shake, v. 'To draw any thing from the pocket. He shook the swell of his fogle; he robbed the gentleman of his silk handkerchief': Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Shake, to steal, or rob; as, I shook a chest of slop, I stole a chest of tea; I've been shook of my skin, I have been robbed of my purse' . . . Have you shook? . . . did you succeed in getting any thing? When two persons rob in company, it is generally the province, or part, of one to shake, (that is, obtain the swagg), and the other to carry, that is, bear it to a place of safety'; 1939, Brandon ('to rob'); 1859, H, 'To take away, to steal, or run off with anything'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1872, Geo. P. Burnham (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; by 1890 (B & L), low s.—2. To complete, in respect of a prison sentence; to work off ('time'): U.S.A., esp. convicts': May 18, 1929, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'A Snitch in Time' (two convicts loq.) "Scotty, how much time have you got to shake?" "Seven year an' nine months"; 1936, Lec Duncan, Over the Wall, 'He's shakin' a sawbuck'; extant.—3. To demand a bribe from: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Short for and less usual than shake down, v., 1.

shake, on the. See on the shake.

shake a cloth in the wind, 'to be hanged in chains' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), is prob. not c., but s.—either low or journalistic.

shake(-)down, n. A synonym of panel-crib: 1859, Matsell (at panel-crib for a much better definition than at shakedown); 1903, Clapin, Americanisms (at panel-game); 1903, F & H, 'A brothel kept by a panel-thief'; also, from at least as early as 1890, synonymous with panel-game (or badger-game), as, by implication, in Clapin and as in Chicago May, 1928; ob.—2. The 'process of paying protection against the will' (i.e., unwillingly), No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; by ca. 1920, also British, esp. for 'blackmailing of bookmakers' (Partridge, 1938); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson; 1925, Leverage, 'The extortion of hush-money; blackmail'; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 'Demand of dishonest officers for money for your protection'; by 1928 (The White Tops, July-Aug., 'Circus Glossary') it was circus s., and by 1929 (Flynn's, Oct. 26, Lawrence M. Maynard, 'Shakedown Artists') it was journalistic s. in U.S.A.; by 1930 at latest, prob. by 1925, it was Australian c.; 1942, Baker, 'shakedown, the. Rough play: violent threats'; extant as c. there. Ex sense 1 of the v.—3. A search of the person: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1933, Ersine; extant.—4. A blackmail scheme: 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube; extant. Ex 2.

shake down, v. To extort money from (a person): 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'The detective had tried to "shake him down", a term of the thief's jargon to describe a police officer's demand for money. It seems that if the money is not forthcoming the discovered thief must leave town or go to the Central Office [police headquarters] with the detective'; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1904, Life in Sing Sing (see bit, n., 5); 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, 'The pinch'—the arrest—'comes off; the copper runs in the rich thief, and then he and the lawyer shake him down between them for the bundle' (i.e., for all the money he has); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan), where shaken down is defined as 'paying for police protection'; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar (ditto); 1925, Leverage, 'To extort hush-money'; 1927, Kane; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; by 1929 or 1930, police and journalistic s. Prob. ex sense 2.—2. To rob (a person) of all he has: June 19, 1823, "'Shaking down", by the girls, becomes frequent on The Hill' (a disreputable district), E. H. Savage, The Boston Watch and Police, 1865, at p. 633; app. † by 1900.—3. (Ex senses 1, 2.) To search the person of: since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931; 1933, Ersine; Convict, 1934.—4. To manhandle, bully, intimidate: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1945. Prob. ex sense 1.

shake-glim. See the 1851 quot'n in shake lurk.

shake it. To stand close to, rub oneself against (a man): prostitutes' and low dance-halls': C. 20. Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937. The 'it' is the membrum virile.

shake(-)lurk. A perversion of shipwrecked sailor's lurk, which it superseded: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 219, 'Shipwreck [as a means of exciting to alms] is called a "shake lurk"; loss by fire is a "glim"': 1859, H; by 1890 (B & L).

shake man. An extortioner: since ca. 1920: 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief. See shake, n. and v.

shake one's shambles. See shambles, shake one's.

shake one's toe-rag. To decamp: beggars' and vagabonds': since ca. 1890; slightly ob. Ware, 1909. Toe-rags used instead of socks: cf. s. shake a leg.

shake one's trotters at Beilby's ball. See trotters at . . .

shake out. To extort money: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'They shook it [$2000] out of me'; † by 1930. An elaboration of shake, v.; cf. shake down.

shake the cross. See cross, shake the.

shake-up. 'A fierce whiskey made by shaking up straight alcohol and a little color' (M. Berger in The New Yorker, March 12, 1938): drug addicts' (resp. in a tea pad): since ca. 1930.—2. 'A campaign of law enforcement,' BVB, 1942: since ca. 1930; by 1945, police s. A specialization of the Eng. and Am. coll. term.

shakedown. See shake down, n.

shaker. A shirt: May 1839, Sessions Papers; 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. Beggars and tramps shake their shirts to dislodge the lodgers.—2. A beggar that pretends to have fits: 1862, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV, 432; extant.

shakers. Dice, esp. if loaded: since ca. 1920. Ersine. Sense-transference from agent to instrument.

shakes?, what. "'What shakes, Bill?'" "None", i.e., no chance of committing a robbery': 1859, H; app. † by 1900. Cf. shake, n. and v.—the prob. origin; cf. also the phrase no great shakes.

shackster; shakester's crabs. See shickster; shickster's crabs.—2. (Also shackster.) An extortionist: U.S. racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'The shacksters put the town on the fritz'; extant. Ex shake down, v.

shakie or shaky, n. 'Those [beggars] with pronounced tremors (drunk-palsied) [are called] "shakies"', Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941; mostly beggars': C. 20.

shaky, adj. 'Of doubtful authenticity, of doubtful character,' Black, 1943: since the 1920's. Compare the R.A.F. shaky do, 'a discreditable or risky affair or display or performance'.

shaler, 'a girl': despite its being in Brandon's glossary, 1839, it was never c., except perhaps in U.S.A., esp. New York—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859. Prob. a corruption of Sheila, a girl's name.

shaller, the. A corrupt form of the shallow, i.e. 'the shallow dodge': 1869, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; † by 1840.

shallow, n. A hat: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1824, J. Wight, Mornings at Bow Street; † by 1890. Compared with a bucket, it was—as a water-container—rather shallow.—2. Short for the shallow dodge, or rather a substantivization of shallow, adj.: 1839 (see shallow, do the); 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, I, 'The Shallow got so grannied (known) in London, that the supplies got queer'; 1886, W. Newton; 1903, F & H; † by 1940.—3. 'Man dressed in rags': tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; app. † by 1930. A shortening of shallow cove.

shallow. See shallowing.

shallow, adj. Half naked: 1839, implied in the next entry, and in shallow chap; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'I met with a man called Tom Shallow (shallow is cant for half-naked)'; 1887, Baumann; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!, where it is defined as 'bare-foot'; 1903, F & H; † by 1940.

shallow, do the; go upon the shallow. "'I have a better rig than that, I go upon the shallow"', that is, half naked. He makes 10s. or 15s. a day by the sale of the old clothes given him by compassionate person': 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London (on the shallow); 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life (as go shallow); 1887, Baumann (id.); app. † by 1920. See shallow, adj.

shallow, live. To live very poorly and modestly, esp. as to dress: 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!, and 1890, The Rogue's Gallery; 1903, F & H (who classify it as thieves'), 'To live quietly and in retirement, as when wanted'; ob. Cf. shallow, do the.

shallow, mag(ging) in the. See mag in the shallow.

shallow, on the. See shallow, do the. Also in Matsell, 1859.

shallow, run. A variant of shallow, do the. F & H, 1903, quote The Ripon Chronicle of Aug. 23, 1893.

shallow bloke. A variant of shallow cove (see shallow chap); 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1890, B & L; † by 1920.

shallow brigade, the. The corpus of 'shallow coves': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1903, F & H; app. † by 1920. See:— shallow chap; s. cove; s. fellow. One who goes 'about the country, half-naked, with a Guernsey jacket, but no hat, shoes, nor stockings': 1839, Brandon (the 2nd and 3rd in the glossary; the 1st on p. 168); 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants (the 2nd); 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds (s. cove); 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I (2nd); 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London (2nd); 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed. (2nd and 3rd); 1859, H (2nd); Nov. 1870, The Broadway; 1887, Baumann (s. cove); 1890, B & L (id.); 1895, Caminada (id.); 1899, J. Flynt (concerning England); 1903, F & H; † by 1920.

shallow dodge, the; the shivering dodge. This is the beggar's trick defined at shallow, do the: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 417, '“I've done the shivering dodge, too—gone out in the cold weather half naked . . . It's a good dodge in tidy inclement seasons. It's not so good a lurk, by two bob a day, as it once was”'; 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1890, B & L; ob. by 1930, virtually † by 1940. Cf. shallow, do the.

shallow fellow. See shallow cove.

shallow mot(t). A female that begs after the same fashion as a 'shallow cove' (q.v.): 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants, 'Shallow motts . . . go nearly naked'; 1859, H, 'Shallow Mot, a ragged woman,—the frequent companion of the shallow cove'; 1887, Baumann; † by 1930. See shallow, adj., and mot.

shallow-runner. 'Tramp who begs old clothes,' Gipsy Petulengro, A Romany Life, 1935: tramps': C. 20. Cf. shallow, n. and adj.: whence the sense is prob. derived.

shallow screever. 'A man'—surely, a wretchedly clad man?—'who sketches and draws on the pavement': 1859, H; † by 1920. Cf. the other shallow 'dodges'.

shallowing, vbl n. The 'shallow dodge'; practising the 'shallow dodge': beggars': 1843, Sessions Papers (Aug. 23, trial of John Facey), 'She went out shallowing, or begging, the day after she miscarried, and caught cold, and that was the cause of her death'; 1869, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; † by 1930. Ex shallow, n., 2.

shallows, go on the. 'To go half-naked': 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III (sec durrynacking); 1859, H; † by 1940. A variant of go on the shallow, q.v. at shallow, do the.

sham, n. 'Sham, c. a Cheat, or Trick,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. s. by 1760 or so, for Grose implies that, in his day, it was s.—2. A forged document: beggars': 1864, H, 3rd ed. (at silver beggar); 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747; by 1910, no longer c.—3. A policeman: U.S.A.: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, who wrongly derives it from shamrock; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933 (see shom); extant. Short for shamos or shamus.

sham, adj. Illicit; bogus: prob. since ca. 1720: app. c. until ca. 1760, then s., and by 1830, S.E. George Parker, 1781, seems to have believed it to be either c. or low s. Ex the n.

sham, cut a. 'To play a Rogue's Trick', i.e. to cheat, to swindle: 1698, B.E. (at sham); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose—who implies that it was, by that date, s. See sham, n.

sham(-)Abraham, n. An evader; a shuffler: 1822, David Carey, Life in Paris, 'That plea won't hold any longer. Come, no sham Abrahams among old acquaintance'; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; app. † by 1920. Ex:—

sham Abraham (or Abram), v. See abram, sham.

sham file. See buttock and twang.

sham(-)legger is a synonym of dudder: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (see legger, sham); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1880, in England; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1910, in U.S.A. The legger may indicate that he belongs to that class of 'dudder' which goes from fair to fair in the country.

shamble, shake one's. To make off; to hasten away: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1830. An alliterative development of S.E. shamble, 'a shambling gait'.

shamming pusher. A prize-fighter: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; † by 1934. 'Nobbled', he pushes instead of punching; he shams in a fight. Nothing but a 'palooka'.

shamos, shamus; also sharmos, sharmus; rarely, shom(m)us. 'Sharmus, n. A detective; a cop,' Leverage, 1925; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers (shommus); 1930, Burke; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (shamos, shamus); 1931, D. W. Maurer (shamus); 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict (a detective); Nov. 3, 1934, Flynn's, Richard B. Sale; Jan. 30, 1937, Flynn's; 1939, Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep; by 1940, police and journalistic s. A corruption of the Irish font-name Seamus, Seamas: Irishmen abound in the police force of the U.S.A. Ersine, who adduces only shom, shomus, thinks the term to be of Hebrew origin.—2. Hence, an informer to the police: racketeers': 1929–31, Kernôt; 1930, Burke; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. the degradation of copper from 'policeman' to 'informer'.

shams, 'gaiters' (Leverage, 1925): s., not c.

shamus. See shamos.

shan. 'Counterfeit money in general'; esp. counterfeit coin: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, IV, 'I asked the prisoner if he had got any shan to sell'; 1839, Brandon (sheen); 1856, implied in shansman spelt shawnsman; 1859, H (sheen); app. † by 1910. Perhaps ex Ger. Schein, 'a bank-bill', or a corruption of sheen, 'glitter' of coin: B & L (at sheen).—2. A shilling piece: July 1805, Sessions Papers (p. 450); † by 1900.

Shanghai, 'a tall individual' (Leverage, 1925): s., not c.

shann, n. and v. Deceit, to deceive; a fraud, to defraud or cheat: low s., not c. (Leverage, 1925.)

shansman. An utterer of counterfeit money: 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 136, 'Showful-pitchers; smashers or shawnsmen, utterers of counterfeit coin'; † by 1920. Ex shan.

shant; esp. in shant o' gatter. A pot, i.e. a beer pot: 1851, H. Mayhew (see gatter); 1857, Augustus Mayhew; 1859, H, 'A pot or quart; "shant of bivvy", a quart of beer'; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'He will sometimes by selling what she has raise another "shant" (or pot of beer); 1887, Baumann; 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo; by 1900, low s. In C. 20, it often = a drink, whether of beer, spirits, or what-have-you? Etymology?

shanty, n. Money: 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo (p. 11); † by 1940. Prob. ex shan.

shanty, v., to 'booze' (drink liquor; indulge in drinking-bouts), is not c., but low s.: Australian: 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms. Cf. shant.

shanty man. A sub-contractor with poor equipment, yet perhaps good to work for: tramps' c.—but also labour-gang s.—of C. 20. It occurs in, e.g., Stiff, 1931. Ex the shanties in which the labourers lodge.

shanty queen. The wife of a shanty man; any woman on or around a labour camp: C. 20. As for preceding term. Stiff, 1931.

shap, 'a hat', was classified as c. in The Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708, and in C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718. It is, I think, justifiable to classify it as c. during the approximate period, 1700-30. Ex shappeau.

shape, n. and v. A cheating deception; to cheat, to deceive: 1925, Leverage; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, "'Shapes" or duplicate keys to newly sold cars are often peddled by crooked minor employees of automobile sales companies'; extant. Cf. shapes.

shapes. Loaded dice: professional gamblers': 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1933, Ersine, 'Dice with uneven sides'; March 21, 1936, Flynn's, Frank Wrentmore, "'Shapes" are dice which have beveled faces on some sides of the cubes . . . This . . . will produce desired combinations with startling regularity'; extant. New shapes.

shapes, show one's. 'To be stript, or made peel, at the whipping-post': 1811, Lex. Bal.; † by 1900. Self-explanatory.

shappeau, or shappo, seems to have been c. during the approximate period, 1690-1830. B.E. has 'Shappeau, c. or Shappo, c. for Chappeau, a Hat, the newest cant. Nab being very old, and grown too common'; Grose, 1785. See also shap.

share certificate. A prostitute in the service of a pimp: white-slavers': since ca. 1910. A. Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, 'Then she had run away: and where was she? . . . One of my share certificates had disappeared.'

shark, 'a sharper', is not c., though B.E. says it is: it has prob. been S.E. throughout its existence, i.e. since the late C. 16. Not necessarily ex the rapacious fish: see O.E.D.—2. See sharks.—3. The American sense, 'a man that sells jobs to tramps', was prob. c.—at first: tramps': C. 20; hardly c. after ca. 1930. A ravening creature.

shark hunter. A 'thief on the lookout for drunken men', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; extant. It is the hunter (the thief) who is a shark.

sharks. 'Sharks; the first order of pickpockets. Bow-Street term, A.D. 1785', Grose, 2nd ed., 1788; earlier in J. Stevens, 1707. The quot'n from Grose does not make it clear whether it was a police (therefore s.) term or a term current among the criminals appearing at the Bow Street police court.

sharmos (or -us). See shamos.

sharp, n. A rifle: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Godfrey Irwin derives it ex 'the old rifle made by Sharps, and famous on the frontier'.—2. See sharps, 2.—3. For a sometimes wrongly classified S.E. sense, see sense 2 of:— sharp, adj., 'subtle', is by Thomas Shadwell, in the glossary prefacing The Squire of Alsatia, classified as c.: but this is a palpable error.—2. Likewise the n., although it was used by the underworld for anyone living 'on the cross' (Vaux, 1812), can hardly be classified as c.; even in sharps and flats (tricksters and dupes) it was prob. s.

sharp (or sharps), on the; get on the sharp. (To be) looking for someone to swindle; to obtain things by swindling: 1742, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. 1 (John Gulliford), 'We . . . went about the Town upon the Sharps, and got a pretty deal of Money'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'We could not get any Thing on the Sharp that Day'; † by 1890.—2. For the American sense, see on the sharp.

sharpen up. 'To practise, as at picking pockets; with crooked dice or marked cards, etc.', Godfrey Irwin, 1931: C. 20. Cf. grindstone . . ., q.v.

sharper, a cheat, esp. a professional cheat, is classified by Thomas Shadwell in The Squire of Alsatia, 1688—not the earliest record, by seven years (O.E.D.)—as c., and again as c. by B.E., 1698: but it has prob. been always S.E. Ex the corresponding S.E. v.

sharpers' tools, in the specific underworld sense, 'false Dice', is prob. but not indubitably c.: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; Grose, 1785, elaborates thus: 'A fool and false dice'. The term had > † by 1850.

sharping lay, the. Swindling: ca. 1740-1850. John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753. See lay and sharpo.

sharping ome. A policeman: 1859, H: both c. and parlyaree; by 1890, no longer c. See ome.

sharpo, on the. Engaged in burglary: C. 20. 1932, The Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, "'You've got the hands for it, George; you need delicate fingers to go on the sharp"'"; extant. An elaboration of sharp, on the.

sharps. See sharp, on the.—2. (The singular is extremely rare.) Needles: mostly beggars': C. 20. In The Autobiography of a Super-Tramp, published in 1908, W. H. Davies refers to a professional beggar's advice given a lustrum earlier: 'There is not much profit in a pair of stretchers (laces) or a packet of common sharps (needles)'; 1910, D. Crane, A Vicarious Vagabond; by 1912, also American; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Needles . . . as peddled by tramps or beggars'; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; and others.

sharpshooter. A card-sharper: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Sept. 10, 1927, Flynn's, Linn Bonner ('Hey, Mooch!'), 'The other picture presents Fuller as a "sharpshooter", "grifter", and all-round crook', where the nuance is as in 'A racketeer who never takes chances of losing,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1934, Rose, 'A cheap crook'; 1933, Ersine, 'A careful, clever thief'; 1936, Geo. C. Henderson, The Killers; extant. Elaboration of S.E. sharp.

Shasta, (one) from Mt. A drug addict, using any drug—not specializing: 1934, Rose, 'Don't mind him, he's from Mt Shasta'; 1942, BVB; extant. Mt Shasta is in California—not far from the land where the marijuana grows; several American plants have been named for it.

shats, 'nonsensical talk' (Leverage, 1925): low s., not c.

shatting on the (or one's) uppers. 'Shatin' on me uppers: to be "shatin'" on one's "uppers" is to be "dead broke"; Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; 1931, Stiff; extant. The uppers of one's boots; shat(t)ing is either a perversion of skating or a (mainly dialectal) form of shit(t)ing.

shaun. A policeman: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant—but much less usual than the etymologically comparable shamus, q.v. I.e., Sean (pron. shawn), a common Irish given-name.

shave. To divide the loot: 1925, Leverage; extant.—2. To make a clean getaway (i.e., unrecognized): 1925, Leverage; extant.—3. 'To reduce a cube of narcotics,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. And thus accumulate enough to sell (in, e.g., powdered form). With a pun on 'to clean-shave (a person)'.

shaver. 'A cunning shaver, a subtle fellow, one who trims close, an acute cheat' (Grose, 1785) is much more likely to have been s. than c. One who shaves close.—2. Among American tramps, 'this is a razor incased in a little sack, generally leather, which he hangs around his neck with a string', J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (p. 160); by 1920, s.

shavetail. A young, an unbroken, mule: s., not c. The opposite of hard tail.—2. The derivative sense, 'a young Army officer of low rank', is military s.

shavings, in the specific sense, 'clippings of money', was prob. mostly in use in the underworld and may have originated there: B.E., 1698, classifies it as c.; Grose does not: as c., therefore, it prob. had currency ca. 1690–1750.

shawback. An old tramp: 1925, Leverage; extant. A corruption of shell-back, 'an old—or an experienced—sailor'.

shawn; shawnsman. See shan and shansman.

she-napper. B.E., 1698, 'A Woman Thief-catcher'—i.e., a catcher of female thieves; 'also a Cock, (he) or Hen (she) Bawd, a Procureess and Debaucher of young Virgins; a Maiden-head-jobber'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1830. Lit., a catcher of she's.

she sails is a c.p. applied to an accommodating woman: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942.

she's alright. A tramps' catch-phrase applied to a woman sexually willing: C. 20. Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935.

shear. (Usually in plural.) A thief; esp., a swindler: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. S.E., 'to fleece'.

shebeen. 'A private house where liquor is sold illegally is called a shebeen,' J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946 (also in The Cape Times, May 23, 1946): S. Africa: late C. 19–20. In Britain, S.E. or Standard Anglo-Irish; of Celtic origin.

shed, n. A house; a flat; a home: 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, "'... Grab himself shed and doughnut sugar by a regular job'"; rather ob. By depreciative irony: a shed does provide some degree of shelter.—2. Any enclosed automobile: car thieves': since ca. 1925: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. It affords 'a roof over one's head'.—3. A railway station: since the 1920's. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. In rural districts, the station is nothing but a shed.

shed, v. 'To give up or make another give up,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. the jocular 'shed one's clothes'. sheela(h); sheila. As 'a girl', 'a sweetheart', it is s.—perhaps low at first. But in the underworld it had, ca. 1830–80, the sense 'mistress': witness G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I (see jomer, quot'n of 1856). Ex the feminine Christian name.

sheen. Bad money: 1839, Brandon; 1859, H, who classifies it as Scottish; B & L, 1890; † by 1920. This is merely a variant of shan, q.v.—2. Hence, in Australia of late C. 19–20, any money in coin. Baker, 1942.

sheenie (or -y); S—. A Jew. This term dates from ca. 1800, but it is s. (orig. low and Londoners'), not c. See my Dict. of Slang.—2. Hence, in U.S.A.: 'A Jew thief': 1859, Matsell; extant.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) A mean or stingy person: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1910, low s.

Sheenie's (or -s') fear. Bacon: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, p. 321, 'Bacon . . . Tiger, Sheeney's fear, sawney'; ob. Ex the fact that Jews are forbidden to eat bacon.

sheep-herder. A male sexual aberrant: C. 20. BVB.

sheep-napper, 'a shecp-stealer', can hardly be classified as c.; prob. it is to be treated as s. J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 1707.

sheep-shearers. A synonym of Jack in the box, q.v., and more in keeping with the set of terms (q.v. at trimming) employed in that malpractice: 'they that practise it, terme themselves Sheepe-shearers' (Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9): ca. 1605–70.—2. Hence, a cheat or swindler: ca. 1670–1750. B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.

sheepskin. A doctor's diploma: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (p. 306); extant. Vellum is used for some university diplomas.—2. A pardon from the President or from a State Governor: convicts': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'Such a document being formerly written on parchment' (Irwin).

sheepwalk. A prison: 1782, Messink, The Choice of Harlequin (song 'Ye Scamps . . .'), 'In Tothill-field's gay sheepwalk, like lambs ye sport and play'; † by 1880. Possibly c.; prob. s.

sheet. See sheets.—2. A cigarette paper: since ca. 1925: 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; extant. Prob. by a pun on blanket, 1.

sheet and scratch man. A high-class forger: since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1941, Maurer, 'A paperman (passer of forged cheques) who makes his own paper'; extant. See scratch, 2 and 4.

sheet-layer; sheet-laying. Synonymous with next term, q.v.

sheet(-)passer; sheet(-)passing. 'Sheet Passer—One who procures cash for forged checks,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; ibid., '... Passes a bad check ... "Sheet Passing"'; Aug. 30, 1930, Flynn's, Lawrance M. Maynard, "Paperhanging", or passing fictitious checks—also called "sheet laying" or "sheet passing"; extant.

sheet racket; sheet writing. 'Another sidewalk racket is the fake magazine subscription game, sometimes called "sheet writing",' Lawrance M. Maynard, 'On the Make'—Flynn's, May 9, 1931; 1938 (but in ref. to ca. 1920), Francis Chester, Shot Full (s.r.); extant.

sheet writer. 'Solicitors for fake magazines (sheet writers),' Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941; since the early 1920's. Ersine, 1933, defines it as a magazine salesman that absconds with the subscriptions.

sheets. Newspapers for a bed: tramps' and beggars': C. 20: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; and others. With a pun on 'news sheets' and 'bed sheets'.—2. In prison, newspapers to read: since ca. 1925: 1934, Convict.

sheive is a loose spelling of chive (a knife): Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest.

shel. See shells.

shelf. A pawnshop: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; app. † by 1910 in U.S.A.: in C. 20, current in Australia, as in Baker, 1942. Ex shelf, on the.—2. Solitary confinement: convicts': since the 1920's. Castle, 1938. The confined prisoner is very much 'on the shelf'—out of the way.—3. The same as shelfer: Australian: since ca. 1920. Jice Doone, 1926; Baker, 1942. In 1945, Baker, in his excellent The Australian Language, lists these Australian c. synonyms of 'informer': crab, copper-nark, dead-copper, dropper man, fizgig, fizz, shelf, shelfer, stinker, top-off. Also current in South Africa: J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946. 'Because he very effectually puts a criminal there' (Partridge, 1937); cf. sense 2 of:— shelf, on the. In pawn: 1811, Lex. Bal.; by 1850, if not indeed by 1840, it was s. Ex the S.E. sense, 'set on one side', 'discarded', 'retired'.—2. Transported as a convict: 1859, H (at on); by 1890 (B & L) it was †. Prob. ex sense 1.

shelfier. One who, upon a companion or an associate, informs to the police: New Zealand since ca. 1925; and, by 1935 at latest, Australian: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter); 1941, Sidney J. Baker, New Zealand Slang; 1942, Baker, Australian Slang; extant. He 'shells' the victim: cf. shelf, on the, sense 2, and shelf, 3, which may constitute the imm. origin.

shell, n. See shells.—2. See upper shell and under shell.—3. A building: burglars': 1879, Thor Fredur, Sketches from Shady Places, 'The chief essential is to get safely into the "shell", whatever it may be; the getting out again being easy enough'; ob. The outer walls being likened to a shell.—4. See shell of hope. Independently in Leverage, 1925, 'Shell, n., A portion of opium'.—5. A swindle: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex shell game.—6. "A shell", Canary George pipes, "is what us old-timers in the West here call a safe that's old-fashioned. Anything that's so stout it has to be blown open, that's a nut. A flimsy old box that maybe can be chiseled open or the hide peeled off—that's a shell"; Roy W. Hinds, Flynn's, Dec. 26, 1925; slightly ob.

shell, v. To swindle: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex shell game; see shell-worker. Also cf. English proletarian shell (someone) out, 'to pluck him at cards or at dice'.—2. To slander: 1925, Leverage; extant.

shell, on the half. See on the half shell.

shell of hop. A can—a tin—of opium: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; extant. See hop.

shell out, 'to pay (money) out, or over', may orig. have been c., but it was s. by 1850 at latest: 1823, Egan's Grose, 'Shelling-out. Clubbing money together. Come, shell out. Cant. To shell out the shiners; to produce the guineas.' Ex shelling peas.

shell-shock. Cocoa; among tramps, only casual-ward tea: since ca. 1918. Michael Harrison, Spring in Tartarus, 1935 (cocoa). Ironic?

shell V. A bank vault with a thin one-plate door: bank robbers': since ca. 1925. In, e.g., Rose, 1934. Shell because of the thinness of the casing; V = vault.

shell-worker. A swindler, a confidence man: 1891, James Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; 1903, Clapin; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; by 1925, s. Lit., one who works the shell game (an American version of thimble-rigging).

shellack; often as vbl n., shellacking. To 'give the works'; to assault, beat up; to murder: 1930, Charles Francis Coe, Gunman, 'These two bums that Lefty shellacked were members of Red Kar-fola's gang'; 1931, IA, 'Shellacking—a beating'; Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens (a convict's beating-up by warders); 1935, Hargan (ditto); by 1937, no longer c. in the sense 'to beat; to assault'; otherwise, extant as c. Ex shellac, 'to varnish (with shellac)'.

shellacker. 'Booster or promoter who puts on the varnish,' Stiff, 1931; extant.

shelles. See:—

shells. Orig. a term proper to 'figging law' (the art and the profession of pickpocketry): 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 'The monie, the Shels'; 1592, Greene, The Second Conny-catching, 'The farmer little suspecting this villany, thrust his hand into his pocket and mist his purse, searcht for it, but lining and shels & all was gone, which made the Country man in a great maze' (in short, coins, money in coin); 1608, Dekker in The Belman of London spells it shelles; app. † by 1650. Ex the resemblance of small round shells to coins.

shellshock. Workhouse cocoa: tramps': from ca. 1919. Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935. See also shell-shock.

shemise. See chemise.

Shenie or Sheney is a variant of Sheenie (or -y).

shepherd, n. A watchman; a guard: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. herder.

shepherd, v. 'To watch a person until a favourable opportunity [occurs] for robbing him,' Baker, 1942: Australian: since ca. 1920. Ex the tactics of sheep-musterers.

sheriff's ball. 'Sheriff's ball. An execution; to dance at the sheriff's ball, and loll out one's tongue at the company, to be hanged, or go to rest in a horse's night cap, i.e. a halter': 1785, Grose (who does not classify it as c.); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; app. † by 1850. The term may have been c., but more prob. it was s.—perhaps journalistic. Cf. Beilby's ball and the next four sheriff's terms.

sheriff's bracelets, 'handcuffs' (Grose, 1785), may have been c., but more prob. was s., either low or journalistic. Cf. the next three terms.

sheriff's hotel, 'a prison' (Grose, 1785): same remarks as for sheriff's bracelets; app. current ca. 1770–1840.

sheriff's journeyman. A hangman: 1811, Lex. Bal.; † by 1887 (Baumann). The sheriff causes the criminal to be arrested; the hangman closes the account.

sheriff's picture-frame. 'The gallows, or pillory,' Grose, 1785; 1797, Potter: current ca. 1770–1840 in England, the phrase may orig. have been c., but more prob. it was always s.—perhaps journalistic at first. It may, in the form picture-frame, have gone to U.S.A. early in C. 19; in any event, it was, in that shorter form, still extant there so recently as 1931, as Godfrey Irwin testifies, and definitely as c.—not s. Cf. penance board.

sherik, 'to evade', is not c.

shero. The head: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1910. Prob. a corruption of Fr. cheveux, 'hairs' (of the head).

sherry. 'To run away: sherry off,' Grose, 2nd ed., 1788; earlier in Sessions Papers, Dec. 1786 (p. 92), 'The third man said, d—n you, you dog, run, sherry, or I will blow your brains out'. Grose does not classify the term as c., but c. it almost certainly was, ca. 1780–1840, in England; and ca. 1830–80, in U.S.A., as in The Ladies' Repository, 1848, 'Sherry—to run quick'. In David Haggart's Life, 1821, it appears as shirry, which (used also as a n.) is app. a Scottish variant. Ex tip the double to sherry, q.v.

sherry flips. Lips: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1910. M & B, 1944. Rhyming: cf. scarlet pips.

shet. To extort money from: 1925, Leverage; extant. Origin? Perhaps a shortening of shatter, mispronounced shetter.

shice or shise, n.; schice; chice. Also chice (etc.) -am-a-trice. 'Nothing; no good': 1859, H: not c., but, Yiddish in origin, showmen's s.; extant—witness Philip Allingham, Cheappjack, 1934. Cf. shicer, q.v.—2. But the derivative sense, 'counterfeit money', may be c.: 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude, 'There he was with a heap of "shise" upon him. He was caught'; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1910.

shice or shise, adj. No good; counterfeit: 1859, H (see preceding entry): not c., but Yiddish. Cf. shice, n.—The American sense, 'mean, ragged, loafer-like' (The Ladies' Repository, 1848; † by 1937, says Irwin), may possibly have been c. of ca. 1830–70.

shice, v. To cheat or swindle a person: since ca. 1860. Recorded in Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen, 1887; in C. 20, it mostly = 'to welsh', as in Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938. Prob. ex shice, n., 1 and 2.

shice, the. 'Shicing: Welshing. (The pastime is known as "The Shice"),' F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938; C. 20. Ex shice, v.; cf. Australian racing, shicer, 'a welsher'—see shicer, 2.

shice mob. A gang of welshers: racecourse: C. 20. F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938. See shice, the.

shicer; skicer, skycer. 'Skycer, n. A mean, sponging fellow': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, where it is classified as e. and 'gen.'—but for 'gen.' read 'low-life s.'; 1859, H, 'A mean man, a humbug,—a person who is either worthless, or will not work'; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); by 1864, no longer c. Via Yiddish ex Ger. Scheisser, 'a shitter': cf. s. shit, 'an objectionable man'.—2. Hence, a crook, esp. a swindler or a racecourse welsher: Australian: late C. 19–20. Morris, Austral English, 1898; Baker, 1942.

shicery. The same as, and prob. the immediate origin of, shickery, q.v. for period and status.

shicker. Drunk: 1933, Ersine; by 1945, low s. Adopted from Australian and New Zealand s.

shickery. 'Shabby, badly': 1859, H; in the 2nd ed., this is corrected to 'shabby, bad'; prob. c. until ca. 1860: H, 3rd ed., 1864, classifies it as (low) s. Prob. a variant of shicery, which would seem to be the normal adj. from ex shicer, q.v.: F & H.

shickster; occ., shakester. A lady: 1839, Brandon (shickster and shakester); 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxiii, 'He buzzed a bloak and a shakester of a yack and a skin'; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.), 'A respectable girl'; 1857, Snowden (shikster—a rare form); 1859, H (shakester and shickster); by the 1850's, current in New York—see Matsell, 1859 (shakester); ibid., 'Shickster. A woman'; by 1870 in England, no longer c. Ex Yiddish shichsle or shigsel, 'a girl' (B & L). Israel Zangwill uses the Yiddish word in the form shiksah.—2. Hence, 'a flame, a prostitute': 1848, Sinks of London, where it is spelt chickster; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1890, it was > low s. shickster(-)crabs; shickster's (or shakester's) crabs. 'Shakesters' crabs—ladies' shoes,' G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxix, 1847; 1864, H, 3rd ed. ('Tramps' term'); 1887, Baumann; by 1903 (F & H) it was low s. See shickster and crabs.

shieve. See shive.

shif, a knife: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven. A rare variant of shiv.

shift, n.; shifter. Variants (and derivatives), ca. 1690–1825, of town-shift, q.v. Both occur in J. W., Youth's Safety, 1698.

shift, v. See shifting.

shifter. This term seems to have been current ca. 1580–1620. Anon., The Groundworke of Conny-catching, 1592, 'A Shifter . . . got leave of a Carier to ride on his owne hackney a little way from London, who, comming to the Inne where the Carier that night should lodge, honestly set up the horse, and entred the hal, where were at one table some threc and thirty clothiers . . . Using, as he could, his curtesie, and being Gentlemanlike attirde, he was at all their instance placed at the upper end by the hostesse. After hee had a while eaten, he fel to discourse with such pleasance, that all the table were greatly delighted therewith. In the midst of supper enters a noise of musitions, who with their instruments added a double delight. For them hee requested his hostesse to laye a shoulder of mutton and a couple of capons to the fire, for which he would pay, and then mooved in their behalfe to gather. Among them a noble was made, which he fingring, was well blest; for before he had not a cross, yet he promist to make it up an angel. To be short, in comes the reckoning, which (by reason of the fine fare and excesse of wine) amounted to each mans halfe crown. Then hee requested his hostesse to provide so many possets of sacke, as would furnish the table, which he would bestow on the Gentlemen to requite their extraordinary costs: and jestingly askt if she would make him her deputie to gather the reckoning; she granted and he did so: and on a sodaine, (faining to hasten his hostesse with the possets) he tooke his cloke, and, finding fit time, hee slipt out of doores, leaving the guesstes and their hostesse to a new reckoning, and the musitians to a good supper, but they paid for the sauce.—2. See shift.—3. 'An alarm, or intimation, given by a thief to his pall, signifying that there is a down (or suspicion of their presence), or that some one is approaching, and that he had, therefore, better desist from what he is about': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1903, F & H; by 1910, †. I.e., something that causes one to shift, or change position.—4. A jewel thief that 'switches' a 'phoney' piece for a genuine one secreted under the counter-edge in a 'wad of chewing gum' to be retrieved by a confederate: U.S.A.: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant.

shifting, n. 'Cheating or stealing': 1859, Matsell; 1903, F & H; by 1910, †. Prob. the 'stealing' sense is the primary one: cf. conveying and conveyancer (q.v.) and the next entry.

shifting cove. 'A person—a man—who lives by tricking': 1823, Egan's Groser; by 1900, †. Cf. S.E. shifty fellow.

shigs, 'money, silver.—East London' (H, 3rd ed., 1864): not c., but low s.

shigus. A judge: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Ex His Honour pron. as hizzonner, with the -us ending beloved of slangsters?

shikster. See shickster.

shill, n. One who helps a card-sharper by pretending to play as an outsider and thereby shares in the fleecing of the sucker: 1909, Will Irwin, Confessions of a Con Man (in reference, however, to the approximate period 1890–1905); Dec. 2, 1916, The Editor, of an 'egger-on' at a game or a show; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (an assistant in a raffle-swindle; a sales swindle); April 4, 1931, Flynn's, Carl Helm, 'Rackets and Racketeers' (where it is spelt schill); July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; since ca. 1932, showmen's s. Prob. short for shillaber.—2. Bunkum, 'hot air', loose talk: since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy; extant. Ex sense 1.—3. As 'a confidence man', it is an error—committed not, of course, by the underworld, but by journalists and writers, as IA, 1931, implies. But in U.S.A. since ca. 1920 (Ersine) and in Australia, since ca. 1930, it is a genuine c. usage for 'a (confidence) trickster's confederate' (Baker, 1942).—4. (Ex 1.) A pimp, a procurer: C. 20. BVB, 1942.

shill, v. To let (a person) pass: 1914 (implied in shill through); 1925, Leverage; by 1928, circus s.; by 1930, gen. s. Perhaps ex 'to shilly-shally', but prob. ex shillaber.—2. 'To act as a come-on man for a gambling or con game,' Ersine, 1933: since ca. 1918. Ex the n.

shill through (v.i.). To enter, free (as, e.g., into a circus): tramps': 1914, P. & T. Cascy; by 1928, circus s.; by 1930, gen. s. Prob. ex shill; cf. low s. shill, 'to bluff one's way', 'to succeed, by plausible talk, in arriving or entering', as in Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves, 1925, (gunman's 'moll':) 'He kind o' shilled in b'fore I woke up to what was happenin'. Not that I wasn't wise to what men are.'

shillaber. 'Advance agent or outside man for spirit-medium gang', Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924, 'a spicler, a barker' (Leverage, 1925): 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain, 'One time "ballyhoo" and "shillaber"', proprietor of "Chief Bigspoon's . . ." medicine show, erstwhile Harvard half-back . . ., Kewpick was an atavism': perhaps this term was, like ballyhoo, c. for only a brief period; prob. it never was c. at all. Since ca. 1925, it has, in the main, been circus s.; 'A shillaber is a herder of suckers,' Jim Tully, Circus Parade, 1928.

shiller, 'a scribe; one who is fond of writing' (Leverage, 1925): not c., but s.—2. A variant of shill, n., 1 and 3: 1933, Ersine; extant. Prob. ex shill, v., 2.

shim, 'jewelry'; shim joint, 'jewelry store': Rose, 1934: misreadings of slum and slum joint.

shimmy lizard. A louse: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Here, shimmy = shirt: cf. seam squirrel.

shin, n. and v. A loan; to borrow money: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex shin-breaking.

shin-breaking, 'borrowing money' (Matsell, 1859), is s.—ex breaking shins, q.v. at break shins.

shin-plaster. 'A cant term for a bank-note, or any paper money. It probably came into use in 1839, when the banks suspended specie payment, and when paper money became depreciated in value' (with a quot'n from The New York Tribune, Dec. 3, 1845): 1848, Bartlett, Americanisms; by 1870, it was s. But prob. it was always s.: Bartlett's use of 'cant' is misleading. Good enough to serve as a plaster—but not much else.

shin-scraper. 'The treadmill, shin scraper (arising, it may be assumed, on account of the operator's liability, if he is not careful, to get his shins scraped by the ever-revolving wheel)': 1869, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1920. The prisoner, walking on it for an unusually long time, may slip and scrape his shins.

shine. A Negro: c. of approx. period 1890–1925; then low s. Jack London, The Road, 1907; Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 1912—he was at San Quentin, 1901–11. "'Der y'r see that shine comin' down over there . . .?" . . . I looked . . . and saw a medium-sized negro'; 1918, Leon Livingston; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar. Cf. shiny. 'A "shine" is always a negro, so called, possibly from the high lights on his countenance. Texas Shine or Toledo Shine conveys both race and nativity' (Jack London, The Road).

shine-rags. 'Nothing,' says Matsell, 1859: but I suspect the term, and suggest that there has been some misapprehension of shiney-rag, win the.

shiner. A looking-glass: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; 1859, H; 1864, H, 3rd rd., 'East London'—i.e., East London s., which it had > by 1850 (or 1860 at the latest). As a card-sharper's mirror or reflector (J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats, 1894, p. 61), it is c., although Maskelyne treats it as s.; in C. 20, also American, as in Flynn's, March 28, 1936, Frank Wrentmore,

'A "glim" or "shiner" . . . a small round mirror', manipulatable in many ways.—2. Hence (?), a glass used in spectacles (usually pl.); hence, a pair of spectacles: Sept. 1818, Sessions Papers, p. 344, where, however, the sense is not indisputable; app. † by 1890.—3. A guinea: since ca. 1825, a sovereign: 1819, implied in shiners, 2; 1823, Egan's Grose (see shell out); 1838, Glascock; 1859, H.—by which date the term had > s. For semantics, see sense 1 of shiners.—4. The later sense, 'any coin', 'a shilling' (F & J. Greenwood, Under a Cloud, 1860), is not c., but s.—5. A discoloured—a 'black'—eye: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; by 1930, low s.—6. A diamond: U.S.A.: July–Aug. 1928, The White Tops, 'Circus Glossary'; 1928, Chicago May; extant. Ex its lustre.—7. A ten-cent piece: U.S. tramps': 1931, Stiff; extant. Cf. sense 4.

shiners. Coin; money in coin: 1782, Messink, The Choice of Harlequin; 1833, Benj. Webster, The Golden Farmer; 1842, P. Egan, Captain Macheath; by 1855, s.—witness 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857. Ex the shiny appearance of clean coins.—2. Hence, guineas: since ca. 1825, sovereigns: 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial, 'Who knows but, if coax'd, he may shell out the shiners?', glossed as 'produce the guineas'; 1837, E. Lytton Bulwer, Ernest Maltravers; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1860, s.—3. Jewellery: U.S.A.: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. By 1934, at latest (Dorothy Sayers), it was also British. Cf. shiner, 6.

shines. 'Gold coin': 1859, Matsell; † by 1900. Cf. shiner.

shine(y)-rag, win the. To be ruined at gambling, by persisting against the run of the luck: not c., but low s.

shingle, n. and v. A signal; a look-out man; a watchman; to signal: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex coll. American shingle, a signboard.

shiny. A Negro tramp: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (p. 109); ob. Ex shine.—2. (Also shiney.) Money: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. shiners.

ship. See beneship.—2. See schip.

ship in full sail. Ale: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1865, low, and by 1875, gen., rhyming s.

ship of junk. A consignment of narcotics: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; extant.

ship under sail, the. Synonymous with tale, n., 3: since the 1920's. 'The tale. The ship under sail. The Daily Mail. The Binnie Hale. The ble'en tale. That's the lark,' Jim Phelan, In the Can, 1939. All three are underworld rhyming s. terms.

shipwrecked sailor's lurk is practised by professional vagrants that pretend to be captains or masters rendered destitute by the wreck of their ships: 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants, 'This class of impostors are very respectably dressed'; by 1850, it had > shake lurk, q.v. See lurk.

shire. 'A farm; a farmhouse; a barn,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. Australian English shire, 'country area incorporated for local government, and embracing a tract of agricultural or grazing territory' (Webster's).

shirk. See shurk.

shirk the nubbing-cheat. See nubbing-cheat, shirk the.

shirry. See sherry.

shirt, up (e.g., my). For myself, to my account or advantage: since ca. 1905. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Cf. watch. my.

shirt-front cover. A waistcoat: 1889 (see fan, n., 1); app. † by 1914. Would-be humorous.

shirt rabbits. Lice: tramps': 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'The bunk-car stunk! Oh, boy! And shirt-rabbits in the blankets'; extant. Cf. seam(-)squirrel.

shise. See shice.

shish joint. A 'shady' bookmaker and his assistant (operating on a racecourse): turf: since ca. 1920. 'John Morris' (private letter), 1932. I.e., shice-joint, 2.

shisher is a mainly English variant of shicer, 2. Partridge, Slang, 1933.

shit heel. 'An inmate who considers himself superior to all the others,' Hargan, 1935: convicts': since ca. 1920. Cf. English s. Lord Muck.

shitok, 'to use force' (Leverage, 1925); shitoker, 'a strong-arm fellow' (ibid.): on the border-line between c. and low s. Ex shtocker.

shiv, n., is a variant of shive, than which, indeed, it is much more common. In, e.g., Ersine.

shiv, v. To stab: 1933, Ersine (also shiv up); 1935, Hargan. Much earlier in form chiv. Ex the n.

shiv-man. A man over-ready to use a knife, and skiful in the doing: since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Castle, 1938. Ex: shive.

shiv up. See shiv, v. Hence:—2. To operate medically: since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933, 'The sawbones shived up on three cons'.

shive. A knife: late C. 19–20. Donald Lowrie, who was at San Quentin in 1901–11, makes an old hand say, in reference to the 1890's, 'I always carried a shive m'self. Everybody carried a shive. Y'r had t' carry one' (My Life in Prison, 1912); 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, where it is spelt shieve; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1927, Kane (shiv); 1928, Chicago May; 1928, John O'Connor; May 18, 1929, Flynn's; but by 1929 (The Saturday Evening Post, Oct. 19, 'Alagazam') it was pitchmen's s. An American variant of chife and therefore yoked with chiv.—2. Hence, a razor ('never a safety razor', Stiff, 1931): mostly tramps': 1919, F. H. Sidney, 'Hobo Cant' in Dialect Notes; 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'The bartender produced a razor—a shiv he called it'; by 1929, it was pitchmen's s. (as for sense 1). Cf. chiv, n., 2: shive merely perverts chive, n., q.v. at chife.—3. (Ex sense 1.) A stiletto: gangsters': ca. 1920–40. In, e.g., Flynn's, Aug. 24, 1935, Howard McLellan.—4. (Ex sense 1.) As the shiv, it is a grifters' betting game, involving a knife that cannot be opened: C. 20. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938.

shiver. 'He might . . . have a mobster pinched and planted in my cell to put me out of the way. Plants of this kind, "shivers" or "slicers" as they are called, are sometimes put into cells on a fake pinch [i.e., arrest] to get a man,' Al Hurwitch in Flynn's, July 2, 1932; extant. Ex shiv, n., or shive.

shivering dodge, the. Synonymous with shallow dodge, q.v.

shivering Jemmy. One who practises 'the shivering dodge' (see shallow dodge): 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, by implication: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was London street s.

sho-sho (gun). A machine-gun: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar (the full form); 1934, Rose (sho-sho); extant. Ironie ex the toy guns used for shooting forth insecticides.

shock, v.i. To take a dose of some drug: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. the 'drug' sense of jolt, n. and v.

shock joint. A cheap saloon, a low speakeasy: since ca. 1922. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex the liquor, which 'shocks' the stomach.

shoddy(-)dropper. A seller of cheap serge: New Zealand: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter); 1941, Sidney J. Baker, New Zealand Slang; since ca. 1935, also Australian, as in Baker, 1942; in Australia, too, it bears the derivative sense, 'cheap swindler' (Baker, 1945).

shoe-fly. See shoo fly.

shoe leather! A c.p. employed by thieves to intimate an inimical or inconvenient person's approach: 1857, 'Dueange Anglieus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob. by 1930, † by 1945. I.e., 'Use your shoe leather! Run away!'

shoe maker. An inferior lawyer: 1935, Hargan; extant. A botcher.

shoe-string. 'When a man bets a small amount and runs it up to a large amount, it is called a shoe-string': professional gamblers' and card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1920.

shoful; also schofel, shofel, shofill, shofle, shofull, etc. 'Itinerant umbrella makers and repairers pass shoefell, i.e. bad money': 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, trial of John Abrahams (shofle); 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1839, op. cit., Brandon, in the glossary, spells it schofel and shofel; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'Showfull's . . . Bad money'; 1857, Snowden (schofel); 1858, C. Reade, Autobiography of a Thief, where it is spelt shoffle; 1859, H (schoful and showfull); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), schofel; 1864, H, 3rd ed. (schofel); by 1890 (B & L), common among costermongers and therefore no longer to be classified as c. 'The word Shoful is derived from the Danish Skuffe, to shove, to deceive, cheat; the Saxon form of the same verb is Scufan, whence the English Shove' (Mayhew in London Labour); but no English c. words derive ex Danish; and in The Great World of London, 1856, at p. 6, Mayhew derives the term from 'the German vagrants' in England: 'the Teutonic shoful (bad stuff—trash)'. But for 'Teutonic shoful' we should read 'Ger. Schofel': Schofel is a substantival use of the Ger. schofel, 'worthless', which has been adopted from Yiddish: the Yiddish term represents a Ger. Jewish pronunciation of the Hebrew shaphel, 'low, base' (O.E.D.), which occurs in 2 Samuel, vi, 22.—2. Hence, of persons (see shoful pullet) and esp. of places (e.g., inns, taverns): 'shady'; frequented by criminals or by tramps: 1851, Mayhew, I, 259, 'The Three Queens (a beer-shop). "A rackety place, sir, . . . one of the showfulls"': † by 1920.—3. The sense 'a hansom cab' is not c., but s.—4. Sham jewellery: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1890, B & L; by 1900, low s. Ex sense 1; as, prob., is:—5. An impostor: 1874, H; 1890, B & L; by 1903 (F & H), low s. Ex sense 1. shoful, adj. See the n., sense 2.—2. Sham; 1864, H; by 1903 (F & H) it was low s. Ex sense 1 of the n.

shoful man. "Shoful Men", or those who plunder by means of counterfeits': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 26,—esp. a coiner of counterfeit money (ibid., 32); 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London (shofulman); Nov. 1870, The Broadway, 'The "Shofulman" coins bad money, counterfeits banknotes, and forges signatures'; by 1900, if not indeed by 1890, it was low s. See shoful, n., 1.

shoful money is a s. form of shoful, n., 1.

shoful-pitcher; shoful-pitching. A seller, the selling, of bad money: 1839, Brandon (schofel pitcher); 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I (showful-pitcher); 1857, 'Dueange Anglieus', The Vulgar Tongue, 'Shoefel-Pitching. Passing bad money'; 1858, C. Reade, Autobiography of a Thief, 'Behold me now a shoefel-pitcher'; 1859, H (showfull-pitcher, -pitching); 1859, Matsell (schofel-p.); 3 April, 1876, Sessions Papers, 'I do not know the phrase shofle pitching, but I could see that it meant passing counterfeit coin'; 1887, Baumann (both); 1890, B & L (both); 1893, No. 747 (latter); by 1903 (F & H) they were low s. See shoful, n., 1.

shoful (ete.) pullet. 'A "gay" woman': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. See shoful, n., esp. sense 2. shofulman (Mayhew, 1851). See shoful man.

sholl, v. 'To bonnet one, or crush a person's hat over his eyes. North': 1864, H, 3rd ed.: prob. not c., but low s. A dial. form of 'to shovel'.

shom is short for shom(m)us = shamus, q.v.: Ersine, 1933.

shomer. A look-out man; a spy: 1925, Leverage; extant—but not very gen. Yiddish?

shommus or shomus. A variant of shamos, -us. The latter occurs in Ersine, 1933.

shonnicker (or with one 'n'). 'A neophyte or inexperienced thief', Jackson & Hellyer, 1914—a sense that Godfrey Irwin (letter of Aug. 12, 1937) regards with distrust. Ex Yiddish.—2. A pawnbroker: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'More especially when also a "fence"': extant.

shoo fly; in full, shoo(-)fly game. Dangling an artificial fly before a person's face and picking his (or her) pocket while the importunate fly is being dealt with: 1881, The Man Traps of New York, opp. p. 32, 'The "shoo Fly" Pocket-Picking Game' (illustration); † by 1918.—2. shoo fly only: see the next entry.—3. Knock-out drops: 1925, Leverage; extant.—4. (N. and v.) 'A railroad detour, when a track is built around some obstacle'—railroad s. rather than tramps' e.; 'to avoid passing through a town if the police are hostile': tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931 (n. and v.).—5. Snatching, esp. watches: English: 1934, Ex-Sgt B. Leeson, Lost London—but current throughout the century. Prob. ex shootfly, 2.

shoo-fly (man). A criminal's spy, engaged in watching the police in order to warn the criminal of police activities: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, p. 287 (in full) and p. 289 (the shorter); slightly ob. Prob. ex the preceding term.—2. (Shoo-fly only.) A detective: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (p. 265); 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow; June 27, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse, 'A force of "shoo flies"—roundsmen [sergeants] in civilian clothes—were sent out regularly from headquarters to sweep into a precinct and look over the men"—in ref. to the early 1900's; ob. Humorous.

shook. See shake, v.—2. A synonym of rocked: ca. 1790–1850. (Vaux, 1812.)

shook ?, have you. See shake, v.

shool, 'to go skulking about', is not c. (despite its appearance in several dictt. of c.), but dial. and s.

shoon, 'a fool; a country lout' (Matsell, Vocabulary, 1859; B & L, 1890): but either this is an error or, if it be correct, it is not c. I suggest that there is a misapprehension of S.E. clouted shoon, 'shoes tipped with iron'.

shoot. To talk: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'I've heard guns shoot . . . I have heard thieves use the same argument'; by 1910, s. To expel words from mouth as bullets from a rifle.—2. To inject a drug: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant. See shot, n., 4.—3. To apply an explosive to (esp., a safe), in order to open (it): 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (p. 71); 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1928, J. K. Ferrier, 'Crime in the United States' in his Crooks and Crime, 'Blowing open a safe is "snuffing a drum" or "shooting a Peter"': 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; extant.—4. To report (a prisoner): convicts': Nov. 20, 1926, Flynn's (p. 830); April 5, 1930, Flynn's; 1938, Convict 2nd; extant.

shoot a bug. 'To "shoot a bug" (sham insanity),' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; very ob. Cf. American bug house, 'mad, crazy'.

shoot off one's trap. To talk too freely: ca. 1912, George Bronson-Howard, The Snob; by 1930, low s. A variant of s. shoot off one's mouth.

shoot snipes. To collect, for one's own use, discarded cigar-butts and cigarette-ends: tramps': 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1933, Ersine; extant. See snipe-shooting. Contrast the low s. Shoot that snipe!, Stop talking nonsense!; cut the cackle!

shoot the curve. See hit, v., 3.

shoot the lemon. To talk, to chat: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

shoot the roll or shoot the works. To risk everything, esp. in gambling at races: since ca. 1918. Ersine. One's bank-roll; cf. — shoot the works, 'to tell either the truth or the full details', may have been c. in the 1920's, but it was, I think, s. by 1930. Flynn's, Dec. 13, 1930, J. Allan Dunn. Cf. give the works, sense 1.—2. See shoot the roll.

shoot up. To inject (e.g., morphine): drug addicts': 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; extant. Cf. shot, 'an injection'.

shoot yen-shee. 'To inject a solution of opium,' BVB. 1942: addicts': since ca. 1925. See the elements.

shooter. 'A would-be tough,' Leverage, 1925: not very common. Derisive.

shootfly. 'If [pickpockets] are engaged in stealing watches they work as "shootflies",' David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937; extant. Cf. — 2. Snatching theft of watches: 1933, Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld. Cf. shoo fly, 5, and:— shootflying. Bag-snatching: 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; extant.

shooting(-)star. 'Shooting-Stars. Thieves who do not remain long in one place': 1859, Matsell; extant. Cf. Eng. s. do a moonlight flit.

shop, n. A prison: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail; 1903, F & H; ob. Ex the s. sense of shop, 'place'—in, e.g., all over the shop.—2. A giving of information to the police: 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13, "How do you know Leggc 'shopped' him?" . . . "It was a 'shop' all right," said the other without attempting to explain'; 1925, Edgar Wallace, A King by Night; extant. Ex sense 2 of:—

shop, v. To imprison; to send to prison: 1698, B.E., Shopt, c. imprison'd'; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'Shopped, confined, imprisoned'; 1797, Potter, Shopt, imprisoned'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1869, G. J. Whyte Melville, M. or N.; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; in 1909, Ware classifies it as low s. Prob. ex the n.—2. Hence, to inform on (a person) to the police: 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; July 22, 1903, Sessions Papers; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life (to prison warders); prob. it was low s. by ca. 1932.

shop-bouncer; shop-bouncing. A shoplifter; shoplifting: Brandon, 1839, has the latter; G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxv, the latter; Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant (3rd ed., 1857) shows that the theft is usually engineered by two persons and that it is effected while the shopkeeper is away getting change or while he is looking for a coin dropped by one of the thieves; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s.; app. † by 1910. Cf. bouncer, 2.

shop-dragging. 'Stealing from shop fronts, or, as it is known to the profession, "shop-dragging",' Ex-Sgt B. Leeson, Lost London, 1934; extant. See drag, v.

shop-lift or shoplift; shoplifter. 'Shop-lift . . . One that steals out of shops,' R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665; 1676, Coles, 'Shoplift, c. one that pretends to cheapen [i.e., to bargain], and steals wares'; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'The Shop-lifts are commonly Women'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The Sixty-fourth Rank of Cheats, of either Sex'; 1785, Grose (shoplifter), by whose time the term was no longer c. See lift, n. and v.

shop-lifting, or one word. This was c. for the approximate period, 1690–1730. The earliest entry in The O.E.D. is of 1698: The O.E.D. holds it to have always been S.E.: but in the Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708, it is plainly classified as c.

shop-lobber. 'A dressed up silly shop-man, a powdered fop' (Potter, 1797), is prob. s., not c. The lobber may refer to lob, a shop-till.

shop-mug. A store (i.e., big shop) detective: 1925, Leverage; extant.

shop-mumper. A beggar operating in shops: ca. 1870–1920. Baumann, 1887. See mumper.

shop(-)sneak. 'One that watches an opportunity to get into the Shop and steal the Goods,' C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718; 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732; by 1820, low s. shoplift; shoplifter. See shop-lift.

shopper. One who informs on another; esp. of one criminal so informing on another criminal (above all, on an accomplice or an ex-accomplice) that the latter is sent to prison or, in prison, is sent to a punishment cell: prob. since ca. 1880, but the earliest record I have is Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 1924, 'Jeffrey's going to shop you sooner or later, because he's a natural born shopper'; 1924, Stanley Scott, The Human Side of Crook and Convict Life, 'A "shopper" (a warder's tale-bearer)'; extant. Ex shop, v., 2.

short, n. 'A dram unlengthened by water' (1823, Egan's Grose), is not c., as stated by Egan, but public-house s.—2. A partridge: poachers': 1841, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin, 'It'll be for higher game nor longs, or shorts, or tails'; ob. Cf. short 'un and contrast long ('un).—3. A tramcar: U.S.A.: 1897, Popular Science Monthly, April, p. 832, 'A street car is a short, comparing its length with [that of] a railroad car'; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; April 21, 1934, Flynn's; 1938, Convict 2nd; extant. Short, if compared with a rattler (train); perhaps also in ref. to the distances it travels.—4. A short wire: U.S.A.: Jan. 16, 1927, Flynn's 'I was "short" in a rat mob'; extant.—5. See shorts, out on the.—6. A motor-car: U.S.A.: see hot short. Also independently, as in Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls, 1931, 'The jockey . . . driving the short goes so fast . . .' and Eagle, 1933, and Howard N. Rose, 1934, and elsewhere.—7. See short piece.

short, v. The sense 'to short-change' and its derivative, 'to rob', belong to circus s. and gen. low s., not to c. (The White Tops, July–Aug. 1928, 'Circus Glossary').

short, adj. Near one's release: convicts': 1934, Rose, 'I'm getting short. I've got only three days and a get-up'; extant. Cf. short time, 3.

short bill. See long bill.

short-bit. See 'long-bit and short-bit'.

short-boy; short-work. 'A pickpocket who works the shorts [or tramcars].—The picking of pockets on the [street or tram] cars,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See short, n., 3, and work, n.

short cards or short game. 'A game of seven-up'—known also as 'all fours' and 'old sledge'—'or cribbage. For instance, "Have you been playing faro tonight?" "No . . . I have been playing short cards"' : 1859, Matsell; 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story (the former); in 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, in Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, cites short-card man as a synonym for 'gambler'; 1925, Leverage, 'Short-Cards, n.pl., Euchre, etc.'; extant.

short con, the. The confidence game in a small way: Feb. 6, 1932, Flynn's, Bill Hawley, 'Little tricks known as the "short con"': 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; 1938, Convict 2nd (short con man); extant. Only a little time is expended on them.

short-con, v. To short-change (someone): 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex prec.

short-go. A weak drug-injection: addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. Cf. short-piece.

short jump. See long jump.

short line. Short for hobo short line (suicide in front of, or under, a train): tramps': since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

short of a sheet. In the street: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

short piece; hence, short. 'Less than an ounce of narcotics,' BVB, 1942: since ca. 1930. See piece, 3, 4.

short staker. A hobo that stays on a job or in a place only just long enough to amass a 'road stake': tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. See stake, n., esp. sense 3.

short story. A forged cheque: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. :—

short-story writer. A forger: 1933, Ersine; 1935, Hargan: since ca. 1920. 'Money talks'; 'The best book of all is a cheque-book'.

short tackle (or tackling). See tackling.

short-time. See long-time. But also short-timer (Jack London, The Road, 1907), which, by 1920, was s.—if not, indeed, coll.—2. 'Commutation time allowed prisoners,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant.—3. 'Period immediately preceding release,' Rose, 1934: U.S. convicts': since ca. 1920.

short 'un. A partridge: poachers': late C. 19–20. Ware, 1909. Cf. short, n., 2, and contrast long ('un); 'Referring to the almost complete absence of tail feathers' (Ware).

short wire. The actual thief in a gang of pick-pockets; strictly, as in shorts, out on the: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'I never been anything in a mob but a short wire'; extant. See wire, n.

short-work. See short-boy.

shortening. The reduction of coin 'by aquafortis, by clipping, and by filing' (Borrow, The Romany Rye, 1857, at I, ch. x): not c., but S.E. Contrast :—

shorter. "I told you that my grandfather was a shorter," said the jockey, "by which is meant a gentleman who shortens or reduces the current coin of these realms": 1856, Borrow, The Romany Rye, II, x; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; † by 1943 (Black). An abbreviated form of S.E. shortener.

shorts. A street car; a bus: 1928 (implied in the next entry); 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex short, n., 3.—2. Financial 'shortness': 1933, Ersine, 'Abe's got the shorts'; extant. Perhaps cf. s. short dough, as in 'He's limping along on shortdough' (Ersine).

shorts, out on the; working the shorts. "Working the shorts" or "out on the shorts" may mean working [i.e., robbing the passengers on] street-cars for short distances, or it may allude to a single pickpocket working alone, or it may refer to one working for unknown money—that is, one ready to pick any pocket,' Ernest Booth ('The Language of the Underworld'), The American Mercury, May 1928; April 21, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627 (first nuance—the usual one); extant. See short, n., 3.

shot, n. A corpse: professional grave-robbers': ca. 1830–80. B & L. Perhaps because, by using this ammunition, they obtained money.—2. A key; usually in pl.: 1907, Jabez Balfour, My Prison Life, 'There is a very strict rule . . . that the cell and hall keys ("shots") are never . . . to pass into the hands of prisoners'; rather ob. As effective as a shot.—3. An explosion; (a charge of) explosive: U.S.A.: 1916, Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in the Underworld; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 'Two shots would be required, one on the vault and one . . . on the safe'; 1925, Leverage, 'The charge of nitroglycerine in a safe'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1929, Great Detective Stories; 1929, Jack Callahan; extant.—

4. An injection of a drug: U.S.A.: 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; but this is merely a drug-addicts' application of the gen. s. term.—5. A report against a prisoner: U.S.A. (mostly convicts): 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. shoot, v., 4.—6. Short for big shot, s. for 'head of a gang': April 12, 1930, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'When that cop hollered, the Shot stepped on the gas'; extant.—7. A Negro: 1933, Ersine; extant. Shots imply bullets: bullets are dark, so are Negroes shot, adj., 'clapp'd or pox'd' (Potter, 1797), and shot betwixt wind and water (Egan's Grose, 1823), are more prob. low s. than c.—2. Dead: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Proleptic.

shot, blow a. See blow . . .

shot, have the. To possess a requisite sum of money: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, p. 262, 'You missed the number. They hadn't the shot . . . You missed the essential point—they lacked the means'; by 1930, s. Cf. pay the shot.

shot(-)up. Drug-excited: drug traffic: since ca. 1924. BVB, 1942. Ironical on the s. sense, 'shot to pieces'.

shoulder, n. See boo-gee.

shoulder, v.; shouldering. 'To take, the taking (by coachmen and conductors) of fares on coaches or buses and pocketing it for oneself at the expense of one's employer': not c., but bus and coaching s. See Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London, 1828, pp. 33–35, for an excellent account. The same applies to shoulder, 'to embezzle the money of (one's master)'.

shoulder-clapper, 'a constable or a bailiff', may have been c., ca. 1690–1750; but prob. it was always s. B.E. claims it as c.; Grose does not. The latter, by the way, adds the v., shoulder-clap, to arrest (a person).

shoulder-hitter, 'a boxer; a bully', is s. (orig., low), not c. Darkness and Daylight, 1891; James Maitland, The American Slang Dict., 1891.

shoulder-knot, a bailiff: possibly c.; prob. low s.: 1848, Sinks of London.

shoulder(-)sham. 'A Partner to a File', i.e. to a pickpocket: 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1840. He presses against the prospective victim's shoulder and jostles him.

shouldering. See shoulder.

shout-joint, 'a cheap saloon' (Leverage, 1925): low s., not c.

shov. A knife; a dirk, a dagger: 1909, Ware; † by 1940. Prob. a corruption of chive (see chife).

shove, n. A gang: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A gang of tramps or criminals'; † by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 13). By a pun on push (senses 3–5).

shove, v. To pass (counterfeit money): Nov. 1, 1845, The National Police Gazette, 'A new mode of shoving the soft', explained as 'passing counterfeit bills' (bank-notes); 1859, Matsell, '“Shove qucer”, pass counterfeit money'; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Feb. 6, 1926, Flynn's; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; March 31, 1928, Flynn's; July 5, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; extant. By a vulgarization of the idea in pass.—2. Hence, v.i., to be engaged in passing counterfeit money: 1872, G. P. Burnham; extant.—3. (Ex 1.) To pass a worthless cheque: C. 20. Kernôt, 1929–31.—4. To peddle, or to smuggle, drugs: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942.

shove across. To kill, to murder: since ca. 1925. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. To 'shove across' the boundary between life and death: cf. set over.

shove of the mouth, 'a drink (esp. of gin)': 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields: not c., but low s.

shove one's trunk. To depart, take oneself off: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Crap me but I must shove my trunk, and hop the twig'; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds; by 1890 (B & L) it was †. Here trunk = either body or carcass.

shove shorts. 'To retail narcotics in small quantities,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic: since ca. 1925. Cf. short, n., 7, and shove, v., 4.

shove the flogging tumbler. See shove the tumbler.

shove the moon. See shoving the moon.

shove (the) queer or soft. See shove, v., and queer, shove the.

shove the stuff. To peddle narcotics: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Robert Baldwin's article, 'Dopes Are Dopes', in For Men Only, Nov. 1937. On the analogy of shove the queer; see stuff, n., 8.

shove the tumbler. 'Shove the Flogging Tumbler, to be whipt at the Carts Arse,' Randle Holme, 1688; 1698, B.E., 'Shove the Tumbler, c. to be Whipt, at the Cart's Tail'; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1735, Proceedings . . . Middlesex (No. VI), the variant shove the tumbler's arse; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, George Andrews; 1822, A Real Paddy, Real Life in Ireland; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870. See tumbler, 3.

shove-tumbril 'is the flash mode of expressing that a man has been publicly whipped. Another manner of saying this is, he who acted the part of the strong man, and pushed the cart up Holborn hill': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; † by 1870.

shove-up. Nothing: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1903 (F & H). Precisely why? To guess, is easy; to guess correctly, difficult. Perhaps shove-up because it costs nothing but the effort.—2. 'The Shove-up. Crowding a victim to steal from his person,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941: pickpockets': C. 20.

shoved. Released from prison, supposedly by political influence, says Randolph Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave' in The Writer's Monthly, June 1925; Godfrey Irwin's comment (letter of March 18, 1938), is 'I've not heard this before, doubt it'.

shovel. A Book of Common Prayer: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; rather ob. Perhaps cf. chop (the) whiners.—2. 'Shovels . . . Spoons': tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Tramp Life; extant. Humorously pejorative.

shovel and broom. A room: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928; Convict 2nd, 1938; M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

shovel bum. A tramp that works: mostly tramps': 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. — shovel stiff. A navvy; a railroad worker: tramps': 1909, W. H. Davies (see quot'n at stiff, n., 13); 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'A . . . shovel stiff is a man who does manual labour on construction jobs'; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1929, Jack Callahan; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'An unskilled labourer'; May 2, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack; by 1940, s. Here, stiff = fellow, 'guy'.

shover. A passer of counterfeit money: 1859, Matsell at boodle-carrier (q.v.); 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps; 1903, F & H; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1927, Kane; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; May 25, 1929, Flynn's, H. W. Corley, 'Shoving the Queer'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex shove, v.

shover of the queer. A variant of the preceding: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, F & H; in C. 20, also Canadian—anon. letter, June 9, 1946. See the elements.

shoving the moon is the vbl n. applied to a tenant, thus: 'To steal your goods'—furniture?—'away without paying the rent': 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London. By 1830, it was, app., low s. and usually applied to a tenant that removes his goods and chattels at night in order to avoid leaving them behind in payment of his rent.

shoving (the queer). The passing of counterfeit money: 1859, Matsell (the shorter form); 1881, Allan Pinkerton, Professional Thieves and the Detective (the longer form); 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (id.); Jan. 2, 1926, Flynn's; May 25, 1929, Flynn's, H. W. Corley, 'Shoving the Queer'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. See shove, v., and queer, n.

show. A building, apartment, etc., to be burgled: since ca. 1919: 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life, 'We considered the advisability of keeping watch on a "show" by living in the district before burgling it . . . Even a "show" in Burlington Arcade was "put up" to me by an adviser as a suitable place to visit, but this had too great an element of danger about it to attract me'; 1931, The Bon Voyage Book; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 'A house; a place'. Ex the military s. sense of the word: 'a raid; an attack'.—2. See showing out.

show boat. 'The draft to other institutions which takes place about the time of the annual theatrical performances of the convicts,' Hargan, 1935: Sing Sing: since the early 1920's. See Captain Henry.

show-case. A hearse: since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933. Ex the glass-sided, glass-topped hearses affected by big-shot gangsters.

show-full. See showfull.

show one's shapes. See shapes . . .

show up, the; show-up man. "Let Limey do the show-up" . . . The "show-up" man, whose job it is to step out into the road, gun in hand, and hold up the truck driver and his mate' (hijacking), James Spenser, Limey, 1933: bootleggers': since ca. 1925. After 1934, merely historical.—2. 'Show-up. Exhibition of arrested men before the detectives,' P. S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 1936; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; by 1940, police s.

show window. 'The window from which a prostitute solicits,' BVB: C. 20. Ex modern shop-window displays.

shower. 'A good haul' (burglars' loot): 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. the classical shower of gold.

showful. See shoful.

showfull(s). See shoful, ref. of 1851.

shrap in 'bat-fowling'—a temporary and sectional synonym of conny-catching—is wine, the wine used in this particular swindle: see 'Browne's cant vocabulary'. Not a misprint for strap but an easy development of S.E. shrap(e), 'a bait of chaff or seed laid for birds . . . a snare' (O.E.D.).

shreat, 'a pot or tankard', is prob. an error (at the least, in form) in Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 1741, 'A Pot of Ale or Beer: A Shreat of Bues'. Origin obscure; possibly the originating word is the † shreed, 'a shred'.

shreeve. Grand larceny: 1925, Leverage; extant. Perhaps ex dial. shreeve, a sheriff.

shriners' parade. A funeral: 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; extant. With a cynical pun on shrine, 'burial place'.

shroud. A suit of clothes: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Perhaps because a 'stiff' (hobo, tramp, beggar) wears a suit and a 'stiff' (corpse) wears a shroud.

shrubbery. Sauerkraut: convicts': Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest, John Caldwell; extant. Ex its bushy appearance.

shtocker. A 'strong-arm man' (or robber with violence): 1912, Alfred Henry Lewis, Apaches of New York. 'Not a week ago three Gas House shtockers stands me up . . . an' takes me clock'; very ob. Ex Yiddish. Cf. shitok, etc.

shtumer. See stumer.

shuck; shucker. To inform—an informer—to the police: 1925, Leverage; extant. A perversion of shock, v., and of shocker, one who administers a shock.

shuffle; shuffler. To cheat; to inform to the police.—An informer, traitor, 'squealer': 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex shuffling as a sign of an uneasy mind or of a shifty nature.

shuffle up a hand. 'To so shuffle or arrange a deck of cards that the victim draws an unusually good hand for himself. He bets to the limit, and the sharper, with a better hand, reaps the benefit,' IA, 1931: gamblers': since ca. 1910.

shuffler. '(App.) a drinker; prob. one who "wangles" or "scrunges" drinks: Brathwait, 1652. Always with ruffler and snuffler (O.E.D.),' Partridge, 1937. Prob. because he shuffles about, in a furtive manner.—2. See shuffle.

shuffling, 'switching cars on a railroad or in a yard': railway s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

shunt. 'In case the owners have to "shunt", that is, escape quickly': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; ob. Ex railway j.—2. In Australian racecourse c., it = 'to start a horse in a race with no intention of winning, the idea being to induce the handicapper to reduce the horse's weight as if it were a bona fide loser,' Baker, 1942: C. 20.

shurk or shirk, n., 'a sharper', is claimed by B.E. as c., but it is doubtful whether, even in C. 17, it were ever of a status lower than s., and The O.E.D. may be right in considering it to have been always S.E. Ex Ger. schurk, a sharper (now Schurke, a scoundrel): O.E.D.

shurk or shirk, v. To cheat: Scottish c. of ca.

1780–1860. Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull, 1822: see nubbing-cheat, shirk the, and roundbottom. By a deviation of the ordinary sense.—2. To obtain fraudulently: 1831, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, VII, trial of Phoebe Wilson, 'She said she did not steal them, but a young man named James Rankin had shirked them, and that he gave them to her to dispose of'; † by 1900. Perhaps a disguise of S.E. shark.

shut. See at open.

shut-eye. An easy victim; a 'sucker': tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (Glossary, s.v. sucker); † by 1930. He shuts his eyes to what goes on about him.

shutter(-)racket. 'The practice of robbing houses, or shops, by boring a hole in the window-shutter, and taking out a pane of glass': 1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan's Grose; † by 1887 (Baumann). Origin implied in Vaux's definition.

shy. (Of money) short: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'Although I had not been idle during these three months, I found my blunt getting shy'; by 1880, low s. Ex shy, timid: shy animals or persons make themselves scarce.

shy cock, 'one who keeps within doors for fear of bailiffs' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), is not c., but s.

shy for it, if I lose my stick,—I must have a. 'I will have a fight before I give up my right': c.p. of ca. 1815–50. Egan's Grose, 1823.

shy of the blues. 'I happened to know that in criminal circles to describe a person as being "shy of the blues" is equivalent to saying that he has particular reasons for keeping out of the way of the police': 1883, James Greenwood, Tag, Rag & Co.; 1890, B & L; ob.

shy pook. A sly grog-shop: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. 'Shy' of the police; perhaps influenced by shypoo, 'Australian beer'.

Shylock. 'There are also guys present who are called Shylocks, because they will lend you dough when you go broke at the [card or gaming] table, on watches or rings, or maybe cuff-links, at very good interest,' Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls, 1931; extant. Shakespeare's The Merchant of Venice.

shyp. See beneship.

shyster, n. A duffer, a vagabond: 1874, H; by 1903 (F & H) it was †. 'A variant of shicer', H: see shicer.—2. As 'a lawyer': U.S. coll.—not c.

shyster, adj. 'No good,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ob. Cf. shice, adj., and shicer. Perhaps imm. ex 'a shyster lawyer'.

Siberia. 'A prison where the discipline is unusually harsh,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: journalistic s. (as in J. C. Powell, The American Siberia, 1891) rather than c. 'Usually applied to Clinton Prison, Dannemora, N.Y., where discipline is stern and unrelenting, and the climate severe' (Irwin). Cf. czar and esp. Ice-Box, the.—2. Hence, solitary confinement: San Quentin: since before 1934. Castle, 1938; Leo L. Stanley, Men at Their Worst, 1940.

sice; until C. 18, often syce. A six in dicing; whether number or completed throw: late C. 14–20. For its status, see sinke. Both terms appear in Gilbert Walker's A manifest detection of Diceplay, 1552. Also 'Sices or Sizes, a throw of sizes at dice' (H, 2nd ed., 1860).—2. Hence, sixpence: 1660, Tatham (O.E.D.); 1688, T. Shadwell, The

D.O.U.

Squire of Alsatia; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Its Six Penoe a Night, Its a Sice a Darkum'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (size); 1840, Lytton, Paul Clifford; † by 1903 (F & H).

sice. Sixpence: an American variant of sice, 2: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; ob. Ex sice.

sick. "Is he still sick (in prison)?"—"No", answered I, "he is well (free)", Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, I, 1828; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); app. † by 1900. This term is not a mere translation of the Fr., but an English equivalent.—2. To be sick is 'to manifest withdrawal distress' (BVB, 1942): Am. drug addicts': C. 20.

sick-engineer game. 'He was sent away to Graystone for robbing a widow of all her savings by the "sick engineer" game. That's a well-known mining swindle,' Henry Leverage, 'The Man Who Couldn't Squeal', Flynn's, Sept. 1, 1928; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant.

sick lurk, the. The feigning of sickness or, usually, maiming for the purpose of eliciting alms: 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; ob. See lurk, n.

sickrel, 'a sickly, puny person', is classified as c. by The O.E.D., which cites B.E. and only B.E.; but B.E. does not classify it as c., therefore the inference is that it was s., perhaps low s. App. the term was current only ca. 1680–1750. Ex sick: perhaps punningly on S.E. cockerel.

side! 'An affirmative expression in the Cant Language of the northern towns. "Do you stoll the Gammy?" (Do you understand Cant?) . . . "Side, cove" (yes, mate)': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob. Perhaps a perversion of Fr. si, 'Yes' (in reply to negatives), or It. si, 'yes'; or, as B & L propose, 'abbreviated from the phrase, "I side with you"'.

side-door Pullman. A box-car: tramps': since ca. 1880: 1887, Morley Roberts, The Western Avernus, "Side-door Pullman", as the "tramps" . . . facetiously call them'; 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary (and p. 291); 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; Jan. 8, 1927, Flynn's; April 14, 1928, Flynn's; by 1930, s. Humorously ironic.

side jump. See long jump.

side kick. A side pocket (in trousers): Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg"?'), 'Pockets range from "side kicks" to "double insiders"': extant. See kick, n., 4.—2. A friend; a partner: tramps' c. of ca. 1880–1910, then s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. He kicks along by one's side.

side(-)pocket. 'A drinking-saloon in an out-of-the-way place; a resort for thieves': 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1920. A saloon in a side street.

sider. A swindler: 1925, Leverage; extant. Perhaps ex side graft, illicit graft practised in addition (Hapgood, 1904)—by 1930, low s.

sidewalk committee. A gang of pickpockets and their accomplices operating in a city: 1886, Thomas Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America, "Sidewalk committees" at the time of military parades or political processions have a couple of young men who are known as pushers' (see pusher); † by 1910.

Sidney Harbor. See Sydney Harbour.

sift; often as vbl n., sifting. 'Sifting.

Examining; emptying purses or pocket-books for the purpose of examining their contents, is called sifting': 1859, Matsell; 1864, H, 3rd ed., where it is applied to a servant that embezzles his master's money, esp. by keeping for himself the larger coins—but this is less likely to be correct than the definition of 1874: 'To embezzle small coins, those which might pass through a sieve—as threepennies and fourpennies—and which are, therefore, not likely to be missed'; 1887, Baumann; 1903, F & H (as in H, 1874); very ob. Ex the S.E. sense.

sig card. A card of any sort, providing it bears the signature of the passer of a dud cheque, for comparison when he endorses the cheque: forgers' s. rather than c. Maurer, 1941.

sigh and tear, but usually in pl. An ear: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

sigher. App. first in Potter, 1797—see groaner and sigher; 1809, Andrewes, 'Sighers—fellows who attend the methodist meetings for the purpose of robbing the congregation. (See Groaners)'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1890.

sight, 'to see, catch sight of', is given by Superintendent C. Bent, Criminal Life, 1891 (p. 271), as c.: but it has always been S.E. sighters. 'Means have to be adopted to enable the sharps to detect the small difference in the position of the cards. The necessary indication is readily obtained by . . . "sighters" . . . minute dots upon the faces of the cards,' J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats, 1894; extant.

sil. A spurious bank-note: 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H (at silver-beggar), a forged bank-note or a forged document; ob. 'In all probability sil was originally a forged document used by a "silver beggar" (which see), and abbreviated from silver,' B & L.

silence. See silent.—2. A village: ca. 1870–1905. Recorded in the glossary (p. 320) of C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 1889; ob. To a town thief, it connotes silence; cf. certain rest.

silencer. A murderer: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. silent, be.

silent. A criminal's, esp. a thief's, associate: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary); rather ob. He is silent about the criminal's misdeeds.

silent, be. The definition in A New Canting Dict., 1725, seems to imply that the v. in the active voice is silence (and this is proved by Grose's entry at silence): 'Silent, to knock a Man down so as to stun him: To lay him down for dead. See the Cull is silent, is also us'd by desperate Villains, for cutting the Throat, or shooting the unhappy Person who falls in their way'. Prob. only the c.p. is to be classified as c.: of C. 18–early 19.

silent matches. A c.p. applied to a deaf-mute: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary), p. 322; † by 1920. Such a person is both useful and quiet.

silk, n. A swindler: 1934, Rose; 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex his talk, which is 'as smooth as silk'; cf. silk hat.—2. In ref. to ca. 1905, Herbert Asbury, in The Underworld of Chicago, 1941, writes of the Henry Street gang that it 'specialized in stealing "silk", which in the gangland of those days meant anything that might be found in a tailor's shop—buttons, thread, bolts of cloth, trimming, clothing, even sewing-machines and pressing-irons': current during the approximate period 1890–1914.

silk, adj.; silk-lined. High-class (e.g., 'a silk con-man'); rich or favoured (e.g., 'a silk-lined convict'): 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne (both terms); ob. Cf. silk hat and silkster.

silk and top. A policeman: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1910. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on cop, n.

silk and twine. Wine: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B. Rhyming.

silk hat. A gangster affecting elegance and respectability, esp. the latter: 1924, Geo. S. Dougherty, The Criminal; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, Kernôt, 'Man powerful in politics who spreads favorable propaganda in high places for any gang'; 1932, James T. Farrell, Young Lonigan; extant. Silk hats in men, silk stockings in women, indicate respectability and a good social position: see D.A.E. at these terms, and also silkworm below.

silk-snatcher; mostly in pl. Well-to-do young fellows that, for amusement, linked themselves with thieves and attacked such men of quality as appeared likely to offer a stout resistance; 'Yet they do take Cloaks too, and glory in having got such a Purchase at the Point of their Swords; for which Gallantry, they are call'd Silk-Snatchers, whereas we (who lurk in Corners, and prey upon all Passengers without Distinction) have the general Appellation of Cloak-Twitchers,' Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, Vol. III, 1720; 1725, A New Canting Dict., however, virtually equates the term to cloak-twitchers, thus, 'Silk Snatchers, A Set of Varlets, who snatch Hoods, Scarves, Handkerchiefs, or any thing they can come at'; 1785, Grose, 'Silk snatchers, thieves who snatch hoods or bonnets from persons walking in the streets'; † by 1830.

silker. A silk pocket-handkerchief: 1925, Leverage; extant.—2. A lady of rank, distinction, wealth: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. silkster and silkworm.

silkster. A lady: 1889 (see ostrich); † by 1920. She wears silk dresses—or did, ca. 1870–1914; cf. silker, 2.

silkworm. "Silkworms" are well-dressed women who visit jewellers' shops, and, under cover of making a purchase, are shown a good many valuable articles of jewellery; they spend a small sum and "palm" as many articles as they conveniently can': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; extant. Ex the silk dress she wears (cf. silk hat, q.v.). Independent of the S.E. sense recorded by The O.E.D.

sillikin, 'a silly person', is stated by B & L, 1890, to be 'used by Australian thieves': but it was prob. s. in Australia, and it certainly was s. in England ca. 1850–1910.

silver, n. and v. A bribe; to bribe: low s. rather than c. Leverage, 1925. The same applies to silverer, a person addicted to bribing others.

silver beggar. A professional beggar that does well for himself; one who ranks high in the hierarchy of vagrants: 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants, where such beggars are also called lurkers; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1890, B & L; 1893, No. 747; 1903, F & H, 'A tramp with briefs [q.v.] or fakements [q.v.]'; † by 1920. Ex the fact that they usually get silver, not copper coins.

silver bell. A gambling-shop, in a small way, esp. in a prison: Aug. 24, 1850, Sessions Papers, Robert Goldsworthy, p. 542. Perhaps c.—prob. low s. A variant of S.E. gambling hell.

silver-laced. 'Replete with lice. The cove's kickseys are silver laced: the fellow's breeches are covered with lice'; 1811, Lex. Bal.; on the borderlands of c. and low s. Body lice are of a pale-silver colour.

silver-mounted toppins. 'Originally [ca. 1920] frosted cake, but now [1933] any kind of dessert,' Ersine; extant.

sim. A swindler's, a confidence trickster's victim: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942 and 1945. Short for simpleton.

simoleon, 'a dollar': not c., but low s. See semoleon.

Simon. A sixpence: 1698, B.E.; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., where it is misprinted Smon; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who implies that, by that date, the term had > s. By personification: cf. tanner, q.v.

Simon soon gone is, in Awdeley's The Fraternity of Vacabondes, 1562—the only record, spelt Simon soone agon; for definition, see Awdeley's, No. 10. Prob. a coll. nickname; possibly a mere designation of Awdeley's; almost certainly not c.

simp. A simple-minded, a foolish, person; one easily led: c. until ca. 1925, then s.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin. Shortening of 'simple(-minded)'.

simp trap. A commissary or company store operated by an employer: labour s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. See simp.

simple. Having a morbid fear of, an obsession about, a neurosis or a psychosis concerning (the first member of the compound term)—in combination only, as in bull simple, kid simple, stir simple, qq.v.: mostly tramps': since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Short for simple-minded.

simple Simon. A diamond, esp. one in a tie-pin: 1928, Chicago May; 1929–31, Kernôt; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose; 1938, Convict 2nd; 1944, M & B; extant. Rhyming s.—or near enough! Perhaps, as 'Convict' suggests, adopted ex Australian crooks.

simpler. In 'cross-biting law' (q.v.) 'the man that is brought in'—i.e., the victim—is called 'the Simpler': 1591, Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage; ibid., 'They'—the cony-catchers—'have sundry praies they cal simplers, which are men fondly and wantonly geven, whom for a penaltie of their lust, they fleece of al that ever they have'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; † by 1660. Ex 'simple (too single-)minded'.

simples, to go to Battersea to be cut for the. Not c., but s.: see my Dict. of Slang.

simps' seminary. 'Any prison (especially a State prison),' Leverage, 1925; extant. A college for simpletons (see simp), yet how many brains go there!

sin-hiders. 'Trousers . . . Bags, leg-covers, sin-hiders', C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); † by 1915. Ex the puritanical idea of the male genitals as a potent source of mischief.

sin hound. A chaplain: convicts': 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. He has an acute nose for the perception of sin.

sing. To confess (a crime); to turn informer or, in any role at all, to give information to the police: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1931, Fred D. Pasley, Al Capone; 1936, Charles F. Coe, G-Man, 'If that guy sings, I'm hooked for plenty raps'; 1936, C. F. Coe, Ransom; 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra; April 1942, Flynn's, James Edward Grant; 1944, W. R. Burnett, Nobody Lives Forever; extant. Ironically poetic on squeal.

sing dummy. To say nothing; to make no reply: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Dummy in its s. sense, 'a stupid or very inefficient person'.

sing for cheeses. See cheeses . . .

sing (out) beef. 'Sing. To call out; the coves sing out beef; they call out stop thief': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1815, Scott; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), "'The cove sings beef", the fellow calls thief'; 1903, F & H; † by 1910. Perhaps an early example of rhyming s.

sing small, 'to eat humble pie', is not, as stated in Egan's Grose, c.

sing the blues. 'To bemoan one's luck,' Ersine: since ca. 1925; by 1948, s. Cf. blue, melancholy.

singed cat. A plain-clothes police officer; an official detective: 1916, Arthur Stringer, The Door of Dread (p. 100); 1918, A. Stringer, The House of Intrigue; Nov. 1, 1924, Flynn's; June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; extant. Singed of his uniform.

single-driller. A variant of single-handed worker: 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 'He fraternized with till tappers and single-drillers'; ob.

single finrif. See finrif.

single-handed worker. A professional thief that works alone: 1903, Josiah Flynt, The Rise of Ruderick Clowd, 'There was "Friskie" Dougherty—a famous "single-handed worker" '; by 1930, no longer c. Cf. lone wolf.

single O, n. and adj. (A crime) committed without accomplices: July 5, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'One working a lone "game" or "racket"'. One travelling alone by preference'; extant. Perhaps 'single operation'; single operator'.

single peeper. A one-eyed person (usually a man): 1785, Grose; 1887, Baumann; app. † by 1900. See peepers, 2.

single pennif. See finrif and pennif.

sink, n. See sink, stand the.—2. A giving of information to the police against a companion or an accomplice: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sink, v., 6.—3. A bank: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Suggested by jug.—4. A woman's stocking: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sinkers.

sink, v.i. 'To commit fraud by purloining money and to spend it in drink: 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society, 'She confessed to have sunk upon the Company, in twelve years, . . . twelve hundred pounds!!!'; † by 1890. Prob. ex the sinking of a ship.—2. Also, v.t.: Parker, 1781.—3. To 'dive' (into a pocket): 1821, D. Haggart, 'I sunk into a cove's benjy cloy'; † by 1890. Imm. ex.—4. 'Roberts . . . bade me go and sink him, that is, pick his pocket': 1721, trial of Mary Roberts and others, reported in Select Trials from 1720 to 1724, published in 1734; 1737, Sessions Papers (as sink upon); † by 1890. Cf. dip, n. and v.—5. Hence (?), to conceal: 1721, trial of John Dykes, reported in Select Trials, 1734, p. 72; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'To cheat; to hide from a partner'; ob.—6. To inform against (a companion, an accomplice): U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

sink, stand the. To suffer monetary loss by fraud, esp. fraud practised by an employee, who thereupon spends the money in drink: 1781, Geo. Parker, A View to Society; † by 1890. Ex the loss incurred when a ship sinks.

sink upon. See sink, v., 4.

sinke; mostly in pl. A five in dicing; a throw in which five turns up: late C. 14–20. The term is S.E., but owing to its association with dicing and hence with false dice, it bears a pejorative—almost an illicit—connotation. The same applies to sice. Other dicing terms, e.g. treys, have come to possess such secondary senses or associations as are indubitably c.

sinker. See sinkers, 1.—2. Bad money: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H (sinkers); 1869, J. Greenwood; 1887, Baumann; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. It 'sinks' the man who has it planted on him.—3. A thief that does not 'divide fair with' his companions: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; ob. Ex sink, v., 5.—4. A dollar: American (orig. tramps): 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1903, Flynt, The Rise of Ruderick Cloud; 1903, F & H; 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. it was, at first, applied only to the coin.—5. A police official using unfair means to an end; an unnecessarily severe prison-warder: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. 'He's sunk!'—6. A bullet; a shot: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Proleptic.—7. A shilling: tramps: 1932, Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps; extant. Ex 4.

sinkers. 'Old stockings that have sunk the small into the heel': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. Origin implicit in the definition.—2. See sinker, 2.

sinking. Fraud practised on one's employers: 1781, George Parker; † by 1890. Cf. sink, v., and sink, stand the.—2. The vbl n. corresponding to sink, v., 5: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; ob.

sip, n. and v. An offer, the person making it; to accept an offer; Leverage, 1925: s., not c. sipper. A teaspoon: 1827, A New and Comprehensive Dictionary of Flash or Cant Language; ob.

Sir Oliver is an ephemeral, fast-life s. variation of Oliver: Pierce Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry and Logic, 1828.

Sir Sydney. A clasp-knife: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'Leave her to me—I'll give her a taste of Sir Sydney'; † by 1903 (F & H). Why? Sir is frequent in s. phrases; but why Sydney? The first reference is perhaps too early for there to be any reference to Sydney, Australia.

Sir Walter Scott. A pot of beer: 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1865, low, and by 1870, gen. rhyming s. In C. 20 U.S.A. (Pacific Coast) it is c. for the same and also for 'chamber pot': M & B, 1944.

sister. A companion in the profession: prostitutes: C. 19. In, e.g., A. Harris, Settlers and Convicts, 1847, in ref. to ca. 1828, in Australia, whither, with virtual certainty, it had gone from England. Harris implies derivation ex the sisterhood of sorrow: the origin is simpler, more basic, less literary than that! Hence:—2. Another prostitute; a prostitute: prostitutes' and white-slavers': C. 20. Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940. Cf. :—

sister-in-law. 'When a man has two women working for him he is said to have a sister-in-law. "His broad won't go for the sister-in-law thing. She turns him in", Burke, 1930: C. 20: among white-slave traffickers and racketeers: 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1940, Robert Neumann, 23 Women, whence (p. 208) it appears that the 'man' in question is, as often as not, a pimp and that, in the white-slave traffic, every and any girl not the pimp's wife is his 'sister-in-law', as, indeed, is very clearly conveyed in Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, 1936. By a cynical euphemism.

sit, n. and v. (To serve) a term in prison: 1925, Leverage; extant.

sit, at the. 'Working behind confederate's back in crowded trains or trams or busses,' The Bon Voyage Book, 1931: pickpockets': C. 20. The knowledgeable G. R. Sims has it in 1907—The Referee, Feb. 17 (O.E.D.).

sit a bag. To steal a portmanteau, attaché-case, etc., from the counter in a Customs shed at a port of arrival from the Continent—there's an art, a technique, in this underworld 'dodge': 1925, Netley Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook; extant.

sit-down. 'People would be apt to . . . ask him to "sit-down"—a proper breakfast'—or other meal—'at a table,' Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp, 1902; 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; by 1940, s. As opposed to a hand-out.

sit in right. (Of a crook, a racketeer) 'To have political protection,' BVB, 1942: since ca. 1924.

sit pad. To beg, sitting down: 1842, An Exposure (see sitting pad); † by 1890. Short for sitting pad.

sitter; gen. pl. 'On hot summer nights it is no rare experience when exploring the worst of the tenements in "the Bend"—the worst slum in New York—to find the hallways occupied by rows of "sitters", tramps whom laziness or hard luck has prevented from earning enough by their day's "labor" to pay the admission to a stale-beer dive, and who have their reasons for declining the hospitality of the police station lodging-rooms. Huddled together in loathsome files, they squat there over night': 1891, Jacob A. Riis, How the Other Half Lives; app. † by 1930.—2. 'The dupe at spirit-medium performance,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. He has merely to sit—and pay up.—3. A prisoner, esp. a long-timer: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sit.—4. A prostitute that 'accompanies a procurer while [he is] soliciting trade', BVB, 1942: white-slave traffic: C. 20. She sits apart and looks pretty.

sitter-in. A crook participating in a 'con game': confidence men's: C. 20. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. Ex 'sitting-in at a card-game': cf. synonymous player.

sitting, n. 'Doing time': 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sit.

sitting member. A beggar that, actually or pretendedly disabled, remains seated at the same spot from morning to night: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; ob. See mumper and cf. :—

sitting pad and standing pad. 'Whenever cadgers stand or sit, either in towns or by the roadside to beg, they call it sitting or standing pad': 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; 1859, H, 'Sitting on the pavement in a begging position': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed (only standing pad); ob.

Siwash. An unclean or an uncouth person; a person both uncouth and dirty: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex 'an Indian of the Salishan tribe, none too clean in their habits and person' (Irwin). For the term Siwash, see esp. my Name into Word, 1949.

six. A thirty-six shillings piece of money: 1753, John Poulter, in The Discoveries, has a section entitled 'Ring of Neds and Sixes'; † by 1830. By ellipsis.—2. A variant of sixer (1): U.S.A.: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'Even if its only a sixer in the pen, too many sixes are bad for the health'; extant.

six and eightpence, 'the usual Fee given, to carry back the Body of the Executed Malefactor, to give it Christian Burial', is classified by B.E. as c.; but the association with the underworld does not make c. of an obviously S.E. term.

six bits. Seventy-five cents; seventy-five dollars: since ca. 1920. Ersine.

six-bob bit, 'a six-shilling piece', is stated in Egan's Grose, 1823, to be c.: but bob was s. some years before that date.

six doss in the steel; often shortened to six doss. A six-months' prison-sentence: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942 and 1945. See steel and cf. sleep, n.

six-gun, pack a. To carry a revolver: tramps': 1937, Matt Marshall, The Travels of Tramp-Royal; extant.

six hat and a fifty shirt. A catch-phrase applied to one who, weak in the head, is strong in the back: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. His head is small, the hat being only a six-incher, but he has a fifty-inch chest!

six-monthser, 'a stipendiary magistrate of a savage nature who always gives, where he can, the full term (six months) allowed him by law' (Ware, 1909), is not c., but police s.

six-shooter, 'a six-cartridge revolver', is erroneously classified as c. by Geo. P. Burnham, in Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872: orig. s., it soon > coll. The same applies to the C. 20 six-shot.

sixer. (A sentence of) imprisonment for six months: Feb. 1, 1849, Sessions Papers, trial of W. H. Jones; Oct. 7, 1865, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; Oct. 1879, Macmillan's Magazine; 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail, "'Neddie, from City Road, smuggled for attempt up the Grove [Westbourne Grove], expects a sixer"' ; 1890, B & L; 1894, Arthur Morrison, Tales of Mean Streets; 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow; 1903, F & H; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man (U.S.A.); 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1926, Jack Black (U.S.A.); 1928, John O'Connor (id.); 1933, George Ingram, Stir; 1935, Geo. Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant.—2. A six-ounce loaf: prisoners': 1874, J. Greenwood, The Wilds of London; 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail; 1890, B & L; 1902, J. Greenwood, The Prisoner in the Dock; 1903, F & H; ob.—3. A prisoner for six months: Australian: C. 20. Vance Marshall, 1919; Baker, 1945.

sixerino is an elaboration of sixer, 1: 1925, Leverage; extant.

sixty-niner. A cunnilingist: C. 20; by 1930, low s. Ersine. Ex sixty-nine, an Americanism for the Fr. soixante-neuf, a positional pun.

size. See sice, 2, ref. of 1797.

sizendizup. See NARCOTICS ZIPH.

sizes, 'a throw of 6 at dice', is rather C. 19–20 gamblers' j. than gamblers' c.: see sice, 1.

sizzle. To electrocute: 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough, 'They kept him in the cooler for six months and then sizzles him, put him on the hot stool'; extant. Cf. fry.

sizzler. A cook; a stove: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'One who works, or that which is used, where sizzling sounds are heard' (Irwin).

skamas. Opium: drug addicts': since ca. 1920. Donald Barr Chidsey in Flynn's, March 18, 1939, 'The greasy black ointment-like stuff which in the East is known as chandu but which American gong kickers call skamas or gow or tar'. Mexican?

skat. ? Beer: Jan. 16, 1927, Flynn's, 'The boozeclerk give us th' high sign he had doped th' seeds or skat'; extant.

skate, v. To use morphine: 1925, Leverage; extant. Anticipatory of the effect.

skater. A legless beggar: beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Because so many legless beggars propel themselves along the street on low, wheeled platforms: cf. joy rider.

skates(-)lurk. 'A begging impostor dressed as a sailor': 1859, H, who would more correctly have defined it as the imposition; the impostor would be a skates-lurker; † by 1910. See lurk. He slides away from too pertinent questions.

skates on. See put the skates on.

skee. 'Skee, Old Man Red Eye, Hooch, Third Rail—whiskey,' P. & T. Cassey, The Gay Cat, 1914: tramps': since ca. 1910. Then since ca. 1922: bootleggers': 1930, Burke (quot'n at hist, v.); 1931, IA; extant. 'Whiskey'.

skeel. 'These penny dancing rooms or "skeels", as the Scotch call them, had, I believe, their origin in Liverpool': 1863, A Prison Matron, Memoirs of Jane Cameron, Female Convict, with esp. reference to Glasgow; slightly ob. Is this the Scottish dial. skeel (or skyle), 'a screen', hence 'a shelter', or is it cognate with the Cumberland dial. skell, 'a house without furniture', itself a variant of S.E. shell?

skel. A skeleton key: 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail (Preface); rather ob. Cf. sket.

skelder. 'A rogue; a sponger,' say F & H; but according to F & H's quotations and to The O.E.D. it was only a v.: v.i. and v.t.: 'to beg (from); to swindle; to defraud; to live by begging as an ostensibly wounded or disbanded soldier': 1601, B. Jonson (v.i. and v.t.); 1609, Dekker (v.t.); 1611, L. Barry, and 1633, Marmion (both v.i.); † by 1690. (Revived in 1822 by Scott.) O.E.D. Origin obscure: ? cf. skellum.

skeldering. Swindling; sponging: 1599, B. Jonson; 1602 and 1607, Dekker; † by 1690. Ex the prec.

skeleton screw. A skeleton key, a pass-key: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A master key'; extant. See screw, n., 2.

skellum (or scellum), 'a thief', is classified by F & H as c., whereas it is actually S.E.

skep. 'A pocket full'—read 'pocketful'—'of money; a place for keeping money; a savings bank : 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Ex Eng. dial. skep, 'a basket'.

skep a sluk; Afrikaans form, skep 'n slukkie, whence the other and also skep a scuttle: to take a drink: South Africa: C. 20. The first: The Cape Times, June 3, 1946 (Alan Nash); the others: C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946. Lit., 'scoop a swallow'.

skepper is a very rare form of skipper. It occurs in R. Head, The English Rogue (glossary), 1665.

sket. A skeleton key or picklock: 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob. Cf. skel.

skew, n. 'A skew, a cuppe,' Harman, 1566; by a compositor's error it is, in (the 'Temple Classics' edition of) Dekker's Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608-9, made to denote a eap; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, elaborates the senses thus, 'Scew a Cuppe or Glasse, a Dish or any thing to drinke in'; 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'A great Scue (a browne dish)'; 1665, R. Head, 'Skew . . . A dish'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme (shew and scue); 1698, B.E., 'A Beggar's Wooden Dish'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1735 ed. of The Triumph of Wit, where it is wrongly given as = a ditch; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1889 (B & L). Perhaps a perversion of Old Fr. escule or escuelle (Modern Fr. écuelle), 'a porringer; a bowl' (recorded for C. 12 by Littré): cf. Low L. scutella, 'a platter'. Welsh Gypsy has skudela (Sampson).

skew, v. This rare v. would appear to derive ex the preceding and to mean 'receive' or 'contain'. Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 1611, 'My bousy nab might skew rome bouse well'.

skewer. To fasten: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, "'Skewer the jigger, carn't yer'", cried Lively to a pal', the gloss being 'fasten the door'; † by 1900. Orig., with a skewer.—2. (Esp. of one thief stealing from another.) To rob: 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police, 'There is a sort of honour amongst us [thieves] until we fall asleep or get drunk, and then they will "barber" one another, "skewer them of all they have"'; † by 1890. As if to impale on a skewer.

skibboo or skibboo. A gun-fighter, a gunman: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'The monkey's a skibboo for a mob'; 1934, Rose; slightly ob. Origin? Perhaps ex that ribald variation of the Mademoiselle from Armentières song wherein skiboo occurs in the refrain.

skicer. See shicer.

skid, take the. To walk away; make off; escape: 1935, Hargan; extant. Cf. skids under . . ., q.v.

skid row is labour s., not c., for 'the district where workers congregate when in town or away from their job' (Irwin, 1931). Coined by loggers.

skid the road. To be a tramp: 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp, "'Has your partner been long skiddin' the road?'" asked the hobo'; ob. Cf. :—

skidroad. 'The skid road, which is the part of the city where hobos generally congregate,' Convict, 1934: tramps': since ca. 1920: 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; 1938, Convict 2nd. Prob. ex skid row + skid the road.

skids to, put the. (Of the male) to have sexual intercourse with: 1935, Hargan; extant. Contrast :—

skids under, put the. To dismiss, get rid of, inform to the police about: since ca. 1930. David Hume, Death before Honour, 1939, 'Peter has been shopped. The boys have put the skids under him'; 1945, David Hume, Come Back for the Corpse. To accelerate a person's downfall.

skie. See sky, v.

skiet. To gamble with dice: South Africa: late C. 19-20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. It is Afrikaans: lit., 'to shoot' (ex Dutch schieten).

skillagalee. See skilly.

skillet-bude, a cookshop, a cook's galley: low s., not c. Leverage, 1925. The second element derives ex It. bodega.

skilly is often classified erroneously as c. But understandably, since gruel used to be a staple dish on the hulks and in prisons. The same applies to the American skillagalee (Leverage, 1925).

skim. 'They thought it contained his skim (money)', The Daily News, July 29, 1869 ('Police Reports'), cited by F & H, 1903; by 1910, †. Cream, the richest part of milk, is the skim of the milk; to many persons, money is the cream of life.

skimish. In W. H. Davies's The Autobiography of a Super-Tramp, 1908, a professional beggar, speaking in ca. 1903, says, 'I seldom lie down at night but what I am half skimished (half drunk), for I assure you I never go short of my skimish'—liquor, esp. beer or ale; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant. Ex Shelta skimišk.

skimished. Topsy: tramps' and beggars': 1908 (see skimish); 1938, H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks ('skirmished'). Ex the preceding term.

skimmer, 'a man's felt hat', is low s., not c. Flynn's, Jan. 1, 1927. Properly, a flat hat, whether felt or not.

skin, n. A purse: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Frisk the skin of the stephen; empty the money out of the purse. Queer skin; an empty purse'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A purse, or money bag'; 1821, D. Haggart, Life; 1823, Egan's Groce; 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; Jan. 17, 1846, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1848, Sinks of London; 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York; 1851, Mayhew; 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1857, Snowden; 1857, Augustus Mayhew; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; 1890, B & L; 1891, Maitland (U.S.A.); 1903, Clapin, Americanisms, 'A purse; a pocket-book'; 1903, F & H; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth; 1931, The Bon Voyage Book; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too; extant. Ex leather, made from skin; many purses being of leather: cf. leather.—2. A card-sharping trick; a fleecing of greenhorns by card-sharpers, or by card-sharpers or proprietors at any gambling game: U.S.A.: 1881, The Man Traps of New York, p. 25; extant. Cf. skin game.—3. A shirt: U.S.A.: 1848, The Ladies Repository ('The Flash Language'); 1871, State Prison Life; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; ob. Either because it is, by many, worn next to the skin or because it is, as it were, a second skin.—4. A sharper: U.S.A.: 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; extant. Ex skin, v., 2.—5. A dollar: U.S.A.: Feb. 22, 1930, Flynn's, Robert H. Rohde, 'Sixty Stories Up'; Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke; extant.—6. A fur; on the skin, engaged in fur-stealing: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Rose, 1934: since ca.

1930, the simple, single term has also been English; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full. Pejorative: ex trappers' j.—7. A racehorse: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Ersine. Part for whole.

skin, v. To empty, or remove the contents of, by theft: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'He went and skin'd the Trunk, and put the Things into a Sack'; app. † by 1860 in Britain; since ca. 1850, American—esp. in skinning a poke (emptying a wallet of valuables), as in Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex skinning a sheep—removing its valuable fleece.—2. 'To strip a man of all his money at play, is termed skinning him': 1812, J. H. Vaux; by ca. 1840, American (see skin game); 1891, Maitland; by 1895, s. Cf. S.E. fleece.—3. To shadow (a person), esp. previous to his arrest: 1903, F & H; ob.—4. (Of a prison barber) to shave (a convict): U.S. convicts': 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, John Caldwell; 1934, Rose; extant.

skin, go in the. See go . . .

skin a rattler; usually as vbl n., skinning a rattler, 'robbing the tramps and hobos on a train' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931): mostly tramps': since ca. 1905. See skin, v., 1, and rattler, 3.

skin-cover. A shirt: ca. 1870–1910. Clarkson & Richardson, Police!, 1889. Cf. flesh-bag.

skin game. Any gambling game (esp. one with cards) that is dishonestly played: 1868, M. H. Smith, Sunshine and Shadow (D.A.E.); 1882, James D. McCabe, New York by Sunlight and Gaslight, 'Faro is the principal game here [gambling hells], but fair games are unknown except among the professionals who frequent the place. The "skin game" is used with the majority of the visitors, for the proprietor is determined from the outset to fleece them without mercy'; ibid., skin faro, which, however, is hardly c.; 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; by 1895, s. Generically, the skin game has come to mean swindling, esp. card-sharpping and confidence-trickery. Cf. skin, v., 2, and skinner, 6.

skin-house. A gambling den: prob. since ca. 1880; by 1905, s. (F & H, 1903.) Cf. the preceding.

skin-hustling. See hustle, v., 4.

skin joint is an American synonym of skin house: Feb. 6, 1932, Flynn's, Bill Hawley, 'Lady Luck'; 1933, Ersine; extant.—2. A fur store: 1934, Rose; extant. See skin, n., 6.

skin shot; whence, ca. 1930, S.S. An injection into the skin, not into a vein: drug addicts': BVB. The former, current throughout C. 20, was, by 1925, s. or even coll.

skin(-)the(-)lamb. As a corruption of the card game of lansquenet, it is s.—2. To skin the lamb, or have a skinner, is applied to bookmakers when a non-favourite wins the race: not c., but race-course s.—3. To steal from (a purse); to steal (esp. a purse): U.S.A.: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; extant.

skin worker. A fur thief: 1934, Rose; extant. See skin, n., 6, and cf. skin joint, 2.

skin yen. 'The desire for a skin injection,' BVB: drug traffic: since ca. 1910. See yen and cf. mouth habit.

skinner. 'Skinners, kidnappers, or sett of abandoned fellows who steal children, or intrap unwary men to enlist for soldiers': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870.

Cf. the semantics of kidnapper.—2. "Skinners", or those women who entice children and sailors to go with them and then strip them of their clothes': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25; Nov. 1870, The Broadway, "Skinners", women and boys, who strip children of their clothes'; 1903, F & H; ob.—3. 'Skinners. Small lawyers who hang about police offices and figuratively skin their clients': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, but earlier in The National Police Gazette (Jan. 31, 1846); † by 1920.—4. The auction-room sense is s.—5. See skin the lamb.—6. A card-sharper; one who conducts a skin game: U.S.A.: 1879, Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences, p. 195; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; by 1895, s. Prob. ex skin, v., 2, with reference to skin game.—7. 'A "skinner" is a man'—among tramps, a hobo—'who drives horses or mules,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; 1931, Stiff, 'One who drives mules. Especially on construction jobs'; by which time, therefore, it is rather to be classified as labour s. than as c. Short for s. mule-skinner (some sense).

skinner's delight. A tramps' 'jungle' dish: tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931, defines it as rice (interspersed with raisins) baked in an egg batter.

skinning. 'A sure game, where all who play are sure to lose, except the gamesters': professional gamblers' or card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; by 1895, s. Ex skin, v., 2.—2. Harbour thieves (stealing rice, sugar, coffee, etc.), in order to prevent identification by trade marks, shipping numbers, etc., on the original containers, transfer the stolen goods to bags of their own, this transference being, among the thieves, known as skinning: 1872, Edward Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York; rather ob. Ex skin, v.

skinning a leather. See skin, v., 1.

skinning a poke. See skin, v., 1.

skinning a rattler. See skin a rattler.

skinning game is merely an amplification of skinning: 1859, Matsell (at strippers); † by 1920.

skinny. A ten-cent piece: 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. thin one.

skip, n. See schip.

skip, v., 'to escape from (a place)', is not c., but s. George Bidwell, Forging His Chains, 1888. Short for skip out of (or away from).—2. To abscond on bail: C. 20. Partridge, 1938.

skip-jack; skip Jack. See the quot'n at jingler: ca. 1600–1750, though it may just possibly have lingered for a century longer. Dekker; B.E.; A New Canting Dict., 1725; Egan's Grose. Because he skips about when he is showing off a horse's paces.

skip(-)kennel, 'a footman' (Grose, 1785), is not c., but s.

skip out is an occ. variant of skipper, v., 1; usually as a vbl n., skipping out: prob. from ca. 1920. Frank Gray, The Tramp, 1931, 'The tramp who had been "skipping out" and needed to move with the dawn'; ibid., 'Sleeping rough or "skip-ping out"'—so also in Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935. Skip obviously shortens skipper.

skiphouse. A doss-house: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1930.

skipper, n. 'A skypper, a barne,' Harman, 1566; 1608–9, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie' (Lanthorne and Candle-light); 1610, Rowlands; 1665, R. Head, who spells it skepper; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th

ed. (skipper); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1933, Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 'skyppe, covered shelter'; 1935, Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief, 'A liedown in a spinney or anywhere where no rent is paid'; April 22, 1935, Hugh Milner (letter), 'Bed, outdoor, improvised'; 1936, W. A. Gape, 'A place where you shelter for the night without permission'; 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 'It would be no fun doing a skipper on a November night'; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress; extant. 'From the Welsh, YSGUBOR, pronounced SCYBOR, or SCIBOR, the proper word in that language for a barn,' H, 3rd ed., 1864.—2. Hence, a tramp: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; not very gen.—3. The officer in charge of a police precinct: U.S. racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'I goes to the skipper and fronts for the mutt'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex army s. (skipper, captain), that officer being usually a captain of police.—4. (Ex sense 1.) Loosely, a doss-house: vagrants': since ca. 1930. John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939 (quot'n at kipper).

skipper, v.; often as vbl n., skippering; mostly in form skipper(ing) it. 'Most [vagrants] have very little house shelter, their mode of sheltering being that of going from barn to barn, men and women all herding together in one common mass of filthiness and depravity (this is what vagrants call skippering it)'; 1852, 'Gaol Revelations', by a Governor, in C. J. Talbot's Meliora—but the term occurs earlier in Henry Mayhew (London Labour, I, 1851); 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1859, H (skipper it); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1893, No. 747; 1903, F & H (skipper and skipper it); 1933, George Orwell, Down and Out; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'It keeps out the cold when they're skippering'; extant. Ex the n.—2. Hence, as in 'Regarding the worst of the doss houses, . . . it is . . . preferable to "skipper" (walk about) all night than to inhabit them even for an hour,' Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows, 1926: beggars' and tramps': C. 20.

skipper, do a. To sleep in the open: tramps' and beggars': C. 20. In, e.g., James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 1937. See skipper, n., 1.

skipper(-)bird. 'Skipper-birds' are defined as 'parties (persons) that never go to lodging-houses, but to barns or outhouses, sometimes without a blanket': tramps': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; ob. Ex skipper, n.

skipper it; vbl n., skippering it. See skipper, v. skipping out. See skip out.

skirmish; skirmished. Incorrect for skimish, skimished.

skirt. The sense 'a woman' has, in the U.S.A. as well as in the British Empire, always been s.—despite, e.g., Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in the Underworld, 1916.

skirt(-)foist. A female cheat: ca. 1650, A. Wilson; app. † by 1720. See foist, n.

skirt man. A pimp, a procurer: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. crack salesman, 2.

skit, v. To wheedle, to overreach: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1870. Cf. S.E. skit, to caper—be skittish.

skitting-dealer. (Usually pl.) 'Skitting Dealers was a slang phrase in George II's time for beggars who professed to be tongueless,' Notes & Queries, 5th Series, V, 99, i.e., Jan. 29, 1876. It is a synonym of dommerar, q.v. Lit., a dealer in—or a practiser of—'skitting' or (pretended) shyness or, perhaps, moving lightly about, capering.

skiv; skivvy. The former is American, 'to serve or act as a servant' (Leverage, 1925); the latter, a Britishism for 'a female servant (of a lowly sort)'. Both are low s., not c.—2. Only skivvies. 'Underdrawers,' Ersine, 1933: U.S.A.; extant. Ex skivvy, 1, perhaps with pun on underlings: underthings.

skoff; skoffings; etc. See scoff, etc.

skoffel. A dance: South Africa: late C. 19–20; by 1940 it was (low) s. Letter, May 23, 1946, from C. P. Wittstock; article, June 1, 1946, by Alan Nash in The Cape Times, 'Dance: Skoffel (scuffle-shuffle)'. Afrikaans: ex Dutch schuifelen, 'to scuffle; to shuffle'.

skolly. A non-European, Afrikaans-speaking delinquent or crook or criminal: South Africa, esp. in Cape Town: since ca. 1880. Cyrus A. Smith, letter of May 22, 1946; The Cape Times of May 23, 1946, has an article on 'Slang Words used by Skollies'. Prob. ex Dutch scholier, 'a pupil (at school)'.

skookum house, 'a jail': Anglo-Chinese s., not c. Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926. Lit., 'severe house'; skookum is a Chinook word.

skower and skowre. See scur.

skraap. See skrop.

skreen. See scree, n.

skrip. See scrip.

skrop, or skraap. Sexual intercourse: South Africa: since ca. 1880. (C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946.) Afrikaans; cf. Dutch schrapp(en), 'to scrape'—and English low s. grind, n. and v.

skud. To search: South Africa: late C. 19–20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946, 'One . . . must . . . never let the "joerns" find anything when they "skud" (search)'. Afrikaans, ex Dutch schudden, 'to shake, to jolt, to shuffle'—cf. shake.

skugee. "'Nothin' but skugees (a species of gay-cat)"; J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (p. 253); very ob. Origin?

skull. 'The head of the house; the President of the United States; the Governor [of the State]; the head man': 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1920. Cf. familiar S.E. head, 'head man'.—2. A ticket: since ca. 1925. Ersine. One ticket per person: 'per head'.

skull-dragging. 'Stockly proceeded to set about what is known in the vernacular as "skull dragging"—that is, making a man give evidence when he doesn't want to,' Eddie Guerin, 'I Was a Bandit', Flynn's, Aug. 17, 1929, in ref. to and valid for the year 1907; 1931, IA, 'A beating, esp. about the head by a zealous policeman'—a usage he states to be, by 1931, ob.—2. 'Begging for drinks in a saloon', Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1920. 'Probably since one drags or hangs the head when thus employed' (Irwin).

skunk, n., 'a mean or objectionable person', is classified in No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, as c.: but it has never been lower than s.—2. A Negro: tramps': since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. These 'odour phobias'! To a white man a Negro, to a Chinese a white man (and so, along the colour-line), has an offensive bodily odour.

skunk, v. To swindle (a person): 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'to cheat or defraud; to inform; . . . to defeat in a game of cards'; extant. To act as skunk, n., 1, against or in relation to another person.

skup, n. and v.; skupper. A betrayal; to inform on, to betray; an informer or traitor: 1925, Leverage; extant. The n. ex the v.; the v., short for scupper. The n. skupper ex the v. skup.

skush; esp. go out on the skush. "In the beginning, Butch worked in the daytime, or as they say in Gangland, 'went out on skush'"; Alfred Henry Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1925, Leverage, 'Skush, v., To rob (a gang acting)'; Aug. 17, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, who applies it to pickpocketry; extant. Cf. schlamwerker, q.v. Ex Yiddish: cf. Ger. Schuss, 'impetuous or precipitated movement'; an Eng. parallel is afforded by 'do it on the rush'.

skut. A fight: South Africa: late C. 19–20. C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946. Afrikaans: cf. Dutch schoots, combining element for 'shooting', and schutter, a marksman (with a rifle).

sky, n., 'a pocket', was prob. c. at first (ca. 1860–80). B & L, 1890. Its currency in U.S.A. is extremely doubtful, despite G. A. England's 'Underworld Lingo' in The Writer's Monthly, Nov. 1927.

sky, v., 'to toss (a coin)': not c., but s.—orig. low. H, 2nd ed., 1860, spells it skie. In U.S.A., sky a copper is 'to toss up a cent' (Bartlett, 1848).—2. To depart; esp., promptly and quietly: 1935, George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade, 'I know what I'd do if it was me—I'd "sky"'; extant. Cf. S.E. vanish into thin air and coll. go off into the blue.

sky blue. Gin: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'Blue Tape, or Sky Blue. Gin'; app. † by 1870. Almost certainly not c., but s. Perhaps suggested by blue tape.—2. Vegetable soup: American convicts': 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; since ca. 1910, also tramps—as in IA, 1931. Ironically: there is so little solid vegetable in it that it is as clear as a blue sky. But the tramp, whose soup is better, understands the origin to reside in the fact that, eaten in open air, the soup will, on a bright, clear day, reflect the blue of the sky (Godfrey Irwin).—3. A long-term prisoner: South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Ex the 'uniform': cf. the Afrikaans synonym, blou baadjie.

sky(-)farmer; usually pl. John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, 'Sky Farmers, are People who go about the Country with a false Pass, signed by the Church-wardens and Overseers of the Parish or Place that they lived in, and some Justice of Peace, but the Names are all forged: they go about forty Miles from that Place to some easy Justice, and get him to sign it, and so on to the next, until they have a great Number of Names to their Brief; and in this Manner they extort Money, under Pretence of sustaining Loss by Fire, or the Distemper amongst the horned Cattle; they always appear like Gentlemen Farmers, and have a Voucher with them'; 1776, Sir John Fielding, London and Westminster; May 1784, Sessions Papers, p. 838; 1785, Grose, 'Cheats who pretend they were farmers in the isle of sky, or some such remote place, and were ruined by a flood, hurricane, or some such public calamity, or else called sky farmers, from their farms being in nubibus, or the clouds', this latter explanation being the more natural; † by 1890 (B & L).

sky(-)joint. An asylum for the insane: 1925, Leverage; extant. For the inmates there's pie in the sky when they die.

sky laf. To make a fuss; raise difficulties: South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Afrikaans c., used also by non-Afrikaans-speakers. With laf, cf. Dutch ophef, 'a fuss'; with sky, cf. Dutch scheppen, 'to make'—cf. Eng. s. create, (v.i.) 'to make a fuss'.

sky-larker, is defined by George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 1789, as a journeyman bricklayer or a bricklayer's assistant, who, belonging to a gang of burglars, surveys a house (to spy out the land), by rising early one morning ('stirring with the lark'—the skylark) to discover a house 'that has had a brick-bat blown off the chimney or a tile from off the roof' and obtaining permission to repair the damage; or he may be an independent thief, who 'will rob the house somehow or other, by slipping into some of the chambers'; † by 1890 (B & L).

sky-larking is the vbl n. corresponding to sky-larker. Colonel George Hanger, 1801.

sky-piece. A hat: tramps': C. 20. Jack London, The Road, 1907, 'I took my pick of the underwear, socks, cast-off clothes, shirts, "kicks", and "sky-pieces"'; May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman.

sky pilot, 'a clergyman; a chaplain', is not c., but s. Bartlett, Americanisms, 4th ed., 1877. Among C. 20 tramps it = 'a high brow preacher. Not one of the mission kind' (Stiff, 1931). He pilots the ship of religion along the skyey ways.

sky-rider. A prison chaplain: convicts': since ca. 1925. Courtney R. Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937, 'It sums up, in convict language, to this: "Get the sky-rider on your side. What the hell does it cost you to bull the guy . . . ?"' sky-rocket, 'a pocket', is rhyming s.; but until ca. 1885, it was used mostly by thieves: witness, e.g., 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct. 1879. In C. 20 U.S.A., however, it is, on the Pacific Coast, c.: M & B, 1944.

sky(-)rube. 'An easy mark; a sucker from the country,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See rube; he gapes at the sky—or rather, the skyscrapers.

sky(-)the(-)wipe. A hypodermic needle: Pacific Coast drug addicts': since ca. 1920. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on hype.

skycey or skyser. See schicer.

skyingle, n. and v. Theft; to steal; to thief: 1925, Leverage; 1934, Rose (the v.); extant. Yiddish?

skyppey. See skipper (Harman, 1566).

skyrocket. See sky-rocket.

slaat. 'Let's slaat it out . . . Let's go. Or, beat it,' C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946: South Africa: C. 20. Afrikaans; prob. cognate, ultimately, with 'to slope'.

slab. A tray: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; extant. Ex its flatness.—2. A 'slice of anything' (e.g., bread): 1904, Life in Sing Sing; by 1910, low s. Cf. sense 1.—3. An undertaker's table: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Cf. sense 1.—4. Sleep; hence, slab-joint, a lodging-house or hotel: these, like slab, 'to sleep', and slabber, 'a sleeper', are low s. rather than c. (Leverage, 1925).

slack(-)joint. 'An asylum for the insane', is low s. rather than c. (Leverage, 1925.)

slack moll, 'a woman with a nasty tongue.'

(Leverage, 1925), lies on the borderline between c. and low s. Cf. American s. slack-jaw, 'back-talk, abuse, insolence'.

slack-off or taper-off, n. Gradual cure of the drug habit: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. BVB. I.e., slackening off and tapering off.

slade is a very rare form of—more prob. a misprint for—slate. Dekker, O per se O, 1612.

slag, n., 'a slack-mettled fellow, one not ready to resent an affront' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), is not c., but dial.—2. See slang, n., 7, reference of 1856. Perhaps a genuine perversion in C. 20 U.S.A.—see, e.g., nip the slag.—3. 'Junk; brass,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant.

slag, v. To sell junk: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 3 of the n.

slagger, a 'fellow who keeps a house of accommodation' (Ware, 1909), is low s.—not c. Perhaps a perversion of slugger.

slam, n. A trick, a swindling piece of cheating: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (who does not classify it as c.); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen—but I surmise that it was † by 1870. Cf. slum, n.—2. A rebuke; an insinuation; an insult: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage, 'An expose (in prison)'; extant.—3. As the slam, it = hold-up robbery ('stick-ups'): U.S.A.: Aug. 17, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant. Echoic.

slam, v. To talk fluently: 1890, B & L: not c., but low s.—2. To rebuke or reprimand; to insinuate against; to insult: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1930, low s. Cf. U.S. s. knock, 'to criticize adversely'. (In I Live in Grosvenor Square, a film shown in 1945, one G.I. says to another, 'You know what it says about knocking the British'.)

slam-mug, 'a fighter; a slanderer', and slam-work, 'rough fighting': low s., not c. Leverage, 1925.

slam off. To die: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'Here we think him a big shot and he slams off with a cold'; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. Cf. s. pop off.

slamming a (or the) gate. To go to a (private) house and beg, esp. for food: tramps': since ca. 1890, for in The Road, 1907, Jack London implies (English edition, 1914, p. 12) that the term was already current in 1892; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1939, Terence McGovern, It Paid to Be Tough; extant. 'The idea perhaps being that one is generally repulsed so vigorously there is no time to close the gate as one leaves' (Irwin); rather, one slams it in protest.

slaney. A theatre: 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H, who by implication give it as English; † by 1920. Perhaps a perversion, either of slang as at slangs, 3, or of s. slum, 'to act'.

slang, n. Mostly pl., as in the earliest record: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'To nap the Slangs from the Cull or Moll; that is, . . . to take the Things from the Man or Woman'; app. † by 1800. Of obscure origin (perhaps cf. slangs, 2). In any case, of an origin different from that of:—2. Noisy talk or speech: see slang, throw off one's.—3. An illicit means of livelihood; a trick; sharp or unfair behaviour: 1756 (see next sense); 1782 (see slang, come the); 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'How do you work now? . . . O, upon the old slang [of the tolliban rig]'; † by 1860. Prob. of same origin as next sense.—4. Cant, the language of the underworld: possibly in 1756, Wm. Toldervy, The History of Two Orphans, 'Thomas Throw had been upon the town, knew the slang well', O.E.D.: perhaps rather in sense 3; Grose, 1785, 'Canting . . . a kind of gibberish used by thieves and gypsies, likewise pedlar's French, the slang, &c. &c.'; ibid., 'Flash lingo, the canting of slang language', where slang is rather attributive than outright adjective; ibid., 'Slang, cant language'; 1797, Potter; Feb. 1802, Sessions Papers (also in April 1820); 1809, Andrewes; 1826, The New Newgate Calendar, V, 49, 'A perfect adept in slang and wickedness, though not quite 18 years of age'; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1860, † (the sense having merged with its derivative, slang in its current acceptation). Prob. language that is slung about: cf. s. sling the bat: see my S.P.E. tract, Slang, 1940.—5. Hence, the slang, the underworld: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Education', 'Dick Hellfinch was the pink of all the slang', glossed as 'blackguards'; app. † by 1870.—6. See slangs, 2.—7. Hence (?), 'a watch chain, a chain of any kind': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, where it is misprinted slag; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1885, Michael Davitt; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life, 'A Watch Chain or Guard'; 1886, A. Pinkerton (U.S.A.); 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; 1890, B & L; 1893, P. H. Emerson; 1896, Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago; 1903, F & H; by 1905, low s. in England, whereas in U.S.A. it remained c. for many years—witness No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; April 1919, The (American) Bookman (M. Acklom); Jan. 31, 1925, Flynn's (James Jackson); 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, where it is misprinted slong; 1929, Jack Callahan; 1931, Brown; and a hundred times since! Ex Ger. Schlange, 'watch-chain'—or Dutch slang, 'snake': O.E.D.—8. 'A warrant, license to travel or other official instrument' (document or paper): 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1864, H, 3rd ed., '"Out on the slang", i.e., to travel with a hawker's licence'; by 1903 (F & H), no longer c.—9. (Rare.) A counterfeit or defective weight or measure: 1859, H. See slangs, 4.—10. (Rare.) See slangs, 3.

slang, v. A term in 'the old nob' (the swindling game of prick-in-the-belt): 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, The Capper cries, Is the Nobb slang'd, Sailor? who says, 'it is flown, which signifies one end is dropt, that puts out the Flat'.—2. To exhibit; to simulate, make a pretence of being: 1741 (see slanging the gentry mort . . ., this being the second nuance); 1789 (see slanging, n., this being the first nuance); 1890, B & L; by 1905, showmen's s.; by 1945, ob.—3. See slang one's mauley.—4. See slanged, 2.—5. 'To defraud a person of any part of his due, is called slanging him; also to cheat by false weights or measures, or other unfair means,' J. H. Vaux, 1812: Dec. 1774, Sessions Papers, 1st John Wilkes Session, p. 28, col. 2; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; by 1903 (F & H), ob.; by 1910, †. Prob. ex sense 3 of then.—6. To speak cant: 1830 (see rummy); † by 1900. Ex slang, n., 4.

slang, adj. Connected with the underworld; of the underworld: 1785, Grose (see second quot'n at slang, n., 4); 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters (see slang-boy); † by 1870 or 1880. Cf. slang, n., 4.—2. Unjust; defective: 1812, J. H. Vaux, Slang Weights, or Measures, . . . defective ones'; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1900, low s. Cf. slang, n., 3.

slang, come the. To play a sharp or a mean trick: 1782, Messink, The Choice of Harlequin, 'Nor for a little bub, come the slang upon your fair' (? fare); † by 1890. See come, 2, and slang, n., 3.

slang, out on the. See slang, n., 8.

slang, throw off one's. To talk noisily: ca. 1773, Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles), 'We threw off our slang at high and low, / And we were resolv'd to breed a row / For we both got as drunk as David's sow'; app. † by 1830. Cf. slang, n., sense 4.

slang all upon the safe, stand. See Miss Slang.

slang and pitcher shop, 'a shop where they sell cheap, inferior toys', is not c., but low s.: 1890, B & L.

slang-boy; usually pl. A male (not necessarily a youth) of the underworld: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Ye slang-boys all, since wedlock's noose, / Together fast has tied . . .'; ibid., 'Boys of the slang; fellows who speak the slang language'; † by 1890 (B & L). See slang, n., 3 and 5.

slang cull. An exhibitor (of freaks) at fair or market; a showman: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter (see quot'n at slanging); 1890, B & L, 'Master of a show'; by 1895, showmen's s. See slangs, 3, and cull, n.

slang dipper. One who gilds metal chains to sell them as gold: 1935, David Hume, Call In the Yard and The Gaol Gates Are Open; extant. The slang is properly a watch-chain.

slang dropper. One who disposes of the chains prepared by the slang dipper (q.v.): 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1939, D. Hume, Heads You Live; extant.

slang-madge, the. 'Biting the Mollies', i.e., blackmailing sodomites: 1741, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. III (Catherine Lineham), 'She asked me to go along with her upon the Slang-Madge'; app. † by 1860. Cf. madge cull and:—

slang mort play. The trick practised by a woman that, accompanied by her husband or lover, pretends to be taken with pains of pregnancy at a carefully selected house, to which she gains entrance and which she then burgles: Jan. 1741, trial of Mary Young, in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, publ. in 1742; app. † by 1830. Cf. slanging the gentry mort . . ., q.v.; see slang, v., 2, and lay, n., 2.

slang (a person) one's mauley or the mauleys. To shake hands with: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter (see mauley); 1890, B & L; by 1895, low s. Slang = sling; see mauley.

slang tree, the, 'the stage, the trapeze', and climb up the slang tree, 'to mount the trapeze' (hence, 'to make an exhibition of oneself in public'), are not c., but showmen's s.: B & L, 1890.

slang tree, climb up the. See preceding.

slang upon the safe. That member of a gang of thieves who, apparently detached, stands at a distance in order to receive the goods stolen: Jan. 1741, trial of Mary Young, in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, publ. in 1742, 'She took both the Ladies Watches off, unperceived by them, and tipped them to one of her Companions, who was ready planted for the purpose (and who went and tipped them to Slang upon the Safe)',—see also Miss Slang . . .; † by 1830. See slang, v., 1.

slanged, ppl adj. For its use in 'the old nob', see slang, v., 1.—2. Shackled, fettered: 1782 (implied in alderman double-slanged); 1797, Potter, 'Slanged, ironed on one leg.—Slanged double, both legs iron'd'; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Double slanged; double ironed'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1900, †. Prob. ex slangs, 2. slanger. Sense obscure in Sessions Papers, Jan. 1793, p. 192, 'Langford called me that bloody slanger, or said, I was the bloody slanger that belonged to the bloody whore'; † by 1870.

slanging, n. 'To exhibit any thing in a fair or market, such as a tall man, or a cow with two heads, that's called slanging, and the exhibiter is called the slang cull': 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; rather ob.—and, by 1880, no longer c.—2. See slang, v., 5, and cf. slang, v., 2.

slanging dues. 'When a man suspects that he has been curtailed, or cheated, of any portion of his just right, he will say, there has been slanging-dues concerned': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1923, Egan's Grose; † by 1903 (F & H). Ex slang, v., 5, and dues.

slanging the gentry mort rumly with a sham kinchen (or -in). The underworld trick of a woman's pretending to be a lady big with child: Jan. 1741, trial of Mary Young, in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, 1742; † by 1860. Cf. slang mort lay; see slang, v., 2.

slango. A means, esp. if illicit, of livelihood: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'You, Fellow-traveller, what do you do for your living? You, Cole, What slango do you go upon?' slangs. See slang, n., 1.—2. (The singular is not frequent.) Fetters; handcuffs: U.S.A. (—1794) and prob. England (perhaps as early as 1760): 1807, Henry Tufts, 'Slangs . . . irons or handcuffs'; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Slang. A fetter'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1885, A. Griffiths, Fast and Loose; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; very ob. Cf. slang, n., 7. Ex the resemblance of a chain to a snake (Dutch slang); in Ger. c. Schlange is used for 'a chain; a watch chain' (O.E.D.).—3. Shows; side-shows, esp. and orig. at a fair: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'On the Thursday evening of the races we went into the slangs'; 1859, H, who has the singular; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was no longer c. Perhaps ex slang, v., 2.—4. Counterfeit weights and/or measures: ? orig. c., or always Cockney s.: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I (by implication). Ex slang, adj., 2.

slant, n. A chance or opportunity; a person likely to give alms: Australian: 1870, B. Farjeon, Grif (both nuances); a special application is recorded in 1897, Price Warung, Tales of the Old Regime, 1897, pp. 217–18, 'Pedder had got tired of things in general, and had organized that movement which was popularly known in Norfolk Island and Port Arthur as a "slant", that is, he had planned a murder or a meeting on purpose to obtain a trial in Hobart or Sydney', a sense current ca. 1830–70; app. † by 1920 in the 2nd nuance, but still current, now as low s., in the first ('opportunity, chance'), as Baker, 1942, witnesses. Cf. 'get an angle on'.—2. A thief; a crook: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Of the same origin as slanter, q.v.

slant, v. To run away; to decamp: 1890,

B & L; 1903, F & H; slightly ob. Prob. ex nautical slant, 'to sail obliquely, to diverge from one's course'.—2. To watch (v.t.): U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Ersine. Ex s. slant, a point of view.

slant eye. Any Oriental: tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex the Orientals' obliquely set eyes.

slant(-)joint. 'An establishment where thieves congregate,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See slant, n., 2. Cf:—

slantskirt. A female criminal: 1925, Leverage; extant.

slant(-)work. 'Thievery of any kind,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See slant, n., 2, and:— slanter or slinter, n. A criminal or illicit trick or dodge: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1945. Ex Dutch slenter, 'a knack; a trick'.

slanter, adj. Spurious; unfair: Australian: C. 20. C. J. Dennis, 1916; Baker, 1942. Prob. imm. ex the n.

slap. Booty; plunder: ca. 1790, 'Kilmainham Minit' (in Ireland Sixty Years Ago, ca. 1850), 'And when dat he milled [= stole] a fat slap, He merrily melted de winners'; † by 1903 (F & H). Cf. strike, n., 2, and v., 1.—2. A charge or accusation not necessarily involving legal punishment; U.S.A.: since ca. 1925. Ersine. Cf. jolt.

slap artist. 'Man who arrives at ejaculation by slapping women,' Hargan, 1935; extant.

slap-bang shop, 'a petty cook's shop where there is no credit given, but what is had must be paid down with the ready slap-bang, i.e. immediately. This is a common appellation for a night cellar frequented by thieves, and sometimes for a stage coach or caravan,' Grose, 2nd ed., 1788; earlier in Sessions Papers, Dec. 1786, p. 105. As 'cook-shop', it may possibly have been c., but prob. it was s. The shortened form is classified as c. by 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857, thus: 'Slap-Bang, n. Cook-shop. Th[ieves]'. slash, n. 'Outside coat pocket': 1839, Brandon; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I; 1859, H., 'A pocket in an overcoat'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; extant. The opening represents a slash or gash in the line of the coat. Some other c. names of pockets: break, fan, gurrel, insider, kick, outer, pit, prat, seat.—2. Swindling in respect of the shares in loot: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., James Curtis, What Immortal Hand, 1939. Cf. carve-up and, as the imm. origin, sense 1 of the v.—3. A urination: C. 20; by ca. 1930, low s. Partridge, 1938. Echoic.

slash, v. To swindle (a confederate) out of his share or out of a part of it: since ca. 1920: 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938; Jack Henry, Famous Cases, 1942. Cf. carve up.—2. To cut (someone) across the face with a razor or with a razor-blade set in a hasp: C. 20. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. A rigid particularization of the S.E. word.

slasher, 'a bullying riotous fellow' (Grose, 1788), is not c.—2. A knife: 1845, anon. translator of Eugene Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, ch. XXIX, 'They walked into him with their slashers (killed'—more lit., attacked—'him with their knives)'; † by 1900—and never much used.—3. One who specializes in the art described at slash, v., 2: C. 20.

slashing is the vbl n.—and the commonest form—of slash, q.v.

slat, n., is a variant of slate, n. E.g., in sense 1, Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 1611, 'A doxy, that carries a kitchen mort in her slat as her backe'; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; from ca. 1730, usually slate; † by 1790.—2. A half-crown: see slate, n., 2. John Poulter, in his Discoveries, 1753, says, however, that it is a crown and that a half-crown is, in c., a half slat. Grose, 1788, defines slat as 'half a crown'.—3. Hence, a half-dollar: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920.—4. See slats.—5. An iron bar in a jail: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Ersine. Cf. slats.

slat, v. To beat; to whip; to thrash: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex slat, a strip of timber (e.g., a paling); cf. sap, v.

slate, n. A sheet, esp. for a bed: 1566, Harman, 'A slate or slates, a sheete or shetes'; 1608, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie' (in Lanthorne and Candle-light); 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'With a Slade about his Quarrons (a sheete about his body)'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1688, Holme; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., where it is misprinted states; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrews; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890 (B & L). Ex the oblong shape of a roofing slate.—2. A half-crown: 1698, B.E.; 1714, Alex. Smith (slat); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Half a Crown: A Slat'; † by 1860. Cf. slat, 2.

slate, v., 'to knock the hat over one's eyes, to bonnet', is not c. but Northern s.

slats, 'ribs' (e.g., in No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904), is, I think, not c., but low s. A slat is a long, narrow strip of wood.

Slaughter-House, the. Chatham Prison: ca. 1860–95: 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow. 'The temperament of the offender was not taken into account in that stolid man's—an ex-Indian Army governor's—"system", and the consequence was that Chatham Prison—long since shut up—was known to all convicts as "the slaughter-house"'.—2. The Surrey Sessions House: 1909, Ware; app. † by 1940.

slaughter-house. A gambling-den where employees, masquerading as customers, pretend to be gambling heavily: gamblers' and card-sharpers': 1869, The Sporting Magazine (cited by O.E.D.); app. † by 1920. Those employees 'murder' the ordinary gamblers.—2. A (low) brothel: white-slavers': C. 20. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, 'She had got into a slaughter-house'—this was in Buenos Ayres—'at two dollars instead of five'. Death to the erring inmates.—3. The death chamber, housing the electric chair: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. Lewis S. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing, 1928.

slave; slave driver. A worker; a foreman or overseer: labour s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Slave is short for wage-slave.

slave market. 'To men of the road, West Madison Street is the "slave market". It is the slave market because here most of the employment agencies are located. Here men in search of work bargain for jobs in distant places with the "man catchers" from the agencies,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; 1931, Stiff, 'That part of the main stem where jobs are sold'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin—but by this date, rather labour s. than c. Cf. preceding entry.

slavery, 'a servant', is, I think, a misprint for slavey, in No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904.

slavey, 'a maid servant', seems to have orig. (ca. 1780-1815) been c.; it > low s., which, though to a lesser degree, it still is. It is, socially, a contemptuous diminutive of slave.—2. A man servant: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'The cove and covess, Slavey and Moll Slavey, that is, the landlord and landlady, man and maid servant'; 1912, J. H. Vaux; † by 1840.

slaving gloak (or gloke). An ostler: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Get acquainted with the slaving Glokes of the Inns on the Panney, that is, the Ostlers on the Road'; † by 1850. See gloak and cf. slavey.

slaw, 'food' and 'to eat', and slaw-joint, 'a restaurant': s., not c. Leverage, 1925.

slay; slayer. To inform on, to 'squeal'; an informer, a 'squealer': 1925, Leverage; extant. Proleptic.

sled; sledder. 'To go crooked; to become a thief.—One who leads others into a crooked life,' Leverage, 1925; extant. To slide and slip.

sleek. Silk; also as adj. ('sleek wipes': Haggart): 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'The sleek and chatter . . . were generally fenced for one-fourth part of their value'; 1823, Egan's Groser; † by 1920. Ex its smoothness.

sleek-and-slum shop. 'A public-house or tavern where "single men and their wives" resort': 1823, Jon Bee; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; ob. by 1900; † by 1910. Cf. slum, n., 3.

sleek wipe. A foulard or neckerchief (1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen) or handkerchief (see sleek: 1821); † by 1920. I.e., a sleek or smooth (? silken) handkerchief.

sleep. '... The one-year bunch, who are considered unworthy of serious notice. A year sentence is known as a "sleep",' Donald Lowrie (San Quentin, 1901-11), My Life in Prison, 1911; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Stiff, 'A short term in the workhouse or jail'; 1931, IA; 1936, Charles F. Coe, 'I'm doin' a twenty sleep'; 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer (British: of a shortish sentence; three years, to be precise); extant. A long, long 'rest'.

sleep in one's cravat, 'to be hanged': 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London, II, i, 'Take care you're not sent to sleep in your cravat one of these mornings': prob. not c., but a literary invention.

sleep in The Star Hotel. See Star Hotel . . .

sleep on rocks, be able to. 'I can sleep on rocks . . . I have plenty of money,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; ob. See rock and rocks.

sleep with Mrs Green. To sleep in the open, e.g., in a park: Australian beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. I.e., on the grass; cf. the entry at Mrs Ashtip.

sleeper. 'A bet won by the bank or a better, which has been overlooked and lies on the table without a claimant': professional gamblers': 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; by 1903 (F & H) it was s.—2. 'These low gambling-houses are frequented by "sleepers". They have no money to play with, but are allowed to sit at the tables, and whenever a patron is careless about picking up his winnings, these fellows step forward and claim the stake' 1891, Darkness and Daylight (U.S.A.); extant. Cf.—perhaps ex—sleeping partner.—3.

'Sleepers (Am.), drunken men in the gutters. "Laying" for sleepers or for "plain drunks", is the occupation of street thieves': 1891, James Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; 1903, Clapin (plagiarizing Maitland); very ob.—4. A night watchman: racketeers': 1930, Burke; 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. kipped for the semantics.—5. A variation of sleep: 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'Guy, I'm going to hang a sleeper on you'; extant. Cf.—6. A mean or sly trick: 1933, Ersine; extant.—7. A tartar: 1933, Ersine. Ironic.

sleeping Bill. A policeman's baton: 1935, Hargan; extant. See billy, 3: skilfully wielded, it 'puts a man to sleep'.

sleeping time is a variation of sleep: 1935, Hargan; extant. sleepwalker. A sneak thief: Australian: since ca. 1925. Baker, 1942. He walks while others sleep; but if he is caught prowling, he pretends to be walking in his sleep.

Sleepy Hollow. The State burial ground: 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex Washington Irving's 'Legend of Sleepy Hollow'.

sleepy stuff, the. A drug, put into liquor to ensure stupefaction as a condition suitable for the robbery of the drugged person (usually a man): 1863, A Prison Matron, Jane Cameron, Female Convict; † by 1930.

sleeve. To steal (a purse) and slip it up one's sleeve: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; extant.

sleeve on, put the. See put . . .

Sleigh is, like Cokey, an underworld nickname for a dope-fiend (esp. on cocaine or on morphine): Jan. 12, 1929, Flynn's, Maxwell Smith, 'Underground'; extant—but never much used. Ex:—

sleigh ride, n.; sleigh-ride, v.—often in form of the vbl n., sleigh riding. (To indulge in) a bout of cocaine: since ca. 1908: 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 'You got to do better than bring Grimm's Fairy Tales up to date. Whadda you been doing?—sleigh-riding? Stick to the long bamboo [i.e., opium-smoking]—that snow's awful bad for the imagination'; 1925, Leverage, 'Sleigh-Ride, n. A jab of morphine from a hypodermic syringe, or the resulting state of intoxication'; 1928, Chicago May, 'Taking a sleigh ride—getting morphine'; July 5, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick, 'The dreams of one under the influence of drugs'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine (sleigh-ride party, one where cocaine is taken); 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man, 'Sniffing heroin or cocaine is "sleigh-riding"': 1934, Rose; Nov. 1937, For Men Only, Robert Baldwin, 'Dopes Are Dopes'; 1938, Castle (the n.); April 1942, Flynn's; 1942, BVB, with variant s.r. party, 'a snow party, or spree'. Suggested by snow.—2. Hence, 'an absolutely impossible or unlikely idea or action, or . . . the cheating or fleecing of a victim . . . "We gave him a sleigh ride"—we cheated him by a false story or by sharp practice,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1925.

sleigh-rider. A cocaine addict: 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 'Petty's kind had been profitable "sleigh-riders" when he provided "snow" on Seventh Avenue'; April 13, 1929, Flynn's, Don. H. Thompson; 1942, BVB. See sleigh ride.

slice. A share of the spoils: C. 20: from ca. 1930, s. (Leverage, 1925.) Cf.:—

slice of fat. A profitable robbery: ca. 1860–1920. Baumann, 1887. In s., fat = profit.

slider. See shiver.

slick, n. See slick article.—2. A stolen horse: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. slick article, 2.

slick, the. See brief.

slick a dee (or die). A pocket-book: ? Scottish: 1839, Brandon; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), as slick-a-die; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1930. App. an elaboration of dee.

slick and sleeth. Teeth: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

slick (article). A very smart person; esp. a clever, shrewd, alert criminal: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'As bribery was out of the question, Johnny and Patsy, who were what is called in the underworld "slick articles", put their heads together, and worked out a scheme'; from ca. 1920, slick only, as in Leverage, 1925; extant.—2. Hence (slick only), 'a clever theft' (Leverage, 1925); extant.

slick dice. 'These are dice which trip from certain sides . . . They are so manufactured that they will continue to roll in action until they strike a smooth side. Then the dice will slide to a stop,' Frank Wrentmore in Flynn's, March 21, 1936: professional gamblers': C. 20.

slicked up, 'well dressed; clean and neat': s., not c.

slicker. A clever trickster; skilful crook: since ca. 1890. Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman, 1900; Godfrey Irwin, 1931. A special application of the s. sense 'smart guy' (as in a city slicker).—2. A stolen automobile (recently) repainted: car thieves': since ca. 1925: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. slicked up.

slide, n. A purse: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 320); ob. Perhaps ex the ease with which a pickpocket slides it out of a pocket.

slide, v.t. 'Before "sliding", or unlocking and unbolting doors': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; extant. Ex the motion of unbolting a door.—2. The sense 'to eat at a snack-bar, quick lunch counter, etc.' is s. (Leverage, 1925.)

slider. A hacksaw: burglars' and convicts': since ca. 1920. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938 (quot'n at comb, 2).

slides. Shoes: tramps': 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Tramps' begged shoes are often too big: feet slide about therein.

slim, n. 'Slim is cant for punch,' says George Parker in Life's Variegated Painter, 1789, in ref. to 'I say, call for a bobstick worth of rum slim' (the best punch); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890 (B & L). Why? Perhaps ironic: the taste is so rich, the brew so potent.—2. A professional informer to the police: U.S.A.: 1928, Chicago May; 1930, Burke; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant.—3. A drug addict: drug traffic: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. Ex the emaciation that excess will produce.

slim dilly. A filly (lit. and fig.): Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

slimmy mark. A mean, or a suspicious, person: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; † by 1940. Perhaps cf. slim, n., 2.

sling, n. A watch and chain: since ca. 1925. Ersine. A thinning of slang, n., 7.

sling, v. '“The beak slung him for five stretchers”'—read 'stretchcs'—“and a moon” . . . the judge sentenced him for five years and a month': 1859, Matsell, at pattered; ob. Cf. jolt, n. and v.—2. To give; to pass: 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary, 'Mulligan was "slinging toke" (giving his bread) to the "general"': 1890, B & L, 'to pass to a confederate'; 1894, H. A. White (Australia); by 1900, low s.—as, occasionally, it was also for some years before.—3. 'He had not "slung", or in plain English thrown away, the morsel of paper': 1887, Arthur Griffiths, Locked Up; 1890, B & L, 'to throw away so as to get rid of and escape detection': 1903, F & H; ob. Cf. ding.

sling one's hook. 'Many were the curious histories scrawled upon the cell-walls of Millbank Prison. The men generally were satisfied with a simple statement of a fact, as—"Tohomas Hopkins | came her from the Steel, 1st April, 1854, 7 years for slinging my hook" . . . "Slinging his hook" is the professional term for picking pockets': 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude; † by 1940. See hook, v.

sling one's patter, 'to talk (at some length), to lecture, to give a speech': not c., but low s. Price Warung, Tales of the Old Days, 1894.

sling-tail. See swing-tail.—2. Poultry: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell (as slingtail); † by 1920.

sling the bull. To tell clever lies: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1940, low s. Cf. sling the lingo; bull, s. for 'hot air'.

sling the lingo. To converse in cant; to speak the language of the underworld: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant.

sling the smash. 'His "mate" soon finds out who the "blooming screw" is that "slung the smash", i.e., brought in the tobacco': prisoners': 1877 (but with reference to ca. 1869–70), Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; extant. See smash, n.

slingtail. See sling-tail, 2.

slinter. A trick, a piece of deceit; esp., work a slinter, to succeed in effecting a trick, a swindle: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942 and 1945. Cf. slanter (q.v.), of which it may be a thinned form.

slip, n. 'The slash pocket in the skirt of a coat behind': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1903, F & H (at slash); extant. Perhaps a disguising of slit.

slip, v. To commission or employ (someone) as an intermediary or to do 'the dirty work'; 'to put out feelers': convicts': since the 1920's. Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943, 'Dicker grins to himself cause the mug's back. Slips 'im ter make more plates' (for counterfeit money).—2. To pass information quietly or secretly to (someone): prob. since ca. 1920. Jim Phelan, Letters, 1943, 'He don't wait for the tumble. When 'e's got enough [counterfeit money, made by "The Toff"] 'e jest slips the cops. Ten stretch, the toff.'

slip (someone) the bump. To kill: c. of ca. 1925–30, then police and journalistic c. Charles F. Coe, Gunman, 1930. See bump, n.

slip the wind, 'to die', is nautical s.; not c. as is stated in Egan's Grose, 1823.

slippery. Soap: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (glossary); 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob. Cf. Fr. s. glissant, 'soap'.

slipping, 'a trick of card-sharpers, in performance of which, by dexterous manipulation, they place the cut card on the top, instead of at the bottom of the pack' (H, 3rd ed., 1864), was prob. e. at first; it would, however, have soon > j. Ex the manual movement entailed.

slipping, be. To be dying: white-slavers, in respect of a prostitute, esp. if she is in the service of a pimp: C. 20. A. Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928.

slipt; ? properly slipped. In gamesters' e., the slipt is either some kind of false die or a method of cheating: 1662, J. Wilson, The Cheats, 'The | Slipt, the goad[,] the fullam'. Perhaps = a die slipped in. M. C. Nahm, in his edition of Wilson's play, defines it as 'dice cut obliquely' and adds: 'The Highslipt were dice with the edges polished off, to make them run to high numbers: the Lowslipt ran to correspondingly low ones'.

slither. Counterfeit coin; counterfeit coins: counterfeiters': C. 20. Jan. 3, 1929, Daily Express (O.E.D.); Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932; Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. It is 'slippery' stuff to handle.

slitherum. A counterfeit coin: C. 20. Partridge, 1938. Lit., 'a slither one': see slither.

slithery. Sexual intercourse: C. 20; by 1930, also low s. Partridge, 1938.

slits. The eyes: 1925, Leverage; extant. 'He narrowed his eyes until they became mere slits.'

slitser. One who, in a brawl, is apt to use a knife: 1925, Leverage; extant. Corruption of 'throat-slitter'?

sliv, n. and v. 'A stabbing, a stab-wound'; sliver, 'a stab-wound': 1925, Leverage; extant. A disguise of shiv, n.

slivers. 'Graduated wedges,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex the S.E. sense. Cf.:—2. Matches: 1925, Leverage; extant.—3. 'A country police official,' Leverage, 1925; slightly ob.

sloraf. (A) sleep: S. Africa: C. 20. J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946. Afrikaans: cf. Dutch slaap (n.) and slapen (v.); prob., however, ex Dutch slof, adj., 'slack, negligent'—and sloffen, 'to be slack about things'.

slob, n. 'A person easy to impose upon,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: since ca. 1895: J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, 1900; by 1920, low s. Cf. slop up, 2, and:—2. 'An untidy person', Life in Sing Sing, 1904; Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. Cf. sloppy and slattern: ? a blend.

slob, v. See slobbering.—2. To spoil (a plan): 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 2 of the n.?

slob sister. A moocher that, in begging, weeps: beggars' and tramps': from ca. 1920. Stiff, 1931. Punning sob sister, American s. for a woman reporter specializing in 'sob stuff'.

slobber is an oce. variant of slobbering, in the nuance 'a kiss': 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'They'll let you give him a hug and a slobber when you first get in'; extant. Cf. slobbering.

slobberings. Money, esp. cash: 1923, Jules Manchon, Le Slang. Dysphemistic.

slobbering, n. Kissing: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Love-making'; extant. Cf. slobber.

slog, 'a brutal fellow' (Leverage, 1925): low s., not c. slogger, n. A boxer: 1848, Sinks of London Laid

Open; possibly c., but most prob. low s. Ex s. slog, to thump.

slogger, v. To get (something) returned to one: 1822, David Carey, Life in Paris, 'It is enough for me . . . that I slogger the onions and the ticker once more, as the rascals say'; app. † by 1870.

slogman. A junk dealer: 1925, Leverage; extant.

slong. See slang, n., 7, ref. of 1927.

sloop. A neckerchief: 1933, Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld; 1937, David Hume, Halfway to Horror; extant. 'Perhaps because it's a loop' (Partridge, 1937).

slop, n. A package or packet of tea: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1890, B & L; extant. Ex slops, tea.—2. The sense 'a policeman' (police >, in back-slang, ecslop > slop) may orig. (ca. 1855) have been c., but prob. was always low s. The term occurs several times in the Sessions Papers of ca. 1855–90.—3. (Inferior) beer: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1920, low s. Ex S.E. slops (in same sense).—4. See slops.

slop, v. To watch closely: 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. ex slop, n., 2 (cf. copper, policeman).

slop-feeder, 'a tea-spoon', was orig. (ca. 1790) c.; and it may have remained c. Vaux, 1812; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, Baumann. See feeder.

slop-tubs. Tea-things: 1823, Egan's Grose, 'Come, Moll, cut the slop-tubs; come, Mary, put away the tea-things'; 1887, Baumann; † by 1920. Cf. prec. entry.

slop up, v. To become intoxicated: 1899 (implied in slopping-up); 1916, Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in the Underworld; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by Moreby Acklom; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1935, low s. Ex slops, 'beer'.—2. Hence, 'to become sloppy in speech and looks': tramps': from ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. slob, n., 2.

slope, n. 'A get-away; a sneak-off'; an escape; an evasion of a task: 1925, Leverage; by 1940, s. Ex sense 2 of the v.—2. Hence, a being in hiding: 1933, Ersine; extant.

slope, v. To sleep: 1611, Rowlands, who (see quot'n at couch a hogshead) derives it from the Dutch; app. † by 1800. To slope or recline one's body.—2. To make off: not c., as 'Dueange Anglicus', 1857, would have it, but coll.—orig. U.S.A.

slope it. 'To eat or drink it': 1823, Egan's Grose. I suspect an error here.

slopping-up. A bout of heavy drinking; a big drinking-party: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary, 'A big drunk'; 1902, Flynt, The Little Brother; 1903, F & H; 1922, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life; by 1930, low s. Cf. sluicing, 'a drinking; a drinking bout'.

slops. 'Tramps; hoboes; bums in general,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Pejorative.

slosh, n. 'We straggled down to the York Road, where there is a "slosh" (coffee) stall,' thus a youth belonging to a London street-gang, in Sessions Papers, Nov. 21, 1907; slightly ob. Pejorative.

slosh, occ. sloush, 'to strike, to assault': low street s. (not c.) before it became gen. s.—2. As 'to drink' (intoxicants) it is American low s. Leverage, 1915.

slot. A hip poeket: 1925, The Garda Review; extant. Ex its app. narrow opening.

slotted kip. 'Kip: A narrow piece of wood . . . used for tossing [pennies] in two-up. Whence, "slotted kip": a kip in which a slot has been cut to hold a double-headed penny,' Baker, 1942: late C. 19-20.

slotz. An informer; a 'stool pigeon'; a 'squealer': 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex Yiddish (ex Ger.): lit., 'one who sucks up (to the police)'.

slouch. A billycock (hat): 1889 (see head-guard); by 1903, low s. Ex its informal shape and status; cf. S.E. slouch hat.

slough, n. A theft or robbery; a burglary: 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 'He'd sidetracked there for a day, working out a slough against a Grosse Pointe automobile nabob'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

slough, v. 'To bow the head': 1859, Matsell; † by 1914—if, indeed, it ever existed. Is this a perversion of S.E. bow, influenced perhaps by S.E. lower?—2. To lock; to lock-up; to arrest, to imprison: 1848, The Ladies' Repository (first nuance); 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, p. 279, 'Sloughed into jail'; 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1912, D. Lowrie, My Life in Gaol (San Quentin, 1901-11); 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1926, Jack Black; Feb. 12, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, Kane; 1929, Ernest Booth; 1929, Jack Callahan; Sept. 20, 1930, in Liberty; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; by 1937, the nuance 'lock (a place) up' was police s.—witness Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938; extant.—3. To dispose of; to abandon, throw away: 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1918, Arthur Stringer (see quot'n at fade, n.); slightly ob. Perhaps ex sense 2.—4. To operate as a thief, a burglar: 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, "So he's ready to slough with that snake again!" Copperhead Kate venomously and audibly meditated. Like all other women, she clearly disapproved of rivals'; app. † by 1930.—5. To strike; to assault: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Assault'; March 15, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Perhaps a perversion of slug, v., 1.—6. Hence, to kill, to murder: June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; slightly ob.—7. The sense 'to close' (e.g., a club, an amusement stand or booth) is fair-ground, carnival, circus s. of C. 20. The New York Herald Tribune, Feb. 17, 1937, Barry Buchanan. Ex sense 2.

slough-beater. A house-burglar (?): 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night Hawk (p. 271); extant—but not much used. Cf. slough worker.

slough in. A variant (Ersine, 1933) of:—

slough up. To arrest; to lock up (in prison): tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (p. 273); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, 'It was the crooked municipal copper that kep' me from gettin' sloughed up'; 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. slough, v., 2, and slour up.

slough work; also slow work. 'Slow work—daylight house robbery during absence of the family (as distinguished from prowling),' Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 1927; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who does not restrict it to daylight; extant. Perhaps a back-formation ex:—

slough worker. A burglar specializing in country-houses: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, p. 27; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (. . . any houses); 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, as slow w.; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1934, Rose, 'One who robs apartments in the day-time'; by 1935, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946).

sloughed; sloughed up. Arrested; imprisoned. See slough, v., and slough up; cf. slowed.

sloughing, n. Thieving from (rich) country-houses; any sort of very profitable burglary: 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 'He did the best sloughing of the season, sometimes making three stations in one night'; extant. Cf. slough worker.

slour. 'To lock, secure, or fasten': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; 1890, B & L; † by 1903 (F & H). Perhaps ex dial. slore, to grasp, hold fast, as B & L propose.—2. Hence, to button: 1812, J. H. Vaux (by implication); 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H (by implication); 1890, B & L; † by 1903 (F & H).

slour up. 'To button up; as one's coat, pocket, etc': 1812, J. H. Vaux. See slour.

sloured; sloured up. 'Slour'd, or Slour'd up, locked, fastened, buttoned, &c.': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'No slour'd hoxter my snipes could stay'; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; extant. See slour.

sloush. See slosh.

slow bit. A short sentence of imprisonment: 1935, Hargan; extant. See bit, n.

slow mug, 'a stupid fellow' (Leverage, 1925): s., orig. low; not c.

Slow Town. Detroit: mostly tramps': c. of ca. 1890-1910, then s. Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901. 'Dead' to tramps.—2. Philadelphia: 1925, Leverage; extant.

slow work, etc. See slough work, etc.

slowed. Locked up—i.e., in prison: 1859, H; 1863, The Story of a Lancashire Thief; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1909, C. G. Chrysler (U.S.A.); then see slough, v., 2. A corruption of sloured, or imm. ex slough, v., 2, perhaps with a pun on S.E. slowed up, retarded.

slues. 'Grafters in general; country police officials,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Origin obscure. Possibly ex:—2. 'Very bad feet', Leverage, 1925; extant. The word slue may be the n. of slue or slew, to twist or move or be moved obliquely.

slug, n. As a twenty-five-dollar piece, it is s.—2. As the n. corresponding to sense 1 of the v., it is low s.—3. A drink of whiskey: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1930, s. It carries a punch ('packs a wallop'): cf. Eng. wallop, beer.—4. (In pl. only.) 'Slugs, n. pl., The police,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex their use of clubs or batons: cf. sense 8.—5. 'Slug was an adept pocket-picker. He could slug and "roll" or rob a drunkard in record time. Hence his nickname,' Jim Tully, Circus Parade, 1928; extant.—6. A nickel (five-cent piece): 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; extant.—7. As a dollar; esp. a silver dollar (Flynn's, Oct. 26, 1929, Lawrence M. Maynard, 'Shakedown Artists', and Convict, 1934), it is perhaps low s. rather than c.: cf. the synonymous low s. sense ('a dollar') of smacker.—8. A 'blackjack', a policeman's truncheon: 1929, Givens; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Proleptic: cf. sense 4.

slug, v., 'to hit hard, to beat, to "beat up"', is s. (orig. low), not c., even in 'His [the bruiser's] prison talk is generally of all the people he has "slugged"' slug-up. An unfair trick or scheme in which someone is victimized; a 'frame-up'; Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942 and 1945. Cf. Australian s. slugged, (of a person) 'charged an excessive price'.

(beaten), from "coppers" (policemen) to reputed pugilists, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, 1885.—2. Hence, v.i., to fight: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, p. 257, 'Stick and Slug. Keep together and fight'; by 1930, low s.

slugfest. A brutal bully; a killer: 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; extant. Ex s. slugfest, 'a free-for-all; a boxing tournament'.

sluice one's bolt, 'to drink', may be c., or it may be low s.: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. cxxxii; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1890 (B & L) it was certainly low s. Cf. the synonymous s. sluice one's ivories.

sluice one's gob, to 'take a hearty drink' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), is low s.—not c. sluicery, 'a gin shop' (J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, 1821), is low s.—ex the preceding term.

sluicing, 'a drinking bout', is not c., but s.—orig., low s.—2. "Sluicing" in the argot indicates a curious method of livelihood. In public wash-places, where men strip off their coats to wash their hands for luncheon, there are fine pickings to be had by a man with quick fingers and a knowledge of human nature, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1924; extant. Where men sluice or have a wash.

slum, n. A trick or plan employed in the underworld; an illicit or an illegal means of livelihood: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see racket and lodging-slum); 1829, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, V, 'It will be my ingenuity that will settle the slum and put the bustle in our clyes'; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1920. Perhaps ex sense 1 of the v.—2. Hence, trickery; skill: 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I, 'Mr Merryman was a good tumbler, full of slum, and could fight a bit'; 1890, B & L (by implication); ob. by 1900; † by 1910.—3. A room: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Jon Bee, 'We may have "the little slum"; . . . "a dirty slum" . . . ; "the back slum", and "a slum in front"; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A low drinking-place'; 1890, B & L; app. † by 1905. If, as seems prob., it is independent of senses 1-2, 4-5, then it may, as Bee suggests, be—only just possibly—'derived from slumber, to sleep'.—4. 'The gipsy language, or cant, is slum': 1823, Jon Bee; † by 1890. Prob. ex sense 2; cf.:—5. 'Loose, ridiculous talk' (Bee); blarney: 1823, Jon Bee; 1823, Egan's Grose ('gammon'); 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H ('gammon'); 1864, H, 3rd ed. ('A discreditable inuendo' [sic]); 1890, B & L; † by 1910.—6. A faked document, a false declaration; a begging letter—esp. one carried by a 'lurker' (q.v.): 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; in Mayhew, 1851, street-vendors' s. for a faked-news sheet, and also beggars' c. for a begging letter; 1859, H, 'A letter'; 1874, H, classifies the nuance 'a letter' as prison c.; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; by 1910, it was †. Ex sense 1.—7. 'A package of bank-bills': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1910.—8. A chest: 1860, H, 2nd ed., 'He shook a slum of slops', i.e. stole a chest of tea; 1890, B & L; † by 1910. Prob. ex sense 3: a large chest resembles a tiny room.—9. (Ex sense 3.) A door: U.S.A.: 1871, State Prison Life (S. Indiana); † by 1920.—10. Imitation jewellery; cheap jewellery: U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage, who simply says 'jewelry'; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 'Mixed jewelry'; by 1929 (The Saturday Evening Post, Oct. 19, 'Alagazam') it was, predominantly, pitchmen's s. Cf. senses 2, 6.—11. 'Each day he jumbled all the mixable portions of the food together, and, in a big tin wash-boiler, he stewed up quite a palatable mess, which we called "slum" or "slumgullion" or, more profanely, "son-of-a-b—"', Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life, 1922: Am. tramps', often generic for 'food': C. 20: 1908 (O.E.D.); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, A Scholar Tramp; Feb. 14, 1925, Flynn's, 'The ingredients of the "slum" (stew)'; 1931, Stiff, 'An uninviting stew'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; extant. Short for (low) s. slumgullion, 'a mess of food'.—12. Hence (?), drugs of any kind, whether collectively or particularly: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob.

slum, v. To break into burglariously: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'To slum the Ken, alias to break into the House'; 1734, Select Trials, from 1720 to 1724, copied in John Villette, The Annals of Newgate, 1776, 'We slum a ken when all is boman'; app. † by 1830. Cf. dial. sloum (occ. slum), 'to move slowly and silently; to move furtively' (E.D.D.).—2. See slumming, 1. Also in other tenses; e.g., in G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxiii, 'Tim's shaler had slummed on him a sprat and an alderman'; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L, 'to hide as if in a slum or dark alley, pass counterfeit coin, pass to a confederate'; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.), 'To pass an object) to another'; extant.—3. To cheat, to defraud: 1859, H, 'To cheat on the sly'; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; by 1910, ob.; by 1920, †. Cf. sense 2 of the v. and senses 1 and 6 of the n.—4. Often as vbl n.: 'Slumming. Stealing packages of bank-bills': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Cf. slum, n., 7.—5. To drink (liquor): U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Kingdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Drink' (p. 403). A suspect sense.—6. To steal jewellery: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 10 of the n.—7. 'To use cocaine or morphine,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: slightly ob. Cf. sense 12 of the n.—8. To hide: C. 20. Jules Manchon, 1923. Cf. sense 3.

slum, cough. See cough slum.

slum, fake the. To write a begging letter or a false declaration: prob. since ca. 1840: 1890, B & L, who give it the wider sense, 'to do the trick', to effect a swindle; 1903, F & H (as in B & L); ob. by 1910; † by 1920. See slum, n., 6.

slum, up to. Not to be humbugged: ca. 1810-70, then low s. Egan's Grose, 1823; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.). See slum, n., 1 and 2.—2. Hence, 'proficient in roguery, capable of committing a theft successfully': 1859, H; 1890, B & L; by 1900, low s. See slum, n., 1.

slum(-)dump. A jewellery store (a jeweller's shop): 1925, Leverage; extant. See slum, n., 10, and dump, n., 3.—2. An opium den; a haunt of cocaine- or morphine-users: 1925, Leverage; extant. See slum, n., 12, and dump, n., 5.

slum hustler. 'One who sells cheap jewelry or [—derivatively—] other articles under the representation that they are stolen,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: since the 1920's. See slum, n., 12, and hustler, 4.

slum-hustling. The vbl n. of the preceding. See also hustle, v., 4.

slum-joint. A jewellery store: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Convict; extant. Cf. slum dump, q.v. See slum, n., 12, and joint, n., 10 and 12.

slum of slops. Hops (in liquor): Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

slum-scribbler. A writer of begging letters or one who employs his penmanship illicitly: 1861, Mayhew; † by 1910. See slum, n., 6.

slum(-)skirt. A woman wearing much jewellery: 1925, Leverage; extant. See slum, n., 10; cf. slummy.

slumber party. (A collective drugging with) morphine: 1934, Rose; extant.

slummery. The speech of gypsies and/or the underworld: 1823, Jon Bee; † by 1900. An elaboration of slum, n., 4.

slumming, vbl n. 'Passing bad money': 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1860, H, 2nd ed.; † by 1910. Cf. slum, n., 7 and 10, and v., 2.—2. 'Concealment [of an offence], or shirking public duty by screening offenders': 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; app. † by 1900.—3. (Ex sense 1.) 'The operation of rubbing counterfeit coin with a black composition, to give it the appearance of having been some time in circulation': counterfeit coiners: 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 2nd ed., citing The Times, April 2, 1859; April 5, 1859, Sessions Paper, 'Rubbing counterfeit coin between finger and thumb, what they call slumming it, to give new coin a black appearance like old coin'; 1862, Mayhew, London Labour, IV; Jan. 1869, Sessions Papers; Sept. 21, 1869, Sessions, 'The usual process of slumming with lamp black and grease'; † by 1910.—4. See slum, v., 4.

slummy. Wearing much—esp., overmuch—jewellery: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex slum, n., 10.

slur, n., that method of cheating at dice whereby one so slides or slips the die from the box that it does not turn over: ca. 1630–1800. This, despite B.E.'s classification thereof as c., is, by his day, rather j. than c., though it may orig. have been c.

slur, v. To cast a die so that it does not turn: 1594, Nashe (O.E.D.); 1674, Cotton, The Compleat Gamester, 'Slurring . . . taking up your Dice as you will have them advantageously lie in your hand, placing the one on top the other, not caring if the uppermost run a Mill-stone (as they use to say) if the undermost run without turning, and therefore a smooth-table is altogether requisite for this purpose'. Prob. orig. gamesters' c., it must have > j. by 1700 at the very latest.

slurring is the vbl n. form of slur, v.; 1674, Cotton (quot'n at stabbing).

slush. Counterfeit paper money: 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 'The biggest printer of slush in the world . . . Experts get all mixed up when they see young Legge's notes'; 1925, Edgar Wallace, A King by Night; 1927, Edgar Wallace, The Squeaker; 1933, David Hume, Crime Unlimited; 1934, Axel Brace, School for Scoundrels; 1935, David Hume, Dangerous Mr Dell; 1942, David Hume, Destiny Is My Name; 1943, Black; extant. As good to bad money, so slush to profitable soil.—

2. Tea: tramps': late C. 19–20. Partridge, 1938. Pejorative: cf. coll. slops, '(weak) tea'.

slush fund. Bribery fund: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Ex sense 1 of prec. entry.

slush(-)moll; slush(-)mug. A woman, a man, that is nervous and emotional and sentimental: c. of ca. 1910–30, then (low) s. Leverage, 1925. Slush, 'excessive sentiment' (s.), + moll, n., 1, or mug, n., 6.

slush up, v.i. 'To have a drink', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; slightly ob. Cf. 'to lush', and 'to slop up'.

slusher. A printer of, a dealer in, counterfeit paper-money: 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1929, Edgar Wallace, The Black; extant. Ex slush.

sluter, 'butter', is Northern s., not c.

sly. Contraband: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900. Ex S.E. sly, furtive.

sly, upon the, is stated in Egan's Grose, 1823, to be c.; it may orig. have been s. or coll., but it certainly was never c. smabbed or snabbed. Seized, captured, arrested: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies considered, 'Smable [sic], taken'; 1785, Grose, 'Smabbed, or snabbed, killed in battle'; † by 1890. Cf. snaffle, v., 1 and 2; smabble is a phonetic variation of snabble, which is an alternative form of snaffle.

smack, n. An oath; esp. a false oath, a perjury: 1732, report of the trial of Thomas Beck for robberies (in John Villet, The Annals of Newgate, 1776), 'If a smack will do you any good, it is at your service'; † by 1870. Perhaps suggested by rap, n. and v.—2. 'A part, share', says Andrewes, 1809: but isn't this an error for snack? Cf. the evidence at snack the bit.—3. A dollar: Am. tramps': 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; June 30, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant. Short for s. smacker, 'a dollar'.—4. 'A conviction and commitment to prison,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Cf. the v., 3.—5. 'A racket involving fraud in matching coins,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; also the smack touch (ibid.). The coins being 'smacks'—see sense 3.

smack, v. To swear (on oath): May 1760, Sessions Papers, 'She said, if I would not go and smack it along with her before my Lord Mayor, she would take my life away'; app. † by 1900. From smacking (the Book), kissing (the Bible).—2. To share: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open, 'Smack the bit, share the booty': but is not this an error, or a misprint, for snack (the bit)? Possibly, however, it is a semantic variant of whack, v., for Matsell (U.S.A.), 1859, has '“Smack the swag”, share the spoil'; certainly † by 1900.—3. To send (a person) to prison: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. jolt, v.

smack calf's (or calves') skin. See calf's skin, smack.

smack in the eye. A pie: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

smack the lit, 'to divide the loot': R. Burton, Vikram and Vampire, 1870. A 'Burton' leg-pull.

smack touch, the. See smack, n., 5.

smacker. A long term in prison: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex smack, v., 3.—2. The sense 'dollar; esp. a silver dollar' is s.—orig., low s.—

not c. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.)—3. A bank- or currency-note: Sept. 11, 1926, Flynn's, 'The five hundred dollar smacker will be found on me . . . And yet they didn't find this and the two other five hundred dollar smackers I had on me'; extant. Cf. smack, n., 3. smacking, adj. Given to professional perjury; practising it: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter; app. † by 1890. Ex smacking the Bible, with one's lips, in taking an oath.

smacking cove. A coachman: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1887 (Baumann). Cf. rattling cove; prob. ex the noise of his whip on the horses' backs.

smaff, n. and v.; smaffy. A betrayal, to betray; (smaffy) treacherous: 1925, Leverage; extant. Via Yiddish ex Ger. verrathen.

small, n.; small-boy. Petty larceny, a petty theft; a petty thief: 1925, Leverage; extant. Comparatively.

small-coal man. In a trial held in Feb. 1731–2, a malefactor says, 'We call a parson a small-coal man' (a vendor of charcoal or of slack), 'because their habits are so much alike', i.e. their clothes are black,—this report being included in John Vilette's The Annals of Newgate, Vol. II, 1776.

small-gang, v. To mob (a person): 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'They "small-ganged" me; and afterwards, I went seven days to prison because others tore my clothes'; 1888, J. Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; by 1900, low s.

small one. A (counterfeit) seven-shilling piece: counterfeiters': Oct. 1800, Sessions Papers, p. 624, 'He asked me if I wanted any more—Q. Any more what? A. Bad gold; I told him to go and fetch three wholes, that is guineas; three halves, that is, half-guineas; and three small ones, which were seven-shilling pieces'; † by 1860. The seven-shilling piece was the smallest gold coin of the period.

small pease. See beans.

small snow. See snow, small.

small white. See large white.

small(-)work. Petty larceny; a 'career' therein: 1925, Leverage; extant. See small, n.

smart and simple. A dimple: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

smart blunt. Forfeit money: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900. Lit., money that smarts, makes one smart (feel pain).

smarten up. To explain (a plan) in detail; to explain a plan carefully and in detail to (a person): since ca. 1918. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. sharpen up.

smash, n. 'Bad coin' (counterfeit coin): 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1925, Leverage; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1939, D. Hume, Death before Honour; extant. Prob. ex smash, v., 3.—2. Hence, silver coins (collectively): 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'McGuire got L.7 [£7] of smash; I got a L.10 banknote'; 1890, B & L, 'loose coin or change'; by 1900, it had >, or merged with, rhyming s. smash, 'cash'—in the nuance 'loose money; change' (common among pitchmen: Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934), a sense it has, since ca. 1910, borne among Australian confidence men smash, v. B.E., 1698, 'Smash, c. to kick down stairs. The Chubbs toute the Blosses, they Smash, and make them Brush, c. the Sharpers catch their Mistresses at the Tavern, making merry without them, Kick them down Stairs, and force them to rub off'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (to smite, or kick, downstairs); 1786, Sessions Papers; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1860.—2. To knock senseless; hence, to kill by knocking senseless: 1725, A Canting Dict.; † by 1830.—3. To pass counterfeit money: 1796, implied in smasher; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Smashing queer screens . . . uttering forged bank notes'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1859, H; 1862, Female Life in Prison; 1878 (Sept.), Sessions Papers; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1925, Leverage; 1937, David Hume, Halfway to Horror; extant. 'Literally to break coin by changing it' (B & L).—4. (Ex sense 3.) 'To smash a guinea, note, or other money, is in a common sense'—opp. to sense 3—'to procure, or give, change for it': 1809, John Mackcoul, Abuses of Justice, 'By negotiating stolen bills, called smashing thick paper'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1903 (F & H) it was low s.—5. Hence, to 'fence' (plate or pewter): U.S.A.: 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York; † by 1920.—6. To commit (a person) for trial; mostly in passive: 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life, 'Smashed . . . Committed for trial'; ob. To ruin his expectations.—7. To burgle (a place): 1926, Edgar Wallace, The Black, 'My scheme for smashing the Third National'; extant. Cf. break (into).—8. (Ex sense 3.) 'Smashing. Changing Bank of England notes that have been stolen,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941: C. 20.

(Baker, 1945).—3. Loosely and prob. incorrectly, something valuable: 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford.—4. Tobacco: convicts': 1877 (see sling the smash); 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob. Perhaps ex sense 3 of the v.—5. A smash-and-grab raid: 1925, Netley Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook; 1936, George Ingram, The Muffled Man; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'Some decent furs in that window. Almost worth doing a smash there some day'; 1938, Sharpe (quot'n at blag, n.); extant. Cf. smash, v., 7.

smash, sling the. See sling the smash.

smash a load. To rid oneself of, to distribute, twenty counterfeit coins: C. 20. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. See smash, v., 3, and load.

smash artist. A motor bandit engaged in smash-and-grab: since ca. 1930. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938; Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943.

smash-feeder. A silver spoon: 1839, Brandon; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1860, H, 2nd ed., 'A Britannia metal spoon,—the best imitation shillings are made from this metal'; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob. Cf. smash, n., 2, and see feeder.

smash the tea-pot. See tea-pot, smash the.

smash thick paper. See smash, v., 4.

smash up. To break furniture and/or to rave and act violently: convicts': C. 20. Lilliput, Nov. 1943 (article by 'Lemuel Gulliver'), 'He told George that Blondie was living with . . . the bookie. That did it. As soon as George got inside smasher. 'These shillings do not cost the makers above one-halfpenny each: they are sold very low to the smashers or utterers who pass them, where they can, at the full nominal value': 1796, Patrick Colquhoun, The Police of the Metropolis; 1797, Potter, 'A passer of counterfeit coin'; Sept. 1803, Sessions Papers; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Bee, 'Smashers—passers of bad money were so called, during the pest of the old smooth coin. The term was soon extended to bad notes of the Bank of England; and their occupation was called "smashing"': 1827, Sessions Papers; 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London, where the term is applied also to one who pretends that an innocent person has given him counterfeit money and 'unblushing insists upon your exchanging his base stuff for good money'; 1839, W. H. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime, where it is remarked that it is often the 'smasher' who puts the finishing touches to the coins; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1850, T. Beames, The Rookeries of London; 1851, Mayhew; 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1857, Borrow; 1858, Dickens; 1859, H; 1869, J. Greenwood; 1876, Farley (U.S.A.); 1878, J. McGovan, Brought to Bay; 1881, Prison Life and Prison Poetry; 1887, Baumann; 1890, Clarkson & Richardson, The Rogue's Gallery; 1890, B & L, 'There is a well-known proverb, "Once a smasher always a smasher"'; 1891, Anon., Thirty Years in St Giles; 1895, Caminada; 1903, F & H; 1904, Ex-Inspector Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals, 'I had been out all day hunting a gang of coiners, or "smashers", as they are known to the police',—so that, from early C. 20, the term can no longer be classified as c. Ex smash, v., 3.—2. A money-changer: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. Ex smash, v., 4.—3. Erroneously, I think, a coiner of counterfeit: 1903, E. A. Carr, 'Criminal London', in Living London, Vol. III.—4. (Ex sense 1.) Counterfeit money (coin or paper): 1903, F & H; rare and by 1930, †.—5. A receiver of stolen property: 1929 (O.E.D.); 1933, Charles E. Leach; extant. Cf. smash, v., 5, and :—6. (Ex 1.) A negotiator of forged cheques: C. 20. Black, 1943.

[the prison] he "smashed up", usual thing.' Short for smash things up.

smasher, caddee. See caddee.

smasher of thick paper. See thick paper.

smashing, n. Passing counterfeit money: April 1795, Sessions Papers (p. 627); Jan. 1799, The Monthly Magazine; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'The cove was fined in the steel for smashing; the fellow was ordered to be imprisoned in the house of correction for uttering base coin'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1828 (see smasher); 1836, Sessions Papers; Sept. 13, 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1858, Augustus Mayhew; 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1879, Thor Fredur; 1884, J. Greenwood, The Little Ragamuffins; 1891, Anon., A River of Mercy; 1895, Arthur Griffiths; 1898, A. Binstead, A Pink 'Un and a Pelican; by 1910, at latest, no longer c. Ex smash, v., 3.—2. "Smashing" . . . consists of breaking a jeweller's shop-window, seizing certain articles, usually previously decided upon, and then bolting . . . The "smash" is most carefully organized, timed, and rehearsed,' Netley Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook, 1925; extant.

smashing, adj. Given to, or engaged in, passing counterfeit money: since ca. 1795. Ex smash, v., 3; whence also :—2. Counterfeit: 1857, George Borrow; ob.

smashing cove. Defined in Sinks of London Laid Open, 1848, as a housebreaker, but is it not an utterer of counterfeit money?

smear, n., 'a house-painter, a plasterer', is not c., but s. of C. 18. A New Canting Dict., 1725.—2. A murder: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1945. Prob. ex sense 3 of the v.

smear, v. To take finger-prints: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the mess the process makes of one's finger-tips.—2. To bribe (a person): June 20, 1931, Flynn's, Frederick Nebel, 'The cops were smeared to let them alone'; 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. paint.—3. To kill or murder (someone): Australian: since ca. 1918. M & B, 1944. Prob. coined by ex-service crooks, who had seen their fellow-soldiers reduced to a smear.

smear and smudge. A judge: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

smear gelt. A bribe: 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), as smear gilt; † by 1887 (Baumann, Londonismen),—as B & L, 1890, repeat. For origin, see gelt and cf. daub, v.

smeck. Narcotics in gen.: drug addicts': since ca. 1920. Donald Barr Chidsey, 'The Black Stuff', in Flynn's, March 18, 1939; 1942, BVB. Ex synonymous schmecken, q.v.; cf.—

smecker. A drug addict: drug traffic: since the 1920's. BVB. Ger. Schmecker, 'taster; gourmet'.

smeer. See smear.

smeesh. See smish.

smell, n. See smelt, n., 1, ref. of 1848.

smell, v. 'Then they [common thieves] go carefully to work in "smelling", i.e., examining the rooms whilst the inmates are asleep': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; slightly ob. They 'smell around' like an animal.

smell a mice. 'To suspect a design [though it is] covered up plausibly': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; † by 1910. Facetiously on S.E. smell a rat.

smell trap. See trap, smell.

smeller. 'Smeller, a garden, not Smelling cheate, for thats a Nosegay,' Rowlands, 1610 (Martin Mark-All); app. † by 1700. That which gives off smells or scents.—2. A nose: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; the term >, ca. 1750, s., which it has remained (except, perhaps, in U.S.A.: witness No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904); in C. 20, it is thought to be rather low. That with which one smells.—3. Hence, a blow, a punch, on the nose: classified by 'Ducange Anglicus', 1857, as c., but prob. never lower than low s.—4. A detective: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sniffing squad and esp. smell, v.

smelling cheat. 'A Smelling cheate, signifies a Nose'; 1688, Holme; app. † by 1720. Lit., smelling thing—the organ with which one smells.—2. 'A smelling cheate, a garden or orchard,' Harman, 1566; 1608–9, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie' (Lanthorne and Candle-light); in 1610, Rowlands (see sense 3); 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles ('Garden'); 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1830. Lit., a thing that gives off a (sweet) smell.—3. A nosegay: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All (see quot'n at smeller); 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.;

1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrews; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A bouquet'; † by 1870. Semantically, cf. sense 2.

smelt, n. A half-guinea: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia; 1698, B.E., 'Tip me a Smelt, c. Prithee lend me half a Guinea'; 1745, The History of Clubs, 'A Begging let's go for the Smelts and the Megs'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul; 1848, Sinks of London, where it is misprinted smell; 1890, B & L; by 1900, †. Perhaps cf. Dutch s. smelt, 'tin', and English s. tin, 'coin, money', or Ger. Schmelz, 'smalt' (Dutch smalt), hence 'radiance'.—2. Hence, a half-eagle, i.e., a coin of five dollars: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; app. † by 1920.—3. 'Dealing in stolen gold and silver,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. Perhaps ex:— smelt, v. 'To deal in stolen gold or silver, or both,' Leverage, 1925: since ca. 1910. The dealer melts it down.

smelts, go westward for. (Of harlots and loose women) to seek for the moneyed gullible: 1607, Dekker & Webster, Westward Hoe. The phrase, which flourished ca. 1600–40, may have been c.; it plays on S.E. smelt, 'a simpleton'; itself was played-on by Dekker when, in The Belman of London, 1608, he wrote, 'Then have we Anglers'—a class of criminals—but they seldome catch fish, till they go up Westward for Flounders'.

smice. To abscond; to decamp: Australian confidence tricksters—C. 20. Baker, 1945. Either ex 'smear nicely'—to settle a difficult situation by taking the easy (nice) way out; or by a perversion of shice, v.

smig. A mistress (?): 1925, N. Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook, 'That smig o' yours ain't worth no risks, you tike a tip from me'; extant. Origin?

smiggins. In 1819, J. H. Vaux (Memoirs), speaking of convicts on the hulks ca. 1809, says: 'For supper, they have, on banyan days, burgoo . . .; and on meat days, the water in which the beef was boiled, is thickened with barley, and forms a mess called "Smiggins", of a more detestable nature than either of the two former [boiled barley; burgoo]'; 1827, Peter Cunningham, Two Years in New South Wales, defines it as 'cold-meat hash'; 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London, II, i; 1839, Brandon; 1859, H., 'Soup served to convicts on board the hulks'; 'An old Newgate term, which was frequently used by road-gangers [from among the convicts in Australia] to describe their ration of rice or maize when it was mixed with the water in which their meat-ration had been boiled', Price Warung, Tales of the Old Regime (in Australia), 1897; † by 1890 (B & L). Perhaps ex a warder named Higgins.

smile, v. To drink: 1859, Matsell; by 1880, it was s. The n. smile, 'a drink of liquor', was always s. One smiles (or one should) as one drinks liquor.

smiler. A bumper (glass of liquor): 1859, Matsell; by 1880, s. Ex smile.

smilto. A woman: ca. 1860–1910. Recorded in C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, in the glossary at p. 320. Origin? Perhaps ex dial. smilt, a smelt (the small fish).

smirk. 'A superficial fellow': 1859, Matsell; † by 1900. He smirks on every occasion.

smish. A shirt: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; by 1794, current in U.S.A. (witness Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807); 1797, Potter, 'Mish, or smeesh, a shirt, or shift'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1851, Mayhew (smeesh); 1859, H; app. † by 1887 (Baumann; cf. B & L, 1890). Either orig. an error (promptly adopted) for, or a disguised or perverted form of, mish, perhaps on S.E. smock. Possibly, however, it was derived direct ex commission—on the analogy of smock.

smiter. An arm: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); app. † by 1887 (Baumann). Cf. rammer.

smith. 'To plan crooked work,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. finger smith.

smoak. See smoke, n. and v.

smoaking. See smoke, v.

smoaking cove. See smoking cove.

smoaky. See smoky.

smobble, running. See running smobble.

smocks. Beggars: 1925, Leverage; extant. Why? Prob. a Yiddish word.

smoke, n. 'Humbug; any thing said to conceal the true sentiment of the talker': 1859, Matsell; by 1900, no longer c. Cf. S.E. smoke screen.—2. Suspicion; an alarm; a hue-and-cry: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Plant me for a few moons till the smoke rolls away . . . Hide me for a few months until the affair is forgotten'; ob. Semantics: a smoke-cloud of suspicion.—3. A Negro: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1929, Jack Callahan, who (Man's Grim Justice) implies that it was current early in the century; 1933, Ersine; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; 1940, Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely; by 1945, low s. Cf. dinge.—4. A bout of opium-smoking: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (see smoker); 1944 (see smoke, in the); extant.—5. "'Smoke" . . . the denatured alcohol the drug-gist sells,' A. E. Ullman, 'Beggarmen' in Flynn's, April 14, 1928: beggars' and tramps': 1930, Lennox Kerr, Backdoor Guest; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'Canned heat, dehorn'; after 1934, mainly historical. Ex the early C. 20 s. sense, 'whiskey': The D.A.E. aptly compares Cape smoke, 'brandy'.

smoke, v. In 'figging law' (pickpocketry), to discover, espy (the prospective victim): 1591, Robert Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 'Spying of him, Smoaking'; 1592, Greene, A Disputation. 'Wee dissemble in show, we goe so neat in apparrell, so orderly in outward appearance . . . that wee are hardly smoakt, versing upon all men with kinde courtesies and faire wordes', i.e., we are scarcely suspected. The former sense is wholly c., of ca. 1585–1620; the latter, from ca. 1590, may have begun as c. and, even in 1698, was classified as c. by B.E., but prob. it had > s. by 1620, S.E. by 1700. Semantically: to detect by the smell of smoke; cf. S.E. smell, to detect.—2. 'To cover the intent': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; by 1900, †. Cf. the n.—3. To shoot (a person): U.S.A.: 1928, Chicago May; Oct. 19, 1929, Flynn's, Lawrance M. Maynard; 1929, Givens (to fire a gun); July 26, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1935, David Lamson, 'Smokin' a rod'; May 1942, Flynn's, Richard Sale; extant. Cf.—perhaps short for—smoke off.

—4. 'Smoking my joint—looking for me at my lodgings,' R. Chadwick, Liberty, Aug. 2, 1930: U.S.A.: 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant. Cf. S.E. 'to smoke (a person) out'.—5. To decamp; to go into hiding: Australian: since ca. 1918. Baker, 1942. Cf. in smoke, q.v., and the s. saying, 'Watch my smoke!'

smoke, go into. To go into hiding: Australian: C. 20. Partridge, 1938. Ex bush-fires?

smoke, in. See in smoke.

smoke, in the. Engaged in a bout of—or esp., an addict of—opium-smoking: (nautical) drug addicts': since ca. 1920. Otis Ferguson in American Speech, April 1944. See smoke, n., 4.

Smoke, the. London: rural s. (—1864) that, ca. 1870, > also tramps' c.—perhaps it would be more accurate to say, tramps' s.; Baumann (Londonismen, 1887) classifies it as beggars' c.; but it was certainly not c. after ca. 1900. Cf. darky, n., 4.

smoke-box. A machine-gun: 1927, Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster; extant. On the analogy of smoke wagon.

smoke house. A variant of smoke joint, 2: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant.

smoke iron. A firearm, esp., a revolver: 1928, Chicago May; 1934, Convict; slightly ob. Cf. smoke box.

smoke joint. A saloon where 'smoke', or denatured alcohol, is sold: since ca. 1922: 1931, Stiff; 1935, Hargan; 1937, Godfrey Irwin (letter of Sept. 21), 'Slang as well; was used in many a newspaper article during prohibition (1920–33) for the resorts along the Bowery and the lower waterfront of New York City'. I.e., smoke, n., 5 + joint, n., 6.—2. In Britain, the term has, since perhaps as early as 1910, meant: An opium-smoking den. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938.

smoke-mobile is a journalistic variation (Leverage, 1925) of smoke wagon.

smoke off. To kill by shooting: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'Git inside an' stay there or I'll smoke the both of youse off'; extant. Cf. smoke out and smoke wagon; perhaps short for the latter.

smoke out. 'To shoot until victim flees,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant.

smoke pole. A pistol, a revolver: since middle 1920's. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. smoke stick and also, less nearly, smoke wagon.

smoke(-)stick. A revolver: Jan. 22, 1927, Flynn's, 'I ups and prods him and says, "Hand it over, er this smokestick'll do the talking"' (Roy W. Hinds, 'The Double Crosser'); slightly ob. Not improbably ex Australian soldiers' s. (1914–18) smoke-stick, 'a Service rifle'.

smoke the habit off, 'to smoke opium in order to allay withdrawal distress' (BVB, 1942): not c., but coll.

smoke-up. 'Well, I'm off to the joint to smoke-up, so-so . . . And now I'm off to the opium den to smoke some opium. Goodby,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; July 4, 1925, Flynn's, 'He wants me to "smoke up"'; extant.—2. To shoot (a person); esp., to shoot dead: since ca. 1925. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. smoke, v., 3, and smoke off.

smoke wagon. A revolver: 1891, James Maitland, The American Slang Dict., 'The word is used by the negroes of the Chicago levee'; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, where no such restriction is made; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer ('a gun'); Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; Dec. 8, 1928, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; April 26, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Stiff, 'Rarely carried by hobos'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; 1935, Crump & Newton, Our Police; extant. Cf. :—

smoke-zieher. A gunman: 1925, Leverage; extant—but, by 1942, ob. Cf. smoke wagon; zieher is the agential n. of Ger. ziehen, to 'tote'.

smoked lamp. A black eye: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Bunger'; extant. Soot equated to a dark bruise.

smoker. An opium-smoker: late C. 19–20. Jack Black, 1920, You Can't Win, 'Curiosity was my only excuse for my first "smoke"'. It made me very sick, and although I became a "smoker" after, it was years before I touched the pipe again'; 1931, IA; et al. A euphemistic particularization of smoker rather than a shortening of opium-smoker.—2. 'The deadly rat-tat-tat of a fast smoker—a Tommy gun,' Colonel Givens in Flynn's, April 16, 1932; extant.

smokey. An opium addict: since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942. Cf. pipe-hitter and puff, 4.

smoking. See smoke, v.

smoking (or smoaking) cove. A coachman: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, in the smoaking form; app. † by 1820. Because he makes the coach-horses smoke or steam.

smoking iron. A revolver: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Cf. smoke pole and smoke stick.

smokkel the peace. To infringe the law: S. Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Afrikaans smokkel, 'to smuggle; to "fix" or "frame"'—ex Dutch smokkel, 'smuggling'.

smokkelhuis is the Afrikaans equivalent of S. African shebeen: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Cf. prec.; huis, 'house' (as in Dutch). Also cf. :—

smokkelsaak. A put-up job (by a policeman against a crook): South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Cf. prec.; saak, 'business; case' (ex Dutch zaak).

smoky, n. See smokey.

smoky, adj. The sense 'jealous' (ca. 1680–1740) may have been c., for both Thomas Shadwell (1688, The Squire of Alsatia) and B.E. (1698) classify it as c.; but since the sense 'suspicious' is certainly S.E., so prob. is the other.

smoky seat. The electric chair: 1927, Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster, 'I was afraid to think of them going to the smoky seat while I was living on the fat of the land'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. hot squat.

Smon. See Simon.

smooch. See smouch, v.

smooth and coarse. A horse: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

smooth and rough. On credit: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1920. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on 'on the cuff'.

smooth chinner. A silver-tongue; a plausible fellow; a fluent and convincing talker: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne, p. 29: by 1900, s.; perhaps always s. Cf. chin, n., 2, and chin, v.

smooth white. A bad shilling: 1818, The London Guide (a counterfeit shilling); 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London (any shilling); app. † by 1900. See white, n., 2.

smoother. A stick-at-nothing henchman; an exceptionally able gangster: Dec. 4, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; extant. Ex his smooth technique.

smop. To beg: 1925, Leverage; rather ob. Prob. ex some Yiddish word.

smother, n. 'An overcoat used by pickpockets when operating' (Brown): pickpockets': prob. since ca. 1910: 1933, Charles E. Leach; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; 1943, Black. By 1934, it was also showmen's and cheapjacks' s., as in Philip Allingham, Cheapjack ('Smother—A fur coat or overcoat'). Perhaps imm. ex:—

smother, v. To cover the operations of (a confederate pickpocket): pickpockets': C. 20: 1931, Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Book; 1932, Nelson Baylis (New Zealand); 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; 1942, Baker (Australia). Cf. prec.

smother, put a. 'I believe they call it putting a smother. When a crowd of men deliberately cover up some one man's activities by attracting attention to themselves,' Jim Phelan, Murder by Numbers, 1941: since ca. 1920.

smouch, n., 'dried leaves of the ash tree, used by the smugglers for adulterating the black, or bohea teas,' Grose, 1785, lies on the borderline between c. and s.; app. † by 1850.

smouch, v. To steal: 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms—but by this date, app., it was s. Prob. ex low s. smouch (or smooch), a cheat.

smouch-pot. A fence's or thieves' melting-pot for stolen gold and silver ware: 1786, Sessions Papers, 7th Session, p. 1120, 'My Lord, they are such sort of people, they will never bring a thing to light; they go into the smouch pot'; app. † by 1900. Cf. smouch, v.

smous, 'a Jew', is not, as classified by B & L, a c. term, but s.

smudge, n. A small camp-fire: tramps': C. 20: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Feb. 1) it was gen. American s. 'Carefully kept from burning too brightly lest it attract attention to the "jungles"' (Irwin): it emits a mere smudge of smoke.—2. Photograph of a fingerprint: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant—but by 1940, s. To the uninformed, that is its appearance.

smudge, v. To burn: 1925, Leverage; extant. Euphemistic—or rather, meiosisitic.

smug, n., 'a blacksmith', has occ. been classified as c., but it is not c. One of the earliest examples occurs in Rowlands, The Knave of Clubs, 1611:

'A Smug of Vulcans forging trade, Besmoak'd with sea-cole-fire,
The rarest man to helpe a horse,
That Carmen could desire'.

smug, v. To steal; esp., to pilfer: 1825, T. Hook (O.E.D.); 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1851, H. Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'He used to go "smuggling" [running away with] other people's things'; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1859, H. 'Smug, to snatch another's property and run': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'We used to go and smug snowy (steal linen) that was hung out to dry'; 1889, G. R. Sims, 'A Plank Bed Ballad'; 1890, B & L; by 1903 (F & H) it was low s. Prob. an abbr. of smuggle.—2. To hush up (an affair, a lawsuit, etc.): 1857, The Morning Chronicle, Oct. 3, 'She wanted a guarantee the case should be smugged, or in other words compromised', cited by F & H, 1903; 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. ex sense 1.—3. To arrest (a person): Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'I went on like this for very near a stretch (year) without being smugged (apprehended)'; 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail; 1890, B & L; 1894, Arthur Morrison, Martin Hewitt, Investigator; 1902, A. Morrison, "'E'll . . . p'rhaps get smugged with it on him'"; 1903, F & H; 1925, E. Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons; by 1945, ob. Ex sense 1.

smug-lay. The illicit dodge practised by 'persons who pretend to be smugglers of lace and valuable articles; these men borrow articles of publicans by depositing these goods in their hands: they shortly decamp, and the publican discovers too late that he has been duped; and on opening the pretended treasure he finds trifling articles of no value,' Egan's Grose, 1923; † by 1903 (F & H). Ex smuggler or smuggle.

smuggling ken. A bawdy house, a brothel: 1725, A New Canting Dict. (at clicketting), 'He has pick'd up the Blowse, and they are pik'd into that Smuggling-Ken a-Clicketting'; 1785, Grose; prob. † by 1870. Ken, 'a place; a house'; smuggling may disguise snuggling.

smusa, 'to snatch, or seize suddenly' (Egan's Grose, 1823), is prob. an error: ? for snabble or smable (smobble). More prob. for the next.

smush. To seize suddenly; to snatch: 1823 (see preceding); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1900. Cf. the preceding.

smut. 'A copper. A grate. Old iron. The cove was lagged for a smut: the fellow was transported for stealing a copper': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A copper-boiler, or furnace'; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. Prob. the orig. sense is 'a copper', or possibly 'a (fire)-grate'; 'old iron' is almost certainly secondary and derivative. Ex the smuts on the bottom of used copper.—2. (Mostly in pl.) A picture: tramps' and beggars': 1909, W. H. Davies, Beggars, the implication, there, being that the term had been in existence for some few years; also American—as in Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'Smuts. Obscene pictures or postcards'; extant. Ex 'Smutty picture (or postcard)'.

smuts, n. See smut, 2.

smuts, v. 'To kid or be nice to a person is to smuts to him,' J. B. Fisher, letter of May 23, 1946: S. Africa: since ca. 1919. A tribute to the fame and charm of Field-Marshal Smuts.

snabble. To take, seize; arrest: 1724, Harper (in Thurmond's Harlequin Sheppard), 'He broke thro all Rubbs in the Whitt, | And chiv'd his Darbies in twain, | But fileing of a Rumbo Ken, | Mr Boman is snabbled again'; 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker, 'I'll snabble his Poll' (snatch off his peruke); 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookkood; † by 1870. 'Snabble, as if snapping up with the bill of a bird. Snabel, Swedish and Norse; hence Yorkshire, a bird's bill' (B & L).—2. Hence, to steal; to rob: 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker; 1725, A Canting Dict., 'To rifle, to strip, or plunder'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), as snable; † in England by 1890 (B & L).—3. 'To knock down; to cause to reel or stagger by a blow on the head,' A Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1800.—4. To kill: 1796, Grose, 3rd ed. (hence current at least as early as 1791); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890. Senses 3 and 4 derive ex sense 1: cf. snabbled.

For smobble, snabble, snaffle, it is a nice point, which of these three terms is the origin of the other two: smobble is the earliest recorded; snabble is a variant of smabble or smobble; snaffle, a variant of snabble.

snack, n. A share: 1683 (O.E.D.): may, as also in the phrase go snack, 'to go shares', have been c. until C. 18, to judge by its occurrence in Shadwell's The Squire of Alsatia, 1688, and in B.E., 1698. But more prob. was it, as The O.E.D. implies, always S.E.—2. A dupe; an easy victim: Australian: since the 1920's. Baker, 1942. Cf. R.A.F. s. (It's a) piece of cake.

snack, v. To share: 1712, The Ordinary of Newgate, A Full Account of William Johnson, 'They went to Snack their Money by a Hay Stack'; 1741 (see snack the cole); 1789 (see snack the bit); by 1810, no longer c. Ex snack, n.

snack the bit. 'To share the money': 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1792, The Minor Jockey Club, where it is misprinted as smack . . .; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (erroneously smack . . .); 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; 1848, Sinks of London (as in Andrewes); † by 1900. A later form of:—

snack the cole. To share the money: 1741, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. III (Catherine Lineham); † by 1870. Cf. the preceding entry; see snack, v.

snaffle, n. That member of a gang of 'rank riders' (see rank rider, 1) who 'never alights off a rich Farmer or country Gentleman, till he have drawne money from him'—though it is when the gang are more correctly termed 'strollers': ca. 1600–70. Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9. Ex a horse's snaffle?—2. Hence, 'a Highwayman that has got Booty': B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose (any highwayman); 1797, Potter (id.); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1848, Sinks of London, where it is misprinted shaffle; † by 1870.—3. (A) secret talk or conversation: C. 20. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Perhaps ex E. Anglian dial. snaffle, 'to talk foolishly'.

snaffle, v. To steal: 1724, Harper, 'A Canting Song', in John Thurmond's masque, Harlequin Sheppard, 'Priggs that snaffle the Prancers strong'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'To steal, to rob, to purloin'; 1785, Grose; by 1890, low s. For origin, see snabble.—2. To arrest (a person): 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L, who note that by that date it was also low s. 'So termed from a kind of horse's bit, called a snaffle (H); but imm. ex the v. snaffle, 'to put a snaffle on (a horse)'.

snaffle-biter. A C. 18 term, defined in The History of Clubs, 1745: 'Snaffle Biters, as they call themselves, Rogues who make it their principal business to steal Horses'. I.e., one who 'bites' by 'snaffling': see preceding entry.

snaffler. A thief, a robber: 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'A Snaffler of Prancers'; a Horse-stealer'; 1785, Grose; † by 1840. Ex snaffle, v., 1. Hence a highwayman: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890 (B & L).

snaffling(-)lay, the. 'A Cant Term for Robbery on the High-way': 1752, Fielding, Amelia; † by 1890 (B & L)—prob. by 1860. Cf. snaffler, 2, and see lay, n., 2.

snag, v. "Snagging the poke" means stealing the roll of bills,' H. W. Corley, 'Pickpockets'—Flynn's, March 2, 1929; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. As though one were to catch it on a snag; cf. spear, 1.—2. To commit pederasty: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; BVB, 1942.—3. To arrest (someone): 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. To cause him to encounter a truly formidable snag or obstacle.

snaggle, v.; snagging, vbl n. 'Snagging is driving geese into a corner in a stubble field, then getting into a ditch, and throwing out a line and hook, with a worm at the end' and marching off with the booty in a bag: 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; 1890, B & L; by 1903 (F & H) it was low s. Cf. snabble and snaffle. A variant of snabble, 2, and snaffle and snavel, v.

snags, 'large teeth' (Grose, 1785), is more prob. s. than c.

snail. 'At a little restaurant I had a hasty breakfast of coffee and "snails" (cinnamon rolls),' Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925: tramps' c. of ca. 1910–30, then gen. s. Ex the shape.

snake, n. 'A fellow that glides into a store or ware-house, and conceals himself for the purpose of letting in his companions': 1859, Matsell; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A crooked individual'; 1934, Rose, 'A petty thief'; extant. Prob. suggested by snakesman; perhaps, however, esp. in its C. 20 nuances, by snake in the grass.—2. A railroad switchman: C. 20: rather is it railroad s. than tramps' c. Stiff, 1931.—3. A chain: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. A coiled chain: a coiled snake.

snake, v. To arrest (a person): 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. Criminal psychology.—2. See snake the tree of life.—3. 'To steal warily,' F & H, 1903: but perhaps only low s. Ex the thief's silent movements.

snake box, the. An American card-sharpers' term of late C. 19–20. See quot'n at end-squeeze.

snake-eyes. Two at dice: gamblers': C. 20. Ersine.—2. Tapioca pudding: convicts': since ca. 1918. Ersine.

snake in the grass. An informer that conceals the informing: Sept. 1, 1928, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'The Man Who Couldn't Squeal', 'Every stool pigeon, dick, snake-in-the-grass an' copper are lookin' for me'; extant. Apt metaphor.

snake the tree of life. 'Getting to know all about the house' (preparatory to robbing it): 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); † by 1920. To creep about, as a snake, in investigating a household's routine.

snakes. 'From time to time the chief warder would make surprise visits in soft slippers, or "snakes", to see if all was going well,' ch. on 'Prison Experiences' in David Fannan's A Burglar's Life Story, 1897; Manchon, 1923; slightly ob. Ex the silence with which a snake moves; cf. snake and sneaks.—2. See snakey.

snakesman. It occurs first in little snakesman, q.v., and deductively it = an adult man that does what a 'little snakesman' does better. By ca. 1845, it was current among the English-criminal community in New York: see E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York, 1851.

snakey, 'suffering from D.T.'s', ex snakes, the, 'D.T.'s': low s. rather than c.: C. 20. Ersine.

Snakey (or Snaky) Route, the. Oregon & California Railroad: tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'A line running through mountainous country, and very crooked as to direction' (Irwin).

snam, n. See snam, on the. Ex:—

snam, v. To snatch: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1860, H, 2nd ed., 'To snatch, or rob from the person'; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen, 'snam . . . schnappen, rauben'; 1890, B & L (as in H); 1903, F & H, 'To steal: spec. to snatch from the person'; ob. Ex Scottish snam, 'to snap greedily at': cf. Sc. nam, 'to seize quickly'—and nim, q.v.—2. Hence, to make off, rapidly, with anything found lying about: 1890, B & L; ob.

snam, on the. Engaged in stealing, as in snam, v., 1: 1887, W. E. Henley, Villon's Good-Night, 'For you, you coppers, narks, and dubs, | Who pinched me when upon the snam'; 1903, F & H; ob. Ex snam, v., 1.

snammer. See pudding-snammer.—2. Loosely, any thief: 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, 'Tim the Snammer'; † by 1900. Ex snam, v.

snap, n. A share: 1552, Gilbert Walker, Diceplay, 'Yet did I use him always honestly, and gave him his whole snap, to the end he should be painful and diligent to take the cousins up, and bring them to the blow'; 1561, Awdeley; 1592, Greene. From c., this term had, by 1600, > s.; by 1698 (witness B.E.) it had, as an underworld term, been displaced by snack. That which one takes at a bite. Ex S.E. snap, 'A sudden closing of the jaws', hence 'a bite made thus'.—2. Greene, 1591, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, in listing the terms of figging law, says: 'The Cutpurse, a Nip—He that is halfe with him, the Snap'; so too Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608, 'He that is halfe with him'—i.e., with the cutpurse—'is the Snap or the Cloyer'; app. † by 1700. By personification of sense 1.—3. See snap away, give the.—4. A thief: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 4 of the v.—5. A forsaking, an abandonment: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. ex sense 5 of the v.—6. 'The Spotter, or The Snap' in a kidnapping gang is he who, after 'providing for all the necessary equipment', at the head of 'his Punks or Muscle Men . . . strikes and the deed is done, the victim being speeded to a carefully selected hide-out,' Tracy French in Flynn's, Dec. 9, 1934: U.S.A.; extant. The other (chief) members of the gang are the peddler, the finger, the voice, and, at the back of them, the big shot. This sense of snap prob. derives ex sense 3.

snap, v. See snap the glaze.—2. V.i., to go shares with thieves or sharpers: ca. 1600–40. Field, 1609 (O.E.D.). Ex the n., sense 1.—3. To apprehend, to arrest: 1785, Grose, 'Snap, taken, caught'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1900, no longer c.—4. To steal: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.—5. To forsake, abandon: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; ob. Ex S.E. snap, 'to break'.

snap, adj. Dishonest, illicit; faked: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, 'A "snap" roulette wheel'; ob.

snap! I take you; 'I get you'; I understand: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; app. † by 1780.

snap, on the, 'looking out for windfalls or odd jobs' (B & L, 1890), is not c., but s.

snap away, give the. 'To betray a plot, so as to lose the profit': American: 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob. Cf. snap, n., 1.

snap the glaze. 'To break shop windows, or shew glasses': 1785, Grose; † by 1890. See glaze, n., 1; cf. star the glaze.

snape. To cheat, to swindle: 1925, Leverage; extant. A perversion of 'to snipe'?

snappage is a synonym of snappings and of snap, n., 1: 1602, S. Rowlands, Greenes Ghost Haunting Coniecatchers, 'These'—the hangers-on of the big criminals—'come in for their tenths, which they generally term snapping, or snappage'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; † by 1660. I.e., snap, n., 1 + n. suffix -age.

snapper. A sharer (cf. snap, n.); a confederate, an accomplice: 1552, Gilbert Walker, Diceplay, 'For, even this new nurtured novice, notwithstanding he is received into the colledge of these double dealers, and is become so good a scholar, that he knoweth readily his flats and barris, and hath been snapper with the old cole at 2 or 3 deep strokes . . .' Since this is the only authority adduced by The O.E.D. and the only one that I have found, it is prob. that the term was † by 1700 at latest.—2. See snappers.—3. Hence, a gun: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1900. Echoic.—4. A thief: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant—but not gen. Ex snap, v., 3.—5. A ticket collector, esp. on a train: mostly racecourse swindlers': C. 20. In, e.g., Arthur R. L. Gardner, The Art of Crime, 1931, and Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938. Ex the snap of the ticket-puncher he uses.

snapper rig. A second-hand suit of clothes: tramps': since ca. 1920. Stiff, 1931. I.e., coll. rig, 'clothes; a suit' + 'that at which one snaps, a reach-me-down'.

snappers, 'pistols', is s., not c.

snapping is a variant, recorded only in S. Rowlands, Greenes Ghost Haunting Coniecatchers, 1602, of:—

snappings. In 'the curbing law' (q.v.), the booty obtained: 1592, Robert Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, 'The Courber . . . is he that with a . . . hook, doth pul out of a window any . . . household stuffe whatsoever, which stolne parcels, they in their Art cal snappings'; 1602, S. Rowlands (see snappage); 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; app. † by 1700. Cf. snap, n., 1, and snack.

snapps, look out for. To wait for windfalls: 1859, H, who in 1860 adds 'or odd jobs': ca. 1840–1900. See snap, n., 1.

snare, v.t. 'To entice a boy into tramp life,' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; extant. A special application of S.E. snare, 'to trap' (animal or person).

snarer. A tramp that entices a boy to beg for him: 1902, J. Flynt, The Little Brother (just such a boy); extant. Ex the preceding.

snarins. 'The dessert of a meal, candy,' Ersine: since ea. 1920. Something one 'snares' in addition to the main dish.

snark. A stupid (police-force) detective: Pacific Coast: since before 1934. Castle, 1938, 'I gotta break, and rubbed out a couple of snarks'; extant. Perhaps 'stupid' + nark.

snarl. (Of the victims of a robbery) to offer resistance: 1935, Hargan; extant.

snatch, n. J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., erroneously gives snatch as = snitch, n., 1.—2. An arrest: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society (in reference to bailiffs); 1874, H (at body-snatcher), 'Almost obsolete'. Ex the constable's or the bailiff's snatch at his prospective prisoner.—3. A robbery or theft effected by snatching at the article: 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Diary, 'I did a snatch near St Paul's'; 1908, Edgar Wallace, Angel Esquire, "'There's 'Snatch' Walker,'" said Angel idly. "Snatch isn't wanted just now—in this country"; March 2, 1929, Flynn's, H. W. Corley, 'Pickpockets'; slightly ob. Cf. sense 4.—4. Kidnapping, or an instance thereof: U.S.A.: since ca. 1925: March 19, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens, 'Snatch Money'; May 28, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch, 'A snatch and a shake' (a kidnapping and an extortion); July 30, 1932, Flynn's, Everett R. Holles, 'Exposing the Kidnappers'; 1933, Ersine; by 1934, British, as in David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live; 1935, James Spenser, The Five Mutineers, 'Why get mixed up in a dangerous game like the "snatch" racket?'; May 30, 1936, Flynn's, Jack Callahan, 'The snatch racket'; 1936, John G. Brandon, The Dragnet; 1936, John G. Brandon, The 'Snatch' Game; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper; 1938, Dick O'Connor, Headline Hunter; May 1942, Flynn's, Richard Sale; 1944, David Hume, Mick Cardby Works Overtime; 1945, D. Hume, Come Back for the Body. Imm. ex the v.

snatch, v. 'His most brilliant exploit was his "snatching" of $100,000 from the Royal Insurance Company's office on Broadway in broad daylight': 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; June 6, 1936, Flynn's, George Bruce, (concerning a car) 'It's one more sweet-running crate. Just about the sweetest I ever snatched'; extant.—2. To arrest: March 2, 1929, Flynn's, H. W. Corley ('Pickpockets'), "'If we got snatched right,'" he [a pickpocket] declared, "that is, caught with loot that was identified . . ."; slightly ob.—3. To kidnap: Dec. 17, 1932, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; by 1935, British also, as in David Hume, Dangerous Mr Dell; 1936, John G. Brandon, The 'Snatch' Game; 1936, Charles Francis Coe, Ransom; Oct. 22, 1938, Flynn's, Richard Sale; 1939, Hickman Powell, Ninety Times Guilty; 1944, David Hume, Toast to a Corpse; 1945, David Hume, Come Back for the Body. This nuance develops out of the white-slavers' nuance, 'to inveigle (a girl) into prostitution': C. 20: as, e.g., in Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909, "'Snatchin' simps" is good enough for little Willie'.

snatch bug. A kidnapper: March 19, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; extant. See snatch, n., 4, and cf. fire bug.

snatch cly. 'A thief who snatches women's pockets' (bags or purses): 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.;

1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1900—if not, indeed, a generation earlier. See cly, n., 2.

snatch mob. a gang of kidnappers: Dec. 29, 1934, Flynn's, Tracy French; extant. I.e., snatch, n., 4 + mob, 2.

snatch racket, the. Kidnapping regarded as a business: since the late 1920's and, since ca. 1934, British. In several of David Hume's tales of the underworld (e.g., Come Back for the Body, 1945). See snatch, n., 4, and racket.

snatchel is J. Shirley's misprint, 1707, for snitchel.

snatcher. A young and inexperienced pick-pocket: 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary (see hook, n., 2); 1890, B & L; 1895, A. Griffiths; 1945, Jack Henry (quot'n at blagger); extant. Cf. snatch, n., 3.—2. 'Snatchers . . . are the men who make a snatch for the watch and bolt, leaving their confederates to impede a chase': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1934, B. Leeson, Lost London; extant.—3. A kidnapper: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; Sept. 2, 1933, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly; 1935, Hargan; May 30, 1936, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; 1936, Charles F. Coe, Ransom; by 1937, British also; 1940, David Hume, Invitation to the Grave; May 1942, Flynn's, Richard Sale; extant.

snatching, n. See snatch, v.

snaved(-)in. Drug-excited: since ca. 1932. BVB. Disguise for caved-in?

snavel, n. See running snavel.

snavel, v. 'To steal when running': 1781 (implied in snaveller); 1797, Potter; 1823, Bee, 'To steal by snatching . . . or concealing any small property by piece-meal'; † by 1890. A phonetic variant of snaffle, v., 1.

snavel, running. See running snavel.

snaveller. He or she who practises 'the running snavel' (see running snavel): 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; app. † by 1860. Cf. snavel, v.

snazzy. Flashy; over-smart (esp. of clothes): 1933, Ersine; by 1936, low s. Perhaps a blend of snappy and jazzy.

sneak, n. Occ. used absolutely, but mostly as an abbr. of morning sneak and night sneak, qq.v. (the robberies, the practices): 1725, Anon., An Authentick History of Jonathan Wild, 'The Gentlemen of the Kid-Lay, File, Lay,'—i.e., File-Lay—'Sneak and Buttock . . . gave Mr Wild a very great Opportunity of detecting them'; 1744, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No IV (Richard Lee), footnote, 'The Sneak, is going into a House with a dark Lanthorn, and holding it up just to see where the Things lie, then darken it, and sweep away all we can'; 1752, Anon., Villainy Unmask'd, where it = morning sneak; 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected (an excellent account); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'The sneak is the practice of robbing houses or shops, by slipping in unperceived'; ibid., 'A sneak is a robbery effected in the same manner'; 1816, Sessions Papers; 1848, Sinks of London; its independent existence ceased ca. 1870. A special application of S.E. sneak, 'a mean-spirited, shifty person'.—2. Hence, loosely, any petty thief: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'I'm a Sneak for Chinks or Feeders; I'm a Thief for Tankards and Spoons'; 1785, Grose, 'A pilferer'; 1862, Mayhew, London Labour, IV; by 1870, s.; by 1900, S.E.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) One who goes on 'the morning sneak' or 'the night (or, evening) sneak': 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected; 1839, Brandon; app. by 1870, except in U.S.A.—e.g., in Flynt, 1901.—4. In U.S.A., that member of a gang of bank-robbers who does the actual thieving: 1879, Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences, p. 94; 1886, A. Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; 1893, Langdon W. Moore; † by 1920. Ex senses 2, 3.—5. See sneaks.—6. 'Night-guard in jail,' glossary, Confessions of a Convict (U.S.A., ed. by Julian Hawthorne, 1893); 1925, Leverage; extant. He creeps about.—7. (Cf. sense 4.) 'Sneaks; Flat or house thieves', Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (U.S.A.), Glossary, 1899, but prob. implied in P. Farley's Criminals of America, 1876; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1937, Godfrey Irwin (letter of Sept. 13), 'Now obsolete or obsolescent'.—8. In U.S.A., often generic for all thieves and swindlers, as in Edward Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York, 1872; † by 1937 (Irwin).—9. "'The bloomin' sneak'" (the mealhour patrol), Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow, 1903; extant. Cf. sense 6.—10. See cop a sneak.

sneak, v. As the v.i. behind sneaker, 1, it is c.—until, say, 1820; but as 'going quietly or unheard' it is a general v. and prob. never c.—2. 'To sneak a place, is to rob it upon the sneak': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1900.—3. See sneak 'em.

sneak, adj. Used in sneak door, sneak thief.

sneak, brush upon the. See brush upon the sneak.

sneak, cop a. See cop a sneak.

sneak, do a. See do a sneak.

sneak, evening. See evening sneak.

sneak, give it 'em upon the. See sneak 'em.

sneak, go upon the. Slyly to get into houses or shops at night, when one can steal with little risk of discovery: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Goes upon the Sneak at Darkmans; He privately goes into Houses or Shops at Night, and steals undiscover'd'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'To go upon the sneak; to steal into houses whose doors are carelessly left open'; 1812, J. H. Vaux (see sneaks-man); 1816, Sessions Papers; 1823, Bee; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1903, F & H (by implication); by 1905, low s.

sneak, morning; sneak, night. See sneak, n., 1.

sneak, upon (in C. 19–20, usually on . . .) the. (Of thieves and other malefactors) slyly, furtively, softly, silently; esp., robbing as in preceding entry: 1698, B.E. (see prec. entry); 1720, Alex. Smith (see brush upon the sneak); 1735, Select Trials; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1903, J. Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd, "'Is he any good on the sneak?' " (U.S.A.); 1903, F & H; by 1905, low s. See sneak, n., 1.

sneak, upright. See upright sneak.

sneak door. 'There are also many thieves who will gain access into vaults and behind doors, when what are known as "sneak" or "day doors" [? padlocks; or outer doors] are placed on the vaults and kept locked during the day': 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective—cf. Leverage, 1925, 'Day-door, n. The inner door of a safe', and D. W. Maurer, 1931, 'Sneak gate (a barred vault door used during the day to avoid opening the big, heavy, main door)'. In C. 20, however, the term is s.—almost j.

sneak 'em; give it 'em upon the sneak. 'One or more prisoners having escaped from their confinement by stealth, without using any violence, or alarming their keepers, are said to have sneaked 'em, or given it to 'em upon the sneak': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1900. See sneak, n., 1.

sneak mob. A gang of clever thieves (not burglars nor pickpockets): 1886, Allan Pinkerton, 'As a rule, the members of a "sneak mob" room in first-class hotels, and always in separate apartments. They invariably travel first-class, though they never appear to be flush of money nor act in any manner that will attract undue attention', and one of their specialities is the 'turn trick' (q.v.); ob. See sneak, n., 4, and mob, n., 2.

sneak on (a place, a building), get a. 'I got a sneak on a jug . . . I walked into a bank without attracting the attention of the office-force,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; ob. See sneak, n., 1.

sneak on the lurk; often as vbl n., sneaking . . . To prowl for booty; wander about, looking for something to steal (either immediately or later): from ca. 1820; by 1903 (F & H) it was low s. See sneak, v., 1.

sneak thief, one who 'goes upon the sneak'—see sneak, n., 1—is, in C. 20, not c. Orig., perhaps, it was c.

sneak work. 'House robbery while the inmates are at a meal (similar to prowling),' Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 1927; extant. See sneak, n., 7.

sneaker has, in English, a specific sense that may fairly be classified as c. of C. 18–19. 'Sneakers. Such as sneak into a House by Night or Day to Steal,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; 1858, C. Reade, Autobiography of a Thief.—2. Among American bootleggers, it is such a liquor-smuggling motor-boat as depends rather upon stealth than upon speed: 1930, Burke; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Rose; then reminiscent.—3. Usually pl., sneakers, gumshoes, sandshoes: U.S.A.: Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1932, Lewis E. Lawes, 20,000 Years in Sing Sing; by 1935, s. Cf. sneaks.—4. A still under independent ownership (i.e., not tied to a bootlegging gang): ca. 1924–33, then ob. Howard N. Rose, 1934.

sneaking, n. 'Securing and conveying away any property,' Andrewes, 1809: if this is the vbl n. corresponding to the agential sneaker, 1, then it may fairly be classified as c.; if merely a generalized n., then it certainly is not c.—2. Verbal n. corresponding to sneak, n., 4: 1879, Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences, 'Noble never did much of the actual "sneaking" himself, but he was a most brilliant general of these matters'; † by 1920.

sneaking budge. 'One that Robbs alone,' B.E., 1698—a definition to which A New Canting Dict., 1725, adds, 'And deals chiefly in petty Larcenies'; 1785, Grose (same as budge, n.); 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., confines it to such a thief working at night; † by 1889 (B & L). See budge, n., 1.—2. Hence, in C. 18—mid-19, the art and practice of lone robbery.—3. Hence, almost certainly erroneously, shoplifting: 1743, Fielding, The Life of Mr Jonathan Wild.—4. Loosely, any pilfering: 1752, Fielding, Amelia; prob. † by 1890. Cf. sneak, n., 2. sneaking budger. 'Sneaking Budgers. Such as pilfer things off of a Stall,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; app. † by 1830. Cf. sense 1 of the preceding entry.

sneaks. 'The night-officer is generally accustomed to wear a species of India-rubber shoes or goloshes on her feet. These are termed "sneaks" by the women [of Brixton Prison]': 1862, A Prison Matron, Female Life in Prison; 1863, Charles B. Gibson, Life Among Convicts, 'My goloshes—or "sneaks", as prisoners sometimes call these articles'; 1873, James Greenwood, In Strange Company; 1894, A. Griffiths, Secrets of the Prison-House; 1903, F & H; 1907, Jabez Balfour, My Prison Life; 1920, Hargrave L. Adam, The Police Encyclopaedia, VIII, 135, defines them as 'list slippers', i.e., slippers made of list; but by 1910, at latest, the term could no longer be classified as c.; it had > general prison s.

sneaksman. A man engaged in the morning, noon, or night sneak: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'I have known a Sneaksman, in a Morning, fetch down Stairs a Bed tied up in a Blanket, and meet the Master at the Door; who said, What have you got there? One of your Beds, Sir, replied the other, that Madam has sent to the Upholsterer'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A man or boy who goes upon the sneak'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, III, "'Sneaksman", or those who plunder by means of stealth'; 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); Nov. 1870, The Broadway; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L, 'a petty thief, a shoplifter'; 1903, F & H; very ob. Ex sneak, n., 1 and 2.

sneeze, v. To be caught, detained: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; † by 1940. Often a sneeze leads to the detection of a thief.—2. To make an arrest (of), v.i. and v.t.: 1925, Leverage, (v.i.); Aug. 15, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse, 'Send your mob over there and sneeze them'; April 21, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12637; 1938, Convict 2nd; extant.—3. To inform to the police, esp. as a 'stool pigeon': 1925, Leverage; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'He sneezed to the Cuter'; extant. Perhaps ex a feigned sneeze that serves as a warning.—4. To steal: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. 2.—5. To kidnap (someone): 1929–31, Kernôt; 1930, Burke, 'They sneeze the booty and get ten grand'; 1938, Castle; extant. Prob. ex 4.—6. To question (a person) by the strong-arm method: 1934, Rose; extant. Ex sneeze down.—7. To release from prison: convicts' (? Sing Sing only): 1935, Hargan; extant.

sneeze down. 'To hold an addict without narcotics in order to elicit information from him,' BVB: since ca. 1925. Cf. sneeze, v., 2.

sneeze it out. See sweat it out.

sneeze(-)lurker. 'A person who throws snuff in a person's face and then robs him': 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H, 'A thief working with snuff, pepper or the like'; † by 1940. See lurker.

sneeze(-)racket, the. Theft by a sneeze lurker: C. 19; perhaps current until ca. 1915. Sneeze is s. for snuff; see racket.

sneezzer. A snuff-box: 1725, A New Canting Dict., at cog, has 'Cog a Clout; or Cog a Sneezzer; Beg'—i.e., obtain by begging—'an Handkerchief, or Snuff-box'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1851, Mayhew (see buzzer); 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; 1890, B & L; † by 1900. One takes from it that which causes one to sneeze. Ex the effect of its contents.—2. A handkerchief: either c. or, more prob., fast-life s. of ca. 1810–75. Pierce Egan, Finish, 1828.—3. A drink of (strong) liquor: ca. 1816, The Night before Larry Was Stretched; by 1860, s. It may cause one to cough or to sneeze.—4. A gag (to silence a person): 1899,

C. Rook, The Hooligan Nights; ob. Ex sense 2.—5. A person making an arrest: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 2 of the v.—6. An informer to the police; a 'stool pigeon': U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 3 of the v.—7. A thief: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 4 of the v.—8. The senses 'nose' and 'blow, punch on the nose' (Leverage, 1925) are s. not c.—9. 'In modern, incorrect detective stories [by Americans], the word has been used to designate the "cooler" or "hole" [solitary-confinement cell],' IA, 1931. The same applies to the sense 'jail'.

sneezing-coffer. 'Sneezzer, or Sneezing-Cofer, a snuff-box': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1900. Cf. — sneezing(-)scoop. A snuff-box: 1821, J. Burrows, Life in St George's Fields; † by 1900. Cf. the prec. term.

sneezing stampers, 'wet shoes or boots', is perhaps c.; but prob. the term is a fanciful elaboration of stamper, 1, by Pierce Egan, Boxiana, III, 1821.

snell. See:—

snell(-)fencer, 'a street salesman of needles. Snells are needles' (H, 1874): not c., but street-vendors' s.—2. But it is c. in 'This knowledge [of houses worth burgling] is often obtained from vagabond thieves called "snell-fencers", who range the country in summer time as hawkers, or "poor needle-makers out of work",' The Cornhill Magazine, Jan. 1863 (p. 91).

snelt. A sneak thief (hence in low s., a term of abuse): New Zealand: since ca. 1920. Sidney J. Baker, New Zealand Slang, 1941. Prob. of Yiddish origin.

snib, n. A pickpocket; a thief: ? mainly or only Scottish: since ca. 1600; 1607, Dekker (O.E.D.); 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'Young McGuire was a well known snib, and I . . . never spoke to him in the streets'; 1823, Egan's Grose ('Scotch cant'); 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', 2nd ed.; 1903, F & H; † by 1910. Prob. the word is a variant of, or cognate with, snip: cf. snip, n., 2.—2. Hence, act of pickpocketry, a theft: 1821, Haggart, 'We . . . obtained nine screaves at one snib'; † by 1910.

snib, v. To steal (an object); to rob (a person): (?) Scottish: 1821, D. Haggart, ' . . . Where I might fence my snib'd lays'; ibid., 'I snib'd a cove of his scout'; 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', 2nd ed.; † by 1910. Ex the n.

snic. See snick.

snich. See snitch, n., 2 and 3, v., 2.

snichel. See snitchel, v.

sniches. See snitches.

snick, n. 'A mean fellow,' Leverage, 1925; extant. He tends to snick or sneak things.

snick, v. To cut: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd, where it is spelt snic; not a c. sense.—But see snicking.

snick-fadge. A petty thief: 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1930. 'From to snick, to cut, hence to steal, and fadge, a farthing' (B & L).

snick-tog. To go shares: 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H (snick tog); † by 1940. 'To snick, to cut, and tog, clothes, coat' (B & L); perhaps, however, snick is a thinned form of snack, v., and tog, a 'disguise' suffix or elaboration.

snicker. A drinking-mug: 1848, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. cxxii; by 1870, s.

snicking. The surreptitious obtaining of something: ca. 1660–1750. Prob. ex S.E. snick, ‘to cut; to snip crisply’.

snickle, v.i. To inform to the police: 1859, Matsell, at hock; 1903, F & H, who imply that by this date it is also English; † by 1920. A confusion of snitch and snilch, vv.

snicktog. See snick-tog.

snid. A sixpence: 1839, Brandon; 1859, H, who says that it is Scottish; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1930. Ex its low value; prob. a thinning of snide.

sniddy. See snidey.

snide, n. Collective for ‘counterfeit coins’; also singular, ‘a counterfeit coin’; incorrectly, false bank-notes; loosely, bad money in general: 1869 (implied in snide-pitching); ibid., ‘One would require to know something about the different metals before they could be able to make “snyde”’; 1874, H (at pitcher), ‘The holder is generally a man who carries the bulk of the “snides”, and waits about; while the pitcher, often a woman—indeed, more often than not—runs the actual risk’; 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1891, C. Bent; 1898, J. W. Horsley, Prisons and Prisoners; 1903, G. R. Sims, Living London, III; 1903, F & H; 1925, Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons (see lil, 4); 1927, Edgar Wallace, The Squeaker; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; 1934, James Spenser, Limey Breaks In; 1935, Cornish of the ‘Yard’; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; by 1940, s.—low s. Ex the adj., sense 1.—2. Hence, a contemptible fellow: 1874, H; by 1880, low—chiefly East End of London—s. Also in U.S.A.: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom. Possibly not a substantivizing of the adj., but a shortening of snide un.—3. Plate of base metal: since ca. 1840: 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747, p. 416; very ob. Cf. sense 1.—4. ‘... Especially if the “snyde”—the cant term for a false diamond—is going cheap,’ Arthur Griffiths, Mysteries of Police and Crime, 1898, at ii, 263; extant. Ex 1.—5. A dealer in counterfeit money: 1899, Clarence Rook, The Hooligan Nights, ch. ‘Billy the Snide’ (an underworld nickname); extant. Ex sense 1.—6. (Ex sense 4.) An imitation-diamond ring: U.S.A.: 1902, W. A. Irwin, The Love Sonnets of a Hoodlum; ob.—7. ‘Short-change artist,’ Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage (‘A cheat’); slightly ob.—8. A thief; a theft: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; rare.—9. Short for snide-pitching: since ca. 1920. James Spenser, 1934.

snide, adj. (Of money) bad, counterfeit: 1851, a prison report by John Clay, ‘Utterers of “Snide pewter” (base silver)’, recorded in The Prison Chaplain: a Memoir of John Clay, 1861, at p. 537; 1859, Matsell—see snide stuff; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, where it is spelt snyde; 1874, H; 1880, An Ex-Convict, Our Convict System, ‘This man ... had ... manufactured “snide” shillings and florins in the very prison shop [the smiths’ shop]’; Feb. 28, 1881, Sessions Papers; 1887, Baumann (snide and snyde); by 1890 (B & L), no longer c. in England; in U.S.A. it may have remained c. until ca. 1910 (see, e.g., No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904). Prob. ex either Ger. schnöde or Dutch snood: ‘base, villainous’: B & L. Perhaps cf. Dutch snyden, ‘to swindle’ (Vellacott).—2. Hence, contemptible (‘a snide fellow’); inferior: 1874, H; Aug. 4, 1877, Chicago Sporting Gazette (cited by Herbert Asbury); 1883, E. J. Milliken, Childe Chappie’s Pilgrimage, ‘... They self-deemed astute and “snide”’, | Of nous bereft, low chaff the bar-queen golden dyed’—but by 1880 it was low s. in England; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (U.S.A.), ‘A snide place’; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, ‘Mean’; 1926, Jack Black, You Can’t Win, “‘This is a pretty snide jungle,” he said, “no cans”’; rather ob.

snide lurk, the. A variant of snide-pitching, from the point of view of earning one’s living: 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747 ... the Autobiography of a Gipsy (implied in a criminal’s nickname: ‘Snide Lurk’): since ca. 1840; ob.

snide mob. A gang of counterfeiters: C. 20. In, e.g., Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 1937. See snide, n., 1, and mob.

snide-pitcher; snide-pitching. ‘Snyde-pitching is passing bad money; and is a capital racket, especially if you can get rid of “fins”’, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, 1869; but The O.E.D. records s.-pitching for 1868 and s. pitcher for 1862; 1874, H (s. pitcher); Oct. 1879, ‘Autobiography of a Thief’, Macmillan’s Magazine (s.-pitcher); Feb. 28, 1881, Sessions Papers (s. pitchings); 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L (both); 1898, J. W. Horsley, Prisons and Prisoners (the latter); 1903, G. R. Sims, Living London, III (s.-pitcher); 1903, F & H (s.-pitching); 1904, Ex-Inspector Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals, ‘Two “snide pitchers” always work together—one distributes, the other holds the purse and stock’; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights on Criminal Matters (s. pitcher); Oct. 1928, Word-Lore, F. C. Taylor, ‘The Language of Lags’; extant. See snide, n.

snide(-)pusher. A passer of counterfeit coins: 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; extant. See the elements.

snide rat. A passer of counterfeit coins: 1932, Jock of Dartmoor, Human Stories of Prison Life; extant. See snide, n.

snide shop. An agency for the marketing of counterfeit money: since ca. 1920. Edgar Wallace, The Mind of Mr Reeder, 1925. See snide, n., 1.

snide stuff. Counterfeit money (esp. cash): 1859, Matsell; ob. See the elements.

snide-tickler is a variant (ca. 1875–1910) of snide-pitcher. Recorded in C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 1889, in the glossary. By playful fancy.

snide un. A contemptible fellow: e. (— 1874) >, by 1880, low (mostly East End of London) s.: H, 5th ed. See snide, adj.

snideman or snidesman. A coiner of counterfeit: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary), the former; 1897, A. Morrison, the latter (O.E.D.); 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers, the latter; 1932, Jock of Dartmoor, Human Stories of Prison Life, the former; extant. See snide, n.

snider; or snyder. ‘The prisoner ... said, “You will find no snider upon me” (meaning counterfeit coin) ... The Magistrate ... prevented my speaking about the snider,’ detective officer loq., Jan. 10, 1876, Sessions Papers; March 2, 1885, Sessions Papers, where sniders is equated to ‘counterfeit coin’; May 4, 1897, Sessions Papers; ob. A variant of snide, n., 1.

snidey ; sniddy. 'Snyde, you know, means counterfeit or bad, anything bad we call snydey': 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed (as snidey); 1890, B & L (both forms); by 1895, no longer to be classified as c. A diminutive of snide, adj., 1.

sniff, n. A dose of cocaine taken by snuffing: 1925, Leverage; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor, "Sniff of snow"; by 1840, s.—2. A killing; a murder: 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. ex sense 2 of the v.

sniff, v. 'To use powdered cocaine as snuff,' Leverage, 1925—but implied in sniffer, 1, for 1923; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; 1933, Ersine; by 1940, s. in U.S.A. In Britain, sniff coke has been current since ca. 1930 and is still (1947) c.—2. To kill; to murder: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. snuff (out) a person's light.—3. To inform against (a person) to the police, to 'squeal': 1925, Leverage; extant.

sniffer. A drug addict that sniffs heroin or cocaine: since ca. 1910 (or earlier): 1920, E. S. Bishop, The Narcotic Drug Problem (heroin); 'A Sniffer is one who sniffs cocaine,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, R. Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave'; 1925, Leverage; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; Oct. 9, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; by ca. 1937, British also; 1942, Jack Henry, Henry's Famous Cases; extant. Ex sniff, v., 1.—2. A killer; a murderer: 1925, Leverage; ob. Ex sniff, v., 2.—3. An informer to the police, a 'squealer': 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sniff, v., 3.

sniffing squad, the. 'Detectives detailed off in search of illegal drinking or making of liquor,' Kernôt, 1929–31: during Prohibition days (1920–33).

sniffler is a variant of sniffer, 1: since the 1920's. Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942.

sniffs, in W. H. Davies, The Autobiography of a Super-Tramp (see quot'n at rake, n., 2), is a misprint for snips; the error has been copied in Denis Crane's A Vicarious Vagabond, 1910.

snifter. 'A full glass of toddy, or whiskey': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1905, (low) s. Perhaps ex snifter, 'a long-drawn breath'.—2. A cocaine addict: 1925, Leverage; April 27, 1929, Flynn's Erle Stanley Gardner; 1934, Howard N. Rose; by ca. 1935, British, as, e.g., in David Hume, Eternity, Here I Come!; 1942, BVB; extant. Cf. snifter, 1, of which it is a variant.—3. A whiff of cocaine: July 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1934, David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live (British); extant. Ex senses 1, 2.

snitch, v.i. To observe closely, to act as a spy: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'The Cull snylches . . . The man eyes you'; 1676, Coles, 'Snitches, c. sees or eyes you'; 1698, B.E., 'The Cull Snitches, c. the man Eyes you or Sees you'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'To eye, or look at anything attentively'; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1923, Jules Manchon, Le Slang; slightly ob. Cf. snitch, v.

snip, n., is a variant of snap, a share: 1659, Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, 'They play booty, that they may go half-snipp for the Bets'; 1698, J. W., Youth's Safety; † by 1800—if not long before. A thinning of snap.—2. A cheat (agent): 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; app. † by 1840. Either ex sense 1 or ex snip, v.—3. A petty theft: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 3 of the v.

snip, v. To cheat (a person): 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1840. Cf. snip, n., 2.—2. To arrest: Sept. 9, 1896, Sessions Papers, 'Tell Joe to be very careful, and if they snip him, to say he was not in my company'; extant.—3. 'To steal on a small scale,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.; extant. To take mere snips of something.

snip for. To use scissors in order to thief (something from the person): 1888, James Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; ob. Cf. snips, 2.

snipe, n. G. Mynshull, Essayes and Characters of a Prison and Prisoners, 1618, 'Hee that comes fresh into a Prison, if he flye into the Parlor for Victualls, is called a Woodcocke, if not thither but at randome, then a Snipe, howsoever you terme them, both are sure to be caught, and to be put all into one Cage'; app. † by 1750 at the latest. With a pun on the bird.—2. See snipes.—3. Collective for cigar-butts: U.S.A.: 1891 (implied in snipe-shooter, -shooting); 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary, 'Snipe: cigar-butts—the favourite tobacco among hoboos'; 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers that Prey; 1903, F & H; then see snipe-shooter . . . Perhaps because picked up by guttersnipes; perhaps simply ex the pejorative tendency of S.E. snipe.—4. Hence, any tobacco: U.S.A.: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 'A well-filled pipe of "snipe" afterwards', the gloss being simply 'tobacco' (p. 69); the pl., snipes, 'cigar-ends', has by 1927 (R. Nichols & J. Tully, Twenty Below) > low s. in U.S.A., and the same almost certainly applies to the collective snipe; since ca. 1920, English c.—W. A. Gape, 1936, has snipes = cigarette-ends.—5. A hobo that works on a railroad section: American 'tramps': 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo (see jerry, n., 7); 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

snipe, v. To steal: 1925, Leverage; extant. Perhaps ex:—

snipe(-)shooter ; snipe-shooting. A professional picker-up, and the picking up, of cigar-ends from pavement and gutter: beggars' and tramps': 1891, Darkness and Daylight; by ca. 1910, it merges with:—2. One who picks up cigar-butts and cigarette-ends for his own consumption: perhaps throughout C. 20: 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'On the Road a hobo who can't mooch tobacco has to shoot snipes, a snipe being a partially smoked cigar or cigarette . . . Snipe-shooting . . . is practised chiefly by the aged . . . For [hobos] snipe-shooting is the last resort'; 1931, Stiff (the latter); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, (low) s. See snipe, n., 3, 4.

sniper. 'A private motorist, who does not pay taxi-licence fees, but who snipes fares from legitimate taxi-men,' Baker, 1945: Australian: since ca. 1935. Rather is it taxi-drivers' s. than c. That other Australian sense, 'an off-course book-maker' (Baker, 1945), is racing s.

snipes. Scissors: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'No slour'd hoxter my snipes could stay'; April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp', 'No fob could stay my penetrating snipes'—in burlesque of Ainsworth; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1874, H; 1890, B & L, 'Scissors for cutting off pockets'; ob. by 1903 (F & H); † by 1920. 'From to snip, to cut off with scissors' (B & L).—2. The sense 'fingers' is F & H's unjustified interpretation of the term in the Rookwood quot'n of sense 1.

snipp, n. See snip, n.

snipper. Rare for prop-getter, q.v. at ref. of 1924.

snips. Sessions Papers, Sept. 10, 1883, 'I asked him the meaning of snips, he said "Bad money"'; ob. Containing mere snips of gold or silver.—2. Scissors: 1908, W. H. Davies, The Autobiography of a Super-Tramp (see quot'n at rake, n., 2, which reproduces the printer's error—sniffs—of the 1st edition), the ref. being to ca. 1902; also American, as in Godfrey Irwin, 1931; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; extant. Ex the noise made by scissors: snip! snip!—3. 'A cutter for a chain,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: 1931, Irwin; extant. Ex 2.

snitch, n. A fillip: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'A Filip on the Nose'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; app. † by 1800. Perhaps a thinning of S.E. snatch, 'a sudden snap (at something)'.—2. Hence (?), a nose: 1698, B.E., 'Snite his Snitch, c. Wipe'—i.e., hit—'his Nose, or give him a good Flap on the Face'—repeated in A Canting Dict., 1725; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1753, John Poulter, who spells it snich; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1890 (B & L) it was ob.; 1897, W. S. Maughan, Liza of Lambeth, but as low s.—not as c.—3. See snitches.—4. See snitch, turn. By itself: 1797, Potter, 'Snitch . . . an accomplice turned evidence—an informer'—as also in Andrewes, 1809; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'The informer, or tale-bearer, in general, is called a snitch, or a snitching rascal, in which sense snitching is synonymous with nosing, or coming it'; 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'An informer . . . a spy'; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1902, Arthur Morrison, The Hole in the Wall; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective (U.S.A.); 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by M. Acklom; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; Nov. 20, 1926, Flynn's; Feb. 12, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, Clark & Eubank; July 13, 1929, Flynn's, Eddie Guerin, 'I Was a Bandit'; 1930, George Smithson; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1932, Jim Tully, Laughter in Hell; 1933, Ersine; 1935, James Spenser, The Five Mutineers; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper; extant. Ex sense 2; cf. nose, n., 1.—5. Hence, a prison trusty: U.S.A.: C. 20; e.g., Flynn's, July 17, 1926.

snitch, v. In B.E., 1698, at case, we find 'There's a peerey, 'tis snicht, c. there are a great many People, there's no good to be done', snitch seems to be a transitive variant of snilch; but prob. snicht here is simply a misprint for snilcht. The form, however, recurs in C. 18; e.g., in Sessions Papers, Jan. 1737, trial of Thomas Jenkins, 'They believ'd he was snitch'd'.—2. To catch (a person) in a criminal act: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'This Man was snicht, alias Napper' (misprint for napped), 'he went to pick a Gentleman's Pocket, and the Gentleman felt him, and deliver'd him to the Mob'; 1890, B & L, 'Snitched . . . caught, arrested'; 1938, Partridge, 'Very ob.'; by 1947, †. A thinning of 'to snatch'.—3. To inform, v.i.; on or upon, on or against (a fellow criminal or sharper): 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society, 'Instantly snitched upon'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1827, Sessions Papers; 1829, Maginn, Vidocq, III; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1837, Sessions Papers; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1848, Sinks of London; 1874, H; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1895, Caminada; 1903, F & H; 1912, D. Lowrie, My Life in Prison (U.S.A.); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1924, George Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black; Sept. 10, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, Clark & Eubank; May 18, 1929, Flynn's; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; 1945, Sydney Felstead, In Search of Sensation; extant. Perhaps ex sense 2 of the v., or ex sense 2 of the n.—4. Hence, to divulge: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'I learnt that Kate Cameron was taken, and had snitched everything'; 1903, F & H; † by 1920.—5. To sneak, to steal: U.S. tramps': 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures; 1928, May Churchill Sharpe; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too (English); extant. A perversion of S.E. snatch.

snitch, turn. To turn informer: 1785, Grose; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'To turn snitch, or snitcher . . .'; 1797, Sessions Papers (by implication); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1828, G. G., History of George Godfrey; 1838, Glascock; 1844, Sessions Papers; 1846, anon. translator of E. Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, Pt. 2, ch. xlviii; 1890, B & L; slightly ob. Cf. the C. 19 nose (an informer).

snitch for the forty. To lay information in order to obtain the blood-money (£40) paid for the apprehension of a notorious criminal: 1841, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1890. Cf. the entry at weigh and see snitch, v., 3.

snitchel, n. A fillip: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'A Filip on the Nose'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., mis-spells it snatchel; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1820. Perhaps an elaboration of snitch, n., 1.

snitchel, v. B.E., 1698 (at gig), 'Snichel the Gig, c. Fillip the Fellow on the Nose'; app. † by 1820. Ex the n.

snitcher. 'Snitchers are informers against their comrades, who'—the informers—'discover their haunts, and lay open their schemes': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, where it is shown that the term was applied orig. to a card-sharper or a sharpening dicer that, being refused his share by those whose machinations he has witnessed, goes to the victim and tells him how to recover his money; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (see snitch, turn); 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1891, Darkness and Daylight (U.S.A.); 1903, F & H; 1928, Chicago May; May 18, 1929, Flynn's; 1934, John G. Brandon, The One Minute Murder; extant. Prob. ex snitch, v., 3.—2. (Rare in singular.) See snitchers.—3. A detective: C. 20. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Ex 1.

snitcher, turn. See snitch, turn.

snitchers. Handcuffs: Scottish: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1903, F & H; 1904, Ex-Inspector Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1933, Mat Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby; extant. Ex snitch, v., 2.

snitches, the. Glanders: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Horse that . . . have the Sniches'; app. † by 1890. Perhaps ex snitch (to catch).—2. A variant of snitchers: 1903, F & H.

snitching, n. The vbl n. and the ppl adj. of snitch, v., esp. in sense 3; e.g., 'Crocker said, you snitching b—h, you are a snitch', Sessions Papers, Feb. 1797, p. 260.

snitching rascal. An informer; a tell-tale: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see snitch, n., 4); 1823, Egan's Grose; ob. by 1890; † by 1910. Ex snitch, v., 3; a mere variation of snitcher.

snite. 'To Wipe, or Flap', i.e., to hit or slap: 1698, B.E. (see quot'n at snitch, n., 2); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1903 (F & H). Perhaps, by distortion (influenced by the vowel in wipe), ex snitch, n., 1.

sniv. 'An expression synonymous with bender [see bender !], and used in the same manner': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1903 (F & H). Perhaps ex snivel(ler).—2. Hence, 'hold your tongue: or, sniv that': 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1903 (F & H).

snivel. 'One in Distress': 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; app. † by 1820. Ex his snivelling.

sniveller; usually pl. 'Cag-mag and snivellers (stinking meat and onions)': 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III; † by 1900. Because onions make one 'weep'.

snodder, 'one who dislikes spending': not c., but showmen's and cheapjacks' s. of late C. 19–20. Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934. Ex Yiddish.

snoodge and snoos(e). See snooze.

snooking ken is an error, on the title page of Sinks of London Laid Open, 1848, for snoozing ken.

snoop. To steal; a thief: 1925, Leverage; extant. He snoops around.

snoop joint. 'A place where crooks meet and hang out', Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. prec. entry.

snoos, snooze. See snooze, n.

snooser. See snoozer.

snoosey. See snoozy.

snootful, 'an excess of liquor; intoxication; hence, an excess of anything': low s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

snooze or snoodge, n. Sleep: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'The Cull is at Snoos'; the Man is at Sleep'; 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter (see rum snooze); 1831, W. T. Moncrieff, Van Diemen's Land (as snooze); by 1860, s. Echoic of a sleeper's breathing.—2. Hence, a bed, a lodging: 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Where can I get a snooze for this darky?'; 1839, Brandon, 'Snooze—a bed'; 1890, B & L; app. † by 1900.—3. A portion of snuff—or of a drug: U.S.A.: 1934, Rose; extant.—4. A three-months' prison-sentence: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1942. Compare Australian dream (six months) and rest (twelve months).

snooze or snoodge, v. To sleep: 1781 (implied in snoozer, 1); 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (both forms), 'To snooze with a mort; to sleep with a wench'; 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal. (both forms); 1812, J. H. Vaux (snooze); 1821, J. Burrowes (id.); 1823, Bee; 1838, Dickens; 1848, Sinks; by 1860 it was s.; by 1890, coll. In U.S.A., it was c. of ca. 1830–70 (e.g., in The Ladies' Repository, 1848). Prob. ex the n.

snooze-case. 'Snooze-cases—pillow-cases': 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxix; 1864, H, 3rd ed., where it is (one gathers) classified as s. Ex snooze, n., 1 or 2. snooze in Hedge Square. To sleep in the open: tramps': ca. 1860–1914. B & L, 1889, at blue blanket; 1893, F & H at Hedge Square. Cf. do a starry and doss with the daisies.

snooze(-)ken. A bed. See snuskin; 1903, F & H (snooze-ken).—2. A brothel: 1903, F & H; ob.—3, 4. See snoozing-crib, 2.

snoozer. A sleeper, one who sleeps: 1781, G. Parker (see rum snoozer); by 1850, low s.; by 1870, s. Ex snooze, v.—2. '“Snoozers”, or those who sleep at railway hotels, and decamp with some passenger's luggage or property in the morning': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25—but it occurs earlier in Bartlett, Americanisms, 1848 ('Snoozer. A thief who follows the business of robbing the boarders at hotels'), and still earlier in The National Police Gazette, Nov. 7, 1846 (glossed by Irwin in private letter as a 'hotel thief who uses "nippers" on locked door, sneaks in and robs sleeping guests'); Nov. 1870, The Broadway, 'Among Thieves', "Snoozers", who sleep at hotels and crib clothing'; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1903, F & H; ob.—3. A beggar-boy: U.S.A.: 1872, C. L. Brace, The Dangerous Classes of New York, p. 248; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; app. † by 1920.—4. A drink of strong liquor: U.S. tramps': 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 'Well, get a few snoozers in you an' tell 'em stories . . . They [prostitutes] fall for that like a yegg does for a safe'; extant. It sends one to sleep.

snoozing(-)crib; snoozing(-)ken. A brothel: 1782, Messink, The Choice of Harlequin (-ken); 1811, Lex. Bal. (id.); 1818, The London Guide (id.); 1818, J. J. Stockdale, Modern Belles (id.); 1852, 'The Cadger's Ball', in Labern's Popular Comic Song Book (as -crib); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), as ken; 1887, Baumann (id.); † by 1890 (B & L). See snooze, v.—2. A bedroom or a lodging-house: 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London (s.-ken, 'a sleeping room'); 1848 (U.S.A.), The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 'Snoozing ken—a boarding house'; 1903, F & H; † by 1937 (Irwin) in U.S.A.; ob. in Britain.—3. (More gen. perhaps in form snooze-ken.) A bed: 1903, F & H; rather ob.

snoozing jug. A low lodging-house: 1889 (see buskers' retreat); † by 1930.

snoozing(-)ken. See snoozing crib.

snoozy. A constable on night duty: 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, 'Snoosey, a night constable'; 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London, 'To gammon Old Snoozy, the night-constable'; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1870. Ex snooze, n., 1, or the v.

snort, n., 'a large glass of beer' (W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 1929), is not c., but s.—drinking s.

snort, v. To inhale narcotics: since ca. 1930. BVB. Cf. sniff, v., 1.

snot. A gentleman: 1839, Brandon; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; † by 1900. Perhaps a perversion of S.E. snob.

snotted, 'reprimanded', is not c., but low s.

snotter. A pocket handkerchief: 1830, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, VI, trial of John Stockings and Thomas Davis, for stealing a handkerchief, witness: 'I heard Stockings say to Davis, "What have you got?" he said, "Only a snotter'''; 1859, H, whose entry at snotter is ambiguous; 1890, B & L (by implication); † by 1920. With it, one wipes away snot (mucus).—2. Hence, a pickpocket specializing in (esp. silk) handkerchiefs: 1890, B & L; † by 1920.

snotter-hauler; snotter-hauling. A pickpocket specializing in handkerchiefs; specialized pickpocketry in handkerchiefs: 1859, H (the former); 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England (the latter); 1890, B & L (id.); † by 1920. See snotter, 1.

snottinger is 'a coarse word for a handkerchief' (H, 1864); not c.

snout, a hog's head, a C. 18 term recorded by A New Canting Dict., 1725, and by Grose, is perhaps s., not c.—2. 'In return for this kindness he would get an inch or two of tobacco, or "snout", as it was usually termed The thousand-and-one schemes which prisoners resort to in order to get "snout", and without the aid of an officer they can get none': 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; 1885, Arthur Griffiths, Fast and Loose; 1890, B & L; 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life; 1895, A. Griffiths, Criminals I Have Known; Sept. 9, 1896, Sessions Papers; 1903, No. 7, Twenty-Five Years in Seventeen Prisons; 1903, F & H; 1910, F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol; 1924, Stanley Scott, The Human Side of Crook and Convict Life; 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; 1932, Stuart Wood; 1932, The Rev. Frank Jennings; 1932, Jock of Dartmoor, Dartmoor from Within; 1936, W. Macartney, Walls Have Mouths; 1937, 'Red Collar Man', Chokey; 1938, H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks; 1939, Kylie Tennant, Foveaux (Australia); 1939, George Ingram, Welded Lives; 1940, Axel Bracey, Flower on Liberty; 1943, Black; extant. 'A playful allusion to "pig-tail", [a] roll of twisted tobacco': B. & L.—3. 'He was in reality a "snout" or "nark", i.e. an agent for the police, and from time to time had "given away" many of his comrades,' C. E. B. Russell, Young Gaol-Birds, 1910; 1931, Brown, 'Snout, Nose or Nark (Police informer)'; 1935, David Hume, Call In the Yard; 1936, David Hume, The Crime Combine; 1936, Grierson Dickson, Design for Treason; 1943, Black; extant.

snout-fair (comely, pretty) is by Harman, 1566, implied to be c.: 'Thys harlot was, as they terme it, snowte fayre'. But it is S.E. of C. 16-17; Tyndale before, and Quarles after, have it.

snout gaff. A tobacconist's shop: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid—but current since ca. 1925; 1937, Charles Prior, 'Because stolen cigarettes have such a ready sale since pin-table saloons, cut-price stores and cafés are all willing to buy, a snout-gaff is a sweet little job'; extant. See the elements.

snouty is a post-1930 variant of snout, 2. In, e.g., Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938.

snow, n. Linen; esp. linen left out on the grass or on a hedge to dry or to bleach: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (see nab the snow); Dec. 1789, Sessions Papers; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Clean linen from the washerwoman's hands, whether it be wet or dry, is termed snow'; 1839, Brandon; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'Prison term and Old Cant'; 1887, J. W. Horsley; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H, who imply that it is †—wrongly, for it recurs in sweep the snow, q.v. Ex its whiteness.—

D.O.U.

2. Hence, a piece of linen; a linen sheet: May 1, 1815, Sessions Papers, p. 269, 'He asked me if I wanted him about a snow'; app. † by 1900.—3. Cocaine: U.S.A. (by 1920, current in English c.): ca. 1898 (see snow-bird); 1906, as is clearly implied in E. Baker Quinn's story, 'The "Snow" Woman' in Flynn's, July 9, 1927; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1915, George Bronson-Howard (quot'n at sleigh-ride); 1922, Harry Kemp; 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights on Criminal Matters (England); 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson; 1925, J. C. Goodwin, Queer Fish; 1925, Netley Lucas, Autobiography; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Brown; 1931, Mrs Cecil Chesterton; 1931, Terence Horsley; 1933, Cecil de Lenoir; by 1934, s. in U.S.A.; 1934, Mary Ellison; 1935, The Garda Review; 1939, Kylie Tennant, Foveaux (Australia); 1943, Black; May 22, 1946, letter from J. B. Fisher (S. Africa). Ex its whiteness: compare the Fr. c. terms neige, blanc, poudre de riz, and the Ger. weisser Schnee (Arthur Woods, Dangerous Drugs, 1931). The French also call it coco, the Germans Tee.—4. Morphine: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'You need th' coke an' th' snow to help you keep your nerve'; 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch; extant. Cf.:—5. Heroin: U.S.A.: from ca. 1926: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'From the appearance of its crystals' (Irwin).—6. Silver coins: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'There's over £400 there in small notes and snow. It's a rent collector's office'; 1938, H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks, 'All silver coins are described as "snow" or "wedge", while copper coins are called "clods"'; extant. An adoption, ca. 1918, of military s.

snow, v. See snowing, go.

snow, small. Children's clothes: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; ob. A 'translation' of S.E. small clothes; see snow, n., 1.

snow, sweep the. See sweep the snow.

snow and rain. A train: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

snow(-)ball, n. A sugar loaf: 1732, trial of Thomas Beck, in Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, pub. in 1735, 'The same Night we got three Snow Balls—which we sold to a Person we call a Fence', the gloss being 'Sugar Loaves', a sugar loaf being 'a moulded conical mass of hard refined sugar' (O.E.D., which adds: 'now rarely made'); app. † by 1810. Ex shape.

snow-ball, v. See snow balling.

snow-bank, or one word. A cocaine 'dive': drug addicts': since ca. 1927. Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942. Cf. snow-storm.

snow(-)bird. A cocaine-user: in reference to—and valid for—the late 1890's and early 1900's, Anon., 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery', Flynn's, March 30, 1929, '"Snow-birds," as the coke-taker was often called'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1927, Kane; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; Dec. 6, 1930, Flynn's, U. V. Wilcox, 'The Devious Ways of Dopesters'; by 1933, police s.—witness Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man. See snow, n., 3.—2. Hence, morphine addict: 1925, Leverage; March 27, 1926, Flynn's; 1928, Chicago May; extant.—

Y

3. (Ex senses 1, 2.) Any drug addict: tramps': 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A heroin addict'; Nov. 1937, For Men Only, Robert Baldwin, 'Dopes Are Dopes'; extant.—4. 'A woman cocaine seller,' Brown, 1931: British: since ca. 1925.

snow boy. A variant of snow bird: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant.

snow-caine. Cocaine: 1942, BVB. A blend of snow, n., 3 + 'cocaine': on novocaine.

snow-drifter. An indulger in, a peddler of, narcotics: since ca. 1930. Castle, 1938.

snow-dropper or -gatherer. 'Snow-dropper—One who steals linen from hedges or drying grounds': 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxix; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25, '“Snow-Gatherers or those who steal clean clothes off the hedges”'; 1859, H, 'Snow Gatherers, rogues who steal linen from hedges and lines'; 1860, H, 2nd ed. (both forms); Nov. 1870, The Broadway (s.-gatherer); 1887, Baumann (id.); 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (s.d.); 1890, B & L (both); 1895, Caminada; 1903, F & H, who imply that both are †. See snow, n., 1.

snow-dropping; s.-gathering. 'Stealing linen off a hedge': 1839, Brandon (the former); 1859, Snowden (id.); 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, i; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England (former); 1884, J. McGovan, Traced and Tracked (id.); 1887, Baumann; 1890, Clarkson & Richardson, The Rogue's Gallery (id.); 1890, B & L (id.); 1903, F & H, who imply that it is †. See snow, n., 1.

snow fall, snow-fall, snowfall. A bout of cocaine- or morphine-taking: May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant. See snow, n., 3, 4.

snow-flier. A tramp that gets himself into jail for the sake of the winter lodging and shelter: tramps': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. I.e., snow-fleer.

snow(-)flower. A girl addicted to morphine: 1925, Leverage; extant. See snow, n., 4; a poetic flight—prob. a snow-bird's dream.

snow-hunting or snow-sweeping. The theft of laundry from the clothes-line: 1931, Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Book (the former); 1939, David Hume, Death before Honour (the latter); extant.

snow-prigging, n. The stealing of washed linen from hedges: 1797, Potter; † by 1890. See snow, n., 1, and prigging.

snow(-)storm. 'An abundance of morphine, cocaine, etc.,' Leverage, 1925; as a place where drugs can (easily) be bought—Flynn's, July 23, 1927; 1930, Burke; extant. Ex snow, n., 3 and 4.

snow-sweeping. See snow-hunting.

snowball. Powdered narcotic: addicts': since ca. 1925. BVB. Cf. snow, n., 3–5.

snowballing. 'Stealing wet clothes from lines in back yards,' Ex-Sgt B. Leeson, Lost London, 1934: late C. 19–20. Ex snow, n., 1; cf. snow-dropping.

snowbank. See snow-bank and cf. snowfall.

snowed under; snowed up. 'Dope-filled,' Rose, 1934 (the former): addicts': since ca. 1920: Flynn's, April 1942, James Edward Grant (the latter); 1942, BVB cites also snowed and snowed in. See snow, 3.

snowfall. See snow fall.

snowing, go. To go out 'to steal linen in process of drying in gardens': 1869, James Greenwood,

The Seven Curses of London; 1890, B & L; app. † by 1920. Ex snow, n., 1.

snowstorm. See snow storm.

snowte fayre. See snout-fair.

snowy. Linen; esp. linen hung out to dry: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob. A variant of snow, 1.

snozzler. See schnozzler.

snudge. 'One that lies under the bed to rob the house,' i.e., a burglar that enters a house quietly, hides under the bed, waits a favourable opportunity, and then steals at leisure: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, where it is misprinted sundge; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1860. By 1840, current in U.S.A.—witness Judson, 1851. Perhaps a blend of sneak and budge. —2. The accomplice of a 'budge': 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers (see quot'n at budge and snudge—a source that makes it clear that he gets the name because he 'snudges', i.e., sneaks, 'away'); app. † by 1720.

snuff, n. Tobacco: mostly convicts': 1925, Netley Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook; extant. Snuff consisting of a fine tobacco.

snuff, v. 'Snuffing, going into a shop on some pretence, watching an opportunity to throw a handful of snuff in the eyes of the shop-keeper, and then running off with any valuable article you can lay hands on; this is called snuffing him, or giving it to him upon the snuff racket', J. H. Vaux, 1812—plagiarized in Egan's Grose, 1823; 1887, Baumann; app. † by 1920.—2. To blow open: U.S.A.: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, M. Acklom, 'If a pete intends to snuff a drum . . .'; 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night Hawk; 1928, J. K. Ferrier, Crooks and Crime (see quot'n at shoot, 3); extant.

snuff, up to. 'shrewd', 'alert', 'fly': s., not c. as stated in Egan's Grose, 1823. But it may have been c. in U.S.A. ca. 1830–80: see, e.g., Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872. I.e., capable of taking one's snuff with skill and aplomb.

snuff a bloke's candle, 'to kill a man', is asserted by Ware (1910) to be C. 18 c.; but bloke did not, I believe, exist so early. It may, just possibly, have been c. of ca. 1840–90. To put out his light, brief as that of a candle.

snuff a person's wick. 'If they'—gangsters—'kill anyone in connection with a cat-up . . . they bumped, croaked or snuffed the wick of a person,' Convict, 1934: since early 1920's. Cf. snuff a bloke's candle.

snuff diver. 'A pervert narcotic dope,' BVB: drug traffic: since ca. 1930.

snuff racket. See snuff, v.

snuffer. A safe-blower: prob. since ca. 1910: 1913 (in drum-snuffer); 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night Hawk; slightly ob. Ex snuff, v., 2.

snuffer gang. A gang of thieves specializing in drugging the prospective victim with a stupefying powder that looks like snuff: 1903, Ernest A. Carr, 'Criminal London', in G. R. Sims, Living London, III; extant.

snuffing. See snuff.

snuffy. 'Drunkish', The London Guide, 1818; 'drunk', Egan's Grose, 1823; † by 1890.—2. A sniffer of, e.g., heroin: U.S. drug addicts': since ca. 1920. Francis Chester, Shot Full 1938. Cf. sniff, n., 1, and v., 1.

snug !, all's. All is safe !: 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker (loquiter Bulk, a pickpocket's accomplice), 'Come, come, all's snug; let us be gone'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Us'd by Villains, when every thing is silent, and they hear no body stir to oppose their intended Rogueries'; 1785, Grose, 'All is quiet'; 1810, Sessions Papers; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1903, F & H, who imply that it is †. Cf. all's rug (at rug . . .) and the proverbial as snug as a bug in a rug.

snuge is Potter's spelling (1797), and Andrewes's (1809), of snudge, 1.

snuskin. A bed: U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; † by 1890. Presumably snoozekin = snooze-ken, a sleep-place. Cf. snooze-ken, 2.

snyde. See snide, adj., references of 1869, 1887.

snyder. See snider.

snydey. See snidey.

snylch. See snilch.

so(-)so ! Goodbye !: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ob.

soaf, n. and v. A betrayal; to betray the secret of (a friend, associate, accomplice): 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Prob. a corruption of soak, 3.

soak. In soak, 'in pawn', may orig. (ca. 1870) have been c., but prob. it was always low s.; the same applies to soak, 'to pawn (something)'. The n. occurs in Darkness and Daylight, 1891; the v. in J. Maitland, The American Slang Dict., 1891; and soaks, 'a pawnbroker', in Leverage, 1925. Semantics: to put in pickle.—2. To strike (a person): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, both as 'to hit' and as 'to assault'; 1927, Francis C. Coe, Me—Gangster; 1931, IA; extant. Cf. sock, v.—3. (Hence ?) to inflict a severe imprisonment sentence on: 1907 (but valid throughout C. 20), Jack London, The Road, 'I had just come out of jail, where I had been three days and I knew that if the police "pinched" me again, I'd get good and "soaked"'; by 1925 (as in Jim Tully, Beggars of Life) it was also police s. Cf. sock, v., 1.—4. To hide: ca. 1912, George Bronson-Howard, The Snob, 'Soak that gun'; extant—but by 1940 it was low s. Ex sense 1.—5. 'To spend a time in a prison dark-cell,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: Nov. 17, 1928, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'The three burglars had been "soaked" in solitary confinement for the night'; extant.

soaker, 'a drunkard', is very far from being c.—2. "'Oh, it was a soaker [a sickening experience], Cig," he said,' J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 'The Tramps' Jargon', 1899; 1942, BVB; extant. A drencher—a damper.—3. A dark-cell in a prison: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.—4. A brutal prison-warder: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

soap, n. Money: 1859, Matsell; Oct. 7, 1865, The National Police Gazette; 1885, 'Le Jemlys' (A Chicago Detective), Shadowed to Europe; 1890, B & L; by 1903 (F & H) it was no longer c. Prob. in reference to soft, 1.

soap, v. To plug the cracks in (a safe): 1924, implied in soaping; 1925, Leverage; by 1935, police j. The 'soaper' does actually use soap.

soap racket. 'The prison trick of eating soap, which results in heart palpitations, rapid pulse, violent retching and prostration,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1919.

soap(-)trick, the. A swindling trick effected by sleight of hand; a vendor of soap pretends to put into a 'lucky dip' bag a cake of soap enveloped in a five-dollar bill: since ca. 1880: 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob.

soaper. 'Soapers (American thieves), men who practise the soap trick': 1890, B & L; † by 1920.

—2. That member of a safe-blowing gang who plugs the cracks in a safe: 1925, Leverage; extant. See soaping.

soaping. 'Soaping up of cracks of safe preparatory to blowing it open,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; by 1935, police j. See soap, v.

sob-stiff. A professional beggar: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the pitiful tales he tells: with a pun on s. sob-stuff.

social tap. 'Crook's "tap" on victim's head with blackjack, revolver, iron bar, or such,' Kernôt, 1929–31; extant. Humorous.

sock, n. A pocket: 1698, B.E., 'Not a Rag in my Sock', c. I han't a Farthing in my Pocket'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1860. Cf. sack, of which it may be a mere phonetic variant.—2. Hence, a pocket-book: U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Pocketbook'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'The pocket or bank-roll'; 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex the deposit of money in stockings.

sock, v. To beat or thrash: 1698, B.E., 'I'll Sock ye, c. I'll Drub ye rightly' (? 'tightly')—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; by 1780, s. In the U.S.A., it may have been c. of ca. 1790–1910: witness, e.g., No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, 'Sock. To assault.' Perhaps a phonetic perversion (and sense-change) of 'to sack' or pillage.—2. To pawn (something): U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; extant.

socket. 'This Count Tomaso is on the socket, which is a way of saying his dodge is blackmail,' Damon Runyon, Take It Easy, 1938: since ca. 1930. With a pun on sock, v., 1.

sod. A sodomite: 1859, Matsell; by 1903 (F & H) it was English low s. and very rare in U.S.A.—2. A person (usually male) sodden with drink; a man very drunk: C. 20: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1933, no longer c.

soda. See Zodiac.—2. A dupe; an easy victim: Australian: since the 1920's. Baker, 1942. Either because soda is a soft drink, contrasted with 'something hard' (a spirit), or because to swindle a dupe is as easy as to drink soda with one's brandy or whiskey.

soft, n. Paper money; currency and bank-notes: 1820, W. T. Moncrieff, The Collegians, 'Walk over a twenty pound Henry Hase,'—s. for a currency or bank-note—'show the soft, and treat us with a little lush'; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'He snatched out his pocket-book, (which, by the bye, was full of soft)'; 1823, Egan's Grose, 'Soft. Bank-notes'—in other words the term is collective, with no pl.; ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack; 1859, H wrongly imputes obsolescence; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; extant. I.e., soft as compared with coin; perhaps short for soft money.—2. Hence, a counterfeit bank-note, as in 1826 (see screen, 2), or as in The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.) of 1845, 'Passing the soft (forged checks)'; in the Gazette of Jan. 30, 1847, however, the reference is to bank-notes; Jan. 10, 1876, Sessions Papers, 'I said . . . "How about this case," and he replied, "You —, I have no soft on me this time"'; 1903, F & H; extant.—3. A mattress: South America: C. 20. Harry Franck, Working North from Patagonia, 1921. Soft to sleep on.

soft, adj. (Of a place, a safe, etc.) easy to burgle: 1926, Jack Black (see quot'n at go against); extant. Cf. soft game.

soft, do. To utter counterfeit notes: 1903, F & H—but prob. existing since ca. 1850; extant. See soft, n., 1.

soft as a whore-lady's heart. See as soft . . .

soft cove, 'a fool easily imposed upon' (Bee, 1823), may have been c. until ca. 1850, by which date it was certainly low s.

soft crawler. See sandstone.

soft game. Any card-game in which the sharper's or sharpers' opponents are unskilled and innocent: card-sharpers': 1894, J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats; by 1920, no longer c. Cf. s. softy, 'a very gullible (or tender-hearted) person'.

soft heel. A detective: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex its coll. sense, 'one who wears rubber heels and soles': cf. soft shoe.

soft scratch. 'A signature easily forged,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See scratch, n.

soft-shoe. A railroad-company detective: tramps': 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp (see quot'n at yard bull . . .); extant. Cf. soft heel and gumshoe.

soft song man. A confidence trickster: since ca. 1920. Howard N. Rose, 1934. Short for peewee soft song man.

soft stuff. 'The "box" was open and I saw a stack of "soft stuff" (paper money) that would make Rockefeller's mouth water,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, IA; by 1932, Canadian; anon. letter, June 1, 1946 (Canadian). Contrast hard stuff.

soft Tommy. A penny-dropping, indiscriminate 'patron of beggars' is, by the beggars themselves, 'called a soft "Tommy", and the act of giving to the beggars is called "tumbling"': 1853, 'Rescued from the Beggars', by Dr Guy, in C. J. Talbot's Meliora, 2nd Series; † by 1910. Prob. ex soft tommy, s. for 'bread', in opp. to s. hard tommy, 'ship's biscuits'.

soho. A C. 18 card-sharpers' term, employed esp. in faro: 1726, Anon., The Art and Mystery of Gaming detected, 'Let me advise every one to take care of himself, for you are as in as much danger when you Deal as when you Punt, if not more; since in less than two Deals you will have all the Cards mark'd, or the whole Pack chang'd upon you, or an additional Number of about 10 Cards; the Cant Word is Soho, the same as when you find a Hare sitting'—i.e., the interjectional soho! of hare-coursing; prob. † by 1800.

sol. Solitary confinement: 1930, Burke (quot'n at meshuga); 1934, Convict; extant.

sold down the river. Sent to prison on a frame-up: since the 1920's. Castle, 1938.

sold like a bullock in Smithfield. See sell.

sold out. See sell out.

soldier, n. and v. (To stand guard as) an outside man in a burglary, esp. in a bank-robbery: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; Dec. 19, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn (the n.); 1933, Ersine (id.); 1934, Rose (id.); extant. He carries a gun; his 'duty' resembles that of a soldier on sentry-go.

soldier moll; soldier's moll. The earliest printed record I have found of this example of prostitutes' c. is in May Churchill Sharpe's autobiography, Chicago May, 1928, in reference to the London of 1898: 'She had got some girls into her house. They were what are known as soldiers' molls, i.e., women of easy virtue who are not professionals'; ibid., '“Soldier Annie”, a very common soldier moll'; by 1920, ob. An 'enthusiastic amateur': orig., one unreluctant to accommodate a soldier.

soldier's maund. A self-induced sore (see cleyme) on a beggar: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'The [counterfeit] Souldier hath his Soare alwayes on his left arme, (unlesse hee be left-handed, for then because of the better use of that hand it is upon the right) betwixt the elbow and the wrest [sic], and is called by the name of Souldiers Mawnd'; 1698, B.E., 'Souldiers-Mawnd, c. A Counterfeit Sore or Wound in the Left Arm'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; app. † by 1840. Origin: maund here = a means of begging; cf. footman's maund and mason's m.—2. Hence, the pretended soldier that practises this dodge: 1785, Grose; † by ca. 1840.

solid. Taking the third degree without confessing or impeaching; completely trustable by the underworld: 1933, Ersine, both of these nuances; 1934, Howard N. Rose (former nuance); 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall (latter); extant. 'Solid all through.'

solitary, 'solitary confinement—and the cell one does it in': British and American prison coll., not c.

sollamon, solomon; or either with capital. Variants of salmon, q.v., R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665, 'Solomon . . . The Mass'; Holme, 1688 (Solomon); 1698, B.E. (Solomon); 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (solomon); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870.

solo, n. and v. A burglar, pickpocket, grafter working habitually alone; to be a burglar, etc., working alone, to do a 'job' alone: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. lone wolf.—2. See do a solo.

solomon. See sollamon.

something. A girl, a young woman; collectively for girls, young women, esp. prospective prostitutes: British and American white-slavers': C. 20. In, e.g., H. Wilson Harris, Human Merchandise, 1938 (American souteneur log.) 'I can show you places where swell joints'—brothels—'opened up, and inside of a week they got hocked (raided). Tell me, who the devil is going to take a chance and spend money bringing something (i.e., girls) over here when things are like that?'

son, St Peter's. See Saint Peter's children.

son-lo. See san-lo.

son of a bitch. A mess of meat, bread, vegetables, etc.: tramps': ? since ca. 1905: 1922, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life (see slum, n., 11); extant. Neatly pejorative.

son of Adam. A tramp willing to work for a snack or a meal: tramps': since ca. 1920. Stiff, 1931.

song and dance. 'A begging story or trick,' J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers that Prey, where the sense is 'a criminal's plausible plea or defence before a judge'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Stiff, 'To give the madam at the backdoor an interesting and entertaining argument'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by ca. 1930, common among British tramps (Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932); extant. Cf. British coll. song and dance, 'fuss; excessive speech'.—2. Pants (trousers): Pacific Coast (U.S.A.): C. 20. Convict, 1934; M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

song and sigh. A thigh: British and American prostitutes, pimps, white-slavers: C. 20. May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story, 1928. Rhyming. For a list of rhyming s. terms adopted by the American underworld, see Chicago May and The American Mercury, May 1928, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; in the latter it is called 'Australian slang'—'This Australian slang is very common among American thieves today'.

sonkey. Clumsy: 1893, A. Griffiths, A Prison Princess (p. 34): prob. low s., not c.

sonny, v. To notice: 1893 (but prob. valid for 1845), F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy (p. 412), "'You sonnied the bloke as tharied you jest as the rattler was startin'?"', glossed as 'You noticed the man who spoke to you'; † by 1920. Humorously ex granny, v.

soogan or sugan. A blanket, a bed comforter, a quilt: tramps: C. 20: 1931, Stiff (sugan); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict (soogan, a blanket). 'From the Montana and Wyoming range country, where the cow-punchers and sheepherders originated the name. Strictly speaking, a soogan is not a bed-roll, although the name is often given to the complete outfit of bedding' (Irwin).

soogan, 'a hay rope', is tinkers' s., not c.: 1890, B & L.

sooner. A person too hasty or optimistic, either by temperament or on a specific occasion: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, p. 261, 'Everything was rosy, the cush was coming strong and I was patting this ginny on the hump, but I was a sooner . . . Everything looked bright. I was obtaining money easily and I was congratulating myself on my good fortune, but I was too hasty'; by 1910, s. A 'too-sooner'.

sooper. An occ. spelling of souper and super.

soor dook. See sour dook.

soot. Gunpowder: 1935, The Garda Review; extant. Ex the black smudge it tends to cause on being exploded.

soot bag, 'a reticule', may orig. (— 1839) have been c., but prob. it was always low s. Brandon; Snowden, 1857. Perhaps ex its usual colour: black.

sop, 'a bribe' (Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859), is not c.—2. Gravy: tramps: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'That in which bread is sopped'. Variant: soppins (Irwin).

soppins. See sop, 2.

sorrowful tale. A prison-sentence, a term in prison: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Rhyming on jail.

soss brangle. 'Sosse brangle, a slatternly wench' (Grose, 1785), is not c., but s. and dial.

soubrem. 'A false name; an alias,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex Fr. sou terrain, 'subterranean'?

souldiers' maund. See soldier's maund.

sound, v., 'to pump' a person, is S.E.; not c. nor even s., as its presence in Vaux's Flash Language might lead the unwary to suppose.—2. Hence, in the specific underworld sense exemplified in sound a cly: 1812, Vaux; 1823, Sessions Papers; July 7, 1847, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1865, E. H. Savage, Police Recollections (U.S.A.), as vb1 n. sounding; 1903, F & H; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys (U.S.A.); extant.—3. To investigate the possibilities of robbing a person or of burgling a building: U.S.A.: 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; by ca. 1925, current in Britain (Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933); extant—though ob. in U.S.A. A special application of S.E. sound, 'to test; to examine; to discover the attitude of'.

sound, adj. Trustworthy; 'one of us': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'With his past performances he was considered "sound"'; ob. by 1910; virtually † by 1930. Cf. right and square.

sound a cly. 'To touch a person's pocket [cly] gently on the outside, in order to ascertain the nature of its contents': 1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan's Grose, 1823; 1903, F & H; by 1910, †. See sound, v., 2, and cly, n., 2.

sounder. He who, in a gang of burglars, makes a reconnaissance of the surroundings, the exterior, the interior of a building, and of the habits of the inmates: 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; † by 1940. Ex sound, v.—2. A white-slaver's agent, who 'sounds' and procures girls: white-slave traffic: C. 20. Mrs A. Mackirdy & W. N. Willis, The White Slave Market, 1912. Cf. next sense.—3. See nit. The term is ob. Ex sound, v., 2 and 3.

soup, n.; occ. supe. A watch: 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, 'A skin or a soup (a purse or watch)'; † by 1920. A shortening of souper.—2. 'Soup . . . (Burglars), melted plate; it is sometimes called white soup' (but white soup, q.v., is silver plate, whereas soup is generic for any plate, whether gold or silver): 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; extant. Prob. from white soup.—3. Nitroglycerin: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1916, Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in the Underworld; April 1919, The Bookman (U.S.A.), article by M. Acklom; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night Hawk; 1927, R. Nichols & J. Tully, Twenty Below; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1928, J. K. Ferrier; May 18, 1929, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan; Feb. 22, 1930, Flynn's; Aug. 2, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; Jan. 24, 1931, Flynn's; 1931, Urbain Ledoux; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; and so very many times since! By 1935 (The Garda Review), current in Britain. 'Nitroglycerin is so called because of its consistency,' Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 1923; also because 'criminals get this explosive by breaking up sticks of dynamite, dissolving the pieces in boiling water, and skimming off the grease,' Ersine.—4. Gelignite: New Zealand: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter); extant. An extension of sense 3, as is:—5. 'Narcotics injected into horses,' BVB, 1942: U.S.A.

soup, v. To apply nitroglycerin to a safe and therewith blow it open: July 3, 1926, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'They're old safes . . . I can't soup this one. There's a watchman up the block'; Sept. 7, 1935, Flynn's, Ex-Burglar, 'Why Burglars Become Bandits'; Dec. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; extant. Ex sense 3 of the n.

soup, thrash out the. See thrash out . . .

soup-house. A cheap restaurant: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. soup-shop.

soup-kettle. "You keep the soup-kettle" (melting-pot [for stolen plate and jewels]) "going pretty briskly, I hope?": 1890, James Greenwood, Fair Phyllis of Lavender Wharf; extant. Cf. soup, n., 1.

soup man. A safe-blower using soup, 3: July 11, 1925, Flynn's; Dec. 11, 1926, Flynn's; April 28, 1928, Flynn's; Aug. 10, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant. See soup, n., 3.

soup-shop. 'A place where melting-pots are always kept ready, the price not being paid to burglars and thieves who have come to dispose of plate till the recognition of the plunder is no longer possible,' B & L, 1890, but recorded by O.E.D. for 1854; 1903, F & H; extant. See soup, n., 2, and cf. soup-kettle.

soup-worker. A burglar that uses nitroglycerin (soup, 3): 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue; extant.

souper or super (the better form). A watch (time-piece): 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, "I lost my souper"; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), Super or Souper; Dec. 1862, Sessions Papers, 'Brown said, "Let the old b—r go, he has got no super"—that is a slang word which thieves use for a watch'; ca. 1864, The Chickeleary Cove; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England (super); 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.: super); 1876, P. Farley, Criminals of America; 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective (U.S.A.); 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1890, B & L; 1893, P. H. Emerson; April 1897, Popular Science Monthly (U.S.A.); 1903, F & H; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1909, Ware; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man (as souper); Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest, article, 'Do You Speak "Yegg"?' (super); April 1919, The (American) Bookman; Jan. 31, 1925, Flynn's (James Jackson); Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; March 2, 1929, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan; by 1931, pitchmen's s.—teste Godfrey Irwin—in U.S.A.; even in 1949, still c. in Britain. Perhaps cf. Shelta slupen.—2. A safe-blower: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex soup, n., 3; cf. :—3. A workman in an explosives factory: U.S.A.: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; extant.

souper-screwing. A rare form of super-screwing.

sour, n. Counterfeit money, esp. coin; properly, (the) sour is generic, a sour is particular (a counterfeit coin): 1883, J. Greenwood, both in singular (planting the sour) and in the pl. ('A "smasher" . . . a dealer in counterfeit coin, or "sours", as in criminal phraseology they were sometimes called'): 1887, Baumann; 1888, J. Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; 1890, B & L; 1894, J. Greenwood, Behind a 'Bus; 1903, F & H; extant. B & L think that there is a connexion with onions, which in certain dialects are sours: in It. c. argume, lit. 'onions', and in Fr. c. oignons, mean 'money, coin'.

sour, adj. Worthless; esp. in sour paper, counterfeit paper-money: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (both the simple term and the phrase); extant. Ex the n.

sour, plant the. To get rid of counterfeit coin: 1883, James Greenwood, Tag, Rag & Co., 'The tradesman on whom her "poor old man" had tried to "plant the sour", had sent for a constable'; ibid., ch. III is entitled 'Planting the "sours"': 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; extant. See sour, n.

sour dook; pron. soor dook. Buttermilk: Scottish convicts': C. 20. March 1932, The Fortnightly Review, T. B. Gibson Mackenzie, 'The British Prison'.

sour paper. Bad checks (anglicé, cheques): 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1927 and 1931—see sour, adj.; 1941, Maurer, 'Forged cheques, especially after one has been caught passing them'; extant.

sour-planter; sour-planting. He who passes counterfeit coin; the passing thereof: 1883, James Greenwood, Tag, Rag & Co., 'I was a branch of the "sour planting" business'; ibid., 'Admired by the "sour planter" herself'; 1887, Baumann (the latter); 1890, B & L (the former); 1903, F & H; extant. See sour, n.

sours. See sour, n.

sours, swallow the. To hide counterfeit money from the police: 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen; ob. See sour, n.

souse, n., 'a drunkard; a wash-up after a dirty piece of work': (low) s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

souse, v. 'To plunder or kill': 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1800. Either ex † S.E. souse, 'to strike heavily, to knock down', or ex hawking souse, 'to strike down' (a bird).—2. To eat: U.S.A.: 1848, The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). Cf. S.E. 'to guzzle'.

sout is the Afrikaans form of salt, 2: C. 20. (C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946.) Ex Dutch zout.

south, 'stowed away, concealed' (Jackson & Hellyer, 1914), has almost certainly been always s. in U.S.A., as in the British Empire. Put it south orig. meant 'put it (money) down'; i.e., into a trousers-pocket. Note, however, that Ersine, 1933, says, 'An imaginary place where stolen goods goes [sic]. "Pete went south with my benny"' and that Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 1936, states, "'Going South" in convict language means "sticking the money in your pocket"'.

south of the equator. An elevator or lift: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1910. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

South Sea. Gin: 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker (see quot'n at white tape); 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'A strong distill'd Liquor, so called by the Inhabitants and Clients of Newgate, &c.'; app. † by 1780. To investors, South Sea stocks and shares (inaugurated in 1711) >, in 1720, a gin or trap.

South Sea for (period), go on a trip to the. To go to prison for (period specified): 1936, Wilfred Macartney, Walls Have Mouths; extant. Euphemistic; cf. the semantics of south.

South Sea Mountain is a synonym of South Sea; the third element having been added, prob. for elaboration or perhaps in reference to the South Sea Bubble's having become a mighty, an imposing legend: 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker, 'Here's rare South-Sea Mountain for you'; 1725,

A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, where the printer's type has got jumbled into an absurdity; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London. For origin, see South Sea.

Sow-Belly Hack Line, the. A railroad in central Tennessee: tramps': 1925, Glen H. Mullin (see quot'n at Milk Poultrice Route, the); extant. Tennessee is famed for farming and contains more swine than any other edible domestic animal.

sowr. 'To beat violently': 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Sour the Cull'; i.e. Knock him down; Beat him without Mercy, &c.'; app. † by 1840. Cf. the American s. sour on, to go 'sour' on (a person).

sow's baby, 'a sucking pig', is not c., but s. The same comment applies to sow's baby, 'a sixpence'.

spaar bok. See bok.

spab, v. To arrest (a person): 1925, Leverage; ob. Prob. via Yiddish ex Ger. spähen, 'to watch'.

spabber. A policeman: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Ex spab, v.; cf. Ger. Späher, 'an eye that watches' (cf. eye).

spabs, the. The police in general: 1925, Leverage; ob. Ex spab rather than ex spabber.

space. A year in prison: since the 1890's: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, '... Was given eighteen spaces in Sing Sing'; 1925, Leverage, 'Spaces', n. pl. Years spent (or to be spent) in prison'; 1930, Burke, 'He's inside with a ten space hitch'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Prob. suggested by stretch, n., 4.

spady. 'A heel, yap,' Ersine: since ca. 1925. Prob. in ref. to use of spades on farms.

spangle; usually pl. B.E., 1698, 'Spangles, c. ends of Gold or Silver'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1790. Ex shininess.—2. Hence (?), a seven-shilling piece: esp. counterfeiters': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1900. A seven-shilling piece was made of gold.

Spanish is not, except in Spanish cog, a c. epithet, although it is common in s. and coll.; see esp. 'Offensive Nationality' in my Words, Words, Words! and the Spanish entries in A Dictionary of Slang and Unconventional English.

Spanish cog(g). See cog, n., 2.

Spanish guitar. A cigar: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Spanish lurk, the. 'I met at Gravesend with seven chaps out on "the Spanish lurk" as they called it—that is, passing themselves off as wounded men of the Spanish Legion': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; app. † by 1900. The practitioners were known as Spanish lurkmen. See lurk, n., and cf. foreigner's lurk.

spank, n. See spankers.—2. The spank, the method and/or the practice of robbery as described in spank, v.: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1890. Ex the v.—3. A spank, an instance of such robbery: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see spank, v.); † by 1890.

spank, v. 'To spank a glaze, is to break a pane of glass in a shop window, and make a sudden snatch at some article of value within your reach, having previously tied the shop-door with a strong cord on the outside, so as to prevent the shopman from getting out, till you have had full time to escape with your booty; to spank a place is to rob it upon the spank; a spank is a robbery effected by the above means': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1839, Brandon, 'Break a window with the fist'; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed. (s. the g.); 1903, F & H; † by 1910—perhaps, indeed, by 1880 or even 1870. Ex S.E. spank, to strike: cf. strike, v.

spank, on (or upon) the. See spank, v.

spank a (or the) glaze. See spank, v.

spankers; spans. Money in coin: 1725, Anon., The House-Breaker, 'He has Spans enough, he'll go in a Rattler to be sure'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Spans, Money, [in] Gold or Silver'; 1785, Grose (both forms); † by 1903 F & H). Perhaps ex the ringing sound they emit when struck smartly (or spanked).

spanking is the vbl n. corresponding to spank a glaze; in, e.g., J. H. Vaux, Memoirs, 1819.

spans. See spankers.

spark, n.; usually pl. A diamond: 1857, The Times, Dec. 5 (cited by 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 2nd ed., 1859), 'These things are sparks'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); Oct. 7, 1865, The National Police Gazette; 1874, H., 'Sparks, diamonds. Term much in use among the lower orders, and generally applied to stones in rings and pins'; 1890, B & L; 1894, A. Morrison, Martin Hewitt, Investigator; by 1900, low s. in England; in U.S.A., c. until ca. 1910, the word occurring, e.g., in Flynt's Tramping with Tramps, 1899, and No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904. Ex its lustre.—2. Hence, a diamond ring: 1863 (see twist, v., 2); Oct. 18, 1939, The Press (Christchurch, N.Z.), a police-court report; extant.—3. A clever thief: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. A 'bright spark'.—4. A cartridge; a shot: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. On being fired . . .—5. See sparks, 2.

spark, v. To watch (a person) closely: 1901, Walker, In the Blood, 'All you've got to do is to be sure o' your John [or policeman], an' learn the time 'e comes round, spark him well away and do yer little does in the blooming hinterval', quoted by F & H, 1903; 1942, Baker (Australia). As a spark ('masher') watches a woman?

spark-fawney. 'Bill had . . . pinched a swell of a spark-fawney', glossed as 'Bill had . . . robbed a well-dressed gentleman of a diamond ring': 1859, Matsell; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, 'Next I cops his spark-fawney. That was my last trick . . . I fenced the fawney for fifty'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; slightly ob. See the elements.

spark-prop. 'My pal said, "Pipe his spark prop" (diamond pin)': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights, 'A tie-pin, or "spark prop"'. See spark, n., 1, and prop.

sparkle. A diamond: 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen (jewellery); 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open, 'Jewellery is "sparkle"': extant. Cf. spark, n., 1.—2. Hence, a diamond ring: U.S.A.: 1916, Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in the Underworld; extant.—3. (Ex sense 1.) Jewellery: 1931, Brown; extant.

sparkler, 'a diamond', is not c., but low s., despite Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924. The same applies to sparklers, 'eyes', despite Leverage, 1925.

sparks. See spark, n., 1.—2. 'Plainclothes police officers; detectives,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since ca. 1918.

sparring bloke, 'a pugilist'; not c., but low s.

sparrow cop. 'A park policeman,' Ersine: since ca. 1925. Derisive.

sparsi (or -y) is an occ. variant of spras(e)y, q.v. at spraser. (James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 1937.)

speak, n. See speak, make a.—2. Hence, loosely, a burglary: 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London, Act III, 'He's closing up his crib—he fears a speak'; † by 1890.—3. A 'speakeasy' (illicit liquor-saloon): U.S.A.: 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls, 'If one of his personal friends wishes to buy a drink, Charley always sends him to Jack Fogarty's little speak down the street, and in fact Charley will generally go with him'; Feb. 6, 1932, Flynn's, Bill Hawley, 'Lady Luck'; by 1933, police and journalistic s.

speak, v. To rob (v.i.): 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'Having lately spoke, and that roundly too, (alias committed a Robbery) in Money and Goods'; 1721, trial of Mary Roberts, reported in Select Trials, from 1720 to 1724, pub. in 1734; 1797, Potter, 'to steal, to take away'; 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A thief will say to his pall who has been attempting any robbery, "Well, did you speak? or, have you spoke?" meaning, did you get any thing?'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1903 (F & H). Cf. speak with (esp. the 2nd quot'n in sense 1).—2, 3. See speak to and speak with.

speak, make a. 'Speak, Any thing stolen. He has made a good speak; he has stolen something considerable,' Lex. Bal., 1811, but occurring, as 'to speak' alone, in Sessions Papers, May 1792, p. 280, 'She said that she knew of a good speak, and she would row in it', where speak means rather 'goods to be stolen' or 'stealable goods'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Committing any robbery, is called making a speak; and if it has been productive, you are said to have made a rum speak'; 1842, Pierce Egan, 'The By-Blow of the Jug' in Captain Macheath; † by 1903 (F & H). The n. speak comes ex speak, v.

speak-easy. See speakeasy.

speak-softly shop, 'the house of a smuggler' (Bee, 1823), may have been c.; app. it was † by 1880.

speak to. To apprehend, to arrest: 1797, Potter, 'Spoke to, taken by an officer' of the law; 1809, Andrewes; app. † by 1860. Cf. 'They shall speak with'—marginal gloss, 'subdue' or 'destroy'—'the enemies in the gate': Psalms, CXII, 5.—2. Hence (?), to condemn (a criminal) to death: 1809, Andrewes, 'He's spoke to— . . . cast for death; dead'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, ' . . . Apprehended on a very serious charge, receiving a wound supposed to be mortal, &c., his friends will say, Poor fellow, I believe he's spoke to, meaning it is all over with him'; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900.—3. 'To speak to a person or place is to rob them, and to speak to any article, is to steal it; as, I spoke to the cove for his montra; I robb'd the gentleman of his watch. I spoke to that crib for all the wedge; I robb'd that house of all the plate. I spoke to a chest of slop; I stole a chest of tea,' J. H. Vaux, 1812, but the term occurs in Sessions Papers, July 1787, p. 788; ca. 1819, The Young Prig; 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London; † by 1880. Perhaps ex a confusion of speak to, 1, and:— speak with. To steal: 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker, 'Well, well, we'll take some of their Linnen where we are going then. And I thought never to speak with any thing but Wedge. You see what I am compell'd to do, Jack'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Speak, in a Canting Sense, to concern one's self about, to have to do with; as, I will never speak with any thing but Wedge or Cloy; I'll never steal, or have to do with any thing but Plate, or Money, &c.'; 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732; app. † by 1830. A development ex speak, v.; or else as in the second quot'n.—2. Hence, to rob (a person): 1744, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, Dec. 24 (Postscript); 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890.

speakeasy. An illicit liquor-shop or saloon or bar: 1889 (O.E.D.); 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft; revived in 1919–34. Almost certainly not c., but s.; orig., low s. For the semantics, cf. speak-softly shop.

speaker. See rum speaker.—2. A plunderer: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1900. Ex speak, v., 1.

speaking, vbl n. 'Securing and conveying away any property': 1797, Potter; † by 1890. See speak, v.

speaky. Booty; stolen goods: 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1910. Cf. speak, n., 2, and speak, v.

spealer. See spieler.

spear, v. To arrest (someone): racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'They spear Micky with a transport rap'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. Cf. snag, v., 3.—2. To obtain: tramps': since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'Much as one spears fish or wild pig' (Irwin).

spear biscuits. To retrieve food from garbage cans: tramps' and beggars': 1931, Stiff; extant. Ex spear, v., 2.

spec, go upon the. "'To join a bank" in a hell'—a gambling hell—is to "go upon the spec," Bee, 1823; perhaps c., perhaps buckish s. I.e., to speculate financially.

speck bum. A tramp, a beggar, of low degree: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. "'Specked" as in inferior fruit or produce' (Irwin).

specked (or speckt) wiper; speckled wipe. 'Speckt-wiper, c. a colour'd handkerchief,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1823, Egan's Grose (speckled wipe); † by 1880. See wipe (n.) and wiper.

specker. A (sentence to a) year in prison; like spot, it is used in combination: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, "'A five specker" is five years'; March 2, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington, "'How long are you doing?" "A three specker," I said'; extant. Prob. suggested by spot, n., 3, q.v.

speculator. 'A friendly speculator (common term for a professional depredator in the Western country at the time of which we write'—ca. 1833), The National Police Gazette, Oct. 24, 1846; ibid., Nov. 14, 1946, 'The term "speculator" was . . . the common and comprehensive term used among the marauders of the West, to designate all who were devoted to dishonest courses. The word "cross-man" is a term of the same general significance among the professional rogues of the Atlantic border [i.e., seaboard]. The former is indigenous to this country; but we are indebted for the later to the professional artists of White Chapel, Castle speed ball. Sherry wine: tramps': 1931, Stiff, 'These days it may be any wine'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A glass of wine, more esp. when "doped" or made stronger (with) alcohol, ether, or strong spirits'. Current, ca. 1920-33, the approx. Prohibition period; before Prohibition, a glass of port, with ether a-top.—2. Hence, a 'shot' of a drug: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.—3. A mixture of morphine and cocaine: addicts': 1933, Ersine; 1942, BVB. Cf. whizz-bang.

Street, and St. Giles.' Perhaps ex the sense, 'a person engaged in financial or commercial speculation'; perhaps direct ex L. speculator, 'a scout; a spy'.

speed kid. "Speed kids," the boys who live for the thrill of hanging on to the top of an express train water-tank,' Lennox Kerr, Backdoor Guest, 1930: tramps' (for a class of boy tramps): since ca. 1910.

speed wagon. A police-patro wagon: 1925, Leverage; extant. It has speed.

speeder. A policeman: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. speed wagon.

speel, v. To run away: 1829, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, V, trial of John Daly, 'The blake'—i.e., bloke—'came, i spelld away'; 1839, Brandon; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, 'He speeled to the crib, while his jomen shoved her trunk too'; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1898, J. W. Horsley, Prisons and Prisoners; by 1903 (F & H) it was low s. Origin obscure; in any case, independent of sense 3.—2. Hence, v.t.: see speel the drum.—3. A variant of spiel, v.

speel(-)ken. 'Spellken, or speelken, a play-house': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1903 (F & H, by implication). Speel = spell, n., 1; ken, 'a place; a house'. Lit., 'play-house'.

speel the drum. 'To run away with the stolen property': 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H, who says that it is Northern; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1910. Cf. speel, 1, and drum in sense 'house' or, perhaps, 'street'.

speeler; speiler. See spieler.

speeling. See spieling.

speelken. See speel(-)ken.

spæg; spegger. 'To stand firmly by a pal or thing' . . . 'One who stands pat,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Origin? The radical of spæg is prob. the same as that in Romany spingher or spink, a pin—something that sticks: cf. 'to stick to or by a pal'.

speiler. See spieler.

spell. A play (on the stage): 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Pike to the Spell; go to the Play'; 1821, P. Egan, Life in London; app. † by 1870. Ex the Ger. Spiel, a game: cf. Schauspiel, a play (on the stage).—2. Hence, a theatre: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'There being a rum squeeze at the spell last darkey, I was wipe priggig'; 1812, J. H. Vaux (see breaking-up . . .); 1821, P. Egan, Life in London, where a false derivation is suggested, 'Spell . . . so termed from its attraction. A species of enchantment'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1890, B & L; app. † by 1900.

spell, v. A variant of speel, v.—2. To advertise:

1846 (see spelt in the leer); 1874, H, 'To advertize, to put in print'; 1903, F & H; † by 1910. To spell out the words, as semi-illiterates would do in reading a newspaper or in advertising in a newspaper.

spell-ken or spellken. A playhouse or theatre: 1823, Byron, Don Juan, XI, xix, 'Who in a row like Tom could lead the van, | Booze in the ken, or at the spellken hustle?'—but remark that Byron, in his note, shows that the term occurred in a song 'very popular . . . in my early days', i.e., early in the C. 19; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1890, C. Hindley; 1890, B & L (spell- and spiel-ken); † by 1900. I.e., spell, n., 1 + ken, 1.

spelt in the leer. Advertised in the newspaper: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx; 1874, H; 1903, F & H, 'Wanted (by the police)'; † by 1910. See spell, v., and leer.

spew one's guts. See guts, spew one's.

spic. See spick.

spice, n. See spice, the.—2. 'A spice is a footpad robbery': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'A lucky spice on the road set them up'; † by 1890. Perhaps ex the v.

spice, v. To rob (a person); esp. on the highway: May 1787, Sessions Papers (p. 66); 1811, Lex. Bal. (at malkin), 'The cove's so scaly, he'd spice a malkin of his jazey: the fellow is so mean, that he would rob a scare-crow of his old wig'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Describing an exploit of [footpad robbery], a rogue will say, I spiced a swell of so much, naming the booty obtained'; app. † by 1887 (Baumann). Perhaps cf. Ger. speissen, 'to eat' (v.i.): cf. C. 17 S.E. caterpillar, 'a parasite on the State'. More prob. a corruption of speak, v., 1.—2. Hence, to steal: 1811, Lex. Bal. (at snow), 'Spice the snow; to steal the linen'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890 (B & L) in England.

spice, the. 'The game of footpad robbery': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1890 (B & L). Cf. spice, n., 2, and spice, v., 1.

spice, the high-toby. 'Who (spite of Bow-street's ban) | On the high toby-spice so flash the muzzle'; i.e., robbery on horseback, as distinguished from spice, q.v.: 1823, Don Juan, XI, xix, by Byron, who, in his note, recalls that he had heard the term in a song 'very popular . . . in my early days', i.e., early in C. 19; 1860, H, 2nd ed., at toby; † by 1890. Cf. spice, n., 2, and v., 1.

spice(-)gloak. 'A footpad robber': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1831, W. T. Moncrieff, Van Diemen's Land; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; † by 1880. Lit., 'a footpad-robbery fellow'.

spice gloak high toby, the, 'the highway', or 'highway robbery', occurs in W. T. Moncrieff's The Heart of London (II, i), 1830; but this phrasal term is suspect—gravely suspect.

spice-gloak lay. Highway robbery as an occupation: 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; † by 1880. Ex spice gloak.

spicer. A footpad: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890 (B & L) in England. Ex spice, v., 1.

spicer, high; spicer, high-toby. See high spicer, high-toby spicer.

spicing. Footpad robbery: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1880 or 1890. Cf. spicer.

spick. A Mexican (tramp): tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; 1933, Ersine (Spic); 1933.

James Spenser, Limey; extant. A corruption (?) of Spig.

spider. 'Wire pick-locks known in the trade [of burglary] as "Spiders", and warranted to open anything—except, perhaps, a patent Chubb or Brahma,' F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, 1893; by ca. 1920, also police s. and American usage, as in Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves, 1925. Ex its shape.—2. A young burglar, yegg, or hobo: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage (who also adduces the sense 'a little street waif'); extant. All arms and legs.—3. 'A small frying-pan with a long handle. It may be an improvised one,' Stiff, 1931: Am. tramps': C. 20. Rose, 1934, et al. Ex its shape.—4. A Ford car: Am. car-thieves': ca. 1920–30. Godfrey Irwin. Ex the spidery appearance of early makes.

spider bube. A young thief or burglar: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. spider, 2; bube is a corruption of Am. bub, 'boy; brother'. Also cf. — spider(-)work. 'Prowling; climbing of porches or fanlights,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Metaphor from the ways of spiders.

spiel, n. Among tramps, spiel is 'something to peddle. Hoboes often carry needles, pins, court-plaster, and the like. On meeting one another, they ask: "What's your spiel?" ("What are you hawking?") (See "graft" [n., 2]), Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Any article peddled by tramps or street fakers'; extant. Prob. ex:—2. A line of talk: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, "'Got to put up any looney spiel?" asked Mickey' (in prison); 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Cloud; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective; 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1912, D. Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 'I made my little spiel to the judge'; by 1915, low s.—3. (Cf. sense 1.) A 'game', a livelihood (esp. if illicit): 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'I've been shut up [imprisoned] a number of years, it's true, but I'—a professional thief—'didn't mind them as much as you would; I took them as part of the spiel'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'A line of business; a method of begging'; 1925, Leverage, 'A swindle'; extant.—4. A gamble; gambling: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 1 of the v.—5. 'A fast, boisterous dance': c. of ca. 1910–30, then low s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. sense 3 of the v.

spiel, v.i. To gamble: 1859, implied in spieler; 1890, Charles Hindley, The True History of Tom and Jerry, glossary, p. 205, 'Speeling.—Gambling generally'; by 1900, it was s. in Australia; 1931, Brown, in the sense 'to play cards for money'; by 1934 (Philip Allingham, Cheapjack) it was low s. in Britain. Ex the lit. sense ('to play') of Ger. spielen.—2. To make a speech: U.S.A.; April 1897, Popular Science Monthly, p. 832; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Speiling. Talking'; extant. Perhaps adopted from Australian s.—3. To waltz: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ob. Cf. spieler, 3.—4. To 'tell the tale': British tramps' (—1932) and American confidence tricksters' (—1933). Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House; Ersine. Cf. sense 2, and esp. 2 of the n.

spiel-ken is a variant of spell-ken.

spiel off. To utter plausibly; to 'spout': beggars' and tramps': C. 20. W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 1936. Cf. spiel, v., 2—and n., 2.

spieler. 'Spealers. Gamblers.—Speiler. A gambler': 1859, Matsell—the difference in spelling means nothing; 1886, State Prison Life (as speeler); 1886 (see sense 2); 1890, B & L (speeler); by 1903 (F & H) it was low s. Adopted Ger. Spieler.—2. Hence, a swindler, as in 'Speeler . . . One who gets his living by Gambling or Swindling', W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 1886; July 14, 1898, The Daily Telegraph, where it is classified as 'Australian'; 1909, Ware; 1925, Leverage, 'A stall; the engager [of others] in a crooked game'; July 13, 1929, Flynn's; 1933, Ersine; 1936, P. S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 'Second inside man, or mysterious stranger' in a 'con mob'; 1942, Baker (Australia), 'A swindler, a welsher, a card-sharp'; extant.—3. 'The old thirteenth ward [of N.Y.C.], a section famous for the many shop girls who were fine "spielers" (dancers)', Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; but the word occurs in the chorus of 'My Pearl Is a Bowery Girl', sung in On the Bowery, a melodrama produced in 1894—Charles E. Still quotes it (p. 356) in his Steps in Crime, 1938; 1910, H. Hapgood, Types from City Streets, 'A "spieler" . . . a young girl whose absorbing passion is the dance'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A fast, able dancer'—but by this time it was s. Ex spiel, v., 3; cf. spiel, n., 5.—4. Conversationalist; public speaker: 1910, H. Hapgood, Types from City Streets: by 1915, s.—but perhaps it had always been s. (orig., low s.). Ex spiel, v., 2.—5. The ballyhoo-man at a side-show: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat: but perhaps always circus s.—6. A gambling-house: British: 1931, Brown; 1934, Netley Lucas, My Selves; 1935, David Hume, Dangerous Mr Dell; 1936, Mark Benney, Low Company; 1938, Robert Westerby, In These Quiet Streets; 1938, F. D. Sharpe, who spells it 'speeler'; 1943, Black. Cf. sense 1.—7. 'The orator who makes the talk when the "lunch and lecture" system is used' (to persuade a prospective sucker to buy worthless or inferior stocks and shares), Stoddard: commercial underworld and confidence men: since ca. 1910. Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering, 1931; Jan. 28, 1939, Flynn's, Frank Wrentmore, who makes it synonymous with a con mob's inside man. Cf. sense 5.—8. A teller of 'hard-luck stories': British tramps' (—1932). Stuart Wood. Ex spiel, v., 4.

spieling or speiling is simply the vbl n. of spiel, v.: cf. spieler, which is the agential n.

spifficate. 'To spifficate a thief is to spill him, or betray the subject of his roguery': 1823, Bee; † by 1900. A special, underworld application of the s. spifficate.

Spig, 'a Mexican': low s., not c. In, e.g., Convict, 1934—and earlier in such writers as Damon Runyon.

spike, n. 'Then hey for the workhouse, or "spike", once again!': Indoor Paupers, by One of Them, 1885; 1866, Temple Bar; 1886, Wm Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'The "spike" is too much like a gaol now-a-days'; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (ch., 'Two Tramps in England'), 'The next two nights . . . were spent in the Notting Hill casual ward, or "spike", as it is called in tramp parlance'; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1903, F & H, who classify it as tramps'; 1906, Bart Kennedy, Wander Pictures, 'The homeless men who go along the road call the casual ward the spike It means that when you have come to the very end of things you are impaled'; 1909, Everard Wyrall, The Spike, '“The Spike” is the tramps' name for the Casual Ward'; 1910, C. S. B. Russell, Young Gaol-Birds; 1926, Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows; Oct. 1928, Word Lore, F. C. Taylor, 'The Language of Lags'; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life, 'The “spike” . . . the crook's designation for the workhouse'; 1930, Lennox Kerr, Backdoor Guest; 1931, Frank Gray, The Tramp; 1931, Terence Horsley; 1931, Chris Massie; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, George Orwell, Down and Out; and a myriad times since. Ex the hard treatment received from the wardens and the physical discomforts; cf. the '1906' quot'n.—2. Among American drug addicts (esp. in prisons) and since ca. 1925, as in Ersine, who, in 1933, uses it of a hypodermic syringe, but also as in '[Those] who could not afford the regular “works” . . . had . . . “spikes” . . . ordinary nails or safety pins . . . to open a vein that the drug might be passed into circulation through an eye dropper,' Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor, 1934; April 21, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627, who applies it to a hypodermic needle; 1939, Mary Sullivan, My Double Life (ditto); 1942, BVB (any hypodermic); extant. Hence: on the spike, engaged in drug-taking by injection. Cf. nail.

spike, v. 'Spike. A casual ward.—Hence, to spike, to go to or frequent the same,' Sylva Clapin, A New Dict. of Americanisms; ob. by 1931; † by 1940.—2. To inform to the police: June 21, 1930, Flynn's, Col. Givens; extant.—3. To render near-beer intoxicating, as in Rose, 1934; or 'to add alcohol to a beverage, usually to beer'—as in Ersine, 1933; by 1940, both of these nuances were s. To sharpen it.—4. V.i., to inject a drug: addicts': since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942. Cf. the n., 2.

spike, go on the. To sleep in the workhouse or casual ward: tramps': late C. 19–20. D. C. Murray, 1894 (O.E.D.). See spike, n., 1.

spike, on the. Engaged in, addicted to, drug-taking: since early 1920's. Ersine. Cf. spike, n., 2, and v., 4.

Spike Hotel. The Fleet Prison; King's Bench Prison: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1890, C. Hindley, 'Or any other prison'; † by 1900. Ex the spiked railings without; cf. :—

spike park; better, S—P—. The Queen's Bench Prison: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1903 (F & H). Ex the chevaux de frise around it: cf. the preceding entry.

spike-ranger. A trumper from casual ward to casual ward: tramps': 1897, The Quiver; 1903, F & H; extant. See spike.

spiked. 'Upset, chagrined, disappointed, disgusted,' J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; ob. Cf. English s., 'to have (or get) the needle', to be annoyed or nervy.—2. '“I can ditch a drink that I suspect of being spiked.” This word “spiked” was that year'—ca. 1899—'the very newest slang, signifying “doped”,' Anon., 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery'—Flynn's, March 23, 1929: rather is it New York s. of that period than c. (Cf. needle beer).—3. Hence, of cigarettes, etc., that contain a narcotic: drug addicts': since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937.

spiker. A nail: since ca. 1790: 1807, Henry

Tufts, A Narrative; ob. One can spike oneself so easily on a nail.

spikotz. An informer, a 'stool pigeon', a 'squealer': 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex Yiddish. The radical (spik) is connected with putting nails into coffins.

spill, n. A 'terminus and transfer station of a railroad', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Destination on railway'; 1925, Leverage; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1930, Burke, 'A railway station. “He makes the spill but they swamp him”'; 1931, IA; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; extant. Here, the train spills out its passengers.

spill, v. To betray (a person): 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Bee (see also the quot'n at spificate); app. † by 1900. Cf. S.E. sense, 'to ruin or destroy'.—2. Hence (?), to inform to the police: U.S.A.: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'Beef, cough, snitch, spill or squeal—to give information to the police'; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar (gangster to detective), 'Did I ever do any spilling?'; by 1930, police and journalistic s. in U.S.A. and current in Britain; 1932, Stuart Wood; 1937, Partridge, 'Now verging on low s.'—3. To release, esp. from prison: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Humorous.

spill one's guts, 'to confess to a crime; to give information to the police': low s., not c. Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster, 1927. In Australia, perhaps orig. (ca. 1925) c.: Baker, 1945.

spill the works. To confess; to lay information: since ca. 1929. John G. Brandon, The One-Minute Murder, 1934. Cf. spill, v., 2.

spin. A five-pound note: S. Africa: late C. 19–20. Letter (May 22, 1946) from J. B. Fisher. With it one can go on quite a 'spin' or jaunt. Adopted ex Aus. low s. (as in Partridge, 1938).

spin a yarn. See yarn.

spin (a person's) hemp for him. To cause him to be hanged: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; prob. not c., but low s. or journalistic s. Cf. the hemp and hempen entries.

spin the rattler. To travel by train: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); ob. See rattler, 3.

spinach. A beard: since ca. 1920. Ersine. Humorous; cf. s. face-fungus.

spindles. Prison warders or keepers: 1925, Leverage; extant.

spiniken or spinniken. A workhouse: 1859, H, who has also the incorrect form spinikin; 1903, F & H (by implication); † by 1930. See sense 2.—Esp. (S—), St Giles's Workhouse: 1864, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1903, F & H, who classify it as tramps': † by 1940. A corruption of spinning ken.

spinner. A center-bit (a tool used by burglars): 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); extant. Ex its spinning motion when it is in use, and ex the manner of its employment.—2. The schemer or planner in a criminal gang: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

spinniken. See spiniken.

spinning house is the S.E. form of :— spinning(-)ken, a bridewell. Earliest as the Spinning Ken, that specific original London prison known as Bridewell: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; app. † by 1870, at latest. The women there imprisoned were set to the task of spinning ; and see ken, 2.

spinning top. A policeman : Pacific Coast : C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on cop.

spit one's guts. To confess everything to the police : since ca. 1930 ; by 1940, low s. Partridge, 1937. Cf. spill one's guts, which presumably suggested it.

Spittleonian. A 'silk handkerchief, so called from the place of its manufacture' : 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin ; 1848, Sinks of London (erroneously as Spittleonian) ; † by 1880.

spittoon philosopher. An opinionated hanger-on in a speakeasy or on the kerbstone : tramps' and beggars' : 1931, Stiff ; extant, but by 1940 it was s.

spiv. 'Petty crook who will turn his hand to anything so long as it does not involve honest work,' Axel Bracey, School for Scoundrels, 1934 ; 'A man who gets a good living by his wits without working,' John Worby, The Other Half: The Autobiography of a Spiv, 1937 ; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It ; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too ; 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night ; 1938, Walter Greenwood, Only Mugs Work ; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 'Spivs : Men with a knowledge of the twists and turns of the racing game, who live by their wits (not necessarily dishonestly)' ; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress ; by 1940, because journalists so quickly took up the word, it was s. The term arose among the race-gangs of the 1890's : see my Words at War: Words at Peace, 1948. The word suggesting s. 'pusher' for 'thruster', it may be cognate with, or telescoped from, Welsh Gypsy spilav, 'to push'. More prob. ex dial. spif(f), 'smart, clever ; neat, dandified', with f changed to v for ease ; cf. dial. spiffer, 'anything first-rate', and s. spiffing, 'first-rate'.

splaw-foot. A countryman ; esp., a yoke l : 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 320) ; † by 1920. Dialectal for splay-foot, 'a flat, clumsy foot'.

splice, 'a wife' : not c., but low s.

splinter belly. 'A "splinter-belly" is a man'—among tramps, a hobo—'who does rough carpenter work or bridge work,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923 : tramps' : 1931, Stiff ; 1931, Godfrey Irwin ; extant. Ex the splinters that fly about.

splinters, 'matches', is s. Leverage, 1925.—2. Prison warders or keepers : 1925, Leverage ; extant. Tough guys—and sharp.

split, n. An informer : 1812, J. H. Vaux (see split, v.) : 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue ; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen ; 1903, F & H ; 1832, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar ; extant. Ex split, v., 1.—2. A giving of information to the police : 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, IV, trial of Mary Williams, 'She said she was innocent ; I said it was useless to say so, as William had made a split of it' ; 1887, Baumann ; slightly ob. Ex split, v., 1.—3. 'When two cards come alike. For instance, if two jacks should come out, the banker takes one half of the money' : U.S. gamblers' and card-sharpers' : 1859, Matsell ; extant.—4. A share : 1889 (see regulars) : 1914, Jackson & Hellyer ; by 1918 (if not a decade earlier), s. in U.S.A. : 1937, John Worby, The Other Half ; by 1940, (low) s. in Britain.—5. (Ex sense 1.) A detective : 1890, B & L ; 1899, C. Rook, The Hooligan Nights ; June 25, 1900, Sessions Papers ; 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow ; 1903, F & H ; 1910, F. Martyn,

A Holiday in Gaol ; 1915, Edgar Wallace, The Man Who Bought London ; 1924, Stanley Scott, The Human Side of Crook and Convict Life ; 1925, J. C. Goodwin, Queer Fish ; 1925, Eustace Jarvis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons ; 1926, Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows ; 1927, Edgar Wallace, The Mixer ; Oct. 1928, Word-Lore, F. C. Taylor, 'The Language of Lags' ; 1929, Edgar Wallace, The Black ; 1931, Brown ; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House ; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff ; 1933, Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby ; 1933, Joseph Augustin ; 1933, George Orwell ; 1934, B. Leeson, Lost London—but by this time it was low s., as in Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934.

split, v. To give evidence ; to turn King's Evidence : May 1795, Sessions Papers, 'Skivington says, they will find him, and if they do, he will split ; I imagine that is telling the truth, impeach' ; 1797, Potter, 'Split, turning evidence' ; Jan. 1799, The Monthly Magazine, 'He has split or turned Snitch against all his Palls' ; 1809, Andrewes ; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To split upon a person, or turn split, is synonymous with nosing, snitching, or turning nose. To split signifies generally to tell of any thing you hear, or see transacted' ; 1818, Sessions Papers ; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV ; 1828, Jon Bee ; 1828, Sessions Papers, 'He would a bl—y sight sooner be lagged than he would split' ; 1836, Autobiography of Jack Ketch ; 1838, Glascock ; 1839, Brandon ; April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp' ; 1846, anon. translator of E. Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, Part 2, ch. xlviii ; 1855, John Lang, The Forger's Wife ; 1856, G. L. Chesterton ; 1857, Snowden ; 1859, H ; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.) ; 1860, C. Martel, Diary of an Ex-Detective ; by 1890, low s. I.e., to split one's face—open one's mouth too wide.—2. Hence, to talk too much : U.S.A. : 1925, Leverage ; extant.—3. The sense 'to divide spoils' has always been low, but never, I think, c. (Leverage, 1925.) Cf. split, n., 4.—4. To part company ; (of the members of a gang) to break up, to separate : U.S.A. : Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's, John Wilstach, 'The Gun Moll'—(policeman log.) 'Most of our pinches are made through tip offs from disgruntled rivals and pals that have split'—though by this time, obviously, it was already police s. : c. of ca. 1900–25. Short for split out, 2.

split, turn. See split, v., 1, quot'n of 1812.

split ace, the. A card-sharper variation of the confidence trick : since ca. 1919. Partridge, 1938.

split finger. A white-collar worker, a clerk : tramps' : since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'One who would suffer from blistered, split fingers if forced into hard work' (Irwin).

split mechanic. A street-walking prostitute : C. 20. Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940, 'If she is a "walker", "hustler", or "split mechanic" (Yankee), she will be constantly arrested unless the Police Captain of her precinct has been properly and regularly squared'. Anatomic.

split on (or upon). See split, v., 1, ref. of 1812.

split out. To be no longer friends ; to quarrel : 1859, Matsell ; except as merging with (2), it seems to have been † by 1910. Cf. sense 2.—2. To part company : British and, in late C. 19–20, American : Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'There is a reeler (policeman) over there which knows me, we had better split out' (separate) ; 1903, F & H ; 1909, C. B. Chrysler, White Slavery, in nuance 'get rid of' a person—U.S.A.: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (U.S.A.: tramps); 1936, Charles Francis Coe, G-Man (to dissolve a partnership); extant. A variation of S.E. to split up (v.i.), 'to disperse'.—3. 'Splitting out. Separating pickpocket from his victim in case of trouble. The stall splits out the wire,' G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. Ex senses 1 and 2.—4. To share profits with: white-slavers': C. 20. Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909, 'When she [a "Madame"] gets a chance she "splits out" the chief [of police]'. Cf. split, n., 4.

split-pea. Tea: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue. If this ever > gen. rhyming s., it was not for long.

split-tail, 'a girl, a woman': C. 20 low s. (esp. American nautical), not c. The same applies to the C. 20 Australian split stuff, 'women in general'. Sex-physiological.

split-up. A division of booty: C. 20. James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936; by 1940, low s. See split, n., 4, and v., 3.

splittery. A laying of information to the police: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'P'raps it wouldn't be the worse for you if you was to do a little splittery—summut in the nosin way, I means'; app. † by 1890 or 1900. See split, 4., 1; also n., 2.

splitting is the vbl n. of split, v.: e.g., Jon Bee, in The New Monthly Magazine, 1817, and The London Guide, 1818.

splodger. 'Fellow' as term of address: beggars' rhyming s. on s. codger: 1856, H. Mayhew, The Great World of London; † by 1900.—2. The derivative sense, 'a lout, an awkward countryman' (H, 1874), is s.

sploring, n. 'These London "magsmen" . . . especially amused me by their "sploring" or boasting,' D. Fannan, A Burglar's Life Story, 1897: ca. 1885–1915. Perhaps cf. splurge; or it may be a perversion of exploring (travellers' tales).

splurge it, 'to live expensively': s., not c. Rose, 1934.

spoil, n. Stolen property: New Zealand: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter); extant. Ex the S.E. sense.

spoil, v.; esp. in spoil it. 'To throw some obstacle in the way of any object or undertaking, so as to cause its failure, is termed spoiling it. In like manner, to prevent another person from succeeding in his object, either by a wilful obstruction, or by some act of imprudence on your part, subjects you to the charge of having spoiled him. Speaking of some particular species of fraud or robbery, which after a long series of success, is now become stale or impracticable from the public being guarded against it, the family will say, that game is spoiled at last. So having attempted the robbery of any particular house or shop and by miscarrying caused such an alarm as to render a second attempt dangerous or impolitic, they will say, that place is spoiled, it is useless to try it on any more': 1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan's Groser, 1823; † by 1890.

spoiled water. Lemonade; any soft drink or mineral water: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Allegedly humorous.

spoke(n) to, ppl adj. See speak to, 1, 2, and 3.

spoke(n) with, ppl adj. See speak with, 2.

spolking, according to Critchell Rimington's The Bon Voyage Book, 1931, is 'stealing cage with bird from window'; but the term is suspect.

spondulics, 'money', 'cash', is wrongly classified by G. P. Burnham, 1872, as c.—2. Counterfeit notes: 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (p. 321): a very suspect sense.

sponge or spunge. 'A thirsty fellow, a great drinker', is not c., but s.—2. A crook that lives on other crooks: U.S.A.: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Ex the S.E. sense.

spoof. A, or the, confidence-trick swindle: 1890, B & L; ob. Ex s. spoof, a deception.

spoon. Receptacle in which narcotics (esp. opium) are cooked or prepared: addicts': since ca. 1920. BVB. Usually it is a spoon; cf. cooking spoon.

spoon, a rank. 'A very prating shallow fellow': spoony, 'foolish, half-witted': 1812, Vaux; almost certainly s., not c.

spoon-meat. Rowlands, 1602; Dekker, The Belman of London, 'The fift Jump'—or illicit dodge—is called Spoone-meate, and that is a messe of knaverie served in about supper time in the edge of the evening likewise: It is done thus: A silly fellow in shew, attired like a clowne, spurnes (being nere some candle that stands on a stall) a paper before him, in which is wrapt up a spoone: taking up which and looking on it by the light, and making it knowne (by his loud talking and wondring what he hath found) that he tooke it up by chance, people flock about him, and imagine it is a silver and guilt spoone, for it lookes very faire, but he seeming to be an innocent coxcomb, knowes not, hee saies what hee should doe with such a gew-gawe; whereupon every one is catching at it, and offers him money for it: he wishes he had rather found money than such a bable, for he eates not his pottage in plate; in the end some Fox amongst all the Cubbes that stand about him, whispers in his eare, to have it from all the rest and thrusts a crowne privily into his hand. The Jumper takes it [the crown piece], and sneakes away, the other gets home as fast as he can, longing till he call his wife, all his household and neighbors about him, to shewe what a penyworth hee met with; but the gilt spoone comming to be tried of what mettall hee is made, the poore mans money prooves copper, and hee himselve is laughed at for a Coxcomb: ca. 1595–1630.

spoon the burick. To make love to a friend's wife: late C. 19–20; ob. Ware, 1909. Ex s. spoon, v.i., 'to flirt', and burick, 3.

spoony, adj. and n. ('a fool'): prob. low s., not c.—see spoon. The n. occurs in P. Egan, 1828. Possibly the U.S.A. sense, 'a coward'—current ca. 1840–80—is c.: 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York; a sense deriving ex the English one.

sport, v.i. To be a prostitute; to ply prostitution: 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life (see quot'n at moll buzzer, 3); extant. Cf. sporting house.

sport a bug-on. See bug-on.

sport the broom. (Of a convict) to lay, outside the door of the cell, the little hair-broom, as a sign that he wishes to see the doctor, or the governor, or the chaplain: convicts': 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude; ob. Ex sport, 'to display'.

sporting house. A brothel: 1894, Stead (D.A.E.); 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1928, Chicago May. But this late C. 19–20 term has always been, not c. but low s. Cf. spert.

spot, n. A detective: Scottish: 1878, James McGovan, Brought to Bay, "If ye only want to gain time to put the spots on our track, ye'd better never have been born!"; 1923, Jules Manchon; ob. (Cf. the American police-s. spot, 'spotter'; spy; investigator', as in Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 1913, 'He'—a Deputy District Attorney—'had his own "spots" and "finders" on the force' (i.e., the police force). Ex spot, v., 1.—2. A place to sleep—rough bed, a bench, a plank, the floor: beggars' and tramps': U.S.A.: 1891, Jacob A. Riis, How the Other Half Live; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; app. † by 1920.—3. A prison-sentence of one year: U.S.A.: mostly in combination (see five-spot, ten-spot, two-spot); Josiah Flynt, in the Glossary of The World of Graft, 1901, accords it an independent existence ('Spot, term in prison'); as also does Jack London, The Road, 1907 ('A "spot" is a year'); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1932, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946). Ex spot, a place. One spot, or dot, for each year.—4. A dollar (plural spot, as in five spot): American gamblers': 1848 (D.A.E.); 1896, Lillard, Poker Stories; 1903, F & H; by 1905, s. Cf. the origin of sense 3.—5. A landing place for liquor: American bootleggers': 1930, Burke, 'You got to work strictly on the sneak. All the spots are hot'; 1934, Rose; then merely reminiscent.—6. A place either just or about to be robbed: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. sense 2.—7. The scene or locality of a murder: U.S.A.: since ca. 1927. Ersine. Cf. spot, on the.—8. A ten-pound note; sum of ten pounds: Australian: since ca. 1920; by 1940, low s. Baker, 1942. Perhaps ex the U.S. ten spot: ten dollars > ten pounds.

spot*, v. To recognize; to detect (a person; a trick): U.S.A. (—1794), and possibly English since ca. 1770: 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 'You're spotted . . . You are like to be found out'; 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York; certainly adopted in England by the 1840's; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 484; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell; Bartlett, 2nd ed., 1859, classifies it as police s., as it seems to be also in The National Police Gazette of March 7, 1846; 1860, C. Martel; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham (U.S.A.); 1880, An Ex-Convict, Our Convict System; 1884, J. McGowan, Traced and Tracked; by 1890, s.—2. Hence, to mark down a building as fit to be burgled: 1848, Judson; 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary, 'The interior of a place . . . "spotted" for operations'; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1904, Ex-Inspector Elliott; 1924, G. C. Henderson (U.S.A.); Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's, John Wilstach; by 1930, police s.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) To mark down, esp. a criminal: 1857, A. Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1859, H; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham; 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude, of a convict marking down a prison warder as susceptible of bribery; 1887, Baumann; 1903, F & H (by implication); 1934, Rose, 'Mark Someone for Death . . . to spot someone'; 1939, Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep (ditto); extant.—4. To kill: 1933, Ersine, 'The mob spotted two rats'; extant. Cf. spot, on the.

spot, be in a*. To be in a difficulty, e.g., in relation to the police: 1929, Charles Francis Coe, Hooch, 'Jimmy Daust is in a bad spot, too'; by ca. 1930, British; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; by 1940, s. everywhere. Perhaps ex spot, on the.

spot, on a*; esp. with put. (To put) into a safe place; e.g., to hide stolen property: Oct. 6, 1934, Howard McLellan in Flynn's; extant. I.e., in a safe spot.

spot, on the*; often in put on the spot, to place (someone) so that he may conveniently be killed. In great danger; marked down to be killed: Aug. 11, 1928, Flynn's, Don. H. Thompson, 'Twenty Years outside the Law', 'We learned that the State still had one reliable witness, who could "put us on the spot"'; 1929, E. D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago; June 15, 1929, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, "'How would you and the boys like to put a guy on the spot?" asked Farley'; Sept. 21, 1929, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'On the Spot'; March 15, 1929, Flynn's, John Wilstach (quot'n at finger-man); May 31, 1930, Flynn's; 1930, Charles Francis Coe, Gunman; 1930, George London, 'Attirer quelqu'un dans un endroit et l'assassiner'; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Marked for assassination; in danger'; Aug. 8, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse; by the end of that year, it was far too much quoted by journalists to rank any longer as c. 'Orig. a railroad term, indicating that a car [anglicé, a truck or a van] had been placed on a side track or alongside a platform for loading or unloading, "spotted" next to a certain desired place' (Godfrey Irwin).—2. 'On the Spot—forced to stand on a small square of carpet, facing the wall, as punishment': convicts': 1929, Givens; 1931, IA; 1934, Rose; extant.

spot a lay*. 'To scrutinize a prospective place to rob,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. See spot, v., 2.

spot killer*. A gangster expert in killing: since ca. 1930: 1938, J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding, 'Eddie Doll, bank robber, hold-up man, member of an automobile theft gang, and a reputed "spot killer" for some of Chicago's most desperate gangsters of the period' (1931); extant. Prob. short for spot-light killer.

spot man*. That member of a gang of thieves (esp. burglars) who finds suitable places to rob: Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's, John Wilstach, 'The Gun Moll'—'Morton, our spot man. He has the most to gain by selling the same information twice'; extant. Cf. spot, v., 2.

spot of work. See work, spot of.

spotted*. Known to, or marked down by, the police: since ca. 1790: 1807, Tufts; by 1850, also British; 1859, H; by 1890, s. See spot, v., 1 and 3.

spotter*. A spy in the employment of the police: since ca. 1870: 1890, B & L; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (at San Quentin, 1901–11); by 1920 at latest, also British; 1923, Jules Manchon, Le Slang; 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. spot, v., 1 and 3.—2. A private detective: 1877, Bartlett, Americanisms, 4th ed.; 1891, J. Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; 1903, Clapin; 1903, F & H; 1912, A. Train, Courts, Criminals and the Camorra; 1925, Leverage; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A company detective . . . spying on employees'; by 1935, s. See spot, v., 1, 3.—3. Hence, one who stands at the entrance to a speakeasy or an illicit club and allows or refuses admittance to members and habitués or non-members and strangers: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft (p. 61); 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue (of a professional thief's spotter of likely things to steal, places to rob); 1923, Sidney Felstead, The Underworld of London; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys, applied to a look-out man; 1925, J. C. Goodwin, Queer Fish (English),

'I surmise that they are "spotters", posted where they are to warn the proprietor of the card-rooms should the police or their informers put in an appearance. Most of the latter are known by sight of the "spotters", but they, on the other hand, are frequently changed'; by 1930, s.—4. A spy for a gang; one who finds or selects prospective persons or places to rob or burgle: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1927, Kane; April 1928, The American Mercury, Jim Tully, 'Jungle Justice'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1930, English too; 1933, Charles E. Leach; 1933, Ersine; 1936, Michael Fane, Race-course Swindles, "Spotter" for a gang of pick-pockets; extant.—5. That member of a gang of car-thieves who locates the car to be stolen and the spot where the actual theft will take place: the automobile-stealing racket: 1929, The Saturday Evening Post; 1939, Dick O'Connor, G-Men at Work; extant. Prob. ex sense 4.—6. A synonym of snap, n., 6, as a member of a gang of kidnappers: Dec. 29, 1934, Flynn's, Tracey French; extant. Cf. senses 4 and 5.

spout, v. To pawn: 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Spouted. Pawned'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To pledge any property at a pawnbroker's is termed spouting it, or shoving it up the spout'; 1819, Sessions Papers; 1824, J. Wight, Mornings at Bow Street; by 1840, it was low s. Ex S.E. spout, that lift (formerly in use in pawnbrokers' shops) up which the articles pawned were taken for storage (O.E.D.).—2. To inform to the police, to 'squeal': U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. ex pawnshop associations.—3. To talk (without the modifications of the S.E. terms): since ca. 1920. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933.

spout, get it down the. See tea-pot mended, have one's.

spout, shove up the. See spout.

spout, up the. See up the spout.

spout up. To betray; to inform to the police, to 'squeal': 1925, Leverage; extant. An elaboration of spout, v., 2. spouting. See spout.

spoy. 'A mean, treacherous chap,' Leverage, 1925; extant. A blend of spy + goy.

sprain one's ankle, 'to have an illegitimate child', is said by B & L, 1889, to be American c.: I doubt whether this low C. 18-19 English s. were ever c.—even in the U.S.A.

spraser (James Curtis, 1936) or sprazer or sprasy or spraz(e)y; occ., sprowsie (or -y). Sixpence: mostly London: since ca. 1910: 1931, Brown, 'They speiled first for stakes of a sprazey'; 1932, Arthur Gardner (sprazey); 1933, George Orwell, Down and Out (sprowsie); by 1934, low s.—esp. showmen's and cheapjacks', as in Philip Allingham, Cheappjack. Adopted from Shelta, which has sprazi and aspra.

sprat. Orig. a counterfeit, but by 1855 usually a good, sixpence. "'I should like some sprats in (or with . . .) a case or two tomorrow" . . . It was an order for base coin': 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1839, Brandon, who defines sprat as 'sixpence'; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was low, and by 1880 gen., s. Ex its size: as a sprat is a small fish, so a sixpence is a small coin.

sprawl, v. 'To spoil a plan or an affair by indiscreet conduct or talk,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Slovenliness.

sprayer. A machine-gun: 1935, Hargan extant. Understatement.

spread, n. A saddle: (U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; † by 1903 (F & H). On it the rider spreads his buttocks.—2. Butter: British: 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1864, s.—H, 3rd ed. Cf. spreader and spreadum; that which is spread on bread, scones, buns, etc.—3. An umbrella: British: 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1903 (F & H). On being opened it spreads.—4. A shawl: British: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; 1859, H, 'A lady's shawl'; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was low s. It is spread over the shoulders.—5. A newspaper: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); by 1910 it was s. Ex its extent when spread out or opened wide.—6. Short for spread trick: 1925, Leverage; extant.—7. See spread the joint.—8. A speedy passing of many forged cheques (and then a hasty departure); Saturday spread, a doing of this on a Saturday afternoon: commercial underworld: since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. One spreads them widely and quickly.

spread, v. 'To do the talking for a mob; to talk,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Perhaps ex spread oneself, 'to make a display'.

spread, make a. See spread the joint.

spread crib. A printing office, esp. of a newspaper: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Lit., a newspaper (see spread, 5) house (crib, n., 2).

spread the joint; make a spread. 'To spread out the hypodermic equipment,' BVB, 1942: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Here joint = lay-out = equipment.

spread the royal. See royal.

spread trick. 'A gambling trick by which an accomplice gives a pal a good hand while spreading the cards on the table,' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant.

spreader. Butter: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All; app. † by 1700. For semantics, see spread, 2.—2. (Spreaders.) Pliers: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss (U.S.A.); 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers, 'He . . . took another slightly larger pair of pliers, known technically'—among burglars—'as "spreaders", and, fitting the nozzle into one of the links, forced it open'; extant. Ex the effect of its operation.

spreading the broads. The three-card trick: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; extant. See broads.

spreads. Playing cards: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. broads.—2. Three-card monte: 1925, Leverage; extant.

spreadum is a rare variant of spreader: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Bread and Butter, Pannum & Spreadum'.

spring, n. A release (hence, an escape) from imprisonment: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'It is comparatively easy to make a "spring" out of the clutches of the law when there is sufficient money to hand around to the various persons with "pull"': 1903, Flynt, The Rise of Ruderrick Clowd; 1925, Leverage; 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves, (gunman's wife) 'I did wait. But his swell friends didn't come across wit' any spring'; Nov. 9, 1929, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant. Ex sense 4 of:— spring, v. See the ensuing phrases.—2. To obtain feloniously: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'At last, passing behind him, I touched a greasy twig cloy . . . It felt hard, and without difficulty I sprung a skin' (purse); † by 1900, except in U.S.A. (A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 1912). Perhaps, to cause the article to 'spring' into one's hand.—3. To find or to disclose the whereabouts of (a stolen article): Oct. 1846 (Surrey cases), Sessions Papers, 'Springing the plant means finding stolen property in a person's possessions'; 1891, J. Bent, Criminal Life (to disclose); 1912, D. Lowrie, My Life in Prison (U.S.A.); 1925, Leverage, 'To detect; to discover'; extant. Ex spring as used in plant, spring a.—4. To release (a person); to get (him) from (the clutches of) others: U.S.A.: ca. 1886, in Lewis E. Lawes, Cell 202, Sing Sing, 1935 (to get a person out of prison); 1900 (see plunk); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (to liberate); 1909, Charles B. Chrysler; 1912, D. Lowrie, My Life in Prison; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (to bail out one who is under arrest); 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, Leverage; Feb. 12, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, Clark & Eubank; 1927, Charles F. Coe, Me—Gangster; 1928, Chicago May, 'Spring—to set free, or "beat" the case'; by 1929 (C. F. Coe, Hook) it was police and journalistic s.—5. Hence, 'To "spring" is to escape from the clutches of the law', Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens (to get released from prison); 1934, Convict, 'He will get a ducat when he springs from stir'; extant.—6. To open: U.S.A.: 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'Others "springing" the side-doors . . . and climbing in'—but earlier in 'He sprung the paddy with a screw. He opened the lock with a key', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, 'He called it "springing" the window'; extant.—7. To play stool pigeon: U.S.A.: 1929–30, Kernôt; extant. Cf. senses 3, 6.

spring, at the. Laced into a strait-jacket: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'At the spring', but s.v. 'Springs' we find at the springs, which, in view of the springs (q.v.), is the more likely.

spring a leak. To inform to the police: since ca. 1920. Ersine. Contemptuous on leaky.—2. To go insane: convicts': since ca. 1925. Ersine. I.e., in 'the top storey'.

spring a partridge. To draw persons in, e.g., into a gaming house, in order to cheat or swindle them: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., repeats this phrase and adds the variant, 'To spring Partridges: To raise a Crowd in order to rob or pick Pockets'; † by 1860. Ex S.E. spring a partridge, to raise one.

spring a plant. See plant, spring a.

'Spring ankle warehouse, Newgate, or any other gaol, (Irish), says Grose, 1785; but he does not say whether it is Irish c. or Irish s.; we should therefore be wise to take it as Anglo-Irish s.

spring-in. See springing in.

spring(-)money. 'If a thief wants to keep out of the "pen" or "stir" . . . capital is a necessity. The capital of a grafter—a criminal—is called "spring-money", for he may have to use it at any time in paying the lawyer who gets him off in case of an arrest, or in bribing the policeman, or some other official,' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; by 1930, ob.; by 1945, †. See spring, v., 5; cf. fall money.

spring out. To escape from jail; usually when no force is needed: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. spring, v., 4.

spring the trap. 'To finish up the contemplated arrest of any one': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1900, coll. A natural extension of the Standard sense.

springer. 'One who renders help in embarrassing cases,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See spring, v., 4.—2. Its use in race-course circles is turf s., not c.

springing in. 'One of the safest getaways ever discovered—that of "springing" into a loaded box car The process of "springing in"—gaining entrance to it—'was simple,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926: C. 20: mostly tramps': 1931, IA, 'Entering a locked freight car without breaking the seal' by prying open the lower part of the door.

springs, at the. Laced into a strait-jacket: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (Glossary, s.v. 'Springs'); extant. Obviously connected with—perhaps deriving from:— springs, the. The dungeon: San Quentin: C. 20. Donald Lowrie, who served a sentence there in 1901–11, in My Life in Prison, 1912. Cf. prec.

sprooker. Variant of spruiker.

sprout. 'A youngster, punk,' Ersine: since ca. 1925. Ersine. Having budded but not yet flowered.

sprowsey or sprowsie. See spraser.

spruce, n. 'A cheat substitute, verbal or material'; a blarneying; a deception: C. 20: rather is it low s. than c.: 1940, Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 'Perhaps originated from the sale of cheap spruce timber as more valuable woods, in the heyday of the lumber-trade'.—2. A field: since ca. 1920. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. Ex spruce-wooded fields?

spruce, v. To deceive, to mislead, to 'tell the tale' to: 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades, 'All busies think you are trying to spruce them'; 1934, David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live, 'I'll tell you enough to show I'm not sprucing'; 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night, 'Garn. You're sprucing'; 1942, David Hume, Never Say Live, 'How do I know that you're not sprucing me?'; 1945, D. Hume, Come Back for the Body, 'I'm not making any attempt to stall or spruce'. Of the same origin as spruiker, q.v.

spruce prigs; rare in singular. A term of ca. 1710–40; defined by H. D., in his The Life of Jonathan Wild, 1725: '[Wild] had [a] Sort of Gentleman under his command, whom in the Cant or Language of the Profession, he distinguish'd by the Name of Spruce Prigs'—lit., genteel, well-dressed thieves; 'these were Persons not qualified for the bold and manly employment of Knocking-down, House-breaking, &c. but being Persons of Address and Behaviour, were dispatch'd to Court on Birth-Nights, to Balls, Operas, Plays and Assemblies, for which Purpose they were furnish'd with laced Coats, brocade Wastcoats, fine Perriwigs, and sometimes equipp'd with handsom equipages, such as Chariots, with Footman in Liveries, and also Valet de Chambres, the Servants being all Thieves like the Master.—This Body of Gentlemen were generally chosen out of such as had been Footmen, who . . . knew something of the Address and spriker is C. 20 Australian side-show men's and cheapjacks' s. for a gee, n., 6: a 'spieler'. Baker, 1945. Ex Dutch sprookje, 'story, tale, fable', or the v.; cf. Ger. Sprecher, n., and sprechen v.

Discourse used among Gentlemen; and the better to qualify them to acquit themselves handsomely at Balls, Jonathan sometimes paid a Dancingmaster to teach them to dance.'

spud. (?) A crown piece: 1825, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, I, 'He said there is twenty-five bobs and five spuds—I took the coin'; † by 1900. Ex the size.—2. 'Base coin; false money': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'The green goods swindle'; 1925, Leverage, 'A confidence game of any kind'; extant.

spud, out on the. (Of a 'green goods' man) plying his trade: Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, which omits out; extant. 'Because "digging up" money among "rubes" or farmers?': Godfrey Irwin, letter, Aug. 9, 1937.

Spud Drag, the; the Spud Route. Part of the B & A Railroad 'up beyond Portland, Maine': tramps': 1925, Glen H. Mullin (see quot'n at Milk Poultrice Route, the), the drag form; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Spud Route—The Bangor and Aroostook Railroad, a line which traverses a part of the State of Maine, famous for its potatoes'; extant.

spud man. 'One of the best of the spud men (green goods men)', Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; Sept. 26, 1931, Flynn's, N. Robins & E. M. Bracken; extant. See spud, 2, 'Because so many farmers had offered to buy money with vegetables' (Robins & Bracken).

spuddy, 'a seller of bad potatoes', is not c., but street s.

sponge. See sponge.

spunk. (The term of one's natural) life: 1821, D. Haggart, 'Now under sentence of lag for spunk'; † by 1900. Spunk, the semen, hence courage: two essences of life.—2. A match: 1839, Brandon; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), collectively 'matches'. Mostly in combination, spunk-fencer. Perhaps ex spunk, '(a glimmer of) light'.

spunk-faker is an American variant of the next: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920.

spunk(-)fencer. He is now a spunk-fencer, (match seller), mostly in Essex': 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicancy and Crime; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; by 1864 it was wholly, as by 1850 it had > partly, street vendors' (hence street) s. I.e., S.E. spunk, 'tinder', and fencer, 2.

spur, n.; app. always the spur. A cheat employed by card-sharpers in the game of Putt: 1680, C. Cotton, The Compleat Gamester, 'In dealing these Rooks have a trick they call the Spurr, and that is, as good Cards come into their hand that they may know them again by the outside (and so discover the strength or weakness of their Adversaries Game) I say some where on the outside they gave them a gentle touch with their nail', whereof the sharpness is compared with that of a spur.

spur, v. 'When I came out [of prison] the trip I had been living with had sold the home and guyed; that did not trouble me much. The only thing that spurred (annoyed) me was me being such a flat to buy the home'; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob. Cf. S.E. to goad.

spur, get the; give the spur. To become annoyed, exasperated; to annoy, exasperate (a person): 1888, G. R. Sims, 'A Plank Bed Ballad', 'Oh, donnys and omecs, what gives me the spur, | Is . . . that . . .'; 1903, F & H (the former); ob. Cf. preceding entry.

spurge. An effeminate male; a passive homosexual: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Ex the weedy plant so named.

spurtz, v. 'To squeal; to betray,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Yiddish?

squall, 'a dram' (Andrewes, 1809), is prob. an error.

squall. A voice: ca. 1710-70. A New Canting Dict., 1725. Cf. — squaller. A baby; a young child: tramps': 1872, Hamilton Aidé, Morals and Mysteries, 'A squaller's a brat as squalls, to be sure'; extant, but s. by 1900.

square, n. 'All fair, upright, and honest practices, are called the square, in opposition to the cross In making a bargain or contract, any overture considered to be really fair and reasonable, is declared to be a square thing, or to be upon the square. To be upon the square with any person, is to have mutually settled all accompts between you to that moment. To threaten another that you will be upon the square with him some time, signifies that you'll be even with him for some supposed injury, &c.': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1839, Brandon, 'On the Square—honest, fair'; 1846, C. Rowcroft, The Bushranger of Van Diemen's Land, convict loquitur, 'I will deal on the square with you'; by ca. 1845, current in U.S.A.—E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851, 'Square. Honest. To live on the square, is to quit thieving'; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H. Kingsley, Geoffrey Hamlyn; 1859, H; 1860, C. Martel, The Detective's Note-Book; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'I was really acting "on the square" with them'; 1884, J. McGovan, Traced and Tracked, "'I'm sick of prison, and don't mean to go inside of one again if I can live on the square"''; 1890, B & L; by 1895, s. Cf. the semantics of right and S.E. straight and four-square.—2. A good or hearty meal: American tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, "'I've had my three squares every day, and in winter I've had a bed every night"''; 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp; 1903, J. Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, A Scholar Tramp; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Short for square meal.

square, v. To bribe: 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, II, xviii; 1859, H, 'Squaring his Nibs, giving a policeman money'; 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, 'A warder, whom they have "squared"''; 1885, Indoor Paupers, by One of Them; 1888, G. Bidwell, Forging His Chains; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. I.e., to straighten out matters with (a person).—2. See square it.—3. To murder (someone): 1888 (O.E.D.); ob. To dispose of him by murder: prob. ex sense 1.

square, adj. 'Honest, not roguish. A square covc, i.e. a man who does not steal, or get his living by dishonest means': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Anything you have bought, or acquired honestly, is termed a square article; and any transaction which is fairly and equitably conducted, is said to be a square concern': 1823, Egan's Groser; 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); June 17, 1856, Sessions Papers; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 'The square world (honest tradesmen)'; 1857, Augustus Mayhew; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was s. A square consists of straight lines set at right angles.—2. Hence, (of a warder that is) obliging; willing to look the other way or to smuggle, or help to smuggle, things into prison: prisoners': 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; extant. Cf. synonymous right.—3. (Of stolen goods) not dangerous to handle: U.S.A.: 1846 (see right, 2); extant. Cf. right, 2, for the semantics.

square, adv. Corresponding to square, adj., 1: ca. 1820–60 as c.—2. Corresponding to square, adj., 2; 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude (see plant, v., 5); extant.

square, live on the. See square, n., 1, reference of 1851.

square, on the. See square, n., 1.—2. On tramp, tramping: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1919. Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows, 1926. Ex barrack-square marching.

square, turn. 'To reform and get one's living in an honest manner': 1859, H; 1879, James McGovan, Hunted Down; 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail; 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man (U.S.A.); slightly ob. See square, adj., 1.

square, upon the. See square, n., 1.

square apple. See do-right John.

square bit. Money paid to, or set aside to pay, a policeman or an informer to induce him to keep quiet about a crime: 1893, Langdon W. Moore. His Own Story, p. 243; † by 1930. Cf. square bull and bit, n., 5.

square bluff. 'I told him the best thing he could do was to make a "square bluff", acknowledge the purchase and sale of the [stolen] bond, and elaim he had bought and sold it in good faith': 1893, Langdon W. Moore. His Own Story; ob.

square bull. A policeman in league with, or at the least sympathetic to, the underworld: 1933, James Spenser, Limey; extant. See square, adj., 2.

square chalk, n. and v. 'A prison warder's report which results in a long confinement in a cell,' Leverage, 1925; ibid., 'To report and lock up for a long time'; extant. Cf. chalker.

square cove. An honest man: 1811, Lex. Bal. (see quot'n at square, adj.); 1859, H; 1862, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV, 'All dodges are getting stale; square coves (i.e., honest folks) are so wide awake'; 1878, James McGovan, Brought to Bay; 1893, No. 747; by 1900, low s. See square, adj. + cove.

square crib. 'A respectable house, of good repute, whose inmates, their mode of life and connexions, are all perfectly on the square': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; † by 1900. See square, adj., and crib, n., 2: opp. cross crib.

square game. 'When cards are dealt fairly, and there is no cheating': professional gamblers' and card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; by 1900, s. See square, adj.

square head, square-head, squarehead. A half-hearted thief: 1903, F & H; 1939, Kylie Tennant, Foveaux (Australia); 1942, Baker, 'A timid or amateurish thief with a conscience'. See square, adj., and cf. square cove.—2. A Swede: U.S.A.: C. 20: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; and others. In British s., a squarehead is a German.—3. An honest person: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. goodhead.

square hollers. To 'fix' a case; to avoid or escape a trial: 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; extant. See holler.

square it. 'When some one of the fraternity [of thieves] says he has made up his mind and is "going to square it" (live honestly for the future), the others . . . exclaim, "Well, I'm glad on it; I only wish I could do the same!"'; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; by ca. 1870, also U.S.A. (see, e.g., P. Farley, Criminals of America, 1876); J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899, 'The Tramps' Jargon'; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (U.S.A.); 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1910, H. Hapgood, Types from City Streets; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To abandon a "racket" or "graft"'; Feb. 10, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; by 1939, police and journalistic s. in U.S.A. but still (until June 9, 1946, at least—anon. letter) c. in Canada.—2. To square it with the police is to bribe the police to overlook, pretend ignorance of, a crime: Dec. 18, 1865, Sessions Papers, (prisoner says to a policeman) 'I know I have got the chain, but can't we square it?'; 1872, E. Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York; by 1890 or 1895, low s. I.e., to put matters 'straight'.—3. To repair a loss; make good a damage: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1918, low s.; by 1920, gen. s. Prob. ex sense 1.

square jack. Honest money: c. of ca. 1905–40, then low s. Castle, 1938.

square John. An ordinary decent man or male citizen: since ca. 1905: 1934, Convict; 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece; 1938, Castle; extant. Cf. honest John, of which it is, almost certainly, an elaboration.—2. Hence, 'an upright and pompous person, a clergyman' and 3, ironical for a gambler: both in Ersine, 1933, and both extant.—4. (Also ex 1.) A non-addict: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942.

square life. 'Lizzie . . . was leading what is termed a "square life"—that is, she had given up being a professional thief,' Jerome Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life, 1895; by 1905 or so it had > low s., by 1918, no longer low. See square, adj.

square moll. An honest woman: prob. from early in C. 19: 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, 'Square moll; (keusches) Bürgermadchen', i.e., a (chaste) middle-class girl; extant. Cf. square cove. See square, adj., and moll, 1. square-off. An apology: Australian confidence tricksters': since ca. 1910. Baker, 1945. A 'squaring off' (settlement or arrangement) of the affair.

square plug, square shooter. One who is in sympathy with, to be trusted by, a criminal gang without being a member thereof: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1920, square shooter had > s.; by 1930, square plug was ob.

square rap. A justifiable arrest or indictment: since ca. 1910: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 'The police had me "right". The job in — was "a square rap" (the police had the goods on me)'; et al.

*square shooter. See square plug.

square tats. Honest dice (untampered with): 1903, F & H; prob. c. of ca. 1840–1910. See square, adj. + tats.

*square the beef; esp. squaring. . . . To escape legal punishment or to get off with a lighter fine or sentence than was to have been expected: from at least as early as 1920; by at least as early as 1940, it was political, journalistic, police s. Charles H. Garrigues, You're Paying for It!, 1937, has an illuminating chapter entitled 'Squaring the Beef'.

*square the rap. To beat the charge; to evade justice: 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor; by 1940, police and journalistic s.

square-toes, old. See old squaretoes.

square up is a variant of square, v., 2: ca. 1860–1900. Sessions Papers, Feb. 1870 (p. 331), Detective Officer log., 'The prisoner said, "There is only four of us here, can't we square it up? You can have 10 l. each"—I said, "I don't understand squaring".'

square well(-)prop. A skeleton key: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); app. † by 1930. Perhaps cf. prop, n., 1.

squarehead. See square head.

squarier; usually pl. A kind of false die: gamesters' c., app. † by 1660: 1552, Gilbert Walker, Diceplay, 'When fine squariers only be stirring, there rests a great help in cogging; that is, when the undermost die standeth dead by the weighty fall of his fellow' (that 'fellow' being the squarier ?); Greene, 1591. Ex S.E. square: ? influenced by Fr. carrière squaring. See square up.

squaring his nibs. See square, v.

*squash, get off the. (Of men) to obtain sexual satisfaction: 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; extant. Cf. get off the button (q.v. at button); squash connotes congestion and oppression.

*squatter; squatting. See land-squatter . . .

*squawk, n. A protest: C. 20: 1909, Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'A complaint'; by 1929 (Flynn's, March 16, Victor Maxwell, 'Marked Money') it was police s. Ex squawk, v.; cf. squeak, n., and squeal, n.

*squawk, v. To inform to the police: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, s.v. play baby in the glossary: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, in the more general sense, 'to protest'; 1925, Leverage, 'To inform on a pal'; Aug. 13, 1927, Flynn's, article by Linn Bonner; 1927, Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster; 1928, Chicago May; 1929, Great Detective Cases; by 1930, perhaps by 1929, it was police and journalistic s. Cf. squeak, v., and squeal, v.

squawker. An informer to the police: C. 20: 1928, Chicago May, 'Slims, Rats, Squealers, Squawkers, Stool-Pigeons, Stools, Pigeons or Narks (English)—police informer'; 1929, Great Detective Cases, 'Canada's Clueless Crime'; July 26, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1932, if not indeed by 1929 or 1930, police and journalistic s. Ex squawk, v.—2. Hence, as in 'Nobody in this business [robbing the banks] ever worries about a squawker—you know, those horns or bells which are rung outside to give the good citizens the news that the bank is being robbed,' Courtney Ryley squawl. Voice: 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The Cove has a bien Squawl to maund Bacon; i.e. He has a good Voice to beg Bacon; us'd to jeer a bad Voice or an indifferent Singer'; app. † by 1820.

Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937; Dec. 4, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, 'A squawker (burglar alarm) outside'; extant.

squeak, n. 'A thief, who, when taken up confesses and impeaches the rest of his companions': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; †, in this narrow nuance, by 1870. Prob. ex the v.—2. A giving of information to the police: 1827, P. Cunningham, Two Years in New South Wales; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1927, Edgar Wallace, The Squeaker; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1933, Ersine; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant.—3. The S.E. narrow squeak, 'a narrow escape', has, in c., a special phrasing: 1874, H., 'Among thieves . . . a prisoner acquitted after a hard trial is said to have had "a narrow squeak" for it'; extant.—4. (Ex sense 1.) An informer to the police: 1891, T. P. McNaught, Thrilling Detective Stories; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 'You're a cheap squeak'; extant.

squeak, v. B.E., 1698, 'Squeak, c. to discover, or impeach . . . The Cull Squeak's [sic], c. the Rogue Peaches'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; Jan. 1744–45, trial of Marthe Stacey, in Select Trials, from 1741 to 1764, I, pub. in 1764; 1785, Grose, 'To squeak, to confess, peach, or turn stag'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1860, C. Martel, The Detective's Note-Book; 1864, H., 3rd ed., 'Squeak on a person'; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1891, James Maitland; 1896, E. H. Hornung, The Rogue's March; 1903, F & H; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1927, Edgar Wallace, The Squeaker; 1933, Ersine; extant.

squeak beef is explained in the earliest record, 'They Squeek beef upon us, c. cry out Highway-men or Thieves after us' (give the alarm), B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; prob. † by 1870. I.e., to 'cry beef' (see beef, n.).

squeak on. See squeak, v., ref. of 1864.

squeaker; mostly pl. 'A bar-boy,' Coles, 1676; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'Pot boy'; 1848, Sinks of London; perhaps † by 1880. He 'squeaks' as he goes about his work.—2. A bastard child; any child: 1698, B.E., 'Stifle the Squeaker, c. to Murder the Child and throw it into a House of Office'—repeated in A Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, II; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1887 (Baumann). Ex an infant's squeaking and squealing.—3. 'Organ pipes are likewise called squeakers. The squeakers are meltable; the small pipes are silver': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1887 (Baumann). Ex the noise they emit.—4. An informer to the police: 1903, F & H, but prob. from as early as ca. 1700; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1927, Edgar Wallace, The Squeaker; 1933, Ersine (U.S.A.); 1936, Grierson Dickson, Design for Treason; extant.

squeaking. A murder: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'A cracking consarn vere squeaking had been done', glossed as 'a burglary where murder has been committed'; † by 1900. Ex the victim's cries.

squeal, n. An informer or impeacher: 1821,

David Haggart, Life, 'He only wanted to give the deeker a milvadering, as he was a complete geach and squeal'; 1823, Egan's Groser; app. † by 1850. Prob. ex sense 1 of the v.—2. Hence, a giving of information—the making of a complaint—to the police: U.S.A.: 1872, E. Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'This "squeal" among the "queersmen" brings this foul business straight home to you'; 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections; 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story; 1894, The Reminiscences of Chief-Inspector Littlechild (England); 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Cloud; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, J. H. Keate, Mephisto's Greatest Web; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; Nov. 26, 1927, Flynn's, 'The "squeal" of a stool pigeon'; by 1928, low s. squeal, v. To give information to the police: 1821, David Haggart, Life (Glossary), 'Snitch, to tell a secret; to squeal'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A thief is said to "squeak" or "squeal" when, after his arrest, he gives information against his accomplices, or where stolen property may be found'; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'A north country variation of squeak'; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham (U.S.A.), 'He "squealed" on Bob'; 1877, Bartlett, Americanisms, 4th ed.; 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; 1890, B & L (as an Americanism); 1890, B & L; 1891, Maitland (U.S.A.); 1893, Confessions of a Convict (U.S.A.), ed. by Julian Hawthorne; 1899 (see beefier); 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, Glossary, 'In the case of a grafter, to betray another grafter. In the case of a victim, to make a fuss over his loss'; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Cloud; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1903, F & H; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood (U.S.A.); 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective (U.S.A.); 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (U.S.A.); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; by ca. 1920, in the U.S.A. the word had, in this sense, > police and crime-reporters' s.; 1942, Jack Henry, Famous Cases; 1943, Black; 1945, David Hume, Come Back for the Body; by 1946, low s. in Britain and in Canada (where current throughout C. 20). I.e., to squeal like a rat; cf. squeak, v., and holler, v.—2. Hence, as in 'I don't squeal . . . I don't complain' (or 'grouse'), No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; extant.

squealer. An informer to the police: North Country: 1864, H, 3rd ed. (at squeal); 1890, B & L, who record it as gen. English and American c.; 1891, Maitland (U.S.A.); 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story (U.S.A.); 1899, Josiah Flynt (American tramps); 1901 (see mouth-piece, 2); 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1903, F & H; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood (U.S.A.); 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective (U.S.A.), 'A squealer wouldn't last long. These mugs'—pointing to the ruffianly gang inside—"would croak a snitch in a holy second"; 1909, Ware; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; 1916, F. Frost & G. Dilnot, The Rogues' Syndicate; 1919, Arthur Stringer, The Man Who Couldn't Sleep; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1925 the term was police and journalistic s. in U.S.A.; 1935, The Garda Review; 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer; extant. Ex squeal, v., 1.—2. An illegitimate baby: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; ob. It gives the game away.—3. A pork sausage: tramps': C. 20. W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 1936. A pig squeals most notably.

squeals. A 'squealer' or 'stool pigeon': 1925, Leverage; extant—but not very gen.

squeedge. See squeeze, n., 3 (ref. 1863).

squeeg. See squeeze, n., 2, 1st ref.

squeeggee. Silk goods: since the late 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. A humorous perversion of squeeze, n., 3.

squeek; squeeker. See squeak; squeaker.

squeeze, n. A period or bout of illicit work, e.g. pickpocketry; a harvest or haul of things and money stolen: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'A rum squeeze at the spell', glossed as 'a kind of harvest for pickpockets'; app. † by 1905, except in U.S.A. where, in C. 20, it = 'graft'—witness Burke, 1930. Ex the coll. squeeze, a crowd or the pressure of a crowd.—2. The neck: ca. 1775, 'The Potatoe Man', in The Ranelagh Concert, 'With a blue bird's eye about my squeeg, And a check shirt on my back'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Once it had decorated the squeeze of the lion-hearted Hooper'; 1828, P. Egan, Finish (external throat); 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin (neck; throat); 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1890, B & L; ob. by 1903; † by 1920. I.e., that which is squeezed by the hangman's rope.—3. Silk: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Silk or satin'; April 1863, Sessions Papers (p. 787; spelt squeedge); Oct. 1879, Macmillan's Magazine; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; by 1903 (F & H), low s. It squeezes into a small space.—4. (Ex sense 2.) Neckcloth; silk tie: 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude; extant.—5. The sense 'impression in wax' is s.—not c. The same applies to the sense 'extortion'.—6. 'Squeeze . . . A crooked faro box,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.; extant. Cf. squeeze wheel.—7. An embarrassing position; a tight spot; an emergency: U.S.A.: Sept. 20, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; extant.—8. Hush-money, esp. bribes to the police to secure their tolerance; graft: boot-leggers': Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1934, Rose; extant.

squeeze, v. To (prosecute and) sentence to imprisonment: June 21, 1895, Sessions Papers, (counterfeiter log), 'You cannot prove I have put any of these things off; but I suppose they will squeeze me for it'; extant.—2. (Usually as vbl n.) 'Squeezing. Demanding hush money,' Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941. Cf. sense 8 of the n.

squeeze-clout. A neckcloth: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (handkerchief); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A silk handkerchief'; 1890, B & L; † by 1920. The two senses come resp. ex squeeze, 2, and squeeze, 3; and see clout.

squeeze gaff. A silk warehouse: since ca. 1930. F. D. Sharpe (of the Flying Squad), 1938. See squeeze, n., 3, and gaff, n., 9 and 10.

squeeze on. See dip on. Cf. squeeze, n., 1.

squeeze(-)spindle. 'A crooked roulette wheel,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex—and see—squeeze wheel.

squeeze-wax; squeeze wax. N. and v. One who seals, to seal, writings; one who binds himself, to bind oneself, to another: the processes being known as squeezing of wax. Not c., but s., of late C. 17—mid-19.

squeeze wheel; occ., squeeze spindle. 'A hand like that of a clock revolves around a circle which is marked off for prizes, $10 in one space, $5 in others, blanks in others, lose in two, and one marked conditional . . . The wheel is controlled by a clutch under the table operated by a hidden lever or a button near the operator's hand,' Will Irwin, Confessions of a Con Man, 1909—but the period concerned is ca. 1890–1905; extant.

squeezer, 'a child', is prob. a misprint for squeaker, 2; in 1809, George Andrewes, who (or whose printer) is exceedingly careless, has 'Stifle a squeezer—to murder a child', with which cf. the B.E. quot'n at squeaker, 2.—2. A gallows, a hangman's noose or halter: ca. 1816, The Night before Larry was Stretched; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open, 'Drop, the squeezer at Newgate'; 1887, Henley; 1890, B & L; 1891, F & H (at choker); ob. by 1903 (F & H); † by 1910. Cf. squeeze, n., 2.—3. 'A prison [warder or] keeper who is a hard disciplinarian,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910.—4. (Plural only.) 'Squeezers . . . Wedge-shaped cards,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.; extant.—5. Handcuffs: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.—6. The police collectively: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

squeezing of wax. See squeeze-wax.

squib, n. A gun: 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, 'The House-Breaker's Song' in Pickwick Abroad, ch. xxvi, 'And a double-tongued squib to keep in awe|The chaps that flout at me', glossed as 'double-barrelled gun'; † by 1900. Ex S.E. squib, that kind of firework known in C. 20 as a cracker.—2. A paint-brush: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of Paris, II, ch. clxxx; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was s. Perhaps ex the Cockney s. sense, 'a head of asparagus'.

squib, v. To fire a gun: 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, 'The House-Breaker's Song' in Pickwick Abroad, 'And if the swells resist our "Stand!" | We'll squib without a joke'; † by 1900. Cf. sense 1 of the n.

squills. Boots: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Perhaps ex a fancied resemblance to the squills, the bulbous roots of sea-onions (and related plants).

squire. 'A Sir Timothy Treat-all' (B.E., 1698) is the Squire; a squire is 'a Sap-pate' (B.E.), hence a fat squire is a rich fool. These nuances were all much more prob. drinkers' s. than c.: the same remark applies to standing squire, 'one who pays the whole reckoning, or treats the company', as defined by Grose and current ca. 1770–1840.—2. A Lower Court magistrate; a small-town justice: American yeggs and tramps': C. 20: 1931, Urbain Ledoux, Ho-bo-ho Medley No. 1.

squire of Alsatia. See Alsatia, squire of.

squire of the pad. See pad, squire of the.

squirish, 'foolish', is prob. s., not c.: late C. 17—early 19. B.E.; Grose. Ex squire.—2. But B.E.'s further sense, '(of) one that pretends to Pay all Reckonings, and is not strong enough in the Pocket', may possibly be c., although I suspect it to be London drinking s.

squirrel. See squirrels.

squirrel-hunting or hunting the squirrel, a rough joke played on inferior drivers by stage- and hackney-coachmen (who are then called squirrel-hunters), is not c., but s.—or even folk-lore. (G. Parker, 1781.)

squirrel ranch. An asylum for the insane: 1933, Ersine; extant. With a pun on nuts.

squirrels. (A pair of) boots: 1871, State Prison Life, as 'boots' in contrast to stamps, 'shoes'; † by 1920. Perhaps by a pun on squills.

squirt, 'a doctor' or 'a pharmaceutical chemist', is s.—2. A revolver; an automatic: Australia and New Zealand: since ca. 1920: 1926, Jice Doone (Aus.); 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter, N.Z.); 1942, Baker (Australia); extant. Prob. a shortening of next, or imm. ex children's water-pistol (s.: since ca. 1900).

squiter. A revolver: C. 20: 1934, Ex-Sgt B. Leeson, Lost London; 1935, George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; Daily Express, March 12, 1938; 1938, F. D. Sharpe, 'A gun'; extant. It squirts out bullets.

squish, 'marmalade', is s.

sreeving. See cadger screeving.

St. See Saint.

stabbing, gamesters' c. for a certain kind of false play in dicing: 1674, Cotton, The Compleat Gamester, 'Late at night when the Company grows thin' at the gaming-house, 'and your eyes dim with watching, false Dice are frequently put upon the ignorant, or they are otherwise cheated by Topping, Slurring, Stabbing, &c.'; Cotton defines it thus, 'Stabbing . . . having a Smooth Box, and small in the bottom, you drop in both your Dice in such manner as you would have them sticking therein by reason of its narrowness, the Dice lying one upon another; so that turning up the Box, the Dice never tumble; . . . by which means you have bottoms according to the tops you put in; For example, if you put in your Dice so that two fives or two fours lie a top, you have in the bottom turn'd up two two's, or two treys'.

stable. A boarding-house, or a set of rooms, for street walkers; but usually a team of prostitutes working for one pimp: white-slave traffic: C. 20. Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940, 'He'—'one giant buck-nigger'—'now runs a "stable" of white women for coloured seamen in Cardiff, his haunt being in the infamous Tiger Bay district': Joseph Crad is also the authority for stable owner, 'brothel-keeper' or 'pimp'; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road (pimp loq.) 'I'm going to have you in my stable one of these days!'; 1942, BVB. Ex horse-racing j.: cf. s. ride, 'to coit with a woman'.

stable boss. See stable owner.

stable dog. A stableman; a man that looks after a labour-camp stables: tramps': 1931, Stiff, 'He is often called chambermaid to the mules'; extant.

stable owner. See stable. The variant stable boss is recorded by BVB, 1942.

stach. See stash, 1.

stack. To hide, to conceal; esp., as applied to loot: since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin. Ex stash, v., 2, by corruption.

stack of bones. A hash-house dish, consisting mostly of boiled spare ribs: tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931.

staff(-)naked is a corruption of stark-naked—and, like it, s. not c.

stag, n. 'A Term (inverting Qualities) used for an Enemy, a Pursuer; as, I spy a Stag, us'd by that notorious young Robber Shepherd, lately executed, when he first saw the Turnkey of Newgate, who pursu'd and took him after his first Escape from the Condemn'd Hold, A New Canting Dict., 1725; app. † by 1760. Ex:—2. One who turns King's evidence, a 'squeaker' or 'squealer': 1721, N. B., A Compleat Collection of Remarkable Tryals, IV, 'He . . . desired that he might be a Stag . . . an Evidence'; 1741, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. II; app. † by 1800.—3. A shilling: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H; 1863, A Lancashire Thief; 1887, Henley; 1890, B & L; by 1903 (F & H) it was low s. Cf. hog.—4. Hence (?), money: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; by 1947, ob.

stag, v. To know; to recognize: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'He stags my Muns; he knows my Face'; this sense derives ex the next, which itself arises from 'the fixed, intent staring of a stag' (B & L), and was † by 1900.—2. 'To find, discover, or observe'; to follow: 1736, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account ('to follow'); 1796 (therefore current at least as early as 1791), Grose, 3rd ed.; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To take notice of' (a person); 1818, The London Guide; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III; 1822, A Real Paddy, Real Life in Ireland; 1823, Bee, 'To stag a thief, to look on, and spoil his sport'; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack; 1839, Brandon; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; 1859, H. Kingsley, Geoffrey Hamlyn; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; † by 1903 (F & H).—3. V.i., to turn King's evidence: 1767, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey (trial of J. Tinsey and Others), "'I will go and stag''"; April 1802, Sessions Papers; 1839, W. Carleton (O.E.D.); 1846, J. Keegan (O.E.D.); app. † by 1900. Ex stag, n., 2.—4. To inform on (a person): U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; † by 1910. Ex sense 3.—5. To demand money, to dun; to 'cadge': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; † by 1900. Possibly ex 1 and 2.

stag, turn. To turn King's evidence: 1750, Sessions Papers (Jan. 21: Applegarth and Soss); 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To turn stag was formerly synonymous with turning nose, or snitching, but the phrase is now exploded'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), at peach; 1890, B & L; † by 1903. See stag, n., 2.

stage, the. The privilege-period of a convict's imprisonment: convicts' (—1932): by 1940, gen. prison coll. Anon., Dartmoor from Within. Short for the final stage.

stagg is Potter's spelling (1797) of stag, n., 2; and Andrewes's (1809).

stagger. 'One who looks out, or watches' (for a gang of thieves): 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; † by 1910. Ex stag, v., 2; cf. sense 2 of the n.—2. A spy, esp. a police spy: 1887, Baumann; 1903, F & H; † by 1915. Cf. stag, v., 2, and staggering cove.—3. Hence (?), a country constable: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

staggering cove. A spy; a detective: 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London, 'Casting his eyes about, to see that the coast is clear of [police] officers and staggering coves, he bolts off in double quick time'; † by 1900. Ex stag, v., 2.

Staines. 'A man who in pecuniary is said to be at Staines, or at the Bush, alluding to the Bush inn at that town': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1903 (F & H). Vaux's definition probably explains the semantics; there may be an allusion to a stony road, staines being Scottish for 'stones'.

stairs, up the. Appearing, in a law court, on trial: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant. A variant of the more usual up the steps: see steps, 2.

stairs without a landing, the. The treadwheel: 1884, J. Greenwood, The Little Ragamuffins; 1903, F & H; † by 1910. Cf. everlasting staircase.

Stait. A mere misprint for Start: see Start, the, 1, ref. of 1857.

stake, n. 'A booty acquired by robbery, or a sum of money won at play, is called a stake, and if considerable, a prime stake, or a heavy stake. A person alluding to any thing difficult to be procured, or which he obtains as a great favour, and is therefore comparatively invaluable, would say, I consider it a stake to get it at all; a valuable or acceptable acquisition of any kind, is emphatically called a stake, meaning a great prize'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'A person had got his pocket pickt of ninety-five guineas. . . . O'Brien said, that's a good stake, whoever has got it'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Plunder, large or small in value, as the case may be'; 1863, The Cornhill Magazine, Jan., p. 80 (of the money and valuables carried by a prospective victim); app. † by 1900. Ex a gambling stake.—2. Hence, a stolen handkerchief: 1890, B & L—which appears to be the only mention; almost certainly † by 1930.—3. In U.S.A., money for comforts, esp. liquor and tobacco: tramps': C. 20: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (see quot'n at stake man); 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo (quot'n at jack, n., 10); 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; et al.

stake, v. To provide (a person) with money: since ca. 1890: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (p. 239); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Staking. Assisting; giving'; by 1905, s.; by 1914, coll.; by 1930, almost Standard American. Short for 'to grub-stake' a person. Storekeepers and others often used to provide miners with food (and tools, if necessary) in return for a share of the proceeds.

stake(-)man. 'A fellow who holds a position only long enough to get a "stake"—enough money to keep him in "booze" and tobacco while he is on the road. The tramps call him a "gay-cat"; Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'Stake-man—a tramp who works for a stake—booze and tobacco money—while he is on the tramp', which Godfrey Irwin (letter of Sept. 13, 1937) glosses thus, 'Not so; a tramp never works; a stakeman is a hobo who works just long enough to get enough money for immediate needs, then loafs a while'; 1925, Leverage (much as Casey); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. See stake, v. Hence, from the opposite, the complementary, angle:—2. 'One who advances money for a job' (a crime): 1933, Ersine; extant.

stake-out. A precarious position: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. stake, n., 1, and v., 1.

stale is an early form of stall, n., 1. Greene, in A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 1591, in speaking of concerted pickpocketry, says: 'He that faceth the man'—that accomplice who faces the victim during the act—'[is called] the Stale'; so too Dekker in The Belman of London, 1608, though he has stall also; 1630, John Taylor.

stale rooster. A man that has been emasculated: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant.

stale whimer is B & L's error, based on J. Shirley's misprint, stalewhimper, for stall whimper; stalewhimer occurs in the 1735 ed. of Shirley's book, and in Andrewes—a very careless glossarist.

stale whimper or stalewhimper. See prec.

staling ken. See stalling ken.

stalk. A policeman: ca. 1870–1910. Recorded in 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 320). Either ex his height (cf. the s. Cornstalk) or ex the fact that he stalks criminals.—2. A tie-pin: since ca. 1925. In, e.g., Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938.

stalk unchecked is a late C. 19–20 (but after 1930, rare) synonym of reign, v.

stalker. 'A gunman of New York, who shoots in the back,' Kernôt, 1929–31: since ca. 1925: by 1945, ob. Ex Red Indian warfare.

stall, n. For definition and earliest form, see stale (Robert Greene, 1591). In 1592, however, Greene, in The Second part of Conny-catching, has 'Commonly, when they'—generically the cut-purses (or 'nips') and the pickpockets (or 'foists')—'spy a Farmer or merchant, whome they suspect to be well monied, they follow him hard untill they see him drawe his purse, then spying in what place he puts it up, the stall or shadow beeing with the Foist or Nip, meets the man at some straight turne, and justles him so hard that the man marveiling, and perhaps quarrelling with him, the whilest the foist hath his purse'; ibid., 'A Nip and his staull'; 1592, Greene, A Disputation, '[The foist sets out] to dogge [the intended victim] into a presse where his staule with heaving and shoving shall so molest him, that hee shall not feele when we strip him of his bounge, although it bee never so fast or cunningly coucht about him'; 1630, John Taylor (stale). This sense may have been ob. as early as 1700, but it has survived until well into C. 20; Matsell (U.S.A.), 1859, says: 'One whose business it is to conceal as far as possible the manipulation of his confederate who is trying to pick a person's pocket'; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1874, H., 'An accomplice'; 1879, Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences; 1886, A Private Detective, Mysteries of Modern Roguery; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1890, B & L; 1893, Langdon W. Moore (U.S.A.); 1899, Flynt (U.S.A.); 1901, Flynt; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; 1904, H. Hapgood (U.S.A.); 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; the term is extant in the British Empire and the U.S.A., examples being too numerous to cite—e.g., John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; Godfrey Irwin, 1931; Ernest L. Van Wagner, New York Detective, 1938. Ex the idea implicit in sense 2 of the v.—2. Hence, a concerted attempt by a gang of pickpockets: see stall, make a.—3. Hence, a pretext on which to enter a place in order to rob it: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1859, H., 'A pretence, a dodge'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York (a subterfuge); by 1915, low s. in U.S.A.—and by 1895 in Britain.—4. Hence (or ex sense 2): 'Any thing said or done by which the attention from the true state of the case is called a stall': 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.)—but prob. current in England before 1859; 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1899, Geo. E. Boxall, Australian Bush-rangers (p. 230); by 1905, low s.—5. (Of a person) a decoy: U.S.A.: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York (an accomplice); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; rather ob. This sense derives from and merges with sense 1.

stall, v. 'To stall, to make or ordaine,' Harman, 1566; 1671, F. Kirkman, The English Rogue, Part Two, 'He lighteth on a company of canting Beggars, and is stalled one of their society'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., by implication; by 1830, it was †. A special application of S.E. stall, 'to place'.—2. V.i., to act as confederates; to engage in crime, esp. theft, with that accomplice who commits the actual theft; to screen the actual thief: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'I met a Doll, I view'd her well, | She was banship to my watch; | So she and I did stall, and cloy, | Whatever we could catch'; 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected (see knuckle, n.); 1797 (see sense 5); 1839, W. A. Miles (see buzz, v.); 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, Snowden; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1865, The Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1872, Geo. P. Burnham (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; 1893, Langdon W. Moore (U.S.A.); 1893, No. 747, 'To stall back and front'; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, Glossary (at dip), 'Stalling for the dip, assisting the "tool", or pickpocket, in arranging victims so that they can be successfully robbed'; 1903, F & H; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood (U.S.A.); 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'He can't even stall'; 1925, Leverage, 'To distract the attention of one while a confederate robs him'; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth; since the 1920's, at latest, current in Canada (anon. letter, June 9, 1946); extant.—3. Hence, to steal (in company with an accomplice): 1665, R. Head, 'Ye Maunders all, stow what you stall'; by 1780, it had merged with sense 2.—4. To wait; to wait about: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Nap my Kelp whilst I stall at the Jegger . . . Take my Hat whilst I stop at the Door'; by 1860, low s. Prob. ex 2.—5. Hence (?), to stand: 1753, Poulter (see stoop, n.); 1797, Potter, 'To make a stand, to croud together'; by 1860, it had merged with sense 2.—6. (Also stall to.) To lodge (v.i.): 1851 (see huey); 1856, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1860 H., 2nd ed.; by 1903 (F & H) it was low s. Perhaps short for install oneself.—7. To decoy: U.S.A.: 1886, Thomas Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America, 'He was readily identified as the man who "stalled" the County Treasurer to the rear of the office while the sneak went through the safe'; very ob. Cf. the n., sense 5.

stall, chuck a. See chuck a stall.

stall, fore (or front). See fore . . . , front . . .

stall, make a. 'Making of a stall, as they [pickpockets] term it; one pick-pocket gets in front and squeezes backwards, another behind you, and pushes forward; one on each side of you, which, if they can get your arms up, they will prevent your getting them down again, and then your are sure to be robbed of your watch, money, or pocket-book': 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, but the sense had prob. existed 90 or 100 or more years earlier; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A violent pressure in a crowd, made by pickpockets for the more easily effecting their predatory purposes; this is called making a rum stall in the push; † by 1920. See stall, n., 1.

stall for the dip, to. See stall, v., 2, ref. of 1901.

stall-off, n. 'A pretence, excuse, or prevarication—as a person charged with any fault, entering into some plausible story, to excuse himself, his hearers or accusers would say, O yes, that's a good stall off, or, Aye, aye, stall it off that way if you can'; 1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan's Grose, 1823; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'There are plenty of travelling women who go about with a basket and a bit of driss (lace) in it . . . for a stall-off (a blind), in case they meet the master, who would order them off'; 1859, H, 'A dodge, a blind, or an excuse'; 1887, Baumann; by 1920, ob.; by 1945, †. Imm. ex:—

stall off, v. As stall it off, it = to make a plausible excuse: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; 1903, F & H; by 1910, low s.; by 1920, †. Prob. ex stall, v., 2.—2. 'To avoid or escape any impending evil or punishment by . . . artifice, submission, bribe, . . . is also called stalling it off': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1903, F & H; by 1905, low s.—3. 'To extricate a person from any dilemma, or save him from disgrace, is called stalling him off': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1816, Sessions Papers (May, p. 285); 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; † by 1900.—4. 'I wish you'd stall me off from that crib, (or from that cove . . .), . . . walk in such a way as to cover or obscure me from notice, until we are past the shop or person in question': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; ob. Cf. stall round.—5. To put out of the way, to murder: 1828, G. G., History of George Godfrey, III, 95; app. † by 1890. Cf. sense 2.

stall one's mug. See mug, stall one's.

stall round. 'I was there, saw the gang, and heard the prisoner call out stall round—which means, to surround the person—they closed round the prosecutor,' Sessions Papers, Oct. 1820 (p. 656); slightly ob. Cf. stall, v., 2, and stall up (q.v.).

stall the monkey. See monkey . . .

stall to. See stall, v., 6.

stall to the rogue. To admit (a person) as a member of an underworld gang; the ceremony being performed by the 'upright man' (q.v.): 1566, Harman, 'Then doth this upright man call for a . . . quarte pot of drinke, and powres the same upon his peld pate, adding these words:—"I.G.P."—I, G.P.—"do stalle thee W. T. to the Roge, and that from hence forth it shall be lawefull for the to Cant . . . for thy living in al places"; prob. † by 1700. Lit., install as a rogue.

stall up. 'To stall a person up, (a term used by pickpockets,) is to surround him in a crowd . . . and by violence force his arms up, and keep them in that position while others of the gang rifle his pockets at pleasure': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; extant. Cf. stall round.

stall whimper. A bastard (baby or young child): 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (stalewhimper); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (stale whimper); 1848, Sinks of London (id.); † by 1890. Whimper: ex a baby's tendency to whimper; stall, perhaps because unwanted, stalled upon the mother.

stall your mug! See mug, stall one's.

staller. An accomplice, esp. he who holds up a person's arms or distracts his attention while the pickpocket gets to work: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); Sept. 19, 1925, Flynn's (U.S.A.); 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; extant. Ex stall, v., 2.

staller-up. One of those subordinate malefactors who assist the pickpockets to 'stall up' a person: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Staller, an accomplice in picking of pockets by holding up the arms of persons'; extant. Ex stall up.

stallin-ken is a rare variant of stalling ken. Anon., The Catterpillars of this Nation Anatomized, 1659.

stalling. Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie', Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608-9, 'Stalling: making or ordeyning', i.e., installing; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. Ex S.E. stall, 'to place, to set'.—2. The vbl n. of stall, v., esp. in sense 2; as, e.g., in 'He was . . . to do the "stalling"'. That is, he was to engage the attention of the cashier while the other burglar or burglars went through the bank,' Langdon W. Moore, 1893, and 'Past masters in the art of "stalling"', Josiah Flynt, 1903.

stalling(-)ken. A receiver's house, 'a house that wyll receave stolen ware': 1566, Harman, who spells it stawlinge ken and staulinge ken; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, says that the 'upright man', and his attendants, after making off with a booty, 'repaire to their Stalling kennes, and those are tipling houses, which will lend money upon any stolne goods, and unto which none but such guests as these resort'; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, spells it staling ken; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 'Stawling ken, a house to receive stolne goods, or a dwelling house'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'To strawling Ken the Mort bings then, | To fetch loure for her cheats'—and in the glossary, 'Stalling-Ken . . . Broker's house, or an house to receive stolen goods'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme, 'Staling Ken, a House to receive Goods stolen, or to Buy them'; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, who misprints or rather misunderstands it as stollen-ken (place of stolen goods); 1785, Grose, 'A broker's shop, or that of a receiver of stolen goods'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London. But I suspect that the term had been superseded by fencing ken as early as 1800, except in U.S.A., where it was current until as late as: 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, and prob. even after 1859, when it is recorded in Matsell's Vocabulary. Ex S.E. stall, 'to place', and ken, 1, 2.

stallion, 'a whoremaster or wencher', may, as B.E. claims, have once (say, 1690-1750) been c., but prob. it was always s., though low enough, esp. in Grose's definition, 'A man kept by an old lady for secret services'.

stallsman. 'Stalsman—an accomplice' in pickpocketry; he who screens the actual thief: 1839, Brandon; 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (as stalsman); 1890, B & L; ob. by 1903 (F & H) and † by 1910. Cf. stall, v., 2.

stam. See stam flash.

stam flash. 'Stam-flesh, c. to cant', Coles, 1676, the flesh being either a misprint or else pronounced flash, for the sense is 'to speak cant', flesh recurring in B.E.; J. Shirley, 1707, goes further in error with flam flesh; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (flesh); 1785, Grose (stam flash); 1797, Potter (s. flesh); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1848, Sinks of London, where it is misprinted s. fish; † by 1890. Either ex Ger. stimmen or, more prob., ex Dutch stemmen: to make one's voice heard. For the second element, see flash, n.

stamer is a misprint for starrer.

stamfish* is Matsell's error (1859) for the next.

stammel (B.E.) or strammel (Grose), 'a brawny, lusty, strapping Wench' (B.E., defining the former), is s., not c.; current ca. 1590–1840, it prob. comes direct ex S.E. stammel, a linsey-woolsey petticoat. Properly, strammel is quite another word, which did not arise before C. 18, means a lean, gaunt, ugly person, and is mostly dial.—2. (Only strammel.) An incorrect form of strommel, 1. In, e.g., J. Shirley, 1707.

stammer. A charge or indictment: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'I said I was not guilty, and demanded a copy of my stammer, but it was refused me'; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1903 (F & H). Ex a comparison of the long-windedness of an indictment with the long time taken by stammerers to complete a statement.

stamp, n. See stamps.—2. 'A particular way of throwing dice out of the box': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; extant. Perhaps ultimately ex a crisp, stamping movement; imm. ex English dicing j., as in Grose, 1788.

stamp*, v. To walk much, tramp long distances or habitually; hence stampers, 'tramps and hoboos in general': 1925, Leverage; extant.—2. To stamp one's drum is to punch a hole in one's kettle or billy-can when it has become too worn for further use: British tramps': late C. 19–20. Partridge, 1938. See drum, n.

stamp-backs. Cards marked with tiny dots: card-sharpers': ca. 1860–80. B & L, 1890, record that they were soon discarded as impracticable.

stamp drawers. Stockings: 1821, David Haggart, Life; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890. A fusing of stamps and drawers, qq.v.

stamper; usually pl. 'Stampers, shooes,' Harman, 1566; 1608–9, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie', 'Stampers: shooes'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe ('Boots'); 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III; 1823, Bee (stout shoes); 1829, Sessions Papers; † by 1870. Lit., that with which one stamps the ground.—2. A carrier: 1676, Coles, 'Stampers, c. shoes or carriers'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1797, Potter; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1903 (F & H). As shoes 'carry' a person, so a carrier (or porter) carries things.—3. (Pl. only.) Feet: 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; † by 1903 (F & H). Cf. sense 1.—4. Legs: 1707, J. Shirley; † by 1903 (F & H). Cf. stamps, 1.—5. Stairs: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1903 (F & H, by implication). One stamps up and down them.—6. See stamp, v.

stamps; very rare in the singular. 'Stampes, legges,' Harman, 1566; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; app. † by 1890. Cf. stamper, 1.—2. Hence, (a pair of) boots or shoes: 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1732, trial of Thomas Peck, recorded in Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, pub. in 1735,—where, as in Poulter's Discoveries, 1753, it is spelt stomps; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.: 'shoes', contrasted with squirrels, 'boots'); 1889 (see noisy pegs); † by 1903 (F & H).—3. Money: U.S.A.: 1895, J. W. Sullivan, Tenement Tales of New York; 1903, F & H; by 1905, low s. Perhaps ex the designs stamped on coins and bank-notes.

stanch. See staunch.

stand, n. 'The Black Art is picking of Locks, and to this busie trade two persons are required, the Charine and the Stand: the Charm is he that doth the feat, and the Stand is he that watcheth,' Greene, The Second Conny-catching, 1592; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; 1630, John Taylor; app. † by 1700. Ex the fact that he stands about.—2. A robbery, burglary, hold-up: U.S.A.: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 'Ottavio and me has been figuring on a little stand that won't be half bad. I need a good inside man, Joe. A cut will be worth two grand'; extant. Cf. stand up, v., 3.—3. A period of sexual intercourse: prostitutes': C. 20: 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 'He always has a one-night stand, don't he, not a short time?'

stand, v. To pay out as one's share: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'If you work with me at the rumble, I shall stand no more than you get from the gentlemen of the drop'; by 1870, no longer c. Ex S.E. stand, bear the brunt of, to tolerate.—2. See standing, 2.

stand a queer lay. See lay, stand a queer.

stand a queer lock. See lock, 3.

stand an ale*. To go bail; bail itself: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

stand bene. To stand surety; to make good the money, to find it: 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'He himself stood bene, nearly half the bustle'; app. † by 1887 (H. Baumann, Londonismen). See bene, n.

stand buff. See buff, stand.

stand bulk. See bulk, stand.

stand crow. See crow, n., 3.

stand fence. See fence, stand.

stand in, v.i. To participate, esp. if illicitly: 1858, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, xx, 'The policeman who "stood in" for this robbery saw the rogues depart with their plunder. He asked, as they passed him, "if it was all correct"'; 1863, The Cornhill Magazine; by 1870, low s., and by 1880, gen. s. I.e., take stand (with persons).

stand lock. See lock, stand.

stand Miss Slang all upon the safe. See Miss Slang.

stand no repairs. To waste no time; to act decisively and immediately: 1818, The London Guide, p. 26, 'Should it [a pocket-book] stick, or hang by something else, the rogue stands no repairs, but pulls away by main force'; app. † by 1900. I.e., stand still to make repairs (or improvements).

stand over. To manhandle, bully, intimidate: English and Australian: since ca. 1910. Partridge, 1938, by which time it was, in England, also low s.; Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939, 'Curly just stood over Bardy for three quid'''; 1945, Baker. Cf. standover. The criminal 'stands over' the victim and threatens him.

stand pad. See pad, stand.

stand pat. To refuse information to the police, esp. information against an accomplice or a fellow-gangster: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Convict, 1934.

stand the bears. See bears, stand the.

stand the gaff. See gaff, stand the.

stand the gag. See gag, stand the.

stand the gammon. See gammon, stand the.

stand the grin. See grin, stand the.

stand the guff. See guff, stand the.

stand the patter. See patter, stand the.

stand up, v. To place suspects in line for identification: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss (pp. 33-34: perhaps); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (p. 257); by 1910, police j. They are stood in a line, for detectives and complainants to identify them.—2. (Of a prison officer) to report a prisoner for infraction of the prison rules: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (p. 258); by 1910, it was police and warders' j. He has to 'stand on the mat' before the warden.—3. To hold up a person, esp. in a public place with a view to robbery: prob. from ca. 1880 (cf. stander-up); 1897, A. H. Lewis, Wolfville (D.A.E.); 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York (see quot'n at shtocker); app. † by 1940.

stander. 'He that stands sentinel upon the Pad or high-way to robbe,' Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610; app. † by 1700.

stander-up. 'A man who robs intoxicated persons under pretence of aiding them to go home,' B & L, 1890, but prob. from ca. 1880: 1903, F & H; app. † by 1940. See stand up, v., 3.

standing, 'a street vendor's pitch (usual selling position)', is not c. but street vendors' s.—2. A thieves' station: ca. 1540-90. Latimer, 1548. Cf. standing budge.—3. 'Purchasing stolen property': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920.

standing budge. 'The Thieves Scout or Perdu,' B.E., 1698—where it is implied that the term applies esp. to the assistant of a 'budge' (q.v.); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (at budge); 1785, Grose, 'A thief's scout or spy' (at budge); † by 1889 (B & L). See budge, n., 1, and cf. standing.

standing pad. See sitting pad.

standing pad with a fakement. See pad with a fakement, stand.

standing patterer. Such a seller of songs and ballads as took his stand in the street and kept up a patter: not c., but s. For a good account, see Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I.

standing shaking, n. A variant of 'the shallow dodge' (q.v.): 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, I, 418; † by 1910.

standing squire. See squire.

standover. A criminal intimidation or imposition: Australian: C. 20. Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939. Ex the posture in which one threateningly, bullingly, stands over the prospective victim.—2. Short for standover man.

standover man. 'A criminal who exacts toll from other lawbreakers or innocents,' Baker, 1942: Australian: C. 20. Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939, 'He didn't deserve to be a "stand-over man" if he couldn't move quicker'. He confronts them with threat or revolver.

standover, work the. To act as a standover, 2: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1942.

standover man. See standover, 2.

stapping is in Grose, 3rd ed., obviously a misprint for strapping.

star, n. 'The star is a game chiefly practised by young boys, often under the years of age, although the offence is capital. It consists in cutting a pane of glass in a shop-window, by a peculiar operation called starring the glaze, which is performed very effectually by a common penknife; the depredators then take out such articles of value as lie within reach of their arm . . . A person convicted of this offence is said to have been done for a star': 1812, J. H. Vaux—copied in Egan's Grose, 1823; 1859, H (see good on the star); † by 1910. Ex the v.—2. Possibly c., but prob. s.: an officer of the law, a constable: U.S.A.: 1848, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York, 'The streets were now nearly deserted; the night nymphs had slunk away to their dens; only here and there the ever vigilant "stars" could be seen on their beats'; app. † by 1900. Ex the brass star on the breast of the uniform.—3. 'At the audience with the deputy-governor there was another "star" (that is to say, first offender)', Jabez Balfour, My Prison Life, 1907; not c., but merely prison s.—4. A very able or redoubtable criminal: this American sense (A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 1912) can hardly have been c.

star, v. 'Starring the Glaze. This mode of proceeding is now very much in fashion among the thieves . . . The method of acting is to cut a square piece of glass out of a window or shop-board, big enough to take what is wanted out . . . The instrument made use of . . . is a glazier's diamond,' Anon., Thieving Detected, 1777; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, a section on 'Star the Glaze'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'To Star the Glaze. To break and rob a jeweller's show glass'; by 1794, in use in U.S.A. (Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807, 'To star a glaze . . . to cut out a square of glass'); 1812, Vaux (see star, n.); 1833, D. G.'s preface to Benj. Webster, The Golden Farmer; 1826, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, II; 1839, Brandon; 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1869, J. Greenwood; 1882, James D. McCabe, New York; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1935, R. Thurston Hopkins, Life and Death; extant. To make such a fracture as resembles a star; see glaze, n.

star, good on the. See good on the star.

star boarder. A prisoner serving a life sentence: 1935, Hargan; extant. He is highly regarded.

star gazer, 'a whore', is not c., but low s.—2. A night thief (cf. night hawk): U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

star glazer. A thief that cuts the panes out of shop windows: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25; † by 1930. See star, v.

Star Hotel, sleep in The. To sleep in the open: Australian beggars' and tramps': C. 20. Baker, 1942. Cf. sleep with Mrs Green.

star lag. See:—

star lay, the. 'Breaking shop-windows, and stealing some article thereout': 1811, Lex. Bal., where it is misprinted star lag; 1887, Baumann, who repeats the misspelling; † by 1900. See star, v., and lay, n., 2.

star man. 'A "star man" (i.e. a prisoner under first sentence)': No. 77, Twenty-Five Years in Seventeen Prisons, 1903; not c., but police j. star(-)pitch. A sleeping, or a sleep, in the open air: tramps': 1903, F & H; extant.

star route; mostly pl. 'Professional bums, too old to ride the trains, satisfied to throw their feet along the "star routes", or country roads, where food was seldom refused and to sleep in their bindles, or blankets, under the stars,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926; 1931, IA; extant.

star the glaze. See star, v.

starder. A receiver of stolen goods: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Prob. ex the same Romany and/or Continental Gypsy word or words as stir, q.v.; starder being agential.

stare. See lift the stare.

stark(-)naked, n., 'gin', is not c. (as stated in Egan's Grose, 1823), but low s.

stark-naked, adj. 'Skinned by a Tombs lawyer,' Matsell, 1859; † by 1920. Ex the lit. S.E. sense.

starlight glaze. 'A "smash and grab" technique on shop window' (Irwin): 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). A variation of starring the glaze (q.v. at star, v.). starrer. 'Starrers, thieves who break shew-glasses and steal the goods': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, who misprints it as stamer; 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1890 (F & H). Ex star, v.

starring is the short and usual form of the next. (J. H. Vaux, Memoirs, 1819; G. L. Chesterton, 1856.)

starring the glaze. See star, v.

starry, do a. See do a starry.

start, n. See Start, the, 3.

start, v. To inform to the police: 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III, 'I perceive one of the party has started, take me to the big-wig and I'll make a clean breast on't too'; † by 1900. Ex S.E. start, (of tears) to flow.

Start, the. London: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'He wanted me to change Watches with him, the Gold one for a Silver one, which he said was got the same way'—to be precise, stolen—'up at the Start, that is at London'; Jan. 1788, The Monthly Magazine; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, where it is misprinted Stait; 1860, H. 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lipppo; 1893, No. 747; 1903, F & H; ob. Ex sense 2: London, to the provincial underworld, connoted Newgate.—2. 'Start, or The Old Start. Newgate: he is gone to the start, or the old start' (Grose): Sept. 9, 1747, Sessions Papers (trial of John Swannick and Wm Bailey); 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1812, J. H. Vaux (see quot'n at pitcher); 1822, The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul, as the O.S.; 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-1832, IV; 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London; 1887, Baumann; † by 1890 (B & L). Prob. ex Romany stardo, 'imprisoned'; cf. Romany stariben, 'a prison'. See also stir.—3. Hence, any prison: 1823, Bee (see quot'n at degree); 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'The stone jugs, wooden walls [i.e., convict hulks], or other starts of the kingdom'; † by 1900—prob. by 1890.—4. (Ex sense 1.) The City of New York: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, where it is misprinted Stait, presumably after 'Ducange Anglicus' (see sense 1, ref. of 1857); † by 1914.—5. (Ex sense 2.) The Tombs, or City of New York Prison: 1859, Matsell (the Old Start); † by 1940.

Start, the old. See Start, the, sense 2.

starter. A question: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1780. Prob. rather 'something that startles' than 'that which starts one off'.

startle. To sentence (a person) to a term in prison: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. jolt, v. and n.

stasch. See stash, v., 2, ref. of 1933.

stash, n. 'The stash—the hide-out or rendez-vous,' R. Chadwick in Liberty, Aug. 23, 1930: since ca. 1910. Ex cache, 'a hiding place': but via sense 2 of the v.—2. 'Concealed equipment for taking narcotics,' BVB: since the early 1930's. Ex sense 1.

stash, v. To put a stop to; also v.i., as in the earliest record, 'He says, Miller, it is, stash, I am satisfied', Sessions Papers, Sept. 1794, p. 1200; 'To stop. To finish. To end. The cove tipped the prosecutor fifty quid to stash the business; he gave the prosecutor fifty guineas to stop the prosecution,' Lex. Bal., 1811; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To stash any practice, habit, or proceeding, signifies to put an end to, relinquish, or quash the same; thus, a thief determined to leave off his vicious courses will declare that he means to stash (or stow) prigging'; 1823, Bee; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham, 'The ruffian cly thee, Guinea Pig, for stashing the lush'; 1841, W. Leman Rede, Sixteen String Jack, 'Stash your patter' (stop talking!); 1841, H. D. Miles; 1859, H; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was low s. Prob. ex Romany hatch, to stop or stay (something), to cease doing it: B & L.—2. 'Stach, to conceal a robbery' (where the v. is prob. v.t.): 1797, Potter; Dec. 1821, Sessions Papers, 'He begged of me to stash it . . . say nothing about it'; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890, except in U.S.A.: Jackson & Hellyer, 1914, 'Stash—to hide'; 1929, Jack Callahan; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1932, Jim Tully, Laughter in Hell, 'Stash yourself' (hide yourself); April 16, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens, 'I had it stashed away'; 1933, Ersine, 'stasch, v. To hide an article so that no one else can find it'; 1934, Rose; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 'A friend of mine had it stashed in his cellar, in a fruit jar'; 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy; 1944, W. R. Burnett, Nobody Lives Forever; extant. Either ex sense 1 or directly ex Fr. cache, 'to conceal'.

stash the glim. 'To put out lights, or to place an extinguisher on the candle': 1823, Bee; by 1860, or so, it had > low s. See stash, v., and cf. douse the glim.

stashing. Bribery of the police; corruption of justice: 1817, Jon Bee, in The New Monthly Magazine, quoted in A Living Picture of London, 1828; † by 1890. Ex stash, v., 1.

statch is a variant of stash: 1835, Sessions Papers, April, p. 947.

State; loosely, state. 'Tobacco furnished by the State,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: convicts': 1931, IA; extant.

states. See slate, ref. of 1707.

States (or states), the. A prosecuting attorney: 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; extant.

station number. See saddle.

stationer, running. See running stationer.

staul(l); staule. See stall.

stauling (or -yng) ken. See stalling ken.

staunch. Retentive of information; loyal (to the underworld): Jan. 16, 1750, Sessions Papers (case of James Field), 'A stanch cull, i.e. a man worth while'; 1796, P. Colquhoun, The Police of the Metropolis, concerning thieves, 'Having laid their plans for new depredations, a negotiation is frequently entered upon with the most favourite receiver, who (to use their own language) is likely to be staunch, and to keep their secrets'; 1798, drawing on Colquhoun, M. & R. L. Edgworth, Practical Education; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A resolute faithful associate, in whom one may place implicit confidence, is said by his palls to be a staunch cove'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1870 in Britain and by 1895 in U.S.A. Cf. modern s. 'a stout fellow'.—2. Hence, of actions or places: Sept. 1757, Sessions Papers (trial of Coleman, Roberts and Gregory), 'When we carried the first [lot of stolen] plate to him [Jacob, a receiver], he said, if we brought all to him he would sell it for us, and it would be as staunch (meaning as safe) as if we threw it into the sea'; † by 1860.

stawling(e) ken. See stalling ken.

steal. To tell a lie: 1925, Leverage; extant. To rob the truth.

steal to order. 'Steal articles which have been ordered in advance by prospective customers,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937; extant. By a pun.

steam, v.; usually as vbl n. steaming. To prepare a 'mug' for a fleecing: racecourse gangs': C. 20. Michael Fane, Racecourse Swindles, 1936.

steam packet, 'a jacket', was orig. (ca. 1850-65) c. before it > low, and then gen., rhyming s. 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857.

steam up, v., 'to become angry': s., not c.—2. To become tipsy: c. of ca. 1920-30, then s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. To become heated with liquor.—3. To supply (a person) with drugs in order to nerve and to excite him: Aug. 15, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse, 'He's steaming up a lot of punks . . . You never know what a cokey will do'; 1932, Lewis E. Lawes; extant. Cf. sense 1.

steam-up man. An inciter to crime 1935, Hargan; extant. See steam up, 3.

steamboat is an American gamblers' term: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, wherein (on p. 86) we are referred to Indians about, which occurs neither in the general glossary nor in the separate glossary of gamblers' terms; but J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats, 1894, speaks of 'unglazed, or "steam-boat" cards' as obsolete. Much used by sharpers operating aboard steamboats.

steamed grub. Prison food: since ca. 1905: Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'); ob. So much of it is!

steamed(-)up. Drug-exhilarated: since the late 1920's. BVB. See steam up, 3.

steamer. 'A pipe. A swell steamer; a long pipe, such as is used by gentlemen to smoke': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, Pierce Egan, Boxiana, III, 'They can scarcely get three whiffs out of their steamer'; 1823, Bee; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1887 (Baumann). Ex the smoke (likened to steam) that issues therefrom.—2. A thief that breaks out a portion of the shop window while his accomplice keeps the shop assistant busy at a far counter: U.S.A.: 1876, P. Farley, Criminals of America; ob. Ex steaming open an envelope: as an envelope to letter, so is shop to the goods it contains.—3. A dupe, a 'sucker', a simpleton: since ca. 1920: 1932, George Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1937, John Worby, The steel. A house of correction: 1811, Lex. Bal. (at college), 'He has been educated at the steel, and took his last degree at college; he has received his education at the house of correction, and was hanged at Newgate'; 1839, Brandon, loosely, 'the treadmill'; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 'Bastile abbreviated into "stile", pronounced "steel"'; 1859, Matsell, 'House of Refuge' (meaning?); Jan. 31, 1861, Sessions Papers; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London (any prison); 1879, Thor Fredur, Sketches from Shady Places; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1893, No. 747; 1903, F & H; ob. by 1910, † by 1920, in Britain; current in C. 20 Australia as 'prison'—Baker, 1942. See Bastile.—2. Hence, a treadmill: 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed., p. 81; 1889 (see on the steel); † by 1900.—3. A knife; a razor: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens (both); 1934, Rose (knife); extant. Ex the metal from which the blade has been manufactured.

Other Half; 1938, F. D. Sharpe; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena; extant. Ex steam tug, low rhyming s. for 'mug' (a fool; a dupe).

Steel, the. Coldbath Fields Prison; or, more correctly, the Middlesex House of Correction at Coldbath Fields (for adult male offenders, though orig. for both sexes): 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I; 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London; 1859, H; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1885, M. Davitt; 1890, B & L; † by 1903 (F & H). A special application of the preceding term. This prison was erected in 1794.—2. "'I've done my 'bit' . . . both in the 'Tench' . . . and in the 'Steel'" (Pentonville)', Arthur Griffiths, Criminals I Have Known, 1895; extant.

steel-bar finger. A journeyman tailor: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society. Parker says that it is c., nor need we doubt his word; but that the term was s. by 1820, at latest, is equally certain. Lit., a 'needle-finger', steel-bar being a needle (witness Grose). A s. variant is steel-bar driver.

steel (or iron) cure; steel-and-concrete cure. 'A sudden forced abstinence,' BVB, 1942: drug addicts': since the 1920's. Ex its exceeding hardness or difficulty.

steel jockey. One who rides trains illicitly free: Australian: since the 1920's. Baker, 1942. Ex the steel framework of carriages and trucks; cf. scaler, 2.

steer, n. Idea; plan, method: ca. 1886, in Lewis E. Lawes, Cell 202, Sing Sing, 1935; 1933, Ersine, 'A tip—warning, information'; by 1900, s. Ex steering a ship.—2. 'A person who gives a tip,' Ersine, 1933: since ca. 1920.—3. A synonym of steerer, 1: C. 20. A New York newspaper of July 16, 1937, "'The Wire" . . . involving numerous employees, including . . . "steers". Their business was to find the fish' (or suckers).

steer, v. 'To lead the prospective victim(s) to the rendezvous', may have orig. (— 1876) been c., but perhaps it was always s.—2. Hence (?), 'to mislead by false information', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; by 1920, low s.—3. 'To give tips about jobs to burglars and stickup men,' Ersine: since ca. 1920.

steer guy, 'tipster': sporting s., not c.—2. A prospector to a gang: 1929-31, Kernôt; 1933, Ersine; March 18, 1938, Godfrey Irwin (private letter); extant. He steers them to the right places.

steer joint. 'Any gambling house, operated by cheaters, where the house rule is "Never give the sucker an even break" is known in Racketland as a Steer Joint,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; 1930, Burke; 1934, Rose; extant. See joint, 2.—2. A brothel that uses procurers: white-slave traffic: since ca. 1910. BVB. See joint, 13.

steer percent. 'The steer's split in a loot; usually it is ten per cent,' Ersine: since early 1920's. Cf. steer, n., 2, and v., 3.

steerer, short for bunco-steerer, 'the swindler that leads the prospective victim(s) to the rendezvous': from c. (—1879), it >, by 1890, low s. Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences, 1879, and his Thirty Years a Detective, 1886.—2. 'A pilot for a band of thieves,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1933, Eagle; extant. Prob. ex sense 1.—3. A shyster lawyer: 1928, Chicago May; extant. Short for stir steerer.—4. A pimp: C. 20. BVB, 1942.

steeven (or -in). See stephen.

stem, n. A street, a road; esp. 'the main stem', q.v. Since ca. 1920, it has increasingly been used independently, as in 'Patchin Alley is a short stem' (H. Leverage, 'Queer Money' in Flynn's, July 23, 1927). Prob. ex the street-plans of cities, in which the streets—or rather their representations—bear a vague resemblance to plant-stems in drawings of plants.—1a. Hence, 'Every large city has its district into which these homeless types'—hoboes, in short—'gravitate. In the parlance of the "road" such a section is known as the "stem" or the "main drag",' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; extant.—2. See stems.—3. An opium-pipe: late C. 19–20 (as Callahan implies): 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1934, Convict; 1942, BVB. Cf. bamboo.—4. A steel drill: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, 1A; Aug. 27, 1932; Flynn's, Colonel Givens; March 16, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington; extant. Ex shape.—5. 'A "stem" is an addict who must inject the stuff into a vein in his arm. He is one who suffers a violent nausea if he attempts to swallow a drug,' Charles Somerville in Flynn's, Nov. 8, 1930; extant. A vein being a route, road—or stem (sense 1).—6. (Ex sense 1.) A railway line: tramps': since ca. 1914. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—7. (Cf. 4.) A combination lock on a safe: 1933, Ersine; extant.

stem, v. To beg: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, implied in stemming; April 14, 1928, Flynn's, A. E. Ullman ('Beggarmen'), 'You can stem small change from the street parade'; 1933, Ersine; and see stemming. Ex stem, n., 1.—2. 'I was never so happy in my life as I was the night I stemmed (drilled) my first pete' (i.e., safe), Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 1929; extant.—3. To walk the street: May 2, 1936, Flynn's, Cornell Woolrich, 'How does it look for a little lift in your car? I been stemming all night and my dogs are yapping'; extant. Ex sense 1 of the n.

stem, going on the. See stemming, ref. of 1925.

stem, up against the. See up against . . .

stem artist. A beggar—habitual or occasional—'with a good line and technique' (Mackenzie): tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1920. Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough, 1936. See stem, n., 1.

stem in. To drill a hole in a safe-door: bank-and safe-robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant.

stem shot. 'A blast set off in the combination of a safe, a com shot,' Ersine: since 1920's. See stem, n., 7.

stemmer. One who begs on the street: since ca. 1925. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex stem, v.: cf. stem, n., 1, and mooch the stem.

stemming. Begging: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (Glossary, s.v. 'Batter'); 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'Stemming, or going on the stem, is hobo for panhandling'; 1931, Stiff, 'Panhandling or mooching along the streets'; 1934, Convict; extant. See stem, v.

stems, 'legs': not c., but low s. in England.

step, n. See steps . . .

stephen or steven. Money: 1797, Potter (the former); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Stephen's at home; i.e. [he] has money' (or 'I have money'); 1812, J. H. Vaux (steven); 1823, Bee (Addenda), 'Steevin—money, coined; and of silver is understood'; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1848, Sinks of London; 1890, B & L; by 1903 (F & H) it was †. Prob. ex a stever or stiver, 'a penny', used generically.

stepney. A white-slave trafficker's temporary 'fancy girl': white-slavers': C. 20. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, white-slaver speaking: 'I told her I had a woman already in Buenos Ayres, that she could only be my little sweetheart, as we say, or my "stepney", if you like that better'. See also the quot'n at wife. Because so many girls are lured from such places as Stepney—one of the poorer districts of London.

stepper. A treadmill: 1859, Matsell; by ca. 1870, anglicized (H, 1874); 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1920. Because the prisoner on it has to keep on stepping out.

stepping high. Drug-exhilarated: drug traffic: since ca. 1930. BVB. See high.

stepping(-)ken. 'A dance-house', i.e., a dance-hall: 1859, Matsell; by 1890, also English (B & L); by 1903, no longer c. See ken, 1 and 2.

steps, the. The treadmill: Jan. 7, 1842, Sessions Papers (Central Criminal Court), 'He said he should go on "the steps", as he had done before'; † by 1910. Parts for the whole.—2. 'When he appeared at the Sessions (got up the steps)', Brown, 1931; 1932, Arthur Gardner; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open, 'I went up the steps to take a stretch'; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 'Up the steps: being committed to the Sessions or Assizes'; 1943, Black (ditto); extant.

sterno. A dangerous form of alcoholic liquor: tramps': 1925 (see next entry); 1931, Stiff, 'Sterno . . . made by heating sterno can'; extant. For origin, see:—

Sterno club, the. 'When prohibition came . . . he suffered greatly, but . . . he found a way out. He became a member of what is now known as the "Sterno Club". In other words, a member of the "canned heat brigade". Sterno is a commercial product . . . sold in cans and used for artificial heat. It is made of wood alcohol and paraffin When the hobo wants a thrill, he buys a can of Sterno and mixes it in a concoction that would knock a mule out—he extracts the alcohol from the paraffin. He then mixes the alcohol with soda pop, or some other such ingredient, and drinks it,' Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 1925; extant.

stetson. 'My prestige grew and I came to be accepted everywhere as "Stetson", which, in the language of the road, means first-class,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926, but with ref. to ca. 1910; 1931, IA, 'First-class; able; trustworthy. Strictly a road term'; 1934, Howard N. Rose, who incorrectly defines it as a 'third grade hobo'; extant. 'From the hobo and tramp regard for the real "J.B." (Stetson hat): Godfrey Irwin.

Steve Hart. To begin: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Rhyming on start. Cockney and/or Australian influence.

steven. See stephen.

stew, n. and v. A term in prison; to put into, sent to, prison: 1925, Leverage; extant.—2. A state of intoxication; a drunkard: 1918, prob. implied in stew bum, q.v.; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, low s.—3. To die by official electrocution: 1933, Eagle; extant. Cf. fry.—4. Nitroglycerin: 1934, Rose; extant. Suggested by soup.—5. See jacky.

stew builder. 'A hobo camp cook, a kitchen mechanic,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910.

stew bum. A drunken, esp. an habitually drunken, hobo or tramp or beggar: tramps': 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hoboes; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; May 28, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; 1934, M. H. Weeseen; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Feb. 1) it was s. Bum, a beggar; stew: he 'stews in his own juice'.

Stew Junction. 'I met a bum by the name of "Rochester Red" at "Stew Junction" (Puyallup, Washington),' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926: tramps': C. 20. Prob. ex the fame of a stew served at a cheap eatery there.

stibber-gibber, as used in Awdeley's Fraternitje of Vacabondes ('This is a stibber-gibber Knave, that doth fayne Tales'), is not, as F & H classify it, c.: it is prob. an idiosyncratic reduplication of S.E. gibber, 'to speak jargon or gibberish'.

stick, n. A pistol; but almost always in the pl.: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'A highwayman will ding . . . his Sticks', glossed as 'pistols'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'Stow your sticks; hide you[r] pistols'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Stick, a pistol'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H., 'Nearly obsolete'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1870 in Britain; still current in U.S.A. in 1933 (Ersine). The long pistol of C. 18-early 19 resembled (in the dusk) a short, thick stick.—2. Always the stick: Feb. 1820, Sessions Papers, p. 173, 'I asked him'—the accused—'how he got them [three forged notes]? he said he would sooner die under the stick (gallows) first, than tell me'; † by 1900. Cf. three-legged stool.—3. A breast-pin, a tie-pin: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1910. One sticks it into the necktie.—4. A (thief's) small crowbar: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail (Preface); 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1925, Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, 'The ordinary burglar's jemmy (or "stick", as he calls it)'; 1925, Netley Lucas; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1931, Brown; 1931, A. R. L. Gardner; 1933, George Orwell, Down and Out; 1935, David stick, v. To cheat (a person): more prob. low s. than c.: C. 19: England. Late C. 19-20: U.S.A.—2. Stick!: See lam!, where stick! prob. = Stick to your post, stay where you are. Also 'Stick, Not to part company', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904 (see quot'n at slug, v., 2); May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, who makes it clear that stick! is short for stick and slug!, i.e., 'fight it out'.

Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1936, Mark Benney, Low Life; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; 1938, Stanley; 1939, Val Davis; 1940, Jim Phelan; 1943, Black; extant. Ex the shape.—5. A match (for ignition): U.S. convicts': 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose; extant. Either jocular or short for match-stick.—6. The sense 'fountain pen' is pitchmen's s. —The Saturday Evening Post, Oct. 19, 1929, 'Alagazam'.—7. A 'blackjack', a truncheon: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; extant. An agreeable understatement.—8. The sense 'a shill(aber)' is pitchmen's and carnival s. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.)—9. 'Among the members of the underworld, a bomb is known as a "stick", a "wop football", a "dinah", a "can", and a "pineapple",' David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live, 1934; U.S.A.: since late 1920's. A nuance of this sense appears in 'I still maintain that the big stick (dynamite)', Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough, 1936.—10. A marijuana cigarette: Am. drug addicts': since the late 1920's. In, e.g., The New Yorker of March 12, 1939, article by Meyer Berger, and Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely, 1940. Ex shape; cf.:—11. 'A home-made opium-pipe constructed from a wide-mouthed bottle and rubber tubing,' BVB, 1942: Am. addicts': since ca. 1930.

stick, cut one's. See cut quick sticks.

stick a bust. To commit a burglary: ? ca. 1880-1920. Ware, 1909, quotes The Daily Telegraph of Dec. 28, 1899. Perhaps, to make a bust (n., 1) 'stick', i.e., to effect a burglary.

stick and slug. 'The old yegg rallying-cry when a gang was surprised by citizens or police, and determined to fight clear rather than submit,' Godfrey Irwin, letter of Aug. 9, 1937, apropos of J. M. Sullivan's confused, erroneous treatment of stick and slug in 'Criminal Slang', The American Law Review, Dec. 1918; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys, 'Stick and slug. To stay with the gang and fight'; 1925, Leverage, 'Hold together and fight'; app. the cry was current among tramps ca. 1890-1925, a fairly early record being that at slug, v., 2; from ca. 1920, also among thieves—witness Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld', The American Mercury, May 1928, 'Use your sticks (or clubs) and slug 'em!'.

stick flams. A pair of gloves: 1698, B.E.; 1708 (see stickhams); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (stick flams); 1809, Andrewes, A Dict. of Cant and Slang, where it occurs as stick fans—so too in Sinks of London, 1848; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. Prob. a perversion of stick flams: articles one sticks on one's hands (see fam, n.).

stick for. To catch, capture, arrest: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Capture'; extant.

stick(-)man or stickman. 'Two women, respectably dressed, meet a drunken man in the street; stop him and ask him to treat them. They adjourn to the bar of a public-house . . . While drinking at the bar, one of the women tries to rob him of his watch or money. A man who is called a "stickman", an accomplice and possibly a paramour of hers, comes to the bar a short time after them. He has a glass of some kind of liquor, and stands beside them. Some motions and signs pass between the two females and this man. If they have by this time secured the booty, it is passed to the latter, who thereupon slips away, with the stolen articles in his possession.—In some cases, when the property is taken from the drunken man, one of the women on some pretext steps to the door and passes it to the "stickman" standing outside, who then makes off with it. In other cases these robberies are perpetrated . . . in some by-street.—Sometimes the man quickly discovers his loss, and makes an outcry against the women; when the "stickman" comes up and asks "what is the matter?" the man may reply, "these two women have robbed me". The stickman answers, "I'll go and fetch a policeman". The property is passed to him by the women, and he decamps. If a criminal information is brought against the females, the stolen goods are not found in their possession, and the case is dropped': 1862, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV; app. † by 1900. He sticks by the women.—2. 'One who collects and pays out money at a gambling table,' Rose, 1934: U.S. gamblers': since ca. 1920: 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy.—3. A paying-out teller in a bank: U.S.A.: May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant.

stick (of jip). See jip.

stick on. (Of a police officer) to charge with an offence: 1931, Brown, 'Charged him (stuck him on)'; extant. By sticking to, he is able to stick on.

stick-slinger. 'Robs in company with low women': Nov. 1870, The Broadway, Anon., 'Among Thieves'; app. † by 1920, except in Australia (Baker, 1942). Cf. bludger.

stick(-)slingers. Fingers: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

stick up, n. A hold-up; a highway robbery: 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 'Here I am a five-time loser, doin' twenty f'r stick-up, an' dat poor kid gets fifty'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York (a hold-up robbery in a saloon); 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures (attributively, in 'stick-up wolves')—by this time, almost certainly police s.—2. Hence, the criminal perpetrating the act: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1916, Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in the Underworld; ca. 1917, L. Livingston, From Coast to Coast with Jack London; 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves—but by this time, it is also police s., as that novel proves.—3. (Concerning a gang of bank-robbers) 'The "outside man", or "stick-ups", use their judgment,' Wm J. Flynn, 'My Life' in Flynn's, Oct. 18, 1924; extant.

stick up, v. 'Don't stick me up (disappoint)': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L, 'To deceive, cheat, disappoint'; app. † by 1920. E.g., by causing a person to wait uselessly at a rendezvous.—2. To hold up (a person), with a view to robbery: Jan. 13, 1898, Sessions Papers, 'Sticking him up, as it is called, which means that Bett stood in front and a little to the right of the gentleman, another covering Bett and the other the gentleman, keeping him up'; in C. 20, also American and generalized to 'highway-rob' (a person), as in Lewis and in Henderson: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, "'How do they live?'"—"Stickin' up lushes mostly"; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1925, police s. in U.S.A. and ob. in Britain. The English and American usage is an adoption of Australian bushrangers' term, which had been current since ca. 1840—perhaps since as early as 1820. See Baker, 1945, at p. 49. Semantically: to cause someone to hold still, to remain (to stick) at a place and keep their hands raised (up).

stick-up artist, guy, man. A gunman; a bandit, a professional 'hold-up' man: 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (Glossary, s.v. 'Assaulter' and 'Bandit'—the first and the third); by 1930, stick-up man was journalistic s.; 1933, Ersine (first and third); June 1937, Cavalcade, Courtney R. Cooper, the second term, which, current since ca. 1920, is the most usual; by 1939, all three terms were s. Prob. a survival, or a revival, of gold-rush s. of the 1850's (Jean Bordeaux, letter of Oct. 23, 1945).—Cf. Australian s. stick up, (of bushrangers) 'to hold up and rob (mail coaches, gold convoys, etc.)', as in Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms, 1881.

sticker. (See also stickers.) 'The office-beggar, or "sticker", as he calls himself For instance, he will visit a lawyer, tell his story, and then simply hang around as long as he dares. It is this waiting so patiently that gives him the name of "sticker",' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (ch. entitled 'The City Tramp'), 1899; 1903, F & H; ob. He 'sticks around'.—2. As 'a (pocket) knife', it is not c., but low s. (J. W. Sullivan, Tenement Tales of New York, 1895.)—3. A prisoner's friend: convicts': 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; extant. He 'sticks by' him.—4. A scarf-pin or tie-pin: 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hobos; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. One sticks it into the necktie, and it keeps that flapper in its place.—5. A bum that begs under the pretence of selling court-plaster; such begging: 1918, Leon Livingston; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; extant. Ex sense 1.—6. A warrant for arrest; a detainer of a prisoner due for release: since ca. 1930. Maurer, 1941.—7. A supporter of a mob 'king': Glasgow: C. 20. MacArthur & Long, No Mean City, 1934. Cf. 3.

sticker-dump. A post-office: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex stickers + dump, n., 3.

sticker-play. A post-office robbery: 1925, Leverage; extant. See stickers.

stickers. Postage stamps: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black; Dec. 4, 1926, Flynn's; 1928, Chicago May; 1929, Jack Callahan; 1931, IA; 1933, Ersine, ' . . . , usually stolen ones'; 1934, Convict; Aug. 17, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; by 1940, low s. When properly affixed, they are stickers.—2. Fingerprints: Dec. 10, 1927, Flynn's, Roy W. Hinds, 'In Five Figures'; extant.

stickers, play. To retain, keep hold of, money instead of passing it on or paying up; v.t., with: since ca. 1920. Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943, "'What a steamer I'd look if you played stickers with my dough," he appended'; ibid., "'Watch Luggy Mick don't play stickers"''. An elaboration of 'stick to (withhold) money'.

stickhams. Gloves: 1708, Memoirs of John

Hall, 4th ed. This is almost certainly a mere misprint for stick flams or stick fams.

sticking-plaster round the clock(, to get). (To receive) a sentence of twelve years' imprisonment: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.

stickler. An informer to the police, a squealer: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. A stickler for the Law.

stickman. See stick man.

sticks. See stick, n., 1.—2. Crutches: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer—but I doubt its status, for it is virtually certain to be s. or even coll. Hence:—3. A tramp or hobo train-rider that has lost a leg: tramps': 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; extant.—4. The Sticks = the country; a country district: 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 'No stranger ever escapes a conviction in the rural communities. One might just as well plead guilty when one is caught out in the "sticks"': Dec. 26, 1925, Flynn's; by 1927, Flynn's, Nov. 19, p. 616, it was police s. for 'a suburban station', but the c. sense remains c., as in Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

sticky. Wax: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; not c., but itinerant vendors' s.

sticky fingers, in allusion, indicates that So-and-So is a thief: C. 20. Kernôt, 1929–31. 'Things just stick to me fingers.'

stiff, n. 'Promissory notes and bills of exchange receive this familiar appellation, when suspicion may hang about the certainty of their being honourably paid—though not always so. 'Tis used in contradistinction to flimsy—a bank-note' (Bee, 1823), which latter is the earlier term: 1817, Jon Bee, in an article in The New Monthly Magazine; 1823, Bee, Dict.; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad, '“Here's a hexcellent bit o' stiff on London”'; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was low and commercial s. In C. 20 U.S.A., however, the term is c. for 'a stolen bond'—see market for stiffs. Because consisting of paper stiffer than that of a newspaper.—2. A written pardon: U.S.A.: 1859 (see governor's stiff); app. † by 1900, except in governor's stiff. Prob. ex:—3. A letter: ? orig., U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1862, A Prison Matron, Female Life in Prison, where it is applied also to gas-paper, i.e., a spill of paper for lighting a gas-jet; 1875, A. Griffiths, Memorials of Millbank, '“Stiffs” are letters written clandestinely by prisoners to one another on any scrap of paper they can find'; 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief' (a note); 1890, B & L; 1891, C. Bent; 1893, Confessions of a Convict (U.S.A.); 1894, A. Griffiths; 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow; 1903, F & H; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood (U.S.A.); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; 1925, Leverage; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; 1934, Rose; 1937, 'Red Collar Man', Chokey; 1938, H. U. Triston, Men in Cages, '“Stiffs” . . . the prison term for illicit letters'; 1940, Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 'A stiff is a note from one convict to another'; extant.—4. A newspaper; any printed paper: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1871, State Prison Life; 1904, Life in Sing Sing (p. 264: newspaper); 1925, Leverage; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Ex sense 1.—5. A stiff o' bingo is a full glass, a big glass, of any spirituous liquor:

U.S.A.: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; very ob. I.e., a stiff tot or drink.—6. A hawker's licence: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (U.S.A.), 'Licence, permit'; extant. Prob. ex sense 1.—7. A lie; a fake: U.S.A.: 1891, James Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; ob. An intensive.—8. As 'a corpse' it was, orig., American resurrection-men's c.: 1859, Bartlett, Americanisms, 2nd ed.; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.), where it is convicts'; by 1880, low s. Ex the effect of rigor mortis.—9. (Cf. 6.) A lodging-house keeper's licence: 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo; extant.—10. (Ex 1.) Counterfeit notes (generic) or note: 1895, A. Griffiths, Criminals I Have Known; 1903, F & H; 1933, Ersine, 'A piece of counterfeit money'; 1934, Convict (U.S.A.)—a bad cheque; 1941, Maurer; extant.—11. A ticket: U.S.A.: 1912, Jackson & Hellyer; extant.—12. A poster (cf. sense 4): 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747, '“Jem”—says she—"the vile's readered all hover with these 'ere stiff s"', glossed as 'posters'; ob. Consisting of strong, stiff paper.—13. (Perhaps cf. sense 8.) Among American tramps, stiff is 'a fellow; synonymous with "bloke" and "plug"', J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899—but earlier in Wm De Vere, Tramp Poems of the West, 1891; by 1910—if not, indeed, by 1905—it had merged with gen. American s.—14. 'In America the noun "stiff" is . . . applied . . . as a term of scorn for hard-working men and others. For instance, one is called a "shovel stiff", another a "cattle stiff"; then there is the "mission stiff", and the "barrel-house stiff". "Shovel stiff" is the name applied by tramps to navvies and railroad workers,' W. H. Davies, Beggars, 1909—but in ref. to a period as early as the late 1890's; March 23, 1929, Flynn's, 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery'; 1931, Stiff, 'A hobo worker. There are harvest stiff s, hospital stiff s, and many others'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; and often since. Prob. ex sense 13.—15. A tramp: U.S.A.: since late 1890's: 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'This man was not a genuine hobo. He bore none of the ear-marks of the professional "stiff"'; ibid., 'Quite a bunch of "stiffs" tried to ride out the overland that night'; ibid., 'A "stiff" is a tramp'; 1923, M. Garahan, Stiffs (English); Feb. 14, 1925, Flynn's (article by J. F. Fishman); 1925, Glen H. Mullin, A Scholar Tramp; April 1928, The American Mercury, Jim Tully; 1933, Ersine; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; extant. Prob. ex sense 13.—16. A search-warrant; an order to find (a person): U.S.A.: 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, 'There's a "stiff" out for you from McGuimps gang'; by 1928, it was circus s. for a 'legal attachment, writ' (The White Tops, July–Aug. 1928, 'Circus Glossary'); since ca. 1925, Australian c. for 'a summons' (Baker, 1942). Cf. senses 3 and 12.—17. (Usually plural.) A prison warder or keeper: U.S. convicts': 1925, Leverage; extant. Pejorative.—18. (Only in pl.) 'Stiffs, n.pl., The police in general,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since ca. 1918. Prob. ex 14.—19. A drunken person: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex 13, 14, 15.

stiff, adj. Dead drunk: c. of ca. 1920–31, then low s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. As stiff as a corpse: dead drunk.

stiff, bit of. A bill of exchange: 1839 (see stiff, n.); 1858, Dickens, 'The Detective Police', in Reprinted Pieces, 'You can do a bit of stiff for the balance', glossed as 'give a bill'; 1859, H; by 1889 (B & L) it was low s. See stiff, n., 1.

stiff, fly a. See fly a kite, 2.

stiff, mail a. To transmit a letter from a convict prison to someone outside: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne (U.S.A.); 1893, No. 747 (English); extant. See stiff, n., 3.

stiff-dealer. A dealer in stiff, n., 1: ca. 1815-65, then s. Bee, 1823.

stiff-fencer. 'A street seller of writing paper': c. and street vendors' s.: 1859, H; by 1880, no longer c. Cf. stiff, n., 3 and 4.

stiff joint is synonymous with market for stiffs (office where stolen bonds can be disposed of): Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. stiff, n., 1.

stiff market. Synonymous with prec.: Maurer, 1941.

stiff o' bingo. See stiff, n., 5.

stiff racket, the. July 18, 1931, The Saturday Review of Literature defines it as 'death'; 1933, Ersine, 'A racket in which killing is often necessary. "Jugrooters work a stiff racket"': extant. Cf. stiff, n., 8.—2. Disposal of stolen bonds: since mid-1920's. Cf. stiff joint and see stiff, n., 1.

stiff 'un. A counterfeit note: 1895, Arthur Griffiths, Criminals I Have Known (p. 228); extant. Cf. stiff, n., 1 and 10.—2. In the sense 'corpse', not c., but low s. stiffen. To swindle (someone): Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1942. Also to rob (him), as in Baker, 1945. 'To stiffen is related to the Australianism stiff as a crutch, completely broke, penniless' (Baker).

stiffener. A letter: 1821, W. T. Moncrieff, Tom and Jerry; 1848, Sinks of London, as stiffner; 1890, C. Hindley; † by 1900. Cf. stiff, n., 3.

stiffs. See stiff, n., 18.

stiffy. A bum that simulates paralysis: 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hobos; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

stifle a squeaker. See squeaker, 2.

stifler. The gallows: see queer the stifler.

stile. See steel.

stile, go over the. See over the stile.

still, v. and n. 'To patch up a case (by influence or bribery) . . . The act of patching up a case,' Leverage, 1925; ob. Cf. S.E. hush.

still time. A slack period (when, e.g., there are no shows, no exhibitions): Australian confidence tricksters': C. 20. Baker, 1945. Ex still in sense of 'quiet'.

stilt. See queer a stilt.

stilting. "You are a nice sort of chap to try your hand at stilting" (first-class pocket-picking!); 1884, James Greenwood, The Little Ragamuffins; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; † by 1920. A pun on high-flying, according to B & L; more prob. on s. stick up, 'to rob' (a person); still more prob., a special application of the sense and a corruption of the form of s. Stilton ('The Stilton' = the correct or fashionable thing to do).

stilts. Crutches: beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cynically humorous.

sting, n., 'a cheat, a swindler': 1925, Leverage: D.O.U.

on the borderline between c. and low s. Prob. ex the v.—2. A criminal coup; esp., a burglary or a hold-up: 1929-31, Kernôt; Sept. 20 and Oct. 11, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant. Ex the v.—3. Among British tramps, a successful piece of begging: 1923, M. Garahan, Stiffs; extant. Ex the s. sting, 'to ask (someone) for a loan'.

sting, v. 'To rob or defraud a person or place is called stinging them': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1890, no longer c. in the British Empire. It may, however, have been c. in U.S.A. during the very approx. period 1880-1930; in, e.g., Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924, 'Sting him for his rocks—steal his diamonds'. To be robbed or swindled hurts a man sharply.—2. 'To report a convict for violation of a prison rule,' Ersine: U.S.A.: since 1920's.

stingaree. 'A confidence game involving short change,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: con men's: since the 1920's. By a pun on s. sting, 'to borrow money from'.

stingbum, 'a niggard' (Grose, 1788), is not c., but low s.

stinger. The actual thief in a gang of pick-pockets: 1912, Alfred Henry Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'MacTaffee was of the swell mob . . . [He] was the stinger and personally pinched the poke, flipped the thimble, or sprung the prop . . . of whatever boob was being trimmed'; slightly ob. Ex sing, v.—2. The sense 'the tongue' (Leverage, 1925) is low s., not c.—3. The sense, 'railroad brakeman'—one who boards a fast freight train (likewise called a stinger) while it is in motion—this sense, like the one it depends on, is railroad s., not c.—4. A report against a prisoner for infringement of a prison rule: since ca. 1925. Ersine. Ex sting, v., 2.

stingo, 'humming, strong Liquor', as B.E. defines it in 1698, is not c., but s.—prob., drinkers' s. Obviously ex sting + o; for the form, cf. bingo.

stink, n. 'When any robbery of moment has been committed, which causes much alarm, or of which much is said in the daily papers, the family people will say, there is a great stink about it': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, plagiarizingly; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 250 (among professional beggars); by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was s. Ex the unpleasantness it causes.

stink, v. 'To publish an account of a robbery': 1859, Matsell; † by 1930. Ex the n.

stinker. A black eye: 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1903 (F & H). Prob. ex the colour of meat that, rotting, stinks.—2. The Stinker, 'The Mystic Writer'; a fortune-telling device' (Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934), is showmen's and fairground s.—3. An informer to the police: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1945. His name stinks among true criminals.

stir. A prison: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'I was . . . seven days in the new "stir" (prison)'; ibid., among inscriptions on the walls of a 'padding ken' (q.v.), 'Razor George and his moll slept here the day afore Christmas; just out of "stir" for "muzzling a peeler"': Aug. 14, 1852, Notes & Queries, where Thomas Laurence wrongly derives it from an O.E. word meaning 'punishment'; 1859, H, 'In Stir, in prison'; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.: as stirr); 1865, A. Griffiths, Memorials of Millbank;

Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; March 1882, Sessions Papers, 'In stir now for stabbing a man'; 1887, J. W. Horsley; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1891, C. Bent; 1895, A. Griffiths, Criminals I Have Known; 1896, Arthur Morrison; 1898, A. Binstead, A Pink 'Un and a Pelican; in C. 20, current in Canada (anon. letter, June 9, 1946); 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey (U.S.A.); 1900, Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; 1903, F & H; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers; 1910, F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest; 1916, Wellington Scott; 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; and in perhaps several hundred books, let alone innumerable newspaper articles!, since then—as common in the home of its adoption as in that of its birth; notably in George Ingram's Stir, 1933. An abbreviation of Romany stardo, 'imprisoned', or more prob. of Romany staripen, loosely stariben or sturiben, a prison: cf. Start, the, 2 and 3. The word exists in the Continental Gypsy dialects, often as astardo, 'imprisoned', from astar, which is common in the shortened form star, 'to cause to stop', causative of ast-, 'to wait, to stop' (v.i.), itself from Sanskrit stha, 'to stand'. (John Sampson, The Dialect of the Gypsies of Wales, 1926.) Gypsy star, therefore, is cognate with L. stare, 'to stand'.—2. A crowd: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; by 1903 (F & H) it was no longer c. Ex the stir that a crowd makes.—3. A fire: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1900. Perhaps ex the stir that a fire causes.

stir, do. To serve a prison sentence: 1901, Jerome Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life, Vol. 2; extant. See stir, 1; cf. do time.

stir(-)bird. 'One who has been in prison several times', Leverage, 1925; extant. See stir, 1.

stir-broke. Settled-down to prison life: since ca. 1920. Castle, 1938. Cf. prec.

stir(-)bug. 'One whose mentality has been broken by confinement in prison', Leverage, 1925; 1927, Chas. F. Coe, Me—Gangster, 'He was a stir-bug—that is, a guy that has served more than ten years. They call them stir bugs because being in prison is being in stir, and after you have been there ten years or more you are sure to be nutty'; 1929, Givens; Oct. 11, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; April 16, 1932, Flynn's; 1933, Ersine (stirnut); 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations; 1934, Rose; 1935, James Spenser, The Five Mutineers; 1935, Amos Squire, Sing Sing Doctor; Dec. 4, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; and others. Prob. imm. ex stir bugs.—2. Hence, a recently discharged convict: 1934, Julien Proskauer, Suckers All; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too (English); extant.—3. 'One serving time' (Rose, 1934): since ca. 1930: 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It.

stir bugs. Prison-crazy: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1933, Ersine; Feb. 6, 1937, Flynn's, Convict 12627; extant. Literal: stir, c. for 'prison'; bugs, s. (orig., low) for 'very eccentric; insane'.

stir clobber. Prison clothes: 1938, James

Curtis, They Drive by Night; extant. See the elements.

stir(-)crazy. A synonym, since ca. 1925, of stir-bugs and -daffy and -goofy. In, e.g., Ersine, 1933, and Courtney Ryley Cooper in Cavalcade, June 1937, and Richard Sale in Flynn's, Feb. 11, 1939. By 1940, it was fairly gen. s.—at least among policemen, journalists, saloon-keepers, and other such people. See stir, 1.

stir-daffy. With mind deranged by the strain of prison life: 1931, Fred D. Pasley, Al Capone, 'Stir-daffy machine-gunner'; extant. See the elements.

stir daisy. A woman given to prison-visiting: Aug. 19, 1933, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, 'She looked like a stir daisy, a regular jail visitor who packed around Bibles [carried Bibles around with her], and when a guy took a Bible he got a pie, doughnuts or a large wedge of cake'; extant. See stir; daisy is ironic.

stir(-)goofy. Synonymous with stir bugs: March 22, 1930, Flynn's, Robert Carse, 'Jail Break!'; extant.

stir horrors. Excessive fear of punishment in stir or jail; a stir bug's state of mind: convicts': since ca. 1925. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; et al.

stir(-)house is an occ. variant of stir, 1: Jan. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, Ernest Booth; and later.

stir nut; hyphenated; one word. A synonym of stir bug, 1 (q.v.). Ersine, 1933. Cf. — stir-nuts. 'Mentally hazy because of long imprisonment', Ersine: since ca. 1926. Cf. stir bugs.

stir(-)simple. Insane; usually, on the verge of insanity: 1929, Givens; 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose (as a noun); March 2, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington; May 30, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack; 1938, Castle, 'A day-dreamer'; extant. See stir and simple; cf. stir bugs.

stir steerer. 'One of the shyster lawyers, or "stir steerers", as the bums call them, came over to me,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926; extant. See stir and cf. bunco steerer.

stir-wise. Wise in the ways of prison: U.S.A. (— 1933: Ersine) >, ca. 1937, British: 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night; 1938, Castle. Suggested by the opposite stir-crazy.

stirbug. See stir bug.

stirman. A convict: convicts': since the 1920's. Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940. See stir: lit., it is 'prison man'.

stiromel, in Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggars' Bush, written ca. 1615 = strommel; prob. a misprint.

stirr. See stir, 1, ref. of 1871.

stirrups, up in the. 'A man who is in swell street, that is, having plenty of money, is said to be up in the stirrups': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1900. 'If wishes were horses, beggars would ride.'

stivel. Old c., says Baumann, 1887, for a fourpenny-piece: but prob. a confusion with stiver.

stoater. See stoter.

stock, 'counterfeit notes, bonds, bank bills, or scrip', may possibly have, ca. 1850–85, been counterfeiters' c.: witness G. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872.

stock-buzzer is either a variant of or an error for stook-buzzer, q.v.

stock(-)drawers. Stockings: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1698, B.E.; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed. (stockdrawers); 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, where it is misprinted stock-drawer; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'A Pair of Breeches or Stockings, A Pair of Stock-Draers'; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1840. That which one draws on to one's 'stocks' or 'pegs'.—2. Hence (? erroneously), breeches: 1741 (see sense 1).

stock market. 'An elaborate confidence game; one of the methods of the pay-off,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: commercial crooks' and con men's: since ca. 1920.

stock-pieces. Stock money; money for buying stock-in-trade: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; ob.

stockholder. 'A convict who continually works to the interests of the prison officials and to the detriment of the prisoners; a handshaker, politician,' Ersine: convicts': since the middle 1920's. As though he were a shareholder in 'the company'.

stocking(-)crib. A hosier's shop: 1812, J. H. Vaux (at crib); app. † by 1890. Suggested by stock-drawers; see crib, n.

stogger. A pickpocket: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary; † by 1920. Ex stook-buzzer.

stolen ken. 'A broker's shop,' B & L: ? a receiver's shop. 'Old cant'—according to the same authorities. But the term is suspect: it is their spelling of Shirley's already mistaken stollen-ken, q.v. at stalling-ken, ref. of 1707, or their form of stolen-ken (in the 1735 ed. of Shirley's book).

stoll, v. To understand: North Country: 1864, H, 3rd ed. (see quot'n at side!); 1903, F & H; extant. Perhaps a phonetic variant of stall, 'to place': to place things is to recognize and understand them.

stomp drawers. Stockings. 'Old cant': B & L, copying Poulter. But the term is suspect, for stop drawers exists and is more prob.; possibly, however, the correct term should be stamp drawers.

stompie. A cigarette-butt: S. Africa: late C. 19–20; by 1930, low s. Afrikaans (cf. enterjie and toppertjie), ex Dutch stomp, 'stump; stub'.

stomps. See stamps, 2.

stond is an occ. C. 16–early 17 variant of stand. (Greene, 1592.)

stone. A diamond: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1928, Chicago May; Oct. 1931, D. W. Maurer, 'Stones—diamonds or other gems'; 1934, Convict; by 1936 (James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; see red, n.) it was also English; extant. It is the 'precious stone' that is precious above all others. True; yet stone, 'diamond', may represent an ellipsis for the 'euphemistic' white stone in the same sense.—2. Usually in stone, in prison: Dec. 26, 1931, Flynn's, Paul Annixter, 'D'you know what seven years in stone means—eh?'; extant. Short for stone crock (2), stone dump or stone John.

stone-carrying. See carry stones. This occurs in S. Rowlands, Greenes Ghost, 1602, as stone-carrying. With this practice, cf. that described at hackster.

stone(-)cold. Penniless: 1931, Brown; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; extant. Cf. coll. stony-broke.

Stone Crock, the. Sing Sing Prison: 1927, Kane; ob. by 1931—teste Irwin. Suggested by stone jug.—2. Hence, any State Prison: since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

stone doublet, 'a prison', may orig. (B.E., 1698) have been c., but it rings more like s.; nevertheless, its occurrence in J. Cosgrave's The Irish Highwaymen, 1839, shows that it was either c. or, more prob., low s. Cf. stone jug.

stone dump. A prison: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (Glossary, s.v. 'Prison'); slightly ob. Cf. the English synonyms.

stone-getter. A 'thief who steals diamonds or any other precious stone from the person', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904 (repeated by The American Law Review, Dec. 1918); 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Arthur Stringer; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; extant. See stone; for the form, cf. toy-getter.

stone John. A jail, a prison: from ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Perhaps prompted by:—

stone jug. 'Newgate, or any other prison': 1796, Grose, 3rd ed.—so the term must have been current at least as early as 1791; 1797, Potter; 1812, J. H. Vaux (see quot'n at pitcher); 1823, Bee; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV; 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III; 1836, Dickens, Sketches by Boz; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1841, Anon., The Life of a Liverpool Policeman; 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. translation), ch. vi; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, who applies it to Newgate Prison; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; † by 1900 in Britain; current, though not common, in U.S.A. in C. 20 (Godfrey Irwin, 1931).

stone mansion. A jail: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Jail'; rather ob. Ironie.

stone pitcher; stone tavern. Newgate; any other prison: 1796, Grose, 3rd ed. (s. tavern, which was, therefore, existent in 1791); 1797, Potter (s. pitcher); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1831, W. T. Moncrieff, Van Diemen's Land; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1859, Matsell, 'Sing Sing'; † by 1903 (F & H). For semantics, cf. stone jug.

stook. See stook, ref. of 1893.

stood-up. See stand up.

stooge. A first offender; an apprentice thief: 1933, Ersine (latter nuance); 1935, Hargan (former nuance); extant. A mere student; but prob. imm. ex studious in its usual mispronunciation.

stook. A pocket-handkerchief: 1851, implied in stook-buzzer, q.v.; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), as stuke; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo (where it is spelt stook); 1903, F & H; † by 1940. 'Probably Yiddish, from the German stuck, a piece,' B & L: read Stück.—2. Trouble: mostly Londoners': 1936, George Ingram, The Muffled Man, 'I always have to come to you if I'm in stook'; extant. Perhaps a perversion of stuck ('I'm stuck'—nonplussed, at a loss, etc.).

stook-buzzer. A pickpocket specializing in gentlemen's handkerchiefs: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25 (see also buzzer); 1862, op. cit., IV (stock-buzzer); 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1910. See stook and buzzer.

stook-buzzing, n. Picking pockets of handkerchiefs: prob. since before 1850 (cf. preceding entry); 1859 (see stoop-buzzing); † by 1920. See stook and buzzing.

stook-hauler is a variant of stook-buzzer. H, 1859; Baumann, 1887; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H.

stool, n. 'Help, assistance': 1848, Sinks of London: an error for stall (see stall, make a).—2. A decoy; a spy in the pay of the police: short for stool pigeon: U.S.A.: 1903, F & H; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'I'm a stool for one of the bulls'; 1913, A. Stringer, The Shadow; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1916, Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in the Underworld, of a spy among boys in a reform school; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly (R. Jordan); 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1928, Charles Francis Coe, Swag; 1928, Chicago May; April 20, 1929, Flynn's; 1930, Burke; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1932, Edgar Wallace, When the Gangs Came to London, where the author clearly shows the term to have > police s. Ex the S.E. stool (pigeon), 'a real or an artificial decoy bird'.

stool, v. To act as, or like, a 'stool pigeon'; to supply information to police officers or prison warders: late C. 19-20: (in ref. to and valid for ca. 1898) Anon., 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery', Flynn's, April 6, 1929, 'You git to de cops and tells 'em youse is gonna stool, see?'; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (San Quentin, 1901-11), 'The general verdict of . . . the prisoners was that Morrell had "stooped" his way out of "solitary" by divulging some contemplated "break"'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'So you're stoolin' for a Central Office cop'; 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 'Blake . . . did an occasional bit of "stooling" for the Central Office'; July 17, 1926, Flynn's, 'I think she must have stooped on me to the screw'; Dec. 13, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; March 25, 1933, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly; Feb. 10, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; Dec. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; 1938, Castle; extant. Ex the n.

stool(-)mark, n. and v. 'A brand put on the face of a stool pigeon, made by a cut on the face from the cheekbone down to the jaw. "Lay away from that gee. He's stool-marked",' Burke, 1930: 1934, Rose; extant. See stool, n.

stool pigeon. 'One who is made use of as a guy, or dummy'—as a man of straw—'by criminals': Jan. 10, 1846, The National Police Gazette; 1865, Tricks and Traps of New York; 1872, G. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1891, James Maitland, 'A decoy. One employed by the police to lead his associates into a trap,' a sense app. first noted by Bartlett, 2nd ed., 1859, though implied in stool-pigeoning; 1881, A. Pinkerton, Professional Thieves (a police spy); 1893, Langdon W. Moore; 1901, Josiah Flynt (see mouth-piece, 2); ibid., Glossary, 'A thief in the pay of the police'; 1903, Flynt, Rudrick Cloud; 1903, F & H; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'He . . . was betrayed by a pal, a professional thief who was in the pay of the police, technically called a "stool-pigeon"'—which indicates that by this date the term was as much police j. as it was c. and therefore not to be regarded as c. after 1904 in U.S.A.; by ca. 1915, current in Britain; by 1940, s. in Britain too. Cf. pigeon and see stool, n., 2; cf. also s. stooling, 'decoying ducks . . . by means of "stools"' (Bartlett).—2. Hence, a prisoner that gives information to the prison officers against another prisoner: convicts': 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'The schoolmaster was a "stool-pigeon" during his whole term [in prison]'; 1912, A. Train, Courts, Criminals and the Camorra; 1912, Donald Lowrie (San Quentin, 1901-11), My Life in Prison; 1914, T. M. Osborne, Within Prison Walls; 1916, Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in the Underworld, where it is used of a spy among boys in a reform school; by 1918 or so, no longer c., for by that time it had become general prison s.—3. (Ex senses 1, 2.) 'They had picked a bad night for a safe robbery—bad because the "stool-pigeon" (underworld term for the moon) was shining brilliantly,' Tom O'Donnell, 'Into the Jaws of Death'—in Great Detective Cases (N.Y.C.), 1929; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, 'The stool pigeon (as burglars refer to a bright moon)'; extant.

stool-pigeoning. 'The [police] practice of employing decoys to catch robbers,' Bartlett, Americanisms, 2nd ed., 1859; in the 1st ed., 1848, the term was incorrectly defined; by 1905 (see the 1904 quot'n in sense 1 of the preceding entry), no longer c. Ex stool pigeon.

stooler is an English variant, not very gen., of stoolie: since ca. 1935. Richard Llewellyn, None but the Lonely Heart, 1943.

stoolie or stooly. A 'stool pigeon': 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; June 20, 1926, Flynn's; May 24, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's; March 19, 1932, Flynn's; 1934, John G. Brandon, The One-Minute Murder (British); 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'In the parlance of the underworld, an informer is called a "stoolie"''; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; 1938, Castle, 'He's the King of the Rats—the Father of Finks—the Great Stoolie'; Feb. 26, 1939, Flynn's, Richard Sale; by 1940, police and journalistic s. in U.S.A. but still current, as c., in Britain (Val Davis, 1941). Prob. ex stool, n., 2.

stoolo. An informer to the police: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. I.e., stool, n. + the o suffix so common in s. and c.

stoop, n.; always the stoop. (The) pillory: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'He stalls in the Stoop; he stands in the Pillory'; 1781 (see stoop, nap the); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1828, G. Godfrey; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890 (B & L). One's posture is that of stooping.—2. A petty thief: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. He goes about, sneaking and, both physically and professionally, stooping.

stoop, v. To yield; to fall a victim to a swindle: ca. 1585-1630. Robert Greene, The Blacke Bookes Messenger, 1592, 'To this perjured companion I sent to come as a Constable, to make the Maltman stoupe'. For the metaphor and origin, see both stooping and stooping to the lure.—2. 'To be stoop'd, is to be sent on the pillory': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1850. Ex stoop, n.

stoop, nap the. To be pilloried—set in the pillory for punishment: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1785, Grose has the variant nab the stoop; 1822, P. Egan, Real Life (as knap . . .); † by 1896 (F & H). See nap, v., 5 (and knap, v., 1); stoop, because a pillory compels a tall man to stoop.

stoop-buzzing. 'A practice with women of robbing gentlemen who fall in their company under peculiar circumstances' (i.e., in a brothel or in a harlot's room): 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 2nd ed., citing The Times of stoop-napper. A malefactor that is set—or has been set—in the pillory: 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society, where it is added that the malefactor is also called overseer of the new pavement; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1887 (Baumann). Ex nap the stoop: see stoop, nap the.

Feb. 11, 1859; † by 1900. But is this correct? I suspect confusion with stook-buzzing.

stoop tobacco. 'Cigar and cigarette ends picked up in the streets,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: 'beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1920: 1934, M. H. Wesen; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Feb. 1) it was s. One stoops to get 'em.

stooper; usually in pl. A cigarette or a cigar picked up off the street: 'beggars' and tramps': C. 20. James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 1937. For the semantics, cf. stoop tobacco.

stooping. (In) the act of surrendering to a highwayman, or esp. to a gang of highway robbers (whether highwaymen or footpads); submission, or submissive, to such necessity: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 'When he'—the 'martin'—'yeeldeth, stouping'; 1592, Greene, The Blacke Bookes Messenger (see next entry); 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'When he'—the Martin or victim—'yieldeth, it is called Stooping'; app. † by 1620. Ex falconry ('to descend to the lure', O.E.D.); cf. stooping to the lure.

stooping-match. 'The exhibition of one or more persons on the pillory': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1880. 'Some' sport!

stooping to the lure is in 'bat-fowling' (that swindle more usually known as 'cony-catching', q.v.), applied to 'the good Asse'—i.e., dupe—'if he be woone': 1592, Greene. See 'Browne's cant vocabulary'. The term obviously originates in fowling; cf. stooping.

stop. A police officer: perhaps in Sessions Papers, April 18, 1844, 'Mellon [one of the accused] said, "I must go and get a stop"—I [the plaintiff] did not know what that was'; definitely, however, in 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H., 'A detective policeman'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A detective officer'; 1887, Baumann; † by 1910. Because he stops malefactors and makes inconsiderate inquiries.—2. An electric burglar-alarm: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. It often prevents a burglary.—3. Any place providing shelter for tramp or hobo: U.S. tramps': 1931, IA; extant.—4. A police station: U.S.A.: 1933, Eagle; extant. Cf. 3 and stop-over.—5. A receiver of stolen property: U.S.A.: 1934, Rose; extant. There the goods end their travels, so far as the thief is concerned.

stop, on the. 'You have heard of working on the "stop"', most likely. Which means picking pockets when the party is still': 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1890, B & L; extant. Here stop = stope, q.v.

stop (a person's) blubber. See blubber.

stop dice, false or loaded dice of some kind,—presumably they are so loaded as to come to a stop on a given facet,—are mentioned by Palsgrave in 1540 and classified by The O.E.D. as S.E.; perhaps, however, the term was orig. gamesters' c. Apparently the term had fallen into disuse by 1700—if not, indeed, by 1640.

stop(-)drawers, 'stockings', occurs in Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, thus: 'Stomps and Stop Drawers; Shoes and Stockings'. But possibly it should be stamp-drawers, seeing that Poulter has erred with his stomps.

Stop-Hole Abbey is a mid-C. 16–18 (? later) nickname of the underworld for a lodging or a lodging-house, but it is not to be taken as a synonym of libken, q.v. Dekker, O per se O, 1612, 'One of the meeting places . . . being a Sheepe-cote, is by the Quest of Roagues who nightly assemble there, called by the name of Stophole Abbey: so likewise another of their Lodgings is called by the same name. Then have they others, as the blew Bull, the Prancer, the Buls belly, the Cowes udder, the greene Arbour, the blasing starre, &c.'; B.E., 1698, 'The Nick-name of the chief Rendezvous of the Canting Crew'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose. Ex its dilapidated condition.

stop(-)lay, the. An American term explained thus by Matsell, 1859: 'Two or more well-dressed pickpockets go into a fashionable quiet street and promenade singly until they select a person that will answer their purpose; one of them stops the person and inquires the direction of a place somewhat distant. One being informed of the route he should take, he pretends not to exactly understand his informant, who getting a little more interested in his desire to be explicit, draws closer to the inquirer. At about this point, one or both the others walk up and in an instant the amiable individual is minus some part of his movable property. The above practice is what is termed the "stop lay"'; 1890, B & L; app. † by 1840.

stop off. To go to prison: 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 'I stopped off at the Castle once when the old boy . . . give me four moon for nicking a steamer's skin'; extant. Ex the American colloquialism, to stop off at, 'to descend from a train or a vehicle and then stay at a place'; cf. stop-over.

stop one's jolt. To serve a term in prison: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; extant. Cf. stop-over.

stop-over, n. A short jail-sentence: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. A mere passing visit—an interlude—a negligible caesura.

stop-thief. 'Meat stolen. "I have got this piece of stop-thief." I stole this piece of raw meat': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue ob. Rhyming on beef.

stop ticket. 'A detainer,' Ersine, 1933; 'A warrant awaiting a discharged convict,' Eagle, 1933: since ca. 1920, esp. among convicts.

stope. A handkerchief: 1869 (as stop: see stop, on the); 1935, The Garda Review; extant. A corruption of stook.

Stophole Abbey. See Stop-Hole Abbey.

stopping-off place. A cache for stolen property: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. There, the thieves stop the car, get out, hide the goods.

stoppo. See take stoppo.

store. 'Store or joint. Fake stock exchange or race parlor' (i.e., faked-stock exchange and faked-race office), P. S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 1936; 1937, Courtney R. Cooper, Here's to Crime; July 16, 1937, a New York newspaper, 'The place of the actual trimming is . . . a "store"'; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, implies that the term arose in 1906; extant. Ex the ordinary business-sense.

store it off. See take the jolly off.

store-made scoff. 'A meal for which the ingredients have been bought or begged in a store, and cooked by the tramps in their "jungles", Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910.

store-men. Confidence tricksters: 1936, Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld; extant. See store.

store worker. A 'confidence' passer of dud cheques at stores: since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941.

stores, 'gambling games in the old-time crooked circuses': not c., but circus s.: witness, e.g., The White Tops, July-Aug. 1928, 'Circus Glossary'.

storm, n. See faggot and storm.

storm, v. To gag (a person) to keep him quiet; orig. and mostly among burglars: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers (see quot'n at faggot, v.); † by 1780.

storm and strife. Wife: Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20. The American Mercury, May 1928 (Ernest Booth); M & B, 1944. Rhyming; the English rhyming s. form is trouble and strife.

stormy Dick. Penis: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on prick.

stormy end. 'The blind baggage, or "stormy end" as the bums called it, was so crowded when the train pulled out, that I saw they would all be thrown off at the first stop,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926; 1931, IA; extant. 'From its exposed, extremely windy and wet position during a storm' (Godfrey Irwin).

story with (a woman), do the. To copulate with: prostitutes'; C. 18. The phrase occurs several times in Select Trials from 1720 to 1724 (pub. in 1734), e.g., in the trial of Elizabeth Mordant, Oct. 1723, 'Prisoner. He still followed me, and offered two Shillings, to do the Story with me . . . I told him I would never consent to any such thing, for . . . tho' I was poor and ragged I was honest'. The old, old story.

stosh. A misprint for stash.

stoter (or stotor), n. A severe blow; 1698, B.E., 'Stoter, c., a great Blow. Stoter him, c. or tip him a Stoter, c. settle him, give him a swinging Blow'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; in 1859, H (stotor) implies that it is †. Prob. a perversion of Dutch stoot, as in zonder slag of stoot, 'without striking a blow'.

stoter, v. To hit or strike heavily: 1698, B.E. (see preceding entry); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1840.

stotor. See stoter, n.

stoup(e); stouping. See stoop; stooping.

stout(-)and(-)thin. A wedge (as used by burglars): 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); extant. A wedge is, of course, thick at one end, thin at the other ('the thin end of the wedge').

stouter, 'very strong, Malt-Drink' (B.E., 1698), is recorded by The O.E.D. at 1677, and classified by Johnson as c.; but B.E. does not say that it is c., and, presuming its origin to be stout ale, or stout beer, I should say that in this sense stout is either s. or coll. The modern sense, 'a strong variety of porter', has always been S.E.

stove up, v.; stove-up, n. To disinfect—disinfection of—clothes in a casual ward: tramps': since ca. 1910. Partridge, 1938. The clothes are cooked in a stove-like disinfecter.

stow. 'Stow you, holde your peace,' Harman, 1566; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Stow your whids . . . Be wary'—which shows that, in c., stow meant, less 'place' than 'hold' or 'withhold':

1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'Stow, c. you have said enough . . . Stow your Whids and Plant 'em; for the Cove of the Ken can cant 'em' (understand them—understands cant), the c. c.p. being repeated by J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 1707, with the for your; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (stow your whid); 1812, J. H. Vaux (stow!); 1848, Sinks of London (s. your whid); by 1840, however, the usual phrase was stow your patter. By 1860, these phrases were s.: by 1890, †. —2. Hence, to cease from; relinquish: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see stash); also v.i. = 'stop doing that!', likewise in Vaux; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) To stop; cause to cease: 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I, 'Dogherty and Bill Gibbons . . . had a turn-up at a public house; but . . . friends . . . interfered, and stowed it'; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s.—4. (Ex sense 1.) To lure, to reside, to lodge: ca. 1810-1910: 1829, Wm Maginn; 1890, B & L.—5. To hide, as in stow blunt, 'to hide money': U.S.A.: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Perhaps a shortening of S.E. stow away, 'to put away in a secret or not easily accessible place'.

stow faking! 'Stow, Stow it; or Stow Faking, an intimation from a thief to his pall, to desist from what he is about, on the occasion of some alarm, &c.', J. H. Vaux, 1812—but stow it occurs in Sessions Papers, Dec. 1801 (p. 46); 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1910. Lit., stop doing (it)!

stow it! Be quiet!: mid-C. 18-20: see, e.g., stow manging. By 1830 it was s. See stow, 1.

stow manging! is a variant of stow, 'be quiet!': 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Stow, or Stow Manging, an intimation from one flash cove to another in a mixed company to be silent, or drop the subject, he was upon'; † by 1890. See stow, 2, and mang.

stow one's gaff. See gaff, stow one's.

stow that! That's false!; that's a jest; take that back!: 1812, J. H. Vaux; by 1870, low s.

stow the guy! See guy, n., 1.

stow the or your whids! See stow, 1.

stow you! See stow.

stow your chant! Shut your mouth!; be quiet!; hush!: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Cf. the next entry and chant, n., 2.

stow your patter! had, by 1840, displaced stow your whid(s)! (q.v. at stow); 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants, 'Stow your patter, there's a flat[t]y cove in the ken'; by 1890, low s. stowmarket! Stop!; esp. stop talking, be quiet: 1823, Bee; † by 1880. An elaboration of stow, prob. with a punning allusion to Stowmarket, a political division of Suffolk, or to the market held at some Stow or Stowe.

strach. See stretch, n., 1.

Strad game (or trick), the. A confidence trick involving the leaving of a violin, not a Stradivarius, in a shop or a saloon: 'con men's': since ca. 1910. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938, 'He had just clipped a mug for two hundred dollars at the "Strad" trick'.

straight. 'A warder who is corrupt or "straight" as the convicts call him, will usually have one particular convict upon whom he relies entirely to act as intermediary for him', 'Warden', straight and narrow, the, 'the way to eternal life and salvation' (Stiff, 1931), has, in C. 20, been much used by tramps: but it is also gen. s. Short for the straight and narrow path.

His Majesty's Guests, 1929; extant. Cf. synonymous right and square.

straight crip. A bum actually crippled or otherwise afflicted: 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hobos; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Contrast phoney crip.

straight cut. A thoroughly respectable girl or (young) woman: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'He could . . . pick up a girl, even a straight-cut, and have her walk arm-in-arm with him'; extant. An elaboration of straight, 'virtuous'.

straight drag. See at drag, crooked.

straight goods. Trustworthy information; the truth, the true facts of the situation or position or activity or incident: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'They're all second class [as professional thieves] . . . Well, I used to be a second-class Johnny myself, so I can give you some straight goods'; by 1905, low s.; by 1910 (or even earlier), gen. s. Cf. the British Colonial s. straight wire; to straight goods, the exact semantic parallel is the genuine article.

straight hype. 'A short-change method. Its success depends greatly on the victim's carelessness,' Ersine: since ca. 1920. Here, straight = outright. See hype.

straight line, get on the. To get on the right scent: 1887, Baumann; slightly ob. Line = track.

straight-pitching, vbl n. Passing counterfeit money without having accomplices: 1858, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, vii (see also pitch, v., 2); ob.

straight racket, on the. Leading an honest life: 1890, B & L; rather ob. Cf. square, on the, and the s. to go straight.

straight screw. A prison warder that trafficks for the prisoners (in, e.g., tobacco): convicts: C. 20. See, e.g., George Ingram, Stir, 1933, and W. G. Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows, 1939.

straighten. To bribe: 1890, B & L, 'Straighten the screw, to (thieves), to bribe the jailer'; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1933, Charles E. Leach; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief (U.S.A.), 'Straighten Out . . . to induce a victim to refuse to prosecute or make complaint'; 1939, Val Davis; 1940, Mark Benney; extant. Cf. square, v.

straighten out. See preceding, ref. of 1937.

Straights, the. 'A nest of obscure courts, alleys, and avenues, running between the bottom of St Martin's Lane, Half Moon and Chandos Street,' Gifford's note in his edition of Jonson on the passage in II, vi, of Ben Jonson's Bartholomew Fair (see quot'n at Bermudas), 1614: current in C. 17. 'Formerly frequented by profligates; a Cant name,' Nares. Because these streets, lanes, alleys were so strait or narrow.

strain, 'gonorrhoea': not c., but low s. of late C. 19-20. Ex ignorant belief that the disease was caused by strain, not by a diseased woman.

strake. See ridding strake.

stram (or stramm), the. Prostitution: 1889, W. E. Henley, Villon's Good-night, 'You flymy titters fond of flam, | Your judes that clobber for the stramm'; app. † by 1910. Cf. U.S. stram, 'a walk'; here, stram perhaps = 'a parade of prostitutes'.

strammel. See stammel.—Also see strommel, 2.

stranger, 'a guinea', may orig. (ca. 1770 or 1780) have been c., but prob. it was always s.: ca. 1770-1870. Grose, 1785. Ex the comparative rarity with which it was owned by a member of the underworld.—2. In late C. 19-20, it is low s. for 'a sovereign' (the coin), as in Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows, 1926.—3. 'A stolen automobile driven some distance away to be disposed of,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: U.S. car thieves': since ca. 1924.

strangler. A necktie: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'With a white tie and all. It must be kind of hard to tie one of those stranglers without blacking it all up'; extant. Cf. s. choker.

strap, n. S. Rowlands, in Greenes Ghost Haunting Coniecatchers, 1602, plagiarizes 'Browne's cant vocabulary' from Greenc's The Black Bookes Messenger, 1592: but he substitutes strap for shrap, the wine used in 'bat-fowling'—a variation of the confidence trick. As all the other terms are copied correctly, and strap is given by Rowlands without comment, we are prob. justified in assuming that strap is a printer's error or that Rowlands carelessly read strap for shrap. It is a wonder that errors were not more frequent with that abominable Black Letter.—2. Incorrect for trap, 2.—3. As the strap, it is a form of confidence game: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937; Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938. It 'punishes' the victim.

strap, v. 'To work. The kiddy would not strap, so he went on the scamp; the lad would not work, and therefore robbed on the highway': 1811, Lex. Bal.; by 1830 it was s.; by 1860, S.E. Perhaps ex strapping or striking oneself in order to remain awake at one's task.

strap(-)block. A wrist-watch: 1925, Leverage; extant. See block, n., 2.

strapping. B.E., 1698, 'Straping, c. lying with a Wench'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (-pp-); 1785, Grose (id.); † by 1840. Sadistic; cf. low s. bang, 'to copulate with (a woman)'.

straw. A grass widow: ca. 1850-90. Henry Mayhew, London Characters, enlarged edition, 1874, p. 346. Suggested by grass widow.

straw-chipper. A straw-bonnet maker: 1823, Moncrieff, Tom and Jerry; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900. Ex the manipulation of straw in bonnet-making.

straw jay; straw jug. A small-town, or a rural, bank: bank robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer (former); 1934, Rose (latter); extant. The straw connotes rusticity: cf. s. hayseed, 'a farmer; a simple countryman'.

straw-yard. 'The night asylums or refuges for the destitute (usually called "straw-yards" by the poor)': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, II, 1938, where it appears that the term was also low London s. Ex their roughness; or ex the straw laid on the dormitory floors.

strawing, the ostensible selling of straws to cover the actual sale of obscene books or prints: not c., but street vendors' s. Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 1851.

strawling brokers. Buyers of goods: 1688, Holme, The Academy of Armory, where the printing of the term is apt to cause confusion. The term seems to have > † by 1750; the allusion is to 'fences': see the next entry and stalling ken.

strawling ken is an occ. C. 17 variant of stalling ken. (R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665.)

street, hit the. See hit the street, 2. Independently, the street = freedom, as in Ersine, 1933.

Street, the. In reference to—and valid for—the 1890's and early 1900's, Anon., 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery', Flynn's, March 30, 1929, 'He did not say [the] Bowery. You'd never hear that name from any crook or low-lifer or bum. It was always the Street.'

street ganger. A beggar: 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1920. He gangs, or goes, in the street.

street grizzling. See grizzling.

streets. Freedom: convicts': from ca. 1920: Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'From the inside, looking out', the prisoner so envisions them.

streets, work the. See work . . .

Streights, the. See Straights, the.

strength of. Much: Nov. 15, 1836, 'The Chaunt' by W. H. Smith in The Individual, 'A Norfolk capon is jolly grub, | When you wash it down with strength of bub'; † by 1900. Cf. coll. and dial. a power of.

stretch, n. A mile: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'The Cull does not come above seven Straches off; that is, . . . the Man does not come seven Miles off'; app. † by 1780. I.e., a distance in space. Cf.:—2. A yard: 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Several stretch of dobbin . . . ; . . . several yards of ribband'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1904 (F & H). A stretch of one's legs.—3. A belt, a sash or a ribbon: 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'I . . . succeeded in undubbing the stretch which sling the scout' or watch 'round her waist'; † by 1890.—4. A year; esp. a year's imprisonment: 1821, D. Haggart, 'They got half a stretch in the Planting'; ibid., 'Poor Barney got a free passage to Botany Bay for fourteen stretch'; 1849, Sessions Papers (April 15); 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 'Twelve months hard labour'; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), esp. the song (p. 124) entitled 'A Hundred Stretches Hence'—a parody of Villon's 'Où sont les neiges d'antan?'—but the pl. is usually stretch, as in two stretch, three stretch, etc.; 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life; 1890, B & L; 1891, Jacob A. Riis (U.S.A.); 1893, Confessions of a Convict (U.S.A.); 1894, Arthur Morrison; 1898, R. J. A. Power-Berry, The Bye-Ways of Crime, 'He is doing "seven stretch"'; 1899, C. Rook, The Hooligan Nights; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2; 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow; 1903, F & H; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1910, F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys (U.S.A.); 1925, Eustace Jervis; 1927, C. F. Coe, Me—Gangster; 1928, J. K. Ferrier, 'Crime in the United States' in his Crooks and Crime; 1931, Brown; 1933, George Ingram, Stir; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; and many, many times since then, esp. in combination —e.g., 'He got "ten stretch", didn't he?' (Lilliput, Nov. 1943). It seems a long stretch of time. Jim Phelan offers, in Jail Journey, 1940, the following ingenious explanation. 'Much jail-slang comes from silent-system days, when talk depended on signs or mutters. A man with six months, telling others how long he "had", placed his hand half-way up his body—half a stretch. A man with a year casually pulled or stretched the lobe of his ear . . . one year, one stretch-er-ear.'—5. Hence, loosely any prison sentence: 1903, Ex-Inspector Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals (p. 26); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (U.S.A.); 1925, Leverage; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly (U.S.A.), R. Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave'; 1926, Jack Black; 1927, Kane; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1927, C. F. Coe, Me—Gangster; Oct. 1928, Word-Lore; 1928, John O'Connor; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1932, Lewis E. Lawes; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; et al.—6. A look, a glance: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; ob. With one's attention at stretch?

stretch, v., in sense 'to be hanged', may orig. and for long (say late C. 17—early 19) have been c., though I think that even then it was no worse than low s. B.E.; A New Canting Dict.; Grose. (Frequent as a vbl n., stretching.) Ex that which happens to one's neck.

stretch hemp, 'to be hanged'; ca. 1870–1930: prob. low s. rather than c. (Flynn's, July 4, 1925, p. 817.)

stretch rope. 'He'—the criminal, esp. in prison —'will hear it said that some one is going to be topped, stretch rope, or walk up the thirteen steps' (to be hanged), Convict, 1934: C. 20. Cf. stretch, v., and stretch hemp.

stretcher. A web (or whole piece of length) of cloth: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'We went to a merchant-tailor's shop, where . . . I stuck my fam into a stretcher of thaan on the shelf behind me, and brought it to the ground by my side'; † by 1890.—2. Hence, a (piece of) string: 1821, D. Haggart, Life (Glossary); † by 1900.—3. See stretchers.—4. A year in prison: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell (at pattered); 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, "'It was a bunglin' job, an' the bloke deserves a stretcher'"; ob. An elaboration of stretch, n., 4.—5. Hence, any long term in prison: U.S.A.: 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers that Prey, "'Stretchers", as they called their terms in prison'; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; very ob.—6. An undertaker: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. He 'lays out' the corpse.

stretcher-fencer, 'one who sells braces in the streets', is not c., but London street s. H, 3rd ed., 1864. Prob. the correct form of stretching fencer.

stretchers. Horse-races; a race-meeting: 1859, H (see rattlers); app. † by 1900. Ex the fact that race-horses stretch their legs considerably.—2. Hence (or is it an error?), a horse-racer (? race-horse): U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell.—3. Boot- or shoe-laces: mostly beggars': 1908, W. H. Davies (see quot'n at sharps, 2); also American, as in Godfrey Irwin, 1931; April 22, 1935, Hugh Milner; extant. Prob. ex stretcher, 3.

stretching. See stretch, v.

stretching fencer, 'a street vendor of braces': London s., not c. H, 2nd ed., 1860.

stretching match, 'an execution, a hanging', is prob. not c., but low s. Current ca. 1840–1900. Ex stretch, v., 1.

stricklers, 'a peddler's assistant', is s.—not c. Leverage, 1925.

stride. A walk: ca. 1860–1910. Recorded in 1889: see foot-it. Cf. strides.

stride-wide, 'ale': classified by Halliwell (who refers to Wm Harrison's England, 1577) as c. Perhaps rather s. than c. It causes one to 'walk wide'.

strides. Trousers: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1890, B & L, who classify it as theatrical s.; by 1900, low s.; by 1910, gen. s. in British Empire, but it may have been c. in U.S.A. ca. 1900-35 (Jackson & Hellyer, 1914; 1927, Clark & Eubank; 1933, Ersine). The garment in which one takes strides, or strides about; cf. stride.

strike, n.; pl., strike. A pound (twenty shillings): 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'I have done one cull twice with between fifteen and sixteen strike in his sack'; ibid., 'Twenty guineas . . . twenty strike', cf. the sense variation of quid; Feb. 1791, Sessions Papers, 'He told me a strike was a guinea'; 1797, Potter (a guinea); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1822, The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul; 1848, Sinks of London (a guinea); by 1904 (F & H) it was low s. Perhaps the semantics are 'strike: a blow: a notch: score'.—2. A robbery: U.S.A.: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'There are other things to touch up in New York besides banks,' I remarked, "yet you don't hear of many big strikes"; March 13, 1926, Flynn's, 'Burglars' by J. G. Dove; Aug. 15, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse; 1943, Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House (British); extant. Ex sense 1 of the v.—3. See nail a strike.

strike, v. 'Now we have well bousd, let us strike some chete. Nowe we have well dronke, let us steale some thinge,' Harman, 1566; 1591, Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, implies it in the vbl n. striking, q.v.; 1592, Greene, A Disputation, 'There came out of the country a Foyst, to trie his experience, here in Westminster Hall, and strooke a hand or two'; ca. 1615, Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggars' Bush; 1698, B.E., 'He has Struck the Quidds, c. he has got the Cole from him'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'To rob'; 1789 (see yack); app. † by 1830. To seize hastily or crisply, as if one were striking a blow; cf. knock, v., 2.—2. Hence, to borrow (money): 1618, G. Mynshull, Essayes and Characters of a Prison and Prisoners, 'To borrow money is called striking, but the blow can hardly or never be recovered'; 1698, B.E., 'He Strikes every Body, c. he borrows Money every where'—repeated in A Canting Dict., 1725; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; † by 1904 (F & H).—3. Hence (?), to beg from (a person): 1698, B.E., 'Strike the Cull, c. Beg of that Gentleman'; 1725, A Canting Dict.; † by 1830.—4. To unlock (a door): 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', 'To strike the jigger. To pick the lock'; 1859, H; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; ' . . . or break open a door'; 1890, B & L; † by 1920.

strike a hand is simply an elaboration of strike, q.v.; the actual phrase in R. Greene, A Disputation, 1592, is strike a hand or two, to rob on several occasions ('strooke a hand or two').

strike a jigger. See strike, v., 4.

strike a lead. 'To make a discovery pointing to good results': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1890, coll. Cf. 'get a straight line'.

strike thirty-one. To die: South America: C. 20. Harry Franck, Working North from Patagonia, 1921. Ex some card game?

strike upon the dub. See dub, upon the.

striker. 'At this the "lovers" [prostitutes] bullics, petty gamblers, and "strikers" gradually break into a coarse laugh': 1882, James D. McCabe, New York by Sunlight and Gaslight, in a description of a beer-saloon; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms, 'A bruiser; a ruffian; especially the tout or bully of a gambling den'; 1904, F & H; † by 1930. One who is employed to strike; cf. English s. (> Standard) chucker-out.—2. (Usually in pl.) 'Strikers, n. pl., Tramps; hoboes,' Leverage, 1925; extant.

striking. Theft; esp. an act of pickpocketry, and orig. a term restricted to 'figging law' (q.v.): 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, ends his list of 'figging terms' with 'The Act doing, striking'; 1592, Greene, The Second Conny-catching; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; in C. 18, mostly in sense of strike, v., 1.

striking the mace. See mace, v., ref. of 1812.

strill; mostly pl. 'Strills, cheating lies.—North Country Cant': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; app. † by 1920. Origin? Perhaps cf.—2. Among street musicians, it = a musical instrument; strictly, a violin. This sense is not c., but parlyaree. (H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks, 1938.) Ex It. strillo, 'a shrill cry'.

string, n. A fuse: C. 20 (perhaps since ca. 1890, as Jim Tully implies in The American Mercury of April 1933); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Fuse used by yeggs in safeblowing'; Oct. 1931, D. W. Maurer; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; et al.—2. 'A repertory of "ghost stories"', Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910. 'The possessor is often able to "string along" . . . his listeners to good purpose' (Irwin).—3. A train: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. Ex the long string of cars.—4. A form of confidence game (the same as strap): con men's: since ca. 1920. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. The victim is 'on a string'.

string, v. 'To impose on a person's belief by some joke or lie,' Sinks of London Laid Open: possibly c. at first, but prob. always s.—although orig. low.

string, cut the. To cut a story short; to end a story: 1889, B & L (at cut the line); 1891, F & H (at cut); † by 1940. Cf. cut the line (at line, cut the).

string, get in a. See line, get in a. string, go to heaven in a. See go to heaven . . .

string?, how do you sell your. 'A rather untranslatable phrase, meaning, I'm awake to your hoax; or rather an intimation that the speaker sees through the trick sought to be put on him': 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1890. For semantics, cf. line, get in a.

string and twine. Wine: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

stringer. 'A mace cove, or line man, in plain English a cheat (or swindler)': 1890, Charles Hindley, The True History of Tom and Jerry, glossary, p. 206; app. † by 1940. Ex string, v.—2. 'A steerer or lurer for a con mob,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. Cf. Am. s. (or coll.) string (a person) along.—3. A fuse: U.S. safe-blowers': ca. 1890-1920, then ob. In, e.g., Convict, 1934. Cf. string, n.

strip, v., had in the underworld of late C. 17-mid-18 two specific senses that, app. at least, were, at that period, c.: 1698, B.E., 'To Rob or Gut a House . . . to Bite [persons] of their Money. Strip the Ken, c. to Gut the House . . . We have stript the Cull, c. We have got all the Fool's Money.' But these nuances are so close to the S.E. senses of the word that B.E. is perhaps wrong in classifying them as c.—3. To remove the outside metal of (a safe): U.S. bank-robbers': since ca. 1910. Ersine.

strip-bush. 'A fellow who steals clothes put out to dry after washing': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1910.

stripe. 'One who is no longer a first offender,' George Ingram, Stir, 1933: convicts': since ca. 1920. Ex a declaratory badge or marking.

stripes, take out the. 'To remove the crossing from a cheque by the use of acid,' David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937: C. 20: 1933, Charles E. Leach.

stripper. 'Cracksman who can rip open the back of a safe,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941: since the 1920's. Cf. strip, 3.—2. A pick-pocket: U.S.A.: since ca. 1925. Ersine.

strippers. 'Cards cut at the sides for the purpose of carrying on a skinning game': professional gamblers' and card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L, who list it as English; 1894, J. N. Maskelyne (id.); 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1903, F & H; 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1914, J. H. Keate, Mephisto's Greatest Web (i.e., gambling), where, however, it is applied to cards prepared with slight projection on edge or end, so that high cards may be thus detected and suitably dealt; by 1920, s.—2. 'They take the stolen car to some deserted place; or to some garage of their own. There they strip the vehicle of all its fineries, its comforts and often its very vitals. Spare tires, lamps, tools, engine parts, patent devices and whatnot carry no identifying numbers; . . . if the reward of the traffic is small, so is the risk. "Strippers", these thieves are called,' Henry Gollomb, 'Watch That Car' in Flynn's, Sept. 25, 1926; by 1935, police s.

stripping law is 'the lewde abuses of sundry Jaylors in England,' says Robert Greene in A Disputation, 1592; 'Cuthbert Cunny-catcher', The Defence of Conny catching, 'The stripping Law, which is the abuse offered by the Keepers of Newgate to poore prisoners, and some that belong to the Marshalsea'; † by 1630.

stroke. A burglary, a theft: since the 1920's: 1936, David Hume, The Crime Combine, 'Police informants could . . . whisper of "strokes" that had been pulled, and of "strokes" that were to be pulled'; 1945, David Hume, Come Back for the Body, 'Until he pulled his low stroke he boxed cleverly'. Prob. suggested by strike, v., 1; cf. the n.

stroling mort. See strolling mort.

stroll, 'to wander as a beggar or as an itinerant actor', may orig. have been c.: cf. the next entry. Richard Head, in The English Rogue, 1665, glosses stroll as 'wander' in precisely the same way as he glosses other c. terms. Prob. introduced ex Germany by soldiers: cf. Ger. Strolch, a vagabond, and C. 18 strolchen, to wander as a vagrant.

stroller. A member of a gang of 'rank riders' (see rank rider, 1) when, instead of stealing horses from trustful inn-keepers or stable-men, they proceed on foot and impose on country gentlemen for the loan of a sum of money wherewith to go to, say, London: ca. 1600–70. Dekker, Lanthorne and strolling broker. See strawling broker.

Candle-light, 1608–9.—2. The gen. sense, 'vagabond', has, despite B.E., been always S.E. A New Canting Dict., however, remarks (in 1725), 'Reckon'd the Twentieth Order of Villans, tho' comprehended usually in the Rank of Gypsies, &c.'

strolling mort. B.E., 1698, 'Strawling-morts, c. pretending to be Widows, sometimes travel the Countries'—counties—'making Laces upon Ewes, Beggars-tape, &c. Are light Finger'd, Subtil, Hypocritical, Cruel, and often dangerous to meet, especially when a Ruffler is with them'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'The Stroling Morts are such as pretend to be Parsons Widows, or to be born Gentlewomen, and by Marrying against the Consent of their Parents, by Losses and Sicknesses are utterly ruin'd and undone, telling a lamentable Story, to stir up the Minds of their Hearers to compassionate their Sufferings': 1785, Grose; † by 1830. See mort.

stromell. A rare variant of:— strommel or strummel. 'Strommell, strawe,' Harman, 1566; 1608–9, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie' (Lanthorne and Candle-light), 'Strommel, straw'; 1610, Rowlands (stromell); 1615, Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggar's Bush, 'Twang dell's i' th stiromel'; 1665, R. Head; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, who misprints it stummel and strammel; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (strommel); 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Is there good Hay for the Horses, Is there rum Strummel for the Prads'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (strammel); 1848, Sinks of London (id.); in 1859, H implies that it is †. It is cognate with C. 15 stramage, 'rushes with which a floor is strewn', and its prob. origin is the presumed Old Fr. estramaille, 'straw bedding', with which cf. the actual Old Fr. estramer, 'joncher de paille ou de feuillage' (Godefroy); B & L, however, propose Romany strammel.—2. Hence, hair: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue (glossary); 1725, A New Canting Dict.—in Song XV erroneously as strammel; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, as strummel; 1789, G. Parker; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 'The hair of the head'; ibid., 'To get your strummel faked in twig, is to have your hair dressed in style'; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood (-u-); 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1890, B & L; † by 1904 (F & H).

strommel-faker; strummel-f. A hairdresser: 1797, Potter, who misprints it as strummer feker—repeated by Andrewes, 1809; 1848, Sinks of London, erroneously as strummer faker—an error recurring in Matsell (U.S.A.), 1859; 1890, B & L; † by 1904 (F & H). Ex strommel, 2 and faker, 1.

strommel patch. A contemptible person: ca. 1590–1640. Jonson, 1599. Ex strommel, 1.

strong in reference to money (or its possessor) = 'plentiful' (or 'well supplied with money'), as in 'The cush was coming strong I was obtaining money easily' and 'I'm well covered and strong as can be . . . I have got enough money and influence to help me out of trouble', both from No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1925, Leverage; extant. In a powerful position; rendering powerful.—2. Short for strong-arm, adj.: June 13, 1925, Flynn's, (a criminal loq.) 'I never pulled any strong stuff in my life'; extant.

strong, come it. See come it strong.

strong and thin. Gin (the spirit): Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

strong arm, n. Always the . . . (Ex the adj.) Robbery with violence; assault: C. 20: 1907, Jack London, The Road, concerning 'road-kids', 'Watch out for the "strong arm"'. Every kid in the push I travelled with was expert at it'; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; extant.—2. (Without the.) A 'strong-arm man': 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A hold-up man . . . A hired thug or guard'; since ca. 1931, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946).

strong-arm, v. To assault: March 15, 1930, Flynn's, John Wilstach, 'The only way to collect the dough coming to Miss Martin is to strong-arm these babies'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; since ca. 1930, Australian—as in Baker, 1942, 'To act as a protector; specifically for a prostitute'; by ca. 1940, s. in U.S.A.; 1945, Baker, 'To handle roughly, to bully or intimidate'—a nuance prevalent esp. among 'con men'. Prob. ex the n., sense 1.—2. Hence, to rob with violence: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'To rob without a gun and by use of a gilligan hitch'; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 'We were going strong-arming in a house over on the North-Side'; extant.

strong-arm, adj., violence: strong-arm man, a highwayman: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, in which, at p. 17, occurs the sentence, 'One of the best illustrations of the indifference of the Chicago police force to the criminal situation in the city, is the freedom of which the "hold up" and "strong-arm" men conduct their operations' ibid., 'Strong-arm crimes'; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, 'Strong-armed men' (an unusual form); ibid. (p. 205), 'The three; strong-arm men (highwaymen)'; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of Detective, 'Strong-arm people'; 1912, A. Train, Courts, Criminals and the Camorra; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Only to do the strong arm work in case there's a scrap'; 1914, A. B. Reece, Guy Garrick, 'Might it not have been the result of an attack . . . by some strong-arm man who had set out to get him and had almost succeeded in accomplishing his purpose of "getting him right", to use the vernacular of the class?'; 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Violent'; 1928, Chicago May; and many later writers. Brute strength, not brains; 'might is right' and all that.

strong-arm act; strong-arm actor. Robbery—a robber—using the gilligan hitch: since mid-1920's. Ersine. Cf. strong-arm, v., 2.

strong-arm guy or worker. A highwayman; a criminal specializing in hold-ups; a 'basher': 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'Strong arm workers who would beat your brains out for a few dollars would be moved by that touch of pity in Nancy's voice' (Nancy Sykes in Dicken's Oliver Twist); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Strong Arm Guy, Highway robber'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys, 'Strong-arm guy—a slugger'; slightly ob. See prec.

strong(-)arm on, put the. To rob (somebody) with violence: 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller, 'We started out to "put the strong arm" on drunks. We sometimes stunned the drunks . . . It was bloody work'; extant. See strong arm, n.

strong-armed. A 'strong-arm man': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'One who goes armed and robs with violence'; slightly ob. Agentially synonymous with strong-arm man.

strong as a horse, come it as. See come it, 2, ref. of 1823.

strong joint. A dishonest gambling house: gamblers': 1933, Ersine; extant.—2. (Apparatus for) a game the customer cannot win: circus and carnival grifters': since ca. 1915 (perhaps since 1900). Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938, 'A "pick-up"'. This is another form of "strong-joint", or never-win game.' Cf. sense 1 (muscular men act as chuckers-out there).

strong man; act the part of the strong man. A 'shove-tumbril'; to be publicly whipped: 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society (see shove-tumbril); 1785, Grose, who substitutes play for act and adds 'to push the cart and horses too' (because he is at the cart's tail); † by 1840.—2. (Strong man.) A confidence man: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942.

strong mob. A hold-up gang: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'Belle, the Swell Booster'; extant. Cf. strong-arm guy.

stronoky. The birch or 'the cat': 1935, The Garda Review; extant. Arbitrary formation?

strowler; usually pl. See stroller.

strowling mort. See strolling mort.

structural iron-worker. An umbrella-mender, a mush-faker: Ersine, 1933: rather s. than c.

Struggle Valley. 'Tramps' name for a collection of rough humpies, often found by a river where down-and-outs live,' Baker, 1942: Australian: C. 20.

strum, n. A periwig: 1698, B.E., 'Rum strum, c. a long Wig'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1840. Abbr. of strummel (see strummel, 2).—2. A whore: 1698, B.E., 'Rum-strum, c. . . . a handsom Wench or Strumpet'—repeated in A Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1820. Abbr. of strumpet or, less prob., a substantivization of s. strum, to copulate with (a woman).

strum, v. To play on the dulcimer: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (glossary); but this classification and this definition are very suspect.—2. 'To have carnal knowledge of a woman' (Grose, 1788): low s., not c. strummel. See strommel. (Harman, 1566; Shirley, 1707; Parker, 1789; Vaux, 1812.)

strummer-faker or feker. See strommel-faker.

strumpt. Penniless: 1925, Leverage; ob. Perversion of stumped.

stubble, v. To hold: 1859, Matsell (at kick), "The Moll stubbled her skin in her kick", the woman held her purse in her pocket'; app. † by 1920. Ex the next.

stubble it; stubble one's whids. 'Stubble it, c. hold your Tongue,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (shorter form); 1785, Grose (id.); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham, 'Stubble it, you ben, you deserve to cly the jerk for your patter'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); ibid., "Stubble your red rag", hold your tongue'; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; † by 1904 (F & H). Ex S.E. stubble, 'to clear (e.g. a field) of stubble'.

stubbs. Nothing: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900—if not, indeed, a generation earlier. Prob. ex stub, a butt-end, the remaining portion, esp. of any used and discarded article.

stuck. 'When a man has lost all his money, and is trying on the last throw to retrieve his loss and he is beat, then he is stuck': professional gamblers': 1859, Matsell; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing stuck, to be. See preceding entry; to be stuck is 'to have lost' (esp. money), not necessarily at gambling: by 1910, no longer c.—2. To be infatuated (on, with, a woman): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1910, low s.; by 1920, gen. s. At that point, one sticks.

Sing; s. by 1910. He has reached the sticking point.

student. "Student, ain't you, Kid?" The youngster on the road is called a student by many of the elder tramps. This is an appropriate name. For he attends a hard and ever-changing school,' Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 1925; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, p. 637, where used of young thieves; extant. Cf. collegian and school.—2. An inexperienced addict: drug traffic: since the 1920's. BVB. Cf. hoosier fiend.

stuff, n. As 'humbug', 'blarney', 'gammon', so far from being c. (as it is classified in Egan's Grose, 1823), it is S.E.—2. Short for jigger stuff, 'spirit made at an illicit still': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1904, Ex-Inspector Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals; extant.—3. As 'money', it is C. 19 s.—prob. low at first. Ex:—4. In U.S.A. it is 'the term used among counterfeiters for bogus money' (Burnham): Feb. 21, 1846, The National Police Gazette,—but that orig. it was English appears from Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, April 1823, p. 298, "Yes, she has got the stuff", meaning counterfeit money'; 1872, G. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1887, George W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story; 1904, Ex-Inspector Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals; slightly ob.—5. (Perhaps ex preceding sense.) Stolen goods: May 1870, Sessions Papers; 1872, E. Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York; 1887, G. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police, 'He said that some of the "stuff" had been sold to a receiver of the name of Moses Elrich'; 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago (England); 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow; 1904, Life in Sing Sing (by implication); 1930, George Smithson; 1932, N. Baylis (N.Z.); 1933, Ersine; extant.—6. Tobacco: convicts': 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer; extant. Orig., contraband tobacco: hence the sense derives ex 5.—7. 'A coward or braggart,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: U.S.A.; † by 1930. Filled with stuffing, not with 'guts'.—8. See on the stuff. Also independently, the stuff = drugs, as in Flynn's, March 13, 1927, and ibid., April 21, 1934; also in Hargan, 1935; et alibi.

stuff, v. 'To sell articles for what they are not, such as galvanized copper watches for gold, etc', The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848; † by 1937 (Irwin). Perhaps with allusion to stuff, n., 4; cf. duff, n. and v., and duffer, 1.

stuff, hit the. See hit . . .

stuff, on the. See junk, on the.

stuff, shove the. See shove the stuff.

stuff, the. The form in which senses 3, 4, 8 of stuff are always found.

stuff cover. An assistant to a stuffer; he introduces himself as a stranger to both parties and praises the articles to be sold: 1848, The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). Cf. stuff, v.; the stuff cover covers the operations of his associate.

stuffed flat. See residence dealer.

stuffer. As in 'Watch Stuffers, Pocket Book Droppers and Mock Auctioneers are also preparing for the spring business', The National Police Gazette, Feb. 28, 1846; The Ladies' Repository, 1848, makes it clear that it is one who sells 'galvanized copper watches for gold' or other articles under false pretences; † by 1937 (Irwin). Imm. ex stuff, v. stuffing. See raking.

stuffs. The police in general; prison warders and keepers in general: 1925, Leverage. I suspect this of being a misprint for stiffs (stiff, n., 18).

stuffy, n. A woman: ca. 1865–1910 (C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, glossary, p. 320). The semantics may be: she whom one, in low s., 'stuffs' or copulates with.

stuffy, adj. Well supplied with money: 1925, Leverage; 1931, Brown—hence British; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; 1943, Black.

stuk. A fast girl: S. Africa: C. 20. (J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946.) Afrikaans: ex Dutch stuk, 'piece'—cf., therefore, Eng. s. piece, 'a girl, a young woman'.

stuke is an American variant of stook, q.v. at second 1859 reference.

stuling ken is an occ. variant (C. 17–18) of stalling ken. Dekker, B.E., A New Canting Dict. (1725) and Grose have it.

stum, adj. and v. Silent, hence discreet; to force (a person) to keep silent: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. etymology of:—

stumer. A horse that will not run, or will not try, in a race: perhaps, orig., race-gang c., but prob. racing s., low at first: H, 1874, as shtumer. Of Yiddish origin—or perhaps ex Swedish stum, 'dumb'.—2. A worthless cheque; a counterfeit coin: prob. never c.; rather low s. > commercial s. > fairly gen. s. 'Pomes' Marshall, 1897.

stummel. See strommel, ref. of 1707.

stummer. A silent partner: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex stum, adj.—2. One who enforces silence: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex stum, v.—3. A reason given for maintaining silence: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. senses 1, 2; prob. ex stum, adj.

stump, n. Strength: 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'In Quarrens both for Stump and Bone', which, in the 'translation' of 'The Rum-Mort's Song', is Englished thus: 'In Body both for Strength and Bone'. This term seems, if it is genuine at all, to have been current only in C. 18; but I doubt its authenticity. Perhaps cf. the C. 17 S.E. sense, 'the main portion of anything; the stock' (O.E.D.).—2. Money: 1823, Egan's Grose. Is this an error for s. stumpy, 'money', or is stumpy a derivative?—3. A watcher or look-out man to a gang of thieves (esp. burglars): 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 320); ob. Perhaps because he 'stumps it' (goes afoot).—4. A one-armed person: U.S.A.: C. 20. Leverage, 1925. His other arm is a mere stump.

stump, v., 'to pay, hand over' (the money): low s., not c. For semantics, cf. plank down.

stump-glim. 'Stump glim or blind Charley—a lamp post,' The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Cf. shade-glim.

stumpy, 'money', is not c., but s.: C. 19.—2. A legless man: U.S.A.: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; extant. Cf. stump, n., 4.

stun. 'To stun him of his regulars—to win a confederate's share of booty': 1839, Brandon; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Cheat him out of his rights'; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; ob. To cause him to feel stunned.—2. So to rob (a person) that he does not know how the theft has been effected: 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police (p. 93); † by 1930.

stunned on skilly. 'Sent to prison and compelled to eat skilly': 1859, H; virtually †. Cf. jolt, v., for the semantic basis.

stur is a rare variant of stir (prison).

sturaban; sturbin. See sturiben.

sturdy beggars is not c., but a S.E. term for a class of vagabonds active in C. 14–16. As B.E. has it, 'The fifth and last of the most ancient Order of Canters'. Cf. — sturdy rogue. Implied but not defined by Harman in 1566 (see the quot'n at rogue, n.); in 1608, Dekker, in The Belman of London, plagiarizes Harman's account and defines this type of rogue: 'Another sect there be of these [Rogues], and they are called Sturdy Rogues: these walke from country to country'—i.e., from county to county—'under cullor of travelling to their friends or to finde out some kinseman, or else to deliver a letter to one gentleman or other, whose name he will have fairely endorsed on paper folded up for that purpose, and hansomely seald: others use this shift to carry a Certificate or pasport about them, with the hand and seale of some Justice to it, giving notice how he hath beene whipped for a vagabond, according to the lawes of the Realme, and that he is now to returne to such a place where he was borne, or dwelt last, by a certaine day limitted, which is sure to be set downe long enough; for all these writings are but counterfet, they having amongst them (of their owne Ranck,) that can write and read, who are their secretaries in this businesse. These fellowes have fingers as nymble as the Upright-man, and have their wenches, and meeting places; where whatsoever they get, they spend, and whatsoever they spend is to satisfie their lust'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Now reckon'd the Fiftieth Order of Villains', formerly the Fifth; the term must have been † by 1750 or so. sturiben or -bin; occ., stariben; in America, usually sturbin. A prison: 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London, p. 82, 'Prisons or "stur-bons" (Ger. ge-storben, dead, and hence a place of execution)—an erroneous etymology; 1859, H (sturaban); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Sturbin. State prison'; 1887, Baumann (sturabin); 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H, 'A prison; spec. (American) a State prison'; by 1910, ob., and by 1925, virtually †. See stir.

stush. Incorrect for stash.

stutter(-)gun. A machine gun, a tommy-gun: Oct. 9, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; extant. Cf. typewriter.

stye(-)bum. A tramp, or a hobo, that winters in jail: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. the s. stye, 'a particularly insanitary prison-cell'.

su-pouch. See supouch.

sub. An underworld way of doing or getting things: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sub-rosa; but prob. ex submerged or subterranean.

sub-rosa. 'An underground route in prison,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. — subby, subway-willie. The middleman in an underworld deal: 1925, Leverage; extant.

submarine. A large dagga-cigarette: South Africa: since ca. 1915. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946, contrasts it with pill (a small one). Ex shape: cf. torpedo.—2. See:—

submarines. Doughnuts: tramps': since ca. 1918: as in Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Prob. suggested by the s. synonym, sinkers.

subside. To 'get out of the way; run away', esp. as imperative: 1859, Matsell; † by 1900. Euphemistic.

substantials. Tramps' c.: 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, '“The substanshuls”'—(meat and potatoes and bread and butter)'; ob.

suck, n. 'Wine or strong Drink': B.E., 1698, 'This is rum Suck, c. it is excellent Tipple'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Good Drink, Rum Bues or [Rum] Suck'; 1753, John Poulter, 'Tip us rum Suck: give us good Beer'; 1781, G. Parker; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890 (B & L) in England and by 1900 in U.S.A. One sucks it up.—2. Hence, rum: U.S.A. (—1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; † by 1900.—3. A breast pocket: 1821, D. Haggart, Life; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', 2nd ed.; † by 1890 (B & L). A perversion of sack, n., 1.

suck, v. To drink: 1767, implied in sucking cull; 1809, Andrewes; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; † by 1900.—2. To cheat (a person): U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; by 1900, no longer c. Cf. sucker.

suck, nap the. To become tipsy: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, '... She had completely napt the suck'; † by 1890. Ex nap, v., 4, and suck, n., 1.

suck a (or the) bamboo. See bamboo.

suck-casa. A public-house: 1859, H (suck-cassa); 1864, H, 3rd ed., where it is correctly spelt, and arguably classified as parlyaree; 1887, Baumann; by 1890 (B & L), costermongers' s. See suck, n., 1, and casa (at carser).

suck crib. A tavern: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; † by 1920. Cf. suck-casa.

suck in your guts! Shut up!: esp., convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Opposed to spill one's guts.

sucked. Drunken: 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Devilish drunk'; † by 1890. Ex suck, n., 1, or suck, nap the, or possibly suck, v.

sucker. 'A term applied by gamblers'—i.e., by professional gamblers (including card-sharpers)—'to a person that can be cheated at any game of cards,' Matsell, 1859; 1876, P. Farley, Criminals of America; 1881, The Man Traps of New York; 1890, B & L, 'A greenhorn, a gullible person, a dupe. A term much used by thieves and gambling cheats'; 1891, James Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 'Sucker: a victim of both tramps and criminals', i.e., whether of tramps or of criminals; by 1900, low s.; by 1910, gen. s. in U.S.A.: by 1920, s. in Britain. 'From sucker, a fish which is a synonym for stupidity, or from sucking, young, new to' (B & L), but imm. ex Western American s. sucker, 'a greenhorn; an awkward country fellow' (Bartlett, Americanisms, 1848).—2. Hence, a hanger-on: 1895, J. W. Sullivan, Tenement Tales of New York; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms, 'A sponger'; † by 1930.—3. Usually plural: 'Suckers —convicts recently admitted,' Hargan, 1935 : convicts' : C. 20. Ex sense 1, with a pun on the fish origin of that sense.—4. A vacuum cleaner : British : since ca. 1930. John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939. It works by suction.

sucker dough. Money obtained from credulous speculators : commercial underworld : Sept. 24, 1927, Lin Bonner, 'Cheaters', in Flynn's; extant. See the elements.

sucker list, 'names of people likely to fall for a blue-sky scheme' (Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering, 1931) : commercial s. rather than commercial c.

sucker stiff. A dud cheque passed either by an amateur or innocently by an honest citizen : since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. Cf. hoosier stiff.

suckey. See sucky.

sucking, adj. See sucking cull.

sucking bamboo. Opium-smoking : 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'The pipe being usually of bamboo' (Irwin); and see bamboo.

sucking cull. 'There is a sucking cull, that is, a drunken gentleman' : 1767, Sessions Papers, trial of Craycraft and Bourn; † by 1870. Cf. the 2nd 1754 reference in the next entry; also suck, v., 1.

sucky or suckey. 'Suckey, c. Drunkish, maudlin, half Seas over,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1754, trial of M'Daniel and others, in Select Trials, from 1741 to 1764, III, 'D—n me, says Kelly, there is the old Breeches-maker, he is sucky, lets scamp him'; Oct. 23, 1754, Sessions Papers, where sucky cull is a drunkard; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'The old woman having been used to get a little sucky now and then, he contrived to find out that foible, and to do her over in that way'; 1785, Grose ('drunk'); prob. s. by ca. 1790. Ex suck, n.

sucky cull. See preceding, 2nd 1754 reference.

suds. Beer : 1912, Alfred Henry Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'Schooner of suds—a glass of beer'; 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue; 1923, Jack Melone, Nature : Human and Real; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Now obsolete'. Cf. the s. term slops and swipes.

suds, in the : in a difficulty, sorely perplexed : is wrongly classified by B & L as c.

Suds Day, or s.d. Washing-day : 1859, Matsell : prob. not c., but s. Ex S.E. soap-suds.

suet. Strong liquor : 1859, Matsell; † by 1910.—2. Nitroglycerin : 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. oil.

suet-pudding. Dynamite : 1925, Leverage; extant. From suet-pudding, suet is extracted (see suet, 2).

suey bowl. 'A Chinese opium den,' BVB, 1942. Ex :—

suey pow. A sponge (or a rag) used to clean and cool the face of an opium-pipe bowl after smoking : drug addicts' (1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage; 1934, Convict) : j., not c. It is a Chinese term.

suffer. To be hanged : Australian : 1827, Peter Cunningham, Two Years in New South Wales; 1889, Charles White, Convict Life; ob. For the euphemism, cf. be unfortunate (q.v. at unfortunate, be).

suffier. That member of a gang of counterfeits who, in the guise of a drunkard, has the false coin and passes it on to the 'cousin' (or victim) brought in to the public-house by the verser : 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage.

sugan. See soogan.

sugar, n. Money : March 5, 1856, Sessions Papers (p. 617), '“I was too old-fashioned to keep any of the sugar about me”—I said, “Do you mean money?”—he said, “Yes”'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1893, Confessions of a Convict (U.S.A.), ed. by Julian Hawthorne; by 1900, s. in both England and U.S.A. 'Tis sweet to have it—in sufficient quantity. Hence :—2. A bribe; the bribe money : U.S.A. : 1925, Leverage; extant.—3. Powdered narcotic : drug traffic in U.S.A. : since ca. 1920. BVB. Cf. sweet stuff.

sugar, v. To bribe; to influence (a person) in a law case : C. 20 : 1909, Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, '“Sugar the chief” [of police]'; 1925, Leverage; March 16, 1929, Flynn's, Martin J. Porter, 'Trying to sugar me to spring you, eh?'

sugar daddy, 'a fatuous, elderly man supporting, or contributing to the support of a “gold digger” or other loose girl or woman' (Godfrey Irwin) : perhaps c. until ca. 1925 and then s., but prob. it has always been s. See sugar, n., 1.

suit. A gold watch : 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 'Suit, n. Watch and seals'—a suspect definition, occurring also in H, 1859; so too in Matsell as suite; 1890, B & L ('watch and seals'); † by 1900. For the semantics, cf. cloak.—2. Manner; means (of doing a thing); an imposition : 1812, J. H. Vaux (see give it to); ibid., 'In general synonymous with game . . . One species of imposition is said to be a prime suit, another a queer suit : a man describing the pretext he used to obtain money from another, would say, I draw'd him of a quid upon the suit of so and so, naming the ground of the application . . . A person having engaged with another on very advantageous terms to serve or work for him, will declare that he is upon a good suit. To use great submission and respect in asking any favour of another, is called giving it to him upon the humble suit'; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I (concerning Dutch Sam, the famous C. 19 pugilist), 'Not to be had upon any suit whatever!'; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890. Perhaps in allusion to suit in card-playing.—3. See :— suit and cloak. A 'good store of Brandy or any agreeable Liquor, let down Gutter-lane', B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who implies that the liquor is s. and c. only when it has been 'let down gutter lane' and starts to make one feel warm; 1797, Potter, Dict., where it is misprinted as s. and clock—repeated by Andrewes, 1809; † by 1860. It sets one up; it is as suit and cloak (later, overcoat) to one; it warms one against the cold.

suit of mourning, 'a pair of black eyes', is low s. and pugilistic s.—not (as in Egan's Grose, 1823) c.

suite. See suit, 1.

summer birds. Tramps and hoboes in general : 1925, Leverage; extant. In the winter, they go into doss-houses.

summer cabbage. See cabbage plant.

summer game. A game played merely for amusement or with another's money for that other's benefit : professional gamblers' : 1859, Matsell; extant. I.e., a pleasant one.

sun; or circle. A large auger; a large bit (instrument) : 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Ex the shape of the essential part.

sun-burnt, 'gonorrhoea'd', a C. 18 term, is either c. or, more prob., low s. A New Canting Dict., 1725.—2. The same applies to 'having many male children' (Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811).

Sunday best. A vest: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

Sunday take. Proceeds from worthless cheques passed on a Sunday: forgers': since ca. 1920. Maurer, 1941. See take, n., 1.

sundge is a misprint in Head, The English Rogue, for snudge.

sundial. A photograph: 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life (p. 272); † by 1930. Punning s. dial, a person's face.

sundowner. 'A tramp who will not work,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Prob. ex Australian s.

sunrise, v.i. 'To be arrested without charge, held in jail overnight, and then ordered to leave town,' Ersine, 1933; extant. The held man leaves soon after sunrise.

supe is less general than super, 1 ('a watch': time-piece), and derives from it: 1904, F & H, who imply that it is already ob.; by 1915, †. A supe (or super) and slang is a watch and chain.—2. See soup, 1.

super. See souper. Nevertheless, super is the usual spelling even of this sense ('a watch').—2. A superintendent of police: c. and police s.: 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; by 1900, no longer c. at all.—3. Supervision: 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life (p. 272); ob.

super, bang a. To steal a watch by breaking the ring: since the 1890's. (Hutchins Hapgood, Autobiography, 1904.) See souper and bang, v.

super and slang. See souper and supe.

super-screwing, n. Watch-stealing: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; extant. See souper and screw, v., 2.

super-super bastard. An invidiously severe, mean, bullying warder: convicts': since ca. 1910. James Spenser, Limey Breaks In, 1934.

super-twister; super-twisting. A watch-stealer; watch-stealing: 1886, A. Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective (the former); 1904, Life in Sing Sing, 'Super-Twister'. Pickpocket who steals watches'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, Leverage; extant. See the elements.

supouch. A hostess, i.e., of an inn or tavern: 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Su-Pouch, an Hostess or Landlady'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (erroneously supough); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890 (B & L). Perhaps a perversion of support: cf. Yorkshire dial. support, 'nourishment'.

suppelar, 'a hat': not c., but parlyaree: H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks, 1938. Origin?

supper customer. One who goes to a gambling saloon, not to play but to partake of supper: professional gamblers': 1859, Matsell; by 1880, coll.

supper sneak. A burglary, committed while the occupants of the house are at their evening meal: C. 20: Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926, 'This is about the time of the year for a good "supper sneak"; it's dark when they are at dinner now'.

sure ken. A house well known for its charity, esp. to beggars: 1842, An Exposure of the Im- positions Practised by Vagrants; † by 1920. See ken, 1.

sure-thing grafter. A criminal (or near-criminal) that takes no risks of a prison-sentence: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'There are several kinds of sure-thing grafters. Some are crooked gamblers, some are plain stool-pigeons, some are discouraged thieves who continue to graft [see graft, v., 2] but take no risks'; ibid., 'The sure-thing grafter. He is a man who continues to steal, but wants above everything to keep out of stir, where he has spent many years'; ob. See grafter.

sure-thing guy (or man). A gamblers' confederate: C. 20: by 1928, the latter was also circus s. (The White Tops, July-Aug., 'Circus Glossary'); and by 1937 the former was gen. s. (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 27). He tells the 'suckers' that they are 'on a sure thing'.

surtout(e). To see again; regard regretfully: rare term, found only in Song XVII in A New Canting Dict., 1725, 'I surtoute every Walk, which we used to pass, | And couch me down weeping, and kiss the cold grass'. Ex tout, v.: for the sur, cf. the semantics of the S.E. 'see over again'.

surveyor. A locator for a gang of burglars: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. pathfinder and prospector.

sus; sus, for; for suspect. Suspicion, or a suspected person; under suspicion, for (or as) a suspect: C. 20. James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936, '“What you nick [i.e., arrest] me for? Sus?” “You heard.” “Well, I don't give a damn for a sus. I ain't got a light on me incriminating and I'm not under the Act”'; ibid., 'I want you to drop the charge of me being a sus'; extant.

susie or suzie; or capitalised. Sixpence: showmen's and cheapjacks' s. Philip Allingham, Cheap-jack, 1934. See Partridge, 1937.—2. A prostitute: U.S.A.: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. doll, moll, molly.

suspect for. See sus.

suspence, one in a deadly. 'A man just turned off at the gallows': ca. 1770–1840: prob. s. (? journalistic), not c. With a pun on anxiety and lit. hanging.

suss. To suspect: since ca. 1920. Partridge, 1938. Cf. sus.

sutler. 'He that pockets up, Gloves, Knives, Handkerchiefs, Snuff and Tobacco-boxes, and all the lesser Moveables,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. Ex the S.E. sense, 'one that follows an Army, to sell Meat, Drink, &c.', B.E.

suzie. See susie.

swad, n.; swadkin. A soldier: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed. (both forms); 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, where it is misprinted swag; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (both forms); 1798, Stephen Burroughs, Memoirs (Hanover, N.H., U.S.A.), 'Tales told to your brother swads' (glossed as 'A cant word signifying soldiers'); 1812, J. H. Vaux (swod); † by ca. 1860, when swaddie or swoddie, or -y, > usual—but were s., not c. Swadkin is a diminutive of swad: but what of swad? It is prob. a specialization of S.E. swad, 'a country bumpkin'.

swad, v.; hence swadder. To steal, to be a thief; (swadder) a thief: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the n.

swad(-)gill. A soldier: 1812, J. H. Vaux (swod-gill); † by 1860. See swad, n., and gill, 1.

swadder. 'These Swadders or Peddlers bee not all evyll, but of an indifferent behaviour. These stand in great awe of the upright men, for they have often both wares and money of them. But for as much as they seeke gayne unlawfully against the lawes and statutes of this noble realme, they are well worthy to be registered among the number of vacabonds; and undoubtedly I have hadde some of them brought before me . . . as malefactors, for bryberinge and stealinge. And nowe of late it is a greate practes of the upright man, when he hath gotten a botye, to bestowe the same upon a packe-full of wares, and so goeth a time for his pleasure, because he would lyve with out suspition': thus Harman in 1566; app. † by 1620. Prob. of same origin as the next term.—2. See swad, v.

swaddler. The 'swaddlers', according to Richard Head in The English Rogue, 1665, are the ninth order of canters or rogues; according to B.E., 1698, the tenth; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The Tenth Order of the Canting Tribe; Rogues, who, not content to rob and plunder, beat and barbarously abuse, and often murder the Passengers'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood—but the term was † by 1820 at latest. Ex swaddle, to beat with a stick—an † colloquialism dating from C. 16.—2. A wretched Methodist preacher on the high roads; as he preaches, his accomplices pick-pocket the assembled crowd: 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1895. Possibly suggested by sense 1; more prob., direct ex s. sense, 'a Methodist'.

swaddy. A soldier: 1812, J. H. Vaux (swoddy); 1821, P. Egan, Life in London (swaddy); 1823, Egan's Grose (swoddy); 1831, W. T. Moncrieff, Van Diemen's Land (swaddy); 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, Mysteries of London, I; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1855, low s. A diminutive of swad, n.

swadkin. See swad, n.

swag, n. 'Swagg . . . A shop,' R. Head, The English Rogue (glossary), 1665; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Rum Swag, c. [A shop] full of rich goods'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1714, Alex. Smith; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Milling of Swaggs, that is, breaking of Shops, or Warehouses'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (swagg); † by ca. 1820. App. of origin independent from that of sense 2, which prob. derives ex dial. swag (or swack), 'a quantity or lot'.—2. Goods: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Any sort of Goods: A Swag.—Great many Goods: A rum Swag.—A few Goods: A quer Swag'; 1753, Potter, who gives it in the pl.; 1785, Grose, 'Rum swag, a shop full'—i.e., a shopful—'of rich goods'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'Goods or property of any kind'; 1851, Mayhew; by 1890 (B & L), costermongers' s.; in late C. 19–20, a peddler's or a beggar's stock. Prob. ex Scottish swag or swack, a quantity, a considerable number (of articles). But possibly sense 3 was earlier than sense 2 and therefore its origin: if that be so, sense 3 derives ex the Scottish swack: the heap of goods (stolen).—3. Hence, a burglar's booty; prob. implied, from the beginning, in sense 2, i.e., from before 1741; Jan. 1794, Sessions Papers, p. 241, of a bundle of stolen clothes; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Plant the swag'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Booty . . . of any kind . . . except money'; ibid., more specifically 'wearing apparel, linen, piece-goods, &c., . . . in order to distinguish them from plate, jewellery, or other more portable articles'; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, II (pickpockets' booty); 1823, Bee, 'Store of money'; 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, II; 1831, W. T. Moncrieff, Van Diemen's Land; 1838, Dickens; 1841, H. D. Miles; not yet †, but s. in C. 20 in Britain. Current in U.S.A. by 1845 (The National Police Gazette, Nov. 11, other early records being The Ladies' Repository, 1848, and State Prison Life, 1871) and perhaps c. there until ca. 1910 (Flynt, 1901, 'Plunder other than cash').—4. A misprint for swad: 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue.—5. (Ex sense 3.) 'A swag of any thing, signifies emphatically a great deal. To have knap'd a good swag, is to have got a good booty,' J. H. Vaux, 1812; 1831, Sessions Papers; 1839, Brandon; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; by 1860 (H, 3rd ed.), low s.—6. (Ex sense 3.) A card-sharpers' winnings or booty: 1828, G. Smeeton, Doings in London; † by 1900.—7. (Ex 3.) Money, share of money, payment dues: 1833, W. Leman Rede, The Rake's Progress, 'I say, Ned, there's your swag, (giving money) and thank you for the customer'; 1837, James Mudie, The Felonry of New South Wales, 'A supply of the "swag", as convicts call their ill-gotten cash'; 1839, Brandon; 1844, Sessions Papers; 1859, H; † by 1900.—8. (Ex sense 3.) That which contains, covers, or constitutes the outer appearance of the booty: 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime, 'What have you done with your swag?' i.e. your bundle or roll, asked Prime'; by 1890, low s.—9. (Cf. senses 3 and 6.) 'The stock of bad money (the "swag")', in a prison report of 1851, recorded at p. 538 of The Prison Chaplain: A Memoir of John Clay, 1861; extant.—10. Booty of silk: U.S.A.: 1881 (see swag-getter); 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, Glossary, 'Swag, plunder other than cash, such as silks, jewelry, etc.'; extant. A special application of sense 3 (cf. ref. of 1812).—11. (Prob. ex sense 2.) Among tramps and beggars, 'Some earn a precarious livelihood selling "swag"—flowers, mats, brooms,' Joseph Augustin, The Human Vagabond, 1933: late C. 19–20.—12. (Ex sense 3.) 'Contraband articles not allowed to be in the hands of inmates,' Hargan, 1935: U.S. convicts': since ca. 1920.

swag, v. To carry off (esp. the booty): Dec. 5, 1857, The Times, 'I am to swag (carry) it', cited by 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 2nd ed.; 1890, B & L; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, 'More lucrative than "swagging" copper from the docks' (U.S.A.); slightly ob. Prob. ex sense 3 of the n.—2. (Hence ?), to carry (counterfeit coin): 1858 (see pitch, v., 2); 1940 (see swag a kangar); extant.—3. To rob; plunder: 1887, Baumann; † by 1920. Prob. ex sense 1.

swag a kangar. 'Swagging a Kangar means carrying a bit of tobacco,' Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940: convicts': since ca. 1920. See swag, v., 2, and kangar.

swag, carry the. See carry the swag.

swag, dead. See dead swag.

swag chovey; swag-chovey bloke. 'Swag Chovey Bloak—a marine store dealer, who buys stolen property': 1839, Brandon, who thus implies swag chovey, an illicit marine store, a fence's shop; 1857, Snowden; 1890, B & L, 'a receiver's place' and, for the latter, as in Brandon; 1904, F & H; † by 1910. See swag, n., 3, and chovey.

swag(-)cove. A packman, a pedlar: 1821,

D. Haggart; † by 1900. Lit., a bundle man.—2. A 'fence' (receiver): U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910.

swag-getter. A thief specializing in the theft of silk: 1881, A. Pinkerton, Professional Thieves and the Detective; extant. Cf. swag, n., 3, 10; for the use of getter, cf. toy-getter.

swag in. To cause (a person) to enter secretly: since ca. 1910. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Prob. ex swag, v., 1.

swag Johnny. 'They're nearly all swag Johnnies; they rob [street] cars an' houses an' sell the stuff they find,' J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901; ob. See swag, n., 3.

swag-seller, 'a pedlar'—late C. 19–20—is s., not c.

swag-shop. A general warehouse: itinerant vendors' s. (esp. in London) rather than c.: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; W. H. Davies, Beggars, 1909. Ex swag, n., 2 or 5—or both.—2. The shop or depot of a 'fence': ? ca. 1800–1910. Postulated by H., 1859; B & L, 1890. Ex swag, n., 3.

swagg. See swag, n., 1.

swagger. 'Intermediary who buys the loot from [smash-and-grab] bandits and sells it again to various fences,' R. Thurston Hopkins, Life and Death at the Old Bailey, 1935: since ca. 1920. Ex swag, n., 3.

swaggie. 'An Australian tramp who works,' Leverage, 1925; extant. An adaptation of the Australian s. sense, 'any tramp' (but he certainly doesn't work).

swagging, vbl n. 'Tramping in the outback,' Baker, 1942: Australian tramps': C. 20; by 1920, also rural s. I.e., carrying one's swag.

swags. See swag, n., 2.

swagsman. 'One who carries the booty after a burglary': 1859, H; 1876, P. Farley (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1895, A. Griffiths, Criminals I Have Met; ob. See swag, n., 3, and cf. swag, v., 1. swallow the anchor. See anchor, swallow the.

swallow the sours. See sours, swallow the.

swamp, v.; hence swamper, a betrayer. 'Swamp, v., To betray a pal,' Leverage, 1925; extant. He's sunk.—2. To seize; to arrest (racketeers): 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life (to grab hold of a person); 1930, Burke, 'Our motor goes hay wire and we get swamped by the feds'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1938, Castle; extant.

swamper. One who 'cleans up' the bar-room: tramps': since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A porter or cleaner in a saloon, cookhouse or dining-room'; extant. Ex swilling it with water.—2. See swamp.—3. A tramp; esp. one who often has his swag carried by a teamster: Australian tramps': since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. Perhaps because he spends his money on drink and is in no condition to carry it.

swap or swop, 'to exchange or barter one article for another', is classified in Egan's Grose, 1823, as Irish c.: it has never been c., nor is it particularly Irish.

swart pak, the. (The) police; policeman: South Africa: since ca. 1870. Letter of May 23, 1946, from C. A. Wittstock; The Cape Times, June 3, 1946, article by Alan Nash. Afrikaans: lit., 'the black pack' or 'the black suit'—straight from Dutch.

swatch. 'A sample offered the "fence" by a thief,' BVB, 1942: late C. 19–20. A corruption of swag, n., 3.

swatchel cove. A man that gives a Punch and Judy performance: not c., but showmen's s. H., 1859. Cf. schwassle-box, q.v.

swatting flies. 'Begging from citizens who are gazing into space or idly watching the crowd from a curbstone': tramps': since ca. 1910. IA, 1931. Such citizens, crowding like flies, deserve to be swatted: so thinks the tramp.

sweat, n. An attempt or grab at; a share of: 1855, John Lang, The Forger's Wife, 'A sweat at the silver swag'; app. † by 1900. Cf. s. effort, 'an attempt': strenuous effort, in a gallant attempt, produces sweat.—2. 'The third degree treatment (violence applied)'; 'a severe punishment in prison': U.S.A.: C. 20: 1901 (implied in sweat-box) and even earlier (in sweating); 1925, Leverage.

sweat, v. 'Sweat one's duds, to (thieves), to pawn one's clothes, that is, extract money from them' (1890, B & L): ca. 1816, Anon., The Night before Larry Was Stretched; † by 1904 (F & H). As one sweats coin (see B & L's definition).—2. To unsolder by applying fire or a blow-pipe: 1909, Ware; extant. To cause the metal to 'run'.—3. To force (a suspect) to confess: U.S.A.: prob. since 1880's (for cf. sweat-box); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1928, J. K. Ferrier, 'Crime in the United States' in his Crooks and Crime; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To give the third degree'; extant. Proleptic.

sweat board. 'Concrete mixing by hand,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1920. IA, 1931. It causes one to sweat freely.

sweat-box. Recorded in 1888 (D.A.E.), sweat box is a 'cell where prisoners are confined on arrest previous to being brought up for examination before the magistrate,' B & L, 1890; 1891, Maitland, of American cells where the police apply third-degree methods; 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story (id.); 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, p. 102, footnote, 'A prisoner is put in the sweat-box when he is browbeaten by the police in order to make him divulge secrets in his possession'; ibid., Glossary, 'In New York this is called the "Third Degree"'; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms, has sweat-house, but this form is not c.; 1904, F & H (following B & L); 1915, F. Froest & G. Dilnot, The Crime Club; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; since ca. 1925, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946).

sweat-cloth. The cloth on which thimble-riggers or shell-workers operate their swindle: 1891, Maitland; extant. Cf. sweat table.

sweat cure. Abstinence from drugs: addicts': since ca. 1920. BVB. Cf. sweat it out, to endure 'the sweat and tears'.

sweat duds. See duds, sweat.

sweat-house. See sweat-box, ref. of 1903.

sweat it out; hence, sneeze it out. To try to break a drug habit by total abstinence: addicts': resp. since ca. 1910, ca. 1925. (The former > s. by ca. 1940.) BVB. 'Blood and sweat, toil and tears.'

sweat(-)pad, or one word; usually pl. A pancake: convicts': since ca. 1925. Ersine. Playfully derogatory: 'cons' delight in them.

sweat-room or torture chamber. A prison, a hospital, where an addict is denied narcotics: addicts': since the 1920's. Ex the agony endured.

sweat shop (occ. hyphenated or combined). A bullet-proof lorry (truck cab): since the early 1920's: racketeers', esp. bootleggers' c. >, ca. 1935, truck- (anglicé lorry-)drivers' s. Doris McFerran, 'Truck Drivers Have a Word for It'—in The American Mercury of April 1941. Most such trucks are ill-ventilated.

sweat table. A gaming table: Jan. 16, 1847, The National Police Gazette, (of a certain dive) 'It is the resort of . . . black servants . . . proceeds of many a stolen towel and silver spoon . . . here staked on a "sweat table"': † by 1900. Cf. sweat-cloth and perhaps the S.E. phrase to sweat coins.

sweater. 'One who treats, by chemical or mechanical means, genuine coins with the object of extracting a minute portion of precious metal from each, afterwards restoring the coins into general circulation,' J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights in Criminal Matters, 1923; extant—but, by 1930, police s.

sweather. A bribe: 1925, Leverage; extant. Yiddish?

sweating. Punishment in closed box-cell without air or light: j. rather than c.: 1891, J. C. Powell, American Siberia—the prison at Dannemora.

sweatshop. See sweat shop.

Sweeney (or Sweeny) Tod (or Todd), the. The Flying Squad: since the late 1920's. In, e.g., Daily Express, March 25, 1938; F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938; and James Curtis, What Immortal Hand, 1939. Rhyming. Originated in and by the underworld, it had, by ca. 1940, become gen. rhyming s.

sweeny. Usually pl., sweenies, police of the Flying Squad: since ca. 1930. In, e.g., James Curtis, They Drive by Night, 1938, 'The sweenies drew up alongside'. Perhaps ex Sween(e)y, a typical Irish surname: there are so many Irishmen in the police force (cf. the American shamus). But prob. ex Sweeney Tod; cf. :—2. A credulous fool: U.S.A.: C. 20; by 1935, s. Ersine.

sweep, v. 'To "sweep" (steal from) a barge': 1867, J. Greenwood, Unsentimental Journeys; ob. Cf. sweep the snow.

sweep (with both barrels), take a. To inhale narcotics: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. Both barrels: both nostrils.—Prob. suggested by snow, 3–5, or by one of its compounds.

sweep the snow. 'The rascal who steals nothing but white clothes from the clothes-line, or, as he calls it, "sweeps the snow",' Robert A. Fuller, Recollections of a Detective, 1912; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; extant. By a pun: see snow, sense 1.

sweeps. Proceeds of a burglary, a robbery: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. S.E. sweepings.

sweet, n. A 'gangster girl' (Rose, 1934): not c. at all!

sweet, adj. 'Easy to be taken in': 1725, A New Canting Dict.; by 1780, s. Semantics: pleasantness, a sweet task.—2. 'Expert, dexterous, clever': 1725, A Canting Dict.—cf. sweet as your hand; 1785, Grose; † by 1890. With the easiness or ease (cf. sense 1) that comes from skill and practice.

sweet as your hand. 'Sweet's your Hand; said of one who has the Knack of stealing by Sleight of Hand,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose (sweet's . . .); † by 1890. An elaboration of sweet, adj., 2.

sweet back. 'Hobo sheik who is only sampling hobo life,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1920. For him, life is sweet; he can lie on his back and know that all is well.

sweet man or sweetman. A pimp, a procurer: C. 20. BVB, 1942. In his advances, he is sweet.

sweet Margaret (or Marguerite). A cigarette: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. The former may rhyme; the latter is prob. ironic on the smell.

sweet on (or upon), be. 'To coakse, wheedle, entice or allure,' B.E., 1698; this sense of the phrase may, as B.E. claims, be c.: a nuance that, persisting until ca. 1830, is the origin of the coll. sense, 'to be in love with or amorously fond of'.

sweet pea. Applied to 'anything easy': since ca. 1920; by 1935, s. Ersine. Cf. sweet, adj., 1.

sweet stuff. Powdered narcotic: drug traffic: since ca. 1910. BVB. Doubly sweet to take.

sweeten, n. An error generated by the following entry in Egan's Grose, 1823: 'Sweeten. A gawler. To give money to a beggar. Cant', where the entry should have been printed. 'Sweeten a gawler. To give . . .', the error arising from an unintelligent reading of Haggart (see gawler).

sweeten, v. 'To decoy, draw in, and Bite' (i.e., swindle): 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1870. By flattery and other sweet discourse and attentions.—2. Hence, to appease or satisfy: mostly Scottish: 1821, D. Haggart, Life (see gawler); 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890.—3. To bribe: esp. convicts': since ca. 1890 in England, but since ca. 1810 in Australia (1847, A. Harris, by implication in Settlers and Convicts); and throughout C. 20 in U.S.A. (A. H. Lewis, The Boss, 1903); 1933, George Ingram, Stir; extant. Cf. Fr. douceur, 'a tip', and sweetener, 4.

sweetener; sweetner. A guinea-dropper; a dropper of any gold coin: 1698, B.E.; 1708, the author of the Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., explains that these rogues invite the 'victim' to a tavern to 'celebrate' his lucky find and draw him into cards or dicing or illicit devices; he adds that this trick is falling rapidly into disuse—but its decay was only temporary; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (51st Order of Canters); 1752, Villainy Unmask'd (a variation); 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. Ex sweeten.—2. Hence, loosely: a cheat, a sharper: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1752, Villainy Unmask'd; 1785, Grose; † by 1860.—3. A gamesters' decoy: 1714, T. Lucas, Memoirs of Gamesters; app. † by 1800.—4. A bribe: since ca. 1890 in England, as, e.g., in Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932, but since ca. 1810, in Australia, as in A. Harris, Settlers and Convicts, 1847, 'The handsome "sweeteners" (bribes) which old D—'s profits enabled him to give the constables'. See sweeten, v., 3.

sweetening. An occ. variant of sweetening lay.—2. Swindling: prob. contemporaneous with sweeten, v.—3. Guinea-dropping: prob. co-existent with sweetner, 1, which is recorded first in 1698; 1735, Anon., Tricks of the Town Laid Open; 1747, 'Guinea dropping, or Sweetning, is a paltry little Cheat, that was recommended to the World about sixty Years ago', the trick consisting in the dropping of a coin by A., the claiming of a half-share by the confederate, B., the suggestion by A.

that the share really belongs to C., the proposed dupe, who is then inveigled into playing cards or into dicing, whereat he loses money to the confederates. That is the 17th–18th century form. The C. 19 form is this:—A counterfeit guinea (or sovereign) is dropped; the dropper sells his share in it to an innocent passer-by, who thus loses half a guinea and gains a worthless memento of his gullibility.

sweetening lay. Theophilus Lucas, Memoirs of Gamesters, 1714, 'The Sweetning-Lay, which is decoying young Gentlemen to be bit' or cheated 'by old Sharpers'; 1718, N. B., A Compleat Collection of Remarkable Tryals, II; † by 1860. I.e., sweeten, v., 1 + lay, n., 2.

sweethearting the slavey. The practice of blandishing a female servant into confidences and the giving of useful information: 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, 'To obtain the requisite knowledge of the interior of a place which is "spotted" for [burglary] operations, the game of "sweethearting the slavey" is gone through by the best-looking member of the gang'; app. † by 1930.

sweetman. See sweet man.

sweetner; sweetning. See sweetener and sweetening and sweetening lay.

sweets. (A man's) sweetheart: 1929, Givens (see quot'n at boat, n., 2); June 7, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Kernôt; by 1935, (low) s.

sweet's your hand. See sweet as . . .

sweetstuff lay, the. A variant of sweethearting the slavey: 1888, J. Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern (p. 69); † by 1930.

sweft, v. To steal: 1925, Leverage; extant. A blend of swipe + heft.

swell, n., 'a gentleman', 'a well-dressed man', seems to have been c. until ca. 1815: Dec. 1786, Sessions Papers, p. 92; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, Vaux, who gives the variant rank swell. (The sense 'a boxer'—The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul, 1822—is suspect.) For the semantics, cf. nob, a distinguished person.—2. A clever thief: U.S.A.: C. 20. Leverage, 1925. Perhaps short for swell mobsman.

swell, adj. 'Any thing remarkable for its beauty or elegance, is called a swell article; so a swell crib is a genteel house; a swell mollisher, an elegantly-dressed woman, &c.' J. H. Vaux, 1812; 1821, J. Burrowes, 'The prime bloods and swell mots'; by 1840, at latest, it was s. Ex the n.—2. (Of persons) stylish; gentlemanly, ladylike: 1810, The Spirit of the Public Journals, 'My great swell pris'ner and his pal are flown' (O.E.D.); 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, 'You may promise yourself a treat—it's a regular swell night'; by 1840, s. Ex the n.

swell booster. A high-class or expert shop-lifter: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. See booster.

swell broad cove. The pl. is thus defined in (app. the earliest record) Pierce Egan's Life in London, 1821, as 'elegantly dressed card-players', actually card-sharpers; 'also possessing a good address, with other requisites befitting them to keep company with gentlemen'; † by 1900. See broads and cf. broadsmán.

swell fencer, 'a street salesman of needles' (H, 1860), is street s., not c.

swell head. See swellhead.

swell ken. A gentleman's house: 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; 1895, Caminada; † by 1940. See ken.

swell-mob, adj. Belonging to, dealing with, acting for, or characteristic of 'the swell mob': Aug. 1835, Sessions Papers (p. 617), 'Mr. Murphy, the swell-mob lawyer'; extant. Ex:—

swell mob, the. Such pickpockets as, to escape detection, dress and behave like respectable people: 1830, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, 1824–33, VI, trial of John Hemmings; 1836, Marryat, Midshipman Easy (O.E.D.); 1837, James Mudie, The Felonry of New South Wales, 'Desperate and practised burglars, habitual and experienced receivers . . . artful and designing swindlers, skilful forgers . . . and a sprinkling of . . . the swell mob'; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad; 1839, W. A. Miles; 1843, W. J. Moncrieff, The Scamps of London; 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1858, Dickens; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1862, Mayhew, London Labour, IV; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham (U.S.A.); 1889, Charles White, Convict Life; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Expert pocket thieves'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches in New York; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, Brown, 'A swell mob—A gang of pickpockets with good financial backing'; and in scores of later books and periodicals, as, e.g., in Jim Phelan, In the Can, 1939. The term seems to have been current in U.S.A. by 1845: The National Police Gazette, Sept. 13, 1845. See swell, adj., and mob, 2: lit., 'the fashionable or well-dressed gang'.

swell mobs. A 'swell mobsman' (q.v.): 1884, James Greenwood, The Little Ragamuffins, '“I should ha' . . . gone in for aggravatin' yer by callin' yer swell-mobs, and that”'; app. † by 1920.

swell mobsman. A member of the swell mob: 1843, Sessions Papers (Jan. 6, trial of Elias Collis); 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, I, 484; 1853, Dr Guy, 'Rescued from the Beggars', in C. J. Talbot's Meliora, 2nd Series; 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1867, James Greenwood, Humphrey Dyot; 1872, J. Diprose; 1880, An Ex-Convict, Our Convict System; 1884, Eighteen Months' Imprisonment; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1904, F & H; 1924, Stanley Scott, The Human Side of Crook and Convict Life; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1938, Percy J. Smith, Con Man; by 1943 (Black), ob. in England.

swell mollisher. See swell, adj.

swell prig. A well-dressed thief: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). See swell, adj., and prig, n.

swell spiel. Confidence trickster's line of talk: c. of ca. 1900–25, then low s. (G. C. Henderson, Keys, 1924.)

Swell Street, in. 'A family man who appears to have plenty of money, and makes a genteel figure, is said by his associates to be in swell street,' J. H. Vaux, 1812; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed., implicatively) it was low s. Opp. Queer Street.

swell-top. 'Supposed to be in genteel society, and commits depredations upon the aristocracy': Nov. 1870, The Broadway, 'Among Thieves'; † by 1910. Ex swell, n.

swellhead or swell(-)head. 'A bloated drunkard': either c. or, more prob., low s. of ca. 1840–80. E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851. Ex his swollen features. The sense 'railroad conductor' is railroad s. of C. 20: Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

swi. (The game of) two-up: New Zealand and Australian: since ca. 1910: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter); 1942, Baker, who spells it swy; extant. Hence swi(swy)-up school, a two-up school (Baker). Ex Ger. zwei, 'two'.—2. Hence, a two-years' prison-sentence: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942 (swy).—3. The Australian sense 'a florin' is low s.

swift, n. A horse: C. 20. Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926, but valid, here, for ca. 1902, '... An old "swift" tied to a hitching rack. I had no saddle and it was a tough ride'; by 1930, ob. Prob. ironic, in comparison with a rattler; but perhaps appreciative, in comparison with Shanks's pony.—2. A skilful, rapidly working thief: 1925, Leverage; extant.

swifter. A skilful, clever pickpocket: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf.—perhaps ex—swift, 2; but cf. sweft.—2. A runaway, an escaper: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. Duffy, Nurmi, Paddock—and swift, 1.

swig-cove. A swig-man: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910.

swig-man or swigman; usually pl.; in C. 16—early 17, frequently written swygman. Thus summarily the earliest mention: 'A swygman goeth with a Pedlers pack,' Awdeley, 1562; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'Like unto [an "Irish toyle"] in conditions is a Swigman or Pedler, carying a pack behinde him in stead of a wallet: their trades are all one, saving that the Swigman is somewhat better in behaviour, though little differing in honesty. They both stand in feare of the Upright-man and are forced oftentimes to pay him toale out of their packes'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1688, Holme, 'Cheaters by changing of wears', wares; 1698, B.E., 'Swigmen, c. the 13th Rank of the Canting Crew, carrying small Habberdashery-Wares about, pretending to sell them to colour their Roguery'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (swiggmen); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood, but the term was prob. † by 1820. Is this a thinning of S.E. swagman? I.e., of C. 14 (?–15 and 16) swag, 'a bulgy bag'?

swigsman. A variant (Sinks of London, 1848) of the preceding.

swim. "A good swim", a good run of luck, a long time out of the police's clutches': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; extant. Cf. swim, in the, 2.

swim, in the, 'in the know': perhaps orig. (— 1884) c., but prob. always s. Arthur Griffiths, Chronicles of Newgate, II, 455.—2. Hence, among thieves, 'a long time out of the hands of the police', F & H, 1904; extant. Cf. swim.

swim for it, make. 'To put a fellow up to his arm-pits, or, to make him swim for it, or To be put'—read, to put—'in a hole'—these three mean, to cheat a companion out of his share of plunder': 1839, Brandon; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), at make; 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H; 1904, F & H; ob. Cf. well, n. and v.; whence, prob., it derives by association of ideas.

swimmer, n. 'A Counterfeit (old) Coyn,' B.E., 1698: app. ca. 1690–1830, for it appears as late as in Egan's Grose, 1823. Prob. ex its lightness.—2. 'A ship. I shall have a swimmer; a cant phrase used by thieves to signify that they will be sent on board the tender' (on the way to a convict ship): 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A guard-ship, or tender'; † by 1887 (Baumann). It 'swims' in the sea.

swimmer, v. 'A thief who escapes prosecution, when before a magistrate on condition of being sent on board the receiving-ship, to serve His Majesty, is said by his pals, to be swimmered': 1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan's Grose, 1823; † by 1890 (B & L). Ex the n., sense 2.

swimmer, have a. See swimmer, n.

swindle; swindler. These were, at first, c. terms, the latter occurring in Sessions Papers, July 1775; but by 1780 at latest they had been adopted into S.E. 'This term is derived from the German, in which language schwindel(n) signifies merely to cheat. It was introduced into use in this Country about the end of the last German war, by means of that conversance which many of the lower class of our countrymen had with the fraudulent and deceitful in Germany, and a number of Jews who set up the business about 1762. It was at first a cant term, and used to signify the obtaining of good credit, or money, upon feigned notes, or other false pretences. It has since had a legislative adoption, being parliamentarily recognized by an Act for the prevention of it; and swindle, therein, is made to signify the same thing in Law-language which it did in Cant or Flash dialogue,' George Parker, A View of Society, 1781 (Vol. II, pp. 28–9). swindling gloak. 'A cheating, dirty fellow—an impostor—a cheat': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. See gloak.

swing, v. (Of a building; e.g., a jeweller's, a bank) to yield booty (to a burglar, a robber): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'I got a sneak on a jug and it swung heavy . . . stole a large sum of money'; ob.

swing off, 'to die by hanging', is not c., but general prison s. of ca. 1880–1920. Donald Lowrie, prisoner at San Quentin in 1901–11, has it in My Life in Prison, 1912. Ex English swing (for it).

swing-tail, 'a hog', may have been c., but much more prob. was s.: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. In Potter, 1797, it appears as sling-tail, which is almost certainly erroneous.

swing the pan. To cook oneself something good (esp. beef-steak or cutlets) in the frying-pan: beggars' and tramps': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; extant. The frying-pan is swung slowly over an open fire.

swing under, v.i. 'No yegg had ever swung under'—glossed thus by Godfrey Irwin, 'Climbed under a train to ride the rods or brake beans'—'and traveled from town to town without a ticket who knew better than did the Ghost how to make soup' (nitroglycerin), A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 1912; extant. Cf. go underneath.

swinger. A convict transported for rick-burning: Australian and Norfolk Island convicts': ca. 1835–60. Price Warung, Tales of the Early Days, 1894. Ex the suppositious Capt. Swing, rick-burner.—2. A man's jacket: 1889 (sec cell); ob. It swings as he walks.

swinging the stick, n. See bludgeon business, the.

swipe, n. Theft; robbery: July 27, 1929, Flynn's, W. E. Ulrich, 'Something for Kitty' 'No rough stuff like the Mrs Tillingford swipe'; extant. Ex:—

swipe, v. To steal; esp. to pilfer: 1895,

J. W. Sullivan, Tenement Tales of New York (latter nuance); 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, " 'Ev'ry year there's just so much dough lyin' around loose to be swiped, an' if it ain't swiped it's put down in the profit column' "; 1900, Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; by 1903 (Clapin) it was also college s.; by 1910, gen s. both in U.S.A. and in Britain. For the semantics, cf. strike, v., 1.—2. To assault (a person): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; extant. Ex Eng. s.

swiping is the vbl n. of the preceding (Flynt, 1903).

swished, be or get. To be or get married: perhaps c., but prob. low s.: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1893, No. 747; † by 1900. To be 'beaten'.

switch, n. The switch is that racket wherein, at a jeweller's, one substitutes worthless for genuine precious stones: British and American: C. 20. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938; Flynn's, Jan. 28, 1939, Frank Wrentmore; extant. One 'switches them over'.—2. The n. corresponding to sense 4 of the v.: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant.

switch, v. To steal by snatching: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'Some of [the N.Y.C. pickpockets] are so grasping that they even "switch" the gold spectacles of old men and women'; 1903 (see fobbing); 1925, Leverage, 'To exchange one article with another with intent to steal the one taken'; extant.—2. V.i., to depart: 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, a hobo swindler speaking, 'Well, I got to be switchin' or I'd sing it to you . . . keep happy—so long'; slightly ob. Ex railroad j.—3. As in Switching. Transferring; passing to another', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; by 1910, no longer c. Ex railroad j.—4. Among card-sharpers, 'in cutting playing cards, to replace the deck in its original order,' Ersine: since ca. 1910.

switch and bone. A telephone: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1910. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

switch artist. One who operates 'the switch': 1927, Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster; extant.

switch game, the. A variant of 'the switch': C. 20. In, e.g., Mary Sullivan, My Double Life, 1939.

switched, be or get. A low s. variant of swished . . .

switcher. A hangman: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Triumph', 'Prepare the switcher to dead book [i.e., to hang] the whack [or batch of convicts]'; app. † by 1890. He switches them into eternity.—2. A pickpocket: U.S.A.: 1891, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, "The Boston Switcher", he is also called "Sammy the Kid"; † by 1930. Ex switch, v., 1.

switching, n. See switch, v., 3.

swod-gill; swoddy. See swad-gill; swaddy.

swop. See swap.

sword(-)racket. 'To enlist in different regiments, and, on receiving the bounty, to desert immediately': 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1904 (F & H). Racket, 'an illicit activity or livelihood'.

swy. See swi.

swygman. See swigman.

sy. See Cy.

syce. See sice.

sycher or zoucher, 'a contemptible person' (B & L, 1890), is not c., but low s.

Sydney Harbour. A barber: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928; M & B, 1944. Rhyming; prob. a humorous coinage by Australian confidence tricksters.

syebuck. 'Cant for Sixpence,' G. Parker, A View of Society, 1781; 1777, Potter (syebuck); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1823, Egan's Grose; H, 1859, has it as syebuck; 1859, Matsell; † by 1889 (B & L). The syebuck is related to sice, q.v.; ex Fr. six, 6.

sympathy sticks. A beggar's crutches: since ca. 1918. Ersine. They arouse sympathy.

synk(e)s. See sinks.

system. Sense undetermined: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; extant?

T

T, marked with a. Known as a thief: not c., but police s.

T.B. A confidence trickster: 1933, Ersine; extant. Because he pretends to be tuberculous?

T-man. A Treasury investigator: March 26, 1938, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; by April 1939 it was s.—witness Upton Close's article, 'The T-Men Will Get You', in that month's issue of The American Mercury.

ta-ta. See tata.

tab, n. A cigarette: low, esp. showmen's and cheapjacks' s. Philip Allingham, 1934.—2. A letter smuggled out of prison: U.S. convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. It enables one to 'keep tab' on one's affairs.

tab, v. To name: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Put a tab—label—name to something.

tab, keep. See keep tab.

tab up. To reconnoitre; ascertain 'the lie of the land': 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'You are a burglar, you have put in a week "tabbing up" a residence. You decide to "make" it';

it looks all right; no children, you haven't seen a dog'; extant.

table, under the. (Something) given as a bribe: since ca. 1920. Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938. Cf. S.E. under the counter.

tabs, keep. 'Tabs. To keep in touch,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; by 1908, no longer c. Cf. s. keep tabs on; to keep a close watch on. Here, tab is an account, a check.

tack, v. To beg food: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex Eng. s. tack, 'food', or ex Am. s. (itself ex the Eng.) tack, 'to eat'.

tack, gilt. See gilt nail.

tackle. A mistress; a whore: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (see quot'n at blowen); 1698, B.E., 'The Cull has tipt his Tackle Rum rigging . . . c., the keeping Coxcomb'—see keeping cully—'has given his Mistress very fine Cloths'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1870. The origin is problematic; but if sense 2 is the earlier, then sense 1 prob. derives from it; cf. s. skirt, 'a woman'.—2. Clothes: 1698, B.E., 'The Cull has tipt his . . . Bloss Rum-tackle, c.', given her fine clothes; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Good clothes'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850, (low) s. Suggested by rigging.—3. A watch-chain, mostly in compounds: see red tackle. For an example of independent use, see crook, on the. That with which a watch is hung; cf. S.E. ship's tackle.—4. See tackling.

tackle, short. See tackling.

tackling (or tackle). 'The spy does not forget to take particulars of the interior of the house, and he is able to report to his pals what will be required in the shape of "tackling", whether long or short. "Long tackling" means a "stick" and a "betty" . . . "Short tackle" means two sets of drawer "screws", "jemmies", picklocks,—skeleton keys, wedges, gimlets, dark lantern, cork slippers, and nux vomica': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; extant. Ex the mechanical sense of tackle: gear.

tad; gen. Tad. An Irishman: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1931, IA; extant. Perhaps as the diminutive of Thady (a familiar form of Thaddeus), a given name that is common among the Irish; cf. shamus.

tag, n. A seal: 1904, Life in Sing Sing (see bust, v.; 3); extant. It is, as it were, a tag, a trifling attachment.—2. A letter smuggled out of prison: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. tab, n., 2.—3. One's name: 1933, Ersine; extant. A label, as it were.

tag, v. Usually as tagged, indicted, arrested: 1931, Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering (indicted); 1933, Eagle (arrested); extant. Cf. sense 1 of the n.—and tab, v.

tageman is George Andrewes's misprint (1809) for togeman.

tagemans. See togemans, ref. of 1797.

tail, n. 'Tayle, c. a Sword,' B.E.: 1698, B.E., 'He drew the Cull's Tayle rumly, c. he whipt away the Gentleman's Sword cleverly'; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, where it is spelt tale; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (tayle); 1742, Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV; 1753, John Poulter (tail); 1785, Grose (tail); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1887 (Baumann)—prob. indeed, by 1830. Perhaps that which cuts, ex Fr. tailleur.—2. A pheasant: poachers': 1841, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin; extant. Ex the pheasant's long tail.—3. 'My cleverness at the "tail", i.e., stealing from the tails of gentlemen's coats': 1851, implied in tail-buzzer; 1862, the definition, from Mayhew, London Labour, IV; slightly ob. Cf. tail-buzzer.—4. A prostitute: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1887, Baumann; ob. Prob. ex the low s. senses 'buttock; sexual intercourse'.—5. One who 'tails' (see the v.): U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage, but by 1918 or 1919, the term had, in the U.S., > s.; by 1930, current in Britain as c.; David Hume, Requiem for Rogues, 1942.—6. Hence (?), a being 'tailed' or followed, esp. by the police: U.S.A.: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life, 'In case we get a tail' (are followed); by 1938, English also; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena, 'A tail or being shadowed'; extant.—7. A reward for information leading to the arrest of a criminal: U.S.A.: 1934, Rose; extant. Prob. ex 6.—8. (Usually in pl.) 'Tails = tram stops,' Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932; extant.

tail, v. (Of, e.g., a detective) to dog, to follow relentlessly (a criminal): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'I've been tailed all over the wilds by a mob of Western bulls . . . I've been followed all over the country by a number of western detectives'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1918, s. in U.S.A.; by 1920, current in Britain, as in Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932; by 1940, s. in Britain too. To follow at the tail of.

tail a whole front. See tailing . . .

tail-buzzer. A pickpocket specializing in removing snuff-boxes, purses, pocket-books from gentlemen's coat pockets: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; slightly ob. Ex buzzer and s. tail, 'the posterior'.

tail-buzzing. Theft as in the preceding entry: contemporaneous with tail-buzzer. In, e.g., F. W. Carew, No. 747, 1893. For origin: cf. prec. entry.

tail-diver. A 'tail-buzzer' (q.v.): 1859, Matsell; † by 1920.

tail(-)drawer. 'Tayle-drawers, c. Sword-stealers,' B.E., 1698; 'Tail Drawers, Such as take Gentlemen's Swords, from their Sides, at the turning of a corner, or in a Crowd,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; 1718, C. Hitching (tale-drawer); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (tayle-); 1785, Grose (tayle-); † by 1830. See tail, n., 1, and cf. :—

tail-drawing. 'Privately taking a Sword from a Gentleman's Side, either in a Crowd, or as he walks along the Streets at Night,' Alex. Smith, Highwayman, 1714; N. B., A Collection of Tryals, II; current ca. 1680–1830. See tail, n., 1.

tail lights. Copper coins: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. Ex their size; also, they represent hope disappointed.

tail off. To follow or shadow (a person): 1931, Brown; extant.

tail(-)peddler. A prostitute: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. butt-, flesh-, hip-peddler.

tail(-)piece. A term of three months imprisonment: 1859, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1890, B & L; † by 1920.

tail pit. Side pocket of coat: pickpockets': C. 20. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. I.e., tail, 'buttocks' + pit, 2.

tail (or tale) trick, the. In Allan Pinkerton's Thirty Years a Detective, 1886, there is the following description:—'There are some people who imagine that it is an impossibility for a thief to rob them . . . These people place their bank book and money in the outside pocket of their sack-coat [a short coat—not overcoat—for informal wear], and by keeping their hand upon the book imagine that a robbery is impossible. The thieves, however, know better than this, and their mode of proceeding is as follows:—They patiently bide their time until the man reaches the door of the bank, which must be opened to admit him—one man will then step immediately in front of him, or a little to the left—and then stop right in front of the doorway pretending to look at a paper, or to count some money which he has in his hands—the consequence is, that instead of pushing the man aside so [that] he can use his left hand to open the door—the victim will, unthinkingly, reach out his right hand—which had hitherto guarded his pocket, and pull open the door—the “stall” immediately moves a trifle more to the front for a second, and then turns away—that second, however, is enough, for while the victim and his [the thief’s] “stall” are thus engaged, the pick-pocket has quietly taken out the money and decamped. This in thieves’ vernacular is called a “tale trick”, and bank messengers have frequently been robbed in this manner’.

tail up. To follow, as a detective a criminal: since ca. 1910. Edgar Wallace, passim; Partridge, 1937. Ex tail, v., 1.

tailer. In a ‘green goods’ gang, one of the members is ‘the Tailer, who remains on guard at the railway station, personating a policeman, for the purpose of bullying any victim who discovers he has been swindled, and returns to try to recover his money’, W. T. Stead, Satan’s Invisible World Displayed, 1898, p. 109; extant.—2. A ‘stool pigeon’ in a jail: convicts’: March 22, 1930, Flynn’s, Robert Carse, ‘Jail Break!’; extant.

tailing a whole front, adj. and n. Applied to a pickpocket that ‘cleans victim right out, stickpin, watch, money, etc.’, Kernôt, 1929–31; extant. See front, n.

tailor’s measure. A fifty-dollar bill; fifty dollars: tramps’: May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. $50 = half a yard; 18 inches in a tailor’s measure = half a yard in length.

take, n. A haul; a quantity of goods, money, etc., stolen at one time: 1888, James Greenwood, The Policeman’s Lantern, ‘A tidyish “take” brought about by what he called the “sweetstuff lay.”’; by 1920, American; 1927, Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster (U.S.A.); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, ‘The proceeds of a robbery’; 1935, Kathlyn Hayden; May 22, 1937, C. Ryley Cooper in The Saturday Evening Post, ‘The total . . . loot . . . to the thieves . . . is income or “take”’; extant. That which one can haul, carry, away.—2. See take, in the.—3. The take; bribery: U.S.A.: 1930 (see take, on the); 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; extant.—4. ‘Crooks in general are known as takes, twicers, forties or artists’, Baker, 1945: Australian: since ca. 1910. A substantivization of the v.: compare the pun in ‘He has such taking ways’.

take, v. ‘Take. Rob. Take a man for his jack—rob him [of his money],’ George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1925; 1926, Jack Black, You Can’t Win, ‘I was sure I could “take” the spot if I got a fair break on the luck’; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, ‘To cheat or defraud’; March 5, 1932, Flynn’s, Lew Allen Bird, ‘This man had probably “taken” [swindled] so many places that he lost track of them’; 1933, Ersine (to rob, to swindle); 1934, Rose (to swindle); extant. Cf. take, n., 1 and 4.—2. To murder: 1930, Burke (quot’n at hot seat); extant. Short for take the life of.—3. To take bribes: 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; ‘Suppose the cop is honest and won’t take; . . . all the guy has to do is to find somebody higher up that will take’; extant. Cf. take, on the.

take, in the. ‘Whatever [secret] the source [of his wealth], Lingle in 1921 was sufficiently “in the take”, to quote the argot, that he felt impelled to concoct an alibi for himself in a mythical estate. And “the take” increased to such an extent that he concocted another alibi—a double one—that of a couple of rich uncles,’ Fred D. Pasley, Al Capone, 1931; extant. Cf. :—

take, on the. Ready, or known to accept, addicted to accepting, bribes: Nov. 29, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; extant. Cf. take, n., 3.

take a blinder. See blinder, nap a.

take a fall. See fall, n., ref. of 1924.

take a rap. See take the rap.

take a sleigh-ride. See sleigh ride, ref. of 1928.

take a sweep. See sweep . . .

take a trip to the country; be taking . . . To go to, to be in, prison: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1945. See country.

take a walk-out powder, ‘to depart quietly and suddenly, in order to avoid the law’: orig., on the borderline between c. and low s., but by 1934 (Julien Proskauer, Suckers All) it was fairly gen. s. for ‘to depart’.

take a yes-yes. See yes-yes.

take an immediate duck. To escape from prison: convicts’: 1934, Rose; extant. See duck, n. and v.

take beef. To run away: 1859, H; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; † by 1910. See beef, n.

take care of, ‘to arrest (a person)’, is not c.; it is police s. Ware, 1909.

take coach. A C. 18 term, thus in Alex. Smith, Jonathan Wild . . . and Modern Rogues, 1726, ‘He soon carry’d her to her Companions, with whom she us’d much of the canting Language, saying Take Coach, take Horse, and mill the Gruntling, by which she was meant, Cut a Throat, Take a Purse, and steal a Pig’; app. † by 1790. Euphemistic.

take ding. See ding, knap the.

take-down, n. A thief; a swindler, a confidence man: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942.

take down, v., ‘to get the best of (a person), to swindle him’, was, despite B & L, never c.

take (someone) down the pike. See pike, take down the.

take for a ride. To take (someone) in a car and shoot (him): ‘Big Tim Murphy [a gangster, gang-killed on June 26, 1928] originaged the term, “take him for a ride”, but Weiss [another gangster, similarly killed on Oct. 11, 1926] is said to have been the first one to utilise that method of obtaining silence or revenge in gangland,’ E. D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago, 1929; Nov. 24, 1928, Flynn’s, Don H. Thompson, ‘Those who paid promptly enjoyed protection and immunity from the mob and the law; those who refused were bombed or “taken for a ride” by the Colbeck firing squad’; Jan. 5, 1929, Flynn’s, Maxwell Smith; 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch, ‘“I’m goin’ to send Dopey down in a minute,” he said, quietly. “Take him for a ride An’ be damned sure not to make no mistakes”’; May 24, 1930, Flynn’s, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Aug. 8, 1931, Flynn’s, C. W. Willemse; 1934, Gordon Fellowes, They Took Me for a Ride; by 1935, journalistic s. To take someone in a car to a lonely spot and there murder him.

take for an indoor buggy ride. To beat up, to thrash (someone) indoors; to punish drastically, inside the victim’s home or headquarters: Sept. 19, 1931, Flynn’s, Paul Annixter, ‘Muscle Work’; extant. An elaboration and a sense-modification of the preceding.

take for the works. See works, take for the.

take French leave. 'To escape while on trust outside the prison walls,' Hargan, 1935 : Sing Sing : C. 20.

take horse. See take coach.

take (a person) in is prob. c., of ca. 1690-1750, in the specific sense recorded by B.E., 1698 : 'Take the Culls in, c. Seize the Men, in order to rob them'. The modern sense, 'to trick', derives naturally therefrom.—2. Take (a town, a district) in, to effect robbery and theft in that town, etc.; to 'work' it : U.S.A. : 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, pp. 62 and 63 ; extant. Cf. take, v., 1.

take it on the Arthur Duffy ; take it on the heel and toe. (1) To make off ; esp., swiftly and quietly to evade justice ; (2) to escape from prison : resp., ca. 1900-30 and since ca. 1915 : in, e.g., Convict, 1934 (the former phrase in nuance 1 ; the latter, in both 1 and 2) ; 1936, Lee Duncan (Arthur K. Duffy). Both phrases are on the analogy of s. take it on the lam ; the second derives from the former phrase : Arthur Duffy was a famous sprinter early in C. 20 (cf. Charley Paddock)—he toured Australia and New Zealand in company with Alfred Shrubbs, likewise a professional.

take it on the lam. See on the lam.

take joint. A dishonest cabaret ; a crooked gambling-den : 1933, Eagle ; 1933, Ersine ; extant. See take, v.

take needles. See needles.

take on. Charles Bent, Criminal Life, 1891 (p. 271), 'Took us on He changed banknotes [for us]'; extant.

take on high. To rob (a place) and then flee in daylight : 1933, Ersine, 'They took the jug on high' ; extant. Cf. S.E. high noon.

take on the fly. See fly, take on the.

take one's last degree. To be hanged : ca. 1800-50. See, e.g., the quot'n from Lex. Bal., 1811, at steel. I.e., to take the last step in a criminal career.

take out the stripes. See stripes . . .

take over. To rob, to steal : 1935, Hargan ; extant. By a humorous euphemism that would have arrided Autolyceus.

take Patience and Walk. The T.P. & W.—the Toledo, Peoria and Western railroad : tramps' : since ca. 1910 : 1931, Stiff ; 1931, IA ; extant. Sarcastic.

take stoppo. To be obliged to run away : since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. To take heed when the look-out cries 'Stop !'

take the boil-out. Synonymous with sweat it out, which prob. suggested it. BVB.

take the checkers. To be murdered : 1934, Rose ; extant. Ex card games.

take the dairy off. To divert suspicion : since ca. 1920. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932.

take the drop. See drop, take the.

take the electric cure. 'When one is electrocuted, he "rides old smoky," "takes the electric cure," "is burned";' Givens, 1929 ; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest ; 1934, Rose ; extant. Ironical.

take the hot seat is a variant of the preceding : Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest, John Caldwell ; extant.

take the jolly off ; store it off. To regain one's calm, to calm down, after a nervous shock or great excitement : May 2, 1882, Sessions Papers (p. 6), a tough twice asks for a smoke, 'He asked me for a cigarette-paper, to take the jolly off' and 'He asked take the lump. To take the blame : since the 1920's. In, e.g., Axel Bracey, Public Enemies, 1934. Perhaps ex s. like it or lump it.

Clifton for a cigarette-paper, to store it off', these being the assaulter's own phrases in reference to a murderous injury to a policeman ; † by 1920.

take the needle (or the works). To inject a drug : addicts' : since ca. 1905, 1910, resp. BVB, 1942. See the nn.

take the (or a) rap. 'Time for somebody to take a rap as a cover up for the coppers,' ca. 1886, in Lewis E. Lawes, Cell 202, Sing Sing, 1935, the passage being glossed by Godfrey Irwin as 'A gang boss threw a recalcitrant member to the police so that the arrest would satisfy public clamor and permit the gang to go on with its thievery unmolested for a time'; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 'Take a rap—serve a sentence ; particularly to do so for protection of another guilty person'; 1927, Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster ; July 19, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick ; 1934, Convict ; by 1935, police and journalistic s. in U.S.A. : by 1936 (James Curtis, The Gilt Kid) or, rather, from ca. 1930, current in Britain, where, by 1940, it was s. A rap on the knuckles.

take the rope. See rope . . .

take the seconds. To abandon a projected crime, on second thoughts : since the 1920's. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932.

take the skid. See skid . . .

take the stripes out. See stripes . . .

take the whole front. In his informative article ('Pickpockets') in Flynn's, March 2, 1929, H. W. Corley notes that "Taking the whole front" means stealing everything the victim owns, stickpin, watch, roll, et al.' ; extant. See front, n.

take to market. To present (a begging letter) to a charitable person or persons : 1863, The Story of a Lancashire Thief ; † by 1920.

take (a girl) under one's protection. See protection, take . . .

take (one's) walk up back ; walk up the thirteen steps. Respectively, to move into the condemned-to-death cell, and to be hanged : 1929, Givens (the former) ; 1934, Convict (the latter) ; 1934, Rose (former, take a or the . . .) ; extant. Euphemistic.

take wine with the parson. To attend Holy Communion : Millbank Prison : since ca. 1850 : 1866, A Prison Matron, Prison Characters ; ob. Ex the fact that many take the Sacrament 'for the chance of "a drink of wine"'.—2. A receiver of stolen property : since ca. 1930. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. He takes it off the thief's hands.

taken. Rendered unconscious by drugs : since the 1920's. BVB. Euphemistic.

taker. In Barnard's law (confidence trickery), 'he that fetcheth the man'—gets hold of the prospective victim and brings him to the gang : 1591, Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, where it is also termed taker up ; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'The Taker, is he that by some fine invention fetcheth in the man, whom they desire to draw into Gaming'; app. † by 1630. Self-explanatory.—2. A receiver of stolen property : since ca. 1930. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. He takes it off the thief's hands.

taker-up. The same as the preceding : 1552, Gilbert Walker, Diceplay ; 1591, Greene ; † by 1620.

taking a blow. Cocaine-sniffing : drug addicts' :

since ca. 1918. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938. Cf. blower, 7 and 9.

taking cake. "... A form of trickery known as "taking cake". Rigged up in a uniform-cap, he accosted railway passengers, offered to insure their luggage, money and other valuables, took articles away to be "assessed", pocketed the premium, and informed his victims that he was travelling with the train,' Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938: since ca. 1910. As easy as taking—and eating—cake: 'It's a piece of cake!'

tale; tale-drawer; tale trick. See tail, n.; tail-drawer; tail trick.—2. 'Tale. The member; quantity; share. "Give him tale", give him his share': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. Not ex † S.E. tale, but ex Ger. Theil, 'a part, a share'.—3. In late C. 19–20, the tale is synonymous with the brass: see brass, 5. (Percy J. Smith, Con Man, 1938; Jim Phelan, In the Can, 1939.) Compare tell the tale.

tale, cop the. See cop the tale.

tale, telling the. See tell the tale.

talent. A very clever thief, a particularly skilful pickpocket, an eminently successful burglar: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex:—

talent, the. Professional criminals: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'The two detectives met some of the "talent" from their part of the country. The talent had been in the city nearly a week before the detectives saw them, and had succeeded in making some very profitable "touches"; they were nearly all light-fingered gentry'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'clever crooks'; since ca. 1930, also Australian, as in Baker, 1942, 'The underworld in general'; extant in both countries. They are talented 'artists'.

talk has, in the American underworld, a specific sense, in certain contexts: 'to inform to the police': thus in George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924. But this sense prob. existed as police j. before criminals used it.

talk west. To talk like a tramp, to speak the language of the road: tramps': 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (see quot'n at pennies); extant.

talkie. A Thompson sub-machine gun: 1929–31, Kernôt; slightly ob. Cf. chatter-box. The inception of the talkies (cinema) soon brought this term into existence.

tall. Showily: 1863, The Story of a Lancashire Thief, 'I took care not to dress too tall'; † by 1920. Perhaps with reference to tall hats.

tall(-)men. A variant of high men. 'Old gaming', is F & H's classification; but what is their authority for its existence? The O.E.D. supplies it in two quotations from plays of 1592 (one of them, by Kyd). An ephemeral underworld witticism upon high men.

tallow pot. Fireman (stoker) on a train: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; et al. 'In the old days the tallow pot containing the lubricant was in charge of this man, whose duty it was to have the tallow warm enough to flow when needed by the engineer' (the driver), Irwin.

tally! I understand; Keep me in on it: tramps': since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Stiff, 1931. Cf. American check!, 'I agree; that's correct'.

talosk, 'weather', is not c., but tinkers' s.: 1890, B & L. Shelta talosk, '(a) day': cf. Ersc, lāithe, 'day'.

tame cheater. 'A false player,' a card-sharper: 1890, B & L; ob.

tamp up. To strike, to assault; to third-degree: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931 (former sense); Ersine, 1933, 'To beat, to stun'; Convict, 1934, 'If he is given the third degree, he says he is dumped or tamped up'; extant. Ex the S.E. tamp, 'to ram home (the charge) in a bore-hole; to plug'.

tamping. A prison flogging: mostly convicts': 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; extant. Cf. prec.

tamtart. A girl: ca. 1840–1900. It occurs in Anon., No. 747, 1893, in a passage valid for 1845. Prob. a perversion of jam tart.

tam, n., 'a circus', and tanbark, 'a circus ring': s., not c. Leverage, 1925.

tan, v. To 'beat up' (as a warder a prisoner): convicts': since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938; Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows, 1939; an article by 'Lemuel Gulliver' in Lilliput, Nov. 1943. A development ex the s. sense 'to thrash'. The more usual word is bash.

Tangerines. See:—

Tangier, 'the lock-up portion of that part of Newgate Prison which was affected to the use of debtors', is perhaps rather prison s. than c. T. H., A Glimpse of Hell, 1705, 'And now, the Coast it seeming clear, | And Debtors lock'd up in Tangier, | In comes a Laden Privateer'; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., where the occupants are named Tangerines. Ex the hardships imposed on the victims of the Tangerine pirates.

Tangierines is Grose's form (2nd ed., 1788) of Tangerines: see Tangier.

tank, n. 'A heavy drinker', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; by 1918, no longer c. Capacity.—2. A prison cell, esp. one that houses more than one prisoner: 1912 (but prob. valid for at least as early as 1901), Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 'I . . . lost no time getting to "34 tank"'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'The general cage for prisoners in a county jail, or the hall in which they are permitted to exercise'; 1933, James Spenser, Limey, 'In "the tank"' (in prison); 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It (a prison cage); 1938, Castle; extant. 'Perhaps since the enclosure is filled with "fish", which see' (Irwin).—3. A safe: New Zealand: since ca. 1920: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter); by 1935, also Australian; 1945, Baker, 'To blow a tank, to break open a safe with gelignite'. Ex its shape-resemblance to a small water-tank.—4. An automobile: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine, 'A bullet-proof car'; 1937, David Hume, Cemetery First Stop!; extant. Pejorative: cf. heap.

tank, v. To drink (much) strong liquor: perhaps, orig., c.—but prob. always s. See tank, n., 1.

tank town. A small and relatively unimportant town on a railroad: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, W. R. Burnett, The Giant Swing, where, however, it would seem to have > railroad s.—perhaps it always was. 'One at which most trains stop, if at all, merely to take on water from the tank' (Irwin).

tank up. To drink heavily: C. 20: 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (it was at San Quentin in 1901–11), 'Suppose th' young girls went out nights an' got tanked up, an' did all th' other things we do'; by 1920, low s., and by 1925, gen. s.

tanked. Intoxicated, tipsy: perhaps c. at first; but by 1918, it was s.—low s.; by 1925, gen s. Cf. tank up.

tanner, 'a sixpence', may orig. (— 1797) have been c. and remained c. until (say) 1820; but prob. it has always been s., though low s. for a generation or more. The earliest reference seems to be in Humphry Tanner, A New Dict. of All the Cant and Flash Languages, 1797: 'Size, tester, simon, the tanner'—note the—'sixpence'. But as 'a counterfeit sixpence' it seems to have been counterfeiters' c. of ca. 1800–50: witness, e.g., Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, VI (pub. in 1830), trial of Thomas Mayer, and earlier in Sessions Papers, Oct. 1810, p. 405, 'A shilling they'—counterfeiters—'call bob, and a sixpence, tanner.' For the etymology, which is obscure, see the essay 'Neither Cricket nor Etymology' in my A Covey of Partridge, 1937.

tannie or tanny. A halfpenny: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'There was only about sixteen bobs in it, and a few tannies'; ibid., Glossary, 'Tannie, halfpenny'; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford, fig. of something of little value; † by 1860. Ex Romany tani, 'small'; contrast prec.

tanquam, 'a Fellow's fellow', classified by F & H as c., is a fine academic example of Cambridge university s. of ca. 1620–1720.

tansnear is a misprint for transnear. (B.E., 1698.)

tanyok, 'a halfpenny', is not c., but tinkers' s.: 1890, B & L.

tap, n. 'Knocker of a Door,' D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd, 1728; app. † by 1810. One uses it to tap on the door.—2. A prospective or actual victim: U.S. blackmailers' and swindlers': July 16, 1927, Flynn's, (a professional blackmailer loq.) 'Though we refer to our quarry as "taps", they are blood brothers of the oil stock sucker' (Graham McEnery, 'The Mug Book'); 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'One who is known to subscribe to charitable projects'; 1937, John Worby, The Other Half (a British tramp's or beggar's 'prospect'); extant.—3. (As the tap.) Hence, a confidence game: U.S.A.: 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, '“I bet I have more money than you” is a confidence racket similar to the tap, the hype, and the wire'; extant.

tap, v. 'To tap a guinea; to get it changed' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788) is not c., but s.; s. too is the sense in 'To tap a girl; to be the first seducer' (ibid.).—2. To arrest (a person): U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; by 1894 (The Reminiscences of Chief-Inspector Littlechild) it was also English; ob. Ex tap (one) on the shoulder (prior to arrest).—3. To break open (a till): U.S.A.: 1879, Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences, 'In the act of "tapping" the till of a North Side [of Chicago] German grocery'; 1881, A. Pinkerton, Professional Thieves; by 1890 (B & L), English and applied to burgling; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1934, Convict; extant.—4. Usually as vbl n., tapping. 'The moment [the pickpocket] is able'—after 'reefing', q.v.—'to take hold of the pocket-book—called "tapping" [i.e., the taking-hold is called tapping], he quietly calls out "Rouse!"': U.S.A.: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; July 7, 1928, Flynn's, T. Topham uses it as 'to rob (a person) by pickpocketry'; extant.—5. (Ex 3 and 4.) To steal: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; not much used.—6. To beg: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; 1931, Terence Horsley, The Odyssey of an Out-of-

Work (England), both as a vbl n., tapping, and as in 'We'll tap these mansions'; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff; 1932, Matt Marshall, The Travels of Tramp-Royal; 1938, F. D. Sharpe; 1939, John Worby; extant.—7. (Ex 3 and perhaps 5.) To burgle (a place): U.S.A.: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 'They only bank once or twice a week. They're careless, get that; because they've never been tapped'; extant.—8. To murder; usually be tapped, murdered: U.S.A.: 1934, Rose; extant. Short for tap (someone) on the head?

tap, at the. Engaged in begging: 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; extant. See sense 2 of the n., sense 6 of the v.

tap, on the. See on the tap.

tap dice. See tappers.

tap up on. To hit on the head; to stun: since ca. 1925; extant. Ersine. Cf. S.E. 'tap on the head'.

tape, n. 'Tape, Red or White; Geneva, Aniseed, Clove-Water, &c. so-called by Canterers and Villains, and the Renters of the Tap, &c., in Newgate, and other Prisons,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'Red, white or blue tape, gin, or any other spirituous liquor'; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Red tape; brandy. Blue or white tape; gin'; but prob. all these terms had > s. by 1780 or so. (Pierce Egan speaks of unqualified tape, by which he means gin.) Also see red tape and white tape separately. Prob. ex the fiction of goods bought at a haberdasher's.—2. The tongue: U.S.A.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

tape, v. To measure, very carefully, the chances and risks of committing (a specific crime): since ca. 1919. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex s. get (a person) taped, to have him 'sized up'.

taper-off. See slack-off.

tapper, for 'shoulder tapper' (a bailiff), is not c., but s.: Grose, 2nd ed. It may, however, have been c. in U.S.A. in mid-C. 19 for 'a police officer': Matsell, 1859; cf. tap, v., 2.—2. A professional borrower, on the never-never-system; an habitual beggar—i.e., a beggar: C. 20: 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1936, W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress; and others.—3. A typewriter: since ca. 1930. John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939. Ex the tapping noise emitted by a typewriter being used.

tappers; ex synonymous tap dice. Dice loaded with shot, they run fair until tapped, the shot then jamming on one side: gamblers': C. 20. Ersine.

tapping. See tap, v., 4, 6.

Tapsters' Illicit Tricks:—One of the earliest exposures of tapsters' trickery occurs in Ratseis Ghost, that 'second part of his madde Prankes and Robberies' which is prob. by the same author (? the bookseller-publisher John Hodgkett) as the first part, The Life and Death of Gamaliel Ratsey, published likewise in 1605 (edited in 1935 by S. H. Arking): 'I have heard some Tapsters say, they have gayned cleerly fortie pounds in one Sommer of bottelling Ale. Oh, you have odde sleights to fill your purposes by such as I am, when you have us in your handling: you will mixe Lime with Ale to make it mightie; you will coozen the Kings liege people for their drinke, by fobbing them of with your slender wasted blacke Pottes and Cannes; you will put small Beere into your Bottle-ale, and Gunne powder into your Bottles while the Ale is newe, to make it flie up to the toppe of the house at the first opening. Then by stopping it close, make folkes beleieve it is the strength of the Ale, when in trueth it is nothing else but the strength of Gunne powder.'

tar, n. A thief: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. tar finger, which it shortens.—2. Theft: 1925, Leverage, 'On the tar—out stealing'; extant. Cf. tar, v.—3. Gum opium; an addict thereto: 1933, Eagle, and 1934, Convict, both in former nuance; 1936, Lee Duncan, of the opium addict; March 18, 1939, Flynn's, Donald Barr Chidsey; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; 1942, BVB; extant. Ex its appearance: see Chidsey quot'n at skamas.

tar, v. To steal: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex tar, n., 1.

tar and feather. Weather: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

tar finger. A thief: 1925, Leverage; extant. Things find themselves sticking to his fingers.

tar-heel. A sneak thief: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. tar finger.

target. Current throughout C. 20, as Jack Black implies in You Can't Win, 1926, '... Serving as "target" or outside man, for the yegg mobs that preyed on country banks He is the first one to get shot at and the last. It's his job to . . . stand off the natives while the others get the coin, and then to cover the get-away'; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, IA; 1942, BVB. He stands to be shot at.

tarpot. A derby (hat): tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. Ex its shape.

tarrel. A skeleton key: 1859, Matsell; † by 1900. Origin?

tarry rope. A fool; a simpleton: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1920. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on dope.—2. A waterfront prostitute: Australian: C. 20. M & B, 1944. She is prepared to coit amid the ropes and tackle.

tarryin, 'rope', is not c., but tinkers' s.: 1890, B & L. Shelta tarin.

tart, 'a girl', is classified as c. by No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; in this sense ('any girl'), it may have been American c. of ca. 1895–1925. Imported from England, where, however, the predominant sense has always been 'a prostitute'; short for jam tart.

Tartar. An (itinerant) beggar; a thief: 1598, Shakespeare, 'Here's a Bohemian-Tartar'; 1697, Vanbrugh. (Both authorities: O.E.D.) Ex lit. S.E. sense.—2. Hence, a sharper: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'A notorious Rogue or Sharper, who sticks not to rob his Brother Rogue; and in this respect is reckon'd by some, the Fifty-ninth Order of Villains'. Like sense 1, it appears to have > † by 1750, Grose recording neither sense.

Tartarian is a C. 17 variant of Tartar, 1: ca. 1600, The Merry Devil of Edmonton; 1640, The Wandering Jew. Adj. used substantively.

tashi shingomai, 'to read a newspaper', is not c., but tinkers' s.: 1890, B & L. App. ex Shelta.

tat, n. See tats, 1 and 2.—3. See tats, 3. The term is occ. found in the singular: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 424, 'Tat (rag) gatherers'; † by 1904 (F & H). Hence, by ironic extension:—4. A rug: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.—5. 'The Tat is the tool of the unskilled dice hustlers, being an exceptional dice'— Racketland's shaping of die—'on which only the numbers four, five and six appear,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928: professional gamblers': No. 18, 1933, Flynn's; extant. Ex tats, 1.

tat, v. 'To flog or scourge': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1890. To 'cut to tatters'.—2. To gather old rags; mostly as vbl n., tatting: 1851 (see tatting); 1859, H; app. by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was low s. tat-box; tatt-box. A dice-box: 1812, J. H. Vaux (the latter form); 1859, H (the former); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; slightly ob. Cf. tats, 2.

tat-man; tat mob. A professional gambler that depends upon tat, n., 5, to win; a gang using the 'tat': 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers (both terms); extant.

tat-monger. See tatmonger.

tat(-)shop. 'A place for gambler to meet and play at hazard': 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1904 (F & H). See tats; s. sense of shop, 'a place'.

tata or ta-ta. A machine-gun: since ca. 1925. Kernôt, 1929–31; Howard N. Rose, 1934. To face it is to say goodbye; with a pun on its tat-tat-tat.

tattle, in Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, Act V, is almost certainly an error for:—

tatler; tattler. 'An Alarm, or Striking Watch,' T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, 1688; 1698, B.E., 'Tattler, c. an Alarm, or Striking Watch, or (indeed) any'; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 'Tatler, a Clock or Watch'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe ('Watch'); 1741, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. III; 1785, Grose ('A watch'); 1797, Potter ('A clock'); 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'To flash a tatler; to wear a watch'; 1817, J. J. Stockdale, The Greeks (nim a tatler, to steal a watch); 1819, T. Moore; 1821, J. Burrowes; 1822, A Real Paddy, Real Life in Ireland; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A watch or clock'; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. Because it is forever 'talking'.—2. Moon: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'The Tattler is up, alias the Moon shines'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; † by 1920. Ex sense 1: resemblance in shape.—3. A dog that barks: 1890, B & L, 'In French argot, tambour or alarmiste'; † by 1930. Ex sense 1.

tatmonger. A card-sharper: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, 'A Tattmonger. A Cheat at Dice'; 1698, B.E., 'Tat-monger, c. a Sharper, or Cheat, using false Dice'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The Thirty-sixth Order of Villains'; 1785, Grose, 'One that uses false dice'; † by 1887 (Baumann). A monger of tats (see tats.)

tatogey. See tattogey.

tats; tatts. False dice: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell, 1859; 1887, Baumann; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1928 (see tat, n., 5); 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. 3.—2. Hence, any dice: 1797, H. Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; 1887, Henley; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; slightly ob.—3. Old rags: 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell; by 1864, s. Perhaps ex 'rags and tatters'.

tats, milky. See milky tats.

tats and all! 'An expression used out of flash [i.e., in the underworld], in the same manner as the word bender [see bender !]; and has a similar meaning': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1870.

tatsman ; tattsman. 'Tatts man, one who gets his living by playing or cheating at dice': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (tattman); 1823, Egan's Grose; 1825, C. E. Westmacott, The London Spy; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1904 (F & H)—cf. tat-man. Lit., a dice-man: see tats, 1 and 2.

tatt. See tat, n.

tatt-box. See tat-box.

tatter, a collector of old rags: not c., but s.

tatter a kip. See kip, n., 1.

tatterdemalion is, by Randle Holme, 1688, classified wrongly as c. His definition is 'a Ragged Rogue'. Note, however, that A New Canting Dict., 1725, describes this class of men as 'the Thirty-seventh Order of Villains'.

tatting. "'He goes tatting and billy-hunting in the country (gathering rags and buying old metal), and comes only to London when he has that sort of thing to dispose of"' ; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 417; 1859, H; by 1864, (H, 3rd ed.) it was low s. Ex tats, 3.

tattle. A watch: 1724, Harper (see the quot'n at that date, under pops); 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Tattle or Tattler, an Alarum, or striking Watch; or indeed any other Watch'; 1890, B & L—but prob. the term was † by 1860 at latest. A variant of tattler (see tatler).

tattler. See tatler.

tattman. A variant of tatsman.

tattmonger. See tatmonger.

tattokey; usually pl. Tattokeys. They are People that keep a Money Cloth to play with Dice; the Chance is very unfair, for some [of the dice] are loaded high and some low, so that the Chance is ten to one against you; the Money Chances being high and low, and the Dice being thus loaded, always run blank, for the Numbers that are blank is between high and low, which is a great Defraud,' John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753; ibid., 'A Tattokey; a Dice Cloth'; † by 1890 (B & L). Prob. the correct form is tatty tog, q.v.; although the records do not support me, I suppose tatty tog to be the earlier.

tatts. See tats.

tatty (incorrectly taty) tog. A gaming cloth: 1797, Potter (taty tog); 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1940. Cf. tattokey.

taxi. A sentence of from five to fifteen years' imprisonment: 1933, Eagle; 1933, Ersine; extant. A five- to fifteen-minutes' ride: five- to fifteen-years' sentence.

taxi-man. 'Some of the most up-to-date burglars in London are what is known as "taximen". They do not drive taxi-cabs, but utilise them so that they may arrive and depart unnoticed from the scene of . . . robbery,' Sidney Felstead, The Underworld of London, 1923; by 1940, police s.

taxi steerer. 'A taxicab driver who acts as a guide to a brothel,' BVB, 1942: since ca. 1910. Cf. steerer, 4.

tayle. See tail, n.

tayle-drawer. See tail-drawer.

tchi, to 'knead opium before rolling into pill' (Convict, 1934): drug-traffic j., not c. Obviously, a Chinese word.

tea is collective for marijuana cigarettes: drug addicts': since the late 1920's. The New Yorker, March 12, 1938, article by M. Berger; Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely, 1940; BVB, 1942.

Whereas tea 'cheers, not inebriates', marijuana does both.

tea and tattle. A battle: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1915. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

tea and toast. Winning post in horse-racing: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Tea Garden, the. Tothill Fields Prison: 1856, G. L. Chesterton (see Old Horse, the); † by 1900. There used to be a well-known tea garden in the neighbourhood. (Properly, a house of correction: for women and children. The new prison was erected in 1836.)

tea gardens. ' . . . Chokey, as the separate punishment cells are called. There are other names, "Tea Gardens"; "The Cooler", but chokey is the name most used,' 'Red Collar Man', Chokey, 1936; 1939, George Ingram, Welded Lives; extant. Prob. ex prec.; certainly euphemistic.

tea(-)leaf, a petty thief; tea-leafing, petty theft, pilfering: since ca. 1890, the latter being a derivative of the former; the former, obviously rhyming s. on thief. 'Young Alf began tea-leafing,' C. Rook, The Hooligan Nights, 1899; by 1903, according to Charles Booth, Life and Labour of the People in London, V, 139, "Tea-leaf" is for some inexplicable reason the name used by the police for pick-pockets'; 1906, C. E. B. Russell & L. M. Rigby, The Making of the Criminal, "Tea-leafing" (robbing a till)'; by 1910, both terms were low s.

tea-man. See teaman.

tea pad. A room, flat, club where marijuana-smokers gather: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Meyer Berger, in The New Yorker of March 12, 1938, 'Tea pads where inferior cigarettes are sold are "beat pads"; these places use tea leaves or dry grass to supplement the marijuana supply'. Perhaps cf. pad, n., 6, ex the couches available in such 'joints'.

tea-pot, smash the. 'When a man loses his class from the first or second, he goes into the third for the time being, and for the period he loses his privilege of having tea, and returns to gruel. This, among prisoners, is termed "smashing the tea-pot"' ; 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, the reference being to Millbank, ca. 1870; † by 1920. See teaman and cf. :—

tea-pot mended, have one's; or get it down the spout. (See the first reference in the preceding entry.) 'And when a man is restored to his class, and has his tea [-ration restored to him], it is said he has "had his teapot mended" or "got it down the spout"' ; 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude; † by 1920.

tea-pot sneaking. 'Stealing plate, teapots': 1890, B & L; ob. Silverware.

tea-pot soak. 'A thief who steals plate, teapots, etc.'; 1890, B & L; † by 1930. Cf. prec.

tea(-)spoon, '£5,000', is s.—not c.

tea'd up. Topsy: 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; extant. Prob. ex tea (marijuana).

teaman or tea-man. A Millbank prisoner of the 1st or the 2nd Class: 'they have the privilege . . . of having one pint of tea every evening instead of gruel': prisoners' c. and warders' s.: 1877 (but the ref. is to the 1860's), Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, where the term is written tea man; † by 1920.—2. (Also tea hound.) A marijuana smoker: Am. drug addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. See tea.

tear baby. One who begs from women or from men accompanied by women: beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931. 'Often puts up a pitiful story, even weeps' (Stiff).

tear open. To rob freely in (a district, building, conveyance): 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'A mob . . . had been "tearing open" the Third Avenue cars outside of the Post Office'; ob.

tear-up. A tearing-up of one's clothes in order to obtain new or at least better ones: 1890, B & L; by 1920, no longer c.

teare is, in Farmer's Musa Pedestris, a misprint for toure = tower, to see, regard; this error occurs in the song quoted from Copland's The hye Way to the Spytell hous.

tearmage. See termage. (Robert Greene, 1592.)

tears and cheers. Ears: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928; M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

tease, n. 'A slave at work', says Potter, 1797: does he mean a convict and is the term therefore connected with teize (q.v.)? The term is suspect, despite its recurrence in Andrewes, 1809, and in Matsell, 1859.

tease, v. See tease.

teaser or teazer. A watch-chain: July 1821, Sessions Papers (p. 359), 'Before she took the watch, she laid hold of the chain, and said, "Oh, he has got a teaser"'; app. † by 1900. A watch on a chain is more difficult to steal than a watch loose in a person's pocket; cf. s. teaser, 'a thing that puzzles'.—2. A sixpence: ca. 1840–80: possibly c., but prob. s.: 1848, Sinks of London. Ex its small size—and value.

teasing or teazing. A whipping (of a prisoner): perhaps from ca. 1760: certainly current in U.S.A. from before 1794—witness Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807 (teasing); 1821, P. Egan, Life in London (teazing); 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin ('a public flogging'); † by 1910. See tease, v.

teaster. See tester.

tease, n. See teize, the, ref. of 1797.

tease, v. 'To fly, or whip': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), as teize; 1890, B & L (as tease); † by 1910. Ex teize, q.v.

teazer. See teaser.

teazing. See teasing.

tec. See sense 2 of:— teck, in the canting song (ch. V), The English Rogue, 1665 ('Teck romc confect'), is a misprint for peck, food.—2. A detective: not c., but s.—orig., low s.

tedhi. See teddy.

teehokois. 'Dogs or dog': 1859, Matsell; † by 1900. Corruption of Iroquois?

teetotal hotel; Her Majesty's Toototal Hotel. A prison: 1890, B & L (the longer form); 1904, F & H (the shorter); † by 1920. Beer, spirits, wines are unprocurable there.

teize, v. See tease, v.

teize, nap the. See the following term. Also as nab the teize, q.v.

teize, the. A prison whipping effected privately, i.e., not before the justices of the peace (see scroby); mostly in combination, nap the teize, to receive this punishment: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1797, Potter (tease) misuses it of a whipping at the cart's tail—as does Andrewes, 1809; 1859, H; 1890, B & L; † by 1910. Lit., 'take the teize' or tease or teazing (cf. teasing); B & L, however, derive it from tees or T's, 'the iron holdfasts to which criminals are tied when whipped in prison'.

tekelite. A defaulting debtor: among inmates of the debtors' Prison, Whitecross Street, London: ca. 1825–55. Perhaps ex 'Tekel: weighed in the balances, and found wanting,' Daniel v, 27 (O.E.D.).

telegram. A spy; an informer: Australian: 1899, George E. Boxall, Australian Bush-rangers, p. 230, 'This one man was tied, and was spoken to very roughly and uncivilly. The man was supposed to be "a telegram", and this show of harshness "a stall"'; † by 1920. He passes the news very promptly indeed.

telephone number bit. A sentence (bit) for less than life but for over twenty years: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Reckoned in days, it looks like a telephone number.

tell(-)box. 'An improvement on the gaff'—see gaff, n., 4—'and has a fine spring attached to it. The object is to cheat the dealer. The dealer plays with a pack of cards which the player has had a chance to handle, and he rubs the backs of certain of them with sand paper. The rough card adheres to the smooth one, and the fact that it does not move a hair's breadth in the box enables him to know the card that is covered, and he plays accordingly': card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; † by 1920. The box is the carton containing the cards; a 'box' so treated tells the player what to do.

tell off. To sentence (an accused person) to imprisonment: convicts': since ca. 1920. George Ingram, Stir, 1933. Ex coll. tell off, 'to reprimand'.

tell on, work the. To cheat (a person) by means of a tell-box: card-sharpers': 1893, Langdon W. Moore. His Own Story; extant.

tell the royal. See royal, tell the.

tell the tale. To practise the race-course swindle known as telling the tale, a species of confidence trick; in C. 20, to operate as confidence men: 1894, J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats (in the vbl-n. form); 1925, Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, "'Telling the tale" (confidence trick)'; extant. Ex the coll. phrase.

teller of the tale. The agent in prec.: late C. 19–20. Partridge, 1937.

telling the tale. See tell the tale.

Temple(-)picking, 'the Pumping'—i.e., putting under the pump—'of Bailives, Bumms, Setters, Pick-pockets, &c.', B.E., 1698, is not c., but jocular s.

ten commandments. One's fingers and thumbs: not c., but low s.

ten-minute egg is synonymous with hard guy: Sing Sing: C. 20. Amos O. Squire, Sing Sing Doctor, 1935. Thoroughly 'hard-boiled'.

ten penn'orth. See tenpennorth.

ten-percenter. See tenpercenter.

ten spot. A prison-sentence of ten years: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft (an ex-thief speaking) 'You remember when I came back from England after doin' the ten-spot for that bank job . . .?'; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Cloud; 1909, Charles B. Chrysler; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison; Jan. 22, 1927, Flynn's; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. Cf. five-spot. Perhaps ex the s. five-spot, ten-spot, five- or ten-dollar bill.

ten stretch. See stretch, n., 4.

ten years. A ten-dollar bill: 1935, Hargan; extant. By a pun: as 'a ten-spot', in s. = 10 dollars and, in c., 10 years' imprisonment, so ten years = a ten-spot = 10 dollars.

tenant at will is a C. 17 highwaymen's term for a stage-coach or carriage passenger regarded as (prospective) victim. Thomas Middleton, The Blacke Booke, 1604 (see the quot'n at gathering of rents). With a pun on S.E. tenant at will, 'a tenant who holds at the will or pleasure of the lessor' (O.E.D.).

tench. A penitentiary: perhaps low s. rather than c. The earliest record is implied in the next; 1890, B & L, of any penitentiary; 1904, F & H, 'A prison'; † by 1920.

Tench, the. 'Millbank Prison . . . [the] 'Tench (abbreviated from Penitentiary)': 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London, p. 82; Jan. 31, 1857, Punch; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief' in Macmillan's Magazine; 1893, A. Griffiths, A Prison Princess; † by 1904 (F & H).—2. See Camp, the, for an Australian application.—3. Hence, any other penitentiary prison: Australian: 1899, Louis Becke, Old Convict Days (p. 39); slightly ob.

tender, 'good money' (Leverage, 1925), is not c., but commercial s. Short for legal tender.

tenderfoot. Usually in the pl. 'Tenderfeet—those who always look for lifts,' Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932; tramps': since ca. 1918. By a pun on tenderfoot, 'a tyro', and 'a tender foot'.

tenement to let. See house to let.

tenner. A sentence of ten years' imprisonment: 1866 (O.E.D.); 1879, James McGovan, Hunted Down; 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; 1890, B & L; 1903, J. Flynt, Rudrick Cloud (U.S.A.); 1904, F & H; extant. Cf. fiver and :—

tenpennorth or ten penn'orth. A prison sentence of ten years: prob. contemporaneous with seven penn'orth, q.v. (George Ingram, Stir, 1933.)

tenpercenter. A prospector for a gang of thieves, on the basis of ten per cent. of the proceeds: esp., bank-robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant.

tent. A prison cell: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; ob. Cf. hut.—2. A suit of clothes: 1929, Givens; 1929–31, Kernôt, 'Convict clothing'; 1934, Rose; extant. It does at least cover the wearer, much as a tent would.

tercel gentle. For its sense ca. 1605–20, see falconer.—2. Hence, 'a Knight or [a] gentleman of a good Estate; also any rich man,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict. Perhaps ca. 1620–1750: Grose, 1785, has it but does not classify it as c. Ex the lit. S.E. sense, 'the male of the falcon'.

term-trotter, 'a recidivist' (Leverage, 1925): legal s., not c.

termage. In '(the) Vincent's law', which is 'a common deceit or cosenage used in Bowling-allies, amongst the baser sort of people', termage is the 'gaines gotten': 1592, Robert Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, 'The grips'—or confederate better—'and the bawker'—or dishonest bowls-player—'meet together at night, and there they share whatsoever termage they have gotten, for so they'—the gang operating this swindle—'call the money that the pore vincent'—or dupe—'loseth unto them'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; † by 1660—if not by 1630 or so.

termier seems to have flourished ca. 1595–1620—to adopt a very approximate delimitation. Its sense is defined by S. Rowlands in Greenes Ghost

Haunting Coniecatchers, 1602: ' . . . Termers, who travell all the yeere from faire to faire, and have great doing in Westminster hall. These are the Nips and Foists . . . and these have their cloyers and followers'; 1608, Dekker. With pun on the S.E. sense: one who comes to London in term time.

terra firma, 'a landed estate', is not c., but either coll. or humorous s.: ca. 1680–1840. B.E., 1698, 'Has the Cull any Terra Firma? Has the Fool any Land?' Ex the lit. S.E. sense, land as opp. to sea.

terri, 'coal', and terry, 'a heating-iron', are not c., but tinkers' s.: 1890, B & L.

Terrier. An Irishman: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ob. A fusion of the cheerful terrier (and cheerful Irishman) + Terry, short for that very common Irish name, Terence.

terror. A policeman: ca. 1875–1910. Recorded in the glossary (p. 320) of C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 1889. A terror to evil-doers.

terry. See terri . . .

testament. Stolen lead carried away in the pockets of their clothes, by 'blue pigeon flyers': 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter, where it is contrasted with bible: app. ca. 1780–1830. A synonym is prayer-book.

tester, 'a sixpence', is not c.—2. Twenty-five strokes of the lash: convicts': ca. 1820–70: 1859 (see bull, n., 2). Perhaps because they tested a man's fortitude, but prob. in relation to bob, n., 5.

testy. A c. form of tester, 1: C. 19. See cat on tester dodge.

tets. Teeth: S. Africa: late C. 19–20. J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946. By corruption of the English word.

teviss. (In Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, 1857, it is wrongly defined as a sixpence.) A shilling: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 217, where it is given as professional vagrants' c.; 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; by 1904 (F & H) it was costermongers' s. A distorted back-s. form of the word shilling.

Texas tea is prob. the orig. form of tea, marijuana: since ca. 1920. BVB. Cf. tea pad; associated with Texas.

thaan. Cloth: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'Bagrie and I had a weighty lay of thaان that same evening'; † by 1900. Perhaps a disguising of thin, with ref. to degree of thickness. It may, however, represent the second syllable of the Romany words for 'cloth': partan and poktan.

thari or thary, n. and v. Talk, language; to talk, to speak to: tinkers' s., not c.: 1890, B & L; cf. the quot'n at sonny. Ex Shelta.

That man wants burning! A tramps' c.p., applied to any man that disagrees with one's opinion: C. 20. Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935.

theatre. A police court: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; † by 1900. On its stage, criminals play a brief part.

theddy, thedi, tedhi, 'fire': not c., but tinkers' s. 1890, B & L. Prob. ex Shelta.

there, adj. Dependable, trustworthy, loyal: 1933, Ersine; extant. 'All there' in the matter of loyalty and trustworthiness.

there goes his hotel! See anti-goss, ref. of 1859, at end.

these and those. Toes: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; contrast this and that.

thick, n. A bill of exchange; a promissory note: 1823, Egan's Grose (at stiff, of which it is given as a synonym); app. † by 1900. Abbr. thick paper, q.v.; cf. stiff, n., 1.—2. Cocoa: convicts': 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail; by 1900, low s. Ex the thickness of cocoa compared with that of tea.—3. Coffee: C. 20. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Ex the dregs.

thick, adj. Rich: tramps': 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp, (an experienced hobo talking to an inexperienced one) 'That [stealing]'s not my line. I'm a hobo . . . Gimme good castles to rap'—houses to beg at—'and thick jays to touch an' I beats the deck hands down'; ob. Cf. fat, adj., 1.

thick and dense. Expense: mainly Pacific Coast: C. 20. The American Mercury, May 1928, article by Ernest Booth.

thick and thin. Gin (the drink): Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928, where 'gin' is misprinted 'grin'—though both senses may be valid; Convict, 1934; Convict 2nd, 1938. Rhyming.

thick-legged one (or 'un'); mostly in pl. 'Labourers, navvies, or "Thick Legged Ones"', Wm Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 1886; ob. Their own two legs + the shovel or the pick they carry.

thick one (usually 'un'). A sovereign (coin): March 1848, Sessions Papers (Wm Johnson and others); 1859, H; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'Half Thicken . . . Half-sovereign.—Thicken or Quid . . . One Sovereign'; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. In ref. rather to its value than to its thickness.—2. A crown piece: 1859, H; by 1904 (F & H) it was low or, at the least, street s. Ex its size and thickness.—3. A bank vault: U.S.A.: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. It has thick walls and doors.

thick paper. 'Bank-notes and bills of hand, which are termed by thieves thick paper', and a vendor of stolen notes and bills is a smasher of thick paper: 1809, John Mackcoull, Abuses of Justice (see quot'n at smash, v., 4); 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull; ob.

thick shins. Food: 1885, M. Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, 'Millbank for thick shins, And graft at the pump'; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2; extant. Depreciatory.

thick un (or 'un'). See thick one.

thicken. See thick one, ref. of 1886.

thicker. A sovereign (coin): Jan. 16, 1878, Sessions Papers, "'You offered me half a thicker, meaning half a sovereign, if I did not press the charge"'; by ca. 1931, ob. Contrast thin one.

thief. A frequent and successful thief: 1933, Ersine, 'A high compliment'. There are thieves and thieves.

thief taker, in S.E., is precisely what one would expect, but in the C. 18 underworld it app. bore the sense, a receiver of stolen goods, or one who, whether receiver or not, had a gang of thieves in his employment. Several passages in C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718, tend to make this quite clear. 'One Thief-Taker brought to Justice, is more to the Advantage of the City [London], than a hundred Thieves, &c.'; concerning three thieves, for whom there was a warrant for a crime, 'The Thief-taker . . . fearing that he might . . . lose three of the most profitable Customers which belong'd to his felonious Shop, immediately summoned [them] to a friendly Conference, where it was unanimously agreed, that the only way to save them, at this critical Juncture, was for one of them to make himself an Evidence, &c. Well, then, saith the Thief-Taker, in order to blind the Justice, and that he may take the Information, is to induce him to believe that we are doing something for the good of the Public'; 'Those boys are . . . Pick-Pockets, and that Man in the silver button'd Coat, is their Thief-Taker, to help them to Money for the Pocket-Books, Shop-Books, or Writings, and other Goods, that they shall steal'.

thieved, be. To be—to get oneself—arrested: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'There were always bogies about in the station approach [at Victoria]. It would be silly to run the risk of being thieved with this brief in his pocket'; extant. Treated as if one were a thief caught in the act.

thieves' Latin is an old name for cant.

Thieves' Palace, the. 'The price of tobacco at the "Thieves' Palace or Invalid Criminal Hotel", for so the Surrey Prison was sometimes designated by the inmates, was about one shilling per ounce, when I left': 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; † by 1915. Ironical: cf. 'The Castle'.

thieves' whistle, the. A warder's whistle blown during the night: Millbank Prisoners': ca. 1860–1900. Arthur Griffiths, Memorials of Millbank, 1875. Cf. thieved, be.

thieving iron, 'a pair of scissors; a knife', may orig. have been c., but prob. it was only s.: 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields.—2. "'Thieving irons", the hands of rogues', i.e., of pick-pockets; 1823, Bee: this sense (ca. 1818–50) was more prob. c. than s.

thimble, n. A watch: 1797, Potter; Jan. 1799, The Monthly Magazine; 1809, Andrewes, 'Queer thimble—watch good-for-nothing'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1813, Sessions Papers; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III; 1823, Bee; 1827, Sessions Papers; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1839, W. H. Miles; Jan. 16, 1847, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1848, Sinks of London; 1851, Judson, New York; 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell; 1860, C. Martel; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1890, B & L; 1893, No. 747; April 1897, Popular Science Monthly, p. 832 (U.S.A.); 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey (U.S.A.); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1904, F & H, who imply that in England it is ob.; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective (U.S.A.); 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, article by J. M. Sullivan; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, Leverage; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1934, Rose, who wrongly restricts it to a stolen watch; by that date, at latest, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946). Ex the vague resemblance in shape.—2. A purse: American: from ca. 1880. B & L, 1890. A wrong definition, I believe. Ex Romany sense of thimble.

thimble, v. See thimbled (both senses); for the v. is app. unrecorded in any other form.

thimble(-)cove. One who practises the 'thimble rig' (q.v.): 1828, P. Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry and Logic; † by 1900.

thimble(-)crib. A watchmaker's shop: 1812, J. H. Vaux (at crib); 1848, The Ladies' Repository thimble-getter. 'A pickpocket who specializes in watches,' Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 1927; extant. Cf. his clumsier colleague, the old thimble-screwer.

(U.S.A.), 'A jeweler's shop'; † by 1900 in Britain, and well before 1937 in U.S.A. (Irwin). See thimble, n. + crib, n., 2.

thimble-rig is the game or trick known in C. 18 as thimbles and buttons (see Anon., Villainy Unmask'd, 1752, pp. 14-15), wherein the 'rigger' has three or four thimbles and lays odds against anyone detecting the thimble under which lies the button (or, in C. 19-20, usually the pea); the odds against detection are considerable, for the button or pea is under none of the thimbles: 1827, John Wight, More Mornings at Bow Street (cf. entry at egger); 1845, G. A. A'Beckett & Mark Lemon, St George and the Dragon, 'Come toddle, brother prig, Here's an end to thimble rig'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, where it is included among the London street games: 1859, H; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was s. Lit., thimble trick.

thimble-rigger. One who conducts a 'thimble-rig' (q.v.): since ca. 1825: March 10, 1845, Sessions Papers; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was s.—2. See pigeon, n., 7.

thimble-rigging, n. Running a 'thimble-rig': since ca. 1825; by 1864 or so, it was s.

thimble-screwer. A thief that specializes in the wrenching of watches from their guards: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25; Nov. 1870, The Broadway, Anon., 'Among Thieves' (misprinted thumble-s.); † by 1930. See thimble, n., and cf. thimble-getter.

thimble-twister. A 'thimble player' (Villainy Unmask'd, 1752): see thimble rig: app. current ca. 1750-1800.—2. 'Thimble Twisters, thieves who rob persons of their watches': 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; extant. They twist off the 'thimbles' or watches: cf. thimble-getter.

thimble-twisting. Watch-stealing: prob. since ca. 1840 (cf. thimble-twister); 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747, "I used to prac-tize wipe-hauling, tail-buzzing, and thimble-twisting, on Jack and Rose for an hour or two hevery day"; extant. See thimble, n., 1.

thimbled. 'Having, or wearing a watch': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1900. Ex thimble, n.—2. Apprehended; arrested: 1823, Bee, 'Thimbled—laid hold of'; † by 1904 (F & H). With a pun on watch, time-piece, and watch, night police.

thin(-)hips. 'One who has smoked [opium] lying on one side for so long that his hips are slightly atrophied,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic: since the 1920's.

thin one (or 'un). Half a sovereign: 1890, B & L—but prob. it existed from ca. 1860; by 1904 (F & H) it was low s, or perhaps rather, street s. Opp. thick one.—2. A dime; a nickel; a penny: U.S. tramps': 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A dime or two cent piece'; extant. Cf. thin piece.—3. An ordinary safe (contrasted with thick one, 3): U.S.A.: 1929-31, Kernôt; extant.

thin piece or thinpiece. A dime: tramps': 1931, Urbain Ledoux, Ho-bo-ho Medley No. 1; extant. Cf. prec., 2.

thing. (No plural, it seems.) A robbery: 1818, The London Guide; † by 1880. Euphemistic; cf. the next entry, esp. sense 3.—2. A homosexual: U.S.A.: C. 20. BVB. A contemptuous euphemism.

things. 'Women are generally the carriers of base coin; they bring the "things", as they are called, in a stocking to the seller,' W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime, 1839—but this term for counterfeit coin occurs earlier in Sessions Papers, Sept. 1797, p. 513, and in Dec. 1821, p. 55, and in the trial (in 1832) of John and Jane Quin, Constable Richard Tripp stating that '[Jane Quin] asked if I wanted some things'; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; rather ob. Euphemistic.—2. Possibly current ca. 1720-1850, but app. recorded first in H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 1841, is the highwaymen's sense, 'pistols'.—3. 'The Things, stolen articles,' The London Guide, 1818; app. † by 1900. Cf. sense 1 and thing.

third rail. Whiskey: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (Glossary, s.v. skee); 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 'A shot of the third-rail booze that the Silver Alley joints peddled'—where the sense is 'spirituous liquor' and where it is clear that the term has > low s. Ex that third rail which indicates the use of electricity: the implication, therefore, is that such whiskey has an effect comparable with that of electrocution.—2. N. and adj., (an) untouchable in the sense of one who will not take a bribe: 1933, Ersine; extant. Very 'hot stuff' in the favourable sense.

thirteen and a wash-out. Death chamber: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Thirteen: bad luck. Wash-out: a failure, for one has got into a bad spot.

thirteen clean shirts, getting. Serving a three-months' imprisonment: prison c.: 1890, B & L, 'Shirts being changed once a week in prison'; 1904, F & H; very ob.

thirties or thirtys. "What did you understand by thirtys?"—"Thirty shillings' worth of halfpence for a guinea in gold"; i.e., counterfeit halfpence for true gold: counterfeiters': 1780, Sessions Papers, mayoralty of Brackley Kennet, 7th Session, Part IV, trial of George Weaver; app. † by 1900.

this and that. A hat: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

This is me and you. "This is me and you," Cobb went on, using the jail phrase demanding secrecy, Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938: convicts': C. 20. Short for . . . between me and you.

thomyok or tomyok. A magistrate: tinkers' s., not c.: 1890, B & L, 'Lit., great head'.

thonic or, more usually, tonic(k). A halfpenny: tramps': 1780, Sessions Papers, mayoralty of Brackley Kennet, 6th session, Part III, p. 403, 'Not worth a Tonick'; 1886, Wm Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed (as thonic); Sept. 1911, The Nineteenth Century and After, D. MacRitchie, 'The Speech of the Roads', where it is spelt tonic; † by ca. 1940. See tonic.

thrapes. See threps, ref. of 1797.

thrash out the soup. To extract nitroglycerin from dynamite: C. 20: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win. See soup, n., 3.

three bombers, the. The Parole Board: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. They are devastating.

three C's, the. See C's, the three.

three-day habit. A craving unappeased for three days: drug addicts': since ca. 1910. BVB.

three-handed. Three (as adj.): C. 20. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. Cf. two-handed.

three-joint swindle. Three adjoining book-makers' stands operating under the man in the middle, the winnings being passed to him and the confederates welshing if they lose: race-course gangs': since ca. 1920. Michael Fane, Racecourse Swindles, 1936.

three-kidney man is a white-slavers' term of C. 20, as in Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928: "You're a 'three-kidney man' already" (has three women), this being spoken to a professional pimp.

three-legged mare (or stool). (Tyburn) gallows: 1698, B.E. (stool); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (both); Grose. Not, I think, c., but s.; both B.E. and Grose imply that these terms are s. Grose (1785): "The gallows, formerly consisting of three posts, over which were laid three transverse beams. This clumsy machine has lately given place to . . . the new drop".

three moon. A prison sentence of three months: 1859, H; † by 1900. See moon.

three or four. A door: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

three penn'orth. Three years' penal servitude: C. 20. In, e.g., Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938. Also three pennyworth, as in Daily Express, March 25, 1938.

three-penny upright, 'a retailer of love, who, for the sum mentioned, dispenses her favours standing against a wall' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), is not c., but low s.

three-quarters (of a peck). Neck: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, "Take the measure, Charley, from his $\frac{3}{4}$." Take the handkerchief from his neck'; by 1870, low, and by 1880, gen. rhyming s.

three-spot. A three-year prison term: 1902, Josiah Flynt, The Little Brother; extant. Cf. five-spot, one-spot, ten-spot, two-spot.

three threads; 'half common Ale, and the rest Stout or Double Beer' (B.E., 1698); is not c.—not that B.E. claims it as c.—but drinkers' s.

three-up, 'toss-halfpenny': not c., but s.

threepenny upright. See three-penny upright.

threer. A convict with a three-years' sentence: prob. since ca. 1820 and mostly Australian. Price Warung, Tales of the Early Days, 1894. Cf. fiveer, nineer, sevenner, tenner.

threps or threpps. 'Threpps, c. Three-pence,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, in the odd form, thrapes; 1859, H (thrups)—but by that time it had > s. Via the Cockney pronunciation threppence.

threswins, 'three cents or pence', is an American form of tres wins: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1900.

thrower. See througher.

through, go. To search (a person): 1859, Matsell; by 1890, s. I.e., through his pockets.

through it; through the piece. 'Getting acquitted on an indictment, or surmounting any other trouble or difficulty, is called getting through it, or thro' the piece; so, to get a man through it, &c., is to extricate him by virtue of your counsel and friendly assistance; sometimes called pulling him through it': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, cribbingly; app. † by 1890.

througher, occ. spelt thrower (pron. throo'er). A public-house or other building with an exit both at front and at back: C. 20. Charles Gordon, Crooks of the Underworld, 1929 (quot'n at break, n., 2). A way through—a thoroughfare, as it were.

throw, n. 'A newspaper or other article placed under the chin of the victim of a pickpocket mob to divert his attention and obstruct his vision,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937; extant. Perhaps by pun on chuck, 'to throw', and chuck under the chin.

throw, v. 'To cheat; to rob; to steal': 1859, Matsell; slightly ob. Cf. fling, v., 1, for semantics. —2. 'I can fall, but no bull could throw me . . . I can be arrested, but no officer can send me to prison,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; extant. Cf. throw down, v.—3. To get away from; to escape: 1904, Life in Sing Sing (see quot'n at Pinks); extant. Short for throw (a person) off the scent.—4. See throw down, v., 2.

throw a brodie. See brodie.

throw a crab. See crab, v.

throw a hump. To place the intended victim in a favourable position to have his pockets picked by the 'wire': May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; extant. Cf. put one's back up and set up.

throw a meter. See meter.

throw a wing-ding. See chuck a wing-ding.

throw an ing-bing. To go insane in prison: convicts: 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest; 1934, Howard N. Rose; by 1943 (Raymond Chandler, The High Window) it was police and journalist s. On throw a fit; the ing-bing is merely a perversion of whingding (q.v.); throw a whingding is an alternative: BVB, 1942.

throw-down, n. A refusal or rebuff, e.g., to a tramp's request for free food: 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp, an 'old hand' hobo speaking, 'I can tell every shot'—every time—'what a castle'—a house—'is goin' to give up when you go and give it the rap. I can tell every time where and when a guy'll get the throw down'; by 1925 (see Arthur Stringer's The Diamond Thieves) it was low s. Cf. :—

throw-down, v. To betray (a person) or to desert (him or her); to disappoint 'in a big way', to 'let down' badly: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Thrown Down. Betrayed; deserted'; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, "He's been thrown down by twenty different guys, an' yet he comes right back an' helps th' next feller that asks him"; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Cf. the lit. sense of L. dejicere. —2. (Also throw.) To deposit (money): 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'A guy throws down say a ten spot. . . . Some t'rows five, some ten'; ob.

throw down on. To draw one's gun on (a person), to threaten him with a revolver: 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece; extant. One raises a revolver and then brings it rapidly down to shoulder height.

throw me in the dirt. A shirt: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1865, low rhyming s.

throw-me-out. See throw-out.

throw-off, n. A 'front'—personal appearance and the impression one makes: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss (ch. xiv); ob. Cf. flash, n., 4 and 5; see the v.—2. A pretence; a subterfuge: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, "That's only a throw-off," sneered Sammy'; slightly ob. A natural pejorative development ex sense 1.

throw off, v. 'To talk in a sarcastical strain, so as to convey offensive allusions under the mask of pleasantries': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; 1887, Baumann; by 1890, s. Perhaps elliptical for 'to throw off one's jealousy or hatred or contempt'.—2. 'To begin to talk flash, and speak freely of robberies past, or in contemplation, when in company with family people . . .; meaning to banish'—throw off—'all reserve, none but friends being present': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; 1887, Baumann; ob. by 1910; † by 1940. Cf. flash, v.

throw off one's slang. See slang, throw off one's.

throw one's (or the) feet. 'Throw the Feet: to beg, "hustle", or do anything that involves much action,' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft (in the one's form); 1902, Flynt, The Little Brother (id.); 1904, F & H (the); 1907, Jack London, The Road, where the one's form is used and where (p. 12, English edition, 1914) it is implied that the term was already current in 1892; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'To walk; to beg; to do anything that calls for action'; by ca. 1920, British; 1922, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To beg. To hurry away'; 1937, Partidge; 1939, Terence McGovern, It Paid to Be Tough, "'Throw his meats" (walk the streets)'—perhaps influenced by English rhyming s. plates of meat, 'feet'; extant. To keep them moving, 'chuck them about'.

throw one's (or the) guts. To tell everything one knows, esp. to the police: 1927, Kane (. . . the); 1931, Urbain Ledoux, Ho-bo-ho Medley No. 1 (. . . one's . . .); 1931, Stiff, 'Throw your guts. To squeal. To give information to the bulls'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Throw the Guts.—To tell everything one knows; to break a confidence; to confess'; by 1931, low s. Cf. spill one's guts.

throw one's meats. See throw one's feet, ref. of 1939.

throw(-)out; also throw-me-out. Pretended paralysis; a beggar feigning paralysis: beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin (both senses: throw out); 1933, Ersine, 'A beggar who can force an arm or leg in or out of joint at will'; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan, 'The throw-me-out is the phony paralytic'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. A throwing-out-of-joint.

throw slugs. To engage in a gang battle or any other gun fight: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. A slug = a bullet.

throw the book at. To award the maximum sentence to (an accused person): Feb. 6, 1932, Flynn's, Bill Hawley; 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; 1936, Herbert Corey; extant. I.e., the whole book of the law, cf. book, n., 3.

throw the feet. See throw one's feet.

throw one's guts. See throw one's guts.

throw the key away. To get, (have thrown . . .) to be serving, a life sentence: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. The key to one's house, one's freedom.

throw the mitt; often as vbl n., throwing . . . 'A lesson in the art of throwing the mit (dipping throw up. To force (a man), at the point of a gun, to raise his arms: since ca. 1910: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'If I had him in a dark street I wouldn't hesitate to "throw him up" and he would "go up" too'; ob. Ex 'Throw up your hands!'.—2. To confess; to tell: Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's, John Wilstach, 'The Gun Moll'; slightly ob. Cf. spill one's guts.

[i.e., pickpocketry],' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; extant. Cf. S.E. light-fingered gentry; see mitt, n., 2.

thrum-mop; thrumbuskins. Threepence: 1812, J. H. Vaux (both); † by 1900. Cf. thrum wins.

thrum wins. Threepence: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; app. † by 1800.

thrumbuskins. See thrum-mop.

thrummer, 'a threepenny bit', is app. a s., not a c., derivative of thrums (H, 1859). It may, however, have been c. among tramps: witness, Wm Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 1886.

thrums. 'Thrumms, c. Three-pence. Tip me Thrumms, c. Lend me Three-pence,' B.E., 1698; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed. (thrums); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1767, Sessions Papers; 1785, Groser; 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, A Dict. of Cant and Slang, where it is misprinted thums; 1812, J. H. Vaux; by 1820, it was low s., if we may accept the testimony of Bee (1823): 'Used by low bidders, at low auctions'. Possibly c. in U.S.A.—for 'three cents'—until ca. 1870 (Matsell). Perhaps a telescoping of thrum wins, although the latter is recorded later.

thrups. See threps.

thrust. 'The Thrust is a Silk Waistcoat, finely ornamented with brass well gilt, to imitate gold, Anon., Thieving Detected, 1777; † by 1870. Perhaps because it is thrust on the notice of the prospective dupes.—2. Hence (?), the swindle practised therewith (the thrust): 1777, Thieving Detected, 'This is a species of defraud that hath long been in practice; many not only get a living by it, but is able to lay by a great deal of money'; † by 1870.—3. A swindler practising this dodge: 1777, Thieving Detected, 'Their business is to find out those landlords and landladies of inns, public houses, &c. that they think are weak, soft, foolish people, capable of being imposed upon'; they frequent these places and wear their wonderful waistcoats; when they see that they have made a good impression, they raise a substantial loan on these garments, and disappear; app. † by 1820.

thud, n. A person's walk or manner of walking: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, p. 22, 'Condom . . . would whistle and mimic Bray's "thud" all over the wing' of the prison; † by 1930. Ex the thudding of heavy steps.

thud, v. To walk: 1893, Confessions of a Convict (glossary), ed. by Julian Hawthorne; † by 1930. Ex the n.

thumb. To accost (a person): 1929–31, Kernôt; July 5, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; extant. Cf. 'thumb a lift (from a car-driver)'. thumb-screw. A gimlet (esp., one used by burglars): 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); ob. Ex a vague resemblance.

thumble-screw. See thimble-screw, reference of 1870.

thumbler is a misprint for tumbler, cart. (Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708.)

thumby. A tramp with fingers either missing or mutilated: tramps: C. 20. Stiff, 1931. Result: he is 'all thumbs'.

thumpkin. 'A barn of hay': U.S.A. (— 1794), and prob. English (perhaps from as early as 1760); 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; 1904, F & H; † by 1910. Perhaps thump + ken (a place).

thums is a misprint for thrums.

thundlers is a misprint for trundlers: 1735 ed. of The Triumph of Wit.

Tib or tib is a rare abbr. of the next: 1725, A New Canting Dict., Song XVIII, 'On Red-shanks, and Tibs thou shalt ev'ry Day dine.'—2. A young crook: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

Tib of(f) the buttery. 'A Rogue or tyb of the buttery, a Goose,' Harman, 1566; 1608, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'A Tib of the Buttry . . . a Goose'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1887 (Baumann). Tib is a personification: cf. s. Den(n)is, a pig.

tibby or tibi. "I was up to his slang and down upon his tibi," means a knowledge of the kid's—'young thief's'—talk, and of his loco-motions, or what he would be after, what was to be the effect thereof: 1823, Bee (at Down and Up); by 1900, it was low s. Perhaps cf. low s. tibby, 'the head', as in 'For to get me on the hop, or on my tibby drop, | You must wake up very early in the morning', The Chickaleary Cove, ca. 1864.

tic-tac; tic-tac man. See ticktack; tick-tack man.

tick. A watch: Oct. 16–17, 1776, Sessions Papers, 'He said he had got two ticks, meaning watches'; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'We made a regular stall for a tick and reader, but the cull was up to us'; 1792, The Minor Jockey Club; 1797, Potter; 1890, B & L; † by 1900. Same semantics as for ticker.—2. 'Graft; mode of theft,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: slightly ob. Perhaps ex s. on tick, 'on credit'.

tick, bit and sack-diver. A pickpocket specializing in watches, purses (sacks) and money (bit): 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; † by 1870. See diver.

tick-off, 'a fortune-teller': showmen's and fair-ground s. Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934.

Tick-Rome is a misprint for tickrum.

tick-tack, give the. To give the agreed word—notice—warning: Glasgow: C. 20. MacArthur & Long, No Mean City, 1935. Ex:—

tick-tack man is English, tick-talk American, race-course s. for 'one who makes signals' at racing.—2. In U.S.A., esp. on the Pacific Coast, tick-tack is, in C. 20, c. for 'racing-track': M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

ticker. This term, which seems to belong to the underworld of ca. 1740–1800, occurs in Villainy Unmask'd, 1752: 'There is another Class of dangerous Rogues, who are known by the name of Tickers, who . . . travel to all Fairs and Markets in the Kingdom, and have their Troop and associate Gangs' of agents and drovers. 'The Trade of this Tribe is to buy Horses, Oxen, Cows, Sheep, Hogs, Cloth, Hops, Malt, Corn, and all other Commodities upon Tick, or Credit'; they never pay the money, always sell the stock elsewhere, and often raise further money (never repaid) on the security of that stock before its final disposal.—2. A watch: 1800, The Oracle ('Fashionable Characters: A Kiddy'), 'They secured three gold tickers'; 1816, Sessions Papers; 1823, Bee; 1828, P. Egan, Finish; 1832, Sessions Papers; 1838, Dickens; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad; 1841, W. Leman Rede, Sixteen String Jack; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850, it had > s. At some time before 1848, it had > current in U.S.A.: witness E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York. Ex the noise it makes when going: cf. tick.

ticket, n. 'Because railroad civilization is so backward in the West, the tramps have invented a seat which greatly aids their truck-riding. They call it a "ticket", but it is simply a small piece of board, with two cleats nailed on one side, which fit over a rod and keep the seat firm,' J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (p. 287), 1899; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—2. A sentence to imprisonment: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. the v.; a one-way ticket.—3. A prison report: convicts': 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. sense 2. ticket, v., 'to send (a person) to prison', is not c., but low s.: 1898, Fergus Hume, Hagar of the Pawn Shop, 'They ticketed me for horse-coping'. Cf. ticket, n., 2.

ticketer. A beggar that makes frequent use of the tickets that admit one to refuges for the destitute: perhaps c., but prob. s.; 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen.

tickety-boo, the. The Deputy Warden: convicts': since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Jim Phelan, Murder by Numbers, 1941. An elaborate perversion of deputy (prob. in pronunciation deppity).

tickle. A successful transaction or theft: since ca. 1920. Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938; Partridge, 1938, 'tickle, have a'. To have (obtained) a haul of booty.' Euphemistic.

tickle the peter. See peter, tickle the.

tickler, in Sessions Papers, May 1816 (p. 249), is a mishearing of ticker, 2; but in ibid., Oct. 1817 (p. 512), it seems to be 'a stick, staff, or cudgel'—which is, however, a colloquialism.—2. The American sense 'a pocket flask' (Leverage, 1925) is s.—prob. low, at first—not c. It tickles one's hip or rump.—3. A moustache: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar (U.S.A.): low s. rather than c. It tickles the girls.—4. An expert at picking locks; a picklock (the instrument): 1935, The Garda Review; extant.

ticklers. Ribs: Jan. 22, 1927, Flynn's, Roy W. Hinds, 'The Double Crosser', "'I pushes my gat in this bimbo's ticklers," he was saying'; extant. Ex the too general tendency of human beings to tickle others in the ribs.

tickrum. A licence: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue (glossary), where it is misspelt (or misprinted) tick-rome, as though rome = rum, excellent: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.)—but prob. the term was † by 1820. Perhaps ex jackrum on ticket.

tictac is short for tick-tack man.

tid-bit. 'Even the ex-thief told me that he did not think the conduct of the swell "tid-bit" (girl) was really "on the level",' Hutchins Hapgood, Types from City Streets, 1910; † by 1930. A dainty morsel.

tiddly wink. A drink (strong liquor): Pacific Coast: C. 20. Convict, 1934; M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

tie, in the sense of 'neckcloth', seems to have, ca. 1700-30, been c.: in 1708, it appears in the c. glossary of the Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., as 'Tye, a Neckcloth'; in C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718, as 'Tye, alias Neckcloath'. Perhaps ex the nautical j. sense of the term: a rope, a cable.—2. Trust: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; † by 1820. Cf. modern coll. tie*, an obligation.

tie pass. A fictitious permit from a railroad president to walk along the track: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; 1931, IA; and others. He walks along the ties or sleepers.

tie-up, n. A hanging: 1828, P. Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry and Logic; † by 1910.

tie up, v. 'To tye up any particular custom, practice, or habit, is synonymous with knifeing, stowing, turning it up, or stashing it. To tye it up is a phrase, which, used emphatically, is generally understood to mean quitting a course of depredation and wickedness': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1839, Brandon, 'Tied up priggish—given over thieving'; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was s. I.e., to tie it up so that it can't escape.

tied; tied-up. Applied to commercial crook's victim when (tied) he sends for money; when (tied-up) he enters the faked-stock exchange: 1936, Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld—but current at least a decade earlier; extant.

tier, climb (or run) a. See climb a tier.

ties, hit the. See hit the ties.

tiff; tiffing. To lie with a woman; concubation: 1698, B.E., 'Tiffing, c. lying with a Wench'; so too in A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; by mid-C. 19, a term in venery. Perhaps a survival of C. 15 S.E. tiff, 'to be idly employed, to be busy about or with trifles' (O.E.D., not verbatim): ? hence, 'to dally'; cf. Shakespeare's silken dalliance.

tiger, 'a parasite', is not c., but s.—2. The tiger, 'faro', is gamblers' s., not c.; cf. tiger, fight the.—3. Bacon: 1889 (see Sheenie's fear); in 1904, F & H classify it as navvies' s. Bacon and tigers are striped.

tiger, fight the. To play at faro: 1847 (D.A.E.); 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service: possibly c. at first, but prob. always s. Later, buck agin (or against the tiger, then buck the tiger, the former (. . . agin . . .) occurring in G. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police, 1887.

tiger-hunter. A gambler: 1896, Lillard, Poker Stories; by 1904 (F & H) it was s. See tiger, 2.—2. A mat-mender: British convicts': C. 20. Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House, 1932. 'Prob. ex rugs of tiger-skin,' Partridge, 1937.

tiger-juice. Whiskey: bootleggers': April 13, 1929, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson, 'The Roaring Road'; after 1934, reminiscent only. It's a fierce drink.

tiggy. A detective: 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers, "It shows you ain't too anxious . . . to be recognised by the tiggies, sec?"; 1914, E. Pugh, The Cockney at Home; by 1918, low s. By a corruption of 'detective'.

tightener, 'a dinner; any hearty meal', is s. (orig. low), not c. The same applies to do a tightener, to dine (well).

tike-lurker. A dog-stealer: since the 1850's; ob. Cf. :—

tike-lurking, n. Dog-stealing: 1859, H; ob. See lurk, v.; tike is s. for a dog.

tilbury, 'a sixpence': not c., as stated by B & L, but s.

tilda. A tramps' swag (in s., bluey, matilda): Australian tramps': since ca. 1910. Baker, 1942. Cf. waltzing Matilda, Australian s. for 'a going, a being on—or, engaged in—tramp or tramping'.

tile, n., 'a hat', may orig. have been c. (1821, D. Haggart, Life); but it seems to have been s. as early as 1823 (O.E.D.): so perhaps it was always s. Nevertheless, the term was, ca. 1850-1900, almost certainly c. in the U.S.A.: witness the quot'n at pit, 3, and its occurrence in State Prison Life, 1871. Tiles cover roofs of houses and heads of men.

tile, v. 'This . . . traveler gets on a street car, and the pickpockets at once select him as their "mark". He is immediately pressed and hemmed in by the gang, and the hand that is not religiously guarding the treasure in his pocket is kept back by the shoulder of one of the stalls. A quiet command "tile him!" is given, and the countryman's hat is shoved forward from behind. The countryman not being able to use his other arm, pulls his hand out of his pocket and secures his hat and the robbery is effected: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; app. † by 1920. Ex prec.

tile-frisking, n. 'Stealing hats from halls': since ca. 1820: B & L, 1890; † by 1930. See frisk, v.

tiled down. Out of the way; hidden: ca. 1840-1900, Anon., No. 747, 1893. Under the tiles: (hidden) in the attic.

tiler. (Occ. spelt tyler.) See Adam; but also independently as in The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), 1845, 'We spied the celebrated Jack Roach, accompanied by two "knucks" or pickpockets, one of whom we presume was his "tiler" or receiver' (who takes the stolen property).

till-boy. 'An apprentice or shopman who makes free with the cash in his master's till': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1920. Humorously euphemistic.

till-diver. 'Till-Divers. Such as go into Shops with pretence to buy something, and with several Excuses of seeing this Thing and that Thing, to make the Shopkeeper turn his Back often, they put a small Whalebone, daub'd at the End with Birdlime, into the till of the counter, and draw up the Money; but this Employment is now grown something out of date,' 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; app. † by 1780. See diver.

till-frisker. A thief specializing in the emptying of tills during the absence of the shopmen: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25; ob. See frisk, v.

till-sneak. A shoplifter that specializes in stealing from the till: 1887, H. Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; by 1895, low s. Cf. the preceding three entries.

till-tapper. A thief specializing in tills: prob. from ca. 1870 (cf. till-tapping); 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow (see quot'n at single-driller); 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. till-frisker.

till-tapping. The activities or profession of a till-sneak: 1876, P. Farley, Criminals of America; extant. Cf. prec.

tilt. Some kind of rogue: 1620, Dekker, his Dreame, where it is spelt tylt (O.E.D.). Perhaps because he swaggeringly wore a sword or was ever ready to engage in a duel.

tilter. A sword: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1830. Ex S.E. tilter, 'a combatant in a tilt (or a joust)'.

timber, n. See timbers.—2. Matches: 1827, see timber-merchant; independently in Sinks of London, 1848, and in Matsell, 1859; by 1909 (Ware), low s. Humorous.—3. Among American tramps, timber is 'a clubbing at the hands of the toughs of a town unfriendly to tramps. (See "Saps"),' J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; ibid., p. 389, 'This word is gradually giving way to "saps"'; 1904, F & H; slightly ob. Cf saps, q.v. Short for timber lesson; cf. early C. 19 s. give (a horse) the timber, to apply switch (or whip) to it.—4. Hence, a nightstick, baton, club: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant.

timber, v.i. To administer a 'timber-lesson': 1899, Flynt, Tramping, p. 100; ob. Ex timber, n., 3; or perhaps imm. ex timber-lesson.

timber beast. See timber wolf.

Timber Grove. 'I was patrolling Wood Street, Deansgate, euphoniously called by the "crooks" Timber Grove,' Jerome Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life, Vol. II, 1901: Manchester underworld's: ca. 1860-1910.

timber-lesson is the early form of timber, 3: Aug. 1891, The Contemporary Review, Josiah Flynt, 'The American Tramp', 'The people frequently take the tramp question into their own hands . . . The tramps call these muscular attentions to their cases "timber lessons", because in the towns hostile to Trampdom the people drive the beggars away with clubs, stout sticks, etc.'; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (p. 99); slightly ob.

timber-merchant. A match-seller: 1827, Peter Cunningham, Two Years in New South Wales; 'Disguised as a timber-merchant', glossed as 'Beggars with matches' in 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. cxxxii; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; by 1904 (F & H) it was low s. Cf. timber, 2. Synonymous with spunk-fencer; properly with reference to wooden matches.

timber toe. See timber toes.

timber-toed. 'Scary; cowardly: easily alarmed': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; app. † by 1920. Ex next entry: a man with a wooden leg is afraid of being knocked down.

timber toes; timber toe (Grose 1785), rare. A man with a wooden leg: not c., but s.

timber up. To beat, belabour with baton or club: Ersine, 1933; extant. Cf. timber, n., 3, 4.

timber wolf; timber beast. A logger: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo (the latter); 1925, Glen H. Mullin (id.); Stiff, 1931 (both terms). Humorous: wolves haunt the forest lands.

timbers. 'Disguised begging by selling lead pencils,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923, on the authority of Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hobos, 1918; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Tramps who beg under pretence of peddling pencils'; extant. Cf. timber-merchant.—2. The pencils carried by these tramps and beggars: since ca. 1918. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—3. A wooden-legged man: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin. Ex naval s. timbers, 'legs': as in shiver my timbers!

time. See the next two entries. Independently as in Ersine, 1933, 'What's your time?—i.e., your sentence.

time, to do. 'to serve a prison sentence', and first (or second or . . .) timer, 'a first (etc.)-time prisoner', are not c., but s.

time on that! 'Wait awhile, sir; not so fast': 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Take your time . . .!

timer. A vault, or a safe, with a time lock: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

Timor. 'It is an old legend amongst the more ignorant of the convicts, that Timor, or as they call it "Timo", is easily attainable by land from New South Wales, and that once there they would be free from recapture,' Alexander Harris, The Emigrant Family (III, 55), 1849: Australian convicts': ca. 1810-70.

tin, 'money', is not c., but s.—orig. low s.; as 'a sheriff's badge', it is American s.—2. 'A can of opium . . . A one gallon can of alcohol,' Ersine, 1933: U.S.A.; extant.

tin apple. A hand-grenade: March 1930, Flynn's, Robert Carse, 'Jail Break!'; extant. Cf. pineapple.

tin(-)can, n., or as one word. A petty gambler: 1933, Ersine; extant. A pun on tin horn.

tin-can, v. To place a prisoner in a dark-cell in prison: 1925, Leverage; extant. By a pun on can (a prison).

tin-ear, n. An (habitual) eavesdropper: Australian: since ca. 1918. Baker, 1942. Ex:—

tin(-)ear, v. To eavesdrop: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; slightly ob. Perhaps cf. s. tin, 'a detective's badge', and elephant ears (a detective).—2. Hence, to interrogate (someone): 1929-31, Kernôt; extant.

tin horn. A shady 'sport'; a petty swindler; a near-criminal in a small way: tramps': app. since ca. 1890, to judge from Jack London, The Road, 1907, ' . . . Reno, Nevada, in the summer of 1892. Also, it was fair-time; and the town was filled with petty crooks and tin-horns, to say nothing of a vast and hungry horde of hoboes'; 1931, Stiff, 'A petty sport hanging around the main stem. He is sometimes called a rustler'; extant.

tin-opener. A safe-robber's instrument, applied to the back of a safe: 1925, J. C. Goodwin, Queer Fish, 'The most popular method involved the employment of a contrivance appropriately called the "tin opener". This . . . resembled a large tin opener of great levering power having a sharp claw at its "business end"', extant.

tin plate is circus s., not c., for 'a small-town marshal or constable': The White Tops, July-Aug. 1928, 'Circus Glossary'.

tin-ribs. A policeman: ca. 1870-1900. Recorded in the glossary (pp. 320-3) of C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 1889. Ex the fact that he is comparatively well protected against blows on the ribs.

tin star. A private detective: 1933, Ersine; extant. Prob. suggested by:—

tin-star mug. A police detective; a uniformed policeman: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'They' (the shoplifters) 'sidestep th' tinstar mugs in th' jam'; extant. Ex his badge.

tin throne. A water-closet in the cell: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Ironic and sarcastic.

ting-a-ling. A finger-ring: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

tinkard, 'a (begging) tinker', is classified by F & H as c.; it is merely a C. 16 form of S.E. tinker.

tinker. 'They both ran after me and said, I had given them a tinker, meaning a bad sixpence': 1825, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, I; † by 1910. One that has been tinkered with.—2. A bungler; a tyro: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (bungler); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'A poor craftsman. A novice burglar'; 1925, Leverage, 'A safe-blower's assistant'; 1931, IA, 'A burglar'; extant. One who tinkers with things, one who potters about, is often a bungler too.

tinkered out, ppl adj.; other parts of the v. are rare. Caught or captured by the police; arrested: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Capture'; extant. Prob. ex tinker, 2.

tinkler. As 'a bell', this has never, I think, been English c., despite Dickens's app. belief (sec Oliver Twist, 1838) that it was.

tinney. See the 1821 ref. in:—

tinny. A fire: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'They wait an Opportunity till the Maid goes to make the Tinny, that is, the Fire'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Tinny, a fire; a conflagration'; 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London (the comparatively rare variant tinney); 1823, Bee (id.); 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'The half-and-half [i.e., half-hearted] coves, who do not like to leave their tinneys'; 1887, Baumann; app. † by 1900. Prob. ex the Gaelic (and Erse) teine, 'fire', or imm. ex Shelta tini (cf. Bog Latin tinim).—2. Hence (because the situation becomes too 'hot' for a person), a discovery of crime or of a criminal: 1809, John Mackcoull, Abuses of Justice, 'A tinney has broke out as hot as hell'; † by 1920. Cf. U.S. heat.

tinny-hunter. 'Tinny-hunters, persons whose practice it is to attend fires, for the purpose of plundering the unfortunate sufferers, under pretence of assisting them to remove their property': 1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan's Grosc, 1823; † by 1903 (F & H). See tinny.

tip, n. Liquor; a draught thereof: 1698, B.E., 'A Tub of good Tip . . . a Cask of strong Drink'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. This sense, which flourished ca. 1680-1840, may have originated as c., but it had almost certainly > s. by 1750 at latest. Abbr. tipple, liquor.—2. 'The tip is a term frequently used to signify the money concerned in any dealings or contract existing between parties; synonymous with the dues': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, The London Guide; 1818-24, P. Egan, Boxiana, I-IV, where it usually = (a) payment; 1823, Bee, '"How much is the tip?" What is the payment (due)?'; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Tip, money' † by 1900. Cf. tippery; prob. ex tip, v., 1.—3. A ticket office: U.S.A.: 1871, State Prison Life (at Jeffersonville, Southern Indiana); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'A ticket office, a cashier's cage'; extant. From a ticket office, the ticket clerk gives out (cf. tip, v., 1) the tickets.—4. 'I, who was the "wire" [or actual pickpocket], gave Jack and Zack the tip (thief's cough), and they stalled, one in front, one behind,' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904: U.S.A.; extant. Cf. tip off, n.—5. 'Advance knowledge,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; by 1908, low s. Ex English s. 'to give a person the tip' (to warn him, to apprise him in advance).—6. A crowd: U.S.A.: Feb. 6, 1926, Flynn's, '"The tip has melted," (Meaning, the crowd has dispersed)'; by 1929 (The Saturday Evening Post, Oct. 19, 'Alagazam') it was well-established s. among pitchmen.—7. (Prob. ex 4-5.) A raid effected, without a warrant, on a speakeasy: U.S.A. ca. 1920-33. Kernôt, 1929-31.

tip, v. To give: 1611, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 'Tip me that Cheate, Give me that thing'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Till Crampings [sic] quire tip Cove his hire'; 1698, B.E., 'Tip, c. to give or lend . . . Tip your Lour, or Cole or I'll Mill ye, c. give me your Money or I'll kill ye. Tip the Culls a Sock, for they are sawcy, c. Knock down the Men for resisting . . . Tip me a Hog, c. lend me a Shilling'; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1725, A New Canting Dict., plagiarizing B.E.; 1728, D. Defoc; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1785, Grose (at dace and at tip); 1797, Potter (tipp); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To give, pay, or bribe'; 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, 'Tip, to pay money'; 1823, Bee, '"To tip", is to pay'; 1839, Brandon; 1848, The Ladies' Repository, 'Tip—to give; pass' (U.S.A.); 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, Snowden; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1860, low s. in Britain; by 1890, low s. in U.S.A. 'Possibly related to tip [to overthrow . . . cause to fall], through the notion of touching lightly, but this is very uncertain' (O.E.D.).—2. Hence, to lend: from ca. 1690 (see sense 1, references of 1698, 1725 and 1785): app. † by 1840.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) To speak; only in tip rum whids, and tip queer whids, to speak well, to speak ill: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; app. † by 1800. Much less gen. than cut (queer whids). Cf. S.E. give fair words and give utterance. tip, stand the. 'They' (the underworld) 'say of a person who is known to be corruptible, that he will stand the tip': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1890. See tip, n., 2.

tip, take the. 'To receive a bribe in any shape': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1890. See tip, n., 2.

tip a cha(u)nt. See chant, tip a.

tip a queer one. To swindle (a person) with a piece of sham jewellery: 1738 (see queer, adj., 1); † by 1870. See tip, v., 1, and queer one.

tip and tap. A cap: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; cf. English titfer (tit-for-tat), a hat.

tip mob. See tip racket.

tip off, n. (A laying of) information; a warning: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft (p. 164); Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's (see split, v., 4), by which date it was also police s. Ex the v.; cf. —2. In British c., a person supplying information to crooks and criminals: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.

tip off, v. To die: late C. 17-18. B.E., ca. 1690. Prob. 'to fall off, fall over'.—2. To warn (a person); give him 'the office': U.S.A.: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, where the nuance is 'warn others about, inform others about (a person)'; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (id.: Glossary, at lighthouse); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, Glossary, 'A thief considers himself "tipped off" when a mouthpiece or detective points him out in the street or "calls the turn" on him at the Front Office'; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'They'—a gang of thieves—'get "tipped off" to some store where there is a line of valuable goods'; 1924, George C.

Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Tip off—to warn, to supply with correct information'; by ca. 1928, police s. In C. 20, current in Canada, where, by 1946 (anon. letter, June 9), it was low s.—3. 'To disconnect a burglar alarm. "You better tip off the bug first"', Ersine, 1933: U.S.A.; extant. To depress the switch—tip over the electric button.

tip (a person) one's daddle. See daddle, tip . . .

tip (a person) one's fam. See fam, tip.

tip-over, n. A raid made, without warrant, on a 'speakeasy': racketeers': 1930, Burke; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex the v.—2. A 'push-over', anything easy: 1933, Ersine; extant.

tip over, v. To raid (e.g., a shop) and rob it: 1930 (implied in the n.); Aug. 10, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, 'You . . . case the new shop and we'll tip it over'; extant. To 'upset' it.

tip Peter. See Peter, tip.

tip (one) queer. See queer, n., 3.

tip racket, the; and its operators, a tip mob. A species of confidence-trick swindle—ending in a stacked card game—worked against jewellers: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, which contains an enlightening chapter on the subject; extant.

tip-slang. Abusive; foul-mouthed: ca. 1810–50. P. Egan, 1821 (see mill doll).

Tip Street, be in. To be flush of money: 1821, W. T. Moncrieff, Tom and Jerry; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. Ex tip, n., 2, or tip, v., 1 and 2.

tip the brads. See brads.

tip the bubo. See bubo, 2.

tip the cole, to pay money: see tip, v., quot'n of 1698. The phrase > set, and in C. 18—early 19 it often meant 'to pay the reckoning'—see, e.g., the quot'n at scan.

tip the cracksman's crook. See cracksman's crook . . .

tip the double. Earliest as tip the double to sherry, to run off, decamp, escape: 1767, Sessions Papers (trial of Craycraft and Bown), 'She has tipped you the double'; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society (see quot'n at rum mizzler); 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'To tip any one the double; to run away in his debt'; 1836, Autobiography of Jack Ketch; by 1850, it was s. Lit., give (a person) the double (to sherry); sherry is Zeres, the Spanish town. Cf. s. go to Jericho.—2. Hence, to dismiss, 'give the go-by' (to, e.g., a suitor): 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; † by 1860.

tip the fam. See fam, tip.

tip the forks. See forks, tip the.

tip the lap. To give information to the police: to speak 'out of turn': Feb. 13, 1937, Flynn's Richard Sale, 'If you tip th' lap—if you tell them bulls we're here or you seen—you'll get a slug through the skull'; extant. With a pun on spill one's guts.

tip (a person) the mauley. To shake hands (with: 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxv, has tip mauleys; by 1870, s. See tip, v., 1, and mauley.

tip the office is a frequent variant of give the office (see office, n.): to give (a person) a warning: 1838, Glascock, Land Sharks and Sea Gulls; by 1870, low s. in England; in U.S.A., c. of ca. 1890–1940 (Stiff, 1931). Tip = to give.

tip (one) the queer. See queer, n., 3.

tip the scrobey. See scrobey, the.

tip the velvet. 'To Tongue a Woman', B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; by 1903 (F & H) it was ob.; 1909, Ware, without comment; by 1930, †. Cf. S.E. tip, 'to cast down' (to depress); and see velvet.—2. Hence, 'To talk to a woman; to impose by flowery language': 1809, Andrewes; app. † by 1900.

tip the wink. In the literal sense, 'give a wink', it occurs in R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665, as 'The Mort tipped me a wink'. The whore gave me a wink'; this sense must have > s. by 1700 or so.—2. Hence, to give (a person) a warning: 1676, Etherege (O.E.D.); 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict. By ca. 1750, it had > s.: Grose, 1785, treats it as s.

tip (a person) to (another). 'That buster you tipped me to, was a raw one. . . . That burglar you introduced me to was a novice,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; extant. Cf. tip, v., 1 and 3.—2. To warn or inform (a person) of (e.g., an event, a danger): 1904, Life in Sing Sing, 'The stiffs tipped me to the lay. . . . But for the newspapers printing the story of the robbery'; extant. Cf. tip off, v., 2.

tip Tommy. See Tommy, tip.

tip up. To inform upon (a person), esp. to the police: since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. I.e., to upset (the person concerned); to cause him to fall.

tipp. See tip, v., ref. of 1797.

tipper. 'One who keeps watch outside a bank while a worthless cheque is being negotiated,' Black, 1943: since the 1920's. He 'tips off' his companions.

tippery. Money; payment: 1821, W. T. Moncrieff, Tom and Jerry; 1824, J. Wight, Mornings at Bow Street; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. An elaboration of tip, n., 2.

tippet. A hangman's halter: 1859, Matsell; † by 1903 (F & H). Ex Tyburn tippet.

tipping dues. See dues.

tipple, v. To find out; to learn, discover: since ca. 1920. Lilliput, Nov. 1943, 'He put a dummy on his bed in his "flowery" so's the right "screws" wouldn't "tipple"'. Ex S.E. tipple, 'to fall': cf. s. fall to, 'to get on to; to realize; to discover'.

tissue. To heckle, exasperate, tease (someone): 1933, Ersine; extant. Perhaps cf. tissue-papered.

tissue, the. Bank notes: 1864, Anon., Revelations of a Lady Detective, "'Ain't he flash with the tissue?" said a third' (concerning a ten-pound note); ob. With ref. to bank-notes of five pounds and over.

tissue-papered, be. 'No pleasure-lady likes to be "tissue-papered"—a term which dates from the days when no really nice hustlers [i.e., prostitutes] ever wholly stripped for action and ungentlemanly visitors sometimes took advantage of their gullibility when they were allowed to put the money in her stocking: often the innocent thing found when the time came to check up with the Madame, her hose contained only a wad of toilet paper,' Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937: prostitutes': since ca. 1880.

tit, 'a horse', is S.E.; 'a girl', s.

tit for tat. A hat: mostly Pacific Coast since ca. 1890. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming: adopted ex Cockney s. titlark. A spectator; a witness: 1799, Spirit of the Public Journals; 1800, The Oracle ('Fashionable Characters: A Kiddy'), '[I] should have got off for want of evidence, had not a titlark swore that a few evenings since I had pulled him up on Hounslow Heath'; † by 1870. Titlarks (in England, titlark is applied esp. to the meadow pipit) are gregarious birds.

title-tapper. A deed-forgery: 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Forger' and at title-tapper; 1929-31, Kernôt; extant. Cf. tap, v., 4, 5, 7. titter. 'A young woman or girl': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; 1860, H, 2nd ed., 'Tramps' term'; 1887, Baumann, who classifies it as beggars' c.; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. Either an elaboration of tit, 'a girl', or a sense-adaptation of titter, 'a horse', on the analogy of s. filly, 'a girl'.—2. 'A sword,' says Matsell, 1859; but this is prob. an error for tilter.

tivvil. A skeleton key, a picklock: 1889, B & L (at betty): misprint for twirl.

tizz-worker. A confidence man: 1925, Leverage; extant. Here, tizz is short for low s. tizzle, 'a swindle, a fraud'.

tizzy, sixpence: not c., but s.

tjapan. A uniformed policeman: South Africa: late C. 19-20. The Cape Times, May 22, 1946, derives it 'from the old Malay tongue': cf. Malay tuan, 'master', used in address like the Boer baas.

to a hole. See hole, to a.

to rights. See rights, to.

to the nines. See tog, v.

to the ruffian. See ruffian, to the.

toad in a hole. A roll of money: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

toad in the hole; or hyphenated. As a dish, 'meat baked, or boiled in pye crust' (Grose, 1785), it is s. that soon > S.E.

toadskin, paper money in gen.; toadskins, either good bank-notes or counterfeit bank- and currency-notes: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (toadskin); Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, (toadskins, genuine notes); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Toadskins'.—Paper money. An old term, and (now) of relatively rare use'; by 1946, virtually †. Ex appearance.—2. The electric chair: mostly convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. The thought of it gives one 'the shivers', much as toads are repulsive to many persons.

toaster. 'A person who refuses to work,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (Glossary, s.v. 'Bum')—but, very often, Henderson uncritically copies 'No. 1500'; I suspect that orig., at least, this was a misprint for loafer; or rather, a misreading of the manuscript of Life in Sing Sing, for there are other indications that the MS. was none too legible.

tobar, tobbar, are rare variants of tober.

tobby is a rare variant of toby. Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull, 1822.

tobby cove. (Mostly in pl.) 'Tobby Coves. Fellows that in the night walk the streets near a river. They stun their victim by striking him with a bludgeon; then they rob him and tumble him into the river. If the body is found, it is difficult to say that the man was not accidentally drowned,' Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859; † by 1900. Cf. preceding entry and:—

tobe. To strike a person on the head and thus stun him; esp. with a view to robbing him: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1900. Perhaps a corruption of top, 'to hit on the top (of the head)'; but cf. toby, v.

tober. A road, a highway; usually the tober: 1809, implied in tober gloak; 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants (see down-right, on the); 1851, H. Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 217, 'We drop the main toper (go off the main road)', where toper is a mispronunciation or, more prob., a mishearing; 1859, A. Mayhew, who repeats that passage; 1890, B & L; 1895, Caminada, 'The "tober" (streets)'; by 1903 (F & H) it was virtually † as criminal c., though still common among cheapjacks—esp. in a derivative sense—and tramps (Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1933—where it is spelt tobbar). Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934, defines its fair-ground s. sense as 'the fair-ground or market'. Adopted directly ex Shelta, the Shelta tober is a corruption of Erse bothar.

tober gloak. A highwayman: 1809, Andrewes; † by 1870. Lit., a highway fellow: see tober and gloak.

tober omee is 'the toll-collector' at a fair: and is to be classified as showmen's and cheapjacks' s. of late C. 19-20. Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934.

tobur is a rare variant of tober. B & L.

toby, n. The toby is the highway: 1811, Lex. Bal. (by implication); 1859, H, 'Toby, a road, "high-toby", the turnpike road'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; ob. by 1890 (B & L); † by 1903 (F & H), except among tramps and beggars—witness W. H. Davies, Beggars, 1909, 'On the road—on the toe be' (sic); Terence Horsley, The Odyssey of an Out-of-Work, 1931; Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1933, 'The state of being on the road, or down and out'; Joseph Augustin, The Human Vagrant, 1933; Hugh Milner, private letter of April 22, 1935; James Curtis, They Drive by Night, 1938; John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939; extant. An English shaping of tober.—2. Hence, a robbery on the highway: 1811, Lex. Bal. (see quot'n at chant, v., 4); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A person convicted of [robbery on the highway], is said to be done for a toby'; 1823, Egan's Grose; app. † by 1870.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) 'The toby applies exclusively to robbery on horseback': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1870.—A tramp (the person): mostly London: since ca. 1920. George Orwell, Down and Out, 1933. Ex sense 1; cf. sense 2 of the v.—A (police) district, a section, a 'beat': since ca. 1930. Black, 1943. Via 'beat' ex sense 1.

toby, v. 'To toby a man, is to rob him on the highway': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1870. Ex toby, n.; cf. tobe.—2. To tramp, to walk as a tramp; to be a tramp: C. 20: 1931, Terence Horsley, The Odyssey of an Out-of-Work, "'You're not tobying to Stamford today?" he asked . . . "Ye've never been on the toby before, have you?"' Ex toby, n., 1.

toby, high and low. See high toby and low toby.

toby, the. See toby, n., 1, 3.

toby consarn. A robbery on the highway; a highwayman's expedition: 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford, 'I heered as ow Long Ned started for Hampshire this werry morning on a toby consarn!'; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; † by 1890 (B & L). See toby, n., 1.

toby gill. A highwayman: 1811, Lex. Bal. (see quot'n at galloper); 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1860. Lit., a highway fellow; cf. :— toby gloak. A highwayman: 1812, Vaux (high- toby-gloak); 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'A trio of famous high Tobygloaks', more accurately, 'high-toby gloaks'; April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp'; † by 1870. Cf. the preceding and also tober gloak.

toby lay, the. Robbery on the highway: 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1823, Bee, 'Robbery in road or street'; by 1845, current in U.S.A.—witness E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1848, and Matsell, 1859; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. See toby, n., 1, 2, and lay, n., 2.

toby-lifter, in 'From warehouse breakers to mere snatchers, draggers, toby-lifters and sneak-thieves' (Ernest Raymond, The Marsh, 1937) is suspect—or at the least, only very doubtfully c. Apparently it means 'a stealer of beer mugs from public-houses'.

toby man or tobyman. A robber on the highway: Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Toby-Gill, or Toby-Man, properly signifies a highwayman'; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford, 'Go not with fine tobymen, who burn out like a candle wot has a thief in it,—all flare, and gone in a whiffy!'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.), 'Tobyman—a highwayman, one who robs by knocking down'; 1849, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, V; 1887, Baumann; † by 1890 (B & L). See toby, n., 1 and 2.—2. Hence, a bushranger: Australian: April 19, 1862, The Lachlan Miner, cited at pp. 200–1 of George E. Boxall's Australian Bushrangers, 1899 (by which date the sense was †).

tobyman, high. See high toby man.

toby spice. See spice, the high toby.

tobygloak. See toby gloak.

tobyman. See toby man.

tochas. Testicles (?): 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night, 'I could do three months on me tochas. How'd you like to be hung?'; extant. Origin? If we can alternatively spell it tockers, we obtain the following: tockers suggests tick-tockers, reminiscent of a clock pendulum, which swings; therefore compare s. danglers (testicles).

tocker. A murderer: 1933, Ersine; 1933, Eagle. Origin? Perhaps cf. Ger. Tod, 'death'.

toddle in the specific sense 'to walk away', may ca. 1800–35, have been c.; the normal S.E. meiosis has the rather different sense—'to walk, to go'. Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811, 'The cove was touting, but staggering the traps he toddled; . . . he walked away'; Lytton Bulwer, Pelham, 1928, 'Toddle, my bob cull'.

todge. To smash: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1900. Perhaps echoic.

toe-dropping. 'The linoleum trick; also'—this is police s.—'holding a door open with one's foot,' Black, 1943: since the 1920's.

toe-ragger. A short-term prisoner: Australian: C. 20. Vance Marshall, The World of the Living Dead, 1919; Baker, 1945. Contemptuous; ex:—

toe(-)rags. An 'expression of contempt . . . used . . . chiefly by the low grades of circus men, and the acrobats who stroll about the country': 1875, Thomas Frost, Circus Life. Cf. the toe-rags worn, instead of socks, by beggars and tramps.

toe the line. To appear on an identification parade: since ca. 1910. Partridge, 1938. Ex athletics.

toeing and goosing. 'Not only were they [prisoners aboard the hulks Ethalion, Narcissus, Dromedary] mischievous, as appeared from their favourite pastime, which was to drag off one another's bed-clothes in the middle of the night, by means of a crooked nail attached to a long string,' glossed thus: 'The prisoners called this in their own slang, "toeing and goosing"'; ca. 1820–70. Arthur Griffiths, Memorials of Millbank, 1875.

toes up, 'dead', is not c., but s.—despite Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872.

toff, 'an aristocrat', 'a gentleman', 'an influential man', 'a rich man', 'a fashionable man', was orig. low s. (a 'rather degrading appellation', says Augustus Mayhew in 1857) and frequently used also in the underworld. It dates from before 1851. Ex Oxonian tuft via toft.

toff ken. A gentleman's house: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed (where also spelt tuff ken); † by 1930. See toff and ken.

toff ome. A fine man—a 'swell': 1909, Ware; † by 1930, perhaps before. See the separate elements.

toff-shoving, n., 'pushing well-dressed men in a crowd', is not c., but, as in Ware's classification (1909), 'London rough'—i.e., London roughs' s.

toffee. 'Another "screw" came to give a hand—a fellow known to the lags as "Toffee" S—, because he was always chewing a mouthful of toffee, i.e., tobacco,' Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House, 1932: convicts': from before 1918: 1933, George Ingram, Stir; et al.

tog, n. A coat: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed. (togge); 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator (likewise togge); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, David Haggart, Life, where it is spelt twig, the Scottish form of the word; ibid., 'I touched a greasy twig cloy' (coat pocket); 1823, Bee, 'Clothes'—presumably togs; 1823, Egan's Grose (a coat); 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1848, Sinks of London, 'Tog and kicks, breeches and coat'; by 1850 or soon after, it was (low) s. in Britain; by 1900, low s. in U.S.A. Imm. ex toge or, more prob., togmans—a frequent variant of togemans.

tog, v.; usually in passive. To dress: 1811, Lex. Bal., 'The swell is rum-togged. The gentleman is handsomely dressed'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To tog, is to dress or put on clothes; to tog a person, is also to supply them with apparel, and they are said to be well or queerly tog'd, according to their appearance'; ibid., 'Tog'd out to the nines, a fanciful phrase, meaning simply, that a person is well or gaily dressed'; 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields; 1821, D. Haggart (tuig); 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; by 1850, low s.

tog and kicks. A coat and breeches: 1827, A New and Comprehensive Dictionary of Flash or Cant Language; app. † by 1900. See tog, n., and kicks.

togaman covee (or covey). A member of Parliament: 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'It therefore stood over, sometime, sine die, as the togaman covees of Westminster-hall patter it'; † by 1890. See togemans and covey.

togamans. See togemans.

toge. A cloak: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'A coat'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A coat'; † by 1890 (B & L) in England. Imm. ex togeman(s) by abbreviation.—2. Hence, a greatcoat: 1769, Sessions Papers, where it is spelt toque; † by 1890.

togee is a rare form of toge: 1741 (see inside toge).

togeman. See:—

togemans or togmans; occ., as in Awdeley, togeman. A man's cloak or coat: 1562, Awdeley; 1566, Harman, 'A togeman, a cote'; 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'A Togmans (a Gowne)', the ref. being to a 'clapperdodgeon'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Some words do retain something of scholarship, as "Togeman", a gown, from Toga'; "Pannam", from Panis, bread; "Cosan", Caseus, cheese'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'Togemans, c. a gown or Cloak . . . 'Tis a Rum-togemans, 'tis a good Camlet-Cloak'; 1707, J. Shirley (togeman); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (tagemans, a misprint, and togmans); 1809, Andrewes (togman); 1823, Bee (togamans); 1848, Sinks of London (togman); † by 1860. I.e., tog (or toge) + mans.

togery. See toggery.

toges is an early form of togs.

togg; togge. See tog.

togged out to the nines. See tog, v., 2nd ref. of 1812. Cf. :—

togged out to the Ruffian. Devilishly well dressed: 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood: prob. literary, not actual c. See tog, v., and Ruffian.

togger. See upper tog.

toggery, 'wearing apparel in general' (Vaux, 1812) or 'clothing' (The London Guide, 1818), may have been c. until ca. 1820, after which it was (low) s. In State Prison Life (U.S.A.), 1871, it is given as 'coat'—a sense it has never had in England. An elaboration of togs.

toggling. Clothing in general: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Ex tog, v.

toggy may be a misprint for toge: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'A coat: A Toggy'; but its appearance in the glossary of G. Parker's Life Painter virtually proves its independent existence.

toggy cloth. See twirl.

togman or togmans. See togemans. The former occurs in Harman, 1566, and Andrewes, 1809; the latter in Dekker, O per se O, 1612, and Randle Holme, 1688, and Egan's Grose, 1823.

togomans is a misprint for togmans. (Baumann, 1887.)

togs. 'Toges or toggs, cloaths for both sexes': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal. (togs); 1812, J. H. Vaux; ca. 1816, The Night before Larry was Stretched; 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'I was rumbling the cloys of the twigs', twig being the Scottish form of tog; 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, IV; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1839, Brandon; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850, low s., though it may, in U.S.A., have remained c. until ca. 1905: see, e.g., State Prison Life, 1871, and Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899, and Life in Sing Sing, 1904. Ex tog, n.

togue. See toge, 2.

toil factory. A prison workshop: 1929-31, Kernôt; extant. Cf. :—

toil shop. A prison, a penitentiary, where the prisoners have to work very hard at manual tasks: Aug. 28, 1926, Flynn's (p. 889); extant. Cf. prec.

toke. A piece of bread: 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, (prisoner loquitur) 'He asked me to bung him a toke'; 1859, H., 'Dry bread'; 1866, James Greenwood, A Night in a Workhouse; 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; 1885, M. Davitt (see sling, v., 2); 1890, B & L; 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life, 'Toke. . .

Bread'; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2; 1903, F & H; 1925, Leverage; 1930, T. Whyte Mountain, Life in London's Great Prisons; 1932, Stuart Wood; 1934, James Spenser, Limey Breaks In; 1936, Wilfred Macartney, Walls Have Mouths, 'The 8 oz. "tokes" (loaves)'; 1935, Richmond Harvey; 1938, F. A. Stanley, A Happy Fortnight; by 1940, low s. The origin is obscure; not impossibly a corruption of Ger. Brod or Dutch brood, 'bread'.—2. Hence, loosely: food: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief' in Macmillan's Magazine; 1885, M. Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; 1895, A. Griffiths, Criminals I Have Known; by 1903 (F & H) it was low s.

token; in sense 1, also tokens. 'Tokens, the Plague,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1870. Ex the physical marks indicative of the disease.—2. Hence, a venereal disease, esp. syphilis: 1785, Grose, 'She tipped him the token, she gave him a clap or pox'; † by 1887 (Baumann).

tol. A sword: 1698, B.E., 'Bite the Tol, c. to Steal the Sword'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'His tol by his side, and his pops in his pocket'; † by 1887 (Baumann)—prob. by 1840. Abbr. Toledo, a sword made at Toledo; an excellent sword.

toliban rig. See tolliban rig.

tolibon or tollibon (or -an), n. See tolliban rig, quot'n of 1789. The word tol(l)ibon or toloben (-bon) may come from toll, 'to ring (a bell)', and c. bene, 'well': cf. s. clapper, 'the tongue': B & L. More prob. Romany tal, 'to hell', + bene or the Romany suffix ben, or pen (B & L).

tolibon or tolliban or tollibon or toloben is the adjective applied to one who practises the toloben (or tolliban) rig: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'The Tolliban Lady'; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter (a character is named Tolibon Nan); † by 1890.

tolibon (or -on or toloben) rig. George Parker, A View of Society, 1781, 'This Rig has been practised . . . with amazing success. A genteel looking woman ties a bit of thread to the end of her tongue, which communication to a bit of paste that she swallows and draws the tongue back, so as even to make the Faculty believe she was born without one'; she goes to a house, points to her mouth, makes signs that 'she desires writing material', wherewith she conveys that 'as she can look into futurity, she begs leave to cast the figures of their nativity who happen to attend her'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (as in Parker: tolliban rig); 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'Tollibon in cant means the tongue'; 1796, Grose (toli-); 1797, Potter (tolobon); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II ('"Tollibon" is the tongue'); 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890 (B & L). Origin: see quot'n of 1789: for rig, see rig, n., 2.

tolo bon rig is a rare variant of tolibon rig. (Andrewes, 1809.)

tolser, a penny: old, according to B & L, 'Lit., the price of toll. "Tolsey" is provincial for a place where tolls were taken.' But the term is suspect.

tom. A girl: since the middle 1920's: 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 'Frightened I'll shop you? You think I'm like all the other toms round the West End'; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 'A Tom. Old prostitute'; 1942, Baker (Australia, where by that date, it was low s.); 1943, Black, 'Tom: a prostitute; also Brass'; extant. Short for tomboy: in mid-C. 19-early 20 low s., tom meant 'a mannish sort of prostitute'; cf. tommy, n., 3.

Tom and Jerry Shop, 'a low beer-house', is not c., but s.: Feb. 1835, Sessions Papers, p. 501. Ex Pierce Egan's and Moncrieff's versions of that extremely popular work known as Life in London and Tom and Jerry, 1821.

Tom of Bedlam. One of a gang or order of beggars that, usually most pitifully dressed, pretend to have come out of Bedlam: 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'Then Tom of Bedlams band of madcaps, otherwise'—but not for long—'called Poore Toms Flocke of Wilde-geese'; 1698, B.E., who says that it is 'the same as Abram-man'—repeated by the editor of A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; but the term, at least as c., was prob. † by 1760. See the Bedlam entries.

Tom(-)Pat. A parson: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, in the form Tom Patt; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter (see rum Tom Pat); 1797, Potter; † by 1860. Perhaps Tom + pat (short for patrico, q.v.).—2. 'Tom-pats, in canting, shoes,' B & L, 1890; but this sense is suspect. It recurs, however, in F & H, thus: 'Tom-pat . . . A shoe; in Gypsy = foot' (does it?).

Tom Right. Night: orig. (ca. 1850-65), c.; then low, and later gen., rhyming s. 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857.

Tom Tart. A breaking of wind: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on far.

Tom Tug. A dupe, a 'sucker': Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on mug.

tomato, 'a girl, a young woman': low s., not c. Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls, 1931.

tomato-can stiff. 'One of the lowest bums' (Irwin): tramps': ? adumbrated in 'I had lost my razor . . . I had a vision of myself in a few weeks as a bristly-muzzled Weary Waggles of the tomato-can variety caricatured by the incomparable Zim,' Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who implies that this 'stiff' can no longer hold his own in the world; extant. He cannot even cook for himself but relies upon tinned food.

tomato-can tramp is, in U.S.A., not c., but a literary or a journalistic synonym of tomato-can vag; it occurs, e.g., in Flynt's Tramping with Tramps, 1899, p. 17. But in Britain, since ca. 1920, it is tramps' c. for 'a man that will "curl up anywhere" (for a rest or a sleep)', as in the Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932.

tomato-can vag. 'The outcast of Hoboland; a tramp of the lowest order, who drains the dregs of a beer-barrel into an empty tomato-can and drinks them; he generally lives on the refuse that he finds in scavenger barrels (rubbish bins, garbage cans, swill tubs, etc.),' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; ibid., p. 114, 'In New York City . . . they live in boxes, barrels, cellars, and nooks and corners of all sorts, where they can curl up and have a "doss" (sleep). They get their food . . . by picking over the refuse in the slop-barrels and tomato-cans of dirty alleys. They beg very little, asking usually for the stale beer they find now and then in the kegs near saloons'; 1903, F & H; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'A hobo outcast'—Godfrey Irwin (letter, Sept. 13, 1937) commenting thus, 'Too loosely applied; really a low-class bum or tramp, not a hobo'; Dec. 13, 1926, Flynn's; Aug. 13, 1927, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'The Tomato-Can Vag'; extant.

tomb. A bank: East Coast bank-robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex the ecclesiastical effect of a spacious bank-vault.

Tombs, the. 'New York City Prison', is not c., but s. Bartlett, Americanisms, 2nd ed., 1859, 'In allusion to its heavy Egyptian style of architecture'.

tombstone, 'a pawn ticket': low s., not c.

tombstones in the sense 'teeth', may perhaps be c.; but, as in England, it is almost certainly (low) s.

tomcat. 'A needle from a power sewing machine as an improvised hypodermic needle,' BVB, 1942: since ca. 1935. Erotic.

tomfoolery. Jewellery: underworld rhyming s.: late C. 19-20. Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Book, 1931; Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932; 'Lemuel Gulliver' in Lilliput, Nov. 1943.

tomme! or Tommy! An underworld command, explained by Alex. Smith, in his Highwaymen, Vol. III, 1720, thus: 'This Word gives Notice to a House-breaker, when he's withinside the House, because a Passenger or Passengers, are then coming by, who may spoil their Design, if they see any Thing flung out at the Window to lie still' (i.e., for the burglar to stay quiet for a little while); Feb. 21, 1739, Sessions Papers, trial of James Lawler and James Leonard, 'Leonard was to stand on the other Side of the Way, and to cry Tommy! Tommy! when any body came by'; 1739 (see Tommy, tip). There is reason to suppose that, despite the lack of intervening instances, the word has survived in this excerpt from Baker, Australian Slang, 1942, 'Tommy: To leave, decamp'. I submit that the term acquired its present sense somewhere about 1880-90. A code term.

tommy, n., as in soft tommy (bread), is not c., but low s.—2. A Thompson sub-machine gun: U.S.A.: June 7, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; Dec. 1930, Burke, 'They got a tommy in the boat'; Oct. 1931, D. W. Maurer; Nov. 1931, IA; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle, 'He makes th' bus, and pipes th' Tommy'; by 1940, military s. A shortening of Tommy gun, q.v.—3. 'I took up my pen and began a letter to a Tommy (girl) in New York,' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Tommy. A girl or woman'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'A prostitute'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1931, IA, 'A girl or woman, generally when of loose morals'; 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra, 'Get yourself a hot young tommy'; extant. Prob. suggested by 'a tomboy'.

tommy, v. To abscond; to decamp: Australian confidence tricksters': late C. 19-20. Baker, 1945. Perhaps ex tomme!

Tommy! See tomme! and:—

Tommy, tip. (Of a thieves' look-out man) to give warning: Oct. 1739, Sessions Papers (trial of Cuthbert Wharton and John Deacon), 'Deacon stood behind the Pales [palings] to tip Tommy—that is, to tell us if any Body came'; app. † by 1860. Cf. tomme!

Tommy Brown's, in. There is no such term: the entry in the 1st ed. of my Dictionary of Unconventional English is an error, arising from misinterpretation.

Tommy-buster. A woman-beater: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1931, IA; extant. See tommy, n., 3.—2. Hence, a raper of women: since ca. 1910. BVB.

tommy-cod. A flighty girl: 1925, Leverage; extant. See tommy, n., 3; cod = to wheedle.

Tommy Dodd. A revolver: Pacific Coast: since the late 1920's. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on rod, n.

tommy gee; tommy man. A machine-gunner; properly, the gunner working a Thompson sub-machine gun: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'He's tommy gee for the mob'; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn (the latter form); 1930, George London (the latter); 1933, Eagle (latter); 1934, Rose (both); 1938, Castle (former); extant. See next entry, and gee, n.

Tommy (or tommy) gun. A Thompson sub-machine gun: 1920's. By 1930 it was, in c., superseded by the shortened form, Tommy (or tommy). The v. tommy-gun, 'to shoot with a Thompson gun': c. until ca. 1930, then s.

tommy-gun guy. An occ. synonym of tommy gee. Howard McLellan, in Flynn's, Sept. 29, 1934.

Tommy Rocks or t—r—. Socks: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming. Perhaps a conscious variant of Cockney almond rocks.

Tommy Roller, 'a collar', is classified by C. Bent, Criminal Life, 1891 (p. 272), as c.; but perhaps it was always ordinary rhyming s.

Tommy Toy. A boy: mainly Pacific Coast: C. 20. The American Mercury, May 1928 (Ernest Booth); 1929–31, Kernôt. Rhyming.

ton. One hundred pounds sterling: black-market and gamblers': since ca. 1944. Alan Hoby, 'Mayfair's Fantastic Gamblers!' in The People, April 7, 1946. Ex ton, score of 100 at darts.

ton of law. A big, heavy policeman: 1934, Rose; extant. Humorous; cf. John Law.

tong, die. A criminals' (esp. burglars') look-out man: South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Afrikaans: ex Dutch tong, 'tongue': he 'gives tongue', calls a warning; lit., 'the tongue'.

tongue. Bread: since the 1920's. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932. Gastronomic.—2. A lawyer, esp. a barrister: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Suggested by mouthpiece.

tongue glued. Silent, not speaking: 1889 (see curb one's clapper); ob. Cf. S.E. tongue-tied.

tongue pad. A plausible rascal; csp. a confidence trickster: 1675, R. Head, Proteus Redivivus, 'Applying himself to his former Air of Wheedling (being an excellent Tongue-pad)'; 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, where it is synonymous with tongue-padder and spelt tongue(-) padd. By 1698, it seems to have > s. and weakened in sense to 'a smooth, Glib-tongued, insinuating Fellow' (B.E.). See pad, n., 3.

tongue(-)padder 'is one that hath a fine Tongue, a quick Wit, and can speak several Languages'; a plausible rascal that gets information of one's destination, which he imparts to his confederate, the highwayman: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, 'This Tongue-Padder is one that is called a Setter, so that he Pads them'—the prospective victims—'in Town and his Confederates [pad them] upon the Road'; † by 1830—prob., indeed, by 1780. Cf. the prec. entry.

tonic. A halfpenny: 1780 (see thonic); 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London, '[That] Pocket-

Book . . . Vyitain't worth a single tonic'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1840, Sinks of London; 1886 (see thonic); by 1920, ob.; by 1945, †. Not ex its tonic effect: the word was adopted by c. from Shelta. See also thonic.

tonygle is simply a printer's error for 'to nygle'; see niggle.

tool, n. 'Implements for house-breaking, picklocks, pistols, &c., are indiscriminately called the tools. A thief, convicted on the police act, of having illegal instruments or weapons about him, is said to be fin'd for the tools,' J. H. Vaux, 1812: these two phrases, despite their very close connexion with the S.E. sense, may perhaps be regarded as c. until ca. 1840.—2. 'A small boy employed to creep through windows, etc., to effect entry,' F & H, 1903: current in 1845 (Anon., No. 747, 1893); recorded by H, 3rd ed., 1864; † by ca. 1910. He serves as a tool to the others.—3. (Concerning pickpockets) 'The man who is to do the actual stealing is called the "tool" or "hook", and the others are known as "stalls"': U.S.A.: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'; 1924, Geo. P. Dougherty; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, where it is applied to the corresponding member of a gang of shoplifters; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1927, Kane; Aug. 11, 1928, Flynn's; March 2, 1929, Flynn's; March 14, 1931, Flynn's, Henry Hyatt; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'The leader of a whiz team'; 1933, Eagle; Sept. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Convict 12627; Dec. 9, 1936, The Evening News (hence, English); 1937, Edwin H. Sullivan, The Professional Thief; by 1938 at latest, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946). He is the gang's tool or instrument.

tool, v.i. To steal from women's pockets: 1839, implied in tooling (see buzzing, n.); 1859, H, 'To pick pockets'; 1890, B & L, who apply it to any pickpocketry and to burglary; 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747; 1903, F & H (as in B & L); 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society (tooling, burglary); 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex Romany tul or tool, 'to hold, handle, or take' (B & L).—2. Hence, 'to take the principal part in any form of theft,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant.—3. To loaf, to idle: U.S. convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. App. ex Eng. s. tool about, tool around, 'to do nothing in particular' (ex coaching).

tool work. The criminal activity, or occupation, of a 'tool': 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; extant. With esp. reference to tool, n., 2.

tooler. 'Tooler, a pickpocket. Moll-tooler, a female pickpocket,' H, 1859: 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1930. Ex tool, v. tooling, n. Theft, by pickpocketry, from women: 1839 (see buzzing, n.); † by 1910. Cf. moll-tooling.—2. Hence, pickpocketry by women: 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; † by 1920.—3. Burglary: U.S.A.: 1911 (see tool, v.); rare and, by 1930, †.

tools. See tool, n.

toosh; half a toosh. A pound (sterling), whether as sum or note; ten shillings: tramps': April 22, 1935, letter from Hugh Milner. A sense- (and form-) development ex tossaroon.

toot the ding-dong. 'To ring the [door] bell,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1905. A deliberate variation of:—

toot the ringer. To ring the bell: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Stiff, 'To ring backdoor bells'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Echoic in both elements and in combination.

tooth, something for the. Food: 1823, Egan's Groser, where it is wrongly classified as c.

top, n. For the top, see hoist, go upon the. First recorded in 1714.—2. See tops, 1: the singular is rare.—3. A very great 'swell'; an exceedingly well-dressed woman: Scottish: ca. 1830–90. James McLevy, At War with Society, 1871. Cf. swell-top.—4. The top (outer side) of a railway car: U.S. tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff, quoting George Liebst, 'They came from near and far, On "tops" and "blinds" where cinders whine, And clinging to draw-bar'.—5. The top = the office of the Chief of Police: American white-slave traffic: C. 20. Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, 1936.—6. A person's head: U.S.A.: C. 20. Ersine.—7. As the top, it = a death sentence: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant.

top, v., in gaming—esp. in the illicit manipulation of dice—was prob. at first (1663: see topping) gamesters' c., but it had almost certainly > j. by 1720. B.E., 1698, 'What do you top upon me? c[ant] do you stick a little Wax to the Dice to keep them together, to get the Chance, you wou'd have?' Cotton's definition (The Compleat Gamester, 1674), however, accords with that at topping: 'When they take up both Dice and seem to put them in the Box, and shaking the Box you would think them both there, by reason of the Ratling occasioned with the screwing of the Box, whereas one of them is at the top of the Box between his two forefingers, or secured by thrusting a forefinger into the Box'.—2. Hence 'Cheat, or Trick anyone; also to Insult': 1698, B.E., 'He thought to have Topt upon me, c. he design'd to have Put upon me, Sharpt me, Bullied me, or Affronted me'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) To insult: 1698, B.E. (see quot'n in sense 2); 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1860.—4. To hang (a person): 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'He . . . will certainly be cast'—condemned—'and top'd, alias hang'd for the same'; 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732; by 1794, current in U.S.A.—witness Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'The cove was topped for smashing queer screens'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, IV; 1841, W. Leman Rede, Sixteen String Jack; 1859, H., 'Topped, hung or executed'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1869, A Merchant, Six Years; 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1894, A. Griffiths, Secrets of the Prison House; 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow; 1903, F & H; June 2, 1910, Sessions Papers; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (San Quentin, U.S.A.: 1901–11); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); 1924, Stanley Scott, The Human Side—but by 1920, if not by 1910, the term was in common use by British prison staffs and therefore to be no longer classified as c. in Britain; 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven, 'I was going to top'—be hanged; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1935, the v.t. was prison j. in U.S.A. too; the v.i. is still c. To suspend him from the head or top.—5. 'To top a clout or other article (among pickpockets) is to draw the corner or end of it to the top of a person's pocket, in readiness for shaking or drawing, that is, taking out, when a favourable moment occurs, which latter question is frequently done by a second person,' J. H. Vaux, 1812; app. † by 1890.—6. To ride on the top of: U.S. tramps': 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 'By avoiding the flagman . . . I might be able to "top" the train to Memphis'; extant.—7. 'In contrast to the burglar who "fronts" the man breaking in via the skylight is "topping",' David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937: since ca. 1920. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933.—8. To sentence (someone) to death: U.S.A.: since ca. 1925. Ersine. Ex sense 4.

top, blow one's. See blow one's top.

top, go (up)on the. See hoist, go upon the. Recorded later in C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718.

top, up the. In prison: tramps': 1935, Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road; extant. Contrast the synonymous down the line.

top a clout. See top, v., 5.

top(-)cover. 'A coat. . . . An outer, over, top-cover, over-all': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); ob. Deliberate vagueness.

top diver. 'Top diver, a Lover of Women. An Old Top-Diver, one that has Lov'd Old-hat in his time,' B.E., 1698: ca. 1690–1830. Perhaps not c., but low s., for in neither B.E. nor Grose is it classified as the former. The origin is implied in B.E.'s definition, for old hat is s. for the female pudend and was often used to connote sexual intercourse.

top dough. 'The largest sum, or the greatest amount obtainable; the largest share of the proceeds from a robbery or other crime,' IA, 1931; extant; by 1945, s. top gob. A pot-boy: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1870 or 1875, low back-slang.

top guy. A gang chief; a brilliant crook: since the middle 1930's. W. R. Burnett, Nobody Lives Forever, 1944. Cf. big guy, which is more usual.

top joint (pron. jint). A pint (of beer): 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1865, low, and by 1875 or 1880, gen. rhyming s. top man or topman. A hangman: late C. 18–19.

top money. Expenses connected with a coup (burglary, bank robbery, etc.): since ca. 1920. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. Suggested by 'overhead expenses'.

top of Rome. Home: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1865 or 1870, low rhyming s. top-off, n. An informer to the police: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. Prob. ex sense 2 of the v.

top off, v., 'to hang legally', is prison s., but as 'to murder' it is c.: 1925, Leverage; 1934, Rose; ob. A variant of top, v., 4.—2. V.i. and v.t., to inform to the police; to inform on (someone): Australian: since ca. 1920. Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, 1941, '“If you won't give them to him, he's likely to top you off to the police”'; 1942, Baker (v.i.). To put a 'finisher' on a matter or a person; cf. tip off.

top oneself. To commit suicide: 1931, Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Book; extant. Cf. blow one's top.

top sawyer, 'an expert thief', is classified as c. by B & L; but 'expert' is precisely its sense in s. top-shuffle; top(-)shuffling. An illicit shuffle (or shuffling) of a pack of cards from the top: card-sharpers': 1890, B & L. But is it not j.? top-storey man. A cat burglar: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows, 1929.

top(-)dog. An overcoat: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. See top, n.; cf. top cover.

top upon. See top, v., 2.

toper. See sense 2 of topper.—2. See tober, ref. of 1851.

topping cove. See topping cove, ref. of 1821.

topper. A (violent) blow on the head: April 1785, Sessions Papers (p. 571), 'One of them said, damn his eyes, give him a topper at once'; 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1823, Bee, who shows that, at this date, it was already pugilistic s. I.e., on the 'top'.—2. A hat, i.e. any hat that is not a 'topper' in the s. sense (a tall hat): 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'Some of the witnesses, upon my trial, also said that I was bare-headed, but this was not the case, for I had Dunbar's toper upon me'; 1823, Bee; app. † by 1890.—3. The head: 1823, Bee; † by 1900. That which tops the body.—4. A cigar-stump; a dottle: tramps' and beggars': 1903, F & H; slightly ob. Cf. toppertjie.—5. A sovereign (coin): mostly beggars' and tramps': 1926, Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows; ob. Ex s. topper, the term of approval.—6. A hangman; a murderer: U.S.A. and Britain: 1925, Leverage; 1943, Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House; slightly ob. Ex top, v.—7. 'He who watches the "dropper" in a bank and helps to aid in a quick getaway,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941: since the 1920's. He 'tops off' the proceedings.

topper-hunter, 'a picker-up and seller of discarded cigar-ends': not c. (except perhaps until ca. 1905), but low s. See topper, 4.

toppertjie. A cigarette-butt: S. Africa: late C. 19–20; by 1935, low s. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946; C. P. Wittstock, letter same date. Afrikaans (cf. entjie), ultimately ex Dutch top (as in English).

topping, a method of cheating at dice, is perhaps rather j. than c., although it may orig. have been gamesters' c.: 1663, Anon., 'Holding one or two Dice at the top of a Dice-Box, which we Gamesters call Topping' (O.E.D.); app. † by 1830 or so.—2. A commode (a kind of head-dress for women): ca. 1685–1730. B.E.: but at click, not at topping.—3. A hanging: since ca. 1670. See topping cheat and topping cove. Also used independently: by ca. 1910, general prison s. topping cheat. Gallows: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; † by 1890 (B & L). Ex top, v., 1, and cheat.

topping cove. A hangman: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; J. Shirley's definition, 1707, as 'a High-way' is altogether wrong, but the printer obviously got muddled at this point of the c. glossary; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1821, D. Haggart (topping cove); 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1910. See the elements and cf. topping cheat.

topping dues. See dues.

topping fellow, 'a man excellent or very expert at his trade or profession', is not c., but s. Lit., 'one at the top'.

topping man, 'a rich man', is s. (> coll.); never c.

topping the deck is letting concealed cards drop onto the top of the to-be-shuffled pack: not c., but j.—card-sharpers' j.—rather than c. See esp. J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats, 1894, at pp. 86–7.

toppings. In the sense 'dessert' (at a meal) it is s. (Leverage, 1925), even though the term has been much used by tramps (Stiff, 1931). Dessert tops off the meal.

topple. To kill, to murder: 1936, Charles F. Coe, G-Man; extant. V.i. as v.t.

tops. 'Dying speeches and gallows broadsides,' H, 1859; 1903, F & H; † by 1910. In F & H, the rare singular form (top) is given. See top, v., 4, and cf. toppsman.—2. A set of false dice: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. top, v., 1, and tops and bottoms.—3. The roof of a railroad car: U.S. tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; Terence McGovern, It Paid to be Tough, 1939. Cf. deck.

tops and bottoms. 'Mis-spotted dice, those giving an advantage to their owner, or to one familiar with their use,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: gamblers': from ca. 1910: March 21, 1936, Flynn's, Frank Wrentmore; extant. Cf. tops, 2.—2. In Britain it is a confidence trick, the diamond-ring swindle: since ca. 1930. In, e.g., Black, 1943.

toppsman. A hangman: 1739, Anon., The Trial of Richard Turpin, wherein a section is headed, 'The following Account Turpin gave of himself, to the Toppsman, the Week after his condemnation . . .'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1910. See top, v., 1; cf. topping cove.

torch, n. A professional 'arsonist' or incendiary: 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; July 7, 1934, Flynn's, Major C. E. Russell, 'The Torch' (a true story about a notorious 'firebug'); by 1939 (David Hume, Heads You Live) it was British also; extant as c. in Britain, but by 1940 it was s. in U.S.A. Cf. fire bug.—2. A revolver: since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; April 1942, Flynn's, James E. Grant. Prob. ex blow-torch (anglicé blow-lamp). It 'smokes' its victim; cf. heater.—3. Hence (?), a killer: since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933.—4. An oxy-acetylene lamp: British: since ca. 1940. In, e.g., David Hume, They Never Come Back, 1945. Same origin as for sense 2.

torch, v.; also put the torch to. To set fire to (e.g., an automobile) in order to get the insurance: May 28, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch (both forms); Jan. 11, 1936, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, 'Don't you know Vico had us torch that joint?'; extant. Prob. euphemistic; perhaps poetic.—2. To shoot and kill (a person): since late 1920's. Ersine. Cf. senses 2, 3 of n., and:—

torchman. A gunman: March 28, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant. Ex torch, n., 2.

torchy. A professional incendiary: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. A familiarization of torch, n., 1.

torp. A torpedo: Aug. 3, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, 'I'll send one of the torps for you when I want you'; extant.

torpedo, n. A gangster that is a killer: March 22, 1930, Flynn's, Robert Carse ('Jail Break !'), 'The torpedo who was doing all his dirty work for him just got collared and sent up for an indeterminate rap'; Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke, who defines it as 'an assassin'; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; 1931, Fred D. Pasley, Al Capone; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A gunman, more especially when operating with a gang of thieves or racketeers, or as a body-guard for a "big shot"'; Sept. 19, 1931, Flynn's, Paul Annixter; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1933, James Spenser, Limey; 1933, Eagle, 'A paid killer'; 1934, Julian Proskauer, Suckers All; 1934, Rose, 'An imported gunman'; 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train (Glossary: 'Torpedo, Italian gunman; sharpshooter'); Dec. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy; 1938, Castle, 'A killer for pay'; Aug. 26, 1938, Flynn's, Richard Sale; 1940, Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely; Sept. 1942, Flynn's, Wm C. Gault; 1945, John G. Brandon, Death in Duplicate; extant. As a torpedo is deadly, so is one of these professional killers; cf. —2. A bomb: since late 1920's. Ersine, 1933.—3. Dagga; esp. a dagga cigarette: S. Africa: C. 20. (C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946.) Ex shape: cf. submarine.

torpedo, v.; usually as vbl n., torpedoing. (Of a gangster killer) to kill: since ca. 1930. Castle, 1938. Ex the n.

torpedo(-)gee. An elaboration of torpedo, n.: from before 1934. Castle, 1938.

torpedoman is an occ. variant of torpedo: March 19, 1932, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1938, Castle, 'They boast of having been knock-off gees, gow peddlers, cribbers, creep joint beetle-men, note layers, and torpedo men, when as a matter of fact most of them are merely petty thieves'; extant.

tort. 'A commission; a message,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Short for extort (or perhaps extortion), rather than ex legal tort.

torture chamber. See sweat room.

tosh, 'sewage refuse, esp. articles made of copper': see tosh.—2. Ware says that it is old c. for 'pocket'; but I have found no corroboration. If he is right, then he may also be right in proposing derivation, by corruption, ex Fr. poche.—3. A crown piece; five shillings: 1931, Brown; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too ('half a tosh'); extant. Short for tossaroon, etc.

tosh. 'The sewer hunters were formerly, and indeed are still, called . . . "Toshers", the articles which they pick up in the course of their wanderings along shore being known among themselves by the general term "tosh", a word more particularly applied by them to anything made of copper': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, II, 150: a term I have seen classified as e., but undoubtedly s. Nevertheless, it does possess a e. signification—a specialized application of the above: "'Toshers", or those who purloin copper from the ships along shore' (in the Thames): 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, III, 26, and H, 1859, and The Broadway, Nov. 1870—a sense app. † by 1900.—2. Short for tossaroon, etc.: C. 20. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941, defines it as 'a base half-crown'.

tosheroon. See tossaroon.

toshing, sewer-hunting: the vbl n. corresponding to tosh, q.v.

toss, give (someone) a. See give . . .

toss(-)out. A putting of some joint of one's body out of place, in order to get a few days in hospital or to claim money from an insurance company: since the 1920's. In, e.g., Flynn's, April 1, 1933.—2. Hence, as in 'He's a "toss-out"'. He throws both elbows and one wrist out of joint and looks like a freak in a museum,' Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941: since the 1920's; Ersine records it in 1933. Cf. throw-out.—3. (Also ex 1.) A feigned spasm, to obtain drugs: addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB.

tossaroon or tusheroon or tosheroon. (See tush for a remark on date of origin.) A crown piece: 1857, implied in half tusheroon, q.v. at half a tusheroon; 1859, H (tusheroon); 1863, A Lancashire Thief; 1887, Baumann; by 1890, low s. Prob. a perversion of caroon ('crown piece'), or a corruption aided by Gypsy influence.

tôt. See ding, v., 5.

total wreck. A check (or eheque): Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

tote, n. The whole set, quantity; all: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (glossary), 'Nap the tote; take them all'; app. † by 1840. A disguised derivation and form (the being added) of Fr. tout, everything.

tote, v. A rare variant of tout, 'to watch'. Baumann, 1887. Cf. :—

toter. A rare C. 17 variation of touter, 'a spy'. Ben Jonson, 1633.—2. Only in combination: see, e.g., rod-toter (s.v. rod man).

toth. Rum: 1859, Matsell. Is this an error?

totter, n., 'a rag-and-bone picker': not c., but low London s. C. 19–20.—2. The derivative nuance, 'a scavenger of dustbins' (for food), as in the Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932, may well be beggars' and tramps' e. of C. 20.

totter, v., 'to hang' (v.i., of hanged persons): despite F & H, it is not c.

totting. 'bone-picking': low London s., not c.: C. 19.

touch, n. A robbery, a theft: Australian (ca. 1850–1910) and American (from ca. 1840) and English (ca. 1820–1940): Sept. 27, 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), caption, 'A Touch in the Dark'; 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms (Australian), "'We can do a touch now and then . . . on the 'high toby'"'; 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story (U.S.A.); 1894, A. Morrison, Martin Hewitt, Investigator (England); 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey (U.S.A.); 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft (U.S.A.); 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Cloud; 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1904, Life in Sing Sing ('a theft'); 1912, A. Train, Court, Criminals and the Camorra; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage; 1928, Chicago May; 1933, Eagle; Nov. 10, 1937, Godfrey Irwin (in private letter), 'Any theft, esp. when no especial gunplay or force is involved'; 1942, Baker, 'A theft, esp. of cattle'; extant. Ex sense 1 of the v.—2. 'The financial or food result of a successful wangle delivered in appropriate dope', M. Garahan, Stiffs, 1923: tramps': C. 20. Also American: Ersine, 1933.

touch, v.i. To succeed in getting money or booty in one's vocation or robbery (in C. 18, esp. of highway robbery): 1746, trial of Henry Simms, in Select Trials, from 1741 to 1764, I, pub. in 1764; 1776, John Vilette, The Annals of Newgate; 1898, J. W. Horsley, Prisons and Prisoners; 1904, Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals; 1904, Life in Sing Sing (U.S.A.); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; but by this time, the sense has merged with that of (2); app. † by 1930. Cf. the s. sense, touch, v.t., to succeed in obtaining (money) from (a person).—2. See touch the rattler. This derivative sense, 'to rob', had reached U.S.A. by 1794: witness Tufts. It occurs independently in 1821 (see screeve, n., 2) and in Matsell (U.S.A.), 'To steal' (so too in B & L, 1890; Flynt, 1901; Clapin, 1903), and did not > c. until ca. 1905 in Britain: In U.S.A. (esp. in touch the joint, to rob or burgle a shop, etc.), it is still c.—witness, e.g., Jack Black, You Can't Win; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Bert Chipman; current in Australia in C. 20—as in Baker, 1945.—3. To arrest (a person): 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1860. On the borderline between c. and low s.—4. To fleece, to defraud: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by ca. 1930, also Australian, as in Baker, 1942, 'Touch: To swindle, cheat'; slightly ob. in U.S.A.

touch a squib. To ignite a fuse: 1934, Rose; extant. Humorous.

touch and go. A hold-up robbery: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. I.e., a rob-and-run.

touch-crib is a synonym of panel-crib, q.v.: 1859, Matsell (at panel-crib); 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1940. See touch, v., 2, and crib, n., 2 and 3.

touch for. 'I . . . touched for (succeeded in getting) some wedge (silver plate)': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms (Australia); 1888, G. R. Sims; 1894, A. Morrison; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys, 'Touch him for his poke—steal his purse' (U.S.A.); extant. Cf. touch, v., 1. The term is euphemistic for 'to steal'.

touch-off, n. A fire of incendiary origin: since ca. 1918. IA, 1931; BVB, 1942. When one applies a match, the fire starts up, goes off, like a small explosion.—2. (Also touch-off man.) An incendiary, an arsonist, a 'fire-bug': 1931, IA (shorter form); 1934, Howard N. Rose (longer form); extant. He touches-off the fire.

touch off, v. To set fire to (a building): since ca. 1918. IA, 1931. Cf. the n.

touch on the fly. To beg money (etc.) from a person by direct approach: 1906, Bart Kennedy, A Tramp Camp, 'Billy was an expert in the fine art of "touching on the fly"'. He had a way of shrinking in his shoulders and relating his wants in a voice at once melancholy and suave'; extant. See the elements.

touch (a person) out of. To rob (him) of: Sept. 27, 1845, The National Police Gazette, 'Touching him out of $9.94'; ibid., Nov. 21, 1846 (in shorter form, touch of); † by 1900. Cf. touch, v., 2.

touch the rattler; frequently as vbl n., touching the rattler. To rob a post-chaise or a coach, of the portmanteaux and bags and packets carried thereon: 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected, 'This method of robbing is chiefly followed by those who go upon the Drag Lay'; † by 1870. See touch, v., 1, and rattler.

touch up is a variant of touch, v., 2: 1901 (see strike, n.); extant.

toucher. See lush toucher.

touching, adj. Given to, or engaged in, theft:

1789, G. Parker, 'Touching Sue'; † by 1890. Ex touch, v., 1.

touching the kitchen. 'Stealing handkerchiefs from caps, [or from] inside coat-pocket': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); ob. An inside coat pocket may touch the upper part of the abdomen.

touchy. Pleasing, agreeable, delightful, charming: 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex an instrumentalist that 'has a nice touch'.

tough teaty. Hard luck: 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece, 'I've had plenty tough teaty in my day'; extant.

tough time. Unhappiness in prison: convicts': C. 20. Castle, 1938.

tough yarn, 'a long story' (J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, 1821), may orig. have been c., but more prob. it was low s.

toulter. See touter.

tour or ture. See tower. (Copland, 1536, ture.)

tourist. A well-dressed hobo or tramp: 1925, Leverage; extant. Derisive.

tourist cabin. A common lodging-house: 1889 (see buskers' retreat); † by 1920. Ironical.

tout, n. A scout for a gang of thieves: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator (see pushing tout); 1785, Grose, who implies this sense at outing; app. † by 1870. Cf. sense 2 of the v.—2. 'A look out house, or eminence': 1785, Grose; † by 1870. Prob. ex sense 1; cf. :—3. 'To keep tout, is to look out, or watch, while your pall is effecting any private purpose' (that is illicit or illegal): 1812, J. H. Vaux, who further remarks that 'A strong tout, is a strict observation, or eye, upon any proceedings, or person'; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; † by 1903 (F & H). Either ex sense 1, or ex sense 2 of the v.—4. 'One who gives knowledge in advance,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: U.S.A.: slightly ob. Not in the s. sense, 'a race-course tout', but in that of general informant to a criminal gang: prob., therefore, a development ex sense 1.

tout, v. To look at or regard; to examine or watch: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue (glossary), 'Tout his muns . . . Look in his face'; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Tout the Culls, c. Eye those Folks which way they take'; 1720, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, III, 'Tout the Case . . . That is, for a Thief to view, mark, and eye well the House, he designs to Rob'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1742, Select Trials, IV; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 'To tout a person, is to watch his motions'; 1820, Sessions Papers; 1823, Bee; 1830, Sessions Papers; 1837, B. Disraeli, Venetia (loosely: to attend to); 1839, Brandon; by 1859 (H) it was †. According to Grose, it derives ex L. tueri; to be more precise it derives from its supine tutum.—2. Hence, v.i., 'To look out Sharp, to be upon one's Guard. Who Touts? c. who looks out sharp?', B.E., 1698; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, by implication; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1837, B. Disraeli, Venetia; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859 (H) it was † as c., though it has survived in racing s.—3. To follow, to pursue: 1797, Potter, 'Touted, to be followed or pursued'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1903, F & H; † by 1920. Ex senses 1 and 2.—4. To guard: 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. Ex senses 1, 2.—5. To seem, to appear, to look: 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull, 'Who touted as seedy as a clapperdodgeon . . . looked as poor as a beggar'; † by 1890. A rare sense. Ex sense 1.

tout ! Take heed !: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd, but doubtless contemporaneous with tout, v., 2; † by 1860. See tout, v., 2.

tout, blow the. See blow the tout.

tout, keep. See tout, n., 3.

toute. See tout, n.

touter is an early form of tout, which, from c. and racing s., has > S.E.: c. of ca. 1800–50. Baldwin & Knapp, The Newgate Calendar, IV, 1826, p. 67, in ref. to ca. 1808–12, 'His principal occupation was that of toulter, a name given to those who conceal themselves among the furzes on the heath, to see the trials of horses, and make reports to the betters'. Ex tout, v., 1, 2.—2. Hence, a decoy: gamesters': ca. 1815–50 (C. E. Westmacott, The English Spy, 1825.)—3. A thieves' look-out man: 1844 (O.E.D.); † by 1900.—4. A revenue officer: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

touting. The vbl n. of tout, v., in all its senses.—2. Esp. as in 'Touting, eyeing the women, generally', The London Guide, 1818.

touting ken. A tavern bar: 1676, Colcs; 1698, B.E., 'Touting-ken, c. a Tavern or Ale-house Bar'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'The bar of a public house'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'The bar of a drinking-place'; by 1890 (B & L) it was † in England. A place (ken) where one looks (touts) about one.

touzery . . . See towzery . . .

tow-line, get into (or keep in) a. An Australian (ca. 1820–50) variant of line, get in(to) a: A. Harris, Settlers and Convicts, 1847, in ref. to ca. 1830.

tow out. 'To tow a person out; that is, from his premises, or post; is to decoy him therefrom by some fictitious story, or other artifice, while your pall seizes the opportunity of his absence, to rob the place he has imprudently quitted': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1903 (F & H). Ex nautical phraseology.

Tow Street, be in. 'You seems to be in tow-street just now', glossed as 'getting into a dilemma—being deluded, or helplessly led by the nose': 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1890. Cf. the prec. entry and s. to have (a person) on a string.

towe, 'clipped money' (Sinks of London, 1848): almost certainly an error.

towel. See oaken towel.

towelling, 'a severe beating': not c., but s.; the sense 'a flogging in prison' may be c. of late C. 19–20, as, e.g., in Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 1924.

Tower or t-. 'A Cant-Word used to denote bad, or clipp'd Money,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; current ca. 1690–1830. It is doubtful, however, whether it had any status independent of have been round the Tower, q.v. at Tower, been round the.

tower, v.; also tour or toure. To see; look at; regard; inspect momentarily; perceive: v.i., look, look out or keep watch: Robert Copland, 1536, toure; 1566, Harman, 'To towre, to see'; ibid., in the dialogue, 'Tower ye yander is the kene, dup the gygger, and maund that bene shyp. Se you, yonder is the house, open the doore, and aske for the best'; ibid., the quot'n at nase nab; 1608–9, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie' (Lanthorne and Candle-light); 1610, Rowlands, 'To tower or Castell to see'; 1641, R. Brome, A Joviall Crew, 'Toure out with your Glusiers, I sweare by the Ruffin, | That we are assaulted by a Quire Cuffin'; 1665, R. Head (tour); 1688, Holme (towre); 1707, J. Shirley (tour); 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.—but the term was prob. † by 1760 or 1770. Much earlier than † S.E. twire, 'to peer; to look', it may derive ex falconry (the towering of a hawk in order to swoop down on its prey).

Tower, been round the. 'They have been round the Tower with it, c. that Piece of Money has been Clipt,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1870. Tower is a pun on the Tower of London and on tour, 'a circumference; an encircling'.

tower hack. A guard stationed in a watch-tower on the wall: convicts' (? only Sing Sing): 1935, Hargan; extant. See hack, n., 1, and cf. (the mainly San Quentin) gun bull.

Tower Hill play. 'A slap on the Face and a kick on the Breech,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1925, and in Grose, 1785, by which date it seems to have > s. Tower Hill used to be an extremely rough district of London.

Tower Hill vinegar is not c., but s., for a malefactor's execution (beheading), the executions being carried out on Tower Hill. See, e.g., the Rev. J. W. Horsley, Prisons and Prisoners, 1898, p. 100.

town, about. See about town.

town, go to. 'To look for a catamite,' BVB, 1942: since ca. 1930. Ex the cinema-popularized coll. phrase.

town, in. See in town.

town clown. A village policeman: mostly tramps': 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1927, Kane; 1931, Stiff; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A constable, marshal or other law officer of a small town or village'; Oct. 1931, D. W. Maurer; 1933, Ersine; 1934, M. H. Weseen; 1934, Convict; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Feb. 1) it was s. Cf. clown, q.v.; it is doubtful which is the earlier. Depreciative.

town orchard. An (urban) public park: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. The viewpoint is enlightening.

town(-)shift. A sharper: 1675, R. Head, Proteus Redivivus, 'A Wheedle, or Town-shift; and 'The several sorts of Wheedles or Town-shifts'; app. the term was † by 1730 at latest. Here shift seems to = one who employs fraudulent devices; being therefore an extension of the S.E. sense, 'a fraudulent or evasive device' (O.E.D.). The Town prob. refers to London. Head, however, implies that he gets his name because 'he changeth his Lodgings often' and adds (Part II, ch. ii), that 'This Town-shift is sometimes called wheedle, Bully, Huff, Rook, Pad, Reformade, Pimponis, Guarde-lupanie, Philo-puteinist, Ruffin Shabbaroon, Subtler, with many more,' a passage showing that town-shift was generic for all these kinds of scoundrel. It recurs in J. W., Youth's Safety, 1698, 'Town-Shifts, Sharpers, Sharks, &c.': where, moreover, this adventurer cum confidence trickster is admirably portrayed.

town toddler. 'Town todlers, silly fellows, frequently taken-in by sharpers playing at different games': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1900. As simple as a toddler or young child.

town(-)trap. An adventurer that, living in London, specializes in the profits to be made, in whatsoever way, by keeping at his beck 'three or four handsom young Wenches, well Equip'd, and in good Lodgings, who are all Modesty without, and nothing but Ludeness within': 1698, E. Ward, The London Spy. The term was prob. c. during its early period, say 1690-1720. Lit., a trapan (by abbr.) that lives in Town.

town whittler. "yaffled by the town whittler." In the language of the bums [professional beggars] "yaffled" is arrested, and the "town whittler" is the constable, so called because he is usually found sitting in some comfortable place whittling a stick,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926 (but valid for ca. 1907); extant. See whittler.

towners. 'Townspeople, especially when they are, or seem to be, massed against a "mob" of tramps, or against a circus or carnival crowd,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: at least as much circus and carnival s. as tramps' c. Cf. coll. townies.

towre. See tower. (Harman, 1566.)

towzery (or touzery) gang. 'Swindlers who hire sale-rooms, usually in the suburbs for mock auction sales of cheap and worthless goods, and who advertise their ventures as "Alarming Sacrifices" "Important Sales of Bankrupts' Stock", &c.': 1874, H; by 1890, if not indeed by 1885, it was s. Cf. Towser, a frequent name for a dog, and barker, 1.

toy. A watch (time-piece): 1826, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, II, trial of Houghton and James and Henry Boyce, 'James Boyce, . . . said "The b—g—r has got no toy"; I had no watch'; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1887, J. W. Horsley; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H, 'Toy and tackle = watch and chain'; ob. It may be regarded as a toy or pretty ornament.—2. As 'a small receptacle for opium' (Convict, 1934), it is drug-traffic j., not c.; compare 'A salve-box, known as a toy, is the common retail container' (Robert Baldwin in For Men Only, Nov. 1937).—3. A boy: U.S.A. (Pacific Coast, mostly): C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

toy-getter. A watch-stealer: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago; 1903, F & H, 'A watch-snatcher'; extant. See toy.

toy-getting. Watch-stealing: 1896 (see front, v., ref. of that date); extant. Cf. preceding entry.

trac. A threepenny piece: late C. 19-20; ob. Edwin Pugh, The Cockney at Home, 1914. A corruption of trey; cf. trae.

track, v. To go; to climb or mount, esp. as track up: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue (glossary), 'Track up the Dancers, Go up the stairs'; 1676, Coles (track, to go); 1698, B.E., 'Track, c. to go. Track up the Dancers, c. whip up the Stairs'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (as for B.E.); 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1828, E. Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; † by 1903 (F & H). Ex S.E. track, 'to follow a track or path'.

track-in. An intermediary; a prison go-between, e.g., for smuggling tobacco to a prisoner: Australian: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939.

track 13 and a wash-out, on. 'A life sentence in a Western penitentiary,' J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang', in The American Law Review, Dec. 1918; extant. '13' = bad luck, 'track 13' an unlucky route; and the track has been washed out by rain.—2. Sullivan also uses it to describe 'the average policeman's ignorance of cant and his subsequent inability to understand criminals' conversation' (as Godfrey Irwin, Aug. 9, 1937, explains it); but this is a journalistic metaphor, not an example of cant.

trade. Swindling; robbery: swindlers' c.: 1823, Bee (and Addenda): current ca. 1810-50. Cf. tradesman.—2. The trade: smuggling: 1818, The London Guide; by 1870, low s. Prob. short for free trade, itself used—e.g., by Scott—in this sense.

tradesman, 'a thief', is on the borderline between c. and s.: 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Tradesmen. Thieves. Clever tradesmen: good thieves'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1874, H (by implication); † by 1903 (F & H). trading cull. A tradesman: Feb. 1796, Sessions Papers, p. 403, 'A trading cull of taste' appears in a quoted poem, Old Ham Fresh Drest: not certainly an actual as opposed to a literary term.

trading justices, such justices of the peace as profit of fomenting quarrels and in 'otherwise retailing justice': not c., but s. (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788; see also Percy H. Fitzgerald, Chronicles of Bow Street Police-Office, 2 vols, 1888, at I, 21.)

trae. See trey, reference of 1785.

traffic. In 'cross-biting law', wherein a gang of blackmailers entices men to lechery, the traffic is the whore: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, spells it trafficke, traficke, traffique; 1592, Greene entitles the main section 'A disputation between Laurence a Foist and faire Nan a Traffique, whether a Whore or a Theefe is most prejudiciall' and, on one occasion there, spells it traffique; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'The whore . . . the Traffick'; † by 1630. Ex S.E. traffic, 'a saleable commodity; saleable commodities'; cf. the late C. 17-18 s. trader, 'a prostitute'.

traffic lights. Carrots and peas: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. Red (carrots) and green (peas).

trail. See the quot'n at casing.

trail stake. A road stake: from ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. A conscious variant of road stake: the long, long trail of the Road.

trailer. See trailers.—2. A horse-thief that goes on foot as an insignificant rustic: 1592, Robert Greene, The Second part of Connycatching, see the latter part of the long quot'n at prigging law; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London ('A Prigger on foote is called a Trayler'); † by 1700. He trails along.—3. One who, for swindlers, follows a likely victim to make sure that he is likely (and not a detective): American: 1891, R. H. Davis, Gallegher ('The Trailer for Room No. 8'); 1928, May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story, where it is applied to a pickpocket's assistant; extant.—4. 'He was a beggar who followed crowds—a professional trailer . . . Trailers are men who follow circuses or anything else that draws a crowd. They live by preying upon the people,' Jim Tully, Circus Parade, 1928: U.S.A.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

train riders. 'Trespassers on railroad property, whether or not it can be proved that they have boarded or ridden a train without paying for transportation' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931): railroad j., rather than tramps. c.

train wreck. One's neck: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

trained (or white) nurse. 'Narcotics smuggled into a hospital or jail to "take care of" the addict,' BVB, 1942: addicts': since ca. 1930. The white refers punningly to the colour of the majority of powdered narcotics and to that of the doctors' and nurses' uniforms.

tram-walloper. A pickpocket operating on trams: since ca. 1910. Partridge, 1938. He 'punishes' the trams—or rather, the passengers.

TRAMP. In the U.S.A., 'there are three types of the genus vagrant: the hobo, the tramp, and the bum. The hobo works and wanders, the tramp dreams and wanders and the bum drinks and wanders,' Dr Ben L. Reitman; St John Tucker, however, says, 'A hobo is a migratory worker. A tramp is a migratory non-worker. A bum is a stationary non-worker.' And Godfrey Irwin cites an experienced 'knight of the road' as saying that 'Bums loaf and sits. Tramps loaf and walks. But a hobo moves and works, and he's clean.'

tramp, on the, 'walking about from place to place' (esp., in search of work), is wrongly classified as c. in Egan's Grose, 1823.

tramp-royal. A master tramp, a 'blowed-in-the-glass stiff': not, I think, c. but a literary designation adopted by certain literary-minded hoboes. See, e.g., the Jack London quot'n at comet and the books by Matt Marshall.

trampler. An attorney; an intermediary: 1608–30, three separate records in O.E.D.; certainly † before 1700. Prob. ex † trample, 'to act as an intermediary'.

tramp's lagging. Fourteen day's imprisonment: C. 20. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. Ironical: for lagging is a term of penal servitude.

TRAMPS' SIGNS. See J. C. Hotten, The Slang Dictionary, 5th ed., 1874, Introduction, and James Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern, 1888, at pp. 270–5.

trandlers. See trundlers, ref. of 1797.

transit piece of goods. 'From France, Spain, and Italy the underground lines run to all the South American cities and to the towns in the north of Africa. From Northern France, Great Britain, Belgium and Holland—with "transit pieces of goods" from Poland, Germany, Roumania, and Central Europe—to South America and the larger cities of the Far East. And from Southern Europe . . . to some central Indian cities and towns in the French eastern possessions,' Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940: white-slave traffic: C. 20.

transnear. 'Tansnear'—from its position in this glossary, obviously a misprint—'c. to come up with anybody,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1860. Prob. English near, 'to approach' + L. trans, 'across', affixed in jest or 'disguise' by some University wit.

transporter. The mouth: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900. With reference to the sentence (of transportation) uttered by the judge.

Transvaler. A (uniformed) policeman: S. Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Prob. ex the view-point of a Cape Colonist.

trap, n. C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718, 'Trap, is one that is employed by the Buttock and File, for when they have bit a Cull of his Pocket-Book, or Writing, they make it their Business to find out where he lives, and when they have found out the poor Cull, they pretend they have taken a common Pocket-Book, and can find nothing against her but his Pocket-Book, which they took from her, and he must Prosecute her: Now if the Cull be a Man of Reputation, or Married, they get what they can from him to compound the Felony, for fear of its coming to his Wife'; 1752, Anon., Villainy Unmask'd, where the 'cull' is approached with the story of a bastard child—and blackmail is levied; app. † by 1780. Ex trapan.—2. Hence (?), a thief-catcher; in C. 19, a police officer: 1754, Dennis Neal (or Neale or O'Neal or O'Neale), Memoirs, 'The Second of April, 1753, the traps came to my House at Rotherhithe'—an earlier instance of its use in this pamphlet is glossed as 'Thief-catchers'; 1760, Anon., Come all you Buffers gay, where it is misprinted prap; 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; June 1789, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey (p. 550), 'Court . . . We have heard the word traps given in evidence a thousand times, and never objected to, and a variety of other cant phrases'; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter (Glossary), 'Traps. Belonging to the rotation offices', i.e., police-courts whercat the magistrates sit in rotation; 1797, Potter (trapp); 1809, Andrewes, 'A constable or thief-taker'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Traps, police officers, or runners, are properly so called; but it is common to include constables of any description under this title'; 1821, J. Burrows, 'A bailiff'; 1821, P. Egan, Life in London (police officer); 1823, Bee; 1827, Thomas Surr, Richmond; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. trans.), ch. v; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1851, Borrow, Lavengro; 1859, H. Kingsley, Geoffrey Hamlyn (Australia); 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), at persuaders; 1870, J. L. Burke, The Adventure of Martin Cash (Australia); 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms (Australia); 1894, H. A. White (ib.); by 1895, low s. in England; by 1905, low s. in Australia too.—3. An informer to the police, a 'nark': 1850, Sessions Papers (Sept. 20, Moram, Williams), 'I never heard what a policeman's trap is' and 'I understand a trap to mean a man who goes about with policemen, getting evidence'; app. † by 1910. Ex sense 2.—4. 'A place of concealment for liquor in the body of an automobile or truck. "Pipe this. Ain't it a honey of a trap job?"'—Burke, 1930: U.S. bootleggers': 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Rose; then merely reminiscent.—5. Police station; a jail: U.S.A.: Dec. 20, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville (the former); Sept. 2, 1937, Mark Hellinger in The (New York) Mirror (the latter); extant.—6. A mould used in coining counterfeit money: 1929 (O.E.D.); extant. Cf. the S.E. (refuse-) trap.

trap, v. To arrest: 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life, 'His wife had been watched; he was "trapped"', and sentenced to eight years' penal servitude'; after ca. 1900, very little used. Ex trap, n., 2.

trap, adj. 'Shrewd; smart'; 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. Prob. ex trap, n., 2.

trap, smell. 'To suspect: spec. of thieves in "spotting", a 'tec,' F & H, 1903; but app. first in J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London, 1869; † by 1920. A cunning rat smells the cheese and avoids the trap.

trap and mouse. A house: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

trap-faker. A porter (in a porter's lodge): 1846,

G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. cxxxii; † by 1890.

trapan, n. and v.; trapanner; trapanning. A decoy or a swindler, a swindling trick; a swindler; swindling: these words—which are recorded, the person in 1641 (T. Jordan, Walks of Islington: O.E.D.) and the trick in 1665 (O.E.D.); the v. in 1656 (Blount, Glossographia); trapanner, 1658–9 in Burton's Diary (O.E.D.); trapanning, ppl adj. in 1665 (R. Head, The English Rogue) and vbl n. in 1670 (Walton: O.E.D.)—were still c. in 1698, to judge from the evidence of B.E.'s 'Trapan, c. he that draws in or wheedles a Cull, and Bites him. Trapan'd, c. Sharpt, ensnared'; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; Grose classifies it as s., which it had prob. > by 1750; from ca. 1830, S.E.—and historical. Not necessarily from surgical trapan or trepan; there is, however, prob. an allusion to the surgical n. and v., and a borrowing of its form; the operative origin is almost certainly (mouse-) trap.

trapeze artist. A tramp that 'rides the rods': tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; 1942, BVB. —2. Hence (?), a sodomite: since ca. 1920. BVB.

trapp. See trap, 2 (at 1797).

trappan, etc. See trapan, etc.

trapper. A synonym of trap, n., in the nuance set forth in the ref. of 1752: 1770, Richard King, The Frauds of London, where it is shown that these trappers 'way-lay gentlemen in the Park', impute buggery, cause a scene if they do not pay hush money, and, if they do pay, blackmail them for so long as they will endure being blackmailed; 1802, George Barrington (plagiarizing King); app. † by 1830, or 1840.

trapping, n. Acting as, being, a 'trap' (see trap, n., 2): Jan. 1835, Sessions Papers (p. 418). 'I know almost all the thieves in London—I think they [? the authorities] had better have kept me trapping, but I think I shall leave off trapping altogether, and stick to thieving'; † by 1890.—2. An earlier sense is 'blackmail': later C. 17–mid-18. Anon., A Country Gentleman's Vade Mecum, 1753. Ex S.E. trap, 'to ensnare'.

traps. See trap, 2, which is nearly always used in the plural: since ca. 1750. Thus George Parker, A View of Society, 'Traps. A term for Thief-takers. It is very common to hear them [members of the underworld] say, that the Traps are after Such-a-one'.

trater is an error for frater in J. T. Smith, Vagabondiana, 1817. A mis-transcription of Harman's term.

travel by Italian bond. See Italian bond.

traveller; mostly in pl. 'Travellers—thieves who travel from place to place': 1839, Brandon; 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police; 'The word "traveller" conveys to the ear of a criminal a very comprehensive meaning. E. R. tells us that "travellers" . . . are thieves, swindlers, bullies, ruffians, beggars, &c.', from a prison report of 1851, recorded at p. 540 of The Prison Chaplain: a Memoir of John Clay, 1851; 1859, H., 'Traveller, name given by one tramp to another'; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1890, B & L (both nuances); 1893, No. 747; 1903, F & H (tramps', for a tramp; an itinerant thief); 1909, W. H. Davies, Beggars, 'What always surprised me was to hear old beggars use the dignified word "travellers", in preference to "beggars", "needles", or "callers"': † by 1920.—2A. bobo, or tramp that steals a car, travels about in it until it wears out, abandons it, steals another . . . : U.S.A.: Sept. 25, 1926, Flynn's, Henry Golomb's article ('Watch That Car') on car thieves; extant.

traveller at her Majesty's expense, 'a transported felon, a convict' (H, 3rd ed., 1864), is not c., but s.—prob. journalistic. Cf. travels . . .

travelling dipper. A pickpocket affecting omnibuses: 1894, James Greenwood, Behind a 'Bus (p. 41); † by 1930. See dipper, 2.

travels, be on one's. To be transported as a convict: 1823, Bee; † by 1900. Cf. traveller at her Majesty's expense.

trawler. A police van (Black Maria): Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1945. A trawler (catches and) conveys fish.

tray or traye. See trey.

trayler. See trailer.

tre. See trey. Gilbert Walker, 1552.

trea. See trey. Thomas Middleton, Your Five Gallants, 1606.

treacher or trecher, 'a cheat, a swindler', is—despite its use in Greene (e.g., The Thirde and last Part of Conny-catching, 1592)—S.E. throughout its long life: C. 13–18. It is of the same etymology as S.E. treacherous, which is, indeed, but a derivation: Old Fr. trechier, Fr. tricher, to cheat or trick.

treacle man. 'Beautiful male decoy who is the pretended young man of the housemaid and the real forerunner of the burglar', Ware, 1909: ca. 1880–1920. Because he pretends to be 'sweet on' the girl.

treacle plaster. 'A piece of brown paper smeared with bird-lime' placed by a burglar over a window to prevent the cut-out glass from falling: 1935, R. Thurston Hopkins, Life and Death at the Old Bailey; extant. Humorous.

treadle or treddle. A prostitute: C. 17. (Ford, 1638. The classification is Halliwell's.) Ex a cock's treading a hen.

tree. See trey.

tree, up a. In prison; imprisoned: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (p. 271); ob. A special application of the s. sense, 'in trouble'.

tree of knowledge. 'Dagga is also known as "boom" or "tree of knowledge"', The Cape Times, May 23, 1946: South Africa: C. 20. For a full list of dagga synonyms, see laughing skuiif. Suggested by boom; the Dutch for 'the tree of knowledge (of good and evil)' is de boom der kennis (des goeds en des kwaads).

tree of life. See snake the tree of life.

treemoon or tremoon. A variant of tray (or trey) moon: see trey, 2. According to B & L, 1890, it is rather a tinkers' than a c.-proper variant; it also occurs (in form treemoon) in F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, 1893.

treewins. See tres wins.

treine. See trine, v.

trepan, trepanner, trepanning. See trapan, etc.

trepenns. See ollap. Not c.

tres wins or treswins; also treewins. Three-pence: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue (glossary), where it is spelt as two separate words; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Treewins, c. Three-pence'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (tres-wins); 1785, Grose (treswins); 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. See win, n., 1.

tretcher. See treacher.

trey; usually pronounced and often written tray; see also tre and trea. A three at dice: since ca.

1380: prob. always j. Thomas Heywood, The Wise-woman of Hogsdon, 1638, 'Hee passes all with Traves'; 1785, Grose (trae: thus, twice, at dice). As 'three', it still survives in parlyaree (see trey saltee) and in gamblers' talk.—2. Hence (also tray of moons), a three-months' term of imprisonment: 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor (U.S.A.); extant.—3. In Australia, a three-years' prison-sentence: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942.

trey bit, 'threepenny piece': Australian and S. African low s., rather than c.: late C. 19–20. See trey.

trey (usually tray) saltee, 'threepence': not c., but parlyaree. H, 1859. Ex It. tre soldi, three 'coppers'.

treyning. See tringing.

treys. 'The third prison grade. "Mike is in treys"', Ersine, 1933; extant. Cf. trey, 1.

trib. 'Trib, c. a Prison. He is in Trib . . . c., he is layd by the Heels, or in a great deal of Trouble,' B.E., 1698: so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1860 or 1870. 'For tribulation,' as B.E. says.

tribe. A gang of criminals: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (a gang of beggars); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A group of tramps travelling together'—a usage dating from at least as early as 1920; 1934, M. H. Wesen; extant. 'Adopted from the same word in gypsy parlance, where it means a family' (Irwin).

trick, n. A watch: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Loag or Trick; a Watch'; by 1794, current in U.S.A. (witness Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807); † by 1890. Perhaps a conscious variant of tick (despite the evidence of the dates).—2. A robbery, a theft: U.S.A.: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'I am hounded for the old trick; and the detectives are looking everywhere for these negotiable bonds'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, p. 264, 'Trick. A theft'; 1904, ibid., p. 258, 'Turning a Trick. Accomplishing a theft'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 'I'll turn a trick wit' 'im'; Jan. 30, 1926, Flynn's; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's; 1935, Hargan (go on a trick); extant. Humorous ex S.E. sense.—3. Hence, any other crime: U.S.A.: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York (see pull a trick); 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1933, Ersine; extant.—4. Mostly in load of tricks, q.v.—5. A prostitute's customer: white-slave traffic: C. 20. Walter C. Reckless, Vice in Chicago, 1933; Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, 1936, 'Lillian has four children. Billy, her man, is a fourth-rate taxi-driver pimp. Billy goes out and gets "tricks", and she takes care of them in the home where her children are'; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 'Sometimes, when we had a good trick, he'd slip us five dollars'. Cf. nautical trick, a turn at the wheel, a watch.

trick, v. To steal: 1935, Leverage; extant. Euphemistic; or short for 'steal by a trick'. Cf. the n., 2 and 3.

trick, do a. See do a trick.

trick, do the. See do the trick.

trick, pull a. See pull a trick.

trick, turn a. See trick, n., 2, third ref. of 1904.

tricker. This term belongs to, and was used only by, those who practised 'the curbing law' (q.v.): 1592, Robert Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, in his list of terms defines it thus, 'The gin to open the window the Trickar'; ibid., 'The curber . . . hath his trickers, which are engins of Iron so cunningly wrought, that he wil cut a barre of Iron in two with them so easily, that scarcely shal the standers by heare him'; 1608 Dekker, The Belman of London; app. † by 1700., Prob. a jocular application of † S.E. tricker, 'a trickster'.

tricking broad. A prostitute: since ca. 1910. BVB, 1942. See broad and cf. trick, n., 5.

tricks. 'Anything stolen from a person at one time by pickpockets': 1859, Matsell; very ob. Cf. trick, n., 2.

trier. An unsuccessful thief: C. 20. Partridge, 1938. Ironic, in a pitying way.

trig, n. 'A piece of stick, paper, &c., placed by thieves in the keyhole of, or elsewhere about, the door of a house, which they suspect to be uninhabited; if the trig remains unmoved the following day, it is a proof that no person sleeps in the house, on which the gang enter it the ensuing night upon the screw, and frequently meet with a good booty, such as beds, carpets, &c., the family being probably out of town. This operation is called trigging the jigger': 1812, J. H. Vaux—copied in Egan's Grose, 1823; 1903, F & H, who imply that it is ob.; certainly † by 1920. A perversion of S.E. trick.

trig, v. To go: 1781, Ralph Tomlinson, A Slang Pastoral (see quot'n at kiddy, 1); † by 1860. Ex (S.E. > dial.) trig, 'to walk quickly': cf. s. trig it, 'to play truant' (Grose, 1788).—2. To mark (a door) with a 'trig': 1812, J. H. Vaux (see trig, n.); 1903, F & H; by 1920, †. Ex the n.

trigger. A door: 1871, State Prison Life (at Jeffersonville, Southern Indiana); † by 1910. Cf. jigger, q.v. at gigger, 1.—2. Short for trigger man: 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy; extant.

trigger man. A bodyguard; a professional killer: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'He's trigger man for Big Tony'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'An assassin or gunman, especially one working with a gang'; 1934, Rose; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Feb. 1) it was s., perhaps even coll. He is quick on the trigger.

trigging, 'playing truant', is not c., but s.

trigging, lay (a person). 'To lay a man trigging; to knock him down': ca. 1780–1840. Grose, 3rd ed. On the marches between c. and s.

trigging the jigger. See trig, n.

trigrymate, 'an idle female companion' (Grose, 1785), is not c.; it has other forms in dial., where it means simply a companion.

trim, n. A theft from the person: 1925, Leverage; extant. The thief trims him as neatly and painlessly as a barber would.

trim, as the v. implied in trimming, 1 and 2, is c. within the limitations there noted.—3. To clear (a house) of its valuables, a place of its robbables: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'We said that plant and trimmed it nice. We robbed that house and were leaving quietly and well satisfied'; extant.

trimming is an underworld 'lay' or 'racket' whereby the operator (who, by the way, needs no confederates) changes his gold coins (or 'Jason's fleece', as he calls them) for silver and then, by a trick, substitutes a box or casket ostensibly containing the same sum of money in the same coinage for the first lot of silver and then, having carefully established confidence in his preliminary transactions, takes away both the original gold and the full equivalence of silver, and, leaving the jeweller or silversmith the short measure, he departs in order to get, and restore to the victim, a shortage introduced into the already complex piece of business, but this time he does not return: ca. 1600–70. Dekker, in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9, provides the locus classicus and defines the terms employed, thus:—‘1. This art or sleight of changing gold into silver’—there are certain variations on the procedure noted above—is called Trimming. 2. They that practise it, terme them-selves Sheepshearers. [See also Jack-in-the-box.] 3. The Gold which they bring to the Cittizen, is cald Jason’s Fleece. 4. The silver which they pick up by this wandring, is White-wooll. 5. They that are cheated by Jacke in a boxe, are called Bleaters.—2. Hence, ‘Cheating People of their Money’ (B.E.): c. (— 1698) >, by 1750, s. >, by 1800, coll. >, by 1830, S.E. trine, n. Tyburn: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider’d; 1785, Grose; † by 1860. Prob. ex the v.—2. Hence, the gallows: 1714, Alex. Smith, The History of the Highwaymen; 1728, D. Defoe; 1797, Potter, ‘The New Drop’; 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870.

trine, v. Implied in 1566 in trining, q.v.; Harman also has it thus, ‘I towre the strummel trine upon thy nabchet and Togman. I see the strawe hang upon thy cap and coate’; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, ‘Then mill, and wap and treine for me’; 1611, Middleton & Dekker, ‘Else trine me on the cheats: hang me’; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; app. † by 1830 at the latest, and perhaps † by 1800. Prob. ex Fr. trainer. This origin is preferable, I think, to The O.E.D.’s derivation, by shortening, ex trine to the cheats, ‘go to the gallows’: for the sense ‘to go’—likewise c.—does not appear before C. 17 (Fletcher, 1622), although it must be noted that the C. 17 usage may perhaps be a survival of C. 14–16 S.E. trine, ‘to go; to march’—itself of Scandinavian origin (O.E.D.).

trining, vbl n. Hanging by the neck: 1566, Harman (concerning Rogues), ‘And their end is eyther hanginge, whiche they call trininge in their language, or die miserably of the pockes’; ibid. (glossary), ‘Tryninge, hanginge’; ibid. (dialogue), ‘So may we happen on the Harmanes, and cly the Jarke, or to the quyerken and skower quyaer cramprings, and so to tryning on the chates. So we maye chaunce to set in the stockes, eyther be whynned, eyther had to prison house, and there be shackied with bolttes and fetters, and then to hange on the gallowes’: 1608, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands (treyning); 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. See trine, v.

trining cheat. A gallows: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, spells it treyning cheate; app. † by 1700. Ex trine, v. + cheat, l.

trinkets. ‘Bowie-knife and revolver,’ Matsell, 1859; † by 1910. Jocose.

trip, n. A whore, a prostitute: Oct. 1879, ‘Autobiography of a Thief’, Macmillan’s Magazine, ‘It was at one of these places [concert-rooms] down Whitechapel I palled in with a trip and staid with her until I got smugged’; 1888, G. R. Sims, ‘A Plank Bed Ballad’; 1903, F & H; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, ‘Trips: women who decoy and rob drunken persons’; extant. For semantics, cf. :—2. Hence, a woman carrying a gun (a ‘gun moll’); a woman addicted to robbing men in the street: U.S.A.: 1928, Chicago May; current since ca. 1905. She’s a stumbling-block.—3. A term in prison: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. :—4. An arrest: U.S.A.: 1934, Rose; extant. Suggested by the synonymous fall (n. and v.); cf. the v.—5. A draft from one prison to another: convicts’: 1934, Rose; extant.

trip, v. To arrest: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 4 of the n.

trip to the country. See take a trip . . .

trip up, v. Implied in tripper-up, q.v.

trip up back, the. The walk to the electric chair: Feb. 1930, The Writer’s Digest, John Caldwell, ‘Patter of the Prisons’; extant. Cf. take walk up back.

tripe. ‘The Belly,’ D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider’d, 1728; 1785, Grose, by whose time it was s.—2. Inferior goods or loot: 1931, Brown; extant.

tripes and keister, ‘the tripod and case or suitcase from which a pitchman sells his wares’ (Godfrey Irwin, 1931), is pitchmen’s s., not c.

triple tree, the. The gallows: Randolph, ca. 1634; Brome, 1641; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., (‘the Tripple-Tree’): perhaps c. until ca. 1740; then s., which it may always have been. It stands up like a gaunt, winter-stripped tree: two ‘wings’ and a top piece. Cf. three-legged mare and t.-l. stool.

tripper. A woman that, with a male in the background, robs a man amorously concerned with her; her confederate carries a ‘cosh’ (see cosh): 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; extant. Cf. tripper-up.—2. A police officer: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex trip, v.

tripper-up; tripping-up. He who robs—the robbing of—a person after one has tripped him up with a (walking or other) stick thrust between his legs or (a method already † by 1828) with a rope stretched across the prospective victim’s path: 1818, The London Guide (pp. 35–6; ‘tripping up’); 1828, Bee, A Living Picture of London (the vbl n.); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), at Floorers; Nov. 18, 1887, The Daily Chronicle, ‘A man who trips you up and robs you. If you make a noise they jump on you’; 1890, B & L (tripper up); 1903, F & H (both); slightly ob.—2. A woman that preys upon drunken men: 1904, J. Sweeney, Scotland Yard (O.E.D.); extant. Cf. tripper, l, which indeed it may elaborate.

trippet, down as a. See down as a hammer.

tristis. ‘Not good. “The fly kinchin is a tristis canis”, the smart boy is a sad dog’: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1900. Dog Latin: cf. English sorry, ‘inferior’.

tritrace. See troll hazard of tritrace.

Trojan. A professional gambler: gaming c. (and buckish s.) of ca. 1800–45. John Joseph Stockdale, The Greeks, 1817 (see workman). Suggested by S.E. Greek, ‘a gamester, a sharper’; cf. the use of honest Trojan in Shakespeare’s Love’s Labour’s Lost, V, ii, 681.

troll, v., 'to loiter, or saunter about' (Grose, 1785), is not c., but S.E.—very rare after C. 17—and long †.

troll and troll by. This and the next three terms are as likely as any in Awdeley's 25 'orders of knaves' (rascally servants) to be c.; see Awdeley's, Nos. 1–4. But Awdeley constitutes the only authority for these terms; hence they would appear to have died out before 1700, for neither Elisha Coles, 1676, nor B.E., 1698, records them. Lit., troll and troll by would seem to connote a casual saunterer or a devil-may-care fellow.

troll hazard of trace. See Awdeley's, No. 3, and the preceding entry. The term seems to mean: one who runs the risk of being found out (as he behaves thus unsatisfactorily), there being a pun on troll, to stroll, to saunter; prob. it originates in dicing and almost certainly it was † by 1700 at latest.

troll hazard of tritace. See Awdeley's, No. 4. Here tritace may = 'try to trace', with an allusion to dicing; trey-trace being a dicing term of unascertained meaning (though trey = 3). For the rest of the phrase, cf. the tentative explanation given in the entry preceding this and the less tentative explanation of:— troll with. See Awdeley's, No. 2; also troll and troll with. Almost certainly † by 1700. Lit., one who saunters or strolls with (his master).

trolley. 'Wire or string used for passing papers, etc., from cell to cell,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: convicts': 1931, IA; extant, BVB (1942) applying it to secret communications in the drug traffic. Humorous.—2. Leader of a gang of burglars or pickpockets: 1925, Leverage; extant. He 'carries along' the rest of them.

trombenick. A Jewish tramp: tramps': since ca. 1918: 1931, Stiff, 'They are scarce as hen's teeth'; 1931, IA. Ex Yiddish.

trombo. A tramp already a pugilist; a tramp hopeful of becoming one: tramps': since ca. 1920. Stiff, 1931. Short for trombone: cf. blow one's own trumpet.

tronk, 'a prison' (Leverage, 1925): not c., but s.

troop; troupe; troops. A set or 'mob' of gangsters, racketeers, criminals: 1924, Geo. S. Dougherty, The Criminal as a Human Being, 'The pocket-picking "mob" or "troupe" is practically invisible'; 1929–31, Kernôt (troops); 1933, Ersine, 'A gang of dips'; 1934, Rose (troop); 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 'Troupe . . . same as "mob" or "outfit"'; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant. Influence of the 1914–18 war.

trooper. A half-crown piece: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1870. Either ex the amount of a week's pay or ex its 'brave'—its handsome and delightful—appearance.

troops. See troop.

trot, v. 'To steal in broad daylight': 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob. Perhaps in allusion to s. 'trotting (a thing) out'—bringing it out to show it.

trot, do the long. See long trot.

trot and pace. The face: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

trotter. An operator of prick-the-garter (a swindling three-card trick): 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1890, their The Rogue's Gallery (the operator of a game 'spinning the table'); extant. He causes it to 'trot'.—2. The sense 'a horse' (Pierce Egan, Captain Macheath, 1842) may possibly be c., but prob. it is s. A good trotter > generic.

trotter-cases. See trotting cases.

trotters at B(e)ilby's ball, shake one's. (See also Beilby's ball.) 'Trotters, feet; to shake one's trotters at Bilby's ball, where the sheriff pays the fiddlers; perhaps the Bilboa's ball, i.e. the ball of fetters: fetters and stocks were anciently called the bilboes': 1785, Grose; † by 1800.

trotting cases; trotter cases. Boots; shoes: not c., but low s.

trouble, in, 'in prison; imprisoned', classified by F & H as c., is a colloquial euphemism.

troupe. See troop.

truck, the. Also known as 'the pinch' or 'ringing the changes' (see pincher for the definition and a description): 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1860. Here truck = barter, exchange.

truck-hopping. Robbery of delivery trucks (anglicé, vans): 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Occasionally he varied . . . simple burglary by truck hopping'; ob.

truck out. To depart: mostly convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. By truck.

trucking. 'It was at Winchester that, after a little commercial transaction—known among "travellers" [itinerant thieves; tramps] as "trucking", and simple enough, in all conscience, to the initiated—by means of which he had acquired some thirty "hog", or shillings, a pound of tea, two ounces of snuff, and half a pound of tobacco, at a comparatively trifling outlay,' F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . the Autobiography of a Gipsy, 1893 (cf. the quot'n at gladder): ca. 1840–1910. With a sly allusion to the usual sense of trucking: 'bartering; exchanging; esp. the giving—or the receiving—of wages in kind'.

trucks, 'trousers', is not c., but s.—orig., low s.

truelers is a misprint for trundlers in The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 1741.

trueit. 'Stealing money under pretense of changing it': 1859, Matsell; † by 1900—if authentic.

truff, n. A purse: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; † by 1890. Perhaps a pun on S.E. truff, 'a truffle'.

truff, v. To steal: North Country: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1920. Cf. It. truffare, 'to cozen or cheat' (O.E.D.). The c. term was adopted from Scottish and Irish dial.: cf. Northern Irish truff-the-ducks, 'a beggar, a tramp' (E.D.D.).

trug. A whore: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 'Ah gentlemen, . . . let this to you all, and to every degree else, be a caveat to warn you from lust, that your inordinate desire be not a meane to impoverish your purses, discredit your good names, condemne your soules . . . Some fond'—foolish—'men are so farre in with these detestable trugs, that they consume what they have upon them, and find nothing but a Neapolitan favor'—the syphilis—for their labor'; 1592, Greene, The Thirde Part of Conny-catching, 'Then looking aside, hee spied his trugge or queane comming up the Church'; 1630, John Taylor ('The Water Poet'), A Bawd, 'A cursed Catalogue of these veneriall Catterpillers . . . with the number of trugs which each of them kept on those daies'. It seems to have been † by 1660 and to have merged into trull. Prob. ex It. (c. or s.) truca, 'whore' (Florio): The O.E.D., which implies a possible influencing by S.E. truck (a mainly pejorative word); truca itself is cognate with the Standard It. word for 'exchange'—cf. the euphemistic exchange flesh (see my Shakespeare's Bawdy).

trugging house. A synonym of trugging place, q.v.: 1592, R. Greene, A Disputation, Betweene a Hee Conny-catcher, and a Shee Conny-catcher, (a harlot speaking) 'I removed my lodging, and gat me into one of those houses of good hospitalitie whereunto persons resort, commonly called a Trugging house, or to be plaine, a whore house, where I gave my selfe to entertaine al companions'; app. † by 1690.

trugging ken, cited by F & H, 1904, may never have existed. On the analogy of prec. and:— trugging place. Orig. a term proper to the 'sacking law' (q.v.), it was first defined by Robert Greene, in A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 1591: 'The whore house, a Trugging place'; app. † by 1690. Cf. trug.

trull, 'a harlot or a trollop', dates from early C. 16 and is usually regarded as S.E. It is, however, possible that its underworld nuances—a criminal's mistress, a beggar's whore, 'a Tinker's travelling Wife or Wench' (as B.E. delightfully defines it)—are, ca. 1580–1720, c. Certainly the use made of the term by such writers as Robert Greene, B.E., Grose, renders it inadvisable to scout its c. affiliations. The O.E.D. compares the Ger. Trulle.

trump, 'a thoroughly reliable or courageous fellow', is not c. as is stated in Egan's Grose, 1823.

trundle for a goose's eye, making a. See weaving leather aprons.

trundlers. Peas: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, where it is misprinted truelers; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, A Dict. of Cant and Flash, where it is misprinted trandlers—repeated by Andrewes, 1809; declared † by Pierce Egan in 1823 (ed. of Grose). Peas roll along.

trundling cheat. A coach or a cart: 1629, Jonson, The New Inn, 'Next morning [they] pack away in their trundling cheats like gipsies'. This may be a literarism. Lit., a noisily rolling thing.

trunk, 'a nose', may orig. have been c.; if so, then it was certainly s. by 1750. B.E., 1698, 'How fares your old Trunk? c. Does your Nose stand fast?'—the reference being perhaps to syphilis. Ex an elephant's trunk.—2. Moreover, trunk, 'body', seems to have been c. during the approximate period 1770–1830; in 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, p. 167, gives trunk as the c. equivalent of 'body'.

trunk, shove one's. See shove one's trunk.

trunker, 'the body', says Matsell, 1859: an error.

trusty. Convicts' c., as in 'He is a . . . "trusty" (informer), and the major swears by him', Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne, 1893; in this precise nuance, it was † by 1930. Ex the lit. sense, 'a convict trusted by the warders'.

try (it) on. 'Try on. . . . To live by thieving. Coves who try it on; professed thieves': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To make an attempt . . . where success is doubtful'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; app. † by 1880. 'There is no harm in trying'.—2. Esp. as vbl n., trying . . . : 1875, Arthur Griffiths, Memorials of Millbank, 'Cases of "trying it on", or "doing the barmy"', which are cant terms for feigning lunacy, used at one time to be more frequent than they are now'; by 1900, merged with the predominant coll. sense of the phrase.

tryne; trying. See trine; trining.

tub. 'A large glass of beer,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; app. † by 1930. Nitwit humour.—2. An automobile: British: 1937, David Hume, Cemetery First Stop!; extant. Jocosely pejorative.—3. See tubs . . . Also independently, as in Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938, 'Tubs: Omnibuses'.

tubbing. Imprisonment; a term in prison: 1903, F & H; rather ob. A very cold bath.

tubs, work the. 'To pick pockets at omnibus stopping-places,' George Dilnot, Triumphs of Detection, 1929; 1937, David Hume, Halfway to Horror; 1943, Black; extant. Cf. tub, 2.

tuck, 'to hang', recorded first by B.E., 1698, and current until ca. 1850, may possibly have been c. until ca. 1750. Prob. ex the † S.E. sense, 'to tug, to twitch'. Tuck up is a later and prob. euphemistic elaboration.

tuck-'em fair; or capitalised. A, or the, place of execution; the gallows: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters (see quot'n at crap, n., 2); 1792, The Minor Jockey Club; † by 1890 (B & L). See prec. entry and cf. Paddington fair.

tuck up. See tuck.

Tuck-Up Fair. A synonym of tuck-'em fair: 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1848, Sinks of London; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1900.

tuff ken. See toff ken.

tug (or tugg). A greatcoat; any article of clothing: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'The ringing Tugs and Seats, that is, changing Great Coats and Saddles'; ibid., 'Tuggs, that is Cloaths'; † by 1810. Perhaps because one has to tug to get them on; but much more prob. the word is a corruption of toge. See also tugs and seats.

tug, under. See under tug.

tug-skirt. A female assistant to a priest in his social-reform and rescue work; she gets into touch with women it would be difficult for a priest to meet: either c. or, more prob., low s.: 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves, (woman detective:) 'I remembered the East Sider's abhorrence of institutional relief. I was a "Mission Stiff" to her, or a "tug-skirt" for a "Galway"'; extant. She tugs at a woman's skirts in order to attract her attention.

tugs and seats, ring; mostly as vbl n., ringing tugs . . . Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, in section entitled 'Ringin' Tugs and Seats', writes thus: 'People in Fairs or Markets in the Summer, are apt to give their Great Coats to the Maid, and put their Names on it with a Piece of Paper; the Servant cannot remember every Coat, and the Sharper comes and writes his Name on his Coat that is worth but little, and changes his Note to another Coat; he then goes out, and comes in presently and calls for the Coat with such a Note on it, and the Servant delivers it without Dispute, and they send another to fetch their old Coat: They often get six or seven Coats in a Day with that old one Changing of Saddles '—seats in c.—'is done by the same Sort of People; their Horse having a Rug or Horse Cloth on it for that Purpose, they watch an Opportunity of taking off their own Saddle, and changing it for a good one, putting it on their own Horse, and tying the Cloth over it with a Sarsangal [i.e., a surcingle], and then take their Horse away and put him to another Inn', whence it appears that both of these dodges are practised chiefly at inns; † by 1880.

tuig, n. See the 1821 quot'ns at tog, n., and togs. Also spelt twig.

tuig, v. See tog, v.

tullibon. A variant of tolibon.

tully, in 'Miss Dolly Trull', a song in Pierce Egan's Captain Macheath, 1842—'Until she frisks him, at a splash, Of rhino, wedge, and tully'—is prob. a ghost-word or, at best, a word made up by Egan.

tumble, n. A failure, esp. a failure to keep out of the clutches of the police, an arrest; a hitch or delay; an obstacle: 1863, The Cornhill Magazine, Jan., p. 81 (of garrotting), 'Should the "nasty man" have a "tumble"', or, in language a little plainer, should he find a difficulty in "screwing up" his subject, it is the duty of the "front stall" to assist him by a heavy blow, generally delivered just under the waist'; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft (U.S.A.); 1903 (see kitty); 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; by 1918, s. Cf. fall, n. and v.—2. A recognition that something is wrong; a detection of crime; a suspicion: July 1875, Sessions Papers (p. 291), 'He thought there was a tumble, so he went away'; app., it reached the U.S.A. ca. 1880, as in George Bidwell, Forging His Chains, 1888, 'Should there be a premature "tumble" . . .'; 1893, Langdon W. Moore. His Own Story, '[He] had reported that there was "a dead tumble"', that both men had been arrested, and . . .'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'A discovery, an exposure'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose, 'Suspect (v); to give a tumble'; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 'Discovery of a theft'; extant. Prob. ex 1.—3. Hence, an indiscretion; a betrayal: U.S.A.: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; extant.—4. A drink: low s. rather than c. of English C. 20. (Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938.) Short for tumble down the sink, rhyming s. tumble, v. Implied in tumbling, q.v.—2. To alarm: Dec. 5, 1857, The Times, 'You will tumble the coachman', cited by 'Ducange Anglieus', 2nd ed., 1859; April 1863, Sessions Papers; app. † by 1900. To cause (a person) to 'tumble to' something. Tumble, v.i., 'to "catch on", to understand', may itself have been c. during the approx. period, 1840–60, as, e.g., in Sessions Papers, April 16, 1849, one thief to another, "'Don't you tumble" . . . they were then silent'.—3. 'The warder, nothing loth to make money "tumbled", i.e., entered into an arrangement with him [a convict] to write to certain friends of the prisoner's, and get money for this purpose [tobacco]': 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude; extant. Cf. sense 5.—4. To cause a person to be arrested or imprisoned: U.S.A.: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, '[Women] tumble more guns'—professional thieves—'n all the coppers in existence'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'to expose'; by 1930, British—as in George Ingram, The Muffled Man, 1936, 'You can't go on for ever at any game, and not get tumbled some time or other'; 1933, Ersine, 'To see, recognize, rank'; extant. Perhaps ex sense 2; cf. —5. To be arrested; to fail in a criminal enterprise: U.S.A.: 1903, J. Flynt, The Rise of Roderick Clowd; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, sense 'to be exposed'; by 1928, ob.—witness Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld' in The American Mercury, May issue; but not yet †. Cf. fall, v., and tumble, n., 1.

tumble and trip; usually in pl., tumble and trips lips: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20, Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

tumble bug. ? A cataleptic: 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'He's slicker 'n' meaner 'n' hell, that guy. He'd steal a ball from a lame tumble-bug'; extant.

tumble over anything, not to. 'He . . . won't tumble over anything; that means, will thief every thing that comes in his way': 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicancy and Crime; 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police; ob.

tumble to, 'to discover, perceive, understand': not c., but s.—orig., low s.—in England. In U.S.A., prob. c. until ca. 1890: see, e.g., E. H. Savage, Recollections, 1865, and G. P. Burnham, Memoirs, 1872, and George W. Walling, Recollections, 1887.

tumbler. See ferreting. The 'tumbler', in addition to receiving a commission from the five 'rabbit-suckers', gets a 'rake-off' from the 'ferret' or tradesman letting out goods at extortionate rates to rich young fools. The term seems to have been current ca. 1600–1750.—2. Hence: 'One that Decoys, or draws others into Play', gamblers': 1698, B.E.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A sharper'; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. He causes men to stumble and fall.

tumbler, shove the. See shove the tumbler.

tumbler dive. 'Bayard Street [N.Y.C.] has certain notorious "tumbler" dives, where stale beer is sold mingled with a whiskey so powerful that the drinker becomes drunk almost as he swallows it': 1891, Darkness and Daylight; † by 1920. Perhaps because the drinkers, stupefied, tumble down.

tumbling. Indiscriminate giving to beggars: 1853 (see soft Tommy); † by 1910. Ex 'tumbling over oneself to give alms'.

tumblings and blankets. Tobacco (esp., loose tobacco, cigarette tobacco) and cigarette papers: 1925, Glen H. Mullin (quot'n at blanket); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. See blanket; loose tobacco so easily tumbles out of bag or pouch.

tun. See turn, v.

tune, v. To rob; to burgle the house of: 1733, Sessions Papers (1st Sessions), repeated in 1742, Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, trial of Wm Brown and Jos. Whitlock, "'Here's an old French gentleman lives hard by and we can tune him easily"; and upon that we went to Colonel Romaine's . . . We took a Gold Watch out of his Pocket, and a Ring from his finger We took twelve Silver Forks'; 1733, ibid., of robbing (a person) on the highway; † by 1830. Ironie.—2. To hit, assault: S. Africa: C. 20. Letter, May 23, 1946, from C. P. Wittstock; June 3, 1946, The Cape Times, Alan Nash, 'To hit hard: Tune him'. Cf. sense 1.

tunnel, v. To shoot (a person): Oct. 9, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, 'If I got excited and lost my head I might tunnel Owney, and I had to have him unhurt'; extant. Cf. drill, v., 2.

tunnel (or T-), the. Short for 'the underground tunnel', q.v.: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; by 1920, no longer c. tunnelling, go. To catch partridges at night: since ca. 1830; ob. Anon., No. 747, 1893. 'Underground' methods.

turf. Among tramps, turf is 'the road [cf. turf it], or low life in general', J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers that Prey; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, where it = 'the underworld'; 1903, Flynt, Rudrick Clowd (id.); ob.

turf, on the. See on the turf.

turf it. To be on the road as a tramp: 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, glossary; ob. Cf. turf and hit the turf.

Turk. An active male homosexual: C. 20. BVB. Ex a common tradition.

turkey. A suit-case or (large) travelling bag: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Stiff, 'A bundle, a suitcase or a canvas bag'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A canvas tool-bag; a bed roll'; extant. 'Probably an ironic-abbreviation of "Turkey carpet"' (Irwin).—2. The sense 'Irishman' (Leverage, 1925) is s.; the same applies to the shortening turk or Turk.—3. 'A fake capsule found to contain only sugar, chalk or the like,' BVB, 1942: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Prob. ex cold turkey.

turkey merchant, 'a driver of turkeys' (B.E., 1698), is s.; so too is the allied sense, 'a poulterer' (Grose, 1785).—2. A scaler of poultry: 1837, B. Disraeli, Venetia, "'We'll make a Turkey merchant of you yet", said an old gipsy'; 1890, B & L; ob. I hold the sense to be suspect, in that prob. it is merely literary: a fancy, or a mistake, of Disraeli's.—3. 'Turkey Merchants—purchasers of plundered silk, from the weavers, who rob the over-weight': 1839, Brandon; 1859, H., 'Dealers in plundered or contraband silk'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1863, A Lancashire Thief; 1890, B & L; † by 1903 (F & H). Ex S.E. Turkey merchant, 'a dealer in Turkish goods'.

Turkish-bath spuds. Potatoes steamed with their jackets on: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant.

turn, n.; properly the turn. 'Stealing money under pretence of changing it': 1797, Potter; † by 1900. Ex the v.

turn, v. To 'ring the changes' with false coin: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, where it is misprinted tun; app. † by 1810.—2. To pick the pockets of: 1857 (see pot); † by 1910. Short for turn out the pockets of.—3. To divert the attention of a man counting his money and rob him while he is turned away from it: U.S.A.: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; 1925, Leverage, 'To stall (by turning the victim of a theft)'; extant. Cf. turn trick.—4. See turned.—5. To effect a robbery; usually turn it: U.S.A.: 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; extant. Short for s. (later, coll.) turn the trick, 'to succeed in doing something'.—6. See sail.

turn, around the. See around . . .

turn, call the. See call the turn.

turn, out of. See out of turn.

turn a cart-wheel. See cart-wheel.

turn a trick. See trick, n., 2.

turn a white hedge green. See white hedge.

turn an honest penny. See honest penny.

turn-caller. An informer to the police: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, p. 269 and p. 443; very, very ob.

turn copper (on). See copper, n., 3. Ersine, 1933, has the short—the v.i.—form.

turn in. To inform on (a person) to the police: 1930, Burke (quot'n at sister-in-law); March 1931, True Detective Mysteries; 1933, Ersine, 'In prison, to report a convict'; 1937, H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant.—2. To arrest (someone): 1933, Ersine; extant. Prob. ex 1.

turn leaks or turn on the leaks. To inform to the police: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. leaky.

turn milky. See milky, turn.

turn nose. See nose, turn.

turn off. To rob (a place), to burgle: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, "'He's been wit' me an' Big Head when we toins off twenty joints", and see quot'n as schlamwerker; 1925, Leverage, 'To commit a theft'; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant.

turn on the heat. See heat . . .

turn on the leaks. See turn leaks.

turn on the phonograph. See phonograph . . .

turn out, v.i. 'To turn-out, is a cant term, for going to rob or steal,' trial (in Jan. 1721–2) of James Shaw and Richard Norton, in Select Trials, from 1720 to 1721 (pub. in 1734) and in The Annals of Newgate, 1776, as a gloss on 'I suspected Norton, because he had been heard to say, that he had turned out'; 1878, Rolf Boldrewood, Ups and Downs: A Story of Australian Life (bushranging term); 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms (Australia), "'Like a bushranger, Ailie," I said, "for that'll be the long and short of it. You may as well know it now, we're going to 'turn out'"; 1899, Geo. E. Boxall (id.); by 1910, no longer c.—2. See kickseys, ref. of 1812.—3. Implied in turner out.—4. To acquit at sessions or assizes: 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (p. 259); Dec. 1918, The American Law Review; extant.

turn-over, n. A search of cell and person: convicts': C. 20. In, e.g., Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940. Ex sense 1 of the v.—2. One's last night before release from prison: U.S. convicts': since the 1920's. Rose, 1934. See roll-over.

turn over, v. (Usually in passive.) 'Turned over, to be stopped and searched by the police': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; ibid., of searching a place; 1887, A. Griffiths, Locked Up, ' . . . The inquisitive fingers of the warder, who "turned him over", or "rubbed him down", or, more exactly, searched him from head to foot'; 1890, B & L; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago; 1903, F & H; 1923, Sidney Felstead, The Underworld of London; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1933, George Ingram, Stir; 1938, F. D. Sharpe; 1943, Black; extant. I.e., to turn over (the clothes of) someone.—2. 'Turned over, remanded by the magistrate or judge for want of evidence' (cf. turn up, v., 2): 1864, H., 3rd ed.; 1903, F & H; † by 1920. Cf. turn up, v., 2.—3. (Ex sense 1.) 'He [the bruiser] will not infrequently "turn over" another thief—that is, rob a pickpocket or other such artist of the "swag", which the latter may have "boned" by his skill': 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary;

ob. Cf. turn off.—4. (Ex 1.) To cross-question severely: 1930 (O.E.D.); extant.

turn pink. See pink.

turn snitch. See snitch, turn.

turn square. See square, turn.

turn stag. See stag, turn.

turn the fan on. See fan on . . .

turn the joint is pitchmen's s. for 'to make sales to a crowd attracted by ballyhoo'. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

turn the nut. To make money: 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 'He worked steadily . . . and never lost a chance to turn the nut, as he'—a professional burglar—'would express it'; extant. Cf. nut, n., 3; or perhaps, 'to keep the engine in motion'.

turn trick. 'In the thieves' parlance this operation is termed a "turn trick", and consists in the clever act of turning a man away from his money [in bank or safe-deposit], in order to enable the thief to make off with it', the operation consisting in diverting the attention of a man that is counting the money he has just received from the teller, by dropping a bank-note behind him and asking the victim whether it is his, the victim turning round to pick it up or to take it from the thief's accomplice: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; app. † by 1940.

turn up, n. A swindle: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'The sharpers perceive now you have not stood the turn up as well as they could wish'; app. † by 1890 or so. Ex the v., sense 1.—2. An acquittal, a release: since ca. 1930; ob. Ex sense 2 of:—

turn up, v. To swindle: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Now another drop genius is planted on you, to turn you up, as they call it'; 1818, The London Guide, 'Turned Up, ruined'; † by 1900 at latest. Cf. the s. sense 'to quit or abandon' (a person).—2. 'To acquit' (an accused), 'to discharge' (an imprisoned person): low s., not c., at least from ca. 1860 onwards; for in late C. 18—mid-19 it seems to have been c., as in the earliest record: July 1784, Sessions Papers, p. 963, accused loquitur, 'He [a watchman] told me if he got a reward for the sheep that he would turn me up at the Old Bailey, and if not, he meant to take my life away', and again ibid., Feb. 1, 1849 (p. 324). In U.S.A., it may have been c. from ca. 1840 to ca. 1900: witness The National Police Gazette, Nov. 1, 1845, and Langdon W. Moore. His Own Story, 1893, at p. 254.—2a. Slang in the senses 'to desist from, to relinquish' and 'to quit (a person), or cease from frequenting him'.—3. As in: 1860, Charles Martel, The Detective's Note-Book, 'Our plan seemed to be . . . to "turn up" (search) some of the "fences" (receivers of stolen goods), to see if we could find any of the property'; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; ob. Cf. :—4. (Of the police) to stop and search (a suspected malefactor): 1864, H, 3rd ed.; slightly ob.—5. To hand over to the authorities, esp. the police: U.S.A.: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham; by 1890 (B & L) it was English in sense 'to arrest': 1893, Langdon W. Moore (U.S.A.); 1903, F & H (to arrest); 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 'Turn a man up—inform against him'; 1940, Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely; April 1942, Flynn's, James Edward Grant; extant.

turned, ppl adj. Converted by or to religion:

convicts': 1890, B & L; very ob. 'By abbreviation from turned square, the contrary of being crooked, or on the crook' (B & L).

turned over, ppl adj. See turn over, v.

turner. 'The Turners and Pinchers, that is those getting Change for Money, and putting back Part and keeping some': 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries—see also quot'n at pincher; † by 1870. Prob. ex the fact that they skilfully turn the money in their hands.—2. (Cf. sense 1.) In a 'green goods' swindle, one member of the gang is 'the Turner, who is represented as the son of the old man [that does nothing—except give an air of respectability to the "joint"], and does the selling of the bogus notes,' W. T. Stead, Satan's Invisible World Displayed, 1898, p. 109: U.S.A.: † by 1930.—3. 'The one who engages a person while a confederate robs him,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: late C. 19–20: Nov. 14, 1936, Flynn's, Will McMorro, 'Charles Adams, operating . . . as a "turner", was to distract the cashier's attention at crucial moments'; extant. Ex turn, v., 3.

turner out. 'A coiner of bad money': 1859, H; ob.

turning, vbl n. Swindling: since ca. 1890: Sept. 26, 1931, Flynn's, N. Robins & E. M. Bracken, 'Green Goods and Con'; extant.

turning on. See backing.

turning point. A variant of turner, 2: 1925, Leverage; extant. See turn, v., 3.—2. A swindle; the place where it is operated: late C. 19–20: Sept. 26, 1931, Flynn's, Nelson Robins & E. M. Bracken, 'A half dozen assistants formed the "turning joint" mob'.

turnip, 'a watch', is s. in England, but it may, ca. 1840–80, have been c. in Scotland: witness James McLevy, The Sliding Scale of Life, 1861, at p. 50; and perhaps in U.S.A. ca. 1880–1930: witness The Literary Digest, Aug. 1916, article entitled 'Do You Speak "Yegg"?'—2. Hence, a gold watch: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; † by 1940.

turnip top. A watch-chain and the seal(s) or trinket(s) attached thereto: 1887, H. Baumann, Londonismen, where cut turnip-tops is to steal them; † by 1940. See turnip; tops is a pun.

turnips. 'To give any body turnips signifies to turn him or her up'—i.e., to quit him or cut his acquaintance—'and the party so turned up, is said to have knap'd turnips': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Bee; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'He's going to give her turnups'; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870.

turnpike sailor. 'Turnpike sailors, beggars who go about disguised as sailors': 1839, Brandon; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1859, H; 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747; 1903, F & H, who classify it as tramps'; ob.

turnpiker. A tramp on the road, and living off the country he traverses: tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex 'turnpike (road)'.

turnups. See turnips.

Turpin, or turpin, 'a kettle', is classified by Halliwell as 'a cant term'; † by 1903 (F & H); The E.D.D. (1905) classifies it as † West Yorkshire s. Possibly ex the name of the famous C. 18 highwayman: towards the end of his career (he was hanged in 1729) he operated as a horse-dealer in Yorkshire.

turret; turret man. A steel-sheeted cage-like shelter to protect the guards of a gambling den or of a bootleggers' warehouse; one of the guards themselves: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'They built a turret in their plant'—'That scragger? He's a turret man for Whitey'; 1934, Rose (both); extant.

turtle. A prostitute: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Perhaps short for turtle dove, emblematic, here, not of love but of a light-o'-love.

turtle doves. Gloves: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1865, low, and by 1875, gen. rhyming s. Hence turtles; the usual C. 20 form.—In C. 20 U.S.A., esp. on the Pacific Coast, turtle doves is extant as c.: M & B, 1944.

tush. '... A parcel, which he said contained two dozen tush, meaning bad half-crowns; I know the word is so applied': 1830, a witness in the trial of George Parr, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, VI; 1830, op. cit., VI, any half-crown; app. † by 1900. Prob. from tusheroon, q.v. at tossaroon: if so, then tossaroon or tusheroon existed some years before our earliest record of the word.

tusheroon. See tossaroon.

tusk. A sodomite: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Suggested by wolf?

Tuttle Nask. The bridewell in 'Tuttle', i.e., Tothill Fields: 1698, B.E.; Grose. For the second element, see nask.

tuz. To gamble: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Progress', 'With Nell he kept a lock, to fence, and tuz'; † by 1900.

twalap. See ollap.

twang, n. Earliest in buttock and twang, q.v. Not by itself until 1718: C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'When he was a Twang, alias followed the Tail of his Wife ... a common Night Walker, no sooner had she pick'd a Pocket, and given him the Signal, by a Him'—i.e., hem!—'or otherwise, but he had Impudence and Courage enough, to attack the Cull, until the Buttock had made her Escape'. Echoic.—2. (the twang.) See twang, go (upon the).—3. Opium: Australian: ca. 1870-1910. Baker, 1942 and 1945. Prob. ex some Chinese word.

twang, v. (Of the male) to copulate with: ca. 1615, Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggars' Bush, 'Twang dell's i' the stiromel', glossed as 'lie with thy wench in the straw till she twang'; app. † by 1700. Cf. strum, v., 2.

twang, adj., goes with twang, n., 1: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'Noted for twang stealing'; † by 1860.

twang, go (up)on the. To act the 'twang' (see above); also as in: 1725, D. Defoe, The True and Genuine Account of Jonathan Wild, 'She carried him out with her upon the Twang'; This is One of the Cant Words for those who attend upon the Night-walking Ladies in their Progress, and who keep at a distance, that if the Lady they are employ'd by, happens to fall into any Broil, they may come in timely to her Assistance'; app. † by 1810.

twang Adam cove. A plausible, well-spoken fellow employed, by a gang of swindlers, to establish contact with the prospective victims of the 'con men': Jan. 1741, trial of Mary Young in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, pub. in 1742; † by 1860. See twang, n., and cf. Adam Tiler.

twank. A homosexual, an effeminate man: since the 1920's. In, e.g., James Curtis, What Immortal Hand, 1939. Perhaps a blend of s. twerp and swank.

twat-faker. A prostitute's bully: C. 20. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Cf. the low s. synonym twat-masher; here twat = female genitals.

tweedle, n. 'A spurious ring used to swindle jewellers and pawnbrokers': 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; extant. Perhaps ex twiddle: one tends to twiddle a (loose) ring on one's finger.—2. Hence, the tweedle, 'robbing jewellers by substituting worthless rings for genuine ones,' Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938: since ca. 1920. Jim Phelan, In the Can, 1939, spells it twiddle; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 'The tweedle—changing a spurious ring or gold watch for a [genuine-gold] one'.

tweedle, v.; usually go tweedling (hence tweedler, one who does this). To sell a spurious ring or watch-chain by a species of confidence tricks, substituting a 'dud' for the genuine ring or chain that has been confidingly shown to the prospective victim: from ca. 1910: 1925, Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons (pp. 17-18, for an excellent account); ibid., 'The chain is handed over in tissue paper, and the "tweedler" departs'; extant. Ex the n.

tweezer. 'A small pocket-book with knob clasps,' Jackson & Hellyer, 1914; 1938, Convict 2nd (a purse for small change); extant.

twelve. A rare C. 19 variant of twelver.—2. A twelve-ounce loaf: prisoners': 1874, J. Greenwood, The Wilds of London; ob.

twelve, gammon the. See gammon the twelve.

(twelve) godfathers, the members of the jury: late C. 18-19: app. not e., but s., orig. either low or journalistic. Grose, 'Because they name the crime the prisoner before them has been guilty of'.

twelver. A shilling: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1730, Anon., A History of Executions, 'We ... tipp'd the honest Coachman a Twelver to drink our Health'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1839, Brandon (also twelve); 1841, H. D. Miles; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, Snowden; 1857, Augustus Mayhew; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was low s. 'Twelve pence, one shilling.'

twenty-dollar gold piece. Exposed part of a Yale lock: burglars': since early 1920's. Ersine. Ex its appearance.

Twenty-Five Gallery, the; gen. written 25 ...

twenty hundred. Twenty cents; twenty dollars: 1933, Ersine; extant. By disguise.

twibill. According to F & H, it is c. of C. 17 for 'a street ruffian; a roaring boy', but this interpretation and this classification are alike suspect.

twicer. A florin: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. One shilling twice over.—2. A crook; a swindler: Australian: C. 20; by 1940, low s. In, e.g., Baker, 1945. He double-crosses.

twiddle. See tweedle, n., 2.—2. As the twiddle, the art of letting a warder suspect, then show him something innocuous in one's hand, 'only to flick the concealed chew [of tobacco] across the bench as the satisfied official departed,' Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940: convicts': since ca. 1920. To do this is to twiddle a kangar (Phelan).

twig, n. See twig, put out of and twig, hop the.—2. Only in twig, 'handsome(ly)', 'stylish(ly)': 1811, Lex. Bal., 'The cove is togged in twig; the fellow is dressed in the fashion'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Any thing executed in a stylish or masterly manner, is said to be done in prime twig'; 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial, 'In such very prime twig', glossed as 'high spirits or condition'; 1823, Bee; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; by 1850, s. Prob. = in tuig, i.e., in tog (see tog, n.).—3. See tuig.

twig, v. To espy, or notice; discern a person or his intentions: 1720, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, III, 'Walk, for the Mort twigs us . . . That is to walk up and down a little, because the Woman they suppose has an Eye on them'; 1785, Grose; app. it had > s. by 1770 or so. A variant of tweak, to seize and pull sharply, to twitch: for the semantics, cf. the lit. and fig. senses of apprehend.—2. 'To disengage, to sunder, to snap, to break off; To twig the Darbies; To knock off the Irons,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (twigg); † by 1870. Cf. the origin of sense 1.

twig, hop the. See hop the twig.

twig, in. See twig, n., 2.

twig, put out of. A variant (ca. 1740–1800) of twig, v., 2. John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753.—2. See out of twig.

twigg. See twig, v., 2, ref. of 1797.

twine, v.; mostly as vbl n., twining (or even twineing). "Twineing! What's that?" ". . . Why you must be a greenhorn not to know that . . . Suppose you start in the morning with a good sovereign and a 'snyde' half-sovereign in your pocket; you go into some place or other, and ask for change of the sovereign, or you order some beer and give the sovereign in payment, it's likely you will get a half-a-sovereign and silver back in change. Then is the time to 'twine'. You change your mind . . . and throwing down the 'snyde' half, say you prefer silver; the landlord or landlady, or whoever it is, will pick up the snyde half-quid, thinking of course it is the same one they had given you", A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, 1869; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob. Perhaps from twine, 'to twist', hence 'to complicate'; cf. twist, v., 2. twinkler. (Usually pl.) An eye: since ca. 1840 (Sinks of London, 1848); ob. Possibly c., but far more prob. s.—2. Hence (?), a light: 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H, who classify it as thieves'; slightly ob.

twirl, n. A twirl cloth is 'a painted Cloth with figures, upon which they'—gamblers—'play with an Iron that turns round', whereas a toggy cloth is 'a painted Cloth, upon which they throw Chances with Dice': 1742, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account (John Jennings); app. † by 1820. Explained in the quot'n.—2. A skeleton key: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail (Preface); 1890, B & L; 1891, C. Bent; 1896, A. Morrison; 1898, R. J. A. Power-Berry, The Bye-Ways of Crime; 1903, F & H; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; Oct. 1928, Word-Lore; 1931, The Bon Voyage Book; 1934, Rose; 1935, David Hume, Dangerous Mr Dell; 1936, David Hume, The Crime Combine; 1938, F. D. Sharpe; 1941, D. Hume, The Return of Mick Cardby; extant. One twirls them in the hand—and in the lock.—3. A warder: 1891, Charles Bent, Criminal Life, p. 272, 'Right twirl (good warder)'; 1931, The Bon Voyage Book; 1933, George Ingram, Stir; 1934, Rose (U.S.A.); 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; 1939, Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows; 1940, Jim Phelan, Jail Journey; extant. As screw, 'key' > screw, 'warder': so twirl, 'key' > twirl, 'warder'.—4. 'Should any genuine punter make a good-sized bet, "Bats"'—a bookmaker so nicknamed—'employs what is known as "The Twirl". He simply puts the bet down to another horse, and, if possible, similar in name or at the same odds as the horse the punter named. Should the punter's horse win . . . then it's only the punter's word against "Batts", Michael Fane, Racecourse Swindles 1936: race-course gangs': C. 20.

twirl, on the. Engaged in burglary: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant. See twirl, n., 2.

twirl-cloth. See twirl.

twirler. 'Twurlers,' says John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, 'are a Sort of People that resort to Fairs and Markets with a round Board divided into eight Quarters, and an Iron standing in the Middle, that turns round like the Hand of a Clock, which they play with for Money, and is a great encourager of young People to Vice, who often rob their Parents and Masters for Money to play with at this Game'; 1890, B & L; † by 1900. Cf. twirl, 1.—2. 'A set of vagrants who go from fair to fair with men and woman's [sic] old cloaths': 1797, Potter, but the definition is slightly suspect, despite its repetition by Andrewes in 1809.—3. 'A "twirler", or skeleton-key': 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights on Criminal Matters; 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals, 'Here were skeleton keys, or "twirlers" as they are known to crookdom'; 1935, R. Thurston Hopkins, Life and Death at the Old Bailey; extant. Cf. twirl, n., 2.—4. Hence, a prison warder: since ca. 1925. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932.

twist, n. A skeleton-key, a picklock: 1889, B & L (at betty); ob. One twists it in the lock.—2. A trick (e.g., to get food or money): U.S. tramps': 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp, 'To ask him'—a hard-bitten, experienced hobo—'if he had been long on the road! He who knew every twist and racket and gag and game connected with it!'; extant. Prob. ex s. twister, a sharp, tricky fellow.—3. A waltz: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ob. One twists and twirls in the turn and in the reverse.—4. A dancing girl (corps de ballet, 'chorus', etc.): U.S.A.: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven (any girl or young woman); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A woman, especially one with loose or "twisted" morals'; April 21, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627 (any girl or young woman); extant. Short for twist and twirl, q.v.—5. An habitual criminal: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. Prob. shortened ex twister (cf. twister, 1).—6. (Usually in pl.) A marijuana cigarette: dope traffic: since ca. 1920. BVB. Ex the way it is rolled.

twist, v. (Usually in passive.) To hang: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; Grose, 1785. Not certainly c. at any time, despite Pierce Egan's classification in The Life of Samuel Denmore Hayward, 1822; but prob. c. until ca. 1750. Ex twist a person's neck.—2. To palm and steal: Jan. 1863, The Cornhill Magazine (p. 92), 'Stealing wedding-rings, in this way [by palming them at a jeweller's] is called "twisting for fawnies"; stealing diamond rings [in this way], "twisting for sparks"; extant. Cf. twine.—3. 'To snap the ring of a watch', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing: U.S.A.; extant. By twisting it sharply.—4. The sense 'to cheat' has never been c.—even, pace Jackson & Hellyer, 1914, in U.S.A.—5. See twist a beef.—6. To convict (a person) to prison or death: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. Cf. sense 1.—7. To kill: U.S.A.: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Perhaps ex 1.

twist, at the, adj. and adv. (By) double-crossing:

1933, Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld; extant. Cf. twist, n., 5, and v., 4.

twist, the. See Oliver Twist, the.

twist a brief (or a kite). To change the original sum on a cheque to a larger one: counterfeiters': since the 1920's. In, e.g., Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. Independently, brief, 'a cheque'; in, e.g., George Ingram, 1933.

twist a dream. To roll a cigarette: tramps': since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Stiff, 1931. Perhaps suggested by S.E. pipe dream, but prob. ex doped cigarettes.

twist and twirl, 'a girl': adopted by the American underworld, prob. via Australian criminals, from Cockney rhyming s. The American Mercury, May 1928, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; 1944, M & B.

twist the book, v.i.; v.t., with on. To turn the tables (on someone): since ca. 1920. Edgar Wallace, passim; Partridge, 1937. Cf. twister, 3.

twist up a few. 'Smoking it [i.e., opium] is sometimes called smoking hop, hitting the pipe, laying on the hip, or twisting up a few,' Convict, 1934: drug addicts': since ca. 1925. In ref. to the opium-pellets.

twister. One who secretly lays information against his (or her) associates, esp. if it leads to their being twisted or hanged: 1828, P. Egan, Finish to Tom, Logic, and Jerry; † by 1900. Cf. twist, v., 1.—2. See super-twister. But also independently, as in Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1926.—3. 'The name that crooks give to a man who cannot be caught,' Edgar Wallace, The Twister, 1928; extant. He twists—swerves—out of the way, much like a clever Rugby 'half', 'five-eighth', or 'three'.—4. 'Doughnuts is a twister. That is, he is paralysed from the waist down and with the aid of one crutch he hoofs it by twisting his body from side to side and throwing himself forward,' A. E. Ullman, 'Beggarmen'—in Flynn's, April 14, 1928: U.S. beggars': C. 20.—5. A fit, esp. if simulated: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. 4, 6, 8.—6. 'A strong "vein shot" of morphine or heroin mixed with cocaine,' BVB, 1942: U.S.A.—7. See frame a twister.—8. A marijuana-smoker: U.S.A.: 1942, BVB.

twister, frame a. See frame . . .

twisting, n. 'When you go into any place where hats, coats, or umbrellas are left in the lobby, you can take a new "tog", or a new hat, by mistake for your own. That is "twisting", or ringing the changes': 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; extant.

twitch. A silk reticule: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx, 'I knapp'd a green twitch'; † by 1900. Because it is easy to twitch out of a lady's grasp?

twitcher. A drug addict: Sept. 23, 1933, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'Dugan noticed his ears. They were curiously bloodless, they looked as if they were made of wax; they were the unmistakable mark of a junkie, a twitcher'; extant. Ex an addict's twitching nerves while the craving is upon him.

twitching. 'Stealing . . . shawls from ladies' shoulders': 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull; app. † by 1890. Cf. clicking, q.v. twittoc. Two: 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, Dict., where it is misprinted twittoc—so too in Andrewes, 1809; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1903 (F & H). A disguising of the S.E. combining-prefix twi, 'twofold' (O.E. twi, two).

twittoc. See prec.

two-bits. A bill—i.e., a U.S. currency note—for twenty-five dollars: gangsters' and racketeers': ca. 1923–34, then ob. Ersine, 1933; Herbert Asbury, The Underworld of Chicago, 1941. 'Twenty-five dollars was scornfully called two bits'.

two by four. A prostitute: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on whore.

two-cent doss; two-cent dossier. The latter is a member of that low class of town tramps which is only just above the 'tomato-can vags'; he frequents the 'two-cent doss', a low restaurant where he pays two cents for some stale beer and then scrambles for a 'spot' (a lying-space) on the floor: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, p. 119 (both terms); app. † by 1920.

two-eyed steak, 'a red herring, a bloater': not c., but s.—orig. low s.

two-handed. 'They work two-handed (that is, in pairs)': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; by 1900, s.; by 1920, coll. I.e., with two pairs of hands.

two hundred weight. See weight, be worth the regular.

two poll one. See Vaux quot'n at bridge, v.

two pops and a galloper. See his means.

two red aces. A confidence trick played with cards: con men's: since ca. 1920. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937.

two-spot. A prison-sentence of two years: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft; extant. See spot, n.

two-way joint, 'a wheel of fortune, or other amusement device, that can be operated either honestly or dishonestly': rather fair and carnival s. than c. The Writer's Monthly, Feb. 1932.

twoer. A florin: mostly counterfeiters': Feb. 1890 (Surrey cases), Sessions Papers, 'I done'—uttered—the twoer, and will stand to that'; slightly ob. Ex 'two-shilling piece'.—2. A sentence of two years' imprisonment: Am. s. rather than c. Damon Runyon, Furthermore, 1938.

twopenn'orth of rope, have. See twopenny rope.

twopenny hangover. 'At the Twopenny Hangover, the Lodgers sit in a row on a bench; there is a rope in front of them, and they lean on this . . . A man, humorously called the valet, cuts the rope at five in the morning,' George Orwell, Down and Out in Paris and London, 1933: beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1910. Cf. :—

twopenny rope. A low doss-house where the lodgers, for twopence a night, sleep hanging over a length of rope stretched at a suitable height from the floor: since ca. 1840, the ref. at p. 407 of F. W. Carew's No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, 1893, being perhaps valid for the year 1845; 1874, Henry Mayhew, London Characters, enlarged ed.; 1874, H., 'Sleeping at these places is called having "twopenn'orth of rope"'; by 1887 (Baumann) it was low s. Cf. coucher à la corde (F. & H).

twore, in the Temple Classics edition of Dekker's Lanthorne and Candle-light (1608–9), at 'The Canters Dictionarie', is merely a misprint for toure = tour, q.v.; the error recurs in that enlarged ed. of 1620 which Dekker entitled Villanies Discovered.

twoy. A quarter-dollar; twenty-five cents: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (New York) Sunday

News, John Chapman; extant. Prob. a perverted contraction of 'twenty' (-five cents) '.

twurler. See twirler.

tyb or Tyb. See Tib of the butterfly.

Tyburn phrases. These abound in C. 17-18, but most of them (e.g., S. Rowlands's Tyburne-tiffany, 1613) are mere literary elaborations and fancies; the three phrases noted hereinunder may possibly be c., at least in origin. Tyburn was 'the place of execution for Middlesex to 1783: after which the death penalty was enforced at Newgate till the demolition of the prison in 1903' (F & H).

Tyburn blossom, 'a young thief or pick-pocket, who will in time ripen into fruit borne by the deadly evergreen' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), is almost certainly not c., but s.—perhaps journalistic.

Tyburn collar. See Newgate frill, ref. of 1860.

Tyburn tippet. A hangman's halter: 1630, John Taylor, A Thiefe, 'A Tiburne Tippet, or old Stories Cap'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.—Almost certainly not c., but s.

U written for v: see under v.

U(-)boat. A gangster disloyal to his gang chief: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; extant. U-boat warfare being 'not quite the thing'.

U.S. cove. 'A soldier; a man in the employ of the United States': 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; † by 1910.

U.S. plate. 'Fetters; handcuffs': 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1904, F & H; 1929-31, Kernôt; slightly ob. Ironie.

uckersay. A dupe: Jan. 8, 1930, Variety, Ruth Morris, 'A Carnival Grifter in Winter'; extant. I.e., sucker > s-ucker > ucker-s > uckers; then add ay and we have uckersay.—Cf. ugmay.

ugjay. A jail: Jan. 8, 1930, Variety, Ruth Morris, 'A Carnival Grifter in Winter'; extant. I.e., jug (n., 1) > ug-j > ugj-ay > ugjay.—Cf. ugmay. ugly man or uglyman. App. first recorded in Cassell's Encyclopaedic Dict., 1888 (as The O.E.D. shows), ugly man (always the ugly man) is 'in garrotting the actual perpetrator of the outrage: his operations are covered in front by the fore-stall (q.v.) and in the rear by the backstall (q.v.).' F & H, 1903; Leverage, 1925 (U.S.A.); by 1940, ob. in Britain. A variation of nasty man.

ugmay. A 'sucker'; a fool, or a stupid person': since ea. 1918: Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'These ugmays figure on insurance'. I.e., mug > ugm + the ay suffix used in the American underworld; cf., e.g., umpchay.

ukelele. Bullet-drum of Thompson sub-machine gun: 1929-31, Kernôt; extant. Resemblance. Think, too, of the tune it plays!

umpchay. A fool, a 'sucker', a dolt: Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant. I.e., chump > ump-ch > ump-ch-ay > umpchay; cf. ugmay, q.v.

un-blunted. See unblunted.

una soldi, 'one penny': parlyaree. Parlyaree's corruption of It. uno soldo.

unbetty. To open a lock by means of a 'betty' (see betty, n., 2): 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1910.

tye. See tie.

tyler. See Adam.

tylt. See tilt.

type is said in Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, VI, 221, to mean 'a dog': but this is obviously an error for s. tyke.

typer. A machine-gun: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Contracted ex:—

typewriter. A machine-gun: 1929-31, Kernôt; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'The swift ratatat of a typewriter'; Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; 1933, Ersine, 'A sub-machine gun'; 1934, Convict; 1935, Hargan; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; extant. Cf. chatter-box and talkie.

typewriter party. 'A killing in which a sub-machine gun is used,' Ersine, 1933: since late 1920's. See prec.

typist. A machine-gunner: 1935, Hargan; extant. Suggested by typewriter.

U

unblunted. Deprived of money; temporarily without money: 1823, Bee (un-blunted); app. † by 1890. See blunt.

unbreeched. 'Unrigg'd, or unbreeched, stript naked and lost all his money': 1797, Potter; † by 1890.

unbutton. 'To tear open. To unbutton a safe—to rip off the plates,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. Humorously euphemistic.

uncle, my or mine, whether 'the pawnbroker' or 'the necessary house' (both in Grose), is not c., but s. But c. is the derivative:—2. A receiver of stolen goods: U.S.A.: C. 20. Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924.—3. A Federal narcotic agent: since ea. 1920. BVB, 1942. Cf. whiskers.

uncles and aunts. Trousers: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928; Convict, 1934; M & B, 1944. Rhyming on pants.

under, n. (From the male 'angle') copulation: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'She's got a bloke . . . who pays the rent of the flat and floats in for a bit of under occasionally'; extant.

under, adv., esp. in get under or go under, 'to ride the rods', to travel by train, among the truss-roads instead of in carriage or van or 'on the deck': mostly tramps': C. 20. In, e.g., Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926.—2. Drug-exhilarated: since ca. 1920. BVB. I.e., under the influence of drugs.

under beneath(s). Teeth: C. 20 (mostly Pacific Coast). Chicago May, 1928 (u. beneaths). Rhyming.

under cover, adj. and adv. Safe from the police; out of gaol: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, (professional thief speaking) 'If a young fellow that was just startin' out in the business'—a career of theft—'came to me for advice, I'd tell him not to tie up with any woman till he'd made his pile, and never to tell her where his pile came from. I'm sure that that's what helped to keep me under cover so long'; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Cloud, p. 332, where it means 'in disguise' or 'living modestly and quietly'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Under Cover. Hiding' (i.e., in hiding); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'Protected by financial assets held in secret'—'This is a new one,' Godfrey Irwin, letter of Aug. 14, 1937; 1924, Geo. C.

Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Under cover. In hiding, secret, clandestine'; 1928, Chicago May; by 1927 or 1928, the term was as much police s. (witness, e.g., C. F. Coe, Swag, 1928) as c.—therefore no longer strictly c. at all. Not in the open: hence, not exposed to police interference or surveillance.

under-cover man. An employer's detective spying on the employees: Sept. 1, 1928, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'The Man who Couldn't Squeal'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. He doesn't obtrude himself.—2. An informer to the police; a policeman, a detective, on a special watching job: 1931, IA; by 1933, the second nuance had merged with under-cover operative.—3. A male homosexual, esp. if passive: 1942, BVB. Ex the general idea governing the particular senses 1 and 2.

under-cover operative, 'a detective; esp. a Federal': police j., not c. George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924.

under dubber (or dubsman). A turnkey; an assistant gaoler: 1811, Lex. Bal.; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—witness Matsell, 1859; † by 1903 (F & H). See dubsman.

under shell. A waistcoat: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Upper Shell and Under Shell'; a Coat and Waistcoat'; † by 1800 (B & L). See upper shell.

under the arm or under the crutch. Applied to one's 'business' when it goes badly; poor: beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1920. Hugh Milner, letter of April 22, 1935.

under the bunk! Shut up! (esp. at night): convicts': since ca. 1920. Rose, 1934. I.e., get under your bunk!

under the crutch. See under the arm.

under the rope. 'Marked for death, especially one under sentence to be hanged,' IA, 1931: since ca. 1910.

under the screw. See screw, under the.

under the table. See table . . .

under tug. An under petticoat: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1890. I.e., 'under tog'.

undercover . . . See under cover and under-cover . . .

underground hang-out. A graveyard: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 'Outcasts assured at least of a berth in the "underground hang-out"': ob. See hang-out, n.

underground kite. An illicit letter passed in prison: convicts': since ca. 1910. Convict 2nd, 1938. Cf. :—

underground railroad, the. The 'grapevine' or that system of communication which subsists in the underworld, esp. between convicts and the outer world: 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life, p. 133, 'A day or two ago I received a letter from a prisoner of education . . . His letter, of course, came to me by the "Underground Railroad"': 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story (U.S.A.); slightly ob. Cf. grapevine, q.v., and bush telegraph and :— underground tunnel, the. '[When I was in Sing Sing] I was particularly interested in the Underground Tunnel . . . This is the secret system by which contraband articles, such as whiskey, opium and morphine are brought into the prison. When a rogue is persuasive with the coin of the realm he can always find a keeper or two to bring him what he considers the necessities of life, among which are opium, whiskey and tobacco. If you have a screw—a keeper or gaoler—"right", you can be well supplied with these little things. To get him "right" it is often necessary to give him a share—about twenty per cent—of the money sent you from home. This system is worked in all the State prisons in New York,' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; extant. Prob. suggested by underground railroad, q.v.

underground wires is an American variation of underground railroad, q.v.: Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'; 'To help square the sucker and get a man clear of any charge of crime the "underground wires" must be used'; extant.

underneath. Applied to a woman shoplifter that carries loot under her nether garments and between her thighs: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, IA; extant. I.e., underneath her visible garments.—2. (Hiding) underneath a train: tramps': C. 20. IA, 1931. Hardly c.

underslung. 'To get Underslung means to ride under a train and have the shacks throw things at you, or to have them drag a piece of iron on a string under the car so that, bounding up and down, it will punish you plenty,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910.

undertaker. A life-sentence; any other very long sentence: mostly convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. Cf. bury.

underweight. A girl under twenty-one exported to the Argentine to become a prostitute there: white-slavers': C. 20. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928. Under-age: under-weight.

Underworld Groups of Criminals and Tramps. See Orders of Rogues.

undub. To open or unfasten; to unlock: 1744, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. IV (as undubb); 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1821, D. Haggart; current until ca. 1860, and in use in U.S.A. by 1794 (Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807). See dub, v.

unfinished business. 'A wounded rival, or a prospective gang victim, not yet killed': July 18, 1931, The Saturday Review of Literature, John Wilstach, 'A Wounded Rival'; Nov. 1931, IA, the definition I quote; 1934, Rose; extant. 'Probably a newspaper man's humor, but widely adopted by criminals' (Godfrey Irwin). Ex 'business unfinished' at a conference.

unfortunate and vicious. These are white-slavers' adjectives—hardly antedating the C. 20—for those two classes of women into which the white-slavers divide all the women they procure, esp. for the Argentine trade. The pimps 'work more particularly among women who, for whatever reason, are in distress'—the unfortunate, in short. 'The veritable girl of the streets is too "vicious"; she will not let herself be cajoled,' A. Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928.

unfortunate, be. 'I was recognised by a man from York, who said he enlisted for a soldier, about ten years since, and went to India; where he was "unfortunate", that is committed a crime for which he was transported': 1843, James Backhouse, A Visit to the Australian Colonies; † by 1940. For the semantics, cf. suffer and in trouble (at trouble, in).

ungracious. See Awdeley's, No. 23. Very improbably c.; prob. merely Awdeley's designation; whatever its status, it was, we may say with virtual certainty, † by 1700 if not before 1660.

unharness. To remove a jewel from its setting:

1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; Aug. 5, 1933, Flynn's, Thomas Topham; extant. Ex harness, n., 4.

unicorn, 'a coach drawn by three horses' (Grose, 1785), is not c., but s.—2. In the U.S.A., 'Two men and one woman, or two women and one man banded together to steal': 1859, Matsell; by 1890 (B & L) it seems to have > English; 1903, F & H (who say nothing about its being an Americanism); rather ob. 'From unicorn, two horses abreast, with a leader' (B & L).

universal staircase, the. The treadmill: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1903, F & H; app. † by 1915. Prob. a conscious variation of everlasting staircase.

University, the. Any large London prison: 1770, R. King, The Frauds of London detected, where the term is glossed as 'a cant expression for the King's Bench, Fleet Prison, &c.'—repeated verbatim by George Barrington in 1802; † by 1880. Suggested by college, 2.

unkpay. An amateur, a newcomer, a tyro, a sucker: Oct. 9, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, 'Don't be an unkpay'; extant. Punk > unkp; add the usual c. back-s. suffix -ay, and you get unkpay.

unload. 'Well, we had better unload. . . . Well, we had better alight,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904 (p. 262); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To alight from a train'; by 1936 (Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough) it was police s. I.e., to unload oneself.—2. 'To give information; to squeal; to betray,' Leverage, 1925; May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman, who defines it as 'to talk'; extant. Cf. spill one's guts.—3. To get rid of (something dangerous, supposedly dangerous, or valueless): on the borderline of c. and coll. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

unload pewter. To drink beer from pewter pots: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; possibly c., orig.; but prob. low and/or public-house s.

unmugged. Unphotographed by the police: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft (see mugged); ibid., (an ex-thief speaking) 'An unmugged thief—you know what I mean, the gun that ain't known to be a gun—can save money'; also Canadian (anon. letter, June 19, 1946); extant. Ex mug, v., 4.

unpalled. 'A thief whose associates are all apprehended, or taken from him by other means, is said to be unpalled, and he is then obliged to Work single-handed': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1904 (F & H). See pal, n., and cf. pal in, 3.

unrig. To strip (a person) of clothes, esp. as in: B.E., 1698, 'Unrig the Drab, c. to pull all the Whore's Cloths off'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'I'll unrig the blossom, I'll strip the wench'; 1797, Potter, 'Unrigg'd or unbreeched, stript naked and lost all his money'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1887, Baumann; by 1890 (B & L), low s. Suggested, prob., by rigging, q.v. for semantics.

unslough is the American form of unslour: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Unslough. To open; to unbutton'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, 'Izzy taught the Kid . . . how to "unslough" a vest to get at a watch'; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. The reverse of slough, v., 2.

unslour. 'To unlock, unfasten, or unbutton.

See Slour. Speaking of a person whose coat is buttoned, so as to obstruct the access to his pockets, the knucks will say to each other, the cove is slour'd up, we must unslour him to get at his kickseys: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1831, W. T. Moncrieff, Van Diemen's Land; 1848 (see unslough); † by 1904 (F & H). Opp. to slour.

unfray. See illchay . . .

unthimble. 'To unthimble a man, is to rob, or otherwise deprive him of his watch': 1812, J. H. Vaux; ibid., 'Unthimbled, having been divested of his watch'; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1904 (F & H). Ex thimble.

unthrift. See Awdeley's, No. 22; for status and period, see the remarks at ungracious. For the sense, cf. dyng thrift.

untouchable. A person insusceptible of bribery: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. Hindu and third rail.

untruss. 'To let down the shutters of a store': 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. By a pun.

up, adj. See up to (one's) gossip and gossip, up to.

up a tree. See tree, up a.

up against it. Addicted to drugs: addicts': C. 20. BVB. A generalization of:—

up against the stem. Engaged in, a victim to the habit of, smoking opium: from late C. 19: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 'I had been smoking only six months. Eddie Martin had been "up against the stem" for three years, so he suffered infinitely more than I'; extant. See stem, n., 3.

up and up. See on the up and up. By itself, the phrase = prospering; successful (Godfrey Irwin, 1931).—2. Loyal, esp. to the underworld: 1933, Ersine; extant.—3. Be on the up-and-up, to be abstaining from drugs, or taking a drug-cure: addicts': since ca. 1910. BVB, 1942. Ex 2.

up for, be. To be tried for (an offence): since ca. 1860: c. until ca. 1880, then s.; by 1900, coll. Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, 1877, 'Inquiries as to who I was and what I was "up" for'. I.e., up before a magistrate.

up hills. See uphills.

up in a balloon. See balloon, up in a.

up in the stirrups. See stirrups, up in the.

up the escape. See escape.

up the river. See river, up the.

up the road. See road, up the.

up the spout, in pawn, is (low) s., not c.—2. Hence, imprisoned; certain to be imprisoned: U.S.A.: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1890 (B & L), English; ob.

up the steps. See steps.

up the top. See top, up the.

up to (one's) gossip. See gossip, up to. Moreover, up to, 'equal to', 'alert to the tricks or the illicit or criminal intentions of', may itself have, orig., been c.; see, e.g., the 1789 quot'n at tick, and Potter, 1797, 'Upp, being acquainted with what is going forward'; 1809, Andrewes, ' . . . Apprised of any transaction'; 1823, Bee. Still earlier is the reference in Sessions Papers, 2nd Sir James Esdaile session, Dec. 1777, 'Be you up to that old one? I said, yes, and a good deal more.'

up to slum. See slum, up to.

up to snuff. See snuff, up to.

up-tucker. See uptucker.

up with, quits with: be up with, be equal to (a person): ca. 1770–1850. Either c. or low s. 'He would contrive to be up with the Captain' occurs in uphills. False dice that run upon the high numbers: (written) 1662, The Cheats, by John Wilson (see quot'n at down hills); 1698, B.E., 'Uphills, c. high Dice'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; † by 1904 (F & H). Cf. high men.

George Parker, A View of Society, 1781. Lit., on a level with.

upholstered. Infected with a venereal disease: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ironie.

upon the cross—square—suit. See cross, n.; square, n.; suit.

upon the do. See do, n., 3 and 4.

upp. See up to one's gossip.

upper ben (or Ben). A greatcoat: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; † by 1904 (F & H). Ex:—

upper benjamin, 'a greatcoat', may never have had a status worse than that of low s.; but both George Parker, A View of Society, 1781, and Grose (even in Pierce Egan's ed., 1823), classify it as c.: it is therefore permissible to consider it as such in the approx. period 1770–1825. Lit., a 'benjamin' (q.v.) on the outside.

upper deck. 'Top of a passenger train,' Rose, 1934: C. 20; extant. Cf. lower deck, q.v.—2. The neck: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

upper shell. A coat: 1753, John Poulter (see under shell); † by 1890 (B & L). Shell: that with which some creature is encased; cf. under shell.

upper-ten push, the. See push, n., 4.

upper tog; upper tuig; upper togger. A greatcoat: 1812, J. H. Vaux (the first); 1821, D. Haggart (the second); 1823, Egan's Grose (the third); 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV (the third); 1828, P. Egan, Finish (the first); † by 1900. Contrast under tug.

upper togger. A greatcoat and hat: 1823, Benj. Webster, The Golden Farmer; † by 1910. Cf. prec. term.

uppers. See on the uppers.

uppers and beneath. Teeth: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming: cf. under beneath.

uppy. "'Main drag uppy.'" Good meals to be got battering in the best parts of the city,' Terence McGovern, It Paid to be Tough, 1939: Canadian tramps': C. 20. Where things are on the up and up.

upright, n. 'A quart or pint pot' (Potter): 1781 and 1785 (see upright sneak): 1797, Potter, who is the first to give a definition of upright by itself; 1809, Andrewes, 'Ale-house measures'; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. Thus it stands.

upright, adj. 'Highest,' says Randle Holme, 1688. But was it ever used apart from upright cofe and upright man?

upright, go on the. To practise the 'lay' of the 'upright sneak' (q.v.): 1809, Andrewes: but prob. current from ca. 1790.

upright cofe (or cove), recorded by Harman, in 1566, is indubitably c.; and upright man is either a c. variant or, at first, a translation thereof. Upright man, however, would seem to have > gen. in c. speech; and the other to have died out.

upright man. 'An upright man,' says Awdeley in 1562, 'is one that goeth wyth the trunchion of a staffe, which staffe they cal a Filtechman. This man is of so much authority, that meeting with any of his profession, he may cal them to accompt, and commaund a share or snap unto him selfe, of al that they have gained by their trade in one moneth. And if he doo them wrong, they have no remedy agaynst hym, no though he beate them, as he useth commonly to do. He may also commaund any of their women, which they cal Doxies, to serve his turne. He hath ye chiefe place at any market walke, and other assembles, and is not of any to be controled': in short, he has and exerceises the rights of a feudal lord. In 1566, Harman confirms these points and adds that it is 'the upright man' who admits members of his 'tribe' to full membership—see stall to the rogue: Dekker, in The Belman of London, 1608, amplifies but does not improve on Awdeley's account, except that he notes that the 'upright men' usually 'cary the shapes of soldiers, and can talke of the Low Countries, though they never were beyond Dover'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, sets him next below the 'ruffler'; 1688, Holme makes him equivalent to the 'ruffler'; 1698, B.E., 'Upright-men, c. the second Rank of the Canting Tribe'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (the 1st Rank); 1785, Grose, by whose day the term was almost certainly †. Ex his upright gait as he walks.

upright sneak is one who goes on 'the sneak' (q.v.) at no particular time but who steals 'pint and quart pots from out of those people's baskets who have had them to scour, as also from off shelves, stair-cases, &c.': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1785, Grose, 'Upright sneak, one who steals pewter pots from the alehouse boys, employed to collect them'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; app. † by 1900. The pots stand upright.

uprightman is a very rare (written) form of upright man: 1725, A New Canting Dict., Song XVI.

uprights. 'Liquor measures': 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1920. Ex upright sneak.

upstairs. The inside breast-pocket: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. insider.

uptucker or up-tucker. A hangman: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. xxiii ('The Thieves' Alphabet'), 'U was an Up-tucker, fly with the cord; | V was a Varnisher, dressed like a lord'; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1910. For the semantics, cf. tuck, tuck-'em fair, and tuck-up fair.

urger. A (confidence) trickster's confederate: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1942. Perhaps ex Australian racing-s. urger, 'a racecourse tipster'.

use at a place. To frequent it: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'They used to use at (frequent) a pub in Shoreditch'; 1890, B & L (use at); ob. Ex synonymous dial. use about, use round, a place, building, etc.

user; using. A drug addict; drug-addicted: addicts': C. 20. BVB. Euphemistic: cf. dealer and goods.

usher ! Yes !: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'When I got to Shoreditch I met one of the mob, who said, "Hallo, been out today? Did you touch?" So I said, "Usher" (yes)'; 1890, B & L; † by 1930.

'From the Yiddish user, it is right, it is so,' B & L. Probably; yet I enter a modest plea for 'Possibly suggested by yessir!' (Partridge, 1937).

using. See user.

usual speech not required. A c. catch-phrase, signifying 'No bill': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); app. † by 1920. The reference is to the verdicts, 'Guilty' or 'Not guilty'.

uxter, in A. Morrison's A Child of the Jago, 1896, p. 142, seems to be hoxter, used to mean 'pocket-book' or 'purse'.

V

v written u: for these words, see under v.

V. Five dollars; esp. a five-dollar bill: 1837 (D.A.E.); 1877, Bartlett, Americanisms, 4th ed.; 1910, Hutchins Hapgood, Types from City Streets, 'Dad! Here's a V for you!'; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; et al. Much more prob. s. (see D.A.E.) than c. Ex reading the Roman numeral V (5) as a capital V.—2. Hence (cf. finif, 2, and sawbuck), a sentence to five years' imprisonment: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; Ersine, 1933.—3. A bank vault: bank robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1933, Ersine; Feb. 17, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

'V', hou jou. See kop-hou . . .

V.S. See vein shot.

vaaljapie. Wine: South Africa: since ca. 1880. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Afrikaans (and other) speakers; etymologically, the word combines Afrikaans vaal, 'grey; turbid, muddy' + Japie (diminutive of Jakob), which 'usually denotes strong young wine' (D. R. D'Ewes).

vacation. Esp. in be on (a) vacation, to be serving a term of imprisonment: tramps': since ca. 1920. The Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932. Cf. the irony of holiday.

vag, n. A vagrant: 1859, Matsell; possibly c. in U.S.A., but not in England; by 1891 (Maitland), American s.—2. Vagrancy: see vag, done on the.

vag, v. To run (a person) in as a vagabond or vagrant: 1891, James Maitland, The American Slang Dict., where it is classified as police s.; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Vagged'. Committed to prison as a vagrant'; 1915, G. Brouson-Howard, God's Man, where it is clearly police s. Perhaps never c.—but always police s. Ex the n.—2. Hence, 'to arrest for investigation': 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant.—3. Among tramps, vag 'em = (of the police) to run (a tramp) out of town: 1931, Stiff; extant.

vag, done on the. 'Committed for vagrancy': 1859, Matsell; by 1910, police j. Cf. vag, n.

Valentine. A one-year term in prison: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. To the hardened crook, as pleasant as a Valentine.—2. A good safe-cracker: 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex O. Henry's character, Jimmy Valentine, who appeared in a story that became a play. At least one of his feats is 'the bunk'.

Valentino. 'A handsome young man maintained by an older woman', Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1920; ob. Ex Rudolph Valentino († ca. 1929), the 'screen idol' of adoring females. He was handsome, tall, dark—in short, 'romantic'.

valet. See twopenny hangover.

vamos, vamoose, vamoosh, vamous. To go; make off: 1859, H: it may have been c. during the approximate period 1855–75; but prob. it was, orig., low s. >, by 1870, gen. s. Earlier (—1848) in U.S.A.; Matsell (vamose), in 1859, classified it c., as also did the anonymous author of State Prison Life (U.S.A.), 1871. Ex Sp. vamos, 'let us go'. Cf. nammous, q.v.

vamp, n., 'a sock', is S.E. (latterly dial.), not c.—2. Mostly in for a vamp, convicted of thieving: 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H, 'A robbery'; † by 1940. Is this a pun on ramp, n. ?—or a corruption thereof?

vamp, v. To pawn: 1698, B.E., 'I'll Vamp and tip you the Cole, c. I'll Pawn my Cloths, but I'll raise the Money for you'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was low s. Perhaps by a pun on S.E. vamp, 'to renovate or restore'.

vamp, in for a. See vamp, n., 2.

vamper; usually pl. 'Vampers, c. Stockings', B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; † by 1904 (F & H). Perhaps a corruption of † S.E. vampeys, 'short stockings'.—2. 'A fellow who frequents public-houses, where he picks a quarrel with any person who has got a ring or a watch about him, his object being to lead the person into a pugilistic encounter, so as to afford the vamper's confederate, or pal, the opportunity of robbing him': 1836, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1890, B & L (loosely, 'a thief'); † by 1918. I.e., one who 'translates' others' property into his own property: cf. vamper, a patcher of boots and shoes.

vampire. 'A man who lives by extorting money from men and women whom they [sic] have seen coming out of or going into houses of assignation': 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; ob. I.e., a fig. blood-sucker.

van or Van; Van Harlot. See Madam Van.

van-dragger. A crook that specializes in stealing from vans: 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1935, David Hume, Call In the Yard, 'A career as a "van-dragger"—raiding goods from merchants' vans'; extant. See drag, n. and v., and dragger.

van-dragging. 'Larceny from vehicles,' Brown, 1931; 1943, Black, 'Stealing parcels from vans'; extant. Cf. prec.

vardo, n.; vardy. 'Vardo, a waggon': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee, who, in his Addenda, prematurely rejoiced in the word's disappearance,—he seems to have been annoyed at his failure to trace the etymology; 1859, H, who imputes obsolescence; 1864, 3rd ed. of H, who now asserts it. Ex Romany, 'wardo being in some form or other found in all gypsy dialects', B & L; vardo is a common Romany form, the Welsh Gypsy shape being verdo.

vardo, v. 'To look; "Vardo the cassey", look at the house': 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, 'vardo ... sehen, anblicken'; 1890, B & L, 'Vardo! or varder! look, see'; 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo, 'Since I last vardied yer'. Since ca. 1890, rather parlyaree than c.; and in C. 20, common among cheapjacks, fortune-tellers, and other fair-folk, as in Philip Allingham, Cheappjack, 1934. Prob. the word derives ex Romany vater (pron. and often written varter), 'to watch'—ultimately cognate with ward and guard.

var-do(-)gill. A waggoner: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890. See var-do, n., and gill: lit., the term = waggon fellow.

vardy. See var-do, n. and v.

varment, 'vermin', is an illiteracy; not c., as stated in Egan's Grose, 1823.

varnisher. (In B & L, misprinted varnister.) An utterer of false gold coins, esp. sovereigns: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds (see quot'n at uptucker); 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; ob. He applies a finishing touch that might be compared—and to his disadvantage is likely to be compared—with an effect of varnish.

vaulting school. A bawdy-house or brothel: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who implies that it is s., which it may well have > by 1760 or thereabouts; † by 1870. Ex the S.E. sense, 'an Academy where Vaulting, and other manly Exercises are Taught' (B.E.).

vein shooter; vein shot. The latter (Godfrey Irwin, private letter of Nov. 10, 1937) is the injection described in 'More skilful ones were "vein shooters" who took it [their drug] through the veins at the bend of the elbow, this giving an immediate and even greater thrill', Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor, 1934: both terms have been current since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933 (vein shot); BVB, 1942. The latter has, since ca. 1930, had an alternative: V.S. Cf. main line.

velvet. A tongue: 1698, B.E., who records the phrase tip the velvet, much commoner than velvet by itself; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was low s. Ex its smoothness.—2. A nice girl: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. As for sense 3: pleasant, as velvet is, to touch.—3. Money: U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. Richard Sale in Flynn's, Feb. 11, 1939; Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep, (English ed.) 1939, 'An adventurer who happened to get himself wrapped up in some velvet'.

velvet, on. See on velvet.

velvet, tip the. See tip the velvet.

venite! Come!: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. The L. imperative: prob. a reminiscence of pre-underworld days, but derisive or jocular—not nostalgic.

verge. A gold watch: 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L, who seem to imply that by that date it was also English; 1904, F & H (id.); † by 1930. Ex verge, a watch-making term for the spindle in a type of watch that has hardly been made since C. 19.

verification shot, a drug-addicts' term (BVB, 1942), is decidedly j.—not c.

verse, v. Apparently first recorded in 1552 in Gilbert Walker's Dice-play ('Though he have learned to verse, . . . yet if he, etc'), the term means: to practise fraud; to impose. Greene, 1591, uses it as v.t., to defraud, impose on. Both these senses were † by 1700. As v. absolute, however, it = to practise 'versing law' (q.v.): ca. 1590–1630.

verse upon. To impose on, trick, swindle: 1592, R. Greene, A Disputation, 'But if hee'—the prospective victim—'come into a house then let our trade alone to verse upon him'; ibid., 'And thus was he Conny-catcht himselfe, that thought to have verst upon another'; † by 1660. Cf. prec.

verser. Implied by Gilbert Walker in 1552; in 1591, Greene, in A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, having defined him as that member of a confidence gang of, e.g., card-sharpers (cony-catching law; Barnard's law) who is 'the landed man'—the apparent man of property, expatiates thus on his procedure:—Coming into the swindle in the manner described at the end of the long quotation cited at setter, the verser greets the intended victim thus: 'What good man Barton, how fare al our friends about you? . . . You are welcome to town. The poor countryman hearing himself named by a man he knows not, marvels, & answers that he knowes him not, and craves pardon. Not me goodman Barton . . . why I am such a mans kinsman, your neighbor not far off . . . Good Lord that I should be out of your remembrance, I have beene at your house divers times. Indee, sir, saith the farmer, are you such a mans kinsman, surely sir if you had not chalenged acquaintance of me, I should never have knowen you, I have clean forgot you, but I know the good gentleman your cosin well, he is my very good neighbor: and for his sake saith ye verser, we'l drink afore we part, haply the man thanks him, and to the wine or ale they goe, then ere they part, they make a cony, & so feret-claw him at cards, yt'—i.e., that—'they leave him as bare of mony, as an ape of a taile'. In Versing Law, q.v., the verser is 'he that bringeth [the prospective victim] in': 1591, Greene; 1592, 'Cuthbert Cunny-catcher', The Defence of Conny-catching, addressing Robert Greene, 'You set downe how there bee requisite Setters and Versers in Conny-catching, and be there not so I pray you in Usury?'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; † by 1640.

versing may be a n. in the next entry and obviously it corresponds to verse, v.—2. In the quot'n made at hackster, from 'Cuthbert Cunny-catcher', The Defence of Conny-catching, 1592, the sense is vaguer: trickery or braggart imposition.

versing law. 'Cosenage by false gold', i.e. the passing of counterfeit coin on to the innocent: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, where the stage is set thus: 'He that bringeth him [the dupe] in, the Verser. The poore Countrie man, the Coosin. And the drunkard that comes in, the Suffier.'

vert. A pervert (male): C. 20; by 1930, s. BVB. (The variant queervert is cultured s.)

vertical care-grinder. (In B & L, v. case-grinder: prob. incorrect.) A treadmill: 1859, H; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; † by 1920. As it moves, it produces (by grinding) a feeling, a mood, of care or anxiety.

very best. The chest: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

vest. A bullet-proof waistcoat: since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933. Short for bullet-proof vest.

vestat, 'a vest (not a singlet) or waistcoat for men', is prob. not c., but low s.: ca. 1864, The Chickaleary Cove, 'And the vestat with the bins so rorty' (pockets so smart).

white. See white, n., 4.

Vic., 'the Victoria theatre', was much used by the underworld—but so it was by thousands of other Londoners.—2. See remove Vic.

vic, 'convict' is rather, I think, gen. prison s. than c.: C. 20; e.g., Feb. 14, 1925, Flynn's (p. 705).

vicious. See unfortunate.

vid loge. A repeating watch: Jan. 1741, trial of Mary Young, in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, 1742; † by 1860. See loge. Is vid the Fr. vide, 'hollow'?

vil. See:—

vile or ville. A town. Earliest recorded in combination: Rome vyle (Romeville, Rumville, etc.), London: Harman, 1566. In Randle Holme's The Academy of Armory, 1688, it is printed avile—a genuine error, not a mere misprint; in Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., we have the glossary entry, 'Vil, a Town'; 1753, John Poulter (vile); 1821, D. Haggart, who spells it voil (see coor); so does the compiler of Sinks of London, 1848; 1859, H (vile and ville); 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'Pronounced phial or vial'; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1893, No. 747; by 1904 (F & H) it was ob.; by 1920, †. Fr. ville, a city.

village, lads of the. See lads.

village bustler. 'A bustling fellow that has such a propensity to thieving, that whatever place he is in he will not go to bed till he has robbed somebody, from the dish-clout, in the sink-hole, to the diamond ring off the lady's toilet': 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1797, Potter (village butler, a misprint or an error); by 1890 (B & L) it was †. Village implies that he is a petty thief.

village butler. See village bustler at 1797.

ville. See vile.

Ville, the. Pentonville Prison: 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of Broad Arrow (p. 35); 1903, No. 7, Twenty-Five Years in Seventeen Prisons; 1910, F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol; 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1927, Wallace Blake, Quod; 1931, Brown; 1931, Terence Horsley, The Odyssey of an Out-of-Work; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1937, Charles Prior; May 7, 1938, The Evening News; by 1940, polices and lows.

Vincent. 'In Vincents law He that is coosened, the Vincent,' Robert Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, 1592; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; prob. † by 1690. See:—

Vincent's law is 'coosenage at Bowls', as R. Greene, in The Second Conny-catching, 1592, informs us; ibid., the terms are listed thus: 'They which play bootie, the Bankars. He that betteth, the Gripe. He that is coosened, the Vincent. Gaines gotten, Termage'; ibid., 'The Vincents Law is a common deceit or cosenage used in Bowling-allies, amongst the baser sort of people Now the manner and forme of their devise is thus effected: the Bawkers, for so the common hanterers of the Ally are tearmed, aparelled like very honest and substantiall citizens come to bowle, as though rather they did it for sport then gaines . . . : wcl to bowls they go, and then there resort of all sortes of people to beholde them, some simple men'—? rather 'man'—'brought in of purpose by som cosening companions, to be stript of his crownes, others, Gentlemen, or Merchants, that delighted with the sport, stand there as beholders to passe away the time: amongst these are certaine old sokers, which are lookers on, and listen for bets, either even or od, and these are called Gripes: and these fellowes will refuse no lay, if the ods may grow to their advantage, for the gripes and the bawkers are confederate, and their fortune at play ever sorts according as the gripes have placed their bets, for the Bawker, he marketh how the laies goes, and so throes his casting, and so that note this, the bowlers cast ever booty, and doth win or loose as the bet of the gripe leadeth them'. Well, the Vincent ('the simple man that stands by') begins to take an interest in the game; is offered the opportunity of what looks to be a pretty safe bet; is led still further up the garden path and thus induced to lay more bets—all of which he is caused to lose. 'Besides, if anie honest man that holdes themselves skilfull in bowling, offer to play any set match against these common Bawkers, if they feare to have the worse or suspect the others play to bee better then theirs, then they have a tricke in watering of the alley, to give such a moisture to the banke, that hee that offers to strike a bowle with a shore, shal never hit it whilst hee lives, because the moisture of the banke hinders the proportion of his aiming.' In Dekker's The Belman of London, 1608, this account is shamelessly plagiarized. Although Grose speaks of it in 1785, the term was prob. † by 1690 if not earlier. Perhaps an ironic pun on L. vincens, 'conquering'; see law.

vinegar, n. A cloak: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'A [woman's] cloak or gown'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1904 (F & H). Why?—2. 'The Fellow that makes a Ring, and keeps Order among Wrestlers, Cudgel-Players, &c.,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, '... striking at random with his whip to prevent the populace from crouding in'; Grose, however, implies that this is s., not c., and he is prob. right. Ex the sourness of his aspect and action.—3. See beans.

vinegar, v. 'To screen any person by telling a false story': 1809, Andrewes; † by 1900. Ex vinegar, n., 1: cf. the S.E. 'cloak, one's designs'.

vinegar boy. A passer of worthless checks (cheques); forger: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. They leave a nasty taste in the victim's mouth; the passer is a sharp fellow.

viol is an error in B & L (at adown) for vile.

violin case. A machine-gun case: from ca. 1925. Howard N. Rose, 1934; June 22, 1935, Flynn's, Richard B. Sale; extant. Cf. ukelele.

vipe. To smoke marijuana: since ca. 1935. BVB. A back-formation ex sense 2 of:—

viper. An informer to the police: 1925, Leverage; extant. Contemptuous: 'a snake in the grass'.—2. A marijuana-smoker: drug addicts: since ca. 1930. Meyer Berger, 'Tea for a Viper'—in The New Yorker of March 12, 1938; BVB, 1942. Marijuana renders a man as dangerous as a viper.

viper's weed. Marijuana: since the late 1920's. BVB. See viper, 2, and weed, n., 4.

virgin pullet. See pullet.

virtue after. A prostitute: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. Virtue a secondary consideration: 'You can have the credit, and I'll take the cash'.

virtue rewarded. See Queen's bus.

visitor. A swindler that, being a sort of confidence trickster, goes into the country, makes himself out to be a scholar, worms himself into the good graces of a county family, gets himself appointed as escort to a son of the house, and escapes with the money entrusted to the youth: ca. 1590–1620. Anon., The Groundwork of Conny-catching, 1592.

vix ! in Hutchins Hapgood's The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904, on p. 292, is a misprint for nix !

vodeodo. Money : 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'Plenty of the old vodeodo'; extant. A perverted, or an elaborated, back-slanging of synonymous dough.

vogel, n. and v. A thief; to steal : 1925, Leverage; extant. Imm. ex :—

vogel-grafter : grafting. 'He had been settled'—sentenced to penal servitude—for "vogel-grafting", that is, taking little girls into hall-ways and robbing them of their gold ear-rings,' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; 1929-31, Kernôt, 'Vogel Grafter : One who robs children'; extant. Cf. Ger. Vogel, 'a fowl, a bird'; see grafting.

voice. Of a kidnapping gang, 'the Voice establishes communication with friends or relatives, naming the ransom and arranging for its payment,' Tracy French, 'The Police Have Failed'—Flynn's, Dec. 29, 1934; extant. The other kidnapper principals, are, in the order of their operations, the peddler, the finger, the spotter (or snap); behind them all, the big shot.—2. Among forgers and passers of counterfeit notes and worthless cheques, the voice is an actual partner acting as a supposedly honest referee, to whom application for identification or verification can be made : since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941.

voil is a variant of vile : 1821, D. Haggart; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann; † by 1910.

W.J. A Burns Detective Agency employee, esp. if a detective : C. 20. Maurer, 1941. Ex Wm J. Burns, a famous American police-force detective, who, on retiring, set up an agency of his own.

Wabash Cannon Ball, the. See Cannon Ball, Stiff quot'n (1931).

wack. See whack, n. and v. E.g., in G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. xxiii, "This evenin' I'll bring you a jolly wack of the bingo", said Flairer'.

wad, 'a roll of bank-notes', is 'a slang term', originating in U.S.A. : 1903, Clapin, Americanisms.—2. A deaf person : 1925, Leverage; extant.

waddy. To beat (a person) with a club, a blackjack : 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex Australian Aboriginal waddy, 'a club'.

wadge. See wedge, n., 3.

waffle; hence waffler. A piece of bread; hence a tramp : 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the lit. S.E. sense of waffle.

waffle iron. The electric chair : 1933, Eagle; extant. Cf. fry.

wage. See wedge, n., 1.

wagering kiddy. "Wagering kiddies", or gamblers of the lower sort,' The London Guide, 1818, at p. 8 (ibid., 49-53, a full account of their activities); † by 1890. See kiddy, n., 1.

waggon-hunter. A bawd or a procuress that meets the waggons coming to London from the country, makes acquaintance with any raw country girl arriving in Town, and, on the pretence of finding her a post, inveigles her into a brothel or a house of accommodation : 1770, Richard King, The Frauds of London detected—plagiarized by the slick voker. To speak : tramps' : 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 218, "Can you 'voker romeny'" (can you speak cant)'; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1900. Either a perversion or, as B & L think (prob. rightly), a mishearing of roker (q.v. at rocker).

voucher. An utterer of counterfeit coin : 1666, Anon., Leathermore's Advice (or The Nicker Nicked)—see quot'n at foiler; 1698, B.E., 'Vouchers, c. that put off False Money for Sham-coyners'; 1707, J. Shirley, 'The first was a Coiner that stamp't in a Mold, The second a Voucher to put off his Gold'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1760 or thereabouts. Abbr. avoucher.

vowel, 'one who has much to say' (Leverage, 1925) : s., not c.

voyage of discovery. A going out to steal : 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; † by 1910. Poetic.

vroe or vrow. See froe and frow.

vrow(-)case. A brothel : 1904, F & H, who imply that it is †. But on what authority do they give it at all? They appear to deduce it from B.E.'s case-fro : if genuine, the term was current ca. 1680-1850. See froe and case, n., 3; cf. case vrow.

Vulcan's welting-ken, 'a blacksmith's forge' (J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, 1821), may have been genuine c., but to me it looks like a piece of literary, i.e. artificial (not spoken) c. See ken; welting ex the blows struck by the blacksmith.

vyle. See vile.

W

George Barrington in 1802; app. † by 1860. Perhaps a punning perversion of waggon-haunter.

waggonlay is the trick described in the next term : 1708, implied in waggon layer; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'To steal out of Waggons upon the Road'; 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1860. See lay, n., 2.

waggon layer. 'Waggon Layers. Such as wait just out of Town for Waggons coming in or going out of Town in a dark Morning, to take Boxes or any Portable Bundles, out of them,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; † by 1850. Ex lie in wait.

wagon. A revolver : 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Short for smoke wagon.—2. A cigarette : S. Africa : C. 20. J. B. Fisher, letter, May 22, 1946; C. P. Wittstock, letter, May 23, 1946, 'Work me a wagon . . . Give me a cigarette'. Perhaps cf. the origin of sense 1.

wagon bouncer; wagon bouncing. 'He began as a "wagon bouncer". The trick is to hitch on the end of a package-laden truck and bounce up and down on the tail of it till some of the packages are bounced off into the street unknown to the driver,' Charles Somerville in Flynn's, Sept. 12, 1931, Somerville implying that the term had been current throughout the century; 1935, Hargan, 'Wagon bouncing—Stealing packages from the rear end of a truck'; extant. Cf. van-dragger, -dragging.

wagon stiff. 'A worker who travels from job to job or from harvest to harvest in a wagon or automobile,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931 : tramps' (since ca. 1912). Cf. Ford family.

wagon tramps. 'Families who travel in covered wagons or schooners,' Stiff, 1931 : tramps' : C. 20. Cf. prec.

wagon wheel. A silver dollar: 1935, Hargan; extant. 'In old slang, cart wheel' (Godfrey Irwin).

wah-ka. See daar is water!

wahoo. A tramp, a hobo; a farmer, a countryman: 1925, Leverage; extant. A variant of yahoo.

waif. A hobo, a tramp, that sleeps in jail: 1925, Leverage; extant—but not gen.

wail. A betrayal; a giving of information to the police: 1925, Leverage; extant. Suggested by squeal.

waist; waist-anchor; waisty. A girl, a woman; one's best girl, one's wife; a slender girl: 1925, Leverage: all these are s., not c.

wake. A billycock (hat): 1889 (see head-guard); † by 1930. Short for 'wide-awake hat'.

wake, on the. See on the wake.

waler. A particularly idle tramp: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Perhaps ex Murrumbidgee whaler, Australian s. for the same type of vagrant.

walk, n. An easy 'job'—i.e., burglary, hold-up, etc.: 1925, Leverage; 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra, 'That town'll be dead as a door-nail around three in the morning. It's a walk'; extant. As easy as taking a walk.

walk, v. To be a prostitute on the streets, for the benefit of a pimp: 'white-slavers': C. 20. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, of criminals (or near-criminals) in the making: 'They drop into regular work and take up with a "kid" who "walks" for them'. Abbr. of S.E. walk the streets.—2. Erroneous for work, v., 3: 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police, p. 95.—3. See walk it.

walk, go for a. To be sent to solitary confinement: convicts': since ca. 1920. George Ingram, Stir, 1933. Euphemistic.

walk, on the. (Of narcotics smoked or injected) anywhere except in a drug-addicts' parlour or club; e.g., at home: addicts': March 12, 1938, The New Yorker, Meyer Berger; extant. So far as the club is concerned, it may be done during a stroll.

walk it; or merely walk. To run away, make off, escape, esp. from the scene of a crime: 1849, Sessions Papers (April 16, trial of Mary Kinsdale and Albert Prior), 'He said, "You ought to have walked"—she said, "How could I? when I was knocked down"'; ob.

walk-off. A variant of walk, n.: 1925, Leverage; extant.—2. An escape: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. walk it.

walk the barber. To lead a girl astray: 1859, H; † by 1920. Anatomical.

walk the black dog on. See dog on . . .

walk the pegs; often as vbl n., walking . . . To move one's own cribbage pegs on, or one's opponent's pegs back: sharpers': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; ob.

walk the plank. To appear on the identification parade at police headquarters: since ca. 1920. Convict, 1934. A dangerous proceeding.

walk-up. An apartment; a flat: 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; extant. One walks up to it.

walk up back or walk up the thirteen steps. See take walk up back.

walker, as used by R. Greene, A Disputation, 1592 ('Many a good Citizen is Crosbyt in the yeare by odde Walkers, abroad'), i.e., 'whore', may be c. of ca. 1580-1630: it has the appearance of being an underworld short-cutting of S.E. walker by night, a whore; hardly of S.E. night-walker, which is recorded very much later. In late C. 19-20, it = 'a street-walking prostitute' and is white-slave traffic c., as in Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940.

walking distiller. See cag, carry the.

walking fence. An ambulatory or itinerant receiver of stolen goods: 1826, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, II, trial of William Gibbs, 'After some hesitation he said he had sold it to a walking fence for 1 l.'; ob. See fence, n., 1.

walking in the air. Drug-exalted: since ca. 1930. BVB. Cf. floating.

walking mort. Defined as early as 1566, by Harman in A Caveat or Warening for commen cursetors:—'These walkinge Mortes bee not maryed: these for their unhappye yeares doth go as a Autem Morte, and wyll saye their husbandes died eyther at Newhaven, Ireland, or in some service of the Prince. These make laces upon staves, and purses, that they cary in their hands, and whyte vallance for beddes. Manye of these hath hadde and have chyl dren: when these get ought, either with begging, bychery, or brybery, as money or apparell, they are quickly shaken out of all by the upright men, that they are in a marvelous feare to cary any thing aboute them that is of any valure. Wherefore, this pollicye they use, they leave their money now with one and then with a nother trustye housholders, eyther with the good man or good wyfe, some tyme in one shiere, and in another, as they travell: this have I knowne, that iiij. or v. shyllinges, yea X. shyllinges lefte in a place, and the same wyll they come for againe within one quarter of a yeare, or some tyme not in half a yeare; and all this is to lytle purpose, for all their pevysh pollycy; for when they bye them lynnyn or garmentse, it is taken awaye from them, and worssse geven them, or none at all'. Also in Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608, 'The Walking Mort is of more antiquitie than a Dopye, and therefore of more knaverie: they both are unmarried, but the Doxy professes herself to bee a maide, (if it come to examination) and the Walking Mort says shee is a widow, whose husband dyed either in the Portugall voyage, was slaine in Ireland, or the Low Countries, or came to his end by some other misfortune, leaving her so many small infants on her hand in debt, whome not being able by her honest labour to maintaine she is compelled to begge. These Walking Morts travell from Country to Countrie . . .: Subtile queanes they are, hardharted, light-fingerd, cunning in dissembling, and dangerous to be met if any Rufler or Roague bee in their company. They feare neither God nor good lawes, but oncly are kept in aw by the Uprightmen'; 1671, F. Kirkman, The English Rogue, Part Two; app. † by 1730. A mort that walks and walks and walks.

walking poulterer, 'one who steals fowls, and hawks them from door to door' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), may have been c., but more prob. it was jocular s. of ca. 1760-1830.

walking stationer, 'a hawker of pamphlets, &c.' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), is almost certainly not c., but s.

walking the pegs. See walk the pegs.

wall. Resistance: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. metaphorical 'to be up against a brick wall'.—2. 'Generic name for places in which victims of the pay-off racket are beaten [i.e., swindled] when a "store" or "joint" is not used; the victim is said to be "played against the wall"', Edwin H.

Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1936: commercial crooks': since ca. 1920.

wall, over the. See over the wall.

Wall City. San Quentin prison: 1933, James Spenser, Limey; extant—but by 1940, no longer c.

wall-flower. A tramp that hangs about a saloon in the hope of a drink: tramps': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex the social phrase be a wall-flower, 'not to be invited to dance and therefore be forced to adorn a seat against the wall'.

wall-flowers, 'clothes exposed to sale in the streets', is not c., as stated in Egan's Grose, 1823, but low s.

walla, 'a peddler' (Leverage, 1925), lies between c. and low s. Ex Anglo-Indian wallah (a fellow, a 'merchant') in its s. sense, 'chap', 'fellow'.

wallaby, hit the. See hit the wallaby.

wallaby—orig., wallaby track—on the. On the tramp: common among Australian tramps, who merely adopted it from those who, legitimately searching for work, tramp from place to place: since ca. 1860; in C. 20, s. In C. 20, it also and derivatively = penniless: tramps' and beggars' and other down-and-outs'. On a track so rural that wallabies may be seen.

walled city, cited by Givens, 1929, as c. for 'a (big) prison', is, as Godfrey Irwin remarks, 'literary'.

waller. A policeman: 1925, Leverage: s., not c. He stalks along by the wall.

wallet, draw one's. See draw one's wallet.

wallies. See wally.

walloper. A public-house: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'He would . . . go up into Shaftesbury Avenue and have a drink or so in one of the wallopers there'; by 1945, low s. As boozier (pub) ex booze (liquor), so walloper ex low s. wallop (beer). —2. The Australian sense (C. 20), 'policeman' is low s. rather than c. Baker, 1945. Ex the blows he administers with his truncheon.

wallpaper. Serip: 1935, I. Ingram, Stir Train.

Wally. 'Wallies—Town bums who never lose sight of the city walls,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1920.—2. 'Wally—A "small town" sport or gambler': tramps': since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'The term originated with the tramps, who found these gentry usually "wall-eyed" or inclined to be wary of the stranger' (Irwin).

wanderoo. 'The advance man of a yegg mob' (itinerant burglars, esp. of banks): 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. prospector.

wang, n. See whang.

wang, v. To peddle shoe-laces and boot-laces: 1918 (prob. implied in wangy); 1925, Leverage; extant. To whang, or tramp, the pavement.

wanga. A woman peddling boot-laces and shoe-laces: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex wang.

wangy. 'Disguised begging by selling shoe-strings,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923—on the authority of Leon Livingston's Madame Delcassee of the Hobos, 1918; extant. Ex wang, v.

wap, n. This very rare n. may derive direct ex the v. or represent an abbr. of wapping, n.: only in C. 18, A New Canting Dict., 1725, Song XVI, 'When my Dimber Dell I courted, | She had Youth and Beauty too, | Wanton joys my heart transported, | And her Wap was ever new': whence it appears that the sense is either (and more prob.) 'manner of copulating' or 'that with which she performs the sexual act'.

wap, v. Recorded first in Harman, 1566 (see the quot'n at jockum); 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, says of niggling that 'this word is not used now, but wapping and thereof comes the name *wapping mort*s Whoores'; 1611, Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 'Wee'l couch a hogshead under the Ruffemans, and there you'—Moll Cutpurse—'shall wap with me, and Ile nigggle with you'; 1612, Dekker, O per se O (see quot'n at White Ewe); 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'To Lie with a Man. If she won't wap for a Winne'—a penny—'let her trine for a Make' or halfpenny; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict., Song XVI, 'All her Wapping now must leave her, | For, alas! my Dell's grown old'; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, where it is misprinted wrap; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, 'Wapping, the act of coition'; † by 1850. I.e., whap or whop, to strike: cf. low s. bang, to copulate with (a woman).

wap-apace, mort. See mort wap-apace.

wapping, n. See wap, v.

wapping, adj. prefixed to a Christian name or to a surname, connotes whoredom: 1725, H. D., The Life of Jonathan Wild, 'Wapping Moll'—a whore or a courtesan—'had been there'; † by 1850. Ex wap, v.

wapping cove. 'One'—a man—'that loves whores', or, rather, whoring: 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; † by 1850. Cf. wapping, adj.

wapping dell; wapping mort. A harlot: 1610, Rowlands, wapping mort—see prec. entry; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'And wapping Dell, that niggles well, | And takes loure for her hire'; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Whore, A Bloss or Wapping Mort'; † by 1800. See wap, v., dell, mort.

ware hawk! 'An exclamation used by thieves to inform their confederates that some police officers are at hand': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1887 (Baumann) low s. and in form war 'ork.

warm, v. To imprison (a person): 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex coll. warm, 'to punish (someone) corporally'.

warm, adj., 'well-lined or flush in the Pocket (B.E., 1698), is not c., but s. >, in C. 19, coll. But the U.S.A. sense 'dangerous' (Matsell, 1859) may, in C. 19, have been c.; so too the sense 'on the alert' (Life in Sing Sing, 1904, p. 263).

warm corner. A safe place or rendezvous: 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicinity and Crime, 'He meets Harris at a "warm corner", and [they] go away together'; † by 1900. Warm and snug.

warming(-)pan, a large old-fashioned watch; in 'She-bed-fellow' (usually Scotch w.-p.): both these senses are s.

warp; Greene also has warpe. In 'the curbing law' (q.v.), the warp is he who acts as look-out man to the curber and 'hath a long cloke to cover what soever he'—the curber—'gets'; Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, 1592, tells a pretty story, beginning: 'It fortun'd of late that a Courber and his Warp went walking in the dead of night to spie out some window open for their purpose'; Dckker, The Belman of London, 1608; 1630, John Taylor, A brood of Cormorants, in the section entitled 'A Cutpurse'; † by 1660. A perversion of S.E. ward, 'a guarding; a watching'.

warra. See wawa.

warren is a specific term in 'ferreting', q.v., and therefore was current ca. 1600–1750; it may, however, have lingered on for another hundred years, for in Egan's Grose, 1823, we find a definition very much clearer than that given by Dekker: 'One that is security for goods taken upon credit by extravagant young gentlemen'. On first thoughts, one would say: warren puns † warrant, a warranter, a guarantor. That is so; but the punning term warren was suggested by the fact that the takers were called rabbit-suckers.—2. A brothel: 1698, B.E.; † by 1830. Perhaps abbr. cunny-warren, which later > c.

warrigal. A low fellow: 1925, Leverage; extant. Introduced into U.S.A. from Australia, where warrigal is Aboriginal for anything wild or untameable and has—see Baker, 1942—been adopted by Australians.

wart. 'One who hangs around a place,' Leverage, 1925; extant. An excrescence.

wash, v. To clear (a person) of suspicion: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. S.E. whitewash.

wash, the. Theft from a man as he washes in a public lavatory: since ca. 1895. Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938, 'Wash Up (the)': Stealing from clothing hung up in wash-houses. A thief engaged in this sort of crime would be said to be "at the wash" or "at the wash-up"'.

wash-boiler stall. A trick whereby two thieves rob stores: since ca. 1920; by 1940, police s. Ersine, 1933. Dependent upon a shop-assistant becoming interested in non-existent holes in a wash-boiler.

wash-up, the. See wash, the.

washed-up, be. To be abstaining from drugs, or taking a drug-cure: drug traffic: since the 1920's. BVB. Ex the s. phrase.

washman. Awdeley, 1562, defines him thus: 'A Washman is called a Palliard, but not of the right making. He useth to lye in the hye way with lame or sore legs or armes to beg. These men ye right Pilliards wil often times spoile, but they dare not complayn. They be bitten with Spickworts, & sometime with rats bane'—i.e., have sores procured by the application of spearwort and rat's bane. The term, app., was † by 1600. A perversion of watchman: for he watches hard in order to discover whom to beg from.

wast-coateer. See waistcoateer.

waste in bing (bynge, etc.) a waste (or awaste or awast). See awast.

waste-butt; Mr Waste-Butt. A publican: not c., but s.—2. (The former only.) An eating-house: 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; † by 1920. Ex sense 1.

watch, my, our, her, his, etc. Myself, ourselves, herself, himself, etc.; I, we, she, he, etc.: 1536, Copland, his watch and my watch; 1566, Harman, 'Thys harlot was . . . snowte fayre, and had an upright man or two alwayes attendinge on her watche (whyche is on her parson)'; ibid., variant nose watch, q.v.; ibid., 'That is beneshyp to our watche. That is very good for us'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'I met a Dell, I view'd her well, | She was benship to my watch', i.e. pleasing to me—a passage that suggests that the origin of this mysterious term may be watch = watching, close regard, surveillance; app. † by 1870. Cf. nose watch and shirt, up my.—2. But also with nn. Thus Dekker, O per se O, 1612, has 'to Rome-coves watch', to a gentleman (or, possibly, to gentlemen), and 'to ben coves watch', to a good fellow (or to good fellows).

watch and seals or watch, chain and seals, 'a sheep's head and pluck', is not c., but low s.

watch-dropper. 'One who exploits the drop game with a cheap watch, i.e. one who drops a watch in order to lead a passer-by into picking it up,' Baker, 1942: Australian: late C. 19–20. See drop game.

watch Joey drop; usually as vbl n. 'Watching Joey drop. Watching a postman making his deliveries,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941: C. 20.

watch-maker. (Only in pl.) See clock-makers.—2. (? Hence), 'a pickpocket, or stealer of watches': 1859, H; 1890, C. Hindley, 'He makes them in a crowd!'; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; † by 1915.

watch-pincher. 'For a long time a well-known police inspector was one of the most expert "watch pinchers" in London. A "watch pincher" is . . . a man who can detach a watch from its chain without the knowledge of its owner', W. T. Ewens, Thirty Years at Bow Street Police Court, 1924: but as much police s. as c.; or rather, police s. for sense 2 of the preceding entry.

watcher. A look-out man to a drag-work gang: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (see quot'n at drag-work); ob. Only very doubtfully c.

water, over the. See over the water.

water haul or water-haul or waterhaul. A disappointment: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York (as one word); 1933, Ersine, 'An unproductive robbery'; extant. Very dampening.

water pad; also hyphenated and as single word. 'Water-Pad, c. one that Robbs Ships in the Thames,' B.E., 1698; 1714, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, 'Upon the Water-Pad, which is going by Night with a Boat on board any Ship . . . lying down the River of Thames, and finding therein no Persons to watch the same, or else catching them asleep, break open the Padlocks of the Cabbins or Hatches and rob 'em': 1718, N. B., A Collection of Tryals, II; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (water-pad); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. See pad, n.

water(-)sneak. 'Breaking into a vessel' in order to thief: current in U.S.A. from before 1794 and prob. existing in England from as early as 1760: 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Robbing ships or vessels on a navigable river, or canal, by getting on board unperceived, generally in the night. The water-sneak is lately made a capital offence'—cribbled by Egan, 1823; † by 1890. See sneak, n., 1.

water sneaksman. 'A man that steals from ships or craft on the river': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1890, C. Hindley; † by 1910. Ex the preceding.

waterhaul. See water haul.

waterman. See watersman.

waterpad. See water pad.

watersman. A sky-coloured handkerchief, usually of silk: 1839, W. A. Miles (see billy); 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1857, Snowden; by 1860, mostly waterman (H, 2nd ed.); by 1864, s. (H, 3rd ed.).

wattles, 'ears', is, according to Grose, 1785, c.; B.E., however, is almost certainly correct in implying that it is s.; app. † by 1860 or thereabouts, the term derives from the S.E. sense.

waves, ride the. See ride . . .

wawa or warra. A serious talk; a conference:

1925, Leverage; extant. Perversion of worry? Or perhaps of pow-wow?

wax, n. Some kind of false die: gamesters': (written) 1662, The Cheats, by John Wilson. In his edition of this play, M. C. Nahm advances the theory that they may be 'dice treated with wax to produce certain numbers'.—2. The sense 'an impression in wax'—of, e.g., a key—is a colloquialism. (See imp.) wax, v. To mark down (a place) for burglary; carefully to note (a person): 1899, Clarence Rook, The Hooligan Nights, "There's a 'ouse that I've 'ad waxed for about a week down Denmark Hill way"; 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers, "She'd got him waxed. 'It 'im off to me, she did, like a photograph"; slightly ob. A fig. use of wax, 'to take a wax impression of' (e.g., a key).

wax-zucker. 'A bribe; bribery,' Leverage, 1925: low s., not c.

way. See diminishing way . . .—2. 'Share (n): an end; piece; way,' Howard N. Rose, 1934: U.S.A.: since the 1920's. Prob. ex 'dividing two ways, three ways, etc.'

way, that; this way. Engaged in crime; crooked: since ca. 1910. Partridge, 1938. Euphemistic.

way for, out of the. See out of the way for.

way-layer, in the sense of kid-lay(er), may orig. have been c. (1770, R. King, The Frauds of London detected); but prob. it was merely a special application of the S.E. sense.

way of life, be in the. To be a prostitute: 1823, Bee: C. 19. It may be c., but more prob. it is low s.

We Boys mob. A gang (often only two persons) of swindlers obtaining subscriptions towards the 'burial' of some 'old-time newspaper man' whose death has been profitably exaggerated: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'With a deep sob, he concludes, "We boys have started a little collection to give him a decent burial and present the widow with a purse after the funeral, and knowing how you felt toward the boys [i.e., newspapermen], we thought you might like to make a small donation to help swell the total"; extant.

wear it. 'To wear it upon a person, (meaning to wear a nose, or a conk), is synonymous with nosing, conking, splitting or coming it'—i.e., informing the police about a criminal—and is merely one of those fanciful variations so much admired by flash people: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1870.

wear the bands. See bands, wear the.

wear the black. See black . . .

wear the broad arrow, 'to be a convict': so far from being c., it is allusive S.E.

wear the wooden ruff. See wooden ruff.

wearing the gaiters. 'Doing a term of penal servitude. (Convicts wear breeches and cloth gaiters, while short-term prisoners wear trousers.)' F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938: since ca. 1925.

weasel. A private detective: 1933, Ersine; by 1947, slightly ob. Cf. :—2. An informer, either to the police or to prison warders: 1934, Howard N. Rose (former nuance); 1938, Castle (latter); extant. Cf. the synonymous rat.

weave-hustling. See hustle, v., 4.

weaver's lurk, the. Pretending to be a weaver out of employ, for the exciting of compassion (and money): 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; † by 1900. See lurk; cf. cotton spinner's lurk.

weaving. 'A notorious card-sharpping trick, done by keeping certain cards on the knee, or between the knee and the underside of the table, and using them when required by changing them for the cards held in the hand': card-sharppers': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; ob.

weaving leather aprons! An underworld c.p. reply to an inconvenient inquiry as to what one has been doing lately: 1864, H, 3rd ed., where the synonyms, making a trundle for a goose's eye and making a whim-wham to bridle a goose, are recorded. But all three were indubitably low s. as well as c. and prob. all three had passed out of c. by ca. 1870.

weazel. See weasel.

web. Cloth: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies considered; † by 1820.

wed, ppl adj. Convicted; condemned: 1925, Leverage; extant. Wedded to imprisonment: cf. facetious life-sentence 'marriage'.

wedge, n. Silver: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, where it is used attributively (wedge lob, a silver snuff-box); 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, where it is spelt wage; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, David Haggart; 1828, P. Egan, Finish; 1830, Sessions Papers; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1839, Brandon; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); Dec. 1848, Sessions Papers; 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1857, Snowdon; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1887, Baumann; 1893, No. 747; 1904, F & H; ob. Prob. ex wedges (or ingots) of silver—perhaps those brought by pirates to England in C. 17.—2. Hence (?), silver plate: 1714, Alex. Smith, The History of the Highwayman, 'She was gone far enough off with the Wedge, that's to say, Plate'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, Vaux; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1848, Sinks of London; 1850, Sessions Papers; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; Oct. 7, 1865, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1869, A Merchant, Six Years; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1894, A. Morrison; 1904, F & H; 1925, Eustace Jervis; extant.—3. (Ex sense 1 or sense 2; perhaps ex both.) A silver tankard: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'Wadge, alias Beaker, alias Silver-Tankard'; by 1800, it had merged with senses 2 and 4.—4. Hence, a silver (or, loosely, gold) jewel or ornament, or as a collective n.: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Silver-ware': 1897, D. Farran, A Burglar's Life Story; 1923, J. C. Goodwin; 1925, Eustace Jervis; slightly ob.—5. (Prob. ex sense 1.) Money; properly, silver coin: 1725, A Canting Dict.; ca. 1811, A Leary Mot; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1842, P. Egan, Macheath; 1890, B & L; 1914, E. Pugh, The Cockney at Home (see quot'n at parker); Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1938, H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks; extant.—6. A silver buckle: 1738, Ordinary of Newgate's Account (Account of Henry Fluellin); 1741, ibid., III (Catherine Lineham), of any buckle; ca. 1775, The Potatoe Man; † by 1830. Ex sense 4.—7. A Jew: prob. from ca. 1860: 1909, Ware; app. † by 1940. 'A wedge fixes objects or breaks them up' (Ware); but is it not back-s.? Jew > wej > wedge. Baker, 1945, cites The Australian Slang Dictionary, 1882, as listing it among back-s. terms.—8. 'A slightly wedge-shaped playing card,' Ersine, 1933: Am. card-sharppers': C. 20.

wedge, v.i. To melt down; applied properly to silverware: 1829, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, V, trial of Henry Pullen and John Brown, 'I . . . saw six or eight lads in company—one of them said to a little boy, "If you cannot draw [i.e., steal] the handkerchiefs, cut the string of the shoes, for they"'—or rather, the silver buckles thereon—"will wedge well"' ; † by 1900. Ex wedge, n., 1.

wedge blunt. Silver money: 1848, The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). See wedge, n., 1, and blunt, n.

wedge(-)bob(b). A silver snuff-box: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), as wedge-box; † by 1904 (F & H). Is not this an error for wedge lob, q.v. at wedge, n., 1, ref. of 1718? It very prob. is, for F & H cite w. lob, not w. bob.

wedge-box. See prec., ref. of 1859.

wedge-feeder. A silver spoon: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'I got a scout, some wedge-feeders, and a pair of boots'; 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1859, Snowden; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; ob. See wedge, n., 1, and feeder.

wedge-hunter and hunting. 'I will . . . go a wedge-hunting (stealing plate)': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L, 'Wedge-hunter, one who purloins plate from unguarded kitchens'; 1904, F & H, 'A thief . . . devoting attention to silver plate, watches, etc.'; ob. See wedge, n., 2.

wedge lob. See wedge, n., 1.

wedge scout. A silver watch: 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 2nd ed.; † by 1910. See the elements.

wedges. Cards cut narrower at one end: card-sharpers': since ca. 1880. J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats, 1894. As wedges are.

wee pawn. 'A place suspected to be a kind of "wee pawn"—that is, an unlicensed pawnbroker's': Scottish: 1884, J. McGovan, Traced and Tracked; ob.

weed, n. See crack a whid.—2. As 'tobacco', it is claimed by No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, as a c. term: but not even in U.S.A. has it been c., although, there, it is, in C. 20 at least, on the borderline between c. and euphemism; in Britain, the weed is a genteelism (now jocular), and the fragrant weed is almost a cliché.—3. A withholding of part of the loot: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex weed, v., 1.—4. Marijuana, the Mexican drug inhaled from cigarettes: Am. drug addicts': since ca. 1918: 1933, Cecil de Lenoir (see quot'n at mootie, and continue thus:—) 'It is a weed which grows wild south of the Rio Grande'; 1935, Hargan; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; in Britain as joy weed, q.v.; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road (a marijuana cigarette): 1942, BVB.—5. Candy: San Quentin convicts': 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; extant.

weed, v. To take, steal, part of: 1811, Lex. Bal., 'The kiddey weeded the swell's screens; the youth took some of the gentleman's bank notes'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To pilfer or purloin a small portion from a large quantity of any thing A flash-cove, on discovering a deficiency in his purse or property, which he cannot account for, will declare that he, (or it, naming the article) has been wedded [thus; an error] to the ruffian'—and see weed a swag; 1823, Bee; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.),

'Weeding. Taking a part and leaving the balance in such a manner as not to excite suspicion. When a thief abstracts a portion from the plunder without the knowledge of his pals, and then receives an equal portion of the remainder'—i.e., equal to the portion received by each of his confederates—'it is called "weeding the swag"' ; 1865, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1879, A. Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences, "Weeding" the packages of notes in the vaults'; 1886, A. Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective, of abstracting bank-notes from the pocket-book that is on the person of, e.g., a man coming out of a bank or, usually, when he is walking along the street from the bank he has been noticed leaving; ibid., p. 53, this process of abstracting notes from an apparently undisturbed pocket-book is termed weeding a leather; ibid., "Weeding" consists in extracting all the large bills from the wallet, and substituting small ones—with which he [the thief] is always supplied—so that the bulk will be about the same as it was before'; 1887, Baumann; 1888, J. Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern, 'I lost my respectable employment, through "weeding the till" to bet on race-horses'; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1896, Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago; 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey (U.S.A.); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, "Fat leathers" are "lifted" and "weeded"' ; 1903, Clapin (U.S.A.); 1904, F & H; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, Leverage; 1927, Clark & Eubank; 1927, Kane; 1930, Burke, 'To steal from the loot more than one's share. "This dough's been weeded"' ; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; and ad nauseam since 1931—c.g., in J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding, 1938. Ex 'weeding a garden'.—2. To burgle: 1860, Charles Martell, The Detective's Note Book, 'He never "weeded" a place until he knew just where he was to go, and what he was to do'; † by 1910. Ex 1.—3. See weeding, n., 2.—4. To withhold part of the loot or booty: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; and often since then. This sense derives from sense 1: with which, it would be more logical to say, it merges.—5. To solicit alms: U.S. beggars': 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex sense 1?—6. 'To take money from one's pocket as a donation to a beggar', Godfrey Irwin, 1931: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920.—7. Hence, to pay protection: since the 1920's: 1938, Castle.

weed a joint. 'Stealing clothing or articles in such a way that they would not be missed from the stock was called weeding a joint,' Jim Tully in The American Mercury, April 1933: yeggs': ca. 1890-1920. Cf. weed, v., 1.

weed a poke; usually as vbl n., weeding a poke, a variant of skinning a poke. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

weed a (or the) swag. 'To weed the swag is to embezzle part of the booty, unknown to your pals, before a division takes place': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1894, The Reminiscences of Chief-Inspector Littlechild (also, p. 158, as vbl n., weeding the swag); 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; extant. See weed, v., 1.

weed hound. Marijuana-smoker: since ca. 1920. BVB. Cf. tea hound and see weed, n., 4.

weed in the garden. 'In the . . . underworld, when an alien without invitation invades the territory where the mobs congregate he is known as "A weed in the garden",' John O'Connor, Broad- way Racketeers, 1928; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 'A stranger or any [other] person regarded with suspicion'; extant.

weed out is an occ. variant of weed, v., 1. Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, 1893, 'He might suspect the "kid" of trying to "weed out" some of the "stuff"'; 1934, Rose; ob.

weeding. See the ensuing combinations.—2. In U.S.A., 'fishing through wicket at cashier's window for money on counter', Allan Pinkerton, Professional Thieves and the Detective, 1881; ob. Cf. the other weeding entries, and weed, v.—3. The vbl n. of weed, v.: 1925, Leverage; May 1928, The American Mercury; and many times since then.

weeding a leather. See weed, v., 1, second ref. of 1886.

weeding a poke. See weed a poke.

weeding dues. 'Speaking of any person, place, or property, that has been weeded, it is said weeding dues have been concerned': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1904 (F & H). See weed, v., and dues.

weedle. See whiddle, n.

week-end habit. See chippy habit.

weeno, 'wine': s. (orig., low), not c. A blend of wine + It. vino.

weeper. A tearful beggar: beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

weeping and waiting. 'Waiting in jail to learn the result of an appeal for a new trial or for a pardon,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: convicts': since ca. 1920. Ironical on what the convict supposes his women-folk to be doing.

weeping willow. A pillow: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928; Convict 2nd, 1938; M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

weigh. To be worth (a stated number, which = number of pounds sterling) to a constable, a thief-taker, a prison officer, when one is arrested as a wanted criminal: 1773, Anon., The Bow Street Officer, prison governor speaking: 'He weighs Forty—So I'll e'en book him; for you know he was taken by our people. [writes] For Dick Finchley, forty pounds'; 1782, Sessions Papers, Newnham's 1st Session, p. 83; early C. 19, in song quoted by Byron in Don Juan; 1812, J. H. Vaux, '[The police] will say', of a criminal for whom no reward is offered, 'Let him alone at present, we don't want him till he weighs his weight, meaning, of course, forty pounds', forty pounds being at this period a very common reward; ca. 1819, The Young Prig; 1823, Egan's Groser; 1828, G. G., History of George Godfrey; app. † by 1890.

weigh forty. See prec.

weigh in. To rendezvous: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'We parted at Pocatello, agreeing to "weigh in" (meet) at Ogden in the spring'; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, IA; extant. Ex boxing j.

weigh off. To sentence (a person) to imprisonment: 1931, Brown; Daily Express, March 25, 1938; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime; extant. To settle, determine the ensuing status of.

weigh one's weight. See weigh, quot'n of 1812.

weigh out. To hand-in one's full share of the loot: Jan. 6, 1895, The People; 1909, Ware; slightly ob. Ex 'the distribution of stolen plate melted down to avoid identification' (Ware).

weigh up. To observe (a house, etc.) closely: S. Africa: C. 20. J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946. Synonymous with the American case a joint.

weight, be worth the regular. To be sufficiently important as a criminal to be worth forty pound in blood money: 1848, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin—cf. ibid., 'Two hundred weight', glossed as 'The sum of 200 l.; the reward in atrocious cases'; † by 1890. For origin, see weigh.

weinie. A loaf of bread: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ob.

welcher, 'a twister', 'an undependable, dishonest person', is not c., but s., whether in the U.S.A. (despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904) or in Britain. Ex the race-course s. sense.

welcome soap. 'Soap used to plug the cracks in a safe,' Leverage, 1925; extant.

well, n. See garden, put in the, and also:— well, v. 'To divide unfairly. To conceal part. A cant phrase used by thieves, where one of the party conceals some of the booty, instead of dividing it fairly amongst his confederates,' Lex. Bal., 1811, but it occurs as early as Sept. 1785, in Sessions Papers, p. 1115; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To well your accomplice, or put him in the well, is explained under the word garden' (as indeed it is); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1860, H., 2nd ed.; 1874, H (also well it, absolutely); † by 1904 (F & H). I.e., to let him down; or, as it were, drop the money into a well.

well, adj. See sick.

well, put in the. See garden, put in the.

well-covered. Possessing influence: 1904, Life in Sing Sing (see 2nd quot'n at strong); by 1925, a standard euphemism.

well-faked claw. 'An experienced hand [lit.] at stealing,' G. W. M. Reynolds, 1839: not genuine c.; —a literary invention.

welsher, welshing, seem, in Sessions Papers, July 1870 (p. 342), to signify 'passer—passing—of counterfeit money'. Cf. therefore, welcher.—2. In U.S.A. of C. 20, these terms mean an informer, informing, to the police, as in Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1926 (p. 638); extant.

welt. See rum boozing welts.

wench. 'A light safe; a little box,' Leverage, 1925; extant.

west, go. See go west. Cf. the entry at Holborn Hill.

Westerner. 'Vagabondage in [the West] is composed principally of "blanket-stiffs", "ex-prushuns", "gay-cats" and a small number of recognised tramps who are known simply as "Westerners",' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899; † by 1920.

Westminster wedding, 'a Whore and Rogue Married together' (B.E., 1698), 'a match between a whore and a rogue' (Grose): ca. 1680–1840. Not c., but s.: in neither B.E. nor Grose is it classified as c. In C. 17–18, a certain part of Westminster was the haunt and home of numerous criminals.

Westward for smelts. See smelts . . .

wet, heavy. See heavy wet.

wet parson, 'one who moistens his clay freely, in order to make it stick together' (Grose), is not c., but s. Cf. — wet Quaker, 'a Drunkard of that Sect', is not c., but s.: ca. 1690–1840, B.E.; Grose.

wet snow. Wet linen; see snow, 1.

wet-thee-through, 'gin': either low or public-house s. (or both); but not—as in Egan's Groser, 1823—c. The same holds for wetting the neck as applied to a drunkard (ibid.).

wetting the neck. See wet-thee-through.

whack, n. 'A cant term for share,' says George

Parker in A View of Society, 1781, as a gloss on 'Your third-rate class of sharpers, . . . if they should happen to refuse a brother-sharper . . . his whack, are instantly snatched upon' (informed against); but an earlier record occurs in Sessions Papers, 1775, 5th John Wilkes session, p. 224, 'He said I was to have a share in the Wack, which is a cant word for part of the money'; 1785, Grose, 'A share of a booty obtained by fraud'; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, where it is at least once spelt wack; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Wack, a share or equal proportion, as give me my wack, that is my due part'; 1816, Sessions Papers; 1821, David Haggart, Life; 1823, Bee; 1846 (see wack); 1847, A. Harris, Settlers and Convicts; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was low s.; by 1865, gen. s.; in U.S.A., perhaps c. until ca. 1910—it occurs in Josiah Flynt's writings. Perhaps a perversion of Scottish swack, 'a share' (see E.D.D. swack, sb²); but prob. ex the idea of division implicit in—as a resultant of—S.E. whack, 'a blow', and whack, 'to strike'.—2. Hence, a number of things or persons set apart for a given purpose; a batch: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Triumph', 'Prepare the switcher to dead book the whack', i.e., prepare the hangman to hang the batch of prisoners; † by 1890.—3. A pickpocket: Anglo-Irish: 1822, A. Real Paddy, Real Life in Ireland; † by 1900. He 'punishes' his victims' pockets: cf. strike, n. and v.

whack, v. 'Wack, to share or divide any thing equally, as wack the blunt, divide the money, &c.', J. H. Vaux, 1812, but it occurs in Sessions Papers, Oct. 1799, p. 602, 'Says she, . . . it was the best way to whack it If I had used the word, I should have meant, divided the spoil'; 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'I whack't the smash between Bagrie and Paterson, but kept none to myself'; 1823, Bee; 1842, P. Egan, Captain Macheath; 1849, Alex. Harris, The Emigrant Family (Australia); 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, II; 1885, J. Greenwood, A Queer Showman; 1887, Baumann; 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms (Australia); by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. Ex the n.

whack it up. To share (booty) out to or among a 'gang' or mob: since ca. 1850; by 1890, low s. (B & L); but it prob. was c. in the U.S.A. in ca. 1870–1910—witness, e.g., the first quot'n at percentage bull. An elaboration of whack, v.—2. To deal severely (esp. with a prisoner): convicts': since ca. 1918. George Ingram, Stir, 1933. Cf. caning.

whack the illy. See illy-whacker.

whack-up, n. A sharing out of stolen goods or illicitly obtained money: 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; extant. A variant of whack, n., 1; cf. whack it up.

whack up, v. See whack it up.

whacks. A prison-sentence: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Ex whack, n., 1, with perhaps an allusion to jolt.

whacks on, put the. See put . . .

whale and gale. A prison: Pacific Coast: from ca. 1920. In, e.g., Convict, 1934, and M & B, 1944. Rhyming on jail.

whale and whitewash. Fish and sauc: tramps': since ca. 1920. The Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932. Humorous.

whale belly. A steel coal-car: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'Probably from the size and colour' (Irwin).

whale-bone lay, the. 'Having a thin Piece of Whale-bone daub'd at the end with Bird-lime, then going into a Shop with a Pretence to buy something, whilst they make the Shopkeeper, by wanting this and that Thing, to turn his Back often, they then take the Opportunity of putting the Whale-bone . . . into the Till of the Compter, which brings up any single Piece of Money that sticks to it. After which, to give no Mistrust, they buy some small Matter, and pay the Man with a Pig of his own Sow,' Alex. Smith, The Highwaymen, 1714; 1737, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account; app. † by 1820.

whaler. A variant of waler.

whang or wang. A beggar that pretends to be a street vendor: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (see quot'n at convention); extant. Short for wangy or whangy; cf. wang, v.

whap. See whop.

what a turn up for the book! This is really good!: since ca. 1920. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932.

what am. A ham: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

what circle? 'What o'clock is it?', The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Where, on the circle of the clock- (or watch-) dial, stand the hour and minute hands?

whattles is Potter's spelling (1797) of wattles.

wheadle or wheedle, n. (Ex the v., sense 1.) In the general sense, dissembler or wheedler, it arose ca. 1670 and is usually held to be S.E.; it is, however, doubtful whether it were S.E. until ca. 1700.—2. Hence, a sharper: 1675, R. Head, Proteus Redivivus, where it is indubitably adumbrated though not actually defined; 1698, B.E., 'Wheadle, c. a Sharper, To cut a Wheadle, c. to Decoy, by Fawning and Insinuation'; 1725, A New Canting Dict; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by ca. 1860.

wheadle or wheedle, v. Orig., though first recorded by Blount in 1661, it was almost certainly c., and c. it seems to have remained until ca. 1730; it occurs in 1665 in The English Rogue by R. Head, who, in 1675, Proteus Redivivus; or the Art of Wheedling or Insinuation, as good as asserts its origin in c. and says that the word imports 'a subtil insinuation into the nature, humours and inclinations of such we converse with, that we possess them with a belief that all our actions and services tend to their pleasure and profit, whereas it is but seemingly so, that we may work on them our real advantage'. Head suggests that the word is a perversion of wheel (v.); but The O.E.D. more convincingly says that it is 'possibly a survival in a specialized application of O.E. waedlian, to beg'. It is worth noting that James Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 1707, remarks: 'The word Wheedle cannot be found to derive it self from any other, and therefore it is look'd upon as wholly invented by the Canterers'.—2. Palmer, Proverbs, 1710, 'Sing in the Proverb, is the same that our Newgate-Birds call Wheedle; which is, when one of the Gang Tattles, Confesses, and Accuses the Rest' (O.E.D.); † by 1870. A corruption of whiddle, q.v.

wheadle, cut a. See wheadle, n., 2.

wheadler. See whiddler, 2.

wheedling. The trickery set forth in wheadle, n. and v.

wheel, n. A dollar: U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; 1904, F & H; 1925, Leverage; ob. Ex English s. hind coach-wheel, a five-shilling piece.—2. (Usually in pl.) 'Wheels, n. pl., Women in general,' Leverage, 1925; extant. They help to keep the old world turning.—3. (Usually in pl.) 'Wheels, n. pl., Thieves,' Leverage, 1925; extant. 'Wheels within wheels'?—4. A leg: tramps': since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'So called because it is a means of locomotion' (Irwin).

wheel, v. 'To stall as in a turn-trick', Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. turn, v., 3.

wheel, on the. Engaged in shadowing a criminal or a suspect: since the late 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941, "A Bogey on the wheel" means a detective is following'.

wheel man. 'Driver of a getaway car,' Hargan, 1935; extant. Cf. wheeler.

wheel of life, the. The treadmill: convicts': 1890, B & L; † by 1920. Cf. everlasting staircase, stepper, and vertical caregrinder.

wheelband in the nick, 'regular Drinking over the left Thumb' (B.E.), is not c., but tavern s. of ca. 1680–1840.

wheelbarrow. 'A bullock waggon taking supplies to men in an iron gang,' Baker, 1945: Australian convicts': ca. 1800–60. Derisive.

wheeler. An expert driver in a gang of car-thieves: the automobile-stealing racket: 1929, The Saturday Evening Post; extant. Cf. wheel man.

wheeze, n. Information; a 'tip', hint, warning: C. 20. Partridge, 1937. Cf. whisper, n., 3.

wheeze, v.i. To say, divulge, inform: 1890, B & L, who imply that, orig., it was Scottish; 1904, F & H; ob. 'As of one speaking under one's breath, in husky tones,' B & L.

wheezer. A tramp or beggar that 'represents himself as being greatly afflicted with bronchitis or consumption': tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; extant. He wheezes both efficiently and effectually.—2. A song: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, concerning a Liverpool 'frec-and-easy' (informal concert), "Who'll sing? Come on now, be sharp! Somebody give us a wheezer or a clog" (clog-dance); ob. Cf. wheeze, v.

where it gets dark. 'If he'—a crook—'has no fixed place of abode, then he lives "where it gets dark",' The Cape Times, May 23, 1946: S. Africa: C. 20. Cf. in smoke.

where the dogs don't bite. In prison: 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago, "... He was marched away, and so departed for the place—in Jago idiom—where the dogs don't bite"; extant. Cf. s. where the flies won't get at it, (of a drink) down one's throat.

Whetshire cully is erroneous for witcher cully. Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 1741.

whiblin is only doubtfully c.—and then as 'a sword': C. 17: see Partridge, 1937.

whid, n., apparently occurs first in Harman, 1566, as bene whydds and quyre whyddes (see cut bene whids and cut queer whids); 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'And cut benar whiddes; and speake better words'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme, 'Whiddes, Words, Language'; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee, 'Whid—talk'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); prob. † by 1870 as c., but extant as cheapjacks' s.: 'The "whids", as the words or set phrases used by Cheap Johns in disposing of their articles are called, are very much alike,' C. Hindley, The Life and Adventures of a Cheap Jack, 1876. 'Old gipsey cant', says H in 1859. But more prob. it is a survival—via unrecorded Cockney M.E.—of O.E. cwide, 'speech'; failing that, a perversion of word—2. 'He invested in a couple of dog-horses at knackers prices—one a "whid", or bawl,' F. W. Carew, No. 747, 1893, the footnote to Romany baval being, 'Broken-winded horse' (p. 35): horse-copers' c., dating, prob., from early C. 19. Cf. whid, v., 1.

whid v. To speak; to talk: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 'Stow your whids & plant, and whid no more of that'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Wid rumley; speak well'; 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'After whidding over it about an hour, he asked me to take a walk'; prob. † by 1860. App. ex the n.—2. Hence, to talk cant: 1821, David Haggart, 'Whidding, talking slang'; 1823, Egan's Grose, where—prob. erroneously—it is said to be Scottish; prob. † by 1890.

whid, crack a. See crack a whid.

whid, drop a. See drop a whid.

whidde is merely a variant of whid, n., 1. Dekker.

whidding. See whid, v., 2, and queer whidding.

whiddle, n. 'Weedle, alias Noise,' C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718; app. † by 1800. Perhaps ex sense 1 of the v.

whiddle, v. To divulge; v.i., to turn King's evidence: 1698, B.E., 'Whiddle, c. to tell, or discover. He Whiddles, c. he Peaches. He Whiddles the whole Scrap, c. he discovers all he knows They Whiddle beef, and we must Brush, c. they cry out Thieves, we are Pursued, and must Fly'; 1720, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, Vol. III; 1725, A New Canting Dict., which has whiddle thief; 1736, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account (the rare form, wittle); 1785, Grose; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To speak of, or mention any thing'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1887 (Baumann). Perhaps ex whid, v., on S.E. tattle; or merely a frequentative of whid, v.—2. Hence, simply, to speak: 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker, 'Did you whiddle with him in the Whit?'; 1744, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. IV (as whittle); 1753, John Poulter (see whiddling); † by 1830.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) To enter into a Parley, to compound with, or take off by a Bribe': 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1859, H; † by 1890.—4. (Prob. ex sense 2.) To shine; esp. Oliver whiddles, the moon shines: 1781, G. Parker (see Oliver); 1859, H (widdle); 1890, B & L; † by 1904 (F & H).

whiddle beef. See whiddle, v., 1, end of quot'n of 1698.

whiddler. 'A Peacher (or rather Impeacher) of his Gang': 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, 'A talkative fellow—an evidence—an informer'; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'An informer, or one that betrays the secrets of the gang [to persons other than police officers]'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1880. Ex whiddle, v., 1.—2. Moon: 1714, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, 'The Wheadler . . . did not shine'; † by 1904 (F & H). Prob. ex sense 1: the moon 'tells on' criminals and lovers.

whiddling, n.; whideling. Speech; speaking (n.): 1753, John Poulter (see nix in whiddling); † by 1870. Ex whiddle, v., 2.

whiddling, adj. Given to informing to the poliee; doing so: 1841, H. D. Miles; † by 1900. Ex whiddle, v., 1.

whids. See whid.

whids, cut bene. See cut bene whids.

whiff, n., 'a wife', is low s.—not e. Leverage, 1925.

whiff, v. To shoot (somebody); to kill with a gun-shot: since ea. 1935. Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep, (English ed.) 1939. Cf. blast, for which it may be a humorously deliberate euphemism.—2. Esp. in whiff the yen-shee, to smoke opium: addicts': 1942, BVB.

whiffler. 'A fellow that yelps or eries out with pain': 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Ex S.E. whiffle, 'to veer; to make a light whisking sound': prob. eognate with whistle.

whim-wham to bridle a goose, making a. See weaving leather aprons.

whiner; usually in pl. Prayers: 1725, A New Canting Dict. (see also quot'n at chop the whiners), 'Prayers, Supplications, &c.'; it survived until late in C. 19, but is rare execept in the phrase chop whiners. Ex prayers made in a whining tone.

whingding. A fit, convulsions, esp. of a drug addict: 1933, Ersine; 1933, James Spenser, Limey; 1934, Conviet (see quot'n at cart-wheel, 2); by 1945, low s. Cf. s. whimwhams. The word whingding is a reduplication of whing (a thinning of whang). The initial wh, full-valued and not weakened to w, occurs in a number of echoic words expressive either of a heavy fall, often preceeded by a threshing-about, or of speed through the air: whack, wham, whang, whirl, whirr, wish, whoosh, whop, etc.—2. 'A beggar, ding,' Ersine, 1933; extant. By elaboration of ding.

whinn. See win, n., ref. of 1809.

whip, v. See whip off.—2. To cheat (a person) out of a share or equal part of the plunder: U.S.A.; 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L, who quote from The Pall Mall Gazette, 'Sully was guilty of what is known in Billingsgate as whipping—that is, keeping back part of the plunder'; 1904, F & H, '(Thieves')—To swindle'; 1935, George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade; extant. Semanties: cf. punish one's liquor and e. weed, v., and s. flog (to sell illicitly).—3. To steal by snatching: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, p. 259, 'Holding the mark till the tool whips his stone. Engaging a person's attention till the thief succeeds in stealing his diamond'; ob. Short for 'to whip away'.

whip and lash (or slash). A moustache: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Convict 2nd, 1938; M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

whip back. 'He got whipped back to the Irish club house. He was remanded to the police station,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; app. † by 1940.

whip it. To throw something away: 1935, Hargan; extant. Cf. ding.

whip-jack (or -J). See whipjack.

whip off, seems to have, ea. 1690–1750, been e. in certain senses: 'to Steal, . . . to Snatch, and to run away'; i.e., (1) to steal, (2) to hurry off with something one has snatched up. B.E., 1698.

whip over. To smuggle (liquor): bootleggers': 1930, Burke, 'We got some freight for you to whip over'; 1934, Rose; then reminiscent. Prob. over the border between Canada and the U.S.A.

whip-sawed. 'Defeated at all points,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; ob. A whip-saw (a narrow-bladed frame-saw) is used for curved work—for moving all round.

whip still! Be quiet!; don't talk: 1889 (see curb one's clapper); † by 1945. Prob. with a pun on whid, n.; cf. whid, v., 2.

whipe is Matsell's spelling (1859) of wipe, n., 1.

whiper. See wiper. (Matsell.)

whipjack. This trieky fellow is pilloried first in John Awdeley's The Fraternitey of Vacabondes, 1562: 'A Whypiaeke is one, that by eoulor of a counterfaite Lisenee (which they eall a Gybe, and the seales they eal Iarekes) doth use to beg lyke a Maryner, But hys chiefest trade is to rob Bowthes in a Faire, or to pilfer ware from staules, which they eal heaving of the Bowth'. Harman makes whipjacke synonymous with freshwater mariner, q.v., esp. in the first of the quotations. Also in Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608, 'In the next squadron [of beggars] mareh our brave Whip-jacks' and, in the section devoted to them, '... Who talke of nothing but fights at Sea, piracies, drownings and shipwraeks . . . but are indeede no more than fresh water Soldiers'; 1611, Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'Whip-Jacks, c. the tenth Order of the Canting Crew'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit; 1725, A New Canting Dict., which makes them the 19th Order; 1785, Grose, by whose time the designation had almost certainly > †. One who abuses (whips) the name of Jack, a sailor?

whipping. See whip, 2.

whipple tree. Bumper at end of a railroad ear: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex the lit. Standard sense, 'a swingletree or singletree'.

whipsaw, v. To defeat at every turn; to rout completely: 1904 (see whip-sawed); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; ob. See whip-sawed.

whipster, 'a sharp, or subtil Fellow' (B.E., 1698), is not c., but s.: ea. 1690–1830. But as 'a sly, cunning fellow' (B & L, 1890), it may conceivably have been c. of C. 19. And in C. 20 Australia, as 'a sharper', it is on the borderline between e. and low s.: Baker, 1942.

whirl. A try, an attempt; a 'go' at a erime: since ea. 1924. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

whirlgigg. The pillory: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (whirligig, prob. the eorreet form); 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. Beeause, in it, one twists one's head from side to side.

Whiskers, Mr; Whiskers man. A Federal agent: 1933, Eagle (the former); 1934, Rose (ditto); 1935, Hargan (Whiskers only); Nov. 1, 1941, Flynn's, James W. Booth, 'A whiskers man'; 1942, BVB, simply whiskers; extant. '... The inhabitants of the underworld . . . to them J. Edgar Hoover is . . . "the old guy with the whiskers"'. And the men under [his] direction are . . . the G-men (government men),' A. Vollmer & A. E. Parker, Crime, Crooks and Cops, 1937.

whiskers stiff. A Government eheque, whether genuine or forged: forgers': since ea. 1930. Maurer, 1941. Cf. pree. entry.

whiskin, a shallow drinking-bowl, is not c., as B.E., 1698, classifies it, but Northern dial, now †.

whisper, n. 'A watch or wateher [i.e., a look-out man to a gang of thieves—esp. burglars] . . . A marking stall, whisper, stump, erow': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!

(glossary, p. 320); ob. He whispers his warnings.—2. See 'whop and whisper'.—3. A tip given in secret: horse-racing: 1874, H, 5th ed.; by 1900, s. Cf. wheeze, n.

whisper, v.; whisperer. To borrow (money); an habitual borrower: c., not s.—2. To give information to the police: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Echoic.

whispering, n. Betrayal; information given to the police: 1925, Leverage; extant. See whisper, v., 2.

whispering dudder is a 'dudder' (q.v.) that takes his prospective victims aside and whispers that he is afraid of the excisemen: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1890.

whistle, v. To supply the police with information, to 'squeal': 1925, Leverage; extant. Scott, 1815 (Guy Mannering, xxviii, note), 'To sing out, or whistle in the cage, is where a rogue, being apprehended, peaches against his comrades': a phrase current throughout C. 19 and surviving in whistle.

whistler. (Usually pl.) A bad farthing: 'a term used by coiners': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1905. It cries out, or whistles amazedly, to the police.—2. As an unlicensed spirit-seller, it was orig. c.—perhaps always c.; almost certainly c. when applied to the vendor implied in the next entry: ? ca. 1780–1830 (or 1840); first recorded, 1821, when mentioned both by Pierce Egan in Life in London and by W. T. Moncrieff in Tom and Jerry. Ex whistling shop.—3. An informer to the police; a 'squealer', a traitor: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex whistle.

whistling(-)shop, the. 'Rooms in the King's Bench prison where drams are privately sold': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1821, P. Egan, Life in London, of a similar place in the Fleet Prison; 1823, Bee, to such a place in any prison; so too, Sinks of London, 1848; Aug. 1850, Sessions Papers; 1874, H, 'a place'—i.e., any place—'in which spirits are sold without a licence'. The term seems to have been current ca. 1770–1875 or perhaps for a decade longer at each end of the period. Possibly ex a whistle as signal and prob. with a reference to s. whistle, the throat, as in wet one's whistle, to take a drink.

Whistling Weed. Tobacco of the Humming Bird brand: Sing Sing: 1935, Hargan ('Sold at the commissary'); extant. A pun on the weed, tobacco.

Whit. (Earlier form, and origin: Whittington, q.v.) Always the Whit, or occ. w—. Newgate Prison: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, 'Rub us to the Whitt'; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E. (also the Witt); 1707, J. Shirley; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., as Wit; 1724, Thurmond, Harlequin Sheppard; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (both Whit and Wit); 1785, Grose; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., Whittington's College; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.)—but the term was prob. † by 1850. Newgate was built in 1423, by the executors of Whittington, famous Lord Mayor of London.

whitcher. See witcher, 2.

white, n. Silver: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, 'Yellow boyes and pieces of white, which is Gold and Silver'; May 1782, Sessions Papers; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Kitchen; 1935, The Garda Review; 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; extant. Obviously ex the colour.—2. Hence, collective singular for 'silver coins' and separative singular for 'a silver coin': May 1782, both on p. 393, Sessions Papers (see brown); ibid., May 1796, p. 556; 1904, F & H; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); extant.—3. Hence, counterfeit silver; often whites, as in the earliest record: Sept. 1787, Sessions Papers, p. 940; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; extant.—4. See small white and large white.—5. Gin: 1848, Sinks of London, where it is spelt white; † by 1910. Prob. ex white ribbon.—6. Morphine: U.S.A.: mostly drug addicts': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant. Ex the colour; cf. sense 8.—7. (Also white stuff.) Alcohol: Am. bootleggers': 1929–31, Kernôt; 1930, Burke, 'We boil fifty gallon of white a day'; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. sense 5; Irwin derives it ex white line.—8. Cocaine: 1931, The Bon Voyage Book; extant. Cf. sense 6.—9. A five-pound bank-note: since ca. 1940, esp. in London. Daily Express, March 20, 1946. It is printed on white paper.—10. 'Second grade in prison. "Dan went in white"', Ersine, 1933: U.S.A.: extant. Ex colour of badge.

white, adj. (Coin, jewellery) of silver: 1757, Sessions Papers (Feb. 23: trial of Gorman and Walker), 'He said, we have just touched. Another person that ran with him said, "Is it white or yellow?"'; Oct. 1810, Sessions Papers (see go on); Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest (U.S.A.), article 'Do You Speak "Yegg"?'; extant. Approximate colour; but imm. ex the n.

white angel. A hospital nurse (or an attendant) that will, or does, smuggle drugs to an addict: since ca. 1925. BVB. Dressed in white; cf. trained nurse, q.v.

white-bag man. A pickpocket: 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial, '... Nicky V—ns—t, not caring to roam, | Got among the white-bag-men, and felt quite at home', adumbrated in 1818 in P. Egan, Boxiana, II, 555; 1923, Jules Manchon, Le Slang; slightly ob. Why the white bag? Perhaps in ironic contrast to the black-bagged lawyer.

white(-)bait. Silver; silver money, silver plate: 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields (glossary); 1823, Egan's Grose (first nuance only); † by 1870. See white, adj.; there is an allusion to the fish 'white-bait' (colour).

white block. A silver watch: 1925, Leverage; extant. See white, adj., and block, n., 2.

white bug. A diamond: 1925, Leverage; extant. See bug, n., 6, and cf. green bug and red bug.

white buzman. A pickpocket: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; app. † by 1900. See buzman; white because he steals many handkerchiefs, bank-notes, silver watches.

white cat. One who refuses to join the I.W.W. or any other workers' union: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; by 1920, industrial s.—which, however, it may always have been; it may have been adopted by the underworld. A white cat does not like to get its coat dirty.

white-choker. A clergyman, a priest: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; ob. Ex his stiff white collar.

white clock. A silver watch: 1874, H; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1904, F & H; extant. See white, adj., and cf. red clock; and see note at clock, 2.

white coat. A prison-hospital officer: conviets': C. 20. Jock of Dartmoor, Dartmoor from Within, 1932. Ex the white coat he wears on duty.

white coffee. Bootleg liquor: racketeers': since ca. 1922. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; after 1934, merely reminiscent. Euphemistic.

white collar, adj.; esp. in 'white collar begging' and 'the white collar racket': Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'Most interesting among the beggars is the man, the well-dressed and able-bodied individual, who begs on the strength of his affiliations. These are the men who make a speciality of exploiting their membership in fraternal organizations' (1923); by 1930, s. But white-collar front, a bluff of respectability, may have remained c. until ca. 1940.

white cross (or W—C—). Cocaine: 1922, Dialect Notes, Whitney H. Wells, 'Words Used in the Drug Traffic'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Differentiated from Red Cross (morphine).

White Ewe, the. An underworld nickname for a woman, esp. a 'wife' or mistress, of the underworld: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'And as the men have Nicknames, so likewise have the Women: for some of them are called The white Ewe, the Lambe, &c. And (as I have heard) there was an Abram, who called his Mort, Madam Wap-apace'; 1698, B.E. (a beautiful, important woman of the underworld—see ewe); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (white ewe, a beautiful woman); † by 1850.

white eye. 'New England rum; Indian "fire-water" (brandy)', Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872: 1827 (D.A.E.); 1890, B & L, who define it as 'maize whisky'; 1891, Maitland, 'Bad whisky'; 1931, IA, implies its obsolescence as 'New England rum' and, in any sense, as c.; but prob. it never was c. Ex its 'colourlessness'—its whiteness. Perhaps ex English military s. white eye, 'a very strong and deleterious kind of whisky, so called because its potency is believed to turn the eyes round in the sockets, leaving the whites only visible' (H, 1874).

white gut. Liver sausage; any sausage in a white skin: convicts': since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933.

white hawser. A silver chain: 1925, Leverage; extant. Contrast red hawser; cf. cable, n.; and see white, adj.

white hedge green, turn a; mostly as vbl n 'Stealing linen off hedges—"snow-gathering" and "turning a white hedge green", as they phrase it': 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, i; † by 1910. A poetic variation of the snow theme.

white house. A jail, a prison: 1925, Leverage; extant. Many jails are white-painted; and there is a humorous reference to The White House.

white it out. To serve a prison-sentence in preference to paying a fine: Australian: late C. 19–20. Baker, 1942. To whitewash, to expiate, the crime.

white Jenny. A foreign-made silver watch: ca. 1850–1910. F & H. See jenny and white, adj.

white kale. Silver money: 1925, Leverage; extant. See the elements.

white light. A silver watch: 1889, B & L (at blowing: see blow out); rather ob. Cf. red light, and see white, adj.

white line. Alcohol: since ca. 1905: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang', where it is defined as alcoholic drinker, which would be white-liner; 1925, Leverage, 'Alcohol and water'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'We . . . give the office for hootch, but all we could glom was a shot of white line'; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Raw alcohol. Also, by extension, any poor liquor'; extant. Cf. white tape.

white-line stiff; white-liner. A (regular) drinker of alcohol: 1918, Leon Livingston (white-line stiff); April 1919, The (American) Bookman, Moreby Acklom, '“Wise-Cracking” Crook Novels' (white-liner); 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo (the longer term); 1928, J. K. Ferrier, 'Crime in the United States' in his Crooks and Crime (the shorter); extant. Ex white line.

white lot. A silver watch and chain: 1904, F & H; extant. See lot and white, adj.

white meat. White girls and young women for prostitution, either among Negroes or in the East: white-slavers': C. 20. Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940. See meat.

white money. "White money" was the silver and small change taken from a safe, Henry Leverage, 'The Man Inside'—Flynn's, Jan. 8, 1927; extant—but not very gen. See white, adj.

white mosquitoes. Cocaine: addicts': 1942, BVB. Cf white cross.

white mouse. See mice, white.

white mule. Spirituous liquor, esp. whiskey: April 28, 1928, Flynn's, 'Cops Fail to Stop Truck of "White Mule"' (A Short Fact Story); 1930, Lennox Kerr, Backdoor Guest; 1931, Stiff, 'Old-fashioned white corn[-]whiskey'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Corn liquor'; 1933, Ersine; extant. White: its colour (approximately); mule: from its 'kick'.

white nurse. See trained nurse.

white one is the American form of white 'un (a silver watch): 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 'The Tramps' Jargon'; 1931, IA; extant.

white poodle. A white upper coat: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; † by 1890. A synonym of lily benjamin.

white port, gin: possibly c., but much more prob. s.: 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. Cf. white wine.

white powder. Powdered narcotics: since ca. 1910. BVB. Euphemistic.

white prop. A diamond pin: 1859, H; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; extant. See prop, n.; white, ex the colour.

white ribbon, 'gin', may, ca. 1800–20, have been c., but prob. it was always s. (Lex. Bal., 1811: w. ribbin.) Cf. white tape for semantics.

white satin. Gin: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; app. (low) s. by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.). Prob. suggested by white tape.

white sheep. See black cap.

white silk. 'Morphine in crystal form,' Kernôt, 1929–31; extant. Cf. white stuff, 2.

white slang. A silver watch-chain: late C. 19–20. (Leverage, 1925.) See the elements.

white sneezer. A silver snuff-box: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary); extant. See white, n. and adj., and sneezer.

white soup. Silver plate melted down to prevent discovery of the stolen goods: 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London, II, i; 1833, W. Leman Rede, The Rake's Progress, II, ii, 'Vot, a fence—white soup, hey?'; before 1845, R. H. Barham, 'The Wondrous Tale of Ikey Solomons'; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1909, Ware; extant. Ex its molten state, which resembles a thick soup.

white stuff. Silver coins, esp. if counterfeit: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; in 1904, F & H define it as 'a silver watch and chain'; 'silver jewellery' is the predominant sense in C. 20—witness also Joseph Augustin, The Human Vagabond, 1933. Cf. red stuff and yellow stuff.—2. Cocaine; after ca. 1930, often morphine: U.S.A.: 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, "There's quite a trade in laudanum . . . The white Stuff's on the up-and-up too"; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'White stuff. Morphine or cocaine'; 1925, Leverage, 'White Stuff, n., Morphine'; July 3, 1926, Flynn's (morphine); 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; March 2, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington'; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full (current in Britain since ca. 1930); extant. 'In France cocaine used to be referred to as la fée blanche': Ferd. Tuohy, Inside Dope, 1934.—3. Alcohol: bootleggers' (U.S.A.): 1930, Burke; by 1935, ob.—4. Diamonds: since ca. 1930. Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941. Both 3 and 4: obviously ex colour.

white super. A silver watch: mid-C. 19–20 (e.g., Leverage, 1925.)

white swelling. 'A good dollop of silver': 1823, Jon Bee; † by 1900. See white, n.; there is a pun on the s. sense of white swelling.

white tape. Gin: 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker, 'Sir, you may have what you please. Right Nants [brandy], or South-Sea or White Tape, or Meat, Drink, Washing and Lodging, or Diddle; or, in plain English, Geneva'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, by whose time this phrasal term seems to have > s.

white thimble. A silver watch: C. 20. Leverage, 1925. See the elements.

white toy. A silver watch: prob. since ca. 1860: 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H (at toy); extant. See white, adj., and toy; contrast red toy.

white 'un. A silver watch: 1874, H; 1885, Michael Davitt, A Prison Diary; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; slightly ob. Opp. red 'un: see white, adj.

white velvet. Gin: 1859, Matsell; † by 1930. Cf. white satin.

white wedge, 'a silver watch and chain' (F & H), is, I believe, an error.

white wine, 'gin', is (despite Egan's Grose, 1823), not c., but buckish s. of ca. 1812–35.

white-wing, 'a street-cleaner': not c., but s. Fred D. Pasley, Al Capone, 1931.

white wood. See sense 2 of:— white wool. 'The silver which they pick up'—respectably, steal—'by this wandering'—the practice of trimming, q.v.—'is White-wooll' (Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9): ca. 1605–70. For origin, cf. white; with wool, cf. sheep-shearer.—2. Hence, silver (esp. silver coinage) of any kind: ca. 1670–1870. In B.E., 1698; A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, where it is misprinted w. wood; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1900.—3. Geneva, i.e., gin: 1785, Grose. But this sense is prob. s. Cf. white tape.

Whitechapel, not itself c., connotes underworld or, at best, slum associations in such phrases as Whitechapel portion and Whitechapel beau, 'who dresses with a needle and thread, and undresses with a knife' (Grose, 1785); cf. St Giles.

Whitechapel portion (or fortune) is much less likely to be c. than to be s.: the former, ca. 1690–1830; the latter, C. 19. B.E., 1698, defines it as 'two torn Smocks, and what Nature gave', the reference being to that which, in poor Whitechapel, a girl brought as her marriage-portion: her charm and her 'charms'. Cf. the s. Rochester portion, q.v., in my Dict. of Slang.

whites. See white, n., 2.

whither. See witcher, 2.

whitler. See whittler.

whitt or W—. See Whit.

Whittington; Whittington College. The former (1610, S. Rowlands, Martin Mark-All) shortens the latter (1592, The Defence of Conny-catching, by 'Cuthbert Cunny-catcher, Licentiate in Whittington Colledge'); both terms together with the mediate Whittington's (College) had, by 1676, given way to the Whit (or w—), q.v. at Whit. In a lateral gloss, the 'collegiate' has: 'Newgate builded by one Whittington'. Newgate Prison was erected before 1241; rebuilt in C. 17 and again in the latter half of C. 18; abolished and pulled down in 1902. See also whit.

Whittington's (College). See Whittington.

whittle, v. See whiddle, v., 2, ref. of 1744. Also in Swift, 1727, and in H, 5th ed., 1874.

whittler. A constable: 1907 (see town whittler): 1928, Chicago May; 1931, IA, 'The town marshal or constable'—in a rural district; 1933, Ersine (whittler); 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra; extant. Short for town whittler, q.v.

whiz or whizz, n. The whiz(z) is the art and craft of pickpocketry: prob. from as early as 1905; 1925, Rev. Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, 'Some of the boys'—criminals of any age—are "on the whiz" (pickpockets), or "go screwing" (burglars) or "telling the tale" (confidence trick), or go "tweedling"; Aug. 11, 1928, Flynn's (U.S.A.), Don H. Thompson, 'Twenty Years outside the Law'; 1933, Eagle (U.S.A.); 1933, Ersine; 1934, James Spenser, Limey Breaks In; 1934, Convict; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1938, Convict 2nd; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, where it is spelt wizz; extant. Ex the speed at which he works.—2. 'A fast or unusually capable worker,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: U.S.A.: ca. 1910–30, then s. Prob. a corruption of 'wizard' (Irwin), its form influenced by the notion of speed in whizz!—3. (Ex sense 1.) A pickpocket: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; extant.

whiz (usually whizz), v. To pick the pocket of: since ca. 1918. Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals, 1926, "Hullo, how are you?" he said. "I thought someone was trying to 'whiz' me"; extant. Ex the n.—2. V.i., to pick pockets, be a pickpocket: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant.

whiz(z), on the. See whiz(z), n.

whiz(z)-bang. A mixture of cocaine and morphine: drug addicts': since ca. 1918. Howard N. Rose, 1934; BVB, 1942. Suggested by bang (dose of a drug); with reminiscence of the German field-gun of 1914–18—the '77 or whizz-bang (esp. the shell or its explosion); and cf. speed-ball, 3.

whiz(z) boy; or hyphenated. A pickpocket: 1931, Margery Allingham, Policemen at the Funeral; 1934, Philip Allingham, Cheapjack; extant. Ex whiz, n., 1.

whiz cop. 'A detective on the pickpocket squad,' Ersine, 1933; extant. See whiz, n.

whizz-game. Pickpocketry; esp. jostling of 'prospects' by one crook to enable another to pick their pockets: since ca. 1920. James Spenser, Limey Breaks In, 1934. See whizz, n. and v.

whiz(z) man; or hyphenated. A pickpocket: from ca. 1920, at the very latest: 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House; 1934, James Spenser, Limey Breaks In; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; since ca. 1935, also Australian, as in Baker, 1942; extant. Ex whizz, n., 1.

whizz mob. A pickpocket gang: 1929, George Dilnot, Triumphs of Detection, 'A "wizz mob" which operated, say, at Hammersmith, would immediately suspend business if they saw a local detective in the vicinity. But this type of gang slipped up again and again when a detachment of the Flying Squad stole upon them unawares'; 1933, George Dilnot, The Real Detective; 1934, Philip Allingham, Cheapjack; by 1934, also U.S.—witness Howard N. Rose; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1941, Jim Phelan, Murder by Numbers; 1943, Black; extant. See whiz, n., 1. whizzer. An expert pickpocket; if in a gang, the actual stealer: 1925, Netley Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook; 1926, N. Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1928, Chicago May; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades; 1934, David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live; 1935, D. Hume, Gaol Gates; 1938, F. D. Sharpe, who spells it wizzer; 1939, D. Hume, Death before Honour; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena; extant. Ex whiz, v.

whizzing. Pickpocketry: 1925, Netley Lucas, Autobiography; 1926, N. Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1931, Brown; 1934, Netley Lucas, My Selves; 1934, Axel Bracey, School for Scoundrels; 1934, Black; extant. Ex whiz, v.

whole. A (counterfeit) guinea-piece: counterfeiters': 1800 (see small one); † by 1900. Cf. half.

wholesaler. 'The "pimp" being referred to as the "retailer", and the manager of houses [i.e., of brothels] as the "wholesaler".' The Rockefeller Grand Jury Presentment, Jan. 3, 1910, reprinted in Clifford G. Roe, Horrors of the White Slave Trade, 1911. Euphemistic or, perhaps rather, callously commercial.

whop and whisper. 'Whop. Less than thirty days; more than fifteen days,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: convicts': 1904, ibid., p. 267, 'He calls out his remaining time [in prison] . . . "two [months] and a whop", or "one and a whisper", as the case may be', whence it is clear that a whisper is 'some period of not more than fifteen days'; 1925, Leverage, 'Whop, n. the term of between fifteen and thirty days in prison' ibid., 'Whisper, n., Any term under fifteen days in jail'; 1932, Lewis E. Lawes, 20,000 Years in Sing Sing; extant.

whop-straw; Johnnie w—s—. A countryman, a rustic: 1860, H, 2nd ed. (both terms), 'Johnny Whop-Straw, in allusion to threshing'; by 1890 (B & L), low s. Ex his threshing wheat, etc.

whoppin(g). A share of booty: Scottish: ca. 1850–1910. James McGovan, Brought to Bay, "You've got it already—the whoppin' . . . The money's ours, an' we mean to keep it". For the semantics, cf. whack, v., and n., 1.

whore's bird, kitling, son, for 'a bastard', are not c., but s., as also is the first in the sense of 'a debauched fellow'.

whore's curse, a gold coin worth five shillings, is s., not c. Grose, 1785.

whore's get. A white-slaver: C. 20. Partridge, 1938, 'Usually hoorsget'. Lit., whore's bastard.

whorl, v.; whorls. To take finger-prints; finger-prints: 1925, Leverage: not c., but police and journalists' s.

whyd, whydd, whydde. C. 16–17 variants of whid. Harman, 1566, has the second and the third.

Whyos. 'A name for a large gang or class of the lowest villains and vilest desperadoes in New York,' B & L, 1890: ca. 1870–95. The Whyo Gang—its leader's surname was Whyo—operated in the Sixth Ward: see Jacob A. Riis, How the Other Half Lives, 1891, pp. 227, 229–30, and Herbert Asbury, 'The Old-Time Gangs of New York' in The American Mercury, Aug. 1927.

whypiack(e). See whipjack.

wibble. 'Sad drink'; inferior liquor, esp. if beer or ale: 1728, D. Defoc, Street-Robberies consider'd; 1785, Grose, who implies that it is s., which it had prob. > by 1770 or thereabouts. Prob. ex the fact that it gives one's belly the wibble-wobbles or makes it go wibble-wobble.—2. An auger: U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; app. † by 1900. Ex its motion.

wicher. See witcher.

wick snuffed. See have one's wick snuffed.

wicket, 'a casement', is classified by B.E. as c. in this sense: but both Coles, 1676, and Grose, defining it thus, say nothing of a c. use: presumably, therefore, we must adjudge B.E. to have erred and the term to have been always S.E.

wickey or wicky. A lock-up; a police station: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; rather ob. Ex the Red Indians' wickiup (a small tepee).

wid. See whid, v.

widdle, n. See whiddle, n.

widdle, v. See whiddle, v., esp. in sense 4 (to shine).

widdy, the. His [a hotel thief's] tools . . . consist of . . . a small drill; a file; a "sectional stem"—or what is called the "widdy": 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; ibid., 'Where there is a bolt on the inside of the door, a hole is bored through the door from the inside immediately over the handle or knob, for the introduction of the "sectional stem" and "The sectional stem" is . . . a very useful tool in the hands of an expert workman. It is made of fine steel or iron and consists of two pieces of metal, one of which is about eight inches long, and the other about two inches, and is about as thick as a small brad-awl . . . This "sectional stem" is used for slipping the bolts on the inside of a door'; at pp. 93–4, however, Pinkerton differentiates the widdy from the sectional stem, for he says that 'The "widdy" is a small piece of bent wire with a string attached, forming a sort of bow . . . The "widdy" will operate the finest night-latch in existence'; † by 1920. Jocular. No connexion with widdy, Scottish for a 'withy'; prob. with a pun on widdy, a widow, for widows are so very knowledgeable.

wide. Alert; shrewd; experienced; esp., shrewd and experienced: 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life, (concerning a confirmed criminal) 'He is considered by the warders a very "wide man"—a "man of the world". He looks after their interests, and they look after his . . . He is such a "wide man" that he never gets a report, and will consequently obtain the whole of his remission'; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'I got in company with some of the widest (cleverest) people in London'; 1890, B & L; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago, 'Crafty rogues—"wide as Broad Street", as their proverb [sic] went'; 1899, C. Rook, The Hooligan Nights, '"Lunnun's a very wide place, an' there's some wide people in it, an' don't you forget it"'; 1904, F & H, who classify it as low s.—by 1910, it certainly was s.; it still is low. To the U.S.A., however, it went ca. 1930: and there it is still c.: BVB, 1942. Abbr. S.E. wide-awake, 'alert'.

wide as Broad Street, as. See wide, ref. of 1899.

wide boys is a C. 20 generic term for those who live by their wits, esp. gamblers, petty swindlers, race-gangsters, the lesser 'con men', dishonest motor-car salesmen, and the like, as in Robert Westerby's Wide Boys Never Work, 1937. See wide; cf. spiv.

wide open. See dust tight.

widgeon, in its secondary S.E. sense, is a simpleton; hence, in c., it is a dupe, esp. the dupe of sharpers: ca. 1670–1830. Richard Head, Proteus Redivivus, 1675 (see quot'n at woodcock, 2).

wido, n. A hooligan: Glasgow c. (and low s.); late C. 19–20. MacArthur & Long, No Mean City, 1935. Ex:—

wido, adj. Wide-awake, alert; cunning: 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen; by 1900, low s. Wide + the Cockney suffix o.

widow the, 'the gallows', is wrongly classified as c. in F & H, 1904.

wife. A pimp's favourite mistress, esp. if she is one of the prostitutes working for him: white-slavers': since ca. 1870. Mrs A. Mackirdy & W. N. Willis, The White Slave Traffic, 1912; Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, 'Tell her that she'll never be more than a "stepney" for me, that I've got a "wife" I'm fond of,' 1940, Robert Neumann, 23 Women; extant.—2. 'A fetter fixed to one leg': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1859, H, 'Prison (cant)'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'The ball and chain used to prevent escape from a road . . . gang'; extant. Cf. married.—3. See woman.

wig, n. A judge (in court): 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); 1925, Leverage; in U.S.A., † by 1937 (Irwin); by 1930 at latest, current in Britain, where it is extant; Nov. 1943, Lilliput, article by 'Lemuel Gulliver'. Ex the wig he wears in court.

wig, v. To 'move off, go away.—North Country Cant': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; ob. Ex dial. wig, v.i., 'to wag, to waggle'.

wiggen. The neck: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900. Ex the wig that used to cover it?

wiggle out. To defeat a criminal charge ('beat a rap'): 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. S.E. wiggle out of something.

wikkel. A police van: S. Africa: since ca. 1905. The Cape Times, June 3, 1946 (also C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946). Afrikaans: lit., 'wobble'.

wild. A village: 1839, Brandon; 1859, Matsell; 1860, H, 2nd ed., 'Tramps' term'; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1896, B & L, 'The country, a village'; 1904, F & H; rather ob. Prob. ex vile or vill and suggested by wilderness.

wild dell. A born, young whore of the underworld, esp. in vagabondia; cf. therefore, wild rogue, q.v.: 1566, Harman (see the quot'n at dell), would seem to be the earliest record; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'Of these Dells, some are termed Wilde Dells, and those are such as are borne and begotten under a hedge'; 1611, Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 'My dell and my dainty wilde del'; as c., prob. † by 1690. See dell.

wild province. A village: ca. 1860–1905. Recorded in 1889 (see certain rest). An elaboration of wild.

wild rogue. 'A wilde Roge is he that hath no abiding place but by his coulour of going abroad to beg, is commonly to seeke some kinsman of his, and all that be of hys corporation be properly called Roges,' Awdeley, 1562; Harman, four years later, distinguishes between Rogues and Wild Rogues, for having treated of the former, he gives to the latter a separate section, which runs thus: 'A wilde Roge is he that is borne a Roge: he is a more subtil and more geven by nature to all kinde of knavery then the other [i.e., the Rogue], as beastely begotten in barne or bushes, and from his infancye traded up in trechery; yea, and before ripenes of years doth permyt, wallowing in lewde lechery, but that is counted amongst them no sin. For this is their custome, that when they mete in barne at night, every one getteth a make to lye wythall, and their chaunce to be twentye in a companye, as their is sometye more and sometye lesse: for to one man that goeth abroad, there are at the least two women, which never make it straunge when they be called, although she never knewe him before. Then when the day doth appeare, he rouses him up, and shakes his eares, and awaye wandering where he may gette oughte to the hurte of others. Yet before he skypeth oute of hys couche and departeth from his darling, if he like her well, he will appoint her where to mete shortly after with a warninge to worke warely for some chetes, that their meting might be the merier . . . I once rebuking a wyld roge because he went idelly about, he shewed me that he was a begger by enheritance—his Grandfather was a begger, his father was one, and he must needs be one by good reason.' Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608, adds that 'So much doe they scorne any profession, but their owne: they have bin Rogues themselves and disdaine that their children should be otherwise. The Wilde Rogues (like wilde geese) keepe in flockes, and all the day loyter in the fields, if the weather bee warme, and at Brick-kils, or else disperse themselves in cold weather, to rich mens doores, and at night have their meetings in Barnes or other out places,' where they behave in the manner described by Harman. Holme, The Academy of Armory, 1688, defines them as 'Mad Men, Bedlams, called also Mad Toms'; 1698, B.E., 'Wild-Rogues, c. the fifth Order of Canters, such as are train'd up from Children to Nim Buttons off Coats, to creep in at Cellar and Shop-windows, and to slip in at Doors behind People; also that have been whipt, Burnt in the Fist and often in Prison for Roguery'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; Grose. But the term, as c., was almost certainly † by 1750, any later references being merely historical. Cf. sturdy rogue.

wilds, the. The country (as opposed to the town): 1904, Life in Sing Sing (see quot'n at tail, v.); ob. Cf. wild.

Wilkie. Tobacco; esp. among convicts: since ca. 1930. Axel Bracey, Flower on Liberty, 1940, '"A lovely bit of Wilkie in the shoe . . .!" He . . . extracted the wad of tobacco from his shoes.' Strictly, a flat packet of tobacco. Ex rhyming s., Wilkie Bard, 'a card'.

William. A $1000 or other large bill (bank-note): 1933, Ersine; extant. By pun on bill: Bill.

William S. Hart. The pose a drug addict assumes when he stands with his hypodermic in his hand, just before making the injection: drug addicts': 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex the name of a well-known American actor.

willie. A passive male homosexual: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1942, BVB, with variant painted Willie; extant. A weeping-willow Willie.

willies, the. The Good Will Industries sponsored and conducted by the Methodists: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1920. Stiff, 1931.

willow. 'Poor, and of no Reputation': 1698, B.E.; Grose; † by 1850. Perhaps = willowy, slim and supple, hence weak and easily swerved or bent, hence poor and frail.

Wilson, Dr. See Doctor Wilson.

Wimpey. A hamburger: 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex J. Wellington Wimpey, who, a character in the world-famous comic-strip series 'Popeye', is inordinately fond of hamburgers. (This is also the origin of the R.A.F. Wellington bomber thus nicknamed.) win, n.; in C. 16-17, often wyn. (The pl. is sometimes win: see, e.g., five win.) A penny: 1536, Copland (wyn); 1566, Harman, 'A wyn, a penny'; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light (at 'The Canters Dictionarie'), repeats Harman's spelling; 1610, Rowlands (winne); 1665, R. Head (win); 1688, Holme (wyn); 1698, B.E. (win and winne); 1707, J. Shirley; 1714, Alex. Smith; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1753, John Poulter; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (winn); 1809, Andrewes (whinn); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, J. Burrows; 1823, Bee (win and whinn); 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H—but was it not † by then? The U.S. sense, 'a cent' (Matsell, 1859), may have survived until ca. 1890. The origin is obscure: perhaps cf. Cymric gwyn, 'white', in allusion to silver pennies; as the second element in compounds, often wyn; the usual Cymric word for silver, however, is arian. If not of Cymric origin, it may derive ex Winchester: cf. Winchester.—2. Usually in pl. A scull, an oar: 1698, B.E., 'Let's take an Ark and Winns, c. let us hire a Skuller'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725, and in Grose, 1785; † by 1860. Prob. the word is cognate with the S.E. v. winnow: hence, a win is that which harvests water. Or it may be merely a variation of wing in pair of wings, q.v.

win, v.t. To steal: 1688, Holme, 'Woune, stolne'; 1698, B.E., 'The Cull has won a couple of Rum glim-sticks, c. the Rogue has Stole a pair of Silver-Candlesticks'; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1891, Jacob A. Riis, How the Other Half Lives (U.S.A.); by 1900 in Britain and by 1920 in U.S.A., it was low s. Euphemistic: cf. make (v.).

Winchester. A penny: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; † by 1900. Perhaps elaboration of win, n., 1.

'wind, a Penny' occurs in Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708: almost certainly a misprint for win, n.—2. See next entry, where it = transportation.

wind, (be) lagged for one's. 'A man transported for his natural life, is said to be lag'd for his wind, or to have knap'd a winder or a bellowser, according to the humour of the speaker': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890. Such a sentence to imprisonment takes away one's breath: cf. winder.

wind, cut one's. See cut quick sticks.

wind, get off for one's. To (escape hanging and) receive a mere sentence of transportation: ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack; † by 1870. Cf. wind, be lagged for one's.

wind-bag. See windbag.

wind jammer. See windjammer.

wind-pudding. '[Tramps]' endurance . . . is something remarkable. I have known them to live on "wind-puddin'", as they call air, for over forty-eight hours without becoming exhausted,' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899: 1903, Flynt, The Rise of Ruderick Clowd; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Feb. 1) it was s. Wind = (1) pulmonary powers of endurance; (2) emptiness, a something unsustaining.

wind-stopper. 'Choker, or Wind-Stopper, a garrotter': 1859, H; 1904, F & H; ob. A suffocator.

wind-tormentors. 'Whiskers, especially those of luxuriant, heavy growth,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1905.

windbag, 'a mystery packet': cheapjacks' s. Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934.

winded. See:—

winded-settled. 'Transported for life': 1859, H, 1st ed. (and in successive editions). This is, I suggest, an error: I propose that H's entry (copied by his successors) should read thus: 'Winded, "settled", transported for life', for settled does mean 'transported for life'; that winded means the same appears from:—

winder. 'Transportation for life. The blowen has napped a winder for a lift; the wench is transported for life for stealing in a shop': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1887, Baumann. For the semantics, see bellowser and cf. winded-settled.

winding-post, nap the. To be transported as a convict: 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1880. Prob. suggested by wind, be lagged for one's or by winder.

windjammer. An informer; more usually, merely a garrulous fellow: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (latter); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Squeal', and 'Wind jammer'; extant. Cf. windy.

window. An eye: 1933, Ersine; extant. It 'lets in' the light and one sees through it.

window(-)fishing. 'Burglarious entry at a window': 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; ob.

window-tapper. A prostitute: late C. 19-20; slightly ob. BVB, 1942. Ex one of her little tricks.

windows. Spectacles: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. c. window, 'eye': one sees through a window and with one's eyes.

winds do whirl, the. A girl: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; much less used than twist (and twirl).

windy. Talkative: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Windy. Loquacious'; 1933, Ersine, 'Talkative, boastful; especially regarding past jobs'; extant. Cf. gassy.

wine with the parson. See take wine . . .

wing, n. A small piece from a leaf or sliver of leaf tobacco: convicts': 1874, James Greenwood, The Wilds of London, 'There is a regular scale of value for [this tobacco]. "One wing" (just a skiver of a single leaf) is worth a "sixer" (a 6 oz. loaf): 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life, 'I'll give you a "wing of snout" (. . . a taste of tobacco)'; 1890, B & L; 1902, J. Greenwood, The Prisoner in the Dock; 1904, F & H; extant. It is very light of weight; a bird is 'light on the wing'. —2. See woolbird. —3. A penny: English tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (p. 241); 1904, F & H; 1933, Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby; extant. A corruption of win, n., 1.

wing, v. 'The English family—hovering about the corner—to "wing" every stranger' (glossed by Godfrey Irwin, in a private letter, thus: 'Reference is to robbing passers-by'), The National Police Gazette, June 20, 1846; ob. Ex sporting j.: wing, 'to hit a bird on its wing; to break its wing'.

wing waiter, the. The prison mail-carrier (for distribution): convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Perhaps ironic on (by) pigeon post.

wingding. A phonetic inaccuracy for whingding. Ersine, 1933; Rose, 1934.

wings. See pair of wings. —2. Cocaine: U.S.A.: 1922, Dialect Notes, Whitney Hastings Wells, 'Words Used in the Drug Traffic'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex the literally elevating effect it has on the addict. —3. The boards carried by a sandwich-man: tramps' and beggars': 1932 (see angel, 4); extant.

wingy. 'A person with one arm,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hobos and, after him, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923, who apply it to a tramp or hobo train-rider that has lost one or both arms; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1931, Stiff, 'Wingey—Hobo with one arm or crippled arm. Also army'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road (an armless beggar); extant. Ex s. wing, an arm; cf. winged, wounded in the arm.

wink, tip the, to give a sign or signal, seems to have been c. during the approx. period 1680–1750: 1698, B.E., 'He tipt the Wink, c. he gave the Sign or Signal'; Grose, however, records it as s. Lit., give a wink. See also tip the wink.

winn or winne. See win, n.

winnings. Booty, in the underworld: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, cites as the last of the ten articles of the fraternities of rogues and vagabonds, 'Thou shalt take Cloathes, Hennes, Gecse, Pigs, Bacon, and such like, for thy Winnings, where-ever thou canst have them'; 1785, Grose, 'Plunder, goods, or money acquired by theft'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1900. Ex win, v.

winns. See win, n., 2.

winoes or winos. 'The wine dumps, where wine bums or "winos" hung out, interested me,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926; 1931, Stiff, 'Winoes—Those who drink the dago red wine of California'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Workers in the grape harvest, or those employed in a vineyard . . . Frequently used in the West, seldom in the East'; extant.

Winter Headquarters. Devon and Cornwall: tramps': late C. 19–20. W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 1936. Thanks to their climate, tramps tend to go there for the winter; cf. the next two entries.

winter palace. A prison: 1887, Baumann; very ob. Humorous; ex the fact that some criminals get themselves into prison for the winter months.

winter stake. 'Money acquired and hoarded during the summer or working season to carry one through the winter or slack season, Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1905. See stake, n. and v.

wipe, n. A blow: 1698, B.E., 'He tipt him a rum Wipe, c. he gave him a swinging Blow'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by ca. 1865, low s. Ex such euphemistic phrases as wipe a person's face, give him a wipe over the face. —2. Hence, an adverse reflection, a bitter comment, a reproach: 1698, B.E., 'I gave him a Wipe, I spoke something that cut him, or gaul'd him'—repeated in A Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1840. —3. A handkerchief; in C. 19, usually a cotton one: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1714, Alex. Smith; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1753, Poulter, The Discoveries; 1773, Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles); 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1824, P. Egan; 1827, Sessions Papers; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1843, W. J. Moncrieff; 1848, The Man in the Moon; from before 1850, current in U.S.A. (Judson); 1859, H. who implies that it is †; 1863, A Lancashire Thief; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years; 1874, Marcus Clarke; 1886, Allan Pinkerton (U.S.A.: see pit, 3); 1887, W. E. Henley; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; by 1890, also low s. (B & L); 1896, E. W. Hornung, The Rogue's March; 1896, Popular Science Monthly (U.S.A.); by 1900, no longer to be classified as c. in England; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (article by J. M. Sullivan); 1931, IA; 1934, Rose; extant. One wipes one's nose therewith. —4. A confidence game: U.S.A.: since the 1920's. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937.

wipe, v. To refuse, to deny (a loan): since ca. 1920. Partridge, 1938. Perhaps ex wipe out, 'to cancel'.

wipe-drawer. A pickpocket that specializes in handkerchiefs: 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, Baumann; † by 1910. See wipe, 3.

wipe-hauler; w.-hauling. Stealer, stealing, of pocket handkerchiefs: since ca. 1840: 1859, H (at snotter); 1893 (see thimble-twisting); † by 1910. See wipe, n., 3.

wipe-lay, the. The practice of stealing handkerchiefs: 1726, Alex. Smith, Jonathan Wild; † by 1860. Ex wipe, n., 3, and lay, n., 2.

wipe-lifter. 'The handkerchief thief, or "wipe lifter", is the lowest grade of pocket picking': 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; ob. See wipe, n., 3.

wipe-nabber. A pickpocket specializing in handkerchiefs: 1800, The Oracle ('Fashionable Characters'); † by 1870. See wipe, n., 3, and nabber.

wipe (a person's) nose. Thus in B.E., 1698, 'He Wipt his Nose, c. he gull'd him'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1750. Cf. wipe, n., 1.

wipe-prigging, n. Handkerchief-stealing: 1789, G. Parker (see spell, n., 2); 1792, The Minor Jockey Club; † by 1880. See the elements.

wipe the clock. To halt; to stop quickly or abruptly whatever one may happen to be doing: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'From the railroad, where a full application of the air brakes . . . so reduces the air pressure that the hand on the gauge or "clock" flies around to zero' (Irwin).

wiper. A handkerchief: 1626, Ben Jonson; 1698, B.E., 'Nim the Wiper, c. to Steal the Handkerchief'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; in C. 19 Britain, low s.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.)—as wiper; † by 1880. One wipes one's nose therewith.—2. An assassin, a professional killer: U.S. racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'They got a St Louis wiper in Spike's mob'; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. s. wipe out, 'to kill; to massacre'.

wiper-drawer. A handkerchief-stealer: 1698, B.E.; in 1725, A New Canting Dict. delimits them as the 38th Order of Villains; 1785, Grose; † by 1860. See wiper and draw.

wire, n. 'He was worth 20 l. a week, he said, as a wire, that is, a picker of ladies' pockets', states, in 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 410: but is not wire any pickpocket, moll wire a pickpocket operating against women? Perhaps orig. it was employed to distinguish it from buzzer, q.v. at the 1851 quot'n. H, 1859, supports Mayhew—but prob. he is merely copying him; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A pickpocket; the fellow who picks the pocket'; Nov. 1870, The Broadway; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1886, A Private Detective, Mysteries of Modern Roguery; 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; 1890, B & L; 1891, Darkness and Daylight (U.S.A.); 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (U.S.A.: Hapgood has also the synonymous dip and pick); 1904, F & H; Dec. 1918, J. M. Sullivan in The American Law Review; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights on Criminal Matters; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys (U.S.A.); 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, Kane; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth; 1928, John O'Connor; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Rose; Sept. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Convict 12627, 'The man who actually takes the pocket-book is known as a "wire" or "tool"'; 1938, E. L. Van Wagner, New York Detective; extant. Prob. ex the v.—2. A detective: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant, but rare.—3. Information: U.S.A.: from ca. 1920; by 1940, s. Rose, 1934. Ex Australian s. straight wire, 'reliable information'.—4. See wire, the.

wire, v. To be an expert pickpocket: 1850, implied in wiring; 1853, Mary Carpenter, Juvenile Delinquents; 1857, implied in wirer; 1857, implied in wiring; 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747, 'I used to go wirin' in the main-thoroughfares'; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); extant. Prob. ex the fact that the pickpocket, so prehensile are his fingers, draws things out as if the objects were on a wire.—2. Hence, v.t.: 1853, M. Carpenter, Juvenile Delinquents (reported confession of a young thief), 'If he was bigger he could wire a man of his poke'; 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747; in C. 20, also U.S.A.—as in Kernôt, 1929–31; extant.

wire, give (someone) the. To warn (an accomplice): 1931, Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Book; extant.

wire, the. A horse-race, or a stock-market, swindle, based upon a sucker's ability to meet his obligation if he should lose on the initial venture he could be allowed to win: 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 'What a face and figure for the "boats";—what a "steerer" for the "pay-off"—or the "wire"'; July 16, 1937, a New York Newspaper, in a short article on this swindle, says, 'It is one of our oldest flim-flammeries. So old that when the underworld wishes to rate a man's intelligence in the lowest possible brackets, it says of him, "He is ready for the wire"'; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland; extant. Ex the display of wholly or mostly bogus telegraphic 'fixings' in the store to which the fish is taken to be clipped.

wire(-)draw, v. 'To Fetch or'—surely a misprint for 'a'—'Trick to wheedle in Bubbles': 1698, B.E., who adds 'Wire-drawn, c. so serv'd'; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; app. † by 1810. To draw in as though by means of a wire.

wire(-)hook. A pickpocket: 1859, Matsell; ob. An elaboration of wire, n., 1; cf. hooker, 3.

wire in. To telegraph (advance) information about (a person), esp. to ensure his being 'protected': 1933, Ersine, 'wired in. Fixed with a politician'; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 'The criminal was "wired in" to this attorney before he ever reached the town'; extant.

wire-twisting. 'Catching ducks by a bait and hook Snagging, wire-twisting, bill-holding': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); slightly ob. See also snagging.

wired, 'crooked, fixed'; wired in, see wire in. Both in Ersine, 1933.

wireless. Macaroni: since the mid-1920's: 1934, Convict; extant. Ex the similarity, in appearance, of the inside of a wireless set to a large dish of macaroni.

wirer. A pickpocket: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1930. Cf. wire, n., 1, and v. Strictly, a wirer is a pickpocket using wire.

wires. 'Peddling articles made of stolen telegraph wires,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923—quoting, as authority, Leon Livingston's Madame Delcassee of the Hobos, 1918; extant.—2. As the wires, it = the electric chair: 1928, Chicago May; extant—but, since 1940, rarely used.

wiring, vbl n. Expert pickpocketry: 1850, a prison report (in The Prison Chaplain: a Memoir of John Clay, 1861); 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, 'S'elp me! if a mauley like that there ain't worth a jemmy a day to a kenobe at wiring'; extant. See wire, v.

wiring in the wilds. A burglar, or a bank-robbing gang's spotter at work, in advance, in small towns ('hick towns'): 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Ex telephone-linesmen's work.

wise, v. To advise, warn; to instruct, inform: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'All right, but get a move on. I've wised you'; ibid., the variant wise up, which, by 1918, was no longer c.; by 1930, s. Short for make (or render) wise, s. put wise.

wise, adj. Alert; shrewd; given to feathering one's own pocket: 1900, H. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, 'Pranker had not been let into the mysteries by which "fly cops" are rated "dead" and "wise"'; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, in nuance, 'wide awake to the tricks of the underworld'; 1904, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'Zack and I, who were "wise" (that is, up to snuff)'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Wise. Having an intelligent idea of what is going on in your immediate vicinity' by 1908, it was s. An underworld application (mere shrewdness as opposed to wisdom) of S.E. wise: cf. the Fr. sois sage! (be good), addressed to children.

wise bull. A detective officer: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Bulls'; extant. See the elements.

wise guy. A shrewd and skilful criminal; usually with a connotation of 'learned in the ways of the police': 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (see quot'n at Rufus); extant. A special application of the s. sense, 'a clever and/or prudent man'.

wise man. 'Wiseman [sic]. A person'—male—'having the appearance of an officer' (of police), No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; ob. Cf. prec.

wise money. 'Money supposed to be wagered on a sure thing,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; 1931, IA, 'Money placed as wagers by those with inside information, or money belonging to those "in the know"': by 1933, low and sporting s. See wise, adj.

wise mug. 'A yap, fuzztail,' Ersine, 1933; extant. See the elements.

wise up. See wise, v.

wiseman. See wise man.

wish! Be off!; away with you!: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1910. Perhaps ex whish!, be silent!

wish me luck. To evade, take evasive action; to run away, to escape: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1910. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on duck, 'to get out of the way'.

Wit. See Whit.

witch hazel. Heroin: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. The name of the cosmetic has been adopted because, to the addict, heroin is witching stuff—and because of the similarity in colour.

witcher; often spelt wicher. Silver; esp. in combination: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue—see witcher cully; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741 (see witcher cheat); 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1887 (Baumann). Perhaps a perversion of white (influenced by silver).—2. Hence, a silver bowl: 1809, Andrewes, who spells it whitcher and may also be mistaken in the sense he attributes to the term; 1848, Sinks of London, in the absurd spelling whither; † by 1870.

wi(t)cher bubbler. A silver bowl: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'The Cull is pik'd with the Witcher-bubber, c. the Rogue is marched off with the Silver-Bowl'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1870. See witcher, 1, and bubber, 2. witcher cheat. 'A Silver Tankard or Bowl': 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; † by 1870. Cf. prec.; cheat = thing.

wi(t)cher cully. A silversmith (contrast ridge cully, a goldsmith): 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley confuses it with witcher bubbler; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741 (see Whetshire cully); 1785, Grose; † by 1870. See the elements.

wi(t)cher tilter. A silver-kilted sword: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'He has bit, or drawn the Witcher-tilter, c. he has Stole the Silver-hilted Sword'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. See witcher and tilter.

with a load of coke under the skin. 'Under the influence of cocaine,' BVB: since ca. 1925. See load and coke.

witless. One who is serving time: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Only the mugs get caught: they all get caught: Q.E.D.

Witt, the. See whit.

wittle. See whiddle, v., 1, ref. of 1736.

wizz; wizz mob; wizzer. See whiz; whizz mob; whizzer.

wobble, v. To boil: 1725, The New Canting Dictionary; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies considered. This, however, despite the two authorities cited, was S.E. until ca. 1800, and then dial. The word is prob. echoic: cf. bubble.

wobble(-)shop. A shop 'where beer is sold without a licence': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. Cf. the nuances of S.E. shaky.

wobbler is synonymous with whingding, 1, q.v. Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942. Ex a person's wobbling as if about to faint.

wobbly. A member of the I.W.W.: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; by 1918, industrial slang,—indeed, it may have been adopted by tramps from the I.W.W. Ex 'International Workers of the World' by either a confused or a 'telescopic' merging of the second and fifth words.

wolf, n. An experienced tramp that travels with a boy or youth (a prushun), whom he trains in trampery and whom, much as a prefect a fag, he expects to do sundry odd jobs for him and, in many instances, to act as his catamite: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'The term "wolf" is often used synonymously with jocker'; 1931, Stiff, 'Older hobo exploiting the road kid. The pair is known as the wolf and the lamb'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—2. Hence, any active male pervert: mostly tramps': since ca. 1924: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor; 1935, Hargan; 1940, Leo L. Stanley, Men at Their Worst; 1942, BVB.—3. 'A "rambler" [q.v.], riding fast trains by virtue of nerve and main force, and despite the train crew's opposition,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1925. A wolf is courageous—and restless.—4. A detective: 1925, Leverage; extant. From the criminal viewpoint, he is 'a beast of prey'.—5. A 'lone wolf' criminal: 1933, Ersine; extant.

wolf, v., 'to steal, cheat out of' (B & L, 1890), is not c.

wolf in the breast, 'a gnawing pain in the breast', is a dodge employed by beggars in the country to excite compassion: Grose, 2nd ed., 1788: not c., but allusive S.E.

woman or wife. A boy catamite to a tramp or a hobo: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'It is not uncommon to hear a boy who is seen traveling with an older man spoken of as the "wife" or "woman"': 1931, Godfrey Irwin (wife only); 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime (the former); 1942, BVB (latter); both extant. Euphemistic.

woman of the town, 'at first used by Canters, but now also in common Speech, for a Prostitute or common Harlot,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; but the statement is very suspect.

wood, look through the. 'To stand in the pillory' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788): C. 18: not c., but s.—possibly journalistic s. The same remark applies to up to the arms in wood, 'in the pillory' (Lex. Bal., 1811).

wood butcher, 'an inexperienced or inferior carpenter'; not c., but s., despite its use by tramps (Stiff, 1931).

wood head. A woodsman, a lumberman: tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—2. The sense 'dolt' is s.

wood(-)merchant. 'A seller of lucifer matches': 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s.

wood-pecker. See woodpecker.

wood tick. A logger; an axeman: tramps': 1931, Stiff, 'Same as timber wolf'; by 1940, s. Humorously pejorative; cf. the neutral wood head.

wood(-)yard. 'Missions which have a wood-yard attached, where the tramp is made to saw or cut wood as a necessary qualification for a night's use of a bed,' Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938: tramps': since ca. 1918.

woodbird is Matsell's error for woolbird.

woodcock. See snipe, 1.—2. A dupe: 1675, R. Head, Proteus Redivivus, '[The Wheedle] sends them home pluckt as (Widgeons and Woodcocks) founder'd and tired'; † by 1780. A simple bird.

wooden, n. 'One month's imprisonment': not c., but low s., esp. showmen's, pitchmen's, cheap-jacks': C. 20. Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934.

wooden benjamin is a variant (? ca. 1810–50) of wooden habeas: 1828, G. G., History of George Godfrey. Cf. wooden surtout.

wooden coat is an American variant of the next: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910.

wooden habeas. A coffin: 1785, Grose, 'A man who dies in prison, is said to go out with a wooden habeas'; 1823, Bee, 'A coffin for an imprisoned debtor'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), as in Grose; † by 1890. Cf. wooden surtout; Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London, 1828, uses the (?) nonce-term, habeas corpus, a halter, or death by hanging.

wooden kimono. A coffin: since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933. Cf. wooden coat.

wooden parenthesis, 'a pillory' (Lex. Bal., 1811), is not c., but s.—perhaps journalistic s. Cf. iron parenthesis.

wooden(-)pecker. See woodpecker.

wooden ruff. 'Wooden-ruff, c. a Pillory, the Stocks at the other end . . . He wore the Wooden-ruff, c. He stood in the Pillory,' B.E., who hints that the term arose some years before 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, by whose time the term had app. > s. In 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, gives wooden ruffle as a C. 18 variant. A ruffle of wood.

wooden ruffle. See prec.

wooden surtout, 'a coffin', is s., not c. Grose, 1785. Cf. wooden habeas, q.v. In s. and dial., there are various other wooden terms for the same object. In U.S.A., it may possibly have been c.: witness Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872, where it is added that 'Its nails are termed the "buttons"'. woodpecker. A punter in a set game of cards or a set group of dicers, where there is a money stake and a 'gull' is to be fleeced: 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, where—see eagle—the various participants are classified and named. He makes his money, however, less by 'punting' than by obtaining an interest in the game by drawing, from the luckiest or the most skilful player and on the security of a watch or a jewel, a commission on every winning made by a chosen gambler. The term seems to have remained in use until ca. 1830;

B.E., 1698, has it; so has A New Canting Dict., 1725; and, in the erroneous form wooden-pecker, it appears in the 5th ed. (1760) of Bampfylde-Moore Carew; 1785. Grose.

woodrus. See jil to woodrus.

woody. Crazy; mad: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1930, Burke; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Rose; extant. Perhaps ex the deleterious effects of wood-alcohol, but prob. ex sense 2 of wood head.

wool. Courage, pluck: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by ca. 1870, boxing s. Cf. wooled.

wool-bird. See woolbird.

wool-drawer; mostly in pl. A C. 18 term, appearing first in Alex. Smith, The History of the Highwaymen, 1714, thus: 'Next he got into a Crew of Wool-drawers, who take their Name from the Theft they practice, which is, to snatch Cloaks, Hats or Perukes, in the Night; and these have no other Cunning, save the Occasion: they go ever by threes or fours, about nine or ten a Clock at Night, and if they do find a fit Opportunity they do not let it slip. Most commonly they go forth in the darkness and rainiest Nights, and to them Places which they see is most quiet and out of the way . . . These same Thieves too are accustomed sometimes to go in Lackies Cloaths, to come into some Masque or Feast, with pretence to look for their Masters, and with this Liberty they meet with a Heap of Cloaks, that the Gentlemen use to leave in the Hall, and nimbly take up two or three on their shoulders, and carry them away, saluting all them whom they meet with Cap in Hand.'

wool(-)hole. A workhouse; gen. the w.h., the workhouse: 1859, H; 1874, 'Detector', A Week in a Common Lodging-House; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1890 (B & L), low s. Adopted from printers' s. (Savage, A Dict. of Printing, 1841), where it derives ex wool-hole, a term in printers' j.

woolbird. A sheep: 1785, Grose; 1860, H, 2nd ed., 'Woolbird, a lamb; "wing of a woolbird"', a shoulder of lamb'; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L, who note that, by that date, it was also low s.; by 1900, no longer classifiable as c. Cf. woolly bird.

wooled or woolled. "You are not half-wooled", term of reproach from one thief to another': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by ca. 1870, boxing s. Cf. boxing-s. wool-topped 'un, 'plucky fellow': wool implies warmth, implies spirits, courage.

woollies, going with the. See sense 2 of:—

woolly, 'a blanket': s., not c. The same applies to the adjective woolly, 'out of temper; nervous, upset'.—2. Usually pl., woollies, 'sheep': Am. tramps': C. 20. Stiff, 1931, 'Going with the woollies means to take a job as sheep herder'.

woolly bird. 'Woolly-Birds, sheep': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1827, Sessions Papers, IV, trial of John Chapman; 1851, Mayhew; Nov. 1870, The Broadway. Cf. woolbird.

woolly(-)crown, 'a soft-headed fellow', is prob. not c., but s. It occurs, e.g., in the 5th ed. (1760) of Bampfylde-Moore Carew.

woolly West. The chest; breast: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

wop is a variant spelling of whop. Lewis E. Lawes, 1932.

wop football is a variant of Italian football (a bomb). David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live, 1934.

wop game. 'Swindle game worked on Italians,' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. Ex s. wop, 'an Italian'.

work, n. An illicit or a criminal enterprise or livelihood: 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'An offender having been detected in the very fact, particularly in cases of coining, colouring base-metal, &c., is emphatically said to have been grab'd at work, meaning to imply, that the proof against him being so plain, he has no ground of defence to set up'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, III ('At work'—engaged criminally); 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police; extant. Ex work, v., 3.—2. A card-sharper's marking of, or markings on, a playing-card: U.S.A.: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'He . . . put his "work" on them so he could read them from the back as easily as from the front'; extant.

work, v. To cheat: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'You give a shilling to buy a comb, for which he gives sixpence, so works you for another syebuck'; 1879, Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences (U.S.A.); 1933, Ersine, 'To con, swindle'; extant. Euphemistic.—2. See work for.—2a. See work the bulls.—3. To be engaged in a criminal or at the least an illicit enterprise or livelihood, esp. as in: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter (Glossary), '[What] lock do you cut [?]. . . By what way do you get your livelihood now? . . . Or, how do you work?'; 1812, J. H. Vaux (see work upon); 1823, Egan's Grose; 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III; 1839, W. A. Miles, 'Thieves do not work in their own neighbourhood'; 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1885, A. Griffiths; 1887, G. W. Walling (U.S.A.); 1893, No. 747; 1912, R. A. Fuller, Recollections; extant. Euphemistic.—4. Hence, to ply one's criminal trade or profession in (a district, a place, a building): 1881, The Man Traps of New York, ch. vi, 'Hotel Sneak Thieves', 'A successful sneak thief, your gentleman who "works" hotels and fashionable boarding-houses, must combine superior qualifications to make him an adept at the business'; 1886, on a group or crowd of persons (see work a crowd); 1887, Baumann; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1891, Darkness and Daylight (U.S.A.); 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago; 1903, J. Flynt, Ruderrick Cloud, p. 119; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1916, Wellington Scott; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights on Criminal Matters; 1929, Tom Divall, Scoundrels and Scallywags; 1929, Jack Callahan; extant.—5. To bribe; persuade to do as one wishes: U.S.A.: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'The new Detectives can't be "worked" like the old ones'; 1923 (see working the folks); by 1940, low s.—6. To operate secretly, to manoeuvre (a situation, an end): U.S.A.: 1872, G. P. Burnham; 1887, G. W. Walling; by 1900, s.—7. To work illicitly on (e.g., a room): U.S.A.: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective, 'Five minutes is frequently all the time an expert thief occupies in "working" a single room'; 1888, G. Bidwell, Forging his Chains; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; by 1920, low s. Ex sense 4 or sense 6.—8. (Cf. senses 6, 7.) To fake; to manipulate (e.g., a ballot) unfairly: 1897, Price Warung, The Bullet of the Fated Ten; ob.—9. To steal: 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; extant. Cf. senses 3, 4, 7, 8.—10. To pass, hand over, hand on, give: C. 20. In, e.g., Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932, and Jack Henry, Famous Cases, 1942. Also in South Africa (see quot'n at wagon, 2): C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946.—11. Among white-slavers, it is, late C. 19–20, applied to a prostitute's plying her trade. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, concerning a pimp: 'We had just left his woman, his Number One, the real one, who "worked" in the promenade of the Casino'.

work ? , how do you. In what (illicit) way do you now earn a living? : an underworld c.p. of ca. 1775–1840. George Parker, 1789. Cf. work, n., 3.

work, job of. See job, 2, ref. of 1829.

work, spot of. A criminal or illicit enterprise: 1829, Maginn, Vidocq, III, 'He [Vidocq] leads them [certain thieves] to a spot of work'; extant. See work, n.

work a crowd. To operate as pickpockets on a crowd or an assemblage of people (e.g., on a train): 1886, Thomas Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; 1896, A. Morrison (England); extant. An extension of work, v., 3; cf. work, v., 4.

work a job. To commit a theft; esp., a burglary: C. 20: 1927, W. C. Gough, From Kew Observatory to Scotland Yard, 'The "Spider" had none of these things [jemmies, drills, wedges, etc.]—at all events, not when he left to "work a job"; nor did he carry his tools away when that work was completed'; extant. Cf. work, v., 9.

work a slinter. See slinter.

work a stiff. To pass an illicit letter: convicts': C. 20. In, e.g., Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938.

work at the hoys; often as vbl n. working. . . To go shoplifting: 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 2nd ed.; † by 1910. See work, v., 3; hoys = hoise = hoist.

work back. To restore (a dog) to its owner: dog-stealers': since ca. 1840: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, II, 50; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, to find stolen property and claim the reward; 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747, '"Working-back" betting-lils', glossed as 'recovering betting-books'; extant.

work-bench. A bedstead: 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1900. Ironic and erotic.

work capital, to. See capital, work.

work case. See case, work.

work for. 'To set about the business of stealing': 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society, 'They work for his pocket-book, which is done in so clever a manner . . .'; app. † by 1900. Cf. travailler, Fr. c. in the same sense: B & L.

work for Jesus. To be a missionary: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931. Ironic.—2. 'To be actively engaged around the fisheries or missions,' Stiff, 1931: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1910. Cf. 1.

work high. To rob in daylight (high noon): 1933, Ersine; extant.—2. To fire rifle or revolver over the head of pursuing posse of police et al.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. lit. sense of aim high and:—3. To attempt criminal enterprises beyond one's class or beyond one's abilities: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. S.E. aim high, to be ambitious, and contrast work low.

work in mobs. See mob, 2.

work low. To commit a petty crime because one has been unlucky: 1933, Ersine; extant. Contrast work high, 3.

work off. 'Mr Pounce lowered his voice two tones. "Flash 'uns. You print, I'll work off", the footnote being, "Work off": To utter a forged note or "flash-un", p. 13 of Price Warung's Tales of the Old Regime, 1897; ob. Ex the industrial and general-labour coll.

work out. To serve one's full sentence: convicts': Feb. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, R. E. Burns; extant.

work over. To disguise (and repair) and sell a car, stolen or not: automobile thieves': since ca. 1918: 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life, 'We are "working over machines". We buy a wrecked car . . . and take the plates and numbers off it. We get the bill of sale, the registration slip, and all that; then we destroy what we can't sell of the car . . . we then clout another car in Chi and run it up here and work it over'; extant. Ex the S.E. sense, 'to repair; to examine and then repair'.—2. To maltreat; to administer 'the third degree' to: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex the machine-process of working over or changing, re-shaping (Irwin).

work stiff; working stiff. A worker; anyone who works for a living: 1925, Glen Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp ('work stiff'); Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's (ditto); May 9, 1931, Flynn's, Lawrence M. Maynard, 'On the Make'—in the less gen. variant, 'working stiff'; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, James Spenser, Limey, 'I mixed with . . . middle-class people and "working stiffs"'; 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights ('working stiff'); 1933, Ersine (ditto); 1934, Convict (ditto); extant. Adopted ex I.W.W. s., in which working stiff was current 'in 1910 to 20', Jean Bordeaux, letter of Oct. 23, 1945; the shorter form, therefore, derives ex the longer.

work the black (on) is an occ. variant of black (v.) or put the black (on), 'to blackmail': since ca. 1930. In, e.g., David Hume, Dishonour among Thieves, 1943. See black, n.

work the boxes. (Of women) to blackmail those men who drank or supped with girls in the private boxes or booths or alcoves of a club, a restaurant, an amusement hall, etc.: ca. 1890–1920. Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937, 'The type which "worked the boxes" in the honky-tonks of Denver or San Francisco'.

work the bulls. 'To get rid of bad 5s. pieces': 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, 'Work the bulls and counters rum'; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1890, B & L; † by 1920. See bull, n., 1.

work the cram. To use, fluently, salesman's or hawker's patter: 1887, W. E. Henley, Villon's Good Night, 'You magsmen bold that work the cram'; app. † by 1910,—that is, if the phrase ever existed outside of Henley's head. Cf. work in the preceding and ensuing phrases, and cram in 'to cram (a person) with lies'.

work the creep. Synonymous with dance the stairs, 2: since ca. 1930. In, e.g., Jack Henry, What Price Crime?, 1945.

work the folks; esp. as vbl n., working the folks. In the sub-section headed 'Working the Folks', Nels Anderson, in The Hobo, 1923, says, 'There is a type of tramp who lives on his bad reputation Family pride stands between him and his return. He capitalizes the fact that his family does not want him to return His requests for existence—or his threats to return—are a kind of blackmail levied on the family' (cf. the quot'n at getting by): since ca. 1910.

work the half; usually as vbl n., working . . . To operate the short-change racket: Australian: C. 20. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938. Many Australian 'hypers' use a ten-shilling instead of a twenty-shilling currency note.

work the halls. See halls.

work the joint. See joint, work the.

work the mace. See mace, work the.

work the moons. 'Stealing cheeses Working the moons': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 323); slightly ob. Ex the shape of spherical cheeses (full moons) or of such cheeses half-consumed (half moons).

work the noble; often as vbl n., working the noble. (The noble exists independently: the trick concerned. Newton.) To be a tramp, or a beggar, that pretends to have seen 'better days'—in some cases has seen them—and dresses and acts the part: 1886, Wm Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; app. † by 1920.

work the oracle may orig. have been c., but prob. it has always been s.—at first, certainly low s. Bec, 1823, 'Men who understand how to overreach others, or to manage money concerns marvellously, are said to "work the oracle well". The same is said of the insolvent, who cheats his creditors; as well as he who practises round betting, or edges off his bets, advantageously.' Ex bribing or persuading an oracle to deliver favourable judgement.

work the racket. See racket, work the.

work the rattle. To operate, as a thief, on trains: C. 20. Partridge, 1938. Cf. and contrast:— work the rattler. To play the three-card trick, or to card-sharp, on a train or habitually on trains: 1935, The Garda Review; extant. See rattler.

work the shells. To operate a variety of thimble-rig; often as vbl n., working the shells: 1890, B & L; by 1920, s. Cf. shell-worker, q.v.

work the shorts. See shorts, out on the.

work the stem. To beg on the street: tramps' and beggars'; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. See work, v., 4, and stem, n.

work the streets. To be a street-walking prostitute: C. 20: 1936, Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld. work the tubs. See tubs . . .

work under the arm-pits. See arm-pits.

work up. To follow up a suspected person or a crime or a prob. criminal undertaking: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; † by 1930. Ex work up a case on or against (a person).

work upon. 'To work upon any particular game, is to practise generally, that species of fraud or depredation, as, He works upon the crack, he follows housebreaking': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1910. See work, v., 3.

work with mobs. See mobs, 2. So^o too for working in mobs.

worker. A criminal, esp. a thief; mostly in combination, the other element defining the particular activity. See, e.g., worm worker.

worker-off. A passer of counterfeit money: 1897, Price Warung, Tales of the Old Regime—therefore Australian since ca. 1820; † by 1910. See work off.

working, n. Stealing: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; extant. See work, v.

working, adj. Engaged in crime: 1876, P. Farley, Criminals of America; rather ob. Ex work, v., 3.

working plug. A workman, a labourer: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'One who "plugs along" at his work' (Irwin).

working stiff. See work stiff, first 1931 ref.

working-stiff front. An appearance, etc., that should convince the prospective victim that this plunderer is a farmer or a rural labourer: since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941.

working sucker. An honest citizen: Sept. 20, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; by 1940, low s. Cf. working plug.

working the folks. See work the folks.

working the joint. See joint, work the.

working tool; gen. pl. A pistol: highwaymen's c. of ca. 1710-60. Select Trials, from 1720 to 1724 (pub. in 1734), 'The Prisoner asked me to let him have his working Tools (meaning his Pistols) which I had formerly taken from him'.

working with mobs. See mob, 2.

workman. A professional gambler: gaming c. (and buckish s.): ca. 1800-50. John Joseph Stockdale, The Greeks, 1817, 'In France, there are . . . divers names for gamblers . . . des Grecs, des Arabes, des Crocs, et cetera; we denominate them Greeks, Trojans, Rooks, Crows, Pigeon-fanciers, Workmen, et cetera, et cetera'. He is good at his work; gaming is his livelihood.—2. (Usually pl.) "'Besides, Billy, it isn't as though we was 'workmen'," remarked the other young fellow apologetically, which in criminal lingo was as good as saying that they were commonplace hands at the business, and not qualified practitioners [at theft]': 1888, James Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; ob. Cf. work, n., 1.

works. 'Works, the (prison), a convict establishment, such as Portland, Portsmouth, or Dartmoor': 1890, B & L; extant—but since ca. 1915, little used. In reference to the hard labour.—2. See get the works and give the works. By itself, the works is s. for 'everything'.—3. Policeman: U.S., esp. among bank-robbers: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant. Perhaps cf. works, take for the.—4. The works: hypodermic syringe and needle: drug addicts': since ca. 1925: 1929-31, Kernôt; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor; extant.—5. A homosexual: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. BVB. Partly euphemistic.

works, give the. See give the works.

works, take for the. To beat up: 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 'We took a big Swede from Minneapolis for the works'; ob. Cf. get the works and give the works.

world; usually preceded by the. 'The head of a gang, or the local strong man, is known as "the world" to his underlings,' The Cape Times, May 23, 1946: South Africa: since ca. 1920. To them, he is—financially—the world.

worm. Silk: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1934, Rose, 'A load o' worm came in today'; Aug. 3, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; May 22, 1937, The Saturday Evening Post, Courtney Ryley Cooper, 'Stolen silk is "hot worm"': extant. Ex 'silk-worm'.

worm-hustling. See hustle, v., 4.

worm trick, the. Putting worm into one's salad and blackmailing the restaurant for 'compensation' and silence: since ca. 1910. Francis Chester, Shot Full (p. 285), 1938.

worm worker. A silk thief: since ca. 1915. Howard N. Rose, 1934. See worm.

worth the regular weight, be. See weight . . .

wouldn't come. A c.p. applied to 'payment refused on the forged cheque' (Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941): C. 20.

woune is Randle Holme's spelling of won, q.v. at win, v.

wow. 'To astonish, excite,' Ersine, 1933; by 1939, s. Ex s. wow, 'a great success, an impressive event', itself ex exclamatory wow!, indicative of wonder, admiration, etc.

wrap is a misprint for wap (v.) in The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 1741.

wrap-rascal, 'a red cloak, also called a roquelaire' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), is not c., but s.

wrap-up or wrapup. A duped buyer of crooked shares after he has bought them: commercial underworld: since ca. 1930: recorded on Feb. 19, 1935. Signed, sealed and delivered; 'in the bag' (or packet).

wren. A girl or young woman: 1929-31, Kernôt, 'Crook's sweetheart'; April 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn ('Under Cover'), "'Some wren!" said Dugan. "She ain't so bad lookin'," said Pellarini. "New since I was here last"; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Another example of bird imagery.

wrench. A severe sentence to imprisonment: April 1871, Sessions Papers (p. 485), 'Townsend said, "I think we are in for it this time; if they find that piece that I dropped in the hock shop, we will get a wrench"'; ob. Cf. jolt, n.

wrest. See:—

wrester is the c. form, in late C. 16—early 17, of wrest, a picklock (instrument): 1592, Robert Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, includes it in his list of the terms used by burglars, thus: 'Their Engines, Wresters'. Later in the pamphlet, Greene has wrests, which is indubitably S.E.; but The O.E.D. is, I think, wrong to classify wrester as S.E., for the Greene locus is their sole record of this term,—although it does reappear in plagiaristic Dekker's The Belman of London, 1608. A natural sense-development ex S.E. 'to wrest'.

Wright, Mr. A convicts' term for 'a faithless prison officer, the intermediary between an incarcerated criminal and his friends outside. The title is so given in the clandestine letters sent out surreptitiously, in which the prisoner says Mr Wright, who is all right or safe, will call': 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; slightly ob. Cf. right, 2, and the s. (later, coll.) Mr Right, 'the right husband for a girl'.

wring oneself. To change one's clothes: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L; by 1900, coll. Prob. suggested by S.E. wring clothes out.

wrinkle, n., 'special knowledge' or 'special experience', is not c., but s.—2. A lie, an untruth: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1890 or so. Prob. ex:—

wrinkle, v. 'To lie, or utter a falsehood': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1900. To crease the truth.

wrinkler. 'A person prone to lying; such a character is called also a gully, which is probably an abbreviation of Gulliver, and from hence, to gully signifies to lie, or deal in the marvellous':

1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan's Groser, 1823; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1900. Cf. wrinkle, n., 2, and see wrinkle, v.

wrinkles out of one's stomach, get the. To settle down to prison life: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex the s. sense 'to resume eating after a period of insufficient food' (Irwin).

wristlets. Handcuffs: C. 20. Ersine. Euphemistic.

write scrip. See scrip, 4.

write up. To report (a convict) for infringement, misconduct: convicts': 1933, Ersine. To 'write them up' on a report. Also see written up.

writer. One member of a 'green goods' gang of swindlers is 'the Writer, who addresses the wrappers in which the circulars, bogus newspaper-cuttings, etc., are enclosed. He receives the other fifty per cent [see backer], out of which he has to pay the percentage due to the rest of the gang,' W. T. Stead, Satan's Invisible World Displayed, 1898, p. 108; † by 1930. Somewhat euphemistic.

writer of sad, short stories. 'Forgers . . . called paperhangers or writers of sad, short stories, comprise a large part of the prison population,' Convict, 1934; 1938, Convict 2nd; extant. Cf. short-story writer, q.v.

writing. See scrip, 4.

written up. Reported for a breach of prison discipline: convicts': Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest, John Caldwell, 'Patter of the Prisons'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. chalked.

wrong. 'Not to be trusted,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, "'Aw, don't rap [i.e., speak indiscreetly] to that guy, he's wrong'"'; 1929, The Saturday Evening Post (dishonest, illicit, crooked); 1930, Burke, 'Contrary to the code of the underworld, "That broad's strictly wrong"''; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict, (of stool pigeons) 'It is said that they are wrong, phoney or bogus'; extant. Ex the viewpoint of the criminal and the crook: cf. right.

wrong, in. Not admitted to the inner circle of a gang: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant.

wrong cop; wrong guy. 'A "wrong cop" meaning an honest one,' E. D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago; ibid., 'Honest policemen, "wrong guys" as gangland knows them'; extant. Wrong—from the viewpoint of the underworld.—2. Wrong guy also = an informer: 1935, Hargan; 1938, Castle, 'A double crosser'; extant. See wrong.

wrong foolish. '... Would nevertheless be charged with "wrong foolish" behaviour (wrongful and unlawful),' The Cape Times, May 23, 1946: S. Africa: C. 20.

wrong 'un, 'a counterfeit coin' (e.g., in C. Rook, The Hooligan Nights, 1899), was never lower than low s.

wrongo. A counterfeit coin; a worthless cheque; imitation jewellery; and suchlike: since late 1920's. James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 1937, "'Sure it ain't duff?" "Never brought you nothing that was a wrongo, did I?"' I.e., a 'wrong one'.

wroughter. In the three-card trick, he who plays the cards: since ca. 1860. B. Hemyng, Out of the Ring, 1870. Perhaps a variant of rorter (as at roft)—on wrecker or wrong-doer or some such word.

wry mouth and a pissen pair of breeches. 'Hanging', says Grose, 1785; prob. mostly in have a . . . It is doubtfully c.; much more prob. low—or perhaps journalistic—s. Cf. the strange physiological fact (discreetly alluded to near the end of F. Tennyson Jesse's powerful novel, A Pin to See the Peepshow, 1934), that death by hanging causes a priapism.

wry(-)neck day, 'hanging day' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), may possibly be c., of ca. 1750–1840, but it is more likely to be s.—either prison-officers', or low, or journalistic. Ex the rick that hanging produces in the neck of the victim: cf. the preceding entry.

wurls. Excellent: S. Africa: C. 20. (C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946.) Afrikaans word, ultimately cognate with Eng. well.

Wurst or wurst, 'a German': low s. rather than e. Leverage, 1925.

wyld(e) roge or rogue. See wild rogue.

wyn. See win, n.

X

X; letter X. (X only.) A written synonym of cross, n., q.v.—2. A ten-dollar bill: U.S.A.: 1837 (D.A.E.); 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York, 'About a double X, for paying the bail and my fees'; 1930, George London, Les-Bandits de Chicago; and later. But almost certainly s., not c. Ex reading the Roman numeral X as the letter X.—3. X or letter x: 'a method of arrest used by policemen with desperate ruffians—by getting a firm grasp on the collar, and drawing the captive's hand over the holding arm, and pressing the fingers down in a peculiar way—the captured person's arm in this way can be more easily broken than extricated': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by 1904 (F & H) it was police j.

X division. Swindlers, thieves, and other such persons as earn a dishonest living: 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen, 'Bettler-Cant: Gauner, Taschendiebe und alle, die kein ehrliches Geschäft betreiben'; app. † by 1910. See X, 1.

X ray. A 10,000-dollar bill: 1934, Howard N. Rose (ex-ray); extant. It solves many of the dark problems of the struggle to live; perhaps suggested by X, 2.

X's Hall. The Sessions House, Clerkenwell: 1909, Ware; † by 1940. 'X's is a corruption of Hicks—Hicks being a dreaded judge who sat for many years on the bench' (Ware).

Y

Y, n. Scotland Yard: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex 'The Yard'.—2. The Y.M.C.A.: American beggars' and tramps': 1931, Stiff; extant.

Y, v. To double-cross: 1929–31, Kernôt; 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'I plugged him when he y'ed me'; extant. 'From the practice of some speakeasy proprietors in mixing near-beer with real beer through a double or Y-shaped pipe,' Kernôt.

Y.M.C.A. is explained by American tramps to mean 'you must come across' (with the money): 1931, Stiff.

yabo, 'a fool' (Leverage, 1925): low s., not c.

yac. See yack, second ref. of 1857.

yace. See the 1848 ref. in:—

yack. A watch: Sept. 1789, Sessions Papers, p. 801, 'He said they had stricked him from top to toe, but had not found the yack'; 1797, Potter, 'Yack and onions, watch and seals'; 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1812, J. H. Vaux, who says 'obsolete'—so does Pierce Egan in 1823; in 1839, however, H. Brandon includes it in a list of c. terms 'known to every thief and beggar'; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1848, Sinks of London, where it is misprinted yace; 1851, Mayhew; 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1857, Snowden; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', who spells it yac; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by ca. 1860 in England, it had, in certain parts, > Jack; H, 1874, still has yack and says nothing of Jack; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1890, B & L; 1936, Michael Fane, Racecourse Swindles ('Made of tin, they are appropriately named "Tin Yacks"'); extant, though slightly ob. 'From the gypsy yack, an eye or watch,' B & L: strictly, yak (or yok) = 'an eye' and, in Welsh Gypsy, yakengri = 'thing of the eyes'—hence, 'a clock, a watch' (Sampson).

yack, christen a; yack, church a. See christen and church.

yad. 'A steerer for a yegg mob,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Yiddish.

yaffle, n. An arrest: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Ex sense 3 of the v.

yaffle, v. See yaffling.—2. To purloin: U.S.A.: C. 20. Donald Lowrie, who was a prisoner in San Quentin, 1901–11, My Life in Prison, 1912, 'Th' feller who was t' get th' stuff, comin' up from th' mill early, was t' go inter th' cell an' yaffle th' magazine'; slightly ob. Perhaps a deliberate perversion of snaffle, v., 1: cf. Eng. low s. yaffle (late C. 19–20), 'to snatch'.—3. Hence (?), to arrest: U.S.A.: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, IA; extant.—4. To kidnap: U.S.A.: 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; extant. Ex 2 and 3 combined rather than ex 2 or 3 individually.

yaffling. Eating: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; by 1864, †—or so H, 3rd ed., implies. This yaffle is perhaps cognate with dial. yaffle, 'to mumble': cf. the 'eating' as well as the 'speaking' senses of mumble.

yahoo or Y-. A farmer; a rustic: 1925, Leverage; 1931, Stiff, 'A hoosier who has no apologies for his ignorance'; extant. A perversion of the S.E. sense, and a dignifying!

yam, n. A rustic: 1925, Leverage; extant.

Perhaps cf. sense 2 of the v.; prob., however, it is short for yammerer (cf. yap, n.).

yam, v. 'To eat heartily, to stuff lustily': 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe, 'To eat'; 1785, Grose—by whose day the term seems to have > low s. Perhaps, like the appreciative yum-yum!, it is an echoic word; but more prob. it is the West African nyami, adapted by sailors (Weekley, after Platt).—2. To talk incoherently: U.S.A.: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1934, Rose, 'Talking too much . . . yamming'; extant. Short for coll. yammer in the same sense.—3. Hence (?), to inform to the police: U.S.A.: Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, '"Those landing spots are all getting hot," said Chick. "Some one been yamming"'; extant.

yank. To arrest (a person): tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, '"The bulls around here don't care to yank a tramp unless they have to"'; ob. To grab hold of him and yank him to his feet.

yannam is a misprint—prob. influenced by pannam—for yarum (q.v. at yarrum). Harman, 4th ed., 1573; H, 1859, unwisely accredits the error.

yap, n. A farmer; a rustic or 'hoosier': tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1899, George Ade, Fables in Slang; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'The citizens [of New York] are the jayest push o' yaps in this country'; by 1903, Clapin can classify it as university s.; by 1904, gen. s. Perhaps ex the v.—2. Hence, a fool, a 'sucker': 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1928, Chicago May; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; Dec. 4, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; extant.—3. (Ex sense 1.) 'A swindler of a petty type,' W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 1929; ibid., (one gangster to another) 'You ought to had better sense than to get a couple of outside yaps to bump Rico off', where the nuance is 'petty criminal' or 'inexperienced gunman'; extant.—4. Mouth: June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch, 'He'll be afraid to open his yap'; July 5, 1941, Flynn's, Richard Sale; extant. Cf. sense 1 of the v.

yap, v. 'To say or to tell,' J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899, Glossary; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1933, Ersine, 'To squawk' (lay a complaint); extant.—2. Hence, to befool, to trick: 1925, Leverage; extant.

yap wagon. A 'sucker bus'—i.e., a sightseers' wagon, a charabanc: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Mollie Squint climbs into a yap wagon and touches a rube for it' (picks a farmer's pocket); by 1930, low s. See yap, n., 1 and 2.

yappy, 'soft', 'foolish', 'easily duped': London street s., not c.

yapster. A dog: U.S.A. (—1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; app. † by 1870. Cf. yap, v., 1.

yaram. See yarrum.

yard. One hundred dollars: 1929, Charles Francis Coe, Hooch, 'He slips him $300 an' promises him $700 more if they'll spring him . . . Baldy . . . promises to come right to me for the seven yards that make up the grand'; June 15, 1929, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'The Spot'; 1930, Burke; 1931, 1A; 1933, Ersine, 'A one-hundred-dollar bill'; Dec. 9, 1933, Flynn's; 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose, who wrongly defines it as 1000 dollars; Oct. 9, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; 1938, Damon Runyon, Furthermore; extant. In one long line . . .

yard, v. (Of a man) to copulate with: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; † by 1890. App. † by 1830. Ex s. yard, a penis.

yard and a half. One hundred and fifty dollars: 1929-31, Kernôt; extant. See yard, n.

yard and a quarter. One hundred and twenty-five dollars: May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. See yard, n.

yard bull; yard dick. A railroad-company's policeman or detective: 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'I was sapped by a yard dick'; ibid., 'The yard dick . . . is known on the Road not only as a "dick" but . . . as "bull", "soft-shoe", "gum-shoe", an "elbow", a "flatty", or a "mug"'. He is not to be confused with the . . . harness-bull, nor with the . . . village cut-up, or constable of the smaller towns. The yard dick is in the employ of the railroad company, and his main business is with vags trespassing on railroad property Sometimes, when he wears a uniform and hangs around the station, he is easy to evade, but he is often in plain clothes and is likely to bob up anywhere'; ibid., 'Far more harrowing than the thought of yard bulls . . . was the appalling thought of being left alone'; Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's, Earl H. Scott (y. bull); 1931, Stiff (y. dick); 1931, Godfrey Irwin (both); by 1935, both of these terms were s. See bull and dick.—2. A synonym of yard hack: 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; extant.

yard geese. 'Railroad workers in the yards; switchmen, yard-clerks, yard-masters, etc.', Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910. Cf. prec. and :—

yard hack. A guard in the prison yard: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. See hack and cf. yard bull.

yard of tripe. A pipe: orig. (ca. 1845-60), beggars' rhyming s.: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 418; † by 1910.

yarrum; often yarum; occ. yaram; rarely yarm and yarrim. 'Yaram, mylke,' Harman, 1566; ibid., in the glossary, 'Popplarr of yarum . . . mylke porrage'; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, at 'The Canters Dictionarie', yarum; 1610, Rowlands, yarrim; 1641, R. Brome, A Joviall Crew, 'Good Poplars of Yarrum'; 1665, R. Head (yarum); 1688, Holme (yarrume); 1698, B.E. (yarum); 1714, Alex. Smith; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe (yarm); 1785, Grose (yarum); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1848, Sinks of London, 'Yarum, food made of milk'; † by 1870—if not, indeed, by 1830. For the ending, cf. pannam. Prob. a transformation of yellow, illiterate and dial. for yellow, the colour of beastings. If first used by gypsies, it may show the influence of Welsh Gypsy yaro, 'egg' (English Romany yori or yoro).

yavum is Matsell's error (Vocabulum, 1859) for yarrum.

yawp. To complain, lay a complaint: 1933, Ersine; extant. A thickening of yap.

yazzihamper is a fanciful elaboration of yap, n., 1 and 2. Ersine, 1933; by 1945, ob.

yeag = yegg, q.v. Flynn's, Jan. 13, 1934, Jack Callahan, 'To Hell and Back'.

years. A bill (currency-note): 1935, Hargan, 'Five years is a five dollar bill, etc.'; extant. Cf. five spot.

Yed, 'a Jew', is a low s. corruption of Yid. Leverage, 1925.

yeder. Everybody, everyone: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex Ger. jeder via Yiddish.

yegg, n.; yegg(-)man. A beggar: San Francisco: ca. 1880-1900. See sense 2, etymology proposed by Jack Black.—2. "Yegg-men" . . . means tramp-thieves, but the average tramp seldom uses the word. Hoboes that break safes in country post-offices come under the yegg-men classification,' Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901, p. 27; ibid., Glossary, 'Yegg-men . . . They are to be found largely on the railroads'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, p. 260, 'The Yeg men blew the gopher. The safe crackers forced open the doors of the safe with explosives'; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, "He's no common panhandle," was the harsh thought; "he's a yeggman"; 1912, A. Train, Court, Criminals and the Camorra, "Yeggmen"—an original and dangerous variety of burglar peculiar to the United States and Canada'; ibid., 'I saw two yeggs that I knew'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York (see swing under); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'yegg—a desperate criminal of least gregarious and social type, a thieving tramp'; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest, article 'Do You Speak "Yegg"?' 'A yegg is a professional safe-blower' (correct) 'though often also a pickpocket or ordinary crook' (incorrect; a looseness that the underworld would deride); 1916, Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in the Underworld (specifically a bank-robber); 1918, L. Livingston, Madame Delcassee; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang' (yeggman); April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by M. Acklom (yegg); 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads (Glossary: 'Yeggs. Small-town itinerant burglars and safe-blowers'); 1922, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life, 'The yegg—the tiger among tramps—the criminal tramp'; since ca. 1922, at latest, current in Canada for 'a tramp thief' (letter, June 9, 1946); by 1933 (Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby), current among English tramps for 'burglar generally, safe-blower particularly'. Jim Tully, in Emmett Lawler, 1922, writes, 'The term "yegg" hardly needs explanation as it has passed into the language. Nevertheless a yegg is a blower of safes who specializes on small post offices and stores, and sometimes banks. Only when completely down on his luck does he associate with his less crafty, or more honest, or less courageous brothers.' Tully's statement indicates that, by 1922, the term had > gen. s. But the origin? that is a question it happens to be extremely difficult to answer. The best answer that has so far been supplied—and I think it is correct—is this by Jack Black in You Can't Win, 1926. 'It is a corruption of "yekk", a word from one of the many dialects spoken in Chinatown, and it means beggar. When a hypo [drug addict] or beggar approached a Chinaman to ask for something to eat, he was greeted with the exclamation, "yekk man, yekk man". The underworld is quick to seize upon strange words, and the bums and hypos in Chinatown were calling themselves yeggmen years before the term was taken out on the road and given currency by east-bound beggars. In no time it had a verb hung on it, and to yegg meant to beg. The late William A. Pinkerton was responsible for its changed meaning . . . he acquired much misinformation . . . Investigation convinced Pinkerton that there were a lot of men drifting about the country who called themselves yeggs. The word went into a series of articles Pinkerton was writing . . . and was fastened upon the "box" men. Its meaning has widened until now the term "yegg" includes all criminals whose work is "heavy". Nevertheless, Jack Callahan, who spells it yegag, thinks that the word derives ex Ger. Jaeger, 'a hunter': Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's (p. 12). A theory not to be scoffed at; I myself prefer Black's explanation.—3. Hence, a convict: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; but the definition is strongly suspect—and almost certainly wrong.—4. 'Now the term "yegg" includes all criminals whose work is heavy', 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; extant. Ex sense 2; see heavy, adj.—5. A 'guy', chap, fellow: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Cf. the sense-evolutions of stiff, n.

yegg, v. To beg: beggars' and drug addicts' (San Francisco): ca. 1880–1900. See yegg, n., 1, etymology, quot'n from Jack Black, foot of p. 783 and top of p. 784.

yeggon. 'The chief of a mob of crooks (especially yeggs)', Leverage, 1925; ob. Perhaps 'the yegg one' (yegg, n., 2).

yell, v. To inform to the police; to 'squeal' on a companion, an accomplice: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. squeal.

yell copper is a variant of turn copper (become an informer to the police): July 7, 1928, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, "'You can't yell copper on him," objected Bill [a pickpocket], horrified'; extant. Cf. yell.

yellow, n. A counterfeit gold coin: 1826 (see screen, 2); 1890, B & L; very ob. Prob. ex yellow boy.

yellow, v.; also yellow up. To turn coward: 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece, 'All that guy had done was yellow up'—'You ain't going to yellow on me'; extant. Ex yellow, 'cowardly'.

yellow, adj., 'jealous', is said in A New Canting Dict., 1725, to have been 'at first used by the Canters only, but now in common speech'; B.E. has it, but does not classify it as c.: perhaps it was c. until ca. 1720. Cf. the S.E. jaundiced, prejudiced.—2. (Coin) of gold: 1757 (see white, adj.); ob. by 1850; † by 1900, except in, e.g., 'The five hundred "yellow"—£500—to pay for it' (John G. Brandon, The Pawnshop Murder, 1936).—3. Cowardly: American s., not c.

yellow and white. A gold watch: April 1897, Popular Science Monthly, A. F. B. Crofton, 'The Language of Crime', p. 834; ob. Ex its yellow casing and its white face.

yellow(-)belly. A coward: since ca. 1918; by 1935, low s. Ersine, 1933. Elaboration of yellow, adj., 3.

yellow boy. A gold coin; a guinea: (written) 1662, The Cheats, by John Wilson, 'But are the pence numbered, doe they Cry Chinkes | in thy pocket, how many yellow boyes rogue | how many yellow boyes'. Though the term was in use in the underworld in the C. 18, it was both orig. and throughout its career—i.e., mid-C. 17–mid-C. 19—also in use in s., which it is more correctly taken to be. Obviously ex the colour; perhaps there is a side glance at roaring boy.

Yellow Cat, the. The Golden Lion, 'a noted brothel in the Strand, so named by the ladies who frequented it,' Grose, 1785: London prostitutes': C. 18.

yellow clock (and slang or slangs). Gold watch (and chain): ca. 1890–1920, to judge by p. 16 of the Rev. Eustace Jervis's Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, 1925. See the separate elements: yellow, clock, slang.

yellow fancy. See billy, ref. of 1839: pugilistic > gen. sporting s., but much used in the underworld.

yellow George. A guinea: ca. 1760–1860. Grose, 1785 (at George); Potter, 1797; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London. See George and cf. yellow boy.

yellow gloak. A jealous husband: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1859, H., 'A jealous man'; 1887, Baumann; † by 1890 (B & L). See yellow and gloak.

yellow(-)man. A (usually silk) handkerchief, hence a sporting colour, of yellow; loosely, a 'Belcher': perhaps orig. c., but prob. always sporting s.; if, however, -man = mans (q.v.), then it certainly was c. at first. It occurs in, e.g., P. Egan, Boxiana, I, 167; W. A. Miles, 1839 (see billy).—2. (Mostly in pl.) A c. variant of yellow boy: Jan. 1835, Sessions Papers, 'He pulled out some silver and gold from his pocket, and said, "I am without the b—y yellow men, you see—I get them easy"': † by 1930.

yellow one. A gold watch: 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 'The Tramps' Jargon'; 1931, IA; extant. Contrast white one and cf. red 'un.

yellow stuff. Gold coins, esp. if counterfeit: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; slightly ob. Cf. yellow boy and yellow George; in Fr. c. le jaune.

yelp, n. A town crier: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; Grose gives it as yelper and s.; 1823, Bee; app. † by 1840. Ex his whining or yapping cry; or it may be an abbr. of yelper or a direct adoption of the S.E. v., to yelp.—2. 'Information given to the police, a confession,' Ersine, 1933: U.S.A.; extant. Ex senses 1 and 2 of:—

yelp, v. To confess (to a crime): 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'He . . . yelped to the grab, asides shelling out the ridge, for all vich he voss rewarded by gettin' the jigger dubbed on him'; it merged in:—2. To inform to the police: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

yelper. See yelp, n.—2. A wild beast; usually in pl.: 1821, D. Haggart (see ogle, v.); 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890. Ex the fact that, instead of talking, it growls, yelps, etc.—3. 'Yelper . . . Also, a discontented cove, who is forward to complain of his woes, and the imaginary evils of life': 1823, Bee; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A fellow who cries before he is hurt'; by 1880, s.—4. An informer to police or to warders: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex yelp, v., 2.

yen, n. An intense desire; esp. for a drug: C. 20: 1912, Donald Lowrie, who spent 1901–11 in San Quentin, says in My Life in Prison, concerning a batch of prison drug-fiends deprived of their morphine or what-have-you, 'I even saw two or three guys eat chloride o' lime to stop their yen'; 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, records the phrase, to have a yen on; by 1928, any strong desire—John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; extant, but by 1940 it was s. Short for yen-yen, q.v.—2. Hence, opium itself: 1925, implied in yen hank; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

yen, v. To crave for (esp. 'dope'): 1925, Leverage; 1933, Ersine, 'He's yenning for morph'; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full, 'I gotta yen-yen. I'm yenning like hell'; extant. Ex the n.

yen, have a. To be desirous, fond; have a yen for, to be sexually fond of, to want (a person): c. of ca. 1910–30, then low s.; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, in a passage valid for ca. 1912. See yen, n.—2. Also have a yen on: see have a yen (on).

yen hank. An opium pipe: 1925, Leverage; extant. See yen, n., 2.

yen hoc or yen ho(c)k. 'Needle used to cook opium' (Jackson & Hellyer, 1914): 1886, Thomas Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America; 1891, Campbell, Knox & Byrnes, Darkness and Daylight; 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1916, Thomas Burke, Limehouse Nights; 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle. The term is not, strictly, c.: it stands on the borderline between c. and j. Ex the Chinese.

yen off, get one's. See get one's yen off.

yen pok, 'pill of opium after being prepared for smoking' (Convict, 1934), is drug-traffic j., not c. A Chinese term.

yen shee or yen chee or yen-shi. "Number One hop [the best quality of opium] is $87.50 a can, an' yen-chee not less'n $32", Alfred Henry Lewis, Apaches of New York, 1912; in Campbell, Knox & Byrnes, Darkness and Daylight, 1891, it had already been defined as 'bits of refuse opium'; but there are, of course, earlier uses of the word, as, e.g., in H. H. Kane, Opium-Smoking, 1882; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'yen shee—Residuc in bowl after opium pipe has been smoked'; and elsewhere. For status, cf. the preceding term. Ex the Chinese: cf. eng shee.

yen-shee baby. See baby.

yen-shee gow, 'an opium-bowl scraper': not c., but drug-traffic j.: 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man; 1933, Ersine; and 1934, Convict. Cf. preceding term.—2. Hence, 'a girl who smokes opium,' Leverage, 1925; extant. This sense may, however, be a corruption of:—

yen-shee kwoi (or kwoy), 'an opium-smoker' (Convict, 1934), is not c., but drug-traffic j. But yen-shee boy (BVB, 1942) is on the borderline.

yen(-)yen. Recurrent craving for opium: 1891, Campbell, Knox & Byrnes, Darkness and Daylight; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'Perhaps it was the sight or smell of the hop, but anyway I got the yen-yen and shook as in the ague'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (whose wording is ambiguous); by 1918, superseded by yen, except where yen-yen survives as an intensive. Thomas Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America, 1886, provides the immediate origin, thus: 'A fiend suffering with the inyun is a man to be avoided' and 'I was a victim to the opium habit, or, as the Chinese have it, inyun fun' (pp. 384–5).

yentz, v.t. To cheat, to swindle: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'They try to yentz me out of me end'; 1934, Rose; by 1937 (James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 'This here yenzing party you're staging tonight') it was also English; extant. Yiddish, ultimately cognate with Ger. jenseits, 'beyond'; lit., then, 'to get past, the better of'.

yentzer. A cheater; a swindler: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex yentz.

yes-yes; esp. in take a yes-yes. Admission of one's guilt; to admit, confess to, one's guilt: Jan. 22, 1927, Flynn's, Roy W. Hinds ('The Double Crosser'—a short story), 'My mouthpiece says fer me to take a yes-yes and get off as easy's I can'; slightly ob.

yest. Yesterday: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd, 'Yest, a Day ago'; 1785, Grose, who does not, however, classify it as c. By contraction.

yew crib. A carpenter's shop: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Ex the frequent use, by carpenters, of yew; see crib, n., 2 and 3.

yewman. A carpenter: 1848, The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). Cf. yew crib.

Yid, 'a Jew', is low s.—an abbr. of Yid(d)isher, which may orig. have been c., but prob. was always s.; Yiddisher appears in Matsell's Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 1859.

yiesk, 'a fish', is not c., but tinkers' s.: 1890, B & L.

yike. A (noisy or ill-tempered) argument; a 'row': Australian: since the 1920's. M & B, 1944. Echoic.

yin and ying are variants of yen: 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle, 'When the [opium]-smoker has the "ying" upon him . . . the mad longing for indulgence'; 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man, 'The overpowering "yin" (craving)'; 1934, Hendrik de Leeuw, Cities of Sin; extant.

yip, n. A dog, esp. a small, nervous animal: tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. It yips or barks shrilly; cf. the v.—2. A complaint to, e.g., the police: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf.:—

yip, v. To complain, e.g. to the police; to seek redress: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; Ersine, 1933. Yip is a 'thinning' of yap.—2. To swindle (somebody); obtain by swindling: 1937, Courtney R. Cooper, Here's to Crime, 'Money they have "yipped" from suckers by the "shakedown" route' (blackmail); extant. A perversion of gyp.

yob-gab, 'Ziph', may orig. have been c.: 1890, B & L. Yob is back s. for 'boy'; gab = speech, talk.

yock or yok(e), 'a man', may be c., as B & L, 1890, classify it; in C. 20 it is fair-ground s. for 'a fool, a chump' (Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934). Either ex tinkers' s. yok (or yoke), 'a man', or ex 'yokel' (country bumpkin).—2. A black eye, or a contused one; an eye: C. 20: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, '"That isn't half a yock you got there?" . . . "Yes, there was a bit of a coring match when they claimed me"'; extant. Adoption of Romany yok, 'eye'.

yodel, v. To commit sodomy: C. 20. BVB. A code term?

yokel, 'a countryman; a clodhopper', is S.E.: and yet it is classified as c. in Egan's Grose, 1823. Nevertheless, yokel was a favourite term in the underworld of ca. 1810–50.

yokel-hunter is a synonym of charley pitcher. Mayhew, 1851.

yokuff. 'A chest, or large box': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; ob. A perversion of coffer (B & L); it is an example of the short-lived central s.

yoni. A woman: 1925, Leverage; extant. Yiddish?

York. New York City: orig. and mostly tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, 'New York City, or "York", as the Under World prefers to call it'; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; by 1910, no longer c.—2. Hence, New York State: 1902, J. Flynt, The Little Brother; by 1915, coll.

york, n. A look; an act of observing (a person): 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV; † by 1890. Perhaps ex:—

york, v. 'To stare or look at any person in an impertinent manner, is termed yorking; to york any thing, in a common sense, is to view, look at, or examine': 1812, J. H. Vaux; ibid., 'A flash-cove, observing another person (a flat) who appears to notice or scrutinize him, his proceedings, or the company he is with, will say to his palls, That cove is yorking as strong as a horse, or, There is York-street concerned'; 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, 'To notice'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1828, P. Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry, and Logic, 'Yorking at Nell with sighs'; † by 1890. Prob. short for Yorkshire in its 'sharpness, shrewdness, alertness' derivatives.

York Street concerned!, there is. Someone is watching: a c.p. of ca. 1800–30. J. H. Vaux, 1812 (see york, v.). An elaboration of york, n. and v.

Yorker. A native, or a resident, of New York City: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, (a professional thief speaking) 'I'm a Yorker really. 'Course I've knocked about all over, but York has always been my hang-out, an' I go back there ev'ry now and then an' make a visit'; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; by 1920, coll. Ex York.

Yorkshire appears in many phrases connoting either sharp dealing or a shrewd imperviousness to being swindled: C. 18–20. These phrases are not e., but s., and spring from the Yorkshireman's—and Yorkshirewoman's—native shrewdness.

you know. Cocaine: Pacific Coast drug addicts': since ca. 1910. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on snow.

young cub. See cub.

young dab(b) is Colonel George Hanger's error (1801) for:— young dub; mostly in pl. 'A bunch of young dubs . . ., which are a bunch of small keys': 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; † by 1890. See dub, n., 1.

young horse. Roast beef: convicts': C. 20. Rose, 1934. Prison humour.

young illegitimate. See legitimate.

young stuff. Young virgin girls: white-slave traffic: C. 20. Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940 (quot'n at fresh meat).

your nabs. See nabs.

Your nibs. See nibs.

yow, keep. See keep yow.

yoxter. 'Y was a Yoxter that eats caper sauce; | Z was a Ziff who was flashed'—? rather 'flushed'—'on the horse', yoxter being glossed as 'A convict returned from transportation before his time', in: 1846, 'The Thieves' Alphabet', ch. xxiii, Vol. I, The Mysteries of London, by G. W. M. Reynolds; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H, who imply that it is † and classify it as convicts'. Origin?

yuk. A companion, partner, 'buddy': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex youunker, term of address to a youngster?

yunker. A country bumpkin: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex Ger. Junker.

Z

zabist. A policeman: 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. ex Yiddish.

zack. A six-months' prison-sentence: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942 (with variant zeck). Ex zack, Australian s. for 'sixpence': in S. Africa, until ca. 1940, the 'sixpence' sense was c. (J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946), with variant zock (C. P. Wittstock, May 23, 1946). Perhaps zack arises ex a Jewish pron. of sixpence as zixpence.

zad, 'crooked' or 'crooked person' (hunchback), is not c., but s.

zamarra, 'an overcoat' (Leverage, 1925): in the no-man's land lying between c. and low s.

zarp. A policeman: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. zabist.

zayatt. A lodging house: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex Yiddish?

zebra. 'Not long after this he got into limbo (prison), and had to wear the famous "zebra"—the penitentiary dress,' J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899; 1904, F & H; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, in form zebra-suit; slightly ob. Ex the stripes.—2. Hence, a convict: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; extant.

zebu. A convict: 1893, Confessions of a Convict (glossary), ed. by Julian Hawthorne; † by 1930. Perhaps a corruption of zebra: ex the convicts' striped uniform.

zeck. See zack.

zex. A warning: 1925, Leverage; Aug. 13, 1927, Flynn's, 'The undercover man told Winter that the "Zex crowd", or hundred percenters [i.e., very clever, fast-working commercial swindlers], hired at Lindy's'; 1929–31, Kernôt, 'Zeks:—Beat it'; 1933, Ersine, 'zex, ex. Nix; look out!'; extant. Cognate with zits.

zex, lay in a. 'Baker'—a certain financial 'sucker' in a big way—'was the victim of what is known among the high-pressure gentry'—the 'dynamiters'—'as "laying in a "Zex", or slipping a hot one [a particularly daring swindle] to the mooch [or victim], Linn Bonner, "Dynamiters", Flynn's, Aug. 13, 1927; extant. Cf. zex.

zib. A nincompoop: mostly convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose—but current since ca. 1920. A quasi-echoic word.

ziff. A juvenile thief: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I (see quot'n at yoxter); 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1890, B & L; 1904, F & H; † by 1920. Prob. a perverted shortening of eriff, q.v.

zigaboo. See jiggabo, ref. of 1940.

zinc, n. and v. Money; to convert into money: 1925, Leverage; extant. The v. ex the n.; the n., depreciatory—cf. the synonymous familiar Eng. dirt and muck.

Ziph is a form of gibberish; e.g., 'Shagall wege gogo awagey?', shall we go away? See also NARCOTICS ZIPH.

zipper. To 'shut up'; to stop talking, to refrain from talking: 1933, Eagle, where it is v.i.; 1933, Ersine, '(Almost invariably the term is a command.) "Zipper that mug!"'; extant. Ex the zip fastening.

zits, the. Information: Oct. 19, 1929, Flynn's, Lawrence M. Maynard, 'Protection', ('stool pigeon' soliloquizing) 'Better give him'—a captain of police—the zits on the Acme job and get clear for a good getaway'; slightly ob. Origin? Perhaps a corruption of chits, 'memoranda'.

znees. Frost: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; 1785, Grose, 'Frost or frozen'—but he does not classify it as c.; indeed, it was prob. not c. Perhaps ex a dial. pronunciation of sneeze, a frequent result of frosty cold.

zock is a S. African variant of zack.

zodiac. 'This word has degenerated into Soda: It means the top card in the box': professional gamblers' and card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell; ob. Ex the fact that, like the Zodiac, it is high up.

zol. A dagga cigarette; maak a zol, to roll one: S. Africa: C. 20. Letter, May 23, 1940, from C. P. Wittstock. Perhaps ex Dutch zoel, 'mild' (to smoke), hence 'soothing'.

zoo. A prison, a jail: since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex the variety of 'Society's wild beasts' there compounded.—2. A brothel; esp. one where the girls are of many nationalities: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; BVB, 1942. Its 'inmates are from many lands and places' (Irwin).

zook. 'A worn-out old prostitute,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931—but current since early in the century; 1942, BVB. (1) 'A coined word, probably from some intoxicated tramp who mispronounced "hooker"' (Irwin). (2) Perhaps hooker + zoo (for the shape, cf. gook). (3) Prob., however, of Ger. origin and cognate with stuk, q.v.

zoolo. See zulu, 2.

zouch. 'An ungenteeled Man,' D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd, 1728; 1785, Grose, 'A slovenly ungenteeled man, one who has a stoop in his gait'—but Grose (who gives the variant slouch) does not classify it as c.—nor can I think that it was long, if indeed ever, c.

zoucher. See sycher and cf. zouch.

zucke. An old prostitute: C. 20. Kernôt, 1929–31. Cf. zook.

zulu. 'An immigrant car, provided for the transportation of the stock and household effects of a settler . . . a weird appearance when loaded with all the impedimenta' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931): at least as much railroad s. as tramps' c.—2. A Negro: esp. convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose (zoolo); extant. Ex:—3. 'The Negroes who wear gilded costumes and march in the grand entry'—i.e., parade—'of the circus are known as "Zulus"', The New York Herald Tribune, Feb. 17, 1937, Barry Buchanan: C. 20 circus s., not c.

&c. See et cetera.

ADDENDA

IN 1936-40 (until the end of August) I completed the work upon the period up to 1903, inclusive; in August 1945-July 1946, the period 1904-45. Owing to a delay in printing, I have had, in late December 1948-mid-January 1949 to attempt to make up the time-lag of three years, as well as to deal with such few sources for the earlier period as have come to my notice since July 1946.

No one, except perhaps Joseph F. Fishman, Godfrey Irwin and David W. Maurer, the three leading American authorities upon cant in the United States, can be so acutely aware as I am that this dictionary is, for the years since 1940, incomplete on the American side; even there, however, I have, I think, done as well as circumstances permitted. But I do not wish to hide behind the excuse that eight years hardly represent an unforgivable hiatus in a dictionary that covers the American underworld since ca. 1790.

The English part of the book is very much less affected for the period since 1940 than the American part has been; nevertheless, I realize that even for Britain, the material of 1941-49 is a shade less comprehensive than I should wish.

Authentic references, whether written or oral, and whether British or American, will be welcomed for the period 1941+ : and, indeed, for the period before 1941.

All cross-references are to terms within these Addenda, unless indication has been made to the main body of the Dictionary.

Additional abbreviations—concerning the Addenda only—are these :—

- Fishman = Joseph Fulling Fishman, 'Get Their Gab'—a series of six conversations, with translation, in Startling Detective, June-November 1947. Unable to procure the issue for August.
 MacDonald = John C. R. MacDonald, Crime Is a Business, 1939.
 Maurer, 1947 = David W. Maurer, 'The Argot of the Three-Shell Game' : American Speech, October 1947.
 Spindrift = Spindrift (= Eruera Tooné), Yankee Slang, 1932 (privately printed : London).

Of those three authorities, I owe the indication of 'Fishman', as also of Margaret Murray's serial, to the kindness of my ever-helpful Toronto friend, William Kernôt, whose extremely useful manuscript glossary is recorded in the Abbreviations preceding the Dictionary proper; and of 'Spindrift', a rare, very little-known book, as also of Stanley Jackson's Soho, to my no less knowledgeable Parliament Hill Fields friend, Wilfred Granville, one of my two valued collaborators in A Dictionary of Forces' Slang : 1939-1945 (published in 1948) and sole author of that delightful and instructive work, Sea Slang of the 20th Century : A Dictionary (1949). For a long essay upon the language of the underworld, see Here, There and Everywhere (philological essays and studies), 1950.

ERIC PARTRIDGE.

February 6, 1949.

A

air dance ; air jig ; air polka. (All preceded by the.) Hanging as a death sentence : since ca. 1920. Spindrift. Cf. dance upon nothing (p. 176).

angler.—6. (Cf. sense 1 : p. 8.) A pickpocket : U.S.A. : ca. 1918–40. Spindrift.

apple. 'Among confidence men the following terms are synonymous. Professional swindlers use . . . apple, egg, Bates, savage, winchell, interchangeably to designate . . . a victim,' Larry Roberts in Front Page Detective, Nov. 1947. The first, prob. ex. apple-knocker, 2 (p. 9) ; for egg, see p. 220 ; Bates, perhaps antiphrastically ex Doctor Bates (p. 195) ; with savage, cf. hick and hoosier in Dict. ; winchell = Winchell = Walter Winchell, the world-famous columnist and wit, ex an envious imputation of gullibility.

arm(-)s squirt. A hypodermic syringe : drug traffic : since ca. 1920. Spindrift.

awakening. 'The sudden realization of the victim that he has been swindled' (MacDonald) : bunco-steerers' : C. 20.

B

baby-grand. 'A "grand" is a thousand dollars, a "baby grand" five hundred,' Margaret Murray, 'By a "Gunman's Moll"' in American Weekly, 1932 : since ca. 1928 ; by 1948, slightly ob.

bad-actor (or -er). A killer : 1932, Spindrift ; by 1940, s.

baker. A loafer ; a tramp : 1932, Spindrift ; not very gen.

bandog.—2. A uniformed police officer : U.S.A. (mostly burglars') : C. 20. Fishman, Oct. 1947. See sense 1 : p. 19.

bang-up, n. ; esp., give (someone) a bang-up, to give information, a 'tip', 'the office', to someone : mostly burglars' : since ca. 1930. Fishman, Oct. 1947. Cf. bang up, adv. : p. 19.

baron.—2. (Prob. independently of sense 1 : p. 23.) A convict profiteering in prison, esp. with tobacco (hence also tobacco baron), utilized in very thin cigarettes—baron roll-ups or merely roll-ups : English convicts' : since ca. 1945. Douglas Warth ('Racketeers behind the Bars') in Sunday Pictorial, Aug. 29, 1948. Hence baronning, 'illicit tobacco trading' (in prison) : Douglas Warth.

Bates. See apple.

bath in canal. To drown (someone) : since early 1920's. Spindrift. Euphemistic.

batter, n.—2. As in an easy batter, a house, etc., easy to rob : U.S.A. : since ca. 1930. Fishman, June 1947. Cf. bash, v., 3 (p. 23).

bean trap (p. 27). Also in U.S.A. : 1932, Spindrift, 'Bean traps : Confidence tricksters, card sharps, swindlers' ; extant there.

bee on, put the, 3 (p. 29). Earlier in The Shadow, Nov. 1931, story by Dabney Horton.

behind the gun. Susceptible of prison sentence if caught : since ca. 1935. (David W. Maurer in The American Mercury, Feb. 1946.) Ironical for 'in front of the gun' : there to be shot at.

bell box. A cash register : Nov. 1927, Crime Mysteries (Dr H. H. Matteson) ; extant. It goes ping !

belly up ? Have a drink : mostly pickpockets' : since ca. 1930. Fishman, July 1947. Ex the toast bottoms up !

benny kick. Overcoat pocket : mostly burglars' : C. 20. Fishman, Oct. 1947. See the elements—in the Dict. proper.

bent, adj., 1 (p. 33). Anglicized ca. 1935 ; e.g., in 'A "bent screw" . . . a crooked warder who is prepared to traffic with a prisoner' (Douglas Warth in 'Racketeers behind the Bars'—Sunday Pictorial, Aug. 29, 1948).

big dick (or Dick). A ten years' sentence : see calendar.

Big Fog, the. Pittsburgh, Pa. : since ca. 1918. Fishman, June 1947. Ex the smoke-caused fogs experienced there.

big shot.—3. (Cf. sense 2 : p. 37). In some prisons, however, he is the Warden. Spindrift, 1932.

big stick. 'The Governor of a jail [or prison] is officially the Warden ; to the crook he is the big shot, big stick, big noise,' Spindrift, 1932 ; ob.

bing, n.—4. 'In the "bing", the solitary confinement cells,' Joseph F. Fishman ('Detective Work in Prisons' : The American Mercury, Aug. 1947) : Am. convicts' : since ca. 1930. A thinning of bung (S.E. n. and coll. v.).

bird, n., 5 (p. 40). Also in U.S.A. since ca. 1930. Fishman, July 1947.

bird dog (p. 40). In bunco-steerer's language, a bird dog is 'a scout, a lookout, a preliminary-information seeker ; a prospect contactor in lot rackets ; an important person in a kidnapping' (MacDonald).

Bitter Biscuit, the. The Southern Railroad and its district : mostly burglars' : since ca. 1920. Fishman, Oct. 1947.

black act.—2. In U.S.A. the b.a. is 'picking door locks in the dark,' Spindrift : since ca. 1920.

black pills. Pellets of opium : drug traffic : since ca. 1910 ; by 1935, police and journalistic s. (Spindrift.) Cf. black smoke (p. 45).

blaze ; esp. in give (someone) the blaze, to look him over carefully, to gaze hard at : mostly burglars' : since ca. 1925. Fishman, Oct. 1947.

blindfold act, the. An execution ; a hanging : C. 20. Spindrift. The victim is blindfolded.

boder ; usually in pl. 'No boders of any kind even if you have the score No connections of any kind, even if you have the money,' Fishman, Nov. 1947. The term would seem to mean 'messenger' : cf. S.E. foreboding.

Bog, the. The prison at Portlaoighise : Irish : C. 20. In, e.g., D.83222, I Did Penal Servitude, 1945. Cf. bogs, the : p. 58.

boiler(-)snatcher. An automobile-stealer : since late 1920's. Spindrift. Cf. boiler, 5 (p. 59).

booby hutch (p. 61). Also in U.S.A. : Spindrift, 1932 (cell at police station).

boodled. Carrying much money in cash, 'usually said of a sucker' : three-shell game operators' : C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

boost, n.—3. Ex 2 (p. 63) : the boost, 'skills' and 'sticks' collectively : C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

Booze Bourse, the. Brooklyn: mostly burglars': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Oct. 1947.

Bowery slang in relation to American cant. The former bears to the latter, in so far as the latter is spoken in New York, much the same relation as low Cockney slang does to London cant.

Edward W. Townsend, in Chimmie Fadden, published in England in 1897, but written as articles in 1893-95 and as a book either in 1895 or in 1896 in the U.S.A., reproduces the speech of a 'Bowery boy' (here, youth and young man),—a readable book upon the speech of the Bowery is long overdue.—Apart from a sole record (work the goose) of a cant term not found elsewhere, apart also from the occurrence, in 'Chimmie's Lullaby', of the slang phrase, It's a lulu, the following underworld terms would appear to have been adopted from Bowery slang:— dicer, 1 (a hat)—p. 185;

farmer, 2 (a simpleton)—p. 232;

gilly, n., or gillie (a fellow)—p. 286;

ginny, 3 (an Italian)—p. 287;

plunk (a dollar)—p. 522;

right people (see separate entry)—p. 568.

box to crack. 'House to burgle,' Spindrift: since late 1920's. Cf. box, n., 1 (p. 68).

brain box. Combination of a safe: safe-crackers': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Sept. 1947. A brainy device.

bread box. A safe easy to open: safe-crackers': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Sept. 1947. As simple to open as a bread bin.

breech kick (p. 71). In The American Mercury, May 1948, David W. Maurer and Everett Debaun narrow it to 'a side-trousers-pocket'; the same for britch kick (p. 74).

brier. See briar (p. 72).

broadsmen.—2. Hence, a specialist in the three-card trick: since ca. 1935. Stanley Jackson, An Indiscreet Guide to Soho, 1946.

calendar. 'A sentence of imprisonment is a rap; one year is known as a calendar; five years a handful; ten years, big dick or deuce; life is a book or F.N.O. (from now on). Garter is an indeterminate sentence—say from two to ten years,' Spindrift: since ca. 1920. The sentence exhausts precisely 365 days or 1 year—normally, one calendar.

For deuce, compare, however, deuce, n., 2 (p. 184).

camera eye.—2. (Ex 1: p. 100.) 'Underworld spy for police': since mid-1920's. Spindrift.

camp, v.; usually as vbl n., camping or as go camping, solicitation of—to go out soliciting—clients: pathics', esp. professionals': since ca. 1920. (Communicated: July 23, 1948.) Cf. camp, n., 1, and camp, adj., on p. 100, and see Partridge, 1937.

can-opener.—3. (Prob. ex 2: p. 101.) 'Acid . . . used to . . . blow the locks of safes and strong rooms,' Spindrift: since late 1920's.

carpet, v.; usually carpeted, 'On a charge for misbehaviour (also "cased" or "matted")': convicts': since ca. 1925. Douglas Warth, ('Abridged Prison Glossary') in Sunday Pictorial, Aug. 29, 1948. On the carpet before the Governor.

Carrie Nation chopper. A tomahawk: since bucket of suds. False information: 1932, Spindrift, 'Can the suds and spill the berries—stop lying and tell the truth'; extant. Ex the lit. sense, 'dirty slops'.

bug, v.—12. To bribe (someone): U.S.A.: since late 1930's. Spindrift. Perhaps ex sense 6 (p. 80).

bugs, adj. (p. 81). Rather, throughout C. 20. It occurs, e.g., in Alexander Berkman, Prison Memoirs of an Anarchist, 1912 (p. 47 of the English edition, published in 1926).

bunco-steerer (p. 87). The 'locus classicus' of the subject is John C. R. MacDonald's Crime is a Business, 1939, by which date bunco-steering has come to mean swindling in general and confidence-trickery in particular; bunco, indeed, has become a synonym, both of 'swindling' and of 'swindler'. At pp. 6-9 of this work, Police Inspector MacDonald lists the chief terms in bunco: they appear, with reference 'MacDonald', in these Addenda.

bundle, n.—5. A thin package containing a hypodermic needle and carried by the male addict on the secret person: drug traffic: since ca. 1930. David W. Maurer in The American Mercury, Feb. 1946. Cf. bindle, 2 (p. 39).

burner.—3. See CONDEMNED-CELL CANT, where burner denotes the man that pulls the electric switch; the term is rarely used except in this phrase. But the term is also applied to the electric chair itself: Spindrift, 1932.

bushwhacker. 'One who shoots a man from concealment: in pioneering days those who shot from cover of a bush,' Spindrift: C. 20. Perhaps coined by an Australian: cf. bushranger (p. 91).

buy a pair of shoes. A variant (Fishman, Oct. 1947), cf. buy new shoes (p. 94): mostly burglars': since ca. 1930.

buzz-man, 'an informer' (p. 95). Its use in U.S.A. since late 1920's is independent; ex buzz, v., 5 (p. 95).

C

1920's; by 1945, ob. Spindrift, 'The notorious Carrie Nation devoted her energies to smashing liquor saloons with a small axe or hatchet'.

case, v., 2 (p. 108): origin. Dr David Maurer, however, in The American Mercury of March 1947, says that it comes from gambling-houses: an employee, 'checking on those who are playing faro-bank,' and known as a 'case-keeper', 'has charge of a tabulator resembling an abacus (or "case")', which he uses to keep tab on the cards which have been drawn and played'. Se non è vero è ben trovato; yet I prefer my verb-ex-noun derivation as being direct, natural, simple—8. (Ex 1.) See carpet, v.

cat.—9. '“Cat” is yegg vernacular for one with nerves of steel,' Dr H. H. Matteson in Crime Mysteries, Nov. 1927. As cold-blooded as a cat.

cat foot; mostly in pl., cat feet, detectives: since ca. 1925; by 1940, s. Spindrift. Cf. pussy foot (p. 540).

charge, v.—2. To come; to arrive: since ca. 1925. Margaret Murray, in American Weekly, 1932. Ex 'come at a run'.

Charley. Cocaine: drug traffic: since the 1920's. Wm J. Spillard, Needle in a Haystack, 1945, 'The world of dope spoke a language all its own. The word for narcotics was gow or stuff. More specifically, it was classified as M, C, and H—Mary, Charlie, and Harry—which stood for morphine, cocaine, and heroin.

check artist (p. 117). Earlier (1932) in Spindrift, who defines it as 'forger of cheques'.

cheeser. A safe easy to open: safecrackers': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Sept. 1947. Cf. bread box.

chef, n., 3 (p. 118). Strictly applied to electrocution, as in Spindrift, 1932.

chief gat. 'Principal gunman for a "Big Shot" racketeer,' Spindrift: since ca. 1925. See gat (p. 280).

chill, v.—6. (Of prospective victims) to lose interest; to become suspicious: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947. Perhaps ex 3 (p. 119).

Chinese molasses. Opium: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. Spindrift. Cf. Chinese needlework (p. 120).

chisel(1)er.—2. Hence, a guard in a prison: convicts': since ca. 1925. Spindrift. He makes a heavy commission on his illicit dealings with the prisoners.

church, n.—4. (Ex church, send to: p. 126) 'Place where the jewelry's altered so it can't be identified,' Fishman, Oct. 1947: Am. burglars': since ca. 1925.

cinder seat. '... the electric chair... termed the hot chair, hot seat, hot squat, burner, scorcher, sizzler, juice tickler, frying-pan, cinder seat and the wires,' Spindrift, 1932; by 1949, ob.

class chats. 'Swell residences': burglars': C. 20. Fishman, Oct. 1947. Here, class = classy, smart, fashionable; chat, n., 4: p. 116.

clean, v.—4. (Of hired assistants) to remove their winnings immediately: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947. Cf. sense 3 (p. 128).

clipping. 'Clipping, Pay-off, Blow-off—Terms used to denote the actual point of victim's payment' (MacDonald): bunco-steerers': since ca. 1920. Cf. clipped (p. 131).

clips (very rare in singular). Police: ca. 1895–1930. Frederick Martyn, A Burglar in Baulk, 1910. Cf. clipped, 2 (p. 131).

clown.—3. (Prob. ex 2: p. 133). A commercial swindler's victim: since ca. 1930. MacDonald.

cob.—3. '7½ oz. piece of bread, half the daily ration,' Douglas Warth in Sunday Pictorial, Aug. 29, 1948: convicts': since ca. 1945. Chunky.

coffin, n., 3 (p. 136). Earlier in Spindrift, 1932.

cold skin. See hot skin.

cold storage. A prison: since ca. 1925; not very general. Spindrift, 1932. Cf. ice box (p. 352).

collector.—2. One who, for his gang chief, collects the protection money: U.S.A.: since ca. 1925. Margaret Murray ('By a "Gunman's Moll"') in American Weekly, 1932.

collies. 'Warders are termed collies, after collie dogs that ward and drive sheep into pens,' Spindrift, 1932; not very much used. With a pun on herder (p. 329) and pen, 1 (p. 503).

come-on.—5. A tool effective in breaking (e.g., the combination of) a safe: safecrackers': since ca. 1930. Fishman, Sept. 1947.

come through.—3. (Also n.: hyphenated.) A cheated customer that comes back with a police officer to recover his money; to do this: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947. Cf. senses 1, 2 (p. 142).

con, n., 6 (p. 143). Earlier in A. Berkman, Prison Memoirs, 1912. Likewise sense 5, in its predominant nuance 'confidence man', occurs there.

CONDEMNED-CELL CANT AT SING SING. Lawson E. Lawes, the Warden of Sing Sing, has in his Meet the Murderer, 1940, this notable passage, into which I have interpolated [the references to the Dictionary proper]; several of these terms are in use at other United States prisons.

'The condemned have originated such localisms as "the last mile" and "the hot seat" [p. 346], and refer to an electrocution as "burning" [see burn, v. 3, 4] or "frying" [see fry, v.]. When one of their number is granted a reprieve they jokingly remark: "The burner is out of a fee". In the same jocular vein the men speak of the pre-execution chamber, where a man is confined the day he is to die, as "the dance hall" [p. 176]. That anteroom is large and circular and might be likened to one.'

cook(-)up, n. 'The point at which the victim is ready to enter completely into the game' (MacDonald): confidence men's: since ca. 1930. Cf. cook up, v., 4 (top of p. 147).

cool spot. 'A hiding place, such as a "quiet hotel, semi-protected, where mobs go till the "heat" is off' (MacDonald): since ca. 1930. Cf. cool off, 1 (p. 147).

cooties reveille. 'Lights out in the cells,' Spindrift: convicts': since ca. 1919. Cf. cootie cage (p. 148).

cop a heel, 1 (p. 148). Also, merely to run, make off fast: burglars': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Oct. 1947.

cop the jack-pot. To obtain, esp. to steal, a large sum of money: since ca. 1920. Spindrift, 'The "Jack Pot" in poker is an accumulation of stakes'.

cop (someone's) take. 'I got a legit joint that cops my take... all... I steal,' Fishman, Oct. 1947: burglars': since ca. 1920.

count-down. A customer's loss after he has been encouraged by an 'inside man': three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

cowboy (p. 155). A year earlier in Margaret Murray, 'By a "Gunman's Moll"': American Weekly, 1932.

crank row, on. In the lunatics' part of a convict prison: ca. 1905–35; by 1920, prison s. Alexander Berkman, Prison Memoirs, 1912. Cf. cranky hutch (p. 158). Those convicts who are in it are known as the crank gang: Starr Daily, Release, 1942.

croak, n.—3. (Cf. sense 2: p. 162.) A professional killer, esp. for a gang: U.S.A.: Aug. 1932, The Shadow, story by Joseph Faus; not widely used. Ex the v., 3. croaker.—8. An informer; one who turns States Evidence: U.S.A.: since mid-1920's. Spindrift. Ex croak, v., 5 (p. 162).

cut in (p. 172).—2. Hence, cut (someone) in is applied to a drug addict that shares 'his ration with a known addict who makes the purchase for him' (David W. Maurer in The American Mercury, Feb. 1946): drug traffic: since ca. 1920.

D

damper.—3. Dynamite: U.S.A., among safe-crackers': since ca. 1930. Fishman, Sept. 1947. Cf. S.E. fire-damp.

dance of the wooden dolls, the. The lock-step: convicts' (— 1932). Spindrift.

dead-lock.—2. Hence, to imprison: since early 1930's. Fishman, June 1947.

dead(-)wood (p. 180). No; extant, especially in the drug traffic. David W. Maurer in The American Mercury, Feb. 1946.

diddies (rare in singular). Loosely, any gypsies; strictly, half-caste gypsies: tramps' and gypsies': late C. 19–20. The singular (diddy) is a diminutive of diddykay (properly didekei) on p. 185.

digger.—5. (Always the digger.) A solitary-confinement cell: Irish convicts': C. 20. In, e.g., D.83222, I Did Penal Servitude, 1945. Perhaps cf. jigger, n., 9 (p. 364).

dink.—3. (Ex 1: p. 189). See hinks for this three-shell game sense.

dink(-)spieler. An 'inside man', playing the game: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947. Lit., 'imitation player': see dink, 3 (above) and spieler (p. 666).

ditch, v., 5 (p. 191). Esp. ditch the swag, to 'secrete the loot' (Spindrift).

do bird. To serve time in prison: mostly convicts': since ca. 1925. Sunday Pictorial, Aug. 29, 1948. See bird, n., 4 and 5 (p. 40), and bird-lime, n. and v. (p. 40).

do it all (p. 193). A year earlier in Joseph F. Fishman, Crucibles of Crime, 1923.

do-right people. Variant plural of do-right John (p. 194). The American Mercury, Feb. 1946 (David W. Maurer).

doctor.—4. See professor, 2.

Doctor White.—2. (Ex 1: p. 195.) A drug addict: addicts': since ca. 1930. Fishman, Nov. 1947.

dog, n., 1 (p. 195). Among safecrackers in C. 20, dogs means specifically 'tumblers of a safe': Fishman, Sept. 1947.

dot-and-carry-one. An 'Oregon boot' (p. 486): 1932, Spindrift; by 1949, ob. Proleptic.

double, n.—6. A period of two years: U.S.A.: mostly pickpockets': since ca. 1930. Fishman, July 1947.

double-decker. A trick 'in which one shell is placed partly over another (the pea is under it)': three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.—2. 'Safe-cracker's term for double-steel burglar-proof door of safe or vault' (Spindrift): since ca. 1910.

double-double, the. The 'double cross': since ca. 1938. Richard Collier in The Daily Mail, April 22, 1948. Ex double-double, put on the (end of p. 200).

dough bug. A wealthy person: since ca. 1920; by 1945, s. Spindrift.

drop, n., 8 (p. 207). Also in U.S.A.: burglars': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Oct. 1947.—10. Since ca. 1935, also in 'the hijacking racket' (see finger man, 5), thus: 'The immediate problem after a trucking theft is to unload the merchandise and abandon the empty truck. For this purpose the gang must have a "drop" where the loot can be stored until the fence can arrange for its sale and distribution': Malcolm Johnson in The American Mercury, April 1947.

dropping in front, vbl n. "'Dropping in front" means paying in advance for something to be fixed. It has gone out of favour, for suddenly, mysteriously, there is no more honour among thieves,' Richard Collier in The Daily Mail, Jan. 21, 1948. Cf. drop, v., 2 (p. 208).

Drum, the. See Joy, the. Irish convicts' term of C. 20.

duke, v.—2. 'To slip a stick money to bet on the game'; duke (someone) in, 'to place the sucker's hand on a shell and hold it, meanwhile building him up for a big bet': three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947. Cf. sense 1: p. 215.

duster.—4. 'Patrolmen'—policemen on the beat—'carry a long, heavy, hardwood club, known to criminals as the hairless-brush or duster,' Spindrift: since ca. 1925. Humorously euphemistic.

dusting(-)off. Act or process of 'reviewing a criminal file that is in suspense' (Spindrift): since ca. 1920. The reviewer has to blow off the dust that has settled on the file.

F

F.N.O. See calendar.

fairy grape. See frozen blood.

fake(-)load; fake(-)steal. A move in which the 'inside man' pretends (a) to put, from the rear, the pea under a shell and (b) to remove the pea from a shell: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

fancy-flowered box. A coffin: since ca. 1924. Spindrift. In 1920–33, 'big shot' racketeers had, or accorded, sumptuous funerals.

fiddle, v.—12. (Cf. fiddling, 6: p. 238.) To rob (persons): U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. Fishman, June 1947.

finger end. Proportionately, a small share of the loot; a small amount: burglars': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Oct. 1947. See end: p. 222.

finger man.—4. (Cf. senses 2 and 3: p. 242.) An informer: 1932, American Weekly, Margaret Murray, 'By a "Gunman's Moll"': by 1948, slightly ob.—5. (Ex 1.) In the hijacking racket that is a legacy of Prohibition days (1920–33), the activity being transferred to general haulage, 'information is supplied by "finger men" who are usually gang members working as employees of trucking companies,' as Malcolm Johnson ('The Hijacking Racket') tells us in The American Mercury of April 1947.

finger sucker steal. A deceptive move for the benefit of the victim, who sees the 'inside man' lift the pea: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

finishing school. A women's prison, as distinct from a juvenile institution: since ca. 1925. Margaret Murray in American Weekly, 1932. There a prisoner learns much that she hadn't known before she entered the place.

fit one's mitt, or fix one's mitt; fit the stick. (Of an operator) to slip, to a fcc'd better, money with which to bet: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

fix one's mitt. See fit one's mitt.

flaky. Addicted to cocaine: drug traffic: since middle 1920's. Wm J. Spillard, Needle in a Hay-Stack, 1945, 'We couldn't help enjoying the name Flaky Lou. She was named after cocaine, which is flaky in appearance.' Cf. flake on p. 248.

flapping track. A greyhound-racing stadium, operated not under the rules of the National Greyhound Racing Club but 'licensed by the local authority, and usually run by one or two "locals" as a business venture,' Sergeant F. Tomlinson, 'The "Flapping Track"'—a most informative article in The Police Journal of July-Sept. 1947. Originally (ca. 1937) the term was cant; by 1945, at latest, it was slang, used mostly by police and greyhound-racing 'fans'. In the course of this article, Sergeant Tomlinson cites two underworld terms: ringer and (wide) boys. 'The term "ringer" means that a dog other than the one scheduled on the race-card has been run—and . . . the substitute dog nearly always wins', a special application, therefore, of ringer, 4 (p. 570). For the other term, see boy, 1, on p. 68, and wide boys on p. 772. flash, n.—9. The victim's permitted 'quick look at the pea under the shell', also known as a flash(-)peek, merely peek, or sucker(-)flash: Am. three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947. Cf. :—

flash, v.—5. (Cf. flash, v., 3: p. 249.) To show to (the victim) the position of the pea: Am. three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947. Cf. flash, n., 9 (above).

flash peek. See flash, n., 9.

flats, on the. On the ground floor: esp. among safecrackers: since ca. 1920. Fishman, Sept. 1947.

fly a kite (p. 258). Earlier American instance: 1923, Joseph F. Fishman, Crucibles of Crime, 1923.

fly-paper, be on the (p. 259). Much the earliest record I've found is this series in Frederick Martyn, A Burglar in Baulk, 1910:

'Ringing the Act on a man Arresting him under the Crimes Prevention Act.

On the flypaper . . . Subject to the Crimes Prevention Act.

Under the Act . . . Same as above.'

four exits from jail. There are four exits from jail: 'pay out, run out, work out (serve the term), and die out—meaning die in' (Spindrift): convicts' catch-phrase: C. 20.

fox, n., 5 (p. 265). Spindrift, 1932, 'An escaped convict'.

frame the gaff. See spread the store.

frozen blood. 'GEMS: Diamonds—ice; rubies—frozen blood; emeralds—Irish favourites; pearls—fairy grapes,' Spindrift: since ca. 1924. Hue.

fun joint. An opium den: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. David W. Maurer in The American Mercury, Feb. 1946. See fun, n., 3 (p. 271).

funk box. A safe's inside box or locked compartment for money: safecrackers': since ca. 1930. Fishman, Sept. 1947. Ex s. funk, fear: money being put there for additional safety.

G

G, the. The 'G-men' (see G man, p. 272): since late 1920's; by 1940, police s. Wm J. Spillard, Needle in a Haystack, 1945, "'The G is after you"'. . .

gag, v.—5. To rob (usually a place): Am. burglars': C. 20. Fishman, Oct. 1947. Cf. gagging, 1: p. 275.

gagger, n., 5 (p. 275). In A Burglar in Baulk, 1910, Frederick Martyn defines gaggers simply as 'beggars'.

gander, n.—2. A criminal's look-out man: Nov. 1927, Crime Mysteries, Dr H. H. Matteson, 'Tales of a Prison Doctor', extant, though little used. Ex sense 1 (p. 278).

garter (p. 279). Earlier in Spindrift, 1932. Rather because a garter is made of elastic; the sentence, likewise, is elastic, it stretches from two-stretch to ten-stretch.

gat goose (p. 280). Earlier (1932) in Spindrift, who defines it as 'bandit'.

get-in betty. A door-opening 'jemmy': safecrackers': since ca. 1920. Fishman, Sept. 1947. See betty, n., 1: p. 34.

gilly, n. (p. 286). For earlier record and spelling gillie, see 'Bowery slang . . .'

ginny, 3 (p. 287). Earlier in Edward W. Townsend, Chimmie Boy, 1897 (English edition): 'On de way [to the East End of New York] we came across a gang of for'ners, ginneys and sheenies and such'.

girl.—2. A pathic or catamite: Am. convicts' (—1912) >, by 1925, English homosexuals'.

Alexander Berkman, Prison Memoirs, 1912, 'The prison element variously known as "the girls", "Sallies", and "punks", who for gain traffic in sexual gratification'; Joseph F. Fishman, Sex in Prison, 1935, 'The passive type, known variously as "punks", "girls", "fags", "pansies", or "fairies", as distinguished from . . . the active participants . . . known in prison slang as "top men" or "wolves"'. . .

give (someone) his; give (someone) his needings. Variants (Spindrift, 1932) of give the works (p. 289), 'to kill'; by 1943, the former was s.; by 1948, the latter was ob.

glimmer, 4. (p. 292). Earlier in Alex. Berkman, Prison Memoirs, 1912.—6. (Prob. ex 5: p. 292). A teller of hard-luck stories: mostly beggars': since ca. 1935. Stanley Jackson, An Indiscreet Guide to Soho, 1946.

go over the hump. To 'get the exhilaration from narcotics' (Fishman, Nov. 1947): drug traffic: since ca. 1930. Cf. over the hump, 2: p. 489.

godfathers (p. 748: twelve g.) was, according to Spindrift, revived in Prohibition U.S.A.

gold(-)duster. A cocaine addict: drug traffic: since early 1930's. Fishman, Nov. 1947. Ex gold dust: p. 297.

goo.—2. Blood: since late 1920's. Spindrift. Adoption, by the underworld, of the nursery's goo, 'glue': congealing blood resembles, in consistency, a thinnish liquid glue.

good citizen. A man or woman who will go out of his way to see that a crook gets arrested, tried and sent up, even though the crook didn't take anything from him or beat him up. The underworld got that expression from their own lawyers, these "mouthpieces" got it from prosecuting attorneys, who use it in addressing juries,' Margaret Murray ('By a "Gunman's Moll"') in American Weekly, 1932: since ca. 1924. Ironie.

good credentials. Reputation for 'excellence' in lawlessness: since ca. 1924. Spindrift. Ironie.

goodman, 3 (p. 299). Extant in U.S.A. for 'clever crook': Spindrift.

goof ball.—2. (Ex 1: p. 299.) A smoker of marijuana cigarettes: drug traffic: since ca. 1940. Fishman, Nov. 1947.

goose, work the. See work . . .

gooseberry pudding, 2. (p. 300). Fishman, June 1947, defines it as a 'cheap, frowzy woman'.

gorilla.—2. (Ex 1: p. 301.) 'One who makes the "snatches" in a kidnapping and guards the victim' (MacDonald): since ca. 1935.

Gorman, the. See Joy, the. Irish convicts' term: C. 20.

grapevine route, the. Earlier in Spindrift, 1932.

grifter.—3. A card-sharper: 1932, Spindrift; by 1949, ob. Ex 1, 2 (p. 309).

grindstone. Someone on whom a pickpocket practises his art: pickpockets': since ca. 1935. Fishman, July 1947. Cf. grindstone . . . (p. 308).

gum, v.—3. To rob (a place): burglars': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Oct. 1947. Perhaps ex gum, n., 2 (p. 312).

gumboot. A burglars' variant of gumshoe (p. 312): since ca. 1910. Fishman, Oct. 1947.

gumshod; gumshoer. Variants (not much used) of gumshoe, n. (p. 312), a detective. Spindrift.

gun(-)slick. 'Gunman who is exceedingly fast in the use of firearms' (Spindrift, 1932): since early 1920's; by 1940, police and journalistic s.

gun(-)slinger; gun(-)toter. A gangster gunman: since ca. 1925. Spindrift, who cites also gunny, rod(-)packer, slick(-)gat: all, not in Dict.

gunny. See gun(-)slinger.

H

hairless brush. See duster, 4.

half-sheet. 'Charge against a misbehaving warder' (Douglas Warth in Sunday Pictorial, Aug. 29, 1948): convicts': since ca. 1895: Frederick Martyn, A Beggar in Baulk, 1910; by 1945 (D.83222, I Did Penal Servitude), prison s. Ex the size of the complaints form used by the prisoner.

handful, 1. (p. 319). Earlier in Spindrift, 1932.

hang it on the limb (p. 319). Earlier in Spindrift, 1932.

hard-shell biscuit. An old-timer crook, esp. safecracker: safecrackers': since ca. 1920. Fishman, Sept. 1947.

harry.—2. (As Harry). Heroin: see Charley.

hattie. A girl: since ca. 1935. Fishman, June 1947. To a man, a girl's hat is noticeable.

headache man. A Federal officer engaged in investigating the traffic in narcotics: drug traffic: since ca. 1935. David W. Maurer, 'Speech of the Narcotic Underworld' in The American Mercury, Feb. 1946. He causes the addicts a headache.

headlight.—2. A diamond ring: anonymous (but dependable) correspondent, Oct. 17, 1947. Ex reflections therefrom.

heavy sugar (p. 327). Earlier in Spindrift, 1932.

heel the sticks. Same as fit one's mitt. (Maurer, 1947.)

hemp widow. A woman whose husband has been hanged: U.S.A.: mid-C. 19-20. Fishman, June 1947. Ex English hempen widow (p. 328).

hep (p. 329). In The American Mercury of May 1947, Dr David Maurer derives both hep and joe, adj. (p. 368, top), to an anecdote about one Joe Hep, a Chicago saloon-keeper. Ingenious; yet I hold by my own two originations.

herring.—3. A safe hard to crack: safecrackers': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Sept. 1947. A herring is a fish hard to eat.

high dive into, take a. To pickpocket into (a particularized pocket): since ca. 1910. Fishman, July 1947. Cf. high diver (p. 330).

high-gag, v. To inform on (one's accomplices): since ca. 1925. Spindrift. Cf. high gag, n., 2, on p. 330.

high jump, the. A hanging: convicts': late C. 19-20. 'Such cries as "One off" or "Another for the high jump"', D.83222, I Did Penal Servitude, 1945. As the trap-door swings open, the victim is left hanging in space. The other phrase, one off, is prison j., not c.: mostly a warders' term.

hinks or dinks or hucks. 'The hollowed-out wooden-cubes used as a substitute for the more notorious walnut-shells': three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947. Dinks has suggested hinks; for dinks, see dink, 3; for hucks, see p. 348.

hogging, n. Appropriation of greater part of a share-out: since ca. 1918. Spindrift. Cf. coll. hog, to take greedily.

hoist, n.—8. 'Holding victims heels up so that money tumbles on the floor' and is then pocketed by the thieves: U.S.A.: late C. 19-20. Spindrift.

Home, James! 'Prisoners refer facetiously to parole or pardon as "Home, James"', Spindrift: since ca. 1918. Ex man-about-town's customary remark, after an evening out, to his chauffeur.

Honeychile. Atlanta (in Georgia): burglars': C. 20. Fishman, Oct. 1947. Ex favourite endearment among Southern-State negroes.

hoochie-papping, n. and adj. Stealing a girl from another man: since ca. 1930. Fishman, June 1947.

hook, n.—7. A professional criminal: U.S.A.: since ca. 1925. Margaret Murray in American Weekly, 1932. Rhyming on crook.

hookum. A principle, system, method, 'line of business': late C. 19-20; by ca. 1915, low s.—and soldiers' s. Frederick Martyn, Reminiscences of a Rogue, 1908, and A Burglar in Baulk, 1910. Ex hook and snivey (p. 341).

hop, v. 'LET'S GO HOPPING: Suggestion to go to a dope den' (Spindrift): since ca. 1925. Ex the n.: p. 343.

hot carrier. An informer to the police: since ca. 1935. Fishman, June 1947. A pun on carrier pigeon: stool pigeon.

hot skin; cold skin. 'A full purse is a "hot skin"; an empty purse is a "cold skin"' (Mac.

Donald): since ca. 1930. Cf. hot, 2, 3 (p. 345), and skin, n., 1 (p. 630).

hot weather. 'When a crook is urgently wanted by police' (Spindrift): since ca. 1928. A pun on heat, 2 (p. 325).

hush-bush or bush, hush! A 'speakeasy'; a dope den, a gambling den: 1932, Spindrift; by 1949, slightly ob. Cf. hush-shop (p. 350).—2. A love interest; a mistress: since ca. 1940. Fishman, July 1947.

hustler.—6. (Cf. sense 4: p. 351.) 'Cardsharpener who inveigles persons into "crooked" games' (Spindrift): since mid-1920's.

I

ice(-)box.—5. A safe's inside box or compartment for diamonds: safecrackers': since ca. 1930. Fishman, Sept. 1947. See ice, n., 1 (p. 352).

ice(-)chest. An occ. variant of ice(-)box, 3' (p. 352). Spindrift.

ice-palace.—2. (Ex 1: p. 352.) A fashionable, or a gay and smart, hotel: since ca. 1935. Fishman, June 1947.

ice-tongs doctor (p. 352). In The American Mercury of Feb. 1946, David Maurer gives the form as ice-tong doctor and defines it as 'an abortionist who may also sell dope'.

in, n., 2 (p. 353). Anglicized ca. 1942: see, e.g., 'Men on the Run—3' (by Richard Collier in The Daily Mail, Jan. 21, 1948).

in the clear.—3. Having completed one's sentence: convicts' and ex-convicts': since ca. 1920. Spindrift.

info(-)shooter. An informer to the police: since mid-1920's; by 1940, police and journalist's s. Spindrift. Cf. info, 1: p. 354.

inside man, 3; inside shift. Operator of a three-shell game; a secret move by him: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

Irish favo(u)rite. An emerald: since early 1920's. Spindrift. With a pun on 'Ireland—the Emerald Isle' (ex its greenness).

iron cage. A prison: since ca. 1918; not much used. Spindrift. Cf. iron house (p. 352).

iron mike. See mike, 3.

ironed in the getaway. 'Shot when trying to escape' (Spindrift): since ca. 1918. Cf. iron, n., 4 (p. 356).

J

jerb. A variant of jerve, 1 (p. 363): David W. Maurer and Everett Debaun in The American Mercury, May 1948: app. since ca. 1930.

Jerry Linder (p. 363). The Am. form has remained Jerry Linda, and in U.S.A. the term is still c., used esp. by burglars for 'entry by a window': Fishman, Oct. 1947.

jigger, n., 10 (p. 364), as a convicts' word, occurs in Alex. Berkman, Memoirs, 1912.—13. (Cf. 9.) A term in prison: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Fishman, July 1947.

jiggeroo (p. 365). Earlier in Alex. Berkman, Prison Memoirs, 1912; there spelt jiggeroo and defined as 'Look out!'

jink. (Usually v.t.) To cheat: since ca. 1925. Spindrift. Ex aviation?

joint.—16. (Cf. 11 and 15: p. 370). A three-shell game: Am. three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

Joy, the. The prison at Mountjoy: Irish: C. 20; by 1945, s. In, e.g., D.83222, I Did Penal Servitude, 1945, "The Bog" is Portlaoighise Prison,' he replied. 'Mountjoy, "the 'Joy"; Dundrum, "The Drum"; Grangegorman, "The Gorman".'

juice-tickler. See cinderseat; cf. juicer (p. 374).

jump, v.—10. Usually in past p'ple, thus: 'Now in the language of the counterfeiter a "jumped" meter is one which has been tampered with so that at the turn of a valve, the gas flows around the meter instead of through it The unusually large quantity of gas necessary for heating metal has often betrayed the counterfeiter,' John J. Floherty, Men against Crime, 1946: U.S.A.: C. 20.

K

keep the store hot. (Of the 'inside man') to play steadily and modestly until a rich victim is landed: three-shell operators': since ca. 1910. Maurer, 1947. See store, 2.

kick(-)steal. A flip of a shell with concealment of the pea between the fingers: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

kid, 13 (p. 383). Thirty years earlier in Alex. Berkman's Memoirs (see kid man).

kid man. A sodomite: convicts': ca. 1895—

1930. Alex. Berkman, Prison Memoirs, 1912. See kid, 13, above.

kid top. A side-show tent: C. 20. Prob. c. at first; by 1920 at latest, circus s. Maurer, 1947.

kinky, n. Loot: safecrackers': since ca. 1930. Fishman, Sept. 1947. Ex the adj.: see p. 386.

knife(-)and(-)saw palace. See lysol dump.

knob(-)knocker. A hammer: mostly safecrackers': since ca. 1920. Fishman, Sept. 1947.

L

lag, n.—9. One's accomplices, collectively: Am. burglars': since ca. 1920. Fishman, Oct. 1947. Cf. senses 3, 6: p. 394.

lagging.—3. (Cf. 2: p. 395.) In Britain, since ca. 1935 among convicts, predominantly a prison-sentence of three years or more. Douglas Warth in Sunday Pictorial, Aug. 29, 1948.

lamster.—2. Hence, a deserter from the British Armed Forces: Great Britain: 1945+. Richard Collier ('Men on the Run' in The Daily Mail, Jan. 19, 1948).

lash dose. A flogging with the cat-o'-nine-tails: since ca. 1920. Spindrift.

last mile, the. See CONDEMNED-CELL CANT. The phrase has been current at Sing Sing prison since ca. 1925.

laying the note (p. 401). Also, says MacDonald in 1939, known among commercial swindlers as laying the hipec and one- (or five- or ten-) dollar push.

lead-off man. A gang leader: since ca. 1928. Margaret Murray, 'By a "Gunman's Moll"'—a serial in American Weekly, 1932. He takes the lead, the initiative.

leaks, turn on the. See turn leaks.

lift-up sucker(-)steal. A movement permitting the victim to see the removal (from the rear) of the pea: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

load, v., 2; loading position. To put (the pea) under a shell, ready for play; a position from which the pea can be secretly removed: Am. three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

loaded, be.—3. To contain a narcotic: drug traffic: since ca. 1918. Joseph F. Fishman, Crucibles of Crime, 1923. Cf. load, n., 4: p. 412.

loading position. See load, v., 2.

lobo crook. A crook that 'works' alone: since ca. 1926. Spindrift. Cf. lone wolf (p. 415): lobo is Spanish for a wolf.

locator (p. 414). Earlier in Spindrift, 1932.

long dough. A large sum of money, esp. if the victim's: three-shell operators': since ca. 1920. Maurer, 1947.

long end, the. See short end.

loudspeaker.—2. An attorney: since ca. 1925. Spindrift. Cf. mouthpiece (p. 452).

lumberer.—6. (Cf. senses 2, 3: p. 421.) A confidence man that does kerbstone business with drunks and usually, taking the money, disappears: mostly London: since ca. 1930. Stanley Jackson, An Indiscreet Guide to Soho, 1946.

lung it. To talk, chat: mostly burglars': since ca. 1920. Fishman, Oct. 1947. Cf. S.E. give voice.

lysol dump; knife-and-saw palace. A hospital: since ca. 1925; by 1935, s. Spindrift. Ex disinfectants and surgical operations.

M

magazine (p. 427). Margaret Murray, however, in 1932 ('By a "Gunman's Moll"' in American Weekly), differentiates thus: 'I learned that a 30-day sentence was a "newspaper" and a 60-day sentence a "magazine". A year term is a "book".'

making little rocks out of big rocks. Stone-breaking in prison: convicts': since ca. 1920. Spindrift.

man, 2 (p. 430). Also as in 'They [the convicts] call the Deputy Warden The Man,' Starr Daily, Release, 1942.

man Friday. Assistant to a crook: since ca. 1920; by 1935, journalistic s. Spindrift. Ex Defoe's Robinson Crusoe.

mandrake. When, at p. 191 of Shakespeare's Bawdy (London, 1947; New York, 1948), I suggested that in 2 Henry IV, III, ii, 324-5 (Shakespeare Head edition) Shakespeare was using mandrake to mean a sodomite, several reputed Shakespearean scholars (I myself am merely a Shakespeare-lover) either stated or hinted that I saw evil where none existed. Yet on November 16, 1948, a well-known writer, a man of unquestioned integrity and competent scholarship, who was at the time in south-west England, heard a Didekei clearly apply the term thus to a member of 'the brotherhood of the road': among gypsies, Didekeis, fair-ground stall-holders, tramps. It would seem the term mandrake has survived from Shakespeare's day; probably because of Shakespeare as played by itinerant actors.

Mary. Morphine. Ex Charley.

matted. See carpet, v.

mechanic. In a safebreaking 'mob', he who does the heavy work: safecrackers': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Sept. 1947.

medicine. Bullets; death by shooting: since ca. 1920; by 1945, s. Spindrift. A cure for the disease that is life.

mender; Mr Mender. See patch.

Merry Widow, The. A prison van: since ca. 1925. Spindrift. An ironic variation of black Maria (p. 45), ex the famous light opera.

metal merchant. A counterfeiter of coin: since ca. 1925. Spindrift. Euphemistic.

mike, 3; in full iron mike. A brass knuckleduster: esp. safecrackers': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Sept. 1947. Ex Irishmen's reputation for 'tough' rough-and-tumbles?

Miss Emma.—2. (Ex 1: p. 441). A morphine addict: drug traffic: since ca. 1930. Fishman, Nov. 1947.

mitt (someone) in. Same as duke in (see duke, v., 2). Maurer, 1947.

moll buzzer, 3 (p. 443). Thirteen years earlier in Alex. Berkman, Prison Memoirs, 1912.

mooch, n.—6. (Prob. ex 1 and 4: p. 447.) A meal: mostly beggars': since ca. 1920. Spindrift.

mope, n. (p. 449). But take a mope simply = to take a walk, as in Crime Mysteries, Nov. 1927 (article by Dr H. H. Matteson).

moskeneer (p. 459). Note, however, that the derivative v. mosker itself has a derivative, current throughout C. 20: mosker, 'a crook who specialises in pawnbroking swindles' (Stanley Jackson, An Indiscreet Guide to Soho, 1946): and this is c.

mouldy, v. To kill: mostly pickpockets': since ca. 1930. Fishman, 1947. Proleptic.

mouse(-)kick. 'Watch pockets are mouse-kicks,' D. W. Maurer and E. Debaun in The American Mercury, May 1948: since ca. 1925. Ex smallness?

mouthpiece.—3. 'A person who contacts the victim's representatives for the "pay-off" in cases of a "snatch"' (MacDonald): since ca. 1930. Ex sense 1 (p. 452).

Mr Bates. A victim: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947, 'Probably borrowed from pickpockets'.

Mr Mender. See patch.

muscle man (p. 458). Anglicized ca. 1939; by 1948 (Richard Collier in The Daily Mail, Jan. 21) journalistic s.

N

nest with a hen on. 'I'm hiking the town, watching for a nest with a hen on. (Promising prospect for robbery.):' Nov. 1927, Crime Mysteries, Dr H. H. Matteson, 'Tales of a Prison Doctor'; extant. Cf. familiar S.E. nest-egg, money laid by.

No. 3, 8, 13. Cocaine; heroin; morphine: drug traffic: since ca. 1930. Wm J. Spillard, Needle in a Haystack. The initial letters—C, H, M—are the 3rd, 8th, 13th in the alphabet.

nose, n.—7. (Ex 4.) A contact man employed by Black Marketeers (a) to enlist lorry-drivers willing, for a substantial bribe, to lose part or all of a load at a pre-arranged locality; or (b) to 'spy out the land at the Docks and the supply-depots': 1944+. Sense (a): The Daily Mail, April 21, 1948; (b) ibid., April 22, 1948 (Richard Collier).

O

O'Sullivan.—2. A safecracker: safecrackers': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Sept. 1947. Ex prevalence (?) of Irishmen among safecrackers.

oil, v., 2 (p. 479). Earlier in Spindrift, 1932.

okus. A wallet: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947. Cf. okey on p. 480.

Old Calamity. "'Old Calamity"—all deputy wardens are called that—thought differently,' Joseph F. Fishman in The American Mercury, Aug. 1947: convicts: since ca. 1920. (Earliest source, however, is the same writer's Crucibles of Crime, 1923.)

on for the blow, be. (Of the victim) to be undergoing the 'build-up' that ends in his being cheated: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

once, on the. (Of a person) alone: since ca. 1930. Fishman, June 1947.

outside man.—2. (Also the outside.) That member of a shell mob who entices simpletons to the three-shell game: Am. three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

P

park ape. A tramp: mostly pickpockets': since ca. 1920. Fishman, July 1947. Ex his proclivity towards sunning himself in city parks.

park the hot boiler. 'Conceal the stolen automobile' (Spindrift): since the mid-1920's. Cf. boiler, 5 (p. 59).

patch; mender; Mr Mender. 'The fixer for a circus, and especially for the flat-joints and grifters. These fixers make arrangements in advance with the local authorities, and handle hot individual cases,' Maurer, 1947: since ca. 1925; by 1940, circus s.

pay-off, n., (p. 500). Earlier in Spindrift, 1932, 'Crooks' money for bribery'.—8. (Cf. sense 3.) 'Usually a resident man of some means never working with the "mob" [of confidence men]. Because of his business or social connections he is above suspicion. The "pay-off" supplies the real funds needed to finance the game, arranges bail, engages attorneys in the event of arrest, and makes arrangements for hotels and other locations from which operations are carried on' (MacDonald): bunco-steerers', confidence men's: since ca. 1930.

peek; flash peek. See flash, n., 9.

percentage frail. A dance-hall girl (dancer) 'whose remuneration is a percentage of drink sold' (Spindrift): since ca. 1922: by 1935, police s. Cf. frail, 1, 2: p. 265.

piece.—5. "'I have da pieces—pure stuff." Pieces was an underworld term for ounces,' Wm J. Spillard, Needle in a Haystack . . . Adventures of a Federal Narcotic Agent, 1945: U.S.A.: since early 1930's. Cf. sense 4 (p. 511).

pill, n.—4. The pea in the three-shell game: its Am. operators': since ca. 1910. Maurer, 1947.

pill, do one's bit on a. Earlier in Joseph F. Fishman, Crucibles of Crime, 1923.

pineapple messenger. Variant of pineapple, n.: p. 514. Spindrift, 1932: by 1945, ob.

pip. Food: mostly burglars': C. 20. Fishman, Oct. 1947. Either ex † S.E. pip = pippin (apple) or ex the pips of fruit.

pitch set-up. 'A street demonstrator, a builder-up of a sales proposition in which the gullible spectator is generally trimmed; used in auctions by a sales promoter' (MacDonald): swindlers': since ca. 1920; by 1947, s.

play Lon Chaney. 'To disguise one's face with "make-up"', Spindrift, 1932: since ca. 1929. Lon Chaney: American film actor in crime films.

plot. A 'high-class' and sophisticated person: since ca. 1925. Fishman, June 1947. Ex 'plutocrat'.

political; politician (p. 523). Both occur earlier in Alex. Berkman, Prison Memoirs, 1912. .

popped. (Of evidence) wholly unexpected: since ca. 1928. Spindrift. 'Popped up out of the blue.'

Poppy Alley. Chinatown in any large American city: burglars': C. 20. Fishman, Oct. 1947. Here, poppy connotes opium; in Chinatown there is always an opium 'joint'.

poultry cage. 'The condemned cells are termed "poultry cages" or "coops",' Spindrift, 1932: extant.

poultry crop. 'Hawks and other "fly" birds who pluck pigeons,' Spindrift: since ca. 1925. With pun on 'a pigeon's crop'.

power house. 'The pay-off place in crooked auction deals, a rear room where a purchaser is led to complete his purchase. Here he is persuaded to accept another proposition at a loss to himself. From it he is let out by a rear door and started on his way' (MacDonald): swindlers': since ca. 1930. Ex the idea of 'high-pressure' salesmanship.

prat, v., 3 (p. 529). Also among three-shell operators: Maurer, 1947.

preacher. A man that alters jewellery so that it can no longer be identified: burglars': since ca. 1930. Fishman, Oct. 1947. Suggested by church, n., 4.

pricked(-)arm. A morphia addict: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. Spindrift. Ex use of hypodermic syringe.

prison(-)simple (p. 532) is both adj. and n. An rag, n.—10. A circus: Am. three-shell operators': since ca. 1930. Maurer, 1947.

rag joint. A clothier's shop: C. 20; by 1930, low s. Alex. Berkman, Prison Memoirs, 1912.

ramrod. 'Director, controller, manager—the guiding hand or driving force,' Spindrift, 1932: since ca. 1924; by 1949, ob.

rank the store. By mistake to allow the on-lookers to see how the game works: three-shell operators': since ca. 1925. Maurer, 1947. See rank, v., 2 (p. 555).

rattler.—5. (Cf. sense 4: p. 557.) An automobile: U.S.A.: since ca. 1935. MacDonald, 1939.

reach-over (or one word), the. The 'inside man's' reaching into the crowd to make a bet, so as to stimulate interest: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

reefer, 2 (p. 562). Anglicized ca. 1930; s. by 1945—as in Stanley Jackson, An Indiscreet Guide to Soho, 1946.

ribbing. Incitement to crime; faking evidence to 'frame' an innocent person: since ca. 1920. Spindrift. Cf. rib up, v., 2: p. 563.

rider (out or in). Any of numerous 'devices for "riding" the victim out of town after he has been swindled, such as transferring the "brokerage house" to another city' (MacDonald): commercial swindlers': since ca. 1925. Cf. ride a body (p. 566).

rig, n.—4. Always the rig, the gallows: Am. convicts' (—1932). Spindrift. Ex S.E. rig, a lively dance: cf. air jig.

right people (p. 568). This sense develops from the sense current in the Bowery in the 1890's and exemplified in Edward W. Townsend, Chimmie Fadden, 1897 (English edition), 'He's . . . right people' = He's an honest man.

earlier record: Joseph F. Fishman, Crucibles of Crime, 1923.

professor.—2. (Also doctor). 'The follow-up demonstrator in auction houses or carnival set-ups; the closer of crooked sales deals' (MacDonald): Am. swindlers': since ca. 1930. He speaks well and has a soothing manner.

proto. "'I'm working under proto.'"—"Yeah? What protection?"' Wm J. Spillard, Needle in a Haystack . . . Adventures of a Federal Narcotic Agent, 1945: drug traffic: since ca. 1930; by ca. 1940, police s.

pull one's getaway. 'To escape after committing a crime, or from jail' (Spindrift): since ca. 1920.

punk and plaster.—2. Pennsylvania rural districts: since early 1930's. Fishman, June 1947. Cf. punk and plaster, 1, and p. and p. route: p. 538.

push, n., 3 (p. 539). Not ob. in U.S.A., where it is common among short-change swindlers: MacDonald, 1939 (see laying the note).

pusher-up. A variant of pusher, 5 (p. 540): since ca. 1938. Stanley Jackson, An Indiscreet Guide to Soho, 1946.

put the goof on. To make friends with; to wheedle: since ca. 1930. Fishman, June 1947. Ex s. sense of goof.

put the raiser on a mark. To persuade the prospective victim to raise his bet, esp. when he thinks that he knows where the pea is: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

R

ring-in, n. A stand-in or favourable position, or rating, with someone, e.g. a detective: burglars': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Oct. 1947. Ex ring in, 2: p. 570.

ringer, 4 (p. 570). See flapping track.

ringing the Act (on a man). See fly-paper, be on the.

rip and tear, v. To employ rip-and-tear methods (p. 571): three-shell operators' and other grifters': since ca. 1935. Maurer, 1947.

rip-rap, the. The art of sponging or of begging (disguised as borrowing) money: beggars' and spivs': since ca. 1925. Stanley Jackson, An Indiscreet Guide to Soho, 1946. Rhyming on tap, n., 2, and v., 6, and tap, at the (p. 714).

ripe for the lilies. Dead: gangsters': since ca. 1924. Lilies (lily blummers, as the American underworld occasionally calls them: Ger. Blume, a flower) are the most favoured of funeral flowers.

rock candy. Jewellery: burglars': since ca. 1920. Fishman, Oct. 1947. Ex rock, 1: p. 573.

rod(-)packer. See gun(-)slinger.

roll(-)flash. A trick whereby the 'inside man' causes the pea to go under a shell other than that it appears to go under: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

roll-up. See baron, 2.

round(-)heel. A variant of round heels (p. 578): burglars': since early 1930's. Fishman, Oct. 1947.

rounder.—5. 'Man habitué of brothels—he goes the rounds' (Spindrift): C. 20; by 1940, s.

roundheel. See round-heel.

rowdy (or rudy), the. A very clever trick whereby to persuade a rich but stubborn victim to bet high: three-shell operators': since ca. 1910. Maurer, 1947.

rudy, the. See rowdy, the.

run a sandy. 'Pull a fast act, hoodwink a rival' (Spindrift): since ca. 1920; by 1945, s. To throw sand into someone's eyes.

run-out.—2. 'A crook's jaunt into hick-land to avoid police until the "hot weather" becomes cooler,' Spindrift: since ca. 1920; by 1940, police s.

runaround, the. A very simple trick, whereby a 'skill' wins and thus shows the crowd how easy the game is: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

S

Sally.—2. A catamite: convicts': ca. 1890–1930. See girl, 2. A girl's name for a 'girl'.

savage.—2. See apple.

saw (p. 595). Earlier in Spindrift, 1932.

sawdust chaw. A stupid person: mostly pick-pockets': since ca. 1930. Fishman, July 1947. Here, chaw prob. = chawbacon.

scatter-gun (p. 598). Earlier in Spindrift, 1932.

scorcher.—2. See cinder seat.

score, n.—4. (Ex 1: p. 599.) Money; among Am. drug addicts, the score means 'sufficient money to purchase narcotics': since ca. 1930. Fishman, Nov. 1947.

screw work. Burglary effected with use of key: burglars': C. 20. Fishman, Oct. 1947. Cf. screwing job (p. 604).

screwdriver. Governor of a prison: convicts': since ca. 1930. Douglas Warth in Sunday Pictorial, Aug. 29, 1948. With a pun on screw, n., 5 (p. 603).

screwing job (p. 604). One of the earliest records occurs in Frederick Martyn, A Burglar in Baulk, 1910. Cf. :— screwing lay, the. Burglary: late C. 19–20; by 1949, slightly ob. Frederick Martyn, A Burglar in Baulk, 1910.

screwsman, 2 (p. 605). Extant in C. 20. U.S.A., according to Spindrift, 1932.

scroof, n.—2. A convict released from prison: U.S.A.: 1932, Spindrift; extant. Cf. the v.: p. 605.

sculpting, n. and adj. 'Lying on the marble slab at the morgue—dead' (Spindrift): since ca. 1924.

sec stick. Short for section stick (p. 607): since ca. 1930. Fishman, Sept. 1947.

sending. '[Marijuana-] smoking is known as viping or sending,' David W. Maurer, 'Marijuana Addicts and Their Lingo' in The American Mercury, Nov. 1946: since ca. 1930. Ex send, v. (p. 607).

shade, v., 1 (p. 611). Esp. in shade the store, to prevent the crowd from getting a clear view of the board while the victim is being fleeced: Am. three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

shadow(-)box. Prisoners' dock: since ca. 1925. Spindrift. Gloomy.

shadow man. A spy for the police: since ca. 1920; by 1940, police s. Spindrift.

shady; esp. give a shady to, to give a hint, or information, about (e.g., a place): since ca. 1935. Fishman, June 1947.

shell mob. A gang of three-shell-game operators: C. 20. Maurer, 1947. See 'Three-Shell Game'.

skill, n., 1 (p. 618). Among 'bunco-steerers', there is a special application of the term: 'Skill, Shillarber, Stick, Booster—One who works with the tip-man and locates suckers in crowds. Thus, when the sale is started, he prompts the sucker and encourages him to offer a bid' (MacDonald).

shiner.—8. A flashlight: safecrackers': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Sept. 1947.

shoot the mess. To impart the required information; to inform upon one's accomplices: since ca. 1926; by 1949, ob. Spindrift.

shooter.—2. A safe-burglar: since ca. 1924. Spindrift. Ex shoot, 3 (p. 621).

short end, the. 'The smallest division of loot; the hogger grabs the largest, or long end' (Spindrift): since ca. 1910. See end, p. 222.

shove shot. A small injection of a drug: drug traffic: since ca. 1935. Fishman, Nov. 1947. Quick, small, perfunctory.

shut mouth never fills a black coffin, a. 'Gangster's axiom' (Spindrift): since ca. 1924.

silky, n. A confidence trickster: since ca. 1920. Spindrift. He has a voice 'as smooth as silk'.

simple, n. A shortening of prison simple (Dictionary and Addenda): 1923, Joseph F. Fishman, Crucibles of Crime, 1923.

sink, v.—7. Usually he's been sunk, shot—esp. by a gunman, and fatally: since ca. 1924. Spindrift.

sizzler.—2. See cinder seat and cf. scorcher, 2. Therefore sizzle (p. 629) must be at least as early as 1932.

skidroad (p. 630). As applied to 'a city's honky-tonk district', the correct term is skidroad, not skid row; 'the Skidroad was originally the road down which logs were slid or skidded to the lumber mill and saloons. Hotels and red-light houses catering to loggers were built up around this road—hence the designation [a logger's designation, at first] "Skidroad" for this section': thus L. J. Brown of Seattle, Wash., in a newspaper cutting, of late March or of April, 1947, sent to me in that year.

skin-glommer. A purse snatcher; a third-rate thief: pickpockets': since ca. 1925. Fishman, July 1947. See the elements in the Dict.

slated for a dose of hemp. 'Sentenced to be hanged' (Spindrift): C. 20; by 1949, slightly ob. Ex hospital-s. slated (see my Dictionary of Slang).

slick(-)gat. See gun(-)slinger.

slip a yellow-back. To pass, silyly, a high-value bill (i.e., bank-note) as a bribe: since ca. 1910; by 1935, s. Spindrift.

slough, v., 2 (p. 640). Esp. 'to take down the game' (and move on): three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.—4. (Ibid.) Also to burgle (a place): burglars': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Oct. 1947.

Smedley. A Federal evidence-collector (for the F.B.I.): since ca. 1928; by 1949, rather ob. Margaret Murray, 'By a "Gunman's Moll"'.—in American Weekly, 1932. Ex a Federal official surnamed thus?

smoke(-)pusher. A firearm: since ca. 1925. Spindrift. Cf. smoke pole (p. 646).

snake.—3. 'In prison they [tale-bearers] are designated "snitches", "snakes", or "stool pigeons"', Joseph F. Fishman, Crucibles of Crime, 1923: since ca. 1910; by 1942, ob. Cf. sense 1 (p. 649, top).

sneak(-)pitch. A shell game set up where the authorities have prohibited it: three-shell operators': since ca. 1910. Maurer, 1947.

sneeze down (p. 652). Or merely to deprive him, and keep him deprived, of narcotics: Fishman, Nov. 1947.

snooper. A sneak thief: since ca. 1925. Spin drift. Cf. snoop: p. 656.

snow(-)bird, 4 (p. 658), is often narrowed to a woman that gets a commission for introducing 'friends' to dope-peddlers: Stanley Jackson, An Indiscreet Guide to Soho, 1946.

snow eagle. A drug-trafficker in a big way: since ca. 1925. Spindrift. See snow, n., 3, 4, 5.

soft(-)patter man. Same as soft song man (p. 660): 1932, Spindrift; extant.

softening-up; or treating. Among commercial swindlers, since ca. 1910, it has meant: 'The preliminary building-up of a victim's confidence so that he is willing to go farther—he nibbles at the bait' (MacDonald, 1939).

spare parts. 'Extra "guns" taken to a "job" by criminals,' Spindrift: since early 1920's Euphemistic.

sparrow-catcher. A rural policeman: since ca. 1925. Spindrift. Cf. sparrow cop (p. 664).

speed ball, 3 (p. 665). Fishman, Nov. 1947, defines the mixture as of cocaine and either morphine or heroin.

spill the berries. To tell the truth: since ca. 1930; by ca. 1935, s. Spindrift. On the analogy of s. spill the beans.

spill the dirt. To confess; to inform to the police: since early 1920's; by 1935, s. Spindrift. Cf. s. dirt, 'gossip'.

spiv (p. 668). See esp. 'Spivs and Phoney's' in my Words at War: Words at Peace, 1948.—2. 'The word has been in use for decades on the social outskirts and fringes . . . In East End public houses . . . the Spiv was a copper's nark, or police informer—"Shut yer mahf, mate; ther's a Spiv listening". The nark element has been dropped: the less your Spiv has to do with the police the more he likes it,' Anon., 'Profile of the Spiv' in The Observer, Aug. 17, 1947: a sense current ca. 1895-1930.

spot, v., 4 (p. 670). A year earlier in Spindrift, 'Once the decree is pronounced, "Spot that moll," neither beauty, blonde hair, nor tears cause its revocation—a bullet or thug cord ends her innings'. Ex put on the spot.

spotter, 4 (p. 671, top), has in 'The Hijacking Racket' (Malcolm Johnson in The American Mercury, April 1947) the sense of 'intermediary between finger man, 5, and the crew appointed to the job of effecting the theft': since ca. 1934.

spread the store; frame the gaff. To set up the three-shell-game board: three-shell operators': since ca. 1910. Maurer, 1947. Cf. store, 2.

spring, be on the; spring, v., 8. (Of the victim) to show readiness to bet: three-shell operators': since ca. 1915. Maurer, 1947.

squaretoes. A detective; detectives: since ca. 1930. Fishman, June 1947. Ex his square-toed shoes?

steak-an(d)-taters. Husband: since ca. 1930. Fishman, June 1947. The provider.

steal.—2. (Of the 'inside man') to remove the pea from under a shell; various forms of this trick are known as fake(-)steal, finger sucker-steal, left-side (and right-side) sucker-steal, etc.: three-shell operators': C. 20. Maurer, 1947.

steel(-)and(-)concrete. 'The treatment in which you get no narcotics of any kind,' Fishman, Nov. 1947. Very, very hard.

steer, v.—4. To look after; assist; protect: mostly London: since ca. 1944. Richard Collier ('Men on the Run') in The Daily Mail, Jan. 20, 1948.

stick, n.—12. A local man hired to act as a 'shill'; the hirer and instructor of the 'sticks' is a stick-handler: Am. three-shell operators': since ca. 1920. Maurer, 1947.

stick-handler. See stick, n., 12 (above).

sticker.—8. A machine-gunner: since ca. 1935. Fishman, June 1947. Short for S.E. pig-sticker?

stiff bus. A hearse: since ca. 1924. Spindrift. Ex s. stiff, 'a corpse'.

stir(-)bug, s. (p. 690). Earlier in Spindrift, 1932.

stir(-)crazy (p. 690). Earlier in Spindrift, 1932.

stone quarry. A jewellery store (jeweller's shop): burglars': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Oct. 1947. See stone, 1: p. 691.

store.—2. (Ex 1: p. 693.) A side-show in a circus; a gambling device (esp. the three-shell game) permitted at circus or fair: since ca. 1910. Maurer, 1947.

straw(-)nerve, n. and adj. (One) whose nerves are weak: since ca. 1920; by 1945, s. Spindrift. Cf. S.E. man of straw, i.e., of no account.

stretcher.—7. A judge (in court): U.S.A.: mostly pickpockets': since ca. 1925. Fishman, July 1947. He awards many a stretcher, 5 (p. 696).

string, n.—5. 'Promoters of commercialized prostitution look to main sources for replenishing their "stables" or "strings" of girls,' Albert Deutsch, 'The Prostitution Racket is Back,' The American Mercury, Sept. 1946: white-slave traffic: since ca. 1920. Prompted by stable (p. 677): 'a string of horses'.—6. (Usually in pl.) A clue to a crime: since ca. 1925. Spindrift. Ex the 'ball of thread or twine (yarn)' sense of clue (Am. clew).

strong arm, n.—3. (Ex sense 2: p. 699). A chucker-out: since ca. 1920. Spindrift.

stumble, n. An arrest, a being apprehended by the police: burglars': since ca. 1920. Fishman, Oct. 1947. Suggested by fall, n., 1: p. 228.

stump the chalks. To walk; depart: mostly pickpockets': since ca. 1920. Fishman, July 1947. Cf. s. stumps, legs.

sucker(-)flash. See flash, n., 9. A sucker(-)move is a trick designed to excite the victim to bet: Maurer, 1947.

sucker(-)hutches. (Singular is little used.) 'Homes where "softies" reside,' Spindrift: since ca. 1920.

swell hiram. A swell mob (p. 707): since ca. 1930. Fishman, June 1947.

swell lay. 'Watertight scheme for a robbery where the plunder is valuable,' Spindrift: C. 20. See the elements in the Dict. proper.

T

tail, n., 6, and v. (p. 710), among commercial swindlers and confidence men, signifies a following, a follow-up, of the prospective victim; to keep him under observation: since ca. 1930. MacDonald.—9. See tail pit below. Ex sense 3, q.v.

tail pit (p. 710). Modified by D. W. Maurer and E. Debaun (The American Mercury, May 1948), thus: 'Suit-coat pockets are tails or tail-pits'. Cf. tail, n., 9 (above).

take, v., 1 (p. 711). Among safebreakers, it = to break into (a safe): Fishman, Sept. 1947.

take over the hurdles. To rob (someone); esp., to 'roll him for his wad': since early 1920's. Spindrift. Prob. suggested by jump, v., 4: p. 374.

take the chill out of a game. To obviate suspicion that the game is crooked: three-shell operators': since ca. 1920. Maurer, 1947. Contrast chill, v., 6.

talk sideways. 'Talking sideways: Suggesting a safe "Killing", i.e. financial coup "on the cross"', Spindrift: since ca. 1925.

tape, v.—2. 'Tape a guy: Gag a victim with adhesive plaster,' Spindrift: since ca. 1919.

tenderloin. A prostitute: C. 20; by 1935, s. Spindrift. Ex the Tenderloin or low quarter of any big city.

tenth inning. A reprieve from death: convicts': since ca. 1920. Spindrift (incorrectly '... innings'). Ex baseball: an additional term of 'batting'.

thirty-one, strike. See strike . . .

*Three-Shell Game, as the Americans call it when they do not shorten it to Shell Game (see shell-worker on p. 616), is the same as thimble-rig (p. 720). See esp. David W. Maurer's excellent article, 'The Argot of the Three-Shell Game' in American Speech, Oct. 1947; the article proper is followed by a three-shell man's description of the game and then by a glossary.

U

under the Act. See fly-paper, be on the.

undertaker's friends. Firearms collectively: since ca. 1924; by 1945, ob. Spindrift. Cf. undertaker (p. 752).

W

wake-up. 'The time at which the victim becomes suspicious and aware of the nature of the transaction and refuses to continue This 'is different from the "awakening" [see awakening]' (MacDonald): commercial swindlers': C. 20.

walking(-)tree. A night watchman in, e.g., a bank: safecrackers': since ca. 1920. Fishman, Sept. 1947. Ex military scouts' device.

weak sister. An informer to the police; an untrusted person, or a weakling, in a gang: since ca. 1924. Spindrift.

weed, v. (p. 763). With senses 1, 4, cf. these tie in. 'Rival gangsters "tie in" when they come to an understanding regarding the respective areas in which they are to control rackets, or when they join forces for a common purpose,' Spindrift: since ca. 1920; by 1934, police and journalistic s.

tin star.—2. A county sheriff: 1932, Spindrift; extant, but s. by 1940. Ex the badge of office.

tip(-)house. 'Hangout of pickpockets, an information bureau for pickpockets' (MacDonald): since ca. 1935. Cf. tip, n., s. (p. 726).

tip(-)man. 'Opening salesman in all "pitch" set-ups, or auctions. He gathers the crowd by offering prizes, etc.' (MacDonald): since ca. 1930.

tip (someone) the shuffle. To get rid of; to dismiss: pickpockets': since ca. 1925. Fishman, July 1947. Cf. s. shuffle (off), to depart.

tip-up, n. A search (esp. of a cell): convicts': since ca. 1925. James Leigh, My Prison House, 1941. Cf. tip-over (p. 727).

tobacco baron. See baron, 2.

toby, n., 1 (p. 728). In C. 20 U.S.A., among burglars, it = a city street. Fishman, Oct. 1947.

tocker (p. 729). Earlier in Spindrift, 1932.

tonsil treatment. A being gagged, a gagging: esp. safebreakers': since ca. 1930. Fishman, Sept. 1947.

top man, undefined on p. 733: an active male homosexual: see girl, 2.

torch man.—2. In a safebreaking 'mob', he who uses an acetylene torch: safecrackers': since ca. 1930. Fishman, Sept. 1947.

treating. See softening-up.

trigger woman corresponds to trigger man (p. 741): since ca. 1928; ob. True Detective Mysteries, Oct. 1930.

trip up the river. A being 'taken for a ride': since ca. 1924. Spindrift. Originally, New York c.

turret man.—2. (Ex 1: p. 747.) A watchman: since ca. 1935. Fishman, June 1947.

V

viping. Marijuana-smoking: since ca. 1935. See sending and, on p. 757, vipe.

voomish. Foolish, esp. foolishly infatuated: mostly pickpockets': since ca. 1930. Fishman, July 1947. Arbitrary word; the -ish, prob. ex foolish.

two sub-senses in the c. of three-shell operators in C. 20: '1. To supply a skill with money. "Weed that stick a saw." 2. To take money away from a skill once he has won. "The stick-handler always weeds the sticks right away", Maurer, 1947.

weigh off (p. 764). Also, by ca. 1940, in U.S.A. among pickpockets. Fishman, July 1947.

whip(-)over, n. A smuggling of narcotics into prison: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Fishman, Nov. 1947. Ex the v.: p. 767.

whisper crib. A gambling den: since ca. 1935. Fishman, June 1947.

winchell. See apple.

wipe, n.—5. (Ex 3: p. 774). A mask: Am. safecrackers': since ca. 1925. Fishman, Sept. 1947.

wire split. 'A detective of the pickpocket squad' (Fishman, July 1947): pickpockets': since ca. 1930.

wise to the lay. Aware of the position, whether present or projected: since ca. 1910. Spindrift. See wise, adj.: p. 775.

wiss is an inaccurate phonetic variant of whizz (see whiz, p. 770): 1939, MacDonald, 'An act of picking pockets—"on the wiss racket"'.
 witch-hazel man. A heroin addict: drug traffic: since ca. 1930. Fishman, Nov. 1947. See witch hazel: p. 776.

wolf.—6. A burglar: 1932, Spindrift; extant. He prowls at night.

wooden kimono (p. 777) is recorded also by Daily Express of Aug. 20, 1947.

work the goose. 'I started for the east side wid him, where I knowed I'd find an Avnoo A gang what would radder scrap dan work de goose—rush de growler, I mean,' Edward W. Townsend, Chimmie Fudden, 1897 (English edition; American, ca. 1895): i.e., to liquor up, to indulge in a drinking-bout: either Bowery e. or Bowery low s. of ca. 1885–1910.

Y

yap, n., 2 (p. 782). Earlier in Alex. Berkman, Prison Memoirs, 1912.

yeggman. An occ. variant of yegg, n., 2 (p. 783): C. 20; by ca. 1935, it was s. Spindrift.

yellow peril. Vegetable soup: convicts': since ca. 1910. Douglas Warth ('Abridged Prison Glossary') in Sunday Pictorial, Aug. 29, 1948.

Z

zib.—2. (Ex 1: p. 786.) A 'sucker': since ca. 1935. Fishman, June 1947.

