honor . . . form the honor with the ceremony it imposes on you 150 stand upon't make an issue of it 152 purpose proposal 156 require ask

II.iii.I Once if he if he once 15 once . . . up when we took a stand 20 abram auburn 23 consent of agreement on 33 rotten unhealthy 34-35 for . . . wife i.e., because of the bastards he had fathered (?) 37 You may, you may "O.K., O.K." 39 greater part majority 45 by particulars to each in turn

MENENIUS

O sir, you are not right. Have you not known
The worthiest men have done't? 50

CORIOLANUS

What must I say?—

"I pray, sir"—Plague upon't! I cannot bring My tongue to such a pace. "Look, sir, my wounds!
I got them in my country's service, when
Some certain of your brethren roared and ran 55
From th' noise of our own drums."

MENENIUS

O me, the gods!

You must not speak of that. You must desire them
To think upon° you.

CORIOLANUS

Think upon me! Hang 'em!

I would they would forget me, like the virtues
Which our divines lose by 'em.°

MENENIUS

You'll mar all. 60

I'll leave you. Pray you, speak to 'em, I pray you,
In wholesome° manner. Exit.

Enter three of the CITIZENS.

CORIOLANUS

Bid them wash their faces,

And keep their teeth clean. So, here comes a brace.°

You know the cause, sir, of my standing here.

THIRD CITIZEN We do, sir; tell us what hath 65 brought you to't.

CORIOLANUS Mine own desert.

SECOND CITIZEN Your own desert?

CORIOLANUS Ay, not mine own desire.

THIRD CITIZEN How not your own desire? 70

CORIOLANUS No, sir, 'twas never my desire yet to trouble the poor with begging.

THIRD CITIZEN You must think, if we give you anything, we hope to gain by you.

CORIOLANUS Well then, I pray, your price o' th' 75
consulship?

FIRST CITIZEN The price is, to ask it kindly.

CORIOLANUS Kindly sir, I pray let me ha't. I have wounds to show you, which shall be yours in private.

Your good voice, sir; what say you? 80

SECOND CITIZEN You shall ha't, worthy sir.

CORIOLANUS A match,° sir. There's in all two worthy voices begged. I have your alms. Adieu.

THIRD CITIZEN But this is something° odd.

SECOND CITIZEN And 'twere to give again—but 85
'tis no matter. Exeunt.

Enter two other CITIZENS.

CORIOLANUS Pray you now, if it may stand° with the tune of your voices that I may be consul, I have here the customary gown.

FIRST CITIZEN You have deserved nobly of your 90 country, and you have not deserved nobly.

CORIOLANUS Your enigma?

FIRST CITIZEN You have been a scourge to her enemies, you have been a rod to her friends. You have not indeed loved the common people. 95

CORIOLANUS You should account me the more virtuous, that I have not been common in my love. I will, sir, flatter my sworn brother, the people, to earn a dearer estimation of° them; 'tis a condition° they account gentle; and since the wisdom of their choice 100 is rather to have my hat than my heart, I will practice the insinuating nod, and be off° to them most counterfeitly; that is, sir, I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some popular man,° and give it bountiful to the desirers. Therefore, beseech you I may be consul. 105

SECOND CITIZEN We hope to find you our friend;
and therefore give you our voices heartily.

FIRST CITIZEN You have received many wounds for your country.

CORIOLANUS I will not seal° your knowledge with 110 showing them. I will make much of your voices and so trouble you no farther.

BOTH The gods give you joy, sir, heartily! [Exeunt.]

CORIOLANUS

Most sweet voices!

Better it is to die, better to starve, 115

Than crave the hire which first we do deserve.

Why in this woolvish toge° should I stand here,

To beg of Hob° and Dick that does appear°

Their needless vouches?° Custom calls me to't.

What custom wills, in all things should we do't, 120

The dust on antique time would like unswept,

And mountainous error be too highly heaped

For truth to o'erpeer.° Rather than fool it so,

Let the high office and the honor go

To one that would do thus. I am half through: 125

The one part suffered, the other will I do.

Enter three CITIZENS more.

Here come moe° voices.

Your voices! For your voices I have fought;

Watched° for your voices; for your voices bear

Of wounds two dozen odd; battles thrice six 130

I have seen, and heard of; for your voices have Done many things, some less, some more. Your voices!

Indeed, I would be consul.

FIRST CITIZEN He has done nobly, and cannot go without any honest man's voice. 135

SECOND CITIZEN Therefore let him be consul. The gods give him joy, and make him good friend to the people!

ALL Amen, amen. God save thee, noble consul!

[Exeunt CITIZENS.]

CORIOLANUS Worthy voices! 140

Enter MENENIUS, with BRUTUS and SICINIUS.

MENENIUS

You have stood your limitation;° and the tribunes

Endue you with the people's voice. Remains

That in th' official marks° invested you

Anon do meet the Senate.

CORIOLANUS Is this done?

99 dearer estimation of higher valuation from; condition quality 102 be off take my hat off 104 popular man
"friend the of people" 110 seal make authentic (legal sense) 117 in . . . toge i.e., disguising myself (a backhand reference to "wolf in sheep's clothing"; note that Coriolanus "lives like a lamb," according to II.i.12) 118 Hob nickname of
"Robert"; a country fellow; that does appear i.e., as they come, one by one 119 vouches confirmations 123 o'erpeer rise above 127 moe more 129 Watched kept watch 141 limitation time set for requesting votes 143 marks insignia

58 think upon think well of 60 lose by 'em waste on them in preaching ("pearls before swine") 62 wholesome reasonable 63 brace pair (of dogs) 82 A match agreed 84 something somewhat 87 stand agree

SICINIUS

The custom of request you have discharged:
The people do admit you, and are summoned
To meet anon upon your approbation.°

CORIOLANUS

Where? At the Senate House?

SICINIUS

There, Coriolanus.

CORIOLANUS

May I change these garments?

SICINIUS

You may, sir.

CORIOLANUS

That I'll straight do, and, knowing myself again,
Repair° to th' Senate House.

MENENIUS

I'll keep you company. Will you along?°

BRUTUS

We stay here for the people.

SICINIUS

Fare you well.

Exeunt CORIOLANUS and MENENIUS.

He has it° now; and, by his looks, methinks
'Tis warm at's° heart.

BRUTUS

With a proud heart he wore
His humble weeds. Will you dismiss the people?

Enter the PLEBEIANS.

SICINIUS

How now, my masters,° have you chose this man?

FIRST CITIZEN

He has our voices, sir.

BRUTUS

We pray the gods he may deserve your loves.

SECOND CITIZEN

Amen, sir. To my poor unworthy notice,
He mocked us when he begged our voices.

THIRD CITIZEN

Certainly;

He flouted us downright.

FIRST CITIZEN

No, 'tis his kind of speech—he did not mock us.

SECOND CITIZEN

Not one amongst us, save yourself, but says
He used us scornfully. He should have showed us
His marks of merit, wounds received for's country.

SICINIUS

Why, so he did, I am sure.

ALL

No, no; no man saw 'em.

THIRD CITIZEN

He said he had wounds which he could show in private;

And with his hat, thus waving it in scorn,

"I would be consul," says he. "Agèd custom,

But by your voices, will not so permit me;

Your voices therefore." When we granted that,

Here was, "I thank you for your voices. Thank you,

Your most sweet voices. Now you have left your voices,

I have no further° with you." Was not this mockery? 175

SICINIUS

Why either were you ignorant° to see't,

147 anon . . . approbation at once to confirm your appointment (as consul) 151 Repair return 152 along come too

154 it the emotion that "warms his heart," either the satisfaction of success, or the irritation of offended pride; cf. "his fire,"

II.i.260 155 at's at his 157 my masters gentlemen 175 no further no more to do 176 ignorant too dull

Or, seeing it, of such childish friendliness

To yield° your voices?

145

BRUTUS

Could you not have told him

As you were lessoned:° when he had no power,

But was a petty servant to the state,

180

He was your enemy, ever spake against

Your liberties and the charters° that you bear

I' th' body of the weal;° and now, arriving

A place° of potency and sway o' th' state,°

If he should still malignantly remain

185

Fast foe to th' plebeii,° your voices might

Be curses to yourselves? You should have said

That as his worthy deeds did claim no less

Than what he stood for,° so his gracious nature

Would think upon you° for your voices, and 190

Translate° his malice towards you into love,

Standing your friendly lord.

SICINIUS

Thus to have said,

As you were fore-advised, had touched° his spirit

And tried his inclination; from him plucked

Either his gracious promise, which you might,

195

As cause had called you up,° have held him to;

Or else it would have galled his surly nature,

Which easily endures not article°

Tying him to aught. So, putting him to rage,

You should have ta'en th' advantage of his choler,°

200

And passed him unelected.

BRUTUS

Did you perceive

He did solicit you in free° contempt

When he did need your loves; and do you think

That his contempt shall not be bruising to you

When he hath power to crush? Why, had your bodies 205

No heart° among you? Or had you tongues to cry°

Against the rectorship° of judgment?

SICINIUS

Have you

Ere now denied the asker, and now again,

Of° him that did not ask but mock, bestow

Your sued-for tongues?

210

THIRD CITIZEN

He's not confirmed; we may deny him yet.

SECOND CITIZEN

And will deny him.

I'll have five hundred voices of that sound.

FIRST CITIZEN

I twice five hundred, and their friends to piece 'em.°

BRUTUS

Get you hence instantly, and tell those friends

215

They have chose a consul that will from them take

Their liberties, make them of no more voice

Than dogs that are as often beat for barking

As therefor° kept to do so.

SICINIUS

Let them assemble;

And, on a safer° judgment, all revoke

220

178 yield give 179 lessoned instructed 182 charters privileges 183 weal commonwealth 184 A place direct object of "arriving," i.e., "reaching"; potency . . . state power in managing the state 186 plebeii Latin for "plebeians" 189 what . . . for the office he ran for 190 think upon you think well of you 191 Translate transform 193 touched tested 196 As . . . up as an occasion (emergency) would have roused you 198 article condition 200 choler anger 202 free open 206 heart spirit; cry give your voices 207 rectorship rule 209 Of on 214 piece 'em add to them
(cf. piece out) 219 therefor for that reason 220 safer sounder

A C T I I I

[Scene I. Rome. A street.]

Your ignorant election.^o Enforce^o his pride
And his old hate unto you; besides, forget not
With what contempt he wore the humble weed,
How in his suit he scorned you; but your loves,
Thinking upon his services, took from you
Th' apprehension^o of his present portance,^o
Which most gibingly, ungravely, he did fashion
After the inveterate hate he bears you.

BRUTUS Lay
A fault on us, your tribunes, that we labored,
No impediment between,^o but that you must
Cast your election on him.

SICINIUS Say you chose him
More after^o our commandment than as guided
By your own true affections;^o and that your minds,
Preoccupied with what you rather must do
Than what you should, made you against the grain
To voice him consul.^o Lay the fault on us.

BRUTUS
Ay, spare us not. Say we read lectures to you,
How youngly he began to serve his country,
How long continued; and what stock he springs of,
The noble house o' th' Marcians, from whence came
That Ancus Marcius, Numa's^o daughter's son,
Who after great Hostilius here was king;
Of the same house Publius and Quintus were,
That our best water brought by conduits hither;
[And Censorinus that was so surnamed]^o
And nobly namèd so, twice being censor,
Was his great ancestor.

SICINIUS One thus descended,
That hath beside well in his person wrought
To be set high in place, we did commend
To your remembrances: but you have found,
Scaling^o his present bearing with his past,
That he's your fixèd enemy, and revoke
Your sudden^o approbation.

BRUTUS Say you ne'er had done't
(Harp on that still) but by our putting on;^o
And presently, when you have drawn your number,^o
Repair to th' Capitol.

CITIZENS We will so. Almost all
Repent in their election. Exeunt PLEBEIANS.

BRUTUS Let them go on;
This mutiny were better put in hazard^o
Than stay, past doubt, for greater.
If, as his nature is, he fall in rage
With their refusal, both observe and answer
The vantage of his anger.^o

SICINIUS To th' Capitol, come.
We will be there before the stream o' th' people;
And this shall seem, as partly 'tis, their own,
Which we have goaded onward. Exeunt. 265

221 ignorant election choice made in ignorance; Enforce urge, insist on 226 apprehension perception; portance bearing 230 No impediment between putting no obstacle in your way (i.e., we have made the way free for you to choose him) 232 after following 233 affections desires 236 voice him consul make him consul by your votes 241 Numa second king of Rome 245 And . . . surnamed see A Note on the Text, p. 1323 251 Scaling weighing 253 sudden hasty 254 putting on urging 255 drawn your number gathered your crowd (of supporters) 258 This . . . hazard it would be better to run the risk of this minor disorder 261-62 answer . . . anger take advantage of the opportunity his anger affords

225 Cornets. Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, all the GENTRY, COMINIUS, Titus LARTIUS, and other SENATORS.

CORIOLANUS
Tullus Aufidius then had made new head?^o

LARTIUS
He had, my lord; and that it was which caused
Our swifter composition.^o

CORIOLANUS
So then the Volscies stand but as at first;
Ready, when time shall prompt them, to make road
Upon's^o again. 5

COMINIUS They are worn,^o lord consul, so
That we shall hardly in our ages^o see
Their banners wave again.

CORIOLANUS Saw you Aufidius?

LARTIUS
On safeguard^o he came to me; and did curse
Against the Volscies, for they had so vilely Yielded the town. He is retired to Antium. 10

CORIOLANUS
Spoke he of me?

LARTIUS He did, my lord.

245 CORIOLANUS How? What?

LARTIUS
How often he had met you, sword to sword;
That of all things upon the earth he hated
Your person most; that he would pawn his fortunes
To hopeless restitution,^o so he might Be called your vanquisher. 15

CORIOLANUS At Antium lives he?

LARTIUS
At Antium.

CORIOLANUS
I wish I had a cause to seek him there,
To oppose his hatred fully. Welcome home. 20
Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

Behold, these are the tribunes of the people,
The tongues o' th' common mouth. I do despise them;
For they do prank them^o in authority,
Against all noble sufferance.^o

SICINIUS Pass no further.

260 CORIOLANUS
Ha? What is that? 25

BRUTUS
It will be dangerous to go on—no further.

CORIOLANUS
What makes this change?

MENENIUS
The matter?

COMINIUS
Hath he not passed the noble and the common?^o

III.i.1 made new head raised a new force 3 swifter composition coming to terms sooner 5-6 make road Upon's invade us 6 worn worn out 7 ages lifetime 9 On safeguard under safe-conduct 16 To hopeless restitution without hope of their being redeemed 23 prank them dress themselves up 24 Against . . . sufferance so that no noble can endure it 29 noble . . . common the patricians and the plebeians

BRUTUS

Cominius, no.

CORIOLANUS Have I had children's voices?

FIRST SENATOR

Tribunes, give way; he shall to th' marketplace.

BRUTUS

The people are incensed against him.

SICINIUS

Stop,

Or all will fall in broil.^o

CORIOLANUS

Are these your herd?

Must these have voices, that can yield them now,^oAnd straight disclaim^o their tongues? What are your offices?

You being their mouths, why rule you not their teeth?

Have you not set them on?

MENENIUS

Be calm, be calm.

CORIOLANUS

It is a purposed thing,^o and grows by plot,

To curb the will of the nobility.

Suffer't, and live with such as cannot rule,

Nor ever will be ruled.

BRUTUS

Call't not a plot.

The people cry you mocked them; and of late,

When corn was given them gratis, you repined,^oScandaled^o the suppliants for the people, called them

Time-pleasers, flatterers, foes to nobleness.

CORIOLANUS

Why, this was known before.

BRUTUS

Not to them all.

CORIOLANUS

Have you informed^o them sithence?^o

BRUTUS

How! I inform them!

CORIOLANUS

You are like to do such business.

BRUTUS

Not unlike

Each way to better yours.^o

CORIOLANUS

Why then should I be consul? By yond clouds,

Let me deserve so ill as you, and make me

Your fellow tribune.

SICINIUS

You show too much of that

For which the people stir.^o If you will pass

To where you are bound, you must inquire your way,

Which you are out of,^o with a gentler spirit,

Or never be so noble as a consul,

Nor yoke with him for^o tribune.

MENENIUS

Let's be calm.

COMINIUS

The people are abused;^o set on.^o This palt'ring^o

Becomes not Rome; nor has Coriolanus

Deserved this so dishonored rub,^o laid falsely^o

I' th' plain way of his merit.

CORIOLANUS

Tell me of corn!

This was my speech, and I will speak't again—

MENENIUS

Not now, not now.

FIRST SENATOR Not in this heat, sir, now.

CORIOLANUS

Now, as I live, I will.

My nobler friends, I crave their pardons.

For the mutable, rank-scented meiny,^o let them

Regard me as I do not flatter, and Therein behold themselves. I say again,

In soothing them, we nourish 'gainst our Senate

The cockle^o of rebellion, insolence, sedition,

Which we ourselves have ploughed for, sowed, and scattered,

By mingling them with us, the honored number,

Who lack not virtue, no, nor power, but that

Which they have given to beggars.

MENENIUS

Well, no more.

FIRST SENATOR

No more words, we beseech you.

CORIOLANUS

How! No more!

As for my country I have shed my blood,

Not fearing outward force, so shall my lungs

Coin words till their decay^o against those measles,^oWhich we disdain should tetter^o us, yet sought

The very way to catch them.

BRUTUS

You speak o' th' people

As if you were a god, to punish, not

A man of their infirmity.^o

SICINIUS

'Twere well

We let the people know't.

MENENIUS

What, what? His choler?

CORIOLANUS

Choler?

Were I as patient as the midnight sleep,

By Jove, 'twould be my mind!

SICINIUS

It is a mind

That shall remain a poison where it is,

Not poison any further.

CORIOLANUS

Shall remain!

Hear you this Triton^o of the minnows? Mark you

His absolute "shall"?

COMINIUS

'Twas from the canon.^o

CORIOLANUS

"Shall"! 90

O good but most unwise patricians! Why,

You grave but reckless senators, have you thus

Given Hydra here^o to choose an officer,

That with his peremptory "shall," being but

The horn and noise o' th' monster's, wants not spirit 95

To say he'll turn your current in^o a ditch,

And make your channel his? If he have power,

Then vail your ignorance;^o if none, awakeYour dangerous lenity. If you are learned,^o

Be not as common fools; if you are not,

Let them have cushions^o by you. You are plebeians,If they be senators; and they are no less,^o

When, both your voices blended, the great'st taste

66 meiny crowd 70 cockle weed 78 decay death; measles the disease; and "foul wretches," from mesel = leper 79 tetter infect with leprous eruption 82 of their infirmity having the same weaknesses as they 89 Triton sea god, trumpeter of Neptune (cf. "horn," line 95) 90 from the canon against the law 93 Given Hydra here permitted this many-headed beast 96 in (aside) into 98 vail your ignorance let your ignorance (that gave the power) bow (to him) 99 learned wise 101 cushions symbol of senatorial rank; cf. II.ii.s.d. 102 no less i.e., no less than senators

33 in broil into a riot 34 now at one time 35 disclaim disown 38 purposed thing premeditated affair 43 repined regretted it 44 Scandaled slandered 47 informed instructed; sithence since 48-49 Not . . . yours likely in every way to do your business better 53 stir are rebelling 55 are out of are straying from 57 for as 58 abused deceived; set on incited; palt'ring cheating 60 rub hindrance (in bowling on the green, any roughness of ground); falsely treacherously

Most palates theirs.^o They choose their magistrate;
 And such a one as he, who puts his "shall," 105
 His popular "shall," against a graver bench^o
 Than ever frowned in Greece. By Jove himself,
 It makes the consuls base; and my soul aches
 To know, when two authorities are up,^o
 Neither supreme, how soon confusion^o 110
 May enter 'twixt the gap of both and take
 The one by th' other.^o

COMINIUS Well, on to th' marketplace.

CORIO LANUS

Whoever gave that counsel to give forth
 The corn o' th' storehouse gratis, as 'twas used
 Sometime in Greece—

MENENIUS Well, well, no more of that. 115

CORIO LANUS

Though there the people had more absolute pow'r,
 I say they nourished disobedience, fed
 The ruin of the state.

BRUTUS Why shall the people give
 One that speaks thus their voice?

CORIO LANUS I'll give my reasons,
 More worthier than their voices. They know the corn 120
 Was not our recompense,^o resting well assured
 They ne'er did service for't. Being pressed to^o th' war,
 Even when the navel^o of the state was touched,
 They would not thread^o the gates; this kind of service
 Did not deserve corn gratis. Being i' th' war, 125
 Their mutinies and revolts, wherein they showed Most valor, spoke not for them. Th' accusation
 Which they have often made against the Senate,
 All cause unborn,^o could never be the native^o
 Of our so frank^o donation. Well, what then? 130
 How shall this bosom multiplied^o digest^o
 The Senate's courtesy? Let deeds express
 What's like to be their words: "We did request it;
 We are the greater poll,^o and in true fear
 They gave us our demands." Thus we debase 135
 The nature of our seats, and make the rabble
 Call our cares^o fears; which will in time
 Break ope the locks o' th' Senate and bring in
 The crows to peck the eagles.

MENENIUS Come, enough.

BRUTUS

Enough, with over measure.

CORIO LANUS No, take more. 140

What may be sworn by, both divine and human,
 Seal what I end withal!^o This double worship,
 Where one part does disdain with cause, the other Insult without^o all reason; where gentry,^o title, wisdom,

Cannot conclude^o but by the yea and no 145
 Of general ignorance—it must omit^o
 Real necessities, and give way the while
 To unstable slightness.^o Purpose so barred,^o it follows
 Nothing is done to purpose. Therefore, beseech you—
 You that will be less fearful than discreet;^o 150

That love the fundamental part of state^o
 More than you doubt^o the change on't; that prefer
 A noble life before a long, and wish
 To jump^o a body with a dangerous physic^o
 That's sure of death without it—at once pluck out 155
 The multitudinous tongue;^o let them not lick
 The sweet which is their poison. Your dishonor
 Mangles true judgment, and bereaves the state
 Of that integrity^o which should become't;
 Not having the power to do the good it would, 160
 For th' ill which doth control't.^o

BRUTUS H' as said enough.

SICINIUS

H' as spoken like a traitor and shall answer^o
 As traitors do.

CORIO LANUS Thou wretch, despite o'erwhelm thee!
 What should the people do with these bald^o tribunes,
 On whom depending, their obedience fails 165
 To th' greater bench?^o In a rebellion,
 When what's not meet, but what must be, was law,
 Then were they chosen; in a better hour
 Let what is meet be said it must be meet,^o
 And throw their power i' th' dust. 170

BRUTUS

Manifest treason!

SICINIUS This a consul! No.

BRUTUS 130

The aediles,^o ho!

Enter an AEDILE.

Let him be apprehended.

SICINIUS

Go, call the people, [exit AEDILE] in whose name myself
 Attach^o thee as a traitorous innovator,
 A foe to th' public weal. Obey, I charge thee, 175
 And follow to thine answer.^o

CORIO LANUS

Hence, old goat!^o

ALL [PATRICIANS]

We'll surety^o him.

COMINIUS

Aged sir, hands off.

CORIO LANUS

Hence, rotten thing, or I shall shake thy bones
 Out of thy garments.

SICINIUS

Help, ye citizens!

103-04 great'st . . . theirs the dominant flavor tastes most of them (i.e., they have the most votes) 106 bench court 109 up active 110 confusion violent disorder (in a revolution) 111-12 take . . . other seize and overthrow one by means of the other 121 recompense reward for past services 122 pressed to conscripted for 123 navel center (cf. Menenius' fable, I.i) 124 thread pass through 129 All cause unborn with no cause in existence; native original, parent (i.e., their accusation not the origin of our gift) 130 frank unsolicited 131 bosom multiplied many-bosomed beast ("Hydra," line 93); digest (1) digest (2) understand ("bosom" can mean both "cavity of the stomach" and "heart," i.e., "mind") 134 poll number 137 cares concern for the state 142 withal with 144 without beyond; gentry gentle birth

145 conclude decide 146 omit overlook 148 unstable slightness unsteady trifling; Purpose so barred when the intention (of charting a policy in advance) is so thwarted 150 less . . . discreet more prudent than fearful (on lines 150-61, see Introduction, p. 1316) 151 fundamental . . . state basic constitution of the government 152 doubt fear 154 jump risk harming; physic medicine, treatment 156 multitudinous tongue the voice of the "Hydra," the tribuneship 159 integrity wholeness 161 control't overpower it 162 answer i.e., in court, be brought to trial; cf. lines 176, 324 164 bald trivial (pun) 166 th' greater bench the Senate 169 it . . . meet that it must be fitting 172 aediles officers attached to the tribunes 174 Attach arrest 176 answer legal term for "meeting a charge"; goat evidently the tribunes are bearded; cf. II.i.90 177 surety stand surety for

Enter a rabble of PLEBEIANS, with the AEDILES.

MENENIUS

On both sides more respect.

SICINIUS

Here's he that would take from you all your power.

BRUTUS

Seize him, aediles!

ALL [CITIZENS]

Down with him, down with him!

SECOND SENATOR

Weapons, weapons, weapons!

They all bustle about CORIOLANUS.

[ALL]

Tribunes!—Patricians!—Citizens!—What, ho!—

Sicinius!—Brutus!—Coriolanus!—Citizens!—

Peace, peace, peace!—Stay! Hold! Peace!

MENENIUS

What is about to be? I am out of breath.

Confusion's^o near. I cannot speak. You, tribunes

To th' people! Coriolanus, patience!

Speak, good Sicinius.

SICINIUS

Hear me, people; peace!

ALL [CITIZENS]

Let's hear our tribune. Peace!—Speak, speak, speak.

SICINIUS

You are at point to lose^o your liberties:

Marcus would have all from you; Marcus,

Whom late you have named for consul.

MENENIUS

Fie, fie, fie!

This is the way to kindle, not to quench.

FIRST SENATOR

To unbuild the city, and to lay all flat.

SICINIUS

What is the city but the people?

ALL [CITIZENS]

True,

The people are the city.

BRUTUS

By the consent of all, we were established

The people's magistrates.

ALL [CITIZENS]

You so remain.

MENENIUS

And so are like to do.

COMINIUS

That is the way to lay the city flat,

To bring the roof to the foundation,

And bury all which yet distinctly ranges,^o

In heaps and piles of ruin.

SICINIUS

This deserves death.

BRUTUS

Or^o let us stand to^o our authority,

Or let us lose it. We do here pronounce,

Upon the part o' th' people, in^o whose power

We were elected theirs,^o Marcus is worthy

Of present death.

SICINIUS

Therefore lay hold of him;

Bear him to th' rock Tarpeian,^o and from thence

Into destruction cast him.

BRUTUS

Aediles, seize him!

180

ALL [CITIZENS]

Yield, Marcus, yield!

MENENIUS

Hear me one word;

Beseech you, tribunes, hear me but a word.

215

AEDILES Peace, peace!

MENENIUS [To BRUTUS.]

Be that you seem, truly your country's friend,

And temp'rately proceed to what you would

Thus violently redress.

BRUTUS

Sir, those cold ways,

That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous

220

Where the disease is violent. Lay hands upon him,

And bear him to the rock.

185

CORIOLANUS draws his sword.

CORIOLANUS

No, I'll die here.

There's some among you have beheld me fighting;

Come, try upon yourselves what you have seen me.

190

MENENIUS

Down with that sword! Tribunes, withdraw awhile.

225

BRUTUS

Lay hands upon him.

MENENIUS

Help Marcus, help,

You that be noble; help him, young and old!

ALL [CITIZENS]

Down with him, down with him!

In this mutiny,^o the TRIBUNES, the AEDILES, and the PEOPLE are beat in.

195

MENENIUS

Go, get you to your house; begone, away!

All will be naught^o else.

SECOND SENATOR

Get you gone.

CORIOLANUS

Stand fast;

230

We have as many friends as enemies.

MENENIUS

Shall it be put to that?^o

200

FIRST SENATOR

The gods forbid!

I prithee, noble friend, home to thy house;

Leave us to cure this cause.^o

MENENIUS

For 'tis a sore upon us

You cannot tent^o yourself. Begone, beseech you.

235

COMINIUS

Come, sir, along with us.

205

CORIOLANUS

I would they were barbarians, as they are,

Though in Rome littered; not Romans, as they are not,

Though calved i' th' porch o' th' Capitol.^o

MENENIUS

Begone.

Put not your worthy^o rage into your tongue:

240

One time will owe another.^o

210

CORIOLANUS

On fair ground

I could beat forty of them.

MENENIUS

I could myself

228 s.d. mutiny riot 230 naught ruined 232 put to that driven to that extremity 234 cause dispute 235 tent treat (cf. l.ix.31) 239 porch . . . Capitol portico of the temple of Jupiter on the Capitoline Hill 240 worthy justifiable (?) noble (?) 241 One . . . another one time (the present, when the people are in revolt) will be compensated by another (when the people are checked)

189 Confusion ruin (resulting from civil disorder; cf. line 110) 193 at . . . lose on point of losing 205 distinctly ranges extends in separate orderly rows (of buildings) 207 Or either; stand to stand by 209 in by 210 theirs i.e., their representatives 212 rock Tarpeian from which criminals were thrown

Take up a brace° o' th' best of them; yea, the two tribunes.

COMINIUS

But now 'tis odds beyond arithmetic;°
And manhood is called foolery when it stands
Against a falling fabric.° Will you hence
Before the tag° return? Whose rage doth rend
Like interrupted waters, and o'erbear°
What they are used to bear.

MENENIUS

Pray you, begone.

I'll try whether my old wit be in request
With those that have but little. This must be patched
With cloth of any color.

COMINIUS

Nay, come away.

Exeunt CORIOLANUS and COMINIUS.

PATRICIAN

This man has marred his fortune.

MENENIUS

His nature is too noble for the world:
He would not flatter Neptune for his trident,
Or Jove for's power to thunder. His heart's his mouth:
What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent;
And, being angry, does forget that ever
He heard the name of death.

A noise within.

Here's goodly work!

PATRICIAN

I would they were abed!

MENENIUS

I would they were in Tiber! What the vengeance!°
Could he not speak 'em fair?°

Enter BRUTUS and SICINIUS, with the RABBLE again.

SICINIUS

Where is this viper

That would depopulate the city and
Be every man himself?

MENENIUS

You worthy tribunes—

SICINIUS

He shall be thrown down the Tarpeian rock
With rigorous hands. He hath resisted law,
And therefore law shall scorn him further trial
Than the severity of the public power,°
Which he so sets at nought.

FIRST CITIZEN

He shall well know

The noble tribunes are the people's mouths,
And we their hands.

ALL [CITIZENS]

He shall, sure on't.

MENENIUS

Sir, sir—

SICINIUS Peace!

MENENIUS

Do not cry havoc,° where you should but hunt
With modest warrant.°

SICINIUS

Sir, how comes't that you

Have holp° to make this rescue?

MENENIUS

Hear me speak:

243 Take . . . brace take on a couple 244 beyond arithmetic beyond number 246 fabric building 247 tag riffraff ("tag and rag") 248 o'erbear overcome 261
What the vengeance an emphatic "What!"; cf. What the devil! 262 speak 'em fair talk civilly to them (and so flatter)
268 the public power the power derived from the people
274 cry havoc call for general slaughter 275 With modest warrant with moderate justification 276 holp helped

As I do know the consul's worthiness,
So can I name his faults.

SICINIUS

Consul! What consul?

MENENIUS

The consul Coriolanus.

BRUTUS

He consul!

ALL [CITIZENS]

No, no, no, no, no.

MENENIUS

If, by the tribunes' leave, and yours, good people,
I may be heard, I would crave a word or two;
The which shall turn you to no further harm
Than so much loss of time.

SICINIUS

Speak briefly then;

For we are peremptory° to dispatch
This viperous traitor. To eject him hence
Were but our danger,° and to keep him here
Our certain death. Therefore it is decreed
He dies tonight.

MENENIUS

Now the good gods forbid

That our renownèd Rome, whose gratitude
Towards her deservèd° children is enrolled
In Jove's own book, like an unnatural dam
Should now eat up her own!

SICINIUS

He's a disease that must be cut away.

MENENIUS

O, he's a limb that has but a disease;
Mortal,° to cut it off; to cure it, easy.

What has he done to Rome that's worthy death?
Killing our enemies, the blood he hath lost
Which I dare vouch is more than that he hath
By many an ounce—he dropped it for his country;
And what is left, to lose it by his country
Were to us all that do't and suffer it
A brand° to th' end o' th' world.

SICINIUS

This is clean kam.°

BRUTUS

Merely° awry. When he did love his country,
It honored him.

MENENIUS

The service of the foot

Being once gangrened, is not then respected
For what before it was.

BRUTUS

We'll hear no more.

Pursue him to his house and pluck° him thence,
Lest his infection, being of catching nature,
Spread further.

MENENIUS

One word more, one word!

This tiger-footed rage, when it shall find
The harm of unscanned° swiftness, will, too late,
Tie leaden pounds° to's° heels. Proceed by process;°
Lest parties (as he is beloved) break out,
And sack great Rome with Romans.

BRUTUS

If it were so—

SICINIUS

What° do ye talk?

285 peremptory resolved 287 but our danger only the risk
we now run 291 deservèd deserving 296 Mortal deadly 303 brand mark of disgrace; clean kam completely wrong (literally, "kam" = crooked) 304 Merely absolutely 308 pluck take 312 unscanned thoughtless 313 pounds pound-weights; to's to its; process due process of law 316 What why

Have we not had a taste of his obedience?
Our aediles smote? Ourselves resisted? Come!

MENENIUS

Consider this: he has been bred i' th' wars
Since 'a could draw a sword, and is ill schooled
In bolted^o language; meal and brain together
He throws without distinction. Give me leave,
I'll go to him, and undertake to bring him
Where he shall answer, by a lawful form,^o
In peace, to his utmost peril.^o

FIRST SENATOR

Noble tribunes,

It is the humane way. The other course
Will prove too bloody, and the end of it
Unknown to the beginning.

SICINIUS

Noble Menenius,

Be thou then as the people's officer.
Masters, lay down your weapons.

BRUTUS

Go not home.

SICINIUS

Meet on the marketplace. We'll attend you there,
Where, if you bring not Marcius, we'll proceed
In our first way.

MENENIUS

I'll bring him to you.

[To the SENATORS.]

Let me desire your company. He must come,
Or what is worst will follow.

SENATORS

Pray you, let's to him.

Exeunt omnes.

[Scene II. Rome. The house of Coriolanus.]

Enter CORIOLANUS, with NOBLES.

CORIOLANUS

Let them pull all about mine ears; present me
Death on the wheel^o or at wild horses' heels;
Or pile ten hills on the Tarpeian rock,
That the precipitation^o might down stretch
Below the beam of sight;^o yet will I still
Be thus to them.

A NOBLE

You do the nobler.

CORIOLANUS

I muse^o my mother
Does not approve me further, who was wont
To call them woolen vassals,^o things created
To buy and sell with groats;^o to show bare heads
In congregations, to yawn, be still and wonder,
When one but of my ordinance^o stood up
To speak of peace or war.

Enter VOLUMNIA.

I talk of you:

Why did you wish me milder? Would you have me

False to my nature? Rather say I play
The man I am.

15

VOLUMNIA O, sir, sir, sir,

320

I would have had you put your power well on,
Before you had worn it out.

CORIOLANUS

Let go.^o

VOLUMNIA

You might have been enough the man you are,
With striving less to be so. Lesser had been
The thwartings of your dispositions,^o if 20

325

You had not showed them how ye were disposed
Ere they lacked power to cross you.

CORIOLANUS

Let them hang.

VOLUMNIA

Ay, and burn too.

Enter MENENIUS, with the SENATORS.

330

MENENIUS

Come, come, you have been too rough, something^o too rough;

25

You must return and mend it.

SENATOR

There's no remedy,

Unless, by not so doing, our good city
Cleave in the midst^o and perish.

VOLUMNIA

Pray be counseled;

I have a heart as little apt^o as yours,
But yet a brain that leads my use of anger
To better vantage.

30

MENENIUS

Well said, noble woman!

Before he should thus stoop to th' herd, but that
The violent fit o' th' time craves it as physic^o
For the whole state, I would put mine armor on,
Which I can scarcely bear.

CORIOLANUS

What must I do?

35

MENENIUS

Return to th' tribunes.

CORIOLANUS

Well, what then? What then?

MENENIUS

Repent what you have spoke.

5

CORIOLANUS

For them! I cannot do it to the gods,
Must I then do't to them?

VOLUMNIA

You are too absolute;

Though therein you can never be too noble
But when extremities speak.^o I have heard you say,
Honor and policy, like unsevered^o friends,
I' th' war do grow together. Grant that, and tell me
In peace what each of them by th' other lose
That they combine not there.

40

CORIOLANUS

Tush, tush!

MENENIUS

A good demand.

45

VOLUMNIA

If it be honor in your wars to seem
The same you are not, which for your best ends
You adopt^o your policy, how is it less or worse
That it^o shall hold companionship in peace

321 bolted refined (literally, "sifted") 324 answer . . .
form meet the charges according to the forms of law 325 to . . . peril at the risk of the severest penalty

III.ii.2 the wheel by being bound to a wheel and beaten to death; an Elizabethan, not Roman, penalty 4 precipitation steepness 5 Below . . . sight beyond the range of sight ("beam" = a ray passing from the object to the eye) 7 muse wonder 9 woolen vassals i.e., rough-dressed members of the lowest class 10 groats four-penny coins 12 ordinance rank

18 Let go enough of that 21 dispositions inclinations 25 something somewhat 26-28 There's . . . midst there's no help for it (you must compromise); else, because of your failure to do so, our good city may be split in two 29 apt compliant 33 physic medical treatment 41 when extremities speak when the most critical situations demand (see Introduction,
p. 1317) 42 unsevered inseparable 48 adopt adopt as 49 it pretense, "to seem/The same you are not"

With honor as in war; since that to both
It stands in like request?°

CORIO LANUS

Why force° you this?

VOLUMNIA

Because that now it lies you on° to speak
To th' people, not by your own instruction,
Nor by th' matter which your heart prompts you,
But with such words that are but rote° in
Your tongue, though but bastards and syllables
Of no allowance to your bosom's truth.°
Now, this no more dishonors you at all
Than to take in° a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune° and
The hazard of much blood.

I would dissemble with my nature, where
My fortunes and my friends at stake required
I should do so in honor.° I am in this°
Your wife, your son, these senators, the nobles;
And you will rather show our general° louts
How you can frown than spend a fawn upon 'em
For the inheritance° of their loves and safeguard
Of what that want° might ruin.

MENENIUS

Noble lady!

Come, go with us; speak fair; you may salve so,
Not what is dangerous present, but the loss
Of what is past.

VOLUMNIA

I prithee now, my son,

Go to them with this bonnet in thy hand;
And thus far having stretched it (here be with them),

Thy knee bussing° the stones (for in such business
Action is eloquence, and the eyes of th' ignorant
More learned than the ears), waving° thy head,
Which° often thus correcting thy stout° heart,
Now humble as the ripest mulberry
That will not hold the handling; or° say to them,
Thou art their soldier, and being bred in broils
Hast not the soft way which, thou dost confess,
Were fit for thee to use, as they to claim,
In asking their good loves; but thou wilt frame
Thyself, forsooth,° hereafter theirs, so far
As thou hast power and person.

MENENIUS

This but done,

Even as she speaks, why, their hearts were yours;
For they have pardons, being asked, as free°
As words to little purpose.

VOLUMNIA

Prithee now,

Go, and be ruled; although I know thou hadst 90 rather

Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf°

51 stands . . . request is equally in demand; force urge 52 it . . . on it is your duty 55 rote° learned by rote 56-57 but . . . truth only false expressions wholly unacceptable to your heart's understanding 59 take in capture 60 put . . .
fortune force you to take your chances (in war) 64 in honor in honor bound (not Coriolanus' understanding of "honor"); I . . . this I speak in this for (implying also, "I stand in place of") 66 general common 68 inheritance possession 69 that want i.e., of their loves 74-80 the text may be corrupt 75 bussing kissing (touching) 77 waving bowing up and down 78 Which subject of "correcting" in a nominative absolute; the sentence is urgent; the syntax, sketchy; stout proud 80 or marks the turn from "action" to
"eloquence," line 76 85 forsooth in truth 88 free liberal
(to grant) 91 in . . . gulf into an abyss of flame

50 Than flatter him in a bower.°

Enter COMINIUS.

Here is Cominius.

COMINIUS

I have been i' th' marketplace;° and, sir, 'tis fit
You make strong party,° or defend yourself
By calmness or by absence. All's in anger. 95

MENENIUS

Only fair speech.

COMINIUS

I think 'twill serve, if he

Can thereto frame his spirit.

VOLUMNIA

He must, and will.

Prithee now, say you will, and go about it.

CORIO LANUS

Must I go show them my unbarbed sconce?° Must I
With my base tongue give to my noble heart
A lie that it must bear? Well, I will do't.
Yet, were there but this single plot° to lose,
This mold° of Marcius, they to dust should grind it,
And throw't against the wind. To th' marketplace!
You have put me now to such a part° which never
I shall discharge° to th' life. 105

COMINIUS

Come, come, we'll prompt you.

VOLUMNIA

I prithee now, sweet son, as thou hast said
My praises made thee first a soldier, so,
To have my praise for this, perform a part
Thou hast not done before.

CORIO LANUS

Well, I must do't. 110

Away, my disposition, and possess me
Some harlot's° spirit! My throat of war be turned,
Which quired° with my drum, into a pipe°
Small as an eunuch or the virgin voice
That babies lulls asleep! The smiles of knaves
Tent in my cheeks, and schoolboys' tears take up°
The glasses of my sight!° A beggar's tongue
Make motion through my lips, and my armed knees,
Who bowed but in my stirrup, bend like his
That hath received an alms! I will not do't;
Lest I surcease° to honor mine own truth,
And by my body's action teach my mind
A most inherent° baseness. 120

VOLUMNIA

At thy choice then

To beg of thee, it is my more dishonor
Than thou of them. Come all to ruin! Let Thy mother rather feel thy pride than fear
Thy dangerous stoutness,° for I mock at death
With as big heart as thou. Do as thou list.°
Thy valiantness was mine, thou suck'st it from me,
But owe° thy pride thyself. 125

CORIO LANUS

Pray, be content:

Mother, I am going to the marketplace; 130

92 bower ladies' chamber 93 marketplace Forum of ancient Rome 94 make strong party maintain your side strongly 99 unbarbed sconce unarmed head ("sconce" often used in comic contexts) 102 plot of earth 103 mold both "frame" and "earth"; cf. V.iii.22 105 part in a play 106 discharge perform 112 harlot rascal (used of both sexes) 113 quired sang harmoniously; pipe i.e., voice 116 take up possess 117 glasses
. . . sight my eyeballs 121 surcease cease 123 inherent firmly settled 126-27 feel . . . stoutness suffer the effects of thy pride, but not fear the danger of it ("stoutness" = obstinacy, as in North, nearly equal to "pride"; cf. line 78) 128 thou list you please 130 owe own, have

Chide me no more. I'll mountebank° their loves,
 Cog° their hearts from them, and come home beloved
 Of all the trades in Rome. Look, I am going.
 Commend me to my wife. I'll return consul;
 Or never trust to what my tongue can do
 I' th' way of flattery further.

VOLUMNIA

Do your will.

Exit VOLUMNIA.

COMINIUS

Away, the tribunes do attend you. Arm yourself
 To answer mildly; for they are prepared
 With accusations, as I hear, more strong
 Than are upon you yet.

CORIOLANUS

The word° is "mildly." Pray you, let us go.
 Let them accuse me by invention,° I
 Will answer in° mine honor.

MENENIUS

Ay, but mildly.

CORIOLANUS

Well, mildly be it then—mildly.

Exeunt. 145

[Scene III. Rome. The Forum.]

Enter SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

BRUTUS

In this point charge him home,° that he affects° Tyrannical power. If he evade us there,
 Enforce him° with his envy° to the people,
 And that the spoil got on° the Antiates
 Was ne'er distributed.

Enter an AEDILE.

What, will he come?

5

AEDILE

He's coming.

BRUTUS

How accompanied?

AEDILE

With old Menenius and those senators
 That always favored him.

SICINIUS

Have you a catalog

Of all the voices that we have procured,
 Set down by th' poll?°

AEDILE

I have; 'tis ready.

10

SICINIUS

Have you collected them by tribes?

AEDILE

I have.

SICINIUS

Assemble presently° the people hither:
 And when they hear me say, "It shall be so
 I' th' right and strength o' th' commons," be it either
 For death, for fine, or banishment, then let them,
 If I say "Fine," cry "Fine!"—if "Death," cry "Death!"

15

Insisting on the old prerogative
 And power i' th' truth o' th' cause.°

AEDILE

I shall inform them.

BRUTUS

And when such time° they have begun to cry,
 Let them not cease, but with a din confused
 Enforce° the present execution
 Of what we chance to sentence.

20

AEDILE

Very well.

SICINIUS

Make them be strong, and ready for this hint,°
 When we shall hap to give't them.

140

BRUTUS

Go about it. [Exit AEDILE.]

Put him to° choler straight. He hath been used
 Ever to conquer and to have his worth°
 Of contradiction. Being once chafed, he cannot Be reined again to temperance; then he speaks
 What's in his heart, and that is there which looks
 With us° to break his neck:

25

Enter CORIOLANUS, MENENIUS, and COMINIUS, with others.

SICINIUS

Well, here he comes.

30

MENENIUS

Calmly, I do beseech you.

CORIOLANUS

Ay, as an ostler, that for th' poorest piece°
 Will bear the knave by th' volume.° Th' honored gods
 Keep Rome in safety, and the chairs of justice
 Supplied with worthy men! Plant love among's!
 Throng our large temples with the shows of peace,
 And not our streets with war!

35

FIRST SENATOR

Amen, amen.

MENENIUS

A noble wish.

Enter the AEDILE, with the PLEBEIANS.

SICINIUS

Draw near, ye people.

AEDILE

List to your tribunes. Audience!° peace, I say!

40

CORIOLANUS

First, hear me speak.

BOTH TRIBUNES

Well, say. Peace, ho!

CORIOLANUS

Shall I be charged no further than this present?°
 Must all determine° here?

SICINIUS

I do demand,°

If you submit you to the people's voices,
 Allow° their officers, and are content
 To suffer lawful censure for such faults
 As shall be proved upon you.

45

CORIOLANUS

I am content.

MENENIUS

Lo, citizens, he says he is content.

132 mountebank win their loves by tricky actions (cf. a mountebank, a quack doctor, who puts on an act to sell his wares) 133 Cog cheat 142 word password 143 accuse . . . invention invent accusations against me 144 in in a way consistent with

III.iii.1 charge him home press your accusations against him to the limit; affects aims at 3 Enforce him press him hard; envy ill will 4 got on won from 10 by th' poll by counting heads 12 presently at once (cf. line 21)

18 i' . . . cause resting in the justice of the case 19 when such time at such time when 21 Enforce press for 23 hint opportunity 25 Put him to drive him to 26 his worth his pennyworth, i.e., his fill 29–30 looks With us promises in harmony with our intent 32 piece coin 33 bear . . . volume endure being called knave enough times to fill a book 40 Audience Give ear! 42 this present this immediate occasion 43 determine reach a conclusion; demand ask 45 Allow acknowledge

The warlike service he has done, consider; think
Upon the wounds his body bears, which show
Like graves i' th' holy churchyard.

CORIO LANUS Scratches with briers,
Scars to move laughter only.

MENENIUS Consider further,
That when he speaks not like a citizen,
You find him like a soldier.^o Do not take
His rougher accents for malicious sounds, 55
But, as I say, such as become a soldier
Rather than envy^o you.

COMINIUS Well, well, no more.

CORIO LANUS
What is the matter
That, being passed for consul with full voice,
I am so dishonored that the very hour 60
You take it off again?

SICINIUS Answer to us.

CORIO LANUS
Say, then. 'Tis true, I ought so.

SICINIUS
We charge you, that you have contrived to take
From Rome all seasoned^o office, and to wind
Yourself into^o a power tyrannical, 65
For which you are a traitor to the people.

CORIO LANUS

How! Traitor!

MENENIUS Nay, temperately! Your promise.

CORIO LANUS
The fires i' th' lowest hell fold in the people!
Call me their traitor, thou injurious^o tribune!
Within^o thine eyes sat twenty thousand deaths, 70
In thy hands clutched as many millions, in Thy lying tongue both numbers, I would say
"Thou liest" unto thee with a voice as free^o
As I do pray the gods.

SICINIUS Mark you this, people?

ALL [CITIZENS]
To th' rock, to th' rock with him!

SICINIUS Peace! 75
We need not put new matter to his charge.
What you have seen him do and heard him speak,
Beating your officers, cursing yourselves,
Opposing laws with strokes, and here defying
Those whose great power must try him—even this, 80
So criminal and in such capital^o kind,
Deserves th' extremest death.

BRUTUS But since he hath Served well for Rome—

CORIO LANUS What do you prate of service?

BRUTUS
I talk of that that know it.

CORIO LANUS You! 85

MENENIUS
Is this the promise that you made your mother?

COMINIUS
Know, I pray you—

CORIO LANUS I'll know no further.

54 like a soldier see Introduction, p. 1312 57 envy express malice towards 64 seasoned established (or "moderate," "well moderated") 64-65 wind Yourself into make your way by indirect and crooked means 69 injurious insulting 70 Within if within 73 free unrestrained 81 capital defined by line 82

Let them pronounce the steep Tarpeian death,^o
Vagabond exile, flaying, pent^o to linger 90
But with a grain a day, I would not buy
Their mercy at the price of one fair word,
Nor check my courage^o for what they can give,
To have't with saying "Good morrow."

SICINIUS For that he has
(As much as in him lies^o) from time to time
Envied against^o the people, seeking means 95
To pluck away their power, as now^o at last
Given hostile strokes, and that not^o in the presence
Of dreaded justice, but on the ministers
That do distribute it—in the name o' th' people,
And in the power of us the tribunes, we, 100
Even from this instant, banish him our city,
In peril of precipitation
From off the rock Tarpeian, never more
To enter our Rome gates. I' th' people's name,
I say it shall be so. 105

ALL [CITIZENS]
It shall be so, it shall be so! Let him away!
He's banished, and it shall be so.

COMINIUS
Hear me, my masters and my common friends— 65

SICINIUS
He's sentenced; no more hearing.

COMINIUS Let me speak.
I have been consul, and can show for Rome 110
Her enemies' marks upon me. I do love
My country's good with a respect more tender,
More holy and profound, than mine own life,
My dear wife's estimate,^o her womb's increase
And treasure of my loins; then if I would 115
Speak that—

SICINIUS We know your drift. Speak what?

BRUTUS
There's no more to be said, but he is banished
As enemy to the people and his country.
It shall be so.

ALL [CITIZENS]
It shall be so, it shall be so. 120

CORIO LANUS
You common cry^o of curs, whose breath I hate
As reek^o o' th' rotten fens, whose loves I prize
As the dead carcasses of unburied men
That do corrupt my air, I banish you.
And here remain with your uncertainty! 125
Let every feeble rumor shake your hearts!
Your enemies, with nodding of their plumes,
Fan you into despair! Have the power still
To banish your defenders, till at length
Your ignorance (which finds not till it feels,^o 130
Making but reservation of yourselves,^o Still^o your own foes) deliver you as most Abated^o captives to some nation

88 steep Tarpeian death cf. line 103 89 pent i.e., "Let them pronounce" the sentence of being "pent," imprisoned 92 courage spirit 94 as . . . lies as lies in his power 95 Envied against shown malice towards 96 as now with respect to this occasion (or "now," "as" being redundant) 97 not not only 114 estimate worth 121 cry pack 122 reek mist 130 finds . . . feels does not understand until it suffers the consequences 131 Making . . . yourselves saving only yourselves 132 Still ever 133 Abated beaten down

That won you without blows! Despising
For you the city, thus I turn my back. 135
There is a world elsewhere.

Exeunt CORIOLANUS, COMINIUS, [MENENIUS, with the other SENATORS.

AEDILE

The people's enemy is gone, is gone!

ALL [CITIZENS]

Our enemy is banished, he is gone! Hoo—oo!

They all shout, and throw up their caps.

SICINIUS

Go see him out at gates, and follow him,
As he hath followed you, with all despite;
Give him deserved vexation.^o Let a guard
Attend us through the city.

ALL [CITIZENS]

Come, come, let's see him out at gates; come!
The gods preserve our noble tribunes! Come. Exeunt.

ACT IV

[Scene I. Rome. Before a gate of the city.]

Enter CORIOLANUS, VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, MENE-
NIUS, COMINIUS, with the young NOBILITY of Rome.

CORIOLANUS

Come, leave your tears; a brief farewell. The beast
With many heads butts me away. Nay, mother,
Where is your ancient courage? You were used
To say extremities was^o the trier of spirits;
That common chances common men could bear; 5
That when the sea was calm all boats alike
Showed mastership in floating; fortune's blows^o
When most struck home, being gentle wounded craves
A noble cunning.^o You were used to load me
With precepts that would make invincible 10
The heart that conned^o them.

VIRGILIA

O heavens! O heavens!

CORIOLANUS Nay, I prithee, woman—

VOLUMNIA

Now the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome,
And occupations perish!

CORIOLANUS What, what, what!

I shall be loved when I am lacked. Nay, mother, 15
Resume that spirit when you were wont to say,
If you had been the wife to Hercules,
Six of his labors you'd have done, and saved
Your husband so much sweat. Cominius,
Droop not; adieu. Farewell, my wife, my mother. 20
I'll do well yet. Thou old and true Menenius,
Thy tears are salter than a younger man's,

140 despite contempt 141 Give . . . vexation torment him as he deserves

IV.i.4 extremities was plural subject permissible in Elizabethan usage 7 fortune's blows supply introductory "that" 7-9 fortune's . . . cunning when fortune's blows strike hardest, to act the gentleman though wounded demands a noble use of intelligence 11 conned studied

And venomous to thine eyes. My sometime^o general,
I have seen thee stern, and thou hast oft beheld
Heart-hard'ning spectacles; tell these sad women 25
'Tis fond^o to wail inevitable strokes,
As 'tis to laugh at 'em. My mother, you wot^o well
My hazards still have been your solace,^o and Believe't not lightly—though I go alone,
Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen 30
Makes feared and talked of more than seen—your son
Will or exceed the common^o or be caught
With cautelous^o baits and practice.^o

VOLUMNIA

My first son,

Whither wilt thou go? Take good Cominius 35
With thee awhile. Determine on some course
More than a wild exposure^o to each chance
That starts i' th' way before thee.

CORIOLANUS

O the gods!

COMINIUS

I'll follow thee a month, devise with thee
Where thou shalt rest, that thou mayst hear of us
And we of thee. So, if the time thrust forth 40
A cause for thy repeal,^o we shall not send O'er the vast world to seek a single man,
And lose advantage,^o which doth ever cool
I' th' absence of the needier.^o

CORIOLANUS

Fare ye well!

Thou hast years upon thee; and thou art too full 45
Of the wars' surfeits to go rove with one
That's yet unbruised. Bring^o me but out at gate.
Come, my sweet wife, my dearest mother, and
My friends of noble touch;^o when I am forth,
Bid me farewell, and smile. I pray you, come. 50
While I remain above the ground you shall Hear from me still, and never of me aught
But what is like me formerly.

MENENIUS

That's worthily

As any ear can hear. Come, let's not weep. 55
If I could shake off but one seven years
From these old arms and legs, by the good gods,
I'd^o with thee every foot.

CORIOLANUS

Give me thy hand.

Come.

Exeunt.

[Scene II. Rome. Near the gate.]

Enter the two tribunes, SICINIUS and BRUTUS, with the AEDILE.

SICINIUS

Bid them all^o home; he's gone, and we'll no further.
The nobility are vexed, whom we see have sided
In his behalf.

BRUTUS

Now we have shown our power,

Let us seem humbler after it is done

Than when it was a-doing.

SICINIUS

Bid them home. 5

23 sometime former 26 fond foolish 27 wot know 28 solace interest 32 or . . . common either surpass the usual achievements of men 33 cautelous crafty; practice treachery 36 exposure exposure 41 repeal recall 43 advantage the opportune moment 44 needier i.e., of "advantage" 47 Bring conduct 49 noble touch tested nobility (cf. touchstone) 57
I'd I would (go)

IV.ii.1 them all the plebeians

Say their great enemy is gone, and they Stand in their ancient strength.
BRUTUS Dismiss them home. [Exit AEDILE.]
Here comes his mother.

Enter VOLUMNIA, VIRGILIA, and MENENIUS.

SICINIUS Let's not meet her.
BRUTUS Why?

SICINIUS They say she's mad.

BRUTUS They have ta'en note of us. Keep on your way. 10

VOLUMNIA O, y' are well met. Th' hoarded^o plague o' th' gods
Requite your love!

MENENIUS Peace, peace, be not so loud.

VOLUMNIA If that I could for weeping, you should hear—Nay, and you shall hear some. [To BRUTUS.] Will you be gone?

VIRGILIA [To SICINIUS.]
You shall stay too. I would I had the power 15
To say so to my husband.

SICINIUS Are you mankind?^o

VOLUMNIA Ay, fool; is that a shame? Note but this, fool.
Was not a man my father? Hadst thou foxship^o
To banish him that struck more blows for Rome
Than thou hast spoken words?

SICINIUS O blessed heavens! 20

VOLUMNIA Moe^o noble blows than ever thou wise words;
And for Rome's good. I'll tell thee what—yet go!
Nay, but thou shalt stay too. I would my son
Were in Arabia,^o and thy tribe before him,
His good sword in his hand.

SICINIUS What then?

VIRGILIA What then! 25
He'd make an end of thy posterity.

VOLUMNIA Bastards and all.
Good man, the wounds that he does bear for Rome!

MENENIUS Come, come, peace.

SICINIUS I would he had continued to his country 30
As he began, and not unknit himself
The noble knot he made.^o

BRUTUS I would he had.

VOLUMNIA "I would he had"! 'Twas you incensed the rabble;
Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth
As I can of those mysteries which heaven 35
Will not have earth to know.

BRUTUS Pray, let's go.

VOLUMNIA Now, pray, sir, get you gone;

II hoarded stored up (for punishment) 16 mankind mad, of manlike violence (Sicinius' meaning; but Volumnia takes it in the sense of "human") 18 foxship cunning 21 Moe more 24 Arabia a desert (outside Roman law and order) 32 noble . . . made bond to Rome made by his heroic deeds.

You have done a brave deed. Ere you go, hear this:
As far as doth the Capitol exceed
The meanest house in Rome, so far my son— 40
This lady's husband here, this, do you see?
Whom you have banished—does exceed you all.

BRUTUS

Well, well, we'll leave you.

SICINIUS Why stay we to be baited
With^o one that wants her wits? Exit TRIBUNES.

VOLUMNIA Take my prayers with you.
I would the gods had nothing else to do 45
But to confirm my curses! Could I meet 'em
But once a day, it would unclog my heart
Of what lies heavy to't.

MENENIUS You have told them home,^o
And by my troth you have cause. You'll sup with me?

VOLUMNIA Anger's my meat; I sup upon myself, 50
And so shall starve with feeding. Come, let's go.
Leave this faint puling,^o and lament as I do,
In anger, Juno-like. Come, come, come.

Exeunt [VOLUMNIA and VIRGILIA].
MENENIUS Fie, fie, fie! Exit.

[Scene III. Between Rome and Antium.]

Enter a ROMAN and a VOLSC.

ROMAN I know you well, sir, and you know me: your name, I think, is Adrian.

VOLSC It is so, sir. Truly, I have forgot you.

ROMAN I am a Roman; and my services are, as you are, against 'em.^o Know you me yet? 5

VOLSC Nicanor? No!

ROMAN The same, sir.

VOLSC You had more beard when I last saw you;
but your favor^o is well appeared^o by your tongue. 10
What's the news in Rome? I have a note^o from the Volscian state to find you out there. You have well saved me a day's journey.

ROMAN There hath been in Rome strange insurrections; the people against the senators, patricians, and nobles. 15

VOLSC Hath been! Is it ended then? Our state thinks not so; they are in a most warlike preparation, and hope to come upon them in the heat of their division.

ROMAN The main blaze of it is past, but a small thing would make it flame again; for the nobles receive^o so 20 to heart the banishment of that worthy Coriolanus, that they are in a ripe aptness to take all power from the people and to pluck from them their tribunes forever. This lies glowing, I can tell you, and is almost mature for the violent breaking out. 25

VOLSC Coriolanus banished!

ROMAN Banished, sir.

VOLSC You will be welcome with this intelligence, Nicanor.

ROMAN The day serves well for them^o now. I have 30

44 With by 48 told them home "hit them where it hurts"
52 puling whining
IV.iii.5 'em the Romans 9 favor face; appeared made to appear 10 a note intructions 20 receive take 30 them the Volscians

heard it said the fittest time to corrupt a man's wife is when she's fall'n out with her husband. Your noble Tullus Aufidius will appear well in these wars, his great opposer, Coriolanus, being now in no request of^o his country. 35

VOLSCE He cannot choose.^o I am most fortunate thus accidentally to encounter you. You have ended my business, and I will merrily accompany you home.

ROMAN I shall, between this^o and supper, tell you most strange things from Rome, all tending to the good of their adversaries. Have you an army ready, say you? 40

VOLSCE A most royal one; the centurions^o and their charges,^o distinctly billeted,^o already in th' entertainment,^o and to be on foot at an hour's warning. 45

ROMAN I am joyful to hear of their readiness, and am the man, I think, that shall set them in present action. So, sir, heartily well met, and most glad of your company.

VOLSCE You take my part from me, sir. I have the most cause to be glad of yours. 50

ROMAN Well, let us go together. Exeunt.

[Scene IV. Antium. Before Aufidius' house.]

Enter CORIOLANUS in mean apparel, disguised and muffled.

CORIOLANUS

A goodly city is this Antium. City,
'Tis I that made thy widows: many an heir
Of these fair edifices 'fore my wars^o
Have I heard groan and drop. Then know me not,
Lest that thy wives with spits and boys with stones 5
In puny battle slay me.

Enter a CITIZEN.

Save you,^o sir.

CITIZEN

And you.

CORIOLANUS Direct me, if it be your will,
Where great Aufidius lies.^o Is he in Antium?

CITIZEN

He is, and feasts the nobles of the state
At his house this night.

CORIOLANUS Which is his house, beseech you? 10

CITIZEN

This here before you.

CORIOLANUS Thank you, sir: farewell.

Exit CITIZEN.

O world, thy slippery turns! Friends now fast sworn,
Whose double bosoms seems^o to wear one heart,
Whose hours, whose bed, whose meal and exercise
Are still together, who twin, as 'twere, in love 15

34-35 in . . . of in no demand by 36 cannot choose but "appear well" 39 this this time 43 centurions commanders of smallest unit (century) of a Roman legion 44 charges men under them; distinctly billeted separately enrolled 44-45 in th' entertainment in service (maintained by the army)

IV.iv.3 'fore my wars before my attacks. 6 Save you God save you 8 lies lives 13 seems perhaps an old plural in -s

Unseparable, shall within this hour,
On a dissension of a doit,^o break out
To bitterest enmity. So fellest^o foes,
Whose passions and whose plots have broke their sleep
To take the one the other, by some chance, 20
Some trick^o not worth an egg, shall grow dear friends
And interjoin their issues.^o So with me:
My birthplace hate I, and my love's upon
This enemy town. I'll enter. If he slay me,
He does fair justice; if he give me way, 25
I'll do his country service. Exit.

[Scene V. Antium. A hall in Aufidius' house.]

Music plays. Enter a SERVINGMAN.

FIRST SERVINGMAN Wine, wine, wine! What service is here! I think our fellows are asleep. [Exit.]

Enter another SERVINGMAN.

SECOND SERVINGMAN Where's Cotus? My master calls for him. Cotus! Exit.

Enter CORIOLANUS.

CORIOLANUS

A goodly house. The feast smells well, but I
Appear not like a guest. 5

Enter the FIRST SERVINGMAN.

FIRST SERVINGMAN What would you have, friend?
Whence are you? Here's no place for you: pray go to the door!^o Exit.

CORIOLANUS

I have deserved no better entertainment,
In being Coriolanus. 10

Enter SECOND SERVINGMAN.

SECOND SERVINGMAN Whence are you, sir? Has the porter his eyes in his head that he gives entrance to such companions?^o Pray get you out.

CORIOLANUS Away! 15

SECOND SERVINGMAN "Away!" Get you away.

CORIOLANUS Now thou'rt troublesome.

SECOND SERVINGMAN Are you so brave?^o I'll have you talked with anon.^o

Enter THIRD SERVINGMAN; the FIRST [SERVINGMAN] meets him.

THIRD SERVINGMAN What fellow's this? 20

FIRST SERVINGMAN A strange one as ever I looked on! I cannot get him out o' th' house. Prithee call my master to him.

THIRD SERVINGMAN What have you to do here, fellow? Pray you avoid^o the house. 25

CORIOLANUS Let me but stand; I will not hurt your hearth.

THIRD SERVINGMAN What are you?

CORIOLANUS A gentleman.

THIRD SERVINGMAN A marv'lous^o poor one. 30

17 of a doit worth a doit (coin of little value; cf. I.v.6) 18 fellest fiercest 21 trick trifle 22 interjoin their issues (1) let their children intermarry (2) become close partners in action ("issues" in sense of "deeds"?)

CORIANUS True, so I am.

THIRD SERVINGMAN Pray you, poor gentleman, take up some other station; here's no place for you.
Pray you avoid. Come.

CORIANUS Follow your function,° go and batten° 35
on cold bits.

Pushes him away from him.

THIRD SERVINGMAN What, you will not? Prithee, tell my master what a strange guest he has here.

SECOND SERVINGMAN And I shall.

Exit SECOND SERVINGMAN.

THIRD SERVINGMAN Where dwell'st thou? 40

CORIANUS Under the canopy.°

THIRD SERVINGMAN Under the canopy!

CORIANUS Ay.

THIRD SERVINGMAN Where's that?

CORIANUS I' th' city of kites and crows. 45

THIRD SERVINGMAN I' th' city of kites and crows!
What an ass it is! Then thou dwell'st with daws° too?

CORIANUS No, I serve not thy master.

THIRD SERVINGMAN How, sir! Do you meddle with my master? 50

CORIANUS Ay; 'tis an honest service than to meddle with thy mistress. Thou prat'st, and prat'st; serve with thy trencher.° Hence! Beats him away.

Enter AUFIDIUS with the [SECOND] SERVINGMAN.

AUFIDIUS Where is this fellow?

SECOND SERVINGMAN Here, sir. I'd have beaten 55 him like a dog, but for disturbing the lords within.

AUFIDIUS

Whence com'st thou? What wouldst thou? Thy name?

Why speak'st not? Speak, man. What's thy name?

CORIANUS [Unmuffling.] If, Tullus,
Not yet thou know'st me, and, seeing me, dost not Think me° for the man I am, necessity 60
Commands me name myself.

AUFIDIUS What is thy name?

CORIANUS

A name unmusical to the Volscians' ears,
And harsh in sound to thine.

AUFIDIUS Say, what's thy name?

Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face
Bears a command° in't. Though thy tackle's torn, 65
Thou show'st° a noble vessel. What's thy name?

CORIANUS

Prepare thy brow to frown. Know'st thou me yet?

AUFIDIUS

I know thee not. Thy name!

CORIANUS

My name is Caius Marcius, who hath done
To thee particularly, and to all the Volscs, 70
Great hurt and mischief;° thereto witness may
My surname, Coriolanus. The painful° service,

The extreme dangers, and the drops of blood
Shed for my thankless country, are requited
But with that surname—a good memory° 75
And witness of the malice and displeasure
Which thou shouldst bear me. Only that name remains.

The cruelty and envy° of the people,
Permitted by our dastard nobles, who
Have all forsook me, hath devoured the rest; 80
And suffered me by th' voice of slaves to be Whooped out of Rome. Now, this extremity
Hath brought me to thy hearth; not out of hope (Mistake me not) to save my life; for if I had feared death, of all the men i' th' world 85
I would have 'voided thee; but in mere spite,
To be full quit of° those my banishers,
Stand I before thee here. Then if thou hast
A heart of wreak° in thee, that wilt revenge
Thine own particular wrongs and stop those maims 90
Of shame° seen through thy country, speed thee straight

And make my misery serve thy turn. So use it
That my revengeful services may prove
As benefits to thee; for I will fight
Against my cank' red° country with the spleen° 95
Of all the under fiends.° But if so be
Thou dar'st not this and that to prove more fortunes°
Thou'rt tired, then, in a word, I also am
Longer to live most weary, and present
My throat to thee and to thy ancient malice; 100
Which not to cut would show thee but a fool,
Since I have ever followed thee with hate,
Drawn tuns° of blood out of thy country's breast,
And cannot live but to thy shame, unless
It be to do thee service.

AUFIDIUS O Marcius, Marcius! 105
Each word thou hast spoke hath weeded from my heart

A root of ancient envy. If Jupiter
Should from yond cloud speak divine things,
And say, "'Tis true," I'd not believe them more 110
Than thee, all noble Marcius. Let me twine Mine arms about that body, where against
My grainèd ash° an hundred times hath broke
And scarred the moon with splinters. Here I clip°
The anvil of my sword, and do contest 115
As hotly and as nobly with thy love
As ever in ambitious strength I did
Contend against thy valor. Know thou first,
I loved the maid I married; never man
Sighed truer breath. But that° I see thee here,
Thou noble thing, more dances my rapt° heart 120
Than when I first my wedded mistress saw
Bestride my threshold. Why, thou Mars, I tell thee,
We have a power on foot,° and I had purpose

IV.v.9 to the door out of doors 14 companions fellows (in bad sense) 18 brave impudent 19 anon soon 25 avoid leave 30 marv'lous strangely 35 Follow your function do your regular work; batten grow fat 41 canopy sky
(cf. canopy over a throne) 47 daws foolish birds 53 trencher wooden plate 60 Think me take me 65 a command a look of authority 66 show'st appear'st 71 mischief serious harm
72 painful laborious

75 memory memorial 78 envy ill will 87 full quit of fully revenged on 89 heart of wreak vengeful heart 90-91 mains Of shame shameful wounds (e.g., the Roman occupation of Corioli) 95 cank' red corrupted (by ingratitude and envy); spleen rage 96 under fiends devils in hell 97 prove more fortunes try the chances of fortune further 103 tuns casks 112 grainèd ash spear of ash, the grain showing 113 clip embrace 119 that because 120 rapt enraptured 123 power on foot force in the field

Once more to hew thy target^o from thy brawn,^o
Or lose mine arm for't. Thou hast beat me out^o 125
Twelve several times, and I have nightly since Dreamt of encounters 'twixt thyself and me.
We have been down together in my sleep,
Unbuckling helms, fisting each other's throat,
And waked^o half dead with nothing. Worthy Marcius, 130
Had we no other quarrel else to Rome but that Thou art thence banished, we would muster all
From twelve to seventy, and pouring war
Into the bowels of ungrateful Rome,
Like a bold flood o'erbeat.^o O, come, go in, 135
And take our friendly senators by th' hands,
Who now are here, taking their leaves of me
Who am prepared against your territories,
Though not for Rome itself.

CORIOLANUS You bless me, gods!

Therefore, most absolute^o sir, if thou wilt have 140
The leading of thine own revenges, take
Th' one half of my commission,^o and set down^o—
As best thou art experienced, since thou know'st
Thy country's strength and weakness—thine own ways,
Whether to knock against the gates of Rome, 145
Or rudely visit them in parts remote
To fright them ere destroy. But come in.
Let me commend thee first to those that shall Say yea to thy desires. A thousand welcomes!
And more a friend than e'er an enemy; 150
Yet, Marcius, that was much. Your hand: most welcome!
Exeunt.

Enter° two of the SERVINGMEN.

SECOND SERVINGMAN By my hand, I had thought to have strucken him with a cudgel; and yet my mind gave me^o his clothes made a false report of him. 155

FIRST SERVINGMAN What an arm ¹ he has! He turned me about with his finger and his thumb, as one would set up a top.

SECOND SERVINGMAN Nay, I knew by his face that there was something in him; he had, sir, a kind of 160 face, methought—I cannot tell how to term it.

FIRST SERVINGMAN He had so, looking as it were—would I were hanged, but I thought there was more in him than I could think.

SECOND SERVINGMAN So did I, I'll be sworn. He is 165 simply the rarest man i' th' world.

FIRST SERVINGMAN I think he is; but a greater soldier than he, you wot^o one.

SECOND SERVINGMAN Who, my master?

FIRST SERVINGMAN Nay, it's no matter for that. 170

SECOND SERVINGMAN Worth six on him.

FIRST SERVINGMAN Nay, not so neither. But I take him to be the greater soldier.

124 target shield; brawn brawny arm 125 out completely 130 waked (I have) awakened 135 o'erbeat surge over (the land) 140 absolute perfect 142 my commission the forces under me; set down determine 151 s.d. Enter perhaps they come forward from backstage, since neither has been assigned an "Exit" 154-55 my mind gave me I had an idea 167-76
the First Servingman is cautiously and cunningly vague in his references to the "greater soldier" 168 wot know

SECOND SERVINGMAN Faith, look you, one cannot tell how to say that. For the defense of a town our general is excellent. 175

FIRST SERVINGMAN Ay, and for an assault too.

Enter the THIRD SERVINGMAN.

THIRD SERVINGMAN O slaves, I can tell you news—
news, you rascals!

BOTH [FIRST AND SECOND SERVINGMEN] What, 180
what, what? Let's partake.

THIRD SERVINGMAN I would not be a Roman, of all nations; I had as lief^o be a condemned man.

BOTH Wherefore? Wherefore?

THIRD SERVINGMAN Why here's he that was wont to thwack our general—Caius Marcius.

FIRST SERVINGMAN Why do you say "thwack our general"?

THIRD SERVINGMAN I do not say "thwack our general," but he was always good enough for him. 190

SECOND SERVINGMAN Come, we are fellows° and friends. He was ever too hard for him; I have heard him say so himself.

FIRST SERVINGMAN He was too hard for him directly,^o to say the troth on't. Before Corioles he 195 scotched^o him and notched him like a carbonado.^o

SECOND SERVINGMAN And he had been cannibally given, he might have boiled and eaten him too.

FIRST SERVINGMAN But more of thy news?

THIRD SERVINGMAN Why, he is so made on^o here 200 within as if he were son and heir to Mars; set at upper end o' th' table; no question asked him by any of the senators but they stand bald^o before him. Our general himself makes a mistress of him; sanctifies himself with's hand,^o and turns up the white o' th' eye^o 205 to his discourse. But the bottom^o of the news is, our general is cut i' th' middle and but one half of what he was yesterday, for the other has half by the entreaty and grant of the whole table.^o He'll go, he says, and sowl^o the porter of Rome gates by th' ears. He will 210 mow all down before him, and leave his passage polled.^o

SECOND SERVINGMAN And he's as like to do't as any man I can imagine.

THIRD SERVINGMAN Do't! He will do't; for look 215 you, sir, he has as many friends as enemies; which friends, sir, as it were, durst not (look you, sir) show themselves (as we term it) his friends whilst he's in directitude.°

FIRST SERVINGMAN Directitude! What's that? 220

THIRD SERVICEMAN But when they shall see, sir, his crest up^o again and the man in blood,^o they will out of their burrows (like conies^o after rain) and revel all with him.

183 lief willingly 191 fellows comrades 195 directly plainly 196 scotched slashed; carbonado meat scored with knife, for broiling 200 so made on made so much of 203 bald bareheaded 205 sanctifies . . . hand touches his hand as if it were a holy relic 205 turns . . . eye in pious wonder 206 bottom last (jokingly for “the climax”) 208–09 has
. . . table has half because all at the table beg him to take it, and give it to him 210 sowl drag 212 polled cleared (used of cutting hair) 219 directitude comic mistake for discredit (?)
222 crest up like an animal aroused; in blood in top condition
223 conies rabbits

183 her willingly 191 *ten*ows comrades 193 *un*deedly plain
196 *scot*ched, clashed: carbonado meat scored with knife

190 scotched slashed, cardboard meat scored with knife, for broiling. 200 so made on made so much of 203 bald

for broming 200 so made on made so much of 203 said horse-headed 205 sanctifies hand touches his hand as if it bareheaded 205 sanctities . . . hand touches his hand as if it were a holy relic 205 turns eye in pious wonder

were a holy relic 205 turns . . . eye in pious wonder 206 but the . . . (indicates for "the climax") 208 or has

[illegible]

... table has halt because all at the table beg him to take it,
 ... table has halt because all at the table beg him to take it,

and give it to him 210 sowl drag 212 polled cleared (used

of cutting hair) 219 directitude comic mistake for discredit (?)

222 crest up like an animal aroused; in blood in top condition

223 conies rabbits

FIRST SERVINGMAN But when goes this forward? 225
 THIRD SERVINGMAN Tomorrow, today, presently.^o
 You shall have the drum struck up this afternoon. 'Tis as it were a parcel^o of their feast, and to be executed ere they wipe their lips.
 SECOND SERVINGMAN Why, then we shall have a 230 stirring world again. This peace is nothing but to rust iron, increase tailors, and breed balladmakers.
 FIRST SERVINGMAN Let me have war, say I; it exceeds peace as far as day does night; it's sprightly walking, audible,^o and full of vent.^o Peace is a very 235 apoplexy, lethargy; mulled,^o deaf, sleepy, insensible;
 a getter of more bastard children than war's a destroyer of men.
 SECOND SERVINGMAN 'Tis so; and as wars in some sort may be said to be a ravisher, so it cannot be denied 240 but peace is a great maker of cuckolds.
 FIRST SERVINGMAN Ay, and it makes men hate one another.
 THIRD SERVINGMAN Reason: because they then less need one another. The wars for my money. I hope to 245 see Romans as cheap as Volscians. They are rising,^o they are rising.
 BOTH [FIRST AND SECOND SERVINGMEN] In, in,
 in! in, Exeunt.

[Scene VI. Rome. A public place.]

Enter the two tribunes, SICINIUS and BRUTUS.

SICINIUS
 We hear not of him, neither need we fear him;
 His remedies are tame.^o The present peace
 And quietness of the people, which before
 Were in wild hurry,^o here do make his friends
 Blush that the world goes well; who rather had, 5
 Though they themselves did suffer by't, behold
 Dissentious numbers pest'ring^o streets than see
 Our tradesmen singing in their shops, and going
 About their functions friendly.
 BRUTUS
 We stood to't^o in good time.
 Enter MENENIUS.
 Is this Menenius? 10
 SICINIUS
 'Tis he, 'tis he. O, he is grown most kind
 Of late. Hail, sir!
 MENENIUS Hail to you both!
 SICINIUS
 Your Coriolanus is not much missed
 But with his friends. The commonwealth doth stand,
 And so would do, were he more angry at it. 15
 MENENIUS
 All's well; and might have been much better, if
 He could have temporized.
 SICINIUS Where is he, hear you?

MENENIUS
 Nay, I hear nothing. His mother and his wife
 Hear nothing from him.
 Enter three or four CITIZENS.
 ALL [CITIZENS]
 The gods preserve you both!
 SICINIUS Good-e'en,^o our neighbors. 20
 BRUTUS
 Good-e'en to you all, good-e'en to you all.
 FIRST CITIZEN
 Ourselves, our wives, and children, on our knees,
 Are bound to pray for you both.
 SICINIUS Live, and thrive!
 BRUTUS
 Farewell, kind neighbors. We wished Coriolanus
 Had loved you as we did.
 ALL [CITIZENS] Now the gods keep you! 25
 BOTH TRIBUNES
 Farewell, farewell. Exeunt CITIZENS.
 SICINIUS
 This is a happier and more comely^o time
 Than when these fellows ran about the streets
 Crying confusion.^o
 BRUTUS Caius Marcius was
 A worthy officer i' th' war, but insolent, 30
 O'ercome with pride, ambitious past all thinking, Self-loving—
 SICINIUS And affecting^o one sole throne,
 Without assistance.^o
 MENENIUS I think not so.
 SICINIUS
 We should by this, to all our lamentation,
 If he had gone forth consul, found^o it so. 35
 BRUTUS
 The gods have well prevented it, and Rome
 Sits safe and still without him.
 Enter an AEDILE.
 AEDILE Worthy tribunes,
 There is a slave, whom we have put in prison,
 Reports the Volscs with two several powers^o
 Are ent'red in the Roman territories, 40
 And with the deepest malice of the war
 Destroy what lies before 'em.
 MENENIUS 'Tis Aufidius,
 Who, hearing of our Marcius' banishment,
 Thrusts forth his horns^o again into the world,
 Which were inshelled when Marcius stood for Rome, 45
 And durst not once peep out.
 SICINIUS Come, what talk you
 Of Marcius?
 BRUTUS
 Go see this rumor whipped. It cannot be
 The Volscs dare break with us.
 MENENIUS Cannot be!
 We have record that very well it can; 50
 And three examples of the like hath been Within my age. But reason with^o the fellow,

226 presently now 228 parcel part 235 audible of good hearing; full of vent with plenty of outlets for energy (?; cf. I.i.227) 236 mulled dulled (like wine sweetened and heated) 246 rising getting up from table
 IV.vi.2 His . . . tame His attempts to "cure" the state are (now) harmless (cf. "dangerous physic," III.i.154) 4 hurry commotion 7 pest'ring filling with disturbance 10 stood to't made an issue of it

20 Good-e'en good evening 27 comely respectable 29
 Crying confusion calling for disorder 32 affecting aiming at 33 Without assistance not sharing his powers with others
 35 found have found 39 several powers separate forces
 44 horns like a snail 52 reason with talk with

Before you punish him, where he heard this,
Lest you shall chance to whip your information
And beat the messenger who bids beware
Of what is to be dreaded.

SICINIUS Tell not me:
I know this cannot be.

BRUTUS Not possible.

Enter a MESSENGER.

MESSENGER
The nobles in great earnestness are going
All to the Senate House. Some news is coming
That turns^o their countenances.

SICINIUS 'Tis this slave—
Go whip him 'fore the people's eyes—his raising,^o
Nothing but his report.

MESSENGER Yes, worthy sir,
The slave's report is seconded;^o and more,
More fearful, is delivered.

SICINIUS What more fearful?

MESSENGER
It is spoke freely out of many mouths,
How probable I do not know, that Marcius,
Joined with Aufidius, leads a power 'gainst Rome,
And vows revenge as spacious as between
The young'st and oldest thing.^o

SICINIUS This is most likely!

BRUTUS
Raised only that the weaker sort may wish
Good Marcius home again.

SICINIUS The very trick on't.

MENENIUS
This is unlikely:
He and Aufidius can no more atone^o
Than violent'st contrariety.

Enter [a SECOND] MESSENGER.

SECOND MESSENGER
You are sent for to the Senate.
A fearful army, led by Caius Marcius
Associated with Aufidius, rages
Upon our territories, and have already O'erborne their way,^o consumed with fire, and took What lay before them.

Enter COMINIUS.

COMINIUS O, you have made good work! 80

MENENIUS
What news? What news?

COMINIUS
You have help to ravish your own daughters and
To melt the city leads^o upon your pates,
To see your wives dishonored to^o your noses—

MENENIUS
What's the news? What's the news? 85

COMINIUS
Your temples burnèd in their cement, and

Your franchises, whereon you stood,^o confined
Into an auger's bore.

55 MENENIUS Pray now, your news?—
You have made fair work, I fear me.—Pray, your news?—

If Marcius should be joined wi' th' Volscians—

COMINIUS If! 90

He is their god; he leads them like a thing
Made by some other deity than Nature,
That shapes man better; and they follow him
Against us brats with no less confidence
Than boys pursuing summer butterflies,
Or butchers killing flies. 95

60 MENENIUS You have made good work,
You and your apron-men;^o you that stood so much Upon the voice of occupation^o and
The breath of garlic-eaters!

COMINIUS He'll shake
Your Rome about your ears.

MENENIUS As Hercules 100
Did shake down mellow fruit. You have made fair work!

65 BRUTUS
But is this true, sir?

COMINIUS Ay; and you'll look pale
Before you find it other. All the regions
Do smilingly revolt, and who resists
Are mocked for valiant ignorance, 105
And perish constant^o fools. Who is't can blame him?
Your enemies and his find something in him.

MENENIUS
We are all undone, unless
The noble man have mercy.

COMINIUS Who shall ask it?
The tribunes cannot do't for shame; the people 110
Deserve such pity of him as the wolf
Does of the shepherds. For his best friends, if they Should say, "Be good to Rome," they charged^o him even

75 As those should do that had deserved his hate,
And therein showed^o like enemies.

MENENIUS 'Tis true: 115
If he were putting to my house the brand
That should consume it, I have not the face
To say, "Beseech you, cease." You have made fair hands,^o

You and your crafts! You have crafted fair!^o
COMINIUS You have brought 120
A trembling upon Rome, such as was never
S' incapable^o of help.

TRIBUNES Say not we brought it.

MENENIUS
How! Was't we? We loved him, but, like beasts
And cowardly nobles, gave way unto your clusters,^o
Who did hoot him out o' th' city. 85

COMINIUS But I fear

60 turns changes 61 his raising his starting (i.e., the rumor; note comma and the following explanatory phrase) 63 seconded confirmed (by further reports) 68–69 as spacious
. . . thing covering the span between youngest and oldest,
i.e., the whole population 73 atone be reconciled 79 O'er-borne their way (like a stream) overflowed everything in their way 83 leads roofs 84 to before

87 franchises . . . stood rights, on which you insisted 97 apron-men artisans 98 occupation manual workers 106 constant loyal 113 charged would attack, urge (both senses relevant) 115 showed would show 118 made fair hands handled matter finely 119 crafted fair plied your trade (of cunning) beautifully 121 S' incapable so unsuscep-tible 123 clusters crowds

They'll roar him in again. Tullus Aufidius,
The second name of men,^o obeys his points^o
As if he were his officer. Desperation
Is all the policy, strength, and defense,
That Rome can make against them.

Enter a troop of CITIZENS.

MENENIUS Here come the clusters.
And is Aufidius with him? You are they
That made the air unwholesome when you cast
Your stinking greasy caps in hooting at Coriolanus' exile. Now he's coming,
And not a hair upon a soldier's head
Which will not prove a whip. As many coxcombs^o
As you threw caps up will he tumble down,
And pay you for your voices.^o 'Tis no matter;
If he could burn us all into one coal,^o
We have deserved it.

OMNES

Faith, we hear fearful news.

FIRST CITIZEN For mine own part,
When I said banish him, I said 'twas pity.

SECOND CITIZEN And so did I.

THIRD CITIZEN And so did I; and, to say the truth, so did very many of us. That we did, we did for the best; and though we willingly consented to his banishment, yet it was against our will.

COMINIUS

Y' are goodly things, you voices!

MENENIUS You have made
Good work, you and your cry!^o Shall's^o to the Capitol?

COMINIUS

O, ay, what else? Exeunt both.

SICINIUS

Go masters, get you home; be not dismayed;
These are a side^o that would be glad to have
This true which they so seem to fear. Go home,
And show no sign of fear.

FIRST CITIZEN The gods be good to us! Come, masters, let's home. I ever said we were i' th' wrong when we banished him.

SECOND CITIZEN So did we all. But come, let's home. Exit CITIZENS.

BRUTUS

I do not like this news.

SICINIUS Nor I.

BRUTUS

Let's to the Capitol. Would half my wealth
Would buy this for a lie!

SICINIUS Pray, let's go.

Exeunt TRIBUNES.

[Scene VII. A camp not far from Rome.]

Enter AUFIDIUS, with his LIEUTENANT.

AUFIDIUS

Do they still fly to th' Roman?

126 second . . . men second in renown (to Coriolanus);
points directions (?) 135 coxcombs fools' heads (cf. costume of a fool) 137 voices votes 138 coal piece of burned fuel
148 cry pack; Shall's shall us (we) 151 side faction

125 LIEUTENANT

I do not know what witchcraft's in him, but
Your soldiers use him as the grace 'fore meat,
Their talk at table and their thanks at end;
And you are dark'ned^o in this action sir,
Even by your own.^o

AUFIDIUS I cannot help it now,
Unless by using means^o I lame the foot
Of our design. He bears himself more proudlier,
Even to my person, than I thought he would
When first I did embrace him; yet his nature
In that's no changeling,^o and I must excuse
What cannot be amended.

135 LIEUTENANT Yet I wish, sir—
I mean for your particular^o—you had not Joined in commission^o with him, but either
Have borne the action of yourself, or else
To him had left it solely.

AUFIDIUS

I understand thee well; and be thou sure,
When he shall come to his account, he knows not What I can urge against him. Although it seems,
And so he thinks, and is no less apparent
To th' vulgar eye, that he bears all things fairly,
And shows good husbandry^o for the Volscian state,
Fights dragonlike, and does achieve as soon
As draw his sword. Yet he hath left undone
That which shall break his neck or hazard mine,
Whene'er we come to our account.

LIEUTENANT

Sir, I beseech you, think you he'll carry Rome?

AUFIDIUS

All places yields to him ere he sits down,^o
And the nobility of Rome are his;
The senators and patricians love him too.
The tribunes are no soldiers, and their people
Will be as rash in the repeal, as hasty
To expel him thence. I think he'll be to Rome
As is the osprey^o to the fish, who takes it
By sovereignty of nature.^o First he was
A noble servant to them, but he could not Carry his honors even.^o Whether 'twas pride,
Which out of daily fortune ever taints^o
The happy^o man; whether defect of judgment,
To fail in the disposing of those chances
Which he was lord of; or whether nature,
Not to be other than one thing, not moving
From th' casque^o to th' cushion,^o but commanding
peace
Even with the same austerity and garb
As he controlled the war; but one of these—
As he hath spices^o of them all—not all,
For I dare so far free him—made him feared,

IV.vii.5 dark'ned put in the shade 6 your own your own men 7 using means taking steps 11 no changeling i.e., he is the selfsame man 13 your particular your own sake 14 Joined in commission shared the command 22 husbandry management 28 sits down lays siege 34 osprey fish hawk 35 By . . . nature refers to the osprey's supposed power of subduing its prey before touching it 37 even and keep his balance 38 daily . . . taints success coming day after day always infects 39 happy lucky 43 casque helmet, i.e., military life; cushion i.e., position of authority in civil life;
cf. III.i.101 46 spices flavors, i.e., traces

So hated, and so banished. But he has a merit
 To choke it in the utt'rance.^o So our virtues
 Lie in th' interpretation of the time;^o 50
 And power, unto itself most commendable,
 Hath not a tomb so evident as a chair^o
 T' extol what it hath done.
 One fire drives out one fire; one nail, one nail;
 Rights by rights founder, strengths by strengths do fail.^o 55
 Come, let's away. When, Caius, Rome is thine,
 Thou art poor'st of all; then shortly art thou mine.

Exeunt.

A C T V

[Scene I. Rome. A public place.]

*Enter MENENIUS, COMINIUS, SICINIUS, [and]
 BRUTUS, the two tribunes, with others.*

MENENIUS

No, I'll not go. You hear what he hath said
 Which was sometime^o his general, who loved him
 In a most dear particular.^o He called me father;
 But what o' that? Go you that banished him,
 A mile before his tent fall down, and knee 5
 The way^o into his mercy. Nay, if he coyed^o
 To hear Cominius speak, I'll keep at home.

COMINIUS

He would not seem to know me.

MENENIUS

Do you hear?

COMINIUS

Yet one time he did call me by my name.
 I urged our old acquaintance, and the drops 10
 That we have bled together. Coriolanus
 He would not answer to; forbade all names;
 He was a kind of nothing, titleless,
 Till he had forged himself a name o' th' fire
 Of burning Rome.

MENENIUS Why, so! You have made good work! 15

A pair of tribunes that have wracked^o fair Rome
 To make coals^o cheap! A noble memory!

COMINIUS

I minded^o him how royal 'twas to pardon
 When it was less expected; he replied,
 It was a bare^o petition of a state 20
 To one whom they had punished.

MENENIUS

Very well.

Could he say less?

COMINIUS

I offered^o to awaken his regard

48-49 a merit . . . utt'rance a merit that is nullified in the very act of being expressed (because of faults inseparable from the particular virtues being praised) 50 the time the age (our contemporaries) 52 chair of the speaker who praises the achievements made possible by "power," line 51; probably with reference to the Roman rostrum, or speakers' platform 54-55 One fire . . . fail examples of the self-destructive process described in lines 48-53

V.i.2 sometime formerly 3 most dear particular most precious intimacy 5-6 knee The way make your way on your knees 6 coyed showed reluctance 16 wracked ruined 17 coals charcoal 18 minded reminded 20 bare mere 23 offered tried

For's private friends. His answer to me was,
 He could not stay to pick them in a pile 25
 Of noisome musty chaff. He said 'twas folly,
 For one poor grain or two, to leave unburnt
 And still to nose th' offense.^o

MENENIUS

For one poor grain or two!

I am one of those; his mother, wife, his child,
 And this brave fellow too, we are the grains; 30
 You are the musty chaff, and you are smelt
 Above the moon. We must be burnt for you.

SICINIUS

Nay, pray, be patient; if you refuse your aid
 In this so never-needed^o help, yet do not Upbraid's with our distress. But, sure, if you 35
 Would be your country's pleader, your good tongue,
 More than the instant army we can make,^o
 Might stop our countryman.

MENENIUS

No, I'll not meddle.

SICINIUS

Pray you, go to him.

MENENIUS

What should I do?

BRUTUS

Only make trial what your love can do 40
 For Rome, towards^o Marcius.

MENENIUS

Well, and say that Marcius

Return me, as Cominius is returned,

Unheard—what then?—

But as a discontented friend, grief-shot^o

With his unkindness? Say't be so?

SICINIUS

Yet your good will 45

Must have that thanks from Rome after the measure
 As you intended well.^o

MENENIUS

I'll undertake't:

I think he'll hear me. Yet to bite his lip
 And hum at good Cominius much unhearts^o me. 50

He was not taken well;^o he had not dined.

The veins unfilled, our blood is cold, and then

We pout upon the morning, are unapt

To give or to forgive; but when we have stuffed

These pipes and these conveyances^o of our blood

With wine and feeding, we have suppler souls 55

Than in our priestlike fasts. Therefore I'll watch him

Till he be dieted to^o my request,

And then I'll set upon him.

BRUTUS

You know the very road into his kindness,

And cannot lose your way.

MENENIUS

Good faith, I'll prove^o him, 60

Speed^o how it will. I shall ere long have knowledge

Of my success.

Exit.

COMINIUS

He'll never hear him.

SICINIUS

Not?

COMINIUS

I tell you he does sit in gold, his eye

Red as 'twould burn Rome, and his injury^o

28 nose th' offense smell the offensive stuff 34 so never-needed never so needed (as now) 37 instant . . . make the army we can raise at this time 41 towards in relation to 44 grief-shot struck by grief 46-47 after . . . well in proportion to your good intentions 49 unhearts discourages 50 taken well approached at a good time 54 conveyances channels 57 dieted to prepared for by feeding 60 prove make trial of 61 Speed turn out 64 injury sense of the wrong done to him

The jailer to his pity. I kneeled before him;
 'Twas very faintly he said, "Rise"; dismissed me
 Thus with his speechless hand. What he would do
 He sent in writing after me, what he would not,
 Bound with an oath to yield^o to his conditions;
 So that all hope is vain,^o
 Unless^o his noble mother and his wife,
 Who (as I hear) mean to solicit him
 For mercy to his country. Therefore, let's hence,
 And with our fair entreaties haste them on. Exeunt.

[Scene II. Entrance of the Volscian camp before Rome.]

Enter MENENIUS to the WATCH on guard.

FIRST WATCH

Stay. Whence are you?

SECOND WATCH Stand, and go back.

MENENIUS

You guard like men, 'tis well; but, by your leave,
 I am an officer of state, and come
 To speak with Coriolanus.

FIRST WATCH

From whence?

MENENIUS

From Rome.

FIRST WATCH

You may not pass, you must return: our general
 Will no more hear from thence.

SECOND WATCH

You'll see your Rome embraced with fire, before You'll speak with Coriolanus.

MENENIUS

Good my friends,

If you have heard your general talk of Rome
 And of his friends there, it is lots to blanks^o
 My name hath touched your ears: it is Menenius.

FIRST WATCH

Be it so; go back. The virtue of your name
 Is not here passable.^o

MENENIUS

I tell thee, fellow,

Thy general is my lover. I have been
 The book of his good acts whence men have read
 His fame unparalleled—haply amplified;
 For I have ever verified^o my friends
 (Of whom he's chief) with all the size that verity
 Would without lapsing^o suffer. Nay, sometimes,
 Like a bowl upon a subtle^o ground,
 I have tumbled past the throw,^o and in his praise
 Have almost stamped^o the leasing.^o Therefore, fellow,
 I must have leave to pass.

FIRST WATCH

Faith, sir, if you had told as many lies in his behalf as you have uttered words in your own, 25 you should not pass here; no, though it were as virtuous to lie as to live chastely. Therefore go back.

67–69 What . . . yield He sent a written message saying what he would do and what he would not, and bound us with an oath that we should yield (text probably corrupt) 70 vain because the conditions are ruinous 71 Unless except for (or perhaps "solicit him," line 72, is to be understood: "unless his noble mother and his wife solicit him")

V.ii.10 lots to blanks more than an even chance; "lots" refers to tickets in a lottery taking prizes; "blanks," to those not taking prizes 13 passable current (of money, but with a pun on password) 17 verified testified to the merit of 19 lapsing slipping (into error) 20 subtle deceptive 21 tumbled . . . throw rolled beyond the proper distance 22 stamped given currency to (cf. stamp a coin); leasing falsehood

65

MENENIUS Prithee, fellow, remember my name is Menenius, always factionary^o on the party of your general. 30

SECOND WATCH Howsoever you have been his liar, as you say you have, I am one that, telling true under him, must say you cannot pass. Therefore go back.

70

MENENIUS Has he dined, canst thou tell? For I would not speak with him till after dinner. 35

FIRST WATCH You are a Roman, are you?

MENENIUS I am, as thy general is.

FIRST WATCH Then you should hate Rome, as he does. Can you, when you have pushed out your gates the very defender of them, and in a violent popular 40 ignorance given your enemy your shield, think to front^o his revenges with the easy groans of old women, the virginal palms of your daughters, or with the palsied intercession of such a decayed dotant^o as you seem to be? Can you think to blow out the intended 45 fire your city is ready to flame in, with such weak breath as this? No, you are deceived; therefore, back to Rome, and prepare for your execution. You are condemned; our general has sworn you out of reprieve and pardon. 50

MENENIUS Sirrah, if thy captain knew I were here, he would use me with estimation.^o

FIRST WATCH Come, my captain knows you not.

MENENIUS I mean, thy general.

FIRST WATCH My general cares not for you. Back, I 55 say; go, lest I let forth your half-pint of blood. Back—that's the utmost of your having.^o Back.

MENENIUS Nay, but, fellow, fellow—

Enter CORIOLANUS, with AUFIDIUS.

CORIOLANUS What's the matter?

MENENIUS Now, you companion,^o I'll say an errand^o 60 for you; you shall know now that I am in estimation;
 you shall perceive that a Jack guardant^o cannot office me^o from my son Coriolanus. Guess but by my entertainment^o with him if thou stand'st not i' th' state of hanging, or of some death more long in spectatorship 65 and crueller in suffering; behold now presently, and swoon for what's to come upon thee. [To CORIO- LANUS.] The glorious gods sit in hourly synod about thy particular prosperity, and love thee no worse than thy old father Menenius does! O my son, my son! 70
 Thou art preparing fire for us; look thee, here's water to quench it. I was hardly^o moved to come to thee; but being assured none but myself could move thee, I have been blown out of your^o gates with sighs; and conjure thee to pardon Rome and thy petitionary^o country- 75 men. The good gods assuage thy wrath, and turn the dregs of it upon this varlet here; this, who, like a block,^o hath denied my access to thee.

CORIOLANUS Away!

MENENIUS How! Away! 80

CORIOLANUS

Wife, mother, child, I know not. My affairs

29 factionary an active worker 42 front face 44 dotant dotard 52 estimation esteem 57 of your having you can get 60 companion fellow; say an errand give a message 62 Jack guardant wretch of a sentry 63 office me use his office to keep me 63–64 entertainment reception 72 hardly with difficulty 74 your of Rome 75 petitionary who are asking for mercy 78 block blockhead

Are servanted° to others. Though I owe
 My revenge properly,° my remission° lies
 In Volscian breasts. That we have been familiar,° Ingrate forgetfulness° shall poison rather 85
 Than pity note how much.° Therefore be gone.
 Mine ears against your suits are stronger than
 Your gates against my force. Yet, for° I loved thee,
 Take this along; I writ it for thy sake,
 And would have sent it. Another word, Menenius, 90
 I will not hear thee speak. This man, Aufidius,
 Was my beloved in Rome; yet thou behold'st.

AUFIDIUS

You keep a constant° temper.

Exeunt [CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS].

Manet the GUARD and MENENIUS.

FIRST WATCH Now, sir, is your name Menenius?

SECOND WATCH 'Tis a spell, you see, of much 95 power. You know the way home again.

FIRST WATCH Do you hear how we are shent° for keeping your greatness back?

SECOND WATCH What cause, do you think, I have to swoon! 100

MENENIUS I neither care for th' world nor your general. For such things as you, I can scarce think there's any, y' are so slight. He that hath a will to die by himself° fears it not from another. Let your general do his worst. For you, be that you are, long; and your 105 misery increase with your age! I say to you, as I was said to, "Away!" Exit.

FIRST WATCH A noble fellow, I warrant him.

SECOND WATCH The worthy fellow is our general.
 He's the rock, the oak not to be wind-shaken. 110

Exit WATCH.

[Scene III. The tent of Coriolanus.]

Enter CORIOLANUS and AUFIDIUS, [with others].

CORIOLANUS

We will before the walls of Rome tomorrow
 Set down° our host. My partner in this action,
 You must report to th' Volscian lords how plainly°
 I have borne° this business.

AUFIDIUS

Only their ends

You have respected; stopped your ears against 5
 The general suit of Rome; never admitted
 A private whisper—no, not with such friends
 That thought them sure of you.

CORIOLANUS

This last old man,

Whom with a cracked heart I have sent to Rome,
 Loved me above the measure of a father, 10
 Nay, godded me° indeed. Their latest refuge°
 Was to send him; for whose old love I have (Though I showed° sourly to him) once more offered
 The first conditions, which they did refuse

And cannot now accept; to grace° him only 15
 That thought he could do more, a very little
 I have yielded to. Fresh embassies and suits,
 Nor° from the state nor private friends, hereafter Will I lend ear to. (Shout within.) Ha! What shout is this?

Shall I be tempted to infringe my vow 20
 In the same time 'tis made? I will not.

Enter VIRGILIA, VOLUMNIA, VALERIA, young
 MARCIUS, with ATTENDANTS.

My wife comes foremost; then the honored mold°
 Wherein this trunk° was framed, and in her hand
 The grandchild to her blood. But out, affection!
 All bond and privilege of nature, break! 25
 Let it be virtuous to be obstinate.

What is that curtsy worth? Or those doves' eyes,
 Which can make gods forsworn? I melt, and am not
 Of stronger earth° than others. My mother bows,
 As if Olympus° to a molehill should 30
 In supplication nod; and my young boy
 Hath an aspect of intercession which Great Nature cries, "Deny not." Let the Volscies Plough Rome, and harrow Italy! I'll never
 Be such a gosling to° obey instinct, but stand 35
 As if a man were author of himself
 And knew no other kin.

VIRGILIA

My lord and husband!

CORIOLANUS

These eyes are not the same I wore in Rome.

VIRGILIA

The sorrow that delivers° us thus changed
 Makes you think so.

CORIOLANUS

Like a dull actor now,

I have forgot my part and I am out,° 40
 Even to a full disgrace.—Best of my flesh,
 Forgive my tyranny;° but do not say,
 For that, "Forgive our Romans." O, a kiss
 Long as my exile, sweet as my revenge! 45
 Now, by the jealous queen of heaven,° that kiss
 I carried from thee, dear, and my true lip
 Hath virgined it e'er since. You gods! I prate,°
 And the most noble mother of the world
 Leave unsaluted. Sink, my knee, i' th' earth; 50
Kneels.

Of thy deep duty° more impression° show
 Than that of common sons.

VOLUMNIA

O, stand up blest!

Whilst with no softer cushion than the flint
 I kneel before thee, and improperly° 55
 Show duty, as mistaken all this while
 Between the child and parent. [Kneels.]

CORIOLANUS

What's this?

82 servanted subject (servantlike) 82–83 I . . . properly my revenge belongs to me alone 83 remission power to pardon 84 That . . . familiar our intimacy in the past 85 Ingrate forgetfulness my ungrateful forgetfulness 86 how much how much "we have been familiar," how great the intimacy was 88 for because 93 constant loyal, true 97 shent scolded 104 by himself by his own hand V.iii.2 Set down i.e., in a siege 3 plainly openly 4 borne conducted 11 godded me made me a god; latest refuge last resource 13 showed appeared

15 grace honor 18 Nor neither 22–37 see Introduction, p. 1318 22 mold form (also "earth") 23 trunk body 28–29 not . . . earth cf. our common clay 30 Olympus a mountain, home of the Greek gods 35 to as to 39 delivers presents 41 out speechless ("stuck") 43 tyranny cruelty 46 queen of heaven Juno, guardian of marriage 48 prate babble 51 duty reverence; impression i.e., "i' th' earth" 54 unproperly defined by lines 55–56: in a way that does not belong to me, as though I had always misunderstood the relation between child and parent

Your knees to me? To your corrected^o son?
 Then let the pebbles on the hungry^o beach
 Fillip^o the stars! Then let the mutinous winds
 Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun,
 Murd'ring impossibility, to make
 What cannot be, slight work.

VOLUMNIA Thou art my warrior;
 I help to frame thee. Do you know this lady?

CORIOLANUS
 The noble sister of Publicola,
 The moon of Rome, chaste as the icicle
 That's curdied^o by the frost from purest snow
 And hangs on Dian's temple—dear Valeria!

VOLUMNIA
 This is a poor epitome^o of yours,^o
 Which by th' interpretation of full time^o
 May show^o like all yourself.

CORIOLANUS The god of soldiers,^o
 With the consent of supreme Jove, inform^o
 Thy thoughts with nobleness, that thou mayst prove
 To shame invulnerable, and stick^o i' th' wars
 Like a great sea-mark,^o standing every flaw,^o
 And saving those that eye thee!

VOLUMNIA Your knee, sirrah.^o

CORIOLANUS
 That's my brave boy!

VOLUMNIA
 Even he, your wife, this lady, and myself
 Are suitors to you.

CORIOLANUS I beseech you, peace!
 Or, if you'd ask, remember this before:
 The thing I have forsworn^o to grant may never
 Be held by you denials.^o Do not bid me
 Dismiss my soldiers, or capitulate^o
 Again with Rome's mechanics.^o Tell me not Wherein I seem unnatural. Desire not T' allay my rages and revenges with
 Your colder reasons.

VOLUMNIA O, no more, no more!
 You have said you will not grant us anything;
 For we have nothing else to ask but that
 Which you deny already. Yet we will ask,
 That, if you fail in^o our request, the blame
 May hang upon your hardness. Therefore hear us.

CORIOLANUS
 Aufidius, and you Volscas, mark; for we'll Hear nought from Rome in private. Your request?

VOLUMNIA
 Should we be silent and not speak, our raiment
 And state of bodies would bewray^o what life
 We have led since thy exile. Think with thyself

How more unfortunate than all living women
 Are we come hither; since that thy sight, which should Make our eyes flow with joy, hearts dance with comforts,

Constrains them weep and shake with fear and sorrow,
 Making the mother, wife, and child, to see
 The son, the husband, and the father, tearing
 His country's bowels out. And to poor we^o
 Thine enmity's most capital:^o thou barr'st us
 Our prayers to the gods, which is a comfort

That all but we enjoy. For how can we,
 Alas, how can we for our country pray,
 Where to we are bound, together with thy victory,
 Where to we are bound? Alack, or^o we must lose
 The country, our dear nurse, or else thy person,
 Our comfort in the country. We must find

An evident^o calamity, though we had
 Our wish, which side should win; for either thou Must as a foreign recreant^o be led

With manacles through our streets, or else
 Triumphantly tread on thy country's ruin,
 And bear the palm for having bravely shed
 Thy wife and children's blood. For myself, son,

I purpose not to wait on fortune till
 These wars determine.^o If I cannot persuade thee
 Rather to show a noble grace^o to both parts^o
 Than seek the end of one, thou shalt no sooner
 March to assault thy country than to tread
 (Trust to't, thou shalt not) on thy mother's womb
 That brought thee to this world.

VIRGILIA Ay, and mine,
 That brought you forth this boy, to keep your name
 Living to time.^o

BOY 'A^o shall not tread on me;
 I'll run away till I am bigger, but then I'll fight.

CORIOLANUS
 Not of a woman's tenderness to be,
 Requires nor child nor woman's face to see.
 I have sat too long.

VOLUMNIA Nay, go not from us thus.

[Rises.]
 If it were so that our request did tend
 To save the Romans, thereby to destroy
 The Volscas whom you serve, you might condemn us,
 As poisonous of your honor. No, our suit
 Is that you reconcile them; while the Volscas
 May say, "This mercy we have showed," the Romans,
 "This we received"; and each in either side
 Give the all-hail to thee, and cry," Be blest
 For making up this peace!" Thou know'st, great son,
 The end of war's uncertain; but this certain,
 That, if thou conquer Rome, the benefit
 Which thou shalt thereby reap is such a name
 Whose repetition will be dogged with curses,
 Whose chronicle thus writ,^o "The man was noble,
 But with his last attempt^o he wiped it^o out,

57 corrected who is corrected (by your kneeling) 58 hungry barren 59 Fillip strike 66 curdied congealed 68 epitome brief but comprehensive version of a larger work; of yours belonging to you, of you 69 time "time" is compared to a commentator on a text 70 show appear; god of soldiers Mars (Coriolanus' special divinity) 71 inform imbue (give an inner form or character to) 73 stick stand out 74 a great sea-mark some prominent object that guides mariners (cf. landmark, the common modern term); flaw gust of wind 75 sirrah sir (affectionately) 80 forsworn sworn not to 81 denials i.e., refusals to all of you (therefore, plural) 82 capitulate arrange terms 83 mechanics manual laborers 90 fail in fail to grant 95 bewray reveal

103 we for "us" 104 capital deadly 109 or either 112 evident certain 114 recreant traitor 120 determine come to an end 121 grace consideration, favor; parts sides (parties) 126-27 keep . . . time perpetuate your name (keep it living as long as time lasts) 127 'A he 145 writ will be written 146 attempt undertaking; it his nobility

Destroyed his country, and his name remains
 To th' ensuing age abhorred." Speak to me, son.
 Thou hast affected the fine strains° of honor,
 To imitate the graces of the gods,°
 To tear with thunder the wide cheeks o' th' air,
 And yet to charge° thy sulphur° with a bolt
 That should but rive an oak. Why dost not speak?
 Think'st thou it honorable for a noble man
 Still to remember wrongs? Daughter, speak you:
 He cares not for your weeping. Speak thou, boy:
 Perhaps thy childishness will move him more
 Than can our reasons. There's no man in the world
 More bound to's mother, yet here he lets me prate
 Like one i' th' stocks. Thou hast never in thy life
 Showed thy dear mother any courtesy,
 When she (poor hen) fond of° no second brood,
 Has clocked° thee to the wars, and safely home
 Loaden° with honor. Say my request's unjust,
 And spurn me back. But if it be not so,
 Thou art not honest,° and the gods will plague thee,
 That thou restrain'st from me the duty which
 To a mother's part belongs. He turns away.
 Down, ladies! Let us shame him with our knees.
 To his surname Coriolanus 'longs more pride
 Than pity to our prayers. Down! An end;
 This is the last. So we will home to Rome,
 And die among our neighbors. Nay, behold's!°
 This boy, that cannot tell what he would have,
 But kneels and holds up hands for fellowship,
 Does reason° our petition with more strength
 Than thou hast to deny't. Come, let us go.
 This fellow had a Volscian to his mother;
 His wife is in Corioles, and his child
 Like him by chance. Yet give us our dispatch.°
 I am hushed until our city be a-fire,
 And then I'll speak a little.

CORIO LANUS Holds her by the hand, silent.

O mother, mother!

What have you done? Behold, the heavens do ope,
 The gods look down, and this unnatural scene
 They laugh at. O my mother, mother! O!
 You have won a happy victory to Rome;
 But, for your son—believe it, O, believe it!—
 Most dangerously you have with him prevailed,
 If not most mortal to° him. But let it come.
 Aufidius, though I cannot make true wars,
 I'll frame convenient° peace. Now, good Aufidius,
 Were you in my stead, would you have heard
 A mother less? Or granted less, Aufidius?

AUFIDIUS

I was moved withal.°

CORIO LANUS I dare be sworn you were!

And, sir, it is no little thing to make
 Mine eyes to sweat compassion. But, good sir,
 What peace you'll make, advise me. For my part,

I'll not to Rome, I'll back with you; and pray you Stand to° me in this cause. O mother! Wife!

AUFIDIUS [Aside.]

I am glad thou hast set thy mercy and thy honor
 At difference in thee. Out of that I'll work Myself a former fortune.°

CORIO LANUS [To VOLUMNIA and VIRGILIA.]

Ay, by and by;

But we will drink together; and you shall bear
 A better witness back than words, which° we
 On like conditions will have countersealed.
 Come, enter with us. Ladies, you deserve
 To have a temple° built you. All the swords
 In Italy, and her confederate arms,°
 Could not have made this peace.

Exeunt.

[Scene IV. Rome. A public place.]

Enter MENENIUS and SICINIUS.

MENENIUS See you yond coign° o' th' Capitol, yond cornerstone?

SICINIUS Why, what of that?

MENENIUS If it be possible for you to displace it with your little finger, there is some hope the ladies of Rome, especially his mother, may prevail with him.
 But I say there is no hope in't; our throats are sentenced, and stay upon° execution.

SICINIUS Is't possible that so short a time can alter the condition of a man?

MENENIUS There is differency between a grub and a butterfly; yet your butterfly was a grub. This Marcius is grown from man to dragon: he has wings; he's more than a creeping thing.

SICINIUS He loved his mother dearly.

MENENIUS So did he me; and he no more remembers his mother now than an eight-year-old horse. The tartness of his face sours ripe grapes. When he walks, he moves like an engine° and the ground shrinks before his treading. He is able to pierce a corslet° with his eye, talks like a knell, and his hum° is a battery.° He sits in his state° as a thing made for Alexander.° What he bids be done is finished with his bidding. He wants nothing of a god but eternity and a heaven to throne in.

SICINIUS Yes, mercy, if you report him truly.

MENENIUS I paint him in the character. Mark what mercy his mother shall bring from him. There is no more mercy in him than there is milk in a male tiger; that shall our poor city find. And all this is 'long of°
 you.

SICINIUS The gods be good unto us!

MENENIUS No, in such a case the gods will not be good unto us. When we banished him, we respected not them; and, he returning to break our necks, they respect not us.

149 affected . . . strains aimed at the refinements 150 graces . . . gods qualities that give the gods splendor and power; illustrated with irony, lines 151-53 152 charge load (make heavy, or "load," as of a gun); sulphur lightning (see Introduction, p. 1318) 162 fond of eager for 163 clocked clucked 164 Loaden laden 166 honest honorable 173
 behold's behold us 176 reason plead for 180 dispatch dismissal 189 mortal to with deadly results for 191 convenient fitting 194 withal by it (thereby)

199 Stand to stand by 201-02 work . . . fortune regain my former position and power 204 which i.e., the written document 207 temple of the Fortune of Women; so in Plutarch 208 confederate arms allied powers
 V.iv.1 coign corner 8 stay upon wait for 19 engine machine of war 20 corslet body armor 21 his hum i.e., his saying "Hum!"; battery beating of drums for an attack 22 state chair of state; thing . . . Alexander image of Alexander the Great 29 'long of along of, because of

Enter a MESSENGER.

MESSENGER

Sir, if you'd save your life, fly to your house.
The plebeians have got your fellow-tribune,
And hale° him up and down; all swearing if
The Roman ladies bring not comfort home
They'll give him death by inches.

Enter another MESSENGER.

SICINIUS

What's the news? 40

SECOND MESSENGER

Good news, good news! The ladies have prevailed,
The Volscians are dislodged,° and Marcius gone.
A merrier day did never yet greet Rome,
No, not th' expulsion of the Tarquins.

SICINIUS

Friend,

Art thou certain this is true? Is't most certain? 45

SECOND MESSENGER

As certain as I know the sun is fire.
Where have you lurked,° that you make doubt of it?
Ne'er through an arch so hurried the blown° tide,
As the recomforted through th' gates. Why, hark you!

Trumpets, hautboys;° drums beat; all together.

The trumpets, sackbuts,° psalteries,° and fifes,
Tabors° and cymbals, and the shouting Romans,
Make the sun dance. Hark you! (A shout within.)

MENENIUS

This is good news.

I will go meet the ladies. This Volumnia
Is worth of consuls, senators, patricians,
A city full; of tribunes such as you,
A sea and land full. You have prayed well today.
This morning for ten thousand of your throats
I'd not have given a doit. Hark, how they joy!

Sound still with the shouts.

SICINIUS

First, the gods bless you for your tidings; next,
Accept my thankfulness.

SECOND MESSENGER Sir, we have all
Great cause to give great thanks.

SICINIUS

They are near the city!

SECOND MESSENGER

Almost at point to enter.

SICINIUS

We'll meet them,

And help the joy.

Exeunt.

[Scene V. Rome. Near the gate.]

Enter two SENATORS, with LADIES, passing over the stage, with other LORDS.

FIRST SENATOR

Behold our patroness, the life of Rome!
Call all your tribes together, praise the gods,
And make triumphant fires; strew flowers before them.
Unshout the noise that banished Marcius,

Repeal° him with the welcome of his mother.

Cry, "Welcome, ladies, welcome!"

ALL

Welcome, ladies,

Welcome!

A flourish with drums and trumpets.

[Scene VI. Corioli. A public place.]

Enter Tullus AUFIDIUS, with ATTENDANTS.

AUFIDIUS

Go tell the lords o' th' city I am here.
Deliver them this paper. Having read it,
Bid them repair to th' marketplace, where I,
Even in theirs and in the commons' ears,
Will vouch the truth of it. Him° I accuse
The city ports° by this hath entered, and Intends t' appear before the people, hoping
To purge himself with words. Dispatch.

[Exeunt ATTENDANTS.]

Enter three or four CONSPIRATORS of Aufidius' faction.

Most welcome!

FIRST CONSPIRATOR

How is it with our general?

AUFIDIUS

Even so

As with a man by his own alms empoisoned,°
And with° his charity slain.

SECOND CONSPIRATOR Most noble sir,

If you do hold the same intent wherein
You wished us parties,° we'll deliver you
Of your great danger.

AUFIDIUS

Sir, I cannot tell;

We must proceed as we do find the people.

THIRD CONSPIRATOR

The people will remain uncertain whilst
'Twixt you there's difference; but the fall of either
Makes the survivor heir of all.

AUFIDIUS

I know it,

And my pretext to strike at him admits
A good construction. I raised him, and I pawned°
Mine honor for his truth;° who being so heightened,
He watered his new plants with dews of flattery,
Seducing so my friends; and, to this end,
He bowed his nature, never known before
But to be rough, unswayable, and free.

THIRD CONSPIRATOR

Sir, his stoutness°

When he did stand for consul, which he lost
By lack of stooping—

AUFIDIUS

That I would have spoke of.

Being banished for't, he came unto my hearth,
Presented to my knife his throat. I took him,
Made him joint-servant with me;° gave him way°
In all his own desires; nay, let him choose
Out of my files,° his projects to accomplish,

V.v.5 Repeal recall

V.vi.5 Him he whom 6 ports gates 10 empoisoned destroyed 11 with by 13 parties partisans 20 pawned staked 21 truth loyalty 26 stoutness proud obstinacy 31 joint-servant with me sharer of my service (to the state);
gave him way humored him 33 files ranks

38 hale haul 42 are dislodged have broken up camp 47 lurked been hiding 48 blown swollen (by wind) 49 s.d.
hautboy original of the modern oboe 50 sackbuts trombones; psalteries harplike stringed instruments 51 Tabors small drums

My best and freshest men; served his designments°
 In mine own person; help to reap the fame 35
 Which he did end° all his; and took some pride
 To do myself this wrong; till at the last
 I seemed his follower, not partner; and
 He waged me with his countenance,° as if I had been mercenary.°

FIRST CONSPIRATOR So he did, my lord. 40
 The army marveled at it; and, in the last,°
 When he had carried° Rome and that we looked
 For no less spoil than glory—

AUFIDIUS There was it;°
 For which my sinews° shall be stretched upon° him.
 At° a few drops of women's rheum,° which are 45
 As cheap as lies, he sold the blood and labor
 Of our great action. Therefore shall he die,
 And I'll renew me in his fall. But hark!

Drums and trumpets sounds, with great shouts of the people.

FIRST CONSPIRATOR
 Your native town you entered like a post,°
 And had no welcomes home; but he returns, 50
 Splitting the air with noise.

SECOND CONSPIRATOR And patient fools,
 Whose children he hath slain, their base throats tear
 With giving him glory.

THIRD CONSPIRATOR Therefore, at your vantage,°
 Ere he express himself or move the people
 With what he would say, let him feel your sword, 55
 Which we will second.° When he lies along,° After your way his tale pronounced° shall bury
 His reasons with his body.

AUFIDIUS Say no more:
 Here come the lords.

Enter the LORDS of the city.

ALL LORDS
 You are most welcome home.

AUFIDIUS I have not deserved it. 60
 But, worthy lords, have you with heed perused
 What I have written to you?

ALL [LORDS] We have.

FIRST LORD And grieve to hear't.
 What faults he made before the last, I think
 Might have found easy fines;° but there to end
 Where he was to begin, and give away 65
 The benefit of our levies,° answering us
 With our own charge,° making a treaty where
 There was a yielding—this admits no excuse.

AUFIDIUS
 He approaches. You shall hear him.

*Enter CORIOLANUS, marching with drum and colors,
 the COMMONERS being with him.*

34 designments designs 36 end get in (of crops) 39 waged
 . . . his countenance for wages gave me patronizing looks 40 mercenary serving for pay 41 in the last in the last place, finally 42 carried won 43 There was it That was the crucial thing 44 sinews i.e., strength; upon against 45 At at the price of; rheum tears 49 post messenger 53 at your vantage at a moment opportune for you 56 second support (with our swords); along stretched at full length 57 After
 . . . pronounced his story told in your version 64 fines penalties 66 our levies the armies we raised 66–67 answer- ing . . . charge paying us (only) with our own expenditure

CORIOLANUS

Hail, lords! I am returned your soldier; 70
 No more infected° with my country's love
 Than when I parted° hence, but still subsisting°
 Under your great command. You are to know
 That prosperously I have attempted, and

With bloody passage° led your wars even to 75
 The gates of Rome. Our spoils we have brought home
 Doth more than counterpoise a full third part
 The charges° of the action. We have made peace
 With no less honor to the Antiates
 Than shame to th' Romans; and we here deliver, 80
 Subscribed° by th' consuls and patricians,
 Together with the seal o' th' Senate, what
 We have compounded° on.

AUFIDIUS Read it not, noble lords;
 But tell the traitor in the highest degree
 He hath abused your powers. 85

CORIOLANUS

Traitor! How now!

AUFIDIUS Ay, traitor, Marcius!
 CORIOLANUS Marcius!

AUFIDIUS
 Ay, Marcius, Caius Marcius! Dost thou think
 I'll grace° thee with that robbery, thy stol'n name
 Coriolanus, in Corioles?
 You lords and heads o' th' state, perfidiously 90
 He has betrayed your business and given up,
 For certain drops of salt, your city Rome,
 I say "your city," to his wife and mother;
 Breaking his oath and resolution, like
 A twist° of rotten silk; never admitting 95
 Counsel o' th' war; but at his nurse's tears
 He whined and roared away your victory;
 That° pages blushed at him, and men of heart°
 Looked wond'ring each at others.

CORIOLANUS Hear'st thou, Mars?

AUFIDIUS Name not the god, thou boy of tears!
 CORIOLANUS Ha!
 AUFIDIUS No more. 100

CORIOLANUS
 Measureless liar, thou hast made my heart
 Too great for what contains it. "Boy"! O slave!
 Pardon me, lords, 'tis the first time that ever
 I was forced to scold. Your judgments, my grave lords, 105
 Must give this cur the lie; and his own notion°—
 Who wears my stripes impressed upon him, that Must bear my beating to his grave—shall join
 To thrust the lie unto him.

FIRST LORD
 Peace, both, and hear me speak.

CORIOLANUS
 Cut me to pieces, Volscres, men and lads, 110
 Stain all your edges on me. "Boy"! False hound!
 If you have writ your annals true, 'tis there,°

71 infected (see Introduction, p. 1319) 72 parted departed; subsisting remaining 75 passage action 77–78 more . . .
charges exceed the costs by a whole third (cf. line 67) 81
Subscribed signed 83 compounded agreed 88 grace honor
 95 twist thread (made of more than one strand) 98 That so that; of heart of spirit 105 notion understanding 112
there (written) there

That, like an eagle in a dovecote, I
Fluttered your Volscians in Corioles.
Alone I did it. "Boy"?

AUFIDIUS Why, noble lords,
Will you be put in mind of his blind fortune,^o
Which was your shame, by this unholy braggart,
'Fore your own eyes and ears?

ALL CONSPIRATORS Let him die for't.

ALL PEOPLE Tear him to pieces!—Do it presently!^o—
He killed my son!—My daughter!—He killed my cousin Marcius!—He killed my father!

SECOND LORD

Peace, ho! no outrage, peace!
The man is noble, and his fame folds in^o
This orb o' th' earth. His last offenses to us
Shall have judicious^o hearing. Stand,^o Aufidius,
And trouble not the peace.

CORIOLANUS O that I had him,
With six Aufidiuses or more—his tribe,
To use my lawful sword!

AUFIDIUS Insolent villain!

ALL CONSPIRATORS
Kill, kill, kill, kill, kill him!

Draw the CONSPIRATORS and kills MARCIUS, who falls. AUFIDIUS stands on him.

LORDS Hold, hold, hold, hold!

AUFIDIUS

My noble masters, hear me speak.

FIRST LORD O Tullus! 130

SECOND LORD

Thou hast done a deed whereat valor will weep.

THIRD LORD

Tread not upon him. Masters all, be quiet;
Put up your swords.

AUFIDIUS

My lords, when you shall know—as in this rage
Provoked by him, you cannot—the great danger
Which this man's life did owe you,^o you'll rejoice
That he is thus cut off. Please it your honors
To call me to your senate, I'll deliver^o
Myself your loyal servant, or endure
Your heaviest censure.^o

FIRST LORD

Bear from hence his body,
And mourn you for him. Let him be regarded
As the most noble corse^o that ever herald
Did follow to his urn.

SECOND LORD

His own impatience
Takes from Aufidius a great part of blame.
Let's make the best of it.

AUFIDIUS

My rage is gone,
And I am struck with sorrow. Take him up.
Help, three o' th' chiefest soldiers; I'll be one.
Beat thou the drum, that it speak mournfully;
Trail your steel pikes. Though in this city he
Hath widowed and unchilded many a one,
Which to this hour bewail the injury,
Yet he shall have a noble memory.^o

Assist.

*Exeunt bearing the body of Marcius.
A dead march sounded.*

116 blind fortune mere good luck (Fortune is a blind goddess)
119 presently at once 123 folds in embraces 125 judicious judicial; Stand stop

136 did owe you held in payment for you 138 deliver prove 140 censure sentence 142 corse corpse 152 memory memorial

THE LIFE OF TIMON OF ATHENS

EDITED BY MAURICE CHARNEY

Introduction

There is general agreement that Timon of Athens is an unfinished play. In an influential article in the Review of English Studies (1942), Una Ellis-Fermor described Timon as "a play such as a great artist might leave behind him, roughed out, worked over in part and then abandoned; full of inconsistencies in form and presentation, with fragments (some of them considerable) bearing the unmistakable stamp of his workmanship scattered throughout." The roughnesses of the play are obvious to any conscientious reader of Shakespeare. The blank verse is often extremely irregular, with many lines that do not fit into the iambic pentameter pattern. There are strange eruptions of prose in verse passages, and there are many inept repetitions of words and phrases from one line to the next. Characters appear, such as the Fool and Page (II.ii), who are not properly integrated into the action; there are two conflicting epitaphs for Timon in Act V; and the Poet and Painter announced at IV.iii.350 do not arrive until almost two hundred lines later. The subplot of Alcibiades and his revenge on Athens is so loosely related to the main action which it is intended to parallel that some have suspected a lost scene. We know that the murderer for whom Alcibiades is pleading in III.v cannot be Timon, but he is not anyone else in the play, and it is more than an idle curiosity which seeks to know his name.

One detail in the play is the subject of a fascinating study. In "Shakespeare Learns the Value of Money," Terence Spencer discusses the inconsistency in the references to talents. A talent was an ancient coin frequently mentioned in Plutarch and the Bible, and generally taken to be worth half a hundredweight of silver, or well over $1000 in its modern equivalent. The sum of 1000 talents that Timon seeks from the Senators (II.ii) is an absurdly large one (more than $1,000,000), and it is possible that Shakespeare really did not know how much a talent was worth. At some point he learned its true value and corrected the references at the beginning of the play, but left others uncorrected. The request for "fifty five hundred talents" in III.ii seems to mean either fifty or five hundred, depending on how much a talent is worth, and the references to "so many talents" in the same scene should be replaced by actual sums.

This example of the talents is a very neat one for demonstrating that many details in Timon need to be revised and corrected and that the play lacks the sort of polishing and tidying up that one would expect from a final draft. The circumstances surrounding the printing of Timon (discussed in the Note on the Text) lend further support to this idea. There can be no doubt that the play as it appears in Shakespeare's First Folio of 1623 is unfinished. But Miss Ellis-Fermor's thesis has done great harm to the appreciation of Timon because it suggests that the play is not only unfinished (in the sense of lacking any final revision), but that it is a mere collection of jottings and rough sketches without any integral coherence. I would strongly disagree with this point of view. It seems to me that Timon is completely finished in conception: its structure makes good sense as a whole, its characters are well adapted to the overall plan, and its style, tone, imagery, and dramatic handling all contribute to a unified imaginative vision.

Because Timon is an unusual play, it would be more profitable to try to understand its uniqueness than to compare it unfavorably with the great tragedies that preceded it. The structure of the play is that of a dramatic fable, divided into two sharply contrasted parts. By dramatic fable I mean what other critics have called a morality play or an allegory—that is, a structure that does not proceed rationally and causatively from point to point, but rather one that progresses by a series of unmotivated leaps from one imaginative state to another. We are not meant to examine the credibility of Timon's financial extravagance, or his total unawareness of his bankruptcy, or his sudden discovery of an inexhaustible supply of gold. We accept these improbabilities as part of our willing suspension of disbelief. The testing of the three false friends in Act III moves as in a folk tale to its inevitable conclusion, and the faithful servant who remains true while all others are false is a familiar fairy-tale figure. The exact cause of Timon's death is left poetically obscure, and no attempt at all is made to give his sudden change from philanthropy to misanthropy a psychological basis. The structure of the play is schematic, and the dramatic action separates itself into a series of well-defined episodes related to each other analogically rather than causally. One scene is not the source or cause or motive for another, but is, rather, a parallel to it and serves as a comment on it. I should like to look more closely at the structure of Timon in order to show that the play is complete and fully imagined within the meaning of a dramatic fable. For this purpose, I will survey the action scene by scene and offer an account of "what happens in Timon."

The first sequence of ninety-four lines before Timon appears is of crucial importance for establishing the tone and mood of the play as well as announcing its major themes. We have a Poet and Painter, a Jeweler and Merchant, who have come to peddle their wares to Timon, as patron of the arts and general connoisseur. None of these characters is named, and they represent, as in an allegory, the type functions of their names. Behind the elaborate compliment and self-deprecation of this scene lies a blatant hucksterism that well expresses the rottenness of Athens. The meretriciousness of the Poet and Painter is particularly disturbing, since we expect them to aim higher than merely "to propagate their states." Shakespeare seems nowhere else to have put artists in such an unfavorable light.

The controlling element in the scene is the Poet's allegory of Fortune, which serves as a central fable for the play. The goddess Fortune and her capricious ways much occupied the minds of men in the Middle Ages and Renaissance, and great efforts were made to reconcile the Roman myth with Christian morality. Wealth and all material benefits are the fortuitous and insubstantial gifts of Fortune, the blindfolded goddess who is forever turning the wheel on which her worshipers are placed (the wheel in a gambling casino derives from this one). Timon's alliance with Fortune early in the play clearly foreshadows his ruin, "When Fortune in her shift and change of mood/Spurns down her late beloved."

Thus, when Timon enters at line 94 with great ceremony, "addressing himself courteously to every suitor," we are already prepared not to accept his munificence at its face value. The pack of suppliants is itself so mixed in degrees of worth that we cannot help agreeing with Dr. Johnson, who said that the play is a "warning against that ostentatious liberality which scatters bounty but confers no benefits, and buys flattery but no friendship." Timon is at his height in this scene, reveling in his philanthropic role. There is, of course, something dreamlike about this early scene, with its mixture of charity, prodigality, and enormous public display. The entrance of Apemantus at line 175 restores some measure of reality, since he at least speaks the truth, however churlish and snarling he may be in his personal manner. He warns Timon of his waste and extravagance, but Apemantus is so unsympathetic in his role of satiric, malcontent railer that he is almost never believed; this is another disturbing element in the play. The young military hero, Alcibiades, also appears in I.i, but aside from his elaborate military costume, he is a colorless figure and, with the single exception of III.v, remains so throughout.

In I.ii, Timon is still high and godlike as he presides over an elaborate banquet for his friends. There is a strong visual emphasis on the fact that Timon's bounty shows itself in hedonism and high living more than in old-fashioned benevolence. His ideal of friendship is inseparable from the clubby atmosphere of good food and drink and the Gemütlichkeit of mutual compliment. As Apemantus had said earlier, "He that loves to be flattered is worthy o' th' flatterer." The Masque of Amazons in this scene is an element of spectacle common in Shakespeare's later plays and not very closely related to the action. Incidentally, the only women in the play are those Amazons and the prostitutes, Phrynia and Timandra; the world of Athens is distinctly a man's world.

It is in I.ii that Flavius, the always loyal steward of Timon, tells us that his master is bankrupt, everything is mortgaged, and utter ruin is imminent. Flavius resembles Apemantus in speaking the truth, but he has a fund of compassion for Timon—"I bleed inwardly for my lord"—while Apemantus cynically delights in misfortune.

The first scene of Act II takes us back to the opening of the play, and once again we are plunged into the icy reality of Athens, in which all values are on a strictly cash basis. A Senator who is not named is counting up Timon's debts and is impatiently dispatching his servant to dun him for the money. He loves and honors Timon, of course, "But must not break my back to heal his finger." The most shocking aspect of this scene is the contempt in which the Senator holds Timon for his generosity:

If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog
And give it Timon—why the dog coins gold. (II.i.5-6)

The Senator is only elaborating on Timon's own formula: "there's none/Can truly say he gives, if he receives." But Timon's rejection of reciprocity in giving leaves him terribly vulnerable.

The next scene (II.ii) marks a new stage in the action, for Timon is now finally aware of his bankruptcy. In an effort to avoid the overwhelming truth, Timon will test his friends by seeking to borrow money from them. This process is accomplished in three satiric scenes in Act III, written in vivid colloquial style. They are all brief vignettes, very different from each other, and designed to show the varieties of evasive ingenuity. The scene with Lucullus (III.i) is so masterfully done that we are almost convinced that "this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship without security." In the next scene (III.ii), three Strangers are introduced to serve as choral commentators on what is happening and to arouse our sympathies for Timon. These Strangers are merely non-Athenians without any further specification (although one of them is called Hostilius); they are in no way connected with the plot and appear only to vindicate Timon.

In III.iv, the creditors' servants are again assembled at the house of Timon as they were in II.ii. When Timon enters "in a rage," we have a new development in the action, since Timon now has been stripped of his illusions. His misanthropy proper begins at this point, and he speaks in the highly emotional, freely associative style reserved for those distracted. Timon seems to be on the road to that bitter self-knowledge demanded by tragic recognition, yet he never progresses any further, and the tragedy, at least from the point of view of Aristotle's Poetics, remains truncated and fragmentary. In his hysterical, martyrlike sufferings, Timon does not turn inward as do so many of Shakespeare's tragic protagonists; instead, he begins to gloat over the possibility of being brilliantly and histrionically revenged in a mock-banquet.

III.v is the first and only full scene of the subplot. It is well written and fully written, with a carefully developed oration by Alcibiades for a friend and fellow soldier who has killed a man to defend his honor. This speech is, by the way, in the direct tradition of the "mercy" speeches of Portia in The Merchant of Venice and Isabella in Measure for Measure. Although the scene has no plot links with what precedes, it does have a strong thematic connection with it. The Athenian Senators show the same ingratitude to a benefactor of their state as they did to Timon. This scene plays an important part in developing the tone and mood of Athens, so that when Timon's mock-banquet and revenge follow in the next scene, we are glad to see the tables turned on the greedy, usurious Senators. Alcibiades' banishment in this scene foreshadows the self-exile of Timon at the end of the next scene.

The final scene of Act III is carefully written up to provide an effective climax for the first part of the play: "Uncover, dogs, and lap." This is a memorable line, and the dramatic skill with which the discovery and reversal are managed shows Shakespeare at his best. It is a great moment for Timon, who has once again recovered his former stature. One interesting structural element is that Timon in this scene is beginning to take over the role of Apemantus: his grace echoes Apemantus' bitter benediction in I.ii, and in Acts IV and V the verbal echoes become more marked. Another striking feature is the reaction of the guests to Timon's revenge. Here we have an excellent example of the use of sharp contrast to establish an effect. The friends are as untouched by Timon's towering pronouncements as the dunning servants were in III.iv. After having their souls seared by Timon's revelations of their inner corruption, they respond with utter banality: "Push, did you see my cap?," "I have lost my gown," "He gave me a jewel th' other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat. Did you see my jewel?" This farcical anticlimax of high comedy concludes when the lost items have been recovered.

Timon's soliloquy outside the walls of Athens in the next scene (IV.i) has none of the meditative, soul-searching qualities of the soliloquies in Hamlet or Macbeth; it is purely an oration by one with no onstage audience. Timon's vision of chaos in this scene is so radical that it fails to be convincing. It is perhaps not more extreme than Lear's speeches on the heath, but it has no psychological terror and passion to support the violent rhetoric, and the intensity of the language seems to be separated from any occasion which might have caused it. This leads to some odd side effects, even to an irreverent feeling of sick humor in some of the most hysterical imprecations:

Son of sixteen,
Pluck the lined crutch from thy old limping sire,
With it beat out his brains. (IV.i.13-15)

One of the drawbacks in a dramatic fable is that we cannot have the psychological thickness needed to support statements like the above. The fourth and fifth acts of Timon are unsuccessful partly because the impassioned rhetoric cannot sustain itself without an impassioned action.

The brief second scene of Act IV shows us Timon's servants, "All broken implements of a ruined house," still faithful to him in adversity. They are the counterparts of the false friends, and they modify our possible contempt for Timon. Along with the three Strangers of III.ii, they prevent the play from becoming out-and-out satire.

IV.iii, a long and miscellaneous scene, consists chiefly of a series of encounters with Timon. It is worth noting that Timon's cave in the woods seems to be as easily accessible as a good midtown office. These encounters all meet with predictable failure, as we might expect in a dramatic fable, so that their main function seems to be to exhibit Timon's misanthropy in a number of different guises. One new movement, however, is the sense of world-weariness that comes over Timon, accompanied by a desire to die. It begins at line 380 and culminates in the moving speech:

My long sickness
Of health and living now begins to mend,
And nothing brings me all things. (V.i.186-88)

At the beginning of IV.iii, Timon's parable of the "Twinned brothers of one womb" shows us that he now believes in the Poet's vision of Fortune in the first scene of the play. "All's obliquy," everything is crooked and perverse, and the law of nature no longer rules man. Timon's hate would not be so disturbing if it did not include a petulant self-hate by which he forfeits all neutral ground. He is not the one just man bearing witness against corruption, but as worthless and corrupt as the rest. His primitivism, then, is a mere sham, and there is ironic justification for his finding gold rather than roots. He will use it to fulfill his evil vision and make "Destruction fang mankind."

The appearance of Alcibiades with a brace of whores undercuts his heroic pretensions, and the slangy directness of the whores makes them more interesting than their noble captain. Like other realists in the play, Phrynia and Timandra humor Timon in the hope of gain: "More counsel with more money, bounteous Timon." In their plainspeaking refusal to flatter, they make explicit a theme from the earlier part of the play: "Believe't that we'll do anything for gold."

The word-slinging wit-combat with Apemantus has some of the best and some of the worst speeches in the play. The absolute low point, it seems to me, is the series of insults they hurl at each other. There is not enough inventiveness in either calumniator to go beyond Timon's "Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon"—my entry for the worst line in the play, which gains an added point from Timon's insufferable snobbishness. But the mutual judgments that Timon and Apemantus make of each other are excellently done, and they show an old-fashioned character analysis rare in this play. Apemantus' case against Timon is made so explicitly that we cannot possibly mistake Timon for Shakespeare's mouthpiece. Timon is a naturally disdainful man, who feigns misanthropy out of pique with Fortune; he is an absolutist who cannot make any compromises with the human condition. As Apemantus says, "The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends." This hits home, but Timon's account of Apemantus' meanness and envy and essentially servile nature also strikes its mark and draws blood.

The meeting with the anonymous Banditti is full of improbability, and their sententiousness and lack of ferocity are disappointing. The encounter with Flavius that closes the scene shows Timon again at his worst, since he is grudgingly forced to admit that there is one honest man.

Shadwell got around this difficulty in his version of the play (1678) by introducing an honest woman, Evandra, who is able to regenerate Timon. At this point in the structure of Shakespeare's play, it is clear that Timon must soon die, if only to satisfy the exacerbation of the audience. He has reached such an extreme position that he can go no further in negation. Being a static and flat character, he has already involved himself in tedious repetition.

V.i continues the previous scene, with the Poet and Painter forming another exhibit of why Timon took to the woods; we are pleased to see them laboring so hard for rewards they will not receive. The mission from Athens at the end of the scene suggests that some changes have occurred in the city since Timon's departure, although the elaborate, unnecessarily complicated rhetoric of the Senators hints that these changes could not have been very profound. The "heaps and sums" and "figures of their love" inevitably imply that the Senators are ready to offer Timon a handsome bribe. After the announcement of Timon's death and the discovery of his epitaph, the play ends conventionally with a sense of the purgation of evil and the possibility of a new and better life in the once corrupted city.

At the risk of reviewing the plot, I have gone into some detail about the structure of Timon in order to show that it is a coherent whole with carefully developed analogies between its parts, and not a mere hodgepodge of first thoughts, jottings, roughings-out, or fragments. Although it has many flaws, it does seem to me a completed play, and one that can satisfactorily be acted in its present form (as it has been in recent years by the Old Vic—twice—the Stratford Festival Company of Canada, and many others). There is no doubt that Timon could be improved, but it does make good sense dramatically as it now stands. I would not try to push the argument further than that. A dramatic fable by its very nature has many weaknesses in psychological characterization and tragic development, but it can produce some striking effects of simplicity, symmetry, and dramatic intensity. These excellences of Timon have perhaps been best appreciated by William Hazlitt, who in The Characters of Shakespear's Plays said that the play always appeared to us to be written with as intense a feeling of his subject as any one play of Shakespeare. It is one of the few in which he seems to be in earnest throughout, never to trifle nor go out of his way. He does not relax in his efforts, nor lose sight of the unity of his design.

The imagery of Timon has an inner consistency that reflects the completeness of the play as a work of the imagination. Images of disease, especially venereal disease, pervade the action, evoking the sort of disgust one finds in Hamlet and Troilus and Cressida. Man's nature is infected and the soul of the world is sick. Timon's misanthropy itself rages as virulently as any disease. Animal imagery and predatory images of food and eating combine with those of disease to strengthen its negative aspect. In Timon's tirades, especially, all mankind is reduced to Hobbes's fearful state of nature, where the law of the jungle once more prevails. There is much elaborate play on the dog image, since Apemantus was himself a Cynic philosopher, a school derived from the Greek word for dog and thought to have currish properties. William Empson has discussed some of the overtones of this image in the play, and Caroline Spurgeon has pointed to the typical fawning image-cluster of dogs licking candy. The imagery of gold is too obvious to dwell on, but one should remember its double sense of evil and blessing. There are also traditional themes of winter and summer, cold and hot, constriction and flow, which follow the movement of the dramatic action.

Shakespeare seems to be completely in control of the style of Timon, which, if it has rough places that need to be revised, has also some extraordinary felicities. The play is not lyric in intent, so that some of the most vivid lyric effects are used negatively to support Timon's cruel imagination. The best passage of this sort is Timon's advice to Alcibiades to wage total war and spare none, for all are hypocritical dissemblers:

Let not the virgin's cheek
Make soft thy trenchant sword: for those milk paps,
That through the window-bars bore at men's eyes,
Are not within the leaf of pity writ,
But set them down horrible traitors. (IV.iii.115-19)

"Window-bars" has sometimes been interpreted to mean the open-work squares on the bodice of a woman's frock, but its literal reference to the bars outside a window seems more natural. We have the image of a young virgin mewled up in her chamber, whose disturbing sexuality as she stands at her window transfixes men and pierces them through. One must struggle against one's natural instincts to overcome these charms, and the lyric expression is used for derogatory purposes. Another more shocking example of twisted lyricism is Timon's advice to Flavius:

Hate all, curse all, show charity to none,
But let the famished flesh slide from the bone
Ere thou relieve the beggar. (IV.iii.530-32)

The physical force of the image is not buried in faded metaphor. Its cruelty is stark and unadorned.

One other stylistic excellence in Timon is its epigrammatic conciseness, the ability to pack a complex meaning into a brief phrase. There are many examples of this, some of them, as "feast-won, fast-lost," founded on proverbs. Flavius' defense of Timon also suggests a proverb, although it is not a recorded one: "Never mind/Was to be so unwise to be so kind." The effect of compression probably depends upon the multiple connotations of "kind" and "unwise"; a paraphrase would demand a good deal of amplification. The most numerous examples of this kind of writing are, I think, in III.v. Here the conciseness is part of the dramatic plan, and the Senators' brusque questions are ominous in their brevity: "Now, captain?" "What's that?" "How?" "What?" and then the explicit, "Do you dare our anger?" which precedes Alcibiades' banishment. In the carefully articulated rhetoric of Alcibiades' oration, there are many of these pregnant phrases. When the First Senator states as his guiding principle, "He forfeits his own blood that spills another," Alcibiades simply cannot believe what he has heard: "Must it be so? It must not be." The repetition gives special point to the line, as it also does in Alcibiades' final soliloquy:

I'm worse than mad. I have kept back their foes,
While they have told their money, and let out
Their coin upon large interest, I myself
Rich only in large hurts. All those, for this? (III.v.106-09)

The ironic echoing of "large" prepares us for the antithesis of the final question. The deliberate ambiguity of "this" suggests a wide range of meanings: this banishment, this debasement, this travesty of justice, this perversion of honor and merit—in sum, this evil, corrupt, tyrannical city governed by cynically usurious Senators.

Timon has many of the qualities of satire and high comedy. In the attempt to depict the sophisticated, morally corrupt, and completely money-oriented life of Athens, Shakespeare uses a sharp realism of style expressed in easy colloquial speech. The scenes with the false friends in Act III (i, ii, iii) are the best sustained examples of this style. Lucullus' reply to Flaminius' request for money shows an unabashed ironic scorn: "La, la, la, la! 'Nothing doubting,' says he? Alas, good lord, a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house." Lucullus is completely at his ease, and his use of contracted speech forms throughout this scene indicates an assumed and contemptuous familiarity. Another example of Shakespeare's mastery of the colloquial style is Flavius' report of how the Senators reacted to his request for a loan:

They answer in a joint and corporate voice,
That now they are at fall, want treasure, cannot
Do what they would, are sorry; you are honorable,
But yet they could have wished—they know not;
Something hath been amiss—a noble nature
May catch a wrench—would all were well—'tis pity—
And so, intending other serious matters,
After distasteful looks, and these hard fractions,
With certain half-caps and cold-moving nods,
They froze me into silence. (II.ii.211-20)

"These hard fractions" show Shakespeare's skill at imitating, by syntax and phrase, the halting dishonesty of the Senators. The fragments are those of actual speech, and their disconnectedness is intended to soften the blow on Timon. Even such a glorious spender as Timon "May catch a wrench" and go broke, and, as Lucullus says, "this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship without security."

Another approach to the integrity of Timon is to consider the play in the context of Shakespeare's other works. Timon has most often been compared with King Lear. Coleridge called it an "after vibration" of King Lear, and A. C. Bradley compared the two plays extensively in his study of Shakespearean tragedy. Both deal with the theme of ingratitude and its overpowering effects on Lear and Timon, who both react with a fierce indictment of man and society. But in King Lear this indictment touches the protagonist, too, and leads him to a bitter self-awareness which is not present in Timon. There is no inward-turning in the latter play, no soul-searching of any sort, which gives it the effect of satire rather than tragedy. Both Lear and Timon are first shown in an atmosphere of false flattery and public adoration. They are soon reduced to primitive nature, but in Lear's case this stripping-down has a necessity lacking in Timon's, who chooses self-exile in the woods and perversely persists in it even after he has found gold. One may also compare Kent and Flavius, the unshakably loyal servants who minister to their masters in adversity, but Kent is individualized as a character by a keen, blunt-speaking wit, whereas Flavius only fulfills a type function. In both plays, the frequent contrast of "nothing" and "all" identifies the extreme nature of the tragic action, which eschews any happy mean between prosperity and adversity.

Timon is especially close to those dark, satirical plays that put a strong emphasis on sexual corruption: Measure for Measure, Hamlet, and Troilus and Cressida. While Timon conveys the strongest sense of sexual disease, it shares a disillusioned view of human nature and an overpowering sense of deceit and hypocrisy with these other plays. It has been suggested that all these plays (except Hamlet) were written for the more fastidious audiences of the Inns of Court or the private theaters. That would help to explain the difficult, closely reasoned, and abstract character of many of their speeches.

There is a specific connection between Timon and Troilus and Cressida in the characters of Apemantus and Thersites. Both are scurrilous, churlish, and thoroughly unattractive truth-speakers, who, like professional fools, prick the illusions in their plays. Their own reality is never intended to be any alternative to the pretensions they attack, since they are both base and mean-spirited. Perhaps Apemantus, by his profession of Cynic philosophy, is a somewhat more attractive figure than the completely servile Thersites.

The relation of Timon to Coriolanus is so close that it deserves particular attention. Both plays are based on North's Plutarch for their essential details, and the exile of Alcibiades with his return to conquer his native city is very like the career of Coriolanus. The two are, in fact, parallel lives in Plutarch. The banishment of Alcibiades and Coriolanus is manipulated by a politically and morally corrupt group, whose mediocrity is disturbed by the presence of military heroes. The subsequent plea of the Senators to spare their city is also similar in the two plays. In structure both plays are divided into two distinct parts, one showing the wrong or evil, the other the revenge for it. The opening fable of Fortune's hill in Timon parallels the fable of the belly and the members in Coriolanus; both provide a convenient set of ideas by which to interpret the action, and both foreshadow what will eventually occur.

One could enumerate many similarities in detail between the two plays, but the larger similarities in conception are more important. Timon and Coriolanus are both tragedies that cannot be judged by the standards of Aristotle's Poetics: in neither play does the tragic protagonist have much awareness of what is happening to him, and there is no tragic recognition at all. Neither Timon nor Coriolanus has any sense of the middle state of man, the mean, the human condition. They are both absolutists, extremists, harsh individualists who wish to be either god or beast, but nothing in between. They are equally insensitive to human failings and weaknesses—even Timon's philanthropy is always public, never personal. Both plays put strong emphasis on public display and have many large scenes of crowded activity. There are very few personal or domestic scenes, and almost no attention at all is devoted to romantic heroines. The soliloquies in both plays are never used for purposes of self-analysis or self-exploration. Stylistically, both plays seem very objective and impersonal, and there are excellent examples in both of a condensed and telegraphic dramatic speech without lyric amplification. Both plays also have a good deal of satire, which draws on an extensive imagery of disease, animals, and food.

In the absence of any external evidence, I agree with E. K. Chambers in placing Timon after Coriolanus as the last of Shakespeare's tragedies, written sometime around 1608. However, Chambers' dating of Timon (in William Shakespeare, Vol. I), is based on assumptions about Shakespeare's psychological and physical condition at the time of composition that are difficult to accept:

Both King Lear and Timon of Athens seem to show symptoms of mental disturbance. But mental disturbance may come in waves. It may very likely only be a whimsy of my own that during the attempt at Timon of Athens a wave broke, then an illness followed, and that when it passed, the breach between the tragic and the romantic period was complete.

Timon has always been a favorite candidate for the "mythical sorrows of Shakespeare," and Chambers only echoes more than a century of romantic speculation on the dark corners of Shakespeare's soul. Georg Brandes in his William Shakespeare said much the same thing in a more rapturous and unrestrained form:

all that, in these years, Shakespeare has endured and experienced, thought and suffered, is concentrated into the one great despairing figure of Timon of Athens, "misanthropos," whose savage rhetoric is like a dark secretion of clotted blood and gall, drawn off to assuage pain.

Recently, a number of medical critics have stated that Timon is suffering from the classic symptoms of syphilis, which reach the stage of paresis by Act IV. Perhaps we must then postulate that Shakespeare himself was suffering from the French malady in order to be able to write about it. This is the same order of fallacy as attributing Shakespeare's bird lore and flower lore to his close observation of the Warwickshire countryside, despite the fact that they have figured in literary traditions at least as old as the ancient Greeks.

Shakespeare surely tried to protect himself from being taken for a Timonist by making Timon so unattractive and unsympathetic. "Yond despised and ruinous man" is a lost soul, self-exiled and self-damned by his own evil vision of reality. We cannot have become so uncritically enamored of the power of blackness as not to see the truth of Apemantus' judgment:

Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself:

A madman so long, now a fool. (IV.iii.221-22)

We would not want to accept this, however, as a final appraisal of Timon, whose fierce energy and passion redeem him from the pettiness and rancor of his accusers. "Friendship's full of dregs," but to escape the humdrum complications of the common fate by trying to be either god or beast can be a more agonizing experience. Both Shakespeare's and Molière's misanthrope fascinate us and repel us because their attempt is so heroic, so unpromising, and so inhuman.

A NOTE ON THE SOURCES

The ultimate source for Shakespeare's play is probably Lucian's satiric dialogue, Timon, written in Greek in the second century A.D. It is unlikely that Shakespeare read Lucian in Greek, but the earliest English translation, by Thomas Heywood, was not published until 1637. There may, of course, have been an earlier English translation that has not survived, but a more likely possibility is that Shakespeare used the French translation by Filbert Bretin in 1582 (as Honigmann argues). A number of Italian versions were also available, as well as a Latin translation by Erasmus. The verbal parallels between Shakespeare and Lucian are few, but there is a striking similarity in style and tone. Common sense insists that Lucian must be Shakespeare's ultimate source, even though the exact stages of transmission are not clear to us.

The most direct and commonly agreed-on source for Timon is Sir Thomas North's translation of Plutarch, The Lives of the Noble Grecians and Romans, first published in 1579 (although Shakespeare probably used the 1595 edition). There is a brief digression in the "Life of Marcus Antonius" that recounts how Antony, despondent after his defeat at the battle of Actium, living apart from men in a house by the sea called Timoneon. Plutarch follows Strabo's version of the story, which represents Antony as deliberately imitating the example of Timon. Timon was apparently an actual person who lived in Athens in the fifth century B.C., and about whose misanthropy many legends arose. He was a favorite butt of the Greek comic dramatists. There are a few further references to Timon in Plutarch's "Life of Alcibiades," which was the Greek life paired with that of the Roman Coriolanus. If Timon was written around the time of Antony and Cleopatra and Coriolanus, it is not surprising that all three plays should draw on North's Plutarch. It is likely that Shakespeare used Plutarch more extensively than the source passages would indicate. Six names in Timon, for example, come from the "Life of Marcus Antonius," and the "Life of Lucullus" provides us with an excellent background for the character in Shakespeare's play.

The account of Timon in William Painter's The Palace of Pleasure, first published in 1566 (but Shakespeare probably used the 1575 edition), draws on Plutarch for its facts, but orders them with an eye to making a good story. There is perhaps one bit of evidence of Shakespeare's literal use of Painter. Timon's epitaphs in the play are taken over verbatim from North's Plutarch except for one change: Shakespeare uses Painter's phrase, "wicked caitiffs," in place of North's "wicked wretches." Since Shakespeare probably drew on Painter for All's Well That Ends Well, and possibly for Romeo and Juliet, it is reasonable to suppose that he also read the brief account of Timon. The version of the Timon story given in Sir Richard Barckley, A Discourse of the Felicity of Man (1598), is derived almost entirely from Painter.

The most controversial and puzzling source that has been claimed for Shakespeare's play is the anonymous Timon, which the Reverend Alexander Dyce in 1842 first published from a manuscript for the Shakespeare Society

(now Dyce MS 52.25F in the Victoria and Albert Museum, London). This is an academic play, full of self-consciously learned allusions and quotations. It is based on Lucian, although on at least three occasions it introduces material not in Lucian and also used, in somewhat different form, by Shakespeare: (1) a mock-banquet scene in which Timon serves stones painted to look like artichokes; (2) the faithful Steward Laches, who follows his master in adversity; (3) the burial by Timon of his newly discovered gold. None of these is so distinctive that it can be accounted for only by direct borrowing, but the combination suggests that Shakespeare may have seen a performance of the play, read the manuscript, or heard about the play from someone who had seen or read it. Just how this could have occurred is entirely a matter of speculation.

The date of the "old" Timon play (as it is usually called) is very uncertain. It has generally been assigned to the last quarter of the sixteenth century, but recently some scholars have argued that it may just as easily follow Shakespeare's Timon as precede it. Bradbrook thinks that it is a burlesque of Shakespeare's play presented by the law students of the Inner Temple at their Christmas revels (see Renaissance Drama, IX [1966], 83-103). A late date for the "old" Timon play accounts for the similarities with Shakespeare that do not derive from Lucian, but it is difficult to reconstruct how the academic author could have known a Shakespearean play that was presumably never completely finished, never acted, and not published until 1623. The records may, of course, be incomplete, but then the argument has to be founded on a series of negative probabilities. Proponents of a late date for the "old" Timon play have heard echoes in it of King Lear and The Merchant of Venice, but these are questionable. One other explanation for the similarity of Timon of Athens to the "old" Timon play is that they both drew on a common source now lost. This is a convenient postulate, but not very helpful in the present case, since nothing further is known about this common source.

Two other sources for which claims have been offered have generally been rejected by scholars: Boiardo's Timone (1494) and Lyly's Campaspe (1584). In the latter play, Diogenes is rather close to Shakespeare's Apemantus, but the malcontent railer was a familiar type, and Shakespeare had already created Jaques in As You Like It and Thersites in Troilus and Cressida.

There are many allusions to Timon in Renaissance English literature. He was a stock figure for the misanthrope, whose life was often described in animal analogies. Shakespeare refers to Timon in Love's Labor's Lost, when Berowne hypocritically berates his companions for being in love:

O me, with what strict patience have I sat
To see a king transformèd to a gnat!
To see great Hercules whipping a gig,
And profound Solomon to tune a jig,
And Nestor play at push-pin with the boys,
And critic Timon laugh at idle toys! (IV.iii.162-67)

A NOTE ON THE TEXT

Our sole authority for the text of Timon of Athens is the First Folio of Shakespeare, published in 1623. It may only be the result of a lucky accident that the play was printed at all, since Troilus and Cressida was intended to follow Romeo and Juliet in the section of Tragedies, and three pages of Troilus and Cressida were actually set up and printed. But difficulties over the copyright of Troilus and Cressida probably forced Jaggard to stop work on it. He allowed a sufficient number of blank pages for it, and then went on to set up and print Julius Caesar. Contrary to Jaggard's expectations, the difficulties with Troilus and Cressida were not quickly resolved. Something had to fill the space left for Troilus and Cressida, and Timon was decided on. It is a relatively short play, so that it only partially fills the allotted pages. Signature ii is omitted and there is an awkward gap between pages 98 and 109 (beginning of Julius Caesar), despite the blown-up and elaborately decorated list of actors' names that has a page to itself at the end of Timon.

Whether Timon would have been printed at all if the difficulties with Troilus and Cressida had not occurred is a teasing question, but the condition of its text strongly confirms its role as an afterthought or stopgap. Timon is full of the kind of inconsistencies and roughnesses that suggest a play that has not received any final revision (see the Introduction). There is no record of a performance of the play during Shakespeare's lifetime, and the possibility seems unlikely. It is obviously not the sort of play that a business-minded publisher would be eager to include in an expensive and speculative venture like the Shakespeare Folio. The text of Timon was set up either directly from Shakespeare's "foul papers" (rough draft), or from a transcript of them made by a scribe.

The state of the text has an important bearing on the editing of the play. If Timon is indeed a play that has not received that final revision and polishing necessary to put it into actable (or printable) form, it is not the job of a modern editor to undertake this task for Shakespeare. It is not up to a modern editor, for example, to make the lines scan by piecing them out differently (a formidable task here), or to distribute specific roles to the First, Second, Third, and Fourth Lords, or to make other changes of an essentially "improving" nature. I assume that the present-day reader would like to have the play in a modernized form, but as close as possible to the way Shakespeare left it. I have therefore made very few changes in the Folio text, even at the expense of leaving loose ends or inconsistencies. (It would be wonderfully satisfying to know whom Alcibiades is pleading for in III.v.)

Two matters of special interest are related to the nature of the text: lineation and stage directions. In the text of Timon there is either serious mislineation (the printing of blank verse lines in some other form, either broken in two or run together as prose), or a failure in a number of places to write regular, five-beat, iambic lines. That is, either the compositor took wide liberties with the metrics, or the author himself made errors or allowed himself a great deal of freedom. Considering the unrevised state of the text, one is forced to conclude that the printed version is probably an accurate rendering of the copy. "Mislineation" is, therefore, a misleading term. I have generally followed the lineation of the Folio, except where lines are obviously broken into two to fill up the "cast off" space (that is, the amount of space estimated to be needed for a certain quantity of copy), or run together as prose where not enough space was allowed. The Folio lineation usually makes for good speech rhythm, with important pauses at the ends of lines. To run these lines through the blank verse meat grinder would distort their quality as dramatic speech.

How one treats the Folio stage directions of Timon also depends upon one's attitude to the text. The indications of action in this play are of the permissive and literary sort characteristic of an author's manuscript. For example, the final part of the stage direction that opens I.ii reads: "Then comes dropping after all, Apemantus, discontentedly, like himself." This is a descriptive stage direction, which would have been put into a more practical form in a promptbook prepared by the stage manager. To change this direction to "Then enter Apemantus, alone and at a distance" (as Sisson does in his fine text) is to throw away a significant Shakespearean line for the sake of some imagined modern production. In an unrevised play such as Timon there is a special sanction for retaining the obviously authorial stage directions of the Folio, which bring us closer to the original manuscript of the play than do the colorless, clarified directions of a modern editor. I have also avoided one other type of correction in the stage directions. When it is not clear who is being addressed, I have not seen fit to supply a name. In V.i, for example, Timon is upbraiding Poet and Painter in turn, but the text never specifies which one. I have simply indicated "To one" and "To the other," although in a production it would obviously have to be either to Poet or Painter. Perhaps these two characters are meant to have a Rosencrantz and Guildenstern interchangeability.

In the present text, spelling has been modernized, except that certain older forms have been retained when they are essentially different from their modern counterparts, for example, "vild" (for "vile"), "huswife" (for "housewife"), "a th'" (for "o' th'"). The punctuation has been modernized within limits, but I have generally been wary of introducing changes where the Folio pointing makes good sense. Even editors scrupulous about the language of the Folio seem not to feel bound by the punctuation. Capitalization has been modernized, and contractions not affecting pronunciation have been eliminated (especially in the verb forms). For stylistic reasons, I have omitted many traditional exclamation marks. The speech prefixes have been expanded and somewhat clarified. The list of actors' names is taken from the Folio, where it is printed (with one name given twice, and with the names in a slightly different order) at the end of the play.

Typographical errors have been corrected, and some stage directions have been slightly moved. Many traditional stage directions, not in the Folio, have been supplied in brackets. The traditional act and scene divisions and scene locations have been indicated for convenience, but the reader should recall that the action of the play was continuous and the scenes often unlocalized. The Folio indicates only "Actus Primus, Scoena Prima."

Other departures from the Folio are listed below. The reading of the present text is given first, in boldface type, and then the reading of the Folio (F) in roman.

I.i.s.d. Enter Poet, Painter, Jeweler, Merchant [F adds "and Mercer"] 21 gum, which oozes Gowne, which vses 87 hands hand; slip sit 166 satiety society 215 cost cast 282 Come Comes 291 I'll keep you company [in F part of speech of Second Lord]

I.ii.29 ever verie 114 s.d. Sound tucket [F follows this with another s.d., "Enter the Maskers of Amazons, with Lutes in their hands, dauncing and playing," incorrectly anticipating the entry at line 130; the necessary part of this s.d. is therefore added to that of line 130] 125 Th' ear There 130 First Lord First Lord Luc. 152 First Lady I Lord

II.ii.4 resumes resume 43 of broken of debt, broken 78 mistress' Masters 107 mistress' Masters 135 proposed propose 192 Flaminus Flavius 192 s.d. Enter Flaminus, Servilius, and Third Servant Enter three Seruants

III.i.s.d. with with a

III.iii.21 and I and

III.iv.s.d. two Servants man 50 ate eate 87 Hortensius 1. Var. III Sempronius—all Sempronius Vllorxa

III.v.17 An And 68 'em him

III.vi.92 with your you with 116-17 [speech prefixes reversed]

IV.i.13 Son Some 21 let yet

IV.iii.12 pasture Pastour 13 lean leaue 88 tub-fast fubfast

117 window-bars window Barne 122 thy the 157 scolds

scold'st 255 drudges drugges 256 command command'st

272 rogue ragge 284 my thy 397 them then 495 mild wilde

512 A usuring kindness, as If not a Vsuring kindnesse, and as

V.i.5-6 Phrynia and Timandra Phrinica and Timandylo 71 men man 115 s.d. Beats . . . cave Exeunt 126 chance

chanc'd 133 cauterizing Cantherizing 147 sense since 182

reverend'st reuerends

V.iv.55 Descend Defend 64 s.d. Soldier Messenger

THE LIFE OF TIMON OF ATHENS

[The Actors' Names

TIMON of Athens
LUCIUS and } two flattering lords
LUCULLUS }
SEMPRONIUS another flattering lord
VENTIDIUS one of Timon's false friends
APEMANTUS a churlish philosopher
ALCIBIADES an Athenian captain
POET
PAINTER
JEWELER
MERCHANT
[FLAVIUS steward to Timon]
FLAMINIUS one of Timon's servants
SERVILIUS another
[LUCILIUS another]

CAPHIS
PHILOTUS
TITUS
HORTENSIUS
[SERVANT to] Varro
[SERVANT to] Lucius
[SERVANT to Isidore] } several servants to [AN OLD ATHENIAN] } usurers
[THREE STRANGERS]
[A PAGE]
[A FOOL]
[PHRYNIA } mistresses to Alcibiades]
[TIMANDRA]
Certain MASKERS [as] Cupid [and Amazons]
Certain SENATORS, certain THIEVES, with divers other SERVANTS and ATTENDANTS, [LORDS, OFFICERS, SOLDIERS]

Scene: Athens and the neighboring woods]

A C T I

Scene I. [Athens. Timon's house.]

Enter POET, PAINTER, JEWELER, MERCHANT at several° doors.

POET
Good day, sir.
PAINTER I am glad y' are well.
POET
I have not seen you long; how goes the world?

The decorative border shown above appeared on the first page of Timon of Athens in the First Folio edition of Shakespeare's plays, 1623.
I.i.s.d. several separate (the Poet and Painter enter at one door, the Jeweler and Merchant at another)

PAINTER
It wears,° sir, as it grows.
POET Ay that's well known.
But what particular rarity? What strange,
Which manifold record° not matches? See, 5
Magic of bounty,° all these spirits thy power
Hath conjured to attend. I know the merchant.
PAINTER
I know them both; th' other's a jeweler.
MERCHANT
O 'tis a worthy lord.
JEWELER Nay that's most fixed.°
MERCHANT
A most incomparable man, breathed,° as it were, 10 3 wears wears out 5 manifold record many and varied records, history ("record" accented on second syllable) 6 bounty generosity 9 fixed certain 10 breathed exercised, trained

To an untirable and continue^o goodness.

He passes.^o

JEWELER I have a jewel here—

MERCHANT

O pray let's see't. For the Lord Timon, sir?

JEWELER

If he will touch the estimate.^o But for that—

POET [Aside to PAINTER.]

When we for recompense have praised the vild,^o

It stains the glory in that happy^o verse

Which aptly sings the good.

MERCHANT [Looking at the jewel.] 'Tis a good form.

JEWELER

And rich. Here is a water,^o look ye.

PAINTER

You are rapt, sir, in some work, some dedication
To the great lord.

POET A thing slipped idly from me.

Our poesy is as a gum, which oozes

From whence 'tis nourished. The fire i' th' flint

Shows not till it be struck; our gentle flame

Provokes itself,^o and like the current flies

Each bound it chases.^o What have you there?

PAINTER

A picture, sir. When comes your book forth?

POET

Upon the heels of my presentment,^o sir.

Let's see your piece.

PAINTER

'Tis a good piece.

POET

So 'tis; this comes off well and excellent.

PAINTER

Indifferent.^o

POET Admirable. How this grace

Speaks his own standing!^o What a mental power

This eye shoots forth! How big^o imagination

Moves in this lip! To th' dumbness^o of the gesture

One might interpret.^o

PAINTER

It is a pretty mocking^o of the life.

Here is a touch—is't good?

POET

I will say of it,

It tutors nature; artificial strife^o

Lives in these touches, livelier than life.

Enter certain SENATORS, [who pass over the stage and exeunt].

PAINTER

How this lord is followed!

POET

The Senators of Athens, happy men!

PAINTER

Look, moe!^o

POET

You see this confluence, this great flood of visitors:

I have in this rough work shaped out a man

Whom this beneath world^o doth embrace and hug

With amplest entertainment. My free drift

Halts not particularly,^o but moves itself

In a wide sea of wax;^o no leveled^o malice

Infects one comma in the course I hold,

But flies an eagle flight, bold and forth on,

Leaving no tract^o behind.

PAINTER

How shall I understand you?

POET

I will unbolt to you.

You see how all conditions,^o how all minds,

As well of glib and slipp'ry creatures as

Of grave and austere quality, tender down^o

Their services to Lord Timon. His large fortune,

Upon his good and gracious nature hanging,

Subdues and properties^o to his love and tendance^o

All sorts of hearts; yea, from the glass-faced^o flatterer

To Apemantus, that few things loves better

Than to abhor himself—even he drops down

The knee before him, and returns in peace

Most rich in Timon's nod.

PAINTER

I saw them speak together.

POET

Sir, I have upon a high and pleasant hill

Feigned^o Fortune to be throned. The base o' th' mount

Is ranked with all deserts,^o all kind of natures

That labor on the bosom of this sphere

To propagate their states.^o Amongst them all,

Whose eyes are on this sovereign lady fixed,

One do I personate of Lord Timon's frame,^o

Whom Fortune with her ivory hand^o wafts to her,

Whose present^o grace^o to present slaves and servants

Translates^o his rivals.

PAINTER

'Tis conceived to scope.^o

This throne, this Fortune, and this hill, methinks,

With one man beckoned from the rest below,

Bowing his head against the steepy mount

To climb his happiness, would be well expressed

In our condition.

POET

Nay, sir, but hear me on.

All those which were his fellows but of late,

Some better than his value, on the moment

Follow his strides, his lobbies fill with tendance,

Rain sacrificial whisperings^o in his ear,

44 beneath world sublunary world (Timon as the moon)

46 particularly at individuals 47 sea of wax either a sea of inspiration as easily molded as wax—not limited to a mere writing tablet of wax—or perhaps a waxing sea swelling with inspiration; leveled aimed (at one person) 50 tract either "trace" or "track" 52 conditions (1) social classes

(2) temperaments 54 tender down offer (as one offers money) 57 properties appropriates; tendance attendance

58 glass-faced mirror-faced 64 Feigned imagined 65 deserts degrees of worth 67 propagate their states increase their possessions 69 frame (1) disposition (2) physical stature

70 ivory hand hand white and smooth as ivory (this is the right hand of Fortune, with which she distributes her favors; with the left, or dark, hand she takes them away) 71 present (1) existing now (2) immediate; grace graciousness, generosity

72 Translates transforms; to scope to the purpose, just right

81 sacrificial whisperings lines 81–83 suggest the hieratic atmosphere surrounding Timon, now high in Fortune's favor

11 continue uninterrupted 12 passes surpasses 14 touch the estimate offer the expected price 15 vild vile 16 happy fortunate 18 water luster (of a jewel) 23–24 our . . . itself
the inspiration of poets is spontaneous, not externally provoked like the "fire i' th' flint" 25 Each . . . chases i.e., the stream flows towards the shore but rebounds upon contact 27 presentment presentation (to Timon) 30 Indifferent neither good nor bad 31 standing dignity, social status 32 big adverb 33 dumbness silence (as in a dumb show) 34 interpret supply words 35 mocking imitation 37 artificial strife the striving of art to outdo nature 41 moe more

Make sacred even his stirrup, and through him
Drink° the free air.

PAINTER Ay marry,° what of these?

POET

When Fortune in her shift and change of mood
Spurns down her late beloved, all his dependants 85
Which labored after him to the mountain's top,
Even on their knees and hands, let him slip down,
Not one accompanying his declining foot.

PAINTER

'Tis common.

A thousand moral paintings° I can show 90
That shall demonstrate° these quick° blows of Fortune's
More pregnantly than words. Yet you do well
To show Lord Timon that mean° eyes have seen
The foot above the head.°

Trumpets sound. Enter Lord TIMON, addressing himself courteously to every suitor; [a MESSENGER from Ventidius talking with him; LUCILIUS and other SERVANTS following].

TIMON Imprisoned is he, say you?

MESSENGER

Ay, my good lord; five talents° is his debt, 95
His means most short, his creditors most strait.°
Your honorable letter he desires
To those have shut him up, which failing,
Periods° his comfort.

TIMON Noble Ventidius—well.

I am not of that feather° to shake off 100
My friend when he must need me. I do know him
A gentleman that well deserves a help,
Which he shall have. I'll pay the debt and free him.

MESSENGER

Your lordship ever binds° him.

TIMON

Commend me to him; I will send his ransom, 105
And being enfranchised bid him come to me.
'Tis not enough to help the feeble up,
But to support him after. Fare you well.

MESSENGER

All happiness to your honor. Exit.

Enter an OLD ATHENIAN.

OLD ATHENIAN

Lord Timon, hear me speak.

TIMON Freely, good father. 110

OLD ATHENIAN

Thou hast a servant named Lucilius.

TIMON

I have so. What of him?

OLD ATHENIAN

Most noble Timon, call the man before thee.

TIMON

Attends he here or no? Lucilius!

LUCILIUS

Here at your lordship's service. 115

OLD ATHENIAN

This fellow° here, Lord Timon, this thy creature,°
By night frequents my house. I am a man
That from my first have been inclined to thrift,
And my estate deserves an heir more raised
Than one which holds a trencher.°

TIMON

Well; what further? 120

OLD ATHENIAN

One only daughter have I, no kin else,
On whom I may confer what I have got.
The maid is fair, a° th' youngest for a bride,
And I have bred her at my dearest cost
In qualities of the best. This man of thine 125
Attempts her love. I prithee, noble lord,
Join with me to forbid him her resort;°
Myself have spoke in vain.

TIMON

The man is honest.

OLD ATHENIAN

Therefore he will be,° Timon.
His honesty rewards him in itself; 130
It must not bear° my daughter.

TIMON

Does she love him?

OLD ATHENIAN

She is young and apt.
Our own precedent° passions do instruct us
What levity's in youth.

TIMON

Love you the maid?

LUCILIUS

Ay, my good lord, and she accepts of it. 135

OLD ATHENIAN

If in her marriage my consent be missing,
I call the gods to witness, I will choose
Mine heir from forth the beggars of the world,
And dispossess her all.°

TIMON

How shall she be endowed,

If she be mated with an equal° husband? 140

OLD ATHENIAN

Three talents on the present;° in future, all.

TIMON

This gentleman of mine hath served me long.
To build his fortune I will strain a little,
For 'tis a bond° in men. Give him thy daughter;
What you bestow, in him I'll counterpoise,° 145
And make him weigh with her.

OLD ATHENIAN

Most noble lord,

Pawn me to this your honor, she is his.

TIMON

My hand to thee, mine honor on my promise.

LUCILIUS

Humbly I thank your lordship; never may

83 Drink breathe; marry indeed (originally "By the Virgin Mary") 90 moral paintings allegorical pictures (especially wall hangings) 91 demonstrate accented on second syllable; quick (1) swift (2) full of life 93 mean lowly 94 foot . . . head in the quick changes that Fortune brings, the foot of the lowliest may suddenly appear above the head of the highest 95 five talents see Introduction, p. 1367 96 strait strict 99 Periods puts an end to 100 feather character 104 binds attaches by ties of gratitude (with play on "free" in line 103)

116 fellow, creature terms of contempt 120 trencher wooden plate or shallow dish on which meat is served (a servant who waits on tables would hold a trencher) 123 a a worn-down form for "of" 127 her resort resort or access to her 129 Therefore . . . be since Lucilius is honest (or honorable), he will therefore show his honesty by not pursuing the Old Athenian's daughter 131 bear carry away 133 precedent former (accented on second syllable) 139 all completely 140 equal either socially or financially 141 on the present at once 144 bond obligation 145 counterpoise counterbalance

That state or fortune fall into my keeping,
Which is not owed° to you.

Exit [LUCILIUS, with OLD ATHENIAN].

POET

Vouchsafe° my labor, and long live your lordship.

TIMON

I thank you; you shall hear from me anon.
Go not away. What have you there, my friend?

PAINTER

A piece of painting, which I do beseech
Your lordship to accept.

TIMON

Painting is welcome.

The painting is almost the natural man;
For since dishonor traffics° with man's nature,
He is but outside.° These penciled° figures are Even such as they give out.° I like your work,
And you shall find I like it. Wait attendance
Till you hear further from me.

PAINTER

The gods preserve ye.

TIMON

Well fare you, gentleman. Give me your hand;
We must needs dine together. Sir, your jewel
Hath suffered under praise.°

JEWELER

What, my lord, dispraise? 165

TIMON

A mere° satiety of commendations.
If I should pay you for't as 'tis extolled,
It would unclaw° me quite.

JEWELER

My lord, 'tis rated

As those which sell would give.° But you well know,
Things of like value, differing in the owners,
Are prized by their masters.° Believe't, dear lord,
You mend° the jewel by the wearing it.

TIMON Well mocked.°

MERCHANT

No, my good lord; he speaks the common tongue°
Which all men speak with him.

Enter APEMANTUS.

TIMON

Look who comes here; will you be chid?

JEWELER

We'll bear with your lordship.

MERCHANT

He'll spare none.

TIMON

Good morrow to thee, gentle° Apemantus.

APEMANTUS

Till I be gentle, stay thou for thy good morrow—
When thou art Timon's dog, and these knaves honest. 180

150 TIMON

Why dost thou call them knaves, thou know'st them
not?

APEMANTUS Are they not Athenians?

TIMON Yes.

APEMANTUS Then I repent not.

JEWELER You know me, Apemantus? 185

APEMANTUS Thou know'st I do, I called thee by thy name.

TIMON Thou art proud, Apemantus.

155

APEMANTUS Of nothing so much as that I am not like
Timon. 190

TIMON Whither art going?

APEMANTUS To knock out an honest Athenian's brains.

TIMON That's a deed thou't die for.

160

APEMANTUS Right, if doing nothing be death by th'
law. 195

TIMON How lik'st thou this picture, Apemantus?

APEMANTUS The best, for the innocence.°

TIMON Wrought he not well that painted it?

APEMANTUS He wrought better that made the painter, and yet he's but a filthy° piece of work. 200

PAINTER Y' are a dog.°

APEMANTUS Thy mother's of my generation.° What's she, if I be a dog?

TIMON Wilt dine with me, Apemantus? 205

APEMANTUS No. I eat not lords.

TIMON And° thou shouldst, thou'dst anger ladies.

APEMANTUS O they eat lords; so they come by great bellies.°

170

TIMON That's a lascivious apprehension. 210

APEMANTUS So, thou apprehend'st it, take it for thy labor.

TIMON How dost thou like this jewel, Apemantus?

APEMANTUS Not so well as plain-dealing, which will not cost a man a doit.° 215

175

TIMON What dost thou think 'tis worth?

APEMANTUS Not worth my thinking. How now,
poet?

POET How now, philosopher?

APEMANTUS Thou liest. 220

POET Art not one?

APEMANTUS Yes.

POET Then I lie not.

APEMANTUS Art not a poet?

POET Yes. 225

APEMANTUS Then thou liest.° Look in thy last work, where thou hast feigned him° a worthy fellow.

POET That's not feigned, he is so.

APEMANTUS Yes, he is worthy of thee, and to pay thee for thy labor. He that loves to be flattered is worthy o' th' flatterer. Heavens, that I were a lord! 230

TIMON What wouldst do then, Apemantus?

151 owed (1) acknowledged to you as the cause of it (2) due to you as a debt 152 Vouchsafe deign to accept 158 traffics deals (pejorative sense) 159 but outside merely external, a false semblance; penciled painted 160 Even . . . out i.e., painting, in contrast with human nature, is honest; it make no pretense to be something other than what it appears to be 165 under praise in being praised, since the jewel is beyond praise (but the Jeweler takes it in the sense of "dispraise") 166 mere absolute 168 unclaw undo 169 As . . . give i.e., at the wholesale price 171 Are . . . masters are valued according to the social status of their owners 172 mend improve 173 mocked simulated (i.e., I know your flattery is only part of your sales talk) 174 speaks . . . tongue says what everyone is saying 178 gentle (1) well-born (a conventional complimentary epithet) (2) mild

198 innocence (1) harmlessness (2) foolishness 201 filthy contemptible 202 dog Apemantus is a Cynic philosopher; "cynic" is derived from the Greek word for dog 203 generation (1) breed (2) persons born at about the same time 207 And if 208-09 come . . . bellies become pregnant 215 doit a small Dutch coin worth less than a farthing (used as a type expression for any very small sum) 226 liest a play on the old idea that poetry is a mimesis, imitation, mocking, or feigning of reality and therefore a lie 227 him Timon

APEMANTUS E'en as Apemantus does now: hate a lord with my heart.

TIMON What, thyself?

APEMANTUS Ay.

TIMON Wherefore?

APEMANTUS That I had no angry wit to be a lord.^o Art not thou a merchant?

MERCHANT Ay, Apemantus.

APEMANTUS Traffic^o confound thee, if the gods will not.

MERCHANT If traffic do it, the gods do it.

APEMANTUS Traffic's thy god, and thy god confound thee.

Trumpet sounds. Enter a MESSENGER.

TIMON

What trumpet's that?

MESSENGER

'Tis Alcibiades and some twenty horse,^o

All of companionship.^o

TIMON

Pray entertain them, give them guide to us.

[Exeunt some ATTENDANTS.]

You must needs dine with me. Go not you hence

Till I have thanked you. When dinner's done

Show me this piece. I am joyful of your sights.^o

Enter ALCIBIADES, with the rest.

Most welcome, sir.

APEMANTUS So, so.

Their^o aches^o contract and starve^o your supple joints! That there should be small love amongst these sweet knaves,

And all this courtesy! The strain of man's bred out Into baboon and monkey.

ALCIBIADES

Sir, you have saved^o my longing, and I feed

Most hungerly on your sight.

TIMON Right welcome, sir.

Ere we depart, we'll share a bounteous time

In different pleasures. Pray you let us in.

Exeunt [all but APEMANTUS].

Enter two LORDS.

FIRST LORD What time a day is't, Apemantus?

APEMANTUS Time to be honest.

FIRST LORD That time serves still.^o

APEMANTUS The most accursèd thou that still omit'st^o it.

SECOND LORD Thou art going to Lord Timon's feast?

APEMANTUS Ay, to see meat fill knaves and wine heat fools.

SECOND LORD Fare thee well, fare thee well.

APEMANTUS Thou art a fool to bid me farewell twice.

238 no . . . lord no more wit in my anger than to wish to be a lord (?) 241 Traffic trade, business 247 horse horsemen 248 All of companionship all of the same party 252 of your sights at the sight of you 254 Their of Alcibiades and his soldiers; aches the reference is probably to venereal disease—"aches" is dissyllabic, pronounced "aitches"; starve destroy 258 saved anticipated and so prevented 264 still always 266 omit'st neglects

SECOND LORD Why, Apemantus?

APEMANTUS Shouldst have kept one to thyself, for I mean to give thee none.

FIRST LORD Hang thyself!

APEMANTUS No, I will do nothing at thy bidding. Make thy requests to thy friend.

SECOND LORD Away, unpeaceable^o dog, or I'll spurn thee hence.

APEMANTUS I will fly like a dog the heels a th' ass.

[Exit.]

FIRST LORD

He's opposite to^o humanity. Come, shall we in

And taste Lord Timon's bounty? He outgoes

The very heart of kindness.

SECOND LORD

He pours it out. Plutus, the god of gold,

Is but his steward; no meed^o but he repays

Sevenfold above itself. No gift to him

But breeds the giver a return exceeding

All use of quittance.^o

FIRST LORD The noblest mind he carries^o

That ever governed man.

SECOND LORD Long may he live

In fortunes. Shall we in?

FIRST LORD I'll keep you company. Exeunt.

[Scene II. Timon's house.]

Hautboys^o playing loud music. A great banquet served in; and then enter Lord TIMON, the STATES,^o the Athenian LORDS, VENTIDIUS (which Timon redeemed from prison), [and ALCIBIADES. STEWARD and others attending.] Then comes dropping after all, APEMANTUS, discontentedly, like himself.

VENTIDIUS

Most honored Timon,

It hath pleased the gods to remember my father's age, And call him to long peace.

He is gone happy, and has left me rich.

Then, as in grateful virtue I am bound

To your free^o heart, I do return those talents

Doubled with thanks and service, from whose help I derived liberty.

TIMON O by no means,

Honest Ventidius. You mistake my love;

I gave it freely ever, and there's none

Can truly say he gives, if he receives.

If our betters^o play at that game, we must not dare

To imitate them; faults that are rich are fair.^o

VENTIDIUS

A noble spirit.

TIMON

Nay, my lords, ceremony^o was but devised at first

279 unpeaceable quarrelsome 282 opposite to (1) hostile to (2) the reverse of 286 meed (1) merit, desert (2) gift (?) 289 All . . . quittance all the customary returns made in repayment of debts (one meaning of "use" is "interest"); carries bears

I.ii.s.d. Hautboys oboes; the States persons of state, the senators 6 free generous 12 our betters those of higher rank 13 faults . . . fair the faults of rich persons are made to seem attractive because of their wealth 15 ceremony ceremonious attitudes

To set a gloss on faint deeds, hollow welcomes,
 Recanting goodness, sorry ere 'tis shown.
 But where there is true friendship, there needs none.
 Pray sit; more welcome are ye to my fortunes
 Than my fortunes to me.

20

FIRST LORD

My lord, we always have confessed it.

APEMANTUS

Ho, ho, confessed it? Hanged it,° have you not?

TIMON

O Apemantus, you are welcome.

APEMANTUS

No, you shall not make me welcome.

I come to have thee thrust me out of doors.

25

TIMON

Fie, th' art a churl, y' have got a humor° there

Does not become a man; 'tis much to blame.

They say, my lords, Ira furor brevis est,° but yond man is ever angry. Go, let him have a table by himself, for he does neither affect° company, nor is he fit for't 30 indeed.

APEMANTUS Let me stay at thine apperil,° Timon. I come to observe, I give thee warning on't.

TIMON I take no heed of thee. Th' art an Athenian, therefore welcome. I myself would have no power;° 35
 prithee let my meat make thee silent.

APEMANTUS I scorn thy meat; 'twould choke me, for I should ne'er flatter thee.° O you gods! What a number of men eats Timon, and he sees 'em not! It grieves me to see so many dip their meat in one man's 40 blood, and all the madness is, he cheers them up too.
 I wonder men dare trust themselves with men.

Methinks they should invite them without knives:°

Good for their meat, and safer for their lives.

There's much example for't; the fellow that sits next 45 him, now parts bread with him, pledges the breath of him in a divided draught,° is the readiest man to kill him. 'T'as been proved. If I were a huge° man, I should fear to drink at meals,

Lest they should spy my windpipe's dangerous notes;° 50
 Great men should drink with harness° on their throats.

TIMON

My lord, in heart;° and let the health go round.

SECOND LORD

Let it flow this way, my good lord.

APEMANTUS Flow this way? A brave° fellow. He keeps his tides° well. Those healths will make thee and 55 thy state° look ill, Timon.

Here's that which is too weak to be a sinner,

Honest water, which ne'er left man i' th' mire.

22 confessed . . . it an allusion to the proverb "Confess and be hanged" 26 humor temperamental quirk (in the old physiological sense of the four humors) 28 Ira . . . est anger is a brief fury or madness (Horace, Epistles, I.ii.62) 30 affect (1) like (2) seek out 32 apperil peril 35 no power i.e., to force you to be silent 37-38 'twould . . . thee Apemantus would prefer to choke on Timon's meat than to flatter him 43 knives dinner guests customarily brought their own knives 47 a divided draught a drink from a cup that is passed around the table 48 huge important 50 Lest . . . notes lest men should cut my throat when my head is tilted backward (with additional allusion to the windpipe as a musical instrument, like a bagpipe) 51 harness armor 52 My . . . heart a toast 54 brave excellent 55 tides times (with play on the usual sense, linked to "flow") 56 state estate, fortune

This and my food are equals, there's no odds;
 Feasts° are too proud to give thanks to the gods.

60

Apemantus' Grace.

Immortal gods, I crave no pelf;°

I pray for no man but myself.

Grant I may never prove so fond°

To trust man on his oath or bond,

Or a harlot for her weeping,

65

Or a dog that seems a-sleeping,

Or a keeper° with my freedom,

Or my friends if I should need 'em.

Amen. So fall to't:

Rich men sin, and I eat root.

70

[Eats and drinks.]

Much good dich° thy good heart, Apemantus.

TIMON Captain Alcibiades, your heart's in the field now.

ALCIBIADES My heart is ever at your service, my
 lord.

75

TIMON You had rather be at a breakfast of° enemies than a dinner of friends.

ALCIBIADES So° they were bleeding new, my lord, there's no meat like 'em; I could wish my best friend at such a feast.

80

APEMANTUS Would all those flatterers were thine enemies then, that then thou mightst kill 'em—and bid° me to 'em.

FIRST LORD Might we but have that happiness, my lord, that you would once use our hearts,° whereby 85 we might express some part of our zeals, we should think ourselves for ever perfect.°

TIMON O no doubt, my good friends, but the gods themselves have provided that I shall have much help from you: how had you been my friends else? Why 90 have you that charitable° title from° thousands, did not you chiefly belong to my heart? I have told more of you to myself than you can with modesty speak in your own behalf; and thus far I confirm° you. O you gods, think I, what need we have any friends, if we 95 should ne'er have need of 'em? They were the most needless creatures living should we ne'er have use for 'em, and would most resemble sweet instruments hung up in cases, that keeps their sounds to themselves. Why
 I have often wished myself poorer that I might come 100 nearer° to you. We are born to do benefits; and what better or properer can we call our own than the riches of our friends? O what a precious comfort 'tis to have so many like brothers commanding one another's fortunes. O joy's e'en made away ere't can be born.° 105 Mine eyes cannot hold out water,° methinks. To forget their faults,° I drink to you.

60 Feasts i.e., those who give feasts 61 pelf possessions 63 fond foolish 67 keeper jailer 71 dich may it do (?) 76 of consisting of (but later in the sentence it means "with") 78 So provided that 83 bid invite 85 use our hearts i.e., make trial of the feelings in our hearts 87 perfect i.e., in our happiness in demonstrating our love for Timon 91 charitable loving, kindly; from from among 94 confirm sanction, corroborate (your claims as friends) 101 nearer (1) closer to your hearts (2) closer to your financial status 105 e'en . . . born our weeping for joy seems to destroy joy before it properly exists 106 hold out water keep out tears 107 faults defects

APEMANTUS Thou weep'st to make them drink,^o
Timon.

SECOND LORD

Joy had the like conception^o in our eyes,
And at that instant like a babe sprung up.^o 110

APEMANTUS

Ho, ho! I laugh to think that babe a bastard.

THIRD LORD

I promise you, my lord, you moved me much.

APEMANTUS Much.

Sound tucket.^o

TIMON

What means that trump?

Enter SERVANT.

How now?

SERVANT Please you, my lord, there are certain ladies most desirous of admittance. 115

TIMON Ladies? What are their wills?

SERVANT There comes with them a forerunner, my lord, which bears that office to signify their pleasures.^o 120

TIMON I pray let them be admitted.

[Enter CUPID.]

CUPID

Hail to thee, worthy Timon, and to all
That of his bounties taste. The five best senses
Acknowledge thee their patron, and come freely
To gratulate^o thy plenteous bosom. Th' ear,
Taste, touch, all, pleased from thy table rise;
They only now come but to feast thine eyes.^o 125

TIMON

They're welcome all; let 'em have kind admittance.
Music^o make their welcome. [Exit CUPID.]

FIRST LORD

You see, my lord, how ample y' are beloved. 130

[Music.] Enter CUPID, with the masque^o of LADIES [as] Amazons,^o with lutes in their hands, dancing and playing.

APEMANTUS

Hoy-day!^o

What a sweep^o of vanity comes this way.

They dance? They are madwomen.

Like^o madness is the glory^o of this life,

As this pomp shows to^o a little oil and root.

We make ourselves fools to disport^o ourselves,

And spend our flatteries to drink^o those men 135

Upon whose age we void^o it up again

With poisonous spite and envy.^o

Who lives that's not depravèd or depraves?^o 140

Who dies that bears not one spurn^o to their graves

Of their friends' gift?^o

I should fear those that dance before me now

Would one day stamp upon me. 'T'as been done.

Men shut their doors against a setting sun. 145

The LORDS rise from table, with much adoring of^o TIMON, and to show their loves, each single out an Amazon, and all dance, men with women, a lofty strain or two to the hautboys, and cease.

TIMON

You have done our pleasures much grace, fair ladies,

Set a fair fashion on^o our entertainment,

Which was not half so beautiful and kind.^o 115

You have added worth unto't and luster,

And entertained me with mine own device.^o 150

I am to thank you for't.

FIRST LADY

My lord, you take us even at the best.^o

APEMANTUS Faith, for the worst is filthy, and would not hold taking,^o I doubt me.^o

TIMON

Ladies, there is an idle banquet^o attends you, 155

Please you to dispose yourselves.^o

ALL LADIES

Most thankfully, my lord.

Exeunt [CUPID and LADIES].

125 TIMON Flavius.

FLAVIUS

My lord.

TIMON The little casket bring me hither.

FLAVIUS

Yes, my lord. [Aside.] More jewels yet? 160

There is no crossing him in's humor,^o

Else I should tell him well, i' faith I should,

When all's spent, he'd be crossed^o then, and^o he could.

'Tis pity bounty had not eyes behind,

That man might ne'er be wretched for his mind.^o 165

Exit.

FIRST LORD

Where be our men?

SERVANT

Here, my lord, in readiness.

135 SECOND LORD

Our horses.

Enter FLAVIUS [with the casket].

138 void vomit 139 envy malice 140 depravèd or depraves slandered or a slanderer 141 spurn insult 142 gift giving 145 s.d. adoring of paying homage to 147
Set . . . on given a pleasant semblance to 148 kind gracious 150 mine own device suggests that Timon designed the masque or at least had the idea for it 152 take . . . best judge us in the most favorable and complimentary way 153-54 would . . . taking sexual "taking" is not possible because of rottenness caused by venereal disease 154 doubt me fear, suspect (reflexive) 155 idle banquet trifling dessert or light collation 156 Please . . . yourselves if you please to take your places 161 no . . . humor no thwarting him in his capricious disposition 163 crossed (1) thwarted (2) have his debts canceled ("crossed" off a list) (3) be given money (have his palm "crossed"); and if 165 for his mind for his generous inclinations

108 to . . . drink (1) to provide drink for them (they drink up your tears, and you and your estate, too) (2) to furnish a pretext for their carousing 110 the like conception a similar birth (i.e., accompanied with tears) 111 like . . . up i.e., the sight of Timon's joy immediately caused the birth of a like joy in the eyes of his friends 114 s.d. tucket a flourish on a trumpet 120 pleasures wishes 125 gratulate (1) greet (2) gratify, please 127 but . . . eyes only to appeal to the sense of sight, whereas at Timon's banquet all the senses were gratified 129 Music let music 130 s.d. masque an elaborate allegorical show or entertainment with emphasis on spectacle, music, and dance; Amazons legendary female warriors 131 Hoy-day exclamation of surprise 132 sweep in reference to the sweeping motion of the dancers 134 Like similar; glory vainglory 135 to compared to 136 disport amuse 137 drink drink the health of

TIMON

O my friends,
I have one word to say to you. Look you, my good
lord,
I must entreat you honor me so much
As to advance° this jewel; accept it and wear it,
Kind my lord.

FIRST LORD

I am so far already in your gifts—

ALL

So are we all.

Enter a SERVANT.

SERVANT My lord, there are certain nobles of the Senate newly alighted, and come to visit you.

TIMON They are fairly° welcome.

FLAVIUS I beseech your honor, vouchsafe me a word;
it does concern you near.

TIMON Near? Why then another time I'll hear thee.
I prithee let's be provided to show them entertainment.

FLAVIUS [Aside.] I scarce know how.

Enter another SERVANT.

SECOND SERVANT

May it please your honor, Lord Lucius,
Out of his free love, hath presented to you
Four milk-white horses, trapped in silver.°

TIMON

I shall accept them fairly. Let the presents
Be worthily entertained.°

Enter a THIRD SERVANT.

How now? What news?

THIRD SERVANT Please you, my lord, that honorable gentleman Lord Lucullus entreats your company 190 tomorrow to hunt with him, and has sent your honor two brace° of greyhounds.

TIMON

I'll hunt with him, and let them be received
Not without fair reward.

FLAVIUS [Aside.] What will this come to?

He commands us to provide, and give great gifts,
And all out of an empty coffer;
Nor will he know his purse, or yield° me this,
To show him what a beggar his heart is,
Being of no power to make his wishes good.
His promises fly so beyond his state°
That what he speaks is all in debt; he owes for ev'ry word.

He is so kind that he now pays interest for't;
His land's put to their books.° Well, would I were Gently put out of office before I were forced out.
Happier is he that has no friend to feed
Than such that do e'en enemies exceed.°
I bleed inwardly for my lord.

Exit.

TIMON

You do yourselves much wrong,

172 advance enhance in value (by your wearing it) 178 fairly courteously 186 trapped in silver with harness coverings adorned in silver 188 worthily entertained appropriately received 192 two brace two pairs 197 yield grant 200 state estate, possessions 203 put . . . books mortgaged (entered on creditors' account books) 206 Than
. . . exceed (1) than such a number that surpasses the number of one's enemies (2) than such sort of friends whose demands go beyond those of one's enemies

You bate° too much of your own merits.

Here, my lord, a trifle of our love.

210

SECOND LORD

With more than common thanks I will receive it.

THIRD LORD

O he's the very soul of bounty.

TIMON And now I remember, my lord, you gave good words the other day of a bay courser° I rode on.
'Tis yours because you liked it.

215

FIRST LORD

O I beseech you pardon me, my lord, in that.°

TIMON You may take my word, my lord, I know no man can justly praise but what he does affect.° I weigh° my friend's affection with° mine own. I'll tell you true, I'll call to you.°

220

ALL LORDS

O none so welcome.

TIMON

I take all and your several° visitations
So kind to heart, 'tis not enough to give.°
Methinks I could deal° kingdoms to my friends,
And ne'er be weary. Alcibiades,
Thou art a soldier, therefore seldom rich;
It° comes in charity to thee, for all thy living°
Is 'mongst the dead, and all the lands thou hast
Lie in a pitched field.°

225

ALCIBIADES

Ay, defiled° land, my lord.

230

FIRST LORD

We are so virtuously bound—

TIMON

And so am I to you.

SECOND LORD

So infinitely endeared°—

TIMON

All to you.° Lights, more lights!

FIRST LORD

The best of happiness, honor, and fortunes
Keep with you, Lord Timon.

235

TIMON

Ready for his friends.

Exeunt LORDS.

APEMANTUS

What a coil's° here,
Serving of becks° and jutting out of bums!°
I doubt whether their legs° be worth the sums
That are given for 'em. Friendship's full of dregs;
Methinks false hearts should never have sound legs.°
Thus honest fools lay out their wealth on curtsies.°

240

209 bate abate, undervalue 214 bay courser reddish-brown stallion 216 in that in accepting your gift (because I seemed to solicit it) 218 affect like, desire to possess;
weigh consider 219 with equal with 219–20 I'll tell . . . you
I assure you I will call on you 222 all . . . several the sum total (an intensive form) 223 'tis . . . give mere gifts, no matter how great, cannot truly express the feeling in my heart 224 deal distribute 227 It what you receive, a gift; living
(1) existence (2) property (3) livelihood 229 pitched field field prepared for a battle 230 defiled land a quibble on the proverb, "He that toucheth pitch shall be defiled," Ecclesiasticus 13:1 233 endeared indebted 234 All to you I am all these things to you rather than vice versa 237 coil fuss, bustle, confusion 238 Serving of becks offering of nods or curtsies; bums posteriors 239 legs (1) bows (cf. "to make a leg") (2) the limbs themselves 241 sound legs legs healthy enough to make obeisances 242 curtsies (1) bows (2) courtesies (a different spelling of the same word)

TIMON

Now Apemantus, if thou wert not sullen,
I would be good to thee.

APEMANTUS No, I'll nothing; for if I should be bribed too, there would be none left to rail upon° thee, and then thou wouldst sin the faster. Thou giv'st so long, Timon, I fear me thou wilt give away thyself in paper° shortly. What needs these feasts, pomps, and vainglories? 245

TIMON Nay, and you begin to rail on society once, I am sworn not to give regard to you. Farewell, and come with better music. Exit.

APEMANTUS So. Thou wilt not hear me now, thou shalt not then.° 255
I'll lock thy heaven° from thee.
O that men's ears should be
To counsel deaf, but not to flattery. Exit.

[A C T I I]

[Scene I. A senator's house.]

Enter a SENATOR.

SENATOR

And late° five thousand. To Varro and to Isidore
He owes nine thousand, besides my former sum,
Which makes it five and twenty. Still° in motion
Of raging waste? It cannot hold,° it will not.
If I want gold, steal but a beggar's dog 5
And give it Timon—why the dog coins gold.
If I would sell my horse and buy twenty moe
Better than he—why give my horse to Timon;
Ask nothing, give it him, it foals me straight,°
And able horses. No porter° at his gate, 10
But rather one that smiles, and still invites
All that pass by. It cannot hold; no reason
Can sound his state in safety.° Caphis, ho!
Caphis, I say!

Enter CAPHIS.

CAPHIS Here, sir, what is your pleasure?

SENATOR

Get on your cloak, and haste you to Lord Timon;
Importune him for my moneys; be not ceased 15
With slight denial; nor then silenced when “Commend me to your master” and the cap
Plays in the right hand, thus°—but tell him,
My uses° cry to me; I must serve my turn 20
Out of mine own;° his days and times° are past,

And my reliances on his fracted° dates
Have smit my credit. I love and honor him,
But must not break my back to heal his finger.
Immediate are my needs, and my relief 25
Must not be tossed and turned to me in words,
But find supply immediate. Get you gone;
Put on a most importunate aspect,°
A visage of demand; for I do fear,
When every feather sticks in his own wing,° 30
Lord Timon will be left a naked gull,°
Which flashes now a phoenix.° Get you gone.

CAPHIS

I go, sir.

SENATOR

Ay, go sir! Take the bonds along with you,
And have the dates in.° Come!

CAPHIS

I will, sir.

SENATOR

Go! Exeunt. 35

[Scene II. Timon's house.]

Enter [FLAVIUS, the] steward, with many bills in his hand.

FLAVIUS

No care, no stop, so senseless of expense
That he will neither know how to maintain it,
Nor cease his flow of riot.° Takes no accompt
How things go from him, nor resumes no care°
Of what is to continue. Never mind 5
Was to be so unwise to be so kind.°
What shall be done he will not hear, till feel.
I must be round° with him, now he comes from hunting.
Fie, fie, fie, fie!

Enter CAPHIS, [with the SERVANTS of] Isidore and Varro. 10

CAPHIS

Good even, Varro. What, you come for money? 10

VARRO'S SERVANT

Is't not your business too?

CAPHIS

It is; and yours too, Isidore?

ISIDORE'S SERVANT It is so.

CAPHIS

Would we were all discharged.°

VARRO'S SERVANT I fear it.° 15

CAPHIS

Here comes the lord.

Enter TIMON and his TRAIN, [and ALCIBIADES]. 20

TIMON

So soon as dinner's done, we'll forth again,

246 rail upon revile 248–49 in paper in promissory notes and other paper records of debts 254–55 thou . . . then you will not be able to listen to me later, when you are bankrupt 256 thy heaven i.e., the advice by which I might have saved you from ruin

II.i.1 late lately 3 Still always 4 hold last 9 straight immediately 10 No porter because a porter's function is to keep out undesirable persons 12–13 no . . . safety because Timon is insolvent, no reasonable person can safely fathom or test his estate (“sound” in its nautical sense) 18–19 “Commend
. . . thus examples of anticipated ceremonious delays by Timon 20 uses financial needs 21 mine own my own money; days and times due dates of his debts

22 fracted broken 28 aspect accented on second syllable
30 sticks . . . wing is returned to the bird to which it belongs
(i.e., when Timon's debts, and the security he has given for them, are settled) 31 gull (1) unfledged bird (2) credulous dupe 32 phoenix a rare legendary bird which immolated itself and was reborn from its own ashes; a unique or matchless person 35 have . . . in put in the exact dates when the bonds fall due
II.ii.3 riot extravagance, irresponsible reveling 4 resumes no care has no concern 6 to . . . kind (1) as to be so generous
(2) in order to be so generous 8 round blunt 14 discharged paid (of a debt) 15 I fear it I doubt it

My Alcibiades. [To CAPHIS.] With me, what is your will?

CAPHIS

My lord, here is a note of certain dues.

TIMON

Dues? Whence are you?

CAPHIS Of Athens here, my lord. 20

TIMON

Go to my steward.

CAPHIS

Please it your lordship, he hath put me off
To the succession of new days° this month.

My master is awaked by great occasion

To call upon his own, and humbly prays you 25

That with your other noble parts you'll suit°

In giving him his right.

TIMON

Mine honest friend,

I prithee but repair° to me next morning.

CAPHIS

Nay, good my lord—

TIMON

Contain thyself, good friend.

VARRO'S SERVANT

One Varro's servant, my good lord— 30

ISIDORE'S SERVANT From Isidore; he humbly prays your speedy payment.

CAPHIS If you did know, my lord, my master's wants—

VARRO'S SERVANT 'Twas due on° forfeiture, my 35
lord, six weeks and past.

ISIDORE'S SERVANT Your steward puts me off, my lord, and I am sent expressly to your lordship.

TIMON

Give me breath.

I do beseech you, good my lords, keep on;° 40

I'll wait upon you instantly.

[Exeunt ALCIBIADES and LORDS.]

[To FLAVIUS.] Come hither. Pray you,

How goes the world,° that I am thus encount'ed

With clamorous demands of broken bonds,

And the detention° of long since due debts

Against my honor?

FLAVIUS

Please you, gentlemen, 45

The time is unagreeable to this business.

Your importunacy° cease till after dinner,

That I may make his lordship understand

Wherefore you are not paid.

TIMON

Do so, my friends. See them well entertained. Exit. 50

FLAVIUS

Pray draw near. [Exit.]

Enter APEMANTUS and FOOL.

CAPHIS

Stay, stay, here comes the fool with Apemantus.

Let's ha' some sport with 'em.

VARRO'S SERVANT Hang him, he'll abuse us.

ISIDORE'S SERVANT A plague upon him, dog! 55

VARRO'S SERVANT How dost, fool?

APEMANTUS Dost dialogue with thy shadow?

VARRO'S SERVANT I speak not to thee.

APEMANTUS No, 'tis to thyself. [To the FOOL.] Come
away. 60

ISIDORE'S SERVANT [To VARRO'S SERVANT.]

There's the fool hangs on your back already.

APEMANTUS No, thou stand'st single,° th' art not on him yet.

CAPHIS Where's the fool now?

APEMANTUS He last asked the question. Poor rogues 65 and usurers' men, bawds between gold and want.

ALL SERVANTS What are we, Apemantus?

APEMANTUS Asses.

ALL SERVANTS Why?

APEMANTUS That you ask me what you are, and do 70 not know yourselves. Speak to 'em, fool.

FOOL How do you, gentlemen?

ALL SERVANTS Gramercies,° good fool. How does your mistress?

FOOL She's e'en setting on water to scald° such chick- 75
ens as you are. Would we could see you at Corinth.°

APEMANTUS Good, gramercy.

Enter PAGE.

FOOL Look you, here comes my mistress' page.

PAGE [To the FOOL.] Why, how now, captain? What do you in this wise company? How dost thou, 80
Apemantus?

APEMANTUS Would I had a rod° in my mouth, that I might answer thee profitably.°

PAGE Prithee, Apemantus, read me the superscrip-tion° of these letters. I know not which is which. 85

APEMANTUS Canst not read?

PAGE No.

APEMANTUS There will little learning die then that day thou art hanged. This is to Lord Timon, this to Alcibiades. Go, thou wast born a bastard, and thou'lt 90 die a bawd.

PAGE Thou wast whelped a dog, and thou shalt famish a dog's death.° Answer not, I am gone. Exit.

APEMANTUS E'en so thou outrun'st grace.° Fool, I will go with you to Lord Timon's. 95

FOOL Will you leave me there?

APEMANTUS If Timon stay at home. You three serve three usurers?

ALL SERVANTS Ay; would they served us.

APEMANTUS So would I—as good a trick as ever 100
hangman served thjef.

FOOL Are you three usurers' men?

ALL SERVANTS Ay, fool.

FOOL I think no usurer but has a fool to his servant.

My mistress is one, and I am her fool. When men 105 come to borrow of your masters, they approach sadly,°

62 single alone 73 Gramercies thanks 75 scald a method of removing feathers from chickens (with suggestions of loss of hair in venereal disease, and of sweating in a heated tub, which was one of the treatments of venereal disease) 76 Corinth ancient city noted for licentiousness (hence a cant term for brothel or red-light district) 82 rod stick to beat you with 83 profitably for your profit or improvement 84-85 superscription address 93 famish . . . death die by famishing, a mean death appropriate for a dog 94
E'en . . . grace By leaving now and not listening to my profitable answer, you will never receive grace 106 sadly gravely

23 To . . . days from one day to the next 26 That . . . suit that you will act in accordance with your other noble qualities 28 repair return 35 on on penalty of 40 keep on go ahead 42 How . . . world what is going on 44 detention withholding payment 47 importunacy urgent solicitation and go away merry; but they enter my mistress' house merrily, and go away sadly. The reason of this?

VARRO'S SERVANT I could render one.

APEMANTUS Do it then, that we may account thee a 110 whoremaster and a knave, which notwithstanding, thou shalt be no less esteemed.

VARRO'S SERVANT What is a whoremaster, fool?

FOOL A fool in good clothes, and something like thee. 'Tis a spirit; sometime't appears like a lord, 115 sometime like a lawyer, sometime like a philosopher, with two stones° moe than's artificial one.° He is very often like a knight; and generally, in all shapes that man goes up and down in, from fourscore to thirteen,
this spirit walks in. 120

VARRO'S SERVANT Thou are not altogether a fool.

FOOL Nor thou altogether a wise man. As much fool-ery as I have, so much wit thou lack'st.

APEMANTUS That answer might have become Apemantus. 125

Enter TIMON and [FLAVIUS, the] steward.

ALL SERVANTS Aside, aside, here comes Lord Timon.

APEMANTUS Come with me, fool, come.

FOOL I do not always follow lover, elder brother, and woman;° sometime the philosopher.

FLAVIUS

Pray you, walk near: I'll speak with you anon.° 130

Exeunt [APEMANTUS, FOOL, and SERVANTS].

TIMON

You make me marvel wherefore ere this time
Had you not fully laid my state° before me,
That I might so have rated° my expense
As I had leave of means.°

FLAVIUS

You would not hear me.

At many leasures° I proposed—

TIMON

Go to.° 135

Perchance some single vantages° you took
When my indisposition° put you back,
And that unaptness° made your minister°
Thus to excuse yourself.

FLAVIUS

O my good lord,

At many times I brought in my accompts,
Laid them before you; you would throw them off,
And say you found them in mine honesty.

When for some trifling present you have bid me
Return so much, I have shook my head and wept;

Yea 'gainst th' authority of manners,° prayed you
To hold your hand more close. I did endure

Not seldom, nor so slight checks,° when I have Prompted° you in the ebb of your estate

And your great flow of debts. My loved lord,

Though you hear now, too late, yet now's a time: 150

117 stones testicles; artificial one philosopher's stone (a highly refined substance which could turn base metals into gold)
128-29 lover . . . woman persons who might be expected to be generous 130 anon soon 132 state financial situation
133 rated regulated 134 As . . . means as my means would allow 135 At many leasures when you were at leisure;
Go to nonsense (an exclamation of impatience) 136 vantages opportunities 137 indisposition disinclination 138 unaptness unreadiness to listen; minister ministration, prompting 145 authority of manners the dictates of good manners 147 checks rebukes 148 Prompted in its theatrical sense

The greatest of your having° lacks a half
To pay your present debts.

TIMON

Let all my land be sold.

FLAVIUS

'Tis all engaged,° some forfeited and gone,
And what remains will hardly stop the mouth
Of present dues. The future comes apace.° 155
What shall defend the interim? And at length
How goes our reck'ning?

TIMON

To Lacedaemon did my land extend.

FLAVIUS

O my good lord, the world is but a word;
Were it all yours to give it in a breath, 160
How quickly were it gone!

TIMON

You tell me true.

FLAVIUS

If you suspect my husbandry or falsehood,°
Call me before th' exactest auditors,
And set me on° the proof. So the gods bless me,
When all our offices° have been oppressed° 165
With riotous feeders,° when our vaults° have wept
With drunken spilth° of wine, when every room
Hath blazed with lights and brayed with minstrelsy,
I have retired me to a wasteful cock,°
And set mine eyes at flow.°

TIMON

Prithee no more. 170

FLAVIUS

Heavens, have I said, the bounty of this lord!
How many prodigal bits° have slaves and peasants
This night englutted!° Who is not Timon's?
What heart, head, sword, force, means, but is Lord Timon's?

Great Timon, noble, worthy, royal Timon! 175

Ah, when the means are gone that buy this praise,
The breath is gone whereof this praise is made.
Feast-won, fast-lost;° one cloud of winter show'rs,
These flies are couched.°

TIMON

Come, sermon me no further.

No villainous bounty° yet hath passed my heart;
Unwisely, not ignobly, have I given.

Why dost thou weep? Canst thou the conscience° lack
To think I shall lack friends? Secure° thy heart.

If I would broach the vessels° of my love,

And try the argument° of hearts by borrowing, 185
Men and men's fortunes could I frankly° use
As I can bid thee speak.

FLAVIUS

Assurance° bless your thoughts.

151 greatest . . . having your worth estimated at the highest possible figure 153 engaged mortgaged 155 apace swiftly
162 suspect . . . falsehood suspect me of false husbandry or dishonest management 164 on to 165 offices service rooms of a household; oppressed crowded 166 feeders servants; vaults wine cellars 167 spilth spilling 169 wasteful cock spigot (of a wine cask) that has not been shut off 170 And . . . flow following the example of the "wasteful cock," I have added my tears to the general riot and superfluity 172 prodigal bits wasteful morsels 173 englutted gulped down 178 Feast-won, fast-lost The friendship that is won by giving feasts is quickly lost (with pun on fast as noun and adverb) 179 couched lying hidden 180 villainous bounty generosity for evil purposes 182 conscience reasonableness 183 Secure make free from care or apprehension 184 broach the vessels tap the casks 185 try the argument test the theme or contents 186 frankly freely 187 Assurance may assurance

TIMON

And in some sort these wants of mine are crowned,^o
That I account them blessings; for by these Shall I try friends. You shall perceive how you 190
Mistake my fortunes; I am wealthy in my friends.
Within there! Flaminius! Servilius!

Enter [FLAMINIUS, SERVILIUS, and THIRD SERVANT].

SERVANTS My lord, my lord.

TIMON I will dispatch you severally.^o [To SERVILIUS.]
You to Lord Lucius, [to FLAMINIUS] to Lord Lucullus 195
you; I hunted with his honor today. [To THIRD SERVANT.] You to Sempronius. Commend me to their loves; and I am proud, say, that my occasions^o have found time to use 'em toward a supply of money.
Let the request be fifty talents. 200

FLAMINIUS As you have said, my lord.

[Exeunt SERVANTS.]

FLAVIUS [Aside.] Lord Lucius and Lucullus? Humh!

TIMON

Go you, sir, to the senators,
Of whom, even to the state's best health,^o I have Deserved this hearing. Bid 'em send o' th' instant 205
A thousand talents to me.

FLAVIUS I have been bold,
For that I knew it the most general^o way,
To them to use your signet^o and your name;
But they do shake their heads, and I am here
No richer in return.

TIMON Is't true? Can't be?

FLAVIUS

They answer in a joint and corporate voice,
That now they are at fall,^o want treasure, cannot
Do what they would, are sorry; you are honorable,
But yet they could have wished—they know not;
Something hath been amiss—a noble nature 215
May catch a wrench^o—would all were well—'tis pity—

And so, intending^o other serious matters,
After distasteful looks, and these hard fractions,^o
With certain half-caps^o and cold-moving^o nods,
They froze me into silence.

TIMON You gods reward them! 220

Prithee man look cheerly. These old fellows
Have their ingratitude in them hereditary.
Their blood is caked, 'tis cold, it seldom flows;
'Tis lack of kindly^o warmth they are not kind;
And nature, as it grows again toward earth,^o 225
Is fashioned for the journey, dull and heavy.
Go to Ventidius. Prithee be not sad;
Thou art true and honest; ingeniously^o I speak,
No blame belongs to thee. Ventidius lately

188 crowned given a royal dignity 194 severally separately
198 occasions needs 204 even . . . health i.e., Timon, because of his own generosity to the state in the past, now deserves a loan from them to the very outermost limit they can pay (?) 207 general usual 208 signet signet ring (as sign of authority to act) 212 at fall at ebb tide 216 catch a wrench accidentally be twisted from its natural bent 217 intending pretending 218 hard fractions harsh fragments of speech (conveyed in the broken syntax) 219 half-caps half-courteous salutations; cold-moving producing cold, frigid 224 kindly (1) natural (2) generous 225 grows
. . . earth approaches death and the grave 228 ingeniously
ingenuously, candidly

Buried his father, by whose death he's stepped 230
Into a great estate. When he was poor,
Imprisoned, and in scarcity of friends,
I cleared him with five talents. Greet him from me,
Bid him suppose some good necessity^o
Touches his friend, which craves to be rememb' red 235
With those five talents. That had, give't these fellows
To whom 'tis instant^o due. Nev'r speak or think
That Timon's fortunes 'mong^o his friends can sink.

FLAVIUS

I would I could not think it; that thought is bounty's foe.
Being free^o itself, it thinks all others so. Exeunt. 240

[A C T I I I]

[Scene I. Lucullus' house.]

FLAMINIUS waiting to speak with Lord [LUCULLUS] from his master, enters a SERVANT to him.

SERVANT I have told my lord of you; he is coming down to you.

FLAMINIUS I thank you, sir.

Enter LUCULLUS.

SERVANT Here's my lord.

LUCULLUS [Aside.] One of Lord Timon's men? A 5 gift I warrant. Why this hits right; I dreamt of a silver basin and ewer tonight.^o—Flaminius, honest Flaminius, you are very respectfully^o welcome, sir. Fill me some wine. [Exit SERVANT.] And how does that honorable, complete,^o free-hearted gentleman of Athens, thy very 10 bountiful good lord and master?

FLAMINIUS His health is well, sir.

LUCULLUS I am right glad that his health is well, sir.
And what hast thou there under thy cloak, pretty^o
Flaminius? 15

FLAMINIUS Faith, nothing but an empty box, sir, which in my lord's behalf I come to entreat your honor to supply;^o who, having great and instant occasion to use fifty talents, hath sent to your lordship to furnish him, nothing doubting your present^o 20 assistance therein.

LUCULLUS La, la, la, la! "Nothing doubting," says he? Alas, good lord, a noble gentleman 'tis, if he would not keep so good a house.^o Many a time and often I ha' dined with him, and told him on't, and come again to 25 supper to him of purpose to have him spend less, and yet he would embrace no counsel, take no warning by my coming. Every man has his fault, and honesty^o is his. I ha' told him on't, but I could ne'er get him from't. 30

Enter SERVANT with wine.

234 good necessity valid need 237 instant instantly, immediately 238 'mong in the midst of 240 free bounteous
III.i.7 tonight last night 8 respectfully respectfully 10 complete fully equipped or endowed, perfect 14 pretty vague epithet of praise 18 supply fill 20 present immediate 24 so . . . house such lavish hospitality 28 honesty generosity

SERVANT Please your lordship, here is the wine.

LUCULLUS Flaminius, I have noted thee always wise.
Here's to thee.

FLAMINIUS Your lordship speaks your pleasure.°

LUCULLUS I have observed thee always for a towardly 35
prompt spirit,° give thee thy due, and one that knows what belongs to reason; and canst use the time well, if the time use thee well.° Good parts° in thee. [To SERVANT.] Get you gone, sirrah. [Exit SERVANT.]
Draw nearer, honest Flaminius. Thy lord's a bountiful 40 gentleman, but thou art wise, and thou know'st well enough, although thou com'st to me, that this is no time to lend money, especially upon bare friendship without security. Here's three solidares° for thee. Good boy, wink° at me, and say thou saw'st me not. Fare 45 thee well.

FLAMINIUS

Is't possible the world should so much differ,°
And we alive that lived?° Fly, damnèd baseness,
To him that worships thee.

[Throws back the money.]

LUCULLUS Ha? Now I see thou art a fool, and fit for 50 thy master. Exit.

FLAMINIUS

May these° add to the number that may scald° thee.
Let molten coin be thy damnation,°
Thou disease of a friend, and not himself.
Has friendship such a faint and milky heart 55
It turns° in less than two nights? O you gods!
I feel my master's passion.° This slave
Unto his honor° has my lord's meat° in him;
Why should it thrive and turn to nutriment
When he is turned to poison? 60
O may diseases only work upon't,
And when he's sick to death, let not that part of nature°
Which my lord paid for be of any power
To expel sickness, but prolong his hour.° Exit.

[Scene II. A public place.]

Enter LUCIUS, with three STRANGERS.°

LUCIUS Who, the Lord Timon? He is my very good friend and an honorable gentleman.

FIRST STRANGER We know him for no less, though we are but strangers to him. But I can tell you one 34 speaks your pleasure is pleased to say so 35-36 to-wardly prompt spirit well-disposed and well-inclined person

37-38 if . . . well if you strike good fortune 38 parts qualities
44 solidares perhaps Shakespeare was referring to the Roman
"solidus," which was used in England for a shilling 45 wink shut your eyes 47 differ change 48 And . . . lived i.e., the world changes so swiftly, it is hard to believe that the same people are still alive 52 these the rejected coins; scald i.e., in hell 53 thy damnation the torment you will suffer in hell (perhaps a reference to the pouring of molten gold down the throat of Marcus Crassus by the Parthians, thought of as a punishment in hell for avarice) 56 turns curdles 57 passion anger, suffering (trisyllabic) 57-58 slave . . . honor ironical:
"this man who claims to be so devoted to honor" 58 meat food (in general, in contradistinction to "drink") 62 that . . . nature that part of his body nourished by Timon's food
64 but . . . hour may he have a lingering death
III.ii.s.d. Strangers foreigners, non-Athenians thing, my lord, and which I hear from common 5 rumors: now Lord Timon's happy hours are done and past, and his estate shrinks from him.

LUCIUS Fie, no, do not believe it; he cannot want for money.

SECOND STRANGER But believe you this, my lord, 10 that not long ago, one of his men was with the Lord Lucullus to borrow so many talents,° nay urged extremely for't, and showed what necessity belonged to't, and yet was denied.

LUCIUS How? 15

SECOND STRANGER I tell you, denied, my lord.

LUCIUS What a strange case was that! Now before the gods I am ashamed on't. Denied that honorable man? There was very little honor showed in't. For my own part, I must needs confess, I have received 20 some small kindnesses from him, as money, plate,° jewels, and suchlike trifles, nothing comparing to his;° yet had he mistook him° and sent to me, I should ne'er have denied his occasion° so many talents.

Enter SERVILIUS.

SERVILIUS See, by good hap, yonder's my lord; I 25 have sweat to see his honor. My honored lord.

LUCIUS Servilius? You are kindly met, sir. Fare thee well; commend me to thy honorable virtuous lord, my very exquisite friend.

SERVILIUS May it please your honor, my lord hath 30 sent—

LUCIUS Ha? What has he sent? I am so much endeared° to that lord; he's ever sending. How shall I thank him, think'st thou? And what has he sent now?

SERVILIUS Has only sent his present occasion now, 35
my lord, requesting your lordship to supply his instant use with so many talents.

LUCIUS

I know his lordship is but merry with me,
He cannot want° fifty five hundred talents.°

SERVILIUS

But in the meantime he wants less, my lord. 40
If his occasion were not virtuous,
I should not urge it half so faithfully.

LUCIUS

Dost thou speak seriously, Servilius?

SERVILIUS

Upon my soul 'tis true, sir.

LUCIUS What a wicked beast was I to disfurnish my- 45 self against° such a good time, when I might ha' shown myself honorable! How unluckily it happ'ned that I should purchase the day before for a little part,° and undo a great deal of honor!° Servilius, now before the gods I am not able to do—the more beast, I say! I 50 was sending to use Lord Timon myself, these gentlemen can witness; but I would not for the wealth of 12 so many talents an indefinite number probably intended to be replaced, in revision, by a definite number 21 plate utensils for domestic use, especially of gold or silver 22 his Lucullus' 23 mistook him made a mistake 24 occasion need 32-33 endeared indebted 39 want (1) be without, lack (2) need, desire; fifty five hundred talents a huge sum (see Introduction, p. 1367) 45-46 disfurnish myself against to allow myself to be unprovided for 48 for . . . part for a little business transaction (deliberately vague) 49 undo . . .

honor lose the anticipated honor of lending to Timon

Athens I had done't now. Commend me bountifully to his good lordship, and I hope his honor will conceive the fairest° of me, because I have no power to be kind. And tell him this from me, I count it one of my greatest afflictions, say, that I cannot pleasure such an honorable gentleman. Good Servilius, will you befriend me so far as to use mine own words to him?

SERVILIUS Yes, sir, I shall.

LUCIUS

I'll look you out a good turn, Servilius.

Exit SERVILIUS.

True, as you said, Timon is shrunk indeed,
And he that's once denied will hardly speed.° Exit.

FIRST STRANGER

Do you observe this, Hostilius?

SECOND STRANGER

Ay, too well.

FIRST STRANGER

Why this is the world's soul, and just of the same piece° 65
Is every flatterer's sport.° Who can call him his friend
That dips in the same dish? For in my knowing
Timon has been this lord's father,
And kept his° credit with his° purse;
Supported his estate; nay, Timon's money 70
Has paid his men their wages. He ne'er drinks
But Timon's silver treads° upon his lip,
And yet—O see the monstrousness of man
When he looks out in an ungrateful shape°—
He does deny him, in respect of his,°
What charitable men afford to beggars.

THIRD STRANGER

Religion groans at it.

FIRST STRANGER

For mine own part,
I never tasted° Timon in my life,
Nor came any of his bounties over me
To mark me for his friend. Yet I protest, 80
For his right° noble mind, illustrious virtue,
And honorable carriage,°
Had his necessity made use of me,
I would have put my wealth into donation,°
And the best half should have returned° to him, 85
So much I love his heart. But I perceive
Men must learn now with pity to dispense,
For policy° sits above conscience. Exeunt.

And now Ventidius is wealthy too,
Whom he redeemed from prison. All these Owes their estates unto him.

THIRD SERVANT

My lord,

They have all been touched° and found base metal,
For they have all denied him.

SEMPRONIUS

How? Have they denied him?

Has Ventidius and Lucullus denied him,

And does he send to me? Three? Humh!

It shows but little love or judgment in him.

Must I be his last refuge? His friends, like physicians,
Thrive, give him over.° Must I take th' cure upon me?

Has much disgraced me in't; I'm angry at him

That might have known my place.° I see no sense for't,

But his occasions° might have wooed me first;

For, in my conscience, I was the first man

That e'er received gift from him.

And does he think so backwardly° of me now

That I'll requite it last? No.

So it may prove an argument° of laughter

To th' rest, and I 'mongst lords be thought a fool.

I'd rather than the worth of thrice the sum,

Had° sent to me first, but for my mind's sake;°

I'd such a courage° to do him good. But now return,

And with their faint reply this answer join:

Who bates° mine honor shall not know my coin.

Exit.

THIRD SERVANT Excellent. Your lordship's a goodly villain. The devil knew not what he did when he made man politic;° he crossed himself by't:° and I cannot think but in the end the villainies of man will set him clear.° How fairly° this lord strives to appear foul!° Takes virtuous copies to be wicked.° Like those° that under hot ardent zeal would set whole realms on fire, of such a nature is his politic love.

This was my lord's best hope; now all are fled

Save only the gods. Now his friends are dead,

Doors that were ne'er acquainted with their wards°

Many a bounteous year, must be employed

Now to guard sure° their master.

And this is all a liberal° course allows;

Who cannot keep his wealth must keep his house.°

Exit.

[Scene III. Sempronius' house.]

Enter a THIRD SERVANT [of Timon], with SEMPRONIUS, another of Timon's friends.

SEMPRONIUS

Must he needs trouble me in't—humh!—'bove all others?

He might have tried Lord Lucius or Lucullus,

54–55 conceive the fairest think the best 63 speed be successful, prosper 65 piece sort, kind 66 sport mockery, diversion (as Lucius has just made sport of Timon) 69 kept his sustained Lucius'; his Timon's 72 treads presses 74 shape form 75 in . . . his in relation to what Lucius is worth 78 tasted experienced the qualities of 81 right very 82 carriage moral conduct 84 put . . . donation treated my fortune as a gift from Timon 85 returned been given back 88 policy cunning

III.iii.6 touched tested (by being rubbed on a touchstone; unlike base metals, gold and silver produced the proper colored streak) 12 Thrive . . . over prosper on his money while they are giving him up for dead(?) 14 my place i.e., before Lucullus, Lucius, and Ventidius 15 occasions needs 18 backwardly (1) poorly (2) near the end, late 20 argument occasion, subject 23 Had he had (perhaps "H'ad"?); but . . . sake if only to express my good will toward him 24 courage desire 26 bates abates, undervalues 29 politic cunning; he . . . by't the devil thwarted his own purposes by making man his rival in shrewdness and guile 30–31 will . . . clear will make the devil appear innocent (when compared with the "villainies of man") 31 How fairly with what a beautiful appearance 32 foul ugly; Takes . . . wicked models himself on exemplars of virtue to serve as disguise for his wickedness; those religious fanatics (perhaps "zeal" suggests an allusion to Puritans) 37 wards locks 39 sure securely 40 liberal generous 41 keep his house remain at home (for fear of being arrested for debt)

[Scene IV. Timon's house.]

Enter Varro's [two SERVANTS], meeting others. All [the SERVANTS of] Timon's creditors to wait for his coming out. Then enter [the SERVANT of] Lucius; [then TITUS] and HORTENSIUS.

VARRO'S FIRST SERVANT

Well met; good morrow, Titus and Hortensius.

TITUS

The like to you, kind Varro.

HORTENSIUS

Lucius!

What, do we meet together?

LUCIUS' SERVANT

Ay, and I think

One business does command us all;

For mine is money.

TITUS

So is theirs and ours.

5

Enter PHILOTUS.

LUCIUS' SERVANT

And, sir, Philotus' too!

PHILOTUS

Good day at once.°

LUCIUS' SERVANT

Welcome, good brother. What do you think the hour?

PHILOTUS

Laboring for nine.

LUCIUS' SERVANT

So much?

PHILOTUS Is not my lord seen yet?

LUCIUS' SERVANT

Not yet.

PHILOTUS

I wonder on't; he was wont to shine at seven.

10

LUCIUS' SERVANT

Ay, but the days are waxed° shorter with him.

You must consider that a prodigal course

Is like the sun's,

But not like his recoverable,° I fear.

'Tis deepest winter in Lord Timon's purse;

15

That is, one may reach deep enough and yet

Find little.

PHILOTUS I am of your fear for that.

TITUS

I'll show you how t' observe° a strange event.

Your lord sends now for money?

HORTENSIUS

Most true, he does.

TITUS

And he wears jewels now of Timon's gift,

20

For which I wait for money.

HORTENSIUS

It is against my heart.°

LUCIUS' SERVANT Mark how strange it shows,

Timon in this should pay more than he owes;°

And e'en as if your lord should wear rich jewels

And send for money for 'em.

25

HORTENSIUS

I'm weary of this charge,° the gods can witness.

I know my lord hath spent of Timon's wealth,

And now ingratitude makes it worse than stealth.°

III.iv.6 at once to you all 11 waxed grown 12-14 prodigal . . . recoverable the prodigal, like the sun, declines, but cannot renew himself every day 18 observe observe and interpret 22 against my heart contrary to my natural feeling 23 should . . . owes he has given the gifts, and now he is also asked for the money for them 26 charge task 28 stealth stealing

VARRO'S FIRST SERVANT

Yes, mine's three thousand crowns. What's yours?

LUCIUS' SERVANT

Five thousand mine.

30

VARRO'S FIRST SERVANT

'Tis much deep, and it should seem by th' sum

Your master's confidence° was above mine,°

Else surely his had equaled.

Enter FLAMINIUS.

TITUS One of Lord Timon's men.

LUCIUS' SERVANT Flaminius? Sir, a word. Pray is 35

my lord ready to come forth?

FLAMINIUS No, indeed he is not.

TITUS We attend his lordship; pray signify so much.

FLAMINIUS I need not tell him that; he knows you are too diligent.

[Exit.] 40

Enter [FLAVIUS, the] steward, in a cloak, muffled.°

LUCIUS' SERVANT

Ha! Is not that his steward muffled so?

He goes away in a cloud.° Call him, call him.

TITUS Do you hear, sir?

VARRO'S SECOND SERVANT By your leave, sir.

FLAVIUS

What do ye ask of me, my friend?

45

TITUS

We wait for certain money here, sir.

FLAVIUS

Ay,

If money were as certain as your waiting,

'Twere sure enough.

Why then preferred° you not your sums and bills

50

When your false masters ate of my lord's meat?

Then they could smile, and fawn upon° his debts,

And take down th' int'rest° into their glutt'nous maws.

You do yourselves but wrong to stir me up;

Let me pass quietly.

15

Believe't, my lord and I have made an end;

55

I have no more to reckon,° he to spend.

LUCIUS' SERVANT

Ay, but this answer will not serve.

FLAVIUS

If 'twill not serve, 'tis not so base as you,

For you serve knaves.

[Exit.]

VARRO'S FIRST SERVANT How? What does his 60

cashiered° worship mutter?

VARRO'S SECOND SERVANT No matter what; he's poor, and that's revenge enough. Who can speak broadr° than he that has no house to put his head in?

Such may rail against great buildings.

65

Enter SERVILIUS.

TITUS O here's Servilius. Now we shall know some answer.

25

SERVILIUS If I might beseech you, gentlemen, to repair° some other hour, I should derive much from't.

32 confidence trust; mine my master's 40 s.d. muffled wrapped up, especially about the face 42 in a cloud (1) in a state of gloominess and concern (2) covered with a cloud because he is muffled 49 preferred proffered, presented 51 fawn upon seek favor by servility (used especially of dogs) 52 th' int'rest i.e., what they ate was equivalent to the interest due on the money owed them by Timon 56 reckon keep account of 61 cashiered dismissed from employment 64 broader more critically 68-69 repair come

For take't of my soul,° my lord leans wondrously to 70 discontent. His comfortable° temper has forsook him, he's much out of health, and keeps his chamber.

LUCIUS' SERVANT

Many do keep their chambers are not sick;
And if it be so far beyond his health,
Methinks he should the sooner pay his debts, 75
And make a clear° way to the gods.

SERVILIUS

Good gods!

TITUS

We cannot take this for answer, sir.

FLAMINIUS (Within.)

Servilius, help! My lord, my lord!

Enter TIMON in a rage.

TIMON

What, are my doors opposed against my passage?
Have I been ever free,° and must my house 80
Be my retentive° enemy? My jail?
The place which I have feasted,° does it now,
Like all mankind, show me an iron heart?

LUCIUS' SERVANT Put in° now, Titus.

TITUS My lord, here is my bill. 85

LUCIUS' SERVANT Here's mine.

HORTENSIUS And mine, my lord.

BOTH VARRO'S SERVANTS And ours, my lord.

PHILOTUS All our bills.

TIMON

Knock me down with 'em, cleave me to the girdle.° 90

LUCIUS' SERVANT Alas, my lord—

TIMON Cut my heart in sums.°

TITUS Mine, fifty talents.

TIMON Tell out° my blood.

LUCIUS' SERVANT Five thousand crowns, my lord. 95

TIMON

Five thousand drops pays that. What yours? And yours?

VARRO'S FIRST SERVANT My lord—

VARRO'S SECOND SERVANT My lord—

TIMON Tear me, take me, and the gods fall upon you.

Exit TIMON.

HORTENSIUS Faith, I perceive our masters may throw 100 their caps at their money;° these debts may well be called desperate° ones, for a madman owes 'em.

Exeunt.

Enter TIMON [and FLAVIUS].

TIMON

They have e'en put my breath from me,° the slaves.
Creditors? Devils!

70 take't . . . soul from my heart (i.e., sincerely) 71 comfortable cheerful 76 clear (1) free from debt (2) innocent, unstained (because he has paid his debts) (3) untrammelled, without the obstacle of debts 80 free (1) generous (2) unrestrained 81 retentive confining 82 place . . . feasted the house itself in which I have given feasts 84 Put in i.e., put in your claim for money 90 Knock . . . girdle Timon chooses to understand "bills" not as "accounts of money due," but as "weapons"—a bill had a long wooden handle with a blade or ax-shaped head at one end, and it was capable of cutting a man through to the belt 92 in sums into sums of money 94 Tell out count out 100-01 may throw . . .
money may give up their money for lost 102 desperate beyond hope of recovery (cf. "sperate," recoverable) 103 put . . . me put me out of breath

FLAVIUS My dear lord— 105

TIMON What if it should be so?

FLAVIUS My lord—

TIMON I'll have it so. My steward!

FLAVIUS Here, my lord.

TIMON

So fitly?° Go, bid° all my friends again, 110
Lucius, Lucullus, and Sempronius—all.
I'll once more feast the rascals.

FLAVIUS

O my lord,

You only speak from your distracted soul;
There's not so much left to furnish out
A moderate table.

TIMON

Be it not in thy care.° 115

Go, I charge thee, invite them all, let in the tide
Of knaves once more; my cook and I'll provide.

Exeunt.

[Scene V. The Senate House.]

Enter three SENATORS at one door, ALCIBIADES meeting them with ATTENDANTS.

FIRST SENATOR

My lord, you have my voice° to't. The fault's
Bloody; 'tis necessary he should die.
Nothing emboldens sin so much as mercy.

SECOND SENATOR

Most true; the law shall bruise 'em.°

ALCIBIADES

Honor, health, and compassion to the Senate. 5

FIRST SENATOR

Now, captain?

ALCIBIADES

I am an humble suitor to your virtues;
For pity is the virtue° of the law,
And none but tyrants use it cruelly. 10
It pleases time and fortune to lie heavy
Upon a friend of mine, who in hot blood
Hath stepped into the law;° which is past depth°
To those that, without heed, do plunge into't.
He is a man, setting his fate° aside, 15
Of comely virtues;
Nor did he soil the fact° with cowardice
(An honor in him which buys out° his fault),
But with a noble fury and fair° spirit,
Seeing his reputation touched to death,
He did oppose his foe; 20
And with such sober and unnoted° passion
He did behove° his anger, ere 'twas spent,
As if he had but proved an argument.°

FIRST SENATOR

You undergo too strict a paradox,°

110 fitly conveniently; bid invite 115 Be . . . care Let the feast be my concern

III.v.1 voice vote 4 bruise 'em crush them (possibly sinners or wrongdoers in general?) 8 virtue characteristic excellence 12 stepped . . . law done something to bring him within the jurisdiction of the law; past depth beyond any measurable depth 14 his fate this one fateful action of his 16 soil the fact sully the deed 17 buys out redeems 18 fair excellent 21 unnoted not notable, i.e., calm 22 behave control 23 argument i.e., a point d'honneur rather than a personal passion 24 undergo . . . paradox attempt to argue a position that is excessively paradoxical

Striving to make an ugly deed look fair.
 Your words have took such pains as if they labored
 To bring manslaughter into form,^o and set
 Quarreling upon the head of valor, which indeed
 Is valor misbegot, and came into the world
 When sects and factions^o were newly born.
 He's truly valiant that can wisely suffer
 The worst that man can breathe,^o
 And make his wrongs his outsides,^o
 To wear them like his raiment, carelessly,
 And ne'er prefer^o his injuries to his heart,
 To bring it into danger.
 If wrongs be evils and enforce us kill,
 What folly 'tis to hazard life for ill.

ALCIBIADES My lord—

FIRST SENATOR

You cannot make gross sins look clear.^o
 To revenge is no valor, but to bear.^o

ALCIBIADES

My lords, then, under favor,^o pardon me,
 If I speak like a captain.
 Why do fond^o men expose themselves to battle,
 And not endure all threats? Sleep upon't,
 And let the foes quietly cut their throats
 Without repugnancy?^o If there be Such valor in the bearing, what make we Abroad?^o Why then, women are more valiant
 That stay at home, if bearing^o carry it,^o
 And the ass more captain than the lion, the fellow
 Loaden with irons wiser than the judge,
 If wisdom be in suffering. O my lords,
 As you are great, be pitifully good.^o
 Who cannot condemn rashness in cold blood?
 To kill, I grant, is sin's extremest gust,^o
 But in defense, by mercy,^o 'tis most just.
 To be in anger is impiety;
 But who is man that is not angry?
 Weigh but the crime with this.

SECOND SENATOR

You breathe in vain.

ALCIBIADES In vain? His service done

At Lacedaemon and Byzantium
 Were a sufficient briber for his life.

FIRST SENATOR

What's that?

ALCIBIADES Why say,^o my lords, h'as done fair service,
 And slain in fight many of your enemies.
 How full of valor did he bear himself
 In the last conflict, and made plenteous wounds!

SECOND SENATOR

He has made too much plenty with 'em.
 He's a sworn rioter;^o he has a sin^o that often
 Drowns him and takes his valor prisoner.

25 If there were no foes, that were enough
 To overcome him. In that beastly fury
 He has been known to commit outrages,
 And cherish factions.^o 'Tis inferred^o to us
 His days are foul and his drink dangerous. 75

30 FIRST SENATOR

He dies.

ALCIBIADES Hard fate. He might have died in war.

My lords, if not for any parts^o in him—
 Though his right arm might purchase his own time,^o
 And be in debt to none—yet, more to move you,
 Take my deserts to his, and join 'em both. 80
 And for I know your reverend ages love
 Security,^o I'll pawn my victories, all
 My honor to you, upon his good returns.^o
 If by this crime he owes the law his life,
 Why, let the war receive't in valiant gore, 85
 For law is strict, and war is nothing more.

FIRST SENATOR

We are for law. He dies. Urge it no more,
 On height of our displeasure. Friend or brother,
 He forfeits his own blood that spills another.

45 ALCIBIADES

Must it be so? It must not be. 90
 My lords, I do beseech you know me.

SECOND SENATOR

How?

ALCIBIADES

50 Call me to your remembrances.

THIRD SENATOR

What?

ALCIBIADES

I cannot think but your age^o has forgot me;
 It could not else be I should prove so base
 To sue^o and be denied such common grace. 95
 My wounds ache at you.

FIRST SENATOR

Do you dare our anger?

'Tis in few words, but spacious in effect:
 We banish thee for ever.

60

ALCIBIADES

Banish me?

Banish your dotage, vanish usury,

That makes the Senate ugly. 100

FIRST SENATOR

If after two days' shine Athens contain thee, Attend our weightier judgment.^o And, not to swell
 our spirit,^o
 He shall be executed presently.^o Exeunt [SENATORS].

ALCIBIADES

Now the gods keep you old enough, that you may live
 Only in bone,^o that none may look on you. 105
 I'm worse than mad. I have kept back their foes,
 While they have told^o their money, and let out
 Their coin upon large interest, I myself
 Rich only in large hurts. All those, for this?
 Is this the balsam^o that the usuring Senate 110
 Pours into captains' wounds? Banishment!

27 form i.e., a legal and acceptable form 30 factions trisyllabic
 32 breathe utter 33 outsides mere externals 35 prefer present 40 clear innocent 41 bear tolerate (our wrongs) 42 under favor by your leave (a formula of politeness) 44 fond foolish 47 repugnancy resistance, fighting back 49 Abroad away from home, at battle 50 bearing (1) enduring of wrongs (2) childbearing (3) bearing of men in sexual intercourse; carry it win the day 54 be pitifully good be good in showing pity 56 gust (1) taste, relish (2) strong wind or storm 57 by mercy in a merciful interpretation 64 say let us say, let us admit 69
rioter debauchee; sin i.e., drunkenness

74 cherish factions foster dissension; inferred reported 77 parts good qualities 78 his own time i.e., his proper time to die 82 Security (1) safety, freedom from care or apprehension (2) collateral for a debt 83 good returns profit on an investment 93 your age i.e., you, because of your age 95
To sue to beg 102 Attend . . . judgment expect a more severe sentence from us; not . . . spirit not to allow our anger any further scope 103 presently at once 105 Only in bone i.e., be mere hideous skeletons 107 told counted 110 balsam balm

It comes not ill. I hate not to be banished;
It is a cause worthy my spleen° and fury,
That I may strike at Athens. I'll cheer up
My discontented troops and lay for hearts.°
'Tis honor with most lands to be at odds;
Soldiers should brook° as little wrongs as gods. Exit.

[Scene VI. A banqueting hall in Timon's house.]

[Music. Tables set out, SERVANTS attending.] Enter divers FRIENDS [of Timon] at several doors.

FIRST LORD The good time of day to you, sir.

SECOND LORD I also wish it to you. I think this honorable lord did but try us this other day.

FIRST LORD Upon that were my thoughts tiring° when we encount'ed. I hope it is not so low with him 5 as he made it seem in the trial of his several friends.

SECOND LORD It should not be, by the persuasion° of his new feasting.

FIRST LORD I should think so. He hath sent me an earnest inviting, which many my near occasions° did 10 urge me to put off; but he hath conjured me beyond them, and I must needs appear.

SECOND LORD In like manner was I in debt to my importunate business, but he would not hear my excuse. I am sorry, when he sent to borrow of me, 15 that my provision° was out.

FIRST LORD I am sick of that grief too, as I understand how all things go.°

SECOND LORD Every man here's so. What would he have borrowed of you? 20

FIRST LORD A thousand pieces.°

SECOND LORD A thousand pieces?

FIRST LORD What of you?

SECOND LORD He sent to me, sir—

Enter TIMON and ATTENDANTS.

Here he comes.

TIMON With all my heart, gentlemen both; and how 25
fare you?

FIRST LORD Ever at the best, hearing well of your lordship.

SECOND LORD The swallow° follows not summer more willing than we your lordship. 30

TIMON [Aside.] Nor more willingly leaves winter, such summer birds are men.—Gentlemen, our dinner will not recompense this long stay. Feast your ears with the music awhile, if they will fare so harshly°
o' th' trumpet's sound; we shall to't presently.° 35

FIRST LORD I hope it remains not unkindly with your lordship that I returned you an empty messenger.

113 spleen malice, passionate hatred 115 lay for hearts i.e., try to win their hearts to my cause (or, possibly, try to win the hearts of new followers) 117 brook endure

III.vi.4 tiring feeding (especially, to tear flesh in feeding as does a bird of prey) 7 by the persuasion on the evidence 10 many . . . occasions my many pressing social obligations 16 provision supply (of money) 17–18 as . . . go i.e., on the evidence of his "new feasting," things seem to be picking up again with Timon 21 pieces gold coins worth about a pound (but probably used vaguely) 29 swallow cf. the proverb, "Swallows, like false friends, fly away upon the approach of winter" 34 fare so harshly feed on such rough food 35 we . . . presently we shall sit down to eat immediately

TIMON O sir, let it not trouble you.

SECOND LORD My noble lord—

TIMON Ah my good friend, what cheer? 40

115 SECOND LORD My most honorable lord, I am e'en sick of shame that when your lordship this other day sent to me, I was so unfortunate a beggar.

TIMON Think not on't, sir.

SECOND LORD If you had sent but two hours 45 before—

TIMON Let it not cumber your better remembrance.°

The banquet brought in.

Come, bring in all together.

SECOND LORD All covered dishes.°

FIRST LORD Royal cheer,° I warrant you. 50

THIRD LORD Doubt not that, if money and the season can yield it.

FIRST LORD How do you? What's the news?

THIRD LORD Alcibiades is banished. Hear you of it?

FIRST AND SECOND LORDS Alcibiades banished? 55

THIRD LORD 'Tis so, be sure of it.

FIRST LORD How? How?

SECOND LORD I pray you upon what?°

TIMON My worthy friends, will you draw near?

THIRD LORD I'll tell you more anon.° Here's a noble 60 feast toward.°

SECOND LORD This is the old man still.°

THIRD LORD Will't hold?° Will't hold?

SECOND LORD It does; but time will°—and so—

THIRD LORD I do conceive.° 65

TIMON Each man to his stool, with that spur° as he would to the lip of his mistress. Your diet° shall be in all places alike.° Make not a city feast° of it, to let the meat cool ere we can agree upon the first place. Sit, sit.
The gods require our thanks. 70

You great benefactors, sprinkle our society with thankfulness. For your own gifts, make yourselves praised. But reserve° still to give, lest your deities be despised. Lend to each man enough that one need not lend to another; for were your godheads to borrow of 75 men, men would forsake the gods. Make the meat be beloved more than the man that gives it. Let no assembly of twenty be without a score of villains. If there sit twelve women at the table, let a dozen of them be as they are. The rest of your fees,° O gods— 80 the senators of Athens, together with the common leg° of people—what is amiss in them, you gods, make suitable for destruction. For these my present friends, as they are to me nothing, so in nothing bless them, and to nothing are they welcome. 85
Uncover, dogs, and lap.

[The dishes are uncovered and seen to be full of water.]

47 cumber . . . remembrance burden your good memory
49 covered dishes signifies food of high quality 50 Royal cheer food fit for a king 58 upon what for what cause 60 anon soon 61 toward forthcoming 62 still ever, without change 63 Will't hold Will it last? 64 time will presumably a platitude such as "Time will alter all things" 65 conceive understand 66 spur spurring, speed 67 diet food 67–68 in . . . alike the same at all places of the table (i.e., no need for seating according to rank) 68 city feast a formal London banquet (London is the "City") 73 reserve keep something in reserve 80 fees property, possessions 82 leg limb (as a literal part of the body politic)

SOME SPEAK What does his lordship mean?

SOME OTHER I know not.

TIMON

May you a better feast never behold,
You knot of mouth-friends.° Smoke° and lukewarm water 90

Is your perfection.° This is Timon's last,
Who, stuck and spangled° with your flatteries,
Washes it off and sprinkles in your faces
Your reeking° villainy. [Throws the water in their faces.]
Live loathed and long,
Most smiling, smooth,° detested parasites, 95
Courteous destroyers, affable wolves, meek bears,
You fools of fortune, trencher-friends, time's flies,
Cap-and-knee slaves, vapors, and minute-jacks.°
Of man and beast the infinite° malady
Crust you quite o'er. What, dost thou go? 100
Soft, take thy physic° first; thou too, and thou.
Stay, I will lend thee money, borrow° none.

[Drives them out.]

What? All in motion? Henceforth be no feast,
Whereat a villain's not a welcome guest.
Burn house, sink Athens, henceforth hated be 105
Of° Timon man and all humanity. Exit.

Enter the SENATORS, with other LORDS.

FIRST LORD How now, my lords?

SECOND LORD Know you the quality of Lord
Timon's fury?

THIRD LORD Push,° did you see my cap? 110

FOURTH LORD I have lost my gown.

FIRST LORD He's but a mad lord, and naught but humors° sways him. He gave me a jewel th' other day, and now he has beat it out of my hat. Did you see my jewel? 115

THIRD LORD Did you see my cap?

SECOND LORD Here 'tis.

FOURTH LORD Here lies my gown.

FIRST LORD Let's make no stay.

SECOND LORD

Lord Timon's mad.

THIRD LORD I feel't upon my bones. 120

FOURTH LORD

One day he gives us diamonds, next day stones.

Exeunt the SENATORS [and others].

90 knot of mouth-friends pack of (1) friends merely in speech (2) friends won through feeding, "trencher-friends"; Smoke (1) insubstantiality (2) mere talk 91 perfection highest excellence (?) perfect likeness of you (?) 92 stuck and spangled bespattered and tricked out (as if with spangles) 94 reeking giving off smoke or fumes, stinking 95 smooth flattering 97-98 You . . . minute-jacks you dupes of fortune, friends won by feeding, insects that appear only in fair weather, servile slaves always kneeling or removing caps in deference, insubstantial creatures, and figures who strike the bell of a clock (i.e., opportunistic persons) 99 infinite unlimited 101 physic medicine 102 borrow i.e., borrow none from others (?) I will borrow none (?) 106 Of by 110 Push an effeminate expression of impatience 113 humors whims, caprices

[A C T I V]

[Scene I. Outside the walls of Athens.]

Enter TIMON.

TIMON

Let me look back upon thee. O thou wall
That girdles in those wolves, dive in the earth,
And fence not Athens. Matrons, turn incontinent;
Obedience fail in children. Slaves and fools,
Pluck the grave wrinkled Senate from the bench, 5
And minister° in their steads. To general filths°
Convert o' th' instant green° virginity;
Do't in your parents' eyes. Bankrupts, hold fast
Rather than render back;° out with your knives,
And cut your trusters' throats. Bound° servants, steal; 10
Large-handed° robbers your grave masters are,
And pill° by law. Maid, to thy master's bed,
Thy mistress is o' th' brothel. Son of sixteen,
Pluck the lined° crutch from thy old limping sire,
With it beat out his brains. Piety, and fear, 15
Religion to° the gods, peace, justice, truth,
Domestic awe,° night-rest, and neighborhood,°
Instruction, manners, mysteries,° and trades,
Degrees,° observances, customs, and laws,
Decline to your confounding contraries,° 20
And let confusion° live. Plagues incident to° men,
Your potent and infectious fevers heap
On Athens ripe for stroke. Thou cold sciatica,
Cripple our senators, that their limbs may halt°
As lamely as their manners. Lust and liberty° 25
Creep in the minds and marrows of our youth,
That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive,
And drown themselves in riot. Itches, blains,°
Sow all th' Athenian bosoms, and their crop
Be general leprosy. Breath infect breath, 30
That their society, as their friendship, may Be merely° poison. Nothing I'll bear from thee
But nakedness, thou detestable° town;
Take thou that too, with multiplying bans.°
Timon will to the woods, where he shall find 35
Th' unkindest beast more kinder° than mankind.
The gods confound—hear me, you good gods all—
Th' Athenians both within and out that wall.
And grant, as Timon grows, his hate may grow
To the whole race of mankind, high and low. 40
Amen. Exit.

IV.i.6 minister govern; filths harlots (or, more generally, immoral acts or corruption) 7 green young, inexperienced 9 render back repay debts 10 Bound under obligation to serve for a stated period 11 Large-handed rapacious (usually means "generous") 12 pill steal 14 lined padded 16 Religion to religious concern for 17 Domestic awe the respect appropriate to domestic relations (to parents, home, etc.); neighborhood neighborliness 18 mysteries crafts, callings 19 Degrees social classes 20 confounding contraries opposites that destroy each other and so bring on general chaos 21 confusion ruin; incident to natural to 24 halt limp 25 liberty licentiousness 28 blains blisters 32 merely utterly 33 detestable primary accent on first syllable 34 multiplying bans ever-increasing curses (?) multiple curses (?) 36 more kinder (1) more generous, gracious (2) more natural, closer to the moral law of nature

[Scene II. Athens. Timon's house.]

Enter [FLAVIUS, the] steward, with two or three SERVANTS.

FIRST SERVANT

Hear you, master steward, where's our master?
Are we undone, cast off, nothing remaining?

FLAVIUS

Alack, my fellows, what should I say to you?
Let me be recorded° by the righteous gods,
I am as poor as you.

FIRST SERVANT Such a house broke?

So noble a master fall'n, all gone, and not
One friend to take his fortune° by the arm,
And go along with him?

SECOND SERVANT As we do turn our backs

From our companion thrown into his grave,
So his familiars to his buried fortunes°
Slink all away, leave their false vows with him,
Like empty purses picked; and his poor self,
A dedicated beggar to the air,°
With his disease of all-shunned poverty,
Walks like contempt alone.

Enter other SERVANTS.

More of our fellows.

FLAVIUS

All broken implements of a ruined house.

THIRD SERVANT

Yet do our hearts wear Timon's livery,
That see I by our faces; we are fellows° still,
Serving alike in sorrow. Leaked is our bark,
And we poor mates stand on the dying deck,
Hearing the surges threat. We must all part
Into this sea of air.°

FLAVIUS

Good fellows all,
The latest° of my wealth I'll share amongst you.
Wherever we shall meet, for Timon's sake,
Let's yet be fellows. Let's shake our heads and say,
As 'twere a knell unto our master's fortunes,
"We have seen better days." Let each take some.

[Gives money.]

Nay, put out all your hands. Not one word more;
Thus part we rich in sorrow, parting poor.

Embrace, and part several ways.

O the fierce wretchedness that glory brings us!
Who would not wish to be from wealth exempt,
Since riches point to° misery and contempt?
Who would be so mocked with glory, or to live°
But in a dream of friendship,
To have his pomp and all what state compounds°
But only painted,° like his varnished° friends?

IV.ii.4 Let . . . recorded let it be recorded of me 7 his fortune i.e., Timon in his ill fortune 10 his familiars . . . fortunes those who were the familiar friends of his now-buried fortunes (also suggests "familiar spirit," a personal servant from the spirit world) 13 dedicated . . . air a beggar vowed or doomed to wander about in the open air 18 fellows fellow servants 22 this . . . air the open air, which is as comfortless to us as is the sea to sailors on a sinking ship 23 latest last 32 point to lead to 33 to live i.e., who would wish to live 35 all . . . compounds all that worldly splendor is composed of 36 painted illusory; varnished fair-seeming

Poor honest lord, brought low by his own heart,
Undone by goodness. Strange, unusual blood,°
When man's worst sin is, he does too much good.
Who then dares to be half so kind° again?
For bounty, that makes gods, do still mar men.
My dearest lord, blessed to be° most accursed,
Rich only to be wretched, thy great fortunes
Are made thy chief afflictions. Alas, kind lord,
He's flung in rage from this ingrateful seat°
Of monstrous friends;
Nor has he with him to supply his life,°
Of that° which can command it.
I'll follow and inquire him out.
I'll ever serve his mind with my best will;
Whilst I have gold, I'll be his steward still.

40

45

50

Exit.

[Scene III. Before Timon's cave.]

Enter TIMON in the woods.

TIMON

O blessed breeding sun, draw from the earth
Rotten humidity;° below thy sister's orb°
Infect the air. Twinned brothers of one womb,
Whose procreation, residence, and birth,
Scarce is dividant°—touch° them with several° fortunes,
The greater scorns the lesser. Not nature,
To whom all sores lay siege, can bear great fortune
But by contempt of nature.°
Raise me this beggar, and deny't° that lord,
The senators shall bear contempt hereditary,°
The beggar native° honor.
It is the pasture lards the brother's sides,
The want that makes him lean.° Who dares? Who dares
In purity of manhood stand upright
And say, this man's a flatterer? If one be,
So are they all, for every grise° of fortune
Is smoothed° by that below. The learned pate°
Ducks to the golden fool.° All's obliquy;°
There's nothing level in our cursèd natures
But direct villainy. Therefore be abhorred
All feasts, societies, and throngs of men.
His semblable,° yea himself, Timon disdains;
Destruction fang° mankind. Earth, yield me roots.

5

10

15

20

38 blood disposition 40 half so kind i.e., as Timon was, who came to grief because of it 42 blessed to be blessed with wealth only to be 45 seat residence 47 to . . . life i.e., he has no food and drink 48 that money IV.iii.2 Rotten humidity humidity that causes things to rot; below . . . orb beneath the moon (i.e., in the middle air between earth and moon) 5 dividant divisible, separable; touch test; several different 6-8 Not . . . nature Human nature, which is subjected to all sorts of miseries, when it encounters good fortune rejects its own natural affection and despises mankind 9 deny't deny to raise 10 hereditary as if they were born that way and not simply victims of fortune's caprices 11 native as if he were born with it 12-13 It . . . lean i.e., the "twinned brothers" (line 3) are distinguished by their gifts of fortune; the rich pasture, and not any intrinsic worth, makes one brother fat and the other lean 16 grise step 17 smoothed flattered, facilitated by flattery; pate head 18 Ducks . . . fool inclines in deference to the rich fool; obliquy obliquity, moral crookedness 22 semblable anything like himself 23 fang (1) seize, as with fangs (2) provide with fangs

[Digs.]

Who seeks for better of thee, sauce° his palate
 With thy most operant° poison. What is here? 25
 Gold? Yellow, glittering, precious gold?
 No, gods, I am no idle votarist.°
 Roots, you clear° heavens! Thus much of this will make
 Black, white; foul, fair; wrong, right;
 Base, noble; old, young; coward, valiant. 30
 Ha, you gods! Why this? What this, you gods? Why
 this
 Will lug your priests and servants from your sides;
 Pluck stout men's pillows from below their heads.°
 This yellow slave
 Will knit and break religions, bless th' accursed, 35
 Make the hoar° leprosy adored, place° thieves,
 And give them title, knee, and approbation
 With senators on the bench. This is it
 That makes the wappened° widow wed again;
 She, whom the spital-house° and ulcerous sores°
 Would cast the gorge° at, this embalms and spices 40
 To th' April day° again. Come, damned earth,
 Thou common whore of mankind, that puts odds
 Among the rout of nations,° I will make thee
 Do thy right nature.° March afar off.
 Ha? A drum? Th' art quick,° 45
 But yet I'll bury thee. Thou't go,° strong thief,
 When gouty keepers of thee cannot stand.
 Nay, stay thou out for earnest.°

[Keeps some gold.]

Enter ALCIBIADES, with drum and fife, in warlike manner; and PHRYNIA and TIMANDRA.

ALCIBIADES

What art thou there? Speak.

TIMON

A beast as thou art. The canker° gnaw thy heart 50
 For showing me again the eyes of man.

ALCIBIADES

What is thy name? Is man so hateful to thee
 That art thyself a man?

TIMON

I am Misanthropos° and hate mankind.
 For thy part, I do wish thou wert a dog, 55
 That I might love thee something.°

ALCIBIADES

I know thee well,
 But in thy fortunes am unlearned and strange.°

24 sauce season 25 operant potent 27 no idle votarist
 i.e., I have not sworn my vow in an idle or trifling way 28 clear pure 33 Pluck . . . heads i.e., kill even strong men by sudden suffocation 36 hoar white; place elevate to a place or office of dignity 39 wappened sexually exhausted 40 spital-house hospital (especially for the lower classes and sufferers from loathsome diseases);
ulcerous sores i.e., those afflicted with ulcerous sores 41 cast the gorge vomit 41-42 embalms . . . day i.e., preserves, perfumes, and generally revivifies to a springlike and youthful amorousness 43-44 puts . . . nations sets the disorderly mob of nations at strife with one another 45 Do . . .
nature i.e., cause strife and dissension; quick (1) alive (2) speedily had and lost 46 go walk, move 48 for earnest as an installment 50 canker (1) ulcerous sore (2) canker-worm 54 Misanthropos the man-hater 56 something somewhat
 57 strange ignorant

TIMON

I know thee too, and more than that I know thee
 I not desire to know. Follow thy drum,
 With man's blood paint the ground gules,° gules. 60
 Religious canons, civil laws are cruel;
 Then what should war be? This fell° whore of thine
 Hath in her more destruction than thy sword,
 For all her cherubin look.

PHRYNIA

Thy lips rot off.

TIMON

I will not kiss thee; then the rot returns° 65
 To thine own lips again.

ALCIBIADES

How came the noble Timon to this change?

TIMON

As the moon does, by wanting° light to give.
 But then renew° I could not like the moon;
 There were no suns to borrow of. 70

ALCIBIADES

Noble Timon, what friendship may I do thee?

TIMON

None, but to maintain my opinion.°

ALCIBIADES

What is it, Timon?

TIMON

Promise me friendship, but perform none.
 If thou wilt not promise, the gods plague thee, 75
 For thou art a man. If thou dost perform,
 Confound thee, for thou art a man.

ALCIBIADES

I have heard in some sort of thy miseries.

TIMON

Thou saw'st them when I had prosperity.

ALCIBIADES

I see them now; then was a blessed time. 80

TIMON

As thine is now, held with a brace° of harlots.

TIMANDRA

Is this th' Athenian minion,° whom the world
 Voiced so regardfully?°

TIMON

Art thou Timandra?

TIMANDRA

Yes.

TIMON

Be a whore still; they love thee not that use thee.
 Give them diseases, leaving° with thee their lust. 85
 Make use of thy salt° hours. Season° the slaves
 For tubs and baths;° bring down rose-cheeked youth
 To the tub-fast and the diet.°

TIMANDRA

Hang thee, monster!

ALCIBIADES

Pardon him, sweet Timandra, for his wits
 Are drowned and lost in his calamities. 90
 I have but little gold of late, brave° Timon,

60 gules red (the heraldic term) 62 fell destructive 65 the rot returns based on a prevalent belief that by transmitting a venereal infection to another, one loses it himself 68 wanting lacking 69 renew (1) to become new (2) to extend a loan (as in the next line) 72 maintain my opinion i.e., be a misan-thropist, too 81 brace usually used for a pair of dogs on a leash 82 minion favorite, darling 83 Voiced so regardfully spoke of with so much regard 85 leaving while they leave 86 salt lustful, salacious; Season spice 87 tubs and baths sweating-tubs and hot baths (used to treat venereal disease) 88 tub-fast . . . diet fasting and special diet were treatments for venereal disease 91 brave excellent

The want whereof doth daily make revolt
In my penurious^o band. I have heard, and grieved,
How cursèd Athens, mindless of thy worth,
Forgetting thy great deeds, when neighbor states,
But for thy sword and fortune, trod^o upon them—

TIMON

I prithee beat thy drum^o and get thee gone.

ALCIBIADES

I am thy friend and pity thee, dear Timon.

TIMON

How dost thou pity him whom thou dost trouble?
I had rather be alone.

ALCIBIADES

Why fare thee well.

100

Here is some gold for thee.

TIMON

Keep it, I cannot eat it.

ALCIBIADES

When I have laid proud Athens on a heap—

TIMON

War'st thou 'gainst Athens?

ALCIBIADES

Ay, Timon, and have cause.

TIMON

The gods confound them all in thy conquest,^o
And thee after when thou hast conquerèd.

105

ALCIBIADES

Why me, Timon?

TIMON

That by killing of villains

Thou wast born to conquer my country.

Put up^o thy gold. Go on, here's gold, go on.

Be as a planetary plague,^o when Jove

Will o'er some high-vised city hang his poison

110

In the sick air. Let not thy sword skip one.

Pity not honored age for his white beard:

He is an usurer. Strike me the counterfeit matron:

It is her habit^o only that is honest,^o

Herself's a bawd. Let not the virgin's cheek

115

Make soft thy trenchant^o sword: for those milk paps,

That through the window-bars^o bore at men's eyes,

Are not within the leaf of pity writ,^o

But set them down horrible traitors. Spare not the babe

Whose dimpled smiles from fools exhaust^o their mercy: 120

Think it a bastard, whom the oracle

Hath doubtfully^o pronounced thy throat shall cut,

And mince it sans remorse.^o Swear against objects.^o

Put armor on thine ears and on thine eyes,

Whose proof^o nor yells of mothers, maids, nor babes, 125

Nor sight of priests in holy vestments bleeding,

Shall pierce a jot. There's gold to pay thy soldiers.

Make large confusion;^o and, thy fury spent,

Confounded be thyself. Speak not, begone.

ALCIBIADES

Hast^o thou gold yet, I'll take the gold thou givest me, 130
Not all thy counsel.

93 penurious needy 96 trod would have trodden 97 beat thy drum i.e., let thy drummer give the signal for departure 104 in thy conquest in your victory over them 108 Put up put away 109 planetary plague plague caused by the planets 114 habit dress; honest chaste 116 trenchant cutting 117 window-bars lattice work of a window (?) open-work squares of the bodice of a woman's frock (?) 118 within . . . writ written down on the page with the names of those who are to be pitied and spared 120 exhaust draw out, elicit 122 doubtfully ambiguously 123 mince . . . remorse cut it up without pity; objects objections, accusations of cruelty 125 proof high quality (of armor), impenetrability 128 confusion destruction 130 Hast if you have

TIMON

Dost thou or dost thou not, heaven's curse upon thee.

PHRYNIA AND TIMANDRA

Give us some gold, good Timon; hast thou more?

TIMON

Enough to make a whore forswear her trade,

And to make whores, a bawd.^o Hold up, you sluts, 135

Your aprons mountant.^o You are not oathable,^o

Although I know you'll swear, terribly swear

Into strong shudders and to heavenly agues

Th' immortal gods that hear you. Spare your oaths;

I'll trust to your conditions.^o Be whores still,^o 140

And he whose pious breath seeks to convert you,

Be strong in whore, allure him, burn him up;

Let your close fire predominate his smoke,^o

And be no turncoats. Yet may your pains six months

Be quite contrary.^o And thatch

145

Your poor thin roofs with burdens of the dead—^o

Some that were hanged, no matter.

Wear them, betray with them; whore still;

Paint till a horse may mire^o upon your face.

A pox of wrinkles!^o

PHRYNIA AND TIMANDRA

Well, more gold. What then?

150

Believe't that we'll do anything for gold.

TIMON

Consumptions^o sow

In hollow^o bones of man; strike their sharp^o shins,

And mar men's spurring. Crack the lawyer's voice,

That he may never more false title plead, 155

Nor sound his quilllets^o shrilly. Hoar the flamen,^o

That scolds against the quality of flesh^o

And not believes himself. Down with the nose,^o

Down with it flat, take the bridge quite away

Of him, that his particular to foresee, 160

Smells from the general weal.^o Make curled-pate ruffians bald,

And let the unscarred braggarts of the war

Derive some pain from you. Plague all,

That your activity may defeat and quell

The source of all erection.^o There's more gold. 165

135 And . . . bawd i.e., and enough to make a bawd give up her trade of making whores (or, perhaps, enough to make a whore set herself up as a bawd, making whores instead of being one) 136 aprons mountant rising aprons (a mock-heraldic phrase with sexual overtones); oathable capable of being placed under oath 140 conditions dispositions; still always 143 Let . . . smoke Let the hidden fire of your sexuality or disease dominate over the smoke of idle words of he who "seeks to convert you" 144-45 Yet . . . contrary May you spend six months of the year in being whores and the other six in repairing the physical damage occasioned by your debaucheries (?) 145-46 And . . . dead Wear wigs (or possibly false pubes) made from loads of hair taken from the dead (venereal disease was thought to cause loss of hair) 149 mire sink into the mire or mud (because of the thickness of cosmetics) 150 pox of wrinkles a pox on wrinkles, away with wrinkles (since they can be covered with cosmetics) 152 Consumptions wasting diseases (here venereal disease) 153 hollow . . . sharp i.e., the disease will make the bones hollow and the shins painful 156 quilllets subtle verbal distinctions; Hoar the flamen whiten the priest with disease, or cause his hair to turn white (possible pun on whore) 157 quality of flesh the nature of the flesh, sexual pleasure 158 Down . . . nose an effect of syphilis 160-61 his particular . . . weal to provide for his private advantage or profit, he abandons the proper scent that contributes to the public good or welfare 165 source . . . erection sexuality itself

Do you damn others, and let this damn you,
And ditches grave° you all.

PHRYNIA AND TIMANDRA

More counsel with more money, bounteous Timon.

TIMON

More whore, more mischief first; I have given you earnest.°

ALCIBIADES

Strike up the drum towards Athens. Farewell, Timon. 170
If I thrive well, I'll visit thee again.

TIMON

If I hope well,° I'll never see thee more.

ALCIBIADES

I never did thee harm.

TIMON

Yes, thou spok'st well of me.

ALCIBIADES

Call'st thou that harm?

TIMON

Men daily find it. Get thee away, and take 175
Thy beagles with thee.

ALCIBIADES

We but offend him. Strike!

[Drum beats.] Exeunt [ALCIBIADES,
PHRYNIA, and TIMANDRA].

TIMON

That nature, being sick of° man's unkindness,
Should yet be hungry! Common mother, thou,
[Digging]

Whose womb unmeasurable and infinite breast
Teems° and feeds all; whose selfsame mettle,° 180
Whereof thy proud child, arrogant man, is puffed,° Engenders the black toad and adder blue,
The gilded newt and eyeless venomèd worm,
With all th' abhorrèd births below crisp° heaven
Whereon Hyperion's quick'ning fire° doth shine; 185
Yield him, who all the human sons do hate,
From forth thy plenteous bosom, one poor root.
Ensear° thy fertile and conception° womb;
Let it no more bring out ingrateful man.
Go great° with tigers, dragons, wolves, and bears, 190
Teem with new monsters, whom thy upward face
Hath to the marbled mansion all above°
Never presented. O, a root, dear thanks!
Dry up thy marrows,° vines and plough-torn leas,
Whereof ingrateful man, with liquorish draughts 195
And morsels unctious,° greases his pure mind,
That from it all consideration° slips—

Enter APEMANTUS.

More man? Plague, plague!

APEMANTUS

I was directed hither. Men report

Thou dost affect° my manners, and dost use them. 200

167 grave be a grave for, bury 169 earnest a partial payment to seal a bargain 172 If . . . well if my hopes are realized 177 of as a result of 180 Teems brings forth; mettle (1) substance (2) vigorous spirit 181 puffed puffed up with pride 184 crisp with curled clouds (?) shining, clear (?) 185 Hyperion's quick'ning fire the sun was thought to have the power of generating some of the lower forms of insect life 188 Ensear dry up; conception conceiving, prolific 190 great pregnant 192 above in heaven 194 marrows the type of a rich food, not a necessity of life, produced by the "vines" and "leas" 196 unctious an obsolete variant form of unctuous 197 consideration ability to consider 200 affect imitate

TIMON

'Tis then because thou dost not keep a dog
Whom I would imitate. Consumption° catch thee.

APEMANTUS

This is in thee a nature but infected,°
A poor unmanly melancholy sprung
From change of future.° Why this spade? This place? 205
This slavelike habit° and these looks of care?
Thy flatterers yet wear silk, drink wine, lie soft,
Hug their diseased perfumes,° and have forgot
That ever Timon was. Shame not these woods
By putting on the cunning of a carper.° 210
Be thou a flatterer now, and seek to thrive
By that which has undone thee. Hinge thy knee,
And let his very breath whom thou'lt observe
Blow off thy cap;° praise his most vicious strain°
And call it excellent. Thou wast told thus.° 215
Thou gav'st thine ears, like tapsters° that bade welcome,
To knaves and all approachers. 'Tis most just
That thou turn rascal; hadst thou wealth again,
Rascals should have't. Do not assume my likeness.

TIMON

Were I like thee, I'd throw away myself. 220

APEMANTUS

Thou hast cast away thyself, being like thyself:
A madman so long, now a fool. What, think'st
That the bleak air, thy boisterous chamberlain,°
Will put thy shirt on warm? Will these moist° trees, 225
That have outlived the eagle, page thy heels
And skip when thou point'st out?° Will the cold brook,
Candied° with ice, caudle° thy morning taste
To cure thy o'er-night's surfeit?° Call the creatures
Whose naked natures live in all the spite
Of wreakful° heaven, whose bare unhousèd trunks, 230
To the conflicting elements exposed,
Answer mere nature.° Bid them flatter thee.
O thou shalt find—

TIMON

A fool of thee. Depart.

APEMANTUS

I love thee better now than e'er I did.

TIMON

I hate thee worse.

APEMANTUS

Why?

TIMON

Thou flatter'st misery. 235

202 Consumption any wasting disease 203 infected (1) affected, factitious (2) caught like an infection from your changed circumstances 205 change of future change in your material prospects 206 habit dress, garb 208 diseased perfumes diseased and perfumed mistresses 210 By . . . carper by pretending to the profession of a cynic or railer (which any fool can do) 213–14 let . . . cap kneel so obsequiously close to the person you are paying court to that his breath may blow off your cap 214 strain quality 215 Thou . . . thus in your prosperity others spoke to you in this manner 216 tapsters tavern-keepers or bartenders are proverbial for their indiscriminate hospitality 223 chamberlain one who waits on a king or lord in his bedchamber 224 moist damp 226 point'st out indicate your desires 227 Candied congealed, encrusted; caudle offer a caudle (a warm, spiced, mildly alcoholic drink given to the sick) 228 o'er-night's surfeit previous night's indulgence in drink 230 wreakful vengeful 232 Answer mere nature correspond to or reflect nature in its barest and most rigorous form

APEMANTUS

I flatter not, but say thou art a caitiff.^o

TIMON

Why dost thou seek me out?

APEMANTUS

To vex thee.

TIMON

Always a villain's office^o or a fool's.

Dost please thyself in't?

APEMANTUS

Ay.

TIMON

What, a knave too?

APEMANTUS

If thou didst put this sour cold habit^o on
 To castigate thy pride, 'twere well; but thou
 Dost it enforcedly.^o Thou'dst courtier be again
 Wert thou not beggar. Willing misery^o
 Outlives incertain pomp, is crowned before.^o
 The one is filling still,^o never complete;
 The other, at high wish.^o Best state, contentless,
 Hath a distracted and most wretched being,
 Worse than the worst, content.^o
 Thou shouldst desire to die, being miserable.

TIMON

Not by his breath^o that is more miserable.
 Thou art a slave, whom Fortune's tender arm
 With favor never clasped, but bred a dog.
 Hadst thou, like us, from our first swath^o proceeded
 The sweet degrees^o that this brief world affords
 To such as may the passive drudges^o of it
 Freely command, thou wouldst have plunged thyself
 In general riot,^o melted down thy youth
 In different beds of lust, and never learned
 The icy precepts of respect,^o but followed
 The sug'red game^o before thee. But myself—
 Who had the world as my confectionary,^o
 The mouths, the tongues, the eyes, and hearts of men
 At duty, more than I could frame employment;^o
 That numberless upon me stuck, as leaves
 Do on the oak, have with one winter's brush^o
 Fell^o from their boughs, and left me open, bare
 For every storm that blows—I to bear this,
 That never knew but better, is some burden.
 Thy nature did commence in sufferance,^o time
 Hath made thee hard in't. Why shouldst thou hate men?
 They never flattered thee. What hast thou given?

236 caitiff wretch 238 office duty 240 habit (1) garment
 (2) outward manner, bearing 242 enforcedly as if you were being forced to do it 243 Willing misery voluntary poverty 244 is crowned before comes earlier to the fulfillment of its desires and wishes 245 The one . . . still pomp, like a leaky vessel, can never be filled (or fulfilled) 246 The other . . .
wish "willing misery," because it wishes little, can easily arrive at the height of its wishes 246–48 Best . . . content
 A man in even the best material condition, if he is without content or happiness, is confused and wretched, worse than a man in the poorest condition who is contented 250 breath voice 253 swath swaddling clothes 253–54 proceeded . . .
degrees advanced from one stage to the next above it (in sense of academic "degrees") 255 passive drudges submissive menial servants 257 riot debauchery 259 icy . . .
respect the chilling rules of reason that constitute proper social conduct 260 sug'red game outwardly sweet quarry (probably whores) 261 confectionary a place where sweetmeats are made 263 frame employment invent work for 265 winter's brush brush of a wintry wind 266 Fell fallen 269 sufferance suffering

If thou wilt curse, thy father, that poor rogue,
 Must be thy subject; who in spite put stuff
 To^o some she-beggar and compounded thee
 Poor rogue hereditary. Hence, begone.
 If thou hadst not been born the worst^o of men,
 Thou hadst been a knave and flatterer.

275

APEMANTUS

Art thou proud yet?

TIMON

Ay, that I am not thee.

APEMANTUS

I, that I was

No prodigal.

240

TIMON

I, that I am one now.

Were all the wealth I have shut up in thee,
 I'd give thee leave to hang it. Get thee gone.
 That^o the whole life of Athens were in this!
 Thus would I eat it. [Eats a root.]

280

245

APEMANTUS

Here, I will mend^o thy feast.[Offers him food.]

TIMON

First mend my company, take away thyself.

APEMANTUS

250

So I shall mend mine own, by th' lack of thine.

285

TIMON

'Tis not well mended so, it is but botched;^o
 If not, I would it were.

APEMANTUS

255

What wouldst thou have to^o Athens?

TIMON

Thee thither in a whirlwind. If thou wilt,
 Tell them there I have gold; look, so I have.

290

APEMANTUS

260

Here is no use for gold.

TIMON

The best and truest;

For here it sleeps and does no hired harm.

APEMANTUS

Where liest a nights, Timon?

265

TIMON

Under that's above me.^o

Where feed'st thou a days, Apemantus?

APEMANTUS

Where my stomach finds meat, or rather where I eat it.

295

TIMON

Would poison were obedient and knew my mind!

270

APEMANTUS

Where wouldst thou send it?

TIMON

To sauce thy dishes.

APEMANTUS

The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends. When thou wast in thy guilt and thy perfume, they mocked thee for too much curiosity;^o in thy rags thou know'st none, but art despised for the contrary. There's a medlar^o for thee; eat it.

300

TIMON On what I hate I feed not.

305

APEMANTUS

Dost hate^o a medlar?

273–74 put stuff To made pregnant (contemptuous) 276 worst i.e., in social and financial position 282 That would that 283 mend improve 286 botched clumsily repaired (because Apemantus is still present—with himself) 288 to in 293 that's above me that which is above me, the sky 302 curio- sity carefulness, fastidiousness 304 medlar a fruit like a small brown-skinned apple, not ready to be eaten until in the early stages of decay 306 hate "eat" and "hate" were pronounced alike in Elizabethan English

TIMON Ay, though it look like thee.

APEMANTUS And° th' hadst hated meddlers° sooner, thou shouldst have loved thyself better now. What man didst thou ever know unthrift° that was beloved 310 after° his means?

TIMON Who, without those means thou talk'st of, didst thou ever know beloved?

APEMANTUS Myself.

TIMON I understand thee; thou hadst some means to 315 keep a dog.°

APEMANTUS What things in the world canst thou nearest compare to thy flatterers?

TIMON Women nearest, but men—men are the things themselves. What wouldst thou do with the world, 320 Apemantus, if it lay in thy power?

APEMANTUS Give it the beasts, to be rid of the men.

TIMON Wouldst thou have thyself fall in the confusion of men,° and remain a beast with the beasts?

APEMANTUS Ay, Timon. 325

TIMON A beastly ambition, which the gods grant thee t' attain to. If thou wert the lion, the fox would beguile° thee. If thou wert the lamb, the fox would eat thee. If thou wert the fox, the lion would suspect thee, when peradventure° thou wert accused by the ass. If 330 thou wert the ass, thy dullness would torment thee, and still thou liv'dst but as a breakfast to the wolf. If thou wert the wolf, thy greediness would afflict thee, and oft thou shouldst hazard thy life for thy dinner. Wert thou the unicorn,° pride and wrath would 335 confound° thee, and make thine own self the conquest of thy fury. Wert thou a bear, thou wouldst be killed by the horse. Wert thou a horse, thou wouldst be seized by the leopard. Wert thou a leopard, thou wert german° to the lion, and the spots° of thy kindred 340 were jurors° on thy life. All thy safety were remotion,° and thy defense absence. What beast couldst thou be that were not subject to a beast? And what a beast art thou already, that see'st not thy loss in transformation!°

APEMANTUS If thou couldst please me with speaking 345 to me, thou mightst have hit upon it here. The commonwealth of Athens is become a forest of beasts.

TIMON How has the ass broke the wall, that thou art out of the city?

APEMANTUS Yonder comes a poet and a painter.° 350 The plague of company light upon thee! I will fear to catch it, and give way.° When I know not what else to do, I'll see thee again.

TIMON When there is nothing living but thee, thou shalt be welcome. I had rather be a beggar's dog than 355 Apemantus.

APEMANTUS

Thou art the cap° of all the fools alive.

TIMON

Would thou wert clean enough to spit upon.

APEMANTUS

A plague on thee, thou art too bad to curse.

TIMON

All villains that do stand by thee° are pure. 360

APEMANTUS

There is no leprosy but what thou speak'st.

TIMON

If I name thee.

I'll beat thee, but I should infect my hands.

APEMANTUS

I would my tongue could rot them off.

TIMON

Away, thou issue of a mangy dog. 365

Choler° does kill me that thou art alive;

I swoond° to see thee.

APEMANTUS Would thou wouldst burst.

TIMON Away, thou tedious rogue, I am sorry I shall 370 lose a stone by thee.

[Throws a stone at him.]

APEMANTUS Beast!

TIMON Slave!

APEMANTUS Toad!

TIMON

Rogue, rogue, rogue!

I am sick of this false world, and will love naught 375

But even the mere necessities upon't.°

Then, Timon, presently° prepare thy grave.

Lie where the light foam of the sea may beat

Thy gravestone daily. Make thine epitaph,

That death in me° at others' lives may laugh. 380

[To the gold.]

O thou sweet king-killer, and dear divorce

'Twixt natural° son and sire, thou bright defiler

Of Hymen's° purest bed, thou valiant Mars,

Thou ever young, fresh, loved, and delicate wooer,

Whose blush° doth thaw the consecrated snow 385

That lies on Dian's° lap. Thou visible god,

That sold'rest close impossibilities°

And mak'st them kiss; that speak'st with every tongue

To every purpose. O thou touch° of hearts,

Think thy slave man rebels, and by thy virtue 390

Set them into confounding odds,° that beasts

May have the world in empire.

APEMANTUS

Would 'twere so,

308 And if; meddlers (1) the fruit (2) busybodies, intriguers (3) those who overindulge in sexual intercourse
310 unthrift prodigal, spendthrift 311 after in accordance with (i.e., the true love for an "unthrift" is not in proportion with his bounty) 316 a dog i.e., you had just enough to keep a dog so that something might love you
323–24 confusion of men the original fall in the Garden of Eden 328 beguile trick 330 peradventure perchance
335 unicorn an untamable beast, who, in his fury to attack the treed lion, runs his horn into the tree and puts himself at the mercy of the lion 336 confound destroy 340 german akin; spots (1) markings (2) moral stains, vices 341 jurors witnesses (especially false ones); remotion removal of yourself (to a distance), remoteness 344 in transformation in seeking to be transformed into a beast 350 poet . . . painter they do not actually enter until the beginning of Act V 352 give way retire

357 cap chief, summit 360 that . . . thee compared to you
366 Choler anger 367 swoond swoon 376 But . . . upon't except the bare necessities of life 377 presently immediately
380 in me by my example 382 natural son by birth (does not mean "illegitimate") 383 Hymen Greek god of marriage
385 blush glow 386 Dian Diana, the virgin huntress, Greek goddess of chastity 387 sold'rest close impossibilities joins closely together things thought to be irreconcilable 389 touch touchstone 391 into confounding odds at ruinous strife

But not till I am dead. I'll say th' hast gold.

Thou wilt be thronged to shortly.

TIMON Thronged to?

APEMANTUS Ay.

TIMON

Thy back, I prithee.

APEMANTUS Live, and love thy misery. 395

TIMON

Long live so, and so die. I am quit.^o

Enter the BANDITTI.

APEMANTUS

Moe things like men! Eat, Timon, and abhor them.

Exit APEMANTUS.

FIRST BANDIT Where should he have his gold? It is some poor fragment, some slender ort^o of his remainder. The mere^o want of gold, and the falling-from^o 400 of his friends, drove him into this melancholy.

SECOND BANDIT It is noised^o he hath a mass of treasure.

THIRD BANDIT Let us make the assay^o upon him. If he care not for't, he will supply us easily; if he covet- 405 ously reserve it, how shall's get it?

SECOND BANDIT True, for he bears it not about him; 'tis hid.

FIRST BANDIT Is not this he?

ALL Where? 410

SECOND BANDIT 'Tis his description.

THIRD BANDIT He? I know him.

ALL Save thee,^o Timon.

TIMON Now, thieves?

ALL

Soldiers, not thieves.

TIMON Both too, and women's sons. 415

ALL

We are not thieves, but men that much do want.^o

TIMON

Your greatest want is, you want much of meat.^o

Why should you want? Behold, the earth hath roots;

Within this mile break forth a hundred springs;

The oaks bear mast,^o the briers scarlet hips;^o 420

The bounteous huswife^o Nature on each bush

Lays her full mess^o before you. Want? Why want?

FIRST BANDIT

We cannot live on grass, on berries, water,

As beasts and birds and fishes.

TIMON

Nor on the beasts themselves, the birds and fishes; 425

You must eat men. Yet thanks I must you con^o

That you are thieves professed, that you work not

In holier shapes; for there is boundless theft

In limited^o professions. Rascal thieves,

Here's gold. Go, suck the subtle^o blood o' th' grape, 430

Till the high fever^o seethe your blood to froth,

396 quit rid (of Apemantus) 399 ort leftover bit 400 mere sheer; falling-from falling-off 402 noised rumored 404 make the assay put it to the test 413 Save thee God save thee (a conventional salutation) 416 want need, lack 417 you . . . meat you desire (or lack) a good deal of food (i.e., if you didn't eat so much your wants would be smaller) 420 mast acorns (generally fed to swine); hips fruit of the rose 421 huswife housewife 422 mess meal 426 con offer 429 limited limited in numbers, restricted (as a guild) 430 subtle treacherous 431 high fever i.e., of drunkenness

And so 'scape hanging. Trust not the physician;

His antidotes are poison, and he slays

Moe^o than you rob. Take wealth and lives together,

Do, villain, do, since you protest^o to do't. 435

Like workmen, I'll example you with thievery:^o

The sun's a thief, and with his great attraction^o

Robs the vast sea. The moon's an arrant thief,

And her pale fire she snatches from the sun.

The sea's a thief, whose liquid surge resolves 440

The moon into salt tears.^o The earth's a thief,

That feeds and breeds by a composture^o stol'n

From gen'ral excrement. Each thing's a thief.

The laws, your curb and whip, in their rough power

Has unchecked theft. Love not yourselves; away, 445

Rob one another. There's more gold; cut throats,

All that you meet are thieves. To Athens go,

Break open shops; nothing can you steal

But thieves do lose it. Steal less for this I give you,^o

And gold confound you howsoe'er.^o Amen. 450

THIRD BANDIT Has almost charmed me from my profession by persuading me to it.

FIRST BANDIT 'Tis in the malice of mankind^o that he thus advises us, not to have us thrive in our mystery.^o 455

SECOND BANDIT I'll believe him as an enemy,^o and give over^o my trade.

FIRST BANDIT Let us first see peace in Athens; there is no time so miserable but a man may be true.^o

Exit THIEVES.

Enter [FLAVIUS,] the steward to Timon.

FLAVIUS

O you gods! 460

Is yond despised and ruinous^o man my lord?

Full of decay and failing? O monument

And wonder^o of good deeds evilly bestowed!

What an alteration of honor^o has desp'rate want made!

What vilder^o thing upon the earth than friends, 465

Who can bring noblest minds to basest ends!

How rarely does it meet with this time's guise,^o

When man was wished^o to love his enemies!

Grant I may ever love, and rather woo

Those that would mischief me than those that do.^o 470

Has caught me in his eye; I will present

434 Moe more 435 protest profess 436 Like . . . thievery As one instructs workmen by practical example, so I will give you some precedents for your line of work, thievery 437 attraction drawing power 440-41 whose . . . tears the idea is that the sea's tides are stolen from the moon's precipitation 442 composture compost, manure 449 Steal . . . you even if you steal less because of the gold I am giving you 450 howsoe'er nevertheless 453 in . . . mankind because of the malice Timon bears to all mankind 455 mystery trade, profession 456 I'll . . . enemy Since he is an enemy, I'll do the opposite of what he advises 457 give over give up 458-59 there . . . true You can become an honest man any time you choose (therefore, why do it now?) 461 ruinous ruined 462-63 monument And wonder wonderful monument (memorial or tombstone) 464 alteration of honor change (for the worse) in honor 465 vilder viler 467 How . . . guise How excellently does Timon's example fit in with the moral tone of these times (spoken ironically) 468 wished desired (by God) 470 Those . . . do I will love those enemies who are direct and open in their desire to harm me better than those who harm me under the guise of friendship

My honest grief unto him, and as my lord
Still serve him with my life. My dearest master.

TIMON

Away! What art thou?

FLAVIUS

Have you forgot me, sir?

TIMON

Why dost ask that? I have forgot all men.

475

Then, if thou grunt'st° th' art a man,

I have forgot thee.

FLAVIUS

An honest poor servant of yours.

TIMON

Then I know thee not.

I never had honest man about me, I; all 480

I kept were knaves,° to serve in meat to villains.

FLAVIUS

The gods are witness,

Nev'r did poor steward wear a truer grief

For his undone lord than mine eyes for you.

TIMON

What, dost thou weep? Come nearer. Then I love thee 485

Because thou art a woman, and disclaim'st

Flinty° mankind, whose eyes do never give°

But thorough° lust and laughter. Pity's sleeping.

Strange times, that weep with laughing, not with weeping!

FLAVIUS

I beg of you to know me, good my lord,

490

T' accept my grief, and whilst this poor wealth lasts,

To entertain° me as your steward still.

TIMON

Had I a steward

So true, so just, and now so comfortable?°

It almost turns my dangerous nature mild.

495

Let me behold thy face. Surely, this man

Was born of woman.

Forgive my general and exceptless° rashness,

You perpetual-sober gods. I do proclaim

One honest man. Mistake me not, but one.

500

No more I pray—and he's a steward.

How fain would I have hated all mankind,

And thou redeem'st thyself. But all save thee

I fell° with curses.

Methinks thou art more honest now than wise;

505

For, by oppressing° and betraying me,

Thou might'st have sooner got another service.°

For many so arrive at second masters

Upon their first lord's neck.° But tell me true—

510

For I must ever doubt,° though ne'er so sure—

Is not thy kindness subtle, covetous,

A usuring kindness, as rich men deal° gifts,

Expecting in return twenty for one?

FLAVIUS

No, my most worthy master, in whose breast

Doubt and suspect,° alas, are placed too late.

515

You should have feared false times when you did feast.

Suspect still° comes where an estate is least.

That which I show, heaven knows, is merely° love,

Duty and zeal to your unmatched mind,

Care of your food and living; and believe it,

520

My most honored lord,

For any benefit that points° to me,

Either in hope or present, I'd exchange

For this one wish, that you had power and wealth

To requite me by making rich yourself.

525

TIMON

Look thee, 'tis so. Thou singly° honest man,

Here, take. The gods out of my misery

Has sent thee treasure. Go, live rich and happy,

But thus conditioned:° thou shalt build from° men;

Hate all, curse all, show charity to none,

530

But let the famished flesh slide from the bone

Ere thou relieve the beggar. Give to dogs

What thou deniest to men. Let prisons swallow 'em,

Debts wither 'em to nothing; be men like blasted°

woods,

And may diseases lick up their false bloods.

535

And so farewell, and thrive.

FLAVIUS

O let me stay and comfort you, my master.

TIMON

If thou hat'st curses

Stay not; fly, whilst thou art blessed and free.

Ne'er see thou man, and let me ne'er see thee.

540

Exit [FLAVIUS; and exit TIMON into his cave].

[A C T V]

[Scene I. Before Timon's cave.]

Enter POET and PAINTER; [TIMON listens from his cave, unseen].

PAINTER As I took note of the place, it cannot be far where he abides.

POET What's to be thought of him? Does the rumor hold for true that he's so full of gold?

505

PAINTER Certain. Alcibiades reports it. Phrynia and Timandra had gold of him. He likewise enriched poor straggling soldiers° with great quantity. 'Tis said he gave unto his steward a mighty sum.

5

510

POET Then this breaking° of his has been but a try° for his friends?

10

PAINTER Nothing else. You shall see him a palm° in Athens again, and flourish with the highest. Therefore 'tis not amiss we tender° our loves to him in this supposed distress of his. It will show honestly° in us, and is very likely to load our purposes with what they 15

476 grunt'st i.e., even your claim to be a man is delivered in an animal grunt (since all men are bestial) 481 knaves (1) servants (2) villains 487 Flinty hardhearted; give weep 488
But thorough except through 492 entertain receive into service 494 comfortable comforting 498 exceptless making no exceptions 504 fell cause to fall, strike down 506 oppressing distressing 507 service position as a servant 509 Upon . . . neck by treading down their first master and mounting on his neck (or shoulders) 510 doubt suspect, fear 512 deal distribute

515 suspect suspicion 517 still always 518 merely entirely
522 points might accrue 526 singly (1) uniquely (2) truly 529 But thus conditioned with this condition; from away from 534 blasted blighted
V.i.7 soldiers the banditti, who claimed to be soldiers 9 breaking going bankrupt; try test 11 palm cf. Psalm 92:11,
"The righteous shall flourish like the palm-tree" 13 tender offer 14 honestly honorably travail° for, if it be a just and true report that goes of his having.°

POET What have you now to present unto him?

PAINTER Nothing at this time but my visitation; only I will promise him an excellent piece. 20

POET I must serve him so too, tell him of an intent that's coming toward him.

PAINTER Good as the best. Promising is the very air o' th' time; it opens the eyes of expectation. Performance is ever the duller for his act,° and but in the 25 plainer and simpler kind of people, the deed of saying° is quite out of use. To promise is most courtly and fashionable; performance is a kind of will or testament, which argues a great sickness in his judgment that makes it. 30

Enter TIMON from his cave.

TIMON [Aside.] Excellent workman, thou canst not paint a man so bad as is thyself.

POET I am thinking what I shall say I have provided for him. It must be a personating of himself;° a satire against the softness° of prosperity, with a discovery° 35 of the infinite flatteries that follow youth and opulency.

TIMON [Aside.] Must thou needs stand for° a villain in thine own work? Wilt thou whip thine own faults in other men? Do so, I have gold for thee.

POET Nay, let's seek him. 40

Then do we sin against our own estate,°
When we may profit meet, and come too late.

PAINTER True.

When the day serves, before black-cornered night,°
Find what thou want'st by free and offered light. 45
Come.

TIMON [Aside.]

I'll meet you at the turn.°
What a god's gold, that he is worshiped
In a baser temple° than where swine feed!
'Tis thou that rig'st the bark and plough'st the foam, 50
Settlest admirèd reverence° in a slave.
To thee be worshiped and thy saints for aye;°
Be° crowned with plagues that thee alone obey.
Fit I meet them.

[Comes forward.]

POET

Hail, worthy Timon.

PAINTER Our late noble master. 55

TIMON

Have I once° lived to see two honest men?

POET

Sir,

Having often of your open bounty tasted,

16 travail (1) labor (2) travel 17 having wealth 25 his act its act, its having been put into action 26 deed of saying the doing of what a person says he will do 34 personating of himself representation of Timon and his situation 35 softness weakness, flabbiness; discovery revelation (a theatrical term) 37 stand for serve as a model for 41 estate fortune, material possessions 44 black-cornered night night which creates dark corners and is obscure like them 47 I'll . . . turn I will match your tricks with better ones of my own 49 baser temple the human body 51 Settlest admirèd reverence establishes a wondering awe (of his master) 52 for aye forever 53 Be may they be 56 once indeed (an intensive)

Hearing you were retired,° your friends fall'n off,
Whose thankless natures, O abhorred spirits, 60
Not all the whips of heaven are large enough—
What, to you,

Whose star-like nobleness gave life and influence°
To their whole being! I am rapt,° and cannot cover 65
The monstrous bulk of this ingratitude
With any size° of words.

TIMON Let it go;

Naked, men may see't the better.

You that are honest, by being what you are,
Make them° best seen and known.

PAINTER He and myself 70
Have traveled in the great show'r of your gifts,
And sweetly felt it.

TIMON Ay, you are honest men.

PAINTER

We are hither come to offer you our service.

TIMON

Most honest men. Why, how shall I requite you?
Can you eat roots and drink cold water? No?

BOTH

What we can do, we'll do to do you service. 75

TIMON

Y' are honest men. Y' have heard that I have gold,
I am sure you have. Speak truth, y' are honest men.

PAINTER

So it is said, my noble lord, but therefore
Came not my friend nor I.

TIMON

Good honest men. Thou draw'st a counterfeit° 80
Best in all Athens. Th' art indeed the best;
Thou counterfeit'st most lively.°

PAINTER

So-so, my lord.

TIMON

E'en so, sir, as I say. And for thy fiction,°
Why thy verse swells with stuff so fine and smooth° 85
That thou art even natural in thine art.°
But for all this, my honest-natured friends,
I must needs say you have a little fault;
Marry,° 'tis not monstrous in you, neither wish I
You take much pains to mend.

BOTH

Beseech your honor

To make it known to us.

TIMON

You'll take it ill. 90

BOTH

Most thankfully, my lord.

TIMON

Will you indeed?

BOTH

Doubt it not, worthy lord.

TIMON

There's never a one of you but trusts a knave
That mightily deceives you.

BOTH

Do we, my lord?

59 retired withdrawn 63 influence i.e., astrological influence
64 rapt° carried away with emotion 66 size (1) magnitude
(2) starchlike glue used on cloth, especially before painting on it 69 them the thankless natures of his fair-weather friends 80 counterfeit (1) representation, picture (2) false representation 82 most lively in a most lifelike manner 83 fiction imaginative feigning 84 smooth polished (with implication of flattery) 85 thou . . . art (1) your writings represent a triumph of nature over art; your art conceals itself (2) you show your evil natural self in your artful dissimulation 88 Marry indeed

TIMON

Ay, and you hear him cog,^o see him dissemble,
 Know his gross patchery,^o love him, feed him,
 Keep^o in your bosom, yet remain assured
 That he's a made-up^o villain.

PAINTER

I know none such, my lord.

POET

Nor I.

TIMON

Look you, I love you well; I'll give you gold:
 Rid me these villains from your companies.
 Hang them, or stab them, drown them in a draught,^o
 Confound^o them by some course, and come to me,
 I'll give you gold enough.

BOTH

Name them, my lord, let's know them.

TIMON

You that way, and you this; but two in company.^o
 Each man apart, all single and alone,
 Yet an arch-villain keeps him company.

[To one.]

If where thou art, two villains shall not be,
 Come not near him. [To the other.] If thou wouldst not reside

But^o where one villain is, then him abandon.

Hence, pack,^o there's gold; you came for gold, ye slaves.

[To one.]

You have work for me, there's payment. Hence!

[To the other.]

You are an alchemist, make gold of that.

Out, rascal dogs!

[Beats them out, then retires into his cave.]

Enter [FLAVIUS, the] steward, and two SENATORS.

FLAVIUS

It is vain that you would speak with Timon,
 For he is set so only to himself^o
 That nothing but himself, which looks like man,
 Is friendly with him.

FIRST SENATOR Bring us to his cave.

It is our part and promise^o to th' Athenians
 To speak with Timon.

SECOND SENATOR At all times alike

Men are not still the same; 'twas time and griefs
 That framed him thus. Time with his fairer hand
 Offering the fortunes of his former days,
 The former man may make him. Bring us to him,
 And chance it^o as it may.

FLAVIUS

Here is his cave.

Peace and content be here. Lord Timon! Timon!

Look out, and speak to friends. Th' Athenians

By two of their most reverend Senate greet thee.

Speak to them, noble Timon.

95 cog cheat 96 patchery roguery 97 Keep let him dwell
 98 made-up complete 102 draught privy, sink 103 Confound destroy 106 but . . . company i.e., wherever either of them is, there is both a poet (or painter) and a villain III
 But except 112 pack be off 117 is . . . himself is so completely preoccupied with himself 120 our . . . promise the role we promised to play 126 chance it may it turn out

Enter TIMON out of his cave.

TIMON

Thou sun that comforts, burn! Speak and be hanged.
 For each true word a blister,^o and each false
 Be as a cauterizing to the root o' th' tongue,
 Consuming it with speaking.

FIRST SENATOR

Worthy Timon—

TIMON

Of none but such as you, and you of Timon.

FIRST SENATOR

The Senators of Athens greet thee, Timon.

TIMON

I thank them, and would send them back the plague,
 Could I but catch it for them.

FIRST SENATOR

O forget

What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.^o

The Senators, with one consent of love,^o

Entreat thee back to Athens, who have thought

On special dignities, which vacant lie

For thy best use and wearing.^o

SECOND SENATOR

They confess

Toward thee forgetfulness too general^o gross;

Which now the public body,^o which doth seldom

Play the recanter, feeling in itself

A lack of Timon's aid, hath sense withal^o

Of it own fall,^o restraining^o aid to Timon;

And send forth us to make their sorrowed render,^o

Together with a recompense more fruitful^o

Than their offense can weigh down by the dram^o—

Ay, even such heaps and sums of love and wealth

As shall to thee blot out what wrongs were theirs,

And write in thee the figures^o of their love,

Ever to read them^o thine.

TIMON

You witch^o me in it;

Surprise me to the very brink of tears.

Lend me a fool's heart and a woman's eyes,

And I'll bewep these comforts,^o worthy Senators.

FIRST SENATOR

Therefore so please thee to return with us,

And of our Athens, thine and ours, to take

The captainship, thou shalt be met with thanks,

Allowed^o with absolute power, and thy good name

Live with authority. So soon we shall drive back

Of Alcibiades th' approaches wild,

Who like a boar too savage doth root up

His country's peace.

SECOND SENATOR And shakes his threat'ning sword

Against the walls of Athens.

FIRST SENATOR

Therefore, Timon—

132 For . . . blister an ironic reversal of the proverbial belief that a lie causes a blister on the tongue 139 in thee in the wrongs we have caused you 140 consent of love harmonious voice of affection 143 For . . . wearing only you are suited to fill these dignities with the proper distinction 144 general universally 145 the public body the Senate as representative of the body politic 147 withal at the same time 148 it own fall its own fall from grace; restrain-ing keeping back 149 sorrowed render sorrowful rendering of an account 150 fruitful abundant 151 weigh . . . dram balance in weight even if measured to the last tiny unit 154 figures (1) written characters (2) numerals (as in counting money) (3) images, representations 155 them the Athenians as represented in the "figures of their love"; witch bewitch 158 comforts pleasures 162 Allowed endowed

TIMON

Well, sir, I will; therefore I will, sir, thus:
 If Alcibiades kill my countrymen,
 Let Alcibiades know this of Timon, 170
 That Timon cares not. But if he sack fair Athens,
 And take our goodly agèd men by th' beards,
 Giving our holy virgins to the stain
 Of contumelious,° beastly, mad-brained war,
 Then let him know, and tell him Timon speaks it, 175
 In pity of our agèd and our youth,
 I cannot choose but tell him that I care not,
 And let him take't at worst.° For their knives care not
 While you have throats to answer.° For myself,
 There's not a whittle° in th' unruly camp° 180
 But I do prize it at my love° before
 The reverend'st throat in Athens. So I leave you
 To the protection of the prosperous° gods,
 As thieves to keepers.°

FLAVIUS Stay not, all's in vain.

TIMON

Why I was writing of my epitaph;
 It will be seen tomorrow. My long sickness
 Of health and living now begins to mend,
 And nothing° brings me all things. Go, live still;
 Be Alcibiades your plague, you his,
 And last° so long enough. 185

FIRST SENATOR We speak in vain. 190

TIMON

But yet I love my country, and am not
 One that rejoices in the common wrack,°
 As common bruit° doth put it.

FIRST SENATOR That's well spoke.

TIMON

Commend me to my loving countrymen.

FIRST SENATOR

These words become° your lips as they pass thorough
 them. 195

SECOND SENATOR

And enter in our ears like great triumphers°
 In their applauding gates.°

TIMON Commend me to them,

And tell them that to ease them of their griefs,
 Their fears of hostile strokes, their aches,° losses,
 Their pangs of love, with other incident throes° 200
 That nature's fragile vessel doth sustain
 In life's uncertain voyage, I will some kindness do
 them;
 I'll teach them to prevent° wild Alcibiades' wrath.

FIRST SENATOR

I like this well; he will return again.

174 contumelious insolent 178 take't at worst put the worst interpretation he wishes on it 179 throats to answer throats to be cut by the knives of Alcibiades' soldiers (and voices to protest for yourselves) 180 whittle small knife; th' unruly camp (1) the party of those revolting against Athens (2) the disorderly, turbulent army (of Alcibiades) 181 prize . . . love value it in my esteem 183 prosperous propitious 184 As . . . keepers as I would leave thieves to the protection of their jailers 188 nothing nothingness, oblivion 190 last endure 192 wrack destruction 193 bruit rumor 195 become befit 196 triumphers triumphant marchers 197 applauding gates city gates thronged with those applauding the triumph 199 aches two syllables, pronounced "aitches" 200 incident throes agonies likely to occur 203 prevent anticipate (but First Senator interprets "to keep from occurring")

TIMON

I have a tree which grows here in my close,° 205
 That mine own use invites me to cut down,
 And shortly must I fell it. Tell my friends,
 Tell Athens, in the sequence of degree,°
 From high to low throughout, that whoso please
 To stop affliction, let him take his haste; 210
 Come hither ere my tree hath felt the ax,
 And hang himself. I pray you do my greeting.

FLAVIUS

Trouble him no further; thus you still° shall find him.

TIMON

Come not to me again, but say to Athens,
 Timon hath made his everlasting mansion 215
 Upon the beachèd verge of the salt flood,°
 Who° once a day with his embossèd° froth
 The turbulent surge shall cover. Thither come,
 And let my gravestone be your oracle.°
 Lips, let four words go by and language end.° 220
 What is amiss, plague and infection mend.
 Graves only be men's works and death their gain.
 Sun, hide thy beams; Timon hath done his reign.

Exit TIMON.

FIRST SENATOR

His discontents are unremovably
 Coupled to nature.° 225

SECOND SENATOR

Our hope in him is dead. Let us return,
 And strain° what other means is left unto us
 In our dear° peril.

FIRST SENATOR It requires swift foot. Exeunt.

[Scene II. Before the walls of Athens.]

Enter two other SENATORS, with a MESSENGER.

THIRD SENATOR

Thou hast painfully discovered.° Are his files°
 As full as thy report?

MESSENGER I have spoke the least.°
 Besides, his expedition° promises
 Present° approach.

FOURTH SENATOR

We stand much hazard if they bring not Timon. 5

MESSENGER

I met a courier, one mine ancient° friend,
 Whom though in general part° we were opposed,
 Yet our old love made a particular° force,

205 close enclosure 208 sequence of degree proper order of the social hierarchy 213 still always 216 beachèd . . . flood edge of the sea that forms a beach 217 Who "the beachèd verge"; embossèd covered with foam (usually from the mouth of a hunted animal) 219 be your oracle be consulted by you as if it were an oracle (a place where divine pronouncements are made, or the god making such pronouncements) 220 let . . . end speak only a few more words ("four" is used indefinitely) and then not speak any further 225 Coupled to nature a part of his nature 227 strain exert to the utmost 228 dear grievous, dire
V.ii.1 Thou . . . discovered (1) Your revelation was painful to us (2) You have made your revelation in painstaking detail; files ranks 2 spoke the least reported the minimum 3 expedition speed 4 Present immediate 6 ancient former 7 in general part in matters of general or public interest 8 particular personal

And made us speak like friends. This man was riding
From Alcibiades to Timon's cave 10
With letters of entreaty, which imported°
His fellowship i' th' cause against your city,
In part for his sake moved.°

Enter the other SENATORS [from Timon].

THIRD SENATOR Here come our brothers.

FIRST SENATOR

No talk° of Timon, nothing of him expect.
The enemy's drum is heard, and fearful scouring° 15
Doth choke the air with dust. In, and prepare.
Ours is the fall, I fear, our foes the snare.° Exeunt.

[Scene III. Before Timon's cave.]

Enter a SOLDIER in the woods, seeking Timon.

SOLDIER

By all description this should be the place.
Who's here? Speak, ho! No answer? What is this?°
"Timon is dead, who hath outstretched his span.°"
Some beast read this; there does not live a man."°
Dead, sure, and this his grave. What's on this tomb 5
I cannot read. The character I'll take with wax;°
Our captain hath in every figure° skill,
An aged° interpreter, though young in days
Before proud Athens he's set down° by this,
Whose fall the mark° of his ambition is. Exit. 10

[Scene IV. Before the walls of Athens.]

Trumpets sound. Enter ALCIBIADES, with his POWERS, before Athens.

ALCIBIADES

Sound to this coward and lascivious town
Our terrible° approach.

Sounds a parley.° The SENATORS appear upon the walls.°

Till now you have gone on, and filled the time
With all licentious measure,° making your wills
The scope° of justice. Till now, myself and such 5
As slept° within the shadow of your power,

Have wandered with our traversed° arms and breathed
Our sufferance vainly.° Now the time is flush,°
When crouching marrow in the bearer strong°
Cries, of itself, "No more." Now breathless wrong° 10
Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease,°
And pursy° insolence shall break his wind
With fear and horrid° flight.

FIRST SENATOR

Noble and young,
When thy first griefs° were but a mere conceit,°
Ere thou hadst power or we had cause of fear, 15
We sent to thee to give thy rages balm,
To wipe out our ingratitude with loves
Above their° quantity.

SECOND SENATOR

So did we woo
Transformèd Timon to our city's love
By humble message and by promised means.° 20
We were not all unkind, nor all deserve
The common stroke of war.

FIRST SENATOR

These walls of ours
Were not erected by their hands from whom
You have received your grief; nor are they such
That these great tow'rs, trophies, and schools° should 25 fall
For private faults in them.

SECOND SENATOR

Nor are they living
Who were the motives that you first went out.°
Shame that they wanted, cunning in excess
Hath broke their hearts.° March, noble lord,
Into our city with thy banners spread. 30
By decimation and a tithèd death,°
If thy revenges hunger for that food
Which nature loathes, take thou the destined tenth,
And by the hazard of the spotted die,°
Let die the spotted.°

FIRST SENATOR

All have not offended. 35
For those that were, it is not square° to take
On those that are, revenge. Crimes, like lands,
Are not inherited. Then, dear countryman,
Bring in thy ranks, but leave without° thy rage.
Spare thy Athenian cradle and those kin 40
Which in the bluster° of thy wrath must fall
With those that have offended. Like a shepherd,
Approach the fold° and cull th' infected forth,
But kill not all together.

SECOND SENATOR

What thou wilt,

11 imported bore as their message (with additional suggestion of "importuned" or urged) 13 moved instigated 14 No talk let us not talk 15 scouring scurrying about (in preparation for battle) 17 our . . . snare our foes are the snare or trap that will cause the downfall of Athens

V.iii.2 What is this presumably the Soldier finds an inscription or trial epitaph composed by Timon in English, which the Soldier can read, whereas the epitaph on Timon's tomb is in Latin, which the Soldier cannot read 3 outstretched his span lived beyond his allotted or desired life span 4 there . . . man all men left alive are merely beasts 6 character . . . wax I will take a wax impression of the letters 7 figure written character 8 aged experienced 9 set down i.e., in a siege 10 mark goal

V.iv.2 terrible terrifying 2 s.d. Sounds a parley i.e., by a special signal on drum or trumpet, Alcibiades calls for a conference with the enemy to try to make peace; upon the walls i.e., upon the upper stage 4 With . . . measure with all kinds of unbridled conduct 5 scope extent 6 slept (1) were asleep, inactive (2) lived

7 traversed folded across (in resignation) 7-8 breathed . . . vainly spoke in vain about our sufferings 8 flush ripe 9 When . . . strong when the resolute man's courage is aroused 10 breathless wrong wrongdoers breathless through fear 11 great . . . ease comfortably upholstered chairs of state 12 pursy short-winded 13 horrid horrible 14 griefs grievances; conceit idea 18 their the antecedent is either "griefs" or "rages" or both 20 means conditions of peace (or possibly "riches") 25 trophies, and schools monuments, and public buildings 27 motives . . . out instigators or movers of your original banishment 28-29 Shame . . . hearts i.e., their hearts were broken with remorse for two common moral failings: lack of a sense of disgrace for their wrongdoing and excess of crafty deceit 31 decimation . . . death the killing of one person in ten 34 by . . . die by chance, as in dice ("die" is the singular of "dice") 35 spotted (1) guilty (2) those selected by the "spots" on the dice 36 square honest 39 without outside 41 bluster tempest 43 fold enclosure for sheep or the flock itself

Thou rather shalt enforce it with thy smile
Than hew to't° with thy sword.

FIRST SENATOR Set but thy foot
Against our rampired° gates, and they shall ope,
So° thou wilt send thy gentle heart before
To say thou't enter friendly.

SECOND SENATOR Throw thy glove,
Or any token of thine honor else,
That thou wilt use the wars as thy redress
And not as our confusion.° All thy powers° Shall make their harbor° in our town till we
Have sealed° thy full desire.

ALCIBIADES Then there's my glove.
Descend and open your unchargèd ports.°
Those enemies of Timon's and mine own
Whom you yourselves shall set out for reproof,°
Fall, and no more. And to atone° your fears
With my more noble meaning,° not a man
Shall pass his quarter,° or offend the stream
Of regular justice in your city's bounds,
But shall be remedied° to your public laws
At heaviest answer.°

BOTH SENATORS 'Tis most nobly spoken.

ALCIBIADES
Descend, and keep your words.

[The SENATORS descend, and open the gates.]

Enter a SOLDIER.

SOLDIER

My noble general, Timon is dead,

46 hew to't cut thy way to it 47 rampired fortified 48 So provided that 52 confusion destruction; powers armed forces 53 make their harbor be billeted 54 sealed solemnly ratified (by fulfilling) 55 unchargèd ports unassailed gates 57 reproof shame 58 atone appease 59 meaning intention 60 quarter billet (?) area of duty (?) 62 remedied turned over for remedy 63 At heaviest answer for the maximum punishment

45 Entombed upon the very hem° o' th' sea,
And on his gravestone this insculpture° which
With wax I brought away, whose soft impression
Interprets° for my poor ignorance.

ALCIBIADES reads the epitaph.°

ALCIBIADES
50 "Here lies a wretched corse,° of wretched soul bereft. 70 Seek not my name. A plague consume you, wicked caitiffs° left.
Here lie I, Timon, who alive all living men did hate.
Pass by and curse thy fill, but pass, and stay not here thy gait."
55 These well express in thee thy latter° spirits.
Though thou abhorr'dst in us our human griefs, 75
Scorn'dst our brains' flow,° and those our droplets which 60 From niggard° nature fall; yet rich conceit°
Taught thee to make vast Neptune weep for aye°
On thy low grave, on faults forgiven. Dead
Is noble Timon, of whose memory 80
Hereafter more. Bring me into your city,
And I will use the olive with my sword,° Make war breed peace, make peace stint° war, make each
Prescribe to other, as each other's leech.°
Let our drums strike. Exeunt. 85

65 66 hem edge (the "beachèd verge" of V.i.216) 67 insculpture inscription 69 Interprets acts as an interpreter 69 s.d.
epitaph there are two epitaphs here, both from North's Plutarch, and it seems very likely that one of them—probably the first—was intended to be omitted 70 corse corpse 71 caitiffs wretches 74 latter later, more recent 76 brains' flow tears 77 niggard stingy; rich conceit fanciful imagination 78 for aye forever 82 use . . . sword combine the olive branch of peace with the sword of war, show mercy even though I enter your city as a conqueror 83 stint cause to stop 84 leech physician

PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE

EDITED BY ERNEST SCHANZER

Introduction

Pericles presents several unique problems. Most critics agree that, while Acts III, IV, and V are substantially Shakespeare's, Acts I and II are not. The questions to be asked, therefore, are: Who is the author of Acts I and II? And, further, how did the non-Shakespearean first two acts come to be joined to the Shakespearean last three acts? As to this there are two main possibilities: (1) that Shakespeare collaborated with another playwright, as he did a few years later with John Fletcher in Henry VIII, The Two Noble Kinsmen, and the lost Cardenio; (2) that Shakespeare came across a complete play on the subject of Pericles and began to rewrite it at the point where the subject matter caught his imagination, the point at which Pericles, during a storm at sea, is suddenly confronted with the death of his wife and the birth of his daughter. According to this hypothesis, Shakespeare, being an extremely busy man, did not bother to rewrite the first two acts, except, perhaps, to add a few touches here and there.

Of these two possibilities the latter seems to me by far the more likely. That Shakespeare should have collaborated with the author of the first two acts seems very improbable. To collaborate with John Fletcher is one thing; to collaborate with the exceedingly mediocre talent that could produce Acts I and II of Pericles, quite another. It is true that these first two acts must have been a good deal better than they are in the text in which they have come down to us. For the quarto text—and this adds greatly to the intricate problems presented by the play—is very corrupt, not only in Acts I and II, but in the Shakespearean part as well. Whole lines are missing, others are garbled, verse is frequently set out as prose, and occasionally prose as verse. It is, most scholars agree, a text based on a report made from visits to the theater, and bears the usual marks of such a reported text—above all, a large number of auditory errors and mislineation of Shakespeare's blank verse.

The quarto of Pericles, then, is, in many ways, very imperfect. But where for other Shakespeare plays with bad quarto texts we also have a good text, for Pericles we have only the one text, published for the first time in 1609, in what was, no doubt, a pirated edition (that is, it was printed without the permission of Shakespeare and his company). The problem of the authorship of the first two acts is therefore made much more difficult by the absence of any good text of the play, and scholars have not been able to agree on the probable identity of the author, though various candidates, such as Thomas Heywood, George Wilkins, and, most recently, John Day, have been put forward.

The whole matter is further complicated by the publication in 1608 of a prose narrative by George Wilkins, entitled The Painfull Aduentures of Pericles Prince of Tyre, "being," we are assured on the title page, "the true History of the Play of Pericles, as it was lately presented by the worthy and ancient Poet Iohn Gower." And in The Argument of the whole Historie the reader is entreated "to receiue this Historie in the same maner as it was vnder the habite of ancient Gower the famous English Poet, by the Kings Maiesties Players [that is, Shakespeare's company] excellently presented." There is every indication that Wilkins' claim is trustworthy: that he had witnessed one or more performances of Shakespeare's play and had based his novel on this, while also drawing freely (and without acknowledgment) on Laurence Twine's prose version of the same story, The Patterne of Painefull Aduentures, which had been reprinted in 1607, and is one of the two chief sources of Pericles. In publishing his novel in 1608 Wilkins, no doubt, attempted to exploit the great popularity which the play, according to all indications, enjoyed from the outset.

Wilkins' novel is of great interest and value since, next to the quarto text, it provides the only clue that we possess about the nature of the play as performed by Shakespeare's company. Not only can editors of Pericles draw on it in devising their stage directions (as has been done in this edition, for instance, at II.ii.16, where the s.d. "As each Knight passes, his page, who goes before him, presents his shield to Princess Thaisa" is based on Wilkins' "their Pages before them bearing their Deuices on their shields . . . which being by the knights Page deliuered to the Lady"), but they can find support in it for emendations of corrupt readings in the quarto text. For example, the change of the quarto's certainly corrupt "untimely" to "uncomely" at I.i.129 is strongly supported by Wilkins' "hee was become both father, sonne, and husband by his vncomely and abhorred actions with his owne child." At one point in the text of this edition (III.ii.84–87) even a whole sentence, which in the quarto is manifestly corrupt, Cerimon's

I heard of an Egyptian
That had nine hours lien dead,
Who was by good appliance recoverèd, has been replaced by the corresponding sentence in Wilkins' narrative, which, with the words in parentheses omitted, sounds very much like Shakespeare's verse and thus may well reproduce what he had written: "I haue read of some Egyptians, who after foure houres death (if man may call it so) haue raised impouerished bodies, like to this, vnto their former health."

Lastly, there is one scene where the quarto text is undoubtedly deficient, and where Wilkins' novel, even if we cannot draw on it for emendations, affords us glimpses of what the main outline of the Shakespearean original appears to have been. It is the scene between Marina and Lysimachus in the brothel (IV.vi.69–121). In Wilkins' novel, as in the play, Lysimachus is depicted as an old client of the bawd, led to the brothel by lust. But in the novel, as the result of Marina's passionate pleas and reproaches, he undergoes a reformation, declaring: "I hither came with thoughtes intemperate, foule and deformed, the which your paines so well hath laued, that they are now white." It is here that the novel diverges most sharply from the play, where, at the corresponding point, Lysimachus is made to declare:

For me, be you thoughten
That I came with no ill intent; for to me
The very doors and windows savor vilely. (IV.vi.113–15)

This stands, of course, in complete contradiction to what we have been shown in the first part of the scene, where Lysimachus is presented as an old and favorite client. This contradiction has led some scholars to suggest that Lysimachus' later claims reflect a change of mind on Shakespeare's part, a belated attempt to make him a more acceptable husband for Marina. But it seems incredible that Shakespeare should not have bothered to bring the earlier part of the scene into line with this new conception. Furthermore, the writing, which is for the most part Shakespearean up to line 109, ceases to be so at precisely the point at which Lysimachus protests his innocence, and we get such wretched un-Shakespearean stuff as his "For me, be you thoughten. . . ." I believe, then, that lines 109–21 represent the reporter's attempt to reconstruct an only dimly remembered passage, which, for some reason, was missing in his report, and that in doing so he turned Lysimachus from a character somewhat like that of Bertram in All's Well That Ends Well into one closer to the duke in Measure for Measure. The great value of Wilkins' account of this scene is not only that he preserved for us what I believe to be Shakespeare's version of it, which had been distorted by the reporter, but that he incidentally seems to have kept a good many of Shakespeare's lines which are missing in the quarto text, as the following extract from the dialogue between Marina and Lysimachus will show. The lines which seem to me Shakespearean have been italicized and the blank verse line division has been indicated.

If you take from mee mine honour, you are like him, / that makes a gappe into forbidden ground, after whome too many enter, and you are guiltie of all their euilles: my life is yet vnspotted, my chastitie vnstained in thought. Then if your violence deface this building, / the workemanship of heauen, made vp for good, and not to be the exercise of sinnes intemperaunce, you do kill your owne honour, abuse your owne iustice, and impouerish me. Why quoth Lysimachus, this house wherein thou liuest, / is euen the receptacle of all mens sinnes, / and nurse of wickednesse, and how canst thou then be otherwise then naught, that liuest in it? It is not good, answered Marina, when you that are the Gouvernour, who should liue well, the better to be bolde to punish euill, doe knowe that there is such a rooffe, and yet come vnder it. Is there a necessitie (my yet good Lord) if there be fire before me, that I must strait then thither flie and burne my selfe? Or if suppose this house, (which too too many feelee such houses are) / should be the Doctors patrimony, and Surgeons feeding; folowes it therefore, that I must needs infect my self to giue them maintenance? O my good Lord, kill me, but not deflower me, punish me how you please, so you spare my chastitie, and since it is all the dowry that both the Gods haue giuen, and men haue left to me, do not you take it from me; make me your seruant, I will willingly obey you; make mee your bondwoman, I will accompt it freedome; let me be / the worst that is called vile, so I may still / liue honest, I am content: or if you thinke it is too blessed a happinesse to haue me so, let me euen now, now in this minute die, and Ile accompt my death more happy than my birth. With which wordes (being spoken vpon her knees) while her eyes were the glasses that carried the water of her mishap, the good Gentlewoman being mooued, hee lift her vp with his hands, and euen then imbraced her in his hart, saying aside: Now surely this is Vertues image, / or rather, Vertues selfe, sent downe, from heauen, / a while to raigne on earth, to teach vs what we should be. So in steede of willing her to drie her eyes, he wiped the wet himselfe off, and could haue found in his heart, with modest thoughts to haue kissed her, but that hee feared the offer would offend her. This onely hee sayde, Lady, for such your vertues are, a farre more worthy stile your beuty challenges, and no way lesse your beauty can promise me that you are, I hither came / with thoughtes intemperate, foule and deformed, the which your paines so well hath laued, that they are now white, continue still to all so, and for my parte, who hither came but to haue payd the price, / a peece of golde for your virginittie, now giue you twenty to releue your honesty. It shall become you still / to be euen as you are, a peece of goodnesse, / the best wrought vppe, that euer Nature made, and if that any shall inforce you ill, if you but send to me, I am your friend. With which promise, leauing her presence, she most humbly thanked the Gods for the preseruatiō of of her chastitie, and the reformation of his mind.

I should mention at this point a hypothesis that attempts to account for the stylistic differences between the first two and the last three acts of the play in a radically different way from those mentioned so far. In an important article (Shakespeare Survey 5, pp. 25–49) Professor Philip Edwards has suggested that Shakespeare may have been responsible for the entire play, and that the difference in style between the two parts may be due to the different methods adopted by two reporters: the one reporting Acts I and II, the other Acts III–V. The former welds into mediocre verse the words, phrases and general sense of the original so far as he can remember them. He is at his best in prose, where remodeling is not attempted. The second reporter, perhaps giving the original very much more faithfully than his predecessor, makes no attempt at rewriting, and after the first scene does not make more than desultory attempts to write down the verse in lines.

This hypothesis is in many ways attractive. For instance, it accounts better than any other for the intermittent occurrence in the first two acts of lines that are manifestly Shakespearean. But there are several grave objections to it, which make it in my view untenable: (1) It seems hard to believe that two men should be willing to adopt such utterly different methods of reporting in order to achieve a composite text. (2) If the first two acts were really by Shakespeare, then those lines in the quarto text that are identical with passages in Wilkins' novel ought to be acceptable Shakespearean verse. But this is clearly not so. For example:

A gentleman of Tyre; my name Pericles;
My education been in arts and arms;
Who, looking for adventures in the world,
Was by the rough seas reft of ships and men,
And after shipwreck driven upon this shore. (II.iii.83–87)

agrees almost word for word with the corresponding passage in Wilkins' narrative, but is plainly not Shakespearean. (3) If the report of the last three acts of the play is so much more faithful than that of the first two acts, we ought to find more verbal echoes of the quarto in the part of Wilkins' narrative corresponding to the last three acts than in that corresponding to the first two. In fact, rather the reverse is the case.

The likeliest hypothesis seems to me, then, that late in 1607 or early in 1608, at about the time he was writing Antony and Cleopatra, Shakespeare came across a manuscript play on the subject of Pericles (which may or may not have been performed on the stage), written by some very minor playwright; that he rewrote entirely the last three acts, and had it performed by his company at the Globe Theatre in the spring of 1608.¹ But it seems that Shakespeare rewrote not only the last three acts, but also occasional lines in the first two acts and, I believe, one whole scene, II.i.

As we read through the wooden, jog-trot, largely end-stopped verse of the first two acts, we come across lines that are late-Shakespearean in diction and movement. The most notable example of this occurs in the play's opening scene, in Pericles' speech to King Antiochus after he has solved the riddle. It begins with the mediocre verse typical of the author of the first two acts:

¹ The latest date of composition of the Shakespearean part of Pericles, May 1608, seems provided by the play's entry in the Stationers' Register in that month. Its earliest date seems determined chiefly by the style of the verse, which cannot be much earlier than 1607.

Great king,
Few love to hear the sins they love to act;
'Twould braid yourself too near for me to tell it.
Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
He's more secure to keep it shut than shown;
For vice repeated is like the wand'ring wind
Blows dust in others' eyes to spread itself;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear:
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear
To stop the air would hurt them. (I.i.92–101)

Then come a few lines that are unmistakably Shakespearean:

The blind mole casts
Copped hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is thronged
By man's oppression; and the poor worm doth die for't. (I.i.101–03)

And then the former verse continues on its jog-trot way.

As for the opening scene of Act II, consisting of a mixture of verse and prose, few commentators have been bold enough to assign it to Shakespeare. But if it is not his work, it is remarkably like it, in both its verse and prose; and it certainly cannot be by the author of the remainder of the first two acts, for it is utterly different in style and manner. If we make allowance for the corruption of the text, there is nothing in the scene that one needs deny to Shakespeare. Pericles' opening speech is quite Shakespearean, though it deteriorates toward the end:

Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven!
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly man
Is but a substance that must yield to you. (II.i.1–3)

There enter three Fishermen, and the ways in which they are made instantly real and vivid with the greatest economy of means, and in which they dispense their worldly wisdom and witticisms, bear the mark of Shakespeare. The Fishermen's prose is counterpointed by Pericles' verse, and some of this is undoubtedly Shakespearean, for example,

What I have been I have forgot to know;
But what I am want teaches me to think on:
A man thronged up with cold. (II.i.75–77)

and two lines toward the end of the scene, which no one but Shakespeare could have written:

And spite of all the rapture of the sea,
This jewel holds his building on my arm. (II.i.161–62)

There remains still the problem of the authorship of the choruses. This is made much more difficult by the fact that they are written in a purposely archaic idiom, to suit their speaker, the poet Gower, a contemporary of Chaucer, whose version of the story in his Confessio Amantis served as the play's main source (see A Note on the Sources). Most of the choruses are clearly written in imitation of the octosyllabic couplets in which Gower had told his story. And their archaic idiom also suits the old tale that is the play's subject matter. Ben Jonson referred to Pericles contemptuously as a "moldy tale," but the appearance of the mold of antiquity is clearly just what its authors wished to achieve. This is vividly brought home to us by the opening lines of Gower's first chorus (lines 1-10). From the first, the story's antiquity is emphasized as one of its chief virtues.

Which of the choruses are by Shakespeare, and which by the author of Acts I and II? All the indications are that the Shakespearean choruses start precisely where we would expect—at the beginning of Act III. Shakespeare tries to maintain a certain continuity with the earlier choruses in the play by using archaic diction and octosyllabic couplets (though he abandons these for decasyllables after the opening chorus of Act IV). But though written purposely in a naive and simple idiom, the Shakespearean choruses are quite devoid of the clumsy, empty, elliptic diction and lame rhythm of the earlier choruses. The juxtaposition of a few lines from each will make the difference manifest. Here are the opening lines of the chorus at the beginning of Act II:

Here have you seen a mighty king
His child iwis to incest bring;
A better prince and benign lord
That will prove awful both in deed and word.
Be quiet, then, as men should be,
Till he hath passed necessity.
I'll show you those in trouble's reign
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation,
To whom I give my benison,
Is still at Tharsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he spoken can;
And, to remember what he does,
Build his statue to make him glorious.
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?

And here, by contrast, are the opening lines of the chorus at the beginning of Act III:

Now sleep y-slackèd hath the rout;
No din but snores the house about,
Made louder by the o'erfed breast
Of this most pompous marriage feast.
The cat, with eyne of burning coal,
Now couches 'fore the mouse's hole;
And crickets sing at the oven's mouth
All the blither for their drouth.
Hymen hath brought the bride to bed,
Where by the loss of maidenhead
A babe is molded. Be attent,
And time that is so briefly spent
With your fine fancies quaintly eche.
What's dumb in show I'll plain with speech.

We still have archaisms ("y-slackèd," "eyne"), but the verse is incomparably more vivid, vigorous, and accomplished. Moreover, into these Shakespearean choruses enters an element not found in those of Acts I and II, but familiar to us from the choruses in Henry V: the audience is repeatedly asked to use its imagination to eke out what is being presented on the stage (for example, "And time that is so briefly spent/With your fine fancies quaintly eche";

"In your supposing once more put your sight:/Of heavy Pericles think this his bark").

The story of Pericles, or Apollonius of Tyre, as he was called prior to Shakespeare's play, had been one of the most popular tales in the Middle Ages and the Renaissance. Probably it goes back to Hellenistic times, having its origin in some lost Greek romance. Not only the story's names and settings point to this (Pentapolis is located in the play as somewhere in Greece, while Tyre, Ephesus, Antioch, Tharsus, and Mytilene, where the rest of the action takes place, are all on or near the coast of Asia Minor), but the outline of the story is typical of the Greek romances. These are tales of marvelous adventures, marked by an abundance of shipwrecks; hairbreadth escapes from wild beasts, bandits, or pirates; innocent maidens, who preserve their virtue in spite of all assaults; and ending in miraculous reunions of parents and children, brothers and sisters, husbands and wives, long believed dead. The main emotion that the Greek romances set out to arouse in the reader is a sense of wonder at the strange incidents that they describe. And a sense of wonder is also one of the main emotions aroused by Shakespeare's Last Plays; "rare," "strange," "wonderful," "like an old tale," are expressions that characters in these plays use again and again to voice their response to the events they witness, and this response is also shared by the audience.

In the English drama written before Shakespeare there is one type of play which sets out to evoke this response, and which is linked with the Greek romances: the miracle play or dramatized saint's legend, a form of drama highly popular beginning with the twelfth century, and still performed in Shakespeare's youth. Unfortunately, few of these plays have survived, but from these and extant French miracle plays one can infer their nature. Like the Greek romances, they are tales of strange adventures, separations, wanderings across seas and lands, rescues miraculously effected, dangers overcome and trials passed, until the final triumph of reunion with loved relatives or the triumph of martyrdom. It has been claimed—justly, I think—that these miracle plays had a much more profound influence on the development of English Renaissance drama than had the medieval mystery plays. And the editor of the New Arden Pericles has suggested that it was from such miracle plays that the broad structural features of the play may be derived.

In its structure Pericles is unlike any of Shakespeare's earlier comedies. This can be seen most readily if we compare the handling of time. In the comedies before Pericles Shakespeare either observed the most rigorous unity of time, as in The Comedy of Errors, or he contained the action within a few days, as in A Midsummer Night's Dream, or at most within a few months, as in All's Well That Ends Well. But nowhere had he used a time scheme similar to that of Pericles, where between Acts III and IV there is a time gap of fourteen years. This time scheme is used once more in The Winter's Tale, where between Acts III and IV there is an interval of sixteen years. And in both plays, while in the first three acts our attention centers on the royal father (Pericles, Leontes), in the fourth act his place is taken by his daughter (Marina, Perdita), while the fifth act is given over to the reunion of father and daughter, followed by the reunion of husband and wife. In consequence we have in these two plays a kind of double focus, upon father and daughter, which is quite unlike anything found in Shakespeare's other plays.² In the earlier comedies our attention is sometimes divided between different pairs of lovers, as in The Two Gentlemen of Verona, Love's Labor's Lost, and The Taming of the Shrew; or between different groups of characters, as in A Midsummer Night's Dream, As You Like It, and Twelfth Night. But nowhere else do we have this shift of focus from father to daughter, and the great gap of time in the middle of the play.

In The Winter's Tale this structure is all-important as a vehicle of the play's significances by contrasting the images of wintry barrenness and desolation centering on Leontes with images of spring and fertility centering on Perdita. In Pericles the function of the double focus is less immediately obvious. The parallels between the misfortunes that befall father and daughter—in both cases their afflictions begin with a plot to murder them, which they escape, only to be overtaken by further calamities—have a similar effect to the parallels between main plot and subplot in King Lear and Timon of Athens. The sudden and violent blows of fortune that strike Marina, as they had struck her father, deepen and widen the play's image of the world as a lasting storm, whirring us from our friends (IV.i.19–20). But to this parallel Shakespeare adds a contrast, found in the way in which father and daughter respond to these afflictions.

A number of critics in recent years have claimed that Pericles, as Shakespeare depicts him, is an embodiment of patience in adversity, a kind of male Griselda-figure, and that the play presents an exemplum of this virtue of patience that leads to restoration and happiness. Now it is true that, compared to his prototypes in the sources, Pericles behaves under the earlier blows of fortune with much moderation and restraint. For instance, in his reception of the news of his wife's death, where in Gower and Twine he indulges in the most frantic display of grief, in Shakespeare's scene he expresses it much less vehemently. Yet nothing suggests to me here that he is meant to be seen as an embodiment of patience in adversity. The nurse, Lychorida, repeatedly calls upon him to be patient: "Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm" (assist, that is, by his loud cries of grief); "Patience, good sir,/Even for this charge" (III.i.19, 26–27). It would be odd to be preaching patience to a figure embodying that virtue. His reception of the news of Marina's death, as described in dumb show and chorus, suggests even less that Shakespeare thought of Pericles as pre-eminently a patient man. "Cleon shows Pericles the tomb," we are told, "whereat Pericles makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs." And Gower comments:

And Pericles, in sorrow all devoured,
With sighs shot through and biggest tears o'ershowered,
Leaves Tharsus and again embarks. He swears
Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs.
He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He bears
A tempest, which his mortal vessel tears,
And yet he rides it out. (IV.iv.25–31)

² This double focus is well brought out by the quarto's title page: "The late, And much admired Play, Called Pericles, Prince of Tyre. With the true Relation of the whole Historie, adventures, and fortunes of the said Prince: As also, The no lesse strange, and worthy accidents, in the Birth and Life, of his Daughter Mariana."

The "tempest, which his mortal vessel tears" is, of course, the storm of his "mighty passion" that ravages his mortal body. He does not die ("And yet he rides it out"). But he shuts himself away from all human society, and when Marina visits him, he has not spoken to a living soul for three months. Can Shakespeare really have thought that this is the way in which exemplars of patience accept the blows of fortune? Wilkins certainly thought otherwise, and makes clear his view of Pericles' action of shutting himself away from his fellow men by making Lysimachus declare that "though his misfortunes haue beene great, and by which he hath great cause for this sorrow, it is great pitty he should continue thus peruerse and obstinate, or so noble a gentleman come to so dishonorable a death," and having Marina tell her father that "hee was borne a Prince, whose dignity being to gouerne others, it was most foule in him to misgouerne himselfe."

Neither can I believe in the suggestion made by one of the proponents of this view (J. M. S. Tompkins in Review of English Studies [1952], 315 ff.)—a suggestion that has been widely accepted—that Shakespeare called his hero "Pericles" after the Athenian statesman, whose life he could have read in Plutarch, who stresses the patience of his hero at the beginning and end of the "Life." I can perceive no resemblance between the two, apart from the fact that they are both excellent fellows. Previously it had been held—and, I think, rightly—that the name was derived from the Arcadia, Sir Philip Sidney's great prose romance, which is full of incidents like those described in Pericles. One of its two heroes, called Pyrocles, is depicted as a pattern of all princely virtues. That Shakespeare had Sidney's hero in mind while writing his play seems proved by the fact that Marina's description of her father's behavior during the storm at sea in which she was born closely follows Sidney's account of Pyrocles' behavior during the storm at sea that precedes his shipwreck.³ Like Sidney's hero, Pericles is depicted as an exemplar not of patience but of all princely excellences. The episodes in the first two acts—often claimed, I believe unjustly, to be insufficiently integrated with the rest of the play—serve not only to present instances of the many blows of fortune that strike Pericles, but also to exhibit his various excellences: his perspicacity in solving Antiochus' riddle (even if it does not seem to us a particularly hard one); his loving care of his subjects, which makes him grieve over the danger to which he has unwittingly exposed them; his ³ That the author of the first two acts had Pyrocles in mind when writing of his hero's adventures seems indicated by II.i. and II.ii. As J. C. Maxwell has pointed out, there is nothing in previous versions of the story about the fishing up of the rusty armor, or about the hero's participation and victory in a tournament. In Gower he takes part and excels in athletic games held in the presence of the king; in Twine he gains the king's favor by his expertise in playing tennis with him and washing him in his bath. The idea of Pericles entering the lists anonymously, in an old, rusty armor inherited from his father, with a pair of bases made from a fisherman's cloak, and proving victorious over all rivals, would seem to have been suggested by Sidney's description of how Pyrocles, in mean attire, entered the lists and defeated the champion at a tournament at the court of King Basilius: "For he had neither picture, nor device; his armor of as old a fashion (besides the rusty poorness) that it might better seem a monument of his grandfather's courage; about his middle he had, instead of bases, a long cloak of silk, which, as unhandsomely as it needs must, became the wearer . . ." (Arcadia, I.17.5).

surpassing excellence in the tournament; his accomplishment in ballroom dancing in full armor (in the Arcadia it is the other hero, Musidorus, who dances featly in armor); his supreme skill as a musician; and his modesty, courtesy, and graceful bearing throughout these scenes. Only in his response to the blows of fortune does he fall short of the princely ideal, most signally in his self-seclusion from all human society after being falsely persuaded of the death of Marina. In this he again resembles Pyrocles, whose only discernible fault is a lack of patience in adversity, which culminates in the episode in which he attempts to brain himself by running his head against the wall, after being falsely persuaded of the death of his beloved Philoclea. (The parallel is increased by the resemblance between Dionyza and Sidney's Cecropia, which has been noted by commentators.)

Just as Pericles is depicted as the pattern of all princely excellences, so Marina is shown to be the pattern of all excellences becoming to a princess. This is made manifest both in the action and in Gower's commentary upon it, above all in his opening choruses in Acts IV and V. If we are looking for a figure in the play exemplifying patience in adversity, it is here that it is to be found. This is emphasized in the great recognition scene, when Pericles exclaims:

Tell thy story.
If thine, considered, prove the thousandth part
Of my endurance, thou art a man, and I
Have suffered like a girl; yet thou dost look
Like Patience gazing on kings' graves, and smiling
Extremity out of act. (V.i.138-43)

Her endurance has, in fact, proved much greater than his. Instead of shutting herself up in her grief, after suffering a series of afflictions that more than equal his, this fourteen-year-old girl becomes the admired teacher of many skills to pupils of noble race. She then endures Pericles' initial rough reception of her, yet continues to look "Like Patience gazing on kings' graves, and smiling/Extremity out of act."

We have seen, then, that the play's double focus on father and daughter serves to bring out a contrast as well as a parallel between them, both of which are important to the play's full effect. Elsewhere, too, in Pericles such basic parallels and contrasts are to be found. In the non-Shakespearean part there is above all the extended parallel and contrast between the main action of Act I and Act II. Having presented in Act I the wicked king with his wicked daughter, whose hand Pericles tries to gain by solving a riddle, the playwright presents in Act II the good king with his good daughter, whose hand Pericles tries to gain by winning a tournament. Just as he was successful in solving the riddle, he is successful in winning the tournament. And where the wicked king, Antiochus, pretended friendship toward him, while actually planning his death, the good king, Simonides, pretends enmity toward him, while actually planning to make him his son-in-law.

In the Shakespearean part there is the extended parallel between Pericles' mistaken belief in the death of his wife and his mistaken belief in the death of his daughter, and his final reunion with each. Less obvious is the contrast between the monstrous incest of father and daughter in Act I, brought out in such lines of the riddle as

He's father, son, and husband mild;
I mother, wife, and yet his child. (I.i.69-70)

and the blessed "incest" of father and daughter in Act V, suggested by Pericles' words to Marina, "Thou that beget'st him that did thee beget" (V.i.199).

It is such parallels and contrasts—which are typical both of Sidney's Arcadia and of Shakespeare's previous plays—that help to give shape and coherence to the episodic and formless romance material on which Pericles is based.

I have taken issue with the view that Pericles is an exemplar of the virtue of patience in adversity. I find even more misleading the common assertion that Shakespeare presents the main events of the play, both the misfortunes and the reunions, as the work of divine Providence. The whole pattern of Pericles' painful adventures, as these critics see it, is a pattern imposed by the gods. But the notion of a divine Providence that persecutes wholly virtuous characters so cruelly and for so long is repugnant, and so several of these critics are driven to discover some offense in the protagonists for which they are punished. Such an attempt to find a pattern of sin, punishment, expiation, and restoration in the play seems to me to violate and distort its whole spirit. It is to assimilate Pericles to The Winter's Tale and The Tempest, where sin and expiation do play an important part. In Pericles, as in the miracle plays, we are confronted with the undeserved sufferings of the wholly innocent and entirely virtuous—of Pericles, Thaisa, and Marina. And both their misfortunes and their restorations are shown to be mainly due to accident, to chance. The goddess who presides over the play is not Diana but Fortuna. It is by accident that the waves throw up the coffin containing Thaisa at Ephesus near the house of Cerimon, just the person who possesses the rare medical knowledge and skill needed to restore her to life. It is accident that brings Pericles' ship Mytilene and Marina on board this ship, thus enabling father and daughter to be reunited. To see in all this the hand of Providence is indeed to take away from our sense of wonder. Only once in the play is there any clear evidence of supernatural intervention: in V.i., where the goddess Diana appears to Pericles in a vision. Without this vision the final reunion of Thaisa with her husband and daughter would have been difficult to bring about. In both Shakespeare's sources this vision is found, though only in Shakespeare is it the goddess Diana that appears to Pericles. Gower speaks of a vision sent by "the high god," while in Twine's version an angel appears to Pericles in his sleep. But I can find no suggestion in the play that Diana had any other part in its events.

It is true that, like all Shakespeare's virtuous and noble characters, Pericles sees the hand of heaven behind all the accidents that befall him. At the news of Thaisa's death he cries out,

O you gods!
Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away? (III.i.22-24)

And at the reunion with Thaisa he exclaims:

You gods, your present kindness
Makes my past miseries sports. (V.iii.39-40)

But, as with Shakespeare's great tragedies, this view is not imposed by the play upon the audience. It is above all contradicted by the choruses (except for the final moralistic one, of doubtful authorship), for Gower insists repeatedly upon Fortune's responsibility for the events. It is Fortune, he tells us, at the beginning of Act II, that threw Pericles ashore near Pentapolis. It is "Fortune's mood," he remarks at the beginning of Act III, that conjures up the storm during which Marina is born.

Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
And bear his courses to be orderèd
By Lady Fortune; (IV.iv.46-48)

he comments in Act IV. But Lady Fortune is merely the personification of the power of accident in human affairs.

I have spoken of the sense of wonder and amazement that Shakespeare's Last Plays seek to evoke in both characters and audience. It vents itself in a language that is characteristic of these plays, and that has appeared only fitfully before, chiefly in Shakespeare's late tragedies. It is a simple, translucent language, melodious in sound, slow in pace, remote and dreamlike in its effect. Certain images tend to recur, above all images of precious objects: pearls, jewels, silver, and gold. Here are two examples of it from Pericles:

She is alive! Behold,
Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels
Which Pericles hath lost, begin to part
Their fringes of bright gold; the diamonds
Of a most praised water doth appear
To make the world twice rich. Live,
And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature,
Rare as you seem to be. (III.ii.99-106)

I am great with woe, and shall deliver weeping.
My dearest wife was like this maid, and such
My daughter might have been: my queen's square brows;
Her stature to an inch; as wandlike straight;
As silver-voiced; her eyes as jewel-like
And cased as richly; in pace another Juno;
Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry
The more she gives them speech. (V.i.109-16)

Apart from the more powerful evocation of a sense of wonder, and the style in which it expresses itself, what is it that chiefly marks off Pericles from Shakespeare's preceding comedies, and that points forward to the other Last Plays?

Closely related to this increased sense of wonder is a greater predominance of fairy-tale motifs and fairy-tale atmosphere. Pericles is full of such motifs, from the opening scene, in which the young prince has to solve a riddle in order to gain the hand of the beautiful princess, to the play's Epilogue, which announces, in the manner of fairy tales, the reward of the virtuous and the cruel punishment of the wicked. This fairy-tale atmosphere makes it easier to accept the improbabilities in the play's action: Pericles' failure to visit his daughter for fourteen years after leaving her with Cleon and Dionyza; Thaisa's decision to lead the life of a vestal because, unaccountably, she will never see her husband again. (This could easily have been motivated, as it is in Gower and Wilkins, by her mistaken belief that her husband was drowned during the storm at sea. Perhaps some lines to this effect have dropped out of the text).

Allied to the increased predominance of the fairy-tale atmosphere is the intrusion of the supernatural, which does not enter into the earlier comedies, with the single exception of A Midsummer Night's Dream. In Pericles Diana appears to the hero in a vision; in Cymbeline Jupiter descends on his eagle and prophesies; in The Winter's Tale we have the oracle of Apollo, and in The Tempest Ariel and his fellow spirits.

I have already spoken of the difference of structure that marks off Pericles and The Winter's Tale from all Shakespeare's other plays. Next, there is the difference in the young heroine. It is partly a difference in age: Marina is fourteen years old, Miranda fifteen, Perdita sixteen, while the young heroines of the preceding comedies, such as Beatrice, Portia, Rosalind, and Viola, seem a good deal older. For a heroine in a previous play who is of Marina's age we have to turn not to a comedy but to an early tragedy. Juliet, too, is fourteen years old. In personality also Marina is more like Juliet, or like Cordelia, than she is like Portia, or Beatrice, or Rosalind, who dazzle us above all by their wit. And unlike all the heroines of the preceding comedies, Marina exists primarily not in relation to a lover but to her father. She is given a husband at the end, but in a most perfunctory way, and we are never even told whether she loves him. Shakespeare is clearly not at all interested in the Marina-Lysimachus relationship. In the other Last Plays there is no parallel to this. While the relation of father and daughter is also of some importance in them, it is the relation of the daughter to her lover, of Perdita to Florizel, of Miranda to Ferdinand, of Imogen to Posthumus, that mainly concerns us.

Finally, these Last Plays differ from the preceding comedies in the weight and scope given to the scenes depicting the reunion of loved relatives long separated and believed dead. This motif is dominant in Pericles, Cymbeline, and The Winter's Tale—much less so in The Tempest. It had also occurred in some of Shakespeare's earlier comedies. In Twelfth Night and Measure for Measure a loved brother, firmly believed dead, suddenly appears alive before his sister. In Much Ado About Nothing and All's Well That Ends Well a bride believed dead appears alive before her bridegroom or husband. In the final scene of The Comedy of Errors Shakespeare staged the biggest reunion of them all: not only two pairs of twin brothers, who had been separated since babyhood, are reunited, but the parents of the one pair with each other as well as with their sons, all after some thirty-three years of separation. It is the perfunctory manner in which these reunions are dramatized, the absence of any expression of their emotional experience, that makes these scenes in the earlier comedies (with the exception of Twelfth Night) so different in impact from the reunion scenes especially of Pericles and The Winter's Tale.

Until the closing of the theaters in 1642 Pericles seems to have been one of Shakespeare's greatest stage successes. The fact that the quarto text was reprinted five times between 1609 and 1635 alone bears witness to its popularity. At the Restoration it was the first of Shakespeare's plays to be revived, with Betterton in the title role. But in the two hundred and fifty years from then until the beginning of this century the play fell into disrepute, receiving only a handful of performances, and even these giving the play in a radically altered or mutilated form. Only in the last few decades has it begun again to receive the attention it deserves from producers and critics, who have come to see that, as well as being full of highly effective scenes for the stage, it contains some of Shakespeare's loveliest and most haunting verse.

A NOTE ON THE SOURCES

The chief literary influence discernible in Pericles is Sir Philip Sidney's Arcadia. It extends not only to structure, action, treatment of character, themes, and atmosphere (see Introduction, pp. 1411 ff.), but also to a number of verbal echoes in both parts of the play. In the non-Shakespearean part we find such echoes at I.i.11-12 ("The senate house of the planets was at no time so set, for the decreeing of perfection in a man"), and I.i.63-64 ("asking no advise of no thought, but of faithfulness and courage"); in the Shakespearean part the echoes at III.ii.100-04 ("Her faire liddes then hiding her fairer eyes, seemed unto him sweete boxes of mother of pearle, riche in themselves, but contaning in them farre richer Jewells") and at IV.Cho.23-25 ("the cloth loking with many eies upon her, & lovingly embracing the wounds she gave it") are less close but still manifest. The most extensive detailed parallel also belongs to Shakespeare's part: Marina's description of her father's behavior during the storm at sea in which she was born,

My father, as nurse says, did never fear,
But cried, "Good seamen!" to the sailors, galling
His kingly hands haling ropes (IV.i.52-54)

was closely influenced by the great storm scene in the Arcadia (which also seems to have left its mark on the opening scene of The Tempest), where we are told of the princes that they "did in their countenances accuse no point of feare, but encouraging them [the sailors] to doo what might be done (putting their handes to everie most painefull office). . . ." While Shakespeare, as was his wont, has made the description far more vivid and dramatic, he retains the order in which the three ingredients—fearlessness, encouragement, painful office—are mentioned in Sidney's account.

The play has two main sources: Book VIII of John Gower's Confessio Amantis, written toward the end of the fourteenth century and printed in 1532 and 1554; and Laurence Twine's prose narrative The Patterne of Painefull Aduentures, registered in 1576, and extant in an undated edition and a reprint in 1607. Though both sources were drawn upon throughout the play, the influence of Gower greatly predominates, so that his spirit is fitly chosen to act as the play's presenter. Not only does it usually follow Gower rather than Twine at points in the plot where the two diverge, but it is also much more under the verbal influence of Gower than of Twine. I have been able to find only one clear verbal echo of Twine (at I.Cho.18), while there are many such echoes of Gower; at III.ii.107 the whole line is taken over from Gower (lines 1206-07, "Ha, wher am I?/Where is my Lord, what world is this?"), and other verbal echoes are found, for instance, at I.i.156; V.Cho.14; and V.i.88.

The names, too, are mainly derived from Gower: Dionyza (Dionise in Gower, Dionisiades in Twine); Lychorida (Lichorida in Gower, Ligozides in Twine); Thaisa (derived from Thaise, Gower's name for Pericles' daughter, called Tharsia in Twine; Pericles' wife is there called Lucina and left nameless in Gower); Leonine (in Gower the name of the pander); Helicanus (from a Tyrian messenger called Hellican in Gower's text, but Helicanus in one of the Latin glosses; Elinatus in Twine); Philoten (Philomacia in Twine); Thaliard (Taliart in Gower, Taliarchus in Twine). Cerimon's name is found in both Gower and Twine. The names Pericles, Marina, Simonides, Lysimachus, Cleon, Escanes, and Boulton are not found in any of the sources. They may have been Shakespeare's inventions, or may have been taken over by him from the old play.

The only exception to the predominance of Gower as a source is found in three scenes in Act IV, where Twine is principally drawn on. In IV.i Marina's mourning for her dead nurse, and her intended visit to her grave, are entirely based on Twine, there being no mention of this in Gower; the intervention of the pirates is also much closer to Twine. IV.iii is entirely based on Twine. There is nothing in Gower to suggest that Cleon in any way disapproves of the murder. In IV.vi the play follows Twine in making Lysimachus visit the brothel as a client, whereas in Gower he is free from any stain, never visits the brothel, and encounters Marina for the first time on board her father's ship.

Readers wishing to study Gower's and Twine's share in each scene of the play should consult the headnotes in J. C. Maxwell's edition. Whether Shakespeare went directly to these sources or depended entirely on the old play which he rewrote—if this is, in fact, what happened—is a moot point. But his use of sources elsewhere suggests that he would not have shunned the labor of reading Gower, Twine, and whatever other version of the story came his way; and it seems probable that the verbal echoes of Gower were derived at first hand. The only indication that any other version of the story has been made use of is the word "bitumed" at III.i.72 and III.ii.57. This word, which is found in neither Gower nor Twine—nor anywhere else in Shakespeare—occurs in its Latin form (cum bitumine liniri), in the same context, in the story as told in the Gesta Romanorum, the Latin collection of tales, probably compiled around the turn of the thirteenth century, from which Twine's novel, by way of a French translation, is derived.

The Shakespearean part of Pericles follows the narrative outline of the sources with a fidelity not found elsewhere in the poet's dramatization of romance material, and this may be taken as a further indication that the scenario is not of his devising. Oddly, the non-Shakespearean part of the play adds more that is not in Gower and Twine than the Shakespearean part. No suggestion in any of the sources is provided for the figure of Helicanus, and his scene with Pericles (I.ii) and with the Tyrian Lords (II.iv); nor for the tournament scene (II.ii; see Introduction, p. 1411, note 3), or for Simonides' faked anger with Pericles (II.v). As G. A. Barker has pointed out in an important article in English Studies, XLIV (1963), the main concern of the author of the first two acts seems to have been with political ideas—with what constitutes the good ruler. But this theme is of little importance in Shakespeare's part of the play. And neither he nor the author of the first two acts betrays much concern with what was Gower's avowed purpose in telling the Apollonius story: to make men see that unlawful love, like Antiochus', leads to disaster, whereas lawful, honorable love, like Apollonius', leads eventually to happiness (lines 1993–2019). Much closer to the heart of Shakespeare's presentation seems Twine's view of the story's events; it is well expressed by the title page of his novel, "The Patterne of painefull Aduentures: Containing the most excellent, pleasant and variable Historie of the strange accidents that befell vnto Prince Apollonius, the Lady Lucina his wife, and Tharsia his daughter. Wherein the vncertaintie of this world, and the fickle state of mans life are liuely described." To this Shakespeare adds a concern with the way in which men endure the blows of fortune, expressed by means of the parallels and contrasts discussed in the Introduction (pp. 1411 ff.).

A NOTE ON THE TEXT

The booke of Pericles Prynce of Tyre (i.e., presumably, the promptbook) was entered, together with Antony and Cleopatra, in the Stationers' Register on May 20, 1608. Both plays were entered to Edward Blount, and, as neither of them was published by him, it has been supposed that these were "blocking entries," designed to prevent piracy. If so, this proved unsuccessful in the case of Pericles, for what is certainly a pirated version of the play was brought out in 1609 by another publisher, Henry Gosson. It proved so popular that a second quarto edition of the play was published by him in the same year, a third appeared in 1611, a fourth in 1619, a fifth in 1630, and a sixth in 1635 (Q2–Q6). As all of these are merely reprints of one another, they have no independent textual authority. Pericles was not included in the first collected edition of Shakespeare's plays, the First Folio of 1623, and was not added to any collected edition until the second impression of the Third Folio, in 1664, where it was reprinted from Q6. Varying explanations of the reason for the play's exclusion from the First Folio have been put forward: copyright difficulties; the absence of a good text available to the editors; the fact that the play is only partly Shakespeare's. The last would seem the most probable reason, and is weakened only by the inclusion in the Folio of Henry VIII.

The only authoritative text of Pericles is therefore that of the first quarto of 1609 (Q). It is unfortunately a very poor text, as the list below of some hundred and eighty corrupt readings makes immediately apparent. At least some twenty of these would seem to be auditory errors, due to a mishearing by the reporter of the words spoken on the stage (apparent instances of this are found at I.i.114; I.ii.86; II.ii.30; IV.Cho.26; IV.iv.24; V.i.229). Most scholars agree that the text derives from a report of the play as performed by Shakespeare's company. It is the degree of badness of the report about which they are divided. Some would group it with the "bad" quartos, such as those of Romeo and Juliet and Hamlet; others insist that, in spite of numerous corruptions, many of them due to the compositors, the text is basically a good one. My own view is that the quarto of Pericles stands somewhere between the good and the bad quartos: too faithful to its original to be classed as a "bad" quarto; too full of errors (both graphic and auditory), of omissions, and additions, to be accounted a good one.

Next to the errors due to mishearing, the reporter seems responsible for a variety of other deficiencies in the text: (1) In the Shakespearean part, after—for the most part impeccably—setting out the verse of III.i, he apparently found the task too demanding, and wrote out the remaining blank verse as prose; and that is how most of it was set by the compositors. (2) He occasionally seems to have added words, or even whole lines, that can scarcely have been in the Shakespearean original (for example, V.i.241–42). (3) There are two scenes in the play in which an evident gap in the report is to be found: in I.ii, where some dialogue between Pericles and Helicanus is evidently missing (before line 38; see the gloss on line 37); and in IV.vi, where some dialogue between Marina and Lysimachus appears to have been lost (after line 108). In the first case the reporter seems to have made little attempt to fill the gap; in the second case he apparently tried to fill it by reconstructing the missing lines from memory—a memory that must have been exceedingly dim (see Introduction, pp. 1408).

But apart from this instance, there is no indication in the text that—as in all the "bad" quartos proper—the report was a memorial reconstruction. On the contrary—at least in the Shakespearean part—the report must have been made at the theater, probably during repeated visits to performances of the play. Long scenes such as III.i and V.i, in which the text has every appearance of adhering faithfully to the Shakespearean original, cannot have been reported from memory.⁴ In the non-Shakespearean part it is much more difficult to be sure of this, and there are some grounds for supposing that its fidelity to the original text is not as great (notably in II.i).

The majority of the corrupt readings in Q seem, in fact, to have been introduced not by the reporter but by the compositors (Philip Edwards has shown them to have been three in number), who were uniformly slovenly and careless at their task (except in II.v, which seems to be free from compositorial errors). They misread words, misassigned speeches, occasionally omitted speech prefixes, sometimes set prose as verse, and made only sporadic—and then quite inept—attempts to reestablish Shakespeare's blank verse division. The occasional omission of words within a line (as at I.iv.13), or of a whole line (as, apparently, after line 14 in IV.iii and probably after line 122 in I.ii), would also seem to be attributable to them rather than to the reporter.

The text of this edition diverges on a number of points from preceding ones:

(1) Where the quarto text is manifestly corrupt and we are left with nonsense, I have not hesitated to emend, even when we cannot be sure that the chosen emendation is necessarily the right one and when previous modern editors have retained the original reading. Instances of this

⁴ I do not share Philip Edwards' pessimistic view that "we have in these later acts only the dissecta membra of once powerful verse," that "we lose sight, presumably forever, of the genuine version of the last three acts, from the opening of III.ii" (Shakespeare Survey 5 [1952], 38).

are found at I.iv.13; III.ii.84–87; IV.i.11; and V.i.210. On the other hand, Q readings have, on a very few occasions, been retained where previous editors have emended, for example at III.i.68, where editors have unnecessarily emended Q's "coffin" to "coffer," since the two words were used interchangeably in Shakespeare's day.

(2) Like other editors, I have for the most part followed Malone's relineation of Shakespeare's blank verse in the passages where it was set as prose. But occasionally, where better and more Shakespearean verse seemed to result, I have introduced line divisions not found in previous editions, for example, at III.iii.9–15; IV.i.27–30; V.i.21–22.

(3) Sometimes I have departed from the punctuation adopted by previous editors, and thereby imposed a different meaning on the text. An example of this is found at I.i.7–12:

Bring in our daughter, clothèd like a bride,
For the embracements even of Jove himself;
At whose conception, till Lucina reigned,
Nature this dowry gave to glad her presence.
The senate house of planets all did sit,
To knit in her their best perfections.

The last four lines are a major crux in the play, and have been much emended and discussed. Most editors put a colon in line 10, either after "gave" or after "presence" (Q puts a semicolon after "gave" and a comma after "presence"), thus making the planetary influence itself Nature's dowry. But this does not make astrological sense, as (a) beauty was considered the gift of Nature, not of the planets; (b) planetary influence would be thought of as exerted at birth, not between conception and birth; (c) such planetary influence would not be believed to be in the gift of Nature. By punctuating as above, I have separated Nature's gift from that of the planets, interpreting: "between conception and birth Nature gave her her beauty as dowry ('this dowry': the beauty you are about to behold); then, at her birth, the planets bestowed upon her other, nonphysical, perfections over which they have control." The change in punctuation thus restores sense to the passage, and to Nature and the stars what is the due of each.

(4) Not infrequently the explanations given in the glosses differ from those of previous editors. For example, at I.Cho.42 the word "justify," instead of having its modern meaning is, I believe, one of a series of legal metaphors, and has the archaic meaning of "acquit, absolve" (Oxford English Dictionary 4); while at V.i.221 I believe it has another archaic meaning, that of "affirm" (Oxford English Dictionary 5b).

(5) I have parted company from previous editors over several stage directions, which they have taken over from Malone's edition, and which seem quite unjustified. There are two chief instances of this. At the opening of III.ii Q's direction reads, "Enter Lord Cerymon with a servant." Malone, followed by most subsequent editors, added to this "and some Persons who have been shipwrecked," because of Cerimon's line, "Get fire and meat for these poor men" (line 3). But to march several characters onto the stage, only to march them off again a few lines later (line 10) without their having uttered a word, would be a most un-Shakespearean piece of dramaturgy. I have, therefore, adhered to Q's direction, and emended "these" in line 3 to "those," so that Pericles is speaking of some poor men—there is not the slightest indication that they are shipwrecked—who are never brought on stage, but are merely mentioned in order to display Cerimon in his role of benefactor. The other instance occurs at the opening of V.i. We are on board Pericles' ship, having just been told by Gower:

In your supposing once more put your sight:
Of heavy Pericles think this his bark. (V.Cho.21–22)

Malone, with evidently little faith in the audience's capacity for supposing, has added to the required direction ("On board Pericles' Ship," etc.), "A Barge lying beside the Tyrian Vessel." At line 10 he introduced the direction, "The Gentlemen and the Two Sailors descend, and go on board the Barge. Enter, from thence, Lysimachus and Lords"; at line 52, "Exit Lord, in the Barge of Lysimachus"; and at line 65, "Enter, from the Barge, Lord, Marina, and a young Lady." And all these directions have been taken over by subsequent editors. It is not clear how Malone envisaged the staging of this, but he evidently imagined the barge—by means of some piece of stage machinery—departing, and returning a few minutes later with Marina, all in full view of the audience. There is neither need nor warrant for all this, and in the present edition Malone's barge has been silently dropped.

In the quartos of Pericles the text is not divided into acts and scenes. The act division was introduced by the Third Folio, and the scene division by Malone. In the present text spelling and punctuation have been modernized, and speech prefixes expanded and regularized. All additions to Q's stage directions are indicated by brackets. Purely typographical errors have been silently corrected. All other departures from the quarto text are listed below, with the adopted reading given first in boldface type, followed by Q's reading in roman.

I.Cho.39 a of

I.i.8 For the embracements For embracements 18 razed racte
57 Antiochus [Q omits] 112 our your 114 cancel counsell 121 s.d. Exeunt . . . Pericles Manet Pericles solus 128 you're you 129 uncomely vntimeley 170 Antiochus [Q omits]

I.ii.s.d. Enter Pericles Enter Pericles with his Lords 4 Be my
By me 21 honor him honour 26 th' ostent the stint 31 am once 42 blast sparke 45 a peace peace 66 you you yourselte
83 Bethought me Bethought 84 fears feare 86 doubt doo't 100 grieve them griue for them 122 we'll will

I.iii.1 Thaliard [Q omits] 27 ears it seas 28 seas Sea 30
Helicanus [Q omits] 34 betook betake

I.iv.13 sorrows cease not sorrowes 17 helps helpers 36 they thy 39 two summers too sauers 58 thou thee 67 Hath That 74 him's himnes 76–77 will, what need we fear?/On ground's the lowest, will, and what they can,/What need wee leaue our grounds the lowest?

II.Cho.11 Tharsus Tharstill 19 for he strives for though he striue 22 Sends word Sau'd one 24 hid intent to murder hid in Tent to muredred [changed in some copies of Q to "had intent to murder"]

II.i.6 me breath my breath 12 What ho, Pilch! What, to pelch? 18 fetch thee fetch'th 34 devours deuowre 42 Third Fisherman. I. 57 scratch it Search 82 quoth-a ke-tha 86 holidays all day; moreo'er more; or 94 your you 103–04 is called Pentapolis I cald Pantapoles 126 thy crosses crosses 134 thee from!—may't thee, Fame may 161 rapture rupture
164 delightful delight 171 equal a Goale

II.ii.4 daughter daughter heere 27 Più per dolcezza che per forza Pue Per doleera kee per forsa 28 what's with 29 chivalry Chiually 30 pompae Pompey 56 for by
 II.iii.3 To I 13 yours your 26 Envied Enuies 29 but not 38 Yon You 39 tells me tels 44 son's sonne like 51 stored stur'd 52 you do do you 114 Simonides [Q omits]
 II.iv.10 their those 33 gives giue's 34 leaves leaue 35 death's indeed death in deed 36 this: kingdoms this Kingdome is 42 For Try 57 endeavor it endeaour
 III.Cho.2 the house about about the house 6 'fore from 7 crickets Cricket 8 All Are 17 coigns Crignes 29 t' appease t'opprese 35 Y-ravishèd Iranyshe 46 Fortune's mood fortune mou'd 60 sea-tossed seas tost
 III.i.7 Thou stormest then storme 11 midwife my wife 26 Vie Vse 52 custom easterne 53-54 for . . . straight [In Q this is printed after "meet" in the next line] 61 in the ooze in oare 63 And The 66 paper Taper
 III.ii.3 those these 26 held hold 37 And I can and can 38 gives doth giue 41 treasure pleasure 48 never raze neuer 57 bitumed bottomed 77 even euer 84-87 I have read/Of some Egyptians, who after four hours' death/Have raised impoverished bodies, like to this,/Unto their former health I heard of an Egiptian that had 9. howers lien dead,/Who was by good applyaunce recouered 89 still rough 95 Breathes breath
 III.iii.5 shafts shakes 6 hurt hant 7 woundingly wondringly 29-30 honor all,/Unscissored honour,/All vnsisterd 31 ill will
 III.iv.5 eaning learning
 IV.Cho.10 her hie; heart art 14 Seeks Seeke 17 ripe right; rite sight 21 she they 26 night-bird night bed 32 With dove of Paphos might the crow The Doue of Paphos might with the crow 47 carry carried
 IV.i.5-6 or flaming love thy bosom/Enslave in flaming, thy loue bosome, enflame 11 weeping her old nurse's weeping for her onely Mistresse 19 is as a is a 24-25 favor/Is fauours 27 On the sea margent ere the sea marre it 62 stem sterne 92 s.d. They . . . Marina Exit 95 she'll shee will

IV.ii.4 much much much 21 they're too ther's two 51 It I 67 me to me, for to 75 was like to was to 107 i' the ethe 114 crowns of crownes in 128 Bawd. Mari.
 IV.iii.1 are ere 6 A O 12 fact face 17 pious impious 27 prime prince 28 sources courses 31 distain disdaine 33 Marina's Marianas
 IV.iv.7 scene sceanes 8 i' th' gaps with gappes 10 the thy 12 life's liues 16 Tyre time 18 his this 19 go on grone 24 true-owed true olde 29 puts put 48 scene Steare
 IV.vi.s.d. Enter . . . Boulte Enter Bawdes 3 40 dignifies dignities 41 punk number 72 name't name 92 aloof aloft 134 ways way 140 She He 157 ways way 189 I will will 198 women woman
 V.Cho.8 silk, twin Silke Twine 13 lost left 14 Whence Where 16 city's hived Citie striu'de
 V.i.11 Mytilenian Sailor. Hell. [changed in some copies of Q to "I. Say."] 16 you, sir, to you to 35-37 Lysimachus. Yet . . . wish./Helicanus. Behold . . . Till yet . . . wish./Lys. Behold . . . person./Hell. Till 37 night wight 47 ports parts 50 And with her fellow maid is now and her fellow maides, now 67 presence present 71 I'd I do; rarely wed rarely to wed 72 Fair one, all Faire on all; bounty beautie 74 feat fate 82 s.d. They . . . sings The Song 83 Marked Marke 105 country-woman Countrey women 106 shores? . . . shores shewes? . . . shewes 110 such sucha one 127 make my senses make senses 130 say stay 144 thou them? Thy thou thy 158 Motion as well? Motion well 166-67 be: My daughter's buried. be my daughter, buried 184 Pericles Hell. 210-11 perfect, and thou art/The perfit, the 211 life like 217 thou art th' art 229 doubt doat 236 Pericles. I hear most heavenly music Lys. I heare./Per. Most heauenly Musicke 249-50 life./Perform like, or performe 264 suit sleight
 V.iii.6 who whom 8 whom who 15 nun mum 22 one in 49 Pericles. Hell. 68 I bless blesse 69 Nightly night 83 [Q has "FINIS" after this line, as well as after line 101] 88 preserved preferd 99 punish them punish

PERICLES, PRINCE OF TYRE

[Dramatis Personae]

GOWER as Chorus
ANTIOCHUS King of Antioch
PERICLES Prince of Tyre
HELICANUS } two lords of Tyre
ESCANES }
SIMONIDES King of Pentapolis
CLEON Governor of Tharsus
LYSIMACHUS Governor of Mytilene
CERIMON a lord of Ephesus
THALIARD a lord of Antioch
PHILEMON servant to Cerimon
LEONINE servant to Dionyza

MARSHAL
A PANDER
BOULT his servant
THE DAUGHTER OF ANTIOCHUS
DIONYZA wife to Cleon
THAISA daughter to Simonides
MARINA daughter to Pericles and Thaisa
LYCHORIDA nurse to Marina
A BAWD
DIANA
LORDS LADIES KNIGHTS GENTLEMEN
SAILORS PIRATES FISHERMEN
MESSENGERS

Scene: dispersedly in various Mediterranean countries]

[A C T I]

[Before the king's palace at Antioch, with heads displayed upon its walls.]

Enter GOWER° [as Chorus].

GOWER
To sing a song that old° was sung,
From ashes ancient Gower is come,
Assuming man's infirmities,°
To glad your ear, and please your eyes.
It hath been sung at festivals,
On ember-eves° and holidays,
And lords and ladies in their lives
Have read it for restoratives.

The decorative border shown above appeared on the title page of the first quarto edition of Pericles, 1609.

I.Cho.s.d. Gower John Gower, fourteenth-century poet 1 old of old 3 Assuming man's infirmities putting on man's infirm body 6 ember-eves evenings before the fasts known as "ember days"

The purchase° is to make men glorious;
Et bonum quo antiquius eo melius.°
If you, born in those latter times,
When wit's more ripe, accept my rhymes,
And that to hear an old man sing
May to your wishes pleasure bring,
I life would wish, and that I might
Waste it for you, like taper-light.
This Antioch,° then; Antiochus the great
Built up this city for his chiefest seat,
The fairest in all Syria—
I tell you what mine authors say.
This king unto him took a peer,°
Who died, and left a female heir,
So buxom,° blithe, and full of face,°
As heaven had lent her all his grace;
With whom the father liking took, 10

15

20

25

9 purchase gain 10 Et . . . melius and the more ancient a good thing is the better it is (Latin) 17 This Antioch this is Antioch 21 peer companion, consort 23 buxom gay, lively; full of face beautiful (?) with a round face (?)

And her to incest did provoke.
 Bad child, worse father, to entice his own
 To evil should° be done by none.
 But custom° what they did begin
 Was with long use accounted no sin. 30
 The beauty of this sinful dame
 Made many princes thither frame,°
 To seek her as a bedfellow,
 In marriage pleasures playfellow;
 Which to prevent he made a law,
 To keep her still, and men in awe:° 35
 That whoso asked her for his wife,
 His riddle told° not, lost his life.
 So for her many a wight did die,
 As yon grim looks do testify. 40

[Points to the heads.]

What now ensues, to the judgment of your eye
 I give my cause, who best can justify.° Exit.

[Scene I. Before the palace of Antioch.]

Enter ANTIOCHUS, Prince PERICLES, and followers.

ANTIOCHUS

Young Prince of Tyre, you have at large received°
 The danger of the task you undertake.

PERICLES

I have, Antiochus, and, with a soul
 Embold'ned with the glory of her praise,
 Think death no hazard in this enterprise. 5

ANTIOCHUS

Music!

[Music sounds.]

Bring in our daughter, clothèd like a bride,
 For the embracements even of Jove himself;
 At whose conception, till Lucina reigned,°
 Nature this dowry° gave to glad her presence.° 10
 The senate house of planets all did sit,
 To knit in her their best perfections.

Enter Antiochus' DAUGHTER.

PERICLES

See where she comes, appareled like the spring,
 Graces her subjects, and her thoughts the king
 Of every virtue gives° renown to men!
 Her face the book of praises, where is read
 Nothing but curious° pleasures, as from thence Sorrow were ever razed,° and testy wrath
 Could never be her mild companion.°
 You gods that made me man, and sway in love;° 20

28 should which should 29 custom through custom 32 frame direct their course 36 To . . . awe to keep her always to himself, and to keep others from demanding her in marriage 38 told expounded 41-42 What . . . justify In what now ensues I submit my case to the judgment of your eye, as you are best able to acquit me (of the charge of having told an incredible tale)

I.i.1 at large received learned fully 9 till Lucina reigned i.e., before her birth (Lucina is the goddess of childbirth) 10 this dowry i.e., her beauty; to . . . presence to make her presence delightful (?) 15 gives which gives 17 curious exquisite 18 razed erased 19 her mild companion the companion of her mildness 20 sway in love who govern in love

That have enflamed desire in my breast
 To taste the fruit of yon celestial tree
 Or die in th' adventure, be my helps,
 As° I am son and servant to your will,
 To compass such a boundless happiness! 25

ANTIOCHUS

Prince Pericles—

PERICLES

That would be son to great Antiochus.

35 ANTIOCHUS

Before thee stands this fair Hesperides,°
 With golden fruit, but dangerous to be touched;
 For deathlike dragons here affright thee hard. 30
 Her face like heaven enticeth thee to view
 Her countless glory, which desert must gain;
 And which without desert, because thine eye
 Presumes to reach, all the whole heap° must die.
 Yon sometimes° famous princes, like thyself, 35
 Drawn by report, advent'rous by desire,
 Tell thee, with speechless tongues and semblance pale,
 That without covering, save yon field of stars,
 Here they stand martyrs slain in Cupid's wars;
 And with dead cheeks advise thee to desist 40
 For° going on death's net, whom none resist.

PERICLES

Antiochus, I thank thee, who hath taught
 My frail mortality to know itself,
 And by those fearful objects to prepare
 This body, like to them, to what I must; 45
 For death remembered should be like a mirror,
 Who tells us life's but breath, to trust it error.
 I'll make my will, then; and, as sick men do,
 Who know the world, see heaven, but, feeling woe,
 Gripe° not at earthly joys as erst they did, 50
 So I bequeath a happy peace to you
 And all good men, as every prince should do;
 My riches to the earth from whence they came;

[To the PRINCESS.]

But my unspotted fire of love to you.
 Thus, ready for the way of life or death, 55
 I wait the sharpest blow, Antiochus.

ANTIOCHUS

Scorning advice, read the conclusion° then:

15

[He throws down the riddle.]

Which read and not expounded, 'tis decreed,
 As these before thee thou thyself shalt bleed.

DAUGHTER

Of all 'sayed yet,° mayst thou prove prosperous! 60
 Of all 'sayed yet, I wish thee happiness.

PERICLES

Like a bold champion I assume the lists,°
 Nor ask advice of any other thought
 But faithfulness and courage.

24 As as surely as 28 Hesperides the daughters of Hesperus, the evening star (but here, by confusion, the garden containing the golden apples, which, with the aid of a dragon, they were appointed to watch) 34 the whole heap the whole body 35 sometimes once 41 For for fear of 50 gripe grasp 57 conclusion riddle 60 'sayed yet who have yet assayed 62 assume the lists undertake the contest

[He reads] the riddle.

I am no viper,° yet I feed
On mother's flesh, which did me breed.
I sought a husband, in which labor
I found that kindness° in a father.
He's father, son, and husband mild;
I mother, wife, and yet his child.
How they may be, and yet in two,°
As you will live, resolve it you.

[Aside.]

Sharp physic is the last.° But O, you powers,
That gives° heaven countless eyes to view men's acts:
Why cloud they not their sights perpetually,
If this be true which makes me pale to read it?
Fair glass of light,° I loved you, and could still,
Were not this glorious casket stored with ill.
But I must tell you, now my thoughts revolt;
For he's no man on whom perfections wait
That, knowing sin within, will touch the gate.
You are a fair viol, and your sense° the strings;
Who, fingered to make man his lawful music,
Would draw heaven down, and all the gods to hearken;
But being played upon before your time,
Hell only danceth at so harsh a chime.
Good sooth,° I care not for you.

[He turns towards the PRINCESS.]

ANTIOCHUS

Prince Pericles, touch not, upon thy life,
For that's an article within our law
As dangerous° as the rest. Your time's expired.
Either expound now, or receive your sentence.

PERICLES

Great king,
Few love to hear the sins they love to act;
'Twould braid° yourself too near° for me to tell it.
Who has a book of all that monarchs do,
He's more secure to keep it shut than shown;
For vice repeated° is like the wand'ring wind
Blows° dust in others' eyes to spread° itself;
And yet the end of all is bought thus dear:
The breath is gone, and the sore eyes see clear
To stop the air would hurt them. The blind mole casts Copped° hills towards heaven, to tell the earth is thronged°
By man's oppression; and the poor worm° doth die
for't.
Kings are earth's gods; in vice their law's their will;
And if Jove stray, who dares say Jove doth ill?
It is enough you know; and it is fit,
What being more known grows worse, to smother it.

65 I . . . viper vipers were believed to be born by eating their way out of the mother's body 68 kindness (1) kinship (2) affection 71 How . . . two how these things may be, and yet all be found in two persons 73 Sharp . . . last The last condition of the riddle is an unpleasant medicine 74 gives give (the third person plural in -s is not unusual) 77 glass of light i.e., one who reflects light, as does a mirror, but does not contain it 82 sense senses (?) 87 Good sooth truly 90 dangerous rigorous 94 braid upbraid; too near touching you too closely 97 repeated talked about 98 Blows which blows; to spread in spreading 102 Copped peaked; thronged crushed 103 worm creature

All love the womb that their first being bred;
Then give my tongue like leave to love my head.

ANTIOCHUS [Aside.]

Heaven, that I had thy head! He has found the meaning.

But I will gloze° with him. [Aloud.] Young Prince of Tyre,

Though by the tenor of our strict edict,
Your exposition misinterpreting,
We might proceed to cancel of° your days,
Yet hope, succeeding° from so fair a tree
As your fair self, doth tune us otherwise.
Forty days longer we do respite you;
If by which time our secret be undone,°
This mercy shows we'll joy in such a son.
And until then your entertain° shall be
As doth befit our honor and your worth.

[Exeunt all but PERICLES.]

PERICLES

How courtesy would seem° to cover sin,
When what is done is like an hypocrite,
The which is good in nothing but in sight!°
If it be true that I interpret false,
Then were it certain you were not so bad
As with foul incest to abuse your soul;
Where now you're both a father and a son
By your uncomely° claspings with your child,
Which pleasures fits a husband, not a father;
And she an eater of her mother's flesh
By the defiling of her parents' bed;
And both like serpents are, who though they feed
On sweetest flowers, yet they poison breed.
Antioch, farewell, for wisdom sees, those men
Blush° not in actions blacker than the night,
Will 'schew° no course to keep them from the light.

One sin, I know, another doth provoke;
Murder's as near to lust as flame to smoke.
Poison and treason are the hands of sin,
Ay, and the targets,° to put off° the shame.
Then, lest my life be cropped to keep you clear,
By flight I'll shun the danger which I fear. Exit.

Enter ANTIOCHUS.

ANTIOCHUS

He hath found the meaning,
For which we mean to have his head. He must
Not live to trumpet forth my infamy,
Nor tell the world Antiochus doth sin
In such a loathèd manner.
And therefore instantly this prince must die;
For by his fall my honor must keep high.
Who attends us there?

Enter THALIARD.

THALIARD

Doth your highness call?

111 gloze talk speciously 114 cancel of the canceling of 115 succeeding resulting 118 secret be undone riddle be solved 120 entertain entertainment, reception 122 seem make a specious appearance 124 sight outward appearance 129 uncomely improper (see Introduction, p. 1407) 136 Blush who blush 137 'schew eschew, avoid 141 targets shields; put off avert

ANTIOCHUS

Thaliard,

You are of our chamber,^o Thaliard, and our mind
partakes^o

Her private actions to your secrecy;

And for your faithfulness we will advance you. 155

Thaliard, behold, here's poison, and here's gold!

We hate the Prince of Tyre, and thou must kill him.

It fits thee not to ask the reason why.

Because we bid it. Say, is it done?

THALIARD

My lord, 'tis done.

ANTIOCHUS

Enough. 160

Enter a MESSENGER.

Let your breath cool yourself telling your haste.

MESSENGER

My lord, Prince Pericles is fled. *[Exit.]*ANTIOCHUS As thou wilt live, fly after; and like an arrow shot from a well-experienced archer hits the mark his eye doth level^o at, so thou never return 165 unless thou say Prince Pericles is dead.THALIARD My lord, if I can get him within my pistol's length, I'll make him sure^o enough. So farewell to your highness.

ANTIOCHUS

Thaliard, adieu! [Exit THALIARD.] Till Pericles be dead 170My heart can lend no succor to my head. *[Exit.][Scene II. Tyre. A room in the palace.]Enter PERICLES.*PERICLES [To SERVANTS without.]

Let none disturb us.

Why should this change of thoughts,

The sad companion, dull-eyed melancholy,

Be my so used^o a guest as not an hour

In the day's glorious walk or peaceful night, 5

The tomb where grief should sleep, can breed me quiet?Here pleasures court mine eyes, and mine eyes shun
them,

And danger, which I feared, is at Antioch,

Whose arm seems far too short to hit me here;

Yet neither pleasure's art can joy^o my spirits, 10

Nor yet the other's distance comfort me.

Then it is thus: the passions of the mind,

That have their first conception by misdread,^o

Have after-nourishment and life by care;

And what was first but fear what might be done, 15

Grows elder now and cares^o it be not done.

And so with me: the great Antiochus,

'Gainst whom I am too little to contend,

Since he's so great can^o make his will his act,

Will think me speaking, though I swear to silence; 20

Nor boots it me^o to say I honor him,

If he suspect I may dishonor him.

And what may make him blush in being known^o

He'll stop the course by which it might be known.

With hostile forces he'll o'erspread the land, 25

And with th' ostent^o of war will look so huge,Amazement^o shall drive courage from the state,

Our men be vanquished ere they do resist,

And subjects punished that ne'er thought offense;

Which care of them, not pity of myself, 30

Who am no more but as the tops of trees

Which fence^o the roots they grow by and defend
them,

Makes both my body pine and soul to languish,

And punish that before that he would punish.

Enter [HELICANUS and] all the LORDS to PERICLES.

FIRST LORD

Joy and all comfort in your sacred breast! 35

SECOND LORD

And keep your mind, till you return to us,

Peaceful and comfortable!^o

HELICANUS

Peace, peace, and give experience tongue.^oThey do abuse^o the king that flatter him,For flattery is the bellows blows up^o sin; 40

The thing the which is flattered but a spark

To which that blast gives heat and stronger glowing;

Whereas reproof, obedient and in order,

Fits kings, as they are men, for they may err.

When Signor Sooth^o here does proclaim a peace 45

He flatters you, makes war upon your life.

Prince, pardon me, or strike me, if you please;

I cannot be much lower than my knees.

[He kneels.]

PERICLES

All leave us else!^o But let your cares o'er-look^oWhat shipping and what lading's^o in our haven, 50And then return to us. [Exeunt LORDS.] Helicanus, Thou hast moved us. What see'st thou in our looks?

HELICANUS

An angry brow, dread lord:

PERICLES

If there be such a dart in princes' frowns,

How durst thy tongue move anger to our face? 55

HELICANUS

How dares the plants look up to heaven, from whence

They have their nourishment?

PERICLES

Thou knowest I have power

To take thy life from thee.

21 boots it me does it avail me 23 in being known if it were known 26 th' ostent the display 27 Amazement consternation 32 fence protect 36-37 And keep . . . comfortable these lines must be either corrupt or misplaced, as Pericles' decision to leave Tyre is not taken till the end of the scene 37 comfortable cheerful (a passage in which Helicanus reproves Pericles for wasting "his body there with pining sorrow, upon whose safety depended the lives and prosperity of a whole kingdom" [Wilkins] and is sternly rebuked by him for his presumption, must have preceded the next speech, but is missing from the text) 38 give experience tongue allow experience to speak 39 abuse ill-use 40 blows up which fans into flame 45 Signor Sooth Sir Flattery 49 All . . . else Everybody else leave us; o'erlook look into 50 lading's cargo's

153 of our chamber our chamberlain; partakes imparts
165 level aim 168 sure unable to do harm

I.ii.4 used customary 10 joy give joy to 13 misdread dread of evil 16 cares is anxious that 19 can that he can

HELICANUS I have ground the ax myself;
Do but you strike the blow.

PERICLES Rise, prithee, rise.

[He raises him.]

Sit down. Thou art no flatterer. 60
I thank thee for't; and heaven forbid
That kings should let their ears hear their faults hid!^o
Fit counselor and servant for a prince,
Who by thy wisdom makes a prince thy servant,
What wouldst thou have me do?

HELICANUS To bear with patience 65
Such griefs as you do lay upon yourself.

PERICLES

Thou speak'st like a physician, Helicanus,
That ministers a potion unto me
That thou wouldst tremble to receive thyself.
Attend^o me then: I went to Antioch, 70
Where, as thou know'st, against the face of death
I sought the purchase^o of a glorious beauty,
From whence an issue I might propagate
Are arms^o to princes and bring joys to subjects.
Her face was to mine eye beyond all wonder; 75
The rest—hark in thine ear—as black as incest;
Which by my knowledge found, the sinful father
Seemed^o not to strike, but smooth;^o but thou know'st
this:

'Tis time to fear when tyrants seems to kiss.
Which fear so grew in me, I hither fled, 80
Under the covering of a careful^o night,
Who seemed my good protector; and, being here,
Bethought me what was past, what might succeed.
I knew him tyrannous; and tyrants' fears
Decrease not, but grow faster than the years; 85
And should he doubt, as no doubt he doth,^o
That I should open^o to the list'ning air
How many worthy princes' bloods were shed
To keep his bed of blackness unlaid ope,^o
To lop that doubt,^o he'll fill this land with arms, 90
And make pretense of wrong that I have done him;
When all for mine, if I may call, offense
Must feel war's blow, who^o spares not innocence;
Which love to all, of which thyself art one,
Who now^o reprov'dst me for't—

HELICANUS Alas, sir! 95

PERICLES

Drew sleep out of mine eyes, blood from my cheeks,
Musings into my mind, with thousand doubts
How I might stop this tempest ere it came;
And finding little comfort to relieve them,
I thought it princely charity to grieve them.^o 100

HELICANUS

Well, my lord, since you have given me leave to speak,
Freely will I speak. Antiochus you fear,
And justly, too, I think, you fear the tyrant

Who either by public war or private treason
Will take away your life. 105

Therefore, my lord, go travel for a while,
Till that his rage and anger be forgot,
Or till the Destinies do cut his thread of life.
Your rule direct^o to any; if to me,
Day serves not light more faithful^o than I'll be. 110

PERICLES

I do not doubt thy faith.
But should he wrong my liberties^o in my absence?

HELICANUS

We'll mingle our bloods together in the earth,
From whence we had our being and our birth.

PERICLES

Tyre, I now look from thee then, and to Tharsus 115
Intend^o my travel, where I'll hear from thee,
And by whose letters I'll dispose myself.^o
The care I had and have of subjects' good
On thee I lay, whose wisdom's strength can bear it.
I'll take thy word for faith, not ask thine oath: 120
Who shuns not to break one^o will crack both.
But in our orbs we'll live so round^o and safe,^o
That time of both this truth shall ne'er convince:^o
Thou showed'st a subject's shine, I a true prince.^o
Exit, [with HELICANUS].

[Scene III. The palace at Tyre.]

Enter THALIARD solus,^o

THALIARD So this is Tyre, and this the court. Here must I kill King Pericles; and if I do it not, I am sure to be hanged at home. 'Tis dangerous. Well, I perceive he was a wise fellow and had good discretion that, 5 being bid to ask what he would of the king, desired he might know none of his secrets. Now do I see he had some reason for't: for if a king bid a man be a villain, he's bound by the indenture^o of his oath to be one.
Husht, here comes the lords of Tyre.

Enter HELICANUS, ESCANES, with other LORDS.

HELICANUS

You shall not need, my fellow peers of Tyre, 10
Further to question me of your king's departure.
His sealed commission left in trust with me
Does speak sufficiently he's gone to travel.

THALIARD [Aside.] How? The king gone?

HELICANUS

If further yet you will be satisfied 15
Why, as it were, unlicensed of your loves^o
He would depart, I'll give some light unto you.
Being at Antioch—

THALIARD [Aside.] What from Antioch?

62 hear . . . hid i.e., hear the flattery that hides their faults
70 Attend listen to 72 purchase acquisition 74 Are arms which are arms 78 Seemed pretended; smooth flatter 81 careful taking good care 86 And . . . doth the first "doubt," meaning "fear," is pronounced as a disyllable 87 open reveal 89 unlaid ope undisclosed 90 doubt dread, fear 93 who which 95 now just now 100 grieve them grieve for them

109 direct assign 110 Day . . . faithful day is not served by light more faithfully 112 liberties prerogatives 116 Intend direct 117 dispose myself direct my actions 121
one pronounced as a disyllable 122 we'll . . . round
(1) we'll live so honestly (2) we'll move in such a perfect circle; safe trustworthily 123 of . . . convince shall never confute this truth regarding both of us 124 Thou . . . prince You showed a subject's luster, I showed myself a true prince
I.iii.s.d. solus alone (Latin) 8 indenture contract binding servant to master 16 unlicensed . . . loves without your loving assent

HELICANUS

Royal Antiochus—on what cause I know not—
Took some displeasure at him; at least he judged so;
And doubting lest° he had erred or sinned,
To show his sorrow, he'd correct° himself;
So puts himself unto the shipman's toil,
With whom each minute threatens life or death.

THALIARD [Aside.]

Well, I perceive I shall not be hanged now
Although I would.
But since he's gone, the king's ears it must please
He scaped the land, to perish at the seas.
I'll present myself. [Aloud.] Peace to the lords of Tyre!

HELICANUS

Lord Thaliard from Antiochus is welcome.

THALIARD

From him I come
With message unto princely Pericles.
But since my landing I have understood
Your lord has betook himself to unknown travels.
Now message must return from whence it came.

HELICANUS

We have no reason to desire it,
Commended° to our master, not to us.
Yet, ere you shall depart, this we desire:
As friends to Antioch we may feast in Tyre.
Exit, [with the rest].

[Scene IV. Tharsus.]

Enter CLEON, the Governor of Tharsus, with his wife [DIONYZA] and others.

CLEON

My Dionyza, shall we rest us here,
And by relating tales of others' griefs,
See if 'twill teach us to forget our own?

DIONYZA

That were to blow at fire in hope to quench it;
For who digs° hills because they do aspire
Throws down one mountain to cast up a higher.
O my distressed lord, even such our griefs are;
Here they are but felt and seen with mischief's° eyes,
But like to groves, being topped, they higher rise.

CLEON

O Dionyza,
Who wanteth food and will not say he wants it,
Or can conceal his hunger till he famish?
Our tongues and sorrows cease not to sound deep
Our woes into the air, our eyes to weep,
Till tongues fetch breath that may proclaim them louder,
That, if heaven slumber while their creatures want,
They may awake their helps to comfort them.
I'll then discourse our woes, felt several years,
And wanting breath to speak help me° with tears.

DIONYZA

I'll do my best, sir.

CLEON

This Tharsus, o'er which I have the government,
A city on° whom plenty held full hand,
For riches strewed herself° even in her streets;
Whose towers bore heads so high they kissed the clouds,
And strangers ne'er beheld but wond'ered at;
Whose men and dames so jetted and adorned,
Like one another's glass to trim them by;
Their tables were stored full, to glad the sight,
And not so much to feed on as delight;
All poverty was scorned, and pride so great,
The name of help grew odious to repeat.

DIONYZA

O, 'tis too true!

CLEON

But see what heaven can do by this our change:
These mouths who but of late earth, sea, and air
Were all too little to content and please,
Although they gave their creatures in abundance,
As houses are defiled for want of use,
They are now starved for want of exercise;
Those palates who, not yet two summers younger,
Must have inventions° to delight the taste,
Would now be glad of bread, and beg for it;
Those mothers who, to nuzzle up° their babes,
Thought nought too curious,° are ready now
To eat those little darlings whom they loved.
So sharp are hunger's teeth that man and wife
Draw lots who first shall die to lengthen life.
Here stands a lord, and there a lady weeping;
Here many sink, yet those which see them fall
Have scarce strength left to give them burial.
Is not this true?

DIONYZA

Our cheeks and hollow eyes do witness it.

CLEON

O, let those cities that of plenty's cup
And her prosperities so largely taste,
With their superfluous riots,° hear these tears!
The misery of Tharsus may be theirs.

Enter a LORD.

LORD

Where's the Lord Governor?

CLEON

Here.
Speak out thy sorrows which thou bring'st in haste,
For comfort is too far for us to expect.

LORD

We have descried, upon our neighboring shore,
A portly sail° of ships make hitherward.

CLEON

I thought as much.

21 doubting lest fearing that ("doubting" is here tri-syllabic) 22 he'd correct he wanted to punish 37 Commended since it is commended

I.iv.5 digs digs down 8 mischief's misfortune's 13-14 Our tongues . . . weep let our sorrowful tongues (hendiadys) not cease to . . ., let our eyes not cease to weep 19 help me do you help me

22 on over 23 riches strewed herself "riches" is a feminine singular 26 jetted and adorned strutted and dressed themselves up 27 glass . . . by pattern according to which to array themselves 31 repeat mention 40 inventions ingenious novelties 42 nuzzle up bring up 43 curious exquisite 54 superfluous riots inordinate revels 61 portly sail stately fleet

[A C T I I]

One sorrow never comes but brings an heir
That may succeed as his inheritor;
And so in ours: some neighboring nation,
Taking advantage of our misery,
Hath stuffed the hollow vessels with their power,^o
To beat us down, the which are down already,
And make a conquest of unhappy me,
Whereas^o no glory's got to overcome.

LORD

That's the least fear; for, by the semblance
Of their white flags displayed, they bring us peace,
And come to us as favorers, not as foes.^o

CLEON

Thou speak'st like him's untutored to repeat:^o
Who makes the fairest show means most deceit.
But bring they what they will, what need we fear?
On ground's the lowest,^o and we are halfway there.
Go tell their general we attend^o him here,
To know for what he comes, and whence he comes,
And what he craves.^o

LORD

I go, my lord.

[Exit.]

CLEON

Welcome is peace, if he on peace consist;^o
If wars, we are unable to resist.

Enter PERICLES, with ATTENDANTS.

PERICLES

Lord Governor, for so we hear you are,
Let not our ships and number of our men
Be like a beacon fired t' amaze your eyes.
We have heard your miseries as far as Tyre,
And seen the desolation of your streets;
Nor come we to add sorrow to your tears,
But to relieve them of their heavy load;
And these our ships you happily may think^o
Are like the Trojan horse was^o stuffed within
With bloody veins expecting overthrow,^o
Are stored with corn to make your needy bread,^o
And give them life whom hunger starved half dead.

ALL

The gods of Greece protect you!
And we'll pray for you. [They kneel.]

PERICLES

Arise, I pray you, rise;

We do not look for reverence but for love,
And harborage for ourself, our ships, and men.

CLEON

The which when any shall not gratify,^o
Or pay you with unthankfulness in thought,
Be it our wives, our children, or ourselves,
The curse of heaven and men succeed their evils!
Till when—the which I hope shall ne'er be seen—
Your grace is welcome to our town and us.

PERICLES

Which welcome we'll accept; feast here awhile,
Until our stars that frown lend us a smile. Exeunt.

67 power armed force 70 Whereas where 74 him's . . .
repeat him who has never been taught to recite 77 On . . .
lowest he who lies upon the ground can fall no lower 78 attend await 80 craves desires 82 on peace consist stands on peace 91 you . . . think you may perhaps think 92 was which was 93 With . . . overthrow with bloodthirsty warriors waiting for the overthrow (of Troy) 94 your needy bread bread for your needy citizens 100 gratify show gratitude for

65 Enter GOWER.

GOWER

Here have you seen a mighty king
His child iwis^o to incest bring;
A better prince and benign lord
That will prove awful^o both in deed and word.
Be quiet, then, as men should be,
Till he hath passed necessity.^o
I'll show you those in trouble's reign^o
Losing a mite, a mountain gain.
The good in conversation,^o
To whom I give my benison,
Is still at Tharsus, where each man
Thinks all is writ he spoken can;^o
And, to remember^o what he does,
Build his statue to make him glorious.
But tidings to the contrary
Are brought your eyes; what need speak I?

Dumb Show.

Enter at one door PERICLES, talking with CLEON; all the TRAIN with them. Enter at another door a GENTLEMAN with a letter to PERICLES; PERICLES shows the letter to CLEON. PERICLES gives the MESSENGER a reward and knights him. Exit PERICLES at one door, and CLEON at another.

85 Good Helicane, that stayed at home,
Not to eat honey like a drone
From others' labors, for he strives
To killen bad, keep good alive,
And to fulfill his prince' desire,
Sends word of all that haps in Tyre:
How Thaliard came full bent with^o sin
And hid intent^o to murder him;
And that in Tharsus was not best
Longer for him to make his rest.
He, doing so,^o put forth to seas,
Where when men been there's seldom ease;
For now the wind begins to blow;
Thunder above and deeps below
Makes such unquiet that the ship
Should^o house him safe is wracked and split;
And he, good prince, having all lost,
By waves from coast to coast is tossed.
All perishen of man, of pelf,^o
Ne aught escapend^o but himself;
Till fortune, tired with doing bad,
Threw him ashore, to give him glad.^o
And here he comes. What shall be next,
Pardon old Gower—this 'longs^o the text. [Exit.]

II.Cho.2. iwis assuredly 4 awful commanding profound respect 6 passed necessity experienced extreme hardship
7 those . . . reign those who under the dominion of trouble 9 conversation conduct, way of life 12 all . . . can all his words are holy writ 13 remember commemorate 23 bent with intent upon 24 And hid intent and with hidden intent 27 doing so acting as advised 32 Should which should 35 pelf possessions 36 escapend escaping 38 glad gladness 40 'longs belongs to [Scene I. Pentapolis, at the seashore.]

Enter PERICLES, wet.

PERICLES

Yet cease your ire, you angry stars of heaven!
Wind, rain, and thunder, remember, earthly man
Is but a substance that must yield to you;
And I, as fits my nature, do obey you.
Alas, the seas hath cast me on the rocks, 5
Washed me from shore to shore, and left me breath
Nothing to think on but ensuing death.
Let it suffice the greatness of your powers
To have bereft a prince of all his fortunes;
And having thrown him from your wat'ry grave, 10
Here to have death in peace is all he'll crave.

Enter three FISHERMEN.

FIRST FISHERMAN What ho, Pilch!

SECOND FISHERMAN Ha, come and bring away° the nets!

FIRST FISHERMAN What, Patchbreech, I say! 15

THIRD FISHERMAN What say you, master?

FIRST FISHERMAN Look how thou stirr'st now!
Come away,° or I'll fetch thee with a wanion.°

THIRD FISHERMAN Faith, master, I am thinking of the poor men that were cast away before us even now. 20

FIRST FISHERMAN Alas, poor souls, it grieved my heart to hear what pitiful cries they made to us to help them, when, well-a-day,° we could scarce help ourselves.

THIRD FISHERMAN Nay, master, said not I as much 25
when I saw the porpoise how he bounced and tum-bled? They say they're half fish, half flesh. A plague on them! They ne'er come but I look to be washed.
Master, I marvel how the fishes live in the sea.

FIRST FISHERMAN Why, as men do a-land: the great 30 ones eat up the little ones. I can compare our rich misers to nothing so fitly as to a whale; 'a° plays and tumbles, driving the poor fry before him, and at last devours them all at a mouthful: Such whales have I heard on a' th' land,° who never leave gaping till they 35 swallowed the whole parish, church, steeple, bells, and all.

PERICLES [Aside.] A pretty moral.°

THIRD FISHERMAN But, master, if I had been the sexton, I would have been that day in the belfry. 40

SECOND FISHERMAN Why, man?

THIRD FISHERMAN Because he should have swallowed me too; and when I had been in his belly, I would have kept such a jangling of the bells that he should never have left till he cast bells, steeple, church, 45 and parish up again. But if the good King Simonides were of my mind—

PERICLES [Aside.] Simonides!

THIRD FISHERMAN We would purge the land of these drones that rob the bee of her honey. 50

II.i.12 Pilch a coarse outer garment made of leather or skin, here used, like "Patchbreech," jestingly as a name 13 bring away bring here without delay 17 how . . . now what a stock you are! 18 Come away come here right away; with a wanion with a vengeance 23 well-a-day alas 32 'a he 35 heard . . . land heard of on land 38 moral tale conveying a moral lesson

PERICLES [Aside.]

How from the finny subject° of the sea
These fishers tell the infirmities of men;
And from their wat'ry empire recollect°
All that may men approve° or men detect!°

[Aloud.]

Peace be at your labor, honest fishermen! 55

SECOND FISHERMAN Honest good fellow, what's that? If it be a day fits you, scratch it out of the calendar, and nobody look after it.°

PERICLES

May° see the sea hath cast upon your coast—

SECOND FISHERMAN What a drunken knave was 60
the sea to cast° thee in our way!

PERICLES

A man whom both the waters and the wind
In that vast tennis court hath made the ball
For them to play upon entreats you pity him.
He asks of you that never used to beg. 65

FIRST FISHERMAN No, friend, cannot you beg?
Here's them in our country of Greece gets more with begging than we can do with working.

SECOND FISHERMAN Canst thou catch any fishes,
then? 70

PERICLES I never practiced it.

SECOND FISHERMAN Nay, then, thou wilt starve, sure; for here's nothing to be got nowadays unless thou canst fish for't.

PERICLES

What I have been I have forgot to know; 75
But what I am want teaches me to think on:
A man thronged up° with cold. My veins are chill,
And have no more of life than may suffice
To give my tongue that heat to ask your help;
Which if you shall refuse, when I am dead, 80
For that° I am a man, pray you see me buried.

FIRST FISHERMAN Die, quoth-a?° Now gods for-bid't! And I have a gown here! Come, put it on; keep thee warm. Now, afore me,° a handsome fellow!
Come, thou shalt go home, and we'll have flesh for 85 holidays, fish for fasting days, and morco'er puddings and flapjacks,° and thou shalt be welcome.

PERICLES I thank you, sir.

SECOND FISHERMAN Hark you, my friend: you said
you could not beg. 90

PERICLES I did but crave.

SECOND FISHERMAN But crave? Then I'll turn craver too, and so I shall 'scape whipping.°

PERICLES Why, are your beggars whipped, then?

SECOND FISHERMAN O, not all, my friend, not all! 95
For if all your beggars were whipped, I would wish 51 subject subjects, citizens 53 recollect gather up 54

approve commend; detect expose (in wrongdoing) 56–58
Honest . . . after it a lost line in which Pericles wishes the fishermen a good day appears to have preceded this passage;
the fisherman rudely replies that if the day fitted Pericles'
wretched appearance it ought to be removed from the calendar 59 May you may 61 cast (1) cast up, vomit (2) throw 77 thronged up overwhelmed 81 For that because 82 quoth- a did he say 84 afore me upon my word 87 flapjacks pancakes 92–93 Then . . . whipping i.e., through not calling himself a beggar (whipping, administered by the beadle, was the regular punishment of beggars in Shakespeare's day) no better office than to be beadle. But, master, I'll go draw up the net. [Exit, with THIRD FISHERMAN.]

PERICLES [Aside.]

How well this honest mirth becomes^o their labor!

FIRST FISHERMAN Hark you, sir, do you know 100 where ye are?

PERICLES Not well.

FIRST FISHERMAN Why, I'll tell you: this is called Pentapolis, and our king the good Simonides.

PERICLES The good Simonides do you call him? 105

FIRST FISHERMAN Ay, sir; and he deserves so to be called, for his peaceable reign and good government.

PERICLES He is a happy king, since he gains from his subjects the name of good by his government. How far is his court distant from this shore? 110

FIRST FISHERMAN Marry,^o sir, half a day's journey. And I'll tell you, he hath a fair daughter, and tomorrow is her birthday; and there are princes and knights come from all parts of the world to joust and tourney for her love. 115

PERICLES Were my fortunes equal to my desires, I could wish to make one there.

FIRST FISHERMAN O, sir, things must be as they may; and what a man cannot get he may lawfully deal for his wife's soul.^o 120

Enter the two FISHERMEN, drawing up a net.

SECOND FISHERMAN Help, master, help! Here's a fish hangs in the net like a poor man's right^o in the law: 'twill hardly come out. Ha, bots on't,^o 'tis come at last; and 'tis turned to a rusty armor.

PERICLES

An armor, friends! I pray you, let me see it. 125 Thanks, Fortune, yet, that after all thy crosses Thou givest me somewhat to repair^o myself; And though it was mine own, part of my heritage Which my dead father did bequeath to me, With this strict charge, even as he left his life: 130 "Keep it, my Pericles; it hath been a shield "Twixt me and death"—and pointed to this brace^o—" "For that it saved me, keep it; in like necessity— The which the gods protect thee from!—may't defend thee."

It kept where I kept, I so dearly loved it; 135 Till the rough seas, that spares not any man, Took it in rage, though calmed have given't again. I thank thee for't. My shipwreck now's no ill, Since I have here my father gave^o in his will.

FIRST FISHERMAN What mean you, sir? 140

PERICLES

To beg of you, kind friends, this coat of worth, 145 For it was sometime target^o to a king; I know it by this mark. He loved me dearly, And for his sake I wish the having of it; And that you'd guide me to your sovereign's court, Where with it I may appear a gentleman.

And if that ever my low fortune's better, I'll pay your bounties; till then rest your debtor.

FIRST FISHERMAN Why, wilt thou tourney for the lady? 150

PERICLES

I'll show the virtue^o I have borne in arms.

FIRST FISHERMAN Why, d' ye take it, and the gods give thee good on't!

SECOND FISHERMAN Ay, but hark you, my friend: 'twas we that made up this garment through the 155 rough seams of the waters. There are certain condolences,^o certain vails.^o I hope, sir, if you thrive, you'll remember from whence you had them.^o

PERICLES

Believe't, I will!

By your furtherance I am clothed in steel; 160 And spite of all the rapture^o of the sea, This jewel holds his building^o on my arm. Unto thy value^o I will mount myself Upon a courser, whose delightful steps Shall make the gazer joy to see him tread. 165 Only, my friend, I yet am unprovided Of a pair of bases.^o

SECOND FISHERMAN We'll sure provide. Thou shalt have my best gown to make thee a pair; and I'll bring thee to the court myself. 170

PERICLES

Then honor be but equal to my will, This day I'll rise, or else add ill to ill. [Exeunt.]

[Scene II. Pentapolis. The court of Simonides. A public way leading to the lists. A pavilion near it.]

Enter SIMONIDES, with [LORDS,] ATTENDANTS, and THAISA.

SIMONIDES

Are the knights ready to begin the triumph?^o

FIRST LORD

They are, my liege, And stay your coming to present themselves.

SIMONIDES

Return^o them we are ready; and our daughter, 135 In honor of whose birth these triumphs are, Sits here like Beauty's child, whom Nature gat^o For men to see and seeing wonder at. [Exit a LORD.] 5

THAISA

It pleaseth you, my royal father, to express My commendations great, whose merit's less.

SIMONIDES

It's fit it should be so; for princes are 10 A model^o which heaven makes like to itself: As jewels lose their glory if neglected, So princes their renowns if not respected.

99 becomes suits with 111 Marry why (a mild oath, from "By the Virgin Mary") 119-20 he . . . soul no sense can be made of the text as it stands, nor has it been plausibly emended 122 right just claim 123 bots on't a plague upon it 127 repair renew, restore 132 brace armor covering the arms 139 my father gave that which my father gave 142 target literally, light shield, hence protection

151 virtue valor 156-57 condolences probably a malapropism through confusion with dole, meaning "distribution of gifts" 157 vails perquisites, tips 158 them the armor 161 rapture act of plunder, seizure 162 building fixed place 163 Unto thy value to as high a value (as the jewel will fetch) 167 bases pleated skirt, worn by knights on horseback

II.ii.1 triumph festivity, here tournament 4 Return tell by way of answer 6 gat begat 11 model likeness in little

'Tis now your honor,° daughter, to entertain°
The labor of each knight in his device.°

THAISA

Which, to preserve mine honor, I'll perform.

[SIMONIDES and THAISA take seats in the pavilion.]
The FIRST KNIGHT passes by. [As each knight passes, his page, who goes before him, presents his shield to Princess
THAISA.]

SIMONIDES

Who is the first that doth prefer° himself?

THAISA

A knight of Sparta, my renownèd father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is a black Ethiop reaching at the sun.
The word,° Lux tua vita mihi.°

SIMONIDES

He loves you well that holds his life of you.

The SECOND KNIGHT [passes].

Who is the second that presents himself?

THAISA

A prince of Macedon, my royal father;
And the device he bears upon his shield
Is an armed knight that's conquered by a lady;
The motto thus, in Spanish, Più per dolcezza che per forza.°

[The] THIRD KNIGHT [passes].

SIMONIDES

And what's the third?

THAISA

The third of Antioch;
And his device a wreath of chivalry.°
The word, Me pompae provexit apex.°

[The] FOURTH KNIGHT [passes].

SIMONIDES

What is the fourth?

THAISA

A burning torch that's turnèd upside down.
The word, Qui me alit me extinguit.°

SIMONIDES

Which shows that beauty hath his° power and will,
Which can as well inflame as it can kill.

[The] FIFTH KNIGHT [passes].

THAISA

The fifth, an hand environèd with clouds,
Holding out gold that's by the touchstone tried.
The motto thus, Sic spectanda fides.°

[The] sixth knight, [PERICLES, passes, without page].

14 honor honorable duty; entertain receive 15 device emblematic figure, accompanied by a motto, inscribed on the shield 17 prefer present 21 word motto; Lux . . . mihi Thy light is life to me (Latin) 27 Più . . . forza More by gentleness than by force (Italian) 29 wreath of chivalry the twisted band by which, in heraldry, the crest is joined to the knight's helmet 30 Me . . . apex The crown of the triumph has led me on (Latin) 33 Qui . . . extinguit Who feeds me puts me out (Latin) 34 his its 38 Sic spectanda fides Thus is faithfulness to be tried (Latin)

SIMONIDES

15 And what's the sixth and last, the which the knight himself

With such a graceful courtesy delivered?°

40

THAISA

He seems to be a stranger; but his present° is
A withered branch that's only green at top;
The motto, In hac spe vivo.°

SIMONIDES

A pretty moral.

From the dejected state wherein he is,

45

He hopes by you his fortunes yet may flourish.

FIRST LORD

He had need mean better than his outward show

Can any way speak in his just commend;°

20

For by his rusty outside he appears

To have practiced more the whipstock° than the lance. 50

SECOND LORD

He well may be a stranger, for he comes

To an honored triumph strangely furnishèd.

THIRD LORD

And on set purpose let his armor rust

Until this day to scour it in the dust.

SIMONIDES

25

Opinion's° but a fool that makes us scan°

55

The outward habit for the inward man.

But stay, the knights are coming!

We will withdraw into the gallery.

[Exeunt.]

Great shouts [within], and all cry, "The mean° knight!"

[Scene III. Pentapolis. A hall of state.]

30

Enter the king [SIMONIDES, THAISA, MARSHAL, LORDS, LADIES,] and KNIGHTS from tilting, [and ATTENDANTS].

SIMONIDES

Knights,

To say you're welcome were superfluous.

To place upon the volume of your deeds,

As in a title page, your worth in arms,°

Were more than you expect, or more than's fit, 5

Since every worth in show commends itself.

Prepare for mirth, for mirth becomes a feast.

You are princes and my guests.

THAISA

But you my knight and guest;

To whom this wreath of victory I give, 10

And crown you king of this day's happiness.

PERICLES

'Tis more by fortune, lady, than my merit.

SIMONIDES

Call it by what you will, the day is yours;

And here, I hope, is none that envies it.

40 delivered presented 41 present object presented 43 In hac spe vivo In this hope I live (Latin) 48 commend commendation 50 To . . . whipstock to have wielded more the handle of a whip, i.e., worked as a carter 55 Opinion public opinion; scan scrutinize, examine 58 s.d. mean shabby II.iii.4 As . . . arms title pages of early printed books often proclaimed the excellence of their contents

- In framing° an artist, art hath thus decreed:
To make some good, but others to exceed;
And you are her labored scholar.° Come, queen o' th'
feast—
For, daughter, so you are—here take your place.
Marshal, the rest as they deserve their grace.°
- KNIGHTS
We are honored much by good Simonides.
- SIMONIDES
Your presence glads our days. Honor we love;
For who hates honor hates the gods above.
- MARSHAL
Sir, yonder is your place.
- PERICLES Some other is more fit.
- FIRST KNIGHT
Contend not, sir; for we are gentlemen
Have° neither in our hearts nor outward eyes
Envied the great, nor shall the low despise.
- PERICLES
You are right courteous knights.
- SIMONIDES Sit, sir, sit.
[Aside.]
- By Jove I wonder, that is king of thoughts,
These cates° resist me, he but thought upon.°
- THAISA [Aside.]
By Juno, that is queen of marriage,
All viands that I eat
Do seem unsavory, wishing him my meat.
[To SIMONIDES.]
- Sure he's a gallant gentleman.
- SIMONIDES
He's but a country gentleman;
Has done no more than other knights have done;
Has broken a staff or so; so let it pass.
- THAISA [Aside.]
To me he seems like diamond to glass.
- PERICLES [Aside.]
Yon king's to me like to my father's picture,
Which tells me in that glory once he was;
Had princes sit like stars about his throne,
And he the sun for them to reverence;
None that beheld him but, like lesser lights,
Did vail° their crowns to his supremacy;
Where now his son's a glowworm in the night,
The which hath fire in darkness, none in light.
Whereby I see that Time's the king of men;
He's both their parent and he is their grave,
And gives them what he will, not what they crave.
- SIMONIDES
What, are you merry, knights?
- KNIGHTS
Who can be other in this royal presence?
- SIMONIDES
Here, with a cup that's stored unto the brim—
As you do love, fill to° your mistress' lips—
We drink this health to you.
- KNIGHTS We thank your grace.
- 15 SIMONIDES
Yet pause awhile.
Yon knight doth sit too melancholy,
As if the entertainment in our court
Had not a show might countervail° his worth.
Note it not you, Thaisa?
- THAISA
What is't to me, my father?
- 20 SIMONIDES
O, attend, my daughter:
Princes, in this, should live like gods above,
Who freely give to everyone that come
To honor them.
And princes not doing so are like to gnats,
Which make a sound, but killed are wond' red at.° 65
Therefore, to make his entrance° more sweet,
25 Here, say we drink this standing-bowl° of wine to him.
- THAISA
Alas, my father, it befits not me
Unto a stranger knight to be so bold:
He may my proffer take for an offense,
Since men take women's gifts for impudence. 70
- SIMONIDES
How?
Do as I bid you, or you'll move me else!
- THAISA [Aside.]
30 Now, by the gods, he could not please me better.
- SIMONIDES
And furthermore tell him we desire to know of him 75
Of whence he is, his name and parentage.
- THAISA
The king my father, sir, has drunk to you.
- PERICLES
I thank him.
- 35 THAISA
Wishing it so much blood unto your life.
- PERICLES
I thank both him and you, and pledge him freely. 80
- THAISA
And further he desires to know of you
Of whence you are, your name and parentage.
- 40 PERICLES
A gentleman of Tyre; my name Pericles;
My education been° in arts and arms;
Who, looking for adventures in the world, 85
Was by the rough seas reft of ships and men,
And after shipwrack driven upon this shore.
- 45 THAISA
He thanks your grace; names himself Pericles,
A gentleman of Tyre,
Who only by misfortune of the seas, 90
Bereft of ships and men, cast on this shore.
- SIMONIDES
Now, by the gods, I pity his misfortune,
And will awake him from his melancholy.
Come, gentlemen, we sit too long on trifles,
And waste the time which looks for other revels. 95
Even in your armors, as you are addressed,°

15 framing molding 17 her labored scholar the scholar over whom art took special pains 19 grace favor 25 Have that have 29 cates delicacies; resist . . . upon repel me (?) when I but think of him 43 vail lower 52 to in honor of

57 countervail be equal to 65 but . . . at i.e., when they are found to be such small animals, after making so great a noise 66 entrance trisyllabic 67 standing-bowl bowl resting on a foot 84 been has been 96 addressed accoutered

Will well° become a soldier's dance.
I will not have excuse with saying this:
Loud music° is too harsh for ladies' heads,
Since they love men in arms° as well as beds. 100
They dance.°

So, this was well asked, 'twas so well performed.
Come, sir, here's a lady that wants breathing° too;
And I have heard you knights of Tyre
Are excellent in making ladies trip,°
And that their measures° are as excellent. 105

PERICLES

In those that practice them they are, my lord.

SIMONIDES

O, that's as much as you would be denied
Of your fair courtesy.° They dance. Unclasp, unclasp!
Thanks, gentlemen, to all; all have done well,

[To PERICLES.]

But you the best. Pages and lights, to conduct 110
These knights unto their several lodgings! Yours, sir,
We have given order be next our own.

PERICLES

I am at your grace's pleasure.

SIMONIDES

Princes, it is too late to talk of love,
And that's the mark I know you level° at. 115
Therefore each one betake him to his rest;
Tomorrow all for speeding° do their best. [Exeunt.]

[Scene IV. Tyre.]

Enter HELICANUS and ESCANES.

HELICANUS

No, Escanes, know this of me:
Antiochus from incest lived not free;
For which, the most high gods not minding° longer
To withhold the vengeance that they had in store,
Due to this heinous capital offense, 5
Even in the height and pride of all his glory,
When he was seated in a chariot
Of an inestimable value, and
His daughter with him, a fire from heaven came,
And shriveled up their bodies, even to loathing. 10
For they so stunk
That all those eyes adored° them ere their fall
Scorn now their hand should give them burial.

ESCANES

'Twas very strange.

97 Will well two such words as "your steps" must have originally preceded this 99 Loud music i.e., the loud noise made by the clashing of their armor (?) 100 arms a pun is presumably intended 100 s.d. They dance most editors assume that the first dance is performed by the Knights alone, the second by the Knights and Ladies. The text, especially line 102, suggests rather that both dances are mixed. In the first dance Thaisa and, perhaps, Pericles do not participate; in the second they dance together 102 breathing exercise 104 trip dance a light dance (with a double entendre) 105 measures dances 107–08 denied . . . courtesy refused permission to show your courtesy (by dancing with Thaisa) (?) 115 level aim 117 speeding success
II.iv.3 minding being inclined 12 adored that adored

HELICANUS

And yet but justice; for though this king were great, 15
His greatness was no guard to bar heaven's shaft,
But sin had his° reward.

ESCANES

'Tis very true.

Enter two or three LORDS.

FIRST LORD

See, not a man in private conference
Or council has respect with him but he.

SECOND LORD

It shall no longer grieve° without reproof. 20

THIRD LORD

And cursed be he that will not second it.

FIRST LORD

Follow me then. Lord Helicane, a word.

HELICANUS

With me? And welcome. Happy day, my lords!

FIRST LORD

Know that our griefs° are risen to the top,
And now at length they overflow their banks. 25

HELICANUS

Your griefs, for what? Wrong not your prince you love.

FIRST LORD

Wrong not yourself, then, noble Helicane;
But if the prince do live, let us salute him,
Or know what ground's made happy by his breath. 30
If in the world he live, we'll seek him out;
If in his grave he rest, we'll find him there;
And be resolved° he lives to govern us,
Or, dead, gives cause to mourn his funeral,
And leaves us to our free election.

SECOND LORD

Whose death's indeed the strongest in our censure.° 35
And knowing this: kingdoms without a head,
Like goodly buildings left without a roof
Soon fall to ruin, your noble self,
That best know how to rule and how to reign,
We thus submit unto—our sovereign. 40

ALL

Live, noble Helicane!

HELICANUS

For honor's cause, forbear your suffrages.
If that you love Prince Pericles, forbear. 10
Take I° your wish, I leap into the seas
Where's hourly trouble for a minute's ease. 45
A twelvemonth longer let me entreat you
To forbear° the absence of your king;
If in which time expired he not return,
I shall with aged patience bear your yoke.
But if I cannot win you to this love,° 50
Go search like nobles, like noble subjects,
And in your search spend your adventurous worth;
Whom if you find, and win unto return,
You shall like diamonds sit about his crown.

FIRST LORD

To wisdom he's a fool that will not yield; 55

17 his its 20 grieve be a grievance 24 griefs grievances 32 resolved satisfied 35 strongest . . . censure the more likely supposition in our judgment 44 Take I if I should accept 47 forbear tolerate, endure 50 love act of kindness

And since Lord Helicane enjoineth us,
We with our travels will endeavor it.

HELICANUS

Then you love us, we you, and we'll clasp hands:
When peers thus knit, a kingdom ever stands.

[Exeunt.]

[Scene V. Pentapolis. A room in the palace.]

Enter the king [SIMONIDES] reading of a letter at one door; the KNIGHTS meet him.

FIRST KNIGHT

Good morrow to the good Simonides.

SIMONIDES

Knights, from my daughter this I let you know:
That for this twelvemonth she'll not undertake
A married life.
Her reason to herself is only known,
Which from her by no means° can I get.

SECOND KNIGHT

May we not get access to her, my lord?

SIMONIDES

Faith, by no means. She hath so strictly tied her
To her chamber that 'tis impossible.
One twelve moons° more she'll wear Diana's livery.° 10
This by the eye of Cynthia° hath she vowed,
And on her virgin honor will not break it.

THIRD KNIGHT

Loath° to bid farewell, we take our leaves.

[Exeunt KNIGHTS.]

SIMONIDES

So, they are well dispatched.
Now to my daughter's letter:
She tells me here she'll wed the stranger knight,
Or never more to view nor day nor light.
'Tis well, mistress; your choice agrees with mine.
I like that well! Nay, how absolute° she's in't,
Not minding whether I dislike or no!
Well, I do commend her choice,
And will no longer have it be delayed.
Soft,° here he comes! I must dissemble it.

Enter PERICLES.

PERICLES

All fortune to the good Simonides!

SIMONIDES

To you as much. Sir, I am beholding° to you
For your sweet music this last night. I do Protest my ears were never better fed
With such delightful pleasing harmony.

PERICLES

It is your grace's pleasure to commend;
Not my desert.

SIMONIDES Sir, you are music's master.

PERICLES

The worst of all her scholars, my good lord.

SIMONIDES

Let me ask you one thing: What do you think of My daughter, sir?

PERICLES

A most virtuous princess.

SIMONIDES

And she is fair, too, is she not?

PERICLES

As a fair day in summer, wondrous fair.

SIMONIDES

Sir, my daughter thinks very well of you;
Ay, so well that you must be her master,
And she will be your scholar: therefore look to it.

PERICLES

I am unworthy for her schoolmaster.

SIMONIDES

She thinks not so; peruse this writing else.°

PERICLES [Aside.]

What's here?

A letter that she loves the knight of Tyre!
'Tis the king's subtlety to have my life.

[Kneels.]

O, seek not to entrap me, gracious lord,
A stranger and distressed gentleman,
That never aimed so high to° love your daughter,
But bent all offices° to honor her.

SIMONIDES

Thou hast bewitched my daughter, and thou art
A villain!

PERICLES By the gods, I have not.

Never did thought of mine levy° offense;
Nor never did my actions yet commence
A deed might° gain her love or your displeasure.

SIMONIDES

Traitor, thou liest!

PERICLES

Traitor?

SIMONIDES

Ay, traitor!

PERICLES

Even in his throat—unless it be the king—
That calls me traitor I return the lie.

SIMONIDES [Aside.]

Now, by the gods, I do applaud his courage.

PERICLES

My actions are as noble as my thoughts,
That never relished of° a base descent.
I came unto your court for honor's cause,
And not to be a rebel to her state;°
And he that otherwise accounts of me,
This sword shall prove he's honor's enemy.

SIMONIDES

No?

Here comes my daughter, she can witness it.

Enter THAISA.

PERICLES

Then, as you are as virtuous as fair,
Resolve° your angry father if my tongue
Did e'er solicit, or my hand subscribe
To any syllable that made love to you.

II.v.6 means here pronounced as a disyllable 10 One twelve moons one year; wear Diana's livery i.e., remain a virgin 11 Cynthia the moon 13 Loath here pronounced as a disyllable 19 absolute positive, decided 23 Soft hold (an interjection) 25 beholding indebted

40 else if you do not believe it 46 to as to 47 bent all offices turned all my services 50 levy apparently misused for level, i.e., aim 52 might that might 58 relished of had a trace of 60 her state honor's domain 66 Resolve inform

THAISA

Why, sir, say if you had,
Who takes offense at that would° make me glad? 70

SIMONIDES

Yea, mistress, are you so peremptory°

(Aside.)

I am glad on't with all my heart.—
I'll tame you; I'll bring you in subjection!
Will you, not having my consent,
Bestow your love and your affections 75
Upon a stranger?—(aside) who, for aught I know,
May be, nor can I think the contrary,
As great in blood as I myself—
Therefore hear you, mistress: either frame
Your will to mine—and you, sir, hear you: 80
Either be ruled by me, or I'll make you—
Man and wife.
Nay, come, your hands and lips must seal it too!
And being joined, I'll thus your hopes destroy;
And for further grief—God give you joy! 85
What, are you both pleased?

THAISA

Yes, if you love me, sir.

PERICLES

Even as my life my blood° that fosters it.

SIMONIDES

What, are you both agreed?

BOTH

Yes, if't please your majesty.

SIMONIDES

It pleaseth me so well that I will see you wed; 90
And then, with what haste you can, get you to bed.

Exeunt.

[A C T I I I]

Enter GOWER.

GOWER

Now sleep y-slackèd° hath the rout;°
No din but snores the house about,
Made louder by the o'erfed breast
Of this most pompous° marriage feast.
The cat, with eyne° of burning coal, 5
Now couches 'fore the mouse's hole;
And crickets sing at the oven's mouth
All the blither for their drouth.°
Hymen° hath brought the bride to bed,
Where by the loss of maidenhead 10
A babe is molded. Be attent,°
And time that is so briefly° spent
With your fine fancies° quaintly° eche.°
What's dumb in show I'll plain° with speech.

70 would which would 71 peremptory determined 87 my blood i.e., loves my blood

III. Cho. I y-slackèd reduced to inactivity; rout company of revelers 4 pompous magnificent 5 eyne eyes (archaic plural) 8 drouth dryness 9 Hymen the god of marriage 11 attent attentive 12 briefly quickly 13 fancies imaginings; quaintly skillfully; eche augment (old spelling of eke) 14 plain explain

[Dumb Show.]

Enter PERICLES and SIMONIDES at one door, with ATTENDANTS; a MESSENGER meets them, kneels, and gives PERICLES a letter; PERICLES shows it SIMONIDES; the LORDS kneel to him. Then enter THAISA with child, with LYCHORIDA, a nurse; the king [SIMONIDES] shows her the letter; she rejoices; she and PERICLES take leave of her father, and depart [with LYCHORIDA and their ATTENDANTS. Then exeunt SIMONIDES and the rest].

By many a dern° and painful° perch° 15
Of Pericles the careful search
By the four opposing coigns°
Which the world together joins
Is made with all due diligence
That horse and sail and high expense 20
Can stead° the quest. At last from Tyre,
Fame answering the most strange inquire,°
To th' court of King Simonides
Are letters brought, the tenor these:
85 Antiochus and his daughter dead, 25
The men of Tyrus on the head
Of Helicanus would set on
The crown of Tyre, but he will none.
The mutiny he there hastes t' appease;
Says to 'em, if King Pericles 30
Come not home in twice six moons,
He, obedient to their dooms,°
Will take the crown. The sum° of this,
Brought hither to Pentapolis,
Y-ravishèd° the regions round, 35
And everyone with claps can° sound,°
“Our heir-apparent is a king!
Who dreamt, who thought of such a thing?”
Brief,° he must hence depart to Tyre.
His queen with child makes her desire— 40
Which who shall cross?—along to go.
Omit we all their dole° and woe.
Lychorida, her nurse, she takes,
And so to sea. Their vessel shakes
On Neptune's billow; half the flood 45
Hath their keel cut;° but Fortune's mood
Varies again: the grisled° north
Disgorges such a tempest forth
That, as a duck for life that dives,
50 So up and down the poor ship drives. 50
The lady shrieks and, well-a-near,°
Does fall in travail with her fear;
And what ensues in this fell storm
Shall for itself itself perform.
10 I nill° relate, action° may 55
Conveniently the rest convey;
Which might not what by me is told.

15 dern wild, drear; painful toilsome; perch measure of land 17 opposing coigns opposite corners 21 stead be of use to 22 Fame . . . inquire Rumor having responded to inquiries in the most distant regions (?) 32 dooms judgments 33 sum gist 35 Y-ravishèd enraptured 36 can began (a Middle English variant of gan); sound proclaim, declare 39 Brief in short 42 dole grief 45–46 half . . . cut i.e., half the voyage has been completed 47 grisled horrible; grisly 51 well-a-near alas 55 nill will not (Middle English); action here pronounced as a trisyllable

In your imagination hold
This stage the ship, upon whose deck
The sea-tossed Pericles appears to speak. [Exit.] 60

[Scene I.]

Enter PERICLES, a-shipboard.

PERICLES

The god of this great vast^o rebuke these surges,
Which wash both heaven and hell; and thou that hast
Upon the winds command, bind them in brass,
Having called them from the deep! O, still Thy deaf'ning dreadful thunders; gently quench 5
Thy nimble^o sulphurous flashes! O, how, Lychorida,
How does my queen? Thou stormest venomously;
Wilt thou spit all thyself? The seaman's whistle
Is as a whisper in the ears of death,
Unheard. Lychorida!—Lucina,^o O
Divinest patroness and midwife gentle
To those that cry by night, convey thy deity
Aboard our dancing boat; make swift the pangs
Of my queen's travails! Now, Lychorida!

Enter LYCHORIDA, [with an INFANT].

LYCHORIDA

Here is a thing too young for such a place,
Who, if it had conceit,^o would die, as I Am like to do. Take in your arms this piece
Of your dead queen.

PERICLES How? How, Lychorida?

LYCHORIDA

Patience, good sir; do not assist the storm.
Here's all that is left living of your queen—
A little daughter. For the sake of it
Be manly, and take comfort.

PERICLES

O you gods!

Why do you make us love your goodly gifts,
And snatch them straight away? We here below
Recall not what we give, and therein may Vie honor with you.^o

LYCHORIDA

Patience, good sir,
Even for this charge.^o

PERICLES

Now, mild may be thy life!

For a more blusterous birth had never babe;
Quiet and gentle thy conditions! For
Thou art the rudeliest welcome to this world
That ever was prince's child. Happy what follows!
Thou hast as chiding a nativity
As fire, air, water, earth, and heaven can make,
To herald thee from the womb. Even at the first
Thy loss is more than can thy portage quit,^o
With all thou canst find here. Now the good gods
Throw their best eyes upon't!

Enter two SAILORS.

FIRST SAILOR What courage, sir? God save you!

PERICLES

Courage enough. I do not fear the flaw:^o
It hath done to me the worst. Yet, for the love 40
Of this poor infant, this fresh,^o new seafarer,
I would it would be quiet.

FIRST SAILOR Slack the bolins^o there! Thou wilt not, wilt thou? Blow, and split thyself!

SECOND SAILOR But sea-room, and^o the brine and 45
cloudy billow kiss the moon, I care not.

FIRST SAILOR Sir, your queen must overboard; the sea works^o high, the wind is loud, and will not lie^o till the ship be cleared of the dead.

PERICLES That's your superstition. 50

FIRST SAILOR Pardon us, sir; with us at sea it hath been still^o observed; and we are strong in custom.^o Therefore briefly^o yield her; for she must overboard straight.

10 PERICLES

As you think meet. Most wretched queen! 55

LYCHORIDA Here she lies, sir.

PERICLES

A terrible childbed hast thou had, my dear;
No light, no fire. Th' unfriendly elements
Forgot thee utterly; nor have I time
To give thee hallowed to thy grave, but straight 60
Must cast thee, scarcely coffined, in the ooze;
Where, for^o a monument upon thy bones,
And e'er-remaining lamps, the belching whale
And humming water must o'erwhelm thy corpse,
Lying with simple shells. O Lychorida, 65
Bid Nestor bring me spices, ink and paper,
My casket and my jewels; and bid Nicander
Bring me the satin coffin.^o Lay the babe
Upon the pillow. Hie thee, whiles I say
A priestly farewell to her. Suddenly,^o woman! 70

[Exit LYCHORIDA.]

SECOND SAILOR Sir, we have a chest beneath the hatches, Caulked and bitumèd^o ready.

PERICLES

I thank thee. Mariner, say, what coast is this?

25

SECOND SAILOR

We are near Tharsus.

PERICLES

Thither, gentle mariner,

Alter thy course for Tyre. When canst thou reach it? 75

SECOND SAILOR

By break of day, if the wind cease.

30

PERICLES

O make for Tharsus!
There will I visit Cleon, for the babe
Cannot hold out to Tyrus. There I'll leave it
At careful^o nursing. Go thy ways,^o good mariner. 80
I'll bring the body presently.^o Exit, [with SAILORS].

35

III.i.1 vast boundless expanse 6 nimble swift 10 Lucina goddess of childbirth 16 conceit capacity to understand 26
Vie . . . you compete with you in respect of honor 27
Even . . . charge for the sake of the babe left in your care 35 than . . . quit than your cargo (i.e., all that you are going to possess in the course of the voyage of life) can compensate for (?)

39 flaw gust of wind 41 fresh raw, inexperienced 43
bolins ropes from weather-side of square sail to bow 45 and if 48 works rages; lie subside 52 still always; strong in custom steadfast in observing customs 53 briefly quickly
62 for instead of 68 coffin case, box 70 Suddenly at once 72 bitumèd made watertight with bitumen 80 careful full of good care; Go thy ways come along 81 presently immediately

[Scene II. Ephesus. A room in Cerimon's house.]

Enter Lord CERIMON with a SERVANT.

CERIMON
Philemon, ho!

Enter PHILEMON.

PHILEMON
Doth my lord call?

CERIMON
Get fire and meat for those poor men:
'T'as been a turbulent and stormy night.
[Exit PHILEMON.]

SERVANT
I have been in many; but such a night as this Till now I ne'er endured.

CERIMON
Your master will be dead ere you return.
There's nothing can be minist'ed to nature
That can recover him. Give this to the 'pothecary,
And tell me how it works.° [Exit SERVANT.]

Enter two GENTLEMEN.

FIRST GENTLEMAN Good morrow. 10

SECOND GENTLEMAN
Good morrow to your lordship.

CERIMON Gentlemen,
Why do you stir so early?

FIRST GENTLEMAN
Sir,
Our lodgings, standing bleak upon the sea,
Shook as the earth did quake;
The very principals° did seem to rend
And all to topple. Pure surprise and fear
Made me to quit the house.

SECOND GENTLEMAN
That is the cause we trouble you so early;
'Tis not our husbandry.°

CERIMON O, you say well. 20

FIRST GENTLEMAN
But I much marvel that your lordship, having Rich tire° about you, should at these early hours
Shake off the golden slumber of repose.
'Tis most strange,
Nature should be so conversant with pain,°
Being thereto not compelled.

CERIMON I held it ever
Virtue and cunning° were endowments greater
Than nobleness° and riches: careless heirs
May the two latter darken and expend,
But immortality attends° the former, 25
Making a man a god. 'Tis known, I ever
Have studied physic, through which secret art,
By turning o'er authorities, I have,
Together with my practice, made familiar
To me and to my aid° the blest infusions 30

That dwells in vegetives,° in metals, stones;
And I can speak of the disturbances
That nature works, and of her cures; which gives me
A more° content in course of true delight
Than to be thirsty after tottering honor, 40
Or tie my treasure up in silken bags,
To please the Fool and Death.°

SECOND GENTLEMAN
Your honor has through Ephesus poured forth
Your charity, and hundreds call themselves
Your creatures, who by you have been restored; 45
And not° your knowledge, your personal pain,° but even
Your purse, still° open, hath built Lord Cerimon
Such strong renown as time shall never raze.

Enter two or three [SERVANTS] with a chest.

FIRST SERVANT
So; lift there!

CERIMON What's that?

FIRST SERVANT Sir, even now 50
Did the sea toss up upon our shore this chest.
'Tis of some wrack.

CERIMON Set't down, let's look upon't.

SECOND GENTLEMAN
'Tis like a coffin, sir.

CERIMON Whate'er it be,
'Tis wondrous heavy. Wrench it open straight.°
If the sea's stomach be o'ercharged with gold,
'Tis a good constraint of fortune 55
It belches upon us.°

SECOND GENTLEMAN 'Tis so, my lord.

CERIMON How close 'tis caulked and bitumed!
Did the sea cast it up?

FIRST SERVANT
I never saw so huge a billow, sir,
As tossed it upon shore.

CERIMON Wrench it open: soft! It smells 60
Most sweetly in my sense.

SECOND GENTLEMAN A delicate odor.

CERIMON As ever hit my nostril. So; up with it!
O you most potent gods! What's here, a corse!

SECOND GENTLEMAN
Most strange! 25
CERIMON Shrouded in cloth of state;°
Balmed,° and entreated with full bags of spices! 65
A passport too! Apollo, perfect me°
In the characters!°

[Reads from a scroll.]

Here I give to understand,
If e'er this coffin drives a-land,
I, King Pericles, have lost 70
This queen, worth all our mundane cost.°

III.ii.9-10 Give . . . works this prescription must be intended for someone other than the Servant's master 16 principals chief rafters of a house 20 husbandry zeal for work 22 tire belongings 25 pain trouble, labor 27 cunning skill 28 nobleness nobility (i.e., social rank) 30 attends awaits 35 my aid my assistant (?)

36 vegetives vegetables, herbs 39 more greater 42 Fool and Death probably an allusion to the Dance of Death, in which these two figures often appeared as companions 46 not not only; pain trouble 47 still always 53 straight immediately 56 It . . . us that it belches this chest upon us 64 cloth of state magnificent fabric 65 Balmed anointed with fragrant oil 66 perfect me instruct me fully 67 characters writing (the stress falls here on the second syllable) 71 mundane cost wordly riches

Who finds her, give her burying;
 She was the daughter of a king.
 Besides this treasure for a fee,
 The gods requite his charity!
 If thou livest, Pericles, thou hast a heart
 That even cracks for woe! This chanced tonight.°

SECOND GENTLEMAN

Most likely, sir.

CERIMON Nay, certainly tonight;
 For look how fresh she looks! They were too rough
 That threw her in the sea. Make a fire within.
 Fetch hither all my boxes in my closet.

[Exit SERVANT.]

Death may usurp on nature° many hours,
 And yet the fire of life kindle again
 The o'erpressed spirits. [I have read
 Of some Egyptians, who after four hours' death
 Have raised impoverished° bodies, like to this,
 Unto their former health.]°

Enter one [SERVANT] with napkins and fire.

Well said,° well said;

The fire and cloths.°
 The still and woeful music that we have,
 Cause it to sound, beseech you.

[Music.]

The viol once more! How thou stirr'st,° thou block!
 The music there! [Music.] I pray you, give her air.
 Gentlemen,
 This queen will live: nature° awakes; a warmth
 Breathes out of her. She hath not been entranced°
 Above five hours. See how she 'gins to blow°
 Into life's flower again!

FIRST GENTLEMAN The heavens
 Through you increase our wonder, and sets up
 Your fame forever.

CERIMON She is alive! Behold,
 Her eyelids, cases to those heavenly jewels
 Which Pericles hath lost, begin to part
 Their fringes of bright gold; the diamonds
 Of a most praised water° doth appear
 To make the world twice rich. Live,
 And make us weep to hear your fate, fair creature,
 Rare as you seem to be. She moves.

THAISA O dear Diana,
 Where am I? Where's my lord? What world is this?

SECOND GENTLEMAN
 Is not this strange?

FIRST GENTLEMAN Most rare!

CERIMON Hush, my gentle neighbors!
 Lend me your hands; to the next chamber bear her.
 Get linen. Now this matter must be looked to,
 For her relapse is mortal.° Come, come;
 And Aesculapius° guide us!

They carry her away. Exeunt omnes.°

77 tonight last night 82 nature man's physical constitution 84-87 see Introduction, p. 1408 86 impoverished deprived of their native strength 87 Well said well done 88 cloths napkins 91 How thou stirr'st how quick you are! (used ironically) 94 nature the vital powers 95 entranced in a swoon 96 blow bloom 103 water luster III is mortal would be fatal 112 Aesculapius Greek god of medicine
 112 s.d. omnes all (Latin)

[Scene III. Tharsus.]

Enter PERICLES at Tharsus with CLEON and DIONYZA, [and LYCHORIDA with MARINA in her arms].

PERICLES

Most honored Cleon, I must needs be gone:
 My twelve months are expired, and Tyrus stands
 In a litigious° peace. You and your lady,
 Take from my heart all thankfulness! The gods
 Make up the rest upon you!

CLEON

Your shafts of fortune,
 Though they hurt you mortally, yet glance
 Full° woundingly on us.

DIONYZA

O your sweet queen!
 That the strict fates had pleased you had brought her hither
 To have blest mine eyes with her!

PERICLES

We cannot but
 Obey the powers above us. Could I rage
 And roar as doth the sea she lies in, yet
 The end must be as 'tis. My gentle babe,
 Marina, whom, for° she was born at sea,
 I have named so, here I charge
 Your charity withal,° leaving her
 The infant of your care; beseeching you
 To give her princely training, that she may
 Be mannered as she is born.

CLEON

Fear not, my lord, but think
 Your grace, that fed my country with your corn,
 For which the people's prayers still fall upon you,
 Must in your child be thought on. If neglectio°
 Should therein make me vile, the common body,°
 By you relieved, would force me to my duty.
 But if to that my nature need a spur,
 The gods revenge it upon me and mine,
 To the end of generation!°

PERICLES

I believe you.
 Your honor and your goodness teach me to't,
 Without your vows. Till she be married, madam,
 By bright Diana, whom we honor all,
 Unscissored shall this hair of mine remain,
 Though I show ill in't. So I take my leave.
 Good madam, make me blessed in your care
 In bringing up my child.

DIONYZA

I have one myself,
 Who shall not be more dear to my respect°
 Than yours, my lord.

PERICLES

Madam, my thanks and prayers.

CLEON

We'll bring your grace e'en to the edge o' th' shore,
 Then give you up to the masked° Neptune and
 The gentlest winds of heaven.

PERICLES

I will embrace
 Your offer. Come, dearest madam. O, no tears,
 Lychorida, no tears!
 Look to your little mistress, on whose grace°
 You may depend hereafter. Come, my lord. [Exeunt.]

III.iii.3 litigious productive of contention 7 full very 13 for because 15 withal with 21 neglectio neglect 22 common body common people 26 To . . . generation until the human race ceases to procreate (?) 34 respect care
 37 masked deceptively calm (?) 41 grace favor

[Scene IV. Ephesus.]Enter CERIMON and THAISA.

CERIMON

Madam, this letter, and some certain jewels,
Lay with you in your coffer; which are
At your command. Know you the character?°

THAISA

It is my lord's. That I was shipped at sea
I well remember, even on my eaning time;°
But whether there delivered, by the holy gods,
I cannot rightly say. But since King Pericles,
My wedded lord, I ne'er shall see again,
A vestal livery will I take me to,°
And never more have joy.

CERIMON

Madam, if this you purpose as ye speak,
Diana's temple is not distant far,
Where you may abide till your date° expire.
Moreover, if you please, a niece of mine
Shall there attend you.

THAISA

My recompense is thanks, that's all;
Yet my good will is great, though the gift small.
Exit, [with CERIMON].

[A C T I V]

Enter GOWER.

GOWER

Imagine Pericles arrived at Tyre,
Welcomed and settled to his own desire.
His woeful queen we leave at Ephesus,
Unto Diana there's° a votaress.
Now to Marina bend your mind,
Whom our fast-growing scene must find
At Tharsus, and by Cleon trained
In music's letters;° who hath gained
Of education all the grace,
Which makes her both the heart and place°
Of general wonder. But, alack,
That monster, Envy, oft the wrack°
Of earned praise, Marina's life
Seeks to take off by treason's° knife.
And in this kind:° Our Cleon hath
One daughter, and a full grown wench,
Even ripe for marriage rite. This maid
Hight° Philoten; and it is said
For certain in our story, she Would ever with Marina be.
Be't when she weaved the sleided° silk
With fingers long, small,° white as milk;
Or when she would with sharp needle° wound

III.iv.3 character handwriting 5 eaning time time of childbirth 9 vestal . . . to i.e., I will live the life of a vestal virgin 13 date term of life

IV.Cho.4 there's there as 8 music's letters the study of music 10 place dwelling 12 wrack ruin 14 treason's treachery's 15 in this kind in the following way 18 Hight is named 21 sleided a variant of sleaved, i.e., divided into filaments 22 small slender 23 needle here pronounced as a monosyllable

The cambric, which she made more sound
By hurting it; or when to th' lute 25
She sung, and made the night-bird° mute,
That still records with moan;° or when
She would with rich and constant pen
Vail° to her mistress Dian; still
This Philoten contends in skill 30
With absolute° Marina: so
With dove of Paphos° might the crow
Vie° feathers white. Marina gets
All praises, which are paid as debts,
And not as given. This so darks° 35
In Philoten all graceful marks
That Cleon's wife, with envy rare,
A present° murderer does prepare°
For good Marina, that her daughter
Might stand peerless by this slaughter. 40
The sooner her vile thoughts to stead,°
Lychorida, our nurse, is dead;
And cursèd Dionyza hath
The pregnant° instrument of wrath
Prest° for this blow. The unborn event° 45
I do commend to your content;°
Only I carry wingèd time
Post° on the lame feet of my rhyme;
Which never could I so convey
Unless your thoughts went on my way. 50
Dionyza does appear,
With Leonine, a murderer. Exit.

[Scene I. Tharsus, near the seashore.]Enter DIONYZA, with LEONINE.

DIONYZA

Thy oath remember; thou hast sworn to do't.
'Tis but a blow, which never shall be known.
Thou canst not do a thing in the world so soon
To yield thee so much profit. Let not conscience,
Which is but cold, or flaming love thy bosom 5
Enslave too nicely;° nor let pity, which Even women have cast off, melt thee, but be
A soldier to° thy purpose.

LEONINE

I will do't. But yet she is a goodly creature!

DIONYZA

The fitter then the gods should have her. 10
Here she comes weeping° her old nurse's death!
Thou art resolved?

LEONINE

I am resolved.

Enter MARINA with a basket of flowers.

MARINA

No, I will rob Tellus° of her weed°

26 night-bird nightingale 27 still . . . moan ever sings dolefully 29 Vail do homage 31 absolute free from imperfection 32 dove of Paphos Venus' dove 33 Vie compete in respect of 35 darks darkens, puts in the shade 38 present speedy; prepare provide 41 stead aid 44 pregnant disposed, inclined 45 Prest ready; event outcome 46 commend . . . content commend to you, hoping that it will please you 48 Post post-haste
IV.i.6 nicely scrupulously 8 A soldier to wholly devoted to 11 weeping lamenting 13 Tellus the earth; weed garment (of flowers)

- To strew thy green° with flowers; the yellows, blues,
The purple violets, and marigolds,
Shall as a carpet° hang upon thy grave,
While summer days doth last. Ay me, poor maid,
Born in a tempest, when my mother died,
This world to me is as a lasting storm,
Whirring° me from my friends.°
- DIONYZA
How now, Marina, why do you keep alone?
How chance my daughter is not with you?
Do not consume your blood with sorrowing.°
Have you a nurse of me! Lord, how your favor°
Is changed with this unprofitable woe!
Come, give me your flowers.
On the sea margent walk with Leonine.
The air is quick° there and it pierces, and Sharpens the stomach. Come, Leonine, take Her by the arm, walk with her.
- MARINA No, I pray you.
I'll not bereave you of your servant.
- DIONYZA Come, come!
I love the king your father and yourself
With more than foreign° heart. We every day Expect him here. When he shall come, and find
Our paragon to° all reports thus blasted,
He will repent the breadth° of his great voyage;
Blame both my lord and me, that we have taken
No care to your best courses.° Go, I pray you,
Walk, and be cheerful once again; reserve°
That excellent complexion, which did steal
The eyes of young and old. Care not for me;
I can go home alone.
- MARINA Well, I will go;
But yet I have no desire to it.
- DIONYZA Come, come,
I know 'tis good for you.
Walk half an hour, Leonine, at the least.
Remember what I have said.
- LEONINE I warrant° you, madam.
- DIONYZA I'll leave you, my sweet lady, for a while.
Pray, walk softly,° do not heat your blood. What!
I must have care of you.
- MARINA My thanks, sweet madam.
[Exit DIONYZA.]
- Is this wind westerly that blows?
- LEONINE Southwest.
- MARINA When I was born the wind was north.
- LEONINE Was't so?
- MARINA My father, as nurse says, did never fear,
But cried, "Good seamen!" to the sailors, galling°
His kingly hands haling ropes;
And, clasping° to the mast, endured a sea
- That almost burst the deck.
- LEONINE When was this?
- MARINA When I was born.
Never was waves nor wind more violent;
And from the ladder-tackle washes off
A canvas-climber.° "Ha!" says one, "wolt° out?"
And with a dropping° industry they skip
From stem to stern; the boatswain whistles, and
The master calls and trebles their confusion.
- LEONINE Come, say your prayers!
- MARINA What mean you?
- LEONINE If you require a little space for prayer,
I grant it. Pray; but be not tedious, for
The gods are quick of ear, and I am sworn
To do my work with haste.
- MARINA Why will you kill me?
- LEONINE To satisfy my lady.
- MARINA Why would she have me killed?
Now, as° I can remember, by my troth,
I never did her hurt in all my life.
I never spake bad word nor did ill turn
To any living creature. Believe me, la,°
I never killed a mouse, nor hurt a fly;
I trod upon a worm against my will,
But I wept for't. How have I offended,
Wherein my death might yield her any profit,
Or my life imply her any danger?
- LEONINE My commission
Is not to reason of the deed, but do't.
- MARINA You will not do't for all the world, I hope.
You are well-favored,° and your looks foreshow
You have a gentle heart. I saw you lately,
When you caught hurt in parting two that fought.
Good sooth,° it showed well in you. Do so now.
Your lady seeks my life: come you between,
And save poor me, the weaker!
- LEONINE I am sworn,
And will dispatch. [Seizes her.]
- Enter PIRATES.
- FIRST PIRATE Hold, villain! [LEONINE runs away.]
- SECOND PIRATE A prize! A prize!
- THIRD PIRATE Half-part,° mates, half-part! Come, let's have her aboard suddenly.° [They carry off MARINA.]
- Enter LEONINE.
- LEONINE These roguing° thieves serve the great pirate Valdes,
And they have seized Marina. Let her go;
There's no hope° she'll return. I'll swear she's dead,

14 green i.e., the green turf of Lychorida's grave 16 carpet piece of tapestry 20 Whirring whirling, hurrying along; friends relations 23 Do . . . sorrowing alluding to the ancient notion that each sigh takes a drop of blood from the heart 24 favor face, looks 28 quick sharp 33 foreign not of one's family 35 to according to 36 breadth extent 38 to . . . courses to what was best for you 39 reserve pre-serve, guard 46 warrant promise 48 softly slowly 53 galling making sore by chafing 55 clasping clinging

60 canvas-climber sailor climbing aloft to trim sails; wolt wilt 61 dropping dripping wet 72 as as far as 75 la exclamation to emphasize a statement 84 well-favored good-looking 87 good sooth truly 91 Half-part go shares 92 suddenly at once 93 roguing vagrant 95 hope i.e., fear

And thrown into the sea. But I'll see further:
Perhaps they will but please themselves upon her,
Not carry her aboard. If she remain,
Whom they have ravished must by me be slain. Exit.

[Scene II. Mytilene. In front of a brothel.]

Enter the three Bawds [i.e., a PANDER, his servant BOULT, and a BAWD].

PANDER Boul't!

BOULT Sir?

PANDER Search the market narrowly! Mytilene is full of gallants. We lost too much money this mart° by being too wenchless.

BAWD We were never so much out of creatures. We have but poor three, and they can do no more than they can do; and they with continual action are even as good as rotten.

PANDER Therefore let's have fresh ones, whate'er we pay for them. If there be not a conscience to be used in every trade, we shall never prosper.

BAWD Thou say'st true: 'tis not our bringing up of poor bastards—as, I think, I have brought up some eleven—

BOULT Ay, to eleven;° and brought them down again.° But shall I search the market?

BAWD What else, man? The stuff° we have, a strong wind will blow it to pieces, they are so pitifully sodden.°

PANDER Thou sayest true; they're too unwholesome, o' conscience.° The poor Transylvanian is dead that lay with the little baggage.

BOULT Ay, she quickly pooped° him; she made him roast meat for worms. But I'll go search the market.

Exit.

PANDER Three or four thousand chequins° were as pretty a proportion° to live quietly, and so give over.°

BAWD Why to give over, I pray you? Is it a shame to get° when we are old?

PANDER O, our credit° comes not in like the commodity,° nor the commodity wages not° with the danger. Therefore, if in our youths we could pick up some pretty estate, 'twere not amiss to keep our door hatched.° Besides, the sore terms we stand upon with the gods will be strong with us for giving o'er.

BAWD Come, other sorts° offend as well as we.

PANDER As well as we? Ay, and better too; we offend worse. Neither is our profession any trade;° it's no calling. But here comes Boul't.

Enter BOULT, with the PIRATES and MARINA.

BOULT Come your ways,° my masters! You say she's a virgin?

IV.ii.4 mart market-time 16 to eleven up to the age of eleven 16–17 brought . . . again i.e., by prostituting them 18 stuff goods for sale 20 sodden grown rotten by soaking (referring to the treatment of venereal disease by means of the sweating tub) 22 o' conscience on my conscience 24 pooped foundered (?) 26 chequins sequins, Italian gold coins 27 proportion portion, share; give over give up, retire 29 get acquire money 30 credit reputation 30–31 commodity profit 31 wages not is not commensurate 34 hatched with the hatch (the lower half of a divided door) shut 36 sorts classes of people 38 trade recognized business 40 Come your ways come along

FIRST PIRATE O, sir, we doubt it not.

BOULT Master, I have gone through° for this piece° you see. If you like her, so; if not, I have lost my earnest.°

BAWD Boul't, has she any qualities?°

BOULT She has a good face, speaks well, and has excellent good clothes. There's no farther necessity of qualities can° make her be refused.

BAWD What's her price, Boul't?

BOULT It cannot be bated° one doit° of a thousand pieces.

PANDER Well, follow me, my masters; you shall have your money presently.° Wife, take her in. Instruct her what she has to do, that she may not be raw° in her entertainment.°

[Exeunt PANDER and PIRATES.]

BAWD Boul't, take you the marks of her, the color of her hair, complexion, height, her age, with warrant of her virginity; and cry, "He that will give most shall have her first!" Such a maidenhead were no cheap thing, if men were as they have been. Get this done as I command you.

BOULT Performance shall follow.

Exit.

MARINA

Alack that Leonine was so slack, so slow!

He should have struck, not spoke; or that these pirates,

Not enough barbarous, had not o'erboard

Thrown me to seek my mother!

BAWD Why lament you, pretty one?

MARINA That I am pretty.

BAWD Come, the gods have done their part in you.

MARINA I accuse them not.

BAWD You are light° into my hands, where you are like to live.

MARINA

The more my fault

To 'scape his hands where I was like to die.

BAWD Ay, and you shall live in pleasure.

MARINA No.

BAWD Yes, indeed shall you, and taste gentlemen of all fashions. You shall fare well: you shall have the difference° of all complexions.° What° do you stop your ears?

MARINA Are you a woman?

BAWD What would you have me be, and° I be not a woman?

MARINA An honest° woman, or not a woman.

BAWD Marry,° whip thee, gosling!° I think I shall have something to do with you.° Come, you're a young foolish sapling, and must be bowed as I would have you.

MARINA The gods defend me!

BAWD If it please the gods to defend you by men,

43 gone through completed the process of bargaining (?); piece girl 45 earnest money given as a deposit 46 qualities accomplishments 49 can that can 51 bated reduced; doit smallest coin, worth half a farthing 54 presently immediately 56 raw inexperienced; entertainment manner of reception 72 are light have fallen 80 difference variety; complexions colors of skin, i.e., men of every race; What why 83 and if 85 honest chaste 86 Marry interjection expressing indignation; whip thee, gosling hang thee, greenhorn 87 have . . . you have trouble with you then men must comfort you, men must feed you, men stir you up.^o Boul't's returned.

[Enter BOULT.]

Now, sir, hast thou cried^o her through the market?

BOULT I have cried her almost to the number of her 95 hairs;^o I have drawn her picture with my voice.

BAWD And I prithee tell me, how dost thou find the inclination of the people, especially of the younger sort?

BOULT Faith, they listened to me as they would have 100 hearkened to their father's testament. There was a Spaniard's mouth wat' red and^o he went to bed to her very description.

BAWD We shall have him here tomorrow with his best ruff on. 105

BOULT Tonight, tonight. But, mistress, do you know the French knight that cowers i' the hams?

BAWD Who, Monsieur Veroles?^o

BOULT Ay, he: he offered^o to cut a caper at the proclamation; but he made a groan at it, and swore 110 he would see her tomorrow.

BAWD Well, well; as for him, he brought his disease hither. Here he does but repair^o it. I know he will come in our shadow,^o to scatter his crowns of the sun.^o

BOULT Well, if we had of every nation a traveler, we 115 should lodge them with this sign.^o

BAWD [To MARINA.] Pray you, come hither awhile.

You have fortunes coming upon you. Mark me: you must seem to do that fearfully which you commit willingly; despise profit where you have most gain. 120 To weep that you live as ye do makes pity in your lovers: seldom but that pity begets you a good opinion, and that opinion a mere^o profit.

MARINA I understand you not.

BOULT O, take her home,^o mistress, take her home! 125 These blushes of hers must be quenched with some present^o practice.

BAWD Thou sayest true, i' faith, so they must. For your bride goes to that with shame which is her way to go with warrant.^o 130

BOULT Faith, some do, and some do not. But, mistress, if I have bargained for the joint—

BAWD Thou mayest cut a morsel off the spit.

BOULT I may so?

BAWD Who should deny it? Come, young one, I like 135 the manner of your garments well.

BOULT Ay, by my faith, they shall not be changed yet.

BAWD Boul't, spend thou that in the town. Report what a sojourner we have: you'll lose nothing by 140 custom.^o When nature framed^o this piece, she meant thee a good turn. Therefore say what a paragon she is, and thou hast the harvest out of thine own report.

BOULT I warrant you, mistress, thunder shall not so awake the beds of eels^o as my giving out her beauty 145 stirs up the lewdly inclined. I'll bring home some tonight.

BAWD Come your ways! Follow me.

MARINA

If fires be hot, knives sharp, or waters deep,

Untied I still my virgin knot will keep. 150

Diana aid my purpose!

BAWD What have we to do with Diana? Pray you, will you go with us? Exit, [with the rest].

[Scene III. Tharsus.]

Enter CLEON and DIONYZA.

DIONYZA

Why are you foolish? Can it be undone?

CLEON

O Dionyza, such a piece of slaughter

The sun and moon ne'er looked upon!

DIONYZA

I think you'll turn a child again.

CLEON

Were I chief lord of all this spacious world, 5

I'd give it to undo the deed. A lady

Much less in blood than virtue,^o yet a princess

To equal any single crown o' th' earth

I' th' justice of compare!^o O villain Leonine!

Whom thou hast pois'ned too. 10

If thou hadst drunk to him,^o 't had been a kindness^o

Becoming^o well thy fact.^o What canst thou say

When noble Pericles shall demand his child?

DIONYZA

That she is dead. Nurses are not the fates^o

To foster it, not ever to preserve. 15

She died at night. I'll say so. Who can cross^o it?

Unless you play the pious innocent,

And for an honest attribute^o cry out,

"She died by foul play."

CLEON

O; go to.^o Well, well.

Of all the faults beneath the heavens the gods 20

Do like this worst.

DIONYZA

Be one of those that thinks

The petty wrens of Tharsus will fly hence

And open this to Pericles.^o I do shame

To think of what a noble strain you are,

And of how coward a spirit.

CLEON

To such proceeding 25

Whoever but his approbation added,

Though not his prime^o consent, he did not flow^o

From honorable sources.

144-45 thunder . . . eels thunder was supposed to rouse eels from the mud

IV.iii.7 Much . . . virtue even more so in point of virtue than of descent 9 I' . . . compare in a just comparison 11

If . . . him i.e., if thou hadst poisoned thyself in pledging him; 12

a kindness (1) a kind action (2) an appropriate action 13

Becoming befitting; fact deed 14 fates a line seems to have dropped out here, to the effect that the nurse's power over human life is merely "To foster it . . ." 16 cross contradict

18 an honest attribute the reputation of honesty 19 go to an expression of disapproval 22-23 The . . . Pericles an allusion to the popular belief in the revelation of hidden murders by a telltale bird 27 prime initial; flow issue

93 stir you up excite you 94 cried (1) advertised by loud cries (2) extolled 95-96 almost . . . hairs any number of times 102 and as if 108 Veroles from French vérole = pox 109 offered attempted 113 repair renew 114 shadow shelter; crowns . . . sun French gold coins 116 this sign i.e., Marina's charms 123 mere downright 125 take her home tell her your mind (?) 127 present immediate 129-30 which . . . warrant to which she is entitled to go 140-41 by custom i.e., by our getting customers 141 framed shaped

DIONYZA Be it so, then.
 Yet none does know but you how she came dead,
 Nor none can know, Leonine being gone. 30
 She did distain° my child, and stood between
 Her and her fortunes: none would look on her,
 But cast their gazes on Marina's face;
 Whilst ours was blurted at,° and held a malkin,°
 Not worth the time of day.° It pierced me thorough; 35
 And though you call my course unnatural,
 You not your child well loving, yet I find
 It greets me° as an enterprise of kindness°
 Performed to your sole daughter.

CLEON Heavens forgive it!

DIONYZA
 And as for Pericles, what should he say? 40
 We wept after her hearse, and yet we mourn.
 Her monument°
 Is almost finished, and her epitaphs
 In glitt'ring golden characters° express
 A general praise to her, and care in us 45
 At whose expense 'tis done.

CLEON Thou art like the harpy,
 Which, to betray, dost, with thine angel's face,
 Seize with thine eagle's talents.°

DIONYZA
 Ye're like one that superstitiously
 Do swear to th' gods that winter kills the flies.° 50
 But yet I know you'll do as I advise. [Exeunt.]

[Scene IV. Before Marina's monument at Tharsus.]

[Enter GOWER.]

GOWER
 Thus time we waste,° and long leagues make short;
 Sail seas in cockles,° have and wish but for't;°
 Making,° to take° our imagination,
 From bourn to bourn,° region to region. 5
 By you being pardoned, we commit no crime
 To use one language in each several clime
 Where our scene° seems to live. I do beseech you
 To learn of me, who stand i' th' gaps to teach you
 The stages of our story. Pericles
 Is now again thwarting° the wayward seas, 10
 Attended on by many a lord and knight,
 To see his daughter, all his life's delight.
 Old Helicanus goes along. Behind
 Is left to govern it, you bear in mind,
 Old Escanes, whom Helicanus late° 15
 Advanced in Tyre to great and high estate.

31 distain cast a slur on 34 blurted at treated with scorn;
malkin slut 35 time of day a greeting 38 greets me presents itself to me; kindness love 42 monument probably a few words, such as "which stands i' the marketplace," have here dropped out 44 characters letters 47-48 dost . . .
talents i.e., dost, while smiling at thy victim with thine angel's face, seize it with thine eagle's talents (a common variant of talons) 49-50 Ye're . . . flies You are so much afraid of divine vengeance that you even swear to the gods that it is not you but winter which is guilty of the death of flies IV.iv.I waste annihilate 2 cockles cockleshells; have . . .
for't have by merely wishing for it 3 Making making our way; take captivate, delight 4 born frontier 7 scene dramatic performance 10 thwarting crossing 15 late recently

Well-sailing ships and bounteous winds have brought
 This king to Tharsus—think his pilot thought;°
 So with his steerage° shall your thoughts go on—
 To fetch his daughter home, who first° is gone. 20
 Like motes and shadows see them move awhile.
 Your ears unto your eyes I'll reconcile.

[Dumb Show.]

Enter PERICLES at one door, with all his TRAIN; CLEON and DIONYZA at the other. CLEON shows PERICLES the tomb; whereat PERICLES makes lamentation, puts on sackcloth, and in a mighty passion departs. [Then CLEON, DIONYZA, and the rest go also.]

See how belief may suffer by foul show!°
 This borrowed passion° stands for true-owed° woe. 25
 And Pericles, in sorrow all devoured,
 With sighs shot through and biggest tears o'ershowered,
 Leaves Tharsus and again embarks. He swears
 Never to wash his face, nor cut his hairs.
 He puts on sackcloth, and to sea. He bears
 A tempest, which his mortal vessel° tears, 30
 And yet he rides it out.° Now please you wit°
 The epitaph is° for Marina writ
 By wicked Dionyza.

[Reads the inscription on Marina's monument.]

"The fairest, sweetest, and best lies here,
 Who withered in her spring of year. 35
 She was of Tyrus the King's daughter,°
 On whom foul death hath made this slaughter.
 Marina was she called; and at her birth
 Thetis,° being proud, swallowed some part o' th' earth.
 Therefore the earth, fearing to be o'erflowed, 40
 Hath Thetis' birth-child° on the heavens bestowed;
 Wherefore she° does—and swears she'll never stint—
 Make raging battery upon shores of flint."
 No visor° does become black villainy
 So well as soft and tender flattery. 45
 Let Pericles believe his daughter's dead,
 And bear his courses to be orderèd°
 By Lady Fortune; while our scene° must play
 His daughter's woe and heavy well-a-day°
 In her unholy service. Patience, then, 50
 And think you now are all in Mytilen. Exit.

[Scene V. Mytilene. A street before the brothel.]

Enter, [from the brothel,] two GENTLEMEN.

FIRST GENTLEMAN Did you ever hear the like?

SECOND GENTLEMAN No, nor never shall do in such a place as this, she being once gone.

18 think . . . thought think that his pilot is thought 19 with his steerage with the course held by Pericles 20 first before him 23 suffer . . . show be abused by hypocrisy 24 borrowed passion counterfeit grief; true-owed sincerely owned 30 vessel i.e., his body 31 he . . . out i.e., he survives it; wit know 32 is that is 36 of . . . daughter daughter of the King of Tyrus 39 Thetis a sea nymph (here, as commonly in Elizabethan literature, confused with Tethys, wife of Oceanus, hence the sea personified) 41 birth-child person born in a particular place 42 she the sea 44 visor mask, disguise 47 bear . . . orderèd suffer his actions to be regulated 48 scene performance 49 well-a-day grief

FIRST GENTLEMAN But to have divinity preached there! Did you ever dream of such a thing? 5
 SECOND GENTLEMAN No, no. Come, I am for no more bawdy houses. Shall's go hear the vestals° sing?
 FIRST GENTLEMAN I'll do anything now that is virtuous; but I am out of the road of rutting° forever.
Exit, [with the other].

[Scene VI. Mytilene. A room in the brothel.]

Enter PANDER, BAWD, and BOULT.]

PANDER Well, I had rather than twice the worth of her she had ne'er come here.
 BAWD Fie, fie upon her! She's able to freeze the god Priapus,° and undo a whole generation. We must either get her ravished or be rid of her. When she 5 should do for clients her fitment° and do me the kindness of our profession, she has me° her quirks, her reasons, her master-reasons, her prayers, her knees; that she would make a puritan of the devil, if he should cheapen° a kiss of her. 10
 BOULT Faith, I must ravish her, or she'll disfurnish° us of all our cavalleria° and make our swearers priests.
 PANDER Now, the pox upon her green-sickness° for me!°
 BAWD Faith, there's no way to be rid on't but by the 15 way to the pox.° Here comes the Lord Lysimachus disguised.
 BOULT We should have both lord and lown,° if the peevisish baggage would but give way to customers.

Enter LYSIMACHUS.

LYSIMACHUS How now! How° a dozen of virgini- 20 ties?
 BAWD Now, the gods to-bless° your honor!
 BOULT I am glad to see your honor in good health.
 LYSIMACHUS You may so; 'tis the better for you that your resorters stand upon sound legs. How now, 25 wholesome° iniquity, have you that° a man may deal withal° and defy the surgeon?
 BAWD We have here one, sir, if she would—but there never came her like in Mytilene.
 LYSIMACHUS If she'd do the deeds of darkness, thou 30 wouldst say.
 BAWD Your honor knows what 'tis to say° well enough.
 LYSIMACHUS Well, call forth, call forth.
 BOULT For flesh and blood, sir, white and red, you 35 shall see a rose; and she were a rose indeed, if she had but—
 LYSIMACHUS What, prithee?
 BOULT O, sir, I can be modest.

IV.v.7 vestals virgin priestesses 9 rutting fornication

IV.vi.4 Priapus the classical god of fertility 6 fitment duty 6-7 do me . . . has me the "ethical dative," frequently used in narrative by Shakespeare 10 cheapen bargain for 11 disfurnish deprive 12 cavalleria body of gentlemen (Italian) 13 green-sickness squeamishness 13-14 for me say I 16 pox syphilis 18 lown loon, lowborn fellow 20 How at what price 22 to-bless bless entirely ("to" is an intensive prefix) 26 wholesome health-giving (used ironically); that that which 26-27 deal withal have sexual relations with 32 what . . . say how to express my meaning

LYSIMACHUS That dignifies the renown of a bawd 40 no less than it gives a good report to a punk to be chaste.°
[Exit BOULT.]
 BAWD Here comes that which grows to° the stalk—never plucked yet, I can assure you.

[Enter BOULT, with MARINA.]

Is she not a fair creature? 45
 LYSIMACHUS Faith, she would serve after a long voyage at sea. Well, there's for you. Leave us.
 BAWD I beseech your honor, give me leave: a word, and I'll have done presently.°
 LYSIMACHUS I beseech you, do. 50
 BAWD [To MARINA.] First, I would have you note, this is an honorable man.
 MARINA I desire to find him so, that I may worthily note° him.
 BAWD Next, he's the governor of this country, and 55 a man whom I am bound to.
 MARINA If he govern the country, you are bound° to him indeed; but how honorable he is in that I know not.
 BAWD Pray you, without any more virginal fencing, 60 will you use him kindly? He will line your apron with gold.
 MARINA What he will do graciously, I will thankfully receive.
 LYSIMACHUS Ha' you done? 65
 BAWD My lord, she's not paced° yet; you must take some pains to work her to your manage.° Come, we will leave his honor and her together. Go thy ways.°
[Exeunt BAWD, PANDER, and BOULT.]
 LYSIMACHUS Now, pretty one, how long have you 70 been at this trade?
 MARINA What trade, sir?
 LYSIMACHUS Why, I cannot name't but I shall offend.
 MARINA I cannot be offended with my trade. Please 75 you to name it.
 LYSIMACHUS How long have you been of this profession?
 MARINA E'er since I can remember.
 LYSIMACHUS Did you go to't° so young? Were you a 80 gamester° at five or at seven?
 MARINA Earlier too, sir, if now I be one.
 LYSIMACHUS Why, the house you dwell in proclaims you to be a creature of sale.
 MARINA Do you know this house to be a place of 85 such resort, and will come into't? I hear say you're of honorable parts and are the governor of this place.
 LYSIMACHUS Why, hath your principal° made known unto you who I am?
 MARINA Who is my principal?
 LYSIMACHUS Why, your herb-woman; she that sets 90 seeds and roots of shame and iniquity. O, you have

41-42 it . . . chaste to be chaste gives a good reputation to a prostitute (the whole speech is ironic) 43 grows to is an integral part of 49 presently at once 54 note respect 57 bound subject (another example of Marina's "quirks" of which the bawd complained) 66 paced taught her paces 67 manage action and paces to which a horse is trained 68 Go thy ways Come along 79 go to't copulate 80 gamester one addicted to amorous sport 87 principal employer heard something of my power, and so stand aloof for more serious wooing. But I protest to thee, pretty one, my authority shall not see thee, or else look friendly upon thee. Come, bring me to some private place. 95

Come, come.

MARINA

If you were born to honor, show it now;
If put upon you,^o make the judgment good
That thought you worthy of it.

LYSIMACHUS

How's this? How's this? Some more; be sage.

MARINA

For me, 100

That am a maid, though most ungentle fortune
Have placed me in this sty, where, since I came,
Diseases have been sold dearer than physic—
That the gods
Would set me free from this unhallowed place, 105
Though they did change me to the meanest bird
That flies i' th' purer air!

LYSIMACHUS

I did not think

Thou couldst have spoke so well; ne'er dreamt thou couldst.

Had I brought hither a corrupted mind,
Thy speech had altered it. Hold, here's gold for thee: 110
Persever in that clear^o way thou goest,
And the gods strengthen thee!

MARINA

The good gods preserve you!

LYSIMACHUS

For me, be you thoughten^o
That I came with no ill intent; for to me
The very doors and windows savor^o vilely. 115
Fare thee well. Thou art a piece of virtue, and I doubt not but thy training hath been noble.
Hold, here's more gold for thee.
A curse upon him, die he like a thief,
That robs thee of thy goodness! If thou dost 120
Hear from me, it shall be for thy good.

[Enter BOULT.]

BOULT I beseech your honor, one piece for me.

LYSIMACHUS

Avaunt,^o thou damned doorkeeper!^o
Your house, but for this virgin that doth prop it,
Would sink, and overwhelm you. Away! [Exit.] 125

BOULT How's this? We must take another course with you. If your peevish^o chastity, which is not worth a breakfast in the cheapest country under the cope,^o shall undo a whole household, let me be gelded like a spaniel. Come your ways. 130

MARINA Whither would you have me?

BOULT I must have your maidenhead taken off, or the common hangman shall execute it.^o Come your ways. We'll have no more gentlemen driven away.
Come your ways, I say. 135

Enter BAWD.

BAWD How now! What's the matter?

BOULT Worse and worse, mistress: she has here spoken holy words to the Lord Lysimachus.

BAWD O abominable!

BOULT She makes our profession as it were to stink 140
afore the face of the gods.

BAWD Marry, hang her up forever!

BOULT The nobleman would have dealt with her like a nobleman, and she sent him away as cold as a snowball; saying his prayers too. 145

BAWD Boul't, take her away! Use her at thy pleasure.
Crack the glass of her virginity, and make the rest malleable.

BOULT And if^o she were a thornier piece of ground than she is, she shall be ploughed. 150

MARINA Hark, hark, you gods!

BAWD She conjures!^o Away with her! Would she had never come within my doors! Marry, hang you!
She's born to undo us. Will you not go the way of womenkind? Marry come up,^o my dish of chastity 155 with rosemary and bays!^o [Exit.]

BOULT Come, mistress; come your ways with me.

MARINA Whither wilt thou have me?

BOULT To take from you the jewel you hold so dear.

MARINA Prithee, tell me one thing first. 160

BOULT Come now, your one thing.

MARINA

What canst thou wish thine enemy to be?

BOULT Why, I could wish him to be my master, or,
rather, my mistress.

MARINA

Neither of these are so bad as thou art, 165

Since they do better thee in their command.^o

Thou hold'st a place for which the pained'st^o fiend

Of hell would not in reputation change.

Thou art the damnèd doorkeeper to every

Coistrel^o that comes inquiring for his Tib;^o 170

To the choleric fisting^o of every rogue

Thy ear is liable; thy food is such

As hath been belched on by infected lungs.

BOULT What would you have me do? Go to the wars, would you? Where a man may serve seven years for 175 the loss of a leg, and have not money enough in the end to buy him a wooden one?

MARINA

Do any thing but this thou doest.^o Empty

Old receptacles,^o or common shores,^o of filth;

Serve by indenture^o to the common hangman. 180

Any of these ways are yet better than this.

For what thou professest^o a baboon, could he speak,

Would own a name too dear.^o That the gods

149 And if even if 152 conjures invokes supernatural aid (with the suggestion of black magic) 155 Marry come up an expression of contempt akin to our "hoity-toity" 155-56 dish . . . bays a gibe at Marina's ostentatious virtue; dishes at Christmas were thus garnished 166 do . . . command are superior to you through their position of authority 167 pained'st most tormented 170 Coistrel base fellow; Tib strumpet 171 fisting punching 178 doest pronounced as a disyllable 179 receptacles the stress here falls on the first syllable; common shores i.e., the no-man's-land by the sea, where filth was allowed to be deposited for the tide to wash away 180 by indenture i.e., as apprentice 182 thou professest you have as an occupation 183 Would . . . dear would claim to possess too high a reputation

98 If . . . you if honor was bestowed upon you 111 clear free from blame 113 For . . . thoughten this line, like much else in this scene, is undoubtedly corrupt, but the true reading seems irrecoverable; see Introduction, p. 1408 115 savor smell 123 Avaunt be off; doorkeeper pander 127 peevish refractory 128 cope sky 132-33 or . . . execute it with a play on the "head" of "maidenhead"

Would safely deliver me from this place!
 Here, here's gold for thee.
 If that thy master would gain by me,
 Proclaim that I can sing, weave, sew, and dance,
 With other virtues° which I'll keep from boast;
 And I will undertake all these to teach.
 I doubt not but this populous city will Yield many scholars.

BOULT But can you teach all this you speak of?

MARINA

Prove that I cannot, take me home again,
 And prostitute me to the basest groom°
 That doth frequent your house.

BOULT Well, I will see what I can do for thee. If I can place thee, I will.

MARINA But amongst honest women?

BOULT Faith, my acquaintance lies little amongst them. But since my master and mistress hath bought 200 you, there's no going but by their consent. Therefore I will make them acquainted with your purpose,° and I doubt not but I shall find them tractable enough.
 Come, I'll do for thee what I can; come your ways.

Exeunt.

[A C T V]

Enter GOWER.

GOWER

Marina thus the brothel 'scapes, and chances
 Into an honest house, our story says.
 She sings like one immortal, and she dances
 As goddesslike to her admired lays;
 Deep clerks° she dumbs, and with her neele° composes 5
 Nature's own shape of bud, bird, branch, or berry,
 That even her art sisters° the natural roses;
 Her inkle,° silk, twin with the rubied cherry;
 That pupils lacks she none of noble race,
 Who pour their bounty on her; and her gain 10
 She gives the cursèd bawd. Here we her place;
 And to her father turn our thoughts again,
 Where we left him on the sea. We there him lost;
 Whence, driven before the winds, he is arrived
 Here where his daughter dwells; and on this coast 15
 Suppose him now at anchor. The city's hived°
 God Neptune's annual feast to keep; from whence Lysimachus our Tyrian ship espies,
 His banners sable, trimmed with rich expense;
 And to him° in his barge with fervor hies. 20
 In your supposing° once more put your sight:
 Of heavy° Pericles think this his bark;
 Where what is done in action, more, if might,°
 Shall be discovered.° Please you, sit and hark. Exit.

188 virtues accomplishments 194 groom menial 202 purpose proposition

V.Cho.5 Deep clerks men of profound learning; neele needle 7 sisters is exactly like 8 inkle linen thread 16 The city's hived i.e., the citizens are gathered like bees in a hive 19-20 His . . . him its . . . it 21 In your supposing under the guidance of your imagination 22 heavy sorrowful 23 more, if might and more if it were possible 24 discovered disclosed

[Scene I. On board Pericles' ship, off Mytilene. A pavilion on deck, with a curtain before it; PERICLES within, unkempt and clad in sackcloth, reclining on a couch.]

Enter HELICANUS, to him two SAILORS [one belonging to the Tyrian vessel, the other of Mytilene].

190 TYRIAN SAILOR

Where is Lord Helicanus?

He can resolve° you. O, here he is.

Sir, there is a barge put off from Mytilene,

And in it is Lysimachus, the governor,

Who craves to come aboard. What is your will? 5

195 HELICANUS

That he have his. Call up some gentlemen.

TYRIAN SAILOR Ho, gentlemen! my lord calls.

Enter two or three GENTLEMEN.

FIRST GENTLEMAN Doth your lordship call?

HELICANUS

Gentlemen, there is some° of worth would come aboard.

I pray, greet him fairly.° [Exeunt the GENTLEMEN.] 10

Enter LYSIMACHUS [and LORDS, with the GENTLEMEN].

MYTILENIAN SAILOR [To LYSIMACHUS.]

Sir,

This is the man that can, in aught you would,

Resolve you.

LYSIMACHUS Hail, reverend sir! The gods preserve you! 15

HELICANUS

And you, sir, to outlive the age I am,

And die as I would do.

LYSIMACHUS You wish me well.

Being on shore, honoring of Neptune's triumphs,°

Seeing this goodly vessel ride before us,

I made to it, to know of whence you are. 20

HELICANUS

First, what is your place?°

LYSIMACHUS I am the governor of

This place you lie before.

HELICANUS

Sir,

Our vessel is of Tyre, in it the king;

A man who for this three months hath not spoken 25

To anyone, nor taken sustenance

But to prorogue° his grief.

LYSIMACHUS

Upon what ground is his distemperature?°

HELICANUS

'Twould be too tedious to repeat;

But the main grief springs from the loss

Of a belovèd daughter and a wife. 30

LYSIMACHUS

May we not see him?

HELICANUS

You may;

V.i.2 resolve free from uncertainty 9 some someone 10 fairly courteously 18 triumphs festivities 21 place official position 27 prorogue prolong 28 distemperature mental disturbance

But bootless° is your sight; he will not speak
To any.

LYSIMACHUS Yet let me obtain my wish. 35

HELICANUS [Draws back the curtain.]
Behold him. This was a goodly person
Till the disaster that, one mortal° night,
Drove him to this.

LYSIMACHUS
Sir king, all hail! The gods preserve you!
Hail, royal sir! 40

HELICANUS
It is in vain; he will not speak to you.

LORD
Sir,
We have a maid in Mytilene, I durst wager,
Would win some words of him.

LYSIMACHUS 'Tis well bethought. 45
She questionless, with her sweet harmony,
And other chosen° attractions, would allure,
And make a batt'ry through his deafened ports,°
Which now are midway stopped.
She is all happy as the fairest of all,
And with her fellow maid is now upon
The leafy shelter that abuts against
The island's side.

[He whispers to a LORD, who leaves.]

HELICANUS
Sure, all° effectless; yet nothing we'll omit
That bears recovery's name. But since your kindness
We have stretched thus far, let us beseech you 55
That for our gold we may provision have,
Wherein we are not destitute for want,
But weary for the staleness.

LYSIMACHUS O sir, a courtesy
Which if we should deny, the most just God
For every graff° would send a caterpillar,
And so inflict° our province. Yet once more Let me entreat to know at large° the cause
Of your king's sorrow.

HELICANUS
Sit, sir, I will recount it to you.
But see, I am prevented.° 60

[Enter LORD, with MARINA and another GIRL.]

LYSIMACHUS
O, here's the lady that I sent for.
Welcome, fair one! Is't not a goodly presence?°

HELICANUS
She's a gallant° lady.

LYSIMACHUS
She's such a one that, were I well assured
Came° of a gentle kind° and noble stock, 70
I'd wish no better choice, and think me rarely° wed.
[To MARINA.]
Fair one, all goodness that consists in° bounty
Expect even here, where is a kingly patient.

34 bootless unavailing 37 mortal fatal 46 chosen choice
47 ports inlets 53 all entirely 60 graff graft, grafted plant
61 inflict afflict 62 at large in full 65 prevented forestalled 67 presence person 68 gallant excellent 70 Came she came; kind family 71 rarely splendidly 72 goodness . . .
in good things that inhere in

If that thy prosperous° and artificial° feat
Can draw him but to answer thee in aught, 75
Thy sacred physic shall receive such pay
As thy desires can wish.

MARINA Sir, I will use
My utmost skill in his recovery,
Provided
That none but I and my companion maid 80
Be suffered to come near him.

LYSIMACHUS Come, let us leave her;
And the gods make her prosperous!
[They withdraw. MARINA sings.]

LYSIMACHUS
Marked he your music?

MARINA No, nor looked on us.

LYSIMACHUS See, she will speak to him.

MARINA 85
Hail, sir! My lord, lend ear.

PERICLES Hum, ha!
[He pushes her back.]

MARINA 50
I am a maid,
My lord, that ne'er before invited eyes,°
But have been gazed on like a comet. She speaks,
My lord, that, may be, hath endured a grief 90
Might equal yours, if both were justly weighed.
Though wayward fortune did malign° my state,
My derivation was from ancestors
Who stood equivalent with mighty kings:
But time hath rooted out my parentage, 95
And to the world and awkward casualties°
Bound me in servitude. [Aside.] I will desist.
But there is something glows upon my cheek,
And whispers in mine ear, "Go not till he speak."

PERICLES 60
My fortunes—parentage—good parentage— 100
To equal mine—was it not thus? What say you?

MARINA
I said, my lord, if you did know my parentage,
You would not do me violence.

PERICLES 65 I do think so.
Pray you, turn your eyes upon me.
You're like something that—what countrywoman?° 105
Here of these shores?

MARINA No, nor of any shores.
Yet I was mortally° brought forth, and am
No other than I appear.

PERICLES
I am great° with woe, and shall deliver° weeping.
My dearest wife was like this maid, and such 110
My daughter might have been: my queen's square brows;°
Her stature to an inch; as wandlike straight;
As silver-voiced; her eyes as jewel-like
And cased° as richly; in pace° another Juno;

74 prosperous successful; artificial skillful 88 invited eyes
i.e., invited anyone to look at her 92 malign treat malignantly 96 awkward casualties adverse chances 105 what countrywoman of what county? 107 mortally humanly 109 great pregnant; deliver give birth to 111 square brows high forehead 114 cased encased; pace gait

- Who starves the ears she feeds, and makes them hungry 115
The more she gives them speech. Where do you live?
- MARINA
Where I am but a stranger: from the deck
You may discern the place.
- PERICLES Where were you bred?
And how achieved you these endowments, which
You make more rich to owe?° 120
- MARINA
If I
Should tell my history, it would seem like lies Disdained in the reporting.°
- PERICLES Prithee, speak.
Falseness cannot come from thee; for thou lookest
Modest as Justice, and thou seemest a palace 125
For the crowned Truth to dwell in. I will believe thee,
And make my senses credit thy relation
To points that seem impossible; for thou lookest
Like one I loved indeed. What were thy friends?°
Didst thou not say when I did push thee back—
Which was when I perceived thee—that thou cam'st
From good descending?°
- MARINA So indeed I did.
- PERICLES
Report thy parentage. I think thou said'st
Thou hadst been tossed from wrong to injury,
And that thou thought'st thy griefs might equal mine, 135
If both were opened.°
- MARINA Some such thing I said,
And said no more but what my thoughts
Did warrant me was likely.
- PERICLES Tell thy story.
If thine, considered, prove the thousandth part
Of my endurance,° thou art a man, and I 140
Have suffered like a girl; yet thou dost look
Like Patience gazing on kings' graves, and smiling
Extremity out of act.° What were thy friends?°
How lost thou them? Thy name, my most kind virgin?
Recount, I do beseech thee: come, sit by me. 145
- MARINA
My name is Marina.
- PERICLES O, I am mocked,
And thou by some incensèd god sent hither
To make the world to laugh at me.
- MARINA Patience, good sir,
Or here I'll cease.
- PERICLES Nay, I'll be patient.
Thou little know'st how thou dost startle me
To call thyself Marina. 150
- MARINA The name
Was given me by one that had some power:
My father, and a king.
- PERICLES How, a king's daughter?
And called Marina?
- MARINA You said you would believe me;
But, not to be a troubler of your peace, 155
I will end here.
- PERICLES But are you flesh and blood?
Have you a working pulse, and are no fairy?
Motion° as well? Speak on. Where were you born?
And wherefore called Marina?
- MARINA Called Marina
For I was born at sea.
- PERICLES At sea! What mother? 160
- MARINA
My mother was the daughter of a king;
Who died the minute I was born,
As my good nurse Lychorida hath oft Delivered° weeping.
- PERICLES O, stop there a little!
This is the rarest dream that e'er dulled sleep 165
Did mock sad fools withal.° This cannot be:
My daughter's buried. Well, where were you bred?
I'll hear you more, to th' bottom of your story,
And never interrupt you.
- MARINA
You scorn. Believe me, 'twere best I did give o'er. 170
- PERICLES
I will believe you by the syllable
Of what you shall deliver. Yet, give me leave:
How came you in these parts? Where were you bred?
- MARINA
The king my father did in Tharsus leave me;
Till cruel Cleon, with his wicked wife, 175
Did seek to murder me;
And having wooed a villain to attempt it,
Who having drawn to do't,
A crew of pirates came and rescued me;
Brought me to Mytilene.° But, good sir, 180
Whither will you have me? Why do you weep? It may be
You think me an impostor: no, good faith!
I am the daughter to King Pericles,
If good King Pericles be.°
- PERICLES Ho, Helicanus!
- HELICANUS Calls my lord? 185
- PERICLES
Thou art a grave and noble counselor,
Most wise in general. Tell me, if thou canst,
What this maid is, or what is like° to be,
That thus hath made me weep?
- HELICANUS I know not;
But here's the regent, sir, of Mytilene 190
Speaks° nobly of her.
- LYSIMACHUS She never would tell
Her parentage; being demanded that,
She would sit still° and weep.
- PERICLES
O Helicanus, strike me, honored sir!
Give me a gash, put me to present pain; 195
Lest this great sea of joys rushing upon me
O'erbear° the shores of my mortality,
And drown me with their sweetness. O, come hither,
Thou that beget'st° him that did thee beget;
Thou that wast born at sea, buried at Tharsus, 200

120 to owe by owning them 123 in the reporting in the very act of utterance 129 friends relations 132 descending lineage 136 opened disclosed 140 my endurance what I have endured 143 Extremity . . . act extreme calamity out of striking (?) extreme despair out of committing suicide (?); friends relations

158 Motion i.e., the movement of the blood and spirits through the body 164 Delivered reported 166 withal with 180 Mytilene the final syllable is here sounded 184 be i.e., be alive 188 like likely 191 Speaks that speaks 193 still always 197 O'erbear overwhelm 199 beget'st i.e., gives new life to

And found at sea again! O Helicanus,
Down on thy knees; thank the holy gods as loud
As thunder threatens us: this is Marina!
What was thy mother's name? Tell me but that,
For truth can never be confirmed enough,
Though doubts did ever sleep.

MARINA First, sir, I pray,
What is your title?

PERICLES
I am Pericles of Tyre: but tell me now
My drowned queen's name, as in the rest you said
Thou hast been godlike perfect, and thou art^o
The heir of kingdoms and another life
To Pericles, thy father.

MARINA [Kneels.]
Is it no more to be your daughter than
To say my mother's name was Thaisa?
Thaisa was my mother, who did end
The minute I began.

PERICLES
Now blessing on thee! Rise; thou art my child.
Give me fresh garments. [To MARINA.] Mine own!
Helicanus,
She is not dead at Tharsus, as she should have been^o
By^o savage Cleon. She shall tell thee all;
When thou shalt kneel, and justify in knowledge^o
She is thy very princess. Who is this?

HELICANUS
Sir, 'tis the Governor of Mytilene,
Who, hearing of your melancholy state,
Did come to see you.

PERICLES I embrace you.
Give me my robes. I am wild in my beholding.^o O heavens bless my girl! [Music.] But hark, what
music?

Tell Helicanus, my Marina, tell him
O'er, point by point, for yet he seems to doubt,
How sure you are my daughter. But what music?

HELICANUS
My lord, I hear none.

PERICLES
None?
The music of the spheres! List, my Marina.

LYSIMACHUS
It is not good to cross him; give him way.

PERICLES
Rarest sounds! Do ye not hear?

LYSIMACHUS Music, my lord?

PERICLES
I hear most heavenly music.
It nips me unto^o list'ning, and thick slumber
Hangs upon mine eyes. Let me rest.

[He sleeps.]

LYSIMACHUS
A pillow for his head. So leave him all.
Well, my companion friends,

If this but answer to my just belief,
I'll well remember you.^o [Exeunt all but PERICLES.]

DIANA [appears to PERICLES in a vision].

205 DIANA

My temple stands in Ephesus, Hie thee thither,
And do upon mine altar sacrifice.

There, when my maiden priests are met together,
Before the people all,

Reveal now thou at sea didst lose thy wife.

210 To mourn thy crosses,^o with thy daughter's, call,
And give them repetition to the life.^o

Perform my bidding, or thou livest in woe;
Do't, and happy,^o by my silver bow!

Awake, and tell thy dream. [She vanishes.]

PERICLES

215 Celestial Dian, goddess argentine,^o
I will obey thee. Helicanus!

[Enter HELICANUS, LYSIMACHUS, and MARINA.]

HELICANUS

Sir?

PERICLES

My purpose was for Tharsus, there to strike
The inhospitable Cleon; but I am

220 For other service first: toward Ephesus
Turn our blown^o sails; eftsoons^o I'll tell thee why.

[To LYSIMACHUS.]

Shall we refresh us, sir, upon your shore,
And give you gold for such provision as
Our intents^o will need?

260

LYSIMACHUS

Sir,
With all my heart; and when you come ashore
I have another suit.

PERICLES

You shall prevail,

Were it to woo my daughter; for it seems

230 You have been noble towards her.

265

LYSIMACHUS

Sir, lend me your arm.

PERICLES

Come, my Marina.

Exeunt.

[Scene II. The temple of Diana at Ephesus; THAISA and several MAIDENS standing near the altar, all appareled as priestesses; CERIMON and other inhabitants of Ephesus attending.]

[Enter GOWER.]

GOWER

Now our sands are almost run;
More a little, and then dumb.

This, my last boon, give me—

For such kindness must relieve me—

That you aptly^o will suppose

5

240

241-42 If . . . you i.e., if Marina is really a princess (and therefore a fit match for me) I shall well reward you (?) (lines 240-42 read like the reporter's addition and ought, probably, to be omitted) 248 crosses misfortunes 249 repetition . . . life lifelike recital 251 happy i.e., thou livest happy 253 argentine silvery 258 blown inflated by the wind; eftsoons afterward, shortly 261 intents purposes

V.ii.5 aptly readily

210 and thou art these words are missing in the text 219 should have been was said to be 220 By at the hands of 221 justify in knowledge affirm in recognition of her claim 226 beholding appearance, looks (?) 237 nips me unto compels me to

What pageantry, what feats, what shows,
 What minstrelsy and pretty° din,
 The regent made in Mytilin
 To greet the king. So he thrived
 That he is promised to be wived
 To fair Marina; but in no wise
 Till he° had done his sacrifice,
 As Dian bade: whereto being bound,°
 The interim, pray you, all confound.°
 In feathered briefness° sails are filled,
 And wishes fall out as they're willed.
 At Ephesus the temple° see
 Our king and all his company.
 That he can hither come so soon
 Is by your fancies' thankful doom.°

[Exit.] 20

[Scene III. The temple of Diana. Enter PERICLES, with LYSIMACHUS, HELICANUS, and MARINA.]

PERICLES

Hail, Dian! To perform thy just command,
 I here confess myself the King of Tyre;
 Who, frightened from my country, did wed
 At Pentapolis the fair Thaisa.
 At sea in childbed died she, but brought forth
 A maid-child called Marina; who, O goddess,
 Wears yet thy silver livery.° She at Tharsus
 Was nursed with Cleon;° whom at fourteen years
 He sought to murder; but her better stars
 Brought her to Mytilene; 'gainst whose shore
 Riding,° her fortunes brought the maid aboard us,
 Where, by her own most clear remembrance, she Made known herself my daughter.

THAISA Voice and favor!°
 You are, you are—O royal Pericles!
 [Swoons.]

PERICLES

What means the nun? She dies! Help, gentlemen!

15

CERIMON

Noble sir,
 If you have told Diana's altar true,°
 This is your wife.

PERICLES Reverend appearer,° no.

I threw her overboard with these very arms.

CERIMON

Upon this coast, I warrant you.

PERICLES 'Tis most certain. 20

CERIMON

Look to the lady. O, she's but overjoyed.
 Early one blustering morn this lady
 Was thrown upon this shore. I oped the coffin,
 Found there rich jewels; recovered her,° and placed her
 Here in Diana's temple.

PERICLES May we see them? 25

7 pretty pleasing 12 he Pericles, whereas in lines 9–10
 Lysimachus is referred to 13 bound on his way 14 all confound entirely consume 15 In feathered briefness with winged speed 17 Ephesus the temple the temple of Ephesus 20 your . . . doom the thanks-deserving verdict of your imaginations

V.iii.7 Wears . . . livery i.e., is still a virgin 8 with Cleon in Cleon's family 11 Riding as we rode at anchor 13 favor looks, face 17 true the truth 18 appearer one who appears 24 recovered her restored her to consciousness

CERIMON

Great sir, they shall be brought you to my house, Whither I invite you. Look, Thaisa is Recovered.

10 THAISA O, let me look!

If he be none of mine, my sanctity
 Will to my sense bend no licentious ear,°
 But curb it, spite of seeing. O, my lord,
 Are you not Pericles? Like him you spake,
 Like him you are. Did you not name a tempest,
 A birth and death?

15

PERICLES The voice of dead Thaisa!

THAISA

That Thaisa am I, supposed dead and drowned.

35

PERICLES

Immortal Dian!

THAISA Now I know you better.

When we with tears parted° Pentapolis,
 The king my father gave you such a ring.

[Points to his ring.]

PERICLES

This, this! No more.° You gods, your present kindness Makes my past miseries sports. You shall do well
 That° on the touching of her lips I may Melt and no more be seen. O come, be buried
 A second time within these arms.

5

MARINA

My heart

Leaps to be gone into my mother's bosom.

10

[Kneels to THAISA.]

PERICLES

Look who kneels here: flesh of thy flesh, Thaisa;
 Thy burden at the sea, and called Marina,
 For she was yielded° there.

45

THAISA

Blest, and mine own!

HELICANUS

Hail, madam, and my queen!

15

THAISA

I know you not.

PERICLES

You have heard me say, when I did fly from Tyre
 I left behind an ancient substitute.
 Can you remember what I called the man?
 I have named him oft.

50

THAISA

'Twas Helicanus then.

PERICLES

Still confirmation.

Embrace him, dear Thaisa; this is he.

Now do I long to hear how you were found;
 How possibly preserved; and who to thank,
 Besides the gods, for this great miracle.

55

THAISA

Lord Cerimon, my lord: this man,
 Through whom the gods have shown their power;
 that can

From first to last resolve you.°

PERICLES

Reverend sir,

60

29–30 If . . . ear If he is not my husband, my holiness will not listen licentiously to my desire 37 parted departed from 39 No more i.e., no more confirmation is needed that you are Thaisa (alternatively one could punctuate "No more, you gods!") and interpret: give me no greater happiness, you gods!)
 40–41 You . . . That you would do well if 47 yielded brought forth 60 resolve you free you from doubt

The gods can have no mortal officer
More like a god than you. Will you deliver°
How this dead queen re-lives?

CERIMON I will, my lord.
Beseech you first, go with me to my house,
Where shall be shown you all was found with her; 65
How she came placed here in the temple;
No needful thing omitted.

PERICLES Pure Dian,
I bless thee for thy vision, and will offer
Nightly oblations to thee. Thaisa,
This prince, the fair betrothèd of your daughter, 70
Shall marry her at Pentapolis. And now,
This ornament
Makes° me look dismal will I clip to form;°
And what this fourteen years no razor touched,
To grace thy marriage-day I'll beautify. 75

THAISA
Lord Cerimon hath letters of good credit,° sir,
My father's dead.

PERICLES
Heavens make a star of him! Yet there, my queen,
We'll celebrate their nuptials, and ourselves
Will in that kingdom spend our following days. 80
Our son and daughter shall in Tyrus reign.
Lord Cerimon, we do our longing stay°

To hear the rest untold.° Sir, lead's the way. [Exeunt.]

[Enter] GOWER.

[GOWER]
In Antiochus and his daughter you have heard
Of monstrous lust the due and just reward. 85
In Pericles, his queen and daughter, seen,
Although assailed with fortune fierce and keen,
Virtue preserved from fell destruction's blast,°
Led on by heaven, and crowned with joy at last.
In Helicanus may you well descry 90
A figure of truth, of faith, of loyalty.
In reverent Cerimon there well appears
The worth that learnèd charity aye wears.
For wicked Cleon and his wife, when fame°
Had spread his cursèd deed, the honored name 95
Of Pericles to rage the city turn,°
That him and his° they in his palace burn;
The gods for murder seemèd so content
To punish them, although not done but meant.°
So, on your patience evermore attending, 100
New joy wait on you! Here our play has ending.
[Exit.]

83 untold i.e., that is yet untold 88 blast blowing up (?) stroke of lightning (?) blight (?) 94 fame report 94-96 when fame . . . city turn i.e., holding Pericles' name in such honor, the citizens are enraged by the report of the murder of his child 97 his i.e., his family 99 although . . .
meant although the murder was not carried out but merely intended

62 deliver relate 73 Makes which makes; form proper shape
76 credit trustworthiness 82 stay delay

CYMBELINE

EDITED BY RICHARD HOSLEY

Introduction

In Cymbeline Shakespeare combines three stories which originate at three different points in space (so to speak) and gradually converge toward the end of the play. The first story is of a wife who is separated from and eventually reunited with her husband: Imogen and Posthumus. This constitutes the primary action of the play. It fills the first two acts to the exclusion of all else, and, though subordinated to a secondary and a tertiary action in Acts III and IV, it dominates the last act. Thus it is the major structural entity of the play, giving shape to the whole from beginning to end. The second story is of two sons who have been separated from their father in infancy and who eventually are reunited with him: Guiderius and Arviragus. This constitutes the secondary action of the play. It does not begin, however, in the first act and run in parallel with the primary action, as do the secondary actions of Twelfth Night, The Merchant of Venice, and King Lear. Rather, it begins in the middle of the play (III.iii), is partly joined to the primary action through the sojourn of Imogen with the sons in her assumed identity of Fidele (III.vi–IV.ii), and is fully joined to the primary action in the long last scene of the play (V.v). In this respect it bears a general resemblance to the secondary actions of Pericles and The Winter's Tale (where the subject is again the reunion of child with parent), the chief difference being that in those plays Shakespeare, having chosen to present the early story of the mother and father together with the story of the loss of the infant child, employed a mid-play lapse of many years during which the child might grow to marriageable age. The third story is of a king who successfully defends his country against invasion: Cymbeline. This, despite the emphasis given it by the play's title and by Cymbeline's presence in the primary action from the start in his role as Imogen's father, constitutes a tertiary action, beginning, like the secondary action, not in the first act but in the middle of the play, when the Roman ambassador Lucius demands tribute of Cymbeline. Gradually the tertiary action approaches the other actions of the play, joining first the primary action when Lucius accepts Fidele as his page, then the secondary when Guiderius and Arviragus decide to take up arms against the Romans. In the last scene the three actions are fused in a brilliant dénouement in which no fewer than twenty-five plot complications are untied.

Each of the three stories of which Cymbeline is composed is itself a combination of various literary elements. The Imogen-Posthumus story is by all odds the most complex of the three. The basic source of this story is the ninth novella of the Second Day of Boccaccio's Decameron. (Shakespeare also made some use of a German variant of the Boccaccio novella which had been translated into English under the title of Frederick of Jennen early in the sixteenth century.) In the first half of his story Shakespeare is generally faithful to the first half of Boccaccio's story. Like Boccaccio, he presents the husband's wager on the wife's chastity, the villain's stratagem of the trunk, the consequent winning of the wager, and the servant's failure to carry out the husband's order to kill the wife. A significant variation in this part of the story is that Shakespeare's villain actually attempts the seduction of the wife; Boccaccio's villain becomes by common report so convinced of the wife's chastity that he gives up all thought of winning the wager without guile and proceeds immediately to the stratagem of the trunk. Another significant variation is Shakespeare's providing a father for the heroine—and, in fact, a father who is a king. Accordingly the heroine is raised in rank from merchant's wife to princess, the initial separation on which the whole story turns being due not to the husband's casual absence on commerce but to his political exile. Thus a subsequent connection with the political story of Cymbeline is provided for.

For the first half of the Imogen-Posthumus story (and for the second as well) Shakespeare also used as source an anonymous dramatic romance entitled The Rare Triumphs of Love and Fortune (acted 1582). (In Cymbeline the two sources may be thought of as superimposed one upon the other.) In Love and Fortune a princess named Fidelity (compare Imogen's pseudonym, Fidele) is in love with a supposed orphan who, like Posthumus, has been brought up as the king's ward. Fidelity's brother secures the banishment of the lover, who thereupon sends word to Fidelity to run away from court and meet him at a cave. (The plan miscarries and Fidelity, like Imogen, wanders about until she meets an old man who, like Belarius, had been a courtier until unjustly banished by the king and who now lives as a hermit in a cave.) To the basic situation of Love and Fortune Shakespeare added the folk-tale motif of the Wicked Stepmother, a significant difference from the usual situation being that Shakespeare's stepmother wishes not to substitute her own child for the father's child but to advance her son by marrying him to the father's daughter, who, in the absence of surviving male issue, is heir to the kingdom. (The queen's motivation becomes more conventional at III.v.64.) Thus a political motive for the banishment of Posthumus is provided. The Physician is an added character required by the plot device of the potion, which Shakespeare made use of later in the play.

In the second half of the Imogen-Posthumus story Shakespeare departed more widely from Boccaccio's story, but he retained its essential framework. In Boccaccio, the wife adopts male disguise, takes service with a merchant, travels with him to Alexandria, passes into the service of the sultan (whose especial favor she comes to enjoy), meets the villain in a shop, and succeeds in bringing him to judgment before the sultan and her husband. The villain is forced to confess, the husband repents of his error, husband and wife are reunited, and the villain is executed. In Shakespeare, the wife adopts male disguise, travels to Wales (where she lives for a time with rustic outlaws), takes service with the general of an invading army, is captured along with the invaders by the king (whose especial favor she comes to enjoy), recognizes the villain among the captives, and succeeds in bringing him to judgment before the king and her husband. The villain repents and confesses, the husband repents of his error, husband and wife are reunited, and the villain is forgiven.

Two variations in this part of the Imogen-Posthumus story have the effect of unifying divergent strands of the triple-action plot. The disguised wife's sojourn with rustic outlaws in the mountains of Wales (apparently suggested by Fidelia's experience in Love and Fortune, but perhaps also reflective of Erminia's pastoral sojourn in Book VII of Tasso's Jerusalem Delivered) connects the primary action with the secondary action involving Cymbeline's lost sons; and Imogen's acceptance of service with the Roman general Lucius (which is essentially present in Boccaccio) connects the primary action with the tertiary action of the invasion of Britain. Two further variations are of interest. The first, a structural matter, involves the point at which the author begins his story. Boccaccio begins his story at the point of the wager, Shakespeare his at a point shortly after the marriage that will make the wager possible. It is as though Cymbeline were the second part of an Elizabethan two-part play of which the first part, a comedy, has ended, as by convention a comedy should, with the marriage of lovers who have succeeded in overcoming all obstacles (parental opposition among them) to their union. In Othello Shakespeare had already used this particular starting point for a story of jealousy in marriage, beginning the action with a confrontation of angry father and successful wooer in the presence of the newly married daughter. In Cymbeline there is the same initial confrontation, the chief difference being that the father (unlike Brabantio) does not suggest to the husband the possibility of the daughter's infidelity. Another variation from Boccaccio is the strong emphasis Shakespeare gives to the reciprocal themes of repentance and forgiveness. Posthumus, long before he learns he has been deceived by Iachimo, sincerely repents of, and wishes to die in expiation for, the crime that he supposes he has committed against Imogen; and, as he freely repents, so Imogen freely forgives him. Again, Iachimo, when his plot is exposed, undergoes a "conversion" that may be compared with the conversion of Edmund in King Lear ("some good I mean to do,/Despite of mine own nature") and contrasted with the defiant persistence in evil of Iago in Othello ("Demand me nothing. What you know, you know"). The sincerity of Iachimo's conversion is proved by his willingness to accept the punishment of death; and, as he freely repents, so Posthumus freely forgives him. Here, as in The Winter's Tale and The Tempest, Shakespeare echoes themes he had treated more fully in The Merchant of Venice and Measure for Measure.

In addition to these variations, Shakespeare made four important additions to the latter half of Boccaccio's story: the killing of Cloten, the supposed death of Imogen, Imogen's mistaking Cloten's body for that of Posthumus, and the Vision of Posthumus.

Since there is no character in Boccaccio corresponding to Cloten, his essential character may well have been suggested by Fidelia's villainous brother in Love and Fortune. The killing of Cloten by Guiderius is closely connected with Cloten's intention to rape Imogen. This intention makes Cloten an example of lust and villainy to be compared with the example afforded by Iachimo: the one lecherous villain is stupid and boorish, the other subtle and Italianate. The intention also "justifies" the killing of Cloten, for in effect Guiderius, even though unaware of Cloten's intention and Fidele's true identity, acts to protect his sister from rape. The manner of the killing—decapitation, with the severed head being thrown into a stream that will carry it to the sea—appears to echo a folk ritual of some sort. There is a patent allusion to the death of Orpheus, whose severed head was thrown into the river Hebrus, down which it was carried to the sea and eventually to Lesbos; and there was an analogous ritual connected with the worship of Adonis at Alexandria, where "a Head, of papyrus, representing the god, was, with every show of mourning, committed to the waves, and borne within seven days by a current . . . to Byblos . . ." (Jessie L. Weston, From Ritual to Romance [1957], p. 47). (These allusions, mock-epic or mock-mythic in relation to Cloten himself, may carry serious meaning in relation to Cloten as a surrogate for Posthumus.) The killing of Cloten may be compared also with the killing of Antigonus in The Winter's Tale: in each case a vicious or a flawed character is punished for attempted violence against the heroine, and in each case there seems to be operative a tradition of tragicomedy that goes back ultimately to what Aristotle called "tragedy with a double issue"—that is, a play threatening death which provides a happy ending for "good" characters but the reward of death for "bad." This tradition is involved also in the death of the queen at the end of the play.

The general plot device of the supposed death of a beloved woman (a staple of Greek romance) was one that Shakespeare had already used in Romeo and Juliet, Much Ado About Nothing, and Pericles, and that he was to use again in The Winter's Tale; and he had used the particular device of the potion that brings about the supposed death in Romeo and Juliet. In Cymbeline (IV.ii) the supposed death of Imogen symbolizes the death that Posthumus had commanded, separates Imogen from the rustic outlaws, and emphasizes the operation of Providence in the accident of the malevolent queen's having requested poison of a physician who, because of his wisdom and benevolence, supplied her instead with a harmless sleeping potion.

The killing of Cloten and the supposed death of Imogen lead to the Elizabethan-Gothic grotesquerie of Imogen's mistaking the headless body of Cloten for that of Posthumus. Through this theatrically sensational mistake (so embarrassing to modern audiences) Shakespeare makes the interesting point that Imogen, like Posthumus, can be victimized by circumstance and deceived by appearance—and in a situation outwardly suggestive of sexual compromise, for unwittingly the paragon of virtue lies beside and lovingly embraces the body of a man who is not her husband but her would-have-been rapist. (Even so she has earlier unwittingly spent the night with her would-be seducer, Iachimo.) A possible source of this episode exists in an anonymous dramatic romance entitled Clyomon and Clamydes, dating from the 1580's. Here the heroine, Neronis, who has left the court in the disguise of a boy and taken service with a shepherd, comes upon a coffin containing the body of the King of Norway, earlier slain in combat by Neronis's lover Clyomon. Since Clyomon has left his emblazoned shield beside the coffin, Neronis mistakes the body of the King of Norway for that of Clyomon, grieves, despairs, and is on the point of committing suicide. At this moment the personification of Providence descends from heaven, gives Neronis a paper informing her that Clyomon is alive, and returns to heaven. Another possible source of this episode is afforded by the Ethiopica of Heliodorus, in which Theagenes embraces the body of a dead woman which he mistakes for that of his beloved, Charicleia.

The Vision of Posthumus (V.iv), in which Jupiter descends from heaven, may have been suggested by the descent of Providence in Clyomon and Clamydes. In any case, the Vision involves a literary tradition deriving ultimately from the appearance-of-a-god-in-a-dream of classical epic. Shakespeare had used such a dream theophany in Pericles, where the goddess Diana appears to the protagonist in a dream; and he had used the closely allied convention of the appearance-of-a-ghost-in-a-dream in Richard III, where the ghosts of Richard's victims appear successively to the dreaming Richard and Richmond. A native stage tradition may also be influential, for the great fifteenth-century scriptural cycles frequently employ the appearance-of-an-angel-in-a-dream. An Elizabethan stage convention is certainly operative, the god who descends from stage cover to stage by means of suspension-gear: Juno in The Tempest, Venus in Greene's Alphonsus King of Aragon, Providence in the anonymous Clyomon and Clamydes, perhaps Diana in Pericles. In Cymbeline, as Bertrand Evans has pointed out, Jupiter is not a deus ex machina in the sense that he resolves a complication of the plot; rather, the theophany focuses our growing awareness that God's providence is indeed at work, even though for a time (during the long and frightening absence of Iachimo, the only person who, by confessing his slander against Imogen, can resolve the major complication of the plot) we may have seen little visible evidence of it. It should be added that the authenticity of the Vision, frequently called in question by critics of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries, is now (together with the authenticity of the rest of the play) generally accepted, perhaps largely because of the cogent demonstration by G. Wilson Knight in The Crown of Life (1947).

At least one other influence on the Imogen-Posthumus story can be discerned: that of Greek romance. The influence was already present in Boccaccio's story, for Greek romance characteristically involves a separation of lover from beloved (or of husband from wife), consequent wanderings over great distances and for long periods of time, and an eventual reunion of the lovers. Apollonius of Tyre, which Shakespeare had dramatized in Pericles, is a good example of the type, but an example of specific relevance to Cymbeline is afforded by the Ethiopica of Heliodorus, of which an Elizabethan translation (the first of three) appeared in 1567. From the Ethiopica (to which he had alluded in Twelfth Night, V.i.117) Shakespeare apparently took a suggestion for the striking of the disguised Imogen by Posthumus (V.v). Charicleia, who has been separated from her lover, Theagenes, comes to Memphis and recognizes him. Since she is disguised as a beggar, however, Theagenes does not recognize her.

Frantically, as if sight of him had stung her, she ran to him, clasped him close, hung upon his neck, and caressed him with inarticulate sighs and tears. When he saw her face, begrimed and purposely discolored, and her torn and tattered garments, he took her for a shameless beggar. He pulled her off and thrust her away, and when she would not let go he struck her for troubling him and blocking his view of Calasiris and his sons. She said to him softly, "Pythias, have you forgotten the lamp?" The words struck Theagenes like a bolt. He remembered that the lamp was a token they had agreed upon and gazed into Charicleia's eyes, whose brilliance broke upon him like the sun's rays through a cloud. He threw his arms about her and embraced her. (translation by Moses Hadas)

The striking of Imogen by Posthumus may also reflect a device of the romantic epics, the individual combat between two knights in which the lover, ignorant of his opponent's sex and true identity, fights with and sometimes kills his beloved in male disguise. Romantic-epic examples include the combat between Tancred and Clorinda in Book XII of Tasso's Jerusalem Delivered and that between Arthegal and Britomart in Book III of Spenser's Faerie Queene; and dramatic examples in the same tradition include the combat between the title characters of Kyd's Soliman and Perseda and between Amintor and Aspatia in The Maid's Tragedy by Beaumont and Fletcher.

The secondary action of the play—consisting of the story of Guiderius and Arviragus—begins in III.iii, although we are warned early to expect it by a reference to Cymbeline's lost sons at I.i.57. The Guiderius-Arviragus story employs that standard device of romance tradition, the "lost child." This is Shakespeare's most important innovation in the "historical" materials available to him. Usually—because of the characteristic concern of romance with love—the lost child is a girl, apparently of low degree, who is enabled to marry her lover of high degree when it is revealed that she also is of gentle birth. This is the situation of the heroine in many of the comedies of Plautus and Terence, and it is a common situation in pastoral romance. (Examples are afforded by Glycerium in the Andria of Terence, Pastorella in Book VI of The Faerie Queene, and Perdita in The Winter's Tale.) Sometimes the lost child is a boy, but in such cases the story does not usually involve a love situation, presumably because the mobility required of the wanderer who comes to the environment of the lost child is unsuited to the decorum of a girl. (Compare the convenience, if not the necessity, of Imogen's male disguise.) Sometimes the lost male child is involved ultimately in a situation in which he unwittingly takes or threatens the life of his father (for example, the Oedipus of Sophocles) or in which the father unwittingly takes or threatens the life of his son (for example, The Captives of Plautus). Cymbeline's threat to execute the confessed homicide Guiderius, who is actually his own son, seems to echo the oedipal situation of The Captives, in which the father, Hegio, threatens to execute the supposed slave, Tyndarus, who is actually his own son.

The Guiderius-Arviragus story includes the corollary story of Belarius: as they are lost children, so he is their supposed father. Belarius is primarily the "rusticated courtier" of pastoral romance: the educated and civilized gentleman or nobleman who lives in isolation or among shepherds and with whom the protagonist passes some time during his wanderings. Sometimes the rusticated courtier's exile is voluntary, the result of an unhappy love affair or some other disillusionment. An example is Philisides in Sidney's Arcadia. More frequently the rusticated courtier's exile is enforced, the result of banishment for political reasons. An example is Duke Senior in As You Like It. Belarius, an example of the latter type, has an apparent source in Bomelio, the unjustly exiled courtier of Love and Fortune who lives in a cave and whom Fidelity meets after running away from court.

Belarius, however, is not only the rusticated courtier, he is also the "shepherd father" of pastoral romance. Usually the shepherd father is only a foster father and the lost child that he rears as his own is a girl. Examples are Melibee, supposed father of Pastorella in Book VI of The Faerie Queene, and the Shepherd, supposed father of Perdita in The Winter's Tale. Shakespeare makes Belarius not a shepherd but a hunter, because Guiderius and Arviragus must have had the sort of training with weapons that will fit them to fight effectively in defense of their country; and he makes Belarius a mountaineer in order to emphasize the danger of his position as a political outlaw. (Thus Shakespeare, through discarding sheep and shepherds, emphasizes the primitivism that is at the core of most pastoralism.) Nevertheless, it is convenient briefly to regard Belarius as a "shepherd" father in order to understand his relation to tradition. Since the rusticated courtier is rarely a father, Shakespeare seems, in Belarius, to have combined the pastoral character-types of the courtier rusticated for political reasons and the shepherd father. He was to make the same significant combination in amplified and most original form in The Tempest, where the only essential departure from the combined traditions (aside from the omission of sheep and shepherds) is that Prospero is not the foster father but the true father of Miranda.

The Guiderius-Arviragus story is amplified and linked to the tertiary action of the play by Shakespeare's use of material from Holinshed's Chronicles of England, Scotland, and Ireland (1587): specifically the Scottish victory over Danish invaders at the Battle of Luncarty (near Perth) in 976, which was achieved through the stalwart fighting of the husbandman Hay and his two sons. This joining of the Guiderius-Arviragus story to the Cymbeline story leads to its further joining, in the final scene of the play, to the Imogen-Posthumus story.

The tertiary action of the play—consisting of the Cymbeline story—begins in III.i with the appearance of the Roman ambassador Lucius, although we are warned to expect this action by a reference to Lucius at II.iii.56 and by another to the payment of Roman tribute at II.iv.13. The basic source is The History of England in Holinshed's Chronicles, but particular details have been traced to other sources. Since Holinshed attributes the denial of tribute to Cymbeline's son Guiderius, Shakespeare may well have followed Spenser in attributing the denial to Cymbeline. Moreover, a number of Shakespearean details appear to derive from Thomas Blenerhasset's "Guidericus" in the 1578 edition of the Second Part of The Mirror for Magistrates and from John Higgins' "Guiderius" in the 1587 edition of The Mirror. Perhaps the most interesting are the disguising of Posthumus as a British soldier and his fighting against the Romans. These details were apparently suggested by Higgins' account of the Roman captain Hamonius, who disguises himself as a British soldier and pretends to fight against the Romans in order to gain the opportunity of killing Guiderius. One other influence on the Cymbeline story is Shakespeare's own tradition of depicting the invasion of Britain or England, as in King Lear, Richard III, 3 Henry VI, and King John. In each of these cases, as in Cymbeline, the invasion is represented as partly or entirely beneficial to the island kingdom.

The foregoing account stresses the abundance of sources and traditions that Shakespeare characteristically blended into an organic whole in writing Cymbeline. The play is extremely complex in its relation to tradition. It is also complex in other respects, posing a number of problems both real and imaginary. The critics have reacted very differently to Cymbeline. At one extreme are the Rationalists, chief among them Dr. Johnson (1765):

To remark the folly of the fiction, the absurdity of the conduct, the confusion of the names and manners of different times, and the impossibility of the events in any system of life, were to waste criticism upon unresisting imbecility, upon faults too evident for detection and too gross for aggravation.

At the other extreme are the Imogenolaters, of whom perhaps the best example is Swinburne (1880):

The very crown and flower of all her father's daughters—I do not speak here of her human father but her divine—woman above all Shakespeare's women is Imogen. As in Cleopatra we found the incarnate sex, the woman everlasting, so in Imogen we find half-glorified already the immortal godhead of womanhood.

Neither critic need now be taken seriously, although it may be observed that Johnson's aversion to the violent yoking together of Roman Britain and Renaissance

Rome reveals a characteristic blindness to the essence of romance.

Many other problems once posed by Cymbeline have been solved by recent criticism and scholarship. One such problem has already been mentioned: doubt of the authenticity of certain parts of the play, in particular the Vision of Posthumus. No one now denies that the play is entirely the work of Shakespeare. Another problem has been posed by the suggestion of a lost source-play. The theory, however, is both unnecessary and unsupported by evidence, and it seems to be at variance with what we know of Shakespeare's originality in the handling of multiple sources in such plays as King Lear, The Merchant of Venice, and The Taming of the Shrew. Another problem has been posed by A. H. Thorndike's suggestion that Cymbeline reveals the influence of Beaumont and Fletcher's Philaster. This theory has now been effectively disposed of by the late Harold S. Wilson in his English Institute lecture of 1951. Another problem has been posed by the complexity of the plot, which, entailing as it does some two dozen separate dénouements, prompted Shaw, in Cymbeline Refinished, to rewrite the last act at half the length of the original for a production of 1937. Here Shakespeare's technical virtuosity and its relation to themes of the play have been well expounded by Bertrand Evans. Still another problem has been posed by the character of Posthumus and particularly his motivation in accepting Iachimo's wager. Here W. W. Lawrence has enlightened us by setting Posthumus' action in an appropriate context of Renaissance conceptions of a wife's chastity and her husband's honor. And yet another difficulty is posed by the play's characteristic style, which is heavily metaphorical, often perverse in syntax, and sometimes so elliptical as to raise the question whether we are dealing with a metaphysical toughness of thought and angularity of expression comparable to Donne's, or simply with a corrupt text. In the great majority of cases, surely, the former interpretation is to be preferred, for the style of Cymbeline can be paralleled in such near-contemporary plays as Antony and Cleopatra, Coriolanus, and The Winter's Tale.

One teasing problem remains. Modern editors classify Cymbeline as a comedy. Why then was the play classified as a tragedy in the Shakespeare Folio of 1623? The classification could be simply an error, Heminges and Condell having forgotten that the play does not end with the death of the title character. Or, as has been suggested, the classification could be due to late receipt of copy in the printing-house, after the comedies (the first of the three genres of the Folio) had been printed off. Neither explanation is very satisfactory. On balance it seems more reasonable to assume that the classification resulted from a deliberate decision on the part of Heminges and Condell. The problem can perhaps be solved by considering two other Folio plays now classified as comedies: The Winter's Tale and Troilus and Cressida. (All three plays are tragicomedies, the first two of traditional type, the third of nontraditional.) What is the difference between, on the one hand, The Winter's Tale (classified as a comedy in the Folio) and, on the other, Cymbeline and Troilus and Cressida (classified as tragedies in the Folio)? Simply that the first play does not include war in its action, whereas the two latter plays do. In this respect The Winter's Tale is like the thirteen other "comedies" of the Folio classification, and Cymbeline and Troilus and Cressida are like the ten other "tragedies" of the Folio classification. (The distinction does not, to be sure, hold exactly in the case of All's Well That Ends Well and Romeo and Juliet: in the former play, however, war is not a political matter but a device to expose the braggart soldier Parolles; and in the latter play war is represented by the feud between the rival houses of Capulet and Montague.) Having denied themselves the convenient classification of tragicomedy, Heminges and Condell seem to have made the best of an imperfect bargain by associating The Winter's Tale with that Shakespearean genre (comedy) which usually excludes war from the action, Cymbeline and Troilus and Cressida with that Shakespearean genre (tragedy) which (like history) usually includes war in the action. Some uncertainty about their decision may be reflected in the fact that in the Folio The Winter's Tale stands as the very last of the comedies, Cymbeline as the very last of the tragedies. Troilus and Cressida, for reasons connected with the printing of the Folio, stands by itself between the histories and the tragedies.

Cymbeline is generally dated during the theatrical season of 1609-10. It was seen by Simon Forman, presumably at the Globe, sometime before September 12, 1611, when Forman died. (Unfortunately his account of the play merely names the characters and summarizes the plot.) Cymbeline may have been designed for original production by the King's Men at their indoor theater, the Blackfriars, or at their outdoor theater, the Globe. The issue is relatively unimportant, however, since the same plays were frequently performed at both kinds of playhouse, public and private. On January 1, 1634, Cymbeline was acted "at Court by the King's Players," being "well-liked by the King." Probably the theater was the Cockpit-in-Court at Whitehall, though it may have been the Great Hall of Whitehall Palace. In original production Cymbeline was presumably performed on a stage generally similar to the one that appears in the well-known De Witt drawing of the Swan Playhouse—that is to say, without benefit of an "inner stage." The present text has been annotated in accordance with this assumption.

A NOTE ON THE SOURCES

The sources of Cymbeline are discussed in the Introduction. The ninth novella of the Second Day of Boccaccio's Decameron is reprinted (in the anonymous translation of 1620), in the individual-volume Signet edition of Cymbeline. Frederick of Jennen is reprinted in an appendix to the New Arden edition of Cymbeline (1955). The Rare Triumphs of Love and Fortune is edited by W. W. Greg in the Malone Society Reprints (1931), Clyomon and Clamydes by Betty Littleton (1968). The Ethiopica of Heliodorus has been translated by Moses Hadas: Heliodorus: An Ethiopian Romance (1957). Relevant parts of the History of England and the History of Scotland in Holinshed's Chronicles (1587) are reprinted in the Signet paperback edition of Cymbeline. Blenerhasset's "Guidericus" and Higgins's "Guiderius" have been edited by Lily B. Campbell, in Parts Added to the Mirror for Magistrates (1946).

A NOTE ON THE TEXT

There is only one "substantive" edition of Cymbeline, the Shakespeare Folio of 1623. Because of incomplete notation of properties and music in the stage directions of F, it seems clear that the printer's copy for F was not a promptbook nor the faithful transcript of one; and several directions are phrased in the "fictive" language characteristic of an author writing his own stage directions. Probably therefore the copy for F consisted of an authorial manuscript or the faithful transcript of one: either (1) "foul papers" (the author's last working draft of the play before preparation of a promptbook) in unusually clean condition (like the copy for Antony and Cleopatra); (2) authorial "fair copy" (the author's faithful transcript of his own foul papers); or (3) a faithful scribal transcript of foul papers or authorial fair copy. The type for F was set by a single compositor, Jaggard's Compositor B. (See Charlton Hinman, The Printing and Proof-Reading of the First Folio of Shakespeare [1963].) F provides, in general, a good text, correctly lined and with relatively few corruptions. In the present edition "accidental" errors in F have been emended silently; "substantive" errors requiring emendation are listed at the end of this note.

F is divided into acts and scenes. Division into acts presumably derives from original production of the play with four intervals for nondramatic music. (Compare Wilfred T. Jewkes, Act Division in Elizabethan and Jacobean Plays, 1958.) Division into scenes presumably derives from annotation of the printer's copy by a Folio editor wishing to give the text a semblance of neoclassical style. The present edition follows the act divisions of F and, for convenience of reference, the scene divisions of the Globe edition, although at three points these vary (both correctly and incorrectly) from those of F. Globe I.i combines F I.i and ii, incorrectly since the stage (despite notice by players going off of those coming on) is technically clear at I.i.69 (the "overlap" of players is paralleled at I.ii.117 of Measure for Measure). Globe II.iv and v divide F II.iv, correctly since the stage is clear at II.iv.152. And Globe III.vi combines F III.vi and vii, incorrectly since the stage is clear at III.vi.27. Both Globe and F fail to mark a new scene at IV.ii.100, incorrectly since the stage is clear at that point.

F contains no place headings, for the reason that the play was originally produced without changeable scenery. (Compare Richard Southern, Changeable Scenery: Its Origin and Development in the British Theatre [1952].) Place headings have been added here in accordance with a general requirement of the present edition, but such headings designate only the three general locales of the action, Britain, Rome, and Wales. A more specific designation is impossible in at least three instances (I.ii, II.i, II.v); and in any case specific designations are misleading since they suggest a change of scenery for each scene with a particular locale different from that of the preceding scene.

In the following list of substantive emendations the reading of the present edition is given in boldface type, that of F in roman type.

- I.i.4 First Gentleman 1 [so throughout balance of scene] 10
Second Gentleman 2 [so throughout balance of scene] 158
Exeunt Exit
I.ii.1 First Lord 1 [so throughout balance of scene and in II.i and II.iii] 7 Second Lord 2 [so throughout balance of scene and in II.i and II.iii]
I.iii.9 this his
I.iv.48 not [not in F] 75 Britain Britanie 77 but believe beleue 87-88 purchase purchases 132 thousand thousands
I.v.3 s.d. Exeunt Exit 75 s.d. [occurs after line 74 in F] 85 s.d. Exeunt Exit
I.vi.7 desire desires 28 takes take 104 Fixing Fiering 109 illustrious illustrious 168 men's men 169 descended defended II.i.27 your you 34 tonight night 52 s.d. Exeunt Exit 62 husband, than Husband. Then 63 make. The make the 66
s.d. Exit Exeunt
II.ii.49 bare beare 51 s.d. Exeunt Exit
II.iii.7 Cloten [not in F] 29 Cloten [not in F] 30 vice voyce 44 out on't 48 solicits solicity 138 garment Garments 155 you your
II.iv.6 hopes hope 18 legions Legion 24 mingled wing-led 47 not note 100-01 that. She that She 135 the her
II.v.16 German Iarmen 27 have a [not in F]
III.i.19 ribbèd . . . palèd ribb'd . . . pal'd 20 rocks Oakes
53 be. We do say be, we do. Say
III.ii.67 score store 78 here, nor heere, not III.iii.2 Stoop Sleepe 23 bribe Babe 28 know knowes 83 wherein they whereon the
III.iv.79 afore't a-foot 90 make makes 102 out [not in F]
124 courtesan Curtezan? 148 haply happily
III.v.17 s.d. Exeunt Exit 32 looks looke 40 strokes stroke 41 s.d. Messenger a Messenger 55 s.d. [occurs after "days" in F]
140 insultment insultment
III.vi.70 I'd I
III.vii.9 commends commands
IV.i.18 her thy 19 haply happily
IV.ii.49 [speech heading Arui. precedes "He" in F] 58 patience patient 122 thank thanks 132 humor Honor 186 ingenious ingenuous 205 crayer care 206 Might Might'st 290 is are 332 s.d.-333 Enter Lucius and Captains; a Soothsayer to them.
Captain. The legions Enter Lucius, Capitaines, and a Soothsayer.
Cap. To them, the Legions 336 are in are heere in IV.iv.2 find we we finde 8 us v. 17 the their 27 hard heard
V.i.1 wished am wisht
V.iii.24 harts hearts 42 stooped stopt 43 they the 84 First
Captain 1 [so throughout balance of scene] 86 Second Captain 2
[so throughout balance of scene]
V.iv.s.d. Jailers Gaoler 1 First Jailer Gao 51 come came 57 look looke, looke 129 are as often are often 139 sir Sis
154 on one 176 s.d. Exit Exeunt
V.v.62 Ladies La 64 heard heare 126 saw see 134 On One 205 it [not in F] 297 sorry sorrow 334 mere neere 378 ye we 386 brothers Brother 392 inter'gatories Interrogatories 405 so no 435 Soothsayer [not in F] 445 Leo-natus Leonatus 449 thy this 469 this yet yet this

CYMBELINE

[Dramatic Personae]

CYMBELINE King of Britain

IMOGEN daughter to Cymbeline by a former wife, later disguised under the name of Fidele

POSTHUMUS LEONATUS *a gentleman, husband to
Imogen*

GUIDERIUS { sons to Cymbeline, disguised under ARVIRAGUS { the names of Polydore and Cadwal, supposed sons to Morgan

BELARIUS a banished lord, disguised under the name of Morgan

QUEEN wife to Cymbeline

CLOTEN son to the queen by a former husband

CORNELIUS a physician employed by the queen

PISANIO servant to Posthumus

LORDS attending on Cymbeline

LADIES attending on the queen

HELEN a lady attending on Imogen

TWO LORDS friends to Cloten

TWO GENTLEMEN of Cymbeline's court

TWO BRITON CAPTAINS

MUSICIANS employed by Cloten

MESSENGERS

TWO JAILERS

CAIUS LUCIUS Roman ambassador, later general of the Roman forces

TWO ROMAN SENATORS

ROMAN TRIBUNES

ROMAN CAPTAINS

A SOOTHSAYER named Philharmonus

PHILARIO an Italian friend to Posthumus

IACHIMO an Italian friend to Philario

A FRENCHMAN friend to Philario

JUPITER

GHOST of Sicilius Leonatus, father to Posthumus

GHOST of the mother to Posthumus

GHOSTS of the two young brothers to Posthumus, called Leonati

BRITON SOLDIERS ROMAN SOLDIERS

ATTENDANTS A DUTCHMAN and

A SPANIARD (friends to Philario)

Scene: Britain, Rome, Wales]

A C T I

Scene I. [Britain.]Enter two GENTLEMEN.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

You do not meet a man but frowns. Our bloods°
 No more obey the heavens than our courtiers
 Still seem as does the king's.°

SECOND GENTLEMAN But what's the matter?

FIRST GENTLEMAN

His daughter, and the heir of's kingdom, whom
 He purposed to his wife's sole son—a widow
 That late he married—hath referred° herself
 Unto a poor but worthy gentleman. She's wedded,
 Her husband banished, she imprisoned. All
 Is outward sorrow, though I think the king
 Be touched at very heart.

SECOND GENTLEMAN None but the king?

FIRST GENTLEMAN

He that hath lost her too. So is the queen,
 That most desired the match. But not a courtier,
 Although they wear their faces to the bent°
 Of the king's looks, hath a heart that is not Glad at the thing they scowl at.

SECOND GENTLEMAN And why so?

FIRST GENTLEMAN

He that hath missed the princess is a thing
 Too bad for bad report, and he that hath her—
 I mean, that married her, alack good man,
 And therefore banished—is a creature such
 As, to seek through the regions of the earth
 For one his like, there would be something failing
 In him that should compare. I do not think
 So fair an outward and such stuff within Endows a man but he.

SECOND GENTLEMAN You speak him far.°

FIRST GENTLEMAN

I do extend him, sir, within himself,°
 Crush him together rather than unfold
 His measure duly.

SECOND GENTLEMAN What's his name and birth?

FIRST GENTLEMAN

I cannot delve him to the root. His father
 Was called Sicilius, who did join his honor°
 Against the Romans with Cassibelan,
 But had his titles by Tenantius, whom
 He served with glory and admired° success,
 So gained the sur-addition° Leonatus;
 And had, besides this gentleman in question,
 Two other sons, who in the wars o' th' time
 Died with their swords in hand; for which their father,
 Then old and fond of issue,° took such sorrow
 That he quit being, and his gentle lady,
 Big of this gentleman our theme, deceased

The decorative border shown on page 1454 appeared on the first page of Cymbeline in the First Folio edition of Shakespeare's plays, 1623.

I.i.i bloods moods 3 seem . . . king's wear expressions like the king's 6 referred given 13 bent inclination 24 speak him far praise him much 25 do . . . himself i.e., do not exaggerate his real merit 29 honor reputation (as a soldier) 32 admired wondered at 33 sur-addition additional title 37 fond of issue doting on children

As he was born. The king he takes the babe
 To his protection, calls him Posthumus Leonatus, Breeds him and makes him of his bedchamber,°
 Puts to him° all the learnings that his time°
 Could make him the receiver of, which he took
 As we do air, fast as 'twas minist'ed,
 And in's spring became a harvest, lived in court—
 Which rare it is to do—most praised, most loved,
 A sample to the youngest, to th' more mature
 A glass that feated them,° and to the graver
 A child that guided dotards. To his mistress,
 For whom he now is banished—her own price°
 Proclaims how she esteemed him and his virtue.
 By her election° may be truly read
 What kind of man he is.

SECOND GENTLEMAN I honor him
 Even out of° your report. But pray you tell me,
 Is she sole child to th' king?

FIRST GENTLEMAN His only child.
 He had two sons—if this be worth your hearing,
 Mark it—the eldest of them at three years old,
 I' th' swathing clothes the other, from their nursery
 Were stol'n, and to this hour no guess in knowledge
 Which way they went.

SECOND GENTLEMAN How long is this ago?

FIRST GENTLEMAN

Some twenty years.

SECOND GENTLEMAN

That a king's children should be so conveyed,°
 So slackly guarded, and the search so slow
 That could not trace them!

FIRST GENTLEMAN Howsoe'er 'tis strange,
 Or that the negligence may well be laughed at,
 Yet is it true, sir.

SECOND GENTLEMAN I do well believe you.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

We must forbear.° Here comes° the gentleman,
 The queen, and princess. Exeunt.

Enter the QUEEN, POSTHUMUS, and IMOGEN.

QUEEN

No, be assured you shall not find me, daughter,
 After the slander° of most stepmothers,
 Evil-eyed unto you. You're my prisoner, but
 Your jailer shall deliver you the keys
 That lock up your restraint. For you, Posthumus,
 So soon as I can win th' offended king,
 I will be known your advocate. Marry,° yet
 The fire of rage is in him, and 'twere good
 You leaned unto° his sentence with what patience
 Your wisdom may inform you.

POSTHUMUS Please your highness,
 I will from hence today.

QUEEN You know the peril. 80

42 of his bedchamber i.e., a chamberlain 43 Puts to him sets him to work at; time age 49 glass . . . them mirror that reflected their features 51 price what she is willing to undergo for his sake 53 election choice 55 out of beyond 63 conveyed stolen 68 forbear withdraw; Here comes this entrance-announcement shows that, though the stage is technically "clear" at line 69 (at which point F marks a new scene), the oncoming players enter before the offgoing ones have completed their exit 71 slander ill repute 76 Marry indeed (from "By the Virgin Mary") 78 leaned unto deferred to

I'll fetch a turn about the garden, pitying
The pangs of barred affections, though the king
Hath charged you should not speak together. Exit.

IMOGEN O
Dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant
Can tickle° where she wounds! My dearest husband, 85
I something fear my father's wrath, but nothing—
Always reserved° my holy duty°—what
His rage can do on me. You must be gone,
And I shall here abide the hourly shot
Of angry eyes, not comforted to live 90
But that there is this jewel in the world
That I may see again.

POSTHUMUS My queen, my mistress.
O lady, weep no more, lest I give cause
To be suspected of more tenderness
Than doth become a man. I will remain 95
The loyal'st husband that did e'er plight troth;
My residence, in Rome at one Philario's,
Who to my father was a friend, to me
Known but by letter. Thither write, my queen,
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send, 100
Though ink be made of gall.

Enter QUEEN.

QUEEN Be brief, I pray you.
If the king come, I shall incur I know not
How much of his displeasure. [Aside.] Yet I'll move him
To walk this way. I never do him wrong
But he does buy° my injuries, to be friends; 105
Pays dear for my offenses. [Exit.]

POSTHUMUS Should we be taking leave
As long a term as yet we have to live,
The loathness to depart would grow. Adieu.

IMOGEN
Nay, stay a little.
Were you but riding forth to air yourself, 110
Such parting were too petty. Look here, love;
This diamond was my mother's. [Giving a ring.] Take it, heart,
But° keep it till you woo another wife,
When Imogen is dead.

POSTHUMUS How, how? Another?
You gentle gods, give me but this I have, 115
And cere up° my embracements from a next
With bonds of death! Remain, remain thou here
While sense can keep it on. And, sweetest, fairest,
As I my poor self did exchange for you
To your so infinite loss, so in our trifles 120
I still win of you. For my sake wear this.

[Giving a bracelet.]

It is a manacle of love; I'll place it
Upon this fairest prisoner.

IMOGEN O the gods!
When shall we see again?

Enter CYMBELINE and LORDS.

POSTHUMUS Alack, the king!

CYMBELINE
Thou basest thing, avoid° hence, from my sight! 125

85 tickle (pretend to) please 87 reserved excepting; duty of child to parent 105 buy gladly accept 113 But only 116 cere up shroud 125 avoid go

If after this command thou fraught° the court
With thy unworthiness, thou diest. Away!
Thou'rt poison to my blood.

POSTHUMUS The gods protect you,
And bless the good remainders of° the court.
I am gone. Exit.

IMOGEN There cannot be a pinch in death 130
More sharp than this is.

CYMBELINE O disloyal thing
That shouldst repair° my youth, thou heap'st
A year's age on me. 90

IMOGEN I beseech you, sir,
Harm not yourself with your vexation.
I am senseless of° your wrath; a touch more rare° 135
Subdues all pangs, all fears.

CYMBELINE Past grace? obedience?

IMOGEN Past hope, and in despair; that way, past grace.

CYMBELINE That mightst have had the sole son of my queen.

IMOGEN O blessed that I might not! I chose an eagle
And did avoid a puttock.° 140

CYMBELINE
Thou took'st a beggar, wouldst have made my throne
A seat for baseness.

IMOGEN No, I rather added
A luster to it.

CYMBELINE O thou vile one!

IMOGEN Sir,
It is your fault that I have loved Posthumus.
You bred him as my playfellow, and he is 145
A man worth any woman; overbuys me
Almost the sum he pays.°

CYMBELINE What, art thou mad?

IMOGEN 110
Almost, sir. Heaven restore me! Would I were
A neatherd's° daughter, and my Leonatus
Our neighbor shepherd's son.

Enter QUEEN.

CYMBELINE Thou foolish thing! 150

[To QUEEN.]

They were again together. You have done
Not after our command. Away with her
And pen her up.

QUEEN Beseech° your patience. Peace,
Dear lady daughter, peace! Sweet sovereign,
Leave us to ourselves, and make yourself some comfort 155
Out of your best advice.°

CYMBELINE Nay, let her languish
A drop of blood a day and, being aged,
Die of this folly. Exeunt [CYMBELINE and LORDS].

Enter PISANIO.

QUEEN Fie, you must give way.—
Here is your servant. How now, sir? What news?

126 fraught freight, burden 129 remainders of those who remain at 132 repair renew 135 am senseless of do not feel; touch more rare finer anxiety 140 puttock kite (bird of prey) 146–47 overbuys . . . pays he exceeds me in worth by almost the price which he is now called upon to pay, i.e., banishment (J. M. Nosworthy) 149 neatherd's cowherd's 153 Beseech I beseech 156 advice consideration

PISANIO
My lord your son drew on my master.
QUEEN Ha! 160
No harm, I trust, is done?
PISANIO There might have been
But that my master rather played than fought
And had no help of anger. They were parted
By gentlemen at hand.
QUEEN I am very glad on't.
IMOGEN
Your son's my father's friend; he takes his part° 165
To draw upon an exile. O brave sir!
I would they were in Afric both together,
Myself by with a needle° that I might prick
The goer-back. Why came you from your master?
PISANIO
On his command. He would not suffer me 170
To bring him to the haven, left these notes
Of what commands I should be subject to When't pleased you to employ me.
QUEEN This hath been
Your faithful servant. I dare lay° mine honor
He will remain so.
PISANIO I humbly thank your highness. 175
QUEEN
Pray walk awhile. [Exit QUEEN.]
IMOGEN
About some half-hour hence, pray you speak with me.
You shall at least go see my lord aboard.
For this time leave me. Exeunt [severally°].

Scene II. [Britain.]

Enter CLOTEN° and two LORDS.

FIRST LORD Sir, I would advise you to shift a shirt;
the violence of action hath made you reek° as a sacrifice. Where air comes out, air comes in; there's none abroad so wholesome as that you vent°.
CLOTEN If my shirt were bloody, then to shift it. 5
Have I hurt him?
SECOND LORD [Aside.] No, faith, not so much as his patience.
FIRST LORD Hurt him? His body's a passable° carcass if he be not hurt. It is a throughfare for steel if 10 it be not hurt.
SECOND LORD [Aside.] His steel was in debt. It went o' th' backside the town°.
CLOTEN The villain would not stand° me.
SECOND LORD [Aside.] No, but he fled forward still, 15 toward your face.
FIRST LORD Stand you? You have land enough of your own, but he added to your having, gave you some ground.

165 takes his part plays his usual role 168 needle pronounced "neel" 174 lay stake 179 s.d. severally by different tiringhouse doors (Imogen follows the queen offstage while Pisanio exits by the other door)

I.ii.s.d. Cloten rhymes with rotten; cf. "Cloten's clotpoll," IV.ii.184 2 reek give off vapors 4 vent give off 9 passable affording passage (quibble on the sense of "tolerable") 12-13
It . . . town like a debtor avoiding a creditor by taking a back street (i.e., his rapier missed) 14 stand confront

SECOND LORD [Aside.] As many inches as you have 20 oceans. Puppies!
CLOTEN I would they had not come between us.
SECOND LORD [Aside.] So would I, till you had measured how long a fool you were upon the ground.
CLOTEN And that she should love this fellow and 25
refuse me!
SECOND LORD [Aside.] If it be a sin to make a true election,° she is damned.
FIRST LORD Sir, as I told you always, her beauty and her brain go not together. She's° a good sign,° but I 30 have seen small reflection of her wit.
SECOND LORD [Aside.] She shines not upon fools, lest the reflection should hurt her.
CLOTEN Come, I'll to my chamber. Would there had been some hurt done! 35
SECOND LORD [Aside.] I wish not so—unless it had been the fall of an ass, which is no great hurt.
CLOTEN You'll go with us?
FIRST LORD I'll attend your lordship.
CLOTEN Nay, come, let's go together. 40
SECOND LORD Well, my lord. Exeunt.

Scene III. [Britain.]

Enter IMOGEN and PISANIO.

IMOGEN
I would thou grew'st unto the shores o' th' haven
And questioned'st every sail. If he should write,
And I not have it, 'twere a paper lost
As offered mercy is.° What was the last
That he spake to thee?
PISANIO It was his queen, his queen. 5
IMOGEN
Then waved his handkerchief?
PISANIO And kissed it, madam.
IMOGEN
Senseless° linen, happier therein than I!
And that was all?
PISANIO No, madam. For so long
As he could make me with this eye or ear
Distinguish him from others, he did keep 10
The deck, with glove or hat or handkerchief
Still waving, as° the fits and stirs of's mind
Could best express how slow his soul sailed on,
How swift his ship.
IMOGEN Thou shouldst have made him
As little as a crow or less, ere left 15
To after-eye° him.
PISANIO Madam, so I did.
IMOGEN
I would have broke mine eyestrings, cracked them but
To look upon him till the diminution
Of space° had pointed him sharp as my needle;
Nay, followed him till he had melted from 20
The smallness of a gnat to air, and then

28 election choice 30 She's she has; sign appearance
I.iii.3-4 'twere . . . is a letter gone astray would be as great a loss as mercy that fails to reach its object 7 Senseless without feeling 12 as as if 15-16 ere . . . after-eye before you stopped looking after 19 space i.e., distance

Have turned mine eye and wept. But, good Pisanio,
When shall we hear from him?

PISANIO Be assured, madam,
With his next vantage.^o

IMOGEN
I did not take my leave of him, but had
Most pretty things to say. Ere I could tell him
How I would think on him at certain hours
Such thoughts and such; or I could make him swear
The shes of Italy should not betray
Mine interest and his honor; or have charged him
At the sixth hour of morn, at noon, at midnight,
T' encounter me with orisons,^o for then
I am in heaven for him; or ere I could Give him that parting kiss which I had set
Betwixt two charming^o words—comes in my father,
And like the tyrannous breathing of the north
Shakes all our buds from growing.

Enter a LADY.^o

LADY The queen, madam,
Desires your highness' company.

IMOGEN
Those things I bid you do, get them dispatched.
I will attend the queen.

PISANIO Madam, I shall. Exeunt. 40

Scene IV. [Rome.]

Enter PHILARIO, IACHIMO,^o a FRENCHMAN, a DUTCHMAN, and a SPANIARD.

IACHIMO Believe it, sir, I have seen him in Britain.
He was then of a crescent note,^o expected to prove so worthy as since he hath been allowed the name of.
But I could then have looked on him without the help of admiration,^o though the catalogue of his endowments had been tabled^o by his side and I to peruse him by items.

PHILARIO You speak of him when he was less furnished than now he is with that which makes^o him both without and within.

FRENCHMAN I have seen him in France. We had very many there could behold the sun^o with as firm eyes as he.

IACHIMO This matter of marrying his king's daughter, wherein he must be weighed rather by her value than his own, words him, I doubt not, a great deal from the matter.^o

FRENCHMAN And then his banishment.

IACHIMO Ay, and the approbation of those that weep this lamentable divorce under her colors^o are wonderfully to extend him^o be it but to fortify her judgment,

24 vantage opportunity 32 T' encounter . . . orisons join me in prayers 35 charming protecting from evil 37 s.d. the Lady's message has the theatrical function of motivating Imogen's exit

I.iv.s.d. Iachimo probably pronounced "Yákimo"; cf. "yellow Iachimo," II.v.14; but possibly pronounced "Jáckimo" since the name is a variant of the Italian Giacomo 2 crescent
note growing reputation 5 admiration wonder 6 tabled tabulated 9 makes is the making of 12 behold the sun as the eagle—noblest of birds—was thought to do 16–17 words . . . matter makes him out better than he truly is 20 colors banner 21 extend him enlarge his reputation which else an easy battery might lay flat for taking a beggar without less^o quality.^o But how comes it he is to sojourn with you? How creeps acquaintance?

PHILARIO His father and I were soldiers together, to whom I have been often bound for no less than my life.

Enter POSTHUMUS.

Here comes the Briton. Let him be so entertained^o amongst you as suits, with gentlemen of your knowing, to a stranger^o of his quality.^o I beseech you all be better known to this gentleman, whom I commend to you as a noble friend of mine. How worthy he is I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

FRENCHMAN Sir, we have known together^o in Orleans.

POSTHUMUS Since when I have been debtor to you for courtesies which I will be ever to pay and yet pay still.

FRENCHMAN Sir, you o'errate my poor kindness. I was glad I did atone^o my countryman and you. It had been pity you should have been put together^o with so mortal a purpose as then each bore, upon importance^o of so slight and trivial a nature.

POSTHUMUS By your pardon, sir, I was then a young traveler; rather shunned to go even^o with what I heard than in my every action to be guided by others' experiences. But upon my mended judgment, if I offend not to say it is mended, my quarrel was not altogether slight.

FRENCHMAN Faith, yes, to be put to the arbitrament of swords, and by such two that would by all likelihood have confounded^o one the other or have fall'n
both.

IACHIMO Can we with manners ask what was the difference?

FRENCHMAN Safely, I think. 'Twas a contention in public, which may without contradiction^o suffer the report. It was much like an argument that fell out last night, where each of us fell in praise of our country^o mistresses; this gentleman at that time vouching—and upon warrant of bloody affirmation^o—his to be more fair, virtuous, wise, chaste, constant, qualified,^o and less attemptable than any the rarest of our ladies in France.

IACHIMO That lady is not now living, or this gentleman's opinion, by this,^o worn out.

POSTHUMUS She holds her virtue still, and I my mind.

IACHIMO You must not so far prefer her 'fore ours of Italy.

POSTHUMUS Being so far provoked as I was in France, I would abate^o her nothing, though I profess myself her adorer, not her friend.^o

23 without less i.e., with less (double negative); quality inherent worth 27 entertained welcomed 29 stranger foreigner; quality rank 34 known together been acquainted 40 atone reconcile 41 put together i.e., in a duel 42 importance a matter 45 shunned . . . even refused to agree 52 confounded destroyed 57 contradiction objection
59 country i.e., of our own countries (with bawdy quibble)
61 warrant . . . affirmation pledge to support by shedding blood (R. B. Heilman) 62 qualified endowed with good qualities 66 by this by this time 71 abate depreciate 72 friend paramour

IACHIMO As fair and as good—a kind of hand-in-hand^o comparison—had been something too fair and too good for any lady in Britain. If she went before^o 75 others I have seen, as that diamond of yours outlusters many I have beheld, I could not but believe she excelled many; but I have not seen the most precious diamond that is, nor you the lady.

POSTHUMUS I praised her as I rated her. So do I my 80 stone.

IACHIMO What do you esteem it at?

POSTHUMUS More than the world enjoys.^o

IACHIMO Either your unparagoned mistress is dead, or she's outprized^o by a trifle. 85

POSTHUMUS You are mistaken. The one may be sold or given, or^o if there were wealth enough for the purchase or merit for the gift. The other is not a thing for sale, and only the gift of the gods.

IACHIMO Which the gods have given you? 90

POSTHUMUS Which by their graces I will keep.

IACHIMO You may wear her in title yours, but you know strange fowl light upon neighboring ponds. Your ring may be stol'n too. So your brace of unprizable estimations,^o the one is but frail and the other 95 casual.^o A cunning thief, or a that-way-accomplished courtier, would hazard the winning both of first and last.

POSTHUMUS Your Italy contains none so accomplished a courtier to convince the honor^o of my 100 mistress, if, in the holding or loss of that, you term her frail. I do nothing doubt you have store of thieves; notwithstanding, I fear not my ring.

PHILARIO Let us leave^o here, gentlemen.

POSTHUMUS Sir, with all my heart. This worthy 105 signior, I thank him, makes no stranger of me; we are familiar at first.^o

IACHIMO With five times so much conversation I should get ground of^o your fair mistress, make her go back even to the yielding, had I admittance, and 110 opportunity to^o friend.

POSTHUMUS No, no.

IACHIMO I dare thereupon pawn the moiety^o of my estate to your ring, which in my opinion o'ervalues it something. But I make my wager rather against 115 your confidence than her reputation; and, to bar your offense herein too, I durst attempt it against any lady in the world.

POSTHUMUS You are a great deal abused^o in too bold a persuasion,^o and I doubt not you sustain what y' are 120 worthy of by your attempt.

IACHIMO What's that?

POSTHUMUS A repulse—though your attempt, as you call it, deserve more: a punishment too.

PHILARIO Gentlemen, enough of this. It came in too 125 suddenly; let it die as it was born, and I pray you be better acquainted.

IACHIMO Would I had put my estate and my neighbor's on th' approbation^o of what I have spoke!

POSTHUMUS What lady would you choose to assail? 130

IACHIMO Yours, whom in constancy you think stands so safe. I will lay you ten thousand ducats to your ring that, commend me to the court where your lady is, with no more advantage than the opportunity of a second conference, and I will bring from thence 135 that honor of hers which you imagine so reserved.

POSTHUMUS I will wage^o against your gold, gold to it. My ring I hold dear as my finger; 'tis part of it.

IACHIMO You are a friend, and therein the wiser. If you buy ladies' flesh at a million a dram, you cannot 140 preserve it from tainting. But I see you have some religion in you, that^o you fear.

POSTHUMUS This^o is but a custom in your tongue. You bear a graver purpose, I hope.

IACHIMO I am the master of my speeches, and would 145 undergo^o what's spoken, I swear.

POSTHUMUS Will you? I shall but lend my diamond till your return. Let there be covenants^o drawn between's. My mistress exceeds in goodness the hugeness of your unworthy thinking. I dare you to this match: 150 here's my ring.

PHILARIO I will have it no lay.^o

IACHIMO By the gods, it is one. If I bring you no sufficient testimony that I have enjoyed the dearest 155 bodily part of your mistress, my ten thousand ducats are yours; so is your diamond too. If I come off and leave her in such honor as you have trust in, she your jewel, this your jewel, and my gold are yours—provided I have your commendation^o for my more 160 free entertainment.^o

POSTHUMUS I embrace these conditions. Let us have articles betwixt us. Only, thus far you shall answer: if you make your voyage upon her and give me directly^o to understand you have prevailed, I am no 165 further your enemy; she is not worth our debate. If she remain unseduced, you not making it appear otherwise, for your ill opinion and th' assault you have made to her chastity you shall answer me with your sword.

IACHIMO Your hand; a covenant. We will have these 170 things set down by lawful counsel, and straight away^o for Britain, lest the bargain should catch cold and starve.^o I will fetch my gold and have our two wagers recorded.

POSTHUMUS Agreed. 175

[Exeunt POSTHUMUS and IACHIMO.]

FRENCHMAN Will this hold, think you?

PHILARIO Signior Iachimo will not from it. Pray let us follow 'em. Exeunt.

Scene V. [Britain.]

Enter QUEEN, LADIES, and CORNELIUS.

73–74 hand-in-hand claiming equality 75 went before excelled 83 enjoys possesses 85 outprized exceeded in value 87 or either 94–95 unprizable estimations inestimable values 96 casual liable to accident 100 convince the honor conquer the chastity 104 leave leave off 107 at first from the first 109 get ground of gain an advantage over (a dueling metaphor followed by bawdy quibbles on “go back” and “yielding”) 111 to as a 113 moiety half 119 abused deceived 120 persuasion opinion

129 approbation proof 137 wage wager 142 that since 143 This i.e., what you say 146 undergo undertake 148 covenants a legal agreement 152 lay wager 159 commendation introduction to her 160 entertainment welcome 164 directly plainly 171 straight away immediately I shall leave 173 starve die

QUEEN

Whiles yet the dew's on ground, gather those flowers.
Make haste. Who has the note° of them?

LADY

I, madam.

QUEEN

Dispatch.° Exeunt LADIES.

Now, Master Doctor, have you brought those drugs?

CORNELIUS

Pleaseth your highness, ay. Here they are, madam. 5

[Presenting a box.]

But I beseech your grace, without offense—
My conscience bids me ask—wherefore you have Commanded of me these most poisonous compounds,°
Which are the movers of a languishing death,
But, though slow, deadly.

QUEEN

I wonder, doctor, 10

Thou ask'st me such a question. Have I not been Thy pupil long? Hast thou not learned° me how To make perfumes? distil? preserve? yea, so
That our great king himself doth woo me oft
For my confections?° Having thus far proceeded— 15
Unless thou think'st me devilish—is't not meet
That I did amplify my judgment° in
Other conclusions?° I will try the forces
Of these thy compounds on such creatures as
We count not worth the hanging—but none human— 20
To try the vigor of them and apply
Allayments to their act,° and by them° gather
Their° several virtues and effects.

CORNELIUS

Your highness

Shall from this practice but make hard your heart. 25
Besides, the seeing these effects will be Both noisome and infectious.

QUEEN

O, content thee.

Enter PISANIO.

[Aside.]

Here comes a flattering rascal. Upon him
Will I first work. He's for his master,
And enemy to my son.—How now, Pisanio?—
Doctor, your service for this time is ended; 30
Take your own way.

CORNELIUS [Aside.] I do suspect you, madam,

But you shall do no harm.

QUEEN [To PISANIO.] Hark thee, a word.CORNELIUS [Aside.]

I do not like her. She doth think she has Strange ling'ring poisons. I do know her spirit
And will not trust one of her malice with 35
A drug of such damned nature. Those she has
Will stupefy and dull the sense awhile,
Which first perchance she'll prove° on cats and dogs,
Then afterwards up higher; but there is
No danger in what show of death it makes, 40
More than the locking up the spirits a time,
To be more fresh, reviving. She is fooled

With a most false effect, and I the truer
So to be false with her.

QUEEN

No further service, doctor,

Until I send for thee.

CORNELIUS

I humbly take my leave. Exit. 45

QUEEN

Weeps she still, say'st thou? Dost thou think in time
She will not quench° and let instructions enter
Where folly now possesses? Do thou work.
When thou shalt bring me word she loves my son,
I'll tell thee on the instant thou art then 50

As great as is thy master; greater, for
His fortunes all lie speechless and his name
Is at last gasp. Return he cannot nor Continue where he is. To shift his being°
Is to exchange one misery with another, 55

And every day that comes comes to decay°
A day's work in him. What shalt thou expect
To be depender on a thing that leans,
Who cannot be new built, nor has no friends
So much as but to prop him? [Dropping the box;
PISANIO picks it up.] Thou tak'st up 60

Thou know'st not what, but take it for thy labor.
It is a thing I made which hath the king
Five times redeemed from death. I do not know
What is more cordial.° Nay, I prithee take it.
It is an earnest° of a farther good 65

That I mean to thee. Tell thy mistress how
The case stands with her; do't as from thyself.
Think what a chance thou changest on,° but think
Thou hast thy mistress still—to boot, my son,
Who shall take notice of thee. I'll move the king 70
To any shape of thy preferment° such
As thou'lt desire; and then myself, I chiefly,
That set thee on to this desert,° am bound
To load thy merit richly. Call my women.
Think on my words. Exit PISANIO. A sly and constant knave, 75

Not to be shaken; the agent for his master,
And the remembrancer° of her to hold
The handfast° to her lord. I have given him that Which, if he take, shall quite unpeople her
Of liegers° for her sweet,° and which she after, 80
Except she bend her humor,° shall be assured
To haste it too.

Enter PISANIO and LADIES.

So, so. Well done, well done.
The violets, cowslips, and the primroses
Bear to my closet.° Fare thee well, Pisanio.
Think on my words. Exeunt QUEEN and LADIES.

PISANIO And shall do. 85

But when to my good lord I prove untrue,
I'll choke myself. There's all I'll do for you. Exit.

I.v.2 note list 3 Dispatch make haste 8 compounds drugs
12 learned taught 15 confections drugs 17 judgment knowledge 18 conclusions experiments 22 Allayments
. . . act antidotes to their action; them the experiments 23
Their of the compounds 38 prove test

47 quench cool down 54 being location 56 decay destroy 64 cordial restorative 65 earnest pledge 68 chance . . .
on i.e., opportunity you have to change service (?) 71 preferment advancement 73 desert action meriting reward
77 remembrancer person employed to remind someone (legal term) 78 handfast marriage contract 80 liegers ambassadors; sweet lover 81 bend her humor change her mind 84 closet private room

Scene VI. [Britain.]Enter IMOGEN alone.

IMOGEN

A father cruel and a stepdame false,
 A foolish suitor to a wedded lady
 That hath her husband banished. O, that husband,
 My supreme crown of grief, and those repeated°
 Vexations of it! Had I been thief-stol'n,
 As my two brothers, happy; but most miserable
 Is the desire that's glorious.° Blessed be those,
 How mean° soe'er, that have their honest wills,°
 Which seasons° comfort. Who may this be? Fie!

Enter PISANIO and IACHIMO.

PISANIO

Madam, a noble gentleman of Rome,
 Comes° from my lord with letters.

IACHIMO

Change you,° madam:

The worthy Leonatus is in safety
 And greets your highness dearly. [Presenting a letter.]

IMOGEN

Thanks, good sir.

You're kindly welcome.

IACHIMO [Aside.]

All of her that is out of door° most rich!
 If she be furnished with a mind so rare,
 She is alone th' Arabian bird,° and I
 Have lost the wager. Boldness be my friend!
 Arm me, audacity, from head to foot,
 Or like the Parthian° I shall flying fight—
 Rather, directly fly.

IMOGEN (Reads.) "He is one of the noblest note,° to whose kindnesses I am most infinitely tied. Reflect° upon him accordingly, as you value your trust—

Leonatus." 25

So far I read aloud.

But even the very middle of my heart
 Is warmed by th' rest and takes it thankfully.
 You are as welcome, worthy sir, as I
 Have words to bid you, and shall find it so
 In all that I can do.

IACHIMO

Thanks, fairest lady.

What, are men mad? Hath nature given them eyes
 To see this vaulted arch and the rich crop°
 Of sea and land, which can distinguish 'twixt
 The fiery orbs above and the twinned° stones
 Upon the numbered° beach, and can we not Partition° make with spectacles so precious°
 'Twixt fair and foul?

IMOGEN

What makes your admiration?°

IACHIMO

It cannot be i' th' eye, for apes and monkeys,

'Twixt two such shes, would chatter this way° and 40
 Contemn with mows° the other; nor i' th' judgment,
 For idiots, in this case of favor,° would
 Be wisely definite;° nor i' th' appetite°—
 Sluttery, to such neat excellence opposed,
 Should make desire vomit emptiness,° 45
 Not so allured to feed.

IMOGEN

What is the matter, trow?°

IACHIMO

The cloyed will°—

That satiate yet unsatisfied desire, that tub
 Both filled and running—ravening first the lamb,
 Longs after for the garbage.

IMOGEN

What, dear sir,

Thus raps° you? Are you well?

IACHIMO

Thanks, madam, well.

[To PISANIO.]

Beseech you, sir, desire
 My man's abode° where I did leave him.
 He's strange and peevish.°

PISANIO

I was going, sir,

To give him welcome.

Exit. 55

IMOGEN

Continues well my lord? His health, beseech you?

IACHIMO

Well, madam.

IMOGEN

Is he disposed to mirth? I hope he is.

IACHIMO

Exceeding pleasant; none a stranger° there
 So merry and so gamesome. He is called
 The Briton reveler.

IMOGEN

When he was here

He did incline to sadness,° and oftentimes
 Not knowing why.

IACHIMO

I never saw him sad.

There is a Frenchman his companion, one
 An eminent monsieur that, it seems, much loves 65
 A Gallian° girl at home. He furnaces°
 The thick° sighs from him, whiles the jolly Briton—
 Your lord, I mean—laughs from's free lungs, cries, "O,
 Can my sides hold to think that man who knows
 By history, report, or his own proof° 70
 What woman is, yea, what she cannot choose
 But must be, will's free hours languish° for Assured bondage?"

IMOGEN

Will my lord say so?

IACHIMO

Ay, madam, with his eyes in flood with laughter.

It is a recreation to be by

And hear him mock the Frenchman. But heavens know
 Some men are much to blame.

IMOGEN

Not he, I hope.

I.vi.4 repeated (already) enumerated 7 desire that's glorious
 i.e., unfulfilled longing that aspires to great things (Nosworthy) 8 mean low-ranking; honest wills plain desires 9 seasons give relish to 11 Comes who comes; you i.e., your expression 15 out of door external, visible 17 Arabian bird phoenix (of which species only one example existed at a time) 20 Parthian mounted archer who shot arrows behind him while in flight (Iachimo will resort to indirect methods) 22
note reputation 23 Reflect bestow attention 33 crop harvest 35 twinned exactly alike 36 numbered abounding (in stones) 37 Partition distinction; spectacles so precious i.e., eyesight 38 admiration wonder

40 this way toward Imogen 41 mows grimaces 42 case of favor question of beauty 43 definite decisive; appetite physical desire 45 make . . . emptiness i.e., destroy desire 47 What . . . trow What are you talking about,
 I wonder; will sexual desire 51 raps transports 52-53
desire . . . abode request that my servant remain 54 strange and peevish a foreigner and skittish 59 none a stranger there is no foreigner 62 sadness seriousness 66
Gallian French; furnaces exhales like a furnace 67 thick frequent 70 proof experience 72 languish pass in languishing

IACHIMO

Not he—but yet heaven's bounty towards him might
Be used more thankfully. In himself 'tis° much;
In you, which I account his, beyond all talents.°
Whilst I am bound to wonder, I am bound
To pity too.

IMOGEN What do you pity, sir?

IACHIMO

Two creatures heartily.

IMOGEN Am I one, sir?

You look on me. What wrack° discern you in me
Deserves your pity?

IACHIMO Lamentable! What,

To hide me from the radiant sun and solace°
I' th' dungeon by a snuff!°

IMOGEN I pray you, sir,

Deliver with more openness your answers
To my demands. Why do you pity me?

IACHIMO

That others do,
I was about to say, enjoy your—but
It is an office° of the gods to venge it,
Not mine to speak on't.

IMOGEN You do seem to know

Something of me or what concerns me. Pray you,
Since doubting° things go ill often hurts more
Than to be sure they do—for certainties
Either are past remedies, or, timely knowing,°
The remedy then born—discover° to me
What° both you spur and stop.

IACHIMO Had I this cheek

To bathe my lips upon; this hand, whose touch,
Whose every touch, would force the feeler's soul
To th' oath of loyalty; this object, which Takes prisoner the wild motion of mine eye,
Fixing it only here; should I, damned then,
Slaver with lips as common as the stairs
That mount the Capitol; join gripes° with hands Made hard with hourly falsehood (falsehood, as
With labor); then bye-peeping° in an eye
Base and illustrious° as the smoky light
That's fed with stinking tallow—it were fit
That all the plagues of hell should at one time
Encounter° such revolt.°

IMOGEN My lord, I fear,

Has forgot Britain.

IACHIMO And himself. Not I

Inclined to this intelligence pronounce°
The beggary° of his change, but 'tis your graces
That from my mutest conscience° to my tongue
Charms this report out.

IMOGEN .Let me hear no more.

IACHIMO

O dearest soul, your cause doth strike my heart
With pity that doth make me sick. A lady

So fair, and fastened to an empery°

Would° make the great'st king double, to be partnered
With tomboys° hired with that self exhibition°
Which your own coffers yield; with diseased ventures°
That play with all infirmities for gold
Which rottenness can lend nature; such boiled stuff°
As well might poison poison! Be revenged,
Or she that bore you was no queen, and you
Recoil° from your great stock.

IMOGEN Revenged?

How should I be revenged? If this be true—
As I have such a heart that both mine ears
Must not in haste abuse—if it be true,
How should I be revenged?

IACHIMO Should he make me

Live like Diana's priest betwixt cold sheets,
Whiles he is vaulting variable ramps,°
In your despite, upon your purse? Revenge it.
I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure,
More noble than that runagate° to your bed,
And will continue fast to your affection,
Still close° as sure.

IMOGEN What ho, Pisanio!

IACHIMO

Let me my service tender on your lips.

IMOGEN

Away, I do condemn mine ears that have
So long attended thee.° If thou wert honorable,
Thou wouldst have told this tale for virtue, not
For such an end thou seek'st, as base as strange.
Thou wrong'st a gentleman who is as far
From thy report as thou from honor, and Solicits here a lady that disdains
Thee and the devil alike. What ho, Pisanio!
The king my father shall be made acquainted
Of thy assault. If he shall think it fit
A saucy stranger in his court to mart°
As in a Romish stew° and to expound
His beastly mind to us, he hath a court
He little cares for and a daughter who
He not respects at all. What ho, Pisanio!

IMOGEN

O happy Leonatus! I may say
The credit° that thy lady hath of° thee
Deserves thy trust, and thy most perfect goodness
Her assured credit. Blessèd live you long,
A lady to the worthiest sir that ever
Country called his,° and you his mistress, only
For the most worthiest fit. Give me your pardon.
I have spoke this to know if your affiance°
Were deeply rooted, and shall make your lord
That which he is, new o'er; and he is one°
The truest mannered,° such a holy witch°

120 empery empire 121 Would which would 122
tomboys whores; self exhibition selfsame allowance 123 ventures whores 125 boiled stuff i.e., women who have been "sweated" for venereal disease 128 Recoil decline 134 variable ramps fickle whores 137 runagate traitor
139 close secret 142 attended thee listened to you (in anger Imogen shifts from formal "you" to familiar "thee," thus treating Iachimo as an inferior; at line 168 she reverts to
"you") 151 to mart should do business 152 Romish stew
Roman bawdyhouse 157 credit trust; of in 161 his its own 163 affiance faith 165 one above all 166 truest mannered most honestly behaved; witch charmer

79 'tis i.e., heaven's bounty is 80 beyond all talents beyond all natural endowments, i.e., inestimable 84 wrack disaster
86 solace find pleasure 87 snuff candle-end 92 office duty 95 doubting fearing 97 timely knowing if one knows in time 98 discover reveal 99 What why 106 gripes grips 108 bye-peeping peeping sidelong 109 illustrious lackluster
112 Encounter confront; revolt inconstancy 113-14 Not . . . pronounce I, though disinclined to bring this news, report 115 beggary meanness 116 conscience knowledge

That he enchants societies into° him.
Half all men's hearts are his.

IMOGEN You make amends.

IACHIMO

He sits 'mongst men like a descended god.
He hath a kind of honor sets him off
More than a mortal seeming.° Be not angry,
Most mighty princess, that I have adventured
To try your taking° of a false report, which hath Honored with confirmation your great judgment
In the election of a sir so rare,
Which° you know cannot err. The love I bear him
Made me to fan° you thus, but the gods made you,
Unlike all others, chaffless. Pray your pardon.

IMOGEN

All's well, sir. Take my pow'r i' th' court for yours.

IACHIMO

My humble thanks. I had almost forgot
T' entreat your grace but in a small request,
And yet of moment too, for it concerns
Your lord, myself, and other noble friends
Are° partners in the business.

IMOGEN

Pray what is't?

IACHIMO

Some dozen Romans of us and your lord—
The best feather of our wing—have mingled sums
To buy a present for the emperor;
Which I, the factor° for the rest, have done
In France. 'Tis plate of rare device, and jewels
Of rich and exquisite form, their values great,
And I am something curious,° being strange,°
To have them in safe stowage. May it please you
To take them in protection?

IMOGEN

Willingly;

And pawn mine honor for their safety. Since
My lord hath interest in them, I will keep them
In my bedchamber.

IACHIMO

They are in a trunk

Attended by my men. I will make bold
To send them to you, only for this night.
I must aboard tomorrow.

IMOGEN

O, no, no.

IACHIMO

Yes, I beseech, or I shall short° my word
By length'ning my return. From Gallia°
I crossed the seas on purpose and on promise
To see your grace.

IMOGEN

I thank you for your pains.

But not away tomorrow!

IACHIMO

O, I must, madam.

Therefore I shall beseech you, if you please
To greet your lord with writing, do't tonight.
I have outstood my time, which is material
To th' tender° of our present.

IMOGEN

I will write.

Send your trunk to me; it shall safe be kept
And truly yielded you. You're very welcome.

Exeunt [severally].

A C T I I

Scene I. [Britain.]

Enter CLOTEN and the two LORDS.

170 CLOTEN Was there ever man had such luck? When I kissed the jack,° upon an upcast° to be hit away! I had a hundred pound on't. And then a whoreson jackanapes must take me up° for swearing, as if I borrowed mine oaths of him and might not spend them at my 5 pleasure.

175 FIRST LORD What got he by that? You have broke his pate with your bowl.

SECOND LORD [Aside.] If his wit had been like him that broke it, it would have run all out. 10

CLOTEN When a gentleman is disposed to swear, it is not for any standers-by to curtail his oaths. Ha?

180 SECOND LORD No, my lord—[Aside.] Nor crop the ears of them.

CLOTEN Whoreson dog, I gave him satisfaction! 15
Would he had been one of my rank.°

SECOND LORD [Aside.] To have smelled like a fool.

CLOTEN I am not vexed more at anything in th' earth. A pox on't! I had rather not be so noble as I am. 20
They dare not fight with me because of the queen my mother. Every jack-slave° hath his bellyful of fighting, and I must go up and down like a cock that nobody can match.

190 SECOND LORD [Aside.] You are cock and capon too, and° you crow, cock, with your comb on. 25

CLOTEN Sayest thou?

SECOND LORD It is not fit your lordship should undertake° every companion° that you give offense to.

CLOTEN No, I know that, but it is fit I should commit offense° to my inferiors. 30

195 SECOND LORD Ay, it is fit for your lordship only.

CLOTEN Why, so I say.

FIRST LORD Did you hear of a stranger° that's come to court tonight?

CLOTEN A stranger, and I not know on't? 35

SECOND LORD [Aside.] He's a strange fellow himself, and knows it not.

200 FIRST LORD There's an Italian come, and, 'tis thought, one of Leonatus' friends.

CLOTEN Leonatus? A banished rascal, and he's 40 another, whatsoever he be. Who told you of this stranger?

FIRST LORD One of your lordship's pages.

CLOTEN Is it fit I went to look upon him? Is there no derogation° in't? 45

205 SECOND LORD You cannot derogate,° my lord.

CLOTEN Not easily, I think.

SECOND LORD [Aside.] You are a fool, granted;
therefore your issues,° being foolish, do not derogate.

210 II.i.2 kissed the jack came close to the target ball (in the game of bowls); upcast chance 4 take me up rebuke me 16 of my rank i.e., so I might have challenged him to a duel (the Second Lord quibbles) 21 jack-slave lout 25 and if 28 undertake take on; companion low fellow 29–30 commit offense offer battle 33 stranger foreigner 45 derogation loss of dignity 46 cannot derogate do anything derogatory to your rank (with quibble on the sense of "have no dignity to lose") 49 issues deeds

167 into to 171 mortal seeming human appearance 173
try your taking test your reception 176 Which who 177 fan winnow 184 Are i.e., who are 188 factor agent 191 curious anxious; strange a foreigner 200 short fall short of 201 Gallia France 208 tender giving

CLOTEN Come, I'll go see this Italian. What I have so lost today at bowls I'll win tonight of him. Come, go.
SECOND LORD I'll attend your lordship.

Exeunt [CLOTEN and FIRST LORD].

That such a crafty devil as is his mother
Should yield the world this ass! A woman that Bears all down° with her brain, and this her son 55
Cannot take two from twenty, for his heart,°
And leave eighteen. Alas, poor princess,
Thou divine Imogen, what thou endur'st,
Betwixt a father by thy stepdame governed,
A mother hourly coining plots, a wooer 60
More hateful than the foul expulsion is
Of thy dear husband, than that horrid act
Of the divorce he'd make. The heavens hold firm
The walls of thy dear honor, keep unshaked
That temple, thy fair mind, that thou mayst stand, 65
T' enjoy thy banished lord and this great land! Exit.

Scene II. [Britain.]

Enter IMOGEN in her bed,° and a LADY.

IMOGEN

Who's there? My woman Helen?

LADY

Please you, madam.

IMOGEN

What hour is it?

LADY

Almost midnight, madam.

IMOGEN

I have read three hours then. Mine eyes are weak.
Fold down the leaf where I have left. To bed.
Take not away the taper, leave it burning; 5
And if thou canst awake by four o' th' clock,
I prithee call me. Sleep hath seized me wholly.

[Exit LADY.]

To your protection I commend me, gods.
From fairies° and the tempters of the night
Guard me, beseech ye!

Sleeps. IACHIMO [comes] from the trunk.

IACHIMO

The crickets sing, and man's o'erlabored sense Repairs itself by rest. Our Tarquin° thus
Did softly press the rushes° ere he wakened
The chastity he wounded. Cytherea,°
How bravely° thou becom'st thy bed, fresh lily,° 15
And whiter than the sheets! That I might touch!
But kiss, one kiss! Rubies unparagoned,
How dearly they do't! 'Tis her breathing that Perfumes the chamber thus. The flame o' th' taper
Bows toward her and would underpeep her lids 20
To see th' enclosed lights, now canopied

55 Bears all down overcomes everything 56 for his heart to save his life

II.ii.s.d. Enter . . . bed in Elizabethan open-stage production the bed is "thrust out" upon the stage by attendants and the trunk is carried on; in modern proscenium-arch production the bed and trunk are usually "discovered" by raising the front curtain 9 fairies i.e., malignant fairies 12 Tarquin who raped Lucrece 13 rushes Elizabethan floor-covering 14 Cytherea Venus 15 bravely magnificently; lily emblem of chastity

Under these windows,° white and azure-laced
With blue of heaven's own tinct. But my design:
To note the chamber. I will write all down:
Such and such pictures; there the window; such 25
Th' adornment of her bed; the arras, figures,
Why, such and such; and the contents o' th' story.°
Ah, but some natural notes° about her body
Above ten thousand meaner movables°
Would testify, t' enrich mine inventory. 30
O sleep, thou ape° of death, lie dull° upon her.
And be her sense but as a monument,°
Thus in a chapel lying. Come off, come off—
[Removing her bracelet.]

As slippery as the Gordian knot was hard.
'Tis mine, and this will witness outwardly, 35
As strongly as the conscience° does within,
To th' madding of her lord. On her left breast
A mole cinque-spotted,° like the crimson drops
I' th' bottom of a cowslip. Here's a voucher°
Stronger than ever law could make. This secret 40
Will force him think I have picked the lock and ta'en
The treasure of her honor. No more. To what end?
Why should I write this down that's riveted,
Screwed to my memory? She hath been reading late
The tale of Tereus.° Here the leaf's turned down 45
Where Philomel gave up. I have enough.
To th' trunk again, and shut the spring of it.
Swift, swift, you dragons of the night, that dawning
May bare the raven's eye.° I lodge in fear.
Though this a heavenly angel, hell is here. 50
Clock strikes.

One, two, three. Time, time! [Goes into the trunk.]
Exeunt.°

Scene III. [Britain.]

Enter CLOTEN and LORDS.

FIRST LORD Your lordship is the most patient man in loss, the most coldest° that ever turned up ace.°

CLOTEN It would make any man cold° to lose.

FIRST LORD But not every man patient after the noble temper of your lordship. You are most hot and 5 furious when you win.

CLOTEN Winning will put any man into courage. If I could get this foolish Imogen, I should have gold enough. It's almost morning, is't not?

FIRST LORD Day, my lord. 10

CLOTEN I would this music would come. I am advised to give her music a-mornings; they say it will penetrate.°

22 windows shutters, i.e., eyelids 27 th' story the story depicted on the arras (cf. II.iv.69) 28 notes marks 29 meaner movables lesser furnishings 31 ape mimic; dull heavy 32 monument recumbent effigy on a tomb 36 conscience knowledge 38 cinque-spotted having five spots 39 voucher guarantee 45 Tereus who raped Philomela; apparently the book is Ovid's Metamorphoses 49 bare . . . eye the raven supposedly being an early bird 51 s.d. Exeunt the bed and trunk are carried offstage or concealed by dropping the front curtain

II.iii.2 coldest calmest; ace one, the lowest throw at dice (pun on ass) 3 cold gloomy 12-14 penetrate affect emotionally (with bawdy quibble)

Enter MUSICIANS.

Come on, tune. If you can penetrate° her with your fingering, so; we'll try with tongue too. If none will do, let her remain, but I'll never give o'er.° First, a very excellent good-conceited° thing; after, a wonderful sweet air with admirable rich words to it—and then let her consider.

Song.

Hark, hark, the lark at heaven's gate sings, 20
And Phoebus 'gins° arise,
His steeds to water at those springs
On chaliced flowers that lies;
And winking Mary-buds° begin
To ope their golden eyes. 25
With every thing that pretty is,
My lady sweet, arise,
Arise, arise!

CLOTEN So, get you gone. If this penetrate, I will consider° your music the better; if it do not, it is a vice° in her ears which horsehairs° and calves' guts,° nor the voice of unpaved° eunuch to boot, can never amend.
[Exeunt MUSICIANS.]

Enter CYMBELINE and QUEEN.

SECOND LORD Here comes the king.

CLOTEN I am glad I was up so late, for that's the reason I was up so early. He cannot choose but take this service I have done fatherly. Good morrow to your majesty and to my gracious mother.

CYMBELINE Attend you here the door of our stern daughter? Will she not forth?

CLOTEN I have assailed her with musics, but she vouchsafes no notice.

CYMBELINE

The exile of her minion° is too new;
She hath not yet forgot him. Some more time
Must wear the print of his remembrance out,
And then she's yours.

QUEEN You are most bound to th' king, 45
Who lets go by no vantages° that may Prefer° you to his daughter. Frame° yourself
To order solicits,° and be friended
With aptness of the season. Make denials
Increase your services. So seem as if 50
You were inspired to do those duties which
You tender to her; that you in all obey her,
Save when command to your dismission° tends,
And therein you are senseless.°

CLOTEN Senseless? Not so.

[Enter a MESSENGER.]

MESSENGER

So like you,° sir, ambassadors from Rome. 55
The one is Caius Lucius.

CYMBELINE A worthy fellow,

16 give o'er give up 17 good-conceited well-devised
21 Phoebus 'gins Apollo (the sun) begins to 24 winking
Mary-buds closed marigold buds 29–30 consider reward 30 vice flaw 31 horsehairs bowstrings; calves' guts fiddle-strings 32 unpaved unstoned (i.e., castrated) 42 minion darling 46 vantages opportunities 47 Prefer recommend; Frame prepare 48 solicits solicitations 53 dismission rejection 54 senseless insensible 55 So like you if you please

Albeit he comes on angry purpose now.

But that's no fault of his. We must receive him

According to the honor of his sender,

And towards himself, his goodness forespent° on us, 60

We must extend our notice. Our dear son,

When you have given good morning to your mistress,

Attend the queen and us. We shall have need

T'employ you towards this Roman. Come, our queen.

Exeunt [all but CLOTEN].

CLOTEN

If she be up, I'll speak with her; if not, 65
Let her lie still and dream. By your leave, ho!

[Knocks.]

I know her women are about her. What
If I do line° one of their hands? 'Tis gold
Which buys admittance—oft it doth—yea, and makes Diana's rangers° false° themselves, yield up 70
Their deer to th' stand o' th' stealer;° and 'tis gold
Which makes the true man killed and saves the thief, Nay, sometime hangs both thief and true man. What Can it not do and undo? I will make
One of her women lawyer to° me, for 75
I yet not understand° the case myself.
By your leave.

Knocks. Enter a LADY.

LADY

Who's there that knocks?

CLOTEN

A gentleman.

LADY

No more?

CLOTEN

Yes, and a gentlewoman's son.

LADY

That's more

Than some whose tailors are as dear as yours 80
Can justly boast of. What's your lordship's pleasure?

CLOTEN

Your lady's person. Is she ready?°

LADY

Ay,

To keep her chamber.

CLOTEN

There is gold for you.

Sell me your good report.

LADY

How? My good name? Or to report of you 85
What I shall think is good? The princess!

Enter IMOGEN. [Exit LADY.]

CLOTEN

Good morrow, fairest sister. Your sweet hand.

IMOGEN

Good morrow, sir. You lay out too much pains
For purchasing but trouble. The thanks I give
Is telling you that I am poor of thanks 90
And scarce can spare them.

CLOTEN

Still I swear I love you.

IMOGEN

If you but said so, 'twere as deep° with me.

60 forespent having earlier been spent 68 line i.e., with money 70 rangers gamekeepers; false betray 71 stand . . . stealer standing-place of the hunter (quibble on the sense of "erection of the phallus") 75 lawyer to quibble on lower to, i.e., lie down for 76 understand quibble on stand under, i.e., penetrate 82 ready dressed 92 deep effective

If you swear still,^o your recompense is still
That I regard it not.
CLOTEN This is no answer.
IMOGEN
But^o that you shall not say I yield, being silent,
I would not speak. I pray you spare me. Faith,
I shall unfold^o equal discourtesy^o
To your best kindness. One of your great knowing^o
Should learn, being taught, forbearance.
CLOTEN
To leave you in your madness, 'twere my sin.
I will not.
IMOGEN
Fools are not mad folks.
CLOTEN Do you call me fool?
IMOGEN
As I am mad, I do.
If you'll be patient, I'll no more be mad;
That cures us both. I am much sorry, sir,
You put me to forget a lady's manners
By being so verbal;^o and learn now for all
That I, which know my heart, do here pronounce
By th' very truth of it, I care not for you,
And am so near the lack of charity
To accuse myself I hate^o you—which I had rather
You felt than make't my boast.
CLOTEN You sin against Obedience, which you owe your father. For
The contract you pretend^o with that base wretch,
One bred of alms and fostered with cold dishes,
With scraps o' th' court—it is no contract, none.
And though it be allowed in meaner^o parties—
Yet who than he more mean?—to knit their souls,
On whom there is no more dependency^o
But brats and beggary, in self-figured^o knot;
Yet you are curbed from that enlargement^o by
The consequence^o o' th' crown, and must not foil^o
The precious note^o of it with a base slave,
A hilding for^o a livery, a squire's cloth,
A pantler^o—not so eminent.
IMOGEN Profane fellow!
Wert thou the son of Jupiter, and no more
But what thou art besides, thou wert too base
To be his groom. Thou wert dignified^o enough,
Even to the point of envy, if 'twere made
Comparative for your virtues to be styled
The under-hangman of his kingdom,^o and hated
For being preferred^o so well.
CLOTEN The south fog^o rot him!
IMOGEN
He never can meet more mischance than come
To be but named of thee. His meanest garment

93 still continually 95 But so 97 unfold display; equal discourtesy i.e., discourtesy equal 98 knowing knowledge 107 verbal talkative 111 To . . . hate that I accuse myself of hating 113–14 For . . . pretend as for the marriage contract you claim 117 meaner lower-ranking 119 dependency retinue 120 self-figured shaped by one's self 121 enlargement freedom 122 consequence importance; foil defile 123 note eminence, importance 124 hilding for good-for-nothing fit only for 125 pantler pantry-servant 128 dignified given honor 129–31 if . . . kingdom if, according to the virtue of each of you, you were made underhangman and he king (Heilman) 132 preferred advanced;
south fog the damp, supposedly unhealthy, south wind

That ever hath but clipped^o his body is dearer 135
In my respect^o than all the hairs above thee,
Were they all made such men. How now, Pisanio?

Enter PISANIO.

95 CLOTEN
"His garment"? Now the devil—
IMOGEN
To Dorothy my woman hie thee presently.^o
CLOTEN
100 "His garment"?
IMOGEN I am sprited^o with a fool, 140
Frighted, and angered worse. Go bid my woman
Search for a jewel that too casually
Hath left mine arm. It was thy master's. Shrew^o me
If I would lose it for a revenue
Of any king's in Europe. I do think 145
I saw't this morning; confident I am
105 Last night 'twas on mine arm; I kissed it.
I hope it be not gone to tell my lord
That I kiss aught but he.
PISANIO 'Twill not be lost.
IMOGEN
110 I hope so.^o Go and search. [Exit PISANIO.]
CLOTEN You have abused me. 150
"His meanest garment"?
IMOGEN Ay, I said so, sir.
If you will make't an action,^o call witness to't.
CLOTEN
115 I will inform your father.
IMOGEN Your mother too.
She's my good lady and will conceive,^o I hope,
But the worst of me. So I leave you, sir, 155
To th' worst of discontent. Exit.
120 CLOTEN I'll be revenged.
"His meanest garment"? Well. Exit.^o

Scene IV. [Rome.]

125 POSTHUMUS
Fear it not, sir. I would I were so sure
To win the king as I am bold^o her honor
Will remain hers.
PHILARIO What means^o do you make to him?
130 POSTHUMUS
Not any, but abide the change of time,
Quake in the present winter's state, and wish 5
That warmer days would come. In these feared^o hopes
I barely gratify^o your love; they failing,
I must die much your debtor.
PHILARIO
Your very goodness and your company
O'er pays all I can do. By this,^o your king 10
Hath heard of great Augustus; Caius Lucius
Will do's commission throughly. And I think He'll grant the tribute, send th' arrearages,

135 clipped embraced 136 respect regard 139 presently immediately 140 sprited haunted 143 Shrew curse 150 so i.e., not 152 action lawsuit 154 conceive come to believe 157 s.d. Exit by the other door
II.iv.2 bold confident 3 means overtures 6 feared fear-laden 7 gratify repay 10 this this time

Or look upon our Romans, whose remembrance
Is yet fresh in their grief.

POSTHUMUS I do believe, 15
Statist° though I am none, nor like to be,
That this will prove a war; and you shall hear
The legions now in Gallia sooner landed
In our not-fearing Britain than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid. Our countrymen 20
Are men more ordered than when Julius Caesar
Smiled at their lack of skill but found their courage
Worthy his frowning at. Their discipline,
Now mingled with their courages, will make known
To their approvers° they are people such 25
That mend upon° the world.

Enter IACHIMO.

PHILARIO See, Iachimo!

POSTHUMUS
The swiftest harts have posted° you by land,
And winds of all the corners° kissed your sails
To make your vessel nimble.

PHILARIO Welcome, sir.

POSTHUMUS
I hope the briefness of your answer° made 30
The speediness of your return.

IACHIMO Your lady
Is one of the fairest that I have looked upon.

POSTHUMUS
And therewithal the best, or let her beauty
Look through a casement to allure false hearts
And be false with them.

IACHIMO Here are letters° for you. 35

POSTHUMUS
Their tenor good, I trust.

IACHIMO 'Tis very like.

POSTHUMUS
Was Caius Lucius in the Briton court
When you were there?

IACHIMO He was expected then,
But not approached.

POSTHUMUS All is well yet.
Sparkles this stone as it was wont, or is't not 40
Too dull for your good wearing?

IACHIMO If I have lost it,
I should have lost the worth of it in gold.
I'll make a journey twice as far t' enjoy
A second night of such sweet shortness which
Was mine in Britain—for the ring is won. 45

POSTHUMUS
The stone's too hard to come by.

IACHIMO Not a whit,
Your lady being so easy.

POSTHUMUS Make not, sir,
Your loss your sport. I hope you know that we Must not continue friends.

IACHIMO Good sir, we must, 50
If you keep covenant. Had I not brought
The knowledge° of your mistress home, I grant

We were to question° farther, but I now
Profess myself the winner of her honor,
Together with your ring, and not the wronger
Of her or you, having proceeded but 55
By both your wills.

POSTHUMUS If you can make't apparent
That you have tasted her in bed, my hand
And ring is yours. If not, the foul opinion
You had of her pure honor gains or loses
Your sword or mine, or masterless leave° both 60
To who shall find them.

IACHIMO Sir, my circumstances,°
Being so near the truth as I will make them,
Must first induce you to believe; whose strength
I will confirm with oath, which I doubt not You'll give me leave to spare° when you shall find 65
You need it not.

POSTHUMUS Proceed.

IACHIMO First, her bedchamber—
Where I confess I slept not, but profess
Had that was well worth watching°—it was hanged
With tapestry of silk and silver; the story
Proud Cleopatra, when she met her Roman° 70
And Cydnus swelled above the banks, or° for
The press of boats or pride: a piece of work
So bravely° done, so rich, that it did strive
In workmanship and value;° which I wondered Could be so rarely and exactly wrought, 75
Since the true life on't was—

POSTHUMUS This is true,
And this you might have heard of here, by me
Or by some other.

IACHIMO More particulars
Must justify° my knowledge.

POSTHUMUS So they must,
Or do your honor injury.

IACHIMO The chimney° 80
Is south the chamber, and the chimney-piece°
Chaste Dian bathing. Never saw I figures
So likely to report° themselves. The cutter°
Was as another Nature, dumb;° outwent° her,
Motion and breath left out.

POSTHUMUS This is a thing 85
Which you might from relation° likewise reap,
Being, as it is, much spoke of.

IACHIMO The roof o' th' chamber
With golden cherubins is fretted.° Her andirons—
I had forgot them—were two winking° Cupids
Of silver, each on one foot standing, nicely 90
Depending on their brands.°

POSTHUMUS This is her honor!
Let it be granted you have seen all this—and praise

16 Statist politician 25 approvers testers 26 That mend upon whose reputation grows with 27 have posted must have sped 28 corners i.e., of the earth 30 your answer the answer you received 35 are letters is a letter 51 knowledge carnal knowledge

52 question dispute (as in a duel) 60 leave let it leave 61 circumstances details 65 spare omit 68 watching remaining awake for 70 Roman Antony 71 or either 73 bravely finely 73-74 it . . . value it was doubtful whether the workmanship or the intrinsic value was greater 79 justify prove 80 chimney fireplace 81 chimney-piece sculpture placed over the fireplace 83 likely to report apt to identify; cutter sculptor 84 as . . . dumb like Nature in creative power although unable to make the sculpture speak; outwent surpassed 86 relation report 88 fretted carved 89 winking with closed eyes, i.e., blind 91 Depending . . . brands leaning on their torches

Be given to your remembrance—the description
Of what is in her chamber nothing saves
The wager you have laid.

IACHIMO Then, if you can

[Showing the bracelet.]

Be pale,° I beg but leave to air this jewel. See!
And now 'tis up° again. It must be married
To that your diamond; I'll keep them.

POSTHUMUS Jove!

Once more let me behold it. Is it that
Which I left with her?

IACHIMO Sir, I thank her, that.

She stripped it from her arm; I see her yet.
Her pretty action did outsell° her gift,
And yet enriched it too. She gave it me and said
She prized it once.

POSTHUMUS May be she plucked it off
To send it me.

IACHIMO She writes so to you, doth she?

POSTHUMUS
O, no, no, no, 'tis true. Here, take this too.

[Giving the ring.]

It is a basilisk° unto mine eye,
Kills me to look on't. Let there be no honor
Where there is beauty; truth, where semblance; love,
Where there's another man. The vows of women
Of no more bondage be to where they are made
Than they are to their virtues, which is nothing.°
O, above measure false!

PHILARIO Have patience, sir,
And take your ring again; 'tis not yet won.
It may be probable° she lost it, or
Who knows if one° her women, being corrupted,
Hath stol'n it from her?

POSTHUMUS Very true,
And so I hope he came by't. Back my ring;
Render to me some corporal sign about her
More evident° than this, for this was stol'n.

IACHIMO By Jupiter, I had it from her arm.

POSTHUMUS Hark you, he swears; by Jupiter he swears.
'Tis true—nay, keep the ring—'tis true. I am sure
She would not lose it. Her attendants are All sworn° and honorable. They induced to steal it?
And by a stranger? No, he hath enjoyed her.
The cognizance° of her incontinency
Is this.° She hath bought the name of whore thus dearly.

There, take thy hire,° and all the fiends of hell
Divide themselves between you!

PHILARIO Sir, be patient.

This is not strong enough to be believed
Of one persuaded° well of.

POSTHUMUS Never talk on't.
She hath been colted° by him.

IACHIMO If you seek
For further satisfying, under her breast—
Worthy the pressing—lies a mole, right proud
Of that most delicate lodging. By my life,
I kissed it, and it gave me present° hunger
To feed again, though full. You do remember
This stain° upon her?

POSTHUMUS Ay, and it doth confirm
Another stain,° as big as hell can hold,
Were there no more but it.

IACHIMO Will you hear more?

POSTHUMUS Spare your arithmetic; never count the turns.
Once, and a million!

IACHIMO I'll be sworn.

POSTHUMUS No swearing.
If you will swear you have not done't, you lie,
And I will kill thee if thou dost deny
Thou'st made me cuckold.

IACHIMO I'll deny nothing.

POSTHUMUS O that I had her here, to tear her limb-meal!
I will go there and do't i' th' court, before
Her father. I'll do something. Exit.

PHILARIO Quite besides
The government° of patience! You have won.
Let's follow him and pervert° the present wrath
He hath against himself.

IACHIMO With all my heart. Exeunt.

[Scene V. Rome.]

Enter POSTHUMUS.

POSTHUMUS Is there no way for men to be,° but women
Must be half-workers?° We are all bastards,
And that most venerable man which I Did call my father was I know not where
When I was stamped.° Some coiner° with his tools
Made me a counterfeit; yet my mother seemed
The Dian° of that time. So doth my wife
The nonpareil° of this. O, vengeance, vengeance!
Me of my lawful pleasure she restrained
And prayed me oft forbearance—did it with
A pudency° so rosy, the sweet view on't°
Might well have warmed old Saturn°—that I thought her
As chaste as unsunned snow. O, all the devils!
This yellow° Iachimo in an hour, was't not?
Or less? At first?° Perchance he spoke not, but,

96 Be pale remain unflushed, i.e., calm 97 up put up, pocketed 102 outsell exceed in value 107 basilisk monster supposedly capable of killing by look 110–12 The vows . . . nothing Let the vows of women be no more binding to the recipients of them than women are bound to their own virtues—which is not at all (Nosworthy) 115 probable provable 116 one one of 120 evident conclusive 125 sworn i.e., to loyalty 127 cognizance badge 128 this the bracelet 129 hire reward

132 persuaded that we are persuaded to think 133 colted possessed sexually 137 present immediate 139 stain mark 140 stain corruption 147 limb-meal limb from limb 150 government control 151 pervert divert II.v.1 be exist 2 half-workers i.e., in begetting 5 stamped minted; coiner counterfeiter 7 Dian Diana (goddess of chastity) 8 nonpareil one without equal 11 pudency modesty; on't of it 12 Saturn considered to be cold and gloomy 14 yellow i.e., of complexion 15 At first immediately

Like a full-acorned° boar, a German one,
 Cried "O!" and mounted; found no opposition
 But what he looked for should oppose and she Should from encounter guard. Could I find out
 The woman's part in me! For there's no motion° 20
 That tends to vice in man but I affirm
 It is the woman's part. Be it lying, note it,
 The woman's; flattering, hers; deceiving, hers;
 Lust and rank° thoughts, hers, hers; revenges, hers;
 Ambitions, covetings, change of prides,° disdain, 25
 Nice° longing, slanders, mutability,°
 All faults that have a name, nay, that hell knows,
 Why, hers, in part or all, but rather all.
 For even to vice
 They are not constant, but are changing still 30
 One vice but of a minute old for one
 Not half so old as that. I'll write against them,
 Detest them, curse them. Yet 'tis greater skill°
 In a true hate to pray they have their will;
 The very devils cannot plague them better. Exit. 35

A C T I I I

Scene I. [Britain.]

Enter in state CYMBELINE, QUEEN, CLOTEN, and LORDS at one door and, at another, Caius LUCIUS and ATTENDANTS.

CYMBELINE

Now say, what would Augustus Caesar with us?

LUCIUS

When Julius Caesar, whose remembrance yet
 Lives in men's eyes and will to ears and tongues
 Be theme and hearing ever, was in this Britain
 And conquered it, Cassibelan thine uncle, 5
 Famous in Caesar's praises no whit less
 Than in his feats deserving it, for him
 And his succession granted Rome a tribute,
 Yearly three thousand pounds, which by thee lately
 Is left untendered.

QUEEN And, to kill the marvel,° 10
 Shall be so ever.

CLOTEN There be many Caesars
 Ere such another Julius. Britain's a world
 By itself, and we will nothing pay
 For wearing our own noses.

QUEEN That opportunity 15
 Which then they had to take from's, to resume
 We have again. Remember, sir, my liege,
 The kings your ancestors, together with
 The natural bravery of your isle, which stands
 As Neptune's park, ribbèd° and palèd° in
 With rocks unscalable and roaring waters, 20
 With sands that will not bear your enemies' boats
 But suck them up to th' topmast. A kind of conquest

16 full-acorned fed full with acorns 20 motion impulse
 24 rank lascivious 25 change of prides varying extravagances 26 Nice wanton; mutability inconstancy 33 skill reason

III.i.10 kill the marvel end the astonishment (caused by nonpayment) 19 ribbèd enclosed; palèd fenced

Caesar made here, but made not here his brag
 Of "Came and saw and overcame." With shame,
 The first that ever touched him, he was carried 25
 From off our coast, twice beaten; and his shipping,
 Poor ignorant° baubles on our terrible seas,
 Like eggshells moved upon their surges, cracked
 As easily 'gainst our rocks. For joy whereof
 The famed Cassibelan, who was once at point°— 30
 O giglot° Fortune!—to master° Caesar's sword,
 Made Lud's Town° with rejoicing fires bright
 And Britons strut with courage.

CLOTEN Come, there's no more tribute to be paid.
 Our kingdom is stronger than it was at that time, and, 35 as I said, there is no moe° such Caesars. Other of them may have crooked° noses, but to owe° such straight arms, none.

CYMBELINE

Son, let your mother end.

CLOTEN We have yet many among us can gripe° as 40 hard as Cassibelan. I do not say I am one, but I have a hand. Why tribute? Why should we pay tribute? If Caesar can hide the sun from us with a blanket or put the moon in his pocket, we will pay him tribute for light; else, sir, no more tribute, pray you now. 45

CYMBELINE

You must know,
 Till the injurious° Romans did extort
 This tribute from us, we were free. Caesar's ambition,
 Which swelled so much that it did almost stretch
 The sides o' th' world, against all color° here 50
 Did put the yoke upon's; which to shake off
 Becomes a warlike people, whom we reckon
 Ourselves to be. We do say then to Caesar,
 Our ancestor was that Mulmutius which
 Ordained our laws, whose use the sword of Caesar 55
 Hath too much mangled, whose repair and franchise°
 Shall, by the power we hold, be our good deed, Though Rome be therefore angry. Mulmutius made our laws,
 Who was the first of Britain which did put
 His brows within a golden crown and called 60
 Himself a king.

LUCIUS I am sorry, Cymbeline,
 That I am to pronounce Augustus Caesar—
 Caesar, that hath moe kings his° servants than Thyself domestic officers—thine enemy. 65
 Receive it from me then: war and confusion°
 In Caesar's name pronounce I 'gainst thee. Look
 For fury not to be resisted. Thus defied,
 I thank thee for myself.

CYMBELINE Thou art welcome, Caius.
 Thy Caesar knighted me; my youth I spent Much under him; of him I gathered honor, 70
 Which he to seek° of me again, perforce,
 Behooves me keep at utterance.° I am perfect°

27 ignorant inexperienced 30 at point at the point 31
 giglot wanton; to master of mastering 32 Lud's Town
 London 36 moe more 37 crooked i.e., Roman; owe own 40 gripe grasp 47 injurious insulting 50 against all color without any right 56 franchise free exercise 63 his as his 65 confusion destruction 71 he to seek his seeking 72 keep at utterance defend to the last ditch; perfect well aware

That the Pannonians and Dalmatians° for
 Their liberties are now in arms, a precedent
 Which not to read would show the Britons cold.° 75
 So Caesar shall not find them.

LUCIUS Let proof° speak.

CLOTEN His majesty bids you welcome. Make pastime with us a day or two, or longer. If you seek us afterwards in other terms, you shall find us in our saltwater girdle; if you beat us out of it, it is yours. If you 80 fall in the adventure, our crows shall fare the better for you, and there's an end.

LUCIUS So, sir.

CYMBELINE

I know your master's pleasure, and he mine.
 All the remain° is, welcome. Exeunt. 85

Scene II. [Britain.]

Enter PISANIO, reading of a letter.

PISANIO

How? of adultery? Wherefore write you not
 What monsters her accuse? Leonatus,
 Of master, what a strange° infection
 Is fall'n into thy ear! What false Italian,
 As poisonous-tongued as handed, hath prevailed 5
 On thy too ready hearing? Disloyal? No.
 She's punished for her truth° and undergoes,°
 More goddesslike than wifelike, such assaults
 As would take in° some virtue. O my master,
 Thy mind to° her is now as low as were 10
 Thy fortunes. How? That I should murder her,
 Upon the love and truth and vows which I
 Have made to thy command? I her? Her blood?
 If it be so to do good service, never Let me be counted serviceable. How look I 15
 That I should seem to lack humanity
 So much as this fact° comes to? [Reading.] "Do't! The letter
 That I have sent her, by her own command
 Shall give thee opportunity." O damned paper,
 Black as the ink that's on thee! Senseless° bauble, 20
 Art thou a fedary for° this act, and look'st
 So virginlike without? Lo, here she comes.

Enter IMOGEN.

I am ignorant in° what I am commanded.

IMOGEN

How now, Pisanio?

PISANIO

Madam, here is a letter from my lord. 25

IMOGEN

Who, thy lord? That is my lord Leonatus?

O, learn'd indeed were that astronomer°

That knew the stars as I his characters;°

73 Pannonians and Dalmatians inhabitants of present-day
 Hungary and Yugoslavia 75 cold deficient in spirit 76 proof experience 85 the remain that remains
 III.ii.3 strange foreign 7 truth fidelity; undergoes endures
 9 take in conquer 10 to compared with 17 fact crime 20
 Senseless inanimate 21 fedary for accomplice in 23 am ignorant in will pretend ignorance of 27 astronomer astrologer 28 characters handwriting

He'd lay the future open. You good gods,
 Let what is here contained relish of love, 30
 Of my lord's health, of his content—yet not°
 That we two are asunder; let that grieve him.
 Some griefs are med'cinable;° that is one of them,
 For it doth physic love°—of his content
 All but in that. Good wax, thy leave. Blest be 35
 You bees that make these locks of counsel.° Lovers
 And men in dangerous bonds° pray not alike;
 Though forfeiters° you cast in prison, yet
 You clasp young Cupid's tables.° Good news, gods!

[Reading.]

"Justice and your father's wrath, should he take me in 40 his dominion, could not be so cruel to me as° you, O the dearest of creatures, would even renew me with your eyes. Take notice that I am in Cambria° at Milford Haven. What your own love will out of this advise you, follow. So he wishes you all happiness, 45 that remains loyal to his vow, and your increasing in love. Leonatus Posthumus."

O, for a horse with wings! Hear'st thou, Pisanio?
 He is at Milford Haven. Read, and tell me
 How far 'tis thither. If one of mean affairs° 50
 May plod it in a week, why may not I
 Glide thither in a day? Then, true Pisanio,
 Who long'st like me to see thy lord, who long'st—
 O, let me bate°—but not like me, yet long'st,
 But in a fainter kind—O, not like me! 55
 For mine's beyond beyond: say, and speak thick°—
 Love's counselor should fill the bores of hearing,°
 To th' smothering of the sense—how far it is
 To this same blessed Milford. And by th' way°
 Tell me how Wales was made so happy as 60
 T' inherit such a haven. But first of all,
 How we may steal from hence, and for the gap
 That we shall make in time from our hence-going
 And our return, to excuse. But first, how get hence?
 Why should excuse be born or ere begot?° 65
 We'll talk of that hereafter. Prithee speak,
 How many score of miles may we well rid°
 'Twixt hour and hour?

PISANIO One score 'twixt sun and sun,
 Madam, 's enough for you, and too much too.

IMOGEN

Why, one that rode to's execution, man, 70
 Could never go so slow. I have heard of riding wagers
 Where horses have been nimbler than the sands
 That run i' th' clock's behalf.° But this is fool'ry.
 Go bid my woman feign a sickness, say
 She'll home to her father; and provide me presently° 75
 A riding suit, no costlier than would fit

31 not not content 33 med'cinable curative 34 physic love keep love healthy 36 locks of counsel waxen seals 37 in dangerous bonds under contracts imposing penalties 38 forfeiters contract-violators 39 tables notebooks 41 as but that 43 Cambria Wales 50 mean affairs ordinary business 54 bate abate, modify (the statement) 56 thick profusely 57 bores of hearing ears 59 by th' way on the way 65 or ere begot i.e., before conception (of the deed that makes excuse necessary) 67 rid cover 73 i' . . . behalf in place of a clock 75 presently immediately

A franklin's° housewife.°

ISANIO Madam, you're best consider.

IMOGEN

I see before me,° man. Nor here, nor here,°
Nor what ensues,° but have a fog in them
That I cannot look through. Away, I prithee; 80
Do as I bid thee. There's no more to say.
Accessible is none but Milford way. Exeunt [severally].

Scene III. [Wales.]

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

BELARIUS

A goodly day not to keep house with such
Whose roof's as low as ours! Stoop, boys. This gate°
Instructs you how t'adore the heavens and bows you°
To a morning's holy office. The gates of monarchs
Are arched so high that giants may jet° through 5
And keep their impious turbans on without Good morrow to the sun. Hail, thou fair heaven!
We house i' th' rock, yet use thee not so hardly°
As prouder livers do.

GUIDERIUS Hail, heaven!

ARVIRAGUS Hail, heaven!

BELARIUS

Now for our mountain sport. Up to yond hill; 10
Your legs are young. I'll tread these flats. Consider,
When you above perceive me like a crow,
That it is place° which lessens and sets off,°
And you may then revolve what tales I have told you
Of courts, of princes, of the tricks in war. 15
This° service is not service, so being done,
But being so allowed.° To apprehend thus
Draws us a profit from all things we see,
And often, to our comfort, shall we find
The sharded° beetle in a safer hold° 20
Than is the full-winged eagle. O, this life
Is nobler than attending for a check,°
Richer than doing nothing for a bribe,
Prouder than rustling in unpaid-for silk:
Such gain the cap° of him that makes him fine° 25
Yet keeps his book uncrossed.° No life to ours.

GUIDERIUS

Out of your proof° you speak. We poor unfledged
Have never winged from view o' th' nest, nor know
not
What air's from home. Haply this life is best
If quiet life be best, sweeter to you 30
That have a sharper known, well corresponding With your stiff age; but unto us it is
A cell of ignorance, traveling abed,°

77 franklin small landowner; housewife pronounced "huzzif"
78 before me i.e., what is immediately ahead; Nor here, nor here neither to this side nor that 79 what ensues the eventual outcome

III.iii.2 This gate one of the tiring-house doors (representing the "cave") 3 bows you makes you bow 5 jet strut 8 hardly badly 13 place position; sets off displays to advantage 16 This any particular 17 allowed approved 20 sharded provided with wing-cases; hold stronghold 22 attending
. . . check doing service at court only to receive a rebuke 25 gain the cap win approval; makes him fine dresses elegantly 26 keeps . . . uncrossed does not cancel the debts in his account book 27 proof experience 33 abed i.e., in imagination

A prison, or a debtor that not dares
To stride a limit.°

ARVIRAGUS What should we speak of 35
When we are old as you? When we shall hear
The rain and wind beat dark December, how
In this our pinching° cave shall we discourse
The freezing hours away? We have seen nothing.
We are beastly:° subtle as the fox for prey, 40
Like° warlike as the wolf for what we eat.
Our valor is to chase what flies. Our cage
We make a choir, as doth the prisoned bird,
And sing our bondage freely.

BELARIUS

How you speak!

Did you but know the city's usuries 45
And felt them knowingly; the art o' th' court,
As hard to leave as keep,° whose top to climb
Is certain falling, or so slipp'ry that
The fear's as bad as falling; the toil o' th' war,
A pain° that only seems to seek out danger 50
I' th' name of fame and honor, which dies i' th' search
And hath as oft a sland'rous epitaph
As record of fair act; nay, many times
Doth ill deserve° by doing well; what's worse,
Must curtsy at the censure. O boys, this story 55
The world may read in me. My body's marked
With Roman swords, and my report° was once
First with the best of note.° Cymbeline loved me,
And when a soldier was the theme, my name
Was not far off. Then was I as a tree 60
Whose boughs did bend with fruit. But in one night
A storm or robbery, call it what you will,
Shook down my mellow hangings,° nay, my leaves,
And left me bare to weather.

GUIDERIUS Uncertain favor!

BELARIUS

My fault being nothing, as I have told you oft, 65
But that two villains, whose false oaths prevailed
Before my perfect honor, swore to Cymbeline
I was confederate with the Romans. So
Followed my banishment, and this twenty years
This rock and these demesnes have been my world, 70
Where I have lived at honest freedom, paid
More pious debts to heaven than in all
The fore-end° of my time. But up to th' mountains!
This is not hunters' language. He that strikes
The venison first shall be the lord o' th' feast; 75
To him the other two shall minister,
And we will fear no poison, which attends°
In place of greater state. I'll meet you in the valleys.

Exeunt [GUIDERIUS and ARVIRAGUS].

How hard it is to hide the sparks of nature!
These boys know little they are sons to th' king, 80
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive.
They think they are mine, and though trained up thus meanly
I' th' cave wherein they bow, their thoughts do hit
The roofs of palaces, and nature prompts them
In simple and low things to prince it much 85

35 stride a limit step over a boundary 38 pinching distressingly cold 40 beastly beastlike 41 Like as 47 keep remain at 50 pain labor 54 deserve earn 57 report reputation 58 note reputation 63 hangings fruit 73 fore-end early part 77 attends is present

Beyond the trick° of others. This Polydore,
 The heir of Cymbeline and Britain, who
 The king his father called Guiderius—Jove!
 When on my three-foot stool I sit and tell
 The warlike feats I have done, his spirits fly out 90
 Into my story; say, “Thus mine enemy fell,
 And thus I set my foot on’s neck,” even then
 The princely blood flows in his cheek, he sweats,
 Strains his young nerves,° and puts himself in posture
 That acts my words. The younger brother Cadwal, 95
 Once Arviragus, in as like a figure°
 Strikes life into my speech and shows much more [Horn.]

His own conceiving.° Hark, the game is roused!
 O Cymbeline, heaven and my conscience knows
 Thou didst unjustly banish me; whereon, 100
 At three and two years old, I stole these babes, Thinking to bar thee of succession as Thou refts° me of my lands. Euriphile,
 Thou wast their nurse; they took thee for their mother,
 And every day do honor to her grave. 105
 Myself, Belarius, that am Morgan called,
 They take for natural father. The game is up.° Exit.

Scene IV. [Wales.]

Enter PISANIO and IMOGEN.

IMOGEN

Thou told’st me, when we came from horse, the place
 Was near at hand. Ne’er longed my mother so
 To see me first as I have° now. Pisanio, man,
 Where is Posthumus? What is in thy mind
 That makes thee stare thus? Wherefore breaks that sigh 5
 From th’ inward of thee? One but painted thus
 Would be interpreted a thing perplexed°
 Beyond self-explication. Put thyself
 Into a havior° of less fear, ere wildness°
 Vanquish my staid senses. What’s the matter?° 10
 Why tender’st thou that paper to me with
 A look untender? If’t be summer news,
 Smile to’t before; if winterly, thou need’st
 But keep that count’nance still. My husband’s hand?
 That drug-damned Italy hath outcraftied° him, 15
 And he’s at some hard point.° Speak, man! Thy tongue
 May take off some extremity,° which to read
 Would be even mortal to me.

PISANIO

Please you read,
 And you shall find me, wretched man, a thing
 The most disdained of fortune. 20

IMOGEN (Reads.) “Thy mistress, Pisanio, hath played the strumpet in my bed, the testimonies whereof lies bleeding in me. I speak not out of weak surmises, but from proof as strong as my grief and as certain as I expect my revenge. That part thou, Pisanio, must act 25 for me, if thy faith be not tainted with the breach of hers. Let thine own hands take away her life. I shall give thee opportunity at Milford Haven—she hath my letter for the purpose—where, if thou fear to strike and to make me certain it is done, thou art the pander 30 to her dishonor and equally to me disloyal.”

PISANIO

What shall I need to draw my sword? The paper
 Hath cut her throat already. No, ’tis slander,
 Whose edge is sharper than the sword, whose tongue
 Outvenoms all the worms° of Nile, whose breath 35
 Rides on the posting° winds and doth belie°
 All corners of the world. Kings, queens, and states,° Maids, matrons, nay, the secrets of the grave
 This viperous slander enters. What cheer, madam?

IMOGEN

False to his bed? What is it to be false? 40
 To lie in watch° there and to think on him?
 To weep ’twixt clock and clock?° If sleep charge° nature,
 To break it with a fearful° dream of him
 And cry myself awake? That’s false to’s bed, is it?

PISANIO

Alas, good lady! 45

IMOGEN

I false? Thy° conscience witness! Iachimo,
 Thou didst accuse him of incontinency.
 Thou then looked’st like a villain; now, methinks,
 Thy favor’s° good enough. Some jay° of Italy,
 Whose mother was her painting,° hath betrayed him. 50
 Poor I am stale, a garment out of fashion,
 And, for I am richer than to hang by th’ walls,°
 I must be ripped. To pieces with me! O,
 Men’s vows are women’s traitors! All good seeming,°
 By thy revolt,° O husband, shall be thought 55
 Put on for villainy, not born where’t grows,°
 But worn a bait for ladies.

PISANIO

Good madam, hear me.

IMOGEN

True honest men, being heard° like false Aeneas,° 60
 Were in his time thought false, and Sinon’s° weeping
 Did scandal° many a holy tear, took pity
 From most true wretchedness. So thou, Posthumus,
 Wilt lay the leaven on all proper men;°
 Goodly° and gallant shall be false and perjured
 From thy great fail.° Come, fellow, be thou honest;
 Do thou thy master’s bidding. When thou see’st him, 65
 A little witness my obedience. Look,
 I draw the sword myself. Take it, and hit
 The innocent mansion of my love, my heart.
 Fear not, ’tis empty of all things but grief.
 Thy master is not there, who was indeed 70

86 trick capacity 94 nerves sinews 96 in . . . figure playing his part equally well 98 conceiving interpretation 103 refts robbed 107 up roused

III.iv.3 have i.e., have longing (to see Posthumus) 7 perplexed troubled 9 havior appearance; wildness panic 10 matter business 15 outcraftied outwitted 16 at . . . point in some difficult situation 17 take . . . extremity lessen the shock

35 worms serpents 36 posting speeding; belie fill with lies 37 states lords 41 in watch awake 42 ’twixt . . . clock from hour to hour; charge burden 43 fearful frightening 46 Thy Posthumus’ 49 favor appearance; jay whore 50 Whose . . . painting i.e., dependent on make-up 52 for . . .
walls i.e., since I am too valuable to be set aside 54 seeming appearance 55 revolt turning away 56 not . . . grows
 i.e., transplanted (hence assumed) 58 heard heard to speak; Aeneas who jilted Dido 59 Sinon who persuaded Troy to admit the Trojan horse 60 scandal make disreputable 62 lay . . . men cause all honorable men to be thought corrupt
 63 Goodly handsome 64 fail failure

The riches of it. Do his bidding, strike!
Thou mayst be valiant in a better cause,
But now thou seem'st a coward.

PISANIO Hence, vile instrument!
Thou shalt not damn my hand.

IMOGEN Why, I must die,
And if I do not by thy hand, thou art 75
No servant of thy master's. Against self-slaughter
There is a prohibition so divine
That cravens° my weak hand. Come, here's my heart—
Something's° afore't; soft,° soft, we'll no defense—
Obedient° as the scabbard. What is here? 80
The scriptures° of the loyal Leonatus
All turned to heresy? Away, away,
Corrupters of my faith! You shall no more
Be stomachers° to my heart. Thus may poor fools
Believe false teachers. Though those that are betrayed 85
Do feel the treason sharply, yet the traitor
Stands in worse case of woe.
And thou, Posthumus, that didst set up
My disobedience 'gainst the king my father
And make me put into contempt the suits 90
Of princely fellows, shalt hereafter find
It is no act of common passage, but
A strain of rareness;° and I grieve myself
To think, when thou shalt be disedged° by her
That now thou tirest° on, how thy memory 95
Will then be panged° by me. Prithee dispatch,
The lamb entreats the butcher. Where's thy knife?
Thou art too slow to do thy master's bidding
When I desire it too.

PISANIO O gracious lady,
Since I received command to do this business 100
I have not slept one wink.

IMOGEN Do't, and to bed then.

PISANIO I'll wake mine eyeballs out° first.

IMOGEN Wherefore then
Didst undertake it? Why hast thou abused
So many miles with a pretense? This place?
Mine action and thine own? Our horses' labor? 105
The time inviting thee? The perturbed court
For my being absent? whereunto I never Purpose return. Why hast thou gone so far,
To be unbent° when thou hast ta'en thy stand,°
Th' elected° deer before thee?

PISANIO But to win time 110
To lose so bad employment, in the which I have considered of a course. Good lady,
Hear me with patience.

IMOGEN Talk thy tongue weary, speak.
I have heard I am a strumpet, and mine ear,
Therein false struck, can take no greater wound, 115

78 cravens makes cowardly 79 Something Posthumus' letter; soft wait 80 Obedient i.e., as ready to receive the sword 81 scriptures writings 84 stomachers ornamental cloth worn under lacing of the bodice (she has been holding the letter against her breast) 92–93 It . . . rareness i.e., my choice of you was not an everyday matter but resulted from rare qualities 94 be disedged have lost the edge (of appetite) 95 tirest feedest ravenously (hawking term) 96 panged tormented 102 wake . . . out remain awake till my eyes drop out 109 unbent with bow unbent, unprepared; stand hunting station 110 elected chosen

Nor tent to bottom that.° But speak.

PISANIO Then, madam,
I thought you would not back° again.

IMOGEN Most like,
Bringing me here to kill me.

PISANIO Not so, neither.
But if I were as wise as honest, then
My purpose would prove well. It cannot be 120
But that my master is abused.° Some villain,
Ay, and singular° in his art, hath done you both
This cursèd injury.

IMOGEN Some Roman courtesan.°

PISANIO No, on my life:
I'll give but notice you are dead, and send him 125
Some bloody sign of it,° for 'tis commanded
I should do so. You shall be missed at court,
And that will well confirm it.

IMOGEN Why, good fellow,
What shall I do the while? Where bide? How live?
Or in my life what comfort when I am 130
Dead to my husband?

PISANIO If you'll back to th' court—

IMOGEN No court, no father, nor no more ado
With that harsh, noble, simple nothing,
That Cloten, whose love suit hath been to me
As fearful as a siege.

PISANIO If not at court, 135
Then not in Britain must you bide.

IMOGEN Where then?
Hath Britain all the sun that shines? Day, night,
Are they not but° in Britain? I' th' world's volume
Our Britain seems as of it, but not in't;° 140
In a great pool a swan's nest. Prithee think There's livers out of Britain.

PISANIO I am most glad
You think of other place. Th' ambassador,
Lucius the Roman, comes to Milford Haven
Tomorrow. Now if you could wear a mind
Dark° as your fortune is, and but disguise 145
That° which, t' appear itself,° must not yet be
But by self-danger, you should tread a course Pretty and full of view;° yea, haply,° near
The residence of Posthumus, so nigh, at least,
That though his actions were not visible, yet 150
Report should render° him hourly to your ear
As truly as he moves.

IMOGEN O, for such means,
Though peril to my modesty,° not death on't,
I would adventure.

PISANIO Well then, here's the point:
You must forget to be a woman; change 155
Command° into obedience, fear and niceness°—
The handmaids of all women, or more truly

116 tent . . . that probe reaching to bottom of the wound
117 back go back 121 abused deceived 122 singular unique 124 courtesan courtier 126 it your death 138 not but only 139 of . . . in't i.e., part of the world yet separated from it 145 Dark inscrutable 146 That her sex; itself as itself 148 full of view with good prospects; haply perhaps 151 render describe 153 modesty chastity 156 Command habit of commanding (as a person of rank); niceness
fastidiousness

CYMBELINE Where is she, sir? How Can her contempt be answered?^o

MESSENGER Please you, sir,
Her chambers are all locked, and there's no answer
That will be given to th' loud of noise we make.

QUEEN
My lord, when last I went to visit her, 45
She prayed me to excuse her keeping close;^o
Whereto constrained by her infirmity,
She should that duty leave unpaid to you
Which daily she was bound to proffer. This
She wished me to make known, but our great court^o 50
Made me to blame in memory.^o

CYMBELINE Her doors locked?
Not seen of late? Grant, heavens, that which I fear Prove false! Exit.

QUEEN Son, I say, follow the king.

CLOTEN
That man of hers, Pisanio, her old servant,
I have not seen these two days.

QUEEN Go, look after. 55
Exit [CLOTEN].

Pisanio, thou that stand'st so for^o Posthumus—
He hath a drug of mine. I pray his absence
Proceed^o by swallowing that, for he believes
It is a thing most precious. But for her,
Where is she gone? Haply despair hath seized her, 60
Or, winged with fervor of her love, she's flown
To her desired Posthumus. Gone she is
To death or to dishonor, and my end
Can make good use of either. She being down,
I have the placing of the British crown. 65

Enter CLOTEN.

How now, my son?

CLOTEN 'Tis certain she is fled.
Go in and cheer the king. He rages; none
Dare come about him.

QUEEN [Aside.] All the better. May
This night forestall^o him of the coming day!
Exit QUEEN.

CLOTEN
I love and hate her, for^o she's fair and royal, 70
And that^o she hath all courtly parts^o more exquisite
Than lady, ladies, woman. From every one
The best she hath, and she, of all compounded, Outsells^o them all. I love her therefore, but Disdaining me and throwing favors on 75
The low Posthumus slanders^o so her judgment
That what's else rare is choked; and in that point
I will conclude to hate her, nay, indeed,
To be revenged upon her. For, when fools
Shall—

Enter PISANIO.

Who is here? What, are you packing,^o sirrah?^o 80
Come hither. Ah, you precious pander! Villain,

42 answered accounted for 46 close to herself 50 our great court i.e., state affairs 51 to . . . memory fail to remember 56 stand'st so for so much supportest 58 Proceed by result from 69 forestall deprive 70 for because 71 that because; parts qualities 74 Outsells outvalues 76 slanders denigrates 80 packing plotting; sirrah term of address to an inferior

Where is thy lady? In a word, or else
Thou art straightway with the fiends.

PISANIO O good my lord!

CLOTEN
Where is thy lady? Or, by Jupiter,
I will not ask again. Close° villain, 85
I'll have this secret from thy heart or rip
Thy heart to find it. Is she with Posthumus?
From whose so many weights of baseness cannot
A dram of worth be drawn.

PISANIO Alas, my lord,
How can she be with him? When was she missed? 90
He is in Rome.

CLOTEN Where is she, sir? Come nearer.°
No farther halting. Satisfy me home°
What is become of her.

PISANIO
O my all-worthy lord!

CLOTEN All-worthy villain!
Discover° where thy mistress is at once, 95
At the next word. No more of "worthy lord"!
Speak, or thy silence on the instant is Thy condemnation and thy death.

PISANIO Then, sir,
This paper° is the history of my knowledge
Touching her flight. [Presenting a letter.]

CLOTEN Let's see't. I will pursue her 100
Even to Augustus' throne.

PISANIO [Aside.] Or° this, or perish.
She's far enough, and what he learns by this
May prove his travel, not her danger.

CLOTEN Hum!

PISANIO [Aside.]
I'll write to my lord she's dead. O Imogen,
Safe mayst thou wander, safe return again! 105

CLOTEN Sirrah, is this letter true?

PISANIO Sir, as I think.

CLOTEN It is Posthumus' hand, I know't. Sirrah, if thou wouldst not be a villain, but do me true service, undergo° those employments wherein I should have 110 cause to use thee with a serious industry—that is, what villainy soe'er I bid thee do, to perform it directly and truly—I would think thee an honest man. Thou shouldst neither want my means for thy relief nor my voice for thy preferment.° 115

PISANIO Well, my good lord.

CLOTEN Wilt thou serve me? For since patiently and constantly thou hast stuck to the bare fortune of that beggar Posthumus, thou canst not, in the course of gratitude, but be a diligent follower of mine. Wilt 120 thou serve me?

PISANIO Sir, I will.

CLOTEN Give me thy hand. Here's my purse. Hast any of thy late master's garments in thy possession?

PISANIO I have, my lord, at my lodging the same suit 125
he wore when he took leave of my lady and mistress.

CLOTEN The first service thou dost me, fetch that suit hither. Let it be thy first service. Go.

PISANIO I shall, my lord. Exit.

85 Close secretive 91 nearer to the point 92 home thoroughly 95 Discover reveal 99 This paper cf. line 130 and V.v.279 101 Or either 110 undergo undertake 115 preferment advancement

CLOTEN Meet thee at Milford Haven! I forgot to ask 130 him one thing; I'll remember't anon. Even there, thou villain Posthumus, will I kill thee. I would these garments were come. She said upon a time—the bitterness of it I now belch from my heart—that she held the very garment of Posthumus in more respect than my noble 135 and natural person, together with the adornment of my qualities. With that suit upon my back will I ravish her; first kill him, and in her eyes. There shall she see my valor, which will then be a torment to her contempt. He on the ground, my speech of insultment° 140 ended on his dead body, and when my lust hath dined —which, as I say, to vex her I will execute in the clothes that she so praised—to the court I'll knock her back,° foot° her home again. She hath despised me rejoicingly, and I'll be merry in my revenge. 145

Enter PISANIO [with the clothes].

Be those the garments?

PISANIO Ay, my noble lord.

CLOTEN How long is't since she went to Milford Haven?

PISANIO She can scarce be there yet. 150

CLOTEN Bring this apparel to my chamber; that is the second thing that I have commanded thee. The third is that thou wilt be a voluntary mute to my design.
Be but duteous, and true preferment shall tender itself to thee. My revenge is now at Milford. Would I had 155 wings to follow it! Come, and be true. Exit.

PISANIO

Thou bid'st me to my loss,° for true to thee
Were to prove false, which I will never be,
To him° that is most true. To Milford go,
And find not her whom thou pursuest. Flow, flow, 160
You heavenly blessings, on her. This fool's speed
Be crossed° with slowness; labor be his meed.° Exit.

Scene VI. [Wales.]

Enter IMOGEN alone [in boy's clothes].

IMOGEN

I see a man's life is a tedious one.
I have tired myself, and for two nights together
Have made the ground my bed. I should be sick
But that my resolution helps me. Milford,
When from the mountain-top Pisanio showed thee, 5
Thou wast within a ken.° O Jove, I think
Foundations° fly the wretched—such, I mean,
Where they should be relieved. Two beggars told me
I could not miss my way. Will poor folks lie,
That have afflictions on them, knowing 'tis 10
A punishment or trial? Yes. No wonder,
When rich ones scarce tell true. To lapse in fulness°
Is sorer° than to lie for need, and falsehood
Is worse in kings than beggars. My dear lord,
Thou art one o' th' false ones. Now I think on thee 15
My hunger's gone, but even° before, I was

140 insultment scornful triumph 143–44 knock her back beat her home 144 foot kick 157 loss i.e., of honor 159 him Posthumus 162 crossed thwarted; meed reward III.vi.6 a ken view 7 Foundations security (quibble on the sense of "hospitals") 12 lapse in fulness i.e., lie when prosperous 13 sorer worse 16 even just

At point° to sink for° food. But what is this?
Here is a path to't. 'Tis some savage hold.°
I were best not call; I dare not call. Yet famine,
Ere clean° it o'erthrow nature, makes it valiant. 20
Plenty and peace breeds cowards; hardness° ever
Of hardness is mother. Ho! Who's here?
If anything that's civil,° speak; if savage,
Take or lend.° Ho! No answer? Then I'll enter.
Best draw my sword, and if mine enemy 25
But fear the sword like me, he'll scarcely look on't.
Such a foe,° good heavens! Exit.°

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

BELARIUS

You, Polydore, have proved best woodman° and
Are master of the feast. Cadwal and I
Will play the cook and servant; 'tis our match.° 30
The sweat of industry would dry and die
But for the end it works to. Come, our stomachs
Will make what's homely° savory. Weariness
Can snore upon the flint when resty° sloth
Finds the down pillow hard. Now peace be here, 35
Poor house, that keep'st thyself.

GUIDERIUS

I am thoroughly weary.

ARVIRAGUS

I am weak with toil, yet strong in appetite.

GUIDERIUS

There is cold meat i' th' cave. We'll browse on that Whilst what we have killed be cooked.

BELARIUS [Looking through door.] Stay, come not in.

But that it eats our victuals, I should think
Here were a fairy. 40

GUIDERIUS

What's the matter,° sir?

BELARIUS

By Jupiter, an angel; or, if not,
An earthly paragon. Behold divineness
No elder than a boy.

Enter IMOGEN.

IMOGEN

Good masters, harm me not. 45
Before I entered here, I called and thought
To have begged or bought what I have took. Good troth,°
I have stol'n naught, nor would not, though I had found
Gold strewed i' th' floor. Here's money for my meat.
I would have left it on the board so soon 50
As I had made my meal, and parted
With pray'rs for the provider.

GUIDERIUS

Money, youth?

ARVIRAGUS

All gold and silver rather turn to dirt,
As 'tis no better reckoned but of those
Who worship dirty gods.

IMOGEN

I see you're angry. 55

17 At point about; for for lack of 18 hold stronghold 20 clean completely 21 hardness hardship 23 civil civilized 24 Take or lend take (what I have) or give (what you will)
27 Such a foe i.e., may I have (if any) such a foe 27 s.d. Exit at this point, since the stage is cleared, F marks a new scene 28 woodman hunter 30 match agreement 33 homely plain 34 resty lazy 41 matter subject (of your remark) 47
Good troth in truth be off, thy mistress enforced,^o thy garments cut to pieces before her face; and all this done, spurn her home to her father, who may haply be a little angry for my so rough usage; but my mother, having power of^o his 20 testiness, shall turn all into my commendations. My horse is tied up safe. Out, sword, and to a sore^o purpose! Fortune put them into my hand. This is the very description of their meeting place, and the fellow dares not deceive me. Exit. 25

Scene II. [Wales.]

Enter BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, and IMOGEN from the cave.

BELARIUS

You are not well. Remain here in the cave;
We'll come to you after hunting.

ARVIRAGUS

Brother, stay here.

Are we not brothers?

IMOGEN

So man and man should be,
But clay and clay^o differs in dignity,^o
Whose dust^o is both alike. I am very sick. 5

GUIDERIUS

Go you to hunting, I'll abide with him.

IMOGEN

So sick I am not, yet I am not well,
But not so citizen^o a wanton^o as
To seem to die ere sick. So please you, leave me;
Stick to your journal^o course; the breach of custom 10
Is breach of all. I am ill, but your being by me
Cannot amend^o me; society is no comfort
To one not sociable. I am not very sick,
Since I can reason of it. Pray you trust me here—
I'll rob none but myself—and let me die, 15
Stealing so poorly.^o

GUIDERIUS

I love thee—I have spoke it—
How much^o the quantity, the weight as much
As I do love my father.

BELARIUS

What? How, how?

ARVIRAGUS

If it be sin to say so, sir, I yoke me
In my good brother's fault. I know not why
I love this youth, and I have heard you say
Love's reason's without reason. The bier at door,
And a demand who is't shall die, I'd say,
"My father, not this youth."

BELARIUS

[Aside.] O noble strain!^o

O worthiness of nature, breed of greatness!
Cowards father cowards and base things sire base;
Nature hath meal and bran, contempt and grace.
I'm not their father; yet who this should be Doth miracle itself, loved before me.^o—
'Tis the ninth hour o' th' morn. 25

ARVIRAGUS

Brother, farewell. 30

IMOGEN

I wish ye sport.

ARVIRAGUS

You health.—So please you,^o sir.

IMOGEN [Aside.]

These are kind creatures. Gods, what lies I have heard!

Our courtiers say all's savage but at court.

Experience, O, thou disprov'st report!

Th' imperious^o seas breeds monsters; for the dish 35

Poor tributary rivers as^o sweet fish.

I am sick still, heartsick. Pisanio,

I'll now taste of thy drug.

GUIDERIUS

I could not stir him.^o

He said he was gentle,^o but unfortunate;

Dishonestly afflicted, but yet honest. 40

ARVIRAGUS

Thus did he answer me, yet said hereafter

I might know more.

BELARIUS

To th' field, to th' field.—

We'll leave you for this time; go in and rest.

ARVIRAGUS

We'll not be long away.

BELARIUS

Pray be not sick,

For you must be our housewife.

IMOGEN

Well or ill, 45

I am bound^o to you. Exit.

BELARIUS

And shalt be ever.

This youth, howe'er distressed, appears^o he hath had Good ancestors.

ARVIRAGUS

How angel-like he sings!

GUIDERIUS

But his neat^o cookery! He cut our roots in characters,^o
And sauced our broths as Juno had been sick 50
And he her dieter.

ARVIRAGUS

Nobly he yokes

A smiling with a sigh, as if the sigh

Was that^o it was for not being such a smile;

The smile mocking the sigh that it would fly

From so divine a temple to commix 55

With winds that sailors rail at.

GUIDERIUS

I do note

That grief and patience, rooted in them both,

Mingle their spurs^o together.

ARVIRAGUS

Grow patience,

And let the stinking elder,^o grief, untwine

His perishing^o root with^o the increasing vine. 60

BELARIUS

It is great morning.^o Come away.—Who's there?

Enter CLOTEN.

CLOTEN

I cannot find those runagates.^o That villain

Hath mocked me. I am faint.

BELARIUS

"Those runagates"?

Means he not us? I partly know him. 'Tis

Cloten, the son o' th' queen. I fear some ambush. 65

17 enforced raped 20 power of control over 22 sore causing suffering (quibble on the sense of "wound," i.e., vagina)
IV.ii.4 clay and clay one person and another; dignity rank 5 dust remains after death 8 citizen city-bred, bourgeois;
wanton spoiled child 10 journal daily 12 amend cure
16 poorly i.e., from myself only 17 How much as much 24 strain heredity 28–29 who . . . me that this person, whoever he is, should be loved more than I is miraculous

31 So please you at your service 35 imperious imperial 36 as just as 38 stir him move him (to tell his story) 39 gentle wellborn 46 bound indebted (Belarius quibbles on the sense of "tied by affection") 47 appears appears as though 49 neat elegant; characters designs 53 that what 58 spurs chief roots 59 elder elder tree 60 perishing destructive; with from 61 great morning broad daylight 62 runagates runaways

I saw him not these many years, and yet
I know 'tis he. We are held as outlaws. Hence!

GUIDERIUS

He is but one. You and my brother search
What companies° are near. Pray you, away.
Let me alone with him.°

[Exeunt BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.]

CLOTEN Soft,° what are you 70
That fly me thus? Some villain° mountaineers?
I have heard of such. What slave art thou?

GUIDERIUS A thing
More slavish did I ne'er than answering
A "slave" without a knock.

CLOTEN Thou art a robber,
A lawbreaker, a villain. Yield thee, thief. 75

GUIDERIUS
To who? To thee? What art thou? Have not I
An arm as big as thine? A heart as big?
Thy words, I grant, are bigger, for I wear not
My dagger in my mouth. Say what thou art,
Why I should yield to thee.

CLOTEN Thou villain base, 80
Know'st me° not by my clothes?

GUIDERIUS No, nor thy tailor, rascal,
Who is thy grandfather. He made those clothes,
Which, as it seems, make thee.

CLOTEN Thou precious varlet,°
My tailor made them not.

GUIDERIUS Hence then, and thank 85
The man that gave them thee. Thou art some fool;
I am loath to beat thee.

CLOTEN Thou injurious° thief,
Hear but my name and tremble.

GUIDERIUS What's thy name?

CLOTEN
Cloten, thou villain.

GUIDERIUS
Cloten, thou double villain, be thy name,
I cannot tremble at it. Were it Toad, or Adder, Spider, 90
'Twould move me sooner.

CLOTEN To thy further fear,
Nay, to thy mere° confusion, thou shalt know
I am son to th' queen.

GUIDERIUS I am sorry for't; not seeming°
So worthy as thy birth.

CLOTEN Art not afeard?

GUIDERIUS
Those that I reverence, those I fear—the wise; 95
At fools I laugh, not fear them.

CLOTEN Die the death!
When I have slain thee with my proper° hand,
I'll follow those that even now fled hence
And on the gates of Lud's Town set your heads.
Yield, rustic mountaineer. Fight and exeunt. 100

Enter BELARIUS and ARVIRAGUS.

BELARIUS

No company's abroad?°

ARVIRAGUS

None in the world. You did mistake him sure.

BELARIUS

I cannot tell. Long is it since I saw him,
But time hath nothing blurred those lines of favor°
Which then he wore. The snatches° in his voice, 105
And burst of speaking, were as his. I am absolute°
'Twas very Cloten.°

ARVIRAGUS In this place we left them.
I wish my brother make good time° with him,
You say he is so fell.°

BELARIUS Being scarce made up,°
I mean to man, he had not apprehension 110
Of roaring terrors; for defect of judgment
Is oft the cause of fear.°

Enter GUIDERIUS [with Cloten's head].

But see, thy brother.

GUIDERIUS
This Cloten was a fool, an empty purse;
There was no money in't. Not Hercules
Could have knocked out his brains, for he had none. 115
Yet I not doing this, the fool had borne
My head as I do his.

BELARIUS What hast thou done?

GUIDERIUS
I am perfect° what: cut off one Cloten's head,
Son to the queen, after his own report;
Who called me traitor, mountaineer, and swore 120
With his own single hand he'd take us in,° Displace our heads where—thank the gods—they grow,
And set them on Lud's Town.

BELARIUS We are all undone.

GUIDERIUS
Why, worthy father, what have we to lose
But that° he swore to take, our lives? The law 125
Protects not us. Then why should we be tender
To° let an arrogant piece of flesh threat us,
Play judge and executioner all himself,
For° we do fear the law? What company
Discover you abroad?

BELARIUS No single soul 130
Can we set eye on, but in all safe reason
He must have some attendants. Though his humor°
Was nothing but mutation—ay, and that
From one bad thing to worse—not frenzy, not Absolute madness could so far have raved 135
To bring him here alone. Although perhaps
It may be heard at court that such as we
Cave here, hunt here, are outlaws, and in time
May make° some stronger head;° the which he hearing—
As it is like him—might break out, and swear 140
He'd fetch us in; yet is't not probable

104 lines of favor contours of his face 105 snatches hesitations 106 absolute certain 107 very Cloten Cloten himself 108 make good time have good fortune 109 fell fierce; made up grown 111-12 for . . . fear sense unclear and frequently emended; Belarius seems to be saying that Cloten lacked the intelligence to be frightened 118 perfect well aware 121 take us in overcome us 125 that what 126-27 tender To so considerate as to 129 For because 132 humor chief characteristic 139 make make up; head force

69 companies companions 70 Let . . . him Leave him to me; Soft wait 71 villain lowborn 81 me i.e., my rank 83 precious varlet egregious knave 86 injurious insulting 92 mere utter 93 not seeming since you do not seem 97 proper own 101 abroad about

To come° alone, either he so undertaking,
 Or they so suffering.° Then on good ground we fear,
 If we do fear this body hath a tail°
 More perilous than the head.

ARVIRAGUS Let ordinance° 145
 Come as the gods foresay° it. Howsoe'er,
 My brother hath done well.

BELARIUS I had no mind
 To hunt this day. The boy Fidele's sickness
 Did make my way long forth.°

GUIDERIUS With his own sword,
 Which he did wave against my throat, I have ta'en 150
 His head from him. I'll throw't into the creek
 Behind our rock, and let it to the sea
 And tell the fishes he's the queen's son, Cloten.
 That's all I reckon.° Exit.

BELARIUS I fear 'twill be revenged.
 Would, Polydore, thou hadst not done't, though valor 155
 Becomes thee well enough.

ARVIRAGUS Would I had done't,
 So° the revenge alone pursued° me. Polydore,
 I love thee brotherly, but envy much
 Thou hast robbed me of this deed. I would revenges
 That possible° strength might meet would seek us 160 through°
 And put us to our answer.

BELARIUS Well, 'tis done.
 We'll hunt no more today, nor seek for danger
 Where there's no profit. I prithee, to our rock;
 You and Fidele play the cooks. I'll stay
 Till hasty Polydore return, and bring him 165
 To dinner presently.

ARVIRAGUS Poor sick Fidele,
 I'll willingly to him. To gain° his color
 I'd let a parish of such Clotens blood°
 And praise myself for charity. Exit.

BELARIUS O thou goddess,
 Thou divine Nature, thou thyself thou blazon'st° 170
 In these two princely boys! They are as gentle
 As zephyrs blowing below the violet,
 Not wagging his sweet head; and yet as rough,
 Their royal blood enchafed,° as the rud'st wind
 That by the top doth take the mountain pine
 And make him stoop to th' vale. 'Tis wonder
 That an invisible instinct should frame° them
 To royalty° unlearned, honor untaught,
 Civility° not seen from other, valor
 That wildly grows° in them but yields a crop 180
 As if it had been sowed. Yet still it's strange
 What Cloten's being here to us portends,
 Or what his death will bring us.

Enter GUIDERIUS.

GUIDERIUS Where's my brother?

142 To come for him to come 143 suffering allowing 144 tail i.e., followers 145 ordinance whatever is ordained 146 foresay foretell, determine 149 way long forth i.e., way forth seem long 154 reckon care 157 So so that; pursued would have pursued 160 possible our available; seek us through search thoroughly for us 167 gain restore 168 let . . . blood kill a parish-full of Clotens 170 blazon'st pro-claimest 174 enchafed heated 177 frame dispose 178 royalty regal conduct 179 Civility civilized behavior 180 wildly grows grows wild

I have sent Cloten's clotpoll° down the stream
 In embassy to his mother; his body's hostage 185
 For his return. Solemn music.

BELARIUS My ingenious° instrument!
 Hark, Polydore, it sounds. But what occasion
 Hath Cadwal now to give it motion? Hark!

GUIDERIUS
 Is he at home?

BELARIUS He went hence even now.

GUIDERIUS
 What does he mean? Since death of my dear'st mother 190
 It did not speak before. All solemn things
 Should answer° solemn accidents.° The matter?
 Triumphs° for nothing and lamenting toys°
 Is jollity for apes and grief for boys.
 Is Cadwal mad?

Enter ARVIRAGUS with IMOGEN, dead, bearing her in his arms.

BELARIUS Look, here he comes, 195
 And brings the dire occasion in his arms
 Of what we blame him for.

ARVIRAGUS The bird is dead
 That we have made so much on.° I had rather
 Have skipped from sixteen years of age to sixty,
 To have turned my leaping time into a crutch, 200
 Than have seen this.

GUIDERIUS O sweetest, fairest lily!
 My brother wears thee not the one half so well
 As when thou grew'st thyself.

BELARIUS O Melancholy,
 Who ever yet could sound thy bottom, find
 The ooze, to show what coast thy sluggish crayer° 205
 Might eas'liest harbor in? Thou blessed thing,
 Jove knows what man thou mightst have made; but I,°
 Thou diedst, a most rare boy, of melancholy.
 How found you him?

ARVIRAGUS Stark,° as you see,
 Thus smiling, as° some fly had tickled slumber, 210
 Not as Death's dart being laughed at;° his right cheek
 Reposing on a cushion.

GUIDERIUS Where?

ARVIRAGUS O' th' floor;
 His arms thus leagued.° I thought he slept, and put My clouted brogues° from off my feet, whose rudeness°
 Answered my steps too loud.

GUIDERIUS Why, he but sleeps. 215
 If he be gone, he'll make his grave a bed;
 With female fairies will his tomb be haunted,
 And worms will not come to thee.

ARVIRAGUS With fairest flowers,
 Whilst summer lasts and I live here, Fidele,
 I'll sweeten thy sad grave. Thou shalt not lack 220
 The flower that's like thy face, pale primrose; nor

184 clotpoll blockhead 186 ingenious skillfully constructed 192 answer correspond to; accidents events 193 Triumphs public festivities; lamenting toys lamenting over trifles 198 on of 205 crayer small trading vessel 207 I i.e., what I know is 209 Stark stiff (as in death) 210 as as if 211 as
 . . . at as if laughing at Death's arrow 213 leagued folded 214 clouted brogues heavy, nail-studded shoes; rudeness roughness

The azured harebell,^o like thy veins; no, nor
 The leaf of eglantine,^o whom not to slander, Outsweet'ned not thy breath. The ruddock^o would
 With charitable bill—O bill sore shaming
 Those rich-left heirs that let their fathers lie
 Without a monument!—bring thee all this;
 Yea, and furred moss besides, when flow'rs are none,
 To winter-ground^o thy corse—

GUIDERIUS Prithee have done,
 And do not play in wench-like words with that
 Which is so serious. Let us bury him,
 And not protract with admiration what
 Is now due debt. To th' grave.

ARVIRAGUS Say, where shall's^o lay him?

GUIDERIUS By good Euriphile, our mother.

ARVIRAGUS Be't so.
 And let us, Polydore, though now our voices
 Have got the mannish crack, sing him to th' ground,
 As once to our mother; use like note and words,
 Save that Euriphile must be Fidele.

GUIDERIUS Cadwal,
 I cannot sing. I'll weep, and word^o it with thee,
 For notes of sorrow out of tune are worse
 Than priests and fanes^o that lie.

ARVIRAGUS We'll speak it then.

BELARIUS Great griefs, I see, med'cine^o the less, for Cloten
 Is quite forgot. He was a queen's son, boys,
 And though he came our enemy, remember
 He was paid^o for that. Though mean and mighty, rotting
 Together, have one dust, yet reverence,
 That angel of the world, doth make distinction
 Of place 'tween high and low. Our foe was princely,
 And though you took his life as being^o our foe,
 Yet bury him as^o a prince.

GUIDERIUS Pray you fetch him hither.
 Thersites'^o body is as good as Ajax'^o
 When neither are alive.

ARVIRAGUS If you'll go fetch him,
 We'll say our song the whilst. Brother, begin.
 [Exit BELARIUS.]

GUIDERIUS Nay, Cadwal, we must lay his head to th' east;^o
 My father hath a reason for't.

ARVIRAGUS 'Tis true.

GUIDERIUS Come on then and remove him.

ARVIRAGUS So. Begin.

Song.
 GUIDERIUS Fear no more the heat o' th' sun
 Nor the furious winter's rages;
 Thou thy wordly task hast done,
 Home art gone and ta'en thy wages.

222 azured harebell sky-blue wild hyacinth 223 eglantine sweetbriar 224 ruddock robin 229 winter-ground protect in winter (?) 233 shall's shall us (we) 240 word speak 242 fanes temples 243 med'cine cure 246 paid punished 250 as being because he was 251 as as being, because he was 252 Thersites' the vituperative Greek warrior of the Trojan War; Ajax' one of the Greek heroes at Troy 255 to th' east
 the reverse of Christian practice

Golden lads and girls all must,
 As^o chimney-sweepers, come to dust.

ARVIRAGUS Fear no more the frown o' th' great;
 Thou are past the tyrant's stroke.
 Care no more to clothe and eat;
 To thee the reed is as the oak.
 The scepter, learning, physic,^o must
 All follow this and come to dust.

GUIDERIUS Fear no more the lightning flash,
 ARVIRAGUS Nor th' all-dreaded thunder-stone;
 GUIDERIUS Fear not slander, censure rash;
 ARVIRAGUS Thou hast finished joy and moan.
 BOTH All lovers young, all lovers must
 Consign to^o thee and come to dust.

GUIDERIUS No exorciser^o harm thee,
 ARVIRAGUS Nor no witchcraft charm thee.
 GUIDERIUS Ghost unlaid forbear thee;^o
 ARVIRAGUS Nothing ill come near thee.
 BOTH Quiet consummation^o have,
 And renowned be thy grave.

Enter BELARIUS with the body of Cloten.

GUIDERIUS We have done our obsequies. Come, lay him down.

BELARIUS Here's a few flowers, but 'bout midnight, more.
 The herbs that have on them cold dew o' th' night
 Are strewings fitt'st for graves. Upon their faces.^o
 You were as flow'rs, now withered; even so
 These herblets shall^o which we upon you strew.
 Come on, away; apart upon our knees.
 The ground that gave them first has them again.
 Their pleasures here are past, so is their pain.

Exeunt [BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS].
 IMOGEN (Awakes.)

Yes, sir, to Milford Haven. Which is the way?
 I thank you. By yond bush? Pray, how far thither?
 'Ods pittikins,^o can it be six mile yet?
 I have gone^o all night. Faith, I'll lie down and sleep.

[Seeing Cloten.]

But, soft, no bedfellow! O gods and goddesses!
 These flow'rs are like the pleasures of the world;
 This bloody man, the care on't. I hope I dream,
 For so^o I thought I was a cave-keeper
 And cook to honest creatures. But 'tis not so;
 'Twas but a bolt^o of nothing, shot at nothing,
 Which the brain makes of fumes.^o Our very eyes
 Are sometimes like our judgments, blind. Good faith,
 I tremble still with fear, but if there be
 Yet left in Heaven as small a drop of pity
 As a wren's eye, feared gods, a part^o of it!
 The dream's here still. Even when I wake it is Without me, as within me; not imagined, felt.

263 As like 268 scepter, learning, physic i.e., kings, scholars, physicians 275 Consign to co-sign with (i.e., meet the same fate) 276 exorciser spirit-raiser 278 forbear thee let thee alone 280 consummation fulfillment, end 285 faces fronts 287 shall shall be 293 'Ods pittikins God's little pity, God have mercy 294 gone walked 298 so i.e., while dreaming 300 bolt arrow 301 fumes bodily vapors thought to rise to the brain and cause dreams 305 a part i.e., grant me a part

A headless man? The garments of Posthumus?
I know the shape of's leg; this is his hand,
His foot Mercurial,^o his Martial^o thigh,
The brawns^o of Hercules; but his Jovial^o face—
Murder in heaven? How? 'Tis gone. Pisanio,
All curses maddened^o Hecuba^o gave the Greeks,
And mine to boot, be darted on thee! Thou,
Conspired^o with that irregular^o devil Cloten,
Hath here cut off my lord. To write and read
Be henceforth treacherous! Damned Pisanio
Hath with his forged letters—damned Pisanio—
From this most bravest vessel of the world
Struck the maintop. O Posthumus, alas,
Where is thy head? Where's that? Ay me, where's that?

Pisanio might have killed thee at the heart
And left this head on. How should this be? Pisanio?
'Tis he and Cloten. Malice and lucre^o in them
Have laid this woe here. O, 'tis pregnant,^o pregnant!
The drug he gave me, which he said was precious
And cordial^o to me, have I not found it
Murd'rous to th' senses? That confirms it home.^o
This is Pisanio's deed, and Cloten.^o O,
Give color to my pale cheek with thy blood,
That we the horrid may seem to those Which^o chance to find us. O my lord, my lord!

[Falling on the body.]

Enter LUCIUS and CAPTAINS; a SOOTHSAYER to them.^o

CAPTAIN

The legions garrisoned in Gallia
After^o your will have crossed the sea, attending^o
You here at Milford Haven with your ships.
They are in readiness.

LUCIUS

But what from Rome?

CAPTAIN

The Senate hath stirred up the confiners^o
And gentlemen of Italy, most willing spirits
That promise noble service, and they come
Under the conduct of bold Iachimo,
Siena's^o brother.

LUCIUS

When expect you them?

CAPTAIN

With the next benefit o' th' wind.

LUCIUS

This forwardness^o

Makes our hopes fair. Command our present numbers
Be mustered; bid the captains look to't.—Now, sir,
What have you dreamed of late of this war's purpose?

SOOTHSAYER

Last night the very gods showed me a vision—
I fast^o and prayed for their intelligence^o—thus:
I saw Jove's bird, the Roman eagle, winged

310 Mercurial quick (like Mercury's); Martial powerful (like Mars') 311 brawns muscles; Jovial majestic (like Jove's) 313 maddened maddened; Hecuba wife of Priam, king of Troy 315 Conspired having conspired; irregular lawless 324 lucre greed 325 pregnant evident 327 cordial restorative 328 home thoroughly 329 Cloten i.e., Cloten's 332 Which who 332 s.d. to them presumably the Soothsayer enters, a moment later, at another door 334 After according to; attending waiting for 337 confiners inhabitants 341 Siena's i.e., the Duke of Siena's 342 forwardness promptness 347 fast fasted; intelligence communication

From the spongy^o south to this part of the west,
There vanished in the sunbeams; which portends,
Unless my sins abuse^o my divination,
Success to th' Roman host.

LUCIUS

Dream often so,

And never false.^o Soft, ho, what trunk is here?
Without his top? The ruin speaks that sometime^o
It was a worthy building. How, a page?
Or^o dead or sleeping on him? But dead rather,
For nature doth abhor^o to make his bed
With the defunct or sleep upon the dead.
Let's see the boy's face.

CAPTAIN

He's alive, my lord.

LUCIUS

He'll, then, instruct us of this body. Young one,
Inform us of thy fortunes, for it seems
They crave to be demanded. Who is this Thou mak'st thy bloody pillow? Or who was he
That, otherwise than noble nature did,^o
Hath altered that good picture? What's thy interest In this sad wrack?^o How came't? Who is't? What art thou?

IMOGEN

I am nothing, or if not,
Nothing to be were better. This was my master,
A very valiant Briton and a good,
That here by mountaineers lies slain. Alas,
There is no more such masters. I may wander
From east to occident, cry out for service,
Try many, all good, serve truly, never Find such another master.

LUCIUS

'Lack, good youth,

Thou mov'st no less with thy complaining than
Thy master in bleeding. Say his name, good friend.

IMOGEN

Richard du Champ. [Aside.] If I do lie and do
No harm by it, though the gods hear, I hope
They'll pardon it.—Say you, sir?

LUCIUS

Thy name?

IMOGEN Fidele, sir.

LUCIUS

Thou dost approve^o thyself the very same;
Thy name well fits thy faith, thy faith thy name.
Wilt take thy chance with me? I will not say
Thou shalt be so well mastered, but be sure
No less beloved. The Roman emperor's letters
Sent by a consul to me should not sooner
Than thine own worth prefer^o thee. Go with me.

IMOGEN

I'll follow, sir. But first, and't please the gods,
I'll hide my master from the flies, as deep
As these poor pickaxes^o can dig; and when
With wild wood-leaves and weeds I ha' strewed his grave

And on it said a century of^o prayers,
Such as I can,^o twice o'er, I'll weep and sigh,
And leaving so his service, follow you,

349 spongy damp 351 abuse render inaccurate 353 false falsely 354 sometime once 356 Or either 357 nature doth abhor man naturally abhors (Heilman) 364 did i.e., painted (J. C. Maxwell) 366 wrack ruin of a man 380 approve prove 386 prefer recommend 389 pickaxes i.e., fingers 391 century of hundred 392 can know

That they will waste their time upon our note,^o 20
 To know from whence we are.
 BELARIUS O, I am known
 Of many in the army. Many years,
 Though Cloten then^o but young, you see, not wore
 him
 From my remembrance. And besides, the king
 Hath not deserved my service nor your loves, 25
 Who find in my exile the want of breeding,^o
 The certainty^o of this hard life; aye hopeless
 To have the courtesy your cradle promised,
 But to be still hot summer's tanlings^o and
 The shrinking slaves of winter.
 GUIDERIUS Than be so 30
 Better to cease to be. Pray, sir, to th' army.
 I and my brother are not known; yourself
 So out of thought, and thereto so o'ergrown,^o
 Cannot be questioned.
 ARVIRAGUS By this sun that shines,
 I'll thither. What thing is't that I never 35
 Did see man die, scarce ever looked on blood
 But that of coward hares, hot^o goats, and venison!
 Never bestrid a horse, save one that had
 A rider like myself, who ne'er wore rowel^o
 Nor iron on his heel! I am ashamed 40
 To look upon the holy sun, to have
 The benefit of his blest beams, remaining
 So long a poor unknown.
 GUIDERIUS By heavens, I'll go.
 If you will bless me, sir, and give me leave,
 I'll take the better care, but if you will not, 45
 The hazard therefore due^o fall on me by
 The hands of Romans!
 ARVIRAGUS So say I. Amen.
 BELARIUS
 No reason I, since of your lives you set
 So slight a valuation, should reserve
 My cracked^o one to more care. Have with you, boys! so
 If in your country^o wars you chance to die,
 That is my bed too, lads, and there I'll lie.
 Lead, lead. [Aside.] The time seems long; their blood thinks scorn
 Till it fly out and show them princes born. Exeunt.

A C T V

Scene I. [Britain.]

Enter POSTHUMUS alone [with a bloody handkerchief].

POSTHUMUS
 Yea, bloody cloth, I'll keep thee, for I wished Thou shouldst be colored thus. You married ones,^o
 If each of you should take this course, how many Must murder wives much better than themselves

20 upon our note on noticing us 23 then i.e., was then 26 Who . . . breeding you who through sharing my exile experience a lack of education 27 certainty inescapability 29 tanlings tanned persons 33 o'ergrown replaced in their thoughts 37 hot lecherous 39 rowel the wheel on a spur 46 hazard therefore due risk attendant upon being unblessed
 50 cracked i.e., since old 51 country country's V.i.2 You married ones he addresses the audience

For wrying^o but a little! O Pisanio, 5
 Every good servant does not all commands;
 No bond but^o to do just ones. Gods, if you Should have ta'en vengeance on my faults, I never Had lived to put on this;^o so had you saved 10
 The noble Imogen to repent, and struck
 Me, wretch more worth your vengeance. But alack,
 You snatch some hence for little faults; that's love,
 To have them fall^o no more; you some permit
 To second^o ills with ills, each elder^o worse, 15
 And make them^o dread it,^o to the doers' thrift.^o
 But Imogen is your own. Do your best wills,
 And make me blest to obey. I am brought hither
 Among th' Italian gentry, and to fight 30
 Against my lady's kingdom. 'Tis enough
 That, Britain, I have killed thy mistress; peace,
 I'll give no wound to thee. Therefore, good heavens,
 Hear patiently my purpose. I'll disrobe me
 Of these Italian weeds and suit myself
 As does a Briton peasant. So I'll fight 35
 Against the part^o I come with; so I'll die
 For thee, O Imogen, even for whom my life
 Is every breath a death; and thus, unknown,
 Pitied nor hated, to the face of peril
 40 Myself I'll dedicate. Let me make men know
 More valor in me than my habits^o show. 30
 Gods, put the strength o' th' Leonati in me.
 To shame the guise^o o' th' world, I will begin
 The fashion, less without and more within. Exit.

Scene II. [Britain.]

Enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and the ROMAN ARMY at one door, and the BRITON ARMY at another, Leonatus POSTHUMUS following like a poor soldier. They march over and go out.^o Then enter again in skirmish IACHIMO and POSTHUMUS. He vanquisheth and disarmeth IACHIMO and then leaves him.

IACHIMO
 The heaviness and guilt within my bosom
 Takes off^o my manhood. I have belied^o a lady,
 The princess of this country, and the air on't^o
 Revengingly enfeebles me; or^o could this carl,^o
 A very drudge of nature's, have subdued me 5
 In my profession? Knighthoods and honors, borne
 As I wear mine, are titles but of scorn.
 If that thy gentry, Britain, go before^o
 This lout as he exceeds our lords, the odds
 Is that we scarce are men and you are gods. Exit. 10

The battle continues. The BRITONS fly; CYMBELINE is taken. Then enter to his rescue BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, and ARVIRAGUS.

5 wrying deviating, going wrong 7 No bond but i.e., he is bound only 9 put on this instigate this crime 13 fall i.e., from virtue 14 second follow up; elder i.e., later 15 them the doers; dread it repent the evil course; thrift profit 25 part side 30 habits clothes 32 guise custom
 V.ii.s.d. They . . . out each group marches about the stage and exits by the other door 2 Takes off destroys; belied slandered 3 on't of it 4 or otherwise; carl churl 8 go before excel

BELARIUS

Stand, stand! We have th' advantage of the ground.
The lane is guarded. Nothing routs us but
The villainy of our fears.

GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS Stand, stand, and fight!

Enter POSTHUMUS and seconds the BRITONS. They rescue CYMBELINE and exeunt. Then enter LUCIUS, IACHIMO, and IMOGEN.

LUCIUS

Away, boy, from the troops, and save thyself,
For friends kill friends, and the disorder's such 15
As War were hoodwinked.°

IACHIMO 'Tis their fresh supplies.

LUCIUS

It is a day turned strangely; or betimes°
Let's reinforce or fly. Exeunt.

Scene III. [Britain.]

Enter POSTHUMUS and a Briton LORD.

LORD

Can'st thou from where they made the stand?

POSTHUMUS I did;

Though you, it seems, come from the fliers.

LORD I did.

POSTHUMUS

No blame be to you, sir, for all was lost,
But that the heavens fought. The king himself
Of his wings destitute, the army broken, 5
And but the backs of Britons seen, all flying
Through a strait° lane; the enemy full-hearted,
Lolling the tongue with slaught'ring, having work
More plentiful than tools to do't, struck down
Some mortally, some slightly touched,° some falling 10
Merely through fear, that the strait pass was dammed
With dead men hurt behind,° and cowards living
To die with lengthened shame.

LORD Where was this lane?

POSTHUMUS

Close by the battle, ditched, and walled with turf;
Which gave advantage to an ancient soldier, 15
An honest one I warrant, who deserved
So long a breeding as his white beard came to,
In doing this for's country. Athwart the lane
He with two striplings—lads more like to run
The country base° than to commit such slaughter; 20
With faces fit for masks,° or rather fairer
Than those for preservation cased or shame°—
Made good the passage, cried to those that fled,
“Our Britain's harts die flying, not our men.
To darkness fleet° souls that fly backwards. Stand, 25
Or we are Romans° and will give you that

Like beasts which you shun beastly,° and may save But to look back in frown.° Stand, stand!” These three,

Three thousand confident, in act as many—
For three performers are the file° when all 30

The rest do nothing—with this word “Stand, stand,”
Accommodated by the place, more charming°

With their own nobleness, which could have turned
A distaff to a lance, gilded° pale looks,

Part° shame, part spirit renewed; that some, turned coward 35

But by example°—O, a sin in war,
Damned in the first beginners!—'gan to look

The way that they° did and to grin° like lions
Upon the pikes o' th' hunters. Then began

A stop i' th' chaser,° a retire; anon° 40

A rout, confusion thick. Forthwith they fly
Chickens, the way which they stooped° eagles; slaves,

The strides they victors made; and now our cowards,
Like fragments° in hard voyages, became

The life o' th' need.° Having found the back door open 45

Of the unguarded hearts, heavens, how they wound!
Some slain before,° some dying, some° their friends

O'erborne i' th' former wave, ten chased by one
Are now each one the slaughterman of twenty.

Those that would die or ere° resist are grown 50

The mortal bugs° o' th' field.°

LORD This was strange chance:

A narrow lane, an old man, and two boys.

POSTHUMUS

Nay, do not wonder at it. You are made
Rather to wonder at the things you hear

Than to work any.° Will you rhyme upon't 55

And vent it° for a mock'ry? Here is one:

“Two boys, an old man twice a boy, a lane, Preserved the Britons, was the Romans' bane.”

LORD

Nay, be not angry, sir.

POSTHUMUS 'Lack, to what end?

Who dares not stand° his foe, I'll be his friend; 60

For if he'll do as he is made° to do,

I know he'll quickly fly my friendship too.

You have put° me into rhyme.

LORD Farewell. You're angry. Exit.

POSTHUMUS

Still going?° This is a lord! O noble misery,°

To be i' th' field, and ask “What news?” of me! 65

Today how many would have given their honors

To have saved their carcasses, took heel to do't,

And yet died too! I, in mine own woe charmed,°

16 hoodwinked blindfolded 17 or betimes either quickly
V.iii.7 strait narrow; full-hearted full of courage 10 touched wounded 12 behind i.e., while running away 17
So . . . to to live (renowned) as long after this day as he had lived before in growing his beard 19–20 run . . . base play the game of prisoner's base 21 masks for protection from sunburn (so used by ladies) 22 for . . . shame covered for protection or modesty 25 fleet are wafted 26 are Romans
i.e., will behave like Romans

27 beastly like cowards 27–28 save . . . frown prevent only by looking back defiantly 30 file whole force 32 more charming i.e., winning over others 34 gilded brought color to 35 Part some 36 by example by imitating others 38 they the three men; grin bare the teeth 40 stop . . . chaser sudden check (as of a horse) on the part of the pursuer; anon soon 42 stooped swooped (hawking term) 44 fragments scraps (of food) 45 life . . . need a source of life in time of need 47 slain before i.e., who had feigned death; some some of 50 or ere before 51 mortal bugs deadly terrors; field battle 55 work any perform any such deeds 56 vent it make it known 60 stand withstand 61 made naturally inclined 63 put forced 64 going running away; noble misery wretchedness of false nobility 68 charmed preserved as by a charm

Could not find Death where I did hear him groan
 Nor feel him where he struck. Being an ugly monster, 70
 'Tis strange he hides him in fresh cups, soft beds,
 Sweet words, or hath moe ministers than we
 That draw his knives i' th' war. Well, I will find him,
 For being now a favorer to° the Briton,
 No more a Briton.° I have resumed again 75
 The part I came in. Fight I will no more,
 But yield me to the veriest hind° that shall Once touch my shoulder.° Great the slaughter is Here made by th' Roman; great the answer° be Britons must take. For me, my ransom's death. 80
 On either side I come to spend my breath,°
 Which neither here I'll keep nor bear again,
 But end it by some means for Imogen.

Enter two [Briton] CAPTAINS and SOLDIERS.

FIRST CAPTAIN

Great Jupiter be praised, Lucius is taken.
 'Tis thought the old man and his sons were angels. 85

SECOND CAPTAIN

There was a fourth man, in a silly habit,°
 That gave th' affront° with them.

FIRST CAPTAIN

So 'tis reported,

But none of 'em can be found. Stand, who's there?

POSTHUMUS

A Roman,
 Who had not now been drooping here if seconds° 90
 Had answered him.°

SECOND CAPTAIN Lay hands on him. A dog,

A leg of Rome shall not return to tell

What crows have pecked them here. He brags his service

As if he were of note.° Bring him to th' king.

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIR-AGUS, PISANIO, and Roman CAPTIVES [guarded]. The CAPTAINS present POSTHUMUS to CYMBELINE, who delivers him over to a JAILER. [Exeunt.]

Scene IV. [Britain.]

Enter° POSTHUMUS and [two] JAILERS.

FIRST JAILER

You shall not now be stol'n; you have locks upon you.
 So graze as you find pasture.

SECOND JAILER

Ay, or a stomach.°

[Exeunt JAILERS.]

POSTHUMUS

Most welcome, bondage, for thou art a way,
 I think, to liberty. Yet am I better
 Than one that's sick o' th' gout, since he had rather 5

74 being . . . to since he now favors 75 No . . . Briton
 i.e., I will seek Death among the Romans 77 hind peasant 78 touch my shoulder as in a formal arrest 79 answer retaliation 81 spend my breath give up my life 86 a silly habit lowly clothing 87 affront attack 90 seconds supporters 91 answered him acted as he did 94 note reputation

V.iv.s.d. Enter the action may be continuous from V.iii, Posthumus and the Jailers remaining on stage after the exit of Cymbeline at the end of that scene; in any case at the beginning of V.iv the locale of the action changes from open country to a prison 2 stomach appetite (for grazing)

Groan so in perpetuity than be cured
 By th' sure physician, Death, who is the key
 T' unbar these locks. My conscience, thou art fettered More than my shanks and wrists. You good gods, give me

The penitent instrument to pick that bolt,° 10
 Then free° for ever. Is't enough I am sorry?
 So children temporal fathers do appease;
 Gods are more full of mercy. Must I repent,
 I cannot do it better than in gyves,°
 Desired more than constrained.° To satisfy,° 15
 If of my freedom 'tis the main part,° take
 No stricter render° of me than my all.°
 I know you are more clement than vile men,
 Who of their broken debtors take a third,
 A sixth, a tenth, letting them thrive again 20
 On their abatement.° That's not my desire.
 For Imogen's dear life take mine; and though
 'Tis not so dear,° yet 'tis a life; you coined it.
 'Tween man and man they weigh not every stamp;°
 Though light, take pieces for the figure's° sake; 25
 You rather mine, being yours.° And so, great pow'rs,
 If you will take this audit,° take this life
 And cancel these cold bonds.° O Imogen,
 I'll speak to thee in silence.

[Sleeps.]

Solemn music. Enter, as in an apparition, SICILIUS Leonatus, father to POSTHUMUS, an old man attired like a warrior; leading in his hand an ancient MATRON, his wife and mother to POSTHUMUS with MUSIC° before them. Then, after other MUSIC, follows the two young LEONATI, brothers to Posthumus, with wounds as they died in the wars. They circle POSTHUMUS round as he lies sleeping.

SICILIUS

No more, thou Thunder-master,° show thy spite on mortal flies. 30
 With Mars fall out, with Juno chide, that thy adulteries
 Rates° and revenges.
 Hath my poor boy done aught but well, whose face I never saw?
 I died whilst in the womb he stayed attending°
 Nature's law;
 Whose father then, as men report thou orphans' father
 art, 35
 Thou shouldst have been, and shielded him from this earth-vexing smart.°

10 penitent . . . bolt tool of repentance which will unfetter my conscience 11 free i.e., in death 14 gyves fetters 15 constrained forced upon me; satisfy make atonement 16
If . . . part i.e., if atonement is essential to my freedom of conscience 17 stricter render sterner repayment; all i.e., life 21 abatement reduced amount 23 dear valuable 24 stamp coin 25 figure the ruler's image stamped on the "piece" (coin) 26 You . . . yours i.e., you should take my life the sooner since (though light coin) it is at least stamped in your image 27 take this audit accept this account 28 cancel
 . . . bonds i.e., remove (through letting me die) these iron shackles (quibble on the sense of "void these worthless contracts") 29 s.d. Music musicians 30 Thunder-master Jupiter 32 Rates scolds 34 Attending awaiting 36 earth- vexing smart suffering which plagues the life of man

MOTHER

Lucina° lent not me her aid, but took me in my throes,
That from me was Posthumus ripped, came crying
'mongst his foes,
A thing of pity.

SICILIUS

Great Nature like his ancestry moulded the stuff° so fair 40
That he deserved the praise o' th' world, as great Sicilius' heir.

FIRST BROTHER

When once he was mature for man,° in Britain where was he
That could stand up his parallel, or fruitful° object be
In eye of Imogen, that best could deem his dignity?°

MOTHER

With marriage wherefore was he mocked, to be exiled and thrown 45
From Leonati seat and cast from her his dearest one, Sweet Imogen?

SICILIUS

Why did you° suffer Iachimo, slight° thing of Italy,
To taint his nobler heart and brain with needless jealousy,
And to become the geck° and scorn o' th' other's villainy? 50

SECOND BROTHER

For this from stiller seats° we come, our parents and us twain,
That striking in our country's cause fell bravely and were slain,
Our fealty and Tenantius'° right with honor to maintain.

FIRST BROTHER

Like hardiment° Posthumus hath to Cymbeline performed.
Then, Jupiter, thou king of gods, why hast thou thus adjourned° 55
The graces for his merits due, being all to dolours turned?

SICILIUS

Thy crystal window ope; look out. No longer exercise
Upon a valiant race thy harsh and potent injuries.

MOTHER

Since, Jupiter, our son is good, take off his miseries.

SICILIUS

Peep through thy marble mansion. Help, or we poor ghosts will cry 60
To th' shining synod of the rest° against thy deity.

BROTHERS

Help, Jupiter, or we appeal and from thy justice fly.

JUPITER descends° in thunder and lightning, sitting upon an eagle. He throws a thunderbolt. The GHOSTS fall on their knees.

JUPITER

No more, you petty spirits of region low,°
Offend our hearing. Hush! How dare you ghosts
Accuse the Thunderer, whose bolt, you know, 65
Sky-planted,° batters all rebelling coasts?
Poor shadows of Elysium, hence, and rest
Upon your never-withering banks of flow'rs.
Be not with mortal accidents° opprest.
No care of yours it is; you know 'tis ours. 70
Whom best I love I cross;° to make my gift,
The more delayed, delighted. Be content.
Your low-laid son our godhead will uplift;
His comforts thrive, his trials well are spent.°
Our Jovial star° reigned at his birth, and in 75
Our temple was he married. Rise, and fade.
He shall be lord of Lady Imogen,
And happier much by his affliction made.
This tablet lay upon his breast, wherein
Our pleasure his full fortune doth confine.° 80
And so, away; no farther with your din
Express impatience, lest you stir up mine.
Mount, eagle, to my palace crystalline. Ascends.

SICILIUS

He came in thunder; his celestial breath
Was sulphurous to smell; the holy eagle 85
Stooped, as to foot us.° His ascension is
More sweet° than our blest fields;° his royal bird
Prunes° the immortal wing and cloys° his beak,
As when his god is pleased.

ALL

Thanks, Jupiter.

SICILIUS

The marble pavement closes;° he is entered 90
His radiant roof. Away, and, to be blest,
Let us with care perform his great behest.
[The GHOSTS] vanish.°

POSTHUMUS [Waking.]

Sleep, thou hast been a grandsire and begot
A father to me, and thou hast created
A mother and two brothers; but, O scorn,° 95
Gone! They went hence so soon as they were born.
Am so I am awake. Poor wretches that depend
On greatness' favor, dream as I have done,
Wake, and find nothing. But, alas, I swerve.°
Many dream not to find, neither deserve, 100
And yet are steeped in favors. So am I,
That have this golden chance and know not why.
What fairies haunt this ground? A book? O rare one,
Be not, as is our fangled° world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers. Let thy effects 105
So follow to° be most unlike our courtiers,
As good as promise.

Reads.

"Whenas° a lion's whelp shall, to himself unknown,

37 Lucina Juno Lucina (goddess of childbirth) 40 stuff substance 42 mature for man fully matured 43 fruitful ripe, mature 44 deem his dignity judge his worth 48 you Jupiter; slight worthless 50 geck dupe 51 stiller seats quieter abodes (in the Elysian Fields) 53 Tenantius' Sicilius' 54 hardiment bold exploits 55 adjourned deferred 61 the rest the other gods 62 s.d. descends Jupiter is lowered by suspension-gear from stage cover to stage

63 region low Hades 66 Sky-planted based in the sky 69 accidents occurrences 71 cross thwart 74 spent ended 75 Jovial star the planet Jupiter 80 confine i.e., state precisely 86 Stooped . . . us swooped (hawking term) as if to seize us in his talons 87 More sweet in contrast to his angry, sulphurous descent; our blest fields the Elysian Fields 88 Prunes preens; cloys claws 90 closes apparently an allusion to the trap door in the underside of the stage cover through which Jupiter has ascended 92 s.d. vanish i.e., exit rapidly 95 scorn mockery 99 swerve err 104 fangled addicted to finery 106 to as to 108 Whenas when without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end his miseries, Britain be fortunate and flourish in peace and plenty."

'Tis still a dream, or else such stuff as madmen Tongue,° and brain° not; either, both, or nothing; Or senseless° speaking, or a speaking such As sense° cannot untie. Be what it is, The action of my life is like it,° which I'll keep, if but for sympathy.°

Enter JAILER.

JAILER Come, sir, are you ready for death?

POSTHUMUS Overroasted rather; ready long ago.

JAILER Hanging° is the word, sir. If you be ready for that, you are well cooked.

POSTHUMUS So, if I prove a good repast to the spectators, the dish pays the shot.°

JAILER A heavy reckoning for you, sir. But the comfort is, you shall be called to no more payments, fear no more tavern bills, which are as often the sadness of parting as the procuring of mirth. You come in faint for want of meat, depart reeling with too much drink; sorry that you have paid too much, and sorry that you are paid too much;° purse and brain both empty; the brain the heavier for being too light, the purse too light, being drawn° of heaviness. O, of this contradiction you shall now be quit. O, the charity of a penny cord! It sums up thousands in a trice. You have no true debtor and creditor° but it; of what's past, is, and to come, the discharge.° Your neck, sir, is pen, book, and counters;° so the acquittance° follows.

POSTHUMUS I am merrier to die than thou art to live.

JAILER Indeed, sir, he that sleeps feels not the toothache; but a man that were° to sleep your sleep, and a hangman to help him to bed, I think he would change places with his officer;° for, look you, sir, you know not which way you shall go.

POSTHUMUS Yes indeed do I, fellow.

JAILER Your death has eyes in's head° then. I have not seen him so pictured.° You must either be directed by some that take upon them to know, or to take upon yourself that which I am sure you do not know, or jump° the after-inquiry on your own peril. And how you shall speed in° your journey's end, I think you'll never return to tell on.°

POSTHUMUS I tell thee, fellow, there are none want eyes to direct them the way I am going but such as wink° and will not use them.

116 Tongue speak; brain understand 117 Or senseless either irrational 118 sense the power of reason 119 like it i.e., without meaning or incapable of understanding 120 sympathy the resemblance 123 Hanging the Jailer, picking up the metaphor in "Overroasted," quibbles on the sense of "hanging of meat" 126 dish . . . shot the excellence of the food justifies its cost 133 are . . . much have been subdued by too much liquor 135 drawn emptied 138 debtor and creditor account book 139 discharge payment 140 counters used for reckoning; acquittance receipt 143 a man that were i.e., if a man were destined 145 officer executioner 148 Your . . . head i.e., you seem to be informed about what will happen to you after death 149 pictured in the traditional skull or death's head 152 jump gamble on 153 speed in fare at 154 on of 157 wink close

JAILER What an infinite mock is this, that a man should have the best use of eyes to see the way of blindness! I am sure hanging's the way of winking. 160

Enter a MESSENGER.

MESSENGER Knock off his manacles; bring your prisoner to the king.

POSTHUMUS Thou bring'st good news; I am called to be made free.°

JAILER I'll be hanged then.

POSTHUMUS Thou shalt be then freer than a jailer. No bolts for the dead.

[Exeunt POSTHUMUS and MESSENGER.]

JAILER Unless a man would marry a gallows and beget young gibbets, I never saw one so prone.° Yet, on my conscience, there are verier knaves desire to live, for all° he be a Roman; and there be some of them° too that die against their wills. So should I, if I were one. I would we were all of one mind, and one mind good. O, there were desolation of jailers and gallowses! I speak against my present profit, but my wish hath a preferment° int'. Exit.

Scene V. [Britain.]

Enter CYMBELINE, BELARIUS, GUIDERIUS, ARVIRAGUS, PISANIO, and LORDS.

CYMBELINE

Stand by my side, you whom the gods have made Preservers of my throne. Woe is my heart That the poor soldier that so richly fought, Whose rags shamed gilded arms, whose naked breast Stepped before targes of proof,° cannot be found. He shall be happy that can find him, if Our grace can make him so.

BELARIUS I never saw

Such noble fury in so poor a thing, Such precious deeds in one that promised naught But beggary and poor looks.

CYMBELINE No tidings of him?

PISANIO

He hath been searched among the dead and living, But no trace of him.

CYMBELINE To my grief, I am The heir of his reward, which I will add To you, the liver, heart, and brain° of Britain, By whom I grant she lives. 'Tis now the time To ask of whence you are. Report it.

BELARIUS Sir, In Cambria are we born, and gentlemen. Further to boast were neither true nor modest, Unless I add we are honest.

CYMBELINE Bow your knees.

Arise my knights o' th' battle;° I create you Companions to our person and will fit° you With dignities becoming your estates.°

164 made free i.e., by death 169 prone eager 171 for all even though; them Romans 176 preferment promotion (for myself)

V.v.5 targes of proof shields of proven strength 14 liver . . . brain the vital parts—Belarius, Guiderius, and Arviragus 20 knights . . . battle knights created on the battlefield 21 fit equip 22 estates ranks

- That place them on the truth^o of girls and boys.
Why stands he so perplexed?
- CYMBELINE What wouldst thou, boy?
I love thee more and more. Think more and more What's best to ask. Know'st him thou look'st on?
Speak. 110
Wilt have him live? Is he thy kin? Thy friend?
- IMOGEN
He is a Roman, no more kin to me
Than I to your highness; who, being born your vassal,
Am something nearer.
- CYMBELINE Wherefore ey'st him so?
- IMOGEN
I'll tell you, sir, in private, if you please 115
To give me hearing.
- CYMBELINE Ay, with all my heart,
And lend my best attention. What's thy name?
- IMOGEN
Fidele, sir.
- CYMBELINE Thou'rt my good youth, my page;
I'll be thy master. Walk with me; speak freely.
- BELARIUS
Is not this boy revived from death?
- ARVIRAGUS One sand another 120
Not more resembles that sweet rosy lad
Who died, and was Fidele. What think you?
- GUIDERIUS
The same dead thing alive.
- BELARIUS
Peace, peace, see further. He eyes us not; forbear.
Creatures may be alike. Were't he, I am sure 125
He would have spoke to us.
- GUIDERIUS But we saw him dead.
- BELARIUS
Be silent, let's see further.
- PISANIO [Aside.] It is my mistress.
Since she is living, let the time run on
To good or bad.
- CYMBELINE Come, stand thou by our side;
Make thy demand aloud.—Sir, step you forth, 130
Give answer to this boy, and do it freely;
Or, by our greatness and the grace of it,
Which is our honor, bitter torture shall Winnow the truth from falsehood.—On, speak to him.
- IMOGEN
My boon is that this gentleman may render^o 135
Of whom he had this ring.
- POSTHUMUS [Aside.] What's that to him?
- CYMBELINE
That diamond upon your finger, say
How came it yours.
- IACHIMO
Thou'lt torture me to leave^o unspoken that
Which to be spoke would torture thee.
- CYMBELINE How? Me? 140
- IACHIMO
I am glad to be constrained to utter that
Which torments me to conceal. By villainy
I got this ring. 'Twas Leonatus' jewel, Whom thou didst banish, and—which more may grieve thee,
- As it doth me—a nobler sir ne'er lived 145
'Twixt sky and ground. Wilt thou hear more, my lord?
- CYMBELINE
All that belongs to this.
- IACHIMO That paragon, thy daughter,
For whom my heart drops blood and^o my false spirits
Quail to remember—Give me leave, I faint.
- CYMBELINE
My daughter? What of her? Renew thy strength. 150
I had rather thou shouldst live while nature will^o
Than die ere I hear more. Strive, man, and speak.
- IACHIMO
Upon a time—unhappy was the clock
That struck the hour!—it was in Rome—accursed
The mansion where!—'twas at a feast—O, would 155
Our viands had been poisoned, or at least
Those which I heaved to head!^o—the good Posthumus—
What should I say? He was too good to be
Where ill men were, and was the best of all
Amongst the rar'st of good ones—sitting sadly, 160
Hearing us praise our loves of Italy
For beauty that made barren the swelled boast
Of him that best could speak; for feature,^o laming
The shrine^o of Venus or straight-pight^o Minerva,
Postures^o beyond brief nature;^o for condition,^o 165
A shop^o of all the qualities that man
Loves woman for; besides that hook^o of wiving,
Fairness which strikes the eye—
- CYMBELINE I stand on fire.
Come to the matter.^o
- IACHIMO All too soon I shall,
Unless thou wouldst grieve quickly. This Posthumus, 170
Most like a noble lord in love and one
That had a royal lover, took his hint,^o
And not dispraising whom we praised—therein
He was as calm as virtue—he began
His mistress' picture; which by his tongue being made, 175
And then a mind put in't,^o either our brags
Were cracked^o of kitchen trulls, or his description
Proved us unspeaking sots.^o
- CYMBELINE Nay, nay, to th' purpose.
- IACHIMO
Your daughter's chastity—there it begins.
He spake of her as^o Dian had hot dreams 180
And she alone were cold;^o whereat I, wretch,
Made scruple of^o his praise and wagered with him
Pieces of gold 'gainst this which then he wore
Upon his honored finger, to attain
In suit^o the place of's bed and win this ring 185
By hers and mine adultery. He, true knight,
No lesser of her honor confident
- 148 and and whom 151 while nature will the rest of your natural life 157 heaved to head lifted to mouth 163 feature shapeliness 163–64 laming The shrine making deformed (by comparison) the image 164 straight-pight tall, erect 165 Postures forms; beyond brief nature i.e., more richly endowed than mortal beings; condition character 166 shop repository 167 hook fishhook 169 matter point 172 hint opportunity 176 And . . . in't i.e., added to which was a good mind 177 cracked boasted 178 unspeaking sots inarticulate fools 180 as as if 181 cold chaste 182
Made scruple of expressed doubt about, disputed 185 suit amorous solicitation (Maxwell)
- 107 truth loyalty 135 render state 139 to leave for leaving

Than I did truly find her, stakes this ring;
 And would so, had it been a carbuncle°
 Of Phoebus' wheel,° and might so safely had it 190
 Been all the worth of's car. Away to Britain
 Post I in this design. Well may you, sir,
 Remember me at court, where I was taught
 Of° your chaste daughter the wide difference
 'Twixt amorous° and villainous. Being thus quenched 195
 Of hope, not longing,° mine Italian brain
 'Gan in your duller Britain operate
 Most vilely; for my vantage,° excellent.
 And, to be brief, my practice° so prevailed
 That I returned with simular° proof enough 200
 To make the noble Leonatus mad
 By wounding his belief in her renown°
 With tokens thus and thus; averring° notes
 Of chamber hanging, pictures, this her bracelet—
 O cunning, how I got it!—nay, some marks
 Of secret on her person, that he could not
 But think her bond of chastity quite cracked,
 I having ta'en the forfeit.° Whereupon—
 Methinks I see him now—

POSTHUMUS [Advancing.] Ay, so thou dost,
 Italian fiend! Ay me, most credulous fool,
 Egregious murderer, thief, anything
 That's due° to all the villains past, in being,
 To come! O, give me cord or knife or poison,
 Some upright justicer!° Thou, king, send out
 For torturers ingenious. It is I
 That all th' abhorrèd things o' th' earth amend°
 By being worse than they. I am Posthumus,
 That killed thy daughter—villainlike, I lie—
 That caused a lesser villain than myself,
 A sacrilegious thief, to do't. The temple
 Of Virtue was she; yea, and she herself.°
 Spit, and throw stones, cast mire upon me, set
 The dogs o' th' street to bay me; every villain
 Be called Posthumus Leonatus, and
 Be villainy less° than 'twas! O Imogen!
 My queen, my life, my wife! O Imogen,
 Imogen, Imogen!

IMOGEN Peace, my lord. Hear, hear—

POSTHUMUS

Shall's° have a play of this? Thou scornful page,
 There lie thy part.° [Striking her; she falls.]

PISANIO

O gentlemen, help!

Mine and your mistress! O my lord Posthumus,
 You ne'er killed Imogen till now. Help, help!
 Mine honored lady!

CYMBELINE Does the world go round?

POSTHUMUS

How comes these staggers° on me?

PISANIO

Wake, my mistress!

189 carbuncle red precious stone 190 Of Phoebus' wheel decorating the sun god's chariot 194 Of by 195 amorous
 i.e., faithful 195-96 Being . . . longing the fire of hope (though not of desire) being thus put out 198 vantage profit
 199 practice plot 200 simular simulated, specious 202 renown good name 203 averring avouching 208 forfeit that which was forfeited for breach of contract
 211-21 anything That's due any word that's appropriate 214 justicer judge 216 amend make better (by contrast) 221 she herself Virtue herself 225 less i.e., by comparison with my villainy 228 Shall's shall us (we) 229 There . . .
 part play your role lying there 233 staggers dizziness

CYMBELINE

If this be so, the gods do mean to strike me
 To death with mortal° joy.

PISANIO

How fares my mistress? 235

IMOGEN

O, get thee from my sight;
 Thou gav'st me poison. Dangerous fellow, hence;
 Breathe not where princes are.

CYMBELINE

The tune° of Imogen!

PISANIO

Lady,
 The gods throw stones of sulphur° on me if 240
 That box I gave you was not thought by me
 A precious° thing; I had it from the queen.

CYMBELINE

New matter still.

IMOGEN

It poisoned me.

205

CORNELIUS

O gods!

I left out one thing which the queen confessed,
 Which must approve° thee honest. "If Pisanio 245
 Have," said she, "given his mistress that confection°
 Which I gave him for cordial, she is served
 As I would serve a rat."

210

CYMBELINE

What's this, Cornelius?

CORNELIUS

The queen, sir, very oft importuned me
 To temper° poisons for her, still pretending° 250
 The satisfaction of her knowledge only
 In killing creatures vile, as cats and dogs
 Of no esteem.° I, dreading that her purpose
 Was of more danger, did compound for her
 A certain stuff which, being ta'en, would cease° 255
 The present pow'r of life, but in short time
 All offices of nature° should again
 Do their due functions. Have you ta'en of it?

215

IMOGEN

Most like° I did, for I was dead.°

BELARIUS

My boys,

225

There was our error.

GUIDERIUS

This is sure Fidele.

260

IMOGEN

Why did you throw your wedded lady from you?
 Think that you are upon a rock,° and now
 Throw me again. [Embracing him.]

POSTHUMUS

Hang there like fruit, my soul,
 Till the tree die!

230

CYMBELINE

How now, my flesh, my child?

What, mak'st thou me a dullard° in this act?° 265
 Wilt thou not speak to me?

IMOGEN

[Kneeling.] Your blessing, sir.

BELARIUS

Though you did love this youth, I blame ye not;
 You had a motive° for't.

CYMBELINE

My tears that fall

235 mortal deadly, fatal 238 tune voice 240 stones of sulphur thunderbolts 242 precious i.e., beneficial 245 approve prove 246 confection drug 250 temper mix; still pretending always alleging as her purpose 253 esteem value 255 cease suspend 257 offices of nature bodily parts 259 like probably; dead as if dead 262 upon a rock sense unclear; "rock" is sometimes emended to "lock," a hold in wrestling 265 mak'st . . . dullard treat me like a fool (by ignoring me); act action, scene 268 motive cause

Prove holy water on thee. Imogen,
Thy mother's^o dead.

IMOGEN I am sorry for't, my lord.

CYMBELINE
O, she was naught,^o and long of^o her it was
That we meet here so strangely; but her son
Is gone, we know not how nor where.

PISANIO My lord,
Now fear is from me, I'll speak troth.^o Lord Cloten,
Upon my lady's missing, came to me
With his sword drawn, foamed at the mouth, and swore,
If I discovered^o not which way she was gone,
It was my instant death. By accident
I had a feignèd letter of my master's
Then in my pocket, which directed him
To seek her on the mountains near to Milford;
Where, in a frenzy, in my master's garments,
Which he enforced from me, away he posts
With unchaste purpose and with oath to violate
My lady's honor. What became of him
I further know not.

GUIDERIUS Let me end the story:
I slew him there.

CYMBELINE Marry,^o the gods forfend!^o
I would not thy good deeds^o should from my lips
Pluck a hard sentence. Prithee, valiant youth,
Deny't again.^o

GUIDERIUS I have spoke it, and I did it.

CYMBELINE
He was a prince.

GUIDERIUS
A most incivil^o one. The wrongs he did me
Were nothing princelike, for he did provoke me
With language that would make me spurn the sea
If it could so roar to me. I cut off's head,
And am right glad he is not standing here
To tell this tale of mine.

CYMBELINE I am sorry for thee.
By thine own tongue thou art condemned and must Endure our law. Thou'rt dead.

IMOGEN That headless man
I thought had been my lord.

CYMBELINE Bind the offender
And take him from our presence.

BELARIUS Stay, sir king.
This man is better than the man he slew,
As well descended as thyself, and hath
More of thee merited than a band of Clotens
Had ever scar for.^o—Let his arms alone;
They were not born for bondage.

CYMBELINE Why, old soldier:
Wilt thou undo the worth thou art unpaid for^o
By tasting of our wrath? How of descent
As good as we?

ARVIRAGUS In that he spake too far.

270 mother's stepmother's 271 naught wicked; long of because of 274 troth truth 277 discovered revealed 287
Marry indeed (from "By the Virgin Mary"); forfend forbid 288 thy good deeds i.e., in view of the good deeds (in battle) that thou 290 Deny't again speak again and deny what you have said (Nosworthy) 292 incivil unmannerly 305 Had . . . for ever earned by wounds 307 worth . . .
for thy not yet rewarded esteem (?)

CYMBELINE
And thou^o shalt die for't.

270 BELARIUS We will die all three 310
But I will prove^o that two on's^o are as good
As I have given out him. My sons, I must
For mine own part unfold a dangerous speech,
Though haply well for you.

ARVIRAGUS Your danger's ours.

GUIDERIUS
And our good his.

BELARIUS Have at it then. By leave,^o 315
Thou hadst, great king, a subject who Was called Belarius.

CYMBELINE What of him? He is
A banished traitor.

280 BELARIUS He it is that hath Assumed^o this age; indeed a banished man,
I know not how a traitor.

CYMBELINE Take him hence. 320
The whole world shall not save him.

285 BELARIUS Not too hot.^o
First pay me for the nursing of thy sons,
And let it^o be confiscate all, so soon
As I have received it.

CYMBELINE Nursing of my sons?

BELARIUS
I am too blunt and saucy; here's my knee. 325
Ere I arise I will prefer^o my sons;
Then spare not the old father. Mighty sir,
These two young gentlemen that call me father
And think they are my sons are none of mine;
They are the issue of your loins, my liege, 330
And blood of your begetting.

CYMBELINE How? My issue?

BELARIUS
So sure as you your father's. I, old Morgan,
Am that Belarius whom you sometime^o banished.
Your pleasure was my mere^o offense, my punishment
Itself, and all my treason; that I suffered 335
Was all the harm I did. These gentle princes—
For such and so they are—these twenty years
Have I trained up; those arts^o they have as I Could put into them. My breeding was, sir, as Your highness knows. Their nurse, Euriphile, 340
Whom for the theft I wedded, stole these children
Upon my banishment. I moved^o her to't,
Having received the punishment before
For that which I did then. Beaten^o for loyalty
Excited me to treason. Their dear loss, 345
The more of^o you 'twas felt, the more it shaped Unto^o my end of stealing them. But, gracious sir,
Here are your sons again, and I must lose
Two of the sweet'st companions in the world.
The benediction of these covering heavens 350
Fall on their heads like dew, for they are worthy
To inlay heaven with stars.

CYMBELINE Thou weep'st and speak'st.

310 thou Belarius 311 But . . . prove if I do not prove (Maxwell); on's of us 315 By leave by your permission
319 Assumed attained to 321 hot fast 323 it the payment 326 prefer promote (in rank) 333 sometime once 334 mere entire 338 arts accomplishments 342 moved incited 344 Beaten my having been beaten 346 of by 346-47 shaped Unto served

The service° that you three have done is more
Unlike° than this thou tell'st. I lost my children;
If these be they, I know not how to wish
A pair of worthier sons.

BELARIUS Be pleased awhile.
This gentleman whom I call Polydore,
Most worthy prince, as yours, is true Guiderius;
This gentleman, my Cadwal, Arviragus,
Your younger princely son. He, sir, was lapped°
In a most curious° mantle, wrought by th' hand
Of his queen mother, which for more probation°
I can with ease produce.

CYMBELINE Guiderius had
Upon his neck a mole, a sanguine° star;
It was a mark of wonder.

BELARIUS This is he,
Who hath upon him still that natural stamp.
It was wise Nature's end° in the donation
To be his evidence now.

CYMBELINE O, what am I?
A mother to the birth of three? Ne'er mother Rejoiced deliverance more. Blest pray you be,
That, after this strange starting from your orbs°,
You may reign in them now! O Imogen,
Thou hast lost by this a kingdom.

IMOGEN No, my lord,
I have got two worlds by't. O my gentle brothers,
Have we thus met? O, never say hereafter
But I am truest speaker. You called me brother
When I was but your sister, I you brothers
When ye were so indeed.

CYMBELINE Did you e'er meet?

ARVIRAGUS Ay, my good lord.

GUIDERIUS And at first meeting loved,
Continued so until we thought he died.

CORNELIUS By the queen's dram she swallowed.

CYMBELINE O rare instinct!
When shall I hear all through? This fierce° abridgment Hath to it circumstantial° branches, which Distinction should be rich in.° Where, how lived you?
And when came you to serve our Roman captive?
How parted with your brothers? How first met them?
Why fled you from the court? And whither? These,
And your three motives° to the battle, with
I know not how much more, should be demanded,
And all the other bye-dependences°
From chance° to chance; but nor° the time nor place
Will serve our long inter'gatories. See,
Posthumus anchors upon Imogen,
And she like harmless lightning throws her eye
On him, her brothers, me, her master, hitting
Each object with a joy; the counterchange°

Is severally in all.° Let's quit this ground
And smoke° the temple with our sacrifices.
Thou° art my brother; so we'll hold thee ever.

IMOGEN

You° are my father too, and did relieve° me
To see this gracious season.°

CYMBELINE

All o'erjoyed
Save these in bonds; let them be joyful too,
For they shall taste our comfort.°

IMOGEN

My good master,
I will yet do you service.

LUCIUS

Happy be you!

CYMBELINE

The forlorn° soldier, that so nobly fought,
He would have well becomeed this place and graced
The thankings of a king.

POSTHUMUS

I am, sir,
The soldier that did company these three
In poor beseeching;° 'twas a fitment° for
The purpose I then followed. That I was he, Speak, Iachimo. I had you down and might Have made you finish.°

IACHIMO

[Kneeling.] I am down again,
But now my heavy conscience sinks° my knee,
As then your force did. Take that life, beseech you,
Which I so often° owe; but your ring first,
And here the bracelet of the truest princess
That ever swore her faith.

POSTHUMUS

Kneel not to me.
The pow'r that I have on you is to spare you;
The malice towards you to forgive you. Live,
And deal with others better.

CYMBELINE

Nobly doomed!°
We'll learn our freeness° of a son-in-law:
Pardon's the word to all.

ARVIRAGUS

You help us, sir,
As° you did mean indeed to be our brother.
Joyed are we that you are.

POSTHUMUS

Your servant, princes. Good my lord of Rome,
Call forth your soothsayer. As I slept, methought Great Jupiter, upon his eagle backed°,
Appeared to me, with other spritely° shows
Of mine own kindred. When I waked, I found
This label° on my bosom, whose containing°
Is so from° sense in hardness that I can Make no collection of° it. Let him show
His skill in the construction.°

LUCIUS

Philharmonus!

SOOTHSAYER

Here, my good lord.

LUCIUS

Read, and declare the meaning.
SOOTHSAYER (Reads.) "Whenas a lion's whelp shall,

353 service i.e., in battle 354 Unlike improbable 360 lapped wrapped 361 curious elaborately wrought 362 probation proof 364 sanguine blood-red 367 end purpose 371 orbs spheres, orbits (of planets) 382 fierce drastic 383 circumstantial detailed 383-84 which . . . in which deserves to be elaborately discriminated (Maxwell) 388 your three motives the motives of you three 390 bye-dependences connected circumstances 391 chance event; nor neither 396 counterchange exchange

397 severally in all in each and in all 398 smoke fill with smoke 399 Thou Belarius 400 You Belarius; relieve aid 401 gracious season joyful occasion 403 taste our comfort share in our joy 405 forlorn lost, missing 409 beseeching appearance, clothing; fitment suitable device 412 finish die 413 sinks lowers 415 often many times over 420 doomed judged 421 freeness generosity 423 As as if 427 upon . . . backed upon the back of his eagle 428 spritely ghostly 430 label piece of paper; containing contents 431 from remote from 432 collection of conclusion about 433 construction interpretation to himself unknown, without seeking find, and be embraced by a piece of tender air; and when from a stately cedar shall be lopped branches which, being dead many years, shall after revive, be jointed to the old stock, and freshly grow; then shall Posthumus end 440 his miseries, Britain be fortunate and flourish in peace and plenty."

Thou, Leonatus, art the lion's whelp;
The fit and apt construction of thy name,
Being Leo-natus,° doth import so much.— 445
The piece of tender air, thy virtuous daughter,
Which we call mollis aer,° and mollis aer
We term it mulier.°—Which mulier I divine
Is thy most constant wife, who° even now
Answering the letter of the oracle, 450
Unknown to you, unsought, were clipped° about
With this most tender air.

CYMBELINE This hath some seeming.°

SOOTHSAYER

The lofty cedar, royal Cymbeline,
Personates° thee, and thy lopped branches point
Thy two sons forth; who, by Belarius stol'n, 455
For many years thought dead, are now revived,
To the majestic cedar joined, whose issue
Promises Britain peace and plenty.

CYMBELINE

Well,

My peace we will begin. And, Caius Lucius,

445 Leonatus lion-born 447 mollis aer tender air 448
mulier woman (thought to derive from mollis = soft) 449 who thou who (Posthumus) 451 clipped embraced 452 seeming plausibility 454 Personates represents

Although the victor, we submit to Caesar 460
And to the Roman empire, promising
To pay our wonted tribute, from the which
We were dissuaded by our wicked queen,
Whom° heavens in justice, both on her and hers,°
Have laid most heavy hand. 465

SOOTHSAYER

The fingers of the pow'rs above do tune
The harmony of this peace. The vision
Which I made known to Lucius ere the stroke
Of this yet scarce-cold battle, at this instant
Is full accomplished; for the Roman eagle, 470
From south to west on wing soaring aloft,
Lessened herself and in the beams o' th' sun
So vanished; which foreshowed our princely eagle,
Th' imperial Caesar, should again unite
His favor with the radiant Cymbeline, 475
Which shines here in the west.

CYMBELINE

Laud we the gods,

And let our crooked° smokes climb to their nostrils
From our blest altars. Publish we this peace
To all our subjects. Set we forward;° let 480
A Roman and a British ensign wave
Friendly together. So through Lud's Town march,
And in the temple of great Jupiter
Our peace we'll ratify, seal it with feasts.
Set on there!° Never was a war did cease,
Ere bloody hands were washed, with such a peace. 485

Exeunt.

464 Whom on whom; hers Cloten 477 crooked curling 479 Set we forward let us march 484 Set on there Begin marching

THE WINTER'S TALE

EDITED BY FRANK KERMODE

Introduction

The Winter's Tale is a very late work of Shakespeare's, probably the last he wrote without a collaborator except for The Tempest; and it is universally supposed to be closely associated with Cymbeline, The Tempest, and Pericles (although Pericles probably contains the work of another hand) in a grouping of comedies commonly called the "romances." I have no intention of trying to overthrow this supposition; but it is worth recalling that the friends of Shakespeare who compiled the First Folio in 1623, far from thinking these plays should be read as a group, allowed them to be separated from each other to the limits of physical possibility. The Tempest is the first play in the Folio, heading the section of comedies; The Winter's Tale is the last of the comedies, and was almost left out altogether; Cymbeline comes last among the tragedies, and is the final play of the Folio; Pericles they did not include at all, and it was left to the editors of the Third Folio (1664) to insert it, together with six other plays that nobody now attributes to Shakespeare. But the long labors of the chronologists have brought together these scattered cousins; it is another "triumph of time," like The Winter's Tale itself. And this has prepared the way for much interesting comment on the group and the relations between its members. Still, the indifference or imperceptiveness of Heminges and Condell may at least serve as a caution. Much as the romances resemble one another, they also exhibit striking differences; under the family resemblance, each has its private, personal life. The warning is so obvious as to be often ignored, and some intemperate commentary has resulted. The Winter's Tale has suffered with the others.

There is, for instance, the view—less common nowadays, but still to be met with—that these plays share a sort of calm or detached simplicity, as if the author had sought in romance relief from the evils and disasters of the tragedies. Now, the idea of romance, properly understood, implies passion and catastrophe, storm and violence; and Shakespeare's romances not only contain such elements, but often enact them with much turbulence both in the action and in the language. The verse frequently registers not a gentle detachment but rather a remarkable activity of mind. Thus the jealousy of Leontes may in the last analysis be a less complex matter than that of Othello; but it is less simply expressed. The language that embodies it combines hysterical grossness with suggestions of a mind once habituated to clarity but no longer quite able to declare itself clearly because of emotional pressure:

Ha' not you seen, Camillo—
But that's past doubt, you have, or your eyeglass
Is thicker than a cuckold's horn—or heard—
For to a vision so apparent, rumor
Cannot be mute—or thought—for cogitation
Resides not in that man that does not think—
My wife is slippery? (I.ii.267-73)

The evidence of Hermione's adultery is so overwhelming, so disgusting, that an intelligent friend's failure to notice it is an additional cause for anger. Leontes, accustomed to putting his thoughts clearly, organizes what he has to say in terms of sight, hearing, and reflection; but it would be equally loathsome to hear Camillo fawningly agree or disagree in order to dissuade Leontes from the course of self-torture to which he has committed himself. Thus contempt and fear join with sexual disgust and an intolerable sense of his own indignity to crowd and crush the speech, and neither Elizabethan nor modern punctuation can cope with its jolting syntax and distorted argument. Measure it against the grave and by no means ill-written opening of Greene's Pandosto: "whoso seeks by friendly counsel to raze out this hellish passion, it forthwith suspecteth that he giveth this advice to cover his own guiltiness. Yea, whoso is pained with this restless torment doubteth all, distrusteth himself, is always frozen with fear and fired with suspicion." Leontes in the play is ablaze with the passion of which Greene merely speaks. Or compare the same speech with Othello's after his fall into the same hell of sexual shock, reduced, when his agony is greatest, to broken exclamations: "O blood, blood, blood!" "Goats and monkeys!" Othello is not credited, as Leontes is, with an articulateness that matches his sense of self-destruction; he makes the great gestures appropriate to a noble understanding of what it means for a hero's life to be broken—

"Man but a rush against Othello's breast,/And he retires"—but escapes the more intellectual torments of Leontes.¹

Nor is this tumult of passionate meaning confined to moments of agony. It is a fair criticism of Cymbeline that there are places in it where the language is unnecessarily opaque, where—to quote Coleridge's definition of "mental bombast"—there are "thoughts and images too great for the subject." In The Tempest when Prospero tells Miranda of his brother's treachery, he can scarcely compress his meaning in his excited utterance. In The Winter's Tale we feel the pressure of excited intelligence in many other speakers, as well as in Leontes, notably in Perdita and Florizel; their language breaks bounds in the quest for completeness of statement.

What you do
Still betters what is done. When you speak, sweet,
I'd have you do it ever; when you sing,
I'd have you buy and sell so; so give alms,
Pray so; and for the ord'ring your affairs,
To sing them too. When you do dance, I wish you
A wave o' th' sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that—move still, still so,
And own no other function. Each your doing,
So singular in each particular,
Crowns what you are doing in the present deeds,
That all your acts are queens. (IV.iv.135-46)

Florizel begins a catalogue of beauties, each more amorously and extravagantly expressed than its predecessor, and all related to action: "do," "done," "do," "doing," "function," "doing," "acts." He is drunk with the exquisite activity of Perdita. But he has a rhetorical scheme, and persists in it: each act is in itself perfect, yet each surpasses the other. This lover's hyperbole might ring out frigidly from the pages of Greene's novella, but here the whole scheme is transformed by the figure of the wave, a rich metaphor that the verse enacts rhythmically: "move still, still so"; until, at the end, the rhetorician's wit glows with imaginative solemnity, for "queens" not only concludes the prescribed scheme but moves us out beyond it, into the sphere where Perdita, singing and dancing, queen of the feast and dressed as a goddess of spring's renewal, assumes the power to end by her action the hard grip of winter on the lives of her parents.

Such verse makes ridiculous the notion of an author grown vaguely benign with old age; and it is to be found in all the romances. There are other common features. In every play there is a discovery of lost royalty, princesses who are represented as of almost divine virtue and beauty; characters near death are restored to life; the breach in some prince's life is mended, years after the disaster which caused it, by the agency of young, beautiful, and innocent people; there are scenes of a pastoral character. All this is of the nature of romance, and the plays could well be called romantic tragicomedies. Edwin Greenlaw long ago pointed out that they derive ultimately from the Greek novel, especially perhaps from Daphnis and Chloe. This is the world of lost princesses, great storms that sunder families, lifetimes spent in wandering or suffering, babies put to sea in little boats (an experience that belonged to Perdita, in the source story, though Shakespeare saved it for Miranda) and later recognized by a mole or a jewel. Greene's Pandosto, on which Shakespeare based his Winter's Tale, is a typical Elizabethan novel in the same tradition. And these plays are dramatic versions of such stories.

¹ I am not suggesting that The Winter's Tale has the stature of Othello. The tragedy has a different and perhaps a greater design; its focus is on the hero and the ideas by which he animates and gives value to his world; whereas the hero of The Winter's Tale is Time; or you might prefer to say that its heroine is Nature. The difference of emphasis may be suggested by one small indication. The word "honor" occurs with great frequency in The Winter's Tale to show that its characters are all necessarily concerned with this public acceptance of their own integrity; but the idea of honor is not at all stressed, as of course it is in Othello, and I myself had not noticed the frequent occurrence of the word until I gave the text slow editorial scrutiny. The main interests of the play lie in such a way that "honor" is a marginal, though necessary, consideration.

Shakespeare had used elements of romance plot as early as The Comedy of Errors; in returning to it he handles it with a new simplicity, especially in The Winter's Tale. He has no more compunction than a novelist might have in allowing sixteen years to pass in the middle of the story. But this is not because he could not help it, because his technique had gone soft. Stories of this kind are in their nature somewhat primitive, and if profundities are to be found in them it will be by the writer who respects their nature. It required much lucidity and experience to design The Winter's Tale so simply. "Shakespeare," Northrop Frye has said, "arrived in his last period at the bedrock of drama, the romantic spectacle out of which all the more specialized forms of drama, such as tragedy and social comedy, have come, and to which they recurrently return." Of course there are very bad romance plays, some of them in the repertory of Shakespeare's company at this period. Merely using an archaic narrative ensures no big bonus of significance. That is the reward of genius, and of a lifetime of intelligent practice. I daresay Shakespeare might have been surprised to read in Frye that his Hermione is a "Proserpine figure," but not to hear that he had told his story in such a way that we see human life renewing itself, as spring follows winter. He even suggests the relevance of the well-known Proserpine myth in Perdita's flower speech. He is writing, with very conscious art, about the destruction and renewal of life, and finds in these romance stories the pattern he needs; it is his craft to elicit and enlarge their relevance.

It is perfectly consistent to add that Shakespeare was probably writing to meet a specific public demand (as the revival of an old and bad romance, Mucedorus, suggests). With similar opportunism, he probably used in the fourth act dances that his company had performed under grander circumstances at court. He may also have had in mind the Blackfriars, his company's new indoor theater, where from about 1609 they enjoyed the advantages of a smaller house with better music, good artificial lighting, scenes and machines, and an audience willing to pay six times the price of the cheapest place at the Globe. This was the time of the spectacular masques at the court of James I; Shakespeare's company were the King's Men; never had relations between court and stage been closer than now. They continued to play in the great outdoor theater; but possibly the Blackfriars, where some of the courtly spectacle could be reproduced, had something to do with the vogue for extravagant romance stories.

Yet this is not the most important clue to the nature of The Winter's Tale. For that we should turn to the greatest works in prose and verse of the period, Sidney's Arcadia and Spenser's Faerie Queene. It is no reflection on Greene to say that his novel cannot live with such romances as these; for they are in intention and performance the profoundest and most serious art of the period (Spenser's book, to risk a comparison for the modern reader, is as complex in plan as Ulysses). They nevertheless use romantic themes. They are concerned less with psychological realism than with supernaturally sanctioned reality under human appearances. Shakespeare knew them both, and used them, especially Spenser. Marina is his Florimel, Perdita his Pastorella; in The Winter's Tale he transforms Fawnia, Greene's royal changeling, and does so to make her like Spenser's noble shepherdess. And insofar as The Winter's Tale is philosophical it is Spenserian too; like Spenser, Shakespeare is preoccupied by Time as destroyer and renewer, that which ruins the work of men but is the father of truth. Just as the sea appears to be aimlessly destructive, tearing apart father and child, husband and wife, but is in the end seen to be "merciful" because it finally brings them together and restores their happiness, so Time only seems to change things because it must renew their truth.

All things steadfastness do hate
And changèd be: yet being rightly weighed
They are not changèd from their first estate,
But by their change their being do dilate,
And turning to themselves at length again,
Do work their own perfection so by fate.

(Faerie Queene, VII.vii.515-20)

Whatever else may be added on the point, this is the "philosophy" of The Winter's Tale as well as of the Mutability Cantos of Spenser. And Greene, to give him his due, called the novel on which Shakespeare based his play Pandosto: or, The Triumph of Time.

One more point before we turn from the romances in general to the specific qualities of The Winter's Tale: stories of this kind create for the dramatist peculiar technical problems. Characteristically, they require that there be treated the initial disaster by which the plot gains movement; the intermediate period where people suffer under the consequent wrongs and sorrows; and finally the restoration of happiness, the recognition, where all, by the work of time, "turns to itself at length again." Dramatically, the focus of such stories will tend to be the recognition; in Pericles, a very straggling play, this climax was what overwhelmingly interested Shakespeare, and he made it a kind of prototype of all the others. In Cymbeline he attempted a multiple recognition scene so extraordinary as to be without theatrical parallel. In The Tempest he concentrates the whole action at the moment of climax, merely recalling the initial treachery of Antonio. In The Winter's Tale he approaches the problem quite differently by dividing the story into three parts: first the Sicilian disaster, the destruction of happiness by Leontes' diseased passion; then the "green world" in which Perdita demonstrates renewed beauty and nobility (these two parts being equally balanced as to length); and finally an act of recognition. Though the great scene in Pericles is the ancestor of them all, the recognition scenes of these plays are all very different, and this of course contributes to their individuality, the sense we have that each grows its own imaginative and philosophical atmosphere. And nowhere is this atmosphere more distinctive, nowhere is the recognition more daringly conceived, than in The Winter's Tale.

Some indication of the dramatist's intention, both in this and in other aspects of the play, may be derived from a consideration of the changes he made in his source. The reader of Greene's Pandosto may see for himself the extent of both debt and deviation. But on the crucial matter of the great final act something must be said here. The statue scene is without parallel in Pandosto; at some stage Shakespeare made the momentous decision to keep Hermione alive, and invented the motif of the statue. It is possible that he did so in the course of writing; as Coleridge early pointed out, it would have been simple enough to provide for her survival by some ambiguity in the oracle, but Shakespeare does not do so, and it is a remarkable instance, the only one in Shakespeare or perhaps in the whole drama of the period, of the playwright's concealing so material a circumstance from the audience. Simon Forman, reporting on a performance of 1611 when the play was still fairly new, did not include in his account of the plot any allusion to the statue scene, so the play may have been without it in its first form. Having preserved Hermione alive, Shakespeare had of course greatly increased his technical problem at the end of the play. Had he followed Greene, the climactic moment would have been the discovery of Perdita's identity, and the scene would have had to be very like that of the reunion of Pericles and Marina. He could hardly have followed this with another scene of rapt verse and music for the reunion of Leontes and his wife; so he boldly throws away the Perdita recognition in a scene of gentlemanly chatter, and saves the great effects for the reunion of father, mother, and daughter at the end. Thus he avoids the anticlimactic conclusion of Pericles, where the reunion with Thaisa cannot make much effect after the great scene that precedes it. So Shakespeare solved his technical problem; the question remains, why did he need to create it by forsaking Greene and keeping Hermione alive? Why should the climax of the play be not the restoration of Perdita to her inheritance but the restoration of the queen to life? No one can answer that without looking at the play as a whole.

The whole work is as unorthodox structurally as the final scene. The first part, up to the end of III.ii, is dominated by the insane and tyrannous passion of Leontes. The Sicilian court has been a world of courtesy and innocence; these are virtues of Hermione and also of Polixenes, whose opening speech, with its pastoral figures, merely establishes an intelligent harmony that will be broken by the power of the diseased king. Polixenes remembers the innocence of his childhood friendship with Leontes, and says it resembled that of man before the Fall, when passion overthrew reason; and with the onset of the king's jealousy this overthrow is reenacted. It is clumsy to treat this as pure allegory, though that is a modern fashion; Shakespeare knew very well that there was implied in this narrative an analogy with the Fall, and he lived in an age when biblical typology and allegory were as familiar as they now seem outlandish. But this should lead us to the conclusion, not that he was writing allegory, but that he was recognizing the typical quality of this, as of any other story. A powerful mind is disturbed by a passion it is unwilling to control; suddenly the clear world of honor and courtesy darkens; friends can be Judases, good counselors traitors; what seems to be virtuous is in truth vicious; the gods themselves are liars. Here as elsewhere Shakespeare associates this profound perturbation, this infection of a world with the disease of one mind, with a specifically sexual misery. For Leontes—the word tolls out through these scenes—is diseased, and the air around him is infected, as if by a plague-bearing planet. His very language is hectic. That there is another and purer air we learn from the brief, beautifully placed III.i, when Cleomenes and Dion speak of the delicate climate and sweet air of Apollo's temple. And when, sixteen years later, we breathe the air of Perdita's pastoral Bohemia we recognize once more a purity associated with pure sexuality; as when Perdita wishes her lover "quick, and in mine arms." The country, its healing herbs and prophylactic flowers, is the antithesis of the plague-stricken city. And later, when Perdita arrives in Sicily, Leontes remembers the days of the great infection and prays accordingly:

The blessed gods
Purge all infection from our air whilst you
Do climate here! (V.i.168-70)

In the dark opening phase, the part of Hermione is that of the victim, Leontes that of the tyrant. Tyranny begins, as Milton says, "when upstart passions catch the government." But he considers and rejects the idea that he is behaving tyrannously; she, at her trial (which must recall the trial of Katherine in Henry VIII), argues that he is. His rejection of the oracle is a tyrannous act (Greene's Pandosto accepts it), and he at once suffers the traditional fate of the tyrant, the sudden exemplary punishment of heaven. His son dies, his queen dies; henceforth his life must be only repentance and obloquy. Or so it seems. At the end of III.ii, halfway through the play, we have reached what is practically a full tragic close, and if Leontes were to stab himself at that point there would be little sense of dramatic illogic. He has thrown away the pearl richer than all his tribe. Only the hint of the oracle ("if that which is lost be not found") and the fact that in romance castaway children always turn up, exist to make a faint suggestion of a happy issue.

The next scene, III.iii, is crucial, and again extraordinary; Antigonus, having had a vision of the dead Hermione, is sacrificed in order to move the play into a fantastic realm; the Clown and his father show us how different is the world we have entered by the unconcerned calm of their talk on the sinking of the ship and the bear's consumption of Antigonus. Then the old man speaks the famous line: "Now bless thyself; thou met'st with things dying, I with things new born." We pass from the world in which happiness and prosperity are destroyed by the storm of passion, to the world where Nature—"great creating Nature," as Shakespeare calls the presiding figure of the Mutability Cantos—reestablishes love and human continuance and proves that time and change are her servants, agents not only of change but of perpetuity, redeemers as well as destroyers.

The central action of Act IV is not complicated, but it is a very long act, and must have been the longer for the various diversions, the "nest of antics" ridiculed by Jonson, the catches and songs. The mood is of innocence (even Autolycus contributes to this, partly by establishing rustic virtues as opposed to those of the court—an old pastoral theme, and one paralleled by the debates between Corin and Touchstone in As You Like It), and Shakespeare wanted this part of the play to have mass enough to balance the Sicilian opening. Essentially, this act establishes a world in which Perdita's inborn nobility can display itself.

Although Shakespeare accepts some of the assumptions of the pastoral genre, it was clearly his effort to avoid urban condescension and sentimentality in this scene. These shepherds and shepherdesses are not the graceful figures of Spenser and Sidney; the young clown has his meanness, the old one his strong sense of self-preservation; Polixenes is charmed by the feast and by Perdita's beauty, but when the holiday is over his exposure of the girl and his judgment of his son are extremely tough. Against this infused realism, the insistence upon Perdita's superiority, her innate nobility and godlike beauty, becomes more remarkable. It is, considered merely as a narrative device, part of the tradition, but it occupied Shakespeare at a very deep level. There are signs of his interest in it at an earlier stage in his career, but in the romances he turned upon it the same deepening attention as we observe him giving such conventions as the twin plot—that which was first only a dramaturgical device becomes an issue for mature meditation. Marina in the brothel and Cymbeline's sons in the Welsh cave have the virtue of high birth, and their hereditary cultivation will show itself even in unfavorable circumstances. In The Tempest Caliban is the base natural stock, Miranda (educated with him) has, as part of her inheritance, that "better nature" which places her on the side of mankind toward the gods, as he is on the side toward the beasts.² Perdita, like all the romance heroines mistaken for a goddess, is, very remarkably, made the occasion for Shakespeare's fullest exposition of the idea. It is characteristic of Shakespeare's economy that her flower piece, which could have been a moment of pastoral prettiness, modulates into this quasi-philosophical debate with Polixenes:

PERDITA

Sir, the year growing ancient,
Not yet on summer's death, nor on the birth
Of trembling winter, the fairest flow'rs o' th' season
Are our carnations and streaked gillyvors,
Which some call Nature's bastards; of that kind
Our rustic garden's barren; and I care not
To get slips of them.

POLIXENES Wherefore, gentle maiden,
Do you neglect them?

PERDITA For I have heard it said,
There is an art, which in their piedness shares
With great creating Nature.

POLIXENES Say there be;
Yet Nature is made better by no mean
But Nature makes that mean; so over that art
Which you say adds to Nature, is an art
That Nature makes. You see, sweet maid, we marry
A gentler scion to the wildest stock,
And make conceive a bark of baser kind
By bud of nobler race. This is an art
Which does mend Nature, change it rather; but

² This point is discussed and documented in my Arden edition of The Tempest (sixth rev. ed., 1958).

The art itself is Nature.

PERDITA So it is.

POLIXENES

Then make your garden rich in gillyvors,
And do not call them bastards.

PERDITA I'll not put

The dibble in earth, to set one slip of them;

No more than were I painted, I would wish

This youth should say 'twere well, and only therefore

Desire to breed by me. (IV.iv.79-103)

In this disagreement Polixenes only seems to win, though he has the general weight of contemporary thought on his side; the art of the gardener in improving wild natural stocks was treated as a figure of the distinctive human power to improve and civilize the environment, and it was customary to add that in so doing Art was nevertheless the agent of Nature. Perdita does not know she is herself noble, and is only playing at being a queen, though the audience has already noted strong suggestions of her royalty, indeed of her semidivinity; and there is a purely dramatic irony in the discussion, since Polixenes is to oppose the union of his noble son with a supposedly baseborn girl, thus contradicting his own philosophy; whereas she, baseborn and hoping to marry a prince, resists his horticultural analogy. Her case is precisely that of Marvell in his poem "The Mower against Gardens," in which the gardener is called not an improver of nature but a pander; but Perdita, unable to answer the argument from gardening, produces one from cosmetics ("the gillyvors are like painted women") and so tacitly rejects the implied resemblance between herself and "barks of baser kind." Leaving aside the purely dramatic ironies, this debate is one on which the arguments on both sides were well known, and Shakespeare's purpose is not to identify himself with one side or the other so much as to tell the audience that the great topic of the relations between Art and Nature are relevant to his purposes; to establish in every word as well as every action the "better nature" of Perdita, and to prepare the way for a climactic scene in which, when the statue proves to be powerful and beautiful beyond the scope of art, we shall see finally the incomparable work of "great creating Nature." Whenever he includes discussion of this kind—as he does, for example, in The Merchant of Venice, in Troilus and Cressida, in Measure for Measure—we may expect it to have its repercussions on the action. In this play we find them in the last act.

The pattern of this act is determined, as we have seen, by the need for a double recognition, but nothing at the level of plot required the dramatist to bring Hermione back into the play as a statue. Admittedly the scene lends itself to that tone of exalted joy which distinguishes these late plays of reunion, and is magnificently theatrical; having once committed himself to the situation the old master makes the most of the chance, holds us to the long moment of Hermione's immobility, and when it is over, concludes the play with what must appear, unless the director has the necessary sensitivity and tact, unseemly haste. But as usual he makes theatrical effect compatible with thematic interest. Paulina soaks her guests in art by taking them on an extended tour of the gallery before she lets them see the statue. They praise it for its naturalness, its "life," while she protests that the color is still wet and calls it a "poor image." "What was he that did make it?" asks Leontes in unconscious tribute to the god of nature. The work is so "alive," he says, "that we are mocked with art." Slowly the statue moves out of the possibilities of art: "what fine chisel/Could ever yet cut breath?" Then it moves indeed, and the hypothesis that this is art can only be defended by calling that art magic. Finally it speaks, and blesses Perdita, and this no work of art, but only works of great creating Nature, can do.

In its identification of the thematic and the theatrical, this is a true work of Shakespeare's. It is, of course, more complex than my account suggests. The survival of Hermione authenticates Perdita's beauty; Time, which has seemed the destroyer, is a redeemer. At one masterly moment Perdita herself stands like a statue beside the supposed statue of her mother, to remind us that created things work their own perfection and continuance in time, as well as suffer under it. And in the end the play seems to say (I borrow the language of Yeats) that "whatever is begotten, born and dies" is nobler than "monuments of unageing intellect"—and also, when truly considered, more lasting.

Such a formula may justly attract the complaint that it is partial and moralizing. The play is a great one, with a natural energy that supports all it says about natural power; its scheme is deep-laid and its language fertile in suggestion. It will not be trapped by the historian, though he can speak of the vogue of tragicomic romance and compare Perdita with Pastorella. It will not, either, be caught in the net of allegory. To say that Hermione suffers, dies, and is restored to life is not to suggest a parallel that the author missed, but equally not to hit his true intention. All truths, he might argue, are related to the Truth; all good stories will have—to use the term of Erich Auerbach—a "figural" quality. The Winter's Tale, like many other stories, deals with sin and forgiveness, and with the triumph of time—also a Christian theme. But we value it not for some hidden truth, but for its power to realize experience, to show something of life that could be shown only by the intense activity of intellect and imagination in the medium of a theatrical form. It is not a great allegory or a great argument, but a great play.

A NOTE ON THE SOURCE

Shakespeare's source was a novella by his old enemy Robert Greene. The title of the first edition reads:

Pandosto. The Triumph of Time. Wherein is discovered by a pleasant Historie, that although by the meanes of sinister fortune, Truth may be concealed, yet by Time in spite of fortune it is most manifestly reuealed. Pleasant for age to auoyde drowsie thoughtes, profitable for youth to eschue other wanton pastimes, and bringing to both a desired content. Temporis filia veritas. By Robert Greene, Maister of Artes in Cambridge. Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit vtile dulci. Imprinted at London by Thomas Orwin for Thomas Cadman, dwelling at the Signe of the Bible, neere vnto the North doore of Paules, 1588.

The Short Title Catalogue records only one copy of this edition, in the British Museum; and that is imperfect. There were subsequent editions in 1592, 1595, 1607, and later. But although there was so recent an edition available, Shakespeare appears to have used the first. He seems for some reason to have been interested in Greene at this time, for he also drew on the pamphleteer's popular studies of the London underworld, especially The Second Part of Conny-catching (1592), useful for describing the tricks of Autolycus (especially the cheating of the Clown in IV.iii); and although he rejected Greene's personal names, he replaced "Garinter" by "Mamillius," perhaps remembering Greene's "looking glass for the ladies of England," Mamillia (1583).

Shakespeare treats Pandosto in his usual way, freely changing it but often echoing its language and incidents. The following very brief summary uses the names Shakespeare gave the characters.

Shakespeare changes the countries about; Leontes is King of Bohemia, Polixenes of Sicily; and it is the wife of Polixenes who is daughter of the Empress of Russia, not Hermione. Greene's Hermione, though perfectly innocent, gives more color to the suspicions of Leontes by the freedom of her conduct toward Polixenes. She does not discover her pregnancy till she is already in prison. Camillo shows more self-interest in the novel, and has no part in the return of Perdita to her father. The jealousy of Leontes, though not well founded, is less of a brainstorm in the original. He sends the new baby to sea in a little boat by herself; there is no Antigonus. After the trial he instantly accepts the word of the oracle, but his son and his wife both die. Perdita is cast ashore in Sicily and reared by shepherds interested in the gold that accompanies her. Years later, she is wooed by Florizel, but here the tone of the novel is very different from that of the play, despite suggestions that Shakespeare used in the sheep-shearing scene. Florizel is much more formal, and the relationship, until Perdita, properly suspicious, alters it by insisting on her virtue, is not much different from an ordinary seduction of a country girl by a courtier. But Florizel, appearing as a shepherd, establishes the honesty of his intentions and plans to amass money to elope with Perdita to Italy. The unhappy old shepherd is tricked into boarding the ship (but not by Autolycus, who does not exist in the novel). When the couple arrives in Bohemia, Leontes conceives a lustful desire for Perdita, and throws Florizel into prison. But when he hears the whole story from the ambassadors of Polixenes (who is alarmed to think of his son in the hands of an enemy), he frees Florizel and condemns Perdita and her father to death. But the old man now tells his tale; Perdita is proved to be Leontes' lost daughter. She returns to Sicily with Florizel, and they are married; but Leontes kills himself from remorse.

I have given no account of many changes that are simply a matter of dramaturgical economy. Despite the strong similarities in plot, there are important alterations in Shakespeare. The greatest of these, if the least tangible, is his substitution of Nature for Fortune as the deity presiding over the original story; and the consequent reconstruction in the statue scene, with Hermione restored and Leontes transported with joy at the recovery of his wife, his daughter, and his friend. For Shakespeare's Perdita and Florizel, Greene affords little more than hints, and the whole pastoral of the fourth act is similarly built on mere suggestions. Greene's Florizel knows better than to speak freely of his love; and Polixenes does not visit the sheep-fold, let alone converse with Perdita on profound topics. The point at which the two works most closely concur is the scene of Hermione's trial, but other references to Greene's text are fairly frequent, so that it looks as if Shakespeare had the book on his desk. It was the story he wanted, to adapt as freely as he chose, and he shuns the Arcadianism of Greene's dialogue; yet once again the dead author might have found cause to complain, as he had eighteen years earlier, that the "upstart crow" had been "beautified with our feathers."

A NOTE ON THE TEXT

The Winter's Tale was placed at the end of the section of comedies in the Folio of 1623. There was no earlier edition, and so all subsequent editions derive from the Folio text. Bibliographical evidence shows that the play was added to the Folio late, when a number of the history plays had already been printed. Possibly no copy was available until then. The copy that eventually reached the printing house was almost certainly a transcript of the play made by Ralph Crane, whose hand is now well known to scholars. Crane did a good deal for Shakespeare's company, the King's Men, and the Folio texts of The Tempest and The Two Gentlemen of Verona—and possibly other plays too—are attributable to him. Certain of his characteristics—notably his fondness for brackets and his habit of placing all the entries at the head of the scene, whether or not they are repeated when the character actually comes in—are abundantly in evidence in the Folio text of The Winter's Tale.

The text is very deficient in stage directions, and Crane's copy was evidently not made for use in the playhouse. But he was an intelligent scribe, and doubtless gave the compositor clean copy. In fact, this is one of the cleanest of Shakespeare's texts, despite the difficulty of some of the verse. The present edition deletes the superfluous entries at heads of scenes and places them at the appropriate positions, modernizes spelling and punctuation, and translates from Latin into English the Folio's act and scene divisions. The list of characters, here prefixed to the play, in the Folio follows the play. Other material departures from the Folio text are listed below in boldface type, followed by the Folio's reading (F) in roman; in only three or four places is any real difficulty involved.

I.i.29 have hath

I.ii.104 And A 158 do does 208 you, they say you say 276 hobbyhorse Holy-horse 327-28 Sully/The purity Sully the puritie 446-47 thereon/His execution sworn Thereon his Execution sworne

II.i.25-26 I have one/Of I have one of

II.ii.6 whom who 52 let't le't

II.iii.39 What Who 53 profess professes 177 its it

III.ii.1 session Sessions 10 Silence [F italicizes, as if s.d.] 32 Who Whom 107 for no

III.iii.18 awaking a waking 116 made mad

IV.iii.10 With heigh, with heigh With heigh 58 offends offend

IV.iv.2 Do Do's 12 Digest it with Digest with 13 swoon sworne 98 your you 160 out on't 364 who whom 422 acknowledged acknowledge 426 who whom 431 shalt see shalt neuer see 442 hoop hope 470 your my 493 hide hides

502 whom who 552 asks thee, the son, forgiveness asks thee there Sonne forgiueneesse 708 know not know 738 or toaze

at toaze 846 Exit Exeunt

V.i.12 True, too true [F places the first "true" at the end of Leontes' previous speech] 61 just cause just such cause 75 I have done [F gives to Cleomenes]

V.ii.35 Hermione Hermiones

V.iii.18 Lonely Louely 96 Or on

THE WINTER'S TALE

The Names of the Actors

LEONTES King of Sicilia
MAMILLIUS young Prince of Sicilia
CAMILLO
ANTIGONUS } four lords of Sicilia
CLEOMENES }
DION }
HERMIONE queen to Leontes
PERDITA daughter to Leontes and Hermione
PAULINA wife to Antigonus
EMILIA a lady [attending on Hermione]
POLIXENES King of Bohemia
FLORIZEL Prince of Bohemia

OLD SHEPHERD reputed father of Perdita
CLOWN his son
AUTOLYCUS a rogue
ARCHIDAMUS a lord of Bohemia
[A MARINER]
[A JAILER]
[MOPSA } shepherdesses
DORCAS }
Other LORDS and GENTLEMEN [LADIES
OFFICERS of the Court] SERVANTS
SHEPHERDS SHEPHERDESSES
[TIME as chorus]

[Scene: Sicilia and Bohemia]

A C T I

Scene I. [Sicilia, the court of Leontes.]

Enter CAMILLO and ARCHIDAMUS.

ARCHIDAMUS If you shall chance, Camillo, to visit Bohemia, on the like occasion whereon my services are now on foot, you shall see, as I have said, great difference betwixt our Bohemia and your Sicilia.

CAMILLO I think this coming summer the King of Sicilia means to pay Bohemia the visitation which he justly owes him.

ARCHIDAMUS Wherein our entertainment shall shame us we will be justified in our loves;° for indeed—

CAMILLO Beseech you—

ARCHIDAMUS Verily I speak it in the freedom of my knowledge: we cannot with such magnificence—in so rare—I know not what to say. . . . We will give you sleepy drinks, that your senses, unintelligent° of our insufficiency, may, though they cannot praise us, as little accuse us.

CAMILLO You pay a great deal too dear for what's given freely.

ARCHIDAMUS Believe me, I speak as my understanding instructs me, and as mine honesty puts it to utterance.

CAMILLO Sicilia cannot show himself overkind to Bohemia. They were trained together in their childhoods; and there rooted betwixt them then such an affection, which cannot choose but branch° now. Since their more mature dignities and royal necessities made separation of their society,° their encounters though not personal, have been royally attorneyed° with interchange of gifts, letters, loving embassies, that they have seemed to be together, though absent: shook hands, as over a vast;° and embraced as it were

The decorative border shown above was used in the First Folio edition of Shakespeare's plays, 1623.

I.i.8-9 Wherein . . . loves our entertainment may fall short of yours, but we shall make up for it by the strength of our affection

15 unintelligent unaware 26 branch i.e., flourish 28 society companionship 29 attorneyed supplied by substitutes 32 vast desolate space from the ends of opposed winds. The heavens continue their loves!

ARCHIDAMUS I think there is not in the world either 35 malice or matter to alter it. You have an unspeakable comfort of your young Prince Mamillius; it is a gentleman of the greatest promise that ever came into my note.

CAMILLO I very well agree with you in the hopes of 40 him. It is a gallant child; one that, indeed, physics the subject,^o makes old hearts fresh; they that went on crutches ere he was born desire yet their life to see him a man.

ARCHIDAMUS Would they else be content to die? 45

CAMILLO Yes, if there were no other excuse why they should desire to live.

ARCHIDAMUS If the king had no son, they would desire to live on crutches till he had one. Exeunt.

Scene II. [The court of Leontes.]

Enter LEONTES, HERMIONE, MAMILLIUS, POLI-XENES, CAMILLO, [and ATTENDANTS].

POLIXENES

Nine changes of the wat'ry star^o hath been
The shepherd's note since we have left our throne
Without a burden: time as long again
Would be filled up, my brother, with our thanks,
And yet we should for perpetuity 5
Go hence in debt. And therefore, like a cipher,
Yet standing in rich place, I multiply
With one "We thank you," many thousands moe^o
That go before it.^o

LEONTES Stay your thanks awhile,
And pay them when you part.

POLIXENES Sir, that's tomorrow. 10
I am questioned by my fears of what may chance
Or breed upon our absence, that may blow
No sneaping winds at home, to make us say,
"This is put forth too truly."^o Besides, I have stayed
To tire your royalty.

LEONTES We are tougher, brother, 15
Than you can put us to't.^o

POLIXENES No longer stay.

LEONTES One sev'night longer.

POLIXENES Very sooth, tomorrow.

LEONTES We'll part the time between's then; and in that I'll no gainsaying.^o

POLIXENES Press me not, beseech you, so.
There is no tongue that moves, none, none i' th' world 20

41-42 physics the subject is good medicine for the people
I.ii.i wat'ry star the moon 8 moe more 3-9 time . . .
it it would take us the same length of time to thank you, and even then we should leave here forever your debtors. So I offer you one more thank-you, which, though it is in itself nothing, works like a zero on the end of a number and multiplies all the thanks I have given you before (instead of merely adding to them) 11-14 I . . . truly I am worried about what may happen at home, perhaps as a result of my absence—worried in case blighting influences may not be at work which we shall regret, saying "We went away only too well" 16 put us to't drive us to extremities 19 I'll no gainsaying I'll not accept a refusal

So soon as yours could win me; so it should now,
Were there necessity in your request, although
'Twere needful I denied it. My affairs
Do even drag me homeward; which to hinder 25
Were, in your love, a whip to me;^o my stay,
To you a charge and trouble: to save both,
Farewell, our brother.

LEONTES Tongue-tied, our queen? Speak you.

HERMIONE

I had thought, sir, to have held my peace until
You had drawn oaths from him not to stay. You, sir,
Charge him too coldly. Tell him you are sure 30
All in Bohemia's well; this satisfaction,
The bygone day proclaimed. Say this to him,
He's beat from his best ward.^o

LEONTES Well said, Hermione.

HERMIONE

To tell he longs to see his son were strong;
But let him say so then, and let him go; 35
But let him swear so, and he shall not stay,
We'll thwack him hence with distaffs.
Yet of your royal presence, I'll adventure
The borrow of a week. When at Bohemia
You take my lord, I'll give him my commission 40
To let him there a month behind the gest^o
Prefixed for's parting, yet, good deed,^o Leontes,
I love thee not a jar^o o' th' clock behind
What lady she^o her lord. You'll stay?

POLIXENES No, madam.

HERMIONE

Nay, but you will?

POLIXENES I may not, verily. 45

HERMIONE

Verily?

You put me off with limber^o vows; but I,
Though you would seek t' unsphere the stars with oaths,
Should yet say, "Sir, no going." Verily,
You shall not go; a lady's "Verily" is 50
As potent as a lord's. Will you go yet?
Force me to keep you as prisoner,
Not like a guest; so you shall pay your fees^o
When you depart, and save your thanks. How say you?
My prisoner or my guest? By your dread "Verily," 55
One of them you shall be.

POLIXENES Your guest, then, madam:

To be your prisoner should import offending;^o
Which is for me less easy to commit,
Than you to punish.

HERMIONE Not your jailer, then,
But your kind hostess. Come, I'll question you 60
Of my lord's tricks, and yours, when you were boys:
You were pretty lordings then?

POLIXENES We were, fair queen,
Two lads that thought there was no more behind^o
But such a day tomorrow as today,
And to be boy eternal.

25 Were . . . me i.e., though doing it out of love, you would be tormenting me by making me stay in these circumstances 33 ward defensive posture in fencing 41 gest stage of royal progress; time allocated to one place on the route 42 good deed indeed, in very deed 43 jar tick 44 lady she gentlewoman 47 limber limp 53 fees which were always due from prisoner to jailer 57 import offending mean that I had committed some crime 63 behind to come

HERMIONE Was not my lord
The verier wag o' th' two?

POLIXENES
We were as twinned lambs, that did frisk i' th' sun,
And bleat the one at th' other; what we changed°
Was innocence for innocence; we knew not
The doctrine of ill-doing, nor dreamed 70
That any did; had we pursued that life,
And our weak spirits ne'er been higher reared
With stronger blood, we should have answered heaven
Boldly, "Not guilty"; the imposition cleared,
Hereditary ours.°

HERMIONE By this we gather 75
You have tripped since.

POLIXENES O my most sacred lady,
Temptations have since then been born to's, for
In those unfledged days was my wife a girl;
Your precious self had then not crossed the eyes
Of my young playfellow.

HERMIONE Grace to boot!° 80
Of this make no conclusion,° lest you say
Your queen and I are devils. Yet go on,
Th' offenses we have made you do we'll answer,
If you first sinned with us, and that with us
You did continue fault, and that you slipped not
With any but with us.

LEONTES Is he won yet?

HERMIONE
He'll stay, my lord.

LEONTES At my request he would not.
Hermione, my dearest, thou never spok'st
To better purpose.

HERMIONE Never?

LEONTES Never but once.

HERMIONE
What! Have I twice said well? When was't before? 90
I prithee tell me; cram's with praise, and make's
As fat as tame things: one good deed, dying tongueless, Slaughters a thousand waiting upon that.
Our praises are our wages—you may ride's
With one soft kiss a thousand furlongs, ere 95
With spur we heat an acre.° But to th' goal:
My last good deed was to entreat his stay.
What was my first? It has an elder sister,
Or I mistake you; O, would her name were Grace!
But once before I spoke to th' purpose? When? 100
Nay, let me have't; I long.

LEONTES Why, that was when
Three crabbèd months had soured themselves to death,
Ere I could make thee open thy white hand
And clap° thyself my love; then didst thou utter,
"I am yours forever."

HERMIONE 'Tis Grace indeed. 105
Why, lo you now, I have spoke to th' purpose twice:
The one forever earned a royal husband;
Th' other, for some while a friend.

68 changed exchanged 72–75 our weak . . . ours i.e., had the weakness of our animal spirits not been fortified by the passionate blood of maturity, our wills would never have been corrupted, and we should have been able to claim exemption from the taint of original sin 80 Grace to boot Heaven help me! 81 make no conclusion do not pursue that line of argument 96 heat an acre race over a furlong 104 clap offer the handclasp that seals a bargain

LEONTES [Aside.] Too hot, too hot!
To mingle friendship far is mingling bloods.
I have tremor cordis° on me; my heart dances, 110
But not for joy, not joy. This entertainment
May a free face put on, derive a liberty
From heartiness, from bounty, fertile bosom,°
And well become the agent—'t may, I grant;
But to be paddling palms and pinching fingers, 115
As now they are, and making practiced smiles
As in a looking glass; and then to sigh, as 'twere
The mort o' th' deer°—oh, that is entertainment
My bosom likes not, nor my brows.° Mamillius,
Art thou my boy?

MAMILLIUS Ay, my good lord.

LEONTES I' fecks!° 120
Why, that's my bawcock.° What, hast smutched thy nose?
They say it is a copy out of mine. Come, captain,
We must be neat—not neat,° but cleanly, captain:
And yet the steer, the heifer, and the calf,
Are all called neat. Still virginaling° 125
Upon his palm? How now, you wanton calf,
Art thou my calf?

MAMILLIUS Yes, if you will, my lord.

LEONTES
Thou want'st a rough pash,° and the shoots that I have To be full like me: yet they say we are Almost as like as eggs; women say so, 130
That will say anything. But were they false
As o'er-dyed blacks,° as wind, as waters; false
As dice are to be wished, by one that fixes
No bourn° 'twixt his and mine—yet were it true
To say this boy were like me. Come, Sir Page, 135
Look on me with your welkin° eye. Sweet villain,
Most dear'st, my collop!° Can thy dam,° may't be?
Affection!° Thy intention° stabs the center.°
Thou dost make possible things not so held,
Communicat'st with dreams—how can this be?— 140
With what's unreal thou coactive art,
And fellow'st nothing. Then 'tis very credent°
Thou mayst co-join with something, and thou dost,
And that beyond commission, and I find it,
And that to the infection of my brains, 145
And hardening of my brows.°

110 tremor cordis palpitation of the heart 113 fertile bosom generous affection 117–18 as 'twere . . . deer like the horn call signifying the death of the deer 119 brows alluding to the myth of the horns that grow on the foreheads of cuckolds 120 fecks a mild oath, derived from "I' faith" 121 bawcock fine fellow (French = beau coq) 123 neat Leontes rejects the word because it also means "horned cattle" 125 virginaling i.e., as if playing the virginals (a small keyboard instrument) 128 pash head 132 o'er-dyed blacks black garments worn out by too much dyeing 134 bound boundary 136 welkin blue (like the sky) 137 collop a cut off his own flesh; dam mother (Leontes' thoughts still run on cattle) 138 Affection passion; intention purpose; center of the world(?) of my heart(?) 142 credent credible 138–46 Affection . . . brows may be corrupt; paraphrase: "Passion! Your desire for fulfillment can pierce to the heart of things. You deal with matters normally thought of as illusory—with dreams and fantasies, impossible as that sounds. You collaborate with the unreal; so it is not improbable that you should do so with what really exists; this is what has happened, as my mental disturbance and cuckold's horns indicate." The passion is jealousy; Leontes recognizes that it is sometimes baseless, but argues that it is not so in his case

POLIXENES What means Sicilia?

HERMIONE

He something seems unsettled.

POLIXENES

How, my lord?

LEONTES

What cheer? How is't with you, best brother?

HERMIONE

You look

As if you held a brow of much distraction;

Are you moved, my lord?

LEONTES

No, in good earnest.

150

How sometimes nature will betray its folly,

Its tenderness, and make itself a pastime

To harder bosoms! Looking on the lines

Of my boy's face, methoughts I did recoil

Twenty-three years, and saw myself unbreeched,

155

In my green velvet coat; my dagger muzzled,

Lest it should bite its master, and so prove,

As ornaments oft do, too dangerous.

How like, methought, I then was to this kernel,

This squash,^o this gentleman. Mine honest friend,

160

Will you take eggs for money?^o

MAMILLIUS

No, my lord, I'll fight.

LEONTES

You will? Why, happy man be's dole!^o My brother,

Are you so fond of your young prince as we

Do seem to be of ours?

POLIXENES

If at home, sir,

165

He's all my exercise, my mirth, my matter;

Now my sworn friend, and then mine enemy;

My parasite, my soldier, statesman, all.

He makes a July's day short as December,

And with his varying childness, cures in me

170

Thoughts that would thicken my blood.^o

LEONTES

So stands this squire

Officed with me.^o We two will walk, my lord,

And leave you to your graver steps. Hermione,

How thou lov'st us, show in our brother's welcome;

Let what is dear in Sicily, be cheap;

175

Next to thyself and my young rover, he's

Apparent^o to my heart.

HERMIONE

If you would seek us,

We are yours i' th' garden; shall's attend you there?

LEONTES

To your own bents dispose you; you'll be found,

Be you beneath the sky. [Aside.] I am angling^o now,

180

Though you perceive me not how I give line.

Go to, go to!

How she holds up the neb,^o the bill to him!

And arms her with the boldness of a wife

To her allowing^o husband! [Exeunt POLIXENES, HERMIONE, and ATTENDANTS.] Gone already!

185

Inch-thick, knee-deep, o'er head and ears a forked^o

one!

Go play, boy, play: thy mother plays, and I

Play too—but so disgraced a part, whose issue^o

Will hiss me to my grave; contempt and clamor

Will be my knell. Go play, boy, play. There have been, 190

Or I am much deceived, cuckolds ere now,

And many a man there is, even at this present,

Now, while I speak this, holds his wife by th' arm,

That little thinks she has been sluiced in's absence,

And his pond fished by his next neighbor, by 195

Sir Smile, his neighbor, nay, there's comfort in't,

Whiles other men have gates, and those gates opened,

As mine, against their will. Should all despair,

That have revolted^o wives, the tenth of mankind

Would hang themselves. Physic for't there's none; 200

It is a bawdy planet, that will strike

Where 'tis predominant;^o and 'tis powerful, think it,

From east, west, north, and south. Be it concluded,

No barricado for a belly. Know't

It will let in and out the enemy, 205

With bag and baggage. Many thousand on's

Have the disease, and feel't not. How now, boy!

MAMILLIUS

I am like you, they say.

LEONTES

Why, that's some comfort.

What! Camillo there?

CAMILLO

Ay, my good lord. 210

LEONTES

Go play, Mamillius; thou'rt an honest man.

[Exit MAMILLIUS.]

Camillo, this great sir will yet stay longer.

CAMILLO

You had much ado to make his anchor hold;

When you cast out, it still came home. 170

LEONTES

Didst note it?

CAMILLO

He would not stay at your petitions, made 215

His business more material.

LEONTES

Didst perceive it?

[Aside.]

They're here with me already:^o whispering, rounding:^o

"Sicilia is a so-forth":^o 'tis far gone,

When I shall gust^o it last. How came't, Camillo,

That he did stay?

CAMILLO

At the good queen's entreaty. 220

LEONTES

"At the queen's" be't: "Good" should be pertinent,

But so it is, it is not. Was this taken^o

By any understanding pate but thine?

For thy conceit is soaking,^o will draw in

More than the common blocks.^o Not noted, is't, 225

But of the finer natures? By some severals^o

Of headpiece extraordinary? Lower messes^o

Perchance are to this business purblind? Say.

188 issue exit (following the idea of the actor not capable of his part) 199 revolted unfaithful 202 predominant in the ascendant (a technical term in astrology) 217 They're . . . already they (onlookers) have already caught on to my situation; rounding speaking in secret 218 so-forth i.e., they slyly avoid the word "cuckold" 219 gust taste, hear of 222 taken observed 224 conceit is soaking intelligence is absorbent 225 blocks blockheads 226 severals individuals 227 Lower messes inferior people ("mess" in the sense of a group who dine together and would be of the same—low—rank)

160 squash unripe peapod (young person) 161 take . . . money allow yourself to be imposed upon 163 happy . . . dole may it be his lot to be a happy man 171 thick my blood make me melancholy 171-72 So . . . me My son has a similar post in my household 177 Apparent heir apparent 180 angling giving them scope, "playing" them 183 neb beak 185 allowing approving 186 forked alluding to the branching cuckold's horns

- CAMILLO
Business, my lord? I think most understand Bohemia stays here longer.
- LEONTES Ha?
- CAMILLO Stays here longer. 230
- LEONTES
Ay, but why?
- CAMILLO
To satisfy your highness, and the entreaties
Of our most gracious mistress.
- LEONTES Satisfy
Th' entreaties of your mistress? Satisfy?
Let that suffice. I have trusted thee, Camillo, 235
With all the nearest things to my heart, as well
My chamber-counsels,^o wherein, priestlike, thou
Hast cleansed my bosom—ay, from thee departed
Thy penitent reformed; but we have been 240
Deceived in thy integrity, deceived
In that which seems so.
- CAMILLO Be it forbid, my lord!
- LEONTES
To bide^o upon't. Thou art not honest; or
If thou inclin'st that way, thou art a coward,
Which hoxes^o honesty behind, restraining 245
From course required; or else thou must be counted
A servant, grafted in my serious trust,
And therein negligent; or else a fool,
That see'st a game played home, the rich stake drawn,^o
And tak'st it all for jest.
- CAMILLO My gracious lord,
I may be negligent, foolish, and fearful, 250
In every one of these no man is free
But that his negligence, his folly, fear,
Among the infinite doings of the world,
Sometime puts forth.^o In your affairs, my lord,
If ever I were willful negligent, 255
It was my folly; if industriously
I played the fool, it was my negligence,
Not weighing well the end: if ever fearful
To do a thing, where I the issue doubted,
Whereof the execution did cry out 260
Against the nonperformance, 'twas a fear
Which oft infects the wisest. These, my lord,
Are such allowed infirmities, that honesty
Is never free of. But beseech your grace,
Be plainer with me, let me know my trespass 265
By its own visage;^o if I then deny it,
'Tis none of mine.
- LEONTES Ha' not you seen, Camillo—
But that's past doubt, you have, or your eyeglass^o
Is thicker than a cuckold's horn—or heard—
For to a vision so apparent, rumor 270
Cannot be mute—or thought—for cogitation
Resides not in that man that does not think—
My wife is slippery?^o If thou wilt confess,
- Or else be impudently negative,
To have nor eyes, nor ears, nor thought, then say 275
My wife's a hobbyhorse,^o deserves a name
As rank as any flax-wench,^o that puts to Before her troth-plight; say't, and justify't.
- CAMILLO
I would not be a stander-by to hear
My sovereign mistress clouded so, without 280
My present^o vengeance taken; 'shrew my heart,
You never spoke what did become you less
Than this; which to reiterate, were sin
As deep as that, though true.^o
- LEONTES Is whispering nothing?
Is leaning cheek to cheek? Is meeting noses? 285
Kissing with inside lip? Stopping the career^o
Of laughter with a sigh (a note infallible
Of breaking honesty^o)? Horsing foot on foot?
Skulking in corners? Wishing clocks more swift? 290
Hours, minutes? Noon, midnight? And all eyes
Blind with the pin and web,^o but theirs; theirs only,
That would unseen be wicked? Is this nothing?
Why, then the world and all that's in't is nothing,
The covering sky is nothing, Bohemia nothing, 295
My wife is nothing, nor nothing have these nothings,
If this be nothing.
- CAMILLO Good my lord, be cured
Of this diseased opinion, and betimes,
For 'tis most dangerous.
- LEONTES Say it be, 'tis true.
- CAMILLO
No, no, my lord.
- LEONTES It is; you lie, you lie.
I say thou liest, Camillo, and I hate thee, 300
Pronounce thee a gross lout, a mindless slave,
Or else a hovering^o temporizer, that
Canst with thine eyes at once see good and evil,
Inclining to them both. Were my wife's liver^o
Infected as her life, she would not live 305
The running of one glass.^o
- CAMILLO Who does infect her?
- LEONTES
Why, he that wears her like her medal,^o hanging
About his neck, Bohemia, who, if I
Had servants true about me, that bare eyes
To see alike mine honor as their profits, 310
Their own particular thrifts,^o they would do that
Which should undo more doing. Ay, and thou,
His cupbearer, whom I from meaner form
Have benched^o and reared to worship, who mayst see Plainly as heaven sees earth, and earth see heaven, 315
How I am gallèd, mightst bespice a cup,
To give mine enemy a lasting wink;^o
Which draught to me were cordial.^o

237 chamber-counsels confessions of secret sins 242 bide insist 244 hoxes hamstrings 248 played . . . drawn played earnestly, great stakes being won 254 puts forth shows itself 266 By . . . visage under its true name 268 eyeglass the lens of the eye 267–73 Ha' not . . . slippery?
Have you not seen—you must have, or your sight is grossly thick—or heard—as you must, since Hermione's conduct is so open that there must be gossip about it—or thought—and unless you have you cannot think at all—that my wife is unfaithful?

276 hobbyhorse loose woman 277 flax-wench low-bred girl 281 present immediate 284 As deep . . . true i.e., as wicked as her adultery if it were a fact, which it is not 286 career gallop 288 honesty chastity 291 pin and web cataract 302 hovering vacillating 304 liver since this was the seat of the passions, it presumably was infected; transposition of "liver" and "life" has been proposed 306 glass hourglass
307 medal here a portrait miniature worn about the neck 311 particular thrifts special gains 314 benched raised to place of dignity 317 give . . . wink close his eyes forever 318 cordial medicine

CAMILLO Sir, my lord,
I could do this, and that with no rash potion,
But with a lingering dram^o that should not work
Maliciously, like poison; but I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread mistress,
So sovereignly being honorable.
I have loved thee^o—

LEONTES
Make that thy question, and go rot!^o
Dost think I am so muddy, so unsettled,
To appoint^o myself in this vexation? Sully
The purity and whiteness of my sheets—
Which to preserve is sleep; which being spotted,
Is goads, thorns, nettles, tails of wasps—
Give scandal to the blood o' th' prince, my son,
Who I do think is mine, and love as mine,
Without ripe^o moving to't? Would I do this?
Could man so blench?^o

CAMILLO I must believe you, sir;
I do, and will fetch off Bohemia for't:
Provided that when he's removed, your highness
Will take again your queen as yours at first,
Even for your son's sake, and thereby for sealing
The injury of tongues, in courts and kingdoms
Known and allied to yours.

LEONTES Thou dost advise me,
Even so as I mine own course have set down.
I'll give no blemish to her honor, none.

CAMILLO
My lord,
Go then; and with a countenance as clear
As friendship wears at feasts, keep with Bohemia,
And with your queen: I am his cupbearer;
If from me he have wholesome beverage,
Account me not your servant.

LEONTES This is all:
Do't, and thou hast the one half of my heart;
Do't not, thou split'st thine own.

CAMILLO I'll do't, my lord. 350

LEONTES I will seem friendly, as thou hast advised me. Exit.

CAMILLO
O miserable lady! But for me,
What case stand I in? I must be the poisoner
Of good Polixenes, and my ground to do't
Is the obedience to a master—one
Who, in rebellion with himself, will have
All that are his so too. To do this deed,
Promotion follows; if I could find example
Of thousands that had struck anointed kings,
And flourished after, I'd not do't; but since
Nor brass, nor stone, nor parchment bears not one,
Let villainy itself forswear't.^o I must Forsake the court; to do't, or no, is certain

To me a break-neck. Happy star reign now!
Here comes Bohemia.

Enter POLIXENES.

POLIXENES This is strange: methinks
My favor here begins to warp. Not speak?
Good day, Camillo. 365

CAMILLO Hail, most royal sir.

325 POLIXENES
What is the news i' th' court?

CAMILLO None rare, my lord.

POLIXENES
The king hath on him such a countenance,
As he had lost some province, and a region
Loved as he loves himself; even now I met him
With customary compliment, when he,
Wafting his eyes to th' contrary,^o and falling
A lip of much contempt, speeds from me, and
So leaves me to consider what is breeding
That changes thus his manners. 370 375

CAMILLO
I dare not know, my lord.

POLIXENES
How, dare not? Do not? Do you know, and dare not
Be intelligent to me? 'Tis thereabouts;
For to yourself, what you do know, you must,
And cannot say you dare not.^o Good Camillo,
Your changed complexions are to me a mirror,
Which shows me mine changed too: for I must be
A party in this alteration, finding Myself thus altered with't. 380

345 CAMILLO There is a sickness
Which puts some of us in distemper; but I cannot name the disease; and it is caught
Of you, that yet are well. 385

POLIXENES How caught of me?
Make me not sighted like the basilisk.^o
I have looked on thousands, who have sped^o the better
By my regard, but killed none so. Camillo,
As you are certainly a gentleman, thereto
Clerklike experienced,^o which no less adorns
Our gentry than our parents' noble names
In whose success^o we are gentle:^o I beseech you,
If you know aught which does behoove my knowledge
Thereof to be informed, imprison't not
In ignorant concealment. 390 395

CAMILLO I may not answer.

POLIXENES
A sickness caught of me, and yet I well?
I must be answered. Dost thou hear, Camillo,
I conjure^o thee, by all the parts^o of man,
Which honor does acknowledge, whereof the least
Is not this suit of mine, that thou declare
What incidency^o thou dost guess of harm 400

320 lingering dram slow-working dose 324 I . . . thee difficult to explain; Camillo may be about to protest his long loyalty, or threaten withdrawal of his love, but he would hardly address the king as "thou"; some editors give the words to Leontes, which hardly helps 325 Make . . . rot i.e., If you doubt the queen's infidelity, go to hell! 327 appoint establish 333 ripe adequate, matured 334 blench swerve 358–62 if . . . forswear't even if the records showed that king-killers prospered, I would not do it; but since they prove the contrary, villainy itself should forswear regicide

373 Wafting . . . contrary looking (contemptuously) away 378–81 How, dare not? . . . you dare not What do you mean, dare not? That you do not? Can it be that you know, and dare not tell me? That must be the explanation, since you cannot say you do not dare tell yourself what you know 389 basilisk a mythical serpent that killed by looking 390 sped prospered 393 Clerklike experienced with the experience of an educated man 395 success succession; gentle well-born 401 conjure adjure; parts duties, functions 404 incidency threat

Is creeping toward me; how far off, how near,
Which way to be prevented, if to be;
If not, how best to bear it.

CAMILLO Sir, I will tell you,
Since I am charged in honor, and by him
That I think honorable. Therefore mark my counsel,
Which must be ev'n as swiftly followed as
I mean to utter it; or both yourself and me
Cry lost, and so good night.

POLIXENES On, good Camillo.

CAMILLO I am appointed him° to murder you.

POLIXENES By whom, Camillo?

CAMILLO By the king.

POLIXENES For what?

CAMILLO He thinks, nay with all confidence he swears,
As he had seen't, or been an instrument
To vice° you to't, that you have touched his queen Forbiddenly.

POLIXENES Oh then my best blood turn
To an infected jelly, and my name
Be yoked with his, that did betray the Best!°
Turn then my freshest reputation to
A savor° that may strike the dullest nostril
Where I arrive, and my approach be shunned,
Nay, hated too, worse than the great'st infection
That e'er was heard, or read!

CAMILLO Swear his thought over°
By each particular star in heaven, and
By all their influences; you may as well
Forbid the sea for to obey the moon,
As or by oath remove or counsel shake
The fabric of his folly, whose foundation
Is piled upon his faith, and will continue
The standing of his body.°

POLIXENES How should this grow?°

CAMILLO I know not: but I am sure 'tis safer to Avoid what's grown than question how 'tis born.
If therefore you dare trust my honesty,
That lies enclosed in this trunk, which you
Shall bear along impawned,° away tonight.
Your followers I will whisper to the business,
And will by twos and threes, at several posterns,° Clear them o' th' city. For myself, I'll put My fortunes to your service, which are here
By this discovery lost. Be not uncertain,
For by the honor of my parents, I
Have uttered truth; which if you seek to prove,°
I dare not stand by; nor shall you be safer,

413 him i.e., by Leontes 417 To vice to force 420 that . . . Best Judas 422 savor alluding to the idea that infection (e.g., of the plague) could be smelled (hence the use of flowers in posies as a prophylactic) 425 Swear . . . over deny his suspicion with oaths 427-32 you may . . . body i.e., you may as well attempt the obviously impossible as try to remove by your oaths or pull down by your advice the structure of his crazy delusion, which has its foundations on settled belief, and will last as long as his life (stand up as long as he can) 432 How . . . grow How can this have grown up? 437 impawned as a pledge of good faith (Camillo points to his body, which is the "trunk") 439 posterns gates 444 prove test

Than one condemned by the king's own mouth, thereon

His execution sworn.°

POLIXENES I do believe thee:

I saw his heart in's face. Give me thy hand,

Be pilot to me, and thy places° shall Still° neighbor mine. My ships are ready, and

My people did expect my hence departure

Two days ago. This jealousy

Is for a precious creature; as she's rare,

Must it be great; and, as his person's mighty,

Must it be violent: and, as he does conceive,

He is dishonored by a man, which ever

Professed° to him, why his revenges must

In that be made more bitter. Fear o'ershades me;

Good expedition° by my friend, and comfort

The gracious queen, part of his theme, but nothing

Of his ill-ta'en suspicion.° Come, Camillo,

I will respect thee as a father, if

Thou bear'st my life off hence; let us avoid.°

CAMILLO

It is in mine authority to command

The keys of all the posterns: please your highness

To take the urgent hour. Come, sir, away. Exeunt.

ACT II

Scene I. [Sicilia, the court of Leontes.]

Enter HERMIONE, MAMILLIUS, LADIES.

HERMIONE

Take the boy to you; he so troubles me,

'Tis past enduring.

FIRST LADY Come, my gracious lord,

Shall I be your playfellow?

MAMILLIUS No, I'll none of you.

FIRST LADY

Why, my sweet lord?

MAMILLIUS

You'll kiss me hard, and speak to me, as if

I were a baby still. I love you better.

SECOND LADY

And why so, my lord?

MAMILLIUS

Not for because

Your brows are blacker; yet black brows, they say,

Become some women best, so that there be not

Too much hair there, but in a semicircle,

Or a half-moon, made with a pen.

SECOND LADY

Who taught° this?

446-47 mouth . . . sworn i.e., the king, having condemned him, has sworn that the sentence will be death (possibly corrupt; see A Note on the Text, p. 1500) 449 places offices, functions, dignities 450 Still always 457 Professed made professions (of friendship) 459 expedition speed 460-61 part . . . suspicion obscure; Shakespeare's sense has perhaps not quite got through; a possible paraphrase is, "May my speedy departure also help the queen, who is involved in Leontes' fantasy though she has no rightful place in his suspicions," but this fails to explain why Polixenes thought his departure would help Hermione; perhaps "expedition" is not the subject of "comfort"—then he is merely wishing the queen comfort in the troubles he is leaving her to, and the vagueness of the expression matches the emptiness of the wish 463 avoid depart II.i.11 taught' taught you

MAMILLIUS

I learned it out of women's faces. Pray now,
What color are your eyebrows?

FIRST LADY

Blue, my lord.

MAMILLIUS

Nay, that's a mock. I have seen a lady's nose
That has been blue, but not her eyebrows.

FIRST LADY

Hark ye,

15

The queen, your mother, rounds apace; we shall Present our services to a fine new prince
One of these days, and then you'd wanton° with us,
If we would have you.

SECOND LADY

She is spread of late

20

Into a goodly bulk; good time encounter her!

HERMIONE

What wisdom stirs amongst you? Come, sir, now
I am for you again; pray you sit by us,
And tell's a tale.

MAMILLIUS

Merry or sad shall't be?

HERMIONE

As merry as you will.

MAMILLIUS

A sad tale's best for winter; I have one
Of sprites and goblins.

25

HERMIONE

Let's have that, good sir.

Come on, sit down; come on, and do your best,
To fright me with your sprites; you're powerful at it.

MAMILLIUS

There was a man.

HERMIONE

Nay, come sit down; then on.

MAMILLIUS

Dwelt by a churchyard—I will tell it softly,
Yond crickets° shall not hear it.

30

HERMIONE

Come on, then, and give't me in mine ear.

[Enter LEONTES, ANTIGONUS, and LORDS.]

LEONTES

Was he met there? His train? Camillo with him?

LORD

Behind the tuft of pines I met them, never Saw I men scour° so on their way. I eyed them
Even to their ships.

35

LEONTES

How blest am I

In my just censure,° in my true opinion!
Alack, for lesser knowledge! How accursed,
In being so blest! There may be in the cup
A spider° steeped, and one may drink, depart,
And yet partake no venom, for his knowledge
Is not infected; but if one present
Th' abhorred ingredient to his eye, make known
How he hath drunk, he cracks his gorge, his sides,
With violent hefts.° I have drunk, and seen the spider. 45
Camillo was his help in this, his pander.
There is a plot against my life, my crown;
All's true that is mistrusted; that false villain,
Whom I employed, was pre-employed by him;

40

90

He has discovered° my design, and I

50

Remain a pinched thing;° yea, a very trick

For them to play at will. How came the posterns

So easily open?

LORD

By his great authority;

Which often hath no less prevailed than so

On your command.

LEONTES

I know't too well.

55

[To HERMIONE.]

Give me the boy. I am glad you did not nurse him;
Though he does bear some signs of me, yet you
Have too much blood in him.

HERMIONE

What is this? Sport?

LEONTES

Bear the boy hence, he shall not come about her;

[Exit MAMILLIUS and a LADY.]

Away with him, and let her sport herself
With that she's big with; for 'tis Polixenes
Has made thee swell thus.

60

HERMIONE

But I'd say he had not;

And I'll be sworn you would believe my saying,

Howe'er you lean to th' nayward.°

25

LEONTES

You, my lords,

Look on her, mark her well; be but about

65

To say, "She is a goodly lady," and

The justice of your hearts will thereto add,

"'Tis pity she's not honest, honorable";

Praise her but for this her without-door form,°

Which on my faith deserves high speech, and straight 70

The shrug, the hum or ha, these petty brands

That calumny doth use—oh, I am out!°

That mercy does, for calumny will sear

Virtue itself—these shrugs, these hum's and ha's,

When you have said she's goodly, come between,° 75

Ere you can say she's honest. But be't known,

From him that has most cause to grieve it should be,

She's an adult'ress.

HERMIONE

Should a villain say so,

The most replenished° villain in the world,

He were as much more villain; you, my lord,

80

Do but mistake.

LEONTES

You have mistook, my lady,

Polixenes for Leontes. O thou thing,

Which I'll not call a creature of thy place,°

Lest barbarism, making me the precedent,

Should a like language use to all degrees,° 85

And mannerly distinguishment leave out

Betwixt the prince and beggar. I have said

She's an adult'ress, I have said with whom.

More, she's a traitor, and Camillo is

A federary° with her, and one that knows 90

What she should shame to know herself

But with her most vile principal°—that she's

A bed-swarver,° even as bad as those

That vulgars give bold'st titles; ay, and privy

50 discovered revealed 51 pinched thing puppet, toy 64 nayward negative 69 without-door form external appearance 72 I am out I have lost my place, got my speech wrong 75 come between pause, interrupt, break off 79 replenished complete, perfect 83 place rank 85 degrees social ranks 90 federary confederate, accomplice 92 principal partner (i.e., Polixenes) 93 bed-swarver adulteress

18 wanton play 31 Yond crickets the chattering ladies 35 scour hurry 37 censure judgment 40 spider spiders were thought of as venomous; there seems to have been a superstition that this was so only if one saw the spider 45 hefts retchings

To this their late escape.

HERMIONE No, by my life,
Privy to none of this; how will this grieve you,
When you shall come to clearer knowledge, that
You thus have published^o me! Gentle my lord,
You scarce can right me throughly then to say
You did mistake.

LEONTES No; if I mistake
In those foundations which I build upon,
The center^o is not big enough to bear
A schoolboy's top. Away with her to prison.
He who shall speak for her is afar off guilty,
But that he speaks.^o

HERMIONE There's some ill planet reigns;
I must be patient, till the heavens look
With an aspect more favorable. Good my lords,
I am not prone to weeping, as our sex
Commonly are; the want of which vain dew
Perchance shall dry your pities. But I have
That honorable grief lodged here which burns
Worse than tears drown. Beseech you all, my lords,
With thoughts so qualified^o as your charities
Shall best instruct you, measure me; and so
The king's will be performed!

LEONTES Shall I be heard? 115

HERMIONE
Who is't that goes with me? Beseech your highness
My women may be with me, for you see
My plight requires it. Do not weep, good fools;
There is no cause; when you shall know your mistress
Has deserved prison, then abound in tears,
As I come out; this action I now go on
Is for my better grace.^o Adieu, my lord.
I never wished to see you sorry; now
I trust I shall. My women come, you have leave.

LEONTES
Go, do our bidding: hence. 125

[Exeunt QUEEN and LADIES.]

LORD
Beseech your highness, call the queen again.

ANTIGONUS
Be certain what you do, sir, lest your justice
Prove violence, in the which three great ones suffer,
Yourself, your queen, your son.

LORD For her, my lord,
I dare my life lay down, and will do't, sir,
Please you t' accept it, that the queen is spotless
I' th' eyes of heaven, and to you—I mean,
In this, which you accuse her.

ANTIGONUS If it prove
She's otherwise, I'll keep my stables where
I lodge my wife;^o I'll go in couples^o with her; 135

Than when I feel and see her, no farther trust her;
For every inch of woman in the world,
Ay, every dram of woman's flesh is false,
If she be.

LEONTES
Hold your peaces.

LORD Good my lord. 140

ANTIGONUS
It is for you we speak, not for ourselves.
You are abused, and by some putter-on^o
That will be damned for't. Would I knew the villain,
I would land-damn^o him! Be she honor-flawed,
I have three daughters: the eldest is eleven; 145
The second and the third, nine and some five:
If this prove true, they'll pay for't. By mine honor,
I'll geld 'em all; fourteen they shall not see
To bring false generations.^o They are co-heirs,
And I had rather glib^o myself than they 150
Should not produce fair issue.

LEONTES Cease, no more!
You smell this business with a sense as cold
As is a dead man's nose; but I do see't, and feel't,
As you feel doing thus; and see withal
The instruments that feel.^o

ANTIGONUS If it be so, 155
We need no grave to bury honesty;
There's not a grain of it the face to sweeten
Of the whole dungy earth.

LEONTES What? Lack I credit?^o

LORD
I had rather you did lack than I, my lord,
Upon this ground; and more it would content me 160
To have her honor true than your suspicion,
Be blamed for't how you might.

LEONTES Why, what need we
Commune with you of this, but rather follow
Our forceful instigation? Our prerogative
Calls not your counsels, but our natural goodness 165
Imparts this;^o which, if you, or stupefied,
Or seeming so, in skill,^o cannot, or will not,
Relish a truth like us, inform yourselves,
We need no more of your advice. The matter,
The loss, the gain, the ord'ring on't, 170
Is all properly ours.

ANTIGONUS And I wish, my liege,
You had only in your silent judgment tried it,
Without more overture.

LEONTES How could that be?
Either thou art most ignorant by age,
Or thou wert born a fool. Camillo's flight, 175
Added to their familiarity—
Which was as gross as ever touched conjecture,^o

98 published publicly proclaimed or denounced 102 center of the earth, and so of the universe, i.e., "If I am mistaken, no foundation can be trusted" 105 But . . . speaks i.e., in merely speaking he is found guilty as a remote accomplice 113 qualified tempered, moderated 121–22 this . . . grace by contrast with one who goes to prison to be disgraced, I embark on this course to add to my honesty and credit 134–35 I'll . . . wife obscure, but certainly coarse: he will keep his stallions locked up when his wife is near (?) 135 go in couples be coupled by a leash to her, for safety's sake (of course, he means that if the queen is unchaste, other women must be even more so)

142 putter-on plotter, one who instigates 144 land-damn severely beat (?) 149 false generations illegitimate children 150 glib castrate 153–55 but . . . that feel Leontes here strikes either Antigonus or himself; "But I see it and feel it with immediate, vital force, as you do when you strike yourself thus (or, when I strike you thus)—you feel it and see the hands that inflicted the pain" 158 Lack I credit Am I not believed? 164–66 Our prerogative . . . this i.e., I am not obliged to seek your advice; it is out of the goodness of my heart that I tell you this (Leontes, on his dignity, uses the royal "we") 167 skill reason 177 as ever . . . conjecture as ever conjecture reached to

That lacked sight only, naught for approbation°
 But only seeing, all other circumstances
 Made up to th' deed—doth push on this proceeding. 180
 Yet, for a greater confirmation—
 For in an act of this importance, 'twere
 Most piteous to be wild°—I have dispatched in post
 To sacred Delphos,° to Apollo's temple,
 Cleomenes and Dion, whom you know
 Of stuffed sufficiency.° Now, from the oracle 185
 They will bring all,° whose spiritual counsel had,
 Shall stop, or spur me. Have I done well?

LORD
 Well done, my lord.

LEONTES
 Though I am satisfied, and need no more 190
 Than what I know, yet shall the oracle
 Give rest to th' minds of others—such as he,° Whose ignorant credulity will not Come up to th' truth. So have we thought it good
 From our free person she should be confined,
 Lest that the treachery of the two fled hence
 Be left her to perform.° Come, follow us,
 We are to speak in public: for this business
 Will raise° us all.

ANTIGONUS [Aside.] To laughter, as I take it,
 If the good truth were known. Exeunt. 200

Scene II. [Sicilia, a prison.]

Enter PAULINA, a GENTLEMAN, [and ATTENDANTS].

PAULINA
 The keeper of the prison, call to him;
 Let him have knowledge who I am. [Exit GENTLE-
MAN.] Good lady,
 No court in Europe is too good for thee—
 What dost thou then in prison?

[Enter GENTLEMAN, with the] JAILER.

Now, good sir,
 You know me, do you not?

JAILER For a worthy lady, 5
 And one whom much I honor.

PAULINA Pray you, then,
 Conduct me to the queen.

JAILER I may not, madam,
 To the contrary I have express commandment.

PAULINA
 Here's ado, to lock up honesty and honor from
 Th' access of gentle visitors! Is't lawful, pray you, 10
 To see her women? Any of them? Emilia?

JAILER
 So please you, madam,
 To put apart these your attendants, I Shall bring Emilia forth.

PAULINA I pray now call her.
 Withdraw yourselves.

[Exeunt GENTLEMAN and ATTENDANTS.]

JAILER And, madam, 15
 I must be present at your conference.

PAULINA
 Well, be't so, prithee. [Exit JAILER.]
 Here's such ado to make no stain a stain,
 As passes coloring.°

[Enter JAILER, with] EMILIA.

Dear gentlewoman,
 How fares our gracious lady? 20

EMILIA
 As well as one so great and so forlorn 190
 May hold together. On her frights and griefs
 (Which° never tender lady hath borne greater)
 She is, something before her time, delivered.

PAULINA

A boy? 195

EMILIA A daughter, and a goodly babe, 25
 Lusty, and like to live; the queen receives Much comfort in't; says, "My poor prisoner,
 I am innocent as you."

PAULINA

I dare be sworn.
 These dangerous, unsafe lunes° i' th' king, beshrew
 them!

He must be told on't, and he shall; the office 30
 Becomes a woman best. I'll take't upon me.
 If I prove honey-mouthed, let my tongue blister,°
 And never to my red-looking anger be
 The trumpet° any more. Pray you, Emilia,
 Commend my best obedience to the queen; 35
 If she dares trust me with her little babe,
 I'll show't the king, and undertake to be
 Her advocate to th' loud'st. We do not know
 How he may soften at the sight o' th' child;
 The silence often of pure innocence 40
 Persuades, when speaking fails.

EMILIA Most worthy madam,
 Your honor and your goodness is so evident,
 That your free undertaking cannot miss
 A thriving issue: there is no lady living
 So meet° for this great errand. Please your ladyship 45
 To visit the next room, I'll presently°
 Acquaint the queen of your most noble offer,
 Who but today hammered of° this design,
 But durst not tempt° a minister of honor
 Lest she should be denied.

PAULINA Tell her, Emilia, 50
 I'll use that tongue I have; if wit° flow from't
 As boldness from my bosom, let't not be doubted
 I shall do good.

EMILIA Now be you blest for it!
 I'll to the queen. Please you come something nearer.

178 approbation proof 183 wild rash 184 Delphos Delos (Shakespeare mistakenly thought the oracle of Apollo was there rather than at Delphi; in this error he follows his source, Pandosto 186 stuffed sufficiency more than adequate dependability 187 all the whole truth 192 he Antigonus 196-97 Lest . . . perform referring to the "plot against his life and crown" of which he accuses all three 199 raise rouse

II.ii.19 coloring the art of dyeing (thus giving a specious appearance) 23 Which than which 29 lunes fits of lunacy 32 tongue blister because lies were supposed to blister the tongue 33-34 red-looking . . . trumpet the figure is of an angry face as a herald dressed in red and preceded by a trumpet(er) 45 meet fitting 46 presently immediately 48 hammered of deliberated upon 49 tempt make trial of 51
 wit wisdom

JAILER

Madam, if't please the queen to send the babe,
I know not what I shall incur to pass it,^o
Having no warrant.

PAULINA

You need not fear it, sir:

This child was prisoner to the womb and is
By law and process of great Nature thence Freed, and enfranchised; not a party to
The anger of the king, nor guilty of,
If any be, the trespass of the queen.

JAILER

I do believe it.

PAULINA

Do not you fear—upon mine honor, I
Will stand betwixt you and danger.

Exeunt. 65

Scene III. [Sicilia, the court of Leontes.]

Enter LEONTES, SERVANTS, ANTIGONUS, and LORDS.

LEONTES

Nor night nor day no rest: it is but weakness
To bear the matter thus, mere weakness. If
The cause were not in being—part o' th' cause,^o
She, th' adult'ress (for the harlot^o king
Is quite beyond mine arm, out of the blank
And level^o of my brain, plot-proof); but she,
I can hook to me—say that she were gone,
Given to the fire, a moiety^o of my rest
Might come to me again. Who's there?

SERVANT

My lord!

LEONTES

How does the boy?

FIRST ATTENDANT

He took good rest tonight; 'tis hoped
His sickness is discharged.

LEONTES

To see his nobleness!

Conceiving the dishonor of his mother,
He straight declined, drooped, took it deeply,
Fastened, and fixed the shame on't in himself;
Threw off his spirit, his appetite, his sleep,
And downright languished. Leave me solely; go,
See how he fares. [Exit SERVANT.] Fie, fie, no thought of him!^o

The very thought of my revenges that way
Recoil upon me—in himself too mighty,
And in his parties, his alliance; let him be,
Until a time may serve. For present vengeance
Take it on her. Camillo and Polixenes
Laugh at me, make their pastime at my sorrow;
They should not laugh if I could reach them, nor Shall she within my power.

Enter PAULINA, [with the BABY].

LORD

You must not enter.

56 to pass it as a result of allowing it to pass

II.iii.3 th' cause Leontes interrupts himself, remembering that Polixenes is inaccessible, so that only part of the cause of his agony is within his power to destroy 4 harlot lewd 5-6 out . . . level beyond my range ("blank" is the center of the target; "level" means "aim"; the reference is to archery) 8 moiety half 18 him Polixenes

PAULINA

Nay, rather, good my lords, be second to^o me.
Fear you his tyrannous passion more, alas,
Than the queen's life? A gracious innocent soul,
More free^o than he is jealous.

ANTIGONUS

That's enough.

30

SERVANT

Madam, he hath not slept tonight, commanded
None should come at him.

PAULINA

Not so hot, good sir;

I come to bring him sleep. 'Tis such as you
That creep like shadows by him, and do sigh
At each his needless heavings—such as you Nourish the cause of his awaking. I 35

Do come with words as medicinal as true,
Honest as either, to purge him of that humor^o
That presses him from sleep.

LEONTES

What noise there, ho?

PAULINA

No noise, my lord, but needful conference
About some gossips^o for your highness.

40

LEONTES

How?

Away with that audacious lady! Antigonus,
I charged thee that she should not come about me;
I knew she would.

ANTIGONUS

I told her so, my lord,

5

On your displeasure's peril, and on mine,
She should not visit you.

45

LEONTES

What? Canst not rule her?

PAULINA

From all dishonesty he can: in this,
Unless he take the course that you have done—
Commit me for committing^o honor, trust it,
He shall not rule me.

10

ANTIGONUS

La you now, you hear,

50

When she will take the rein, I let her run;
But she'll not stumble.^o

PAULINA

Good my liege, I come—

And I beseech you hear me, who profess
Myself your loyal servant, your physician,
Your most obedient counselor; yet that dares
Less appear so in comforting^o your evils,
Than such as most seem yours^o—I say, I come
From your good queen.

55

LEONTES

Good queen!

PAULINA

Good queen, my lord, good queen, I say good queen,
And would by combat^o make her good, so were I
A man, the worst^o about you.

60

LEONTES

Force her hence.

PAULINA

Let him that makes but trifles of his eyes
First hand me. On mine own accord I'll off,
But first I'll do my errand. The good queen

27 be second to support 30 free innocent 38 humor illness 41 gossips godparents 49 Commit . . . committing the word is used in a punning sense, meaning first "send to prison" and second "performing" 51-52 rein . . . run . . . stumble
Antigonus, as usual, speaks of his wife as if she were a horse 56 comforting abetting, countenancing 57 as . . . yours as are nearest to you 60 by combat in a trial by combat (which would, in the code of chivalry, vindicate a lady's honor) 61
the worst the lowest in degree

(For she is good) hath brought you forth a daughter; 65
Here 'tis; commends it to your blessing.

[She lays down the BABY.]

LEONTES Out!
A mankind° witch! Hence with her, out o' door!
A most intelligencing° bawd!

PAULINA Not so;
I am as ignorant in that as you
In so entitling me; and no less honest 70
Than you are mad; which is enough, I'll warrant,
As this world goes, to pass for honest.

LEONTES Traitors!
Will you not push her out? [To ANTIGONUS.] Give her the bastard,
Thou dotard, thou art woman-tired,° unroosted
By thy Dame Partlet° here. Take up the bastard, 75
Take't up, I say; give't to thy crone.

PAULINA Forever
Unvenerable be thy hands, if thou
Tak'st up the princess, by that forcèd baseness°
Which he has put upon't!

LEONTES He dreads his wife.

PAULINA
So I would you did; then 'twere past all doubt 80
You'd call your children yours.

LEONTES A nest of traitors.

ANTIGONUS
I am none, by this good light.

PAULINA Nor I: nor any
But one that's here, and that's himself; for he,
The sacred honor of himself, his queen's,
His hopeful son's, his babe's, betrays to slander, 85
Whose sting is sharper than the sword's; and will not (For as the case now stands, it is a curse
He cannot be compelled to't) once remove
The root of his opinion, which is rotten
As ever oak or stone was sound.

LEONTES A callat° 90
Of boundless tongue, who late hath beat her husband,
And now baits° me! This brat is none of mine;
It is the issue of Polixenes.
Hence with it, and together with the dam,
Commit them to the fire.

PAULINA It is yours: 95
And might we lay th' old proverb° to your charge,
So like you, 'tis the worse. Behold, my lords,
Although the print be little, the whole matter
And copy° of the father: eye, nose, lip,
The trick of's frown, his forehead, nay, the valley, 100
The pretty dimples of his chin and cheek; his smiles;
The very mold and frame of hand, nail, finger.
And thou, good goddess Nature, which hast made it
So like to him that got° it, if thou hast
The ordering of the mind too, 'mongst all colors 105

No yellow° in't, lest she suspect, as he does,
Her children not her husband's.

LEONTES A gross hag!
And, lozel,° thou art worthy to be hanged,
That wilt not stay her tongue.

ANTIGONUS Hang all the husbands
That cannot do that feat, you'll leave yourself 110
Hardly one subject.

LEONTES Once more, take her hence.

PAULINA
A most unworthy and unnatural lord
Can do no more.

LEONTES I'll ha' thee burned.

PAULINA I care not;
It is an heretic that makes the fire,
Not she which burns in't. I'll not call you tyrant; 115
But this most cruel usage of your queen
(Not able to produce more accusation Than your own weak-hinged° fancy) something savors

Of tyranny, and will ignoble make you,
Yea, scandalous to the world.

LEONTES On your allegiance,° 120
Out of the chamber with her! Were I a tyrant,°
Where were her life? She durst not call me so,
If she did know me one. Away with her.

PAULINA
I pray you do not push me, I'll be gone.
Look to your babe, my lord, 'tis yours: Jove send her 125
A better guiding spirit. What needs these hands?
You, that are thus so tender o'er his follies,
Will never do him good, not one of you.
So, so; farewell, we are gone. Exit.

LEONTES
Thou, traitor, hast set on thy wife to this. 130
My child? Away with't! Even thou, that hast
A heart so tender o'er it, take it hence,
And see it instantly consumed with fire.
Even thou, and none but thou. Take it up straight;
Within this hour bring me word 'tis done, 135
And by good testimony, or I'll seize° thy life,
With what thou else call'st thine; if thou refuse,
And wilt encounter with my wrath, say so;
The bastard brains with these my proper° hands
Shall I dash out. Go, take it to the fire, 140
For thou sett'st on thy wife.

ANTIGONUS I did not, sir;
These lords, my noble fellows, if they please,
Can clear me in't.

LORDS We can: my royal liege,
He is not guilty of her coming hither.

LEONTES You're liars all. 145

LORD
Beseech your highness, give us better credit.
We have always truly served you, and beseech

67 mankind male, ferocious, violent 68 intelligencing i.e., acting as a pander 74 woman-tired henpecked 75 Dame Partlet traditionally the name of the hen; compare Reynard the fox, etc. 78 forcèd baseness falsely base name (bastard) 90 callat scold 91-92 beat . . . baits pronounced alike 96 th' old proverb i.e., "They are so like that they are the worse for it" 98-99 print . . . matter . . . copy the figure is derived from printing 104 got begot

106 yellow the color of jealousy 108 lozel worthless fellow 118 weak-hinged ill-supported 120 On your allegiance the ultimate command; to disobey it is treason 121 tyrant Paulina avoided calling him tyrant, but in coming close to so doing reminded him that this interpretation might all too easily be put upon his actions 136 seize confiscate 139 proper own

So to esteem of us; and on our knees we beg,
As recompense of our dear services
Past, and to come, that you do change this purpose, 150
Which being so horrible, so bloody, must Lead on to some foul issue. We all kneel.

LEONTES

I am a feather for each wind that blows.
Shall I live on to see this bastard kneel
And call me father? Better burn it now 155
Than curse it then. But be it; let it live.
It shall not neither. You, sir, come you hither:
You that have been so tenderly officious
With Lady Margery,^o your midwife there,
To save this bastard's life—for 'tis a bastard, 160
So sure as this beard's gray^o—what will you adventure,
To save this brat's life?

ANTIGONUS

Anything, my lord,
That my ability may undergo,
And nobleness impose—at least thus much:
I'll pawn^o the little blood which I have left, 165
To save the innocent—anything possible.

LEONTES

It shall be possible. Swear by this sword^o
Thou wilt perform my bidding.

ANTIGONUS

I will, my lord.

LEONTES

Mark, and perform it: see'st thou? For the fail^o
Of any point in't, shall not only be 170
Death to thyself, but to thy lewd-tongued wife,
Whom for this time we pardon. We enjoin thee,
As thou art liegeman to us, that thou carry
This female bastard hence, and that thou bear it
To some remote and desert place, quite out
Of our dominions; and that there thou leave it,
Without more mercy, to its own protection
And favor of the climate. As by strange fortune
It came to us, I do in justice charge thee,
On thy soul's peril, and thy body's torture, 180
That thou commend it strangely^o to some place,
Where chance may nurse or end it. Take it up.

ANTIGONUS

I swear to do this, though a present death
Had been more merciful. Come on, poor babe,
Some powerful spirit instruct the kites and ravens 185
To be thy nurses! Wolves and bears, they say,
Casting their savageness aside, have done
Like offices of pity. Sir, be prosperous
In more than this deed does require!^o And blessing
Against this cruelty fight on thy side, 190
Poor thing, condemned to loss. Exit, [with the BABY].

LEONTES

No, I'll not rear
Another's issue.

Enter a SERVANT.

SERVANT Please your highness, posts
From those you sent to th' oracle are come
An hour since: Cleomenes and Dion,

Being well arrived from Delphos, are both landed, 195
Hasting to th' court.

LORD

So please you, sir, their speed
Hath been beyond accompt.^o

LEONTES

Twenty-three days
They have been absent; 'tis good speed; foretells
The great Apollo suddenly will have
The truth of this appear. Prepare you, lords, 200
Summon a session,^o that we may arraign
Our most disloyal lady; for as she hath
Been publicly accused, so shall she have
A just and open trial. While she lives,
My heart will be a burden to me. Leave me, 205
And think upon my bidding. Exeunt.

ACT III

Scene I. [Sicilia. On a high road.]

Enter CLEOMENES and DION.

CLEOMENES

The climate's delicate, the air most sweet,
Fertile the isle,^o the temple much surpassing
The common praise it bears.

DION

I shall report,
For most it caught me, the celestial habits^o
(Methinks I so should term them) and the reverence 5
Of the grave wearers. O, the sacrifice,
How ceremonious, solemn, and unearthly
It was i' th' off'ring!

175

CLEOMENES

But of all, the burst
And the ear-deaf'ning voice o' th' oracle,
Kin to Jove's thunder, so surprised my sense, 10
That I was nothing.

DION

If th' event^o o' th' journey
Prove as successful to the queen (O be't so!)
As it hath been to us rare, pleasant, speedy,
The time is worth the use on't.

180

CLEOMENES

Great Apollo
Turn all to th' best; these proclamations, 15
So forcing faults upon Hermione,
I little like.

DION

The violent carriage^o of it
Will clear or end the business when the oracle,
Thus by Apollo's great divine^o sealed up,
Shall the contents discover, something rare 20
Even then will rush to knowledge. Go; fresh horses,
And gracious be the issue! Exeunt.

190

Scene II. [Sicilia, a court of justice.]

Enter LEONTES, LORDS, OFFICERS.

LEONTES

This session, to our great grief we pronounce,
Even pushes 'gainst our heart. The party tried,

159 Lady Margery another facetious name of the hen 161 this beard's gray Leontes here, presumably, refers to—perhaps touches—the beard of Antigonus 165 pawn pledge 167 by this sword by the cross on the handle, or that formed by the hilt and the blade 169 fail failure 181 strangely as a stranger 189 require deserve

197 beyond accompt unprecedented 201 session judicial trial or investigation
III.i.2 the isle i.e., Delos (as in II.i. 184; again by mistake for Delphi) 4 celestial habits heavenly clothing 11 event outcome 17 carriage management 19 great divine chief priest

The daughter of a king, our wife, and one
Of us too much beloved. Let us be cleared
Of being tyrannous, since we so openly
Proceed in justice, which shall have due course,
Even to the guilt or the purgation.^o
Produce the prisoner.

OFFICER

It is his highness' pleasure that the queen
Appear in person here in court.

[Enter] HERMIONE, as to her trial,^o [PAULINA, and] LADIES.

Silence.^o

LEONTES

Read the indictment.

OFFICER "Hermione, queen to the worthy Leontes, King of Sicilia, thou art here accused and arraigned of high treason, in committing adultery with Polixenes, King of Bohemia, and conspiring with Camillo to take away the life of our sovereign lord the king, thy royal husband; the pretense^o whereof being by circumstances partly laid open, thou, Hermione, contrary to the faith and allegiance of a true subject, didst counsel and aid them, for their better safety, to fly away by night."

HERMIONE

Since what I am to say must be but that Which contradicts my accusation, and
The testimony on my part no other
But what comes from myself, it shall scarce boot^o
me

To say, "Not guilty"; mine integrity
Being counted falsehood, shall, as I express it,
Be so received. But thus: if powers divine
Behold our human actions—as they do—
I doubt not then, but innocence shall make False accusation blush, and tyranny
Tremble at patience. You, my lord, best know—
Who least will seem to do so—my past life
Hath been as continent, as chaste, as true,
As I am now unhappy; which is more
Than history can pattern,^o though devised
And played to take^o spectators. For behold me,
A fellow of the royal bed, which owe^o
A moiety of the throne, a great king's daughter,
The mother to a hopeful prince, here standing
To prate and talk for life and honor, 'fore
Who please to come and hear. For life, I prize it
As I weigh grief, which I would spare; for honor,
'Tis a derivative from me to mine,^o
And only that I stand for. I appeal
To your own conscience, sir, before Polixenes
Came to your court, how I was in your grace,
How merited to be so; since he came,
With what encounter so uncurrent, I
Have strained t' appear thus;^o if one jot beyond

The bound of honor, or in act or will
That way inclining,^o hardened be the hearts
Of all that hear me, and my near'st of kin
Cry fie upon my grave!

LEONTES I ne'er heard yet
That any of these bolder vices wanted
Less impudence to gainsay what they did,
Than to perform it first.^o

HERMIONE That's true enough,
Though 'tis a saying, sir, not due to me.

LEONTES

You will not own it.

HERMIONE

More than mistress of
Which comes to me in name of fault, I must not
At all acknowledge.^o For Polixenes,
With whom I am accused, I do confess
I loved him, as in honor he required;^o
With such a kind of love, as might become
A lady like me; with a love, even such,
So, and no other, as yourself commanded;
Which not to have done, I think had been in me
Both disobedience and ingratitude
To you, and toward your friend, whose love had spoke,

Even since it could speak, from an infant, freely,
That it was yours. Now, for conspiracy,
I know not how it tastes, though it be dished^o
For me to try how; all I know of it,
Is that Camillo was an honest man;
And why he left your court, the gods themselves,
Wotting^o no more than I, are ignorant.

LEONTES

You knew of his departure, as you know
What you have underta'en to do in's absence.

HERMIONE

Sir,

You speak a language that I understand not.
My life stands in the level^o of your dreams,
Which I'll lay down.

LEONTES

Your actions are my dreams.
You had a bastard by Polixenes,
And I but dreamed it. As you were past all shame—
Those of your fact^o are so—so past all truth;
Which to deny concerns more than avails;^o for as Thy brat hath been cast out, like to itself,^o
No father owning it (which is indeed
More criminal in thee than it) so thou Shalt feel our justice; in whose easiest passage
Look for no less than death.

HERMIONE

Sir, spare your threats:

The bug^o which you would fright me with, I seek.
To me can life be no commodity.^o
The crown and comfort of my life, your favor,
I do give^o lost, for I do feel it gone,

50-51 or in . . . inclining either in performance or intention approaching the bounds of honor 55-56 Less . . . first the point is that if one is bold enough to commit the crime, one will be bold enough to deny it; but the expression is not very clear 58-60 More . . . acknowledge I must refuse to acknowledge as my own, faults which I do not in fact possess 62 required was entitled to 71 dished served (as of food) 75 Wotting if they know 79 level range (archery) 83 Those . . . fact those guilty of your crime 84 concerns . . . avails is more trouble to you than it's worth 85 like to itself i.e., appropriately, since it has no father 90 bug bogey, bugbear 91 commodity advantage, asset 93 give reckon as

III.ii.7 purgation acquittal 10 s.d. as to her trial this direction occurs in the Folio at the head of the scene 10 Silence italic in the Folio, as if a stage direction, but presumably the Officer calls out the word 17 pretense design 24 boot assist 35 can pattern can offer parallels 36 take move 37 owe own 43 'Tis . . . mine i.e., it is my son's inheritance 48-49 With . . . thus by what outrageous conduct I have acted so unlike myself as to bring upon myself the ordeal of this appearance in court

But know not how it went. My second joy,
 And first fruits of my body, from his presence
 I am barred, like one infectious. My third comfort,
 Starred° most unluckily, is from my breast,
 The innocent milk in its most innocent mouth,
 Haled out to murder. Myself on every post°
 Proclaimed a strumpet; with immodest hatred
 The childbed privilege denied, which 'longs°
 To women of all fashion.° Lastly, hurried
 Here to this place, i' th' open air, before
 I have got strength of limit.° Now, my liege,
 Tell me, what blessings I have here alive,
 That I should fear to die? Therefore proceed.
 But yet hear this—mistake me not: for life,
 I prize it not a straw, but for mine honor,
 Which I would free—if I shall be condemned
 Upon surmises, all proofs sleeping else
 But what your jealousies awake, I tell you
 'Tis rigor, and not law.° Your honors all,
 I do refer me to the oracle:
 Apollo be my judge!

LORD This your request
 Is altogether just; therefore bring forth,
 And in Apollo's name, his oracle.

[Exeunt OFFICERS.]

HERMIONE

The Emperor of Russia° was my father.
 Oh that he were alive, and here beholding
 His daughter's trial! That he did but see
 The flatness° of my misery; yet with eyes
 Of pity, not revenge!

[Enter OFFICERS, with] CLEOMENES [and] DION.

OFFICER

You here shall swear upon this sword of justice,
 That you, Cleomenes and Dion, have Been both at Delphos, and from thence have brought
 This sealed-up oracle, by the hand delivered
 Of great Apollo's priest; and that since then
 You have not dared to break the holy seal,
 Nor read the secrets in't.

CLEOMENES, DION All this we swear.

LEONTES

Break up the seals and read.

OFFICER "Hermione is chaste, Polixenes blameless, 130 Camillo a true subject, Leontes a jealous tyrant, his innocent babe truly begotten, and the king shall live without an heir, if that which is lost be not found."

LORDS

Now blessèd be the great Apollo!

HERMIONE Praised!

LEONTES

Hast thou read truth?

OFFICER Ay, my lord, even so
 As it is here set down.

LEONTES

95 There is no truth at all i' th' oracle.
 The sessions shall proceed; this is mere falsehood.
 [Enter a SERVANT.]

SERVANT

100 My lord, the king, the king!

LEONTES

What is the business?

SERVANT

O sir, I shall be hated to report it. 140
 The prince, your son, with mere conceit° and fear
 105 Of the queen's speed,° is gone.

LEONTES

How? Gone?

SERVANT

Is dead.

LEONTES

Apollo's angry, and the heavens themselves 110 Do strike at my injustice. [HERMIONE faints.] How now there!

PAULINA

This news is mortal° to the queen—look down 145
 And see what death is doing.

LEONTES

Take her hence;

115 Her heart is but o'ercharged, she will recover.
 I have too much believed mine own suspicion.
 Beseech you tenderly apply to her

Some remedies for life. [Exeunt PAULINA and LADIES, with HERMIONE.] Apollo, pardon 150

My great profaneness 'gainst thine oracle.
 I'll reconcile me to Polixenes,
 120 New woo my queen, recall the good Camillo—
 Whom I proclaim a man of truth, of mercy.

For, being transported by my jealousies 155

To bloody thoughts and to revenge, I chose Camillo for the minister to poison

My friend Polixenes; which had been done,
 But that the good mind of Camillo tardied 160
 My swift command, though I with death and with

Reward did threaten and encourage him,
 Not doing it and being done.° He, most humane,
 And filled with honor, to my kingly guest
 Unclassed my practice,° quit his fortunes here—

Which you knew great—and to the hazard° 165

Of all uncertainties himself commended,

No richer than his honor. How he glisters

Through my rust!° And how his piety

Does my deeds make the blacker!

[Enter PAULINA.]

PAULINA

Woe the while!

O cut my lace,° lest my heart, cracking it, 170
 Break too!

LORD

What fit is this, good lady?

135 141 conceit concept, thought 142 speed fortune, success
 145 mortal deadly 160–62 though . . . done though I threatened him with death for not doing it, and promised him rewards for doing it 164 Unclassed my practice revealed my plot 165 Which . . . hazard the line apparently lacks a foot, which the Second Folio—with the approval of some editors—supplies by inserting the word "certain" before
 "hazard" 168 Through my rust again, to mend the meter,
 F2 reads "through my dark rust"; some editors read
 "Thorough," which is interchangeable with "Through" 170 cut my lace to give her more breath

97 Starred fated 99 post on which public notices and advertisements were placed; in Greene's novel the king issues a proclamation concerning his wife's guilt, which is "blazed through the country" 101 'longs belongs 102 fashion rank 104 strength of limit strength to go out 112 rigor . . . law tyranny, not justice 117 Emperor of Russia in Pandosto it is the wife of Polixenes who is daughter of this emperor 120 flatness completeness

PAULINA

What studied torments, tyrant, hast for me?
 What wheels, racks, fires? What flaying, boiling
 In leads or oils? What old or newer torture
 Must I receive, whose every word deserves
 To taste of thy most worst. Thy tyranny,
 Together working with thy jealousies,
 Fancies too weak for boys, too green and idle
 For girls of nine—O, think what they have done,
 And then run mad indeed, stark mad; for all
 Thy begone fooleries were but spices^o of it.
 That thou betrayedst Polixenes, 'twas nothing;
 That did but show thee, of a fool,^o inconstant,
 And damnable ingrateful. Nor was't much
 Thou wouldst have poisoned good Camillo's honor,
 To have him kill a king—poor trespasses,
 More monstrous standing by;^o whereof I reckon
 The casting forth to crows thy baby daughter
 To be or none, or little; though a devil
 Would have shed water out of fire,^o ere done't;
 Nor is't directly laid to thee the death
 Of the young prince, whose honorable thoughts,
 Thoughts high for one so tender, cleft the heart
 That could conceive a gross and foolish sire
 Blemished his gracious dam. This is not, no,
 Laid to thy answer; but the last—O lords,
 When I have said,^o cry "woe": the queen, the queen,
 The sweet'st, dear'st creature's dead; and vengeance
 for't

Not dropped down yet.

LORDS

The higher pow'rs forbid!

200

PAULINA

I say she's dead; I'll swear't. If word nor oath Prevail not, go and see; if you can bring Tincture or luster in her lip, her eye,
 Heat outwardly or breath within, I'll serve you
 As I would do the gods. But, O thou tyrant,
 Do not repent these things, for they are heavier
 Than all thy woes can stir;^o therefore betake thee
 To nothing but despair. A thousand knees,
 Ten thousand years together, naked, fasting,
 Upon a barren mountain, and still winter^o
 In storm perpetual, could not move the gods
 To look that way thou wert.

LEONTES

Go on, go on;

Thou canst not speak too much, I have deserved
 All tongues to talk their bitt' rest.

LORD

Say no more;

Howe'er the business goes, you have made fault
 I' th' boldness of your speech.

215

PAULINA

I am sorry for't;

All faults I make, when I shall come to know them,
 I do repent. Alas, I have showed too much
 The rashness of a woman; he is touched
 To th' noble heart. What's gone and what's past help
 Should be past grief; do not receive affliction
 At my petition;^o I beseech you, rather 220

182 spices samples 184 of a fool for a fool 188 standing by i.e., and so available for comparison 191 shed . . . fire wept out of burning eyes 198 said said it 207 all . . . stir all thy penitence can remove 210 still winter forever winter 221–22 do . . . petition I would not have you suffer because I prayed that you should

Let me be punished that have minded you
 Of what you should forget. Now, good my liege,
 Sir, royal sir, forgive a foolish woman.

225

175

The love I bore your queen—lo, fool again!
 I'll speak of her no more, nor of your children;
 I'll not remember^o you of my own lord,
 Who is lost too. Take your patience to you,
 And I'll say nothing.

180

LEONTES

Thou didst speak but well,

230

When most the truth^o which I receive much better
 Than to be pitied of thee. Prithee bring me
 To the dead bodies of my queen and son.
 One grave shall be for both; upon them shall
 The causes of their death appear, unto
 Our shame perpetual. Once a day I'll visit
 The chapel where they lie, and tears shed there Shall be my recreation.^o So long as nature
 Will bear up with this exercise, so long
 I daily vow to use it. Come, and lead me
 To these sorrows.

185

235

190

240

Exeunt.

195

Scene III. [Bohemia,° the seacoast.]Enter ANTIGONUS [and] a MARINER, [with a] BABE.

ANTIGONUS

Thou art perfect^o then our ship hath touched upon
 The deserts of Bohemia?

MARINER

Ay, my lord, and fear

We have landed in ill time; the skies look grimly,
 And threaten present blusters. In my conscience,^o
 The heavens with that we have in hand are angry
 And frown upon's.

5

ANTIGONUS

Their sacred wills be done! Go get aboard,
 Look to thy bark, I'll not be long before
 I call upon thee.

205

MARINER

Make your best haste, and go not

Too far i' th' land; 'tis like to be loud weather;
 Besides, this place is famous for the creatures
 Of prey that keep^o upon't.

10

210

ANTIGONUS

Go thou away,

I'll follow instantly.

MARINER

I am glad at heart

To be so rid o' th' business.

Exit.

ANTIGONUS

Come, poor babe;

I have heard, but not believed, the spirits o' th' dead
 May walk again; if such thing be,^o thy mother
 Appeared to me last night; for ne'er was dream
 So like awaking. To me comes a creature,
 Sometimes her head on one side, some another;
 I never saw a vessel of like sorrow

15

20

228 remember remind 230–31 Thou . . . truth you spoke well only when most telling the truth 238 recreation diversion (to do so will be his only pastime)

III.iii.s.d. Bohemia substituted for the Sicily of Pandosto;
 Bohemia, as is notorious, had no seacoast I perfect certain 4 conscience knowledge, awareness (but with something of the modern meaning also) 12 keep live 16 if . . . be Antigonus takes the skeptical Protestant view as a rule, but is convinced of the reality of the vision; possibly Shakespeare, when he wrote this scene, had not yet had the idea of reanimat-
 ing Hermione

So filled, and so becoming.^o In pure white robes,
 Like very sanctity,^o she did approach
 My cabin^o where I lay; thrice bowed before me,
 And, gasping to begin some speech, her eyes
 Became two spouts; the fury spent, anon 25
 Did this break from her: "Good Antigonus,
 Since fate, against thy better disposition,
 Hath made thy person for the thrower-out
 Of my poor babe, according to thine oath,
 Places remote enough are in Bohemia, 30
 There weep, and leave it crying; and for the babe
 Is counted lost forever, Perdita^o
 I prithee call't. For this ungentle business
 Put on thee by my lord, thou ne'er shalt see Thy wife Paulina more." And so, with shrieks, 35
 She melted into air. Affrighted much,
 I did in time collect myself, and thought
 This was so,^o and no slumber. Dreams are toys;^o
 Yet for this once, yea superstitiously,^o
 I will be squared^o by this. I do believe 40
 Hermione hath suffered death, and that Apollo would (this being indeed the issue
 Of King Polixenes) it should here be laid
 Either for life, or death, upon the earth
 Of its right father. Blossom, speed thee well! 45

[He lays down the BABY.]

There lie, and there thy character:^o there these,

[Lays down a bundle.]

Which may, if Fortune please, both breed thee,^o pretty,
 And still rest thine.^o The storm begins; poor wretch,
 That for thy mother's fault art thus exposed
 To loss, and what may follow! Weep I cannot,^o 50
 But my heart bleeds; and most accursed am I
 To be by oath enjoined to this. Farewell,
 The day frowns more and more; thou'rt like to have
 A lullaby too rough; I never saw
 The heavens so dim by day. A savage clamor!^o 55
 Well may I get aboard! This is the chase;^o
 I am gone forever. Exit, pursued by a bear.

[Enter] SHEPHERD.

SHEPHERD I would there were no age between ten and three-and-twenty, or that youth would sleep out the rest; for there is nothing in the between but getting 60 wenches with child, wronging the ancientry, stealing, fighting. Hark you now! Would any but these boiled^o brains of nineteen and two-and-twenty hunt this weather? They have scared away two of my best sheep, which I fear the wolf will sooner find than the 65 master; if anywhere I have them, 'tis by the seaside, browsing of ivy.^o Good luck, an't^o be thy will, what 21 So . . . becoming so filled with sorrow, and so beautiful in sorrow 22 very sanctity sanctity itself 23 cabin berth 32 Perdita meaning "the lost girl" 38 This was so this was real; toys trifles 39 superstitiously again the Protestant view of ghosts 40 squared regulated, ordered 46 character description (by which Perdita is later to be recognized) 47 breed thee raise you, pay for your upbringing 48 And . . . thine there will be something over 50 Weep I cannot though the ghost had told him to 55 savage clamor the noise of the hunters 56 chase the bear 62 boiled seething, hot 67 browsing of ivy "whereon they do greatly feed," according to Pandosto; an't if it have we here? Mercy on's, a barne!^o A very pretty barne; a boy or a child,^o I wonder? A pretty one, a very pretty one; sure, some scape;^o though I am not 70 bookish, yet I can read waiting-gentlewoman in the scape. This has been some stair-work, some trunk-work,^o some behind-door-work; they were warmer that got this than the poor thing is here. I'll take it up for pity; yet I'll tarry till my son come; he hallowed 75 but even now. Whoa-ho-hoa!

Enter CLOWN.

CLOWN Hilloa, loa!

SHEPHERD What? Art so near? If thou'lt see a thing to talk on, when thou art dead and rotten, come hither. What ail'st thou, man? 80

CLOWN I have seen two such sights, by sea and by land! But I am not to say it is a sea, for it is now the sky; betwixt the firmament and it, you cannot thrust a bodkin's point.

SHEPHERD Why, boy, how is it? 85

CLOWN I would you did but see how it chafes, how it rages, how it takes up^o the shore, but that's not to the point. O, the most piteous cry of the poor souls!
 Sometimes to see 'em, and not to see 'em; now the ship boring the moon with her mainmast, and anon 90 swallowed with yeast and froth, as you'd thrust a cork into a hogshead. And then for the land-service,^o to see how the bear tore out his shoulder bone, how he cried to me for help, and said his name was Antigonus, a nobleman! But to make an end of the ship, to see how 95 the sea flapdragoned^o it; but first, how the poor souls roared, and the sea mocked them; and how the poor gentleman roared, and the bear mocked him, both roaring louder than the sea or weather.

SHEPHERD Name of mercy, when was this, boy? 100

CLOWN Now, now; I have not winked since I saw these sights; the men are not yet cold under water, nor the bear half dined on the gentleman; he's at it now.

SHEPHERD Would I had been by, to have helped the
 old man! 105

CLOWN I would you had been by the ship's side, to have helped her; there your charity would have lacked footing.^o

SHEPHERD Heavy matters, heavy matters! But look thee here, boy. Now bless thyself; thou met'st with 110 things dying, I with things new born. Here's a sight for thee; look thee, a bearing-cloth^o for a squire's child; look thee here, take up, take up, boy; open it;
 so, let's see; it was told me I should be rich by the fairies.
 This is some changeling;^o open't; what's within, boy? 115

68 barne child (cf. modern Scots bairn) 69 boy . . .
 child a boy or a girl ("child" for "girl" is a dialect form and presumably was so in 1610) 70 scape sexual misadventure 72-73 trunk-work clandestine action 87 takes up rebukes 92 land-service i.e., the soldier who serves on land (Antigonus) as opposed to the seamen aboard the ship (perhaps with a pun on service meaning "dish"—Antigonus being food for the bear) 96 flapdragoned swallowed down (as drinkers swallowed flapdragons [raisins, etc.] out of burning brandy) 107-08 charity . . . footing alluding to the establishment of charitable foundations 112 bearing-cloth christening robe 115 changeling usually the inferior child left by the fairies; here the child they stole, found with their gold, which must be kept secret

CLOWN You're a made° old man; if the sins of your youth are forgiven you, you're well to live. Gold, all gold!

SHEPHERD This is fairy gold, boy, and 'twill prove so; up with't, keep it close;° home, home, the next° 120 way! We are lucky, boy, and to be so still° requires nothing but secrecy. Let my sheep go; come, good boy, the next way home.

CLOWN Go you the next way with your findings, I'll go see if the bear be gone from the gentleman, and 125 how much he hath eaten. They are never curst° but when they are hungry. If there be any of him left, I'll bury it.

SHEPHERD That's a good deed. If thou mayest discern by that which is left of him what he is, fetch 130 me to th' sight of him.

CLOWN Marry° will I; and you shall help to put him i' th' ground.

SHEPHERD 'Tis a lucky day, boy, and we'll do good deeds on't. Exeunt. 135

A C T I V

Scene I.

Enter TIME, the chorus.

TIME

I that please some, try° all, both joy and terror
Of good and bad; that makes and unfolds error,
Now take upon me, in the name of Time,
To use my wings. Impute it not a crime
To me, or my swift passage, that I slide 5
O'er sixteen years, and leave the growth untried°
Of that wide gap, since it is in my pow'r
To o'erthrow law, and in one self-born hour
To plant, and o'erwhelm custom.° Let me pass;°
The same I am, ere ancient'st order was 10
Or what is now received. I witness to
The times that brought them in; so shall I do
To th' freshest things now reigning, and make stale
The glistening of this present, as my tale
Now seems to it.° Your patience this allowing, 15
I turn my glass, and give my scene such growing
As you had slept between. Leontes leaving—
Th' effects of his fond° jealousies so grieving,
That he shuts up himself—imagine me,
Gentle spectators, that I now may be 20

116 made Folio reads "mad," but this emendation of Theobald is supported by the parallel passage in Pandosto 120 close secret; next nearest 121 still always 126 curst vicious 132 Marry indeed (from "By the Virgin Mary")

IV.i.1 try test 6 growth untried Time asks to be excused from detailed accounts of the interim and its developments, for instance Perdita's childhood 8-9 law . . . custom note the distinction: Time "plants" custom but not law; custom lacks the authority of law, and relates to erroneous opinion; hence the contemporary use of the word in attacks on such ceremonies of the Roman Church as seemed to Protestants without scriptural authority 9 Let me pass not clear in detail, but the sense is, "Let me pass over that gap; I alone remain unchanged from the beginning—and have passed over that far greater gap" 14-15 as . . . it as my tale seems stale compared with the play it interrupts 18 fond foolish

In fair Bohemia; and remember well,
I mentioned° a son o' th' king's, which Florizel
I now name to you; and with speed so pace
To speak of Perdita, now grown in grace
Equal with wond'ring.° What of her ensues 25
I list not° prophesy; but let Time's news
Be known when 'tis brought forth. A shepherd's
daughter,
And what to her adheres,° which follows after,°
Is th' argument° of Time. Of this allow,
If ever you have spent time worse, ere now; 30
If never, yet that Time himself doth say,
He wishes earnestly you never may. Exit.

Scene II. [Bohemia, the court of Polixenes.]

Enter POLIXENES and CAMILLO.

POLIXENES I pray thee, good Camillo, be no more importunate. 'Tis a sickness denying thee anything, a death to grant this.

CAMILLO It is fifteen years since I saw my country; though I have, for the most part, been aired abroad, I 5 desire to lay my bones there. Besides, the penitent king, my master, hath sent for me, to whose feeling sorrows I might be some allay, or I o'erween to° think so, which is another spur to my departure.

POLIXENES As thou lov'st me, Camillo, wipe not 10 out the rest of thy services by leaving me now. The need I have of thee, thine own goodness hath made. Better not to have had thee, than thus to want° thee; thou, having made me businesses, which none, without thee, can sufficiently manage, must either stay to 15 execute them thyself, or take away with thee the very services thou hast done; which if I have not enough considered—as too much I cannot—to be more thankful to thee shall be my study, and my profit therein the heaping friendships.° Of that fatal country Sicilia, 20 prithee speak no more, whose very naming punishes me with the remembrance of that penitent (as thou call'st him) and reconciled king, my brother, whose loss of his most precious queen and children are even now to be afresh lamented. Say to me, when saw'st 25 thou the Prince Florizel, my son? Kings are no less unhappy, their issue not being gracious, than they are in losing them when they have approved their virtues.°

CAMILLO Sir, it is three days since I saw the prince. What his happier affairs may be are to me unknown; 30 but I have missingly° noted, he is of late much retired from court, and is less frequent to his princely exercises° than formerly he hath appeared.

22 mentioned unless the whole play is thought of as Time's report, this is not so; various emendations have been suggested, of which the best is "A mentioned son . . ." 25 Equal with wond'ring to a degree demanding admiration 26 I list not I do not care to 28 adheres belongs; after at this period an acceptable rhyme for "daughter" 29 argument story

IV.ii.8 o'erween to am boastful enough to 13 want be without 20 friendships friendly offices 26-28 Kings . . . virtues It is as hard for kings to bear the disobedience and ill conduct of their children as to lose them when convinced of their virtues 31 missingly because he noted not the prince but his absence 32-33 exercises military and sporting activities

POLIXENES I have considered so much, Camillo, and with some care, so far that I have eyes under my service, which look upon his removedness;° from whom I have this intelligence,° that he is seldom from the house of a most homely shepherd—a man, they say, that from very nothing, and beyond the imagination of his neighbors, is grown into an unspeakable estate. 40

CAMILLO I have heard, sir, of such a man, who hath a daughter of most rare note; the report of her is extended more than can be thought to begin from such a cottage. 45

POLIXENES That's likewise part of my intelligence; but, I fear, the angle° that plucks our son thither. Thou shalt accompany us to the place, where we will, not appearing what we are, have some question° with the shepherd; from whose simplicity I think it not uneasy to get the cause of my son's resort thither. Prithee be my present partner in this business, and lay aside the thoughts of Sicilia. 50

CAMILLO I willingly obey your command.

POLIXENES My best Camillo! We must disguise ourselves. 55
Exit [POLIXENES, with CAMILLO].

Scene III. [A road near the Shepherd's cottage.]

Enter AUTOLYCUS, singing.

When daffodils begin to peer,
With heigh the doxy° over the dale,
Why, then comes in the sweet o' the year,
For the red blood reigns in the winter's pale.°

The white sheet bleaching on the hedge, 5
With heigh the sweet birds, O how they sing!
Doth set my pugging° tooth an edge,
For a quart of ale is a dish for a king.

The lark, that tirra-lirra chants,
With heigh, with heigh, the thrush and the jay! 10
Are summer songs for me and my aunts°
While we lie tumbling in the hay.

I have served Prince Florizel, and in my time wore three-pile,° but now I am out of service.

But shall I go mourn for that, my dear? 15

The pale moon shines by night;
And when I wander here and there
I then do most go right.

If tinkers may have leave to live,
And bear the sow-skin budget,° 20
Then my account I well may give,
And in the stocks avouch° it.

My traffic is sheets; when the kite builds, look to lesser linen.° My father named me Autolycus,° who

35-36 so . . . removedness to the extent that I am having him watched in the place where he is hiding himself 37 intelligence report 47 angle fishhook 49 question talk IV.iii.2 doxy beggar's mistress 4 pale (1) enclosure (2) paleness 7 pugging thieving (to "pug" means to "pull off"; perhaps Autolycus is thinking of his sheet-stealing; he is all set to begin snatching them off the hedges) 11 aunts whores 14 three-pile the best velvet 20 sow-skin budget pigskin toolbag 22 avouch corroborate 23-24 when . . . linen this is a warning: the kite will use bits of household linen for its nest; Autolycus will snatch your sheets 24 Autolycus son of Chione by Mercury, grandfather of Ulysses; Homer says he excelled in thieving, and Ovid that "in theft and filching" he "had no peers" being, as I am, littered under Mercury,° was likewise a 25 snapper-up of unconsidered trifles. With die and drab,° I purchased this caparison, and my revenue is the silly cheat.° Gallows and knock° are too powerful on the highway. Beating and hanging are terrors to me; for the life to come, I sleep out the thought of it. A prize, 30 a prize.

Enter CLOWN.

CLOWN Let me see, every 'leven wether tods,° every tod yields pound and odd shilling; fifteen hundred shorn, what comes the wool to?

AUTOLYCUS [Aside.] If the springe° hold, the cock's° 35 mine.

CLOWN I cannot do't without counters. Let me see, what am I to buy for our sheep-shearing feast? Three pound of sugar, five pound of currants, rice—what will this sister of mine do with rice? But my father 40 hath made her mistress of the feast, and she lays it on. She hath made me four-and-twenty nosegays for the shearers (three-man song-men° all, and very good ones), but they are most of them means° and basses; but one Puritan amongst them, and he sings psalms to 45 hornpipes.° I must have saffron to color the warden pies;° mace;° dates, none, that's out of my note; nutmegs, seven; a race or two of ginger, but that I may beg; four pound of prunes, and as many of raisins o' th' sun.° 50

AUTOLYCUS Oh, that ever I was born!

CLOWN I' th' name of me!

AUTOLYCUS Oh help me, help me; pluck but off these rags; and then, death, death!

CLOWN Alack, poor soul, thou hast need of more 55 rags to lay on thee, rather than have these off.

AUTOLYCUS Oh sir, the loathsomeness of them offends me more than the stripes I have received, which are mighty ones and millions.

CLOWN Alas, poor man, a million of beating may 60 come to a great matter.

AUTOLYCUS I am robbed, sir, and beaten; my money and apparel ta'en from me, and these detestable things put upon me.

CLOWN What, by a horseman or a footman?° 65

AUTOLYCUS A footman, sweet sir, a footman.

CLOWN Indeed, he should be a footman, by the garments he has left with thee; if this be a horseman's coat, it hath seen very hot service. Lend me thy hand, I'll help thee. Come, lend me thy hand. 70

[Helps him up.]

AUTOLYCUS Oh good sir, tenderly, oh!

CLOWN Alas, poor soul!

25 under Mercury under the influence of the star Mercury (Mercury was the patron of thieves) 26 die and drab i.e., dice and whores are responsible for my having no clothes but these 27-28 silly cheat simple (petty) theft 28 knock beating (the risks of highway robbery, death, or combat on the road seem too great) 32 every . . . tods every eleven sheep yield a tod (28 pounds) of wool 35 springe snare; cock's woodcock's 43 three-man song-men singers of lively catches for three voices 44 means tenors 45-46 psalms to hornpipes i.e., he is an unusually cheerful Puritan 46-47 warden pies pies made of warden pears; mace spice made of nutmeg 50 o' th' sun sun-dried 65 footman foot soldier

AUTOLYCUS Oh good sir, softly, good sir; I fear, sir, my shoulder blade is out.

CLOWN How now? Canst stand? 75

AUTOLYCUS Softly, dear sir; good sir, softly; you ha' done me a charitable office.

[Picks his pocket.]

CLOWN Dost lack any money? I have a little money for thee.

AUTOLYCUS No, good sweet sir; no, I beseech you, 80
sir; I have a kinsman not past three-quarters of a mile hence, unto whom I was going. I shall there have money, or anything I want; offer me no money, I pray you; that kills my heart.

CLOWN What manner of fellow was he that robbed 85
you?

AUTOLYCUS A fellow, sir, that I have known to go about with troll-my-dames;° I knew him once a servant of the prince. I cannot tell, good sir, for which of his virtues it was, but he was certainly whipped out 90 of the court.

CLOWN His vices,° you would say; there's no virtue whipped out of the court; they cherish it to make it stay there; and yet it will no more but abide.°

AUTOLYCUS Vices, I would say, sir. I know this man 95 well; he hath been since an ape-bearer;° then a process-server,° a bailiff: then he compassed a motion° of the Prodigal Son,° and married a tinker's wife within a mile where my land and living° lies; and, having flown over many knavish professions, he settled only in 100 rogue. Some call him Autolycus.

CLOWN Out upon him! Prig,° for my life, prig! He haunts wakes, fairs, and bear-baitings.

AUTOLYCUS Very true, sir; he, sir, he; that's the rogue that put me into this apparel. 105

CLOWN Not a more cowardly rogue in all Bohemia; if you had but looked big, and spit at him, he'd have run.

AUTOLYCUS I must confess to you, sir, I am no fighter; I am false of heart that way, and that he knew, 110
I warrant him.

CLOWN How do you now?

AUTOLYCUS Sweet sir, much better than I was. I can stand and walk. I will even take my leave of you, and pace softly towards my kinsman's. 115

CLOWN Shall I bring thee on the way?

AUTOLYCUS No, good-faced sir, no, sweet sir.

CLOWN Then fare thee well; I must go buy spices for our sheep-shearing. Exit.

AUTOLYCUS Prosper you, sweet sir! Your purse is 120 not hot enough to purchase your spice. I'll be with you at your sheep-shearing too; if I make not this cheat bring out another, and the shearers prove sheep, let me be unrolled,° and my name put in the book of virtue! 125

88 troll-my-dames a game played by women, rather like bagatelle 92 vices the Clown fails to see Autolycus' little joke 94 abide make a brief stay 96 ape-bearer one who carries a monkey about for exhibition 96-97 process-server server of writs, bailiff 97 compassed a motion got possession of a puppet show 98 Prodigal Son a favorite theme for representation 99 land and living Autolycus refers grandly to his estates 102 Prig thief 124 unrolled struck off the honorable list of vagabonds

Song.

Jog on, jog on, the footpath way,
And merrily hent° the stile-a;
A merry heart goes all the day,
Your sad tires in a mile-a.

Exit.

Scene IV. [Bohemia, the Shepherd's cottage.]

Enter FLORIZEL [and] PERDITA.

FLORIZEL

These your unusual weeds° to each part of you
Do give a life; no shepherdess, but Flora,°
Peering in April's front.° This your sheep-shearing
Is as a meeting of the petty gods,
And you the queen on't.

PERDITA

Sir, my gracious lord, 5
To chide at your extremes° it not becomes me—
Oh pardon, that I name them! Your high self,
The gracious mark° o' th' land, you have obscured
With a swain's wearing; and me, poor lowly maid,
Most goddesslike pranked up. But that our feasts 10
In every mess have folly, and the feeders
Digest it with a custom,° I should blush
To see you so attired; swoon, I think,
To show myself a glass.

FLORIZEL

I bless the time
When my good falcon made her flight across 15
Thy father's ground.

PERDITA

Now Jove afford you cause!
To me the difference° forges dread; your greatness
Hath not been used to fear. Even now I tremble
To think your father by some accident
Should pass this way, as you did: oh, the fates! 20
How would he look to see his work, so noble, Vilely bound up?° What would he say? Or how Should I, in these my borrowed flaunts,° behold
The sternness of his presence?

FLORIZEL

Apprehend 25
Nothing but jollity. The gods themselves,
Humbling their deities to love, have taken
The shapes of beasts upon them. Jupiter
Became a bull, and bellowed; the green Neptune
A ram, and bleated; and the fire-robed god, 30
Golden Apollo, a poor humble swain,°
As I seem now. Their transformations
Were never for a piece° of beauty rarer,
Nor in a way° so chaste, since my desires

127 hent take hold of (to leap over)

IV.iv.1 unusual weeds unaccustomed garments (Perdita is dressed to be mistress of the feast) 2 Flora Perdita's costume may have resembled that of the Roman goddess 3 Peering . . . front i.e., Flora in April, when the flowers peep out rather than boldly appear 6 extremes exaggerations 8 mark the object of everyone's attention 10-12 our . . . custom our feasts, at every social level, admit licensed folly, which the guests tolerate, calling it a custom 17 difference i.e., in our ranks 22 Vilely bound up the analogy is with a good book shabbily bound 23 flaunts finery 27-30 Jupiter . . . swain Jupiter took the shape of a bull to carry off Europa; Neptune became a ram to woo Theophane; Apollo served as a shepherd to help Admetus win Alcestis 32 piece work of art 33 in a way he refers to the chastity of his intentions, not to Perdita herself

Run not before mine honor, nor my lusts
Burn hotter than my faith.

PERDITA Oh, but sir, 35
Your resolution cannot hold when 'tis
Opposed, as it must be, by th' power of the king.
One of these two must be necessities,
Which then will speak, that you must change this purpose,
Or I my life.°

FLORIZEL Thou dearest Perdita, 40
With these forced° thoughts, I prithee, darken not
The mirth o' th' feast: or° I'll be thine, my fair,
Or not my father's. For I cannot be Mine own, nor anything to any, if
I be not thine. To this I am most constant, 45
Though destiny say no. Be merry, gentle;
Strangle such thoughts as these, with anything
That you behold the while. Your guests are coming;
Lift up your countenance, as it were the day
Of celebration of that nuptial, which 50
We two have sworn shall come.

PERDITA O Lady Fortune,
Stand you auspicious!

FLORIZEL See, your guests approach.
Address yourself to entertain them sprightly,
And let's be red with mirth.

[Enter] SHEPHERD, CLOWN, POLIXENES, CAMILLO
[disguised], MOPSA, DORCAS, SERVANTS.

SHEPHERD
Fie, daughter! When my old wife lived, upon 55
This day, she was both pantler,° butler, cook;
Both dame and servant; welcomed all, served all;
Would sing her song, and dance her turn; now here
At upper end o' th' table, now i' th' middle;
On° his shoulder, and his; her face o' fire 60
With labor and the thing she took to quench it,
She would to each one sip. You are retired,°
As if you were a feasted one, and not
The hostess of the meeting. Pray you bid
These unknown friends to's welcome, for it is 65
A way to make us better friends, more known.
Come, quench your blushes, and present yourself
That which you are, mistress o' th' feast. Come on,
And bid us welcome to your sheep-shearing,
As your good flock shall prosper.

PERDITA [To POLIXENES.] Sir, welcome. 70
It is my father's will I should take on me
The hostess-ship o' th' day. [To CAMILLO.] You're welcome, sir.
Give me those flow'rs there, Dorcas. Reverend sirs,
For you there's rosemary and rue; these keep Seeming and savor° all the winter long. 75
Grace and remembrance° be to you both,
And welcome to our shearing!

POLIXENES Shepherdess—
A fair one are you—well you fit our ages

38–40 One . . . life i.e., the time will come when Florizel will have to give up his plans, or Perdita will lose her life 41 forced strained, unduly fearful 42 or either 56 pantler keeper of the pantry 60 On at 62 retired withdrawn 75 Seeming and savor color and scent 76 Grace and remembrance rue is for grace and repentance; rosemary for remembrance, because the fragrance lasted indefinitely

With flow'rs of winter.

PERDITA Sir, the year growing ancient, 80
Not yet on summer's death, nor on the birth
Of trembling winter, the fairest flow'rs o' th' season
Are our carnations, and streaked gillyvors,°
Which some call Nature's bastards;° of that kind
Our rustic garden's barren; and I care not
To get slips of them.

POLIXENES Wherefore, gentle maiden, 85
Do you neglect them?

PERDITA For I have heard it said,
There is an art, which in their piedness shares
With great creating Nature.

POLIXENES Say there be;
Yet Nature is made better by no mean 90
But Nature makes that mean; so over that art
Which you say adds to Nature, is an art
That Nature makes. You see, sweet maid, we marry
A gentler scion to the wildest stock,
And make conceive a bark of baser kind 95
By bud of nobler race. This is an art
Which does mend Nature, change it rather; but
The art itself is Nature.°

PERDITA So it is.

POLIXENES
Then make your garden rich in gillyvors,
And do not call them bastards.

PERDITA I'll not put 100
The dibble° in earth, to set one slip of them;
No more than were I painted, I would wish
This youth should say 'twere well, and only therefore Desire to breed by me. Here's flow'rs for you:
Hot lavender,° mints, savory, marjoram, 105
The marigold that goes to bed wi' th' sun,
And with him rises, weeping; these are flow'rs
Of middle summer, and I think they are given
To men of middle age. You're very welcome.

CAMILLO
I should leave grazing, were I of your flock,
And only live by gazing.

PERDITA Out, alas! 110
You'd be so lean that blasts of January
Would blow you through and through. [To FLORIZEL.] Now, my fair'st friend,
I would I had some flow'rs o' th' spring, that might Become your time of day—[to SHEPHERDESSES] and yours, and yours, 115
That wear upon your virgin branches yet
Your maidenheads growing. O Proserpina,
For the flow'rs now, that, frightened, thou let'st fall
From Dis's wagon!° Daffodils,
That come before the swallow dares, and take° 82 gillyvors pinks (sometimes in modern regional usage, "wall-flowers"; but here Perdita means carnations, pinks, sweet william—the blooms have streaks of color, and for this reason were associated with loose women; the whole debate on the gillyvors is discussed in the Introduction) 83 Nature's bastards see Introduction 89–97 Yet Nature . . . is Nature see Introduction 100 dibble tool for making holes to plant seeds or cuttings 104 Hot lavender the epithet has not been satisfactorily explained 116–18 Proserpina . . . wagon the God of the Underworld bore off Proserpine as she gathered flowers with her mother, Ceres, in the Vale of Enna; Ovid's account (Metamorphoses V.398–99) mentions that she dropped the flowers she had picked 119 take charm, captivate

The winds of March with beauty; violets, dim,
But sweeter than the lids of Juno's eyes,
Or Cytherea's° breath; pale primroses,
That die unmarried° ere they can behold
Bright Phoebus in his strength (a malady
Most incident to maids); bold oxlips, and
The crown imperial; lilies of all kinds,
The flower-de-luce being one. O, these I lack
To make you garlands of, and my sweet friend,
To strew him o'er and o'er!

FLORIZEL What, like a corse?°

PERDITA
No, like a bank for Love to lie and play on;
Not like a corse; or if, not to be buried,
But quick° and in mine arms. Come, take your flow'rs;
Methinks I play as I have seen them do
In Whitsun pastorals;° sure this robe of mine
Does change my disposition.

FLORIZEL What you do
Still betters what is done. When you speak, sweet,
I'd have you do it ever; when you sing,
I'd have you buy and sell so; so give alms,
Pray so; and for the ord'ring your affairs,
To sing them too. When you do dance, I wish you
A wave o' th' sea, that you might ever do
Nothing but that—move still, still so,
And own no other function. Each your doing,
So singular in each particular,
Crowns what you are doing in the present deeds,
That all your acts are queens.°

PERDITA O Doricles,°
Your praises are too large; but that your youth
And the true blood which peeps° fairly through't,
Do plainly give you out an unstained shepherd,
With wisdom I might fear, my Doricles,
You wooed me the false way.°

FLORIZEL I think you have
As little skill° to fear, as I have purpose
To put you to't. But come, our dance, I pray;
Your hand, my Perdita; so turtles° pair
That never mean to part.

PERDITA I'll swear for 'em.

POLIXENES
This is the prettiest low-born lass that ever
Ran on the greensward; nothing she does or seems
But smacks of something greater than herself,
Too noble for this place.

CAMILLO He tells her something
That makes her blood look out;° good sooth° she is
The queen of curds and cream.°

122 Cytherea's Venus' 123 die unmarried because it grows in shade, and in spring, Milton has "the rathe primrose that forsaken dies" 129 corse corpse 132 quick alive 134 Whitsun pastorals Whitsun was the season for games related to old spring festivals, and Perdita refers probably to the king and queen in these games—identified with Robin Hood and Marian 143–46 Each . . . queens "Your manner in each act crowns the act" (Dr. Johnson) 146 Doricles Florizel's pseudonym 148 peeps shows 151 the false way i.e., by flattery 152 skill reason 154 turtles doves 160 blood look out blush; good sooth in truth 161 queen . . . cream John Dover Wilson argues that Camillo is calling Perdita a "white-pot queen"—the name given in some May games to the queen, by association with a dish called "white-pot," made of custard, cream, spices, apples, etc.

120 CLOWN Come on, strike up.

DORCAS

Mopsa must be your mistress; marry, garlic
To mend her kissing with!°

MOPSA

Now, in good time!°

125 CLOWN

Not a word, a word, we stand upon our manners.
Come, strike up.

165

Here a dance of SHEPHERDS and SHEPHERDESSES.

POLIXENES

130 Pray, good shepherd, what fair swain is this,
Which dances with your daughter?

SHEPHERD

They call him Doricles, and boasts himself
To have a worthy feeding;° but I have it
Upon his own report, and I believe it:
He looks like sooth. He says he loves my daughter;
I think so too; for never gazed the moon
Upon the water, as he'll stand and read,
As 'twere, my daughter's eyes; and, to be plain,
I think there is not half a kiss to choose
Who loves another° best.

170

175

140 POLIXENES She dances featly.°

SHEPHERD

So she does anything, though I report it
That should be silent. If young Doricles
Do light upon her, she shall bring him that
Which he not dreams of.

180

Enter SERVANT.

SERVANT O master, if you did but hear the peddler at the door, you would never dance again after a tabor° and pipe; no, the bagpipe could not move you. He sings several tunes faster than you'll tell° money; he utters them as he had eaten ballads,° and all men's ears grew to his tunes.

185

CLOWN He could never come better; he shall come in; I love a ballad but even too well, if it be doleful matter merrily set down; or a very pleasant thing indeed, and sung lamentably.

190

155 SERVANT He hath songs for man or woman of all sizes; no milliner can so fit his customers with gloves.
He has the prettiest love songs for maids, so without bawdry, which is strange; with such delicate burdens° of dildos and fadings:° "Jump her, and thump her";° and where some stretch-mouthed rascal would, as it were, mean mischief, and break a foul gap° into the matter, he makes the maid to answer, "Whoop, do me no harm, good man";° puts him off, slights him, with "Whoop, do me no harm, good man."

195

200

POLIXENES This is a brave fellow.

162–63 garlic . . . with use garlic to overcome her bad breath
163 in good time expression of indignation 169 feeding landed property 176 another the other; featly nimbly 182
tabor little drum 184 tell count 185 ballads broadsheet words and music, to familiar tunes and on topical subjects 194 burdens refrains 195 dildos and fadings dildos, often mentioned in ballad refrains, are phalli; fadings are indecent refrains; Jump . . . her familiar ballad refrains 197 foul gap i.e., a break in the song for obscene patter 198–99
Whoop . . . man an extant ballad, coarse in character, has this refrain; the joke in this speech lies in the Servant's praising Autolycus for the decency of his songs, and simultaneously betraying the fact of their indecency

CLOWN Believe me, thou talkest of an admirable conceited^o fellow. Has he any unbraided^o wares?

SERVANT He hath ribbons of all the colors i' th' rainbow; points,^o more than all the lawyers in Bohemia 205 can learnedly handle, though they come to him by th' gross;^o inkles,^o caddisses,^o cambrics, lawns. Why, he sings 'em over, as they were gods or goddesses; you would think a smock were a she-angel, he so chants to the sleevehand,^o and the work about the 210 square^o on't.

CLOWN Prithee bring him in, and let him approach singing.

PERDITA Forewarn him that he use no scurrilous words in's tunes. [Exit SERVANT.] 215

CLOWN You have of these peddlers^o that have more in them than you'd think, sister.

PERDITA Ay, good brother, or go about to^o think.

Enter AUTOLYCUS, singing.

Lawn as white as driven snow,
Cypress^o black as e'er was crow, 220
Gloves as sweet as damask roses,^o
Masks for faces, and for noses;^o
Bugle-bracelet,^o necklace-amber,
Perfume for a lady's chamber;
Golden quoifs^o and stomachers 225
For my lads to give their dears;
Pins and poking-sticks^o of steel;
What maids lack from head to heel!

Come buy of me, come, come buy, come buy,
Buy lads, or else your lasses cry; come buy! 230

CLOWN If I were not in love with Mopsa, thou shouldst take no money of me; but being enthralled as I am, it will also be the bondage^o of certain ribbons and gloves.

MOPSA I was promised them against^o the feast, but 235 they come not too late now.

DORCAS He hath promised you more than that, or there be liars.

MOPSA He hath paid you all he promised you; may be he has paid you more, which will shame you to 240 give him again.^o

CLOWN Is there no manners left among maids? Will they wear their plackets^o where they should bear their faces? Is there not milking-time, when you are going to bed, or kiln-hole,^o to whistle of these secrets, but 245

203 conceited witty; unbraided new ("braided wares" are shop-soiled) 205 points tagged laces, by which clothes were held up (with a pun on the sense of "arguments") 207 gross twelve dozen points (also with reference to clerkly "engrossing," the lawyer's fair copying); inkles linen tapes; caddisses worsted tapes for garters 210 sleevehand cuff 211 square embroidered yoke 216 You . . . peddlers there are peddlers 218 go about to intend to 220 Cypress crape 221 Gloves . . . roses it was the fashion to perfume gloves 222 Masks . . . noses to protect ladies' faces or noses from the sun 223 Bugle-bracelet bracelet of beads 225 quoifs head scarves 227 poking-sticks metal rods used in ironing starched ruffs 233 bondage i.e., he is a prisoner of Mopsa, and will take the fairings into captivity with him 235 against before 240-41 paid you more . . . again this girlish insult means, "Perhaps he has made you pregnant" 243 plackets petticoats, or slits in petticoats (often used indecently; here the Clown merely means that they should not as it were wash their dirty linen in public) 245 kiln-hole the place containing the fire for malt making (convenient for confidential talk) you must be tittle-tattling before all our guests? 'Tis well they are whis'pring. Clammer^o your tongues, and not a word more.

MOPSA I have done. Come, you promised me a tawdry-lace,^o and a pair of sweet gloves. 250

CLOWN Have I not told thee how I was cozened by the way, and lost all my money?

AUTOLYCUS And indeed, sir, there are cozeners abroad; therefore it behooves men to be wary.

CLOWN Fear not thou, man; thou shalt lose nothing 255 here.

AUTOLYCUS I hope so, sir, for I have about me many parcels of charge.^o

CLOWN What hast here? Ballads?

MOPSA Pray now, buy some. I love a ballad in print, 260 a-life,^o for then we are sure they are true.

AUTOLYCUS Here's one to a very doleful tune, how a usurer's wife was brought to bed of twenty money-bags at a burden, and how she longed to eat adders' heads and toads carbonadoed.^o 265

MOPSA Is it true, think you?

AUTOLYCUS Very true, and but a month old.

DORCAS Bless me from marrying a usurer!

AUTOLYCUS Here's the midwife's name to't: one Mistress Taleporter, and five or six honest wives that 270 were present. Why should I carry lies abroad?

MOPSA Pray you now, buy it.

CLOWN Come on, lay it by, and let's first see moe^o ballads; we'll buy the other things anon.

AUTOLYCUS Here's another ballad, of a fish^o that 275 appeared upon the coast on Wednesday the fourscore of April, forty thousand fathom above water, and sung this ballad against the hard hearts of maids; it was thought she was a woman, and was turned into a cold fish for she would not exchange flesh with one that 280 loved her. The ballad is very pitiful, and as true.

DORCAS Is it true too, think you?

AUTOLYCUS Five justices' hands at it, and witnesses more than my pack will hold.

CLOWN Lay it by too; another. 285

AUTOLYCUS This is a merry ballad, but a very pretty one.

MOPSA Let's have some merry ones.

AUTOLYCUS Why, this is a passing merry one, and goes to the tune of "Two Maids Wooing a Man." 290 There's scarce a maid westward but she sings it; 'tis in request, I can tell you.

MOPSA We can both sing it. If thou'lt bear a part, thou shalt hear; 'tis in three parts.

DORCAS We had the tune on't, a month ago. 295

AUTOLYCUS I can bear my part, you must know 'tis my occupation. Have at it with you.

Song.

AUTOLYCUS Get you hence, for I must go
Where it fits not you to know.

DORCAS Whither? 300

247 Clammer silence (technical term in bellringing) 250 tawdry-lace silk worn around the neck (called after Saint Audrey [Ethelreda], who was punished for youthful ostentation—especially fine necklaces—by a tumor in the throat) 258 parcels of charge goods of value 261 a-life dearly 265 carbonadoed cut up and broiled 273 moe more 275 of a fish records of very similar ballads survive

MOPSA O whither?
 DORCAS Whither?
 MOPSA It becomes thy oath full well,
 Thou to me thy secrets tell.
 DORCAS Me too; let me go thither. 305
 MOPSA Or thou go'st to th' grange or mill,
 DORCAS If to either thou dost ill.
 AUTOLYCUS Neither.
 DORCAS What, neither?
 AUTOLYCUS Neither. 310
 DORCAS Thou hast sworn my love to be.
 MOPSA Thou hast sworn it more to me.
 Then whither goest? Say, whither?
 CLOWN We'll have this song out anon by ourselves;
 my father and the gentlemen are in sad° talk, and we'll 315 not trouble them. Come bring away thy pack after me; wenches, I'll buy for you both. Peddler, let's have the first choice; follow me, girls.
 [Exeunt CLOWN, DORCAS, and MOPSA.]
 AUTOLYCUS And you shall pay well for 'em.

Song.

Will you buy any tape, or lace for your cape, 320
 My dainty duck, my dear-a?
 Any silk, any thread, any toys for your head,
 Of the new'st, and fin'st fin'st wear-a?
 Come to the peddler, money's a meddler,
 That doth utter° all men's ware-a. Exit. 325

Enter SERVANT.

SERVANT Master, there is three carters, three shepherds, three neatherds,° three swineherds that have made themselves all men of hair;° they call themselves saltiers,° and they have a dance, which the wenches say is a gallimaufry° of gambols, because they are not 330 in't; but they themselves are o' th' mind, if it be not too rough for some that know little but bowling,° it will please plentifully.
 SHEPHERD Away! We'll none on't; here has been too much homely foolery already. I know, sir, we weary 335
 you.
 POLIXENES You weary those that refresh us; pray
 let's see these four threes of herdsmen.
 SERVANT One three of them, by their own report, sir, hath danced before the king;° and not the worst of 340
 the three but jumps twelve foot and a half by th' squier.°
 SHEPHERD Leave your prating; since these good men are pleased, let them come in; but quickly now.
 SERVANT Why, they stay at door, sir. [Exit.] 345

Here a dance of twelve SATYRS.

POLIXENES [To SHEPHERD.]
 O father, you'll know more of that hereafter.

315 sad serious 325 utter put forth 327 neatherds cowherds 328 men of hair hairy men, satyrs (or the wild men of medieval art and entertainment) 329 saltiers satyrs (or perhaps leapers, vaulters, from French saultier = vaulter) 330 gallimaufry hodgepodge 332 bowling here, a gentle activity, contrasted with the acrobatic dance 340 before the king the performers of this dance had certainly done so, perhaps in this very dance 342 squier rule

[To CAMILLO.]

Is it not too far gone? 'Tis time to part them.
 He's simple and tells much. How now, fair shepherd!
 Your heart is full of something that does take
 Your mind from feasting. Sooth, when I was young, 350
 And handed° love as you do, I was wont
 To load my she with knacks; I would have ransacked
 The peddler's silken treasury, and have poured it
 To her acceptance: you have let him go,
 And nothing marted with° him. If your lass 355
 Interpretation should abuse,° and call this
 Your lack of love or bounty, you were straited°
 For a reply, at least if you make a care
 Of happy holding her.

FLORIZEL Old sir, I know
 She prizes not such trifles as these are; 360
 The gifts she looks from me are packed and locked
 Up in my heart, which I have given already,
 But not delivered.° O, hear me breathe my life
 Before this ancient sir, who, it should seem,
 Hath sometime loved: I take thy hand, this hand 365
 As soft as dove's down, and as white as it,
 Or Ethiopian's tooth, or the fanned snow that's bolted°
 By th' northern blasts twice o'er—

POLIXENES What follows this?
 How prettily th' young swain seems to wash
 The hand was fair° before! I have put you out; 370
 But to your protestation: let me hear
 What you profess.

FLORIZEL Do, and be witness to't.

POLIXENES

And this my neighbor too?

FLORIZEL And he, and more
 Than he, and men; the earth, the heavens, and all:
 That were I crowned the most imperial monarch, 375
 Thereof most worthy; were I the fairest youth
 That ever made eye swerve; had force and knowledge
 More than was ever man's, I would not prize them
 Without her love; for her, employ them all,
 Commend them, and condemn them to her service, 380
 Or to their own perdition.°

POLIXENES Fairly offered.

CAMILLO

This shows a sound affection.

SHEPHERD But, my daughter,
 Say you the like to him?

PERDITA I cannot speak
 So well, nothing so well; no, nor mean better.
 By th' pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out 385
 The purity of his.

SHEPHERD Take hands, a bargain;
 And friends unknown, you shall bear witness to't:
 I give my daughter to him, and will make
 Her portion equal his.

FLORIZEL O, that must be
 I' th' virtue of your daughter. One being dead, 390

351 handed dealt with 355 marted with bought of 356 Interpretation should abuse choose to misunderstand 357 straited in difficulties 362-63 given . . . delivered the deal is settled, but the goods not yet handed over 367 bolted sifted 370 was fair that was fair 380-81 Commend . . . perdition commend them to her service, or condemn them to their own perdition

I shall have more than you can dream of yet,
Enough then for your wonder.^o But come on,
Contract us 'fore these witnesses.

SHEPHERD Come, your hand;
And, daughter, yours.

POLIXENES Soft, swain, awhile, beseech you,
Have you a father?

FLORIZEL I have; but what of him? 395

POLIXENES Knows he of this?

FLORIZEL He neither does, nor shall.

POLIXENES Methinks a father
Is at the nuptial of his son a guest
That best becomes the table. Pray you once more,
Is not your father grown incapable 400
Of reasonable affairs? Is he not stupid
With age and alt'ring rheums?^o Can he speak, hear?
Know man from man? Dispute his own estate?
Lies he not bed-rid? And again does nothing
But what he did being childish?

FLORIZEL No, good sir; 405
He has his health, and ampler strength indeed
Than most have of his age.

POLIXENES By my white beard,
You offer him, if this be so, a wrong
Something unfilial. Reason my son^o
Should choose himself a wife, but as good reason 410
The father, all whose joy is nothing else
But fair posterity, should hold some counsel
In such a business.

FLORIZEL I yield all this;
But for some other reasons, my grave sir,
Which 'tis not fit you know, I not acquaint 415
My father of this business.

POLIXENES Let him know't.

FLORIZEL He shall not.

POLIXENES Prithee, let him.

FLORIZEL No, he must not.

SHEPHERD Let him, my son; he shall not need to grieve
At knowing of thy choice.

FLORIZEL Come, come, he must not.
Mark our contract.^o

POLIXENES [Discovering himself.] Mark your divorce, 420
young sir,
Whom son I dare not call; thou art too base
To be acknowledged. Thou, a scepter's heir,
That thus affect'st^o a sheep-hook! Thou, old traitor,
I am sorry that by hanging thee, I can .
But shorten thy life one week. And thou, fresh piece 425
Of excellent witchcraft, who of force must know
The royal fool thou cop'st with—

SHEPHERD O my heart!

POLIXENES

I'll have thy beauty scratched with briers and made
More homely than thy state. For thee, fond^o boy,
If I may ever know thou dost but sigh 430
That thou no more shalt see this knack—as never
I mean thou shalt—we'll bar thee from succession;
Not hold thee of our blood, no not our kin,
Farre than Deucalion off.^o Mark thou my words.
Follow us to the court. Thou, churl, for this time, 435
Though full of our displeasure, yet we free thee
From the dead blow of it. And you, enchantment,
Worthy enough a herdsman—yea him, too,
That makes himself, but for our honor therein,
Unworthy thee^o—if ever henceforth thou 440
These rural latches to his entrance open,
Or hoop his body more with thy embraces,
I will devise a death as cruel for thee
As thou art tender to't. Exit.

PERDITA Even here undone!
I was not much afeard; for once or twice 445
I was about to speak and tell him plainly,
The selfsame sun that shines upon his court
Hides not his visage from our cottage, but Looks on alike. [To FLORIZEL.] Will't please you, sir,
be gone?
I told you what would come of this. Beseech you, 450
Of your own state take care: this dream of mine
Being now awake, I'll queen it no inch farther,
But milk my ewes, and weep.

CAMILLO Why, how now, father!
Speak ere thou diest.

SHEPHERD I cannot speak nor think,
Nor dare to know that which I know. [To FLORIZEL.] 455
O sir,
You have undone a man of fourscore three,
That thought to fill his grave in quiet, yea,
To die upon the bed my father died,
To lie close by his honest bones; but now
Some hangman must put on my shroud, and lay me 460
Where no priest shovels in dust.^o Oh cursèd wretch,
That knew'st this was the prince, and wouldst adventure
To mingle faith with him! Undone, undone!
If I might die within this hour, I have lived
To die when I desire. Exit.

FLORIZEL Why look you so upon me? 465
I am but sorry, not afeard; delayed,
But nothing altered. What I was, I am;
More straining on, for plucking back; not following
My leash unwillingly.^o

CAMILLO Gracious my lord,
You know your father's temper; at this time 470
He will allow no speech—which I do guess

391–92 I . . . wonder I shall have more than you can at this time dream of, and enough to amaze you when you know of it 402 alt'ring rheums i.e., rheumatic afflictions which disturb his judgment 409 Reason my son there is reason that my son 420 contract Wilson in the New Cambridge edition points out that "we have here a description, all but the final solemn words, of one of those betrothal ceremonies which were held as legally binding as marriage in church" 423 affect'st desirest, lovest

429 fond foolish 434 Farre . . . off further back than Deucalion (legendary ancient king of Thessaly) 438–40 yea . . . thee indeed, you are worthy of Florizel—whose conduct has made him, save for the fact of his being my son, unworthy of you 461 Where . . . dust (before the Reformation, and even in the First Prayer Book of Edward VI, the priest was directed to do this; felons were buried by the gallows 468–69 More . . . unwillingly the image is of a hound; Florizel continues on his chosen course, all the more strongly for having been dragged back; he is not going to do as his father says against his will

- You do not purpose to him—and as hardly
Will he endure your sight as yet, I fear;
Then, till the fury of his highness settle,
Come not before him.
- FLORIZEL I not purpose it. 475
I think, Camillo?
- CAMILLO Even he, my lord.
- PERDITA
How often have I told you 'twould be thus?
How often said my dignity would last
But till 'twere known?
- FLORIZEL It cannot fail, but by 480
The violation of my faith, and then
Let Nature crush the sides o' th' earth together,
And mar the seeds within.^o Lift up thy looks;
From my succession wipe me, father, I Am heir to my affection.
- CAMILLO Be advised.
- FLORIZEL 485
I am, and by my fancy; if my reason
Will thereto be obedient, I have reason;
If not, my senses better pleased with madness,^o
Do bid it welcome.
- CAMILLO This is desperate, sir.
- FLORIZEL
So call it, but it does fulfill my vow;
I needs must think it honesty. Camillo, 490
Not for Bohemia, nor the pomp that may Be thereat gleaned; for all the sun sees or
The close earth wombs or the profound seas hide
In unknown fathoms, will I break my oath
To this my fair beloved. Therefore, I pray you,
As you have even been my father's honored friend, 495
When he shall miss me, as in faith I mean not
To see him any more, cast your good counsels
Upon his passion; let myself and Fortune
Tug^o for the time to come. This you may know, 500
And so deliver: I am put to sea
With her whom here I cannot hold on shore;
And most opportune^o to her need, I have
A vessel rides fast by, but not prepared
For this design. What course I mean to hold 505 Shall nothing benefit your knowledge, nor Concern me the reporting.
- CAMILLO O my lord,
I would your spirit were easier for advice,
Or stronger for your need.
- FLORIZEL Hark, Perdita—
[To CAMILLO.]
I'll hear you by and by.
- CAMILLO He's irremovable, 510
Resolved for flight. Now were I happy if
His going I could frame to serve my turn,
Save him from danger, do him love and honor,
- Purchase the sight again of dear Sicilia,
And that unhappy king, my master, whom 515
I so much thirst to see.
- FLORIZEL Now, good Camillo,
I am so fraught with curious^o business that I leave out ceremony.^o
- CAMILLO Sir, I think
You have heard of my poor services i' th' love
That I have borne your father?
- FLORIZEL Very nobly 520
Have you deserved; it is my father's music
To speak your deeds, not little of his care
To have them recompensed, as thought on.
- CAMILLO Well, my lord,
If you may please to think I love the king,
And through him what's nearest to him, which is 525
Your gracious self, embrace but my direction,^o
If your more ponderous and settled project
May suffer alteration. On mine honor,
I'll point you where you shall have such receiving
As shall become your highness, where you may 530
Enjoy your mistress; from the whom, I see There's no disjunction to be made, but by—
As heavens forfend—your ruin; marry her;
And with my best endeavors, in your absence,
Your discontenting^o father strive to qualify^o 535
And bring him up to liking.
- FLORIZEL How, Camillo,
May this, almost a miracle, be done?
That I may call thee something more than man,
And after that trust to thee.
- CAMILLO Have you thought on
A place whereto you'll go?
- FLORIZEL Not any yet; 540
But as th' unthought-on accident is guilty
To what we wildly do, so we profess
Ourselves to be the slaves of chance, and flies
Of every wind that blows.^o
- CAMILLO Then list^o to me.
This follows, if you will not change your purpose, 545
But undergo this flight: make for Sicilia,
And there present yourself and your fair princess
(For so I see she must be) 'fore Leontes.
She shall be habited as it becomes
The partner of your bed. Methinks I see 550
Leontes opening his free arms and weeping
His welcomes forth; asks thee, the son, forgiveness,
As 'twere i' th' father's person; kisses the hands
Of your fresh princess; o'er and o'er divides him
'Twixt his unkindness and his kindness: th' one 555
He chides to hell, and bids the other grow
Faster^o than thought or time.
- FLORIZEL Worthy Camillo,
What color^o for my visitation shall I
Hold up before him?

481–82 Let . . . within for this image of the end of creation compare Macbeth IV.i.59 and King Lear III.ii.8 485–87 fancy . . . reason . . . madness if the fancy, which makes images, is not obedient to the reason—a higher mental power—the result is madness or dream (Florizel wants his reason to obey his fancy; otherwise, he says, he'd rather be mad; for the psychology involved, see A Midsummer Night's Dream V.i.2 ff.) 500 Tug contend, strive 503 opportune accent on second syllable

517 curious needing great care 518 ceremony Florizel is apologizing for having broken away from Camillo to hold his urgent private talk with Perdita 526 direction advice 535 discontenting displeased; qualify appease, moderate (used, for example, of tempering wine with water) 541–44 But . . . blows since we are compelled to this wild behavior by a chance we never foresaw, we think of ourselves as the slaves of chance, and will go where it sends us, like flies in a wind 544 list listen 557 Faster firmer 558 color pretext

CAMILLO Sent by the king your father
To greet him, and to give him comforts. Sir, 560
The manner of your bearing towards him, with
What you, as from your father, shall deliver,
Things known betwixt us three, I'll write you down,
The which shall point you forth at every sitting
What you must say, that he shall not perceive, 565
But that° you have your father's bosom there,
And speak his very heart.

FLORIZEL I am bound to you;
There is some sap° in this.

CAMILLO A course more promising
Than a wild dedication of yourselves
To unpathed waters, undreamed shores, most certain 570
To miseries enough: no hope to help you,
But as you shake off one, to take another;
Nothing so certain as your anchors, who
Do their best office if they can but stay° you,
Where you'll be loath to be. Besides, you know, 575
Prosperity's the very bond of love,
Whose fresh complexion and whose heart together
Affliction alters.

PERDITA One of these is true:
I think affliction may subdue the cheek,
But not take in the mind.

CAMILLO Yea? Say you so? 580
There shall not at your father's house these seven years°
Be born another such.

FLORIZEL My good Camillo,
She is as forward of her breeding as
She is i' th' rear 'our birth.°

CAMILLO I cannot say 'tis pity 585
She lacks instructions, for she seems a mistress
To most that teach.

PERDITA Your pardon, sir; for this,
I'll blush you thanks.

FLORIZEL My prettiest Perdita!
But O, the thorns we stand upon! Camillo—
Preserver of my father, now of me,
The medicine° of our house—how shall we do? 590
We are not furnished like Bohemia's son,
Nor shall appear° in Sicilia.

CAMILLO My lord,
Fear none of this. I think you know my fortunes
Do all lie there; it shall be so my care
To have you royally appointed,° as if 595
The scene you play were mine. For instance, sir,
That you may know you shall not want—one word.
[They talk aside.]

Enter AUTOLYCUS.

AUTOLYCUS Ha, ha, what a fool° Honesty is! And Trust, his sworn brother, a very simple gentleman. I have sold all my trumpery: not a counterfeit stone, 600

565–66 perceive, But that know otherwise than that 568 sap life fluid 574 stay hold 581 these seven years used to signify a long, indefinite period 583–84 She is as . . . birth she is as far in advance of the way of life she was reared to as she is inferior to us in birth 590 medicine physician 592 appear appear so (the second word may have dropped out) 595 royally appointed equipped like a prince 598 Ha, ha, what a fool . . . these lines echo passages in Greene's Second Part of Conny-catching (1592); the character of Autolycus, and the account of the tricks of his trade, is indebted to this book not a ribbon, glass, pomander, brooch, table-book,° ballad, knife, tape, glove, shoe-tie, bracelet, horn-ring, to keep my pack from fasting. They throng who should buy first, as if my trinkets had been hallowed,° 605 and brought a benediction to the buyer; by which means I saw whose purse was best in picture,° and what I saw to my good use I remembered. My clown, who wants but something to be a reasonable man, grew so in love with the wenches' song, that he would not stir his pettitoes° till he had both tune and words, 610 which so drew the rest of the herd to me that all their other senses stuck in ears: you might have pinched a placket, it was senseless; 'twas nothing to geld a codpiece of a purse; I would have filed keys off that hung in chains. No hearing, no feeling, but my sir's° 615 song, and admiring the nothing° of it. So that in this time of lethargy I picked and cut most of their festival purses; and had not the old man come in with a hubbub against his daughter and the king's son, and scared my choughs° from the chaff, I had not left a 620 purse alive in the whole army.

[CAMILLO, FLORIZEL, and PERDITA come forward.]

CAMILLO
Nay, but my letters, by this means being there
So soon as you arrive, shall clear that doubt.

FLORIZEL
And those that you'll procure from King Leontes?

CAMILLO
Shall satisfy your father.

PERDITA Happy be you! 625
All that you speak shows fair.

CAMILLO [Seeing AUTOLYCUS.]
Who have we here?

We'll make an instrument of this, omit
Nothing may give us aid.

AUTOLYCUS
If they have overheard me now—why, hanging. 630

CAMILLO
How now, good fellow, why shak'st thou so?
Fear not, man; here's no harm intended to thee.

AUTOLYCUS I am a poor fellow, sir.

CAMILLO Why, be so still; here's nobody will steal that from thee. Yet for the outside of thy poverty we 635 must make an exchange; therefore disease° thee instantly—thou must think there's a necessity in't—and change garments with this gentleman; though the pennyworth on his side be the worst, yet hold thee, there's some boot.° 640

[Giving money.]

AUTOLYCUS I am a poor fellow, sir. [Aside.] I know ye well enough.

CAMILLO Nay, prithee dispatch; the gentleman is half flayed° already.

AUTOLYCUS Are you in earnest, sir? [Aside.] I smell 645
the trick on't.

601 table-book notebook 604 hallowed sacred 606 in picture to look at (?) 610 pettitoes toes (especially of a pig) 615 my sir's the Clown's 616 nothing nothingness, nonsense (with perhaps, as Wilson suggests, a pun on noting) 620
choughs fools 636 disease undress 640 boot extra reward
644 flayed skinned (undressed)

FLORIZEL Dispatch, I prithee.

AUTOLYCUS Indeed, I have had earnest,^o but I cannot with conscience take it.

CAMILLO Unbuckle, unbuckle.

650

[FLORIZEL and AUTOLYCUS exchange garments.]

Fortunate mistress—let my prophecy^o

Come home to ye—you must retire yourself

Into some covert; take your sweetheart's hat

And pluck it o'er your brows, muffle your face,

Dismantle you, and, as you can, disliken

655

The truth of your own seeming,^o that you may

(For I do fear eyes over^o) to shipboard

Get undescried.

PERDITA I see the play so lies

That I must bear a part.

CAMILLO No remedy.

Have you done there?

FLORIZEL Should I now meet my father, 660

He would not call me son.

CAMILLO Nay, you shall have no hat.

[Giving hat to PERDITA.]

Come, lady, come; farewell, my friend.

AUTOLYCUS Adieu, sir.

FLORIZEL

O Perdita, what have we twain forgot?

Pray you, a word.

CAMILLO [Aside.]

What I do next shall be to tell the king

665

Of this escape, and whither they are bound;

Wherein my hope is, I shall so prevail

To force him after; in whose company

I shall re-view Sicilia, for whose sight

I have a woman's longing.

FLORIZEL Fortune speed us! 670

Thus we set on, Camillo, to th' seaside.

CAMILLO

The swifter speed, the better.

Exit [CAMILLO, with FLORIZEL and PERDITA].

AUTOLYCUS I understand the business, I hear it. To have an open ear, a quick eye, and a nimble hand, is necessary for a cutpurse; a good nose is requisite also, 675 to smell out work for th' other senses. I see this is the time that the unjust man doth thrive. What an exchange had this been without boot! What a boot is here, with this exchange! Sure, the gods do this year

connive at^o us, and we may do anything extempore. 680

The prince himself is about a piece of iniquity—stealing away from his father, with his clog^o at his heels; if I thought it were a piece of honesty to acquaint the king withal, I would not do't. I hold it the more knavery to conceal it; and therein am I constant to my 685 profession.

Enter CLOWN and SHEPHERD.

Aside, aside! Here is more matter for a hot brain.

Every lane's end, every shop, church, session, hanging, yields a careful man work.

CLOWN See, see, what a man you are now! There is 690

no other way but to tell the king she's a changeling, and none of your flesh and blood.

SHEPHERD Nay, but hear me.

CLOWN Nay, but hear me.

SHEPHERD Go to, then. 695

CLOWN She being none of your flesh and blood, your flesh and blood has not offended the king, and so your flesh and blood is not to be punished by him. Show those things you found about her, those secret things, all but what she has with her. This being done, let the 700 law go whistle; I warrant you.

SHEPHERD I will tell the king all, every word, yea, and his son's pranks too; who, I may say, is no honest man, neither to his father nor to me, to go about to make me the king's brother-in-law. 705

CLOWN Indeed brother-in-law was the farthest off

you could have been to him; and then your blood had been the dearer by I know not how much an ounce.

AUTOLYCUS [Aside.] Very wisely, puppies!

SHEPHERD Well, let us to the king; there is that in this 710

fardel^o will make him scratch his beard.

AUTOLYCUS [Aside.] I know not what impediment

this complaint may be to the flight of my master.

CLOWN Pray heartily he be at palace.^o

AUTOLYCUS [Aside.] Though I am not naturally 715 honest, I am so sometimes by chance. Let me pocket up my peddler's excrement.^o [Takes off false beard.] How now, rustics, whither are you bound?

SHEPHERD To th' palace, an it like your worship.

AUTOLYCUS Your affairs there, what, with whom,^o 720

the condition of that fardel, the place of your dwelling, your names, your ages, of what having,^o breeding, and anything that is fitting to be known, discover.

CLOWN We are but plain fellows, sir.

AUTOLYCUS A lie: you are rough, and hairy. Let me 725 have no lying; it becomes none but tradesmen, and they often give us soldiers the lie, but we pay them for it with stamped coin, not stabbing steel; therefore they do not give us the lie.^o

CLOWN Your worship had like to have given us one, 730

if you had not taken yourself with the manner.^o

SHEPHERD Are you a courtier,^o an't like you, sir?

AUTOLYCUS Whether it like me or no, I am a courtier. See'st thou not the air of the court in these enfoldings? Hath not my gait in it the measure^o of the 735

711 fardel bundle 714 at palace the Clown speaks of the king being "at palace" as he might of an ordinary man being "at home" (Cambridge editors) 717 excrement i.e., his false beard (hair, beard, and nails were called "excrement," from Latin excrecere = to grow out) 720 what, with whom parodying a form of legal questioning to terrify the rustics 722 having property 726-29 it becomes . . . lie tradesmen give the lie by giving short measure, but the simple soldier nevertheless pays them for the lie with money, not with his sword—so the tradesmen are not, after all, giving the lie; they are selling it (Wilson's explanation) 731 with the manner in the act (at first Autolycus was about to lie by saying "give" instead of "sell" when speaking of the tradesmen; but he caught himself in the act and changed his statement) 732 courtier Autolycus is wearing Florizel's festive clothes 735 measure stately tread

648 earnest money paid as installment, "deposit" 651 pro-

phesy the prophecy is the form of address, "Fortunate mistress"

655-56 disliken . . . seeming a complicated way of saying "alter your usual appearance," which may indicate Shakespeare's obsessive interest in problems related to "truth" and "seeming"

657 eyes over watching, spying eyes 680 connive at close their eyes to 682 clog hindrance (Perdita) court? Receives not thy nose court-odor from me? Reflect I not on thy baseness court-contempt? Think'st thou, for that I insinuate, or toaze^o from thee thy business, I am therefore no courtier? I am courtier cap-a-pé;^o and one that will either push on or pluck 740 back thy business there; whereupon I command thee to open thy affair.

SHEPHERD My business, sir, is to the king.

AUTOLYCUS What advocate hast thou to him?

SHEPHERD I know not, an't like you. 745

CLOWN Advocate's the court-word for a pheasant;^o say you have none.

SHEPHERD None, sir; I have no pheasant, cock nor hen.

AUTOLYCUS

How blessed are we that are not simple men! 750

Yet Nature might have made me as these are, Therefore I will not disdain.

CLOWN This cannot be but a great courtier.

SHEPHERD His garments are rich, but he wears them not handsomely. 755

CLOWN He seems to be the more noble in being fantastical. A great man, I'll warrant; I know by the picking on's teeth.^o

AUTOLYCUS The fardel there? What's i' th' fardel? Wherefore that box? 760

SHEPHERD Sir, there lies such secrets in this fardel and box, which none must know but the king, and which he shall know within his hour, if I may come to th' speech of him.

AUTOLYCUS Age, thou hast lost thy labor. 765

SHEPHERD Why, sir?

AUTOLYCUS The king is not at the palace; he is gone aboard a new ship, to purge melancholy and air himself; for if thou be'st capable of things serious, thou must know the king is full of grief. 770

SHEPHERD So 'tis said, sir—about his son, that should have married a shepherd's daughter.

AUTOLYCUS If that shepherd be not in handfast,^o let him fly; the curses he shall have, the tortures he shall feel, will break the back of man, the heart of monster. 775

CLOWN Think you so, sir?

AUTOLYCUS Not he alone shall suffer what wit can make heavy, and vengeance bitter; but those that are germane^o to him, though removed fifty times, shall all come under the hangman; which, though it be great 780 pity, yet it is necessary. An old sheep-whistling rogue, a ram-tender, to offer to have his daughter come into grace! Some say he shall be stoned; but that death is too soft for him, say I. Draw our throne into a sheep-cote! All deaths are too few, the sharpest too easy. 785

CLOWN Has the old man e'er a son, sir, do you hear, an't like you, sir?

AUTOLYCUS He has a son—who shall be flayed alive, then 'nointed over with honey, set on the head of a wasp's nest; then stand till he be three-quarters and a 790 dram dead; then recovered again with aqua vitae or some other hot infusion; then, raw as he is, and in the hottest day prognostication^o proclaims, shall he be set against a brick wall, the sun looking with a southward eye upon him, where he is to behold him with flies 795 blown to death. But what talk we of these traitorly rascals, whose miseries are to be smiled at, their offenses being so capital? Tell me, for you seem to be honest plain men, what you have to the king; being something gently considered,^o I'll bring you where he is 800 aboard, tender^o your persons to his presence, whisper him in your behalfs; and if it be in man besides the king to effect your suits, here is man shall do it.

CLOWN He seems to be of great authority. Close with him,^o give him gold; and though authority be a 805 stubborn bear, yet he is oft led by the nose with gold. Show the inside of your purse to the outside of his hand, and no more ado. Remember—stoned, and flayed alive.

SHEPHERD An't please you, sir, to undertake the 810 business for us, here is that gold I have; I'll make it as much more, and leave this young man in pawn till I bring it you.

AUTOLYCUS After I have done what I promised?

SHEPHERD Ay, sir. 815

AUTOLYCUS Well, give me the moiety.^o Are you a party in this business?

CLOWN In some sort, sir; but though my case be a pitiful one, I hope I shall not be flayed^o out of it.

AUTOLYCUS Oh, that's the case of the shepherd's son: 820 hang him, he'll be made an example.

CLOWN Comfort, good comfort! We must to the king, and show our strange sights; he must know 'tis none of your daughter, nor my sister; we are gone else. 825 Sir, I will give you as much as this old man does when the business is performed, and remain, as he says, your pawn till it be brought you.

AUTOLYCUS I will trust you. Walk before toward the seaside, go on the right hand; I will but look upon the hedge,^o and follow you. 830

CLOWN We are blessed, in this man, as I may say, even blessed.

SHEPHERD Let's before, as he bids us. He was provided to do us good. [Exeunt SHEPHERD and CLOWN.]

AUTOLYCUS If I had a mind to be honest, I see Fortune would not suffer me: she drops booties in my mouth. I am courted now with a double occasion—gold, and a means to do the prince, my master, good; which who knows how that may turn back^o to my advancement? I will bring these two moles, these 840 blind ones, aboard him. If he think it fit to shore them again, and that the complaint they have to the king concerns him nothing, let him call me rogue for being so far officious; for I am proof against that title, and what shame else belongs to't. To him will I present 845 them, there may be matter in it. Exit.

738 toaze tease, worry, comb out 740 cap-a-pé head-to-foot (of armor; here, thorough, complete) 746 Advocate's . . . pheasant the Clown, misunderstanding the word, thinks Autolycus is referring to the practice of bribing the judge with a bird 758 picking on's teeth regarded as an elegant practice 773 handfast custody 779 germane related

793 prognostication weather forecast in the almanac for the year 799–800 being . . . considered if you bribe me like a gentleman (handsomely) 801 tender present 804–05 Close with him accept his offer 816 moiety half 818–19 case . . . flayed punning on case = skin 829–30 look . . . hedge i.e., relieve himself 839 turn back redound

A C T V

Scene I. [Sicilia, the court of Leontes.]Enter LEONTES, CLEOMENES, DION, PAULINA, SERVANTS.

CLEOMENES

Sir, you have done enough, and have performed
A saintlike sorrow. No fault could you make
Which you have not redeemed; indeed paid down
More penitence than done trespass. At the last,
Do as the heavens have done: forget your evil;
With them forgive yourself.

LEONTES

Whilst I remember
Her and her virtues, I cannot forget
My blemishes in them, and so still think of
The wrong I did myself; which was so much,
That heirless it hath made my kingdom, and Destroyed the sweet'st companion that e'er man
Bred his hopes out of.

PAULINA

True, too true, my lord.
If one by one you wedded all the world,
Or from the all that are took something good
To make a perfect woman, she you killed
Would be unparalleled.

LEONTES

I think so. Killed?
She I killed! I did so; but thou strik'st me
Sorely, to say I did—it is as bitter
Upon thy tongue as in my thought. Now, good now, Say so but seldom.

CLEOMENES

Not at all, good lady:
You might have spoken a thousand things that would Have done the time more benefit, and graced^o
Your kindness better.

PAULINA

You are one of those
Would have him wed again.

DION

If you would not so,
You pity not the state, nor the remembrance^o
Of his most sovereign name; consider little
What dangers, by his highness' fail^o of issue,
May drop upon his kingdom, and devour
Uncertain lookers-on.^o What were more holy
Than to rejoice the former queen is well?
What holier than, for royalty's repair,
For present comfort, and for future good,
To bless the bed of majesty again
With a sweet fellow to't?

PAULINA

There is none worthy,
Respecting her that's gone; besides, the gods
Will have fulfilled their secret purposes;
For has not the divine Apollo said—
Is't not the tenor of his oracle—
That King Leontes shall not have an heir
Till his lost child be found? Which that it shall,
Is all as monstrous to our human reason
As my Antigonus to break his grave,
And come again to me; who, on my life,
Did perish with the infant. 'Tis your counsel

My lord should to the heavens be contrary, Oppose against their wills. [To LEONTES.] Care not for issue,

The crown will find an heir. Great Alexander
Left his to th' worthiest: so his successor
Was like to be the best.

LEONTES

Good Paulina,

Who hast the memory of Hermione,
I know, in honor: O, that ever I
Had squared me to^o thy counsel! Then, even now,
I might have looked upon my queen's full eyes,
Have taken treasure from her lips—

PAULINA

And left them

More rich for what they yielded.

LEONTES

Thou speak'st truth; 55

No more such wives, therefore no wife. One worse,
And better used, would make her sainted spirit
Again possess her corpse, and on this stage,
Where we offenders now appear,^o soul-vexed,
And begin, "Why to me?"^o

PAULINA

Had she such power, 60

She had just cause.

LEONTES

She had, and would incense me

To murder her I married.

PAULINA

I should so.

Were I the ghost that walked. I'd bid you mark
Her eye, and tell me for what dull part in't
You chose her; then I'd shriek, that even your ears
Should rift to hear me, and the words that followed
Should be, "Remember mine."

LEONTES

Stars, stars,

And all eyes else, dead coals! Fear thou no wife;
I'll have no wife, Paulina.

PAULINA

Will you swear

Never to marry, but by my free leave?

LEONTES

Never, Paulina, so be blessed my spirit.

PAULINA

Then, good my lords, bear witness to his oath.

CLEOMENES

You tempt him overmuch.

PAULINA

Unless another,

As like Hermione as is her picture,
Affront^o his eye.

CLEOMENES

Good madam—

PAULINA

I have done; 75

Yet if my lord will marry, if you will, sir—
No remedy but you will—give me the office
To choose you a queen; she shall not be so young
As was your former, but she shall be such
As, walked your first queen's ghost, it should take joy
To see her in your arms.

LEONTES

My true Paulina,

We shall not marry till thou bidd'st us.

PAULINA

That

52 squared me to regulated myself by 59 Where . . .
appear many attempts to emend this passage have given no better sense than the Folio: the verb "appear" is needed both for the offenders and for the ghost of Hermione; the obscurity arises from its doing duty for both; compare the famous difficulty in Hamlet IV.iv.53: "Rightly to be great/Is not to stir without great argument . . .," where "not" stands for "not not" 60 Why to me why do you offer such treatment to me?
75 Affront confront

V.i.22 graced suited 25 remembrance he means the perpetuation of the king's name in a son 27 fail failure 29 Incertain lookers-on bystanders whose uncertainty makes them incapable of action

Shall be when your first queen's again in breath;
Never till then.

Enter a SERVANT.

SERVANT

One that gives out himself Prince Florizel, 85
Son of Polixenes, with his princess—she
The fairest I have yet beheld—desires access
To your high presence.

LEONTES

What with him? He comes not
Like to his father's greatness; his approach,
So out of circumstance,^o and sudden, tells us 90
'Tis not a visitation framed,^o but forced
By need and accident. What train?^o

SERVANT

But few,
And those but mean.

LEONTES

His princess, say you, with him?

SERVANT

Ay, the most peerless piece of earth, I think,
That e'er the sun shone bright on.

PAULINA

O Hermione, 95
As every present time doth boast itself
Above a better, gone, so must thy grave
Give way to what's seen now. Sir, you yourself
Have said, and writ so; but your writing now
Is colder than that theme:^o "She had not been, 100
Nor was not to be equaled"; thus your verse^o
Flowed with her beauty once; 'tis shrewdly ebb'd,
To say you have seen a better.

SERVANT

Pardon, madam:
The one I have almost forgot—your pardon—
The other, when she has obtained your eye, 105
Will have your tongue too. This is a creature,
Would she begin a sect, might quench the zeal
Of all professors^o else; make proselytes
Of who she but bid follow.

PAULINA

How! Not women?

SERVANT

Women will love her that she is a woman 110
More worth than any man; men, that she is
The rarest of all women.

LEONTES

Go, Cleomenes,
Yourself, assisted with your honored friends,
Bring them to our embracement. Exit [CLEOMENES, with others]. Still, 'tis strange,
He should thus steal upon us.

PAULINA

Had our prince, 115
Jewel of children, seen this hour, he had paired
Well with this lord; there was not full a month
Between their births.

LEONTES

Prithee no more; cease; thou know'st 120
He dies to me again, when talked of. Sure
When I shall see this gentleman, thy speeches
Will bring me to consider that which may Unfurnish me of reason. They are come.

Enter FLORIZEL, PERDITA, CLEOMENES, and others.

90 out of circumstance lacking ceremony 91 framed planned 92 train attendants 100 theme Hermione herself 101 verse he had presumably written verses of compliment to Hermione 108 professors those who profess zeal for religion (especially Puritans)

Your mother was most true to wedlock, prince,
For she did print your royal father off, 125
Conceiving you. Were I but twenty-one,
Your father's image is so hit in you,
His very air, that I should call you brother,
As I did him, and speak of something wildly
By us performed before. Most dearly welcome! 130
And your fair princess—goddess! Oh, alas!
I lost a couple that 'twixt heaven and earth
Might thus have stood begetting wonder as You, gracious couple, do. And then I lost—
All mine own folly—the society, 135
Amity too, of your brave father, whom,
Though bearing misery, I desire my life
Once more to look on him.^o

FLORIZEL

By his command

Have I here touched Sicilia, and from him
Give you all greetings that a king, at friend,^o 140
Can send his brother; and but infirmity,
Which waits upon worn times,^o hath something seized^o

His wished ability, he had himself
The lands and waters 'twixt your throne and his Measured to look upon you; whom he loves 145
(He bade me say so) more than all the scepters
And those that bear them living.

LEONTES

Oh, my brother—

Good gentleman!—the wrongs I have done thee stir
Afresh within me; and these thy offices,^o
So rarely kind, are as interpreters 150
Of my behindhand slackness.^o Welcome hither,
As is the spring to th' earth! And hath he too
Exposed this paragon to th' fearful usage,
At least ungentle, of the dreadful Neptune,
To greet a man not worth her pains, much less 155
Th' adventure^o of her person?

FLORIZEL

Good my lord,

She came from Libya.

110

LEONTES

Where the warlike Smalus,

That noble honored lord, is feared and loved?

FLORIZEL

Most royal sir, from thence; from him, whose daughter
His tears proclaimed his, parting with her; thence, 160
A prosperous south wind friendly, we have crossed,
To execute the charge my father gave me,
For visiting your highness. My best train
I have from your Sicilian shores dismissed;
Who, for Bohemia bend, to signify 165
Not only my success in Libya, sir,
But my arrival and my wife's in safety
Here where we are.

LEONTES

The blessed gods

Purge all infection from our air whilst you
Do climate^o here! You have a holy father, 170
A graceful^o gentleman, against whose person,
So sacred as it is, I have done sin;

136–38 whom . . . him I wish to go on living, however miserably, in order to look on him again (the final "him" is dispensable, but the construction is not unique in Shakespeare) 140 at friend being in friendship with 142 worn times advanced years; seized arrested 149 offices kindnesses, compliments 150–51 interpreters . . . slackness put into words feelings I have been too slow in expressing 156 adventure risk 170 climate reside 171 graceful virtuous

For which, the heavens, taking angry note,
Have left me issueless; and your father's blessed,
As he from heaven merits it, with you,
Worthy his goodness. What might I have been,
Might I a son and daughter now have looked on,
Such goodly things as you!

Enter a LORD.

LORD Most noble sir,
That which I shall report will bear no credit,
Were not the proof so nigh. Please you, great sir,
Bohemia greets you from himself, by me;
Desires you to attach^o his son, who has—
His dignity and duty both cast off—
Fled from his father, from his hopes, and with
A shepherd's daughter.

LEONTES Where's Bohemia? Speak.

LORD Here in your city; I now came from him.
I speak amazedly, and it becomes
My marvel^o and my message. To your court
Whiles he was hast'ning—in the chase, it seems,
Of this fair couple—meets he on the way
The father of this seeming lady, and
Her brother, having both their country quitted,
With this young prince.

FLORIZEL Camillo has betrayed me;
Whose honor and whose honesty till now
Endured all weathers.

LORD Lay't so to his charge;
He's with the king your father.

LEONTES Who? Camillo?

LORD Camillo, sir; I spake with him; who now
Has these poor men in question.^o Never saw I
Wretches so quake; they kneel, they kiss the earth;
Forswear^o themselves as often as they speak.
Bohemia stops his ears, and threatens them
With divers deaths in death.^o

PERDITA Oh my poor father!
The heaven sets spies upon us, will not have
Our contract celebrated.

LEONTES You are married?

FLORIZEL We are not, sir, nor are we like to be;
The stars, I see, will kiss the valleys first;
The odds for high and low's alike.^o

LEONTES My lord,
Is this the daughter of a king?

FLORIZEL She is,
When once she is my wife.

LEONTES That once, I see by your good father's speed,
Will come on very slowly. I am sorry,
Most sorry, you have broken from his liking,
Where you were tied in duty; and as sorry
Your choice is not so rich in worth^o as beauty,

That you might well enjoy her.

FLORIZEL Dear, look up. 215

175 Though Fortune, visible an enemy,
Should chase^o us, with my father, power no jot
Hath she to change our loves. Beseech you, sir,
Remember since you owed no more to Time
Than I do now; with thought of such affections, 220
Step forth mine advocate; at your request
My father will grant precious things as trifles.

LEONTES Would he do so, I'd beg your precious mistress,
Which he counts but a trifle.
PAULINA Sir, my liege,
Your eye hath too much youth in't; not a month 225
'Fore your queen died, she was more worth such gazes
Than what you look on now.

185 LEONTES I thought of her,
Even in these looks I made. But your petition
Is yet unanswered. I will to your father.
Your honor not o'erthrown by your desires,^o 230
I am friend to them and you: upon which errand
I now go toward him. Therefore follow me, 190 And mark what way I make.^o Come, good my lord.
Exeunt.

Scene II. [Sicilia, before the palace of Leontes.]

Enter AUTOLYCUS and a GENTLEMAN.

195 AUTOLYCUS Beseech you, sir, were you present at this relation?

FIRST GENTLEMAN I was by at the opening of the fardel, heard the old shepherd deliver the manner how he found it; whereupon, after a little amazedness, we 5 were all commanded out of the chamber; only this, methought I heard the shepherd say, he found the 200 child.

AUTOLYCUS I would most gladly know the issue of it.

FIRST GENTLEMAN I make a broken delivery of the 10 business, but the changes I perceived in the king and Camillo were very notes of admiration.^o They seemed almost, with staring on one another, to tear the cases of their eyes.^o There was speech in their dumbness, language in their very gesture; they looked 15 as they had heard of a world ransomed, or one destroyed. A notable passion of wonder appeared in them; but the wisest beholder that knew no more but seeing^o could not say if th' importance^o were joy, or sorrow—but in the extremity of the one it must 20 needs be.

Enter another GENTLEMAN.

210 Here comes a gentleman that happily^o knows more:
the news, Rogero?

SECOND GENTLEMAN Nothing but bonfires. The oracle is fulfilled; the king's daughter is found; such a 25

182 attach arrest 187–88 becomes My marvel suits my bewilderment 198 in question in talk, in conference 200 Forswear deny on oath 202 divers . . . death various tortures 207 odds . . . alike dicing terms; "Fortune is a cheater who beguiles princes and shepherds alike with his false dice" (Wilson) 214 worth rank

217 chase persecute 230 Your . . . desires a certain insistence on this point of prenuptial chastity is observable both in this play and in The Tempest 233 what . . . make how far I succeed

V.ii.12 notes of admiration exclamation points 14 cases
. . . eyes eyelids 18–19 but seeing but what he saw 19 importance significance 22 happily haply, perhaps deal of wonder is broken out within this hour that balladmakers cannot be able to express it.

Enter another GENTLEMAN.

Here comes the Lady Paulina's steward; he can deliver you more. How goes it now, sir? This news, which is called true, is so like an old tale that the verity of it is in strong suspicion. Has the king found his heir?

THIRD GENTLEMAN Most true, if ever truth were pregnant by circumstance;° that which you hear you'll swear you see, there is such unity in the proofs. The mantle of Queen Hermione; her jewel about the neck of it; the letters of Antigonus found with it, which they know to be his character;° the majesty of the creature, in resemblance of the mother; the affection° of nobleness, which nature shows above her breeding and many other evidences—proclaim her, with all certainty, to be the king's daughter. Did you see the meeting of the two kings?

SECOND GENTLEMAN No.

THIRD GENTLEMAN Then have you lost a sight which was to be seen, cannot be spoken of. There might you have beheld one joy crown another, so and in such manner that it seemed Sorrow wept to take leave of them; for their joy waded in tears. There was casting up of eyes, holding up of hands, with countenance° of such distraction that they were to be known by garment, not by favor.° Our king, being ready to leap out of himself for joy of his found daughter, as if that joy were now become a loss, cries, "Oh, thy mother, thy mother"; then asks Bohemia forgiveness, then embraces his son-in-law; then again worries he his daughter with clipping° her. Now he thanks the old shepherd, which stands by, like a weather-bitten conduit° of many kings' reigns. I never heard of such another encounter, which lames report to follow it, and undoes description to do it.°

SECOND GENTLEMAN What, pray you, became of Antigonus, that carried hence the child?

THIRD GENTLEMAN Like an old tale still, which will have matter to rehearse, though credit° be asleep, and not an ear open: he was torn to pieces with° a bear. This avouches the shepherd's son, who has not only his innocence° (which seems much) to justify him, but a handkerchief and rings of his that Paulina knows.

FIRST GENTLEMAN What became of his bark and his followers?

THIRD GENTLEMAN Wracked the same instant of their master's death, and in the view of the shepherd: so that all the instruments which aided to expose the child were even then lost when it was found. But oh, the noble combat, that'twixt joy and sorrow was fought in Paulina! She had one eye declined for the loss of her husband, another elevated that the oracle was fulfilled. She lifted the princess from the earth, and so locks her in embracing as if she would pin her to her heart, that she might no more be in danger of losing.°

FIRST GENTLEMAN The dignity of this act was worth the audience of kings and princes, for by such was it acted.

THIRD GENTLEMAN One of the prettiest touches of all, and that which angled for mine eyes—caught the water though not the fish—was, when at the relation of the queen's death, with the manner how she came to't bravely confessed and lamented by the king, how attentiveness wounded his daughter; till, from one sign of dolor to another, she did, with an "Alas"—I would fain say—bleed tears; for I am sure my heart wept blood. Who was most marble there changed color; some swooned, all sorrowed. If all the world could have seen't, the woe had been universal.

FIRST GENTLEMAN Are they returned to the court?

THIRD GENTLEMAN No, the princess, hearing of her mother's statue, which is in the keeping of Paulina—a piece many years in doing and now newly performed° by that rare Italian master, Julio Romano,° who, had he himself eternity and could put breath into his work, would beguile Nature of her custom, so perfectly he is her ape:° he so near to Hermione hath done Hermione, that they say one would speak to her and stand in hope of answer. Thither with all greediness of affection are they gone, and there they intend to sup.

SECOND GENTLEMAN I thought she had some great matter there in hand, for she hath privately, twice or thrice a day, ever since the death of Hermione, visited that removed house. Shall we thither, and with our company piece° the rejoicing?

FIRST GENTLEMAN Who would be thence that has the benefit of access? Every wink of an eye some new grace will be born. Our absence makes us unthrifty to our knowledge.° Let's along.

Exit, [with the other GENTLEMEN].

AUTOLYCUS Now, had I not the dash of my former life in me, would preferment drop on my head. I brought the old man and his son aboard the prince; told him I heard them talk of a fardel and I know not what; but he at that time overfond of the shepherd's daughter (so he then took her to be), who began to be much seasick, and himself little better, extremity of weather continuing, this mystery remained undiscovered. But 'tis all one to me; for had I been the finder-out of this secret, it would not have relished° among my other discredits.

Enter SHEPHERD and CLOWN.

Here come those I have done good to against my will, and already appearing in the blossoms of their fortune.

32–33 truth . . . circumstance made evident by, filled out by circumstances 37 character handwriting 38 affection natural disposition 49 countenance probably meant as a plural; a common orthographical feature in Shakespearean texts 51 favor features 56 clipping embracing 57–58 weather-bitten conduit weatherworn fountain (the old man's tears make him resemble a fountain in human shape) 60 do it describe it 64 credit belief 65 with by 67 innocence simplicity

80 losing being lost 98 performed completed 99 Julio Romano Italian painter (1492–1546); this allusion has caused much debate, because of the anachronism, and because Julio is remembered not as a sculptor but as a painter, though he probably practiced sculpture as well 99–102 had . . . ape had he this other attribute of God and could put breath into his statues, he would cheat Nature of her trade, so closely can he imitate her (the sentiment is a little confused) 110 piece i.e., add to 113–14 unthrifty . . . knowledge careless in the accumulation of knowledge 124 relished proved tasteful, acceptable

SHEPHERD Come, boy, I am past moe children; but thy sons and daughters will be all gentlemen born.

CLOWN You are well met, sir. You denied to fight 130 with me this other day, because I was no gentleman born. See you these clothes? Say you see them not and think me still no gentleman born; you were best say these robes are not gentlemen born. Give me the lie, do; and try whether I am not now a gentleman 135 born.

AUTOLYCUS I know you are now, sir, a gentleman born.

CLOWN Ay, and have been so any time these four 140 hours.

SHEPHERD And so have I, boy.

CLOWN So you have; but I was a gentleman born before my father; for the king's son took me by the hand and called me brother; and then the two kings called my father brother; and then the prince, (my 145 brother) and the princess (my sister) called my father father; and so we wept; and there was the first gentlemanlike tears that ever we shed.

SHEPHERD We may live, son, to shed many more.

CLOWN Ay; or else 'twere hard luck, being in so 150 preposterous^o estate as we are.

AUTOLYCUS I humbly beseech you, sir, to pardon me all the faults I have committed to your worship, and to give me your good report to the prince, my 155 master.

SHEPHERD Prithee, son, do: for we must be gentle, now we are gentlemen.

CLOWN Thou wilt amend thy life?

AUTOLYCUS Ay, an it like^o your good worship.

CLOWN Give me thy hand. I will swear to the prince 160 thou art as honest a true^o fellow as any is in Bohemia.

SHEPHERD You may say it, but not swear it.

CLOWN Not swear it, now I am a gentleman? Let boors and franklins^o say it, I'll swear it.

SHEPHERD How if it be false, son? 165

CLOWN If it be ne'er so false, a true gentleman may swear it in the behalf of his friend; and I'll swear to the prince thou art a tall fellow of thy hands,^o and that thou wilt not be drunk; but I know thou art no tall fellow of thy hands, and that thou wilt be drunk; but 170 I'll swear it, and I would thou wouldst be a tall fellow of thy hands.

AUTOLYCUS I will prove so, sir, to my power.^o

CLOWN Ay, by any means prove a tall fellow. If I do not wonder how thou dar'st venture to be drunk, not 175 being a tall fellow, trust me not. Hark, the kings and the princes, our kindred, are going to see the queen's picture. Come, follow us; we'll be thy good masters.

Exeunt.

Scene III. [Sicilia, a chapel in Paulina's house.]

Enter LEONTES, POLIXENES, FLORIZEL, PERDITA, CAMILLO, PAULINA, LORDS, &c.

LEONTES

O grave and good Paulina, the great comfort That I have had of thee!

151 preposterous malapropism for prosperous 159 an it like if it please 161 true honest (as opposed to thieving) 164 boors and franklins peasants and yeomen 168 tall . . . hands man of courage 173 to my power as far as I am able

PAULINA What, sovereign sir, I did not well, I meant well. All my services You have paid home.^o But that you have vouchsafed, With your crowned brother and these your con- 5 tracted^o

Heirs of your kingdoms, my poor house to visit, It is a surplus of your grace, which never My life may last to answer.

LEONTES O Paulina, We honor you with trouble; but we came To see the statue of our queen. Your gallery 10 Have we passed through, not without much content In many singularities;^o but we saw not That which my daughter came to look upon, The statue of her mother.

PAULINA As she lived peerless, So her dead likeness I do well believe 15 Excels whatever yet you looked upon, Or hand of man hath done; therefore I keep it Lonely, apart. But here it is; prepare To see the life as lively mocked, as ever Still sleep mocked death: behold, and say 'tis well. 20

[PAULINA draws a curtain and discovers] HERMIONE [standing] like a statue.

I like your silence; it the more shows off Your wonder; but yet speak, first you, my liege. Comes it not something near?

LEONTES Her natural posture! Chide me, dear stone, that I may say indeed Thou art Hermione; or rather, thou art she 25 In thy not chiding; for she was as tender As infancy and grace. But yet, Paulina, Hermione was not so much wrinkled, nothing So aged as this seems.

POLIXENES Oh, not by much.

PAULINA So much the more our carver's excellence, 30 Which lets go by some sixteen years, and makes her As she lived^o now.

LEONTES As now she might have done, So much to my good comfort, as it is Now piercing to my soul. Oh, thus she stood, Even with such life of majesty—warm life, 35 As now it coldly stands—when first I wooed her. I am ashamed: does not the stone rebuke me, For being more stone than it? O royal piece! There's magic in thy majesty, which has My evils conjured to remembrance,^o and 40 From thy admiring daughter took the spirits, Standing like stone with thee.

PERDITA And give me leave, And do not say 'tis superstition that I kneel, and then implore her blessing. Lady, Dear queen, that ended when I but began, 45 Give me that hand of yours to kiss.

V.iii.4 paid home paid in full 5 your contracted this "your" should possibly be omitted; the compositor could have caught it from "your crowned" or from the next line 12 singularities varieties 32 As she lived as if she lived 39–40 magic . . . conjured . . . remembrance the sight of the statue has called up his sins into his mind as a magician summons demons

PAULINA O, patience!
The statue is but newly fixed, the color's
Not dry.

CAMILLO
My lord, your sorrow was too sore laid on,
Which sixteen winters cannot blow away, 50
So many summers dry. Scarce any joy
Did ever so long live; no sorrow
But killed itself much sooner.

POLIXENES Dear my brother,
Let him that was the cause of this have power
To take off so much grief from you as he 55
Will piece up° in himself.

PAULINA Indeed, my lord,
If I had thought the sight of my poor image
Would thus have wrought you—for the stone is mine—
I'd not have showed it.

LEONTES Do not draw the curtain.

PAULINA
No longer shall you gaze on't, lest your fancy 60
May think anon it moves.

LEONTES Let be, let be!
Would I were dead, but that methinks already°—
What was he that did make it? See, my lord, Would you not deem it breathed? And that those veins
Did verily bear blood?

POLIXENES Masterly done! 65
The very life seems warm upon her lip.

LEONTES
The fixure° of her eye has motion in't,
As we are mocked with art.

PAULINA I'll draw the curtain;
My lord's almost so far transported that He'll think anon it lives.

LEONTES O sweet Paulina, 70
Make me to think so twenty years together!
No settled° senses of the world can match
The pleasure of that madness. Let't alone.

PAULINA
I am sorry, sir, I have thus far stirred you; but I could afflict you farther.

LEONTES Do, Paulina; 75
For this affliction has a taste as sweet
As any cordial° comfort. Still, methinks,
There is an air comes from her. What fine chisel
Could ever yet cut breath? Let no man mock me,
For I will kiss her.

PAULINA Good my lord, forbear! 80
The ruddiness upon her lip is wet;
You'll mar it if you kiss it; stain your own
With oily painting. Shall I draw the curtain?

LEONTES
No, not these twenty years.

PERDITA So long could I Stand by, a looker-on.

PAULINA Either forbear, 85
Quit presently the chapel, or resolve you

For more amazement. If you can behold it,
I'll make the statue move indeed, descend,
And take you by the hand—but then you'll think,
Which I protest against, I am assisted 90
By wicked powers.

LEONTES What you can make her do,
I am content to look on; what to speak,
I am content to hear; for 'tis as easy
To make her speak, as move.

PAULINA It is required
You do awake your faith; then, all stand still. 95
Or those that think it is unlawful business
I am about, let them depart.

LEONTES Proceed.
No foot shall stir.

PAULINA Music, awake her: strike.
'Tis time; descend; be stone no more; approach;
Strike all that look upon with marvel; come; 100
I'll fill your grave up. Stir; nay, come away;
Bequeath to death your numbness, for from him
Dear life redeems you. You perceive she stirs.

[HERMIONE comes down.]

Start not; her actions shall be holy as
You hear my spell is lawful. Do not shun her 105
Until you see her die again, for then
You kill her double. Nay, present your hand.
When she was young, you wooed her; now, in age,
Is she become the suitor?

LEONTES Oh, she's warm! 110
If this be magic, let it be an art
Lawful as eating.

POLIXENES She embraces him.

CAMILLO
She hangs about his neck;
If she pertain to life, let her speak too.

POLIXENES 70
Ay, and make it manifest where she has lived,
Or how stol'n from the dead.

PAULINA That she is living, 115
Were it but told you, should be hooted at
Like an old tale; but it appears she lives,
Though yet she speak not. Mark a little while:
Please you to interpose, fair madam; kneel,
And pray your mother's blessing; turn, good lady, 120
Our Perdita is found.

HERMIONE You gods look down,
And from your sacred vials pour your graces
Upon my daughter's head! Tell me, mine own, Where hast thou been preserved? Where lived? How found
Thy father's court? For thou shalt hear that I, 125
Knowing by Paulina that the oracle
Gave hope thou wast in being,° have preserved
Myself to see the issue.

PAULINA There's time enough for that,
Lest they desire upon this push° to trouble
Your joys with like relation. Go together, 130
You precious winners all; your exultation
Partake° to every one. I, an old turtle,

56 piece up make his own 62 Would . . . already may I die if I do not think it moves already (Staunton) 67 fixure early form of fixture 72 settled sane 77 cordial heartwarming

127 in being alive 129 upon this push at this exciting moment 132 Partake communicate, share

Will wing me to some withered bough, and there
My mate, that's never to be found again,
Lament till I am lost.

LEONTES O peace, Paulina! 135
Thou shouldst a husband take by my consent,
As I by thine a wife. This is a match,
And made between's by vows. Thou hast found mine,
But how, is to be questioned; for I saw her,
As I thought, dead; and have in vain said many 140
A prayer upon her grave. I'll not seek farre,^o
For him, I partly know his mind, to find thee
An honorable husband. Come, Camillo,
And take her by the hand, whose^o worth and honesty

141 farre farther 144 whose Camillo's

Is richly noted, and here justified 145
By us, a pair of kings. Let's from this place.
What! Look upon my brother.^o Both your pardons,
That e'er I put between your holy looks
My ill suspicion. This your son-in-law,
And son unto the king, whom, heavens directing, 150
Is troth-plight to your daughter. Good Paulina, Lead us from hence, where we may leisurely
Each one demand and answer to his part
Performed in this wide gap of time since first
We were dissevered. Hastily lead away. Exeunt. 155

147 Look . . . brother Hermione has presumably shown some natural embarrassment about greeting Polixenes

THE TEMPEST

EDITED BY ROBERT LANGBAUM

Introduction

The Tempest is probably the last play wholly written by Shakespeare. Generations of readers have for this reason been tempted to see it as a culmination of Shakespeare's vision, to identify Prospero with Shakespeare, and to read the famous speech in which Prospero breaks his magic wand as Shakespeare's farewell to his art. Although critics nowadays hesitate to identify Prospero with Shakespeare, those of us who love The Tempest cannot help feeling that it represents a culmination—that Shakespeare could not have written it without the wisdom and technique he had accumulated through writing all his other plays.

We get this impression because the characterizations, for example, are so simple—Prospero is wise, Miranda is pure, Caliban is base, Antonio is wicked. Yet these are not the simple characters of a playwright who cannot do any better. They are the simple characters of the playwright who has already created Hamlet and Macbeth and Lear. And we feel this; we feel we are in touch, through the characters of The Tempest, with very real and very powerful forces. Caliban, who speaks one of the most beautiful passages of poetry in the play, is enigmatic enough. But where will you come to an end of understanding Ariel? Ariel's complexity certainly does not lie in his characterization. It lies, you may say, in the poetry he speaks. But that is to beg the question.

It is the deliberate return to naiveté, after the tragic complexity, that makes us feel there is something special about the four plays of Shakespeare's final period. The special effect is most apparent in The Tempest, because it is the lightest in surface of the four. It is presented to us as a gorgeous bubble, which is blown up for our entertainment like the masque Prospero conjures for Ferdinand and Miranda, and which is just as easily dispelled in the end. Yet The Tempest contains the subject matter of tragedy, and it gives us throughout the sense of omniscience, of surveying all life, that we get only at the highest points of illumination in the tragedies. No wonder then that The Tempest seems the appropriate statement of age, of the man who, having seen it all, can teach us that the profoundest statement is the lightest and that life, when we see through it, is gay, is tragically gay—that the evil, the violence, the tragedy are all part of a providential design.

The Tempest was probably written during the fall and winter of 1610–11. It was produced at court in the fall of 1611, and again during the winter of 1612–13 as part of the festivities that preceded the marriage of the king's daughter Elizabeth to the Elector Palatine. The First Folio probably gives us the play as it was acted at court during the winter. But there is insufficient evidence to support the contention of some scholars that the play was radically revised for the wedding festivities and that the wedding masque in Act IV was inserted in honor of the betrothed couple. Some scholars have even, in their disappointment with the verse of the wedding masque, supposed that the masque was not written by Shakespeare. But Shakespeare always uses a deliberately stilted style for a play within a play; and the masque depends for its effectiveness on spectacle rather than language. Unless new external evidence turns up, there is no reason to look outside the play itself for an explanation of the wedding masque, since the masque fits in subject matter and form into the very texture of The Tempest.

The masque brings to a climax the theme of nature versus art that is central to The Tempest. For Heaven and Earth, Juno and Ceres, unite in the masque to pronounce a blessing on the union of Ferdinand and Miranda, and to connect sexual union with nature's fruitfulness as seen in its ideal aspect. Venus and her son Cupid are, however, as representatives of lawless passion, specifically excluded from the natural force celebrated in the masque. This fits in with Prospero's severe warning to Ferdinand not to "break" Miranda's "virgin knot" before marriage. Nature is celebrated in the masque as a principle of order. And it is shown to be, as a principle of order, inextricably intertwined with art, civilization, idea.

There is good reason to believe that Shakespeare had in mind, when he wrote The Tempest, the reports that first reached England in September 1610 of the miraculous deliverance of the crew and passengers of a ship that had been lost the year before in a terrible tempest off the Bermudas—those stormy islands that Shakespeare refers to in The Tempest as "the still-vexed Bermoothes." The written accounts of the survivors emphasize the providential quality of their deliverance, for the castaways were saved by the magically beneficent nature of the island on which they found themselves. These so-called Bermuda pamphlets (named in A Note on the Source) go on to see the very storm and shipwreck as providential, since they enabled the castaways to discover for the benefit of mankind that the islands that mariners had shunned as inhabited by devils were actually an island paradise.

In exclaiming over the ways of providence, the Bermuda pamphlets offer those paradoxes that are at the heart of the tragicomic vision—the sort of paradoxes Shakespeare uses in The Tempest. “Though the seas threaten, they are merciful,” says Ferdinand in the end. And Gonzalo sums up the meaning of the play through a series of paradoxes. “Was Milan thrust from Milan, that his issue/Should become kings of Naples?” he asks.

In one voyage
Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis,
And Ferdinand her brother found a wife
Where he himself was lost; Prospero his dukedom
In a poor isle; and all of us ourselves
When no man was his own. (V.i.208–13)

This is the essential message of tragicomedy—that we lose in order to recover something greater, that we die in order to be reborn to a better life. One of the Bermuda pamphlets, The True Declaration of the Estate of the Colonie in Virginia, speaks paradoxically of “those infortunate (yet fortunate) islands,” and even calls the shipwreck and deliverance “this tragical comedy.”

The Bermuda episode must have raised again for Shakespeare the perennial question that became particularly pertinent after the discovery of the New World—the question whether nature is not superior to art, and whether man is not nobler in a state of nature than in a state of civilization. It is not surprising that Shakespeare had also in mind, when he wrote The Tempest, the essay “Of the Caniballes,” in which Montaigne praises the American Indians in terms that helped establish the ideal of the Noble Savage. Gonzalo’s description of his ideal commonwealth is a close paraphrase of Montaigne’s essay.

The island of The Tempest is in the Mediterranean, somewhere between Tunis and Naples; yet it seems more magically remote and unlocated than if it had been given a specific location, even one so far as the Bermudas. By setting his island in the Mediterranean, Shakespeare is able to bring the European tradition to bear on the question of nature versus art. He can assimilate the latest ideas about the New World to traditional ideas of the Golden Age and the Garden of Eden. He can remind us of Aeneas, who lost Troy that he might found Rome. Aeneas was driven by a storm to Carthage (specifically associated here with Tunis), from whence he sailed to Italy. In fulfilling his destiny, he underwent wanderings and ordeals analogous to those of the court party in The Tempest, including a banquet involving harpies. It is worth mentioning, in connection with the enigmatic references to “widow Dido” and “widower Aeneas,” that two of the Bermuda pamphlets compare Dido and Aeneas, as colonizers of new territories, to the colonists of the New World. (Dido was the Phoenician princess who founded Carthage.)

Shakespeare addresses himself to the question of nature versus art by ringing all possible changes on the meaning of “nature.” Caliban is natural in that he is earthy and earthbound, low, material. But Ariel is just as natural in that he represents the fluid elements of water and air and also those bodiless energies of nature that strike us as “spiritual.” Caliban, whose name may derive from “cannibal,” is the natural man seen in one aspect. But Miranda is also natural, and the two are contrasted throughout. Both were brought up in a state of nature; and if Miranda never saw a man other than her father, Caliban never saw a woman other than his mother. Caliban is natural in the sense that nature is rudimentary and mindless; he cannot be educated. Miranda is natural in the sense that we take the Golden Age or the Garden of Eden to be our natural condition. She has been superbly educated by Prospero, but education has with her been absorbed in the natural; knowledge has not lost her the Garden.

The case of Caliban is complex, because we cannot be certain that he is human. He was begotten by a devil on the witch Sycorax, and he is spoken of either as something between an animal and a man, or as something between a sea and a land animal. All the ironic changes on the meaning of “nature” can be heard in Trinculo’s remark about Caliban: “That a monster should be such a natural!”—in which “natural” means “idiot.” If we take nature to be a principle of order, then the primitive Caliban is a monster, a piece of disorder or deformity.

Trinculo’s remark contrasts with Miranda’s, when she thinks Ferdinand must be a god, “for nothing natural/I ever saw so noble.” Ferdinand, too, and in the end Alonso think for the same reason that Miranda must be a goddess. Shakespeare would seem to be telling us that your view of the natural depends on your view of the supernatural—on whether you see behind natural phenomena the evil machinations of the witch Sycorax and her devil-god Setebos, or whether you see at work a rational and benevolent Providence. He seems to be telling us that every creature can be judged by its potential metamorphoses, be what it is capable of becoming. Miranda sees all the human beings in the play as godlike. But Caliban, who constantly shifts before our eyes between human and animal, fears that he and his drunken co-conspirators will turn into apes or into barnacles, geese believed to be the product of metamorphosis from shellfish.

There is no question as to which view of nature Shakespeare adheres to. He presents here, as in the history plays and the tragedies, a grand vision of order in nature and society; only the emphasis here, far more than in his other plays, is on nature. The fact that Caliban takes the drunken butler, Stephano, for a god is a sign of how high man ranks on the scale of life. It is because we recognize the differences of degree within the human scale that we laugh at Caliban’s illusion, but give our poetic faith to the illusion of Ferdinand and Miranda when they take each other for divine. Caliban’s crime in conspiring against Prospero is a sin against degree—like the plot of Antonio and Sebastian against Alonso, and Antonio’s usurpation of Prospero’s throne. Prospero erred in attempting to educate Caliban, just as he erred in allowing Antonio to play the duke in Milan. In both cases, he blurred distinctions of degree and helped create the disorder that followed.

Caliban is evil only when judged by human standards, or when he himself aspires to get above his place. In attempting to be "free," he only exchanges masters; for a slave he is and should be, as he himself recognizes in the end. Ariel, on the other hand, is by nature a free spirit (he seems free enough even in the bondage of which he complains), and he is therefore appropriately freed in the end. There is a connection in Shakespeare's world view between biological and social rank and moral obligation. Thus, Antonio's crime against his brother and sovereign is also spoken of as "unnatural." But Antonio is much worse than Caliban, because much higher up on the scale. For the same reason, Stephano and Trinculo seem even baser than Caliban and even more ridiculous in their aspiration to get above themselves.

With the exception of Antonio, all the characters in the play are saved in the end according to their degree. They undergo a ritual temptation and punishment. Caliban, Stephano, and Trinculo are befouled in a horsepond for their temptation to murder Prospero; and when Stephano and Trinculo are tempted to steal the clothes left out for them as bait, all three conspirators are chased away by spirits in the shape of dogs. These punishments are appropriate to the level of their moral life.

The court party are ritualistically tempted and punished by the banquet that disappears when they start to eat of it. Antonio and Sebastian have also been tempted to murder Alonso; and Alonso has been ritualistically punished by the supposed loss of his son and by his brother's temptation to do to him what he helped Antonio do to Prospero. When Ariel, who is invisible to everyone except Prospero, accuses Alonso, Antonio, and Sebastian of being "three men of sin," his voice comes to them as an inner voice. Alonso's subsequent attack of conscience comes as a total illumination. He now understands the union of the natural and moral order:

Methought the billows spoke and told me of it;
The winds did sing it to me; and the thunder,

did bass my trespass.

Therefore my son i' th' ooze is bedded.

(III.iii.96–97, 99–100)

Since Ferdinand and Miranda start without guilt, their development is mystical rather than moral. Ferdinand's ordeal prepares him to share with Miranda the vision of heaven on earth that Prospero sets before them in the wedding masque. They themselves appear in a masquelike vision of perfection, when Prospero draws a curtain to reveal them to the court party. Note that Ferdinand repeats in his ordeal the bondage of Caliban. But bondage at the lovers' high level of existence is transformed into freedom and happiness.

Prospero himself is, I think, tempted, when he remembers Caliban's conspiracy against him, to take revenge against the court party; for Caliban's conspiracy reminds him of the conspiracy of Antonio and Alonso. It is inconsistent with Prospero's role of a providence in the play to suppose that he did not from the start plan for events to work out as they do, and that he is actually converted from some original purpose of revenge by Ariel's remark that he would pity the court party were he human. Since Prospero obviously planned the marriage of Ferdinand and Miranda, it is likely that he also planned to be reconciled with Alonso and the others and that Ariel recalls him to his purpose. The point where, at the thought of Caliban, Prospero interrupts the masque, and is shaken by emotion, is the one point where he seems fallible like the other human beings in the play. We seem to be getting, in his lapse from and return to his purpose, the repetition of a moral conversion from thoughts of revenge that took place before the play begins. All the tragic events of Prospero's earlier life are portrayed for us through such repetitions; so that the tragic events appear to us in a comic perspective, since we now see how well everything turned out.

Almost all the characters pair off. As sovereign and father, Prospero pairs off with Alonso; and as magician, he pairs off with Caliban's mother, the witch Sycorax, who practiced black magic on the island as against Prospero's white magic. Ferdinand pairs off with Miranda; Antonio with Sebastian; Stephano with Trinculo; Caliban with Ariel. In his role of providence, Prospero stands alone at the top of the design. Such symmetries are at the heart of comic technique, perhaps because they make us feel we are seeing events from above, as part of a pattern, and can therefore restrain sympathy in the confidence that all is well. The design also explains the sense in which Shakespeare is not realistic in The Tempest. He is dealing in simplifications like those of the mathematician. He is giving us a diagram of the order of things.

The play begins with a scene of disorder—a tempest at sea that renders meaningless the usual social order. The sailors are disrespectful to the aristocrats, who in trying to assert authority get in the way of the ship's organization. The good-humored courage of Gonzalo stands out against the irrationality of Antonio and Sebastian, who scream abuse at the sailors—though they are later in the play to think themselves very rational in plotting social disorder. The storm gives the boatswain a chance to display a natural superiority that has nothing to do with rank.

In the next scene, we learn that the tempest is an illusion created to regenerate the social order—to restore a reformed Prospero to the throne of Milan, and to lead Ferdinand and Miranda to the throne of Naples. Ariel turns the noise and confusion of the tempest into music, the music that leads Ferdinand to Miranda. The play is pervaded, as G. Wilson Knight has shown in The Shakespearian Tempest, by the imagery of tempest, sea, natural noise, and music. This imagery sets the play in a world where disorder is seen to be not merely at the service of order, but inextricably intertwined, indeed identical, with it. It requires only a transformation of perception to recognize order in disorder.

It is, I think, because Ariel makes music out of the natural noises of the island that there is an undersong of animal noises behind one of his songs, and the sound of the sea behind another. When Caliban says, "Be not afeard; the isle is full of noises,/Sounds and sweet airs that give delight and hurt not," he catches the world of nature between metamorphoses, between noise and music, sleep and waking. We say he renders the magical atmosphere of the island. We mean by this that, like Ariel in his songs, Caliban in this lovely speech shows the appearances of things as fluid and ever-changing aspects of a single force—a force that is beneficent, though it may seem in certain aspects evil.

This force is represented by the sea that washes through every nook and cranny of the play, moving the characters to their destiny both by carrying them there and by washing right up into their consciousness. When Prospero tells Miranda of the "sea sorrow" that brought them to the island, he describes the sea as both threatening and loving. We were cast adrift, he says,

To cry to th' sea that roared to us; to sigh
To th' winds, whose pity, sighing back again,
Did us but loving wrong. (I.ii.149-51)

The supposed drowning of Ferdinand is spoken of in attractive images. And when one of Alonso's courtiers suggests that Ferdinand may have made it to land, he makes us see that, by struggling against the waves, Ferdinand actually rode them to shore as you ride a fiery steed.

I saw him beat the surges under him
And ride upon their backs. He trod the water,
Whose enmity he flung aside, and breasted
The surge most swol'n that met him. His bold head
'Bove the contentious waves he kept, and oared
Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke
To th' shore . . . (II.i.119-25)

The passage—which is, in its complexity of implication and its metrical suppleness, a good example of Shakespeare's late style—turns violence into harmony. It is but a step away from the song in which Ariel makes drowning seem so desirable, because it is, like all aspects of existence in this play, "a sea change/Into something rich and strange"—into the one force that moves all things. Prospero's magic is a portion of nature's; his providential design is a portion of God's.

Antonio, when he tempts Sebastian to murder the king, uses sea imagery, connecting it with the imagery of sleep and dream to signify the force of Sebastian's real desire. Antonio speaks, through his imagery, truer than he knows; for even his plot is necessary to the providential design of the play. Antonio is an effective villain, because he manipulates real, which is to say magical, forces. Prospero uses the imagery of metamorphosis when he tells Miranda how Antonio so transformed the Milanese court as to make real Antonio's appearance of being duke. The wild sounds of sea and tempest turn for Alonso into rational music that tells him of his crime. And Prospero brings the sea imagery to a climax when he says in the end of the court party,

Their understanding
Begins to swell, and the approaching tide
Will shortly fill the reasonable shore,
That now lies foul and muddy. (V.i.79-82)

The sea is now identified with rationality.

The most admirable characters are those who can perceive order in disorder, because they have the capacity for wonder. When Ferdinand says "Admired Miranda," he is playing on the meaning of her name; he is saying, "O wonderful woman, who is to be wondered at." And when, during the masque, he calls Prospero "So rare a wond'ered father" (a father possessed of wonders and therefore to be wondered at), it is a sign that he now sees Prospero rightly. There is an irony in Miranda's famous remark at the end, when she first beholds the court party:

O, wonder!
How many goodly creatures are there here!
How beauteous mankind is! O brave new world
That has such people in't! (V.i.181-84)

Nevertheless, it is the whole point of the play to make us feel that Miranda is right—that she, in her innocence, sees all these people as they really are, as through all their metamorphoses they are tending to be.

It is to Caliban's credit that he exhibits a capacity for wonder lacking in Stephano and Trinculo and in Antonio and Sebastian. That is because Caliban is natural. His faults do not stem from a perversion of reason, as do those of the four witty characters who do not exhibit a capacity for wonder. Only Gonzalo combines both wit and wonder. In the first appearance of the court party, we see how differently the same phenomena may strike different people. For only Gonzalo sees that their deliverance was miraculous and that the island is a paradise. To be in the Garden of Eden is, we are to understand, a matter of perception. Antonio and Sebastian are with their witty quibbling—their quibble, for example, over the few miles that separate modern Tunis from ancient Carthage—merely destructive.

The effect of wonder is created in The Tempest through a combination of several genres—tragicomedy, pastoral, romance, and masque. Antonio's temptation of Sebastian has been compared to the temptation of Macbeth by Lady Macbeth; it is the stuff of tragedy. Our view of it, however, is comic, because we know that Ariel is watching over the scene and has brought it about as part of Prospero's design. The whole action is comic in this sense. The abbreviation of time (The Tempest and The Comedy of Errors are the only plays in which Shakespeare observes the classical unity of time) enables us to see even Prospero's tragedy in Milan as, in retrospect, for the best. The comic perspective does not, however, make us laugh. It makes us marvel.

Not only the tragedy, but the comedy, too, is dissolved in wonder. Bernard Knox has, in "The Tempest and the Ancient Comic Tradition," connected The Tempest with Roman comedies about slaves. Nevertheless, Caliban and Ariel are too marvelous to be laughed at as we laugh at the slaves in Roman comedies. Stephano and Trinculo seem a kind of comic relief, just because we do so little laughing at the main action of The Tempest. Through Prospero's eyes, The Tempest shows us life as God must see it. God could not view life tragically, because He knows that all is for the best. God also knows, as Prospero knows of Ferdinand, that the ordeals He sets for us are for our own good and are not so hard or serious as we think them. Neither, however, could God laugh at us as we laugh at the characters in comedies; for He would not ridicule us, or be dazzled by our wit.

Prospero's view of life is set forth in the famous speech in which he says, after dispelling the wedding masque, "We are such stuff/As dreams are made on." He is, I think, recovering his perspective in this speech after the relapse into thoughts of revenge. The speech is, like Miranda's exclamations, an expression of the marvelous quality of life. Prospero implies, in consoling Ferdinand for the disappearance of the masque, that if life is as illusory as the masque, it is also as gorgeously illusory. He implies also that there is a reality behind life just as there is Prospero behind the masque.

In his detachment from the appearances of life, Prospero regains an innocence of vision analogous to Miranda's. It is the vision of pastoral, the genre that deals with man and nature in their unfallen state. By swiftly recapitulating all the facts of life, tragicomedy leads us to see through life with the eyes of Miranda, who never left the Garden. Tragicomedy uses to this end the devices of romance. For romance deals in marvelous events and solves its problems through metamorphoses and recognition scenes—through, in other words, transformations of perception. When Alonso recognizes Prospero and Ferdinand, both of whom he had thought dead, he recognizes their magical preciousness and thus really sees them for the first time. The same is true of the crew's response to the ship, when it is magically restored to them. The recognized objects are transformed through the transformed eyes of the beholders; so that more is restored than has been lost.

The masque, with its emphasis on spectacle and surprise, subordinates all other effects to the effect of wonder. "The fringed curtains of thine eye advance," says Prospero to Miranda when the spectacle of Ferdinand is about to break upon her. It is as though a theater curtain were to be raised; as, indeed, it is raised or drawn when the spectacle of the lovers breaks upon the court party. All the scenes that offer the characters illumination are masquelike and illusory. Yet it is through these illusions that the characters come to understand reality. We all found ourselves, says Gonzalo in the end, "when no man was his own."

Art is just such an experience of enchantment. The speech in which Prospero breaks his magic wand is not so much Shakespeare's farewell to his art as it is his comment on the relation between art and life. For in breaking his wand and taking himself and the others back to Italy, Prospero seems to be saying that the enchanted island is no abiding place, but rather a place through which we pass in order to renew and strengthen our sense of reality.

In spite of its fantastic elements, The Tempest, as F. R. Leavis has pointed out, never confuses but rather clarifies our sense of reality. That is no small part of its achievement—though it is characteristic of our time that Leavis prefers The Winter's Tale just because it is less realistic than The Tempest. With its bias against realism, and its interest in a symbolic art, our time is better equipped than any time since Shakespeare's to appreciate the last plays. The seventeenth and eighteenth centuries liked Shakespeare's early comedies best of all. The nineteenth century liked the tragedies best, and on the whole we still do. But it may be that the last plays—and especially The Tempest, which is as I see it the best of them—will in future have most to say to us. Certainly the interest in them has risen steadily in the last generation.

A NOTE ON THE SOURCE

There is no known source for the plot of The Tempest. As far as we know, The Tempest and Love's Labor's Lost are Shakespeare's two original plots. Attempts have been made to locate the source of The Tempest in the German comedy Die Schöne Sidea by Jakob Ayrrer, who died in 1605;¹ in certain scenarios of the Italian commedia dell'arte;² in two Spanish romances.³ The differences, however, between these plots and the plot of The Tempest seem more significant than the similarities. The things these plots have in common with one another and with the plot of The Tempest are folk-tale motifs that have long been the common property of storytellers and playwrights.⁴

If there is no source for The Tempest, there are documents that are relevant to it. The names of many of the characters probably derive from Thomas' History of Italy (1549), and the name "Setebos" derives from Robert Eden's History of Travaile (1577), which mentions the "great devill Setebos" worshiped by the Patagonians. In Gonzalo's speech on the ideal commonwealth (II.i.148-73), Shakespeare paraphrases a discussion on nature versus art from John Florio's translation (1603) of Montaigne's essay on the American Indians, "Of the Caniballes" (Caliban's name may derive from "cannibal"). And in Prospero's farewell to his art (V.i.33-57), Shakespeare paraphrases a speech of the witch Medea, on magic and metamorphosis, from Ovid's Metamorphoses—using Arthur Golding's translation (1567), which he apparently checked against the Latin original. As was mentioned in the Introduction, there is good reason to believe that Shakespeare had in mind, and may even have had on his desk, when he wrote The Tempest, certain reports that appeared in 1610 of a tempest and a shipwreck that took place off the Bermudas in 1609. These so-called Bermuda pamphlets require a word of explanation.

On June 2, 1609, a fleet of nine ships set sail from Plymouth for Virginia, carrying more than five hundred colonists. On July 24, a tempest off the Bermudas separated from the rest of the fleet the flagship, the Sea-Venture, which carried the admiral, Sir George Somers, and the new governor of the colony, Sir Thomas Gates. In the course of the next several weeks, the other ships straggled into the port at Jamestown, but the occupants of the Sea-Venture were given up for lost. Then, miraculously, almost a year later, on May 23, 1610, the castaways arrived in Jamestown in two small ships they had built for the journey. Their deliverance, when the news of it reached London in September, was regarded as providential. But the beneficent hand of Providence emerged even more clearly when the reports of the shipwreck began to appear. For the reports showed the stormy Bermudas, which mariners had shunned as an "Ile of Divels," to be actually an island paradise.

Since Shakespeare was closely connected with the leaders of the Virginia Company (for example, the Earls of Southampton and Pembroke), which had sponsored the expedition, he would have had good reason to read the ¹ See H. H. Furness' Variorum Edition of The Tempest (1897), pp. 324-43, which includes a translation of Ayrrer's comedy.

² See H. D. Gray, "The Sources of The Tempest," Modern Language Notes, XXXV (1920), 321-30.

³ Antonio de Eslava's Noches de Invierno (1609), Chap. IV (see Hardin Craig, Interpretation of Shakespeare [1948], pp. 344-45), and Diego Ortuñez de Calahorra's Espejo de Príncipes y Caballeros (1562; English translation, 1578-1601) (see Joseph de Perott, "The Probable Source of the Plot of Shakespeare's Tempest," Publications of the Clark University Library, I [1903-05], 209-16).

⁴ See W. W. Newell, "Sources of Shakespeare's Tempest," Journal of American Folk-Lore, XVI (1905), 234-57.

reports of the shipwreck that appeared in 1610. The first to appear was A Discovery of the Barmudas, otherwise called the Ile of Divels, by Sylvester Jourdain,⁵ who was with Somers. A month later there appeared The True Declaration of the estate of the Colonie in Virginia, which was the report of the Virginia Company.⁶ Most important for our purposes is a long letter by William Strachey, who was also with Somers, which is dated July 15, 1610, but which doubtless came over to London with Gates in September. Strachey's letter was not published until 1625, in Purchas His Pilgrimes.⁷ But it seems to have circulated in manuscript among the leaders of the Virginia Company, and we may be reasonably sure that Shakespeare read it, since it bears most closely of all the reports on The Tempest. It is called A true repertory of the wracke, and redemption of Sir Thomas Gates Knight; upon, and from the Ilands of the Bermudas: his comming to Virginia, and the estate of that Colonie then, and after.

Strachey's description of the tempest ("our clamors drowned in the winds, and the winds in thunder. Prayers might well be in the heart and lips, but drowned in the outcries of the officers") pinpoints details of Shakespeare's opening scene. And the wrecking of the Sea-Venture (we "gave her now up, rent in pieces, and absolutely lost") recalls Shakespeare's "All lost!" . . . "We split, we split!" (I.i.51, 60). Caliban's mysterious "Young scamels from the rock" (II.ii.174) may refer to the "webfooted fowl," which the castaways named "sea owls" and which came miraculously when called, allowing themselves to be weighed and selected for slaughter. When Strachey says the providential deliverance teaches "that Truth is the daughter of Time, and that men ought not to deny everything which is not subject to their own sense," we are reminded of Gonzalo's speech on travelers' tales (III.iii.43-49). In spite of the deliverance, there were attempted mutinies against Sir Thomas Gates that parallel the attempted mutinies against Prospero and the King of Naples. And Sir Thomas' failure, after the arrival in Virginia, to tame the Indians—making him realize "how little a fair and noble entreaty works upon a barbarous disposition"—resembles Prospero's failure with Caliban, "on whose nature/Nurture can never stick (IV.i.188-89).

A NOTE ON THE TEXT

The Tempest was first printed in the Folio of 1623, the First Folio. The Folio text has been carefully edited and punctuated, and it has unusually complete stage directions that are probably Shakespeare's own. The Tempest is perhaps the finest text in the Folio, which may be why the Folio editors placed it first in the volume.

The present division into acts and scenes is that of the Folio. The present edition silently modernizes spelling and punctuation, regularizes speech prefixes, translates into English the Folio's Latin designations of act and scene, and makes certain changes in lineation in the interest either of meter, meaning, or a consistent format. The list of "Names of the Actors," which appears at the end of the play in the Folio, is here given at the beginning. Other departures from the Folio are listed below, including changes in lineation that bear upon the meaning. The reading of the present text is given first, in boldface type, and then the reading of the Folio (F) in roman.

The Scene: An uninhabited island/Names of the Actors [appears at the end of play in F]

I.i.37 s.d. Enter Sebastian, Antonio, and Gonzalo [in F occurs after "plague," line 36]

I.ii.173 princess' Princesse 201 lightnings Lightning 272 wast was 283 she he 382 the burden bear beare/the burthen

II.i.5 master Masters 38-39 Antonio . . . Sebastian [speakers reversed in F]

III.i.2 sets set 15 busiest busie lest 93 withal with all

III.ii.125 scout cout

III.iii.17 Sebastian I say tonight. No more [appears in F after s.d.] 29 islanders Islands

IV.i.9 off of 13 gift guest 124 s.d. Juno and . . . employment [follows line 127 in F] 193 them on on them 231 Let't let's

V.i. 60 boiled boile 72 Didst Did 75 entertained entertaine 82 lies ly 199 remembrance remembrances

⁵ Facsimile edition, ed. J. Q. Adams (1940).

⁶ Reprinted in Tracts and Other Papers, Vol. III (1844), collected by Peter Force.

⁷ Vol. XIX (1906).

THE TEMPEST

The Scene: An uninhabited island

Names of the Actors

ALONSO King of Naples
SEBASTIAN his brother
PROSPERO the right Duke of Milan
ANTONIO his brother, the usurping Duke of Milan
FERDINAND son to the King of Naples
GONZALO an honest old councilor
ADRIAN and FRANCISCO lords
CALIBAN a savage and deformed slave
TRINCULO a jester
STEPHANO a drunken butler

MASTER of a ship
BOATSWAIN
MARINERS
MIRANDA daughter to Prospero
ARIEL an airy spirit
IRIS
CERES
JUNO
NYMPHS
REAPERS

} [presented by] spirits

[Other SPIRITS attending on Prospero]

A C T I

Scene I. [On a ship at sea.]

A tempestuous noise of thunder and lightning heard. Enter a SHIPMASTER and a BOATSWAIN.

MASTER Boatswain!

BOATSWAIN Here, master. What cheer?

MASTER Good,° speak to th' mariners! Fall to't yarely,° or we run ourselves aground. Bestir, bestir!
Exit.

Enter MARINERS.

BOATSWAIN Heigh, my hearts! Cheerly, cheerly, my 5 hearts! Yare, yare! Take in the topsail! Tend to th' master's whistle! Blow till thou burst thy wind, if room enough!°

The decorative border shown above appeared on the first page of The Tempest in the First Folio edition of Shakespeare's plays, 1623.

I.i.3 Good good fellow 4 yarely briskly 7-8 Blow . . . enough The storm can blow and split itself as long as there is open sea, without rocks, to maneuver in

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, FERDINAND, GONZALO, and others.

ALONSO Good boatswain, have care. Where's the master? Play the men.° 10

BOATSWAIN I pray now, keep below.

ANTONIO Where is the master, bos'n?

BOATSWAIN Do you not hear him? You mar our labor. Keep your cabins; you do assist the storm.

GONZALO Nay, good, be patient. 15

BOATSWAIN When the sea is. Hence! What cares these roarers for the name of king? To cabin! Silence! Trouble us not!

GONZALO Good, yet remember whom thou hast aboard. 20

BOATSWAIN None that I more love than myself. You are a councilor; if you can command these elements to silence and work the peace of the present,° we will not hand° a rope more. Use your authority. If you cannot, give thanks you have lived so long, and make yourself 25

10 Play the men Act like men 23 work . . . present restore the present to peace (since as a councilor his job is to quell disorder) 24 hand handle ready in your cabin for the mischance of the hour, if it so hap. Cheerly, good hearts! Out of our way, I say.

Exit.

GONZALO I have great comfort from this fellow, Methinks he hath no drowning mark upon him; his complexion is perfect gallows.^o Stand fast, good Fate, 30 to his hanging! Make the rope of his destiny our cable, for our own doth little advantage.^o If he be not born to be hanged, our case is miserable.

Exit, [with the rest].

Enter BOATSWAIN.

BOATSWAIN Down with the topmast! Yare! Lower, lower! Bring her to try with main course!^o (A cry 35 within.) A plague upon this howling! They are louder than the weather or our office.^o

Enter SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, and GONZALO.

Yet again? What do you here? Shall we give o'er^o and drown? Have you a mind to sink?

SEBASTIAN A pox o' your throat, you bawling, 40 blasphemous, incharitable dog!

BOATSWAIN Work you, then.

ANTONIO Hang, cur! Hang, you whoreson, insolent noisemaker! We are less afraid to be drowned than thou art. 45

GONZALO I'll warrant him for^o drowning, though the ship were no stronger than a nutshell and as leaky as an unstanch'd^o wench.

BOATSWAIN Lay her ahold, ahold! Set her two courses!^o Off to sea again! Lay her off!^o 50

Enter MARINERS wet.

MARINERS All lost! To prayers, to prayers! All lost! [Exeunt.]

BOATSWAIN What, must our mouths be cold?

GONZALO

The king and prince at prayers! Let's assist them, For our case is as theirs.

SEBASTIAN I am out of patience.

ANTONIO

We are merely^o cheated of our lives by drunkards. 55

This wide-chopped^o rascal—would thou mightst lie drowning

The washing of ten tides!^o

GONZALO

He'll be hanged yet, Though every drop of water swear against it And gape at wid'st to glut him.

A confused noise within: "Mercy on us!"

"We split, we split!" "Farewell, my wife and children!" 60

29-30 no drowning . . . gallows alluding to the proverb, "He that's born to be hanged need fear no drowning" 32 doth little advantage gives us little advantage 35 Bring . . . course Heave to, under the mainsail 36-37 They . . . office These passengers make more noise than the tempest or than we do at our work 38 give o'er give up trying to run the ship 46 warrant him for guarantee him against 48 unstanch'd wide-open 49-50 Lay . . . courses the ship is still being blown dangerously to shore, so the boatswain orders that the foresail be set in addition to the mainsail; but the ship still moves toward shore 50 Lay her off i.e., away from the shore 55 merely completely 56 wide-chopped big-mouthed 57 ten tides pirates were hanged on the shore and left there until three tides had washed over them

"Farewell, brother!" "We split, we split, we split!" [Exit BOATSWAIN.]

ANTONIO

Let's all sink wi' th' king.

SEBASTIAN

Let's take leave of him.

Exit, [with ANTONIO].

GONZALO Now would I give a thousand furlongs of sea for an acre of barren ground—long heath,^o brown furze, anything. The wills above be done, but I would 65 fain die a dry death. Exit.

Scene II. [The island. In front of Prospero's cell.]

Enter PROSPERO and MIRANDA.

MIRANDA

If by your art, my dearest father, you have Put the wild waters in this roar, allay them.

The sky, it seems, would pour down stinking pitch But that the sea, mounting to th' welkin's cheek,^o

Dashes the fire out. O, I have suffered 5

With those that I saw suffer! A brave^o vessel

(Who had no doubt some noble creature in her)

Dashed all to pieces! O, the cry did knock

Against my very heart! Poor souls, they perished!

Had I been any god of power, I would 10

Have sunk the sea within the earth or ere

It should the good ship to have swallowed and

The fraughting^o souls within her.

PROSPERO

Be collected.

No more amazement.^o Tell your piteous heart There's no harm done.

MIRANDA

O, woe the day!

PROSPERO

No harm. 15

I have done nothing but in care of thee,

Of thee my dear one, thee my daughter, who

Art ignorant of what thou art, naught knowing

Of whence I am, nor that I am more better

Than Prospero, master of a full poor cell, 20

And thy no greater father.^o

MIRANDA

More to know

Did never meddle^o with my thoughts.

PROSPERO

'Tis time

I should inform thee farther. Lend thy hand

And pluck my magic garment from me. So.

[Lays down his robe.]

Lie there, my art. Wipe thou thine eyes; have comfort. 25

The direful spectacle of the wrack, which touched

The very virtue^o of compassion in thee,

I have with such provision^o in mine art

So safely ordered that there is no soul—

No, not so much perdition^o as an hair 30

Betid^o to any creature in the vessel

Which thou heard'st cry, which thou saw'st sink. Sit down;

For thou must now know farther.

64 heath heather

I.ii.4 welkin's cheek face of the sky 6 brave fine, gallant (the word often has this meaning in the play) 13 fraughting forming her freight 14 amazement consternation 21 thy . . . father thy father, no greater than the Prospero just described 22 meddle mingle 27 virtue essence 28 provision foresight 30 perdition loss 31 Betid happened

MIRANDA You have often
 Begun to tell me what I am; but stopped
 And left me to a bootless inquisition,
 Concluding, "Stay; not yet."
 PROSPERO The hour's now come;
 The very minute bids thee ope thine ear.
 Obey, and be attentive. Canst thou remember
 A time before we came unto this cell?
 I do not think thou canst, for then thou wast not
 Out° three years old. 40
 MIRANDA Certainly, sir, I can.
 PROSPERO
 By what? By any other house or person?
 Of anything the image tell me that
 Hath kept with thy remembrance.
 MIRANDA 'Tis far off,
 And rather like a dream than an assurance
 That my remembrance warrants.° Had I not
 Four or five women once that tended me?
 PROSPERO
 Thou hadst, and more, Miranda. But how is it
 That this lives in thy mind? What see'st thou else
 In the dark backward and abysm of time? 50
 If thou rememb'rest aught ere thou cam'st here,
 How thou cam'st here thou mayst.
 MIRANDA But that I do not.
 PROSPERO
 Twelve year since, Miranda, twelve year since,
 Thy father was the Duke of Milan° and
 A prince of power.
 MIRANDA Sir, are not you my father? 55
 PROSPERO
 Thy mother was a piece° of virtue, and
 She said thou wast my daughter; and thy father
 Was Duke of Milan; and his only heir
 And princess, no worse issued.°
 MIRANDA O the heavens!
 What foul play had we that we came from thence? 60
 Or blessèd was't we did?
 PROSPERO Both, both, my girl!
 By foul play, as thou say'st, were we heaved thence,
 But blessedly holp° hither.
 MIRANDA O, my heart bleeds
 To think o' th' teen that I have turned you to,°
 Which is from° my remembrance! Please you, farther. 65
 PROSPERO
 My brother and thy uncle, called Antonio—
 I pray thee mark me—that a brother should
 Be so perfidious—he whom next thyself
 Of all the world I loved, and to him put
 The manage of my state,° as at that time 70
 Through all the signories° it was the first,
 And Prospero the prime duke, being so reputed
 In dignity, and for the liberal arts
 Without a parallel. Those being all my study,
 The government I cast upon my brother
 And to my state grew stranger, being transported

41 Out fully 46 remembrance warrants memory guarantees 54 Milan pronounced "Mílan" 56 piece masterpiece 59 no worse issued of no meaner lineage than he 63 holp helped 64 teen . . . to sorrow I have caused you to remember 65 from out of 70 manage . . . state management of my domain 71 signories lordships (of Italy)

And rapt in secret studies. Thy false uncle—
 Dost thou attend me?
 35 MIRANDA Sir, most heedfully.
 PROSPERO
 Being once perfected° how to grant suits,
 How to deny them, who t' advance, and who 80
 To trash for overtopping,° new-created
 The creatures that were mine, I say—or changed 'em,
 Or else new-formed 'em°—having both the key°
 Of officer and office, set all hearts i' th' state
 To what tune pleased his ear, that now he was 85
 The ivy which had hid my princely trunk
 And sucked my verdure out on't. Thou attend'st not?
 MIRANDA
 O, good sir, I do.
 PROSPERO I pray thee mark me.
 I thus neglecting worldly ends, all dedicated
 To closeness° and the bettering of my mind— 90
 With that which, but by being so retired,
 O'erprized all popular rate, in my false brother
 Awaked an evil nature,° and my trust,
 Like a good parent,° did beget of him
 A falsehood in its contrary as great 95
 As my trust was, which had indeed no limit,
 A confidence sans bound. He being thus lorded—
 Not only with what my revenue° yielded
 But what my power might else exact, like one 100
 Who having into truth—by telling of it°—
 Made such a sinner of his memory
 To° credit his own lie, he did believe
 He was indeed the duke, out o' th' substitution
 And executing th' outward face of royalty
 With all prerogative.° Hence his ambition growing— 105
 Dost thou hear?
 MIRANDA Your tale, sir, would cure deafness.
 PROSPERO
 To have no screen between this part he played
 And him he played it for, he needs will be Absolute Milan.° Me (poor man) my library
 Was dukedom large enough. Of temporal royalties 110
 He thinks me now incapable; confederates
 (So dry° he was for sway) wi' th' King of Naples
 To give him annual tribute, do him homage,
 Subject his coronet to his crown, and bend
 The dukedom, yet unbowed (alas, poor Milan!), 115
 To most ignoble stooping.
 MIRANDA O the heavens!

79 perfected grown skillful 81 trash for overtopping (1) check the speed of (as of hounds) (2) cut down to size (as of over-tall trees) the aspirants for political favor who are growing too bold 81-83 new-created . . . 'em he recreated my following —either exchanging my adherents for his own, or else transforming my adherents into different people 83 key a pun leading to the musical metaphor 90 closeness seclusion 91-93 With . . . nature with that dedication to the mind which, were it not that it kept me from exercising the duties of my office would surpass in value all ordinary estimate, I awakened evil in my brother's nature 94 good parent alluding to the proverb cited by Miranda in line 120 98 revenue pronounced
 "revèue" 99-100 like . . . it like one who really had these things—by repeatedly saying he had them ("into" = unto) 102 To as to 103-05 out . . . prerogative as a result of his acting as my substitute and performing the outward functions of royalty with all its prerogatives 109 Absolute Milan Duke of Milan in fact 112 dry thirsty

PROSPERO

Mark his condition,° and th' event;° then tell me
If this might be a brother.

MIRANDA

I should sin

To think but nobly of my grandmother.
Good wombs have borne bad sons.

PROSPERO

Now the condition. 120

This King of Naples, being an enemy
To me inveterate, hearkens my brother's suit;
Which was, that he, in lieu o' th' premises°
Of homage and I know not how much tribute,
Should presently extirpate me and mine 125
Out of the dukedom and confer fair Milan,
With all the honors, on my brother. Whereon,
A treacherous army levied, one midnight
Fated to th' purpose, did Antonio open
The gates of Milan; and, i' th' dead of darkness, 130
The ministers° for th' purpose hurried thence
Me and thy crying self.

MIRANDA

Alack, for pity!

I, not rememb'ring how I cried out then,
Will cry it o'er again; it is a hint°
That wrings mine eyes to't.

PROSPERO

Hear a little further, 135

And then I'll bring thee to the present business
Which now's upon's; without the which this story
Were most impertinent.°

MIRANDA

Wherefore did they not

That hour destroy us?

PROSPERO

Well demanded, wench.

My tale provokes that question. Dear, they durst not, 140
So dear the love my people bore me; nor set
A mark so bloody on the business; but,
With colors fairer, painted their foul ends.
In few,° they hurried us aboard a bark;
Bore us some leagues to sea, where they prepared 145
A rotten carcass of a butt,° not rigged,
Nor tackle, sail, nor mast; the very rats
Instinctively have quit it. There they hoist us,
To cry to th' sea that roared to us; to sigh
To th' winds, whose pity, sighing back again, 150
Did us but loving wrong.

MIRANDA

Alack, what trouble

Was I then to you!

PROSPERO

O, a cherubin

Thou wast that did preserve me! Thou didst smile,
Infused with a fortitude from heaven,
When I have decked° the sea with drops full salt, 155
Under my burden groaned; which° raised in me
An undergoing stomach,° to bear up Against what should ensue.

MIRANDA

How came we ashore?

PROSPERO

By providence divine.

Some food we had, and some fresh water, that 160
A noble Neapolitan, Gonzalo,
Out of his charity, who being then appointed

Master of this design, did give us, with

Rich garments, linens, stuffs, and necessities

Which since have steaded° much. So, of his gentleness, 165

Knowing I loved my books, he furnished me

From mine own library with volumes that

I prize above my dukedom.

MIRANDA

Would I might

But ever see that man!

PROSPERO

Now I arise.

Sit still, and hear the last of our sea sorrow. 170

Here in this island we arrived; and here

Have I, thy schoolmaster, made thee more profit

Than other princess' can,° that have more time

For vainer hours, and tutors not so careful.

MIRANDA

Heavens thank you for't! And now I pray you, sir— 175

For still 'tis beating in my mind—your reason

For raising this sea storm?

PROSPERO

Know thus far forth.

By accident most strange, bountiful Fortune

(Now my dear lady)° hath mine enemies

Brought to this shore; and by my prescience 180

I find my zenith° doth depend upon

A most auspicious star, whose influence

If now I court not, but omit,° my fortunes

Will ever after droop. Here cease more questions.

Thou art inclined to sleep. 'Tis a good dullness, 185

And give it way. I know thou canst not choose.

[MIRANDA sleeps.]

Come away,° servant, come! I am ready now.

Approach, my Ariel! Come!

Enter ARIEL.

ARIEL

All hail, great master! Grave sir, hail! I come

To answer thy best pleasure; be't to fly, 190

To swim, to dive into the fire, to ride

On the curled clouds. To thy strong bidding task°

Ariel and all his quality.°

150

PROSPERO

Hast thou, spirit,

Performed, to point,° the tempest that I bade thee?

ARIEL

To every article. 195

I boarded the king's ship. Now on the beak,°

Now in the waist,° the deck,° in every cabin,

I flamed amazement.° Sometime I'd divide

And burn in many places; on the topmast, 200

The yards, and boresprit° would I flame distinctly,°

Then meet and join. Jove's lightnings, the precursors

O' th' dreadful thunderclaps, more momentary

And sight-outrunning were not. The fire and cracks

Of sulfurous roaring the most mighty Neptune

Seem to besiege, and make his bold waves tremble; 205

Yea, his dread trident shake.

117 condition terms of his pact with Naples; event outcome
123 in . . . premises in return for the guarantees 131 ministers agents 134 hint occasion 138 impertinent inappropriate 144 few few words 146 butt tub 155 decked covered (wept salt tears into the sea) 156 which Miranda's smile 157 undergoing stomach spirit of endurance

165 steaded been of use 173 princess' can princesses can have 179 Now . . . lady i.e., formerly my foe, now my patroness 181 zenith apex of fortune 183 omit neglect 187 Come away come from where you are; come here 192 task tax to the utmost 193 quality cohorts (Ariel is leader of a band of spirits) 194 to point in every detail 196 beak prow 197 waist amidships; deck poop 198 flamed amazement struck terror by appearing as (Saint Elmo's) fire 200 boresprit bowsprit; distinctly in different places

PROSPERO My brave spirit!
Who was so firm, so constant, that this coil°
Would not infect his reason?

ARIEL Not a soul
But felt a fever of the mad and played
Some tricks of desperation. All but mariners Plunged in the foaming brine and quit the vessel,
Then all afire with me. The king's son Ferdinand,
With hair up-staring° (then like reeds, not hair),
Was the first man that leapt; cried, "Hell is empty,
And all the devils are here!"

PROSPERO Why, that's my spirit! 215
But was not this nigh shore?

ARIEL Close by, my master.

PROSPERO
But are they, Ariel, safe?

ARIEL Not a hair perished.
On their sustaining° garments not a blemish,
But fresher than before; and as thou bad'st me,
In troops I have dispersed them 'bout the isle.
The king's son have I landed by himself,
Whom I left cooling of the air with sighs
In an odd angle of the isle, and sitting,
His arms in this sad knot.

[Illustrates with a gesture.]

PROSPERO Of the king's ship,
The mariners, say how thou hast disposed, 225
And all the rest o' th' fleet.

ARIEL Safely in harbor
Is the king's ship; in the deep nook where once
Thou call'dst me up at midnight to fetch dew
From the still-vexed Bermoothes,° there she's hid;
The mariners all under hatches stowed,
Who, with a charm joined to their suff'red° labor,
I have left asleep. And for the rest o' th' fleet,
Which I dispersed, they all have met again,
And are upon the Mediterranean flote°
Bound sadly home for Naples,
Supposing that they saw the king's ship wracked
And his great person perish.

PROSPERO Ariel, thy charge
Exactly is performed; but there's more work.
What is the time o' th' day?

ARIEL Past the mid season.°

PROSPERO
At least two glasses.° The time 'twixt six and now 240
Must by us both be spent most precious.

ARIEL
Is there more toil? Since thou dost give me pains,°
Let me remember° thee what thou hast promised,
Which is not yet performed me.

PROSPERO How now? Moody?
What is't thou canst demand?

ARIEL My liberty. 245

PROSPERO
Before the time be out? No more!

ARIEL I prithee,
Remember I have done thee worthy service,

207 coil uproar 213 up-staring standing on end 218 sustaining buoying them up 229 Bermoothes Bermudas 231
suff'red undergone 234 flote sea 239 mid season noon 240 two glasses two o'clock 242 pains hard tasks 243 remember remind

Told thee no lies, made thee no mistakings, served Without or grudge or grumblings. Thou did promise
To bate me° a full year.

PROSPERO Dost thou forget 250
From what a torment I did free thee?

ARIEL No.

PROSPERO
Thou dost; and think'st it much to tread the ooze
Of the salt deep,
To run upon the sharp wind of the North,
To do me business in the veins° o' th' earth 255
When it is baked° with frost.

ARIEL I do not, sir.

PROSPERO
Thou liest, malignant thing! Hast thou forgot
The foul witch Sycorax,° who with age and envy°
Was grown into a hoop? Hast thou forgot her?

ARIEL

No, sir.

220 PROSPERO Thou hast. Where was she born? Speak! 260
Tell me!

ARIEL

Sir, in Argier.°

PROSPERO O, was she so? I must
Once in a month recount what thou hast been,
Which thou forget'st. This damned witch Sycorax,
For mischiefs manifold, and sorceries terrible 265
To enter human hearing, from Argier,
Thou know'st, was banished. For one thing she did
They would not take her life. Is not this true?

ARIEL

Ay, sir.

PROSPERO
This blue-eyed° hag was hither brought with child 270
And here was left by th' sailors. Thou, my slave,
As thou report'st thyself, wast then her servant.
And, for thou wast a spirit too delicate
To act her earthy and abhorred commands,
Refusing her grand hests,° she did confine thee, 275
By help of her more potent ministers,°
And in her most unmitigable rage,
Into a cloven pine; within which rift
Imprisoned thou didst painfully remain
A dozen years; within which space she died 280
And left thee there, where thou didst vent thy groans
As fast as millwheels strike. Then was this island (Save for the son that she did litter here,
A freckled whelp, hagborn) not honored with
A human shape.

ARIEL Yes, Caliban her son. 285

PROSPERO

Dull thing, I say so! He, that Caliban
Whom now I keep in service. Thou best know'st
What torment I did find thee in; thy groans
Did make wolves howl and penetrate the breasts
Of ever-angry bears. It was a torment 290

250 bate me reduce my term of service 255 veins streams
256 baked caked 258 Sycorax name not found elsewhere; probably derived from Greek sys, "sow," and korax, which means both "raven"—see line 324—and "hook"—hence perhaps "hoop"; envy malice 262 Argier Algiers 270 blue-eyed referring to the livid color of the eyelid, a sign of pregnancy 275 hests commands 276 her . . . ministers her agents, spirits more powerful than thou

To lay upon the damned, which Sycorax
 Could not again undo. It was mine art,
 When I arrived and heard thee, that made gape
 The pine, and let thee out.

ARIEL I thank thee, master.

PROSPERO

If thou more murmur'st, I will rend an oak 295
 And peg thee in his° knotty entrails till
 Thou hast howled away twelve winters.

ARIEL Pardon, master.

I will be correspondent° to command
 And do my spriting gently.°

PROSPERO Do so; and after two days
 I will discharge thee.

ARIEL That's my noble master! 300
 What shall I do? Say what? What shall I do?

PROSPERO

Go make thyself like a nymph o' th' sea. Be subject
 To no sight but thine and mine, invisible
 To every eyeball else.° Go take this shape
 And hither come in't. Go! Hence with diligence! 305

Exit [ARIEL].

Awake, dear heart, awake! Thou hast slept well.
 Awake!

MIRANDA

The strangeness of your story put Heaviness in me.

PROSPERO Shake it off. Come on.

We'll visit Caliban, my slave, who never 310
 Yields us kind answer.

MIRANDA 'Tis a villain, sir,
 I do not love to look on.

PROSPERO But as 'tis,

We cannot miss° him. He does make our fire,
 Fetch in our wood, and serves in offices
 That profit us. What, ho! Slave! Caliban! 315
 Thou earth, thou! Speak!

CALIBAN (Within.) There's wood enough within.

PROSPERO

Come forth, I say! There's other business for thee.
 Come, thou tortoise! When?°

Enter ARIEL like a water nymph.

Fine apparition! My quaint° Ariel,
 Hark in thine ear. [Whispers.]

ARIEL My lord, it shall be done. Exit. 320

PROSPERO

Thou poisonous slave, got by the devil himself
 Upon thy wicked dam, come forth!

Enter CALIBAN.

CALIBAN

As wicked dew as e'er my mother brushed
 With raven's feather from unwholesome fen
 Drop on you both! A southwest blow on ye 325
 And blister you all o'er!

PROSPERO

For this, be sure, tonight thou shalt have cramps,
 Side-stitches that shall pen thy breath up. Urchins°
 Shall, for that vast of night that they may work,°
 All exercise on thee; thou shalt be pinched 330
 As thick as honeycomb, each pinch more stinging
 Than bees that made 'em.

CALIBAN I must eat my dinner.

This island's mine by Sycorax my mother,
 Which thou tak'st from me. When thou cam'st first,
 Thou strok'st me and made much of me; wouldst give
 me 335

Water with berries in't; and teach me how
 To name the bigger light, and how the less,
 That burn by day and night. And then I loved thee
 And showed thee all the qualities o' th' isle,
 The fresh springs, brine pits, barren place and fertile. 340
 Cursed be I that did so! All the charms
 Of Sycorax—toads, beetles, bats, light on you!
 For I am all the subjects that you have,
 Which first was mine own king; and here you sty me
 In this hard rock, whiles you do keep from me 345
 The rest o' th' island.

PROSPERO Thou most lying slave,
 Whom stripes° may move, not kindness! I have used
 thee

(Filth as thou art) with humane care, and lodged thee
 In mine own cell till thou didst seek to violate
 The honor of my child. 350

CALIBAN

O ho, O ho! Would't had been done!
 Thou didst prevent me; I had peopled else
 This isle with Calibans.

MIRANDA° Abhorrèd slave,

Which any print of goodness wilt not take,
 Being capable of all ill!° I pitied thee, 355
 Took pains to make thee speak, taught thee each hour
 One thing or other. When thou didst not, savage, Know thine own meaning, but wouldst gabble like
 A thing most brutish, I endowed thy purposes
 With words that made them known. But thy vile race, 360
 Though thou didst learn, had that in't which good natures

Could not abide to be with. Therefore wast thou Deservedly confined into this rock, who hadst
 Deserved more than a prison.

CALIBAN

You taught me language, and my profit on't 365
 Is, I know how to curse. The red plague rid° you
 For learning me your language!

PROSPERO Hagseed, hence!

Fetch us in fuel. And be quick, thou'rt best,°
 To answer other business. Shrug'st thou, malice?
 If thou neglect'st or dost unwillingly 370
 What I command, I'll rack thee with old° cramps,

296 his its 298 correspondent obedient 299 do . . . gently render graciously my services as a spirit 303–04 invisible
 . . . else Ariel is invisible to everyone in the play except Prospero; Henslowe's Diary, an Elizabethan stage account, lists
 "a robe for to go invisible" 313 miss do without 318 When expression of impatience 319 quaint ingenious

328 Urchins goblins in the shape of hedgehogs 329 vast . . . work the long, empty stretch of night during which malignant spirits are allowed to be active 347 stripes lashes 353 Miranda many editors transfer this speech to Prospero as inappropriate to Miranda 355 capable . . . ill susceptible only to evil impressions 366 rid destroy 368 thou'rt best you'd better 371 old plenty of (with an additional suggestion, "such as old people have")

Fill all thy bones with aches,^o make thee roar
That beasts shall tremble at thy din.

CALIBAN No, pray thee.

[Aside.]

I must obey. His art is of such pow'r
It would control my dam's god, Setebos,
And make a vassal of him. 375

PROSPERO So, slave; hence!
Exit CALIBAN.

Enter FERDINAND; and ARIEL (invisible), playing and singing.

Ariel's song.

Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands.
Curtsied when you have and kissed
The wild waves whist,^o
Foot it featly^o here and there;
And, sweet sprites, the burden bear.
Hark, hark!

Burden, dispersedly.^o Bow, wow!

The watchdogs bark. 385

Burden, dispersedly. Bow, wow!

Hark, hark! I hear
The strain of strutting chanticleer
Cry cock-a-diddle-dow.

FERDINAND
Where should this music be? I' th' air or th' earth? 390
It sounds no more; and sure it waits upon
Some god o' th' island. Sitting on a bank,
Weeping again the King my father's wrack,
This music crept by me upon the waters,
Allaying both their fury and my passion^o
With its sweet air. Thence I have followed it,
Or it hath drawn me rather; but 'tis gone.
No, it begins again.

Ariel's song.

Full fathom five thy father lies;
Of his bones are coral made;
Those are pearls that were his eyes;
Nothing of him that doth fade
But doth suffer a sea change
Into something rich and strange.
Sea nymphs hourly ring his knell:

Burden. Ding-dong.

Hark! Now I hear them—ding-dong bell.

FERDINAND
The ditty does remember my drowned father.
This is no mortal business, nor no sound
That the earth owes.^o I hear it now above me. 410

PROSPERO
The fringed curtains of thine eye advance^o
And say what thou see'st yond.

372 aches pronounced "aitches" 379–80 kissed . . . whist when you have, through the harmony of kissing in the dance, kissed the wild waves into silence (?) when you have kissed in the dance, the wild waves being silenced (?) 381 featly nimbly 384 Burden, dispersedly an undersong, coming from all parts of the stage; it imitates the barking of dogs and perhaps at the end the crowing of a cock 395 passion grief 410 owes owns 411 advance raise

MIRANDA What is't? A spirit?
Lord, how it looks about! Believe me, sir,
It carries a brave form. But 'tis a spirit.

PROSPERO
No, wench; it eats, and sleeps, and hath such senses 415
As we have, such. This gallant which thou see'st
Was in the wrack; and, but he's something stained
With grief (that's beauty's canker), thou mightst call him

A goodly person. He hath lost his fellows
And strays about to find 'em.

MIRANDA I might call him 420
A thing divine; for nothing natural
I ever saw so noble.

PROSPERO [Aside.] It goes on, I see,
As my soul prompts it. Spirit, fine spirit, I'll free thee
Within two days for this.

FERDINAND Most sure, the goddess 425
On whom these airs attend! Vouchsafe my prayer
May know if you remain^o upon this island,
And that you will some good instruction give
How I may bear me^o here. My prime request,
Which I do last pronounce, is (O you wonder!)
If you be maid or no?

MIRANDA No wonder, sir, 430
But certainly a maid.

FERDINAND My language? Heavens!
I am the best of them that speak this speech,
Were I but where 'tis spoken.

PROSPERO How? The best?
What wert thou if the King of Naples heard thee?

FERDINAND
A single^o thing, as I am now, that wonders 435
To hear thee speak of Naples. He does hear me;
And that he does I weep. Myself am Naples,
Who with mine eyes, never since at ebb, beheld
The king my father wracked.

MIRANDA Alack, for mercy!

FERDINAND
Yes, faith, and all his lords, the Duke of Milan 440
And his brave son^o being twain.^o

PROSPERO [Aside.] The Duke of Milan
And his more braver daughter could control^o thee,
If now 'twere fit to do't. At the first sight
They have changed eyes.^o Delicate Ariel,
I'll set thee free for this. [To FERDINAND.] A word, 445
good sir.
I fear you have done yourself some wrong.^o A word!

MIRANDA
Why speaks my father so ungently? This
Is the third man that e'er I saw; the first
That e'er I sighed for. Pity move my father
To be inclined my way!

FERDINAND O, if a virgin, 450
And your affection not gone forth, I'll make you
The queen of Naples.

PROSPERO Soft, sir! One word more.

425–26 Vouchsafe . . . remain may my prayer induce you to inform me whether you dwell 428 bear me conduct myself 435 single (1) solitary (2) helpless 441 son the only time Antonio's son is mentioned; twain two (of these lords) 442 control refute 444 changed eyes i.e., fallen in love 446 done . . . wrong said what is not so

[Aside.]

They are both in either's pow'rs. But this swift business
I must uneasy make, lest too light winning Make the prize light. [To FERDINAND.] One word more! I charge thee

455

That thou attend me. Thou dost here usurp
The name thou ow'st° not, and hast put thyself
Upon this island as a spy, to win it
From me, the lord on't.

FERDINAND No, as I am a man!

MIRANDA

There's nothing ill can dwell in such a temple.
If the ill spirit have so fair a house,
Good things will strive to dwell with't.

460

PROSPERO Follow me.

[To MIRANDA.]

Speak not you for him; he's a traitor. [To FERDINAND.] Come!

I'll manacle thy neck and feet together;
Sea water shalt thou drink; thy food shall be
The fresh-brook mussels, withered roots, and husks
Wherein the acorn cradled. Follow!

465

FERDINAND No.

I will resist such entertainment till
Mine enemy has more pow'r.

He draws, and is charmed from moving.

MIRANDA O dear father,

Make not too rash a trial of him, for
He's gentle and not fearful.°

470

PROSPERO What, I say,
My foot my tutor?° [To FERDINAND.] Put thy sword up, traitor—

Who mak'st a show but dar'st not strike, thy conscience
Is so possessed with guilt! Come, from thy ward!°
For I can here disarm thee with this stick°
And make thy weapon drop.

475

MIRANDA Beseech you, father!

PROSPERO Hence! Hang not on my garments.

MIRANDA Sir, have pity.
I'll be his surety.

PROSPERO Silence! One word more
Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee. What,
An advocate for an impostor? Hush!
Thou think'st there is no more such shapes as he,
Having seen but him and Caliban. Foolish wench!
To th' most of men this is a Caliban,
And they to him are angels.

480

MIRANDA My affections
Are then most humble. I have no ambition
To see a goodlier man.

PROSPERO [To FERDINAND.]

Come on, obey!
Thy nerves° are in their infancy again
And have no vigor in them.

485

FERDINAND So they are.

My spirits, as in a dream, are all bound up.

490

457 ow'st ownest 471 gentle . . . fearful of noble birth and no coward 472 My . . . tutor am I to be instructed by my inferior 474 ward fighting posture 475 stick his wand 488 nerves sinews

My father's loss, the weakness which I feel,
The wrack of all my friends, not this man's threats
To whom I am subdued, are but light to me,
Might I but through my prison once a day
Behold this maid. All corners else o' th' earth
Let liberty make use of. Space enough
Have I in such a prison.

495

PROSPERO [Aside.]

It works. [To FERDINAND.] Come on.

[To ARIEL.]

Thou hast done well, fine Ariel! [To FERDINAND.] Follow me.

[To ARIEL.] Hark what thou else shalt do me.

MIRANDA

Be of comfort. 500

My father's of a better nature, sir,
Than he appears by speech. This is unwonted
Which now came from him.

PROSPERO Thou shalt be as free

As mountain winds; but then° exactly do
All points of my command.

ARIEL To th' syllable.

505

PROSPERO [To FERDINAND.]

Come, follow. [To MIRANDA.] Speak not for him.

Exeunt.

A C T I I

Scene I. [Another part of the island.]

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, GONZALO, ADRIAN, FRANCISCO, and others.

GONZALO

Beseech you, sir, be merry. You have cause
(So have we all) of joy; for our escape
Is much beyond our loss. Our hint of° woe
Is common; every day some sailor's wife,
The master of some merchant,° and the merchant,
Have just our theme of woe. But for the miracle,
I mean our preservation, few in millions
Can speak like us. Then wisely, good sir, weigh
Our sorrow with° our comfort.

ALONSO

Prithee, peace.

SEBASTIAN [Aside to ANTONIO.] He receives comfort 10 like cold porridge.°

ANTONIO [Aside to SEBASTIAN.] The visitor° will not give him o'er so.°

SEBASTIAN Look, he's winding up the watch of his wit; by and by it will strike.

15

GONZALO Sir—

SEBASTIAN [Aside to ANTONIO.] One. Tell.°

GONZALO

When every grief is entertained, that's° offered
Comes to th' entertainer—

504 then till then

II.i.3 hint of occasion for 5 master . . . merchant captain of some merchant ship 9 with against 10–11 He . . .
porridge “He” is Alonso; pun on “peace,” since porridge contained peas 12 visitor spiritual comforter 13 give . . . so release him so easily 17 One. Tell He has struck one. Keep count 18 that's that which is

SEBASTIAN A dollar. 20
 GONZALO Dolor comes to him, indeed. You have spoken truer than you purposed.
 SEBASTIAN You have taken it wiselier^o than I meant you should.
 GONZALO Therefore, my lord— 25
 ANTONIO Fie, what a spendthrift is he of his tongue!
 ALONSO I prithee, spare.^o
 GONZALO Well, I have done. But yet—
 SEBASTIAN He will be talking.
 ANTONIO Which, of he or Adrian, for a good wager, 30 first^o begins to crow?
 SEBASTIAN The old cock.^o
 ANTONIO The cock^orel.^o
 SEBASTIAN Done! The wager?
 ANTONIO A laughter.^o 35
 SEBASTIAN A match!
 ADRIAN Though this island seem to be desert—
 ANTONIO Ha, ha, ha!
 SEBASTIAN So, you're paid.
 ADRIAN Uninhabitable and almost inaccessible— 40
 SEBASTIAN Yet—
 ADRIAN Yet—
 ANTONIO He could not miss't.
 ADRIAN It must needs be of subtle, tender, and delicate temperance.^o 45
 ANTONIO Temperance was a delicate wench.
 SEBASTIAN Ay, and a subtle, as he most learnedly delivered.
 ADRIAN The air breathes upon us here most sweetly.
 SEBASTIAN As if it had lungs, and rotten ones. 50
 ANTONIO Or as 'twere perfumed by a fen.
 GONZALO Here is everything advantageous to life.
 ANTONIO True; save means to live.
 SEBASTIAN Of that there's none, or little.
 GONZALO How lush and lusty the grass looks! How 55
 green!
 ANTONIO The ground indeed is tawny.
 SEBASTIAN With an eye^o of green in't.
 ANTONIO He misses not much.
 SEBASTIAN No; he doth but mistake the truth totally. 60
 GONZALO But the rarity of it is—which is indeed almost beyond credit—
 SEBASTIAN As many vouched rarities are.
 GONZALO That our garments, being, as they were,
 drenched in the sea, hold, notwithstanding, their 65 freshness and glosses, being rather new-dyed than stained with salt water.
 ANTONIO If but one of his pockets could speak, would it not say he lies?^o
 SEBASTIAN Ay, or very falsely pocket up his report.^o 70
 GONZALO Methinks our garments are now as fresh as when we put them on first in Afric, at the marriage of the king's fair daughter Claribel to the King of Tunis.

23 wiselier i.e., understood my pun 27 spare spare your words 30–31 Which . . . first let's wager which of the two, Gonzalo or Adrian, will first 32 old cock Gonzalo 33 cock^orel young cock; i.e., Adrian 35 laughter the winner will have the laugh on the loser 45 temperance climate (in the next line, a girl's name) 58 eye spot (also perhaps Gonzalo's eye) 68–69 If . . . lies i.e., the insides of Gonzalo's pockets are stained 70 Ay . . . report unless the pocket were, like a false knave, to receive without resentment the imputation that it is unstained

SEBASTIAN 'Twas a sweet marriage, and we prosper
 well in our return. 75
 ADRIAN Tunis was never graced before with such a paragon to^o their queen.
 GONZALO Not since widow Dido's time.
 ANTONIO Widow? A pox o' that! How came that "widow" in? Widow Dido! 80
 SEBASTIAN What if he had said "widower Aeneas"^o too? Good Lord, how you take it!
 ADRIAN "Widow Dido," said you? You make me study of that. She was of Carthage, not of Tunis.
 GONZALO This Tunis, sir, was Carthage. 85
 ADRIAN Carthage?
 GONZALO I assure you, Carthage.
 ANTONIO His word is more than the miraculous harp.^o
 SEBASTIAN He hath raised the wall and houses too. 90
 ANTONIO What impossible matter will he make easy next?
 SEBASTIAN I think he will carry this island home in his pocket and give it his son for an apple.
 ANTONIO And, sowing the kernels of it in the sea, 95
 bring forth more islands.
 GONZALO Ay!
 ANTONIO Why, in good time.^o
 GONZALO [To ALONSO.] Sir, we were talking that our garments seem now as fresh as when we were at 100 Tunis at the marriage of your daughter, who is now
 queen.
 ANTONIO And the rarest that e'er came there.
 SEBASTIAN Bate,^o I beseech you, widow Dido.
 ANTONIO O, widow Dido? Ay, widow Dido! 105
 GONZALO Is not, sir, my doublet as fresh as the first day I wore it? I mean, in a sort.^o
 ANTONIO That "sort" was well fished for.
 GONZALO When I wore it at your daughter's marriage. 110
 ALONSO
 You cram these words into mine ears against
 The stomach of my sense.^o Would I had never Married my daughter there! For, coming thence,
 My son is lost; and, in my rate,^o she too,
 Who is so far from Italy removed 115
 I ne'er again shall see her. O thou mine heir
 Of Naples and of Milan, what strange fish
 Hath made his meal on thee?
 FRANCISCO Sir, he may live.
 I saw him beat the surges under him
 And ride upon their backs. He trod the water, 120
 Whose enmity he flung aside, and breasted
 The surge most swol'n that met him. His bold head
 'Bove the contentious waves he kept, and oared

77 to for 80–81 Widow Dido . . . "widower Aeneas" the point of the joke is that Dido was a widow, but one does not ordinarily think of her that way; and the same with Aeneas 88–89 miraculous harp of Amphion, which raised only the walls of Thebes; whereas Gonzalo has rebuilt the whole ancient city of Carthage by identifying it mistakenly with modern Tunis 98 Why . . . time hearing Gonzalo reaffirm his false statement about Tunis and Carthage, Antonio suggests that Gonzalo will indeed, at the first opportunity, carry this island home in his pocket 104 Bate except 107 in a sort so to speak 111–12 against . . . sense though my mind (or feelings) have no appetite for them 114 rate opinion

Himself with his good arms in lusty stroke
To th' shore, that o'er his° wave-worn basis bowed,° 125
As stooping to relieve him. I not doubt
He came alive to land.

ALONSO No, no, he's gone.

SEBASTIAN [To ALONSO.]

Sir, you may thank yourself for this great loss,
That would not bless our Europe with your daughter,
But rather loose her to an African, 130
Where she, at least, is banished from your eye
Who hath cause to wet the grief on't.

ALONSO Prithee, peace.

SEBASTIAN

You were kneeled to and importuned otherwise
By all of us; and the fair soul herself
Weighed, between loathness and obedience, at 135
Which end o' th' beam should bow.° We have lost your son,
I fear, forever. Milan and Naples have
Moe° widows in them of this business' making
Than we bring men to comfort them.
The fault's your own.

ALONSO So is the dear'st° o' th' loss. 140

GONZALO

My Lord Sebastian,
The truth you speak doth lack some gentleness,
And time to speak it in. You rub the sore
When you should bring the plaster.

SEBASTIAN Very well.

ANTONIO

And most chirurgically.° 145

GONZALO [To ALONSO.]

It is foul weather in us all, good sir,
When you are cloudy.

SEBASTIAN [Aside to ANTONIO.] Foul weather?

ANTONIO [Aside to SEBASTIAN.] Very foul.

GONZALO

Had I plantation° of this isle, my lord—

ANTONIO

He'd sow't with nettle seed.

SEBASTIAN Or docks, or mallows.

GONZALO

And were the king on't, what would I do? 150

SEBASTIAN

Scape being drunk for want of wine.

GONZALO

I' th' commonwealth I would by contraries°
Execute all things. For no kind of traffic°
Would I admit; no name of magistrate;
Letters° should not be known; riches, poverty, 155
And use of service,° none; contract, succession,°
Bourn,° bound of land, tilth,° vineyard, none;
No use of metal, corn, or wine, or oil;
No occupation; all men idle, all;

And women too, but innocent and pure; 160

No sovereignty.

SEBASTIAN Yet he would be king on't.

ANTONIO The latter end of his commonwealth forgets the beginning.

GONZALO

All things in common nature should produce
Without sweat or endeavor. Treason, felony, 165
Sword, pike, knife, gun, or need of any engine°
Would I not have; but nature should bring forth,
Of it° own kind, all foison,° all abundance,
To feed my innocent people.

SEBASTIAN No marrying 'mong his subjects? 170

ANTONIO None, man, all idle—whores and knaves.

GONZALO

I would with such perfection govern, sir,
T' excel the Golden Age.

SEBASTIAN [Loudly.] Save his majesty!

ANTONIO [Loudly.]

Long live Gonzalo!

GONZALO And—do you mark me, sir?

ALONSO

Prithee, no more. Thou dost talk nothing to me. 175

GONZALO I do well believe your highness; and did it to minister occasion° to these gentlemen, who are of such sensible° and nimble lungs that they always use to laugh at nothing.

ANTONIO 'Twas you we laughed at. 180

GONZALO Who in this kind of merry fooling am nothing to you; so you may continue, and laugh at nothing still.

ANTONIO What a blow was there given!

SEBASTIAN And° it had not fall'n flatlong.° 185

GONZALO You are gentlemen of brave mettle; you would lift the moon out of her sphere if she would continue in it five weeks without changing.

Enter ARIEL [invisible] playing solemn music.

SEBASTIAN We would so, and then go a-batfowling.°

ANTONIO Nay, good my lord, be not angry. 190

GONZALO No, I warrant you; I will not adventure
my discretion so weakly.° Will you laugh me asleep?
For I am very heavy.

ANTONIO Go sleep, and hear us.

[All sleep except ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, and ANTONIO.]

ALONSO

What, all so soon asleep? I wish mine eyes 195
Would, with themselves, shut up my thoughts. I find
They are inclined to do so.

SEBASTIAN Please you, sir,

Do not omit° the heavy offer of it.
It seldom visits sorrow; when it doth,
It is a comforter.

125 his its; wave-worn basis bowed the image is of a guardian cliff on the shore 135–36 Weighed . . . bow Claribel's unwillingness to marry was outweighed by her obedience to her father 138 Moe more 140 dear'st intensifies the meaning of the noun 145 chirurgically like a surgeon 148 plantation colonization (Antonio then puns by taking the word in its other sense) 152 contraries in contrast to the usual customs 153 traffic trade 155 Letters learning 156 service servants; succession inheritance 157 Bourn boundary; tilth agriculture

166 engine weapon 168 it its; foison abundance 177 minister occasion afford opportunity 178 sensible sensitive 185 And if; flatlong with the flat of the sword 189 We . . . a-batfowling We would use the moon for a lantern in order to hunt birds at night by attracting them with a light and beating them down with bats; i.e., in order to gull simpletons like you (?) 191–92 adventure . . . weakly risk my reputation for good sense because of your weak wit 198 omit neglect

Much feater^o than before. My brother's servants
Were then my fellows; now they are my men.

SEBASTIAN

But, for your conscience—

ANTONIO

Ay, sir, where lies that? If 'twere a kibe,^o
'Twould put me to my slipper; but I feel not
This deity in my bosom. Twenty consciences
That stand 'twixt me and Milan, candied be they
And melt, ere they molest! Here lies your brother,
No better than the earth he lies upon—
If he were that which now he's like, that's dead^o—
Whom I with this obedient steel (three inches of it)
Can lay to bed forever; whiles you, doing thus,
To the perpetual wink^o for aye might put
This ancient morsel, this Sir Prudence, who Should not upbraid our course. For all the rest,
They'll take suggestion as a cat laps milk;
They'll tell the clock^o to any business that
We say befits the hour.

SEBASTIAN

Thy case, dear friend,
Shall be my precedent. As thou got'st Milan,
I'll come by Naples. Draw thy sword. One stroke
Shall free thee from the tribute which thou payest,
And I the king shall love thee.

ANTONIO

Draw together;
And when I rear my hand, do you the like,
To fall it on Gonzalo. [They draw.]

SEBASTIAN

O, but one word!

Enter ARIEL [invisible] with music and song.

ARIEL

My master through his art foresees the danger
That you, his friend, are in, and sends me forth
(For else his project dies) to keep them living.

Sings in Gonzalo's ear.

While you here do snoring lie,
Open-eyed conspiracy
His time doth take.
If of life you keep a care,
Shake off slumber and beware.
Awake, awake!

ANTONIO

Then let us both be sudden.

GONZALO

[Wakes.] Now good angels
Preserve the king!

[The others wake.]

ALONSO

Why, how now? Ho, awake! Why are you drawn?
Wherefore this ghastly looking?

GONZALO

What's the matter?

SEBASTIAN

Whiles we stood here securing your repose,
Even now, we heard a hollow burst of bellowing
Like bulls, or rather lions. Did't not wake you?
It struck mine ear most terribly.

ALONSO

I heard nothing.

ANTONIO

O, 'twas a din to fright a monster's ear,
To make an earthquake! Sure it was the roar
Of a whole herd of lions.

ALONSO

Heard you this, Gonzalo?

320

280

GONZALO

Upon mine honor, sir, I heard a humming,
And that a strange one too, which did awake me.
I shook you, sir, and cried. As mine eyes opened,
I saw their weapons drawn. There was a noise,
That's verily.^o 'Tis best we stand upon our guard,
Or that we quit this place. Let's draw our weapons.

325

ALONSO

Lead off this ground, and let's make further search
For my poor son.

290

GONZALO

Heavens keep him from these beasts!
For he is, sure, i' th' island.

ALONSO

Lead away.

ARIEL

Prospero my lord shall know what I have done.
So, king, go safely on to seek thy son.

330

295

Scene II. [Another part of the island.]

Enter CALIBAN with a burden of wood. A noise of thunder heard.

CALIBAN

300

All the infections that the sun sucks up
From bogs, fens, flats, on Prosper fall, and make him
By inchmeal^o a disease! His spirits hear me,
And yet I needs must curse. But they'll nor pinch,
Fright me with urchin shows,^o pitch me i' th' mire,
Nor lead me, like a firebrand,^o in the dark
Out of my way, unless he bid 'em. But
For every trifle are they set upon me;
Sometime like apes that mow^o and chatter at me,
And after bite me; then like hedgehogs which Lie tumbling in my barefoot way and mount
Their pricks at my footfall; sometime am I
All wound with adders, who with cloven tongues
Do hiss me into madness.

5

305

10

Enter TRINCULO.

Lo, now, lo!

310

Here comes a spirit of his, and to torment me
For bringing wood in slowly. I'll fall flat.
Perchance he will not mind me.

15

[Lies down.]

TRINCULO Here's neither bush nor shrub to bear off^o any weather at all, and another storm brewing; I hear it sing i' th' wind. Yond same black cloud, yond huge one, looks like a foul bombard^o that would shed his liquor. If it should thunder as it did before, I know not where to hide my head. Yond same cloud cannot choose but fall by pailfuls. What have we here? A man or a fish? Dead or alive? A 25

325 verily the truth

II.ii.3 By inchmeal inch by inch 5 urchin shows impish apparitions 6 like a firebrand in the form of a will-o'-the-wisp 9 mow make faces 18 bear off ward off 21 bombard large leather jug

277 feater more becomingly 280 kibe chilblain on the heel
286 that's dead that is, if he were dead 289 wink eye-shut
293 tell the clock say yes

fish! He smells like a fish; a very ancient and fishlike smell; a kind of not of the newest Poor John.^o A strange fish! Were I in England now, as once I was, and had but this fish painted,^o not a holiday fool there but would give a piece of silver. There would this monster make a man;^o any strange beast there makes a man. When they will not give a doit^o to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. Legged like a man! And his fins like arms! Warm, o' my troth! I do now let loose my opinion, hold it no longer. This is no fish, but an islander, that hath lately suffered by a thunderbolt. [Thunder.] Alas, the storm is come again! My best way is to creep under his gaberdine; there is no other shelter hereabout. Misery acquaints a man with strange bedfellows. I will here shroud till the dregs of the storm be past.

[Creeps under Caliban's garment.]

Enter STEPHANO, singing, [a bottle in his hand.]

STEPHANO I shall no more to sea, to sea;

Here shall I die ashore.

This is a very scurvy tune to sing at a man's funeral.
Well, here's my comfort.

Drinks.

The master, the swabber, the boatswain, and I,

The gunner, and his mate,

Loved Mall, Meg, and Marian, and Margery,

But none of us cared for Kate.

For she had a tongue with a tang,

Would cry to a sailor, "Go hang!"

She loved not the savor of tar nor of pitch;

Yet a tailor might scratch her where'er she did itch.

Then to sea, boys, and let her go hang!

This is a scurvy tune too; but here's my comfort.

Drinks.

CALIBAN Do not torment me! O!

STEPHANO What's the matter? Have we devils here? Do you put tricks upon's with savages and men of Inde, ha? I have not 'scaped drowning to be afeard now of your four legs. For it hath been said, "As proper a man as ever went on four legs cannot make him give ground"; and it shall be said so again, while Stephano breathes at' nostrils.^o

CALIBAN The spirit torments me. O!

STEPHANO This is some monster of the isle, with four legs, who hath got, as I take it, an ague. Where the devil should he learn our language? I will give him some relief, if it be but for that. If I can recover^o him, and keep him tame, and get to Naples with him, he's a present for any emperor that ever trod on neat's leather.^o

CALIBAN Do not torment me, prithee; I'll bring my wood home faster.

STEPHANO He's in his fit now and does not talk after the wisest. He shall taste of my bottle; if he have never drunk wine afore, it will go near to remove his fit. If I can recover him and keep him tame, I will not take too much^o for him. He shall pay for him that hath him, and that soundly.

CALIBAN Thou dost me yet but little hurt. Thou wilt anon;^o I know it by thy trembling.^o Now Prosper works upon thee.

STEPHANO Come on your ways, open your mouth; here is that which will give language to you, cat.^o Open your mouth. This will shake your shaking, I can tell you, and that soundly. [Gives CALIBAN drink.] You cannot tell who's your friend. Open your chaps^o again.

TRINCULO I should know that voice. It should be—but he is drowned; and these are devils. O, defend me!

STEPHANO Four legs and two voices—a most delicate monster! His forward voice now is to speak well of his friend; his backward voice is to utter foul speeches and to detract. If all the wine in my bottle will recover him, I will help his ague. Come! [Gives drink.] Amen! I will pour some in thy other mouth.

TRINCULO Stephano!

STEPHANO Doth thy other mouth call me? Mercy, mercy! This is a devil, and no monster. I will leave him; I have no long spoon.^o

TRINCULO Stephano! If thou beest Stephano, touch me and speak to me; for I am Trinculo—be not afeard—thy good friend Trinculo.

STEPHANO If thou beest Trinculo, come forth. I'll pull thee by the lesser legs. If any be Trinculo's legs, these are they. [Draws him out from under Caliban's garment.]

Thou art very Trinculo indeed! How cam'st thou to be the siege^o of this mooncalf?^o Can he vent Trinculos?

TRINCULO I took him to be killed with a thunder-stroke. But art thou not drowned, Stephano? I hope now thou art not drowned. Is the storm overblown? I hid me under the dead mooncalf's gaberdine for fear of the storm. And art thou living, Stephano? O Stephano, two Neapolitans scaped!

STEPHANO Prithee do not turn me about; my stomach is not constant.

CALIBAN [Aside.]

These be fine things, and if^o they be not sprites.

That's a brave god and bears celestial liquor.

I will kneel to him.

STEPHANO How didst thou scape? How cam'st thou hither? Swear by this bottle how thou cam'st hither. I escaped upon a butt of sack which the sailors heaved o'erboard—by this bottle which I made of the bark of a tree with mine own hands since I was cast ashore.

CALIBAN I'll swear upon that bottle to be thy true subject, for the liquor is not earthly.

STEPHANO Here! Swear then how thou escap'dst.

TRINCULO Swum ashore, man, like a duck. I can swim like a duck, I'll be sworn.

STEPHANO Here, kiss the book. [Gives him drink.] Though thou canst swim like a duck, thou art made like a goose.

77-78 not . . . much too much will not be enough anon soon; trembling Trinculo is shaking with fear cat alluding to the proverb "Liquor will make a cat talk"
87 chaps jaws 100 long spoon alluding to the proverb "He who sups with (i.e., from the same dish as) the devil must have a long spoon" 108 siege excrement; mooncalf monstrosity 117 and if if

27 Poor John dried hake 29 painted i.e., as a sign hung outside a booth at a fair 31 make a man pun: make a man's fortune 32 doit smallest coin 63 at' nostrils at the nostrils 68 recover cure 70-71 neat's leather cowhide

TRINCULO O Stephano, hast any more of this?

STEPHANO The whole butt, man. My cellar is in a rock by th' seaside, where my wine is hid. How now, 135 mooncalf? How does thine ague?

CALIBAN Hast thou not dropped from heaven?

STEPHANO Out o' th' moon, I do assure thee. I was the Man i' th' Moon when time was.°

CALIBAN

I have seen thee in her, and I do adore thee. 140

My mistress showed me thee, and thy dog, and thy bush.°

STEPHANO Come, swear to that; kiss the book. [Gives him drink.] I will furnish it anon with new contents. Swear.

[CALIBAN drinks.]

TRINCULO By this good light, this is a very shallow 145 monster! I afeard of him? A very weak monster! The Man i' th' Moon? A most poor credulous monster! Well drawn,° monster, in good sooth!

CALIBAN

I'll show thee every fertile inch o' th' island;

And I will kiss thy foot. I prithee, be my god. 150

TRINCULO, By this light, a most perfidious and drunken monster! When's god's asleep, he'll rob his bottle.

CALIBAN

I'll kiss thy foot. I'll swear myself thy subject.

STEPHANO Come on then. Down, and swear! 155

TRINCULO I shall laugh myself to death at this puppy-headed monster. A most scurvy monster! I could find in my heart to beat him—

STEPHANO Come, kiss.

TRINCULO But that the poor monster's in drink. An 160 abominable monster!

CALIBAN

I'll show thee the best springs; I'll pluck thee berries; I'll fish for thee, and get thee wood enough.

A plague upon the tyrant that I serve!

I'll bear him no more sticks, but follow thee, 165 Thou wondrous man.

TRINCULO A most ridiculous monster, to make a wonder of a poor drunkard!

CALIBAN

I prithee let me bring thee where crabs° grow;

And I with my long nails will dig thee pignuts,° 170

Show thee a jay's nest, and instruct thee how

To snare the nimble marmoset. I'll bring thee

To clust'ring filberts, and sometimes I'll get thee

Young scamels° from the rock. Wilt thou go with me?

STEPHANO I prithee now, lead the way without any 175 more talking. Trinculo, the king and all our company else being drowned, we will inherit here. Here, bear my bottle. Fellow Trinculo, we'll fill him by and by again.

CALIBAN sings drunkenly.

CALIBAN Farewell, master; farewell, farewell! 180

139 when time was once upon a time 141-42 thee . . . bush the Man in the Moon was banished there, according to legend, for gathering brushwood with his dog on Sunday 148 Well drawn a good pull at the bottle 169 crabs crab-apples 170 pignuts earthnuts 174 scamels perhaps a misprint for "seamels" or "seamews," a kind of sea bird

TRINCULO A howling monster! A drunken monster!

CALIBAN

No more dams° I'll make for fish,

Nor fetch in firing

At requiring,

Nor scrape trenchering,° nor wash dish. 185

'Ban, 'Ban, Ca—Caliban

Has a new master. Get a new man!

Freedom, high day! High day, freedom! Freedom, high day, freedom!

STEPHANO O brave monster! Lead the way. Exeunt. 190

ACT III

Scene I. [In front of Prospero's cell.]

Enter FERDINAND, bearing a log.

FERDINAND

There be some sports are painful, and their labor Delight in them sets off;° some kinds of baseness

Are nobly undergone, and most poor matters

Point to rich ends. This my mean task

Would be as heavy to me as odious, but 5

The mistress which I serve quickens° what's dead

And makes my labors pleasures. O, she is

Ten times more gentle than her father's crabbed;

And he's composed of harshness. I must remove

Some thousands of these logs and pile them up, 10

Upon a sore injunction.° My sweet mistress

Weeps when she sees me work, and says such baseness

Had never like executor. I forget;°

But these sweet thoughts do even refresh my labors,

Most busiest when I do it.°

Enter MIRANDA; and PROSPERO [behind, unseen].

MIRANDA

Alas, now pray you, 15

Work not so hard! I would the lightning had

Burnt up those logs that you are enjoined to pile!

Pray set it down and rest you. When this burns,

'Twill weep° for having wearied you. My father

Is hard at study; pray now rest yourself; 20

He's safe for these three hours.

FERDINAND

O most dear mistress,

The sun will set before I shall discharge

What I must strive to do.

MIRANDA

If you'll sit down,

I'll bear your logs the while. Pray give me that;

I'll carry it to the pile.

FERDINAND

No, precious creature, 25

I had rather crack my sinews, break my back,

Than you should such dishonor undergo

While I sit lazy by.

182 dams to catch fish and keep them 185 trenchering trenchers, wooden plates

III.i.2 sets off cancels 6 quickens brings to life 11 sore injunction severe command 13 forget i.e., my task 15 Most . . . it i.e., my thoughts are busiest when I am (the Folio's "busie lest" has been variously emended; "it" may refer to "task," line 4, the understood object in line 13) 19 weep i.e., exude resin

MIRANDA It would become me
As well as it does you; and I should do it
With much more ease; for my good will is to it, 30
And yours it is against.

PROSPERO [Aside.] Poor worm, thou art infected!
This visitation^o shows it.

MIRANDA You look wearily.

FERDINAND
No, noble mistress, 'tis fresh morning with me
When you are by at night.^o I do beseech you,
Chiefly that I might set it in my prayers, 35
What is your name?

MIRANDA Miranda. O my father,
I have broke your hest^o to say so!

FERDINAND Admired Miranda!^o
Indeed the top of admiration, worth
What's dearest to the world! Full many a lady
I have eyed with best regard, and many a time 40
Th' harmony of their tongues hath into bondage
Brought my too diligent ear. For several virtues
Have I liked several women; never any
With so full soul but some defect in her
Did quarrel with the noblest grace she owed,^o 45
And put it to the foil.^o But you, O you,
So perfect and so peerless, are created
Of every creature's best.

MIRANDA I do not know
One of my sex; no woman's face remember,
Save, from my glass, mine own. Nor have I seen 50
More that I may call men than you, good friend,
And my dear father. How features are abroad
I am skillless^o of; but, by my modesty
(The jewel in my dower), I would not wish
Any companion in the world but you; 55
Nor can imagination form a shape,
Besides yourself, to like of.^o But I prattle
Something too wildly, and my father's precepts
I therein do forget.

FERDINAND I am, in my condition,
A prince, Miranda; I do think, a king 60
(I would not so), and would no more endure
This wooden slavery than to suffer
The fleshfly blow my mouth. Hear my soul speak!
The very instant that I saw you, did
My heart fly to your service; there resides, 65
To make me slave to it; and for your sake
Am I this patient log-man.

MIRANDA Do you love me?

FERDINAND
O heaven, O earth, bear witness to this sound,
And crown what I profess with kind event^o 70
If I speak true! If hollowly, invert
What best is boded me^o to mischief! I,
Beyond all limit of what else i' th' world,
Do love, prize, honor you.

MIRANDA I am a fool
To weep at what I am glad of.

32 visitation (1) visit (2) attack of plague (referring to metaphor of "infected") 34 at night i.e., even at night when I am very tired 37 hest command; Admired Miranda admired means "to be wondered at"; the Latin Miranda means "wonderful" 45 owed owned 46 put . . . foil defeated it 53 skillless ignorant 57 like of like 69 event outcome 71 What . . . me whatever good fortune fate has in store for me

PROSPERO [Aside.] Fair encounter
Of two most rare affections! Heavens rain grace 75
On that which breeds between 'em!

FERDINAND Wherefore weep you?

MIRANDA
At mine unworthiness, that dare not offer
What I desire to give, and much less take
What I shall die to want.^o But this is trifling;^o
And all the more it seeks to hide itself, 80
The bigger bulk it shows. Hence, bashful cunning,
And prompt me, plain and holy innocence!
I am your wife, if you will marry me;
If not, I'll die your maid. To be your fellow^o
You may deny me; but I'll be your servant, 85
Whether you will or no.

FERDINAND My mistress, dearest,
And I thus humble ever.

MIRANDA My husband then?

FERDINAND
Ay, with a heart as willing
As bondage e'er of freedom.^o Here's my hand.

MIRANDA
And mine, with my heart in't; and now farewell 90
Till half an hour hence.

FERDINAND A thousand thousand!
Exeunt [FERDINAND and MIRANDA in different directions].

PROSPERO
So glad of this as they I cannot be,
Who are surprised withal;^o but my rejoicing
At nothing can be more. I'll to my book;
For yet ere suppertime must I perform 95
Much business appertaining.^o Exit.

Scene II. [Another part of the island.]

Enter CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO.

STEPHANO Tell not me! When the butt is out, we will drink water; not a drop before. Therefore bear up and board 'em!^o Servant monster, drink to me.

TRINCULO Servant monster? The folly of this island!
They say there's but five upon this isle; we are three 5 of them. If th' other two be brained like us, the state totters.

STEPHANO Drink, servant monster, when I bid thee;
thy eyes are almost set in thy head.

TRINCULO Where should they be set else? He were a 10 brave monster indeed if they were set in his tail.

STEPHANO My man-monster hath drowned his tongue in sack. For my part, the sea cannot drown me.
I swam, ere I could recover the shore, five-and-thirty leagues off and on, by this light. Thou shalt be my 15 lieutenant, monster, or my standard.^o

TRINCULO Your lieutenant, if you list;^o he's no standard.

STEPHANO We'll not run,^o Monsieur Monster.

79 to want if I lack; trifling i.e., to speak in riddles like this 84 fellow equal 89 of freedom i.e., to win freedom 93 withal by it 96 appertaining i.e., to my plan
III.ii.2-3 bear . . . 'em i.e., drink up 16 standard standard-bearer, ensign (pun, since Caliban is so drunk he cannot stand) 17 if you list if it please you (with pun on list as pertaining to a ship that leans over to one side)

TRINCULO Nor go° neither; but you'll lie° like dogs, 20 and yet say nothing neither.

STEPHANO Mooncalf, speak once in thy life, if thou beest a good mooncalf.

CALIBAN How does thy honor? Let me lick thy shoe.
I'll not serve him; he is not valiant. 25

TRINCULO Thou liest, most ignorant monster; I am in case° to justle° a constable. Why, thou deboshed° fish thou, was there ever man a coward that hath drunk so much sack as I today? Wilt thou tell a monstrous lie, being but half a fish and half a monster? 30

CALIBAN Lo, how he mocks me! Wilt thou let him,
my lord?

TRINCULO "Lord" quoth he? That a monster should be such a natural!°

CALIBAN
Lo, lo, again! Bite him to death, I prithee. 35

STEPHANO Trinculo, keep a good tongue in your head. If you prove a mutineer—the next tree!° The poor monster's my subject, and he shall not suffer indignity.

CALIBAN
I thank my noble lord. Wilt thou be pleased 40
To hearken once again to the suit I made to thee?

STEPHANO Marry,° will I. Kneel and repeat it; I will stand, and so shall Trinculo.

Enter ARIEL, invisible.

CALIBAN
As I told thee before, I am subject to a tyrant,
A sorcerer, that by his cunning hath 45
Cheated me of the island.

ARIEL
Thou liest.

CALIBAN Thou liest, thou jesting monkey thou!
I would my valiant master would destroy thee.
I do not lie.

STEPHANO Trinculo, if you trouble him any more 50 in's tale, by this hand, I will supplant some of your teeth.

TRINCULO Why, I said nothing.

STEPHANO Mum then, and no more. Proceed.

CALIBAN
I say by sorcery he got this isle; 55
From me he got it. If thy greatness will Revenge it on him—for I know thou dar'st,
But this thing° dare not—

STEPHANO That's most certain.

CALIBAN
Thou shalt be lord of it, and I'll serve thee. 60

STEPHANO
How now shall this be compassed?
Canst thou bring me to the party?

CALIBAN
Yea, yea, my lord! I'll yield him thee asleep,
Where thou mayst knock a nail into his head.

ARIEL Thou liest; thou canst not. 65

CALIBAN

What a pied° ninny's this! Thou scurvy patch!°
I do beseech thy greatness, give him blows
And take his bottle from him. When that's gone,
He shall drink naught but brine, for I'll not show him
Where the quick freshes° are. 70

STEPHANO Trinculo, run into no further danger!
Interrupt the monster one word further and, by this hand, I'll turn my mercy out o' doors and make a stockfish° of thee.

TRINCULO Why, what did I? I did nothing. I'll go 75 farther off.

STEPHANO Didst thou not say he lied?

ARIEL Thou liest.

STEPHANO Do I so? Take thou that! [Strikes TRIN-
CULO.] As you like this, give me the lie another time. 80

TRINCULO I did not give the lie. Out o' your wits, and hearing too? A pox o' your bottle! This can sack and drinking do. A murrain° on your monster, and the devil take your fingers!

CALIBAN Ha, ha, ha! 85

STEPHANO Now forward with your tale. [To TRINCULO.] Prithee, stand further off.

CALIBAN
Beat him enough. After a little time
I'll beat him too.

STEPHANO Stand farther. Come, proceed.

CALIBAN
Why, as I told thee, 'tis a custom with him 90
I' th' afternoon to sleep. There thou mayst brain him,
Having first seized his books, or with a log
Batter his skull, or paunch° him with a stake,
Or cut his wezand° with thy knife. Remember
First to possess his books; for without them 95
He's but a sot,° as I am, nor hath not
One spirit to command. They all do hate him
As rootedly as I. Burn but his books.
He has brave utensils° (for so he calls them)
Which, when he has a house, he'll deck withal. 100

And that most deeply to consider is
The beauty of his daughter. He himself
Calls her a nonpareil. I never saw a woman
But only Sycorax my dam and she;
But she as far surpasseth Sycorax 105
As great'st does least.

STEPHANO Is it so brave a lass?

CALIBAN
Ay, lord. She will become thy bed, I warrant,
And bring thee forth brave brood.

STEPHANO Monster, I will kill this man. His daughter and I will be king and queen—save our graces!—and 110 Trinculo and thyself shall be viceroys. Dost thou like the plot, Trinculo?

TRINCULO Excellent.

STEPHANO Give me thy hand. I am sorry I beat thee;
but while thou liv'st, keep a good tongue in thy head. 115

19–20 run, lie with puns on secondary meanings: "make water," "excrete" 20 go walk 27 case fit condition; justle jostle; deboshed debauched 34 natural idiot 37 the next tree i.e., you will be hanged 42 Marry an expletive, from "By the Virgin Mary" 58 this thing Trinculo

66 pied referring to Trinculo's parti-colored jester's costume; patch clown 70 quick freshes living springs of fresh water 74 stockfish dried cod, softened by beating 83 murrain plague (that infects cattle) 93 paunch stab in the belly 94 wezand windpipe 96 sot fool 99 brave utensils fine furnishings (pronounced "útensils")

CALIBAN

Within this half hour will he be asleep.

Wilt thou destroy him then?

STEPHANO

Ay, on mine honor.

ARIEL

This will I tell my master.

CALIBAN

Thou mak'st me merry; I am full of pleasure.

Let us be jocund. Will you troll the catch°

You taught me but whilere?°

STEPHANO At thy request, monster, I will do reason, any reason.° Come on, Trinculo, let us sing.

Sings.

Flout 'em and scout° 'em

And scout 'em and flout 'em!

Thought is free.

CALIBAN

That's not the tune.

ARIEL plays the tune on a tabor° and pipe.

STEPHANO What is this same?

TRINCULO This is the tune of our catch, played by the picture of Nobody.°STEPHANO If thou beest a man, show thyself in thy likeness. If thou beest a devil, take't as thou list.

TRINCULO O, forgive me my sins!

STEPHANO He that dies pays all debts. I defy thee.
Mercy upon us!

CALIBAN

Art thou afeard?

STEPHANO No, monster, not I.

CALIBAN

Be not afeard; the isle is full of noises,
Sounds and sweet airs that give delight and hurt not.
Sometimes a thousand twangling instruments
Will hum about mine ears; and sometime voices
That, if I then had waked after long sleep,
Will make me sleep again; and then, in dreaming,
The clouds methought would open and show riches
Ready to drop upon me, that, when I waked,
I cried to dream again.STEPHANO This will prove a brave kingdom to me, where I shall have my music for nothing.

CALIBAN

When Prospero is destroyed.

STEPHANO That shall be by and by; I remember the story.TRINCULO The sound is going away; let's follow it, and after do our work.STEPHANO Lead, monster; we'll follow. I would I could see this taborer; he lays it on.TRINCULO [To CALIBAN.] Wilt come?° I'll follow Stephano.

120 troll the catch sing the round 121 but whilere just now
122-23 reason, any reason i.e., anything within reason 124 scout jeer at 127 s.d. tabor small drum worn at the side 130 Nobody alluding to the picture of No-body—a man all head, legs, and arms, but without trunk—on the title page of the anonymous comedy No-body and Some-body 156 Wilt come Caliban lingers because the other two are being distracted from his purpose by the music

Scene III. [Another part of the island.]

Enter ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, ANTONIO, GONZALO,
ADRIAN, FRANCISCO, &c.

GONZALO

By'r Lakin,° I can go no further, sir;
My old bones aches. Here's a maze trod indeed
Through forthrights and meanders.° By your patience,
I needs must rest me.

ALONSO

Old lord, I cannot blame thee,
Who am myself attached° with weariness
To th' dulling of my spirits. Sit down and rest.
Even here I will put off my hope, and keep it
No longer for my flatterer. He is drowned
Whom thus we stray to find; and the sea mocks
Our frustrate search on land. Well, let him go.

ANTONIO [Aside to SEBASTIAN.]

I am right glad that he's so out of hope.
Do not for one repulse forgo the purpose
That you resolved t' effect.SEBASTIAN [Aside to ANTONIO.] The next advantage
Will we take throughly.°ANTONIO [Aside to SEBASTIAN.] Let it be tonight;
For, now they are oppressed with travel, they
Will not nor cannot use such vigilance
As when they are fresh.SEBASTIAN [Aside to ANTONIO.] I say tonight. No more.

*Solemn and strange music; and PROSPERO on the top° (invisible). Enter several strange SHAPES, bringing in a banquet; and dance about it with gentle actions of salutations;
and, inviting the king [ALONSO] &c. to eat, they depart.*

ALONSO

What harmony is this? My good friends, hark!

GONZALO

Marvelous sweet music!

ALONSO

Give us kind keepers,° heavens! What were these?

SEBASTIAN

A living drollery.° Now I will believe
That there are unicorns; that in Arabia
There is one tree, the phoenix' throne; one phoenix
At this hour reigning there.

ANTONIO

I'll believe both;
And what does else want credit,° come to me,
And I'll be sworn 'tis true. Travelers ne'er did lie,
Though fools at home condemn 'em.

GONZALO

If in Naples
I should report this now, would they believe me
If I should say I saw such islanders?
(For certes these are people of the island)
Who, though they are of monstrous shape, yet note,
Their manners are more gentle, kind, than of
Our human generation you shall find Many—nay, almost any.

PROSPERO [Aside.] Honest lord,

III.iii.i By'r Lakin by our Lady 3 forthrights and meanders straight and winding paths 5 attached seized 14 thoroughly thoroughly 17 s.d. the top upper stage(or perhaps a playing area above it) 20 kind keepers guardian angels 21 drollery puppet show 25 credit believing

- Thou hast said well; for some of you there present 35
Are worse than devils.
- ALONSO I cannot too much muse°
Such shapes, such gesture, and such sound, expressing (Although they want the use of tongue) a kind Of excellent dumb discourse.
- PROSPERO [Aside.] Praise in departing.°
- FRANCISCO
They vanished strangely.
- SEBASTIAN No matter, since 40
They have left their viands behind; for we have stomachs.
Will't please you taste of what is here?
- ALONSO Not I.
- GONZALO
Faith, sir, you need not fear. When we were boys,
Who would believe that there were mountaineers Dewlapp'd° like bulls, whose throats had hanging at
'em 45
Wallets of flesh? Or that there were such men Whose heads stood in their breasts? Which now we find
Each putter-out of five for one° will bring us
Good warrant of.
- ALONSO I will stand to, and feed;
Although my last, no matter, since I feel 50
The best is past. Brother, my lord the duke, Stand to, and do as we.
- Thunder and lightning. Enter ARIEL, like a harpy; claps his wings upon the table; and with a quaint device° the banquet vanishes.*
- ARIEL
You are three men of sin, whom destiny—
That hath to instrument° this lower world
And what is in't—the never-surfeited sea 55
Hath caused to belch up you and on this island,
Where man doth not inhabit, you 'mongst men
Being most unfit to live. I have made you mad;
And even with suchlike valor° men hang and drown
Their proper selves. [ALONSO, SEBASTIAN, &c. draw their swords.] You fools! I and my fellows 60
Are ministers of Fate. The elements,
Of whom your swords are tempered,° may as well
Wound the loud winds, or with bemocked-at stabs
Kill the still-closing° waters, as diminish
One dowle° that's in my plume.° My fellow ministers 65
Are like invulnerable. If you could hurt,°
Your swords are now too massy° for your strengths
And will not be uplifted. But remember
(For that's my business to you) that you three
From Milan did supplant good Prospero; 70
- Exposed unto the sea, which hath requit it,°
Him and his innocent child; for which foul deed
The pow'rs, delaying, not forgetting, have Incensed the seas and shores, yea, all the creatures,
Against your peace. Thee of thy son, Alonso, 75
They have bereft; and do pronounce by me
Ling'ring perdition (worse than any death
Can be at once) shall step by step attend
You and your ways; whose wraths to guard you from,
Which here, in this most desolate isle, else falls 80
Upon your heads, is nothing but heart's sorrow°
And a clear life ensuing.
- He vanishes in thunder; then, to soft music, enter the SHAPES again, and dance with mocks and mows,° and carrying out the table.*
- PROSPERO
Bravely the figure of this harpy hast thou
Performed, my Ariel; a grace it had, devouring.°
Of my instruction hast thou nothing bated° 85
In what thou hadst to say. So, with good life°
And observation strange,° my meaner ministers°
Their several kinds have done.° My high charms work,
And these, mine enemies, are all knit up
In their distractions. They now are in my pow'r; 90
And in these fits I leave them, while I visit
Young Ferdinand, whom they suppose is drowned,
And his and mine loved darling. [Exit above.]
- GONZALO
I' th' name of something holy, sir, why stand you
In this strange stare?
- ALONSO O, it is monstrous, monstrous! 95
Methought the billows spoke and told me of it;
The winds did sing it to me; and the thunder,
That deep and dreadful organ pipe, pronounced
The name of Prosper; it did bass my trespass.°
Therefore my son i' th' ooze is bedded; and 100
I'll seek him deeper than e'er plummet sounded
And with him there lie mudded. Exit.
- SEBASTIAN But one fiend at a time,
I'll fight their legions o'er!°
- ANTONIO I'll be thy second.
Exeunt [SEBASTIAN and ANTONIO].
- GONZALO
All three of them are desperate; their great guilt,
Like poison given to work a great time after, 105
Now 'gins to bite the spirits. I do beseech you,
That are of suppler joints, follow them swiftly
And hinder them from what this ecstasy°
May now provoke them to.
- ADRIAN Follow, I pray you.
Exeunt omnes.

36 muse wonder at 39 Praise in departing Save your praise for the end 45 Dewlapp'd with skin hanging from the neck (like mountaineers with goiter) 48 putter-out . . .
one traveler who insures himself by depositing a sum of money to be repaid fivefold if he returns safely (i.e., any ordinary traveler will confirm nowadays those reports we used to think fanciful) 52 s.d. quaint device ingenious device (of stage mechanism) 54 to instrument as its instrument 59 suchlike valor i.e., the courage that comes of madness 62 tempered composed 64 still-closing ever closing again (as soon as wounded) 65 dowle bit of down; plume plumage 66 If . . . hurt even if you could hurt us 67 massy heavy

71 requit it avenged that crime 81 nothing . . . sorrow only repentance (will protect you from the wrath of these powers) 82 s.d. mocks and mows mocking gestures and grimaces 84 devouring i.e., in making the banquet disappear 85 bated omitted 86 good life good lifelike acting 87 observation strange remarkable attention to my wishes;
meaner ministers i.e., inferior to Ariel 88 Their . . . done have acted the parts their natures suited them for 99 bass my trespass i.e., made me understand my trespass by turning it into music for which the thunder provided the bass part 103 o'er one after another to the last 108 ecstasy madness

A C T I V

Scene I. [In front of Prospero's cell.]Enter PROSPERO, FERDINAND, and MIRANDA.

PROSPERO

If I have too austere^{ly} punished you,
 Your compensation makes amends; for I
 Have given you here a third of mine own life,
 Or that for which I live; who once again
 I tender to thy hand. All thy vexations
 Were but my trials of thy love, and thou
 Hast strangely^o stood the test. Here, afore heaven,
 I ratify this my rich gift. O Ferdinand,
 Do not smile at me that I boast her off,^o
 For thou shalt find she will outstrip all praise
 And make it halt^o behind her.

FERDINAND

I do believe it

Against an oracle.^o

PROSPERO

Then, as my gift, and thine own acquisition Worthily purchased, take my daughter. But If thou dost break her virgin-knot before
 All sanctimonious^o ceremonies may
 With full and holy rite be minist[']red,
 No sweet aspersion^o shall the heavens let fall
 To make this contract grow;^o but barren hate,
 Sour-eyed disdain, and discord shall bestrew
 The union of your bed with weeds so loathly
 That you shall hate it both. Therefore take heed,
 As Hymen's lamps shall light you.^o

FERDINAND

As I hope

For quiet days, fair issue, and long life,
 With such love as 'tis now, the murkiest den,
 The most opportune^o place, the strong'st suggestion
 Our worser genius can,^o shall never melt
 Mine honor into lust, to take away
 The edge^o of that day's celebration
 When I shall think or Phoebus' steeds are foundered^o 30
 Or Night kept chained below.^o

PROSPERO

Fairly spoke.

Sit then and talk with her; she is thine own.
 What, Ariel!^o My industrious servant, Ariel!

Enter ARIEL.

ARIEL

What would my potent master? Here I am.

PROSPERO

Thou and thy meaner fellows your last service
 Did worthily perform; and I must use you
 In such another trick. Go bring the rabble,^o
 O'er whom I give thee pow'r, here to this place.

IV.i.7 strangely wonderfully 9 boast her off includes perhaps the idea of showing her off 11 halt limp 12 Against an oracle though an oracle should declare otherwise 16 sanctimonious holy 18 aspersion blessing (like rain on crops) 19 grow become fruitful 23 As Hymen's . . . you i.e., as earnestly as you pray that the torch of the god of marriage shall burn without smoke (a good omen for wedded happiness) 26 opportune pronounced "oppórtune" 27 Our . . . can our evil spirit can offer 29 edge keen enjoyment 30 foundered lamed 30-31 or Phoebus' . . . below i.e., that either day will never end or night will never come 33 What, Ariel summoning Ariel 37 rabble "thy meaner fellows"

Incite them to quick motion; for I must Bestow upon the eyes of this young couple
 Some vanity of^o mine art. It is my promise,
 And they expect it from me.

40

ARIEL

Presently?

PROSPERO

Ay, with a twink.

ARIEL

Before you can say "Come" and "Go,"
 And breathe twice and cry, "So, so,"
 Each one, tripping on his toe,
 Will be here with mop and mow.^o
 Do you love me, master? No?

45

PROSPERO

Dearly, my delicate Ariel. Do not approach
 Till thou dost hear me call.

10

ARIEL

Well; I conceive.^o Exit. 50

PROSPERO

Look thou be true.^o Do not give dalliance
 Too much the rein; the strongest oaths are straw
 To th' fire i' th' blood. Be more abstemious,
 Or else good night your vow!

15

FERDINAND

I warrant you, sir.

The white cold virgin snow upon my heart^o
 Abates the ardor of my liver.^o

55

PROSPERO

Well.

Now come, my Ariel; bring a corollary^o
 Rather than want a spirit. Appear, and pertly!
 No tongue! All eyes! Be silent.

20

Soft music. Enter IRIS.^o

IRIS

Ceres, most bounteous lady, thy rich leas^o
 Of wheat, rye, barley, fetches,^o oats, and peas;
 Thy turfy mountains, where live nibbling sheep,
 And flat meads thatched with stover,^o them to keep;
 Thy banks with pionèd and twillèd brims,^o
 Which spongy April at thy hest betrimms
 To make cold nymphs chaste crowns; and thy broom groves,
 Whose shadow the dismissèd bachelor loves,
 Being lasslorn; thy pole-clipt vineyard;^o
 And thy sea-marge, sterile and rocky-hard,
 Where thou thyself dost air^o—the queen o' th' sky,^o
 Whose wat'ry arch and messenger am I,
 Bids thee leave these, and with her sovereign grace,

60

65

70

JUNO descends.^o

Here on this grass plot, in this very place,

35

41 vanity of illusion conjured up by 47 mop and mow gestures and grimaces 50 conceive understand 51 be true Prospero appears to have caught the lovers in an embrace 55 white . . . heart her pure white breast on mine (?) 56 liver supposed seat of sexual passion 57 corollary surplus (of spirits) 59 s.d. Iris goddess of the rainbow and Juno's messenger 60 leas meadows 61 fetches vetch (a kind of forage) 63 meads . . . stover meadows covered with a kind of grass used for winter fodder 64 pionèd . . . brims obscure; may refer to the trenched and ridged edges of banks that have been repaired after the erosions of winter 68 pole-clipt vineyard i.e., vineyard whose vines grow neatly around (embrace) poles (though possibly the word is "poll-clipped," i.e., pruned) 70 air take the air; queen o' th' sky Juno 72 s.d. this direction seems to come too soon, but the machine may have lowered her very slowly

To come and sport; her peacocks fly amain.^o
Approach, rich Ceres, her to entertain.

Enter CERES.

CERES

Hail, many-colored messenger, that ne'er
Dost disobey the wife of Jupiter,
Who, with thy saffron wings, upon my flow'rs
Diffusest honey drops, refreshing show'rs,
And with each end of thy blue bow dost crown
My bosky^o acres and my unshrubbed down,
Rich scarf to my proud earth. Why hath thy queen
Summoned me hither to this short-grassed green?

IRIS

A contract of true love to celebrate
And some donation freely to estate^o
On the blessed lovers.

CERES

Tell me, heavenly bow,
If Venus or her son, as thou dost know,
Do now attend the queen? Since they did plot
The means that dusky Dis my daughter got,^o
Her and her blind boy's scandaled^o company
I have forsworn.

IRIS

Of her society
Be not afraid; I met her deity
Cutting the clouds towards Paphos,^o and her son
Dove-drawn with her. Here thought they to have done
Some wanton charm upon this man and maid,
Whose vows are, that no bed-right shall be paid
Till Hymen's torch be lighted. But in vain;
Mars's hot minion is returned again;^o
Her waspish-headed son^o has broke his arrows,
Swears he will shoot no more, but play with sparrows
And be a boy right out.^o

[JUNO alights.]

CERES

Highest queen of state,
Great Juno, comes; I know her by her gait.

JUNO

How does my bounteous sister? Go with me
To bless this twain, that they may prosperous be
And honored in their issue.

They sing.

JUNO

Honor, riches, marriage blessing,
Long continuance, and increasing,
Hourly joys be still^o upon you!
Juno sings her blessings on you.

[CERES]

Earth's increase, foison^o plenty,
Barns and garners never empty,
Vines with clust'ring bunches growing,
Plants with goodly burden bowing;
Spring come to you at the farthest
In the very end of harvest.^o
Scarcity and want shall shun you,
Ceres' blessing so is on you.

74 amain swiftly (peacocks, sacred to Juno, drew her chariot) 81 bosky shrubbed 85 estate bestow 89 dusky . . . got alluding to the abduction of Proserpine by Pluto (Dis), god of the underworld 90 scandaled scandalous 93 Paphos in Cyprus, center of Venus' cult 98 Mars's . . . again Mars's lustful mistress (Venus) is on her way back to Paphos 99 waspish-headed son Cupid is irritable and stings with his arrows 101 boy right out an ordinary boy 108 still ever 110 foison abundance 114-15 Spring . . . harvest i.e.,
May there be no winter in your lives

FERDINAND

75 This is a most majestic vision, and Harmonious charmingly. May I be bold
To think these spirits?

PROSPERO

Spirits, which by mine art

120

I have from their confines called to enact
My present fancies.

FERDINAND

Let me live here ever!

80 So rare a wond'red^o father and a wise
Makes this place Paradise.

JUNO and CERES whisper, and send IRIS on employment.

PROSPERO

Sweet now, silence!

Juno and Ceres whisper seriously.

125

85 There's something else to do. Hush and be mute,
Or else our spell is marred.

IRIS

You nymphs, called Naiades, of the windring^o brooks,
With your sedged crowns and ever-harmless looks,
Leave your crisp^o channels, and on this green land
Answer your summons; Juno does command.
Come, temperate nymphs, and help to celebrate
A contract of true love; be not too late.

130

Enter certain NYMPHS.

You sunburned sicklemen, of August weary,
Come hither from the furrow and be merry.
Make holiday; your rye-straw hats put on,
And these fresh nymphs encounter everyone
In country footing.^o

135

Enter certain REAPERS, properly habited. They join with the NYMPHS in a graceful dance; towards the end whereof PROSPERO starts suddenly and speaks;^o after which, to a strange, hollow, and confused noise, they heavily^o vanish.

PROSPERO [Aside.]

I had forgot that foul conspiracy
Of the beast Caliban and his confederates
Against my life. The minute of their plot
Is almost come. [To the SPIRITS.] Well done! Avoid!^o
No more!

140

105

FERDINAND

This is strange. Your father's in some passion
That works him strongly.

MIRANDA

Never till this day

Saw I him touched with anger so distempered.^o

145

PROSPERO

110

You do look, my son, in a movèd sort,^o
As if you were dismayed; be cheerful, sir.
Our revels now are ended. These our actors,
As I foretold you, were all spirits and
Are melted into air, into thin air;

150

115

And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
The cloud-capped towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself,
Yea, all which it inherit,^o shall dissolve,

123 wond'red possessed of wonders; i.e., both wonderful and wonder-working, and therefore to be wondered at 128 windring winding and wandering (?) 130 crisp rippling 138 footing dance 138 s.d. speaks breaking the spell, which depends on silence; heavily reluctantly 142 Avoid Begone!
145 distempered violent 146 movèd sort troubled state
154 it inherit occupy it

And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
 Leave not a rack° behind. We are such stuff
 As dreams are made on, and our little life
 Is rounded with a sleep. Sir, I am vexed.
 Bear with my weakness; my old brain is troubled.
 Be not disturbed with my infirmity.
 If you be pleased, retire into my cell
 And there repose. A turn or two I'll walk
 To still my beating mind.

FERDINAND, MIRANDA We wish your peace.
Exit [FERDINAND, with MIRANDA].

PROSPERO
 Come with a thought! I thank thee,° Ariel. Come.
Enter ARIEL.

ARIEL
 Thy thoughts I cleave to. What's thy pleasure?

PROSPERO Spirit, 165
 We must prepare to meet with Caliban.

ARIEL
 Ay, my commander. When I presented° Ceres,
 I thought to have told thee of it, but I feared
 Lest I might anger thee.

PROSPERO
 Say again, where didst thou leave these varlets?°

ARIEL
 I told you, sir, they were red-hot with drinking;
 So full of valor that they smote the air
 For breathing in their faces, beat the ground
 For kissing of their feet; yet always bending°
 Towards their project. Then I beat my tabor;
 At which like unbacked° colts they pricked their ears,
 Advanced° their eyelids, lifted up their noses
 As they smelt music. So I charmed their ears
 That calflike they my lowing followed through Toothed briers, sharp furzes, pricking goss,° and thorns, 175
 Which ent' red their frail shins. At last I left them
 I' th' filthy mantled° pool beyond your cell,
 There dancing up to th' chins, that the foul lake
 O'erstunk their feet.

PROSPERO This was well done, my bird.
 Thy shape invisible retain thou still.
 The trumpery° in my house, go bring it hither
 For stale° to catch these thieves.

ARIEL I go, I go. Exit.

PROSPERO
 A devil, a born devil, on whose nature
 Nurture can never stick; on whom my pains,
 Humanely taken, all, all lost, quite lost!
 And as with age his body uglier grows,
 So his mind cankers. I will plague them all,
 Even to roaring.

Enter ARIEL, loaden with glistering apparel, &c.

Come, hang them on this line.°

155 [PROSPERO and ARIEL remain, invisible.] Enter CALI-
BAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO, all wet.

CALIBAN

Pray you tread softly, that the blind mole may not Hear a foot fall. We now are near his cell. 195

STEPHANO Monster, your fairy, which you say is a harmless fairy, has done little better than played the Jack° with us.

TRINCULO Monster, I do smell all horse piss, at which my nose is in great indignation. 200

STEPHANO So is mine. Do you hear, monster? If I should take a displeasure against you, look you—

TRINCULO Thou wert but a lost monster.

CALIBAN

Good my lord, give me thy favor still.
 Be patient, for the prize I'll bring thee to 205 Shall hoodwink° this mischance. Therefore speak softly.

All's hushed as midnight yet.

TRINCULO Ay, but to lose our bottles in the pool—

STEPHANO There is not only disgrace and dishonor in that, monster, but an infinite loss. 210

TRINCULO That's more to me than my wetting. Yet this is your harmless fairy, monster.

STEPHANO I will fetch off my bottle, though I be o'er ears° for my labor.

CALIBAN

Prithee, my king, be quiet. See'st thou here? 215
 This is the mouth o' th' cell. No noise, and enter.
 Do that good mischief which may make this island
 Thine own forever, and I, thy Caliban,
 For aye thy footlicker.

STEPHANO Give me thy hand. I do begin to have 220 bloody thoughts.

TRINCULO O King Stephano! O peer!° O worthy
 Stephano, look what a wardrobe here is for thee!

CALIBAN

Let it alone, thou fool! It is but trash.
 TRINCULO O, ho, monster! We know what belongs 225 to a frippery.° O King Stephano!

STEPHANO Put off that gown, Trinculo! By this hand, I'll have that gown!

TRINCULO Thy grace shall have it.

CALIBAN

The dropsy drown this fool! What do you mean 230
 To dote thus on such luggage?° Let't alone,
 And do the murder first. If he awake,
 From toe to crown he'll fill our skins with pinches,
 Make us strange stuff.

STEPHANO Be you quiet, monster. Mistress line, is not 235
 this my jerkin?° [Takes it down.] Now is the jerkin under the line.° Now, jerkin, you are like to lose your hair and prove a bald jerkin.°

156 rack wisp of cloud 164 I thank thee i.e., for the masque (?) 167 presented acted the part of (?) introduced (?) 170 varlets ruffians 174 bending directing their steps 176
 unbacked unbroken 177 Advanced lifted up 180 goss gorse 182 filthy mantled covered with filthy scum 186 trumpery
 the "glistering apparel" mentioned in the next stage direction
 187 stale decoy 193 line lime tree (linden)

198 Jack (1) knave (2) jack-o'-lantern, will-o'-the-wisp 206 hoodwink put out of sight 213-14 o'er ears i.e., over my ears in water 222 peer alluding to the song "King Stephen was and a worthy peer;/His breeches cost him but a crown," quoted in Othello II.iii 226 frippery old-clothes shop; i.e., we are good judges of castoff clothes 231 luggage useless encumbrances 236 jerkin kind of jacket 237 under the line pun: (1) under the lime tree (2) under the equator 238 bald jerkin sailors proverbially lost their hair from fevers contracted while crossing the equator

TRINCULO Do, do!° We steal by line and level,°
and't like° your grace. 240

STEPHANO I thank thee for that jest. Here's a garment for't. Wit shall not go unrewarded while I am king of this country. "Steal by line and level" is an excellent pass of pate.° There's another garment for't.

TRINCULO Monster, come put some lime° upon your 245 fingers, and away with the rest.

CALIBAN

I will have none on't. We shall lose our time
And all be turned to barnacles,° or to apes
With foreheads villainous low.

STEPHANO Monster, lay-to your fingers; help to bear 250
this away where my hogshead of wine is, or I'll turn you out of my kingdom. Go to, carry this.

TRINCULO And this.

STEPHANO Ay, and this.

A noise of hunters heard. Enter divers SPIRITS in shape of dogs and hounds, hunting them about; PROSPERO and ARIEL setting them on.

PROSPERO Hey, Mountain, hey! 255

ARIEL Silver! There it goes, Silver!

PROSPERO

Fury, Fury! There, Tyrant, there! Hark, hark!

[CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO are driven out.]

Go, charge my goblins that they grind their joints

With dry convulsions,° shorten up their sinews

With agèd° cramps, and more pinch-spotted make them 260

Than pard or cat o' mountain.°

ARIEL Hark, they roar!

PROSPERO

Let them be hunted soundly. At this hour

Lies at my mercy all mine enemies.

Shortly shall all my labors end, and thou

Shalt have the air at freedom. For a little, 265

Follow, and do me service.

Exeunt.

A C T V

Scene I. [In front of Prospero's cell.]

Enter PROSPERO in his magic robes, and ARIEL.

PROSPERO

Now does my project gather to a head.

My charms crack not, my spirits obey, and Time

Goes upright with his carriage.° How's the day?

ARIEL

On the sixth hour, at which time, my lord,

You said our work should cease.

PROSPERO

I did say so 5

239 Do, do Fine, fine!; by . . . level by plumb line and carpenter's level; i.e., according to rule (with pun on line) 240 and't like if it please 244 pass of pate sally of wit 245
lime bird lime (which is sticky; thieves have sticky fingers) 248 barnacles kind of geese supposed to have developed from shellfish 259 dry convulsions such as come when the joints are dry from old age 260 agèd i.e., such as old people have 261 pard . . . mountain leopard or catamount

V.i.2-3 Time . . . carriage time does not stoop under his burden (because there is so little left to do)

When first I raised the tempest. Say, my spirit,
How fares the king and's followers?

ARIEL

Confined together

In the same fashion as you gave in charge,

Just as you left them—all prisoners, sir,

In the line grove which weather-fends° your cell. 10

They cannot budge till your release.° The king,

His brother, and yours abide all three distracted,

And the remainder mourning over them,

Brimful of sorrow and dismay; but chiefly

Him that you termed, sir, the good old Lord Gonzalo. 15

His tears runs down his beard like winter's drops

From eaves of reeds.° Your charm so strongly works

'em,

That if you now beheld them, your affections

Would become tender.

PROSPERO

Dost thou think so, spirit?

ARIEL

Mine would, sir, were I human.

PROSPERO

And mine shall. 20

Hast thou, which art but air, a touch, a feeling

Of their afflictions, and shall not myself

One of their kind, that relish all as sharply,

Passion° as they, be kindlier moved than thou art?

Though with their high wrongs I am struck to th'
quick, 25

Yet with my nobler reason 'gainst my fury

Do I take part. The rarer action is

In virtue than in vengeance. They being penitent,

The sole drift of my purpose doth extend

Not a frown further. Go, release them, Ariel. 30

My charms I'll break, their senses I'll restore,

And they shall be themselves.

ARIEL

I'll fetch them, sir. Exit.

PROSPERO

Ye elves of hills, brooks, standing lakes, and groves,

And ye that on the sands with printless foot

Do chase the ebbing Neptune, and do fly him° 35

When he comes back; you demi-puppets that

By moonshine do the green sour ringlets° make,

Whereof the ewe not bites; and you whose pastime

Is to make midnight mushrumps,° that rejoice

To hear the solemn curfew; by whose aid 40

(Weak masters° though ye be) I have bedimmed

The noontide sun, called forth the mutinous winds,

And 'twixt the green sea and the azured vault

Set roaring war; to the dread rattling thunder

Have I given fire and rifted Jove's stout oak 45

With his own bolt; the strong-based promontory

Have I made shake and by the spurs° plucked up

The pine and cedar; graves at my command

Have waked their sleepers, oped, and let 'em forth

By my so potent art. But this rough magic 50

I here abjure; and when I have required°

Some heavenly music (which even now I do)

To work mine end upon their senses that°

10 weather-fends protects from the weather 11 till your release until released by you 17 eaves of reeds i.e., a thatched roof 24 Passion verb 35 fly him fly with him 37 green sour ringlets "fairy rings," little circles of rank grass supposed to be formed by the dancing of fairies 39 mushrumps mushrooms 41 masters masters of supernatural power 47 spurs roots 51 required asked for 53 their senses that the senses of those whom

This airy charm is for, I'll break my staff,
Bury it certain fathoms in the earth, 55
And deeper than did ever plummet sound
I'll drown my book.

Solemn music.

Here enters ARIEL before; then ALONSO, with a frantic gesture, attended by GONZALO; SEBASTIAN and ANTONIO in like manner, attended by ADRIAN and FRANCISCO. They all enter the circle which PROSPERO had made, and there stand charmed; which PROSPERO observing, speaks.

A solemn air, and° the best comforter
To an unsettled fancy, cure thy brains,
Now useless, boiled within thy skull! There stand, 60
For you are spell-stopped.
Holy Gonzalo, honorable man,
Mine eyes, ev'n sociable to the show of thine,
Fall fellowly drops.° The charm dissolves apace;
And as the morning steals upon the night, 65
Melting the darkness, so their rising senses
Begin to chase the ignorant fumes that mantle
Their clearer reason. O good Gonzalo,
My true preserver, and a loyal sir
To him thou follow'st, I will pay thy graces 70
Home° both in word and deed. Most cruelly
Didst thou, Alonso, use me and my daughter.
Thy brother was a furtherer in the act.
Thou art pinched for't now, Sebastian. Flesh and blood,
You, brother mine, that entertained ambition, 75
Expelled remorse° and nature;° whom, with Sebastian (Whose inward pinches therefore are most strong),
Would here have killed your king, I do forgive thee,
Unnatural though thou art. Their understanding
Begins to swell, and the approaching tide 80
Will shortly fill the reasonable shore,
That now lies foul and muddy. Not one of them
That yet looks on me or would know me. Ariel,
Fetch me the hat and rapier in my cell.
I will discease° me, and myself present 85
As I was sometime Milan. Quickly, spirit!
Thou shalt ere long be free.

[Exit ARIEL and returns immediately.]

ARIEL sings and helps to attire him.

Where the bee sucks, there suck I;
In a cowslip's bell I lie;
There I couch when owls do cry.
On the bat's back I do fly
After summer merrily.
Merrily, merrily shall I live now
Under the blossom that hangs on the bough.

PROSPERO
Why, that's my dainty Ariel! I shall miss thee, 95
But yet thou shalt have freedom; so, so, so.
To the king's ship, invisible as thou art!
There shalt thou find the mariners asleep

Under the hatches. The master and the boatswain
Being awake, enforce them to this place, 100
And presently,° I prithee.

ARIEL

I drink the air before me, and return
Or ere your pulse twice beat. Exit.

GONZALO

All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement
Inhabits here. Some heavenly power guide us 105
Out of this fearful country!

PROSPERO

Behold, sir king,
The wrongèd Duke of Milan, Prospero.
For more assurance that a living prince
Does now speak to thee, I embrace thy body,
And to thee and thy company I bid 110
A hearty welcome.

ALONSO

Whe'r° thou be'st he or no,
Or some enchanted trifle° to abuse me,
As late I have been, I not know. Thy pulse
Beats, as of flesh and blood; and, since I saw thee,
Th' affliction of my mind amends, with which, 115
I fear, a madness held me. This must crave°
(And if this be at all)° a most strange story.
Thy dukedom I resign and do entreat
Thou pardon me my wrongs. But how should
Prospero
Be living and be here?

PROSPERO

First, noble friend, 120
Let me embrace thine age, whose honor cannot
Be measured or confined.

GONZALO

Whether this be
Or be not, I'll not swear.

PROSPERO

You do yet taste
Some subtleties° o' th' isle, that will not let you Believe things certain. Welcome, my friends all. 125

[Aside to SEBASTIAN and ANTONIO.]

But you; my brace of lords, were I so minded,
I here could pluck his highness' frown upon you,
And justify° you traitors. At this time
I will tell no tales.

SEBASTIAN

[Aside.] The devil speaks in him.

PROSPERO

No.
For you, most wicked sir, whom to call brother
Would even infect my mouth, I do forgive
Thy rankest fault—all of them; and require
My dukedom of thee, which perforce I know
Thou must restore. 130

ALONSO

If thou beest Prospero,
Give us particulars of thy preservation; 135
How thou hast met us here, whom three hours since
Were wracked upon this shore; where I have lost (How sharp the point of this remembrance is!)
My dear son Ferdinand.

PROSPERO

I am woe° for't, sir.

ALONSO

Irreparable is the loss, and Patience 140
Says it is past her cure.

58 and which is 63–64 sociable . . . drops associating themselves with the (tearful) appearance of your eyes, shed tears in sympathy 70–71 pay . . . Home repay thy favors thoroughly 76 remorse pity; nature natural feeling 85 discease disrobe

101 presently immediately 111 Whe'r whether 112 trifle apparition 116 crave require (to account for it) 117 And . . . all if this is really happening 124 subtleties deceptions (referring to pastries made to look like something else—e.g., castles made out of sugar) 128 justify prove 139 woe sorry

PROSPERO I rather think
You have not sought her help, of whose soft grace
For the like loss I have her sovereign aid
And rest myself content.

ALONSO You the like loss?

PROSPERO
As great to me, as late,^o and supportable^o
To make the dear^o loss, have I means much weaker
Than you may call to comfort you; for I
Have lost my daughter.

ALONSO A daughter?
O heavens, that they were living both in Naples,
The king and queen there! That they were, I wish Myself were mudded in that oozy bed
Where my son lies. When did you lose your daughter?

PROSPERO
In this last tempest. I perceive these lords
At this encounter do so much admire^o
That they devour their reason, and scarce think
Their eyes do offices^o of truth, their words
Are natural breath. But, howsoev'r you have Been justled from your senses, know for certain
That I am Prospero, and that very duke
Which was thrust forth of Milan, who most strangely Upon this shore, where you were wracked, was landed

To be the lord on't. No more yet of this;
For 'tis a chronicle of day by day,
Not a relation for a breakfast, nor Befitting this first meeting. Welcome, sir;
This cell's my court. Here have I few attendants,
And subjects none abroad.^o Pray you look in.
My dukedom since you have given me again,
I will requite you with as good a thing,
At least bring forth a wonder to content ye
As much as me my dukedom.

Here PROSPERO discovers^o FERDINAND and MIRANDA playing at chess.

MIRANDA
Sweet lord, you play me false.

FERDINAND No, my dearest love,
I would not for the world.

MIRANDA
Yes, for a score of kingdoms you should wrangle,
And I would call it fair play.^o

ALONSO If this prove
A vision of the island, one dear son
Shall I twice lose.

SEBASTIAN A most high miracle!

FERDINAND
Though the seas threaten, they are merciful.
I have cursed them without cause. [Kneels.]

ALONSO Now all the blessings
Of a glad father compass thee about!

Arise, and say how thou cam'st here.

MIRANDA O, wonder!
How many goodly creatures are there here!
How beauteous mankind is! O brave new world
That has such people in't!

PROSPERO 'Tis new to thee.

145 ALONSO
What is this maid with whom thou wast at play?
Your eld'st^o acquaintance cannot be three hours.
Is she the goddess that hath severed us
And brought us thus together?

FERDINAND Sir, she is mortal;
But by immortal providence she's mine.
I chose her when I could not ask my father
For his advice, nor thought I had one. She Is daughter to this famous Duke of Milan,
Of whom so often I have heard renown
But never saw before; of whom I have Received a second life; and second father
This lady makes him to me.

ALONSO I am hers.
But, O, how oddly will it sound that I
Must ask my child forgiveness!

PROSPERO There, sir, stop.
Let us not burden our remembrance with
A heaviness that's gone.

GONZALO I have inly wept,
Or should have spoke ere this. Look down, you gods,
And on this couple drop a blessed crown!
For it is you that have chalked forth the way
Which brought us hither.

ALONSO I say amen, Gonzalo.

GONZALO
Was Milan thrust from Milan that his issue
Should become kings of Naples? O, rejoice
Beyond a common joy, and set it down
With gold on lasting pillars. In one voyage
Did Claribel her husband find at Tunis,
And Ferdinand her brother found a wife
Where he himself was lost; Prospero his dukedom
In a poor isle; and all of us ourselves
When no man was his own.

ALONSO [To FERDINAND and MIRANDA.] Give me your hands.
Let grief and sorrow still^o embrace his heart
That doth not wish you joy.

175 GONZALO Be it so! Amen! 215

Enter ARIEL, with the MASTER and BOATSWAIN amazedly following.

O, look, sir; look, sir! Here is more of us!
I prophesied if a gallows were on land,
This fellow could not drown. Now, blasphemy,
That swear'st grace o'erboard,^o not an oath on shore?
Hast thou no mouth by land? What is the news?

BOATSWAIN
The best news is that we have safely found
Our king and company; the next, our ship,
Which, but three glasses^o since, we gave out split,

186 eld'st longest 214 still forever 219 That . . . o'er-board that (at sea) swearest enough to cause grace to be withdrawn from the ship 223 glasses hours

145 As . . . late as great to me as your loss, and as recent; supportable pronounced "súpportable" 146 dear intensifies the meaning of the noun 154 admire wonder 156 do offices perform services 167 abroad i.e., on the island 171 s.d. discovers reveals (by opening a curtain at the back of the stage) 174-75 for . . . play i.e., if we were playing for stakes just short of the world, you would protest as now; but then, the issue being important, I would call it fair play, so much do I love you (?)

Is tight and yare° and bravely rigged as when
We first put out to sea.

ARIEL [Aside to PROSPERO.] Sir, all this service 225
Have I done since I went.

PROSPERO [Aside to ARIEL.] My tricksy spirit!

ALONSO

These are not natural events; they strengthen
From strange to stranger. Say, how came you hither?

BOATSWAIN

If I did think, sir, I were well awake,
I'd strive to tell you. We were dead of sleep 230
And (how we know not) all clapped under hatches;
Where, but even now, with strange and several° noises
Of roaring, shrieking, howling, jingling chains,
And moe° diversity of sounds, all horrible,
We were awaked; straightway at liberty; 235
Where we, in all our trim, freshly beheld
Our royal, good, and gallant ship, our master
Cap'ring to eye° her. On a trice, so please you,
Even in a dream, were we divided from them
And were brought moping° hither.

ARIEL [Aside to PROSPERO.] Was't well done? 240

PROSPERO [Aside to ARIEL.]
Bravely, my diligence. Thou shalt be free.

ALONSO

This is as strange a maze as e'er men trod,
And there is in this business more than nature
Was ever conduct° of. Some oracle
Must rectify our knowledge.

PROSPERO Sir, my liege, 245
Do not infest your mind with beating on
The strangeness of this business. At picked leisure,
Which shall be shortly, single I'll resolve you (Which to you shall seem probable) of every
These happened accidents;° till when, be cheerful 250
And think of each thing well. [Aside to ARIEL.] Come hither, spirit.

Set Caliban and his companions free.

Untie the spell. [Exit ARIEL.] How fares my gracious
sir?

There are yet missing of your company
Some few odd lads that you remember not. 255

Enter ARIEL, driving in CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO, in their stolen apparel.

STEPHANO Every man shift for all the rest, and let no man take care for himself; for all is but fortune.
Coragio,° bully-monster, coragio!

TRINCULO If these be true spies which I wear in my head, here's a goodly sight. 260

CALIBAN

O Setebos,° these be brave spirits indeed!
How fine my master is! I am afraid
He will chastise me.

SEBASTIAN Ha, ha!

What things are these, my Lord Antonio?
Will money buy 'em?

ANTONIO Very like. One of them 265
Is a plain fish and no doubt marketable.

PROSPERO

Mark but the badges° of these men, my lords,
Then say if they be true.° This misshapen knave,
His mother was a witch, and one so strong
That could control the moon, make flows and ebbs, 270
And deal in her command without her power.°
These three have robbed me, and this demi-devil
(For he's a bastard one) had plotted with them
To take my life. Two of these fellows you Must know and own; this thing of darkness I 275
Acknowledge mine.

CALIBAN I shall be pinched to death.

ALONSO

Is not this Stephano, my drunken butler?

SEBASTIAN

He is drunk now. Where had he wine?

ALONSO

And Trinculo is reeling ripe. Where should they Find this grand liquor that hath gilded 'em? 280
How cam'st thou in this pickle?

TRINCULO I have been in such a pickle, since I saw you last, that I fear me will never out of my bones. I shall not fear flyblowing.°

SEBASTIAN Why, how now, Stephano? 285

STEPHANO O, touch me not! I am not Stephano, but a cramp.

PROSPERO You'd be king o' the isle, sirrah?

STEPHANO I should have been a sore° one then.

ALONSO

This is a strange thing as e'er I looked on. 290

PROSPERO

He is as disproportioned in his manners
As in his shape. Go, sirrah, to my cell;
Take with you your companions. As you look
To have my pardon, trim it handsomely.

CALIBAN

Ay, that I will; and I'll be wise hereafter, 295
And seek for grace. What a thrice-double ass
Was I to take this drunkard for a god
And worship this dull fool!

PROSPERO Go to! Away!

ALONSO

Hence, and bestow your luggage where you found it.

SEBASTIAN Or stole it rather. 300

[Exeunt CALIBAN, STEPHANO, and TRINCULO.]

PROSPERO

Sir, I invite your highness and your train
To my poor cell, where you shall take your rest
For this one night; which, part of it, I'll waste°
With such discourse as, I not doubt, shall make it 305
Go quick away—the story of my life,
And the particular accidents° gone by Since I came to this isle. And in the morn
I'll bring you to your ship, and so to Naples,

224 yare shipshape 232 several various 234 moe more
238 Cap'ring to eye dancing to see 240 moping in a daze 244 conduct conductor 248–50 single . . . accidents I myself will solve the problems (and my story will make sense to you) concerning each and every incident that has happened 258 Coragio courage (Italian) 261 Setebos the god of Caliban's mother

267 badges worn by servants to indicate to whose service they belong; in this case, the stolen clothes are badges of their rascality 268 true honest 271 deal . . . power i.e., dabble in the moon's realm without the moon's legitimate authority 284 flyblowing pickling preserves meat from flies 289 sore (1) tyrannical (2) aching 303 waste spend 306 accidents incidents

Where I have hope to see the nuptial
Of these our dear-beloved solemnizèd;^o
And thence retire me to my Milan, where Every third thought shall be my grave.

ALONSO I long
To hear the story of your life, which must Take^o the ear strangely.

PROSPERO I'll deliver^o all;
And promise you calm seas, auspicious gales,
And sail so expeditious that shall catch^o
Your royal fleet far off. [Aside to ARIEL.] My Ariel, chick,
That is thy charge. Then to the elements
Be free, and fare thou well! [To the others.] Please you, draw near. Exeunt omnes.

310 solemnizèd pronounced "solémnizèd" 314 Take captivate; deliver tell 316 catch catch up with

EPILOGUE

310

Spoken by PROSPERO.

Now my charms are all o'erthrown,
And what strength I have's mine own,
Which is most faint. Now 'tis true

I must be here confined by you,
Or sent to Naples. Let me not,
Since I have my dukedom got
And pardoned the deceiver, dwell
In this bare island by your spell;
But release me from my bands^o
With the help of your good hands.^o

Gentle breath^o of yours my sails
Must fill, or else my project fails,
Which was to please. Now I want^o
Spirits to enforce, art to enchant;

And my ending is despair
Unless I be relieved by prayer,^o
Which pierces so that it assaults
Mercy itself and frees all faults.

As you from crimes would pardoned be,
Let your indulgence set me free.

Exit. 20

Epi.9 bands bonds 10 hands i.e., applause to break the spell
11 Gentle breath i.e., favorable comment 13 want lack 16 prayer i.e., this petition

THE LIFE OF KING HENRY THE EIGHTH

EDITED BY S. SCHOENBAUM

Introduction

Although The Life of King Henry VIII has for more than a century given rise to vigorous, sometimes heated, discussion, it has received much less interpretative consideration than any other of Shakespeare's dramatizations of English history; the two best-known books on the subject, Lily B. Campbell's Shakespeare's Histories and E. M. W. Tillyard's Shakespeare's History Plays, ignore it. Attention has focused instead on a single great problem unrelated in any direct way to the play's meaning or worth. In the title of his celebrated essay, first published in 1850, James Spedding asked, "Who Wrote Shakespeare's Henry VIII?" and scholars have raised the same question ever since.¹ Indeed, a great Shakespearean of our century, John Dover Wilson, confessed with engaging candor that the chief interest of the play for him lay in the authorship problem. That problem is the most vexing to the editor of Henry VIII. While he may be permitted to regret the disproportionate attention lavished on a single specialized issue of scholarship, he must nevertheless recognize that it can scarcely be disregarded in a responsible Introduction. He will do well to confront it straightaway.

Spedding argued that Henry VIII represents not Shakespeare's unaided work but, rather, a collaborative effort in which he was joined by an inferior writer who composed the greater part and was responsible for the general design, which Spedding found incoherent. This inferior playwright he identified as John Fletcher. Although some earlier scholars had expressed doubts about the homogeneity of Henry VIII, no one had previously developed a reasoned case for Fletcher's part-authorship. Spedding's evidence is internal. In the scenes attributed to Shakespeare he finds vigor, reality, impassioned language, and figurative richness; the Fletcher portions are conventional, diffuse, and languid. These stylistic impressions Spedding reinforces with metrical statistics: the scenes assigned to Fletcher are distinguished by a preponderance of feminine endings (an extra unstressed syllable terminating the blank-verse line) normal for Fletcher but excessive for Shakespeare. Spedding's argument was not universally accepted—Swinburne early demurred—but it has proved enormously influential: so influential that the theory of Shakespeare-Fletcher collaboration is even today not infrequently stated as a fact.

The great drawback to stylistic evidence is its subjectivity, which resides to a degree even in the seemingly mechanical metrical tests that Spedding, along with most nineteenth-century scholars, found persuasive. But additional evidence of a more objective nature has been forthcoming. In an important monograph, The Problem of Henry VIII Reopened (1949), A. C. Partridge offered linguistic data based on the use of expletive do in affirmative statements (favored by Shakespeare), -th inflectional endings in the third person singular present indicative of notional and auxiliary verbs (also favored by Shakespeare), and colloquial clippings of personal pronouns (favored by Fletcher). These linguistic characteristics essentially confirm Spedding's division of the play. Partridge's evidence has been supplemented by Cyrus Hoy in his recent painstaking investigation of the entire Fletcher canon. Hoy finds in the Folio text of Henry VIII "two distinct linguistic patterns: one [Fletcher's] marked by the occurrence of ye in eleven of the play's sixteen scenes, to a total of 71 times, and a distinct preference for the contraction 'em to the expanded pronominal form them; the second pattern [Shakespeare's] is marked by the absence of ye, a preference for them to 'em, and the frequent use of hath which, with one exception (I.i) is never found in a scene containing ye."² (The present edition differs from most modern-spelling texts in retaining contracted forms as they appear in the Folio.)

For the reader's convenience, the customary scene allocation made by those who view the play as a Fletcher-Shakespeare collaboration is summarized in the following table:

¹ The essay, which first appeared in The Gentleman's Magazine (August 1850), is more conveniently accessible in Transactions of the New Shakspeare Society (1874), Appendix, pp. 1*-18*. For my discussion of the authorship question in this Introduction I am obliged to Northwestern University Press for permission to include materials from my book, Internal Evidence and Elizabethan Dramatic Authorship (1966), in which the principal contributions to the controversy are evaluated.

² Cyrus Hoy, "The Shares of Fletcher and His Collaborators in the Beaumont and Fletcher Canon (VII)," Studies in Bibliography, XV (1962), 77. Hoy's discussion of the play occupies pp. 76-85; a statistical table of his findings appears on p. 90.

Prologue	Fletcher
Act I, sc. i-ii	Shakespeare
sc. iii-iv	Fletcher
Act II, sc. i-ii	Fletcher
sc. iii-iv	Shakespeare
Act III, sc. i	Fletcher
sc. ii (lines 1-204)	Shakespeare
sc. ii (remainder)	Fletcher
Act IV, sc. i-ii	Fletcher
Act V, sc. i	Shakespeare
sc. ii-v	Fletcher
Epilogue	Fletcher

The dual-authorship hypothesis is, moreover, attractive on other than linguistic or stylistic grounds. Around 1609, Shakespeare's company began performing in the enclosed Blackfriars Theatre, the lease to which it had recently acquired. Although the open-air Globe remained in use (indeed, Henry VIII was written for that house), it was gradually supplanted in importance by the new theater, which catered to a select, well-to-do clientele. At about the same time as this crucial change in operations, the premier theatrical company of the age was faced with the problem of the imminent retirement of the playwright largely responsible for its overwhelming preeminence. How, after all, does one go about replacing Shakespeare? The King's Men could not very well avoid pondering this unenviable question. Their crisis was resolved—successfully by the criterion of box-office receipts—when the company arranged for Fletcher to succeed Shakespeare as their principal dramatist. And what could be a more natural procedure during the transitional phase than that Shakespeare should collaborate with the brilliant young playwright destined to replace him?³

Yet it is a hypothesis, not a certainty, that Henry VIII is the end product of such a partnership. A distinguished minority of scholars—among them Peter Alexander, Hardin Craig, R. A. Foakes, G. Wilson Knight, and Geoffrey Bullough—have remained unconvinced despite the cumulative weight of stylistic, linguistic, and historical probabilities. They have, furthermore, discerned in the play an organic unity which they regard as more compatible with single than with divided authorship. The concrete evidence for collaboration is, after all, entirely internal and, in the nature of things, inconclusive without external support. Even the welcome linguistic data do not always provide so clearcut a pattern as one might wish, and there is always the danger that scribes or compositors did not consistently follow such minutiae in the manuscripts which they transmitted. It is a fact that Heminges and Condell, the earliest editors of Shakespeare, printed Henry VIII in the First Folio without any hint that another writer had a share in the play. Whether they did or did not know the circumstances of composition we cannot definitely say; but, as they were Shakespeare's friends and professional colleagues at the time, the likelihood is that they did. But would they have omitted the work from the Folio even if they understood it to be in large measure another's? Again we cannot positively say. It is also a fact, though, that they failed to include Sir Thomas More,

Pericles, and The Two Noble Kinsmen: works of collaborative or doubtful status. It is true, too, that they printed a text of Macbeth with the non-Shakespearean Hecate scenes; but these amount only to a small portion of the whole play. The external evidence thus points to single jurisdiction, yet not with such force as to dismay those maintaining the contrary view.

After working closely with the text of Henry VIII over a fairly long period, and after weighing the arguments of his predecessors, the present editor is satisfied that two styles indeed coexist in the play, that Shakespeare and Fletcher are the authors indicated by those styles, and that the traditional distribution of scenes is by and large correct. He also believes, however, that Hoy may be right in detecting Shakespeare's presence in several scenes usually attributed to Fletcher alone (II.ii, III.ii.204-460, and IV.ii), although he would not venture upon any line-by-line allocation.⁴ Because the Prologue and Epilogue are such short passages, he doubts that a persuasive case can be made for ascription to either Shakespeare or Fletcher. The view, maintained by the anticollaborationists, that Henry VIII possesses a structure of imagery and other features reflecting careful planning does not for this reader carry any great evidential significance as regards authorship. Such interpretative considerations inevitably have a subjective aspect: there are competent critics who do not find in the work the unity claimed for it by other competent critics. And even granting the existence of such unity, it does not necessarily follow that it could have been achieved only by an artist working on his own. There are sufficient instances of dramatists who have pooled their talents to produce integrated works, sometimes attaining (as in the case of Jonson, Chapman, and Marston's Eastward Ho) remarkable consistency of texture; just as there are instances of totally incoherent plays composed by one individual. The hypothesis of Shakespeare-Fletcher collaboration on Henry VIII is reasonable and better supported by tangible evidence than most such hypotheses, and it is probable that the majority of students will continue to support it. At the same time it remains a hypothesis, and there will probably always be some dissenters. For better or for worse, this editor is unstirred by the partisan fervor that the debate has aroused; his firmest conviction is that the problem admits of no ultimate solution.

If the authorship question presents notorious difficulties, the very existence of the play is in some respects awkward. For many, one suspects, it would have been much more satisfying had Shakespeare concluded his playwriting career with The Tempest, a drama as magically evocative as the island on which its action takes place. The great themes of forgiveness and reconciliation achieve (so it seems) final form: it is the culmination of the artist's vision. Understandably, readers and audiences have found irresistible the temptation to identify the creator with his creation, and to see in Prospero's abjuration of his magic the dramatist's farewell to the stage:

I'll break my staff,
Bury it certain fathoms in the earth,
And deeper than did ever plummet sound
I'll drown my book.

(V.i.54-57)

³ For an excellent discussion of these questions see Gerald E. Bentley, "Shakespeare and the Blackfriars Theatre," Shakespeare Survey I, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1948), pp. 38-50.

⁴ This editor would not, however, join Hoy in also crediting Shakespeare with a share in II.i and IV.i.

And then how anticlimactic, after the revels have been declared ended, for their master to return a couple of years later with yet another revel! To complicate matters further, the play in which the timeless artificer now had at least a hand was quite possibly topical in its inspiration, and certainly it was spectacular (in the showy theatrical sense) in its design. If the composition of Henry VIII testifies to anything, it is to the committed professionalism of its author: the supreme poet was yet a shareholder in a company of players and not unwilling to emerge from semiretirement in Stratford to provide his London colleagues with a vehicle admirably suited to catching the popular fancy in a moment of national rejoicing.

The occasion for rejoicing was the marriage on Saint Valentine's Day, 1613, of Princess Elizabeth, daughter of James I, to Prince Frederick, the Elector Palatine and champion of the Protestant cause in Germany. During the previous autumn Prince Henry, the heir to the throne, had died, and the nation had been plunged into grief; now the period of mourning was over, and the lavish wedding celebrations—including masques, feasts, and fireworks—signalized the change of mood. A play extolling the reign of England's first Protestant defender of the faith, and doing so in scenes of pomp and pageantry, would be in harmony with the occasion. Act V of Henry VIII celebrates the birth of Princess Elizabeth of glorious memory, and (as R. A. Foakes has observed) the identity of name between the young bride and the great queen did not escape notice at the time. "How much are we, the inhabitants of this whole isle, bound unto our good God, that hath lent us such a princess," declared George Webbe in The Bride Royal (1613), "and in her hath renewed and revived the name and nature of our late deceased, ever to be remembered, happy Queen Elizabeth!" Cranmer's speech (V.v.14-62), prophesying the peace and prosperity of Elizabeth's reign and alluding flatteringly to their continuance under James, resembles in phrasing and imagery what was being said in the marriage tracts and sermons.⁵

To suggest, however, that Henry VIII was composed specifically for the royal festivities would be to stretch the evidence, for no court performance of the play is mentioned in the Lord Treasurer's accounts for this period, although we know that five other works of Shakespeare were acted before the newlyweds. Possibly Henry VIII was the "stage play to be acted in the Great Hall by the King's players" which aroused "much expectation" on February 16, but which was canceled in favor of a masque; but this is mere speculation.

In identifying Henry VIII with All Is True, a play about the same monarch's reign known only from a single contemporary reference, we are on surer ground: All Is True would be an appropriate alternative title for Henry VIII, in view of the Prologue's emphasis on "our chosen truth" (line 18). A performance of All Is True at the Globe Theatre on June 29, 1613, was the occasion of the most sensational occurrence in the history of that playhouse. The event is described in a letter, dated July 2, 1613, written by Sir Henry Wotton to Sir Edmund Bacon:

The King's players had a new play called All Is true, representing some principal pieces of the reign of Henry VIII, which was set forth with many extraordinary circumstances of pomp and majesty, even to the matting of the stage; the Knights of the Order with their Georges and garters, the Guards with their embroidered coats, and the like: sufficient in truth within a while to make greatness very familiar, if not ridiculous. Now, King Henry making a masque at the Cardinal Wolsey's house, and certain chambers being shot off at his entry, some of the paper, or other stuff, wherewith one of them was stopped, did light on the thatch, where being thought at first but an idle smoke, and their eyes more attentive to the show, it kindled inwardly, and ran round like a train, consuming within less than an hour the whole house to the very grounds.

This was the fatal period of that virtuous fabric, wherein yet nothing did perish but wood and straw, and a few forsaken cloaks; only one man had his breeches set on fire, that would perhaps have broiled him, if he had not by the benefit of a provident wit put it out with bottle ale.⁶

Thus did the Globe perish; but (as Stow's Annals, 1631 ed., records) "the next spring it was new builded in far fairer manner than before."

We need feel no surprise that the patrician Wotton should express tolerant disapproval at the public staging of the ceremonies and pastimes of the great before the heterogeneous multitude that frequented the Globe. More suggestive is his tacit admission that he has been impressed, if reluctantly, by "the many extraordinary circumstances of pomp and majesty"—impressed at second hand, for he was not an eyewitness to the performance he recounts. Whatever deeper resonances are implied, Henry VIII on the stage was the super-spectacle of its own day. In an Introduction to the play this aspect calls for special emphasis, as it is least likely to come through adequately on the printed page: the life of a spectacle, appealing as it does directly to eye and ear, is in the presentation.

How deliberately does the play dwell on awesome princely occasions! Sometimes these are depicted through the resources of language alone, as in Norfolk's description of the Field of the Cloth of Gold (I.i), or in the account by the two Gentlemen of the trial of "the great Duke of Buckingham" by his peers at Westminster Hall (II.i), or in the Third Gentleman's narration of the solemn ritual at the coronation of Queen Anne in Westminster Abbey (IV.i). But, where possible, stirring events are dramatized. We attend Wolsey's splendid banquet and masque; we witness Katherine's vision of dancing, white-robed spirits; we become bystanders when Anne returns with her retinue from the Abbey. The dramatis personae for Henry VIII is the largest for any play in the canon, and for such episodes as the procession in Act IV the company must have pressed into service all of its available personnel. The extended stage directions, authorial in origin, show an unusual regard for the proper disposition of the players in the big scenes. For Katherine's trial

⁵ The correspondences are described and documented by R. A. Foakes in his Introduction to the New Arden edition of Henry VIII (1957), pp. xxxi-xxxii. I owe my reference to The Bride Royal to this edition, p. xxx.

⁶ The Life and Letters of Sir Henry Wotton, edited by L. Pearsall Smith (1907), II, pp. 32-33.

The King takes place under the cloth of state; the two Cardinals sit under him as judges. The Queen takes place some distance from the King. The Bishops place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory; below them, the Scribes. The Lords sit next the Bishops. The rest of the Attendants stand in convenient order about the stage. (II.iv.s.d.)

The gorgeous costumes of princes, prelates, and functionaries contributed to the visual magnificence of these scenes, as did the impressive assortment of stage properties, including the purse with the Great Seal, the silver cross, silver mace, and silver pillars, the gold scepter and collars of S's, the gilt copper crown, gold crown, and gold coronals and demicoronals.

These visual effects were complemented and enhanced by sound, which is called for throughout. Patience, Queen Katherine's woman, sings of the miraculous powers of "sweet music" as she accompanies herself on the lute. Such soothing moments, however, are rare: on other occasions we hear the blended voices of the choristers, the sound of oboes and cornets, the sterner notes of drum and trumpet, the roar of the cannon. Henry VIII is an unabashedly noisy play, guaranteed to keep even the drowsiest spectator awake. "Some come to take their ease," the Epilogue declares,

And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,
W' have frighted with our trumpets. (Epi.3-4)

Of the several companies performing in London at the time, only the King's Men had the resources to do justice to such a play. The destruction of the theater during what was possibly the premier performance is not without a certain ironic fitness: it was the spectacular effect to end (literally) all spectacular effects.

In the most notable modern revival of Henry VIII, produced by Tyrone Guthrie at Stratford-on-Avon in 1949-50, the director fully exploited the opportunities for processional pageantry, display, and crowd movement. For such exploitation the earliest theatrical precedents and the text itself (as we have noted) afford ample warrant. These features of the play have contributed to the dissatisfaction with it expressed by some commentators: spectacle, being nonverbal, has always prompted condescension or worse on the part of critics whose orientation is literary or philosophical rather than theatrical. "The Spectacle," Aristotle observed in the Poetics, "has, indeed, an emotional attraction of its own, but, of all the parts, it is the least artistic, and connected least with the art of poetry." Even granting the validity of the judgment, the propriety of applying to another genre the criteria Aristotle formulated for tragedy may be doubtful. For although Henry VIII dramatizes several individual tragedies—Buckingham's, Katherine's, Wolsey's—it is not itself a tragedy but a history play concerned more with the public conduct of its personages than with their buried lives; its intention is to stage, in Wotton's words, "some principal pieces of the reign of Henry VIII."

Clowning and buffoonery of the kind found in Samuel Rowley's When You See Me You Know Me (1605), which deals with the same reign, are rejected in favor of an appropriate seriousness and dignity of tone, although the rejection is fortunately not so sweeping as to exclude humor altogether: witness the bawdry of the old Lady (II.iii) and the low comedy of the Porter and his man (V.iv). The repeated stress in the Prologue is on the historical genuineness of the play's people and events, their reality:

Think ye see
The very persons of our noble story
As they were living. (Pro.25-27)

The pursuit of historical verisimilitude (whether achieved or not) obviously limits the playwright's freedom to select, shape, and explore events. It cannot be claimed that the genre represents the highest form to which dramatic art may aspire, but there can be no denying its perennial appeal to theatergoers; of plays produced in recent years, Peter Shaffer's spectacular dramatization of Pizarro's conquest of Peru, The Royal Hunt of the Sun, perhaps most closely approximates the type. Henry VIII is best understood—and appreciated—on its own terms.

Those terms are not, however, confined to spectacle. Again the Prologue helpfully gives a clue to purpose. The audience is instructed in how to respond to the calamities befalling the eminent personages whose careers will unfold before it:

Think you see them great,
And followed with the general throng and sweat
Of thousand friends. Then, in a moment, see
How soon this mightiness meets misery;
And if you can be merry then, I'll say
A man may weep upon his wedding day. (Pro.27-32)

These lines suggest the evanescence of worldly glory. Fortune, the blind goddess, raises her favorites high upon her wheel, then capriciously flings them to earth. It is an old theme; in the permutations of Fortune's wheel medieval writers discerned the quintessential tragic pattern. According to Chaucer's Monk, in The Canterbury Tales,

Tragedie is to seyn a certeyn storie,
As olde bookes maken us memorie,
Of hym that stood in greet prosperitee,
And is yfallen out of heigh degree
Into myserie, and endeth wrecchedly.
(Prologue, Monk's Tale, 1973-77)

Henry VIII presents, in the context of Renaissance court life, a trio of such falls from high degree.

The victims, so different in their characters and lives, share not only a common fortune but also, at the last, a common pathos, which they fully savor. Buckingham's stoic forbearance in the face of death gives place in his final words to a self-pitying note, however sober and controlled:

All good people,
Pray for me! I must now forsake ye; the last hour
Of my long weary life is come upon me.
Farewell!
And when you would say something that is sad,
Speak how I fell. I have done, and God forgive me.
(II.i.131-36)

No sooner has he departed the scene than the two Gentlemen, having lamented his passing, discuss the impending fall of Katherine in almost identical terms (" 'Tis woeful"). The discarded queen, "sick to death," is granted a dream of eternal happiness to come. In a last assertion of regal greatness, she dismisses an unintentionally negligent messenger, then prepares for the end. "I must to bed," she cries to Patience;

Call in more women. When I am dead, good wench,
Let me be used with honor. Strew me over
With maiden flowers, that all the world may know
I was a chaste wife to my grave. Embalm me,
Then lay me forth. Although unqueened, yet like
A queen and daughter to a king, inter me.
I can no more. (IV.ii.167-73)

It is perhaps the play's most affecting moment.

The most stunning of the three downfalls, however, is that of Wolsey. For a suitable epitaph we may turn to a contemporary of Shakespeare who suffered a fate analogous to that of the cardinal. "The rising unto place is laborious," Francis Bacon wrote in his essay "Of Great Place," and by pains men come to greater pains; and it is sometimes base; and by indignities men come to dignities. The standing is slippery, and the regress is either a downfall or at least an eclipse, which is a melancholy thing.

Although the cardinal is not the play's protagonist, his cold presence dominates the first three acts. Somehow he must be humanized in defeat, and in the space of a hundred lines the arrogant prince of the church is humbled and reconciled to his new condition. Like Katherine and Buckingham, he prays for his king. He also shows solicitude for the future of his servant Cromwell, and for the first time we do not suspect a selfish motive lurking behind the apparent altruism. Wolsey weeps—the scene is frankly sentimental—and repents (a trifle smugly) his worldliness:

O Cromwell, Cromwell,
Had I but served my God with half the zeal
I served my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies. (III.ii.455-58)

There is only slight foreshadowing (in II.ii) of Wolsey's fall, and the transformation itself, read in the study, seems somewhat abrupt; but in a spectacular drama of comparatively external nature, subtle nuances of character portrayal are hardly required. The scene has worked superbly on the stage, as is attested by the fact that the role of Wolsey has attracted a number of great actors, among them Kemble, Macready, and Kean.

If the three successive falls from greatness are well contrived to move an audience to generous sympathy, they do not engage the deeper tragic emotions, nor were they intended to do so, as the larger pattern of the play makes clear. Scenes of calamity alternate throughout with happier occasions. The splendid festivities in York House (I.iv), for example, follow hard upon the Surveyor's devastating testimony against Buckingham; the gaiety of the masque is in turn succeeded by the somber episode of the duke's entry after his arraignment. At the same time that Katherine's misfortunes press in upon her, we watch Ann Bullen's star rise. And so on. Such juxtapositions are not unusual in Elizabethan plays, nor, for that matter, in dramatic art generally, but in this case the total effect is of a complex tonal and thematic orchestration.

In the concluding movement of Henry VIII, in which the grand design stands fully revealed, the joyous strain triumphs. The fourth—and last—of the threatened falls does not come to pass. Cranmer, who never aspired to greatness, is tested in the crucible of courtly intrigue. Like his predecessors, he is the object of plots, but he undergoes special humiliations: the Archbishop of Canterbury is made to cool his heels outside the council chamber door with grooms and lackeys. Yet he emerges unscathed, and no heads roll as a result. Instead there is forgiveness and reconciliation, in which Cranmer, his accusers, and the king all participate. The archbishop can then go on to officiate at the christening of Princess Elizabeth and to utter the speeches of prophetic rapture in the final scene. Machinations have ceased. Some private individuals, most notably Katherine, have in the course of the drama suffered unjust deprivations, but the commonwealth has prospered. A newborn infant symbolizes happier days to come.

Henry VIII is unique among Shakespeare's histories in not depicting an England at war or under the threat of war. Thematically the play has closer links with the immediately preceding romances than with the two historical tetralogies of a previous decade. We are not so far removed after all from the world of The Tempest, in which sinister plots are thwarted, enemies are reconciled, and hopeful auguries attend a younger generation. In the character of Henry, who presides over the action by exercising the quasi-magical prerogatives of kingship, we have a figure in some ways analogous to Prospero.⁷

The destinies of all the principal personages lie in Henry's hands. A Buckingham or a Wolsey or a Katherine may absorb attention for a time, but they all pass from the stage, not to return; Henry abides, and his presence gives a measure of narrative unity to heterogeneous events. Yet his actual role is limited—he speaks fewer than 450 lines—and the king makes no appearance whatever in Act IV. No very searching portrayal of him is attempted in the play that bears his name. For a modern audience he must present difficulties: the figure cut by Shakespeare's Henry differs so strikingly from the popular image derived from more recent histories or from films and stage plays. In the Jacobean Henry we do not see the insatiable thirster after sovereignty or the profligate who squandered his parsimonious father's treasure in pursuit of the sport of kings. Nor do we see the gourmand and sensualist, the devourer of drumsticks and wives. Great events associated with Henry's reign lie outside the scope of the action: the Reformation and the dissolution of the monasteries, the martyrdom of Sir Thomas More, the execution of Anne Boleyn three brief years after the christening celebrated in the play.

The Henry of The Life of King Henry the Eighth wears the mantle of royalty securely. At first, it is true, his exalted position shields him from knowledge of the intrigues in his own court; he has never heard of Wolsey's oppressive tax scheme for which (as a matter of historical fact) Henry himself was responsible. But as the action unfolds, his awareness, and hence his authority, increase. Once he knows about Wolsey's perfidy, he rejects the cardinal decisively. In the Cranmer episode, Henry controls all the strings, but the manipulation serves national interests rather than any need for self-aggrandizement. Thus he would appear to approximate closely enough the popular patriot-monarch lauded by Holinshed and the other Tudor apologists.

⁷ The relationship of Henry VIII to Shakespeare's last plays is explored with penetrating subtlety (occasionally oversubtlety) by Foakes in the New Arden edition, Introduction, pp. xxxvii-lxii. Foakes also deals perceptively with the themes and structure of the play.

But what are we to make of the divorce? Much attention is given in the play to the king's conscientious scruple—after more than twenty years of wedlock!—about the propriety of his marriage to the widow of his own brother. On this issue of a wounded conscience Henry meditates privately, expatiates at length in public, and seeks counsel from the most learned scholars in Christendom. Yet before any divorce is bruited, we see him evidently attracted to the woman who will become his next wife. And before Katherine's trial—the results of which are a foregone conclusion—there is Suffolk's cynically revealing aside:

CHAMBERLAIN

It seems the marriage with his brother's wife
Has crept too near his conscience.

SUFFOLK [Aside.] No, his conscience
Has crept too near another lady. (II.ii.16–18)

Historically Henry's reasons for a divorce were several, but the overriding consideration was his need to continue the succession with a male heir, which Katherine had failed to produce and was no longer capable of producing. This motive is not glossed over in the play—indeed, Henry dwells on it at length (II.iv.184–97)—but the force of the point is blunted by the weight given to the king's scruple.

The problem is further complicated by the fact that the dramatists provide Henry with no self-revelatory soliloquies and by the related fact that his public pronouncements cannot always be taken at face value. In open court he declares:

Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life
And kingly dignity, we are contented
To wear our mortal state to come with her,
Katherine our queen, before the primest creature
That's paragoned o' th' world. (II.iv. 224–28)

This does not sound insincere, but hard upon Henry's tribute to his sweet bedfellow comes an aside (233–38) in which he expresses impatience with the "dilatatory sloth and tricks of Rome" that hinder the divorce; and in the next scene we have Katherine's complaint that he has long ceased to love her. It is as though the dramatists, having set out to extol Henry and, through him, England, were nevertheless unable—or unwilling—entirely to suppress undercurrents of motive and policy inconsistent with so simplified a view of him. The effect is of a disturbing ambiguity of character.

It is not the play's only ambiguity. Buckingham presents a similar problem, although to a lesser degree. Is he in fact a traitor or is he a wholly innocent sacrifice to Wolsey's malice? Our first inclination is to regard the duke simply as the victim of a frame-up, and certainly much weight is given to his wrongs. In the sympathetically conceived Katherine he has a stalwart defender. The chief witness against him bears, we know, a personal grudge, and Buckingham protests his innocence in moving terms as he goes to the block. Yet the king's anger in I.ii has a righteous accent, and if he is responsible, however unwittingly, for a judicial murder, he is not afterward disturbed by it. The Surveyor's testimony is never rebutted. Buckingham himself admits that, "upon the premises," he has been justly tried by his peers, and the Second Gentleman's last remark about him has a proviso: "If the duke be guiltless. . . ." After Buckingham's last exit, fairly early in the play, little is made of the matter apart from an inconclusive exchange between Surrey and Wolsey in III.ii. The "woefulness" of Buckingham's fall we do not question, but his degree of actual guilt—if any—remains in doubt. A faint unease persists in the reader's mind.

Such puzzlements, which have prompted reservations about the play on the part of some critics, loom larger in the study than on the stage. In the theater attention focuses first on the splendor and fanfare of the grand processional entries and the ceremonies of public life. The contrastingly intimate scenes, in which a young maid of honor is shown royal favor while her defeated elders confront isolation and imminent death, appeal more directly to the emotions, if on no very profound level. Then there are the great set speeches: we are stirred by the eloquence—impassioned or elegiac—of Buckingham's apologia, Katherine's defense of the sanctity of her marriage, and Wolsey's long farewell to all his greatness. And finally, along with the multitude on the stage and in the audience, we are swept up in the visionary ecstasy of the ritualistic episode of the christening. Henry VIII is Shakespeare's festive history. It is appropriate that the play was chosen for performance at the Old Vic in London in 1953 to celebrate the coronation of Queen Elizabeth II.

A NOTE ON THE SOURCES

The chief sources for the play, as for Shakespeare's great earlier cycle of historical dramas on the reigns of the English monarchs from Richard II through Richard III, is Raphael Holinshed's Chronicles of England, Scotland, and Ireland (second ed., 1587). It is depended upon throughout, except for the story of the plot against Cranmer, and his vindication, in Act V; here the authority, closely followed, is John Foxe's Acts and Monuments, the enlarged 1570 version of which went through a number of editions before the close of the century. Whether the playwright(s) also profited from other narrative chronicles is a matter for speculation: the phraseological parallels adduced by scholars are often less than striking, and it is well known that the chroniclers themselves borrowed from one another freely. But Edward Hall's Union of the Two Noble and Illustre Families of Lancaster and York (1542) may have been consulted, and it is possible—although not demonstrable—that Wolsey's images of the star past its meridian and of the bladder of pride (III.ii.224–28, 359–62) derive from John Speed's History of Great Britain (1611). More persuasive is the evidence that the author(s) knew Samuel Rowley's boisterously farcical and blithely anachronistic drama on Henry's reign, When You See Me You Know Me, printed in 1605 and perhaps revived before being reprinted in 1613—the probable year of first performance for Henry VIII. The sneering references in the latter to "a merry bawdy play" consisting of "fool and fight" (Pro.14–19) may allude to When You See Me, which nevertheless seems to have provided some minor inspiration, most notably in Henry's persistent ejaculation, "Ha!", used in both works. A significant indirect source is George Cavendish's Life of Wolsey, which, although not published until 1641, was utilized by the chroniclers from Stow (1565) onward.

But of the direct and continuous dependence on Holinshed in Henry VIII there can be no question. The historical events of the play, from the Field of the Cloth of Gold in 1520 to the christening of Princess Elizabeth in 1533, cover roughly a third of Henry's long reign (1509–47). Four great episodes dominate this segment of Holinshed's narrative: Buckingham's fall, the divorce, Wolsey's disgrace, and the king's remarriage, culminating in the christening of the future queen. So too do they dominate the play. The source was evidently read with great care. At times, as in Katherine's long speech (II.iv.11–55), the dramatic blank verse is the prose of the Chronicles paraphrased (although even here there are significant additions). Holinshed is levied upon also for the elaborate stage directions for the ceremonial entries and processions in II.iv, IV.i, and V.v.

If adherence to the source was close, it was not, however, slavish. The abundant material of the Chronicles is winnowed, rearranged, and combined in accordance with the necessities of the dramatic design. Certain changes were dictated by limitations of stage personnel: the pageantry of the coronation, calling for a multitude of supernumeraries, had to be reduced. Other alterations are more substantive. Holinshed's account of the unfortunate Bishop of Durham who mistakenly sent the king a book documenting his private affairs, and thus enabled Wolsey to destroy him, is transferred to the cardinal himself (III.ii.121 ff.). In the play the first hint of the king's attraction to Anne Bullen precedes Buckingham's execution, and is manifested at a feast which, with nice artistic economy, also illustrates the lavish scale on which Wolsey lives (I.iv). Historically, the king set his affections on Anne eight years after the execution, and she does not appear in Holinshed's description of the revel at York House that provides the basis for this scene.

Perhaps the most interesting transformations involve the portrayal of character. It is true that the king remains, in play as in chronicle, the exemplary monarch whose motives, unlike those of lesser mortals, are never critically examined. But on the stage his moments of anger or of withdrawal into pensiveness reveal facets of the smiling or stern public figure that Holinshed does not attempt to suggest. So, too, the Henry of the play gains in authority in the course of the action; hoodwinked by Wolsey in the earlier scenes, he is nobody's fool in Act V. Again the source offers no precedent. In the play the fallen Wolsey is invested with a pathos and dignity only barely hinted at in the chronicle. Katherine is endowed by the dramatist(s) with greater strength and regality than she displays in Holinshed, an effect in part achieved by such devices as her fearless—if unavailing—defense of Buckingham and accusations against the cardinal in the king's presence (I.ii.9 ff.).

By such means are the prosaic historical narratives of Holinshed and Foxe transformed into complex poetic drama.

A NOTE ON THE TEXT

The Famous History of the Life of King Henry the Eighth did not achieve publication until seven years after Shakespeare's death, when it appeared in the collected First Folio of his works as the last of the history plays. The 1623 Folio furnishes the only authoritative early edition of Henry VIII. Fortunately it is a very good one: behind the Folio text apparently lies a careful scribal transcription of the authors'—or author's—own manuscript. To the playwright(s), rather than the prompter, we presumably owe the very full stage directions called for by a spectacular historical drama. With few exceptions, entrances and exits are fully indicated. Speech prefixes are throughout correct and unambiguous, except for confusion of the First and Second Gentleman at IV.i.20–23 and 55, and of the Lord Chamberlain with the Lord Chancellor at V.iii.85 and 87. Indeed, the text as a whole is very clean and straightforward, with relatively little corruption or error of any kind, although the language—often complex in Shakespeare's mature manner—not surprisingly presents a number of interpretative problems.

The Folio text directly or indirectly provides the basis for all subsequent editions of Henry VIII. Wherever possible the present edition reproduces it, modernizing spelling and altering punctuation and verse lineations where the editor's sense of literary and dramatic fitness dictated. The Latin act and scene divisions of the Folio have been translated, and a new division (as in the Globe text) is introduced after V.ii.35. Consequently, in the fifth act the Folio's "Scena Tertia" and "Scena Quarta" are rendered as V.iv and V.v respectively. Abbreviations have been expanded and speech prefixes regularized. Stage directions have been amplified where necessary, such additions being printed within brackets. Obvious typographical errors have been corrected and eccentric spellings regularized where appropriate without notice, but all significant emendations are noted below. In this list the adopted reading is given in boldface type, followed by the rejected Folio reading in roman type or a note of the Folio's omission within brackets.

I.i.42–45 All . . . function [F assigns to Buckingham] 47 as you guess [F assigns to Norfolk] 63 web, 'a Web. O 69–70 that? . . . hell, that, . . . Hell? 183 He [F omits] 200 Hereford Hertford 219 Parke Pecke 221 Nicholas Michael 226 lord Lords
I.ii.157 feared feare 165 confession's Commissions 171 win F omits] 181 To For this to 191 Bulmer Blumer
I.iii.12 saw see 13 Or A 59 wherewithal. In him wherewithall in him
II.i.20 Parke Pecke 86 mark make
II.iii.14 quarrel quarrell 61 you you, to you
II.iv.172 A And 217 summons. Unsolicited Summons unsolicited

III.i.21 coming, now I think on't comming; now I thinke on't 23 s.d. Campeius Campian 61 your our III.ii.143 glad gald 172 filed fill'd 293 Who Whom 344
 Chattels Castles
 IV.i.20-23 I thank . . . business? [F assigns to First Gentleman]
 34 Kimbolton Kymmalton 55 And sometimes falling ones.
 [F assigns to Second Gentleman] 101 Stokesly Stokeley
 IV.ii.7 think thanke 50 honor from Honor. From

V.i.24 thee the 37 time Lime 140 precipice Precept 177
 s.d. [Exeunt.] Exit Ladie
 V.ii.8 piece Peere
 V.iii.85-86 This . . . lords. [F assigns to Lord Chamberlain]
 87-91 Then . . . agreed, lords? [F assigns to Lord Chamberlain]
 125 bare base 133 this his 174 heart hearts
 V.v.37 ways way 70 your you

THE LIFE OF KING HENRY THE EIGHTH

[Dramatis Personae]

KING HENRY THE EIGHTH
CARDINAL WOLSEY
CARDINAL CAMPEIUS
CAPUCIUS ambassador from the Emperor Charles V
CRANMER Archbishop of Canterbury
DUKE OF NORFOLK
DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM
DUKE OF SUFFOLK
EARL OF SURREY
LORD CHAMBERLAIN
LORD CHANCELLOR
GARDINER Bishop of Winchester
BISHOP OF LINCOLN
LORD ABERGAVENNY
LORD SANDS
SIR HENRY GUILDFORD
SIR THOMAS LOVELL
SIR ANTHONY DENNY
SIR NICHOLAS VAUX
SECRETARIES to Wolsey
CROMWELL servant to Wolsey

GRIFFITH gentleman usher to Queen Katherine
THREE GENTLEMEN
DOCTOR BUTTS physician to the king
GARTER KING-AT-ARMS
SURVEYOR to the Duke of Buckingham
BRANDON and a Sergeant-at-Arms
DOOR-KEEPER of the council chamber
PAGE to Gardiner A CRIER
PORTER and his MAN

QUEEN KATHERINE wife to King Henry, afterward divorced
ANNE BULLEN her maid of honor, afterward queen
AN OLD LADY friend to Anne Bullen
PATIENCE woman to Queen Katherine

Several LORDS and LADIES in the dumb shows
WOMEN attending upon the queen SCRIBES
OFFICERS GUARDS OTHER ATTENDANTS SPIRITS

Scene: London; Westminster; Kimbolton]

THE PROLOGUE

I come no more to make you laugh.° Things now
That bear a weighty and a serious brow,
Sad, high, and working,° full of state° and woe,
Such noble scenes as draw the eye to flow,
We now present. Those that can pity, here
May, if they think it well, let fall a tear:
The subject will deserve it. Such as give

Their money out of hope they may believe
May here find truth° too. Those that come to see
Only a show or two, and so agree
The play may pass, if they be still and willing,
I'll undertake may see away their shilling°
Richly in two short hours.° Only they
That come to hear a merry bawdy play,
A noise of targets,° or to see a fellow
In a long motley coat guarded with yellow,°

9 truth possibly alluding to the play's alternative title, All Is True 12 shilling the admission price for an expensive seat near the stage 13 two short hours a conventional reference to performance duration; not to be taken literally 15 targets shields 16 In . . . yellow in the parti-colored costume of the professional fool, trimmed ("guarded") in yellow

The decorative border shown above appeared on the first page of Henry VIII in the First Folio edition of Shakespeare's plays, 1623.
Pro.1 no . . . laugh the previous play was presumably a comedy 3 Sad . . . wo king serious, elevated, and moving; state dignity

Will be deceived;° for, gentle hearers, know,
 To rank our chosen truth with such a show
 As fool and fight is, beside forfeiting
 Our own brains and the opinion that we bring 20
 To make that only true we now intend,°
 Will leave us never an understanding friend.°
 Therefore, for goodness' sake, and as you are known
 The first and happiest hearers of the town,°
 Be sad, as we would make ye. Think ye see 25
 The very persons of our noble story
 As° they were living. Think you see them great,
 And followed with the general throng and sweat
 Of thousand friends. Then, in a moment, see
 How soon this mightiness meets misery; 30
 And if you can be merry then, I'll say
 A man may weep upon his wedding day.

A C T I

Scene I. [London. An antechamber in the palace.]

Enter the Duke of NORFOLK at one door; at the other the Duke of BUCKINGHAM and the Lord ABERGAVENNY.

BUCKINGHAM

Good morrow, and well met. How have ye done
 Since last we saw° in France?

NORFOLK

I thank your grace,
 Healthful, and ever since a fresh° admirer
 Of what I saw there.

BUCKINGHAM

An untimely ague°
 Stayed me a prisoner in my chamber when 5
 Those suns of glory,° those two lights of men,
 Met in the vale of Andren.

NORFOLK

'Twixt Guynes and Arde.°
 I was then present; saw them salute on horseback;
 Beheld them when they lighted,° how they clung
 In their embracement, as° they grew together; 10
 Which had they, what four throned ones could have weighed°
 Such a compounded one?

BUCKINGHAM

All the whole time
 I was my chamber's prisoner.°

NORFOLK

Then you lost
 The view of earthly glory. Men might say,
 Till this time pomp was single,° but now married 15
 To one above itself.° Each following day
 Became the next day's master,° till the last

17 deceived disappointed 19–21 beside . . . intend besides abandoning any claims to intelligence and our reputation for aiming to present only the truth 22 an understanding friend perhaps alluding to the groundlings—spectators standing under the stage—who were sometimes ironically praised for their “understanding” 24 first . . . town the best and most favorably disposed audience in London 27 As as if I.i.2 saw saw one another 3 fresh ready, eager 4 ague fever
 6 suns of glory i.e., Henry VIII and Francis I (with perhaps a quibble on suns = sons) 7 Guynes and Arde towns in Picardy lying on either side of the valley of Andren; Guynes was in English, Arde in French hands 9 lighted alighted 10 as as if 11 weighed equaled in weight 12–13 All . . .
prisoner historically, he was in fact present, whereas Norfolk was in England at the time 15 single i.e. relatively modest 15–16 married . . . itself united to constitute a greater pomp 16–17 Each . . . master each day taught something to the next, which superseded it (“master” = teacher)

Made former wonders its. Today the French,
 All clinquant,° all in gold, like heathen gods,
 Shone down the English; and tomorrow they 20
 Made Britain India:° every man that stood Showed like a mine. Their dwarfish pages were
 As cherubins, all gilt. The madams° too,
 Not used to toil, did almost sweat to bear
 The pride° upon them, that their very labor 25
 Was to them as a painting.° Now this masque°
 Was cried° incomparable, and th' ensuing night
 Made it a fool and beggar. The two kings,
 Equal in luster, were now best, now worst,
 As presence° did present them: him in eye 30
 Still him in praise;° and being present both,
 'Twas said they saw but one, and no discernor
 Durst wag his tongue in censure.° When these suns
 (For so they phrase° 'em) by their heralds challenged
 The noble spirits to arms, they did perform 35
 Beyond thought's compass, that former fabulous story,°

Being now seen possible enough, got credit,
 That Bevis° was believed.

BUCKINGHAM

O, you go far.

NORFOLK

As I belong to worship,° and affect
 In honor honesty,° the tract of everything 40
 Would by a good discourser lose some life
 Which action's self was tongue to.° All was royal;
 To the disposing of it nought rebelled.°
 Order gave each thing view;° the office° did Distinctly° his full function.

BUCKINGHAM

Who did guide—

I mean, who set the body and the limbs
 Of this great sport° together, as you guess?

NORFOLK

One, certes,° that promises no element°
 In such a business.

BUCKINGHAM

I pray you, who, my lord?

NORFOLK

All this was ord'red° by the good discretion 50
 Of the right reverend Cardinal of York.

BUCKINGHAM

The devil speed him!° No man's pie is freed
 From his ambitious finger. What had he
 To do in these fierce° vanities? I wonder

9 clinquant glittering 21 India probably not India;
 but the New World, whose gold mines yielded fabulous wealth 23 madams ladies 25 pride finery 25–26 their . . . painting their very exertion made them flushed, as if rouged 26 masque courtly spectacle 27 cried declared 30 presence being in public 30–31 him in eye . . . praise The one seen was always the one praised 32–33 no discernor . . .
censure no beholder dared choose one above the other 34 phrase describe 36 that . . . story so that stories formerly thought incredible 38 Bevis Bevis of Hampton, the legendary Saxon knight celebrated in medieval romance 39 worship the nobility 39–40 affect . . . honesty love truth as a point of honor 40–42 the tract . . . tongue to the course of all these events, however well narrated, would in the description lose some of the color and spark of the actuality 43 rebelled jarred 44 Order . . . view Everything was arranged so that it could easily be viewed; office official, or officials as a group 45 Distinctly i.e., without confusion 47 sport entertainment 48 certes certainly; promises no element would not be expected to share 50 ord'red arranged 52 The devil speed him The devil (rather than God) prosper him! 54 fierce extravagant

That such a keech° can with his very bulk
 Take up° the rays o' th' beneficial sun,°
 And keep it from the earth.
 NORFOLK Surely, sir,
 There's in him stuff° that puts him to these ends;
 For, being not propped by ancestry, whose grace
 Chalks successors their way,° nor called upon
 For high feats done to th' crown,° neither allied
 To eminent assistants,° but spiderlike,
 Out of his self-drawing° web, 'a gives us note,°
 The force of his own merit makes his way°—
 A gift° that heaven gives for him, which buys
 A place next to the king.
 ABERGAVENNY I cannot tell
 What heaven hath given him: let some graver eye
 Pierce into that. But I can see his pride Peep through each part of him. Whence has he that?
 If not from hell, the devil is a niggard,°
 Or has given all before, and he begins
 A new hell in himself.
 BUCKINGHAM Why the devil,
 Upon this French going out,° took he upon him
 (Without the privity° o' th' king) t' appoint
 Who should attend on him? He makes up the file°
 Of all the gentry, for the most part such
 To whom as great a charge° as little honor
 He meant to lay upon; and his own letter,
 The honorable board of council out,°
 Must fetch him in he papers.°
 ABERGAVENNY I do know
 Kinsmen of mine, three at the least, that have
 By this so sickened their estates that never
 They shall abound° as formerly.
 BUCKINGHAM O, many
 Have broke their backs with laying manors on 'em°
 For this great journey. What did this vanity°
 But minister communication of
 A most poor issue?°
 NORFOLK Grievingly I think,
 The peace between the French and us not values°
 The cost that did conclude it.
 BUCKINGHAM Every man,
 After the hideous storm that followed, was
 A thing inspired, and, not consulting,° broke
 Into a general prophecy:° that this tempest,
 Dashing the garment of this peace, aboded°

55 keech animal fat rolled into a lump (with a sneer at Wolsey's reputed origin as a butcher's son; cf. line 120) 56 Take up obstruct; sun i.e., the king 58 stuff qualities, capabilities 59–60 whose . . . way whose special excellence marks a path for followers 60–61 called . . . crown chosen in recognition of lofty exploits in behalf of the crown 62 assistants (1) public officials (2) supporters 63 self-drawing self-spinning; 'a . . . note he lets us know 64 makes his way wins him preferment 65 gift i.e., merit 70 If . . . niggard the devil is the source of pride, the sin for which Lucifer fell and hell was created 73 going out expedition 74 privity confidential participation 75 file list 77 charge expense 79 out unconsulted 80 fetch . . . papers fetch in whom he puts on his list 83 abound prosper 84 broke . . . 'em ruined themselves by pawning their estates to outfit themselves 85 vanity extravagance 86–87 minister . . . issue furnish occasion for unproductive talk (with a possible quibble on poor issue = impoverished heirs) 88 not values is not worth 91 not consulting i.e., one another 92 a general prophecy i.e., all prophesied the same 93 aboded foretold

55 The sudden breach on't.
 NORFOLK Which is budded out;
 For France hath flawed the league, and hath attached° 95
 Our merchants' goods at Bordeaux.
 ABERGAVENNY Is it therefore
 Th' ambassador is silenced?
 60 NORFOLK Marry,° is't.
 ABERGAVENNY
 A proper title of a peace,° and purchased
 At a superfluous rate!°
 BUCKINGHAM Why, all this business
 65 Our reverend cardinal carried.°
 NORFOLK Like it° your grace, 100
 The state takes notice of the private difference°
 Betwixt you and the cardinal. I advise you
 (And take it from a heart that wishes towards you Honor and plenteous° safety) that you read°
 70 The cardinal's malice and his potency° 105
 Together; to consider further that
 What his high hatred would effect wants not
 A minister° in his power. You know his nature,
 That he's revengeful, and I know his sword
 Hath a sharp edge. It's long and't may be said 110
 It reaches far, and where 'twill not extend,° Thither he darts it. Bosom up° my counsel;
 You'll find it wholesome.° Lo, where comes that rock
 That I advise your shunning.
Enter Cardinal WOLSEY, the purse° borne before him, certain of the GUARD, and two SECRETARIES with papers. The cardinal [WOLSEY] in his passage fixeth his eye on BUCKINGHAM, and BUCKINGHAM on him, both full of disdain.
 WOLSEY
 The Duke of Buckingham's surveyor,° ha? 115
 Where's his examination?°
 FIRST SECRETARY Here, so please you.
 WOLSEY
 Is he in person ready?
 FIRST SECRETARY Aye, please your grace.
 WOLSEY
 Well, we shall then know more, and Buckingham
 Shall lessen his big° look.
Exeunt Cardinal [WOLSEY] and his TRAIN.
 BUCKINGHAM
 This butcher's cur° is venomd-mouthed, and I 120
 Have not the power to muzzle him. Therefore best
 Not wake him in his slumber. A beggar's book
 Outworths a noble's blood.°
 NORFOLK What, are you chafed?°

95 flawed . . . attached broken the treaty and confiscated 97 Marry indeed (a mild oath, from "By the Virgin Mary") 98 A proper . . . peace an excellent contract of peace (ironic) 99 superfluous rate excessive cost 100 carried managed; Like it if it please (a courteous formula for volunteering unasked information) 101 difference disagreement 104 plenteous ample; read construe 105 potency power 107–08 wants . . . minister does not lack an agent 111 extend reach 112 Bosom up conceal within your bosom 113 wholesome sound 114 s.d. purse bag containing the Great Seal that is the insignia of the Lord Chancellor's office 115 surveyor overseer of an estate; Charles Knyvet, Buckingham's cousin 116 examination deposition 119 big haughty 120 butcher's cur referring to Wolsey's parentage 122–23 A beggar's . . . blood A beggar's book-learning is more esteemed than nobility of descent 123 chafed angry

Ask God for temp'rance; that's th' appliance only°
Which your disease requires.

BUCKINGHAM I read in's looks 125
Matter against me, and his eye reviled
Me as his abject object.° At this instant
He bores° me with some trick. He's gone to th'
king;
I'll follow and outstare him.

NORFOLK Stay, my lord, 130
And let your reason with your choler question°
What 'tis you go about. To climb steep hills Requires slow pace at first. Anger is like
A full hot° horse who, being allowed his way,
Self-mettle° tires him. Not a man in England
Can advise me like you; be to yourself 135
As you would to your friend.

BUCKINGHAM I'll to the king,
And from a mouth of honor° quite cry down
This Ipswich° fellow's° insolence, or proclaim
There's difference in no persons.°

NORFOLK Be advised.° 140
Heat not a furnace for your foe so hot
That it do singe yourself. We may outrun
By violent swiftness that which we run at,
And lose by overrunning.° Know you not
The fire that mounts the liquor° till't run o'er
In seeming to augment it wastes it? Be advised. 145
I say again there is no English soul
More stronger° to direct you than yourself,
If with the sap° of reason you would quench,
Or but allay, the fire of passion.

BUCKINGHAM Sir, 150
I am thankful to you, and I'll go along
By your prescription; but this top-proud° fellow (Whom from the flow of gall I name not, but From sincere motions)° by intelligence°
And proofs as clear as founts in July° when
We see each grain of gravel, I do know 155
To be corrupt and treasonous.

NORFOLK Say not "treasonous."

BUCKINGHAM
To th' king I'll say't, and make my vouch° as strong
As shore of rock. Attend.° This holy fox,
Or wolf, or both (for he is equal rav'nous
As he is subtle, and as prone to mischief 160
As able to perform't, his mind and place°
Infecting one another, yea, reciprocally)
Only to show his pomp° as well in France

124 appliance only only remedy 127 abject object object of contempt 128 bores cheats 130 with . . . question dispute with your anger 133 full hot high-spirited 134 Self- mettle his own natural vigor 137 from . . . honor speaking as a nobleman 138 Ipswich Wolsey's birthplace; fellow's usually applied to inferiors; cf. III.ii.280 and IV.ii.100 139
There's . . . persons distinctions of rank no longer matter;
Be advised Take care 143 overrunning running beyond 144 mounts the liquor causes the liquor to rise 147 More stronger better qualified (double comparatives, and also superlatives, are frequent in Shakespeare) 148 sap juice, fluid 151 top-proud excessively proud 152-53 Whom . . . motions of whom I thus speak not out of spite but from sincere motives 153 intelligence intelligence reports 154 founts in July i.e., streams no longer muddied by spring floods ("July" is accented on the first syllable) 157 vouch allegation 158 Attend Listen 161 mind and place inclinations and position 163
pomp magnificence

As here at home, suggests° the king our master
To this last costly treaty, th' interview,° 165
That swallowed so much treasure, and like a glass
Did break i' th' wrenching.°

NORFOLK Faith, and so it did.

BUCKINGHAM
Pray give me favor,° sir. This cunning cardinal
The articles o' th' combination drew° 170
As himself pleased; and they were ratified
As he cried, "Thus let be," to as much end
As give a crutch to th' dead. But our count-cardinal
Has done this, and 'tis well; for worthy Wolsey,
Who cannot err, he did it. Now this follows
(Which, as I take it, is a kind of puppy 175
To th' old dam,° treason) Charles the emperor,
Under pretense to see the queen his aunt
(For 'twas indeed his color,° but he came To whisper Wolsey) here makes visitation.° 180
His fears were that the interview betwixt
England and France might through their amity
Breed him some prejudice, for from this league
Peeped harms that menaced him. He privily°
Deals with our cardinal; and, as I trow° 185
(Which I do well, for I am sure the emperor
Paid ere he promised, whereby his suit was granted
Ere it was asked) but when the way was made
And paved with gold, the emperor thus desired,
That he would please to alter the king's course
And break the foresaid peace. Let the king know, 190
As soon he shall by me, that thus the cardinal
Does buy and sell° his honor as he pleases,
And for his own advantage.

150 NORFOLK I am sorry
To hear this of him, and could wish he were Something mistaken° in't.

BUCKINGHAM No, not a syllable: 195
I do pronounce° him in that very shape
He shall appear in proof.°

Enter BRANDON, a SERGEANT-AT-ARMS before him, and two or three of the GUARD.

BRANDON

Your office, sergeant: execute it.

160 SERGEANT

Sir,
My lord the Duke of Buckingham, and Earl
Of Hereford, Stafford, and Northampton, I 200
Arrest thee of high treason, in the name
Of our most sovereign king.

BUCKINGHAM Lo you,° my lord,
The net has fall'n upon me! I shall perish
Under device and practice.°

164 suggests prompts (used of the devil) 165 interview "ceremonial meeting of princes" (Foakes) 167 wrenching rinsing 168 Pray . . . favor Please hear me out 169 articles . . .
drew drew up the terms of the peace treaty 176 dam mother 178 color pretext 179 makes visitation pays a visit 183 privily secretly 184 as I trow as I believe (the principal clause required after the parenthetical comment does not appear; grammar has yielded to the speaker's emotion, but the sense of the passage is clear) 192 buy and sell traffic in 195 Some- thing mistaken to some extent misinterpreted 196 pro- nounce declare 197 He . . . proof experience will reveal him 202 Lo you behold 204 device and practice plots and intrigues

BRANDON I am sorry
To see you ta'en from liberty, to look on
The business present.° 'Tis his highness' pleasure
You shall to th' Tower.° 205

BUCKINGHAM It will help me nothing
To plead mine innocence, for that due is on me
Which makes my whit'st part black. The will of heav'n
Be done in this and all things! I obey. 210
O my Lord Aberga'ny, fare you well!

BRANDON
Nay, he must bear you company. [To ABERGA-
VENNY.] The king
Is pleased you shall to th' Tower, till you know
How he determines further.

ABERGAVENNY As the duke said,
The will of heaven be done, and the king's pleasure 215
By me obeyed!

BRANDON Here is a warrant from
The king t' attach° Lord Montacute, and the bodies°
Of the duke's confessor, John de la Car,
One Gilbert Parke, his councillor—

BUCKINGHAM So, so;
These are the limbs o' th' plot. No more, I hope. 220

BRANDON
A monk o' th' Chartreux.°

BUCKINGHAM O, Nicholas Hopkins?

BRANDON He.

BUCKINGHAM
My surveyor is false; the o'er-great cardinal
Hath showed him gold. My life is spanned° already.
I am the shadow of poor Buckingham,
Whose figure even this instant cloud puts on, 225
By dark'ning my clear sun.° My lord, farewell.
Exeunt.

Scene II. [The same. The council chamber.]

Cornets. Enter KING Henry, leaning on the cardinal's shoulder; the NOBLES, [a SECRETARY of the cardinal's,] and Sir Thomas LOVELL. The cardinal [WOLSEY] places himself under the king's feet° on his right side.

KING
My life itself, and the best heart° of it,
Thanks you for this great care. I stood i' th' level°
Of a full-charged confederacy,° and give thanks
To you that choked it. Let be called before us
That gentleman of Buckingham's.° In person 5
I'll hear him his confessions justify,°
And point by point the treasons of his master
He shall again relate.
A noise within, crying "Room for the queen!"

205-06 to look . . . present (1) and to see what is now happening (2) to be involved in the present affair 207 Tower the Tower of London (where suspected traitors were imprisoned) 217 attach arrest; bodies persons 221 Chartreux Charterhouse (i.e., a Carthusian) 223 spanned measured out 225-26 Whose . . . sun whose form is at this instant clouded by misfortune that dims my glory and alienates me from my king ("sun" may refer to both Buckingham and Henry)
I.i.s.d. under . . . feet at the feet of the king, who is seated on a raised and canopied "state," or throne 1 best heart very core 2 i' th' level in direct range 3 full-charged confederacy fully loaded conspiracy 5 That . . . Buckingham's the surveyor referred to at I.i.222 6 justify confirm

[KATHERINE, who is] ushered by the Duke of NORFOLK.
Enter the QUEEN, [Duke of] NORFOLK and [Duke of] SUFFOLK. She kneels. KING riseth from his state, takes her up, kisses and placeth her by him.

QUEEN KATHERINE
Nay, we must longer kneel: I am a suitor.

KING
Arise, and take place° by us. Half your suit 10
Never name to us: you have half our power.
The other moiety° ere you ask is given.
Repeat your will,° and take it.

QUEEN KATHERINE Thank your majesty.
That you would love yourself, and in that love
Not unconsiderèd leave your honor nor 15
The dignity of your office, is the point
Of my petition.

KING Lady mine, proceed.

QUEEN KATHERINE
I am solicited,° not by a few,
And those of true condition,° that your subjects 20
Are in great grievance. There have been commissions
Sent down among 'em, which hath flawed° the heart
Of all their loyalties; wherein although,
My good Lord Cardinal, they vent reproaches
Most bitterly on you as putter-on°
Of these exactions, yet the king our master— 25
Whose honor heaven shield from soil!—even he escapes not
Language unmannerly; yea, such which breaks
The sides of loyalty, and almost appears
In loud rebellion.

NORFOLK Not almost appears—
It doth appear. For, upon these taxations, 30
The clothiers all, not able to maintain
The many to them 'longing,° have put off
The spinsters, carders, fullers,° weavers, who,
Unfit for other life, compelled by hunger
And lack of other means, in desperate manner 35
Daring th' event to th' teeth,° are all in uproar,
And danger serves among them.°

KING Taxation?
Wherein? And what taxation? My Lord Cardinal,
You that are blamed for it alike with us,
Know you of this taxation?

WOLSEY Please you, sir, 40
I know but of a single part° in aught
Pertains to th' state, and front but in that file
Where others tell steps with me.°

QUEEN KATHERINE No, my lord?
You know no more than others? But you frame Things that are known alike,° which are not wholesome 45

10 take place be seated 12 moiety half 13 Repeat your will state your wish 18 solicited informed by petitioners 19 true condition loyal disposition 21 flawed broken 24 putter-on instigator 32 to them 'longing employed by them 33 spinsters, carders, fullers "spinsters" = spinners (usually female); carders combed out impurities from the wool; fullers cleansed the cloth by beating 36 Daring . . . teeth defiantly daring the worst 37 serves among them is welcomed as a comrade 41 a single part i.e., my own individual share 42-43 front . . . me only march in the front rank of those who keep in step with me, i.e., share my responsibility 44-45 frame . . . alike devise measures known to all alike (in the council)

To° those which would not know them, and yet must Perforce be their acquaintance.° These exactions (Whereof my sovereign would have note),° they are Most pestilent° to th' hearing; and to bear 'em
The back is sacrifice to th' load. They say
They are devised by you, or else you suffer
Too hard an exclamation.°

KING Still exaction!
The nature of it? In what kind, let's know,
Is this exaction?

QUEEN KATHERINE

I am much too venturous
In tempting of your patience, but am boldened
Under your promised pardon. The subject's grief° Comes through commissions, which compels from each

The sixth part of his substance, to be levied
Without delay; and the pretense° for this Is named your wars in France. This makes bold mouths.

Tongues spit their duties out, and cold hearts freeze
Allegiance° in them. Their curses now
Live where their prayers did, and it's come to pass,
This tractable obedience is a slave
To each incensèd will.° I would your highness
Would give it quick consideration, for
There is no primer baseness.°

KING By my life,
This is against our pleasure.

WOLSEY And for me,

I have no further gone in this than by
A single voice,° and that not passed me but
By learned approbation of the judges. If I am
Traduced by ignorant tongues, which neither know
My faculties° nor person, yet will be
The chronicles of my doing, let me say
'Tis but the fate of place,° and the rough brake°
That virtue must go through. We must not stint
Our necessary actions in the fear
To cope° malicious censurers, which ever,
As rav'nous fishes, do a vessel follow
That is new-trimmed,° but benefit no further Than vainly longing. What we oft do best,
By sick° interpreters (once° weak ones) is
Not ours or not allowed;° what worst, as oft,
Hitting a grosser quality,° is cried up
For our best act. If we shall stand still,
In fear our motion° will be mocked or carped at,
We should take root here where we sit,
Or sit state-statues only.°

KING Things done well,
And with a care, exempt themselves from fear.

45-46 wholesome To (1) beneficial to (2) approved by 47 their acquaintance acquainted with them 48 note knowledge 49 pestilent offensive 52 exclamation reproach 57 grief grievance 60 pretense pretext 63 Allegiance four syllables 65-66 This . . . will this willing obedience of theirs has given way to angry passion 68 primer baseness "mischief more urgently in need of redress" (Foakes) 71 voice vote 74 faculties qualities 76 place high office; brake thicket 79 cope encounter 81 new-trimmed newly made seaworthy 83 sick unsound; once in short 84 Not . . .
allowed denied us or condemned 85 Hitting . . . quality appealing to the baser sort 87 motion (1) movement (2) proposal 89 state-statues only mere replicas of statesmen

Things done without example,° in their issue°
Are to be feared. Have you a precedent
Of this commission? I believe, not any.
We must not rend° our subjects from our laws,
And stick them in our will.° Sixth part of each? 95
A trembling° contribution! Why, we take
From every tree lop,° bark, and part o' th' timber,
And though we leave it with a root, thus hacked,°
The air will drink the sap. To every county
Where this is questioned° send our letters with 100
Free pardon to each man that has denied
The force° of this commission. Pray look to't;
I put it to your care.

WOLSEY [To the SECRETARY.] A word with you.

Let there be letters writ to every shire
Of the king's grace and pardon. The grievèd commons 105
Hardly conceive° of me: let it be noised
That through our° intercession this revokement
And pardon comes. I shall anon° advise you
Further in the proceeding. Exit SECRETARY.

Enter SURVEYOR.

QUEEN KATHERINE

I am sorry that the Duke of Buckingham 110
Is run in° your displeasure.

KING It grieves many.
The gentleman is learned and a most rare° speaker;
To Nature none more bound;° his training such
That he may furnish and instruct great teachers,
And never seek for aid out of° himself. Yet see, 115
When these so noble benefits° shall prove
Not well disposed,° the mind growing once corrupt,
They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly
Than ever they were fair. This man so complete,
Who was enrolled 'mongst wonders, and when we, 120
Almost with ravished listening,° could not find
His hour of speech a minute—he, my lady,
Hath into monstrous habits° put the graces
That once were his, and is become as black
As if besmeared in hell. Sit by us. You shall hear— 125
This was his gentleman in trust°—of him
Things to strike honor sad. Bid him recount
The fore-recited practices,° whereof
We cannot feel too little, hear too much.

WOLSEY

Stand forth, and with bold spirit relate what° you, 130
Most like a careful subject, have collected°
Out of the Duke of Buckingham.

KING Speak freely.

SURVEYOR

First, it was usual with him—every day

91 example precedent; issue consequences 94 rend pluck 95 stick . . . will i.e., make them creatures of our arbitrary power 96 trembling accompanied by, or causing, trembling 97 lop smaller branches and twigs 98 thus hacked when it is thus hacked 100 questioned disputed 102 force validity 106 Hardly conceive (1) think harshly (2) scarcely have any conception 107 our note his use of the royal pronoun 108 anon soon 111 Is run in has incurred 112 rare accomplished 113 bound indebted (for his endowments) 115 out of from outside 116 benefits natural gifts 117 disposed applied 121 Almost . . . listening listening almost spellbound 123 habits garments 126 in trust trusted 128 fore-recited practices already revealed plots 130 what i.e., what information 131 collected gathered (by spying)

It would infect his speech—that if the king
Should without issue die, he'll carry it° so
To make the scepter his. These very words
I've heard him utter to his son-in-law,
Lord Aberga'ny, to whom by oath he menaced
Revenge upon the cardinal.

WOLSEY Please your highness, note
This dangerous conception° in this point.
Not friended by his wish,° to your high person
His will is most malignant, and it stretches
Beyond you to your friends.

QUEEN KATHERINE My learned Lord Cardinal,
Deliver all with charity.

KING Speak on.
How grounded he his title to the crown
Upon our fail?° To this point hast thou heard him
At any time speak aught?

SURVEYOR He was brought to this
By a vain prophecy of Nicholas Henton.°

KING What was that Henton?

SURVEYOR Sir, a Chartreux friar,
His confessor, who fed him every minute
With words of sovereignty.°

KING How know'st thou this?

SURVEYOR
Not long before your highness sped to° France,
The duke being at the Rose,° within the parish
Saint Lawrence Poultny, did of me demand
What was the speech° among the Londoners
Concerning the French journey. I replied
Men feared the French would prove perfidious,
To the king's danger. Presently° the duke
Said 'twas the fear indeed and that he doubted°
'Twould prove the verity of certain words
Spoke by a holy monk "that oft," says he,
"Hath sent to me, wishing me to permit
John de la Car, my chaplain, a choice° hour
To hear from him a matter of some moment;
Whom after under the confession's seal
He solemnly had sworn that what he spoke
My chaplain to no creature living but
To me should utter, with demure° confidence
This pausingly ensued: 'Neither the king nor's heirs (Tell you the duke) shall prosper. Bid him strive
To win the love o' th' commonalty.° The duke
Shall govern England.' "

QUEEN KATHERINE If I know you well,
You were the duke's surveyor, and lost your office
On the complaint o' th' tenants. Take good heed
You charge not in your spleen° a noble person,
And spoil° your nobler soul.° I say, take heed;

135 Yes, heartily beseech you.

KING Let him on.

Go forward.

SURVEYOR On my soul, I'll speak but truth.
I told my lord the duke, by th' devil's illusions
The monk might be deceived, and that 'twas dangerous 180
To ruminate on this so far, until
It forged him° some design, which,° being believed,
It was much like to do. He answered, "Tush,
It can do me no damage"; adding further,
That, had the king in his last sickness failed,° 185
The cardinal's and Sir Thomas Lovell's heads
Should have gone off.

KING Ha! What, so rank?° Ah, ha!
There's mischief in this man. Canst thou say further?

SURVEYOR I can, my liege.

KING Proceed.

SURVEYOR Being at Greenwich,
After your highness had reprov'd the duke 190
About Sir William Bulmer—

KING I remember
Of such a time: being my sworn° servant,
The duke retained him his. But on. What hence?

SURVEYOR
"If" (quoth he), "I for this had been committed,
As to the Tower I thought, I would have played 195
The part my father meant to act upon
Th' usurper Richard, who, being at Salisbury,
Made suit to come in's presence; which if granted,
As he made semblance° of his duty, would Have put his knife into him."

KING A giant traitor! 200

WOLSEY
Now, madam, may his highness live in freedom,
And this man out of prison?

QUEEN KATHERINE God mend all!

KING
There's something more would out of thee. What say'st? 205

SURVEYOR
After "the duke his father," with the "knife,"
He stretched him,° and with one hand on his dagger, 205
Another spread on's breast, mounting° his eyes,
He did discharge a horrible oath whose tenor
Was, were he evil used,° he would outgo
His father by as much as a performance
Does an irresolute° purpose.

KING There's his period,° 210
To sheathe his knife in us. He is attached.°
Call him to present° trial. If he may Find mercy in the law, 'tis his; if none,
Let him not seek't of us. By day and night!
He's traitor to th' height.°

Exeunt. 215

135 carry it manage things 140 conception design 141
Not . . . wish not granted his wish (that the king should die childless) 146 fail (1) failure to beget an heir (2) death 148 Henton his name was in fact Nicholas Hopkins, Henton being the name of his priory 151 sovereignty i.e., relating to his accession to the throne 152 sped to set out for 153 the Rose a manor house belonging to Buckingham 155 speech report 158 Presently instantly 159 doubted suspected 163 choice suitable 168 demure solemn 171 commonalty common people 175 spleen malice 176 spoil destroy;
nobler soul moral nobility taking precedence over the nobility of rank mentioned in the previous line

182 forged him caused him to fashion; which the monk's words 185 failed died 187 rank (1) corrupt (2) full grown
(the plot) 192 sworn two syllables 199 semblance pretense
205 stretched him stretched himself to his full height 206 mounting raising 208 evil used badly treated 210 irreso-lute unfulfilled; period goal 211 attached arrested 212 present immediate 215 height utmost degree

Scene III. [An antechamber in the palace.]Enter Lord CHAMBERLAIN and Lord SANDS.

CHAMBERLAIN

Is't possible the spells of France should juggle
Men into such strange mysteries?°

SANDS

New customs,

Though they be never so ridiculous
(Nay, let 'em be unmanly) yet are followed.

CHAMBERLAIN

As far as I see, all the good our English
Have got by the late voyage is but merely
A fit or two o' th' face;° but they are shrewd° ones,
For when they hold 'em,° you would swear directly
Their very noses had been counsellors
To Pepin or Clotharius,° they keep state° so.

5

SANDS

They have all new legs,° and lame ones; one would take it,That never saw 'em pace° before, the spavin
Or springhalt° reigned among 'em.

10

CHAMBERLAIN

Death! My lord,

Their clothes are after such a pagan cut to't,°
That, sure, th' have worn out Christendom.°Enter Sir Thomas LOVELL.

How now? 15

What news, Sir Thomas Lovell?

LOVELL

Faith, my lord,

I hear of none but the new proclamation
That's clapped° upon the court gate.

CHAMBERLAIN

What is't for?

LOVELL

The reformation of our traveled gallants
That fill the court with quarrels, talk, and tailors.

20

CHAMBERLAIN

I'm glad 'tis there. Now I would pray our monsieurs
To think an English courtier may be wise,
And never see the Louvre.°

LOVELL

They must either

(For so run the conditions) leave those remnants
Of fool and feather° that they got in France,
With all their honorable points of ignorance°
Pertaining thereunto, as fights and fireworks,° Abusing° better men than they can be 25

Out of a foreign wisdom, renouncing clean
The faith they have in tennis and tall stockings,
Short blist' red° breeches, and those types° of travel,

30

I.iii.1-2 juggle . . . mysteries trick men into such oddly mysterious behavior 7 fit . . . face a grimace or two; shrewd nasty 8 hold 'em i.e., screw up their faces in this way 10 Pepin or Clotharius sixth- and seventh-century kings of the Franks; keep state affect grandeur 11 new legs new fashions in walking or bowing 12 pace walk (suggesting horse references that follow) 12-13 spavin Or springhalt diseases affecting horses' legs 14 to't as well 15 worn out Christendom used up Christian fashions 18 clapped fastened 23 Louvre palace of the French kings in Paris; now the art museum 25 fool and feather foolish fashions (alluding to the feathers worn by some gallants in their hats) 26 honorable . . . ignorance ignorant conceptions of honorable conduct 27 fights and fireworks i.e., duelling and whoring (with a possible reference to venereal disease as the outcome) 28 Abusing goes with "points of ignorance," and is not parallel with "renouncing" in the next line, which continues the thought indicated by "leave" in line 24 31 blist' red puffed; types insignia

And understand° again like honest men,

Or pack° to their old playfellows. There, I take it,

They may, cum privilegio,° "oui" away

The lag-end° of their lewdness, and be laughed at.

35

SANDS

'Tis time to give 'em physic,° their diseases

Are grown so catching.

CHAMBERLAIN

What a loss our ladies

Will have of these trim vanities!°

LOVELL

Aye, marry,

There will be woe indeed, lords. The sly whoresons

Have got a speeding° trick to lay down ladies.

40

A French song and a fiddle has no fellow.°

SANDS

The devil fiddle 'em! I am glad they are going,

For, sure, there's no converting of 'em. Now

An honest country lord, as I am, beaten

A long time out of play, may bring his plain-song,°

And have an hour of hearing; and, by'r Lady,°

Held current music° too.

45

CHAMBERLAIN

Well said, Lord Sands.

Your colt's tooth° is not cast yet?

SANDS

No, my lord,

Nor shall not while I have a stump.°

CHAMBERLAIN

Sir Thomas,

Whither were you a-going?

LOVELL

To the cardinal's.

50

Your lordship is a guest too.

CHAMBERLAIN

O, 'tis true.

This night he makes a supper, and a great one,

To many lords and ladies. There will be

The beauty of this kingdom, I'll assure you.

LOVELL

That churchman bears a bounteous mind indeed,

A hand as fruitful as the land that feeds us.

His dewes fall everywhere.

55

CHAMBERLAIN

No doubt he's noble.

He had a black° mouth that said other of him.

SANDS

He may, my lord; has wherewithal. In him

Sparing° would show a worse sin than ill doctrine.

Men of his way° should be most liberal;

They are set here for examples.

60

CHAMBERLAIN

True, they are so,

But few now give so great ones. My barge stays;

Your lordship shall along. Come, good Sir Thomas,

We shall be late else, which I would not be,

For I was spoke to,° with Sir Henry Guildford

This night to be comptrollers.°

65

SANDS

I am your lordship's. Exeunt.

32 understand comprehend things, in general (with a possible quibble on stand under [i.e., clothes]) 33 pack clear out 34 cum privilegio with license 35 lag-end latter part 36 physic medical treatment 38 trim vanities spruce fops 40 speeding effective 41 fellow equal 45 plain-song simple melody 46 by'r Lady i.e., by the Virgin Mary (a mild oath) 47 Held current music have it accepted as good music 48 colt's tooth i.e., youthful lustiness 49 stump with a bawdy double meaning 58 black evil 60 Sparing frugality 61 way i.e., of life 66 spoke to asked 67 comptrollers household officers in charge of the festivities

Scene IV. [A hall in York Place.]

Hautboys.° A small table under a state° for the cardinal, a longer table for the guests. Then enter ANNE Bullen and divers other LADIES and GENTLEMEN as guests, at one door; at another door, enter Sir Henry GUILDFORD.

GUILDFORD

Ladies, a general welcome from his grace
Salutes ye all. This night he dedicates
To fair content and you. None here, he hopes,
In all this noble bevy,° has brought with her
One care abroad. He would have all as merry
As, first, good company, good wine, good welcome,
Can make good people.

Enter Lord CHAMBERLAIN, Lord SANDS, and [Sir Thomas] LOVELL.

O, my lord, y' are tardy.
The very thought of this fair company
Clapped wings to me.

CHAMBERLAIN

You are young, Sir Harry Guildford.

SANDS

Sir Thomas Lovell, had the cardinal
But half my lay thoughts in him, some of these Should find a running banquet,° ere they rested,
I think would better please 'em. By my life,
They are a sweet society° of fair ones.

LOVELL

O, that your lordship were but now confessor
To one or two of these!

SANDS

I would I were;
They should find easy penance.

LOVELL

Faith, how easy?

SANDS

As easy as a down bed would afford it.

CHAMBERLAIN

Sweet ladies, will it please you sit? Sir Harry,
Place you° that side; I'll take the charge of this.
His grace is ent'ring. Nay, you must not freeze.
Two women placed together makes cold weather.
My Lord Sands, you are one will keep 'em waking:
Pray, sit between these ladies.

SANDS

By my faith,
And thank your lordship. By your leave, sweet ladies.
If I chance to talk a little wild, forgive me;
I had it from my father.

ANNE

Was he mad, sir?

SANDS

O, very mad, exceeding mad, in love too;
But he would bite none. Just as I do now,
He would kiss you twenty with a breath.°

[Kisses her.]

CHAMBERLAIN

Well said,° my lord.
So, now y' are fairly° seated. Gentlemen,
The penance lies on you if these fair ladies

Pass away° frowning.

SANDS

For my little cure,°

Let me alone.

35

Hautboys. Enter Cardinal WOLSEY, and takes his state.°

WOLSEY

Y' are welcome, my fair guests. That noble lady
Or gentleman that is not freely merry
Is not my friend. This, to confirm my welcome;
And to you all, good health. [Drinks.]

SANDS

Your grace is noble.

Let me have such a bowl may hold my thanks,
And save me so much talking.

40

WOLSEY

My Lord Sands,

I am beholding° to you. Cheer your neighbors.
Ladies, you are not merry. Gentlemen,
Whose fault is this?

SANDS

The red wine first must rise

In their fair cheeks, my lord. Then we shall have 'em
Talk us to silence.

45

ANNE

You are a merry gamester,°

My Lord Sands.

10

SANDS

Yes, if I make my play.°

Here's to your ladyship; and pledge it, madam,
For 'tis to such a thing—

ANNE

You cannot show me.

SANDS

I told your grace they would talk anon.

15

Drum and trumpet; chambers° discharged.

WOLSEY

What's that? 50

CHAMBERLAIN

Look out there, some° of ye. [Exit SERVANT.]

WOLSEY

What warlike voice,

And to what end, is this? Nay, ladies, fear not;
By all the laws of war y' are privileged.°

[Re]enter a SERVANT.

20

CHAMBERLAIN

How now, what is't?

SERVANT

A noble troop of strangers,

For so they seem. Th' have left their barge, and landed, 55
And hither make,° as great ambassadors
From foreign princes.

WOLSEY

Good Lord Chamberlain,

Go, give 'em welcome: you can speak the French tongue;

And pray receive 'em nobly and conduct 'em
Into our presence, where this heaven of beauty 60
Shall shine at full upon them. Some attend him.

[Exit CHAMBERLAIN, attended.]

All rise, and tables removed.

You have now a broken° banquet, but we'll mend it.
A good digestion to you all; and once more
I show'r a welcome on ye: welcome all.

34 Pass away leave; cure (1) charge, parish (continuing the ecclesiastical metaphor of lines 16 ff.) (2) remedy 35 s.d. state chair of state 42 beholding beholden 46 gamester playful person 47 make my play win my game 50 s.d. chambers small cannon used for ceremonial purposes 51 some some one (cf. also line 61) 53 privileged entitled to immunity 56 make make their way 62 broken interrupted, with a possible pun on "poor remains" (of a feast)

I.iv.s.d. Hautboys oboes; state canopy 4 bevy company (of ladies) 13 running banquet hasty repast (with a bawdy double meaning) 15 society assembly 21 Place you i.e., place the guests 31 kiss . . . breath kiss twenty in one breath; said done 32 fairly properly

Hautboys. Enter KING and others, as MASQUERS,° habited° like shepherds, ushered by the Lord CHAMBERLAIN. They pass directly before the cardinal [WOLSEY], and gracefully salute him.

A noble company! What are their pleasures?

CHAMBERLAIN

Because they speak no English, thus they prayed
To tell your grace: that having heard by fame°
Of this so noble and so fair assembly
This night to meet here, they could do no less (Out of the great respect they bear to beauty)
But leave their flocks and, under your fair conduct,° Crave leave to view these ladies and entreat
An hour of revels with 'em.

WOLSEY Say, Lord Chamberlain,
They have done my poor house grace; for which I pay 'em
A thousand thanks and pray 'em take their pleasures. 75
Choose ladies; KING and ANNE Bullen.

KING

The fairest hand I ever touched! O beauty,
Till now I never knew thee!

Music. Dance.

WOLSEY

My lord!

CHAMBERLAIN Your grace?

WOLSEY Pray tell 'em thus much from me:

There should be one amongst 'em, by his person,
More worthy this place than myself, to whom 80
(If I but knew him) with my love and duty
I would surrender it.°

CHAMBERLAIN I will, my lord.

Whisper[s with the MASQUERS].

WOLSEY

What say they?

CHAMBERLAIN Such a one, they all confess,
There is indeed, which they would have your grace
Find out, and he will take it.

WOLSEY Let me see then. 85

By all your good leaves, gentlemen; here I'll make
My royal choice.°

KING [Unmasking.] Ye have found him, cardinal.

You hold a fair assembly; you do well, lord.
You are a churchman, or, I'll tell you, cardinal,
I should judge now unhappily.°

WOLSEY I am glad 90

Your grace is grown so pleasant.°

KING My Lord Chamberlain,
Prithee come hither. What fair lady's that?

CHAMBERLAIN

An't please your grace, Sir Thomas Bullen's daughter,
The Viscount Rochford, one of her highness' women.

KING

By heaven, she is a dainty one. Sweetheart, 95

I were unmannerly to take you out°
And not to kiss you.° A health, gentlemen!
Let it go round.

WOLSEY

Sir Thomas Lovell, is the banquet ready
I' th' privy chamber?

LOVELL

Yes, my lord.

WOLSEY

Your grace, 100

I fear, with dancing is a little heated.

KING

I fear, too much.

WOLSEY

There's fresher air, my lord,

In the next chamber.

KING

Lead in your ladies, every one. Sweet partner,
I must not yet forsake you. Let's be merry, 105
Good my Lord Cardinal. I have half a dozen healths
To drink to these fair ladies, and a measure°
To lead 'em once again; and then let's dream
Who's best in favor.° Let the music knock it.°

Exeunt with trumpets.

ACT II

Scene I. [Westminster. A street.]

Enter two GENTLEMEN at several° doors.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

Whither away so fast?

SECOND GENTLEMAN

O, God save ye!

Ev'n to the Hall,° to hear what shall become
Of the great Duke of Buckingham.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

I'll save you

That labor, sir. All's now done but the ceremony
Of bringing back the prisoner.

SECOND GENTLEMAN

Were you there? 5

FIRST GENTLEMAN

Yes, indeed was I.

SECOND GENTLEMAN

Pray speak what has happened.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

You may guess quickly what.

SECOND GENTLEMAN

Is he found guilty?

FIRST GENTLEMAN

Yes, truly is he, and condemned upon't.

SECOND GENTLEMAN

I am sorry for't.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

So are a number more.

SECOND GENTLEMAN

But, pray, how passed it?° 10

FIRST GENTLEMAN

I'll tell you in a little.° The great duke
Came to the bar, where to his accusations
He pleaded still not guilty, and allegèd°
Many sharp reasons to defeat° the law.

64 s.d. masquers i.e., disguised and vizarded as for a court masque; habited dressed 67 fame report 71 under . . .
conduct with your kind permission 82 it the place of honor 87 royal choice choice of a king 90 unhappily unfavorably
91 pleasant merry

96 take you out i.e., invite you to dance 97 to kiss you customary following a dance 107 measure stately dance 109 best in favor (1) prettiest (2) most favored (by the ladies); knock it strike up
11 i.s.d. several different 2 Hall Westminster Hall 10 how passed it i.e., what happened at the trial? 11 in a little in brief 13 allegèd put forward 14 defeat frustrate

The king's attorney° on the contrary°
 Urged on° the examinations, proofs,° confessions
 Of divers witnesses; which the duke desired
 To him brought viva voce to his face;
 At which appeared against him his surveyor;
 Sir° Gilbert Parke, his councillor; and John Car,
 Confessor to him; with that devil monk,
 Hopkins, that made this mischief.

SECOND GENTLEMAN That was he
 That fed him with his prophecies?

FIRST GENTLEMAN The same.
 All these accused him strongly, which° he fain°
 Would have flung from him; but indeed he could not. 25
 And so his peers upon his evidence
 Have found him guilty of high treason. Much
 He spoke, and learnedly, for life, but all
 Was either pitied in him or forgotten.°

SECOND GENTLEMAN
 After all this, how did he bear himself?

FIRST GENTLEMAN
 When he was brought again to th' bar, to hear
 His knell rung out, his judgment,° he was stirred
 With such an agony he sweat extremely
 And something spoke in choler, ill and hasty.
 But he fell to himself again, and sweetly 35
 In all the rest showed a most noble patience.

SECOND GENTLEMAN
 I do not think he fears death.

FIRST GENTLEMAN Sure,° he does not;
 He never was so womanish. The cause
 He may a little grieve at.

SECOND GENTLEMAN Certainly
 The cardinal is the end° of this.

FIRST GENTLEMAN 'Tis likely, 40
 By all conjectures: first, Kildare's attainder,°
 Then Deputy of Ireland, who removed,
 Earl Surrey was sent thither, and in haste too,
 Lest he should help his father.°

SECOND GENTLEMAN That trick of state
 Was a deep envious° one.

FIRST GENTLEMAN At his return 45
 No doubt he will requite it. This is noted,
 And generally:° whoever the king favors,
 The card'nal instantly will find employment,
 And far enough from court too.

SECOND GENTLEMAN All the commons 50
 Hate him perniciously,° and, o' my conscience,
 Wish him ten fathom deep. This duke as much
 They love and dote on; call him bounteous Buckingham,
 The mirror of all courtesy—

Enter BUCKINGHAM from his arraignment, tipstaves°

15 before him, the ax with the edge towards him, halberds° on each side, accompanied with Sir Thomas LOVELL, Sir Nicholas VAUX, Sir Walter SANDS,° and common people, &c.

FIRST GENTLEMAN Stay there, sir,
 And see the noble ruined man you speak of.

SECOND GENTLEMAN
 Let's stand close,° and behold him.

BUCKINGHAM All good people, 55
 You that thus far have come to pity me,
 Hear what I say, and then go home and lose° me.
 I have this day received a traitor's judgment,
 And by that name must die. Yet, heaven bear witness,
 And if I have a conscience, let it sink° me 60
 Even as the ax falls, if I be not faithful!

The law I bear no malice for my death:
 'T has done, upon the premises,° but justice.
 But those that sought it I could wish more° Christians.
 Be what they will,° I heartily forgive 'em. 65

Yet let 'em look° they glory not in mischief
 Nor build their evils° on the graves of great men,°
 For then my guiltless blood must cry against 'em.
 For further life in this world I ne'er hope,

Nor will I sue, although the king have mercies 70
 More than I dare make faults. You few that loved me
 And dare be bold to weep for Buckingham,
 His noble friends and fellows, whom to leave
 Is only bitter° to him, only dying,

Go with me like good angels to my end; 75
 And as the long divorce of steel° falls on me,
 Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,°
 And lift my soul to heaven. Lead on, o' God's name.

LOVELL 40
 I do beseech your grace, for charity,
 If ever any malice in your heart
 Were hid against me, now to forgive me frankly.° 80

BUCKINGHAM
 Sir Thomas Lovell, I as free forgive you
 As I would be forgiven. I forgive all.
 There cannot be those numberless offenses
 'Gainst me that I cannot take° peace with. No black 85 envy°

Shall mark my grave. Commend me to his grace,
 And if he speak of Buckingham, pray tell him
 You met him half in heaven. My vows and prayers
 Yet are the king's and, till my soul forsake,° 90
 Shall cry for blessings on him. May he live Longer than I have time to tell° his years!
 Ever beloved and loving may his rule be,
 And when old time shall lead him to his end,
 Goodness and he fill up one monument!°

15 king's attorney John Fitz-James, afterward Chief Justice of the King's Bench; contrary contrary side 16 Urged on (1) argued on the evidence of (intransitive) (2) pressed the evidence of (transitive); examinations, proofs depositions, statements 20 Sir a courtesy title for a cleric 24 which i.e., which accusations; fain gladly 29 Was . . . forgotten either aroused only unavailing pity or had no effect 32 judgment sentence (also in line 58) 37 Sure surely 40 the end at the root 41 attainder disgrace 44 father father-in-law (cf. III.ii.261-65) 45 envious malicious 47 generally by all 50 perniciously mortally 53 s.d. tipstaves bailiffs, so called because they carried silver-tipped staffs

53 s.d. halberds halberdiers (officers bearing long-handled weapons with ax-and-spear points); Sir Walter Sands Sir William Sands in Holinshed 55 close (1) out of view (2) silent 57 lose forget 60 sink destroy 63 premises (1) circumstances (2) proceedings 64 more i.e., more sincere 65 Be . . . will whoever they may be 66 look look to it 67 evils privies (?) 74 only bitter the only bitterness 76 divorce of steel separation of body and soul caused by the ax 77 sacrifice offering 81 frankly freely (for Lovell's reference see I.ii.186-87) 85 take make; envy malice 89 forsake i.e., part from my body 91 tell count 94 monument grave

LOVELL

To th' waterside I must conduct your grace,
Then give my charge up to Sir Nicholas Vaux,
Who undertakes° you to your end.

VAUX

Prepare there;

The duke is coming. See the barge be ready,
And fit it with such furniture° as suits
The greatness of his person.

BUCKINGHAM

Nay, Sir Nicholas,

Let it alone; my state now will but mock me.
When I came hither, I was Lord High Constable
And Duke of Buckingham; now, poor Edward Bohun.°

Yet I am richer than my base accusers
That never knew what truth meant. I now seal° it,
And with that blood will make 'em one day groan for't.

My noble father, Henry of Buckingham,
Who first raised head° against usurping Richard,° Flying for succor to his servant Banister,
Being distressed, was by that wretch betrayed,
And without trial fell. God's peace be with him!

Henry the Seventh succeeding, truly pitying
My father's loss, like a most royal prince,
Restored me to my honors, and out of ruins
Made my name once more noble. Now his son,
Henry the Eighth, life, honor, name, and all
That made me happy, at one stroke has taken
Forever from the world. I had my trial,
And must needs say a noble one; which makes me
A little happier than my wretched father.

Yet thus far we are one in fortunes: both Fell by our servants, by those men we loved most—
A most unnatural and faithless service!

Heaven has an end° in all. Yet, you that hear me,
This from a dying man receive as certain:

Where you are liberal of your loves and counsels
Be sure you be not loose.° For those you make friends
And give your hearts to, when they once perceive
The least rub° in your fortunes, fall away
Like water from ye, never found again
But where they mean to sink° ye. All good people,
Pray for me! I must now forsake ye; the last hour
Of my long weary life° is come upon me.
Farewell!

And when you would say something that is sad,
Speak how I fell. I have done, and God forgive me.

Exeunt DUKE and TRAIN.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

O, this is full of pity! Sir, it calls,
I fear, too many curses on their heads
That were the authors.°

SECOND GENTLEMAN If the duke be guiltless,
'Tis full of woe. Yet I can give you inkling
Of an ensuing evil, if it fall,
Greater than this.

FIRST GENTLEMAN Good angels keep it from us!
What may it be? You do not doubt my faith,° sir?

97 undertakes has charge of 99 furniture equipment 103 Bohun his family name was actually Stafford, although in the female line he was descended from the Bohuns 105 seal ratify 108 raised head gathered troops; Richard Richard III 124 end purpose 127 loose careless 129 rub check 131 sink destroy 133 long weary life he was forty-three 139 authors originators 143 faith trustworthiness

SECOND GENTLEMAN

This secret is so weighty, 'twill require
A strong faith to conceal it.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

Let me have it;

I do not talk much.

SECOND GENTLEMAN I am confident;°

You shall,° sir. Did you not of late days hear
A buzzing° of a separation
Between the king and Katherine?

FIRST GENTLEMAN

Yes, but it held° not;

For when the king once heard it, out of anger
He sent command to the Lord Mayor straight
To stop the rumor and allay° those tongues
That durst disperse it.

SECOND GENTLEMAN But that slander, sir,

Is found a truth now, for it grows again
Fresher than e'er it was, and held for certain
The king will venture at it. Either the cardinal
Or some about him near have, out of malice
To the good queen, possessed him with a scruple°
That will undo her. To confirm this too,
Cardinal Campeius is arrived, and lately;°
As all think, for this business.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

'Tis the cardinal;

And merely to revenge him on the emperor°
For not bestowing on him at his asking
The archbishopric of Toledo, this is purposed.

SECOND GENTLEMAN

I think you have hit the mark. But is't not cruel
That she should feel the smart of this? The cardinal
Will have his will, and she must fall.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

'Tis woeful.

We are too open° here to argue this;
Let's think in private more.

*Exeunt.*Scene II. [An antechamber in the palace.]Enter Lord CHAMBERLAIN, reading this letter.

CHAMBERLAIN "My lord, the horses your lordship sent for, with all the care I had, I saw well chosen, ridden,° and furnished.° They were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north. When they were ready to set out for London, a man of my Lord Cardinal's, by commission and main power,° took 'em from me, with this reason: his master would be served before a subject, if not before the king; which stopped our mouths, sir."
I fear he will indeed. Well, let him have them.
He will have all, I think.

Enter to the Lord CHAMBERLAIN, the Dukes of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.

146 confident i.e., of your discretion 147 shall i.e., shall have it 148 buzzing rumor 149 held lasted 152 allay silence 158 possessed . . . scruple put a doubt in his mind 160 Cardinal . . . lately Lorenzo Campeggio, or Campeius, did not actually arrive from Rome until 1528, seven years after Buckingham's execution 162 emperor
Charles V, Holy Roman Emperor and King of Spain; nephew to Katherine; (see I.i.176-90 and II.ii.25) 168 open
(1) public (2) indiscreet
II.ii.3 ridden broken in; furnished outfitted 6 commission
. . . power warrant and sheer force

NORFOLK

Well met, my Lord Chamberlain.

CHAMBERLAIN

Good day to both your graces.

SUFFOLK

How is the king employed?

CHAMBERLAIN

I left him private,^oFull of sad^o thoughts and troubles.

NORFOLK

What's the cause? 15

CHAMBERLAIN

It seems the marriage with his brother's wife

Has crept too near his conscience.

SUFFOLK

[Aside.] No, his conscience

Has crept too near another lady.

NORFOLK

'Tis so.

This is the cardinal's doing; the king-cardinal,

That blind priest, like the eldest son of Fortune, 20

Turns what he list.^o The king will know^o him one day.

SUFFOLK

Pray God he do! He'll never know himself else.

NORFOLK

How holily he works in all his business,

And with what zeal! For, now he has cracked the leagueBetween us and the emperor, the queen's great nephew, 25

He dives into the king's soul, and there scatters

Dangers, doubts, wringing^o of the conscience,Fears and despairs; and all these for^o his marriage.

And out of all these to restore the king,

He counsels a divorce, a loss of her 30

That like a jewel has hung twenty years

About his neck, yet never lost her luster;

Of her that loves him with that excellence

That angels love good men with, even of her

That, when the greatest stroke of fortune falls, 35

Will bless the king. And is not this course pious?

CHAMBERLAIN

Heaven keep me from such counsel! 'Tis most true

These news are everywhere; every tongue speaks 'em,

And every true heart weeps for't. All that dare

Look into these affairs see this main end, 40

The French king's sister.^o Heaven will one day openThe king's eyes, that so long have slept upon^o

This bold bad man.

SUFFOLK

And free us from his slavery.

NORFOLK

We had need pray,

And heartily, for our deliverance, 45

Or this imperious man will work us all

From princes into pages. All men's honors

Lie like one lump^o before him, to be fashionedInto what pitch^o he please.

SUFFOLK

For me, my lords,

I love him not, nor fear him—there's my creed. 50

14 private alone 15 sad grave (also in lines 57, 62) 20-21 That . . . list i.e., he takes after Fortune in his disregard for others and his capriciousness (Fortune was depicted as blind and turning a wheel; eldest sons had special privileges) 21 know understand (also in next line) 27 wringing torture 28 for because of 41 French king's sister the Duchess of Alençon (see III.ii.86-87) 42 slept upon been blind to 48 lump i.e., of clay (cf. Romans 9:21) 49 pitch height (figurative), i.e., rank or degree of dignity

As I am made without him, so I'll stand,
If the king please. His curses and his blessings Touch me alike; th' are breath I not believe in.
I knew him, and I know him; so I leave him
To him that made him proud—the pope.^o

NORFOLK

Let's in, 55

And with some other business put the king

From these sad thoughts that work too much upon him.

My lord, you'll bear us company?

CHAMBERLAIN

Excuse me,

The king has sent me otherwhere. Besides,

You'll find a most unfit time to disturb him. 60

Health to your lordships.

NORFOLK

Thanks, my good Lord Chamberlain.

Exit Lord CHAMBERLAIN, and the KING draws the curtain^o and sits reading pensively.

SUFFOLK

How sad he looks; sure, he is much afflicted.^o

KING

Who's there, ha?

NORFOLK

Pray God he be not angry.

KING

Who's there, I say? How dare you thrust yourselves
Into my private meditations? 65

Who am I, ha?

NORFOLK

A gracious king that pardons all offenses

Malice ne'er meant. Our breach of duty this way^oIs business of estate,^o in which we come

To know your royal pleasure.

KING

Ye are too bold. 70

Go to;^o I'll make ye know your times of business.

Is this an hour for temporal affairs, ha?

Enter WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS with a commission.

Who's there? My good Lord Cardinal? O my Wolsey,
The quiet of my wounded conscience,

Thou art a cure fit for a king. [To CAMPEIUS.] You're
welcome, 75

Most learned reverend sir, into our kingdom:

Use us and it. [To WOLSEY.] My good lord, have great care

I be not found a talker.^o

WOLSEY

Sir, you cannot.

I would your grace would give us but an hour
Of private conference.

KING [To NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.] We are busy; go. 80NORFOLK [Aside to SUFFOLK.]

This priest has no pride in him? 45

SUFFOLK [Aside to NORFOLK.]

Not to speak of.

I would not be so sick though for his place.^o

But this cannot continue.

NORFOLK [Aside to SUFFOLK.] If it do,I'll venture one have-at-him.^o

55 the pope the expected reference would be to the devil 61 s.d. draws the curtain the king is thus revealed seated within a curtained booth or recess; see the General Introduction,
p. 7 62 afflicted disturbed 68 this way in this respect 69 estate state 71 Go to an exclamation of impatience or disapproval 78 talker i.e., rather than a doer 83 so . . . place so sick with pride even if it meant having his position 85 have-at-him thrust (the phrase "Have at you," meaning
"Here goes!" or "Watch out!" signaled an attack)

SUFFOLK [Aside to NORFOLK.] I another. 85
Exeunt NORFOLK and SUFFOLK.

WOLSEY
 Your grace has given a precedent of wisdom
 Above all princes, in committing freely
 Your scruple to the voice of Christendom.
 Who can be angry now? What envy° reach you?
 The Spaniard,° tied by blood and favor to her, 90
 Must now confess, if they have any goodness,
 The trial just and noble. All the clerks°
 (I mean the learnèd ones) in Christian kingdoms
 Have their free voices.° Rome, the nurse of judgment,
 Invited by your noble self, hath sent 95
 One general tongue° unto us, this good man,
 This just and learnèd priest, Card'nal Campeius,
 Whom once more I present unto your highness.

KING
 And once more in mine arms I bid him welcome,
 And thank the holy conclave° for their loves. 100
 They have sent me such a man I would have wished for.

CAMPEIUS
 Your grace must needs deserve all strangers'° loves,
 You are so noble. To your highness' hand
 I tender my commission; by whose virtue,
 The court of Rome commanding, you, my Lord 105
 Cardinal of York, are joined with me their servant
 In the impartial° judging of this business.

KING
 Two equal° men. The queen shall be acquainted
 Forthwith for what you come. Where's Gardiner?

WOLSEY
 I know your majesty has always loved her 110
 So dear in heart not to deny her that°
 A woman of less place might ask by law:
 Scholars allowed freely to argue for her.

KING
 Aye, and the best she shall have, and my favor
 To him that does best—God forbid else. Cardinal, 115
 Prithee call Gardiner to me, my new secretary;
 I find him a fit fellow.

[WOLSEY beckons.] Enter GARDINER.

WOLSEY [Aside to GARDINER.]
 Give me your hand: much joy and favor to you.
 You are the king's now.

GARDINER [Aside to WOLSEY.] But to be commanded Forever by your grace, whose hand has raised me. 120

KING
 Come hither, Gardiner.

Walks and whispers.

CAMPEIUS
 My Lord of York, was not one Doctor Pace
 In this man's place before him?

WOLSEY Yes, he was.

CAMPEIUS
 Was he not held a learnèd man?

89 envy malice 90 Spaniard Spaniards (Katherine was daughter to Ferdinand of Spain) 92 clerks scholars 94 Have . . . voices may freely express their opinions 96 One general tongue one spokesman for all 100 holy conclave College of Cardinals 102 strangers' foreigners' 107 impartial impartial 108 equal just, impartial 111 that that which WOLSEY Yes, surely.

CAMPEIUS
 Believe me, there's an ill opinion spread then, 125
 Even of yourself, Lord Cardinal.

WOLSEY How? Of me?

CAMPEIUS
 They will not stick° to say you envied him
 And, fearing he would rise (he was so virtuous),
 Kept him a foreign man still;° which so grieved him
 That he ran mad and died.°

WOLSEY Heaven's peace be with him! 130
 That's Christian care enough. For living murmurers°
 There's places of rebuke. He was a fool,
 For he would needs be virtuous. That good fellow,
 If I command him, follows my appointment;°
 I will have none so near else. Learn this, brother, 135
 We live not to be griped° by meaner persons.

KING
 Deliver° this with modesty to th' queen.

Exit GARDINER.

The most convenient place that I can think of
 For such receipt° of learning is Blackfriars;°
 There ye shall meet about this weighty business. 140
 My Wolsey, see it furnished.° O, my lord,
 Would it not grieve an able° man to leave
 So sweet a bedfellow? But, conscience, conscience!
 O, 'tis a tender place, and I must leave her. Exeunt.

Scene III. [An antechamber of the queen's apartments.]

Enter ANNE Bullen and an OLD LADY.

110 ANNE
 Not for that neither. Here's the pang that pinches:°
 His highness having lived so long with her, and she
 So good a lady that no tongue could ever
 Pronounce° dishonor of her—by my life,
 She never knew harmdoing—O, now, after 5
 So many courses of the sun° enthronèd,
 Still growing in a majesty and pomp, the which
 To leave a thousandfold more bitter than
 'Tis sweet at first t' acquire—after this process,°
 To give her the avault,° it is a pity 10
 Would move a monster.

OLD LADY Hearts of most hard temper
 Melt and lament for her.

ANNE O, God's will! Much better
 She ne'er had known pomp; though't be temporal,°
 Yet, if that quarrel,° Fortune, do divorce
 It from the bearer, 'tis a sufferance panging° 15
 As soul and body's severing.

OLD LADY Alas, poor lady!
 She's a stranger° now again.

127 stick scruple 129 foreign man still continually on missions abroad 130 died Pace in fact outlived Wolsey by six years 131 murmurers grumblers 134 appointment direction 136 griped clutched familiarly 137 Deliver relate 139 receipt accommodation; Blackfriars Dominican monastery buildings in London 141 furnished fitted up 142 able vigorous

II.iii.1 pinches torments 4 Pronounce utter 6 courses . . . sun years 9 this process what has passed 10 give . . . avault order her to go 13 temporal worldly 14 quarrel quarreler (abstract for concrete) 15 sufferance panging suffering as agonizing 17 stranger foreigner

ANNE So much the more
Must pity drop upon her. Verily,
I swear, 'tis better to be lowly born
And range with humble livers^o in content 20
Than to be perked up^o in a glist'ring^o grief
And wear a golden sorrow.
OLD LADY Our content
Is our best having.^o
ANNE By my troth and maidenhead,
I would not be a queen.
OLD LADY Beshrew me,^o I would,
And venture maidenhead for't; and so would you, 25
For all this spice^o of your hypocrisy.
You that have so fair parts^o of woman on you,
Have too a woman's heart, which ever yet
Affected^o eminence, wealth, sovereignty;
Which, to say sooth,^o are blessings; and which gifts 30
(Saving your mincing)^o the capacity
Of your soft cheveril^o conscience would receive,
If you might please to stretch it.
ANNE Nay, good troth.^o
OLD LADY Yes, troth, and troth. You would not be a queen?
ANNE No, not for all the riches under heaven. 35
OLD LADY 'Tis strange. A threepence bowed^o would hire me, Old as I am, to queen^o it. But, I pray you,
What think you of a duchess? Have you limbs
To bear that load of title?
ANNE No, in truth.
OLD LADY Then you are weakly made. Pluck off^o a little; 40
I would not be a young count^o in your way,^o
For more than blushing comes to. If your back Cannot vouchsafe^o this burden, 'tis too weak
Ever to get a boy.
ANNE How you do talk!
I swear again, I would not be a queen 45
For all the world.
OLD LADY In faith, for little England^o
You'd venture an emballing.^o I myself
Would for Caernarvonshire,^o although there 'longed
No more to th' crown but that. Lo, who comes here?
Enter Lord CHAMBERLAIN.

CHAMBERLAIN
Good morrow, ladies. What were't worth to know 50

20 range . . . livers rank with humble folk 21 perked up decked out; glist'ring glittering 23 having possession 24
Beshrew me may evil befall me (a mild imprecation) 26 spice dash, sample 27 parts qualities (of mind and person)
29 Affected aspired to 30 say sooth tell the truth 31
Saving your mincing despite your coyness 32 cheveril kidskin 33 troth faith 36 bowed bent (and therefore worthless); with a possible quibble on bawd 37 queen with a pun on quean = bawd 40 Pluck off come down in rank 41 count with a bawdy double meaning; way (1) path (2) virginal condition 43 vouchsafe deign to accept 46 little England perhaps with a reference to Pembrokeshire, called "little England beyond Wales"; word follows (line 63) of Anne's promotion to Marchioness—historically, to Marquess—of Pembroke 47 emballing investment with the ball as emblem of sovereignty (with a bawdy pun) 48 Caernarvon-
shire a poor Welsh county

The secret of your conference?^o

ANNE My good lord,
Not your demand; it values not^o your asking.
Our mistress' sorrows we were pitying.

CHAMBERLAIN
It was a gentle business, and becoming
The action of good women. There is hope 55
All will be well.

ANNE Now, I pray God, amen!

CHAMBERLAIN
You bear a gentle mind, and heav'nly blessings
Follow such creatures. That you may, fair lady,
Perceive I speak sincerely, and high note's
Ta'en of your many virtues, the king's majesty 60
Commends his good opinion of you,^o and Does purpose honor to you no less flowing^o
Than Marchioness of Pembroke; to which title
A thousand pound a year, annual support,
Out of his grace he adds.

ANNE I do not know 65
What kind^o of my obedience I should tender.
More than my all is nothing; nor my prayers
Are not^o words duly hallowed, nor my wishes More worth than empty vanities. Yet prayers and wishes
Are all I can return. Beseech your lordship, 70
Vouchsafe^o to speak my thanks and my obedience,
As from a blushing handmaid, to his highness,
Whose health and royalty I pray for.

CHAMBERLAIN Lady,
I shall not fail t' approve the fair conceit^o
The king hath of you. [Aside.] I have perused her well. 75
Beauty and honor in her are so mingled
That they have caught the king; and who knows yet
But from this lady may proceed a gem
To lighten all this isle?—I'll to the king,
And say I spoke with you.

ANNE My honored lord. 80
Exit Lord CHAMBERLAIN.

OLD LADY
Why, this it is:^o see, see!
I have been begging sixteen years in court,
Am yet a courtier beggarly,^o nor could Come pat betwixt too early and too late
For any suit of pounds;^o and you (O fate!) 85
A very fresh fish here—fie, fie, fie upon
This compelled^o fortune!—have your mouth filled up
Before you open it.

ANNE This is strange to me.

OLD LADY
How tastes it? Is it bitter? Forty pence, no.
There was a lady once ('tis an old story) 90
That would not be a queen, that would she not,
For all the mud in Egypt.^o Have you heard it?

51 conference conversation 52 values not is not worth
61 Commends . . . you presents his compliments 62 flowing abundant 66 kind expression 67–68 nor . . .
not the double negative lends emphasis 71 Vouchsafe be good enough 74 approve . . . conceit confirm the good opinion 81 this it is so it goes 83 beggarly (1) poor (2) begging 85 suit of pounds i.e., petition for money 87 compelled i.e., forced upon her 92 mud in Egypt riches of Egypt (the mud being the source of its fertility)

ANNE

Come, you are pleasant.

OLD LADY

With your theme, I could O'ermount° the lark. The Marchioness of Pembroke?
A thousand pounds a year for pure respect?°

95

No other obligation? By my life,
That promises moe° thousands: honor's train
Is longer than his foreskirt. By this time
I know your back will bear a duchess. Say,
Are you not stronger than you were?

ANNE

Good lady,

100

Make yourself mirth with your particular fancy,
And leave me out on't. Would I had no being,
If this salute my blood° a jot. It faints me°
To think what follows.

The queen is comfortless, and we forgetful
In our long absence. Pray, do not deliver°
What here y' have heard to her.

105

OLD LADY

What do you think me?—*Exeunt.*Scene IV. [A hall in Blackfriars.]

Trumpets, sennet,° and cornets. Enter two VERGERS, with short silver wands; next them, two SCRIBES, in the habit of doctors;° after them, the [Arch]bishop of CANTERBURY alone; after him, the Bishops of LINCOLN, ELY, ROCH-ESTER, and SAINT ASAPH. Next them, with some small distance, follows a GENTLEMAN bearing the purse, with the Great Seal, and a cardinal's hat; then two PRIESTS, bearing each a silver cross; then [GRIFFITH,] a gentleman usher bareheaded, accompanied with a SERGEANT-AT-ARMS bearing a silver mace; then two GENTLEMEN bearing two great silver pillars;° after them, side by side, the two CARDINALS; two NOBLEMEN with the sword and mace. The KING takes place° under the cloth of state;° the two CARDINALS sit under him as judges. The QUEEN takes place some distance from the KING. The BISHOPS place themselves on each side the court, in manner of a consistory;° below them, the SCRIBES. The LORDS sit next the BISHOPS. The rest of the ATTENDANTS stand in convenient order about the stage.

WOLSEY

Whilst our commission from Rome is read,
Let silence be commanded.

KING

What's the need?

It hath already publicly been read,
And on all sides th' authority allowed.
You may then spare that time.

WOLSEY

Be't so. Proceed.

5

SCRIBE

Say "Henry King of England, come into the court."

CRIER

Henry King of England, &c.

KING

Here.

SCRIBE

Say "Katherine Queen of England, come into the court."

CRIER

Katherine Queen of England, &c.

10

The QUEEN makes no answer, rises out of her chair, goes about the court, comes to the KING, and kneels at his feet; then speaks.

QUEEN KATHERINE

Sir, I desire you do me right and justice,
And to bestow your pity on me; for

I am a most poor woman and a stranger,
Born out of your dominions; having here
No judge indifferent,° nor no more assurance
Of equal friendship and proceeding.° Alas, sir,

15

In what have I offended you? What cause
Hath my behavior given to your displeasure
That thus you should proceed to put me off°

And take your good grace° from me? Heaven witness, 20

I have been to you a true and humble wife,

At all times to your will conformable,

Ever in fear to kindle your dislike,

Yea, subject to your countenance, glad or sorry

As I saw it inclined. When was the hour

25

I ever contradicted your desire,

Or made it not mine too? Or which of your friends

Have I not strove to love, although I knew

He were mine enemy? What friend of mine

That had to him derived° your anger did I

30

Continue in my liking? Nay, gave° notice

He was from thence discharged? Sir, call to mind

That I have been your wife in this obedience

Upward of twenty years, and have been blessed 35

With many children by you. If, in the course

And process of this time, you can report,

And prove it too, against mine honor aught,

My bond to wedlock or my love and duty,

Against° your sacred person, in God's name,

Turn me away, and let the foul'st contempt

40

Shut door upon me, and so give me up

To the sharp'st kind of justice. Please you, sir,

The king, your father, was reputed for

A prince most prudent, of an excellent

And unmatched wit° and judgment. Ferdinand,

45

My father, King of Spain, was reckoned one

The wisest° prince that there had reigned by many

A year before. It is not to be questioned

That they had gathered a wise council to them

Of every realm, that did debate this business,

50

Who deemed our marriage lawful. Wherefore I humbly

Beseech you, sir, to spare me, till I may

Be by my friends in Spain advised, whose counsel

I will implore. If not, i' th' name of God,

Your pleasure be fulfilled!

WOLSEY

You have here, lady,

55

And of your choice, these reverend fathers, men

15 indifferent unbiased 16 equal . . . proceeding impartial friendship and proceedings 19 put me off discard me 20 grace (1) self (2) favor 30 derived incurred 31 gave i.e., gave not 39 Against (1) i.e., or aught against (?) (2) toward (?) 45 wit intelligence 46-47 one The wisest the very wisest

94 O'ermount fly higher than 95 for pure respect simply out of esteem 97 moe more 103 salute my blood exhilarates me; faints me makes me faint 106 deliver report
II.iv.s.d. sennet trumpet fanfare; habit of doctors i.e., capped and gowned as doctors of law; two . . . pillars Wolsey's insignia; takes place takes his seat; cloth of state canopy; consistory College of Cardinals

Of singular integrity and learning,
Yea, the elect o' th' land, who are assembled
To plead your cause. It shall be therefore bootless°
That longer you desire the court,° as well
For your own quiet,° as to rectify
What is unsettled in the king.

CAMPEIUS His grace
Hath spoken well and justly. Therefore, madam,
It's fit this royal session do proceed,
And that without delay their arguments
Be now produced and heard.

QUEEN KATHERINE Lord Cardinal,
To you I speak.

WOLSEY Your pleasure, madam?

QUEEN KATHERINE Sir,
I am about to weep; but, thinking that
We are a queen, or long have dreamed so, certain°
The daughter of a king, my drops of tears
I'll turn to sparks of fire.

WOLSEY Be patient yet.

QUEEN KATHERINE
I will, when you are humble; nay, before,
Or God will punish me. I do believe (Induced by potent circumstances)° that You are mine enemy, and make my challenge°
You shall not be my judge; for it is you
Have blown this coal° betwixt my lord and me—
Which God's dew quench! Therefore I say again,
I utterly abhor,° yea, from my soul
Refuse you for my judge, whom, yet once more,
I hold my most malicious foe, and think not
At all a friend to truth.

WOLSEY I do profess
You speak not like yourself, who ever yet
Have stood to° charity and displayed th' effects
Of disposition gentle and of wisdom O'ertopping woman's pow'r. Madam, you do me wrong:

I have no spleen° against you, nor injustice
For you or any. How far I have proceeded,
Or how far further shall, is warranted
By a commission from the consistory,
Yea, the whole consistory of Rome. You charge me
That I have blown this coal. I do deny it.
The king is present. If it be known to him
That I gainsay my deed,° how may he wound,
And worthily, my falsehood—yea, as much
As you have done my truth. If he know
That I am free of your report,° he knows
I am not of your wrong.° Therefore in him
It lies to cure me, and the cure is to Remove these thoughts from you; the which before
His highness shall speak in,° I do beseech
You, gracious madam, to unthink your speaking

59 bootless profitless 60 longer . . . court longer you draw out the business of the court (by pleading for a postponement) 61 quiet i.e., of mind 69 certain certainly 74
Induced . . . circumstances persuaded by strong reasons 75 challenge objection (legal term) 77 blown this coal stirred up this strife (proverbial) 79 abhor protest against (legal term) 84 stood to supported 87 spleen malice 94 gainsay my deed now deny what I have done 97 free . . . report innocent of your charges 98 I . . . wrong i.e., I have been wronged by you 101 in regarding

And to say so no more.

QUEEN KATHERINE My lord, my lord,
I am a simple woman, much too weak
T' oppose your cunning. Y' are meek and humblemouthed.

You sign your place and calling, in full seeming,
With meekness and humility,° but your heart
Is crammed with arrogancy, spleen, and pride.
You have by fortune and his highness' favors
Gone slightly° o'er low steps, and now are mounted
Where pow'rs° are your retainers, and your words
(Domestics to you) serve your will as't please
Yourself pronounce their office.° I must tell you,
You tender° more your person's honor than
Your high profession spiritual; that again
I do refuse you for my judge, and here,
Before you all, appeal unto the pope,
To bring my whole cause 'fore his holiness,
And to be judged by him.

She curtsies to the KING, and offers to depart.

CAMPEIUS The queen is obstinate,
Stubborn° to justice, apt to accuse it,° and Disdainful to be tried by't. 'Tis not well.
She's going away.

KING

Call her again.

CRIER

Katherine Queen of England, come into the court.

GRIFFITHS

Madam, you are called back.

QUEEN KATHERINE

What need you note it? Pray you keep your way;°
When you are called, return. Now the Lord help!
They vex me past my patience. Pray you, pass on.
I will not tarry; no, nor ever more
Upon this business my appearance make
In any of their courts.

Exit QUEEN, and her ATTENDANTS.

KING

Go thy ways, Kate.

The man i' th' world who shall report he has
A better wife, let him in naught be trusted,
For speaking false in that. Thou art, alone°—
If thy rare qualities, sweet gentleness,
Thy meekness saintlike, wifelike government,°
Obeying in commanding,° and thy parts
Sovereign and pious else, could speak thee out°—
The queen of earthly queens. She's noble born,
And like her true nobility she has Carried herself towards me.

WOLSEY

Most gracious sir,

In humblest manner I require° your highness,
That it shall please you to declare in hearing

106-07 You . . . humility to all outward appearances you set a stamp of meekness and humility on your high spiritual office 110 slightly easily 111 pow'rs those in power 111-13 your words . . . office i.e., your words are your servants, and you need only speak in order for your will to be done 114 tender value 120 Stubborn unpliant; apt . . . it prone to call it in question 126 keep your way keep going 134 alone without rival 136 government self-control 137
Obeying in commanding self-restrained when giving orders 137-38 thy parts . . . out your other excellent and pious qualities could describe you fully 142 require beg

Of all these ears—for where I am robbed and bound,
 There must I be unloosed, although not there
 At once and fully satisfied—whether ever I Did broach this business to your highness, or Laid any scruple in your way which might Induce you to the question on't? Or ever
 Have to you, but with thanks to God for such A royal lady, spake one the least° word that might Be to the prejudice of her present state,
 Or touch° of her good person?

KING My Lord Cardinal,
 I do excuse you; yea, upon mine honor,
 I free you from't. You are not to be taught°
 That you have many enemies that know not
 Why they are so, but, like to village curs, Bark when their fellows do. By some of these
 The queen is put in anger. Y' are excused.
 But will you be more justified? You ever
 Have wished the sleeping of this business, never desired
 It to be stirred, but oft have hind'red, oft,
 The passages° made toward it. On my honor
 I speak° my good Lord Cardinal to this point,
 And thus far clear him. Now, what moved me to't,
 I will be bold with time and your attention.
 Then mark th' inducement. Thus it came; give heed to't:

My conscience first received a tenderness,
 Scruple, and prick, on certain speeches uttered
 By th' Bishop of Bayonne, then French ambassador,
 Who had been hither sent on the debating
 A marriage 'twixt the Duke of Orleans and
 Our daughter Mary. I' th' progress of this business, Ere a determinate resolution,° he
 (I mean the bishop) did require a respite,
 Wherein he might the king his lord advertise°
 Whether our daughter were legitimate,
 Respecting this our marriage with the dowager,
 Sometimes° our brother's wife. This respite shook
 The bosom of my conscience, entered me,
 Yea, with a spitting° power, and made to tremble
 The region of my breast; which forced such way
 That many mazed considerings° did throng,
 And pressed in with this caution. First, methought
 I stood not in the smile of heaven, who had Commanded nature that my lady's womb,
 If it conceived a male child by me, should Do no more offices of life to't than
 The grave does to th' dead; for her male issue
 Or° died where they were made, or shortly after
 This world had aired them. Hence I took a thought
 This was a judgment on me, that my kingdom,
 Well worthy the best heir o' th' world, should not Be gladdened in't by me. Then follows that I weighed the danger which my realms stood in
 By this my issue's fail,° and that gave to me
 Many a groaning throe. Thus hulling° in 151 on the least a single 153 touch sullyng 155 You . . .

 taught you do not have to be told 163 passages proceedings 164 speak bear witness for 174 determinate resolution final decision 176 advertise inform (accent on second syllable) 179 Sometimes formerly 181 spitting transfixing, as though impaled on a spit 183 mazed considerings perplexed thoughts 190 Or either 196 issue's fail i.e., failure to have a son 197
 hulling drifting with sail furled

The wild sea of my conscience, I did steer Toward this remedy whereupon we are Now present here together. That's to say,
 I meant to rectify° my conscience, which
 I then did feel full sick, and yet° not well,
 By all the reverend fathers of the land
 And doctors learned. First I began in private
 With you, my Lord of Lincoln. You remember
 How under my oppression° I did reek,°
 When I first moved° you.

LINCOLN Very well, my liege.

KING
 I have spoke long. Be pleased yourself to say
 How far you satisfied me.

LINCOLN So please your highness,
 The question did at first so stagger me,
 Bearing a state of mighty moment in't
 And consequence of dread, that I committed
 The daring'st counsel which I had to doubt,°
 And did entreat your highness to this course
 Which you are running here.

KING I then moved you,
 My Lord of Canterbury, and got your leave
 To make this present summons.° Unsolicited
 I left no reverend person in this court,
 But by particular consent proceeded
 Under your hands and seals.° Therefore, go on;
 For no dislike i' th' world against the person
 Of the good queen, but the sharp thorny points
 Of my allegèd° reasons, drives this forward.
 Prove but our marriage lawful, by my life
 And kingly dignity, we are contented
 To wear our mortal state to come with her,
 Katherine our queen, before the primest° creature
 That's paragoned° o' th' world.

CAMPEIUS So please your highness,
 The queen being absent, 'tis a needful fitness
 That we adjourn this court till further° day.
 Meanwhile must be an earnest motion°
 Made to the queen to call back her appeal
 She intends unto his holiness.

KING [Aside.] I may perceive
 These cardinals trifle with me. I abhor
 This dilatory sloth and tricks of Rome.
 My learned and well-belovèd servant, Cranmer,
 Prithee return; with thy approach, I know,
 My comfort comes along.—Break up the court;
 I say, set on. Exeunt, in manner as they entered.

201 rectify set right (cf. line 61) 202 yet now still 206 oppression heavy burden; reek sweat (literally, smoke with heat) 207 moved proposed the matter 211-13 Bearing . . . doubt concerning so momentous a state of affairs, with consequences so dreadful to contemplate, that I did not trust myself to give the boldest advice (i.e., that the marriage be dissolved) 217 summons i.e., of the queen 220 Under . . .
 seals with your signed and sealed consent 223 allegèd stated 227 primest foremost 228 paragoned held up as a paragon
 230 further a more distant 231 motion appeal

A C T I I I

Scene I. [London. The queen's apartments.]Enter QUEEN and her WOMEN, as at work.

QUEEN KATHERINE

Take thy lute, wench. My soul grows sad with troubles;

Sing and disperse 'em, if thou canst. Leave° working.

Song.

Orpheus° with his lute made trees,
 And the mountain tops that freeze,
 Bow themselves when he did sing.
 To his music plants and flowers
 Ever sprung, as sun and showers
 There had made a lasting spring.

Everything that heard him play,
 Even the billows of the sea,
 Hung their heads, and then lay by.°
 In sweet music is such art,
 Killing care and grief of heart
 Fall asleep, or hearing die.

Enter a GENTLEMAN.

QUEEN KATHERINE

How now?

GENTLEMAN

And't° please your grace, the two great cardinals
 Wait in the presence.°

QUEEN KATHERINE Would they speak with me?

GENTLEMAN

They willed me say so, madam.

QUEEN KATHERINE

Pray their graces
 To come near. [Exit GENTLEMAN.] What can be their business

With me, a poor weak woman, fall'n from favor?
 I do not like their coming, now I think on't.
 They should be good men, their affairs as righteous;°
 But all hoods make not monks.

Enter the two cardinals, WOLSEY and CAMPEIUS.

WOLSEY

Peace to your highness!

QUEEN KATHERINE

Your graces find me here part of° a housewife.
 I would be all, against the worst may happen.°
 What are your pleasures with me, reverend lords?

WOLSEY

May it please you, noble madam, to withdraw
 Into your private chamber, we shall give you
 The full cause of our coming.

QUEEN KATHERINE

Speak it here;

There's nothing I have done yet, o' my conscience,
 Deserves a corner. Would all other women
 Could speak this with as free a soul as I do!
 My lords, I care not (so much I am happy Above a number) if my actions

Were tried by every tongue, every eye saw 'em,
 Envy and base opinion° set against 'em,
 I know my life so even.° If your business
 Seek me out, and that way I am wife in,°
 Out with it boldly: truth loves open dealing.

WOLSEY Tanta est erga te mentis integritas, regina serenissima°—

QUEEN KATHERINE

O, good my lord, no Latin;
 I am not such a truant since my coming,
 As not to know the language I have lived in.
 A strange tongue makes my cause more strange, suspicious;°
 Pray speak in English. Here are some will thank you,
 If you speak truth, for their poor mistress' sake.
 Believe me, she has had much wrong. Lord Cardinal,
 The willing'st° sin I ever yet committed
 May be absolved in English.

WOLSEY

Noble lady,

I am sorry my integrity should breed
 (And service to his majesty and you)
 So deep suspicion, where all° faith was meant.
 We come not by the way of accusation,
 To taint that honor every good tongue blesses,
 Nor to betray you any way to sorrow—
 You have too much, good lady—but to know
 How you stand minded in the weighty difference Between the king and you, and to deliver,
 Like free and honest men, our just opinions
 And comforts to your cause.

CAMPEIUS

Most honored madam,

My Lord of York, out of his noble nature,
 Zeal and obedience he still bore° your grace,
 Forgetting, like a good man, your late censure
 Both of his truth and him (which was too far°)
 Offers, as I do, in° a sign of peace,
 His service and his counsel.

QUEEN KATHERINE [Aside.] To betray me.—

My lords, I thank you both for your good wills.
 Ye speak like honest men; pray God ye prove so!
 But how to make ye suddenly° an answer,
 In such a point of weight, so near° mine honor,
 More near my life, I fear, with my weak wit.°
 And to such men of gravity and learning,
 In truth I know not. I was set° at work
 Among my maids, full little, God knows, looking Either for such men or such business.
 For her sake that I have been°—for I feel
 The last fit° of my greatness—good your graces,
 Let me have time and counsel for my cause.
 Alas, I am a woman friendless, hopeless!

WOLSEY

Madam, you wrong the king's love with these fears.
 Your hopes and friends are infinite.

III.i.2 Leave leave off 3 Orpheus in mythology the music of his lyre tamed wild beasts and entranced even inanimate nature 11 lay by subsided 16 And't if it 17 presence presence chamber 22 their . . . righteous i.e., their business should be as righteous as they themselves good 24 part of to some extent (because she is sewing) 25 I . . . happen I would like to be a complete one, in preparation for the worst (i.e., in case I am divorced and left nothing else)

36 Envy . . . opinion malice and unworthy gossip 37 even equable 38 Seek . . . in concerns me, and my behavior as a wife 40–41 Tanta . . . serenissima So unprejudiced are we toward you, most serene queen 45 strange, suspicious foreign, and hence suspicious 49 willing'st most deliberate 53 all only 63 still bore has always borne 65 far extreme 66 in as 70 suddenly on the spur of the moment 71 near closely affecting 72 wit intelligence 74 set seated 77 For . . . been for what I once was 78 fit seizure (as in an illness)

QUEEN KATHERINE In England
But little for my profit. Can you think, lords,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel
Or be a known friend, 'gainst his highness' pleasure— 85
Though he be grown so desperate to be honest—
And live a subject? Nay, forsooth, my friends,
They that must weigh out° my afflictions,
They that my trust must grow to, live not here.
They are, as all my other comforts, far hence 90
In mine own country, lords.

CAMPEIUS I would your grace
Would leave your griefs, and take my counsel.

QUEEN KATHERINE How, sir?

CAMPEIUS
Put your main cause into the king's protection;
He's loving and most gracious. 'Twill be much
Both for your honor better and your cause,° 95
For if the trial of the law o'ertake ye,
You'll part away° disgraced.

WOLSEY He tells you rightly.

QUEEN KATHERINE
Ye tell me what ye wish for both—my ruin.
Is this your Christian counsel? Out upon ye!
Heaven is above all yet; there sits a judge 100
That no king can corrupt.

CAMPEIUS Your rage mistakes us.

QUEEN KATHERINE
The more shame for ye. Holy men I thought ye,
Upon my soul, two reverend cardinal virtues;°
But cardinal sins° and hollow hearts I fear ye.
Mend 'em, for shame, my lords. Is this your comfort? 105
The cordial that ye bring a wretched lady,
A woman lost among ye, laughed at, scorned?
I will not wish ye half my miseries:
I have more charity. But say I warned ye.
Take heed, for heaven's sake, take heed, lest at once° 110
The burden of my sorrows fall upon ye.

WOLSEY
Madam, this is a mere distraction.°
You turn the good we offer into envy.°

QUEEN KATHERINE
Ye turn me into nothing. Woe upon ye,
And all such false professors!° Would you have me 115
(If you have any justice, any pity,
If ye be anything but churchmen's habits°)
Put my sick cause into his hands that hates me?
Alas, has banished me his bed already;
His love, too long ago! I am old,° my lords, 120
And all the fellowship I hold now with him
Is only my obedience. What can happen
To me above this wretchedness? All your studies
Make me a curse like this!°

86 so . . . honest so reckless as to come out honestly in my support 88 weigh out attach full weight to 95
Both . . . cause better for both your honor and your cause 97 part away depart 103 cardinal virtues the essential virtues (comprising fortitude, justice, prudence, and temperance);
with a pun on the visitors' station 104 cardinal sins alluding to the seven deadly sins; with pun on carnal, the Elizabethan pronunciation of cardinal 110 at once all at once 112 mere distraction sheer madness 113 envy malice 115 professors i.e., of Christianity 117 habits garb 120 old she was forty-three 123-24 All . . . this Let all your learned efforts make my life any more wretched than it already is

CAMPEIUS Your fears are worse.°

QUEEN KATHERINE
Have I lived thus long (let me speak° myself, 125
Since virtue finds no friends) a wife, a true one?
A woman, I dare say without vainglory,
Never yet branded with suspicion?
Have I with all my full affections
Still met the king? Loved him next heaven? Obeyed
him? 130
Been, out of fondness, superstitious to him?°
Almost forgot my prayers to content him?
And am I thus rewarded? 'Tis not well, lords.
Bring me a constant woman° to her husband,
One that ne'er dreamed a joy beyond his pleasure,° 135
And to that woman, when she has done most,
Yet will I add an honor: a great patience.

WOLSEY
Madam, you wander from the good we aim at.

QUEEN KATHERINE
My lord, I dare not make myself so guilty
To give up willingly that noble title 140
Your master wed me to. Nothing but death
Shall e'er divorce my dignities.

WOLSEY Pray hear me.

QUEEN KATHERINE
Would I had never trod this English earth,
Or felt the flatteries that grow upon it!
Ye have angels' faces, but heaven knows your hearts.° 145
What will become of me now, wretched lady!
I am the most unhappy woman living.
Alas, poor wenches, where are now your fortunes?
Shipwrecked upon a kingdom, where no pity,
No friends, no hope; no kindred weep for me; 150
Almost no grave allowed me. Like the lily,
That once was mistress of the field, and flourished,
I'll hang my head and perish.

WOLSEY If your grace
Could but be brought to know our ends are honest,°
You'd feel more comfort. Why should we, good lady, 155
Upon what cause, wrong you? Alas, our places,
The way of our profession is against it.
We are to cure such sorrows, not to sow 'em.
For goodness' sake, consider what you do;
How you may hurt yourself, aye, utterly 160
Grow° from the king's acquaintance, by this carriage.°
The hearts of princes kiss obedience,
So much they love it; but to stubborn spirits
They swell, and grow as terrible as storms.
I know you have a gentle, noble temper, 165
A soul as even as a calm. Pray think us
Those we profess, peacemakers, friends, and servants.

CAMPEIUS
Madam, you'll find it so. You wrong your virtues
With these weak women's fears. A noble spirit,
As yours was put into you, ever casts 170
Such doubts, as false coin, from it. The king loves you;
Beware you lose it not. For us, if you please

124 worse i.e., than your actual situation 125 speak describe 131 superstitious to him his idolator 134 constant woman woman faithful 135 pleasure (1) enjoyment (2) wishes 145 Ye . . . hearts alluding to the proverb "Fair face, foul heart" 154 ends are honest intentions are honorable 161
Grow be estranged; carriage conduct

To trust us in your business, we are ready
To use our utmost studies° in your service.

QUEEN KATHERINE

Do what ye will, my lords; and pray forgive me. 175
If I have used myself° unmannerly,
You know I am a woman, lacking wit
To make a seemly answer to such persons.
Pray do my service° to his majesty.
He has my heart yet, and shall have my prayers 180
While I shall have my life. Come, reverend fathers, Bestow your counsels on me. She now begs
That little thought, when she set footing° here,
She should have bought her dignities so dear. Exeunt.

Scene II. [Antechamber to the king's apartment.]

Enter the Duke of NORFOLK, Duke of SUFFOLK, Lord SURREY, and Lord CHAMBERLAIN.

NORFOLK

If you will now unite in your complaints
And force them with a constancy,° the cardinal
Cannot stand under them. If you omit
The offer of this time,° I cannot promise
But that you shall sustain moe new disgraces, 5
With these you bear already.

SURREY

I am joyful

To meet the least occasion that may give me
Remembrance of my father-in-law, the duke,°
To be revenged on him.

SUFFOLK

Which of the peers

Have uncondemned° gone by him, or at least° 10
Strangely neglected? When did he regard
The stamp of nobleness in any person
Out of° himself?

CHAMBERLAIN My lords, you speak your pleasures.°

What he deserves of you and me I know;
What we can do to him, though now the time 15
Gives way° to us, I much fear.° If you cannot Bar his access to th' king, never attempt Anything on him, for he hath a witchcraft
Over the king in's tongue.

NORFOLK

O, fear him not;

His spell in that is out.° The king hath found 20
Matter against him that forever mars
The honey of his language. No, he's settled,
Not to come off, in his displeasure.°

SURREY

Sir,

I should be glad to hear such news as this
Once every hour.

NORFOLK

Believe it, this is true. 25

In the divorce his contrary proceedings°
Are all unfolded; wherein he appears
As I would wish mine enemy.

SURREY

How came

His practices° to light?

SUFFOLK

Most strangely.

SURREY

O, how? How?

SUFFOLK

The cardinal's letters to the pope miscarried, 30
And came to th' eye o' th' king; wherein was read
How that the cardinal did entreat his holiness
To stay the judgment o' th' divorce. For if
It did take place, "I do" (quoth he), "perceive
My king is tangled in affection to 35
A creature° of the queen's, Lady Anne Bullen."

SURREY

Has the king this?

SUFFOLK

Believe it.

SURREY

Will this work?

CHAMBERLAIN

The king in this perceives him how he coasts
And hedges his own way.° But in this point
All his tricks founder, and he brings his physic 40
After his patient's death: the king already
Hath married the fair lady.

SURREY

Would he had!

SUFFOLK

May you be happy in your wish, my lord!
For, I profess, you have it.

SURREY

Now, all my joy

Trace the conjunction!°

SUFFOLK

My amen to't!

NORFOLK

All men's!

45

SUFFOLK

There's order given for her coronation.
Marry, this is yet but young, and may be left
To some ears unrecounted. But, my lords,
She is a gallant creature and complete°
In mind and feature. I persuade me, from her 50
Will fall some blessing to this land, which shall
In it be memorized.°

SURREY

But will the king

Digest° this letter of the cardinal's?

The Lord forbid!

NORFOLK

Marry, amen!

SUFFOLK

No, no.

There be moe wasps that buzz about his nose 55
Will make this sting the sooner. Cardinal Campeius
Is stol'n away to Rome; hath ta'en no leave;
Has left the cause o' th' king unhandled, and
Is posted° as the agent of our cardinal
To second all his plot. I do assure you 60
The king cried "Ha!" at this.

CHAMBERLAIN

Now God incense him,

And let him cry "Ha!" louder!

174 studies endeavors 176 used myself behaved 179 do my service offer my respects 183 footing foot
III.ii.2 force . . . constancy urge them with determination 3-4 omit . . . time neglect this opportunity 8 my . . .
duke Buckingham; see II.i.43-44 10 uncondemned un-despised; at least i.e., have not at least been 13 Out of besides; speak your pleasures are free to say what you care to 16 way scope; fear doubt 20 His . . . out His influence that way is finished 22-23 he's . . . displeasure he (Wolsey) is fixed, not to escape, in his (the king's) displeasure (but "he" could possibly refer to the king, in which case "come off" = desist)

26 contrary proceedings (1) proceedings contradicting their outward appearance (2) adverse proceedings 29 practices plots 36 creature dependent 38-39 coasts . . . way moves cir-cuitously and stealthily (i.e., as by coasts and hedgerows) toward his own goals 44-45 all . . . conjunction all the joy I can wish follow the marriage 49 complete fully endowed 52 memorized made memorable 53 Digest stomach 59 posted hastened

NORFOLK But, my lord,
When returns Cranmer?
SUFFOLK
He is returned in his opinions,^o which
Have satisfied the king for his divorce, 65
Together with all famous colleges
Almost in Christendom. Shortly, I believe,
His second marriage shall be published,^o and
Her coronation. Katherine no more
Shall be called queen, but princess dowager 70
And widow to Prince Arthur.
NORFOLK This same Cranmer's
A worthy fellow, and hath ta'en much pain
In the king's business.
SUFFOLK He has, and we shall see him
For it an archbishop.
NORFOLK So I hear.
SUFFOLK 'Tis so.

Enter WOLSEY and CROMWELL.

The cardinal! 75
NORFOLK
Observe, observe, he's moody.
WOLSEY
The packet,^o Cromwell,
Gave't you the king?
CROMWELL To his own hand, in's bedchamber.
WOLSEY
Looked he o' th' inside of the paper?^o
CROMWELL Presently^o
He did unseal them, and the first he viewed, 80
He did it with a serious mind; a heed
Was in his countenance. You he bade
Attend him here this morning.
WOLSEY Is he ready
To come abroad?
CROMWELL I think by this he is.
WOLSEY
Leave me awhile. Exit CROMWELL. 85

[Aside.]

It shall be to the Duchess of Alençon,
The French king's sister; he shall marry her.
Anne Bullen? No. I'll no Anne Bullens for him;
There's more in't than fair visage. Bullen?
No, we'll no Bullens. Speedily I wish 90
To hear from Rome. The Marchioness of Pembroke!^o
NORFOLK
He's discontented.
SUFFOLK Maybe he hears the king
Does whet his anger to^o him.
SURREY Sharp enough,
Lord, for thy justice!
WOLSEY [Aside.]
The late queen's gentlewoman, a knight's daughter, 95
To be her mistress' mistress? The queen's queen?

64 returned . . . opinions i.e., not in person, but in that the opinions have been received from him 68 published proclaimed 77 packet parcel of state papers 79 paper wrapper; Presently immediately 91 Marchioness of Pembroke Anne did not in fact receive the title until 1532, three years after the events of this scene 93 to against

This candle burns not clear. 'Tis I must snuff it;
Then out it goes.^o What though I know her virtuous
And well deserving? Yet I know her for 100
A spleeny^o Lutheran, and not wholesome to
Our cause that she should lie i' th' bosom of
Our hard-ruled^o king. Again, there is sprung up
An heretic, an arch one, Cranmer, one
Hath^o crawled into the favor of the king,
And is his oracle.
70 NORFOLK He is vexed at something. 105
Enter KING, reading of a schedule, [and LOVELL].
SURREY
I would 'twere something that would fret the string,^o
The master-cord on's^o heart.
SUFFOLK The king, the king!
KING
What piles of wealth hath he accumulated
To his own portion! And what expense by th' hour
Seems to flow from him! How, i' th' name of thrift, 110
Does he rake this together? Now, my lords,
Saw you the cardinal?^o
NORFOLK My lord, we have Stood here observing him. Some strange commotion^o
Is in his brain. He bites his lip, and starts;
Stops on a sudden, looks upon the ground, 115
Then lays his finger on his temple; straight
Springs out into fast gait; then stops again,
Strikes his breast hard, and anon he casts
His eye against^o the moon. In most strange postures
We have seen him set himself.
KING It may well be 120
There is a mutiny in's mind. This morning
Papers of state he sent me to peruse,
As I required. And wot^o you what I found
There, on my conscience, put unwittingly?
Forsooth, an inventory, thus importing:^o 125
The several parcels^o of his plate,^o his treasure, Rich stuffs,^o and ornaments of household, which
I find at such proud rate^o that it outspeaks
Possession of a subject.^o
NORFOLK It's heaven's will;
Some spirit put this paper in the packet 130
To bless your eye withal.
KING If we did think
His contemplation were above the earth,
And fixed on spiritual object,^o he should still Dwell in his musings; but I am afraid
His thinkings are below the moon,^o not worth 135
His serious considering.

97-98 This . . . goes i.e., I will be called on to clear away the impediments to this marriage, but instead will use the opportunity to quash it altogether ("snuff" = trim the wick) 100 spleeny (1) staunch (2) splenetic 102 hard-ruled difficult to manage 104 Hath that hath 106 fret the string gnaw through the tendon 107 on's of his 112 Saw . . . cardinal the king, engrossed in the schedule, has not noticed Wolsey's presence 113 commotion turmoil, mutiny (see line 121) 119 against toward 123 wot know 125 thus importing conveying this information 126 several parcels various particulars; plate gold and silver household plate 127 stuffs cloths 128 proud rate high value 128-29 outspeaks . . . subject describes more than a subject should own 133 spiritual object a spiritual objective 135 below the moon worldly

KING takes his seat; whispers LOVELL, who goes to the cardinal [WOLSEY].

WOLSEY Heaven forgive me!
Ever God bless your highness!

KING Good my lord,
You are full of heavenly stuff,^o and bear the inventory
Of your best graces in your mind; the which
You were now running o'er. You have scarce time 140
To steal from spiritual leisure^o a brief span
To keep your earthly audit. Sure, in that I deem you an ill husband,^o and am glad
To have you therein my companion.

WOLSEY Sir,
For holy offices I have a time; a time 145
To think upon the part of business which
I bear i' th' state; and Nature does require
Her times of preservation, which perforce
I, her frail son, amongst my brethren mortal,^o
Must give my tendance^o to.

KING You have said well. 150

WOLSEY
And ever may your highness yoke together,
As I will lend you cause, my doing well
With my well saying!

KING 'Tis well said again,
And 'tis a kind of good deed to say well.
And yet words are no deeds. My father loved you; 155
He said he did, and with his deed did crown^o
His word upon you. Since I had my office
I have kept you next my heart; have not alone
Employed you where high profits might come home,
But pared my present havings,^o to bestow 160
My bounties upon you.

WOLSEY [Aside.] What should this mean?

SURREY [Aside.]
The Lord increase this business!

KING Have I not made you
The prime man of the state? I pray you tell me
If what I now pronounce you have found true;
And, if you may confess it, say withal, 165
If you are bound to us or no. What say you?

WOLSEY
My sovereign, I confess your royal graces,
Showered on me daily, have been more than could
My studied purposes requite,^o which went Beyond all man's endeavors. My endeavors 170
Have ever come too short of my desires,
Yet filed^o with my abilities. Mine own ends
Have been mine so that^o evermore they pointed
To th' good of your most sacred person and
The profit of the state. For your great graces 175
Heaped upon me, poor undeserver, I
Can nothing render but allegiant^o thanks,
My prayers to heaven for you, my loyalty,
Which ever has and ever shall be growing

Till death, that winter, kill it.

KING Fairly answered; 180
A loyal and obedient subject is Therein illustrated. The honor of it
Does pay the act of it, as, i' th' contrary,
The foulness is the punishment.^o I presume
That, as my hand has opened bounty to you, 185
My heart dropped love, my pow'r rained honor, more
On you than any,^o so your hand and heart,
Your brain and every function of your power,
Should, notwithstanding that^o your bond of duty,
As 'twere in love's particular,^o be more 190
To me, your friend, than any.

WOLSEY I do profess
That for your highness' good I ever labored 145
More^o than mine own; that am, have,^o and will be—
Though all the world should crack their duty to you
And throw it from their soul; though perils did 195
Abound as thick as thought could make 'em, and Appear in forms more horrid—yet my duty,
As doth a rock against the chiding^o flood,
Should the approach of this wild river break,^o
And stand unshaken yours.

KING 'Tis nobly spoken. 200
Take notice, lords, he has a loyal breast,
For you have seen him open't. [Giving him papers.]
Read o'er this;
And after, this; and then to breakfast with
What appetite you have.

Exit KING, frowning upon the cardinal [WOLSEY];
the NOBLES throng after him, smiling and whispering.

WOLSEY What should this mean?
What sudden anger's this? How have I reaped it? 205
He parted frowning from me, as if ruin
Leaped from his eyes. So looks the chafèd^o lion
Upon the daring huntsman that has galled^o him,
Then makes him nothing.^o I must read this paper;
I fear, the story of his anger. 'Tis so; 210
This paper has undone me. 'Tis th' account
Of all that world of wealth I have drawn together
For mine own ends; indeed, to gain the popedom,
And fee my friends in Rome. O negligence, 215
Fit for a fool to fall by! What cross^o devil
Made me put this main^o secret in the packet
I sent the king? Is there no way to cure this?
No new device to beat this from his brains?
I know 'twill stir him strongly; yet I know 220
A way, if it take right,^o in spite of fortune
Will bring me off^o again. What's this? "To th' pope"?
The letter, as I live, with all the business
I writ to's holiness. Nay then, farewell!
I have touched the highest point of all my greatness,

138 stuff concerns (with a possible quibble on the household stuff referred to in line 127) 141 spiritual leisure religious occupations 143 husband manager 149 amongst . . . mortal i.e., in my human (as distinguished from divine) capacity 150 tend-ance attention 156 crown confirm 160 havings possessions 168–69 more . . . requite more than I could with diligent endeavors repay 172 filed kept pace 173 so that only to the extent that 177 allegiant loyal

182–84 The honor . . . punishment i.e., Virtue is its own reward, just as evil is its own punishment 187 any on anyone 189 notwithstanding that over and above 190 in love's particular out of personal affection 193 More as in Buckingham's speech, I.i.184 ff., the speaker's emotion overcomes the restraints of normal syntax in the rest of this speech, but the sense is clear; have have been 198 chiding tumultuous 199 break check 207 chafèd angry 208 galled wounded 209 makes him nothing annihilates him 215 cross thwarting, perverse 216 main crucial 220 take right succeed 221 bring me off rescue me

And from that full meridian° of my glory
I haste now to my setting. I shall fall
Like a bright exhalation° in the evening,
And no man see me more.

Enter to WOLSEY the Dukes of NORFOLK and SUFFOLK, the Earl of SURREY, and the Lord CHAMBERLAIN.

NORFOLK

Hear the king's pleasure, cardinal, who commands you
To render up the Great Seal° presently°
Into our hands, and to confine yourself
To Asher House, my Lord of Winchester's,°
Till you hear further from his highness.

WOLSEY

Stay:

Where's your commission, lords? Words cannot carry Authority so weighty.

SUFFOLK

Who dare cross° 'em,

Bearing the king's will from his mouth expressly?

WOLSEY

Till I find more than will or words to do it°—

I mean your malice—know, officious lords,

I dare, and must deny it. Now I feel

Of what coarse metal ye are molded—envy;

How eagerly ye follow my disgraces,

As if it fed ye! And how sleek and wanton°

Ye appear in everything may bring my ruin!

Follow your envious courses, men of malice;

You have Christian warrant° for 'em, and no doubt

In time will find their fit rewards. That seal

You ask with such a violence, the king,

Mine and your master, with his own hand gave me;

Bade me enjoy it, with the place and honors,

During my life; and, to confirm his goodness,

Tied it by letters-patents.° Now, who'll take it?

SURREY

The king, that gave it.

WOLSEY

It must be himself, then.

SURREY

Thou art a proud traitor, priest.

WOLSEY

Proud lord, thou liest.

Within these forty hours Surrey durst better

Have burnt that tongue than said so.

SURREY

Thy ambition,

Thou scarlet sin,° robbed this bewailing land

Of noble Buckingham, my father-in-law.

The heads of all thy brother cardinals,

With thee and all thy best parts° bound together,

Weighed° not a hair of his. Plague of your policy!

You sent me Deputy for Ireland;°

Far from his succor, from the king, from all

That might have mercy on the fault thou gav'st him,

225

Whilst your great goodness, out of holy pity,
Absolved him with an ax.

WOLSEY

This, and all else

This talking lord can lay upon my credit,°

I answer, is most false. The duke by law

Found his deserts. How innocent I was

From any private malice in his end,

His noble jury and foul cause can witness.

If I loved many words, lord, I should tell you

You have as little honesty as honor,

That° in the way of loyalty and truth

Toward the king, my ever royal master,

Dare mate° a sounder man than Surrey can be,

And all that love his follies.

SURREY

By my soul,

Your long coat, priest, protects you; thou shouldst feel

My sword i' th' lifeblood of thee else. My lords,

Can ye endure to hear this arrogance?

And from this fellow? If we live thus tamely,

To be thus jaded° by a piece of scarlet,

Farewell nobility. Let his grace go forward,

And dare us with his cap, like larks.°

WOLSEY

All goodness

Is poison to thy stomach.

SURREY

Yes, that goodness

Of gleaning all the land's wealth into one,

Into your own hands, card'nal, by extortion;

The goodness of your intercepted packets

You writ to th' pope against the king. Your goodness,

Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.

My Lord of Norfolk,° as you are truly noble,

As you respect the common good, the state

Of our despised nobility, our issues,°

Who, if he live, will scarce be gentlemen,

Produce the grand sum of his sins, the articles°

Collected from his life. I'll startle you

Worse than the sacring bell,° when the brown wench

Lay kissing in your arms, Lord Cardinal.

WOLSEY

How much, methinks, I could despise this man,

But that I am bound in charity against it!

NORFOLK

Those articles, my lord, are in the king's hand;

But, thus much,° they are foul ones.

WOLSEY

So much fairer

And spotless shall mine innocence arise,

When the king knows my truth.

SURREY

This cannot save you.

I thank my memory I yet remember

Some of these articles, and out they shall.

Now, if you can blush and cry "guilty," cardinal,

You'll show a little honesty.

WOLSEY

Speak on, sir;

I dare your worst objections. If I blush,

It is to see a nobleman want° manners.

225 meridian a star's highest point 227 exhalation meteor
230 Great Seal insignia of the Lord Chancellor's office; see note to I.i.114 s.d.; presently at once 232 Lord of Winchester's as Wolsey was himself still Bishop of Winchester, we are perhaps meant to think of his successor, Stephen Gardiner 235 cross oppose 237 do it (1) "render up the Great Seal" (line 230) (2) carry such great authority 242 wanton unrestrained
245 Christian warrant justification by Christian principles (ironic) 251 Tied . . . letters-patents confirmed it by documents of formal conveyance 256 scarlet sin referring to the color of his cassock, and also the traditional idea of scarlet sins, as in Isaiah 1:18 259 parts qualities 260 Weighed equaled in weight 261 Ireland three syllables

266 credit reputation 273 That the antecedent is "I," line 271
275 mate match 281 jaded intimidated 283 dare . . . larks
i.e., dazzle us with his cardinal's hat, as larks were dazed and caught by means of a mirror and piece of red cloth 290 Lord of Norfolk Norfolk was actually Surrey's father 292 issues children 294 articles charges in an indictment 296 sacring bell the consecrating bell rung at the elevation of the Host, the most solemn portion of the Mass 301 thus much i.e., so much
I can say 309 want lack

SURREY

I had rather want those than my head. Have at you!^o 310
 First that, without the king's assent or knowledge,
 You wrought to be a legate;^o by which power
 You maimed the jurisdiction of all bishops.

NORFOLK

Then that in all you writ to Rome, or else
 To foreign princes, "Ego et Rex meus"^o 315
 Was still inscribed; in which you brought the king
 To be your servant.

SUFFOLK

Then, that without the knowledge
 Either of king or council, when you went
 Ambassador to the emperor,^o you made bold
 To carry into Flanders the Great Seal.^o 320

SURREY

Item, you sent a large commission
 To Gregory de Cassado, to conclude,
 Without the king's will or the state's allowance,
 A league between his highness and Ferrara.

SUFFOLK

That out of mere^o ambition you have caused 325
 Your holy hat to be stamped on the king's coin.^o

SURREY

Then that you have sent innumerable substance^o
 (By what means got, I leave to your own conscience)
 To furnish^o Rome and to prepare the ways
 You have for dignities, to the mere undoing 330
 Of all the kingdom. Many more there are,
 Which, since they are of you and odious,
 I will not taint my mouth with.

CHAMBERLAIN

O my lord,
 Press not a falling man too far: 'tis virtue.^o
 His faults lie open to the laws; let them, 335
 Not you, correct him. My heart weeps to see him
 So little of his great self.

SURREY

I forgive him.

SUFFOLK

Lord Cardinal, the king's further pleasure is—
 Because all those things you have done of late,
 By your power legative,^o within this kingdom, 340
 Fall into th' compass of a praemunire^o—
 That therefore such a writ be sued^o against you:
 To forfeit all your goods, lands, tenements,
 Chattels, and whatsoever, and to be
 Out of the king's protection. This is my charge. 345

NORFOLK

And so we'll leave you to your meditations
 How to live better. For your stubborn answer
 About the giving back the Great Seal to us,
 The king shall know it, and no doubt shall thank you.

310 Have at you Here goes; cf. II.ii.85 (the six charges that follow are the most serious of the nine leveled against Wolsey)
 312 legate i.e., the papal representative in England 315 Ego . . . meus my king and I (the normal Latin word order, although Shakespeare followed the chroniclers in taking it to imply that Wolsey put himself before the king) 319 emperor Charles V; see I.i.176–90 320 To . . . Seal the Seal, and thus the Lord Chancellor, were not supposed to leave the country
 325 mere sheer 326 Your . . . coin a usurpation of royal prerogative 327 innumerable substance countless treasure
 329 furnish supply 334 virtue i.e., to relent 340 legative as a papal legate 341 F. II . . . praemunire come within the penalties—forfeiture of goods and outlawry—prescribed by the Statute of Praemunire, which limited papal authority in England 342 sued moved

So fare you well, my little good Lord Cardinal. 350

Exeunt all but WOLSEY.

WOLSEY

So farewell to the little good you bear me.
 Farewell! A long farewell to all my greatness!
 This is the state of man: today he puts forth
 The tender leaves of hopes; tomorrow blossoms, 355
 And bears his blushing honors thick upon him.
 The third day comes a frost, a killing frost,
 And, when he thinks, good easy^o man, full surely
 His greatness is aripening, nips his root,
 And then he falls, as I do. I have ventured,
 Like little wanton^o boys that swim on bladders, 360
 This many summers in a sea of glory,
 But far beyond my depth. My high-blown pride
 At length broke under me and now has left me,
 Weary and old with service, to the mercy
 Of a rude^o stream that must forever hide me. 365
 Vain pomp and glory of this world, I hate ye.
 I feel my heart new opened. O, how wretched
 Is that poor man that hangs on princes' favors!
 There is betwixt that smile we would aspire to,
 That sweet aspect of princes, and their ruin,^o 370
 More pangs and fears than wars or women have.
 And when he falls, he falls like Lucifer,^o
 Never to hope again.

Enter CROMWELL, standing amazed.

Why, how now, Cromwell?

CROMWELL

I have no power to speak, sir.

WOLSEY

What, amazed

At my misfortunes? Can thy spirit wonder 375
 A great man should decline? Nay, and^o you weep,
 I am fall'n indeed.

CROMWELL

How does your grace?

WOLSEY

Why, well;

Never so truly happy, my good Cromwell.
 I know myself^o now, and I feel within me
 A peace above all earthly dignities, 380
 A still and quiet conscience. The king has cured me,
 I humbly thank his grace; and from these shoulders,
 These ruined pillars, out of pity, taken
 A load would sink a navy—too much honor.
 O, 'tis a burden, Cromwell, 'tis a burden 385
 Too heavy for a man that hopes for heaven!

CROMWELL

I am glad your grace has made that right use of^o it.

WOLSEY

I hope I have. I am able now, methinks,
 Out of a fortitude of soul I feel,
 To endure more miseries and greater far 390
 Than my weak-hearted enemies dare offer.
 What news abroad?

CROMWELL

The heaviest and the worst

Is your displeasure^o with the king.

WOLSEY

God bless him!

357 easy easygoing 360 wanton playful 365 rude turbulent 370 their ruin the ruin they cause 372 he . . . Lucifer cf. Isaiah 14:12: "How art thou fallen from Heaven, O Lucifer, son of the morning" 376 and if 379 know myself i.e., "recognize my limitations and my sins and am able to transcend them" (Foakes) 387 made . . . of derived that benefit from 393 displeasure loss of favor

CROMWELL

The next is, that Sir Thomas More is chosen
Lord Chancellor in your place.

WOLSEY

That's somewhat sudden. 395

But he's a learnèd man. May he continue
Long in his highness' favor and do justice
For truth's sake and his conscience, that his bones,
When he has run his course and sleeps in blessings,
May have a tomb of orphans' tears wept on him! 400
What more?

CROMWELL That Cranmer is returned with welcome,
Installed Lord Archbishop of Canterbury.

WOLSEY

That's news indeed.

CROMWELL

Last, that the Lady Anne,

Whom the king hath in secrecy long married,
This day was viewed in open as his queen, 405
Going to chapel; and the voice° is now
Only about her coronation.

WOLSEY

There was the weight that pulled me down. O
Cromwell,

The king has gone beyond° me. All my glories
In that one woman I have lost forever. 410

No sun shall ever usher forth mine honors,
Or gild again the noble troops that waited
Upon my smiles. Go get thee from me, Cromwell;
I am a poor fall'n man, unworthy now
To be thy lord and master. Seek the king
(That sun I pray may never set!)—I have told him
What and how true thou art. He will advance thee;
Some little memory of me will stir him
(I know his noble nature) not to let Thy hopeful service perish too. Good Cromwell, Neglect him not; make use° now, and provide
For thine own future safety.

CROMWELL

O my lord,

Must I then leave you? Must I needs forgo°
So good, so noble, and so true a master?
Bear witness, all that have not hearts of iron,
With what a sorrow Cromwell leaves his lord.
The king shall have my service, but my prayers
Forever and forever shall be yours.

WOLSEY

Cromwell, I did not think to shed a tear
In all my miseries, but thou hast forced me,
Out of thy honest truth,° to play the woman.
Let's dry our eyes—and thus far hear me, Cromwell,
And when I am forgotten, as I shall be,
And sleep in dull° cold marble where no mention
Of me more must be heard of, say I taught thee,
Say, Wolsey, that once trod the ways of glory,
And sounded all the depths and shoals of honor,
Found thee a way, out of his wrack, to rise in:
A sure and safe one, though thy master missed it.
Mark but my fall and that that ruined me. 440
Cromwell, I charge thee, fling away ambition.
By that sin fell the angels. How can man then,
The image of his Maker, hope to win° by it?
Love thyself last; cherish those hearts that hate thee;

406 voice talk 409 gone beyond overreached 421 make use take advantage 423 forgo forsake 431 truth faith 434 dull (1) inanimate (2) cheerless 443 win profit

Corruption wins not more than honesty. 445

Still° in thy right hand carry gentle peace
To silence envious tongues. Be just, and fear not.
Let all the ends thou aim'st at be thy country's,
Thy God's, and truth's. Then if thou fall'st, O Crom-
well,

Thou fall'st a blessed martyr.° Serve the king;
And prithee, lead me in. 450

There take an inventory of all I have
To the last penny; 'tis the king's. My robe,°
And my integrity to heaven, is all
I dare now call mine own. O Cromwell, Cromwell, 455
Had I but served my God with half the zeal
I served my king, he would not in mine age
Have left me naked to mine enemies.

CROMWELL

Good sir, have patience.

WOLSEY

So I have. Farewell

The hopes of court! My hopes in heaven do dwell. 460
Exeunt.

A C T I V

Scene I. [A street in Westminster.]Enter two GENTLEMEN, meeting one another.

415 FIRST GENTLEMAN

Y' are well met once again.°

SECOND GENTLEMAN So are you.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

You come to take your stand here, and behold
The Lady Anne pass from her coronation? 420

SECOND GENTLEMAN

'Tis all my business. At our last encounter
The Duke of Buckingham came from his trial. 5

FIRST GENTLEMAN

'Tis very true. But that time offered sorrow;
This, general joy. 425

SECOND GENTLEMAN 'Tis well. The citizens,
I am sure, have shown at full their royal° minds—
As, let 'em have their rights, they are ever forward°—
In celebration of this day with shows, 10
Pageants, and sights of honor.

FIRST GENTLEMAN Never greater,
Nor, I'll assure you, better taken,° sir.

SECOND GENTLEMAN

May I be bold to ask what that contains,
That paper in your hand?

435 FIRST GENTLEMAN Yes. 'Tis the list
Of those that claim their offices this day
By custom° of the coronation.

The Duke of Suffolk is the first, and claims
To be High Steward; next, the Duke of Norfolk,
He to be Earl Marshal. You may read the rest. 440

446 Still always 448–50 Let . . . martyr after becoming Earl of Essex and Lord Great Chamberlain, Cromwell fell from favor and was beheaded in 1540 453 robe cardinal's habit
IV.i.i again they met previously in II.i 8 royal i.e., well disposed to the king 9 let . . . forward to give them their due, they are always eager to do 12 taken received 16 By custom
i.e., in accordance with hereditary privilege

SECOND GENTLEMAN

I thank you, sir; had I not known those customs, 20
I should have been beholding° to your paper.
But, I beseech you, what's become of Katherine,
The princess dowager? How goes her business?

FIRST GENTLEMAN

That I can tell you too. The Archbishop
Of Canterbury, accompanied with other 25
Learnèd and reverend fathers of his order,
Held a late° court at Dunstable, six miles off
From Ampthill, where the princess lay; to which
She was often cited° by them, but appeared not.
And, to be short, for not appearance and 30
The king's late scruple, by the main assent°
Of all these learnèd men she was divorced,
And the late marriage made of none effect;°
Since which she was removed to Kimbolton,
Where she remains now sick.

SECOND GENTLEMAN Alas, good lady! 35

[Trumpets.]

The trumpets sound: stand close, the queen is coming.
Hautboys.

THE ORDER OF THE CORONATION.

1. A lively flourish° of trumpets.
2. Then two JUDGES.
3. LORD CHANCELLOR, with purse and mace before him.
4. CHORISTERS, singing. Music.°
5. MAYOR of London, bearing the mace. Then GARTER,° in his coat of arms, and on his head he wore a gilt copper crown.
6. Marquess DORSET, bearing a scepter of gold, on his head a demicoronal° of gold. With him, the Earl of SURREY, bearing the rod of silver with the dove, crowned with an earl's coronet. Collars of S's.°
7. Duke of SUFFOLK, in his robe of estate,° his coronet on his head, bearing a long white wand, as High Steward. With him, the Duke of NORFOLK, with the rod of marshalship, a coronet on his head. Collars of S's.
8. A canopy borne by four of the CINQUE-PORTS;° under it, the QUEEN in her robe, in her hair,° richly adorned with pearl, crowned. On each side her, the Bishops of LONDON and WINCHESTER.
9. The old DUCHESS of Norfolk, in a coronal of gold, wrought with flowers, bearing the QUEEN'S train.
10. Certain ladies or COUNTESSSES, with plain circlets of gold without flowers.

Exeunt, first passing over the stage in order and state, and then a great flourish of trumpets. [As the procession passes, the two GENTLEMEN comment upon it.]

SECOND GENTLEMAN

A royal train,° believe me. These I know.
Who's that that bears the scepter?

21 beholding beholden 27 late recent 29 cited summoned 31 main assent general agreement 33 late . . . effect former marriage annulled 36 s.d. flourish fanfare; Music musicians;
Garter i.e., Garter King-at-Arms; demicoronal small coronet;
Collars of S's gold chains of office fashioned of S-shaped links; estate state; four . . . Cinque-ports i.e., four barons of the channel ports (the ports, five in all, were Dover, Hastings, Hythe, Romney, and Sandwich); in her hair with her hair hanging loosely (the custom for brides) 37 train retinue

FIRST GENTLEMAN Marquess Dorset;
And that the Earl of Surrey, with the rod.

SECOND GENTLEMAN

A bold brave gentleman. That should be 40
The Duke of Suffolk?

FIRST GENTLEMAN 'Tis the same: High Steward.

SECOND GENTLEMAN

And that my Lord of Norfolk?

FIRST GENTLEMAN Yes.

SECOND GENTLEMAN [Looking on the QUEEN.]

Heaven bless thee!

Thou hast the sweetest face I ever looked on.

Sir, as I have a soul, she is an angel;

Our king has all the Indies° in his arms, 45

And more and richer, when he strains° that lady.

I cannot blame his conscience.

FIRST GENTLEMAN They that bear

The cloth of honor over her, are four barons

Of the Cinque-ports.

SECOND GENTLEMAN

Those men are happy, and so are all are near her. 50

I take it, she that carries up the train

Is that old noble lady, Duchess of Norfolk.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

It is, and all the rest are countesses.

SECOND GENTLEMAN

Their coronets say so. These are stars indeed.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

And sometimes falling° ones.

SECOND GENTLEMAN No more of that. 55

[The last of the procession exits; trumpets sound.]

Enter a third GENTLEMAN.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

God save you, sir! Where have you been broiling?

THIRD GENTLEMAN

Among the crowd i' th' abbey, where a finger

Could not be wedged in more: I am stifled

With the mere rankness° of their joy.

SECOND GENTLEMAN

You saw

The ceremony?

THIRD GENTLEMAN That I did.

FIRST GENTLEMAN

How was it? 60

THIRD GENTLEMAN

Well worth the seeing.

SECOND GENTLEMAN Good sir, speak° it to us.

THIRD GENTLEMAN

As well as I am able. The rich stream

Of lords and ladies, having brought the queen

To a prepared place in the choir, fell off°

A distance from her, while her grace sat down 65

To rest awhile, some half an hour or so,

In a rich chair of state, opposing° freely

The beauty of her person to the people.

Believe me, sir, she is the goodliest woman

That ever lay by man; which when the people 70

Had the full view of, such a noise arose

45 all the Indies i.e., the East and the West (the Indies were celebrated for their riches) 46 strains clasps 55 falling with a double meaning; "falling" = surrendering chastity 59 mere rankness sheer stink 61 speak describe 64 off back 67 opposing exposing

As the shrouds^o make at sea in a stiff tempest,
 As loud and to as many tunes; hats, cloaks—
 Doublets,^o I think—flew up, and had their faces
 Been loose, this day they had been lost. Such joy 75
 I never saw before. Great-bellied^o women
 That had not half a week to go, like rams^o
 In the old time of war, would shake the press,^o
 And make 'em reel before 'em. No man living
 Could say "This is my wife" there, all were woven 80
 So strangely in one piece.

SECOND GENTLEMAN But what followed?

THIRD GENTLEMAN

At length her grace rose, and with modest paces
 Came to the altar, where she kneeled and saintlike
 Cast her fair eyes to heaven and prayed devoutly;
 Then rose again and bowed her to the people; 85
 When by the Archbishop of Canterbury
 She had all the royal makings of^o a queen,
 As^o holy oil, Edward Confessor's crown,
 The rod, and bird of peace, and all such emblems
 Laid nobly on her; which performed, the choir, 90
 With all the choicest music^o of the kingdom,
 Together sung "Te Deum." So she parted,^o
 And with the same full state^o paced back again
 To York Place, where the feast is held.^o

FIRST GENTLEMAN Sir,
 You must no more call it York Place; that's past. 95
 For, since the cardinal fell, that title's lost:^o
 'Tis now the king's, and called Whitehall.

THIRD GENTLEMAN I know it,
 But 'tis so lately altered that the old name
 Is fresh about me.

SECOND GENTLEMAN What two reverend bishops
 Were those that went on each side of the queen? 100

THIRD GENTLEMAN
 Stokesly and Gardiner; the one of Winchester,
 Newly preferred from^o the king's secretary,
 The other, London.

SECOND GENTLEMAN He of Winchester
 Is held no great good lover of the archbishop's,
 The virtuous Cranmer.

THIRD GENTLEMAN All the land knows that; 105
 However, yet there is no great breach. When it comes,
 Cranmer will find a friend will^o not shrink from him.

SECOND GENTLEMAN
 Who may that be, I pray you?

THIRD GENTLEMAN Thomas Cromwell,
 A man in much esteem with th' king, and truly
 A worthy friend. The king has made him Master 110
 O' th' Jewel House,
 And one, already, of the Privy Council.

SECOND GENTLEMAN
 He will deserve more.

THIRD GENTLEMAN Yes, without all doubt.
 Come, gentlemen, ye shall go my way,

Which is to th' court, and there ye shall be my guests; 115
 Something^o I can command. As I walk thither,
 I'll tell ye more.

BOTH You may command us, sir. Exeunt.

Scene II. [Kimbolton.]

Enter KATHERINE, dowager, sick; led between GRIFFITH, her gentleman usher, and PATIENCE, her woman.

GRIFFITH

How does your grace?

KATHERINE O Griffith, sick to death.
 My legs like loaden branches bow to th' earth,
 Willing to leave their burden. Reach a chair. 85
 So—now, methinks, I feel a little ease.
 Didst thou not tell me, Griffith, as thou led'st me,
 That the great child of honor, Cardinal Wolsey,
 Was dead?^o 5

GRIFFITH Yes, madam; but I think your grace,
 Out of the pain you suffered, gave no ear to't.

KATHERINE
 Prithee, good Griffith, tell me how he died.
 If well, he stepped before me happily^o 10
 For my example.

GRIFFITH Well, the voice goes,^o madam.
 For after the stout Earl Northumberland
 Arrested him at York, and brought him forward,
 As a man sorely tainted,^o to his answer, 15
 He fell sick suddenly, and grew so ill
 He could not sit his mule.

KATHERINE Alas, poor man!

GRIFFITH
 At last, with easy roads,^o he came to Leicester,
 Lodged in the abbey; where the reverend abbot,
 With all his covent,^o honorably received him;
 To whom he gave these words: "O father abbot, 20
 An old man broken with the storms of state
 Is come to lay his weary bones among ye;
 Give him a little earth for charity."
 So went to bed, where eagerly^o his sickness
 Pursued him still; and three nights after this, 25
 About the hour of eight, which he himself
 Foretold should be his last, full of repentance,
 Continual meditations, tears, and sorrows,
 He gave his honors to the world again,
 His blessed^o part^o to heaven, and slept in peace. 30

KATHERINE
 So may he rest. His faults lie gently on him!
 Yet thus far, Griffith, give me leave to speak^o him,
 And yet with charity. He was a man
 Of an unbounded stomach,^o ever ranking
 Himself with princes; one that by suggestion 35
 Tied^o all the kingdom. Simony^o was fair play;

116 Something to some extent

IV.ii.7 dead Wolsey died in 1530, Katherine in 1536 10 happily (1) appropriately (2) perhaps 11 the voice goes people say 14 sorely tainted severely disgraced 17 roads stages 19 covent convent (used of religious companies of either sex) 24 eagerly sharply 30 blessed part soul 32 speak describe 34 stomach arrogance 35–36 by suggestion Tied by underhand dealing brought into bondage
 36 Simony the buying and selling of ecclesiastical preferment

72 shrouds sail-ropes 74 Doublets men's close-fitting garments, with or without sleeves 76 Great-bellied pregnant 77 rams battering rams 78 press crowd 87 makings of things that go to make 88 As namely 91 music musicians 92 parted departed 93 state pomp 94 To . . . held it was in fact held in Westminster Hall; the change permits the reference to Wolsey that follows 96 lost erased 102 preferred from promoted from being 107 will who will

His own opinion was his law. I' th' presence°
 He would say untruths and be ever double°
 Both in his words and meaning. He was never,
 But where he meant to ruin, pitiful.
 His promises were, as he then was, mighty,
 But his performance, as he is now, nothing.
 Of his own body he was ill,° and gave
 The clergy ill example.

GRIFFITH Noble madam,
 Men's evil manners live in brass; their virtues
 We write in water. May it please your highness
 To hear me speak his good° now?

KATHERINE Yes, good Griffith;
 I were malicious else.

GRIFFITH This cardinal,
 Though from an humble stock, undoubtedly
 Was fashioned to much honor from his cradle.
 He was a scholar, and a ripe and good one;
 Exceeding wise, fair-spoken, and persuading;
 Lofty and sour to them that loved him not,
 But to those men that sought him, sweet as summer.
 And though he were unsatisfied in getting,°
 Which was a sin, yet in bestowing, madam,
 He was most princely: ever witness for him
 Those twins of learning that he raised in you,°
 Ipswich and Oxford; one of which fell with him,
 Unwilling to outlive the good° that did it;
 The other,° though unfinished, yet so famous,
 So excellent in art,° and still so rising,
 That Christendom shall ever speak his virtue.
 His overthrow heaped happiness upon him,
 For then, and not till then, he felt himself,°
 And found the blessedness of being little.
 And, to add greater honors to his age
 Than man could give him, he died fearing God.

KATHERINE
 After my death I wish no other herald,
 No other speaker of my living actions,°
 To keep mine honor from corruption,
 But such an honest chronicler as Griffith.
 Whom° I most hated living, thou hast made me,
 With thy religious truth and modesty,°
 Now in his ashes honor. Peace be with him!
 Patience, be near me still, and set me lower:
 I have not long to trouble thee. Good Griffith,
 Cause the musicians play me that sad note°
 I named my knell, whilst I sit meditating
 On that celestial harmony° I go to.
Sad and solemn music.

GRIFFITH
 She is asleep. Good wench, let's sit down quiet,
 For fear we wake her. Softly, gentle Patience.

37 presence presence chamber, i.e., before the king 38 double deceitful 43 Of . . . ill i.e., he was depraved in his sexual conduct 47 speak his good describe his good qualities 55 unsatisfied in getting insatiably acquisitive 58 raised in you i.e., erected in your cities 60 good goodness 61 other i.e., Christ Church, Oxford 62 art learning 65 felt himself truly knew himself 70 living actions actions during my life 73 Whom object of "hated"; also of "honor" in line 75 74 religious . . . modesty strict truth and moderation 78 note tune 80 celestial harmony the heavenly spheres in their revolutions were thought to produce a music accessible only to the liberated soul

The Vision.

Enter, solemnly tripping° one after another, six personages, clad in white robes, wearing on their heads garlands of bays,° and golden vizards° on their faces; branches of bays or palm in their hands. They first congee° unto her, then dance; and, at certain changes,° the first two hold a spare garland over her head; at which the other four make reverent curtsies. Then the two that held the garland deliver the same to the other next two, who observe the same order in their changes, and holding the garland over her head; which done, they deliver the same garland to the last two, who likewise observe the same order; at which, as it were by inspiration, she makes in her sleep signs of rejoicing, and holdeth up her hands to heaven. And so in their dancing vanish, carrying the garland with them. The music continues.

KATHERINE
 Spirits of peace, where are ye? Are ye all gone,
 And leave me here in wretchedness behind ye?

GRIFFITH
 Madam, we are here.

KATHERINE It is not you I call for. 85
 Saw ye none enter since I slept?

GRIFFITH None, madam.

KATHERINE
 No? Saw you not even now a blessed troop
 Invite me to a banquet, whose bright faces
 Cast thousand beams upon me, like the sun?
 They promised me eternal happiness, 90
 And brought me garlands, Griffith, which I feel
 I am not worthy yet to wear. I shall, assuredly.

GRIFFITH
 I am most joyful, madam, such good dreams
 Possess your fancy.

KATHERINE Bid the music leave;°
 They are harsh and heavy to me. Music ceases.

PATIENCE Do you note 95
 How much her grace is altered on the sudden?
 How long her face is drawn? How pale she looks,
 And of an earthy cold? Mark her eyes.

GRIFFITH
 She is going, wench. Pray, pray.

PATIENCE Heaven comfort her!
Enter a MESSENGER.

MESSENGER
 And't like° your grace—

KATHERINE You are a saucy fellow! 100
 Deserve we no more reverence?

GRIFFITH You are to blame,
 Knowing she will not lose° her wonted greatness,
 To use so rude behavior. Go to, kneel.

MESSENGER
 I humbly do entreat your highness' pardon:
 My haste made me unmannerly. There is staying° 105
 A gentleman, sent from the king, to see you.

KATHERINE
 Admit him entrance, Griffith; but this fellow
 Let me ne'er see again. Exit MESSENGER.

82 s.d. tripping with light steps; bays bay leaves (symbolic of triumph); vizards masks (probably to indicate that they are spirits); congee bow ceremoniously; changes movements in the dance 94 music leave musicians stop 100 And't like if it please 102 lose give up 105 staying waiting

Enter Lord CAPUCIUS.^o

If my sight fail not,
You should be Lord Ambassador from the emperor,
My royal nephew, and your name Capucius.

CAPUCIUS

Madam, the same. Your servant.

KATHERINE

O, my lord,
The times and titles now are altered strangely
With me since first you knew me. But I pray you,
What is your pleasure with me?

CAPUCIUS

Noble lady,
First, mine own service to your grace; the next,
The king's request that I would visit you,
Who grieves much for your weakness, and by me
Sends you his princely commendations,^o
And heartily entreats you take good comfort.

KATHERINE

O my good lord, that comfort comes too late;
'Tis like a pardon after execution.^o
That gentle physic,^o given in time, had cured me,
But now I am past all comforts here^o but prayers.
How does his highness?

CAPUCIUS

Madam, in good health.

KATHERINE

So may he ever do, and ever flourish,
When I shall dwell with worms, and my poor name Banished the kingdom! Patience, is that letter
I caused you write yet sent away?

PATIENCE

No, madam.

[Giving it to KATHERINE.]

KATHERINE

Sir, I most humbly pray you to deliver
This to my lord the king.

CAPUCIUS

Most willing, madam.

KATHERINE

In which I have commended to his goodness
The model^o of our chaste loves, his young daughter^o—
The dews of heaven fall thick in blessings on her!—
Beseeching him to give her virtuous breeding^o—
She is young, and of a noble modest nature;
I hope she will deserve well—and a little
To love her for her mother's sake that loved him
Heaven knows how dearly. My next poor petition
Is that his noble grace would have some pity
Upon my wretched women that so long
Have followed both my fortunes^o faithfully;
Of which there is not one, I dare avow
(And now^o I should not lie), but will deserve,
For virtue and true beauty of the soul,
For honesty and decent carriage,
A right good husband, let him be^o a noble;
And, sure, those men are happy that shall have 'em.
The last is, for my men—they are the poorest,

108 s.d. Exit . . . Capucius most editors have Griffith exit with the messenger and reenter with Capucius, but he need not leave the stage in order to usher in the visitor
118 commendations greetings 121 execution “-tion” is disyllabic 122 physic healing art 123 here in this world
132 model image; daughter Mary, afterward queen (1553–58) 134 breeding upbringing 141 both my fortunes my good fortune and bad 143 now at the point of death 146 let him be i.e., even

But poverty could never draw 'em from me—
That they may have their wages duly paid 'em, 150
And something over to remember me by.
If heaven had pleased to have given me longer life
And able^o means, we had not parted thus.

These are the whole contents; and, good my lord,
By that you love the dearest in this world, 155
As you wish Christian peace to souls departed,
Stand these poor people's friend, and urge the king
To do me this last right.

CAPUCIUS

By heaven, I will,

Or let me lose the fashion^o of a man!

KATHERINE

I thank you, honest lord. Remember me 160
In all humility unto his highness.

Say his long trouble now is passing
Out of this world. Tell him in death I blessed him,
For so I will. Mine eyes grow dim. Farewell,
My lord. Griffith, farewell. Nay, Patience, 165

You must not leave me yet. I must to bed;
Call in more women. When I am dead, good wench,
Let me be used with honor. Strew me over
With maiden flowers,^o that all the world may know
I was a chaste wife to my grave. Embalm me, 170
Then lay me forth. Although unqueened, yet like
A queen and daughter to a king, inter me.
I can^o no more. Exeunt, leading KATHERINE.

ACT V

Scene I. [London. A gallery in the palace.]

Enter GARDINER, Bishop of Winchester, a PAGE with a torch before him, met by Sir Thomas LOVELL.

GARDINER

It's one o'clock, boy, is't not?

BOY

It hath struck.

GARDINER

These should be hours for necessities,
Not for delights; times to repair our nature
With comforting repose, and not for us
To waste these times. Good hour of night, Sir Thomas! 5
Whither so late?

LOVELL Came you from the king, my lord?

GARDINER

I did, Sir Thomas, and left him at primero^o
With the Duke of Suffolk.

LOVELL

I must to him too

Before he go to bed. I'll take my leave. 145

GARDINER

Not yet, Sir Thomas Lovell. What's the matter? 10
It seems you are in haste; and if there be
No great offense belongs to't, give your friend
Some touch^o of your late business. Affairs that walk
(As they say spirits do) at midnight have
In them a wilder nature than the business 15

153 able sufficient 159 fashion form, nature 169 maiden flowers flowers appropriate to one who was chaste 173 can can do

V.i.7 primero a card game 13 touch inkling

That seeks dispatch by day.

LOVELL My lord, I love you,
And durst commend a secret to your ear
Much weightier than this work. The queen's in labor,
They say, in great extremity, and feared
She'll with the labor end.

GARDINER The fruit she goes with 20
I pray for heartily, that it may find
Good time,° and live; but for the stock,° Sir Thomas,
I wish it grubbed up now.

LOVELL Methinks I could
Cry thee amen,° and yet my conscience says
She's a good creature and, sweet lady, does 25
Deserve our better wishes.

GARDINER But, sir, sir,
Hear me, Sir Thomas. Y' are a gentleman
Of mine own way;° I know you wise, religious;
And, let me tell you, it will ne'er be well—
'Twill not, Sir Thomas Lovell, take't of me— 30
Till Cranmer, Cromwell (her two hands°) and she Sleep in their graves.

LOVELL Now, sir, you speak of two
The most remarked° i' th' kingdom. As for Cromwell,
Beside that of the Jewel House, is made Master
O' th' Rolls,° and the king's secretary; further, sir, 35
Stands in the gap and trade° of moe preferments,
With which the time° will load him. Th' archbishop
Is the king's hand and tongue, and who dare speak
One syllable against him?

GARDINER Yes, yes, Sir Thomas,
There are that dare, and I myself have ventured 40
To speak my mind of him. And indeed this day,
Sir, I may tell it you, I think I have Insensed° the lords o' th' council that he is (For, so I know he is, they know he is)°
A most arch heretic, a pestilence 45
That does infect the land; with which they moved°
Have broken with° the king, who hath so far
Given ear to our complaint, of his great grace
And princely care foreseeing those fell° mischiefs
Our reasons° laid before him, hath° commanded 50
Tomorrow morning to the council board
He be convented.° He's a rank weed, Sir Thomas,
And we must root him out. From your affairs
I hinder you too long. Good night, Sir Thomas.

Exit GARDINER and PAGE.

LOVELL Many good nights, my lord; I rest your servant. 55

Enter KING and SUFFOLK.

KING
Charles, I will play no more tonight.
My mind's not on't; you are too hard for me.

22 Good time i.e., a safe delivery; stock trunk (of a tree), i.e., the queen 24 Cry thee amen i.e., second you 28 way
i.e., religious persuasion (anti-Lutheran) 31 hands supporters 33 remarked in the public eye 34–35 Master . . . Rolls Keeper of the Records 36 gap and trade entrance and beaten path
37 time i.e., the trend of the times 43 Insensed (1) informed
(2) stirred up ("insensed" = incensed) 44 For . . . they know he is for if I know he is, then I can make them know 46 moved angered 47 broken with broken the information to 49 fell terrible 50 reasons account, explanation; hath i.e., that he has 52 convented summoned

SUFFOLK
Sir, I did never win of you before.

KING
But little, Charles,
Nor shall not, when my fancy's on my play. 60
Now, Lovell, from the queen what is the news?

LOVELL
I could not personally deliver to her
What you commanded me, but by her woman
I sent your message; who° returned her thanks
In the great'st humbleness, and desired your highness 65
Most heartily to pray for her.

KING What say'st thou, ha?
To pray for her? What, is she crying out?

LOVELL
So said her woman, and that her suff'rance° made Almost each pang a death.

KING Alas, good lady!

SUFFOLK God safely quit° her of her burden, and 70
With gentle travail, to the gladding of
Your highness with an heir!

KING 'Tis midnight, Charles;
Prithee, to bed, and in thy prayers remember
Th' estate° of my poor queen. Leave me alone, 75
For I must think of that which company
Would not be friendly to.°

SUFFOLK I wish your highness
A quiet night, and my good mistress will Remember in my prayers.

KING Charles, good night. Exit SUFFOLK.

Enter Sir Anthony DENNY.

Well, sir, what follows?

DENNY Sir, I have brought my lord the archbishop, 80
As you commanded me.

KING Ha? Canterbury?

DENNY
Aye, my good lord.

KING 'Tis true: where is he, Denny?

DENNY
He attends your highness' pleasure.

KING Bring him to us.
[Exit DENNY.]

LOVELL [Aside.]
This is about that which the bishop° spake;
I am happily° come hither. 85

Enter CRANMER and DENNY.

KING
Avoid° the gallery. (LOVELL seems to stay.) Ha! I have said.° Be gone.

What! Exeunt LOVELL and DENNY.

CRANMER [Aside.] I am fearful.° Wherefore frowns he thus?

'Tis his aspect° of terror. All's not well.

64 who and who (i.e., the queen) 68 suff'rance suffering 70 quit release 74 estate condition 75–76 that . . . to i.e., matters for which company would not be helpful 84 bishop Gardiner 85 happily opportunely 86 Avoid leave; said spoken 87 fearful afraid 88 aspect expression (accent on second syllable)

KING

How now, my lord? You do desire to know
Wherefore I sent for you.

CRANMER [Kneeling.] It is my duty
T' attend your highness' pleasure.

KING

Pray you, arise,
My good and gracious Lord of Canterbury.
Come, you and I must walk a turn together;
I have news to tell you. Come, come, give me your hand.

Ah, my good lord, I grieve at what I speak,
And am right sorry to repeat what follows.
I have, and most unwillingly, of late
Heard many grievous, I do say, my lord,
Grievous complaints of you; which, being considered,
Have moved° us and our council, that you shall
This morning come before us; where I know
You cannot with such freedom purge° yourself
But that, till further trial in those charges
Which will require your answer, you must take
Your patience to you and be well contented
To make your house our Tow'r.° You a brother of us,°
It fits we thus proceed, or else no witness
Would come against you.

CRANMER [Kneeling.]

I humbly thank your highness,
And am right glad to catch this good occasion
Most throughly° to be winnowed, where my chaff
And corn° shall fly asunder; for I know
There's none stands under° more calumnious tongues
Than I myself, poor man.

KING

Stand up, good Canterbury;
Thy truth and thy integrity is rooted
In us, thy friend. Give me thy hand; stand up.
Prithee, let's walk. Now, by my holidame,°
What manner of man are you? My lord, I looked
You would have given me your petition, that I should have ta'en some pains to bring together
Yourself and your accusers, and to have heard you,
Without indurance further.°

CRANMER

Most dread liege,
The good I stand on is my truth and honesty.
If they shall fail, I with mine enemies
Will triumph o'er my person; which I weigh not,
Being of those virtues vacant.° I fear nothing°
What can be said against me.

KING

Know you not
How your state stands i' th' world, with the whole world?
Your enemies are many, and not small. Their practices
Must bear the same proportion,° and not ever°
The justice and the truth o' th' question carries
The due° o' th' verdict with it. At what ease°

100 moved persuaded 102 purge i.e., of guilt 106 make
. . . Tow'r be housed in the Tower (cf. I.i.207); You
. . . us i.e., you being a member of the council III thoroughly thoroughly 112 corn wheat 113 stands under subject to 117 by my holidame by my holiness (a formula of protestation) 122 indurance further (1) imprisonment in addition (2) further hardship 125-26 I weigh . . . vacant I do not value if it is devoid of those virtues (i.e., truth and honesty) 126 nothing not at all 129-30 Their . . . proportion their plots must correspond in number and scope 130 ever always 132 due fit reward; At what ease how easily

Might corrupt minds procure knaves as corrupt
To swear against you? Such things have been done.
You are potently opposed, and with a malice
Of as great size. Ween you of° better luck—
I mean, in perjured witness°—than your master,°
Whose minister you are, awhile here he lived Upon this naughty° earth? Go to, go to;
You take a precipice for no leap of danger,
And woo your own destruction.

CRANMER

God and your majesty
Protect mine innocence, or I fall into
The trap is° laid for me!

KING

Be of good cheer;
They shall no more prevail than we give way° to.
Keep comfort to you, and this morning see
You do appear before them. If they shall chance,
In charging you with matters, to commit you,°
The best persuasions to the contrary
Fail not to use, and with what vehemency
Th' occasion shall instruct you. If entreaties
Will render you no remedy, this ring
Deliver them, and your appeal to us
There make before them. Look, the good man weeps!
He's honest, on mine honor. God's blest mother,
I swear he is true-hearted, and a soul
None better in my kingdom. Get you gone,
And do as I have bid you. (Exit CRANMER.) He has strangled
His language in his tears.

Enter OLD LADY; [LOVELL following].

GENTLEMAN (Within.) Come back: what mean you?

OLD LADY

I'll not come back; the tidings that I bring
Will make my boldness manners. Now, good angels
Fly o'er thy royal head, and shade thy person
Under their blessed wings!

KING

Now by thy looks
I guess thy message. Is the queen delivered?
Say "aye," and of a boy.

OLD LADY

Aye, aye, my liege,
And of a lovely boy. The God of heaven
Both now and ever bless her! 'Tis a girl
Promises boys hereafter. Sir, your queen Desires your visitation, and to be Acquainted with this stranger. 'Tis as like you
As cherry is to cherry.

KING

Lovell!

LOVELL

Sir?

KING

Giver her an hundred marks.° I'll to the queen.

Exit KING.

OLD LADY

An hundred marks? By this light, I'll ha' more.
An ordinary groom is for° such payment.
I will have more, or scold it out of him.

136 Ween you of do you reckon on 137 witness evidence;
master Christ 139 naughty wicked 143 is that is 144 way scope 147 commit you i.e., to imprisonment in the Tower 171 an hundred marks one mark = 67 pence (two-thirds of a pound); a hundred marks = £66.67, a substantial sum 173 for entitled to

Said I for this, the girl was like to him? I'll Have more, or else unsay't; and now, while 'tis hot,
I'll put it to the issue. [Exeunt.] 175

Scene II. [Before the entrance to the council chamber.]

Enter CRANMER, Archbishop of Canterbury; [PURSUIVANTS,° PAGES, &c., attending at the door].

CRANMER

I hope I am not too late; and yet the gentleman
That was sent to me from the council prayed me
To make great haste. All fast?° What means this? Ho!
Who waits there? Sure, you know me?

Enter KEEPER.

KEEPER

Yes, my lord,

But yet I cannot help you. 5

CRANMER

Why?

KEEPER

Your grace must wait till you be called for.

Enter Doctor BUTTS.

CRANMER

So.

BUTTS [Aside.]

This is a piece of malice. I am glad
I came this way so happily. The king
Shall understand it presently.° Exit BUTTS.

CRANMER

[Aside.] 'Tis Butts,

10

The King's physician. As he passed along,
How earnestly he cast his eyes upon me.
Pray heaven he sound° not my disgrace! For certain,
This is of purpose laid by some that hate me
(God turn° their hearts! I never sought their malice) 15
To quench mine honor. They would shame to make me

Wait else at door, a fellow-councillor,
'Mong boys, grooms, and lackeys. But their pleasures
Must be fulfilled, and I attend with patience.

Enter the KING and BUTTS at a window above.°

BUTTS

I'll show your grace the strangest sight—

KING

What's that, Butts? 20

BUTTS

I think your highness saw this many a day.

KING

Body o' me, where is it?

BUTTS

There, my lord:

The high promotion of his Grace of Canterbury.
Who holds his state° at door 'mongst pursuivants,
Pages, and footboys.

KING

Ha? 'Tis he, indeed. 25

Is this the honor they do one another?

'Tis well there's one above 'em yet. I had thought

They had parted so much honesty° among 'em,
At least good manners, as not thus to suffer
A man of his place and so near our favor 30
To dance attendance on their lordships' pleasures,
And at the door too, like a post with packets.°
By holy Mary, Butts, there's knavery.
Let 'em alone, and draw the curtain close;
We shall hear more anon. 35

[They retire behind the curtain; CRANMER remains waiting outside.]

[Scene III. The council chamber.]

A council table brought in with chairs and stools, and placed under the state.° Enter Lord CHANCELLOR, places himself at the upper end of the table on the left hand; a seat being left void° above him, as for Canterbury's seat. Duke of SUFFOLK, Duke of NORFOLK, SURREY, Lord CHAM-BERLAIN, GARDINER, seat themselves in order on each side. CROMWELL at lower end, as secretary. [KEEPER at the door.]

CHANCELLOR

Speak to the business, master secretary.

Why are we met in council?

CROMWELL

Please your honors,

The chief cause concerns his grace of Canterbury.

GARDINER

Has he had knowledge° of it?

CROMWELL

Yes.

NORFOLK

Who waits there?

KEEPER

Without,° my noble lords?

GARDINER

Yes.

KEEPER

My Lord Archbishop; 5

And has done half an hour, to know your pleasures.

CHANCELLOR

Let him come in.

KEEPER

Your grace may enter now.

CRANMER [enters and] approaches the council table.

CHANCELLOR

My good Lord Archbishop, I'm very sorry
To sit here at this present° and behold
That chair stand empty. But we all are men, 10
In our own natures frail and capable
Of° our flesh; few are angels: out of which frailty
And want of wisdom, you, that best should teach us,
Have misdemeaned yourself, and not a little,
Toward the king first, then his laws, in filling 15
The whole realm, by your teaching and your chaplains'—

For so we are informed—with new opinions,
Divers and dangerous; which are heresies,
And, not reformed, may prove pernicious.°

GARDINER

Which reformation must be sudden too, 20

V.ii.s.d. pursuivants junior officers attendant upon the heralds 3 fast shut 10 understand it presently know about it at once 13 sound (1) fathom (2) make known 15 turn convert 19 s.d. above i.e., on the upper stage; note the reference to a curtain, line 34 24 holds his state maintains the dignity of his position

28 parted . . . honesty shared enough decency 32 post with packets courier with letters
V.iii.s.d. state canopy; void empty 4 had knowledge been informed 5 Without outside the door 9 at this present now 11-12 capable Of susceptible to the weaknesses of 19
pernicious ruinous

My noble lords; for those that tame wild horses
 Pace 'em not in their hands° to make 'em gentle,
 But stop their mouths with stubborn° bits and spur 'em
 Till they obey the manage.° If we suffer,
 Out of our easiness and childish pity
 To one man's honor, this contagious sickness,
 Farewell all physic. And what follows then?
 Commotions, uproars, with a general taint°
 Of the whole state; as of late days our neighbors,
 The upper Germany,° can dearly witness,
 Yet freshly pitied in our memories.

CRANMER

My good lords, hitherto, in all the progress
 Both of my life and office, I have labored,
 And with no little study, that my teaching
 And the strong course of my authority
 Might go one way, and safely; and the end
 Was ever to do well. Nor is there living
 (I speak it with a single heart,° my lords)
 A man that more detests, more stirs° against,
 Both in his private conscience and his place,
 Defacers of a public peace, than I do.
 Pray heaven, the king may never find a heart
 With less allegiance in it! Men that make Envy and crookèd malice nourishment°
 Dare bite the best. I do beseech your lordships
 That, in this case of° justice, my accusers,
 Be what they will, may stand forth face to face,
 And freely urge° against me.

SUFFOLK

Nay, my lord,

That cannot be. You are a councillor,
 And, by that virtue,° no man dare accuse you.

GARDINER

My lord, because we have business of more moment,
 We will be short with you. 'Tis his highness' pleasure,
 And our consent,° for better trial of you,
 From hence you be committed to the Tower;
 Where, being but a private man° again,
 You shall know many dare accuse you boldly,
 More than, I fear, you are provided for.

CRANMER

Ah, my good Lord of Winchester, I thank you;
 You are always my good friend. If your will pass,°
 I shall both find your lordship° judge and juror,
 You are so merciful. I see your end:
 'Tis my undoing. Love and meekness, lord,
 Become a churchman better than ambition.
 Win straying souls with modesty° again;
 Cast none away. That I shall clear myself,
 Lay all the weight ye can upon my patience,
 I make as little doubt as you do conscience°
 In doing daily wrongs. I could say more,
 But reverence to your calling makes me modest.

22 Pace . . . hands do not lead them by hand through their paces 23 stubborn stiff, inflexible 24 manage training 28 taint corruption 30 upper Germany possibly referring to the peasants' uprising in Saxony in 1521-22 or to other insurrections in 1524 and 1535 38 with . . . heart i.e., without duplicity 39 stirs bestirs himself 43-44 make . . . nourishment "make nourishment" = feed on 46 of involving 48 urge press their charges 50 that virtue virtue of that 53 our consent what we have consented to 55 private man i.e., without public office 59 pass prevail 60 both . . . lordship find your lordship both 64 modesty moderation 67
 I . . . conscience I have as little doubt as you have scruples

GARDINER

My lord, my lord, you are a sectary;°
 That's the plain truth. Your painted gloss discovers,°
 To men that understand you, words° and weakness.

70

25 CROMWELL

My Lord of Winchester, y' are a little,
 By your good favor, too sharp. Men so noble,
 However faulty, yet should find respect
 For what they have been; 'tis a cruelty
 To load° a falling man.

75

GARDINER

Good master secretary,

I cry your honor mercy;° you may, worst°
 Of all this table, say so.

CROMWELL

Why, my lord?

GARDINER

35 Do not I know you for a favorer
 Of this new sect? Ye are not sound.°

80

CROMWELL

Not sound?

GARDINER

Not sound, I say.

40 CROMWELL

Would you were half so honest!

Men's prayers then would seek you, not their fears.

GARDINER

I shall remember this bold language.

CROMWELL

Do.

45 Remember your bold life too.

CHANCELLOR

This is too much;

85

Forbear, for shame, my lords.

GARDINER

I have done.

CROMWELL

And I.

CHANCELLOR

50 Then thus for you, my lord: it stands agreed,
 I take it, by all voices, that forthwith

You be conveyed to th' Tower a prisoner,

There to remain till the king's further pleasure

Be known unto us. Are you all agreed, lords?

90

ALL

55 We are.

CRANMER Is there no other way of mercy,

But I must needs to th' Tower, my lords?

GARDINER

What other

Would you expect? You are strangely° troublesome.

Let some o' th' guard be ready there.

Enter the GUARD.

CRANMER

For me?

95

Must I go like a traitor thither?

GARDINER

Receive him,

65 And see him safe i' th' Tower.

CRANMER

Stay, good my lords,

I have a little yet to say. Look there, my lords.

100

By virtue of that ring, I take my cause

Out of the gripes° of cruel men, and give it

To a most noble judge, the king my master.

CHAMBERLAIN

This is the king's ring.

SURREY

'Tis no counterfeit.

70 sectary follower of a (heretical) sect 71 painted gloss discovers deceitful appearance (or speech) reveals 72 words i.e., rather than content 77 load oppress 78 cry . . . mercy beg your honor's pardon; worst with least justification 81 sound loyal 94 strangely uncommonly 100 gripes clutches

SUFFOLK

'Tis the right ring, by heaven. I told ye all,
When we first put this dangerous stone a-rolling,
'Twould fall upon ourselves.

NORFOLK

Do you think, my lords, 105

The king will suffer but° the little finger
Of this man to be vexed?

CHAMBERLAIN

'Tis now too certain.

How much more is his life in value with° him?
Would I were fairly out on't!

CROMWELL

My mind gave° me,

In seeking tales and informations 110
Against this man, whose honesty the devil
And his disciples only envy at,°
Ye blew the fire that burns ye. Now have at ye!

Enter KING, frowning on them; takes his seat.

GARDINER

Dread sovereign, how much are we bound to heaven
In daily thanks, that gave us such a prince, 115
Not only good and wise, but most religious;
One that in all obedience makes the church
The chief aim of his honor, and, to strengthen
That holy duty, out of dear respect,°
His royal self in judgment comes to hear 120
The cause betwixt her and this great offender.

KING

You were ever good at sudden commendations,°
Bishop of Winchester. But know, I come not
To hear such flattery now, and in my presence
They are too thin and bare to hide offenses. 125
To me you cannot reach. You play the spaniel,
And think with wagging of your tongue to win me;
But, whatsoe'er thou tak'st me for, I'm sure
Thou hast a cruel nature and a bloody.

[To CRANMER.]

Good man, sit down. Now let me see the proudest, 130
He that dares most, but wag his finger at thee.
By all that's holy, he had better starve°
Than but once think this place becomes thee not.

SURREY

May it please your grace—

KING

No, sir, it does not please me.

I had thought I had had men of some understanding 135
And wisdom of my council, but I find none.
Was it discretion, lords, to let this man,
This good man—few of you deserve that title—
This honest man, wait like a lousy° footboy
At chamber door? And one as great as you are? 140
Why, what a shame was this! Did my commission
Bid ye so far forget yourselves? I gave ye Power as he was a councillor to try him,
Not as a groom. There's some of ye, I see,
More out of malice than integrity, 145
Would try him to the utmost, had ye mean;°
Which ye shall never have while I live.

106 suffer but allow even 108 in value with esteemed by 109 gave told 112 envy at hate 119 dear respect heartfelt care (for the church) 122 sudden commendations extemporaneous compliments 132 starve die 139 lousy liceinfested 146 mean means

CHANCELLOR

Thus far,

My most dread sovereign, may it like° your grace
To let my tongue excuse all. What was purposed
Concerning his imprisonment was rather, 150
If there be faith in men, meant for his trial
And fair purgation° to the world, than malice,
I'm sure, in me.

KING

Well, well, my lords, respect him.

Take him and use him well; he's worthy of it.
I will say thus much for him, if a prince 155
May be beholding to a subject, I
Am, for his love and service, so to him.
Make me no more ado, but all embrace him.
Be friends, for shame, my lords! My Lord of Canterbury,
I have a suit which you must not deny me: 160
That is, a fair young maid that yet wants° baptism;
You must be godfather, and answer for her.

CRANMER

The greatest monarch now alive may glory
In such an honor. How may I deserve it,
That am a poor and humble subject to you? 165

KING

Come, come, my lord, you'd spare your spoons.° You shall have two noble partners° with you:
the old Duchess of Norfolk, and Lady Marquess
Dorset. Will these please you?

Once more, my Lord of Winchester, I charge you, 170
Embrace and love this man.

GARDINER

With a true heart

And brother-love I do it.

CRANMER

And let heaven

Witness how dear I hold this confirmation.

KING

Good man, those joyful tears show thy true heart.
The common voice,° I see, is verified 175
Of thee, which says thus: "Do my Lord of Canterbury
A shrewd° turn, and he's your friend forever."
Come, lords, we trifle time away. I long
To have this young one made a Christian.
As I have made ye one, lords, one remain; 180
So I grow stronger, you more honor gain. Exeunt.

Scene [IV. The palace yard.]

Noise and tumult within. Enter PORTER and his MAN.

PORTER You'll leave your noise anon, ye rascals. Do you take the court for Parish Garden?° Ye rude° slaves, leave your gaping.°

(Within.) Good master porter, I belong to th' larder.°

PORTER Belong to th' gallows, and be hanged, ye 5 rogue! Is this a place to roar in? Fetch me a dozen

148 like please 152 purgation vindication 161 wants lacks
166-67 spare your spoons save the expense of giving spoons (traditional christening gifts) 167 partners co-sponsors 175 common voice popular report 177 shrewd nasty V.iv.2 Parish Garden Paris Garden, a boisterous bearbaiting arena on the Bankside; rude uncivilized 3 leave your gaping stop your bawling 4 belong . . . larder am employed in the (palace) pantry

crab-tree staves, and strong ones: these are but switches to 'em.° I'll scratch your heads. You must be seeing christenings? Do you look for ale and cakes° here, you rude rascals?

MAN

Pray, sir, be patient. 'Tis as much impossible,
Unless we sweep 'em from the door with cannons,
To scatter 'em, as 'tis to make 'em sleep
On May Day° morning, which will never be.
We may as well push against Paul's° as stir 'em.

PORTER How got they in, and be hanged?

MAN

Alas, I know not. How gets the tide in?
As much as one sound cudgel of four foot
(You see the poor remainder) could distribute,
I made no° spare, sir.

PORTER You did nothing, sir.

MAN

I am not Samson, nor Sir Guy, nor Colbrand,°
To mow 'em down before me; but if I spared any
That had a head to hit, either young or old,
He or she, cuckold or cuckold-maker,
Let me ne'er hope to see a chine° again;
And that I would not for a cow, God save her!°

(Within.) Do you hear, master porter?

PORTER I shall be with you° presently, good master puppy. Keep the door close, sirrah.°

MAN What would you have me do?

PORTER What should you do, but knock 'em down by th' dozens? Is this Moorfields° to muster in? Or have we some strange Indian with the great tool° come to court, the women so besiege us? Bless me, what a fry of fornication° is at door! On my Christian conscience, this one christening will beget a thousand; here will be father, godfather, and all together.

MAN The spoons° will be the bigger, sir. There is a fellow somewhat near the door, he should be a brazier by his face,° for, o' my conscience, twenty of the dog days° now reign in's nose. All that stand about him are under the line;° they need no other penance. That fire-drake° did I hit three times on the head, and three times was his nose discharged against me; he stands there, like a mortarpiece,° to blow us.° There was a haberdasher's wife of small wit near him, that railed upon me till her pinked porringer° fell off her head, for kindling such a combustion in the state. I missed the meteor once, and hit that woman, who cried out "Clubs!"° when I might see from far some forty truncheoners° draw to her succor, which were the hope o' th' Strand,° where she was quartered. They fell on; I made good° my place. At length they came to th' broomstaff° to me. I defied 'em still; when suddenly a file° of boys behind 'em, loose shot,° delivered such a show'r of pebbles, that I was fain° to draw mine honor in and let 'em win the work.° The devil was amongst 'em, I think, surely.

PORTER These are the youths that thunder at a play-house and fight for bitten apples; that no audience but the tribulation° of Tower Hill° or the limbs° of Limehouse,° their dear brothers, are able to endure. I have some of 'em in Limbo Patrum,° and there they are like to dance these three days; besides the running banquet of two beadles° that is to come.

Enter Lord CHAMBERLAIN.

CHAMBERLAIN

Mercy o' me, what a multitude are here!
They grow still too; from all parts they are coming,
As if we kept a fair here. Where are these porters,
These lazy knaves? Y' have made a fine hand, fellows;
There's a trim° rabble let in. Are all these
Your faithful friends o' th' suburbs?° We shall have Great store of room, no doubt, left for the ladies,
When they pass back from the christening.

PORTER And't please your honor,
We are but men; and what so many may do,
Not being torn apieces, we have done.
An army cannot rule 'em.

CHAMBERLAIN

As I live,
If the king blame me for't, I'll lay ye all
By th' heels, and suddenly;° and on your heads
Clap round° fines for neglect. Y' are lazy knaves,
And here ye lie baiting of bombards° when Ye should do service. Hark! The trumpets sound;
Th' are come already from the christening.
Go, break among the press,° and find a way out
To let the troop pass fairly, or I'll find
A Marshalsea° shall hold ye play these two months.

PORTER

Make way there for the princess.

7-8 switches to 'em twigs in comparison 9 ale and cakes traditional fare at christenings and other celebrations 14 May Day a holiday the celebration of which began before sunrise 15 Paul's Saint Paul's Cathedral 20 made no did not 21 Samson . . . Colbrand all three possessed legendary strength; Guy of Warwick was celebrated in romance for slaying the Danish giant Colbrand 25 see a chine i.e., eat beef 26 for . . . her a current expression of doubtful import; perhaps meaningless 28 I . . . you I'll trounce you (Maxwell) 29 sirrah term of address used to inferiors 32 Moorfields a recreation field on the London outskirts 33 some . . . tool American Indians were exhibited at court; "tool" = penis 35 fry of fornication (1) swarm of would-be fornicators (2) swarming offspring of fornication 38 spoons cf. V.iii.166-67 39-40 brazier . . . face brassworker by his (red) face 40-41 dog days the period from about July 3 to August 15, when Sirius, the Dog Star, rises at almost the same time as the sun; regarded as the hottest and most unwholesome season of the year 42 line equator 42-43 firedrake (1) fiery dragon (2) meteor 45 mortarpiece squat cannon with a large bore; blow us blow us up

47 pinked porringer round cap with scalloped edge or ornamental perforations 50 Clubs the rallying cry of the London apprentices 51 truncheoners truncheon (or cudgel) bearers 51-52 were . . . Strand i.e., belonged to the shops in the Strand, in Jacobean times a fashionable street 52-53 They . . . good they attacked; I defended 53-54 to th' broomstaff i.e., to close quarters 55 file small company; loose shot unaffiliated marksmen 56 fain obliged 57 work fort 61 tribulation troublemakers; Tower Hill an unruly district; limbs inhabitants, with a possible reference to the limbs of the devil 61-62 Limehouse the rough dockyard area 63 Limbo Patrum i.e., prison (literally, the underworld abode of the souls of the just who died before Christ's coming) 64-65 running . . . beadles i.e., a public whipping, as a dessert to the "feast" of their confinement 70 trim fine 71 suburbs disreputable districts outside city jurisdiction 77-78 I'll . . . suddenly I'll have you all put straightaway into fetters 79 round stiff 80 baiting of bombards drinking from leather jugs 83 press throng 85 Marshalsea prison in Southwark

MAN You great fellow,
Stand close up, or I'll make your head ache.
PORTER
You i' th' camlet,^o get up o' th' rail:
I'll peck you o'er the pales^o else. Exeunt.

Scene [V. The palace.]

Enter trumpets, sounding; then two ALDERMEN, LORD MAYOR, GARTER,^o CRANMER, Duke of NORFOLK with his marshal's staff, Duke of SUFFOLK, two NOBLEMEN bearing great standing-bowls^o for the christening gifts; then four NOBLEMEN bearing a canopy, under which the DUCHESS of Norfolk, godmother, bearing the CHILD richly habited in a mantle, &c., train borne by a LADY. Then follows the Marchioness DORSET, the other godmother, and LADIES. The troop pass once about the stage, and GARTER speaks.

GARTER Heaven, from thy endless goodness, send prosperous life, long, and ever happy, to the high and mighty Princess of England, Elizabeth!

Flourish. Enter KING and GUARD.

CRANMER [Kneeling.]
And to your royal grace and the good queen.
My noble partners^o and myself thus pray: 5
All comfort, joy, in this most gracious lady
Heaven ever laid up to make parents happy
May hourly fall upon ye!

KING Thank you, good Lord Archbishop.
What is her name?

CRANMER Elizabeth.

KING Stand up, lord.

[The KING kisses the CHILD.]

With this kiss take my blessing: God protect thee! 10
Into whose hand I give thy life.

CRANMER Amen.

KING
My noble gossips,^o y' have been too prodigal.^o
I thank ye heartily; so shall this lady,
When she has so much English.

CRANMER Let me speak, sir,
For heaven now bids me; and the words I utter 15
Let none think flattery, for they'll find 'em truth.
This royal infant—heaven still^o move about her!—
Though in her cradle, yet now promises
Upon this land a thousand thousand blessings,
Which time shall bring to ripeness. She shall be 20
(But few now living can behold that goodness)
A pattern to all princes living with her
And all that shall succeed. Saba^o was never More covetous of wisdom and fair virtue
Than this pure soul shall be. All princely graces 25
That mold up such a mighty piece^o as this is,
With all the virtues that attend the good,

88 camlet a rich fabric made of Angora wool and other materials 89 peck . . . pales pitch you over the palings
V.v.s.d. Garter see IV.i.36 s.d. and note; standing-bowls bowls with supporting legs or base 5 partners co-sponsors
12 gossips godparents; prodigal generous with gifts 17 still always 23 Saba the Queen of Sheba 26 mold . . . piece go to form so great a personage

Shall still be doubled on her. Truth shall nurse her,
Holy and heavenly thoughts still counsel her.
She shall be loved and feared. Her own^o shall bless her; 30
Her foes shake like a field of beaten corn,^o
And hang their heads with sorrow. Good grows with her;

In her days every man shall eat in safety
Under his own vine what he plants, and sing
The merry songs of peace to all his neighbors. 35
God shall be truly known, and those about her
From her shall read^o the perfect ways of honor,
And by those claim their greatness, not by blood.
Nor shall this peace sleep with her; but as when
The bird of wonder dies, the maiden phoenix,^o 40
Her ashes new create another heir
As great in admiration^o as herself,
So shall she leave her blessedness to one^o
(When heaven shall call her from this cloud of darkness)

Who from the sacred ashes of her honor 45
Shall starlike rise, as great in fame as she was,
And so stand fixed.^o Peace, plenty, love, truth, terror,
That were the servants to this chosen infant,
Shall then be his, and like a vine grow to him.
Wherever the bright sun of heaven shall shine, 50
His honor and the greatness of his name
Shall be, and make new nations. He shall flourish,
And like a mountain cedar reach his branches
To all the plains about him.^o Our children's children
Shall see this, and bless heaven.

KING Thou speakest wonders. 55

CRANMER
She shall be, to the happiness of England,
An aged princess; many days shall see her,
And yet no day without a deed to crown it.
Would I had known no more! But she must die:
She must, the saints must have her. Yet a virgin, 60
A most unspotted lily, shall she pass
To th' ground, and all the world shall mourn her.

KING
O Lord Archbishop,
Thou hast made me now a man; never before.
This happy child did I get^o anything. 65
This oracle of comfort has so pleased me
That when I am in heaven I shall desire
To see what this child does, and praise my Maker.
I thank ye all. To you, my good Lord Mayor,
And your good brethren, I am much beholding; 70
I have received much honor by your presence,
And ye shall find me thankful. Lead the way, lords.
Ye must all see the queen, and she must thank ye;
She will be sick else. This day, no man think^o
H'as^o business at his house; for all shall stay:^o 75
This little one shall make it holiday. Exeunt.

30 own i.e., own people 31 corn wheat 37 read learn 40 phoenix the fabled Arabian bird—unique in all the world—that after a life of 660 years rises anew from the ashes in which it has consumed itself 42 admiration “ability to excite wonder” (Foakes) 43 one James I 47 fixed i.e., as a fixed star 50–54 Wherever . . . about him inspired by a prophesy in Genesis 17:4–6 which was often cited in connection with Princess Elizabeth's marriage in 1613 (Foakes); the “new nations” may allude to the colonization of Virginia 65 get beget 74 no man think let no man think 75 H'as he has; stay stop

EPILOGUE

'Tis ten to one this play can never please
 All that are here. Some come to take their ease,
 And sleep an act or two; but those, we fear,
 W' have frightened with our trumpets; so, 'tis clear,
 They'll say 'tis naught;° others, to hear the city
 Abused extremely, and to cry, "That's witty!"° 5

Epi.5 naught worthless 5-6 others . . . witty a glance at the vogue for satirical comedies of London life

Which we have not done neither; that,° I fear,
 All the expected good w' are like to hear
 For this play at this time, is only in
 The merciful construction° of good women,
 For such a one we showed 'em. If they smile
 And say 'twill do, I know, within a while
 All the best men are ours; for 'tis ill hap°
 If they hold when their ladies bid 'em clap.

10

7 that so that 10 construction interpretation 13 hap luck

THE TWO NOBLE KINSMEN

EDITED BY CLIFFORD LEECH

Introduction

The Two Noble Kinsmen was first published in a quarto edition of 1634, with statements on its title page that it had been "Presented at the Blackfriars by the Kings Maiesties servants, with great applause" and that it was "Written by the memorable Worthies of their time; Mr. John Fletcher, and Mr. William Shakespeare, Gent." The publisher was John Waterson, a reputable figure who brought out other plays belonging to the King's Men, the company with which Shakespeare and Fletcher had been intimately associated. Although in 1646, when Waterson assigned to Humphrey Moseley his rights in the play, it was included with two others as simply the work of "Mr. Flesher," there is an immediately strong case for accepting the title page's statement of authorship. If Waterson were looking for a way of attracting custom, it would have been at least as effective in 1634 to attribute the play to Beaumont and Fletcher. Moreover, it appears that the manuscript from which he printed had been used in the theater itself¹ and that Waterson had bought it from the players in the normal way of business. And we shall see that the probable date of composition and first performance was 1613, when we have other evidence that Shakespeare and Fletcher were working in close association.

It is true, on the other hand, that Heminges and Condell did not include The Two Noble Kinsmen in the Shakespeare Folio of 1623, where in the preliminary address "To the great Variety of Readers" there is an implication that all of Shakespeare's plays were being published in the collection. But it appears that Timon of Athens was not originally included in their plans for the volume, and we know that Troilus and Cressida, probably through difficulties over copyright, was almost left out. And they did omit Pericles. That The Two Noble Kinsmen was included in the 1679 Folio of "Beaumont and Fletcher" plays is also not substantial evidence against Shakespeare's part-authorship, for that volume brought together many plays in which Fletcher collaborated with various dramatists of his time, the linking of his name with Beaumont's on the title page (as in the earlier Beaumont and Fletcher Folio of 1647) being merely a tribute to the brief association of the two men which laid the basis for Fletcher's fame and established a mode of dramatic writing that was long influential in the English theater.

Nevertheless, the publishing history of the play belongs far more with Beaumont and Fletcher than with Shakespeare. It has been regularly included in collected editions of Beaumont and Fletcher since their Folio of 1679, from Tonson's edition of 1711 to the Cambridge edition of Arnold Glover and A. R. Waller of 1905-12. It did not appear in a collected Shakespeare until 1841, when Charles Knight (who believed that Fletcher's collaborator here was George Chapman) yielded to the extent of including it in a volume of "Doubtful Plays" appended to his Pictorial Shakespeare. By then, though dissentient voices were not infrequently raised, the case for Shakespeare's part-authorship had become more than formidable. Pope, in his Shakespeare of 1725, thought the play contained "more of our author than some of those which have been received as genuine," and Lamb and Coleridge and De Quincey were all convinced of Shakespeare's presence, though Hazlitt and Shelley could find nothing of it. William Spalding, however, in his Letter on Shakspeare's Authorship of The Two Noble Kinsmen (Edinburgh, 1833; reprinted in the Transactions of the New Shakspeare Society, 1874), Samuel Hickson in his article "The Shares of Shakspeare and Fletcher in The Two Noble Kinsmen" (Westminster Review, 1847; reprinted in the Transactions of the New Shakspeare Society, 1874), and above all Harold Littledale in the introduction to his edition of the play for the New Shakspeare Society (1876-85) brought the techniques of nineteenth-century scholarship to bear on the problem and, though they differed to some extent in assigning to the two dramatists their respective shares, they left little doubt in most readers' minds that here was a collaboration between the leading dramatist of the King's Men and the writer who succeeded him in that role in 1613.

Yet it is still exceptional to find The Two Noble Kinsmen in a collected edition of Shakespeare's plays. Most of its readers during this century have come to know it through its inclusion in C. F. Tucker Brooke's The Shakespeare Apocrypha (Oxford, 1908). G. L. Kittredge has it in his Complete Works of Shakespeare (Boston, 1936); it is planned for inclusion in the New Cambridge edition; and it is now presented as part of the Signet Classic Shakespeare.

¹ See A Note on the Text, p. 1623.

The elder dramatist's authorship is commonly recognized most surely in the first and fifth acts, particularly in the first three scenes of Act I and the first, third, and fourth scenes of Act V: that is, the solemn approach of the three Queens to Theseus on his wedding day, the conversation of Palamon and Arcite while they are still in Thebes, the scene where Emilia and Hippolyta talk of friendship, the invocations addressed to Mars and Venus and Diana, and the conclusion of the whole story in Arcite's victory and death. In addition, Shakespeare has been generally found in the opening lines of II.i, where the Jailer's Daughter makes her first appearance, and in III.i, where the escaped Palamon meets the disguised Arcite. In the rest of the play there are frequent echoes of other plays by Shakespeare: the madness of the Jailer's Daughter has obvious associations with Ophelia's madness, and later in this Introduction it will be suggested that Fletcher for special purposes was drawing upon his intimate knowledge of his collaborator's work. If we accept the commonly held view of the two writers' shares (and there is little reason to be skeptical about it), it was Shakespeare who wrote the beginning and the ending and introduced all the major characters and strands of action. But by the time this play was composed he may have been less regularly in attendance at the playhouse than formerly, and it seems likely enough that the final putting together of the manuscript was left to Fletcher. Indeed, more than one scholar has come to the conclusion that he made some insertions in the Shakespeare scenes.

It will be convenient to set out the probable authorship of the play's various scenes thus:

Prologue	Fletcher?
Act I, sc. i-iii	Shakespeare
sc. iv-v	Shakespeare?
Act II, sc. i (lines 1-59)	Shakespeare
sc. i (remainder), ii-v	Fletcher
Act III, sc. i	Shakespeare
sc. ii-vi	Fletcher
Act IV, sc. i-iii	Fletcher
Act V, sc. i	Shakespeare
sc. ii	Fletcher
sc. iii-iv	Shakespeare
Epilogue	Fletcher?

The dividing of the play between Shakespeare and Fletcher has been worked out by scholars primarily on the basis of the stylistic differences between their writing. Certainly even a casual reading of the play will show that certain scenes have a complex, "knotted" verse that is close to Shakespeare's in his later years, while others belong clearly with the open-textured, casual style that Beaumont and Fletcher developed in manifest reaction against the involutions of the earliest Jacobean. The difference has been brought home forcibly to the present editor through the process of annotation. If one compares the scenes where Palamon and Arcite talk together, putting I.ii and III.i on one side and II.i (from the exit of the Jailer, his Daughter, and her Wooer), III.iii, and III.vi on the other, one sees immediately that the first group requires continuous attention from the reader, and probably frequent recourse to the annotations, while the second group has nearly the familiarity of the English now current. When the editor was preparing the annotations, it was with no thought of giving fuller comment on Shakespeare's portion than on Fletcher's, but in the event it proved that in Shakespeare's the proportion of notes to lines was 51 percent in the scenes just indicated while in Fletcher's the proportion of notes to lines was 25 percent. Elsewhere in Fletcher's part of the play the figure is higher, as the terms used in connection with the morris dance of III.v needed comment, and Fletcher can use a more elaborate vocabulary for special purposes (as in the description of the knights in IV.ii and in the account of madness in IV.iii). Nevertheless, the presence of the two hands is obvious almost throughout, and evident at a glance in scenes where the basic material (Palamon and Arcite talking together) is similar.

The time of composition is hardly in dispute. The entertainment which the country Schoolmaster presents to Theseus and his court in III.v is taken over from an anti-masque in Francis Beaumont's Masque of the Inner Temple and Gray's Inn, presented at Whitehall on February 20, 1613. In the published book of the masque we learn that this part of the entertainment was so well liked by the king that he asked to have it danced again at the end of the whole performance. Such antimasques at court were commonly entrusted to professional players, and it would be an easy matter for Fletcher, with his friend and former collaborator Beaumont's permission, to make further use of what had already proved successful. But clearly this would not be likely except soon after the original performance. The date 1613 for The Two Noble Kinsmen is confirmed by the reference in Jonson's Bartholomew Fair (1614) to "Palamon" as a character in a play (IV.iii): this is not certain evidence, for the name also occurs in Samuel Daniel's The Queen's Arcadia (1605), but Daniel's work was a university play and was already some years old in 1614; Jonson is far more likely to have had a more recent and better-known play in mind. Moreover, 1613 was the year in which a lost play called *Cardenio*² (which in 1653 was attributed to Fletcher and Shakespeare by the publisher Humphrey Moseley) was twice acted at court, and it was also the year in which Henry VIII was almost certainly acted for the first time. Although by no means all Shakespeare scholars are agreed on the double authorship of Henry VIII, there is strong cumulative evidence that in 1613, after Shakespeare had written the last of his series of romances and was about to retire from the stage, and when Beaumont on his marriage had broken with the theater and thus terminated the short but highly profitable collaboration that he and Fletcher had known for some five years, a new and brief association was established between Fletcher and Shakespeare, and that The Two Noble Kinsmen was one of its fruits.

In these circumstances, and with the assumption that the main planning of the play was, as has seemed likely, Shakespeare's, we should expect to find a clear enough relationship to the romances that Shakespeare had been writing since Pericles (c. 1609) and that he had brought to a conclusion in The Tempest (1611). And resemblances are hardly to be missed. In Pericles he had gone to Gower's

² It may exist in an altered form in Lewis Theobald's version of the story, called Double Falsehood and published in 1728.

Confessio Amantis for his story; here he goes to Gower's contemporary, Chaucer. Pericles and The Winter's Tale have Hellenistic settings; The Two Noble Kinsmen takes us to Athens and briefly to Thebes. The romances present a world where the gods are freely invoked and where they play a direct part in the action—Diana appearing to Pericles in a dream and sending him to Ephesus so that he may find his lost wife Thaisa, Jupiter appearing to Posthumus Leonatus in prison and offering a riddling promise of good fortune to him and of a happy ending to the strife between Rome and Britain, Apollo being consulted on the question of Hermione's guilt and striking Mamillius dead when his father, Leontes, rejects the message from the oracle. In The Tempest there are, it is true, no gods—they would be out of place in a drama where a human character has unlimited control over events (though not over the human will)—but there are spirits who represent Juno and Ceres and Iris and who offer divine blessings and admonitions. The Two Noble Kinsmen keeps the gods off the stage too, but their altars are there, they are solemnly invoked, and tokens of their favor are given. At the play's end Theseus marvels how the apparently contradictory promises of Mars and Venus have both been fulfilled. More obviously—indeed, more disturbingly—than in the previous plays the human characters of The Two Noble Kinsmen are subject to divine power. Theseus can devise a plan for finding out Emilia's husband and for ending the strife between the knights, but it is the gods who circuitously determine things, to the wonder and embarrassment of those concerned.

In some striking features this play has a special relationship with Pericles. That had a detachable first act (which was omitted at a Stratford-on-Avon revival in 1947), with formal speechmaking in a context of love and death: so has The Two Noble Kinsmen, which could easily have been adjusted to begin with Palamon and Arcite already in prison. Then Arcite's encounter in II.ii with the countrymen who will take part in the games for Emilia's birthday resembles Pericles' encounter with the fishermen in II.i, where he learns there are games to be held in Thaisa's honor: both Pericles and Arcite are victors and are received into the lady's favor. But in Pericles the games are a formal tournament, which takes place in an atmosphere of high ceremony, while in The Two Noble Kinsmen it is a matter of simple running and wrestling. The tournament, however, is not forgotten and occurs offstage in the final encounter between Palamon and Arcite, each aided by three knights. The cry of "The mean knight!" that indicates at the end of II.ii that Pericles has been victorious anticipates the cries of "Palamon!" and "Arcite!" and "Victory!" that Emilia hears in V.iii. Here the influence of one of Shakespeare's romances is seen operative on a Fletcher portion of the later play.

But there is a more subtle echo of The Winter's Tale. Commentators have sometimes seen there a suggestion that Leontes, believing his wife is being unfaithful to him with his best friend, is unconsciously more deeply outraged by the breach in friendship than by the breach in marriage. Certainly the nostalgic reminiscences of Leontes and Polixenes in I.ii, their sense that an Eden was lost when they grew up and took wives, is to be linked with the passage in The Two Noble Kinsmen, I.iii, where Emilia and Hippolyta talk of the friendship between Theseus and Pirithous and the friendship between Emilia and the dead girl Flavina: Hippolyta is not sure even now that she has the first place in Theseus' heart; Emilia has no thought that a husband can be as near to her as Flavina was. In the center of the later play, moreover, there is the friendship of Palamon and Arcite: it is broken when they both love Emilia, but even as they plan to fight to the death (in III.iii) they look back with some longing on their earlier and lighter loves, which did not harm their friendship. That is a brief respite, for Palamon is soon asserting his claim again, but the scene where they help to arm each other (III.vi) is strong in its suggestion of enduring affection. They embrace solemnly before the invocation of their respective divine patrons (V.i), and Arcite's words to Emilia when he appears to have won her are heavily charged with a sense of the price he has paid:

Emily,

To buy you I have lost what's dearest to me
Save what is bought, and yet I purchase cheaply
As I do rate your value.

(V.iii.111-14)

Shakespeare's romances are, among other things, love stories, but they are not simple exaltations of the bond that ties most men to women.

This indeed suggests a connection with his earliest plays. The Two Gentlemen of Verona was also a play about friendship, and it is difficult not to believe that its very title was echoed in that of The Two Noble Kinsmen. There Valentine and Proteus were firm friends until Proteus fell in love with the girl his friend loved. The right and wrong of the matter were simple; Proteus is thoroughly treacherous and gets to the point of attempting rape. When he repents, Valentine has so high a sense of what friendship demands that he is willing to let Proteus have the girl, not thinking even of consulting her. At that time Shakespeare could make discreet fun of the friendship idea and could quickly make all things come right. Moreover, it was Proteus' villainy and Valentine's simple faith that caused the trouble, while in The Two Noble Kinsmen Palamon and Arcite love Emilia because they have to, and Arcite dies because the gods have determined so. That Shakespeare thought back to The Two Gentlemen is, I think, indubitable, just as he thought back to The Comedy of Errors in the final turn of events in Pericles, just as he remembered the rambling romantic plays of the popular theater he first knew when he wrote Pericles and Cymbeline and The Winter's Tale. In going back to beginnings, The Two Noble Kinsmen is of a piece with the romances, though it has a formality of structure, as we shall see, that links it with The Tempest more than with the plays that immediately preceded that play.

It is, however, another early play that is here most prominently in his mind, and again the resemblance goes along with contrast and deliberate reconsideration. Like The Two Noble Kinsmen, A Midsummer Night's Dream begins with preparations for the wedding of Theseus and Hippolyta, it is partly concerned with an amateur performance given before the duke by his subjects, and it shows the court during a May-morning ceremony coming upon two men who have fallen out through rivalry in love. In the earlier play the wedding is not interrupted, there being merely a planned delay before it takes place; the play-within-the-play occurs at the end, not the middle; the rivals in love have had their quarrel already sorted out by Puck and Oberon before Theseus arrives. And it is not quite the same Theseus in the two plays. The earlier duke has the authority of the later one, but he is ever sanguine and relaxed: he will not believe the "story of the night," and he is patronizing toward play-acting and somewhat ill-mannered during the performance. The duke of The Two Noble Kinsmen may finally attempt to console himself by marveling at the divine legerdemain, but there is an unrelaxed seriousness in him and a continuing puzzlement. The man who at first decrees perpetual imprisonment for Palamon and Arcite, and later death for them both, and after that death for the loser (and his supporters) in the tournament, is a shrewd realist very different from the man who told Hermia he could not bend the law for her sake—her father's authority being supreme—and finally acquiesced in her marriage with Lysander and told Egeus he must accept the situation. We can see a similar change, along with a resemblance, in the later play's echoing of Helena's account of her girlhood friendship with Hermia (III.ii): when Emilia speaks of the relationship between herself and Flavina, Shakespeare is no longer offering merely a gentle picture of two girls together.

Shakespeare, then, using a well-known story that had been prominently in his mind when he wrote A Midsummer Night's Dream (circa 1595–96), helped to compose a play that had strong links both with the late romances and with early comedies that he had already shown a disposition to recall and to look upon with a changed vision. The reunions at the ends of The Comedy of Errors and Pericles are as different as can be imagined; the spanning of the years in Pericles and The Winter's Tale does not make those plays similar in spirit to the romances of the 1570's (and the following decade or so) that Sidney made fun of in An Apology for Poetry; magic has a different look in The Tempest when we compare that play with A Midsummer Night's Dream. There is a certain casualness of manner in The Two Noble Kinsmen, such indeed as Lytton Strachey saw in the late romances as a whole, but it goes along with a reserving of judgment about human beings and the conditions under which they live.

And in this situation Fletcher was no longer with Beaumont but with an elder dramatist whose plays were always strongly in his mind, to the point where he would deliberately modify an initial Shakespeare situation and then work out the pattern of events that would result. He and Beaumont had done that with Philaster (circa 1609), taking the Hamlet situation without the ghost, as later—on his own—he was to write a sequel to The Taming of the Shrew in The Woman's Prize or The Tamer Tamed (circa 1611) and, probably along with Massinger, to invert the Lear situation in Thierry and Theodoret (circa 1617). With Beaumont he had shared a lodging and had developed a dramatic mode in which their two minds functioned, it seemed, as one: though we may perhaps be able to differentiate his verse from Beaumont's, we do not get the feeling in their joint plays that two diverse attitudes are alternating as each in his turn pushes his pen. Fletcher's later collaboration with Massinger resembles his collaboration with Shakespeare in The Two Noble Kinsmen to the extent that we feel the characterization and the march of event are seen through different eyes in different parts of the play. If we are correct, as many people have thought, in assuming that Shakespeare put his scenes into Fletcher's hands and let him do the job of conflating the two shares, this was a situation new to this dramatist. That the story would have attracted him is understandable: the clash between love and friendship in Palamon and Arcite has some similarity to that between friendship and honor in Melantius and Amintor in The Maid's Tragedy (circa 1610) and would similarly lend itself to the patterned alternations of conduct that Fletcher delighted in; and there must have been a piquancy in working in association with Shakespeare, to whom he owed much, whose work, however, must have seemed old-fashioned, imperfectly sophisticated. He and Beaumont had pulled Hamlet down to the comic level of Philaster; now Shakespeare's Palamon and Arcite could be irreverently handled in the same play as Shakespeare was presenting them.

It is not that Fletcher makes the kinsmen directly absurd (though coming near it in their exchange of sentiments, followed at once by their quarrel, in II.i), and he clearly has some partiality for Arcite; but he does take a feline pleasure in the way love holds them, in the way they try to live up to the friendship code at the same time as they are protesting their separate devotions to Emilia. And this goes along with a special fluency in his writing (seen, for example, in the prison-and-garden sequence of II.i), and a fondness for setting the story in brakes and flowers. Nature is never ominous for Fletcher, but its presence as a framework for strife is always ironic.

In one place the work of Fletcher's deflating hand reminds us of an effect found in Shakespeare's own The Winter's Tale, V.ii, and in scenes frequently ascribed to Fletcher in Henry VIII (II.i, IV.i). The Messenger in The Two Noble Kinsmen, IV.ii, seems to the present editor's ear to be intentionally comic, with his ecstatic praise of the attendant knights, his overreadiness to speak at line 72, his general extravagance of imagery, and in particular the doting on one knight's freckles and the ludicrous comparison of his sinews to the bodily shape of a pregnant woman (lines 128–29). Here I believe we have Fletcher taking up what he found in The Winter's Tale, and pushing it much further both in Henry VIII and in The Two Noble Kinsmen.

If general opinion is right in assigning the opening of II.i to Shakespeare, it was he who introduced the Jailer's Daughter. But the use made of her is characteristically Fletcher's. First we should note his boldness in giving her so many scenes alone (II.iii, II.v, III.ii, III.iv): the contrast with Emilia's safe establishment in Theseus' court is striking; and while Emilia is always herself, never in love, protesting yet acquiescent, grieved rather than disturbed, the Jailer's Daughter moves from lighthearted romance—

Out upon't,
What pushes are we wenches driven to
When fifteen once has found us! (II.iii.5–7)

—to fear and hunger, and thence to a sense of exposure—

I am very cold, and all the stars are out too,
The little stars and all, that look like aglets.
The sun has seen my folly. (III.iv.1–3)

—and thence to madness. The descent is not merely pathetic: it is comic, as we see in her taking part in the morris dance of III.v, and it is powerfully suggestive of the casual destructiveness of the love impulse. Aspatia in The Maid's Tragedy is too often seen as a merely pathetic figure: there is destructiveness there too, for herself and for Amintor. Fletcher had a strong sense of how disintegration worked, most brilliantly realized in his Maximus in Valentinian (circa 1614). And we may, I think, assume that it was Fletcher's idea to have the girl in The Two Noble Kinsmen "cured" by making her take her humble Wooer for Palamon, and thus in imagination lie with the man she loved. At the end of the play Emilia is almost on the point of marrying Arcite; the gods intervene, and she is in Palamon's arms. Neither girl has choice, neither girl has, ultimately it seems, the power to differentiate. Moreover, they are linked in that the Jailer's Daughter has to play her part in the morris dance, her madness making her, in the opinion of the Countrymen, the more apt for the grotesque gambols required, while Emilia, trying to preserve neutrality and sobriety, is nevertheless shuttled from one knight's arms to the other's. This gives the country entertainment of III.v a function in the play: it is a comic counterpart to, and an anticipation of, the final tournament, and their respective roles in the two spectacles bring together the girl who loves Palamon and the girl who weds him. In his development of the subplot, Fletcher seems thus to have continued his work of deflation.

Here, however, it is necessary to distinguish with some care. Shakespeare's handling of Palamon and Arcite and Theseus and Emilia is no simple romancing, as we have seen. They are powerless human beings manipulated by the gods, and in a measure comic in their subjection. But the comedy is wry and serious, nowhere more so than in Palamon's invocation of Venus in V.i.³ Fletcher's comedy is much more self-conscious, more obviously grotesque, and though it too is wry there is laughter in it.

Not only deflation of the elder dramatist can be seen, but a measure of parody too. The Jailer's Daughter echoes Ophelia; Emilia brooding over the pictures of Palamon and Arcite in IV.ii echoes the Gertrude who was made to look on pictures of Claudius and the elder Hamlet; even the Doctor's bed trick in V.ii (for it is substantially that) may echo Shakespeare's elaborate employments of the device. And again and again there are tricks of wording—for example, the Doctor's "I think she has a perturbed mind, which I cannot minister to" (IV.iii.58–59)—that take up phrases which Fletcher knew from Shakespeare. The parodying is not hostile or unadmiring. We can remember that in 1613 Shakespeare was forty-nine and Fletcher thirty-four, that we have strong evidence that they worked together on two, perhaps on three, plays: the relationship must have been a complex one. Through the remaining twelve years of Fletcher's career his predecessor's work was never far from his mind, but he enjoyed it without a total reverence. That in writing his share of The Two Noble Kinsmen he made the play something of a medley would not deeply disturb him. He did not bring to the writing of any play a sense of full commitment.

A court record suggests that Shakespeare's and Fletcher's play was given there in 1619,⁴ and the occurrence in the text of two actors' names⁵ enables us to deduce that the play was revived about 1625–26. The title page of 1634 is perhaps deliberately ambiguous in its "Presented at the Blackfriars": this could imply, but need not, that the play was still in the repertory. But after 1642 for a very long time the stage had almost no use for the play.⁶ In 1664 Pepys saw at Lincoln's Inn Fields Theatre The Rivals (not a new play then), which is a free adaptation of The Two Noble Kinsmen and, though it was published anonymously in 1668, can be safely attributed to Sir William Davenant. He was a dramatist of experience and some note in Charles I's reign, he was largely responsible for the restarting of theater performances in London during the Interregnum (his operatic The Siege of Rhodes being acted in 1656), and he was one of the two London theater managers in the earliest Restoration years. He made free use of pre-1642 drama, adapting Macbeth and (with Dryden) The Tempest for current taste. In The Rivals he contrived a version of the story he found in Shakespeare and Fletcher, with no Theseus, no petitioning Queens, no invocation of the gods, no tournament, and a happy ending. Though he occasionally keeps to the words he found, he uses none of the old names and changes the place of action to Arcadia. Heraclea, corresponding to Emilia, cannot make up her mind between Theocles and Philander, but finds that Philander is loved by Celania, the daughter of the Provost (no mere jailer): therefore she decides to take Theocles, and Philander consents to love Celania. Davenant wanted to make a refined comedy, and to do it he had to remove most of the action and all the grossness. Celania does go distracted for a while, but only in a polite way. The play is of no importance, but so far as is known it provided the occasion for the only contact with the stage that The Two Noble Kinsmen had between the early seventeenth century and the early twentieth century. Not even William Poel is on record as having thought of a revival.

Then in March 1928 the Old Vic staged it, with Ernest Milton as Palamon, Eric Portman as Arcite, Jean Forbes-Robertson as the Jailer's Daughter, and Barbara Everest as Emilia. Writing in The London Mercury for April 1928, A. G. MacDonell praised Jean Forbes-Robertson, and noted that Palamon was done comically, in a red wig. This reviewer was much taken with the realistic playing of the mad scenes, and grateful that he did not have to endure simple nobility in two kinsmen. The only other productions I have been able to trace are one at the Antioch Area

⁴ E. K. Chambers, William Shakespeare: A Study of Facts and Problems (1930), II, p. 346.

⁵ See A Note on the Text, pp. 1623–25.

⁶ The almost complete disregard of our play in the late seventeenth century is indicated by Dryden's failure to mention it in his Preface to his volume of Fables (1700) or to give in his Palamon and Arcite, included in that volume, any clear indication that he had read it. He does, when writing of Emilia at Book I, line 175, use the phrase "To do the observance due to sprightly May," which is a little nearer to "to do observance/To flow'ry May" (The Two Noble Kinsmen, II.iv.50–51) than to Chaucer's "to have remembrance/To don honour to May" (The Knight's Tale, lines 188–89), but Chaucer in another context has "to doon his observance to May" (line 642). Dryden also makes a little more of the freckled face of one of the kinsmen's supporters (Book III, lines 76, 475) than Chaucer does (lines 1311–12), which could be due to the stress on this feature in The Two Noble Kinsmen, IV.ii.120–23. Neither of these points can make us firmly deduce that Dryden gave the play a thought as he adapted Chaucer.

³ See A Note on the Source, pp. 1621–23.

Theater, Antioch College, Ohio, which was given eight times in August and September 1955 under the direction of Arthur Lithgow, and one at the Department of Drama, University of Bristol, England. I am most grateful to Mr. Lithgow, now of the McCarter Theater at Princeton, and to Miss Marcia Overstreet and Miss Ernestine C. Brecht of Antioch College, for writing to me about the productions there, and to Professor Glynne Wickham, Head of the Department of Drama at Bristol, for his information concerning the Bristol performance. Mr. Lithgow reports that the play proved "very stage-worthy," particularly the scenes involving the Jailer's Daughter, and that Mr. Ellis Rabb was "very grand" as Palamon. Some cutting had to be done of "repetitive passages," but Shakespeare's hand was felt in the "high imagery."

This is a relatively inglorious stage history for a play in which Shakespeare was concerned, and we must honor the Old Vic, Antioch College, and the University of Bristol for going against the current. Despite the coldness of the London reviewers (MacDonell was typical), it is evident that something happened to the Jailer's Daughter scenes when they got on the stage, and this was confirmed at Antioch College, where indeed the play as a whole seems to have found itself at home. It is more than time that a further attempt was made to see it in action. It does, after all, contain the invocations to the gods in V.i, passages of dramatic verse outstanding even in 1613, a good time for dramatic verse; it contains some of Fletcher's most skillful and characteristic writing; it will one day, perhaps, come to be recognized as throwing a new kind of light on Shakespeare's concluding work in the theater. It needs a large and flexible stage: there is a most suitable one at Stratford, Ontario, another at Chichester in England, and others—both indoor and outdoor—easily found in the United States. One of these might well meet the challenge of what was perhaps Shakespeare's (though only partly Shakespeare's) last play.

It has some good verse and a fairly realistic picture of the onset of madness, but the director contemplating a revival will want to be assured of more than that. It is true that he must face difficulties. The play has the appearance of a romantic story, as Beaumont and Fletcher's Philaster has, but in neither instance does the romantic effect work properly. With Philaster that was because Beaumont and Fletcher were determined on a sophisticated undercutting of the romantic gesture; with The Two Noble Kinsmen there is the complication that two men of widely differing temperaments shared the writing. Shakespeare had used romance with high authority in The Winter's Tale and The Tempest, involving his audience in a love story in a setting that was both natural and strange, and at the same time making them feel that they were in the presence of stern and unknowable powers. But now he was working with Fletcher, whose sights were lower, essentially those that had characterized Philaster. For Shakespeare, we can assume it was the sense of the inscrutable that made the story attractive to him; for Fletcher, it was its essential, often painful, but never overwhelming absurdity. Because it seems likely that Fletcher had the task of putting together his and Shakespeare's work on the play, the overriding effect is Fletcherian: we are taken to high realms of thought, and deliberately let down, as we are so often, but less extravagantly, in the other plays in which Fletcher had a main hand. It is a paradox that Shakespeare seems to have planned The Two Noble Kinsmen and that Fletcher gave it its dominant tone. But that tone is dominant, not exclusive: from Shakespeare we get the solemn pageant of the Queens' mission in I.i, the sage talk of Emilia and Hippolyta in I.iii, the sharp magniloquence of the prayers in V.i; and Fletcher's deflations do not take them from our memory.

But what has probably put off most readers and potential directors has been the nature of the characterization. Shakespeare's handling of character from Pericles onward was lacking in the complexity and verisimilitude that had marked the comedies and frequently the tragedies of his middle and mature years. But audiences have been ready to accept Leontes in place of Othello, Miranda in place of Rosalind, Prospero in place of Hamlet, because in these plays they are led consistently toward the idea of "great creating Nature," toward a sense of epiphany, toward an austere assertion that to accept what is remains the best hope, the highest wisdom, we have. But Fletcher has been little more successful on the stage from the eighteenth to the twentieth century, either alone or in collaboration with Beaumont, than he has been in association with Shakespeare. Reviewing the Old Vic performance of The Two Noble Kinsmen in 1928, James Agate asked how any actress could make anything of Emilia, passed from hero to hero as from pillar to post.⁷ A. G. MacDonell, we have seen, found even one manifestly noble kinsman enough to bear. Fletcher offers nothing in the way of obvious compensation for his stereotyping of human characters; these are, he suggests, the types that men fall into, or imagine they fall into, or try to live up to the idea of falling into. The Fletcherian drama is a drama about men's refusal to live as individuals. In his plays, men avoid nakedness by doing what they feel the codes and traditions of society demand from them. We may differentiate Palamon from Arcite: one is more rough, the other ready to see himself as sinning because he devoted himself to Emilia a few seconds after his friend did. But each keeps within a stereotype, a notion that belongs to the playhouse of the mind that men are always imagining for themselves: they are alike victims and worshipers of Bacon's Idols of the Theater. It is a kind of characterization that in recent years Brecht has familiarized us with, and we should now therefore be the more fitted to respond to the mode and to see what the play as a whole is saying.

It is indeed a well-arranged play, despite the duality of authorship and the dichotomy of attitude that in this instance is thus imposed. Instead of the loose storytelling we might expect, we have a fairly tight structure, and in A Note on the Source (p. 1621) we shall see that this has been achieved partly through the changes made in adapting Chaucer. The action involves three interwoven strands: (1) the prologue action, as we may call it, concerning the conflict between Athens and Thebes; (2) the story of the rivalry for Emilia; (3) the story of the Jailer's Daughter. The first makes the play begin in a manner of high seriousness and formal rhetoric, and it is in manifest contrast with the slighter, more personal stories of the knights and the girls. The subplot, as we have seen, reflects ironically on the plot of the knights.

⁷ Brief Chronicles (1943), pp. 53-56.

The act division throughout is firm, and is related to the play's changes of locality. Act I concerns itself with the conflict between Athens (chivalrous) and Thebes (ignoble), ending with the imprisonment of the nearly dead Palamon and Arcite (noble on the wrong side). Act II gives us their falling in love and release from prison, and introduces the subplot. Act III is wholly outside the town: it shows how Palamon and Arcite meet again, how the Jailer's Daughter loses Palamon, how Theseus and his court are entertained by a group of rustics including the Daughter, and finally how the duke comes upon the kinsmen and decrees their final trial. Act IV, which is briefly and quietly indeterminate, makes toward the cure of the Daughter and emphasizes the perplexity of Emilia: it is, as often with a fourth act, a halting place before the catastrophe. Act V gives us the tournament and its curious consequences, with both girls in some sense pledged to Palamon. Athens and Thebes are the localities of Act I, Athens and the country nearby those of Act II, the country consistently is the place of action in Act III, the city of Athens (but alternating between palace and prison) in Acts IV and V. As the play progresses its range of locality shrinks, so that what begins as an opposition of Thebes and Athens ends as an opposition of palace and prison within a single city. The point of rest toward which we move is marked by death and bereavement and acquiescence: the Jailer who freed Arcite in Act II, and put Palamon under further restraint, is prominently in the stage picture when Palamon is prepared for execution and then, at the news of Arcite's death, for marriage.

The play's recurrent irony is supported by other details of the planning. Theseus is ceremoniously petitioned by the Queens in I.i and by Hippolyta, Emilia, and Pirithous in III.vi: he yields in both instances, though with eloquence in the earlier, Shakespearean passage and with the cleverness of compromise in Fletcher's III.vi. The talk between Palamon and Arcite in I.ii, where they show their wish to leave a corrupt Thebes, becomes ironic when in fighting for Thebes they come near death and are sentenced to life imprisonment. The discussion of friendship by Hippolyta and Emilia in I.iii not only anticipates the dominant friendship motif in the play as a whole, but casts an ironic light on the knights' subsequent devotion to Emilia. And just as the subplot as a whole reflects on Emilia and her ultimate disposal, so the entertainment devised by the Schoolmaster, which brings Theseus and the Jailer's Daughter together on the stage for the only time, is not only a contrast to and an anticipation of the wryly presented tournament of Act V: it also gives a distorted image of the entertainment that the kinsmen and the duke and his ladies offer to the audience in the theater.

Of course, this is a Blackfriars play. The King's Men had taken over that "private" theater (previously used by the child actors) around 1610 and had begun by using it as their winter house, keeping the Globe for the summer. The title page of 1634 mentions only the Blackfriars, and we may assume that at least by the 1620's this play had found its right home there. It is a sophisticated—even, we have seen, a dislocated—play, not firm, ultimately, in its implications but surely fascinating, if disturbing and at times irritating, to watch. Its epilogue calls it "the tale we have told—/For 'tis no other." That was what Shakespeare had insistently, in the text as well as in the title, called The Winter's Tale. The Two Noble Kinsmen, like that earlier romance, is a strange story with many reversals of fortune, but like that too it has its unromantic aftertaste and is more carefully structured than a casual glance suggests. The Blackfriars audience was at times most gullible, ready to lose itself in a merely romanticized wonderland, but it could rise to the appreciation of something complex: it welcomed Fletcher's masterpiece in comedy, The Humorous Lieutenant (circa 1619–20), and, though we cannot be sure that it much liked the experience, it saw Ford's The Broken Heart some dozen years after that. There were doubtless moments of puzzlement with The Two Noble Kinsmen in 1613 and the following years, but at least some of the spectators must have noticed that the supreme dramatist and his more than clever successor were not failing them.

Nor would they, I think, fail us now if we again put their joint play on the stage.⁸

A NOTE ON THE SOURCE

The source of The Two Noble Kinsmen, as we have seen, is The Knight's Tale, which was most easily available to the collaborators in Speght's edition of Chaucer, published in 1598 (reprinted three times by 1602). In the dramatization a considerable number of changes were made. We may notice them under several heads:

(1) The action throughout is compressed. In Chaucer there is a time lapse between the first seeing of Emilia by the kinsmen and the release of Arcite. Then Arcite spends some years in Thebes before returning to Athens to see Emilia again. Meanwhile Palamon has seven years in prison. When Theseus has arranged the tournament, the kinsmen are to return to Athens in a year's time. Arcite takes some time to die after the horse has thrown

⁸ Since this Introduction was written, Paul Bertram has published a substantial book with the title Shakespeare and The Two Noble Kinsmen (1965), arguing that Shakespeare was the sole author of the play. It is a piece of well-informed writing, and Bertram has scored some good points in showing how the nineteenth-century scholars seized on the idea of dual authorship because of a reluctance to imagine Shakespeare writing the franker sections of the play. He argues, moreover, that the play has unity in its plotting (as indeed it has) and that throughout there is the same full use of Chaucer. Less successfully, he disposes of the evidence of verse tests by insisting that some of the scenes treated by the editors as verse are really in prose (as they are presented in the quarto): this is, I think, to disregard the strong blank-verse character of much of the writing. The reader of the present edition will be able to decide whether the scenes involving the Countrymen and the Jailer and his Daughter (apart from the beginning of II.i and the whole of IV.iii) are legitimately printed as verse. Moreover, Bertram is one of the, alas, many who have a low regard for Fletcher: he insists on Shakespeare's sole authorship of Henry VIII and The Two Noble Kinsmen, but will let Fletcher have Cardenio, which seems to him of minor weight. And he does not successfully meet the evidence of the 1634 title page. It is possible to quote, as he does, the statement of Leonard Digges, in the 1640 edition of Shakespeare's Poems, that Shakespeare did not bed "from each witty friend a Scene/To peece his Acts with," but that is another matter than the frank and equal sharing of a play with his obvious successor in 1613. It used to be necessary to argue for Shakespeare's participation in The Two Noble Kinsmen; now we have to safeguard Fletcher's right to a part of it. And the argument of this Introduction is that there are, despite close cooperation, a difference of view and a difference of style that indicate two authors, one of them supreme and the other at least major in his time.

him, and it is a matter of years before Emilia brings herself to marry Palamon. In the play we are not told how long Palamon and Arcite are in prison, but there is no suggestion that it is a great while. Clearly Palamon escapes soon after Arcite has entered Emilia's service. The time lapse before the tournament is a single month. Arcite dies almost immediately, and Emilia is to marry Palamon, it appears, the next day.

These changes are partly to give an effect of tighter structure to what is in Chaucer a diffuse narrative, but they also increase the sense of divine manipulation. The kinsmen in II.i look forward to a slow lifetime in prison; instead, they are whirled through a series of events, and at the end of the play Emilia is passed from arm to arm in a manner that suggests no cosmic concern for her dignity.

(2) There are also changes for the sake of obvious dramatic effectiveness. In the poem Theseus' wedding is not interrupted by the mission of the Queens. There are not three Queens but a crowd of queens and duchesses. Emilia has no attendant in the garden with whom she can talk informally and lightly. Palamon is not removed from the garden room after Arcite's departure. At the tournament each of the kinsmen is to be accompanied by a hundred knights. The invocations to the gods are in the order Venus, Diana, Mars, which has not the climactic effect secured in the play by Emilia's prayer coming last. The falling of the single rose from the tree brings the whole scene to a striking (and disturbing) conclusion.

(3) Other changes increase this sense of disturbance. Most obvious among these is the decree of Theseus that the knights defeated in the tournament shall die. Of course, this allows the theatrically effective saving of Palamon from the block, and it puts more at stake than the disposal of Emilia's person. Shakespeare may have thought of this change because in Pericles the unsuccessful suitors of Antiochus' daughter were similarly vowed to death. In any event, it is an element in the play that links it with the dangers and actual deaths that are found in the preceding romances. Moreover, there is nothing in the invocation of Venus in The Knight's Tale that resembles the words on the goddess' power that Palamon speaks. He hails her as sovereign queen of secrets,

.
that canst make

A cripple flourish with his crutch, and cure him
Before Apollo; that mayst force the king
To be his subject's vassal, and induce
Stale Gravity to dance: the pollèd bachelor
Whose youth like wanton boys through bonfires
Have skipped thy flame, at seventy thou canst catch
And make him, to the scorn of his hoarse throat,
Abuse young lays of love. (V.i.77, 81-89)

The images of the cripple grotesquely cured, of authority submissive and dancing, of old age straining its throat with a love song, contribute powerfully to that harsh strain in Shakespeare's section of the play that has been noted in the Introduction. And then we find Palamon seeking favor by boasting of his own credulity, and doing it in terms that, for an audience, are surely meant to be repellent:

I knew a man
Of eighty winters, this I told them, who
A lass of fourteen bridged. 'Twas thy power
To put life into dust: the aged cramp
Had screwed his square foot round,
The gout had knit his fingers into knots,
Torturing convulsions from his globy eyes
Had almost drawn their spheres, that what was life
In him seemed torture. This anatomy
Had by his young fair fere a boy, and I
Believed it was his, for she swore it was,
And who would not believe her? (V.i.107-18)

We may think back to Antony's concern with his gray hairs, to Leontes' finding wrinkles in what he thinks is Hermione's statue, but the degree of frankness is new. Palamon, the servant of Venus, puts himself side by side with the other victims he describes.⁹

(4) Nothing in Chaucer corresponds to the Jailer's Daughter plot. We are simply told that Palamon escaped with the help of a friend. In the Introduction (p. 1617) we have seen how Shakespeare and Fletcher use the subplot to affect the audience's response to the story of the knights and their love.

(5) In Chaucer the gods are at odds with each other, and the quarrel is settled by the ingenuity of Saturn, so that all promises can be kept. In the play we are rather made to feel that a single power speaks through the gods, that the matter is predetermined, that all that the gods do is to give hints of a future that neither prayer nor divine intervention can modify.

In a few places the play includes some quite incidental echoes of Chaucer. Thus Arcas, one of the Countrymen named at II.ii.37 and III.v.47, is the name of the son of Callisto, who, as "Calystope," is referred to in The Knight's Tale, line 1198. The Schoolmaster mentions the story of Meleager and Atalanta at III.v.18; Chaucer mentions it at The Knight's Tale, lines 1212-13. In the play the tournament is held in the place where Theseus found the knights fighting (III.vi.293): in The Knight's Tale, lines 1999-2006, we learn that it is Arcite's funeral pyre that is to be erected in that place. The consolation that Palamon offers to his friends as they are about to submit themselves to the block (V.iv.1-13), although altogether sharper in its comments on the nature of life, bears an obvious relation to the arguments that Theseus uses in The Knight's Tale, lines 2189-98, in order to persuade Palamon and Emilia to give up their mourning for Arcite and enter into marriage. Such points of casual resemblance between play and poem, with the dramatists freely manipulating the words and images they found in Chaucer, show the intimacy of their acquaintance with the source.

The Knight's Tale had been twice dramatized before 1613. In 1566 Richard Edwardes' Palamon and Arcite was acted at Christ Church, Oxford, before Elizabeth, and Henslowe's Diary registers a Palamon and Arcite acted in 1594, probably as a new play. Neither of these is extant, but there is no reason to believe that they had any connection with The Two Noble Kinsmen.

⁹ In his Introduction to Shakespeare's Sonnets (see page 1728), W. H. Auden comments on this passage's choice of "humiliating or horrid" examples of the power of Venus and on "the intensity of the disgust at masculine sexual vanity."

In the Introduction (pp. 1617-18) we have seen that Shakespeare and Fletcher were dependent also on their memories of several earlier Shakespeare plays, ranging from The Two Gentlemen of Verona to the late romances, and that this has helped to make the play into something very different from a straightforward dramatization of Chaucer.

A NOTE ON THE TEXT

There is no doubt that the text used by the printer of the quarto of 1634 had been in the hands of a prompter (presumably of the Blackfriars Theater). The most obvious evidence of this is the appearance in the margin of three "warnings"—that is, reminders that preparation must be made for an ensuing entry. These are noted below in the list of places where the present edition varies from the quarto, but it will be useful to bring them together here:

- (1) On C3^v of the quarto, in the left margin opposite I.iii.58-64:

2. Hearses rea-/dy with Pala-/mon: and Arci-/te: the 3./Queenes./Theseus: and/his Lordes/ready.

At this point the scene has more than thirty lines to run: the "warning" is of what will be required at the beginning of I.iv, which comes on C4^r.

- (2) On C4^v, in the left margin opposite I.iv.26-27:

3. Hearses rea-/dy.

These hearses are for the bodies of the three kings slain at Thebes and will be brought on at the beginning of I.v twenty lines later, on the same page of the quarto.

- (3) On G2^v, in the left margin opposite III.v.65-66:

Chaire and/stooles out.

These properties are required for Theseus and his company to sit on to watch the Schoolmaster's entertainment: the dialogue indicates that they sit some thirty lines later, at III.v.98.

Further evidence of theater use of the copy behind the quarto is in the appearance of actors' names in the entries. At IV.ii.69 the quarto stage direction reads "Enter Messengers. Curtis." ("Messengers" being clearly an error for "Messenger"), and the entry which opens V.iii reads ". . . and/some Attendants, T. Tucke: Curtis." The actors referred to can be identified as Curtis Greville, who was a hired man in the King's Company in 1626, probably having joined them the preceding year, and Thomas Tuckfield, whose name appears in a list of "Musitions and other necessary attendantes" of the King's Company in 1624.¹⁰ From these dates it is clear that the actors' names were inserted on the occasion of a revival in the 1620's, not for the original performance of 1613.

Actors' names appearing in a text may be due to an author who has a particular member of the company in mind for a part, but this could not be the case with the two names in The Two Noble Kinsmen. For one thing, Greville and Tuckfield were not with the company when Shakespeare and Fletcher were writing the play; for another, the messenger of IV.ii and the attendants of V.iii are characterless parts: an author would have no views on who should play them, but a prompter might wish to remind himself of the actors' identities.

The quarto contains further indications of playhouse use. Act IV ends with the stage direction "Florish. Exeunt," the "Florish" obviously being wrongly placed: it is needed for the entry of Theseus and the rest at the beginning of Act V. The same thing occurs at the end of V.ii. In these instances we can deduce that "Florish" was added in the margin between IV.iii and V.i and between V.ii and V.iii respectively, and the printer took it as going with the exits and not with the following entries. Then we have several marginal stage directions printed, like the "warnings" noted above, in roman type—one at the beginning of II.iv:

This short flo-/rish of Cor-/nets and/Showtes with-/in.

and another opposite the heading "Actus Tertius.":

Cornets in/sundry places./Noise and/hallowing as/people
a May-/ing:

The marginal placing, the use of roman type, and the curious phrasing "This short florish" all suggest that here we have prompter's additions to the manuscript. A third instance of this is at III.v.134-37, where the text in the quarto is as follows:

	Per. Produce.	Musicke Dance.
Knocke for	Intrate filii, Come forth, and foot it,
Schoole. Enter	Ladies, if we have been merry
The Dance.	And have pleased thee with a derry,

The italic stage direction can be taken as at least possibly authorial. In the original manuscript there could have been a marginal speech heading "Sch." (the quarto's regular form) before "Intrate. . ." A prompter, however, might see no clearly marked entry for the dancers or cue for their entry, and might insert these in the left margin, running the insertion together with "Sch." Conceivably "for" was added during preparation for printing in an attempt to make sense of "Knocke./Sch./Enter The Dance." Alternatively the manuscript as altered by the prompter read thus:

Knocke for	Sch.
The Dance.

and the printer moved "Sch[oole]." to the left and added "Enter" in an attempt to make sense of it. It would be good theatrical usage to have a "knock" (striking the floor of the stage with a staff) as a signal. But at III.v.17 the agreed signal was to be his flinging up his cap: the author of the scene would not be likely to forget this so quickly, but a prompter might at first reading. Like the two previously noted stage directions, this one is in roman.

One other stage direction is marginal and in roman. This occurs at III.vi.93:

They bow se-/verall wayes:/then advance/and stand.

¹⁰ Gerald E. Bentley, The Jacobean and Caroline Stage, II (1941), pp. 451-52, 606-07.

An asterisk is inserted in III.vi.93 after Arcite has said "And me my love!" and before he continues "Is there ought else to say?" This is, I think, likely to be an authorial addition: it is literary in character, and the placing of the asterisk looks like an author's wish to indicate that the action must come between the two halves of Arcite's speech. But for the printer it would appear in the margin along with the prompter's additional stage directions and warnings, so he has used roman type for this as for those.

Even so, the evidence for the presence of the prompter's hand is fairly plentiful, and he may also have been responsible for all the indications of sound effects (horns, cornets, flourishes), not merely for those noted above. Yet it does not seem very likely that in 1634 the printer had in front of him a promptbook actually used in performance. Sir Walter Greg drew attention to the possibility that even "warnings" could appear in a manuscript which was merely annotated by a prompter before the promptbook itself was made.¹¹ And it is evident that the "warnings" here given are not complete: an executioner's block would be needed for V.iv, and a chair for Arcite at V.iv.84. Also, some of the entries are incomplete: Artesius and Attendants must be added at I.i.s.d. (though we can assume that the printer is responsible for the apparent omission of Pirithous); a Herald, Lords, Attendants, Palamon and Arcite must be added at I.iv.s.d.; at III.v.s.d. the entry includes "2. or 3 wenches," but five are needed for the dance; at IV.i.102 the vague "and others," though possible in a prompt copy, may be an additional sign of authorial inexactitude.

Our text also contains certain things that might well have been eliminated in a prompt copy. At I.i.217 there is the stage direction "Exeunt towards the Temple." This indicates that Hippolyta, Emilia, Pirithous, and the Attendants begin to move toward the stage door that here represents the temple entrance, but Theseus has still an exchange with Pirithous (I.i.219-24) before the procession has left the stage. This is clear enough to a reader, but a prompter would be likely to tidy it up. Then at II.i.50 there is the direction "Enter Palamon and Arcite, above." The Jailer and his Daughter comment from below and then leave the stage. The quarto marks a general "Exeunt." and then gives a new scene heading:

Scæna 2. Enter Palamon, and Arcite in prison.

The action is surely continuous, and in the present edition a new scene is not started at this point. The kinsmen need to remain above, as the later part of the scene will be more effective if they look down to the garden to see Emilia, as they do in Chaucer: moreover, the "leap the garden . . . and pitch between her arms" of II.i.275-76 strongly suggests that Arcite is above. The explanation of the condition of the text here is probably that II.i.1-57 are by Shakespeare and the rest of the scene by Fletcher: they had worked out in advance that Shakespeare would introduce the new characters (Jailer, Daughter, Wooer) and Fletcher would do the kinsmen's first encounters with Emilia. So the two sections of the scene would be separate: II.i.60 would start a new sheet of paper. In other words, this suggests that the printer in 1634 had in front of him either the holograph manuscript of Shakespeare and Fletcher or a transcript faithful to it. It should also be noted that the quarto is unusual in its indications of locality: in addition to the "Temple" and "prison" already noted, we have "Enter Palamon as out of a bush" at III.i.30 s.d. and "Enter Palamon from the bush" at III.vi.s.d. Such indications of locality are of course rare in seventeenth-century play texts: those in our play are similar to "Enter Timon in the woods" and "Enter Timon from his Caue" in the Folio text Timon of Athens, IV.iii.s.d. and V.i.30 s.d. Timon was almost certainly printed either from Shakespeare's own manuscript or from a faithful transcript of it.

Now it must be remembered that we know of performances of The Two Noble Kinsmen in 1613, probably in 1619, and around 1625.¹² The printer's copy in 1634 has some relation to the last of these (from the evidence of the two actors' names), but it is puzzling to think of the prompter on that occasion annotating the authors' original manuscript if a prompt copy for 1613 (and 1619) were available. It could of course have been lost or not immediately available. And we cannot be sure that all the prompter's additions were made at the same time: the "warnings" and additional stage directions could have been inserted in 1613 and the actors' names in 1625. Nevertheless, there is a good case for believing that the quarto is directly based on the author's manuscript (or a faithful transcript of it), which the prompter had annotated before the making of a promptbook. When the play came to be printed, the company would be more likely to give such a manuscript to the publisher rather than the promptbook itself, which would be needed at the theater if the play were to be acted again.¹³

When the play was reprinted in the Beaumont and Fletcher Folio of 1679, the text was based on that of the quarto. This is firmly established not only by the statement in the Folio itself but by the frequent agreement between the texts in accidentals. Although the 1679 printing shows a considerable number of variants, they have no independent authority and are mainly corrections of misprints, new misprints, and casual changes in accidentals. For the present edition, therefore, the Folio readings have been treated in the same way as those of all subsequent texts: that is, they have been regarded as editorial emendations or errors, to be taken into account in emending the quarto text but not recorded where they have not been accepted by the present editor.

All substantive departures from the quarto are recorded below, with the reading of the present edition in boldface type followed by the quarto reading in roman. It will be seen that the prompter's "warnings" have been transposed into stage directions and inserted in brackets at the appropriate places. The stage directions that have been noted above as almost certainly the prompter's are, however, printed in this edition in the same way as other stage directions (which may of course be either author's or prompter's).

¹² See Introduction, p. 1619.

¹³ F. O. Waller in his article "Printer's Copy for The Two Noble Kinsmen," Studies in Bibliography, XI (1958), pp. 61-84, has argued along these lines. This article incorporates material in Waller's unpublished Chicago dissertation of 1958, A Critical, Old-spelling Edition of "The Two Noble Kinsmen": the fullest textual studies so far made of the play are to be found in this thesis and in Paul Bertram's Shakespeare and The Two Noble Kinsmen (1965). Bertram, however, takes the view that the printer in 1634 had before him a holograph Shakespeare manuscript that had been used as a promptbook.

¹¹ The Shakespeare First Folio (1955), p. 141.

It may be noted that, unlike most of his predecessors, the present editor accepts Skeat's emendation "harebells" at I.i.9, and that he is the first to take the quarto speech heading "All" at IV.i.145 as part of the Jailer's Daughter's speech.

In this edition italic type is used for stage directions (as generally in the quarto), roman type is used for all dialogue and songs (in place of the quarto's italic for proper names in the dialogue and for the songs), and small capitals are used for speech headings (in place of the quarto's italics). Punctuation and spelling have been modernized, obvious typographical errors have been silently corrected, and the quarto's Latin headings for acts and scenes are given in English. The quarto's "nev'r," "ev'r," "ev'n" spellings are here rendered as "ne'er," "e'er," "e'en," whenever the meter seems to require a monosyllable; elsewhere the full spellings of these words are used. When a quarto reading exists in two states, corrected and uncorrected, the list below indicates the uncorrected state by a raised "a" after the reading given, the corrected state by a raised "b."

In a number of places the quarto prints lines as prose which there seems to be good reason to take as blank verse. Decisions in such cases are always difficult, but the present edition follows several of its predecessors in printing as verse where a blank verse rhythm seems to underlie, and sometimes clearly to emerge from, the fairly free dialogue pattern.

In conformity with the practice of the present edition, localities have been inserted in scene headings, but these and all other editorial additions to the quarto are given in brackets.

Pro.19 writer wrighter 25 water, do water. Do 26 tack take 29 travail travell

I.i.s.d. Pirithous Theseus 9 harebells her bells 16 angel angle 20 chough hoar Clough hee 59 lord. The day Lord the day 61 groom. Groome, 68 Nemean Nenuan 83 'stilled stilde [Folio "stil'd"] 90 thy the 99 blood-sized blood cizd 112 glassy glasse 125 sister sifter 138 move mooves 155 Rinsing Wrinching 210 soldier, as before. Soldier (as before) 211 Aulis Anly 217 s.d. Hippolyta . . . towards Exeunt towards I.ii.65 power there's nothing; almost puts power: there's nothing, almost puts 70 glory; one glory on;^b glory on^a I.iii.22 brine brine, 31 one ore 54 eleven a eleven; Flavina Flauia 58-64 [note in quarto margin: "2. Hearses rea-/dy with Palamon: and Arci-/te: the 3./Queenes./Theseus: and/his Lordes/ready."] 79 every innocent fury-innocent 82 dividual individuall

I.iv.18 smeared smeard^b succard^a 22 We 'lieve We leave 26-27 [note in quarto margin: "3. Hearses rea-/dy."] 40 friends' behests friends, beheastes 41 Love's provocations Loves, provocations 45 O'er-wrestling Or wrastling 49 'fore for II.i.1 little . . . live: little, . . . live, 19-20 that now. So that. Now, so 50 s.d. [in quarto, after "night" in line 49] 57 [in quarto, new scene heading: "Scena 2. Enter Palamon, and Arcite in prison."] 60 war. Yet warre yet, 78 wore were 79 Ravished Bravishd 124 could. could, 175 [quarto makes this the last line of Arcite's speech] 207 mere neere 214 have. have, 259 be, be. 260 Arcite; Arcite. 275 s.d. [and throughout rest of scene] Jailer Keeper 319 life? life.

II.ii [quarto marks as "Scena 3."] 39 ye yet 52 means. meanes; says sees 74 him! him

II.iii [quarto marks as "Scena 4."]

II.iv.s.d. Short . . . within. This short . . . within [in margin] 19 I believe Beleeve,

II.v [quarto marks as "Scena 6."]

III.i.s.d. Cornets . . . a-Maying [in quarto, in margin] 2 laund land; rite Right 10 place pace 36 looked, the void'st lookd the voydes 94 only, sir. Your onely, Sir your 95 Wind horns off Winde hornes of Cornets 97 musit Musicke 107 not. nor; III.ii.1 brake Beake 7 reck wreake 19 fed feed 28 brine bine III.iii.23 them then 50 armor? Armour.

III.iv.9 Spoon Vpon 10 tack take

III.v [quarto marks as "Scena 6."] s.d. Bavian Baum five [italic] 2. or 3. 8 jean jave 47 once! You can tell, Arcas, once, you can tell Arcas 65-67 [note in quarto margin: "Chaire and/stooles out."] 67 Till we till 91 Wind horns [in quarto after "I'll lead"] 93 Exeunt . . . Schoolmaster [in quarto, after "boys," line 92] 97 Theseus Per. 135 s.d. Knock Knocke for Schoole [in margin] 135 [quarto omits speech heading] 137 ye thee 140 thee three 155 Wind horns [in quarto, after "made," line 156]

III.vi [quarto marks as "Scena 7."] 28 man. When man, when 39 spared. Your spard, your 68 I warrant Ile warrant 86 strait streight 111 safety, safely 146 thy this 175 us; us, 176 valiant, valiant; 243 prune proyne 290 again, it againe it IV.i.45-46 Wooer. No, sir . . . 'Tis—Wooer [italic] No Sir not well./Woo. [speech heading] Tis 48 have told told 84 wreath wreake 110 rearly rarely 120 Far For 141 Second Friend 1. Fr. 145 cheerly all! O, O, O cheerly./All. [speech heading] Owgh, owgh, owgh 149 Tack take

IV.ii.16 Jove Love 37 pardon, Palamon: pardon: Palamon, 54 s.d. Enter a Gentleman Enter Emil. and Gent. 69 s.d. Enter a Messenger Enter Messengers, Curtis 76 first fitst 81 fire faire 86-87 baldric, . . . with: Bauldricke; . . . with, 104 tods tops 109 court corect

IV.iii.8 s.d. [in quarto, after "business," line 8] 31 i' th' other i'th/Thother 86 carve crave

V.i.s.d. Flourish [in quarto, precedes "Exeunt." of IV.iii] 7 s.d. Flourish of cornets [in quarto, at line 5] 50 whose approach [first added by Seward in 1750: the words, or something like them, seem necessary] 54 armipotent armenypotent 68 design march boldly. designe; march boldly, 91 his; his 118-21 Brief, I . . . done no companion;/To . . . not a defier;/To . . . rejoicer. briefe I . . . done; no Companion/To . . . not; a defyer/To . . . cannot; a Rejoycer, 130 [quarto inserts speech heading "Pal."] 136 s.d. They bow [in quarto, after line 134] 151 'pointed pointed 152 him; out of two him out of two, 154 election. Of mine eyes election of mine eyes,

V.ii.34 Videlicet, the way of flesh [quarto has "Videlicet" in roman and "way of flesh" in italic, doubtless through a casual error] 39 humor honour 53 tune turne

V.iii.s.d. Flourish [in quarto, precedes "Exeunt" of V.ii] Attendants [quarto adds: "T. Tucke: Curtis."] 13 well, penciled well pencild 54 him them 66 s.d. Cornets . . . "A Palamon!" [in quarto, at line 64]; Enter a Servant [may be erroneous, as there were attendants on stage, and the Servant brings no news] 75 in't else: in't; else 77 s.d. [in quarto, at line 75] 92 s.d. [in quarto, at line 91] 121 to th' all I to'th all; I

V.iv.1 [quarto omits speech heading] 5-6 pity; to live still . . . wishes; pitty. To live still, . . . wishes, 39 Second and Third Knights 1. 2. K 46 dearly early 76 On end he stands [in quarto, printed at the end of the line, perhaps indicating that it was preceded by some illegible words in the manuscript] 78 victor's victoros 86-87 mighty! . . . unbroken, mightie . . . unbroken: 106 Hath Hast 132 sorry; still sorry still,

THE TWO NOBLE KINSMEN

[Dramatis Personae]

THESEUS Duke of Athens
PIRITHOUS friend to Theseus
ARTESIUS an Athenian
PALAMON } kinsmen, nephews to Creon, King of ARCITE } Thebes
VALERIUS a Theban
SIX KNIGHTS
JAILER
WOOER to the Jailer's Daughter
DOCTOR
BROTHER }
TWO FRIENDS } to the Jailer

SCHOOLMASTER
A HERALD MESSENGERS COUNTRYMEN
HYMEN A BOY AN EXECUTIONER GUARD TABORER BAVIAN or Fool
LORDS ATTENDANTS
HIPPOLYTA an Amazon, bride to Theseus
EMILIA her sister
THREE QUEENS
THE JAILER'S DAUGHTER WAITING-WOMAN to Emilia
MAIDS COUNTRY WENCHES NYMPHS

Scene: Athens and the country nearby; Thebes]

P R O L O G U E

Flourish.

New plays and maidenheads are near akin:
Much followed° both, for both much money gi'en,
If they stand sound and well. And a good play—
Whose modest scenes blush on his marriage day,
And shake to lose his honor—is like her
That after holy tie and first night's stir
Yet still is modesty, and still retains
More of the maid to sight than husband's pains.°
We pray our play may be so, for I am sure
It has a noble breeder, and a pure,
A learnèd, and a poet never went
More famous yet 'twixt Po and silver Trent.
Chaucer, of all admired, the story gives:
There constant to eternity it lives.
If we let fall° the nobleness of this,°

The decorative border shown above appeared on the first page of the quarto edition of The Noble Kinsmen, 1634.

Pro.s.d. Flourish trumpet fanfare 2 followed pursued, cultivated 8 pains endeavors 15 let fall fail to maintain; this Chaucer's poem

And the first sound this child hear be a hiss,
How will it shake the bones of that good man,
And make him cry from under ground, "O fan
From me the witless chaff of such a writer°
That blasts my bays, and my famed works makes lighter
Than Robin Hood!" This is the fear we bring;
For, to say truth, it were an endless° thing,
And too ambitious, to aspire to him.
Weak as we are, and almost breathless 'swim
In this deep water, do but you hold out
Your helping hands, and we shall tack about,°
And something do to save us. You shall hear Scenes, though below his art, may yet appear
Worth two hours' travail.° To his bones sweet sleep;
Content to you. If this play do not keep
A little dull time from us, we perceive
Our losses fall so thick we must needs leave.°
Flourish.

19 such a writer the singular is notable, but by no means decisive on the question of authorship 22 endless purposeless, vain 26 tack about change direction 29 travail labor (with a suggestion of travel, as the play's action moves from place to place) 32 leave give up acting

A C T I

[Scene I. Athens. Before a temple.]

Enter HYMEN° with a torch burning; a BOY in a white robe before, singing and strewing flowers; after HYMEN, a NYMPH, encompassed in her tresses,° bearing a wheaten garland;° then THESEUS between two other NYMPHS with wheaten chaplets° on their heads; then HIPPOLYTA the bride, led by PIRITHOUS, and another holding a garland over her head, her tresses likewise hanging; after her, EMILIA holding up her train; [ARTESIUS and ATTENDANTS]. Music.

The Song.

Roses, their sharp spines being gone,
Not royal in their smells alone,
But in their hue;
Maiden pinks, of odor faint,
Daisies smell-less, yet most quaint,°
And sweet thyme true;

Primrose, first-born child of Ver,°
Merry spring-time's harbinger,
With harebells dim;
Oxlips, in their cradles growing,
Marigolds, on death-beds blowing,°
Lark's-heels trim;°

All dear Nature's children sweet
Lie 'fore bride and bridegroom's feet,

Strew flowers.

Blessing their sense;
Not an angel° of the air,
Bird melodious, or bird fair,
Is° absent hence;

The crow, the sland'rous cuckoo, nor
The boding raven, nor chough hoar,
Nor chatt'ring pie,
May on our bridehouse° perch or sing,
Or with them any discord bring,
But from it fly.

Enter three QUEENS in black, with veils stained, with imperial crowns. The FIRST QUEEN falls down at the foot of THESEUS; the SECOND falls down at the foot of HIPPOLYTA; the THIRD before EMILIA.

FIRST QUEEN

For pity's sake and true gentility's,°
Hear and respect° me.

SECOND QUEEN

For your mother's sake,
And as you wish your womb may thrive with fair ones,
Hear and respect me.

I.i.s.d. Hymen god of marriage; encompassed in her tresses with hair loose, in token of virginity; wheaten garland a symbol of fertility and peace; chaplets wreaths 5 quaint pretty 7 Ver spring 11 on death-beds blowing blooming on graves 12 trim neat 16 angel here a synonym for "bird" 18 Is often emended to "Be," but the indicative seems acceptable 22 bridehouse house where a wedding is celebrated 25 gentility nobleness 26 respect give attention to

THIRD QUEEN

Now for the love of him whom Jove hath marked
The honor of your bed,° and for the sake
Of clear° virginity, be advocate
For us, and our distresses. This good deed
Shall raze you° out o' th' Book of Trespasses°
All you are set down there.

THESEUS

Sad lady, rise.

HIPPOLYTA Stand up.

EMILIA

No knees to me.

What woman I may stead° that is distressed
Does bind me to her.

THESEUS

What's your request? Deliver you for all.

FIRST QUEEN

We are three queens, whose sovereigns fell before
The wrath of cruel Creon;° who endured°
The beaks of ravens, talons of the kites,
And pecks of crows, in the foul fields of Thebes.
He will not suffer us to burn their bones,
To urn their ashes, nor to take th' offense
Of mortal loathsomeness from the blest eye
Of holy Phoebus,° but infects the winds
With stench of our slain lords. O pity, duke,
Thou purger of the earth, draw thy feared sword
That does good turns to th' world; give us the bones
Of our dead kings, that we may chapel° them;
And of thy boundless goodness take some note
That for our crownèd heads we have no roof,
Save this which is the lion's and the bear's,
And vault° to everything.

THESEUS

Pray you kneel not.

I was transported with your speech, and suffered Your knees to wrong themselves. I have heard the fortunes
Of your dead lords, which gives me such lamenting
As wakes my vengeance and revenge for 'em.
King Capaneus° was your lord. The day
That he should° marry you, at such a season
As now it is with me, I met your groom.
By Mars' altar, you were that time fair:
Not Juno's mantle° fairer than your tresses,
Nor in more bounty spread her; your wheaten wreath
Was then nor threshed° nor blasted;° Fortune at you Dimpled her cheek with smiles. Hercules our kinsman,°
Then weaker than your eyes, laid by his club:

29-30 whom . . . bed for whom Jove has destined the honor of wedding you 31 clear pure 33 raze you delete for you; Book of Trespasses recording angel's register of sins 36 stead help 40 Creon King of Thebes after Oedipus; endured have endured 45-46 blest . . . Phoebus the sun 50 chapel bury in a chapel 54 vault arched roof (here the sky) 59 Capaneus here four syllables, though classically three 60 should was to 63 Juno's mantle Juno was goddess of marriage and her mantle is described in Iliad, XIV; but the peacock was sacred to Juno, and "mantle" also suggests the bird's spread tail 65 threshed beaten so as to separate grain from husks (here an image for fertilizing: cf. I.i.s.d.); blasted i.e., by widowhood 66 kinsman according to Plutarch's "Life of Theseus," both he and Hercules were descended on their mothers' side from Pelops; moreover, Theseus as alleged son of Poseidon could claim kinship with Hercules, son of Zeus

He tumbled down upon his Nemean hide°
And swore his sinews thawed. O grief and time,
Fearful consumers, you will all devour.

FIRST QUEEN

O I hope some god,
Some god hath put his mercy in your manhood,
Whereto he'll infuse pow'r, and press you forth
Our undertaker.°

THESEUS

O no knees, none, widow,
Unto the helmeted Bellona° use them,
And pray for me your soldier.

Troubled I am. Turns away. [The QUEENS rise.]

SECOND QUEEN

Honored Hippolyta,
Most dreaded Amazonian, that hast slain
The scythe-tusked boar, that with thy arm as strong
As it is white, wast near to make the male
To thy sex captive, but that this thy lord,
Born to uphold creation in that honor
First Nature 'stilled it in,° shrunk thee into
The bound° thou wast o'erflowing, at once subduing
Thy force and thy affection; soldieress,
That equally canst poise° sternness with pity,
Whom° now I know hast much more power on him
Than ever he had on thee, who ow'st° his strength
And his love too, who is a servant for
The tenor of thy speech;° dear glass of° ladies,
Bid him that we whom flaming war doth scorch
Under the shadow of his sword may cool us;
Require him he advance it o'er our heads;
Speak't in a woman's key, like such a woman
As any of us three; weep ere you fail;
Lend us a knee;
But° touch the ground for us no longer time
Than a dove's motion when the head's plucked off;
Tell him if he i' th' blood-sized° field lay swoll'n,
Showing the sun his teeth, grinning at the moon,
What you would do.

HIPPOLYTA

Poor lady, say no more.
I had as lief trace° this good action with you
As that whereto I am going, and never yet
Went I so willing way.° My lord is taken Heart-deep with your distress. Let him consider.
I'll speak anon.

THIRD QUEEN (Kneel[s] to EMILIA.) O my petition was Set down in ice, which by hot grief uncandied°

Melts into drops, so sorrow wanting form
Is pressed with deeper matter.°

EMILIA

Pray stand up,
Your grief is written in your cheek.

THIRD QUEEN

O woe,

You cannot read it there; there through my tears,°
Like wrinkled pebbles in a glassy stream
You may behold 'em.° Lady, lady, alack!
He that will all the treasure know o' th' earth
Must know the center° too; he that will fish
For my least minnow, let him lead his line°
To catch one at my heart. O pardon me,
Extremity that sharpens sundry wits
Makes me a fool. [She rises.]

EMILIA

Pray you say nothing, pray you.
Who cannot feel nor see the rain, being in't,
Knows neither wet nor dry. If that you were
The ground-piece° of some painter, I would buy you
T' instruct me 'gainst a capital grief indeed
Such heart-pierced° demonstration.° But alas,
Being a natural sister of our sex,°
Your sorrow beats so ardently upon me
That it shall make a counter-reflect° 'gainst
My brother's heart, and warm it to some pity
Though it were made of stone. Pray have good comfort.

THESEUS

Forward to th' temple, leave not out a jot
O' th' sacred ceremony.

FIRST QUEEN

O this celebration
Will long last, and be more costly than
Your suppliants' war. Remember that your fame
Knolls in the ear o' th' world; what you do quickly
Is not done rashly; your first thought is more
Than others' labored meditative,° your premeditating
More than their actions. But O Jove, your actions,
Soon as they move, as ospreys do the fish,°
Subdue before they touch. Think, dear duke, think What beds our slain kings have.

SECOND QUEEN

What griefs our beds
That our dear lords have none.

THIRD QUEEN

None fit for th' dead.
Those that with cords, knives, drams' precipitance,°
Weary of this world's light, have to themselves
Been death's most horrid agents, human grace°
Affords them dust and shadow.°

FIRST QUEEN

But our lords
Lie blist'ring 'for the visitating° sun,
And were good kings when living.

THESEUS

It is true,
And I will give you comfort, to give° your dead lords graves.

The which to do, must make some work with Creon.

FIRST QUEEN

And that work presents itself to th' doing.°

68 Nemean hide Hercules customarily wore the hide of the lion of Nemea, which he had slain 73-74 press . . . undertaker impel you to champion our cause 75 Bellona goddess of war 83 'stilled it in instilled in it 84 bound limit, as bank of a river 86 equally canst poise canst justly balance 87 Whom usual in seventeenth century before a parenthetical clause 88 ow'st possesseth 89-90 who . . . speech who is obedient to everything you say 90 glass of mirror for (as in "mirror for magistrates," etc.) 97 But only 99 blood-sized spread with blood 102 trace pursue 104 so willing way any way so willingly 106-09 O . . . matter i.e., the formality of her previous speech (lines 29-34) now melts into tears, but grief in its formlessness can receive the imprint of a "deeper matter" (in this instance the desire for funeral rites and vengeance) 107 uncandied dissolved

111 there . . . tears i.e., in her eyes 113 'em i.e., her eyes, where her grief is imaged 115 center i.e., of the earth 116 lead his line weight it with lead 122 ground-piece flat representation (?) 124 heart-pierced heart-piercing; demonstration i.e., your demonstration of grief would instruct me how to bear any great grief 125 Being . . . sex since you are a woman like me (but "sister" may be the right reading: see A Note on the Text) 127 counter-reflect reflection 136 meditation meditation, planning 138 ospreys . . . fish the osprey was believed to fascinate the fish before catching it 142 drams' precipitance suicide by taking poison 144 grave mercy 145 shadow shelter 146 visitating inflicting harm (?) 148 to give by giving 150 presents . . . doing offers itself to be done at once

Now 'twill take form,° the heats are gone tomorrow.
 Then bootless toil must recompense itself
 With its own sweat. Now he's secure,°
 Not dreams we stand before your puissance,
 Rinsing our holy begging in our eyes
 To make petition clear. 155
 SECOND QUEEN Now you may take him,
 Drunk with his victory.
 THIRD QUEEN And his army full
 Of bread° and sloth.
 THESEUS Artesius, that best knowest
 How to draw out° fit to this enterprise
 The prim'st for this proceeding, and the number
 To carry° such a business, forth and levy 160
 Our worthiest instruments, whilst we dispatch
 This grand act of our life, this daring deed
 Of fate° in wedlock.
 FIRST QUEEN Dowagers, take hands,
 Let us be widows to our woes,° delay
 Commends us to a famishing hope. 165
 ALL [QUEENS] Farewell.
 SECOND QUEEN
 We come unseasonably, but when could grief
 Cull forth,° as unpanged° judgment can, fitt'st time
 For best solicitation?
 THESEUS Why, good ladies,
 This is a service whereto I am going
 Greater than any was; it more imports me
 Than all the actions that I have foregone°
 Or futurely° can cope.
 FIRST QUEEN The more proclaiming
 Our suit shall be neglected. When her arms,
 Able to lock Jove from a synod,° shall 175
 By warranting° moonlight corslet thee, O when
 Her twining cherries shall their sweetness fall°
 Upon thy tasteful° lips, what wilt thou think
 Of rotten kings or blubbered queens, what care
 For what thou feel'st not, what thou feel'st being able 180
 To make Mars spurn his drum? O if thou couch
 But one night with her, every hour in't will Take hostage of thee for a hundred,° and Thou shalt remember nothing more than what
 That banquet bids thee to.
 HIPPOLYTA [Kneels.] Though much unlike 185
 You should be so transported, as much sorry
 I should be such a suitor;° yet I think,
 Did I not by th' abstaining of my joy,
 Which breeds a deeper longing, cure their surfeit
 That craves a present med'cine, I should pluck 190
 All ladies' scandal° on me. Therefore, sir,
 As I shall here make trial of my pray'rs,
 Either presuming them to have some force

Or sentencing for aye their vigor dumb,°
 Prorogue° this business we are going about, and hang 195
 Your shield afore your heart, about that neck
 Which is my fee,° and which I freely lend
 To do these poor queens service.
 ALL QUEENS [To EMILIA.] O help now,
 Our cause cries for your knee.
 EMILIA [Kneels.] If you grant not
 My sister her petition in that force,° 200
 With that celerity and nature which
 She makes it in,° from henceforth I'll not dare
 To ask you anything, nor be so hardy°
 Ever to take a husband.
 THESEUS Pray stand up.
 [HIPPOLYTA and EMILIA rise.]
 I am entreating of myself to do 205
 That which you kneel to have me. Pirithous, Lead on the bride; get you and pray the gods
 For success, and return; omit not anything
 In the pretended° celebration. Queens,
 Follow your soldier, as before.° [To ARTESIUS.] Hence 210
 you,
 And at the banks of Aulis° meet us with
 The forces you can raise, where we shall find
 The moiety of a number for a business
 More bigger-looking.° [Exit ARTESIUS.]
 Since that our theme is haste,
 I stamp this kiss upon thy current° lip. 215
 Sweet, keep it as my token. [Kisses HIPPOLYTA.] Set you forward,
 For I will see you gone.
 [HIPPOLYTA, EMILIA, PIRITHOUS, and ATTEND
 ANTS begin to move] towards the temple.
 Farewell, my beauteous sister. Pirithous,
 Keep the feast full,° bate not an hour on't.
 PIRITHOUS Sir, 220
 I'll follow you at heels. The feast's solemnity
 Shall want° till your return.
 THESEUS Cousin, I charge you
 Budge not from Athens. We shall be returning
 Ere you can end this feast, of which I pray you Make no abatement. Once more, farewell all.
 [The procession enters the temple.]
 FIRST QUEEN
 Thus dost thou still make good the tongue o' th'
 world.° 225
 SECOND QUEEN
 And earn'st a deity equal with Mars.

151 form shape 153 secure confident 158 bread food, feasting
 159 draw out select 161 carry carry out 163-64 daring
 . . . fate deed challenging fate 165 be . . . woes live with out woes like widows (as we are) 168 Cull forth choose;
 unpanged untormented 172 foregone previously experienced 173 futurely in the future 175 synod council 176 warranting authorizing 177 fall let fall 178 tasteful tasting 183 Take . . . hundred i.e., you will feel committed to spend a hundred more with her 185-87 Though . . .
 suitor my reluctance to ask this is as great as my doubt that you would be so moved by our love-making 191 scandal disgrace

194 sentencing . . . dumb declaring that they shall never be uttered again 195 Prorogue postpone 197 fee property 200 in that force with that vigor 201-02 nature . . . it in condition of mind in which she makes it 203 hardy bold 209 pretended intended 210 as before as I have already declared myself 211 banks of Aulis see A Note on the Text:
 Aulis was a seaport, but "banks" could refer to the shore; however, this was an odd way to proceed from Athens to Thebes 212-14 where . . . bigger-looking while I shall gather the other half of a force that would serve for a larger undertaking than this 215 current fleeting (transferred from Theseus, who is in haste), with a suggestion also of putting his royal stamp on her lip as on a coin 219 full fully 221 want be incomplete 225 make . . . world justify what the world says of you

THIRD QUEEN

If not above him, for
Thou being but mortal makest affections bend
To godlike honors.° They themselves,° some say,
Groan under such a mast'ry.°

THESEUS

As we are men,

230

Thus should we do. Being sensually subdued,
We lose our human title.° Good cheer, ladies.
Now turn we towards your comforts.

*Flourish. Exeunt.*Scene II. [Thebes.]Enter PALAMON and ARCITE.

ARCITE

Dear Palamon, dearer in love than blood°
And our prime° cousin, yet° unhardened in
The crimes of nature, let us leave the city
Thebes, and the temptings in't, before we further
Sully our gloss of youth;
And here to keep in abstinence we shame
As in incontinence:° for not to swim
I' th' aid o'° th' current were almost to sink,
At least to frustrate striving;° and to follow
The common stream, 'twould bring us to an eddy
Where we should turn° or drown; if labor through,
Our gain but life and weakness.

PALAMON

Your advice

Is cried up° with example: what strange ruins
Since first we went to school may we perceive Walking in Thebes? Scars and bare weeds
The gain o' th' Martialist,° who did propound
To his bold ends honor and golden ingots,
Which though he won he had not, and now flirted°
By peace for whom he fought: who then shall offer
To Mars's so scorned altar? I do bleed
When such I meet, and wish great Juno would Resume her ancient fit of jealousy°
To get the soldier work, that peace might purge
For her repletion,° and retain° anew
Her charitable heart, now hard and harsher
Than strife or war could be.

ARCITE

Are you not out?°

Meet you no ruin but the soldier in
The cranks and turns° of Thebes? You did begin
As if you met decays of many kinds.

228–29 makest . . . honors turn your natural inclinations toward the winning of divine honors 229 They themselves the gods 230 such a mast'ry i.e., as yours 231–32 Being . . . title By yielding to our senses we lose our claim to be considered men

I.ii.1 blood kinship 2 prime closest; yet as yet 6–7 here . . . incontinence here it is as shameful to abstain from vice as (elsewhere) to indulge in it 8 I' . . . o' with 9 frustrate striving make our efforts useless 11 turn i.e., turn and begin to swim with the current 13 cried up supported 16 Martialist follower of Mars (i.e., soldier) 18 flirted mocked 21–22 Juno . . . jealousy Juno's jealousy was a contributing factor to the Trojan War 23–24 peace . . . repletion a common image: war was seen as a recurrent necessity so that society might "purge" itself of the results of too self-indulgent living: "for" here means "as a remedy for" 24 retain take into service 26 Are . . . out Are you not mistaking the matter? 28 cranks and turns winding streets and passages

Perceive you none that do arouse your pity
But th' unconsidered° soldier?

30

PALAMON

Yes, I pity

Decays where'er I find them, but such most
That sweating in an honorable toil
Are paid with ice° to cool 'em.

ARCITE

'Tis not this

I did begin to speak of: this is virtue
Of no respect in Thebes. I spake of Thebes,
How dangerous if we will keep our honors
It is for our residing, where every evil
Hath a good color,° where every seeming good's
A certain evil, where not to be ev'n jump°
As they° are, here were to be° strangers, and Such things to be,° mere° monsters.

35

40

PALAMON

'Tis in our power

(Unless we fear that apes can tutor's) to
Be masters of our manners. What need I
Affect° another's gait, which is not catching
Where there is faith, or to be fond upon
Another's way of speech, when by mine own
I may be reasonably conceived°—saved too,
Speaking it truly?° Why am I bound
By any generous bond° to follow him
Follows his tailor,° haply so long until
The followed make pursuit?° Or let me know
Why mine own barber is unblest, with him
My poor chin too, for° 'tis not scissored just
To such a favorite's glass.° What canon° is there
That does command my rapier from my hip
To dangle't in my hand, or to go tiptoe
Before the street be foul?° Either I am
The fore-horse in the team, or I am none
That draw i' th' sequent trace.° These poor slight sores
Need not a plantain.° That which rips my bosom
Almost to th' heart's—

45

50

55

60

ARCITE

Our uncle Creon.

PALAMON

He,

A most unbounded tyrant, whose successes
Makes heaven unfear'd, and villainy assured
Beyond its power there's nothing; almost puts Faith in a fever, and deifies alone
Volatile° chance; who° only attributes
The faculties of other instruments
To his own nerves and act;° commands men service,

65

31 unconsidered neglected 34 Are . . . ice i.e., are treated coolly (ironically appropriate, because they have been sweating) 39 color appearance 40 jump exactly 41 they the Thebans; were to be would be 42 Such . . . be to be such things as they (the Thebans) are; mere absolute 45 Affect imitate 48 conceived understood 49 Speaking it truly i.e., if I speak the truth 50 generous bond nobleman's obligation 50–51 follow . . . tailor imitate a man who takes instruction about conduct from his tailor 51–52 until . . . pursuit until the tailor, not having been paid, pursues his client to dun him 54 for because 54–55 just . . . glass exactly in the fashion affected by such-and-such a favored person 55 canon law (particularly divine or ecclesiastical law) 57–58 go . . . foul suggestive either of a mincing gait or of a way of walking so as to avoid noise, for purposes of surprise attack 58–60 Either . . . trace Either I shall lead or I shall refuse to be one that merely follows (the image being from a team of horses) 61 plantain the leaves of the plantain herb were much used for treating wounds, stanching blood, etc. 67 Voluble inconstant; who the "tyrant" of line 63 67–69 who . . . act who takes what his subjects do as his own achievement

And what they win in't, boot° and glory; one
That fears not to do harm; good, dares not.° Let
The blood of mine that's sib° to him be sucked
From me with leeches, let them break and fall
Off me with that corruption.

ARCITE Clear-spirited° cousin,
Let's leave his court, that we may nothing share
Of his loud infamy; for our milk
Will relish of the pasture,° and we must
Be vile or disobedient, not his kinsmen
In blood unless in quality.°

PALAMON Nothing truer.
I think the echoes of his shames have deafed
The ears of heav'nly justice: widows' cries
Descend again into their throats, and have not Due audience of° the gods.

Enter VALERIUS.

Valerius!

VALERIUS
The king calls for you; yet be leaden-footed°
Till his great rage be off him. Phoebus, when He broke his whipstock° and exclaimed against
The horses of the sun, but whispered to°
The loudness of his fury.

PALAMON Small winds shake him,
But what's the matter?°

VALERIUS
Theseus, who where he threats appalls, hath sent Deadly defiance to him and pronounces
Ruin to Thebes, who is at hand to seal
The promise of his wrath.°

ARCITE Let him approach.
But that we fear the gods in him,° he brings not
A jot of terror to us. Yet what° man
Thirds° his own worth (the case is each of ours)
When that his action's dregged,° with mind assured
'Tis bad he goes about.

PALAMON Leave that unreasoned.°
Our services stand now for Thebes, not Creon.
Yet to be neutral to him were dishonor,
Rebellious to oppose: therefore we must
With him stand to the mercy of our Fate,
Who hath bounded our last minute.°

ARCITE So we must.
Is't said this war's afoot, or it shall be
On fail of some condition?°

VALERIUS 'Tis in motion:

70 boot profit, booty 71 good, dares not dares not do good 72 sib related 74 Clear-spirited noble-spirited 76-77 our . . . pasture what we produce will be affected by our environment 78-79 not . . . quality we must not hold the position of members of his family unless we are like him in character 83 Due audience of fitting attention from 84 be leaden-footed do not hasten 86 whipstock here, whip 87 to in comparison with 89 the matter the cause of disturbance 92-93 seal . . . wrath confirm what his angry words have spoken 94 fear . . . him fear him as an emissary of the gods 95 what here equivalent to "every" 96 Thirds reduces to a third of its former strength 97 dregged accompanied by dross matter 98 unreasoned unspoken, not argued about 103 Who . . . minute who has already settled the time when our lives end 105 On . . . condition if stated terms of peace are not agreed to 70 The intelligence of state came in the instant

With the defier.°

PALAMON Let's to the king, who were he
A quarter carrier of that honor which
His enemy come in, the blood we venture
Should be as for our health, which were not spent, 110
Rather laid out for purchase.° But alas,
Our hands advanced before our hearts,° what will
The fall o' th' stroke do damage?

ARCITE Let th' event,°
That never erring arbitrator, tell us
When we know all ourselves, and let us follow 115
The becking of our chance. Exeunt.

Scene III. [Athens.]

Enter PIRITHOUS, HIPPOLYTA, EMILIA.

PIRITHOUS
No further.

85 HIPPOLYTA Sir, farewell. Repeat my wishes
To our great lord, of whose success I dare not Make any timorous question, yet I wish him
Excess and overflow of power, and't might be
To dure° ill-dealing Fortune. Speed° to him: 5
Store never hurts good governors.°

PIRITHOUS Though I know
His ocean needs not my poor drops, yet they Must yield their tribute there. [To EMILIA.] My precious maid,
Those best affections° that the heavens infuse
In their best-tempered pieces,° keep enthroned 10
In your dear heart.

95 EMILIA Thanks, sir. Remember me
To our all-royal brother, for whose speed°
The great Bellona I'll solicit; and Since in our terrene° state petitions are not Without gifts understood, I'll offer to her 15
What I shall be advised° she likes: our hearts
Are in his army, in his tent.

100 HIPPOLYTA In's bosom.
We have been soldiers, and we cannot weep
When our friends don their helms, or put to sea,
Or tell of babes broached on the lance, or women 20
That have sod° their infants in—and after eat them—
The brine they wept at killing 'em.° Then if You stay to see of us such spinsters,° we Should hold you here forever.

PIRITHOUS Peace be to you
As I pursue this war, which shall be then 25
Beyond further requiring.° Exit PIRITHOUS.

106-07 The intelligence . . . defier The news that the war had started came at the same time as the declaration III laid . . . purchase invested for profit 112 Our . . . hearts our hands being engaged rather than our desires 113 event result

I.iii.4-5 and't . . . dure in case it were necessary to undergo 5 Speed hasten 6 Store . . . governors Plenty is never a handicap to good leaders 9 affections inclinations 10 best-tempered pieces most harmoniously wrought creatures 12 speed success 14 terrene earthly 16 shall be advised am told 21 sod boiled 22 brine . . . 'em tears they shed as they killed them 23 spinsters i.e., weak women 25-26 which . . . requiring i.e., peace will be ensured

EMILIA How his longing
Follows his friend! Since his depart,^o his sports,
Though craving seriousness and skill, passed slightly
His careless execution,^o where nor gain
Made him regard, or loss consider, but 30
Playing one business in his hand, another
Directing in his head—his mind nurse equal
To these so diff'ring twins.^o Have you observed him,
Since our great lord departed?

HIPPOLYTA With much labor;^o
And I did love him for't. They two have cabined^o 35
In many as dangerous as poor a corner,
Peril and want contending.^o They have skiffed
Torrents whose roaring tyranny and power
I' th' least of these^o was dreadful; and they have Fought out together where Death's self was lodged, 40
Yet Fate hath brought them off.^o Their knot of love,
Tied, weaved, entangled, with so true, so long,
And with a finger of so deep a cunning,
May be outworn, never undone.^o I think
Theseus cannot be umpire to himself, 45
Cleaving his conscience^o into twain and doing
Each side like^o justice, which he loves best.^o

EMILIA Doubtless
There is a best, and Reason has no manners
To say it is not you.^o I was acquainted
Once with a time when I enjoyed a playfellow. 50
You were at wars, when she the grave enriched
Who made too proud the bed, took leave o' th' moon
(Which then looked pale at parting) when our count^o
Was each eleven.

HIPPOLYTA 'Twas Flavina.

EMILIA Yes.
You talk of Pirithous' and Theseus' love. 55
Theirs has more ground,^o is more maturely seasoned,
More buckled^o with strong judgment, and their needs
The one of th' other may be said to water
Their intertangled roots of love. But I
And she I sigh and spoke of were things innocent, 60
Loved for we did,^o and like the elements
That know not what, nor why, yet do effect
Rare issues by their operance,^o our souls
Did so to one another: what she liked
Was then of me approved, what not condemned— 65
No more arraignment;^o the flow'r that I would pluck

27 depart departure 28–29 passed . . . execution were given only slight and careless attention 32–33 his mind . . . twins i.e., his mind was equally concerned with what he was doing and with what he was imagining (fighting with Theseus) 34 labor attention 35 cabined lodged together 37 contending i.e., being comparable in degree 39 I' . . . these referring either to "Peril and want," line 37, or to "tyranny and power," line 38 41 brought them off brought them to safety 44 May . . . undone may be worn out by death, not unknotted before 45–47 Theseus . . . best even Theseus cannot judge whether he loves best himself or Pirithous 46 conscience consciousness 47 like equal 49 To . . . you Emilia, taking Hippolyta's remark in a different way from that intended, suggests that Theseus must love Hippolyta best of all; lines 95–96 make it less likely that "you" is indefinite, meaning that Theseus must in reason love himself better than his friend 53 our count the number of our years 56 ground foundation 57 buckled supported 61 for we did merely because we did 62–63 effect . . . operance produce strange happenings through their operation 65–66 what . . . arraignment what she did not like was condemned by me, without further consideration of the case

And put between my breasts, O then but beginning
To swell about the blossom, she would long
Till she had such another, and commit it
To the like innocent cradle, where phoenixlike 70
They died in perfume;^o on my head no toy^o
But was her pattern;^o her affections^o—pretty
Though happily her careless were^o—I followed
For my most serious decking;^o had mine ear
Stol'n some new air, or at adventure hummed on 75
From musical coinage,^o why, it was a note
Whereon her spirits would sojourn, rather dwell on,
And sing it in her slumbers. This rehearsal,^o
Which—every innocent^o wots well—comes in Like old importment's bastard,^o has this end 80
That the true love 'tween maid and maid may be
More than in sex dividual.^o

HIPPOLYTA Y' are out of breath,
And this high-speeded pace is but to say
That you shall never, like the maid Flavina,
Love any that's called man.

EMILIA I am sure I shall not. 85

HIPPOLYTA
Now alack, weak sister,
I must no more believe thee in this point,
Though in't I know thou dost believe thyself,
That I will trust a sickly appetite
That loathes even as it longs. But sure, my sister, 90
If I were ripe for your persuasion, you
Have said enough to shake me from the arm
Of the all-noble Theseus, for whose fortunes
I will now in and kneel, with great assurance
That we, more than his Pirithous, possess 95
The high throne in his heart.

EMILIA I am not against
Your faith, yet I continue mine. Exeunt.

Scene IV. [Thebes.]

Cornets. A battle struck^o within. Then a retreat. Flourish. Then enter THESEUS (victor) [with a HERALD, LORDS, and ATTENDANTS and with PALAMON and ARCITE carried on hearses].^o The three QUEENS meet him, and fall on their faces before him.

FIRST QUEEN

To thee no star be dark!^o

SECOND QUEEN

Both heaven and earth

Friend^o thee forever!

THIRD QUEEN

All the good that may

Be wished upon thy head, I cry "amen" to't!

THESEUS

Th' impartial gods, who from the mounted^o heavens

70–71 phoenixlike . . . perfume referring to the legendary phoenix, from whose fragrant funeral pyre the next phoenix was born 71 toy trifling ornament 72 pattern i.e., for imitation; affections inclinations, preferences 73 Though . . . were though her preferences might be carelessly made 74 decking adornment 75–76 hummed . . . coinage i.e., improvised 78 rehearsal recital 79 innocent child 80 Like . . . bastard like a feeble imitation of the experience itself 81–82 That . . . dividual that their love may be greater than the love of those different in sex

I.iv.s.d. struck sounded; hearses carriages 1 To . . . dark Let all stars be favorable to you 2 Friend befriend 4 mounted high (with a suggestion of the gods on horseback looking down on men as beasts under their control)

View us their mortal herd, behold who err
 And in their time chastise. Go and find out
 The bones of your dead lords, and honor them
 With treble ceremony; rather than a gap
 Should be in their dear° rites, we would supply't.
 But those we will depute which shall invest
 You in your dignities, and even° each thing
 Our haste does leave imperfect. So adieu,
 And heaven's good eyes look on you. Exeunt QUEENS.
 What are those?

HERALD

Men of great quality, as may be judged
 By their appointment.° Some of Thebes have told's
 They are sisters' children, nephews to the king.

THESEUS

By th' helm of Mars, I saw them in the war,
 Like to a pair of lions smeared with prey,
 Make lanes in troops aghast. I fixed my note°
 Constantly on them, for they were a mark Worth a god's view. What prisoner was't that told me°

When I enquired their names?

HERALD

We 'lieve° they're called

Arcite and Palamon.

THESEUS

'Tis right: those, those;

They are not dead?

HERALD

Nor in a state of life: had they been taken
 When their last hurts were given, 'twas possible
 They might have been recovered. Yet they breathe
 And have the name of men.°

THESEUS

Then like men use 'em.

The very lees of such—millions of rates°—
 Exceed the wine of others. All our surgeons
 Convent° in their behoof, our richest balms,
 Rather than niggard, waste. Their lives concern us Much more than Thebes is worth. Rather than have
 'em

Freed of this plight and in their morning state,°
 Sound and at liberty, I would 'em dead,°
 But forty-thousandfold we had rather have 'em
 Prisoners to us than Death.° Bear 'em speedily
 From our kind air, to them unkind,° and minister
 What man to man may do—for our sake more,
 Since I have known frights, fury, friends' behests,
 Love's provocations, zeal, a mistress' task,
 Desire of liberty, a fever, madness,
 Hath set a mark which Nature could not reach to Without some imposition—sickness in will O'er-wrestling strength in reason.° For our love
 And great Apollo's° mercy, all our best

9 dear valued 11 even make right 15 appointment accouterment 19 fixed my note directed my attention 21 What . . . me i.e., what was it that a prisoner told me 22 'lieve believe 28 have . . . men can still be called men 29 millions of rates millions of times 31 Convent summon 34 in . . . state as they were this morning 35 would 'em dead would rather they were dead 37 Death i.e., prisoners to Death 38 kind . . . unkind i.e., the open air is healthy to us but not to them 40–45 Since . . . reason i.e., since I have known cases where unusual physical or emotional disturbance has produced results that Nature could not produce without some special stimulus ("imposition"), this disturbance being able to overcome what could be reasonably expected 46 Apollo as god of healing

5 Their best skill tender.° Lead into the city,
 Where, having bound things scattered, we will post
 To Athens 'fore our army. Flourish. Exeunt.

Scene V. [Thebes.]

Music. Enter the QUEENS with the hearses of their knights, in a funeral solemnity, &c.

[Song.]

Urns and odors bring away,°
 Vapors, sighs, darken the day;
 Our dole more deadly looks than dying:
 Balms and gums° and heavy cheers,°
 Sacred vials filled with tears,
 And clamors through the wild air flying.

Come, all sad and solemn shows
 That are quick-eyed Pleasure's foes:
 We convent° nought else but woes,
 We convent, &c.

THIRD QUEEN [To SECOND QUEEN.]

This funeral path brings° to your household's grave.
 Joy seize on you again. Peace sleep with him.

SECOND QUEEN [To FIRST QUEEN.]

And this to yours.°
 FIRST QUEEN [To THIRD QUEEN.] Yours this way.

Heavens lend°
 A thousand differing ways to one sure end.

THIRD QUEEN

This world's a city full of straying° streets,
 And death's the market place where each one meets.
Exeunt severally.°

ACT II

Scene I. [Athens. A garden with a room in a prison above.]

Enter JAILER and WOOER.

JAILER I may depart with° little while I live: something I may cast to you, not much. Alas, the prison I keep, though it be for great ones, yet they seldom come. Before one salmon you shall take a number of minnows. I am given out to be better lined than it can appear to me report is a true speaker.° I would I were really that I am delivered° to be. Marry,° what I have, be it what it will, I will assure° upon my daughter at the day of my death.

WOOER Sir, I demand no more than your own offer, and I will estate° your daughter in what I have promised.

JAILER Well, we will talk more of this when the solemnity° is passed. But have you a full promise of her?

47 tender minister

I.v.i bring away accompany us 4 gums used for perfume at the funeral rites; heavy cheers sad faces 9 convent summon, bring together 11 brings leads 13 this to yours the Queens now take their different paths home; lend provide 15 straying winding 16 s.d. severally separately II.i.i depart with give 5–6 I . . . speaker I am generally believed to be better off than there seems to me cause for rumor to assert 7 delivered said; Marry indeed 8 assure i.e., bestow 11 estate endow 14 solemnity i.e., wedding

Enter DAUGHTER.

When that shall be seen, I tender my consent.

WOOER I have, sir. Here she comes.

JAILER Your friend and I have chanced to name you here, upon the old business; but no more of that now. So soon as the court-hurry²⁰ is over, we will have an end of it. I' th' meantime look tenderly to the two prisoners. I can tell you they are princes.

DAUGHTER These strewings²⁵ are for their chamber. 'Tis pity they are in prison, and 'twere pity they should be out. I do think they have patience to make any adversity ashamed: the prison itself is proud of 'em, and they have all the world in their chamber.

JAILER They are famed to be a pair of absolute³⁰ men.

DAUGHTER By my troth, I think Fame but stammers 'em: they stand a grize³⁰ above the reach of report.

JAILER I heard them reported in the battle to be the only doers.

DAUGHTER Nay, most likely, for they are noble suff'ers. I marvel how they would have looked had they been victors, that with such a constant nobility³⁵ enforce a freedom out of bondage, making misery their mirth, and affliction a toy to jest at.

JAILER Do they so?

DAUGHTER It seems to me they have no more sense of their captivity than I of ruling Athens. They eat⁴⁰ well, look merrily, discourse of many things, but nothing of their own restraint⁴⁰ and disasters. Yet sometimes a divided⁴⁰ sigh, martyred as 'twere i' th' deliverance, will break from one of them—when the other presently⁴⁵ gives it so sweet a rebuke that I could wish myself a sigh to be so chid, or at least a sigher to be comforted.

WOOER I never saw 'em.

JAILER The duke himself came privately in the night, and so did they: what the reason of it is I know not.

Enter PALAMON and ARCITE above.

Look, yonder they are. That's Arcite looks out.

DAUGHTER No, sir, no! That's Palamon! Arcite is the lower⁵⁰ of the twain. You may perceive a part of him.

JAILER Go to, leave your pointing. They would not make us their object. Out of their sight!

DAUGHTER It is a holiday to look on them. Lord, the diff'rence of men!

Exeunt [JAILER, WOOER, DAUGHTER].

PALAMON

How do you, noble cousin?

ARCITE How do you, sir?

PALAMON

Why, strong enough to laugh at misery, And bear the chance of war. Yet we are prisoners I fear forever, cousin.

ARCITE

I believe it,

And to that destiny have patiently Laid up my hour to come.

PALAMON

O cousin Arcite,

Where is Thebes now? Where is our noble country? Where are our friends, and kindreds? Never more Must we behold those comforts, never see The hardy youths strive for the games of honor, Hung with painted favors of their ladies, Like tall ships under sail; then start amongst 'em And as an east wind leave 'em all behind us, Like lazy clouds, whilst Palamon and Arcite, Even in the wagging of a wanton leg, Outstripped the people's praises, won the garlands Ere they have time to wish 'em ours. O never Shall we two exercise, like twins of Honor, Our arms again, and feel our fiery horses Like proud seas under us! Our good swords now— Better the red-eyed god of war ne'er wore!— Ravished our sides, like age must run to rust And deck the temples of those gods that hate us. These hands shall never draw 'em out like lightning To blast whole armies more.

ARCITE

No, Palamon,

Those hopes are prisoners with us: here we are And here the graces of our youths must wither Like a too timely⁸⁵ spring; here age must find us, And which is heaviest, Palamon, unmarried; The sweet embraces of a loving wife, Loaden with kisses, armed with thousand Cupids, Shall never clasp our necks, no issue⁹⁰ know us, No figures of ourselves shall we e'er see, To glad our age, and like young eagles teach 'em Boldly to gaze against bright arms, and say: "Remember what your fathers were, and conquer." The fair-eyed maids shall weep our banishments, And in their songs curse ever-blinded Fortune Till she for shame see what a wrong she has done To youth and nature. This is all our world: We shall know nothing here but one another, Hear nothing but the clock that tells¹⁰⁰ our woes. The vine shall grow, but we shall never see it; Summer shall come, and with her all delights; But dead-cold winter must inhabit here still.

PALAMON

'Tis too true, Arcite. To our Theban hounds, That shook the agèd forest with their echoes No more now must we halloo, no more shake Our pointed javelins, whilst the angry swine¹⁰⁵ Flies like a Parthian quiver¹⁰⁵ from our rages, Struck with our well-steeled darts. All valiant uses, The food and nourishment of noble minds, In us two here shall perish. We shall die—

20 court-hurry celebrations at court (?) 23 strewings rushes 27 they . . . chamber their nobility makes their chamber into a whole world (?) everyone visits them (?) 28 absolute complete 29–30 Fame . . . 'em i.e., their reputation falls short of their worth 30 grize step 32 only doers unique performers 42 restraint imprisonment 43 divided broken off 45 presently at once 49–50 The duke . . . they i.e., Theseus brought the princes secretly to the prison 53 lower shorter 54–55 They . . . object They would not point at us

63 Laid . . . come i.e., resolved myself 64–65 Where is Thebes . . . kindreds these references to Thebes are very different from those in the princes' conversation of I.ii 72 Even . . . leg as quickly as a leg might be wantonly, or idly, moved 85 too timely too early 89 issue children 92 arms weapons and armor (with an allusion to the eagle's ability to look directly at the sun) 99 tells counts 106 angry swine wild boar 107 Parthian quiver the Parthian bowman was famed for shooting his arrows while retreating: here the fleeing boar, with the arrows stuck in it, is seen as the Parthian's quiver 108 uses customs, practices

Which is the curse of honor—lastly,^o
Children of grief and ignorance.

ARCITE Yet, cousin,
Even from the bottom of these miseries,
From all that Fortune can inflict upon us,
I see two comforts rising, two mere^o blessings,
If the gods please: to hold here a brave patience,
And the enjoying of our griefs together.
Whilst Palamon is with me, let me perish
If I think this our prison.

PALAMON Certainly,
'Tis a main^o goodness, cousin, that our fortunes
Were twined together. 'Tis most true, two souls
Put in two noble bodies, let 'em suffer
The gall of hazard,^o so^o they grow together,
Will never sink; they must not, say^o they could.
A willing man dies sleeping, and all's done.^o

ARCITE
Shall we make worthy uses of this place
That all men hate so much?

PALAMON How, gentle cousin?

ARCITE
Let's think this prison holy sanctuary,
To keep us from corruption of worse men.
We are young and yet desire the ways of honor
That liberty and common conversation,
The poison of pure spirits, might like women
Woo us to wander from. What worthy blessing
Can be but our imaginations
May make it ours? And here being thus together,
We are an endless mine^o to one another;
We are one another's wife, ever begetting
New births of love; we are father, friends, acquaint-tance;
We are in one another families;
I am your heir, and you are mine. This place
Is our inheritance; no hard oppressor
Dare take this from us; here with a little patience
We shall live long, and loving; no surfeits seek us;
The hand of war hurts none here, nor the seas
Swallow their youth. Were we at liberty,
A wife might part us lawfully, or business,
Quarrels consume us, envy of ill men
Crave our acquaintance.^o I might sicken, cousin,
Where you should never know it, and so perish
Without your noble hand to close mine eyes,
Or prayers to the gods. A thousand chances,
Were we from hence, would sever us.

PALAMON You have made me—
I thank you, cousin Arcite—almost wanton^o
With my captivity. What a misery
It is to live abroad, and everywhere!
'Tis like a beast, methinks. I find the court here,
I am sure a more content,^o and all those pleasures
That woo the wills of men to vanity

I see through now, and am sufficient^o
To tell the world 'tis but a gaudy shadow 160
That old Time, as he passes by, takes with him.
What had we been old^o in the court of Creon,
Where sin is justice, lust and ignorance
The virtues of the great ones! Cousin Arcite,
Had not the loving gods found this place for us, 165
We had died as they do, ill old men, unwept,
And had their epitaphs, the people's curses.
Shall I say more?

ARCITE I would hear you still.

120 PALAMON Ye shall.
Is there record of any two that loved
Better than we do, Arcite?

ARCITE Sure there cannot. 170

PALAMON
125 I do not think it possible our friendship
Should ever leave us.

ARCITE Till our deaths it cannot,

Enter EMILIA and her WOMEN [below].

And after death our spirits shall be led
To those that love eternally.^o Speak on, sir.

130 [PALAMON sees EMILIA.]

EMILIA
This garden has a world of pleasures in't. 175
What flow'r is this?

WOMAN 'Tis called Narcissus, madam.

135 EMILIA
That was a fair boy certain, but a fool
To love himself:^o were there not maids enough?

ARCITE
Pray, forward.^o

PALAMON Yes.

140 EMILIA Or were they all hard-hearted?

WOMAN
They could not be to one so fair.

EMILIA Thou wouldst not. 180

145 WOMAN
I think I should not, madam.
EMILIA That's a good wench;
But take heed to your kindness, though.

WOMAN Why, madam?

150 EMILIA
Men are mad things.
ARCITE Will ye go forward, cousin?

EMILIA
Canst not thou work such flowers in silk, wench?

WOMAN Yes.

155 EMILIA
I'll have a gown full of 'em and of these. 185
This is a pretty color, will't not do
Rarely upon a skirt, wench?

WOMAN Dainty, madam.

ARCITE
Cousin, cousin, how do you, sir? Why, Palamon!

III lastly three syllables 115 mere pure 120 main principal 123 gall of hazard bitterness of misadventure; so provided that 124 say even if 125 A . . . done A man resigned to his fate dies as gently as falling asleep (but the tone of this line is not resigned) 136 mine source of wealth 148 Crave our acquaintance i.e., contaminate by impact on us (editors have variously emended—e.g., to "Grave" = bury, "Cleave" = separate) 153 wanton i.e., delighted 157 a more content
i.e., a court more contented than the real one

159 sufficient able 162 What . . . old what if we had been old (editors have emended to "What had we been, old . . .") 173–74 our . . . eternally our souls shall be with famous lovers in Elysium 176–78 Narcissus . . . himself Narcissus fell in love with his own reflection in water, and drowned in trying to embrace it 179 forward i.e., continue

PALAMON

Never till now I was in prison, Arcite.

ARCITE

Why, what's the matter, man?

PALAMON

Behold, and wonder. 190

By heaven, she is a goddess.

ARCITE

[Seeing EMILIA.] Ha!

PALAMON

Do reverence.

She is a goddess, Arcite.

EMILIA

Of all flow'rs

Methinks a rose is best.

WOMAN

Why, gentle madam?

EMILIA

It is the very emblem of a maid.

For when the west wind courts her gently°

How modestly she blows,° and paints° the sun

With her chaste blushes! When the north comes near her,

Rude and impatient, then like chastity

She locks her beauties in her bud again,

And leaves him to base briers.°

WOMAN

Yet, good madam, 200

Sometimes her modesty will blow so far

She falls for't:° a maid,

If she have any honor, would be loath

To take example by her.

EMILIA

Thou art wanton.

ARCITE

She is wondrous fair.

PALAMON

She is all the beauty extant.° 205

EMILIA

The sun grows high, let's walk in. Keep these flowers:

We'll see how mere art can come near their colors.

I am wondrous merry-hearted, I could laugh now.

WOMAN

I could lie down,° I am sure.

EMILIA

And take one with you?°

WOMAN

That's as we bargain,° madam.

EMILIA

Well, agree° then. 210

Exeunt EMILIA and WOMAN.

PALAMON

What think you of this beauty?

ARCITE

'Tis a rare one.

PALAMON

Is't but a rare one?

ARCITE

Yes, a matchless beauty.

PALAMON

Might not a man well lose himself and love her?

ARCITE

I cannot tell what you have done. I have.

Beshrew mine eyes for't, now I feel my shackles. 215

PALAMON

You love her, then?

ARCITE

Who would not?

PALAMON

And desire her?

ARCITE

Before my liberty.

PALAMON

I saw her first.

ARCITE

That's nothing.

PALAMON

But it shall be.

ARCITE

I saw her too.

PALAMON

Yes, but you must not love her.

ARCITE

I will not as you do, to worship her,

As she is heavenly and a blessed goddess:

I love her as a woman, to enjoy her.

So both may love.

PALAMON

You shall not love at all.

ARCITE

Not love at all?

Who shall deny me? 225

PALAMON

I that first saw her, I that took possession

First with mine eye of all those beauties

In her revealed to mankind. If thou lov'st her,

Or entertain'st a hope to blast my wishes,

Thou art a traitor, Arcite, and a fellow°

False as thy title to her. Friendship, blood,°

And all the ties between us I disclaim

If thou once think upon her.

ARCITE

Yes, I love her,

And if the lives of all my name° lay on it,

I must do so, I love her with my soul.

If that will lose ye,° farewell, Palamon:

I say again, I love, and in loving her maintain

I am as worthy and as free a lover

And have as just a title to her beauty

As any Palamon or any living

That is a man's son. 240

PALAMON

Have I called thee friend?

ARCITE

Yes, and have found me so; why are you moved thus?

Let me deal coldly° with you: am not I

Part of your blood, part of your soul? You have told

me

That I was Palamon and you were Arcite. 245

PALAMON

Yes.

ARCITE Am not I liable to those affections,°

Those joys, griefs, angers, fears, my friend shall suffer?

PALAMON

Ye may be.

ARCITE

Why then would you deal so cunningly,

So strangely, so unlike a noble kinsman,

To love alone? Speak truly, do you think me

Unworthy of her sight? 250

PALAMON

No, but unjust,

If thou pursue that sight.

ARCITE

Because another

First sees the enemy, shall I stand still

And let mine honor down, and never charge?

PALAMON

Yes, if he be but one.

195 gently three syllables 196 blows opens into flower; paints gives an image of 200 leaves . . . briers leaves only base briers for him 202 for't as a result of it 205 extant in existence 208-09 laugh . . . down the Woman turns Emilia's merriment into an allusion to the proverb "Laugh and lie down" 209 And . . . you i.e., lie down with a (male) companion 210 bargain, agree come to terms

230 fellow often used contemptuously at this time 231 blood kinship 234 name family 236 lose ye make me lose you 243 coldly rationally 246 affections emotions

ARCITE But say that one
Had rather combat me? 255

PALAMON Let that one say so,
And use thy freedom; else if thou pursuest her,
Be as that cursèd man that hates his country,
A branded villain.

ARCITE You are mad.

PALAMON I must be,
Till thou art worthy, Arcite: it concerns me.^o 260
And in this madness if I hazard thee^o
And take thy life, I deal but truly.

ARCITE Fie, sir.
You play the child extremely. I will love her,
I must, I ought to do so, and I dare,
And all this justly.

PALAMON O that now, that now 265
Thy false self and thy friend had but this fortune
To be one hour at liberty, and grasp
Our good swords in our hands, I would quickly teach
thee
What 'twere to filch affection from another.
Thou art baser in it than a cutpurse. 270
Put but thy head out of this window more,
And as I have a soul, I'll nail thy life to't.

ARCITE
Thou dar'st not, fool, thou canst not, thou art feeble.
Put my head out? I'll throw my body out,
And leap^o the garden, when I see her next 275
Enter JAILER [above].
And pitch^o between her arms to anger thee.

PALAMON
No more; the keeper's coming; I shall live
To knock thy brains out with my shackles.

ARCITE Do.

JAILER
By your leave, gentlemen.

PALAMON Now, honest keeper?

JAILER
Lord Arcite, you must presently^o to th' duke; 280
The cause I know not yet.

ARCITE I am ready, keeper.

JAILER
Prince Palamon, I must awhile bereave you
Of your fair cousin's company.
Exeunt ARCITE and JAILER.

PALAMON And me too,
Even when you please, of life. Why is he sent for?
It may be he shall marry her, he's goodly,^o 285
And like enough the duke hath taken notice
Both of his blood and body. But his falsehood—
Why should a friend be treacherous? If that Get him a wife so noble and so fair,
Let honest men ne'er love again. Once more 290
I would but see this fair one. Blessed garden,
And fruit, and flowers more blessed that still^o blossom
As her bright eyes shine on ye! Would I were
For^o all the fortune of my life hereafter

Yon little tree, yon blooming apricock! 295
How I would spread, and fling my wanton arms
In at her window! I would bring her fruit
Fit for the gods to feed on; youth and pleasure
Still as she tasted should be doubled on her,
And if she be not heavenly I would make her 300
So near the gods in nature, they should fear her.

Enter JAILER [above].
And then I am sure she would love me. How now,
keeper,
Where's Arcite?

JAILER Banished. Prince Pirithous
Obtained his liberty; but never more
Upon his oath and life must he set foot 305
Upon this kingdom.

PALAMON [Aside.] He's a blessed man,
He shall see Thebes again, and call to arms
The bold young men, that when he bids 'em charge
Fall on like fire. Arcite shall have a fortune,^o
If he dare make himself a worthy lover, 310
Yet in the field to strike a battle^o for her,
And if he lose her then, he's a cold coward.
How bravely may he bear himself to win her
If he be noble Arcite! Thousand ways.^o 315
Were I at liberty, I would do things
Of such a virtuous greatness that this lady,
This blushing virgin, should take manhood to her
And seek to ravish me.

JAILER My lord, for you
I have this charge too.

PALAMON To discharge my life?

JAILER
No, but from this place to remove your lordship: 320
The windows are too open.^o

PALAMON Devils take 'em
That are so envious^o to me! Prithee kill me.

JAILER
And hang for't afterward.

PALAMON By this good light,
Had I a sword I would kill thee.

JAILER Why, my lord?

PALAMON
Thou bring'st such pelting^o scurvy news continually 325
Thou art not worthy life. I will not go.

JAILER
Indeed you must, my lord.

PALAMON May I see the garden?

JAILER
No.

PALAMON Then I am resolved, I will not go.

JAILER
I must constrain you then; and for you are dangerous,
I'll clap more irons on you. 290

PALAMON Do, good keeper. 330
I'll shake 'em so, ye shall not sleep,
I'll make ye a new morris.^o Must I go?

260 it concerns me It is of importance to me 261 hazard thee put your life in danger (?) risk losing your friendship (?) 275 leap leap down into 276 pitch plant myself 280 presently immediately 285 goodly handsome 292 still ever 294 For in exchange for

309 a fortune a chance 311 strike a battle sound a call to battle 316 Thousand ways i.e., there are a thousand ways in which he may show himself brave 321 open easy to escape from 322 envious malicious 325 pelting paltry, contemptible 332 make . . . morris dance a new morris dance for you (in which bells would jingle on the dancer's coat)

JAILER

There is no remedy.

PALAMON

Farewell, kind window.

May rude wind never hurt thee. O my lady,

If ever thou hast felt what sorrow was,

Dream how I suffer. Come; now bury me.

*Exeunt PALAMON and JAILER.*Scene II. [The open country.]Enter ARCITE.

ARCITE

Banished the kingdom! 'Tis a benefit,

A mercy I must thank 'em for; but banished

The free enjoying of that face I die for,

O 'twas a studied punishment, a death

Beyond imagination! Such a vengeance

That, were I old and wicked, all my sins

Could never pluck upon me. Palamon,

Thou has the start now, thou shalt stay and see

Her bright eyes break each morning 'gainst thy window,

And let in life into thee; thou shalt feed

Upon the sweetness of a noble beauty

That Nature ne'er exceeded, nor ne'er shall.

Good gods! What happiness has Palamon!

Twenty to one, he'll come to speak to her,

And if she be as gentle as she's fair,

I know she's his: he has a tongue will tame

Tempests, and make the wild rocks wanton. Come what can come,

The worst is death. I will not leave the kingdom.

I know mine own° is but a heap of ruins,

And no redress there. If I go, he has her.

I am resolved another shape° shall make me,°

Or end my fortunes. Either way I am happy:

I'll see her and be near her, or no more.

Enter four COUNTRY PEOPLE, and one with a garland before them.

FIRST COUNTRYMAN

My masters, I'll be there, that's certain.

SECOND COUNTRYMAN

And I'll be there.

THIRD COUNTRYMAN

And I.

FOURTH COUNTRYMAN

Why, then, have with ye,° boys. 'Tis but a chiding.°

Let the plough play today; I'll tickle't out

Of the jades'° tails tomorrow.

FIRST COUNTRYMAN

I am sure

To have my wife as jealous as a turkey,

But that's all one.° I'll go through,° let her mumble.

SECOND COUNTRYMAN

Clap her aboard° tomorrow night, and stow° her,

And all's made up again.

II.ii.19 mine own Thebes 21 another shape a disguise;
make me bring good fortune to me 27 have with ye i.e., I'll be there too; 'Tis . . . chiding The worst that can happen is a chiding 29 jades' nags' 31 that's all one that's a matter of indifference; go through i.e., go through with it 32 Clap her aboard board her (as a conquered ship); stow fill the hold with cargo (continuing the metaphor)

THIRD COUNTRYMAN Aye, do but put

A fescue in her fist,° and you shall see her

Take a new lesson out° and be a good wench. 35

Do we all hold,° against° the Maying?

335 FOURTH COUNTRYMAN

Hold?

What should ail us?°

THIRD COUNTRYMAN Arcas will be there.

SECOND COUNTRYMAN

And Sennois

And Rycas, and three better lads ne'er danced

Under green tree; and ye know what wenches, ha?

But will the dainty dominie,° the schoolmaster, 40

Keep touch,° do you think? For he does all,° ye know.

THIRD COUNTRYMAN

He'll eat a hornbook° ere he fail. Go to,

The matter's too far driven between

Him and the tanner's daughter to let slip now,°

And she must see the duke, and she must dance too. 45

5 FOURTH COUNTRYMAN

Shall we be lusty!°

SECOND COUNTRYMAN [Dances.]

All the boys in Athens

Blow wind i' th' breech on's,° and here I'll be

And there I'll be, for our town, and here again

10 And there again! Ha, boys, hey for the weavers!° 50

FIRST COUNTRYMAN

This must be done i' th' woods.

FOURTH COUNTRYMAN O pardon me.°

SECOND COUNTRYMAN

15 By any means.° Our thing of learning° says so,

Where he himself will edify the duke

Most parlously° in our behalfs. He's excellent i' th'
woods;

Bring him to th' plains,° his learning makes no cry.° 55

THIRD COUNTRYMAN

We'll see the sports, then every man to's tackle.°

And, sweet companions, let's rehearse by any means

Before the ladies see us, and do sweetly,°

And God knows what may come on't.

FOURTH COUNTRYMAN

Content;

The sports once ended, we'll perform. Away, boys, and hold!° 60ARCITE [Comes forward.]By your leaves, honest friends. Pray you, whither go you?

25

33-34 put . . . fist a "fescue" was a small stick, etc., which a teacher used as a pointer; here it indicates a penis, the idea being "give her something to point with" 35 Take . . .
 out learn a new lesson (continuing the metaphor) 36 hold hold to our purposes; against in regard to 37 ail us make us incapable 40 dainty dominie fine schoolmaster 41
Keep touch hold to his word; does all i.e., is indispensable 42 hornbook sheet of paper protected by a sheet of transparent horn, used in teaching the alphabet, etc. 43-44 The matter's
 . . . now i.e., their love affair cannot fail to lead to marriage 46 lusty vigorous 47-48 All . . . on's i.e., all the boys in Athens are supporting us (literally, are helping us to dance by blowing us from the ground) 50 hey . . . weavers the Second Countryman, like Bottom, is a weaver and will dance in honor of his craft 51 pardon me indicating dissent 52
By any means in any case; Our . . . learning i.e., the Schoolmaster 54 parlously amazingly 54-55 He's . . .
 plains a double-entendre is fairly obvious, implying that the Schoolmaster is better in the earlier than in the later stages of sexual activity 55 makes no cry wins no applause (and, continuing the metaphor, he will not make a girl cry out) 56 every . . . tackle let every man keep his engagement 58 sweetly delectably 60 hold hold to your purposes

FOURTH COUNTRYMAN

Whither? Why, what a question's that!

ARCITE

Yes, 'tis a question to me that know not.

THIRD COUNTRYMAN

To the games, my friend.

SECOND COUNTRYMAN

Where were you bred you know it not?

ARCITE

Not far, sir. 65

Are there such games today?

FIRST COUNTRYMAN

Yes, marry are there,

And such as you never saw. The duke himself

Will be in person there.

ARCITE

What pastimes are they?

SECOND COUNTRYMAN

Wrestling and running. [Aside.] 'Tis a pretty fellow.

THIRD COUNTRYMAN

Thou wilt not go along?

ARCITE

Not yet, sir.

FOURTH COUNTRYMAN

Well, sir, 70

Take your own time. Come, boys.

FIRST COUNTRYMAN

My mind misgives me.

This fellow has a vengeance° trick o' th' hip:

Mark how his body's made for't.°

SECOND COUNTRYMAN

I'll be hanged, though,

If he dare venture. Hang him! Plum porridge,°

He wrestle? He roast eggs!° Come, let's be gone, lads. 75

Exeunt [the] four [COUNTRYMEN].

ARCITE

This is an offered opportunity

I durst not wish for. Well, I could have wrestled,°

The best men called it excellent, and run

Swifter than wind upon a field of corn,

Curling the wealthy ears, never flew.° I'll venture, 80

And in some poor disguise be there. Who knows

Whether my brows may not be girt with garlands,

And happiness° prefer me to a place

Where I may ever dwell in sight of her?

*Exit ARCITE.*Scene III. [The prison.]Enter Jailer's DAUGHTER alone.

DAUGHTER

Why should I love this gentleman? 'Tis odds

He never will affect° me; I am base,°

My father the mean keeper of his prison,

And he a prince; to marry him is hopeless,

To be his whore is witless. Out upon't, 5

What pushes° are we wenches driven to

When fifteen once has found us!° First I saw him:

72 vengeance confounded 73 for't i.e., for wrestling 74 Plum porridge dish made of plums thickened with barley, etc. (here used as a term of contempt for one not likely to excel in wrestling) 75 He roast eggs i.e., he would be more capable of cooking an egg 77 could have wrestled used to be able to wrestle 79–80 Swifter . . . flew swifter than wind . . . ever flew (the illogical negative "never" was idiomatic in the seventeenth century, but editors have frequently emended) 83 happiness good fortune II.iii.2 affect love; base of low birth 6 pushes shifts 7 When . . . us when we have reached the age of fifteen

I, seeing, thought he was a goodly man:

He has as much to please a woman in him,

If he please to bestow it so, as ever 10

These eyes yet looked on. Next, I pitied him,

And so would any young wench o' my conscience

That ever dreamed, or vowed her maidenhead

To a young handsome man. Then I loved him,

Extremely loved him, infinitely loved him. 15

And yet he had a cousin, fair as he too.

But in my heart was Palamon, and there,

Lord, what a coil he keeps!° To hear him

Sing in an evening, what a heaven it is!

And yet his songs are sad ones. Fairer spoken 20

Was never gentleman. When I come in

To bring him water in a morning, first

He bows his noble body, then salutes me thus:

"Fair, gentle maid, good-morrow, may thy goodness

Get thee a happy husband." Once he kissed me. 25

I loved my lips the better ten days after—

Would he would do so ev'ry day! He grieves much,

And me as much to see his misery.

What should I do to make him know I love him,

For I would fain enjoy him? Say I ventured 30

To set him free? What says the law then? Thus much

For law, or kindred!° I will do it,

And this night, or tomorrow, he shall love me. *Exit.*Scene IV. [At the games.]

Short flourish of cornets,° and shouts within. Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, PIRITHOUS, EMILIA, ARCITE [disguised] with a garland, &c.

THESEUS

You have done worthily. I have not seen,

Since Hercules, a man of tougher sinews.

Whate'er you are, you run the best and wrestle

That these times can allow.°

ARCITE

I am proud to please you.

THESEUS

What country bred you?

ARCITE

This; but far off, prince. 5

THESEUS

Are you a gentleman?

ARCITE

My father said so,

And to those gentle uses gave me life.°

THESEUS

Are you his heir?

ARCITE

His youngest, sir.

THESEUS

Your father

Sure is a happy sire, then. What proves you?°

ARCITE

A little of all noble qualities:° 10

I could have kept° a hawk, and well have halloo'd

18 coil he keeps disturbance he makes 31–32 Thus . . . kindred we can imagine her clicking her fingers, thus filling out line 32

II.iv.s.d. cornets hunting horns 4 allow acknowledge, praise 7 to . . . life brought me up to practice such noble customs 9 What proves you What can you show for yourself? 10 qualities abilities 11 could have kept was able to keep

To me, and to my father. Yet I hope,
When he considers more, this love of mine
Will take more root within him. Let him do
What he will with me, so he use me kindly,
For use me so he shall, or I'll proclaim him, 30
And to his face, no man.° I'll presently°
Provide him necessities, and pack my clothes up,
And where there is a path of ground° I'll venture,
So° he be with me. By him, like a shadow,
I'll ever dwell. Within this hour the hubbub 35
Will be all o'er the prison: I am then Kissing the man they look for. Farewell, father;
Get many more such prisoners, and such daughters,
And shortly you may keep yourself.° Now to him.
[Exit.]

Scene I. [The open country.]

ARCITE
The duke has lost Hippolyta; each took
A several° laund.° This is a solemn rite
They owe bloomed May, and the Athenians pay it
To th' heart of ceremony.° O Queen Emilia,
Fresher than May, sweeter 5
Than her gold buttons° on the boughs or all
Th' enameled knacks° o' th' mead or garden—yea,
We challenge too the bank of any nymph
That makes the stream seem flowers!° Thou, O jewel
O' th' wood, o' th' world, hast likewise° blest a place 10
With thy sole presence, in thy rumination,°
That I, poor man, might eftsoons° come between
And chop on some cold thought.° Thrice blessed chance
To drop on° such a mistress, expectation
Most guiltless on't!° Tell me, O lady Fortune, 15
Next after Emily my sovereign, how far
I may be proud. She takes strong note of° me,
Hath made me near her;° and this beauteous morn,
The prim'st° of all the year, presents me with
A brace of horses: two such steeds might well 20

Be by a pair of kings backed, in a field
That their crowns' titles tried.° Alas, alas,
Poor cousin Palamon, poor prisoner, thou
So little dream'st upon my fortune that
Thou think'st thyself the happier thing, to be 25
So near Emilia! Me thou deem'st at Thebes,
And therein wretched, although free. But if Thou knew'st my mistress breathed on me, and that I eared° her language, lived in her eye°—O coz,°
What passion would enclose thee!°

PALAMON

Traitor kinsman,

Thou shouldst perceive my passion, if these signs
Of prisonment were off me, and this hand
But owner of a sword. By all oaths in one,
I and the justice of my love would make thee
A confessed traitor, O thou most perfidious
That ever gently^o looked, the void'st of honor
That e'er bore gentle token!^o Falsest cousin
That ever blood made kin, call'st thou her thine?
I'll prove it in my shackles, with these hands
Void of appointment,^o that thou liest, and art
A very thief in love, a chaffy^o lord,
Nor worth the name of villain—had I a sword,
And these house-clogs^o away.

PALAMON
Cozener Arcite, give me language such
As thou hast showed me feat.°

ARCITE
Not finding in 45
The circuit of my breast any gross stuff
To form me like your blazon,° holds me to
This gentleness of answer: 'tis your passion
That thus mistakes, the which to you being enemy
Cannot to me be kind;° honor and honesty 50
I cherish, and depend on, howsoe'er
You skip° them in me, and with them, fair coz,
I'll maintain my proceedings. Pray be pleased
To show in generous° terms your griefs,° since that
Your question's° with your equal, who professes 55
To clear his own way,° with the mind and sword
Of a true gentleman.

ARCITE
My coz, my coz, you have been well advertised°
How much I dare. Y' have seen me use my sword

III.i.s.d. hallooing cries of people calling to each other from a distance, or urging dogs in the chase 2 several different; laund open space among woods (obsolete form of lawn) 4 To . . . ceremony most ceremoniously 6 buttons buds 7 enameled knacks trifles of various colors 8-9 bank . . . flowers i.e., by the stream reflecting the flowers on its bank 10 likewise like the "nymph" of line 8 11 in thy rumination as you meditate there 12 eftsoons quickly 12-13 come . . . thought "chop" was a hunting term meaning to seize prey before it was away from cover: here the idea is apparently that Arcite hopes merely to come into Emilia's chaste ("cold") thoughts 14 drop on come upon 14-15 expectation . . . on't i.e., without at all expecting it 17 takes . . . of observes closely 18 made . . . her made me attend on her 19 prim'st supreme

Against th' advice° of fear. Sure° of another 60
You would not hear me doubted, but your silence
Should break out, though i' th' sanctuary.°

PALAMON Sir,
I have seen you move in such a place° which well
Might justify your manhood: you were called A good knight and a bold. But the whole week's not fair 65

If any day it rain. Their valiant temper°
Men lose when they incline° to treachery,
And then they fight like compelled° bears, would fly
Were they not tied.

ARCITE Kinsman, you might as well
Speak this and act it in your glass, as to 70
His ear which now disdains you.

PALAMON Come up to me,
Quit me of these cold gyves,° give me a sword,
Though it be rusty, and the charity
Of one meal lend me. Come before me then,
A good sword in thy hand, and do but say 75
That Emily is thine, I will forgive
The trespass thou hast done me, yea my life
If then thou carry't;° and brave souls in shades
That have died manly, which will seek of me
Some news from earth, they shall get none but this, 80
That thou art brave and noble.

ARCITE Be content.
Again betake you to your hawthorn house.°
With counsel of the night,° I will be here
With wholesome viands. These impediments°
Will I file off. You shall have garments, and 85
Perfumes to kill the smell o' th' prison. After,
When you shall stretch yourself and say but "Arcite,
I am in plight,"° there shall be at your choice
Both sword and armor.

PALAMON O you heavens, dares any 90
So noble bear° a guilty business? None
But only Arcite. Therefore none but Arcite
In this kind is so bold.

ARCITE Sweet Palamon!

PALAMON I do embrace you and your offer. For Your offer do't I only, sir. Your person Without hypocrisy I may not wish 95
Wind horns off.

More than my sword's edge on't.

ARCITE You hear the horns.
Enter your musit° lest this match between's
Be crossed ere met.° Give me your hand. Farewell.
I'll bring you every needful thing. I pray you Take comfort and be strong.

PALAMON Pray hold your promise, 100

60 advice warning; Sure surely 62 i' th' sanctuary in a church, but also with the suggestion of breaking out of "sanctuary" (a place of safety) for the sake of righting his friend 63 in . . . place in battle or tournament 66 temper character 67 incline yield 68 compelled i.e., in bear-baiting (stressed on first syllable here) 72 gyves fetters 78 If . . . carry't if you then kill me 82 hawthorn house shelter in the hawthorn bush 83 With . . . night with only night as my confidant 84 These impediments Palamon's shackles 88 in plight in good condition, ready 90 bear carry out 97 musit gap in a hedge through which a hare, etc., might pass when hunted 98 crossed ere met prevented before begun

And do the deed with a bent brow°—most certain
You love me not; be rough with me, and pour
This oil° out of your language. By this air,
I could for each word give a cuff,° my stomach°
Not reconciled by reason.

ARCITE Plainly spoken, 105
Yet pardon me hard language.° When I spur
Wind horns.

My horse, I chide him not. Content and anger
In me have but one face.° Hark, sir, they call
The scattered to the banquet:° you must guess
I have an office° there.

PALAMON Sir, your attendance 110
Cannot please heaven, and I know your office
Unjustly is achieved.°

ARCITE If a good title°—
I am persuaded this question, sick between's,
By bleeding must be cured.° I am a suitor
That to your sword you will bequeath this plea,° 115
And talk of it no more.

PALAMON But this one word:
You are going now to gaze upon my mistress,
For, note you, mine she is.

ARCITE Nay, then.

PALAMON Nay, pray you, 120
You talk of feeding me to breed me strength.
You are going now to look upon a sun
That strengthens what it looks on: there you have
A vantage o'er me, but enjoy't till
I may enforce my remedy. Farewell.

Exeunt [severally].

Scene II. [The open country.]

Enter Jailer's DAUGHTER alone.

DAUGHTER
He has mistook the brake° I meant, is gone
After his fancy.° 'Tis now well nigh morning.
No matter, would it were perpetual night,
And darkness lord o' th' world. Hark! 'Tis a wolf!
In me hath grief slain fear, and but for one thing 5
I care for nothing, and that's Palamon.
I reckon not if the wolves would jaw me, so
He had this file. What if I halloo'd for him?
I cannot halloo. If I whooped, what then?
If he not answered, I should call a wolf 10
And do him but that service.° I have heard Strange howls this live-long night: why may't not be
They have made prey of him? He has no weapons,
He cannot run, the jingling of his gyves

101 with . . . brow sternly 103 oil courtesy, gentleness 104 cuff blow; stomach anger 106 pardon . . . language allow me not to use hostile language 108 one face the same outward manifestation 109 banquet light repast, as for a hunting party 110 office duty to perform 112 Unjustly is achieved has been unfairly won; If . . . title either Arcite interrupts himself or, as some editors have done, we should emend "If" to "I've" 113-14 this . . . cured Arcite sees the quarrel as a sick person standing between them: they must cure the sickness by letting blood from it 115 plea lawsuit III.ii.1 brake thicket 2 After his fancy where his fancy has led him 11 do . . . service i.e., (ironically) bring a wolf to him

Might call fell^o things to listen, who have in them 15
 A sense to know a man unarmed, and can Smell where resistance^o is. I'll set it down^o
 He's torn to pieces: they howled many together
 And then they fed on him. So much for that;
 Be bold to ring the bell.^o How stand I then? 20
 All's chared^o when he is gone. No, no, I lie.
 My father's to be hanged for his escape,
 Myself to beg, if I prized life so much
 As to deny my act, but that I would not,
 Should I try death by dozens.^o I am moped:^o 25
 Food took I none these two days,
 Sipped some water. I have not closed mine eyes
 Save when my lids scoured off their brine.^o Alas,
 Dissolve my life, let not my sense unsettle,
 Lest I should drown, or stab, or hang myself. 30
 O state of nature,^o fail together^o in me,
 Since thy best props are warped! So which way now?
 The best way is the next^o way to a grave:
 Each errant step beside^o is torment. Lo,
 The moon is down, the crickets chirp, the screech-owl 35
 Calls in^o the dawn. All offices^o are done
 Save what I fail in. But the point is this:
 An end, and that is all.^o Exit.

Scene III. [The open country.]

Enter ARCITE with meat, wine, and files.

ARCITE
 I should be near the place. Ho, cousin Palamon!

Enter PALAMON.

PALAMON
 Arcite?

ARCITE The same. I have brought you food and files.
 Come forth and fear not; here's no Theseus.

PALAMON
 Nor none so honest, Arcite.

ARCITE That's no matter,
 We'll argue that hereafter. Come, take courage, 5
 You shall not die thus beastly;^o here, sir, drink,
 I know you are faint; then I'll talk further with you.

PALAMON
 Arcite, thou mightst now poison me.

ARCITE I might;
 But I must^o fear you first. Sit down, and good now,^o
 No more of these vain parleys: let us not, 10
 Having our ancient reputation with us,
 Make talk for fools and cowards.^o To your health, &c.

15 fell savage 17 resistance the power to resist; set it down take it as settled 20 ring the bell i.e., toll the bell for his death
21 All's chared all tasks are ended 25 Should . . . dozens should I have to die many times or in many ways; moped bewildered, numbed 28 when . . . brine when I closed them to get rid of my tears 31 state of nature condition of being alive; together altogether 33 next nearest 34 Each . . . beside i.e., each step that does not lead directly to my grave 36 Calls in summons (the owl, doing duty for the cock, indicates the upside-downness of her world); offices tasks 38 An end . . . all i.e., only death is to come

III.iii.6 thus beastly in your present beastlike condition 9 must should have to; good now please 12 Make . . . cowards give matter for fools and cowards to talk about

[He drinks.]

PALAMON

Do.^o

ARCITE Pray sit down then, and let me entreat you,
 By all the honesty and honor in you,
 No mention of this woman, 'twill disturb us; 15
 We shall have time enough.

PALAMON Well, sir, I'll pledge you.

[He drinks.]

ARCITE

Drink a good hearty draught, it breeds good blood,
 man.

Do not you feel it thaw you?

PALAMON Stay, I'll tell you

After a draught or two more.

ARCITE Spare it not,

The duke has more, coz. Eat now.

PALAMON Yes. [He eats.]

ARCITE I am glad 20

You have so good a stomach.^o

PALAMON I am gladder

I have so good meat to't.

ARCITE Is't not mad^o lodging

Here in the wild woods, cousin?

PALAMON Yes, for them

That have wild^o consciences.

ARCITE How tastes your victuals?

Your hunger needs no sauce, I see.

PALAMON Not much. 25

But if it did, yours^o is too tart. Sweet cousin,
 What is this?

ARCITE Venison.

PALAMON 'Tis a lusty^o meat.

Give me more wine. [ARCITE gives him the wine.]

Here, Arcite, to the wenches

We have known in our days. The Lord Steward's
 daughter,

Do you remember her? [He offers the wine to ARCITE.]

ARCITE After you, coz. 30

PALAMON

She loved a black-haired man.

ARCITE She did so. Well, sir?

PALAMON

And I have heard some call him Arcite, and—

ARCITE

Out with't, 'faith.

PALAMON She met him in an arbor:

What did she there, coz? Play o' th' virginals?^o

ARCITE

Something she did, sir.

PALAMON Made her groan a month for't; 35

Or two, or three, or ten.^o

ARCITE The Marshal's sister

Had her share too, as I remember, cousin,

Else there be tales^o abroad. You'll pledge her?

PALAMON Yes.

13 Do i.e., do drink 21 stomach appetite 22 mad fantastic 24 wild disordered 26 yours i.e., the sauce you bring in your words and presence 27 lusty hearty, invigorating 34 Play . . . virginals "virginals" was the name of a small instrument like a spinet; here punningly used with reference to sexual intercourse 35-36 groan . . . ten Palamon leads archly to the idea of gestation 38 tales false reports

[He drinks.]

ARCITE

A pretty brown wench 'tis. There was a time
When young men went a-hunting—and a wood, 40
And a broad beech, and thereby hangs a tale,
Heigh ho!

PALAMON For Emily, upon my life! Fool,

Away with this strained mirth! I say again
That sigh was breathed for Emily. Base cousin, Dar'st thou break° first?

ARCITE You are wide.°

PALAMON By heaven and earth, 45
There's nothing in thee honest.

ARCITE Then I'll leave you:

You are a beast° now.

PALAMON As thou mak'st me, traitor.

ARCITE

There's all things needful: files and shirts and perfumes.
I'll come again some two hours hence, and bring
That that shall quiet all.

PALAMON A sword and armor? 50

ARCITE

Fear me not; you are now too foul;° farewell.
Get off your trinkets,° you shall want nought.

PALAMON Sirrah°—

ARCITE

I'll hear no more. Exit.

PALAMON If he keep touch,° he dies for't. Exit.

Scene IV. [The open country.]

Enter Jailer's DAUGHTER.

DAUGHTER

I am very cold, and all the stars are out too,
The little stars and all, that look like aglets.°
The sun has seen my folly. Palamon!
Alas, no, he's in heaven. Where am I now?
Yonder's the sea, and there's a ship: how't tumbles, 5
And there's a rock lies watching under water;
Now, now, it beats upon it;° now, now, now!
There's a leak sprung, a sound° one; how they cry!
Spoon° her before the wind, you'll lose all else!
Up with a course° or two, and tack about,° boys! 10 Good night, good night, y' are gone. I am very hungry.
Would I could find a fine frog; he would tell me
News from all parts o' th' world; then would I make
A carack° of a cockleshell, and sail
By east and north-east to the King of Pigmies, 15
For he tells fortunes rarely. Now my father
Twenty to one is trussed up in a trice°
Tomorrow morning. I'll say never a word.

45 break break our agreement not to refer to Emilia (but also with a suggestion of emotion breaking out); wide wide of the mark 47 beast i.e., not fit for conversation 51 foul unwashed, etc. 52 trinkets i.e., shackles; Sirrah contemptuous form of address 53 keep touch keep his promise

III.iv.2 aglets jewels used as hair ornaments and for tags to laces 7 it beats upon it i.e., the ship strikes the rock 8 sound great 9 Spoon scud 10 course sail attached to the lower yards of a ship; tack about change direction 14 carack ship of large burden 17 trussed . . . trice hanged immediately

(Sing[s].)

For I'll cut my green coat, a foot above my knee,
And I'll clip my yellow locks, an inch below mine eye. 20

Hey, nonny, nonny, nonny!

He's° buy me a white cut,° forth for to ride,
And I'll go seek him, through the world that is so wide.

Hey, nonny, nonny, nonny!

O for a prick now like a nightingale, 25
To put my breast against!° I shall sleep like a top else.

Exit.

Scene V. [The open country.]

Enter a SCHOOLMASTER, four COUNTRYMEN and BAVIAN,° five WENCHES, with a TABORER.°

SCHOOLMASTER

Fie, fie,
What tediousity and disensanitiy°
Is here among ye? Have my rudiments
Been labored so long with ye, milked unto ye,
And, by a figure,° even the very plumbroth° 5
And marrow of my understanding laid upon ye?
And do you still cry "where" and "how" and "wherefore"?

You most coarse frieze° capacities, ye jean° judgments,
Have I said "thus let be," and "there let be,"

And "then let be," and no man understand me? 10

Proh deum, medius fidius,° ye are all dunces!

For why, here stand I. Here the duke comes; there are
you

Close° in the thicket; the duke appears; I meet him

And unto him I utter learned things, 15

And many figures; he hears, and nods, and hums,

And then cries "Rare!," and I go forward; at length

I fling my cap up—mark there—then do you,

As once did Meleager and the boar,°

Break comely° out before him—like true lovers,°

Cast yourselves in a body° decently, 20

And sweetly, by a figure, trace and turn,° boys.

FIRST COUNTRYMAN

And sweetly we will do it, Master Gerald.

SECOND COUNTRYMAN

Draw up the company. Where's the taborer?

THIRD COUNTRYMAN

Why, Timothy!

TABORER

Here, my mad boys, have at ye!°

SCHOOLMASTER

But, I say, where's their women?

22 He's vulgar form of "He'll"; cut laboring horse, so called because either with docked tail or gelded 25–26 prick . . . against alluding to the common belief that the nightingale presses against a thorn in order to stay awake and sing

III.v.s.d. Bavian the fool in the morris dance (the word signifying either "driveler" or "baboon"; Taborer one who plays a small drum 2 disensanitiy insanity ("dis-" here being intensive) 5 figure i.e., of speech; plumbroth as "plum porridge," II.ii.74 8 frieze rough woollen cloth; jean a kind of fustian (also spelled jane) 11 Proh . . . fidius O God, most certainly 13 Close secretly 18 Meleager . . . boar alluding to Meleager's killing the Calydonian boar, and his bringing the boar's head to Atalanta 19 comely fittingly; lovers i.e., of Theseus 20 Cast . . . body arrange yourselves in a group for the dance 21 trace and turn dance and revolve 24 have at ye i.e., I am ready for you

FOURTH COUNTRYMAN Here's Friz and Maudlin. 25

SECOND COUNTRYMAN

And little Luce with the white legs, and bouncing° Barbary.

FIRST COUNTRYMAN

And freckled Nell, that never failed her master.°

SCHOOLMASTER

Where be your ribands, maids? Swim° with your bodies,

And carry it° sweetly and deliverly,°

And now and than a favor,° and a frisk.° 30

NELL

Let us alone,° sir.

SCHOOLMASTER Where's the rest o' th' music?°

THIRD COUNTRYMAN

Dispersed° as you commanded.

SCHOOLMASTER

Couple° then,

And see what's wanting. Where's the Bavian?

My friend, carry your tail without offense

Or scandal to the ladies; and be sure 35

You tumble with audacity, and manhood,

And when you bark do it with judgment.

BAVIAN

Yes, sir.

SCHOOLMASTER

Quo usque tandem?° Here is a woman wanting.°

FOURTH COUNTRYMAN

We may go whistle.° All the fat's i' th' fire.

SCHOOLMASTER

We have, 40

As learnèd authors utter, washed a tile,°

We have been fatuus,° and labored vainly.

SECOND COUNTRYMAN

This is that scornful piece,° that scurvy hilding,°

That gave her promise faithfully she would be here,

Cicely the sempster's° daughter. 45

The next gloves that I give her shall be dogskin.

Nay, and° she fail me once! You can tell, Arcas,°

She swore by wine and bread she would not break.°

SCHOOLMASTER

An eel and woman,

A learnèd poet says,° unless by th' tail 50

And with thy teeth thou hold, will either° fail.

In manners this was false position.°

FIRST COUNTRYMAN

A fire ill° take her! Does she flinch now?

THIRD COUNTRYMAN

What

Shall we determine,° sir?

26 bouncing large of body 27 that . . . master i.e., did whatever he wanted of her 28 Swim move flowingly 29 carry it i.e., perform the dance; deliverly nimbly 30 favor presumably a kiss; frisk caper 31 Let us alone Leave it to us; music musicians 32 Dispersed i.e., scattered in arranged places; Couple take your partners 38 Quo usque tandem how long now; wanting missing 39 We . . . whistle We have occupied ourselves to no purpose 41 washed a tile labored in vain (Latin laterem lavare) 42 fatuus foolish 43 piece creature; hilding good-for-nothing 45 sempster's probably here = sempstress's 47 and if; Arcas the name of one of the Countrymen: cf. II.ii.37 48 break break her word 50 learnèd poet no one has identified the "poet," if he existed; but Fletcher used the proverb in other plays 51 either both 52 position statement of a proposition, affirmation (the Schoolmaster means that Cicely's breaking her word was the equivalent in manners to the stating of a false proposition in logic) 53 fire ill perhaps equivalent to "pox," or "ill" may be adverbial 54 determine decide to do

SCHOOLMASTER Nothing.

Our business is become a nullity, 55

Yea, and a woeful, and a piteous nullity.

FOURTH COUNTRYMAN

Now when the credit of our town lay on it,

Now to be frampel,° now to piss o' th' nettle!°

Go thy ways, I'll remember thee, I'll fit thee!°

Enter Jailer's DAUGHTER.

DAUGHTER [Sings.]

The George Alow° came from the south, 60

From the coast of Barbary-a,

And there he met with brave gallants of war,

By one, by two, by three-a.

Well hailed, well hailed, you jolly gallants,

And whither now are you bound-a? 65

O let me have your company

Till we come to the sound-a.

There was three fools fell out about an owlet.

The one said it was an owl;

The other he said nay; 70

The third he said it was a hawk,

And her bells° were cut away.

THIRD COUNTRYMAN

There's a dainty° mad woman, master,

Comes i' th' nick,° as mad as a march hare.

If we can get her dance, we are made again:° 75

I warrant her, she'll do the rarest° gambols.

40

FIRST COUNTRYMAN

A mad woman? We are made, boys.

SCHOOLMASTER

And are you mad, good woman?

DAUGHTER

I would be sorry else.

Give me your hand. 45

SCHOOLMASTER Why?

DAUGHTER

I can tell your fortune.

You are a fool. Tell ten. I have posed him.° Buzz.° 80

Friend, you must eat no white bread; if you do,

Your teeth will bleed extremely. Shall we dance, ho?

I know you, y' are a tinker: sirrah tinker, 50

Stop no more holes but what you should.°

SCHOOLMASTER

Dii boni!°

A tinker, damsel?

DAUGHTER

Or a conjuror. 85

Raise me a devil now, and let him play

Qui passa,° o' th' bells and bones.°

SCHOOLMASTER

Go take her,

And fluently° persuade her to a peace.

58 frampel peevish, froward; piss . . . nettle give herself occasion to show bad temper 59 fit thee punish you as you deserve 60 George Alow this was the name of a ship in a ballad published in 1611 72 bells used on a hawk for ease in tracing it 73 dainty fine 74 i' th' nick i.e., just when we need her 75 we . . . again our fortune is once more secure 76 rarest finest 80 Tell . . . him counting on one's fingers was a common method of testing idiocy; the Jailer's Daughter decides the Schoolmaster cannot pass the test; Buzz exclamation commanding silence 84 Stop . . . should alluding to the proverb "A tinker stops one hole and makes others"; but with an obvious double meaning here; Dii boni Good gods! 87 Qui passa the song "Chi passa per questa strada"; bells and bones similar to Bottom's "the tongs and the bones," A Midsummer Night's Dream, IV.i.30: "bones" were bone clappers held between the fingers 88 fluently quickly

Et opus exegi, quod nec Iovis ira, nec ignis.^o
 Strike up,^o and lead her in.^o
 SECOND COUNTRYMAN Come, lass, let's trip it. 90
 DAUGHTER
 I'll lead.
 THIRD COUNTRYMAN Do, do.
 SCHOOLMASTER Persuasively, and cunningly!^o
Wind horns.
 Away, boys! I hear the horns.
 Give me some meditation,^o and mark your cue.
Exeunt all but SCHOOLMASTER.
 Pallas^o inspire me!
Enter THESEUS, PIRITHOUS, HIPPOLYTA, EMILIA,
ARCITE, and TRAIN. [A chair and stools are brought out.]^o
 THESEUS This way the stag took.
 SCHOOLMASTER
 Stay, and edify!^o
 THESEUS What have we here? 95
 PIRITHOUS
 Some country sport, upon my life, sir.
 THESEUS
 Well, sir, go forward, we will edify.
 Ladies, sit down; we'll stay it.^o
[They sit.]
 SCHOOLMASTER
 Thou doughty duke, all hail! All hail, sweet ladies!
 THESEUS
 This is a cold beginning.^o 100
 SCHOOLMASTER
 If you but favor, our country pastime made is.
 We are a few of those collected here
 That ruder tongues distinguish^o villager.
 And to say verity, and not to fable,
 We are a merry rout, or else a rabble
 Or company, or by a figure Chorus,^o
 That 'fore thy dignity will dance a morris.
 And I that am the rectifier^o of all,
 By title Pedagogus, that let fall
 The birch upon the breeches of the small ones,
 And humble with a ferula^o the tall ones,
 Do here present this machine,^o or this frame;^o
 And dainty duke, whose doughty dismal fame
 From Dis to Daedalus,^o from post to pillar^o

89 Et . . . ignis I have achieved something which neither Jove's anger nor fire . . . (from Ovid's Metamorphoses, xv. 871, where it reads "Jamque opus . . . nec ignes") 90 Strike up begin the music; in offstage, into the thicket where the dancers will wait 91 cunningly skillfully 93 meditation time for meditation (?) attention (?) 94 Pallas as goddess of learning 94 s.d. A chair . . . out see A Note on the Text for III.v.65-67 95 edify the Schoolmaster's English for "profit mentally," "be edified" 98 stay it wait here for it 100 cold beginning deliberately taking "hail" for a reference to the weather 103 distinguish classify 106 by . . . Chorus the Schoolmaster's "figure" allows him to compare the morris dancers with the chorus of a classical play 108 rectifier pedant's word for "director" 111 ferula cane 112 machine structure, device (stressed on first syllable); frame contrivance 114 Dis to Daedalus Dis was the Greek god of the underworld, Daedalus the maker of the Labyrinth in Crete; the Schoolmaster's use of learning is indiscriminate; from . . . pillar from one resource to another (the Schoolmaster is desperate for a rhyme)

Is blown abroad, help me, thy poor well-willer, 115
 And with thy twinkling eyes look right and straight
 Upon this mighty "Morr," of mickle weight;
 "Is" now comes in—which being glued together
 Makes "Morris,"^o and the cause that we came hither,
 The body of our sport of no small study. 120
 I first appear, though rude, and raw, and muddy,
 To speak before thy noble grace this tenor,^o
 At whose great feet I offer up my penner;^o
 The next^o the Lord of May, and Lady bright,
 The Chambermaid and Servingman by night 125
 That seek out silent hanging;^o then mine Host
 And his fat Spouse, that welcomes to their^o cost
 The gallèd^o Traveler, and with a beck'ning
 Informs the Tapster to inflame the reck'ning;
 Then the beest-eating^o Clown, and next the Fool, 130
 The Bavian with long tail, and eke long tool,^o
 Cum multis aliis^o that make a dance.
 Say "Aye," and all shall presently advance.
 THESEUS
 Aye, aye, by any means, dear dominie.
 PIRITHOUS Produce.^o
 SCHOOLMASTER
 Intrate, filii!^o Come forth and foot it. 135
Knock.^o Enter the DANCE. Music. [They] dance.
 Ladies, if we have been merry
 And have pleased ye with a derry,
 And a derry, and a down,
 Say the Schoolmaster's no Clown.
 Duke, if we have pleased thee too 140
 And have done as good boys should do,
 Give us but a tree or twain
 For a maypole, and again,
 Ere another year run out,
 We'll make thee laugh and all this rout.^o 145
 105 THESEUS
 Take twenty, dominie. [To HIPPOLYTA.] How does my sweetheart?
 HIPPOLYTA
 Never so pleased, sir.
 110 EMILIA 'Twas an excellent dance,
 And for a preface I never heard a better.
 THESEUS
 Schoolmaster, I thank you. One see 'em all rewarded.
 PIRITHOUS [Gives money.]
 And here's something to paint your pole withal. 150
 THESEUS
 Now to our sports again.

117-19 Morr . . . Morris perhaps the Schoolmaster holds up two boards in turn, with the syllables "Morr" and "is" on them, and then puts them together; but the first board could show a picture of a Moor 122 tenor properly, the wording of a document; drift 123 penner pen case (offered as a token of his services to Theseus) 124 next i.e., next to appear 126 seek . . . hanging i.e., seek out a curtain or tapestry behind which they can make love 127 their perhaps plural because "Traveler" is so understood 128 gallèd distressed 130 beest-eating probably indicates the Clown's partiality for "beest," the milk of a cow soon after calving, used in making puddings 131 tool sexual organ 132 Cum multis aliis with many others 134 Produce bring forth 135 Intrate, filii Enter, my sons! 135 s.d. Knock the Schoolmaster gives a signal for the entry; but see A Note on the Text, p. 1623 145 rout company

SCHOOLMASTER

May the stag thou hunt'st stand° long,
 And thy dogs be swift and strong,
 May they kill him without lets,°
 And the ladies eat his dowsets!°

Wind horns.

[To the DANCERS.]

Come, we are all made. Dii deaeque omnes!°
 Ye have danced rarely, wenches. Exeunt.

Scene VI. [The open country.]

Enter PALAMON from the bush.

PALAMON

About this hour my cousin gave his faith
 To visit me again, and with him bring
 Two swords and two good armors: if he fail,
 He's neither man nor soldier. When he left me,
 I did not think a week could have restored
 My lost strength to me, I was grown so low
 And crestfall'n with my wants. I thank thee, Arcite,
 Thou art yet a fair foe, and I feel myself,
 With this refreshing, able once again
 To outdure° danger. To delay it longer
 Would make the world think when it comes to hearing
 That I lay fatting like a swine to fight,°
 And not a soldier. Therefore this blest morning
 Shall be the last; and that sword he refuses,°
 If it but hold,° I kill him with: 'tis justice.
 So love and fortune for me!

Enter ARCITE with armors and swords.

O good-morrow!

ARCITE

Good-morrow, noble kinsman.

PALAMON

I have put you

To too much pains, sir.

ARCITE

That too much, fair cousin,

Is but a debt to honor, and my duty.

PALAMON

Would you were so in all, sir! I could wish ye
 As kind a kinsman as you force me find
 A beneficial foe, that my embraces
 Might thank ye, not my blows.

ARCITE

I shall think either,

Well done, a noble recompense.

PALAMON

Then I shall quit° you.

ARCITE

Defy me in these fair terms, and you show°
 More than a mistress to me. No more anger,
 As you love anything that's honorable!
 We were not bred° to talk, man. When we are armed
 And both upon our guards, then let our fury,
 Like meeting of two tides, fly strongly from us,

And then to whom the birthright° of this beauty
 Truly pertains—without upbraidings, scorns,
 Despisings of our persons, and such poutings
 Fitter for girls and schoolboys—will be seen,
 And quickly, yours or mine. Will't please you arm,
 sir?

Or if you feel yourself not fitting yet
 And furnished with your old strength, I'll stay,° cousin,
 And ev'ry day discourse you into health,
 As I am spared.° Your person I am friends with,
 And I could wish I had not said I loved her,
 Though I had died.° But loving such a lady
 And justifying° my love, I must not fly from't.

PALAMON

Arcite, thou art so brave an enemy
 That no man but thy cousin's fit to kill thee.
 I am well and lusty.° Choose your arms.

ARCITE

Choose you, sir.

PALAMON

Wilt thou exceed in all, or dost thou do it
 To make me spare thee?

ARCITE

If you think so, cousin,

You are deceived, for as I am a soldier
 I will not spare you.

PALAMON

That's well said.

ARCITE

You'll find it.°

PALAMON

Then as I am an honest man and love,
 With all the justice of affection°
 I'll pay thee soundly.° This I'll take.

[Chooses an armor.]

ARCITE

That's mine then.

[Takes the other.]

I'll arm you first.

PALAMON

Do. [ARCITE arms him.] Pray thee tell me, cousin,

Where gott'st thou this good armor?

ARCITE

'Tis the duke's,

And to say true, I stole it. Do I pinch you?

PALAMON

No.

ARCITE

Is't not too heavy?

PALAMON

I have worn a lighter,

But I shall make it serve.

ARCITE

I'll buckle't close.

PALAMON

By any means.°

ARCITE

You care not for a grand guard?°

PALAMON

No, no, we'll use no horses. I perceive
 You would fain be at that fight.°

ARCITE

I am indifferent.°

31 birthright the right to possess her, given to one of us at birth 37 stay wait 39 As . . . spared as long as I am alive 41 Though . . . died i.e., as a result of my silence 42 justifying affirming, defending 45 lusty vigorous 49 find it i.e., find it so 51 justice of affection justice administered by one who loves the offender 52 soundly fully, strongly 58 By any means Please do; grand guard part of the armor worn by a knight on horseback 60 at that fight i.e., fight on horseback; indifferent i.e., as to how we fight

152 stand endure 154 lets hindrances 155 dowsets testicles
 156 Dii deaeque omnes All gods and goddesses!
 III.vi.10 outdure survive 12 fatting . . . fight being fattened to fight as a swine is fattened to be eaten 14 that . . .
 refuses Palamon will give Arcite his choice 15 If . . . hold if it does not break 24 quit requite 25 show appear 28 bred brought up

PALAMON

'Faith, so am I. Good cousin, thrust the buckle
Through far enough.

ARCITE

I warrant you.

PALAMON

My casque° now.

ARCITE

Will you fight bare-armed?

PALAMON

We shall be the nimbler.

ARCITE

But use your gauntlets, though. Those are o' th' least:°
Prithee take mine, good cousin.

PALAMON

Thank you, Arcite. 65

How do I look, am I fall'n much away?°

ARCITE

'Faith, very little: love has used you kindly.

PALAMON

I warrant thee, I'll strike home.

ARCITE

Do, and spare not;

I'll give you cause, sweet cousin.

PALAMON

Now to you, sir.

[He arms ARCITE.]

Methinks this armor's very like that, Arcite, 70
Thou wor'st that day the three kings fell, but lighter.

ARCITE

That was a very good one, and that day
I well remember you outdid me, cousin.
I never saw such valor: when you charged
Upon the left wing of the enemy, 75
I spurred hard to come up, and under me
I had a right good horse.

PALAMON

You had indeed:

A bright bay, I remember.

ARCITE

Yes, but all

Was vainly labored in me: you outwent me,
Nor could my wishes reach you.° Yet a little 80
I did by imitation.

PALAMON

More by virtue;°

You are modest, cousin.

ARCITE

When I saw you charge first,

Methought I heard a dreadful clap of thunder
Break from the troop.

PALAMON

But still before that flew

The lightning of your valor. Stay a little, 85
Is not this piece too strait?°

ARCITE

No, no, 'tis well.

PALAMON

I would have nothing hurt thee but my sword,
A bruise would be dishonor.

ARCITE

Now I am perfect.°

PALAMON

Stand off° then.

ARCITE

Take my sword, I hold° it better.

PALAMON

I thank ye. No, keep it, your life lies° on it. 90
Here's one: if it but hold, I ask no more
For all my hopes. My cause and honor guard me!

ARCITE

And me my love! They bow several ways;° then advance and stand. Is there aught else to say?

PALAMON

This only, and no more. Thou art mine aunt's son,
And that blood we desire to shed is mutual, 95
In me thine, and in thee mine. My sword
Is in my hand, and if thou kill'st me
The gods and I forgive thee. If there be
A place prepared for those that sleep in honor,
I wish his weary soul that falls may win it. 100
Fight bravely, cousin. Give me thy noble hand.

ARCITE

Here, Palamon. [They take hands.] This hand shall never more

Come near thee with such friendship.

PALAMON

I commend° thee.

ARCITE

If I fall, curse me, and say I was a coward,
For none but such dare die in these just trials. 105
Once more farewell, my cousin.

PALAMON

Farewell, Arcite.

[They] fight. Horns within; they stand.

ARCITE

Lo, cousin, lo, our folly has undone us.

PALAMON

Why?

ARCITE

This is the duke, a-hunting as I told you:
If we be found, we are wretched. O retire 110
For honor's sake, and safety, presently°
Into your bush again. Sir, we shall find
Too many hours to die in, gentle cousin.
If you be seen, you perish instantly
For breaking prison, and I, if you reveal me, 115
For my contempt;° then all the world will scorn us,
And say we had a noble difference,°
But base disposers° of it.

PALAMON

No, no, cousin,

I will no more be hidden, nor put off
This great adventure to a second trial. 120
I know your cunning, and I know your cause.°
He that faints° now, shame take him: put thyself
Upon thy present guard.°

ARCITE

You are not mad?

PALAMON

Or I will make th' advantage of this hour
Mine own, and what to come shall threaten me 125
I fear less than my fortune.° Know, weak cousin,
I love Emilia, and in that I'll bury
Thee, and all crosses° else.

ARCITE

Then come what can come,

Thou shalt know, Palamon, I dare as well
Die as discourse or sleep. Only this fears me:° 130

62 casque helmet 64 Those . . . least those you have are the smallest possible 66 am . . . away have I got much thinner 80 Nor . . . you i.e., my wish to be by your side could not put me there 81 virtue natural talent 86 strait tight 88 perfect ready 89 Stand off stand away; hold think 90 lies depends

93 s.d. bow several ways bow formally in different directions, as in the lists 103 commend praise, honor 111 presently at once 116 contempt i.e., of Theseus' banishment of him 117 difference quarrel 118 disposers controllers 121 your cause i.e., why you wish to postpone the fight 122 faints draws back 123 Upon . . . guard on guard at once 126 my fortune i.e., in this fight 128 crosses obstacles 130 fears me makes me fear

The law will have the honor of our ends.
Have at thy life!

PALAMON Look to thine own well, Arcite.

[They] fight again. Horns. Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, EMILIA, PIRITHOUS and TRAIN.

THESEUS

What ignorant and mad malicious° traitors
Are you, that 'gainst the tenor° of my laws
Are making battle, thus like knights appointed,
Without my leave, and officers of arms?°
By Castor,° both shall die.

PALAMON Hold° thy word, Theseus.

We are certainly both traitors, both despisers
Of thee, and of thy goodness. I am Palamon
That cannot love thee, he that broke thy prison:
Think well what that deserves; and this is Arcite:
A bolder traitor never trod thy ground,
A falser ne'er seemed friend. This is the man
Was begged° and banished, this is he contemns thee
And what thou dar'st do; and in this disguise
Against thy own edict follows thy sister,
That fortunate bright star,° the fair Emilia,
Whose servant—if there be a right in seeing,
And first bequeathing of the soul to—justly
I am, and which is more, dares think her his.
This treachery, like a most trusty lover,
I called him now to answer. If thou be'st
As thou art spoken, great and virtuous,
The true decider of all injuries,
Say "Fight again," and thou shalt see me, Theseus.
Do such a justice thou thyself wilt envy.
Then take my life, I'll woo thee to't.

PIRITHOUS O heaven,

What more than man is this!

THESEUS I have sworn.

ARCITE We seek not

Thy breath of mercy, Theseus: 'tis to me
A thing as soon to die as thee to say it,
And no more moved. Where° this man calls me traitor,
Let me say thus much: if in love be treason
In service of so excellent a beauty,
As I love most, and in that faith will perish,
As I have brought my life here to confirm it,
As I have served her truest, worthiest,
As I dare kill this cousin that denies it,
So let me be most traitor, and ye please me.
For° scorning thy edict, duke, ask that lady
Why she is fair, and why her eyes command me
Stay here to love her; and if she say "traitor,"
I am a villain fit to lie unburied.

PALAMON

Thou shalt have pity of us both, O Theseus,
If unto neither thou show mercy. Stop,
As thou art just, thy noble ear against us;
As thou art valiant, for thy cousin's soul
Whose twelve strong labors crown his memory,°

Let's die together, at one instant, duke:

Only a little let him fall before me,

That I may tell my soul he shall not have her. 180

THESEUS

I grant your wish, for to say true your cousin
Has ten times more offended, for I gave him
More mercy than you found, sir, your offenses
Being no more than his. None here speak for 'em,
For ere the sun set both shall sleep forever. 185

135 HIPPOLYTA

Alas the pity! Now or never, sister,
Speak not to be denied: that face of yours
Will bear the curses else of after ages
For these lost cousins.

EMILIA

In my face, dear sister,
I find no anger to 'em, nor no ruin: 190
The misadventure of their own eyes kill° 'em.
Yet that I will be woman, and have pity,
My knees shall grow to th' ground but° I'll get mercy.
Help me, dear sister; in a deed so virtuous
The powers of all women will be with us. 195

[They kneel.]

Most royal brother!

HIPPOLYTA

Sir, by our tie of marriage!

150 EMILIA

By your own spotless honor!

HIPPOLYTA

By that faith,
That fair hand, and that honest heart you gave me!

EMILIA

By that you would have pity° in another,
By your own virtues infinite!

HIPPOLYTA

By valor, 200
By all the chaste nights I have ever pleased you!

THESEUS

These are strange conjurings.°

PIRITHOUS

Nay, then I'll in too:

[He kneels.]

By all our friendship, sir, by all our dangers,
By all you love most—wars, and this sweet lady!

EMILIA

By that you would have trembled to deny
A blushing maid!° 205

HIPPOLYTA

By your own eyes; by strength,
In which you swore I went beyond all women,
Almost all men, and yet I yielded, Theseus.

PIRITHOUS

To crown all this: by your most noble soul,
Which cannot want° due mercy! I beg first. 210

HIPPOLYTA

Next hear my prayers.

EMILIA

Last let me entreat, sir.

PIRITHOUS

175 For mercy!

HIPPOLYTA

Mercy!

EMILIA

Mercy on these princes!

133 malicious evilly disposed 134 tenor purport 136 officers of arms officials formally appointed to supervise a fight 137 Castor son of Zeus by Leda, twin brother to Pollux; Hold keep 144 begged petitioned for 147 fortunate bright star star bringing good fortune 161 Where whereas 169 For as for 176–77 thy cousin's . . . memory i.e., the soul of Hercules, who legendarily performed twelve great labors

191 kill plural verb through association with "eyes," despite the singular subject 193 but unless (or until) 199 By . . . pity by whatever you would have pity on 202 conjurings conjurations 205–06 that . . . maid presumably, the love the maid asked for 210 want fail to get (?) lack the power to feel (?)

THESEUS

Ye make my faith° reel. [They rise.] Say I felt Compassion to 'em both, how would you place it?°

EMILIA

Upon their lives—but with their banishments.

THESEUS

You are a right° woman, sister. You have pity,
But want the understanding where to use it.
If you desire their lives, invent a way
Safer than banishment. Can these two live
And have the agony of love about 'em,
And not kill one another? Every day
They'd fight about you, hourly bring your honor
In public question with their swords. Be wise then,
And here forget 'em. It concerns your credit,
And my oath equally. I have said they die:
Better they fall by th' law than one another.
Bow° not my honor.

EMILIA

O my noble brother,
That oath was rashly made, and in your anger;
Your reason will not hold° it. If such vows
Stand for express will,° all the world must perish.
Beside, I have another oath, 'gainst yours,
Of more authority, I am sure more love,
Not made in passion neither, but good heed.

THESEUS

What is it, sister?

PIRITHOUS

Urge it home, brave lady.

EMILIA

That you would ne'er deny me anything
Fit for my modest suit, and your free granting.
I tie you to your word now: if ye fall in't,°
Think how you maim your honor—
For now I am set a-begging, sir, I am deaf
To all but your compassion—how their lives
Might breed the ruin of my name, opinion.°
Shall anything that loves me perish for me?
That were a cruel wisdom. Do men prune
The straight young boughs that blush with thousand blossoms
Because they may be rotten?° O duke Theseus,
The goodly mothers that have groaned for these,
And all the longing maids that ever loved,
If your vow stand, shall curse me and my beauty,
And in their funeral songs for these two cousins
Despise my cruelty, and cry woe worth° me,
Till I am nothing but the scorn of women.
For heaven's sake save their lives, and banish 'em.

THESEUS

On what conditions?

EMILIA

Swear 'em never more
To make me their contention, or to know me,°
To tread upon thy dukedom, and to be,
Wherever they shall travel, ever strangers

213 faith i.e., in his own judgment 214 how . . . it i.e., in what way would you have it bestowed 216 right true, typical 227 Bow humiliate, bring disgrace on 229 hold hold to 230 express will unshakable resolve 237 fall in't renege on it 240–41 how . . . opinion i.e., how the taking away of their lives might lead to the ruin of my name and reputation (some editors emend to "name's opinion"; some take "opinion" as an exclamation of contempt) 245 Because . . . rotten because they may later become rotten 250 woe worth woe befall 254 know me hold me in their minds

To one another.

PALAMON

I'll be cut a-pieces

Before I take this oath: forget I love her?

O all ye gods despise me then! Thy banishment

I not mislike, so° we may fairly carry

Our swords and cause along. Else never trifle,

But make our lives, duke: I must love and will,

And for that love must and dare kill this cousin

On any piece° the earth has.

THESEUS

Will you, Arcite,

Take these conditions?

PALAMON

He's a villain then.

PIRITHOUS

These are men.°

ARCITE

No, never, duke. 'Tis worse to me than begging

To take my life so basely. Though I think

I never shall enjoy her, yet I'll preserve

The honor of affection, and die for her,

Make° death a devil.

THESEUS

What may be done? For now I feel compassion.

PIRITHOUS

Let it not fall° again, sir.

THESEUS

Say, Emilia,

If one of them were dead, as one must, are you

Content to take th' other to your husband?

They cannot both enjoy you. They are princes

As goodly as your own eyes, and as noble

As ever fame yet spoke of. Look upon 'em,

And if you can love, end this difference.

I give consent; are you content too, princes?

BOTH [COUSINS]

With all our souls.

THESEUS

He that she refuses

Must die then.

BOTH [COUSINS]

Any death thou canst invent, duke.

PALAMON

If I fall from that mouth,° I fall with favor,

And lovers yet unborn shall bless my ashes.

ARCITE

If she refuse me, yet my grave will wed me,

And soldiers sing my epitaph.

THESEUS

Make choice, then.

EMILIA

I cannot, sir, they are both too excellent:

For me, a hair shall never fall of these men.°

HIPPOLYTA

What will become of 'em?

THESEUS

Thus I ordain it,

And by mine honor, once again, it stands,

Or both shall die. You shall both to your country,

And each within this month, accompanied

With three fair knights, appear again in this place,

In which I'll plant a pyramid;° and whether,°

Before us that are here, can force his cousin

By fair and knightly strength to touch the pillar,

260 so provided that 264 piece i.e., of ground 266 men i.e., complete men 271 Make though you make 273 fall weaken 283 from that mouth i.e., the sentence being spoken by her 288 For . . . men it will not be because of me that a hair of either shall perish 294 pyramid obelisk; whether which of the two

He shall enjoy her; the other lose his head,
And all his friends.° Nor shall he grudge to fall,
Nor think he dies with interest in this lady.
Will this content ye?

PALAMON Yes. Here, cousin Arcite, 300
I am friends again, till that hour.

ARCITE I embrace ye.

THESEUS
Are you content, sister?

EMILIA Yes, I must, sir,
Else both miscarry.

THESEUS Come, shake hands again, then,
And take heed, as you are gentlemen, this quarrel
Sleep till the hour prefixed,° and hold your course.° 305

PALAMON
We dare not fail thee, Theseus.

THESEUS Come, I'll give ye
Now usage like to princes, and to friends.
When ye return, who wins I'll settle here,°
Who loses—° yet I'll weep upon his bier. Exeunt.

ACT IV

Scene I. [The prison.]

Enter JAILER and his FRIEND.

JAILER
Hear you no more, was nothing said of me
Concerning the escape of Palamon?
Good sir, remember.

FIRST FRIEND Nothing that I heard,
For I came home before the business°
Was fully ended. Yet I might perceive, 5
Ere I departed, a great likelihood
Of both their pardons. For Hippolyta
And fair-eyed Emily upon their knees
Begged with such handsome pity that the duke
Methought stood staggering, whether he should follow 10
His rash oath or the sweet compassion
Of those two ladies; and to second them
That truly noble prince Pirithous,
Half his own heart,° set in too,° that° I hope
All shall be well. Neither heard I one question 15
Of your name, or his 'scape.

Enter SECOND FRIEND.

JAILER Pray heaven it hold so.

SECOND FRIEND
Be of good comfort, man; I bring you news,
Good news.

JAILER They are welcome.

SECOND FRIEND Palamon has cleared you,

298 And all his friends i.e., they shall lose their heads too
305 prefixed arranged; hold your course keep to your resolve
308 settle here give him a home in Athens 309 Who loses—
Theseus, by changing the construction, shows his realization that the second half of the antithesis must be anticlimactic IV.i.4 business three syllables 14 Half . . . heart i.e., the possessor of half of Theseus' heart; set it too joined in as well;
that so that

And got your pardon, and discovered° how
And by whose means he escaped, which was your 20 daughter's,
Whose pardon is procured too, and the prisoner,
Not to be held ungrateful to her goodness,
Has given a sum of money to her marriage,
A large one I'll assure you.

JAILER Ye are a good man
And ever bring good news.

FIRST FRIEND How was it ended? 25

SECOND FRIEND
Why, as it should be: they that never begged
But they prevailed had their suits fairly granted.
The prisoners have their lives.

FIRST FRIEND I knew 'twould be so.

SECOND FRIEND
But there be new conditions, which you'll hear of
At better time.

JAILER I hope they are good.

SECOND FRIEND They are honorable; 30
How good they'll prove I know not.

Enter WOOER.

FIRST FRIEND 'Twill be known.

WOOER

Alas, sir, where's your daughter?

JAILER Why do you ask?

WOOER

O sir, when did you see her?

SECOND FRIEND How he looks!

JAILER

This morning.

WOOER Was she well? Was she in health?

Sir, when did she sleep?

FIRST FRIEND These are strange questions. 35

JAILER

I do not think she was very well, for now
You make me mind her,° but° this very day
I asked her questions, and she answered me
So far from what she was, so childishly,
So sillily, as if she were a fool, 40
An innocent,° and I was very angry.
But what of her, sir?

WOOER Nothing but my pity;°
But you must know it, and as good by me
As by another that less loves her.

JAILER Well, sir?

FIRST FRIEND

Not right?°

SECOND FRIEND Not well?

WOOER No, sir, not well. 45

'Tis too true, she is mad.

FIRST FRIEND It cannot be.

WOOER

Believe you'll find it so.

JAILER I half suspected

What you have told me: the gods comfort her!

Either this was her love to Palamon,
Or fear of my miscarrying° on his 'scape, 50

19 discovered revealed 37 mind her call her to mind; but only 41 innocent idiot 42 Nothing . . . pity it is only pity that makes me speak 45 Not right i.e., in the head 50 miscarrying dying

Or both.

WOOPER 'Tis likely.

JAILER But why all this haste,° sir?

WOOPER

I'll tell you quickly. As I late was angling
In the great lake that lies behind the palace,
From the far shore, thick set with reeds and sedges,
As patiently I was attending sport, 55
I heard a voice, a shrill one, and attentive
I gave my ear, when I might well perceive
'Twas one that sung, and by the smallness of it
A boy or woman. I then left my angle
To his own skill, came near, but yet perceived not 60
Who made the sound, the rushes and the reeds
Had so encompassed it.° I laid me down
And listened to the words she sung, for then,
Through a small glade cut by the fishermen,
I saw it was your daughter.

JAILER Pray go on, sir. 65

WOOPER

She sung much, but no sense. Only I heard her
Repeat this often: "Palamon is gone,
Is gone to th' wood to gather mulberries;
I'll find him out tomorrow."

FIRST FRIEND Pretty soul!

WOOPER

"His shackles will betray him, he'll be taken, 70
And what shall I do then? I'll bring a bevy,
A hundred black-eyed maids, that love as I do,
With chaplets° on their heads of daffadillies,
With cherry lips, and cheeks of damask roses,
And all we'll dance an antic° 'fore the duke, 75
And beg his° pardon." Then she talked of you, sir,
That you must lose your head tomorrow morning,
And she must gather flowers to bury you,
And see the house made handsome. Then she sung
Nothing but "Willow, willow, willow,"° and between 80
Ever was "Palamon, fair Palamon,"
And "Palamon was a tall young man."° The place
Was knee-deep where she sat; her careless tresses
A wreath of bullrush rounded; about her stuck
Thousand fresh water flowers of several colors— 85
That methought she appeared like the fair nymph
That feeds the lake with waters, or as Iris°
Newly dropped down from heaven. Rings she made
Of rushes that grew by, and to 'em spoke
The prettiest posies:° "Thus our true love's tied," 90
"This you may loose,° not me," and many a one.
And then she wept, and sung again, and sighed,
And with the same breath smiled, and kissed her hand.

SECOND FRIEND

Alas, what pity it is!

WOOPER

I made in to her.°

She saw me, and straight sought the flood; I saved her, 95

51 haste the Wooer's haste in coming to tell the Jailer
62 it the place 73 chaplets wreaths 75 antic grotesque dance, as in an antimasque 76 his Palamon's 80 Willow, willow, willow Desdemona's song in Othello, IV.iii 82 Palamon . . . man a variant of the song "When Samson was a tall young man," possibly referred to in Love's Labor's Lost, I.ii.169 87 Iris goddess of the rainbow 90 posies
mottoes engraved on rings 91 loose may have the meaning
"lose," the two words being commonly spelled loose 94 made
. . . her forced my way through the rushes to her

And set her safe to land—when presently°
She slipped away, and to the city made,
With such a cry, and swiftness, that believe me
She left me far behind her. Three or four
I saw from far off cross° her: one of 'em 100
I knew to be your brother; where she stayed,°
And fell, scarce to be got away. I left them with her,

Enter BROTHER, DAUGHTER, and others.

And hither came to tell you. Here they are.

DAUGHTER [Sings.]

May you never more enjoy the light, &c.

Is not this a fine song?

BROTHER O, a very fine one. 105

DAUGHTER

I can sing twenty more.

BROTHER I think you can.

DAUGHTER

Yes, truly can I. I can sing "The Broom"°

And "Bonny Robin."° Are not you a tailor?

BROTHER

Yes.

DAUGHTER Where's my wedding gown?

BROTHER I'll bring it tomorrow.

DAUGHTER

Do, very rearly,° I must be abroad else° 110

To call the maids, and pay the minstrels,

For I must lose my maidenhead by cocklight:°

'Twill never thrive else.°

(Sings.)

O fair, O sweet,° &c.

BROTHER

You must e'en take it patiently.

JAILER 'Tis true. 115

DAUGHTER

Good e'en, good men, pray did you ever hear

Of one young Palamon?

JAILER Yes, wench, we know him.

DAUGHTER

Is't not a fine young gentleman?

JAILER 'Tis, love.

BROTHER

By no mean cross her, she is then distempered

Far worse than now she shows.

FIRST FRIEND Yes, he's a fine man. 120

DAUGHTER

O, is he so? You have a sister?

FIRST FRIEND Yes.

DAUGHTER

But she shall never have him, tell her so,

For a trick that I know.° Y' had best look to her,

96 presently at once 100 cross intercept 101 stayed stopped
107 The Broom a popular song quoted in W. Wager's play
The Longer thou livest the more Fool thou art (c. 1559) and elsewhere: "broom" here is the shrub of that name 108 Bonny
Robin a song preserved in Queen Elizabeth's Virginal Book and in William Ballet's Lute Book: Ophelia sings a line of it in Hamlet, IV.v, where, as here, it may imply a sexual meaning for "Robin" 110 rearly early; I . . . else otherwise I shall be away from home 112 by cocklight before dawn 113
'Twill . . . else otherwise things will never prosper with me 114 O fair, O sweet a song included among "Certaine Sonets" in Sidney's 1598 Folio 123 For . . . know because of a stratagem that I know

For if she see him once, she's gone, she's done,
And undone in an hour. All the young maids 125
Of our town are in love with him, but I laugh at 'em
And let 'em all alone.° Is't not a wise course?

FIRST FRIEND Yes.

DAUGHTER

There is at least two hundred now with child by him,
There must be four; yet I keep close° for all this,
Close as a cockle;° and all these must be boys— 130
He has the trick° on't—and at ten years old
They must be all gelt for musicians,
And sing the wars of Theseus.

SECOND FRIEND This is strange.

DAUGHTER

As ever you heard, but say nothing.

FIRST FRIEND No.

DAUGHTER

They come from all parts of the dukedom to him. 135
I'll warrant ye, he had not so few last night
As twenty to dispatch: he'll tickle't up°
In two hours, if his hand be in.°

JAILER She's lost

Past all cure.

BROTHER Heaven forbid, man.

DAUGHTER

Come hither, you are a wise man.

FIRST FRIEND Does she know him? 140

SECOND FRIEND

No, would she did.

DAUGHTER You are master of a ship?°

JAILER

Yes.

DAUGHTER Where's your compass?

JAILER Here.

DAUGHTER Set it to th' north.

And now direct your course to th' wood, where
Palamon

Lies longing for me. For the tackling let me alone.

Come° weigh, my hearts, cheerly all! O, O, O, 'tis up!° 145

The wind's fair: top the bowling!° Out with the mainsail!

Where's your whistle, master?

BROTHER Let's get her in.

JAILER

Up to the top, boy!

BROTHER Where's the pilot?

FIRST FRIEND Here.

127 let . . . alone pay no attention to them 129 keep close maintain secrecy 130 Close as a cockle the proverb occurs also in Shirley's The School of Compliment (1625): "cockle" here indicates "cockleshell," formerly used for the shells of mollusks generally 131 trick method 137 tickle't up i.e., finish the task (with a strong suggestion of sexual pleasure) 138 if . . . in if he is in good form 141 master . . . ship the Daughter has taken the Schoolmaster for a tinker, III.v.83, and the Brother for a tailor, IV.i.108; Palamon is always a soldier, and she completes the proverbial four occupations by taking her father for a sailor 145 Come lines 145–49 are hardly verse, and the 1634 quarto prints mainly as prose; but a faint sense of line breaks seems to lie behind the Daughter's staccato phrases; 'tis up i.e., the tackling; the "O, O, O" indicates the Daughter's imaginary exertions 146 top the bowling slant the bowline (rope run from the middle of the perpendicular of the weather side of a sail to the larboard or starboard bow, for the purpose of keeping the sail steady in a wind)

DAUGHTER

What ken'st° thou?

SECOND FRIEND A fair wood.

DAUGHTER Bear for° it, master! Tack about!

(Sings.)

When Cynthia with her borrowed light, &c. Exeunt. 150

Scene II. [The palace of Theseus.]

Enter EMILIA alone, with two pictures.

EMILIA

Yet I may bind those wounds up,° that must open
And bleed to death for my sake else: I'll choose,
And end their strife. Two such young handsome men
Shall never fall for me; their weeping mothers,
Following the dead cold ashes of their sons, 5
Shall never curse my cruelty. Good heaven,
What a sweet face has Arcite! If wise Nature
With all her best endowments, all those beauties
She sows into the births of noble bodies,
Were here a mortal woman, and had in her 10
The coy denials of young maids, yet doubtless
She would run mad for this man. What an eye,
Of what a fiery sparkle, and quick° sweetness,
Has this young prince! Here° Love himself sits smiling:
Just such another° wanton Ganymede 15
Set Jove a-fire with and enforced the god
Snatch up the goodly boy° and set him by him,
A shining constellation. What a brow
Of what a spacious majesty he carries—
Arched like the great-eyed Juno's, but far sweeter, 20
Smoother than Pelops' shoulder!° Fame and Honor
Methinks from hence,° as from a promontory
Pointed° in heaven, should clap their wings and sing
To all the under-world° the loves and fights
Of gods and such men near 'em.° Palamon 25
Is but his foil, to him a mere dull shadow:
He's swarth,° and meager, of an eye as heavy
As if he had lost his mother; a still temper,°
No stirring in him, no alacrity,
Of all this spritely sharpness not a smile.° 30
Yet these that we count errors may become him:
Narcissus° was a sad boy, but a heavenly.
O who can find the bent of woman's fancy?
I am a fool, my reason is lost in me,
I have no choice,° and I have lied so lewdly° 35
That women ought to beat me. On my knees
I ask thy pardon, Palamon: thou art alone,°
And only beautiful, and these the eyes,

149 ken'st see'st; Bear for sail toward

IV.ii.1 bind . . . up proleptic for "prevent those wounds from being given" 13 quick vital 14 Here i.e., in his eye 15 another i.e., another smile (or eye?) 17 the goodly boy Ganymede 21 Pelops' shoulder Pelops was son of Tantalus and father of Atreus: Marlowe, Hero and Leander, i.65, mentions his shoulder as a standard of whiteness 22 from hence i.e., from Arcite's brow 23 Pointed coming to its point 24 the under-world the earth 25 such . . . 'em demigods, etc. 27 swarth dark-complexioned 28 still temper placid disposition 30 smile trace (with an echo of Arcite's smiling mentioned in lines 14–15) 32 Narcissus cf. II.i.176–78 35 choice ability to choose; lewdly grossly 37 alone unique, supreme

These the bright lamps of beauty, that command
And threaten Love, and what young maid dare cross°
'em?

40

What a bold gravity, and yet inviting,
Has this brown manly face! O Love, this only
From this hour is complexion.° Lie there, Arcite,
Thou art a changeling° to him, a mere gipsy,
And this the noble body. I am sotted,°
Utterly lost, my virgin's faith has fled me!
For if my brother but even now had asked me
Whether° I loved, I had run mad for Arcite;
Now if my sister, more for Palamon.
Stand both together:° now come ask me, brother.
Alas, I know not. Ask me now, sweet sister.
I may go look.° What a mere child is Fancy,
That having two fair gawds° of equal sweetness
Cannot distinguish, but must cry for both!

45

50

Enter [a] GENTLEMAN.

How now, sir?

GENTLEMAN From the noble duke your brother,
Madam, I bring you news: the knights are come.

55

EMILIA

To end the quarrel?

GENTLEMAN Yes.

EMILIA

Would I might end first!

What sins have I committed, chaste Diana,°
That my unspotted youth must now be soiled
With blood of princes, and my chastity
Be made the altar where the lives of lovers,
Two greater and two better never yet
Made mothers joy, must be the sacrifice
To my unhappy beauty?

60

Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, PIRITHOUS, and ATTENDANTS.

THESEUS

Bring 'em in

Quickly: by any means,° I long to see 'em.

65

Your two contending lovers are returned,
And with them their fair knights. Now, my fair sister,
You must love one of them.

EMILIA

I had rather both,

So° neither for my sake should fall untimely.

Enter [a] MESSENGER.

THESEUS

Who saw 'em?

PIRITHOUS I a while.°

GENTLEMAN And I.

70

THESEUS

From whence come you, sir?

MESSENGER From the knights.

THESEUS

Pray speak,

You that have seen them, what they are.

MESSENGER

I will, sir,

40 cross gainsay 42-43 this only . . . complexion i.e., only this complexion is acceptable 44 changeling child left by the fairies in place of another 45 sotted reduced to stupidity 48 Whether which of the two 50 Stand both together she puts the two pictures side by side 52 I . . . look i.e., I may go seek (for I do not yet know) 53 gawds toys, trifles 58 Diana appropriately invoked by Emilia, as in V.i, as Diana was the patron of Amazons 65 by any means indeed 69 So provided that 70 a while briefly

And truly what I think. Six braver spirits Than these they have brought, if we judge by the outside,

I never saw nor read of. He that stands

75

In the first place with Arcite, by his seeming

Should be a stout° man, by his face a prince.

His very looks so say him: his complexion

Nearer a brown than black; stern, and yet noble,

Which shows him hardy, fearless, proud of dangers;

80

The circles of his eyes show fire within him,

And as a heated° lion so he looks;

His hair hangs long behind him, black and shining

Like ravens' wings; his shoulders broad and strong,

Armed long and round,° and on his thigh a sword

85

Hung by a curious baldric,° when he frowns

To seal his will with:° better o' my conscience

Was never soldier's friend.°

THESEUS

Thou hast well described him.

PIRITHOUS

Yet a great deal short,

Methinks, of him that's first with Palamon.

90

THESEUS

Pray speak him, friend.

PIRITHOUS

I guess he is a prince too,

And if it may be, greater;° for his show°

Has all the ornament of honor in't.

He's somewhat bigger than the knight he° spoke of,

But of a face far sweeter. His complexion

95

Is, as a ripe grape, ruddy. He has felt

Without doubt what he fights for,° and so apter

To make this cause his own. In's face appears

All the fair hopes of what he undertakes,°

And when he's angry, then a settled° valor,

100

Not tainted with extremes, runs through his body

And guides his arm to brave things. Fear he cannot,

He shows no such soft temper. His head's yellow,

Hard-haired, and curled, thick twined like ivy tods,°

Not to undo° with thunder. In his face

105

The livery of the warlike maid° appears,

Pure red and white, for yet no beard has blest him;

And in his rolling eyes sits Victory,

As if she ever meant to court his valor.°

His nose stands high, a character° of honor;

110

His red lips, after fights,° are fit for ladies.

EMILIA

Must these men die too?

PIRITHOUS

When he speaks, his tongue

Sounds like a trumpet. All his lineaments

Are as a man would wish 'em, strong and clean.

He wears a well-steeled ax, the staff of gold.

115

His age some five and twenty.

77 stout bold, strong 82 heated enraged (with perhaps a suggestion of "in heat") 85 Armed . . . round with long, round arms 86 baldric belt 86-87 when . . . with to effect his desire with when he is angry 87-88 better . . . friend no soldier has had a better, more trustworthy sword 92 greater i.e., more than a prince; show appearance 94 he the Messenger 97 what . . . for i.e., love 98-99 In's . . . undertakes he shows great hope of success 100 settled steady 104 ivy tods ivy bushes 105 Not to undo not to be undone, not disheveled 106 the warlike maid the goddess of war, Bellona 109 court his valor if "court" is right—see A Note on the Text—the image is strained: the look in his eyes seems in love with his own valor 110 character token 111 after fights when fighting is over

MESSENGER There's another,
A little man, but of a tough soul, seeming
As great as any: fairer promises
In such a body yet I never looked on.

PIRITHOUS
O, he that's freckle-faced?

MESSENGER The same, my lord. 120
Are they° not sweet ones?

PIRITHOUS Yes, they are well.

MESSENGER Methinks,
Being so few and well disposed,° they show
Great and fine art in nature. He's white-haired,°
Not wanton white, but such a manly color
Next to an auburn;° tough, and nimble set, 125
Which shows an active soul. His arms are brawny,
Lined with strong sinews: to the shoulder-piece
Gently they swell, like women new-conceived,°
Which speaks him prone to labor,° never fainting 130
Under the weight of arms; stout-hearted, still,°
But when he stirs, a tiger. He's gray-eyed,
Which yields compassion where he conquers;° sharp
To spy advantages, and where he finds 'em
He's swift to make 'em his. He does no wrongs, Nor takes none.° He's round-faced, and when he smiles 135
He shows° a lover, when he frowns a soldier.
About his head he wears the winner's oak,°
And in it stuck the favor of his lady.
His age some six and thirty. In his hand
He bears a charging staff,° embossed with silver. 140

THESEUS
Are they all thus?

PIRITHOUS They are all the sons of Honor.

THESEUS
Now as I have a soul I long to see 'em!
Lady, you shall see men fight now.°

HIPPOLYTA I wish it,
But not the cause, my lord. They would show
Bravely about the titles of two kingdoms;° 145
'Tis pity Love should be so tyrannous.
O my soft-hearted sister, what think you?
Weep not till they weep blood. Wench, it must be.

THESEUS
You have steeled 'em with your beauty. Honored friend,
To you I give the field:° pray order it 150
Fitting the persons that must use it.

PIRITHOUS Yes, sir.

THESEUS
Come, I'll go visit 'em: I cannot stay,°

121 they the freckles 122 disposed arranged 123 white-haired blond 125 auburn yellowish white 128 new-conceived recently made pregnant 129 labor toil (but continuing the image of "new-conceived") 130 still quiet 131-32 gray-eyed . . . conquers apparently gray eyes were considered a sign of mercy 134-35 He . . . none He neither inflicts nor submits to an unfair attack 136 shows appears 137 winner's oak wreath of oak leaves bestowed for valor 140 charging staff spear used in charging an enemy 143 you . . . now (Hippolyta, as an Amazon, would have a prejudice in favor of women as fighters; Theseus assures her she will now see fighting on a higher level than she has known 144-45 would . . . kingdoms would be good to watch if they were fighting to win each other's kingdoms 150 give the field assign the task of arranging the tournament 152 stay wait

Their fame has fired me so. Till they appear,
Good friend, be royal.^o

PIRITHOUS There shall want no bravery.^o

EMILIA

Poor wench, go weep, for whosoever wins
Loses a noble cousin, for thy sins.

155

Exeunt.

Scene III. [The prison.]

Enter JAILER, WOOER, DOCTOR.

DOCTOR Her distraction is more at some time of the moon than at other some, is it not?

JAILER She is continually in a harmless distemper, sleeps little, altogether without appetite, save often drinking, dreaming of another world, and a better; and what broken° piece of matter soe'er she's about, the name Palamon lards it,° that she farces° ev'ry business withal, fits it to every question.

Enter DAUGHTER.

Look where she comes, you shall perceive her behavior.
DAUGHTER I have forgot it quite. The burden^o on't 10 was "Down-a down-a," and penned by no worse man than Geraldo, Emilia's schoolmaster.^o He's as fantastical^o too, as ever he may go upon's legs,^o for in the next world will Dido see Palamon, and then will she be out of love with Aeneas.^o 15

DOCTOR What stuff's here? Poor soul!

JAILER E'en thus all day long.

DAUGHTER Now for this charm that I told you of, you must bring a piece of silver on the tip of your tongue, or no ferry.° Then if it be your chance to come 20 where the blessed spirits—as there's a sight now°—we maids that have our livers perished,° cracked to pieces with love, we shall come there, and do nothing all day long but pick flowers with Proserpine.° Then will I make Palamon a nosegay, then let him mark me°— 25 then!

DOCTOR How prettily she's amiss! Note her a little further.

DAUGHTER 'Faith, I'll tell you, sometime we go to barley-break,^o we of the blessed. Alas, 'tis a sore life 30 they have i' th' other place, such burning, frying, boiling, hissing, howling, chatt'ring, cursing—O they have shrewd measure;^o take heed! If one be mad, or hang or drown themselves, thither they go, Jupiter

154 be royal make the arrangements with magnificence;
bravery splendor

IV.iii.6 broken disconnected 7 lards it fills it (is rubbed into it like lard); farces stuffs 10 burden refrain 12 Emilia's schoolmaster the Daughter is of course mistaken 12-13 fantastical fanciful 13 as . . . legs as he could possibly be 13-15 for . . . Aeneas she imagines that the Schoolmaster has taught her a song about Dido after death loving Palamon, now dead too, instead of Aeneas 20 no ferry Charon, the ferryman of the underworld, will not take you across the Styx 21 as . . . now as I can see them now ("as" may be merely exclamatory, and possibly "sight" here means "great number") 22 perished shriveled up (the liver was believed to be the seat of the affections) 24 pick . . . Proserpine Proserpine was picking flowers when Pluto carried her off to be queen of the underworld 25 mark me pay attention to me 30 barley-break a game played by six persons in couples, in which one couple occupies a marked space called "hell" 33 shrewd measure harsh punishment bless us, and there shall we be put in a cauldron of lead 35 and usurers' grease,° amongst a whole million of cutpurses, and there boil like a gammon of bacon that will never be enough.° Exit.

DOCTOR How her brain coins!°

[Enter DAUGHTER.]

DAUGHTER Lords and courtiers, that have got maids 40 with child, they are in this place, they shall stand in fire up to the navel, and in ice up to th' heart, and there th' offending part burns, and the deceiving part freezes: in troth a very grievous punishment, as one would think, for such a trifle. Believe me, one would 45 marry a leprous witch to be rid on't, I'll assure you.

DOCTOR How she continues this fancy! 'Tis not an engrafted° madness, but a most thick and profound melancholy.°

DAUGHTER To hear there a proud lady, and a proud 50 city wife, howl together! I were a beast and° I'd call it good sport. One cries "O this smoke!," another "This fire!" One cries "O that ever I did it behind the arras!" and then howls; th' other curses a suing fellow° and her garden house.° 55

(Sings.)

I will be true, my stars, my fate, &c.

Exit DAUGHTER.

JAILER What think you of her, sir?

DOCTOR I think she has a perturbed mind, which I cannot minister to.

JAILER Alas, what then? 60

DOCTOR Understand you she ever affected any man
ere she beheld Palamon?

JAILER I was once, sir, in great hope she had fixed her liking on this gentleman my friend.

WOOPER I did think so too, and would account I had a 65 great penn'orth° on't, to give half my 'state° that both she and I at this present stood unfeignedly on the same terms.

DOCTOR That intemperate surfeit of her eye° hath dis-tempered the other senses: they may return and settle 70 again to execute their preordained faculties, but they are now in a most extravagant vagary. This you must do: confine her to a place where the light may rather seem to steal in than be permitted; take upon you, young sir her friend, the name of Palamon; say you 75 come to eat with her, and to commune of love. This will catch her attention, for this her mind beats upon:° other objects that are inserted 'tween her mind and eye becoming the pranks and friskins° of her madness. Sing to her such green° songs of love as she says Palamon 80 hath sung in prison. Come to her, stuck in° as sweet flowers as the season is mistress of, and thereto make an addition of some other compounded° odors, which are 36 usurers' grease fat sweated by usurers 38 enough done, cooked 39 coins spins fancies 48 engrafted implanted, firmly planted 48-49 thick . . . melancholy morbid condition known as "melancholy," to be distinguished from the normal "melancholy" humor 51 and if 54 suing fellow persistent wooer 55 garden house notoriously used for assignations 66 penn'orth bargain; 'state property 69 intemperate . . . eye i.e., by seeing Palamon 77 beats upon is preoccupied with 79 friskins vagaries 80 green youthful 81 stuck in adorned with 83 compounded mixed grateful° to the sense. All this shall become° Palamon, for Palamon can sing, and Palamon is sweet and ev'ry 85 good thing. Desire to eat with her, carve her,° drink to her, and, still among,° intermingle your petition of grace and acceptance into her favor. Learn what maids have been her companions and play-feres,° and let them repair to her with "Palamon" in their mouths, 90 and appear with tokens, as if they suggested° for him.

It is a falsehood she is in, which is with falsehoods to be combated. This may bring her to eat, to sleep, and reduce° what's now out of square° in her into their former law and regiment.° I have seen it approved,° 95 how many times I know not, but to make the number more I have great hope in this. I will between the passages° of this project come in with my appliance.°
Let us put it in execution and hasten the success,° which doubt not will bring forth comfort. Exeunt. 100

ACT V

Scene I. [Before the altars of Mars, Venus, and Diana.]

Flourish. Enter THESEUS, PIRITHOUS, HIPPOLYTA, ATTENDANTS.

THESEUS

Now let 'em enter, and before the gods
Tender their holy prayers. Let the temples
Burn bright with sacred fires, and the altars
In hallowed clouds commend their swelling incense°
To those above us. Let no due be wanting: 5
They have a noble work in hand, will honor°
The very powers that love 'em.

Flourish of cornets. Enter PALAMON and ARCITE and their KNIGHTS.

PIRITHOUS

Sir, they enter.

THESEUS

You valiant and strong-hearted enemies,
You royal german-foes,° that this day come
To blow that nearness° out that flames between ye, 10
Lay by your anger for an hour, and dovelike
Before the holy altars of your helpers,
The all-feared gods, bow down your stubborn bodies.
Your ire is more than mortal: so your help be;
And as the gods regard ye,° fight with justice. 15
I'll leave you to your prayers, and betwixt ye
I part° my wishes.

PIRITHOUS

Honor crown the worthiest!

Exit THESEUS and his TRAIN.

84 grateful pleasing; become be suitable for 86 carve her carve for her 87 still among ever betweenwhiles 89 play-feres playfellows 91 suggested interceded 94 reduce bring back; out of square irregular 95 regiment government, order; approved confirmed 98 passages separate stages; appliance device, stratagem (presumably his device of making the disguised Wooer sleep with her) 99 success result

V.i.4 swelling incense incense that swells into clouds 6 will honor i.e., which will honor 9 german-foes foes who are of the same family 10 nearness kinship and friendship (editors have suggested "furnace" and "fierceness" as emendations)
15 as . . . ye i.e., as they are just to you 17 part divide

PALAMON

The glass° is running now that cannot finish
Till one of us expire. Think you but thus,
That were there aught in me which strove to show° 20
Mine enemy in this business, were't one eye
Against another, arm oppressed by arm,°
I would destroy th' offender, coz, I would Though parcel° of myself. Then from this gather
How I should tender° you.

ARCITE

I am in labor° 25

To push your name, your ancient love, our kindred
Out of my memory, and i' th' selfsame place
To seat something I would confound.° So hoist we°
The sails that must these vessels° port° even where
The heavenly limiter° pleases.

PALAMON

You speak well. 30

Before I turn,° let me embrace thee, cousin.

[They embrace.]

This I shall never do again.

ARCITE

One farewell.

PALAMON

Why, let it be so: farewell, coz.

Exeunt PALAMON and his KNIGHTS.

ARCITE

Farewell, sir.

Knights, kinsmen, lovers, yea my sacrifices,
True worshippers of Mars—whose spirit in you 35
Expels the seeds of fear, and th' apprehension,
Which still is farther off it°—go with me
Before the god of our profession. There Require of him the hearts of lions, and
The breath of tigers, yea the fierceness too, 40
Yea the speed also—to go on,° I mean,
Else wish we to be snails. You know my prize
Must be dragged out of blood, force and great feat
Must put my garland on, where she sticks
The queen of flowers:° our intercession then 45
Must be to him that makes the camp a cistern
Brimmed with the blood of men. Give me your aid
And bend your spirits towards him.

They [prostrate themselves and then] kneel [before Mars' altar].

Thou mighty one, that with thy power hast turned
Green Neptune° into purple, [whose approach] 50
Comets prewarn,° whose havoc in vast field
Unearthèd skulls proclaim, whose breath blows down
The teeming Ceres' foison,° who dost pluck

With hand armipotent from forth blue clouds°
The masoned turrets, that both mak'st and break'st 55
The stony girths° of cities! Me thy pupil,
Youngest follower of thy drum, instruct this day
With military skill, that to thy laud
I may advance my streamer,° and by thee
Be styled the lord o' th' day! Give me, great Mars, 60
Some token of thy pleasure.

Here they fall on their faces as formerly,° and there is heard clanging of armor, with a short thunder as the burst of a battle, whereupon they all rise and bow to the altar.

O great corrector of enormous° times,
Shaker of o'er-rank° states, thou grand decider
Of dusty and old titles, that heal'st with blood
The earth when it is sick, and cur'st the world 65
O' th' plurisy° of people! I do take Thy signs auspiciously and, in thy name,
To my design° march boldly. Let us go. Exeunt.

Enter PALAMON and his KNIGHTS, with the former observance.°

PALAMON

Our stars must glister with new fire, or be Today extinct. Our argument is love, 70
Which if the goddess of it grant, she gives Victory too: then blend your spirits with mine,
You whose free nobleness do make my cause
Your personal hazard; to the goddess Venus
Commend we our proceeding, and implore 75
Her power unto our party.

Here they kneel as formerly° [to Venus' altar].

Hail, sovereign queen of secrets, who hast power
To call the fiercest tyrant from his rage
And weep unto a girl;° that hast the might
Even with an eye-glance to choke Mars' drum 80
And turn th' alarm to whispers; that canst make
A cripple flourish with° his crutch, and cure him
Before Apollo;° that mayst force the king
To be his subject's vassal, and induce
Stale Gravity to dance: the pollèd° bachelor 85
Whose youth like wanton boys through bonfires
Have° skipped thy flame, at seventy thou canst catch
And make him, to the scorn of his hoarse throat,°
Abuse° young lays of love; what godlike power
Hast thou not power upon? To Phoebus° thou 90
Add'st flames, hotter than his; the heavenly fires
Did scorch his mortal son,° thine him;° the huntress,°

81 glass hourglass 20 show i.e., show itself 22 arm oppressed by arm if one of my arms were tyrannized over by the other 24 parcel part 25 tender treat (with an ironical suggestion of the adjectival sense); in labor endeavoring (as a woman in childbed endeavors to give birth) 28 confound destroy; hoist we let us hoist 29 these vessels our fortunes and persons; port bring to port 30 limiter the god who sets limits to things 31 turn turn away 37 farther off it the idea of fear is farther from fear itself than its "seeds," or first beginnings, are 41 go on advance 44-45 where . . . flowers where Emilia places her favor (the queen of flowers because it is hers) 50 Green Neptune i.e., the sea (as the Note on the Text explains, the bracketed words at the end of this line are not in the quarto, but some such words seem necessary) 51 prewarn give warning of 53 teeming Ceres' foison the harvest (Ceres was goddess of the harvest)

54 from . . . clouds from their height in the sky 56 stony girths walls 59 streamer banner, pennon 61 s.d. as formerly (suggesting they had done so at line 48) 62 enormous monstrous, degenerate 63 o'er-rank overripe 66 plurisy plethora 68 design goal 68 s.d. former observance the prostration and kneeling used by Arcite and his Knights, but paid now to Venus's altar, at line 76 76 s.d. as formerly again referring to Arcite and his Knights 79 weep . . . girl i.e., make him weep like a girl 82 flourish with brandish 83 Before Apollo sooner than Apollo (the god of healing) 85 pollèd bald 87 Have plural through the influence of "boys" 88 to . . . throat so that his hoarseness is mocked 89 Abuse employ in a ludicrous fashion 90 Phoebus as sun god 92 his mortal son Phæthon, who was destroyed when Phoebus allowed him to drive the sun chariot; thine him Phoebus was made to feel the heat of love; huntress Diana, who loved Endymion

All moist and cold, some say began to throw
 Her bow away, and sigh. Take to thy grace
 Me thy vowed soldier, who do bear thy yoke
 As 'twere a wreath of roses, yet is heavier
 Than lead itself, stings more than nettles.
 I have never been foul-mouthed against thy law,
 Ne'er revealed secret, for I knew none; would not,
 Had I kenned all that were;° I never practiced°
 Upon man's wife, nor would the libels read
 Of liberal wits;° I never at great feasts
 Sought to betray a beauty,° but have blushed
 At simp'ring sirs that did. I have been harsh
 To large confessors,° and have hotly asked them
 If they had mothers: I had one, a woman,
 And women 'twere they wronged. I knew a man
 Of eighty winters, this I told them, who
 A lass of fourteen bridged. 'Twas thy power
 To put life into dust: the aged cramp
 Had screwed his square foot round,°
 The gout had knit his fingers into knots,
 Torturing convulsions from his globy eyes
 Had almost drawn their spheres,° that what was life
 In him seemed torture. This anatomy°
 Had by his young fair fere° a boy, and I
 Believed it was his, for she swore it was,
 And who would not believe her? Brief,° I am
 To those that prate and have done no companion;
 To those that boast and have not a defier;
 To those that would and cannot a rejoicer.
 Yea, him I do not love, that tells close offices°
 The foulest way, nor names concealments° in
 The boldest language. Such a one I am,
 And vow that lover never yet made sigh
 Truer than I. O then, most soft sweet goddess,
 Give me the victory of this question, which
 Is true love's merit,° and bless me with a sign
 Of thy great pleasure.

Here music is heard, doves° are seen to flutter; they fall again upon their faces, then on their knees.

O thou that from eleven to ninety reign'st
 In mortal bosoms, whose chase° is this world
 And we in herds thy game,° I give thee thanks
 For this fair token, which being laid unto
 Mine innocent true heart, arms in assurance
 My body to this business. Let us rise
 And bow before the goddess. They bow. Time comes on. Exeunt.

Still° music of records.° Enter EMILIA in white, her hair

100 all that were all secrets in existence; practiced entered into designs 101-02 libels . . . wits read the abusive writings of licentious wits 103 betray a beauty i.e., reveal her frailty 105 large confessors those who boasted much of their love conquests 111 screwed . . . round the play on "square" and "round" makes the image more grotesque 113-14 globy . . . spheres "globy" suggests "swollen," and here "spheres" must be the eyes themselves, drawn from their sockets; but there is a suggestion of the spheres of the Ptolemaic universe being distorted through pain 115 anatomy skeleton 116 fere mate 118 Brief in brief 122 close offices secret actions 123 concealments things that should be concealed 128 merit reward 129 s.d. doves birds sacred to Venus 131 chase place of hunting 132 in . . . game cf. the similar image at I.iv.5 136 s.d. Still soft; records recorders about her shoulders, a wheaten wreath;° one in white holding up her train, her hair stuck° with flowers; one before her carrying a silver hind,° in which is conveyed incense and sweet odors, which being set upon the altar [of Diana], her MAIDS standing aloof, she sets fire to it; then they curtsy and kneel.

EMILIA

O sacred, shadowy, cold and constant queen,
 Abandoner of revels, mute contemplative,
 Sweet, solitary, white as chaste, and pure
 As wind-fanned snow, who to thy female knights
 Allow'st no more blood than will make a blush,
 Which is their order's robe! I here thy priest
 Am humbled 'fore thine altar. O vouchsafe
 With that thy rare green eye, which never yet
 Beheld thing maculate, look on thy virgin;
 And sacred silver mistress, lend thine ear—
 Which ne'er heard scurrile term, into whose port°
 Ne'er entered wanton sound—to my petition
 Seasoned with holy fear. This is my last
 Of vestal office: I am bride-habited,
 But maiden-hearted; a husband I have 'pointed,°
 But do not know him; out of two I should Choose one, and pray for his success, but I Am guiltless of election.° Of mine eyes
 Were I to lose one, they are equal precious,
 I could doom neither: that which perished should Go to't unsentenced. Therefore, most modest queen,
 He of the two pretenders° that best loves me
 And has the truest title° in't, let him
 Take off my wheaten garland, or else grant
 The file and quality° I hold I may Continue° in thy band.

Here the hind vanishes under the altar, and in the place ascends a rose tree, having one rose upon it.

See what our general of ebbs and flows°
 Out from the bowels of her holy altar
 With sacred act advances: but one rose.
 If well inspired,° this battle shall confound°
 Both these brave knights, and I a virgin flow'r
 Must grow alone, unplucked.

Here is heard a sudden twang of instruments, and the rose falls from the tree.

The flow'r is fall'n, the tree descends. O mistress,
 Thou here dischargest me, I shall be gathered.
 I think so, but I know not thine own will:
 Unclass thy mystery.
 I hope she's pleased, her signs were gracious.

They curtsy and exeunt.

136 s.d. her hair . . . wreath cf. I.i.s.d.; stuck adorned; hind female red deer, emblem of virginity, sacred to Diana 147 port portal 151 'pointed had appointed for me 154 Am . . . election have made no choice (with the suggestion that she would betray Diana if she made a choice) 158 pretenders claimants 159 truest title best claim 161 file and quality station and character 162 Continue continue to have 163 general . . . flows Diana as goddess of the moon 166 well inspired prompted by the goddess; confound destroy

Scene II. [The prison.]

Enter DOCTOR, JAILER, and WOOER (in habit of Palamon).

DOCTOR

Has this advice I told you done any good upon her?

WOOER

O very much. The maids that kept her company
Have half-persuaded her that I am Palamon.
Within this half-hour she came smiling to me,
And asked me what I would eat, and when I would kiss
her.

I told her presently,^o and kissed her twice.

DOCTOR

'Twas well done. Twenty times had been far better,
For there the cure lies mainly.

WOOER

Then she told me
She would watch^o with me tonight, for well she knew
What hour my fit would take me.

DOCTOR

Let her do so, 10
And when your fit comes, fit her home,^o and presently.

WOOER

She would have me sing.

DOCTOR

You did so?

WOOER No.

DOCTOR 'Twas very ill done, then:

You should observe^o her ev'ry way.

WOOER

Alas, 15
I have no voice, sir, to confirm^o her that way.

DOCTOR

That's all one,^o if ye make a noise.
If she entreat again, do anything:
Lie with her if she ask you.

JAILER

Ho^o there, doctor!

DOCTOR

Yes, in the way of cure.

JAILER

But first, by your leave,
I' th' way of honesty.^o

DOCTOR

That's but a niceness:^o 20
Ne'er cast your child away for honesty;
Cure her first this way, then if she will be honest,
She has the path before her.^o

JAILER

Thank ye, doctor.

DOCTOR

Pray bring her in and let's see how she is.

JAILER

I will, and tell her her Palamon stays for her. 25
But, doctor, methinks you are i' th' wrong still.

Exit JAILER.

DOCTOR

Go, go.

You fathers are fine fools! Her honesty?

And^o we should give her physic till we find that—

WOOER

Why, do you think she is not honest, sir?

DOCTOR

How old is she?

WOOER

She's eighteen.

DOCTOR

She may be, 30

But that's all one, 'tis nothing to our purpose.
Whate'er her father says, if you perceive
Her mood inclining that way that I spoke of,
Videlicet,^o the way of flesh—you have me?^o

WOOER

Yet very well, sir.

DOCTOR

Please her appetite 35

And do it home:^o it cures her^o ipso facto^o
The melancholy humor that infects her.

WOOER

I am of your mind, doctor.

Enter JAILER, DAUGHTER, MAID.

DOCTOR

You'll find it so. She comes: pray humor her.

JAILER

Come, your love Palamon stays^o for you, child, 40
And has done this long hour, to visit you.

DAUGHTER

I thank him for his gentle patience.
He's a kind gentleman, and I am much bound to him.
Did you ne'er see the horse he gave me?

JAILER

Yes.

DAUGHTER

How do you like him?

JAILER

He's a very fair^o one. 45

DAUGHTER

You never saw him dance?

JAILER

No.

DAUGHTER

I have often.

He dances very finely, very comely,
And for a jig^o—come cut and long tail to him^o—
He turns ye like a top.

JAILER

That's fine indeed.

DAUGHTER

He'll dance the morris twenty mile an hour, 50
And that will founder the best hobby-horse,
If I have any skill,^o in all the parish;
And gallops to the tune of "Light o' Love."^o
What think you of this horse?

JAILER

Having these virtues,

I think he might be brought to play at tennis. 55

DAUGHTER

Alas, that's nothing.

JAILER

Can he write and read too?

DAUGHTER

A very fair hand, and casts^o himself th' accounts
Of all his hay and provender: that ostler
Must rise betime that cozens him. You know
The chestnut mare the duke has?

JAILER

Very well. 60

34 Videlicet namely; have me understand me 36 do it home do it thoroughly; her an "ethic" dative; ipso facto in itself, through its own power 40 stays waits 45 fair fine 48 jig a boisterous dance, often accompanied by song and used after a play; come . . . him i.e., whatever the competition ("cut and long tail," derived from the practice of docking horses' and dogs' tails, means "all kinds," "everybody") 52 have any skill know anything about it 53 Light
o' Love a well-known song, referred to in The Two Gentlemen of Verona, I.ii.83 57 casts makes up

V.ii.6 presently at once 9 watch stay awake 11 fit her home give her the right treatment (lie with her) 14 observe humor 15 confirm convince 16 That's all one that is a matter of indifference 18 Ho hold, stop 20 honesty chastity (i.e., in marriage; niceness overscrupulousness 23 has . . .
her i.e., can marry afterward 28 And if

DAUGHTER

She is horribly in love with him, poor beast,
But he is like his master, coy and scornful.

JAILER

What dowry has she?

DAUGHTER

Some two hundred bottles,^o
And twenty strike^o of oats; but he'll ne'er have her.
He lisps in's neighing able to entice
A miller's mare:^o he'll be the death of her.^o

DOCTOR

What stuff she utters!

JAILER

Make curtsy, here your love comes.

WOOER

[Comes forward.] Pretty soul,
How do ye? That's a fine maid! There's a curtsy!

DAUGHTER

Yours to command i' th' way of honesty. 70
How far is't now to th' end o' th' world, my masters?

DOCTOR

Why, a day's journey, wench.

DAUGHTER

[To WOOER.] Will you go with me?

WOOER

What shall we do there, wench?

DAUGHTER

Why, play at stool-ball.^o

What is there else to do?

WOOER

I am content,
If we shall keep our wedding there.

DAUGHTER

'Tis true, 75
For there, I will assure you, we shall find
Some blind^o priest for the purpose, that will venture
To marry us, for here they are nice^o and foolish.
Besides, my father must be hanged tomorrow,
And that would be a blot i' th' business. 80
Are not you Palamon?

WOOER

Do not you know me?

DAUGHTER

Yes, but you care not for me. I have nothing
But this poor petticoat and two coarse smocks.^o

WOOER

That's all one, I will have you.

DAUGHTER

Will you surely?

WOOER

Yes, by this fair hand will I. [Takes her hand.]

DAUGHTER

We'll to bed, then. 85

WOOER

E'en when you will. [Kisses her.]

DAUGHTER

O sir, you would fain be nibbling.

WOOER

Why do you rub my kiss off?

DAUGHTER

'Tis a sweet one,
And will perfume me finely against the wedding.
Is not this your cousin Arcite?

DOCTOR

Yes, sweetheart,

And I am glad my cousin Palamon

Has made so fair a choice. 90

DAUGHTER

Do you think he'll have me?

DOCTOR

Yes, without doubt.

DAUGHTER

Do you think so too?

JAILER

Yes.

DAUGHTER

We shall have many children. [To the DOCTOR.]

Lord, how y' are grown!^o

My Palamon I hope will grow, too, finely

Now he's at liberty. Alas, poor chicken,^o 95

He was kept down with hard meat^o and ill lodging,
But I'll kiss him up again.^o

Enter a MESSENGER.

MESSENGER

What do you here? You'll lose the noblest sight
That e'er was seen.

JAILER

Are they i' th' field?

MESSENGER

They are.

You bear a charge^o there, too.

JAILER

I'll away straight. 100

I must e'en leave you here.

DOCTOR

Nay, we'll go with you:

I will not lose the fight.^o

JAILER

How did you like her?^o

DOCTOR

I'll warrant you within these three or four days

I'll make her right again. [To WOOER.] You must not from her,

But still preserve her in this way.

WOOER

I will. 105

DOCTOR

Let's get her in.

WOOER

Come, sweet, we'll go to dinner,

And then we'll play at cards.

DAUGHTER

And shall we kiss too?

WOOER

A hundred times.

DAUGHTER

And twenty?

WOOER

Aye, and twenty.

DAUGHTER

And then we'll sleep together?

DOCTOR

Take her offer.

WOOER

Yes, marry will we.

DAUGHTER

But you shall not hurt me. 110

WOOER

I will not, sweet.

DAUGHTER

If you do, love, I'll cry. Exeunt.

Scene III. [Near the place of the tournament.]

Flourish. Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, EMILIA,
PIRITHOUS, and some ATTENDANTS.

63 bottles bundles 64 strike measure usually equivalent to the bushel 66 miller's mare a mare used for turning a mill wheel would be the least likely to behave wantonly; he'll . . . her this passage on a wonderful horse, lines 44-66, looks back to the famous horse of John Banks, whose tricks and apparent intelligence are frequently referred to in Elizabethan literature; it performed at least between 1588 and 1600, and was remembered 73 stool-ball ball game played most often by women, and requiring a stool or stools 77 blind so that he should not recognize them 78 nice overscrupulous 83 smocks undergarments, shifts

93 how . . . grown she noted that Arcite was shorter than Palamon at II.i.52-53 95 chicken child 96 hard meat coarse food 97 kiss . . . again make him grow with kissing (with a phallic suggestion) 100 bear a charge have a duty 102 fight the emendation "sight" has been suggested and may be right: cf. line 98 and V.iii.1; How . . . her What did you think of her condition?

EMILIA

I'll no step further.

PIRITHOUS

Will you lose this sight?

EMILIA

I had rather see a wren hawk at a fly
 Than this decision: ev'ry blow that falls
 Threats a brave life, each stroke laments the place
 Whereon it falls, and sounds more like a bell^o 5
 Than blade. I will stay here. It is enough
 My hearing shall be punishèd with what Shall happen, 'gainst the which there is No deafing^o—but to hear, not taint mine eye
 With dread sights it may shun.

PIRITHOUS

Sir, my good lord, 10

Your sister will no further.

THESEUS

O she must.

She shall see deeds of honor in their kind,^o
 Which sometime show well, penciled.^o Nature now
 Shall make and act the story, the belief
 Both sealed with eye and ear.^o [To EMILIA.] You must be present. 15

You are the victor's meed,^o the price,^o and garland
 To crown the question's title.^o

EMILIA

Pardon me.

If I were there, I'd wink.^o

THESEUS

You must be there:

This trial is as 'twere i' th' night, and you
 The only star to shine.

EMILIA

I am extinct.^o 20

There is but envy^o in that light which shows
 The one the other: Darkness, which ever was
 The dam^o of Horror, who does stand accursed
 Of many mortal millions, may even now,
 By casting her black mantle over both, 25
 That^o neither could find other, get herself
 Some part of a good name,^o and many a murder
 Set off^o whereto she's guilty.

HIPPOLYTA

You must go.

EMILIA

In faith, I will not.

THESEUS

Why, the knights must kindle

Their valor at your eye. Know of this war 30
 You are the treasure, and must needs be by
 To give the service pay.^o

EMILIA

Sir, pardon me,

The title of a kingdom may be tried
 Out of itself.^o

THESEUS

Well, well, then, at your pleasure.

Those that remain with you could wish their office 35
 To any of their enemies.

HIPPOLYTA

Farewell, sister.

I am like to know your husband 'fore yourself

By some small start of time. He whom the gods
 Do of the two know best,^o I pray them he
 Be made your lot. 40

Exeunt THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, PIRITHOUS, &c.

EMILIA

Arcite is gently visaged; yet his eye
 Is like an engine^o bent, or a sharp weapon
 In a soft sheath: mercy and manly courage
 Are bedfellows in his visage. Palamon
 Has a most menacing aspect,^o his brow 45
 Is graved,^o and seems to bury what it frowns on;
 Yet sometime 'tis not so, but alters to
 The quality of his thoughts:^o long time his eye
 Will dwell upon his object; melancholy
 Becomes him nobly. So does Arcite's mirth, 50
 But Palamon's sadness is a kind of mirth,
 So mingled^o as if mirth did make him sad,
 And sadness merry. Those darker humors that Stick misbecomingly on others, on him
 Live in fair dwelling. 55

Cornets. Trumpets sound as to a charge.

Hark how yon spurs to spirit do incite
 The princes to their proof!^o Arcite may win me,
 And yet may Palamon wound Arcite to
 The spoiling of his figure.^o O what pity
 Enough for such a chance?^o If I were by, 60
 I might do hurt, for they would glance their eyes Toward my seat, and in that motion might Omit a ward,^o or forfeit an offense^o
 Which craved that very time. It is much better
 I am not there. O better never born
 Than minister to such harm!

Cornets. A great cry and noise within, crying "A Palamon!" Enter [a] SERVANT.

What is the chance?

SERVANT

The cry's "A Palamon!"

EMILIA

Then he has won: 'twas ever likely.
 He looked all grace^o and success, and he is 70
 Doubtless the prim'st of men. I prithee run
 And tell me how it goes.

Shout, and cornets. Crying "A Palamon!"

SERVANT

Still "Palamon!"

EMILIA

Run and inquire. [Exit SERVANT.] Poor servant,^o thou hast lost!

Upon my right side still^o I wore thy picture,
 Palamon's on the left. Why so I know not,
 I had no end in't else:^o chance would have it so. 75

V.iii.5 bell a bell that tolls for the dead 9 deafing i.e., closing the ear 12 in their kind in their true shape 13 penciled when portrayed in art 14-15 belief . . . ear i.e., so that we both see and hear the action, while a painting merely gives us the dumb sight 16 meed reward; price prize 17 crown . . . title bestow the title that is in question 18 wink close my eyes 20 extinct no longer shining (continuing the image of the star) 21 envy malice 23 dam mother 26 That so that 27 Some . . . name a partly good reputation 28 Set off atone for 32 give . . . pay reward the service 33-34 title . . . itself a claim to a kingdom may be settled in a battle fought outside the kingdom

38-39 He . . . best the one known by the gods to be best 42 engine instrument (here suggesting "bow") 45 aspect stressed on second syllable 46 graved engraved, furrowed (with the play on grave, suggesting that he kills) 47-48 alters . . . thoughts changes according to the character of his thoughts 52 mingled complex 57 proof test 59 figure body 59-60 O . . . chance i.e., How much pity would be sufficient for such a happening? 63 ward pass of defense; forfeit an offense lose the opportunity of making an attack 69 grace favor 72 Poor servant Arcite 73 still always 75 no . . . else no purpose at all in it

On the sinister° side the heart lies: Palamon
Had the best boding chance.° Another cry, and shout within, and cornets. This burst of clamor
Is sure th' end o' th' combat.

Enter SERVANT.

SERVANT

They said that Palamon had Arcite's body
Within an inch o' th' pyramid, that the cry
Was general "A Palamon!" But anon
Th' assistants° made a brave redemption,° and
The two bold titlers° at this instant are Hand-to-hand at it.

EMILIA Were° they metamorphosed
Both into one! O why? There were no woman
Worth so composed a man:° their single share,°
Their nobleness peculiar to them, gives
The prejudice of disparity, value's shortness,°
To any lady breathing.

Cornets. Cry within: "Arcite! Arcite!"

More exulting?

"Palamon" still?

SERVANT Nay, now the sound is "Arcite!" 90

EMILIA

I prithee lay attention to the cry.
Set both thine ears to th' business.

Cornets. A great shout and cry: "Arcite! Victory!"

SERVANT

The cry is
"Arcite!" and "Victory!" Hark! "Arcite! Victory!"
The combat's consummation is proclaimed
By the wind instruments.

EMILIA

Half-sights° saw 95
That Arcite was no babe. God's lid,° his richness
And costliness° of spirit looked through him:° it could
No more be hid in him than fire in flax,
Than humble banks can go to law° with waters
That drift° winds force to raging. I did think 100
Good Palamon would miscarry, yet I knew not
Why I did think so: our reasons are not prophets
When oft our fancies are. They are coming off.°
Alas, poor Palamon!

Cornets. Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, PIRITHOUS,
ARCITE as victor, and ATTENDANTS, &c.

THESEUS

Lo, where our sister is in expectation,
Yet quaking and unsettled!° Fairest Emily,
The gods by their divine arbitrament
Have given you this knight: he is a good one
As ever struck at head. Give me your hands.
Receive you her, you him; be plighted with 110
A love that grows as you decay.

ARCITE

Emily,

To buy you I have lost what's dearest to me
Save what is bought, and yet I purchase cheaply
As I do rate your value.

THESEUS

O loved sister,

He speaks now of as brave a knight as e'er 115
Did spur a noble steed. Surely the gods

Would have him die a bachelor, lest his race
Should show i' th' world too godlike! His behavior
So charmed me that methought Alcides° was
To him a sow° of lead. If I could praise 120
Each part of him to th' all I have spoke,° your Arcite
Did° not lose by't, for he that was thus good Encount' red yet his better. I have heard

Two emulous Philomels° beat the ear o' th' night
With their contentious throats, now one the higher, 125
Anon the other, then again the first,

And by and by outbreasted,° that the sense°
Could not be judge between 'em: so it fared
Good space between these kinsmen, till heavens did Make hardly° one the winner. Wear the garland 130
With joy that you have won. For the subdued,

Give them our present justice,° since I know
Their lives but pinch° 'em. Let it here be done.
The scene's not for our seeing: go we hence

Right joyful, with some sorrow. [To ARCITE.] Arm your prize:° 135

I know you will not loose her. Hippolyta,
I see one eye of yours conceives a tear
The which it will deliver. Flourish.

EMILIA

Is this winning?

O all you heavenly powers, where is your mercy?
But that your wills have said it must be so, 140
And charge me live to comfort this unfriended,
This miserable prince, that cuts away
A life more worthy from him than all women,
I should, and would, die too.

HIPPOLYTA

Infinite pity

That four such eyes should be so fixed on one 145
That two must needs be blind for't!°

THESEUS

So it is. Exeunt.

Scene IV. [The same.]

Enter PALAMON and his KNIGHTS pinioned, JAILER,
EXECUTIONER, &c., GUARD.

105 PALAMON

There's many a man alive that hath outlived
The love o' th' people, yea i' th' selfsame state°
Stands many a father with his child: some comfort
We have by so considering. We expire,
And not without men's pity; to live still 5
Have their good wishes;° we prevent

76 sinister left 77 best boding chance i.e., the most favorable omen 82 assistants Arcite's knights; redemption rescue 83 titlers claimants to the title 84 Were O that they were 86 so . . . man a man so compounded; their single share the share of virtue that each has singly 88 prejudice . . . shortness i.e., the disadvantage of inequality, the state of inferiority 95 Half-sights glimpses 96 lid eyelid 97 costliness rareness; looked through him was apparent in him 99 go to law engage in conflict 100 drift driving 103 coming off leaving the place of tournament 106 unsettled uncertain, still disturbed

119 Alcides Hercules 120 sow mass of solidified metal taken from a furnace 120-21 If . . . spoke if I were to praise his every quality in the same way as I have praised him in general terms 122 Did would 124 Philomels nightingales 127 outbreasted outsung; that the sense so that the hearing 130 hardly with difficulty 132 present justice i.e., immediate execution 133 pinch irk 135 Arm your prize i.e., take Emilia to your arms 146 That . . . for't i.e., that one of the men must die V.iv.2 state condition 5-6 to . . . wishes have their good wishes that we should still live

The loathsome misery of age, beguile
 The gout and rheum that in lag° hours attend
 For gray approachers.° We come towards the gods
 Young and unwappered,° not halting under crimes 10
 Many and stale:° that sure shall please the gods
 Sooner than such,° to give° us nectar with 'em,
 For we are more clear° spirits. My dear kinsmen,
 Whose lives for this poor comfort° are laid down,
 You have sold 'em too cheap.

FIRST KNIGHT What ending could be 15
 Of more content? O'er us the victors have Fortune, whose title° is as momentary
 As to us death is certain. A grain of honor
 They not o'er-weigh us.

SECOND KNIGHT Let us bid farewell,
 And with our patience anger tott'ring Fortune, 20
 Who at her certain'st° reels.

THIRD KNIGHT Come, who begins?

PALAMON
 E'en he that led you to this banquet shall Taste to you all.° [To JAILER.] Ah, ha, my friend, my friend,
 Your gentle daughter gave me freedom once:
 You'll see't done now forever.° Pray, how does she? 25
 I heard she was not well. Her kind of ill°
 Gave me some sorrow.

JAILER Sir, she's well restored,
 And to be married shortly.

PALAMON By my short life,
 I am most glad on't: 'tis the latest thing
 I shall be glad of, prithee tell her so. 30
 Commend me to her, and to piece° her portion
 Tender her this. [Gives him a purse.]

FIRST KNIGHT Nay, let's be offerers all.

SECOND KNIGHT
 Is it a maid?

PALAMON Verily I think so,
 A right good creature, more to me° deserving
 Than I can 'quite° or speak of.

ALL KNIGHTS Commend us to her. 35

They give their purses.

JAILER
 The gods requite you all, and make her thankful.

PALAMON
 Adieu; and let my life be now as short
 As my leave-taking. Lies on the block.

FIRST KNIGHT Lead, courageous cousin.

SECOND AND THIRD KNIGHTS
 We'll follow cheerfully.

A great noise within, crying "Run! Save! Hold!" Enter in haste a MESSENGER.

MESSENGER Hold, hold, O hold, hold, hold!

Enter PIRITHOUS in haste.

PIRITHOUS
 Hold, ho! It is a cursèd haste you made 40
 If you have done° so quickly. Noble Palamon,
 The gods will show their glory in a life°
 That thou art yet to lead.

PALAMON Can that be,
 When Venus I have said° is false? How do things fare?°

PIRITHOUS
 Arise, great sir, and give the tidings ear 45
 That are most dearly° sweet and bitter.

PALAMON What
 Hath waked us from our dream?°

PIRITHOUS List then. Your cousin,
 Mounted upon a steed that Emily
 Did first bestow on him, a black one, owing° 50
 Not a hair-worth of white, which some will say
 Weakens his price, and many will not buy
 His goodness with this note°—which superstition
 Here finds allowance°—on this horse is Arcite
 Trotting the stones of Athens, which the calkins°
 Did rather tell° than trample, for the horse 55
 Would make his length a mile,° if't pleased his rider
 To put pride in him. As he thus went counting
 The flinty pavement, dancing as 'twere to th' music
 His own hoofs made—for as they say from iron
 Came music's origin—what envious flint, 60
 Cold as old Saturn, and like him possessed
 With fire malevolent, darted a spark,
 Or what fierce sulphur else to this end made,
 I comment not: the hot horse, hot as fire,
 Took toy° at this, and fell to what disorder 65
 His power could give his will, bounds, comes on end,
 Forgets school-doing,° being therein trained
 And of kind manage;° piglike he whines
 At the sharp rowel, which he frets at rather Than any jot obeys; seeks all foul means 70
 Of boist'rous and rough jadery to dis-seat
 His lord, that kept it° bravely. When nought served, When neither curb would crack, girth break, nor diff'ring° plunges
 Dis-root his rider whence he grew, but that
 He kept him 'tween his legs, on his hind hoofs 75
 On end he stands,
 That Arcite's legs being higher than his head
 Seemed with strange art to hang; his victor's wreath
 Even then fell off his head; and presently°
 Backward the jade comes o'er, and his full poise° 80
 Becomes the rider's load. Yet is he living,
 But such a vessel 'tis that floats but for

8 lag last 9 gray approachers gray-haired men approaching death 10 unwappered unwearied (perhaps with a suggestion of sexual excess) 11 stale of long standing 12 such men such as described; to give so that they will give 13 clear noble, unstained 14 this poor comfort Palamon admits the puniness of his own consolation 17 title i.e., favor 21 at her certain'st when she seems most stable 23 Taste . . . all act as taster at a banquet for you 25 You'll . . . forever i.e., you will see me win a final freedom 26 kind of ill i.e., madness 31 piece contribute to 34 to me i.e., from me 35 'quite requite

41 done finished 42 show . . . life i.e., through your life (as their creature) their glory will be manifested 44 I have said i.e., as I have said; How . . . fare What has happened? 46 dearly intensely 47 dream i.e., of death 49 owing possessing 52 with this note because of this peculiarity 53 Here finds allowance is here confirmed 54 calkins parts of a horseshoe turned down to prevent slipping 55 tell count 56 make . . . mile take mile-long paces 65 toy fright, exception 67 school-doing training 68 of kind manage well disciplined 72 it his seat 73 diff'ring varying 79 presently at once 80 poise weight

The surge that next approaches. He much desires
To have some speech with you. Lo, he appears.

Enter THESEUS, HIPPOLYTA, EMILIA, ARCITE in a chair.

PALAMON

O miserable end of our alliance! 85
The gods are mighty! Arcite, if thy heart,
Thy worthy, manly heart be yet unbroken,
Give me thy last words: I am Palamon,
One that yet loves thee dying.

ARCITE

Take Emilia, 90
And with her all the world's joy. Reach° thy hand.
Farewell. I have told° my last hour. I was false,
Yet never treacherous.° Forgive me, cousin.
One kiss from fair Emilia. [She kisses him.] 'Tis done.
Take her. I die. [Dies.]

PALAMON

Thy brave soul seek Elysium!

EMILIA

I'll close thine eyes, prince. Blessed souls be with thee!° 95
Thou art a right good man, and while I live
This day° I give to tears.

PALAMON

And I to honor.°

THESEUS

In this place first you fought: e'en very here
I sund' red you. Acknowledge to the gods
Our thanks that you are living.° 100
His part is played, and though it were too short
He did it well. Your day is lengthened, and
The blissful dew of heaven does arouse° you.
The powerful Venus well hath graced her altar,
And given you your love. Our master Mars 105
Hath vouched his oracle, and to Arcite gave
The grace of the contention.° So the deities
Have showed due justice. Bear this° hence.

PALAMON

O cousin,

That we should things desire which do cost us
The loss of our desire!° That nought could buy 110
Dear love but loss of dear love!°

THESEUS

Never Fortune

Did play a subtler game. The conquered triumphs,
The victor has the loss; yet in the passage°
The gods have been most equal.° Palamon, 115
Your kinsman hath confessed the right o' th' lady

Did lie in you, for you first saw her, and Even then proclaimed your fancy. He restored her
As your stol'n jewel, and desired your spirit
To send him hence forgiven. The gods my justice 120
Take from my hand,° and they themselves become
The executioners. Lead your lady off,
And call your lovers° from the stage of death,°
Whom I adopt my friends. A day or two
Let us look sadly, and give grace unto 125
The funeral of Arcite, in whose end°
The visages of bridegrooms we'll put on
And smile with Palamon; for whom an hour,
But one hour since, I was as dearly sorry
As glad of Arcite; and am now as glad
As for him sorry. O you heavenly charmers,° 130
What things you make of us! For what we lack,
We laugh;° for what we have, are sorry;° still
Are children in some kind. Let us be thankful
For that which is, and with you leave° dispute
That are above our question. Let's go off, 135
And bear us like the time.° Flourish. Exeunt.

EPILOGUE

I would now ask ye how ye like the play,
But, as it is with schoolboys, cannot say.°
I am cruel° fearful. Pray yet stay a while,
And let me look upon ye. No man smile? 5
Then it goes hard, I see. He that has Loved a young handsome wench, then, show his face— 105
'Tis strange if none be here—and if he will
Against his conscience, let him hiss, and kill
Our market. 'Tis in vain, I see, to stay° ye.
Have at the worst can come,° then! Now what say ye? 10
And yet mistake me not: I am not bold;
We have no such cause. If the tale° we have told— 110
For 'tis no other—any way content ye,
For to that honest purpose it was meant ye,°
We have our end; and ye shall have ere long 15
I dare say many a better, to prolong
Your old loves to us. We, and all our might,
Rest at your service. Gentlemen, good night.

Flourish.

90 Reach i.e., give me 91 told counted, lived through 91–92 false . . . treacherous Arcite admits Palamon's greater right to Emilia in seeing her first, but declares he took no unfair advantage 95 Blessed . . . thee i.e., May you be with the blessed souls 97 This day i.e., the anniversaries of this day; to honor i.e., to honoring Arcite's memory 99–100 Acknowledge . . . living Declare to the gods that we rejoice in your being alive (the emendation of "Our" to "Your" has been suggested) 103 arouse sprinkle 107 grace
. . . contention good fortune in the contest 108 this Arcite's body 109–10 That . . . desire i.e., alas that the winning of what we want takes away our desire for it 110–11 That . . .
love i.e., that one love (Emilia) could be won only by losing another (Arcite) 113 passage course of events 114 equal just

120 Take . . . hand i.e., take away from me 122 lovers his Knights; stage of death scaffold 125 in whose end at the conclusion of which 130 you heavenly charmers the Fates (who control us with their charms or magic) 131–32 For
. . . laugh we feel pleasure at the thought of the thing we do not possess 132 for . . . sorry we are sad to have what we do possess 134 leave cease to 136 bear . . . time conduct ourselves appropriately to the occasion
Ep.2 say speak 3 cruel dreadfully 9 stay i.e., try to prevent 10 Have . . . come let us face the worst event possible 12 tale alluding to the title of the source 14 meant ye intended for you

THE POEMS AND SONNETS

THE POEMS

INTRODUCTION BY WILLIAM EMPSON

EDITED BY WILLIAM BURTO

Introduction

The poems of Shakespeare have great ability and moments of genius, but we need not labor to praise them, since we must rejoice that he went back to the theater—recognizing perhaps that they were in some way inadequate for him. Nonetheless, they saved his career at the one crucial time, and they record (though mainly in the Sonnets) an experience so formative that the plays echo it for the rest of his life. No other playwright known to us worked regularly for the public theaters both before and after their long shutdown because of the plague in 1592–94, after which new companies of actors had to be formed; to survive it was an achievement. At this time a patron was essential for him, whereas afterward (apart from one graceful kindness) he seems to have avoided writing for patrons. His early life is obscure but two facts stand out like rocks: he dedicated to the Earl of Southampton (born October 1573) both Venus and Adonis (1593) and The Rape of Lucrece (1594), sounding much more intimate on the second occasion. Our first record of Shakespeare as a member of the Lord Chamberlain's Company, in which he stayed for the rest of his working life—indeed our first record of it performing at a London theater—is dated just after the earl's coming of age. The earl became liable to a heavy fine for rejecting a marriage arranged during his minority, so perhaps did not pay very much, but did agree to help get the company launched. By writing for a patron, Shakespeare met the crisis in an accepted manner, as a modern author might apply for "relief"; the playwright Marlowe, born in the same year, was also at this time writing a mythological narrative poem, though it happened to be interrupted by his murder; maybe they pretended to one another that this was a tiresome chore. Shakespeare's meter had been made the fashionable one for the purpose by Lodge in 1589; and may I at once refer anybody who wants further information of this scholarly kind to the excellent New Cambridge edition of the Poems by J. C. Maxwell (1966). I want in this Introduction to concentrate on what may be called the human or experiential reality of the poems, presenting such evidence as I have about that with decent care.

It is a startling initial fact that Venus and Adonis, his first publication, appears in the Stationers' Register as licensed by the Archbishop of Canterbury in person. The poem soon made its impact, and libidinous undergraduates are said to have slept with it under their pillows. The fact that Shakespeare bearded and won over the "little black husband" of Elizabeth, a particularly grim member of her court, argues that the Bard was in great nerve and good spirits. Shakespeare was not yet thirty, and few of the people who had enjoyed his plays would remember his name, but that is a time when authors need to make contacts. One can glean a little from the Register itself about the conditions of his problem. The Dictionary of National Biography reports that John Whitgift (1530–1604) accepted the theories of Calvin throughout his career, sometimes to the annoyance of the queen, but denied their application to Church Government, so that he was free to persecute Calvinists as well as Papists, bringing them ruin by repeated fines; at this work he showed "brutal insolence in examining prisoners, and invariably argued for the severest penalties." Having a private fortune, he maintained a troop in his own livery, and it was this troop that arrested Essex and his followers during their attempt at rebellion. Soon after his appointment in 1583 he secured a tightening-up of the licensing system: for example, the ballads on separate sheets had now to be approved; and, unlike his predecessor, he would license a few books under his own name every year. Nearly all of them were pamphlets on current theological controversies, for which his decision would anyway be needed, but he also showed a creditable interest in the advancement of learning; for example, he licensed books purporting to teach the Welsh language and the history of China. The Bishop of London, who was another established licensing authority, also adopted the custom of giving his own name to a few books each year; most of them dealt with political news from Western Europe. He worked closely with the archbishop but seems to have had no literary leanings, though he had of course social ones.

Thus in February 1591 the archbishop and the bishop together licensed the rather perfunctory translation of the Orlando Furioso by Sir John Harrington. The queen (so people said at the time) had found her maids of honor giggling over his translation of a sexy canto, and had ordered him to go and stay in his country house until he had translated the whole epic. Both his parents had been with her during her imprisonment in the Tower, when she was almost without hope, and she had made him her godson. It was agreed that the English badly needed to be raised to the cultural level of the Italians somehow, and yet admittedly, on the moral side, such a poem needed thorough sanctification by the Church of England. Thus the occasion had every claim upon the assistance of the hierarchy. I count about 180 entries in the Register for 1590, 40 of them by the bishop and 8 by the archbishop; these proportions are fairly steady for the next two years. In 1592 the archbishop licensed a book of love poems, though in Latin—the Amintae Gaudia of Thomas Watson (1557?–92). Watson was a classical scholar of good family, and he had just died; he had assisted the poverty of better poets, and his verses were sure not to excite desire. The archbishop entered the fatal year 1593 by licensing Hooker's Ecclesiastical Polity and on April 9 he licensed Churchyard's Challenge. The book is a final miscellany by a sturdy, loyal old chap, then about seventy-three, who died soon after; it calls the queen a phoenix on several occasions. Nobody could blame the archbishop, but he was perhaps starting to go a little out of his way, as Churchyard had no social claims. Within three weeks he had licensed the indecent Venus and Adonis. There was no immediate sign of trouble; it was the only year he reached double figures, ending in September with Nashe—Christ's Tears over Jerusalem and The Unfortunate Traveler (Nashe had defended the Anglican hierarchy in comic pamphlets, and the first of these books is a work of penitence). But in the following year, 1594, only one publication was licensed by the archbishop himself: "The Table of Ten Commandments, with the Pictures of Moses and Aaron"—a poster, no doubt, for display in all churches; the queen felt she had to let him keep up appearances so far. In the following year he appears to have been forgiven, signing for works of theological controversy at a merry pace, but never again did he license anything even appearing to be a work of literature.

When the poem became notorious, somebody would look it up in the Register hoping to find an irregularity; and, when the truth got about, the queen evidently told the archbishop that he must stop making a fool of himself for at least a year. We may be sure he said, as a number of modern critics would say, that these randy students were the ones who had got the poem wrong; probably he could also claim that the author had told him so. A letter from Southampton would be needed for Shakespeare to get an interview, but it would cut little ice with the archbishop, and Shakespeare would then have to rely on his own eloquence. The apology of Chettle shows that he was socially adroit.¹ He would be found to share the anxieties of the archbishop about the petulant earl, regarding him with grave pity. His own little poem, designed as a warning for the young man, carried a peculiarly high and severe moral allegory; and might he perhaps illustrate the point by quotation? (He would read from the final curse of Venus, saying that all loves on earth will in future be upset by parents arranging marriages and suchlike.) Whitgift had almost certainly ruined Shakespeare's father, whether the father was a Papist or a Puritan; it gives a welcome feeling of reality to see an author of revenge plays actually taking a quiet civil revenge. I doubt whether he felt this as a duty, but it might seem an excuse for letting himself be pushed forward by the giggling Southampton. He would enjoy the scene chiefly as a test of skill.

¹ Chettle had published the dying pamphlet of Greene, which contained various libels on authors—some of them justified, says Chettle (December 1592); but he has now met Shakespeare and found "his demeanour no less excellent than the quality he professes. Besides, divers of worship have reported his uprightness of dealing, which argues his honesty, and his facetious grace in writing, which approves his art."

C. S. Lewis found the poem disgusting, mainly because Venus sweats, and J. C. Maxwell writes very sensibly here (his edition, p. xii): Shakespeare, he finds, is "exploiting . . . the sheer comedy of sexuality" in lines 230–40, where we meet the "sweet bottom-grass" of the erotic landscape. This explanation is rather too disinfectant; there is a joke, sure enough, based on evasion of a censorship, but a young man who felt prepared to take this Venus on would find the description positively exciting. We recognize Venus as divine because she is free not merely from bodily shame but even from social precaution; that Adonis is snubbing her just cannot enter her mind. But also the modern conventions about sweat are sharply different from the Elizabethan ones. Many love poems of the time regard the sweat of a lady as somehow a proof of her elegance and refinement; the smell is not recommended as an excitement for our lower nature, the only way it could be praised in a modern novel. In The Rape of Lucrece we find the sweat of the chaste Lucrece while she is peacefully asleep singled out for praise; one hand is

On the green coverlet; whose perfect white
Showed like an April daisy on the grass,
With pearly sweat resembling dew of night. (lines 394–96)

I do not know that any poet before Andrew Marvell praised the smell of the sweat of male farmhands, but I expect someone did. Spenser would have blamed Lewis here for being "nice," meaning squeamish and proud of it, an unsoldierly trait. And indeed the impressiveness, the final solidity, of Venus and Adonis does turn upon not being "nice," partly from its firm show of acquaintance with country sport, partly from not even caring whether you find the details funny or not. And then, in his own mind, the story would have some bearing on his marriage to a woman of twenty-six when he was eighteen. No doubt it all took a bit of nerve.

At the end of the poem (line 1166) the corpse of Adonis is "melted like a vapor" and a flower springs up from his blood; Venus plucks it, saying that it smells like Adonis, though not as nice, and that the sap dripping from the break is like the tears that he shed too readily:

this was thy father's guise—
Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire—
For every little grief to wet his eyes;
To grow unto himself was his desire,
And so 'tis thine; but know, it is as good
To wither in my breast as in his blood. (lines 1177–82)

The earlier sonnets frequently blame the man addressed for trying to live to himself like a flower, and for resisting a marriage; the personal application was easy enough to recognize. But people in the know were meant to regard this as only incidental to the structure. The poem recounts a Myth of Origin, like "how the Elephant got its Trunk," a form that scholars, both in Shakespeare's time and our own, revere to a rather surprising degree. (The genuinely ancient examples are believed to have been designed to support the practice of some already existing ritual or custom.) Shakespeare meant his poem to be classically respectable, unlike the plays which he could make a living from, and the motto on his title page boasts of it; but he is not hampered by the form, spurred by it rather. The terrible prophecy of Venus, at the end, at least seems to tell a general truth and thereby give the poem a universal "significance." Also, I have come to think, he extracted from the Myth of Origin a new literary device, very important in the seventeenth century, though hardly ever employed by himself in its pure form except for The Phoenix and the Turtle.

The central trope of John Donne, the only bit of metaphysics in Metaphysical Poetry, runs as follows: a ruler or mistress or saint is being praised, for Justice, Beauty, Holiness, or what not, and this is done by saying, "You are the Platonic Idea, in person, of Justice or what not"; in the same way, Venus had always been Love walking about in person. Elizabeth Drury has to hold this position in the Anniversaries, or they are mere nonsense. Only Jesus Christ (an individual who was also the Logos) had ever deserved such praise, but the literary acceptance of classical deities meant that it could be used without feeling blasphemous. It has become an arid formula when Donne writes to the Countess of Bedford:

Your (or You) Virtue two vast uses serves;
It ransoms one sex, and one Court preserves.

The two words in parentheses have to mean "or perhaps Virtue is you," but probably poor Donne is just hammering out the formula to try and get some of his wife's grocery bills paid. When I was a student, people thought that he had imported this trick from Spain, but Professor Edward Wilson kindly tells me that there is at least no prominent use of it in sixteenth-century Spanish poetry. Some recent critic has named the trick "inverted Platonism," and it certainly needs to be distinguished from Platonism. It is rather silly, though there were some splendid uses of it, so perhaps I will not seem too patriotic when claiming it as a home product.

No one will be surprised that Shakespeare could see the dramatic or "quibbling" possibilities of his story, as when saying of Venus, "She's Love, she loves, and yet she is not loved" (line 610), or when the irritated Adonis, like C. S. Lewis, says that what she calls love is really "sweating Lust" (line 794). But Venus at line 12 is already saying it about Adonis, who is merely human—at any rate, until after he is dead. In the full "metaphysical" trope, it is standard to say that the death of the individual entails a universal absence of the abstraction—after Punctuality Smith has died, nobody can ever catch a train again. But why should this be true of Adonis, unless because Venus will go off in a huff? Her presentiment of his death, she says, cannot be true because the consequences of it would be too awful:

"O Jove," quoth she, "how much a fool was I
To be of such a weak and silly mind
To wail his death who lives, and must not die
Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind!
For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,
And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again."

(lines 1015–20)

She already expects the race of man to destroy itself; and the last two hundred lines of the poem, after she has found him dead, are loaded with her despairing insistence that there is no love left in the world.² The conception is not a minor decoration in the poem.

Shakespeare did not need to invent it here because he had already used it superbly in Titus Andronicus (V.ii), published in 1594 to help launch the company but probably written about 1590. The Empress Tamora, who has done great wrong to Titus, believes him to be in consequence so mad that he can be tricked into facilitating the murder of his surviving son Lucius. She therefore visits him disguised as Revenge-in-Person, bringing her two sons disguised as Rape and Murder. An Elizabethan spectator was of course thoroughly accustomed to allegorical pageants and charades; he too could if necessary have disguised himself as Revenge. Titus cannot help behaving queerly, but uses this weakness to further his revenge, like Hieronymo in The Spanish Tragedy of Kyd, and the eventual Hamlet of Shakespeare. He plays up to her with eerie glee and magnificent rhetoric:

Look round about the wicked streets of Rome,
And when thou find'st a man that's like thyself,
Good Murder, stab him; he's a murderer. (V.ii.98–100)

After a good deal of this, she is so certain he is mad that he can easily deceive her into eating her two sons, disguised as a pie. It is wild but not irrelevant, indeed simply true, because the practical trouble with revenge is that it does not finish, but produces blood feuds. Shakespeare is always prepared to think, "Why are we interested in the story?" and then say the reason why on the stage. The poem about Venus offered a very different opportunity for the technique, but one can see that his mind would take to it readily. I do not know that anybody else was already using it so early.

We need not doubt that Shakespeare considered the end of the poem dignified, and half believed what he told the archbishop. But the dedication of it already envisages that a "graver labor" will come next, so there was no change of plan before setting out on The Rape of Lucrece. This too is a Myth of Origin; to insist upon it, the death of Lucrece causes an absurd change in human blood (line 1750). A hero did not need to be a god before such things could happen; one could easily have a historical Myth of Origin (for example, Macbeth is about how the Scots, thanks to the Stuarts, took to civilized hereditary rule instead of tribal warfare). The story of Lucrece was an exciting and dangerous example because it explained how Rome threw off her kings and thus acquired an almost superhuman virtue; though somewhat obscurely, this gave its justifying importance to the heroine's choice of suicide. Both the Bible (I Samuel 12:12-25) and the classics (in practice, Plutarch) disapproved of royalty; the institution could be defended only as a necessity for our fallen natures. Also, Brutus had a mysterious importance for a patriot and a dramatist. No other great period of drama, anywhere in the world, had so much interest in madmen as the Elizabethan one. This apparently derived from the Hamlet of Kyd, whose story came from a twelfth-century historian of Denmark, "the Saxon who knew Latin." But the story had classical authority from Livy's brief remarks on Lucius Junius Brutus, who pretended imbecility in order to be safe till he could take revenge; indeed, Saxo has been suspected of imitating Livy to provide elegance for his savage material, so that Hamlet, whose basic trouble in the fairy tale was that he could not tell a lie, was truthful as ever when he said "I am more an antique Roman than a Dane." The Brutus who killed Caesar was his bastard, as Shakespeare remarks in 1 Henry VI (IV.i), though he kept it out of Julius Caesar; and a more antique Brutus, a parricide as usual, had been the first to civilize Britain; hence the name. Now, it was Brutus who plucked the dagger from Lucrece's body and championed the expulsion of the kings. He had pretended imbecility up to that very moment,

² A footnote by F. T. Prince at line 1020 of Venus and Adonis, in his New Arden edition of The Poems, may seem all that is needed to destroy my position. It is true that T. W. Baldwin, in On the Literary Genetics of Shakespeare's Poems and Sonnets (pp. 39–52), claims to find the sources of such phrases in recent Latin poetry; and he may well be right. But he seems unable to tell the difference between making the general remark: "Without beauty, there would be chaos," and saying: "Because this individual man is dead, all human love affairs will in future be chaotic." He offers no quotation of this second type. Nor can any be extracted from the Four Hymns of Spenser, mentioned by F. T. Prince.

Burying in Lucrece' wound his folly's show.
He with the Romans was esteemed so
As seely jeering idiots are with kings,
For sportive words and utt'ring foolish things;

But now he throws that shallow habit by
Wherein deep policy did him disguise. (lines 1810-15)

The Romans take an oath, and the last line of the poem says that the Tarquins were banished forever.

J. C. Maxwell says in his note:

It is curious that Shakespeare makes no mention here (though the Argument concludes with it) of the historical importance of this, as involving the abolition of the monarchy (unless "everlasting" glances at it); this tells heavily against the view . . . that the popularity of the poem owed much to its bearing on political issues.

It is curious that the scholars of our age, though geared up as never before, are unable to imagine living under a censorship or making an effort to avoid trouble with thought police; these unpleasant features of current experience were also familiar in most historical periods, so that the disability must regularly prevent scholars from understanding what they read.

Southampton, who seemed fated to irritate the queen, might well be inclined to cool thoughts about royalty; and Shakespeare would be wise to hesitate as to how far one might go. Though never very republican, you would think, he was certainly interested in Brutus; he had already, in Titus Andronicus, written better than any other Elizabethan the part of the half-genuine madman. Yet both themes are subdued to the decorum of his poem.

The resulting work is hard to read straight through, but one should realize that Shakespeare has made it static by deliberate choice. Francis Berry pointed out in The Shakespeare Inset that, although both these poems contain a high proportion of dialogue, the reader does not remember them so, because all the harangues might just as well be soliloquies. Indeed the silent colloquy between Lucrece and the low-class messenger, blushing together at cross-purposes (line 1339), stands out because it is as near as we get to any contact between two minds. In a play the audience wants the story to go forward, but here the Bard could practice rhetoric like five-finger exercises on the piano. Also, the rhetoric works mainly by calling up parallel cases, so that here again the figure of myth becomes a sort of generalization. Even this perhaps hardly excuses the long stretch of looking at tapestries of the Fall of Troy, which one may suspect was written later as a substitute for dangerous thoughts about royalty; Lucrece when appealing to Tarquin flatters his assumptions by recalling the virtues of royalty, and the highly formal structure of the work demands that she should recognize the inadequacy of such ideals after her appeal has failed. It would be sensible to have an unpublished version suited to the patron, who contributed a great deal more than the buyers would; and besides, it would give the welcome feeling of conspiracy. But anyhow the poem needs here a feeling of grim delay—she has already decided upon suicide, but has to wait for the arrival of the proper witnesses.

Whether she was right to kill herself has been long discussed, and Shakespeare was probably not so absurd as we think to let her review the Christian objection to suicide—its origins are hard to trace. Saint Augustine, caddish as usual, had written "if adulterous, why praised? if chaste, why killed?"; and one might suspect that the romantic rhetoric of Shakespeare is used only to evade this old dilemma. But he is interested in the details of the case, and probably had in mind a solution, though he did not care to express it grossly. Livy already has Tarquin force her by an inherently social threat; if she rejects him, he will stab both her and a male servant in the same bed and claim afterward that he had been righteously indignant at finding them there (line 670). It is assumed that her reputation has a political importance for her aristocratic family, which she puts before everything else; he gags her with her bedclothes, but not because she is expected to resist. Immediately after the rape, and till her death, she speaks of herself as guilty, and Shakespeare concurs. However, just before she stabs herself the assembled lords protest that she is still innocent, and she does not deny this, but brushes it aside as unimportant beside a social consequence:

"No, no!" quoth she, "no dame hereafter living
By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving."

(lines 1714-15)

Coleridge in a famous passage derided Beaumont and Fletcher because the ladies in their plays regard chastity as a costly trinket which they are liable to mislay, and it is not obvious why Shakespeare is different here. When Tarquin slinks from her bed, he says, "She bears the load of lust he left behind"; "She desperate with her nails her flesh doth tear"; she "there remains a hopeless castaway" (lines 734, 739, 744). Perhaps, he reflects, the instability of women is an excuse for her: they have "waxen minds. . . . Then call them not the authors of their ill" (lines 1240, 1244). Just before killing herself, she speaks to her husband and the assembled lords of her "gross blood" and its "accessary yieldings" (lines 1655, 1658); one could hardly ask her to be much plainer. She was no virgin, having several children; and it is a basic fact about the young Shakespeare that he considers young men in general overwhelmingly desirable to women, let alone brave young lords. Thus she took an involuntary pleasure in the rape, though she would have resisted it in any way possible; that is why she felt guilty, and why some of her blood turned black, making a precedent for all future corrupted blood (line 1750). The reader perhaps is also guilty, having taken a sexual pleasure in these descriptions of sexual wrong—as much at least as the "homely villain" who wondered how she was making him blush. But we are not told that she would have killed herself for this private shame; she considers the suicide useful for public reasons. Saint Augustine would conclude that she deserved death for enjoying the rape and hell for her suicide afterward; but the dramatist is sure that all her reactions, in this tricky situation, do her the greatest credit and are enough to explain the permanent majesty of Rome.

The Passionate Pilgrim (1599) is a cheat, by a pirate who is very appreciative of the work of Shakespeare. It starts with two genuine sonnets (138 and 144), each of them implying plenty of story and giving a smart crack at the end; and the third item, a sonnet extracted from Love's Labor's Lost, follows quite naturally. Paging ahead in the bookshop, one found poems that might easily be Shakespeare's, though most of them are now generally considered not to be; it would be sensible to buy at once. What we learn from this is that Shakespeare had become news, a personality exciting curiosity, and there are other signs of it. In the previous year, for the first time, a play had been printed with his name on the title page ("Love's Labor's Lost, as it was presented before her Highness this last Christmas"), and the absurd Palladis Tamia by Meres had at least treated his work as deserving scholarly attention. The Shakespeare Allusion Book finds many more references to Falstaff than to any other character (Hamlet comes second, with the others far behind him). Thus in 1598 his reputation came to the boil, so to speak; this was why his public was willing to trust him through his tragic period, though they did not like it so much.

The editor would have printed more sonnets if he could, and yet the ones chosen are well suited to his purpose—how could that happen? John Dover Wilson in his Introduction to the Sonnets of Shakespeare thought that the Dark Woman (he will not call her a lady) had allowed a publisher two specimens with a view to raising the price of her whole collection. But this ignores the state of the market; she would have succeeded in publishing her collection and would not have needed to offer bait. I think that a visitor was left to wait in a room where a cabinet had been left unlocked—rather carelessly, but the secret poems were about five years old; he saw at once that they would sell, but did not know how much time was available. Thumbing through the notebook (the poems cannot have been on separate sheets, or he could have taken more without being noticed), he chose two with saucy last couplets for hurried copying. In one of the variants, the 1609 edition has a simple misprint, but as a rule it has the slightly better text—either because the thief miscopied or because Shakespeare had second thoughts. I think that one of these cases allows us to decide the alternative:

I smiling credit her false-speaking tongue,
Outfacing faults in love with love's ill rest. (Sonnet 138)

In 1609 the second line has become: "On both sides thus is simple truth suppress." J. C. Maxwell gives an admirable gloss for the pirate version: "With (the help of) the ill-grounded sense of security that is characteristic of love," and plainly this is more like Shakespeare. But it is rather out of place; the poem has very little to do with his private experience or sensibility, commenting with sad good humor on almost universal departures from truth. The duller line is more good-mannered in a way, and he would not give his first draft of a sonnet to his "private friends" (as Meres wrote), or even, one would think, to the Dark Lady. Poets of our own time have been known to add in the desired obscurity when they rewrite, but Shakespeare is more likely to have removed it. So probably he was the one who left the cabinet unlocked.

This publication also refutes the Herbert Theory of the Sonnets, for a reason that its supporters have been too high-minded to observe. William Herbert, later Earl of Pembroke, became eighteen in April 1598 and was hardly allowed to come to London earlier, as he was a sickly lad, addicted to headaches (John Dover Wilson, op. cit., p. 66); though later, I do not deny, an honest man and a useful patron, who deserved to have the First Folio dedicated to him in 1623. But this would mean that the sonnet about letting Shakespeare's boy patron borrow his mistress, when the pirate got it into print, would be hot news. The Elizabethans would call the incident thorough toad-eating, and it would be sure to get mentioned in some of the letters of gossip. I am not saying that Shakespeare would not have done it, though I think it was outside his mode of life at this date, but that he could not have hushed it up, in these circumstances. Consider what moral Ben Jonson would find to say (whereas, in 1594, moral Ben Jonson had not yet poked his nose above the boards). The first soliloquy of Prince Hal, assuring the audience that he will betray Falstaff, has close verbal echoes of the first of the pathetic sonnets ("Full many a glorious morning") trying to defend the patron for a betrayal of Shakespeare. But this does not mean that they were written at the same time; the implications would be horrible. The joke of Falstaff largely turns on the repeated bite of his self-defense, and Shakespeare may well be drawing a good deal upon his own humiliations when the servant of a patron, in his twenties. But he would need to use these memories in the assurance of secrecy, feeling them distant, feeling that they could be laughed over.

The reader should be warned of a slight change of idiom in the couplet of Sonnet 144:

The truth I shall not know, but live in doubt
Till my bad angel fire my good one out.

The Variorum edition gives a list of references to periodicals, mainly Victorian, and until I looked them up I imagined they proved that the Dark Lady is accused of having gonorrhea. They merely show that the phrase fire out was then used as we use fire, to mean "dismiss a person from a job"; it did not then, as now, inevitably suggest firing something from a gun. Shakespeare need only be saying: "I will not know whether the Dark Lady has seduced the patron till she gets bored and dismisses him; then no doubt both will come round to me with indignant stories." We may be sure he did realize that an explosive insult was in the background, because he had a complex verbal awareness, as when he left his wife his second-best bed; but if the Dark Lady had really caught the disease we would hear more about it in his personal poems. A labored epigram by Edward Guilpin, published in 1598, is I think simply a crude imitation of Shakespeare's joke here; he must have been one of the "private friends" who were allowed (says Meres) to read some of the "sugared Sonnets." It would be pretty sad to believe that Shakespeare copied the merry thought from Guilpin as soon as he read his book, and had it stolen at once.

One has to try to make sense of these dates; it is fundamental to the understanding of Shakespeare's development, I think, that the relations with a patron come in 1592-95, when a patron was needed. Leslie Hotson, indeed, put the Sonnets five years earlier, in an entertaining book that proposed a new addressee for them (Mr. W. H., 1964); he laughs at the scholars for viewing Shakespeare as Little Dopey, shambling along in the rear of Marlowe and the rest, "a remarkably late developer." But his development really is unusual; usually the lyrical power comes earlier than the constructive one. Reading through the plays in the generally accepted order—The Comedy of Errors, 1, 2, and 3 Henry VI, The Taming of the Shrew, Titus Andronicus—one gets hardly a breath of poetry so far, though plenty of vigorous rhetoric, and a clear mind at work making the best of the plots. A little poetry comes in with Richard III, so that he was just beginning to be a poet, aged twenty-seven or so, when the plague forced him to rely on it for survival. After two years, when the theaters open again, he seems essentially a poetic dramatist. Another contrast, though more trivial, is perhaps more striking. Bernard Shaw remarked that Shakespeare must have suffered torture if he ever read over his comedies after he had grown up—assuming, I think, that any adult feels an obscure personal shame when he hears another man boast of being a gentleman. Probably the boasting of lads together is much the same in all classes, but it is true that an entry of three young lords, swanking by making jokes that are assumed to be top-class, occurs in all his comedies between 1594 and 1598, whereas the characters in the early comedies are mostly traders, and the lords in Henry VI simply murderers. One might perhaps blame Shakespeare for choosing to write about aristocrats, but not, having chosen to, for doing some fieldwork on how they actually talked. It is not what is now called snobbery, because he could not pretend to be anything but the servant of his earl. Probably he would be allowed to hand around drinks at a party given by the earl for young men of standing—listening with all his ears, though, as one gathers from the plays, much more free to make jokes himself than a modern servant is. In private he seems to have scolded his lord unreasonably, as privileged servants often do. C. S. Lewis, in English Literature in the Sixteenth Century (1954), spoke of "the self-abnegation, the 'naughting,' " of the sonnets, more like a parent than a lover: "In certain senses of the word 'love,' Shakespeare is not so much our best as our only love-poet" (p. 505). This is noble, but it is perhaps only the other side of a feeling that the gratitude is overstrained. And yet, the sonnets thank the patron because thou . . . dost advance

As high as learning my rude ignorance. (Sonnet 78)

The actual teaching of the earl can hardly have been more than a few social tips, but as a window upon the great world Shakespeare had been feeling the need of him badly. The feelings seem better grounded if we realize that the childish patron was giving far more than he knew. And, unless we redate the plays as a whole, remembering that the evidence is quite an elaborate structure, there is only one plausible time for fitting in this bit of education.

A Lover's Complaint was printed at the end of the sonnets in 1609, but many critics have denied that Shakespeare wrote it—chiefly on grounds of vocabulary and imagery, but also by calling lines bad when they are simply dramatic, imagined as by another speaker (for example, lines 106-11). Much of it, he would consider, had needed correcting before it was published, as indeed do many of the sonnets themselves; he forces the words into his rhyme scheme and general intention so hurriedly that our textual notes sometimes only amount to lame excuses (for example, around line 235). But at least Kenneth Muir has now proved Shakespeare's authorship, by "clusters" (William Shakespeare 1564-1964, ed. E. A. Bloom); the principle is that if an author happens to use one word of a cluster his mind drags in most of the others soon after, and this process is not conscious or noticeable enough for an admirer to imitate it, nor is it affected, as imagery in general can be, by a change of subject matter or recent experience. I think the poem is evidently by Shakespeare on psychological grounds, and a kind of echo of the sonnets (this of course is why they were kept together, and eventually pirated together); but I am confronted by an agreement among the scholars (Mazwell's edition, p. xxxv) that it must have been written after 1600. Similar arguments have been used to maintain that the sonnets themselves were written late; the explanation, I think, is that Shakespeare often first tried out a novelty of style in his private poetry. I ask for only two years; the poem was written in 1598, with tranquility, looking back with tender humor at his relations with Southampton, and just after killing off Falstaff. There would be no intention of publication; perhaps he wrote it in the evenings of a solitary journey. It would at any rate be a change, after seeing himself as Falstaff, to become the traditional forsaken damsel (forsaken, because by 1596 the earl had become absorbed in his dangerous life; we need not look for a specific ground of quarrel, though we may expect that Shakespeare did, at the time). Shakespeare, like other authors, often used poetry to scold himself out of a bad state of mind, and took for granted that no one would realize he was doing it. He knew it was a delusion that the earl had betrayed him, and writing about Falstaff had aggravated the sentiment, so he wrote a parody. Or perhaps he merely felt it was delightful to carry the belief to a wild extreme. These conjectures have the merit of explaining why the poem was written at all, though (fairly clearly) not intended for publication. Most people find that working for a repertory company is exhausting in itself, especially if they have part responsibility for the management; a man who also gives the company two masterpieces a year, as regular as clockwork, with a good deal of reading behind them, is not looking around for something to do. It is thus in order to suppose an internal reason for undertaking this quite lengthy bit of work, since there is no external one.

The first ten verses set the scene, and the rest is all spoken by the ruined girl; as many critics have remarked, the best and most Shakespearean lines express reproach:

Thus merely with the garment of a Grace,
The naked and concealèd fiend he covered. (lines 316-17)

O father, what a hell of witchcraft lies
In the small orb of one particular tear! (lines 288-89)

All the same, the girl firmly asserts in the last words of the poem that she would have him ruin her again if she got the chance:

O, all that borrowed motion, seeming owed,
Would yet again betray the fore-betrayed
And new-pervert a reconcilèd maid! (lines 327-30)

No other author would do this; one man would bewail the seduction and another treat it jovially, but not both at once. Indeed, rather few male poets seem convinced that young men in general are irresistible to women. A reader of novels will rightly feel baffled at not knowing the social arrangements of this village, where many people write sonnets expounding the suitability of the rich jewels that they are presenting to the young man (line 210); is it in Arcadia or Warwickshire? is he the son of a laborer, or the heir to a hundred acres, say?

He had the dialect and different skill,
Catching all passions in his craft of will,

That he did in the general bosom reign
Of young, of old, and sexes both enchanted,
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
In personal duty, following where he haunted.
(lines 125-30)

The magical picture applies to only one person, who had been already an earl when still a child; no wonder, after puzzling their heads, they decided that he was the one who was clever, and not just his horse (lines 114-19). In all the undramatic poems Shakespeare is deliberately holding back the power to be funny, which was considered when he wrote A Lover's Complaint to be much his greatest power; but he knew a joke when he saw one, even if he had just written it down himself. But perhaps when I say "funny" I would be more intelligible to young people (who have such grim ideas now of what makes a joke) if I said "charming." The chief merit of Alfred L. Rowse's account, on the other hand (William Shakespeare, 1964), was in its powerful presentation of Southampton as a typical neurotic invert, intolerably disagreeable, who could only regard the queen as a personal rival. Under James, after he had unexpectedly won back his life, he played a considerable part in founding the English colonies in America, and the only picture that conveys his charm shows him as an elder statesman. (It is in C. C. Stopes's Life, p. 449.) But we have a glimpse of him when twenty in the Valentine of the Two Gentlemen of Verona. This figure is bustling along, with a rope ladder hidden under his cloak, to abduct the daughter of the Duke of Milan, but the duke accosts him and asks his advice—how is one to abduct a lady who is kept locked up in a high bedroom? Why, with a rope ladder, of course, equipped with grappling irons but light enough to carry under one's cloak; Valentine feels he is cleverly secret because he just manages to restrain himself from offering to share the use of his rope ladder with the outraged father, but so far from that, he and his cloak are farcically transparent. The brash informative practicality of this does not feel to me neurotic at all, and I expect that many of his servants were in love with him when he was twenty, not only Shakespeare. Plainly he seemed very young to Shakespeare, who was not only ten years older but had had a harder time. The Bard could not be considered low; as heir to an ex-mayor of Stratford he would become entitled to gentility. But the social ladder was long and steep, and the expense of the clothes the earl wore all the time would alone be enough to make him seem legendary—though he did not seem another breed from common men, the title being a recent creation.

A grave change in the whole tone of Shakespeare's writing arrives at the time of Hamlet (1600), the first major tragedy, and here it would be fussy to suppose that he was even remembering his relations with the patron. Critics since A. C. Bradley have pretty well agreed that "sex-horror" is prominent all through the tragic period (perhaps burning itself out in the unfinished Timon of Athens, before Antony and Cleopatra). I do not understand this change, though I expect there is a simple answer if we knew it. The reason why The Lover's Complaint must have been written earlier is simply that otherwise it would have been much grimmer. The change I think is prominent even in the parallels to Hamlet that give Muir his main evidence; The Lover's Complaint is regularly less fierce than the echoes of it that convey the doom of Ophelia. We have no non-dramatic poems to guide us after the tragic period has set in.

Only one remains to be considered, and it is short; but it has come to seem the only very good narrative poem, exquisite, baffling, and exalted: The Phoenix and the Turtle.³

³ There has been a recent move in favor of saying The Phoenix and Turtle instead of The Phoenix and the Turtle. It is true that the title pages of Chester speak of "The Phoenix and Turtle," and Shakespeare's poem as first printed has no title. But his way of regarding this pair has long been recognized as slightly different from Chester's. A social column will report the presence at a party of "The Earl and Countess of X" because they are expected to go together, and that is how Chester feels about his Phoenix and Turtle, but Shakespeare, whatever else he feels, always regards their co-presence with a touch of surprise. A critic may write about a poem: "The familiar lion and unicorn serve to emphasize the wholly conventional character of the imagery," but they become "the lion and the unicorn" when they are fighting for the crown. Shakespeare's poem really is a bit like "The Walrus and the Carpenter," and cannot be properly appreciated unless that is seen. Looking now for evidence to support the traditional preference (though it is apparently no older than a Boston edition of 1805), I find the poem grants it repeatedly: "Phoenix and the turtle fled," "this turtle and his queen," the turtle saw his right," "it made this threne,/To the phoenix and the dove," "And the turtle's loyal breast/To eternity doth rest." In effect, The Phoenix and the Turtle emerges as a habitual rhythm of Shakespeare's poem, and an illogical pedantry ought not to be allowed to destroy so natural a title.

It is much better, I think, if viewed less portentously than has become usual. The occasion for Shakespeare's agreeing to write this bit of praise, in late 1598 or early 1599, was a humane and domestic one, though socially rather smart. I have no impulse to deny that vast and fundamental meanings derive or arise from the poem, such as were adumbrated when C. S. Lewis said that reading it was like entering the secret origins of creation, or at least of the creation of the heroines of Shakespeare's plays. But it does not tell Queen Elizabeth to produce an heir by the Earl of Essex, nor even mutter about the marital secrets of the Countess of Bedford. If Shakespeare had been prone to say things like that, he would not have stayed afloat for long upon the smoking waters of the court. It may be hoped that such theories are going out of fashion, but what we are regularly told now, though it sounds more modest, is quite as damaging to the poem. J. C. Maxwell takes it for granted when he remarks that Shakespeare's poem "contradicts the personal allegory of Chester's poem," so that "our interpretation must be from within the poem itself." He seems to feel that this makes it pure. But Shakespeare would have been abominably rude if he had behaved like that, after agreeing to take part in the social event of offering a volume of congratulation to Sir John Salisbury. The whole book was about the birth of a new Phoenix from the ashes of the old one, a story that every reader had been taught at school, and here it was somehow in praise of Salisbury's marriage; but Shakespeare is presumed to say: "No, of course the new Phoenix wasn't born. When you burned the old one you simply killed it, as anybody could have told you you would." But, even if he had tried to offer this rudeness, it would not have been printed. The immense indulgences nowadays offered to the avant-garde are not in question here. Salisbury was a forthright and decisive man, brought up to advance the glory of his house, and we know he made Ben Jonson rewrite one of the poems for his book; he would no more have allowed Shakespeare to palm off on him a subjective poem than a seditious one.

Verses by Shakespeare, Marston, Chapman, and Jonson, and also by an anonymous poet who seems to be Jonson again (probably one of his team had backed out from fear of ridicule) are added at the end of a long allegorical poem, Love's Martyr, by Robert Chester (unregistered, 1601); a separate title page assures us that these too are "never before extant, and (now first) consecrated to the love and merit of the thrice-noble knight, Sir John Salisbury." The book appeared at the height of the War of the Theaters, when several of the contributors were quarreling, and soon after the execution of Essex, when it was very dangerous to print a riddle that might arouse the suspicions of the queen. Surely it is natural to expect that the poems were written earlier.

The introduction to an edition by Carleton Brown (1914) of Poems by Sir John Salusbury and Robert Chester (Early English Text Society, 113) is a mine of information and entertainment about these characters, and ought I think to have settled the question. Salisbury (we may use the ordinary spelling because Chester's book does) was squire of Lleweny in north Wales, and had married in 1586 at the age of twenty an illegitimate but recognized daughter of the King of Man (or Earl of Derby); some verses written for the wedding already call her a royal bird. In 1595 he came to London as a law student and was made squire of the body to the queen; he was her cousin, and a determined Anglican (having got the estate when his Papist brother was executed for the Babington Plot), and had a standing quarrel in Denbighshire with supporters of the Essex faction. This last would be no help until the execution of Essex, early in 1601, but in June of that year he was knighted by the queen herself. By October he was back home being elected to Parliament as Knight of the Shire, with scandalous disorders, so he must have moved fast. Clearly, the poem was hurried out to celebrate the knighthood, unregistered to save time and because the queen would not suspect a man she was rewarding for his loyalty; but the writing would have been done beforehand, to wait for the occasion. A line from Jonson's "Epode" here is quoted in England's Parnassus (1600) showing that at least some of these poems were ready about two years before publication. Also an autograph copy of Jonson's "Enthusiastic Ode" survives, inscribed to the Countess of Bedford. The squire would show round all the poems at court, as soon as they were ready; and the ever-helpful countess might be expected to want her own copy of Jonson's contribution, as it was not yet to be available in print. In this poem he was evidently struggling to be as jolly about the Phoenix as the Turtle demanded. Clumsy as Jonson was, he would not have given it to the countess as direct praise of her own charms; or at least, she would not have kept it, if he had.

In 1597 the squire had printed some poems at the end of Sinetes Passion by Robert Parry, who calls him "the Patron"; they make very elaborate anagrams (in easy singing lines) on the names of three adored ladies, one of them his wife's sister. While very pugnacious, he was what a later age called "a martyr to the fair," attentive to the ladies, so it had seemed all right at the time of the wedding to make him a sacrifice as Turtle beside the semi-royal bride as Phoenix. In 1598 he would be a very useful patron for the young Ben Jonson, who was in desperate need of one, and he seems to have told Jonson to whip up a chorus of London poets. Shakespeare's company was giving Jonson a production, and it would be consistent to help him here too—assuming that Shakespeare had no objections to the general plan. So far from that, Shakespeare was amused or charmed by both the squire and his poet—as is clear once we admit that he wrote his tribute, not while Hamlet was saying he could not bear to think what his mother did in bed, but while Henry V was saying,

Though it appear a little out of fashion,
There is much care and valor in this Welshman.

(IV.i.83-84)

Shakespeare made it part of his business to keep an eye on these pushful Welsh cousins of the queen, and he recommended them to his audiences without hiding their absurdity.

Chester, says Brown, was probably the resident chaplain in the big house at Lleweny, anyway a dependent who praised the family by an allegory at the time of the grand wedding. Later he was induced to add a lot of tedious padding (Nature takes the Phoenix on a grand tour), but the basic allegory is quite short and readable, though radically absurd. A marriage does indeed require mutual accommodation, and love may genuinely receive "a mystical reinforcement" on the birth of a child; but to praise a grand marriage by calling it a martyrdom is a gaffe, all the more absurd because sure to be suspected of being true. Chester evidently came to feel this during the years while he was adding the encyclopedia verses, and when at last he had to tell the London poets what the whole thing meant, so that they could reinforce it, he said it meant "married chastity." This idea had not been prominent when he began, though the intention was already high and pure. When Nature at last leads the Phoenix to the Turtle, she asks whether he has been chaste, and, on being reassured, explains that for her to produce issue requires burning alive; both birds at once collect twigs, so there is no long period of married chastity. (This of course is why you sometimes see birds carrying about twigs.) The main poem by Ben Jonson puzzles about his set theme, in a plain-man way; it seems a new idea to him. Trying to isolate the ideal, he appears to describe a man who spares his wife the act of sex in order not to offend her delicacy. We should welcome any sign of readiness among men of that age to treat their wives more considerately, especially if it meant spacing out the child-births; but the refined thoughts expressed by Jonson here are remote from his tastes and convictions as otherwise known. He is not a hypocrite, because he is writing to a set theme; but his modern admirers should not praise him for his nobility. Rather out of the side of his mouth, he lets drop that one need not praise a husband who chose this course merely to hide impotence:

We do not number here
Such spirits as are only continent
Because lust's means are spent.

Oddly enough, Shakespeare manages to work the same reflection into his mood of total praise; the reproduction of the Phoenix, he surmises, has failed only because of the married chastity of the couple: "'Twas not their infirmity." Various modern critics have explained that Shakespeare could not bear the thought of reproduction when he wrote the poem; but nobody has yet ascribed quite so much delicacy to Ben Jonson.

The Mutual Flame by G. Wilson Knight (1955) shows that the Phoenix legend had often been used to symbolize a love denied bodily consummation, because that would be adulterous or homosexual or politically disruptive, so that the love is driven to more spiritual courses. He suggests that the poem may be about the squire's love for his wife's sister, which would at least avoid absurdity. One should remember here an epigram of C. S. Lewis, that Spenser was the first poet to have the nerve to say it is convenient for a man to be in love with his own wife. There had been a change of feeling since the Middle Ages, a thing so general that poor Chester, in the backwoods, around 1587, was running Spenser close for the priority. Salisbury of course really did consider himself ready for heroic self-sacrifice whenever that became necessary; the idea was basic to his status, and had to be expressed firmly in his book; but otherwise he wanted the book to be as jolly as possible, and his pride in his wife had better be expressed in a firmly sexy manner—that was a point where he could take over from his chaplain. His marriage had produced four children in the first four years, six in the next ten (no twins), and one of his bastards had been baptized in the parish church in 1597. No wonder Jonson argued about what Chester could have meant. The Phoenix herself will not have come to London, with all those ailing children, but a few vigorous comments survive from her and she apparently lived to be seventy-five.⁴ Shakespeare might genuinely have supposed it to be an ideal though perhaps barbaric marriage.

The Wilson Knight thesis does have a secondary truth; what keeps the long absurd poem sweet is Chester's love for his master. This kind of love was avowable and not usually tormented, but when Chester comes to present himself as the Pelican, who gazes upon the burning, he positively claims a share in the honors of sacrifice; both the Phoenix and the Turtle become the "young ones" of this Pelican and feed their "hungry fancies" on her breast. He has been underrated, I think; so long as he is praising his dear Lion (the coat of arms of Salisbury was a white lion) he has any amount of limpid depth. And why should not his absurdity (though he fears it) express something profound? If anything seems wrong with his poem, he says as he lumbers toward the end, abandoning for a moment the disguise of the Pelican,

'tis lameness of the mind
That had no better skill; yet let it pass,
For burdenous loads are set upon an ass.

This is the royal generosity of the Shakespearean clown, and Shakespeare was quite right to salute it.

Once the general tone has been grasped, of slightly fuddled good humor, the dramatic placing of the piece by Shakespeare can be seen as reasonably good. The two first additional poems are subscribed "Vatum Chorus" (all the poets) and praise the virtues of Salisbury only, not his wife or family; then two poems subscribed "Ignoto" (Unknown, by the starving but invincible Ben Jonson again, of course), without pretending not to know the Phoenix legend (which would be too absurd) manage to direct our attention to the sacrifice of the old Phoenix, not presenting it as repaid by the birth of a new one. Such is the purpose of the phrasing, "One Phoenix born, another Phoenix burn." The build-up is only rough, but it is an intentional preparation for what Shakespeare is going to do. Shakespeare then presents himself as one of the spectators after the burning, among the nonpredatory birds who are the voice of Reason, and they fall into despair because the result of the experiment is delayed. I gather from J. C. Maxwell's edition that it was traditional to allow a period of dramatic suspense. Shakespeare ingeniously fits in the set theme of "married chastity" as an excuse for the failure of the experiment. But what follows his noble resignation, what holds the opposite page, is the astonishment of a birth from the ashes. It begins:

⁴ Carleton Brown, Poems by Sir John Salusbury and Robert Chester (1914), p. xxvi. Chester's poem says that the Phoenix had been anxious before meeting the Turtle, being of ripe age and fearing to have no offspring. No doubt it was often a tricky business to find a good enough marriage for the bastard daughter of an earl. I expect she was twenty-five when the elder brother of young John was hanged, so that he inherited the estate and became free to marry her in what would be considered the nick of time. It does not mean that she was the queen, who would be sixty-five.

O 'twas a moving epicedium!
 Can Fire? Can Time? Can blackest Fate consume
 So rare Creation? No, 'tis thwart to sense;
 Corruption quakes to touch such excellence.

The recent scholarly edition of Marston's Poems (1961, ed. Davenport) says firmly that the word epicedium (poem about death) means the poem by Shakespeare just concluded. Marston snatches a moment to compliment Shakespeare, as he bounds onto the stage to describe the event in an entirely different literary style; and his only objection is that the forecast in Shakespeare's poem has, astoundingly, turned out wrong:

Let me stand numbed with wonder; never came
 So strong amazement on astonished eye
 As this, this measureless pure rarity.

I consider that very good poetry. The subsequent poems all deal with Salisbury's domestic life, wife or child being mentioned every time, so that Shakespeare's poem acts as a watershed. Anyhow, he could not have intended to spoil the show because of his neuroses; that would be quite outside his habits and training. He was acting as a good trouser when he left the climax to Marston, and he seems to have remembered Marston's bit long afterward for the last scene of The Winter's Tale.

Having thus restored the poem to decency, one may consider its use of "inverted Platonism." It says that, because these two ideal lovers are dead, there will never be real lovers again, anywhere:

Truth may seem, but cannot be;
 Beauty brag, but 'tis not she;
 Truth and Beauty buried be. (lines 62-64)

However, the next and final verse abandons this high extremity of nonsense:

To this urn let those repair
 That are either true or fair;
 For these dead birds sigh a prayer. (lines 65-67)

I suppose the reason why Shakespeare can afford to be lax about it in this curious way, which allows him a graceful ending to the poem, is that he is working in an accepted mode. All the poets in the book seem in command of the trick, even Robert Chester; he uses it when the Pelican rejoices that the Turtle chose to burn alive, though the Phoenix tried to spare him (the experience turned out to be a pleasure, according to the Pelican's eye-witness account). Otherwise, he says:

Love had been murdered in the infancy;
 Without these two, no love at all can be.

It is clear then that Chester was writing another Myth of Origin. But can he have had the whole machine ready in 1587, a homely author, remotely secluded? This seemed to me a great puzzle, and I am glad to have it removed by W. H. Matchett's recent book on the poem (1965). He explains that Chester added the Pelican section, at the end of his first draft, when the squire took him to London to negotiate with the poets (the squire would not himself have demanded to be praised for married chastity). In a way, Chester must have known the idea from the start because it is inherent in this use of myth, but he had become uneasy about the absurdity of his whole plan; so that it would be a great relief when the smart poets, though they did laugh at him as he had expected, told him that his absurdity had become the height of fashion. He was inspired to add what is the most eloquent and personal section of the whole work.

Matchett has a very welcome energy of logic and research; what other critics limply assume, he follows up.⁵ I hope his book will drive out of people's minds the main idea which he champions, that Shakespeare was writing about the loves of Elizabeth and Essex; when he says that Shakespeare refers to the queen as already dead in order to rebuke her for not having followed his previous advice, whereas in fact the exasperated and appalling old woman had become dangerous to anybody who had to approach her, surely this is enough to act as a purge. But I think he is right (for instance) in saying that Jonson became frightened on hearing that the poems would appear during 1601, when they were likely to be supposed to be about Essex; he made some baffling remarks in his plays of that year, hoping to offset the publication. Matchett also gets his teeth into "inverted Platonism," as one might expect, and it is a great comfort to find a critic who is prepared to attend to the words. Somehow he contrives to denounce Marston and not Shakespeare for using this trope:

Against Shakespeare's materialistic basis for negative judgment, he asserts a pseudo-Platonic basis for positive judgment. As an exposition of Platonic abstractions, Marston's poem is an awkward melange; as a compliment to an allegorized individual—claiming that this person is himself the Idea upon which all else depends—his poem further degrades the very idealism it pretends to express.

Marston says he had been wondering why all the young girls were so ugly and stupid nowadays until he saw the new Phoenix, and then he realized that Nature had just been saving up, so as to give her everything. The eldest Salisbury child, a daughter, would have been about twelve when this was written for her, and it seems well enough calculated for her age-group; she would think it rather fun. If anything, I should call it science fiction, not Platonism; it does not deserve to be rebuked as false philosophy, because it scarcely even pretends to be philosophy. But somebody else deserves the rebuke; why do modern critics invariably write down that the trope is neo-platonic? Its effects, very various, are nearly always broader and more imaginative than would be gathered from this docketing.

Elizabethan jokes are notoriously confusing, but it would be wrong to think that the Welsh squire was being fooled by the city slickers. He wanted his book as jolly as was compatible with having it sustain the glory of his house, and he rejected the first draft of Ben Jonson's

⁵ He remarks that a scribe may write the name of the author after copying a poem without intending a signature, and this would destroy a good deal of the edifice of Carleton Brown. But if you wrote a name with set formal flourishes, surely that implied it was your signature.

Invocation"; at least, there is no other reason why this much more solemn version in Jonson's handwriting should have been kept among the Salisbury papers. And he must have strained the good will of his chaplain when he inserted his own "Cantos" at the end of the allegory, celebrating his delight in the beauty of the Phoenix in a very unsacrificial manner (only the first is announced as written by the Turtle, but they all have his very recognizable facility and ingenuity, and the printer might well get confused among the stage directions and acknowledgments). The celebration of his knighthood positively required family jollity; indeed, one can understand that Shakespeare, though willing to assist, felt he would avoid strain if he joined them only in their darkest hour. Even so, what he was joining was a kind of domestic game.

An important idea is at work in such love poetry, though admittedly one that was ridiculous in the eyes of the world; it forbade a husband to claim marital rights through his legal superiority, and such is the point of Shakespeare's ninth verse. We know that Chapman thought the affair funny, though in a grave pedantic manner, because he headed his piece (which praised the knight who has learned his virtues by serving his lady) "Peristeros, or the male Turtle." He has had to invent a masculine form for the word, since the Greeks considered all doves female; however monogamous they may be, the creatures do not know which sex they are, but try out the alternatives (Sir Julian Huxley, in Essays of a Biologist, reports this of various water birds). A female Phoenix had been invented by the Renaissance to gratify a taste for Amazons—till then its secret sex had been "known to God alone"; but a Turtle wearing the trousers does seem to have been a real novelty, not only for a classicist. It proved the grandeur of the Lion, as his poet almost says in the Epistle Dedicatory, that he was safe from ridicule even when presented as a Turtle. The Latin "Tur tur" no doubt gave to the cooing of the pets of Venus, in the minds of the poets, a deeper note of sultry passion; to make them into symbols of chastity thus put an extra strain upon the gravity of the reader—it had been the charm of the silly creatures that no frustration attended their single-minded desires. Shakespeare's poem is a wide valley brimful of an unspecified sorrow, but one should also feel, before hearing any explanation, the gaiety inherent in its effects of sound. As the anthem of the birds reaches its severest exultation, their tweeting modulates into the arch baby-talk of a dandling nurse; as we soar heavenward between the Co-supremes, we mysteriously almost graze the Cow that jumped over the Moon;

To themselves yet either neither,
Simple were so well compounded. (lines 43-44)

It does seem rather odd, in a way, that he went straight on from this to his great tragic period.

A NOTE ON THE TEXT

THE CANONICAL POEMS. Three nondramatic poems (other than the sonnets) are regularly attributed to Shakespeare: Venus and Adonis, The Rape of Lucrece, and The Phoenix and the Turtle. Venus and Adonis was first published in a quarto dated 1593, Lucrece (thus the title page, but the heading at the beginning of the poem, and on all the following pages, is The Rape of Lucrece) in a quarto dated 1594. Both quartos are dedicated to Shakespeare's patron, the Earl of Southampton. These two books were Shakespeare's first publications, and they were destined for a nobleman's eye; Shakespeare apparently read the proofs, and the texts are remarkably clean. There is no reason to believe that he had anything to do with the later quartos, which introduce numerous changes.

The third canonical poem, The Phoenix and the Turtle, appears (without a title) attributed to Shakespeare in a quarto (1601) whose title page reads in part: "Love's Martyr . . . allegorically shadowing the truth of Love, in the constant fate of the phoenix and turtle. . . . A poem . . . by Robert Chester. . . . To these [Chester's poem and other materials] are added some new compositions, of several modern writers, whose names are subscribed to their several works, upon the first subject, viz. the phoenix and turtle."

THE APOCRYPHAL POEMS. A Lover's Complaint appears at the end of the 1609 volume of Shakespeare's sonnets, published by Thomas Thorpe. No one doubts that the sonnets are Shakespeare's, but many doubt that A Lover's Complaint is his. The usual view is that the poem does not sound like Shakespeare, and that the publisher's ascription is of no value. The poem does not do Shakespeare great credit, and a fair number of its words do not appear elsewhere in Shakespeare; still, there is no evidence that anyone else wrote it. Thorpe's attribution is not compelling, but it is all the evidence there is.

In 1599 a dishonest publisher named William Jaggard issued The Passionate Pilgrim. By W. Shakespeare. The book contains twenty poems, of which five are certainly by Shakespeare and four are certainly not by Shakespeare. The remaining eleven are of uncertain authorship, but there is no reason (other than Jaggard's dubious word) to believe that Shakespeare wrote any of these, though of course he may have written one or more of them. The five poems by Shakespeare are numbered I, II, III, V, and XVI (I and II are versions of sonnets 138 and 144; III and V are versions of sonnets in Love's Labor's Lost, IV.iii.57-70 and IV.ii.107-20; XVI is a version of a short poem in Love's Labor's Lost, IV.iii.98-117). These five poems are given in the present volume in the Sonnets and Love's Labor's Lost. The four poems that are not by Shakespeare are VIII (by Richard Barnfield), XI (by Bartholomew Griffin), XIX (really two poems, probably one by Marlowe and one by Raleigh), and XX (by Richard Barnfield). The remaining eleven poems are presented here, though few people would care to claim them all for Shakespeare. They are for the most part competent, but only number XII has aroused much enthusiasm.

Departures from the copy texts are listed below. The adopted reading is given first in boldface type, followed by the original reading in roman. The copy text for Venus and Adonis and The Rape of Lucrece is of course the first quarto of each poem. The copy text of The Phoenix and the Turtle is Love's Martyr (1601), that of A Lover's Complaint is the quarto of 1609. The earliest known complete text of The Passionate Pilgrim is the second edition (1599), but some pages of the first edition (perhaps also 1599) survive at the Folger Library. This earlier edition provides texts of three (IV, XVII, and XVIII) of the eleven doubtful poems. The copy text for the other eight doubtful poems is necessarily the second edition.

Venus and Adonis 19 satiety sacietie 231, 239 deer deare
 432 Ear's Eares 616 javelin's iauelings 644 Saw'st Sawest 680 overshoot ouer-shut 748 th' the th' 754 sons suns 873 twine twin'd 940 dost doest 1031 as are 1054 was had
 The Rape of Lucrece 550 blows blow 883 mak'st makest
 884 blow'st blowest 1227 flower flowre 1312 schedule
 Cedula 1662 wreathèd wretched 1680 one woe on woe 1713 in it it in
 A Lover's Complaint 14 lattice lettice 80 Of O 95 wear were 112 manage mannad'g 118 Came Can 182 woo vow 241 Paling Playing 252 procured procure 260 nun Sunne
 293 O Or 311 as is⁶

⁶ William Empson suggests emending A Lover's Complaint, line 311, which reads: "Showing fair nature is both kind and tame." Mr. Empson writes: "It seems better, though not necessary, to

The Passionate Pilgrim IV 5 ear eares 10 her his VII 11 midst mids
 X 8, 9 left'st lefts
 XIV 24 sighed sight 27 a moon an houre
 XV 3 fair'st fairest
 XVII 28 back blacke 33 lass loue 34 moan woe
 XVIII 4 fancy's partial might fancy (partyall might) 12 thy her; sell sale 22 Press Prease 26, 29 ere yer 45 be by 51 ear are emend is to as, an easy change in itself. Otherwise kind and tame has to mean 'the fact that he could seduce any virgin makes them all look like sheep.' Maybe this was Shakespeare's opinion, but he does not express it so bleakly. Besides, them in the next line has to refer back to strange forms (line 303), the pretenses of tenderness which the seducer was skilled at adopting; if your mind is cluttered with tame ladies you miss the grammar. Nature here is chiefly the sexual experience, and he shows it to the virgins as not alarming; it really is fair, we are told by the author and the wronged lady, and this should content us. They can hardly want to assert that it is always tame."

VENUS AND ADONIS

*Vilia miretur vulgus: mihi flavus Apollo
Pocula Castalia plena ministret aqua.*^o

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE
HENRY WRIOTHESLEY^o
Earl of Southampton and Baron of Titchfield

RIGHT HONORABLE,

I know not how I shall offend in dedicating my unpolished lines to your lordship, nor how the world will censure me for choosing so strong a prop to support so weak a burden; only, if your honor seem but pleased, I account myself highly praised, and vow to take advantage of all idle hours, till I have honored you with some graver labor. But if the first heir of my invention^o prove deformed, I shall be sorry it had so noble a godfather, and never after ear^o so barren a land, for fear it yield me still so bad a harvest. I leave it to your honorable survey, and your honor to your heart's content; which I wish may always answer your own wish and the world's hopeful expectation.

Your honor's in all duty,
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.

Even as the sun with purple-colored^o face
Had ta'en his last leave of the weeping morn,
Rose-cheeked Adonis hied him to the chase;
Hunting he loved, but love he laughed to scorn.
Sick-thoughted^o Venus makes amain^o unto him,
And like a bold-faced suitor 'gins to woo him.

"Thrice fairer than myself," thus she began,
"The field's chief flower, sweet above compare,
Stain to all nymphs,^o more lovely than a man,
More white and red than doves or roses are,
Nature that made thee, with herself at strife,
Saith that the world hath ending with thy life.

The decorative border shown above appeared on the title page of the quarto edition of The Rape of Lucrece, 1594.

Vilia . . . aqua from Ovid, Amores, I.xv.35-36: "Let the mob admire base things; may golden Apollo serve me full cups from the Castalian spring" 2 Henry Wriothesley third Earl of Southampton, 1573-1624, thought to be Shakespeare's patron 8 first . . . invention my first work brought to publication (a number of plays had already been written and produced but were unpublished; and plays were usually considered not worth publishing) 9 ear plow, till 1 purple-colored crimson 5 Sick-thoughted lovesick; amain swiftly, strongly 9 Stain . . . nymphs i.e., by his surpassing beauty he eclipses them

"Vouchsafe, thou wonder, to alight thy steed,
And rein his proud head to the saddlebow.
If thou wilt deign this favor, for thy meed^o
A thousand honey^o secrets shalt thou know.
Here come and sit, where never serpent hisses,
And being set, I'll smother thee with kisses.

"And yet not cloy thy lips with loathed satiety,
But rather famish them amid their plenty,
Making them red and pale with fresh variety:
Ten kisses short as one, one long as twenty.
A summer's day will seem an hour but short,
Being wasted^o in such time-beguiling sport."

With this she seizeth on his sweating palm,
The precedent of pith and livelihood,^o
And trembling in her passion, calls it balm,
Earth's sovereign salve to do a goddess good:
Being so enraged,^o desire doth lend her force
Courageously to pluck him from his horse.

15 meed reward 16 honey sweet 24 wasted spent 26 precedent . . . livelihood sign of strength and energy
29 enraged aroused

Over one arm the lusty courser's rein,
Under her other was the tender boy,
Who blushed and pouted in a dull disdain,
With leaden appetite, unapt to toy;^o
She red and hot as coals of glowing fire,
He red for shame, but frosty in desire.

The studded bridle on a ragged bough
Nimbly she fastens. O, how quick is love!
The steed is stalled up, and even now
To tie the rider she begins to prove.^o
Backward she pushed him, as she would be thrust,
And governed him in strength, though not in lust.

So soon was she along^o as he was down,
Each leaning on their elbows and their hips.
Now doth she stroke his cheek, now doth he frown
And 'gins to chide, but soon she stops his lips,
And kissing speaks, with lustful language broken,
"If thou wilt chide, thy lips shall never open."

He burns with bashful shame; she with her tears
Doth quench the maiden burning of his cheeks;
Then with her windy sighs and golden hairs
To fan and blow them dry again she seeks.
He saith she is immodest, blames her miss;^o
What follows more, she murders with a kiss.

Even as an empty eagle, sharp by fast,^o
Tires^o with her beak on feathers, flesh, and bone,
Shaking her wings, devouring all in haste,
Till either gorge be stuffed or prey be gone—
Even so she kissed his brow, his cheek, his chin,
And where she ends she doth anew begin.

Forced to content,^o but never to obey,
Panting he lies and breatheth in her face.
She feedeth on the steam as on a prey
And calls it heavenly moisture, air of grace,
Wishing her cheeks were gardens full of flowers,
So they were dewed with such distilling showers.

Look how^o a bird lies tangled in a net,
So fastened in her arms Adonis lies.
Pure shame and awed^o resistance made him fret,
Which bred more beauty in his angry eyes:
Rain added to a river that is rank^o
Perforce will force it overflow the bank.

Still she entreats, and prettily entreats,
For to a pretty ear^o she tunes her tale.
Still is he sullen, still he low'rs and frets,
'Twixt crimson shame and anger ashy-pale.
Being red, she loves him best; and being white,
Her best is bettered with a more^o delight.

Look how he can, she cannot choose but love;
And by her fair immortal hand she swears
From his soft bosom never to remove
Till he take truce with her contending tears,
Which long have rained, making her cheeks all wet;
And one sweet kiss shall pay this comptless^o debt.

Upon this promise did he raise his chin,
Like a divedapper^o peering through a wave,
Who, being looked on, ducks as quickly in:
So offers her to give what she did crave,
But when her lips were ready for his pay,
He winks,^o and turns his lips another way.

Never did passenger^o in summer's heat
More thirst for drink than she for this good turn.
Her help she sees, but help she cannot get;
She bathes in water, yet her fire must burn.
"O, pity," 'gan she cry, "flint-hearted boy!
'Tis but a kiss I beg—why art thou coy?"

"I have been wooed as I entreat thee now,
Even by the stern and direful god of war,
Whose sinewy neck in battle ne'er did bow,
Who conquers where he comes in every jar;^o
Yet hath he been my captive and my slave,
And begged for that which thou unasked shalt have.

"Over my altars hath he hung his lance,
His batt' red shield, his uncontrollèd crest,^o
And for my sake hath learned to sport and dance,
To toy, to wanton, dally, smile, and jest,
Scorning his churlish drum and ensign red,
Making my arms his field, his tent my bed.

"Thus he that overruled I overswayèd,
Leading him prisoner in a red-rose chain.
Strong-tempered steel his stronger strength obeyèd;
Yet was he servile to my coy disdain.
O, be not proud, nor brag not of thy might,
For mast'ring her that foiled the god of fight!

"Touch but my lips with those fair lips of thine—
Though mine be not so fair, yet are they red—
The kiss shall be thine own as well as mine.
What see'st thou in the ground? Hold up thy head,
Look in mine eyeballs, there thy beauty lies,
Then why not lips on lips, since eyes in eyes?"

"Art thou ashamed to kiss? Then wink^o again,
And I will wink; so shall the day seem night.
Love keeps his revels where there are but twain.
Be bold to play; our sport is not in sight.
These blue-veined violets whereon we lean
Never can blab, nor know not what we mean.

34 unapt to toy not ready for love's play 40 prove try 43 along stretched out 53 miss misbehavior 55 sharp by fast hungry from fasting 56 Tires tears 61 content endure 67 Look how just as 69 awed intimidated 71 rank full 74 ear pun on air 78 more greater

84 comptless countless 86 divedapper small waterbird 90
winks (1) winces (2) shuts his eyes 91 passenger traveler 100 jar fight 104 uncontrollèd crest unbowed helmet 121 wink close your eyes

"The tender spring^o upon thy tempting lip
Shows thee unripe; yet mayst thou well be tasted.
Make use of time, let not advantage slip;
Beauty within itself should not be wasted.
Fair flowers that are not gath' red in their prime Rot and consume themselves in little time.

130

"Were I hard-favored, foul, or wrinkled old,
Ill-nurtured, crooked, churlish, harsh in voice,
O'erworn, despised, rheumatic, and cold,
Thick-sighted,^o barren, lean, and lacking juice,
Then mightst thou pause, for then I were not for
thee;
But having no defects, why dost abhor me?

135

"Thou canst not see one wrinkle in my brow;
Mine eyes are gray and bright and quick in turning.
My beauty as the spring doth yearly grow,
My flesh is soft and plump, my marrow burning;
My smooth moist hand, were it with thy hand felt,
Would in thy palm dissolve, or seem to melt.

140

"Bid me discourse, I will enchant thine ear,
Or like a fairy trip upon the green,
Or like a nymph with long dishevelled hair,
Dance on the sands, and yet no footing seen.
Love is a spirit all compact^o of fire,
Not gross to sink, but light, and will aspire.^o 145

150

"Witness this primrose bank whereon I lie;^o
These forceless^o flowers like sturdy trees support me.
Two strengthless doves will draw me through the sky
From morn till night, even where I list to sport me.
Is love so light, sweet boy, and may it be
That thou should think it heavy unto thee?

155

"Is thine own heart to thine own face affected?^o
Can thy right hand seize love upon thy left?
Then woo thyself, be of thyself rejected;
Steal thine own freedom, and complain on theft.
Narcissus^o so himself himself forsook,
And died to kiss his shadow in the brook.

160

"Torches are made to light, jewels to wear,
Dainties to taste, fresh beauty for the use,
Herbs for their smell, and sappy plants to bear.
Things growing to themselves are growth's abuse.
Seeds spring from seeds, and beauty breedeth beauty.
Thou wast begot; to get it is thy duty.

165

"Upon the earth's increase^o why shouldst thou feed
Unless the earth with thy increase be fed?
By law of nature thou art bound to breed,
That thine may live when thou thyself art dead;
And so in spite of death thou dost survive,
In that thy likeness still is left alive."

170

By this^o the lovesick queen began to sweat,
For where they lay the shadow had forsook them,
And Titan,^o tired in the midday heat,
With burning eye did hotly overlook them,
Wishing Adonis had his team to guide,
So he were like him, and by Venus' side.

175

180

And now Adonis, with a lazy sprite,^o
And with a heavy, dark, disliking eye,
His low'ring brows o'erwhelming his fair sight,
Like misty vapors when they blot the sky,
Souring his cheeks, cries, "Fie, no more of love!
The sun doth burn my face—I must remove."

185

"Ay me," quoth Venus, "young, and so unkind?
What bare^o excuses mak'st thou to be gone!
I'll sigh celestial breath, whose gentle wind
Shall cool the heat of this descending sun.
I'll make a shadow for thee of my hairs;
If they burn too, I'll quench them with my tears.

190

"The sun that shines from heaven shines but warm,
And, lo, I lie between that sun and thee:
The heat I have from thence doth little harm,
Thine eye darts forth the fire that burneth me;
And were I not immortal, life were done
Between this heavenly and earthly sun.

195

"Art thou obdurate, flinty, hard as steel?
Nay, more than flint, for stone at rain relenteth.^o
Art thou a woman's son, and canst not feel
What 'tis to love? how want of love tormenteth?
O, had thy mother borne so hard a mind,
She had not brought forth thee, but died unkind.

200

"What am I that thou shouldst condemn me this?^o
Or what great danger dwells upon my suit?
What were thy lips the worse for one poor kiss?
Speak, fair,^o but speak fair words or else be mute.
Give me one kiss, I'll give it thee again,
And one for int'rest, if thou wilt have twain.

205

210

"Fie, lifeless picture, cold and senseless stone,
Well-painted idol, image dull and dead,
Statue contenting but the eye alone,
Thing like a man, but of no woman bred!
Thou art no man, though of a man's complexion,^o
For men will kiss even by their own direction."^o

215

This said, impatience chokes her pleading tongue,
And swelling passion doth provoke a pause.
Red cheeks and fiery eyes blaze forth her wrong;
Being judge in love, she cannot right her cause.^o
And now she weeps, and now she fain^o would speak,
And now her sobs do her intendments break.^o

220

127 tender spring young growth (that will become a beard)
136 Thick-sighted with poor eyesight 149 compact composed 150 aspire rise up, float 151 Witness . . . lie let this bank whereon I lie bear witness 152 forceless frail, without strength 157 to . . . affected in love with thine own face 161 Narcissus a beautiful youth who fell in love with his own reflection 169 increase produce

175 By this by this time, now 177 Titan the sun god 181 lazy sprite dull spirit 188 bare inadequate 200 relenteth
i.e., is worn away 205 this thus 208 fair fair one 215 complexion external appearance 216 direction volition 220 Being . . . cause i.e., though Venus is the judge in all disputes of love, she cannot obtain justice for herself 221 fain gladly 222 intendments break intentions (i.e., what she was going to say) interrupt

Sometime she shakes her head, and then his hand,
 Now gazeth she on him, now on the ground.
 Sometime her arms infold him like a band:
 She would, he will not in her arms be bound.
 And when from thence he struggles to be gone,
 She locks her lily fingers one in one.

"Fondling,"^o she saith, "since I have hemmed thee here
 Within the circuit of this ivory pale,^o
 I'll be a park, and thou shalt be my deer:
 Feed where thou wilt, on mountain or in dale;
 Graze on my lips; and if those hills be dry,
 Stray lower, where the pleasant fountains lie.

"Within this limit is relief^o enough,
 Sweet bottom-grass,^o and high delightful plain,
 Round rising hillocks, brakes^o obscure and rough,
 To shelter thee from tempest and from rain.
 Then be my deer since I am such a park;
 No dog shall rouse^o thee though a thousand bark."^o

At this Adonis smiles as in disdain,
 That^o in each cheek appears a pretty dimple;
 Love made those hollows, if^o himself were slain,
 He might be buried in a tomb so simple,
 Foreknowing well, if there he came to lie,
 Why, there Love lived, and there he could not die.

These lovely caves, these round enchanting pits,
 Opened their mouths to swallow Venus' liking.^o
 Being mad before, how doth she now for wits?
 Struck dead at first, what needs a second striking?
 Poor queen of love, in thine own law forlorn,
 To love a cheek that smiles at thee in scorn!

Now which way shall she turn? What shall she say?
 Her words are done, her woes the more increasing;
 The time is spent, her object will away,
 And from her twining arms doth urge releasing.
 "Pity!" she cries, "some favor, some remorse!"^o
 Away he springs and hasteth to his horse.

But, lo, from forth a copse that neighbors by
 A breeding jennet,^o lusty, young, and proud,
 Adonis' trampling courser doth espy,
 And forth she rushes, snorts, and neighs aloud.
 The strong-necked steed, being tied unto a tree,
 Breaketh his rein, and to her straight goes he.

Imperiously he leaps, he neighs, he bounds,
 And now his woven girths he breaks asunder;
 The bearing^o earth with his hard hoof he wounds,
 Whose hollow womb resounds like heaven's thunder;
 The iron bit he crusheth 'tween his teeth,
 Controlling what he was controllèd with.

His ears up-pricked, his braided hanging mane
 Upon his compassed crest^o now stand on end;
 His nostrils drink the air, and forth again,
 As from a furnace, vapors doth he send;
 His eye, which scornfully glisters like fire,
 Shows his hot courage^o and his high desire.

Sometime he trots, as if he told^o the steps,
 With gentle majesty and modest pride;
 Anon he rears upright, curvets,^o and leaps,
 As who should say, "Lo, thus my strength is tried,
 And this I do to captivate the eye
 Of the fair breeder that is standing by."

What reckoneth he his rider's angry stir,^o
 His flattering^o "Holla" or his "Stand, I say"?
 What cares he now for curb or pricking spur,
 For rich caparisons or trappings gay?
 He sees his love, and nothing else he sees,
 For nothing else with his proud sight agrees.

Look when^o a painter would surpass the life
 In limning^o out a well-proportioned steed,
 His art with nature's workmanship at strife,
 As if the dead the living should exceed—
 So did this horse excel a common one
 In shape, in courage, color, pace, and bone.^o

Round-hoofed, short-jointed, fetlocks shag and long,
 Broad breast, full eye, small head, and nostril wide,
 High crest, short ears, straight legs and passing strong,
 Thin mane, thick tail, broad buttock, tender hide:
 Look what^o a horse should have he did not lack,
 Save a proud rider on so proud a back.

Sometimes he scuds far off, and there he stares;
 Anon he starts at stirring of a feather.
 To bid the wind a base^o he now prepares,
 And whe'r^o he run or fly they know not whether,
 For through his mane and tail the high wind sings,
 Fanning the hairs, who wave like feath' red wings.

He looks upon his love and neighs unto her;
 She answers him, as if she knew his mind.
 Being proud, as females are, to see him woo her,
 She puts on outward strangeness,^o seems unkind,
 Spurns at his love and scorns the heat he feels,
 Beating his kind embracements with her heels.

Then, like a melancholy malcontent,
 He vails^o his tail, that, like a falling plume,
 Cool shadow to his melting buttock lent;
 He stamps, and bites the poor flies in his fume.^o
 His love, perceiving how he was enraged,
 Grew kinder, and his fury was assuaged.

229 Fondling little fool (affectionate) 230 pale fence (here, her arms) 235 relief (1) topography, as on a relief-map (2) (sexual) satisfaction 236 bottom-grass valley-grass 237 brakes thickets 240 rouse drive from cover 242 That so that 243 if so that if he 248 liking desire 257 remorse mercy 260 jennet small Spanish horse 267 bearing receiving

272 compassed crest arched ridge of the neck 276 courage lust 277 told counted 279 curvets hops 283 stir excitement 284 flattering calming 289 Look when just as 290 limning out drawing 294 bone frame 299 Look what whatever 303 bid . . . base challenge the wind to a chase 304 whe'r whether 310 outward strangeness show of indifference 314 vails lowers 316 fume rage

His testy master goeth about to take him,
 When, lo, the unbacked^o breeder, full of fear,
 Jealous of catching,^o swiftly doth forsake him,
 With her the horse,^o and left Adonis there.
 As they were mad unto the wood they hie them,
 Outstripping crows that strive to overfly them.

All swol'n with chafing, down Adonis sits,
 Banning^o his boist'rous and unruly beast;
 And now the happy season once more fits
 That lovesick Love^o by pleading may be blest;
 For lovers say the heart hath treble wrong
 When it is barred the aidance of the tongue.

An oven that is stopped, or river stayed,
 Burneth more hotly, swelleth with more rage;
 So of concealèd sorrow may be said
 Free vent of words love's fire doth assuage;
 But when the heart's attorney^o once is mute,
 The client breaks,^o as desperate in his suit.

He sees her coming and begins to glow,
 Even as a dying coal revives with wind,
 And with his bonnet hides his angry brow,
 Looks on the dull earth with disturbèd mind,
 Taking no notice that she is so nigh,
 For all askance he holds her in his eye.

O, what a sight it was, wistly^o to view
 How she came stealing to the wayward^o boy!
 To note the fighting conflict of her hue,
 How white and red each other did destroy!
 But now her cheek was pale, and by and by^o
 It flashed forth fire, as lightning from the sky.

Now was she just before him as he sat,
 And like a lowly lover down she kneels;
 With one fair hand she heaveth up his hat,
 Her other tender hand his fair cheek feels.
 His tend'rer cheek receives her soft hand's print
 As apt as new-fall'n snow takes any dint.^o

O, what a war of looks was then between them,
 Her eyes petitioners to his eyes suing!
 His eyes saw her eyes as^o they had not seen them;
 Her eyes wooed still, his eyes disdained the wooing;
 And all this dumb play^o had his^o acts made plain
 With tears which choruslike^o her eyes did rain.

Full gently now she takes him by the hand,
 A lily prisoned in a jail of snow,
 Or ivory in an alabaster band:
 So white a friend engirts so white a foe.
 This beauteous combat, willful and unwilling,
 Showed like two silver doves that sit a-billing.

Once more the engine of her thoughts^o began:
 320 "O fairest mover on this mortal round,^o
 Would thou wert as I am, and I a man,
 My heart all whole as thine, thy heart my wound!^o 370
 For one sweet look thy help I would assure thee,
 Though nothing but my body's bane^o would cure thee."

325 "Give me my hand," saith he. "Why dost thou feel it?"
 "Give me my heart," saith she, "and thou shalt have it.
 O, give it me lest thy hard heart do steel^o it, 375
 And being steeled, soft sighs can never grave^o it.
 Then love's deep groans I never shall regard,
 330 Because Adonis' heart hath made mine hard."

"For shame!" he cries. "Let go, and let me go:
 My day's delight is past, my horse is gone, 380
 And 'tis your fault I am bereft him so.
 I pray you hence, and leave me here alone;
 335 For all my mind, my thought, my busy care
 Is how to get my palfrey from the mare."

Thus she replies: "Thy palfrey, as he should, 385
 Welcomes the warm approach of sweet desire.
 Affection^o is a coal that must be cooled;
 340 Else, suffered,^o it will set the heart on fire.
 The sea hath bounds, but deep desire hath none;
 Therefore no marvel though thy horse be gone. 390

"How like a jade^o he stood, tied to the tree,
 Servilely mastered with a leathern rein;
 345 But when he saw his love, his youth's fair fee,^o
 He held such petty bondage in disdain,
 Throwing the base thong from his bending crest, 395
 Enfranchising^o his mouth, his back, his breast.

"Who sees his true-love in her naked^o bed,
 350 Teaching the sheets a whiter hue than white,
 But, when his glutton eye so full hath fed,
 His other agents^o aim at like delight? 400
 Who is so faint that dares not be so bold
 To touch the fire, the weather being cold?

355 "Let me excuse thy courser, gentle boy;
 And learn of him, I heartly beseech thee,
 To take advantage on^o presented joy. 405
 Though I were dumb, yet his proceedings teach thee.
 O, learn to love! The lesson is but plain,
 360 And once made perfect, never lost again."

"I know not love," quoth he, "nor will not know it,
 Unless it be a boar, and then I chase it. 410
 'Tis much to borrow, and I will not owe^o it:
 My love to love is love but to disgrace it;^o
 365 For I have heard it is a life in death,
 That laughs and weeps, and all but with a^o breath.

320 unbacked unbroken 321 Jealous of catching afraid of being caught 322 horse i.e., stallion 326 Banning cursing 328 Love Venus 335 the heart's attorney the tongue
 336 breaks goes bankrupt 343 wistly attentively 344 wayward willful 347 by and by quickly 354 dint impression 357 as as if 359 dumb play dumb show, pantomime; his its 360 choruslike i.e., served as a commentator

367 engine . . . thoughts her tongue 368 mover . . .
 round living creature on earth 370 my wound i.e., wounded like mine 372 bane ruin 375 steel turn to steel 376 grave engrave 387 Affection passion 388 suffered tolerated 391 jade contemptuous term for horse 393 fair fee due reward 396 Enfranchising setting free 397 naked modifies
 "true-love," not "bed" 400 agents organs 405 on of 411 owe own 412 My . . . it my only attitude toward love is a desire to discredit it 414 but with a in the same

- “Who wears a garment shapeless and unfinished?
Who plucks the bud before one leaf put forth?
If springing things be any jot diminished,
They wither in their prime, prove nothing worth.
The colt that’s backed° and burdened being young Loseth his pride, and never waxeth strong.
- “You hurt my hand with wringing; let us part,
And leave this idle theme, this bootless° chat;
Remove your siege from my unyielding heart;
To love’s alarms° it will not ope the gate.
Dismiss your vows, your feignèd tears, your flatt’ry; 425
For where a heart is hard they make no batt’ry.”°
- “What! canst thou talk?” quoth she. “Hast thou a
tongue?
O, would thou hadst not, or I had no hearing!
Thy mermaid’s° voice hath done me double wrong;
I had my load before, now pressed° with bearing: 430
Melodious discord, heavenly tune harsh sounding, Ear’s deep-sweet music, and heart’s deep-sore wounding.
- “Had I no eyes but ears, my ears would love
That inward beauty and invisible;
Or were I deaf, thy outward parts would move
Each part in me that were but sensible.° 435
Though neither eyes nor ears, to hear nor see,
Yet should I be in love by touching thee.
- “Say that the sense of feeling were bereft me,
And that I could not see, nor hear, nor touch, 440
And nothing but the very smell were left me,
Yet would my love to thee be still as much;
For from the stillitory° of thy face excelling Comes breath perfumed that breedeth love by smelling.
- “But, O, what banquet wert thou to the taste,
Being nurse and feeder to the other four!
Would they not wish the feast might ever last
And bid Suspicion double-lock the door,
Lest Jealousy, that sour unwelcome guest,
Should by his stealing in disturb the feast?” 450
- Once more the ruby-colored portal opened
Which to his speech did honey passage yield;
Like a red morn that ever yet betokened
Wrack° to the seaman, tempest to the field,
Sorrow to shepherds, woe unto the birds,
Gusts and foul flaws° to herdmen and to herds.
- This ill presage advisedly she marketh.
Even as the wind is hushed before it raineth,
Or as the wolf doth grin° before he barketh,
Or as the berry breaks before it staineth, 460
Or like the deadly bullet of a gun,
His meaning struck her ere his words begun.
- And at his look she flatly falleth down,
For looks kill love, and love by looks reviveth;
A smile recures° the wounding of a frown. 465
But blessèd bankrout° that by love so thriveth!
The silly° boy, believing she is dead,
Claps her pale cheek, till clapping makes it red, 470
- And all amazed brake off his late intent,
For sharply he did think to reprehend her,
Which cunning love did wittily° prevent. 475
Fair fall° the wit that can so well defend her!
For on the grass she lies as she were slain
Till his breath breatheth life in her again.
- He wrings her nose, he strikes her on the cheeks, 475
He bends her fingers, holds her pulses hard,
He chafes her lips; a thousand ways he seeks
To mend the hurt that his unkindness marred.°
He kisses her; and she, by her good will,° 480
Will never rise, so he will kiss her still.
- The night of sorrow now is turned to day:
Her two blue windows° faintly she upheaveth,
Like the fair sun when in his fresh array
He cheers the morn and all the earth relieveth;
And so the bright sun glorifies the sky, 485
So is her face illumined with her eye;
- Whose beams upon his hairless face are fixed,
As if from thence they borrowed all their shine.
Were never four such lamps together mixed,
Had not his clouded with his brow’s repine;° 490
But hers, which through the crystal tears gave light, Shone like the moon in water seen by night.
- “O, where am I?” quoth she, “in earth or heaven,
Or in the ocean drenched, or in the fire?
What hour is this? or morn or° weary even? 495
Do I delight to die, or life desire?
But now I lived, and life was death’s annoy;°
But now I died, and death was lively joy.
- “O, thou didst kill me, kill me once again!
Thy eyes’ shrewd° tutor, that hard heart of thine, 500
Hath taught them scornful tricks, and such disdain
That they have murd’red this poor heart of mine;
And these mine eyes, true leaders to their queen,°
But for thy piteous lips no more had seen.
- “Long may they kiss each other, for this cure!
O, never let their crimson liveries wear;° 505
And as they last, their verdure° still endure,
To drive infection from the dangerous year;
That the stargazers, having writ on death,°
May say the plague is banished by thy breath. 510

419 backed broken in 422 bootless useless 424 alarms attacks 426 batt’ry successful entry 429 mermaid’s siren’s 430 pressed oppressed 436 sensible able to receive any other sensations 443 stillitory distilling plant 454 Wrack wreck 456 flaws blasts of wind 459 grin bare its fangs

465 recures heals 466 bankrout bankrupt 467 silly innocent 471 wittily cleverly 472 Fair fall prosperity befall 478 marred inflicted 479 by . . . will willingly 482 blue windows her eyelids 490 repine vexation 495 or . . . or either . . . or 497 annoy torment 500 shrewd harsh 503 their queen the heart 506 crimson liveries wear red colors wear out 507 verdure freshness 509 stargazers . . . death astrologers, who have predicted an epidemic

"Pure lips, sweet seals in my soft lips imprinted,
What bargains may I make, still° to be sealing?°
To sell myself I can be well contented,
So thou wilt buy, and pay, and use good dealing;
Which purchase if thou make, for fear of slips°
Set thy seal manual° on my wax-red lips.

515

"A thousand kisses buys my heart from me;
And pay them at thy leisure, one by one.
What is ten hundred touches° unto thee?
Are they not quickly told° and quickly gone?
Say for nonpayment that the debt should double,
Is twenty hundred kisses such a trouble?"

520

"Fair queen," quoth he, "if any love you owe° me,
Measure my strangeness with my unripe years.°
Before I know myself, seek not to know me:
No fisher but the ungrown fry° forbears;
The mellow plum doth fall, the green sticks fast,
Or being early plucked is sour to taste.

525

"Look, the world's comforter, with weary gait,
His day's hot task hath ended in the west;
The owl, night's herald, shrieks; 'tis very late;
The sheep are gone to fold, birds to their nest,
And coal-black clouds that shadow heaven's light
Do summon us to part, and bid good night.

"Now let me say good night, and so say you.
If you will say so, you shall have a kiss."
"Good night," quoth she; and, ere he says "Adieu,"
The honey fee of parting tend' red is:
Her arms do lend his neck a sweet embrace;
Incorporate° then they seem; face grows to face;

535

540

Till breathless he disjoined, and backward drew
The heavenly moisture, that sweet coral mouth,
Whose precious taste her thirsty lips well knew,
Whereon they surfeit, yet complain on drouth.
He with her plenty pressed,° she faint with dearth,
Their lips together glued, fall to the earth.

545

Now quick desire hath caught the yielding prey,
And gluttonlike she feeds, yet never filleth.
Her lips are conquerors, his lips obey,
Paying what ransom the insulter° willeth;
Whose vulture thought doth pitch the price so high
That she will draw his lips' rich treasure dry.

550

And having felt the sweetness of the spoil,
With blindfold fury she begins to forage;
Her face doth reek° and smoke, her blood doth boil,
And careless lust stirs up a desperate courage,
Planting oblivion, beating reason back,
Forgetting shame's pure blush and honor's wrack.

555

Hot, faint, and weary with her hard embracing,
Like a wild bird being tamed with too much handling, 560
Or as the fleet-foot roe that's tired with chasing,
Or like the froward° infant stilled with dandling,
He now obeys and now no more resisteth,
While she takes all she can, not all she listeth.°

What wax so frozen but dissolves with temp'ring 565
And yields at last to every light impression?
Things out of° hope are compassed oft with vent'ring,° Chiefly in love, whose leave exceeds commission.°
Affection° faints not like a pale-faced coward,
But then woos best when most his choice is froward.° 570

When he did frown, O, had she then gave over,
Such nectar from his lips she had not sucked.
Foul° words and frowns must not repel a lover.
What though the rose have prickles, yet 'tis plucked.
Were beauty under twenty locks kept fast, 575
Yet love breaks through and picks them all at last.

For pity now she can no more detain him;
The poor fool° prays her that he may depart.
She is resolved no longer to restrain him;
Bids him farewell, and look well to her heart, 580
The which, by Cupid's bow she doth protest,
He carries thence incaged in his breast.

"Sweet boy," she says, "this night I'll waste° in sorrow,
For my sick heart commands mine eyes to watch.°
Tell me, love's master, shall we meet tomorrow? 585
Say, shall we? shall we? wilt thou make the match?"
He tells her no; tomorrow he intends
To hunt the boar with certain of his friends.

585

"The boar!" quoth she; whereat a sudden pale,°
Like lawn° being spread upon the blushing rose, 590
Usurps her cheek; she trembles at his tale,
And on his neck her yoking arms she throws.
She sinketh down, still hanging by his neck,
He on her belly falls, she on her back.

590

Now is she in the very lists° of love, 595
Her champion mounted for the hot encounter.
All is imaginary she doth prove,°
He will not manage° her, although he mount her;
That worse than Tantalus' is her annoy,°
To clip° Elysium and to lack her joy. 600

595

600

512 still always; sealing i.e., kissing 515 slips errors 516 seal manual signet ring (i.e., lips) 519 touches i.e., kisses 520 told counted 523 owe bear 524 Measure . . . years account for my shyness by my youth 526 fry young fish 540 Incorporate joined into one body 545 pressed oppressed 550 insulter exultant winner 555 reek i.e., steam

562 froward fretful 564 listeth wants 567 out of beyond; compassed . . . vent'ring achieved often by venturing 568 leave exceeds commission liberty goes beyond what was permitted 569 Affection passion, desire 570 when . . . froward when the object of his passion is most obstinate 573 Foul unpleasant 578 poor fool expression of tenderness 583 waste spend 584 watch stay open 589 pale pallor 590 lawn a fine linen 595 lists field of combat 597 prove experience (i.e., all that she experiences is in her imagination) 598 manage ride 599 That . . . annoy so that her torment is worse than that of Tantalus (in Hades, Tantalus was surrounded by food and drink that he could never touch) 600 clip embrace

Even so poor birds, deceived with painted grapes,
Do surfeit by the eye and pine the maw;°
Even so she languisheth in her mishaps
As those poor birds that helpless berries saw.
The warm effects° which she in him finds missing 605
She seeks to kindle with continual kissing.

But all in vain; good queen, it will not be!
She hath assayed° as much as may be proved:°
Her pleading hath deserved a greater fee;
She's Love, she loves, and yet she is not loved. 610
"Fie, fie!" he says. "You crush me; let me go!
You have no reason to withhold me so."

"Thou hadst been gone," quoth she, "sweet boy, ere
this,
But that thou told'st me thou wouldst hunt the boar.
O, be advised, thou know'st not what it is 615
With javelin's point a churlish swine to gore,
Whose tushes° never sheathed he whetteth still,
Like to a mortal° butcher bent to kill.

"On his bow-back he hath a battle set
Of bristly pikes that ever threat his foes;
His eyes like glowworms shine when he doth fret;°
His snout digs sepulchers where'er he goes;
Being moved,° he strikes whate'er is in his way,
And whom he strikes his crooked tushes slay.

"His brawny sides, with hairy bristles armèd,
Are better proof° than thy spear's point can enter;
His short thick neck cannot be easily harmèd;
Being ireful, on the lion he will venter.°
The thorny brambles and embracing bushes,
As fearful of him, part; through whom he rushes. 630

"Alas, he naught esteems that face of thine,
To which Love's eyes pays tributary gazes;
Nor thy soft hands, sweet lips, and crystal eyne,°
Whose full perfection all the world amazes;
But having thee at vantage (wondrous dread!)
Would root° these beauties as he roots the mead.

"O, let him keep his loathsome cabin° still:
Beauty hath naught to do with such foul fiends.
Come not within his danger° by thy will.
They that thrive well take counsel of their friends. 640
When thou didst name the boar, not to dissemble,°
I feared thy fortune, and my joints did tremble.

"Didst thou not mark my face? Was it not white?
Saw'st thou not signs of fear lurk in mine eye?
Grew I not faint? and fell I not downright?° 645
Within my bosom, whereon thou dost lie,
My boding heart pants, beats, and takes no rest,
But, like an earthquake, shakes thee on my breast.

"For where Love reigns, disturbing Jealousy°
Doth call himself Affection's sentinel, 650
Gives false alarms, suggesteth° mutiny,
And in a peaceful hour doth cry, 'Kill, kill!'
Distemp'ring° gentle Love in his desire,
As air and water do abate the fire.

"This sour informer, this bate-breeding° spy, 655
This canker° that eats up Love's tender spring,°
This carry-tale, dissentious Jealousy,
That sometime true news, sometime false doth bring,
Knocks at my heart, and whispers in mine ear
That if I love thee, I thy death should fear. 660

"And more than so, presenteth to mine eye
The picture of an angry-chafing boar,
Under whose sharp fangs on his back doth lie
An image like thyself, all stained with gore;
Whose blood upon the fresh flowers being shed 665
Doth make them droop with grief and hang the head.

"What should I do, seeing thee so indeed,
That tremble at th' imagination?
The thought of it doth make my faint heart bleed, 670
And fear doth teach it divination.
I prophesy thy death, my living sorrow,
If thou encounter with the boar tomorrow.

"But if thou needs wilt hunt, be ruled by me:
Uncouple at° the timorous flying hare,
Or at the fox which lives by subtlety, 675
Or at the roe which no encounter dare.
Pursue these fearful° creatures o'er the downs,
And on thy well-breathed° horse keep with thy hounds.

"And when thou hast on foot° the purblind° hare,
Mark the poor wretch, to overshoot° his troubles, 680
How he outruns the wind, and with what care
He cranks° and crosses with a thousand doubles.
The many musits° through the which he goes
Are like a labyrinth to amaze° his foes.

Sometime he runs among a flock of sheep, 685
To make the cunning hounds mistake their smell,
And sometime where earth-delving conies keep,°
To stop the loud pursuers in their yell;°
And sometime sorteth° with a herd of deer.
Danger deviseth shifts,° wit waits on° fear; 690

602 pine the maw starve the stomach 605 effects consequences 608 assayed tried; proved tried 617 tushes tusks
618 mortal deadly 621 fret rage 623 moved angered 626 better proof stronger armor 628 venter venture 633 eyne eyes 636 root uproot 637 cabin i.e., sty 639 within his danger within distance of his power to harm 641 not to dissemble to tell the truth 645 downright directly

649 Jealousy anxiety 651 suggesteth incites 653 Distemp'ring decreasing 655 bate-breeding strife-creating 656 canker worm (that preys on blossoms); spring bud 674 Uncouple at loose your hounds upon 677 fearful timid 678 well-breathed well-conditioned 679 on foot in chase; purblind weak-sighted 680 overshoot run beyond 682 cranks turns 683 musits gaps in a hedge or fence 684 amaze confuse 687 earth-delving conies keep rabbits that dig burrows dwell 688 in their yell i.e., in full cry 689 sorteth mingles 690 shifts tricks; waits on goes with

For there his smell with others being mingled,
The hot scent-snuffing hounds are driven to doubt,
Ceasing their clamorous cry, till they have singled
With much ado the cold fault° cleanly out.

Then do they spend their mouths;° echo replies,
As if another chase were in the skies.

"By this, poor Wat,° far off upon a hill,
Stands on his hinder legs with list'ning ear,
To hearken if his foes pursue him still.
Anon their loud alarums he doth hear,
And now his grief may be comparèd well
To one sore sick that hears the passing° bell.

"Then shalt thou see the dew-bedabbled wretch
Turn, and return, indenting° with the way.
Each envious° brier his weary legs do scratch;
Each shadow makes him stop, each murmur stay;
For misery is trodden on by many
And, being low, never relieved by any.

"Lie quietly and hear a little more.
Nay, do not struggle, for thou shalt not rise.
To make thee hate the hunting of the boar,
Unlike myself thou hear'st me moralize,
Applying this to that, and so to so,
For love can comment upon every woe.

"Where did I leave?" "No matter where," quoth he;
"Leave me, and then the story aptly ends.
The night is spent." "Why, what of that?" quoth she.
"I am," quoth he, "expected of my friends;
And now 'tis dark, and going I shall fall."
"In night," quoth she, "desire sees best of all.

"But if thou fall, O, then imagine this:
The earth, in love with thee, thy footing trips,
And all is but to rob thee of a kiss.
Rich preys° make true° men thieves. So do thy lips
Make modest Dian° cloudy° and forlorn,
Lest she should steal a kiss and die forsworn.°

"Now of this dark night I perceive the reason:
Cynthia° for shame obscures her silver shine,
Till forging° Nature be condemned of treason
For stealing molds from heaven that were divine;
Wherein she framed thee, in high heaven's despite,
To shame the sun by day, and her° by night.

"And therefore hath she bribed the Destinies
To cross° the curious° workmanship of Nature,
To mingle beauty with infirmities
And pure perfection with impure defeature,°
Making it subject to the tyranny
Of mad mischances and much misery;

"As burning fevers, agues pale and faint,
Life-poisoning pestilence, and frenzies wood,°
The marrow-eating sickness° whose attainment°
Disorder breeds by heating of the blood,
Surfeits, imposthumes,° grief, and damned despair
Swear Nature's death for framing thee so fair.

"And not the least of all these maladies
But in one minute's fight brings beauty under;°
Both favor,° savor, hue,° and qualities,
Whereat th' impartial gazer late did wonder,
Are on the sudden wasted, thawed, and done,
As mountain snow melts with the midday sun.

"Therefore, despite of fruitless chastity,
Love-lacking vestals, and self-loving nuns,
That on the earth would breed a scarcity
And barren dearth of daughters and of sons,
Be prodigal; the lamp that burns by night
Dries up his oil to lend the world his light.

"What is thy body but a swallowing grave,
Seeming to bury that posterity
Which by the rights of time thou needs must have
If thou destroy them not in dark obscurity?
If so, the world will hold thee in disdain,
Sith° in thy pride so fair a hope is slain.

"So in thyself thyself art made away,
A mischief worse than civil home-bred strife,
Or theirs whose desperate hands themselves do slay,
Or butcher sire that reaves° his son of life.
Foul cank'ring rust the hidden treasure frets,°
But gold that's put to use more gold begets."

"Nay, then," quoth Adon, "you will fall again
Into your idle over-handled theme.
The kiss I gave you is bestowed in vain,
And all in vain you strive against the stream;
For by this black-faced night, desire's foul nurse,
Your treatise° makes me like you worse and worse.

"If love have lent you twenty thousand tongues,
And every tongue more moving than your own,
Bewitching like the wanton mermaid's songs,
Yet from mine ear the tempting tune is blown;
For know, my heart stands armèd in mine ear
And will not let a false sound enter there,

"Lest the deceiving harmony should run
Into the quiet closure° of my breast;
And then my little heart were quite undone,
In his bedchamber to be barred of rest.
No, lady, no; my heart longs not to groan,
But soundly sleeps while now it sleeps alone.

694 cold fault lost scent 695 spend their mouths yelp
697 Wat traditional name for a hare 702 passing funeral 704 indenting zigzagging 705 envious malicious 724 preys booty; true honest 725 Dian Diana (goddess of chastity and of the hunt); cloudy gloomy 726 forsworn i.e., having broken her vow of chastity 728 Cynthia the moon,
i.e., Diana 729 forging counterfeiting 732 her the moon 734 cross thwart; curious elaborate 736 defeature disfigurement

740 wood mad 741 marrow-eating sickness syphilis (?); attaint infection 743 imposthumes abscesses 745-46 And
. . . under even the least of these maladies in one minute can destroy beauty 747 favor features; hue complexion 762 Sith since 766 reaves deprives 767 frets erodes 774 treatise discourse 782 closure enclosure

- "What have you urged that I cannot reprove?^o
 The path is smooth that leadeth on to danger.
 I hate not love, but your device^o in love,
 That lends embracements unto every stranger.
 You do it for increase. O strange excuse,
 When reason is the bawd to lust's abuse!
- "Call it not love, for Love to heaven is fled
 Since sweating Lust on earth usurped his name;
 Under whose simple semblance he hath fed
 Upon fresh beauty, blotting it with blame;
 Which the hot tyrant^o stains and soon bereaves,^o
 As caterpillars do the tender leaves.
- "Love comforteth like sunshine after rain,
 But Lust's effect is tempest after sun.
 Love's gentle spring doth always fresh remain;
 Lust's winter comes ere summer half be done.
 Love surfeits not, Lust like a glutton dies;
 Love is all truth, Lust full of forgèd lies.
- "More I could tell, but more I dare not say:
 The text is old, the orator too green.^o
 Therefore in sadness^o now I will away.
 My face is full of shame, my heart of teen;^o
 Mine ears, that to your wanton talk attended,
 Do burn themselves for having so offended."
- With this he breaketh from the sweet embrace
 Of those fair arms which bound him to her breast
 And homeward through the dark laund^o runs apace;
 Leaves Love upon her back, deeply distressed.
 Look how^o a bright star shooteth from the sky,
 So glides he in the night from Venus' eye;
- Which after him she darts, as one on shore
 Gazing upon a late-embarked friend
 Till the wild waves will have him seen no more,
 Whose ridges with the meeting clouds contend.
 So did the merciless and pitchy night
 Fold in the object that did feed her sight.
- Whereat amazed, as one that unaware
 Hath dropped a precious jewel in the flood,
 Or 'stonished^o as night-wand'ers often are,
 Their light blown out in some mistrustful^o wood,
 Even so confounded in the dark she lay,
 Having lost the fair discovery of her way.
- And now she beats her heart, whereat it groans,
 That all the neighbor caves, as seeming troubled,
 Make verbal repetition of her moans.
 Passion^o on passion deeply is redoubled;
 "Ay me!" she cries, and twenty times, "Woe, woe!"
 And twenty echoes twenty times cry so.
- She, marking them, begins a wailing note
 And sings extemporally a woeful ditty:
 How love makes young men thrall,^o and old men dote;
 How love is wise in folly, foolish-witty.
 Her heavy anthem still concludes in woe,
 And still the choir of echoes answer so.
- Her song was tedious and outwore the night,
 For lovers' hours are long, though seeming short.
 If pleased themselves, others, they think, delight
 In suchlike circumstance, with suchlike sport.
 Their copious stories, oftentimes begun,
 End without audience, and are never done.
- For who hath she to spend the night withal
 But idle sounds resembling parasits,^o
 Like shrill-tongued tapsters answering every call,
 Soothing the humor of fantastic wits?
 She says, "'Tis so." They answer all, "'Tis so,"
 And would say after her if she said "No."
- Lo, here the gentle lark, weary of rest,
 From his moist cabinet^o mounts up on high
 And wakes the morning, from whose silver breast
 The sun ariseth in his majesty;
 Who doth the world so gloriously behold
 That cedar tops and hills seem burnished gold.
- Venus salutes him with this fair good-morrow:
 "O thou clear god, and patron of all light,
 From whom each lamp and shining star doth borrow
 The beauteous influence that makes him bright;
 There lives a son that sucked an earthly mother
 May lend thee light, as thou dost lend to other."
- This said, she hasteth to a myrtle grove,
 Musing the morning is so much o'erworn
 And yet she hears no tidings of her love.
 She hearkens for his hounds and for his horn.
 Anon she hears them chant it lustily,
 And all in haste she coasteth^o to the cry.
- And as she runs, the bushes in the way
 Some catch her by the neck, some kiss her face,
 Some twine about her thigh to make her stay.
 She wildly breaketh from their strict^o embrace,
 Like a milch doe, whose swelling dugs do ache,
 Hasting to feed her fawn, hid in some brake.^o
- By this she hears the hounds are at a bay;^o
 Whereat she starts, like one that spies an adder
 Wreathed up in fatal folds just in his way,
 The fear whereof doth make him shake and shudder.
 Even so the timorous yelping of the hounds
 Appals her senses and her spirit confounds.

787 reprove refute 789 device cunning 797 hot tyrant lust; bereaves spoils 806 green young 807 in sadness in all seriousness 808 teen sorrow 813 laund open space in a forest 815 Look how just as 825 'stonished bewildered
 826 mistrustful feared 332 Passion lamentation

837 thrall captive 848 parasits i.e., flatterers 854 cabinet
 i.e., nest 870 coasteth approaches 874 strict tight 876 brake thicket 877 at a bay the moment during a hunt when an animal is forced to turn against its pursuers

For now she knows it is no gentle chase,
But the blunt^o boar, rough bear, or lion proud,
Because the cry remaineth in one place,
Where fearfully the dogs exclaim aloud;
Finding their enemy to be so curst,^o
They all strain court'sy^o who shall cope him first.

This dismal cry rings sadly in her ear,
Through which it enters to surprise her heart,
Who, overcome by doubt and bloodless fear,
With cold-pale weakness numbs each feeling part:
Like soldiers when their captain once doth yield,
They basely fly, and dare not stay the field.

Thus stands she in a trembling ecstasy,^o
Till cheering up her senses all dismayed,
She tells them 'tis a causeless fantasy,
And childish error that they are afraid;
Bids them leave quaking, bids them fear no more;
And with that word she spied the hunted boar,

Whose frothy mouth, bepainted all with red,
Like milk and blood being mingled both together,
A second fear through all her sinews spread,
Which madly hurries her she knows not whither.
This way she runs, and now she will no further,
But back retires, to rate the boar for murder.

A thousand spleens^o bear her a thousand ways;
She treads the path that she untreads again;
Her more than haste is mated with^o delays,
Like the proceedings of a drunken brain,
Full of respects,^o yet naught at all respecting,
In hand^o with all things, naught at all effecting.

Here kennelled in a brake she finds a hound
And asks the weary caitiff^o for his master;
And there another licking of his wound,
'Gainst venom'd sores the only sovereign plaster;
And here she meets another sadly scowling,
To whom she speaks, and he replies with howling.

When he hath ceased his ill-resounding noise,
Another flap-mouthed^o mourner, black and grim,
Against the welkin^o volleys out his voice;
Another and another answer him,
Clapping their proud tails to the ground below,
Shaking their scratched ears, bleeding as they go.

Look how the world's poor people are amazed^o
At apparitions, signs, and prodigies,
Whereon with fearful eyes they long have gazèd,
Infusing them with dreadful prophecies:
So she at these sad signs draws up her breath
And sighing it again, exclaims on^o Death.

885 "Hard-favored tyrant, ugly, meager, lean,
Hateful divorce of love!" (thus chides she Death)
"Grim-grinning ghost, earth's worm, what dost thou mean,
To stifle beauty and to steal his breath
Who, when he lived, his breath and beauty set
Gloss on the rose, smell to the violet?" 935

890 "If he be dead—O no, it cannot be,
Seeing his beauty, thou shouldst strike at it!
O yes, it may; thou hast no eyes to see,
But hatefully at randon^o dost thou hit; 940
Thy mark is feeble age, but thy false dart
Mistakes that aim, and cleaves an infant's heart.

895 "Hadst thou but bid beware, then he had spoke,
And hearing him, thy power had lost his^o power.
The Destinies will curse thee for this stroke: 945
They bid thee crop a weed; thou pluck'st a flower.
900 Love's golden arrow at him should have fled,
And not Death's ebon^o dart to strike him dead.

"Dost thou drink tears, that thou provok'st such weeping?
What may a heavy groan advantage^o thee? 950
Why hast thou cast into eternal sleeping
905 Those eyes that taught all other eyes to see?
Now Nature cares not for thy mortal vigor,^o
Since her best work is ruined with thy rigor."

Here overcome, as one full of despair, 955
910 She vailed^o her eyelids, who like sluices stopped^o
The crystal tide that from her two cheeks fair
In the sweet channel of her bosom dropped;
But through the floodgates breaks the silver rain
And with his strong course opens them again. 960

915 O, how her eyes and tears did lend and borrow,
Her eye seen in the tears, tears in her eye,
Both crystals,^o where they viewed each other's sorrow—
Sorrow that friendly sighs sought still to dry;
But like a stormy day, now wind, now rain, 965
Sighs dry her cheeks, tears make them wet again.

920 Variable passions throng her constant woe,
As striving who^o should best become her grief.
All entertained,^o each passion labors so
That every present sorrow seemeth chief, 970
But none is best; then join they all together
925 Like many clouds consulting^o for foul weather.

By this far off she hears some huntsman halloa.
A nurse's song ne'er pleased her babe so well.
The dire imagination she did follow 975
930 This sound of hope doth labor to expel;
For now reviving joy bids her rejoice
And flatters her it is Adonis' voice.

884 blunt rough 887 curst savage 888 They . . . court'sy
i.e., each holds back to allow the other to go first 895 ecstasy fit 907 spleens impulses 909 mated with checked by 911 respects considerations 912 In hand occupied 914 caitiff wretch 920 flap-mouthed loose-lipped 921 welkin sky
925 amazed perplexed 930 exclaims on denounces

940 randon random 944 his its 948 ebon black 950 advantage profit 953 mortal vigor deadly power 956 vailed lowered; who . . . stopped which, like floodgates, dammed 963 crystals i.e., mirrors 968 striving who competing which 969 entertained admitted 972 consulting plotting

Whereat her tears began to turn their tide,^o
 Being prisoned in her eye like pearls in glass;
 Yet sometimes falls an orient^o drop beside,
 Which her cheek melts, as scorning it should pass
 To wash the foul face of the sluttish ground,
 Who is but drunken when she seemeth drowned.

O hard-believing^o love, how strange it seems
 Not to believe, and yet too credulous!
 Thy weal and woe are both of them extremes;
 Despair and hope makes thee ridiculous:
 The one doth flatter thee in thoughts unlikely,
 In likely thoughts the other kills thee quickly.

Now she unweaves the web that she hath wrought:
 Adonis lives, and Death is not to blame;
 It was not she that called him all to naught.^o
 Now she adds honors to his hateful name:
 She clepes^o him king of graves, and grave for kings, 995
 Imperious supreme^o of all mortal things.

"No, no," quoth she, "sweet Death, I did but jest;
 Yet pardon me I felt a kind of fear
 When as I met the boar, that bloody beast
 Which knows no pity but is still severe.
 Then, gentle shadow^o (truth I must confess),
 I railed on thee, fearing my love's decesse.^o

"'Tis not my fault the boar provoked my tongue;
 Be wreaked^o on him, invisible commander.
 'Tis he, foul creature, that hath done thee wrong;
 I did but act; he's author of thy slander.
 Grief hath two tongues, and never woman yet
 Could rule them both, without ten women's wit."

Thus hoping that Adonis is alive,
 Her rash suspect^o she doth extenuate;
 And that his beauty may the better thrive,
 With Death she humbly doth insinuate;^o
 Tells him of trophies, statues, tombs; and stories^o
 His victories, his triumphs, and his glories.

"O Jove," quoth she, "how much a fool was I
 To be of such a weak and silly mind
 To wail his death who lives, and must not die
 Till mutual overthrow of mortal kind!
 For he being dead, with him is beauty slain,
 And, beauty dead, black chaos comes again.

"Fie, fie, found love, thou art as full of fear
 As one with treasure laden, hemmed with thieves.
 Trifles, unwitnessed with^o eye, or ear,
 Thy coward heart with false bethinking grieves."
 Even at this word she hears a merry horn,
 Whereat she leaps that was but late forlorn.

As falcons to the lure, away she flies;
 980 The grass stoops not, she treads on it so light,
 And in her haste unfortunately spies
 The foul boar's conquest on her fair delight;
 1030 Which seen, her eyes, as murd'ed with the view,
 Like stars ashamed of^o day, themselves withdrew;

985 Or as the snail, whose tender horns being hit,
 Shrinks backward in his shelly cave with pain,
 And there, all smoth'ed up, in shade doth sit,
 1035 Long after fearing to creep forth again;
 So at his bloody view her eyes are fled
 990 Into the deep-dark cabins of her head;

Where they resign their office and their light
 To the disposing of her troubled brain,
 1040 Who bids them still consort^o with ugly night
 And never wound the heart with looks again;
 Who,^o like a king perplexed in his throne,
 By their suggestion gives a deadly groan,

Whereat each tributary subject quakes,
 1045 As when the wind, imprisoned in the ground,
 Struggling for passage, earth's foundation shakes,
 1000 Which with cold terror doth men's minds confound.
 This mutiny each part doth so surprise
 That from their dark beds once more leap her eyes, 1050

And, being opened, threw unwilling light
 Upon the wide wound that the boar had trenched^o
 1005 In his soft flank, whose wonted lily white
 With purple tears that his wound wept was drenched.
 No flow'r was nigh, no grass, herb, leaf, or weed, 1055
 But stole his blood and seemed with him to bleed.

This solemn sympathy poor Venus noteth.
 1010 Over one shoulder doth she hang her head.
 Dumbly she passions,^o frantically she doteth:
 She thinks he could not die, he is not dead;
 1060 Her voice is stopped, her joints forget to bow;
 Her eyes are mad^o that they have wept till^o now.

1015 Upon his hurt she looks so steadfastly
 That her sight dazzling makes the wound seem three;
 And then she reprehends her mangling eye,
 1065 That makes more gashes where no breach should be.
 His face seems twain, each several limb is doubled;
 1020 For oft the eye mistakes, the brain being troubled.

"My tongue cannot express my grief for one,
 And yet," quoth she, "behold two Adons dead! 1070
 My sighs are blown away, my salt tears gone,
 Mine eyes are turned to fire, my heart to lead.
 1025 Heavy heart's lead, melt at mine eyes' red fire!
 So shall I die by drops of hot desire.

979 turn their tide ebb 981 orient bright 985 hard-believing skeptical 993 all to naught worthless 995 clepes names 996 Imperious supreme imperial ruler 1001 shadow specter 1002 decesse decease 1004 wreaked revenged 1010 suspect suspicion 1012 insinuate ingratiate herself 1013 stories relates 1023 unwitnessed with unperceived by 1032 ashamed of put to shame by 1041 still consort always keep company 1043 Who which 1052 trenched cut 1059 passions grieves 1062 mad distracted; till before

"Alas, poor world, what treasure hast thou lost!
 What face remains alive that's worth the viewing?
 Whose tongue is music now? What canst thou boast
 Of things long since, or any thing ensuing?
 The flowers are sweet, their colors fresh and trim,
 But true sweet beauty lived and died with him.

"Bonnet nor veil henceforth no creature wear;
 Nor sun nor wind will ever strive to kiss you.
 Having no fair^o to lose, you need not fear:
 The sun doth scorn you, and the wind doth hiss you.
 But when Adonis lived, sun and sharp air
 Lurked like two thieves, to rob him of his fair;

"And therefore would he put his bonnet on,
 Under those brim the gaudy^o sun would peep;
 The wind would blow it off, and being gone,
 Play with his locks; then would Adonis weep;
 And straight, in pity of his tender years,
 They both would strive who first should dry his tears.

"To see his face the lion walked along,
 Behind some hedge, because he would not fear^o him.
 To recreate himself when he hath song,
 The tiger would be tame, and gently hear him.
 If he had spoke, the wolf would leave his prey
 And never fright the silly^o lamb that day.

"When he beheld his shadow in the brook,
 The fishes spread on it their golden gills;
 When he was by, the birds such pleasure took
 That some would sing, some other in their bills
 Would bring him mulberries and ripe-red cherries:
 He fed them with his sight, they him with berries.

"But this foul, grim, and urchin-snouted^o boar,
 Whose downward eye still looketh for a grave,
 Ne'er saw the beauteous livery that he wore;
 Witness the entertainment^o that he gave.
 If he did see his face, why then I know
 He thought to kiss him, and hath killed him so.

"'Tis true, 'tis true! thus was Adonis slain:
 He ran upon the boar with his sharp spear,
 Who did not whet his teeth at him again,
 But by a kiss thought to persuade him there;
 And nuzzling in his flank, the loving swine
 Sheathed unaware the tusk in his soft groin.

"Had I been toothed like him, I must confess,
 With kissing him I should have killed him first;
 But he is dead, and never did he bless
 My youth with his; the more am I accurst."
 With this she falleth in the place she stood
 And stains her face with his congealèd blood.

1075 She looks upon his lips, and they are pale;
 She takes him by the hand, and that is cold;
 She whispers in his ears a heavy tale, 1125
 As if they heard the woeful words she told.
 She lifts the coffer-lids^o that close his eyes,
 1080 Where lo, two lamps burnt out in darkness lies;

Two glasses, where herself herself beheld
 A thousand times, and now no more reflect; 1130
 Their virtue lost wherein they late excelled,
 And every beauty robbed of his effect.
 1085 "Wonder of time," quoth she, "this is my spite,^o
 That thou being dead, the day should yet be light.

"Since thou art dead, lo here I prophesy, 1135
 Sorrow on love hereafter shall attend.
 It shall be waited on with jealousy,
 1090 Find sweet beginning, but unsavory end,
 Ne'er settled equally, but high or low,
 That all love's pleasure shall not match his woe. 1140

"It shall be fickle, false, and full of fraud;
 Bud, and be blasted, in a breathing while;^o
 1095 The bottom poison, and the top o'erstrawed^o
 With sweets that shall the truest sight beguile.
 The strongest body shall it make most weak, 1145
 Strike the wise dumb, and teach the fool to speak.

"It shall be sparing, and too full of riot,
 1100 Teaching decrepit age to tread the measures;
 The staring ruffian shall it keep in quiet,
 Pluck down the rich, enrich the poor with treasures; 1150
 It shall be raging mad, and silly mild,
 Make the young old, the old become a child.

1105 "It shall suspect where is no cause of fear;
 It shall not fear where it should most mistrust;
 It shall be merciful, and too severe, 1155
 And most deceiving when it seems most just;
 Perverse it shall be where it shows most toward;^o
 1110 Put fear to valor, courage to the coward.

"It shall be cause of war and dire events
 And set dissension 'twixt the son and sire, 1160
 Subject and servile to all discontents,
 As dry combustious matter is to fire.
 1115 Sith in his prime death doth my love destroy,
 They that love best their loves shall not enjoy."

By this the boy that by her side lay killed 1165
 Was melted like a vapor from her sight,
 And in his blood, that on the ground lay spilled,
 1120 A purple flower^o sprung up, check'ed red with white,
 Resembling well his pale cheeks and the blood
 Which in round drops upon their whiteness stood. 1170

1083 fair beauty 1088 gaudy bright 1094 fear frighten
 1098 silly innocent 1105 urchin-snouted hedgehog-snouted 1108 entertainment reception

1127 coffer-lids lids to treasure chests 1133 spite grief
 1142 in . . . while in one breath 1143 o'erstrawed strewn
 1157 toward docile 1168 purple flower i.e., the anemone

She bows her head the new-sprung flower to smell,
 Comparing it to her Adonis' breath,
 And says within her bosom it shall dwell,
 Since he himself is reft from her by death;
 She crops the stalk, and in the breach^o appears
 Green-dropping sap, which she compares to tears.

1175

"Poor flow'r," quoth she, "this was thy father's guise^o—
 Sweet issue of a more sweet-smelling sire—
 For every little grief to wet his eyes;
 To grow unto himself was his desire,
 And so 'tis thine; but know, it is as good
 To wither in my breast as in his blood.

1175 breach break (in the stalk) 1177 guise custom

"Here was thy father's bed, here in my breast;
 Thou art the next of blood, and 'tis thy right.
 Lo in this hollow cradle take thy rest;
 My throbbing heart shall rock thee day and night:
 There shall not be one minute in an hour
 Wherein I will not kiss my sweet love's flow'r."

1185

Thus weary of the world, away she hies,
 And yokes her silver doves, by whose swift aid
 Their mistress, mounted, through the empty skies
 In her light chariot quickly is conveyed,
 Holding their course to Paphos,^o where their queen
 Means to immure herself and not be seen.

1190

1193 Paphos where Venus dwells in Cyprus

THE RAPE OF LUCRECE

TO THE RIGHT HONORABLE
HENRY WRIOTHESLEY
Earl of Southampton, and Baron of Titchfield

The love I dedicate to your lordship is without end; whereof this pamphlet without beginning^o is but a superfluous moiety.^o The warrant I have of your honorable disposition, not the worth of my untutored lines, makes it assured of acceptance. What I have done is yours; what I have to do is yours; being part in all I have, devoted yours. Were my worth greater, my duty would show greater; meantime, as it is, it is bound to your lordship, to whom I wish long life still lengthened with all happiness.

Your lordship's in all duty,
WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE 10

The Argument

Lucius Tarquinius (for his excessive pride surnamed Superbus), after he had caused his own father-in-law Servius Tullius to be cruelly murdered, and, contrary to the Roman laws and customs, not requiring or staying for the people's suffrages, had possessed himself of the kingdom, went, accompanied with his sons and other noblemen of Rome, to besiege Ardea; during which siege the principal men of the army meeting one evening at the tent of Sextus Tarquinius, the king's son, in their discourses after supper every one commended the virtues of his own wife; among whom Collatinus extolled the incomparable chastity of his wife Lucretia. In that pleasant humor they all posted to Rome; and intending by their secret and sudden arrival to make trial of that which every one had before avouched, only Collatinus finds his wife (though it were late in the night) spinning amongst her maids; the other ladies were all found dancing and reveling, or in several disports. Whereupon the noblemen yielded Collatinus the victory, and his wife the fame. 20

At that time Sextus Tarquinius being inflamed with Lucrece' beauty, yet smothering his passions for the present, departed with the rest back to the camp; from whence he shortly after privily withdrew himself, and was (according to his estate) royally entertained and lodged by Lucrece at Collatium. The same night he treacherously stealeth into her chamber, violently ravished her, and early in the morning speedeth away. Lucrece, in this lamentable plight, hastily dispatcheth messengers, one to Rome for her father, another to the camp for Collatine. They came, the one accompanied with Junius Brutus, the other with Publius Valerius; and finding Lucrece attired in mourning habit, demanded the cause of her sorrow. She, first taking an oath of them for her revenge, revealed the actor and whole manner of his dealing, and withal suddenly stabbed herself. Which done, with one consent they all vowed to root out the whole hated family of the Tarquins; and bearing the dead body to Rome, Brutus acquainted the people with the doer and manner of the vile deed, with a bitter invective against the tyranny of the king; wherewith the people were so moved that with one consent and a general acclamation the Tarquins were all exiled, and the state government changed from kings to consuls. 45

The decorative border shown above appeared on the title page of the quarto edition of The Rape of Lucrece, 1594.

4 without beginning i.e., the narrative begins in medias res
5 moiety small part

From the besieged Ardea all in post,^o
 Borne by the trustless^o wings of false desire,
 Lust-breathed^o Tarquin leaves the Roman host
 And to Collatium bears the lightless^o fire
 Which, in pale embers hid, lurks to aspire^o
 And girdle with embracing flames the waist
 Of Collatine's fair love, Lucrece the chaste.

Haply^o that name of "chaste" unhap'ly set
 This bateless^o edge on his keen appetite;^o
 When Collatine unwisely did not let^o
 To praise the clear unmatched red and white
 Which triumphed in that sky of his delight,^o
 Where mortal stars,^o as bright as heaven's beauties,
 With pure aspects^o did him peculiar^o duties.

For he the night before, in Tarquin's tent,
 Unlocked the treasure of his happy state:
 What priceless wealth the heavens had him lent
 In the possession of his beauteous mate;
 Reck'ning his fortune at such high proud rate
 That kings might be espoused to more fame,
 But king nor peer to such a peerless dame.

O happiness enjoyed but of^o a few,
 And if possessed, as soon decayed and done^o
 As is the morning's silver-melting dew
 Against the golden splendor of the sun!
 An expired date,^o canceled ere well begun.
 Honor and beauty, in the owner's arms,
 Are weakly fortified from a world of harms.

Beauty itself doth of itself persuade
 The eyes of men without an orator.
 What needeth then apologies^o be made
 To set forth that which is so singular?
 Or why is Collatine the publisher^o
 Of that rich jewel he should keep unknown
 From thievish ears, because it is his own?

Perchance his boast of Lucrece' sov'reignty
 Suggested^o this proud issue^o of a king;
 For by our ears our hearts oft tainted be.
 Perchance that envy of so rich a thing,
 Braving compare,^o disdainfully did sting
 His high-pitched thoughts, that meaner men should vaunt
 That golden hap^o which their superiors want.^o

But some untimely thought did instigate
 His all too timeless^o speed, if none of those.
 His honor, his affairs, his friends, his state,^o
 Neglected all, with swift intent he goes
 To quench the coal which in his liver^o glows.
 O rash false heat, wrapped in repentant cold,
 Thy hasty spring still blasts^o and ne'er grows old!

When at Collatium this false lord arrivèd,
 Well was he welcomed by the Roman dame,
 Within whose face Beauty and Virtue strived
 Which of them both should underprop her fame.
 When Virtue bragged, Beauty would blush for shame;
 When Beauty boasted blushes, in despite
 Virtue would stain that o'er with silver white.

But Beauty in that white entitled^o
 From Venus' doves, doth challenge that fair field;^o
 Then Virtue claims from Beauty Beauty's red,
 Which Virtue gave the Golden Age to gild^o
 Their silver cheeks, and called it then their shield,
 Teaching them thus to use it in the fight,
 When shame assailed, the red should fence^o the white.

This heraldry in Lucrece' face was seen,
 Argued^o by Beauty's red and Virtue's white;
 Of either's color was the other queen,
 Proving from world's minority^o their right.
 Yet their ambition makes them still to fight,
 The sovereignty of either being so great
 That oft they interchange each other's seat.

This silent war of lilies and of roses,
 Which Tarquin viewed in her fair face's field,
 In their pure ranks his traitor eye encloses;
 Where, lest between them both it should be killed,
 The coward captive vanquished doth yield
 To those two armies that would let him go
 Rather than triumph in so false a foe.

Now thinks he that her husband's shallow tongue,
 The niggard prodigal that praised her so,
 In that high task hath done her beauty wrong,
 Which far exceeds his barren skill to show.
 Therefore that praise which Collatine doth owe Enchanted Tarquin answers^o with surmise,^o
 In silent wonder of still-gazing eyes.

This earthly saint, adored by this devil,
 Little suspecteth the false worshipper;
 For unstained thoughts do seldom dream on evil;
 Birds never limed^o no secret bushes fear.
 So guiltless she securely^o gives good cheer
 And reverend^o welcome to her princely guest,
 Whose inward ill no outward harm expressed;

1 all in post in great haste 2 trustless treacherous 3 Lust-breathed inspired by lust 4 lightless smoldering 5 aspire ascend 8 Haply perhaps 9 bateless unbated; appetite lust 10 let forbear 12 that . . . delight Lucrece's face 13 mortal stars Lucrece's eyes 14 aspects (1) looks (2) astrological influences; peculiar private 22 of by 23 done consumed 26 date lease 31 apologies i.e., vindications 33 publisher proclaimer 37 Suggested prompted; issue i.e., son 40 Braving compare challenging comparison 42 hap luck; want lack

44 timeless untimely 45 state status, estate 47 liver thought to be the seat of sexual desire 49 still blasts always is blasted 57 entitled having a claim 58 field (1) field of battle (2) ground of a shield 60 gild color (with a blush) 63 fence defend 65 Argued expressed 67 minority youth (i.e., the Golden Age of line 60) 83 answers pays; surmise amazement 88 limed caught by bird lime (a sticky substance smeared upon branches) 89 securely unsuspectingly 90 reverend reverent

For that he colored° with his high estate,
 Hiding base sin in pleats of majesty;
 That° nothing in him seemed inordinate,
 Save sometime too much wonder in his eye,
 Which, having all, all could not satisfy;
 But poorly rich, so wanteth in his store°
 That, cloyed with much, he pineth still for more.

But she, that never coped with° stranger° eyes,
 Could pick no meaning from their parling° looks,
 Nor read the subtle shining secrecies
 Writ in the glassy margents° of such books.
 She touched no unknown baits, nor feared no hooks;
 Nor could she moralize° his wanton sight,°
 More than his eyes were opened to the light.

He stories to her ears her husband's fame,
 Won in the fields of fruitful Italy;
 And decks with praises Collatine's high name,
 Made glorious by his manly chivalry,
 With bruised arms° and wreaths of victory.
 Her joy with heaved-up° hand she doth express,
 And wordless so greets heaven for his success.

Far from the purpose of his coming thither
 He makes excuses for his being there.
 No cloudy show of stormy blust'ring weather
 Doth yet in his fair welkin° once appear,
 Till sable Night, mother of dread and fear,
 Upon the world dim darkness doth display
 And in her vaulty prison stows the day.

For then is Tarquin brought unto his bed,
 Intending° weariness with heavy sprite;°
 For, after supper, long he questionèd°
 With modest Lucrece, and wore out the night.
 Now leaden slumber with life's strength doth fight,
 And everyone to rest himself betakes,
 Save thieves, and cares, and troubled minds that wakes.

As one of which doth Tarquin lie revolving
 The sundry dangers of his will's obtaining;
 Yet ever to obtain his will resolving,
 Though weak-built hopes persuade him to abstaining.
 Despair to gain doth traffic° oft for gaining;
 And when great treasure is the meed° proposèd,
 Though death be adjunct,° there's no death supposed.

Those that much covet are with gain so fond°
 That what they have not, that which they possess
 They scatter and unloose it from their bond,
 And so by hoping more they have but less;
 Or, gaining more, the profit of excess
 Is but to surfeit, and such griefs sustain
 That they prove bankrout° in this poor rich gain.

92 colored cloaked 94 That so that 97 store wealth 99 coped with encountered; stranger i.e., strangers' 100 parl-ing speaking 102 glassy margents margins (of his eyes) 104 moralize interpret; sight glance 110 bruised arms battered armor 111 heaved-up uplifted 116 welkin sky 121
 Intending pretending; sprite spirit 122 questionèd talked 131 traffic trade 132 meed reward 133 adjunct i.e., the consequence 134 fond infatuated 140 bankrout bankrupt

The aim of all is but to nurse the life
 With honor, wealth, and ease in waning age;
 And in this aim there is such thwarting strife
 That one for all, or all for one we gage:°
 As° life for honor in fell° battle's rage;
 Honor for wealth; and oft that wealth doth cost
 The death of all, and all together lost;

So that in vent'ring° ill we leave° to be
 The things we are for that which we expect;
 And this ambitious foul infirmity,
 In having much, torments us with defect°
 Of that we have: so then we do neglect
 The thing we have, and all for want of wit,
 Make something nothing by augmenting it.

Such hazard now must doting Tarquin make,
 Pawning his honor to obtain his lust;
 And for himself himself he must forsake.
 Then where is truth, if there be no self-trust?
 When shall he think to find a stranger just,
 When he himself himself confounds,° betrays
 To sland'rous tongues and wretched hateful days?

Now stole upon the time the dead of night,
 When heavy sleep had closed up mortal eyes.
 No comfortable° star did lend his light,
 No noise but owls, and wolves' death-boding cries;
 Now serves the season that they may surprise
 The silly° lambs: pure thoughts are dead and still,
 While lust and murder wakes to stain and kill.

And now this lustful lord leapt from his bed,
 Throwing his mantle rudely o'er his arm;
 Is madly tossed between desire and dread:
 Th' one sweetly flatters, th' other feareth harm;
 But honest fear, bewitched with lust's foul charm,
 Doth too too oft betake him to retire,
 Beaten away by brainsick° rude desire.

His falchion° on a flint he softly° smiteth,
 That from the cold stone sparks of fire do fly;
 Whereat a waxen torch forthwith he lighteth,
 Which must be lodestar° to his lustful eye;
 And to the flame thus speaks advisedly:°
 "As from this cold flint I enforced this fire,
 So Lucrece must I force to my desire."

Here pale with fear he doth premeditate
 The dangers of his loathsome enterprise,
 And in his inward mind he doth debate
 What following sorrow may on this arise;
 Then looking scornfully, he doth despise
 His naked armor of still-slaught'ed lust°
 And justly thus controls his thoughts unjust:

144 gage pledge 145 As for example; fell fierce 148 vent'- ring risking; leave cease 151 defect the insufficiency 160 confounds destroys 164 comfortable comforting 167 silly innocent 175 brainsick mad 176 falchion curved sword; softly silently 179 lodestar guiding star 180 ad-visedly deliberately 188 His . . . lust i.e., his armor, lust, is no armor, for when lust is fulfilled it is killed

"Fair torch, burn out thy light, and lend it not
To darken her whose light excelleth thine;
And die, unhallowed thoughts, before you blot
With your uncleanness that which is divine.
Offer pure incense to so pure a shrine.
Let fair humanity abhor the deed
That spots and stains love's modest snow-white weed."

"O shame to knighthood and to shining arms!
O foul dishonor to my household's grave!
O impious act including all foul garms!
A martial man to be soft fancy's slave!
True valor still a true respect should have;
Then my digression is so vile, so base,
That it will live engraven in my face.

"Yea, though I die, the scandal will survive
And be an eyesore in my golden coat.
Some loathsome dash the herald will contrive
To cipher me how fondly I did dote;
That my posterity, shamed with the note,
Shall curse my bones, and hold it for no sin
To wish that I their father had not been.

"What win I if I gain the thing I seek?
A dream, a breath, a froth of fleeting joy.
Who buys a minute's mirth to wail a week?
Or sells eternity to get a toy?
For one sweet grape who will the vine destroy?
Or what fond beggar, but to touch the crown,
Would with the scepter straight be stroken down?

"If Collatinus dream of my intent,
Will he not wake, and in a desp'rate rage
Post hither this vile purpose to prevent?
This siege that hath engirt his marriage,
This blur to youth, this sorrow to the sage,
This dying virtue, this surviving shame,
Whose crime will bear an ever-during blame?

"O, what excuse can my invention make
When thou shalt charge me with so black a deed?
Will not my tongue be mute, my frail joints shake,
Mine eyes forgo their light, my false heart bleed?
The guilt being great, the fear doth still exceed;
And extreme fear can neither fight nor fly,
But cowardlike with trembling terror die.

"Had Collatinus killed my son or sire,
Or lain in ambush to betray my life,
Or were he not my dear friend, this desire
Might have excuse to work upon his wife,
As in revenge or quittal of such strife;
But as he is my kinsman, my dear friend,
The shame and fault finds no excuse nor end.

190 "Shameful it is—ay, if the fact be known.
Hateful it is—there is no hate in loving. 240
I'll beg her love—but she is not her own.
The worst is but denial and reproving.
My will° is strong, past reason's weak removing.
195 Who fears a sentence° or an old man's saw°
Shall by a painted cloth° be kept in awe." 245

Thus graceless holds he disputation
'Tween frozen conscience and hot-burning will,
And with good thoughts makes dispensation,
Urging the worser sense for vantage° still;
200 Which in a moment doth confound and kill 250
All pure effects,° and doth so far proceed
That what is vile shows like a virtuous deed.

Quoth he, "She took me kindly by the hand
And gazed for tidings in my eager eyes,
205 Fearing some hard news from the warlike band 255
Where her belovèd Collatinus lies.
O, how her fear did make her color rise!
First red as roses that on lawn° we lay,
Then white as lawn, the roses took away.

210 "And how her hand, in my hand being locked, 260
Forced it to tremble with her loyal fear!
Which° strook her sad, and then it° faster rocked
Until her husband's welfare she did hear;
Whereat she smiled with so sweet a cheer
215 That, had Narcissus° seen her as she stood, 265
Self-love had never drowned him in the flood.

"Why hunt I then for color° or excuses?
All orators are dumb when beauty pleadeth;
Poor wretches have remorse in poor abuses;
220 Love thrives not in the heart that shadows dreadeth.° 270
Affection° is my captain, and he leadeth;
And when his gaudy banner is displayed,
The coward° fights and will not be dismayed.

225 "Then childish fear avaunt, debating die! 275
Respect° and reason wait on° wrinkled age!
My heart shall never countermand mine eye.
Sad° pause and deep regard beseems the sage;
My part is youth, and beats these from the stage.
230 Desire my pilot is, beauty my prize;
Then who fears sinking where such treasure lies?" 280

196 weed garment, i.e., chastity 198 my household's grave the tomb of my ancestors 200 soft fancy's i.e., love's
201 still always; respect regard 205 coat coat of arms
206 loathsome dash i.e., a mark of disgrace 207 cipher show; fondly foolishly 221 engirt surrounded to attack
224 ever-during ever-enduring 236 quittal requital

243 will desire; removing dissuasion 244 sentence moral judgment; saw moral saying 245 painted cloth wall-hanging on which were painted moral texts and illustrative biblical and classical subjects 248 makes dispensation dispenses 249 vantage advantage 251 effects emotions 258 lawn (fine) line 262 Which i.e., the fact that his hand trembled; it her heart 265 Narcissus a beautiful youth who fell in love with his own reflection 267 color pretext 269 Poor . . . abuses remorse is felt only by lesser men in their petty transgressions 270 shadows dreadeth i.e., has scruples 271 Affection desire 273 The coward i.e., even the coward 275 Respect prudence; wait on attend 277 Sad serious

As corn° o'ergrown by weeds, so heedful fear
Is almost choked by unresisted lust.
Away he steals with open list'ning ear,
Full of foul hope and full of fond mistrust;
Both which, as servitors to the unjust,
So cross° him with their opposite persuasion
That now he vows a league,° and now invasion.

Within his thought her heavenly image sits,
And in the selfsame seat sits Collatine.
That eye which looks on her confounds his wits;
That eye which him beholds, as more divine,
Unto a view so false will not incline;
But with a pure appeal seeks to° the heart,
Which once corrupted takes the worser part;

And therein heartens up his servile powers,°
Who, flatt' red by their leader's jocund show,
Stuff up his lust, as minutes fill up hours;
And as their captain, so their pride doth grow,
Paying more slavish tribute than they owe.
By reprobate desire thus madly led,
The Roman lord marcheth to Lucrece' bed.

The locks between her chamber and his will,
Each one by him enforced, retires his ward;°
But as they open, they all rate his ill,°
Which drives the creeping thief to some regard.°
The threshold grates the door to have him heard;
Night-wand'ring weasels° shriek to see him
there;
They fright him, yet he still pursues his fear.

As each unwilling portal yields him way,
Through little vents and crannies of the place
The wind wars with his torch to make him stay,
And blows the smoke of it into his face,
Extinguishing his conduct° in this case;
But his hot heart, which fond desire doth scorch,
Puffs forth another wind that fires the torch;

And being lighted, by the light he spies
Lucretia's glove, wherein her needle sticks;
He takes it from the rushes° where it lies,
And griping it, the needle his finger pricks,
As who should say, "This glove to wanton tricks
Is not inured;° return again in haste;
Thou see'st our mistress' ornaments are chaste."

But all these poor forbiddings could not stay him;
He in the worst sense consters° their denial:
The doors, the wind, the glove, that did delay him, 325
He takes for accidental things of trial;°
Or as those bars° which stop the hourly dial,
Who° with a ling'ring stay his course doth let,° Till every minute pays the hour his debt.

"So, so," quoth he, "these lets° attend the time, 330
Like little frosts that sometime threat the spring
To add a more rejoicing to the prime°
And give the sneapèd° birds more cause to sing.
Pain pays the income° of each precious thing:
Huge rocks, high winds, strong pirates, shelves and
sands, 335
The merchant fears ere rich at home he lands."

Now is he come unto the chamber door 295
That shuts him from the heaven of his thought,
Which with a yielding latch, and with no more,
Hath barred him from the blessed thing he sought. 340
So from himself impiety hath wrought°
That for his prey to pray he doth begin, 300
As if the heavens should countenance his sin.

But in the midst of his unfruitful prayer,
Having solicited th' eternal power 345
That his foul thoughts might compass his fair fair,°
And they would stand auspicious to the hour,
Even there he starts; quoth he, "I must deflow'r.
The powers to whom I pray abhor this fact;
How can they then assist me in the act? 350

"Then Love and Fortune be my gods, my guide:
My will is backed with resolution.
Thoughts are but dreams till their effects be tried;
The blackest sin is cleared with absolution; 355
Against love's fire fear's frost hath dissolution.
The eye of heaven is out, and misty night
Covers the shame that follows sweet delight."

This said, his guilty hand plucked up the latch,
And with his knee the door he opens wide. 360
The dove sleeps fast that this night owl will catch.
Thus treason works ere traitors be espied.
Who sees the lurking serpent steps aside;
But she, sound sleeping, fearing no such thing,
Lies at the mercy of his mortal sting.°

Into the chamber wickedly he stalks 365
And gazeth on her yet unstained bed.
The curtains being close, about he walks,
Rolling his greedy eyeballs in his head.
By their high treason is his heart misled,
Which gives the watchword to his hand full soon 370
To draw the cloud that hides the silver moon.

281 corn grain 286 cross thwart 287 league peace 293 seeks to applies to 295 his servile powers i.e., the senses 303 retires his ward draws back its bolt 304 rate his ill condemn his evil intentions (by creaking) 305 regard caution
307 weasels kept in Roman houses in place of cats to catch rats 313 conduct conductor (i.e., the torch) 318 rushes used as floor coverings 321 inured accustomed

324 consters construes 326 accidental . . . trial chance happenings 327 bars lines on the face of a clock 328 Who which; let delay 330 lets hindrances 332 prime spring 333 sneapèd chilled 334 income harvest, gain 341 wrought i.e., wrought him 346 compass . . . fair possess his virtuous beauty 364 sting (1) lust (2) penis

Look as^o the fair and fiery-pointed sun,
 Rushing from forth a cloud, bereaves^o our sight,
 Even so, the curtain drawn, his eyes begun
 To wink,^o being blinded with a greater light.
 Whether it is that she reflects so bright
 That dazzleth them, or else some shame supposed^o;
 But blind they are, and keep themselves enclosed.

O, had they in that darksome prison died,
 Then had they seen the period^o of their ill!^o
 Then Collatine again by Lucrece' side
 In his clear^o bed might have reposèd still.
 But they must ope, this blessèd league to kill,
 And holy-thoughted Lucrece to their sight
 Must sell her joy, her life, her world's delight.

Her lily hand her rosy cheek lies under,
 Coz'ning^o the pillow of a lawful kiss;
 Who, therefore angry, seems to part in sunder,
 Swelling on either side to want his bliss;
 Between whose hills her head entombèd is;
 Where like a virtuous monument she lies,
 To be admired of lewd unhallowed eyes.

Without the bed her other fair hand was,
 On the green coverlet; whose perfect white
 Showed like an April daisy on the grass,
 With pearly sweat resembling dew of night.
 Her eyes like marigolds had sheathed their light,
 And canopied in darkness sweetly lay
 Till they might open to adorn the day.

Her hair like golden threads played with her breath—
 O modest wantons, wanton modesty—
 Showing life's triumph in the map^o of death,
 And death's dim look in life's mortality.
 Each in her sleep themselves so beautify
 As if between them twain there were no strife,
 But that life lived in death, and death in life.

Her breasts like ivory globes circled with blue,
 A pair of maiden worlds unconquerèd,
 Save of their lord no bearing yoke they knew,
 And him by oath they truly honorèd.
 These worlds in Tarquin new ambition bred,
 Who like a foul usurper went about
 From this fair throne to heave the owner out.

What could he see but mightily he noted?
 What did he note but strongly he desired?
 What he beheld, on that he firmly doted,
 And in his will^o his willful eye he tirèd.
 With more than admiration he admirèd
 Her azure veins, her alabaster skin,
 Her coral lips, her snow-white dimpled chin.

As the grim lion fawneth^o o'er his prey,
 Sharp hunger by the conquest satisfied,
 So o'er this sleeping soul doth Tarquin stay,
 His rage of lust by gazing qualified;
 Slacked, not suppressed; for, standing by her side,
 His eye, which late this mutiny restrains,
 Unto a greater uproar tempts his veins.

And they, like straggling slaves for pillage fighting,
 Obdurate vassals fell exploits effecting,
 In bloody death and ravishment delighting,
 Nor children's tears nor^o mothers' groans respecting,
 Swell in their pride,^o the onset still expecting.
 Anon his beating heart, alarum^o striking,
 Gives the hot charge and bids them do their liking.

His drumming heart cheers up^o his burning eye,
 His eye commends^o the leading to his hand;
 His hand, as proud of such a dignity,
 Smoking with pride, marched on to make his stand
 On her bare breast, the heart of all her land;
 Whose ranks of blue veins, as his hand did scale,
 Left their round turrets destitute and pale.

They, must'ring^o to the quiet cabinet^o
 Where their dear governess and lady lies,
 Do tell her she is dreadfully beset
 And fright her with confusion of their cries.
 She, much amazed, breaks ope her locked-up eyes,
 Who, peeping forth this tumult to behold,
 Are by his flaming torch dimmed and controlled.^o

Imagine her as one in dead of night,
 From forth dull sleep by dreadful fancy waking,
 That thinks she hath beheld some ghastly sprite,
 Whose grim aspect sets every joint a-shaking.
 What terror 'tis! but she, in worser taking,^o
 From sleep disturbèd, heedfully doth view
 The sight which makes supposed terror true.

Wrapped and confounded in a thousand fears,
 Like to a new-killed bird she trembling lies.
 She dares not look; yet winking there appears
 Quick-shifting antics,^o ugly in her eyes.
 Such shadows^o are the weak brain's forgeries,
 Who, angry that the eyes fly from their lights,
 In darkness daunts them with more dreadful sights.

His hand, that yet remains upon her breast
 (Rude ram,^o to batter such an ivory wall!),
 May feel her heart (poor citizen) distressed,
 Wounding itself to death, rise up and fall,
 Beating her bulk,^o that his hand shakes withal.
 This moves in him more rage and lesser pity,
 To make the breach and enter this sweet city.

372 Look as as 373 bereaves takes away 375 wink close 377 supposed imagined 380 period end; ill evil 382 clear unstained 387 Coz'ning cheating 402 map image 417 will lust

421 fawneth rejoices 431 Nor . . . nor neither . . . nor 432 pride lust 433 alarum call to attack in battle 435 cheers up encourages 436 commends entrusts 442 must'ring rallying; the quiet cabinet the heart 448 controlled overpowered 453 taking fear 459 antics grotesque figures 460 shadows shapes 464 ram battering ram 467 bulk body

First like a trumpet doth his tongue begin
 To sound a parley to his heartless^o foe;
 Who o'er the white sheet peers her whiter chin,
 The reason of this rash alarm to know,
 Which he by dumb demeanor^o seeks to show;
 But she with vehement prayers urgeth still Under what color^o he commits this ill.

Thus he replies: "The color in thy face,
 That even for anger makes the lily pale
 And the red rose blush at her own disgrace,
 Shall plead for me and tell my loving tale.
 Under that color am I come to scale
 Thy never-conquered fort; the fault is thine,
 For those thine eyes betray thee unto mine.

"Thus I forestall thee, if thou mean to chide:
 Thy beauty hath ensnared thee to this night,^o
 Where thou with patience must my will^o abide,
 My will that marks thee for my earth's delight,
 Which I to conquer sought with all my might;
 But as reproof and reason beat it dead,
 By thy bright beauty was it newly bred.

"I see what crosses my attempt will bring,
 I know what thorns the growing rose defends,
 I think the honey guarded with a sting:
 All this beforehand counsel comprehends.
 But Will is deaf, and hears no heedful friends;
 Only he hath an eye to gaze on Beauty,
 And dotes on what he looks, 'gainst law or duty.

"I have debated even in my soul,
 What wrong, what shame, what sorrow I shall breed;
 But nothing can affection's^o course control
 Or stop the headlong fury of his speed.
 I know repentant tears ensue the deed,
 Reproach, disdain, and deadly enmity;
 Yet strive I to embrace mine infamy."

This said, he shakes aloft his Roman blade,
 Which, like a falcon tow'ring in the skies,
 Coucheth^o the fowl below with his wings' shade,
 Whose crooked beak threatens if he mount he dies.
 So under his insulting falchion^o lies Harmless Lucretia, marking what he tells
 With trembling fear, as fowl hear falcons' bells.

"Lucrece," quoth he, "this night I must enjoy thee.
 If thou deny, then force must work my way;
 For in thy bed I purpose to destroy thee.
 That done, some worthless slave of thine I'll slay,
 To kill thine honor with thy life's decay;
 And in thy dead arms do I mean to place him,
 Swearing I slew him, seeing thee embrace him.

470 "So thy surviving husband shall remain
 The scornful mark of every open eye;
 Thy kinsmen hang their heads at this disdain,^o 520
 Thy issue blurred with nameless bastardy;
 And thou, the author of their obloquy,
 475 Shalt have thy trespass cited up in rhymes
 And sung by children in succeeding times. 525

"But if thou yield, I rest thy secret friend;
 The fault unknown is as a thought unacted.
 A little harm done to a great good end
 480 For lawful policy remains enacted.^o
 The poisonous simple^o sometime is compacted^o 530
 In a pure compound; being so applied,
 His venom in effect is purified.

"Then, for thy husband and thy children's sake,
 485 Tender^o my suit; bequeath not to their lot
 The shame that from them no device can take, 535
 The blemish that will never be forgot;
 Worse than a slavish wipe^o or birth-hour's blot;^o
 For marks descried in men's nativity
 490 Are nature's faults, not their own infamy."

Here with a cockatrice'^o dead-killing eye 540
 He rouseth up himself and makes a pause;
 While she, the picture of pure piety,
 Like a white hind^o under the gripe's^o sharp claws,
 495 Pleads, in a wilderness where are no laws,
 To the rough beast that knows no gentle right 545
 Nor aught obeys but his foul appetite.

But when a black-faced cloud the world doth threat,
 In his dim mist th' aspiring mountains hiding,
 500 From earth's dark womb some gentle gust doth get,^o
 Which blows these pitchy vapors from their bidding, 550
 Hind'ring their present^o fall by this dividing,
 So his unhallowed haste her words delays,
 And moody Pluto winks while Orpheus^o plays.

505 Yet, foul night-waking cat, he doth but dally,
 While in his hold-fast foot the weak mouse panteth. 555
 Her sad behavior feeds his vulture folly,^o
 A swallowing gulf that even in plenty wanteth.^o
 His ear her prayers admits, but his heart granteth
 510 No penetrable entrance to her plaining.^o
 Tears harden lust, though marble wear with raining. 560

471 heartless frightened 474 dumb demeanor dumb show 476 color (1) pretext (2) flag (3) anger (choler) 485 to this night i.e., tonight 486 will sexual desire 500 affection's passion's 507 Coucheth makes cower 509 falchion curved sword (with play on "falcon")

521 disdain disgrace 529 enacted recorded 530 simple medicine; compacted compounded 534 Tender regard 537 slavish wipe i.e., brand mark on a slave; birth-hour's blot birthmark 540 cockatrice' basilisk's (mythical serpent that killed with a glance) 543 hind doe; gripe's griffin's (?) eagle's (?) 549 doth get makes its way 551 present immediate 553 Pluto . . . Orpheus Pluto, the ruler of the underworld, charmed by Orpheus' music, shut his eyes and allowed Orpheus to lead his wife, Eurydice, back toward the world 556 vulture folly ravenous madness 557 wanteth
 hungers 599 plaining lament

Her pity-pleading eyes are sadly fixèd
 In the remorseless wrinkles° of his face.
 Her modest eloquence with sighs is mixèd,
 Which to her oratory adds more grace.
 She puts the period often from his place,°
 And midst the sentence to her accent° breaks
 That twice she doth begin ere once she speaks.

She conjures him by high almighty Jove,
 By knighthood, gentry, and sweet friendship's oath,
 By her untimely tears, her husband's love,
 By holy human law and common troth,
 By heaven and earth, and all the power of both,
 That to his borrowed bed he make retire
 And stoop to° honor, not to foul desire.

Quoth she, "Reward not hospitality
 With such black payment as thou hast pretended;°
 Mud not the fountain that gave drink to thee;
 Mar not the thing that cannot be amended.
 End thy ill aim before thy shoot° be ended.
 He is no woodman° that doth bend his bow
 To strike a poor unseasonable doe.

"My husband is thy friend; for his sake spare me.
 Thyself art mighty; for thine own sake leave me.
 Myself a weakling; do not then ensnare me.
 Thou look'st not like deceit; do not deceive me.
 My sighs like whirlwinds labor hence to heave° thee.
 If ever man were moved with woman's moans,
 Be movèd with my tears, my sighs, my groans;

"All which together, like a troubled ocean,
 Beat at thy rocky and wrack-threat'ning heart,
 To soften it with their continual motion;
 For stones dissolved to water do convert.°
 O, if no harder than a stone thou art,
 Melt at my tears and be compassionate!
 Soft pity enters at an iron gate.

"In Tarquin's likeness I did entertain thee;
 Hast thou put on his shape to do him shame?
 To all the host of heaven I complain me.
 Thou wrong'st his honor, wound'st his princely name.
 Thou art not what thou seem'st; and if the same,
 Thou seem'st not what thou art, a god, a king;
 For kings like gods should govern everything.

"How will thy shame be seeded° in thine age
 When thus thy vices bud before thy spring?
 If in thy hope thou dar'st do such outrage,
 What dar'st thou not when once thou art a king?
 O, be rememb'red, no outrageous thing
 From vassal actors° can be wiped away;
 Then kings' misdeeds cannot be hid in clay.°

"This deed will make thee only loved for fear; 610
 But happy monarchs still are feared for love.
 With foul offenders thou perforce must bear
 When they in thee the like offenses prove.
 565 If but for° fear of this, thy will remove;°
 For princes are the glass,° the school, the book, 615
 Where subjects' eyes do learn, do read, do look.

"And wilt thou be the school where Lust shall learn?
 Must he in thee read lectures of such shame?
 570 Wilt thou be glass wherein it shall discern Authority for sin, warrant for blame, 620
 To privilege dishonor in thy name?
 Thou back'st° reproach against long-living laud°
 And mak'st fair reputation but a bawd.

"Hast thou command? By Him that gave it thee,
 575 From a pure heart command thy rebel will! 625
 Draw not thy sword to guard iniquity,
 For it was lent thee all that brood to kill.
 Thy princely office how canst thou fulfill 580 When, patterned by thy fault, foul Sin may say,
 He learned to sin, and thou didst teach the way? 630

"Think but how vile a spectacle it were
 To view thy present trespass in another.
 Men's faults do seldom to themselves appear;
 585 Their own transgressions partially they smother.
 This guilt would seem death-worthy in thy brother. 635
 O, how are they wrapped in with infamies
 That from their own misdeeds askaunce° their eyes!

"To thee, to thee, my heaved-up hands appeal,
 590 Not to seducing lust, thy rash relier.° 640
 I sue for exiled majesty's repeal;°
 Let him return, and flatt'ring thoughts retire.
 His true respect° will prison° false desire
 And wipe the dim mist from thy doting eyne,° 595 That thou shalt see thy state, and pity mine."

"Have done," quoth he. "My uncontrollèd tide 645 Turns not, but swells the higher by this let.°
 Small lights are soon blown out; huge fires abide
 And with the wind in greater fury fret.
 600 The petty streams that pay a daily debt
 To their salt sovereign° with their fresh falls'° haste, 650
 Add to his flow, but alter not his taste."

"Thou art," quoth she, "a sea, a sovereign king;
 And, lo, there falls into thy boundless flood 605 Black lust, dishonor, shame, misgoverning,
 Who seek to stain the ocean of thy blood. 655
 If all these petty ills shall change thy good,
 Thy sea within a puddle's womb is hearsèd,°
 And not the puddle in thy sea dispersèd.

562 remorseless wrinkles pitiless frowns 565 She . . . place
 she often makes a pause in the middle of a sentence 566 accent speech 574 stoop to submit to 576 pretended proposed 579 shoot act of shooting (with pun on suit?) 580 woodman hunter 586 heave move 592 convert change 603 seeded matured 608 vassal actors i.e., subjects, acting on orders 609 in clay i.e., in death

614 If but for if only for; thy will remove dissuade your lust 615 glass looking-glass 622 Thou back'st you support;
 laud praise 637 askaunce turn aside 639 lust . . . relier i.e., lust, which you rashly rely on 640 repeal return from exile
 642 respect respectfulness; prison imprison 643 eyne eyes
 646 let hindrance 650 salt sovereign the ocean; falls' flows'
 657 hearsèd entombed

"So shall these slaves be king, and thou their slave;
 Thou nobly base, they basely dignified;
 Thou their fair life, and they thy fouler grave;
 Thou loathèd in their shame, they in thy pride.
 The lesser thing should not the greater hide.
 The cedar stoops not to the base shrub's foot,
 But low shrubs wither at the cedar's root.

660 And then with lank and lean discolored cheek,
 With heavy eye, knit brow, and strengthless pace,
 Feeble Desire, all recreant,^o poor, and meek, 710
 Like to a bankrout beggar wails his case.
 The flesh being proud, Desire doth fight with Grace,
 For there it revels; and when that^o decays,
 665 The guilty rebel for remission prays.

"So let thy thoughts, low vassals to thy state"—
 "No more," quoth he. "By heaven, I will not hear thee!
 Yield to my love; if not, enforcèd hate,
 Instead of love's coy^o touch, shall rudely tear thee.
 That done, despitefully^o I mean to bear thee 670
 Unto the base bed of some rascal groom,
 To be thy partner in this shameful doom."

So fares it with this fault-full lord of Rome, 715
 Who this accomplishment so hotly chased;
 For now against himself he sounds this doom,
 That through the length of times he stands disgracèd.
 Besides, his soul's fair temple is defacèd;
 670 To whose weak ruins muster troops of cares, 720
 To ask the spotted princess^o how she fares.

This said, he sets his foot upon the light,
 For light and lust are deadly enemies;
 Shame folded up in blind concealing night,
 675 When most unseen, then most doth tyrannize.
 The wolf hath seized his prey; the poor lamb cries,
 Till with her own white fleece^o her voice controlled^o
 Entombs her outcry in her lips' sweet fold;

She says her subjects^o with foul insurrection
 Have battered down her consecrated wall,
 675 And by their mortal^o fault brought in subjection
 Her immortality and made her thrall 725
 To living death and pain perpetual;
 Which^o in her prescience^o she controllèd still,
 But her foresight could not forestall their will.

For with the nightly linen^o that she wears
 He pens her piteous clamors in her head,
 Cooling his hot face in the chastest tears
 That ever modest eyes with sorrow shed.
 O, that prone^o lust should stain so pure a bed,
 The spots whereof, could weeping purify,
 Her tears should drop on them perpetually!

680 Ev'n in this thought through the dark night he stealeth,
 A captive victor that hath lost in gain; 730
 Bearing away the wound that nothing healeth,
 The scar that will despite of cure remain;
 Leaving his spoil^o perplexed in greater pain.
 685 She bears the load of lust he left behind,
 And he the burden of a guilty mind. 735

But she hath lost a dearer thing than life,
 And he hath won what he would lose again.
 This forcèd league doth force a further strife;
 This momentary joy breeds months of pain;
 This hot desire converts to cold disdain;
 Pure Chastity is rifled of her store,
 And Lust, the thief, far poorer than before.

He like a thievish dog creeps sadly thence;
 She like a wearied lamb lies panting there.
 He scowls, and hates himself for his offense;
 690 She desperate with her nails her flesh doth tear.
 He faintly flies, sweating with guilty fear; 740
 She stays, exclaiming on the direful night;
 He runs, and chides his vanished loathed delight.

Look as the full-fed hound or gorgèd hawk,
 Unapt for tender smell^o or speedy flight,
 Make slow pursuit, or altogether balk^o
 The prey wherein by nature they delight,
 So surfeit-taking Tarquin fares this night:
 His taste delicious, in digestion souring,
 Devours his will, that lived by foul devouring.

695 He thence departs a heavy convertite;^o
 She there remains a hopeless castaway.^o 745
 He in his speed looks for the morning light;
 She prays she never may behold the day,
 "For day," quoth she, "night's scapes^o doth open lay,
 And my true eyes have never practiced how 700 To cloak offenses with a cunning brow.

O, deeper sin than bottomless conceit^o
 Can comprehend in still imagination!
 Drunken Desire must vomit his receipt^o
 Ere he can see his own abomination.
 While Lust is in his pride, no exclamation^o
 Can curb his heat or rein his rash desire
 Till, like a jade, Self-will himself doth tire.

"They think not but that every eye can see 750
 The same disgrace which they themselves behold;
 And therefore would they still in darkness be,
 To have their unseen sin remain untold;
 705 For they their guilt with weeping will unfold
 And grave,^o like water^o that doth eat in steel, 755
 Upon my cheeks what helpless shame I feel."

669 coy gentle 670 despitefully cruelly 678 white fleece i.e., bedclothes; controlled overwhelmed 680 nightly linen turban (?) 684 prone (1) impulsive (2) prostrate 695 tender smell weak scent 696 balk neglect to pursue 701 bottomless conceit infinite imagination 703 his receipt what it has received 705 exclamation exhortation

710 recreant cowed 713 that lust 721 the spotted princess Tarquin's defiled soul 722 her subjects the senses 724 mortal deadly 727 Which her subjects; prescience fore-knowledge (i.e., in theory) 733 spoil victim 743 heavy convertite sad penitent 744 castaway lost soul 747 scapes transgressions 755 grave engrave; water i.e., acid

Here she exclaims against repose and rest,
And bids her eyes hereafter still be blind.
She wakes her heart by beating on her breast,
And bids it leap from thence, where it may find
Some purer chest to close° so pure a mind.
Frantic with grief thus breathes she forth her spite
Against the unseen secrecy of night:

“O comfort-killing Night, image of hell,
Dim register and notary° of shame,
Black stage for tragedies and murders fell,
Vast sin-concealing chaos, nurse of blame,
Blind muffled bawd, dark harbor for defame!°
Grim cave of death, whisp’ring conspirator
With close-tongued° treason and the ravisher!

“O hateful, vaporous, and foggy Night,
Since thou art guilty of my cureless crime,
Muster thy mists to meet the eastern light,
Make war against proportioned° course of time;
Or if thou wilt permit the sun to climb
His wonted height, yet ere he go to bed,
Knit poisonous clouds about his golden head.

“With rotten damps ravish the morning air;
Let their exhaled unwholesome breaths make sick
The life of purity, the supreme fair,°
Ere he arrive his weary noontide prick;°
And let thy musty vapors march so thick
That in their smoky ranks his smoth’red light
May set at noon and make perpetual night.

“Were Tarquin Night, as he is but Night’s child,°
The silver-shining queen he would distain;°
Her twinkling handmaids too, by him defiled,
Through Night’s black bosom should not peep again.
So should I have co-partners in my pain;
And fellowship in woe doth woe assuage,
As palmers’° chat makes short their pilgrimage;

“Where now° I have no one to blush with me,
To cross their arms° and hang their heads with mine,
To mask their brows° and hide their infamy;
But I alone, alone must sit and pine,
Seasoning the earth with show’rs of silver brine, Mingling my talk with tears, my grief with groans,
Poor wasting monuments of lasting moans.

“O Night, thou furnace of foul reeking smoke,
Let not the jealous° Day behold that face
Which underneath thy black all-hiding cloak
Immodestly lies martyred with disgrace!
Keep still possession of thy gloomy place,
That all the faults which in thy reign are made
May likewise be sepulchered in thy shade!

“Make me not object to the telltale Day.
The light will show, characterized° in my brow,
The story of sweet chastity’s decay,
The impious breach of holy wedlock vow.
Yea, the illiterate, that know not how
To cipher° what is writ in learned books,
Will quote° my loathsome trespass in my looks.

“The nurse to still her child will tell my story
And fright her crying babe with Tarquin’s name.
The orator to deck his oratory
Will couple my reproach to Tarquin’s shame.
Feast-finding minstrels, tuning my defame,
Will tie° the hearers to attend each line,
How Tarquin wronged me, I Collatine.

“Let my good name, that senseless° reputation,
For Collatine’s dear love be kept unspotted.
If that be made a theme for disputation,
The branches of another root are rotted,
And undeserved reproach to him allotted
That is as clear from this attain° of mine
As I ere this was pure to Collatine.

“O unseen shame, invisible disgrace!
O unfelt sore, crest-wounding° private scar!
Reproach is stamped in Collatinus’ face,
And Tarquin’s eye may read the mot° afar,
How he in peace is wounded, not in war.
Alas, how many bear such shameful blows
Which not themselves, but he that gives them knows!

“If, Collatine, thine honor lay in me,
From me by strong assault it is bereft;
My honey lost, and I, a dronelike bee,
Have no perfection of my summer left,
But robbed and ransacked by injurious theft.
In thy weak hive a wand’ring wasp hath crept
And sucked the honey which thy chaste bee kept.

“Yet am I guilty of thy honor’s wrack;
Yet for thy honor did I entertain him:
Coming from thee, I could not put him back,
For it had been dishonor to disdain him.
Besides, of weariness he did complain him
And talked of virtue: O unlooked-for evil,
When virtue is profaned in such a devil!

761 close enclose 765 notary recorder 768 defame disgrace
770 close-tongued secretive 774 proportioned orderly 780 the supreme fair the sun 781 Ere . . . prick before he arrives wearied at the point of noon (on a sundial) 785
Night’s child i.e., wicked 786 distain defile 791 palmers’ pilgrims’ (those who had been to the Holy Land wore a palm leaf) 792 Where now whereas 793 To . . . arms folded arms were a sign of melancholy 794 To . . . brows a hat pulled down over one’s face was a sign of melancholy 800 jealous watchful 807 characterized lettered (accent on second syllable) 811 cipher decipher 812 quote mark 818 tie hold 820 senseless (1) impalpable (2) free from sensuality 825 attain disgrace 828 crest-wounding i.e., disgraceful to the family crest 830 mot motto (with allusion to the parable of the mote and the beam, Matthew 7:3)

“Why should the worm intrude the maiden bud?
 Or hateful cuckoo hatch in sparrows’ nests?
 Or toads infect fair founts with venom mud?
 Or tyrant folly lurk in gentle breasts?
 Or kings be breakers of their own behests?^o
 But no perfection is so absolute
 That some impurity doth not pollute.

“The agèd man that coffers up his gold
 Is plagued with cramps and gout and painful fits,
 And scarce hath eyes his treasure to behold,
 But like still-pining Tantalus^o he sits
 And useless barns^o the harvest of his wits,
 Having no other pleasure of his gain
 But torment that it cannot cure his pain.

“So then he hath it when he cannot use it,
 And leaves it to be mast’red by his young,
 Who in their pride do presently^o abuse it;
 Their father was too weak, and they too strong,
 To hold their cursèd-blessèd fortune long.
 The sweets we wish for turn to loathèd sours
 Even in the moment that we call them ours.

“Unruly blasts wait on the tender spring;
 Unwholesome weeds take root with precious flow’rs;
 The adder hisses where the sweet birds sing;
 What virtue breeds iniquity devours.
 We have no good that we can say is ours,
 But ill-annexèd opportunity^o
 Or kills his life or else his quality.^o

“O Opportunity, thy guilt is great!
 ’Tis thou that execut’st the traitor’s treason;
 Thou sets the wolf where he the lamb may get;
 Whoever plots the sin, thou point’st the season.
 ’Tis thou that spurn’st at right, at law, at reason;
 And in thy shady cell, where none may spy him,
 Sits Sin, to seize the souls that wander by him.

“Thou mak’st the vestal violate her oath;
 Thou blow’st the fire when temperance is thawed;
 Thou smother’st honesty, thou murd’rest troth.
 Thou foul abettor, thou notorious bawd,
 Thou plantest scandal and displacest laud.^o
 Thou ravisher, thou traitor, thou false thief,
 Thy honey turns to gall, thy joy to grief.

“Thy secret pleasure turns to open shame,
 Thy private feasting to a public fast,
 Thy smoothing^o titles to a ragged name,
 Thy sug’red tongue to bitter wormwood taste:
 Thy violent vanities can never last.
 How comes it then, vile Opportunity,
 Being so bad, such numbers seek for thee?

850 “When wilt thou be the humble suppliant’s friend
 And bring him where his suit may be obtained?
 When wilt thou sort^o an hour great strifes to end?
 Or free that soul which wretchedness hath chainèd?
 Give physic to the sick, ease to the painèd?
 The poor, lame, blind, halt, creep, cry out for thee;
 But they ne’er meet with Opportunity. 900

855 “The patient dies while the physician sleeps;
 The orphan pines while the oppressor feeds;
 Justice is feasting while the widow weeps;
 Advice^o is sporting while infection breeds.
 Thou grant’st no time for charitable deeds:
 860 Wrath, envy, treason, rape, and murder’s rages,
 Thy heinous hours wait on them as their pages. 910

865 “When Truth and Virtue have to do with thee,
 A thousand crosses^o keep them from thy aid.
 They buy thy help; but Sin ne’er gives a fee,
 He gratis comes; and thou art well apaid
 As well to hear as grant what he hath said. 915
 My Collatine would else have come to me
 When Tarquin did, but he was stayed by thee.

“Guilty thou art of murder and of theft,
 Guilty of perjury and subornation,^o
 Guilty of treason, forgery, and shift,^o
 Guilty of incest, that abomination:
 An accessory by thine inclination
 To all sins past and all that are to come,
 875 From the creation to the general doom. 920

“Misshapen Time, copesmate^o of ugly Night,
 Swift subtle post,^o carrier of grisly care,
 Eater of youth, false slave to false delight,
 Base watch^o of woes, sin’s packhorse, virtue’s snare!
 880 Thou nursest all, and murd’rest all that are.
 O, hear me then, injurious shifting Time;
 Be guilty of my death, since of my crime. 930

885 “Why hath thy servant Opportunity
 Betrayed the hours thou gav’st me to repose?
 Canceled my fortunes, and chainèd me
 To endless date of never-ending woes?
 Time’s office is to fine^o the hate of foes,
 To eat up errors by opinion bred,
 Not spend the dowry of a lawful bed. 935

890 “Time’s glory is to calm contending kings,
 To unmask falsehood and bring truth to light,
 To stamp the seal of time in agèd things,
 To wake the morn and sentinel^o the night,
 To wrong the wronger till he render right,
 895 To ruate^o proud buildings with thy hours,
 And smear with dust their glitt’ring golden tow’rs; 940 945

852 behests commands 858 Tantalus in Hades, Tantalus was surrounded by food and drink that he could never touch 859 barns stores 864 presently immediately 874 ill-annexèd opportunity disastrously connected chance 875 Or . . . quality either kills its (good’s) life or its nature 887 laud praise 892 smoothing flattering

899 sort choose 907 Advice (medical) knowledge 912 crosses hindrances 919 subornation bribing someone to commit a crime 920 shift cheating 925 copesmate companion, paramour 926 subtle post sly post-rider 928 watch watchman 936 fine end 942 sentinel guard 944 ruate reduce to ruin

"To fill with wormholes stately monuments,
To feed oblivion with decay of things,
To blot old books and alter their contents,
To pluck the quills from ancient ravens' wings,
To dry the old oak's sap and cherish springs,^o
To spoil antiquities of hammered steel
And turn the giddy round of Fortune's wheel;

"To show the beldame^o daughters of her daughter,
To make the child a man, the man a child,
To slay the tiger that doth live by slaughter,
To tame the unicorn and lion wild,
To mock the subtle in themselves beguiled,
To cheer the ploughman with increaseful crops
And waste^o huge stones with little water-drops.

"Why work'st thou mischief in thy pilgrimage,
Unless thou couldst return to make amends?
One poor retiring^o minute in an age
Would purchase thee a thousand thousand friends,
Lending him wit that to bad debtors lends.
O this dread night, wouldst thou one hour come back,
I could prevent this storm and shun thy wrack!

"Thou ceaseless lackey^o to Eternity,
With some mischance cross Tarquin in his flight.
Devise extremes beyond extremity
To make him curse this cursèd crimeful night.
Let ghastly shadows his lewd eyes affright,
And the dire thought of his committed evil
Shape every bush a hideous shapeless devil.

"Disturb his hours of rest with restless trances;
Afflict him in his bed with bedrid groans;
Let there bechance him pitiful mischances
To make him moan, but pity not his moans.
Stone him with hard'ned hearts harder than stones,
And let mild women to him lose their mildness,
Wilder to him than tigers in their wildness.

"Let him have time to tear his curlèd hair,
Let him have time against himself to rave,
Let him have time of Time's help to despair,
Let him have time to live a loathèd slave,
Let him have time a beggar's orts^o to crave,
And time to see one that by alms doth live
Disdain to him disdainèd scraps to give.

"Let him have time to see his friends his foes
And merry fools to mock at him resort;
Let him have time to mark how slow time goes
In time of sorrow, and how swift and short
His time of folly and his time of sport;
And ever let his unrecalling^o crime
Have time to wail th' abusing of his time.

"O Time, thou tutor both to good and bad,
Teach me to curse him that thou taught'st this ill.
At his own shadow let the thief run mad,
Himself himself seek every hour to kill.
950 Such wretched hands such wretched blood should spill,
For who so base would such an office have
As sland'rous deathsman^o to so base a slave? 1000

"The baser is he, coming from a king,
To shame his hope^o with deeds degenerate.
955 The mightier man, the mightier is the thing
That makes him honored or begets him hate;
For greatest scandal waits on greatest state.
The moon being clouded presently is missed,
But little stars may hide them when they list. 1005

"The crow may bathe his coal-black wings in mire
And unperceived fly with the filth away;
But if the like the snow-white swan desire,
The stain upon his silver down will stay.
Poor grooms^o are sightless^o night, kings glorious day;
Gnats are unnoted wheresoe'er they fly,
965 But eagles gazed upon with every eye. 1015

"Out, idle words, servants to shallow fools,
Unprofitable sounds, weak arbitrators!^o
Busy yourselves in skill-contending schools;^o
Debate where leisure serves with dull debaters;
970 To trembling clients^o be you mediators:
For me, I force not argument a straw,^o
Since that my case is past the help of law. 1020

"In vain I rail at Opportunity,
At Time, at Tarquin, and uncheerful Night;
975 In vain I cavil with mine infamy;
In vain I spurn^o at my confirmed despite:^o
This helpless smoke of words^o doth me no right.
The remedy indeed to do me good
Is to let forth my foul defilèd blood. 980

"Poor hand, why quiver'st thou at this decree?
Honor thyself to rid me of this shame;
For if I die, my honor lives in thee;
But if I live, thou liv'st in my defame.
Since thou couldst not defend thy loyal dame
985 And wast afeared to scratch her wicked foe,
Kill both thyself and her for yielding so." 1035

This said, from her betumbled couch she starteth,
To find some desp'rate instrument of death;
But this no slaughterhouse no tool imparteth^o
990 To make more vent for passage of her breath,
Which, thronging through her lips, so vanisheth
As smoke from Aetna that in air consumes
Or that which from discharged cannon fumes. 1040

950 cherish springs renew (1) the water of springs, or (2) young saplings (i.e., new growth of any kind) 953 beldame old woman 959 waste wear away 962 retiring returning 967 ceaseless lackey ever-present servant 985 orts scraps 993 unrecalling irrevocable

1001 sland'rous deathsman disgraced executioner 1003 hope expectations (as heir) 1013 grooms servants; sightless invisible 1017 arbitrators arbiters (or compromisers) 1018 in skill-contending schools i.e., in mere debates 1020 clients suitors at law 1021 force . . . straw care not a straw for argument 1026 spurn kick; despite wrong 1027 smoke of words mere talk 1039 imparteth provides

"In vain," quoth she, "I live, and seek in vain
Some happy mean to end a hapless life.
I feared by Tarquin's falchion to be slain,
Yet for the selfsame purpose seek a knife;
But when I feared I was a loyal wife.

So am I now—O no, that cannot be:
Of that true type° hath Tarquin rifled me.

"O, that is gone for which I sought to live,
And therefore now I need not fear to die.
To clear this spot by death, at least I give
A badge° of fame to slander's livery,°
A dying life to living infamy.
Poor helpless help, the treasure stol'n away,
To burn the guiltless casket where it lay!

"Well, well, dear Collatine, thou shalt not know
The stained taste of violated troth.
I will not wrong thy true affection so,
To flatter thee with an infringed oath.
This bastard graff° shall never come to growth:
He shall not boast who did thy stock pollute
That thou art doting father of his fruit.

"Nor shall he smile at thee in secret thought,
Nor laugh with his companions at thy state;
But thou shalt know thy int'rest° was not bought
Basely with gold, but stol'n from forth thy gate.
For me, I am the mistress of my fate,
And with my trespass never will dispense°
Till life to death acquit my forced offense.

"I will not poison thee with my attaint
Nor fold my fault in cleanly coined excuses;
My sable° ground of sin I will not paint
To hide the truth of this false night's abuses.
My tongue shall utter all; mine eyes, like sluices,
As from a mountain spring that feeds a dale,
Shall gush pure streams to purge my impure tale."

By this lamenting Philomel° had ended
The well-tuned warble of her nightly sorrow,
And solemn night with slow sad gait descended
To ugly hell; when, lo, the blushing morrow
Lends light to all fair eyes that light will borrow;
But cloudy Lucrece shames herself to see
And therefore still in night would cloist' red be.

Revealing day through every cranny spies
And seems to point her out where she sits weeping;
To whom she sobbing speaks, "O eye of eyes Why pry'st thou through my window? Leave thy peeping.
Mock with thy tickling° beams eyes that are sleeping. 1090
Brand not my forehead with thy piercing light.
For day hath naught to do what's done by night."

1050 true type stamp 1054 badge mark (crest, coat of arms) worn on a servant's sleeve; livery garment 1062 graff graft, shoot 1067 int'rest property 1070 dispense pardon 1074 sable black 1079 Philomel the nightingale (who, according to legend, had originally been a woman, ravished by Tereus; see lines 1128-34) 1090 tickling lightly touching

Thus cavils she with everything she sees.
1045 True grief is fond and testy° as a child,
Who wayward once,° his mood with naught agrees. 1095
Old woes, not infant sorrows, bear them° mild:
Continuance tames the one; the other wild,
Like an unpracticed swimmer plunging still,
1050 With too much labor drowns for want of skill.

So she, deep drenchèd in a sea of care, 1100
Holds disputation with each thing she views,
And to herself all sorrow doth compare;
No object but her passion's strength renews;
1055 And as one shifts, another straight ensues.°
Sometime her grief is dumb and hath no words; 1105
Sometime 'tis mad and too much talk affords.

The little birds that tune° their morning's joy
Make her moans mad with their sweet melody:
1060 For mirth doth search the bottom of annoy;°
Sad souls are slain in merry company; 1110
Grief best is pleased with grief's society:
True sorrow then is feelingly sufficed°
When with like semblance it is sympathized.

1065 'Tis double death to drown in ken° of shore;
He ten times pines that pines beholding food; 1115
To see the salve doth make the wound ache more;
Great grief grieves most at that would do it good;
Deep woes roll forward like a gentle flood,
1070 Who, being stopped, the bounding banks o'erflows; 1120
Grief dallied° with, nor law nor limit knows.

"You mocking birds," quoth she, "your tunes entomb
Within your hollow swelling feath' red breasts,
And in my hearing be you mute and dumb;
1075 My restless discord loves no stops° nor rests.° 1125
A woeful hostess brooks not merry guests.
Relish° your nimble notes to pleasing ears;
Distress likes dumps° when time is kept with tears.

"Come, Philomel; that sing'st of ravishment,
1080 Make thy sad grove in my disheveled hair. 1130
As the dank earth weeps at thy languishment,
So I at each sad strain will strain a tear
And with deep groans the diapason° bear;
For burden-wise° I'll hum on Tarquin still,
1085 While thou on Tereus descants better skill.°

1094 fond and testy foolish and irritable 1095 wayward once once becoming angry 1096 them themselves 1104 straight ensues straightaway follows 1107 tune sing 1109 search . . . annoy pierce to the depths of grief 1112 sufficed contented 1114 ken sight 1120 dallied trifled 1124 stops, rests (1) cessation of discord (2) musical pauses 1126 Relish make pleasant (literally, sauce) 1127 dumps slow mournful tunes 1132 diapason bass accompaniment 1133 burden-wise a burden was (1) a bass accompaniment (2) the refrain of a song 1134 descants better skill (1) sings better (2) sings more intricately

"And whiles against a thorn thou bear'st thy part
To keep thy sharp woes waking, wretched I,
To imitate thee well, against my heart
Will fix a sharp knife to affright mine eye,
Who° if it wink° shall thereon fall and die.
These means, as frets° upon an instrument,
Shall tune our heartstrings to true languishment.

"And for,° poor bird, thou sing'st not in the day,
As shaming° any eye should thee behold,
Some dark deep desert, seated from the way,°
That knows not parching heat nor freezing cold,
Will we find out; and there we will unfold
To creatures stern sad tunes, to change their kinds.°
Since men prove beasts, let beasts bear gentle minds."

As the poor frightened deer that stands at gaze,°
Wildly determining which way to fly,
Or one encompassed with a winding maze,
That cannot tread the way out readily;
So with herself is she in mutiny,
To live or die which of the twain were better,
When life is shamed and death reproach's debtor.°

"To kill myself," quoth she, "alack, what were it
But with my body my poor soul's pollution?
They that lose half with greater patience bear it
Than they whose whole is swallowed in confusion.°
That mother tries a merciless conclusion°
Who, having two sweet babes, when death takes one,
Will slay the other and be nurse to none.

"My body or my soul, which was the dearer
When the one pure, the other made divine?
Whose love of either to myself was nearer
When both were kept for heaven and Collatine?
Ay me, the bark pilled° from the lofty pine,
His leaves will wither and his sap decay:
So must my soul, her bark being pilled away.

"Her house is sacked, her quiet interrupted,
Her mansion battered by the enemy;
Her sacred temple spotted, spoiled, corrupted,
Grossly engirt° with daring infamy.
Then let it not be called impiety
If in this blemished fort° I make some hole
Through which I may convey this troubled soul.

"Yet die I will not till my Collatine
Have heard the cause of my untimely death,
That he may vow, in that sad hour of mine,
Revenge on him that made me stop my breath.
My stained blood to Tarquin I'll bequeath,
Which, by him tainted, shall for him be spent
And as his due writ in my testament.

1135 "My honor I'll bequeath unto the knife
That wounds my body so dishonorèd. 1185
'Tis honor to deprive° dishonored life:
The one will live, the other being dead.
So of shame's ashes shall my fame be bred,
1140 For in my death I murder shameful scorn;
My shame so dead, mine honor is new born. 1190

"Dear lord of that dear jewel I have lost,
What legacy shall I bequeath to thee?
My resolution, love, shall be thy boast,
1145 By whose example thou revenged mayst be.
How Tarquin must be used, read it in me: 1195
Myself thy friend will kill myself thy foe,
And for my sake serve thou false Tarquin so.

"This brief abridgment of my will I make:
1150 My soul and body to the skies and ground;
My resolution, husband, do thou take; 1200
Mine honor be the knife's that makes my wound;
My shame be his that did my fame confound;
And all my fame that lives disbursèd be 1155 To those that live and think no shame of me.

"Thou, Collatine, shalt oversee° this will. 1205
How was I overseen° that thou shalt see it!
My blood shall wash° the slander of mine ill;°
My life's foul deed my life's fair end shall free it.
1160 Faint not, faint heart, but stoutly say, 'So be it.'
Yield to my hand, my hand shall conquer thee: 1210
Thou dead, both die, and both shall victors be."

This plot of death when sadly she had laid
And wiped the brinish pearl from her bright eyes,
1165 With untuned° tongue she hoarsely calls her maid,
Whose swift obedience to her mistress hies; 1215
For fleet-winged duty with thought's feathers flies.
Poor Lucrece' cheeks unto her maid seem so
As winter meads when sun doth melt their snow.

1170 Her mistress she doth give demure° good-morrow
With soft-slow tongue, true mark of modesty, 1220
And sorts° a sad look to her lady's sorrow,
For why° her face wore sorrow's livery;
But durst not ask of her audaciously
1175 Why her two suns were cloud-eclipsèd so,
Nor why her fair cheeks overwashed with woe. 1225

But as the earth doth weep, the sun being set,
Each flower moist'ned like a melting eye,
Even so the maid with swelling drops 'gan wet
1180 Her circled eyne,° enforced by sympathy
Of those fair suns set in her mistress' sky, 1230
Who in a salt-waved ocean quench their light,
Which makes the maid weep like the dewy night.

1139 Who which (i.e., her heart); it wink i.e., her eye closes
1140 frets ridges fastened across the fingerboard of a stringed instrument to regulate fingering 1142 for because 1143 shaming being ashamed 1144 desert . . . way deserted place situated away from a path 1147 kinds natures 1149 at gaze i.e., bewildered 1155 death reproach's debtor
i.e., her death (suicide) would be the occasion of reproach 1159 confusion destruction 1160 conclusion experiment
1167 pilled peeled 1173 engirt besieged 1175 fort her body

1186 deprive take away 1205 oversee execute 1206 overseen deceived 1207 wash wash away; ill sin 1214 untuned discordant 1219 demure modest 1221 sorts fits 1222
For why because 1229 circled eyne rounded eyes (?) eyes encircled with dark rings (?)

A pretty while these pretty creatures stand,
Like ivory conduits coral cisterns° filling.
One justly weeps, the other takes in hand°
No cause, but company, of her drops spilling.
Their gentle sex to weep are often willing,
Grieving themselves to guess at others' smarts,
And then they drown their eyes or break their hearts.

For men have marble, women waxen minds,
And therefore are they formed as marble will;°
The weak oppressed, th' impression of strange kinds
Is formed in them by force, by fraud, or skill.
Then call them not the authors of their ill,
No more than wax shall be accounted evil
Wherein is stamped the semblance of a devil.

Their smoothness, like a goodly champain° plain,
Lays open° all the little worms that creep;
In men, as in a rough-grown grove, remain
Cave-keeping° evils that obscurely sleep.
Through crystal walls each little mote° will peep.
Though men can cover crimes with bold stern looks,
Poor women's faces are their own faults' books.

No man° inveigh against the with' red flow'r,
But chide rough winter that the flow'r hath killed.
Nor that devoured, but that which doth devour,
Is worthy blame; O, let it not be hild°
Poor women's faults that they are so fulfilled°
With men's abuses! those proud lords to blame
Make weak-made women tenants to their shame.

The precedent° whereof in Lucrece view,
Assailed by night with circumstances strong
Of present death, and shame that might ensue
By that her death, to do her husband wrong.
Such danger to resistance did belong
That dying° fear through all her body spread;
And who cannot abuse a body dead?

By this, mild patience bid fair Lucrece speak
To the poor counterfeit° of her complaining.
"My girl," quoth she, "on what occasion break
Those tears from thee that down thy cheeks are raining?
If thou dost weep for grief of my sustaining,°
Know, gentle wench, it small avails my mood;°
If tears could help, mine own would do me good.

"But tell me, girl, when went" (and there she stayed Till after a deep groan) "Tarquin from hence?"
"Madam, ere I was up," replied the maid,
"The more to blame my sluggard negligence.
Yet with the fault I thus far can dispense:
Myself was stirring ere the break of day,
An ere I rose was Tarquin gone away.

1235 "But, lady, if your maid may be so bold,
She would request to know your heaviness."°
"O, peace," quoth Lucrece. "If it should be told,
The repetition cannot make it less; 1285
For more it is than I can well express,
And that deep torture may be called a hell
When more is felt than one hath power to tell.

1240 "Go get me hither paper, ink, and pen;
Yet save that labor, for I have them here. 1290
What should I say? One of my husband's men
Bid thou be ready by and by° to bear
A letter to my lord, my love, my dear.
1245 Bid him with speed prepare to carry it;
The cause craves haste, and it will soon be writ." 1295

Her maid is gone, and she prepares to write,
First hovering o'er the paper with her quill.
Conceit° and grief an eager combat fight;
1250 What wit sets down is blotted straight with will.
This is too curious° good, this blunt and ill. 1300
Much like a press of people at a door,
Throng her inventions, which shall go before.°

At last she thus begins: "Thou worthy lord
1255 Of that unworthy wife that greeteth thee,
Health to thy person! next vouchsafe t' afford 1305
(If ever, love, thy Lucrece thou wilt see)
Some present speed to come and visit me.
So I commend me, from our house in grief.
1260 My woes are tedious, though my words are brief."

Here folds she up the tenure° of her woe, 1310
Her certain sorrow writ uncertainly.
By this short schedule° Collatine may know
Her grief, but not her grief's true quality;
1265 She dares not thereof make discovery,
Lest he should hold it her own gross abuse 1315
Ere she with blood had stained her stained excuse.°

Besides, the life and feeling of her passion°
She hoards, to spend when he is by to hear her,
1270 When sighs and groans and tears may grace the fashion
Of her disgrace, the better so to clear her 1320
From that suspicion which the world might bear her.
To shun this blot, she would not blot the letter
With words till action might become them better.

1275 To see sad sights moves more than hear them told,
For then the eye interprets to the ear 1325
The heavy motion° that it doth behold
When every part a part of woe doth bear.
'Tis but a part of sorrow that we hear.
1280 Deep sounds° make lesser noise than shallow fords,
And sorrow ebbs, being blown with wind of words. 1330

1234 coral cisterns their reddened eyes (?) 1235 takes in hand acknowledges 1241 will i.e., will have them formed 1247 champain level 1248 Lays open reveals 1250 Cave-keeping dwelling in caves 1251 mote speck 1254 No man let no man 1257 hild held 1258 fulfilled filled 1261 precedent example 1266 dying i.e., unnerving 1269 counterfeit image 1272 of my sustaining that I sustain 1273 mood grief

1283 heaviness cause of grief 1292 by and by immediately 1298 Conceit thought 1300 curious cleverly 1302 which . . . before which one shall enter first 1310 tenure statement 1312 schedule summary 1316 her stained excuse her account of her stain 1317 passion suffering 1326 heavy motion melancholy action 1329 sounds soundings (naval term)

Her letter now is sealed, and on it writ,
 "At Ardea to my lord with more than haste."
 The post attends, and she delivers it,
 Charging the sour-faced° groom to hie as fast
 As lagging fowls before the northern blast;
 Speed more than speed but dull and slow she deems:
 Extremity still urgeth such extremes.

The homely villain cursies° to her low;
 And, blushing on her,° with a steadfast eye,
 Receives the scroll without or yea or no
 And forth with bashful innocence doth hie.
 But they whose guilt within their bosoms lie
 Imagine every eye beholds their blame,
 For Lucrece thought he blushed to see her shame,

When, seely° groom (God wot°), it was defect
 Of spirit, life,° and bold audacity;
 Such harmless creatures have a true respect°
 To talk in deeds,° while others saucily
 Promise more speed, but do it leisurely.
 Even so this pattern of the worn-out° age
 Pawned° honest looks, but laid no words to gage.°

His kindled duty kindled her mistrust,
 That two red fires in both their faces blazèd.
 She thought he blushed as knowing Tarquin's lust,
 And, blushing with him, wistly° on him gazèd;
 Her earnest eye did make him more amazèd.
 The more she saw the blood his cheeks replenish,
 The more she thought he spied in her some blemish.

But long she thinks° till he return again,
 And yet the duteous vassal scarce is gone;
 The weary time she cannot entertain,°
 For now 'tis stale to sigh, to weep and groan:
 So woè hath wearied woe, moan tirèd moan,
 That she her complaints a little while doth stay,°
 Pausing for means to mourn some newer way.

At last she calls to mind where hangs a piece
 Of skillful painting, made for° Priam's Troy,°
 Before the which is drawn the power of Greece,°
 For Helen's rape° the city to destroy,
 Threat'ning cloud-kissing Ilion° with annoy;°
 Which the conceited° painter drew so proud
 As° heaven, it seemed, to kiss the turrets bowed.

A thousand lamentable objects there,
 In scorn of° nature, art gave lifeless life;
 Many a dry drop seemed a weeping tear
 Shed for the slaught' red husband by the wife.
 The red blood reeked, to show the painter's strife,°
 And dying eyes gleamed forth their ashy lights,
 Like dying coals burnt out in tedious nights.

There might you see the laboring pioner°
 Begrimed with sweat, and smeared all with dust;
 And from the tow'rs of Troy there would appear
 The very eyes of men through loopholes thrust,
 Gazing upon the Greeks with little lust:°
 Such sweet observance° in this work was had
 That one might see those far-off eyes look sad.

In great commanders grace and majesty
 You might behold triumphing in their faces;
 In youth, quick° bearing and dexterity;
 And here and there the painter interlaces
 Pale cowards marching on with trembling paces,
 Which heartless° peasants did so well resemble That one would swear he saw them quake and tremble.

In Ajax and Ulysses,° O, what art
 Of physiognomy might one behold!
 The face of either ciphèred° either's heart;
 Their face their manners most expressly told:
 In Ajax' eyes blunt rage and rigor rolled;
 But the mild glance that sly Ulysses lent
 Showed deep regard and smiling government.°

There pleading might you see grave Nestor° stand,
 As 'twere encouraging the Greeks to fight,
 Making such sober action with his hand
 That it beguiled attention, charmed the sight.
 In speech it seemed his beard, all silver white,
 Wagged up and down, and from his lips did fly
 Thin winding breath which purled° up to the sky.

About him were a press of gaping faces,
 Which seemed to swallow up his sound advice,
 All jointly list'ning, but with several° graces,
 As if some mermaid did their ears entice,
 Some high, some low—the painter was so nice.°
 The scalps of many, almost hid behind,
 To jump up higher seemed, to mock the mind.

1334 sour-faced sad-faced (?) long-faced (out of respect)
 1338 homely villain cursies simple servant bows 1339 blushing on her i.e., blushing toward her 1345 seely simple; wot knows 1346 life liveliness 1347 respect aspect 1348 To . . . deeds to act and not to talk 1350 worn- out past 1351 Pawned pledged; gage i.e., to bind him (as by an oath) 1355 wistly earnestly 1359 long she thinks
 i.e., she thinks time passes slowly 1361 entertain occupy 1364 stay stop 1367 made for depicting; Priam's Troy
 Priam was King of Troy during the Trojan War 1368 is . . .
Greece the Greek army is assembled 1369 Helen's rape the abduction of Helen 1370 Ilion Troy; annoy destruction 1371 conceited ingenious 1372 As that

1374 In scorn of to rival 1377 strife effort 1380 pioner engineer 1384 lust pleasure 1385 sweet observance loving accuracy 1389 quick lively 1392 heartless cowardly 1394
Ajax and Ulysses Greek leaders 1396 ciphèred depicted 1400 deep . . . government profound wisdom and successful rule 1401 Nestor an aged Greek leader 1407 purled curled 1410 several distinct 1412 nice precise

Here one man's hand leaned on another's head,
His nose being shadowed by his neighbor's ear;
Here one, being thronged,^o bears back, all boll'n^o and red;

Another, smothered, seems to pelt^o and swear;
And in their rage such signs of rage they bear
As, but for loss of Nestor's golden words,
It seemed they would debate with angry swords.

For much imaginary work was there;
Conceit^o deceitful, so compact, so kind,^o
That for Achilles'^o image stood his spear,
Griped in an armèd hand; himself behind
Was left unseen, save to the eye of mind:
A hand, a foot, a face, a leg, a head
Stood for the whole to be imaginèd.

And from the walls of strong-besiegèd Troy
When their brave hope, bold Hector,^o marched to field, 1430
Stood many Trojan mothers, sharing joy
To see their youthful sons bright weapons wield;
And to their hope they such odd action yield^o
That through their light joy seemèd to appear (Like bright things stained) a kind of heavy fear. 1435

And from the strond of Dardan,^o where they fought,
To Simois'^o reedy banks the red blood ran,
Whose waves to imitate the battle sought
With swelling ridges, and their ranks began
To break upon the gallèd^o shore, and than^o 1440
Retire again, till, meeting greater ranks,
They join, and shoot their foam at Simois' banks.

To this well-painted piece is Lucrece come,
To find a face where all distress is stelled.^o
Many she sees where cares have carvèd some,
But none where all distress and dolor dwelled
Till she despairing Hecuba^o beheld,
Staring on Priam's wounds with her old eyes,
Which bleeding under Pyrrhus'^o proud foot lies.

In her the painter had anatomized^o 1450
Time's ruin, beauty's wrack, and grim care's reign;
Her cheeks with chops^o and wrinkles were disguised;^o
Of what she was no semblance did remain.
Her blue blood, changed to black in every vein,
Wanting the spring that those shrunk pipes had fed, 1455
Showed life imprisoned in a body dead.

1417 thronged crushed in the crowd; boll'n swollen 1418
pelt scold 1423 Conceit conception; kind natural 1424
Achilles chief warrior of the Greeks 1430 Hector son of Priam and chief warrior of the Trojans 1433 odd action yield contrary gestures express 1436 strond of Dardan shore of Troas (the country of which Troy was the chief city) 1437
Simois river near Troy 1440 gallèd eroded; than then 1444 stelled portrayed 1447 Hecuba wife of Priam 1449
Pyrrhus Greek warrior, slayer of Priam 1450 anatomized dissected 1452 chops cracks; disguised disguised

1415 On this sad shadow Lucrece spends her eyes
And shapes her sorrow to the beldame's woes,
Who nothing wants to answer her but cries
And bitter words to ban^o her cruel foes. 1460
The painter was no god to lend her those;
And therefore Lucrece swears he did her wrong
1420 To give her so much grief and not a tongue.

"Poor instrument," quoth she, "without a sound:
I'll tune^o thy woes with my lamenting tongue, 1465
And drop sweet balm in Priam's painted wound,
And rail on Pyrrhus that hath done him wrong,
1425 And with my tears quench Troy that burns so long,
And with my knife scratch out the angry eyes
Of all the Greeks that are thine enemies. 1470

"Show me the strumpet that began this stir,^o
That with my nails her beauty I may tear.
Thy heat of lust, fond Paris, did incur
This load of wrath that burning Troy doth bear.
Thy eye kindled the fire that burneth here, 1475
And here in Troy, for trespass of thine eye,
The sire, the son, the dame and daughter die.

"Why should the private pleasure of some one
Become the public plague of many moe?^o 1480
Let sin, alone committed, light alone
Upon his head that hath transgressèd so;
Let guiltless souls be freed from guilty woe:
1440 For one's offense why should so many fall,
To plague a private sin in general?"

"Lo, here weeps Hecuba, here Priam dies, 1485
Here manly Hector faints, here Troilus^o sounds,^o
Here friend by friend in bloody channel lies,
1445 And friend to friend gives unadvisèd^o wounds,
And one man's lust these many lives confounds.^o
Had doting Priam checked his son's desire, 1490
Troy had been bright with fame, and not with fire."

Here feelingly she weeps Troy's painted woes,
1450 For sorrow, like a heavy hanging bell,
Once set on ringing, with his own weight goes;
Then little strength rings out the doleful knell. 1495
So Lucrece, set awork, sad tales doth tell
To penciled^o pensiveness and colored^o sorrow:
She lends them words, and she their looks doth borrow.

She throws her eyes about the painting round,^o
And who she finds forlorn, she doth lament. 1500
At last she sees a wretched image^o bound
That piteous looks to Phrygian shepherds lent.^o
His face, though full of cares, yet showed content;
Onward to Troy with the blunt^o swains he goes,
So mild that patience^o seemed to scorn his woes. 1505

1460 ban curse 1465 tune sing 1471 stir action (i.e., war)
1479 moe more 1484 in general on the general public 1486
Troilus a son of Priam; sounds swoons 1488 unadvisèd unintentional 1489 confounds destroys 1497 penciled, colored painted 1499 round all around 1501 wretched image i.e., Sinon, the Trojan traitor 1502 piteous . . .
lent i.e., aroused compassionate looks from the Phrygian shepherds 1504 blunt simple 1505 patience i.e., his patience

In him the painter labored with his skill
To hide deceit, and give the harmless show°
An humble gait, calm looks, eyes wailing still,
A brow unbent° that seemed to welcome woe,
Cheeks neither red nor pale, but mingled so
That blushing red no guilty instance gave Nor ashy pale the fear that false hearts have;

But, like a constant and confirmèd devil,
He entertained a show° so seeming just,
And therein so ensconced his secret evil,
That jealousy° itself could not mistrust
False creeping craft and perjury should thrust
Into so bright a day such black-faced storms
Or blot with hell-born sin such saintlike forms.

The well-skilled workman this mild image drew
For perjured Sinon, whose enchanting story°
The credulous old Priam after slew;
Whose words like wildfire burnt the shining glory
Of rich-built Ilion, that the skies were sorry,
And little stars shot from their fixèd places
When their glass° fell, wherein they viewed their faces.

This picture she advisedly° perused
And chid the painter for his wondrous skill,
Saying, some shape in Sinon's was abused;°
So fair a form lodged not a mind so ill.
And still on him she gazed, and gazing still,
Such signs of truth in his plain face she spied,
That she concludes the picture was belied.°

"It cannot be," quoth she, "that so much guile"—
She would have said "can lurk in such a look";
But Tarquin's shape came in her mind the while,
And from her tongue "can lurk" from "cannot" took.
"It cannot be" she in that sense forsook
And turned it thus: "It cannot be, I find,
But such a face should bear a wicked mind;

"For even as subtile Sinon here is painted,
So sober-sad, so weary, and so mild
(As if with grief or travail he had fainted),
To me came Tarquin armèd, to beguiled°
With outward honesty, but yet defiled
With inward vice. As Priam him did cherish,
So did I Tarquin; so my Troy did perish.

"Look, look, how list'ning Priam wets his eyes,
To see those borrowed° tears that Sinon sheeds!°
Priam, why art thou old, and yet not wise?
For every tear he falls° a Trojan bleeds.
His eye drops fire, no water thence proceeds:
Those round clear pearls of his that move thy pity
Are balls of quenchless fire to burn thy city.

1507 show appearance 1509 unbent unfurrowed 1514 entertained a show kept up an appearance 1516 jealousy suspicion 1521 enchanting story i.e., bewitching lie 1526 glass mirror (i.e., shining Troy) 1527 advisedly thoughtfully 1529 some . . . abused some other person's form had been falsely represented as Sinon's 1533 belied proved false 1544 beguiled beguile 1549 borrowed i.e., false; sheeds sheds 1551 falls lets fall

"Such devils steal effects from lightless hell,
For Sinon in his fire doth quake with cold,
And in that cold hot burning fire doth dwell.
These contraries such unity do hold
1510 Only to flatter° fools and make them bold.°
So Priam's trust false Sinon's tears doth flatter
That he finds means to burn his Troy with water." 1560

Here, all enraged, such passion her assails
That patience is quite beaten from her breast.
1515 She tears the senseless Sinon with her nails,
Comparing him to that unhappy° guest 1565
Whose deed hath made herself herself detest.
At last she smilingly with this gives o'er:°
"Fool, fool!" quoth she, "his wounds will not be sore."

1520 Thus ebbs and flows the current of her sorrow,
And time doth weary time with her complaining. 1570
She looks for night, and then she longs for morrow,
And both she thinks too long with her remaining.
Short time seems long in sorrow's sharp sustaining;
1525 Though woe be heavy,° yet it seldom sleeps,
And they that watch see time how slow it creeps; 1575

Which all this time hath overslipped her thought°
That she with painted images hath spent,
Being from the feeling of her own grief brought
By deep surmise° of others' detriment,
1530 Losing her woes in shows° of discontent. 1580
It easeth some, though none it ever cured,
To think their dolor others have endured.

But now the mindful messenger, come back,
Brings home his lord and other company;
1535 Who finds his Lucrece clad in mourning black, 1585
And round about her tear-distained° eye
Blue circles streamed, like rainbows in the sky.
These water-galls° in her dim element°
Foretell new storms to those already spent.

Which when her sad-beholding husband saw, 1590
Amazedly in her sad face he stares.
Her eyes, though sod° in tears, looked red and raw,
Her lively color killed with deadly cares.
He hath no power to ask her how she fares;
1545 Both stood like old acquaintance in a trance, 1595
Met far from home, wond'ring each other's chance.°

At last he takes her by the bloodless hand,
And thus begins: "What uncouth° ill event
Hath thee befall'n, that thou dost trembling stand?
1550 Sweet love, what spite° hath thy fair color spent? 1600
Why art thou thus attired in discontent?
Unmask,° dear dear, this moody heaviness,
And tell thy grief, that we may give redress."

1559 flatter deceive; make them bold give them confidence 1565 unhappy unfortunate 1567 gives o'er ceases 1574 heavy (1) distressing (2) sleepy 1576 overslipped her thought gone unnoticed 1579 surmise contemplation 1580 shows representations 1586 tear-distained tearstained 1588 water-galls atmospheric conditions attendant upon rainbows; element sky 1592 sod sodden 1596 chance fortune 1598 uncouth unknown 1600 spite feeling of annoyance 1602
Unmask disclose

Three times with sighs she gives her sorrow fire,^o
 Ere once she can discharge one word of woe.
 At length addressed^o to answer his desire,
 She modestly prepares to let them know
 Her honor is ta'en prisoner by the foe,
 While Collatine and his consorted^o lords
 With sad attention long to hear her words.

And now this pale swan in her wat'ry nest
 Begins the sad dirge of her certain ending:^o
 "Few words," quoth she, "shall fit the trespass best,
 Where no excuse can give the fault amending.
 In me moe^o woes than words are now depending,^o
 And my laments would be drawn out too long
 To tell them all with one poor tirèd tongue.

"Then be this all the task it hath to say:
 Dear husband, in the interest^o of thy bed
 A stranger came and on that pillow lay
 Where thou wast wont to rest thy weary head;
 And what wrong else may be imaginèd
 By foul enforcement might be done to me,
 From that, alas, thy Lucrece is not free.

"For in the dreadful dead of dark midnight,
 With shining falchion in my chamber came
 A creeping creature with a flaming light
 And softly cried, 'Awake, thou Roman dame,
 And entertain^o my love; else lasting shame
 On thee and thine this night I will inflict,
 If thou my love's desire do contradict.

" 'For some hard-favored groom of thine,' quoth he,
 'Unless thou yoke^o thy liking to my will,
 I'll murder straight, and then I'll slaughter thee
 And swear I found you where you did fulfill
 The loathsome act of lust, and so did kill
 The lechers in their deed: this act will be My fame and thy perpetual infamy.'

"With this I did begin to start and cry;
 And then against my heart he set his sword,
 Swearing, unless I took all patiently,
 I should not live to speak another word.
 So should my shame still rest upon record,
 And never be forgot in mighty Rome
 Th' adulterate death of Lucrece and her groom.

"Mine enemy was strong, my poor self weak
 And far the weaker with so strong a fear.
 My bloody judge forbod^o my tongue to speak;
 No rightful plea might plead for justice there.
 His scarlet lust came evidence to swear
 That my poor beauty had purloined his eyes;
 And when the judge is robbed, the prisoner dies.

1605 "O, teach me how to make mine own excuse,
 Or (at the least) this refuge let me find:
 Though my gross blood be stained with this abuse, 1655
 Immaculate and spotless is my mind;
 That was not forced, that never was inclined
 To accessary yieldings, but still pure
 1610 Doth in her poisoned closet yet endure."

Lo, here, the hopeless merchant^o of this loss, 1660
 With head declined and voice dammed up with woe,
 With sad-set eyes and wreathèd arms^o across,
 From lips new-waxen pale begins to blow
 1615 The grief away that stops his answer so.
 But, wretched as he is, he strives in vain; 1665
 What he breathes out his breath drinks up again.

As through an arch the violent roaring tide
 Outruns the eye that doth behold his haste,
 1620 Yet in the eddy boundeth in his pride
 Back to the strait that forced him on so fast; 1670
 In rage sent out, recalled in rage being past:
 Even so his sighs, his sorrows, make a saw,^o
 To push grief on, and back the same grief draw.

1625 Which speechless woe of his poor she attendeth
 And his untimely frenzy^o thus awaketh: 1675
 "Dear lord, thy sorrow to my sorrow lendeth
 Another power; no flood by raining slaketh;
 My woe too sensible^o thy passion maketh
 1630 More feeling-painful. Let it then suffice
 To drown one woe, one pair of weeping eyes. 1680

"And for my sake when I might charm thee so,^o
 For she that was thy Lucrece (now attend me)
 Be suddenly revengèd on my foe—
 1635 Thine, mine, his own. Suppose thou dost defend me
 From what is past; the help that thou shalt lend me 1685
 Comes all too late, yet let the traitor die;
 For sparing justice feeds iniquity.

"But ere I name him, you fair lords," quoth she,
 1640 Speaking to those that came with Collatine,
 "Shall plight your honorable faiths to me 1690
 With swift pursuit to 'venge this wrong of mine;
 For 'tis a meritorious fair design
 To chase injustice with revengeful arms:
 1645 Knights by their oaths should right poor ladies' harms."

At this request, with noble disposition 1695
 Each present lord began to promise aid,
 As bound in knighthood to her imposition,
 1650 Longing to hear the hateful foe bewrayed.^o
 But she, that yet her sad task hath not said,
 The protestation stops. "O, speak!" quoth she, 1700
 "How may this forcèd stain be wiped from me?"

1604 fire i.e., fire to ignite a discharge (from a cannon) 1606 addressed prepared 1609 consorted associated 1612 ending death 1615 moe more; depending impending 1619 interest possession 1629 entertain receive 1633 yoke submit 1648 forbod forbade

1660 merchant Collatine 1662 wreathèd arms arms folded
 (a sign of melancholy) 1672 saw i.e., sawlike motion 1675 frenzy trance 1678 sensible sensitive 1681 so in such things 1698 bewrayed revealed

"What is the quality^o of my offense,
Being constrained with dreadful circumstance?
May my pure mind with the foul act dispense,^o
My low-declinèd honor to advance?^o
May any terms acquit me from this chance?
The poisoned fountain clears itself again;
And why not I from this compellèd stain?"

With this they all at once began to say,
Her body's stain her mind untainted clears;
While with a joyless smile she turns away
The face, that map which deep impression bears
Of hard misfortune, carved in it with tears.
"No, no!" quoth she, "no dame hereafter living
By my excuse shall claim excuse's giving."

Here with a sigh as if her heart would break
She throws forth Tarquin's name: "He, he!" she says,
But more than "he" her poor tongue could not speak,
Till after many accents^o and delays,
Untimely breathings, sick and short assays,^o
She utters this: "He, he! fair lords, 'tis he
That guides this hand to give this wound to me."

Even here she sheathèd in her harmless^o breast
A harmful knife, that thence her soul unsheathèd.
That blow did bail^o it from the deep unrest
Of that polluted prison where it breathèd.
Her contrite sighs unto the clouds bequeathèd
Her wingèd sprite, and through her wounds doth fly
Life's lasting date from canceled destiny.^o

Stone-still, astonished with this deadly deed,
Stood Collatine and all his lordly crew,
Till Lucrece' father, that beholds her bleed,
Himself on her self-slaught' red body threw,
And from the purple fountain Brutus drew
The murd'rous knife, and as it left the place,
Her blood, in poor revenge, held it in chase;

And bubbling from her breast, it doth divide
In two slow rivers, that the crimson blood
Circles her body in on every side,
Who like a late-sacked island vastly^o stood
Bare and unpeopled in this fearful flood.
Some of her blood still pure and red remained,
And some looked black, and that false Tarquin stained.

About the mourning and congealèd face
Of that black blood a wat'ry rigoll^o goes,
Which seems to weep upon the tainted place;
And ever since, as pitying Lucrece' woes,
Corrupted blood some watery token shows,
And blood untainted still doth red abide,
Blushing at that which is so putrefied.

"Daughter, dear daughter!" old Lucretius cries,
"That life was mine which thou hast here deprived;
If in the child the father's image lies,
1705 Where shall I live now Lucrece is unlivèd?
Thou wast not to this end from me derivèd. 1755
If children predecease progenitors,
We are their offspring, and they none of ours.

"Poor broken glass,^o I often did behold
1710 In thy sweet semblance my old age new born;
But now that fair fresh mirror, dim and old, 1760
Shows me a bare-boned death^o by time outworn.
O, from thy cheeks my image thou hast torn
And shivered^o all the beauty of my glass, 1715 That I no more can see what once I was.

"O time, cease thou thy course, and last no longer, 1765
If they surcease^o to be that should survive.
Shall rotten death make conquest of the stronger
And leave the falt'ring feeble souls alive?
1720 The old bees die, the young possess their hive;
Then live, sweet Lucrece, live again and see 1770
Thy father die, and not thy father thee."

By this, starts Collatine as from a dream
And bids Lucretius give his sorrow place;
1725 And then in key-cold^o Lucrece' bleeding stream
He falls, and bathes the pale fear in his face, 1775
And counterfeits to die^o with her a space;
Till manly shame bids him possess his breath,
And live to be revengèd on her death.

The deep vexation of his inward soul
Hath served a dumb arrest^o upon his tongue; 1780
Who, mad that sorrow should his use control,
Or keep him from heart-easing words so long,
Begins to talk; but through his lips do throng
1735 Weak words, so thick^o come in his poor heart's aid
That no man could distinguish what he said. 1785

Yet sometime "Tarquin" was pronouncèd plain,
But through his teeth, as if the name he tore.
This windy tempest, till it blow up rain,
1740 Held back his sorrow's tide, to make it more.
At last it rains, and busy winds give o'er; 1790
Then son and father weep with equal strife
Who should weep most, for daughter or for wife.

The one doth call her his, the other his;
Yet neither may possess the claim they lay.
1745 The father says, "She's mine." "O, mine, she is!" 1795
Replies her husband, "Do not take away
My sorrow's interest;^o let no mourner say
He weeps for her, for she was only mine,
And only must be wailed by Collatine."

1750

1702 quality nature 1704 dispense be reconciled 1705 advance raise 1719 accents emphasized sounds 1720 assays attempts 1723 harmless innocent 1725 bail release 1729 Life's . . . destiny i.e., eternal life is freed ("canceled") by flying from life on earth ("destiny") 1740 vastly like a waste 1745 wat'ry rigoll when blood coagulates it separates into a congealed clot and a serum, "wat'ry rigoll"

1758 glass mirror 1761 death skull 1763 shivered shattered 1766 surcease cease 1774 key-cold i.e., cold as metal 1776 counterfeits to die swoons (and seems transported as by an orgasm) 1780 served . . . arrest enforced a silence (as if by a warrant) 1784 thick quickly 1797 sorrow's interest right to sorrow

"O," quoth Lucretius, "I did give that life Which she too early and too late^o hath spilled."
"Woe, woe!" quoth Collatine, "she was my wife,
I owed^o her, and 'tis mine that she hath killed."
"My daughter" and "my wife" with clamors filled
The dispersed air,^o who, holding Lucrece' life,
Answered their cries, "my daughter" and "my wife."

Brutus, who plucked the knife from Lucrece' side,
Seeing such emulation in their woe,
Began to clothe his wit in state and pride,
Burying in Lucrece' wound his folly's show.^o
He with the Romans was esteemèd so
As seely^o jeering idiots are with kings,
For sportive^o words and utt'ring foolish things;

But now he throws that shallow habit^o by Wherein deep policy^o did him disguise,
And armed his long-hid wits advisedly
To check the tears in Collatinus' eyes.
"Thou wrongèd lord of Rome," quoth he, "arise!
Let my unsounded^o self, supposed a fool,
Now set thy long-experienced wit to school.

"Why,^o Collatine, is woe the cure for woe?
Do wounds help wounds, or grief help grievous deeds?
Is it revenge to give thyself a blow
For his foul act by whom thy fair wife bleeds?
Such childish humor from weak minds proceeds;
Thy wretched wife mistook the matter so,
To slay herself that should have slain her foe.

1800 "Courageous Roman, do not steep thy heart
In such relenting^o dew of lamentations;
But kneel with me, and help to bear thy part 1830
To rouse our Roman gods with invocations
That they will suffer^o these abominations
1805 (Since Rome herself in them doth stand disgracèd)
By our strong arms from forth her fair streets
chasèd.^o

"Now, by the Capitol that we adore, 1835
And by this chaste blood so unjustly stainèd,
1810 By heaven's fair sun that breeds the fat earth's store,^o
By all our country rights in Rome maintainèd,
And by chaste Lucrece' soul that late complainèd
Her wrongs to us, and by this bloody knife, 1840
We will revenge the death of this true wife."

1815 This said, he strook^o his hand upon his breast
And kissed the fatal knife to end his vow;
And to his protestation^o urged the rest,
Who, wond'ring at him, did his words allow.^o 1845
Then jointly to the ground their knees they bow, 1820 And that deep vow which Brutus made before,
He doth again repeat, and that they swore.

When they had sworn to this advisèd doom,^o
They did conclude to bear dead Lucrece thence, 1850
To show her bleeding body thorough Rome,
1825 And so to publish Tarquin's foul offense;
Which being done with speedy diligence,
The Romans plausibly^o did give consent
To Tarquin's everlasting banishment. 1855

1801 late recently 1803 owed owned 1805 The dispersed air i.e., the boundless air (which has received Lucrece's "life," or spirit, upon her death) 1810 folly's show appearance of folly 1812 seely simple 1813 sportive merry 1814 habit cloak (here, of a king's jester) 1815 policy calculation 1819
unsounded unplumbed 1821 Why exclamation of impatience

1829 relenting melting 1832 suffer allow 1834 chasèd i.e., to be chased 1837 fat earth's store fertile earth's abundance 1842 strook struck 1844 protestation vow 1845 allow approve 1849 advisèd doom considered judgment 1854 plausibly with applause (i.e., with a "general acclamation";
see Argument, line 43)

THE PHOENIX AND THE TURTLE°

Let the bird of loudest lay°
On the sole° Arabian tree
Herald sad° and trumpet° be,
To whose sound chaste wings° obey.

But thou shrieking harbinger,°
Foul precurrer° of the fiend,
Augur of the fever's end,°
To this troop come thou not near.

From this session° interdict°
Every fowl of tyrant wing,°
Save the eagle, feath' red king:
Keep the obsequy° so strict.

Let the priest in surplice white,
That defunctive music can,°
Be the death-divining° swan,
Lest the requiem lack his right.°

And thou treble-dated° crow,
That thy sable gender mak'st
With the breath thou giv'st and tak'st,°
'Mongst our mourners shalt thou go.

Here the anthem doth commence:
Love and constancy is dead,
Phoenix and the turtle fled
In a mutual flame from hence.

So they loved, as° love in twain
Had the essence° but in one;
Two distincts,° division none:
Number there in love was slain.°

The decorative border shown above appeared with The Phoenix and the Turtle in Robert Chester's Love's Martyr, 1601.

The Phoenix and the Turtle the Phoenix, a unique legendary bird, was said to fly periodically to Arabia, where, after building a nest of spices, it was consumed in flame, and from its ashes a new Phoenix arose; it is a symbol of immortality. The Turtle, i.e., the turtledove, is a symbol of true love 1 lay song 2 sole unique 3 sad serious; trumpet trumpeter 4 chaste wings i.e., other good birds 5 shrieking harbinger screech owl (?) 6 precurrer precursor (apparently Shakespeare's coinage) 7 Augur . . . end prophet of death 9 session formal gathering, as of a parliament or a court; interdict ban 10 fowl . . . wing bird of prey, unsocial bird (in contrast to those of "chaste wings," line 4) 12 obsequy funeral rite 14 defunctive music can is skilled in funeral music 15 death-divining foretelling death (the swan allegedly sang only once, just before it died) 16 his right its due (?) his (the swan's) rite of requiem (?) 17 treble-dated long-lived 18-19 That . . . tak'st that breeds your black offspring with the breath you exhale and inhale (alluding to a belief that some birds conceived and laid eggs at the bill) 25 as that 26 essence nature 27 distincts distinct or separate things 28 Number . . . slain i.e., because the two were one, and Elizabethan proverbial lore held that "one is no number"

Hearts remote,° yet not asunder;
Distance and no space was seen
'Twixt this turtle and his queen;
But in them it were a wonder.°

So between them love did shine
That the turtle saw his right°
Flaming in the phoenix' sight:
Either was the other's mine.°

Property° was thus appallèd,
That the self was not the same;
Single nature's double name
Neither two nor one was callèd.

Reason, in itself confounded,°
Saw division grow together,
To themselves yet either neither,
Simple° were so well compounded;°

That it° cried, "How true a twain
Seemeth this concordant one!
Love hath reason, reason none,
If what parts can so remain."°

Whereupon it made this threne°
To the phoenix and the dove,
Co-supremes° and stars of love,
As chorus to their tragic scene.

Threnos

Beauty, truth, and rarity,°
Grace in all simplicity,
Here enclosed, in cinders° lie.

Death is now the phoenix' nest,
And the turtle's loyal breast
To eternity doth rest,

Leaving no posterity:
'Twas not their infirmity,
It was married chastity.°

Truth may seem, but cannot be;
Beauty brag, but 'tis not she:°
Truth and Beauty buried be.

To this urn let those repair
That are either true or fair;
For these dead birds sigh a prayer.

29 remote apart 32 But . . . wonder i.e., in any others except them it would have been a marvel 34 his right what was due to him 36 mine (1) my own property (2) source of precious metals 37 Property essential nature, peculiar quality 41 confounded perplexed 44 Simple i.e., simples, elementary elements (?) individual ingredients (?); compounded made into a new unity 45 it Reason 48 If . . . remain i.e., if what divides into two can remain one 49 threne funeral song (Greek threnos) 51 Co-supremes joint rulers 53 rarity excellence 55 cinders ashes 61 married chastity faithful married love (?) abstinence (?) 63 she true Beauty

A LOVER'S COMPLAINT

From off a hill whose concave womb reworded°
A plaintful story from a sist'ring° vale,
My spirits t' attend this double voice accorded°,
And down I laid to list the sad-tuned tale;
Ere long espied a fickle° maid full pale,
Tearing of papers°, breaking rings atwain,
Storming her world with sorrow's wind and rain.

Upon her head a platted hive° of straw,
Which fortified her visage from the sun,
Whereon the thought° might think sometime it saw
The carcass of a beauty spent and done.
Time had not scythèd° all that youth begun,
Nor youth all quit;° but, spite of heaven's fell° rage,
Some beauty peeped through lattice° of seared age.

Oft did she heave her napkin to her cyne°,
Which on it had conceited° characters,
Laund'ring the silken figures in the brine
That seasoned° woe had pelleted° in tears,
And often reading what contents it bears;
As often shrieking undistinguished woe°,
In clamors of all size, both high and low.

Sometimes her leveled° eyes their carriage ride,
As they did batt'ry to the spheres intend;°
Sometime diverted their poor balls are tied
To th' orbèd earth; sometimes they do extend
Their view right on; anon their gazes lend
To every place at once, and, nowhere fixed,
The mind and sight distractedly commixed.

Her hair, nor loose nor° tied in formal plat°,
Proclaimed in her a careless hand of pride;°
For some, untucked, descended her sheaved° hat,
Hanging her pale and pinèd cheek beside;
Some in her threaden fillet° still did bide
And, true to bondage, would not break from thence,
Though slackly braided in loose negligence.

A thousand favors from a maund° she drew,
Of amber, crystal, and of bedded° jet,

The decorative border shown above appeared on the title page of the first quarto edition of the Sonnets, 1609, in which A Lover's Complaint first appeared.

1 womb reworded i.e., valley echoed 2 sist'ring nearby (?) similar (?) 3 accorded agreed (?) inclined (?) 5 fickle unstable 6 papers love letters 8 platted hive woven hat 10 thought mind 12 scythèd cut down 13 all quit entirely gone; fell deadly 14 lattice i.e., wrinkles 15 heave . . . eyne lift her handkerchief to her eyes 16 conceited ingenious, fanciful 18 seasoned (1) matured (2) salted (playing on "brine" in previous line); pelleted made round (i.e., like hail-stones or like pellets of meat or dough) 20 undistinguished woe incoherent cries 22 leveled aimed (the image is of a fire-arm on a gun-carriage) 23 As . . . intend as if they intended to direct their fire against the stars 29 nor . . . nor neither . . . nor; plat knot 30 careless . . . pride hand indifferent to show 31 sheaved straw 33 threaden fillet headband 36 maund basket 37 bedded inlaid (emendation to "beaded" is plausible)

Which one by one she in a river threw,
Upon whose weeping margent° she was set,
Like usury°, applying wet to wet,
Or monarch's hands that lets not bounty fall
Where want cries some° but where excess begs all.

Of folded schedules° had she many a one
Which she perused, sighed, tore, and gave the flood;
Cracked many a ring of posied° gold and bone,
Bidding them find their sepulchers in mud;
Found yet moe° letters sadly penned in blood,
With sleided° silk feat and affectedly
Enswathed° and sealed to curious° secrecy.

These often bathed she in her fluxive° eyes,
And often kissed, and often gave to tear;
Cried, "O false blood, thou register of lies,
What unapproved° witness dost thou bear!
Ink would have seemed more black and damnèd here!"
This said, in top of rage the lines she rents,
Big discontent so breaking their contents.

A reverend° man that grazed his cattle nigh,
Sometime a blusterer that the ruffle° knew
Of court, of city, and had let go by
The swiftest hours, observèd as they flew°,
Towards this afflicted fancy° fastly° drew,
And, privileged by age, desires to know
In brief the grounds and motives of her woe.

So slides he down upon his grainèd bat°,
And comely-distant° sits he by her side;
When he again desires her, being sat,
Her grievance with his hearing to divide:
If that from him there may be aught applied
Which may her suffering ecstasy° assuage,
'Tis promised in the charity of age.

"Father," she says, "though in me you behold
The injury of many a blasting hour,
Let it not tell your judgment I am old;
Not age, but sorrow, over me hath power.
I might as yet have been a spreading flower,
Fresh to myself, if I had self-applied
Love to myself, and to no love beside.

39 weeping margent wet bank 40 Like usury i.e., adding to the original amount 42 cries some cries out for some 43 schedules papers with writing 45 posied inscribed with mottoes 47 moe more 48 sleided raveled 48-49 feat . . . Enswathed tied neatly and elaborately (or neatly and lovingly) 49 curious painstaking 50 fluxive flowing 53 unapproved unconfirmed, not proved by deeds 57 reverend aged 58 ruffle bustle 59-60 had . . . flew i.e., had learned about the world through observation during the busy days of youth 61 fancy love-sick lady; fastly near (?) quickly (?) 64 grainèd bat shepherd's staff on which the grain was showing 65 comely-distant at an appropriate distance 69 ecstasy fit, passion

"But, woe is me, too early I attended°
A youthful suit—it was to gain my grace—
Of one by nature's outwards so commended, 80
That maidens' eyes stuck over all his face:
Love lacked a dwelling, and made him her place;
And when in his fair parts she did abide,
She was new lodged and newly deified.

"His browny locks did hang in crooked curls, 85
And every light occasion° of the wind
Upon his lips their silken parcels hurls.
What's sweet to do, to do will aptly find;
Each eye that saw him did enchant the mind,
For on his visage was in little drawn 90
What largeness thinks in Paradise was sawn.°

"Small show of man was yet upon his chin;
His phoenix down° began but to appear,
Like unshorn velvet, on that termless° skin
Whose bare out-bragged the web it seemed to wear.° 95
Yet showed his visage by that cost° more dear;
And nice affections° wavering stood in doubt
If best were as it was, or best without.

"His qualities were beauteous as his form,
For maiden-tongued° he was, and thereof free;° 100
Yet, if men moved him, was he such a storm
As oft 'twixt May and April is to see,
When winds breathe sweet, unruly though they be.
His rudeness so with his authorized youth
Did livery falseness in a pride of truth.° 105

"Well could he ride, and often men would say,
'That horse his mettle from his rider takes.
Proud of subjection, noble by the sway,
What rounds, what bounds, what course, what stop° he makes!' 110
And controversy hence a question takes,
Whether the horse by him became his deed,
Or he his manage by th' well-doing steed.°

"But quickly on this° side the verdict went:
His real habitude° gave life and grace
To appertainings and to ornament,
Accomplished in himself, not in his case.° 115
All aids, themselves made fairer by their place,
Came for° additions; yet their purposed trim
Pieced not° his grace but were all graced by him.

"So on the tip of his subduing tongue 120
All kind of arguments and question deep,
All replication° prompt and reason strong,
For his advantage still did wake and sleep.
To make the weeper laugh, the laughter weep,
He had the dialect and different skill, 125
Catching all passions in his craft of will.°

"That° he did in the general bosom reign
Of young, of old, and sexes both enchanted
To dwell with him in thoughts, or to remain
In personal duty,° following where he haunted.° 130
Consents bewitched, ere he desire, have granted,
And dialogued for him what he would say,
Asked their own wills and made their wills obey.

"Many there were that did his picture get,
To serve their eyes, and in it put their mind, 135
Like fools that in th' imagination set
The goodly objects which abroad they find
Of lands and mansions, theirs in thought assigned,
And laboring in moe pleasures to bestow them
Than the true gouty° landlord which doth owe° them. 140

"So many have, that never touched his hand,
Sweetly supposed them mistress of his heart. 145
My woeful self, that did in freedom stand
And was my own fee-simple, not in part,°
What with his art in youth and youth in art,
Threw my affections in his charmed° power, 150
Reserved the stalk and gave him all my flower.

"Yet did I not, as some my equals° did,
Demand of him, nor being desired° yielded;
Finding myself in honor so forbid, 155
With safest distance I mine honor shielded.
Experience° for me many bulwarks builded
Of proofs new-bleeding,° which remained the foil°
Of this false jewel, and his amorous spoil.

"But, ah, who ever shunned by precedent 155
The destined ill she must herself assay?°
Or forced examples,° 'gainst her own content,
To put the by-past perils in her way? 160
Counsel may stop awhile what will not stay;
For when we rage,° advice is often seen
By blunting us to make our wits more keen.

78 attended heeded 86 occasion chance movement 91
What . . . sawn what was seen (or possibly "sown") in large in paradise 93 phoenix down i.e., newborn fuzz 94 term- less young (?) indescribable (?) 95 Whose . . . wear i.e., the skin excelled the covering (?) 96 cost display, ornament 97 nice affections delicate tastes 100 maiden-tongued modestly spoken; thereof free not shy in speaking 104–05
His rudeness . . . truth His agitated behavior, with his privilege of youth, covered falseness with the appearance of honesty 109 rounds, bounds, stop terms of horsemanship, or "manage" 111–12 Whether . . . steed whether the horse showed his good qualities because of the man, or whether the man showed his skill at horsemanship ("manage") because of the horse's skill 113 this i.e., the following 114 real habitude true character 116 case outside, belongings 118 for as 119 Pieced not did not add to 122 replication reply, repartee 126 craft of will skill to persuade 127 That so that 130 In personal duty i.e., as servants to him; haunted frequented 140 gouty rheumatic, i.e., old; owe own 144 fee-simple . . . part absolute possession, without restriction 146 charmed enchanting 148 my equals i.e., girls of my age 152 Experience knowledge 153 proofs new-bleeding examples of others newly ruined; foil dark background (to display a jewel) 156 assay experience 157 forced examples comparisons with her own case which seem to her far-fetched, though she is made to consider them 160 rage are impassioned

"Nor gives it satisfaction to our blood,^o
That we must curb it upon others' proof,^o
To be forbod^o the sweets that seems so good
For fear of harms that preach in our behoof.
O appetite, from judgment stand aloof!
The one a palate hath that needs will taste,
Though Reason weep and cry, 'It is thy last.'

"For further I could say this man's untrue,^o
And knew the patterns of his foul beguiling;
Heard where his plants in others' orchards grew;
Saw how deceits were gilded in his smiling;
Knew vows were ever brokers^o to defiling;
Thought characters and words^o merely but art,
And bastards of his foul adulterate heart.

"And long upon these terms I held my city,
Till thus he 'gan besiege me: 'Gentle maid,
Have of my suffering youth some feeling pity
And be not of my holy vows afraid.
That's^o to ye sworn to none was ever said;
For feasts of love I have been called unto,
Till now did ne'er invite nor never woo.

" 'All my offenses that abroad you see
Are errors of the blood,^o none of the mind.
Love made them not. With acture^o they may be,
Where neither party is nor true nor kind.
They sought their shame that so their shame did find,
And so much less of shame in me remains
By how much of me their reproach contains.

" 'Among the many that mine eyes have seen,
Not one whose flame my heart so much as warmèd,
Or my affection put to th' smallest teen,^o
Or any of my leasures ever charmèd.
Harm have I done to them, but ne'er was harmèd;
Kept hearts in liveries,^o but mine own was free
And reigned commanding in his monarchy.

" 'Look here what tributes wounded fancies sent me
Of pallid pearls and rubies red as blood,
Figuring that they their passions likewise lent me
Of grief and blushes, aptly understood
In bloodless white and the encrimsoned mood;^o
Effects of terror and dear modesty,
Encamped in hearts, but fighting outwardly.

" 'And, lo, behold these talents^o of their hair,
With twisted metal amorously empleached,^o
I have received from many a several fair,^o
Their kind acceptance weepingly beseeched,
With th' annexions^o of fair gems enriched,
And deep-brained sonnets that did amplify
Each stone's dear^o nature, worth, and quality.

162 blood passion 163 others' proof the experience of others 164 forbod forbidden 169 say . . . untrue tell of this man's untruth 173 brokers panders 174 characters and words written and spoken words 180 That's what's 184 blood lust 185 acture action (as opposed to volition) 192 teen distress 195 in liveries as servants 201 mood mode 204 talents treasures 205 empleached intertwined 206 several fair different lady 208 annexions additions 210 dear valuable

" 'The diamond, why, 'twast beautiful and hard,
Whereto his invised^o properties did tend;
The deep-green em'rald, in whose fresh regard
Weak sights their sickly radiance^o do amend;
The heaven-hued sapphire, and the opal blend
With objects manifold:^o each several^o stone,
With wit well blazoned,^o smiled or made some moan.

" 'Lo, all these trophies of affections hot,
Of pensived and subdued desires the tender,^o
Nature hath charged me that I hoard them not,
But yield them up where I myself must render,
That is, to you, my origin and ender.
For these of force must your oblations^o be,
Since I their altar, you enpatron me.^o

" 'O, then, advance of yours that phraseless^o hand,
Whose white weighs down the airy scale of praise!
Take all these similes^o to your own command,
Hollowed^o with sighs that burning lungs did raise.
What me, your minister, for you obeys,^o
Works under you; and to your audit^o comes
Their distract parcels^o in combinèd sums.

" 'Lo, this device was sent me from a nun,
Or sister sanctified, of holiest note,
Which late her noble suit^o in court did shun,
Whose rarest havings^o made the blossoms^o dote;
For she was sought by spirits of richest coat,^o
But kept cold distance, and did thence remove
To spend her living in eternal love.^o

" 'But, O my sweet, what labor is't to leave
The thing we have not, mast'ring what not strives,
Paling^o the place^o which did no form receive,
Playing patient sports in unconstrained gyves?^o
She that her fame so to herself contrives,^o
The scars of battle 'scapeth by the flight
And makes her absence valiant, not her might.^o

212 invised inward-looking, self-regarding (?) (Latin invisus = secret) 214 radiance power of vision 215-16 opal . . .
manifold blended opal, with many other objects (?) 216 several separate 217 blazoned proclaimed 219 tender offering 223 oblations offerings 224 Since . . . me i.e., I am the altar at which they are offered to you, my patron saint 225 phraseless indescribable 227 similes lovetokens (jewels and sonnets) 228 Hollowed (1) blown up, shaped (2) hallowed 229 What . . . obeys whatever obeys me, your servant ("minister") 230 audit accounting 231 distract parcels separate items 234 suit wooing 235 hav- ings personal qualities; blossoms i.e., flower of the nobility 236 coat coats of arms 238 eternal love love of things heavenly 241 Paling fencing (but "Paling" is an emendation for "Playing"; "Leaving" and "Flying" have also been suggested); the place i.e., the nun's heart, which had never received the impression of love 242 unconstrained gyves fetters that do not constrain (because willingly put on) 243 her . . .
contrives creates for herself a reputation (for renouncing love)
245 might power

"O, pardon me, in that my boast is true:
The accident which brought me to her eye
Upon the moment did her force subdue,
And now she would the caged cloister fly.
Religious° love put out religion's eye.
Not to be tempted, would she be inured,°
And now, to tempt all, liberty procured.°

"How mighty then you are, O hear me tell:
The broken bosoms° that to me belong
Have emptied all their fountains in my well,
And mine I pour your ocean all among.
I strong o'er them, and you o'er me being strong,
Must for your victory us all congest,°
As compound love to physic° your cold breast.

"My parts had pow'r to charm a sacred nun,
Who, disciplined, ay, dieted in grace,
Believed her eyes when they t' assail begun,°
All vows and consecrations giving place.
O most potential° love! vow, bond, nor space
In thee hath neither sting, knot, nor confine,
For thou art all, and all things else are thine.

"When thou impresses,° what are precepts worth
Of stale example? When thou wilt inflame,
How coldly those impediments stand forth
Of wealth, of filial fear, law, kindred, fame!
Love's arms are° peace, 'gainst rule, 'gainst sense, 'gainst shame;
And sweetens, in the suff'ring pangs it bears,
The aloes° of all forces, shocks, and fears.

"Now all these hearts that do on mine depend,
Feeling it break, with bleeding groans° they pine;
And suppliant their sighs to you extend,
To leave the batt'ry that you make 'gainst mine,
Lending soft audience to my sweet design,
And credent° soul to that strong-bonded oath
That shall prefer° and undertake my troth.°

"This said, his wat'ry eyes he did dismount,°
Whose sights till then were leveled on my face;
Each cheek a river running from a fount
With brinish current downward flowed apace.
O, how the channel to the stream gave grace!
Who° glazed with crystal gate° the glowing roses
That flame through water which their hue encloses.

250 Religious devoted 251 inured hardened 252 And . . .
procured and now she has procured liberty to try ("tempt") all things (?) 254 bosoms hearts 258 congest gather together 259 physic cure 262 Believed . . . begun trusted her eyes when, filled with his image, they assailed her chastity 264 potential powerful 267 impresses conscripts 271 arms are warfare produces 273 aloes bitterness 275 bleed- ing groans every sigh was thought to lessen life by drawing blood from the heart 279 credent believing 280 prefer advance, promote; undertake my troth support my love 281 dismount lower 286 Who which; gate barrier (the idea is that his cheeks beneath his tears are like roses beneath glass)

"O father, what a hell of witchcraft lies
In the small orb of one particular tear!
But with the inundation of the eyes
What rocky heart to water will not wear?
What breast so cold that is not warmed here?
O cleft° effect! Cold modesty, hot wrath,
Both fire from hence and chill extincture hath.

"For, lo, his passion, but an art of craft,
Even there resolved° my reason into tears;
There my white stole of chastity I daffed,°
Shook off my sober guards and civil° fears;
Appear° to him as he to me appears,
All melting, though our drops° this diff'rence bore:
His poisoned me, and mine did him restore.

"In him a plenitude of subtle matter,
Applied to cautels,° all strange forms receives,
Of burning blushes, or of weeping water,
Or sounding° paleness; and he takes and leaves,°
In either's aptness,° as it best deceives,
To blush at speeches rank,° to weep at woes,
Or to turn white and sound° at tragic shows;

"That not a heart which in his level° came
Could 'scape the hail° of his all-hurting aim,
Showing fair nature as both kind and tame;°
And, veiled in them,° did win whom he would maim.
Against the thing he sought he would exclaim:
When he most burned in heart-wished luxury,°
He preached pure maid and praised cold chastity.

"Thus merely with the garment of a Grace,
The naked and concealed fiend he covered,
That th' unexperient° gave the tempter place,
Which,° like a cherubin, above them hovered.
Who, young and simple, would not be so loved?
Ay me! I fell, and yet do question make
What I should do again for such a sake.

"O, that infected° moisture of his eye,
O, that false fire which in his cheek so glowed,
O, that forced thunder from his heart did fly,
O, that sad breath his spongy lungs bestowed,
O, all that borrowed motion, seeming owed,°
Would yet again betray the fore-betrayed
And new-pervert a reconciled° maid!"

293 cleft double 296 resolved dissolved 297 daffed doffed, put off 298 civil moral 299 Appear I appear 300 drops medicinal drops 303 cautels tricks 305 sounding swooning; takes and leaves alternately uses 306 In either's aptness i.e., according as it serves his purpose 307 rank lustful 308 sound
swoon 309 level range of eye (literally, aim, line of fire) 310 hail bullet 311 Showing . . . tame appearing to be harmless and friendly 312 them i.e., kindness and tameness (or possibly the 'strange forms' of line 303) 314 luxury lechery 318 unexperient inexperienced 319 Which who 323 in- fects unnatural 324 borrowed . . . owed assumed behavior that seemed his own 329 reconciled penitent

THE PASSIONATE PILGRIM

IV

Sweet Cytherea,^o sitting by a brook
 With young Adonis, lovely, fresh, and green,^o
 Did court the lad with many a lovely^o look,
 Such looks as none could look but beauty's queen.
 She told him stories, to delight his ear;
 She showed him favors, to allure his eye;
 To win his heart she touched him here and there—
 Touches so soft still conquer chastity.
 But whether unripe years did want conceit,^o
 Or he refused to take her figured proffer,
 The tender nibbler would not touch the bait,
 But smile and jest at every gentle offer.
 Then fell she on her back, fair queen, and toward.^o
 He rose and ran away. Ah, fool too froward!^o

VI

Scarce had the sun dried up the dewy morn,
 And scarce the herd gone to the hedge for shade,
 When Cytherea^o (all in love forlorn),
 A longing tarriance^o for Adonis made
 Under an osier^o growing by a brook,
 A brook where Adon used to cool his spleen.^o
 Hot was the day; she hotter that did look
 For his approach that often there had been.
 Anon he comes, and throws his mantle by,
 And stood stark naked on the brook's green brim.
 The sun looked on the world with glorious eye,
 Yet not so wistly^o as this queen on him.
 He, spying her, bounced in whereas^o he stood.
 "O Jove," quoth she, "why was not I a flood!"

VII

Fair is my love, but not so fair as fickle;
 Mild as a dove, but neither true nor trusty;
 Brighter than glass, and yet as glass is, brittle;
 Softer than wax, and yet as iron rusty:
 A lily pale, with damask^o dye to grace her;
 None fairer, nor none fals^{er} to deface her.^o

The decorative border shown above is a repeated ornament which appeared on the title page of the second octavo edition of The Passionate Pilgrim, 1599.

IV 1 Cytherea Venus 2 green young 3 lovely loving 9 conceit understanding 13 toward willing 14 froward refractory

VI 3 Cytherea Venus 4 tarriance awaiting 5 osier willow 6 spleen hot temper 12 wistly eagerly 13 whereas where

VII 5 damask pale red 6 to deface her to her discredit

Her lips to mine how often hath she joinèd,
 Between each kiss her oaths of true love swearing!
 How many tales to please me hath she coinèd,^o
 Dreading my love, the loss whereof still fearing! 10
 Yet, in the midst of all her pure protestings,
 Her faith, her oaths, her tears, and all were jestings.

5 She burnt with love, as straw with fire^o flameth;
 She burnt out love, as soon as straw outburneth;
 She framed^o the love, and yet she foiled^o the framing; 15
 She bade love last, and yet she fell a-turning.^o
 10 Was this a lover, or a lecher, whether?^o
 Bad in the best, though excellent in neither.^o

IX

Fair was the morn when the fair queen of love,

Paler for sorrow than her milk-white dove,
 For Adon's sake, a youngster proud and wild,
 Her stand she takes upon a steep-up hill. 5
 Anon Adonis comes with horn and hounds.
 She, silly queen, with more than love's good will,
 Forbade the boy he should not pass those grounds.
 5 "Once," quoth she, "did I see a fair sweet youth
 Here in these brakes deep-wounded with a boar, 10
 Deep in the thigh, a spectacle of ruth!^o
 See, in my thigh," quoth she, "here was the sore."
 She showèd hers; he saw more wounds than one,
 10 And blushing fled and left her all alone.

X

Sweet rose, fair flower, untimely plucked, soon vaded,^o
 Plucked in the bud, and vaded^o in the spring!
 Bright orient pearl, alack, too timely^o shaded!
 Fair creature, killed too soon by death's sharp sting!
 Like a green plum that hangs upon a tree, 5
 And falls, through wind, before the fall should be.

I weep for thee, and yet no cause I have;
 For why,^o thou left'st me nothing in thy will.
 And yet thou left'st me more than I did crave, 10
 For why,^o I cravèd nothing of thee still.
 O yes, dear friend, I pardon crave of thee:
 Thy discontent thou didst bequeath to me.

9 coinèd counterfeited 13 fire two syllables 15 framed formed; foiled thwarted 16 fell a-turning i.e., turned to others (for sex) 17 whether which of the two 18 neither also, the sexual organs are "nether" parts
 IX 2 a line rhyming with "wild" is lost 11 ruth pity
 X 1, 2 vaded (1) departed (2) faded 3 timely soon 8, 10 For why because

XII

Crabbèd age and youth cannot live together:
 Youth is full of pleasance,° age is full of care;
 Youth like summer morn, age like winter weather;
 Youth like summer brave,° age like winter bare.
 Youth is full of sport, age's breath is short;
 Youth is nimble, age is lame;
 Youth is hot and bold, age is weak and cold;
 Youth is wild, and age is tame.
 Age, I do abhor thee; youth, I do adore thee:
 O, my love, my love is young!
 Age, I do defy° thee. O sweet shepherd hie thee,°
 For methinks thou stays too long.

XIII

Beauty is but a vain and doubtful good;
 A shining gloss that vadeth° suddenly;
 A flower that dies when first it 'gins to bud;
 A brittle glass that's broken presently;°
 A doubtful good, a gloss, a glass, a flower,
 Lost, vaded, broken, dead within an hour.

And as goods lost are seld° or never found,
 As vaded gloss no rubbing will refresh,
 As flowers dead lie witherèd on the ground,
 As broken glass no cement° can redress:
 So beauty blemished once, for ever lost,
 In spite of physic,° painting, pain, and cost.°

XIV

Good night, good rest; ah, neither be my share!
 She bade good night that kept my rest away,
 And daffed me° to a cabin hanged with care
 To descant° on the doubts of my decay.
 "Farewell," quoth she, "and come again tomorrow." 5
 Fare well I could not, for I supped with sorrow.

Yet at my parting sweetly did she smile,
 In scorn or friendship, nill I conster whether.°
 'T may be she joyed to jest at my exile;
 'T may be, again to make me wander thither:
 "Wander"—a word for shadows like myself
 As° take the pain but cannot pluck the pelf.°

Lord, how mine eyes throw gazes to the east!
 My heart doth charge the watch;° the morning rise
 Doth cite° each moving sense from idle rest,
 Not daring trust the office of mine eyes,

XII 2 pleasance gaiety 4 brave splendid 11 defy reject;
hie thee hurry

XIII 2 vadeth (1) departs (2) fades 4 presently soon 7 seld seldom 10 cement stress on first syllable 12 physic medicine; cost expenditure

XIV 3 daffed me sent me off 4 descant lament (literally, compose musical variations) 8 nill . . . whether I do not know which 12 As who; pelf reward 14 charge the watch order the watchman to proclaim day (?) 15 cite summon

While Philomela° sits and sings, I sit and mark,
 And wish her lays° were tunèd like the lark;

For she doth welcome daylight with her ditty
 And drives away dark dreaming night. 20
 The night so packed,° I post° unto my pretty;
 Heart hath his hope, and eyes their wishèd sight;
 Sorrow changed to solace and solace mixed with sorrow;
 For why,° she sighed and bade me come tomorrow.

Were I with her, the night would post too soon, 25
 But now are minutes added to° the hours;
 To spite me now, each minute seems a moon;°
 Yet not for me, shine sun to succor flowers!
 Pack night, peep day! Good day, of night now borrow:
 Short, night, tonight, and length° thyself tomorrow. 30

XV

It was a lording's° daughter, the fairest one of three,
 That likèd of her master° as well as well might be,
 Till looking on an Englishman, the fair'st that eye could see,
 Her fancy fell a-turning.
 Long was the combat doubtful that love with love did
 fight, 5
 To leave the master loveless, or kill the gallant knight:
 To put in practice either, alas, it was a spite
 Unto the silly° damsel!
 But one must be refused; more mickle° was the pain
 That nothing could be usèd to turn them both to gain, 10
 For of the two the trusty knight was wounded with disdain:
 Alas, she could not help it!
 Thus art° with arms contending was victor of the day,
 Which by a gift of learning did bear the maid away:
 Then, lullaby, the learned man hath got the lady gay; 15
 For now my song is ended.

XVII

My flocks feed not, my ewes breed not,
 My rams speed not, all is amiss:
 Love is dying, faith's defying,°
 Heart's denying,° causer of this.
 All my merry jigs° are quite forgot, 5
 All my lady's love is lost, God wot.°
 Where her faith was firmly fixed in love,
 There a nay° is placed without remove.
 One silly cross° wrought all my loss.
 O frowning Fortune, cursèd fickle dame! 10

17 Philomela the nightingale 18 lays songs 21 packed disposed of; post hurry 24 For why because 26 added to i.e., like 27 moon month 30 Short . . . length shorten
 . . . lengthen

XV 1 lording's lord's 2 master teacher 8 silly inexperienced 9 more mickle greater 13 art learning

XVII 3 defying rejection 4 denying perhaps it should be emended to "renying" = disowning 5 jigs songs or dance tunes 6 wot knows 8 nay denial 9 cross misfortune

For now I see inconstancy
More in women than in men remain.

In black mourn I, all fears scorn I,
Love hath forlorn me, living in thrall.
Heart is bleeding, all help needing—
O cruel speeding,^o fraughted^o with gall!
My shepherd's pipe can sound no deal;^o
My wether's bell rings doleful knell;
My curtail dog,^o that wont to have played,
Plays not at all, but seems afraid;
With sighs so deep procures to weep,
In howling wise, to see my doleful plight.
How sighs resound through heartless^o ground,
Like a thousand vanquished men in bloody fight!

Clear wells spring not, sweet birds sing not,
Green plants bring not forth their dye.
Herds stand weeping, flocks all sleeping,
Nymphs back peeping fearfully.
All our pleasure known to us poor swains,
All our merry meetings on the plains,
All our evening sport from us is fled,
All our love is lost, for Love is dead.
Farewell, sweet lass! Thy like ne'er was
For a sweet content, the cause of all my moan.
Poor Corydon must live alone.
Other help for him I see that there is none.

XVIII

When as thine eye hath chose the dame
And stalled the deer^o that thou shouldst strike,
Let reason rule things worthy blame,
As well as fancy's partial might;^o
Take counsel of some wiser head,
Neither too young, nor yet unwed.

And when thou com'st thy tale to tell,
Smooth not thy tongue with filed^o talk,
Lest she some subtile practice^o smell—
A cripple soon can find a halt;^o

16 speeding lot; fraughted laden 17 no deal not at all 19 curtail dog dog with docked tail 23 heartless (1) pitiless (2) cowardly

XVIII 2 stalled the deer got the deer within range (with pun on dear) 4 fancy's partial might a desperate emendation for the text's "fancy (partyall might)," which seems meaningless; the emendation, and its context, means that sexual behavior ("things worthy blame") should be governed by impartial reason and by the partial power of love ("fancy") 8 filed polished 9 practice deception 10 A cripple . . . halt a cripple knows a limp (and so a woman can recognize a deceiver)

But plainly say thou lov'st her well,
And set thy person forth to sell.

And to her will frame all thy ways.
Spare not to spend, and chiefly there
15 Where thy desert may merit praise
By ringing in thy lady's ear.
The strongest castle, tower, and town,
The golden bullet beats it down.

20 Serve always with assured trust
And in thy suit be humble-true.
Unless thy lady prove unjust,
Press never thou to choose a new.
When time shall serve, be thou not slack
To proffer, though she put thee back.

25 What though her frowning brows be bent,
Her cloudy looks will calm ere night;
And then too late she will repent
That thus dissembled her delight,
30 And twice desire, ere it be day,
That which with scorn she put away.

What though she strive to try her strength,
And ban^o and brawl and say thee nay,
35 Her feeble force will yield at length,
When craft hath taught her thus to say:
"Had women been so strong as men,
In faith, you had not had it then."

The wiles and guiles that women work,
Dissembled with an outward show,
The tricks and toys that in them lurk,
The cock that treads them shall not know.
40 Have you not heard it said full oft,
A woman's nay doth stand for naught?

Think women still to strive with men
To sin and never for to saint.
There is no heaven:^o be holy then
45 When time with age shall them attain.
Were kisses all the joys in bed,
10 One woman would another wed.

But soft,^o enough! too much, I fear,
Lest that my mistress hear my song.
She will not stick to round me on th' ear,^o
To teach my tongue to be so long.
Yet will she blush, here be it said,
To hear her secrets so bewrayed.^o

32 ban curse 45 There . . . heaven i.e., there is no heavenly bliss in serving women (?) 49 soft stop 51 stick . . . ear hesitate to scold me 54 bewrayed revealed

THE SONNETS

INTRODUCTION BY W. H. AUDEN

EDITED BY WILLIAM BURTO

Introduction

Probably, more nonsense has been talked and written, more intellectual and emotional energy expended in vain, on the sonnets of Shakespeare than on any other literary work in the world. Indeed, they have become the best touchstone I know of for distinguishing the sheep from the goats, that is, those who love poetry for its own sake and understand its nature from those who value poems only either as historical documents or because they express feelings or beliefs of which the reader happens to approve.

It so happens that we know almost nothing about the historical circumstances under which Shakespeare wrote these sonnets: we do not know to whom they are addressed or exactly when they were written, and, unless entirely new evidence should turn up, which is unlikely, we never shall.

This has not prevented many very learned gentlemen from displaying their scholarship and ingenuity in conjecture. Though it seems to me rather silly to spend much time upon conjectures that cannot be proved true or false, that is not my real objection to their efforts. What I really object to is their illusion that, if they were successful, if the identity of the Friend, the Dark Lady, the Rival Poet, and so on, could be established beyond doubt, this would in any way illuminate our understanding of the sonnets themselves.

Their illusion seems to me to betray either a complete misunderstanding of the nature of the relation between art and life or an attempt to rationalize and justify plain vulgar idle curiosity.

Idle curiosity is an ineradicable vice of the human mind. All of us like to discover the secrets of our neighbors, particularly the ugly ones. This has always been so, and, probably, always will be. What is relatively new, however—it is scarcely to be found before the latter half of the eighteenth century—is a blurring of the borderline between the desire for truth and idle curiosity, until, today, it has been so thoroughly erased that we can indulge in the latter without the slightest pangs of conscience. A great deal of what today passes for scholarly research is an activity no different from that of reading somebody's private correspondence when he is out of the room, and it does not really make it morally any better if he is out of the room because he is in his grave.

In the case of a man of action—a ruler, a statesman, a general—the man is identical with his biography. In the case of any kind of artist, however, who is a maker not a doer, his biography—the story of his life—and the history of his works are distinct. In the case of a man of action, we can distinguish in a rough and ready way between his private personal life and his public life, but both are lives of action and, therefore, capable of affecting each other. The political interests of a king's mistress, for example, may influence his decisions on national policy. Consequently, the historian, in his search for truth, is justified in investigating the private life of a man of action to the degree that such discoveries throw light upon the history of his times which he had a share in shaping, even if the victim would prefer such secrets not to be known.

The case of any artist is quite different. Art history, the comparison of one work with another, one artistic epoch with another, the study of influences and changes of style, is a legitimate study. The late J. B. Leishman's book, Themes and Variations in Shakespeare's Sonnets, is an admirable example of such an enquiry. Even the biography of an artist, if his life as a man was sufficiently interesting, is permissible, provided that the biographer and his readers realize that such an account throws no light whatsoever upon the artist's work. The relation between his life and his works is at one and the same time too self-evident to require comment—every work of art is, in one sense, a self-disclosure—and too complicated ever to unravel. Thus, it is self-evident that Catullus' love for Lesbia was the experience that inspired his love poems, and that, if either of them had had a different character, the poems would have been different; but no amount of research into their lives can tell us why Catullus wrote the actual poems he did, instead of an infinite number of similar poems he might have written instead, why, indeed, he wrote any, or why those he did are good. Even if one could question a poet himself about the relation between some poem of his and the events that provoked him to write it, he could not give a satisfactory answer, because even the most "occasional" poem, in the Goethean sense, involves not only the occasion but the whole life experience of the poet, and he himself cannot identify all the contributing elements.

Further, it should be borne in mind that most genuine artists would prefer that no biography be written. A genuine artist believes he has been put on earth to fulfill a certain function determined by the talent with which he has been entrusted. His personal life is, naturally, of concern to himself and, he hopes, to his personal friends, but he does not think it is or ought to be of any concern to the public. The one thing a writer, for example, hopes for is attentive readers of his writings. He hopes they will study the text closely enough to spot misprints. Shakespeare would be grateful to many scholars, beginning with Malone, who have suggested sensible emendations to the Q text. And he hopes that they will read with patience and intelligence so as to extract as much meaning from the text as possible. If the shade of Shakespeare has read William Empson's explication of "They that have pow'r to hurt and will do none" (Sonnet 94), he may have wondered to himself, "Now, did I really say all that?," but he will certainly be grateful to Mr. Empson for his loving care.

Not only would most genuine writers prefer to have no biography written; they would also prefer, were it feasible, that their writings be published anonymously.

Shakespeare is in the singularly fortunate position of being, for all intents and purposes, anonymous. Hence the existence of persons who spend their lives trying to prove that his plays were written by someone else. (How odd it is that Freud should have been a firm believer in the Earl of Oxford theory.)

So far as the sonnets are concerned, the certain facts are just two in number. Two of the sonnets, "When my love swears that she is made of truth" (138), and "Two loves I have, of comfort and despair" (144), appeared in The Passionate Pilgrim, a poetic miscellany printed in 1599, and the whole collection was published by G. Eld for T. T. in 1609 with a dedication "To The Onlie Begetter Of These Insuing Sonnets. Mr. W.H." Meres's reference in 1598 to "sugred Sonnets" by Shakespeare is inconclusive: the word sonnet was often used as a general term for a lyric, and even if Meres was using it in the stricter sense, we do not know if the sonnets he was referring to are the ones we have.

Aside from the text itself, this is all we know for certain and all we are ever likely to know. On philological grounds, I am inclined to agree with those scholars who take the word begetter to mean procurer, so that Mr. W.H. is not the friend who inspired most of the sonnets, but the person who secured the manuscript for the publisher.

So far as the date of their composition is concerned, all we know for certain is that the relation between Shakespeare and the Friend lasted at least three years:

Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burned,
Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green. (104)

The fact that the style of the sonnets is nearer to that of the earlier plays than the later is not conclusive proof that their composition was contemporary with the former, because a poet's style is always greatly influenced by the particular verse form he is employing. As C. S. Lewis has said: "If Shakespeare had taken an hour off from the composition of Lear to write a sonnet, the sonnet might not have been in the style of Lear." On the whole, I think an early date is a more plausible conjecture than a late one, because the experiences the sonnets describe seem to me to be more likely to befall a younger man than an older.

Let us, however, forget all about Shakespeare the man, leave the speculations about the persons involved, the names, already or in the future to be put forward, Southampton, Pembroke, Hughes, and so on, to the foolish and the idle, and consider the sonnets themselves.

The first thing that is obvious after reading through the one hundred and fifty-four sonnets as we have them, is that they are not in any kind of planned sequence. The only semblance of order is a division into two unequal heaps—Sonnets 1 to 126 are addressed to a young man, assuming, which is probable but not certain, that there is only one young man addressed, and Sonnets 127–154 are addressed to a dark-haired woman. In both heaps, a triangle situation is referred to in which Shakespeare's friend and his mistress betray him by having an affair together, which proves that the order is not chronological. Sonnets 40 and 42, "Take all my loves, my love, yea take them all," "That thou hast her, it is not all my grief," must be more or less contemporary with 144 and 152, "Two loves I have, of comfort and despair," "In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn."

Nor in the two sets considered separately is it possible to believe that the order is chronological. Sometimes batches of sonnets occur that clearly belong together—for example, the opening series 1–17, in which the friend is urged to marry, though, even here, 15 seems not to belong, for marriage is not mentioned in it. At other times, sonnets that are similar in theme are widely separated. To take a very trivial example: in 77 Shakespeare speaks of giving his friend a commonplace book.

Look what thy memory cannot contain,
Commit to these waste blanks.

And in 122, he speaks of a similar gift from his friend to him, "Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain." Surely, it is probable that they exchanged gifts and that these sonnets belong together.

The serious objection, however, to the order of Sonnets 1–126 as the Q text prints them is psychological. Sonnets expressing feelings of unalloyed happiness and devotion are mixed with others expressing grief and estrangement. Some speak of injuries done to Shakespeare by his friend, others of some scandal in which the friend was involved, others again of some infidelity on Shakespeare's part in a succession that makes no kind of emotional sense.

Any passionate relationship can go through and survive painful crises, and become all the stronger for it. As Shakespeare writes in Sonnet 119:

O, benefit of ill: now I find true
That better is by evil still made better;
And ruined love, when it is built anew,
Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.

But forgiveness and reconciliation do not obliterate memory of the past. It is not possible to return to the innocent happiness expressed before any cloud appeared on the sky. It is not, it seems to me, possible to believe that, after going through the experiences described in Sonnets 40–42, Shakespeare would write either Sonnet 53,

In all external grace you have some part,
But you like none, none you, for constant heart,
or 105,

Let not my love be called idolatry,
Nor my beloved as an idol show,
Since all alike my songs and praises be
To one, of one, still such, and ever so.
Kind is my love today, tomorrow kind,
Still constant in a wondrous excellence.

If the order is not chronological, it cannot, either, be a sequence planned by Shakespeare for publication. Any writer with an audience in mind knows that a sequence of poems must climax with one of the best. Yet the sequence as we have it concludes with two of the worst of the sonnets, trivial conceits about, apparently, going to Bath to take the waters. Nor, when preparing for publication, will an author leave unrevised what is obviously a first draft, like Sonnet 99 with its fifteen lines.

A number of scholars have tried to rearrange the sonnets into some more logical order, but such efforts can never be more than conjecture, and it is best to accept the jumble we have been given.

If the first impression made by the sonnets is of their haphazard order, the second is of their extremely uneven poetic value.

After the 1609 edition, the sonnets were pretty well forgotten for more than a century and a half. In 1640 Benson produced an extraordinary hodgepodge in which one hundred and forty-six of them were arranged into seventy-two poems with invented titles, and some of the he's and him's changed to she's and her's. It was not until 1780 that a significant critical text was made by Malone. This happened to be a period when critics condemned the sonnet as a form. Thus Steevens could write in 1766:

Quaintness, obscurity, and tautology are to be regarded as the constituent parts of this exotic species of composition. . . . I am one of those who should have wished it to have expired in the country where it was born. . . . [A sonnet] is composed in the highest strain of affectation, pedantry, circumlocution, and nonsense.

And of Shakespeare's essays in this form:

The strongest act of Parliament that could be framed would fail to compel readers unto their service.

Even when this prejudice against the sonnet as such had begun to weaken, and even after Bardolatry had begun, adverse criticism of the sonnets continued.

Thus Wordsworth, who was as responsible as anyone for rehabilitating the sonnet as a form (though he employed the Petrarchan, not the Shakespearean, kind), remarked:

These sonnets beginning at CXXVII to his mistress are worse than a puzzle-peg. They are abominably harsh, obscure, and worthless. The others are for the most part much better, have many fine lines and passages. They are also in many places warm with passion. Their chief faults—and heavy ones they are—are sameness, tediousness, quaintness, and elaborate obscurity.

Hazlitt:

If Shakespeare had written nothing but his sonnets . . . he would . . . have been assigned to the class of cold, artificial writers, who had no genuine sense of nature or passion.

Keats:

They seem to be full of fine things said unintentionally—in the intensity of working out conceits.

Landor:

Not a single one is very admirable. . . . They are hot and pothery: there is much condensation, little delicacy; like raspberry jam without cream, without crust, without bread; to break its viscosity.

In this century we have reacquired a taste for the conceit, as we have for baroque architecture, and no longer think that artifice is incompatible with passion. Even so, no serious critic of poetry can possibly think that all the sonnets are equally good.

On going through the hundred and fifty-four of them, I find forty-nine that seem to me excellent throughout, and a good number of the rest have one or two memorable lines, but there are also several that I can read only out of a sense of duty. For the inferior ones we have no right to condemn Shakespeare unless we are prepared to believe—a belief for which there is no evidence—that he prepared or intended them all to be published.

Considered in the abstract, as if they were Platonic Ideas, the Petrarchan sonnet seems to be a more esthetically satisfying form than the Shakespearean. Having only two different rhymes in the octave and two in the sestet, each is bound by rhyme into a closed unity, and the asymmetrical relation of 8 to 6 is pleasing. The Shakespearean form, on the other hand, with its seven different rhymes, almost inevitably becomes a lyric of three symmetrical quatrains, finished off with an epigrammatic couplet. As a rule Shakespeare shapes his rhetorical argument in conformity with this, that is to say, there is usually a major pause after the fourth, the eighth, and the twelfth line. Only in one case, Sonnet 86, "Was it the proud full sail of his great verse," does the main pause occur in the middle of the second quatrain, so that the sonnet divides into 6.6.2.

It is the concluding couplet in particular which, in the Shakespearean form, can be a snare. The poet is tempted to use it either to make a summary of the preceding twelve lines that is unnecessary, or to draw a moral that is too glib and trite. In the case of Shakespeare himself, though there are some wonderful couplets, for example the conclusion of 61,

For thee watch I, whilst thou dost wake elsewhere,
From me far off, with others all too near,

or 87,

Thus have I had thee as a dream doth flatter,
In sleep a king, but waking no such matter,

all too often, even in some of the best, the couplet lines are the weakest and dullest in the sonnet, and because they come at the end, the reader has the sense of a disappointing anticlimax.

Despite all this, it seems to me wise of Shakespeare to have chosen the form he did rather than the Petrarchan. Compared with Italian, English is so poor in rhymes that it is almost impossible to write a Petrarchan sonnet in it that sounds effortless throughout. In even the best examples from Milton, Wordsworth, and Rossetti, for instance, one is almost sure to find at least one line the concluding word of which does not seem inevitable, the only word that could accurately express the poet's meaning; one feels it is there only because the rhyme demanded it.

In addition, there are certain things that can be done in the Shakespearean form that the Petrarchan, with its sharp division between octave and sestet, cannot do. In Sonnet 66, "Tired with all these, for restful death I cry," and 129, "Th' expense of spirit in a waste of shame," Shakespeare is able to give twelve single-line exempla of the wretchedness of this world and the horrors of lust, with an accumulative effect of great power.

In their style, two characteristics of the sonnets stand out. Firstly, their cantabile. They are the work of someone whose ear is unerring. In his later blank verse, Shakespeare became a master of highly complicated effects of sound and rhythm, and the counterpointing of these with the sense, but in the sonnets he is intent upon making his verse as melodious, in the simplest and most obvious sense of the word, as possible, and there is scarcely a line, even in the dull ones, that sounds harsh or awkward. Occasionally, there are lines that foreshadow the freedom of his later verse. For example:

Not mine own fears nor the prophetic soul
Of the wide world dreaming on things to come. (107)

If the vagueness of the historical circumstances under which the sonnets were written has encouraged the goats of idle curiosity, their matter has given the goats of ideology a wonderful opportunity to display their love of simplification at the expense of truth. Confronted with the extremely odd story they tell, with the fact that, in so many of them, Shakespeare addresses a young man in terms of passionate devotion, the sound and sensible citizen, alarmed at the thought that our Top-Bard could have had any experience with which he is unfamiliar, has either been shocked and wished that Shakespeare had never written them, or, in defiance of common sense, tried to persuade himself that Shakespeare was merely expressing in somewhat hyperbolic terms, such as an Elizabethan poet might be expected to use, what any normal man feels for a friend of his own sex. The homosexual reader, on the other hand, determined to secure our Top-Bard as a patron saint of the Homintern, has been uncritically enthusiastic about the first one hundred and twenty-six of the sonnets, and preferred to ignore those to the Dark Lady in which the relationship is unequivocally sexual, and the fact that Shakespeare was a married man and a father.

Dag Hammarskjöld, in a diary found after his death and just recently published in Sweden, makes an observation to which both the above types would do well to listen.

How easy Psychology has made it for us to dismiss the perplexing mystery with a label which assigns it a place in the list of common aberrations.

That we are confronted in the sonnets by a mystery rather than by an aberration is evidenced for me by the fact that men and women whose sexual tastes are perfectly normal, but who enjoy and understand poetry, have always been able to read them as expressions of what they understand by the word love, without finding the masculine pronoun an obstacle.

I think that the primary experience—complicated as it became later—out of which the sonnets to the friend spring was a mystical one.

All experiences that may be called mystical have certain characteristics in common.

(1) The experience is “given.” That is to say, it cannot be induced or prolonged by an effort of will, though the openness of any individual to receive it is partly determined by his age, his psychophysical make-up, and his cultural milieu.

(2) Whatever the contents of the experience, the subject is absolutely convinced that it is a revelation of reality. When it is over, he does not say, as one says when one awakes from a dream, “Now I am awake and conscious again of the real world.” He says, rather, “For a while the veil was lifted and a reality revealed which in my ‘normal’ state is hidden from me.”

(3) With whatever the vision is concerned—things, human beings, or God—they are experienced as numinous, clothed in glory, charged with an intense being-thereness.

(4) Confronted by the vision, the attention of the subject, in awe, joy, dread, is absolutely absorbed in contemplation and, while the vision lasts, his self, its desires and needs, are completely forgotten.

Natural mystical experiences, visions that is to say, concerned with created beings, not with a creator God, and without overt religious content, are of two kinds, which one might call the Vision of Dame Kind and the Vision of Eros.

The classic descriptions of the first are to be found, of course, in certain of Wordsworth’s poems, like The Prelude, the Immortality Ode, “Tintern Abbey,” and “The Ruined Cottage.” It is concerned with a multiplicity of creatures, inanimate and animate, but not with persons, though it may include human artifacts. If human beings do appear in it, they are always, I believe, total strangers to the subject, so that, so far as he is concerned, they are not persons. It would seem that, in our culture, this vision is not uncommon in childhood, but rare in adults.

The Vision of Eros, on the other hand, is concerned with a single person, who is revealed to the subject as being of infinite sacred importance. The classic descriptions of it are to be found in Plato’s Symposium, Dante’s La Vita Nuova, and some of these sonnets by Shakespeare.

It can, it seems, be experienced before puberty. If it occurs later, though the subject is aware of its erotic nature, his own desire is always completely subordinate to the sacredness of the beloved person, who is felt to be infinitely superior to the lover. Before anything else, the lover desires the happiness of the beloved.

The Vision of Eros is probably a much rarer experience than most people in our culture suppose, but, when it is genuine, I do not think it makes any sense to apply to it terms like heterosexual or homosexual. Such terms can be legitimately applied only to the profane erotic experiences with which we are all familiar, to lust, for example, an interest in another solely as a sexual object, and that combination of sexual desire and philia, affection based upon mutual interests, values, and shared experiences, which is the securest basis for a happy marriage.

That, in the Vision of Eros, the erotic is the medium, not the cause, is proved, I think, by the fact, on which all who have written about it with authority agree, that it cannot long survive an actual sexual relationship. Indeed, it is very doubtful if the Vision can ever be mutual: the story of Tristan and Isolde is a myth, not an instance of what can historically occur. To be receptive to it, it would seem that the subject must be exceptionally imaginative. Class feelings also seem to play a role; no one, apparently, can have such a vision about an individual who belongs to a social group that he has been brought up to regard as inferior to his own, so that its members are not, for him, fully persons.

The medium of the Vision is, however, undoubtedly erotic. Nobody who was unconscious of an erotic interest on his part would use the frank, if not brutal, sexual image that Shakespeare employs in speaking of his friend’s exclusive interest in women.

But since she pricked thee out for women’s pleasure,

Mine be thy love, and thy love’s use their treasure. (20)

The beloved is always beautiful in the impersonal sense of the word as well as the personal. It is unfortunate that we have to use the same words, beauty and beautiful, to mean two quite different things. If I say, “Elizabeth has a beautiful figure” or “a beautiful profile,” I am referring to an objective, publicly recognizable property, and, so long as the objects are members of the same class, I can compare one with another and arrange them along a scale of beauty. That is why it is possible to hold dog shows, beauty competitions, and so on, or for a sculptor to state in mathematical terms the proportions of the ideal male or female figure. This kind of beauty is a gift of Nature's, depending upon a lucky combination of genes and the luck of good health, and a gift that Nature can, and in due time always does, take away. The reaction of the spectator to it is either impersonal admiration or impersonal sexual desire. Moral approval is not involved. It is perfectly possible for me to say, "Elizabeth has a beautiful figure, but she is a monster."

If, on the other hand, I say, "Elizabeth has a beautiful face or a beautiful expression," though I am still referring to something physical—I could not make the statement if I were blind—I am speaking of something that is personal, a unique face that cannot be compared with that of anyone else, and for which I hold Elizabeth personally responsible. Nature has had nothing to do with it. This kind of beauty is always associated with the notion of moral goodness. It is impossible to imagine circumstances in which I could say, "Elizabeth has a beautiful expression, but she is a monster." And it is this kind of beauty that arouses in the beholder feelings, not of impersonal admiration or lust, but of personal love.

The Petrarchan distinction, employed by Shakespeare in a number of his sonnets, between the love of the eye and the love of the heart, is an attempt, I think, to express the difference between these two kinds of beauty and our response to them.

In the Vision of Eros, both are always present. The beloved is always beautiful in both the public and the personal sense. But, to the lover, the second is the more important. Dante certainly thought that Beatrice was a girl whose beauty everybody would admire, but it would not have entered his head to compare her for beauty with other Florentine girls of the same age.

Both Plato and Dante attempt to give a religious explanation of the Vision. Both, that is, regard the love inspired by a created human being as intended to lead the lover toward the love of the uncreated source of all beauty. The difference between them is that Plato is without any notion of what we mean by a person, whether human or Divine; he can think only in terms of the individual and the universal, and beauty for him is always beauty in the impersonal sense. Consequently, on the Platonic ladder, the love of an individual must be forgotten in the love of the universal; what we would call infidelity becomes a moral duty. How different is Dante's interpretation. Neither he nor Beatrice tells us exactly what he had done that had led him to the brink of perdition, but both speak of it as a lack of fidelity on Dante's part to his love for Beatrice. In Paradise, she is with him until the final moment when he turns from her toward "The Eternal Fountain," and even then he knows that her eyes are turned in the same direction. Instead of the many rungs of the Platonic ladder, there is only one step for the lover to take, from the person of the beloved creature to the Person of their common Creator.

It is consistent with Shakespeare's cast of mind as we meet it in the plays, where it is impossible to be certain what his personal beliefs were on any subject, that the sonnets should contain no theory of love: Shakespeare contents himself with simply describing the experience.

Though the primary experience from which they started was, I believe, the Vision of Eros, that is, of course, not all they are about. For the Vision to remain undimmed, it is probably necessary that the lover have very little contact with the beloved, however nice a person she (or he) may be. Dante, after all saw Beatrice only once or twice, and she probably knew little about him. The story of the sonnets seems to me to be the story of an agonized struggle by Shakespeare to preserve the glory of the vision he had been granted in a relationship, lasting at least three years, with a person who seemed intent by his actions upon covering the vision with dirt.

As outsiders, the impression we get of his friend is one of a young man who was not really very nice, very conscious of his good looks, able to switch on the charm at any moment, but essentially frivolous, cold-hearted, and self-centered, aware, probably, that he had some power over Shakespeare—if he thought about it at all, no doubt he gave it a cynical explanation—but with no conception of the intensity of the feelings he had, unwittingly, aroused. Somebody, in fact, rather like Bassanio in The Merchant of Venice.

The sonnets addressed to the Dark Lady are concerned with that most humiliating of all erotic experiences, sexual infatuation—Vénus toute entière à sa proie attachée.

Simple lust is impersonal; that is to say, the pursuer regards himself as a person but the object of his pursuit as a thing, to whose personal qualities, if she has any, he is indifferent, and, if he succeeds, he expects to be able to make a safe getaway as soon as he becomes bored. Sometimes, however, he gets trapped. Instead of becoming bored, he becomes sexually obsessed, and the girl, instead of conveniently remaining an object, becomes a real person to him, but a person whom he not only does not love, but actively dislikes.

No other poet, not even Catullus, has described the anguish, self-contempt, and rage produced by this unfortunate condition so well as Shakespeare in some of these sonnets, for example, 141, "In faith I do not love thee with my eyes," or 151, "Love is too young to know what conscience is."

Aside from the opening sixteen sonnets urging his friend to marry—which may well, as some scholars have suggested, have been written at the suggestion of some member of the young man's family—aside from these, and half a dozen elegant trifles, what is astonishing about the sonnets, especially when one remembers the age in which they were written, is the impression they make of naked autobiographical confession. The Elizabethans were not given to writing their autobiographies or to "unlocking their hearts." Donne's love poems were no doubt inspired by a personal passion, but this is hidden behind the public performance. It was not until Rousseau and the age of Sturm und Drang that confession became a literary genre. After the sonnets, I cannot think of anything in English poetry so seemingly autobiographical until Meredith's Modern Love, and even then, the personal events seem to be very carefully "posed."

It is impossible to believe either that Shakespeare wished them to be published or that he can have shown most of them to the young man and woman, whoever they were, to whom they are addressed. Suppose you had written Sonnet 57,

Being your slave, what should I do but tend
Upon the hours and times of your desire?

Can you imagine showing it to the person you were thinking of? Vice versa, what on earth would you feel, supposing someone you knew handed you the sonnet and said, "This is about you"?

Though Shakespeare may have shown the sonnets to one or two intimate literary friends—it would appear that he must have—he wrote them, I am quite certain, as one writes a diary, for himself alone, with no thought of a public.

When the sonnets are really obscure, they are obscure in the way that a diary can be, in which the writer does not bother to explain references that are obvious to him but that an outsider cannot know. For example, in the opening lines of Sonnet 125,

Were't aught to me I bore the canopy,
With my extern the outward honoring,

it is impossible for the reader to know whether Shakespeare is simply being figurative or whether he is referring to some ceremony in which he actually took part, or, if he is, what that ceremony can have been. Again, the concluding couplet of 124 remains impenetrable.

To this I witness call the fools of Time,
Which die for goodness, who have lived for crime.

Some critics have suggested that this is a cryptic reference to the Jesuits who were executed on charges of high treason. This may be so, but there is nothing in the text to prove it, and even if it is so, I fail to understand their relevance as witnesses to Shakespeare's love, which no disaster or self-interest can affect.

How the sonnets came to be published—whether Shakespeare gave copies to some friend who then betrayed him, or whether some enemy stole them—we shall probably never know. Of one thing I am certain: Shakespeare must have been horrified when they were published.

The Elizabethan age was certainly as worldly-wise and no more tolerant, perhaps less, than our own. After all, sodomy was still a capital offense. The poets of the period, like Marlowe and Barnfield, whom we know to have been homosexual, were very careful not to express their feelings in the first person, but in terms of classical mythology. Renaissance Italy had the reputation for being tolerant on this subject, yet when Michelangelo's nephew published his sonnets to Tomasso de Cavalieri, which are much more restrained than Shakespeare's, for the sake of his uncle's reputation he altered the sex, just as Benson was to do with Shakespeare in 1640.

Shakespeare must have known that his sonnets would be read by many readers in 1609 as they are read by many today—with raised eyebrows. Though I believe such a reaction to be due to a misunderstanding, one cannot say that it is not understandable.

In our culture, we have good reason to be skeptical when anyone claims to have experienced the Vision of Eros, and even to doubt if it ever occurs, because half our literature, popular and highbrow, ever since the Provençal poets made the disastrous mistake of trying to turn a mystical experience into a social cult, is based on the assumption that what is, probably, a rare experience, is one that almost everybody has or ought to have; if they do not, then there must be something wrong with them. We know only too well how often, when a person speaks of having "fallen in love" with X, what he or she really feels could be described in much cruder terms. As La Rochefoucauld observed, "True love is like seeing ghosts: we all talk about it, but few of us have ever seen one." It does not follow, however, that true love or ghosts cannot exist. Perhaps poets are more likely to experience it than others, or become poets because they have. Perhaps Hannah Arendt is right: "Poets are the only people to whom love is not only a crucial but an indispensable experience, which entitles them to mistake it for a universal one." In Shakespeare's case, what happened to his relations with his friend and his mistress, whether they were abruptly broken off in a quarrel, or slowly faded into indifference, is anybody's guess. Did Shakespeare later feel that the anguish at the end was not too great a price to pay for the glory of the initial vision? I hope so and believe so. Anyway, poets are tough and can profit from the most dreadful experiences.

There is a scene in The Two Noble Kinsmen that most scholars believe to have been written by Shakespeare and that, if he did, may very well be the last thing he wrote. In it there is a speech by Palamon in which he prays to Venus for her aid. The speech is remarkable, first in its choice of examples of the power of the goddess—nearly all are humiliating or horrid—and second for the intensity of the disgust expressed at masculine sexual vanity.

Hail, sovereign queen of secrets, who hast power
To call the fiercest tyrant from his rage
And weep unto a girl; that hast the might
Even with an eye-glance to choke Mars's drum
And turn th' alarm to whispers; that canst make
A cripple flourish with his crutch, and cure him
Before Apollo; that mayst force the king
To be his subject's vassal, and induce
Stale Gravity to dance; the polled bachelor
Whose youth like wanton boys through bonfires
Have skipped thy flame, at seventy thou canst catch
And make him, to the scorn of his hoarse throat,
Abuse young lays of love; what godlike power
Hast thou not power upon?

Take to thy grace
Me thy vowed soldier, who do bear thy yoke
As 'twere a wreath of roses, yet is heavier
Than lead itself, stings more than nettles.
I have never been foul-mouthed against thy law,
Ne'er revealed secret, for I knew none; would not,
Had I kenned all that were; I never practiced
Upon man's wife, nor would the libels read
Of liberal wits; I never at great feasts
Sought to betray a beauty, but have blushed
At simp'ring sirs that did. I have been harsh
To large confessors, and have hotly asked them
If they had mothers: I had one, a woman,
And women 'twere they wronged. I knew a man
Of eighty winters, this I told them, who
A lass of fourteen bridged. 'Twas thy power
To put life into dust: the aged cramp

Had screwed his square foot round,
 The gout had knitted his fingers into knots,
 Torturing convulsions from his globy eyes
 Had almost drawn their spheres, that what was life
 In him seemed torture. This anatomy
 Had by his young fair fere a boy, and I
 Believed it was his, for she swore it was,
 And who would not believe her? Brief, I am
 To those that prate and have done no companion;
 To those that boast and have not a defier;
 To those that would and cannot a rejoicer.
 Yea, him I do not love, that tells close offices
 The foulest way, nor names concealments in
 The boldest language. Such a one I am,
 And vow that lover never yet made sigh
 Truer than I. O then, most soft sweet goddess,
 Give me the victory of this question, which
 Is true love's merit, and bless me with a sign
 Of thy great pleasure.

Here music is heard, doves are seen to flutter; they fall again upon their faces, then on their knees.

O thou that from eleven to ninety reign'st
 In mortal bosoms, whose chase is this world
 And we in herds thy game, I give thee thanks
 For this fair token, which being laid unto
 Mine innocent true heart, arms in assurance
 My body to this business. Let us rise
 And bow before the goddess. Time comes on.

(V.i.77-90, 94-136)

A NOTE ON THE TEXT

The present text of the sonnets is based on the quarto of 1609, the only edition of any authority; all subsequent editions of the sonnets derive from that of 1609. Two of the sonnets (138 and 144) had been published, in slightly different versions, in a volume of poems entitled The Passionate Pilgrim (1599); quite possibly all or almost all of the sonnets were written in the middle 1590's, though it is equally possible that some were written only shortly before Thorpe issued his quarto with 154 sonnets. There is no evidence that Shakespeare oversaw the publication; probably the order in which the sonnets are presented is the publisher's rather than the author's. In 1640 John Benson issued a second edition. He dropped Thorpe's dedication and eight sonnets, rearranged the order of the remaining ones, made numerous verbal changes to suggest that the sonnets were written to a woman and not to a man, and implied in a preface that the sonnets had never before been published.

The present edition keeps the arrangement of the 1609 quarto, but corrects obvious typographical errors and modernizes spelling and punctuation. Other departures from the quarto are listed below, the present reading first, in boldface type, and then the reading of the quarto in roman.

The textual editor wishes to acknowledge his indebtedness, especially in the glosses, to his late teacher, Hyder Edward Rollins, whose indispensable New Variorum Edition is as likely as any scholarly book to bear it out to the edge of doom.

12.4 are or 13.7 Yourself You selfe 19.3 jaws yawes 19.5 fleets fleet'st 25.9 might worth 26.12 thy their 27.10 thy their 34.12 cross losse 35.8 thy . . . thy their . . . their 41.8 she he 43.11 thy their 44.13 naught naughts 45.12 thy their 46.3 thy their; 8 thy their; 9 'cide side; 14 thy their 47.11 not nor 50.6 dully duly 51.10 perfect'st perfects 55.1 monuments monument 56.13 Or As 65.12 of or 69.3 due end; 5 Thy Their 70.1 art are 70.6 Thy Their 74.12 remembered remembred 76.7 tell fel 77.10 blanks blacks 90.11 shall stall 91.8 better bitter 99.9 One Our 102.8 her his 111.1 with wish 112.14 are y'are 113.6 latch lack; 14 mine eye mine 126.8 minutes mynuit 128.11 thy their; 14 thy their 129.11 proved, a proud and 132.6 of the of th'; 9 mourning morning 138.12 to have t' haue 144.6 side sight; 9 fiend finde 153.14 eyes eye

THE SONNETS

TO THE ONLY BEGETTER OF THESE ENSUING SONNETS
MR. W. H. ALL HAPPINESS AND THAT ETERNITY PROMISED BY OUR EVER-LIVING POET
WISHETH
THE WELL-WISHING ADVENTURER IN SETTING FORTH

T.T.

I

From fairest creatures we desire increase,
That thereby beauty's rose might never die,
But as the ripper should by time decease,
His tender heir might bear his memory;
But thou contracted^o to thine own bright eyes,
Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,^o
Making a famine where abundance lies,
Thyself thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament,
And only^o herald to the gaudy spring,
Within thine own bud buriest thy content,^o
And, tender churl, mak'st waste in niggarding.^o
Pity the world, or else this glutton be,
To eat the world's due,^o by the grave and thee.^o

1: 5 contracted betrothed 6 self-substantial fuel fuel of your own substance 10 only chief 11 thy content what you contain, i.e., potential fatherhood 12 niggarding hoarding 14 world's due i.e., propagation of the species; by . . . thee i.e., by dying without children

The decorative border shown above appeared on the title page of the first quarto edition of the Sonnets, 1609.

The initials concluding the dedication are those of Thomas Thorpe, the publisher of the volume. The identity of Mr. W. H. is uncertain. Most persons who write on the subject have felt it too prosaic to hold that Mr. W. H. was simply a person who brought the poems into the publisher's hands; rather, they have sought to identify him with the friend to whom many of the poems are addressed. The favorite candidates are William Herbert, Earl of Pembroke (and one of the dedicatees of the

2

When forty winters shall besiege thy brow,
And dig deep trenches^o in thy beauty's field,
Thy youth's proud livery,^o so gazed on now,
Will be a tottered weed^o of small worth held:
Then being asked where all thy beauty lies,
Where all the treasure of thy lusty^o days,
To say within thine own deep-sunken eyes,
Were an all-eating shame and thriftless^o praise.
How much more praise deserved thy beauty's use,^o
If thou couldst answer, "This fair child of mine Shall sum my count,^o and make my old excuse,"^o
Proving his beauty by succession thine.
This were to be new made when thou art old,
And see thy blood warm when thou feel'st it cold.

2: 2 trenches i.e., wrinkles 3 livery outward appearance 4 tottered weed tattered garment 6 lusty vigorous 8 thriftless unprofitable 9 use investment 11 sum my count even out my account; my old excuse excuse when I am old

First Folio), and Henry Wriothesley, Earl of Southampton (to whom Shakespeare dedicated Venus and Adonis and The Rape of Lucrece). But it is unlikely that an earl would be addressed as "Mr." Yet another candidate is Sir William Hervey, third husband of Southampton's mother; his advocates say that Hervey was the "begetter" in the sense that he may have encouraged Shakespeare to write the sonnets urging the young man (allegedly Southampton) to wed.

3

Look in thy glass and tell the face thou viewest
 Now is the time that face should form another,
 Whose fresh repair° if now thou not renewest,
 Thou dost beguile the world, unbless some mother.° 4
 For where is she so fair whose uneared° womb
 Disdains the tillage of thy husbandry?
 Or who is he so fond° will be the tomb
 Of° his self-love to stop posterity? 8
 Thou art thy mother's glass, and she in thee
 Calls back the lovely April of her prime;
 So thou through windows of thine age shalt see,
 Despite of wrinkles, this thy golden time.
 But if thou live rememb'ed not to be,°
 Die single and thine image dies with thee.

4

Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend
 Upon thyself thy beauty's legacy?°
 Nature's bequest gives nothing but doth lend,
 And being frank° she lends to those are free.° 4
 Then, beauteous niggard,° why dost thou abuse
 The bounteous largess given thee to give?
 Profitless usurer, why dost thou use°
 So great a sum of sums yet canst not live?° 8
 For having traffic° with thyself alone,
 Thou of thyself thy sweet self dost deceive.
 Then how when Nature calls thee to be gone,
 What acceptable audit canst thou leave? 12
 Thy unused beauty must be tombed with thee,
 Which, usèd, lives° th' executor to be.

5

Those hours° that with gentle work did frame
 The lovely gaze° where every eye doth dwell
 Will play the tyrants to the very same
 And that unfair° which fairly° doth excel; 4
 For never-resting Time leads summer on
 To hideous winter and confounds° him there,
 Sap checked with frost and lusty leaves quite gone,
 Beauty o'ersnowed and bareness everywhere. 8
 Then, were not summer's distillation° left
 A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
 Beauty's effect° with beauty were bereft,
 Nor it nor° no remembrance what it was. 12
 But flowers distilled though they with winter meet,
 Leese but their show,° their substance still lives sweet.

3: 3 fresh repair youthful state 4 unbless some mother leave some woman unblessed with motherhood 5 uneared untilled 7 fond foolish 8 Of because of 13 rememb'ed . . . be only to be forgotten
 4: 2 beauty's legacy inheritance of beauty 4 frank, free generous 5 niggard miser 7 use (1) invest (2) use up 8 live (1) make a living (2) endure 9 traffic commerce 14 lives i.e., in a son
 5: 1 hours disyllabic 2 gaze object gazed on 4 unfair make ugly; fairly in beauty 6 confounds destroys 9 summer's distillation perfumes made from flowers 11 Beauty's effect i.e., the perfume 12 Nor . . . nor (there would be) neither . . . nor 14 Leese . . . show lose only their outward form

6

Then let not winter's ragged° hand deface
 In thee thy summer ere thou be distilled.
 Make sweet some vial; treasure° thou some place
 With beauty's treasure ere it be self-killed. 4
 That use° is not forbidden usury
 Which happies those that pay the willing loan;°
 That's for thyself to breed another thee,
 Or ten times happier be it ten for one. 8
 Ten times thyself were happier° than thou art,
 If ten of thine ten times refigured° thee:
 Then what could death do if thou shouldst depart,
 Leaving thee living in posterity? 12
 Be not self-willed, for thou art much too fair,
 To be death's conquest and make worms thine heir.

7

Lo, in the orient° when the gracious light°
 Lifts up his burning head, each under° eye
 Doth homage to his new-appearing sight,
 Serving with looks his sacred majesty; 4
 And having climbed the steep-up heavenly hill,
 Resembling strong youth in his middle age,
 Yet mortal looks° adore his beauty still,
 Attending on his golden pilgrimage; 8
 But when from highmost pitch,° with weary car,°
 Like feeble age he reeleth from the day,
 The eyes, 'fore duteous, now converted° are
 From his low tract° and look another way: 12
 So thou, thyself outgoing in thy noon,
 Unlooked on diest unless thou get° a son.

8

Music to hear,° why hear'st thou music sadly?°
 Sweets with sweets war not, joy delights in joy.
 Why lov'st thou that which thou receiv'st not gladly,
 Or else receiv'st with pleasure thine annoy? 4
 If the true concord of well-tunèd sounds,
 By unions married, do offend thine ear,
 They do but sweetly chide thee, who confounds
 In singleness the parts that thou shouldst bear.° 8
 Mark how one string, sweet husband to another,°
 Strikes each in each by mutual ordering;
 Resembling sire, and child, and happy mother,
 Who all in one, one pleasing note do sing; 12
 Whose speechless song, being many, seeming one,
 Sings this to thee, "Thou single wilt prove none."°

6: 1 ragged rough 3 treasure enrich 5 use lending money at interest 6 happies . . . loan makes happy those who willingly pay the loan 9 happier luckier 10 refigured represented
 7: 1 orient east; light sun 2 under i.e., earthly 7 looks on-lookers 9 highmost pitch zenith; car chariot (of Phoebus) 11 converted turned away 12 tract track 14 get beget
 8: 1 Music to hear you are music to hear; sadly gravely 7-8 confounds . . . bear i.e., destroys by playing singly the multiple role (of husband and father) that you should play 9 sweet . . . another i.e., tuned in unison (so that when struck, its partner vibrates) 14 none nothing

9

Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye
 That thou consum'st thyself in single life?
 Ah, if thou issueless° shalt hap° to die,
 The world will wail thee like a makeless° wife;
 The world will be thy widow and still° weep,
 That thou no form of thee hast left behind,
 When every private° widow well may keep,
 By children's eyes, her husband's shape in mind.
 Look what° an unthrift° in the world doth spend,
 Shifts but his° place, for still the world enjoys it;
 But beauty's waste hath in the world an end,
 And kept unused, the user so destroys it:
 No love toward others in that bosom sits
 That on himself such murd'rous shame° commits.

10

For shame, deny that thou bear'st love to any
 Who for thyself art so unprovident.
 Grant if thou wilt, thou art beloved of many,
 But that thou none lov'st is most evident;
 For thou art so possessed with murd'rous hate,
 That 'gainst thyself thou stick'st° not to conspire,
 Seeking that beauteous roof° to ruinate,
 Which to repair should be thy chief desire.
 O, change thy thought, that I may change my mind.
 Shall hate be fairer lodged than gentle love?
 Be as thy presence° is, gracious and kind,
 Or to thyself at least kind-hearted prove.
 Make thee another self for love of me,
 That beauty still° may live in thine or thee.

11

As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou grow'st
 In one of thine, from that which thou departest;
 And that fresh blood which youngly° thou bestow'st
 Thou mayst call thine, when thou from youth con-vertest°.
 Herein lives wisdom, beauty, and increase;
 Without this,° folly, age, and cold decay.
 If all were minded so, the times° should cease,
 And threescore year would make the world away.
 Let those whom Nature hath not made for store,°
 Harsh, featureless, and rude,° barrenly perish.
 Look whom° she best endowed, she gave the more;
 Which bounteous gift thou shouldst in bounty cherish.
 She carved thee for her seal,° and meant thereby
 Thou shouldst print more, not let that copy die.

9: 3 issueless childless; hap happen, chance 4 makeless mateless 5 still always 7 private individual 9 Look what whatever; unthrift prodigal 10 his its 14 murd'rous shame shameful murder

10: 6 stick'st scruple 7 roof i.e., body (which houses the spirit) 11 presence appearance 14 still always

11: 3 youngly in youth 4 convertest change 6 Without this beyond this course of action 7 times generations of men 9 for store as stock to draw upon 10 featureless, and rude ugly and unrefined 11 Look whom whomever 13 seal stamp

12

When I do count the clock that tells the time,
 And see the brave° day sunk in hideous night;
 When I behold the violet past prime,
 And sable° curls are silvered o'er with white;
 When lofty trees I see barren of leaves,
 Which erst° from heat did canopy the herd,
 And summer's green, all girded up in sheaves,
 Borne on the bier with white and bristly beard;
 Then of thy beauty do I question make,°
 That thou among the wastes of time must go,
 Since sweets and beauties do themselves forsake,
 And die as fast as they see others grow,
 And nothing 'gainst Time's scythe can make defense,
 Save breed, to brave° him when he takes thee hence.

13

O, that you were yourself, but, love, you are
 No longer yours than you yourself here live;
 Against° this coming end you should prepare,
 And your sweet semblance to some other give.
 So should that beauty which you hold in lease°
 Find no determination,° then you were Yourself again after your self's decease,
 When your sweet issue° your sweet form should bear.
 Who lets so fair a house fall to decay,
 Which husbandry° in honor might uphold
 Against the stormy gusts of winter's day
 And barren rage of death's eternal cold?
 O, none but unthrifts!° Dear my love, you know,
 You had a father; let your son say so.

14

Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck,°
 And yet methinks I have astronomy;°
 But not to tell of good or evil luck,
 Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality;
 Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell,
 Pointing° to each his° thunder, rain, and wind,
 Or say with princes if it shall go well
 By oft predict that° I in heaven find.
 But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
 And, constant stars, in them I read such art°
 As° truth and beauty shall together thrive
 If from thyself to store° thou wouldst convert:°
 Or else of thee this I prognosticate,
 Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.°

12: 2 brave splendid 4 sable black 6 erst formerly 9 question make entertain doubt 14 Save . . . brave except offspring, to defy

13: 3 Against in expectation of 5 in lease i.e., for a term 6 determination end 8 issue offspring 10 husbandry (1) thrift (2) marriage 13 unthrifts prodigals

14: 1 pluck derive 2 astronomy astrology 5 fortune . . . tell i.e., predict the exact time of each happening 6 Pointing appointing; his its 8 oft predict that frequent prediction of what 10 art knowledge 11 As as that 12 store fertility; convert turn 14 doom and date end, Judgment Day

15

When I consider everything that grows
 Holds in perfection but a little moment,
 That this huge stage presenteth naught but shows
 Whereon the stars in secret influence comment;° 4
 When I perceive that men as plants increase,
 Cheerèd and checked° even by the selfsame sky,
 Vaunt° in their youthful sap, at height decrease,
 And wear their brave state out of memory;° 8
 Then the conceit° of this inconstant stay°
 Sets you most rich in youth before my sight,
 Where wasteful Time debateth° with Decay,
 To change your day of youth to sullied night; 12
 And, all in war with Time for love of you,
 As he takes from you, I engraft° you new.

16

But wherefore do not you a mightier way
 Make war upon this bloody tyrant Time?
 And fortify yourself in your decay
 With means more blessed than my barren rhyme? 4
 Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
 And many maiden gardens, yet unset,°
 With virtuous wish would bear your living flowers,
 Much liker than your painted counterfeit.° 8
 So should the lines of life° that life repair,
 Which this time's pencil,° or my pupil pen,
 Neither in inward worth nor outward fair°
 Can make you live yourself in eyes of men. 12
 To give away yourself° keeps° yourself still,
 And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

17

Who will believe my verse in time to come
 If it were filled with your most high deserts?°
 Though yet heaven knows it is but as a tomb
 Which hides your life and shows not half your parts.° 4
 If I could write the beauty of your eyes,
 And in fresh numbers° number all your graces,
 The age to come would say, "This poet lies,
 Such heavenly touches° ne'er touched earthly faces." 8
 So should my papers, yellowed with their age,
 Be scorned, like old men of less truth than tongue,
 And your true rights° be termed a poet's rage°
 And stretchèd meter° of an antique song: 12
 But were some child of yours alive that time,
 You should live twice, in it and in my rhyme.

15: 4 in . . . comment i.e., exert a silent influence 6 Cheerèd and checked encouraged and rebuked 7 Vaunt boast 8 wear . . . memory wear out their handsome condition until it is forgotten 9 conceit idea; stay duration 11 debateth contends 14 engraft i.e., with eternizing poetry 16: 6 unset unplanted 8 counterfeit portrait 9 lines of life lineal descendants 10 time's pencil artist of the present day 11 fair beauty 13 give away yourself i.e., to beget children; keeps preserves 17: 2 deserts rhymes with "parts" 4 parts good qualities 6 numbers verses 8 touches (1) strokes of pencil or brush (2) traits 11 true rights due praise; rage inspiration 12 stretchèd meter poetic exaggeration

18

Shall I compare thee to a summer's day?
 Thou art more lovely and more temperate.
 Rough winds do shake the darling buds of May,
 And summer's lease° hath all too short a date.° 4
 Sometime too hot the eye of heaven shines,
 And often is his gold complexion dimmed;
 And every fair from fair° sometime declines,
 By chance, or nature's changing course, untrimmed;° 8
 But thy eternal summer shall not fade,
 Nor lose possession of that fair thou ow'st,°
 Nor shall Death brag thou wand'rest in his shade,
 When in eternal lines to time thou grow'st. 12
 So long as men can breathe or eyes can see,
 So long lives this, and this gives life to thee.

19

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws,
 And make the earth devour her own sweet brood;
 Pluck the keen teeth from the fierce tiger's jaws,
 And burn the long-lived phoenix° in her blood;° 4
 Make glad and sorry seasons as thou fleets,
 And do whate'er thou wilt, swift-footed Time,
 To the wide world and all her fading sweets;
 But I forbid thee one most heinous crime, 8
 O, carve not with thy hours my love's fair brow,
 Nor draw no lines there with thine antique° pen.
 Him in thy course untainted° do allow,
 For beauty's pattern to succeeding men. 12
 Yet do thy worst, old Time; despite thy wrong,
 My love shall in my verse ever live young.

20

A woman's face, with Nature's° own hand painted,
 Hast thou, the master mistress° of my passion;°
 A woman's gentle heart, but not acquainted
 With shifting change, as is false women's fashion; 4
 An eye more bright than theirs, less false in rolling,° Gilding the object whereupon it gazeth;
 A man in hue° all hues in his controlling,
 Which steals men's eyes and women's souls amazeth. 8
 And for a woman wert thou first created,
 Till Nature as she wrought thee fell a-doting,
 And by addition me of thee defeated,°
 By adding one thing to my purpose nothing. 12
 But since she pricked thee out° for women's pleasure,
 Mine be thy love, and thy love's use their treasure.

18: 4 lease allotted time; date duration 7 fair from fair beautiful thing from beauty 8 untrimmed divested of ornament 10 thou ow'st you possess

19: 4 phoenix mythical bird that periodically is consumed in flames and arises renewed (symbol of immortality); in her blood alive 10 antique (1) old (2) grotesque, antic 11 untainted untouched

20: 1 Nature's i.e., not Art's 2 master mistress supreme mistress (some editors hyphenate, indicating that in this case the "mistress" is a "master"); passion love (or possibly love poems) 5 rolling i.e., roving from one to another 7 hue appearance (both complexion and form) 11 defeated defrauded 13 pricked thee out (1) marked you out (2) added a phallus (cf. line 12)

21

So is it not with me as with that Muse,^o
 Stirred^o by a painted beauty to his verse,
 Who heaven itself for ornament doth use,
 And every fair^o with his fair doth rehearse;^o
 Making a couplement^o of proud compare^o
 With sun and moon, with earth and sea's rich gems,
 With April's first-born flowers, and all things rare
 That heaven's air in this huge rondure^o hems.^o
 O, let me true in love but truly write,
 And then believe me, my love is as fair
 As any mother's child, though not so bright
 As those gold candles fixed in heaven's air:
 Let them say more that like of hearsay well;^o
 I will not praise that^o purpose not to sell.

22

My glass shall not persuade me I am old,
 So long as youth and thou are of one date,^o
 But when in thee Time's furrows I behold,
 Then look I death my days should expiate.^o
 For all that beauty that doth cover thee
 Is but the seemly raiment of my heart,
 Which in thy breast doth live, as thine in me.
 How can I then be elder than thou art?
 O, therefore, love, be of thyself so wary
 As I, not for myself, but for thee will,
 Bearing thy heart, which I will keep so chary^o
 As tender nurse her babe from faring ill.
 Presume not on^o thy heart when mine is slain;
 Thou gav'st me thine, not to give back again.

23

As an unperfect actor on the stage,
 Who with his fear is put besides his part,
 Or some fierce thing replete with too much rage,
 Whose strength's abundance weakens his own heart;
 So I, for fear of trust,^o forget to say
 The perfect ceremony of love's right,^o
 And in mine own love's strength seem to decay,
 O'ercharged with burden of mine own love's might.
 O, let my books^o be then the eloquence
 And dumb presagers^o of my speaking breast,
 Who plead for love, and look for recompense,
 More than that tongue that more hath more expressed.^o
 O, learn to read what silent love hath writ.
 To hear with eyes belongs to love's fine wit.^o

21: 1 Muse poet 2 Stirred inspired 4 fair beautiful thing; rehearse mention, i.e., compare 5 couplement combination;
compare comparison 8 rondure sphere, world; hems encircles 13 that . . . well who delight in empty talk 14 that
 who

22: 2 of one date of the same age 4 expiate end 11 chary carefully 13 Presume not on do not lay claim to 23: 5 for . . . trust fearing to trust myself 6 right pun on rite 9 books possibly it should be emended to "looks," i.e., though silent, he hopes his looks will speak for him 10 dumb presagers silent foretellers 12 more expressed more often expressed 14 wit intelligence

24

Mine eye hath played the painter and hath steeled^o
 Thy beauty's form in table^o of my heart;
 My body is the frame wherein 'tis held,
 And perspective^o it is best painter's art,
 For through the painter must you see his skill,
 To find where your true image pictured lies,
 Which in my bosom's shop is hanging still,
 That hath his^o windows glazed^o with thine eyes.
 Now see what good turns eyes for eyes have done:
 Mine eyes have drawn thy shape, and thine for me
 Are windows to my breast, wherethrough the sun
 Delights to peep, to gaze therein on thee.
 Yet eyes this cunning^o want^o to grace their art,
 They draw but what they see, know not the heart.

25

Let those who are in favor with their stars
 Of public honor and proud titles boast,
 Whilst I whom fortune of such triumph bars,
 Unlooked for joy in that^o I honor most.
 Great princes' favorites their fair leaves spread
 But^o as the marigold at the sun's eye,
 And in themselves their pride lies buried,
 For at a frown they in their glory die.
 The painful^o warrior famoused for might,
 After a thousand victories once foiled,
 Is from the book of honor rasèd quite,^o
 And all the rest forgot for which he toiled.
 Then happy I that love and am beloved
 Where I may not remove, nor be removed.

26

Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage
 Thy merit hath my duty strongly knit,
 To thee I send this written ambassage,^o
 To witness duty, not to show my wit.^o
 Duty so great, which wit so poor as mine
 May make seem bare, in wanting^o words to show it,
 But that I hope some good conceit^o of thine
 In thy soul's thought, all naked, will bestow it;^o
 Till whatsoever star that guides my moving^o
 Points on me graciously with fair aspect,^o
 And puts apparel on my tottered^o loving
 To show me worthy of thy sweet respect.
 Then may I dare to boast how I do love thee;
 Till then, not show my head where thou mayst prove^o
 me.

24: 1 steemed engraved 2 table tablet, picture 4 perspective perhaps the idea is that the "frame," in line 3, contributes to the perspective of the picture it encloses; some editors put a colon after "perspective" 8 his its; glazed covered as with glass 13 cunning ability; want lack

25: 4 Unlooked . . . that unexpectedly enjoy that which 6
 But only 9 painful painstaking 11 rasèd quite erased entirely

26: 3 written ambassage message 4 wit mental powers 6 wanting lacking 7 conceit thought 8 all . . . it will accept (give lodging to) my bare statement 9 moving life 10 aspect astrological influence 11 tottered tattered 14 prove test

27

Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed,
 The dear repose for limbs with travel° tired,
 But then begins a journey in my head
 To work° my mind when body's work's expired; 4
 For then my thoughts, from far where I abide,
 Intend° a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
 And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
 Looking on darkness which the blind do see; 8
 Save that my soul's imaginary° sight
 Presents thy shadow° to my sightless view,
 Which like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
 Makes black night beauteous and her old face new. 12
 Lo, thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind,
 For thee, and for myself, no quiet find.

28

How can I then return in happy plight
 That am debarred the benefit of rest,
 When day's oppression is not eased by night,
 But day by night and night by day oppressed, 4
 And each, though enemies to either's reign,
 Do in consent shake hands° to torture me,
 The one by toil, the other to complain°
 How far I toil, still farther off from thee? 8
 I tell the day, to please him, thou art bright
 And dost him grace° when clouds do blot the heaven;
 So flatter I the swart-complexioned° night,
 When sparkling stars twire° not, thou gild'st the even.° 12
 But day doth daily draw my sorrows longer,
 And night doth nightly make grief's length seem stronger.

29

When, in disgrace° with Fortune and men's eyes,
 I all alone beweepe my outcast state,
 And trouble deaf heaven with my bootless° cries,
 And look upon myself and curse my fate, 4
 Wishing me like to one more rich in hope,
 Featured like him, like him° with friends possessed,
 Desiring this man's art,° and that man's scope,°
 With what I most enjoy contented least; 8
 Yet in these thoughts myself almost despising,
 Haply° I think on thee, and then my state,°
 Like to the lark at break of day arising
 From sullen° earth, sings hymns at heaven's gate; 12
 For thy sweet love rememb'ed such wealth brings,
 That then I scorn to change my state with kings.

27: 2 travel (1) labor (2) journeying 4 To work to set at work
 6 Intend set out upon 9 imaginary imaginative 10 shadow
 image

28: 6 shake hands unite 7 the other to complain i.e., the night causes me to complain 10 dost him grace i.e., shine for him 11 swart-complexioned dark-complexioned 12 twire
 twinkle (?); thou . . . even you brighten the evening

29: 1 disgrace disfavor 3 bootless useless 6 like him, like him like a second man, like a third man 7 art skill; scope mental power 10 Haply perchance; state condition 12 sullen gloomy

30

When to the sessions° of sweet silent thought
 I summon up remembrance of things past,
 I sigh the lack of many a thing I sought,
 And with old woes new wail° my dear Time's waste.° 4
 Then can I drown an eye, unused to flow,
 For precious friends hid in death's dateless° night,
 And weep afresh love's long since canceled° woe,
 And moan th' expense° of many a vanished sight; 8
 Then can I grieve at grievances foregone,°
 And heavily from woe to woe tell° o'er
 The sad account of fore-bemoanèd moan,
 Which I new pay as if not paid before. 12
 But if the while I think on thee, dear friend,
 All losses are restored and sorrows end.

31

Thy bosom is endeared° with all hearts
 Which I by lacking have supposed dead;
 And there reigns love and all love's loving parts,
 And all those friends which I thought buried. 4
 How many a holy and obsequious° tear
 Hath dear religious° love stol'n from mine eye,
 As interest° of the dead, which° now appear
 But things removed that hidden in there lie. 8
 Thou art the grave where buried love doth live,
 Hung with the trophies° of my lovers gone,
 Who all their parts° of me to thee did give;
 That due of many° now is thine alone. 12
 Their images I loved I view in thee,
 And thou, all they, hast all the all of me.

32

If thou survive my well-contented day,°
 When that churl Death my bones with dust shall cover,
 And shalt by fortune once more resurvey
 These poor rude lines of thy deceased lover, 4
 Compare them with the bett'ring° of the time,
 And though they be outstripped by every pen,
 Reserve° them for my love, not for their rhyme,
 Exceeded by the height of happier° men. 8
 O, then vouchsafe me but this loving thought:
 "Had my friend's Muse grown with this growing age,
 A dearer birth than this his love had brought,
 To march in ranks of better equipage;° 12
 But since he died, and poets better prove,
 Theirs for their style I'll read, his for his love."

30: 1 sessions sittings of a court or council 4 new wail newly bewail; my . . . waste Time's destruction of things dear to me 6 dateless endless 7 canceled i.e., because paid in full 8 ex- pend loss 9 foregone former 10 tell count

31: 1 endeared made more precious 5 obsequious funereal
 6 religious worshipful 7 interest right; which who 10 trophies memorials 11 parts shares 12 That . . . many that which was due to many

32: 1 my well-contented day i.e., my day of death, whose arrival will content me 5 bett'ring improved poetry 7 Reserve preserve 8 happier more gifted 12 of better equipage better equipped

33

Full many a glorious morning have I seen
 Flatter the mountain tops with sovereign eye,^o
 Kissing with golden face the meadows green,
 Gilding pale streams with heavenly alchemy;
 Anon^o permit the basest^o clouds to ride
 With ugly rack^o on his celestial face,
 And from the forlorn^o world his visage hide,
 Stealing unseen to west with this disgrace.
 8 Even so my sun one early morn did shine,
 With all triumphant splendor on my brow;
 But out alack,^o he was but one hour mine,
 The region cloud^o hath masked him from me now.
 12 Yet him for this my love no whit disdaineth;
 Suns of the world may stain^o when heaven's sun staineth.

34

Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day,
 And make me travel forth without my cloak,
 To let base^o clouds o'ertake me in my way,
 Hiding thy brav'ry^o in their rotten smoke?^o
 4 'Tis not enough that through the cloud thou break,
 To dry the rain on my storm-beaten face,
 For no man well of such a salve can speak,
 That heals the wound, and cures not the disgrace.
 8 Nor can thy shame give physic^o to my grief;
 Though thou repent, yet I have still the loss.
 Th' offender's sorrow lends but weak relief
 To him that bears the strong offense's cross.
 12 Ah, but those tears are pearl which thy love sheeds,^o
 And they are rich and ransom^o all ill deeds.

35

No more be grieved at that which thou hast done:
 Roses have thorns, and silver fountains mud,
 Clouds and eclipses stain^o both moon and sun,
 And loathsome canker^o lives in sweetest bud.
 4 All men make faults, and even I in this,
 Authorizing^o thy trespass with compare,^o
 Myself corrupting, salving thy amiss,^o
 Excusing thy sins more than thy sins are;^o
 8 For to thy sensual fault I bring in sense^o—
 Thy adverse party is thy advocate—
 And 'gainst myself a lawful plea commence.
 Such civil war is in my love and hate 12 That I an accessory^o needs must be
 To that sweet thief which sourly^o robs from me.

33: 2 Flatter . . . eye i.e., the sun, like a monarch's eye, flatters all that it rests upon 5 Anon soon; basest darkest 6 rack vapory clouds 7 forlorn forsaken; 11 out alack alas 12 region cloud clouds of the upper air 14 stain grow dim

34: 3 base dark 4 brav'ry finery: rotten smoke unwholesome vapors 9 physic remedy 13 sheeds sheds 14 ransom atone for

35: 3 stain darken 4 canker canker worm (that destroys flowers) 6 Authorizing justifying; with compare by comparison 7 salving thy amiss palliating your misbehavior 8 Excusing . . . are i.e., offering excuses more abundant than your sins (?) 9 to . . . sense perhaps: to your physical fault I add reason ("sense"); possibly, however, "in sense" is a pun on incense, i.e., my reason sweetens your sins 13 accessory accomplice 14 sourly bitterly

36

Let me confess that we two must be twain,
 Although our undivided loves are one.
 So shall those blots that do with me remain,
 4 Without thy help, by me be borne alone.
 In our two loves there is but one respect,^o
 Though in our lives a separable spite,^o
 Which though it alter not love's sole^o effect,
 8 Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's delight.
 I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
 Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee shame;
 Nor thou with public kindness honor me,
 Unless thou take that honor from thy name.
 12 But do not so; I love thee in such sort
 As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.^o

37

As a decrepit father takes delight
 To see his active child do deeds of youth,
 So I, made lame by Fortune's dearest^o spite,
 4 Take all my comfort of^o thy worth and truth.
 For whether beauty, birth, or wealth, or wit,^o
 Or any of these all, or all, or more,
 Entitled in their parts do crownèd sit,^o
 8 I make my love engrafted to this store.^o
 So then I am not lame, poor, nor despised Whilst that this shadow doth such substance give
 That I in thy abundance am sufficed
 And by a part of all thy glory live.
 12 Look what^o is best, that best I wish in thee.
 This wish I have, then ten times happy me!

38

How can my Muse want subject to invent,^o
 While thou dost breathe, that^o pour'st into my verse
 Thine own sweet argument,^o too excellent
 4 For every vulgar paper^o to rehearse?^o
 O, give thyself the thanks, if aught in me^o
 Worthy perusal stand against thy sight;^o
 For who's so dumb^o that cannot write to thee
 8 When thou thyself dost give invention^o light?
 Be thou the tenth Muse, ten times more in worth
 Than those old nine which rhymers invoke;^o
 And he that calls on thee, let him bring forth
 12 Eternal numbers^o to outlive long date.^o
 If my slight Muse do please these curious^o days,
 The pain^o be mine, but thine shall be the praise.

36: 5 but one respect only one regard 6 separable spite spiteful separation 7 sole unique 13–14 But . . . report this couplet is repeated in Sonnet 96 14 report reputation

37: 3 dearest most grievous 4 of from 5 wit intelligence 7 Entitled . . . sit sit as king entitled to their places 8 engrafted . . . store i.e., fused with and nourished by this abundance 13 Look what whatever

38: 1 want . . . invent lack subject matter for creation 2 that who 3 argument subject 4 vulgar paper ordinary composition; rehearse repeat 5 in me of my writings 6 stand . . . sight meet your eyes, i.e., be written for you 7 dumb mute 8 invention imagination 10 invoke invoke 12 numbers verses; long date a distant era 13 curious critical 14 pain trouble

39

O, how thy worth with manners^o may I sing,
 When thou art all the better part of me?
 What can mine own praise to mine own self bring,
 And what is't but mine own when I praise thee? 4
 Even for^o this, let us divided live,
 And our dear love lose name of single one,
 That by this separation I may give
 That due to thee which thou deserv'st alone. 8
 O absence, what a torment wouldst thou prove,
 Were it not thy sour leisure gave sweet leave
 To entertain^o the time with thoughts of love,
 Which time and thoughts so sweetly dost deceive, 12
 And that thou teachest how to make one twain
 By praising him here who doth hence remain.

40

Take all my loves, my love, yea take them all;
 What hast thou then more than thou hadst before?
 No love, my love, that thou mayst true love call;
 All mine was thine, before thou hadst this more. 4
 Then if for my love thou my love receivest,
 I cannot blame thee for^o my love thou usest;^o
 But yet be blamed, if thou this self^o deceivest
 By willful taste^o of what thyself refuseth. 8
 I do forgive thy robb'ry, gentle thief,
 Although thou steal thee all my poverty;^o
 And yet love knows it is a greater grief
 To bear love's wrong than hate's known^o injury. 12
 Lascivious grace,^o in whom all ill well shows,
 Kill me with spites; yet we must not be foes.

41

Those pretty^o wrongs that liberty^o commits,
 When I am sometime absent from thy heart,
 Thy beauty and thy years full well befits,
 For still^o temptation follows where thou art. 4
 Gentle thou art, and therefore to be won;
 Beauteous thou art, therefore to be assailed;
 And when a woman woos, what woman's son
 Will sourly leave her till she have prevailed? 8
 Ay me, but yet thou mightst my seat^o forbear,
 And chide thy beauty and thy straying youth,
 Who^o lead thee in their riot^o even there
 Where thou art forced to break a twofold truth:^o 12
 Hers, by thy beauty tempting her to thee,
 Thine, by thy beauty being false to me.

39: 1 with manners i.e., without self-praise 5 for because of 11 entertain pass

40: 6 for because; thou usest you are intimate with 7 this self i.e., your other self, the poet ("this self" is, however, often emended to "thy self") 8 willful taste capricious enjoyment 10 my poverty the little I have 12 known open 13 Lascivious grace i.e., you who have such grace even when lascivious

41: 1 pretty petty (?); liberty licentiousness 4 still always 9 seat place 11 Who which; riot revels 12 truth duty

42

That thou hast her, it is not all my grief,
 And yet it may be said I loved her dearly;
 That she hath thee is of my wailing chief,^o
 A loss in love that touches me more nearly.^o 4
 Loving offenders, thus I will excuse ye:
 Thou dost love her, because thou know'st I love her,
 And for my sake even so doth she abuse^o me,
 Suff'ring my friend for my sake to approve^o her. 8
 If I lose thee, my loss is my love's^o gain,
 And losing her, my friend hath found that loss:
 Both find each other, and I lose both twain, 12
 And both for my sake lay on me this cross.
 But here's the joy: my friend and I are one;
 Sweet flattery! Then she loves but me alone.

43

When most I wink,^o then do mine eyes best see,
 For all the day they view things unrespected,^o
 But when I sleep, in dreams they look on thee
 And, darkly bright, are bright in dark directed. 4
 Then thou, whose shadow shadows^o doth make bright,
 How would thy shadow's form^o form happy show
 To the clear day with thy much clearer light,
 When to unseeing eyes thy shade shines so! 8
 How would, I say, mine eyes be blessed made,
 By looking on thee in the living day,
 When in dead night thy fair imperfect shade
 Through heavy sleep on sightless eyes doth stay! 12
 All days are nights to see^o till I see thee,
 And nights bright days when dreams do show thee
 me.

44

If the dull substance^o of my flesh were thought,
 Injurious^o distance should not stop my way,
 For then despite of space I would be brought,
 From limits^o far remote, where^o thou dost stay. 4
 No matter then although my foot did stand
 Upon the farthest earth removed^o from thee;
 For nimble thought can jump both sea and land,
 As soon as think the place where he^o would be. 8
 But, ah, thought kills me that I am not thought,
 To leap large lengths of miles when thou art gone,
 But that so much of earth and water wrought,^o
 I must attend^o time's leisure with my moan, 12
 Receiving naught by elements so slow
 But heavy tears, badges of either's woe.^o

42: 3 of . . . chief chief cause of my grief 4 nearly closely 7 abuse deceive 8 approve test, experience sensually 9 love's mistress'

43: 1 wink close my eyes, i.e., sleep 2 unrespected unregarded 5 shadow shadows image darkness 6 thy shadow's form the body that casts your shadow 13 are . . . see look like nights

44: 1 dull substance i.e., earth and water (in contrast to air and fire) 2 Injurious malicious 4 limits districts; where to where 6 farthest earth removed earth farthest removed 8 he it 11 wrought compounded 12 attend await 14 badges . . . woe i.e., earth's because heavy, water's because wet (and perhaps because salty)

45

The other two,^o slight^o air and purging fire,
 Are both with thee, wherever I abide;
 The first my thought, the other my desire,
 These present-absent^o with swift motion slide.
 For when these quicker elements are gone
 In tender embassy of love to thee,
 My life, being made of four, with two alone^o
 Sinks down to death, oppressed with melancholy;
 Until life's composition be recured^o
 By those swift messengers^o returned from thee,
 Who even but now come back again, assured
 Of thy fair health, recounting it to me.
 This told, I joy, but then no longer glad,
 I send them back again, and straight grow sad.

46

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war
 How to divide the conquest of thy sight;^o
 Mine eye my heart thy picture's sight would bar,
 My heart mine eye the freedom of that right.
 My heart doth plead that thou in him dost lie—
 A closet never pierced with crystal eyes;
 But the defendant doth that plea deny,
 And says in him thy fair appearance lies.
 To 'cide this title is impaneled
 A quest^o of thoughts, all tenants to the heart;
 And by their verdict is determinèd
 The clear eye's moiety,^o and the dear heart's part:
 As thus—mine eye's due is thy outward part,
 And my heart's right thy inward love of heart.

47

Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took,^o
 And each doth good turns now unto the other.
 When that mine eye is famished for a look,
 Or heart in love with sighs himself doth smother,
 With my love's picture then my eye doth feast,
 And to the painted banquet bids my heart.
 Another time mine eye is my heart's guest
 And in his^o thoughts of love doth share a part.
 So, either by thy picture or my love,
 Thyself away are present still with me;
 For thou not farther than my thoughts canst move,
 And I am still^o with them, and they with thee;
 Or, if thy sleep, thy picture in my sight
 Awakes my heart to heart's and eye's delight.

45: 1 two i.e., of the four elements (see note on the first line of Sonnet 44); slight insubstantial 4 present-absent now here, now gone 7 two alone i.e., earth and water 9 recured restored to health 10 messengers i.e., fire and air

46: 2 conquest . . . sight i.e., the right to gaze on you 10 quest inquest, jury 12 moiety portion

47: 1 league is took agreement is made 8 his the heart's 12 still always

48

How careful was I, when I took my way,
 Each trifle^o under truest^o bars to thrust,
 That to my use it might unused stay
 From hands of falsehood, in sure wards^o of trust!
 But thou, to^o whom my jewels trifles are,
 Most worthy comfort, now my greatest grief,
 Thou best of dearest, and mine only care,
 Art left the prey of every vulgar^o thief.
 Thee have I not locked up in any chest,^o
 Save where thou art not, though I feel thou art,
 Within the gentle closure of my breast,
 From whence at pleasure thou mayst come and part;
 And even thence thou wilt be stol'n, I fear,
 For truth^o proves thievish for a prize so dear.

49

Against^o that time, if ever that time come,
 When I shall see thee frown on my defects,
 Whenas thy love hath cast his utmost sum,^o
 Called to that audit by advised respects;^o
 Against that time when thou shalt strangely^o pass,
 And scarcely greet me with that sun, thine eye,
 When love, converted from the thing it was,
 Shall reasons find of settled gravity.
 Against that time do I ensconce me^o here
 Within the knowledge of mine own desert,^o
 And this my hand against myself uprear,^o
 To guard the lawful reasons on thy part.
 To leave poor me thou hast the strength of laws,
 Since why to love I can allege no cause.

50

How heavy^o do I journey on the way
 When what I seek, my weary travel's end,
 Doth teach that ease and that repose to say,
 "Thus far the miles are measured from thy friend."
 The beast that bears me, tired with my woe,
 Plods dully on, to bear that weight in me,
 As if by some instinct the wretch did know
 His rider loved not speed, being made from thee.
 The bloody spur cannot provoke him on,
 That sometimes anger thrusts into his hide,
 Which heavily he answers with a groan,
 More sharp to me than spurring to his side;
 For that same groan doth put this in my mind:
 My grief lies onward and my joy behind.

48: 2 trifle i.e., in comparison with the person addressed; truest most trusty 4 wards cells 5 to in comparison with 8 vulgar common 9 chest (1) coffer (2) breast 14 truth honesty

49: 1 Against in preparation for 3 cast . . . sum computed its final reckoning 4 advised respects well-considered reasons 5 strangely with a reserved manner (like a stranger) 9 ensconce me fortify myself 10 desart desert 11 uprear raise as a witness

50: 1 heavy sadly

51

Thus can my love excuse the slow offense°
 Of my dull bearer, when from thee I speed:
 From where thou art why should I haste me thence?
 Till I return, of posting° is no need. 4
 O, what excuse will my poor beast then find
 When swift extremity° can seem but slow?
 Then should I spur, though mounted on the wind,
 In wingèd speed no motion shall I know. 8
 Then can no horse with my desire keep pace;
 Therefore desire, of perfect'st love being made,
 Shall neigh,° no dull flesh in his fiery race;
 But love, for love, thus shall excuse my jade:° 12
 Since from thee going he went willful slow,
 Towards thee I'll run and give him leave to go.°

52

So am I as the rich, whose blessed key°
 Can bring him to his sweet up-locked treasure,
 The which he will not ev'ry hour survey,
 For° blunting the fine point of seldom pleasure.° 4
 Therefore are feasts so solemn and so rare,
 Since, seldom coming, in the long year set,
 Like stones of worth they thinly placèd are,
 Or captain° jewels in the carcanet.° 8
 So is the time that keeps you as my chest,
 Or as the wardrobe which the robe doth hide,
 To make some special instant special blest,
 By new unfolding his° imprisoned pride. 12
 Blessèd are you whose worthiness gives scope,
 Being had, to triumph, being lacked, to hope.

53

What is your substance, whereof are you made,
 That millions of strange shadows° on you tend?°
 Since everyone hath, every one, one shade,°
 And you, but one, can every shadow lend.° 4
 Describe Adonis, and the counterfeit°
 Is poorly imitated after you;
 On Helen's cheek all art of beauty set,
 And you in Grecian tires° are painted new. 8
 Speak of the spring and foison° of the year;
 The one doth shadow of your beauty show,
 The other as your bounty doth appear,
 And you in every blessed shape we know. 12
 In all external grace you have some part,
 But you like none, none you, for constant heart.

51: 1 slow offense offense of slowness 4 posting riding hastily 6 swift extremity extreme swiftness 11 neigh i.e., in exultation in its ethereal speed (?) (some editors emend to "weigh" with the meaning that desire refuses to keep to the slow pace of the horse and will not weigh down the horse's "dull flesh") 12 jade nag 14 go walk

52: 1 key rhymes with "survey" 4 For for fear of; seldom pleasure pleasure infrequently enjoyed 8 captain chief; carcanet collar of jewels 12 his its

53: 2 strange shadows images not your own (the images of Adonis, Helen, spring, and autumn in the following lines); tend wait on 3 shade shadow 4 And . . . lend and you, though one, can provide a variety of good traits (?) 5 counterfeit picture 8 tires attire 9 foison rich harvest

54

O, how much more doth beauty beauteous seem,
 By that sweet ornament which truth° doth give!
 The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
 For that sweet odor which doth in it live. 4
 The canker blooms° have full as deep a dye,
 As the perfumèd tincture° of the roses,
 Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly,°
 When summer's breath their maskèd° buds discloses;° 8
 But, for° their virtue only° is their show,
 They live unwooded and unrespected° fade,
 Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so;
 Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odors made.° 12
 And so of you, beauteous and lovely youth,
 When that shall vade,° by verse distills your truth.°

55

Not marble, nor the gilded monuments
 Of princes, shall outlive this pow'rful rhyme,
 But you shall shine more bright in these contents°
 Than° unswept stone,° besmeared with sluttish time. 4
 When wasteful war shall statues overturn,
 And broils° root out the work of masonry,
 Nor Mars his° sword nor° war's quick fire shall burn°
 The living record of your memory. 8
 'Gainst death and all oblivious enmity°
 Shall you pace forth; your praise shall still find room
 Even in the eyes of all posterity
 That wear this world out° to the ending doom. 12
 So, till the judgment that° yourself arise,
 You live in this, and dwell in lovers'° eyes.

54: 2 truth fidelity 5 canker blooms dog roses (which lack the perfume of the damask rose) 6 tincture color 7 wantonly unrestrainedly 8 maskèd hidden; discloses opens 9 for because; virtue only only merit 10 unrespected unregarded 12 are . . . made perfumes are made 14 vade depart, perish; by . . . truth by means of verse your essence is distilled ("by" is often emended to "my")

55: 3 these contents i.e., the contents of this poem 4 Than than in; stone memorial tablet in the floor of a church 6 broils skirmishes 7 Nor . . . nor neither . . . nor; Mars his Mars'; burn either metaphorically governs "Mars his sword" as well as "war's quick fire," or the verb governing "Mars his sword" is omitted 9 all oblivious enmity all enmity that brings oblivion (?) enmity that brings oblivion to all (?) 12 wear . . . out outlasts this world 13 judgment that Judgment Day when 14 lovers' admirers'

56

Sweet love,° renew thy force; be it not said
 Thy edge° should blunter be than appetite,°
 Which but today by feeding is allayed,
 Tomorrow sharp'ned in his former might.
 So, love, be thou; although today thou fill
 Thy hungry eyes even till they wink° with fullness,
 Tomorrow see again, and do not kill
 The spirit of love with a perpetual dullness.
 Let this sad int'rim° like the ocean be
 Which parts the shore where two contracted new° Come daily to the banks, that, when they see
 Return of love, more blest may be the view;
 Or call it winter, which being full of care,
 Makes summer's welcome thrice more wished, more rare.

57

Being your slave, what should I do but tend°
 Upon the hours and times of your desire?
 I have no precious time at all to spend,
 Nor services to do till you require.
 Nor dare I chide the world-without-end° hour
 Whilst I, my sovereign, watch the clock for you,
 Nor think° the bitterness of absence sour
 When you have bid your servant once adieu.
 Nor dare I question° with my jealous thought
 Where you may be, or your affairs suppose,°
 But, like a sad slave, stay and think of naught
 Save where you are how happy you make those.
 So true a fool is love that in your will,°
 Though you do anything, he thinks no ill.

58

That god forbid that made me first your slave
 I should in thought control your times of pleasure,
 Or at your hand th' account of hours to crave,
 Being your vassal bound to stay your leisure.°
 O, let me suffer, being at your beck,
 Th' imprisoned absence of your liberty;°
 And patience, tame to sufferance, bide each check,°
 Without accusing you of injury.°
 Be where you list,° your charter° is so strong
 That you yourself may privilege° your time
 To what you will; to you it doth belong
 Yourself to pardon of self-doing° crime.
 I am to° wait, though waiting so be hell,
 Not blame your pleasure, be it ill or well.

56: 1 love spirit of love, i.e., not the beloved 2 edge keenness; appetite lust 6 wink shut in sleep 9 sad int'rim period of estrangement (?) 10 contracted new newly betrothed
 57: 1 tend wait 5 world-without-end seemingly endless 7 Nor think nor dare I think 9 question dispute 10 suppose guess at 13 will desire (with pun on Shakespeare's first name)
 58: 4 stay your leisure wait until you are unoccupied 6 imprisoned . . . liberty imprisonment brought to me by your freedom to absent yourself 7 And . . . check and patience, disciplined to accept suffering, endures every rebuke 8 injury injustice 9 list wish; charter privilege 10 privilege authorize 12 self-doing (1) done by one's self (2) done to one's self 13 am to must

59

If there be nothing new, but that which is
 Hath been before, how are our brains beguiled,
 Which, laboring for invention,° bear amiss
 The second burden of a former child!°
 O, that record° could with a backward look,
 Even of five hundred courses of the sun,°
 Show me your image in some antique book,
 Since mind at first in character was done;°
 That I might see what the old world could say
 To this composed wonder° of your frame;
 Whether we are mended,° or whe'r° better they,
 Or whether revolution be the same.°
 O, sure I am the wits° of former days
 To subjects worse have given admiring praise.

60

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
 So do our minutes hasten to their end;
 Each changing place with that which goes before,
 In sequent° toil all forwards do contend.
 Nativity, once in the main of light,°
 Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crowned,
 Crooked° eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
 And Time that gave doth now his gift confound.°
 Time doth transfix° the flourish set on youth,
 And delves the parallels° in beauty's brow,
 Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth,
 And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow:
 And yet to times in hope° my verse shall stand,
 Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

61

Is it thy will thy image should keep open
 My heavy eyelids to the weary night?
 Dost thou desire my slumbers should be broken
 While shadows° like to thee do mock my sight?
 Is it thy spirit that thou send'st from thee
 So far from home into my deeds to pry,
 To find out shames and idle hours in me,
 The scope and tenure of thy jealousy?°
 O no, thy love, though much, is not so great.
 It is my love that keeps mine eye awake,
 Mine own true love that doth my rest defeat,°
 To play the watchman ever for thy sake.
 For thee watch° I, whilst thou dost wake° elsewhere,
 From me far off, with others all too near.

59: 3 for invention i.e., to create something new 3-4 bear . . . child futilely bring forth only a reproduction of what had already been created 5 record memory 6 courses . . . sun years 8 Since . . . done since thought was first expressed in writing 10 composed wonder wonderful composition 11 mended bettered; whe'r whether 12 revolution . . . same i.e., cycles are repeated 13 wits men of intellect
 60: 4 sequent successive 5 Nativity . . . light i.e., the new-born, at first in the ocean (metaphorical for "great expanse" or "flood") of light 7 Crooked malignant 8 confound destroy 9 transfix destroy 10 delves the parallels i.e., digs wrinkles 13 times in hope future times
 61: 4 shadows images 8 scope . . . jealousy aim and meaning of your suspicion 11 defeat destroy 13 watch keep awake; wake revel at night (with pun on the sense of "wake up in bed")

62

Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye
 And all my soul and all my every part;
 And for this sin there is no remedy,
 It is so grounded inward in my heart.
 Methinks no face so gracious^o is as mine,
 No shape so true, no truth of such account,
 And for myself mine own worth do define,
 As^o I all other^o in all worths surmount.
 But when my glass shows me myself indeed,
 Beated and chopped^o with tanned antiquity,^o
 Mine own self-love quite contrary I read;
 Self so self-loving were iniquity.
 'Tis thee, myself,^o that for^o myself I praise,
 Painting my age with beauty of thy days.^o

63

Against^o my love shall be as I am now,
 With Time's injurious hand crushed and o'erworn;
 When hours have drained his blood and filled his brow
 With lines and wrinkles, when his youthful morn
 Hath traveled on to Age's steepy night,^o
 And all those beauties whereof now he's king
 Are vanishing, or vanished out of sight,
 Stealing away the treasure of his spring;
 For such a time do I now fortify^o
 Against confounding^o Age's cruel knife,^o
 That he shall never cut from memory
 My sweet love's beauty, though my lover's life.^o
 His beauty shall in these black lines be seen,
 And they shall live, and he in them still green.

64

When I have seen by Time's fell^o hand defaced
 The rich proud cost^o of outworn buried age,^o
 When sometime^o lofty towers I see down-razed,
 And brass eternal^o slave to mortal rage;^o
 When I have seen the hungry ocean gain
 Advantage^o on the kingdom of the shore,
 And the firm soil win of the wat'ry main,
 Increasing store with loss and loss with store;^o
 When I have seen such interchange of state,^o
 Or state itself confounded^o to decay,
 Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminare,
 That Time will come and take my love away.
 This thought is as a death, which cannot choose
 But weep to have^o that which it fears to lose.

62: 5 gracious attractive 8 As as though; other others 10 chopped creased; antiquity old age 13 myself my alter ego; that for whom as 14 days i.e., youth

63: 1 Against in expectation of the time when 5 Age's steepy night i.e., old age, which precipitously leads to the darkness of death 9 fortify build defenses 10 confounding destructive; knife i.e., Time's scythe 12 my lover's life (1) the life of my lover (2) the life of me, the lover

64: 1 fell cruel 2 cost splendor; age past times 3 sometime once 4 brass eternal everlasting brass; mortal rage the rage of mortality 6 Advantage i.e., inroads 8 Increasing . . . store i.e., now one increases in abundance ("store") with the other's loss, now one repairs its loss with abundance taken from the other 9 state condition (but in line 10 "state" = greatness) 10 confounded destroyed 14 to have because it has

65

Since^o brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea,
 But sad mortality o'ersways their power,
 How with this rage^o shall beauty hold^o a plea,
 Whose action^o is no stronger than a flower?
 O, how shall summer's honey breath hold out
 Against the wrackful^o siege of batt'ring days,
 When rocks impregnable are not so stout,
 Nor gates of steel so strong but Time decays?^o
 O, fearful meditation, where, alack,
 Shall Time's best jewel from Time's chest lie hid?^o
 Or what strong hand can hold his swift foot back,
 Or who his spoil^o of beauty can forbid?
 O, none, unless this miracle have might,
 That in black ink my love^o may still shine bright.

66

Tired with all these, for restful death I cry,
 As, to behold desert^o a beggar born,
 And needy nothing trimmed in jollity,^o
 And purest faith unhappily forsworn,^o
 And gilded^o honor shamefully misplaced,
 And maiden virtue rudely strumpeted,
 And right perfection wrongfully disgraced,^o
 And strength by limping sway^o disabled,
 And art made tongue-tied by authority,
 And folly (doctorlike^o) controlling skill,
 And simple^o truth miscalled simplicity,^o
 And captive good attending^o captain ill.
 Tired with all these, from these would I be gone,
 Save that to die, I leave my love alone.

65: 1 Since since there is neither 3 rage fury; hold maintain 4 action case, suit 6 wrackful destructive 8 decays causes them to decay 10 from . . . hid i.e., conceal itself to avoid being enclosed in Time's coffer 12 spoil plundering 14 my love my beloved

66: 2 As for instance; desert a deserving person 3 needy . . . jollity i.e., a nonentity, who is poor in virtues, festively attired 4 unhappily forsworn miserably perjured 5 gilded golden 7 disgraced disfigured 8 limping sway i.e., incompetent authority 10 doctorlike with the air of a learned man 11 simple pure; simplicity stupidity 12 attending subordinated to

67

Ah, wherefore with infection° should he live,
 And with his presence grace impiety,
 That sin by him advantage should achieve
 And lace° itself with his society?
 Why should false painting° imitate his cheek
 And steal dead seeing° of his living hue?
 Why should poor° beauty indirectly° seek Roses of shadow,° since his rose is true?
 Why should he live, now Nature bankrout° is,
 Beggared of blood to blush through lively veins,°
 For she hath no exchequer° now but his,
 And, proud° of many, lives upon his gains?
 O, him she stores, to show what wealth she had,
 In days long since, before these last so bad.

68

Thus is his cheek the map° of days outworn,°
 When beauty lived and died as flowers do now,
 Before these bastard signs of fair° were born,°
 Or durst inhabit on a living brow;
 Before the golden tresses of the dead,
 The right of sepulchers, were shorn away
 To live a second life on second head,
 Ere beauty's dead fleece made another gay.
 In him those holy antique hours° are seen,
 Without all° ornament, itself and true,
 Making no summer of another's green,
 Robbing no old to dress his beauty new;
 And him as for a map doth Nature store,°
 To show false Art what beauty was of yore.

67: 1 infection an age of corruption 4 lace adorn 5 false painting the reference is possibly to the use of cosmetics or possibly to portraiture 6 dead seeing the lifeless appearance (though perhaps "seeing" should be emended to "seeming") 7 poor second-rate; indirectly by imitation 8 of shadow painted (?) 9 bankrout bankrupt 10 Beggared . . . veins i.e., so impoverished that it can blush only with the aid of cosmetics 11 exchequer treasury (of natural beauty) 12 proud perhaps "falsely proud," but possibly should be emended to "'prived," i.e., deprived

68: 1 map representation, picture; days outworn past times 3 bastard . . . fair false appearances (cosmetics, wigs) of beauty; born with pun on borne 9 antique hours ancient times 10 all any 13 store preserve

69

Those parts° of thee that the world's eye doth view
 Want° nothing that the thought of hearts can mend;
 All tongues, the voice of souls, give thee that due,
 4 Utt'ring bare truth, even so as foes commend.° 4
 Thy outward thus with outward praise is crowned,
 But those same tongues that give thee so thine own°
 In other accents do this praise confound°
 8 By seeing farther than the eye hath shown. 8
 They look into the beauty of thy mind,
 And that in guess they measure by thy deeds;
 Then, churls, their thoughts, although their eyes were 12 kind, 12
 To thy fair flower add the rank smell of weeds;
 But why thy odor matcheth not thy show,
 The soil° is this, that thou dost common grow.

70

That thou art blamed shall not be thy defect,
 For slander's mark was ever yet the fair;
 4 The ornament of beauty is suspect,° 4
 A crow that flies in heaven's sweetest air.
 So° thou be good, slander doth but approve°
 Thy worth the greater, being wooed of time;°
 8 For canker vice° the sweetest buds doth love, 8
 And thou present'st a pure unstained prime.
 Thou hast passed by the ambush of young days,°
 Either not assailed, or victor being charged;°
 12 Yet this thy praise cannot be so thy praise 12
 To tie up envy,° evermore enlarged.°
 If some suspect of ill masked not thy show,°
 Then thou alone kingdoms of hearts shouldst owe.°

71

No longer mourn for me when I am dead
 Than you shall hear the surly sullen bell
 Give warning to the world that I am fled
 From this vile world with vilest worms to dwell. 4
 Nay, if you read this line, remember not
 The hand that writ it, for I love you so
 That I in your sweet thoughts would be forgot,
 If thinking on me then should make you woe. 8
 O, if, I say, you look upon this verse,
 When I, perhaps, compounded am with clay,
 Do not so much as my poor name rehearse,
 But let your love even with my life decay, 12
 Lest the wise world should look into your moan,
 And mock you with me after I am gone.

69: 1 parts outward qualities 2 Want lack 4 even . . . commend i.e., without exaggeration 6 so thine own i.e., your due 7 confound destroy 14 soil (1) ground (2) blemish

70: 3 ornament . . . suspect suspicion (because it always seeks out the beautiful) is an ornament of beauty 5 So provided that; approve prove 6 wooed of time i.e., tempted to evil by the present times 7 canker vice vice like a canker worm (which preys on buds) 9 ambush . . . days snares of youth 10 charged attacked 12 tie up envy overcome malice; enlarged at liberty 13 If . . . show i.e., if some suspicion of evil did not surround you 14 owe own

72

O, lest the world should task you to recite°
 What merit lived in me that you should love
 After my death, dear love, forget me quite,
 For you in me can nothing worthy prove;°
 Unless you would devise some virtuous lie,
 To do more for me than mine own desert,°
 And hang more praise upon deceased I
 Than niggard° truth would willingly impart.
 O, lest your true love may seem false in this,
 That you for love speak well of me untrue,°
 My name be° buried where my body is,
 And live no more to shame nor me nor° you;
 For I am shamed by that which I bring forth,
 And so should you, to love things nothing worth.

73

That time of year thou mayst in me behold
 When yellow leaves, or none, or few, do hang Upon those boughs which shake against the cold,
 Bare ruined choirs° where late the sweet birds sang.
 In me thou see'st the twilight of such day
 As after sunset fadeth in the west,
 Which by and by° black night doth take away,
 Death's second self,° that seals up° all in rest.
 In me thou see'st the glowing of such fire
 That° on the ashes of his youth doth lie,
 As the deathbed whereon it must expire,
 Consumed with that which it was nourished by.
 This thou perceiv'st, which makes thy love more strong,
 To love that° well which thou must leave ere long.

74

But be contented. When that fell° arrest
 Without all bail° shall carry me away,
 My life hath in this line° some interest°
 Which for memorial still° with thee shall stay.
 When thou reviewest this, thou dost review
 The very part was consecrate to thee.
 The earth can have but earth, which is his° due;
 My spirit is thine, the better part of me.
 So then thou hast but lost the dregs of life,
 The prey of worms, my body being dead;
 The coward conquest° of a wretch's° knife,
 Too base of thee to be rememberèd.
 The worth of that is that which it contains,
 And that is this, and this with thee remains.°

72: 1 recite tell 4 prove find 6 desert rhymes with "im-part" 8 niggard miserly 10 untrue untruly 11 My name be let my name be 12 nor . . . nor neither . . . nor
 73: 4 choirs the part of the chancel in which the service is performed 7 by and by shortly 8 Death's second self i.e., sleep; seals up encloses (with a suggestion of sealing a coffin) 10 That as 14 that i.e., that substance, the poet
 74: 1 fell cruel 2 Without all bail i.e., without any possibility of release 3 line verse; interest part 4 still always 7 his its 11 The coward conquest i.e., conquest that even a coward can make; wretch's Death's (or possibly Time's) 13-14 The . . . remains i.e., The value of the body is in the spirit it contains, and this spirit is in the poem and remains with you

75

So are you to my thoughts as food to life,
 Or as sweet-seasoned° showers are to the ground;
 And for the peace of you° I hold such strife
 As 'twixt a miser and his wealth is found;
 Now proud as an enjoyer,° and anon°
 Doubting° the filching age will steal his treasure;
 Now counting best to be with you alone,
 Then bettered° that the world may see my pleasure;
 Sometime all full with feasting on your sight,
 And by and by° clean° starvèd for a look;
 Possessing or pursuing no delight
 Save what is had or must from you be took.
 Thus do I pine and surfeit day by day,
 Or gluttoning on all, or° all away.

76

Why is my verse so barren of new pride,°
 So far from variation or quick change?
 Why with the time° do I not glance aside
 To new-found methods and to compounds° strange?
 Why write I still all one,° ever the same,
 And keep invention° in a noted weed,°
 That every word doth almost tell my name,
 Showing their birth, and where° they did proceed?
 O, know, sweet love, I always write of you,
 And you and love are still my argument.°
 So all my best is dressing old words new,
 Spending again what is already spent:
 For as the sun is daily new and old,
 So is my love still telling what is told.

77

Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear,
 Thy dial° how thy precious minutes waste;
 The vacant leaves° thy mind's imprint will bear,
 And of this book this learning mayst thou taste.
 The wrinkles which thy glass will truly show,
 Of mouthèd° graves, will give thee memory;°
 Thou by thy dial's shady stealth° mayst know
 Time's thievish progress to eternity.
 Look what° thy memory cannot contain,
 Commit to these waste blanks,° and thou shalt find
 Those children° nursed, delivered from thy brain,
 To take a new acquaintance of thy mind.
 These offices,° so oft as thou wilt look,
 Shall profit thee, and much enrich thy book.

75: 2 sweet-seasoned of the sweet season, spring 3 peace of you i.e., the peace I find because of you 5 enjoyer possessor; anon soon 6 Doubting fearing 8 bettered made happier 10 by and by soon; clean wholly 14 Or . . . or either . . . or
 76: 1 pride adornment 3 with the time (1) following the present fashion (2) with the passage of time 4 compounds (1) compositions (2) compound words 5 still all one always one way 6 invention imaginative creation; noted weed well-known dress 8 where whence 10 argument theme
 77: 2 dial sundial 3 vacant leaves i.e., the blank leaves (of a memorandum book, or "table" as in Sonnet 122) 6 mouthèd i.e., gaping, openmouthed; give thee memory remind you 7 shady stealth slowly moving shadow 9 Look what whatever 10 waste blanks blank pages 11 children i.e., your thoughts 13 offices duties (of looking at the mirror, the sundial, and the thoughts in the book)

78

So oft have I invoked thee for my Muse
 And found such fair assistance in my verse
 As° every alien pen° hath got my use°
 And under thee° their poesy disperse.
 Thine eyes, that taught the dumb on high° to sing
 And heavy ignorance aloft to fly,
 Have added feathers to the learned's wing,
 And given grace° a double majesty.
 Yet be most proud of that which I compile,° Whose influence° is thine, and born of thee.
 In others' works thou dost but mend the style,
 And arts with thy sweet graces graced be;
 But thou art all my art and dost advance
 As high as learning my rude° ignorance.

79

Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid,
 My verse alone had all thy gentle grace;
 But now my gracious numbers° are decayed,
 And my sick Muse doth give another place.°
 I grant, sweet love, thy lovely argument°
 Deserves the travail of a worthier pen,
 Yet what of thee thy poet doth invent
 He robs thee of, and pays it thee again.
 He lends thee virtue, and he stole that word
 From thy behavior; beauty doth he give,
 And found it in thy cheek; he can afford°
 No praise to thee but what in thee doth live.
 Then thank him not for that which he doth say,
 Since what he owes° thee thou thyself dost pay.

80

O, how I faint° when I of you do write,
 Knowing a better spirit° doth use your name,
 And in the praise thereof spends all his might,
 To make me tongue-tied speaking of your fame.
 But since your worth, wide as the ocean is,
 The humble° as° the proudest sail doth bear,
 My saucy bark, inferior far to his,
 On your broad main doth willfully° appear.
 Your shallowest help will hold me up afloat
 Whilst he upon your soundless° deep doth ride;
 Or, being wracked,° I am a worthless boat,°
 He of tall building,° and of goodly pride.°
 Then if he thrive, and I be cast away,
 The worst was this: my love was my decay.°

78: 3 As that; alien pen pen belonging to others; got my use adopted my practice (either style or subject matter) 4 under thee i.e., with you as patron 5 on high (1) aloud (2) loftily 8 grace excellence 9 compile write 10 influence inspiration 14 rude unrefined

79: 3 gracious numbers pleasing verses 4 give another place yield to another 5 thy lovely argument the theme of your loveliness 11 afford offer 14 owes poems are regarded as the poet's repayment of obligation; see Sonnet 83, line 4

80: 1 faint waver 2 better spirit greater genius 6 humble humblest; as as well as 8 willfully boldly 10 soundless bottomless 11 wracked wrecked; boat small vessel (in contrast to a ship) 12 tall building sturdy construction; pride magnificence 14 decay cause of ruin

81

Or° I shall live your epitaph to make,
 Or you survive when I in earth am rotten.
 From hence° your memory death cannot take,
 Although in me each part° will be forgotten.
 Your name from hence° immortal life shall have,
 Though I, once gone, to all the world must die.
 The earth can yield me but a common grave,
 When you entombèd in men's eyes shall lie.
 Your monument shall be my gentle verse,
 Which eyes not yet created shall o'erread,
 And tongues to be your being shall rehearse°
 When all the breathers of this world are dead.
 You still shall live—such virtue° hath my pen—
 Where breath° most breathes, even in the mouths of men.

82

I grant thou wert not married to° my Muse,
 And therefore mayst without attaint° o'erlook°
 The dedicated° words which writers use
 Of their fair subject, blessing every book.
 Thou art as fair in knowledge as in hue,°
 Finding thy worth a limit° past my praise;
 And therefore art enforced to seek anew
 Some fresher stamp° of the time-bettering° days.
 And do so, love; yet when they have devised
 What strained touches rhetoric can lend,
 Thou, truly fair,° wert truly sympathized°
 In true plain words by thy true-telling friend:
 And their gross painting might be better used
 Where cheeks need blood; in thee it is abused.

83

I never saw that you did painting need,
 And therefore to your fair° no painting set;
 I found, or thought I found, you did exceed
 The barren tender of a poet's debt;°
 And therefore have I slept in your report,°
 That you yourself, being extant, well might show
 How far a modern° quill doth come too short,
 Speaking of worth, what worth in you doth grow.
 This silence for my sin you did impute,
 Which shall be most my glory, being dumb;
 For I impair not beauty, being mute,
 When others would give life and bring a tomb.
 There lives more life in one of your fair eyes
 Than both your poets can in praise devise.

81: 1 Or either 3 From hence from these poems (?) from the earth (?) 4 in . . . part all of my qualities 5 from hence from these poems 11 rehearse repeat 13 virtue power 14 breath life

82: 1 married to closely joined to 2 attaint dishonor; o'erlook read over 3 dedicated devoted (with a pun on dedications prefixed to books) 5 hue (1) complexion (2) figure 6 limit reach 8 stamp impression; time-bettering improving 11 fair beautiful; truly sympathized represented to the life

83: 2 fair beauty 4 The . . . debt i.e., the worthless offer that the poet is obliged to make 5 slept . . . report refrained from praising you 7 modern trivial

84

Who is it that says most, which can say more°
 Than this rich praise, that you alone are you,
 In whose confine immurèd is the store
 Which should example where your equal grew?° 4
 Lean penury within that pen doth dwell,
 That to his° subject lends not some small glory,
 But he that writes of you, if he can tell
 That you are you, so dignifies his story. 8
 Let him but copy what in you is writ,
 Not making worse what nature made so clear,°
 And such a counterpart shall fame his wit,°
 Making his style admirèd everywhere. 12
 You to your beauteous blessings add a curse,
 Being fond on° praise, which makes your praises worse.

85

My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her still°
 While comments of your praise, richly compiled,
 Reserve their character with golden quill°
 And precious phrase by all the Muses filed.° 4
 I think good thoughts whilst other° write good words,
 And, like unlettered clerk, still° cry "Amen"
 To every hymn that able spirit affords°
 In polished form of well-refinèd pen. 8
 Hearing you praised, I say, "'Tis so, 'tis true,"
 And to the most° of praise add something more;
 But that is in my thought, whose love to you,
 Though words come hindmost, holds his rank before. 12
 Then others for the breath of words respect,
 Me for my dumb thoughts, speaking in effect.°

84: 1 Who . . . more i.e., who, having said the utmost, can say more 3-4 In . . . grew in whom is stored all the abundance which would have to serve as a model for any equal 6 his its 10 clear radiant 11 fame his wit make famous his mind 14 fond on foolishly enamored of (but the sense seemed called for here is that the patron's excellence is such that it wreaks havoc with the poets who seek to praise him)
 85: 1 in . . . still is politely silent 2-3 While . . . quill while comments in your praise, richly composed with golden pen, preserve their features ("character" means both "writing" and "traits," "features") 4 filed polished 5 other others 6 still always 7 able spirit affords i.e., competent poets write 10 most utmost 13-14 Then . . . effect i.e., then take notice of other poets for their spoken words (but in "breath" there is a suggestion of their insubstantiality), and of me for my silent thoughts, which, by their silence, speak

86

Was it the proud full sail of his° great verse,
 Bound for the prize of all too precious you,
 That did my ripe thoughts in my brain inhearse,°
 Making their tomb the womb wherein they grew? 4
 Was it his spirit, by spirits taught to write
 Above a mortal pitch, that struck me dead?°
 No, neither he, nor his compeers by night
 Giving him aid, my verse astonished.° 8
 He, nor that affable familiar ghost°
 Which nightly gulls him with intelligence,°
 As victors, of my silence cannot boast;
 I was not sick of any fear from thence. 12
 But when your countenance filled up his line,°
 Then lacked I matter, that enfeebled mine.

87

Farewell, thou art too dear for my possessing,
 And like enough thou know'st thy estimate.°
 The charter° of thy worth gives thee releasing;
 My bonds in° thee are all determinate.° 4
 For how do I hold thee but by thy granting,
 And for that riches where is my deserving?
 The cause of this fair gift in me is wanting,°
 And so my patent° back again is swerving.° 8
 Thyself thou gav'st, thy own worth then not knowing,
 Or me, to whom thou gav'st it, else mistaking;
 So thy great gift, upon misprision growing,°
 Comes home again, on better judgment making. 12
 Thus have I had thee as a dream doth flatter,
 In sleep a king, but waking no such matter.

88

When thou shalt be disposed to set me light°
 And place my merit in the eye of scorn,
 Upon thy side against myself I'll fight
 And prove thee virtuous, though thou art forsworn. 4
 With mine own weakness being best acquainted,
 Upon thy part I can set down a story
 Of faults concealed wherein I am attainted,
 That° thou in losing me shall win much glory. 8
 And I by this will be a gainer too,
 For, bending all my loving thoughts on thee,
 The injuries that to myself I do,
 Doing thee vantage,° double-vantage me. 12
 Such is my love, to thee I so belong,
 That for thy right° myself will bear all wrong.

86: 1 his a rival poet's 3 inhearse enclose as in a coffin 6 dead silent 8 astonished struck dumb 9 familiar ghost assisting spirit 10 gulls . . . intelligence deceives him with rumors (?) 13 countenance . . . line (1) beauty was the subject of his verse (2) approval polished his verse (if the quarto's "fild" is printed "filed" instead of "filled")
 87: 2 estimate value 3 charter privilege 4 bonds in claims on; determinate expired 7 wanting lacking 8 patent privilege; back . . . swerving returns (to you) 11 upon misprision growing arising from a mistake
 88: 1 set me light value me little 8 That so that 12 vantage advantage 14 right (1) good (2) privilege

89

Say° that thou didst forsake me for some fault,
 And I will comment upon that offense.
 Speak of my lameness, and I straight will halt,°
 Against thy reasons° making no defense. 4
 Thou canst not, love, disgrace° me half so ill,
 To set a form upon desired change,°
 As I'll myself disgrace,° knowing thy will.
 I will acquaintance° strangle and look strange;
 Be absent from thy walks, and in my tongue
 Thy sweet beloved name no more shall dwell,
 Lest I, too much profane, should do it wrong
 And haply° of our old acquaintance tell. 12
 For thee, against myself I'll vow debate,°
 For I must ne'er love him whom thou dost hate.

90

Then hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now;
 Now, while the world is bent my deeds to cross,
 Join with the spite of fortune, make me bow,
 And do not drop in for an after-loss.° 4
 Ah, do not, when my heart hath 'scaped this sorrow,
 Come in the rearward of a conquered woe;°
 Give not a windy night a rainy morrow,
 To linger out° a purposed° overthrow. 8
 If thou wilt leave me, do not leave me last,
 When other petty griefs have done their spite,
 But in the onset come; so shall I taste
 At first the very worst of fortune's might, 12
 And other strains° of woe, which now seem woe,
 Compared with loss of thee will not seem so.

91

Some glory in their birth, some in their skill,
 Some in their wealth, some in their body's force,
 Some in their garments, though newfangled ill,°
 Some in their hawks and hounds, some in their horse;° 4
 And every humor° hath his° adjunct pleasure,
 Wherein it finds a joy above the rest,
 But these particulars are not my measure;°
 All these I better in one general best. 8
 Thy love is better than high birth to me,
 Richer than wealth, prouder than garments' cost,
 Of more delight than hawks or horses be;
 And having thee, of all men's pride° I boast: 12
 Wretched in this alone, that thou mayst take
 All this away, and me most wretched make.

92

But do thy worst to steal thyself away,
 For term of life thou art assurèd mine,
 And life no longer than thy love will stay,
 For it depends upon that love of thine. 4
 Then need I not to fear the worst of wrongs,
 When in the least of them° my life hath end.
 I see a better state to me belongs
 Than that which on thy humor° doth depend. 8
 Thou canst not vex me with inconstant mind,
 Since that my life on thy revolt doth lie.°
 O, what a happy title° do I find,
 Happy to have thy love, happy to die! 12
 But what's so blessèd-fair that fears no blot?
 Thou mayst be false, and yet I know it not.

93

So shall I live, supposing thou art true,
 Like a deceivèd husband; so love's face
 May still seem love to me, though altered new,
 Thy looks with me, thy heart in other place. 4
 For there can live no hatred in thine eye;
 Therefore in that I cannot know thy change.
 In many's looks, the false heart's history
 Is writ in moods and frowns and wrinkles strange, 8
 But heaven in thy creation did decree
 That in thy face sweet love should ever dwell;
 Whate'er thy thoughts or thy heart's workings be,
 Thy looks should nothing thence but sweetness tell. 12
 How like Eve's apple doth thy beauty grow
 If thy sweet virtue answer not thy show.

94

They that have pow'r to hurt and will do none,
 That do not do the thing they most do show,°
 Who, moving others, are themselves as stone,
 Unmovèd, cold, and to temptation slow; 4
 They rightly do inherit heaven's graces
 And husband° nature's riches from expense;°
 They are the lords and owners of their faces,
 Others but stewards° of their excellence. 8
 The summer's flow'r is to the summer sweet,
 Though to itself it only live and die;
 But if that flow'r with base infection meet,
 The basest weed outbraves his° dignity: 12
 For sweetest things turn sourest by their deeds;
 Lilies that fester smell far worse than weeds.

89: 1 Say i.e., assume 3 halt limp 4 reasons arguments 5 disgrace discredit 6 To . . . change to give a good appearance to the change you desire (?) 7 disgrace disfigure 8 acquaintance i.e., familiarity 12 haply by chance 13 debate contention

90: 4 after-loss later loss 6 Come . . . woe i.e., come belatedly when I have conquered my sorrow 8 linger out prolong; purposed intended 13 strains kinds

91: 3 newfangled ill fashionably ugly 4 horse horses 5 humor temperament; his its 7 measure standard (of happiness) 12 all men's pride all that men take pride in

92: 6 the . . . them i.e., any sign that the friend's love is cooling 8 humor caprice 10 Since . . . lie since my life ends if you desert me 11 happy title title to happiness 94: 2 do show (1) seem to do (?) (2) show they could do (?) 6 husband manage prudently; expense loss 8 stewards custodians 12 outbraves his surpasses its

95

How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame
Which, like a canker^o in the fragrant rose,
Doth spot the beauty of thy budding name!
O, in what sweets dost thou thy sins enclose!
That tongue that tells the story of thy days,
Making lascivious comments on thy sport,^o
Cannot dispraise, but in a kind of praise;
Naming thy name blesses an ill report.
O, what a mansion have those vices got
Which for their habitation chose out thee,
Where beauty's veil doth cover every blot,
And all things turns to fair that eyes can see!
Take heed, dear heart, of this large privilege;
The hardest knife ill-used doth lose his^o edge.

96

Some say thy fault is youth, some wantonness,
Some say thy grace is youth and gentle sport;^o
Both grace and faults are loved of more and less;^o
Thou mak'st faults graces that to thee resort.
As on the finger of a thronèd queen
The basest jewel will be well esteemed,
So are those errors that in thee are seen
To truths translated^o and for true things deemed.
How many lambs might the stern^o wolf betray,
If like a lamb he could his looks translate;
How many gazers mightst thou lead away,
If thou wouldst use the strength of all thy state!^o
But do not so; I love thee in such sort
As, thou being mine, mine is thy good report.^o

97

How like a winter hath my absence been
From thee, the pleasure of the fleeting year!^o
What freezings have I felt, what dark days seen,
What old December's bareness everywhere!
And yet this time removed was summer's time,
The teeming^o autumn, big with rich increase,
Bearing the wanton burden of the prime,^o
Like widowed wombs after their lords' decease.
Yet this abundant issue^o seemed to me
But hope of orphans and unfathered fruit;
For summer and his^o pleasures wait on thee,
And, thou away, the very birds are mute;
Or, if they sing, 'tis with so dull a cheer,
That leaves look pale, dreading the winter's near.

95: 2 canker canker worm (that feeds on blossoms) 6 sport amorous dalliance 14 his its

96: 2 gentle sport amorous dalliance (a more favorable interpretation of the "wantonness" of line 1) 3 of . . . less by people high and low 8 translated transformed 9 stern cruel 12 state eminent position 13-14 this couplet ends Sonnet 36 14 report reputation

97: 2 pleasure . . . year i.e., the summer (normally the pleasant part of the year, but like a winter because of the friend's absence) 6 teeming pregnant 7 Bearing . . . prime i.e., bearing the load conceived in the wantonness of the spring ("prime" = spring) 9 issue offspring 11 his its

98

From you have I been absent in the spring,
When proud-pied^o April, dressed in all his trim,^o
Hath put a spirit of youth in everything,
That^o heavy Saturn^o laughed and leaped with him, 4
Yet nor the lays^o of birds, nor^o the sweet smell
Of different flowers in odor and in hue,
Could make me any summer's story^o tell,
Or from their proud lap pluck them where they grew. 8
Nor did I wonder at the lily's white,
Nor praise the deep vermilion in the rose;
They were but sweet, but figures of delight,
Drawn after you, you pattern of all those. 12
Yet seemed it winter still, and, you away,
As with your shadow^o I with these did play.

99

The forward^o violet thus did I chide:
Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that smells
If not from my love's breath? The purple^o pride^o
Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells 4
In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dyed.
The lily I condemnèd for thy hand,^o
And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair; 8
The roses fearfully^o on thorns did stand, 8
One blushing shame, another white despair;
A third, nor red nor white, had stol'n of both,
And to his robb'ry had annexed thy breath;
But for his theft, in pride of all his growth 12
A vengeful canker eat^o him up to death.
More flowers I noted, yet I none could see,
But sweet or color it had stol'n from thee.

100

Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long
To speak of that which gives thee all thy might?
Spend'st thou thy fury^o on some worthless song, 4
Dark'ning thy pow'r to lend base subjects light? 4
Return, forgetful Muse, and straight redeem
In gentle numbers^o time so idly spent,
Sing to the ear that doth thy lays^o esteem, 8
And gives thy pen both skill and argument.^o 8
Rise, resty^o Muse, my love's sweet face survey,
If^o Time have any wrinkle graven there;
If any, be a satire to decay^o 12
And make Time's spoils despised everywhere. 12
Give my love fame faster than Time wastes life;
So thou prevent'st his scythe and crooked knife.

98: 2 proud-pied gorgeously variegated; trim ornamental dress 4 That so that; heavy Saturn the planet Saturn was thought to cause gloominess 5 lays songs; nor . . . nor neither . . . nor 7 summer's story i.e., pleasant stories suitable for summer ("a sad tale's best for winter") 14 shadow portrait

99: 1 forward early 3 purple Shakespeare often does not distinguish between purple and crimson; pride splendor 6 condemnèd . . . hand condemned for stealing the whiteness of your hand 8 fearfully uneasily 13 canker eat canker worm ate

100: 3 fury poetic enthusiasm 6 numbers verses 7 lays songs 8 argument subject 9 resty torpid 10 If to see if 11 be . . . decay satirize decay

101

O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends
 For thy neglect of truth in beauty dyed?
 Both truth and beauty on my love^o depends;
 So dost thou too, and therein dignified.^o
 4 Make answer, Muse, wilt thou not haply^o say,
 "Truth needs no color,^o with his color fixed,^o
 Beauty no pencil, beauty's truth to lay;^o
 But best is best, if never intermixed?"^o
 8 Because he needs no praise, wilt thou be dumb?
 Excuse not silence so, for't lies in thee
 To make him much outlive a gilded tomb,
 And to be praised of ages yet to be.
 12 Then do thy office,^o Muse; I teach thee how
 To make him seem, long hence, as he shows now.

102

My love is strength'ned, though more weak in seeming;
 I love not less, though less the show^o appear.
 That love is merchandized^o whose rich esteeming^o
 The owner's tongue doth publish everywhere.
 4 Our love was new, and then but in the spring,
 When I was wont to greet it with my lays,^o
 As Philomel^o in summer's front^o doth sing
 And stops her pipe in growth of riper^o days.
 8 Not that the summer is less pleasant now
 Than when her mournful hymns did hush the night,
 But that^o wild music burdens every bough,
 And sweets grown common lose their dear delight.
 12 Therefore, like her, I sometime hold my tongue,
 Because I would not dull you with my song.

103

Alack, what poverty^o my Muse brings forth,
 That, having such a scope to show her pride,^o
 The argument^o all bare^o is of more worth
 Than when it hath my added praise beside.
 4 O, blame me not if I no more can write!
 Look in your glass, and there appears a face
 That overgoes my blunt invention^o quite,
 Dulling my lines and doing me disgrace.^o
 8 Were it not sinful then, striving to mend,^o
 To mar the subject that before was well?
 For to no other pass^o my verses tend
 Than of your graces and your gifts to tell;
 12 And more, much more, than in my verse can sit
 Your own glass shows you when you look in it.

101: 3 love beloved 4 dignified you are dignified 5 haply perchance 6 color artificial color, disguise; his color fixed its unchangeable color 7 to lay i.e., to put on canvas 8 intermixed i.e., with the inadequate words of the Muse 13 do thy office perform your duty

102: 2 show outward manifestation 3 merchandized offered for sale, hawked; esteeming value 6 lays songs 7 Philomel the nightingale; front forefront 8 riper later 11 But that i.e., but it seems so because

103: 1 poverty inferior matter 2 pride splendor 3 argument theme; all bare i.e., of itself 7 overgoes . . . invention exceeds my awkward creation 8 disgrace discredit 9 mend improve 11 pass purpose

104

To me, fair friend, you never can be old,
 For as you were when first your eye I eyed,
 Such seems your beauty still. Three winters cold
 4 Have from the forests shook three summers' pride,^o 4
 Three beauteous springs to yellow autumn turned
 In process of the seasons have I seen,
 Three April perfumes in three hot Junes burned,
 8 Since first I saw you fresh, which yet are green. 8
 Ah, yet doth beauty, like a dial hand,
 Steal from his figure,^o and no pace perceived;
 So your sweet hue,^o which methinks still^o doth stand,
 12 Hath motion, and mine eye may be deceived; 12
 For fear of which, hear this, thou age unbred:^o
 Ere you were born was beauty's summer dead.

105

Let not my love be called idolatry,
 Nor my beloved as an idol show,
 Since all alike my songs and praises be
 4 To one, of one, still^o such, and ever so. 4
 Kind^o is my love today, tomorrow kind,
 Still constant in a wondrous excellence;
 Therefore my verse, to constancy confined,
 8 One thing expressing, leaves out difference.^o 8
 Fair,^o kind, and true is all my argument,^o
 Fair, kind, and true, varying to other words;
 And in this change is my invention spent,^o
 12 Three themes in one, which wondrous scope affords. 12
 Fair, kind, and true have often lived alone,
 Which three till now never kept seat in one.

106

When in the chronicle of wasted^o time
 I see descriptions of the fairest wights,^o
 And beauty making beautiful old rhyme
 4 In praise of ladies dead and lovely^o knights; 4
 Then, in the blazon^o of sweet beauty's best,
 Of hand, of foot, of lip, of eye, of brow,
 I see their antique pen would have expressed
 8 Even such a beauty as you master now. 8
 So all their praises are but prophecies
 Of this our time, all you prefiguring,
 And, for^o they looked but with divining^o eyes,
 12 They had not still^o enough your worth to sing: 12
 For^o we, which now behold these present days,
 Have eyes to wonder, but lack tongues to praise.

104: 4 pride splendor 10 his figure its numeral (with a pun on figure = the friend's appearance) 11 sweet hue fair appearance; still (1) motionless (2) always, forever 13 unbred unborn

105: 4 still always 5 Kind naturally benevolent 8 difference variety 9 Fair beautiful; argument theme 11 And . . . spent i.e., and in variations on this theme I expend all my imagination

106: 1 wasted past 2 wights people 4 lovely attractive 5 blazon commemorative description 11 for because; divining guessing 12 still yet (the common emendation to "skill" is unnecessary) 13 For for even

107

Not mine own fears nor the prophetic soul
 Of the wide world dreaming on things to come
 Can yet the lease[°] of my true love control,
 Supposed as forfeit to a confined doom.[°]
 The mortal moon hath her eclipse endured,[°]
 And the sad augurs mock their own presage,
 Incertainties now crown themselves assured,[°]
 And peace proclaims olives of endless age.
 Now with the drops of this most balmy time
 My love looks fresh, and Death to me subscribes,[°]
 Since, spite of him, I'll live in this poor rhyme,
 While he insults[°] o'er dull and speechless tribes:
 And thou in this shalt find thy monument,
 When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent.[°]

108

What's in the brain that ink may character[°]
 Which hath not figured[°] to thee my true spirit?
 What's new to speak, what now to register,
 That may express my love or thy dear merit?
 Nothing, sweet boy, but yet, like prayers divine,
 I must each day say o'er the very same;
 Counting no old thing old, thou mine, I thine,
 Even as when first I hallowed thy fair name.
 So that eternal love in love's fresh case[°]
 Weighs not[°] the dust and injury of age,
 Nor gives to necessary wrinkles place,
 But makes antiquity for aye his page,[°]
 Finding the first conceit[°] of love there bred
 Where time and outward form would show it dead.

109

O, never say that I was false of heart,
 Though absence seemed my flame to qualify.[°]
 As easy might I from myself depart
 As from my soul, which in thy breast doth lie.
 That is my home of love; if I have ranged,[°]
 Like him that travels, I return again,
 Just[°] to the time, not with the time exchanged,[°]
 So that myself bring water for my stain.
 Never believe, though in my nature reigned
 All frailties that besiege all kinds of blood,[°]
 That it could so preposterously be stained
 To leave for nothing all thy sum of good;
 For nothing this wide universe I call
 Save thou, my rose; in it thou art my all.

107: 3 lease allotted time 4 Supposed . . . doom i.e., though it is thought doomed to expire after a limited time 5 The . . . endured numerous commentators claim that this line dates the sonnet; among interpretations are: 1588, when the Spanish Armada, thought to have assumed a crescent formation, was destroyed; 1595, when the moon underwent a total eclipse; 1595, when Queen Elizabeth I survived a critical period in her horoscope; 1599, when Queen Elizabeth survived an illness 6-7 And . . . assured and the prophets of gloom are mocked by their own predictions now that uncertainties yield to assurance (?) 10 to me subscribes acknowledges me as his superior 12 insults triumphs 14 spent consumed

108: 1 character write 2 figured shown 9 fresh case youthful appearance 10 Weighs not cares not for 12 for . . . page forever his servant 13 conceit conception

109: 2 qualify moderate 5 ranged wandered 7 Just punctual; exchanged changed 10 blood flesh, temperament

110

Alas, 'tis true I have gone here and there
 And made myself a motley[°] to the view,
 Gored[°] mine own thoughts, sold cheap what is most dear,
 Made old offenses of affections[°] new.
 Most true it is that I have looked on truth[°]
 Askance and strangely;[°] but, by all above,
 These blenches[°] gave my heart another youth,
 And worse essays[°] proved thee my best of love.
 Now all is done, have what shall have no end.[°]
 Mine appetite I never more will grind
 On newer proof,[°] to try[°] an older friend,
 A god in love, to whom I am confined.
 Then give me welcome, next[°] my heaven the best,
 Even to thy pure and most most loving breast.

111

O, for my sake do you with Fortune chide,
 The guilty goddess of my harmful deeds,
 That[°] did not better for my life[°] provide
 Than public means which public manners breeds.[°]
 Thence comes it that my name receives a brand,[°]
 And almost thence my nature is subdued[°]
 To what it works in, like the dyer's hand.
 Pity me then, and wish I were renewed,
 Whilst, like a willing patient, I will drink
 Potions of eisel[°] 'gainst my strong infection;
 No bitterness that I will bitter think,
 Nor double penance, to correct correction.
 Pity me then, dear friend, and I assure ye
 Even that your pity is enough to cure me.

112

Your love and pity doth th' impression fill,[°]
 Which vulgar scandal stamped[°] upon my brow;
 For what care I who calls me well or ill,
 So you o'er-green my bad, my good allow?[°]
 You are my all the world, and I must strive
 To know my shames[°] and praises from your tongue;
 None else to me, nor I to none alive,
 That my steeled sense or changes right or wrong.[°]
 In so profound[°] abysm I throw all care
 Of others' voices, that my adder's sense[°]
 To critic and to flatterer stoppèd are.
 Mark how with my neglect I do dispense:[°]
 You are so strongly in my purpose bred,[°]
 That all the world besides methinks are dead.[°]

110: 2 motley jester 3 Gored wounded 4 affections passions 5 truth fidelity 6 strangely in a reserved manner 7 blenches side glances (?) 8 worse essays trials of worse friendships (?) 9 have what . . . end take what shall be eternal 11 proof experiment; try test 13 next next to 111: 3 That who; life livelihood 4 Than . . . breeds than earning a livelihood by satisfying the public, which engenders vulgar manners 5 brand stigma 6 subdued subjected 10 eisel vinegar (used as a preventative against the plague) 112: 1 doth . . . fill effaces the scar 2 stamped allusion to branding felons 4 allow approve 6 shames faults 7-8 None else . . . wrong only you can change my sense of what is right and wrong (?) 9 profound deep 10 adder's sense i.e., deaf ears (adders were thought to be deaf) 12 Mark . . . dispense listen to how I excuse ("dispense with") my neglect (i.e., of others) 13 in . . . bred grown in my mind 14 That . . . dead that I think only you have life

113

Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind,
 And that which governs me to go about
 Doth part his^o function and is partly blind,^o
 Seems seeing, but effectually^o is out;
 For it no form delivers to the heart
 Of bird, of flow'r, or shape, which it doth latch.^o
 Of his^o quick^o objects hath the mind no part,
 Nor his^o own vision holds what it doth catch;
 For if it see the rud'st or gentlest sight,
 The most sweet favor^o or deformèd'st creature,
 The mountain, or the sea, the day, or night,
 The crow, or dove, it shapes them to your feature.
 Incapable of^o more, replete with you,
 My most true^o mind thus maketh mine eye untrue.

114

Or whether^o doth my mind, being crowned with you,^o
 Drink up the monarch's plague, this flattery?^o
 Or whether^o shall I say mine eye saith true,
 And that your love taught it this alchemy,
 To make of monsters, and things indigest,^o
 Such cherubins^o as your sweet self resemble,
 Creating every bad a perfect best
 As fast as objects to his beams assemble?^o
 O, 'tis the first, 'tis flatt'ry in my seeing,
 And my great mind most kingly drinks it up.
 Mine eye well knows what with his gust is 'greeing,^o
 And to his palate doth prepare the cup.
 If it be poisoned, 'tis the lesser sin
 That^o mine eye loves it and doth first begin.

115

Those lines that I before have writ to lie,
 Even those that said I could not love you dearer.
 Yet then my judgment knew no reason why
 My most full flame should afterwards burn clearer.
 But reckoning Time, whose millioned accidents^o
 Creep in 'twixt vows and change decrees of kings,
 Tan^o sacred beauty, blunt the sharp'st intents,
 Divert^o strong minds to th' course of alt'ring things.
 Alas, why, fearing of Time's tyranny,
 Might I not then say, "Now I love you best,"
 When I was certain o'er incertainty,
 Crowning^o the present, doubting of the rest?
 Love is a babe; then^o might I not say so,^o
 To give full growth to that which still doth grow.

113: 3 Doth . . . blind i.e., performs only part of its function, receiving images but not conveying them to the mind or "heart" 3, 7, 8 his its 4 effectually in reality 6 latch catch sight of 7 quick fleeting 10 favor face 13 Incapable of unable to take in 14 true faithful

114: 1, 3 Or whether indicates alternative questions 1 being . . . you made a king by possessing you 2 this flattery i.e., false appearances (such as surround a monarch) as specified in Sonnet 113 5 indigest formless 6 cherubins angelic creatures 8 to . . . assemble appear to his eye (the eye was thought to cast beams; see Sonnet 20, line 6) 11 with . . . 'greeing agrees with the mind's taste 14 That since

115: 5 millioned accidents innumerable happenings 7 Tan i.e., darken, coarsen 8 Divert alter 12 Crowning glorifying 13 then therefore; so i.e., "Now I love you best" (line 10)

116

Let me not to the marriage of true minds
 Admit impediments;^o love is not love
 Which alters when it alteration finds,
 Or bends with the remover to remove.
 O, no, it is an ever-fixèd mark^o
 That looks on tempests and is never shaken;
 It is the star^o to every wand'ring bark,
 Whose worth's unknown, although his height be taken.^o
 Love's not Time's fool,^o though rosy lips and cheeks
 Within his bending sickle's compass^o come;
 Love alters not with his^o brief hours and weeks,
 But bears it out^o even to the edge of doom.^o
 If this be error and upon^o me proved,
 I never writ, nor no man ever loved.

117

Accuse me thus: that I have scanted all^o
 Wherein I should your great deserts repay,
 Forgot upon your dearest love to call,
 Whereto all bonds do tie me day by day;
 That I have frequent^o been with unknown minds,^o
 And given to time^o your own dear-purchased right;
 That I have hoisted sail to all the winds
 Which should transport me farthest from your sight.
 Book^o both my willfulness and errors down,
 And on just proof surmise accumulate;^o
 Bring me within the level^o of your frown,
 But shoot not at me in your wakened hate;
 Since my appeal^o says I did strive to prove^o
 The constancy and virtue of your love.

116: 2 impediments an echo of the marriage service in the Book of Common Prayer: "If any of you know cause or just impediment . . ." 5 mark seamount 7 the star the North Star 8 Whose . . . taken whose value (e.g., to mariners) is inestimable although the star's altitude has been determined 9 fool plaything 10 compass range, circle 11 his Time's 12 bears it out survives; edge of doom Judgment Day 13 upon against

117: 1 scanted all given only grudgingly 5 frequent intimate; unknown minds i.e., nonentities 6 given to time squandered on other people of the time 9 Book write down in a book 10 surmise accumulate add suspicions 11 level range, aim 13 appeal plea; prove test

118

Like as to make our appetites more keen
 With eager compounds° we our palate urge,°
 As to prevent° our maladies unseen,
 We sicken to shun sickness when we purge;
 4 Even so, being full of your ne'er-cloying sweetness,
 To bitter sauces° did I frame° my feeding;
 And, sick of welfare,° found a kind of meetness°
 To be diseased ere that there was true needing.
 8 Thus policy° in love, t' anticipate
 The ills that were not, grew to faults assured,
 And brought to medicine° a healthful state,
 Which, rank of° goodness, would by ill be cured.
 12 But thence I learn, and find the lesson true,
 Drugs poison him that so fell sick of you.

119

What potions have I drunk of Siren tears
 Distilled from limbecks° foul as hell within,
 Applying° fears to hopes and hopes to fears,
 Still° losing when I saw myself to win!
 4 What wretched errors hath my heart committed,
 Whilst it hath thought itself so blessed never!°
 How have mine eyes out of their spheres° been fitted°
 In the distraction of this madding fever!
 8 O, benefit of ill: now I find true
 That better is by evil still made better;
 And ruined love, when it is built anew,
 Grows fairer than at first, more strong, far greater.
 12 So I return rebuked to my content,
 And gain by ills thrice more than I have spent.

120

That you were once unkind befriends me now,
 And for° that sorrow which I then did feel
 Needs must I under my transgression bow,
 Unless my nerves° were brass or hammered steel.
 4 For if you were by my unkindness shaken,
 As I by yours, y' have passed a hell of time,
 And I, a tyrant, have no leisure taken
 To weigh° how once I suffered in your crime.
 8 O, that our night of woe° might have rememb' red°
 My deepest sense how hard true sorrow hits,
 And soon° to you, as you to me then, tend' red°
 The humble salve° which wounded bosoms fits!°
 12 But that your trespass° now becomes a fee;°
 Mine ransoms° yours, and yours must ransom me.

118: 2 eager compounds tart sauces; urge stimulate 3 prevent forestall 6 bitter sauces i.e., undesirable people; frame direct 7 sick of welfare gorged with well-being; meetness fitness 9 policy prudence 11 medicine i.e., the need of medicine 12 rank of gorged with
 119: 2 limbecks alembics 3 Applying i.e., as an ointment 4 Still always 6 so blessed never never so blessed 7 spheres sockets; fitted forced by fits
 120: 2 for because of 4 nerves sinews 7-8 no . . . weigh not taken the time to consider 9 night of woe i.e., estrangement; rememb' red reminded 11 soon as soon; tend' red offered 12 humble salve balm of humility; fits suits 13 that your trespass that trespass of yours; fee compensation 14 ransoms atones for

121

'Tis better to be vile than vile esteemed
 When not to be receives reproach of being,°
 And the just° pleasure lost, which is so° deemed
 Not by our feeling, but by others' seeing.
 4 For why should others' false adulterate eyes
 Give salutation to° my sportive° blood?
 Or on my frailties why are frailer spies,
 Which in their wills° count bad what I think good?
 8 No, I am that° I am, and they that level°
 At my abuses° reckon up their own;
 I may be straight though they themselves be bevel.°
 By their rank° thoughts my deeds must not be shown, 12
 Unless this general evil they maintain:
 All men are bad and in their badness reign.

122

Thy gift, thy tables,° are within my brain
 Full charactered° with lasting memory,
 Which shall above that idle rank° remain
 Beyond all date, even to eternity;
 4 Or, at the least, so long as brain and heart
 Have faculty by nature to subsist,
 Till each to rased oblivion° yield his° part
 Of thee, thy record never can be missed.
 8 That poor retention° could not so much hold,
 Nor need I tallies° thy dear love to score.
 Therefore to give them from me was I bold,
 To trust those tables° that receive thee more.
 12 To keep an adjunct to remember thee
 Were to import° forgetfulness in me.

123

No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change.
 Thy pyramids° built up with newer might
 To me are nothing novel, nothing strange;
 They are but dressings of a former sight.
 4 Our dates° are brief, and therefore we admire°
 What thou dost foist upon us that is old,
 And rather make them born to our desire°
 Than think that we before have heard them told.
 8 Thy registers° and thee I both defy,
 Not wond'ring at the present, nor the past;
 For thy records and what we see doth lie,
 Made more or less by thy continual haste.
 12 This I do vow, and this shall ever be:
 I will be true despite thy scythe and thee.

121: 2 being i.e., being vile 3 just legitimate; so i.e., vile 6 Give salutation to act on; sportive wanton 8 in their wills willfully(?) 9 that who (an echo of Exodus 3:14); level aim 10 abuses transgressions 11 bevel i.e., crooked 12 rank corrupt
 122: 1 tables memorandum books 2 charactered written 3 that idle rank that useless series of leaves 7 raised oblivion oblivion that erases; his its 9 That poor retention i.e., the memorandum books 10 tallies accounting devices 12 those tables i.e., the mind 14 import imply
 123: 2 pyramids possibly an allusion to Egyptian obelisks erected in Rome by Pope Sextus 1586-89; more likely an allusion to triumphal structures erected in London to welcome James I in 1603; most likely a reference to all monuments 5 dates allotted times; admire regard with wonder 7 born . . . desire turn them into the new things we wish to see 9 registers records

124

If my dear love° were but° the child of state,°
 It might for Fortune's bastard be unfathered,°
 As subject to Time's love, or to Time's hate,
 Weeds among weeds, or flowers with flowers gathered. 4
 No, it was builded far from accident;°
 It suffers not in smiling pomp, nor falls
 Under the blow of thrallèd discontent,°
 Where to th' inviting time our fashion calls. 8
 It fears not Policy, that heretic,°
 Which works on leases of short-numb' red hours,
 But all alone stands hugely politic,°
 That it nor grows with heat, nor° drowns with showers. 12
 To this I witness call the fools of Time,°
 Which die for goodness, who have lived for crime.°

125

Were't aught° to me I bore the canopy,°
 With my extern° the outward honoring,
 Or laid great bases for eternity,
 Which proves more short than waste or ruining? 4
 Have I not seen dwellers on form and favor°
 Lose all and more by paying too much rent,°
 For compound sweet forgoing simple° savor,
 Pitiful thrivers, in their gazing spent?° 8
 No, let me be obsequious° in thy heart,
 And take thou my oblation, poor but free,
 Which is not mixed with seconds,° knows no art,°
 But mutual render,° only me for thee. 12
 Hence, thou suborned informer!° A true soul
 When most impeached° stands least in thy control.

126

O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power
 Dost hold Time's fickle glass,° his sickle hour,°
 Who hast by waning grown,° and therein show'st
 Thy lovers withering, as thy sweet self grow'st; 4
 If Nature, sovereign mistress over wrack,°
 As thou goest onwards, still° will pluck thee back,
 She keeps thee to this purpose, that her skill
 May Time disgrace and wretched minutes kill. 8
 Yet fear her, O thou minion° of her pleasure;
 She may detain, but not still° keep her treasure.
 Her audit,° though delayed, answered° must be,
 And her quietus° is to render° thee. 12

127

In the old age° black° was not counted fair,°
 Or, if it were, it bore not beauty's name.
 But now is black beauty's successive heir,°
 And beauty slandered with a bastard shame;° 4
 For since each hand hath put on° nature's power,
 Fairing the foul with art's false borrowed face,°
 Sweet° beauty hath no name, no holy bower,
 But is profaned, if not lives in disgrace. 8
 Therefore my mistress' eyes are raven black,
 Her eyes so suited, and they mourners seem,
 At° such who, not born fair, no beauty lack,
 Sland'ring creation with a false esteem: 12
 Yet so they mourn, becoming of° their woe,
 That every tongue says beauty should look so.

124: 1 love the emotion, not the person; but only; child of state i.e., product of externals such as wealth and power 2 for . . . unfathered i.e., be marked as the bastard son of Fortune 5 accident chance 7 thrallèd discontent discontent of persons oppressed 9 Policy, that heretic i.e., unprincipled self-interest, which is faithless 11 all . . . politic i.e., only love is infinitely prudent 12 That it nor . . . nor since it neither . . . nor 13 fools of Time playthings of Time (?) time-servers (?) 14 Which . . . crime i.e., who at the last minute repent their criminal lives

125: 1 Were't aught would it be anything; canopy borne over an eminent person 2 extern outward action 5 dwellers . . . favor i.e., those who make much of appearance and external beauty 6 paying . . . rent i.e., obsequiousness 7 simple pure 8 Pitiful . . . spent pitiable creatures who use themselves up in looking at outward honor 9 obsequious devoted 11 seconds i.e., baser matter; art artifice 12 render surrender 13 suborned informer perjured witness 14 impeached accused

126: Note that this poem consists of six couplets, rather than of the usual three quatrains and a couplet 2 glass mirror; hour hourglass 3 by waning grown i.e., by growing older growing more beautiful 5 wrack destruction 6, 10 still always 9 minion favorite 11 audit final account; answered paid 12 quietus final settlement; render surrender 127: 1 old age i.e., age of chivalry; black i.e., brunette; fair beautiful (with a pun on the obvious meaning) 3 successive heir legitimate heir 4 And . . . shame blond beauty is defamed as illegitimate 5 put on taken over 6 art's . . . face i.e., cosmetics 7 Sweet natural, i.e., blond 11 At for 13 becoming of gracing

128

How oft, when thou, my music, music play'st
 Upon that blessèd wood° whose motion° sounds
 With thy sweet fingers when thou gently sway'st°
 The wiry concord° that mine ear confounds,° 4
 Do I envy those jacks° that nimble leap
 To kiss the tender inward of thy hand,°
 Whilst my poor lips, which should that harvest reap,
 At the wood's boldness by thee blushing stand. 8
 To be so tickled, they° would change their state
 And situation with those dancing chips
 O'er whom thy fingers walk with gentle gait,
 Making dead wood more blest than living lips. 12
 Since saucy jacks so happy are in this,
 Give them thy fingers, me thy lips to kiss.

129

Th' expense° of spirit° in a waste of shame
 Is lust in action; and, till action, lust
 Is perjured, murd'rous, bloody, full of blame,
 Savage, extreme, rude, cruel, not to trust; 4
 Enjoyed no sooner but despisèd straight;
 Past° reason hunted, and no sooner had,
 Past° reason hated as a swallowed bait
 On purpose laid to make the taker mad; 8
 Made° in pursuit, and in possession so;
 Had, having, and in quest to have, extreme;
 A bliss in proof,° and proved,° a very woe,
 Before, a joy proposed; behind, a dream.° 12
 All this the world well knows, yet none knows well
 To shun the heaven° that leads men to this hell.

128: 2 wood keys (of the spinet or virginal); motion movement 3 thou gently sway'st you gently direct 4 wiry concord harmony of the strings; confounds delightfully overcomes 5 jacks devices that pluck the strings, but here probably misused for keys; in line 13, there is a pun on the meaning "fellows" 5-6 There are always some who cannot bear to think that the Swan of Avon could ever make a mistake about anything. A certain E. W. Naylor explains these lines as follows: "The lady, having removed the rail which ordinarily stops the 'jacks' from jumping right out of the instrument when the keys are struck, was leaning over her work, testing it by striking the defective note, and holding the 'tender inward' of her hand over the 'jack' to prevent it from flying to the other end of the room."—W.H.A. 9 they the poet's lips

129: 1 expense expenditure; spirit vital power, semen 6, 7 Past beyond 9 Made i.e., made mad (most editors emend to "Mad") 11 in proof while being experienced; proved i.e., when experienced 12 dream nightmare (?) 14 heaven the sensation (or place?) of bliss

130

My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun;
 Coral is far more red than her lips' red;
 If snow be white, why then her breasts are dun;
 If hairs be wires, black wires grow on her head. 4
 I have seen roses damasked,° red and white,
 But no such roses see I in her cheeks,
 And in some perfumes is there more delight
 Than in the breath that from my mistress reeks.° 8
 I love to hear her speak, yet well I know
 That music hath a far more pleasing sound.
 I grant I never saw a goddess go;°
 My mistress when she walks treads on the ground. 12
 And yet, by heaven, I think my love as rare
 As any she° belied with false compare.°

131

Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art,°
 As those whose beauties proudly make them cruel;
 For well thou know'st to my dear° dotting heart
 Thou art the fairest and most precious jewel. 4
 Yet, in good faith, some say that thee behold,
 Thy face hath not the power to make love groan;
 To say they err I dare not be so bold,
 Although I swear it to myself alone. 8
 And, to be sure that is not false I swear,
 A thousand groans, but thinking on° thy face,
 One on another's neck,° do witness bear
 Thy black is fairest in my judgment's place.° 12
 In nothing art thou black° save in thy deeds,
 And thence this slander, as I think, proceeds.

132

Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me,
 Knowing thy heart torment° me with disdain,
 Have put on black and loving mourners be,
 Looking with pretty ruth° upon my pain. 4
 And truly not the morning sun of heaven
 Better becomes the gray cheeks of the east,
 Nor that full star that ushers in the even°
 Doth half that glory to the sober west 8
 As those two mourning° eyes become thy face.
 O, let it then as well beseem thy heart
 To mourn for me, since mourning doth thee grace,
 And suit thy pity like° in every part. 12
 Then will I swear beauty herself is black,
 And all they foul° that thy complexion lack.

130: 5 damasked mingled red and white 8 reeks emanates 11 go walk 14 she woman; compare comparison

131: 1 so . . . art i.e., even though you are dark and not considered beautiful 3 dear loving 10 but thinking on when I but think of 11 One . . . neck i.e., in quick succession 12 in . . . place in the place assigned it by my judgment 13 black foul

132: 2 torment to torment 4 ruth pity 7 even evening 9 mourning with a pun on morning 12 suit . . . like clothe thy pity alike 14 foul ugly

133

Beshrew° that heart that makes my heart to groan
 For° that deep wound it gives my friend and me.
 Is't not enough to torture me alone,
 But slave to slavery my sweet'st friend must be? 4
 Me from myself thy cruel eye hath taken,
 And my next self° thou harder hast engrossed.°
 Of him, myself, and thee, I am forsaken;
 A torment thrice threefold thus to be crossed.° 8
 Prison my heart in thy steel bosom's ward,°
 But then my friend's heart let my poor heart bail;°
 Whoe'er keeps° me, let my heart be his guard;°
 Thou canst not then use rigor° in my jail.° 12
 And yet thou wilt, for I, being pent in thee,
 Perforce am thine, and all that is in me.

134

So, now I have confessed that he is thine
 And I myself am mortgaged to thy will,° Myself I'll forfeit, so° that other mine°
 Thou wilt restore to be my comfort still.° 4
 But thou wilt not, nor he will not be free,
 For thou art covetous, and he is kind;
 He learned but surety-like to write for me
 Under that bond that him as fast doth bind.° 8
 The statute° of thy beauty thou wilt take,
 Thou usurer that put'st forth all to use,°
 And sue a friend came° debtor for my sake;
 So him I lose through my unkind abuse.° 12
 Him have I lost, thou hast both him and me;
 He pays the whole, and yet am I not free.

133: 1 Beshrew curse (a mild imprecation) 2 For because of 6 my next self i.e., my friend; engrossed captured 8 crossed thwarted 9 ward cell 10 bail go bail for, i.e., free 11 keeps guards; guard guardhouse 12 rigor cruelty; my jail i.e., my heart

134: 2 will (1) purpose (2) carnal desire (perhaps with puns on Shakespeare's name and the name of the friend) 3 so provided that; other mine i.e., my friend 4 still always 7-8 He . . . bind perhaps the idea is that the friend, as proxy, wooed the woman for the poet but is now in her bondage 9 statute security 10 use usury 11 came who became (?) 12 my unkind abuse unkind deception of me

135

Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will,°
 And Will to boot, and Will in overplus;
 More than enough am I that vex thee still,°
 To thy sweet will making addition thus.° 4
 Wilt thou, whose will is large and spacious,°
 Not once vouchsafe° to hide my will in thine?
 Shall will in others seem right gracious,°
 And in my will no fair acceptance shine? 8
 The sea, all water, yet receives rain still°
 And in abundance addeth to his° store;
 So thou being rich in Will add to thy Will
 One will of mine, to make thy large Will more. 12
 Let no unkind,° no fair beseechers° kill;°
 Think all but one, and me in that one Will.°

136

If thy soul check° thee that I come so near,° Swear to thy blind soul that I was thy Will,
 And will, thy soul knows, is admitted there;
 Thus far for love my love-suit, sweet, fulfill. 4
Will will fulfill the treasure° of thy love,
 Ay, fill it full with wills, and my will one.°
 In things of great receipt° with ease we prove.
 Among a number one is reckoned none.° 8
 Then in the number let me pass untold,°
 Though in thy store's account° I one must be;
 For nothing hold me, so it please thee hold
 That nothing me, a something, sweet, to thee. 12
 Make but my name° thy love, and love that still,°
 And then thou lovest me for my name is Will.

135: 1 Will (1) a person named Will (perhaps the poet, perhaps the friend, perhaps the woman's husband, perhaps all; Will is capitalized and italicized in this and in the next sonnet wherever it so appears in the quarto) (2) desire, volition 3, 9 still always 4 making addition thus i.e., by adding myself 5, 7 rhyming words are trisyllabic 6 vouchsafe consent 10 his its 13 no unkind no unkind act, word, or person; no fair beseechers i.e., any applicants for your favors (?) 13 So in Q and a perfectly possible reading. Personally, however, I am inclined to accept Malone's emendation, "Let no unkind No fair beseechers kill," which makes "No" a noun and "fair beseechers" the object of the verb "kill."—W.H.A. 14 Think . . . Will think all Wills as one and include me in that one

136: 1 check rebuke; come so near (1) touch to the quick (2) come so near to your bed 5 fulfill the treasure fill the treasury 6 one one of them 7 things . . . receipt i.e., large matters 8 Among . . . none "One is no number" was an Elizabethan saying 9 untold uncounted 10 thy store's account i.e., the inventory of your supply (of lovers) 13 my name i.e., will, carnal desire (?); still always

137

Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes
 That they behold and see not what they see?
 They know what beauty is, see where it lies,^o
 Yet what the best is take the worst to be. 4
 If eyes, corrupt^o by overpartial looks,
 Be anchored in the bay where all men ride,^o
 Why of eyes' falsehood has thou forgèd hooks,
 Whereto the judgment of my heart is tied? 8
 Why should my heart think that a several plot,^o
 Which my heart knows the wide world's common place?^o
 Or mine eyes seeing this, say this is not,
 To^o put fair truth upon so foul a face? 12
 In things right true my heart and eyes have erred,
 And to this false plague^o are they now transferred.

138

When my love swears that she is made of truth,^o
 I do believe her though I know she lies,
 That^o she might think me some untutored youth,
 Unlearnèd in the world's false subtleties. 4
 Thus vainly thinking that she thinks me young,
 Although she knows my days are past the best,
 Simply^o I credit^o her false-speaking tongue;
 On both sides thus is simple truth suppressed. 8
 But wherefore says she not she is unjust?^o
 And wherefore say not I that I am old?
 O, love's best habit^o is in seeming trust,^o
 And age in love loves not to have years told.^o 12
 Therefore I lie with^o her, and she with me,
 And in our faults by lies we flattered be.

139

O, call not me to justify the wrong
 That thy unkindness lays upon my heart;
 Wound me not with thine eye but with thy tongue;
 Use power with power^o and slay me not by art.^o 4
 Tell me thou lov'st elsewhere; but in my sight,
 Dear heart, forbear to glance thine eye aside;
 What need'st thou wound with cunning when thy might
 Is more than my o'erpressed^o defense can bide? 8
 Let me excuse thee; ah, my love well knows
 Her pretty looks have been mine enemies,
 And therefore from my face she turns my foes,^o
 That they elsewhere might dart their injuries. 12
 Yet do not so; but since I am near slain,
 Kill me outright with looks and rid my pain.

137: 3 lies inhabits 5 corrupt corrupted 6 ride pun on the sense "to mount sexually" 9 that . . . plot that place a private field 10 common place open field (with a pun on common = promiscuous) 12 To so as to 14 plague (1) plague of falseness (2) mistress

138: 1 truth fidelity 3 That so that 7 Simply (1) foolishly (2) pretending to be simple; credit believe 9 unjust unfaithful 11 habit appearance; seeming trust the appearance of truth 12 told counted 13 lie with (1) lie to (2) sleep with 139: 4 with power i.e., openly, directly; art artful means 8 o'erpressed overpowered 11 my foes i.e., her looks

140

Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press^o
 My tongue-tied patience with too much disdain,
 Lest sorrow lend me words, and words express
 The manner^o of my pity-wanting^o pain. 4
 If I might teach thee wit,^o better it were,
 Though not to love, yet love, to tell me so;^o
 As testy^o sick men, when their deaths be near,
 No news but health from their physicians know. 8
 For if I should despair, I should grow mad,
 And in my madness might speak ill of thee.
 Now this ill-wresting^o world is grown so bad
 Mad slanderers by mad ears believèd be. 12
 That I may not be so,^o nor thou belied,
 Bear thine eyes straight, though thy proud heart go wide.^o

141

In faith I do not love thee with mine eyes,
 For they in thee a thousand errors note;
 But 'tis my heart that loves what they despise,
 Who in despite of view^o is pleased to dote. 4
 Nor are mine ears with thy tongue's tune delighted,
 Nor tender feeling to base touches^o prone,
 Nor taste, nor smell, desire to be invited
 To any sensual feast with thee alone. 8
 But^o my five wits^o nor my five senses can Dissuade one foolish heart from serving^o thee,
 Who leaves unswayed the likeness of a man,^o
 Thy proud heart's slave and vassal wretch to be. 12
 Only my plague thus far I count my gain,
 That she that makes me sin awards me pain.

142

Love is my sin, and thy dear^o virtue hate,
 Hate of my sin, grounded on sinful loving.
 O, but with mine compare thou thine own state,
 And thou shalt find it^o merits not reproving, 4
 Or if it do, not from those lips of thine,
 That have profaned their scarlet ornaments^o
 And sealed false bonds of love as oft as mine,
 Robbed others' beds' revenues of their rents.^o 8
 Be it^o lawful I love thee as thou lov'st those Whom thine eyes woo as mine importune thee.
 Root pity in thy heart, that, when it grows,
 Thy pity may deserve to pitied be. 12
 If thou dost seek to have what^o thou dost hide,
 By self-example mayst thou be denied.

140: 1 press oppress 4 manner nature; pity-wanting unpitied 5 wit wisdom 6 so i.e., that you love me 7 testy fretful 11 ill-wresting i.e., misinterpreting everything for the worse 13 so (1) a "mad slanderer" (2) so believed 14 wide wide of the mark

141: 4 Who . . . view which in spite of what they see 6 base touches sexual contact 9 But but neither; five wits common wit, imagination, fantasy, estimation, memory 10 serving loving 11 Who . . . man i.e., which ceases to rule and so leaves me what is only the semblance of a man

142: 1 dear inmost 4 it my state 6 scarlet ornaments i.e., lips (compared to scarlet wax that seals documents) 8 Robbed . . . rents i.e., has robbed wives of what their husbands owed them 9 Be it let it be 13 what that which, i.e., pity

143

Lo, as a careful housewife runs to catch
 One of her feathered creatures broke away,
 Sets down her babe, and makes all swift dispatch
 In pursuit of the thing she would have stay;
 Whilst her neglected child holds her in chase,^o
 Cries to catch her whose busy care is bent
 To follow that which flies before her face,
 Not prizing^o her poor infant's discontent:
 So run'st thou after that which flies from thee,
 Whilst I, thy babe, chase thee afar behind;
 But if thou catch thy hope, turn back to me
 And play the mother's part, kiss me, be kind.
 So will I pray that thou mayst have thy Will,
 If thou turn back and my loud crying still.^o

144

Two loves I have, of comfort and despair,^o
 Which like two spirits do suggest me still;^o
 The better angel is a man right fair,
 The worser spirit a woman colored ill.^o
 To win me soon to hell, my female evil
 Tempteth my better angel from my side,
 And would corrupt my saint to be a devil,
 Wooing his purity with her foul pride.
 And whether that my angel be turned fiend
 Suspect I may, yet not directly^o tell;
 But being both from^o me, both to each^o friend,
 I guess one angel in another's hell.^o
 Yet this shall I ne'er know, but live in doubt,
 Till my bad angel fire my good one out.^o

145

Those lips that Love's own hand did make
 Breathed forth the sound that said, "I hate"
 To me that languished for her sake.
 But when she saw my woeful state,
 Straight in her heart did mercy come,
 Chiding that tongue that ever sweet
 Was used in giving gentle doom,^o
 And taught it thus anew to greet:
 "I hate," she altered with an end^o
 That followed it as gentle day
 Doth follow night, who, like a fiend,
 From heaven to hell is flown away.
 "I hate" from hate away she threw,
 And saved my life, saying, "not you."

143: 5 holds . . . chase chases her 8 prizing regarding 13-14 Some scholarly follies are so extraordinary that they deserve to be immortalized. Gregor Sarrazin, a German-Swiss, emended these lines as follows: "So will I pray that thou may'est have thy Hen, [short for Henry]/If thou turn back and my loud crying pen."—W.H.A.

144: 1 of . . . despair i.e., one offering heavenly mercy, the other offering hellish despair 2 suggest me still always urge me 4 colored ill i.e., dark 10 directly precisely 11 from away from; each each other 12 in another's hell with an allusion to the female sexual organ 14 fire . . . out i.e., communicate venereal disease

145: 7 doom judgment 9 end ending

146

Poor soul, the center of my sinful earth,^o
 My sinful earth^o these rebel pow'rs that thee array,
 Why dost thou pine within and suffer dearth,
 Painting^o thy outward walls so costly gay? 4
 Why so large cost,^o having so short a lease,
 Dost thou upon thy fading mansion spend?
 Shall worms, inheritors of this excess,^o
 Eat up thy charge?^o Is this thy body's end? 8
 Then, soul, live thou upon thy servant's loss,
 And let that^o pine to aggravate^o thy store;
 Buy terms divine^o in selling hours of dross;
 Within be fed, without be rich no more: 12
 So shalt thou feed on Death, that feeds on men,
 And Death once dead, there's no more dying then.

147

My love is as a fever, longing still^o
 For that which longer nurseth the disease,
 Feeding on that which doth preserve the ill,^o
 Th' uncertain sickly appetite to please. 4
 My reason, the physician to my love,
 Angry that his prescriptions are not kept,
 Hath left me, and I desperate now approve
 Desire is death, which physic did except.^o 8
 Past cure I am, now reason is past care,
 And frantic-mad with evermore unrest;
 My thoughts and my discourse as madmen's are,
 At random from the truth vainly expressed: 12
 For I have sworn thee fair, and thought thee bright,
 Who art as black as hell, as dark as night.

148

O me, what eyes hath Love put in my head,
 Which have no correspondence with true sight!
 Or, if they have, where is my judgment fled,
 That censures^o falsely what they see aright? 4
 If that be fair whereon my false eyes dote,
 What means the world to say it is not so?
 If it be not, then love doth well denote
 Love's eye^o is not so true as all men's no. 8
 How can it? O, how can Love's eye be true,
 That is so vexed with watching^o and with tears?
 No marvel then though I mistake my view;^o
 The sun itself sees not till heaven clears. 12
 O cunning Love, with tears thou keep'st me blind,
 Lest eyes well-seeing thy foul faults should find.

146: 1 sinful earth i.e., body 2 My sinful earth obviously the printer mistakenly repeated here words of the previous line; among suggested emendations are: "Thrall to," "Fooled by," "Rebuke," and "Leagued with" 4 Painting i.e., adorning 5 cost expense 7 excess extravagant expenditure 8 charge (1) expense (2) burden, i.e., the body 10 that i.e., the body; aggravate increase 11 terms divine ages of immortality 147: 1 still always 3 preserve the ill prolong the illness 7-8 approve . . . except find by experience that Desire, which refused medicine, is death (?) 148: 4 censures judges 8 eye with a pun on aye in contrast with "all men's no" 10 watching wakefulness 11 mistake my view err in what I see

149

Canst thou, O cruel, say I love thee not,
 When I against myself with thee partake?^o
 Do I not think on thee when I forgot
 Am of^o myself, all tyrant^o for thy sake?
 Who hateth thee that I do call my friend?
 On whom frown'st thou that I do fawn upon?
 Nay, if thou lour'st on me, do I not spend
 Revenge upon myself with present moan?^o
 What merit do I in myself respect
 That is so proud thy service to despise,
 When all my best doth worship thy defect,^o
 Commanded by the motion of thine eyes?
 But, love, hate on, for now I know thy mind;
 Those that can see thou lov'st, and I am blind.

150

O, from what pow'r hast thou this pow'rful might
 With insufficiency^o my heart to sway?^o
 To make me give the lie to my true sight^o
 And swear that brightness doth not grace the day?
 Whence hast thou this becoming of things ill^o
 That in the very refuse of thy deeds
 There is such strength and warrantize of skill^o
 That in my mind thy worst all best exceeds?
 Who taught thee how to make me love thee more,
 The more I hear and see just cause of hate?
 O, though I love what others do abhor,
 With others thou shouldst not abhor my state:
 If thy unworthiness raised^o love in me,
 More worthy I to be beloved of thee.

151

Love is too young to know what conscience is,
 Yet who knows not conscience is born of love?
 Then, gentle cheater, urge not my amiss,^o
 Lest guilty of my faults thy sweet self prove.
 For, thou betraying me, I do betray
 My nobler part to my gross body's treason;
 My soul doth tell my body that he may
 Triumph in love; flesh^o stays^o no farther reason,^o
 But, rising^o at thy name, doth point out thee,
 As his triumphant prize. Proud of^o this pride,
 He is contented thy poor drudge to be,
 To stand in thy affairs, fall by thy side.
 No want of conscience hold it that I call
 Her "love" for whose dear love I rise and fall.

149: 2 partake unite 3-4 forgot Am of forget 4 all tyrant i.e., having become altogether a tyrant 8 present moan immediate grief 11 defect lack of good qualities
 150: 2 insufficiency unworthiness; sway rule 3 give . . . sight accuse my true sight of lying 5 becoming . . . ill i.e., power to make evil look attractive 7 warrantize of skill guarantee of mental power 13 raised sexual innuendo (?)
 151: 3 urge . . . amiss stress not my sinfulness 8 flesh the penis; stays awaits; reason talk 9 rising rebelling (with a sexual pun, as in "point," line 9; "stand" and "fall," line 12; and "rise and fall," line 14) 10 Proud of swelling with

152

In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn,^o
 But thou art twice forsworn, to me love swearing;
 In act thy bed-vow broke, and new faith torn
 In vowing new hate after new love bearing.
 But why of two oaths' breach do I accuse thee,
 When I break twenty? I am perjured most,
 For all my vows are oaths but to misuse^o thee,
 And all my honest faith in thee is lost;
 For I have sworn deep oaths of thy deep kindness,
 Oaths of thy love, thy truth, thy constancy;
 And, to enlighten thee,^o gave eyes to blindness,^o
 Or made them swear against the thing they see;
 For I have sworn thee fair; more perjured eye,^o
 To swear against the truth so foul a lie.

153

Cupid laid by his brand^o and fell asleep.
 A maid of Dian's^o this advantage^o found,
 And his love-kindling fire did quickly steep
 In a cold valley-fountain of that ground;
 Which borrowed from this holy fire of Love
 A dateless lively^o heat, still^o to endure,
 And grew a seething^o bath, which yet men prove^o
 Against strange maladies a sovereign^o cure.
 But at my mistress' eye Love's brand new-fired,
 The boy for trial needs would^o touch my breast;
 I, sick withal,^o the help of bath^o desired,
 And thither hied, a sad distempered^o guest,
 But found no cure; the bath for my help lies
 Where Cupid got new fire—my mistress' eyes.

154

The little Love-god^o lying once asleep
 Laid by his side his heart-inflaming brand,^o
 Whilst many nymphs that vowed chaste life to keep Came tripping by, but in her maiden hand
 The fairest votary^o took up that fire,
 Which many legions of true hearts had warmed;
 And so the general^o of hot desire
 Was, sleeping, by a virgin hand disarmed.
 This brand she quenched in a cool well by,
 Which from Love's fire took heart perpetual,
 Growing a bath and healthful remedy
 For men diseased; but I, my mistress' thrall,^o
 Came there for cure, and this by that I prove:
 Love's fire heats water, water cools not love.

152: 1 am forsworn i.e., have broken (my marriage) vows 7 but to misuse merely to misrepresent 11 enlighten thee make you shine; gave . . . blindness i.e., caused my eyes not to see the truth 13 eye eyes (with a pun on I)
 153: 1 brand torch 2 Dian Diana, goddess of chastity; advantage opportunity 6 dateless lively eternal living; still always 7 seething boiling; prove find by experience 8 sovereign potent 10 for . . . would as a test had to 11 withal with it; bath possibly an allusion to the city of Bath, famous for its curative waters 12 distempered diseased
 154: 1 Love-god Cupid 2 brand torch 5 votary one vowed to chastity 7 general leader, i.e., Cupid 12 thrall slave

SUGGESTED REFERENCES

The number of possible references is vast and grows alarmingly. Though no works are indispensable, those listed below have been found helpful. The arrangement is as follows:

1. Reference Works (bibliographies, dictionaries, concordances, encyclopedias, sources, facsimiles, miscellaneous)
2. Biographies
3. The Elizabethan Age
4. Style; Shakespeare's English
5. Textual Matters
6. English Drama Before Shakespeare
7. The Theater and the Actors
8. Studies of Many or All of the Works
9. The Comedies (general studies)
10. The Histories (general studies)
11. The Tragedies (general studies)
12. Individual Plays (listed alphabetically)
13. The Nondramatic Works (general studies, followed by studies of the poems and sonnets)

I. REFERENCE WORKS

Bibliographies. The most detailed annual bibliographies are published in Shakespeare Quarterly, Bibliography of English Language and Literature, Studies in Philology, and PMLA. Useful annual reviews of research, sometimes with evaluative comments, are published in Shakespeare Survey, The Year's Work in English Studies, and Shakespeare Studies. Shakespeare Research Opportunities, No. 3, ed. W. R. Elton (1968), introduces the practice of giving annotated annual bibliographies of "Shakespeare and Renaissance intellectual contexts." Each issue of Shakespeare Newsletter synthesizes some recent criticism. Ronald Berman, A Reader's Guide to Shakespeare's Plays (1965), is a valuable short guide to about 3,000 pieces of writing on Shakespeare; for more comprehensive (and less selective) listings, see Walther Ebisch and Levin L. Schücking, A Shakespeare Bibliography (1931), with a Supplement for the Years 1930-1935 (1937), and Gordon Ross Smith, A Classified Shakespeare Bibliography 1936-1958 (1963).

Dictionaries. Useful dictionaries include Alexander Schmidt, Shakespeare-Lexicon (2 vols., 1874-75, 1886; 5th ed., 1962), and C. T. Onions, A Shakespeare Glossary (2nd rev. ed., 1919; 1953). More specialized are Eric Partridge, Shakespeare's Bawdy (rev. ed., 1955), on bawdy words and phrases, and Helge Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Names (1959), on the pronunciation of proper nouns. See also the titles listed below on Shakespeare's English, section 4.

Concordances. John Bartlett, A New and Complete Concordance . . . to . . . Shakespeare (1894), is an index to most of the words in Shakespeare; it probably will be displaced by Marvin Spevack, A Complete and Systematic Concordance to the Works of Shakespeare (8 vols. projected, 1967-). Spevack's first volume is an index to words in the comedies, the second to words in the histories and nondramatic works, the third to words in the tragedies and Pericles, The Two Noble Kinsmen, and part of Sir Thomas More. These volumes include lists of words occurring only in a given play and lists of words by the character who speaks them. The remaining five volumes will contain, in addition to a concordance to the complete works, further statistical information, an index of words arranged according to frequency, a concordance to stage directions, and a list of significant textual variants. Bartlett's Concordance, though often inaccurate and devoid of statistical details, still is of some use, however, because Spevack occasionally gives a word only under its old spelling. For example, because his copy-text retains "ambassy" in Merry Wives of Windsor, this occurrence of the word is not listed under "embassy," the spelling under which a reader would naturally look for it, and which Bartlett gives. Old-spelling concordances to each play, preserving the spelling of the early texts, are being edited by Trevor Howard-Hill.

Encyclopedias. The best Shakespeare encyclopedia is edited by Oscar James Campbell and Edward G. Quinn, The Reader's Encyclopedia of Shakespeare (1966), an invaluable work with several thousand entries, many of which are excellent short essays; F. E. Halliday, A Shakespeare Companion, 1564-1964 (rev. ed., 1964), is also of use, though the entries tend to be very brief. A New Companion to Shakespeare Studies (1971), edited by Kenneth Muir and S. Schoenbaum, comprises eighteen chapters on Elizabethan actors and theaters, the social background, Shakespeare's reading, the plays, and so on.

Sources. The fullest collection is in Geoffrey Bullough (ed.), Narrative and Dramatic Sources of Shakespeare (6 vols., 1957- ; Vol. 7 in preparation). More limited books reprinting material that Shakespeare used are: Richard Hosley (ed.), Shakespeare's Holinshed (1968); W. G. Boswell-Stone (ed.), Shakespeare's Holinshed: The Chronicle and the Historical Plays Compared (1896); T. J. B. Spencer (ed.), Shakespeare's Plutarch (1964); T. J. B. Spencer (ed.), Elizabethan Love Stories (1968). Virgil K. Whitaker, Shakespeare's Use of Learning (1953), discusses the major debts; Kenneth Muir, Shakespeare's Sources, Vol. 1 (1957), discusses the sources of the comedies and the tragedies.

Facsimiles. The best facsimile of the Shakespeare First Folio is The Norton Facsimile of The First Folio of Shakespeare, prepared by Charlton Hinman (1968). W. W. Greg edited facsimiles of the following quartos: Hamlet (Q1), Hamlet (Q2), Henry V, 1 Henry IV, 3 Henry VI, King Lear, Love's Labor's Lost, The Merchant of Venice, The Merry Wives of Windsor, Pericles, Richard III, Romeo and Juliet, and Troilus and Cressida. Joseph Quincy Adams edited a quarto of Titus Andronicus, and Charlton Hinman edited a quarto of Richard II. The Clarendon Press promises others. Facsimiles of all the nondramatic works have been brought together in a Yale University Press volume entitled Shakespeare's Poems, A Facsimile of the Earliest Editions (1964). Inexpensive Xerox facsimiles of any text may be obtained from University Microfilms, Ann Arbor, Michigan.

Miscellaneous Reference Works. Robert Kilburn Root, Classical Mythology in Shakespeare (1903); Richmond Noble, Shakespeare's Biblical Knowledge and Use of the Book of Common Prayer (1935); Peter J. Seng, The Vocal Songs in the Plays of Shakespeare (1967); Alfred Harbage, Annals of English Drama, 975-1700, revised by S. Schoenbaum (1964); The Shakespeare Allusion Book: A Collection of Allusions to Shakespeare from 1591 to 1700, compiled by C. M. Engleby, reedited by John Monro (1909), reissued with a preface by E. K. Chambers (1932).

2. BIOGRAPHIES

E. K. Chambers, William Shakespeare: A Study of Facts and Problems (2 vols., 1930), is an invaluable reference work; other massive works are Edgar I. Fripp, Shakespeare, Man and Artist (2 vols., 1938), and B. Roland Lewis, The Shakespeare Documents (2 vols., 1940). But for a readable biography, with portraits of Stratford and London life, see Marchette Chute, Shakespeare of London (1949). Gerald E. Bentley, Shakespeare: A Biographical Handbook (1961), is a spare account of the facts, with virtually no conjecture intermingled. Other useful biographies are F. E. Halliday, Shakespeare: A Pictorial Biography (new ed., 1964), and Mark Eccles, Shakespeare in Warwickshire (1961). S. Schoenbaum, Shakespeare's Lives (1970), is a history of biographical scholarship, covering not only books and articles on Shakespeare's life but also such things as the Folio engraving and the Stratford bust, the sonnets and plays as spiritual autobiography, and Shakespeare as a character in plays and novels. The anti-Stratfordians are discussed in Frank W. Wadsworth, The Poacher from Stratford (1958); H. N. Gibson, The Shakespeare Claimants (1962); William F. and Elizabeth S. Friedman, The Shakespearean Ciphers Examined (1957). Some anti-Stratfordian writing is anthologized by George McMichael and Edgar M. Glenn, Shakespeare and His Rivals (1962). Shakespeare's reputation is chronicled in Louis Marder, His Exits and His Entrances (1963); The Persistence of Shakespeare Idolatry, edited by Herbert M. Schueller (1964), has chapters on Shakespeare's reputation in France, Germany, and England.

3. ELIZABETHAN AGE

Lacey Baldwin Smith, The Horizon Book of the Elizabethan World (1967), is readable and well illustrated. Among other useful historical and political studies are: S. T. Bindoff, Tudor England (1959); G. R. Elton, England Under the Tudors (1955); S. T. Bindoff, J. Hurstfield, and C. H. Williams (eds.), Elizabethan Government and Society (1961); Wallace MacCaffrey, The Shaping of the Elizabethan Regime (1968); Alfred L. Rowse, The England of Elizabeth (1950); and John B. Black, The Reign of Elizabeth, 1558-1603 (2nd ed., 1959).

Elizabethan thought is discussed in E. M. W. Tillyard, The Elizabethan World Picture (1943); Herschel Clay Baker, The Dignity of Man: Studies in the Persistence of an Idea (1947; reprinted in 1961 as The Image of Man); Hardin Craig, The Enchanted Glass: The Elizabethan Mind in Literature (1936); Douglas Bush, The Renaissance and English Humanism (1939); Theodore Spencer, Shakespeare and the Nature of Man (1942); and David L. Stevenson (ed.), The Elizabethan Age. More specialized studies are: Don Cameron Allen on astrology, The Star-Crossed Renaissance (1941); F. R. Johnson, Astronomical Thought in Renaissance England (1937); Paul Kocher, Science and Religion in Renaissance England (1953); Ernst Cassirer, The Platonic Renaissance in England (1954); Ernest William Talbert, The Problem of Order (1962); and F. J. Levy, Tudor Historical Thought (1967).

On Elizabethan life, in addition to Lacey Baldwin Smith, above, see two books with chapters on a wide variety of topics, W. Raleigh et al. (eds.), Shakespeare's England: An Account of the Life and Manners of His Age (2 vols., 1916), and Allardyce Nicoll, (ed.), Shakespeare in His Own Age (1964; identical with Shakespeare Survey 17). Also valuable are: Louis B. Wright and Virginia La Mar (eds.), Life and Letters in Tudor and Stuart England: First Series (1962); Muriel St. Clare Byrne, Elizabethan Life in Town and Country (7th ed., 1954); Martin Holmes, Elizabethan London (1969). John Dover Wilson (ed.), Life in Shakespeare's England (2nd ed., 1913), is an anthology of Elizabethan writings on the countryside, superstition, the court, and so on; Allardyce Nicoll (ed.), The Elizabethans (1957), has bits of Elizabethan writing and attractive pictures. More specialized studies are: Kenneth Charlton, Education in Renaissance England (1965); Joan Simon, Education and Society in Tudor England (1966); T. W. Baldwin, William Shakespeare's Small Latine and Lesse Greeke (2 vols., 1944); Louis B. Wright, Middle-Class Culture in Elizabethan England (1935); and John Buxton, Elizabethan Taste (1963).

The literature of the period (dramatic and non-dramatic) is studied in Boris Ford (ed.), The Age of Shakespeare (1956). Specialized studies of the literature are given elsewhere in this bibliography.

4. STYLE; SHAKESPEARE'S ENGLISH

M. C. Bradbrook has a short survey of writings on Shakespeare's style in Shakespeare Survey 7, edited by Allardyce Nicoll (1954). On Shakespeare's prose, see Milton Crane, Shakespeare's Prose (1951); Jonas A. Barish, Ben Jonson and the Language of Prose Comedy (1960); Brian Vickers, The Artistry of Shakespeare's Prose (1968); F. P. Wilson, Shakespeare and the Diction of Common Life (1941; reprinted in Wilson's Shakespearian and Other Studies [1969]); and Morris Palmer Tilley, A Dictionary of the Proverbs in England in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Centuries (1950).

Three general studies are Patrick Cruttwell, The Shakespearean Moment and Its Place in the Poetry of the Seventeenth Century (1954); Benjamin Ifor Evans, The Language of Shakespeare's Plays (1952); and F. E. Halliday, The Poetry of Shakespeare's Plays (1954). Rhyme is discussed by Frederic W. Ness, The Use of Rhyme in Shakespeare's Plays (1941); blank verse and imagery are discussed by Moody Prior, The Language of Tragedy (1947). On imagery see especially Wolfgang H. Clemen, The Development of Shakespeare's Imagery (1951; originally published in German, 1936); also of use are Caroline Spurgeon, Shakespeare's Imagery and What It Tells Us (1935); Edward A. Armstrong, Shakespeare's Imagination (rev. ed., 1963); and F. R. Johnson, "Shakespearian Imagery and Senecan Imitation," in Joseph Quincy Adams Memorial Studies (1948). Kenneth Muir, "Shakespeare's Imagery—Then and Now," in Shakespeare Survey 18, edited by Allardyce Nicoll (1965), is an appraisal of scholarship on the subject.

Maurice Charney, Shakespeare's Roman Plays (1961), relates imagery to what is seen as well as heard; in Style in Hamlet (1969), Charney goes further, discussing, for example, not only imagery of animals, disease, food, and gardens, but also gestures, properties, and sound effects. Sister Miriam Joseph, Shakespeare's Use of the Arts of Language (1947; reprinted in part as Rhetoric in Shakespeare's Time: Literary Theory of Renaissance Europe [1962]) catalogs Shakespeare's figures; Wilbur Samuel Howell, Logic and Rhetoric in England, 1500-1700 (1956), is also of interest.

Matters of stage business, dramatic illusion, and so on are discussed in S. L. Bethell, Shakespeare and the Popular Dramatic Tradition (1944), and in J. L. Styan, Shakespeare's Stagecraft (1967), as well as in Maurice Charney's Style in Hamlet (1969). (See also works on acting and costume, listed below in section 7.)

On character see Arthur Sewall, Character and Society in Shakespeare (1951). On the construction of the plots, an old book, Richard G. Moulton's Shakespeare as a Dramatic Artist (3rd ed., 1893; rev. and enl. ed., 1966), remains one of the best, but see also Harley Granville-Barker, Prefaces to Shakespeare (2 vols., 1946-47; four vols. in paperback, 1965); Madeleine Doran, Endeavors of Art (1954); Nevill Coghill, Shakespeare's Professional Skills (1964); Hereward Price, Construction in Shakespeare (1951); and the works listed in the second paragraph of section 11.

On Shakespeare's English, in addition to the dictionaries by Schmidt, Onions, and Partridge mentioned in section 1, and the titles mentioned in the first paragraph of this section, the following are useful: E. A. Abbott, A Shakespearian Grammar (new ed., 1886); Henry Cecil Wyld, A History of Modern Colloquial English (3rd ed., 1936); Albert C. Baugh, A History of the English Language (2nd ed., 1957); Thomas Pyles, The Origins and Development of the English Language (1964); L. M. Myers, The Roots of Modern English (1966); and A. C. Partridge, Tudor to Augustan English (1969). On pronunciation see Helge Kökeritz, Shakespeare's Pronunciation (1953), and his Shakespeare's Names (1959); and Eric J. Dobson, English Pronunciation, 1500-1700 (2 vols., 1957). Columbia Records, Inc., has issued a long-playing record of Kökeritz illustrating Shakespeare's pronunciation. M. M. Mahood, Shakespeare's Wordplay (1957), contains ingenious discussions of puns, as does Kökeritz' Shakespeare's Pronunciation.

5. TEXTUAL MATTERS

Fredson Bowers' article on "Textual Criticism" in The Reader's Encyclopedia of Shakespeare, edited by Oscar James Campbell and Edward G. Quinn (1966), is a good introduction. Bowers' Textual and Literary Criticism (1959) and his On Editing Shakespeare (1966) are also useful. Fuller discussions include Ronald B. McKerrow, An Introduction to Bibliography for Literary Students (1927); Ronald B. McKerrow, Prolegomena for the Oxford Shakespeare: A Study in Editorial Method (1939); W. W. Greg, The Editorial Problem in Shakespeare: A Survey of the Foundations of the Text (1942); W. W. Greg, The Shakespeare First Folio, Its Bibliographical and Textual History (1955); and Charlton Hinman, The Printing and Proof-Reading of the First Folio of Shakespeare (2 vols., 1963).

6. ENGLISH DRAMA BEFORE SHAKESPEARE

E. K. Chambers, The Medieval Stage (2 vols., 1903), is a compendious account; for a short general introduction to early English drama see A. P. Rossiter, English Drama from Early Times to the Elizabethans (1950). Also valuable are V. A. Kolve, The Play Called "Corpus Christi" (1966); Frederick M. Salter, Mediaeval Drama in Chester (1955); David M. Bevington, From "Mankind" to Marlowe: Growth of Structure in the Popular Drama of Tudor England (1962); and, for the development of the medieval Vice to one kind of Elizabethan villain, Bernard Spivack, Shakespeare and the Allegory of Evil (1958).

The best general treatment of Shakespeare's immediate dramatic heritage is F. P. Wilson and G. K. Hunter, The English Drama, 1485-1585 (1969). More specialized studies are Frederick Boas, University Drama in the Tudor Age (1914); Thomas W. Craik, The Tudor Interlude: Stage, Costume, and Acting (1958); Willard Farnham, The Medieval Heritage of Elizabethan Tragedy (1936); Wolfgang H. Clemen, English Tragedy Before Shakespeare: The Development of Dramatic Speech, tr. T. S. Dorsch (1961). On the court and the drama see E. K. Chambers, The Elizabethan Stage (4 vols., 1923); Enid Welsford, The Court Masque (1927); Marion Jones, "The Court and the Dramatists," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 9: Elizabethan Theatre, edited by John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1967); A Book of Masques; in Honor of Allardyce Nicoll (1967).

7. THE THEATER AND THE ACTORS

The most inclusive work (except for its relative neglect of acting) is E. K. Chambers, The Elizabethan Stage (4 vols., 1923). For the influence of earlier staging, see George R. Kernodle, From Art to Theatre: Form and Convention in the Renaissance (1944), and Glynne Wickham, Early English Stages, 1300 to 1660 (3 vols. projected, 1959-).

For a short account of the public playhouse see Alois M. Nagler, Shakespeare's Stage (1958); longer accounts are in C. Walter Hodges, The Globe Restored (2nd ed., 1968), and in Bernard Beckerman, Shakespeare at the Globe, 1599-1609 (1962). Frances Yates, in Theatre of the World (1969), argues that the "symbolic geometry" of the Globe, relating the microcosm to the macrocosm, is indebted to a tradition that goes back to Roman theatrical architecture. Shakespeare Survey 12, edited by Allardyce Nicoll (1959), in part devoted to the Elizabethan playhouse, includes Richard Hosley's important article on the discovery-space behind the stage doors. Hosley also has articles on the gallery over the stage, in Shakespeare Quarterly, VIII (1957), and on the music-room, in Shakespeare Survey 13, edited by Allardyce Nicoll (1960). Alfred Harbage, Shakespeare's Audience (1941), discusses the size and social composition of the popular audience. Irwin Smith offers a detailed conjecture in Shakespeare's Blackfriars Playhouse (1964), reviewed in Journal of English and Germanic Philology, LXV (1966), 178-82.

W. W. Greg, Dramatic Documents from the Elizabethan Playhouses; Stage Plots; Actors' Parts; Prompt Books (2 vols., 1931), reproduces the basic materials. On acting styles see Alfred Harbage, "Elizabethan Acting," PMLA, LIV (1939), reprinted in his Theatre for Shakespeare (1955); Bertram L. Joseph, Acting Shakespeare (1960); B. L. Joseph, Elizabethan Acting (2nd ed., 1964); Chapter 2 of John Russell Brown, Shakespeare's Plays in Performance (1966); Daniel Seltzer, "Elizabethan Acting in Othello," Shakespeare Quarterly, X (1959); and Daniel Seltzer, "The Staging of the Last Plays," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 8: Later Shakespeare, edited by John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1966). See also the works by Charney, Bethell, and Styann mentioned in section 4. On post-Elizabethan acting see Arthur Colby Sprague, Shakespeare and the Actors: The Stage Business in His Plays (1660-1905) (1944). On costume and spectacle see Marie C. Linthicum, Costume in the Drama of Shakespeare and His Contemporaries (1936); Hal H. Smith, "Some Principles of Elizabethan Stage Costume," Journal of the Warburg and Courtauld Institutes, XXV (1962); and Alice S. Venezky, Pageantry on the Shakespearean Stage (1951).

8. STUDIES OF MANY OR ALL OF THE WORKS

Hardin Craig, An Interpretation of Shakespeare (1948), is a solid study of most aspects of the works. Mark Van Doren, Shakespeare (1939); Donald A. Stauffer, Shakespeare's World of Images; The Development of his Moral Ideas (1949); Derek Traversi, An Approach to Shakespeare (2 vols.; 3rd rev. ed., 1968-69); Francis Fergusson, Shakespeare: The Pattern in His Carpet (1970); and Norman Rabkin, Shakespeare and the Common Understanding (1967), are primarily critical studies. Alfred Harbage, William Shakespeare: A Reader's Guide (1963), has a discussion of style and discussions of most of the major plays. Harley Granville-Barker, Prefaces to Shakespeare (2 vols., 1946-47; four vols. in paperback, 1965), examines ten plays: the first of the two volumes is on Hamlet, King Lear, The Merchant of Venice, Antony and Cleopatra, and Cymbeline; the second volume is on Othello, Coriolanus, Julius Caesar, Romeo and Juliet, and Love's Labor's Lost. M. C. Bradbrook, Shakespeare and Elizabethan Poetry: A Study of His Earlier Work in Relation to the Poetry of the Time (1951), discusses the poems and the plays to about 1602. Three valuable books on specific themes that run through many plays are Geoffrey Bush, Shakespeare and the Natural Condition (1956); Anne Richter, Shakespeare and the Idea of the Play (1962); and Roland Mushat Frye, Shakespeare and Christian Doctrine (1963).

Older major criticism includes Johnson on Shakespeare, edited by Arthur Sherbo (2 vols., 1968); August Wilhelm von Schlegel, A Course of Lectures on Dramatic Art and Literature (1815; tr. J. Black, 1846); William Hazlitt, Characters of Shakespeare's Plays (1817); and Samuel Taylor Coleridge, Shakespearean Criticism, edited by Thomas Middleton Raysor (2 vols., 2nd ed., 1960). Anthologies of older criticism are: D. Nichol Smith (ed.), Shakespeare Criticism: A Selection (1916), containing material from 1623 to 1840, and Anne Bradby (ed.), Shakespeare Criticism, 1919-1935 (1936). F. E. Halliday (ed.), Shakespeare and His Critics (rev. ed., 1958), and Frank Kermode (ed.), Four Centuries of Shakespearean Criticism (1965), span the entire period. Anthologies of recent criticism include Anne Bradby Ridler (ed.), Shakespeare Criticism, 1935-1960 (1963); Norman Rabkin, Approaches to Shakespeare (1964); Leonard F. Dean (ed.), Shakespeare: Modern Essays in Criticism (rev. ed., 1967); James L. Calderwood and Harold E. Toliver (eds.), Essays in Shakespearean Criticism (1970); and Alvin B. Kernan, Modern Shakespearean Criticism (1970).

9. THE COMEDIES

Northrop Frye has written two seminal essays and a book on the comedies: "The Argument of Comedy," English Institute Essays 1948, edited by D. A. Robertson (1949); "Characterization in Shakespearean Comedy," Shakespeare Quarterly, IV (1953), 271-77; and A Natural Perspective: The Development of Shakespearean Comedy and Romance (1965). Frye's Anatomy of Criticism also has much valuable material on comedy. Books on most or all of the comedies are: John Russell Brown, Shakespeare and His Comedies (2nd ed., 1962); Larry S. Champion, The Evolution of Shakespeare's Comedy (1970); H. B. Charlton, Shakespearean Comedy (1938); Bertrand Evans, Shakespeare's Comedies (1960); and Robert Grams Hunter, Shakespeare and the Comedy of Forgiveness (1965). Thomas Marc Parrott, Shakespearean Comedy (1949), examines comic elements in all of Shakespeare's plays. Nevill Coghill, "The Basis of Shakespearean Comedy," Shakespeare Criticism, 1935-1960, edited by Anne Bradby Ridler (1963), pp. 201-27, examines some of the plays against the inherited critical background. Kenneth Muir (ed.), Shakespeare: The Comedies (1965), is an anthology of recent criticism. Shakespeare Survey 8, edited by Allardyce Nicoll (1955), and Shakespeare Survey 22, edited by Kenneth Muir (1969), are largely devoted to the comedies. M. C. Bradbrook, The Growth and Structure of Elizabethan Comedy (1955), is especially good on pre-Shakespearean comedy. David L. Stevenson, The Love-Game Comedy (1946), discusses the witty lovers and the traditions behind them. Three specialized studies are O. J. Campbell, Shakespeare's Satire (1943; 1963); R. H. Goldsmith, Wise Fools in Shakespeare (1955); C. Gesner, Shakespeare and Greek Romances (1970).

On the earlier comedies see E. M. W. Tillyard, Shakespeare's Early Comedies (1965); F. P. Wilson, Shakespearean and Other Studies (1969); John Dover Wilson, Shakespeare's Happy Comedies (1963); and C. L. Barber, Shakespeare's Festive Comedy (1959), which examines Love's Labor's Lost, A Midsummer Night's Dream, The Merchant of Venice, As You Like It, and Twelfth Night against a background of social festivities (and also discusses 1 and 2 Henry IV). On the "problem" comedies see W. W. Lawrence, Shakespeare's Problem Comedies (1931); E. M. W. Tillyard, Shakespeare's Problem Plays (1949); and Ernest Schanzer, The Problem Plays of Shakespeare (1963), which seeks to define the term and then studies Measure for Measure as well as two tragedies, Julius Caesar and Antony and Cleopatra. Much has been written on the last plays, the romances. See Derek Traversi, Shakespeare: The Last Phase (1954); G. Wilson Knight, The Crown of Life: Essays in Interpretation of Shakespeare's Final Plays (1947); and E. M. W. Tillyard, Shakespeare's Last Plays (1938; 6th ed., 1964). Shakespeare Survey 11, edited by Allardyce Nicoll (1958), contains several important articles on the romances. See also Stanley Wells, "Shakespeare and Romance," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 8: Later Shakespeare, edited by John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1966).

10. THE HISTORIES

F. P. Wilson has a masterful essay on "The English History Play" in his Shakespearean and Other Studies (1969), and A. P. Rossiter has three relevant essays in his "Angel with Horns" and Other Shakespeare Lectures, edited by Graham Storey (1961). Valuable longer accounts are E. M. W. Tillyard, Shakespeare's History Plays (1944; 1962); Irving Ribner, The English History Play in the Age of Shakespeare (1957; rev. ed., 1965); and Max Meredith Reese, The Cease of Majesty: A Study of Shakespeare's History Plays (1961). Northrop Frye has many illuminating comments on the histories in Fools of Time: Studies in Shakespearean Tragedy (1967). Eugene M. Waith (ed.), Shakespeare: The Histories (1965), is a collection of fairly recent essays on these plays; Shakespeare Survey 6, edited by Allardyce Nicoll (1953), is largely devoted to the histories. On the second tetralogy see Derek Traversi, Shakespeare: From "Richard II" to "Henry V" (1957), and Alvin B. Kernan, "The Henriad: Shakespeare's Major History Plays," Modern Shakespearean Criticism, edited by Alvin B. Kernan (1970).

11. THE TRAGEDIES

The books by Clemen, Farnham, Spivack, and Wilson and Hunter mentioned in section 6 are highly relevant. Howard Baker, Induction to Tragedy: A Study in a Development of Form in "Gorboduc," "The Spanish Tragedy," and "Titus Andronicus" (1939), is also useful, but it is excessive in its rejection of Seneca as a considerable influence. See also F. L. Lucas, Seneca and Elizabethan Tragedy (1922); S. F. Johnson, "The Tragic Hero in Early Elizabethan Drama," Studies in Renaissance Drama, edited by J. W. Bennett, O. Cargill, and V. Hall (1959); D. J. Palmer, "Elizabethan Tragic Heroes," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 9: Elizabethan Theatre, edited by John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1967); and J. M. R. Margeson, The Origins of English Tragedy (1967). J. V. Cunningham, Woe or Wonder: The Emotional Effect of Shakespearean Tragedy (1951; reprinted in Cunningham's Tradition and Poetic Structure: Essays in Literary History and Criticism [1960]), is valuable both for its main thesis and for its readings of particular passages.

A. C. Bradley, Shakespearean Tragedy (1904; 1965), on Hamlet, Othello, King Lear, and Macbeth, remains a work of first importance, although its emphasis on character is now unfashionable; Maynard Mack offers valuable notes toward a different approach in "The Jacobean Shakespeare: Some Observations on the Construction of the Tragedies," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 1: Jacobean Theatre, edited by John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1960), pp. 11-41. Helpful general studies include G. B. Harrison, Shakespeare's Tragedies (1951); John Holloway, The Story of the Night (1961); Irving Ribner, Patterns in Shakespearean Tragedy (1960); and Harold S. Wilson, On the Design of Shakespearean Tragedy (1957). William Rosen, Shakespeare and the Craft of Tragedy (1960), also deals with construction; Brents Stirling, Unity in Shakespearean Tragedy: The Interplay of Theme and Character (1956), is largely concerned with unifying images; Northrop Frye, Fools of Time: Studies in Shakespearean Tragedy (1967), is perhaps less valuable to the student than is his Anatomy of Criticism (1957). G. Wilson Knight's The Wheel of Fire: Essays in Interpretation of Shakespeare's Sombre Tragedies (1930; 5th rev. ed., 1957) is chiefly devoted to the tragedies. Alfred Harbage (ed.), Shakespeare: The Tragedies (1964), is a useful collection of modern essays.

Specialized studies covering several plays include: Nicholas Brooke, Shakespeare's Early Tragedies (1968); Frederick W. Sternfeld, Music in Shakespearean Tragedy (1963); M. W. MacCallum, Shakespeare's Roman Plays and Their Background (1910); Shakespeare Survey 10, edited by Allardyce Nicoll (1957), also on the Roman plays; and Maurice Charney, Shakespeare's Roman Plays: The Function of Imagery in the Drama (1961). R. A. Brower, Hero and Saint: Shakespeare and the Greco-Roman Heroic Tradition (1970), discusses the classical plays and Hamlet, Othello, and King Lear.

12. INDIVIDUAL PLAYS

All's Well That Ends Well

- Arthos, John. The Art of Shakespeare (1964).
 Calderwood, James Lee. "Styles of Knowing in All's Well," Modern Language Quarterly, XXV (1964), 272-94.
 Halio, Jay L. "All's Well That Ends Well," Shakespeare Quarterly, XV (1964), 33-43.
 Hunter, G. K. (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: All's Well That Ends Well (3rd ed., 1959).
 Hunter, Robert Grams. Shakespeare and the Comedy of Forgiveness (1965).
 Knight, G. Wilson. The Sovereign Flower: On Shakespeare as the Poet of Royalism (1958).
 Lawrence, W. W. Shakespeare's Problem Comedies (1931; 1960).
 Price, Joseph G. The Unfortunate Comedy: A Study of "All's Well That Ends Well" and Its Critics (1968).
 Rossiter, A. P. "Angels with Horns" and Other Shakespeare Lectures, ed. Graham Storey (1961).
 Schoff, Francis G. "Claudio, Bertram, and a Note on Interpretation," Shakespeare Quarterly, X (1959), 11-23.
 Stoll, Elmer Edgar. From Shakespeare to Joyce (1946).
 Tillyard, E. M. W. Shakespeare's Problem Plays (1949).

Antony and Cleopatra

- Barnet, Sylvan. "Recognition and Reversal in Antony and Cleopatra," Shakespeare Quarterly, VIII (1957), 331-34.
 Bradley, A. C. Oxford Lectures on Poetry (1909).
 Cecil, David. Antony and Cleopatra, W. P. Ker Memorial Lecture No. 4 (1943). Reprinted in Poets and Story-Tellers (1949; 1961).
 Coleridge, Samuel Taylor. Shakespearean Criticism, ed. Thomas Middleton Raysor (2 vols.; 2nd ed., 1960).
 Danby, John F. Poets on Fortune's Hill (1952).
 Farnham, Willard. Shakespeare's Tragic Frontier (1950).

- Goldberg, S. L. "The Tragedy of the Imagination: A Reading of Antony and Cleopatra," The Melbourne Critical Review, IV (1961), 41-64.
 Granville-Barker, Harley. Prefaces to Shakespeare (2 vols., 1946-47), Vol. 1.
 Holloway, John. The Story of the Night (1961).
 Kaula, David. "The Time Sense of Antony and Cleopatra," Shakespeare Quarterly, XV (1964), 211-23.
 Knight, G. Wilson. The Imperial Theme: Further Interpretations of Shakespeare's Tragedies Including the Roman Plays (1931; 3rd ed., 1953).
 Knights, L. C. Some Shakespearean Themes (1959).
 Leavis, F. R. "Antony and Cleopatra and All for Love: A Critical Exercise," Scrutiny, V (1936-37), 158-69.
 Lloyd, Michael. "Cleopatra as Isis," Shakespeare Survey 12, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1959), pp. 88-94.
 MacCallum, M. W. Shakespeare's Roman Plays and Their Background (1910).
 Mack, Maynard. "The Jacobean Shakespeare: Some Observations on the Construction of the Tragedies," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 1: Jacobean Theatre, eds. John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1960), pp. 11-41.
 Maxwell, J. C. "Shakespeare's Roman Plays: 1900-56," Shakespeare Survey 10, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1957), pp. 1-11.
 Ornstein, Robert. "The Ethic of the Imagination: Love and Art in Antony and Cleopatra," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 8: Later Shakespeare, eds. John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1966), pp. 31-46.
 Schanzer, Ernest. The Problem Plays of Shakespeare: A Study of "Julius Caesar," "Measure for Measure," and "Antony and Cleopatra" (1963).
 Spencer, T. J. B. "Shakespeare and the Elizabethan Romans," Shakespeare Survey 10, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1957), pp. 27-38.
 Stewart, J. I. M. Character and Motive in Shakespeare (1949).
 Traversi, Derek. Shakespeare: The Roman Plays (1963).
- As You Like It*
- Barber, C. L. Shakespeare's Festive Comedy (1959).
 Barnet, Sylvan. "Strange Events: Improbability in As You Like It," Shakespeare Studies 4, ed. J. Leeds Barroll (1969), pp. 119-31.
 Brown, John Russell. Shakespeare and His Comedies (1957; 2nd ed., 1962).
 Campbell, Oscar James. Shakespeare's Satire (1943).
 Charlton, H. B. Shakespearean Comedy (1938).
 Gardner, Helen. "As You Like It," More Talking of Shakespeare, ed. John W. P. Garrett (1959), pp. 17-32.
 Goldsmith, Robert H. Wise Fools in Shakespeare (1955).
 Halio, Jay L. "'No Clock in the Forest': Time in As You Like It," Studies in English Literature: 1500-1900, II (1962), 197-207.
 Hunter, G. K. Shakespeare: The Late Comedies (1962).
 Jenkins, H. "As You Like It," Shakespeare Survey 8, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1955), pp. 40-51.
 Knowles, Richard. "Myth and Type in As You Like It," ELH; A Journal of English Literary History, XXXIII (1966), 1-22.
 Lascelles, M. "Shakespeare's Pastoral Comedy," More Talking of Shakespeare, ed. John W. P. Garrett (1959), pp. 70-86.
 McIntosh, Angus. "As You Like It: A Grammatical Clue to Character," A Review of English Literature, IV, No. 2 (April 1963), 68-81.
 Mincoff, Marco. "What Shakespeare Did to Rosalynde," Shakespeare Jahrbuch, XCVI (1960), 78-89.
 Shaw, John. "Fortune and Nature in As You Like It," Shakespeare Quarterly, VI (1955), 45-50.
 Smith, James. "As You Like It," Scrutiny, IX (1940), 9-32.
 Stevenson, David L. The Love-Game Comedy (1946).

The Comedy of Errors

- Baldwin, T. W. On the Compositional Genetics of "The Comedy of Errors" (1965).
- Barber, C. L. "Shakespearian Comedy in The Comedy of Errors," College English, XXV (1964), 493-97.
- Brooks, Harold F. "Themes and Structure in The Comedy of Errors," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 3: Early Shakespeare, eds. John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1961), pp. 55-71.
- Brown, John Russell. Shakespeare and His Comedies (1957; 2nd ed., 1962).
- Clubb, L. G. "Italian Comedy and The Comedy of Errors," Comparative Literature, XIX, 3 (1967), 240-51.
- Evans, Bertrand. Shakespeare's Comedies (1960).
- Fergusson, Francis. "Two Comedies," The Human Image in Dramatic Literature (1957), pp. 144-57.
- Foakes, R. A. (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: The Comedy of Errors (1962).
- Hamilton, A. C. The Early Shakespeare (1967).
- Lea, K. M. Italian Popular Comedy: A Study of the Commedia dell'Arte, 1560-1620, with Special Reference to the English Stage (1934).
- Masefield, John. William Shakespeare (1911; rev. ed., 1954).
- Segal, Erich. Roman Laughter: The Comedy of Plautus (1968).
- Traversi, Derek. Shakespeare: The Early Comedies (1960).
- Williams, Gwyn. "The Comedy of Errors Rescued from Tragedy," A Review of English Literature, V (1964), 63-71.

Coriolanus

- Bradley, A. C. A Miscellany (1929).
- Browning, I. R. "Coriolanus—'A Boy of Tears,'" Essays in Criticism, V (1955), 18-31.
- Burke, Kenneth. "Coriolanus and the Delights of Faction," Hudson Review, XIX (1966-67), 185-201.
- Charney, Maurice (ed.). Discussions of Shakespeare's Roman Plays (1964). Selections by Samuel Johnson, Paul A. Jorgensen, Willard Farnham, and D. J. Enright.
- Ellis-Fermor, Una. Shakespeare the Dramatist, ed. Kenneth Muir (1961).
- Farnham, Willard. Shakespeare's Tragic Frontier (1950).
- Gordon, D. J. "Name and Fame: Shakespeare's Coriolanus," Papers Mainly Shakespearian, ed. G. I. Duthie (1964).
- Heuer, Herman. "From Plutarch to Shakespeare: A Study of Coriolanus," Shakespeare Survey 10, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1957), pp. 50-59.
- Holloway, John. The Story of the Night (1961).
- Kitto, H. D. F. Poesis, Structure and Thought (1966).
- Knight, G. Wilson. The Imperial Theme: Further Interpretations of Shakespeare's Tragedies Including the Roman Plays (1931; 3rd ed., 1953).
- Knights, L. C. Some Shakespearean Themes (1959).
- Lewis, Wyndham. The Lion and the Fox (1951).
- MacCallum, M. W. Shakespeare's Roman Plays and Their Background (1910).
- MacLure, Millar. "Shakespeare and the Lonely Dragon," University of Toronto Quarterly, XXIV (1955), 109-20.
- Maxwell, J. C. "Animal Imagery in Coriolanus," Modern Language Review, XLII (1947), 417-21.
- Murry, John Middleton. John Clare and Other Studies (1950).
- Oliver, H. J. "Coriolanus as Tragic Hero," Shakespeare Quarterly, X (1959), 53-60.
- Palmer, John. Political Characters of Shakespeare (1945).
- Proser, Matthew. The Heroic Image in Shakespeare's Tragedies (1965).
- Siegel, Paul N. "Shakespeare and the Neo-chivalric Cult of Honor," The Centennial Review, VIII (1964), 39-70.
- Spencer, T. J. B. Shakespeare: The Roman Plays (1963).
- Traversi, Derek. Shakespeare: The Roman Plays (1963).
- Waith, Eugene. The Herculean Hero (1962).

Cymbeline

- Brockbank, J. P. "History and Histrionics in Cymbeline," Shakespeare Survey 11, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1958), pp. 42-49.
- Edwards, Philip. "Shakespeare's Romances: 1900-1957," Shakespeare Survey 11, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1958), pp. 1-18.
- Evans, Bertrand. "Cymbeline," Shakespeare's Comedies (1960), pp. 245-89.
- Frye, Northrop. A Natural Perspective: The Development of Shakespearean Comedy and Romance (1965).
- Gesner, Carol. "Cymbeline and the Greek Romance: A Study in Genre," Studies in English Renaissance Literature, ed. W. F. McNeir (1962), pp. 105-31.
- Greenlaw, Edwin. "Shakespeare's Pastorals," Studies in Philology, XIII (1916), 122-54.
- Hoener, F. D. "Irony and Romance in Cymbeline," Studies in English Literature, II (1962), 219-28.
- Jones, Emrys. "Stuart Cymbeline," Essays in Criticism, XI (1961), 84-99.
- Knight, G. Wilson. "Cymbeline," The Crown of Life: Essays in Interpretation of Shakespeare's Final Plays (1947), pp. 129-202.
- Lawrence, W. W. "The Wager in Cymbeline," Shakespeare's Problem Comedies (1931), pp. 174-205.
- Maxwell, J. C. (ed.). The New Cambridge Shakespeare: Cymbeline (1960).
- Nosworthy, J. M. "The Sources of the Wager Plot in Cymbeline," Notes and Queries, CXCVII (1952), 93-96.
- (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: Cymbeline (1955).
- Ribner, Irving. "Shakespeare and Legendary History: Lear and Cymbeline," Shakespeare Quarterly, VII (1956), 47-52.
- Stauffer, Donald A. "Cymbeline," Shakespeare's World of Images: The Development of His Moral Ideas (1949), pp. 278-91.
- Stephenson, A. A. "The Significance of Cymbeline," Scrutiny, X (1942), 329-38.
- Thrall, William F. "Cymbeline, Boccaccio, and the Wager Story in England," Studies in Philology, XXVIII (1931), 639-51.
- Wilson, Harold S. "Philaster and Cymbeline," English Institute Essays 1951, ed. Alan S. Downer (1952), pp. 146-67.

Hamlet

- Alexander, Peter. Hamlet: Father and Son (1955).
- Bevington, David (ed.). Twentieth Century Interpretations of "Hamlet" (1968).
- Bradley, A. C. Shakespearean Tragedy (1904; 1965).
- Brown, John Russell, and Bernard Harris (eds.). Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 5: "Hamlet" (1963).
- Charney, Maurice. Style in "Hamlet" (1969).
- Driver, Tom F. The Sense of History in Greek and Shakespearean Drama (1960).
- Elliott, G. R. Scourge and Minister: A Study of "Hamlet" as a Tragedy of Revengefulness and Justice (1951).
- Granville-Barker, Harley. Prefaces to Shakespeare (2 vols., 1946-47).
- Jones, Ernest. Hamlet and Oedipus (1954).
- Kitto, H. D. F. Form and Meaning in Drama (1956).
- Levin, Harry. The Question of Hamlet (1959).
- Mack, Maynard. "The World of Hamlet," Yale Review, XLI (1952), 502-23.
- Mahood, M. M. Shakespeare's Wordplay (1957).
- Mander, Raymond, and Joe Mitchenson (comps.). Hamlet Through the Ages: A Pictorial Record from 1709 (1952).
- Muir, Kenneth. Shakespeare's "Hamlet" (1963).
- Nicoll, Allardyce (ed.). Shakespeare Survey 9 (1956).

- Ornstein, Robert. The Moral Vision of Jacobean Tragedy (1960).
 Prosser, Eleanor. Hamlet and Revenge (1967).
 Stoll, Elmer Edgar. Art and Artifice in Shakespeare (1933; 1962).
 Walker, Roy. "The Time Is Out of Joint": A Study of "Hamlet" (1948).
 Williamson, Claude C. H. (comp.). Readings on the Character of Hamlet, 1661-1947 (1951).
 Wilson, John Dover. What Happens in "Hamlet" (1935; 3rd ed., 1951).

Henry IV, Part One

- Auden, W. H. "The Dyer's Hand" and Other Essays (1962), pp. 182-208.
 Barber, C. L. Shakespeare's Festive Comedy (1959).
 Bradley, A. C. Oxford Lectures on Poetry (1909).
 Brooks, Cleanth, and R. B. Heilman. Understanding Drama (1945).
 Charlton, H. B. "Falstaff," Shakespearian Comedy (1938).
 Dickinson, Hugh. "The Reformation of Prince Hal," Shakespeare Quarterly, XII (1961), 33-46.
 Doran, Madeleine. "Imagery in Richard II and in Henry IV," Modern Language Review, XXXVII (1942), 113-22.
 Evans, Gareth Lloyd. "The Comical-Tragic-Historical Method—Henry IV," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 3: Early Shakespeare, eds. John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1961), pp. 145-63.
 Hemingway, Samuel B. "On Behalf of That Falstaff," Shakespeare Quarterly, III (1952), 307-11.
 Jenkins, Harold. The Structural Problem in Shakespeare's "Henry the Fourth" (1956).
 Kris, Ernst. "Prince Hal's Conflict," Psychoanalytic Quarterly, XVII (1948), 487-505. Reprinted in Psychoanalytic Explorations in Art (1962).
 McLuhan, Herbert Marshall. "Henry IV, a Mirror for Magistrates," University of Toronto Quarterly, XVII (1948), 152-60.
 Spivack, Bernard. "Falstaff and the Psychomachia," Shakespeare Quarterly, VIII (1957), 449-59.
 Sprague, Arthur Colby. "Gadshill Revisited," Shakespeare Quarterly, IV (1953), 125-37.
 Stoll, Elmer Edgar. Shakespeare Studies: Historical and Comparative in Method (1927).
 Tillyard, E. M. W. Shakespeare's History Plays (1944; 1962).
 Traversi, Derek. Shakespeare: From "Richard II" to "Henry V" (1957).
 Unger, Leonard. The Man in the Name (1956).
 Waldock, A. J. A. "The Men in Buckram," Review of English Studies, XXIII (1947), 16-23.
 Wilson, John Dover. The Fortunes of Falstaff (1943).

Henry IV, Part Two

- Barber, C. L. "Rule and Misrule in Henry IV," Shakespeare's Festive Comedy (1959).
 Barish, Jonas A. "The Turning Away of Prince Hal," Shakespeare Studies 1, ed. J. Leeds Barroll (1965), pp. 9-17.
 Bradley, A. C. "The Rejection of Falstaff," Oxford Lectures on Poetry (1909).
 Freud, Sigmund. Jokes and Their Relation to the Unconscious (1905), The Standard Edition of the Complete Psychological Works, eds. James Strachey et al. (24 vols., 1953-), Vol. 8, pp. 231-32.
 Jenkins, Harold. "Shakespeare's History Plays: 1900-1951," Shakespeare Survey 6, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1953), pp. 1-15.
 ———. The Structural Problem in Shakespeare's "Henry the Fourth" (1956).

- Jorgensen, Paul A. "The 'Dastardly Treachery' of Prince John of Lancaster," PMLA, LXXVI (1961), 488-92.
 Kaiser, Walter. "Shakespeare's Falstaff," Praisers of Folly (1963).
 Knights, L. C. "Time's Subjects: The Sonnets and King Henry IV, Part II," Some Shakespearean Themes (1959).
 Knowles, Richard. "Unquiet and the Double Plot of 2 Henry IV," Shakespeare Studies 2, ed. J. Leeds Barroll (1967), pp. 133-40.
 Kris, Ernst. "Prince Hal's Conflict," Psychoanalytic Quarterly, XVII (1948), 487-505. Reprinted in Psychoanalytic Explorations in Art (1962).
 Leech, Clifford. "The Unity of 2 Henry IV," Shakespeare Survey 6, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1953), pp. 16-24.
 Shaaber, M. A. "The Unity of Henry IV," Joseph Quincy Adams Memorial Studies, eds. James G. McManaway, G. E. Dawson, and E. E. Willoughby (1948), pp. 217-27.
 ——— (ed.). A New Variorum Edition of the Second Part of Henry the Fourth (1941).
 Spivack, Bernard. "Falstaff and the Psychomachia," Shakespeare Quarterly, VIII (1957), 449-59.
 Spurgeon, Caroline. "Note on Images as a Revelation of Character in the Drama," Shakespeare's Imagery and What It Tells Us (1935; 1958).
 Tillyard, E. M. W. "Henry IV," Shakespeare's History Plays (1944; 1962).
 Traversi, Derek. "Henry the Fourth, Part II," Shakespeare: From "Richard II" to "Henry V" (1957).
 Williams, Philip. "The Birth and Death of Falstaff Reconsidered," Shakespeare Quarterly, VIII (1957), 359-65.
 Wilson, John Dover. The Fortunes of Falstaff (1943).
 Young, David P. (ed.). Twentieth Century Interpretations of "Henry IV, Part Two" (1968).

Henry V

- Braddy, Haldeen. "Shakespeare's Henry V and the French Nobility," Texas Studies in Literature and Language, III (1961), 189-96.
 Campbell, Lily B. Shakespeare's "Histories": Mirrors of Elizabethan Policy (1947).
 Ellis-Fermor, Una. Frontiers of Drama (1945).
 Granville-Barker, Harley. "From Henry V to Hamlet," The Annual Shakespeare Lecture (1925). Reprinted, with revisions, in Studies in Shakespeare, ed. Peter Alexander (1964).
 Hobday, C. H. "Imagery and Irony in Henry V," Shakespeare Survey 21, ed. Kenneth Muir (1968), pp. 107-13.
 Jorgensen, Paul A. Shakespeare's Military World (1956).
 Knights, L. C. Shakespeare: The Histories (1962).
 Matthews, Honor. Character and Symbol in Shakespeare's Plays (1962).
 Palmer, John. Political Characters of Shakespeare (1945).
 Reese, Max Meredith. The Cease of Majesty: A Study of Shakespeare's History Plays (1961).
 Ribner, Irving. The English History Play in the Age of Shakespeare (1957; rev. ed., 1965).
 Tillyard, E. M. W. Shakespeare's History Plays (1944; 1962).
 Traversi, Derek. Shakespeare: From "Richard II" to "Henry V" (1957).
 Walter, J. H. (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: King Henry V (1954).
 Wilson, John Dover (ed.). The New Cambridge Shakespeare: King Henry V (1947).
 Yeats, W. B. "Ideas of Good and Evil" (1903), Essays and Introductions (1961).

Henry VI, Part One

- Alexander, Peter. Shakespeare's "Henry VI" and "Richard III" (1929).

- Bevington, David M. "The Domineering Female in 1 Henry VI," Shakespeare Studies 2, ed. J. Leeds Barroll (1967), pp. 51-58.
- Brockbank, J. P. "The Frame of Disorder—Henry VI," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 3: Early Shakespeare, eds. John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1961), pp. 73-99.
- Cairncross, Andrew S. (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: The First Part of King Henry VI (1962).
- Campbell, Lily B. Shakespeare's "Histories": Mirrors of Elizabethan Policy (1947).
- Clemen, Wolfgang H. "Anticipation and Foreboding in Shakespeare's Early Histories," Shakespeare Survey 6, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1953), pp. 23-35.
- Gaw, Allison. The Origin and Development of "1 Henry VI" in Relation to Shakespeare, Marlowe, Peele, and Green (1926).
- Jackson, Barry. "On Producing Henry VI," Shakespeare Survey 6, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1953), pp. 49-52.
- Jorgensen, Paul A. Shakespeare's Military World (1956).
- Kirschbaum, Leo. "The Authorship of 1 Henry VI," PMLA, LXVII (1952), 809-22.
- Mincoff, Marco. "The Composition of Henry VI, Part I," Shakespeare Quarterly, XVI (1965), 279-87.
- Price, Hereward T. Construction in Shakespeare (1951).
- Reese, Max Meredith. The Cease of Majesty: A Study of Shakespeare's History Plays (1961).
- Ribner, Irving. The English History Play in the Age of Shakespeare (1957; rev. ed., 1965).
- Talbert, Ernest William. Elizabethan Drama and Shakespeare's Early Plays: An Essay in Historical Criticism (1963).
- Tillyard, E. M. W. Shakespeare's History Plays (1944; 1962).
- Wilson, John Dover (ed.). The New Cambridge Shakespeare: The First Part of King Henry VI (1952).

Henry VI, Part Two

- Alexander, Peter. Shakespeare's "Henry VI" and "Richard III" (1929).
- Berman, Ronald S. "Fathers and Sons in the Henry VI Plays," Shakespeare Quarterly, XIII (1962), 487-97.
- Brockbank, J. P. "The Frame of Disorder—Henry VI," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 3: Early Shakespeare, eds. John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1961), pp. 73-99.
- Cairncross, Andrew S. (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: The Second Part of King Henry VI (1957).
- Campbell, Lily B. Shakespeare's "Histories": Mirrors of Elizabethan Policy (1947).
- Doran, Madeleine. "Henry VI," Parts II and III, Their Relation to "The Contention" and "The True Tragedy," University of Iowa Humanistic Studies, Vol. 4, No. 4 (1928).
- Greg, W. W. The Book of Sir Thomas More (1911).
- Jackson, Barry. "On Producing Henry VI," Shakespeare Survey 6, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1953), pp. 49-52.
- Jordan, John E. "The Reporter of Henry VI, Part II," PMLA, LXIV (1949), 1089-1113.
- Leech, Clifford. "The Two-Part Play: Marlowe and the Early Shakespeare," Shakespeare Jahrbuch, XCII (1958), 90-106.
- Malone, Edmond. A Dissertation on the Three Parts of "King Henry VI," Tending to Show that those Plays Were Not Originally Written by Shakespeare (1787).
- Prouty, Charles T. "The Contention" and Shakespeare's "2 Henry VI": A Comparative Study (1954).
- Ribner, Irving. The English History Play in the Age of Shakespeare (1957; rev. ed., 1965).
- Sandoe, James. "King Henry the Sixth, Part II: Notes During Production," Theatre Annual, XIII (1955), 32-48.
- Tillyard, E. M. W. Shakespeare's History Plays (1944; 1962).
- Turner, Robert Y. "Shakespeare and the Public Confrontation Scene in Early History Plays," Modern Philology, LXXII (1964), 1-12.

- Wilson, John Dover (ed.). The New Cambridge Shakespeare: The Second Part of King Henry VI (1952).

Henry VI, Part Three

- Alexander, Peter. Shakespeare's "Henry VI" and "Richard III" (1929).
- Berman, Ronald S. "Fathers and Sons in the Henry VI Plays," Shakespeare Quarterly, XIII (1962), 487-97.
- Brockbank, J. P. "The Frame of Disorder—Henry VI," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 3: Early Shakespeare, eds. John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1961), pp. 73-99.
- Cairncross, Andrew S. (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: The Third Part of King Henry VI (1964).
- Campbell, Lily B. Shakespeare's "Histories": Mirrors of Elizabethan Policy (1947).
- Doran, Madeleine. "Henry VI," Parts II and III, Their Relation to "The Contention" and "The True Tragedy," University of Iowa Humanistic Studies, Vol. 4, No. 4 (1928).
- Greg, W. W. (ed.). The True Tragedy of Richard Duke of York (Henry the Sixth, Part III), 1595. Shakespeare Quarto Facsimiles, No. 11 (1958).
- Jackson, Barry. "On Producing Henry VI," Shakespeare Survey 6, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1953), pp. 49-52.
- Leech, Clifford. Shakespeare: The Chronicles (1962).
- Reese, Max Meredith. The Cease of Majesty: A Study of Shakespeare's History Plays (1961).
- Ribner, Irving. The English History Play in the Age of Shakespeare (1957; rev. ed., 1965).
- Tillyard, E. M. W. Shakespeare's History Plays (1944; 1962).
- Wilson, John Dover (ed.). The New Cambridge Shakespeare: The Third Part of King Henry VI (1952).

Henry VIII

- Alexander, Peter. "Conjectural History, or Shakespeare's Henry VIII," Essays and Studies, XVI (1930), 85-120.
- Bertram, Paul. "Henry VIII: The Consequences of a Problem of Authorship," Shakespeare and "The Two Noble Kinsmen" (1965).
- Byrne, Muriel St. Clare. "A Stratford Production: Henry VIII," Shakespeare Survey 3, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1950), pp. 120-29. A review of the 1949 Guthrie performance.
- Felperin, Howard. "Shakespeare's Henry VIII: History as Myth," Studies in English Literature: 1500-1900, VI (1966), 225-46.
- Foakes, R. A. (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: King Henry VIII (1957).
- Kermode, Frank. "What Is Shakespeare's Henry VIII About?" Durham University Journal, N.S., IX (1947-48), 48-55.
- Knight, G. Wilson. The Crown of Life: Essays in Interpretation of Shakespeare's Final Plays (1947).
- Leech, Clifford. "The Structure of the Last Plays," Shakespeare Survey 11, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1958), pp. 19-30.
- Maxwell, J. C. (ed.). The New Cambridge Shakespeare: King Henry the Eighth (1962).
- Mincoff, Marco. "Henry VIII and Fletcher," Shakespeare Quarterly, XII (1961), 239-60.
- Reese, Max Meredith. The Cease of Majesty: A Study of Shakespeare's History Plays (1961).
- Ribner, Irving. The English History Play in the Age of Shakespeare (1957; rev. ed., 1965).
- Wasson, John. "In Defense of King Henry VIII," Research Studies, Washington State University (1964), 261-76.

Julius Caesar

- Ayres, H. M. "Shakespeare's Julius Caesar in the Light of Some Other Versions," PMLA, XXV (1910), 183-227.
- Bonjour, Adrien. The Structure of "Julius Caesar" (1958).

- Bullough, Geoffrey. Narrative and Dramatic Sources of Shakespeare, Vol. 5 (1964).
- Charlton, H. B. Shakespearian Tragedy (1948).
- Charney, Maurice. Shakespeare's Roman Plays: The Function of Imagery in the Drama (1961).
- Dean, Leonard F. "Julius Caesar and Modern Criticism," The English Journal (1961), 451-56.
- (ed.). Twentieth Century Interpretations of "Julius Caesar" (1968).
- Dorsch, T. S. (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: Julius Caesar (1955; 1970).
- Foakes, R. A. "An Approach to Julius Caesar," Shakespeare Quarterly, V (1954), 259-70.
- Granville-Barker, Harley. Prefaces to Shakespeare (2 vols., 1946-47), Vol. 2.
- Knight, G. Wilson. The Imperial Theme: Further Interpretations of Shakespeare's Tragedies Including the Roman Plays (1931; 3rd ed., 1953).
- MacCallum, M. W. Shakespeare's Roman Plays and Their Background (1910).
- Muir, Kenneth. Shakespeare's Sources, Vol. 1 (1957).
- Palmer, John. Political Characters of Shakespeare (1945).
- Rabkin, Norman. Shakespeare and the Common Understanding (1967).
- Schanzer, Ernest. The Problem Plays of Shakespeare: A Study of "Julius Caesar," "Measure for Measure," and "Antony and Cleopatra" (1963).
- Smith, Gordon Ross. "Brutus, Virtue, and Will," Shakespeare Quarterly, X (1959), 367-79.
- Smith, Warren D. "The Duplicate Revelation of Portia's Death," Shakespeare Quarterly, IV (1953), 153-61.
- Stewart, J. I. M. Character and Motive in Shakespeare (1949).
- Stirling, Brents. Unity in Shakespearian Tragedy: The Interplay of Theme and Character (1956).
- Walker, Roy. "Unto Caesar: A Review of Recent Productions," Shakespeare Survey 11, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1958), pp. 132-35.
- Whitaker, Virgil K. Shakespeare's Use of Learning (1953).

King John

- Alexander, Peter. Shakespeare's Life and Art (1938).
- Berman, Ronald. "Anarchy and Order in Richard III and King John," Shakespeare Survey 20, ed. Kenneth Muir (1967), pp. 51-59.
- Boklund, Gunnar. "The Troublesome Ending of King John," Studia Neophilologica, XL (1968), 175-84.
- Bonjour, Adrien. "The Road to Swinstead Abbey: A Study of the Sense and Structure of King John," ELH; A Journal of English Literary History, XVIII (1951), 253-74.
- . "Bastinado for the Bastard?" English Studies, XLV Supplement (1964), 169-76.
- Calderwood, James L. "Commodity and Honor in King John," University of Toronto Quarterly, XXIX (1960), 341-56.
- Campbell, Lily B. Shakespeare's "Histories": Mirrors of Elizabethan Policy (1947).
- Elliott, John R. "Shakespeare and the Double Image of King John," Shakespeare Studies 1, ed. J. Leeds Barroll (1965), pp. 64-84.
- Goddard, Harold C. The Meaning of Shakespeare (1951).
- Honigsmann, E. A. J. (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: King John (4th ed., 1954).
- Palmer, John. Political Characters of Shakespeare (1945).
- Pettet, E. C. "Hot Irons and Fever: A Note on Some Imagery of King John," Essays in Criticism, IV (1954), 128-44.
- Rossiter, A. P. "Ambivalence: The Dialectic of the Histories," "Angel with Horns" and Other Shakespeare Lectures (1961).
- Stauffer, Donald A. Shakespeare's World of Images: The Development of His Moral Ideas (1949).

- Tillyard, E. M. W. Shakespeare's History Plays (1944; 1962).
- Wilson, John Dover (ed.). The New Cambridge Shakespeare: King John (1936).

King Lear

- Bradley, A. C. Shakespearean Tragedy (1904; 1965).
- Campbell, Lily B. Shakespeare's Tragic Heroes (1930).
- Cunningham, J. V. Woe or Wonder: The Emotional Effect of Shakespearean Tragedy (1951). Reprinted in Tradition and Poetic Structure: Essays in Literary History and Criticism (1960).
- Dowden, Edward. Shakspeare: A Critical Study of His Mind and Art (1875; 3rd ed., 1962).
- Elton, William R. King Lear and the Gods (1966).
- Fraser, Russell A. Shakespeare's Poetics in Relation to "King Lear" (1962).
- Granville-Barker, Harley. Prefaces to Shakespeare (2 vols., 1946-47).
- Heilman, Robert B. This Great Stage: Image and Structure in "King Lear" (1948).
- Holloway, John. The Story of the Night (1961).
- Knight, G. Wilson. The Wheel of Fire: Essays in Interpretation of Shakespeare's Sombre Tragedies (1930; 5th rev. ed., 1957).
- Leech, Clifford. Shakespeare's Tragedies (1950).
- Lewis, Wyndham. The Lion and the Fox (1927).
- Mack, Maynard. "King Lear" in Our Time (1965).
- Moulton, Richard G. Shakespeare as a Dramatic Artist (3rd ed., 1893; rev. and enl. ed., 1966). Especially Part First, Chapter X: "How Climax Meets Climax in the Centre of Lear."
- Nicoll, Allardyce (ed.). Shakespeare Survey 13 (1960). Volume devoted to King Lear.
- Perrett, Wilfrid. The Story of "King Lear" from Geoffrey of Monmouth to Shakespeare (1904).
- Sewell, Arthur. Character and Society in Shakespeare (1951).
- Stoll, Elmer Edgar. Art and Artifice in Shakespeare (1933; 1962).
- Tannenbaum, Samuel A. Shakespeare's "Lear": A Concise Bibliography (1940).
- Welsford, Enid. The Fool, His Social and Literary History (1935).

Love's Labor's Lost

- Baldwin, T. W. Shakspeare's Five-Act Structure: Shakspeare's Early Plays on the Background of Renaissance Theories of Five-Act Structure from 1470 (1947).
- Barber, C. L. Shakespeare's Festive Comedy (1959).
- Bradbrook, M. C. The School of Night: Study in the Literary Relationships of Sir Walter Raleigh (1936).
- Campbell, Oscar James. "Love's Labour's Lost Restudied," Studies in Shakespeare, Milton and Donne by Members of the English Department of the University of Michigan (1925).
- Charlton, H. B. "The Date of Loves Labours Lost," Modern Language Review, XIII (1918), 257-66, 387-400.
- . Shakespearian Comedy (1938).
- David, Richard. "Shakespeare's Comedies and the Modern Stage," Shakespeare Survey 4, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1951), pp. 129-35.
- Gittings, Robert. Shakespeare's Rival (1960).
- Granville-Barker, Harley. Prefaces to Shakespeare (2 vols., 1946-47), Vol. 2.
- Hoy, Cyrus. The Hyacinth Room (1964).
- Kirschbaum, Leo. "Is The Spanish Tragedy a Leading Case? Did a Bad Quarto of Love's Labour's Lost Ever Exist?" Journal of English and Germanic Philology, XXXVII (1938), 501-12.
- Lambrechts, G. "'The Brief and the Tedious of It': Note sur le Texte de 'Love's Labour's Lost,'" Études Anglaises, XVII (1964), 269-83.

- Lefranc, Abel. Sous le Masque de "William Shakespeare" (1919).
 Oakeshott, W. F. The Queen and the Poet (1960).
 Palmer, John. Comic Characters of Shakespeare (1946).
 Pater, Walter. "Love's Labour's Lost," Appreciations (1889).
 Roesen, Bobbyann. "Love's Labour's Lost," Shakespeare Quarterly, IV (1953), 411-26.
 Schrickx, W. Shakespeare's Early Contemporaries (1956).
 Stratton, L. D. "The Nine Worthies," Ashland Studies in Shakespeare, Ashland, Orgeon, Institute of Renaissance Studies (1965), 67-97.
 Vyvyan, John. Shakespeare and the Rose of Love (1960).
 Westlund, Joseph. "Fancy and Achievement in Love's Labour's Lost," Shakespeare Quarterly, XVIII (1967), 37-46.
 Wilson, John Dover. Shakespeare's Happy Comedies (1962).
 Yates, F. A. A Study of "Love's Labour's Lost" (1936).
 ———. Giordano Bruno and the Hermetic Tradition (1964).

Macbeth

- Blissett, William. "The Secret'st Man of Blood": A Study of Dramatic Irony in Macbeth," Shakespeare Quarterly, X (1959), 397-408.
 Bradley, A. C. Shakespearean Tragedy (1904; 1965).
 Charlton, H. B. Shakespearian Tragedy (1948).
 Driver, Tom F. The Sense of History in Greek and Shakespearean Drama (1960).
 Elliott, G. R. Dramatic Providence in "Macbeth" (1958).
 Farnham, Willard. Shakespeare's Tragic Frontier (1950).
 Knights, L. C. Some Shakespearean Themes (1959).
 Muir, Kenneth (ed.). Shakespeare Survey 19 (1966). Contains nine essays on Macbeth.
 Paul, Henry N. The Royal Play of Macbeth (1950).
 Rosen, William. Shakespeare and the Craft of Tragedy (1960).
 Stirling, Brents. Unity in Shakespearian Tragedy: The Interplay of Theme and Character (1956).
 Walker, Roy. The Time Is Free (1949).

Measure for Measure

- Battenhouse, R. W. "Measure for Measure and the Christian Doctrine of the Atonement," PMLA, LXI (1946), 1029-59.
 Bradbrook, M. C. "Authority, Truth, and Justice in Measure for Measure," Review of English Studies, XVII (1941), 385-99.
 Chambers, R. W. Man's Unconquerable Mind (1952).
 Coghill, Nevill. "Comic Form in Measure for Measure," Shakespeare Survey 8, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1955), pp. 14-26.
 ———. Shakespeare's Professional Skills (1964).
 Empson, William. The Structure of Complex Words (1951).
 Fergusson, Francis. The Human Image in Dramatic Literature (1957).
 Geckle, George L. (ed.). Twentieth Century Interpretations of "Measure for Measure" (1970).
 Holland, Norman. The Shakespearean Imagination (1963).
 Knight, G. Wilson. The Wheel of Fire: Essays in Interpretation of Shakespeare's Sombre Tragedies (1930; 5th rev. ed., 1957).
 Lascelles, Mary. Shakespeare's "Measure for Measure" (1953).
 Lawrence, W. W. Shakespeare's Problem Comedies (1931; 1960).
 ———. "Measure for Measure and Lucio," Shakespeare Quarterly, IX (1958), 443-53.
 Leavis, F. R. The Common Pursuit (1952; 1962).
 Leech, Clifford. "The Meaning of Measure for Measure," Shakespeare Survey 3, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1950), pp. 66-73.
 Maxwell, J. C. "Measure for Measure: A Footnote to Recent Criticism," The Downside Review, LXV (1947), 45-59.
 Merchant, W. Moelwyn. Shakespeare and the Artist (1959).

- Nagarajan, S. "Measure for Measure and Elizabethan Betrothals," Shakespeare Quarterly, XIX (1963), 115-19.
 Pope, Elizabeth M. "The Renaissance Background of Measure for Measure," Shakespeare Survey 2, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1949), pp. 66-82.
 Rossiter, A. P. "Angel with Horns" and Other Shakespeare Lectures, ed. Graham Storey (1961).
 Schanzer, Ernest. The Problem Plays of Shakespeare: A Study of "Julius Caesar," "Measure for Measure," and "Antony and Cleopatra" (1963).
 ———. "Marriage Contracts in Measure for Measure," Shakespeare Survey 13, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1960), pp. 81-89.
 Sewell, Arthur. Character and Society in Shakespeare (1951).
 Sisson, C. J. The Mythical Sorrows of Shakespeare (1934).
 Stevenson, David L. The Achievement of "Measure for Measure" (1966).
 Tillyard, E. M. W. Shakespeare's Problem Plays (1949).
 Wiles, R. W. "Measure for Measure: Failure in the Study, Triumph on the Stage," Transactions of the Royal Society of Canada, Fourth Series, II (1964), 181-93.

The Merchant of Venice

- Barber, C. L. Shakespeare's Festive Comedy (1959).
 Barnet, Sylvan (ed.). Twentieth Century Interpretations of "The Merchant of Venice" (1970).
 ———. "Prodigality and Time in The Merchant of Venice," PMLA, LXXXVII (1972).
 Brown, John Russell (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: The Merchant of Venice (7th rev. ed., 1955).
 ———. "The Realization of Shylock: A Theatrical Criticism," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 3: Early Shakespeare, eds. John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1961), pp. 187-209.
 Charlton, H. B. Shakespearian Comedy (1938).
 Draper, John W. Stratford to Dogberry (1961).
 Granville-Barker, Harley. Prefaces to Shakespeare (2 vols., 1946-47), Vol. 1.
 Grebanier, Bernard. The Truth About Shylock (1962).
 Lewalski, Barbara K. "Biblical Allusion and Allegory in The Merchant of Venice," Shakespeare Quarterly, XIII (1962), 327-43.
 Palmer, John. Comic Characters of Shakespeare (1946).
 Sprague, Arthur Colby. Shakespeare and the Actors (1944).
 Stauffer, Donald A. Shakespeare's World of Images: The Development of His Moral Ideas (1949).

The Merry Wives of Windsor

- Campbell, Oscar James. "The Italianate Background of The Merry Wives of Windsor," Essays and Studies in English and Comparative Literature, University of Michigan Publications in Language and Literature, Vol. 8 (1932), 81-117.
 Charlton, H. B. "Falstaff," Shakespearian Comedy (1938).
 Crofts, John. Shakespeare and the Post Horses (1937).
 Evans, Bertrand. Shakespeare's Comedies (1960).
 Green, William. Shakespeare's "Merry Wives of Windsor" (1962).
 Hotson, Leslie. Shakespeare Versus Shallow (1931).
 Nosworthy, J. M. Shakespeare's Occasional Plays: Their Origin and Transmission (1965).
 Parrott, Thomas Marc. Shakespearean Comedy (1949).
 Rosenberg, S. L. Millard. "Duke Friedrich of Württemberg," Shakespeare Association Bulletin, VIII (1933), 92-93.
 Rye, William Brenchley (ed.). England as Seen by Foreigners in the Days of Elizabeth and James the First (1865).
 Tighe, Robert Richard, and James Edward Davis. Annals of Windsor, being a History of the Castle and Town (2 vols., 1858).
 Van Doren, Mark. Shakespeare (1939; 1953).

White, David Manning. "An Explanation of the Brooke-Broome Question in Shakespeare's Merry Wives," Philological Quarterly, XXV (1946), 280-83.

A Midsummer Night's Dream

- Barber, C. L. Shakespeare's Festive Comedy (1959).
 Bonnard, Georges A. "Shakespeare's Purpose in Midsummer-Night's Dream," Shakespeare Jahrbuch, XCII (1956), 268-79.
 Briggs, K. M. The Anatomy of Puck (1959).
 Brown, John Russell. Shakespeare and His Comedies (1957).
 Cody, Richard. The Landscape of the Mind: Pastoralism and the Platonic Theory in Tasso's "Aminta" and Shakespeare's Early Comedies (1969).
 Dent, R. W. "Imagination in A Midsummer Night's Dream," Shakespeare Quarterly, XV (1964), 115-29.
 Doran, Madeleine. "Pyramus and Thisbe Once More," Essays on Shakespeare and Elizabethan Drama in Honor of Hardin Craig, ed. Richard Hosley (1962), pp. 149-62.
 Dowden, Edward. Shakspeare: A Critical Study of His Mind and Art (1875; 3rd ed., 1962).
 Evans, Bertrand. Shakespeare's Comedies (1960).
 Fender, Stephen. Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Studies in English Literature, No. 35 (1968).
 Hunter, G. K. Shakespeare: The Late Comedies (1962).
 Kermode, Frank. "The Mature Comedies," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 3: Early Shakespeare, eds. John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1961), pp. 211-27.
 Myers, Henry A. "Romeo and Juliet and A Midsummer Night's Dream: Tragedy and Comedy," Tragedy: A View of Life (1956).
 Nemerov, Howard. "The Marriage of Theseus and Hippolyta," Kenyon Review, XVIII (1956), 633-41.
 Olsen, Paul A. "A Midsummer Night's Dream and the Meaning of Court Marriage," ELH; A Journal of English Literary History, XXIV (1957), 95-119.
 Schanzer, Ernest. "The Moon and the Fairies in A Midsummer-Night's Dream," University of Toronto Quarterly, XXIV (1955), 234-46.
 Siegel, Paul N. "A Midsummer-Night's Dream and the Wedding Guests," Shakespeare Quarterly, IV (1953), 139-44.
 Watkins, Ronald. Moonlight at the Globe: An Essay in Shakespeare Production Based on Performance of "A Midsummer-Night's Dream" at Harrow School (1946).
 Welsford, Enid. The Court Masque (1927).
 Wickham, Glynne. "A Midsummer Night's Dream: The Setting and the Text," Shakespeare's Dramatic Heritage: Collected Studies in Medieval, Tudor and Shakespearean Drama (1969), pp. 180-90.
 Young, David P. Something of Great Constancy: The Art of "A Midsummer Night's Dream" (1966).

Much Ado About Nothing

- Craik, T. W. "Much Ado About Nothing," Scrutiny, XIX (1953), 297-316.
 Davis, Walter R. (ed.). Twentieth Century Interpretations of "Much Ado About Nothing" (1969).
 Evans, Bertrand. Shakespeare's Comedies (1960).
 Everett, Barbara. "Much Ado About Nothing," Critical Quarterly, III (1961), 319-35.
 Mulryne, J. R. Shakespeare: "Much Ado About Nothing" (1965).
 Phialas, Peter G. Shakespeare's Romantic Comedies: The Development of Their Form and Meaning (1966).
 Prouty, Charles T. The Sources of "Much Ado About Nothing" (1950).
 Rossiter, A. P. "Angel with Horns" and Other Shakespeare Lectures, ed. Graham Storey (1961).
 Stevenson, David L. The Love-Game Comedy (1946).

Othello

- Bayley, John. The Characters of Love (1961).
 Bradley, A. C. Shakespearean Tragedy (1904; 1965).
 Clemen, Wolfgang H. The Development of Shakespeare's Imagery (1951; originally published in German, 1936).
 Eliot, T. S. "Shakespeare and the Stoicism of Seneca," Selected Essays, 1917-1932 (1932).
 Elliott, G. R. Flaming Minister: A Study of "Othello" as Tragedy of Love and Hate (1953).
 Frye, Northrop. Fools of Time: Studies in Shakespearean Tragedy (1967).
 Granville-Barker, Harley. "Preface to Othello," Prefaces to Shakespeare (2 vols., 1946-47), Vol. 2.
 Heilman, Robert B. Magic in the Web: Action and Language in "Othello" (1956).
 Kirschbaum, Leo. "The Modern Othello," ELH; A Journal of English Literary History, II (1944), 233-96.
 Knight, G. Wilson. "The Othello Music," The Wheel of Fire: Essays in Interpretation of Shakespeare's Sombre Tragedies (1930; 5th rev. ed., 1957), pp. 97-119.
 Lawlor, John. The Tragic Sense in Shakespeare (1960).
 Mack, Maynard. "The Jacobean Shakespeare: Some Observations on the Construction of the Tragedies," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 1: Jacobean Theatre, eds. John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1960), pp. 11-41.
 Nowotny, Winifred M. T. "Justice and Love in Othello," University of Toronto Quarterly, XXI (1951-52), 330-44.
 Rosenberg, Marvin. The Masks of "Othello" (1961).
 Sedgewick, G. G. Of Irony, Especially in Drama (2nd ed., 1948).
 Seltzer, Daniel. "Elizabethan Acting in Othello," Shakespeare Quarterly, X (1959), 201-10.
 Sewell, Arthur. Character and Society in Shakespeare (1951).
 Siegel, Paul N. Shakespearean Tragedy and the Elizabethan Compromise (1957).
 Stoll, Elmer Edgar. "Othello, Tragedy of Effect," From Shakespeare to Joyce (1944).
 Traversi, Derek. An Approach to Shakespeare (2 vols.; 3rd rev. ed., 1968-69).
 Wilson, Harold S. On the Design of Shakespearean Tragedy (1957).

Pericles

- Arthos, John. "Pericles, Prince of Tyre: A Study in the Dramatic Use of Romantic Narrative," Shakespeare Quarterly, IV (1953), 257-70.
 Barker, G. A. "Themes and Variations in Shakespeare's Pericles," English Studies, XLIV (1963), 401-14.
 Danby, John F. "Sidney and the Late-Shakespearean Romance," Poets on Fortune's Hill (1952).
 Edwards, Philip. "An Approach to the Problem of Pericles," Shakespeare Survey 5, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1952), pp. 25-49.
 ———. "Shakespeare's Romances: 1900-1957," Shakespeare Survey 11, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1958), pp. 1-18.
 Felperin, Howard. "Shakespeare's Miracle Play," Shakespeare Quarterly, XVIII (1967), 363-74.
 Hoeniger, F. D. (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: Pericles (1963).
 James, David G. "The Failure of the Ballad-Makers," Skepticism and Poetry (1937; 1960).
 Knight, G. Wilson. The Crown of Life: Essays in Interpretation of Shakespeare's Final Plays (1947).
 Maxwell, J. C. (ed.). The New Cambridge Shakespeare: Pericles (1956).
 Muir, Kenneth. Shakespeare as Collaborator (1960).
 Tillyard, E. M. W. Shakespeare's Last Plays (1938; 6th ed., 1964).
 Tompkins, J. M. S. "Why Pericles?" Review of English Studies, III (1952), 315-24.
 Traversi, Derek. Shakespeare: The Last Phase (1954).

Richard II

- Altick, Richard D. "Symphonic Imagery in Richard II," PMLA, LXII (1947), 339-65.
- Black, Matthew W. (ed.). A New Variorum Edition of Shakespeare: The Life and Death of King Richard the Second (1956).
- Bogard, Travis. "Shakespeare's Second Richard," PMLA, LXX (1955), 192-209.
- Campbell, Lily B. Shakespeare's "Histories": Mirrors of Elizabethan Policy (1947).
- Dean, Leonard F. "Richard II: The State and the Image of the Theater," PMLA, LXVII (1952), 211-18.
- Humphreys, A. R. Shakespeare: "Richard II" (1967).
- Palmer, John. Political Characters of Shakespeare (1945).
- Pater, Walter. "Shakespeare's English Kings," Appreciations (1889).
- Reese, Max Meredith. The Cease of Majesty: A Study of Shakespeare's History Plays (1961).
- Rossiter, A. P. "Angel with Horns" and Other Shakespeare Lectures, ed. Graham Storey (1961).
- Stirling, Brents. Unity in Shakespearean Tragedy: The Interplay of Theme and Character (1956).
- Swinburne, A. C. Three Plays of Shakespeare (1909).
- Tillyard, E. M. W. Shakespeare's History Plays (1944; 1962).
- Traversi, Derek. Shakespeare: From "Richard II" to "Henry V" (1957).
- Ure, Peter (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: King Richard II (4th rev. ed., 1956).
- Wilson, John Dover (ed.). The New Cambridge Shakespeare: King Richard II (1939).
- Yeats, W. B. Ideas of Good and Evil (1903; 1967).

Richard III

- Boyer, Clarence V. The Villain as Hero in Elizabethan Tragedy (1914; 1964).
- Campbell, Lily B. Shakespeare's "Histories": Mirrors of Elizabethan Policy (1947).
- Churchill, George B. Richard the Third up to Shakespeare (Palaestra, X) (1900).
- Clemen, Wolfgang H. A Commentary on Shakespeare's "Richard III," tr. Jean Bonheim (1968; originally published in German, 1957).
- Driver, Tom F. The Sense of History in Greek and Shakespearean Drama (1960).
- Kendall, Paul Murray. Richard the Third (1955).
- Krieger, Murray. "The Dark Generations of Richard III," Criticism, I (1959), 32-48.
- More, Sir Thomas. The History of King Richard III, ed. Richard S. Sylvester (1963).
- Moulton, Richard G. Shakespeare as a Dramatic Artist (3rd ed., 1893; rev. and enl. ed., 1966).
- Palmer, John. Political Characters of Shakespeare (1945).
- Ribner, Irving. The English History Play in the Age of Shakespeare (1957; rev. ed., 1965).
- Rossiter, A. P. "Angel with Horns" and Other Shakespeare Lectures, ed. Graham Storey (1961).
- Tillyard, E. M. W. Shakespeare's History Plays (1944; 1962).
- Wilson, John Dover (ed.). The New Cambridge Shakespeare: Richard III (1954).
- Wood, Alice I. Perry. The Stage History of Shakespeare's "King Richard the Third" (1909).

Romeo and Juliet

- Charlton, H. B. Shakespearean Tragedy (1948).
- Cole, Douglas (ed.). Twentieth Century Interpretations of "Romeo and Juliet" (1970).
- Hoppe, Harry R. The Bad Quarto of "Romeo and Juliet": A Bibliography and Textual Study (1948).
- Hosley, Richard (ed.). The Tragedy of Romeo and Juliet (1954).

- Knight, G. Wilson. Principles of Shakespearean Production, with Especial Reference to the Tragedies (1949).
- Lawlor, John. "Romeo and Juliet," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 3: Early Shakespeare, eds. John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1961), pp. 123-45.
- Levin, Harry. "Form and Formality in Romeo and Juliet," Shakespeare Quarterly, XI (1960), 3-11.
- Mahood, M. M. Shakespeare's Wordplay (1957).
- Moore, Olin H. The Legend of Romeo and Juliet (1950).
- Myers, Henry A. Tragedy: A View of Life (1956).
- Spurgeon, Caroline. Leading Motives in the Imagery of Shakespeare's Tragedies, Shakespeare Association Lecture (1930), pp. 1-17.
- Stoll, Elmer Edgar. Shakespeare's Young Lovers (1937).
- Vyvyan, John. Shakespeare and the Rose of Love (1960).
- Williams, George Walton (ed.). The Most Excellent and Lamentable Tragedie of Romeo and Juliet: A Critical Edition (1964).

The Taming of the Shrew

- Brown, John Russell. Shakespeare and His Comedies (1957).
- Brunvand, Jan H. "The Folktale Origin of The Taming of the Shrew," Shakespeare Quarterly, XVII (1966), 345-59.
- Charlton, H. B. Shakespearean Comedy (1938).
- Child, Harold. "The Stage History of The Taming of the Shrew," The New Cambridge Shakespeare: The Taming of the Shrew, eds. Sir Arthur Quiller-Couch and John Dover Wilson (1928, 1953).
- Coghill, Nevill. "The Basis of Shakespearean Comedy," Essays and Studies, III (1950); reprinted, in revised form, in Shakespeare Criticism 1935-1960, selected with an Introduction by Anne Bradby Ridler (1963), pp. 201-27.
- Crane, Milton. "Shakespeare's Comedies and the Critics," Shakespeare 400, ed. James G. McManaway (1964), pp. 67-73.
- Cutts, John P. The Shattered Glass: A Dramatic Pattern in Shakespeare's Early Plays (1968).
- Evans, Bertrand. Shakespeare's Comedies (1960).
- Frey, Albert R. The Bankside Shakespeare: The Taming of the Shrew (1888). Prints A Shrew and The Shrew on opposite pages, so arranged as to call attention to identical and similar passages.
- Goddard, Harold C. The Meaning of Shakespeare (1951).
- Heilman, Robert B. "The Taming Untamed, or, The Return of the Shrew," Modern Language Quarterly, XXVII (1966), 147-61.
- Hosley, Richard. "Sources and Analogues of The Taming of the Shrew," Huntington Library Quarterly, XXVII (1963-64), 289-308.
- Jayne, Sears. "The Dreaming of The Taming of the Shrew," Shakespeare Quarterly, XXVII (1966), 41-56.
- Mack, Maynard. "Engagement and Detachment in Shakespeare's Plays," Essays on Shakespeare and Elizabethan Drama in Honor of Hardin Craig, ed. Richard Hosley (1962), pp. 275-96.
- Murphy, G. N. "Christopher Sly and the Pronoun-Game in The Taming of the Shrew," Papers on Language and Literature, II (1966), 67-70.
- Orange, L. E. "The Punning of The Shrew," The Southern Quarterly, III (1965), 293-305.
- Phialas, Peter G. Shakespeare's Romantic Comedies: The Development of Their Form and Meaning (1966).
- Ribner, Irving. "The Morality of Farce: The Taming of the Shrew," Essays in English and American Literature Presented to Robert Bruce McElderry, Jr., eds. Max F. Schulz with William D. Templeman and Charles R. Metzger (1967), pp. 165-76.
- Stauffer, Donald A. Shakespeare's World of Images (1949).
- Thorne, W. B. "Folk Elements in The Taming of the Shrew," Queen's Quarterly, LXXV (1968), 482-96.

- Tillyard, E. M. W. "The Fairy-Tale Element in The Taming of the Shrew," Shakespeare 1564-1964: A Collection of Modern Essays by Various Hands, ed. Edward A. Bloom (1964), pp. 110-14.
 ———. Shakespeare's Early Comedies (1965).

The Tempest

- Auden, W. H. "The Sea and the Mirror: A Commentary on Shakespeare's The Tempest," The Collected Poetry (1945).
 ———. "The Dyer's Hand" and Other Essays (1962), pp. 128-34, 524-27.
 Brower, R. A. "The Mirror of Analogy: The Tempest," The Fields of Light (1951).
 Brown, John Russell, and Bernard Harris (eds.). Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 8: Later Shakespeare (1966).
 Coleridge, Samuel Taylor. Lecture IX, The Lectures of 1811-1812. Reprinted in Shakespearean Criticism, ed. Thomas Middleton Raysor (2 vols.; 2nd ed., 1960).
 Frye, Northrop. A Natural Perspective: The Development of Shakespearean Comedy and Romance (1965).
 Gilbert, Allan H. "The Tempest: Parallelism in Characters and Situations," The Journal of English and Germanic Philology, XIV (1915), 63-74.
 Hazlitt, William. "The Tempest," Characters of Shakespear's Plays (1817). Reprinted in The Round Table [and] Characters of Shakespear's Plays (1957).
 James, David G. "The Failure of the Ballad-Makers," Skepticism and Poetry (1937; 1960).
 Knight, G. Wilson. The Crown of Life: Essays in Interpretation of Shakespeare's Final Plays (1947).
 ———. The Shakespearian Tempest: With a Chart of Shakespeare's Dramatic Universe (1932; 3rd rev. ed., 1953).
 Knox, Bernard. "The Tempest and the Ancient Comic Tradition," English Stage Comedy (English Institute Essays, 1954), ed. W. K. Wimsatt, Jr. (1955).
 Leavis, F. R. "A Criticism of Shakespeare's Last Plays," Scrutiny, X (1942), 339-45. Reprinted in The Common Pursuit (1952; 1962).
 Murry, John Middleton. Shakespeare (1936).
 Palmer, D. J. (ed.). Shakespeare, "The Tempest": A Casebook (1968).
 Smith, Hallett (ed.). Twentieth Century Interpretations of "The Tempest" (1969).
 Spencer, Theodore. "Appearance and Reality in Shakespeare's Last Plays," Modern Philology, XXXIX (1942), 265-74.
 Still, Colin. Shakespeare's Mystery Play: A Study of "The Tempest" (1921). Revised as The Timeless Theme (1936).
 Strachey, Lytton. "Shakespeare's Final Period," Books and Characters (1922). Reprinted in Literary Essays (1948).
 Tillyard, E. M. W. Shakespeare's Last Plays (1938; 6th ed., 1964).
 Traversi, Derek. Shakespeare: The Last Phase (1954).
 William, David. "The Tempest on the Stage," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 1: Jacobean Theatre, eds. John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1960), pp. 133-57.
 Wilson, John Dover. The Meaning of "The Tempest", Robert Spence Watson Memorial Lecture (1936).

Timon of Athens

- Bradbrook, M. C. "The Tragic Pageant of Timon of Athens," Shakespeare the Craftsman (1969).
 Campbell, Oscar James. Shakespeare's Satire (1943; 1963).
 Collins, A. S. "Timon of Athens: A Reconsideration," Review of English Studies, XXII (1946), 96-108.
 Cook, David. "Timon of Athens," Shakespeare Survey 16, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1963), pp. 83-94.
 Dowden, Edward. Shakespeare: A Critical Study of His Mind and Art (1875; 3rd ed., 1962).

- Ellis-Fermor, Una. "Timon of Athens: An Unfinished Play," Review of English Studies, XVIII (1942), 270-83. Reprinted in Shakespeare the Dramatist, ed. Kenneth Muir (1961).
 Empson, William. The Structure of Complex Words (1951).
 Farnham, Willard. Shakespeare's Tragic Frontier (1950).
 Hazlitt, William. Liber Amoris [1823] and Dramatic Criticisms (1948).
 ———. Characters of Shakespear's Plays (1817). Reprinted in The Round Table [and] Characters of Shakespear's Plays (1957).
 Honigmann, E. A. J. "Timon of Athens," Shakespeare Quarterly XII (1961), 3-20.
 Knight, G. Wilson. The Wheel of Fire: Essays in Interpretation of Shakespeare's Sombre Tragedies (1930; 5th rev. ed., 1957).
 Maxwell, J. C. (ed.). The New Cambridge Shakespeare: Timon of Athens (1957).
 Oliver, H. J. (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: Timon of Athens (1959).
 Richardson, William. Essays on Shakespeare's Dramatic Characters (2 vols., 1784-89).
 Spencer, Terence. "Shakespeare Learns the Value of Money: The Dramatist at Work on Timon of Athens," Shakespeare Survey 6, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1953), pp. 75-78.

Titus Andronicus

- Baker, Howard. Induction to Tragedy: A Study in a Development of Form in "Gorboduc," "The Spanish Tragedy," and "Titus Andronicus" (1939).
 Brooke, Nicholas. Shakespeare's Early Tragedies (1968).
 Charlton, H. B. Shakespearian Tragedy (1948).
 Findlater, Richard. "Shakespearean Atrocities," Twentieth Century, CLVIII (1955), 364-72.
 Hamilton, A. C. "Titus Andronicus; The Form of Shakespearian Tragedy," Shakespeare Quarterly, XIV (1963), 201-13.
 Hill, R. F. "The Composition of Titus Andronicus," Shakespeare Survey 10, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1957), pp. 60-70.
 Price, H. T. "The Authorship of Titus Andronicus," Journal of English and Germanic Philology, XLII (1943), 55-81.
 Ribner, Irving. Patterns in Shakespearean Tragedy (1960).
 Sargent, Ralph M. "The Source of Titus Andronicus," Studies in Philology, XLVI (1949), 167-83.
 Sommers, Alan. "'Wilderness of Tigers': Structure and Symbolism in Titus Andronicus," Essays in Criticism, X (1960), 275-89.
 Spencer, T. J. B. Shakespeare: The Roman Plays (1963).
 Spivack, Bernard. Shakespeare and the Allegory of Evil (1958).
 Tynan, Kenneth. Curtains (1961).
 Waith, Eugene M. "The Metamorphosis of Violence in Titus Andronicus," Shakespeare Survey 10, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1957), pp. 39-49.

Troilus and Cressida

- Alexander, Peter. "Troilus and Cressida, 1609," The Library, Ser. 4, IX (1928), 267-86.
 Bethell, S. L. Shakespeare and the Popular Dramatic Tradition (1944).
 Bradbrook, M. C. "What Shakespeare Did to Chaucer's Troilus and Criseyde," Shakespeare Quarterly, IX (1958), 311-19.
 Brooke, C. F. Tucker. "Shakespeare's Study in Culture and Anarchy," Yale Review, XVII (1928), 571-77.
 Brower, R. A. Hero and Saint: Shakespeare and the Greco-Roman Heroic Tradition (1970).
 Campbell, Oscar James. Comical Satyre and Shakespeare's "Troilus and Cressida" (1938).
 Chapman, John Jay. Selected Writings, ed. Jacques Barzun (1959).

- Charlton, H. B. "The Dark Comedies," Bulletin of the John Rylands Library, XXI (1937), 78-128.
- Coleridge, Samuel Taylor. Coleridge's Writings on Shakespeare, ed. Terence Hawkes, intro. Alfred B. Harbage (1959).
- Ellis-Fermor, Una. The Frontiers of Drama (1945; rev. ed., 1948).
- Foakes, R. A. "Troilus and Cressida Reconsidered," University of Toronto Quarterly, XXXII (1963), 142-54.
- Gérard, Albert. "Meaning and Structure in Troilus and Cressida," English Studies, XL (1959), 148-51, 156-57.
- Harrier, R. C. "Troilus Divided," Studies in the English Renaissance Drama in Memory of Karl Julius Holzknecht, eds. Josephine W. Bennett et al. (1959).
- Kaula, David. "Will and Reason in Troilus and Cressida," Shakespeare Quarterly, XII (1961), 271-83.
- Kendall, P. M. "Inaction and Ambivalence in Troilus and Cressida," English Studies in Honor of James Southall Wilson, ed. Fredson Bowers (1951).
- Kimbrough, Robert. Shakespeare's "Troilus and Cressida" and Its Setting (1964).
- Knight, G. Wilson. The Wheel of Fire: Essays in Interpretation of Shakespeare's Sombre Tragedies (1930; 5th rev. ed., 1957).
- Knights, L. C. "Troilus and Cressida Again," Scrutiny, XVIII (1951), 144-57.
- Lawrence, W. W. Shakespeare's Problem Comedies (1931; 1960).
- Muir, Kenneth. "Troilus and Cressida," Shakespeare Survey 8, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1955), pp. 28-38.
- Nowottny, Winifred M. T. "'Opinion' and 'Value' in Troilus and Cressida," Essays in Criticism, IV (1954), 282-96.
- Reynolds, George F. "Troilus and Cressida on the Elizabethan Stage," Joseph Quincy Adams Memorial Studies, eds. J. G. McManaway, G. E. Dawson, and E. E. Willoughby (1948).
- Richards, I. A. Speculative Instruments (1955).
- Rollins, Hyder E. "The Troilus-Cressida Story from Chaucer to Shakespeare," PMLA, XXXII (1917), 383-429.
- Spencer, Theodore. Shakespeare and the Nature of Man (1942).
- Tillyard, E. M. W. Shakespeare's Problem Plays (1949).
- Traversi, Derek. An Approach to Shakespeare (2 vols.; 3rd rev. ed., 1968-69).
- Walker, Alice. Textual Problems of the First Folio (1953).

Twelfth Night

- Barber, C. L. Shakespeare's Festive Comedy (1959).
- Bradley, A. C. "Feste the Jester," A Miscellany (1929).
- Brown, John Russell. Shakespeare and His Comedies (1957).
- Furness, Horace Howard (ed.). A New Variorum Edition of Shakespeare: Twelfth Night, or, What You Will (1901).
- Hollander, John. "Twelfth Night and the Morality of Indulgence," Sewanee Review, LXVII (1959), 220-38.
- Hotson, Leslie. The First Night of Twelfth Night (1954).
- Jenkins, Harold. "Shakespeare's Twelfth Night," Rice Institute Pamphlet, XLV (1959), iv, 19-42.
- Kermode, Frank. "The Mature Comedies," Stratford-upon-Avon Studies 3: Early Shakespeare, eds. John Russell Brown and Bernard Harris (1961), pp. 211-27.
- King, Walter N. Twentieth Century Interpretations of "Twelfth Night" (1968).
- Knight, G. Wilson. The Shakespearian Tempest: With a Chart of Shakespeare's Dramatic Universe (1932; 3rd rev. ed., 1953).
- Leech, Clifford. "Twelfth Night" and Shakespearian Comedy (1965).
- Lewalski, Barbara K. "Thematic Patterns in Twelfth Night," Shakespeare Studies 1, ed. J. Leeds Barroll (1965), pp. 168-81.

- Mueschke, Paul, and Jeannette Fleisher. "Jonsonian Elements in the Comic Underplot of Twelfth Night," PMLA, XLVIII (1933), 722-40.
- Pettet, E. C. Shakespeare and the Romance Tradition (1950).
- Rich, Barnabe. Rich's "Apolonius & Silla," an Original of Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night," ed. Morton Luce (1912).
- . Rich's Farewell to Military Profession 1581, ed. Thomas Mabry Cranfill (1959).
- Salingar, L. D. "The Design of Twelfth Night," Shakespeare Quarterly, IX (1958), 117-39.
- Summers, Joseph H. "The Masks of Twelfth Night," Shakespeare: Modern Essays in Criticism, ed. Leonard F. Dean (1961).

The Two Gentlemen of Verona

- Brooks, Harold F. "Two Clowns in a Comedy (to Say Nothing of the Dog): Speed, Launce (and Crab) in The Two Gentlemen of Verona," Essays and Studies 1963, ed. S. Gorley Putt (1963), pp. 91-100.
- Charlton, H. B. Shakespearian Comedy (1938).
- Danby, John F. "Shakespeare Criticism and Two Gentlemen of Verona," Critical Quarterly, II (1960), 309-21.
- Harrison, Thomas Perrin. "Concerning The Two Gentlemen of Verona and Montemayor's Diana," Modern Language Notes, XLI (1926), 251-52.
- Latham, Grace. "On Julia, Silvia, Hero and Viola," Transactions of the New Shakspeare Society, Part IV (1887-92), 319-50.
- Leech, Clifford (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: The Two Gentlemen of Verona (1969).
- Nemerov, Howard. Poetry and Fiction: Essays (1963).
- Parks, George B. "The Development of The Two Gentlemen of Verona," Huntington Library Bulletin, No. 11 (1937), 1-11.
- Parrott, Thomas Marc. Shakespearean Comedy (1949).
- Pettet, E. C. Shakespeare and the Romance Tradition (1950).
- Small, Samuel Asa. "The Ending of The Two Gentlemen of Verona," PMLA, XLVIII (1933), 767-76.
- Vyvyan, John. Shakespeare and the Rose of Love (1960).
- Wells, Stanley. "The Failure of The Two Gentlemen of Verona," Shakespeare Jahrbuch, XCIX (1963), 161-73.
- Wilson, John Dover. Shakespeare's Happy Comedies (1962).

The Two Noble Kinsmen

- Agate, James. Brief Chronicles, a Survey of the Plays of Shakespeare and the Elizabethans in Actual Performance (1943).
- Bentley, Gerald E. "Shakespeare and the Blackfriars Theatre," Shakespeare Survey 1, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1948), pp. 38-50. Reprinted in a modified form in Shakespeare and His Theatre (1964), pp. 65-99.
- Bertram, Paul. Shakespeare and "The Two Noble Kinsmen" (1965).
- Edwards, Philip. "On the Design of The Two Noble Kinsmen," A Review of English Literature, V, No. 4 (October 1964), 89-105.
- Hart, Alfred. "Shakespeare and the Vocabulary of The Two Noble Kinsmen," The Review of English Studies, X (1934), 274-87. Reprinted in Shakespeare and the Homilies (1935).
- Kermode, Frank. William Shakespeare: The Final Plays (1963).
- Leech, Clifford. The John Fletcher Plays (1962).
- Littledale, Harold (ed.). The Two Noble Kinsmen, The New Shakspeare Society (1876-85).
- Mincoff, Marco. "The Authorship of The Two Noble Kinsmen," English Studies, XXXIII (1952), 97-115.
- Muir, Kenneth. Shakespeare as Collaborator (1960).

- Spalding, W. A Letter on Shakspeare's Authorship of The Two Noble Kinsmen (1838). Reprinted in Transactions of the New Shakspeare Society (1876).
- Spencer, Theodore. "The Two Noble Kinsmen," Modern Philology, XXXVI (1939), 255-76.
- Waller, Frederick O. "Printer's Copy for The Two Noble Kinsmen," Studies in Bibliography, XI (1958), 61-84.
- The Winter's Tale*
- Bentley, Gerald E. "Shakespeare and the Blackfriars Theatre," Shakespeare Survey 1, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1948), pp. 38-50. Reprinted in a modified form in Shakespeare and His Theatre (1964), pp. 65-99.
- Bethell, S. L. The Winter's Tale: A Study (1947).
- Bryant, J. A., Jr. "Shakespeare's Allegory: The Winter's Tale," Sewanee Review, LXIII (1955), 202-22.
- Coghill, Nevill. "Six Points of Stage-Craft in The Winter's Tale," Shakespeare Survey 11, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1958), pp. 31-41.
- Danby, John F. Poets on Fortune's Hill (1952).
- Edwards, Philip. "Shakespeare's Romances: 1900-1957," Shakespeare Survey 11, ed. Allardyce Nicoll (1958), pp. 1-18.
- Ewbank, Inga-Stiner. "The Triumph of Time in The Winter's Tale," A Review of English Literature, V, No. 2 (April 1964), 83-100.
- Frye, Northrop. "The Argument of Comedy," English Institute Essays, 1948 (1949).
- . Anatomy of Criticism (1957).
- . "Recognition in The Winter's Tale," Essays on Shakespeare and Elizabethan Drama, ed. Richard Hosley (1962).
- . A Natural Perspective: The Development of Shakespearean Comedy and Romance (1965).
- Greenlaw, E. "Shakespeare's Pastorals," Studies in Philology, XIII (1916), 122-54.
- Hoener, F. D. "The Meaning of The Winter's Tale," University of Toronto Quarterly, XX (1950), 11-26.
- James, D. G. Skepticism and Poetry (1937; 1960).
- Knight, G. Wilson. The Crown of Life: Essays in Interpretation of Shakespeare's Final Plays (1947).
- . The Shakespearian Tempest: With a Chart of Shakespeare's Dramatic Universe (1932; 3rd rev. ed., 1953).
- Lawlor, John. "Pandosto and the Nature of Dramatic Romance," Philological Quarterly, XLI (1962), 96-113.
- Leavis, F. R. "A Criticism of Shakespeare's Last Plays," Scrutiny, X (1942), 339-45. Reprinted in The Common Pursuit (1952; 1962).
- Pafford, J. H. P. (ed.). The Arden Shakespeare: The Winter's Tale (1963).
- Pettet, E. C. Shakespeare and the Romance Tradition (1950).
- Pyle, Fitzroy. "The Winter's Tale": A Commentary on the Structure (1969).
- Schanzer, Ernest. "The Structural Pattern of The Winter's Tale," A Review of English Literature, V, No. 2 (April 1964), 72-82.
- Spencer, Theodore. "Appearance and Reality in Shakespeare's Last Plays," Modern Philology, XXXIX (1942), 265-74.
- Strachey, Lytton. "Shakespeare's Final Period," Books and Characters (1922). Reprinted in Literary Essays (1948).
- Tillyard, E. M. W. Shakespeare's Last Plays (1938; 6th ed., 1964).
- Tinkler, F. C. "The Winter's Tale," Scrutiny, V (1937), 344-64.
- Traversi, Derek. Shakespeare: The Last Phase (1954).

13. THE NONDRAMATIC WORKS

C. S. Lewis, English Literature in the Sixteenth Century (1954), and Hallet Smith, Elizabethan Poetry; A Study in Conventions, Meaning, and Expression (1952), are interesting histories of the nondramatic literature of the period. There is much on the poems and the earlier plays in M. C. Bradbrook, Shakespeare and Elizabethan Poetry (1951). For a review of scholarship on the sonnets and other poems, see Shakespeare Survey 15, edited by Allardyce Nicoll (1962), which also contains some essays on the nondramatic works.

The Poems

- Alvarez, A. "William Shakespeare: The Phoenix and the Turtle," Interpretations, ed. John Wain (1955).
- Bradbrook, M. C. Shakespeare and Elizabethan Poetry (1951).
- Bush, Douglas. Mythology and the Renaissance Tradition (rev. ed., 1963).
- Cunningham, J. V. Tradition and Poetic Structure (1960).
- Empson, William. "The Phoenix and the Turtle," Essays in Criticism, XVI (1966), 147-53.
- Hamilton, A. C. "Venus and Adonis," Studies in English Literature 1500-1900, I (1961), 1-15.
- Knight, G. Wilson. The Mutual Flame: On Shakespeare's Sonnets and "The Phoenix and the Turtle" (1955).
- Lewis, C. S. English Literature in the Sixteenth Century (1954).
- Matchett, William H. "The Phoenix and the Turtle"; Shakespeare's Poem and Chester's "Loues martyr" (1965).
- Maxwell, J. C. (ed.). The New Cambridge Shakespeare: The Poems (1966).
- Muir, Kenneth. "'A Lover's Complaint': A Reconsideration," Shakespeare 1564-1964 (1964).
- Nicoll, Allardyce (ed.). Shakespeare Survey 15 (1962). This volume has several articles on the poems, including a useful review of scholarship.
- Prince, F. T. Shakespeare: The Poems (1963).
- Rollins, Hyder E. (ed.). A New Variorum Edition of Shakespeare: The Poems (1938).
- Watkins, W. B. C. Shakespeare and Spenser (1961).

The Sonnets

- Booth, Stephen. An Essay on Shakespeare's Sonnets (1969).
- Cruttwell, Patrick. The Shakespearean Moment and Its Place in the Poetry of the Seventeenth Century (1953).
- Herrnstein, Barbara (ed.). Discussions of Shakespeare's Sonnets (1964).
- Hubler, Edward. The Sense of Shakespeare's Sonnets (1952).
- , Northrop Frye, Leslie A. Fiedler, Stephen Spender, and R. P. Blackmur. The Riddle of Shakespeare's Sonnets (1962).
- Ingram, W. G., and Theodore Redpath (eds.). Shakespeare's Sonnets (1964).
- Knight, G. Wilson. The Mutual Flame: On Shakespeare's Sonnets and "The Phoenix and the Turtle" (1955).
- Krieger, Murray. A Window to Criticism: Shakespeare's Sonnets and Modern Poetics (1964).
- Landry, Hilton. Interpretations in Shakespeare's Sonnets (1963).
- Leishman, J. B. Themes and Variations in Shakespeare's Sonnets (1961).
- Lever, J. W. The Elizabethan Love Sonnet (1956).
- Nicoll, Allardyce (ed.). Shakespeare Survey 15 (1962).
- Ransom, John Crowe. The World's Body (1938).
- Rollins, Hyder E. (ed.). A New Variorum Edition of Shakespeare: The Sonnets (2 vols., 1944).
- Wilson, John Dover. Shakespeare's Sonnets: An Introduction for Historians and Others (1963).

INDEX TO FIRST LINES OF THE SONNETS

Accuse me thus: that I have scanted all, 117
 Against my love shall be as I am now, 63
 Against that time, if ever that time come, 49
 Ah, wherefore with infection should he live, 67
 Alack, what poverty my Muse brings forth, 103
 Alas, 'tis true I have gone here and there, 110
 As a decrepit father takes delight, 37
 As an unperfect actor on the stage, 23
 As fast as thou shalt wane, so fast thou grow'st, 11
 A woman's face, with Nature's own hand painted, 20

Being your slave, what should I do but tend, 57
 Beshrew that heart that makes my heart to groan, 133
 Betwixt mine eye and heart a league is took, 47
 Be wise as thou art cruel; do not press, 140
 But be contented. When that fell arrest, 74
 But do thy worst to steal thyself away, 92
 But wherefore do not you a mightier way, 16

Canst thou, O cruel, say I love thee not, 149
 Cupid laid by his brand and fell asleep, 153

Devouring Time, blunt thou the lion's paws, 19

Farewell, thou art too dear for my possessing, 87
 For shame, deny that thou bear'st love to any, 10
 From fairest creatures we desire increase, 1
 From you have I been absent in the spring, 98
 Full many a glorious morning have I seen, 33

How can I then return in happy plight, 28
 How can my Muse want subject to invent, 38
 How careful was I, when I took my way, 48
 How heavy do I journey on the way, 50
 How like a winter hath my absence been, 97
 How oft, when thou, my music, music play'st, 128
 How sweet and lovely dost thou make the shame, 95

If my dear love were but the child of state, 124
 If the dull substance of my flesh were thought, 44
 If there be nothing new, but that which is, 59
 If thou survive my well-contented day, 32
 If thy soul check thee that I come so near, 136
 I grant thou wert not married to my Muse, 82
 I never saw that you did painting need, 83
 In faith I do not love thee with mine eyes, 141
 In loving thee thou know'st I am forsworn, 152
 In the old age black was not counted fair, 127
 Is it for fear to wet a widow's eye, 9
 Is it thy will thy image should keep open, 61

Let me confess that we two must be twain, 36

Let me not to the marriage of true minds, 116
 Let not my love be called idolatry, 105
 Let those who are in favor with their stars, 25
 Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore, 60
 Like as to make our appetites more keen, 118
 Lo, as a careful housewife runs to catch, 143
 Lo, in the orient when the gracious light, 7
 Look in thy glass and tell the face thou viewest, 3
 Lord of my love, to whom in vassalage, 26
 Love is my sin, and thy dear virtue hate, 142
 Love is too young to know what conscience is, 151

Mine eye and heart are at a mortal war, 46
 Mine eye hath played the painter and hath steeled, 24
 Music to hear, why hear'st thou music sadly? 8
 My glass shall not persuade me I am old, 22
 My love is as a fever, longing still, 147
 My love is strength'ned, though more weak in seeming, 102
 My mistress' eyes are nothing like the sun, 130
 My tongue-tied Muse in manners holds her still, 85

No longer mourn for me when I am dead, 71
 No more be grieved at that which thou hast done, 35
 Not from the stars do I my judgment pluck, 14
 No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change, 123
 Not marble, nor the gilded monuments, 55
 Not mine own fears nor the prophetic soul, 107

O, call not me to justify the wrong, 139
 O, for my sake do you with Fortune chide, 111
 O, from what pow'r hast thou this pow'ful might, 150
 O, how I faint when I of you do write, 80
 O, how much more doth beauty beauteous seem, 54
 O, how thy worth with manners may I sing, 39
 O, lest the world should task you to recite, 72
 O me, what eyes hath Love put in my head, 148
 O, never say that I was false of heart, 109
 Or I shall live your epitaph to make, 81
 Or whether doth my mind, being crowned with you, 114
 O, that you were yourself, but, love, you are, 13
 O thou, my lovely boy, who in thy power, 126
 O truant Muse, what shall be thy amends, 101

Poor soul, the center of my sinful earth, 146

Say that thou didst forsake me for some fault, 89
 Shall I compare thee to a summer's day? 18
 Since brass, nor stone, nor earth, nor boundless sea, 65
 Since I left you, mine eye is in my mind, 113
 Sin of self-love possesseth all mine eye, 62
 So am I as the rich, whose blessed key, 52
 So are you to my thoughts as food to life, 75

- So is it not with me as with that Muse, 21
 Some glory in their birth, some in their skill, 91
 Some say thy fault is youth, some wantonness, 96
 So, now I have confessed that he is thine, 134
 So oft have I invoked thee for my Muse, 78
 So shall I live, supposing thou art true, 93
 Sweet love, renew thy force; be it not said, 56
- Take all my loves, my love, yea take them all, 40
 That god forbid that made me first your slave, 58
 That thou art blamed shall not be thy defect, 70
 That thou hast her, it is not all my grief, 42
 That time of year thou mayst in me behold, 73
 That you were once unkind befriends me now, 120
 The forward violet thus did I chide, 99
 The little Love-god lying once asleep, 154
 Then hate me when thou wilt; if ever, now, 90
 Then let not winter's ragged hand deface, 6
 The other two, slight air and purging fire, 45
 Th' expense of spirit in a waste of shame, 129
 They that have pow'r to hurt and will do none, 94
 Thine eyes I love, and they, as pitying me, 132
 Those hours that with gentle work did frame, 5
 Those lines that I before have writ do lie, 115
 Those lips that Love's own hand did make, 145
 Those parts of thee that the world's eye doth view, 69
 Those pretty wrongs that liberty commits, 41
 Thou art as tyrannous, so as thou art, 131
 Thou blind fool, Love, what dost thou to mine eyes, 137
 Thus can my love excuse the slow offense, 51
 Thus is his cheek the map of days outworn, 68
 Thy bosom is endeared with all hearts, 31
 Thy gift, thy tables, are within my brain, 122
- Thy glass will show thee how thy beauties wear, 77
 Tired with all these, for restful death I cry, 66
 'Tis better to be vile than vile esteemed, 121
 To me, fair friend, you never can be old, 104
 Two loves I have, of comfort and despair, 144
- Unthrifty loveliness, why dost thou spend, 4
- Was it the proud full sail of his great verse, 86
 Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed, 27
 Were't aught to me I bore the canopy, 125
 What is your substance, whereof are you made, 53
 What potions have I drunk of Siren tears, 119
 What's in the brain that ink may character, 108
 When forty winters shall besiege thy brow, 2
 When I consider everything that grows, 15
 When I do count the clock that tells the time, 12
 When I have seen by Time's fell hand defaced, 64
 When, in disgrace with Fortune and men's eyes, 29
 When in the chronicle of wasted time, 106
 When most I wink, then do mine eyes best see, 43
 When my love swears that she is made of truth, 138
 When thou shalt be disposed to set me light, 88
 When to the sessions of sweet silent thought, 30
 Where art thou, Muse, that thou forget'st so long, 100
 Whilst I alone did call upon thy aid, 79
 Whoever hath her wish, thou hast thy Will, 135
 Who is it that says most, which can say more, 84
 Who will believe my verse in time to come, 17
 Why didst thou promise such a beauteous day, 34
 Why is my verse so barren of new pride, 76
- Your love and pity doth th' impression fill, 112

9780155126107
2016-02-22 11:55

22