

ACPL ITEM DISCARDED

r 427
P25a
735318

REFERENCE

sto

ACPL ITEM DISCARDED

A DICTIONARY OF THE UNDERWORLD

OTHER WORKS BY THE SAME AUTHOR

Messrs. George Routledge & Sons, Ltd. :

A DICTIONARY OF SLANG (16th-20th Centuries; British Empire);
3rd edition, much enlarged, 63s. (U.S.A. : Macmillan.)

The Times (in a leader) : ' This lightning-minded and very learned scholar '.

SLANG TO-DAY AND YESTERDAY : A HISTORY AND A STUDY. 3rd edition, revised, 21s. (U.S.A. : Macmillan.)

A DICTIONARY OF CLICHÉS, with an Essay. 3rd edition, revised, 8s. 6d. (U.S.A. : Macmillan.)

PRÉCIS WRITING : Selected passages (virtually an anthology) and an essay on the art of précis. 3s. 6d., non-net.

SHAKESPEARE'S BAWDY : A STUDY AND A GLOSSARY. Edition limited to 1,000 copies at 2 gns. (U.S.A. : Dutton; limited to 1,440 copies.)

The Oxford University Press :

SONGS AND SLANG OF THE BRITISH SOLDIER : 1914-1918, with JOHN BROPHY. 3rd edition, much enlarged, 10s. 6d.

SLANG : a Society for Pure English tract. 2s. 6d. (U.S.A. : Oxford University Press.)

Messrs. Allen & Unwin, Ltd. :

A DICTIONARY OF ABBREVIATIONS, 3rd edition, revised and enlarged, 7s. 6d.

Messrs. Hamish Hamilton, Ltd. :

USAGE AND ABUSAGE : A GUIDE TO GOOD ENGLISH. 4th edition, revised and enlarged, 15s. (U.S.A. : Harper.)

THE WORLD OF WORDS : AN INTRODUCTION TO LANGUAGE IN GENERAL AND TO ENGLISH AND AMERICAN IN PARTICULAR. 4th edition, revised, 12s. 6d. (U.S.A. : Scribner.)

HERE, THERE AND EVERYWHERE : Essays and Studies in Language. 7s. 6d.

Messrs. Frederick Muller, Ltd. :

JOURNEY TO THE EDGE OF MORNING : BOOKS, LOVE, LIFE. 6s.

WORDS AT WAR : WORDS AT PEACE : Essays on Language. 7s. 6d.

Messrs. Secker & Warburg, Ltd. :

NAME INTO WORD : A Dictionary of words formed from the names of persons and places. 25s.

FORCES' SLANG, 1939-1945. With WILFRED GRANVILLE and FRANK ROBERTS. 12s. 6d.

ERIC PARTRIDGE

A DICTIONARY OF THE UNDERWORLD

BRITISH & AMERICAN

Being the Vocabularies of CROOKS CRIMINALS RACKETEERS BEGGARS and TRAMPS
CONVICTS
THE COMMERCIAL UNDERWORLD
THE DRUG TRAFFIC
THE WHITE SLAVE TRAFFIC
SPIVS

NEW YORK
THE MACMILLAN COMPANY

1950

For
M. GUSTAVE RUDLER
MARÉCHAL FOCH PROFESSOR OF FRENCH IN THE UNIVERSITY OF OXFORD

*hommage d'auteur
vœux et souhaits d'ami*

735318

Proc. Phil. Soc. 5.85

CONTENTS

	PAGE
FOREWORD	ix
ABBREVIATIONS AND PRINCIPAL SHORT REFERENCES	xi
SIGNS AND A NOTE ON ARRANGEMENT	xv
A DICTIONARY OF THE UNDERWORLD	1-787
ADDENDA	789

FOREWORD

CANT, or the language of the underworld, seems to have appeared in Britain early in the 16th Century and in America in the 18th. It constitutes a fascinating philological and sociological sidelight upon our civilization.

This being a dictionary planned on historical lines, I have not strained myself to present a work that is 'up to the minute'; this matters but little, in that the main body of cant—i.e., exclusive of cliquisms and ephemerides—is remarkably conservative.* For example, most people think of phoney as very modern: yet it has been current in the United States since at least as early as 1890 and, in its original shape, fawney, in England since at least as early as 1770.

But I shall be very grateful for a notice of all such accredited-cant terms as I have failed to include: with details concerning period, milieu, authority (if any). The difficulties of publishing are also, in part, the cause of a certain time-lag.

My best thanks are due to Godfrey Irwin, the author of American Tramp and Underworld Slang (1931), for reading and sending me notes on those books and articles which were not available to me in London—and for access to his manuscript additions to the above-mentioned glossary. Also I must thank William Kernôt for allowing me to use his unpublished glossary of American cant.

Godfrey Irwin, Joseph Fishman and David Maurer are the three leading authorities on American cant. But I have used Dr Maurer's numerous valuable glossaries very sparingly, and the same applies to Lester V. Berrey and M. Van Den Bark's magnificent work, An American Thesaurus of Slang. These three scholars will, I trust, feel charitably towards me for my failure to use their work more freely, the more so that I have been able to supplement their lists to a not inconsiderable degree. On the other hand, I have profited without stint by W. J. Burke's admirable bibliography, The Literature of Slang; that I have, even on the American side, been able to supplement his sources, may serve to indicate that I have done much quite independent research. Indeed, the richest of all the American sources had never been tapped; nor had the richest of all the British sources.

For Australia, I owe much to Sidney J. Baker, the nonpareil of lexicographers of both Australian and New Zealand speech. For South Africa, much to the staff of The Cape Times. And for Canada, much to the leading newspaper in Toronto.

Not one of these scholars and other contributors, however, is to be held responsible for the etymologies, on which I have worked alone. Cant etymologies are not particularly easy, but they do possess a strange and peculiar interest.

I have also to thank the Committee of the Leverhulme Research Fellowships for the award of a two years' grant to enable me to work upon this dictionary, which, but for their assistance, could not have been undertaken.

Nor could the work have been continued and completed without the very considerable financial assistance given to me by the publishers.

ERIC PARTRIDGE.

* See the essay on cant in my Here, There and Everywhere. (Hamish Hamilton, London; 1950.)

ABBREVIATIONS AND PRINCIPAL SHORT REFERENCES

adj.	adjective
adv.	adverb
Am.	American (U.S.A.)
Andrewes	George Andrewes's dictionary, 1809
anon.	anonymous
app.	apparent ; apparently
Aus.	Australia ; Australian
Awdeley	John Awdeley, The Fraternite of Vacabondes , 1575
B & L	Barrère & Leland's dictionary of slang, 1889-90
Baker, 1941	New Zealand Slang , by Sidney J. Baker
Baker, 1942	Australian Slang , by ,, ,, ,,
Baker, 1945	The Australian Language , by ,, ,,
Baumann	H. Baumann, Londonismen , 1887
B.E.	The Canting Crew , 1698
Bee	Jon Bee's dictionary of slang, 1823
Black	Det.-Sgt Alexander Black, 'Criminal Slang' in The Police Journal , March 1943
Brandon	H. Brandon, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime , 1839
Brown	Superintendent W. F. Brown, 'Thieves and their Argot' in The Police Journal , Oct. 1931
Burke	James P. Burke, 'The Argot of the Racketeers' in The American Mercury , Dec. 1930
BVB	Lester V. Berrey & Melvin Van Den Bark, The American Thesaurus of Slang , 1942
c.	cant (language of the underworld)
C.	Century, as in 'C. 18'.
ca.	circa , about
Castle	Don Castle, Do Your Own Time , 1938
cf.	compare
Chicago May	May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story , 1928
Coles	Elisha Coles, An English Dictionary , 1676
coll.	colloquial ; colloquialism
Convict	Convict No. 12627, 'Criminal Slang' in Detective Fiction Weekly , April 21, 1934
Convict 2nd	Convict No. 12627, 'They Talk Like This' in Detective Fiction Weekly , April 23, 1938
c.p.	catch-phrase
D.A.E.	A Dictionary of American English , 1936-42
Dekker	Thomas Dekker, various works in early 17th century
dial.	dialect
'Ducange Anglicus'	'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue , 1857
Duncombe	J. Duncombe, Sinks of London Laid Open , 1848
Eagle	Eagle Police Manual , 1933 ('Definitions of Underworld Terms')
ed.	edition

E.D.D.	.	.	.	Joseph Wright, The English Dialect Dictionary
e.g.	.	.	.	for example
Egan's Grose	.	.	.	Pierce Egan's edition (= the 5th) of Grose (see below)
Eng.	.	.	.	English
esp.	.	.	.	especially ex	.	.	.	(derivation) from
F & H	.	.	.	Farmer & Henley, Slang and Its Analogues , 7 vols., 1890-1904
fig.	.	.	.	figurative; figuratively
Flynn's	.	.	.	Flynn's (magazine)—since ca. 1928 Detective Fiction Weekly —1924-42
Fr.	.	.	.	French
gen.	.	.	.	general; generally
Ger.	.	.	.	German
Givens	.	.	.	Charles G. Givens, 'The Clatter of Guns' in The Saturday Evening Post , April 13, 1929
Gr.	.	.	.	Greek
Greene	.	.	.	Robert Greene's 'coney-catching' pamphlets, various dates in the 1590's
Grose	.	.	.	Francis Grose, A Classical Dictionary of the Vulgar Tongue , 1785 and later
H.	.	.	.	J. C. Hotten, The Slang Dictionary , 1859 and later
Haggart	.	.	.	David Haggart, Life , 1821
Hall	.	.	.	John Hall, Memoirs , 1708
Hargan	.	.	.	James Hargan, 'Prison Language' in The Journal of Abnormal Psychology , Oct. 1935
Harman	.	.	.	Thomas Harman, A Caveat , 1567
Hitchin	.	.	.	Charles Hitchin, The Regulator , 1718
Holme	.	.	.	Randle Holme, The Academy of Armory , 1688
IA	.	.	.	Godfrey Irwin, unpublished Addenda (Nov. 1931) for Irwin (below)
ib. or ibid.	.	.	.	in the same work
id.	.	.	.	the same
imm.	.	.	.	immediate(ly)
Irwin, or Godfrey Irwin	.	.	.	American Tramp and Underworld Slang , (July) 1931
It.	.	.	.	Italian
j.	.	.	.	jargon (technical language)
Jackson & Hellyer	.	.	.	L. E. Jackson & C. R. Hellyer, A Vocabulary of Criminal Slang , 1914
Kane	.	.	.	Elisha Kane, 'The Jargon of the Underworld' in Dialect Notes , 1927
Kernôt	.	.	.	William Kernôt, an unpublished glossary of American cant, compiled in 1929-31
L.	.	.	.	Latin
Leverage	.	.	.	Henry Leverage, 'Dictionary of the Underworld' in Flynn's , early 1925
Lex. Bal.	.	.	.	Lexicon Balatronicum (4th ed. of Grose), 1811
lit.	.	.	.	literal; literally
M & B	.	.	.	D. W. Maurer & Sidney J. Baker, '"Australian" Rhyming Argot in the American Underworld' in American Speech , Oct. 1944
Matsell	.	.	.	George Matsell, Vocabulum , 1859
Maurer, 1941	.	.	.	D. W. Maurer, 'Forgery' in American Speech , Dec. 1941
M.E.	.	.	.	Middle English
Miles	.	.	.	H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin , 1841
mod.	.	.	.	modern
n.	.	.	.	noun
N.Z.	.	.	.	New Zealand
ob.	.	.	.	obsolescent
occ.	.	.	.	occasional(ly)
O.E.	.	.	.	Old English
O.E.D.	.	.	.	The Oxford English Dictionary

orig.	.	.	.	original(ly)
Parker, 1781	.	.	.	George Parker, A View of Society
Parker, 1789	.	.	.	Life's Painter
Partridge	.	.	.	Eric Partridge, A Dictionary of Slang , 1937 (enlarged ed., 1938); 3rd ed., much enlarged, 1949
Partridge, Slang	.	.	.	Slang To-day and Yesterday , 1933
pl.	.	.	.	plural
Potter	.	.	.	Humphry Potter's dictionary, 3rd ed., 1797
Poulter	.	.	.	John Poulter, The Discoveries of John Poulter , 1754
prec.	.	.	.	preceding (sense, or entry, or term) prob.	.	.	.	probable; probably pron.	.	.	.	pronounced; pronunciation
pub.	.	.	.	published
q.v. (pl., qq.v.)	.	.	.	which see!
ref.	.	.	.	reference; with reference to; refer, refers resp.	.	.	.	respective(ly)
Rose, or Howard N. Rose	.	.	.	A Thesaurus of Slang , 1934
s.	.	.	.	slang
S. Am.	.	.	.	Standard American
S.E.	.	.	.	Standard English
Sessions	.	.	.	Session Paper. The Central Criminal Court , 1729-1913
Shadwell	.	.	.	Thomas Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia , 1688
sing.	.	.	.	singular
Snowden	.	.	.	R. L. Snowden, The Magistrate's Assistant , 1857
sol.	.	.	.	solecism
Sp.	.	.	.	Spanish
Stiff	.	.	.	'Dean Stiff', The Milk and Honey Route , 1931
Tufts	.	.	.	Henry Tufts, A Narrative , 1807
U.S. or U.S.A.	.	.	.	United States of America
v.	.	.	.	verb; v.i.: verb intransitive; v.t.: verb transitive Vaux	.	.	.	J. H. Vaux's glossary, 1812, pub. in his Memoirs , 1818
vbl n.	.	.	.	verbal noun
Ware	.	.	.	J. Redding Ware, Passing English , 1909
Weekley	.	.	.	Ernest Weekley, An Etymological Dictionary of Modern English

SIGNS

*	American (in origin at least)
+	and (in etymologies)
>	become(s), became
=	is (are) equal, or equivalent, to; means, signifies —	in existence at least as early as, and probably long before (a date)
†	obsolete
?	query as to viability of an etymology

A NOTE ON ARRANGEMENT

The alphabetical principle adopted is that of ‘something before nothing’; thus I, I suppose, precede ia-, ib-; ice is followed by all its compounds before ich- and ici- appear; and so forth. A few terms, therefore, occur twice, but the definition, dating, etc., only once: I have set the reader’s convenience before a rigidly methodical economy of reference.

A DICTIONARY OF THE UNDERWORLD

*: American—in origin at least.

A

A.B. or A.B.C. 'An abscess as a result of injections induced by unsterile needles or impure drugs,' BVB: drug addicts': since ca. 1932. I.e., 'abscess' and the sol. 'abcess'.

A.C. and A. coat. A coat with many pockets favoured by tramps and petty thieves: since ca. 1920. Ersine.

a-cross. See across.

A.D. A drug addict: since ca. 1930. BVB. I.e., 'a dope'—or perhaps 'addict to drugs' or even D.A. reversed.

A No. 1 (or A Number One) man. 'Among A Number one men, as the first-class criminals style themselves, professional loyalty is a sine qua non, and the slightest defection from it marks a man for the rest of his days,' Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (Glossary), 'A No. 1. Used in place of the personal pronoun I. Name frequently taken by tramp.'

a waste or a wast away. See awaste.

aap. Dagga (Cannabis indica): Afrikaans and hence non-Afrikaans-speaking South Africa: C. 20. Whence aap trein (lit. aap train), the smoking of dagga. Both in letter of May 23, 1946, from C. P. Wittstock. Note: Nearly all Afrikaans c. words and Afrikaans c. phrases are used also by those South African crooks and criminals who do not usually employ—who, indeed, do not speak—Afrikaans. Here, aap is a sense-perversion of Dutch aap, 'a monkey': cf. the s. monkey tricks.

aaron (or A-). A cadger acting as guide to mountain-tops: ? ca. 1800–70. 'A play on its Hebrew equivalent, lofty,' B & L.—2. The Aaron. 'The chief or captain of a gang or school of thieves': 1876, H. Thornton, Slangiana; 1889, B & L, 'As Aaron was the first high priest, and the Aarons are the chiefs of the Hebrew tribes, it is probably of Jewish origin in its slang application'; 1890, F & H; by 1930, †.

abaddon. A thief that informs on his fellow-rogues: ? ca. 1810–80: 1889, B & L, 'From the Hebrew abaddon, a destroyer'; 1890, F & H.

abandana(a)d (or A-). 'One who picks pockets of bandanna handkerchiefs': orig. (—1864), Westminster c.: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H (also, 'a petty thief'); by 1930, †. A blend of abandoned lad + bandanna.

abbess (or lady abbess), 'a bawd, a female brothel-keeper', may be c., but it is prob. s.: cf. nun, nunnery.

Abbott's (incorrectly Abbots); A. Priory. 'Abbot's Priory—the King's-bench prison; "Abbot's park" being restricted to the rules: so called after the actual C.J., i.e., Chief Justice: 1823, Jon Bee; 1823, Egan's Grose, 'This bit of flash generally changes when the Lord Chief Justice of the above court retires from his situation'; 1827, Every Night Book, the latter term; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open (latter); 1890, F & H (id.); † by 1900.

abbott's teeth. The chevaux de frise along the top of the wall around the King's Bench Prison: 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London (see Ellenborough's teeth); † by 1900. Cf. preceding entry.

abiding; esp. my abiding. 'A temporary resting or hiding place, secure from capture': vagrants': 1889, B & L; † by 1920.

abishag. An 'illegitimate child of a mother who has been seduced by a married man': 1889, B & L; † by 1915.

about town. 'Engaged in Prostitution.—About town, on the back, on the bat, on the hip, on the pavement, with apartments to let,' BVB, 1942: late C. 19–20. With the exception of on the pavement, all are c.

abraham or abram; or A-. (Adj.) For the compounds, see the various compounded terms hereinunder.—2. Mad: 1610, S. Rowlands, Martin Mark-All; 1741 (see abraham cove, 2).—3. Naked: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'Going Abram (that is to say naked)'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Abram . . . Naked'; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose; 1823, Jon Bee; † by 1890.—4. Hence, poor: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1796, Grose; † by 1890.

Abraham (or A-), v. 'To sham; to pretend sickness': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; 1882, James D. McCabe, New York; † by 1900. This is shortening of the next; or perhaps an error, for McCabe merely repeats Matsell.

abraham, sham, v. See abram, sham. For the n., see sham Abraham.

abraham (or abram) cove. Dekker, O per se O, 1612, 'The Abram Cove, is a lustie strong Roague, who walketh with a Slade about his Quarrons (a sheete about his body) Trining, hanging to his hammes, bandeliere-wise . . . A face staring like a Sarasin, his haire long and filthily knotted . . . a good Filch (or Staffe) . . . in his Famble . . . and sometimes a sharpe sticke, on which he hangeth Ruffepecke. These, walking up and downe the Countrey, are more terribly [sic] to women and children, then the name of Raw-head and Bloudy-bones . . ., so that when they come to any doore a begging, nothing is denyed them'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Abram Cove . . . A tatterdemallion'; 1676, E. Coles, 'Abram-Cove, c. Naked or poor man'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'Abram-cove, c. a Naked or poor Man, also a lusty strong Rogue'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'A poor Man . . . Abraham-cove'; 1725, A Canting Dict., 'Abram-Cove, a lusty strong rogue, with hardly any Cloaths on his Back'; 1728, D. Defoe, whose printer doubtless is responsible for the erroneous definition, 'A poor House'; 1785, Grose, 'A naked or poor man, also a lusty strong roguic'; 1809, Andrewes, Dict.; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by 1859 (Matsell, Vocabulum) current in New York; † by 1890 (F & H). See abraham, adj., 3, and cove.—2. 'A Mad Man: An abram Cove', Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 1741; † by 1800. See abraham, adj., 2.—3. A sneak-thief: 1889, B & L; app. current in C. 19.

Abraham Grains (or g-). 'A publican who brews his own beer': 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1930.

abraham (or abram) man. 'An Abraham man', says Awdeley in 1562, 'is he that walketh bare armed, and bare legged, and fayneth hym selfe mad, and caryeth a pack of wool, or a stycke with baken on it, or such lyke toy, and nameth himself poore Tom'. Harman amplifies. 'These Abraham men', he says, 'be those that fayne themselves to have beene mad, and have bene kept eyther in Bethelhem or in some other pryson a tyme, and not one amongst twenty that ever came in pryson for any such cause: yet wyll they saye howe piteously and most extreamely they have bene beaten, and dealt with all. Some of these be merye and verye pleasant, they wyll daunce and sing; some others be as colde and reasonable to talke wyth all. These begge money; eyther when they come at Farmours howses they wyll demande Baken, eyther cheese, or wooll, or any thinge that is worthe money. And if they espye small company within, they wyll with fierce countenance demaund somewhat. Where for feare the maydes wyll give theym largely to be ryd of thym.

'If they maye convenyently come by any cheate, they wyll picke and steale, as the upright man or Roge, poultry or lynnen. And all wemen that wander be at their commaundemente.' Also in Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608—an account which, heavily indebted to Harman's, adds some picturesque details of the length to which they will go (e.g., pins stuck into their flesh) in order to excite pity; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1698, B.E., 'Abram-men, c. the seventeenth Order of the Canting-crew. Beggars antickly trick'd up with Ribbands, Red Tape, Foxtails, Rags, etc., pretending Madnes to palliate their thefts of poultry, Linnen, etc.'; 1725, A Canting Dict., 'A sort of itinerant Hedge-Robbers and Strippers of Children, etc.'; 1785, Grose, 'Abram men, pretended mad men'; 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.). Cf. abraham, adj., 3. Hence:—2. 'Fellows who steal pocket-books only': 1797, Potter, Dict. of Cant and Flash; 1809, Andrewes, plagiarizing Potter; 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890 (F & H).—3. (Ex sense 1.) A veteran vagrant: tramps': perhaps since ca. 1860. The Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932.

abraham (or A-) suit, on the. Engaged in 'any kind of dodge or deceit designed to excite sympathy, used by begging-letter impostors': since ca. 1860: 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; by 1930, ob.; by 1945, virtually †. See suit, 2; and the prec. abraham entries.

Abrahamer (or a-). A vagrant, a beggar: 1823, Jon Bee; † by 1900. Ex abraham cove.

Abraham's balsam; Abraham's hempen elixir. Execution by hanging: provincial: 1889, B & L, and 1890, F & H, have the shorter phrase; 1898, J. W. Horsley, Prisons and Prisoners; † by 1920. 'So named from the hemp tree, a kind of willow, that is called Abraham's balm by botanists', B & L.

abram or Abram. This abbr. of abram cove is rare (Dekker, O per se O, 1612); and in Ainsworth's Rookwood, 1834, is a mere archaism.

abram, v., 'to pretend sickness', is almost certainly an error. George Andrews, A Dict. of the Slang and Cant Languages, 1809, and again in Anon., Sinks of London, 1848.

abram, adj. See abraham.

abram, maund. See maund abram.

abram, play the. 'Be madde Toms', Dekker, O per se O, 1612. But this is hardly a c. phrase.

abram, sham; occ. sham abraham. 'To sham Abram, to pretend sickness': 1785, Grose; 1859, H, 'Abram-Sham, or Sham-Abraham, to feign sickness or distress'; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1889 (B & L), no longer c. in Britain. See abraham cove and cf. abraham (adj., 2 and 3).

abram cove. See abraham cove.

abram man. See abraham man.

abram mort. A madwoman: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue.

abram (or A-) ninny, which occurs in Dekker's O per se O, 1612, is a literary, not a c. variant of abram cove.

abram sham, on the. See on the abram sham.

abrainer; gen. pl. 'Naked, ragged, dirty beggars, the lowest order of vagrants': 1797, Potter, Dict.; app. † by 1870. Cf. abraham cove.

abscothalater. A person—esp. a criminal—that is hiding from the police: 1876, H. O. Manton; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1920.

absent without leave. 'Broken out of gaol; escaped from the police': 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; ob. A humorous use of the military phrase.

academician. A long-term prisoner: 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890.—2. 'A whore at a brothel': 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1890 (F & H). Ex academy, 1.

academy. A brothel: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'A Brothel; a Bawdy-House'; 1785, Grose, 'Academy, or Pushing School, a brothel'; 1809, Andrewes, Dict.; 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1889 (B & L). Ex the instruction given there in ars amatoria.—2. 'A Receptacle for all sorts of Villains, where the young Ones are initiated into the Canting Language, and all manner of Cheats and Impostures, and sorted into Tribes and Bands, according to their several Capacities for Mischief', A Canting Dict., 1725; 1781 (see academy buzz-napper); † by 1889 (B & L).—3. 'A prison of the hard-labour sort': 1823, Jon Bee, but implied in floating academy, q.v.; by 1859 (Matsell, Vocabulum), current in New York: † by 1889 in Britain (B & L).

academy, floating. See floating academy.

academy buzz-napper. An apprentice pick-pocket (see academy, 2, and buzz-napper): 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'This Rig is generally executed by a young fry of boys, who are first picked up in the purlieus of St Giles's, and carried to J—y B—'s, in — Street, where they are put into a room, in which there are figures dressed up like a man and a woman, with bells in every pocket[,] for the young one's to practise on . . . Part of the gang attends to instruct them'; † by 1890. See the elements.

accident. A detection of one's crime; an arrest: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1936, P. S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld (U.S.A.); extant. An amusingly subjective euphemism.

accident lurk, the. 'Lurkers of this description, like others, have a slum and delicate (brief and book); and the slum states that by some dreadful accident the bearer has lost all, or at least, the greater part of his property. Sometimes by storm, and at other times by a flood, or in some other way': 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; ob. See lurk and lurker.

accidental, n. 'Accidentals or foreigners, terms applied to men convicted of social offenses,' Convict, 1934: convicts': since ca. 1925. Ironic.

accommodated, say B & L, means, in c., 'sentenced to a term of imprisonment': I doubt it. If, however, it existed, it was only ca. 1850-1900.

accommodation. A local freight train that may carry passengers: tramps': since ca. 1920. Stiff, 1931.

accommodator. A person—esp. an ex-policeman—that negotiates 'a compounding of felonies and other crimes by bribing witnesses and prosecutors': 1889, B & L; by 1940, virtually †. Ex S.E. accommodate, to arrange things for (a person).

accordion, 'a train made up of Pullman cars', Henry Leverage, 'Dictionary of the Underworld', in Flynn's, Jan. 3, 1925; prob. railroad s. rather than c. accounts, cast up one's. To vomit: s., not c.: C. 18-mid-19. Hence:—2. To turn Queen's (or King's) evidence: 1890, F & H; † by 1930. Cf. spill one's guts.

accoutrements; be accoutred. Dress; to be dressed: classified by B.E., 1698, as c., but surely the most impeccable S.E.!

ace, n. A dollar: since ca. 1905: Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'Dictionary of the Underworld'; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1929-31, Kernôt; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; letter, June 1, 1946 (Canadian). Probably short for ace spot; cf. bullet, q.v.—2. A one-year term in prison: 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; 1934, Convict; 1935, Hargan; extant.—3. A marijuana cigarette—one, not two nor many: drug addicts': March 12, 1938, The New Yorker, Meyer Berger; extant. Cf. senses 1 and 2; ex the 'one' marking on an ace card.

ace, v. To sustain a third-degree inquiry without talking: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. To be an 'ace' or 'top-notch' in the game of bluff.—2. To swindle or cheat (someone): since ca. 1920. Ersine.

ace in, v. To obtain—for self or for a friend—the interest of someone in power or authority: July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex cards: 'to get one's ace in'.

Ace in the Hole. San Huan Hill, New York City: Dec. 20, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville ('The Wickedest Spot in New York'), 'With drunkards and drug addicts it bears another name . . . the "Ace-in-the-Hole"': C. 20.

ace in the hole. Gamblers', esp. card-sharpers' (C. 20), thus: 'Ever hear of a gambler's ace in his sleeve—"ace in the hole", they [i.e., professional gamblers] call it', George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 1915; 1930, E. D. Sullivan, Chicago Surrenders; Jan. 31, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Something to give the holder an advantage; a sum of money for emergencies . . . or some hold over one in authority'; 1933, Ersine, 'A last resort'; extant. 'From the game of stud poker, where the concealed or "hole card" is of especial value to the player if it happens to be an ace' (Irwin).

ace note. A one-dollar bill: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. See ace, n.

ace of spades, 'a widow', is classified in Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859, as c.: it certainly was never c. in England, though it seems to have been, and still to be, c. in New York. Ersine, 1933, defines it as 'a wealthy and marriageable woman, usually a widow'.

ace spot, or hyphenated. One dollar: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; extant. See ace, n.

aces. 'Anything or anyone considered to be the best or most desirable,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1905; by 1935, s. Ersine, 1933, defines the term as 'trustworthy, solid'. Obviously ex ace-high card games.

acespay. A space (whether spatial or temporal): Jan. 8, 1930, Variety, Ruth Morris, 'A Carnival Grifter in Winter'; extant. I.e., space > ace-sp > ace-sp + ay > ace-spay, acespay. (Cf. ancay, ugmay, umpchay, etc.)

acid man. A swindler: 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night Hawk, 'First came "Dopey" Binner, the dummy chucker and acid man'; extant. Cf. Eng. and Am. s., come the acid, 'to make oneself unpleasant'.

ack; ack pirate; ack ruffian. See ark, ark pirate, ark ruffian.

ackman is an error for arkman.

acknowledge the corn, 'to make a full frank confession', is classified by Geo. P. Burnham, in his Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872, as c.: but it was never, even in its origin, lower than s.

ackruff is an American variant of Ark Ruffian: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulary; or, The Rogue's Lexicon, 'Ackruffs. River-thieves; river-pirates'; 1890, F. & H.; † by 1900.

acky. Nitric acid: burglars': 1935, George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade, 'Try the acky on it if you like. There y'are,' he went on, putting the acid on the table'; 1939, Jim Phelan, In the Can, of a jewellery swindle with the aid of nitric acid; extant. A corruption of its technical name, 'aqua fortis'.

acorn, 'a gallows', says Matsell in his Vocabulary, 1859; this may be a U.S. derivation of, but is prob. an error generated by the following phrase:

acorn, you will ride a horse foaled by an. You will be hanged: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'The gallows, called also the Wooden and Three-legged mare'. This may have been an underworld c.p., but more prob. it was a s. one; current ca. 1780-1840. The gallows was often made of oak; often, too, the branch of an oak tree was used as a makeshift gibbet.

acre. A month (in prison): 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Just a small area; only a short sentence.

across, adv. 'Signifies . . . any collusion or unfair dealing between several parties': 1812, J. H. Vaux (a-cross = on the cross); † by 1900. See cross, n. and adj.

across country; e.g. go across country (To become) a fugitive or, at the least, a hasty departer: 1929, Givens (of a detected criminal), 'He has to leave quick . . . "does a Nurmi" . . . "across country" or "lams"'; extant.

across the bubble. Into prison; perhaps, into San Quentin penitentiary: 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (period covered: 1901-11), 'Generally the new arrival [in a convict prison] secs a few familiar faces—men who have been in jail with him and have been sent "across the bubble" while he has been awaiting trial'; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by Moreby Acklom; extant.

adam or A-. Mostly in combination. An Adam tiler is a pick-pocket's accomplice—he to whom the money is passed for safe-keeping and suspicion-evading: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Tip the Cole to Adam Tyler . . . Give what money you pocket-picked to the next party, presently'; 1676, Coles (at tip); 1698, B.E., makes it clear that goods as well as money are passed over to the Adam tiler who 'scowers off with them'; 1714, Alex. Smith; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The Thirty-ninth Order of Villains, who pretend to have given Origins to many other Societies of Canterers'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (Adam); 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Adam, a henchman, an accomplice'; by 1859, both terms were current in U.S.A. (Matsell, Vocabulum); by 1880, † in England. Tiler prob. comes ex Ger. Theiler (or Teiler), 'one who partakes or shares'.

adam, v. To marry: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'I'll adam that Moll; I'll marry that Woman', 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'What, are Moll and you adam'd?'; † by 1860. Prob. ex 'Adam and Eve'; but possibly ex c. autem, a church—cf. coll. to be church'd.

Adam and Eve on a raft. 'Two fried eggs on toast. "Wreck 'em" if they are scrambled. "With their eyes open" if not,' Dean Stiff, 1931. Either tramps' c. adopted by waiters, or waiters' s. adopted by tramps. In either case, the terms had > waiters' s. by 1930 at the latest.

adam tiler. See adam, n.—2. A receiver of stolen goods: 1797, Potter, Dict.; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1890.—3. A pickpocket: 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890.

addle(-)cove. 'A foolish man': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1910. A 'canting' of S.E. addle-pate.

adept. A pickpocket; a conjuror; an alchemist: so B & L, 1889, and, as to 'pickpocket', F & H 1890: but I find no independent evidence that adept, in any of these senses, ever existed in c.

Adkins's Academy. A certain London house of correction: ca. 1810-50: Jon Bee, 1823.

adman. A pretended solicitor that advertises in the newspapers: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Aug. 9, 1937, Godfrey Irwin (letter), 'Not cant now; rather slang, used frequently in "good" English of anyone in the advertising business'. I.e., 'advertisement man'.

admiral's watch. A good sleep, esp. at night; a favourable opportunity to rest: since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'Brought to the road by the "sea stiffs" and former navy men, who so called that full night's sleep which comes to a sailor now and then from a combination of watches' (Irwin).

Adolph Gobels (properly Goebbels). Second-hand automobile tyres: May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; slightly ob. Perhaps the German minister of propaganda, Joseph Paul Goebbels (1897-1945), is meant.

Adonee, according to B & L (1889), is old c. for God: perhaps tramps' c., of C. 19. Leland adduces a tramps' toast:—'May the good Adonee | Soften the strong; | Lighten our loads | And level our roads'. 'Evidently Yiddish, from Adonai, Lord' (B & L).

adown in the viol, in B & L, is an absurd error: read down in the vile, a, and see down, n., 3, and vile.

advantage goods. The tools, appliances, devices of cardsharps and other swindlers: 1894, H. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats (p. 285); slightly ob. They procure to the purchaser an unfair advantage.

advertise. 'To attract undesirable attention,' BVB, 1942: since ca. 1920.

affidavit men, i.e., 'Knights of the post' (q.v.), is not c. but the most respectable S.E.

afflicke is merely a printer's error for a flick (see flick, n.). Cf. the error in avile.

afgay. A male homosexual: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. I.e., fag, n., 3, > agf; -ay is added; hence afgay. Cf. apcray, ugmay, qq.v.

after the beef. After the report goes in to the police: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant.

agaze, adj. (predicative or complementary only—not before the noun) and adv. 'Astonished; open-eyed': 1890, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; by 1920, ob. From obsolescent S.E. agaze = at gaze = 'in a gazing attitude' (O.E.D.).

agency stiff. A working tramp that frequents labour agencies: C. 20. Harry Franck, A Vagabond Journey around the World, 1910. See stiff, n., 14.

agent. 'These two men were what is called in their "counterfeiters"—"lingo, agents or load-carriers, i.e., the "go-betweens" from the maker to the utterer, for it very rarely occurs that the purchaser of the coins is acquainted with the maker,' Ton Divall, Scoundrels and Scallywags, 1929: since ca. 1910. Euphemistic.

agogare. 'Anxious; eager; impatient; be quick [sic]': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; or, The Rogue's Lexicon; 1881, The New York Slang Dict.; 1889, B & L (copying Matsell); 1890, F & H. But I suspect that this is an error caused by a misreading of Grose's derivation of agog from It. agognare, 'to desire eagerly'.

agony, 'problem, difficulty; story one has to tell': James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936: on the borderline between c. and s., but prob. s.; perhaps adopted from The Conway training-ship s.

agreeable companion; gen. pl. ' . . . A set of men who live on the public at large; this set is composed of men that are called agreeable companions; and they introduce themselves into [? unto] genteel frequenters of taverns, coffee-houses, etc. In consequence of their address and conversation, they gain the esteem and confidence of some of the most opulent and respectable of their companions; and having obtained an invitation to private parties, at their houses, they establish themselves as the sincere friends, as well as agreeable companions; from a number of acquaintances, thus cultivated, the swindler has an opportunity of getting his board at the expense of his friends, as no party is complete without him; he is obliged equally to their pockets, for his other necessary expenses, as his general plan is borrowing, at first, a few guineas, and paying again with punctuality, at the expense of some other good friend, till he finds a convenient opportunity of borrowing much larger sums, from as many of his acquaintances as he can ; at the time of repayment, he consequently, loses the good opinion of his associates ; this circumstance, however, gives him very little concern, as, at their expense, he is enabled to introduce himself to a fresh set of acquaintances, at some distant place, on whom he practises the same artifice', Anon., The Swindler Detected, revised ed., 1781. This seems to be an underworld term ; certainly it introduces a specific twist to the normal, the S.E. sense of agreeable companion : and app. it was current ca. 1760–1830.

aidh, 'butter', and ainoch, 'a thing', are Shelta, or at least tinkers' words : 1889, B & L.

air. Airy, careless talk ; misleading talk : tramps' : from ca. 1910 : Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. English hot air, 'mere talk ; boasting'.

air and exercise. 'He has had air and exercise, i.e., he has been whipped at the cart's tail, or as it is generally, though more vulgarly expressed, at the cart's a-se' : 1785, Grose ; 1823, Jon Bee, 'The pillory, revolving ; or being flogged at the cart's tail' ; † by 1840.—2. Hence in U.S.A., 'to work in the stone quarry at Blackwell's Island, or at Sing Sing' : 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum ; 1889, B & L, 'Penal servitude at a convict settlement,' in England,—so too in F & H, 1890 ; by 1930, app. †.

airedale. 'Airdale, n. One who is employed on the waterfront by bootleggers. "Pay no attention to the airdale"', James P. Burke, 'The Argot of the Racketeers'—The American Mercury, Dec. 1930 ; 1929–31, Kernôt ; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn ; 1934, Rose ; ob. Ex the dog so named : an alert and lively terrier.—2. Hence 'a trustworthy and faithful friend' (Ersine, 1933) or 'a dependable pal', Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936 ; extant.—3. A well-dressed, apparently well-born salesman of stocks and shares : commercial underworld : from late 1920's. William L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering, 1931. Prob. ex the dog : though rough-haired, they are an accredited breed.—4. 'A pest, a bore,' Ersine, 1933 : since ca. 1928. Prob. ex sense 2.

Akerman's Hotel. Newgate Prison : from ca. 1760, but app. recorded first in : 1796, Grose, 3rd ed., 'In 1787, a person of that name was the gaoler, or keeper'—cf., however, the ensuing note ; † by 1820 or 1830. In Howard's The State of the Prisons in England and Wales, 1777, we find, at 'Newgate', the words 'Gaoler, Richard Akerman, Salary, £200', and he is mentioned as Keeper of Newgate in the trial of Charles Butler, Jan. 1757, in Select Trials, III, 1764.

alarm sheet. A warning about, a description of, a forger : forgers' : since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. Cf. S.E. hue and cry.

alberts. Toe-rags worn instead of the socks they lack the money to buy : Australian beggars' and tramps' : late C. 19–20. In, e.g., Sidney J. Baker, Australian Slang, 1942.

Alderman. J. H. Vaux, 1812, at lush (to drink), says : 'Speaking of a person who is drunk, they'—criminals—'say, Alderman Lushington is concerned, or, he has been voting for the Alderman' ; † by 1880. A pun on lush, n. and v.—2. A half-crown : 1839, Brandon ; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds (see slum, v., 2) ; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed. ; 1859, H ; 1863, A Lancashire Thief ; by 1890 (F & H), it was low s. Ex its size and importance.—3. A large crowbar used by thieves : 1872, Diprose's Book about London and London Life, 'This is a "head [chief] bar", which would open any safe' ; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (glossary) ; 1890, F & H ; 1898, R. J. A. Power-Berry, The Bye-Ways of Crime ; by 1940, ob. Ex its portliness.—4. 'A turnkey fat and chesty,' Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936 ; extant.

Alderman double-slanged. 'Nick often eat a roast fowl and sausage with me, which in cant, is called an Alderman double slang'd', George Parker, Humorous Sketches, 1782, footnote on p. 31 ; app. † by 1860. Slanged because of the resemblance between a string of sausages and a chain (slang, n., 7).

Alderman Lushington. See sense 1 of Alderman. alec or alick. A swindler's dupe : Australian : since ca. 1925. Sidney J. Baker, Australian Slang, 1942. Ironically ex smart Alec.

alemnoch, 'milk', is a tinkers' word (Shelta) : 1889, B & L.

Alhallowes is Dekker's spelling (The Belman of London, 1608) of All Hallows.

Ali Baba. An alibi : 1929–31, Kernôt ; extant—but by 1940, s. A pun.

alias. 'The act of wrongfully blaming another' : Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'Dictionary of the Underworld' ; extant. The establishment of an alias at the expense of another person.—2. 'A Johnny False, a deceitful fellow,' Leverage, 1925 (as in sense 1) ; extant.

alick. See alec.

alive. 'Having money. "Put the bee on Joe ; he's alive"', Ersine : since ca. 1920. Not a 'dead-beat'.

alki or alky. Alcohol : 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, where coffee-royal is glossed, by a criminal, thus, 'There ain't nothin' better in th' booze line than pure alky mixed with jamocha' ; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, R. Jordan, 'Idioms' ; April 14, 1928, Flynn's (A. E. Ullman, 'Beggarmen') ; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'The beer and alky runners' ; 1929, Charles Francis Coe, Hooch ; Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's ; Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke, 'The Argot of the Racketeers' ; Nov. 15, 1930, Liberty ; Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'Their credit was good, especially with alky rackets' ; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot ; 1931, Godfrey Irwin ; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls ; 1933, Eagle ; 1934, Rose ; by 1935, (low) s. By a slurring of the first two syllables of alcohol.

alki (or -y) cooker ; alki-cooking. A manufacturer or distiller of denatured alcohol ; the distillation or manufacture of denatured alcohol : 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot, 'His job had to do with the organisation of the alky cookers' ; Fred D. Pasley, Al Capone (both terms) ; 1934, Rose (the former) ; Aug. 24, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan—reminiscently, for prohibition was repealed in 1934.—2. (Only alky cooker.) An illegal still : 1933, Ersine.

alki racket, the. The making and selling of contraband liquor : ca. 1922–34. March 28, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn. See alky.

alki (or alky or alkee) stiff. A confirmed drinker of alcoholic liquor : 1923, N. Anderson, The Hobo, quoting Leon Livingston (1918) ; 1931, Godfrey Irwin ; extant.

all betty ! See betty !, all.

all gay ! 'The coast is clear': esp. burglars': ca. 1870-1920: 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H. A variation of the s. all serene.

all geezed up; all lit up. Under the influence of a drug: 1934, Rose; extant. See geezed up and lit.

All Hallows. In 'prigging law' (horse-stealing), All Hallows is the gang's name for 'the toulung place', i.e., the tolling place—that at which the toll or tax is levied: 1592, Robert Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, mentions this term in the list of prigging terms but not in the description of the swindle. Repeated by Dekker in 1608.

all is boman. See boman.

all right. See right, all.

all right ! See right !, all.

all set is applied to 'desperate fellows, ready for any kind of mischief': 1797, H. Potter, Dict.; 1809, Andrewes, plagiarizing Potter; 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1870, low s.

all the year round. (A sentence of) twelve months in gaol: Australian: C. 20. Sidney J. Baker, Australian Slang, 1942. Euphemistic.

all there, be. 'To be on time, on hand "up to the mark"': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1900, s. Cf. English s. sense, '(very) shrewd; alert and capable'.

all to the good. 'It is all right', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; † by 1940. A slight deviation from the coll. sense of the phrase.

all to the mustard. Correct; thoroughly satisfactory; most desirable; very pleasant: tramps': from ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'From the fact that much of the food the tramp is able to obtain needs plenty of condiment to render it at all palatable or appetizing' (Irwin).

alley. 'There is today, in solitary confinement in a western prison, a convict named Benjamin and this man has been in what is called the "alley" or "hole" for fifteen years. And that is a long time to live alone,' Convict 12627 in Flynn's, July 25, 1936: convicts': from ca. 1920.

alley apple. A stone, a brickbat, a fragment of paving, as a missile in street fighting: since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, low s. Obviously apple is ironic; cf. pineapple.

alley cat. A prostitute: late C. 19-20. BVB, 1942. See cat.

alligator bait. 'Fried or stewed liver. Too costly now for hobos,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': C. 20: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'So called from its unpalatable, indigestible character as served in construction camps and cheap lunch rooms' (Irwin), alligators' flesh being tough and 'strong'.

alls-bay (or one word). Nonsense, rubbish, tripe: C. 20. Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943, "That's allsbay," interrupted Limpy Joe, querulously'. I.e., balls (nonsense), >, by back s., allsb; add the American -ay, the result is allsbay or, to indicate the correct pronunciation, alls-bay. Cf. arkitnay.

all's boman. See boman, 2.

ally beg. A bed: 1889, B & L, who refer to it as 'this very ancient and almost obsolete cant word'. But is there not some error? I have seen the word nowhere else. Perhaps a confusion with libbege.

Alps, the; esp. go over the Alps. (To go to) Dartmoor, i.e., to the penal prison: 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13, "Don't you come over the Alps again."—"I've given up mountain climbing," said Johnny'; extant. Occ. cross the Alps: Partridge, 1937. Cf. go over.

Alsatia: A. the higher, A. the lower. 'Alsatia. White-fryers', T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, 1688; 1698, B.E., 'Alsatia the higher [Whitefriars]. Alsatia the lower, the Mint in Southwark'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Alsatia the Higher . . . once a Privileged Place, as the Mint was lately; but suppress'd, on Account of the notorious Abuses committed in it, and a Riot that happen'd in the Reign of Charles II . . . This Place also, when subsisting, used to furnish the corrupt Members of the Law with Affidavit-Men . . . who were afterwards obliged to resort to: Alsatia the Lower . . . the Liberties whereof being abus'd, occasion'd an Act to pass . . ., 9° Georgii, to suppress the same. Since which, they have refug'd themselves in Wapping, and erected a New Mint there; but have so irregularly and riotously behaved . . . that they have brought themselves under the Cognizance of the Parliament, who are now actually taking effective measures to suppress them'; later references are therefore merely historical.

Alsatia, Squire of. This phrase, taken as a title by Thomas Shadwell (see the preceding entry), may, ca. 1670-90, have been c.; if not c., then certainly s. Defined thus by B.E. in 1698: 'A Man of Fortune, drawn in, cheated, and ruin'd by a pack of poor, lowsy, spunging, bold Fellows that liv'd (formerly) in Whyte-Fryers'.

Alsations. 'The Inhabitants, such as, broken Gentlemen, Tradesmen, &c. Lurking there' (in Whitefriars and the Mint), B.E., 1698—but mentioned earlier in Shadwell's The Squire of Alsatia. After the C. 17, the term is historical—and sanctified; automatically assuming the status of S.E. Ex Alsatia.

altamel; altamal(l). Altogether (B.E.); 'a verbal or lump account, without particulars, such as is commonly produced at bawdy-houses, spunging-houses, &c' (Egan's Grose). Not c. but s.; see my ed. of Grose's Vulgar Tongue.

altar. 'A toilet, more especially the porcelain bowl,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: mostly tramps': since ca. 1905. 'From the mind of some thorough anti-cleric who recognized in the white porcelain something clearer and more desirable than that to which he had been accustomed' (Irwin).

altamal(l). See altamel.

altham seems to be the earliest form of autem or rather of autem mort: 1562, Awdeley, The Fraternitey of Vacabondes (see the first quotation at curtail). A phonetic variant of no etymological significance.

ambidexter, 'one who goes Snacks in Gaming with both Parties' (B.E. 1698), is more prob. s. than c. Ex s. ambidexter, a lawyer that takes fees from both parties. Lit., two-handed.

ambulance-chaser. A shyster lawyer: 1897 (D.A.E.); Henry Hyatt in Flynn's, Jan. 17, 1931; Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 1936. Always has it been police and journalistic s.; not c., as some writers have claimed. Implication: an opportunist, devoid of common decency.

ambush. 'Fraudulent weights and measures', 1890, F & H, who add, 'A punning allusion to the accepted meaning of the word—to lie in wait (lying weight)'; 1929-31, Kernôt; extant.

amen-bawler, 'a parson', is not c. but low s.

amerace. 'Very near'; as imperative, 'Don't go far; be within call': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1920. Ex within ames ace, 'nearly, very near'.

American tweezers. 'An instrument used by a hotel-sneak which nips the ward end of a key, and enables him to open a door from the opposite side to that on which it has been locked,' Hotten, 1874: ca. 1840-1910, then s.: 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747, p. 422, where the reference may possibly be valid for the year 1845; 1903, Sylva Clapin, A New Dictionary of Americanisms.

aminadab, 'a Quaker', is not c. but s.

ampster. See amster.

amputate. 'In thieves' slang, to decamp, to take flight,' says Sylva Clapin, A New Dict. of Americanisms, 1903: but the term is suspect: I postulate a hurried reading of the synonymous English s. amputate one's mahogany (humorous on cut sticks, 'to run away').

amster, sometimes spelt ampster; Amsterdam. See ram. (Kylie Tennant, 1941; Sidney J. Baker, Australian Slang, 1942.)

amster, v. To act as an 'amster': Australian: C. 20. Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, 1941. Ex the n.

amuck. See running a muck.

amuse. 'In a Canting Sense; to fling dust in the eyes', literally; 'to invent strange Tales to delude Shop-keepers and others, from being upon their Guard', A New Canting Dict., 1725,—virtually repeated by Grose, 1785; 1823, Jon Bee; by 1859, current in U.S.A. (Matsell, Vocabulum); † by 1889 (B & L, by implication). To 'entertain' deceptively.

amusement. The doing of this: C. 18. (By deduction.)—2. Cheating; fraud: 1797, Potter, Dict.

amusers 'were wont to have their Pockets filled with Dust, which they would throw into the Eyes of People they had a mind to Rob, and so run away, while their Comerade, who followed them, under the Notion of pitying the half-blinded Person, laid his Hand on whatever came near'—i.e., nearest. 'It was also the Custom of these Varlets, by strange Tales or News, to draw People out of their Shops, especially in the Country, on pretence that their Children or Friends, &c. were drown'd, or run over at such a Place, while their Comerades, who lay in wait for that Purpose, carried off what they could come at', A New Canting Dict., 1725; so too in Grose, 1785; 1823, Jon Bee; † by 1840 in England, but app. current in U.S.A. in 1859 (Matsell, Vocabulum) and still current there in 1903 (Sylva Clapin, A New Dict. of Americanisms). Ex amuse.—2. A synonym of drop cull: 1797, Potter, Dict.; † by 1890.

anabaptist. 'A pickpocket caught in the fact', i.e., in the crime, 'and punished with the discipline of the pump, or horse-pond': 1785, Grose; † by 1889 (B & L). With a pun on the baptism practised by Anabaptists.

analken, 'to wash', and analt 'to sweep (with a broom)', are tinkers' (Shelta) words: 1889, B & L.

ancay. A jail: Jan. 8, 1930, Variety, Ruth Morris, 'A Carnival Grifter in Winter'; extant. I.e., can (n., 2) > anc > ancay: cf. uckersay, ugmay, umpchay.

anchor. A stay of execution (in a death-penalty sentence): Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. N. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'A swell mouthpiece copped me an anchor'; 1929-31, Kernôt; 1931, IA; 1934, Rose; 1942, BVB.—2. 'A pick. Companion tool of the shovel or banjo,' Stiff, 1931; Godfrey Irwin, however, defines it (1931) as a tamping bar: tramps' (and labour gangs'): extant. 'Hard to lift and work with, it acts as an anchor to the worker using it' (Irwin).—3. 'A fixed [i.e., bribed] juror': Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936; extant. An anchor 'fixes'—holds fast—a ship.

anchor, v., esp. in past p'ple, anchored. 'Anchored. Stationed; stationary', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To settle down at a steady job; to remain in one place'; by 1935, at latest, coll. Like a ship.—2. To stay an execution: Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'Dictionary of the Underworld'; extant. Ex the n.—3. To alight from a train: tramps': since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

anchor, swallow the. To surrender; give oneself up to the police; forgo a crime; forsake crime: 1931, A. R. L. Gardner, The Art of Crime; 1933, George Ingram, Stir; extant. Ex the nautical s. sense, 'to retire from the sea'.

anchor on prop. A tie-pin with a safety catch: 1934, Rose; extant. See prop.

anchored. See anchor, v.

Andrew Miller's lugger. 'A king's ship or vessel' (J. H. Vaux, 1812), i.e., 'One of the fleet of ships provided and maintained out of the royal revenue; a ship of the royal navy; later, a ship of war equipped at the public expense' (opp. to privateer), O.E.D.: since ca. 1800; ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack; by 1840, smugglers' s. Was Andrew Miller a ship-builder? See Wilfred Granville, Sea Slang of the 20th Century, 1949.

Andy McGinn. The chin: mainly Pacific Coast: C. 20. Convict, 1934; M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

angel. A 'person easily victimized', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, defines it thus, 'Person supplying money without getting anything in return. Also called sucker, sap, easy mark, boob, etc.'; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'The species of sucker who favors theatrical entertainment as an investment'—a nuance that, by 1930, was theatrical s.; 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch, 'Swinnerton was the angel in our bootleggin' racket'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Anyone who furnishes money for . . . some extensive crime which requires a great deal of planning and preparation'; 1933, Eagle; extant. Ex his angelic nature.—2. A type of homosexual pervert (see cannibal): 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex the 'angel's' subdued, rather lady-like manners when in the company of normal men (Irwin).—3. Among American tramps, 'a person who gives you more than you expect. One who takes an interest without trying to reform you,' Stiff, 1931; extant.—4. In Britain, 'An "angel" in the tramp tongue means a sandwich-board man . . . The boards which the sandwich-man carries round used to be called his "clappers". Someone substituted "flappers" . . . Gradually they came to be known as "wings", and finally the term "angel" came to be applied to the familiar sandwich-man,' the Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932; extant. An angel has wings.—5. (Also angie.) Cocaine: Australian: since ca. 1925; Partridge, 1938; Sidney J. Baker, Australian Slang, 1942. It makes one angelically happy—for a while.

angel food. 'Mission preaching about the Bread of Life,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'The doctrine or teaching expounded at a mission or other religious centre'; extant. Cf. pie in the sky for the semantics.

angelina. 'Punk or road kid acting as a companion', Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910. Cf. angel.

angclear and angglar are Harman's spellings (in the Caveat) of angler, q.v.

angie (pron. ane-jee). See angel, 5.

angle. A plan of operation; method of procedure: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; 1934, Rose; by 1940, police and journalistic s. Ex angle 'a point of view'.

angle, v. To steal by pickpocketry: C. 17. Ben Jonson, The Metamorphos'd Gipsies, 1621, 'Or angling the purses of such as will curse us'.—2. 'To scheme. "We angle so the monkey takes the fall"', James P. Burke, 'The Argot of the Racketeers'—The American Mercury, Dec. 1930: 1929–31, Kernôt; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To make money by illegitimate means; to fish for a "sucker"': 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; 1942, BVB, 'To suppose, estimate, scheme'; extant. Semantics, as in angler, 2.

angler. In the earliest reference—Harman, 1566—there is a section headed 'A HOKER, or ANGGLEAR', which runs thus:—'These hokers, or Angglers, be peryllous and most wicked knaves, and be deryved or procede forth from the upright men; they commonly go in frese jerkyne and gally slopes, poynted benethe the kne; these when they practise there pylfringe, it is all by night; for, as they walke a day times from house to house, to demaund charite, they vigelantly marke where or in what place they maye attayne to there praye, casting their eyes up to every wyndow, well noting what they se their, whether apparell or linnen, hanging nere unto the sayde wyndowes, and that wyll they be sure to have the next night following; for they customably carry with them a staffe, of v. or vi. foote long, in which, within one ynych of the tope thereof, ys a lytle hole bored through, in which hole they putte an yron hoke, and with the same they wyll pluck unto them quickly any thing that they may reche ther with, which hoke in the day tyme they covertly cary about them, and is nevr sene or taken out till they come to the place where they worke their fete; such have I sene at my house, and have oft talked with them and have handled ther staves, not then understanding what use or intent, although I hadde and perceived, by there talke and behaviour, great lykely hode of evyll suspicion in them: they wyl ether leane uppon there staffe, to hyde the hole thereof, when they talke with you, or holde their hande upon the hole; and what stuffe, either wollen or linnen, they thus hoke out, they never carye the same forth with to their staulyng kens, but hides the same a iii. daies in some secret corner, and after convayes the same to their houses abovesaid, where their host or hostys giveth them money for the same, but halfe the value that it is worth, or els their doxes shall a farre of'—afar off—'sell the same at the like houses. I was credibly informed that a hoker came to a farmers house in the ded of the night, and putting back a drawe window of a low chamber, the bed standing hard by the sayd wyndow, in which laye three parsones (a man and two bygge boyes) this hoker with his staffe plucked of their garments which lay upon them to kepe them warme, with the coverlet and shete, and left them lying a slepe naked saving there shortes, and had a way all clene, and never could understande where it became. I verely suppose that when they wer wel waked with cold, they suerly thought that Robin goodfellow (according to the old saying) had bene with them that night.' Also in, e.g., Greene, The Blacke Bookes Messenger, 1592; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, a short account filched from Harman; 1665, R. Head; 1688, Holme; 1707, J. Shirley; 1720, Alex. Smith; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1823, Jon Bee; in use in U.S.A. in 1859 (Matsell); † by 1890 in Britain; 1903, Sylva Clapin, A New Dict. of Americanisms, 'In thieves' slang, a street prowler, generally belonging to a gang of petty thieves, and who is always on the lookout for opportunities to commit small larcenies'; ob.—2. Hence 'those that draw in People to be cheated', B.E., 1698; 1785, Grose; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890.—3. A synonym of starrer: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1870.—4. A receiver of stolen goods: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910.—5. A 'putter-up' (q.v.): U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1900.

angling. The vbl n. corresponding to angle, v., and to angler: 1621, Middleton & Rowley, The Spanish Gipsie.

angling cove. A receiver or 'fence': 1797, H. Potter, Dict. of Cant and Flash; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1890, F & H; † by 1920. A fellow that fishes (in troubled waters).

angling for farthings. 'Begging out of a prison window with a cap, or box, let down at the end of a long string': 1785, Grose; † by ca. 1860.

angling(-)stick. 'A stick on which a sort of a Worm is put, much like that on a Rammer to pull a Wad or Bullet out of a Musquet, or Fowling-piece, and is us'd by these petty thieves call'd Anglers, to pluck Things out of Grates and Shop-windows,' Alexander Smith, Highwaymen, III, 1720; prob. † by 1890 at the very latest. See angler, 1.

ankle, sprain one's. See sprain . . .

ankle-spring warehouse. The stocks: Anglo-Irish, ca. 1770–1840: low, or perhaps humorous, s. rather than c. (Partridge, 1937.)

annex. 'In thieves' slang, to steal. The equivalent of the English "to convey",' Clapin, Americanisms, 1903; by 1940, †.

Annie Oakley. A free pass to an entertainment or amusement: 'The term was originated in the circus world, spread to the stage, and is now in general use among "grifters" and others' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931). Annie Oakley was a champion shot with a rifle, and a circus star: she 'drilled' targets with ease: the pasteboard free passes are punched with a target-like hole (Irwin).

anodyne, n. Death: 1859, Matsell, "'Aren't yer habel to put him to hanodyne?'"—which represents the words of a New York cockney criminal; 1890, F & H; † by 1920. Prob. ex anodyne necklace.

anodyne, v. 'To anodyne; to kill': 1859, Matsell; 1890, F & H; † by 1920. Prob. ex the n., q.v.

anodyne necklace. A halter: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.: app. current ca. 1780–1840, this term may possibly have been c. but prob. was s.—perhaps journalistic. A necklace that has the power of assuaging pain : cf. the idea of death as the panacea for all diseases and ills, and the various jokes made in respect of the guillotine.

anoint, 'to flog', is not c. but low s.; the same applies to anointed, 'rich'.

antelope. A hog : 1848, 'The Flash Language' in The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin tells me). Ironically—by antiphrasis. A hog's ugliness and clumsiness are contrasted with an antelope's beauty and grace.

antelope lay, the. Hog-stealing : 1848, The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). See antelope and lay, n., 2.

antem is a misprint for autem, q.v. : Street-Robberies consider'd, 1728.

antem-cackler is not necessarily a misprint for autem cackler, for antem may = anthem. The term occurs in F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, 1893, at p. 412, 'The old 'un was an antem-cackler—what they calls a Baptist', the gloss being, 'Dissenting minister'.

anti-goss ; goss ; hotel. 'A Goss. The card that has won three times in one deal.—Anti-Goss. The card that has lost three times in one deal. It is sometimes called "a hotel". For instance, a gambler . . . finally gets 'broke'; but the love of play . . . causes him to linger . . . He borrows . . . money enough to pay his hotel or boarding-house bill . . . While [he is] looking on at the game an anti-goss occurs, and thinking that the fourth time is sure to win, he stakes the money he has borrowed . . ., and he loses. The exclamation among gamblers would then be, "There goes his hotel"': gamblers' : ca. 1870–1920.

anti-chopping. See chopping.

antiquated rogue, one 'that has left off his Trade for Thieving, etc.' (B.E., 1698), is not c. but S.E.; but to be antiquated, applied to one who has done this, or has forgotten how to do it, is c. of ca. 1690–1800, as A New Canting Dict., 1725, makes clear.

anyay. Any : C. 20. Ersine. A sort of back slang. Ersine, by the way, calls this type of back slang hog Latin and pig Latin as well as back slang. Whereas English back s. merely reverses the letters, American transfers the initial consonant to the end and then adds -ay, or, when the first letter is a vowel, leaves the word as it was and adds -ay.

apartments to let, with. See about town.

apcray. Nonsense, 'hot air' : 1937, Courtney R. Cooper, Here's to Crime, 'This idea . . . is a lot of apcray'; by 1939, English too—as in James Curtis, What Immortal Hand, 1939; extant. The key is the synonym 'bull', which is short for bullshit, i.e., 'crap'. In American c. back slang, crap > apcr, to which (cf. ugmay) ay is conventionally added; hence apcr + ay = apcray.

Anzac poker. See kangaroo poker.

apple and banana. A piano : esp. Pacific Coast : late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Piano >, in illiteracy, pianner, which is then rhymed : cf. English rhyming s. joanna.

Apple-Butter Route, the. A division, in southern Ohio, of the N. & W. Railroad : tramps. : 1925, Glen H. Mullin (see Milk Poultry Route, the); extant.

apple-guard. 'A scarf and tie [? a scarf tied round the neck] . . . An apple-guard, collar bent, front prop,' 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, in glossary, p. 321. It protects the Adam's apple.

apple knocker. As applied to a hobo (in the technical sense : 'a migratory worker'), 'An "apple-knocker" picks apples and other fruit,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923 : tramps' : ? from ca. 1910 : 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1931, IA; by 1935, s. He knocks down the apples.—2. A farmer; hence as a term of contempt : since ca. 1920, 1930, resp. Ersine, 1933.

apple(-)pies. Eyes : chiefly Pacific Coast : late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944, err slightly in classifying it as of 'origin uncertain, but probably British' : it is an American variation, presumably deliberate, of the English rhyming s. mince pies.

apple squire. A harlot's bully; a pimp : 1536, Robert Copland, 'Applesquyers, entycers, and rauysshers'; this sense may, or may not, be c. But probably it is c., for Robert Greene, in A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 1591, gives the terms as proper to 'the sacking law'—blackmail by whorish enticement—and adds that 'the Bawd, if it be a woman', is 'a Pander', but that 'the Bawd, if a man', is 'an Apple Squire'. Prob. † by 1700. The origin is perhaps physiological.

apples and pears, rhyming s. for 'stairs', was orig. c. : witness 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857; in 1859 it was current among English criminals in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); by 1870, it was low s., by 1890 gen. s.—often abbreviated to apples.

April fool; usually in pl. 'April fools. Meaning tools, burglarious implements and the like,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1944 : C. 20. Rhyming.

apron. A woman : Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'Dictionary of the Underworld'; extant. Cf. s. skirt.—2. A barman; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. At work, he wears one.

aqua. Water : 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; or The Rogue's Lexicon; 1890, F & H; † by 1920. The L. word.

arch, n. See ark.

arch, adj. In combination, it means 'chief' or 'principal' (rogue).

arch(-)cove. 'Chief of the gang or mob' : 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1889, B & L—but it was never English, I believe; † by 1910. Lit., chief fellow.—2. Hence, in pl., 'Headmen; governors; presidents' : 1859, Matsell; † by 1910.

arch dell. The female head of a gang of criminals and/or vagabonds : 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who adds that the gang may consist of gypsies; † by 1889 (B & L). See arch, adj., and dell. Cf. the next.

arch doxy. The same as arch dell : 1725 (see arch rogue); 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes.

arch duke, 'a comical or eccentric fellow', is not c. but s.; it is, in fact, synonymous with the s. rum duke. Grose, 1788.

arch gonnof. 'The chief of a gang of thieves' : 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, the term being current in New York and prob. also in London; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1910. See arch and gonnof, and cf. arch cove.

arch rogue. 'The Dimber-Damber, Upright-man or Chief of a Gang; as Arch-Dell, or Arch-Doxy signifies the same Degree in Rank among the Female Canterers and Gypsies,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'The chief of a gang of thieves or gypsies'—repeated by George Andrewes, 1809, and in Sinks of London, 1848; 1890, F & H (who say nothing about gypsies); † by 1900. Cf. arch cove.

arctic explorer. A drug addict: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. Suggested by the various narcotic senses of snow and by sleigh ride.

ard. Hot: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; app. current in New York in C. 19, if Matsell's Vocabulum (1859) is to be trusted; prob. † in England by 1840; 1890, F & H (American). Ex Fr. ardent or It. ardente ('afire', 'burning'), possibly even ex S.E. ardent.—2. Never 'afoot', as asserted by B & L.

area-diver is a variant (ca. 1850–90) of sense 2 of area sneak. Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV, 291. Cf. diver, 2.

area sneak; area slum. 'The practice of slipping unperceived down the areas of private houses, and robbing the lower apartments of plate or other articles': 1812, J. H. Vaux, who gives both terms; 1823, Egan's Grose (both); † by 1920, the latter; whereas the former is still (1948) just alive. See sneak, n., and slum (trick).—2. Hence (a. sneak only), a thief specializing in this activity; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, III; 1859, H; by 1860, s., by 1880, coll.; by 1890, S.E.

argot, according to H, 2nd ed. 1860, is 'a term used among London thieves for their secret or cant language. French term for slang': this may have been so for ca. 1850–70.

aristoes or aristos. Such prisoners as had, in civil life, been 'clergymen, merchants, bankers, editors, surgeons, etc.': convicts: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England (the former). I.e., the aristocrats of prison society.

ark. 'A Boat or Wherry': 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Let us take an ark and winns. Let us take a sculler', i.e., a sculling boat; 1823, Jon Bee; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell: 'A ship; a boat; a vessel'); by 1890, † in Britain; April 5, 1930, Flynn's. Prob. ex Noah's ark.

ark man or arkman. A boatman: 1823, Jon Bee; † by 1889 (B & L). See ark.

ark pirate. 'Ark Pirates, fresh-water thieves who steal on navigable rivers': 1797, Potter, Dict.; 1809, Andrewes, plagiarizingly; 1823, Jon Bee (as a synonym of the next); 1848, Sinks of London, in the erroneous form, ack pirate; by 1890, †.

ark ruff. See the 1823 reference in:

ark ruffian; gen. pl. 'Ark-Ruffians, Villains, who, in Conjunction with Watermen, &c. rob and murder on the Water; by picking a Quarrel with the Passenger when they see a convenient Opportunity, and then plundering and stripping the unhappy Wretches, throw him or her over-board, &c. A species of Badgers. Which See', A New Canting Dict., 1725,—copied by Grose, 1785; 1809, George Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee (ark ruff: ? a misprint); 1848, Sinks of London, 'Ack ruffians . . .'; † by 1889 (B & L). See ark.

Arkansas lizard, 'a louse' (Howard N. Rose, 1934): not c. but low rural s.

arkitna; arkitnay. A word of warning; 'Shut up!' C. 20. John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939 (the former); Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House (the latter; 'Watch out!'). A 'perverted' back-slanting of nark it; ark it n > arkitn; with ay added, it > arkitnay. Cf. allsbay.

arm, n. Robbery by 'strong-arm' methods: since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933.

arm, v. To rob by 'strong-arm' methods: since ca. 1924. Ersine.

arm, on the. See on . . .

arm, under the. See under . . .

arm man. A 'strong arm man' (whence it is derived), a hold-up man, a highway robber: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; app. † by 1930.

arm-pits, put (one) up to his. To cheat a person of the due share of plunder: 1839, Brandon (see swim for it); 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); † by 1910. I.e., thoroughly.

armpits. 'To work under the arm-pits, is to practise only such kinds of depredation, as will amount, upon conviction, to what the law terms single, or petty larceny; the extent of punishment for which is transportation for seven years. By following this system, a thief avoids the halter, which certainly is applied above the arm-pits': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1831, W. T. Moncrieff, Van Diemen's Land; app. † by 1860.

armer. A burglar, a safe-robber, addicted to violence: Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens, 'Blackie was one of the last of the old-time armers. A strong-arm yegg': app. ca. 1905–35. Ex strong arm.

army. A tramp either with only one arm or with a crippled arm: tramps' and beggars': 1931, Stiff; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant.

around the back. 'The special or silent cells (more generally called "around the back"),' 'Red Collar Man', Chokey, 1937: convicts': C. 20.

around the horn. 'A trip around the circuit of city police stations for the purpose of being identified by victims,' C. L. Clarke & E. E. Ewbank, Lockstep and Corridor, 1927; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'They were taking Flatty round the Horn'; 1934, Rose, 'Stalling prisoners to prevent release on "Habeas Corpus" until questioned . . . getting around the horn'; by 1935, police s. Ex horn, the.

around the turn. Over the worst of one's withdrawal distress: drug addicts': since ca. 1910. BVB.

arp. Incorrect form of aap.

artful dodger. A lodger: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1870, low s.; by 1890, gen. s. Rhyming s.—2. Hence, in U.S.A. 'Artful dodgers . . . fellows who dare not sleep twice in the same place for fear of arrest': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; 1889, B & L; † by 1910.

Arthur (or Arthur K.) Duffy. 'If he wants to escape from prison he will blow the joint, lam, powder, take a run-out powder, mope, take it on the heel and toe, or take it on the Arthur Duffy, all meaning the same thing,' Convict, 1934; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'I took it on the Arthur K. Duffy'; for the approx. period, 1900–30. See take it on . . .

artichoke. See heartly choke.—2. 'A low and old prostitute': U.S.A.: 1889, B & L, 'French argot has . . . cœur d'artichaut to denote a man or woman of a highly amatory [? amorous] disposition'; 1890, F & H; in C. 20, also Australian—witness Baker, 1942; 1929–31, Kernôt.

article. 'Man. "Well, you're a pretty article"': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H ('derisive term'); in U.S.A. by 1859 (Matsell); † by 1910. For the semantics, cf. piece.

articles, 'breeches', is not c. but s.—2. 'A brace of pistols': 1823, Jon Bee; † by 1890. Euphemistic.—3. A suit of clothes: U.S.A.: 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1920. Ex articles of clothing.—4. Women sent or inveigled to South America to become prostitutes: white-slavers': C. 20. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928. I.e., articles of merchandise.

artillery. Firearms: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night Hawk, "My revolver," I answered.—"Why—what the devil are you toting a thing like that around this town for?" he demanded. 'I'd spotted his own artillery an hour ago'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, (in reference to a target) 'It's his job to carry the heavy artillery and stand off the natives'; May 17, 1930, Flynn's, Robert H. Rohde; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1934, Howard N. Rose; and a fusillade of examples since 1934; since ca. 1936, however, it has been s. Jocular.—2. Beans; any other food apt to ferment: tramps': since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin et al. Adopted ex the Army. Beans and peas cause a frequent wind-breaking.—3. A drug addict's equipment (hypodermic needle and accessories): drug traffic: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1942, BVB. Cf. gun, n., 8, which suggested it.

artillery man. 'When a man injects morphine by a hypodermic syringe, he is referred to as an "artillery man",' Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man, 1933: prob. from ca. 1925: extant. Suggested by the much older shot, 'injection of a drug'; but imm. ex artillery.

artist. 'An adroit rogue': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; 1881, The New York Slang Dict.; 1890, F & H; in C. 20, usually in combination; 1901, A. H. Lewis, The Boss, where it = a clever pickpocket; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Any skilful crook or confidence worker who inspires respect in . . . less gifted criminals'; by ca. 1935, also Australian—as in Baker, 1945 (quot'n at take, n., 4); extant in both countries. In his shady way, he is an artist at his job; cf. talent.—2. Hence, among professional gamblers and cardsharps, 'one who excels as a gamester': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1881, The New York Slang Dict.; 1890, F & H; extant.

as soft as a whore-lady's heart. 'Hustlers'—i.e., prostitutes—are eternally dragging home sick cats, mangy dogs, moulting canary birds and bargain goldfish simply "because they felt sorry for them". There is a saying in the underworld: "As soft as a whore-lady's heart",' Courtney Ryley Cooper, 1937.

ash(-)can. A mortar bomb: March 22, 1930, Flynn's, Robert Carse, ('Jail Break!'), a convict log., 'They're t'rowin' Stokes ashcans on this dump, an' we're lammin' it fer th' arsenal'; extant. Ex its appearance.

Ash Tip (or Ashtip), Mrs. See Mrs Ashtip.

asker, 'a professional beggar', is neither c. nor even s.: it is S.E.

askew, in B & L, 1889, is a misprint for 'a skew'; the error is reproduced by F & H, 1890.

ass. A pocket handkerchief: 1732, trial of Thomas Beck, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, pub. in 1735, 'In the New Exchange, in the Strand, we took 14 Asses in one Piece, which we sold for 15d. per Handkerchief'; † by 1830. Prob. a deliberate perversion of the first element (Taschen) in Ger.

Taschentuch, lit., a pocket cloth, i.e., a handkerchief.

ass-pedler. A prostitute: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Here, ass = arse.—2. A pimp, a procurer: C. 20. Ibid.

assay it. To 'commence, try it': 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H, 'Assay it! . . . Commence! try it!'; 1929–31, Kernôt; ob. Prob. ex mining; F & H think that it was 'introduced by counterfeit coiners'.

astaba (or -bar) or astarba (or -bar) or asterbar, this last being the most usual form. A bastard; mostly figurative: Australian; C. 20; by 1940, low s. Baker, 1945. (In England—e.g., James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936—it is low s.) Back s.: bastard > astardb > astardba (or -bar) > astarba(r).

aste. Money: 1612, The Passenger of Benvenuto, 'These companions who . . . carry the impression and marke of the pillerie galley, and of the halter, they call the purse a leafe, and a fleece; money, cuckoes, and aste, and crowns' (cited, after Nares, by F & H); app. † by 1725. Not ex asti, old Italian c. for 'money', as several lexicographers have stated: asti has never existed in Italian c. But the word may derive from Standard It. asta, 'sale, auction'. (With thanks to Dr Alberto Menarini, the leading authority upon the language of the Italian underworld.)

at blow-off. Complete; completely: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. See blow-off.

at the black. See black, at the.

at the broads. See broads, at the.

at the climb. See climb, at the.

at the creep. See creep, at the.

at the hoist. See hast, at the.

at the sit. See sit, at the.

at the spring. See spring, at the.

atch. To arrest: tramps': C. 20. Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Perhaps short for atchker, central s. for catch. (Partridge, 1937).

Athanasian wench. 'Athanasian wench, or quicunque vult, a forward girl, ready to oblige every man that shall ask her,' Grose, 1785. This term, † by 1840, was more prob. s. than c. It comes from the Athanasian Creed, which begins: 'Quicunque vult . . . Whosoever will be saved.'

attorney. 'A cunning fellow, or at least one who passes himself off as such . . .; a loafer who pretends to a full knowledge of the legal meshes in which the light-fingered gentry are occasionally involved': 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1930. With reference to an attorney at law; perhaps with a pun on 'turning difficulties', i.e., overcoming them.

atum. See autem, reference of 1718. Prob. a misprint.

auger. A prosy or boring person: 1890, F & H; 1903, Sylva Clapin, A New Dict. of Americanisms; ob. With a pun on bore (person and tool).

aunt. 'Aunt, a Bawd, as one of my Aunts, one of the same Order', B.E., 1698; also a prostitute. The earliest record is 1607, Middleton (O.E.D.); the term > † ca. 1850. Despite its appearance in B.E., it may, so far from being c., have been not even s. But in the C. 18–mid 19 sense, 'a title of eminence for the senior dells, who serve for instructresses, midwives, etc. for the dells' (Egan's Grose: after A New Canting Dict., 1725), it almost certainly was c.—In The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.) of Sept. 29, 1849, it is used of the keeper of a house of assignation: on the borderline between c. and low s.

—2. Hence, an old prostitute : U.S.A. : late C. 19–20. BVB, 1942.

Aunt Jane. ‘Tia Juana, Mex.,’ Chicago May, 1928; more clearly, Mexico : 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Probably in opposition to Uncle Sam.

auntie. ‘Angelina,’—punk or road kid acting as a tramp’s companion—‘grown older’, Stiff, 1931 : tramps’ and convicts’; 1935, Hargan, ‘Middle-aged homosexual’ (passive); extant, BVB, 1942, noting it as ‘an older man who takes the part of a catamite’. Feminine name for an effeminate.—2. ‘A brothel hostess’ (i.e., manager) : C. 20. BVB, 1942. Ex aunt, 1.

Australian slang. ‘the underworld language spoken on the Pacific coast of the U.S.A.’ was itself originally c., say from ca. 1880 to 1920, then s., then, by 1930 at latest, j. To be precise, the phrase is applied to that part of the Western c. which consists in rhyming slang. See, e.g., Ernest Booth in The American Mercury, May 1928—Chicago May—Godfrey Irwin (introductory essay)—Convict 12627 in Detective Fiction Weekly, April 23, 1938—and especially D. W. Maurer & Sidney J. Baker, ‘“Australian” Rhyming Argot in the American Underworld’, in American Speech, Oct. 1944.

It was introduced into America, esp. via California, by Australian confidence men and other Australian crooks. Mostly from Sydney, where the Cockney element is stronger than anywhere else in Australia; rhyming slang is a Cockney invention. Australian influence began early in the West : ‘San Quentin was established in 1851 . . . In those days, the gold days, the prisoners included many murderous characters and “Sydney birds”,’ Leo. L. Stanley, Men at Their Worst, 1940. But of this so-called ‘Australian slang’ only a few terms have been adopted direct from Australia : many have gone straight into American c. from Cockney (via Cockney crooks); many have been coined in America, either by Australians or, far more often, by native Americans. The slang is ‘Australian’, but only in that the impulse came from, the fashion was set by, Australians of Cockney parentage or of an adopted Cockney s.: immigrant Cockney criminals and interested American crookdom have done the rest : definitely an instance of the accumulative snowball and of ‘To him that hath . . .’

autem. ‘Autem in their Language’—that of beggars and vagabonds—‘is a Church,’ says Harman in the earliest record of the word (1566)—see the quotation at autem mort; 1608–9, Dekker, in ‘The Canters Dictionarie’ forming part of Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, has ‘Autem the Church’, which may connote ‘ecclesiastical body’ or ‘official religion’; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, ‘Autem . . . A church’; 1688, Randle Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1714, Alex. Smith; 1718, C. Hitching (atum); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, ‘A church, a meeting-house’—repeated by Andrewes, 1809; 1823, Jon Bee, ‘From the Latin Auditio’—? rather the accusative auditionem; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell, Vocabulum); by 1889 (B & L), † in Britain. Ex Yiddish a’ thoumme (or tume) ‘a (forbidden) church’, say B & L : but did the Yiddish word exist so early? Origin in Church anthem (at marriage) is an attractive possibility.

autem, adj. Married : 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New

Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes (atum); app. † by 1840. Ex the n. : cf. churched, married in church.

autem, or autum, v.t. To marry; 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum, ‘Autumed. Married’; † by 1910. Ex the n. : cf. preceding entry.

autem bawler. ‘Autem-Bawler, a Preacher, or Parson, of any Sect’, A New Canting Dict., 1725,—a definition repeated in the 5th ed., 1760, of Bampfylde-Moore Carew; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee (autem bawley : ? a misprint); 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell—see autem, n.; † by 1889 (B & L) in Britain. I.e., one who bawls in autem (church).

autem bawley. See the 1823 reference in the preceding entry.

autem cackle tub; or hyphenated. ‘Autem-Cackle-Tub, a Conventicle, a Meeting-House for Dissenters from the Establish’d Church,’ A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1889 (B & L). See autem, n.; cf. —2. Hence, a pulpit : 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900.

autem cackler or autem prickear A Dissenter of any denomination : 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (both synonyms); 1809, George Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee (a. caccler); 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin (‘Methodist parson’); 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), p. 124; by 1889 (B & L), both terms were † in Britain. See autem, n. and adj., and cf. the preceding entry.—2. Wrongly defined in Matsell’s Vocabulum, 1859, as a married woman. Repeated by James D. McCabe, New York, 1882, by The New York Slang Dict. of a year earlier, and by F & H.

autem cove. A married man : prob. English, but recorded first for U.S.A. in Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859; 1882, James D. McCabe, New York, where (p. 509) it is spelt autumn . . . ; 1889, B & L; † by 1910 in both countries. See autem, adj.

autem dipper. An Anabaptist : 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1889 (B & L). See autem, n.; dipper refers to the stress laid by Anabaptists on baptism.

autem diver. ‘Autem-Divers, Church-Pickpockets; but often used among the Canters, for Church-Wardens, Overseers of the Poor, Sidesmen and others, who have the management of the Poor’s Money’, A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee (‘pickpocket’ sense only); 1848, Sinks of London; both senses † by 1889 (B & L). Ex autem, n., and diver, 2.—3. The sense ‘Anabaptist’ (B & L) never existed.

autem gog(g)ler. ‘Autem-Gogglers, a Crew of Religious Canters, pretending to be persecuted Camisars, or French Prophets, distorting their Faces with ridiculous Grimaces, &c. and laying Claim to Inspiration, in order to gather People about them, with intent to rob, plunder, or pick Pockets,’ A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; by 1850, current in U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); 1859, Matsell; by 1889 (B & L), † in Britain. Ex autem, n., and goggler, ‘one who goggles’.—2. Hence, a conjuror, palmist or other fortune-teller : 1797, Potter; autem jet. A parson: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1823, Jon Bee; by 1859, current in U.S.A.—Matsell, Vocabulum; by 1889 (B & L), † in Britain. Lit., a church lawyer; see autem, n., and jet.

1809, Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890.

autem men constitute the 26th Order of Prime Coves, according to Sinks of London, 1848: but no definition is made.

autem mort. 'These Autem Mortes,' Harman tells us in 1566, 'be married wemen, as there be but a fewe. For Autem in their Language is a Church; so she is a wyfe married at the Church, and they be as chaste as a Cowe I have, that goeth to Bull every moone, with what Bull she careth not. These walke most times from their husbands compayne a moneth and more to gether, being associate with another as honest as her selfe. These wyll pylfar clothes of hedges: some of them go with children of ten or XII. yeares of age; yf tyme and place serve for their purpose, they wyll send them into some house, at the window, to steale and robbe, which they call in their language, Milling of the ken; and wil go with wallets on their shoulders, and slates at their backs.' Also in Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608, 'Their husbands commonly are Rufflers, Upright-men, or Wilde Rogues, and their companions of the same breede'; 1610, Rowlands; 1641, R. Brome, A Joviall Crew, in 'The Persons of the Play', 'Autum-Mort, an old Beggar-Woman'; 1665, R. Head; 1688, R. Holme, 'Autem Mortes, Wives that follow Rogues and Thieves'; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict. designates them the 24th Order of Canters; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd, 'A Wife of the Left Hand'; 1785, Grose; † by 1870—prob. by 1830.—2. Hence, a properly married woman; 1698, B.E.; 1785, Grose; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; † by 1850.—3. The same as autem mott, 2: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1899 (B & L), † in Britain.

autem mott. A female beggar; a whore: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee, 'A beggar pretending to religious fervour; and a whore with the same aspect'; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890.—2. A female 'autem goggler', q.v.: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890.

autem prickear. See autem cackler.

autem quaver; gen. pl. 'Autem-Quavers, the Sectaries call'd Quakers, who first begun their Schism by quaking, shaking, and other ridiculous Gestures,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose (without derogatory comment); 1809, George Andrewes; by 1889 (B & L), † in Britain. See autem, n.; cf.: autem quaver tub, or hyphenated. 'Autem-Quaver-Tub, a Meeting-House, particularly for Quakers,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes (in form autem quaver's tub); 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London (as in Andrewes); † by 1889 (B & L). Cf. preceding entry.

autem sneak, the. 'Robbing in churches and chapels'; 1823, Jon Bee; app. † by 1890. I.e., autem, n., and sneak (petty theft).

autemed or autumed. See autem, v.

Autoleyne (see carpet) is prob. a nonce-word; it means 'a professional criminal', esp. one that specializes in theft. Is there some pun on Autolycus autopsy, perform an. To steal from a man that has fallen in the street: South American: since ca. 1910. Harry Franck, Working North from Patagonia, 1921.

(Shakespeare, The Winter's Tale)? Or is it a mere misprint therefor?

autum. A variant of autem, whether independent or in combination.

autumn. Another variant of autem.

autumn, at. By hanging (execution): 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1910. For semantics, see fall of the leaf.

avast. See awast.

avering, go an; averis. Respectively to practise the trick, and the trick itself, involved in the dodge 'of a beggar boy who strips himself and goes naked into a town, with a false story of his being cold and robbed of his clothes, to move compassion and get other clothes'; beggars': 1889 (but perhaps existing since late C. 17), B & L; ob. by 1930, † by 1940. Partridge, 1937, cites Kennett, 1695, for go a-avering. Perhaps ex Romany aver, 'to come or go'; is is a Romany suffix that forms a noun (B & L); perhaps, however, ex S.E. aver, 'to affirm'.

avile is Randle Holme's error for a vile (a city or town). Cf. afflicke, q.v. Cf.:

aville is another error for a ville (a town or city): 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue.

avoirdu pois lay. 'Stealing brass weights off the counters of shops': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; in Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811, it is printed avoir du pois lay; † by 1889 (B & L). See lay, n., 2.

awake, 'alert', is not c., but the term was orig. (ca. 1800–20) c. in the specific sense given by J. H. Vaux in 1812: 'Awake, an expression used on many occasions; as a thief will say to his accomplice, on perceiving the person they are about to rob is aware of their intention, and upon his guard, stow it, the cove's awake. To be awake, to any scheme, deception, or design, means, generally, to see through or comprehend it.'—2. I'm awake = I know all: ca. 1820–80, then s., then coll. Hotten, 1874.

awast; awaste; avast; also, in C. 16, a waste. Away: mid-C. 16–mid-19. See bing a waste, for a waste (etc.) occurs only with bing. Harman has a waste; B.E., awast; Grose, avast.

away. In prison: late C. 19–20 (Ware, 1909): not c., but London low s. of euphemistic origin.

away from the habit, be. To abstain from drugs; to be taking a drug-cure: addicts': C. 20. BVB. See habit.

Awdeley's. 'Orders of Knaves, otherwise called a quarterne of Knaves' concerns only servants (knaves in its archaic sense); but they are dishonest or otherwise objectionable. In the ensuing list, some of the terms are almost certainly cant—Nos. 1–4, 8, 11, 14, 15, 20; others may well be mere designations coined by Awdeley—Nos. 6, 12, 13, 18, 21–25; the remaining terms are prob. S.E. given a special application by Awdeley. These characters do not belong to the underworld at all; but many of this majority are potential criminals.

'1. Troll and Troll by. Troll and Trol by, is he that setteth naught by no man, nor no man by him. This is he that would beare rule in a place, and hath none authority nor thanke, & at last is thrust out of the doore like a knave.

'2. Troll with. Troll with is he that no man shall know the servaunt from ye Maister. This knave with his cap on his head lyke Capon hardy [i.e., an insolent rascal], wyll syt downe by his Maister, or els go cheeke by cheeke with him in the streete.

'3. Troll hazard of Trace. Troll hazard of trace is he that goeth behynde his Maister as far as he may see hym. Such knaves commonly use to buy Spice-cakes, Apples, or other trifles, and doo eate them as they go in the streetes lyke vacabond Boyes.

'4. Troll hazard of Tritrace. Troll hazard of Tritrace, is he that goeth gaping after his Master, looking to and fro tyl he have lost him. This knave goeth gasyng about lyke a foole at every toy, and then seeketh in every house lyke a Maisterles dog, and when his Maister nedeth him, he is to seeke.

'5. Chafe Litter. Chafe Litter is he that wyll plucke up the Fether bed or Matrice, and pysse in the bedstraw, and wyl never ryse uncalled. This knave berayeth many tymes in the corners of his Maisters chamber, or other places inconvenient, and maketh cleane hys shoes with the coverlet or curtaines.

'6. Obloquium. Obloquium is hee that wyll take a tale out of his Maisters mouth and tell it him selfe. He of right may be called a malapart knave.

'7. Rince Pytcher. Rince Pytcher is he that will drinke out his thrift at the ale or wine, and be oft times dronke. This is a locoryce knave that will swill his Maisters drink, and brybe [i.e., purloin] his meate that is kept for him.

'8. Jeffrey Gods Fo. Jeffery Gods Fo is he, that will sweare and maintaine others. This is such a lying knave that none wil beleve him, for the more he sweareth, ye les he is to be beleved.

'9. Nichol Hartles. Nichol Hartles is he, that when he should do ought for his Maister hys hart faileth him. This is a Trewand [i.e., objectionable] knave that faineth himselfe sicke when he should woorke.

'10. Simon soone agon. Simon soone agon is he, that when his Mayster hath any thing to do, he wil hide him out of the way. This is a loytring knave that wil hide him in a corner and sleepe or else run away.

'11. Grene Winchard. Greene Winchard is he, that when his hose is broken and hange out at his shoes, he will put them into his shooes againe with a stick, but he wyll not amend them. This is a slouthfull knave, that had leaver go lyke a beggar than cleanly.

'12. Proctour. Proctour is he, that will tary long, and bring a lye, when his Maister sendeth him on his errand. This is a stibber gigger [i.e., a secretive, furtive, or sly] Knave that doth fayne tales.

'13. Commitour of Tidings. Commitour of Tidings is he, that is ready to bring his Maister Novels [i.e., news] and tidings, whether they be true or false. This is a tale bearer knave, that wyll report words spoken in his Maisters presence.

'14. Gyle Hather. Gyle Hather is he, that wyll stand by his Maister when he is at dinner, and byd him beware that he eate no raw meate, because he would eate it himselfe. This is a pickthanke knave, that would make his Maister beleve that the Cowe is woode [i.e., rabid].

'15. Bawde Phisicke. Bawde Phisicke is he that is a Cocke, when his Maysters meate is wyll dressed, and he challenging him therefore, he wyl say he wyll eate the rawest morsel thereof him selfe. This is a sausy knave, that wyl contrary his Mayster alway.

'16. Mounch present. Mounch present is he that is a great gentleman, for when his Maister sendeth him with a present, he wil tak a tast thereof by the waye. This is a bold knave, that sometyme will eate the best and leave the worst for his Mayster.

'17. Cole Prophet. Cole Prophet is he, that when his Maister sendeth him on his errand, he wyl tel his answer thereof to his Maister or he depart from hym. This tittivel [i.e., mischievous] knave commonly maketh the worst of the best betwene hys Maister and his friende.

'18. Cory favell. Cory favell is he, that wyl lye in his bed, and cory [i.e., curry] the bed border in which he lyeth in steede of his horse. This slouthfull knave wyll buskill [i.e., be agitated] and scratch when he is called in the morning, for any haste.

'19. Dying thrift. Dying thrift is he, that will make his Maisters horse eate pies and rybs of beefe, and drinke ale and wyne. Such false knaves oft tymes, wil sell their Maisters meate to their owne profit.

'20. Esen Droppers. Esen Droppers bene they, that stand under mens wales or windoes, or, in any other place, to heare the secretes of a mans house. These misdeming knaves wyl stand in corners to heare if they be evill spoken of, or waite a shrewd turne.

'21. Choplogyke. Choplogyke, is he that when his mayster rebuketh him of hys fault he wyll geve hym .XX. wordes for one, els byd the devils Pater noster in silence. This proude prating knave wyll maintaine his naughtines when he is rebuked for them.

'22. Unthrift. Unthrift, is he that wil not put his wearing clothes to washing, nor black his own shoes, nor amend his own wearing clothes. This reckles knave wyl alway be lousy; and say that hee hath no more shift of clothes, and slander his Maister.

'23. Ungracious. Ungracious is he that by his own will, will heare no manner of service, without he be compelled thereunto by his rulers. This knave wil sit at the alehouse drinking or playing at dice, or at other games at service tyme.

'24. Nunquam. Nunquam, is he that when his Maister sendeth him on his errand he wil not come againe of an hour or two where he might have done it in halfe an houre or lesse. This knave will go about his owne errand or pastime and saith he cannot speede at the first.

'25. Ingratus. Ingratus, is he that when one doth all that he can for him, he will scant give him a good report for his labour. This knave is so ingrate or unkind, that he considreth not his friend from his fo, and wil requit evil for good & being put most in trust, wil sonest deceive his maister.'

Cf. the lists at Dekker's and Eighteenth Century. awful place (or A—P—), the. Dartmoor Prison: late C. 19–20: 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 'I was in the Awful Place with him, and I know his reputation'; Partridge, 1937; by 1945, slightly ob. So it is, for a convicted man.

*ax. A knife; a razor; 1929, Givens (see quot'n at chev); 1934, Rose (knife); extant. Pejorative. Hence axman.

*axle grease. Butter: tramps': 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, low s.

axle-swinging. Travelling on train axles: mostly tramps': 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; extant.

axman. A barber: convicts': 1929, Givens;

1929-31, Kernôt; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest, John Caldwell; 1934, Howard N. Rose.

aysay. To say: C. 20. Ersine. American back slang: say > ays > aysay.

B

b or B. Abbreviation of blued.

B.A. A book agent using shady methods to obtain orders: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer. Perhaps rather commercial s. than c.

B. & A. racket. The racket in beer and spirituous liquor: bootleggers': Oct. 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; by 1935, ob; virtually † by 1940. I.e., beer and alky racket.

B. & R.T's. 'Lightweight underwear of the B.V.D. variety,' Ersine, 1933; extant.

B.D. A policeman: ca. 1870-1900. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 320). Perhaps an abbreviation of bloody detective: cf. D.

B.D.V. A picked up cigarette-end: tramps': since ca. 1920. Partridge, 1938. Punning the name of a make of cigarette, B.D.V. = 'bend down Virginia.' Also called a Stooper.

B.R. The sense 'bank roll' (Leverage, 1925) is rather commercial s. than c.—2. Big 'rock', i.e. a large diamond: 1925, Leverage; extant. See rock.

ba (or baa) cheat. A sheep: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd, in the shorter form; app. † by 1820. Lit., a 'baa thing' (see cheat).

babbeljas. A hangover: (after a debauch): South Africa. C. 20. Letter of May 23, 1946; by 1940, low s. Afrikaans word; lit. 'bubble-arse'?

babbling brook. A professional criminal: May 1928, The Amercian Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; extant. Rhyming s. on crook. The term comes from Australia, where, however, only criminals equate b.b. with 'crook'; to most Australians it means a 'cook'.

babes. 'The lowest order of knock-outs . . . , who are prevailed upon not to give opposing biddings at auctions, in consideration of their receiving a small sum (from one shilling to half a crown), and a certain quantity of beer': 1860, H, 2nd ed. Current ca. 1850-1910, this term lies on the borderland of c. and low s. So named because of their modest role and because of their dependence on others.

babes in the wood. 'Rogues in the stocks, or pillory': 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1870. With reference to the nursery tale and to the wood of which stocks and pillories were made.

baby. A 'legit' or 'puppy'—i.e., a stolen car disguised for sale: automobile thieves': 1929, The Saturday Evening Post; extant.—2. A male homosexual; since ca. 1925. BVB, 1942. Cf. the catamite kid.—3. 'A constipated bowel movement following a period of indulgence in drugs,' BVB: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Because as painful (!) as childbirth; short for yen shee baby.

baby, play. See play baby.

baby bandhouse. Juvenile detention house: 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; extant. See bandhouse.

baby card, pitch the. 'This ingenious fellow has often won 200 or 300 sovereigns in the course of a night, by gaffing; but the landlord and other men, who are privy to the robbery, "pitch the baby card" (encourage the loser by sham betting), always come in for the "regulars" (their share of the plunder)': gamesters': ca. 1820-80. George Smeeton, Doings in London, 1828.

baby pap. A cap: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); by 1870, low rhyming s.; by 1880, gen. rhyming s.; by 1900, †.

baccare! or backare!, 'go back!', is classified by F & H as c.: but it is s. of mid-C. 16-mid-C. 17.

back, 'to die', is suspect. 'Her duds are bob—she's a kinchin crack, And I hopes as how she'll never back', W. H. Smith, 'The Chaunt' in The Individual, Nov. 15, 1836. The term looks to me like an unjustifiable derivation from the s. be backed, to be (dead and) buried.—2. To burgle (a place) from the back; 1937, James Curtis (see front, v., 2); extant.

back, on the. See about town.

backcheats. Recorded by Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen, 1887, and defined by him as 'Kleidungsstücke' (clothes): but what is his authority for the term, which, by the way, he classifies as 'Old Cant'? And what is B & L's authority for the definition 'a cloak' and the classification 'old cant'?

back-door cant. 'Matchsellers, as well as all other cadgers, often get what they call "a back-door cant", that is anything they can carry off [from the place] where they beg or offer their matches for sale': 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; † by 1900. Cf. cant, n.

back-door parole. See back-gate discharge, refs. of 1936, 1938.

back-door working. 'The bigger stuff, burglary and housebreaking, is "back-door working";' The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. South Africa: C. 20. Cf. back jump.

back-double; usually in pl. A back street: C. 20. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932. Such streets offer much opportunity to the fugitive.

back-drag. See drag, n., 7, ref. of 1859.

back-gate discharge; back-gate parole. A convict's death in prison: April 13, 1929, The Saturday Evening Post, Charles G. Givens (the latter term); Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest, John Caldwell (the latter); June 21, 1930, Flynn's (the latter); 1934, Howard N. Rose (do.); 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, the variant back-door parole; 1938, Castle, 'Well, a back-door parole, lad, is merely kicking the bucket'; extant. The coffin goes out by a back door or gate.

back jump. A back window: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; 'A prison term', says H, 1874—but its milieu was wider than that of prisons; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; slightly ob. See jump, n. and v.—2. Hence, an escape by a back window: 1889 (see long jump); extant.

back-jump, v. 'Back-jumpin' the carsey', glossed as 'breaking into the house by a back-window', F. W. Carew, No. 747, 1893; extant. Ex sense 1 of the n. back scratched, have one's. To be flogged; esp. convicts': since ca. 1870. Partridge, 1938. Orig. with the cat-o'-nine-tails.

back scuttle. 'To enter by the back way': mostly burglars': 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; ob.

back-slang, the; also back-slanging (it). The trick described in the next entry: 1812, Vaux, the longer form; 1889, B & L; both forms, † by 1930. Cf. back slum.

back-slang it. 'To enter or come out of a house by the back door; or to go a circuitous or private way through the streets, in order to avoid any particular place in the direct road, is termed back-slanging it': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H, 'Also to go away quickly'; app. † by 1930.

back slum. 'A back room; also the back entrance to any house or premises; thus, we'll give it 'em on the back slum, means, we'll get in at the back-door': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H, who classify it as Australian,—but this is doubtful; † by 1900.

back stall. 'An accomplice who "covers" the actual thief', esp. in 'garrote-robberies, in which the back-stall has two functions, first to screen his companion, and then, if necessary, to "make off" with the booty' (1890, F & H): 1863, The Cornhill Magazine, Jan., p. 80; 1893, No. 747; extant. See stall, n.

back(-)stop. 'A pal, a fellow who stands by you and backs you up,' John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1938: since the 1920's. Ex rounders and cricket.

back up; bring up. 'To distend the vein into which the injection is to be made,' BVB: drug addicts'; since ca. 1930.

backare! See baccare!

backed, dead, is s., not c.

backer. In a 'greengoods' swindling gang, it is 'the Backer or Capitalist, who supplies the bank roll—a roll of 10,000 genuine dollar bills, which are shown to the [prospective] victim. He receives fifty per cent., out of which he pays the police, and so guarantees the protection of the gang,' W. T. Stead, Satan's Invisible World Displayed, 1898, p. 108; ob. Ex the S.E. sense 'supporter'.

backing or turning-on. 'A very usual kind of cheating, by which a man is victimised in such a manner as to render himself liable to punishment': 1889, B & L; app. † by 1920.

backing and filling. "'Filling" the dupe with confidence,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941: confidence men's: since ca. 1920.

backs. Counterfeit money; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Short for greenbacks.

bacon, 'in the Canting Sense', remarks the editor of A New Canting Dict., 1725, 'is the Prize, of whatever kind, which Robbers make in their Enterprizes. He has sav'd his Bacon; i.e., he has himself escap'd the Hue-and-Cry, and carry'd off his Prize to boot: Whence it is commonly us'd for any narrow Escape,' a sense that was s. as early as 1698, when it was recorded by B.E.: the c. sense, then, would seem to have been current ca. 1690–1800. By rural metaphor; and prob. used first by vagabonds.

bacon, sell one's. See sell . . .

bacon and eggs. Legs: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; prob. of Australian origin.

bad, look. See look bad.

bad actor. 'The Bad Actor is the man'—a tramp or a hobo or a bum—'who has become a nuisance to his people and they pay him money provided he does not show himself in the home town,' Nils Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; by 1930, coll. Here bad has the force of an adv.

bad blood. Syphilis: esp. convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. Euphemistic.

bad dough. Counterfeit money: Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'); 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Nov. 19, 1927, The Writer's Monthly; by 1930, s. Cf. bum dough.

bad fall is merely an intensive, a rare synonym, of fall, n.: 1918, Joseph Matthew Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang', in the Dec. issue of The American Law Review; extant.

bad halfpenny. 'When a man has been upon any errand, or attempting any object which has proved unsuccessful or impracticable, he will say on his return, It's a bad halfpenny; meaning he has returned as he went': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1889, B & L; app. † by 1910.

bad man; good man. 'At Norfolk Island [in the 1830's and '40's] . . . a "good man" was a notorious criminal; a "bad" one was a man who sought to act honestly and purely,' Price Warung, Tales of the Early Days, 1894, p. 24, note. Cf. right, also good screw.—2. 'Badman, n.—Police-man or other peace officer,' E. H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Cf. sense 1.

bad news. Trouble, danger: Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke, 'Sucker, stay out of our district! It's bad news if you don't'; extant.—2. 'Any statement of account, bill,' Ersine, 1933; by 1940, s.

bad pill. A worthless person: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; ob. Prob. ex pill, 2.

bad road. 'A railroad, or a railroad division, whereon train-men are especially hard on tramps and other trespassers,' Irwin, 1931: tramps': C. 20. But hardly to be classified as c. Cf. hostile.

bad slang, 'faked up monstrosities; spurious curiosities' (F & H), is not c. but circus and showmen's s.

bad smash. Counterfeit coin: an occ. C. 20 variant of smash, n., 1. In, e.g., David Hume (1932–45) and Partridge, 1937.

badge is explained in this, the earliest reference: 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Badge is also us'd in a Canting Sense, for the Burning in the Hand or Cheek (as it used to be) as, He has got his Badge, and pik'd away: He has been burn'd in the Hand, etc., and is just set at Liberty'; 1785, Grose; † by 1880. A badge, not of shame but of pride.—2. Hence, a malefactor burnt in the hand: 1797, Potter; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890 (F & H).—3. A variant of badger, 6 (black-mailer): U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; ob.

badge cove. 'Badge-Coves, Parish-Pensioners, who, notwithstanding their Allowances, beg about the streets,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1887, Baumann; by 1890 (F & H), †.

badger, n. 'Badgers, a Crew of desperate Varlets, who rob and kill near any River, and then throw the dead Bodies therein. The Eighteenth Order of Villains,' A New Canting Dict., 1725—virtually repeated by Grose, 1785; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1889 (B & L).—2. 'A Match-maker, or Cockbawd', i.e. pimp or male brothel-keeper: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1889 (B & L).—3. (In U.S.A.). 'A panel thief; a fellow who robs a man's pocket after he has been enticed into bed with a woman': 1859, Matsell; 1872, E. Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York; 1874, Anon., Thirty Years Battle with Crime (of a ponce-thief); 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1928, May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May. Her Story; by 1930, s. 'The badger is a nocturnal animal, which burrows and eats flesh . . . what could be more fitting for a name for this class of crook? . . . Women, mostly with male assistants, are the badgers; and men are the victims,' Chicago May, 1928.—4. A common prostitute; prostitutes': 1890, F & H, ob.—5. Short for 'the badger game': 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, "'The molls won't steal now . . . They are ignorant. All they know how to do is the badger"' ; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; extant.—6. A blackmailer: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1916, Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in The Underworld, where 'badger man and badger woman' are used for a couple that uses an amorous male's indiscretion as grounds for blackmail; ob. Ex sense 3.

badger, v. To blackmail: Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'Dict. of the Underworld'; extant. Cf. sense 6 of the n.

badger-crib; occ., badger's crib. A synonym of panel-crib: 1859, Matsell, the former as panel-crib, the latter as shakedown; 1903, Clapin (at panel-game); † by 1930. See badger, 3, and crib, n., 2, 3. Also badger house; 1881, The Man Traps of New York.

badger game. That kind of robbery which is effected at a 'panel-crib' (q.v.): 1891, J. Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1928, May C. Sharpe, Chicago May; 1928, John O'Connor; 1931, Irwin; 1933, Eagle; from ca. 1930, English also, as in James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 1937; extant. Prob. suggested by badger-crib.

badger house. See badger-crib, last paragraph.

badger worker. A woman that decoys men in order that her male confederate may blackmail them; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'; extant. Cf. badger, n., 3.

badgering is the vbl n. synonym of badger game: late C. 19–20. In, e.g., Chicago May, 1928. Cf. creeping and panelling.

baffle the beak. See beak, baffle the.

bag, n. A detective: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Ex s. bag, 'to arrest'.—2. A prostitute: late C. 19–20. BVB. Perhaps short for old bag.

bag, v. To imprison: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, 'Bagged. Imprisoned'; 1881, The Man Traps of New York; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; Nov. 20, 1901, Sessions Papers; in C. 20, also Australian, mostly bagged, as in Baker, 1942. Perhaps ex shot birds being put into a game-bag.

bag, hold the. See hold the bag.

bag of fruit. A suit (of clothes): mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. A deliberate American variation of the English rhyming synonym, whistle and flute.

bag of nails. Confusion: 1882, James D. D.O.U.

McCabe, New York by Sunlight and Gaslight, p. 509, 'Bag of nails, everything in confusion'; 1889, Farmer, Americanisms; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1944, M & B. Perhaps, as F & H suggest, from Bacchanals.

bag the swag. To pocket or to hide one's share of the stolen booty: ca. 1819, The Young Prig; 1848, Sinks of London; slightly ob. See swag.

bag thief: bagger. A thief that specializes in stealing rings by seizing the victim's hand: since ca. 1890: 1909, J. Redding Ware, Passing English; by 1930, ob.; by 1945, virtually †. Ex Fr. bague, a finger ring.

bagege man. See baggage man.

baggage. See heavy baggage.—2. Women exported to be prostitutes in Argentina: white slavers': C. 20. A. Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, "'Baggage" means women, in the phrase of the men of the Centre': 1934, Hendrik de Leeuw, Cities of Sin.

baggage man. A C. 18 term, thus in C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718, 'The Baggage Man, alias that is he that carries off the booty'. Cf. swagsman.

baggage smasher. A man that hangs about a railway station in order to steal luggage: 1861, The New York Tribune, Nov. 23 (cited by F & H); 1889, B & L; ob. Prob. ex the American s. sense of the term: a railway porter.

bagged. See bag, v.

bags, 'trousers', not c. (as implied at sin-hiders) but s.

bags off, have the. See have the . . .

bake-head, bakehead. The stoker on a train engine (Americanicé, locomotive fireman): tramps': C. 20: 1931, Irwin, 'The term is also applied to stokers of any boiler or engine'; extant. Perhaps adopted ex railroad men, who assert that these stokers are none too bright merely because of the intense heat they face while firing their engines. (I.)—2. Hence, since ca. 1920, a fool, an idiot: tramps': 1931, Irwin; by 1940, s.

bake out. The disinfection of clothes in an oven: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1920. Michael Harrison, Weep for Lycidas, 1934. I.e., baking out of lice.

bake up. To put one's clothes into an incinerator, or otherwise apply heat to them, in order to rid them of lice: tramps': from ca. 1918. John Worby, The Other Half, 1937. The n. is bake-up: Partridge, 1938.

baked dinner. Bread: convicts': ca. 1860–1930. Partridge, 1937. Bread is baked. Ex joke played on newcomers.

bakes. A schoolboy: 1890, F & H; † by 1920. Ex 'half-baked'? But I suspect its authenticity.

balance, v.; whence balancer, balancing. To swindle, esp. to welsh (someone): Australian race-courses': since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. Prob. ex bookmakers' balancing their betting-books to be on the 'right' side.

balance-top. An American card-sharping term of late C. 19–20. See the quotation at end-squeeze.

balanser, 'a sovereign (20 shillings)': not c. but Romany.

bald-headed lump. A food package that, handed to a tramp, 'contains nothing but coarse, hearty food, without pie, cakes, or sweets': tramps': from ca. 1910: 1931, Irwin; extant. A lump (n., 2) without 'trimmings'—without even the decency of hair or toppings. baldober. 'A director, or leader', B & L, 1889,— but on what authority? It was current among speakers of Yiddish, for the word was once used among German thieves for 'the director or planner of a robbery' (B & L): but it was never, I think, a c. term among English thieves. Nor was the Yiddish baldower, 'an informer to the police' (B & L), 1889.

baldy. An old man: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary): 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Irwin; by 1935, low s. Ex the tendency of old men to have bald heads.

bale of straw. A blonde woman: rather circus s. than c.: 1931, Irwin. Circus and carnival workers prefer large women.

balk, n. and v. A refusal, to refuse, 'to raise one's arms during a stick-up; to resist a holdup man'. "The mark balked, so Joe plugged him"; Ersine, 1933: since ca. 1922. The man that 'balks' is a balker (Ersine). Cf. a horse's baulking.

ball, n. The prison allowance of six ounces of meat per diem: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell); 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1927, Kane (U.S.A.). Ex its shape before being cooked.—2. A free drink: ca. 1830–1900. Price Warung, Tales of the Early Days, 1894, p. 278, note, "Balls"—Convict term for "free drinks".—3. A dollar: American tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, where it is classified as criminals' c.; 1927, Kane (a silver dollar); 1931, IA; extant. Prob. at first a dollar bill or note, easily crumpled into a ball; or else ex the fact that a metal dollar is, after all, circular, even though it isn't a sphere.

ball, v. To reprimand; to get (a person) into trouble with the warders: 1891, Charles Bent, Criminal Life, a thief speaking, 'If he sees me I am sure to be balled for my super (supervision)'; app. † by 1930. I.e., to 'bawl out'.

ball and bat. A hat: mostly Pacific Coast: since ca. 1918. M & B, 1944. Prob. of American origin (baseball); the English rhyming s. term is tit-for-tat (usually shortened to titfer).

ball and chain. One's girl: South Africa: C. 20; by 1940, (low) s. Letter from J. B. Fisher, May 22, 1946. Humorous: ex convicts' foot-shackles.

ball-lump. Sandwiches, cakes, etc., wrapped in paper and handed to a tramp: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; ob. Ball: ex the shape of the packet. See lump.

ball of fire. A glass of brandy: 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1860, s. Ex its effect upon an unaccustomed throat.

ballad-basket, 'a street singer' (B & L), was never c.

ballock. To reprint, scold: since ca. 1910: by 1935, low s. Partridge, 1938. There is a concealed pun on bawl—as well as the rude concealed pun.

ballokey. Naked: since ca. 1920. Partridge, 1938. Cf. display the person.

balloon. 'A roll of bedding carried on the back; a bindle,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': 1931, Irwin; 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex its cumbrous shape.

Balloon?; Balloon! All right?; All right! 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too (the former).

balloon, carry the. See carry the balloon.

balloon, up in a. 'Gone hopelessly into thin air! A fiasco': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; † by 1920. Cf. the English when does the balloon go up? and and then the balloon went up! (= And then things began to happen; or, and then disaster came; or, and that was the end of it!); cf. also balloon juice.

balloon ascension. A clueless trail in a criminal case: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Obviously because a balloon leaves no trace.

balloon juice. Cheap talk, airy nothing, 'hot air': 1902, W. A. Irwin, The Love Sonnets of a Hoodlum; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. I.e., gas.

ballum rancum. 'A hop or dance, where the women are all prostitutes, a dance at a brothel,' Grose, 1785, but the term had been in use from a century earlier; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'N.B. The company dance in their birthday suits'; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal., where it is misprinted balum r.; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell); 1882, James D. McCabe, New York, 'Ballum rancum, a ball where all the damsels are thieves and prostitutes'; by 1889 (B & L), † in Britain. In Britain, only very doubtfully c.—prob. low s. But in U.S.A. it was perhaps c. throughout its currency. On ball, 'a dance', and balls, 'testicles'.

bally. Short for ballyhoo: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (implied in bally stand); by 1931 (Godfrey Irwin), to be classified as circus and carnival s. rather than as c.

bally stand. 'Spiel, the talk made on the bally stand' (the stand from which the 'spieler' addresses prospective customers at a circus side-show), P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914 (cf. quot'n at ballyhoo); by ca. 1920, circus and carnival s. See bally.

ballyhoo. 'Ballyhoo man at a side-show, spieler', P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914; by 1920, if not earlier, it was s. Cf. 'These [charitable] organizations [for tramps, hoboes, bums] are generally financed by solicitations. Men and women are employed to canvass places of business; to "drum" on the streets and to make house-to-house calls. This practice of "drumming" on the streets is known as "ballyhooing",' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923.

balky. A step ladder: March 22, 1930, Flynn's, Robert Carse ('Jail Break!'), "Balkies", the narrow and difficult little steel ladders that led up the [prison] walls'; extant. It causes one to balk or hesitate before climbing it.

balmy. See batmies and barmy, act the. (Barmy is the more usual spelling).

baloney. See boloney.

balsam; often mis-spelt balsom. Money: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict. exemplifies thus, 'The Cove has secur'd the Balsom; i.e. He has seized the Money. A Term very proper to the Purpose, since Money is a Sovereign Catholicon to heal wounded Minds and retrieve desperate Circumstances; and not seldom saves a Rogue from the Gallows'; 1785, Grose, who appears to regard it as s., which it had prob. > by 1760 or so; but it seems to have been c. in New York in C. 19 (B & L, 1889).

Balt. Baltimore: c. of ca. 1880–1910, then s.: 1901, Flynt (see Bean Town).

Balum rancum. See ballum rancum.

bamboo. An opium pipe: C. 20. Kernôt, 1929–31, 'Sucking a Bamboo: Smoking opium'; 1942, BVB. Also suck the bamboo. See sucking bamboo.—2. Hence also bamboo puffer, an opium addict: since ca. 1930. BVB.

bananas, used attributively. Sexually perverted: Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942. The song, Yes, We Have No Bananas, popular ca. 1923–24, caused a number of scabrous witticisms.

banker. See banker (Dekker, 1608).

banco-steerer. See bunco-steerer.

band-box. A county jail: 1934, Howard N. Rose; slightly ob. Prob. a deliberate variation of:

band house. A prison: yegg's: 1916, The Literary Digest (Aug., 'Do You Speak "Yegg"'); 1925 (June), The Writer's Monthly, Randolph Jordon, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave'; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor (House of Correction); 1927, Kane; 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack Roller; 1931, Irwin; 1934, M. H. Wesen; 1937, E. G. Sutherland, 'House of correction or workhouse'; extant. This is where you face the music; also, the watch-tower of a big penitentiary bears, in externals, a slight resemblance to a large bandstand.

band in the box. Syphilis: Pacific Coast: C. 20: M & B, 1944; but I suspect the term. Rhyming pox. (Compare bang and biff.)

band-log. A band-box, i.e. a cardboard box orig. made for the 'bands' or ruffs of C. 17 (O.E.D.): 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; app. † by 1790.

banded. See bands . . .

bandeens; genl. pl. 'Bandeens are Women that sell Laces, Garters, and Ribbons,' John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753. Perhaps ex the band-boxes they carry: ? on colleen.

bandog, 'a Bailiff, or his Follower' (B.E., 1698), is not classified as c. by B.E.; but by Grose, 2nd ed., 1788, it is. More prob. s. than c. Ex the S.E. sense, 'mastiff', 'bloodhound'.

bands, wear the. 'Banded. Hungry.—Bands. To wear the bands, is to be hungry, or short of food for any length of time; a phrase chiefly used on board the hulks, or in jails': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose: 1889, B & L; F & H, 1890, imply that it is †. Ex the constricting effect of hunger.

bandy. A sixpence: 1823, Egan's Grose; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (erroneously bardy); 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H. Cf. bender; 'so called from this coin being generally bent or crooked' (H).

bane is an incorrect form of bene, adj. Lytton Bulwer, Pelham, 1828: but then, Lytton Bulwer's knowledge of c. was derived wholly from books.

bang, n. 'It is a common expression amongst people whom you would hardly expect to jocularly ask one another if they could give them a "bhang", which is a slang expression for a snuff of cocaine,' Emily Ferguson, The Black Candle, 1922, Godfrey Irwin's comment (letter of Oct. 21, 1937) being, 'Here "bhang" may be either slang or cant; the author's spelling seems to indicate some knowledge of cannabis indica, which she does not mention': drug-addicts': from ca. 1910; 1929, Givens; June 7, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, IA; June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; 1935, Hargan; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; 1938, Castle; BVB, 1942, cites also the variant bang in the arm; extant. Whether by inhalation or by injection; therefore, as likely from bhang (Irwin) as by a pun on shot. Strictly, bhang is the Hindustani name for cannabis indica, Indian hemp (hashish).—2. A brothel: Australian: C. 20. Orig. c.; by 1940, low s. Sidney J. Baker, Australian Slang, 1942. Ex low s. bang, 'to coit with (a woman)'.

bang, v. 'I received my first lesson in the art of "banging a super", that is stealing a watch by breaking the ring with the thumb and forefinger, and thus detaching it from the chain', Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1922 (Nov.), The Writer's Monthly, G. A. England, 'Underworld Lingo'; Oct. 1928, Word-Lore (England), F. C. Taylor, 'The Language of Lags', 'To "bang him" is to knock a man's hat over his eyes and rob him, a common occurrence with race-course thieves'; extant. Cf. strike, v., 1.—2. To beg; U.S. tramps': 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble, 'He oughta be a cinch at bangin' a gate'—'Two dollars . . . made me decide to keep on "banging for light pieces"'; extant. Cf. strike, v.—3. To inject a drug: drug addicts': since ca. 1920: Ersine, 1933; 'I liked smoking, but wanted a connexion for morphia, as I preferred to "bang"', Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938. Ex the n.—4. To arrest (a person): C. 20. Ersine, 1933. Cf. 'clap the darbies on him'.

bang and biff. Syphilis: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B., 1944. Rhyming s. syph (often spelt siff).

bang it up. See bang up, v., ref. of 1931.

bang-off. To shoot: since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933.

bang out. Excellent, desirable; successful; since ca. 1910; Godfrey Irwin, 1931; extant. A variation of bang up.

bang room. A room, an apartment, where drugs can be indulged in: 1931, IA; extant. See bang, n.

bang to rights. 'Caught [by the police] in the [criminal] act', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, 'Bang to rights (or dead to rights). Caught with stolen property'; 1931, Brown (England), 'Caught in the act of committing a crime'; 1934, Convict; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open ('banged to rights'); 1939, George Ingram, Welded Lives, 'I got pretty well banged to rights'; extant. An elaboration of to rights, q.v. at rights, to.

bang up, adv., 'very fine, very stylish', has, in England, been always s. But Vaux, 1812, gives a specific sense that may, ca. 1800–30, have been c.: 'A man who has behaved with extraordinary spirit and resolution in any enterprise he has been engaged in, is also said to have come bang up to the mark,' where, obviously, bang up is not an adjective but an adverb. In the U.S.A., it may, ca. 1850–1910, have been c.: witness, e.g., No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, 'Bang Up. Good.' It is one of the many 'percussive superlatives' characteristic of coll. and s.

bang up, v. To inject (e.g., morphine); to inject oneself with: drug-addicts': 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (see quotation at gow, n.); 1930, Burke, 'The mutts bang up on foolish powder' (heroin); 1931, IA cites the variant bang it up; extant. Bang it up = shoot it up. But prob. the orig. suggestion came from bhang (see bang, n.).

banged to rights, partly verbal, partly adverbial. See bang to rights, refs. of 1935, 1939; earlier in Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932, bangster. 'An addict [to drugs] is "on the habit", "a bangster", and . . . a "bang" is a "load", "charge", or "hyp"', Givens, 1929; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1942, BVB rightly confines it to an injection-using addict. See bang, n.

bangtail. A racehorse: since ca. 1918. Ersine, 1933. Ex the s. sense, 'mustang'.

banjo. A short-handed shovel: tramps': C. 20: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Irwin, 'Especially one used for coal'; extant. Ex the shovel's spatial similarity to the musical instrument.

bank, n. Money: 1740, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. 4 (John Clark), 'David Izzard . . . and another of his Companions came to me, and asked me to go out'—on a thieving expedition—'with them. I told them, that I had no Bank, (no Money). Izzard bid me never Mind that—he'd find Bank'; by 1890 (F & H), s. for 'a lump sum of money; one's fortune'. Banks contain, or represent, money.—2. Properly the Bank: Millbank Prison: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1889, Answers, May 25, (F & H); 1903, No. 7, Twenty-Five Years in Seventeen Prisons; † by 1920.—3. A hiding place: U.S.A.: Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'Dictionary of the Underworld'; extant. Ex 'as safe as a bank'.

bank, v. To hide: to make safe: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. cxxxii, 'We have banked the rag', glossed as 'secured the money'; in II, ch. clxxx, it is erroneously defined as 'make' (to make money); 1874, Hotten; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; ob. Cf. the cliché, as safe as a bank or as the Bank of England.—2. To obtain or pilfer; 1890, F & H; † by 1930.—3. To divide fairly with confederates: 1890, F & H; † by 1945.

bank-burster. A bank-robber that uses force to open safes and vaults: 1881, A. Pinkerton, Professional Thieves and the Detective; † by 1930. Cf. burster (q.v. at buster).

bank-man. A professional bank-robber: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 'Do you think Boston is as much of a bank-man's hang-out as it used to be?'; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; † by 1930.

bank-mob. A gang of criminals specializing in bank-robbery: 1903, J. Flynt, The Rise of Ruderrick Clowd; by 1920, police s.

bank-plant. A bank regarded as a place to be robbed; a bank robbery: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne; † by 1930. Cf. plant, n., 4.

bank snatcher. 'The most reasonable theory was that the theft (from Parr's Bank, in Jan. 1899) had been accomplished by a gang of Americans, who make a speciality of this class of crime, and are known as "bank snatchers"', Hargrave L. Adam, The Police Encyclopædia, V, 220—pub. in 1920; † by 1947.

bank sneak. One who steals bonds from banks: said by James D. McCabe, New York by Sunlight and Gaslight, 1882, at p. 510, to be both police s. and thieves' c. Police s., yes, but not, I think, the other. The terms occur elsewhere, e.g. in E. Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York, 1872.

banker seems to be a misprint for bawker (q.v.), itself = baulker. Greene, The Second Conny-catching, 1592, spells this term, which belongs to 'Vincent's law', bankar in the list of terms; but always bawker in his description of the 'law'. In Dekker's The Belman of London, 1608, it is both bancker and banker.—2. 'Any person who backs a gambling game, a con game, or a robbery,' Ersine, 1933: U.S.: since ca. 1922. He acts as a banker.—3. A convicted bank employee: U.S.: since ca. 1924. Ersine.—4. A bank-robber: U.S.: since ca. 1925. Ersine.

banner. A can of beer: 1925, Flynn's (Jan. 3), Henry Leverage, 'Dictionary of the Underworld'; extant.—2. A report made against a prisoner for breaking a rule: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant.—3. A bed: since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933, 'spread your banner in that empty reefer'. Cf. balloon.

banner, v. 'To carry beer in, and drink it from a can,' Henry Leverage in Flynn's, Jan. 3, 1925; extant. Ex the n.

banner, carry the; banner, flag, the. See carry the banner and flag the banner.

banty. Impudent, saucy: 1890, F & H; ob. Ex bantering, ppl adj.

baptist or B-. 'A pickpocket caught and ducked': 1823, Jon Bee; † by 1900. With a pun on baptismal rites.

baptise. To dilute (liquor): since ca. 1921. Ersine. Cf. preceding entry.

bar, n.; half a bar. A gold sovereign; ten shillings: C. 20; perhaps orig. (and until ca. 1910) c., but prob. always low s. In I Remember, J. W. Horsley (1912) records it as Cockney s. and in Cheapjack, 1934, Philip Allingham classifies it as pitchmen's s. Perhaps because bullion is in ingots, or bars of gold; more prob. an adoption of the synonymous Romany word bar (itself perhaps a contraction of the synonym, balanser).

bar, v. 'Bar that, cheese it, stow it, don't mention it': 1848, Sinks of London; by 1890 (F & H), U.S.A. Perhaps elliptical for I bar that, i.e. I debar that.—2. '"Bar that toss", stop that game': U.S.A.: 1889, B & L; † by 1940.

bar (or bars) of soap. Drugs, narcotics: since ca. 1930. In, e.g., John G. Brandon, Gang War, 1940. Rhyming dope.

barb, 'to clip' (gold), is classified by F & H as c.; it is C. 17 S.E.

Barbary Coast, the. Water Street, New York City: 1882, James D. McCabe, New York by Sunlight and Gaslight (p. 509); † by 1920.

barbecue stool. Electrocution chair: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; slightly ob. A grim pun on barbecue, 'a framework for smoking or broiling'.

barber, n. A thief: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1945. Prob. short for hotel barber.—2. See barber a joint.

barber, v. (Of a thief) to cheat (another thief): 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police (see skewer, 2); † by 1900.—2. To talk; to gossip: U.S. tramps': C. 20. I; Herbert Corey, 1936, defines barbering as talking too much; 1940, Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely. Ex the average barber's alarmingly fluent conversation.

barber a joint. To rob a bedroom while the occupant sleeps: C. 20. The thief is a barber. Painless fleecing.

barber of Rochdale, the. The hangman: convicts': since ca. 1925: 1932, Jock of Dartmoor, Human Stories of Prison Life; slightly ob.

barbering. Conversation: tramps': C. 20: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1936 (see barber, v., 2).

barber's cat. 'An emaciated hophead' (opium addict), Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936; extant.

bard (or barde) dice. See barred dice.

bardy is an error for bandy.

bargain. A reduction of the original sentence—a reduction made by the District Attorney when, to avoid the cost of a trial, the prisoner pleads guilty: 1934, Howard N. Rose: extant. With a humorous allusion to sales of goods at a reduced price.—2. (A piece of) stolen property: South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946, 'Anyone caught with a "bargain" (stolen property) might well be sent to prison for it'. Prob. ex bargain sales.

bark, 'an Irishman', is not c. but s.

bark, n. A dog: 1925, Flynn's (Jan. 3), Leverage; extant. Sound emitted > sound-emitter.—2. A signal (to a companion): 1925, Flynn's (Jan. 3—as in sense 1); slightly ob. Cf. cough.

bark, v.i. 'To inform (to the police). . . . To come it, to bark': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); † by 1930. For the semantics, cf. 'to squeak' and 'to squeal'.—2. (also bark away.) To shoot (with a firearm), fire a shot: U.S.A.: 1859 (implied in barking); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'What does the greaser do but flash his rod and bark away. . . . What does the fellow do but draw his pistol and shoot'; app. † by 1940. Cf. barker, 2, and barking.—3. To signal (to a companion): U.S.A.: 1925, Flynn's (Jan. 3), Leverage; slightly ob. Cf. sense 1 of the v. and sense 2 of the n.

barker, 'a Salesman's servant that walks before the shops, and cries, Cloaks, Coats or Gowns, what d'ye lack, Sir?', B.E., 1698, may orig. have been c., but it was certainly s. by 1750 at latest. It is interesting to note that Grose, 1785, confines it to the shopman assistant of a dealer in second-hand clothes. Ex S.E. barker, a dog.—2. A pistol (Scott, 1815: Dickens, 1838): in Britain possibly c., but prob. s.: cf. barking iron. 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857, classifies it as 'Th(ieves)' and Gen(eral)'. In U.S.A.: s. >, very soon, coll. Ex the noise it makes on being fired.—3. (Ex sense 1.) An auctioneer: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, where it is defined as 'Auctioneer. A bally-hoo man. Spieler'; by 1926 or so, no longer c.—4. See barkers.

barkers. Shoes: April 13, 1929, The Saturday Evening Post, Charles G. Givens, 'The Clatter of Guns'; 1934, Rose; extant. Prob. a pun on either creakers or squeakers.

barking, n. Shooting: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; by 1890, s. Cf. the next.

barking iron, 'a pistol', is gen. in the pl.; perhaps orig. c., but s. by 1810 at the latest. Grose, however, classifies it as Anglo-Irish, and says: 'From their explosion resembling the bow-wow or barking of a dog'.

Barks, the. As 'Irishmen', it is not c. but s.

Barkshire, a member or candidate for. 'Said of one troubled with a cough; vulgarly called barking,' Grose, 2nd ed., 1788: not c. but s.—2. Barkshire, Ireland: not c. but s.: cf. Barks.

barmies, the. Insane prisoners: convicts': 1907, Jabez Balfour, My Prison Life (p. 116); 1929, 'Warden', His Majesty's Guests ('balmies'); 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House ('barmies'); by 1935, gen. prison s. Ex. s.

barmy. See barmies.—2. Hence, a ward, a department, a gaol for insane prisoners (esp. convicts): C. 20. In, e.g., Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943.

barmy, act or do the. To feign lunacy: prisoners': 1875, A. Griffiths (see try it on; the latter): 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail (in former); by 1890, both were low s. Cf. the preceding entry.

barmy, put on the. A variation of the preceding: 1888, G. Bidwell, Forging His Chains; 1889, B & L (put on the balmy stick); 1897, D. Fannan, A Burglar's Life Story (as trying on the barmy stick); ob.

barmy stick. A prisoner that feigns lunacy: 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, 'When the "barmy sticks" are detected they are deservedly punished'; slightly ob. Cf. barmies.

barnaby. 'A tramp who is somewhat genteel,' Leverage, in Flynn's, Jan. 3, 1925; extant. Barnaby evoking the idea of a quiet, respectable fellow?

barnacle. (Cf. the very similar role of the barnard.) He who, in the 'cony-catching law' (q.v.), enters into the game when his two confederates have flattered the victim into confidence and good humour: 1591, Robert Greene, in his long account of 'The Art of Conny-Catching' in A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, describes his share of the swindle: '. . . Thus doth the verser and the setter feine friendship to the conie, offering him no show of Cosnage, nor once to draw him in for a pint of wine, ye more to shadow their vilany, but now begins the sporte: as thus they sit tipling, comes the Barnacle and thrusts open the doore, looking into the roome, where they are, and as one bashfull steppeth back againe, and saith, I crie you mercie . . . pardon my boldness . . . No harme saith the Verser, I praie you drinke a cup of wine with us and welcome: so in comes the Barnacle, and taking the cup drinke to the Connie, and then saith, what at cards gentlemen? were it not I should be offensive to the company I would play for a pint till my friend come that I looke for. Why sir, saith the Verser, if you will sit downe you shalbe taken up for a quart of wine. With all my heart, said the Barnacle, what will you play at, at Primero, Primo visto, Sant . . . ? Sir, saith the Verser, I am but an ignorant man at cards, and I see you have them at your fingers end, I will play with you at a game wherein can be no deceit . . . mum-chance . . . No truly, saith the Connie, me thinkes there can be no great craft in this . . . the verser wins. This is hard luck, sayth the Barnacle . . . Wel, to it they go againe, and then the barnacle . . . lets the verser win the set, then in a chafe he sweareth tis but his ill luck'. They play for money; the barnacle loses; again the barnacle loses. 'Wel, this flesheth the Conny, the sweetnes of gaine maketh him frolike, and no man is more readie . . . then he.' So they fool him along; the barnacle losing much money, only to win back everything and fleece the cony in one bet by working on his cupidity and, in the excitement, manipulating a card. Though recorded by Dekker (The Belman of London) in 1608 as having, in the country districts, superseded barnard, the term was † by 1650.—2. Hence (?), 'a good job, or a snack'—or share—'easily got', B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1860. According to the Dict. of 1725, it derives directly ex:—3. A 'Gratuity to Jockeys, for selling or buying Horses', B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1860. Perhaps because he sticks to it or because he holds out a clinging hand for it.—4. See barnacles.—5. A pickpocket: 1867, Mark Lemon, Layton Hall. But the sense is suspect.—6. 'A fellow that sticks to one job a year or more,' Stiff, 1931: U.S. tramps': since ca. 1910. Perhaps cf. sense 3. He is a 'clinger'.

barnacled, be. 'The Cuffin Quire with his Nose Barnacled . . . , the Justice of Peace with his spectacles on,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1820. barnacles. 'The Irons Fellons wear in Goal' (sic), B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; by 1859, American (Matsell, 'Hand-cuffs'); † by 1890 (F & H).—2. A pair of spectacles: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. s. by 1785 (Grose).—3. (In U.S.A.) 'A good booty': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary; † by 1910. Things worth 'sticking to'.

Barnard or b-. That member of a set of confidence tricksters who acts as decoy; mid-C 16–mid-17. Gilbert Walker, 1552 (see the first quotation in the next entry); 1591, Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, makes him the 'drunk' man of the gang; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London.

Barnard's (or b-) law. The various kinds of confidence trick; swindling by this means; such swindling as a profession: mid-C. 16–mid-17. Gilbert Walker, Diceplay, 1552, 'Another oily shift, and for the subtil invention and fineness of wit exceedeth all the rest, is the barnard's law: which, to be exactly practised, asketh four persons at the least, each of them to play a long several part by himself': these being the taker-up, the barnard, the verser, the rutter. In 1591, Robert Greene, in his A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, explains it thus: 'There was before this many years agoe, a practise put in use by such shifting companions, which was called the Barnards Law, wherein as in the Art of Cunny-catching, four persons were required to perfourm their coosning commodity. The Taker up, the Verser, the Barnard and the Rutter, and the manner of it indeed was thus. The Taker up seemeth a skilful man in al things, who hath by long travell learned without Booke a thousand pollicies to insinuate himselfe into a mans acquaintance; Talke of matters in law, he hath plenty of Casis, at his fingers end and he hath seene, and tryed, and ruled in the Kinges Courtes: Speake of grasing and husbandry, no man knoweth more shires than hee, nor better which way to raise a gainsfull commodity, and how the abuses and overture of prices might be redressed. Finally, enter into what discourse they list, were it into a Brormemans'—? a burgess's—'facultie, hee knoweth what gaines they have for olde Bootes and Shooes: Yea, and it shall scape him hardly, but that ere your talke breake off, he will be your Country man at least, and peradventure either of kinne, aly, or some stale rib to you, if your reache farre surmount not his. In case hee bring to passe that you be glad of his acquaintance, then doeth hee carry you to the Tavernes, and with him goes the Verser, a man of more worshippe then the Taker up, and hee hath the countenance of a landed man. As they are set, comes in the Barnard stumbling into your companie, like some aged Farmer of the Countrey, a straunger unto you all, that had beene at some market Towne thereabout, buying and selling, and there tipled so much Malmesie, that he had never a ready woord in his mouth, and is so carelesse of his money, that out he throweth some fortie Angels on the boords [i.e., table's] end, and standing somewhat aloofe, calleth for a pint of wine, and saith: Masters, I am somewhat bold with you, I pray you be not grieved if I drinke my drinke by you: and thus ministers such idle drunken talke, that the Verser who counterfeited the landed man, comes and drawes more neare to the plaine honest dealing man, and prayeth him to call the Barnard more neare to laugh at his follie. Betweene them two the matter shal be so workemanly conveyed and finely argued, that out commeth an old paire of Cardes, whereat the Barnard teacheth the Verser a new game, that he saies cost him for the learning two pots of Ale not two houres agoe, the first wager is drinke, the next two pence or a groat, and lastly to be brieft they use the matter so, that he that were an hundred yeere olde, and never played in his life for a penny, cannot refuse to be the Versers halfe, and consequently at one game at Cardes, hee looseth all they play for, be it a hundred pound. And if perhaps when the money is lost (to use their word of Arte) the poor Countrey man beginne to smoake them, and sweares the drunken knave shall not gette his money so, then standeth the Rutter at the doore, and draweth his sword and picketh a quarrell at his owne shadowe, if he lacke an Osler or a Tapster or some other to brabble with, that while the streete and company gather to the fray, as the manner is, the Barnard steales away with all the coine, and gets him to some blinde Taverne or other, where those Cooseners had appointed to meete.' The c. name of the victim is cousin—or coosin, as Greene spells it in the same pamphlet. Dekker in The Belman of London, 1608, varies Barnard's with Bernard's, speaks always of the B-law, and mentions a variation employed in country districts: 'The party that fetcheth in the Gull (whose feathers they meane to pluck) is not called the Taker, but the Setter.—2 He that seconds him keepes his first Tytle and is called the Verser.—3 He that looseth his money, not a Cozen but a Cony.—4 He that comes in and before counterfetteth the drunken Barnard is now sober and called the Barnacle.' This sense appears to have been † by 1760.

Barnet Fair. Hair: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1870, low rhyming s.; by 1890, gen. rhyming s. Cf. barney fair.

barney, n., 'a mob', is not c. but street vendors' and Punch and Judy men's s. H, 1859.—2. 'A fight that is sold': not c. but pugilistic s., app. orig. American. Matsell, 1859.—3. 'A lark, spree, rough enjoyment' (H, 1860): not c. but London street s.—4. 'A deception, a "cross"': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; by 1920, ob.; by 1940, †. Ex Yiddish barniss, 'a captain, a leader': B & L. But this etymology is extremely doubtful.—5. A fight: South Africa: C. 20; by 1940, low s. Letter, May 23, 1946, C. P. Wittstock. Ex the Cockney s. term, itself prob. ex the Irish love of a free-for-all.

barney, v. 'To travel in style. "We'll clear three grand on this job and then barney back to the Big Town"', Ersine: since ca. 1920. Perhaps cf. sense 4 of the n.

barney fair, or with capitals. Hair: Pacific Coast: C. 20. In e.g., The American Mercury, May 1928 (Ernest Booth); Convict 2nd, 1938. Australian (ex Cockney) rhyming s. Barnet Fair > Barney Fair > barney fair.

Barney McGuire. A fire: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Rhyming.

barney moke. A pocket wallet: C. 20. Val

Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. Rhyming on poke.

barneying. Robbery; a swindle, swindling: 1889, B & L; slightly ob. Ex barney, n., 4.

baron. A 'stylish hotel beat', i.e. a well-dressed, well-mannered adventurer (esp., confidence-trick man) that frequents good hotels: Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'); 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 'Baron—a boss' (a big racketeer)—but this nuance is journalistic s.; indeed, journalistic j. Orig. ironic.

barons of the slender pack, 'cardsharps' (Kernôt, 1929–31). Perhaps genuine; to me, however, it sounds journalistic. Cf baron and South African slim, crafty, cunning.

baronial jug. 'A mansion. . . . A high game, baronial jug,' C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 1889 (glossary, p. 320): prob. in use only ca. 1870–1910. Cf jug, n., 2.

barred cater trey is a synonym of langret (q.v.). Gilbert Walker, 1552, speaking of langrets, says: 'Such be also called bard cater tres, because, commonly, the longer end will, of his own sway, draw downwards, and turn up to the eye sice[,] deuis or ace; the principal use of them is at novem quinque. So long as a pair of bard quater tres be walking on the bord, so long can ye cast neither V nor IX [? X], unless it be by a great mischance, that the roughness of the board, or some other stay, force them to stay and run against their kind; for without quater trey, ye wot that V nor X can never fall.' The term seems to have fallen into disuse by the end of the 18th century.

barred dice are false dice so shaped that they do not lie securely on certain sides: 1552, Gilbert Walker, in A manifest detection of the moste vyle and detestable use of Diceplay, details the dice making up a set (or bale), thus: barde sinke deuisis (deuces); flat synke deuisis; flat sixe eacis (aces); barde syce eacis; barde cater trees (threes); flat cater trees; fullans (fullams or Fulhams) of the best making; light graviers (false dice of unascertained kind); langretes (illicitly long on the forehead) contrary to the vantage; gordes (false dice of unascertained kind) with as many hygge men as lowe men for passage (an obsolete dice-game played by two persons with three dice); demies; long dice for even and odde; brystelles (bristle-dice); direct contrarnes (a misreading for contraries):—most of these terms, like barred dice itself, were orig. c.; certainly all the names of the false dice were orig. c. and remained c. for half a century; some perhaps for longer.

barrel, v. To drink liquor, esp. to excess: tramps': C. 20. Irwin. 'A barrel invariably means liquor when a tramp is concerned' (Irwin).

barrel bum. A beggar that frequents 'barrel houses': 1925, Flynn's (Jan. 3: H. Leverage); extant.

barrel dossier is a variant of barrel(-house) stiff, q.v.: tramps': from ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin; extant.

barrel fever, 'delirium tremens', is included in Matsell's Vocabulum; or, The Rogue's Lexicon, 1859, as a c. term: it may have been c. in New York, but in England it was s.—see, e.g., Egan's Grose. In the U.S.A., the term was still current in 1931 (Godfrey Irwin).

barrel house, 'a low grog-shop', is not c. but s. In 1923, in his notable monograph, The Hobo, Nels Anderson writes, 'Chicago has known three types of cheap hotel: the so-called "barrel-house", the welfare institution, and the business enterprise. The first, the barrel-house, was a rooming-house, saloon, and house of prostitution, all in one . . . The barrel-house is a thing of the past.'

barrel-house drunk. Hopelessly intoxicated: C. 20: low s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

barrel-house stiff; barrel-stiff. A grog-shop sponger for drinks (hence also for free snacks); 1909, W. H. Davies, Beggars—in reference to ca. 1899—the longer term; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, ' . . . Bar flies, or barrel-house stiffs. The barrel-house stiff is frankly a booze parasite'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Barrel-Stiff. An old worn-out bum living in barrel houses, eating whatever may be salvaged from garbage cans or cheap lunch rooms, and absolutely without hope or ambition'; extant—but, by 1945, slightly ob. See barrel house.

barrikin, 'jargon; unintelligible talk': not c., but costers' s.

barrister's. A coffee-house frequented by thieves: orig. and mainly London c.: Aug. 1869, Sessions (p. 421), 'He said, "Look here, I will run down to the Barrister's and see if he is there"—the Barrister is a thief who goes by that nick-name; he keeps a coffee-house' (a detective officer's testimony); 1909, J. Redding Ware, Passing English; app. † by 1920.

barrow. A Black Maria: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Humorous: 'carted off in the barrow'.

barrow boy. 'Barrow boys, fruit-vendors with barrows, who run various rackets on the side, such as touting for briefs at railway stations, and re-selling them. Brief, the unused half of a return railway ticket,' John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939: mostly London: since the 1920's; by 1945, s.

barrow man. 'A man under sentence of transportation; alluding to the convicts at Woolwich, who are principally employed in wheeling barrows ull of brick or dirt,' Lex. Bal., 1811: ca. 1800–50.

barrow run. A fine of £5: 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life (p. 272); by 1940, ob.

bars of soap. See bar of soap.

Bartlemy. See Joe Blake the Bartlemy.

base-metal man, 'a counterfeiter using lead or some other base metal,' is included, in the glossary of c. terms, by George V. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; obviously it is not c.

bash, n. A smash-and-grab raid: 1935, R. Thurston Hopkins, Life and Death at the Old Bailey; extant.—2. Also (the bash), generic: smash-and-grab raiding: 1938, Partridge. Both senses date from ca. 1920, perhaps from a decade earlier. Cf senses 3–5 of the v.

bash, v. 'To beat any person by way of correction, as the woman you live with, etc.': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1859, H., 'To beat, thrash; "Bashing a donna", beating a woman'; by 1865, low s.—2. Hence, to flog (a man) with the cat-o'-nine tails: convicts': 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1889, B & L; 1931, Desmond Morse-Boycott, We Do See Life; 1938, H. V. Triston, Men in Cages; 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer; 1939, Val Davis; extant.—3. Among American thieves and convicts, it bears the associated sense, 'to break': 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1931, IA, 'To break in' (i.e., into a building); extant.—4. (A development ex sense 1.) To assault (a person) brutally and for hire: rom ca. 1870, says Ware; 1904, No. 1500; 1906, G. R. Sims, Mysteries of Modern London, 'The crime of "bashing"—that is the professional name for it—is far commoner than the peaceful citizens of London imagine. To commit a brutal assault for hire is a means of livelihood practised by certain gangs of ruffians who have regular haunts and houses of call, where they "attend" to get the "office" of any job that may be going'; 1909, Ware, who quotes from The Referee of 1882; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (U.S.A.), Glossary, s.v. 'Assaulter' (where implied in basher); 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1931, IA; 1940, Joseph Crad, Traders in Women.—5. (Ex sense 4?) To assault and rob (a person): Nov. 20, 1901, Sessions, (policeman log.) 'He said, "Robbery and assault mean a bashing"' ; extant.

bash, on the. Engaged in soliciting—in prostitution: C. 20. James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936, 'Most of the time she's on the bash round the flash bars'; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; 1938, Walter Greenwood, Only Mugs Work, 'They had "gone on the bash" (or turned prostitute)'; by 1940, low s. An underworld variation of on the batter.

basengro. A shepherd: tramps': C. 20. Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Ex Romany; engro ('man') is a frequent Romany suffix.

basher. 'a violent ruffian, a beater-up', may orig.—ca. 1810—have been c., but perhaps was always low s. 'The Man-Basher' is an article in James Greenwood's The Policeman's Lantern, 1888; in 1909, Ware classifies it as 'modern low London'. Ex bash, v., 1.—2. That warder who, in a prison, does the flogging: convicts': C. 20. Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows, 1939. Ex bash, v., 2.—3. 'Smash-and-grab-man who does the breaking part,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941: since ca. 1930.

bashing. A flogging in prison: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1874, Hotten, 'The worst that can happen to a brutal ruffian is to receive "a bashing in, and a bashing out"—a flogging at the commencement and another at the close of his term of enforced virtue'; 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, 'Floggings, or "bashings", as the prisoners call them'; 1885, Arthur Griffiths, Fast and Loose; 1887, Bausmann; 1889, B & L; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; extant. See bash, v., 1 and 2.—2. See bash, v., 4.—3. See bash, v., 5. Ex bash, v., 2.

basis. A C. 20, white-slaving term, as in A. Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, a pimp speaking: 'I've got three women. . . . Tomorrow I may have only two, or even only one. We have our professional risks. Apart from what we call our "basis"—the women we shall marry when youthful folly is past—the others are always rather risky affairs.'

basils. 'fettlers on one leg only', is classified by F & H as 'old cant': but it was S.E.

basin, have a. See have a basin.

basketman. A graft (or a protection-money) collector: racketeers': 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Humorous: the basket is for carrying the 'graft'.

baste. To kill (a person) with violence: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, "He was a copper, and we fly cops have got to send some bloke to the chair for bastin' him" ; ob. A pun on bash: cf. s. 'cook a person's goose'.

baster. 'A house-thief': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum, where the terseness leaves us in doubt whether he means a burglar or a sneak-thief; 1890, F & H; 1903, Sylva Clapin, Americanisms, 'A New York term for a house thief'; April 1919, Moreby Acklom in The (American) Bookman; ob. For semantics, cf. the idea in strike, v.

bastile; bastille. 'Bastile, generally called, for shortness, the Steel; a cant name for the House of Correction, Cold-Bath-Fields, London': 1812, J. H. Vaux,—but the term antedates 1811 (see steel); 1823, Bee, 'Coldbath-fields Prison received this name, 1796, by reason of the close seclusion of its inmates; a discipline resembling that of the original Bastille' in Paris; † by 1850 or so. Origin: see the 1823 ref.—2. Hence the workhouse: c. and low s.: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1889 (B & L).

bat, n. 'A low whore: so called from moving out like bats in the dusk of the evening', Lex. Bal., 1811; 1889, B & L: ca. 1790–1900 in England. It was current in the U.S.A. by 1859 (Matsell, Vocabulum) and there, still c., in 1940—witness The American Mercury, Dec. 1930, James P. Burke, 'The Argot of the Racketeers': for any prostitute; as also in Godfrey Irwin, 1931, in Ersine, 1933, and in Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, 1936.—2. See bats.—3. Price: pitchmen's s. of C. 20 (Philip Allingham, Cheappack, 1934).—4. See bat, on the.—5. 'An ugly old man' (Ersine): U.S.: since ca. 1925. Like the flying bat.

bat, v. To be, to work as, a prostitute: late C. 19–20. BVB, 1942. Ex sense 1 of the n.—2. See batted, 1.

bat, to go on a. 'to go on the spree' (W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 1929): low s., not c.

bat, go to. 'If . . . the criminal . . . "goes to bat" (stands trial),' Convict 2nd, 1938: since ca. 1930. Ex baseball: the player going out to bat has the ball pitched at him.

bat, go to the. To perjure oneself when under oath; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Nov. 28, 1925, Flynn's; extant.

bat, on the. See about town.

bat carrier. An informer to the police; since late 1920's: in, e.g., Howard N. Rose, 1934. Ex baseball. A 'fan' is proud to carry his hero's bat.

bat-fowler. He who practises 'bat-fowling'; a synonym, therefore, of cony-catcher: 1602, S. Rowlands, Greenes Ghost Haunting Coniecatchers. To judge by its absence from B.E. (1698) and other glossaries: † by 1660 or so. Cf. bat-fowling.—2. Ca. 1600–20, if we go by the evidence of Dekker's The Belman of London, where, in the section on 'the lifting law', he writes: 'Another more cunning then all these Liftings, is when in an evening, a Batfowler walkes up and downe the streetes, and counterfits that hee hath let fall a ring, a Jewell, or a peece of gold, requesting some Prentice, (when there is but one in the shop) to lend him his candle, a while to find his losses, who simply doth so, but the Lifter poring a good while and not meeting with his ring, lets the candle in the end slip out of his fingers, and whilst the prentice steps in to light it againe, the Sentar or he himself steales what garbage they can finger, and are gone in the meane time'. Admittedly, however, bat-fowler may here be used simply as a literary metaphor and not as a c. term at all.

bat-fowling. See 'Browne's cant vocabulary', for this sectional and prob. short-lived synonym of cony-catching. A natural development of the S.E. sense, 'the catching of birds by night when at roost'.

bat-house. An asylum for the insane: tramps' (and others'): from ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, at the latest, it was low s.

Bates, Dr. See Doctor Bates.

Bates' Farm (or f-) or Charley Bates' Farm or Old Bates' Farm. Cold Bath Fields Prison: ca. 1850-1900: 1889, B & L, 'To be on the treadmill there is feeding the chickens on Charley Bates's (or Bates') Farm. A warder of that name is said to have been in charge there'; 1890, F & H, who give the first and the third, and add Bates' Garden.

batfowler; batfowling. See bat-fowler and bat-fowling.

batner. See battner.

bats, 'old shoes or boots', is classified by B & L, 1889, as 'thieves' slang': but it was low s., not c.—2. Delirium tremens: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, IA; extant.

bats, go. To go crazy: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1930, s. Cf. English s. bats (or batty), 'crazy, mad; very eccentric', itself ex 'to have bats in the belfry'. The American phrase derives, prob., from bats, 2.

battalion. A gang of criminals: C. 18. I doubt this definition and this classification (as c.) by several lexicographers.

batted. Arrested: since ca. 1925. Ersine. Ex baseball.—2. Topsy: since ca. 1927. Ersine.

batten, to fatten, is classified by B.E. as c.: but this is incorrect, for it has been S.E. ever since its origin in the latter half of C. 17: B.E. was prob. misled by battener (an ox), q.v. at battner.

battener. See battner.

batter, 'an ox', is an error for battner. (Sinks of London, 1848.)

batter, v. To beg: tramps': since ca. 1880: Aug. 1896, The Contemporary Review, Josiah Flynt, 'The American Tramp'; 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); ibid., p. 99, 'They have "battered" in this community for years'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Glen H. Mullin; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, Irwin; 1937, Daniel Boyle; 1939, Terence McGovern, It Paid to be Tough; extant. 'From knocking at back doors' (Flynt).—2. V.t., to beg from (a person) or in (a place): 1899, Flynt, Tramping, p. 107, 'Standing in front of shops and "battering" the ladies as they passed in and out'; 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'The kids began "battering" the "main-stem" for "light pieces"'; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 'I soon started "battering the back doors"'; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; extant.

batter, on the. See on the batter.

batter the drag. To beg on the road: tramps': C. 20: 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'In the course of my tramping I encountered hundreds of hoboes, . . . with whom I waited at water-tanks, "boiled up", cooked "mulligans", "battered" the "drag" or "privates", and beat trains'; 1931, Irwin; extant.

batter the main stem. To beg in the main street: C. 20. Jack London (see batter, v., 2).

batter the privates. To beg at private houses:

tramps': C. 20: 1907, Jack London, The Road (quot'n at batter the drag); 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1931, Irwin, 'To beg from door to door in a residential district'; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; extant.

batter the stem. To beg in the street: see batter, v.—batter the main stem—and stem.

battered cully, 'an old well cudgell'd and bruised huffing Fellow' (B.E., 1698), is on the verge of c.: strictly, however, the phrase is, as an entity, not c., although cully was c. at this period.

battering is the vbl n. ('begging') of batter, v., 1: 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; extant.

batting. Travelling aimlessly: tramps': from ca. 1910: 1931, Irwin; extant. 'Much as a bat flits from place to place' (Irwin).

battle, v.i. and v.t. To beg: Australian tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1919. Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, 1941, 'I'm going back to battle for some more rum' and 'I could battle a paddock for the horses'. To 'struggle for life'. Cf. — battler. A beggar; a tramp: Australian: since ca. 1919. Kylie Tennant, The Battlers (the 'classic' novel on Australian trampdom); Baker, 1942. Prob. ex one of the s. senses, 'a hawker in a small way, a struggling horse-trainer, an almost penniless yet persistent punter'; perhaps influenced by the war of 1914-18.—2. A gangster fond of using his capable fists: Glasgow: C. 20; by 1930, also low s. MacArthur & Long, No Mean City, 1935.

battleship. 'A high-sided steel coal car, usually with a hopper or dump bottom,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1918. Ex its structure and appearance.

battner; occ. battener or batner. 'Batner, c. Oxe,' Coles, 1676; 1698, B.E. (battner); 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Battner, an Ox; The Cove has hush'd the Battner; He has kill'd the Ox',—as also in Grose, 1785; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1889 (B & L), if not indeed by 1840. 'Beef being apt to batten or fatten those that eat it' (Lexicon Balatronicum).

batty, insane: even in U.S.A., this term is—despite Rose, 1934—low s.

baubles is classified by B.E., who spells it baubels, as c.; but in the senses 'jewels' and 'gewgaws' it has always been S.E.

baudy basket. See bawdy basket.

baulker. (For the other terms in this 'coosenage at Bowls', see Vincent's Law.) One who, with confederate players, sets out, in a game of bowls, to defraud an innocent citizen by playing not to the score but according to the state of the bets laid by the 'gripes' (or those seemingly independent betters in the crowd who are actually members of the gang): 1592, Robert Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, 'They which play bootie, the Bankars'—almost certainly a misprint; at least four times in his description (ibid.) of the working of 'Vincent's law', he spells it bawker, as, e.g. in 'The Bawkers, for so the common hanter of the Ally are teamed, aparelled like very honest and substantiall cittizens come to bowle, as though rather they did it for sport then gaines, and under that colour of carelesnes, doe shadow their pretended knavery'. (See also gripe.)

hause, in Middleton & Dekker's The Roaring Girl, 1611, is merely a misprint for bouse.

bawd physic occurs in Awdeley's The Fraternitie of Vacabondes, 1562, as bawde phisicke: see the entry at Awdeley's, No. 15. The term, if ever more than an idiosyncratic appellation, seems to have fallen into complete disuse by 1698 (the approximate date of B.E.'s invaluable glossary) at the latest; most probably by 1650.

bawdy banquet is almost certainly not c., but S.E., for 'lechery' or, rather, 'coition': 1566, Harman. Perhaps suggested by:

bawdy basket. 'These Bawdy baskets be also'—like the 'glimmering mortis' or 'demanders for glimmer'—'wemen, and go with baskets and Capcases on their armes, wherein they have laces, pynnes, needles, white ynkell [i.e., linen tape], and round sylke gyrdles of al colours. These wyl bye conneyskins [i.e., rabbit skins], and steale linen clothes of hedges. And for their trifles they wil procure of mayden servaunts, when their mystres or dame is oute of the waye, either some good peece of beefe, baken, or cheese, that shalbe worth xii. pens, for ii. pens of their toyes. And as they walke by the waye, they often gaine some money wyth their instrument, by such as they sodaynely mete withall. The upright men have good acquayntance with these, and will helpe and relieve them when they want. Thus they trade their lyves in lewd lothsome lechery,'—Harman, 1566, is fond of alliteration. Also in Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608, 'There is another Parrot, (in this Bird-Cage) whose feathers are more sleeke, and tongue more smooth than the rest; and she is called A Bawdy basket . . . they are faire-spoken, and will seldome sweare whilst they are selling their waires; but will lye with any man that hath a mind to their commodities'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1688, Randle Holme, 'Bawdy Baskets, such as prostrate themselves to any person'; 1698, B.E., 'Bawdy-baskets, c. the Twenty third Rank of Canters, with Pins, Tape, Obscene Books, &c. to sell, but live more by Stealing'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose,—but the term was prob. † by 1740 at latest.

bawdy-house bottle. 'A very small one', B.E., 1698; Grose. Despite its associations, this term is not c. but good familiar S.E.

bawdy ken. A bawdy house: 1812, Vaux; 1848, Sinks of London; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; † by 1900. See ken.

bawker. A member of a gang playing unfairly at bowls in order to defraud a simple, trusting participant: 1592, R. Greene, The Second Conny-catching, employs this spelling at least four times and banker only one. See baulker and Vincent's Law.

bawl, v. See ball, v.

bay, in 'The Temple Classics' edition of Dekker's Belman pamphlets, is a misprint for bag. See the quotation at bit.

Bay, the. Botany Bay penal establishment: June 1820, Sessions (p. 454), 'He said . . . he had only served sixteen months of his time at the Bay'; by 1870, ob. and by 1890, †.—2. Long Bay Gaol, Sydney: Australian: C. 20. Vance Marshall, The World of the Living Dead, 1919; Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939; Baker, 1942, 1945.

bay fever, 'illness feigned by one who wishes to avoid being sent as a convict to Botany Bay', is more prob. s. than c.; app. current ca. 1800–60, it is recorded in Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811.

bay state. A hypodermic syringe: drug addicts': since ca. 1925. BVB. A 'bastard state' wherein one 'must' use it.

bazaar. A shop-counter: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H; in U.S.A. by 1859 (Matsell); † by 1900 in both Britain and U.S.A. Ex the bazaar-like jumble of goods often displayed on a counter.

bazoo. The nuances 'throat, mouth, voice' are C. 20 s.—see D.A.E. Ex bazoo, (fanciful name for) a toy trumpet.—2. The sense 'boasting; boastfulness'; likewise s. Whence:—3. A fool; a sucker; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'The Gray Gangster'; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; slightly ob.

be for. To tend to favour or help (someone): 1933, Ersine, 'Few screws are for the cons'; by 1940, s.

be in. To be a member of a gang, or a sharer in its loot, or informed as to its criminal activities: since ca. 1918. Ersine. Cf. coll. in the know.—2. 'To rob a place. (Used only in the perfect tense.) "He's been in thirty jugs"', Ersine: since ca. 1920.

be up. To have applied for a pardon, a parole, or a commutation of sentence: convicts': since ca. 1910. Ersine. Cf. 'to be up for a job'.

beach. A jail bathing-shed: convicts': 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Nostalgic.

beach, on the. See on the beach.

beachcomber. 'A thief who prowls about the sea-shore' (1890, F & H) is not c. but nautical s.—2. Among American tramps, however, it means a sailor, esp. a sailor 'on the road': 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A tramp or [a] bum who hangs about waterfront saloons and the docks and begs food and drink from the sailors'; extant. Ex the S.E. sense.

bead, n. See beads.

bead, v. To 'stick (a person) up'—to hold up—with a revolver; Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, H. Leverage; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, to shoot a person: J. Allan Dunn, 'I lead him between his lamps'; slightly ob. Ex the bead or sight on the firearm.

beader. 'A revolver; one who uses a revolver,' H. Leverage, 'The Underworld'—in Flynn's, Jan. 3, 1925; slightly ob. Ex bead, v.

beads; the singular is rare. 'White stuff. Diamonds. Also referred to as glass, ice, beads,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941: since ca. 1930.

beagle. A person's nose: since ca. 1925. Ersine. Ex the dog so named; cf.:

beagles. Sausages, esp. when served hot: mostly tramps': from ca. 1920. 'Merely another, possibly more esoteric, name for "hot dogs"' (Irwin).

beak, n. Earliest in budge a beak, q.v., i.e. in 1610; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'A rum Beak; a good Justice [of the Peace]. A quare Beak; a bad Justice'; 1796, Grose, 3rd ed., 'Beak. A justice of peace, or magistrate'; 1809, Andrewes, Dict.; 1809, The Rambler's Magazine; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, II, 'Less liable to annoyance from the beaks'; 1821, D. Haggart, Life, where it is spelt beek; 1823, Bee; 1828, G. G., History of George Godfrey; 1838, Glascock; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist, 'Why, a beak's a madgstrate'; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad; 1843, Sessions; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850, low s. in England; by 1845, current in U.S.A. (Matsell, Vocabulary, 1859; The Ladies' Repository, 1848); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1918, J. M. Sullivan, The American Law Review, applied to a judge; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (a judge); Jan 3, 1925, Flynn's; Nov. 23, 1929, Flynn's; 1931, Irwin; ob. 1938, Castle; extant. Origin: the prominent noses of dominant magistrates and judges.—2. Hence, loosely, a police officer: 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, Appendix; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1841, Tait's Magazine, April, 'Flowers of Hemp'; 1859, H; † by 1889 (B & L).—3. See beaker.—4. A mayor; U.S.A.: 1848, 'The Flash Language' in The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). A mayor is usually also a magistrate.

beak, v. 'What maund doe you beake, what kind of begging use you?' Rowlands (O.E.D.): late C. 16—mid 17. A corruption of 'to beg'.

beak, baffle the. To be remanded: ca. 1840–90. Hotten, 1864. See beak, n., 1.

beak, budge a. See budge a beak.

beak, queer and rum. See queer beak and rum beak.

beak gander. A 'judge of the superior court': 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H, who imply that it is low s., which it certainly > by 1900. An elaboration of beak, n., 1.

beak-hunter; beaker-h. 'Beaker Hunter—poultry stealer': 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrates Assistant, 3rd ed. (beaker-h.); 1859, H (beaker-h.); 1874, H (both); 1889, B & L (both); 1890, F & H (both); 1909, Ware; extant.

beak-hunting. Poultry-stealing: from ca. 1860: 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; slightly ob. Cf. the preceding term.

beak runner. A policeman or another engaged in running down, or scouting for news of, criminals: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; † by 1870.

beake. See beak.

beaker. A fowl: 1839, 1857, etc. (implied in beaker-hunter); 1890, F & H, 'Sometimes shortened into beak'; ob. Ex its beak.

beaker-hunter. See beak-hunter.

beaker-hunting. Poultry-stealing; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary); extant. Cf. beak-hunting.

beakquere is an error for queer beak. Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859.

beaksman. A police officer: 1823, Bee, 'The clerks and others about the Police-offices receive the same appellation'; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'He thereby rendered his person more conspicuous to harman-beck, trap, and beaksman'; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890 (F & H). See beak, n., 1, of which it constitutes an elaboration.

bean, n. A guinea: 1799 (implied at half a bean); 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'Miss Sybil, or I'm mistaken, will look as yellow as a bean'; † by 1859—witness H, 1st ed. Perhaps a particularized substantivization of bene, adj.—2. Hence, a five-dollar gold piece: U.S.A.; 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1910, by which time bean had > s. for 'one dollar'.—3. A bullet: U.S.A.: Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, H. Leverage; ob. Cf. S.E. 'pea-rifle'.

bean, v. To commit suicide: Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, Henry Leverage; extant—but not much used. Perhaps orig. and strictly, to shoot oneself through the bean, s. for 'head'.

bean town. 'Throughout the Under World, Chicago is known by its nickname, "Chi" . . .

Other cities have similar nick-names. New York is called "York"; Philadelphia, "Phillie"; Cincinnati, "Cincie"; Boston, "Bean-Town"; Detroit, "Slow-Town"; Baltimore, "Balt", and Kansas City, "Kay See"; Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'From the famous vegetable so intimately connected with that city, the "Home of the bean and the cod",—but by this time, prob. indeed by 1920, it had > s.

bean-trap. A well-dressed sharper or swindler: 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; in C. 20 Australia, a well-dressed confidence man—Baker, 1942. One who traps or illicitly obtains 'beans' (see bean, n., 2).

beanery. A restaurant: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1925 (see quot'n at flunkie graft); 1934, Convict; by 1940, low s. For the form, cf. low English s. sluicery, 'a tavern; a drinking-shop'.

beans is receivers' and nautical c. for coffee: ca. 1790–1860. Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq (1828), I, 209, in relation to purchases by receivers from river pirates and dishonest sailors: 'These transactions are made in slang terms, intelligible only to the parties concerned. Sugar was "sand"; coffee, "beans"; pepper, "small pease"; rum, "vinegar"; tea, "hops"; so that they could deal for them even in the presence of the super-cargo of the ship.'

beany and nappy, as horse-copers' words, are on the borderlands between c. and low s. and j. 'A "nappy" horse is when they've got these here little lumps along the neck and withers about as big as a nut . . . A "beany" horse is when they goes dotty on one peero (foot) and you puts a little bit of sharp flint between the toe and the shoe of the t'other foot to make 'em go level,' F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . the Autobiography of a Gipsy, 1893.

bear up for (a person) is 'to strike a man's cap or hat over his eyes' in order that the person 'borne-up' may the more easily effect the robbery: ca. 1850–1900. H, 1874.

beard-jammer. A brothel-keeper; a whore-monger: C. 20: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. C. 18 English s. beard-splitter (a whoremonger).

beard-splitter. 'An enjoyer of Women', B.E., 1698; 'a man much given to wenching', Grose. Not c., but low s. bearer-up. One who 'bears up' (see bear up for). H, 1874; Wm Newton, 1886; † by ca. 1910.—2. Such a gambling-cheat as pretends to be a member of the public: 1874, H; 1889, B & L; ob.

bears, stand the. In an account of bilking a tavern-keeper, Ralph Wilson, in A Full Account of the Robberies Committed by John Hawkins, George Simpson and their Companions, 1722, writes: 'When the Reckoning came to be paid, they drew Lots who should be left behind to stand the Bears for the rest, that is, when the rest were gone, to make the best of his way off without discovery', i.e. to bear the brunt; app. † by 1810.

beat, n. A swindle: from ca. 1875; 1890 (see daisy beat); 1898 (see old man); ob. Ex the v.—2. That part of a town or city in which a criminal (or a criminal gang) works: 1865, Rogues and Rogueries of New York; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; by 1940, s. Ex the English s. sense (a prostitute's or a policeman's beat).—3. An escape from prison: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a beat, v. To rob (esp. a person): 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; or, The Rogue's Lexicon, "Beat the flat"; rob the man'; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, in the senses 'to overreach, to best, to defraud'; 1881, The Man Traps of New York, 'A cheat and a fraud, who wants to "beat" the hotel out of his board bill'; 1887, Morley Roberts, The Western Avernus; 1888, George Bidwell, Forging His Chains (in sense, 'to swindle'); 1890, F & H (id.); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Beat, to defraud'; by 1910, low s. except in beat a mark. Cf. strike, n., 2, and v., 1.—2. To escape from (a prison, reformatory, etc.): 1904 (sec at Protec); 1912, D. Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 'Beat the dump'; 1927, Kane (beat the prison); Sept. 1, 1928, Flynn's, 'They want me for beatin' that stir'; 1929, Jack Callahan; 1931, Irwin; extant. Cf. s. beat it, to depart.

Thief, 'He let me in on one of the cleverest beats I ever knew'; slightly ob. Ex beat, v., 2.

beat a mark. To rob a person already intended as a victim: May 1928, The American Mercury, 'The Language of the Underworld', by Ernest Booth, 'One ready to pick any pocket, as opposed to one "beating a mark", who has flashed his roll and is followed until a favourable opportunity appears for abstracting his poke, skin, or leather'; extant.

beat a spot. 'To steal from a certain place,' E. H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937; extant. Cf. prec. entry.

beat (a person's) ears down. To punish, esp. if physically: 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece, 'Don't let me see you throwing no winks, or I'll beat your ears down': c. of ca. 1920–40, then low s.

beat it (on the hoof). 'To walk on Foot': 1698, B.E., longer form; A New Canting Dict., 1725 (id.); 1785, Grose (id.); by 1870, † in Britain, but it has survived, in the U.S.A., among tramps, who apply it to walking as opposed to travelling by train—witness, e.g., Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926 (p. 75); and in New Zealand among criminals for 'to run away' (Nelson Baylis, letter of 1932). The it may refer to the road, or path. The variant beat the hoof (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788) seems to have been always s.

beat it out. To flee: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Elaboration of beat it.

beat moll. A street-walking prostitute: C. 20. BVB, 1942. A moll on a beat.

beat off. To rob, steal from, burgle: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'we'll beat off the box' (a safe); extant. An elaboration of beat, v., 1.

beat on, get a. 'As used by thieves and their associates, to get a beat on one, besides conveying the idea of obtaining an advantage, also implies that the point has been scored by underhand, secret, or unlawful means': 1890, F & H; † by 1930.

beat one's way, 'to travel', is not c. but s.—perhaps even coll. An early example: 'In the States, almost all proficient roadsters "beat their way" on the railways,' Josiah Flynt, 'The American Tramp', The Contemporary Review, 1891.

beat out of. To extort money from (a person); esp. by blackmail: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1888, The Daily Inter-Ocean, April 12 (F & H); by 1890, it was s. An elaboration of beat, v.

beat the game; beat the rap. 'To outwit courts and officers' (law courts and policemen), George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924 ('b. the game'); 1927, C. L. Clark, & E. E. Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor ('b. the rap'); 1929, The Saturday Evening Post (do.); Feb. 14, 1931, Flynn's, Henry Hyatt (do.); Aug. 8, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse (do.); 1931, Godfrey Irwin (do.); 1934, Convict; extant.

beat the gong; hit the gong or gonger. To smoke opium: addicts': C. 20. BVB. See gong, n.

beat the rap. See beat the game.

beater. See 'Browne's cant vocabulary'. This transitory term obviously is drawn from the vocabulary of sport, for the whole set of terms derives thence. The implied sense seems to be that of game-beater (a record that antedates, by nearly two and a half centuries, the earliest record in The O.E.D.), for he beats up game for the fowler. Cf. beating the bush, q.v.—2. See beaters.—3. 'A beater brazenly obtains credit in her own name and gives the impression that she is responsible and will pay the bill' (whether at shop or at hotel), Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941: U.S.: since ca. 1910. She (or he) 'beats it' without paying.

beater cases. Boots: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'A highwayman will ding his . . . Beater-Cases'; 1796, Grose, 3rd ed.; 1859, H, 'Boots: nearly obsolete'; by this time (see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859), it was current in New York; by 1889, † in Britain (B & L); by 1903 (Clapin) † in U.S.A. Boots encase that which beats the ground.

beaters. Boots: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1910. Ex the preceding.

beating, n. An overreaching; a swindle: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1910, low s. Ex beat, v.

beating the bush. In the vocabulary devised by Ned Browne for his gang, beating the bush is the phrase to be substituted for 'the fetching in a Conny'; like all the other terms in this vocabulary (see 'Browne's cant vocabulary'), it derives from fowling. Cf. beater, q.v.

beau. 'Cronies (variously known as chommies, pallie-blues, or beaus),' The Cape Times, May 23, 1946: South Africa: since ca. 1910. A form of bo.

beau traps. 'The Fortieth Order of Villains, Genteel-dress'd Sharpers, who lie in wait to insnare and draw in young Heirs, raw Country 'Squires, and ignorant Fops,' A New Canting Dict., 1725: ca. 1690–1870, B.E. insufficiently defining beau trap as simply 'a Sharper' and Grose repeating the Dict. of 1725. Here trap = trapan, and beau is an adj.

beauty doctors. 'A weapon (sap) with a nut on the end; it is used to massage a victim's face,' Ersine: since ca. 1925. Ironical.

beauty parlor. A brothel: since ca. 1910. BVB, 1942. At times, certain beauty parlours have been also brothels.

Beaver Ken. Belvoir Castle: C. 17. Ben Jonson, A Masque of the Metamorphos'd Gipsies, 1621, 'Thercs a Gentry-Cove here | is the top of the shire | of the Beaver ken', the allusion being to the Earl of Rutland. Beaver is not c., but a corruption of Belvoir; ken, an edifice. See, esp., G. W. Cole's ed. (1931) of Jonson's play.

beck, n. Earliest (1566, Harman) in combination: harman beck, q.v. In 1698, B.E. has 'Beck, c. a Beedle'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Beck, or Harman-beck, a Beadle'; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open,—but the term was almost certainly † by 1800. Of the same origin as beak, n., l, q.v. Whence:

beck, v. To imprison (a person): 1861, Reade, The Cloister and the Hearth: but I suspect that this is 'literary' c., for I have no record of its being, in C. 19 or before or after, used by the underworld.

becket. A trousers pocket: 1925, Flynn's, Jan. 3, Henry Leverage; extant. A fanciful perversion of britch, n.

bed, go up a ladder to. See ladder to rest.

bed chat. A bed-room: C. 20. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932. Lit., a 'bed thing': see chat, n.

bed plate, n. and v. An indictment; to indict: Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, Leverage; ob.

bedroom of stars. A park: beggars' and tramps': 1925, Flynn's (Jan. 3, art. by Leverage); slightly ob. Cf. English do a starry.

bee, n. See bee on . . .

bee, v. To beg: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex sense 2 of:

bee on, put the. To blame, to criticize bitterly, to feel resentment against; to lay a complaint against: Dec. 13, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'There's another thing we put the bee on you for. You sent Larry the Lag up to Dannemora, to do it all'; May 21, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; extant.—2. To beg, to borrow, from (a person); mostly beggars' and tramps': 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Usually with a hard luck story. To say, "I put the bee on him" usually means that the donor has been "stung", when he gives up the loan, since seldom is it repaid'; Dec. 30, 1933, Flynn's, Major C. E. Russell; Sept. 29, 1934, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; by 1936 (James Curtis, The Gilt Kid) it was also British; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too; 1938, Clifford R. Shaw, Brothers in Crime; extant.—3. To impose one's wish upon (somebody), whether by will-power or by astuteness; i.e., to bluff (him): June 25, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch, "'Let me go in and put the bee proper on that chiseler, and get what's coming to us," I blurted'; 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; 1936, P. S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 'Making a crook pay for protection'; July 5, 1941, Flynn's, Richard Sale; extant.

Beechams. An ex-soldier's bills (printed notices used for peddling and/or begging): beggars' and tramps': from ca. 1919. Hugh Milner, letter of April 22, 1935. Short for Beecham's pills (rhyming s.).

beef, n. An alarm uttered in warning against a thief or thieves at hand and as a signal for, or incitement to, pursuit: earliest, and gen., in whiddle beef, q.v. at whiddle, v., 1; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; Grose, 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Jon Bee, 'Discovery of persons, an alarm or pursuit'; 1859, H (see take beef); 1890, F & H; app. † by 1910 at the latest. Prob. beef is a rhyming variant of thief, for whereas B.E. (at whiddle) gives whiddle beef, A New Canting Dict., 1725, gives whiddle thief; likewise, cry beef = cry thief.—2. Hence, a laying of information to the police: U.S.A.; 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, 'Cavanaugh believed that he saw in his old companion the same "Buck" Cober of "square deals" and no "beef"'; by 1920 it had merged with the next sense in the U.S.A., but ca. 1930 it > British c., as in James Spenser, Crime Against Society, 1938.—3. Hence a complaint to the police; a police accusation, or charge against a person: U.S.A.: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1924, F. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1928 (see bum beef); Sept. 20, 1930, Liberty; 1931, I; by 1935, police s.

beef, v. 'To alarm, to discover, to pursue,' 1797, Humphry Potter, Dict. of Cant and Flash; repeated by Andrewes, 1809; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To beef a person, is to raise a hue and cry after him, in order to get him stopped'; 1848, Sinks of London; Oct. 1869, Sessions; 1889, B & L; † by 1920. Prob. ex cry beef: see beef, cry.—2. Hence, to turn State's evidence: U.S.A.; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft (Glossary); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'To give information to the police'; 1927, Kane; July 5, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick, 'Beefing to the law—telling a policeman'; 1931, Irwin; Dec. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; June 9, 1946, anon. letter—Canadian, which also the word has been since ca. 1910.—3. The sense 'to complain; to grumble' is s.—not c. at all. (E.g., Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 1913.) beef, cool the. (Of a fair-'gaffer') to tell a fellow-worker to return to a customer a dollar or two, in order that he shall not complain to the police: carnival crooks', American and Canadian: since ca. 1920. Anon., letter, June 1, 1946. See beef, n., 2, and cool, v.

beef, cry. 'To cry Beef upon us; they have discover'd us, [given the alarm] and are in Pursuit of us,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham (see blater); 1890, F & H; by 1920, †.

beef, fix (or square) the. See fix, v., 6.

beef, give hot. 'To beef it, or to give hot beef, is to give chase, pursue, raise a halloo and cry': 1879 (see hot beef); 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1940. See beef, n. and v.

beef, make. To run away, make off: mid-C. 19—early 20: F & H, 1890. See beef, n., and beef, (to) cry.

beef, square the. See fix, v., 6.

beef, squeak. See squeak beef.

beef, take. See take beef.

beef, whiddle. See whiddle, 1698 quotation.

beef it. See beef, give hot.

beef on. 'The "bloke beefed" on him (gave him away [informed on him])', J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 'The Tramps' Jargon'; by 1930, police and journalistic s. See beef, v., 2.

beefier. 'One who "squeals" on, or gives away, a tramp or criminal,' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary), 1899; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'A loquacious person'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (repeating Flynt); 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (also as 'One who talks too much'); 1931, Stiff; 1931, Irwin; extant. Ex beef, v.—2. The sense, 'a whiner', common among tramps—teste Stiff, 1931—is gen. s. (orig. low), not c.

beefment, on the. See on the beefment.

beefsteak. A harlot in the service of a pimp: white-slavers': C. 20. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, 'I decided to go on a trip after "remounts". I felt I could manage two "beefsteaks".'

beek is a rare variant of beak, n., q.v. at the ref. for 1821.

beekarman, a 'harman beek' (q.v.), is not c. but merely Ben Jonson's idiosyncratic variant in The Metamorphos'd Gipsies, 1621.

been is a rare variant of bene, adj. (J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.) Cf. beene.

been, pike on the. See pike on the been.

beene is an occ. variant of bene, adj. Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608-9, 'Stowe you, beene cofe; hold your peace, good fellow'.

beenship is a very rare variant of beneship, adj.

beer flat. An illicit saloon: 1934, Howard N. Rose; ob.

beer game, the. See horse-car game.

bees and honey. Money: Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20. In, e.g., Chicago May, 1928, and Convict 2nd, 1938. Rhyming s., introduced by Cockneys.

beeswax. Cheese: 1823, Egan's Grose; 1848, Sinks of London; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1865, low s. Ex similarity in their appearance.

beetle. A fellow, chap, 'guy': June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwich; ob. Either humorous or pejorative—or both.—2. 'A young woman, usually an attractive one,' Ersine, 1933: since ca. 1925. Pleasantly ironic; contrast:—3. An unattractive woman: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant.

beetle-man. A blackmailer; a 'heel': since ca. 1930. Castle, 1938, 'Creep joint beetle-men'. Cf. beetle, 1.

beezzer, 'the nose': rather is it low s. than c. In, e.g., Convict, 1934.

before the beef. Before the report goes in to the police: 1934, Rose; by 1940, police s. See beef, n., 3.

beg rum maund. See rum maund.

Beggar Banners, the. 'I became one of the Beggar Banners, or, to make it plain, a member of the Beggars' Trust. In the old days when a man was off the bread wagon they said he "carried the banner". That's how came the name,' A. E. Ullman, 'Beggarmen' in Flynn's, April 14, 1928; ob.

behind the eight ball, 'in a precarious position': not c. but sporting s. In, e.g., Rose, 1934.

Beilby's ball. 'He will dance at Beilby's ball, where the sheriff plays the music: he will be hanged,' Grose, 1796: a c.p., recorded, as dance at Beilby's ball, first (1785) by Grose, who adds, 'who Mr. Beilby was, or why that ceremony was so called, remains . . . yet undiscovered'; app. † by 1840. Prob. Beilby's is a personification of bilboes, 'chains, irons'; note the variant Bilbey's ball.

bein is a rare variant of bene, adj. Dekker, O per se O, 1612, 'Bein darkmans'.

bek is a rare variant of beck: ? C. 17 only. E.g., Dekker (see harman beck).

belch, n. A protest; a complaint: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'A complaint; a cry for aid'; 1931, Irwin; 1931, John Wilstach; 1934, Howard N. Rose; by 1940, low s. An 'untimely' utterance.—2. Hence, an informing to the police: since ca. 1920: Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, Leverage; 1933, Ersine; extant.—3. Hence, an informer to the police: 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece; extant.

belch, v. 'To "squeal" or "split" on a pal' (to inform to the police about one's accomplices in a crime), Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft (Glossary), 1901; inform to police (about, e.g., a gambling den), as in (a passage valid for ca. 1898) 'The girl had been "picked up" by the police . . .

and had then "belched" on the place from which she had escaped,' Anon., 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery', Flynn's, April 6, 1929; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Belched. Spoke; turned informer'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, Irwin; 1934, M. H. Weseen; 1936, C. F. Coe, G-Man; 1938, Castle; June 9, 1946, anon. letter, showing its currency in Canada.

belch one's guts. 'There were times when gang members believed they could trace the activities of law enforcement agencies to Willie's loose-jawed habit of standing around bars and taverns and night clubs and, in the parlance, "belching his guts"'. By this time, the . . . mob was hotly pursued by the Government. Under such circumstances, nobody likes to be burdened with a "blab-mouth". So they decided to kill Willie,' Courtney R. Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937: prob. from ca. 1925. Cf. belch, v., and the low s. spill one's guts.

belcher, 'a yellow silk handkerchief, intermixed with white and a little black . . . First introduced by the celebrated Jim Belcher' (Egan's Grose, 1823), is pugilistic > gen. sporting s.,—prob. at no time c., although it was much used by the underworld until ca. 1860 (see, e.g., billy).—2. 'A good thick looking ring . . . [with] the crown and V.R. stamped upon [it]': used in 'the fawney rig' (ring-dropping game): ca. 1840-1900: F & H, 1890, quoting from Mayhew's London Labour and the London Poor (I, 399). Perhaps ex sense 1.—3. A 'squealer' or informer to the police: U.S.A.: C. 20. Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904, 'He certainly preferred to go to stir rather than have the name of being a belcher'; Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, Leverage; May 18, 1929, Flynn's, Thomas Topham; 1929-31, Kernôt; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'One who talks to excess'; 1934, M. H. Weseen; by 1945, slightly ob. Ex belch, v.—4. 'A prostitute who insists on explaining herself and her condition': U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

belching, vbl n., corresponding to belch, v., esp. in sense 1.

bell. A song: 1859, H; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'Tramps' term'; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; ob. Short for bellow.—2. Usually pl., bells, ears: U.S.A.: C. 20. 1934, Convict.

bell-ringer. A public house: 1889 (see news of the day); app. † by 1930. The door opening is as effectual as the ringing of a church bell; cf. churchwarden.

bellowed, be. To be transported as a convict: 1833, trial of Thos. Evans and Jim Pike, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-34, IX, 'Did you not tell the boy he was sure to be bellowed?'; Oct. 1836, Sessions; 1859, H, 'Bellowed, or Lagged, transported'; app. † by 1889 (B & L). For semantics, see:

bellowser. Transportation (as a convict) for life: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1844, Sessions (Feb. 6), 'He said, "I know his is a bellowser for me, and I won't have it for nothing," and he struck me again'; app. † by 1889 (B & L). Because transportation for life is such a blow that it may be said to have winded the victim: cf. s. bells, 'lungs', and winder and wind. Perhaps there is an additional pun: on the wind-propelled ship that took a convict to Australia.

bellowing. 'He said, "It is all right, that has saved the bellowsing," meaning transportation for life,' Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, May 1837 (p. 126); † by 1870. See the preceding and ensuing entries.—2. Murder: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; † by 1940. I.e., a depriving of breath.

belly-ache, v., 'to keep on complaining', is low s. in the British Empire, and I query its being c. in the U.S.A. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

belly cheat. An apron: 1566, Harman, 'a belly chete, an apcrn'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, E. Coles; 1688, Randle Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed. (belly-chit); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1889 (B & L). Lit., a belly thing.—2. Food: ca. 1610–60. Fletcher, 1622.—3. A pad designed to simulate the appearance of pregnancy: ca. 1790–1860. Bee, 1823.

belly-cheer, 'food', was never c.: despite B & L.

belly chit. See the 1708 ref. in belly cheat; see also chit.

belly gun. A firearm; esp. 'short-barrelled 32-20 gun: squat, ugly type of weapon for cramming against the stomach of the victim and firing with deadly results', Kernôt, 1929–31; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; slightly ob. Because so often gangsters fire at the belly, not the heart nor the head.

belly of a drag. The underside of a slow freight train: tramps': since ca. 1910; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, "Riding the belly of a rather" means . . . riding the rods . . . of a fast train'; extant.

belly-robber. A prison officer working in the kitchen: convicts': 1929, Givens; 1931, Irwin; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant. He deprives others' bellies of their rightful sustenance: by the usual slander.—2. 'A boarding boss'—i.e., a boarding-house manager or proprietor—'who tries to save money on food,' Stiff, 1931; tramps': since ca. 1910.

bellyful, a. More than enough: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, s. Adopted ex low English s.

belt. 'Narcotic exhilaration,' BVB: since ca. 1925. Ex the s. sense, 'excitement, thrill, "kick"': cf. boot.

ben, n. A fool: 1698, B.E.; A New Canting Dict., 'A foolish Fellow; a Simpleton'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1809, Andrewes, 'Silly fellow, a novice, a fool'; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell, Vocabulum). This sense, which endured in England until ca. 1840, may have been c., as Grose (1785) says it was: cf. benish, q.v. Prob. it is a variation of bene, adj.: a good man is often, in the best sense, simple.—2. A rare variant of bene, n.—3. An overcoat: U.S.A. 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1937, gen. s., as Godfrey Irwin points out in a letter of Aug. 9 of that year. Ex Benjamin.

ben, adj. A variant of bene: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All; 1830 (see ben cull); 1832, W. T. Moncrieff, Eugene Aram (favourable); app. † by 1889 (B & L).

ben cove. See bene cofe.

ben cull. A good fellow: ex 1730–1860. This extension of ben, n., 2, occurs, e.g., in E. Lytton Bulwer's Paul Clifford, 1830, "Paul, my ben cull," said she, "what gibberish hast got there?"—2. Hence, a friend, a 'pal': 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, vol. I, ch. xviii; Millbank Penitentiary, says H, 3rd ed., 1864; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1909, Ware; app. † by 1920.

ben-fakers or feakers (of jybes). See benefeakers (of gybes).

ben flake: perhaps better written Ben Flake. 'A steak, used at a slap-bang, i.e. a low cook-shop or eating-house': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue: from thieves' it >, by 1870, low rhyming s.; by 1890, gen. To judge by Matsell's Vocabulum, it was current in New York by 1859.—2. As 'a bill-forgery', it is an error for bene feakers, 2. (E.g., in B & L, 1889.)

ben whids. See cut bene whids.

benar is the comparative of bene; benat being the superlative. Better: 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'And cut benar whiddes; and speake better words'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles (with variant bener); 1688, Randle Holme; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1823, Jon Bee; † by 1840 or, at latest, 1850—witness H, 1859. The suffix -ar is merely a 'disguise'.

benat. Best (cf. benar); most favourable: 1566, Harman, 'What, stowe your bene, cofe, and cut benat whydds . . . What, holde your peace, good fellowe, and speake better'—lit., best—'wordes'. The term may have survived until 1800 or even 1840 (cf. benar), but Harman seems to be the sole authority for the word. Benest or benast > benat by perversion.

bench, v.; bencher. To sleep on a bench in a park; one who does this: beggars' and tramps': Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'The Underworld'; by 1940, police and journalistic s.

Bench Nib (or bench nib). A judge: May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'Judge . . . a bench nibs'; extant. A 'nib', or fellow, on the Bench.

bend, n. A waistcoat: 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'Bend . . . A Vest'; ob. It gets so badly creased.—2. A killing, a murder: U.S.A. 1925, Flynn's, Jan. 3, Henry Leverage; extant. Probably ex the v.

bend, v. To kill or murder (a person): 1925 (Jan. 3), Flynn's, Leverage, 'The Underworld'; 1936, Charles Francis Coe, G-Man, 'That's what I want to hear. Who bent Knuckle?'; extant. Cf. hunting s. crease, to kill (a deer).—2. To steal: Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke ('The Argot of the Racketeers'), 'We bend a boat to hist the hooch'; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle, 'They line up punks and kids for their rackets. Teach them the ropes; how to bend, cop a heel, case a lay, spot a nose, sneeze a baby, and torpedo an eye'; 1939, Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep, 'Side lines, like blackmail, bent cars, hideouts'; extant. Cf. crooked and cross.—3. Esp. in bending a gate, 'blowing open, or off, door of a vault,' Kernôt, 1929–31; extant. By meiosis.

bend, on the. In a criminal racket: Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant. Prob. suggested by the rather longer established bent.

bender. A sixpence: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'I say, my kiddies, there's two bobsticks of slim, a bender for ale, and a flag's worth of lightning to pay; don't think that I mention this from any suspicion of your bilking me, but from a dead certainty, you will if you can'; 1809, Andrewes, Dict., where it is wrongly defined as a shilling; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1857, 'Ducange Angelicus'; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; by 1889, low s., as in B & L. For semantics, cf. bandy and cripple, qq.v., and crook, 2.—2. The arm: 1889, B & L; by 1900 at latest, it was low s. That which one bends.—3. A stolen ear: U.S.A.: since the middle 1920's. 'The car was examined . . . a "bender" with an exceptionally fine job of numbering,' J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding, 1938. Prompted by bent one.—4. A lazy tramp: Australian; since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. Perhaps ironical, in that he refuses to bend his back in honest work; or perhaps because he slouches along.

bender! 'An ironical word used in conversation by flash people: as where one party affirms or professes any thing which the other believes to be false or insincere, the latter expresses his incredulity by exclaiming bender! or, if one asks another to do any act which the latter considers to be unreasonable or impracticable, he replies, O yes, I'll do it—bender; meaning, by the addition of the last word, that, in fact, he will do no such thing': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1850 or so, s.—witness H, 1859.

bending and bowing. Drugged; drug-exhilarated: drug traffic: since ca. 1925. BVB.

bene, n. Good; stow one's bene, to hold one's peace, is gen. in the imperative: 1566, Harman, 'Stowe your bene, eofe . . . Holde your peace, good fellowe'; app. † by 1620. Ex bene, adj.—2. See stand bene.—3. See pike on the bene.

bene, adj. Good; excellent: 1536, Copland; 1566, Harman, 'A bene mort hereby at the signe of the prauncer. A good wyfe here at the signe of the Hors'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1611, Rowlands, 'Ben good'; 1641, R. Brome, A Joviall Crew, 'This is Bien Bouse, this is Bien Bouse'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Bien. . . . Good or well'; 1688, Randle Holme, 'Bien, brave' in the old sense; 1698, B.E.; 1708, John Hall; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Bene, or Bien, good'; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes, 'Prime, good'; 1823, Jon Bee, 'Pron[ounced] Beeny'; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; the term was † as general c. by 1850, if not, indeed, long before. H, 1859, speaks of it as 'Ancient cant'; but it seems to have been used by tramps until ca. 1870 or even later (witness, e.g., Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, p. 267 (1857)), and it may have been current in U.S.A. until ca. 1870, or 1880, the term occurring in Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859. Moreover, in combination, it seems to have survived even in England for some years after its disuse as an independent term. Prob. ex It. bene, or perhaps Fr. bien, 'well'; but perhaps ex the originating L. adv., bene.—2. Hence, among tramps and usually as bien: well-to-do: C. 20. Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1933.

bene, pike on the. See pike on the been.

bene, stand. See stand bene.

bene house, bowse, etc. Excellent liquor: 1536, Copland (bene bouse); 1566, Harman (bene bowse and benebouse); 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light (bene bowse); 1641, R. Brome (bien bouse); 1698, B.E., 'Bene-bowse, c. strong Liquor, or very good Drink'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Bene Bowse, (cant) good beer, or other strong liquor',—repeated by Andrewes, 1809; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859, current in New York, (Matsell, Vocabulum); by 1889, it was †. See bene, adj., and boose, n.

ben bousy, bowsy, etc. Either 'drunk with good liquor', or less prob. 'pleasantly drunk': 1621, Ben Jonson, The Metamorphos'd Gipsies, 'You must be ben-bowsy | and sleeper and drowsie | and lazie and lowzie'. Almost certainly a Jonson coinage; never current in gen. c.

bene cofe (C. 17) or bene cove; ben cove; bien cove. 'A good fellow is a Bene Cofe', Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9; 1612, Dekker, 'To ben coves watch'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Mill quire Cuffin | So quire to ben Coves watch' and 'bien Coves'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Bene Cove, a good Fellow, a merry Companion'; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes, 'Hearty fellow, jolly dog'; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1857, Augustus Mayhew; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); 1890, F & H; † by 1900. See bene, adj., and cove.—2. Hence, a tramp: 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890.

bene cull. 'A good fellow': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1910. A variation, prob. deliberate, of the preceding; or rather, of ben cull, q.v.

bene darkmans! Good-night!: prob. from ca. 1560 or even earlier. Not dictionaryed, however, until 1698 (B.E.); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; by 1859, current in New York—according to Matsell, who has it as bene-darkman; by 1889 (B & L), † in Britain and by 1900 in U.S.A. See bene, adj., and darkmans; and cf. bene lightmans.

bene faker. See bene feakers of gybes, 2.

bene feakers. For this term, ca. 1700–1830, see refs. of 1725 and 1788, in the next entry.

bene feakers (of gybes or jybes), the singular being rare. Dekker, O per se O, 1612, 'Ben-feakers of Jybes, (that is to say) Counterfeiters of Passeports'; ibid., 'They who are Counterfeiters of Passeports, are called Ben-feakers, that is to say, Good-Makers; and these makers . . . bye lurking in every Countrey' or county, the usual price for a false passport being 2s. 4d. or 2s. 5d.; 1688, Randle Holme (ben-fakers); 1698, B.E. (Benfeakers of Gybes); 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Benfeakers, Counterfeiters of Notes, Receipts, etc.' and 'Benfeakers of Gybes, Counterfeiters of Passes'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'Bene feakers. Counterfeiters of bills.—Bene feakers of gybes. Counterfeiters of passes'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, in erroneous form bene of gibes (a counterfeiter of passes); † by 1860.—2. Hence (bene feakers only), makers of counterfeit paper money: 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Bene fakers, counterfeiters'; † by 1889 (B & L).

bene lightmans! Goodmorrow!; good morning!: 1566, Harman, 'Bene Lightmans to thy quarromes . . . God morrowe to thy body'; app. † by 1690. See bene, adj., and lightmans.

bene mort. In Harman's time (see the quotation at bene, adj.) it may have been a stock phrase for the goodwife of an inn or tavern; later it came to mean 'an attractive woman'—a sense † by 1870. See bene, adj. + mort.

bene of gybes is George Andrewes's error (1809); repeated in Sinks of London, 1848; for bene feakers of gybes.

bene(-)ship; bene(-)shyp. See beneship.

bene whids. See cut bene whids. (Harman, 1566, bene whydds; Head, 1665, bien whids.)

benebouse or benebowse. See bene house.

benen (Matsell, 1859) is an error for bener = benar. bener. See benar.

beneship, n.; occ. bene-ship. See next, quotations of 1688, 1698.

beneship, adj.; occ. written bene-ship or benship (or shyp). 'Benshyp, very good,' Harman, 1566; see too the Harman quotation at queer, adj.; ibid., 'Maund that is bene shype . . . aske for the best'; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands, 'Benship very good'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'I met a Dell, I view'd her well, | She was beneship to my watch,' i.e. most pleasing to me; 1688, R. Holme, 'Beneship, very good fellowship'—a definition open to suspicion, though it may be set beside B.E.'s as 'worship', i.e. repute or honour; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1790 at latest. I.e., bene (n. or adj.) + S.E. suffix -ship, esp. in such words as lordship and worship, where the connotation is favourable.

beneshiply or benshiply. Excellently; skilfully; attractively: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'This Doxy Dell can . . . prig and cloy so benshiply'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Beneshiply, Worshipfully',—as also in Grose, 1785; 1823, Jon Bee; † by 1860. Ex beneship.

benfeakers; esp. benfeakers of gybes. A late C. 17-mid-18 variant of bene feakers. (B.E.)

benflake is Matsell's script-form of ben flake.

Bengal Lancers. 'Toughs armed with Bengal razorblades, stuck in corks, who make a nocturnal practice of slashing people and robbing with violence,' Baker, 1942: Australian: since ca. 1931. Primarily ex the razor-blades, yet perhaps influenced by the large sales of Bengal Lancer, 1930, by Francis Yeats-Brown (1886-1944), a British Army officer of literary tastes.

benish. 'Bennish, Foolish', B.E., 1698: 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Bennish, foolish, simple'; 1785, Grose (benish). B.E., however, does not classify it as c.: the inference is that he believed it to be s.; and Grose does not say that it is c., but he has classified ben, a fool, as c. Ex the n.

'Benison, the beggar's.' This runs: may your prick and purse never fail you!: 1785, Grose. Prob. current as early as 1750 and as late as 1870.

Benjamin or b-. A coat: 1781 (implied in upper benjamin, q.v.); 1809, Andrewes (at Joseph); 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'All with white toppers on, quite swells in their appearance, and white benjamins'; 1827, Sessions; 1828, P. Egan, Finish (loosely of a top coat); 1848, Sinks of London (as for 1828); by 1850, low (esp. East End) s.—and c. in New York (Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859); it remained c. in U.S.A. until ca. 1890, the term recurring in, e.g., Anon., State Prison Life, 1871, as 'overcoat', and in No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, in the same sense. Almost certainly suggested by Joseph.

benjy. A vest (waistcoat): 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'The screaves were in his benjy cloy'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; by 1880, low s. Ex Benjamin: cf. Benjie, diminutive of the Christian name.

benly. Well: 1566, Harman, 'To cutte benle, to speake gently'; † by 1690 at latest. Ex bene, adv.

bennish. A late C. 17-18 variant of benish, q.v. B.E., 1698; A New Canting Dict., 1725.

benny, n. A sack coat; an overcoat: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo (overcoat); Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's; 1928, M. C. Sharpe; 1931, Stiff; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; by 1937, gen. s.—cf. comment at ben, n., 3.

benny, v. To steal overcoats: Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'Dictionary of the Underworld'; extant. Ex the n.

benny, be in the. To wear—be wearing—an overcoat: 1934, Rose; extant.

benny boost. A shoplifting modus operandi, the thief tucking an empty sleeve into his right-hand overcoat pocket, his right arm being free inside the garment, he gesturing with his left hand while with his right he steals: Dec. 24, 1932, Flynn's, Roscoe Dowell; extant. See the separate elements.

benny-worker. A thief specializing in overcoats: Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, H. Leverage, 'The Underworld'; extant. See benny, n.

benship or benshyp (Harman, 1566; Head, 1665) is a variant of beneship, as benshiply (Head, 1665) is of beneshiply.

bent, n. Properly the bent: see brief.—2. A stolen car: U.S.A. Nov. 15, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'Double Play'; extant. Short for bent one.

bent, adj. Addicted to crime; having criminal tendencies: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Crooked, criminal, outside the law'; 1934, M. H. Weseen; extant. I.e., literally—hence, figuratively—crooked; cf. C. 19 U.S. s. bent, 'tipsy'.—2. Stolen: see bent one.—3. (Of a cheque, a signature) forged: British: since ca. 1930. Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943. Cf. senses 1 and 2.

bent one. A stolen automobile: since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; M. H. Weseen, 1934; et al.

beong, 'a shilling', may orig.—ca. 1850-65—have been c., but prob. it has always been low s., when it was not parlyaree; 1859, Hotten; Ware, however, in 1909 classifies it as c. and implies that it was still in use. Ex It. bianco, 'white': hence, a white—i.e., silver—coin.

beray, said by F & H to be old c., is merely old S.E. bereavement lurk, the. The pretended loss of a wife as a pretext for begging: ca. 1850-1920. Ribton-Turner, Vagrants and Vagrancy, 1875 (cited by O.E.D.). See lurk, n.

berg. See burg.

berk or burk; plural berkia (burkia). A female breast; mostly tramps': since ca. 1860; ob. (B & L). Ex Romany.—2. (Only berk.) An incorrect form of birk.—3. Pejorative for 'fellow'; 'bastard' or 'silly bugger' or something of the sort; a fool: since ca. 1925. James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936, "'The berk.'" Jealousy and savage contempt blended in the Gilt Kid's tone. "I won't have you using that bad language"; ibid., 'Don't be a berk. You know what I mean'—where it = 'bloody fool'; 1938, Walter Greenwood, Only Mugs Work, "'Stick the burke in a taxi," he said'; extant. Short for low s. berkeley, 'a fool', itself short for Berkeley Hunt, rhyming s. for the female genitals; via the common expression 'You silly c——!'.—4. Collective for 'girls'; (young) women: since ca. 1930. Mark Benney, The Big Wheel, 1940, "'An' some of the berk the fellows take up [on to the Ferris wheel] wiv 'em? I wouldn't touch 'em wiv a barge-pole.'" Ex the rhyming term mentioned in sense 3.

Bermudas. 'A cant name for certain places in London, privileged against arrests,' Grose (1785):

1614, Ben Jonson, Bartholomew Fair, 'Looke into any Angle o' the towne (the Strights, or the Bermuda's) where the quarrelling lesson is read, and how doe they entertaine the time, but with bottle-ale and tabacco?'; app. † by 1690. A geographical pun.

Bernard (or b-); Bernard's law. See Barnard; Barnard's law.

bernice; also bernies. Cocaine: drug addicts': from ca. 1925: 1934, Howard N. Rose (the former); 1942, BVB (the latter). Bernice (for Berenice) is a poetic perversion of burnese, q.v., perhaps via the slovenly bernies.

berries. See sense 3 of:

berry. A dollar: 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler, 'We get a guarantee of six thousand berries—win—lose, or draw. Not so rotten, eh, Irish?'; Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's; March 20, 1926, Flynn's; 1928, Mary C. Sharpe, Chicago May; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1933, s.—and often, as the berries = money. The coin's circularity: the berry's sphericity.—2. A bullet: Jan. 3, 1925, Flynn's, Leverage; ob. Ex its rotundity.—3. Only in (It's) the berries, 'just the thing!'—'Splendid!'—'Swell!': since ca. 1910. 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, s.

bertilloned, 'measured by the police for identification' (Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924), is much more likely to be police j. than criminals' c.

bess; Bess. 'Bess, c. bring bess and glym, c. forget not the instrument to break open the Door and the Dark-lanthorn', B.E., 1698; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, George Andrewes, 'A small instrument to open locks'; 1823, Jon Bee, 'Betty, or Bess—a crooked nail to open locks. Several sizes are carried by cracksmen: they are bent first and hardened afterwards'; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell, 'A pick(lock) of a very simple construction'); 1887, Baumann; by 1895, † in England. Prob. suggested by betty, n., 1.

best, 'to cheat', 'to defraud', as the v. corresponding exactly to bester, was almost certainly c. in its early days (ca. 1845–70): 1859, H; 1865, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), Oct. 7. Cf. S.E. get the better of (a person).

best, get one's money at the. 'To live by dishonest or fraudulent practices, without labour or industry, according to the general acceptation of the latter word; but, certainly, no persons have more occasion to be industrious, and in a state of perpetual action than cross-coves; and experience has proved, when too late, to many of them, that honesty is the best policy; and, consequently, that the above phrase is by no means a-propos': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890.

best, give (a person). To leave, depart from, sever companionship with: 1879, Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.; 1890, F & H; by 1910, it had merged with the s. sense, 'yield to'.

best, give in. To affect repentance: 1867, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1889, B & L; † by 1920. Perhaps to give in (to deliver) one's best.

best hold cannon. 'Professional thieves are contemptuous of amateur [and inexperienced or clumsy] thieves, and have many epithets [for them]. These epithets include "snatch-and-grab thief", "boot-and-shoe thief", and "best-hold cannon";' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937; since ca. 1920. With the best hold he can get—'any old way'.

best mog. A cat-skin, or a coney, fur worn by a bookmaker's wife or woman when he has been very successful: racing: C. 20. In, e.g., Partridge, 1935. Lit., 'best cat': mog = Mog (diminutive of Mary), often applied to domestic animals.

bester. 'The "Bouncers" and "Besters" obtain what they want by betting, intimidating, or talking people out of their property': 1851, p. 32, vol. III, London Labour and the London Poor, where Mayhew might have made it clear that the 'betting' applies to both bouncers and besters, the 'intimidating' to the former, and the 'talking out of' to the latter; 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London; 1859, H, 'A low betting cheat'; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H, who imply that, by then, it is low s. Cf. best.

besting, 'cheating', was, as the vbl n. corresponding to bester, c. of ca. 1850–70; it passed into low s.: 1859, H.

bet on time; gen. as vbl n., betting . . . Being allowed, as one who is sure to pay his debts, after one has lost all the money one has had on one's person: gamesters': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; or, The Rogue's Lexicon; † by 1930. I.e., to bet with the credit allowed at the time.

bet on top. A bogus bet, laid—as a stimulus to betting by the public—by a confederate or a friend of the bookmaker: racing: C. 20. Partridge, 1937, with thanks to George Baker. The bookmaker's clerk inscribes the bet 'on top'—not in the body of the betting-book.

bet one's eyes. See betting his eyes.

Bethlehemites. Christmas-carol singers: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; app. † by 1860. Ex the fact that, prominent among Christmas carols, are those setting forth the blessing connoted by the Nativity, which took place at Bethlehem.

bets(e)y, n. A simple picklock key: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; July 25, 1925, Flynn's; ob. A variant of betty, influenced by bess.—2. A revolver: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy; extant. By personification; but also in allusion to the fact that it opens a hole in the victim; there may even be a sexual antiphrasis.

Betsy or betsy, v. To shoot (a person): 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Ex sense 2 of the n.

Bettee is Nat Bailey's spelling, 1721, of betty, n.

betting his eyes. American gamblers' c., as in: 1859, Matsell, 'A term used by gamblers when a "sucker" looks on at the game, but does not bet'; ob. Cf. S.E. window-shopping, looking at shop windows but purchasing nothing.

betty, n.; Betty. 'Betty . . . An instrument to break a door,' R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665; 1676, Anon., A Warning to House-Keepers, '[House-breakers] have an instrument made about half a yard long, and almost as long over, which they call a Betty, which being chopt under a door, with a little help, it will make it fly off the hinges'; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.: 1707, E. Ward (O.E.D.); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected; 1785, Grose; 1797, Sessions; 1823, Jon Bee (see bess); by 1859, current in New York (Matsell, Vocabulum); 1862, Mayhew, London Labour, IV; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; † in England by 1910. By personification.—2. Hence, 'Betty, cant for the key of the street door': 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; 1809, Andrewes, 'A small instrument to open locks'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A picklock'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; † by 1890.

betty, v. To unbetty, or betty a lock, is to open or relock it, by means of the betty, so as to avoid subsequent detection: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; † by 1910. Ex sense 2 of the n.

betty!, all. 'It is all up! past recovery': ca. 1870-1920: 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H, 'The game is lost!' Ex the s. all my eye and Betty Martin, 'it's all nonsense; it's quite untrue'.

betty-boss. A burglar's 'jimmy' (small crow-bar): 1925, Leverage; slightly ob.

beur, 'a constable' (B & L at beck), is a ghost word.

bever. In J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., there occurs, in the c. glossary, the entry, 'Butter . . . Bever,' which looks like a double error; be(a)ver was never c., nor has it, in its long history, ever meant just butter.

bevie, bevy, bevy; bevali. Beer: 1889, B & L; partly parlyaree, partly low s.; not c. Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934, records bevy, 'to drink'. A drink 'as pitchmen's and cheapjacks' s. Ex L. bibere, via It. bevere, 'to drink'.

bevy omee (or omey or homey). 'A drunkard': pitchmen's and cheapjacks' s. of late C. 19-20. Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934. See preceding entry.

bewer. A woman: Shelta (Irish tinkers' s.) and, to some extent, tramps' c.: since before 1845: 1889, B & L; 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747, 'I 'ires a trap and a fast-trottin' tit, and drives my missus—as fly a bewer, she were, as ever chucked a stall'—valid for 1845; April 22, 1935, Hugh Milner (private letter), 'Tramp's woman—Bewer, Moll, Cow (very vulg.!)'; 1938, Graham Greene, Brighton Rock; extant. The origin is obscure. Perhaps ex Welsh-gypsy bodder, 'to feel'.

beyond, go; gen. go beyant. To be transported: Anglo-Irish, but whether c. or low s. is uncertain: 1845, Wm Carleton Rody, the Rover, 'You will go beyant, and no mistake at all'; † by 1920. I.e., beyond the sea.

beyonek. See bianc.

bhang. See bang, n.

Bi. A Buick car: esp., automobile thieves': app. since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

bianc or beyonek, 'a shilling': parlyaree, not c. The latter form, which occurs in H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks, 1938, is a corruption. bianc = It. bianco, '(a) white (coin)'.

bib, nap, the. See nap the bib.

bible (or B-). The largest size or quantity of lead stolen by a 'blue-pigeon flyer': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, where it is implied that it is that lead (the main haul) which is wrapped around the body; † by 1890. For the 'lay' or dodge, see blue-pigeon, fly the. Opp. prayer-book or testament, qq.v.—2. 'The "bible" is [English] tramp slang for the hawker's little parcel of things which he is supposed to peddle': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (ch., 'Two Tramps in England'); 1931, Chris Massie, The Confessions of a Vagabond, 'Some tramps carry what they call a "bible"—a small wooden box or other handy receptacle in which they can keep small wares . . . and other odds and ends'; 1932, Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinkers' Kitchen; extant. It is a 'passport' to respectability: it shows that he is not begging but vending.

bible, v. To swear upon oath: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant.

Bible-back. 'The "Bible-backs" (religious prison workers),' Convict 2nd, 1938: convicts': since ca. 1925.

bible (or B-)-carrier. 'A person who sells songs without singing them': 1859, H; the ed. of 1864 adds, 'Seven Dials,' a district that was (and had long been) the haunt of criminals; 1890, F & H, who classify it as beggars' c.; app. † by 1910.

bible-sharp, 'a sham clergyman' (W. E. Henley, Villon's Good Night, 1887), is literary, not genuine, c., bible stiff. A minister, missionary, missionary: 1925, Leverage; Aug. 10, 1929, Flynn's; Carroll John Daly, 'The Right to Silence'; extant. Cf. mission stiff.

bibler. One's 'Bible oath', i.e. one's solemn oath: 1828, G. G., History of George Godfrey, III, 175, '“All?” “Every mag of it, that you may take your bibler of”'; either c. >, by 1860, low s., or always low s.; † by 1910. Cf. bible, v.

bice. Two pounds sterling: C. 20. Partridge, 1938. By 1930, also low s.

bice and a roht. Odds of 2½, i.e. 5 to 2: racing: C. 20. 'John Morris' (George Baker) in The Cornhill Magazine, June 1933; Partridge, 1937. Cf. bice with Fr. bis, 'twice'; roht is app. a corruption of half—bice and a half is an alternative form of the phrase.

biddies. Hens' eggs: tramps': C. 20: 1931, Godfrey Irwin. Ex biddy, farmyard s. for a hen: cf. caffler.

biddy, 'a young wench', is not c. but s.—2. See biddies.

biding. 'No sooner was they got to the Biding (or Place where they divide the Booty) but they examined the Contents of their Booties': Jan. 1741, trial of Mary Young in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, pub. in 1742; 1741, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. III (Catherine Lineham), 'Our Bidings', glossed as 'Lodgings'; app. † by 1810. Perhaps ex abiding place.

bien. See bene, adj. (R. Brome, 1641; Randle Holme, 1688; John Hall, 1708.)

bien cove. See bene cove.

bienly. 'Excellently. She wheedled so bienly; she coaxed or flattered so cleverly': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. Current in England ca. 1770-1850; by 1859, used in New York, Matsell; † in U.S.A. by 1900. Ex bien, q.v. at bene, adj.]

big ben or Big Ben. The whistle that blows to announce an attempted escape: Sing Sing; 1935, Hargan; extant. Introduced by some Cockney crook, perhaps. Irwin, however, thinks that it derives rather ex some particular make of alarm-clock than ex Westminster's Big Ben.

big bench, the. The Supreme Court: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; extant. Cf. bench nib.

big bloke. Cocaine: crook and criminal drug-addicts, esp. on the Pacific Coast; since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942; M & B, 1944. Rhyming on coke.

big blow; also blow. A revolver: 1929, Givens; 1929-31, Kernôt; 1934, Rose (both); extant. 'I take it that these two are from "torches" (also sometimes used for a gun), itself from "blow-torch", a device used to burn off paint, to heat metal, etc.' : Godfrey Irwin, letter of March 18, 1938.

735318

big boss. A rich or important 'fence' or receiver of stolen goods : 1872, Diprose's Book about London and London Life; still current, though slightly ob. Self-explanatory.—2. Always the Big Boss : God : U.S.A., mostly tramps' : 1927, R. Nichols & J. Tully, Twenty Below; June 7, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; extant. Cf. Big Guy.—3. A gang leader : U.S. racketeers' : Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant.

big boy (or capital letters), the. The head of a gang of criminals : 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 'The Big Boy can't fix murder. He can fix anything but murder'; March 15, 1930, Flynn's, John Wilstach; 1931, Fred D. Pasley, Al Capone; extant. Cf. big guy, 3.—2. A Federal judge : 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Nov. 5) it was s.—3. At Sing Sing : the principal keeper : 1935, Hargan; extant.

Big Burg, the. New York City : not c., but s. In, e.g., Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 1918. Cf. the Big Smoke, London.

big cough. A heavy bomb, or its detonation : gangsters' : 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough, 'Sometimes we had to let off a "big cough" and wreck the joint'; extant. Echoic meiosis.—2. Hence (?), a 'bold and deliberate murder' : Kernôt, 1929–31; extant.

big crush. A wholesale liberation of prisoners : 1934, Rose; extant. See crush, n., 3.

big day, the. Visiting day : convicts'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

big eye (or eyes). A very watchful, observant, wary person : 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot, 'Feeney's crowd are Big Eyes. They'll be watching the car go out'; 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'Detective . . . big eyes'; 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster! (ditto); extant.

big-eye, v. To observe, to 'case' : 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece, 'He had opened an account in a bank just to big-eye it good'; extant. Ex the n.

big fish. An important convict : ca. 1886 (in Lewis E. Lawes, Cell 202, Sing Sing, 1935); by 1930, ob.—big guy and big shot having virtually superseded it. See fish.

big four. A duck-egg omelette : tramps' : C. 20 : 1931, Stiff, 'There are four duck eggs in the mixture . . . the basic ingredients are four : eggs, bacon, sliced potatoes and alfalfa or clover leaves. It must fry four minutes on a hot fire and it must feed four men. If two men eat it, then it is customary to serve it in two helpings'; 1931, IA, 'Four duck eggs, four potatoes, four onions, and an appetite'; extant.

bigfully. See fully, n.

big game. Vermin; lice : mostly tramps' (British and American) : 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; extant. One hunts them; ironic on their smallness.

big getter. A 'teller of the tale of woe' in the genteel, or even in the grand, manner : since ca. 1910. Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House, 1932. He does—and gets—things in a big way.

big green carpet. A convict's interview with the warden : 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Cf. be called on the carpet.

big gun, 'a prominent man, a noted person, or leader', is classified by Geo. P. Burnham, in Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872, as c.; but it was never lower than s.

Big Guy, the. God : mostly tramps' : 1927, Robert Nichols & Jim Tully, Twenty Below, 'Let him sleep—the Big Guy's yellin' for him. He'll be sleepin' longer this time tomorrow, I guess'; 1927, Kane; by 1928 (Jim Tully, Circus Parade), also circus s.; 1931, Irwin; extant. Cf. big boss, 2.—2. (Either lower case or capitals.) A receiver of stolen goods, esp. and properly in a big way : Nov. 17, 1928, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'Three Curious Burglars'; extant. Cf. big boss, 1.—3. The head of a criminal gang : Dec. 7, 1929, Flynn's, Robert H. Rohde, 'Madigan's Mob'; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; March 3, 1934, Flynn's Major C. E. Russell; 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra; extant.

big hole, n.; also big ole. 'Big Ole. The fellow who tries to show the boss how strong he is. He'll do all your work if you praise him,' Stiff, 1931 : tramps' : since ca. 1920. He makes big holes in the ground?—2. 'A quick stop; an emergency application of the air brake': adopted, ca. 1920, by tramps ex railroad men : 1931, Irwin; extant.

big-hole, v. To stop quickly; to 'jamb on' the air brakes : adopted, ca. 1925, by tramps ex railroad men : 1931, Godfrey Irwin. Ex the n.

big house, the. The workhouse : 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, "As long as they kept out of the 'big house' (the workhouse) she would not complain"; 1859, H; by 1870, proletarian s. Ex its size compared with that of workmen's cottages and apartments.—2. A prison; esp. State's prison or a Federal prison : U.S.A., mostly among yeggs and tramps : 'In a song current in the 1890's,' Jean Bordeaux, letter of Oct. 23, 1945; 1916, The Literary Digest (August, 'Do you speak "Yegg" ?'); 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; 1926, Jack Black; Jan. 1, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, Kane; 1928, Jim Tully, Jarnegan; 1928, Chicago May; 1929, Jack Callahan; July 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, James Spenser, Limey, and innumerable times since; by 1939, however, it was s. in U.S.A.; by 1935, current in Britain as c., which, there, it still is—as, e.g., in David Hume, Destiny is My Name, 1942.

Big House up the River, the. 'There isn't a law-breaker on all Manhattan Island, I suppose, who doesn't know the Big House up the River to be the other name for Sing Sing itself,' Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 1918; ob. See big house, 2.

big joint is an occ. variant of big house, 2; usually the big joint : Jan. 1, 1927, Flynn's (ex-convict, newly apprehended, loq.), 'I can't go back to the big joint without putting up a fight'; extant.

big man, the; or the Big Man. The Pinkerton Detective Agency : 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 'The guns'—thieves—'leave The Big Man's Territory alone, if they can'; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'The . . . Agency, or one of its operatives'; extant. The Pinkerton agents loom big to the small criminal.—2. The brains of a 'dope ring' (association of drug-traffickers) : since ca. 1918. BVB.

big mitt. A leader : 1925, Leverage; ob.—2. 'A confidence game involving fraud in a card game,' E. H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937 : from the later 1920's : 1936 (implied in next entry); 1937, Sutherland quotes a confidence man, who says that by this date, the term is ob. and implies that the big mitt preceded the synonymous 'the duke'. Sleight-of-hand is implied.

big mitt man. A card-sharper: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Cf. big mitt, 2.

big monarcher. A person of note, a bigwig: tramps' (?): 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo Lippi; 1896, F & H, ob. See monarcher.

big nickel. A large sum of money: 1929-31, Kernôt; extant. Humorous meiosis.

big noise, the. The Warden of a prison: April 13, 1929, The Saturday Evening Post, Charles G. Givens; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest, John Caldwell, 'Patter of the Prisons'; extant.

big O. 'A railroad conductor'; railroad s., not c.—though much used by tramps: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'From . . . the Order of Railroad Conductors, or "Big O", to which practically every conductor belongs'.

big ole. See big hole, n.

big one, the. Large profits from theft; a very big theft: 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra; extant. Obviously one is euphemistic for 'booty' or 'theft'.

big papa. A Thompson sub-machine gun: 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece, 'He had a Big Papa out there now and he was as ready as anybody to start a little war'; extant. It talks 'like a father'.

big Peter. 'The last words he ever said were: "Ah, give me a big Peter (narcotic)"', Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; app. † by 1940. An extension of peter, n., 10.

big school. A penitentiary: 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1927, Kane; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'Possibly from its size, but more probably since so many of its "graduates" eventually enter the "big house" or State Prison' (Irwin). Contrast little school.

big screw; usually the Big Screw, the Deputy Warden (of a penitentiary or a prison): 1927, Kane; 1928, Jim Tully, Jarnegan; 1931, Irwin; extant. Ex screw, a warden.

Big Shorty. 'A common nickname for a very big man,' Ersine: C. 20.

Big Shot, the. The head of a gang of criminals: from ca. 1920. In, e.g., E.D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago, 1929; Flynn's, May 24, 1930, J. Allan Dunn, 'That's up to the Big Shot. And, believe me, baby, he's a wise one'; July 5, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; Jan. 1931, The Detective Mysteries, E. D. Sullivan; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; and a mort o' times since that racketeering heyday!—2. Hence (in a prison), a convict with influence: since ca. 1925. Hargan, 1935. 'More often than not this term is used ironically' (Ersine, 1933).

big-shot, adj. Important: since ca. 1925. BVB, 1942. Ex prec.

big-shot connection. 'One who distributes narcotics in wholesale quantities between the "big men" and the peddlers,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic: since the 1920's. See big man, 2, and connection.

big show, the. (The world of) the circus: not c. but circus-men's s. No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904.

big smoke (or capitals), the. Pittsburgh, Pa.:

tramps': C. 20. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. This, the great Pittsburgh, is a mighty centre of heavy industry.

big spot. A gang chief: Aug. 2, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'You could never tell where even a Big Spot was going to get the finger on him'; slightly ob.

big spuds, the. 'Any group in authority, such as a Parole Board, Board of Directors, etc.': C. 20: by 1920, it had, except as 'the Parole Board', > s. Godfrey Irwin, 'An opposite to "small potatoes"—or those with no power'.

big stir. A State prison: C. 20: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; extant.

big store. 'Wealthy gambling house or dive,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; 1931, IA; 1933, Ersine, 'A permanently located gambling house, usually one which pays off the police'; 1934, Rose, 'Gambling house which stays in one place'; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, implies that the term was already current in 1906; extant.—2. A confidence man's headquarters: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. See store.—3. A protected town, i.e., where there is police protection for the criminal: 1936, Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld; extant.

big stuff. "Bagler's big stuff." I got his slang. Big stuff meant that Bagler was a crook, who conducted extensive deals. No petty thievery for a man like Bagler,' Roy W. Hinds, 'Fugitive Swamp' in Flynn's, Feb. 19, 1927; extant.

big tent is a rare variant of big top, 1. Kernôt, 1929-31.

big thing. 'A rich booty': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulary; or, The Rogue's Lexicon; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'A very good prospect; a promising scheme'; ob.

big(-)timer. A clever fellow; a gangster in a big way: from ca. 1920 (in, e.g., George Ingram, Stir Train, 1935); by 1937, police and journalistic s. The adj. big-time, '(of theft) in which preparations are elaborate and prospective gains large' (E. H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937), may, ca. 1912-30, have been c., but by 1930 at the latest it was s., mostly among journalists and the police.

big top. A prison: April 13, 1929, The Saturday Evening Post, Charles Givens, 'The Clatter of Guns'; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest, John Caldwell; June 7, 1930, Flynn's; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Coined by circus-men; among whom the big top is the great main tent.—2. A bank: bank robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant.

Big Town, the. 'In the East, New York City—2. In the West, Chicago,' Ersine: since ca. 1920.

big uncle. A pawnbroker in a big way: Scottish: 1861, James McLevy, The Sliding Scale of Life, 'The brokers, the "big uncles" (the large pawns), and the "half uncles" (the wee pawns), were all to be gone through [by us detectives]'; slightly ob. See uncle.

big wig. A magistrate: 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, III; 1846, anon. translator of E. Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, Pt. 2; † by 1900. With a ref. to a judge's wig.

bil, an abbr. of bilboa, appears earliest in B.E., 1698, thus: 'Bite the Bil from the Cull, c. whip the Sword from the Gentleman's side'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. has bill, a form influenced by S. E. bill, a halberd; † by 1780.

Bilbey's ball is a variant of Beilby's ball. (Grose, 1785).

bilbo, or B-. A sword: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; † by 1880. A shortening of the next.

bilboa. 'Bil-boa, c. a Sword', B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1870. 'Bilbao in Spain was once famous for well-tempered blades' (Grose).—2. Hence, 'any pointed instrument': 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell, Vocabulum); † by 1910.

bilk. 'Bilk, c. to cheat. Bilk the Ratling-Cove, c. to sharp the Coachman of his hire. Bilk'd, c. defeated, disappointed,' B.E., 1698; not later than 1704, Thomas Brown, 'If ever you intend to be my Rival in Glory, you must . . . Bilk your Lodging once a Quarter, and Cheat a Taylor once a year'; in 1725, A New Canting Dict. mentions it among those c. terms which 'we have insensibly adopted . . . into our Vulgar Tongue', from which it would seem that bilk had > s. by ca. 1720, despite Grose's app. belief that it was, in 1785, still c. It may have remained c. in New York until after 1859—Matsell's Vocabulum. Perhaps a thinning of S.E. ba(u)lk, 'to thwart'. Wight, in Mornings at Bow Street, 1824, says: 'From the Moeso-Gothic Bilaican, to cheat, to defraud'; but Moeso-Gothic bilaikan = 'to mock, to deride' and this etymology 'belongs to a pre-scientific age' (O.E.D.).

bilk the blues, 'to circumvent, or escape from, the police', is not c. but low s.

bilker, 'one who "bilks"', may have been c. from ca. 1690 until ca. 1720. In 1702 there was, at Drury Lane, 'an entertainment called Tavern Bilkers' (G. Smeeton). Ex bilk.—2. An embezzler: 1849, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, V, ch. lxxvi; app. † by 1890.

bill. See bil.

bilking, n. Embezzlement: 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; app. either † or low s. by 1890. See bilk.

bilking house. A low drinking-saloon, with or without a cabaret show, but certainly with a number of prostitutes: 1903, Owen Kildare, My Mamie Rose, 'In front of these "joints"—frequently called "bilking houses"—glaring posters, picturing the pleasures within, were displayed in most garish array'; extant—but by 1930 it was low s. See bilk.

bill. A 100-dollar bill (banknote): since ca. 1921. Ersine.

bill, long or short. A long or short term of imprisonment: ca. 1860–1910: much more prob. low s. than c. (B & L, 1889.)

bill-holding, n. 'Catching ducks by a bait and hook': tramps': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 321); extant. The thief holds the duck's bill to keep the bird quiet.

bill of sale, 'a widow's weeds', is not c., even in U.S.A., despite James D. McCabe, New York by Sunlight and Gaslight, 1882 (p. 509).

bill-poster. A passer of counterfeit money (properly, paper money); 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant.

billet, get a. 'In prisons "getting a billet" is being appointed to some office which procures certain advantages for the convict who is fortunate enough to receive this favour': 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; slightly ob. Ex billet, a situation, a job.

billiard slum. 'The mace is sometimes called giving it to 'em on the billiard slum. See Mace': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1890, for I have no faith in F & H's classification (1890) as 'Australian thieves'. For the origin, see letter Q (at end).

billy. W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime, 1839, 'The new term for handkerchiefs is a Billy, for which pickpockets have peculiar terms known only in the trade.

Blood Red Fancy, all red.

Blue Billy, which is a blue with white spots.

Yellow Man, all yellow, if twilled, worth 2s. 6d.

Watersman, sky-coloured, worth 3s.

Randlesman, green, with white spots, 2s.

Yellow Fancy, yellow, with white spots, 2s.

Belcher, a cross striped pattern, 2s.

Cream Fancy, white [? cream] ground with pattern, 3s.

Green King's Man, green ground, with pattern, 5s.; 1839, Brandon (in glossary), 'A silk pocket handkerchief'; 1857, Snowden, 'A silk handkerchief'; by 1860, if not indeed a lustrum earlier, it was street s.—2. Old metal; 1851, Mayhew (see tatting); 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'Stolen metal of any kind'; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1920. Why?—3. Hence (?), 1847, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), May 8 (a 'slung shot'); 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, 'A piece of whalebone or rawhide about fourteen inches long, with an oval-shaped lump of lead at each end, one larger than the other, the whole being covered with buckskin or india-rubber'; 1860, C. Martel, The Detective's Note-Book; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'A policeman's staff'; 1887, G. W. Walling (U.S.A.); by 1889, low s. in England (B & L); 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, "'We croaked Hooper; me in front with a billy when his helmet dropped off, an' him behind with a knife"' ; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; by 1905, s. in U.S.A. too, esp. in the sense, 'a policeman's truncheon'.—4. Hence (?), a short iron crowbar: U.S. burglars': 1848, E. Judson, Mysteries of New York; ob.—5. A tramp: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920; not very usual. Leverage, 1925. So many tramps are named Billy.

Billy Burns the Fox. 'One of the greatest detectives that ever hunted a crook, Mr. Wm. J. Burns, known to the underworld as Billy Burns the Fox,' 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington,' '15 Years in the Underworld'—Flynn's, March 23, 1935: late C. 19—early 20.

Billy Button. Mutton: rhyming s.; but orig.—ca. 1850–70—it was c.: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859 (U.S.A.), Matsell, erroneously Billy Butter.

billy buzman. 'A pickpocket who confines his attention exclusively to silk handkerchiefs': 1889, B & L,—but, to judge from C. Hindley's The True History of Tom and Jerry, 1890, the term existed as early as 1820; 1890, F & H; by 1920, ob.; by 1940, †. See billy, 1, and buzman.

billy-fencer. 'A marine-store dealer': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by 1889 (B & L), low s.—Likewise billy-fencing shop, a marine store: ca. 1840–90, then low s. In, e.g., Partridge, 1937. See billy, 2, and fencer, 2.

billy-fencing shop. A second-hand ironmongery shop that specializes in stolen metal: ca. 1840–1910: 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, p. 417. See billy, 2.

billy-hunting, n. The purchasing of old metal: 1851, Mayhew (see tatting); 1859, H; by 1889

(B & L), low s. See billy, 2.—2. 'Going out to steal pocket handkerchiefs' (F & H): ca. 1850–1910: c. until ca. 1885, then low s.

Billy Muggins. Mutton: esp., Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Prob. because sheep are silly animals and Billy Muggins is a fool.

Billy Ricky. Billericay, Essex; esp. the casual ward there: tramps': mid C. 19–20: in, e.g., W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 1936. By personification, suggested by the first two syllables of Billericay.

bim. Short for bimbo: since the late 1920's: July 27, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan (as term of address); by 1944 (as in Raymond Chandler, The Lady in the Lake), it was police and low s.

bimbo. A 'guy' or 'chap'; a man or, for that matter, a youth: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'I know of one gink who thought he would hold out on the rino and what they done for the bimbo was good and plenty'; Jan. 22, 1927, Roy W. Hinds in Flynn's; 1927, Charles F. Coe, Me—Gangster; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's (in the story by John Wilstach); April 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; May 24, 1930, Flynn's, Robert N. Leath; 1933, Ersine, 'bimbo. A woman'—derivative nuance dating from ca. 1929; April 3, 1937, Flynn's, Richard Sale, who applies it to a couple of girls; by 1938, English also—as in James Curtis, They Drive by Night; by 1939 in U.S.A. and by 1945 in Britain, it was low s. Ex Italian for 'baby' or 'child': coll. for bambino.

bimp. A shilling: beggars' and down-and-outs': since ca. 1910: 1926, Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows; extant. Of the same origin as beong.

bin. 'A pocket' (in coat or waistcoat): ca. 1864, The Chickaleary Cove (quot'n at vestat); 1931, Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Book, 'Outside binn—outside jacket pocket. Waistcoat binn—waistcoat pocket. Top binn—top coat [i.e., top-coat] pocket'; 1932, Arthur J. Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'Ah, she had not gone down his bins then, just looked straight away at his hat, the cunning bitch'; extant. One dips into it for money, whether one's own or another's.—2. A safe: U.S.A.: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Ike never cracked a bin in his life'; ob. Ex the shape.

bind; gen. as past p'ple, bound. To arrest: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'Bound or habbled'—misprint for hobbled—'alias Taken'; app. † by 1810.

binder, 'egg', is classified by Ware, 1909, as 'lower class' (slang). It may, orig. (? ca. 1870), have been c. Ex general belief that boiled eggs, like hot milk (genuinely so), are constipating.

binder, go a. To eat a meal, esp. a satisfying one: New Zealand tramps': since ca. 1920; by 1930, low s. Partridge, 1937. (Perhaps ex a meal consisting mainly of eggs (see binder).)

bindle. A roll—a bundle (of which bindle represents a thinning)—of blankets; esp. such a roll carried by a working tramp: tramps': C. 20, and perhaps since ca. 1890: 1907, Jack London, The Road (see bindle stiff); Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest, article 'Do You Speak "Yegg"?', where it is defined as 'package'; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1928, Chicago May, 'Bindle—blanket or bundle'; 1931, Stiff, 'Bedding roll slung on the back'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; and often since then.—2. A small packet of some drug, e.g. cocaine or heroin: drug addicts': 1922, Emily Ferguson, The Black Candle; 1922, W. H. Wells, 'Words used in the Drug Traffic'; Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's, Earl H. Scott; 1931, Irwin; 1933, Cecil de Lenoir; 1934, Convict; July 25, 1936, Flynn's; 1938, Castle; Nov. 1, 1941, Flynn's, James W. Booth; by 1942, police and journalistic s. Ex sense 1: humorously ironic on the size.

bindle bum. A variant of bindle stiff; 1931, Stiff; extant. See bindle, 1.

bindle graft; bindle man, bindle pusher, bindle shover. Drug traffic; a trafficker in drugs: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'I ran against a bindle man, who was anchored in Chinatown an' I didn't know he was in the bindle graft . . . He missed his step somehow; yuh can trust a hop head for that an' Sammy got wise to th' bum kale; put a crimp in the bindle shover an' he squealed'; Nov. 1, 1941, Flynn's, James W. Booth ('b. pusher'); extant.

bindle stiff. A working tramp: since ca. 1890, to judge by the 'Road-kids and Gay-Cats' chapter of Jack London's The Road, 1907 (he does not define the term); 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler, 'The "bindle stiff" is a tramp who seldom rides, and then only the slowest trains, but is contented usually to walk from town to town'; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; Nov. 20, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black; 1931, Irwin; 1933, James Spenser, Limey; 1934, Convict; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie; 1939, Terence McGovern, It Paid to Be Tough, with the rare alternative bindle guy; extant. 'He takes his name from the roll of blankets he carries, which is known as a "bindle"' (Jack London, The Road); bindle is a thinned form of bundle.—2. A synonym of bindle man; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'The Gray Gangster'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.—3. A drug addict: 1931, Irwin; extant. Like sense 2, it derives ex bindle, 2.

bine is a rare C. 17 variant of bien = bene, adj.—Prob. a mere adaptation for the sake of rhyme, as in the earliest (? the sole) record: R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665, 'Bing out, bien Morts and toure, and toure, | Bing out of the Rome vile bine, | And toure the Cove that cloyd your Duds, | Upon the Chates to trine'.

bing. 'Oh! where will be the culls of the bing | A hundred stretches hence?', writes Matsell in 'A Hundred Stretches Hence', 1859: but this is either a downright error or an unjustifiable shortening of bingo. The phrase cull of the bing may perhaps = a publican. In B & L, 1889, bing is defined as 'a liquor shop'—but on what authority? To me, the entire thing is suspect.—2. A (small) packet of any drug: 1922, Dialect Notes, W. H. Wells, 'Words Used in the Drug Traffic'; 1931 (implied in bing room); 1931, IA, 'A dose of drug'; 1940, Leo L. Stanley, Men at Their Worst (ditto; spelt 'binge'); extant. Prob. a blend of bang, n., and bindle, 2.—3. Hypodermic injection of a drug: addicts': since ca. 1925. BVB, 1942, cites also the variant bingo: bing on stingo. Ex sense 2, assisted by bang, n.

bing, v.i., in C. 16—early 18 often spelt byng. To go; depart: 1566, Harman, 'Bynge a waste, go you hence' (see next entry); ibid., 'Byng we to rome vyle . . . Go we to London'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands (bing and binge); 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Bing out, bien Morts, and toure, and toure'; 1688, Holme, 'Bing, go or come'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'To go'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859, current in U.S.A.—Matsell, Vocabulum, "'Bing we to New-York"' ; by 1880, † in Britain. Prob. echoic: cf. the certainly echoic:—2. V.t., to open: U.S.A.: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant.

bing a waste; bing a wast; bing awast; bing avast. Gen. in imperative = our modern coll. 'get out (of this)!' : mid-C. 16–18: Harman, 1566, 'Bynge a waste, go you hence'; ibid., 'Bynge, we a waste to the lygh pad . . . let us go hence to the hygh waye'; Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 1611, 'Avast to the pad, let us bing'; 1688, Holme (bing a wast); 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Bing-Awast, Get you hence: Begone; haste away'; Grose, 'Bing avast; get you gone,' the avast form being unknown before C. 17. The word was, it would seem, † by 1850—except in literary revivals and except perhaps in New York (witness Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859). App. a waste is a c. perversion of the † S.E. aways, 'away', with a pun on S.E. to waste (as run to waste); the avast form was prob., in C. 18, confused at times with the nautical avast.

bing room. 'A resort or room where drug addicts meet to "cook up" or prepare and consume their dose of the drug,' Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1922. BVB, 1942, applies it to any 'dope den'. See bing, n., 2.

bing the hanger. See hanger, quot'n of 1929.

bingavast is Matsell's script form of bing avast.

binge, n. and v. See bing, n. and v.

bingo, n. Brandy: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Brandy or Geneva' (Gin); 1785, Grose, 'Brandy or other spirituous liquor'; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee, 'A dram of any sort'; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad, "'You don't lush, Sir", said Mr. Jopling to Mr. Pickwick. "Pass the bingo, Lipman, and let the gentleman make himself a stinger"' ; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859, loosely in New York, 'liquor'—Matsell's Vocabulum; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham (U.S.A.), 'Whiskey, brandy, or other strong drink'; 1874, H; 1887, Baumann, '. . . alter Spruch [an old saying] b with an i, i with an n, n with a g, g with an o, and his name was Little Bingo'; by 1889 (B & L), † in Britain. Origin: either a blend of 'brandy' + stingo or ex binge on the analogy of stingo.—2. Hence, whiskey, or other spirit: from ca. 1860 in U.S.A., says IA, 1931.—3. See bing, n., 3.

bingo, adj. Brandy-pimpled or brandy-red: 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham, 'Strike me blind if my sees don't tout your bingo muns in spite of the darkmans'—a usage that is suspect. Ex the n.

bingo(-)boy. 'A great Drinker or Lover thereof' (i.e., of brandy): 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'A dram drinker'; 1809, Andrewes, 'A male dram drinker'; 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859, current in New York, though loosely for 'a drunken man' (Matsell's Vocabulum); 1887, Baumann; by 1890, † in England; by 1910, † in U.S.A. See bingo.

bingo(-)club. 'A set of Rakes, Lovers of that Liquor' (brandy): 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., '. . . of such Liquors', i.e., of either brandy or gin; † by 1810. See bingo.

bingo(-)mort. 'A Female-Drunkard, a She-Brandy-Drinker', A New Canting Dict., 1725, but the term prob. arose within a year of bingo boy; 1785, Grose, 'A female dram drinker'; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee (b. mott); 1848, Sinks of London (id.); by 1859, current in New York (Matsell, Vocabulum); 1882, James D. McCabe, New York; † in England by 1890, and in U.S.A. by 1910. See bingo and mort.

bingo mott. See the 1823 ref. in the preceding entry.

bin. See bin, 1.

binne vet. 'The lucky man who reaps the lion's share of any deal [e.g., theft] gets the "binne vet" (probably a corruption of benefit),' The Cape Times, May 23, 1946: South Africa: late C. 19–20. The true explanation of the term is that in Afrikaans, binnevet = suet; lit., it is binne, 'inside' + vet, 'fat' (D. R. D'Ewes).

Binnie Hale, the. See ship under sail.

binny. 'Overcoat. Especially one with big pockets for concealing loot,' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; since ca. 1910. A variant of benny (perhaps influenced by S.E. bin).

binte. An overcoat: 1931, Irwin; extant.

biped-gathering. Poultry-stealing: 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (glossary); prob. in use (not very general use, either) only ca. 1875–1900. A punning variation of beak(er)-hunting.

birch broom. A room: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1870, low rhyming s.; by 1880, gen. s.

bird, n. See 'Browne's cant vocabulary', wherein the sporting tendency of the terms is to be remarked.—2. See birds of a feather.—3. A prisoner, esp. a convict: U.S.A.; ca. 1900, Downey's Peter Napoleon Campana Songster; by 1930, †. A bird in a cage, cf. sense 5.—4. 'He's just out of "bird"—that's jail; it is sometimes called "boob",' Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 1924; by 1934 (Philip Allingham, Cheapjack) it was pitchmen's and cheapjacks' s.—5. Hence, a (previous) conviction: since ca. 1925: 1931, Brown, 'The bogey gave him a right coating. This, with Jack's bird, got him weighed off to the Home-of-Rest for five pennyworth'; 1943, Black.—6. Anyone not in the gang to which the speaker belongs: U.S.A.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Prob. a particular application of the mid-C. 19–20 Am. s. bird, 'a person'.

bird, v. 'To deceive; to cheat; to debase,' Leverage, 1925; extant.

bird dog. A man that looks for wrecked cars for thieves to buy: 1929, The Saturday Evening Post; Feb. 19, 1935, The New York Sun; extant.—2. A slick bond-seller's tout, working on commission: commercial underworld: since ca. 1920. Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering, 1931.

bird is flown, the. A c.p. of ca. 1810–60, signifying 'the fellow has got out of his gaol or hiding-place'. Jon Bee, 1823.

bird-lime, n. Time: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell); by 1870, low rhyming s.; by 1880, gen. s.—2. Hence, esp. as a prison-sentence, it is late C. 19–20 c. in South Africa (J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946).

bird-lime, v. 'Birdlimed, . . . convicted for another person's crime,' Baker, 1945: Australian: C. 20. Ex the n.

bird-lime can. A prison: 1928, Chicago May; slightly ob. See the elements.

bird-taker. A sodomite: C. 20. BVB. Cf. birdie.

bird-cage. A brothel: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Where bird = 'prostitute', as it does in s.

birdcage, the. 'The death cell, known to us as the Birdcage,' David Quentin: since ca. 1920: 1935, Hargan—any prison cell; extant. No escape thence.

birdcage hype. A destitute drug-addict that finds it very hard to obtain drugs: since ca. 1930. BVB. Birdcage connotes 'chicken-feed'; see hype, n.

Birdcage Walk. 'That walled stone alley roofed in with iron lattice work which leads from the Criminal Court to Newgate Gaol. It is pretty generally known amongst older ruffians as "Birdcage Walk",' Thos. Archer, The Pauper, The Thief, and the Convict, 1865; ob. A prison is a cage, the prisoner a bird—a canary.

birdie. A male homosexual: C. 20. BVB. Cf. baby.

birdie stuff. Powdered drug(s): drug traffic: C.20. BVB. Cf. canned stuff, q.v.

bird's eye. See 1818 quotation in bird's eye wipe; earlier in blue bird's eye.—2. A small, or a mild, dose (esp. by injection) of a narcotic: American drug-addicts': since the 1920's. Ersine, 1933; Convict, 1934; BVB, 1942. Only so much as would fill a bird's eye.

bird's eye fogle. (Tait's Magazine, April 1841, 'Flowers of Hemp'; 1889, B & L). An occ. variant of:

bird's eye wipe. A handkerchief with coloured 'eyes' like those of a bird: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1818, Pierce Egan, Boxiana, I, 167, 'The blue silk bird's-eye graced the appearance of the backers of the Chicken'; 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, both forms; ca. 1830, the term > s.—though still low. See wipe, n.

bird's nest, make a. To 'put putty in the hole drilled in the safe,' Rose, 1934: safe-blowers': since ca. 1910. Ex birds' use of mud to strengthen their nests.

birds of a feather. 'Rogues of the same gang': 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, but prob. the term was s. by 1760 or thereabouts. For the semantics, cf. canary bird and choir bird, punning on queer bird; but actually ex the S.E. phrase, birds of a (= one) feather, 'those of like character' (O.E.D.).

birdseye. See bird's eye, 2.

birk is c. back-slang for crib, 'a house (to burgle)': ca. 1860–1910. B & L, 1889.

biscuit, catch (or find) with a; usually in form caught . . . or found . . . 'They had to be caught with the goods or, as the racketeering slang went, found with a biscuit,' J. Allan Dunn in Flynn's, Dec. 13, 1930; 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'Caught with incriminating evidence . . . caught with a biscuit'; extant.

Biscuit Factory, the. Reading Gaol: ca. 1890–1930. Partridge, 1937. Closed down ca. 1930, the prison adjoined Huntley & Palmer's huge biscuit factory at Reading (in Berkshire, England).

biscuit-shooter. 'Camp waiter or hash slinger. Also a flunkey,' Stiff: 1931: tramps': from ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A waitress or short-order cook'; 1934, Rose; extant. At such eating-houses as a tramp frequents, the waiters or waitresses 'shoot' the food at the customers.

As a restaurant, or an eating-house, waitress, the term is s., and was used by Owen Wister in 1898 (D.A.E.); this nuance constitutes the origin of the c. term.

bishop, n. A burglar's small crowbar: since ca. 1930. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941, 'The bishop, cane, iron, or stick. All mean a jemmy.' It bestows a blessing upon the burglar.

bishop, v. 'To bishop, a term among horse dealers, for burning the mark into a horse's tooth, after he has lost it'—the mark—'by age; by bishopping a horse is made to appear younger than he is,' Grose, 1785: possibly c., but slightly more prob. s. Perhaps ex 'bishoped' milk; i.e., burnt milk.—2. A synonym of christen: 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1890. A bishop may officiate at a very important christening.

bit, n. Money: 1607, Dekker, Jests to make Merie (O.E.D.); 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'What store of Bit he hath in his Bay [misprint for 'Bag'], what money he hath in his purse'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1789, George Parker; 1797, Potter (bitt); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1819, T. Moore; 1823, Bee; 1831, W. T. Moncrieff, Van Diemen's Land; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H. 'Any sum of money'; 1887, Baumann; by 1900, †. Origin? Perhaps bit was suggested by bite, n., 1.—2. Hence, a purse: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1744, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1859, H; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'A purse, or any sum of money'; app. † by 1890.—3. Hence, a booty; a thief's haul: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'We shall napp a rum Bit', capture a considerable booty; 1787, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, Dec., p. 37, col. 2; in late C. 19, it merges with sense 5.—4. A sentence to imprisonment: since ca. 1860; July 10, 1871, Sessions (see quot'n at midge); 1884, A. Griffiths, Chronicles of Newgate, II, 407, ' . . . Leicester where they did their "bit"' (glossed: 'sentence'); 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; 1891, J. A. Riis (U.S.A.); 1893, Confessions of a Convict (U.S.A.); 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey (id.); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft (id.); 1903, Owen Kildare, My Mamie Rose (id.); 1904, H. Hapgood (id.); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (id.); 1906, O. Kildare, My Old Bailiwick (id.); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1918, low s. Short for bit (or space) of 'time'.—5. One's share of the booty; U.S.A.: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, 'I handed him his "bit"' ; 1900, G. R. Sims, In London's Heart; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'The bulls shook him down for their bit. The police compelled them [sic] to share the proceeds of the robbery with them'; 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 3.—6. 'A gag applied to cons in the hole; a bridle', Ersine: Am. convicts': since ca. 1920. Ex S.E. bit and brace?—7. Twelve and a half dollars: U.S.A.: since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933, 'Formerly . . . twelve and one-half cents'.—8. A burglar's small crowbar (a jemmy): Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Ex the mechanical senses of S.E. bit.

bit, ppl adj. See bite, v. ('Bit, c. Robb'd, Cheated or Outwitted', B.E., 1698.)

bit, nap the. To take the money or to accept money to perform some act or task: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'Exasperated by this injury, he offers half-a-guinea, if any body will inform him who has used him thus; somebody naps the bit and tells him,' and then makes himself scarce; the term being used esp. in reference to a 'rum snoozer' (q.v.). Ex bit, n., 1, and nap, v., 4.

bit, queer. See queer bit.

bit, snack the. See snack the bit.

bit cull. A coiner: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (bitt cull); 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. Ex bit, n., 1; here cull simply = fellow, chap, man.

bit-faker. A coiner of counterfeit money: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1909, Ware; ob. Ex bit, n., 1.

bit-faking, n. 'Coining base money': 1812, J. H. Vaux; ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack; 1889, B & L, 'Coining or forging money'; 1890, F & H; ob.

bit-maker. A counterfeit-coiner: 1849, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, V, ch. lxxi; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1890, F & H; by 1900. See bit, n., 1.

bit o' dirt. A bill: tramps'; since ca. 1910: April 22, 1935, Hugh Milner (in a private letter). By humorous depreciation.

bit of gig. 'Fun: A spree, etc.': 1823, Egan's Grose; app. † by 1890. Perhaps jig.

bit of hollow. See hollow.

bit of lamb's wool. See lamb's wool.

bit of leaf. See leaf, 3.

bit of nifty. See nifty, n.

bit of stiff. See stiff, bit of.

bit of this, a. 'Temporary marital relations,' Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935: tramps'; C. 20. Cf. low s. have a bit, 'to copulate'.

bit of under. See under.

bit-smasher. An utterer (a distributor) of counterfeit coins: 1797, Potter, Dict.; 1809, Andrewes (bitt-s.); 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1930. See bit, n., 1, and smasher.

bitch. 'A tin-can lamp with a shirt-tail wick. See bug,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, records it. 'So called from the [railroad s. name for] torch and by a locomotive engineer in "oiling around" and under his engine' (Irwin).—2. A catamite 'road kid': tramps': since ca. 1920: 1931, Stiff; by 1930 at the latest, British c. for any pathic, as in James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936, 'Another bitch goes up and speaks to him and gets away with him in a taxi'; 1942, BVB. Ex bitch, a woman that, apt to become horizontal, is any gay dog's mark.

bitch, v. 'To yield, or give up an attempt through fear'; 1785, Grose, Prob. c. at first, but certainly s. by 1840. Ex a bitch's usually greater docility as compared with a dog's.

bitches' bastard. A particularly obnoxious warder: convicts': C. 20. Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940. I.e., a whoreson.

Bitches' Heaven. Boston, Massachusetts: tramps': C. 20: 1931, Godfrey Irwin: extant. 'The city was once noted for the number of cheap prostitutes to be found there; and hobohemia, concluding that conditions must be ideal for the sisterhood, coined the phrase' (Irwin).

bite, n. Money: 1552, Gilbert Walker, Dice-play, 'Whensoever ye take up a couzin, be sure, as near as ye can, to know aforehand what store of byt he hath in his bag; that is what money he hath in his purse, and whether it be in great cogs or in small, that is, gold or silver'; 1592, Robert bite, v. To cheat: 1552, in cross-bite, q.v.; 1676, Coles, 'Bite, c. To cheat'; 1698, B.E., 'Bite the Biter, c. to Rob the Rogue, Sharp the Sharper, or Cheat the Cheater. Bite the Cully, c. to put the cheat on the silly Fellow'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; in 1725, A Canting Dict. mentions it as having penetrated to and > gen. in s.: since ca. 1720, therefore, it has been s.; it may, however, have remained c. in New York until ca. 1870—witness Matsell's Vocabulum.—2. To steal; to rob: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-keepers (see blow, bite the); ibid., 'We bite the Culley of his cole'; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Bite the Roger, c. to Steal the Portmanteau'; 1698, B.E., 'Biting the Ken, c. Robbing the House'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1718, C. Hitching; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1738, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. IV; 1785, Grose; by 1859, current in New York (see Matsell); 1889, B & L; † by 1900. Prob. ex sense 1.—3. In U.S.A., to sentence, to convict (an arrested or imprisoned person): 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1910. Ex the effect of the verdict.—4. The Australian con-men's and vagrants' sense 'to borrow money from' is C. 20 low s., not c. (Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, 1941; Baker, 1945.) bite a or the blow. See blow, bite a.

Greene, The Second Part of Conny-catching, 'He was bitten of all the bite in his bung'; app. † by 1700. Perhaps because money bites—makes an impression.—2. The female pudend: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, conveys it thus, 'A Bite, secreta () mulierum'; 1698, B.E., 'a Woman's Privities . . . The Cull wapt the Morts bite, c. The Fellow enjoyed the whore briskly'; 1725, Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1850. The origin is problematic. It may be a mere phonetic variant of bit, n., 1.; or 'a bite of what one needs—a "tasty morsel"'.—3. 'A Rogue, Sharper or Cheat': 1698, B.E.; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1725, A New Canting Dict. This sense would seem to have become s. by 1742 at the latest, for it was at that date used by Fielding without any c. connotation. It derives ex sense 1 of the v.—4. A meal: Australian tramps' and vagrants': C. 20. Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, 1941, 'Shabby-looking men . . . comparing "hand-outs" and "bites" and good towns and "hungry tracks"'. Cf. dial. a bite and a sup.

bite the ear, 'to borrow money from (a person)', is not c., but s.; at first, low s.

bite the lug; bite (someone's) lug. To obtain, by trickery, something from (a person): perhaps orig. c., but prob. always low s. Word Lore, Oct. 1928, F. C. Taylor, 'The Language of Lags'.

bite the peter (or the roger). See bite, v., and peter, n., 1.

bite the tooth. To be successful: ca. 1870–1930: 1909, J. Redding Ware, Passing English. 'Origin unknown,' Ware: and it is something of a puzzle. Perhaps the semantics are those implicit in S.E. toothsome, 'pleasant to eat'.

biter, a sharper, seems—see quotation at foiler—to have been c. in the earliest record (1666, The Nicker Nicked), but to have > s. by 1700 at latest and S.E. by ca. 1710, to judge by its occurrence in both Addison and Steele. Ex bite, to deceive, to swindle.—2. 'A lascivious rampant wench': 1785, Grose; † by 1900. Not certainly c.: more prob. low s.—3. "Biters . . . They're the wise lice in this racket," he explained. "They come along and bite you for as much as they think they can get . . . They know there's a lot of heat around us . . . Only the biters are pikers. You can usually get rid of them for a finif,"' Al Hurwitch in Flynn's, June 4, 1932: U.S. racketeers': since ca. 1920. In The Saturday Evening Post, of May 22, 1937, C. Ryley Cooper defines biters in much the same way; extant.

biter of peepers. See peters, biter of.

bitt. See bit, n., 1.

bitty. A skeleton key: ca. 1880–1930: 1909, Ware, 'Bitties. (Thieves'.) Evasive term for skeleton-keys.' Ware's 'evasive term' prob. explains the origin: a skeleton key is, after all, a 'bitty'—a 'little bit of a thing'; cf. also the mechanical senses of S.E. bit.

bivvy, 'beer', is not c. but parlyaree (H, 1859, "Shant of bivvy", a pot or quart of beer'). Prob. ex the It. bevere (L. bibere), to drink.

biyeghin, 'stealing', is Shelta. B & L, 1889.

biz. 'Business; occupation; object; trade; calling', is classified by Geo. P. Burnham, in Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872, as c.; it was s. as early as 1862, and by ca. 1890 it was coll. See D.A.E.

biz (or business), the. Narcotics; the necessary 'gadgets': drug addicts' and traffickers': C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. the use of the trade by various professions and esp. that of business.

bizzie drag. A (Scotland Yard) Flying Squad car: 1934, R. Thurston Hopkins, Life and Death. I.e., a 'busies' drag': detectives' carriage: see busy and drag, n., 3. For bizzie cf. s. biz, 'business'.

blaar. A cap: South Africa: late C. 19–20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Afrikaans c.: ex Dutch blaar, 'a blister': the cap being regarded as a swelling on the head. (In normal Afrikaans, blaar is 'a leaf'.)

black, n. See black friars!—2. See black, the.—3. A blackmailer: 1932, Jock of Dartmoor, Human Stories of Prison Life, 'Blackmailers (blacks)'; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1937, Partridge; 1940, D. Hume, Invitation to the Grave; extant.

black, v. To blackmail: since the middle 1920's: 1932, Jock of Dartmoor, Dartmoor from Within, 'The little man will think twice before he attempts to "black" the next prison pall whom he may chance to meet'; 1937, Partridge; 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too; 1938, F. A. Stanley, A Happy Fortnight; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime; 1943, Black; extant.

black, at the. Engaged in blackmail: since ca. 1920: 1931, Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Book. See:— black, the. Blackmail: 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13, "Are you trying to put the black on me?"—"Blackmail?"'; 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals, 'In a certain flat not a great way from Shaftesbury Avenue there is located the headquarters of a society known to the Underworld as the "Black Club". In criminal parlance, "black" is merely an abbreviation of black-mail and the "Black Club" exists for the purpose of levying toll upon its victims, who pay for silence'; 1929, Edgar Wallace, The Black (a collection of stories on the theme of blackmail); 1931, Brown; 1931, Mrs Cecil Chesterton, Women of the Underworld, 'Chapter Three; The Dreadful

Business of the Black'; 1932, Jock of Dartmoor, Human Stories of Prison Life; 1933, David Hume, Crime Unlimited; 1934, Axel Brace, School for Scoundrels; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'Putting the old black on me'; 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; 1937, Charles Prior; 1937, J. J. Connington, A Minor Operation; 1938, John G. Brandon, The Frame-Up; 1939, Jim Phelan, In the Can; 1942, David Hume, Destiny Is My Name; and often since.

black, put the. 'The confederate who masks an accomplice—shields him while he works—is "putting the black,"' David Hume, Half-way to Horror, 1937; extant. A mask is usually black.—2. Earlier, in U.S.A., to practise blackmail: 1929–31, Kernôt. See black, the.

black, wear the. To (permit oneself to) be blackmailed; to get blackmailed: 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too; extant. See preceding entry.

black, work the. See work . . .

black act is George Andrew's error (1809) for black art; it is repeated in Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859, and again in F & H, 1890.

black and tan. 'A low dive frequented by both whites and negroes', Leverage, 1925; 1928, H. Asbury, The Gangs of Old New York; 1933, Walter C. Reckless, Vice in Chicago; 1936, Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; by 1940, low s. From the evidence adduced by the D.A.E., the term was current as early as 1875—and perhaps always s. Compare black and tan joint (itself c. in ca. 1890–1900, i.e. until it > low s.), explained in C. W. Willemse's autobiography, Behind the Green Lights, 1931, as 'a hangout for white and colored girls and patronized by white men and Negroes'.

black and white. Tonight: 1909, Ware, who classifies it 'as "thieves' rhyming"; by 1915, no longer c.—2. Tea (the beverage): tramps': since ca. 1920: 1933, Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby; extant. The term exists also, quite independently (I believe), in Glasgow low s.—see Partridge, 1937. The tea being black, the milk (and the sugar) being white.

black and white work. 'No black and white work (writing), mind: you know the proverb, "writings are men, words but women"', Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III, 1829: C. 18–mid-19.

black angel. A fugitive from justice: since ca. 1925. In, e.g. Hargan, 1935. Angel, because he 'flies'; black, because he is hardly innocent.

black arse, 'a kettle', may possibly have been c. in the early C. 18. In the glossary of c. in the Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708, we find: 'Black-Arse, a Copper or Kettle'. It derives from the pot calls the kettle black arse, which is the late C. 17–18 form of the pot calling the kettle black.

black art. Lock-picking; burglary thereby: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage; 1592, Greene, The Second Part of Conny-catching, defines the term thus: 'The gaines gotten, Pelfrey. The pickelocke is called Charme. He that watcheth, a Stond. Their Engines, Wresters. Picking the lock, Farsing,' ibid., 'The Black Art is picking of locks, and to this busie trade two persons are required, the Charme and the Stand: the Charm is he that doth the feat, and the Stand is he that watcheth: there be more that do belong to the burglary for convaing away the goods, but only two are imploid about the lock . . . well may it be called the blacke art, for the Devill cannot do better than they in their faculty'; 1592, Greene, A Disputation (whorish Nan to pickpocket Laurence), 'You know Laurence that though you [men] can foyst, nyp, prig, lift, courbe, and use the blacke Art, yet you cannot cros-bite without the helpe of a woman'; this account is plagiarized by Dekker in The Belman of London, 1608; 1785, Grose, 'The art of picking a lock',—but I suspect the term to have been † by 1690, for not much reliance is to be placed upon Jon Bee's inclusion of the term in 1823. It is recorded as current in U.S.A. in 1924: see black artist.

black artist; black art. Leverage, 1925, defines the latter as 'burglary' and its derivative, black artist, as 'a burglar': his glossary being, in the main, trustworthy, the recording cannot be merely ignored.

black book (or B—B—), the. That book in which the prisoners' names, ages, addresses, etc., are entered when the arrested persons enter gaol: prisoners': C. 17 (and perhaps C. 18). Wm Fennor, The Compter's Commonwealth, 1617, 'I no sooner was entered . . . but a fellow . . . called me to a book (no Bible or Divinity, but rather of Negromancy, for all the Prisoners called it the Blacke-booke) comming to it, bee demanded by name'.

black bottle, n. 'Boys . . . had . . . told me how doctors and nurses had given the mysterious Black Bottle to sick people. And that was the last ever heard of them. The Black Bottle contained some deadly poison Asked why he did not apply at the County Hospital for aid, the old vagrant replied, "I got a chance outside, but they'll croak me sure there. I doan wanta die a-suckin' the Black Bottle." Granted that this may be nearly all superstition, yet its root may be planted in fact. At any rate, nearly all vagrants believe it,' Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 1925: not c. but tramps' folk-lore. 'Dean Stiff' and Godfrey Irwin (the latter especially) mention the legend, so strong that black bottle > synonymous with 'poison': as 'poison' the term is perhaps to be regarded as tramps' c. of C. 20.

black-bottle, v. 'To poison; to give knock-out drops to a person'; Leverage, 1925; extant. See the n.; Leverage defines black bottle as 'poison; knock-out drops'.

black box, 'a lawyer', is not c. but s., dating from late C. 17; B.E. has it, and Grose erroneously classifies it as c. Ex the small black tin boxes in which clients' papers are kept.

black cap and white sheep. 'Burglaries are often committed on the information given away by servants, but . . . the servant is usually quite unaware . . . The young man who walks out with her, and takes a sympathetic interest in her employers' affairs, rarely takes a hand in the actual work. He is known as a "black cap" or a "white sheep", and is usually looked upon as useful in his way, but a bit too soft for the hard grind of the business,' Clarence Rook, The Hooligan Nights, 1899; app. † by 1920.

black cattle. Lice: 1785, Grose. Contrast cattle and sad cattle.

black cloud. A Negro: mostly convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant.

Black Club, the. See black, the, ref. of 1926.

black-coat blackguard. 'One'—presumably a swindler or a thief—who takes upon himself the appearance of a Clergyman' (Andrewes, 1809), may be c. but is prob. s.

black cove dubber, 'the devil'—Potter, 1797—is gravely suspect; and so is Andrewes's 'Gaoler, turnkey' (1809), though this is more likely to be correct.

black diamonds, coals: not c. (despite Grose).

black dog. Current ca. 1705–25 (recorded first in Luttrell, 1706, as quoted in John Ashton's Social Life in the Age of Queen Anne, 1882, and last in Swift, Drapier's Letters, 1724: O.E.D.), it is mentioned in Alexander Smith's Highwaymen, 1714, thus: 'He learn'd the Art of making black Dogs, which are Shillings, or other pieces of Money made only of Pewter, double wash'd'.

black-faced is a convicts' term of opprobrium, as applied to persons: since the 1920's. In, e.g., Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943. With an implication of bastardy, the father being a black man, the mother white.

black-faced job. 'A larceny, housebreaking, burglary,' Black, 1943: prob. throughout C. 20. Perhaps suggested by:

black-faced mob. "'I . . . joined a black-faced mob in the Midlands"', glossed as 'A mob or gang of burglars who blacken their faces to conceal their identity and trust to violence rather than to skill', F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, 1893, in a passage valid for 1845; † by 1910. See mob, 2.

black friars!; blackfriars!; or either with capital. Sometimes shortened to black, as in the earliest example, Nov. 1839, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey (p. 141). Look out!: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue (Blackfriars); by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulary); 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; by 1910, † both in England and in U.S.A. Perhaps an historical allusion, by some educated crook, to the etymological origin of Blackfriars Bridge.

black(-)hander. 'Extortionist, terrorist, swindler,' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: ca. 1914–40. With ref. to The Black Hand (a secret society).

black hole, the. The dungeon in a convict prison: 1871, State Prison Life (at Jeffersonville, S. Indiana); app. † by ca. 1940. Ex the military sense, 'lock-up or guard-room' or ex gen. S.E. sense, 'a place of confinement for punishment'.—2. 'That "black hole" was the muzzle, the business end of a gun . . .; the latest slang of racketdom,' J. Allan Dunn in Flynn's, April 19, 1930; ibid., also 'the little black hole'; extant.

black house. A prison: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900—if not, indeed, by 1880. Ex black as associated with gloom both physical and moral.

Black Jack. 'A nick-name given to the Recorder by the Thieves': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1823, Jon Bee, 'The Recorder for the time being'; app. † by 1900.

black jack, n. See preceding entry.—2. A loaded club, a bludgeon; a policeman's truncheon (U.S.: billy): U.S.A.: 1895 (D.A.E.); 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Irwin, 'A short slung-shot or sandbag used by police or thugs'; by 1935, police and journalistic s. In colour, black or dark brown; jack = Jack, a personification.

black-jack, v. To hit with a bludgeon: 1905 (D.A.E.); by 1935, s. Ex prec.

black joke. 'Black Joke. A popular tune to a song, having for the burthen, "Her black joke and belly so white": figuratively the black joke signifies the monosyllable' (puendum muliebre): 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. But the term, app. current ca. 1780–1840, is much more likely to have been low s. than c.

black knob. See black nob.

black-leg, 'a turf swindler', is usually taken to have been, orig., s.; but it seems to have been c. (until, say, 1800) in the meaning given by George Parker, A View of Society, 1781, in his article on levanters: 'These are of the order and number of Black-Legs, who live by the Broads'—cards—'and the Turf'. The origin is thus treated by Grose, 1785: 'So called perhaps from their appearing generally in boots, or else from game cocks, whose legs are always black'.

black-legged family, the. Gamblers at horse-races: 1828, George Smeeton, Doings in London; app. † by 1890. With reference to black-leg and family, qq.v.

black Maria; B—M—; b—m—. 'The van that conveys prisoners to gaol—Black Maria'. J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London, 1869, but prob. current since ca. 1840, its use in 1847, being recorded by D.A.E.; by 1877 (see Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, p. 3), it was s. in England; 1877, Bartlett, Americanisms, 4th ed.; 1882, J. D. McCabe, New York; 1891, Darkness and Daylight (U.S.A.); 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story; by 1895, s. in U.S.A. By personification: the van is black and Maria was perhaps suggested by the letters V.R. (Victoria Regina) painted on its sides; the ria of 'Victoria' may have evoked Maria, of which Ria is a Cockney shortening. In C. 20 usage—certainly since ca. 1920—the predominant American sense is 'patrol wagon' (Godfrey Irwin, in private letter of Feb. 6, 1937).

black meat. Negresses as prostitutes in, e.g., brothels for white men: white-slavers': C. 20. Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940. Cf. white meat.

black mummer, 'a dirty dog, a malicious mummer, a man with a black beard' (Potter, Dict., 1797), is suspect.

black muns. 'Hoods and Scarves of Alamode'—a thin, light, glossy, black silk (O.E.D.)—'and Lustrings', B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict., where it is printed blackmuns; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. They partly obscure the face (muns).

black nob (or knob). A lawyer: ca. 1790–1850. E.g., in George Andrewes, A Dict. of Cant and Slang, 1809; Sinks of London, 1848. Lit., a person of importance, dressed in black.

black ointment. 'Pieces of raw meat': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell, Vocabulum); 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; slightly ob. It soothes dogs and men.

black plaster. A guiding or a distinguishing mark used by burglars: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary); ob. Ex the material used for the purpose.

black silk. See black smoke.

black slug. A clergyman; a priest: 1845, anon. translator of Eugene Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, ch. XXIX; † by 1900. Ex colour of dress and anti-clericalism.

black smoke or black silk. Opium: C. 20.

Kernôt, 1929–31. Silk: ex the 'smoothness'; black, because it is!

black smoker. An opium-smoker: May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant. Ex black smoke.

black-spice racket. The practice of robbing chimney-sweepers of their soot-bags and soot: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; † by 1890 (F & H).

black spot. An alias: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Less than clear to the police.—2. A 'dope den', esp. for opium: since ca. 1925. BVB, 1942. Cf. black stuff.

black spy, or B—S—. The devil: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who does not, however, classify it as c., the term having prob. > s. ca. 1770, although it may have remained c. in New York until ca. 1870—witness Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859.—2. Hence, a constable; an informer: 1797, Potter; 1823, Egan's Grose ('an informer'); 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.: id.); 1848, Sinks of London (id.); by 1889 (B & L), low s.

black strap. As 'Bene (good) Carlo wine; also port', and as 'a task of labour imposed on soldiers at Gibraltar, as a punishment for small offences' (Grose), it is not c. but s.—2. See the Barrington (1805) quotation at light horsemen. (Recurr, historically, in Wm Maginn's Memoirs of Vidocq, I, 1828.)—3. 'Flattery; suave talk,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910.—4. Coffee: U.S.A.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'More often used in sailors' and lumberjacks' talk than in the usual tramp circle, where "murk" and "jamoke" are used'. Ex the 'black-strap' molasses with which much coffee is sweetened on tramp ships and in logging camps (Irwin).

black-strap, v. To flatter: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 3 of the n.

black stuff. 'Eating opium soon tears the stomach to pieces, bringing an early death. This is especially true with yen-shee-users (yen shee, called "black stuff", is the ashes of smoked opium),' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; by ca. 1930, also British drug traffic, as in Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938; 1939, Mary Sullivan, My Double Life. Ex its colour and in opposition to white stuff.

black tissue-paper mixed with tea. See floating capital.

black top. A moving-picture tent (in a circus or at a carnival, where 'movies' were once an attraction): tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; by 1935, circus and carnival s. In circus s., top is a tent (esp. in the big top); black = darkened.

black V., recorded by Maurer in 1931 and by Rose in 1934 and by them defined as a 'fireproof iron vault', is suspect, except that V is used by bank-robbers for 'vault'. The colour is merely a matter of the banks' choice (Irwin).

blackberry-swagger. 'A person who hawks tapes, bootlaces, etc.': 1859, H; by 1889 (B & L), it was low s. I.e., one who 'swags' (carries) articles that, like blackberries, are black.

blackbird. "There's a blackbird," she said to me suddenly. This was an expression which meant blackmail, swindler; someone who would steal in such a way that it would be impossible to detect or prove the theft; it also meant a white man who traded in the negroes male and female,' Anon., 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery', Flynn's, March 23, 1929, in ref. to ca. 1895 and valid for that date; 1929-31, Kernôt; extant. Cf. black, the.

Blackfriars. See black friars.

blackie. Blackmail: since ca. 1930. George Ingram, Welded Lives, 1939, 'Done a bit of "blackie" on Lifebuoy'. A familiarizing of black, the; cf. blackbird.

blackjack artist. A prison guard over-fond of using his truncheon: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. See black jack, n., 2.

blackleg. See black-leg.

blackmans. Darkness; night: 1621, Ben Jonson, A Masque of Metamorphos'd Gipsies, 'Some skipper of the Blackmans'; † by 1700. A variation of darkmans; perhaps merely a literary variation, a nonce-word.

blackmuns. See black muns.

blacksmith. A safe-burglar: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; March 22, 1930, Flynn's, Robert Carse, 'Jail Break!'; extant. Cf. smith.

Blackstone. A judge: 1933, Eagle; extant. Ex the famous C. 18 English writer on law and laws.

blade. A knife; a razor: 1929, Givens (both); 1934, Rose; extant. Part for the whole, as in S.E. blade, 'sword'.

bladhunk is tinkers' s. (Shelta) for 'prison': B & L, 1889.

blag, n. Smash-and-grab robbery or theft: July 30, 1885, Sessions Papers, Candler, a policeman, re-examined by Warden, one of the accused, 'I did not call you back and say "There has been another blag down round here." . . . Nor did I say "You have that Lake Street mob coming round here doing things getting you into trouble"'; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'Screwing the Bank of England or doing a blag on the crown jewels'; 1938, F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, "'Billy is at the blague"—Billy is smash and grab raiding'; ibid., 'Smash and grab raiding is described as "The Blague" or "the Smash"'; extant. Echoic.

blag, v. 'Blag = to match,' Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932; 1933, Charles E. Leach; 'To "blag" is to snatch a watch chain right off'; David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 'I blagged it'—a cheque—'out of him' (extorted it); 1938, F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, where it occurs, both as blag and as blague, 'to take or steal'; extant. Ex the n.

blagger. 'The "blagger" or "snatcher". These are usually young louts who specialize in snatching ladies' handbags and bolting off,' Jack Henry, What Price Crime?, 1945: since ca. 1930. Ex blag, v.

blague, n. and v. Variant of blag.

blake. See bloke, 2.

blank. A false key; a skeleton key: 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull, p. 297; † by 1900.

blanket. A cigarette-paper; often in plural: tramps' and beggars': 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, "'Got the tumblin's and a blanket on ye?" . . . I supplied him with tobacco and papers. He made his cigarette'; 1934, Convict; extant. The paper wraps up the tobacco as a blanket is wrapped about a sleeper.—2. An overcoat: 1925, Leverage; 1933, Eagle; extant. Depreciation.—3. A pancake: rather lumberjacks' s. than tramps' c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—4. A newspaper: Ersine, 1933. Because, to down-and-outs, a newspaper often serves as a blanket.

blanket stiff. 'A Western tramp; he generally carries a blanket with him on his travels,' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary), 1899; ibid., p. 104, 'The blanket-stiffs are men (or sometimes women) who walk, or "drill", as they say, from Salt Lake City to San Francisco about twice a year, begging their way from ranch to ranch, and always carrying their blankets with them'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'A tramp who carries his blankets with him; a Western tramp'; 1923, N. Anderson, The Hobo, quoting Leon Livingston (1918); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Irwin; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; by 1937 (Partridge) it was also English; by 1940, s. in U.S.A.—2. Among English tramps, a blanket stiff is, since ca. 1920, 'a tramp that never goes into a casual ward': 1932, The Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps.

blaring cheat is a misprint for blating cheat, a rare (? incorrect) form of bleating cheat (1741).

blarney, 'flattery', 'humbug', is, of course, not c. but s.—2. Hence, in U.S.A. (though it may simply be Matsell's error), a picklock key: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; or, The Rogue's Lexicon; rather ob. Ex its persuasiveness.

blarney, v., 'bears, among the low and criminal classes, the secondary meaning'—the primary one being 'to wheedle'—'of "to pick locks"', Sylva Clapin, A New Dict. of Americanisms, 1903: 1929-31, Kernôt; slightly ob. Ex the n., sense 2.

blast, n. and v. A detection of, to detect, a person in the act of thieving: 1925, Leverage; May 1928, The American Mercury (see quot'n at heat); Feb. 27, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, 'He'd . . . put the blast'—cf. heat, 2—'on me'; extant.—2. To blow (a safe), says Leverage, 1925: true, but the term is 'perfectly good' American and English. Yet the n., 'the blowing of a pete' (Ersine, 1933), may be Am. c.—3. To shoot; to use firearms: 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life, "'Had to throw a slug or let him out," Dan explained, "and we was too near through to start blasting"''; 1931, Irwin, 'To shoot; to assassinate'; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; 1933, Eagle; April 14, 1934, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly; 1935, David Lamson; 1936, Herbert Corey, 'Blast—to shoot down'; April 3, 1937, Flynn's, Richard Sale; 1938, Damon Runyon, Furthermore; 1939, Raymond Chandler; 1940, W. R. Burnett; extant. 'To blast from the face of the earth' (Irwin).

blast down. To kill, murder; properly, by shooting: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Extension of blast, v., 3.

blast on (someone), put the. To shoot (him): since the late 1920's. In, e.g., W. R. Burnett, High Sierra, 1940. Ex blast, 3.—2. See blast, 1, ref. of 1937.

blasted bitch. See the 1823 ref. in:

blasted fellow. An abandoned rogue, a professional rough or criminal of incorrigible wickedness or debauchery: 1785, Grose; 1823, Jon Bee, who also records blasted bitch of a female of the same sort; app. † by 1870. I.e., blasted with hell-fire.

blaster. A safe-blower: 1925, Leverage; April 1933, The American Mercury, Jim Tully, 'Amateur'—i.e., unskilled—'cracksmen, or "blasters"'; extant. Ex blast, v., 2.—2. The sense 'slanderer' (Leverage, 1925) can hardly be c. Short for blaster of reputations.

blater. A calf: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham, "What ho, my kiddy," cried Job, "don't be glimflashy: why you'd cry beef on a blater: the cove is a bob cull, and a pal of my own"; † by 1900. Prob. introduced as a variation from bleating cheat. Cf.: blating-cheat. See bleating cheat. (J. Shirley, 1707.)

Blazing Star, the. See Stop-Hole Abbey.

bleach cheat, 'a sheep', is an error for bleating cheat. (Potter, 1797.)

bleach mort, (Potter, 1797), is an error for:

bleached mort. A very fair girl or (not old) woman; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The Mort lay last Night a bleaching; the Wench looks very fair to Day'; 1785, Grose, 'A fair complexioned wench'; 1809, Andrewes, incorrectly bleak mort—an error religiously reproduced in Sinks of London Laid Open, 1848; by 1859, current in New York, in a derivative sense—Matsell, 'Bleak Mort. A pretty girl'; by 1889, in form b. mot, it was low s.—witness B & L. Lit., a whitened wench: S.E. bleach, to whiten; c. mort, a girl or woman.

bleak. Handsome, pretty: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, "The Moll is bleak", the girl is handsome; 1881, The New York Slang Dict.; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1900. Either by antiphrasis or, by deliberate perversion, ex bleached mort.

bleak mort. See bleached mort, ref. of 1809 and 1859.

bleakly. Cleverly: 1859, Anon., 'A Hundred Stretches Hence', in Matsell's Vocabulum, 'And where the swag so bleakly pinched . . .?' glossed by Farmer in Musa Pedestris, 1896, as 'plunder cleverly stolen'; † by 1920. Bleak outlook for the victim?

bleat, v. To give information to the police: 1836, The Individual, Nov. 8, 'Ven I'm corned, I can gammon a gentry cove, Come the fawney-rig, the figging-lay, and never vish to bleat'; † by 1890 in Britain; since ca. 1920, current in U.S.A. (Ersine, 1933.) Cf. squeak and squeal.

bleater. 'They that are Cheated by Jacke in a Boxe, are called Bleaters,' Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608-9: ca. 1600-1830, though the term may have been obsolescent as early as 1730; B.E.; Grose; 1823, Bee, who applies it to any victim of swindlers. Here, bleater is a sheep (cf. the next entry) and forms part of the sheep-shearing set of terms used to express the components of trimming, q.v.—2. Potter's definition of bleaters as sheep is therefore correct: but his classification thereof as c. is incorrect.—3. Andrewes's definition (1809) as 'sheep stealer' is incorrect.

bleating cheat (or chete). 'A bletinge chete, a calfe or sheepe,' Harman, 1566; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Bleating cheat . . . A sheep'; 1688, Randle Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (blating-cheat); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, where it is misprinted blaring cheat; 1785, Grose; † by 1800—if not, indeed, by 1750. See cheat, 1; lit., a thing that bleats.

bleating cull. A sheep-stealer: 1797, Potter;

1823, Bee; by 1889 (B & L), it was †. Cf. bleating cheat and:—

bleating(-)marching. Sheep-stealing: 1889 (see may-gathering); ob. Cf. bleating cheat.

bleating prig. Sheep-stealing: 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H, who imply that it is †. Prob. suggested by:—

bleating rig 'is the stealing of sheep': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); by 1889 (B & L) it was †. Cf. bleating cheat.

bleats, 'a sheep stealer' (Sinks of London, 1848), is almost certainly an error: cf. bleater, 3.

bleed, 'to extort money from, to cheat', has never been c.—despite Geo. P. Burnham, 1872.

bleed, on the. Engaged in blackmail: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. bleeder, 5.

bleed freely. To 'part with their Money easily' (B.E., 1698): orig., and mostly, gamesters': 1666, Anon., Leathermore's Advice; concerning Gaming, known also as The Nicker Nicked, 'When they'—a gang of swindling gamesters—'have you at the Tavern and think you a sure Bubble, they will many times purposely lose some small summe to you the first time to engage you more freely to Bleed (as they call it) at the second meeting, to which they will be sure to invite you'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1823, Bee (bleed); 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III, 'François, if well managed, would "bleed" well'; 1886, Wm Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; by 1889 (B & L), low s.

bleed the boodle. To share the loot or booty: 1895, J. W. Sullivan, Tenement Tales of New York; ob. See boodle.

bleeder. A hanger (weapon): 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'A Tail and Bleeder; a Sword and Hanger'; app. † by 1830. Because it causes bleeding.—2. (Gen. pl.) A spur: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1890. Ex sense 1.—3. A lie: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1910.—4. A knife: 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. Cf. senses 1 and 2.—5. A blackmailer: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

bleeding cull is a rare variant (Potter, 1797) of:— bleeding cully is 'an easy Fellow, that is profuse with his Money, or to be persuaded to support all the Extravagancies of his Companion or Mistress, at his own Expense', A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'One who parts easily with his money'; † by 1890 (F & H). Cf. bleed freely and see cully, 2.

bleessed, adj. 'Turned honest,' Ersine: since ca. 1925. Ironic.

bleting(e) chete. See bleating cheat. (Harman, 1566.)

blew. See blue, v.

Blew Bull, the. See Stop-Hole Abbey.

blew it. See blue it.

bliksem, n., a rogue; v., to thrash, beat up very thoroughly: South Africa: C. 20. Cyrus A. Smith, letter of May 22, 1946. Afrikaans: ex Dutch bliksem, 'lightning'.

blimp. A prostitute (strictly, a fat one): since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. She resembles a small airship—a blimp.

blind, n. As 'a cheat, pretence, pretext', it is S.E.—2. Hence, 'one who stands before another while he robs a third person, is the blind on that occasion': 1823, Jon Bee; by 1890, no longer c.—3. A cloud: 1841, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1900. One can't see through it.—4. See jump the blind.—5. Short for blind baggage: U.S.A.: ca. 1894, Dialect Notes (cited by D.A.E.); 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; 1931, Stiff, 'Blinds. False door and at end of baggage car, Hobo riding-place'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1936, W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps; and frequently in later loci.—6. 'A legitimate business enterprise used as a cover under which to operate a criminal enterprise,' Irwin, 1931; racketeers' c. of ca. 1919–30, then police and journalistic s.

blind, v. 'To cheat under a pretence': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900. Ex the noun, 1 and 2.

blind, adj. See blind baggage.—2. See blind fence.—3. 'Illegal, fake,' Ersine: C. 20.

blind, on the. (Of professional thieves) 'to go out to steal without any definite plans,' Hargan, 1935: C. 20.

blind, ride the. 'To steal a ride hidden in front end of baggage car,' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: mostly tramps.: since ca. 1910: 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; 1939, Terence McGovern, It Paid to Be Tough; extant. See blind, n., 5.

blind alehouse, one 'to conceal a thief or villain', may possibly as Potter (Dict., 1797) implies, be c., for the usual sense is 'obscure alehouse'. If genuine, this c. sense was current ca. 1780–1850.

blind baggage. 'Some men travel . . . on the baggage car at the end where there is no door—the "blind baggage", as it is called,' Morley Roberts, The Western Avernus, 1887; 'The front end of a baggage-car having no door,' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary), 1899; 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp, 'Called "blind" because there was no door at all in front of it' (a baggage-car next to the train engine); 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1910, Harry Franck, A Vagabond Journey; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1918, Leon Livingston, Mother Delacasee; by 1920, if not considerably earlier, it was s., and by 1925 it was coll.

Blind Beak, the. Sir John Fielding, chief magistrate of London in 1754–80 (the year of his death); deeply interested in his work, he wrote pamphlets on the duties of the police, with esp. reference to the prevention of crime in and round about London: London c. of ca. 1755–80, then historical. Grose, 3rd ed., 1796. See beak.

blind Charley. See stump-glim; † by 1937 (Irwin). The reference is to charley, 1.

blind cheeks, 'the breech, the posteriors', appears both in B.E., 1698, and in A New Canting Dict., 1725; but B.E. does not classify it as c., and the later dict. does not exemplify it in a c. sentence; it is, therefore, tolerably certain that not even at its origin was it c.

blind eye, the. A loss of one's nerve; nervousness; timidity: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, 'The time was when I wasn't leary of holdin' up an express train single-handed; it's all I can do now to scrape up nerve enough to kill the fleas in this barrel. Some people calls the disease the shivers, an' others call it the blind eye. I calls it the staggers. You stagger in front of everythin' that it needs grip to do'; slightly ob.

blind fence. 'Innocent person who purchases stolen goods without knowing the facts,' George C.

Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: C. 20. See fence, n.

blind harpers. 'Beggars counterfeiting blindness, with Harps or Fiddles,' B.E., 1698; A New Canting Dict., 1725, diversified it thus, 'Blind-Harpers, The Fifty-Sixth Order of Canters, who, counterfeiting Blindness, strowl about with Harps, Fiddles, Bagpipes, etc., led by a Dog or a Boy'; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880.

blind jam. 'An arrest without specific charge,' Ersine: since ca. 1920.

blind markers. Faked licence plates: car thieves': 1935, Hargan; extant.

blind pad. A beggar 'generally to be found at certain street corners with a written statement before him of the cause of his blindness,' Jerome Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life, 1895; extant. See pad, n.

blind pig. An illicit liquor-saloon, a 'speak-easy': since ca. 1880: 1887 and 1904 (D.A.E.); 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Speak easy'; 1928, May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story; by 1929 (Flynn's, March 16, story by Victor Maxwell), it was, in U.S.A., low s. In Australia, it has, since ca. 1920, signified a public-house, wine-shop, or house where liquor may be bought out of hours; since ca. 1940, low s.; Baker, 1942. 'From the professed object of exhibition,' D.A.E.

blind pigger. A blind pig keeper: since ca. 1890; by 1930, low s. (D.A.E.)

blind tiger. A synonym of blind pig: 1883 and 1892 (D.A.E.); 1933, Ersine; March 30, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington. Prob. a deliberate variation.

blinder. 'Cover (fig.) used in deceiving another; the person who uses such cover,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. blind, n., 2.

blinder, nap or take a. To die, esp. by hanging: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, 'A Hundred Stretches Hence', in Vocabulum (U.S.A.—but prob. earlier in England, as nap . . .), 'Some rubbed to whit had napped a winder, | And some were scragged and took a blinder': 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H (nap); † by 1930. I.e., to take a leap into the dark or perhaps to suffer a blinding experience.

blindo, 'to die', is old Army s., not c. (1889, B & L); cf. the preceding entry.—2. But as 'sixpence' it is beggars' c.: 1926, Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows; extant. Perhaps because it is of little more use than, rather often, is a blind person.

blinds is a post-1910 variant of blind, n., 5: in, e.g., Irwin, 1931.

blink, n. See blinks.—2. A light: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'McBean went in for a blink to his steamer' or pipe; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; † by 1890. A candle blinks in any but the stillest air.—3. A signal: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

blink, v. 'Blink. Not to see when one may "The copper blinks, and won't drop to me", i.e. the officer pretends not to see me; the officer looks another way': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum, —but earlier in The Ladies' Repository, 1848, as 'To overlook, pretend not to see'; † by 1910. Cf. S.E. wink at.—2. 'To go to sleep': 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1900. Ex the indications of incipient sleepiness.—3. To signal: 1925, Leverage; extant.

blink, be on the ; put on the blink. For a quotation of the former, see hoisting, 2; for one of the latter, see put on the blink; both of Jan. 16, 1926. The sense of the latter is 'to upset, spoil, endanger'; of the former, 'to be upset, restless', and the two phrases are c. of ca. 1910-30, and then s. Also, go on the blink = 'to deteriorate', as in 'Business went on the blink after the World's Fair, so the next year, 1894, I came to New York' (Mary Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story, 1928): c. of ca. 1885-1910, then s. Perhaps ex 'to make (a person) blink with astonishment, shock, etc.'

blink, on the. See prec. entry.—2. On the lookout, for a gang of criminals or of two-up players: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942 and 1945. The 'guard' blinks his eyes in the effort to keep a sharp watch.

blink-fencer. 'A person who sells spectacles', esp. in the street: 1859, H; 1890, F & H; 1893, No. 747; by 1895, street s. Blink is from blinkers, s. for 'spectacles'; see fencer, 2.

blinker. A cloud: 1841, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1900. Cf. blind, n., 3.—2. A one-eyed horse: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by 1890, s.

blinko. "What is a blinko . . . ?" "Well, it's a kind of entertainment, singing, and that, . . . to which strangers are not invited—least of all the police": 1877, James Greenwood, Dick Temple; 1890, F & H, 'An amateur entertainment held, generally, at a public house'; by 1900, (low) s. Cf. blinker, 1.

blinks, 'cigarette-ends'—blink pickings, 'these butts collected from pavement and gutter': Australian: C. 20. Perhaps, orig., beggars' c. >, by 1930 at latest, low s.; perhaps always low (street) s. Baker, 1942. Because their rankness, when they are smoked, causes the smoker to blink? —2. The earlier sense (ca. 1840-1910), 'spectacles', was prob. c. In, e.g., No. 747's autobiography, published in the 1890's, in a passage valid for the year 1845. Perhaps short for s. blinkers in same sense.

blinky. A tramp or hobo train-rider that has lost one or both of his eyes: tramps': 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, quoting from Livingston (1918); 1931, Stiff, 'Blinkey. A blind hobo, or one who is "practically blind"': 1931, Irwin, 'One with poor eyesight, or completely blind'; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road (a blind beggar); extant.

blirt, v.t. To decoy: 1848, 'The Flash Language' in The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). Blirt is a thinning of S.E. blurt, perhaps in its † sense, 'to treat contemptuously'.

blister, n. A police summons: Nov. 17, 1903, Sessions, 'I was served with four blisters yesterday'; 1938, F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; 1943, Black; extant. It stings the professional's pride to have it served upon him.—2. 'A low woman; a woman who drinks much,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: 1942, BVB, a prostitute. She raises blisters.—3. 'That woman over in the corner with the ugly sores on her arms is a "blister"'. She gets the sores by putting acid on her arms. She begs money saying she needs it for a doctor,' Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941: Am. beggars': C. 20.—4. 'An old and ugly person': U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Perhaps ex sense 2.

blister, v. To shoot (a person): April 12, 1930, D.O.U.

Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'The Big Shot Takes His Rap'; extant. Prob. suggested by heat, n. and v., and heater.—2. To serve (a person) with a summons: British: since ca. 1930. In, e.g., F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1939. Ex the n., sense 1.

blo and bloe are early forms of blow, n., 1: 1676, A Warning for House-Keepers (see quot'n at blow, bite the).

bloak. See bloke.

bloat, n. A drowned corpse: 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; ob. Ex its bloated appearance, as is:—2. A drunkard: 1890, F & H; 1903, Clapin; ob.—3. A beating; a verbal beating—abuse: 1925, Leverage; ob. Perhaps ex the bloated appearance of a much-bruised face.—4. An 'expert crook who sells his service to a gang-leader,' Kernôt, 1929-31; extant. He 'flogs' his services; cf. sense 3.

bloat, v. To beat; to speak abusively to: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 3 of the n.

bloater. A drunkard: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. bloat, n., 2.

blob, n. 'Of professional beggars there are two kinds—those who "do it on the blob" (by word of mouth), and those who do it by "screeving", that is by petitions and letters'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; ob. Despite the recorded dates, the v. is prob. earlier than—hence the origin of—the n.—2. Hence, a beggar's plea or pitiful tale: 1862, Mayhew, London Labour, IV, 416 (concerning 'the Royal Navy lay'), 'This "patter", or "blob", is of Plymouth, Portsmouth, Cawsen' Bay, Hamoaze': slightly ob.

blob, v. To talk: 1859, H, 'Beggars are of two kinds,—those who screeve . . . and those who blob'; 1890, F & H, 'Blob . . . (vagrants)'—To talk; to "patter"; ob. H derives it from blab; perhaps one should rather say that it is a perversion of blab.—2. Hence, to inform on a companion, an accomplice: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

blobber. An informer: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex blob, v., 2.—2. A burglar: 1925, Leverage; extant. Why?

block, n. A policeman: Scottish: 1886, a Dundee garotter's letter, quoted in 1909, by J. Redding Ware, Passing English; slightly ob. Perhaps a 'disguise' of bloke.—2. A watch; U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1916, The Literary Digest (Aug.; article 'Do you speak "yegg" ?'); 1918, L. Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hoboes; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (as 'solid gold watch'); 1925, Leverage; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, Kane; July 1928, The White Tops; Oct. 19, The Saturday Evening Post, 'Alagazam' (pitchmen's s.)—by this date, no longer predominantly c.—3. The block, the solitary confinement cells: Am. convicts': 1933, Victor Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; extant. They form an architectural block.—4. A cubic packet of morphine: Am. drug addicts' and traffickers': since ca. 1920. BVB. Ex the shape of the packet.

block, v. To hit on the 'block' or head: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. English s. 'to crown'.—2. To watch: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. By a pun on sense 2 of the n.

block, put the. See put the block.

Block, Mr. 'The original John Dubb. The man who believes that the police mean well and that sharks are good fellows,' Stiff, 1931: tramps'; since ca. 1910. Cf. English s. chump, 'a fool; a "sucker" '.

block and tackle. Watch and chain: 1928, Chicago May; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant. See block, n., 2.—2. A shackle: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

block-house. A prison: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who has 'Block houses, prisons, houses of correction, etc.', does not classify as c., and it would seem that by 1760 (or thereabouts) it had > s.; it may have, in U.S.A., remained c. until ca. 1870—witness Matsell's Vocabulum. Ex the shape.

blocker. A pickpocket's accomplice: 1889, C. J. Clarkson & E. J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary); extant. He blocks the view of the prospective victim and of the standers-by.

block man. The 'barker' or general assistant, to an auctioneer, esp. to a crooked auctioneer; rather is it commercial s. than c. In, e.g., 'Auction Sale This Day'—by Carlton Brown in The New Yorker, Aug. 7, 1937.

block-of-ice mob. A gang of welshers: race-course gangs': since ca. 1920. F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938. Rhyming on shice mob.

blockhound. 'A detective; any police official,' Leverage, 1925; extant. He is 'a dirty dog' for daring to block, or obstruct, criminal activities.

blocks. Playing cards made of wood: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant.

blocks, give the. To apply an intelligence test (to a prisoner): convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex the wooden blocks used in certain tests.

blocks to (someone), put the. To gang-kill: Dec. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, 'We put the blocks to him tomorrow'; extant. To expedite him on his way by putting skids (often of wood) under him.

blo. See blo, blow (n.) and blow, bite the.

bloen. See blowen.

bloke; bloak. 'Bloak—a gentleman': 1839, Brandon; 1843, Sessions; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds (see shickster); app. † by 1870. A special application of sense 2.—2. A fellow, a chap, a man: 1829, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, V, trial of Jn Daly, 'The bloke come, i spelld away' and 'The bloke bufts'—i.e., buffs, swears—'to me'; 1839, Brandon, who implies it in fancy bloke and swag-chovey bloke; 1843, Sessions Papers; 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; by 1859 (Matsell), current in New York; by 1860, low s. in Britain; 1871, Anon., State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1899, Josiah Flynt; by 1910, low s. in U.S.A. The origin is problematical: I consider that it is a disguise—prompted by bugger, a favourite word in the underworld of ca. 1800–50—of gloke (gloak), q.v.; but it may derive ex Dutch blok, 'a fool'—cf. English blockhead.—3. 'A person robbed': 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; † by 1900. A thieves' narrowing of sense 2.—4. 'A detective, or police officer; a minor Judge': U.S.A.: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; app. † by 1910. Prob. ex sense 2.—5. (Ex sense 4.) A prison warder: 1893 (implied in head bloke); 1894, Arthur Griffiths, Secrets of the Prison-House; slightly ob.

bloke-buzzer. 'In the accepted language of the thief, those [pickpockets] who operate on men are termed "Bloke-buzzers", while those who make ladies their special victims receive the euphonious appellation of "Moll-buzzers"': 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; rather ob. See bloke, 2 + buzzer.—2. A racecourse thief (pick-pocket): English: 1895, Jerome Camenada, Detective Life; ob.

bloke with a (or the) jasey. A judge: 1859, H (former); 1874, H (latter); † by 1920. See bloke, 2, and jasey.

blone is a variant of blowen; it occurs first in 1821—see blowen, 2—and recurs in H. Baumann, Londonismen, 1887.

blood seems to have been c. during the approximate period, 1715–50, in the sense, 'expert thief, practised criminal'; 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker (see quot'n at rug, where the questioner is Jack Sheppard). Ex C. 16–17 S.E. blood, a roisterer.

blood money is said, by convicts, to be earned by every convict: Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest, John Caldwell, 'Patter of the Prisons'; 1934, Rose, 'Serve time . . . to earn blood money'; extant.

blood-red fancy. An all-red handkerchief: 1839, W. A. Miles (see billy); 1839, Brandon, 'A red silk pocket handkerchief'; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1857, Snowden; by 1860, low s.

bloodsucker. A doctor that applies the Wassermann test: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant.

bloodthirsty. 'If a prison guard reports many prisoners, he is bloodthirsty', Charles G. Givens, 'The Clatter of Guns' in The Saturday Evening Post, April 13, 1929; 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'Guard Who Often Reports Prisoners . . . a bloodthirsty hack'; extant.

bloodworm. A ruthless pimp: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant.

bloody (the excessive adj.) seems to have been very gen. in the Underworld of the early C. 19: 'A favourite word used by the thieves in swearing, as bloody eyes, bloody rascal (Lex. Bal., 1811). And in Sessions, May 19, 1851 (case of Daley, Carter, Tuck), it is used as a noun, with the sense 'bloody fool'—not, I think, to be classified as c. bloody roue. See row.

bloody toff. 'A man who gives,' Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935: tramps': from ca. 1920. A special application of the s. sense, 'a generous fellow'.

blooey. See bluey, 2.

bloomer. A mistake, an error: Australian convicts': 1889, B & L, 'From . . . "a blooming error" ' ; 1890, F & H; by 1900, s. in Britain; in U.S.A., c.—e.g., among gamblers—for 'an error in selecting a gambler's victim' (as in J. H. Keate, The Destruction of Mephisto's Greatest Web, 1914), until ca. 1920, by which time it had > s. Perhaps from 'blooming error'.—2. Hence, an empty safe: Dec. 1918, The American Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1927, Kane; 1929–31, Kernôt; 1931, Irwin; extant.

bloss. (See also blowen, blower.) 'A Thief or Shop-lift,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; a sense that, if genuine, was † by 1810. It is suspect. The next sense, or perhaps sense 3, is the original one; and sense 3 is prob. the basic one.—2. A pimp's or a bully's 'pretended Wife, or Mistress, whom he guards, and who by her Trading supports him,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; by 1859, current in U.S.A. for any mistress (Matsell's Vocabulum); by 1870 † in England, and by 1900 † in U.S.A.; 1890, F & H. Perhaps short for blossom.—3. Hence, any whore: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1797, Potter; 1823, Bee; † by 1880.—4. (Prob. ex sense 3.) In U.S.A., a woman; a girl: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1889, B & L; † by 1920.

blot. To write: implied in blot the scrip . . ., q.v.; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); † by 1900.—2. 'To put out of the way; to kill,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since ca. 1918. Cf. :—

blot out. 'To kill. "Blot out the lousy stool",' James P. Burke, 'The Argot of the Racketeers'—The American Mercury, Dec. 1930; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; by 1940, s. To make a blot, a cypher of.

blot the scrip and jark it. 'To stand Engaged, or be Bound for any body,' B.E., 1698; ibid. (at scrip), blot the scrip = to enter into a bond; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (the shorter phrase); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who at scrip, makes blot the scrip = to sign (a bond or other document); by 1889 (B & L), low s. See jark, v.

blotta. A thief that uses a drug to stupefy his intended victims: 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night Hawk, 'A . . . furtive-eyed Russian Jew "blotta" drifted in [from the Bowery . . . he was after chloral-hydrate drops. Dinney . . . ventured the belief that he was a beauty to be in the "knock-out" business'; ob. Yiddish?

blou baadjie. A long-term prisoner: South Africa (esp. convicts): C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Afrikaans: lit., blue jacket. Cf. sky blue.

blow, n. Booty; goods or a feat. See blow, bite the. (A New Canting Dict., 1725, 'Blow . . . a Feat, or Goods'.)—2. Hence information likely to lead to booty: highwaymen's: C. 18. Alexander Smith, Highwaymen, vol. III, 1720, 'One day, having a Blow set him at Colebrook, that is to say, being inform'd that a couple of Travellers laying [sic] at a certain Inn in the aforesaid Town, he arose early the next Morning, and way-laid 'em in their Journey to Reading'.—3. A prostitute: 1823, Egan's Grose; app. † by 1890. Abbr. blowen.—4. A shilling; pl., blow: 1879, 'Autobiography of a Shilling', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct., 'I . . . took the daisies (boots) to a sheney (Jew) down the Gaff (Shoreditch), and done them for thirty blow (shillings)'; 1889, B & L; † by 1920. A oner in s. is a blow; hence a one-shilling piece (a 'oner') is a blow: B & L, at oner.—5. (Cf. sense 2.) An exposure or a detection; an alarm: U.S.A.: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'When the salesman . . . lifted her up, she lost her grip on the sealskin sacque, and it fell to the floor. It was a "blow", of course, and she got nailed'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (see quot'n at good, on the); 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy, 'I can see that he does not remember me . . . So I do not give him a blow' (sign of recognition); extant.—6. An inhalation; a bout of, e.g., morphine by inhalation: U.S. drug addicts': since ca. 1920; July 23, 1927, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'Who's willin' to sell me a blow of snow?'; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; extant. Cf. the v., 9.—7. A smoke; a puff at a cigarette: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; by 1940, (low) s.—8. See big blow.

blow, v. 'It is blow'd, c. it is made public, and all have notice,' B.E., 1698; 1718, C. Hitchins, The Regulator, 'Mr. Constable, this Noise does me a great Diskindness, in blowing my House after this manner; all the Street is now in an uproar,' where blow = expose to public censure; by 1800, low s. Ex the dispersal of, e.g., chaff by wind.—2. Hence, to detect (a person) in a crime: 1788, Sessions, Sept., p. 670 (witness loquitur), 'William Derry said, d—n your eyes, make haste along, you are both blown; that I am clear of; I stopt him then; the others made their escape immediately'; 1843, Sessions (Oct.; Surrey cases); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1931, IA; extant.—3. Hence, to inform against (a person): ca. 1790–1880 (and then s.). G. G., History of George Godfrey, 1828, 'I say, you won't blow me?'; 1839, Brandon, 'To Blow it—to inform'; 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police; 1848, Sinks of London, v.i. and v.t.; by ca. 1845, current in U.S.A. (Bartlett, Americanisms, 1848; The National Police Gazette, 1849; E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1872, G. P. Burnham (U.S.A.); 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude; by 1889 (B & L), low s.—4. See blow a cloud.—5. V.i., to take alarm: U.S.A.: 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'The girl did not "blow" (take alarm) and I got hold of the leather [a pocket-book or purse] easily'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, in sense 'cease; give over, give up'; 1937, E. H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 'To feel the loss of a pocket-book'; extant.—6. See blowing, n., 2.—7. 'Blowing a Peter. Forcing a safe with the aid of explosives,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: orig. U.S.A.: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'It's a bank trick—trying to blow a box . . . or something'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson (blow a pete—a peter); 1925, Leverage; 1931, Brown (England); 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1937, Partridge; by 1940, (low) s.—8. (Ex sense 5.) To run away: U.S.A.: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'One of 'em cops it in the leg, th' other blew'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, George C. Henderon, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage, 'To escape from prison; to run away'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'I . . . blew the burg on the rattlers'; 1927, Kane; by 1928, low s. in U.S.A.; 1931, Brown (London); extant.—9. To inhale; esp. in blow coke: U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Blowing coke. Sniffing cocaine into nostrils'; 1925, Leverage; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—10. To commit fellatio: U.S. convicts': 1935, Hargan.—11. To fail at or with, to 'muff' (a plan, an enterprise, a crime): U.S.A.: since the 1920's. W. R. Burnett, Nobody Lives Forever, 1944, 'He'll probably blow it. He's beginning to look old.'

blow, bite a or the. To capture the booty; to succeed in a criminal enterprise: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-keepers, 'For when that we have bit the bloe| we carry away the game'; 1698, B.E., 'Bit the Blow, c. accomplish'd the Theft, plaid the Cheat, or done the Feat: you have Bit a great Blow, c. you have Robb'd somebody of a great deal, or to a considerable value'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (as B.E.)—see also blow, n., 1; 1734, Select Trials, from 1720 to 1724, p. 253, text and footnote ('A Blow is any kind of Booty'); 1785, Grose; 1823, Bee; † by 1889 (B & L). See bite, v., and blow, n., 1.

blow a cloud. To smoke a pipe: 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial (Appendix No. 1); † by 1880. Perhaps orig. c. (for cloud, 'tobacco', is certainly c.); the term was prob. s. by 1820.

blow a score. To fail in an attempted theft: 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant. See blow, v., 11, and score, n.

blow a shot. 'To waste narcotics by missing the vein or spilling the solution,' BVB: drug addicts': since ca. 1910. Here shot = injection; cf. bang, n.

blow a tank. To dynamite a safe: New Zealand and, by 1935, Australia: 1932, Nelson, Baylis (private letter); 1941, Sidney J. Baker, New Zealand Slang; 1942, Baker, Australian Slang. See blow, v., 7, and tank, 'a safe'.

to blow a whistle. To inform to the police: since the late 1930's. April 1942, Flynn's, James Edward Grant, 'I'm going to turn you up. I'm going to blow a whistle, I'm going to sing.' Ex 'blowing a police whistle' (calling on the police).

blow-back, n. 'If he voluntarily returns to the victim the stuff stolen he is said to have made a blow back,' Convict, 1934; 1941, Maurer; extant. Ex the v.

blow back, v. To return (stolen goods): 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; extant. Cf. kick back.

blow-boy. One who commits fellatio: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. See blow, v., 10.

blow in the bell, there's a. There's something wrong—something suspicious—somewhere: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Something that doesn't 'ring true'.

blow it. See blow, v., 2.

blow off, n. A giving of information, a warning, to the police: July 18, 1925, Flynn's; 1929, Givens; extant.—2. A climax: ca. 1912, George Bronson-Howard, The Snob, MS. in N.Y.P.L.; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; by 1929 (Charles F. Coe, Hooch), it was fairly gen. s. in U.S.A.; ca. 1930, it > British, as in James Spenser, Crime against Society, 1938. Prob. ex sense 1.—3. The senses 'proof that a crime has been committed; proof of guilt' are s. (orig., prob. police s.), not c.—4. 'Stealing a victim's money,' P. S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 1936; extant.

blow-off, at. See at . . .

blow-off on the groundsels. 'Blow-off on the gounsills, c. to lie with a Woman on the Floor or Stairs,' B.E., 1698; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., misinterprets it to mean, as an imperative, 'Make away from the Stairs lest you are taken'; A New Canting Dict., 1725, prob. by confusion with the next phrase, omits the on; and Grose, 1785, repeats the omission; 1797, Potter (blow the groundsil); 1823, Bee (blow the groundsel); † by 1889 (B & L).

blow off one's corns; blow off the loose corns. 'Blow off the loose corns, c. to lie now and then with a Woman,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1830. That 'loose corns' = 'semen' appears from a passage in 'From Bully Dawson to Bully W—n' in 'facetious' Tom Brown's Letters from the Dead to the Living; and cf. S.E. sow one's wild oats.

blow-off wire. 'Last telegram from mob' (of con men or faked-share pushers): 1936, P. S. Van blow one up. To smoke a cigarette: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. The one = one cigarette.

Cise, Fighting the Underworld; extant. Cf. blow-off, n., 1.

blow one's copper. To lose one's good-conduct deduction of time from a prison sentence: convicts': since the 1920's. Castle, 1938. See copper, n., 4.

blow one's top. To blow out one's own brains: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To commit suicide; correctly, by shooting, although sometimes extended to include any means of self-destruction'; by 1938, low s. Short for blow one's top off.—2. To go off one's head (esp. temporarily, among drug-addicts): 1928, Robert Joyce Tasker, Grimhaven; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, "Say, what was all that noise?" "The dope blew his top again," said the turnkey; "the Doc's gonna give him a shot pretty soon"; April 13, 1929, The Saturday Evening Post, Chas. G. Givens, who applies it esp. to convicts; June 7, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, IA; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls (as 'blow one's topper'); 1933, James Spenser, Limey; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1935, Hargan; March 12, 1938, The New Yorker, M. Berger (smoke marijuana to excess and become sick); by 1939 it was s.

blow one's topper is an occ. variant, since ca. 1930, of sense 2 of blow one's top; s. by ca. 1940. In, e.g., Damon Runyon, 'It comes up Mud'—a story in Take It Easy, 1938.—And of sense 1 of blow one's top, likewise since ca. 1930. In, e.g., W. R. Burnett, High Sierra, 1940.

blow-out, n. 'Any large and excited public gathering', Ersine: since ca. 1925. Prob. ex Am. low s. blow-out, a party.

blow out, v. To steal; but only in blow out a red (or a white) light, to steal a gold (or a silver) watch: 1889, B & L (at blowing); † by 1920.—2. To depart: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (p. 261); by 1910, s.

blow out ink; blow-out work. 'Ink used for the purpose of marking cards . . . Marked cards; the marking of cards [i.e., marking cards, vbl n.], Leverage, 1925; card-sharpers': C. 20.

blow-over. Cessation of suspicion, ending of the hue-and-cry: 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue; extant. 'The affair blew over.'

blow the coke. To inhale cocaine: drug addicts': since ca. 1920. BVB. See blow, v., 9, and coke.

blow the conkey-horn. To snore: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. cxvi, ' . . . While he blew the conkey-horn . . . While he was snoring fast asleep'; prob. not c. but low s. Cf. s. conk, the nose.

blow the gab. 'To confess, or [to] impeach a confederate': 1785, Grose; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L; by 1890 (F & H), low s. See blow, v., 1.

blow the gaff is synonymous with blow the gab: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. translator), ch. II.; by 1850 at latest, current in U.S.A.—witness E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851; 1863, A. Forrester, Revelations by a Private Detective; 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; by 1870, low s. Ex the preceding, either by confusion or, more prob., deliberately.

blow the groundsels (often spelt grounsils). See blow-off on the groundsels.

blow the joint. To escape from prison: 1934, Convict; extant. Cf. blow out, 2.

blow the meet. To fail to keep an appointment with an addict or with a peddler: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. BVB. Cf. blow, v., 8, and see meet.

blow the tout. To inform to the police: 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 'Bud "threw her flat" . . . Shy Sadie tried to wipe out that throw-down by blowing the tout and having a fancy cop walk in on Bud when he was pretty anxious to be alone'; extant—but not gen. Cf. blow, v., 1.

blow through, v.i. 'To pay a graft' (subscribe to something illicit, whether voluntarily or involuntarily): since the 1920's. Castle, 1938.

blow up, n. 'A discovery, or the confusion occasioned by one': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1818, The London Guide, 'blow-up, an exposure'; app. it had ceased to be c. by ca. 1830, except perhaps in C. 20 U.S.A.—as, for instance, in Philip Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 1936 ('When victim gets wise').

blow up, v. To reveal the illicit practices or activities of (a person, a gang, a house, a neighbourhood): 1781, George Parker, A View of Society '[The gentleman defrauded by sharpers, and several constables whose aid he has enlisted, go and] make a great noise, and in the language of flash blow up the neighbourhood, swear loudly that [the gentleman has] been robbed, and threaten ruin and destruction on those who had committed the fraud'; by 1850, if not indeed by 1830, it was s. Ex the lit. sense 'to explode'.

blow upon, the same as preceding: 1797, Potter; by 1820 at latest, it was s.

blow wise (to). To grasp the meaning (of); to inform oneself (about), to become informed: Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke ('The Argot of the Racketeers'), 'Blow wise to what I'm speling'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. blow, v., 1, 3.

blowed in the glass. 'Blowed-in-the-Glass Stiff': a trustworthy "pall"; a professional [tramp], Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary), 1899; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, 'The blowed-in-the-glass gun' (professional thief); 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'He was a true "profesh", a "blowed-in-the-glass" stiff'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'Also as "blowed in the bottle stiff"' ('New to Me', Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 13, 1937); 1923, M. Garahan, Stiffs; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Glen H. Mullin; 1925, Jim Tully; Nov. 12, 1927, Flynn's, Joseph F. Fishman, 'Fresh Fish! Fresh Fish!' (both phrases); 1931, Chris Massie (England); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; and often since. Ex those glass bottles in which the name of the maker, or of the product, is blown into the glass to ensure quality (Irwin).

blowen; blowing. 'Blowing, Natural, Convenient, Tackle, Buttock, Pure, Purest Pure. Several Names for a Mistress, or rather a Whore,' Thomas Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, 1688; 1698, B.E. (mistress; whore); 1788, Grose, 'Blower or Blowen. A mistress or whore of a gentleman of the scamp'—i.e., of a highwayman; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, J. J. Stockdale, Modern Belles, 'He . . . | Must sport a blowing in the park, | To imitate a richer spark'; 1823, Byron, Don Juan, XI (blowing); 1823, Egan's Grose; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1838, Table Book, Wm Hone, 'Blowin—"an unfortunate girl" . . . This is derived from blühen, German, to bloom or blossom'; 1841, Tait's Magazine, April, 'Flowers of Hemp'; by 1848 current in U.S.A. as 'a prostitute' (The Ladies' Repository); 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; by 1859, current in New York as 'a thief's mistress' (Matsell, Vocabulum); by 1880, † except literarily. Origin problematic; but if bloss is taken along with blowen, it would appear possible that both words mean a flower (a blossom, a blowing).—2. Hence, a woman, or girl: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1821, D. Haggart, 'Blone, a girl'; 1823, Egan's Grose (id.); 1837, E. Lytton Bulwer, Ernest Maltravers; 1846, G. W. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1889, B & L; by 1900, † except literarily.—3. A shoplifter (female): 1797, Potter; † by 1870. Prob. ex sense 1; cf. bloss, 1.—4. A wife: U.S.A. (—1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; † by 1920.

blowen, rum. See rum blowen.

blower. A whore: 1676, Coles, 'Blower, c. A Quean'; 'Blower, c. a Mistress, also a Whore,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict; 1785, Grose; 1839, Brandon, 'Blower—a girl; a contemptuous name in opposition to jomer'; 1859, H; † by 1887 (Baumann, Londonismen). Perhaps cognate with blowen.—2. A pipe: 1811, Lex. Bal., 'How the swell funks his blower . . . what a smoke the gentleman makes'; by 1889 (B & L), low s. Cf. the S.E. sense, 'a mechanical contrivance for producing a current of air' (O.E.D.).—3. An impeacher: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (at to blower); † by 1920. Ex blow, v., 2.—4. 'The men [bank thieves] who resort to explosives are known to their associates as blowers': U.S.A.: 1886, Thos Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; 1925, Leverage; 1928, Chicago May; extant—but by 1940, low s. Ex blow, v., 7.—5. Some kind of begging tramp: 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; † by 1930. Perhaps he puffs and blows—pretends to be asthmatic or bronchitic.—6. A fugitive: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex blow, v., 8.—7. A cocaine addict: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex blow, v., 9; cf. sense 7 of blower.—8. A telephone: 1933, Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'They'll get on the blower and have this place surrounded by cops'; 1937, David Hume, Halfway to Horror; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; by 1938, it was low s.—as in James Curtis, They Drive by Night. Ex the nautical s. blower, that means of communication by which, before the telephone, the bridge communicated with the engine-room; hence, the telephone used for that purpose: cf. sense 2.—9. 'The "blower", a stiff piece of paper, rolled up in a tube about the size of a cigarette, and inserted into the nostril. Through it the [cocaine] was sniffed,' Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938: U.S. drug addicts': since ca. 1910. Cf. sense 7.

blowgun. A shotgun with a very short, a pistol with a large, barrel: since ca. 1922. Ersine.

blowing, n., is a variant of blowen, q.v. E.g., T. Shadwell, 1688; J. J. Stockdale, 1818; Byron, 1823; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890.—2.

Treating (one's friends) to drink or food: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Cf. English s. blow-out, a hearty meal.

blowing coke. See blow, v., 9.

blowse. A whore; rarely, a kept mistress: 1701, D'Urfey, The Bath, 'Goodb'w'e to the Knight, was bub'd last Night; That keeps a Blowse, and beats his Spouse'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. at clicketting; app. † by 1760 or so, for Grose, 1785, does not give this sense at all, but makes blowse synonymous with Blowsabella, 'a woman whose hair is dishevelled and hanging about her face, a slattern'. Orig. a corruption or a 'disguise' of bloss, possibly on blowen (or blower): though cf. S.E. Blowsabella.

blowser. 'A prostitute, especially an elderly, or a dirty, dishevelled one,' IA, 1931: throughout C. 20. The same semantics as for blowse.

blubber. Mouth: 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Blubber, the Mouth. I've stopt the Cull's blubber, I've stopt the Fellow's Mouth; meant either by Gaggling or Murdering him,' repeated by Grose, 1785; by 1890 (F & H) it was low s. 'From the figurative use of the word, especially of anything swollen or protruding, as of the lips' (F & H).—2. See:

blubber, sport. (Esp. of 'a large coarse woman') to expose the breasts: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.: perhaps orig. c > by 1825, low s.; but prob. always low s. Ex the S.E. blubber rather than ex. the c. blubber, mouth.

blubbing cull. A tearful thief: 1797, Potter; † by 1890. See cull, n.

bludge. To be, to act as, a prostitute's bully: Australian white-slave traffic: C. 20. Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939; Baker, 1942. A back-formation ex bludger.

bludgeon business, the. 'Other robberies are perpetrated by brutal violence with a life-preserver or bludgeon. It is usually done by one or more brutal men following a woman. The men are generally from thirty to forty years of age—some older—carrying a life preserver . . . This is termed "swinging the stick", or the "bludgeon business". The woman walks . . . as if she was a common prostitute . . . She picks up a man in the street . . . and decoys him to some quiet, secluded place, and may there allow him to take liberties with her person, but not to have carnal connection. Meantime she robs him of his watch, money or other property, and at once makes off.—In some instances she is pursued by the person, who may have discovered his loss; when he is met by one of the men, who runs up, stops him, and inquires the direction to some part of London, or to some street, or will ask what he has been doing with his wife, and threaten to punish him for indecent conduct to her. During this delay, the woman may get clear away. In some cases a quarrel arises, and the victim is not only plundered of his money, but severely injured by a life-preserver or bludgeon': 1862. Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV, 329; † by 1930.

bludgeon man. 'A set of villains, hired by these fraudulent lottery keepers to resist the civil power during the drawing of a lottery, call themselves bludgeon-men': 1798, M. & R. L. Edgeworth, Practical Education, in paragraph (p. 247) drawn on Colquhoun's Police, 1796; † by 1860. Cf. the preceding entry and:—

bludgeoner. An American variant of the next: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. As recorded in The O.E.D., it is S.E. for 'one who uses a bludgeon'.

bludger. "Bludgers", or Stick-slingers, plundering in company with prostitutes', the 3rd class of 'Those who Plunder with Violence': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25; 1859, H, 'Bludgers, low thieves, who use violence'; 1870, The Broadway, Nov.; 1889, B & L; 1912, Mrs A. Mackirdy & W. N. Willis, The White Slave Market; ob. One who uses a bludgeon.

bludget. 'A female thief who decoys her victims into alley-ways, or other dark places, for the purpose of robbing them': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; 1881, The New York Slang Dict.; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; in C. 20 also Australian—witness Baker, 1942. The feminine of bludger.—2. Hence, a prostitute indulging in extortion: C. 20. BVB, 1942.

blue, n. Lead: 1791, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, Dec., 'I asked him what he had got there; he said, a bit of blue; that is slang for lead'; app. † by ca. 1880. Ex the colour.—2. See bluey, 4.—3. A loss: Australian confidence tricksters': C. 20. Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939; Baker, 1945.

blue, v. 'To Blew it—to inform' (to the police): 1839, Brandon; 1859, H, 'Blew, or Blow, to inform, to peach'; by 1890 (F & H) it was low s. Perhaps a deliberate perversion of blow, v., 2.—2. To get rid of (e.g. stolen goods wanted by the police): Aug. 24, 1846, Sessions Papers (trial of Smith & Carroll), 'Carroll . . . said to Smith, "It is all right, the note"—a £5 bank-note—"is blued"—that means made away with'; ob.—3. To pawn (an article): not c. but low s.—(H, 2nd ed., 1860).—4. "He's blewed his red 'un", i.e. he's been eased of his watch': 1874, H; 1889, B & L, 'Blewed of his red 'un', which gives the sense, 'to rob, to steal'; 1890, F & H; ob.—5. (Prob. ex sense 1.) 'Used to describe a person realizing . . . that he has been robbed . . . ("The mug blewed as soon as we done him,")', F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1939: C. 20.

blue, as a cant adj.; see the ensuing combinations.

blue, in the. In trouble, esp. with the police: New Zealand: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter); extant. Perhaps there is a ref. to the blue paper on which summonses are written.

blue, on the. See on the blue.

blue-beard. A castle: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 320); † by 1940. Prob. ex the legend of Bluebeard (and his castle).

blue belly (or B-). A policeman: ca. 1890–1930: 1909, Ware (at Fill, To give a). Ex his blue uniform and his prosperous air.

blue billy (or B-). A blue handkerchief, white-spotted: 1839, W. A. Miles (see billy); 1839, Brandon says it is of silk; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds; by 1850 or so, it was s. See billy, 1.—2. Methyated spirits, as a drink: tramps': 1935, Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road; extant.

blue bird. A police motor-car, esp. a police patrol car: Australian: since ca. 1920. Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939; Baker, 1945. Ex its colour, and in ironic reference to 'the blue bird of happiness'. Maeterlinck's L'Oiseau bleu appeared in 1909; it was filmed ca. 1920.

blue bird's eye. A blue-'eyed' handkerchief: ca. 1775, The Potatoe Man (see squeeze, 2); ca. 1811, blue blanket. See lie under . . .

A Leary Mot; 1818 (see bird's eye wipe); ca. 1830, it > low s.

Blue Bull, the. See Stop-Hole Abbey.

blue chips, 'coal', is on the borderland between c. and low s.; 1891, James Bent, Criminal Life.

blue drag may mean 'a criminal enterprise [cf. drag, n., 9] in the matter of lead piping' (see blue pigeon): Jan. 1835, Sessions (p. 450), "'Tell him to cut . . .'"—she said, "I don't think he will, for he has got his blue drag on"; † by 1890.

blue goose. A general cage or cell, whether in a convict road-camp or in a jail or prison; whence, in a prison, access can be had to the individual cells: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

blue label. A Pinkerton safe: March 22, 1930, Flynn's, Robert Carse, 'Jail Break!'; extant. Ex the trade-mark.

blue-line, v. To rob freight cars (goods-vans on a train): 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex a marking on such cars or vans.

Blue Liz. A patrol wagon: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'Probably a light-hearted play on the older term, "Black Maria"' (Irwin).

blue ink, get the. To suffer the consequences of the pawnbroker's sending for the police: 1931, Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Book; extant.

blue mark. 'A glum old fellow, who did not so much relish the wordy contest as the smell of the blue mark, (as they call a bowl of punch) which accompanied every wager for money,' The London Guide, 1818; † by 1890.

blue one, 'a poor location for a business or store' (Irwin, 1931), is not c., but commercial s.—ex pitchmen's s. for 'a bad pitch'.

blue pigeon. Lead: see blue pigeon, the, sense 2.—2. (Gen. pl.) One who practises 'the blue pigeon': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; † by 1930. Ex blue pigeon, the.

blue pigeon, fly a. See blue pigeon, fly the.

blue pigeon, fly the (whence fly a . . .). 'To fly the Blue Pigeon is cutting off lead from what they call a Prayer Book up to a Bible,' i.e., the smallest and the largest size or quantity: 'they wrap it round their body, and pass the most attentive eye without suspicion': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, where it is added that the 'flyers' specialize in removing weathercocks and in cutting off sections of pipe; 1785, Grose, 'Fly a blue pigeon, to steal lead off a church'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx; 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1889, B & L, 'To fly or shoot the blue pigeon'; 1890, F & H; extant, though slightly ob. See also blue-pigeon flyer.

blue pigeon, flying the. The dodge practised by the 'blue-pigeon flyer': 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; 1890, F & H; extant.

blue pigeon, shoot the. A late variant of fly the . . ., q.v. at blue pigeon, fly the.

blue pigeon, the. 'We could find no better business than stealing lead; we call it the blue pidgeon, or buff-lay,' report of trial of Thomas Edwards and others in Feb. 1731–2, in Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, pub. in 1735, and elsewhere (e.g., in John Villette, The Annals of Newgate, 1776); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Jon Bee; † by 1900.—2. The lead itself (also blue pigeon, without the article): since ca. 1730: see sense 1 and also the next entry. Blue, ex the colour; pigeon, that which one plucks.

blue-pigeon filer is that variant of the next which occurs in Humphry Potter's Dict. of Cant and Flash, 1797, and in Andrewes, 1809. Prob. filer is a misprint for flier.

blue-pigeon flyer. One of those who 'are Journeymen Plumbers and Glaziers who repair houses, and Running Dustmen . . . The business in which they are employed is generally a passport to the exercise of their [illicit] trade; for the one to view the state of the leads, the other to clean or mend the windows, and the third to take away the dust from the neighbourhood of the cistern, have opportunities of flying the Blue Pigeon' (see preceding entry): 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; 1785, Grose; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; 1890, F & H; ob. See blue pigeon, the.

blue pigeon flying. The art and craft of the blue pigeon flyer: 1789, G. Parker; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, J. Burrows; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; by 1859, current in New York—see Matsell's Vocabulum.

blue pigeons. See blue pigeon.

blue plum, 'a bullet', may orig. have been c., but in the earliest record, Grose, 1785, it is not classified as c.; a frequent phrase is that noted by Grose: 'Surfeited with a blue plumb, wounded with a bullet'. Ex the bluish colour of lead and with a reference to the shape of a small plum; possibly there is an allusion to L. plumbum, lead.

blue riband; blue ribbon. This term for 'gin' may for a few years (ca. 1810–20) have been c., but prob. it was always s.—suggested by blue tape, Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811.

blue-ribbon, adj. 'Characteristic of persons of education and high social standing,' E. H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937; extant. Indicative of superiority; the colour of First Prizes.

blue ruin, 'gin', may orig. have been c., but perhaps it was always s.—though certainly low at first. Pierce Egan, Life in London, 1821; recorded earlier in Lexicon Balatronicum (1811). Possibly it remained c. in New York until ca. 1870 (witness Matsell's Vocabulum). Cf. blue riband and blue tape and the s. mother's ruin.

blue tape. A spirituous liquor: 1725; 1785; app. † by 1850. See tape, n.—2. Esp. gin: 1785, Grose; 1823, Bee; † by 1900.

blue wall. See over the blue wall.

bluebird. A police officer in uniform: 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue; slightly ob. A 'bird' or fellow in a blue uniform.

bluey. Lead (on roofs): 1851, implied in bluey-hunter; 1859, H; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1943, Black, 'Lead (pipes, roofing, etc.)'; extant. 'Most likely from the colour' (H).—2. (Also blooe.) 'A tramp, yegg, or hobo,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: April 14, 1928, Flynn's, where A. E. Ullman applies it to a professional beggar; extant. Ex:—3. A tramp's bundle (or 'swag'): U.S. tramps': 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex Australian slang, where bluey is so called ex the colour of the blanket comprising the outer layer and forming the main constituent of the swag or bundle.—4. A summons by the police: New Zealand and Australian: since ca. 1910: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter); Baker, 1942, with variant blue (as also in Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939). Ex the blue-paper form with which it is served.

bluey-cracking, n. Breaking into empty houses and stealing lead: since ca. 1840; 1859, H; 1893, No. 747, p. 413, 'Stealing lead off the roof of a house'; ob. See bluey and cf. pigeon cracking.

bluey-hunter. “Bluey-Hunters”, or those who purloin lead from the tops of houses: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 26; 1870, The Broadway, Nov.; 1890, F & H; extant but, like the prec., ob. See bluey and cf. blue-pigeon flyer.

bluff, n. ‘An excuse, a pretence; that which is intended to hoodwink or “to blind”. Prob. a transferred usage of the American sense’ (F & H, 1890): since ca. 1840: vagrants’ c. >, by 1880, low s. See, e.g., Mayhew’s London Labour, I, 231. Prob. ex:—

bluff, v. Certainly at least s., perhaps c., in the sense, ‘to attempt to frighten [a person] by talking or showing weapons,’ The Ladies’ Repository (‘The Flash Language’), 1848; by 1880, undoubtedly s. Ex S.E. bluff, ‘to blindfold’.

bluffe. See bluffer, ref. of 1903.

bluffer, c. An Host or Landlord,’ Coles, 1676; ‘a Host, Inn-keeper or Victualler’, B.E., 1698; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., where it is misprinted bufler; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1823, Bee; 1836, The Individual, Nov. 15; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell’s Vocabulary); 1903, Sylva Clapin, Americanisms, ‘Bluffe, Bluffer. . . (2) In the patter of New York thieves, the landlord of an hotel’; † by 1920. Perhaps cf. S.E. bluff, ‘hearty’.—2. (Hence?), ‘an impudent saucy fellow, a swindler’: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, ‘An impudent imposing fellow of an innkeeper’—repeated in Sinks of London, 1848; † by 1890.

blunt, n. Money: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1717, Anon., The History of the Press-Yard (see quot’n at cull, n., 2); 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, ‘It is a great deal of Blunt, and worth venturing your Scraggs’—or necks—‘for’; 1767, Sessions; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib’s Memorial, ‘Agree to share the blunt and tatlers’; 1822, Charles Dibdin, Life in London; 1823, Bee, ‘Extended to every description of property. . . . “In blunt” and “out of blunt”, are understood as indicating the present state of a man’s pocket’; 1827, Sessions; 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, II; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; 1838, Charles Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1843, W. J. Moncrieff, The Scamps of London; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850, s.—gen. s., says ‘Ducange Anglicus’, The Vulgar Tongue, 1857. It may (see Matsell), have remained c. in New York until ca. 1870; the earliest American record is The National Police Gazette, Jan. 17, 1846. Origin: doubtful. Thos Lawrence, in Notes & Queries, Aug. 14, 1852, suggested that it might come from Fr. blond and compares s. browns, ‘coppers’; but prob. either because money, which speaks all languages, is merely the inanimate counterpart of the animate John Blunt (the typically outspoken man) or ex the blunt rims of coins, the latter alternative being the one I prefer.

blunt, v. To fill or supply with ‘blunt’ or money: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, ‘By his victories he had blunted many of their clies’ (pockets); † by 1900. Ex the n.

blunt ken. A bank; a broker’s office: 1848, The Ladies’ Repository; † by 1900. Ex blunt, n., and ken: ‘a money-place or house’.

Blunt Magazine. ‘The Bank of England, or indeed any banking house’; 1823, Bee; † by 1890. Lit., ‘a store of—or for—money’: see blunt, n.

blunted, ppl adj. Rich; in funds: 1823, implied in unblunted; 1848, The Ladies’ Repository (U.S.A.); by 1889 (B & L), low s. Ex blunt, v.

blunted crib. A house with (much) money in it: 1848, ‘The Flash Language’ in The Ladies’ Repository; † by 1910. See blunted and crib, n., 2.

blunty. Rich in money and/or property: 1823, Bee; by 1887 (Baumann, Londonismen) it was low s. Ex blunt, n.

bly. ‘A burglar’s oxy-acetylene blow lamp,’ George Orwell, Down and Out, 1933: since ca. 1920. A blend of ‘blow’ and ‘oxy’.

bly-hunka. A horse: tinker’s s. (Shelta): 1889, B & L. The term occurs also in F. W. Carew, No. 747, 1893, at p. 416.

bo. A hobo: tramps’: 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, ‘Do the other ’boes feel the same way?’; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, ‘Bo. Tramp or hobo’; 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1923, Jack Melone, Nature: Human and Real; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, ‘Familiar term used by one vagabond in addressing another’—it prob. had been for thirty years; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1925, Leverage; 1928, Chicago May; by 1929, it was s.—2. A catamite, a pathic: since ca. 1910. BVB. Cf. the American sense-developments of kid, n.

bo, on the. Living as a hobo: tramps’: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler, ‘Been on the ’bo yourself, ain’t you, Lad?’; extant.

bo-bo bush. Marijuana: since ca. 1925. BVB. I.e., ‘bogey bush’: cf. ‘say bo(h)! to a goose’.

bo cave. ‘A shack or hut where tramps congregate, usually near a railroad yard or water tank, where trains may be boarded,’ Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps’: since ca. 1910. See bo, 1.

bo park. A railroad yard around which tramps and hobos congregate while waiting for a train by which to leave town: tramps’: since ca. 1910. Irwin, 1931. Jocular: cf. bo cave.

Bo-Peep; in full Little Bo-Peep. Sleep: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; ex England.

boar. A shilling: 1735 ed. of The Triumph of Wit, ‘A shilling . . . Boar or Hog’; † by 1830. Suggested by earlier hog.

board. See bord.—2. See boards.—3. A State Board of Control: U.S.A.: C. 20. Ersine, 1933. By 1940, j.

board job. See board work.

board lodger. See dress lodger.

board stiff. A sandwich man (carrying an advertisement board): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, ‘A walking advertisement’; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1931, Irwin; extant. See stiff, n., 14.

board work; also board job, ‘the occupation of sandwich man’, is not c. but street s.; cf. boardman.

Boarding House, the. The City Prison (New York); the Tombs: 1859, George W. Matsell; 1927, Kane; ob. by 1931 (Godfrey Irwin). A humorous euphemism.—2. Hence, b.h., any city prison: from ca. 1910. Irwin, 1931.

boarding(-)school. Bridewell, says B. E., 1698; A New Canting Dict., 1725, ‘In a Canting Sense . . . Bridewell, or New-Prison, or any Work-house or House of Correction, for Vagabonds, Beggars and Villains of all Denominations'; 1785, Grose, 'Bridewell, Newgate, or any other prison or house of correction'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859 (Matsell), current in New York for a penitentiary; by 1889 (B & L), †. Cf. academy, 3, and college.

boarding-school gloak (or gloke). A felon: 1797, Potter; † by 1860. See preceding entry and gloak.

boarding(-)scholars. 'Bridewell-birds,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1820. See boarding school.

boardman, 'a sandwich-man': late C. 19-20: may originally have been vagrants' c., but prob. it was always street s. The prototype of the sandwich-man was 'a standing patterer, who often carried a board with coloured pictures': this sense, recorded by Partridge, 1937, was, app., vagrants' c. of ca. 1840-90.

boards. Playing cards: British low s. (as in Sidney Felstead, The Underworld of London, 1923, and Edgar Wallace, The Mixer, 1927) and, derivatively, American c.—as in Leverage, 1925; but not much used in either country.

boast, make the. See making the boast.

boat, n. The Boat is 'The Hulks, or [derivatively] any Public Works' on which convict labour is employed: 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London, p. 82; by 1874, 'To "get the boat," or "to be boated"', is to be sentenced to a long term of imprisonment equivalent to transportation under the old system' (H); 1885, A. Griffiths, Fast and Loose, "'Say that I have been copped, that I am going back to the 'boat' (penal servitude)'" 1885, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'Got the Boat. . . . Twenty years, or Life'; 1889, B & L, 'To "get the boat" or to "be boated"', is to be sentenced to a long term of imprisonment'; 1890, F & H; app. † by 1920. The reference is to going by boat to a penal settlement abroad, as H implies.—2. A motor-car: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens, 'A crook takes his "sweets," "frail," or "broad" out for a ride in a "hack," "heap," "ride," "bus," "boat"': Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke, 'To glom me two baloneys for me boat'; June 13, 1931, Flynn's, Thomas Thursday; Nov. 1931, IA; 1934, Rose; slightly ob. Humorous.

boat, v. (Usually passive.) To transport (a prisoner): 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, 'Boated. Transported'; by 1874 (H), to sentence to penal servitude (see the n.); 1889, B & L (likewise); 1890, F & H; app. † by 1920. Ex boat, n., 1.—2. V.i., "'To boat with another"; to go in with him', i.e., join with, in an enterprise: American: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1920. Cf. S.E. to be in the same boat.

boat, get the. See boat, n., 1, ref. of 1874, 1886.

boat and oar. A prostitute: Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on whore.

bob, n. 'A shop-lift's comrade, assistant, or receiver,' B.E., 1698; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'The tenth is a Shop-lift, who carries a Bob, | When she rangeth the City the Shops for to Rob'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'A Shoplifter's assistant, or one that receives and carries off the stolen goods'; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell); by 1889 (B & L), † in Britain; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms, 'A petty shop thief'; 1927, Kane; in U.S.A., ob. by 1947. Prob. by personification.—2. 'Bobb, sixpence,' says Potter, 1797: not sixpence, but a shilling; 1795, Sessions, Dec. (p. 33), 'Bobs and half-bulls . . . shillings and half-crowns'; 1812, J. H. Vaux (bob and bobstick); 1821, J. Burrowes; 1825, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, I; by 1830 at latest, it was s. Earliest record: Sessions, 1789 (see flat, n., 4). Perhaps ex bobstick.—3. Hence, a counterfeit shilling: 1810, Sessions, Oct. p. 413, 'Bobs are counterfeit shillings'; 1825, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, I, trial of Henry Oliver, 'I said two score—meaning what are called bobs—that is, counterfeit shillings'; 1831, op. cit., VII, garter-bob, 'a shilling with a "garter" round it' and plain bob, 'a shilling without that mark'; † by 1890.—4. See wedge bob.—5. See bob, all is, ref. of 1818.—6. Fifty strokes of the lash: convicts': oa. 1820-70: 1859 (see bull, n., 2). Perhaps because they made the victim bob or finch, but prob. in relation to tester, 2, and bull, n., 2, and canary, 4.—7. A till: see pinch a bob. A personification or perhaps a deliberate perversion of lob, 1.—8. A shoplifter: U.S.A.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Perhaps ex the way he bobs in and out of the crowd.—9. A dollar: U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. Damon Runyon, Furthermore, 1938.

bob, v., 'to cheat, trick, defraud', is classified by B.E. as c.; but it is S.E., dating from C. 14.

bob, adj. See bob cull and bob, all is. W. H. Smith, in The Individual, Nov. 15, 1836, has 'Her duds are bob' (neat): but I suspect this nuance.

bob, all is. All is safe; the bet is secured: 1698, B.E.; A New Canting Dict., 1725, has the slight variation, it's all bob; 1785, Grose; 1818, The London Guide, the shortened form bob ('"Go along, Bob", that is to say,—"proceed vigorously in the robbery"'); 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul, 'Every thing was quite bob in the meantime'; 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L; † by 1889. Ex dial. bob, 'pleasant, agreeable', according to B & L.

bob cull. In 1698, B.E. (at cull, cully), 'A Bob-cull, c. a sweet-humour'd Man to a Whore, and who is very complaisant'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'A bob cull, a good-natured quiet fellow'; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; by 1859, current in New York—see Matsell's Vocabulary; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; by 1920, †. Cf. bob, all is; and see cull, n.

bob groin. See groin.

bob ken. See boman ken.

Bob my pal. A girl: rhyming s. on gal; but orig. (ca. 1850-70) it was c.: witness 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857; prob. c. also in New York: Matsell, Vocabulary, 1859; M & B, 1944, record it as Bob's my pal.

bob-stick. See bobstick.

bob(-)tail. A eunuch; an impotent man: possibly c.; prob. s. A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1830. (The sense, 'a light woman', is s.) I.e., light or deficient—of tail, penis.—2. A short local freight train; or, one that carries passengers too: American tramps': 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A street car, formerly of scant length. An old term'; extant.—3. Loss of a job; only doubtfully c.: 1931, Irwin. Ex the Service sense, 'a dishonourable discharge'.

bobbed, cheated, tricked: see bob, v.

bobbery, given by Potter, 1797, as c. is s.—from India.

bobby horse; chink-backed 'un. A horse with a very weak spine: horse-copers': the former, s.; the latter, prob. c.: since ca. 1840: 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . the Autobiography of a Gipsy (p. 113).

bobby twister. 'A burglar who would hesitate at nothing, even to shooting any policeman [Bobby] who might be endeavouring to capture him': 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; ob.

Bob's my pal. See Bob my pal.

bobstick. 'Bobstick of rum slim. This is a shilling's worth of [the best] punch': 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; † certainly by 1889 (B & L) and prob. by 1870. I.e., a bob's (or one shilling's) length (hence, worth). But if bobstick be the orig. term, then the first element is prob. a personification: a Bob stick. In C. 18 Scottish c., the term is peg, or peg stick, both recorded by Potter in 1797; perhaps that peg is Peg, such personifications being common.

boco or boko, 'the nose': not c. but low, or at any rate, proletarian s. Prob. an o-ing of beak, the nose.

bodikin. A brothel: 1823, Bee, 'A contraction of Bawdy-ken'; † by 1900.

body-cover. A coat: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; 1890, F & H; † by 1910.

body slangs. Body irons, as opp. to the ordinary irons on hands or feet: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; app. † by 1930. See slangs, 2.

body-snatcher. 'Body-Snatchers. A term for Bailiffs and their followers. The ways and means used by Bailiffs to get at and set people, are innumerable'; for instance, they provoke a quarrel, and 'in the struggle . . . the Bailiff who has the Writ against you, snatches your body directly': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1785, Grose, 'Bum Bailiffs'; 1809, Andrewes, 'Bailiff[s], Police officers'; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1859, H; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (glossary); by 1900 †. A bailiff or a policeman snatches at one and hales one off.—2. A cat-stealer: 1859, H; 1870, The Broadway, Nov., 'Body-snatchers, who confine their depredations to dogs and cats'; ob.—3. Hence, a dog-stealer: 1870 (see sense 2); ob.—4. An undertaker: U.S.A.: 1933, Eagle; extant. Ex English low s.—as in Jon Bee, 1823; cf. the 1914-18 military s. sense, a stretcher-bearer.—5. A kidnapper: U.S.A.: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant—but ob. Cf. the London street s. sense of the mid-C. 19: a cabman.

boe. See bo.

boffo. A year: convicts': 1934, Rose; 1935, Hargan, 'Boffoes—years'; extant. Why?

bog. When short for bog house, 'a privy', it is s., not c. (The same applies to bog, 'to stool').—2. See bogs.

bog-man. One who works in 'the bogs': 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, p. 216; ob.

bogey or boggy, 'the human behind', is not c. but low s. (Grose).—2. An informer to the police: 1924 (see brassey); extant.—3. A detective: 1931, Brown; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café-Bar; 1934, Axel Bracey; 1934, Ex-Sgt B. Leeson, Lost London, where its prior-to-1914 use is implied; 1935, David Hume, Call In the Yard; 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; 1936, Mark Benney, Low Company; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1937, Charles Prior; 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night; 1940, A. Bracey, Flower on Liberty; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime; 1943, Black; 1943, Jim Phelan, Letters; and since.—4. A place very difficult to burgle: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'This is a sweet gaff. . . . I wouldn't be on it if it was a boggy'; extant.

boggy. 'Kiddy, covey', i.e. a young thief, a fellow, says Sinks of London Laid Open, 1848: but there is some error.

bogh, 'to get, hold, make work', is tinkers' s. (Shelta): 1889, B & L.

bogs, the. 'Outdoor work, "the bogs", as the places where the different outside gangs worked were called' at Dartmoor convict prison: 1877 (but referring to ca. 1870), Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer, '"I'm out on the bogs," the other man answered'; extant. The ground thereabouts being so damp.

bogus, n.—An apparatus for the coining of counterfeit money: 1827, The Painesville Telegraph, July 6, 'The casting of a Bogus at one of our furnaces' (O.E.D.); 1850, The Frontier Guardian, Jan. 23, 'A part of the bogus machine' (Thornton); app. † by 1860. J. R. Lowell derived it ex Fr. bagasse, 'cane-trash', 'cane-waste'; 'Webster' suggests origin in Eng. dial. tantarabogus, 'a goblin', which came, in U.S.A., to be applied to any awkward or ugly object or mechanism; very tentatively, I propose derivation ex C. 18—early 19 American cal(l)ibogus (Grose), a beverage composed of rum and spruce beer (an inferior beer, it was): a word ignored by The O.E.D. and by Webster.—2. Hence, counterfeit coin: 1839, Mrs Kirkland (O.E.D.); 1844, The Nauvoo Neighbour, June 12, 'Blacklegs and bogus-makers' (Thornton); 1847, The National Police Gazette, Jan. 9; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (at queer ridge); 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, 'Bad coin'; by 1870, s.—3. Hence, counterfeit bank-notes: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'They provided Gordon with marked money to buy the bogus of Kate'; by 1880, at latest, it was (low) s.

bogus, adj. (Of coin; hence of any money) bad, false, counterfeit: 1842, J. A. Clark (D.A.E.); 1846, The National Police Gazette, July 11; 1848, Bartlett, Americanisms; 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; 1872, G. P. Burnham (paper money); by 1875, s. Ex the n.

bogy. See bogey.

bohunk. As 'a Hungarian' it is s. 'Bohemian + Hungarian': Webster.—2. Hence, 'a poor specimen' (of a fellow): 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; extant—but by 1940, it was s.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) Among tramps, it = 'a Polish or other Slavic laborer' (Stiff, 1931): since ca. 1920: extant. Among convicts (C. 20), any Slav: Ersine, 1933.

boil, n. The Watch; a search: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'The boyle was up, wee had good lucke, | in frost, or and in snow: | When they did seeke, then we did creepe, | and plant in ruffemans low'; † by 1690. Perhaps ex sense 1 of:—

boil, v., is explained by S. Rowlands in Greenes Ghost Haunting Coniecatchers, 1602: 'Now if the cutpurse denie snappage [i.e., a share in the booty], his cloyer or follower forthwith boyles him, that is, bewrayes him'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; 1611, Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 'Wee are boyl'd, pox on her; see Moll the roaring drabbe'; † by 1700. To get him into hot water.—2. To distil: U.S. bootleggers': since ca. 1922: 1930, Burke (quot'n at white, n., 7); post-1934, reminiscent. Ex the process adopted by bootlegging distillers.—3. Short for boil up, v. Ersine, 1933.

boil-out. (An) abstinence from drugs: addicts': since ca. 1910. BVB. The abstainer 'sweats it out'—endures the craving, the agony.

boil-up, n. 'A period of rest, usually beside the railroad right of way and near a stream of some sort, with an opportunity to wash the clothes and person, repair clothing, etc.,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': C. 20; since ca. 1930, also English: 1933, Ersine (boilup); 1934, Convict, 'The boil-up can is generally an oil can with the top removed'; 1935, Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, a big tea-making; and others.

boil up, v. To wash clothes in the open air, boiling them over an open fire: tramps': C. 20: 1907, Jack London, The Road (see quot'n at batter the drag); 1922, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life, 'We "boiled up" regularly . . . and hung our shirts and other articles of apparel on the nearby willows to dry'; 1931, Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; et al.

boiled. Thoroughly intoxicated—incapable of action, incapable of consecutive thought: mostly tramps': since ca. 1918: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine. Looking as if he has been through the processes of laundering.

boiled rag. A hag: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

boiled up. Angry; excitable; in a nervous, excited condition: esp. convicts': 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; extant.

boiler. The sense 'stomach' (Leverage, 1925) is s., not c.—2. 'One who extracts the nitro-glycerine from the dynamite,' Leverage, 1925; extant.—3. A still: bootleggers': Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke, 'Get a boiler an' muscle in on the alky racket'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Rose; then merely historical.—3A. One who supervises an illegal still: ca. 1921–34, Ersine.—4. A camp cook: tramps': C. 20; Irwin, 1931. He is good at boiling water and stews.—5. An automobile: 1931, Irwin; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex railroad engine's boiler.—6. (Cf. sense 2, and can.) A safe: Oct. 9, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; extant.

boiler-room. A room, an office, from which bogus stocks-and-shares salesmen call up 'on the long distance telephone to get the suckers interested,' Julien Proskauer, Suckers All, 1934: commercial underworld: since the mid 1920's: 1931, Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering; 1933, Ersine; Feb. 19, 1935, The New York Sun; 1938, Charles E. Still, Styles in Crime; extant. The room whence one puts on the pressure: steam pressure: heat: boilers.

boilermaker's delight. Inferior whiskey: since ca. 1921: 1934, Rose; ob. With an allusion to boiler, 3.

boiling. In 'figging law' (q.v.) boiling is given by Dekker (1608) as a synonym of smoking; app. this term did not survive the C. 17, at the beginning of which it arose. Cf. boil, q.v. Perhaps on the analogy of smoke and steam.

boilup. See boil-up (n.).

bok. 'The man's [viz., a typical male crook's] girl is' his "bok". If he is married and has an additional girl friend, this is his "spaar bok",

The Cape Times, May 23, 1946: South Africa: late C. 19–20. Afrikaans: spaar, obviously, is 'spare'; with Afrikaans bok, 'goat; antelope', cf. Dutch bok, 'a goat'—in s., 'a mistake or blunder'.

boke, 'the nose', was never lower than proletarian s. in England; but it may, in New York, have been c. in the mid-C. 19—witness Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859. Ex low s. boco or boko.

boliver. 'He continued to eat "bolivers" (cookies),' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; ob.

boloney; occ. baloney. An automobile tyre: racketeers': Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke (bal-); Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'Repairs and selling us boloneys would mount up fine'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; by ca. 1940 (see article by Doris McFerran in The American Mercury of April 1941) it was, in the form bologna at least, truck (i.e., lorry) drivers' s. Ex its similarity to a large Bologna sausage.

bolt, n. 'A sudden escape of one or more prisoners from a place of confinement is termed a bolt': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1897, Price Warung, Tales of the Old Regime (the old convict days in Australia); by 1870, no longer c. Ex the v. bolt, 'to make off, to escape', which, orig. low s., soon > familiar S.E.—2. (A sentence to) penal servitude: 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail, "'Long bil expects bolt"''; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1930. A corruption—or perhaps a disguising—of boat (n.), q.v.—3. A roll of money (i.e., notes): U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

bolt, v., 'to leave in haste' (No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904), is not, I think, c., even in U.S.A.; in England, it is certainly s.—orig., low s.—2. To strike (a person): 1925, Leverage; but low s. rather than c.

bolt, get the. To receive a sentence to penal servitude: mostly convicts': 1889, B & L; † by 1930. See bolt, n., 2.

bolt, make a. To depart hastily: 1812, J. H. Vaux; by 1845 or 1850, it had ceased to be c. See bolt, n., 1.

bolt in tun. 'Bolt-in-Tun, a term founded on the cant word bolt, and merely a fanciful variation, very common among flash persons, there being in London a famous inn so called; it is customary when a man has run away from his lodging, broke out of a jail, or made any other sudden movement, to say, The Bolt-in-tun is concerned; or, He's gone to the Bolt-in-tun; instead of simply saying, He has bolted, etc.': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee, "'I am Bolt in Tun"', used in the same way.; 1823, Egan's Groser; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1920.

bolter. 'One that dare not show his face' (Potter, 1797): either an error for the term in the next or a s. ellipsis thereof.—2. One who makes a bolt (see bolt, n., 1): Australian convicts': ca. 1820–70. Passim in the works of Marcus Clarke, Price Warung, Louis Becke.

bolter of the Mint or of Whitefriars. 'A Bolter of White-fryers. One that does but peep out of White-fryers, and retire again like a Rabbit out of his hole', Thos Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, 1688; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose. Prob. the term was † as c. as early as 1740 and any later references are merely historical. Shadwell's definition implies the origin.

bolts and nuts. 'Feeble-minded, silly,' Ersine: since ca. 1920. An elaboration of synonymous nuts.

boltsprit, a nose : s., not c. despite the assertion of A New Canting Dict., 1725. Orig., doubtless, nautical.

boman or bowman, n. 'How my Boman he hick'd away' is glossed 'Her Rogue had got away' in Harper's 'A Canting Song' (in John Thurmond's Harlequin Sheppard), 1724; 1797, Potter, 'A thief, a dependant on lewd women'; 1809, Andrewes, 'Bowman—a thief'; 1823, Egan's Grose (id.); † by 1830. Either an abbr. of boman prig or derived ex :

boman or bowman, adj. Good; profitable: 1698, B.E. (see next entry); † by 1800. Perhaps Fr. beau, 'fine, handsome' + man short for mans.—2. Hence (?), safe; without danger: 1698, B.E. (at ken), 'Then we'll pike, tis all Bowman, c. we will be gone, all is well, the Coast is clear'; 1718, C. Hitching; 1735, Select Trials; 1776, John Villette, The Annals of Newgate (boman); † by 1830.—3. Resolute, brave; skilful: 1718, C. Hitching (see boman prig); 1746 (see boman boy); † by 1830. Ex sense 1.

boman (or bowman) boy; gen. pl. A smart criminal; a well-dressed criminal: 1746, trial of Henry Simms, in Select Trials, from 1741 to 1764, I (pub. 1764), '... Tied my Garters below Knee, telling me that was the way the Bowman Boys wore them'; † by 1820.

boman ken. 'A bob Ken, or a Bowman-ken, c. a good or well Furnished House, full of Booty, worth Robbing; also a House that Harbours Rogues and Thieves,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, erroneously ken Bowman; † by 1890. See boman and ken.

boman (or bowman) prig. A skilful, a very experienced thief: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'Those three young Lads, altho' they are young, yet they are Boman-Prigs, and are such as go on the Lay call'd the Dub'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Bowman-Prigg, an eminent Thief or Villain; a dextrous Cheat, or Housebreaker'; 1728, D. Defoe; app. † by 1830. I.e., a prig that is a 'good' or 'fine' (Fr. beau) man at his thieving; or rather, boman, adj. + prig, n.

bomber. A burglar, skilled in the professional use of explosives: since ca. 1939. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.

bombers, the three. See three bombers.

bon ton (or hyphenated). 'In six weeks I was able to finish my task by 3 o'clock, and spent the other hour and a half working for a "bon-ton", the term applied to these prisoners who are able to have their work done for them': San Quentin: C. 20. The quot'n comes from My Life in Prison, pub. in 1912 and written by Donald Lowrie, who served a sentence there in 1901–11; cf. G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924, where it is defined as 'Rich person. A prisoner who has an easy job'; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Fr. bon ton (lit., good tone), fashionable.

bona, 'good', is parlyaree: B & L, 1889. As 'a very pretty girl, bona is low s. and gen. contrasted with dona.

bonarue. See boneroo.

bond. A group of persons: South America: C. 20. Harry Franck, Working North from Patagonia, 1921. Perhaps ex Ger. Bund.

bonds. Counterfeit money: 1925, Leverage; extant.

bondsman. A professional payer of bail for prostitutes: white-slave traffic: C. 20. Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, 1936.

bone, 'a dollar', is not c. but police s. In, e.g., A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, 1906, at p. 50. Prob. ex bone, adj.

bone, v. To take; seize; steal: 1698, B.E., 'I have Bon'd her Dudds, . . .', c. I have took away my Mistress Cloathes' and 'Boning the Fence, c. finding the Goods where Conceal'd, and Seizing'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1817, Sessions; 1818, The London Guide, 'Bone, to run away with'; 1822, David Carey, Life in Paris; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; by this time, it was current in U.S.A. (Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859); 1860, Charles Martel, Diary of an Ex-Detective; 1863, The Story of a Lancashire Thief; 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; by 1889 (B & L), it was low s. The origin resides in the way in which a dog runs off with a bone.—2. Hence, to arrest: 1698, B.E., 'I'll Bone ye, c. I'll cause you to be Arrested'; 1718, N. B., A Collection of Tryals; 1720, Alex. Smith, Highwayman, vol. III; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1735, Select Trials; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Boned, taken in custody, apprehended'; 1823, Bee; 1859, H; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—witness Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; † by 1887, according to Baumann, Londonismen, but still extant in 1889, according to B & L; 1890, F & H, who classify it as low s.—3. (Ex sense 1.) 'To beg; to borrow,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant.

bone, adj. Good; favourable to tramps and to itinerant vendors: tramps' c. and itinerant vendors' s.: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 218, where it is added that the corresponding sign (chalk on or near the door) is ◇; 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London; 1859, H; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; extant, though slightly ob. 'Bone, which . . . is evidently the French bon [good], has been got, probably, from the old dancing-dog men,' Henry Mayhew, The Great World of London, 1856, at p. 6.

bone-box, 'the mouth', is prob. low s., not c. Grose, 1785, 'Shut your bone box; shut your mouth.'

bone-crusher. A fierce dog: 1934, Convict; extant. Cf. bone-polisher.

bone-grubber, 'an unofficial scavenger', is not c. but low s.

bone orchard. 'A cemetery; a grave-yard; burial-place': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1902, Wallace A. Irwin, The Love Sonnets of a Hoodlum; by 1910, s.—rather low.

bone-polisher. A dog, esp. if a fierce one: tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

bone-soup. 'The game of hazard'; 1797, Potter; † by 1890. To eat bone soup is hazardous.

boner of stiff ones. 'A resurrection man, or a body-snatcher': 1828, P. Egan, Finish of Tom, Jerry and Logic; † by 1900. Ex bone, 'to steal'; stiff one is s. for 'a corpse'.

boneroo. Privileged. 'We were "boneroo" men from the start, wearing neat, made-to-measure "boneroo" uniforms,' James Spenser, Limey, 1933: San Quentin: since ca. 1920: 1933, Spenser, 'A boneroo guy' is a man with enough influence and money to wear boneroo clothes and have a boneroo job and mix with the boneroo bunch'; 1935, David Lamson (bonnyroo); 1938, Castle (bonnerue), 'Means "something better"': 1940, Leo F. Stanley, Men at Their Worst, 'A "bonarue" job'; 'I think . . . "boneroo" has a Mexican origin' (James Spenser); but Don Castle is, I believe, right in saying, 'Bonnerue, I learned, after some investigation, was derived from the French words "bonnet rouge". In certain French prisons trusties and honour men are distinguished from the common run of prisoners by the wearing of red caps. There bonnet rouge prisoners are permitted privileges denied other prisoners. They wear better clothes, eat better food, and in general have things fairly easy.'

boneyard. Whereas the sense 'cemetery' is s., the senses 'hospital; medical college' are tramps' c.; 1931, Stiff; extant. Grimly humorous.

bonfire. 'A new sweetheart,' Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936; slightly ob. Cf. s. carry a torch for (someone), to be much in love with.

bong and bonge are rare variants of bung. Harman, 1566, has both.

bong in, put the. See put . . .

bongy, in Street-Robberies consider'd, 1728, is prob. a misprint for bousy, the long s contributing to the error.

bonnerue. See boneroo.

bonnet, n. 'A concealment, pretext, or pretence; an ostensible manner of accounting for what you really mean to conceal; as a man who actually lives by depredation, will still outwardly follow some honest employment, as a clerk, porter, newsman, etc. By this system of policy, he is said to have a good bonnet if he happens to get boned; and, in a doubtful case, is commonly discharged on the score of having a good character': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose (plagiarizing Vaux); 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1864, low s. Cf. S.E. cloak used figuratively. Ernest Weekley compares the saying deux têtes dans un bonnet.—2. He who acts as cover to a thimble-rigger: 1851, Borrow, Lavengro, where it is (vol. II, ch. xxv) stated, unequivocally, to be c.; 1868, B. Hemyng, Secrets of the Turf; 1889, B & L; † by 1920. Cf. bonnetter, 2, than which it is of a more extended meaning.—3. A variant of bonnetter, 3: gamblers': 1847, Sessions (Surrey cases, p. 706); 1851, Mayhew (see jolly, n., 2); 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H; 1889, B & L; 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights (a cardsharp's accomplice; whether onlooker or player); extant.—4. 'Cap used for exploding dynamite,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; U.S.A.: ca. 1915–40. Ersine, 'a brass dynamite cap': a pun on bonnet and cap.

bonnet, v. 'To bonnet for a person, is to corroborate any assertion he has made, or to relate facts in the most favourable light, in order to extricate him from a dilemma, or to further any object he has in view': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, plagiarizingly; 1887, H. Baumann, Londonismen; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; by 1900, †. Cf. sense 1 of the n.

bonnetter. The agential n. to bonnet, v.: C. 19; in C. 20, almost †.—2. See egger: since ca. 1810; virtually †. Also used of any blow or punch on the head, as in Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1821–33, trial of Robert Mace in 1832, and in Sinks of London, 1848, and in B & L, 1889.—3. 'Bonnetter—one who entices another to play,' i.e. to gamble: 1839, Brandon, who classifies it as gypsy c.; 1859, H (bonnetter); by 1859, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulum; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; by 1920, ob.—4. 'A fortune-telling cheat': 1859, H (bonnetter); † by 1930. A gypsy term, says H.

bonny fair. Hair: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928; M & B, 1944. A corruption of English rhyming s., Barnet Fair.

bonny lay, go upon the. 'To undertake highway robbery': U.S.A.: 1794, Henry Tufts, A Narrative (pub. 1807); app. † by 1870. The lay (n., 2) is a 'bonny' one—while it lasts.

bonnyroo. See boneroo.

bono. 'Bono (good) is used both as an adjective, and as an exclamation of approval or admiration' (Thomas Frost, Circus Life and Circus Celebrities, 1875): not c. but parlyaree. Italian word.

bonton. See bon ton.

bonzer and bosker, 'fine, excellent; very agreeable or welcome,' are recorded by Leverage, in 1925, as American c. If genuinely so, then they have been adopted from Australian crooks: bonzer (or bonza) is Australian s., ex bonanza, and bosker is merely a perversion, or a corruption, of bonzer.

boo-gee. 'The packing between the needle and the medicine dropper of an emergency [hypodermic] syringe,' BVB, 1942 (with variants gee, gee rag, shoulder): drug addicts': since ca. 1930. The gee of boo-gee is perhaps gee (a drug), and gee used in this sense is a shortening; shoulder, ex the position the packing occupies.

boob. Of a professionally trained young pick-pocket. Alfred Henry Lewis, in Apaches of New York, 1912, remarks that he is at last 'fit to go out into the world and look for boobs' (victims); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1920, s. A special application of the gen. s. boob (a fool), short for booby.—2. Hence, or from the gen. s. sense: a person uninitiated in crime: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—3. A police station; a prison: 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, 'Stooling for the coppers and swearing many a right guy into the boob'; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13, '“I know you're innocent,—everybody is,” said Lal soothingly. “I'm the only guilty man in boob”'; Feb. 6, 1926, Flynn's; by 1927, low s. Short for booby hatch.

booby. A police-station; more usually, a prison: Australia: late C. 19–20; ob. Baker, 1945, records it for 1898 and imputes obsolescence. Short for booby hatch.—2. A cell: English: since ca. 1925. Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938.

booby hatch. 'Station-house; watch-house': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, where it is defined 'jail'; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, A Scholar Tramp; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A police station or village jail'; extant. Cf. booby hatch.—2. An asylum for the insane: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1933, Eagle; extant. Cf.:

booby house. An asylum for the insane: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; ob. Cf. cranky hatch and booby hatch, 2.

booby hatch. A police-station: 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1931, Brown, 'A prison'—the predominant post-1918 sense; 1938, F. D. Sharpe ('A cell'); extant. Perhaps suggested by booby hatch, 1.

boodle. 'A quantity of bad money,' Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859: 1845, The National Police Gazette, Dec. 6; 1858, Harper's Weekly (April 3), 'Boodle is a flash term used by counterfeiters . . . The leaders [of the gang] were the manufacturers and bankers of the boodle' (cited by Thornton, An American Glossary, 1912); 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'Boodle, counterfeit notes, placed in bundles or parcels'; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1936, Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 'Crooked money package at exchange'; extant. Ex Dutch boedel, 'estate, property; goods and chattels'.—2. The derivative sense, '(illicit) booty', is s., not c. (G. W. Walling, Recollections, 1887.).—3. Money: 'American tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, p. 272; 1900, Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman; 1903, Flynt, Rudrick Clowd (as a criminals term); by 1910, s. Ex sense 1.—4. Among 'tramps, petty crimes: since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931. Prob. ex 2.—5. 'Petty graft exacted from prisoners by a turnkey or [a] "trusty";' Irwin, 1931: convicts': since ca. 1910. Ex 2.

boodle, adj. corresponding to the n. Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs, 1872, 'The boodle gang'; 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective, 'The "Boodle" Game' and 'the "Boodle Swindlers"'; ob.

boodle, carry. To carry the bulk of the counterfeit money that is being passed on a given occasion: since the 1850's: 1859, implied in boodle-carrier, q.v.; 1890, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms, 'To utter base coinage'; extant. See boodle, n.

boodle, fake. See fake boodle.

boodle(-)buyer. 'A "fence" who buys bulky items,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941: since ca. 1930. See boodle, n., 1, 2, and buyer.

boodle can; boodle jail. 'Boodle jail—A jail that may be worked for a good winter's lodging,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1918: 1931, IA, 'Boodle jail.—A . . . jail in which it is possible to spend 30 or 60 or 90 days, as the tramp elects, by arrangement with the constable or sheriff . . . merely another case where John T. Taxpayer "takes the rap"'; 1938, but in ref. to its use ca. 1920, Francis Chester, Shot Full; extant. Ex boodle, n., 2, 3.

boodle-carrier. 'The man who carries the bulk of the counterfeit money that is to be passed. The person who passes, or shoves it, as it is called, having but one "piece" at a time. The fellow with the boodle keeps close in the wake of the shover, to receive the good money, and supply him with the counterfeit, as occasion requires': 1859, Matsell; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham defines it as a bearer and seller of 'boodle' funds; 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; May 25, 1929, Flynn's; slightly ob. by 1945. See boodle, n.

boodle-game. A cheating process or trick: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1886, A. Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective. Not c., but police and detective s. Also the five-dollar boodle-game: Burnham.

boodler. A passer of counterfeit notes; esp., one who passes such notes by means of 'the boodle-game' (a variety of the confidence trick): 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1888, George Bidwell, Forging His Chains; 1890, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; extant. Ex boodle, n., 1.—2. (Hence, or ex boodle, n., 2.) 'What the underworld calls a "boodler"—that is, a ward politician of the mercenary type, a herder of illegal voting gangs, a fixer for criminals, a grafter who preyed alike on crooks and decent folks who foolishly or through circumstances, laid themselves open to blackmail,' Roy W. Hinds, 'Ringtails', in Flynn's, Aug. 28, 1926; extant.

boogie, boogy. A Negro: 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, and 1925 (Aug. 1), Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 'To hell with those boogies—I'm going to knock off the pete'; 1931, Irwin; 1935, Hargan, who spells it boogy; extant. Perhaps ex bogeyman.—2. (Usually boogie.) 'Silent and morose, Muldoon absorbed the slang of the prison as the months passed. The "big house" was the penitentiary itself. The hospital was the "boogie",' Jim Tully, Jarnegan, 1928; extant.—3. A 'hobo who imposes upon jails for lodging,' Howard N. Rose, 1934: tramps': since ca. 1920.

book, n. See books.—2. A pocket-book (containing bank-notes, etc.): U.S.A.: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft (Glossary); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'Her "book"', which looked fat, was sticking out of her skirt'; current also in Canada (anon. letter, June 9, 1946); by 1945, slightly ob. in U.S.A. Obviously by shortening.—3. Imprisonment; esp. in doing the book, serving a (life) sentence: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; 1931, Irwin; 1933, Ersine, '"The judge passed him the book"'; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor, 'I'm a three-time loser and the next trip would mean "the book"', in ref. to the Baumes Law, which decrees that a fourth term of penal servitude brings with it a life-sentence; 1934, Convict; 1935, Hargan; 1936, C. F. Coe, Ransom, 'In the convict talk, the "book" is a life sentence'; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; 1938, Convict 2nd; et al. Cf. throw the book at, q.v.—4. As the book, it is a telephone directory: commercial underworld: since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. Prob. short for the jocular the book of words.

book, v.; gen. passive. To sentence: 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, Appendix (II), 'For they grabbed me on the priggish lay, | And I know I'm booked for Botney Bay', glossed as 'sentenced'; 1831, W. T. Moncrieff, Van Diemen's Land; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1889 (B & L), low s. Ex S.E. book, 'to enter in a book; to register': here, to put a person's name down in the book of prison-sentences.—2. To catch; to arrest: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulary); 1882, James D. McCabe, New York; by 1890 (F & H), it was low s.—3. The sense 'to list in police records' is police j.—not c.

book and cover, do the. To be imprisoned for the term of one's natural life—not 21 or 25 or 30 years, but literally the remainder of one's life: convicts' (esp. at Sing Sing); since ca. 1925. In, e.g., Hargan, 1935. An elaboration of book, n., 3.

bookful. See do a bookful.

bookie. An impresario and organizer (and 'big shot') in the white-slave trade: C. 20. In, e.g., Hickman Powell, Ninety Times Guilty, 1939. He books girls in (to the racket): but the term derives imm. ex the synonymous booker, which is white-slave-traffic j.

booking ken is a misprint for boozing ken in G. P. Burnham's Three Years with Counterfeiters, 1875.

books. 'Cards to play with. To plant the books; to place the cards in the pack in an unfair manner': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III; by 1850, current in U.S.A.—witness Judson, New York, 1851; 1874, H; 1887, Baumann; by 1890, low s. Ex the resemblance of a pack of cards to a very small book viewed externally.

books, plant the. See plant the books.

booly(-)dog. 'An officer; a policeman': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; † by 1900. A perversion of bulldog, prob. via Fr. bouledogue.

boom. Dagga (Cannabis indica): South Africa: late C. 19–20. The Cape Times, May 22, 1946. Ex Dutch boom, 'a tree': cf. tree of knowledge.

boomer. 'A hobo who solicits subscriptions for magazines, or engages in clerical work or anything high-toned while he is on the bo,' P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat: 'Here,' writes Godfrey Irwin in letter of Sept. 13, 1937, 'I refuse to agree at all. See my American Tramp and Underworld Slang [1931]'; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, where (p. 156) it appears to mean 'an experienced, or very resourceful hobo'; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Boomer. A high-class travelling criminal'; 1931, Stiff, 'A hobo who is always on the go. He has a travel itch'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A migratory worker with some particular trade, travelling from town to town and from locality to locality as work offers'; 1934, Convict; extant. Prob. ex the Standard American sense, 'enthusiastic advocate or supporter'.—2. Hence, a high-class travelling crook: 1931, IA; 1934, Rose; extant. Ersine, 1933, confines the term to a thief that works a district for a short time and then leaves the local crooks 'to stand the heat'.

boord(e). See bord.

boose. Liquor: 1536, Copland (bouse); 1566, Harman (bouse); ibid., but in the dialogue, the rare—prob. mere misprint—form, buose; ibid., and likewise in the dialogue (as again in the quot'n from R. Brome at gan), we see that this n., unelaborated, gen. = 'ale or beer', esp. when set in contradistinction to rum boose (q.v., 2nd quot'n); 1608–9, Dekker; 1610, Rowlands, bouse; ca. 1635, Anon., The Beggar-Boy of the North, 'To pay for my boose of all things I am willing'; 1665, R. Head (bouse); 1676, Coles (booz); 1688, Randle Holme (bouse); 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (booze); 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'we have insensibly adopted some of their Terms into our Vulgar Tongue, as Bite and Bilk . . .; Bounce . . .; Bowse, strong drink . . .', whence it would seem that booze is, from ca. 1720, to be considered (low) s. in England. In the U.S.A., however, it may have been c. until ca. 1910 (see, e.g., No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, p. 246). Prob. ex the v.—2. Hence, contraband prison liquor: U.S.A.: 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; extant.

boose, v. Harman, 1566, 'To bowse, to drynke'; at the same date, Harman has the v.t. sense, 'to spend in drink', expressed thus: 'Why, hast thou any lowre in thy bong to bouse?'; 1676, Anon., A Warning to House-keepers, 'To take our Penitency | And boose the water cold'; 1698, B.E., 'We Bows'd it about, we Drank damn'd hard'; 1724, Harper (in Thurmond's Harlequin Sheppard), 'But had he not Bowz'd in the Diddle Shops, | He'd still been in Drury-Lane'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. From ca. 1730, the term ranked as low s., though it was still used by the underworld; in C. 19 America, it was almost c.—witness 'The Flash Language' in The Ladies' Repository, 1848. In C. 14–15, bouse was not c.; but, esp. in forms booze and (less gen.) boose, it app. > c. in the 1530's. Ultimately ex L. bibere, 'to drink', prob. via a Low L. form, and certainly a direct importation from Middle Dutch (bousen or busen: with cognates in German).

boose (or booze) a ken is a spurious phrase in 'The House-Breaker's Song' (Pickwick Abroad, 1839), defined by the author, G. W. M. Reynolds, as '[to] drink freely'.

boose-casa. A public-house: 1859, H (booze-casa); † by 1920. See the elements.

booser. See boozier.

boosey. See boosy.

boosing ken. See boozing ken.

boost, n. Assistance; a kind word in season: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing: not c., but s. and, later, coll. Cf. sense 1 of the v.—2. See on the boost. But also independently: 'a boost' being a shoplifter's modus operandi, whereas 'the boost' is shoplifting: Dec. 24, 1932, Flynn's, Roscoe Dowell, 'Watch out for the "Benny Boost"': 1937, E. H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant.

boost, v., in the sense 'to assist' (a person), is not, as No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, supposes, a c. term; orig. s., it soon > coll.—2. Hence, to flatter (a person): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1920, s.—3. To be a shoplifter: 1912 (implied in booster, 2); 1928, May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; Nov. 25, 1933, Flynn's; 1934, Convict; extant. Cf. hoist.—4. Hence, to steal (goods) from a shop, a store: Aug. 3, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant.

booster. A 'shill'—i.e., 'one who assists a crooked gambler by pretending to play as an outsider, but who merely makes the trimming of the unwary sucker a certainty,' Will Irwin, Confessions of a Con Man, 1909 (but valid for the 1890's); 1914, J. H. Keate, The Destruction of Mephisto's Greatest Web (i.e., that woven by crooked gamblers); 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; July 1928, The White Tops; by 1935, police and journalistic s. Merely a c. development of the basic sense, 'a raiser', of the long-established word.—2. A shoplifter: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'A gifted booster . . . of the feminine gender'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1918, J. M. Sullivan (The American Law Review, Dec. issue); 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom ('Woman thief or shoplifter'), 'Swell booster—expert woman thief, shoplifter'; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1928, May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May; 1928, John O'Connor; April 26, 1930, Flynn's, Lieut. Tom McGrath; Nov. 1, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Dec. 24, 1932, Flynn's, Roscoe Dowell; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Louis Berg; 1934, Convict; Aug. 3, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant. The thief lifts (raises or 'boosts') the article and then removes it.

boosy. Drunken: 1536, Robert Copland (bousy cove); 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light (bowsy Cove); 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (bowsy); 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Bowsy, Drunk'; 1785, Grose (boosey); 1797, Potter, 'Boosy cull, a drunken man'; 1809, Andrewes (boosey); 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H (boozy),—but by 1850, it was low s. Ex boose, n.

boosy cock. A man that is drunk; a drunkard: 1741, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. III (Catherine Lineham), 'We espied a Boozey-Cock very bung, making Water against a Post'; † by 1870.

boot, n. A strong, esp. if pleasurable, sensation; a thrill: Sept. 6, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; 1929–31, Kernôt; 1934, Howard N. Rose; by 1940, (low) s. Hence, the still c. nuance, 'narcotic exhilaration (BVB, 1942): see belt. As the literal give (someone) the boot is to the lit. give (him) a kick, so is the figurative give the boot to the fig. give a kick ('Why do you take the stuff?'—'It gives me a kick').

boot, v. To spoil, esp. by being over-hasty: since ca. 1935. W. R. Burnett, High Sierra, 1940, 'We sure been a long time on this caper and we don't want to boot it now'. Ex 'putting one's foot in it'.

boot-and-shoe, adj. Inefficient; helpless at or with money: since the 1920's. In, e.g., Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937; extant. 'Refers to a person who is not able to buy a pair of shoes and who therefore picks up a shoe here and a boot there' (Sutherland); cf. boots and shoes.

boot(-)leg. Coffee: convicts': 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne (glossary); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (p. 20), 'A cup of the mixture locally honored by the title of "bootleg", but appearing in the dietary scale as coffee'; ibid. (glossary, p. 254), 'Bootleg. Alleged coffee'; 1925, Leverage; extant. Bootleg, 'illicit liquor', came in during the later 1880's: this term, therefore, affords an example of convict wit.

booth, 'a house', is the mid-C. 17–mid-19 form of the C. 16–17 bough, q.v. Rare except in heave a booth, q.v. at heave. Potter, 1797, defines it as 'a house or ken for harbouring thieves', as also do Andrewes, 1809, and Sinks of London, 1848. Current in New York by 1859: Matsell.

bootie, 'a bootlegger': low s. rather than c. Damon Runyon, Furthermore, 1938.

bootleg. See boot leg.

bootlegger. 'One who is periodically sent to the workhouse' (minor jail; prison for 'short-timers'): 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the amount of coffee, he over a long period consumes; see boot leg.

boots and shoes. 'A down-and-out addict who has sold or pawned all his clothes to buy narcotics,' BVB: since ca. 1930. Hence, go boots and shoes, to do this: BVB. Cf. boot-and-shoe.

boots to, put the. See put . . .

booty, properly plunder gained from an enemy, loosely any plunder, is S.E.: but the senses 'False Play, Cheating' (A New Canting Dict., 1725) may be c. of C. 18. Prob. ex booty-play, 'false play, cheating', as recorded in B.E., 1698.

booty, play. To play unfairly; to play with intention to lose, so that one shares in one's opponents' winnings from that simpleton whom one has partnered: 1561, Awdelay. Prob. it was orig., and until ca. 1660 remained, gamesters' c.; then gen. s. I.e., to play for booty or plunder: cf. the preceding entry.

booty-play. Cheating; plunder: 1698, B.E. The term is on the border-line between s. and c.

booz. See boose, n.

booze, n. and v. See boose.

booze a ken. See boose a ken.

booze-casa. See boose-casa.

booze(-)clerk. A bartender: Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1926, ' . . . When the booze-clerk give us th' high sign he had doped th' suds or skat'; ob. See booze, n., 1.

booze-crib. A (low) public-house: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; † by 1940. Cf. boose-casa.

booze fighter; booze hoister. A drunkard: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo (the latter); 1931, Godfrey Irwin (the former),—but booze-fighter was, by 1932 at latest, low s.; and booze hoister was, by 1940, ob. See booze, n., 1.

booze-hustler. A bootlegger: April 13, 1929, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson, 'The Roaring Road', 'Made a fortune writing'—forging—'papers for booze hustlers'; 1929, E. D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago; after 1934, merely historical or, at best, reminiscent. Cf. booze run.

booze-ken is an occ. variant of boozing ken: ca. 1789, The Sandman's Wedding, 'Come wed, my dear, and let's agree, | Then of the booze-ken you'll be free'; † by 1900.

booze run. 'A settled or more or less regular business of running liquor across a Federal border, or of smuggling it from place to place,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: ca. 1922–34. See booze, n.

booze runner. 'One who hauls illegal hooch,' Ersine: ca. 1921–34, then historical.—2. Hence, a ship or a vehicle in which illicit liquor is conveyed: ca. 1922–34. Ersine.

boozen-ken is a misprint in J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., for boozing ken.

boozier. The sense 'a drunkard' is s., except perhaps in C. 17. (Middleton, 1606, has boucer and bouser.) In U.S.A., however, it may have been c. in the approximate period, 1850–1910 (see, e.g., No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, where it appears as booser). Ex boose, v.—2. A public-house; since the 1880's; perhaps orig. c., but prob. always low s. (Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow, 1903). The place at which one 'boozes'.

boozey-cock. See boosy cock.

boozing, n. Drinking liquor; drunkenness: 1741 (see busing). Directly ex the v.

boozing cheat. A bottle: 1698, B.E., 'A Boozing-cheat of Rum-gutters, c. . . . a Bottle of the best Canary,' which quot'n occurs at rum hopper; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; † by 1830. See boose, v., and cheat; lit., a drinking thing.

boozing cull (or coll). A drunkard: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, where spelt buesing coll; app. † by 1890. See booze, v., and cull, n. boozing inn. A tavern: ca. 1550–1600. Awdelay, 1562, 'Bowsying In'.

boozing(-)ken. A tavern; an inn: 1566, Harman, who writes bowsing ken; ibid., 'a bousing ken, a ale house'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'Carry it presently to the Bowsin Ken, (that was to say to the taphouse)'; 1608–9, Dekker, in Lanthorne and Candle-light, spells it bowsing ken; 1610, Rowlands, 'Bowsing ken, an Ale-house'; 1665, R. Head (bousing ken); 1688, Randle Holme (bowsing ken); 1698, B.E. (bousing-ken); 1707, J. Shirley (boozen-ken); 1718,

C. Hitching (boosing-ken); 1724, Harper (in Thurmond's Harlequin Sheppard), 'I Frisky Moll, with my Rum Coll, | Wou'd Grub in a Bowzing Ken'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., as bowsing-ken; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies Consider'd, as bousing-ken; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, as buesing ken; 1745, E. Ward, The History of Clubs; 1785, Grose, 'Bowsing ken, an alehouse, or ginshop'; 1809, Andrewes (boosing-ken); 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, III, 'All the houris of the boozing ken'; 1836, The Individual, Nov. 15; 1839, Brandon; 1841, Tait's Magazine, April, 'Flowers of Hemp'; 1845, E. Sue, Mysteries of Paris (anon. translator), ch. I, 'Tapis-franc . . .; a low haunt equivalent to . . . "a boozing ken"'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. xviii (an excellent description of a low one); 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1848, Sinks of London; by 1851, also itinerant vendors' s. (Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 218); 1857, Snowden; 1859, H, 'A low public house'; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1863, The Story of a Lancashire Thief; by 1864, low s., except in U.S., where it remained c. until ca. 1910, when it fell out of use; in Britain, it died ca. 1900—if not in the 1890's. See booze, v., and ken.

boozington (or B-). A drunken man; a drunkard: Australian convicts': prob. since ca. 1850: 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; ob. by 1910, † by 1930. Ex booze (see boose) on Lushington (the English equivalent).

boozy. See boosy.

borarco. A parlyaree form of borachio, a drunkard (often boracho, as in B.E., 1698), itself S.E. Ex Sp. borracho, a drunkard.

borax, cop the. See cop the borax.

bord; borde. 'A bord, a shylling,' Harman, 1566; 1608–9, in 'The Canters Dictionarie' forming part of Dekker's Lanthorne and Candle-light, where it is spelt borde; 1610, Rowlands, 'Boord a shilling. Halfe a Boord, sixpence'; 1665, R. Head (borde); 1676, Coles (bord); 1688, Randle Holme (borde); 1698, B.E. (bordè); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (board); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Five Shillings: Five Boards'; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. Cf. Fr. écu, 'a crown (piece)'; ex the circularity.

bore. To shoot (a person): May 1927, The Criminologist, H. Ashton-Wolfe, 'Languages and the Criminal', 'One does not [in the U.S.A.] say "I will shoot you," one says, "Yeah, per stiff—I'll bore yer"'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. drill.

borrow. A petty theft: 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail, (a prison poem ends thus:) 'Written by one who knows it to his sorrow, | Who expects 12 months for only a borrow'; by 1940, slightly ob. Horsley's apt comment is 'Cf. "Convey, the wise it call"'.
bos-ken. A farm or, more accurately, a farmhouse: tramps': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'Up at a bosken (farm) they [itinerant women vendors] 'll get among the servant girls'; 1859, H, 'A farmhouse'; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1930. L. bos, 'an ox' + ken, 'a place'.

bos-man. A farmer: vagrants': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'I've seen the swell bosmen (farmers) buy the pills to give the people standing about, just to hear the Crocus patter'; 1859, H (bosman); 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; app. † by 1930. Prob. 'ox-man': cf. bos-ken, q.v.

bosey. 'A tramp; a hobo', Leverage, 1925; ob. Corruption of boozy? on bo?

bosh. A fiddle: 1859, H; 1876, C. Hindley, The Life and Adventures of a Cheap Jack (see rocker); 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen; 1935, Gipsy Petulengro, A Romany Life; extant. 'This is a Gipsy term', says H; Romany bosh is 'a fiddle' and 'to play the fiddle'.

bosh-faker. A violinist; esp., a street fiddler: 1859, H; 1889, B & L, 'Also boshman'; 1890, F & H, who classify it as vagrants' c.; extant. See bosh and faker.

boshing. A flogging: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; 1890, F & H; † by 1910. Either a perversion of or, more prob., an error for, bashing.

boshman. An occ. variant (— 1865) of bosh-faker. (O.E.D. Supp.)

boshy, 'tipsy' (Leverage, 1925): not c., but low s. A corruption of boosy, boozy.

bosken. See bos-ken.

bosker. See bonzer.

bosky suit, be on the. To be drunk: 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London, 'The Oxonian was rather forward on the bosky suit'; † by 1880. In this phrase, bosky is s., orig. low; suit is c.: whether the phrase is c., as it may orig. have been, or low s., is debatable.

bosman. See bos-man.

boss. 'Any stranger who looks as though he might be good for a copper or a "wrap-up" or a "hand-out" of food,' Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935: tramps': since ca. 1920. A man with money or position—or both; a master; a boss.—2. In the U.S.A., among convicts, the Boss is the Warden: C. 20. Hargan, 1935.

boss of the nethers. 'Lodging-house Keeper or Master': tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; app. † by 1920. See nethers.

bossy. One's behind(?): 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'I sort o' slid down on the back of my neck, and h'isted my heels up in the air so's bossy would hit them first'; extant. One's beefiest part?—2. Beef: tramps': C. 20. Irwin, 1931.

bossy in a bowl. Beef stew: tramps': C. 20: but from at least as early as 1920, the term was also low s., esp. in cheap eating-houses: 1931, Godfrey Irwin. Ex L. bos, 'an ox' (whence bovine, Bovril, etc.). As 'calf' or 'cow', bossy has been current in Am. dial. since at least as early as 1840; and in Eng. dial. for much longer: see D.A.E. and E.D.D.

Boston bum. 'One of those superior fellows, a highbrow poser,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, IA, 'A highbrow of the Road'. 'Many of them do come from Boston or thereabouts' (Stiff): and Boston is cultured and a whit altifrontal.

bot. See bots.

botanical excursion; esp. go (up)on a (or the). Transportation to Botany Bay; to be transported as a convict to Botany Bay: 1818, The London Guide (the n. phrase); 1823, Bee (the v. phrase); † by 1890 (F & H). Cf. — botanize; go botanizing. To be transported to Botany Bay: 1819, Scott in a letter (the former); 1823, Bee (the latter); † by 1890. Cf. the preceding and the next entries.

botany, do a. See do a Botany.

Botany Bay. Asleep: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming in the hay or hitting the hay, 'sleeping; resting in bed'.

Botany Bay coat-of-arms. Blacked eyes, broken noses, bruised mouths, and bleeding knuckles: Australian convicts': ca. 1800–60. Baker, 1942. Also colonial livery: Baker, 1945. Cf. preceding entry.

Botany Bay dozen is a synonym of tester (a 25-lashes flogging): Australian convicts': early C. 19. Baker, 1945. Cf. preceding two entries.

Botany Bay-fever, 'an illness simulated in order to avoid deportation to Botany Bay', is not c. but s. The same applies to go to Botany Bay, to receive a long-term sentence.

Botany Bay swell. A freed convict: Australian: ca. 1820–60. Anon., Fell Tyrant, 1836, cited by Baker, 1945. Ironical.

bother (a person's) gob. See gob, bother.

bots. Boots: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; † by 1900. Perhaps by a would-be ribald pun.

bottle, n. As the bottle, it is pederasty, active homosexuality: C. 20. In, e.g., Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938, 'Third lagging for the bottle'.—2, 3. See bottle, at the and bottle, on the. Independently, the bottle = pickpocketry. Partridge, 1938.—4. Short for bottle and glass: C. 20.

bottle, v. "I only sing the old favourite songs. You can 'bottle' until you learn some . . ." To "bottle" is the . . . term for collecting,' W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 1936: beggars' and tramps': C. 20. It occurs also in, e.g., H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks, 1938. As though to put the money into a bottle—to 'bottle it up'.—2. See rim.—3. To silence (a person, a dog): U.S.A.: since ca. 1918. Ersine. Cf. the semantics of sense 1.

bottle, at the. 'A thief would say of a pick-pocket: "He's at the bottle," or "he's at the wizz"' (engaged in picking pockets), F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938: since ca. 1930. Here, bottle is either short for bottle of fizz, rhyming whiz(z), or ex bottle, on the.

bottle, no (or not much). No (or not much) good: 1931, Brown, 'When he got up the steps, he had a mouthpiece who was no bottle'; by 1934 (Philip Allingham, Cheapjack) it was pitchmen's and cheapjacks' s.

bottle, on the. In the hip pocket: 1931, Critchell Rimington (excerpting Variety), The Bon Voyage Book; 1932, Arthur Gardner, 'Bottle = hip pocket'; 1934, Howard N. Rose (U.S.A.); 1938, F. D. Sharpe, 'Bottle (the). The hip pocket'; extant. With a vague allusion, either to a bottle of liquor carried in the hip pocket or less prob. to a person's bladder; but see bottle, n., 4. Imm. ex the bottle as in bottle, at the, q.v.—2. Hence, engaged in pocket-picking: The Yorkshire Post, latish May (Partridge, 1938).

bottle a man in, v. 'To switch an envelope,' Leverage, 1925: on the border-line between s. and c.

bottle and glass. Posterior, buttocks: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming arse.

bottle and stopper; usually in plural. A police officer: 1928, Chicago May; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; Feb. 17, 1937, The New York Herald Tribune, Barry Buchanan; 1938, Convict 2nd; 1944, M & B. Rhyming s. on copper (policeman); prob. native to the Pacific Coast.

bottle(-)merchant. A sexual pervert (male): since ca. 1910: 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer. Ex bottle, n., 1.

bottle of fizz, the. Pickpocketry: since ca. 1930. In, e.g., F. D. Sharpe (of the Flying Squad), 1938. Rhyming the synonymous 'the w(h)izz'.

bottle of spruce. A '2' card: esp. among card-sharpers: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on deuce.

bottle wagon. 'An iron coal-car' (coal truck on the railroad): tramps': 1931, Stiff—but current since ca. 1915; extant. Ex its shape?

bottled belly-ache. Cheap beer: tramps': C. 20. In, e.g., The Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932. Cf. the coll. synonym, rot-gut.

bottler. A street band's, instrument-players', singers', collector: beggars' and tramps': April 22, 1935, Hugh Milner (private letter); 1939, James Curtis, What Immortal Hand; extant. Ex bottle, v.

bottom dealers, card-sharpers specializing in dealing themselves good cards from the bottom of the pack: not c. but j.: 1894, J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats, p. 114.

bottom road (or B—R—), the. 'A road leading (esp. from London) to the South Coast of England' (Partridge, 1937): tramps': C. 20. In, e.g., W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 1936. In distinction from The Great North Road.

bounce; boucer. C. 17 variants of boose, boozier, qq.v. The latter occurs in T. Middleton, Your Five Gallants, 1606.

boufer is a rare variant of buffer, 1, q.v.

bough. A booth; esp. in heave a bough: 1566, Harman, 'To heve a bough, to robbe or rifle a boeweth'; cf. Awdeley's phrase at heave—but Awdeley's bowth is presumably 'booth'. This sense seems to have > † by 1650, Grose's entry of 1785 being prob. merely historical.—2. Hence, a house: 1665, R. Head; 1698, B.E., 'Heave a Bough, c. to Rob a House'. This form gave way to booth, q.v.

bougy. See boogie, 1.

boulevard women, 'women who are "high-toned," keep expensive flats in residence districts and wear fine clothes,' Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, 1936: on the borderline between white-slave c. and white-slave j. Ex les grands boulevards (the fashionable boulevards) of Paris.

bounce, n., as in 'A meer Bounce, a swaggering Fellow' (A New Canting Dict., 1725), is almost certainly not c. It derives directly ex the v.—2. See rank bounce.—3. 'A showy swindler': 1859, H; 1890, F & H; ob. Cf. bounce, v., 2; but prob. ex rank bounce.

bounce, v., 'to boast or vapour', is claimed as a word orig. c. in Preface of A New Canting Dict., 1725: but The O.E.D.—rightly, I feel sure—holds it to have been S.E. ever since its rise ca. 1620. Ex † S.E. bounce, 'to go bang', to quote from the same authority.—2. To cheat (a person) out of his share: Jan. 1837, Sessions (p. 511); 1839, Brandon, who points out that it is used of the knavery of receivers; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L, 'to swindle, to cheat by false representations'; by 1890 (F & H), low s. Perhaps ex making a ball bounce: to 'play' with.—3. V.i., to walk: U.S.A.: mostly convicts': 1935, Hargan, 'Let's bounce down to the ball field'; extant. Ex the springy walk of boxers and athletes, the jaunty gait of the ostentatiously self-confident.—4. 'The shortest cut to peace was for me to "bounce"' the "Terror". ("Bouncing means delivering a blow on the enemy's head with a piece of lead concealed in a sock"), Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrow, 1939: since the 1920's. Perhaps ex s. bonce, 'the head'.

bounce, give it to 'em upon the. 'A thief, detected in the commission of a robbery, has been known by this sort of finesse'—'by assuming the appearance of great respectability and importance'—'to persuade his accusers of his innocence, and not only to get off with a good grace, but induce them to apologize for their supposed mistake, and the affront put upon him. This master-stroke of effrontery is called giving it to 'em upon the bounce': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, plagiarizingly; † by 1930.

bouncer. A bully: 1698, B.E.: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1800. Ex bounce, v.—2. 'One who contrives to steal while bargaining with the shopkeeper': 1839, Brandon; 1859, H; in the 1850's, it > current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulary); 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; 1890, F & H; † by 1920 in Britain, by 1930 in U.S.A. (teste IA, 1931).—3. See bestier; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 'Jew bouncers, those who obtain money by false notes-of-hand'; 1870, The Broadway, Nov.; 1886, W. Newton, 'The "Bouncer", or Swindler'; 1934, B. Leeson, apropos of ca. 1890–1910; † by 1920.—4. A prostitute's bully (cf. sense 1) that specializes in the role of injured husband: 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1940.—5. A 'chucker-out': American: not c. but s., orig. low. (Owen Kildare, My Mamie Rose, 1903.) Ersine's nuance, 'a speakeasy guard' is a mere special application.—6. 'A thief who commits his depredations with bravado and bullying', Sylva Clapin, Americanisms, 1903; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (U.S.A.); ob.—7. A worthless check (cheque): U.S. racketeers': Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke; 1931, Irwin; 1933, Eagle; by 1936, at latest, it was commercial s. It 'bounces back' to its recipient.

bouncing, n. Shoplifting: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); † by 1930. Cf. bouncer, 3.

bouncing ben. A learned man: 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxv, 'I, parish prig and bouncing ben'; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1900 or soon after. Here, ben prob. = Ben; bouncing, because resourceful, resilient.

bouncing cheat. 'Bouncing cheat, c. a bottle': Coles, 1676; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell—but prob. the term was never, certainly it was not so late, current in the U.S.A., for its existence in England after the C. 18 is extremely doubtful. Lit., an exploding thing: cf. bounce, v. 'From the explosion in drawing the cork' (Grose).

bouncing powder. Cocaine: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. It makes one feel high, 'exhilarated'.

bound. See bind.

bounetter. See bonneter, 3, 4.

bound. See bung. This is mainly C. 16–17 form.

bound-nipper. See bung-nipper.

bounce (Greene, 1592) is a rare variant of bung.

bouncing cheat. See bouncing cheat.

bounty-jumper, despite Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs, 1872, is obviously not c.

bouquet. A payment in pesos, esp. among pimps: a white-slavers' term used esp. in the Argentine: C. 20. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, "You have taken my woman: you owe me a 'bouquet'" . . . (A "bouquet" always means pesos.) Ex Fr. and S.E. sense.—2. In the U.S.A., a 'bundle' of hay, etc.: tramps': 1931, Stiff (see bundle-tosser); extant. Ex the pleasant smell of hay and perhaps also the gathered flowers often interspersed therewith.

boury, 'a pulse' (Andrewes, 1809), is strongly suspect, for prob. it should be bound and 'a purse'.

bouse. See boose.

bouseing or bousing ken. See boozing ken.

bouser. See buffer, 1.

bousset, 'a cardsharp's accomplice' (Kernôt, 1929–31), is slightly suspect. If genuine, it derives ex a notable card-sharp's surname.

bousy. See boosy.

bow, on the. 'Bow (the)' (pronounced "Bough"): On the bow, on the ear-hole, on the Happy New 'Ear. All three phrases are similarly used to describe "getting something for nothing", or securing entry to a place of amusement for nothing. ("I got it on the bow"), F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938: this phrase, since ca. 1930; the 2nd, since ca. 1910; the 3rd, since 1930. Prob. ex bending down (bowing) and whispering.

bow mam is an error for bo(u)man. Sinks of London, 1848.

bow-sow. Narcotics; the drug traffic; since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. Prob. a corruption of business (see biz).

bower (or Bower), the. Newgate: 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900. By poetic irony.—2. Hence, in U.S.A. (esp. New York) and in C. 20 Australia: any prison: 1859, Matsell; 1890, F & H, 'A transferred usage of the orthodox word'; 1929–31, Kernôt; 1942, Baker.

Bowery barometer. 'Curbstone philosopher from the New York main stem. General information bureau but not a highbrow,' Stiff, 1931: since ca. 1920. (Contrast Boston bum.) The Bowery, formerly a criminal, now an impoverished part of New York City.

bowl, n.; (gen. pl., bowls. A shoe; 1859, H; possibly c., but prob. low s.—H spells the pl. bowles.—2. Detection, esp. by the police: 1909, Ware, who classifies it as 'Thieves', 19 cent.' Ex bowl out.—3. An opium pipe: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex 'the bowl of an opium pipe'.

bowl, v. To detect; to arrest: June 2, 1902, Sessions, 'In case they might bowl us . . . that means "catch"'; ob. Short for bowl out.—2. To smoke opium: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 3 of the n.

bowl of chalk. Chat, conversation: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on talk.

bowl out. 'A man who has followed the profession of thieving for some time, when he is ultimately taken, tried, and convicted, is said to be bowled out at last. To bowl a person out, in the general sense, means to detect him in the commission of any fraud or speculation, which he has hitherto practised without discovery': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Bee (of crime detected); 1823, Egan's Grose; 1829, Sessions; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1851, Mayhew; by 1870, s. Ex a batsman's being bowled out at cricket.

bowler. An opium smoker: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex bowl, v., 2.

bowman. See boman.

bowse, n. and v. See boose.

bowser. See boozer.

bowsing (or -yng) in(n). See boozing inn.

bowsin(g) or bowzing ken. See boozing ken.

bowsy. See boosy.

bowze. See boose, v.

bowzing ken. See boozing ken.

box, n. A prison cell: 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'In a box of the Stone Jug I was born, | Of a hempen widow the kid forlorn'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story (U.S.A.); Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer, 'Police station or jail'; 1934, Rose, 'A jail'; 1935, Robert Faherty, Better Than Dying; extant. There, one feels 'boxed in'.—2. A bank safe: U.S.A.: 1904 (see box-man); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (p. 261); 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York (see quot'n at blow, v., 7); 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; Dec. 13, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1928, Chicago May; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 1931, D. W. Maurer; 1933, James Spenser, Limey; 1933, Eagle; 1934, James Spenser, Limey Breaks In (English); 1934, Convict; 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; 1936, Lee Duncan; Oct. 9, 1937, Flynn's, Fred. C. Painton; 1938, Castle; 1943, Black; extant. Short for strong-box.—3. A box car on a railroad: American tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, July 1931.—4. 'An asylum or prison for the criminally insane. In this sense, orig. and specifically, Dannemora [the Box]', IA, Nov. 1931; extant.—5. See hot box.—6. 'Figuratively, a place where losses go. "That bet went in the box"', Ersine, 1933; by 1939, s.—7. A phonograph: U.S.A., mostly among convicts': since ca. 1920. Castle, 1938. Ex the box in which the instrument is housed.

box, v. To lock (a person) up in prison: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open, 'Boxed, locked up'; ob. Cf. sense 1 of the n.

box A. An institution for insane convicts: convicts' (esp. at Sing Sing): from ca. 1910: Hargan, 1935. Cf. box, n., 4; 'asylum'.

box-blower and box-buster are occ. variants of box-man: the former in Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 1918; the latter in Flynn's, Feb. 27, 1937 (Cornell Woolrich).

box-car numbers. A very large sum of money, as in 'If it only costs a few bucks to square up a case, I wouldn't mind. But . . . those guys don't talk any numbers I can get my hands on; all they talk is box car numbers,' Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights, 1933; extant. Ex the 'high numbers' in the box cars of the railroads.

box-car sailor. A sailor on 'the road': tramps': since ca. 1930. American Speech, April 1944, article by Otis Ferguson.

box cars. 'Box cars are twelve spots on the dice, a losing point at "craps"', Godfrey Irwin, letter of March 15, 1937: gamblers': since ca. 1910. Also in, e.g., Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece, 1937. Box cars (merchandise and luggage vans) are much less comfortable to travel in than passenger cars.

box-getter; box-getting. A stealer—stealing—from tills: C. 20. In, e.g., Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933; David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937. Cf. box, n., 2., and see getter.

box irons. Shoes: 1789, Geo. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters (see the quot'n at heaters); 1792, The Minor Jockey Club; † by 1890 (F & H). Irons, because, like fetters, they go on the feet or legs; box, because they encase the feet.

box-man. 'He was one of the most successful box-men (safe-blowers) in the city,' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow; 1924, George Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night Hawk; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; April 1928, Jim Tully, 'Jungle Justice' in The American Mercury; July 13, 1929, Flynn's, Eddic Guerin; Aug. 30, 1930, Flynn's, Lawrance M. Maynard; Jan. 24, 1931, Flynn's; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; 1936, Lee Duncan; extant. See box, n., 2.

box screw. A bank guard: 1933, Eagle; extant. Lit., a safe-warder. See box, n., 2.

box stall. A railroad box-car: May 23, 1937, The (New York) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. Cf. box, n., 3.

box-work. Safe-blowing: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex box, n., 2.

boxed. See box, v.

boxed in, be. (Of a burglar) to be inside a house or other building and engaged in one's burgling: since ca. 1860: 1889, B & L (quoting from James Greenwood); ob. Cf. box, n and v boxer. A safe-blower: 1925, Leverage; 1931, Irwin; extant. Cf. box-man, which probably suggested it.—2. A box car on a railroad: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin. Cf. box, n., 3.

boy. A thief; a swindler; a card-sharper; a race-course crook: 1898, R. J. A. Power-Berry, The Bye-Ways of Crime, 'Here is an interesting case of the swindler being swindled by another of the "boys"'; 1900, G. R. Sims, In London's Heart, 'To associate with the blacklegs and sharpers known as "the boys"'; 1923, Sidney Felstead, The Underworld; 1924, Stanley Scott, The Human Side of Crook and Convict Life; 1925, Rev. Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, 'Dedicated to "the boys" whom I love because they never pretended to be good'—i.e., to professional criminals in general; 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals; by 1930, as much police s. as c. Euphemistic.—2. (A prostitute loq. :) 'The police aren't very fond of boys (souteneurs) here,' H. Wilson Harris, Human Merchandise, 1928: prostitutes' and white-slavers': C. 20. Prob. suggested by the complementary term, the girls, a very gen. urban euphemism for 'prostitutes':—3. A catamite: C. 20. BVB. Cf. synonymous kid.

boy in blue. Stew: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

boy of the slang. See slang-boy.

boyle. See boil, n. and v.

boys. Money in coin; properly, gold coins: 1780, Sessions (mayoralty of Brackley Kennet, 4th session, Part iii, trial of Jane Morris), 'I then saw her put a half-guinea into her mouth . . . When the money was produced, the next day, she said there was no more of the boys but two shillings'; † by 1890. Short for yellow boys.—2. The boys: see boy.

bozey. 'Any rough character,' Ersine: since ca. 1925. A perversion of:—

bozo. A 'guy', 'chap'; a man, a youth, a male: since ca. 1915: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'He was a gandy dancer or kingbee, as some bozoes might give the moniker'; 1927, Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster; 1928, May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story; April 14, 1928, Flynn's; by 1929 (Charles Francis Coe, Hooch), it was police and journalistic s. 'Webster' compares Sp. bozal, 'muzzle': but why not Sp. bozo, 'down growing on the cheeks of youths'?

brace, n.; also attributively. A card game in which at least one player is cheated: 1875, The Chicago Tribune (D.A.E.); 1879, Allen Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences, 'His "steerers running old Pinkerton up to his brace game"'; 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, 'A "brace" game of faro'; ca. 1900, Downey's Peter Napoleon Campana Songster; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; by 1910, police s. Cf. sense 1 of:—

brace, v.t. To cheat; to swindle; 1879, Allen Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences, "'Braced" and beaten out of his own and considerable of the company's funds'; 1889, B & L, 'Brace . . . to get credit by swagger. To brace it through, to do a thing by sheer impudence'; 1890, F & H; by 1920, ob.; by 1930, virtually †. Ex bracing one's shoulders, bracing oneself (to meet a shock); and cf. brace up, v.—2. Hence, to ask (a person), esp. for a loan: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft (for a loan); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (simply 'to ask'); 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; by 1918, s.

brace and bits; singular (b. and bit) rare. Nipples: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928; M & B, 1944. Rhyming on teats (illiterately pron. tits).

brace game. 'A swindling operation', Sylva Clapin, A New Dict. of Americanisms, 1903; but see also brace, n.

Brace Tavern, the. 'A room in the S.E. corner of the King's Bench [Prison], where, for the convenience of prisoners residing thereabouts, beer purchased at the tap house was retailed at a half-penny per pot advance. It was kept by two brothers of the name of Partridge, and thence called the Brace': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.: prisoners' c. of ca. 1760–1840. There is an excellent account in Every Night Book, 1827.

brace-up, n., corresponds to the v.: C. 19–20; ob.

brace up, v. 'To dispose of stolen goods by pledging them for the utmost you can get at a pawnbroker's, is termed bracing them up': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose (plagiarism); 1859, H, 'To pawn stolen goods'; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1909, Ware; slightly ob. Cf. brace, v., 1, q.v.

bracelets. Handcuffs: 1857, 'Ducange Angli-cus', The Vulgar Tongue, where it is classified as both c. and police s.; 1859, H (the 3rd ed., 1864, classifies it as c.); 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1889, no longer c. in Britain—despite Ware; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (U.S.A.: tramps); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom—but by 1918 or so, the term must also have been s. and therefore no longer genuinely c. Prob. a shortening of sheriff's bracelets.

bracers. Legs: mostly tramps: C. 20. Irwin, 1931. One braces oneself by standing firmly.

brad. See brads.—2. 'A small saw, to cut fetters or bars in prison'; U.S.A.: 1848, 'The Flash Language' in The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). Prob. suggested by S.E. bradawl.

brad-faking. 'Playing at cards': 1859, H; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'Probably from broads'—but should not the term be broad-faking (q.v.)? I surmise that H heard someone pronounce broad as brad and thought he meant brad.

brads. 'Halfpence; also money in general': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, W. T. Moncrieff, tip the brads; 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1850, s. Prob. ex brads, nails used by cobblers.

brag. A money-lender: 1823, Egan's Grose, where we find the semantics: 'Fellows who advertise to relieve persons in distress, but who make them pay dearly for such accommodation and promising, at all times, more than they intend to perform' (boasting); 1889, B & L, 'A money-lender at exorbitant interest'; 1890, F & H; app. † by 1910.

braggadocia. A boaster; not c., but s.—2. 'Three months' imprisonment as reputed thieves': 1858 (though the term dates from at least as early as 1850), Dickens, 'Three "Detective" Anecdotes, II', in Reprinted Pieces, as a gloss on 'Nothing's found upon 'em, and it's only the braggadocia after all'; 1860, H, 2nd ed. (braggadocio); 1890, F & H; † by 1900, at the latest. A variation of S.E. braggadocio: a three months' sentence being something to boast about.

brahma, or brama (or bramah). A girl; a good-looking girl: since ca. 1930: 1935, George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade, 'I've made arrangements with this "brahma"' (foot-noted 'Girl'); 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, in the form brama ('She's a right flash brama') and in the latter nuance; 1937, James Curtis (in private letter), 'The word is always complimentary and does not necessarily presuppose immorality. It is usually prefixed by an adjective; sometimes "flash", usually "right"': 1937, Robert Westerby, Wide Boys Never Work, "'I got to take a bramah to the pitchers 'sevening,'" he said'; 1943, Richard Llewellyn, None but the Lonely Heart ('bramah'); extant. Perhaps ex the jewellery associated with the statues of the gods in the Brahmin temples, but rather more prob. it is brahma, 'Brahmafootra fowl'—cf. s. cock and hen club and Fr. s. poule, a 'prostitute'.

brain, be on the. English tramps' c., as in "'Lemme alone; I'm on the brain (I'm thinking)"; J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (ch., 'Two Tramps in England'); extant.

brain guy. An exceptionally clever racketeer: Feb. 29, 1936, Flynn's, Richard Wormser, "'Gee," said Sime Garelli, "I always wanted to bodyguard a brain guy"': 1940, Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely, 'The brain guy of a jewel mob'; extant. A variation of 'the brains'; cf. :—

brain-worker. 'The guiding spirit in a mob,' Leverage, 1925: in the no-man's land between s. and c. The true c. term is brains or :— brains, the. 'The one who works out plans for a robbery,' Leverage, 1925; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'The Brains gets his wires planted as sales guns or molls'; 1929, The Saturday Evening Post (the head of an automobile-stealing gang); Jan. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, E. D. Sullivan (in ref. to the head of a very big gang of racketeers); 1934, Convict, 'Others reputed . . . the head of a criminal organization . . . called the brains'; by 1937 (John Worby, The Other Half), current in Britain too; 1938, J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding; 1940, Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely, but by this time it was, in the U.S.A., police and journalistic s.

brake. See break lurk, the.

brakey. A brakeman (on the railway): tramps': Aug. 1891, The Contemporary Review, Josiah Flynt, 'The American Tramp'; 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler—but by 1915, at latest, it was also railroad s. It 'familiarizes' the first syllable of brakeman. Cf. shack.

brama. See brahma.

brandy snap. A slap: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

brass, n. Money: in 1859, Matsell, in his Vocabulary, implies it to be c. Possibly he was correct—but I doubt it. Ex English s.—2. As 'impudence; self-assurance', it is not c.—despite Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs, 1872.—3. Imitation jewellery: 1926 (implied in brass peddler); 1931, Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, M. H. Weseen; extant. Brass simulating gold!—4. A prostitute: 1934, Philip Allingham, Cheappack; 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night, 'Queenie wasn't such a bad-looking brass'; 1943, Black; extant. Short for brass nail, q.v.—5. 'The old confidence [horse-race] betting trick known to the confidence operators'—'con men', in short—as the "brass" or the "Tale" . . . backing a horse at long odds and then at an opportune moment when the price shortened to hedge the stake, thus assuring a profit whether the horse won or lost,' Percy J. Smith, Con Man, 1938: British racecourse gangs' and confidence men's: late C. 19–20. Chas. E. Leach, 1933; Black, 1943, defines it as 'a betting trick of confidence men'; Baker, 1945. It requires brass, 'money', and brass, 'impudence'.—6. See brasses.

brass, at the. 'To be "at the brass" is to operate a confidence trick betting system,' David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937; extant. See brass, n., 5.

brass eye. '[The Warden] did send me behind the Brass Eye—which is a cell that can't be unlocked except by pushing an electric button in the Man's office. . . . When the Man decides a guy needs protection he puts him behind the Brass Eyes,' Colonel Givens in Flynn's, Aug. 27, 1932; extant. Prison poetry.

brass-knocker. 'Broken victuals. Used by tramps and cadgers': 1874, H; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1909, Ware; ob. Often nearly as hard as that type of brass knocker which has to be preliminarily manipulated.

brass nail. A prostitute: C. 20: 1934, Netley Lucas, My Selves; 1938, F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; 1939, James Curtis, What Immortal Hand, but by this time it was, as that book shows, low s. Rhyming on tail.

brass nob. A prostitute: Oct. 1931, The Police Journal, Supt. W. F. Brown, 'Thieves and their Argot'; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; extant. Prob. later than and therefore ex brass nail.

brass peddler. "'Brass peddlers", bums who sold imitation gold jewelry, principally gold rings, appeared on the streets,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926; 1934, Convict; extant.

brass pounder, 'a telegraph operator': s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

brass up, v. To share-out stolen goods: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Cf. the English s. sense, 'to pay up'.

brasses. 'Brass knuckles' (Ersine), i.e. knuckle-dusters: since ca. 1919. By 1940, police s.

brassey or brassy, n. An informer to the police; a policeman: 1924, Stanley Scott, The Human Side of Crook and Convict Life, "'Coppering", or turning informant, is the deadly sin among crooks Men will listen to the vilest epithets, but call them "bogey", "brassey", "copper", or "policeman", and they will be at your throat'; ibid., 'Some "splits" (detectives) and "brassies" (policemen) are exceedingly popular with crooks'; extant. Ex the brass buttons on a policeman's uniform.

brat. A boy catamite: since ca. 1910. Ersine. By a twist given to the S.E. sense.

breached. See breeched.

bread-and-butter fashion. 'One slice upon the other. John and his maid were caught lying bread and butter fashion': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. This phrase was prob. not c. but s.

Bread and Butter Warehouse. Ranelagh: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1870. 'An allusion to the scenes of infamy and debauchery which once characterized the place' (F & H); cf. the preceding entry.

Bread and Cheese County, the. Durham County: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (ch., 'Two Tramps in England'); slightly ob. Bread and cheese being there the usual 'hand-out' to a tramp.

bread and jam. A tram: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Bread and Milk Route, the. The Boston & Maine Railroad: tramps': since ca. 1905. Stiff, 1931. Ex the initials B. & M.R.; with ref. to the kind of refreshment a tramp is likely to receive along the way or in the neighbourhood.

break, n. 'The mob got me up a break (collection), and I got between five or six foont (sovereigns), so I did not go out at the game for about a moon': 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.; 1889, B & L, ' (Prison), a collection made in aid of one awaiting trial or recently discharged. Literally, pause in street performance when the hat goes round'; 1890, F & H; 1896, Arthur Morrison; by 1900, low s.—2. 'These double-exit premises are known to the grafters as "breaks" or "throwers", and are used by them for the purpose of "shaking off a tail"—avoiding a fellow,' Charles Gordon, Crooks of the Underworld, 1929: C. 20. A means of breaking away.—3. A side pocket: Am. pickpockets': since ca. 1920. Wm Kernôt, letter of June 30, 1946. They make a break in the even line of the garment.

break, v. To burgle (a place): 1863, The Cornhill Magazine, Jan. ('The Science of Garotting and Housebreaking'), "'Breaking a crib", forcing a back door',—though it's not confined to operations on back doors; 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London, 'To commit burglary—crack a case, or break a drum'; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2 (as for 1863); ob. Short for break into: cf. crash and crush, vv.—2. To abstain from drugs; to take a drug-cure: Am. addicts': since ca. 1910. BVB. (I.e., to break the habit).

break, give (someone) a. To liberate (him) from prison: 1881, A. Pinkerton, Professional Thieves and the Criminal; by 1910, merged with coll. sense, 'to give someone a chance'.

break a leg. To get caught; to be detected, arrested: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (Glossary, s.v. 'Capture'); extant. Cf. fall, n. and v.—2. To seduce (someone): C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. English s. broken-legged, 'seduced'.

break away, v.i., 'to part company', may possibly have been American c. of ca. 1890–1910, but I doubt it. No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, 'Breaking away, Separating'.

break-down, n. 'Fake telegram to start sucker into raising money,' P. S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld: commercial underworld: since ca. 1920.

break down, v. See break-up.

break down the flunk. To force open with a jemmy: since ca. 1910. Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 1929.

break lurk, the. An illicit means of livelihood, the practiser pretending to have had limbs and/or ribs broken, e.g., by a fall from a horse: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 312, where it is spelt brake; ob. See lurk, n.

break man. See bumper up.

break-me. (A) breakfast: 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life; ob. I.e., 'break me (my) fast'.

break o' day drum. 'A place for the sale of liquor, that never closes day or night': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1910. See drum, n., 3.

break one's guts. 'To flog or beat a prisoner until his spirit is broken': convicts': from ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Here guts = courage.

break out. 'Breaking out. To separate pick-pocket from his victim': Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1923, extant. Cf. break away.

break shins; often as vbl n.: breaking shins. 'Breaking Shins, c. borrowing of Money,' B.E., 1698; 1785, Grose,—but app. the term had > s. by ca. 1760. 'Perhaps from the figurative operation being like the real one extremely disagreeable to the patient' (Grose).

break stone. To serve a sentence of penal servitude: June 22, 1929, Flynn's, Thos Topham, 'The Eel', '... Had pursued a gunman's career for fifteen years, and never, as the saying goes in crookdom, "broken stone" once'; extant. Ex an ingredient of hard labour.

break the needle. To take a full hypodermic of narcotic: drug addicts': since ca. 1925. BVB.

break-up. Melted gold or silver: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant. Cf. New Zealand break down (Nelson Baylis, letter of 1932), 'to make lighter': prob. c., but perhaps only s.: ex S.E. break down, 'to reduce'.

break-ups is a (esp. the New York) variant of the next: 1859, Matsell, 'Breakups. Steamboat-landings; dispersing of people from theatres, lecture-rooms, churches, etc.† by 1920.

breaking-up of the spell. 'The nightly termination of performance at the Theatres Royal, which is regularly attended by pickpockets of the lower order, who exercise their vocation about the doors and avenues leading thereto, until the house is emptied and the crowd dispersed': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, plagiarizingly; 1889, B & L; by 1940, at latest, it was †. See spell, n., 2.

breaks. A place of exit, where crowds are thick: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, IA, 'Used by pickpockets to designate any place where people are to be found on the move and in a mass. See also "spill"; extant. Cf. break-ups, whence it derives.

breakups. See break-ups.

breaky. A shortened form of (sense 1 of) the next term: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 320); ob.

breaky leg. A shilling: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.), low s. For semantics, cf. bandy and bender.—2. The sense 'strong liquor' is not c. but s.

breast. 'To confront, meet. "He breasted the bull at the corner"', Ersine: since ca. 1920. To come, not 'face to face' but 'breast to breast'—to run into—collide with someone.

breath-taking sea-lion a la parlyvoo. Steak and onions, with French fried potatoes; tramps' and eating-houses': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman: a border-line case. The sea-lion is the steak, breath-taking refers to the onions, and the rest of the phrase emphasizes that the cuisine of the potatoes is French.

breathe easy. 'I had a good run in 'Frisco and I've breathed easy ever since. . . . I was successful while in San Francisco: as a result I have been in comfortable circumstances ever since,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; by 1920, no longer c. To heave a sigh of relief; to be able to 'take things easy'.

breech, n. A rear trousers-pocket: 1904, perhaps in breech-getting; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage; 1931, IA; extant. See britch, n.: where the source (hip pocket) of the app. contradiction emerges.—2. A front trousers-pocket: 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant. A variation of the more usual britch.

breech, v. 'Breeched. Money in the pocket: the swell is well breeched, let's draw him; the gentleman has plenty of money in his pocket, let us rob him': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Breech'd, flush of money'; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, II; 1823, Bee; 1826, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, II, in a letter quoted on p. 173, 'I hope your friend Collins will breech you before you leave London . . . for 5s. is all our stock'; by 1850, s. I.e., to put money into a person's breeches pockets.—2. To pick the trousers-pocket of (a man): Sessions, March 1884 (Surrey cases), policeman log., "I found a navvy . . . that she had breeched for 5s."—that means robbed of 5s.'; Sept. 11, 1902, Sessions; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1934, Netley Lucas, My Selves; 1936, W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, where it appears to have > police s. Ex the n.—3. 'To break open a safe,' Leverage, 1925; U.S.A.: extant. Prob. ex sense 2.

breech-getting. 'We were breech-getting (picking men's pockets) in the Brooklyn cars', Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; extant. Orig. and properly, picking trousers-pockets.

breech-kick. A picking of pockets: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'Scotty had fallen'—been arrested—'for a breech-kick and was held for trial' (cf. p. 129); 1934, Rose; extant. Lit., breech-kick is a trousers pocket.

breech-leather. A pocket-book or a purse carried in a trousers-pocket: 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'I nicked him in a car for his breech-leather'; extant. Cf. preceding entry and see leather.

breeched, be well. See breech, v., 1. (H, 1859, has also breached.)

breecher. A pickpocket, esp. one who specializes in (rear) trousers-pockets: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex breech, v., 2; cf. breech, n.

breefs. See briefs.

breeze. Airy or boastful talk; verbal bluff: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Irwin, 'Idle chatter; talk of no importance'; by 1935, it was s. Cf. the s. gas and hot air for the semantics.—2. Hence, false information: since ca. 1920. 1931, Godfrey Irwin.

breeze, v. To deceive, beguile: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex the n.—2. To move on, go out, leave, make off: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, "'This ain't our fight," said he. "Let's breeze on out"''; Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke; 1931, Irwin; by 1933, low s.; by 1935, gen. s. Cf. blow, v., 8; the general semantic idea is that of 'vanishing into thin air' or, rather, 'having (or, being) gone with the wind'.—3. 'To ride on a freight car,' Leverage, 1925: mostly tramps'; extant. It's a breezy mode of travelling.

breezer. A fugitive: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex breeze, v., 2.—2. A hobo: mostly tramps': 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex breeze, v., 3.—3. An open car, e.g., a roadster: automobile thieves': 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Open to all the breezes that blow.

breezy. Dangerous: since ca. 1910: 1925, Leverage; extant. With a strong breeze blowing, it is risky to put out from port.—2. Afraid; timorous: British: prob. since 1919. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. Ex soldier's s. of 1914–18.

brewer's horse, 'a drunkard', classified by B & L as c., was always s.

briar, n. A saw (the tool): U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; 1848, The Ladies' Repository, 'A file'; 1925, Leverage, 'Briar, n., A small saw'; 1927, Kane, 'A thin hack-saw blade with which a convict may saw the bars of his prison'; 1933, Eagle ('an improvised key': a suspect sense); 1934, Convict ('a saw'); 1934, Rose, 'Hack-Saw Blades . . . briars'; March 9, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington; 1941, Maurer, who applies it to a jeweller's saw; extant. Pointed and sharp are the thorns of a briar.

briar, v. To cut with a saw: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the n.

brick. Gum opium (variant, brick gum): drug addicts': since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. Ex its hardness.

brickish, 'hearty; hard as a brick' (J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, 1821), may orig. have been low,—but never, I think, c. The 'hearty' = 'hale and hearty', i.e. vigorously healthy.

bricks, get (or hit) the. To obtain one's release, to be released, from prison: mostly convicts': 1929, Givens (get); Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens (hit); 1933, James Spenser, Limey (id.); 1934, Convict (id.); 1934, Rose (both); 1935, David Lamson (hit); Nov. 26, 1938, Flynn's, Convict 12627 (id.); extant. App. bricks = the pavement; cf. :—

bricks, put (someone) on the. To release, whether from detention or from prison: since the middle 1920's. Ersine, 1933, "'A grand will put you on the bricks.'" See street'; Castle, 1938, 'He . . . puts me on th' bricks, an' . . . tells me to breeze th' burg'. Imm. suggested by preceding.

bricks, the. Prison: Australian: late C. 19–20. Baker, 1945. A brick building: contrast logs.

bricks, press the. See press the bricks.

bridal chamber. A common lodging-house where the lodgers lie on the floor: tramps': since ca. 1920. Stiff, 1931. Ironic.

bride, 'a girl', 'a young woman' (esp. to make love to): not c. but low s., mostly Londoners': from ca. 1920. George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade, 1935. During the war of 1939–45, it was Forces' s.

bridge, n. See the Vaux quot'n at bridge, v.—2. "'Oh! the bridge is simply and easily done," remarked Chichester . . . "You see it is nothing but slightly curving a card, and introducing it carelessly into the pack. Shuffle the cards as your opponent will, you are sure to be able to cut the bridged one"'': card-sharpers': 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. xxxiv; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1894, J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats, pp. 129–30; by 1900, no longer to be classified as c. Ex the curvature produced.—3. The pocket-picking method described at sense 2 of the v.: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. Ersine.—4. (Also brige.) A look, a glance: New Zealand: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter); extant.—5. 'A fake bet,' Baker, 1945: Australian: since ca. 1910. Perhaps imm. ex bridgewater.

bridge, v. 'To play booty, or purposely to avoid winning': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To bridge a person, or throw him over the bridge, is, in a general sense, to deceive him by betraying the confidence he has reposed in you . . .; or, three men being concerned alike in any transaction, two of them will form a collusion to bridge the third, and engross to themselves all the advantage which may eventually accrue. . . . In playing three-handed games, two of the party will play into each other's hands, so that the third must inevitably be thrown over the bridge, commonly called two poll one'; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood (the phrase); 1889, B & L (both); 1890, F & H imply that it is †.—2. 'To pick pockets by reaching across or around the victim's body,' Ersine: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. A corruption of britch, v., 1. bridge, throw over the. See bridge, v., 1.

Bridgeport. 'Any "hick" town,' Ersine, 1933: since ca. 1920. The reference may be to Bridgeport, Gloucester County, New Jersey—or Bridgeport, the name of three townships and/or towns in Pennsylvania—or Bridgeport, Ohio—or, more prob., to all of them collectively.

bridgewater. 'Any fake article, such as a letter or jewellery, used in working a confidence trick,' Baker, 1945. Australian: C. 20. Water flowing under a bridge—opposed to beer flowing from a tap. Something (almost) worthless—not something desirable.

bridle. A gag placed in the mouth for silence' sake: since ca. 1910. Ersine.

bridle(-)cull. A highwayman: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1743, Fielding, The Life of Mr Jonathan Wild; 1842, P. Egan, Captain Macheath, † by 1860. See cull, n.; skilful use of the bridle is important to him.

brief. A card-cheating, employed orig. in the game of Putt, described thus by Charles Cotton in The Compleat Gamester, 1674, the term being at first and mainly card-sharpers' c.: 'Some of the Cheats at Putt are done after this manner: First, for cutting to be sure of a good Putt-Card, they use the Bent, the Slick, and the Breef; the bent is a Card bended in play which you cut, the slick is when beforehand the Gamester takes a Pack of Cards, and with a slick-stone smooths all the Putt-Cards, that when he comes to cut to his Adversary with his forefinger above and his thumb about the middle, he slides the rest of the Cards off that which was slickt [rendered smooth or glossy], which is done infallibly with much facility; but in this there is required neatness and dexterity for fear of discovery . . . Lastly, the Breef in cutting is very advantageous to him that cuts, and is thus done: the Cheat provides beforehand a Pack of Cards, whereof some are broader than others; under some of which he plants in play some good Putt-Cards, which though they shuffle never so much they shall rarely separate them; by which means he that cuts (laying his fingers on the broad Card) hath surely dealt him a Putt-Card'; 1714, Lucas, Memoirs of Gamesters. The term, which may have > j. by 1740 or so, seems to have fallen into disuse by about 1830. Cf.:—2. A card that has been lopped at end or side: see briefs.—3. A pass; also, a false pass: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (see quot'n at sky-farmer); app. † by 1890. Perhaps ex sense 2: appearance.—4. A memorandum, a note: 1827, John Wight, More Mornings at Bow Street, 'Your worship, I've no brief about me, but I've got everything in my head, and more in my heart'; slightly ob. Prob. ex sense 3.—5. A letter: since ca. 1850; by 1889 (B & L), mostly prison c. This sense merges with or arises from senses 4 and 6.—6. A duplicate document: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); † by 1920.—7. (Prob. ex senses 4, 5.) A police warrant: Oct. 1877, Sessions (pp. 620–21), "'I fancy the brief is out for some of you. If not, it will be. So you must keep a sharp look out" . . . By the brief is meant a warrant'; 1943, Black, 'A warrant, paper of authority'; extant.—8. 'A pawnbroker's duplicate': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; by 1910, low s. Prob. ex sense 4.—9. Hence, 'a raffle card, or a ticket of any kind' (esp. a railway ticket): prob. since ca. 1850: 1874, H; 1879, Macmillan's Magazine (Oct.); 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; extant.—10. A pocket-book (or note-case): 1890, F & H; ob.—11. A written 'character' from an employer: March 1894, Sessions (Surrey cases), 'He said, "I cannot get a brief"—a brief means a character—"until this is blown over"'; extant. Cf. sense 5.—12. A pedlar's certificate: late C. 19–20; by ca. 1920, low s. Recorded in, e.g., Montagu Williams, Round London, 1892, and W. H. Davies, Beggars, 1909.—13. A banknote: ca. 1870–1945. Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 1924—p. 113. Cf. senses 2, 3, 6.—14. A ticket-of-leave: late C. 19–20: Oct. 1928, Word-Lore, F. C. Taylor, 'The Language of Lags'; 1931, Brown; 1933, E. C. Vivian, Ladies in the Case; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1938, H. V. Tristram, Men in Cages; extant.—15. A Counsel (K.C.): C. 20. George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade, 1935. He holds so many briefs.—16. 'The unused half of a return railway ticket,' John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939; since the 1920's.—17. A cheque: see twist a brief.

brief-jigger. A ticket-office, esp. of a railway station: 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747 (p. 142),—but prob. since ca. 1850; ob. See brief, 9, and jigger, 1.

brief-snatcher; brief-snatching. Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen, 1887, defines the latter as 'Stehlen der Gewinstlose auf dem Kurse'; B & L, 1889, define brief-snatchers as 'pickpockets who devote their attentions to pocket-books on race courses'; 1890, F & H; extant—though slightly ob. Cf. brief, 10 and 13.

briefs; the singular is very rare. Cards that have been broadened or lengthened: 1714, T. Lucas, Memoirs of Gamesters, 'You may make Breefs Endways, as well as Sideways'; 1726, Anon., The Art and Mystery of Gaming detected, 'Of Brief Cards there are two sorts; one is a card longer than the rest, the other is a Card broader than the rest'; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H (also breefs); extant though not much used in C. 20. App. by antiphrasis or irony.

briffen. Bread and dripping: tramps': C. 20. W. L. Gibson Cowan, Loud Report, 1937. A blend of bread and dripping yields bripping, which is perverted—to make things less easy for 'ear-wiggers'.—2. Hence ('a necessity of life'), a girl: tramps': since ca. 1920. Gibson Cowan.

brig, n. See brigh.—2. A prison: U.S.A.: Aug. 2, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who defines it as 'police station'; extant. Ex English naval s., via the U.S. Marine Corps.

brig, v. To imprison: to confine in a lock-up or at a police station: 1931, Irwin; extant. Ex sense 2 of the n.

brige. See bridge, n., 3.

brigh. 'A new suit of clobber . . . and about fifty blow in my brigh (pocket)': 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers ('a brighful'); 1914, E. Pugh, The Cockney at Home; extant. Cf. britch.

bright-eyes. A female look-out: 1929–31, Kernôt; 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex male recognition of feminine charm, although Ersine says, 'Because most criminals have no faith in a woman's . . . ability to hold her tongue'.

bright 'un. 'The word went round that another revolver, "a bright 'un", had been taken from Taylor,' Jerome Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life, Vol. 2; very ob. Ex its shiny surface—or perhaps ex the shiny inside of the barrel.

brim. 'A very impudent, Lew'd Woman', B.E., 1698: Alexander Smith, The History of the Highwayman, 1714; A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1776, Thos Bridges, A Burlesque Translation of Homer; 1785, Grose; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'The coaxing, giggling brims'; 1823, Bee; app. † by 1840. The O.E.D. gives it as S.E., but this is very doubtful: it is, I think, either s. or c.; prob.—as Jamieson, 1808, states—the latter. Abbreviation of brimstone.

brimmer is a variant (Bee, 1823) of the preceding term.

brimstone. A lewd woman: 1698, B.E.; 1785, Grose, 'A prostitute'; 1823, Bee. This sense—cf. the S.E. one, 'a virago'—seems to have lasted until mid-C. 19. Brimstone is the old vernacular name for sulphur (see O.E.D.).

bring. 'Thieves are said "to bring" such things as they may have stolen': 1823, Bee; app. † by 1900. Cf. the euphemistic convey.—2. 'What did you bring?' = 'What prison sentence did you get?': U.S.A.: C. 20. Perhaps orig. c., but very soon it was used by warders. (Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 1912.) Also bring in, as in Howard N. Rose, 1934.

bring down. To bring back to sanity: drug addicts': March 12, 1938, Meyer Berger in The New Yorker, 'When a customer gets ready to "cut out" [i.e., to depart], Chappy "brings him down" with milk . . . to hasten clearing of the brain'; extant. To reduce from high.

bring to light. See light, bring to.

bring up. See back up.

bristles. Bristle-dice; i.e., dice in which a hair has been inserted to alter their fall: 1552, Gilbert Walker (brystelles in his list of the names of dice) says that, already at this date, they were falling into disuse as being too palpable a cheat; orig. c., or almost certainly c., the term became jargon; † by 1800. Walker was perhaps too optimistic, for Chas Cotton, in 1674, speaks of their being used in his time.

Bristol man. 'The son of an Irish thief and a Welch whore': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum. Almost certainly not c. but buckish s. A jeer at the geographical position of Bristol.

britch, n. Loosely, rear trousers-pocket; strictly, a hip-pocket, a rear pocket being a pratt: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (glossary, s.v. 'Reef . . .'); 1931, The Bon Voyage Book, where it is given as English c.; Nov. 1931, IA, "'Left britch"', "'right britch"''; Sept. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Convict 12627; 1938, Partridge (as English): extant. Short for britch kick.

britch, v. To rob (a person) by stealing from his (rear) trousers-pocket: Jan. 18, 1912, Sessions, 'Drunk when he was britched (robbed)'; extant. Ex the n.—2. To carry in one's hip-pocket: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, Moreby Acklom, 'Fly cops . . . of whom [one] is britching a gat'; extant. Ex the n.

britch kick. A trousers-pocket: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly, article by A. G. England, who wrongly has butch kick; extant. See kick, n.

britched. Supplied with money: 1931, Brown, 'If any of them is well britched (has plenty of money) many free drinks are available'; extant. See breech, v.: britched = breeched.

British linen boy. A banknote, esp. of £1: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'I got eighteen quids, good British Linen boys'; † by 1880. A banknote made from linen; cf. yellow boy, a guinea.

broad. See broads.—2. A woman of loose morals; a prostitute: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by M. Acklom; 1927, Robert Nichols & Jim Tully, Twenty Below; 1927, Kane; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, in ref. to and valid for ca. 1912; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago, 'Prostituée, catin'; 1931, Irwin; by 1933, low s. in U.S.A.; by 1935, current in England in the nuance 'girl of easy virtue who doesn't take money' (John Worby), Spiv's Progress, 1939. Perhaps because, compared with a man, a woman is broad-hipped, although this origin fits sense 4 better than it does this sense, which may derive ex 'broad-minded'.—3. A female confederate in crime: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1920, hardly distinguishable from sense 4; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's; Sept. 21, 1929, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant.—4. Hence (?), any female companion; any woman: 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man (p. 131); 1916, Arthur Stringer, The Door of Dread; 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler; by 1924, s.—5. A ferry boat: 1925, Leverage; extant. Broad in the beam.

broad cove. A professional card-player; a card-sharper: 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London (see swell broad cove); † by 1890 (F & H). See broads and cf. broadsman.

broad-faker. A card-player; a card-sharper: 1909, Ware, but prob. its origin is contemporaneous (i.e., before 1859) with that of broad-faking; ob. See:—

broad-faking. Card-playing: 1859, H (see brad-faking); 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; ob.—having, ca. 1910, been virtually superseded by sense 2. Ex broads + faking, qq.v.—2. Hence, 'doing the three-card trick on race-courses, etc.': 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; extant.

broad-fencer. 'Card seller at races', i.e., a seller of 'correct cards': 1859, H; 1890, C. Hindley, The True History of Tom and Jerry; 1890, F & H; ca. 1900, or 1910 at latest, it > low s. Cf. broads; fencer—as in, e.g., timber-fencer, q.v.—is a street vendor.

broad joint. A shop, a store, selling women's clothes: esp. forgers': since ca. 1930. Maurer, 1941. It caters for a broad, 4.

broad-jumper. 'One who leaves his woman.—2. A person convicted of rape,' Ersine, 1933; extant.

broad laws seems, in the following passage from Gilbert Walker's Diceplay, 1552, to be related to broads, q.v., and perhaps it means 'cardsharpping rules' or simply 'cardsharpping'. 'At trump, saint, and such other like, cutting at the neck'—of the card—'it is a great vantage, so is cutting by a bum card (finely) under and over, stealing the stock of the decarded cards, if there be broad laws befored aforehand.' If this is the meaning, the term is c.

broad-man. An occ. form of broadsman. In, e.g., Edgar Wallace, Again the Ringer, 1929.

broad mob. A gang or set or group or team of card-sharpers: prob. throughout C. 20: 1935, David Hume, Dangerous Mr Dell; 1940, D. Hume, Five Aces. Easier to pronounce than 'broads mob' would be.

broad-pitcher; broad-pitching. The operator of a three-card-trick outfit; the trick itself, or the analogous game of three-card monte (a game of Mexican origin—a variation of 'monte' itself): British and American: mid-C. 19–20: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell (the latter); 1870, B. Hemming, Out of the Ring (the former); ob. Cf. broad-faker and broad-faking, 2.

broad-player. 'Broads, cards; a person expert at which is said to be a good broad-player': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1890.

broad spieler. A gambler that operates a three-card monte game, especially if the game be crooked: 1909, Will Irwin, Confessions of a Con Man (which deals with the approximate period 1890–1905); ob. Lit., a card-player: see broads and spieler.

broad-tosser. One who operates the three-card trick of 'finding the lady': C. 20. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938. Cf. broad spieler.

broad work; broad worker. 'The picking of women's pockets'; 'a pickpocket who preys on women'; 1925, Leverage; extant. See broad, 4.

broads. Cards: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'Black-Legs, who live by the Broads and the Turf'; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1851, Mayhew; 1859, H; by the 1850's, moreover, the term had > current in the U.S.A.—witness Matsell's Vocabulary; 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1883, James Greenwood, Tag, Rag & Co; 1887, Baumann; 1890, F & H; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (U.S.A.); 1931, Brown; 1936, Mark Benney; 1938, F. D. Sharpe; 1943, Black; 1945, Baker (Australia). They have length and breadth 'without depth'.—2. Three-card monte (a game): U.S.A.: 1909, Will Irwin, Confessions of a Con Man; 1925, Leverage; extant.

broads, at the. Engaged in the three-card trick; or in card-sharping: 1931, Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Book; extant.

broads, fake the. Illicitly to stack a pack of cards; to practise card-sharping: 1887, W. E. Henley, Villon's Straight Tip to All Cross-Coves; 1923, J. Manchon, Le Slang; by 1930, verging on low s. Cf. broad-faker.

broadsmán. A card-sharper: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.; 1890, F & H; 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights on Criminal Matters; 1928, J. K. Ferrier, Crooks and Crime; July 13, 1929, Flynn's, Eddie Guerin, 'I Was a Bandit'; 1931, Brown; 1932, Arthur Gardner; 1933, Charles Leach; 1935, David Hume, Call In the Yard; 1938, F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; 1940, Joseph Crad, Traders in Women; 1943, Black; extant. See broads.

broady. 'Materials of any kind': 1859, Matsell; 1888, James Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern, where (p. 250) it is tailors' s. for 'broad-cloth', as it always was in England,—a sense present in screw, on the, first reference; ob.—2. Hence, anything worth stealing: 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1903, Sylva Clapin, Americanisms; ob. by 1920, virtually † by 1940.

broady-worker. 'A man who goes round selling vile shoddy stuff under the pretence that it is excellent material, which has been "got on the cross", i.e., stolen': ca. 1850–1910. 1890, F & H. See broady, 1. In such compounds as this, worker = illicit or, at the least, 'shady' operator or worker.

brod is an occ. variant of broad, 2–4, esp. as 'a young woman'. Stiff, 1931.

broderick. 'If you happen to walk into the haunts of gangsters or hard guys in New York, you may hear someone say "Listen, if that guy makes one more move, give him the broderick" All forms of physical violence, where they involve a thorough drubbing . . . , have come to be known as "the broderick", after the manner of Johnny Broderick,' Dugal O'Liam, 'Broderick, Gang Buster. A true story'—in Flynn's, Dec. 3, 1932: ca. 1927–35, mostly in New York City. John J. Broderick was a 'first-grade detective of the New York police department' (Dugal O'Liam, l.c.)—in 1926–32, at least.

brodie. A feigned narcotic spasm, to obtain sympathy and drugs: since ca. 1930. BVB. Whence do (or throw) a brodie, to simulate this spasm: BVB. Ex:

Brodie, do a. 'To faint; to die': s., not c.:

1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice. The same applies to Brodie, 'a fall, a leap; a failure' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931) and to the corresponding v., 'to leap' (George Ade, More Fables in Slang, 1900). Ex Steve Brodie, the man that jumped—or maybe he didn't—from the old Brooklyn Bridge.

broke, 'penniless', is not American c., despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, p. 246.

broker mug. A hug: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

broken oar is a variant of boat and oar. M & B, 1944. Native to Pacific Coast.

broken out. See just broken out.

broker seems, in Robert Greene's Second Conny-catching, 1592, in the sections on 'the lifting law' and 'the curbing law' (qq.v.), to approximate to that of 'fence' or receiver of stolen goods: but it is to be observed that even here it may be in one or another of the three old S.E. senses—retailer, pawnbroker, middleman. In The Defence of Conny-catching, 1592, the pawnbroker is clearly shown to have been the earliest kind of 'fence'—but that does not render the word c.—2. A peddler of drugs; the go-between, who buys from a high-up (or acts as agent for a drug ring) and sells, at high prices and in small lots, to the addict: U.S. drug traffic; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Euphemistic.

bronc, bronco. A catamite: C. 20. Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942. Ex the lit. sense of bronco.

broom. The female pudenda: prostitutes': 1890, F & H; extant.

broom, v. To run away: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1821, W. T. Moncrieff, Tom and Jerry; 1823, Bee (broom it); 1823, Egan's Grose (id.); 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1889 (B & L) in Britain; current in C. 20 in U.S.A.—Castle, 1938 ('disappear hastily'). Suggested by brush, v., or more prob. by brush, buy a.

broomstick. 'Queer-Bail, Persons of no repute, hired to bail a prisoner in any bailable case; these men are to be had in London for a trifling sum, and are called Broomsticks': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1889, B & L, 'Broomsticks . . . insolvent bail'; 1890, F & H, who imply that it was †. Perhaps ex legal straw bail, 'worthless bail' (bail given by 'men of straw').

brother. 'A term used among thieves acknowledging each other': 1797, Potter, as c.; app. † by 1870. Cf. the epigram: 'When a man calls you brother, put your hand in your pocket—and keep it there'.

brother-in-law. A pimp for two women: white-slave traffic: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. the complementary sister-in-law.

brothers and sisters. Whiskers: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928; M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

brown, 'a halfpenny', may always have been s., though prob. it was orig. (ca. 1780) c., and prob. it remained c. until ca. 1800: this sense, and the c. sense, 'copper money in halfpennies', both occur in 1782, Sessions, May, pp. 392–3, 'I sent her to the prisoner's house, for half a piece of brown, and half a piece of white . . . Brown is halfpence, and white, silver,' also 'Half a guinea's worth of browns, and half a guinea's worth of whites'. But brown, 'a bad halfpenny', is counterfeiter's c., as in J. H. Vaux, 1812,—a sense app. † by 1900. Ex the colour.

brown, v. To commit pederasty; late C. 19–20: esp. convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant.

brown, doing it. Practising 'gammon'; a confidence trickster's talk; any plausible talk with a felonious intent: 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1900. Ex cookery: cf. s. do (someone) brown, 'to befool; to outwit'.

Brown Bess; Brown Joe. Yes; no: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B., 1944. Rhyming; adopted ex England.

Brown family. See Browning sisters.

brown gatter droppings. See gatter, ref. of 1848.

Brown Joe. See Brown Bess.

brown-paper man or b. paperman. A low gambler; a gambler in very small amounts: both c. and low London (esp. street vendors) s.: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1859, H; in C. 20, ob. in Britain, current in U.S.A.; 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 'Brown paper man—a cheap chiseler'. Perhaps ex the idea of carrying one's possessions in a brown-paper parcel.

brown rine. Heroin: drug addicts', esp. Canadian: since ca. 1910. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938, "There you are," he said. "Take a good blow; you need it. It's 'brown rine' (heroin), and it's hundred per cent"; extant. Colour + rhyme ('heroin' pron. 'heroine').

brown stone. Beer: 1882, James D. McCabe, New York by Sunlight and Gaslight (p. 509); † by 1920. Colour: good stuff—cf. brownstone houses.

brown suit. A lack of opportunity; esp. in brown suit!, 'no go!': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900.

Browne's Cant Vocabulary. In Robert Greene's The Blacke Bookes Messenger, 1592, there is 'A Table of the words of Art lately devised by Ned Browne and his associates, to Crosbite the old Phrases used in the manner of Conny-catching [see conny-catching].

He that drawes the fish to the bait,	the Beater.
The Taverne where they goe,	the Bush
The foole that is caught, Conny-catching to be called,	the Bird. Batfowling.
The wine to be called, The Cards to be called, The fetching in a Conny, The good Asse if he be woone,	the Shrap. the Limetwigs. beating the bush. stooping to the Lure.
If he keepe a loofe, The verser in conny- catching is called,	a Haggard. the Retrifer.
And the Barnacle,	the pot hunter.'

This set of terms may have been current for only a few years; certainly not—at least, as a set—for more than twenty; but several of them may have been adopted by other gangs, and some were adopted by other writers—e.g., by S. Rowlands, in Greenes Ghost Haunting Coniecatchers, 1602. Moreover, Dekker in The Belman of London, 1608, has the impudence to plagiarize Greene's list, which he prefaces thus, 'Sometimes . . . this Card-cheating, goes not under the name of Barnards lawe, but is called Batt fowling'.

brownie. A copper coin: tramps': 1872, Hamilton Aidé, Morals and Mysteries, 'Dots is brownies, as we call 'em sometimes, that's pence'; by 1910, s. A pet-form of brown.—2. A Browning machine-gun: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; 1931, IA; extant.—3. A child: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; June 7, 1930, Flynn's; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex the Girl Guides?

brownie gun is a rare variant of brownie, 2. Rose, 1934.

Browning sisters. 'The Angelina sorority; "He belongs to the Browning Sisters" or "to the Brown Family";' Stiff, 1931: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. The origin is too pederastic to be explained in other than a medical publication; cf. brown, v. brownny. See brownie.

bruiser, 'a boxer', was orig. s.—but never was it c. Hence:—2. ' . . . The cowardly bully who is known by the term "bruiser" in prison slang, and who is usually the hanger-on of some unfortunate creature who supports him out of the rewards of her shame' (a prostitute): 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; ob.

brum, 'a counterfeit coin': not c. but low s.—2. A prostitute, esp. if past her best: U.S.A., mostly beggars': C. 20 (prob. from ca. 1890, in fact); 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (see quot'n at make, v., 4); 1931, IA. Short for Australian brumby, 'a wild horse'; cf. and contrast old English s. hackney, 'a prostitute'.

brunser. A catamite: since ca. 1920. Ersine; BVB. Ex bronco on Australian s. bonzer (bonza), 'very good'?

brush, n. See brush, buy a.—2. Long whiskers, esp. as a disguise: since ca. 1915. Ersine. Cf. bushes.

brush, v. To run away: 1676, Coles; 1677, Anon., Sadler's Memoirs, 'He . . . brushes off with his Booty undiscovered'; 1698, B.E., 'To Fly or Run away'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'To fly or run away . . . Brush off'; 1720, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, III; 1767, Sessions, 'Bagnell took up some ribbon, and gave it to Fisher and said, Brush it'; 1785, Grose: 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–37, V; 1848, Sinks of London; but prob. low s. by 1820 or 1830. Perhaps to brush away one's traces or tracks.—2. Hence, to go away, to depart; (of things) to disappear; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1753, Poulter, 'The Things are brush'd, that is, gone'; app. † by 1860.—3. (Ex sense 1, as v.t.) 'The Cully is Brushed or Rub'd'; c. the Fellow is march'd off or Broke, B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1810.—4. See brusher, 3.

brush, buy a. To run away: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Let us buy a brush and lope; let us get away, or off'; 1810, J. Poole, Hamlet Travestie, 'Soon as 'tis day-light he shall buy a brush; | And this unlucky job we'll try to hush'; by 1820, low s., cf. P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 1824, 'The lads of the village having mizzled with the goods, and bought a brush with a long handle'. Ex brush, v., 1 and 2, by suggestion.

brush, make the. To escape from jail: 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; extant. I.e., to get into the brushwood.

brush it. See brush, v., 1, ref. of 1767.

brush move. 'The state of being shadowed,' Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936; extant. Here brush prob. = brushwood.

brush off. See brush, v., 1.

brush up. 'Brushing up a Flat. Praising or flattering [a simpleton; a proposed victim]': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; by 1903 (Clapin), it was s.

Ex barbers' obsequious clothes-brushing of departing customers.

brush upon the sneak. 'To tread softly,' applied to thieves when they 'go upon the Morning-Sneak, Noon-Sneak, or Night-Sneak, which is sneaking into People's Houses when they leave their Doors open,' Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, III, 1720; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (at ken); † by 1870. See brush, v., 1.

brusher, 'an exceedingly full glass', is classified by B.E., its earliest recorder, as c., which it was—unless it were s.; also in Andrewes, 1809; app. current ca. 1690–1840. The liquor brushes the brim.—2. 'One that steals away quietly,' Dyche, Dict., 5th ed., 1748: a C. 18 term, ex brush, v.—3. One who brushes—a pickpocket technicality for 'touches or rubs'—a person to cover the work of the wire in a gang of pickpockets: U.S.A.: since ca. 1915. Leverage, 1925. Cf. S.E. brush against (someone).

Brushes, the. The prison at Wormwood Scrubs: since ca. 1920. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938, 'Come from the Brushes, eh? 'Leven, wasn't it?' Wormwood Scrubs with scrubbing brushes.

Brussels. A sentence of three months' imprisonment: since ca. 1920: David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open, 1935, 'I was knocked off for sweeping the snow, and got a Brussels'; 1938, D. Hume, Heads you Live; extant. Short for Brussels carpet, a C. 20 elaboration of carpet.

brystelles. See bristles. Gilbert Walker, 1552.

bub. Liquor: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1782, Messink, The Choice of Harlequin, 'Nor for a little bub, come the slang upon your fair'; 1785, Grose, 'Bub, strong beer'; 1786, C. Johnston, The Adventures of Anthony Varnish, 'The soldier . . . told me that we must stir our stumps, for that we had a good three miles to go over before we should enjoy the comforts of either bub or grub; by which polite epithets, I had already been taught to distinguish the difference between meat and drink'; app. the term had > s. by ca. 1780. Ex bub, v., 1.—2. A dupe; one that is cheated: 1698, B.E.; app. † by 1820. An abbr. of bubble, a dupe.

bub, v.i. To drink: 1536, Robert Copland, The hye Way to the Spyttell hous; ca. 1773, Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles), 'Grub and bub our fill'; app. †—at least as c.—by 1800.—2. V.t. To drink up: U.S.A.; 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, '"Bubb your lush", drink your grog'; † by 1910.

bub, queer and rum. See queer bub, rum bub.

bubb is a variant of bub, n., 1 (Potter, 1797; Andrewes, 1809) and v., 2.

bubber. A drinker; a drunkard: 1621, Middleton & Rowley, The Spanish Gipsie, a pretty lass speaking, 'Great bubbers have shot at me, and shot golden Arrowes'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1800. Ex bub, v.—2. Hence, a drinking bowl: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1860.—3. Hence, 'He that used [?] uses] to Steal Plate from Publick-houses,' B.E., 1698, but recorded earlier in Head; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict. shows that the term was already historical only.

bubbing, n. Liquor-drinking; tippling: C. 17. Ex bub, v., 1.

bubbing cull. A man drunk at the moment or by habit: 1707, J. Shirley; † by 1820. Ex bub, v., and cull, n.

bubbing(-)house. A tavern: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; † by 1820.

bubble. A dupe, a person cheated: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, where it is classified as c.; but it was always S.E.

bubble and squeak. To speak: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

bubble-buff. A bailiff: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; app. † by 1820. Perhaps a humorous perversion of bailiff.

bubby. Drunk: 1673, F. Kirkman, The Unlucky Citizen, 'We called for one pot after another till we were all bubby'; † by 1790. Prob. ex bub, n.

bube, in S.E. an abscess, esp. as a bubonic-plague symptom, is in c. diverted to mean syphilis: 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, has at the ending of a canting song, 'The Bube and Ruffian by the Harman beck and harmans,' which he translates: 'The pox and the Devill take the Constable and his stocks'. So too in Head, 1665, and B.E., 1698; but this sense seems to have been † by 1750.—2. Loosely, as = bubo, 2; 1725.

bubo. Status-changes as in bube; 1676, Coles, 'Bubo, c. Pox'; † by 1790. A sense-perversion of the S.E. term.—2. Gonorrhoea: 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'The Wench hath Clapt the Fellow . . . The Mort has tipt the Bubo to the Cully'; C. 18 and rare.

bucco. A dandy: 1890, F & H; † by 1920, except in s., where, however, my bucko = my fine fellow. I.e., bucko, an elaboration of buck, 'a dandy'.

buck, n. An evidence in a law case: 1750, Sessions (Jan. 21: Applegarth & Soss), 'He mentioned this particular word, (before he turned buck or stag) which was interpreted as evidence. Mr. Fielding said, he had got this cant word very readily'; app. † by 1900—if not long before. Prompted by the synonymous stag (n., 1).—2. 'An assistant to a cheating hack-driver': American: 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York; app. † by 1900. Why?—3. The sense 'a dollar' (Geo. Ade, 1896) is, despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, not c., but s.—prob. low s. at first, for, also in 1904, it occurs in Hutchins Hapgood's The Autobiography of a Thief as a term requiring a gloss.—4. A priest: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'); 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest, John Caldwell, 'Patter of the Prisons'; 1931, Stiff, 'A Catholic priest good for a dollar' (tramps' usage); 1931, Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; 1938, Castle; extant. 'So called since many old-time tramps could always raise at least that sum from a priest for the telling of an artistic "fairy story"' (Irwin).

buck, v. See fight the tiger.—2. In the gen., derivative sense 'to oppose' it may possibly have been c. of ca. 1890–1910; this is the only sense recorded in the excellent glossary of No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904.—3. The sense 'to patrol the streets in a taxicab' (Leverage, 1925) is rather police s. (known, of course, to the underworld) than c.

buck bail. 'Bail given by a sharper for one of his gang': Grose, 2nd ed., 1788; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H (erroneously, buck bait); † by 1900. Cf. buck, n., 1 and 2.

buck fitch. 'Buck-fitches, c. old Leacherous, Nasty, Stinking Fellows', 1698, B.E., who implies rather than states its derivation from buck fitch, a he polecat; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.,—by which time it seems to have > s.

buck the horse. To make trouble in prison, e.g., by resisting the warders: convicts': C. 20. Part-ridge, 1937. I.e., to cause a horse to buck and therefore to risk getting thrown off.

buck the tiger. See tiger, fight the.

bucker. A taxicab driver whose meter is fixed to mark too high: 1925, Leverage; 1931, IA. Cf. buck, v., 3.—2. 'A fighter,' Leverage, 1925: this, too, is hardly c.

bucket, n. See garden, put in the.—2. A 'live man', says Matsell, 1859: prob. an error (cf. bucker, 2).

bucket, v. 'To bucket a person is synonymous with putting him in the well. See Well. Such treatment is said to be a bucketting concern': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890 (F & H). Suggested by well.—2. Hence, used absolutely: 1822, Anon., James Mackcoull, 'I was sure that he meant to bucket'; † by 1890.—3. 'To put away; to bank (as money),' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant.

bucket brigade. 'A line of convicts emptying their slop buckets; any group of convicts living in cells which have no toilets,' Ersine: convicts': since ca. 1910.

bucket broad. A prostitute that practises 'a type of sexual variant,' BVB, 1942: C. 20.

bucket(-)chat; nearly always pl. 'They are great Prigers [thieves] of Caunes [fowl] and Bucket-chats', or sheep: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, where it is also spelt as one word; app. † by 1830. Ex the feeding of pet lambs from buckets.

bucketer. 'He who cheats or robs his associates in crime': 1822, James Mackcoull; † by 1890. Ex bucket, v.

bucketing concern. See bucket.

buckle-beggar, a man officiating as clergyman in the Fleet Prison or to tramps and gypsies: not c., but (? low) s.

buckled, be. To be, or to get, arrested or imprisoned: Oct. 1877, Sessions (p. 639), "'Of course you know Benson is buckled,'" . . . buckled means arrested'; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1930. Made fast as though with a buckle.

buckler. A collar (on or over the male shirt): 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; 1890, F & H; † by 1920.

bucko. See bucco.

buckteen; gen. the—. 'The Lift or Buckteen, that is, Shoplifting': 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1830.

bud. A child: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne, 'I'm married, I have my own "buds", and I've always held home life sacred, even if I am a bank-burglar and a con'; app. † by 1920.

buddy, 'a companion', may have, orig., been c., as No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, implies (p. 246); but prob. it has always been s., latterly coll. 'Prob. a dim[inutive] of brother,' Webster, 1934.

buddy up. To form a friendship, become companions: tramps' c. of ca. 1905–25, then s.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, "'Me and Slim buddy up and take a trip'"—Slim and I struck up a friendship and went for a trip together.' Ex buddy, q.v.

bude, 'a small shop' (Leverage, 1925): rather s. than c. Perhaps ex It. bodega.

budge and snudg. See budge and snudge.

budge, n. 'One that steals cloaks,' R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665; esp. by sneaking into a house and robbing the vestibule—see budge and snudge; 1698, B.E., who makes the term apply to one who steals any other object that 'comes next to Hand'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1785, Grose; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (esp. if operating at night); in U.S.A., 1859, Matsell applies it to one who sneaks into a store and, the staff gone, lets in his companions; 1889, B & L (as in Matsell); by 1890 (F & H), † in England; 1903, Sylva Clapin, Americanisms, 'An accomplice who gains access to a building during the day, for the purpose of being locked in, so as to admit his fellow thieves during the night'; by ca. 1920, † in U.S.A. also.—2. See budge, the.—3. Drink; liquor: Scottish: 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'He asked me if I would accept of a gauge of budge'; 1855, J. D. Burn, The Autobiography of a Beggar-Boy; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1890 (F & H). Perhaps a corruption of booze, n.

budge, v. To go, proceed: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 'When we have tipt the lowre & fenc't away the duds | Then budge we to the bowsing ken, | That cuts the Robin Hood'; app. † by 1820. Cf. S.E. budge, to move slightly.—2. 'To skulk away meanly': 1809, Geo. Andrewes; † by 1890. Ex sense 1.—3. To drink liquor; to tinkle: Scottish: 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'We put into Campbelltown, where we remained two days, budging the whole time'; † by 1900. Ex budge, n., 3.—4. To 'split', to inform to the police: 1859, H; † by 1900.

budge, give (one) the. To push a person so that he falls to the ground (or almost does so) and, in helping him to rise, to rob him: 1662, as recounted in The History of Thomas Ellwood (pub. in 1714; written ca. 1684), "'I, said one of them, would give him the budge, and before he can recover himself, you, said he to another of them, having your pen-knife ready should slit his gown; and then," said he, "let Honeypot alone for the diving part" . . . As for the budge, I had had it given me often in the street, but understood not the meaning of it till now; and now I found it was a jostle enough to throw one almost upon his nose' (quoted from ed. by C. G. Crump, 1900); † by 1750.

budge, sneaking. See sneaking budge.

budge, standing. See standing budge.

budge, the. The being a 'budge' (see budge, n., 1, and budge and snudge): 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, 'The Budge it is a delicate trade'; app. † by ca. 1860.

budge a beak. To run away; properly, from a constable or a magistrate: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 'Budge a beake, runne away'; † by 1890 (F & H). See budge, v., 1 and beak, 1.

budge and snudge. A 'budge' and a 'snudge' working in collaboration: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, 'The fourth and fift sort [of burglars] is a Budge and Snudge. A Budge and Snudge commonly go together,' the budge entering a house whose door has been left open and pilfering what he finds just inside—he hands the booty to the snudge, who conveys it to a receiver; app. † by 1780. See budge and snudge, nn.

budge kain (or ken). See budging ken.

budger. A drunkard: 1889, B & L; but prob. current from early C. 19; app. † by 1890 (F & H). Ex budge, v., 3.

budging crib; budging ken. A public-house:

1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'So we came out of the budging crib and parted with the stranger'; ibid., Glossary, budge kain (i.e., a Scottish form of budge ken); 1864, H, 3rd ed. (budging-ken); 1889, B & L (budging ken); 1890, F & H, who imply that it is †. See budge, n., 3, and v., 3.

budgy, n., seems to be a variant of budge, n. 1674, Cotton, The Compleat Gamester, includes 'budgies' in a list of sharks and sharpers generically styled 'rooks'; app. † by 1740.

budgy, adj. Drunk, intoxicated: C. 19. F & H, 1890. See budge, n., 3, and v., 3.

buer. See bewer.

bues is a very rare spelling of boose (booze), n. (Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 1741.)

buesing coll. See boozing cull.

bufe or buff. 'Bufe, a dogge,' Harman, 1566; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, has it as bufe, in 'The Canters Dictionarie'; 1665, R. Head (bufe); 1688, Holme (id.); 1698, B.E. (id.); 1725, Canting Dict. (id.); 1785, Grose; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); by 1890 (F & H), † in England. Ex a dog's bark or growl, esp. a mastiff's; prob. the early pronunciation was boof. Cf. buffer, 1, and bugher.

bufe-nabber; bufe-napper. In 1698, B.E. defines the term thus: 'Buffenapper, c. a Dog-stealer, that Trades in . . . all sorts of Dogs, Selling them at a round Rate, and himself or Partner Stealing them away the first opportunity'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Buff-Knapper . . . The 32d Order of Villains'; 1785, Grose (bufe-nabber); by 1859, in use in U.S.A. (Matsell, Vocabulum); by 1890 (F & H), † in England. See bufe and nabber, napper.

buff, n. See bufe.—2. A fellow: in gen. use, coll. (Kersey has it, 1708-15: O.E.D.); it was also 'a Newgate Cant Word used in familiar Salutation: as, How dost do, my Buff?' (A New Canting Dict., 1725); † by 1820. Perhaps ex buff, 'the human skin'.—3. Lead: 1732, trial of Thos Beck (Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, pub. in 1735), 'One Thomas Price came and asked us if we dealt in Buff'; app. † by 1810. Possibly ex the approx. (!) colour (cf. moss); the colour, however, is accurate in the much commoner blue pigeon.

buff, v. See buffing the dog.—2. To perjure oneself: see the remark at buffer, 5.—3. To inform—to divulge—to the police: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; April 1864, Sessions; † by 1910.

buff, stand, to stand firm, is, in gen., S.E. It is, however, worth noting that, in c., 'He stands Buff, is a Phrase used of an obstinate harden'd Rogue, who will confess nothing; or [applied] to one who in a Robbery will not be daunted at Resistance, or Opposition, or leave his Com-rogues in the Lurch,' A New Canting Dict., 1725. Here buff is prob. the S.E. word meaning 'buffet'.

buff ball. A tramps' synonym of ballum rancum: 1873, James Greenwood, In Strange Company; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; slightly ob. Cf. S.E. stripped to the buff.

buff in downy, put. See downy, put buff in.

buff-knapper or napper. See bufe-nabber.

buff-lay, the. See first quot'n at blue pigeon; app. † by 1830.

buff-napper. See bufe-nabber.

buff to the stuff. To lay, on oath, a claim to property supposed to have been stolen: ca. 1850-1920: in 1909, Ware classifies it as 'Thieves', 19 cent.' In Sessions, Aug. 1869 (p. 420), Ware is 'corroborated', thus, 'He said, We are going to send some parties to buff to the stuff, and you can easy say . . ., before the Magistrate, that you have made inquiry about the property, and you believe it belongs to the person who is now in Court'; Montagu Williams, Leaves from a Life, 1890, "We can send some party down to buff for it" (a thieves' expression for "identify").

buffa is a variant of buffer, 1. Rowlands, 1610.

buffalo. A negro: this sense (Jackson & Hellyer, 1914) is not c. but Southern States' s.

buffalo, v. To intimidate: 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'In his heart the jeweler knows that he is nothing more than a fence but he manages to "buffalo" the police and thwart justice'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To . . . bluff, or to frighten by a show of resistance or by threat'; extant. Ex the fearsome aspect of an enraged buffalo.

buffar, adj. Canine: 1688, Randle Holme, The Academy of Armory, 'Buffar, Dog-like'; app. † by 1830. See buffer, 1.

buffenapper. See bufe-nabber.

buffer. A dog: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, spells it buffa; 1698, B.E. (see buffer's nab); 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1714, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'Boufer, alias Dog'; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; 1797, Potter; 1812, Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, where it is wrongly printed as bouser; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.), 'Generally a watch dog'; 1859, H; † by 1889 (B & L). Prob. an extension of bufe.—2. 'A Rogue that kills good sound Horses, only for their Skins, by running a long Wyre into them, and sometimes knocking them on the Head, for the quicker Dispatch,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The 31st Order of Villains'; 1785, Grose, 'One that steals and kills horses and dogs for their skins'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; † by 1859 (witness H). Ex buff, the skin, or buff, to strike.—3. In 'Come all you Buffers gay', a c. song of ca. 1760, the word seems to denote any kind of thief.—4. An inn-keeper: 1785, Grose; 1823, Jon Bee. But is not this a confusion with bluffer? Bee, however, seems to guarantee it.—5. A perjurer (1797, Potter) is rather s. than c.—6. A boxer: Irish c. (— 1819) of ca. 1810-80. (T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial; 1859, H.)—7. One who carries contraband goods concealed about his body: app. ca. 1790-1815. Jon Bee; who (after The London Guide, 1818) relates it to buff, the skin.

buffer-lurking. Dog-stealing (as a profession): 1859, H (at tike lurking); slightly ob. See buffer, 1, and lurk, v.

buffer's nab. 'A dog's Head, used in a Counterfeit Seal to a false Pass,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1830. See buffer, 1, and nab, n.

buffer-nabber. A dog-stealer: 1797, Potter; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1889 (B & L). See buffer, 1. buffer-napper. A dog-stealer: 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. See preceding entry.

buffing the dog. Dog-stealers have 'a practice among them of killing such dogs as no advertisement or enquiry has been made for; and this they call buft seems to mean 'bully' or 'harlot's protector', via buffet (? = buffeter, one who buffets): ca. 1590–1620. The solc record, so far as I know, is Robert Greene, A Disputation, 1592, 'Our English whores . . . have their Ruffians to rifle, when they cannot fetch over with other cunning, their crosbiters attending upon them, their foysts, their bufts, their nippes, and such like'.

"buffing the dog", whose skin they sell, and feed the remaining dogs with his carcass,' George Parker, A View of Society, 1781; app. † by 1870. Ex buff, the skin; suggested by buffer.

bug, n. A breast-pin, a tie-pin: 1851, implied in bug-hunter, 2; by 1859, used in America—witness Matsell's Vocabulum; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1927, Kane,—but by this time the term is †. Ex its resemblance to a shiny bug or insect.—2. Conversation; to talk: not c. but tinkers' s.: 1890, B & L (at thari).—3. A hold-out (a card-sharpers' device): 1894, G. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats, pp. 80–82; also American, as in Frank Wrentmore's article in Flynn's, March 28, 1936. Perhaps ex sense 1.—4. A trollop: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; † by 1920 (teste, IA, 1931). A reference to the more unpleasant kind of insect.—5. A faked sore used to gain sympathy: U.S. beggars': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; April 1, 1933, Flynn's (as used among convicts); 1933, Ersine; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; extant.—6. A precious stone: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant, though ob. Cf. sense 1.—7. A burglar alarm: U.S.A.: late C. 19–20 (Jim Tully, in The American Mercury of April 1933, implies its use since ca. 1890): 1925, Leverage; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest; Nov. 1931, IA; April 16, 1932, Flynn's; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict: 1938, Castle. Cf. sense 6 of the v.—8. 'A tin-can lamp with a shirt-tail wick', Stiff, 1931: U.S. tramps.: extant. Ex the appearance of the wick: cf. sense 1.—9. As 'an insane or an excessively simple-minded person', it may have been c. of ca. 1900–10 (cf. bug house), but prob. always s.—orig., low.—10. (Ex sense 8.) A flash-light or electric torch: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant.—11. 'Automatic gun detectors, called "bugs" by the convicts,' C. Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937: Alcatraz prison: since ca. 1935. Ex sense 8?—12. Injection of coal-oil or disinfectant or tobacco juice, to raise a swelling and arouse sympathy: Am. drug addicts': 1942, BVB. Ex sense 5.

bug, v. See bugging.—1. See the n., sense 2.—2. 'To bug, a cant word among journeymen hatters, signifying the exchange of the dearest materials of which a hat is made for others of less value. Hats are composed of furs and wools of diverse animals, among which is a small portion of beaver's [beaver's] fur. Bugging is stealing the beaver, and substituting in lieu thereof an equal weight of some cheaper ingredient': 1785, Grose. But it is almost certain that, here, Grose uses cant as = slang.—3. To spoil, to damage: 1797, Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1880.—4. 'Bug, or Bug Over. To give, deliver, or hand over; as, He bug'd me a quid, he gave me a guinea; bug over the rag, hand over the money': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood (b.o.); 1889, B & L (both); 1890, F & H; † by 1930. A perversion of s. bung, 'to pass'?—5. To rob (a person): 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1931, John G. Brandon, Th' Big City; extant. To sting as a bug, an insect, does.—6. To protect (a house, a safe, etc.) with electric alarm-devices: U.S.A.: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, M. Acklom's article, 'The possibilities of the joint being bugged'; 1927, Kane; Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke, 'The casa's bugged'; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; extant.—7. To steal tie-pins (esp.; also, c.g., brooches): U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex bug, n., 1.—8. To simulate insanity: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. bug house, adj.—9. To certify insane: U.S.A.: June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch, 'We'll have the Marquis bugged . . . Settled in the boob house, the nut foundry'; Aug. 19, 1933, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1935, Hargan; extant.—10. (Cf. senses 8, 9, and also bug test.) To apply a psychological or psychiatric test to (a person): U.S. convicts': since ca. 1930: 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor, 'There isn't one man in a hundred who tells the truth when he's bugged'.—11. The v. corresponding to n., 12: Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942. See sense 5 of the n.

bug, shoot the. See shoot the bug.

bug doctor. A psychologist; a psychiatrist: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. Cf. bug test.

bug house, n. A lunatic asylum: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, but prob. it was s. by 1910—perhaps considerably earlier, for cf. the adj.—2. Hence (?), a prison: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys; ob.

bug house, or hyphenated, or bughouse, adj. Mad; half-crazed; very eccentric: tramps': Aug. 1891, The Contemporary Review, Josiah Flynt, 'The American Tramp'; 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary: 'crazy'); 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers That Prey; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1902, Flynt, The Little Brother; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd, "'She's gone bughouse'", Mrs. Murray added—but, by this date, the term seems to have > low s. Cf. English s. bats in the belfry and rats in the garret.

bug-hunter, 'an upholsterer', is s.—2. A plunderer of drunken men: 1851, Mayhew (see drummer); 1859, H., 'Low wretches who plunder drunken men'; 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1870, The Broadway, Nov.; 1889, B & L; ob. See bug, n., 1.—3. A pick-pocket specializing in tie-pins: 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; ob. See bug, n., 1.

bug juice. An opiate: C. 20. BVB. Cf. easing powder.

bug-on, sport a. To be, to feel, grouchy, bad-tempered, moody: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1935, Hargan; extant.

bug over. See bug, v., 4.

bug test. A psychological or psychiatric test: convicts': since ca. 1930: 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor; 1935, Hargan; extant. Cf. bug house, 1.

bug the writ. See bugging.

bugaboo or buggaboo; gen. pl. 'Sheriff Officers': 1809, George Andrewes (the latter form—which happens to be incorrect); 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by 1859, current in U.S.A. (Matsell, Vocabulum); by 1910, † in both countries. Ex the lit. sense of the S.E. word: 'a fancied object of terror; a boggy; a bugbear' (O.E.D.).

bugaroch, adj. Pretty: 1880, R. K. Fox, The Slang Dictionary of New York; 1889, B & L; app. † by 1930. Cf. Gaelic bugarnach, sturdy boy.

buggaboo. See bugaboo.

bugged joint. A building, apartment, office protected with a burglar alarm: 1933, Eagle; extant. See bug, v., 6, and joint, n.

bugged up. 'A place bugged up . . . equipped with burglar alarms,' Convict, 1934; since ca. 1925. An elaboration of the bugged in bugged joint; see bug, v., 6.

bugger. 'A pickpocket; a buggsman,' the latter being preferably buggsman, a stealer of tie-pins (esp. from drunken men): 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; 1889, B & L (a pickpocket specializing in tie-pins, studs, etc.); 1890, F & H (id.); † by 1930. Ex bug, n., 1.

Bugging Hold, the. A small room on the North side of Newgate Prison: ca. 1700–50. Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708, 'From whence it takes its Name I cannot well tell, unless it is a Fate attending this place, that some confin'd there may or have been addicted to Sodomy'.

bugging. 'Taking Money by Bailiffs and Serjeants of the Defendant not to Arrest him,' B.E., 1698: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Bailiffs who take money to postpone or refrain the serving of a writ, are said to bug the writ'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (American), 'Taking money from a thief by a policeman'; 1889, B & L (the same); 1890, F & H (id.); † by 1920.—2. See bug, v., 2.—3. (In counterfeiting) 'Beginning . . . by what is called "bugging," and [? or] raising small notes,—altering their nominal value to a higher one—he became a shover and a false coiner of gold and silver': U.S.A.: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; ob.

buggy, n. An automobile: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1932, James T. Farrell, Young Lonigan; March 24, 1934, Flynn's, Major C. E. Russell; 1934, Weseen; extant. 'A contraction of the term "gasoline buggy," by which the earlier automobiles were known' (Irwin).—2. A wheelbarrow: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Humorous.—3. 'An eye dropper,' Castle, 1938: since ca. 1930.

buggy, adj. Mad; crazy; out of one's mind: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'These latter would tell the keepers that he was buggy (insane)'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1920, low s. Cf. bug house and shoot the bug.

buggy bandit. A criminal specializing in the theft of cars: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. See buggy, n., 1.—2. One who uses a car in which to escape after a robbery; 1931, Irwin; extant.

buggy house is an occ. variant of bug house, 1; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's (p. 640); extant.

buggy-ride. A death-trap: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Ex buggy, n., 1, and ride, n., 2.

bughar. See:—

bugher. A dog: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'The counterfeit Jerkes (or Seales) . . . for the most part bearing the ill-favoured shape of a Buhars Nab, or a Prancer's Nab (a Dogges head, or a Horses) and sometimes an Unicomes, and such like'; ibid., in the section on 'clapperedogeons', he defines bugher as 'a little dog', but this is an idiosyncratic, or perhaps merely a careless, modification: 1665, R. Head, 'Bughar. . . . A cur'; 1676, Coles;

D.O.U.

1688, Randle Holme, 'Bugher, a Cur Dog'; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1840. See buffer, 1—and Partridge, 1937, at bufe.

bughouse. See bug house.

Bughouse Square. Washington Square, Chicago, Illinois: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'To the "bos" it is "Bug-house Square" Among [the more or less vagabond poets, artists, writers, revolutionists] this region is known as the "village"'; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'There assemble those . . . who think they have a message for the world' (Irwin); see bug house, adj.—2. Union Square, New York: since ca. 1925. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

Bughouse Train, the. The Deportees' Train: 1935, Geo. Ingram, Stir Train; extant. Cf. bug house, adj.

bugle. Nose: Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex the sound it makes when blown vigorously.

bugs, n. 'One of the most ancient and universal forms of deception is the fake disease. In Hobohemia a pretended affliction is called "jiggers" or "bugs"', Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; extant. See bug, n., 5; to add an s is a favourite device of cant and slang.

bugs, adj. Crazy, eccentric; mad: since ca. 1927. W. R. Burnett, The Silver Eagle, 1932, 'I mean he's bugs, off his nut'; by 1935, low s. Ex bug house, adj.

bugs and fleas. Knees: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

bugsgman. See bugger.

bugster. A night watchman: 1929–31, Kernôt; 1931, IA; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

buhar is a rare variant of bugher. (Dekker, 1612.)

build, n. 'Initial confidence talk,' John Wilstach, The Saturday Review of Literature, July 18, 1931: commercial underworld: since ca. 1910: 1929–31, Kernôt; 1934, Rose. Cf. the v.; prob. short for build-up.

build, v. To work on (a 'sucker') in preparation for a swindle: racketeers': Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke, 'We build the sap for the scare an' the shamus queers the play'; 1934, Rose; extant.

build-up. Preparatory work (on a 'sucker'): since ca. 1925; 1933, Ersine; 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; by 1940, police and journalistic s.

build up, v. 'To array [a person] in good clothes, for trade purposes,' Ware, 1909; extant—though slightly ob. Cf. build, n. and v., and build-up, n.

build up the habit. 'To increase one's narcotic doses,' BVB, 1942: addicts': C. 20. Cf. build, v.

Bujak. A Slav: since ca. 1925. Ersine. A 'Russian-sounding' word.

bulk, n. A pickpocket's accomplice: 1665, Head (see bulk and file); 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-keepers (see quot'n at file); 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'A Bulk or Gammon, alias that is he that jostles up to a Man, whilst another picks his Pocket; and no sooner got his Booty, but tips it . . . to his Bulk'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1760, Anon., Come all you Buffers gay; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1890 (F & H). Perhaps short for bulker, 1.—2. Hence, that accomplice of a shop-lifter who receives the goods from the actual thieves, in order to divert suspicion: 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected; † by 1850.

D

bulk, v. To act as a 'bulk'; i.e., to push (an intended victim): 1698, B.E. (at tout), 'Do you Bulk and I'll File, c. if you'll jostle him, I will Pick his Pocket'; 1707, J. Shirley, 'A Bulk, that can Bulk any Hick': 1742, Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV; the term seems to have > † by 1780. Ex bulk, n.—2. V.t., as in Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, vol. III, 1720, 'Bulk the Cull to the Right. That is [an order] for a Fellow in a Crowd to jostle a Man or punch him so on the right Breast, that putting his Hand up to ease himself, the Bulker's Comrade picks his Pocket on the left Side and gives the Booty to another to carry off'. Also bulk to the left!

bulk, stand. 'One or two of the Gang stood Bulk, (that is, standing before the Person that was to be robbed)': 1738, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. IV (Jos. Johnson); 1743, op cit., No. II, Part ii, 'To receive the Goods from the Person that steals them, and so march off with them'; † by 1870. See bulk, n., 1.

bulk and file. 'The Pickpocket and his mate,' R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665; 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers (see file); 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Bulk and File, c. one jostles while the other Picks the Pocket'; 1785, Grose; by 1859, current in U.S.A. (Matsell); by 1870, † in England, and by 1900, † in U.S.A. See the separate terms.

bulker. He who so jostles the intended victim that the accomplice—the actual pickpocket—is enabled to rob the more easily: 1666, Anon., Leathermore's Advice (or The Nicker Nicked); 1700, T. Brown, Amusements Serious and Comical; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1811, Lex. Bal.; app. † by 1860. Prob. a perversion of baulker.—2. 'Every one in a Petticoat is thy Mistriss, from humble Bulker to exalted Countess,' T. Shadwell, The Scourers, 1691; 1698, B.E., 'One that lodges all Night on Shopwindows and Bulkheads'—a definition repeated verbatim in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; † by 1889, (B & L: 'a street-walking prostitute').—3. The agential n. of bulking: card-sharpers': C. 18. This sense is deduced and not definitely corroborated.

bulkie. See bulky.

bulking, n. A C. 18 card-sharpers' term for cheating by confederacy and obstruction: 1726, Anon., The Art and Mystery of Gaming detected, 'When [the banker at faro] has occasion to draw a Card, he either treads upon the Croupe's Toes, or '—this being the practice of bulking—'makes a private Sign to the Puffs' or decoys; 'so one of them readily puts his hand cross the table, in which Time the Card is drawn and the Mischief done The Cant name on this Occasion is Bulking . . . ; and the Puffs not thought of to be a Confederate with the Bank makes the Action less remarkable or suspected.' Cf. bulk, v., 1.

bulky. A constable, a policeman: Scottish: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'We also saw a few bulkies'; ibid., Glossary, bulkie; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', 2nd ed.; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; app. † by 1930. Prob. ex his size; possibly a corruption of baulky, 'tending to baulk criminals'.

bulky (or bulkie) ken. A police station: 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'She sent for the hornies, and had Bagrie taken to the Bulkie Kain on suspicion'; 1841, Lytton, Night and Morning; 1890, F & H, who classify it as provincial. Lit., a police house.

bull, n. A crown piece: 1784 (implied in half bull, q.v.); 1789 (see flat, n., 4); 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1797, Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Jon Bee; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1830, Sessions; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1839, Brandon; 1845, Anon. translator, E. Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, ch. VI; 1848, Sinks of London; 1851, Borrow, Lavengro; by this time (witness Mayhew, London Labour, I, 1851, p. 52, col. 1) it was also low, esp. Cockney, s.; 1857, Snowden, Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1923, Manchon (of counterfeit money); ob. Prob. ex bull's eye But perhaps, like hog (a shilling), ex the fact that, on ancient, including Classical, coins, the bull, like the hog, often figures; cf. the 'herd' origin of the L. word for 'money': pecunia. This Classical origin is interestingly posed in R. Thurston Hopkins's very readable Life and Death at the Old Bailey, 1935, at pp. 66–67.—2. 'I might . . . have had the culprit . . . flogged to the extent of one hundred lashes, twenty-five being the minimum. (By the way, there were slang terms applied to these doses of the lash: twenty-five was called a "tester"; fifty, a "bob"; seventy-five, a "bull"; and a hundred a "canary")': 1859, John Lang, Botany Bay, in the story entitled, 'The Master and His Man': these terms were current when Lang left Australia ca. 1840, and I surmise that they were current ca. 1820 (or '25)—1870. The ranks of the punishments correspond to the hierarchy of coins, tester being a sixpence, bob a shilling, bull a crown, and canary a guinea.—3. A 'term amongst prisoners for the meat served to them in jail': 1859, H; 1874, J. Greenwood, The Wilds of London, 'A 5 oz. ration of meat'; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1902, J. Greenwood, The Prisoner in the Dock; ob. A pejorative.—4. A locomotive: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; by 1903 (Clapin), it was s. Ex its snorting, and the steam issuing from its 'nostrils'.—5. A police officer: U.S.A.: 1859, implied in bull-trap, q.v.; 1893, implied in bull-game; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective; 1907, Jack London; 1912, A. Train; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1916, The Literary Digest (Aug., 'Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue; 1922, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life; 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler; 1923, M. Garahan, Stiffs; by 1924 (Edgar Wallace, Room 13), British too; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1926, Jack Black; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, C. F. Coe, Me—Gangster; 1928, Chicago May; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 'Bulls—detectives'; July 13, 1929, Flynn's, Eddie Guerin; 1930, G. H. Westbury, A Working Hobo in Canada; July 19, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; and many, many times since: indeed, since ca. 1931, it has hardly been c., whereas it certainly has been police and journalistic s., in U.S.A.; 1932, Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps; 1933, Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby; June 9, 1946, anon. letter, implying Canadian currency since ca. 1910. He stamps about as though he were a bull; cf. napping bull; 'From the plunging, bullying attitude, of these officers when dealing with rowdies' (Flynt).—6. Tobacco: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; 1934 (see sack o' bull); 1938, Castle; extant. Perhaps ex s. bull(-shit), but prob. = Bull Durham, a brand of tobacco procurable in certain U.S. prisons.—7. (Ex sense 5.) A prison warder: 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison; April 13, 1929, The Saturday Evening Post, article by Charles Givens; 1931, IA; extant.

bull, v. To persuade with plausible talk; to soft-soap (a person): 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, "'You weren't going to allow a bullet-headed policeman 'bull you' into going after me, were you?'"'; by 1923, gen. s., as in Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, where a detective uses it. To administer 'bull' (short for bull-shit)—s. for 'blarney'—to.

bull and cow, 'a dispute; a quarrel,' is rhyming s. on row; it is low s., not c., except on the Pacific Coast of U.S.A.: witness M & B, 1944.

bull artist. 'A hobo with the gift of the gab. Becoming a parlor term,' Stiff, 1931: tramps', ca. 1910–32, then fairly gen. s. Cf. bull con; the term derives, imm., ex bull con artist.

bull buster. 'One who makes it a practice to assault policemen,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's, Earl H. Scott, 'The Bull Buster'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'One with a morbid passion for assaulting the police'; extant. See bull, n., 5.

bull(-)con. 'Convincing story,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1916, Arthur Stringer, The Door of Dread; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Clever Lies'; by 1930, low s. I.e., bull = bull-shit, s. for 'blarney' + con, n., 3.

bull con artist. A confidence man: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Damp powder'; extant—but slightly ob. Cf. preceding entry.

bull cook. 'Camp flunkey doing the heavy work for the chef,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A camp flunkey or waiter'. Ex loggers' s. for the cook's assistant, usually 'but little better than the bullocks that haul timber, as far as intellect is concerned' (Irwin).

bull(-)dike. 'A woman who commits fellatio on men,' Hargan, 1935: since ca. 1920. Ex sense 2.—2. A lesbian: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 18, 1937, commenting on sense 1, 'As I've always understood it, a lesbian'. BVB, 1942, cites a variant: bull-diker. Cf. dike.

bull-diking, adj. Of lesbian activities or tendencies: since ca. 1925. BVB, 1942. Ex prec., sense 2.

bull-dog; gen. in pl. A pistol: 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by 1859, current in U.S.A. (Matsell, Vocabulum); by 1890, † in England; in use among the Australian bushrangers (see George E. Boxall's book, 1898, at p. 76). Ex its bark.—2. A sugar-loaf: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1890 (F & H). Ex its toughness?

bull-fighter. 'An empty passenger coach, usually when attached to a freight train or when standing idle in the yards,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910. An enemy to the bull, n., 5.

bull-game. Not afraid of policemen or prison warders: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne, 'As he [a prison captain] unlocks the jail door there bursts out from within a demoniac yell from the jailed ones, who want Condom [i.e., the convicts] to know that they are "bull game"''; ob. Game or plucky when confronted by a 'bull' or policeman (bull, n., 5).

bull horrors. 'Morbid fear of the police, usually the result of previous ill treatment at their hands,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1915: 1933, Ersine; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; 1941, Maurer. See bull, n., 5.—2. Hence, among drug addicts (with esp. reference to heroin), since the late 1920's: 'A still worse condition [than 'the needles' (2)] is in America called "the bull horrors" . . . that includes persecution mania,' Ferd. Tuohy, Inside Dope, 1934; July 7, 1934, Flynn's, 'I Am a Dope Fiend'.

Bull in the Pound, the. In 1828, Pierce Egan, in (a footnote on p. 245 of J. C. Hotten's ed. of) Finish to Tom, Jerry and Logic, defines it as 'A well-known flash house fifty years ago, denominated the "Bull in trouble!" and contiguous to Bagnigge Wells Tea Gardens. A place of great resort at that period, and for several years afterwards, by the rolling kiddies of the old school, their girls, family people, etc. The "Bull in Trouble" has been long since razed to the ground': therefore current ca. 1750–95.

bull jine, 'a locomotive', is s.—not c. B & L, 1889.

bull money, 'hush money', is not c. but low s.: 1889, B & L.

bull out of harness. A plain-clothes policeman: Canada: since ca. 1925. Anon. letter, June 9, 1946. See bull, n., 5, and harness.

bull-pen. In jail or prison, the cage in which general prisoners are kept while awaiting trial or transfer; in C. 20, a barrack room or a convict-camp guardroom: 1879, Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences, 'His companion, who had been herded in the "bull-pen" along with the regular daily collection of petty offenders, was finally brought before the police justice'; 1881, A. Pinkerton, Professional Thieves and the Detective, of a detention 'pen' in a court of justice; 1902, Stanley Waterloo, The Story of a Strange Career; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison; 1915, Geo. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; 1926, Jack Black; April 16, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, Kane, 'Large cage in a jail where general prisoners are kept'; 1928, Chicago May; 1929, Jack Callahan; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest, John Caldwell ('Patter of the Prisons'), 'The guardroom, where guns, ammunition, etc., are kept'; May 1931, True Detective Mysteries, R. E. Burns; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; and often since. 'From the likeness to a stock pen or corral' (Irwin); but imm. ex the predominant pre-1870 sense, 'a roughly built enclosure for prisoners, used in emergencies instead of a jail' (D.A.E.).

bull ring. Among the yeggs of ca. 1880–1910, it was any place, room, yard, what-have-you—where 'The third degree' was exercised upon a yegg. See The American Mercury of April 1933, where Jim Tully, in 'Yeggs', describes the process; he says, for instance, 'If a yegg should weaken ever so little in the bull ring (the primeval term for what is now called the third degree), he was ostracized forever'. Ersine, 1933, roundly defines bull ring as 'the third degree, works'. For the origin, see sense 2.—2. The open space surrounding the cells in a jail: 1912, Anon., The Curse of Tramp Life, 3rd ed.; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'The [space] about which prisoners are made to walk as a punishment or for exercise. A prison stockade'; extant. See bull, n., 5, and cf. the origin of bull pen. There is, obviously, a punning allusion to the literal sense of the term.

bull simple. 'He went out on the road "bull simple"', simple on the subject of shooting policemen,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'Afraid of the police'; and others more recently. Cf. bum-simple; simple = 'simple (i.e., single)-minded'; and for the second (the Irwin) sense, cf. stir-daffy and stir-simple.

bull-tit. "Setting" a bavol-gry or "bull-tit", No. 747, 1893, at p. 20, where the Romany synonym is glossed as 'roarer' (a broken-winded horse); app. current ca. 1830–1910. Ex a bull's 'roaring'.

bull-trap. Bull-Traps. Rogues who personate [police] officers for the purposes of extorting money': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; 1881, R. K. Fox, The New York Slang Dictionary; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; hence, in C. 20, Australian, esp. of such a scoundrel as operates in public parks, especially against those couples who become amorous: Baker, 1942. A 'bull' (see bull, n., 5) who is a trap: bull trap is the Am. version of bully-trap.

bull wool. Shoddy clothing: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'So called from the rough texture, which feels as if filled with hair' (Irwin).

bull-wool, adj. (Of clothing) shoddy; (of analogous things) cheap, very inferior: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex the n.; cf. bull's wool.

bulldog. See bull-dog.

bulleroyes. See lurry.

bullet. A dollar—coin rather than paper: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; slightly ob. Cf. bullets. Ex Am.-s. bullet, 'an ace in the game of brag' (D.A.E.)—cf. ace, n., 1.—2. An ace: card-sharpers': 1925, Leverage; extant.

bullets. Money, esp. in cash; yeggs': Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest, 'Do You Speak "Yegg"?'; ob. Ex bullet, 1.

bullock and file is an error for buttock and file in 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857; the mistake was repeated by Baumann, Londonismen, 1887.

bulloon, 'to lie, to talk with deceptive intent' (Leverage, 1925), lies in the Tom Tiddler's ground between c. and low s. Ex bull, v., with a punning hint at a balloon full of gas.

bulls, 'counterfeit coin': see bull, n., 1, ref. of 1923.

bulls, work the. See work the bulls.

bull's aunts (esp. when pron. ants). Trousers: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on pants.

Bull's Belly, the. See Stop-Hole Abbey

bull's eye. A crown piece: 1698, B.E.; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1859, H, 'Bull, a crown piece; formerly, bull's eye',—from which it appears that the term was † by ca. 1830. Ex the size and shape (and brightness?).

bull's wool. Bullswool . . . Stolen clothing', Ersine, 1933. Cf. bull wool, its imm. source.

bully was, it would seem, c. originally in the sense of a harlot's protector: as B.E., 1698, maintained, and A New Canting Dict., 1725, would seem to imply.—2. In U.S.A., esp. New York, 'a lump of lead tied in a corner of a kerchief': 1859, Matsell; 1881, R. K. Fox, The New York Slang Dictionary; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1903, Clapin; app. † by 1930. Perhaps because with it, one may bully the victim; cf., however, bully, 3.

bully back. 'A bully who supports another person' (O.E.D.): Theophilus Lucas, Memoirs of Gamesters, 1714, 'To which Bully hack'—Bully Dawson, a famous sharper, who died in 1699—'thus reply'd . . .'; 1726, Amherst (bully-back; O.E.D.); 1785, Grose, 'A bully to a bawdy house',—he not merely acts as 'chucker-out' but extorts money by bullying the customers; † by 1889 (B & L). The O.E.D. adjudges the word to have always been S.E.; Grose classifies it as s., which prob. it was, though the 'brothel bully' sense may have been c.—orig., at least. Lit., a bully that 'backs' another. Lucas's bully hack may be a different word with the sense 'a blustering, hacking bully', or 'a common (hackney) bully'.

bully boss. 'The landlord of a brothel or thieves' den': 1890, F & H; ob. Such a boss, or landlord, must be something of a bully—or, at the least, a very formidable fellow.

bully buff, in B.E., is almost certainly a misprint for bully huff. Actually, however, it is not a misprint but a blurred printing.

bully cock. 'One who foment quarrels in order to rob the persons quarrelling': 1785, Grose. This may be genuine, but I suspect that bully cock is a mistake for bully rock, q.v. towards end; unless, indeed, the 1725 definition cited at bully rock is correct and the term, there, should be bully cock.

bully fop. 'A maggot-pated, huffing, silly rattling Fellow,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1797, Potter, 'A silly rattling fellow, kept in a bawdy-house for the purpose of deception'; app. † by 1860. An unpleasant combination of bully and fop.

bully hack. See bully back.

bully huff. A bully that is also a boaster: gamesters': 1674, Cotton, The Compleat Gamester, 'They—a gaming gang—will rarely adventure on the attempt' to manhandle an innocent winner as he leaves the gaming-house 'unless they are backt with some Bully-Huffs, and Bully-Rocks'; a sense app. † by 1800. Cf. huff, q.v.—2. Hence (?) 'a poor sorry Rogue that haunts Bawdy-houses, and pretends to get Money out of Gentlemen and others, Ratling and Swearing the Whore is his Wife, calling to his assistance a parcel of Hectors,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The 28th Order of Villains'; 1797, Potter; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870.

bully huff-cap. A hector, a blustering bully: 1785, Grose; app. † by 1860. Cf. the prec. entry.

bully rock (or rook). A bully that is also a rook or sharper: gamesters' s. or, possibly, gamesters' c.: 1673 (O.E.D.); 1674, Cotton, The Compleat Gamester, 'The Bully-Rock, with mangy fist, and Pox, Justles some out, and then takes up the Box'; after ea. 1830, only historical. Ex S.E. bully-rock, 'a boon companion'; the rock is prob. due to folk etymology. B.E.'s sense (1698) 'a Hector, or Bravo' (bully-rock), is perhaps e. or, possibly, a catachresis, the definition being, I think, too comprehensive. But A New Canting Dict., 1725, clears the air: 'Bully Rock, a Hector, or Bravo, one that sets on'—incites—'People to quarrel, pretending to be a Second to them; and then making Advantage of both [Parties]. The 29th Order of Villains.' See, however, bully cock.—2. 'Impudent villains, kept to keep order in houses of ill-fame': 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1890.

bully ruffian occurs (in the form bully ruffin) in R. Head, Proteus Redivivus, 1675, as a bully connected (? as chucker-out to a brothel) with whoring.—2. A highwayman; a footpad: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Bully-Ruffins, Highwaymen or Padders, of the most cruel and desperate kind: Who attack with Oaths and Curses, plunder without Mercy, and frequently murder without Necessity. The same with High-Pad; which see'; 1770, Thos Bridges; 1785, Grose; † by 1840.

bully shabbaroon, a scurvy or shabby bully, may be a genuine e. term; or it may simply be Richard Head's coinage. See third quotation at town-shift.

bully-trap. A sharper, a cheat, says B.E., 1698: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1800. Properly, a hectoring 'trapan', though the lexicographers do not sufficiently bring out this differentiation.—2. 'A brave man with a mild or effeminate appearance, by whom bullies are frequently taken in': 1785, Grose; † by 1860. Perhaps orig. e.; but prob. always s.—3. 'Bully traps—pretended constables called in to frighten the unwary and extort money': 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890.

bum, a bailiff, or a sheriff's officer: s., not e.—2. A professional loafer: this sense may, just possibly, have been e. at first, but prob. it has always been s. The D.A.E. records it for 1887—but it goes back further than that, I feel sure. Cf. the v., senses 2 and 3; and sense 6 of the n. For the distinction between bum, hobo, tramp, see the entry at tramp.—3. A thief: U.S.A.: ea. 1886, in Lewis E. Lawes, Cell 202, Sing Sing, 1935; current in early C. 20 ('In those days it [bum] meant any kind of a travelling thief,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926); app. † by 1920 ('The yegg of today was the bum of twenty years ago,' Black). Cf. bum, v., 3.—4. A useless person: U.S.A.: ea. 1886, Lewis E. Lawes, Cell 202, Sing Sing, 1935, 'Then he will be a bum, and we will send him to Sing Sing,' glossed by Godfrey Irwin as 'If he does that he will become useless to us, and . . .'; by 1900 it had merged with sense 2.—5. A chap, fellow, 'guy': tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; by 1920, s. Prob. ex senses 2, 4.—6. See bum, on the. ('The bum . . . is unwilling to work and lives by begging and petty thieving,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923. Sense 6 is hardly to be distinguished from sense 2, q.v.) Here, bum is a beggar: and one of the earliest references is in 1894, W. T. Stead's If Christ Came to Chicago, "'You can always tell the bum," said a justice, "by his smell"'—7. Defined by George London, Les Bandits de Chicago, 1930, as 'boxeur' (boxer) but the definition is suspect.—8. Usually pl., bums, reformatory guards: American convicts': since the 1920's. In, e.g., Hargan, 1935. Ex sense 2 and 4.

bum, v. The sense 'to arrest' is not e. but s.—2. To sleep in the open air; to go 'on the bum': U.S.A., vagrants' and tramps': 1872, Charles L. Brace, The Dangerous Classes; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; app. † by 1945—and somewhat rare after ca. 1920. Prob. ex sense 2 of the n., for many bums do—at least in the summer—sleep thus.—3. The sense, 'to pilfer, to loot', was 'much in vogue, during the War of Secession' (Clapin, 1903): prob. s., not e.—4. Hence (?), to obtain by begging; to beg, to beg for (bum a lump, to ask for food), to beg at: U.S. tramps': 1896, The Popular Science Journal, "'Bumming the freights"' (obtaining a ride on a freight or goods train) cited by the D.A.E.; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures, 'Suppose we . . . bum some ground coffee . . . I bummed at least a dozen houses successfully'; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1928, Jim Tully, Jarnegan; by 1930, low s.

bum, adj. Inferior; second-rate or worse: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, "'Nervy as they make 'em," his pal said to me, ". . . but a bum thief"' ; ibid., 'After I got out o' the stir, all I had . . . was five dollars an' the bummost suit o' clothes 't I've had since I was a kid'; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd (shabbily clothed); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'His dress, which was very bum'; by 1908, low s. Cf. bum, n., 3.—2. Counterfeit; 1924 (see bum dough); 1925, Edgar Wallace, A King by Night; extant. Ex sense 1.

bum, on the. On tramp; walking the roads, living as a tramp: prob. since ea. 1870. Jack London, The Road, 1907, 'A poor hobo on the bum'; 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler, 'We are all three down and out, all on the bum'; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1925, no longer e.

bum beef. A baseless accusation; a false charge; an unjustifiable or unjustified complaint to the police: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth ('The Language of the Underworld'), 'The prison chaplain had inquired of a burglar the cause of his predicament. The answer is a prison classic. "I was prowling a private, an' I got a rumble and a rank, zowie! I'm ditched for fifteen flat—an' on a bum beef!" A bum beef, in the patois of the profession, means that the gentleman was innocent'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict; 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; March 19, 1938, Flynn's; extant. See beef, n.

bum card seems to have been gambling e. of ea. 1560–1650. Northbrook, Treatise against Dicing, 1577; Rowlands, 1608. 'Revived in C. 20,' Partridge, 1937.

bum-charter. 'A name given to bread steeped in hot water, by the first unfortunate inhabitants of the English Bastille, where this miserable fare was their daily breakfast, each man receiving with his scanty portion of bread, a quart of boil'd water from the cook's coppers!': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1900. Lit., a privilege for one's bottom.

bum-curtain. A flashy woman: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Ex her habit of making great play with her buttocks and of causing her dress to swish as if it were a wind-agitated curtain.

bum dough. Counterfeit money: 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Bad dough'; extant. Cf. bum, adj., 2.

bum factory. A mission house: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'These establishments'—including that in sense 2—'lead to a life of ease . . . , since free food and clothes may be had from the first, and cheap lodging from the second'; hence 'the true tramp and hobo . . . regard them as important factors in creating the "bums"'—the non-migratory loafers—'which both despise' (Irwin).—2. A cheap lodging-house: mostly tramps': 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Prob. ex sense 1.

bum gang. 'In a prison, detail of convicts who perform most disagreeable tasks, such as policing gutters, toilets and sewers of the institution,' Kane, 1927: since ca. 1910: IA, 1931; et al. Ex bum, adj., 1.

bum kale. Counterfeit money: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; extant. See kale and cf. bum dough.

bum kid. A boy tramp; a boy beggar: C. 20. Jack Callahan, 'To Hell and Back'—in Flynn's, Jan. 13, 1934.

bum on, put the, 'to beg something from': rather is it low s. than c. 'The kind of stiff that puts a straight bum on a guy for a dime or so,' Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough, 1936.

bum on the plush; usually pl. The idle rich: C. 20: 1923 (see on the plush); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who cites 'The bum on the rods is a social flea who gets an occasional bite; The bum on the plush is a social leech, bloodsucking day and night'.

bum-paper artist. A maker of counterfeit paper-money: 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Counterfeiter'; extant.

Bum Park. Jefferson Park, Chicago: tramps': since ca. 1910: Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923, 'Jefferson Park . . . is the favourite place for the "bos" to sleep in summer or to enjoy their leisure . . . On the "stem" it is known as "Bum Park"', and the men who visit it daily know no other name for it'; extant. Cf. Crumb Hill for the semantics.

bum rap. A false charge, an unjustified accusation: 1927, C. L. Clark & E. E. Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor: March 2, 1929, Flynn's, H. W. Corley ('Pickpockets'), 'If the case was a bum rap, that is, if they had no actual evidence . . .'; 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; June 25, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; March 9, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington; extant. Cf. bum beef.

bum rock. A diamond that is flawed: Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, 'Criminal Slang', by J. M. Sullivan; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, 'Bum rocks—poor diamonds'; extant. See bum, adj., and rock.

bum-sick. Very unfriendly or actively hostile towards all vagrants: tramps': since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. hostile, q.v.

bum-simple. "' . . . Jeff Carr," said Smiler, "Never heard of him? He's a railroad bull and he's 'bum-simple'—simple-minded on the subject of killing bums. If you run he'll shoot you; if you stand he'll get you six months, and he'd rather have you run", Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926: since ca. 1910. On the analogy of bull-simple.

bum steer, '(a piece of) bad advice' or 'false information'—e.g., in G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924, for both nuances—is low s., not c.

bum(-)trap. 'A sheriff's officer who arrests debtors': 1823, Egan's Grose: 1887, H. Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1889 (B & L). See bum, n., 1, and trap, n., 2.

bumbo, 'brandy, water, and sugar', Grose, 1785 (but recorded first in Smollett, 1748), prob. began as nautical s.; it was certainly never c.—And as 'the private parts of a woman' it is a 'negroe name' (Grose, 1785) and therefore prob. nautical s.—not c.

bummer. 'A sponger': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; 1872, C. Loring Brace, The Dangerous Classes of New York,—but app. the term had > s. by 1870. Ex bum, v., 1.

Bummers' Hall. A lock-up prison on Franklin Street, N.Y.C.: 'In it are confined tramps, vagrants, and persons arrested for drunkenness in the streets,' Darkness and Daylight, 1891; by 1930, merely historical. See the preceding entry and cf. Bum Park.

bumming. The life of a bum: since ca. 1860: after ca. 1880, low s. It occurs in, e.g., Charles Loring Brace, The Dangerous Classes Of New York. See bum, v., 1.

bummy, 'a bailiff': not c. but low s.

bump, n. A killing, a murder; esp. in give (someone) the bump, to kill him, and get the bump, to be killed: 1927, Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster (the former); 1928, C. F. Coe, Swag (the latter); by 1931, if not indeed by 1928, it was police and low s. Ex the v., 1.—2. A prison sentence: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Charles F. Coe, Ransom, 1936. Suggested by jolt, n., 1.

bump, v. To kill: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, A Vocabulary of Criminal Slang; since ca. 1920, British also—Edgar Wallace, passim; 1927, Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster, "'That's a tough neighbourhood . . .," the dick assured me. "I used to walk a beat down there an' there's been many a night when only good sense kept me from bein' bumped"''; 1927, Kane; by 1928 (as in C. F. Coe, Swag), it was, in U.S.A., police s.; 1937, Partridge; by 1945, s. in Britain too.—2. Hence, to die: since ca. 1930. Howard N. Rose, 1934.—3. To terminate: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. Ex sense 1.

bump, get and give the. See bump, n.

bump, slip the. See slip . . .

bump-off, n. A murder: 1924 (implied in bump-off guy); by 1929 (Charles F. Coe, Hooch), it was much used by police officers and by journalists. Ex:—

bump off, v. To murder: 1912, Alfred Henry Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Tail 'em . . . an' . . . go in wit' your cannisters and bump 'em off'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, Randolph Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave'; Feb. 19, 1927, Flynn's, 'He said in a quiet, undramatic voice: "Bump him off"''; 1927, Charles F. Coe, Me—Gangster; by 1928, as much police and gen. low s. as c.—therefore no longer strictly classifiable as c. in the U.S.A.; by 1929, current among English tramps—as, e.g., in Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1933, and in The Daily Mirror, Nov. 18, 1933 (article by David Esdaile); even in Britain, however, it was, by 1935, no longer c. The term was too vivid, too evocative, to remain the prerogative of the underworld. On the analogy of kill off, it evokes the picture of a victim falling, with a bump, to the ground.—2. Hence, to die: Sept. 7, 1929, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'I pass out. You know how it is when a slug hits a bone, Blondy.

She's scared I'm goin' to bump off'; extant.—3. (Ex. 1.) To terminate: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942.

bump-off guy. A professional killer: 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Killer'; March 15, 1930, Flynn's, John Wiltach, 'Spare the Rod and—'; by 1945, low s. See bump-off, n.

bumper. A killer; a murderer: 1928 (implied in cop-bumper); extant. Ex bump, v.—2. Hence (?), in British c., a prostitute's bully, especially one who assists her to rob and intimidate her 'customer': since ca. 1930. John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939, 'Rosy's a bad 'un—she and her black bumper'.

bumper-up. That accomplice of a pickpocket who jostles the prospective victim into position for 'the kill': Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942; Baker, 1945, 'The break man and bumper up are confederates of pickpockets'—but the former may perhaps = 'he who breaks away, or makes off, with the booty'. Ex the modus operandi.

bumping-off. A murder: anglicized ca. 1932; by 1940, s. everywhere. John G. Brandon, 1936; Partridge, 1938. Ex bump off, v.

bums on the plush. See bum on the plush.

Bum's (or Bums') Own, the. The B. & O. Railroad: tramps': 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'Ye're ridin' on the B. & O. . . . The Bum's Own, the boys calls 'er.' The initials determine—arbitrarily enough—the name.

bum's rush, give (a person) the, 'to eject by propelling with hands on shoulders and knees striking the victim's back', is not c. but s. It occurs in, e.g., Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925.

bumy-juice. 'Porter or beer': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1900. Perhaps 'stupefying juice': cf. Scottish bummy, 'a stupid person' (E.D.D.).

bun. Whiskey: 1927, C. L. Clark & E. E. Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; extant. Cf. English s. get a bun on, 'to become intoxicated'. —2. In Matsell's 'a fellow that cannot be shaken off', bun is an error for burr.

bunce. Money: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; 1909, W. H. Davies, Beggars; †—except among beggars. The derivative sense, 'profit, a commission, a bonus' (Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 1851; bunse and bunts), is, orig., Cockney s. Perhaps a perversion of bonus.

bunch. A bunch of keys (?): April 1919, The (American) Bookman, Acklom, 'Fan G, a guy with woods, for his super, prop, poke, and bunch'; extant.

bunch of onions. See onion, references of 1812 and 1848; also in F & H, 1901.

bunco is banco: 1872, The Chicago Tribune (quoted by D.A.E.); 1881, Anon., The Man Traps of New York; by 1890, if not indeed by 1885, it was s. See bunco-steerer for etymology; bunco is a corruption of banco.—2. Hence, deceit, deception: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1920, low s.

bunco, v., 'to swindle' (1875, cited by D.A.E.; Confessions of a Convict, 1893) or 'to rob' (Life in Sing Sing, 1904), may have been c. until ca. 1905, but prob. it always was s.—orig., low s. Ex the n.

bunco man. A confidence-trickster: 1887, G. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police: perhaps c. until ca. 1890, but prob. s. from the beginning.

bunco-steerer. That member of a gang of cardsharpers or swindlers who introduces the prospective victim(s): 1875 (D.A.E.); 1881, Anon., The Man Traps of New York, 'In their ranks we find the gaming-house roper-in, the banco steerer, confidence operator . . .'; 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; by 1898, s.—as also was bunco-steering (the operation). Banco affords the clue: for, in gambling games, banco is 'the sum of money or the checks which the dealer or banker has as a fund, from which to draw his stakes and pay his losses' (Webster); "'Banco'", as it is now called "bunko", is another form of the confidence swindle, and first made its appearance at New Orleans in 1869' (Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective, 1886). The steerer leads the victim to the table.

bunco-steering. See prec. entry.

bundle. 'Plunder from a robbery': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Seldom used save by older thieves or yeggs'; extant. Cf. swag.—2. A package or parcel from home: convicts': 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1931, IA; extant. Prob. because it is usually big and bulky.—3. A woman, a girl: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1910, H. Hapgood, Types from City Streets, 'Wid your bundle (girl) on your arm'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; † by 1931 (IA). . . A bundle of charms.—4. Much money: British: since ca. 1920. Lilliput, Nov. 1943, article by 'Lemuel Gulliver'. Cf.—perhaps ex—sense 1.

bundle, v. To tie up; to truss: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'To Bundle the Cull of the Ken, alias to tye the Man of the House Neck and Heels'; app. † by 1810. To make a bundle of him.—2. To steal from the person of: U.S.A.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Usually by pickpockets, who "bundle" their victims about in order to rob them'; extant. Perhaps ex sense 1 of the n.

bundle bum; bundle stiff. In reference to hoboes, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923, says, 'In the West the hobo usually carries a bundle in which he has a bed, some extra clothes, and a little food. The man who carries such a bundle is usually known as a "bundle stiff" or "bundle bum"'. The modern hobo does not carry a bundle because it hinders him when he wishes to travel fast' (and, elsewhere in the same book, Anderson mentions that both terms are used by Leon Livingston in a work published in 1918): since as early as 1900: tramps'; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (latter form); 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road (ditto); extant, but slightly ob.—2. Hence, a 'vagrant who creeps about the streets, pulling discarded food or clothing from refuse cans, bundling his acquisitions together,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931; ca. 1920.

bundle type. A short-change swindle: since ca. 1920. Ersine, 'Several folded bills are used'.

bundle-tosser. 'Hobo harvest hand who tosses bundles [of hay, etc.] or bouquets,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': C. 20. Also in, e.g., IA, 1931.

bung. 'Bunge, a purse,' Harman, 1566; Harman also has the very rare spelling bonge; 1591, R. Greenc, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 'The purse, the bong',—he also, ibid., spells it boung, and, in A Disputation, bounge; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, has boung; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 'Bung is now used for a pocket, heretofore for a purse', but

R. Head, in The English Rogue, defines it simply as 'A purse'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Randle Holme (boung); 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1785, Grose (boung); 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open—but was not the term † by 1810, if not indeed by the end of C. 18? (Matsell's inclusion of the term in Vocabulum, 1859, certainly doesn't prove its survival in New York so late as that.) The O.E.D. compares Old English and Frisian pung, 'a purse'—a term that, in the Dark Ages, seems to have gone underground, to re-emerge in altered form.—2. A pocket: see quotation in sense 1, at the year 1610; 1698, B.E., 'Bung, c. a Purse, Pocket, or Fob'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1742, Select Trials at the Old-Bailey, IV; app. † by 1790. Perhaps ex the fact that a purse is often carried in one's pocket.—3. A pickpocket, a sharper: this sense belongs to late C. 16—mid 17. Shakespeare, Henry IV, II, iv; Anon., 1658, An Age for Apes (cited by F & H). Prob. ex sense 1.—4. A key-hole: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 2.

bung, v. To give: in Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, May 1835, p. 37, the sense is either 'give, hand over' or 'throw away'; ibid., March 1839 (p. 889), 'bung it' is explained as 'put it back'; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 240, '[The prisoner's] reply was, "He asked me to bung him a token." I . . . soon learnt that it signified "he asked me to give him a piece of bread"'; by 1864 (witness H, 3rd ed.), it seems to have > low s. Perhaps, to put down with a bang, to deposit violently.

bung, go. To be lost; (e.g., of money) to disappear: 1889, B & L; ob. I.e., to go bang, to 'go pop': cf. s. go phut.

bung-diver. A pickpocket specializing in purses: 1797, Potter; † by 1890. See bung n., 1, and diver.

bung-eyed, 'drunk', may orig. (— 1857) have been c. as well as low s.: witness, e.g., Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, 1857, at p. 268. With eyes closing sleepily ('banged up')—and with a reference to the bung of a beer-barrel.

bung juice. Porter; beer: 1880, R. K. Fox, The New York Slang Dictionary; ob. With ref. to the bung of a cask.

bung-nipper appears earliest (1659) as bung-nibber, which occurs at least twice in Anon., The Caterpillars of this Nation Anatomized, where there is a short section 'Of a Bung-nibber or Cut-purse', it being there shown not only that, 'since gold buttons on Cloaks have been in fashion', they cut these off from behind, but that 'they will cut off even the very tassels of silver Hatbands'; 1671, F. Kirkman, The English Rogue, 'A crew of bung-nippers, divers, or pickpockets'; 1698, B.E., 'a Cutpurse, or Pickpocket'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., implies that, by this date, the term was ob. if not indeed †, and adds that he used to work with 'a horn Thumb and a sharp Knife'. It may, I think, be presumed that the term had fallen into complete disuse by 1750 at the latest and that the entries in later lexicographers are merely historical: a supposition supported by the entry in A New Canting Dict., 1725. But the term seems to have survived in the U.S.A. until ca. 1860—witness E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York, 1851. Lit., one who nips (or cuts) purses.

bung your eye! Drink a dram: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.: app. ca. 1790–1830. This phrase is much more likely to have been drinking s. than c. 'Strictly speaking, to drink till one's eye is bunged up or closed' (Grose).

bunger. A blackened eye: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Bunger. A discolored eye'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1931, IA; by 1940, low s. Ex s. bunged up, '(of the eye) swollen until it has closed'.

bunk. Deceit; a deception, esp. if illicit or criminal: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1924, police s.—witness George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Bunko'. Ex bunco, n.; or rather, from bunkum.—2. Synthetic liquor: bootleggers': Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke, ('The Argot of the Racketeers'), 'Say, this ain't McCoy; it's bunk'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1938, Castle, 'Home-made liquor'; extant. Ex sense 1.—3. A hiding place: 1931, Irwin; extant. Perhaps ex 'the seaman's habit of concealing little personal belongings about his bunk, or berth' (Irwin); cf. sense 4 of the v.

bunk, v. 'To decamp. "Bunk it!" i.e., be off' (1864, H, 3rd ed.): 1842, P. Egan, Captain Macheath (song, 'The Bridle-Cull'); by 1880, low s., by 1900, gen. s.—2. To sleep; to sleep together: U.S.A.: not c. but s. (R. L. Dugdale, The Jukes, 1877.) But as the v. operative in bunker, the word is c.—mostly tramps'—as, by implication, in Godfrey Irwin (s.v. bunker), 1931.—3. To defraud: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; slightly ob. Cf. bunk n., 1, and —4. To hide, conceal: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; July 1931, Irwin; Aug. 15, 1931, Flynn's (C. W. Willemse); extant. As if in one's, bunk.

bunk-flop, 'a sleeping-car porter' (Leverage, 1925): prob. low s. rather than c.

bunk up. See bunkup.

bunk-yen. 'The desire of a down-and-out addict who hangs around an opium den in hope of a "lay"', BVB, 1942: drug traffic. Here, bunk = a couch; see yen.

bunker. A sodomite: mostly tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; BVB, 1942. 'It is likely that the sea is responsible . . . since it is a legend with most vagrants that the sailor leads a very depraved sexual life' (Irwin); imm. ex bunk, v., 2.

bunker-shy. Afraid of being forced into pederasty; in fear of a pervert: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Unusually said of a "prushun" or "lamb" not yet completely under the control of his "jocker" or "wolf"': 1942, BVB; extant. See bunker.

bunkie. See bunky.

bunko or bunco, 'a card swindle'. See bunco.

bunk's jimmy, 'a city directory' (Leverage, 1925): rather s. than c.

bunkup, properly bunk-up. A copulation: prostitutes': 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar, 'She said to me, "You're a real good 'un, I'll give you a bunkup for nothing"'; extant. Cf. bunk, v., 2.

bunky. A cell mate: convicts': C. 20. Rose 1934. A special application of the common Am. coll. bunkie or bunky, 'a bunk mate; a comrade' (D.A.E., recording it for 1858).

bunny. 'Alec, dill, gay, sim, lolly, bunny, and mug. A [confidence] trickster's victim. (Mug is English slang),' Baker, The Australian Language, 1945: prob. throughout C. 20; it occurs, e.g., in Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939. Cf. the use of rabbit in sporting s. for 'a beginner; an inferior player'.

bunt, 'an apron' (Grose), is not c. but s.

bunter. A rag-collector; a whore; 'any low vulgar woman' (Johnson): 1707, E. Ward, Proteus Redivivus (whore); 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'They are a couple of Bunters, catch'd in Company, with that Sailor by the Regulators, and put into the Work-House'; 1721, Bailey, 'A Gatherer of Rags in the Streets for the making of Paper'; 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, 'I found this Gosling drinking with a Parcel of Bunters, but in a little time he fell upon 'em and beat 'em'; 1785, Grose, 'A low dirty prostitute, half whore and half beggar'; ca. 1789, The Sandman's Wedding; 1809, Andrewes, 'A lowlife woman'; 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London (a low whore); 1848, Sinks of London; June 14, 1853, Sessions; 1862, H. Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV, 'There is a class of women technically known as "bunters", who take lodgings, and after staying some time run away without paying their rent. These victimise the keepers of low lodging-houses successfully for years'; 1874, H., 'A street-walking female thief'; by 1889 (B & L), low s., although Ware, 1909, classifies it as c. Cf. bunt; the nuance set forth in Mayhew was perhaps influenced by bunker, one who runs away.

bunting time, 'when the grass is high enough to hide the young Men and Maids' (B.E. 1698) is not c., as several lexicographers classify it, but s., as B.E. implies.

buntlings. Petticoats: 1698, B.E., 'Buntlings, c. Petticoats. Hale up the Main-Buntlings, c. take up the Woman's Petticoats'; 1720, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, III (main buntlings); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (again main buntlings); 1785, Grose (buntlings); 1809, G. Andrewes; † by 1860. Ex S.E. bunt, 'the pouch-shaped part of a sail'.

bunts. See bunce.

buor. A woman: tramps' (1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed): a variant of bewer.

buose. See boose, n.

Burdon's Hotel. 'Whitecross-street prison, of which the Governor is or was a Mr. Burdon': 1860, H., 2nd ed.; 1880, the Author of Five Years' Penal Servitude, Life in a Debtors' Prison, p. 84, 'Among the residents at "Burden's Hotel" were men of all sorts and of all positions in life', that spelling appearing also in the chapter heading; app. † by 1910.

burerk. See burick.

burg; early, often berg (J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901), 'a town', is not c. but s. (1845: D.A.E.); it may orig. have been low s. The same applies to burger, 'an inhabitant of a small town' (Leverage, 1925). Not ex Ger. Burg, 'a citadel, a castle'; but ex the burgh form of S.E. borough.

burg, v. 'To hire lodgings in a small town,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex the n.

burglar. An active-role pederast: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex his grasping ways; cf. gonnof, 4.

burglar copper. 'Thieves divide the coppers (policemen) with whom they have contact into square (honest) coppers and burglar coppers,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: since the 1920's.

burgle, v.i. and v.t. To commit sodomy: 1942, BVB. Prob. a back-formation from burglar.

burick. 'A prostitute, or common woman': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1889, B & L; † by 1890 (F & H). 'Said to be Romany,' Ware: perhaps Romany burk (pl. burkawri), 'a breast'; cf., however, Scots bure, 'a loose woman'—of which it may be a derivative.—2. Hence, a lady: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I (burerk); 1859, H. (burerk); 1890, F & H, 'Any woman or "lady", especially one showily dressed'; † by 1940.—3. Hence, a mistress of a household ('the lady'): 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, iii; † by 1940.

buried. Held in confinement by the police: Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke, 'We tried to spring [bail] him, but they got him buried'; 1931, Stiff, 'To be buried deep is [to serve] a long term'; 1931, IA; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. See bury, 3 and cf. dead.

Burlap sisters, the. See one of the . . .

burly. A strong, active, aggressive tramp or yegg: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; M. H. Weseen, 1934; extant. So many old-time yeggs were active, strong, aggressive.

burn, n. See burn, shovel a.

burn, v. To leave (a place) without paying one's debts: see burn the ken.—2. To cheat: U.S.A.: mid-C. 19–20: implied in burner, 2, and burning; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'If you'd burnt Shorty for his end of that coin, you'd have . . . got a beatin' instead of a lawyer'; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'To burn a partner is to "short him for his end", i.e., fail to divide evenly with him'; 1931, IA; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief (as in 1928 quot'n); extant. Perhaps ex sense 1, perhaps imm. ex figurative burn one's fingers.—3. V.t., to electrocute: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Sept. 12, 1931, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; Dec. 4, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; extant. Electro-cution usually produces extensive burns on trunk and limbs.—4. V.i., to die by electrocution, in the electric chair: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; June 21, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; 1932, Lewis E. Lawes; 1933, Eagle; Feb. 16, 1935, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly; Feb. 27, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Panton; extant.—5. 'For a gentleman of the profession to be burned [or burnt] by a lady of the mob now means that the fair charmer has taken "a run-out with the bank roll",' Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'—in The American Mercury, May 1928; extant. A development of sense 2.—6. 'To shoot and kill, especially with a typewriter,' Ersine: since ca. 1922.

burn down. See burn, 7.

burn the (Indian) hay. To smoke marihuana cigarettes: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. See hay, 3.

burn the ken. (On burn the town, s. for 'when the Soldiers leave the place without paying their Quarters', B.E., 1698.) 'Burnt the Ken, when Strollers—vagabonds—leave the Ale-house, without paying their Quarters,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1890 (F & H). To have an effect like that of fire. See ken.

burn up. 'In those States which impose capital punishment by the electric chair a condemned man is "set down and burned up". In other prisons, for a man to be burned-up or burnt means that he is in a boiling rage over some grievance . . . or that he is simply displaying a bit of temperament,' Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld' in The American Mercury, May 1928; extant. Cf. burn, v., 3.—2. See the 2nd sentence of the 1st quot'n in sense 1; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1935, this phrasal v. was s. Cf. s. het up.—3. 'The local Narcotic Feds were "burned up", which is to say, they had been in the territory so long they were spotted to a man, both by the drug vendors and the addicts,' Charles Somerville in Flynn's, Nov. 29, 1930; 1933, Ersine defines it as 'to watch closely'; ob. Their usefulness 'burnt up' or exhausted—4. To defraud (esp. a partner); to 'frame' (a fellow criminal): 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. burn, v., 2.

burned. See burnt.

burner. 'Burner. A clap. The blowen tipped the swell a burner; the girl gave the gentleman a clap': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1887, Baumann; † by 1910. Ex the burning sensation that it causes.—2. 'Burners. Rogues who cheat countrymen with false cards or dice': American: Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859, but the term is recorded, by D.A.E., for 1838; 1883, R. R. Fox, The New York Slang Dictionary; † by 1900. Cf. S.E. burn one's fingers (fig.).

burnese or burneys. A catarrh powder that, containing an illegal proportion of cocaine, is used as snuff: drug-addicts': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (burneys); Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang' (burnese); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, 'Burnes. One form of cocaine'; 1929–31, Kernôt (burnese); 1934, Howard N. Rose ('cocaine'—without modification); extant. It causes a burning sensation.

burning, n. Cheating, esp. as at burner, 2: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; extant. For the origin, see burner, 2, and burn, v., 2. burning shame, 'a lighted candle stuck into the private parts of a woman' (Grose, 1785), may have been c., but more prob. low s.: ca. 1770–1850.

Burns. A Burns detective: bank robbers': C. 20: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1935, Howard N. Rose: extant. 'William J. Burns established an agency somewhat similar to the Pinkertons'; it still operates, especially as to commercial funds, banks, etc.': Godfrey Irwin, letter of April 4, 1938.

burnt, n. A window: since ca. 1920. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938, 'Well, Layes does the burnt—wiv a nammer—an' cops the tray of groins'. Perhaps 'burnished'; certainly ex the idea of brightness, whether of the window itself or of the objects displayed for sale.

burnt, p'ple and adj. See burn, v., 5, and burn up, 1.—3. Be burned or burnt, to be electrocuted: 1929, Givens; by 1940, journalistic s. See burn, v., 3.—4. 'The burnt money—bills that had been defaced or pasted together—was thrown upon the floor,' Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life, 1929; extant.

burnt (or burned) out. Having sclerotic veins—from excessive indulgence in narcotics: drug addicts': since ca. 1910. BVB.

burnt up. (Of a business) almost impossible to swindle with dud cheques: forgers': since the 1920's. Maurer, 1944.

burr head. A Negro: mostly tramps', esp. in the West and North West: since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Rose; et al.

'From the tightly curling hair, which resembles the "burr" or metal shaving turned off a lathe' (Irwin); perhaps rather ex the fact that, thick and coarse, such hair easily gets knotted into shapes like the original burrs—those on plants.

burst. See bust, n. and v.—2. The sense 'a diamond cluster' is classified by Leverage (U.S.A., 1925) as c.—but I query the classification.

burster, a twopenny loaf: in Egan's Grose, 1823, it is classified as c., as indeed it may have been until ca. 1830; more prob., however, it was always s., orig. low. Ex its 'filling' properties.—2. See buster.

bury. Bury a moll, to run away from—to abandon—a mistress: 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, i, 'The girls they had associated with, and then, when tired of them, "buried" them, as they termed the act of deserting them'; 1859, H (the full phrase); by 1889 (B & L), low s. To as good as bury her.—2. To cheat: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (p. 246); ob. Perhaps ex sense 1.—3. To sentence (a person) to prison: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (p. 246), 'Buried. Convicted'; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (of a long term); June 25, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; 1933, Ersine, who notes a nuance—'to give evidence that leads to a criminal's conviction, especially to give evidence about one's partners'; 1933, Eagle; 1938, Castle; extant. I.e., to bury (a person) alive.—4. V.t., to hide, or hide away, a person: "Okay, Joe," I said, "we hop a taxicab until I find a place to bury you. Let's go"; Fred C. Panton, in Flynn's, Feb. 27, 1937; extant.—5. 'To place in solitary confinement or lockup,' Ersine: convicts': since ca. 1920.—6. To kill: mostly convicts'; since ca. 1925. Ersine. Proleptic.

bus. An automobile: 1929, Givens: 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle, 'I screams, an' am making up th' stem at about sixty . . . He makes th' bus'; extant. Ex English s.

bus hook. A pickpocket that operates on buses: 1912, R. A. Fuller, Recollections of a Detective; ob. See hook, n., 2.

bus-napper. See buzz-napper.—bus-napper's kinchin. See buzz-napper's kinchin.

buse. See busing.

bush, n. See 'Brown's cant vocabulary'.

bush, v. See bush it.

Bush, at the. See Staines.

bush, go. See bush it.

bush cove. A gypsy: 1823, Jon Bee; 1824, Pierce Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'JACK COOPER, THE GIPSY, AND HIS TRIBE . . . This hardy bush-cove was at one time thought unconquerable'; † by 1900. Lit., a 'bushes fellow'—one who lives in the country and the open air.

bush it. To run away into 'the bush' (back or unoccupied country); Australian convicts': ca. 1820–70. Louis Becke, Old Convict Days, 1899, 'Worked like a beast of burden . . . I made up my mind to "bush it" again . . . I . . . once more gave the keepers the slip.' In late C. 19–20, the Australian c. phrase has been go bush (Baker, 1942); cf. — bush parole. An escape from prison: mostly convicts': 1929, Givens; 1929–31, Kernôt; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest; 1931, IA; 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. cornfield clemo.

bush telegraph. A person or a set of persons acting as telegraph to a gang of criminals; originally of bushrangers: Australian: 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms, as a serial in The Sydney Mail; 1899, Geo. E. Boxall, Australian Bushrangers; by 1910, s. Cf. grapevine, q.v., and underground railroad.

bushed. 'Bush'd, poor: without money'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'As much bushed about the clay as poor Dick [Curtis]'; 1827, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, III, trial of Thos White; 1842, P. Egan, Captain Macheath; by 1889 (B & L), †. See Staines and cf.:

bushel and peck, 'the neck', is included by C. Bent, Criminal Life, 1891, in his list of c. terms: that it was used by the underworld is admitted; nevertheless, it belongs to general rhyming s.

busher. An amateur or new-come tramp, either trying to gain experience or travelling on sufferance with more experienced tramps: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex sporting s., bush leaguer, a member of an unimportant team—as it were, one from 'the bush' or rural districts (Irwin).

bushes. 'A country marshal' (of the police), Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex s. bushes, 'a beard': he is apt to be bearded.

bushing. 'This [opium] pill was placed over the "bushing" or small opening in the bowl and the yen hok withdrawn,' Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941: drug addicts': C. 20.

bushranger. A petty swindler: Australian; since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. Ex the 'bush-bandit' sense of the S.E. term.

bushwa. A right-minded citizen; a countryman, a farmer; 'usually one of the middle class who is stern and righteous': since ca. 1920. Ersine. Ex Fr. bourgeois.

Bushy Park. 'A man who is poor is said to be at Bushy park, or in the park': 1812, J. H. Vaux,—copied in Egan's Grose, 1823; 1889, B & L; † by 1890 (F & H). Perhaps because he sleeps there.

Bushy Park cove. A poor man: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'The Corinthians in the barouches were laughing at the Bushy Park coves, and for once priding themselves on the smiles and comfort the blunt can at all times procure'; † by 1890. Ex preceding term.

business. Any illicit enterprise in particular; theft and/or swindling in general: 1887, passim in Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1941, Maurer (a 'paperhanger's' con talk and outfit). Cf. work, n.; ironically euphemistic.—2. See esp. biz, the.

busing. 'Boozing'; i.e., drunkenness or the drinking of (strong liquor: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue (see quot'n at mill, v., 6)). This is a rare form.

busk. 'To sell obscene songs and books at the bars and in the tap-rooms of public houses': 1859, H,—but obviously the term must have preceded busking, 1 (recorded in 1851); 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1910. Prob. ex S.E. busk, 'to go about, seeking'—perhaps influenced by nautical busk, 'to cruise as a pirate'.—2. Hence (?), to sing or perform in a public-house: 1859 (see busker, 2); 1874, H; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L, who classify it as tramps'; 1890, F & H; 1914, E. Pugh, The Cockney at Home,—but in C. 20, no longer c.—3. As a synonym of griddle, it is not genuine c.; and it springs from nothing but carelessness or ignorance.

busker. One who, for a living (or for an addition to the usual livelihood), carries on busking, 1 (q.v.): either c. or low London s. In H, 3rd ed., 1864, it is by implication classified as c. The preponderance of the evidence is in favour of the term's being c. See busk, v.—2. 'A man who sings or performs in a public house': Scotch >, by 1870, gen c.: 1859, H; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; by 1889 (B & L), also low or street s.; by 1909 (Ware), no longer to be classified as c. Ex busk, 2.

busker's retreat. A common lodging-house: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 'In "flash" language, the resorts are described, not as lodging-houses, but "padding kens", "dossing cribs", "snoozing jugs", "cadgers' covers", "tourist cabins", and "buskers' retreats"'; † by 1920. See busker.

busking, the selling of obscene or politically forbidden papers, pamphlets, etc., 'at the bars and in the tap-rooms of taverns' (Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 1851), is either c. or low London s. of mid-C. 19. In H, 3rd ed., 1864, it is classified as c. See busk, 1.—2. Hence, selling any articles there: 1859, H; 1889, B & L; † by 1920.—3. the vbl n. corresponding to busker, 2: since the 1850's: by 1909 (Ware), no longer c. Ex busk, v., 2.

busking George using soap. A comic singer singing to a public-house audience: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 322); ob. See busk, v., 2, and cf. busker, 2.

busnapper. See buzz-napper.

busnapper's kenchin. See buzz-napper's kinchin.

buss, n. See buzz, n. (Implied in buss-trap: Poulter, Discoveries, 1753).

buss, v. To steal: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Burk will show you where you may buss a couple of Prads, and fence them at Abingdon Gaff; that is, Burk will show you a Couple of Horses that you may steal, and sell them at Abingdon Fair'; app. † by 1780. By ironical fancy: cf. coll. kiss (something) good-bye.

buss-napper, etc. See buzz-napper, etc.

buss-trap. A thief-catcher: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (in the glossary); 1799, The Monthly Magazine (Jan.), in form bustrap; † by 1890. I.e., buss = buzz, a thief; and trap, an officer of the law.

bust, n.; burst. 'Burst, n. Burglary': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1859, current in U.S.A. (Matsell; bust); April 1863, Sessions; 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary, 'The most difficult and dangerous country in which to do a "burst" (burglary)'; 1887, J. W. Horsley (bust); 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1895, Arthur Griffiths; 1909, Ware; 1910, C. E. B. Russell, Young Gaol-Birds; 1925, Rev. Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons; Oct. 1928, Word-Lore; 1931, Brown; 1933, George Dilnot, The Real Detective; 1935, The Garda Review; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; Nov. 26, 1938, Flynn's (U.S.A.), Convict 12627; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress; 1943, Black, 'Bust, do a: to break and enter premises'; 1944, Cecil Bishop, Crime and the Underworld; extant. I.e., a bursting into a building.—2. In U.S.A., 'the conclusion of an entertainment' (burst): 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary; † by 1900. Ex the burst of applause.—3. A small crowbar used by burglars, a 'jemmy':

U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. With this, he bursts his way in: cf. sense 1.—4. A blow, a punch, esp. in the face: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; by 1930, low s. Cf. bust, v., 4.—5. 'An emotional outburst in a prisoner as the result of cruel or unfair treatment, which may amount to actual mania,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: convicts': since ca. 1920.—6. A raid on a drug addicts' parlour or club: U.S. drug addicts': March 12, 1938, The New Yorker, Meyer Berger, 'Tea for a Viper'; extant. Ex gen. Harlem s. for a police raid.

bust, v. 'Bust, or Burst, to tell tales, to Split, to inform. Busting, informing against accomplices when in custody': 1859, H; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; ob. Cf. spill one's guts.—2. 'To enter forcibly', to burgle: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, but possibly earlier in England; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1895, Eric Gibb, Stirring Incidents of the Convict System in Australasia; March 22, 1930, Flynn's, Robert Carse; 1932, Nelson Baylis (for New Zealand; by private letter); 1933, Victor Nelson, Prison Days and Nights, 'Bust in—break in'; 1938, F. A. Stanley, A Happy Fortnight, "'Ever tried busting a peter?" (cracking a safe)'; 1943, David Hume, Get Out the Cuffs; extant.—3. Hence, as in 'Busting the tag on a rattler. Breaking the seal on a freight car', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904 (p. 258): U.S.A.: extant.—4. To fight with; to assail or assault: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, p. 258, 'Busting the bulls at the big show. Fighting with the police at the circus'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Assault'; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; by 1930 (if not earlier), low s.—5. 'To break jail,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant.

bust, do a. To commit a burglary: since the 1850's. In, e.g., Charles E. Leach, 1933. See bust, n., 1.

bust-out. An escape from jail: March 22, 1930, Flynn's, Robert Carse; by 1932, it was police s. Cf. bust, v., 5.

bust-out joint. 'I know him when he is nothing but a steer for a bust-out joint in West Forty-third, a bust-out joint being a joint where they will cheat your eyeballs out at cards, and dice, and similar devices,' Damon Runyon, Take It Easy, 1938: since the 1920's.

bust the main line. 'To take narcotics intravenously,' BVB: since ca. 1930. See main line, n.

busted out. See just busted out.

buster or burster. 'Burster. A burglar': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; by 1870, current in England; 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1903, Charles Booth, Life and Labour of the People in London, V, 138; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, p. 262 (buster); in C. 20, Australian (burster)—Baker, 1942; by 1930, ob. in Britain, and by 1940, † in U.S.A.—2. Hence (?), a burglar's tool: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, 'A burglar's tool, a jimmy, a crooked rod of steel used for prying open windows'; 1925, Leverage; 1931, IA; extant.—3. A pugilist; a person given to fighting with his fists; a man prone to assaulting others: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (first two nuances); 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (the third); 1931, IA; by 1940, low s. Perhaps cf. basher; certainly cf. bust, v., 4—which may constitute its origin.

busting, n. Informing to the police against one's confederates when one has been apprehended or is actually in prison: 1859 (see bust, v.); 1890, F & H; ob. Ex bust, v., 1.—2. 'Busting means burglary or housebreaking,' Sessions, May 29, 1879; 1934, Ex-Sgt B. Leeson, Lost London; extant. Ex bust, v., 2.

bustle. Money: 1763 (April), trial of Paul Lewis, in Select Trials, from 1741 to 1764, IV, pub. in 1764, 'He had got the Bustle (meaning the Cash) in his Pocket'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee, 'If a man is worth a thousand pounds, 'tis blunt; if as much money be collected in various sums, 'tis bustle. Should a fellow steal a shopkeeper's till, 'tis all bustle; whilst the same sum in one note would be bustle'; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'He himself stood bene, nearly half the bustle'; 1829, Sessions; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Bustle, ready money'; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1889 (B & L), it was low s.; † by 1900. Perhaps because it is useful in a bustle or hurry.—2. See bustle, give it to . . . upon the.—2. A synonym of ringing the changes (see ring the changes): 1895, Jerome Caminada, Detective Life (p. 243); ob. Cf. the next two entries.

bustle, give it to (e.g., a man) upon the. 'To obtain any point, as borrowing money, etc., by some sudden story or pretence, and affecting great haste, so that he is taken by surprise, and becomes duped before he has time to consider of the matter': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1890. S.E. bustle; cf. give it to.

bustle, on the. 'Cadging or obtaining petty objects by sly practice,' Baker, 1942: Australian: late C. 19–20. Ex prec. entry.

bustler. See village bustler.

bustrap. See buss-trap.

busy. A detective: 1923, Sidney Felstead, The Underworld of London; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 'Why in hell do you think a broker should be a pal of a "busy"'. And take that look off your face—a "busy" is a detective'; 1925, Edgar Wallace, A King by Night; 1927, Edgar Wallace, The Squeaker; 1931, Brown; 1932, Arthur R. L. Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House; 1933, Charles E. Leach; 1934, Axel Brace, School for Scoundrels; 1934, Ex-Sgt B. Leeson, Lost London, where he implies its use ca. 1908; 1935, The Garda Review; 1936, John G. Brandon, The 'Snatch' Game; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh,—by which time it had > low s., esp. in London. He is busier than he appears to be.

busy drag. See bizzie drag.

busy fellow. 'We call the detective the "busy fellow" to distinguish him from the "flattie" who is the regular cop' (ordinary policeman), Edgar Wallace, The Green Rust, 1919; 1927, Edgar Wallace, The Mixer, 'Busy-fellow or split—detective'; 1929, Edgar Wallace, The Prison-Breakers; 1934, Axel Brace, Public Enemies; by 1936, virtually superseded by the simple form, busy. An elaboration of busy.

busy(-)sack. A carpet bag: 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxix; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by 1889 (B & L), low s. Because it is often occupied.

butch. 'A poor workman or thief,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Short for butcher.

butch kick, in G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924, and in The Writer's Monthly, Nov. 1927, is in error for britch kick.

butcher, 'the king in playing cards': not c. but s.—2. A doctor, esp. the butcher, a nickname for the prison doctor: convicts': 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1903, No. 7, Twenty-five Years in Seventeen Prisons, 'The heartlessness of "the butcher" (the usual prison name for the medical officer)'; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (U.S.A.), 'A surgeon'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Many prison doctors are—or used to be—'political appointees, and as such, none too able' (Irwin).—3. Captain of the prison guard: convicts' (U.S.A.): 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex his, at one time, too frequent orders to fire upon escaping or restive prisoners.—4. A barber: mostly convicts' (U.S.A.): 1933, Ersine; extant.

butcher, v. To execute (a guilty person): 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Depreciative.—2. To murder, to gang-kill: 1931, Irwin; extant. Cf. sense 1.

butcher-cart gang. See:—

butcher-cart job, the. 'This,' says Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences, 1879, 'is effected in the following manner: At a time of the year when street doors of jeweler shops are usually closed throughout the day as well as the evening, a common grocer's, or delivery wagon of any sort, but always selected for its easy-running qualities, and to which is always attached a fast horse, will be driven up to the vicinity of some jewelry-store, which has already been fixed upon, and which always has a fine display in the window. This wagon will invariably contain one, and sometimes two persons, aside from the driver. In the meantime, a confederate of this "butcher-cart gang" slips up to the door of the shop in question, and deftly inserts a wooden peg or wedge beneath the door, between that and the sill, driving it home with his heel or in any other manner possible. The moment this is done another of the gang at one stroke smashes in the entire window, and the two then grab whatever they can lay their hands upon, always of course selecting that which is the most valuable, and rush to the covered wagon in waiting, when, with their booty, they are driven rapidly away, nine times out of ten getting wholly beyond pursuit before the astonished and shut-in shopmen are able to get their own door open.' App. † by 1910.

butt. The buttocks: mostly tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; by 1940, low s.—2. 'A fraction of a month,' Howard N. Rose, 1934: convicts': extant. Short for butt-end.

butt in, 'to introduce your company or conversation where it is not wanted' (No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904), is no more American c. than it is English c.

butt-peddler. A prostitute: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. ass-peddler.—2. A pimp, a procurer: C. 20. Ibid.

butteker. See buttiken, reference of 1859.

butter. 'To double or treble the Bet or Wager to recover all Losses,' B.E., 1698: 'Used among Sharpers at a Gaming Table, or Bowling Green,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.—by which time it seems to have > s. Ex adding butter to bread.—2. 'To butter, signifies also, to cheat or defraud in a smooth or plausible Manner; as, 'He'll not be so easily butter'd'; He's aware of your Design; You cannot beguile or cheat him; He's upon his Guard, etc.,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1800 or even earlier. Cf. S.E. butter, to flatter (a person).—3. To bribe: U.S.A.: Dec. 7, 1929, Flynn's, Robert H. Rohde, 'Madigan's Mob', 'Just last night I buttered the bulls. It broke me, on the square. I ain't only got a few dollars on me'; extant. Cf. S.E. 'to grease someone's palm'.

butter-and-egg guy (or man). A rich business man: 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; extant.

butter-ken. See buttiken, reference of 1859.

buttered bun, 'lying with a Woman that has been just Layn with by another Man,' B.E., 1698; 'One lying with a woman that has just lain with another man is said to have a buttered bun,' Grose; is rather low s. than c. Possibly, however, the sense, 'a Man pretty much in Liquor' (A New Canting Dict., 1725), is c. rather than s. of the very approximate period, 1710–50.

butterfly. A cheque drawn against insufficient, or even non-existent, funds: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago, 'Chèque sans provision'; extant. The issuer sends it fluttering like a butterfly.

butterfly man. A passer of worthless cheques: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex the preceding.

buttermilk. A tramp or a migratory worker from the Pittsburgh (Pa.) district: tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. The neighbourhood of Pittsburgh is not specially associated with milk: so why? Unless in ironic reference to Pittsburgh's famed heavy industries.

buttiken. A shop: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1859, used in New York (Matsell, who misprints it butterker and butter-ken); † in England by 1890 (F & H). Here, ken = a place, a building; the butti- part of the word derives either ex Fr. boutique or, less prob., ex Sp. bodega.

buttock. A whore; occ., a mistress: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (see quot'n at blowen); 1698, B.E.; 1714, Alexander Smith, The History of the Highwaymen, where it appears in conjunction with twang (see also buttock and twang and cf. buttock and file); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose ('a whore'); by 1830, † as 'mistress', and by 1889 (B & L), low s. as 'whore'. Perhaps because she earns her living by lying on her buttocks; or because she attracts the callow and the simple by wagging them.

buttock and file. 'The same with [buttock and twang]; only this is the better-natur'd Beast of the Two, and performs her Stage before she takes her Wages, which may be some Satisfaction to the Ass she carries,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; 1776, John Vilette, The Annals of Newgate, 'A prostitute that picks pockets' (a footnote), copied from Select Trials, 1734; 1785, Grose, 'A common whore and a pickpocket'; 1809, Andrewes, who loosely defines it as 'a pickpocket'—an error repeated in Sinks of London, 1848; by 1830, prob. it was s. See buttock and file, n., 1.—2. Hence (? erroneously), a shoplifter: 1743, Fielding, Jonathan Wild; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, where it is wrongly given as bullock and file.

buttock and twang. 'Buttock and Twang, or a downright Buttock and sham File, c. a Common Whore but no Pickpocket,' B.E., 1698; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 'Which is walking to be pick'd up, and frightening him that does it with her pretended Husband, after she has pick'd his Pocket, so that the Fool runs gladly away without his Watch or Money';—which causes us to think that the former sense fits only the latter term, the latter sense fitting buttock and twang, a supposition that is virtually confirmed by this passage from Alexander Smith's Highwaymen, 1714, 'She [went] upon the Buttock and Twang by Night; which is picking up a Cull, Cully, or Spark, and pretending not to expose her face in a Publick House, she takes him into some dark Alley, so whilst the decoy'd Fool is groping her with his Breeches down, she picks his Fob or Pocket, of his Watch or Money, and giving a sort of Hem as a signal she hath succeeded in her Design, then the Fellow with whom she keeps Company, blundering up in the dark, he knocks down the Gallant, and carries off the Prize'; 1718, N.B., A Compleat Collection of Remarkable Tryals, II; 1725, A New Canting Dict., repeating B.E.'s entry; 1785, Grose (with down for downright); † by 1860. Cf. buttock and buttock and file.

buttock ball. An underworld dance at which the dancers are naked: 1687, Tom Brown; 1698, E. Ward, The London Spy, 'We were now tumbled into company compos'd of as many sorts of Rakes as you may see Whores at a Buttock-ball'; app. † by 1790. Cf. ballum rancum and buff-ball.—2. Hence, copulation: 1785, Grose; † by 1889 (B & L). Cf. buttock and low-s. balls, 'testicles'.

buttock-banqueting, 'harlotry'; late C. 16-mid-17; rather a literarism than an instance of c. buttock broker. 'A Bawd, also a Match-maker,' B.E., 1698; 1785, Grose; † by 1890 (F & H). Ex buttock.

buttocking shop. A brothel: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; † by 1900. Possibly c., at first, but prob. s. always. The C. 19 variant, buttocking ken, is, however, c.: cf. buttock ball, 2.

button. 'A bad shilling, among coiners'; i.e., it is a counterfeiters' term: 1785, Grose; 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1889, B & L; ob. Ex its shape—and appearance.—2. As 'sales decoy' it is low s., but as 'a thimble-rigger's accomplice acting as a decoy' it is perhaps c.: C. 19.—3. See wooden surtout.—4. A 'stool pigeon': U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; ob.—5. A small rubber suction-cap to make a card stick to the underside of a table: Dec. 4, 1926, Flynn's, "It's what," he said, "we gamblers call a 'button'"; Dec. 11, 1926, Flynn's, 'The "button" or "bug", as it is also sometimes called'; extant.—6. The head: U.S.A.: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; extant. Humorous.—7. A small opium-pellet, cooked over a small lamp and then smoked in the pipe: U.S. drug addicts': 1931, IA; extant. Vague resemblance.—8. A policeman: South America (C. 20) and, since ca. 1918, U.S.A.: 1921, Harry Franck, Working North from Patagonia; 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex the shiny buttons on the jacket of his uniform.

button, v.i. and v.t. To entice (another) to gamble: 1839, implied in buttoner, q.v.; 1857 (id.); by 1859, current in U.S.A. (Matsell: 'To entice a simpleton to play'); 1890 F & H; † by 1930.

button, get off the. To obtain sexual satisfaction: mostly convicts': 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; extant. Suggested by American low s. blow the wad (synonymous): Godfrey Irwin.

button, monkey-jacket; plated waistcoat-button. See monkey-jacket button.

buttoner. 'One who entices another to play,'

i.e., to gamble: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; 1862, The Cornhill Magazine; 1869, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H, 'A card-sharper's decoy'; † by 1930. Ex button, v.

buttons. See wooden surtout.—2. A uniformed police officer: racketeers': Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke, 'There's the buttons'; extant. Cf. button, n., 8.

buvare. Liquor: not c. but parlyaree.

buxom. A sixpence: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'A griff Metol, or Buxom; a Sixpence'; † by 1830. Perhaps by comparison with a 'flag' or groat; it 'looks good' to a hungry man.

buy a brush. See brush, buy a.

buy new shows. To depart, esp. to a distant place; to 'get out while the going's good': 1930, Flynn's; Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'He was going to . . . jump the phony bail, buy new shoes—as the underworld put it—and beat it out of New York on the lam'; 1934, Rose (to jump one's bail bond); extant. Euphemistic: to buy shoes against a prospective journey during which one will 'be on the run' and therefore 'hard on shoe-leather'.

buy oneself out. To receive one's discharge from prison: Australian: since ca. 1918. In, e.g., The (Melbourne) Age, April 29, 1932. Ironic: ex buying oneself out of the (pre-1914) Army.

buyer. A receiver of stolen goods, a fence: 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; 1931, Arthur R. L. Gardner, The Art of Crime; 1933, Charles E. Leach; 1936, George Ingram, The Muffled Man, 'I took the jewelry to a "buyer", who gave me fifty "nicker" for it'; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too; 1938, F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; 1939, George Ingram, Welded Lives; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime; extant. By humorous euphemism.

buz. See buzz, n. and v.

buz-bloke, -cove, -faker, -gloak, -man, -napper, -napper's kinchin; and as buzbloak, etc. See buzz-bloke, -faker, etc.

buzer. See second buzzer.

buzfaker. See buzz-faker.

buzman. See buzz-man.

buznapper, etc. See buzz-napper, etc.

buzz, n. A thief, esp. a pickpocket: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, where, in the glossary, it is implied in buss-trap, a thief-catcher; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A person who is clever at (picking pockets), is said to be a good buz'; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Buz, a pickpocket'; app. by 1890.—2. (Always the buzz.) Pickpocketry: 1789, Geo. Parker, Life's Painter (where it is spelt buz); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1910. Ex sense 1.—3. 'An automatic burglar alarm,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.; extant. Echoic.—4. Whispering, quiet interrogation; confidential information: U.S. racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'Lay off on the buzz'; 1933, Ersine; May 9, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack, 'I nailed the cheater . . . and put the buzz on him'; extant.

buzz, v. 'To buz a person is to pick his pocket': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Progress'; 'With rolling kiddies, Dick would dive and buz'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime, 'Two "stall" while the other "buzzes"';

1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1851, Sessions; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1865, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; 1904, H. Hapgood (U.S.A.); 1925, Leverage; 1927, Kane; 1938, F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; since ca. 1930, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946). This is perhaps a perverted shortening of hustle (see hustling), despite the fact that buzz is recorded the earlier; but it may be 'to pick a pick-pocket while buzzing (chatting) to the victim'; or, most prob., it comes direct ex the n.—2. Hence, v.i., (of a pickpocket) to search for victims: American: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1890, F & H; 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1925, Leverage (by implication); extant.—3. See buzz the main drag. Also independently: to beg: U.S.A.: as, e.g., in Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—4. To interrogate (a person): U.S.A.: Oct. 29, 1927, Flynn's, Charles Somerville, 'Bad Bill Wright', 'There they'—detectives—'took Nell into a big room and "buzzed" her, in terms of the argot of the underworld'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1934, it was police s. As for sense 3, the fundamental idea is that of the buzz indicative of conversation.—5. To whisper (to), to talk quietly; to give confidential information (to): U.S.A.: 1930, Burke; 1933, Ersine, 'To talk to a person, usually with the intention of feeling him out'; 1934, Rose (latter nuance); March 9, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington'; 1944, W. R. Burnett, Nobody Lives Forever, 'Last thing . . . he wants is to be buzzed by a broken-down con outfit'; extant.—6. To telephone (usually v.t.): 1933, Ersine; by 1940, s.

buzz, the. See buzz, n., 2.

buzz-bloke. 'Buz-Bloak, a pickpocket, who principally confines his attention to purses and loose cash': 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by ca. 1920. Ex buzz-gloak.

buzz-cove. A pickpocket: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; 1864, H, 3rd ed., where it is implied to be either † or ob.; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1900. See buzz, n., 1, and cove.

buzz-faker. A pickpocket: ca. 1850–1920 (by inference based on buzz-faking): 1909, Ware, 'A buz-faker being an individual, generally a woman, or rather one that was a woman, who makes the victim drunk before the robbery is effective'. Ware may be right in deriving buz(z) from booze.

buzz-faking. Theft by pickpocketry: 1859, H; 1890, F & H; 1909, Ware, who spells it buz-faking; † by ca. 1920. For origin, see preceding entry.

buzz-gloak. A pickpocket: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'Until at last there was none so knowing, [No such sneaksman or buzgloak going]; 1841, Tait's Magazine, April, 'The prince of buzgloaks I, the knowing file!'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; † by 1850 or so, for H, 1859, remarks that it is 'an ancient cant word'. Ex buzz, n., 2 (or buzz, v.) + gloak, a fellow.

buzz-knacker. See buzz-napper, 1, reference of 1864.

buzz-man. 'Buzman. A pickpocket': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London, 'If [the "swells"] are caught any ways inclined to roosting from being swipy, the young buzmen will make them pay dearly for the few winks they may enjoy'; 1828, George Smeeton, Doings in London (as buzzmen); 1848, Sinks of London; 1849, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, V, ch. lxxvi; 1856, G. L. Chesterton (buzman); 1857, Snowden (buzzman); 1874, H; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by ca. 1920. See buzz, n. and v.—2. Erroneously, a spy, an informer: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. cxxxii; an error copied by H, 3rd ed., 1864.

buzz-napper. A pickpocket: 1781, implied in academy buzz-napper, q.v.; 1781, ibid. (G. Parker), 'Follow the profession of a Buz-napper'; 1859, H, 'A young pickpocket'; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'Also buz-knacker'; 1889, B & L, 'A young pickpocket'; 1890, F & H, who imply that it is †. Lit., a fileher employing 'the buzz' (see buzz, n., 2).—2. A constable: 1788, implied in buzz-napper's kinchin; 1796, Grose, 3rd ed.; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); by 1889 (B & L), † in Britain, and by 1900 in U.S.A. But in late C.19–20, the term has been current in Australia; Baker, 1942, records it in the form busnapper. Lit., a taker (arrestor) of a 'buzz' (pickpocket).

buzz-nappers' academy. A school at which young lads are taught to become expert pickpockets: 1781, implied in academy buzz-napper, q.v.; 1859, H, 'Figures are dressed up, and experienced tutors stand in various difficult attitudes for the boys to practice upon. When clever enough they are sent on the streets'; 1863, The Story of a Lancashire Thief; by 1889 (B & L), it was ob.; by 1900, †. A very good account is that given by Dickens in Oliver Twist. Cf. buzz-napper, 1, and academy buzz-napper.

buzz-napper's kinchin. A watchman (the old form of night policeman): 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (busnapper's kinchin); by 1889 (B & L), at latest, it was †. See buzz-napper, 2; lit., a constable's child.

buzz the main drag (or main stem). 'Buzz, or mooch, or work the main drag or stem—to beg or bum along the main street,' P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914; 1927, Kane, 'Buzz . . . to beg'; extant. This links with the American-s. sense 'to question, to interview'—as in Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 1913, 'He'—a detective—"buzzed" tipsters and floaters and mouthpieces': cf. the buzzing of a fly, the fussing of a 'rubber-neck'.

buzz-trap. See buss-trap.

buzzard. 'A foolish soft Fellow, easily drawn in and Cullied or Tricked,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose—by whose time the term had > s. Ex † S.E. (blind) buzzard, 'a worthless, stupid, or ignorant person' (O.E.D.).—2. The sense 'a silver dollar' (Clapin, 1903) is Am. s., not c.—3. A timid or amateurish or low-life pickpocket that preys upon women: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'An amateur thief, or one preying upon women'; extant. A buzzard is a crude bird.—4. A chief of police: U.S.A.: 1918 (Dec.), The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'; but Godfrey Irwin (letter of Aug. 9, 1937) queries this definition. In Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1926 (p. 639), the sense appears to be 'magistrate'; extant, though slightly ob.—5. See jungle buzzard. Sometimes it is used for that term, as, e.g., in Jim Tully's grim story, 'Jungle Justice'—in The American Mercury, April 1928; Stiff, 1931; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

buzzer. In English cant, it is a pickpocket: since ca. 1815. Pierce Egan, Boxiana, III, 1821, in 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Education', has 'The knowing bench had tipp'd her buzzer queer,' imprisoned her pickpocket (of a husband); 1854, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25, "Buzzers", or those who abstract handkerchiefs and other articles from gentlemen's pockets. i. "Stook-buzzers", those who steal handkerchiefs. ii. "Tail-buzzers", those who dive into coat-pockets for sneezers (snuff-boxes), skins and dummies (purses and pocket-books)'; 1857, C. Reade, Autobiography of a Thief; 1859, H; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1870, The Broadway, Nov.; 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1890, F & H; 1903, G. R. Sims, Living London ('Criminal London', by Ernest A. Carr, who confines it to the sense 'watch-stealer'); 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief (U.S.A.); slightly ob. In The Evening News of Dec. 9, 1936, there appeared the following informative article by one who knows his subject: 'BUZZERS ARE BUSY'—by Graveney Lodge.

'Pocket-picking is on the increase. From 1900 to 1930 the number of cases dropped from 4,102 to 1,774 a year. After 1930 the figures began to increase and they are now nearing the 3,000 mark. People who congregate in crowds need to beware of the "dip".'

'The art of the "dip" or "cannon", as these light-fingered gentry are known in the underworld, probably reached its climax in the person of "Diamond Dick" Fisher, who flourished in the days when jewelled tie-pins were the vogue. "Diamond Dick" used to work crowded trains, trams and buses. Swaying with the motion of the vehicle, it is said that he could bite the setting out of a tie-pin without disturbing the composure of his victim. "Diamond Dick" was recognised as a "master cannon".'

'Ever since the days of Dickens, and before, the trade of pocket-picking has had its own special language. Modern pickpockets are either "tools" or "stalls".'

'The tool is the person who performs the actual theft while the stall distracts the victim's attention. Really clever tools work alone, disdaining the assistance of a stall.'

'Prince of the trade is the "pants-pocket" worker; his the most precarious task, requiring extraordinary lightness of touch and fraught with imminent danger of detection. Buzzers are male pickpockets who specialise in opening women's handbags; moll buzzers are the females of the species. Both carry on their calling in large shops and busy shopping centres. Less expert are the patch- and fob-workers, both of whom specialise on outside pockets only.'

'Lowest of all is the lush-roller, whose work requires no skill at all. His intended victim must be "lush"—a term which includes the drunk, the crippled and the half-witted.'

'With the exception of the lush-roller, the pick-pocket always prefers to work in a crowd. Subways, termini, theatre queues, hospitals at visiting times, football matches, and prize-fights are favourite stamping-grounds.'

See buzz, v. In the U.S.A., it seems to have been used not before ca. 1850. In Galaxy for 1867, we find car-buzzer; Bartlett, Americanisms, 4th ed., 1877, has the simple term, and so has Clapin, Americanisms, 1903.—2. An official's, esp. a police officer's, badge or star: U.S.A.: C. 20. Jackson & Hellyer, 1914; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, M. H. Weseen; extant. It acts as a buzzer or as a bell, to warn malefactors of the Law's inconvenient interest or presence; perhaps, however, it gives the wearer the right to 'buzz' or interrogate.—3. 'One who seeks information,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Cf. buzz, v., 2.

buzzing, n. Pickpocketry: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see quot'n at knuckle, v.); 1828, Geo. Smeeton, Doings in London; 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police, from the statement of a youthful thief, 'Pocket-picking is called "buzzing" and "tooling"; the former is "men's" [i.e., stealing from men's pockets], the latter is "women's"'. Men's are done with wires made on purpose . . . They are like the wire for getting corks out of a bottle, with three hooks to it [i.e., to the wire]: all the hooks incline inward. There is a spring on the top, and when you think you have got it [i.e., the booty] you touch it [i.e., the spring], and it closes like a crab's claw The female pocket is picked by hand'; 1853, Mary Carpenter, Juvenile Delinquents; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 'Their skin and sneezer (purse and snuff-box) buzzing expeditions'; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1874, H; 1876, C. Hindley, Cheap Jack; 1890, F & H; ob. Ex buz, v., 1.—2. 'Jungle crimes include . . . "buzzing", or making the jungle a permanent hangout for jungle "buzzards" who subsist on the leavings of meals,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923: American tramps': since ca. 1915.

buzzing, adj. Engaged in or consisting of pickpocketry: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Blink-ey'd buzzing Sam'; 1828, G. Smeeton, Doings in London; 1890, F & H; ob. Ex buzz, v., 1.

buzzing academy. An elaboration of academy, 2: 1890, F & H; ob. Ex buzz, v., 1.

buzzing the tenner. 'A trick was practised some years ago, and successfully for a time, called "buzzing the tenner". A person went into a shop and made a small purchase, and whilst doing so, stuck under the edge of the counter a piece of softened shoemaker's wax. Immediately afterwards a confederate entered and asked for change for a ten-pound Bank of England note. The gold was placed on the counter, and the thief quickly palmed a sovereign and instantly stuck it to the wax placed by his companion. If a wrangle took place the man would say, "I have not a farthing about me. I'll wait until you send for a policeman and be searched." He always came away with the full amount of change, or the bank-note was given back to him. His companion would go immediately afterwards and abstract the sovereign from the wax': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; by 1900, ob.; by 1920, †. Ex buzz, v.

buzzman. See buzz-man.

by the peck. The neck: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B., 1944. Rhyming.

byce is variant of bice. Partridge, 1938.

byng. See bing. (Harman, 1566, has bynge.)

byt(e). See bite. (Greene, 1592, 'All the byte in his Bounge'.)

C

C or c. Cocaine: 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; 1922, Dialect Notes, W. H. Wells, 'Words Used in the Drug Traffic'; 1929, Givens; June 21, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man; 1934, Ferd. Tuohy, Inside Dope, wherein the author implies that, by this date, the term was police and journalistic s.—2. One hundred dollars: in C. 19 (witness D.A.E.), it was, ca. 1840–60, s.; but in C. 20—after 1920, anyway—it was c.; Aug. 2, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; Jan. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, E. D. Sullivan; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1931, Damon Runyon, Dolls and Guys; 1934, Convict; 1935, David Lamson; 1936, Ben Reitman; extant. The Roman C = 100; or, rather, imm. for century in the sense '100 dollars'.

c. Abbreviation of cop, v., 2.—2. Generally cee, q.v.

c. and a. (or C and A) pocket. In tramps' lingo, the C. & A. (in, e.g., Jack London, The Road, 1907) is a railway—the Chicago and Alton Railroad—and C. and A. pocket (? first mentioned in Leon Livingston's Madame Delcassee of the Hoboes, 1918) is a large pocket—or pouch—in the coat, of the kind that in England is called a poacher's pocket. 'In some towns the mere fact that a man's clothing has been so altered has brought a jail sentence for vagrancy . . . the name originated along the C. & A.R., much of which ran through territory providing a poor living for tramps, who carried enough food with them to enable them to pass through this section of the country and into greener pastures' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931).

C.H. & D. Cold, hungry and dry, C.H. & D. being an intimation that a tramp, 'calling in', needs food, drink, warmth: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938. 'A play on the initials of the Cincinnati, Hamilton and Dayton Railroad' (Irwin); 'The people in the towns along the railway will not feed or encourage tramps' (Chester).

C note. A one-hundred-dollar bill (banknote): 1931, Clifford R. Shaw, Natural History of a Delinquent; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; 1935, Hargan; Oct. 31, 1936, Flynn's, Convict 12627; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; anon. letter, June 1, 1946 (Canadian). Ex C, 2.

C.O. A persistent objector; convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. With a pun on Conscientious Objector.

C.O.D. is a development (recorded by Leverage, 1925) of:—

C.O. Dick. A detective: yeggs': 1916, The Literary Digest (Aug., 'Do you Speak "Yegg" ?'); after ca. 1925, gen. criminal c.; by 1940, slightly ob. I.e., originally a Central Office (New York) detective.

C.O. rap. 'A warrant for an arrest,' Leverage, 1925; extant. I.e., a Central Office rap, n., 2.

C.T.A., 'the police', is not c. but circusmen's and showmen's s.

cab. A brothel: 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Mother: how many tails have you in your cab? how many girls have you in your bawdy house?'; by 1889 (B & L), it was low s.; by 1891 (F & H), it was †. 'From the fact that . . . cabs are sometimes used for certain purposes' (love-making), B & L. Contrast the differently originated:—

cab joint. 'A house of prostitution which gets its patronage through taxicab drivers. "The moll an' sister-in-law is workin' a cab-joint";' Burke, 1930; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who points out that the term dates back to the days of horse-drawn cabs, when the practice was perhaps even commoner—say, back to the 1890's; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

cab moll. 'A woman that keeps a bad house (a brothel): 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; app. † by ca. 1910. See cab and cf. cab joint.—2. Hence (?), a prostitute in a brothel: prostitutes': since ca. 1850. B & L, 1889; BVB, 1942.—3. 'A prostitute addicted professionally to cabs and trains': ca. 1850–80. F & H, 1891.

cabbage, 'material secreted by tailor assistants', is not c. but tailors' s.; the same applies to cabbage, 'to pilfer or purloin'.—2. Paper money: Canada: C. 20. (Anon. letter, June 1, 1946.) Soft and green.

cabbage hat. An informer to the police: mostly Pacific Coast: since ca. 1910. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on rat, n., 5.

Cabbage Patch, the. 'That little triangle of grass behind the Admiralty Arch which they call the Cabbage Patch,' James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936: London vagrants': C. 20. By humorous depreciation.

cabbage plant; summer cabbage. An umbrella: 1823, Egan's Grose (both); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1900. Ex the spread of a cabbage's leaves.

cabbage(-)tree. To flee: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B. Rhyming.

cabbin (properly cabin). A public-house: 1797, Potter; † by 1870. Depreciatory.—2. A house: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1890.

cabin-cracker and cabin-cracking. A thief, specializing in breaking into ships' cabins; such robbery or theft: rather low nautical s. than c.: 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen. See crack, v., 1.

cable, n. A watch-chain: 1925, Leverage; extant. Humorous. Cf:—

cable, v. 'To put in chains (in prison)' Leverage, 1925; extant. Bitter.

caboose. 'A term used by tramps to indicate a kitchen,' H, 1874: mid-C. 19–20. Ex the (orig., s.) sense, 'a ship's galley', itself ex Dutch kabuis (now kombuis).

cace is Copland's spelling of case, n.

cackle, v. To blab to the police; imprudently to divulge one's plans or (nefarious) profession: 1698, B.E., 'Cackle, c. to discover. The Cull Cackles, c. the Rogue tells all'; 1725, A New English Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1823, Jon Bee; by 1859, current in U.S.A. (Matsell's Vocabulum); app. † by 1891 (F & H). Ex the S.E. sense, 'to be loquacious.'

cackle-tub. A pulpit: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by 1889 (B & L) it was perhaps low s.; Ware (1909), however, classifies it as c. In late C. 19–20 U.S.A., it was c.; it occurs in, e.g., Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936. 'As from a tub, the parson cackles' supplies the underworld and proletarian semantics.

cackleberries. Eggs: tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, et al. Perhaps suggested by a reminiscence of cacklers' ken and cackling cheat.

cackler. A variation of cackling cheat: 1621, B. Jonson, A Masque of the Metamorphos'd Gipsies, 'Where the Cacklers but no Grunters | shall uncased be for the Hunters'; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd, 'Cacklers, Poultry'; 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1889, B & L; † by 1900.—2. Hence, an egg: American tramps': late C. 19–20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—3. 'Cacklers. White collar workers,' Stiff, 1931: U.S. tramps': 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who shows, however, that, originated by the I.W.W., the term can hardly be classified as c.—common though it be among tramps.

cacklers' ken. A hen-roost: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H, who imply that it is †. See cackler and ken.

cackling, 'prating, talking', is by Randle Holme classified wrongly as cant.

cackling(-)cheat. 'A cakling chete, a cocke or eapon,' Harman, 1566: ibid., 'She hath a Cackling chete, ruff Peecke, cassan, and popplarr of yarum. She hath a hen, a pyg, baken, chese and mylke porrage'; ca. 1615, Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggars' Bush, 'Or cackling cheats?'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, defines it as 'a chicken', —as does Coles, 1676; 1688, Holme ('A Cock, Hen, or Capon'); 1698, B.E., 'Cackling-cheats, c. Chickens, Cocks or Hens'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose, 'A fool'; † by 1830. Lit., a thing that cackles.

cackling cove. An actor: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L, 'Popular and thieves'; by 1891 (F & H), low and theatrical s. Lit., a fellow that speaks.

cackling fart. An egg: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; by 1889 (B & L), it was †. Cf. cackling cheat.

cackling cheat or chete. See cackling cheat.

cad. 'Cad means a constable in disguise', Sessions, June 1840 (p. 177); † by 1890. Prob. ex S.E. cad, 'a low fellow'.—2. Short (also Cad) for Cadillac (a ration of drug): U.S.A.: since ca. 1935.

cadator, treated by several lexicographers as c., is S.E. Perhaps the best description occurs in E. Ward, The London Spy, 1698, where it is stated that he is 'one of those gentile Mumpers we call Cadators; he goes a Circuit round England once a Year, and under pretence of a decay'd Gentleman, gets both Money and Entertainment at every good House he comes at. And if he has Opertunity to handsomly convey away a Silver Beaker, or a Spoon or Two, he holds no long dispute with his Conscience about the Honesty of the matter. Then comes up to Town, and enjoys the benefit of his Rural Labours.' Ex L. cadere, to fall.

caddee. An assistant in a robbery: 1823, Bee; † by 1920. Ex Fr. cadet, younger son.—2. Hence, such a hanger-about in inn and tavern yards as habitually passes counterfeit money; also caddee smasher: 1828, Bee, A Living Picture; 1890, B & L; † by 1920.

caddy, v.; usually as vbl n., caddying, begging: Canadian: C. 20. Anon. letter, June 9, 1946. Ex cadge.

cadet. 'An abductor of young girls,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1930, George London, Les

Bandits de Chicago, 'Souteneur'—i.e., pimp; 1935, Hargan, 'Procureur for a house of prostitution',—but Webster's New International, 1934, lists it as s.—2. Hence, in an unmistakably c. sense: 'one who prostitutes his wife or mistress,' BVB, 1942: white-slave traffic: since ca. 1920. Cf.:—3. A new drug addict: drug traffic: since ca. 1925. BVB.

cadge, n. 'The cadge, is the game or profession of begging': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, The London Guide (kedge); 1823, Jon Bee, "'To live upon the kedge'", is said of those who pester soft-hearted people with petitions containing exaggerated statements of distress'; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'Ven I comes out on the cadge'; by 1891 (F & H), it was low s. Prob. ex:—

cadge, v. V.i., to beg: 1797, Hum. Potter; 1818, The London Guide, 'Kedge, to live upon precarious means'; 1827, P. Cunningham, Two Years in New South Wales; 1939, Brandon (see cadging); by 1845, or thereabouts, it had > s. Weekley convincingly proposes derivation, through Dutch, ex Fr. cage, a wicker basket carried on the back of a cadger (peddler) or of his pony.

cadge, on (or upon) the. See cadge, n.

cadge-gloak. A (professional) beggar: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1934, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; † by 1880. See gloak and cadge, n. and v.

cadger, 'a beggar, a thief of the lowest order', may orig. (? ca. 1795) have been c.: cf. cadge, v. Ex that v., it had, by 1845, > s. and dial., though indeed it may have reached c. from dial.—App. recorded first by Humphry Potter in his Dict., 1797; Pierce Egan, Life in London, 1821, 'Cadgers enjoying a good supper, laughing at the flats they had imposed upon in begging for "charity's sake" in the course of the day'; 1823, Jon Bee, 'Kedger—he is a beggar who does not ask for alms outright, but performs some trivial office, and expects a fee, or casts himself in the way of being offered one'; 1828, Geo. Smeeton. Ex cadge, v.—2. Hence, a thieving beggar: 1885, M. Davitt (see hook, n., 2); ibid., 'Thief-Cadgers.—This, the pariah order of habitual criminal, is designated "the cadger" from uniting two callings in his mode of thieving—begging (cadging) and "shop-lifting"'; ob.

cadger screeving. A pavement artist: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, where it is misprinted c. screeving; † by 1940. See cadger and screeve, v.

cadgers' coffee-house; cadgers' hotel. A constant resort (the former by day, the latter by night) of beggars of all sorts: 1823, Bee; by 1870, low s. See cadger and cf.:—

cadgers' cove. A low lodging-house: 1889 (see buskers' retreat); ob.

cadgers' ken. A public-house frequented by beggars: 1826, C. E. Westmacott, The English Spy, vol. II, which contains a grim illustration by Robert Cruikshank; † by 1910. See the elements.

cadging is the vbl n. of cadge, n. and v.: 1797, implied in cadger; 1828, implied in cadging line; 1836, Sessions; 1839, Brandon, 'Cadging—begging'; by 1845, it was s. Ex cadge, v.

cadging line, the. Begging: 1828, Geo. Smeeton, Doings in London, 'The woman . . . is in a good way of business in the cadging-line, together with her husband'; by 1880, low s. See cadge, v.

Cadillac. See ride, v., 3. Also in BVB, 1942.

cady, 'a hat or cap', is not c. but s.—orig., low s., in England at least; in U.S.A., it may have been c.

in ca. 1840–1930, as in 'The Flash Language', published in The Ladies' Repository, 1848, and in Anon., State Prison Life, 1871 (as katy), and in Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924. 'Of unascertained origin' (The O.E.D.); perhaps a blend of cap + shady.

caffan. This misprint for cassan, 'cheese'—a misprint arising from the confusion of the long S with f—occurs first in B.E., 1698; thence it was copied by various lexicographers, e.g. Grose, 1785.

Caffier (or c-) or Caffir. See Kaffir.

cafishio. See Créolo.

cag, carry the. 'The cove carries the cag; the man is vexed or sullen': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A man who is easily vexed or put out of humour by any joke passed upon him, and cannot conceal his chagrin, is said to carry the keg, or is compared to a walking distiller'; 1823, Bee; † by 1889 (B & L). Prob. ex dial. cag, 'to offend, to insult', but with a humorous reference to dial. cag; perhaps carry the cag implied doing the dirty work. The form carry the keg is obviously a folk-etymologizing variant; walking distiller, a pun on that variant.

cage, 'prison', is not c. but s.—2. David Haggart, Life, 1821, 'We were frequently together in the cage. This is a sort of open-railed place, one story up in the side wall of the jail [at Dumfries], where the prisoners go for fresh air'. A local sense, current ca. 1800–60.—3. The prisoners' ward at Bellevue Hospital, N.Y.C., is the Cage: U.S.A.: 1891, Darkness and Daylight; ob.—4. A cubicle in a cheap lodging-house: U.S. tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931; IA, 1931.

cagey. Suspicious; afraid: 1931, IA; by 1935, low s.; by 1937, gen. s.; by 1945, fairly widespread in Britain. Perhaps ex caged birds, which lose their 'confidence' in—i.e., their aptitude for—the delights of the world outside.

Cain and Abel, 'a table', is rhyming s.; but orig. (ca. 1850–70) it was c.: witness 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); 1882, James D. McCabe, New York, in which city it may have been c. as late as 1900. In late C. 19–20, it was, moreover, still c. on the Pacific Coast; witness, e.g., Convict 2nd, 1938.

cake. As 'a foolish fellow' (with variant cakey), it is not c. but s.—2. Hence, in U.S.A.: 'An easy fool of a policeman; a flat cop': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1890, F & H; † by 1910.—3. Esp. in cake of ice, a large diamond: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.—4. See cake-shop.

cake and wine. Bread and water: convicts': 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest, John Caldwell; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Derisive.

cake-eater. 'The nice boy of the town. Not much used by hobos,' Stiff, 1931; ob. He eats cake, not drinks bourbon.

cake-shop; cake. The latter, a prostitute; the former, derivatively, a brothel: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Prob. suggested by tart, 'a girl'.

cakey-pannum fencer. 'A man who sells street pastry—i.e., a street vendor of pastry: 1859, H; by 1889 (B & L), street s. Lit., a cakey-bread seller (see pannam and fencer, 2).

cakling chete. See cackling cheat.

Cal. Calcraft, the common hangman: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; after 1879, merely historical. This was William Calcraft (1800–79), who was official executioner from 1829, when his predecessor, Foxton, died, until 1874, when he retired only because he was growing too old for the job.

calaboose, 'a jail', was never c.; orig., however, it was low s. An early example occurs in The National Police Gazette of April 18, 1846, quoting a New Orleans newspaper; the D.A.E. has recorded it as far back as 1792. Ex Sp. calabozo, 'a safe place; hence a (jail) lock-up'.

calaboose canary. A prisoner in a gaol: 1905, in a story of that date in Hobo Camp Fire Tales, 7th ed., 1911; ob. See the separate elements.

calebs. 'An instrument to unlock a door with key in the lock,' The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848, Godfrey Irwin's gloss (in private letter) being, 'Illustrated in the text, and from the illustration not a pair of the usual nippers'; † by 1937 (Irwin). Prob. ex the given-name of a famous burglar, Caleb —; calebs = Caleb's (picklock or nippers).

calenderer's (or callenderer's) lurk, the. Feigning to be a calenderer out of work 'through the depression of trade, and the improvement in machinery': 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; by 1910, †. See lurk.

calf-sticking. The practice (or an instance of the practice) of swindling smugglers by impersonating a Customs officer: 1885, James Greenwood, A Queer Showman (pp. 99–100). But in The Daily Telegraph, July 25, 1883, it is explained as 'the putting off of worthless rubbish, on the pretence that it was smuggled goods, on any foolish or unscrupulous person who could be inveigled into treating for the same' (cited by F & H, 1891).

calfskin, smack. 'To kiss the book in taking an oath. It is held by the St Giles's casuists, that by kissing one's thumb instead of smacking calf's skin, the guilt of taking a false oath is avoided': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.: app. current ca. 1770–1850, this phrase may have, at least orig., been c. The reference is to the calfskin binding at one time so common for Bibles.

Cali (pron. cally). California: tramps' c. before it > gen. s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

calico yard. A (prison) guard: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

California blankets. Newspapers used to sleep on and under: tramps': prob. since ca. 1910. Recorded by Stiff, 1931, and by Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'So called since much of the southern part of the State has a climate which allows of sleeping out of doors with but scant covering' (Irwin).

call, n. 'Hobo dish: Baked potato mashed with butter and served with liverwurst and onions,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1920. Tramps call eagerly for it.

call, v. 'The word "mouch" is not often heard outside towns, for wandering beggars say "call". For instance, "it is a good road to call", or "there is plenty of calling"; meaning that the road has many houses' (at which a beggar—a tramp—may call and beg for alms), W. H. Davies, Beggars, 1909; 1936, W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 'Another tramp was "calling" a house. The lady asked him why he could get no work'; extant. Euphemistic and humorous.

call a go, 'to desist; to yield', is not c., but street s.

call a turn. See call the turn, ref. of 1924.

call(-)down. A reprimand: mostly convicts': 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1910, s.

call(-)out, n. A woman, apparently an invalid and certainly attractive, employed by a gang of bank-robbers, her role being to call at a bank and, one of her confederates asking a clerk in the small country or branch bank out on to the sidewalk to ascertain her business, to entertain the clerk with pleasant conversation while the rest of the gang rob the bank of such moneys as they can readily lay their hands upon: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; ob. The clerk is called out.

call out, v. 'To use a stolen check to get baggage, etc.,' Chicago May, 1928; extant.

call the turn. To identify (a person) as having been a criminal or as having committed a crime; to have (intimate) knowledge to a person's discredit; (hence) to solve a problem: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, p. 34, 'With those who are able "to call the turn" on him [an ex-professional thief] he acts and talks as if his history were known ever since he left the cradle'; ibid., Glossary, 'Give the name and record of a gun [or professional thief]. When a detective identifies a criminal he is said to have called the turn on him'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom—in form 'call a turn'; by 1925, police s. in U.S.A.; since ca. 1920, current in Canada (anon. letter, June 9, 1946). Ex card-playing.

callahan. A policeman's stick or truncheon: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Ex the fact that so very many American policemen, esp. in the large cities, are Irishmen: and Callahan is a typical Irish surname.

calle. A cloak: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Calle, c. a Cloak or Gown'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (copying B.E.); by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); by 1880, † in Britain; 1889, B & L, '(American thieves' slang), a woman's gown'; by 1910, it was † everywhere. B & L derive it from Yiddish kalle, 'a girl': cf., in reverse, skirt, 'a girl, a woman'.

callenderer's lurk. See calenderer's lurk.

caller. A professional beggar: beggars' and tramps': 1909, W. H. Davies (quot'n at traveller); extant. Ex call, v.

callie. See cally.

calling, n. See call, v.

calling cards. Finger-prints: 1929, Givens; April 27, 1930, Flynn's, Leighton H. Blood; extant. Things one leaves at the place visited.

calling in. 'Using another's camp fire for cooking or to warm the person': tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Merely a special and thoroughly regular application of the gen. coll. sense—'visiting'.

cally (or callie). A lock-up, a police station; loosely, a jail: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, Moreby Acklom's article, 'Distinguish carefully between (a) the bubble, (b) the callie, (c) the hoose-gow'; 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A police station'; extant. Short for calaboose.

calm. See kelp (ref. of 1738).

calp. See kelp. (John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753).

calph rope. See go calph rope.

calves' skin, smack. See calfskin, smack.

cam, adj. Cambric: 1785, Grose (at wiper), 'A . . . cam . . . wiper, . . . a . . . cambrick . . . handkerchief'; app. current ca. 1770–1880; by 1859, used in America (Matsell).—2. A dupe; a 'sucker': Jan. 18, 1909, Sessions, 'It was Briggs who . . . wrote the letter as though it came from the "cam"—that meant the gentleman who had sent the money; the "mug"'; ob. Like cambric, easy to handle?

cambra, 'a dog': tinkers' s. 1889, B & L; extant. Debased from Shelta.

came, 'cocaine': strictly French, but used to some extent by international traffickers in narcotics. Arthur Woods, Dangerous Drugs, 1931; where attention is drawn to such concealing terms as calico, cerise, quinine. Short for camelote, 'stuff, dress-material'.

camera eye. 'An attentive memory for facts,' Burke: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'Put him on the door. He's camera eye'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; by 1939, police and journalistic s. Ex the late C. 19–20 c. sense, 'a detective or police officer with a good memory for faces' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931)—a sense that, ca. 1920, > police j. comesa. 'A Shirt or [a] Shift,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Geo. Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux (kemesa); 1828, P. Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry, and Logic, 'The cameza you have on seems a fine one, and such as a gemman wears'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, where it is spelt kemesa; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1859, H ('Cameza, or Caneza': I question the latter form); by 1859, current in New York (Matsell: comesor, a slovenly form); 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † everywhere by 1910. The source is prob. the Sp. camisa or possibly the It. camicia, unless perchance the origin be learned and hence from L. camisia. Oddly enough, the derivative form, commission, is, app. (but perhaps only app.), the earlier.

comesor. See comesa, second 1859 ref.

camisole. A strait jacket that, made of heavy canvas and leather, is put on unruly prisoners: convicts': since ca. 1920. Ersine. Ironic.

camister. A minister of religion: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1859, H, 'A preacher, clergyman, or master'; ibid., also commister; current, as commister, in New York by the 1850's—see Matsell, 1859; H, 3rd ed., 1864, implies (at commister) that, by that date, it was low s. Perhaps ex L. camisia, 'an alb'—on minister (of religion).

camp, n., 'a low saloon' (Leverage, 1925); low s. rather than c. The derivative sense 'brothel' is, however, c.: 1935, Hargan; BVB, 1942, defines it as 'a male homosexual brothel or gathering place'. Cf. :—2. Lodgings: Australian: since ca. 1918. In, e.g., M & B, 1944. Ex military camp, where the accommodation may consist of huts, barrack-blocks, etc.

camp, adj. Homosexual: Australian: since ca. 1930. Baker, 1942. On borderline between c. and low s. Ex English society and theatrical s.: see Partridge, 1937. See also camp, n., 1.

Camp, the. 'The Sydney [convict] settlement became known almost immediately [after the arrival of the First Fleet in 1788 and well before that of the Second Fleet in 1790] as the Camp; later the term was transferred to the Hobart convict settlement. In subsequent years the Hobart Town Penitentiary became known as the Tench,' Baker, 1945, adducing, for the Sydney name, J. West, History of Tasmania, vol. II, 1852. Obviously these early convict settlements did resemble camps—of the stockaded type.

camp eye. A tramp that looks after a 'jungle' while his companions are out, e.g., while they are looking for food: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin. Ex construction-camp s. for a labourer assigned to a similar duty; perhaps suggested by camera eye.

campaign coat (in S.E., a greatcoat), 'in a Cantering Sense, the ragged, tatter'd, patch'd Coat, worn by Beggars and Gypsies, in order to move Compassion,' A New Cantering Dict., 1725: ca. 1710–60.

Campbell's academy (or A-) is the same as floating academy, q.v.: 1785, Grose, 'From a gentleman of that name, who had the contract for finding'—i.e., supplying the fittings of—'and victualling the hulks or lighters'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'Mr. Campbell was the first director of them'; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, glosses Campbell's floating academy thus, 'The term these people'—criminals—'give to the Justitia Hulk that Duncan Campbell is governor of'; by 1820, low s.; by 1850, †. For the origin, see floating academy.

Campo, the. A white-slaver's term, dating from the late 1890's. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, a pimp speaking: 'There's one woman in Buenos Ayres, one in London, and another on the "campo"—which means in the country—at Rosario'; ibid., 'The "Campo" means all the other cities that are not Buenos Ayres—Rosario, Santa Fé, Mendoza. They are each and all the "Campo"'. Sp. campo, 'country'—as opposed to town.

can, n. A dollar: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; 1891, F & H, who imply that it is, by that date, not c. but s. Why precisely? Perhaps because a silver dollar and a can 'ring' when struck or thrown against something hard—2. A prison: C. 20: 1912, Donald Lowrie (who was an inmate of San Quentin, 1901–11), My Life in Prison, 'I was in th' can ag'in up against it f'r robbery'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (both as a prison and as a prison cell); 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler; 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; by 1925, low s. in U.S.A.; by 1930, current in Britain, as, e.g., in Jim Phelan, In the Can, 1939. For the semantics, cf. tank.—3. A water-closet; a urinal: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex the necessity for prisoners locked into their cells to use a 'night bucket' or can: Irwin.—4. Sense and etymology alike are indicated in the Jervis quot'n: British: April 30, 1906, Sessions (p. 343); 'Having found in [a public-house] a suitable "can" (juggins or mug), you stand him a drink or two,' Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, 1925; 1929, Tom Divall, Scoundrels and Scallywags; 1939, David Hume, Heads You Live; 1945, D. Hume, Come Back for the Corpse.—5. A safe; a strong-box: 1925, Leverage; June 21, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; Feb. 14, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; 1934, Convict; 1936, Lee Duncan; 1937, Courtney R. Cooper; extant.—6. 'A cheap car,' W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 1929; ibid., 'Ditch that can, then come back for your split'; 1938, Damon Runyon, Furthermore; ob. Cf. heap.—7. A bomb: 1933 (implied in can-maker); 1934, David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live (see quot'n at stick, n., 9); 1935, Howard N. Rose (U.S.A.); extant.—8. The human backside: 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It ('sit on one's can'); extant. Ex sense 3: 'where one sits' > 'what one sits on' (one's seat).—9. (Ex sense 5, on the analogy of jug). A bank: 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; extant.—10. 'An ounce of morphine,' Ersine, 1933, and BVB, 1942: drug traffic: since ca. 1925. Perhaps because in cubes sold in a tin.—11. A half-pound of tobacco: convicts': since ca. 1925. Ersine. It comes in such tins.

can, v. To dismiss from office: 1912 (but valid for a decade earlier), Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 'They all squealed—trust dope fiends t'do that ev'ry time—an' th' guard got canned'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man (of a man getting rid of a woman); by 1920, it was s. Cf. senses 2 and 3 of the n.—2. Hence, to eliminate: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1935, s.—3. To imprison: C. 20: 1929 (see canned); 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington, in Flynn's, March 30, 1935; 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra. Ex sense 2 of the n.

can-maker. A maker of bombs: 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; extant. See can, n., 7.

can-moocher is synonymous with tomato-can vag (q.v.): 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, p. 118; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who refers us to tomato-can stiff; extant. Lit., a (tomato-)can beggar.

can-opener. A large, sectional 'jemmy' with a cutting-edge at one end: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, A. B. Reeve, Guy Garrick; 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue; 1925, Leverage; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1936, Lee Duncan; by 1938 (David Hume, Corpses Never Argue), it was also British; extant.—2. A safe-blower: 1925, Leverage; 1932, Lewis E. Lawes, 20,000 Years in Sing Sing; by ca. 1934, English, as in Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows, 1939; extant.

can racket. A street quarrel, or turbulent merrymaking, among roughs: New York: 1891, Jacob A. Riis, How the Other Half Lives (pp. 38–39; 226); † by 1920. It sets up a noise like to the racket or din caused by throwing cans about.

can(-)shifter. 'Device for removing a safe,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941: since ca. 1930.

can(-)shooter. A safe-blower: since ca. 1920. Ersine.

canakin. See canniken.

canaries. 'He was in a suit of "canaries"—the prison name for the parti-coloured dress of alternate drab and yellow, which is one of the penalties for attempted escape,' Arthur Griffiths, Secrets of the Prison House, 1894, but prob. current since ca. 1830; now only historical.—2. See fly canaries.

canary, n.; (sense 1 only) canary bird. 'Canary-Bird, a Rogue or Whore taken, and clapp'd into the Cage or Round-house' (i.e., prison), A New Cantering Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose (canary bird); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1823, Jon Bee (id.); 1827, P. Cunningham, Two Years in New South Wales, 'Convicts of but recent migration are facetiously known by the name of canaries, by reason of the yellow plumage in which they are fledged at the period of landing'; 1848, Sinks of London (id.); by 1859, current in U.S.A. for a convict (Matsell, Vocabulum); † by 1890 in Great Britain; still current in 1933 (Ersine) in U.S.A.—2. (Gen. pl.) A guinea-piece: 1785, Grose; hence a sovereign (H, 2nd ed., 1860); † by 1889 B & L). Ex colour.—3. A kept woman: 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1890 (F & H), s. Ex sense 1.—4. A hundred strokes of the lash: convicts': ca. 1820–70: 1859 (see bull, n., 2.). Perhaps because it made the victim 'sing out', but prob. in relation to bob, n., 5, and bull, n., 2, and tester, 2.—5. Of burglars, Mayhew, London Labour, IV, says, in 1862, 'Sometimes a woman, called a "canary", carries the tools, and watches outside'; 1891, F & H; 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 'A woman look-out'—American. Doubtless coined as a counterpart to crow, n., 2.—6. See canaries.—7. An informer to the police: U.S.A.: July 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'A collector . . ., slightly suspected of being a canary, of singing songs to Centre Street'; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's; 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube; 1934, Rose; by 1937 (Charles Prior, So I Wrote It), English also; extant. He sings: see sing.

canary, v. To turn State's evidence: 1933, Eagle; extant. Ex sense 7 of the n. canary, gooi a. See gooi . . .

candle. To worry, pester, heckle; convicts': since ca. 1920. Ersine. Cf. s. 'to roast'.

candle, lighting a. See lighting a candle.

candle-eater. A Russian: tramps': 1931, Stiff; 1931, IA, 'A Russian or, loosely, any Slav'; extant. Perhaps 'some tramp, seeing a Russian eating one of those home-made, pallid, tallow-colored sausages, coined the term in derision' (IA).

candle-sconce. A prostitute's bully: C. 20. See diddly-donce.

candy, n. 'money' (Leverage, 1925): s. rather than c. Cf. s. sugar daddy.—2. Cocaine: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. cookie, 3, q.v.

candy, adj. See candy kid and:—

candy job. A pleasant job: tramps': since ca. 1920. Stiff, 1931. I.e., a 'sweet' job.

candy kid. A lady's man; a handsome youth: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Stiff, 'The fellow who gets the good breaks'; extant. Cf. prec.; perhaps also because he offers candy.

cane. See kane.—2. A 'jemmy': since ca. 1920: also Canadian (Kernôt, 1929–31): 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; 1930, George Ingram, Hell's Kitchen; 1933, Charles E. Leach; 1933, George Orwell, Down and Out; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime; extant. Suggested by synonymous stick.

canfinflero. See Créolo.

caning. Punishment in prison: convicts': since ca. 1920. George Ingram. Stir, 1933. Cf. bash, bashing.

canis(-)cove. 'Cannis Cove. A dog-man; a dog-merchant; a dog-thief': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1900. Lit., a dog (L. canis) fellow.

canister, 'the head', may orig. have been c. (Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811, 'to mill his cannister; to break his head'), but prob. it was always s. Humorously ex the lit. S.E. sense.—2. A watch: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly, A. G. England, 'Underworld Lingo'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex similarity of shape; cf. s. turnip.—3. A pistol:

U.S.A.: 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, 'One of the gang . . . cried out to his fellows: "Hold off. He's pulled his cannister; an' if you crowd him he's framed it up to do Red"'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (of any firearm); 1925, Leverage, 'A gun; a revolver'; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who implies obsolescence; Sept. 19, 1931, Flynn's, Paul Annixter; 1933, Eagle; extant. 'The reference is to case shot used by artillery' (Irwin).—4. A prison: convicts' (U.S.A.): 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1933, Ersine; ob. Depreciative.—5. A look-out man to a gang of thieves or burglars: U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Jiggerman'; ob. Perhaps ex 3.—6. A safe; a strong box: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; 1933, Ersine; extant. Prob. ex 4. canister-cap, 'a hat', is not c. but pugilistic s. H, 1859. Ex the preceding.

canke. 'Canke . . . Dumb,' R. Head in The English Rogue, 1665; 1676, Coles; 1688, Randle Holme, 'Canke, a Dumb Man'; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Geo. Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859, used in America—witness Matsell; by 1880, † in Britain, except in dial. Perhaps short for cankered.—2. Hence, as in A Canting Dict., 1725, 'The Cull's Cank; The Rogue's Dumb; a Term used by Canters, when one of their Fraternity, being apprehended, upon Examination, confesses nothing'; † by 1830.

canke. See preceding entry.

cannaken (or -kin). See canniken.

canned. Imprisoned: March 2, 1929, Flynn's, H. W. Corley ('Pickpockets'), 'Canned for a sleep' means that you are jailed for the night'; extant. See can, v., 3.

canned goods, as in 'Well, I'll just bet our new friend is canned goods'. A virgin (of either sex): 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. The reference is to the 'unliberated' male, the 'unopened' female.

canned-heat stiff; also canned-heat artist. An addict of 'canned heat' (crude spirit—a sort of liquid paste made from methylated spirits and alcohol, Kenneth Mackenzie—used in cooking): 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall (the former); 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough (both forms); extant. Sold in cans or tins.

Canned Meat and Stale Punk, the. The Chicago, Milwaukee and St Paul railroad: tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931. Chicago is famous for its tinned beef; punk = bread, stale bread being the best a tramp is likely to receive along this route.

canned stuff. Commercial smoking-opium in cans or tins: drug traffic: C. 20. BVB. Here, stuff = drugs.

cannery. A prison: July 18, 1931, The Saturday Review of Literature (John Wilstach); 1934, Rose: extant. An elaboration of can, n., 2.

cannibal. A type of homosexual pervert: 1927, Kane; extant, BVB defining it correctly as a sodomite. Anthropophagous.

canniken (or -kin). Plague: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'Besides, they have in their Canting, a word for the Divell, or the plague, etc. as Ruffin for the one, and Cannikin for the other'; 1665, R. Head in The English Rogue seems, in the canting song, to use this term as an imprecation—'A Canniken, mill quire Cuffin, | So quire to ben Coves watch', but in the glossary he has 'Cannakin . . .

The plague'; 1688, Randle Holme; 1698, B.E. (cannikin); 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (-ken); by 1830, †.

cannis cove. See canis cove.

cannister. See canister.

cannon, n. A revolver: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 'The thief had him covered with his "cannon" before he could do any damage'; 1911, Hobo Camp Fire Tales, 7th ed.—the reference being valid for the year 1905; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; March 27, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black; Dec. 8, 1928, Flynn's; 1928, John O'Connor; 1929, Jack Callahan; June 20, 1930, Flynn's; Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; and frequently since then; by 1935, however, it was s. Humorous.—2. A pickpocket: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1918 (Dec.), The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'), 'A Westernism for pickpocket'; 1927, Kane, 'A clever thief'; 1928, Jim Tully, Circus Parade; May 1928, The American Mercury; 1928, John O'Connor; 1930 (May 31), Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; May 9, 1931, Flynn's, Lawrance M. Maynard; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; April 21, 1934, Flynn's; July 10, 1936, Flynn's, Convict 12627; Dec. 9, 1936, The Evening News—English, as indeed it had been since the late 1920's; 1937, E. H. Sutherland; 1938, Convict 2nd; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant. Suggested by gun (n., 4).—3. A gunman: 1931, IA; 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. the sense-development of gun, n.—4. (Ex sense 2.) The cannon is 'the pick-pocket racket': since the late 1930's. In, e.g., Ersine, 1933, and Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937.

cannon, v. 'To shoot a person or at a person,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex sense 1 of the n.—2. 'To pick pockets,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex sense 2 of the n.

cannon, adj. 'One night I was with the mob, I got canon (drunk)'; 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.; 1889, B & L; 1894, A. Morrison, Martin Hewitt; Investigator; app. † by 1940. Perhaps cf. 'can of beer'; prob. a pun on s. and dial. gun, 'a flagon (of ale)'. Vellacott's suggestion, 'one can too many' reversed, is too far-fetched, as he himself admits.

Cannon Ball, or cannon ball. Any express train; tramps': C. 20; 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'We caught the Cannon-Ball as she slowed up at the crossing'; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures, 'I had "decked a cannon-ball on the fly"—and from the middle of the train, too!'; 1931, Stiff, 'A fast train. "The Wabash Cannon Ball" is the mythical hobo train that travels everywhere'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Rose; and others.

cannon ball. A spheroid safe of a particular make, used in banks: 1924, George Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain, 'He gave the handle certain peculiar twists . . . It was like setting the combination of a "cannon ball"'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Dec. 11, 1926, Flynn's, 'We'll get busy an' see if we can crack th' cannon-ball'; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer, who gives it as cannon ball peter—as does Rose, 1934; extant.—2. See Cannon Ball.—3. (Ex sense 1.) A note, or other message, sent—through a 'trusty'—by a prisoner: convicts': since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Speedy.

cannon man. A gunman: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (Glossary, at 'Assaulter'); ob. Ex cannon, n., 1.

cannon mob. A gang, a team, of pickpockets: since ca. 1920 (or earlier). John O'Connor, 1928; Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. See cannon, n., 2, and mob; prob. imm. ex mob of cannons.

cannon-shooter. 'A detective whose especial detail it is to look out for pickpockets,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Punning cannon, n., 1 and 2.

cannoneer. A gunman: 1924, George Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain '“You've croaked him!”—“Whadidya expect? I ain't one of these amateur cannoneers, Mill. I gotta unload th' on'y way I know: to stop a guy and stop him good.”' Suspected to be 'literary'—not to exist outside the pages of a book; nevertheless, it recurs in J. Allan Dunn's 'The Gray Gangster'—Flynn's, May 31, 1930. See cannon, n., 1.

canon. See cannon, adj.

cant, n. A roll; esp. cant of dobbin, a roll of ribbon: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Moll, when she used to go upon the Dobbin, has sold him many a cant'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Cant of Dobbins, a roll of riband'; 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1910, †. Prob., as also perhaps sense 2, ex S.E. cant, 'a portion; a share'.—2. A gift, esp. of food or clothes: 1839 and 1859 (see cant of togs); 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary (U.S.A.); 1862, Mayhew; 1891, F & H, who classify it as c. Ex cant of togs.—3. The sense 'food' (F & H) is not well authenticated, though in 1862, Mayhew, London Labour, III, 415, 'The house was good for a cant—that's some food—bread or meat', gives colour to the supposition; nevertheless, even here cant prob. = 'a gift'.

cant, v. As in Harman, A Caveat or Warening for common cursetors, 1566: '“It shall be lawfull for the to Cant”—that is, to aske or begge—“for thy living in al places”',—this being a special application (and sense) of Harman's 'To cante, to speak', for Harman should, I surmise, have added 'as a beggar'; 1592, 'Cutlbert Cunny-catcher', The Defence of Conny catching, 'At these wordes Conny-catcher and Setter, I was driven into as great a maze, as if one had dropt out of the cloudes, to heare a pesant cant the wordes of art belonging to our trade'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'To Cant, (that is to say) to be a Vagabond and Beg, and to speake that pedlers French . . . which is to be found among none but Beggars'; 1677, Anon., Sadler's Memoirs, 'In the College of Newgate he learnt to Cant by Rote'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; Grose; and others. But the term had, prob. by 1640, > s. well before Grose's Vulgar Tongue appeared. Grose derives it from chaunt (chant).—2. To give: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell. The sense is suspect. Cf. cant, n., 2.

cant of dobbin. See cant, n.

cant of togs. A gift of clothes: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; 1909, Ware, who delimits it as beggars'; † by 1930. See cant, n., 1 and 2.

cant the cues. 'To explain a matter, to tell a story' (1889, B & L); 1881, The New York Slang Dict., † by 1930. Lit., 'to speak the cues'.

canter, a professional beggar or criminal, esp. one that speaks the language of the underworld, is regarded by the O.E.D. as S.E., but as used by Dekker (1609), S. Rowlands, John Taylor the Water Poet, and others in C. 17, it would seem to have been c. until, say, 1640; then s. (gradually merging into coll.) until ca. 1730, and then S.E. Ex cant, v., 1.

canter gloak (or gloke). 'Canter gloak, a parson, a liar': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. Lit., a hypocrite fellow.

canting, adj. Pertaining to or characteristic of the underworld: 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'Some gabbling in their Canting language'; 1698, B.E., 'Canting-crew, c. Beggars, Gypsies.' This canting crew had prob. > s. by 1720, at the latest. Also as a n.; 1610, B. Jonson, The Alchemist, 'What a brave language here is? next to canting': † by 1710 or 1720. Ex cant, v.

canting academy, in B & L, is not a c. term but an S.E. description or classification.

canting crew, the. See canting.

canting lay, the. (Concerning criminals). 'It is wonderful how they get into the method of pious talk . . . Nor yet do I charge all the hardened offenders who . . . take to piety, or go on the "canting lay", as they call it, with utter hypocrisy': 1865, A Practical Hand, Convicts; ob.

canvas. See canvass.

Canuck, 'a French Canadian': s. not c. for any Canadian: a loose usage. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

canvas brassière. A synonym of camisole. Ersine, 1933.

canvass. 'The talk used by a racketeer in interesting, convincing and "selling" a prospective sucker,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; ibid., p. 147, applied to the 'spiel', the smart talk, of a racketeer operating a short-change swindle; 1933, Ersine (canvas); extant. Ex politics.

cap, n. He who, in a gang of three, 'caps' (or swears) to, or vouches for, the 'kid' (or pretended squire, young, rich and foolish), in reply to a question asked by the 'picker-up' in the hearing of the 'flat' (or dupe): 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected; † by 1830.—2. 'A false cover to a tossing coin': ca. 1830–90. H, 1874; B & L, 1889. In 1891, F & H state that it is †.—3. A capsule containing a drug: American addicts' and traffickers': since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942.

cap, v. 'Cap, c. to Swear. I'll Cap downright, c. I'll Swear home,' B.E. 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'To cap . . . to take one's oath'; app. † by 1830. Cf. bonnet, v., for the semantics.—2. Hence, 'to assist a man in cheating': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'The file kidded the joskin with sham books, and his pall capped; the deep one cheated the countryman with false cards, and his confederate assisted in the fraud'—but this was almost certainly anticipated by Humphrey Potter in his definition (Dict., 1797); 1812, J. H. Vaux; by 1859, current in America, esp. in cap in for (to assist)—Matsell's Vocabulum; 1887, Baumann; by 1900, † in Britain; 1933, Ersine; 1937 (see D.c.); extant in U.S.A. Perhaps ex the idea in S.E. cap, 'to doff one's cap to' (a person).—3. Hence, in U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, "'I will cap in with him"—I will appear to be his friend'; by 1900, it has disappeared in favour of, or perhaps merely merged with, sense 2.

cap bung! 'Hand it over; give it to me': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1910.

cap cop. A police captain: mostly convicts':

since the 1920's: 1935, Hargan; extant. Lit., a captain policeman.

cap one's lucky. To run away; esp. as imperative, cap your lucky!: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1882, James D. McCabe, New York; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1920. Cap = cop; cf. cut one's lucky, exactly synonymous.

cap (or cast) one's skin. To take off all one's clothes: ca. 1860–1930: 1889, B & L (former); 1891, F & H (both). Prob. cap is a disguising of cast; and the phrase is humorous.

caper. Esp. in cut capers, 'to lark, and run up and down, practised by young thieves in the streets, when people get hustled by the urchins and their doxies', Jon Bee, 1823; 1884, J. Greenwood; † by 1900. Ex the S.E. sense of the phrase.—2. A criminal idea, plan, act: U.S.A., mostly tramps': C. 20. Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926, 'We . . . decided you were entitled to an even cut. It was your caper, you located it. You had the nerve to propose what we first thought was a bughouse caper'; May 1928, The American Mercury (see quot'n at heat); 1928, R. J. Tasker; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; 1931, IA, 'Any "graft" or criminal enterprise'; 1933, Ersine; Aug. 5, 1933, Flynn's, Thomas Topham; 1935, David Lamson; 1936, Lee Duncan; 1938, Convict 2nd, 'When he goes out "on a caper" (to commit a crime)'; extant. A humorous euphemism; etymologically, cf. 'playing the goat'.

caper, flying. See flying caper.

caper cove. A dancing-master: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1910. I.e., a man that capers, or one who teaches capers.

caper sauce. See cut caper sauce and hearty choak (or choke), and also the first quot'n under yoxter. I.e., capering (dancing) at the end of a gallows rope.

caperdewsie, caperdochy. See cappadochio.

capers, cut. See caper, 1.

capital is short for capital saddle, q.v. at saddle.

capital, work. 'To commit an offence punishable with death' (F & H, 1891); app. ca. 1810–1900. F & H quote from C. Hindley's James Catnach, 1878, and the phrase occurs in The Young Prig, ca. 1819. Ex capital sentence, a death sentence.

capital straddle is incorrect for capital saddle. See saddle.

cappadochio, caperdochy, caperdewsie. Prison: ca. 1590–1690. Heywood, 1600 (the 2nd); W. S., The Puritan, 1607 (the 1st); Butler, 1663 (the 3rd). Nares classifies it as c. and remarks, 'The king of Cappadocia, says Horace, was rich in slaves, but had little money': he thinks the word is a corruption of Cappadocia. But I am not convinced that this is a c. term.

capped. 'Do you want to play with "capped" dice? Capping consists of attaching a strip of non-slip tripping material to certain sides of the dice so that certain numbers appear,' Frank Wrentmore in Flynn's, March 21, 1937: professional gamblers': C. 20.

capper. He who, in a gang working the illicit game and dodge called 'the old mob' (or pricking in the belt), keeps close to the sailor (technically, the 'leg cull') and supports him in his tricks to swindle the dupe: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; by 1859, current in U.S.A. in an extended sense.—2. 'An assistant in any cheating or in gambling', as implied in Matsell's Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 1859; ibid., 'A man who sets at the table and plays, but neither wins nor loses. He is there only for the purpose of swelling the number of the players, so that the game won't hurry through too quickly, thus giving the actual player proper time to consider the game and study the moves he should make': a professional gamblers' and card-sharpers' term, occurring earliest in The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.) of Dec. 6, 1845; 1891, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Go-between for gamblers or street fakirs' (fakers); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage—but, like sense 3, it was almost certainly s. by this time.—3. Also in U.S. gamblers' c., 'A man in the employ of the bank, who pretends to be playing against it, and winning large amounts. . . . Professional gamblers drop to cappers very quickly': Matsell, Vocabulum; 1879, Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences (three-card monte), '"Cappers", or those members of the gang who are used to persuade fools to bet upon the game'; 1881, The New York Slang Dict.; 1891, F & H; 1891, Darkness and Daylight, 'A "roper-in", "capper" or "steerer", whose vocation is to bring business to the gambling-houses'; Dec. 2, 1916, The Editor, which shows it to be, by this time, carnival and side-show s.; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom—but by 1920, if not earlier, it was also police s.—4. A flatterer: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; rather ob. He caps the other's stories; cf. yes-man.—5. (Cf. 3.) 'One who works as a come-on man for a con game,' Ersine: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920.

captain. A bully, whether in gambling den or in brothel: 1731, The Daily Journal, Jan. 9; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1890 (F & H). Cf. Captain Hackum.—2. Hence (ex the gaming connexion), money: 1748, Dyche, Dict., 5th ed., '"The Captain is not at home" . . . there is no money in my pocket'; app. † by 1830.—3. 'Head of a gang': 1809, G. Andrewes, app. † by 1890 in Great Britain; since ca. 1890, in U.S.A., 'the leader of a gang of yeggs' (Ersine, 1933).—4. 'Hobo salutation of the head man or big shot,' Stiff, 1931: U.S. tramps': late C. 19–20.—5. One who is free with his money: U.S. tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—6. A minor prison-official: U.S. convicts': since ca. 1920. Ersine. Ironic.

Captain Bates occurs in Been to see Captain Bates?, a c.p. directed at one who has recently been released from prison: late C. 19–20; by 1930, ob; by 1940, †. The phrase soon passed from c. to low s. Ware, 1909, notes that 'Captain Bates was a well-known metropolitan prison-governor'.

Captain Cook. A look: mostly Pacific Coast: ate C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Captain Crank, say B & L (1889), is old c. for a 'head of a gang of highwaymen': on 'what authority?

Captain Flashman. 'A blustering fellow, a crowd,' Sinks of London Laid Open, 1848: ca. 1840–70. In C. Hindley's The True History of Tom and Jerry, 1890, Captain Flashman—almost certainly an error—is defined as 'a blustering, bounceable fellow'.

Captain Hackum. 'A Fighting, Blustering Bully,' B.E. 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1830 at the latest. Matsell's Captain Heeman (? He-man) may be a genuine Americanism, but it is prob. an error. The term verges on low s., but it may, since B.E. classifies it as c., have been c.; Grose, however, holds it to be s. Prob. a pun on 'to hack'em'.

Captain Henry. A draft to another prison: convicts': since ca. 1930. Hargan, 1935; Sept. 18, 1937, Godfrey Irwin (letter). Suggested by synonymous showboat, q.v. 'Captain Henry's show boat is a popular radio number' (Godfrey Irwin, 1937).

Captain No Prig(g). 'A huffing impudent fellow, without a farthing'; 1797, Potter; † by 1860. Cf. prig, v.

Captain Queer-Nabs. 'A Fellow in poor Cloths' (clothes), 'or Shabby,' B.E., 1698—repeated by A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'Captain Queernabs, a shabby ill-dressed fellow'; 1809, G. Andrewes, 'A dirty fellow, without shoes'—repeated in Sinks of London, 1848; † by 1889. Queer = inferior; cf. nab, n., 3.

Captain Sharp. 'Captain-sharp, c. a great Cheat; also a Huffing, yet Sneaking, Cowardly Bully,' B.E., 1698—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'A cheating bully, or one in a set of gamblers, whose office it is to bully any pigeon, who suspecting roguery, refuses to pay what he has lost'; 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1850 or thereabouts. Lit., a captain or great sharper. There may, however, be a reference, as B.E. hints, to Captain Sharp, 'a noted English Buckaneer'.

Captain Tober. A highwayman: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'First rate of highwayman'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, 'Captain Toper. A smart highwayman'; † by 1890. Tober, a highway.

Captain Tom. 'Captain-Tom, a Leader of, and the Mob,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'A Leader of the Mob. Also the Mob itself'; so too Grose, 1785; app. † by 1830. Low s., on the verge of—but not achieving the status of—c.

captain's butts. Cigarette ends of a fair length: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant.

car-buzzer. A pickpocket specializing in robbing persons in railway-carriages and omnibuses: 1867 (see buzzer); ob.

car(-)catcher. A railroad brakeman: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

car toad. As 'a car inspector on a railroad': railroad s. As 'a mechanic attending to minor repairs in a circus or at a carnival': circus and carnival.s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

caravan. A person cheated; a dupe: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia; 1698, B.E., who makes it clear that the reference is to one who is defrauded of (a considerable sum of) money—see next sense; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; by 1889 (B & L), it was †. Caravans being a source of plunder.—2. 'A good round sum of Money about a Man,' i.e. carried by him on his person: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'A large sum of money'; 1809, G. Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); by 1889 (B & L), †. Cf. cargo; prob. ex. the rich merchandise carried by caravans.—3. A police van: Australian convicts': ca. 1830–70. Price Warung, Tales of the Old Regime, 1897, at p. 27.

carbolic dip. A medicated bath administered to newly arrived prisoners as a protection against lice: convicts': Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest, John Caldwell, 'Patter of the Prisons'; 1934, Rose, 'Bath in Coal Oil and Blue Ointment . . . the carbolic bath'; extant.

card, 'a humorist, a wag', is not American c., despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904.—2. 'A small portion of opium,' Leverage, 1925; extant. BVB, 1942, defines it as a postcard that has been split—to conceal a drug—and then resealed. Cf. synonymous deck.—3. See cards.

card-con(e)y-catching. Swindling: late C. 16. Greene (O.E.D.). Strictly, at or by means of playing-cards. See cony-catching.

Card-sharping terms present a peculiar feature—that of their being distinguishable into cant, slang, jargon; the boundaries are extremely difficult to draw. I have done my best to include all such card-sharping terms as seem to be—or, orig., to have been—c. The locus classicus of C. 19 terms is J. N. Maskelyne's Sharps and Flats, 1894.

carder. 'A professed gambler'; i.e., a professional player at cards, The Ladies Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848; † by 1937 (Irwin).

cardinal. See four-footed cardinal.

cardman. A hobo with an I.W.W. card: tramps': 1931, Stiff; extant.

cards. Fingerprints: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. The prints are taken on, or transferred to, cards, and filed away.

care-grinder. The treadmill: since ca. 1860: 1883, The Echo, Jan. 25; 1891, F & H; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; by 1930, ob; by 1945, merely historical. See vertical care-grinder.

cargo. 'A good round sum of Money about a Man,' i.e. carried by him on his person: 1698, B.E. (whose definition of caravan, 2, should be compared therewith); 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'We got a good Cargo from the Cull, i.e. We plunder'd him of a great Booty'; † by 1830. Cf. caravan, 2.—2. 'A load of illicit liquor': U.S.A.: 1920–33. Ersine.

carler. A clerk: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulary; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1910. Perhaps perverted telescoping of quill-driver.

carney, 'a carnival; a fair': fair-ground and circus s., not c.

carnish. 'Meat, from the Ital. carne, flesh; a Lingua Franca importation . . . North Country Cant': mid-C. 19–20: 1864, H, 3rd ed.: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob.

carnish ken. 'A thieves' eating-house; "cove of the carnish-ken", the keeper thereof': North Country: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. See preceding entry + ken.

caroon, 'a crown piece', is not c. but parlyaree (H, 1859). Either it is a foreigners' (esp. Italians') attempt—based on It. corona—at crown, or, less prob., an English—orig., foreigners' English—adaptation of It. corona, which is our English crown (coronet, etc.) in form though not in sense. Cf. madza caroon.

carpet. A prison sentence of six months, according to Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow, 1903, 'Your "Autoleyne" [or professional criminal] cares little about a "drag" (three months), a sixer (a "carpet", it is generally called), or a "stretch"'—but correctly it is a term of three months; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; 1931, Brown; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1933, George Ingram, Stir; by 1934 (Philip Allingham, Cheappack), pitchmen's s. Short for carpet bag, rhyming s. for drag, n., 6.

carpet(-)walker. A drug addict: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. He slouches and walks softly or furtively.

carrel. Jealous: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary; † by 1910. Possibly short for 'quarrelsome', the pronunciation being a further disguise.

carriage drag. Seven days' imprisonment: 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; extant. Contrast drag, n., 6.

carrier; gen. pl. 'Carriers, a Sett of Rogues, who are employ'd, to look out, and watch upon the Roads, at Inns, etc., in order to carry Information to their respective Gangs, of a Booty in Prospect,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1889 (B & L).—2. (App. always in pl.) John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, of shoplifters, 'They will open a Piece of Stuff and hold it up between the Owner and their Partner that sits down with her Petticoats half up, ready for the Word nap it; then she puts it between her Carriers (that is a Cant word for Thighs) and then gets up and lets her Cloaths drop, . . . and so walks off'; app. † by 1890. Thighs are of assistance in walking.—3. He who, in a gang of pickpockets, or she who, in a gang of shoplifters, walks away with the booty: U.S.A.: 1929 (see quot'n at passer); by ca. 1935, also British; 1942, Jack Henry, Famous Cases; extant. Short for carrier-away, i.e. remover.—4. A distributor, a transmitter, of narcotics: since ca. 1930. Jack Henry, Famous Cases, 1942, 'Shipments . . . conveyed by "carriers" to other distribution points'. Ex the medical sense of the word.

carrier pigeons; app. non-existent in the singular. 'This', says George Parker somewhat ungrammatically in A View of Society, 1781, 'is one of the most curious species of villainy that ever was put in practice . . . because it takes in'—involves—'the deepest set of scoundrels that ever robbed a generous Public;—I mean Lottery-Office Keepers. This is practised by three men and a woman,' one man, at the earliest possible moment, learning the second or the third number drawn at the Guildhall and passing it to a second (the pigeon), who hastens to the West End, where a third meets him and, with the card on which the number is inscribed, goes into a lottery office, where the woman accomplice (who has been in the office from before the time of the drawing) insures the ticket and calls later in the day to draw the prize; 1785, Grose; 'an obsolete trick,' says Pierce Egan in his ed. of Grose, 1823; 'nearly obsolete,' says H in 1859.

carriers. See carrier, 1 and 2.

carrots, cry; crying carrots. See cry carrots.

carry, v. 'To have money. "Abe's carry-ing"', Ersine: since ca. 1920.—2. Applied to a sufficiency of drugs to enable an addict to 'carry on': since ca. 1920. BVB.

carry a flag. See flag, carry a.

Carry All, the. The Chicago & Alton Railroad; tramps': since ca. 1910. IA, 1931.

carry boodle. See boodle, carry.

carry (someone) in one's heart. 'If the "sky blue" . . . considers that he has been framed by one of his previous cronies . . . he will "carry him in his heart" until he can "doen my kop se ding" (get his revenge),' The Cape Times, May 23, 1946: to remember vividly: South Africa: C. 20. A grim application of the S.E. sense, 'to remember fondly'.

carry iron. To go armed: since ca. 1920. Ersine.—2. To act as a gunman, or a bodyguard, for a gang-leader: since ca. 1922. Ersine.

carry stones appears only in S. Rowlands, Greenes Ghost Haunting Coniecatchers, 1592: 'Leaving an Alewife in the lurch, is termed making her carrie stones, which stones be those great Des in chalke that stand behind the doore'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, in form carrying stones. The D. represents debet (he owes) or debitum est (there is owed—so much).

carry the balloon; usually as carrying . . . To travel with one's bedding, and often with one's cooking utensils and spare clothing: tramps' (since ca. 1905): 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict; extant. See balloon.—2. Hence, (of migratory workers) to seek employment: tramps': 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, labour s.

carry the banner. Beggars' and tramps', as in 'He "carried the banner", i.e., was in the habit of sleeping out of doors at night,' Darkness and Daylight, 1891; 1903, Owen Kildare, My Mamie Rose; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Carrying the banner. Walking the streets'; 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1913, Edwin A. Brown, Broke; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, A Vocabulary of Criminal Slang; 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1926, Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows (English also by this time); by 1930, at latest, it was s. Perhaps ex American printers' s., where the phrase means that 'the ensign-bearer is living without work, upon his wits' (Allan Pinkerton, Strikers, Communists, Tramps and Detectives, 1878).

carry the cag (or keg). See cag, carry the.

carry the cosh; usually as vbl n. 'Carrying the cosh. Living on and touting for prostitutes,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941: since the 1920's. To be a bully.

carry the hod is app. a variant, not of carry the stick but of carry the banner: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, "'If you are going to carry the hod," he said, "you might as well go to the pipe-house, and let them cure you"' ; ob. Ex brick-laying.

carry the stick. To effect the theft practised by a tripper-up, q.v.: Scottish: Sept. 21, 1870 (cited by F & H); ob.

carry the swag. To remove the booty, stolen property, as one's role in a robbery: 1856, James Bonwick, The Bushrangers (Australia), 'It was usual for them to select a person to carry the swag, and then dismiss him after making him drunk'; by 1900, low s. See swag, n., 3.

carry too much weight; usually vbl n., carrying . . ., taking—stealing—money: May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. Too much for one's own safety.

carrying a (or the) flag. 'Travelling under an assumed name or with an alias,' Godfrey Irwin (. . . a . . .), 1931: tramps': since ca. 1920: 1934, M. H. Weseen; 1934, Convict; et al. 'In railroad parlance, a train or engine is carrying a flag when signals are displayed to indicate that the train is not on schedule, or that it is travelling in sections and therefore not merely as it appears' (Irwin).

carrying stones. See carry stones.

carrying the balloon. See carry . . .

carrying the banner is the vbl n. of carry the banner.

carrying the flag. See carrying a flag.

carrying the mail. (Of a person) in a hurry: tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Like a mail train: travelling at speed (Irwin).

carrying the stick. See carry the stick.

carser; carsey, carsy. 'The term "carser", for a gentleman's house (Italian casa), has been borrowed from the organ boys': 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London, p. 6; by 1900, † in this specific sense.—2. Hence, any house: 1859, H (casa); current also in New York (Matsell, 1859: casa and casse); by 1889 (B & L), costermongers' and theatrical s.; in 1909, Ware classifies it as low London s.; in C. 20, also low Australian s.—Baker, 1942.—3. A water-closet; 1938, Mark Benney, The Scapegoat Dances, 'An inspiring document to find in a carsey'; extant. Ex sense 2, via 'little house', euphemistic for 'privy'.

cart. To convict (a person) of a crime: 1773, Anon., The Bow-Street Opera, 'He drinks confidently . . . He shall therefore be carted'; or, according to B & L, to whip at the cart's tail, or to hang after taking to the place of execution in a cart. Obsolete by 1889—if not, indeed, by 1840.

cart, cut one's. See cut one's cart.

cart of togs. Matsell's error for cant of togs.

cart-wheel. A five-shilling piece: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1864 (witness H, 3rd ed.), it was low s. In C. 20 U.S.A., it = a silver dollar (Ersine, 1933): low s. rather than c. Ex the largeness of the silver coin.—2. 'When the addict gets in jail and wants to get a shot from the jailer he pulls an imitation fit which he calls a figure eight, whing-ding or cartwheel,' Convict, 1934: U.S. drug addicts': since ca. 1925.

The vbl phrase is turn a cart-wheel: BVB, 1942.

carve. See carve up, v.—2. To slash (someone) with a razor: C. 20; by ca. 1930, also low—esp. Cockney—s. Partridge, 1938. Picturesquerie.

carve-up. A piece of swindling: American (since ca. 1920) >, ca. 1930, British: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'There probably would be a carve-up . . . when it came to sharing out the dough [the proceeds from a burglary]. Sealey was certainly the sort of man to stick to more than his fair share'; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; 1943, Richard Llewellyn, None but the Lonely Heart, "'How much can we make a week?" . . . "Depends on the carve up," Slush says,' where it = division of loot; extant. Imm. ex:— carve up, v.; also carve. To swindle a confederate out of (part of) his share, of loot—as in Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933, and in James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936, "'No carving-up or else . . ." He paused significantly', and ibid., 'Sure we'll divvy up here. What's up with you? Think I'm going to carve you up?' and ibid., 'I've never caught you doing any carving'; or of prison rations—as in Richmond Harvey, Prison from Within, 1936, 'If a man feels that he is being "carved up", as they say in the scrubs, there is generally trouble'; 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer, 'To carve meant to steal another man's share'; 1943, Black, 'Carve: to betray, to "double-cross"'; extant.

carvel. Jealous: ca. 1870–1900. B & L, 1889. Origin obscure; Halliwell provides a barely possible explanation when he notes that one old sense of the noun carvel is 'a prostitute'; cf. carrel.

carver and gilder. A match-maker (lit.): 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields; 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1891 (F & H), it was low s. Carver because he shapes the match-sticks; gilder because he tips them with an ignitory substance.

carving, carving-up. See carve up, v.

casa; caser. See carser. In H, 1859, there is the inaccurate variant cassa: not in the C's, but at suck-cassa (a public-house).

case, n. A house or building: 1536, Copland, 'The darkman case'; 1552, Gilbert Walker, Diceplay; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'In the Darkman Case'—in a canting song lifted bodily from Copland; 1698, B.E.; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732; 1785, Grose, 'Tout that case; mark or observe that house'; 1839, Brandon; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; in C. 20, also Canadian (anon. letter of June 9, 1946). Ex the It. casa, a house.—2. Hence, a shop: 1698, B.E.; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator (see quot'n at crop, n., 1); 1725, A Canting Dict., 'A . . . Shop, or Ware-house',—so too in Grose, 1785; † by 1860.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) A brothel: 1698, B.E.; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1743, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account; 1787, Sessions Papers; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1821, J. Burrowes; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1931, Brown; 1932, G. Scott-Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1935, The Garda Review; 1936, Mark Benny, Low Company; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; 1942, Arthur Gardner, Lower Underworld; 1943, Black; extant. Cf. Dutch mott-kast, 'brothel'.—4. (Prob. ex senses 1 and 3.) 'A House used by Thieves', C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718; † by 1820.—5. 'A bad crown piece': 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H.; 1860, H., 'Caser is the Hebrew word for a crown'; 1891, F & H; 1909, Ware; extant, though slightly ob. Ex its size; or, more prob., ex the Hebrew.—6. Hence, a dollar (good or bad); U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1865, The National Police Gazette, Oct. 7; 1871, State Prison Life; 1891, F & H; 1891, James Maitland; 1893, Confessions of a Convict; Dec. 11, 1926, Flynn's; 1927, Kane, 'A silver dollar'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (do.); 1933, Ersine; extant.—7. A water-closet: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; ob. Ex sense 1; imm., short for crapping case (see c. casa).—8. A cash-box: 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (glossary); ob.—9. A gambling-den: U.S.A.: 1891 (implied in case-keeper); ob.—largely supplanted by joint. Ex sense 1.—10. A look-over, survey, examination, esp. by a thief of a house he or his gang intends to burgle: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, "'Give it a case"''; 1931, Irwin; extant. Ex case, v., 2.—11. A fool, simpleton, 'mug': race-course gangs': C. 20. In, e.g., Edgar Wallace, The Twister, 1928. Prob. ex s. case as in 'He's a case'—he's in love, infatuated (and hardly conscious of mundane matters).—12. (Cf. sense 8.) A safe: Canadian: C. 20. Anon. letter, June 9, 1946.

case, v. To confine (a prisoner) 'to cell with all furniture taken out and fed on bread and water,' F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol, 1909; 1925, Rev. Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, "'Cased" (which means punished) with three days bread and water'; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1929, 'Warden', His Majesty's Guests; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades; 1933, George Ingram, Stir; 1936, Richmond Harvey, Prison from Within; 1937, Charles Prior; 1938, H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks; by 1939, gen. prison s. To put into a case, box, cell.—2. To observe, watch, survey, scrutinize—with a view to robbing or burgling; to reconnoitre (a place, building, etc.): U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, "'Has it [a building] been cased?" "Casing a mark without getting a rank" is the most difficult part of a robbery'; 1929, The Saturday Evening Post; June 21, 1930, Flynn's; July 5, 1930, Liberty; Jan. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, E. D. Sullivan; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; 1933, Eagle; 1934, David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live (British), 'We cased a job, and it looks good'; 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'I can case a lay without [arousing] suspicion'; 1937, David Hume, Cemetery First Stop!; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 'You've got to case a jug [a bank]'; 1938, J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding, 'When Ma "cased a joint" nothing was left unnoted'; 1940, David Hume, Eternity, Here I Come!; 1943, Black, 'Case a Joint: to examine premises before breaking in'; 1945, David Hume, They Never Come Back; extant. Ex senses 1, 2 of the n.—3. (Ex sense 1.) To put into prison: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob.—4. To shoot (a person) from ambush: U.S.A.: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; ob. Cf. sense 2 of the v. and sense 1 of the n.—5. (Ex sense 2 and often merging with it.) 'Laying out the route of escape before consummating a robbery comes under casing,' Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld' in The American Mercury, May 1928; 1931, Irwin; extant.—6. To delay inevitably or disastrously or, at the least, most inconveniently; to spoil: since ca. 1925. James Spenser, Limey Breaks In, 1934, 'Well, this cases things for a while, We'll have to lie low.' To put into bad case (in a bad way, to endanger).—7. See cased up.

case, crack a. See crack a case.

case, go. To live together as if married: 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night; extant. Cf. cased up.

case, heave a. See heave.

case, work (someone's). To attack (him): South Africa: C. 20. Letter of May 23, 1946, from C. P. Wittstock. Prob., to work on someone's soul-case (body).

case(-)dough. 'A very limited amount of money. "Aw shamus, have a heart! I'm down to case-dough"''; Burke, 1930; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. Cf. case, n., 6.

case(-)fro. See case vrow.

case-keeper. A proprietor or manager of a gambling-den: 1891, Darkness and Daylight; extant. See case, n., 3.

case money. One's last dollar: Sept. 6, 1930, Liberty; by 1933, low s.—cf. cases, q.v. An elaboration of case, n., 6.

case note. A one-dollar note: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'You just parked the century case note at th' go-between . . . and you was set'; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'A dollar bill'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; 1935, Hargan; extant. See case, n., 6.

case pad. Anon., The Catterpillars of this Nation Anatomized, 1659, 'The Case-Pad or Knight of the Road,' i.e. a highwayman; † by 1730. Ex pad, n., 1; but why case?

case-ranging. Inspection of houses or flats with a view to burglary : since ca. 1910. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. See case, n., 1.

case vrow ; case fro. 'A Case fro, c. a Whore that Plies in a Bawdy-house,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (. . . vrow); 1785, Grose, 'A case vrow, a prostitute attached to a particular bawdy house'; † by 1891 (F & H). See case, n., 3—and froe.

cased up (with), be. (Of a woman) to be kept by a man; (of a man) to be living with—or merely sleeping with—a woman : since ca. 1920. James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936, 'I said as she was cased up with a bloke . . . She's got a bloke, a regular customer . . . who pays the rent and floats in . . . occasionally'; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 'Cased up with some right judy'; extant. Cf. case, n., 1 and 3.

caseo (disyllabic) or caso(h). A flat or apartment; a house : 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 'Caso—to go = to seek a prostitute'; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'He had seen some caseos in his time but this was just about the flashest'; 1939, J. Curtis, What Immortal Hand, 'We went casoh together' (lived together, cohabited); extant. I.e., case, n., 1, 3 + the o suffix so common in s.

caser. See casa.—2. A five-shilling piece; the value of five shillings; in C. 20 U.S.A., one dollar : since ca. 1820 or 1830 : 1849, Alex. Harris, The Emigrant Family; 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct., 'One morning I found I did not have more than a caser (5/-) for stock-pieces (stock-money)'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ca. 1912, George Bronson-Howard, The Snob (U.S.A.): 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man ('half a caser', a half-dollar); 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; by 1925, if not by 1920, race-course s. in Britain; 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube. See case, n., 5, reference of 1860.—3. One who 'cases a joint': U.S.A. : since ca. 1920. In, e.g., J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding, 1938 (quot'n at locator). Ex case, v., 2.

cases; esp. in be down to cases, at one's last dollar : low s., not c. See case, n., 6.—2. Shoes or boots : tramps' : May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. They encase the feet.

Casey. Kansas City, Montana; tramps' : late C. 19–20 : 1931, Godfrey Irwin; et al. A folk-etymologizing of the abbreviation, K.C.—2. The Kansas City Southern Railroad : tramps' : C. 20 : 1931, Irwin; et al.

casey. Cheese : 1891, F & H; † by 1940. Prob. a diminutive of :— cash. Cheese : 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (the variant cass); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by 1859, current in U.S. as cass (Matsell); 1889, B & L (cass); 1891, F & H, who give cash and cass, and state that the latter is mostly American; extant in both countries, though ob. in the U.S.A. A shortening of cassam or cassan.

cash-carrier. A 'man living on prostitutes'; i.e., a whore's bully : 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob.

cash in, 'to die': s. (ex card-players), not c.

cash-peter. 'There was a cash-peter left behind—that means a cash-box,' Sessions Papers, April 1863 (p. 786); † by 1920. Cf. peter, n., 2 and 4.

casher, in. In one's cash pocket or fob : 1931, Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Book; extant. By 'the Oxford -er'?

casing, vbl n. 'Laying out the route of escape before consummating a robbery comes under casing Following a pay-roll car, watching a jewelry store, tailing (not trailing, so often used erroneously) a jewelry salesman, or a mail-truck : all these activities come under the heading of casing "Casing a mark without getting a rank" is the most difficult part of a robbery,' Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld' in The American Mercury, May 1928; extant. See case, v., 2.

caso, casoh. See caseo.

cass. See cash and cassam.

cassa. See casa.

cassam. Cheese. A variant of the next. E.g., in Sinks of London Laid Open (1848), where there is the strange misprint, causau; and in H, 1859; by 1910, ob.; by 1945, †. Actually this is etymologically more correct than cassan; but that learned underworld which coined cassan deliberately (or so I surmise) perverted the L. original (caseus, accusative caseum) by giving the term an -n instead of an -m ending. Cf. cash. cassan. Cheese : 1566, Harman; ca. 1635 (see casum); 1641, R. Brome, A Joviall Crew, 'Here's Ruffpeck and Casson'; in 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, has cassan in the glossary, cosan in the remarks introductory thereto; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, where it is misprinted causum; 1781, Grose, who (after B.E.) misprints it caffan; 1809, George Andrewes; 1889, B & L; † by 1945. Ex L. caseus, prob. via Lingua Franca. (See preceding entry.)

casse. See carser, 2.

cassem is a variant (Potter, 1797) of cassan.

cast, in its legal sense, is not c. but j. B.E. was misled by an association of ideas when, in 1698, he wrote, 'He is Cast for Felon and Dose, c. found guilty of Felony and Burglary'.

cast one's skin. See cap one's skin.

castell. See castle.

caster. A cloak : 1566, Harman, 'Casters and Togemans' (cloaks and coats); 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'Caster, a Cloake'; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, misprints 'cloak' as 'clocke',—obviously he did not intend 'clock'; 1612, Dekker, O per se O. 'Wearing a patched Castor (a Cloake)'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1785, Grose; 1809, The Rambler's Magazine; by 1859, current in New York, if (as is uncertain) we are to accept the evidence of Matsell's Vocabulary; by 1860, † in Britain. Perhaps ex the ease with which one dons and doffs a cloak.—2. An incorrect spelling of castor, q.v.—3. A coiner of counterfeit money : 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'The clipper turns caster, and goes for the nine' (assumes an air of importance); † by 1900. Ex S.E. caster, a founder.

Castieau's Hotel. The Melbourne jail : Australian : 1889, B & L, 'So called from Mr. J. B. Castieau, the governor of the Melbourne jail'; 1891, F & H, who give it in the form Castieu; † by 1910.

castle, n. A house; esp. a house that a tramp calls at, in the hope of a free meal : tramps' : 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp (p. 291); extant—but rare. Humorous.

castle, v. 'To Castell, to see or looke,' Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610; † by 1730. Perhaps as from the vantage-point of a castle.

Castle, the. "I just came out of Holloway [the London prison for women] this morning."—"Out of the Castle, eh?" James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936,—but current throughout C. 20; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too. "Holloway Castle" as the bus conductors call it, was built, for reasons best known to the architect, to look from the outside like Warwick Castle. It has a high wall, an imposing gateway with armorial bearings; and beyond it one can see the massive structure of the prison itself, Cicely McCall, They Always Come Back, 1938.

castor, for any masculine hat, is loose; but, despite the fact that the term was current in the underworld, it was never c., except perhaps in C. 20 South Africa in form caster (J. B. Fisher, letter May 22, 1946).—2. Castor is an occ. C. 17 variant of caster.

casum is a variant of cassan. Anon., The Beggar Boy of the North, ca. 1635, 'Maund for Loure, Casum and pannum'.

cat, a common prostitute (not a fashionable courtesan), is s., not c. Nor—pace Ware—is cat, '(any) woman', a c. term. Perhaps ex Fr. catin or Dutch kat.—2. A lady's muff: 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1857, Snowden; by 1859, current in U.S.A. (Matsell's Vocabulum); 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; in U.S.A., C. 20, it = a fur, and is mostly used in the plural (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 27, 1937).—3. A quart pot: 1812 (see cat and kitten sneaking); 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'A quart pot is a cat, and pints and half pints are kittens'; by 1859, used in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; app. † by 1910. It merges with cats.—4. A (young) tramp new to the road: U.S.A., mostly tramps: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, "I'll go to the farmhouse," I volunteered, "and buy something." "Nix, nix," said one; "buy nothin'," said the other, "it's you kind of cats that make it tough on us, buyin' chuck. They begin to expect money"; ibid., see quot'n at catting up; extant. Short for gay cat (sense 1) and merging with sense 5.—5. Hence, as in 'Cats are itinerant workers, the fringe of the hobo, bum, and yegg outfits, who beat their way on freight trains,' Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld', The American Mercury, May 1928; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, extant. Perhaps 'since he slinks about like a homeless cat' (Irwin).—6. As 'eat burglar', it is police s., not c. (J. K. Ferrier, Crooks and Crime, 1928).—7. An informer: U.S. convicts: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; Jan. 21, 1933, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627; April 21, 1934, Flynn's; Oct. 17, 1936, Flynn's; March 19, 1938, Flynn's; extant. By a pun on the synonymous rat.—8. Among American bank-robbers, since ca. 1925, it has borne the sense conveyed in 'The job is to pick out the cat, the unused roads which will lead you in a straight line, but keep you away from cities and away from the main highway, for at least a hundred miles from the robbery,' Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937. Cats move quietly and self-reliantly: on such roads, a bank robber can do the same.

cat, flying. See flying cat.

cat, free a. See free.

cat and kitten hunter. One who purloins 'pewter quart and pint pots from the top of area railings': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 26; ob. by 1900, † by 1930. See cat, 3, and kitten.

cat and kitten hunting ('Ducange Anglieus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857) is an occ. variant of:—

cat and kitten sneaking; cat and kitten rig. 'The petty game of stealing pewter quart and pint pots from public-houses': 1812, J. H. Vaux (the latter); 1823, Egan's Grose (id.) 1857, Augustus Mayhew (the former); 1859, H (the former); by 1900, ob.; by 1930, †. Cf. cat and kitten hunter, q.v.

cat and kittens. Large and small pewter pots: mostly in combination. See the preceding trio of entries.

cat and mouse, 'a house', was orig. (ca. 1850–70) c.; as gen. rhyming s., it did not survive the C. 19. H, 1859; Matsell, 1859 (U.S.A.).

cat bandit. A purse-snatcher: since ca. 1925. Ersine.

cat caper. See fink caper.

cat crook. 'A cat crook,' he said, 'was a lousy crook, a ham and egg guy, a phony,' Jack Callahan, 'To Hell and Back'—Flynn's, Jan. 13, 1934; extant.

cat(-)cuff. A bluff: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

cat hop(p). 'Cat Hopp. Is where there is one turn left in the box of the same denomination. For instance, two jacks and a five; or three cards in the box, and two of a similar count': gamblers': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; ob. A short jump.

cat house. A brothel: mainly tramps': C. 20: 1931, Stiff; 1931, IA; 1935, Hargan; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Feb. 1), it was low s. See cat, 1.

cat(-)house cutie. A brothel prostitute: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. Cf. prec. entry; s. cutie = girl.

cat match. 'Catmatch, c. When a Rook is Engag'd amongst bad Bowlers' (at the game of bowls), B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1850. A cat-and-mouse game.

cat on testy dodge. 'A ladylike beggar worrying ladies at their houses for money—if only for a sixpence (tester)', Ware, 1909: beggars': ca. 1870–1914. Cf. cat, n., 1.

cat-sneaking, recorded by Ware, 1909, is a shortening of cat and kitten sneaking.

cat-up, v. See catting-up.—2. Hence, any hold-up at the point of a gun, esp. of a revolver: since ca. 1920. Convict, 1934; extant.—3. To rob by stealth: since ca. 1925. Ersine.

cat-up man. A man engaged, whether habitually or as it so happens, in catting-up, q.v.: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; extant.

cat wagon. 'A brothel on wheels visiting the chaste villages of the middle west or following the harvest crews,' Stiff, 1931: mainly tramps': since ca. 1918: 1931, IA; extant. Cf. cat house and see cat, 1.

catch cocks. To obtain money on false pretences: military c. of ca. 1880–1930. Ware, 1909, notes that the vbl n. is cock-catching. Origin obscure, despite the obviousness of catch; cocks, however, may be merely a ribald synonym for 'men'.

catch the zig. To get oneself swindled, to 'buy a pup': race-course gangs': since ca. 1920. 'John Morris' (George Baker) in The Cornhill Magazine, of June 1933. Here, zig is a fanciful coinage.

catch up is synonymous with caught up, be. BVB, 1942.

catcher. He to whom the 'feeler' (q.v.) gives the necessary information about a prospective victim of a banco swindle and who persuades that victim to go to a gambling den: 1881, The Man Traps of New York, pp. 10-11; † by 1920.

catching harvest. B.E.'s definition (showery, unsettled weather) is not c. and may be an error; but A New Canting Dict.'s (1725) is highwaymen's c., for, after repeating B.E.'s definition, the compiler continues, 'In a Canting sense, a precarious time for Robbery; when many People are not upon the Road, by means of any adjacent Fair, Horse-race, &c.'—a sense valid (witness Egan's Groser) until ca. 1840. By a pun: the harvest expected by the highwaymen leads to the capture of the malefactors.

cater, n. See quater.

cater, v. To prepare—to cook—opium: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. chef, v.

caterpillar has occ. been classified as c. because of its sense ('parasite') and, esp., because of constant association with the underworld; the erroneous classification is further understandable when we recall that many of the C. 16-17 references are contained in underworld writings. E.g., Harman speaks of Freshwater Mariners as 'these kynde of Caterpillars', and in 1659 there appeared an, at the time, famous pamphlet entitled The Catterpillars of this Nation Anatomized.

catever; kertever. Bad or inferior; hence 'shady': not c., but parlyaree: since ca. 1850. H, 1859. Ex It. cattivo, bad.

catever (or kertever) cartzo, 'syphilis': not c. but parlyarec. H, 1859. The second element represents It. cazzo.

Catherine Hayes. (Long) days: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

catholic. 'A pickpocket. "Work? Hell no, me broad's a catholic"', Burke, 1930; 1938, Castle; extant. I.e., catholic in one's tastes as they affect the property of others.

catmatch. See cat match.

cats. 'Furs or pelts, especially stolen goods,' IA, 1931: C. 20: Sept. 27, 1937 (see cat, 2). Ex cat, 2.

cats and kitties. Nipples: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on low-s. titties; cf. brace and bits.

cat's eyes. Tapioca pudding: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. A deliberate c. variation of synonymous s. fish-eyes.

cat's meat. Lungs: 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, 'You must let him have all the jaw-work to himself, and give a holiday to your cat's meat'; by 1860, low s. Ex lungs as a favourite food of cats.—2. Hence, 'the constitution, the body': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open: either always or, more prob., by 1860 it was low s.—3. 'Odd pieces of meat that are collected by tramps,' John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939: tramps': since the 1920's. Such pieces as a butcher would sell as cat's meat.

cat's meat shop. An eating-house: 1848, Sinks of London; by 1860, low s. Ex cat's meat, 2.

cat's milk. Silk goods: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. Ex 'as smooth as milk, as velvety as cream'.

catted up. See catting up.

catter. A crowbar: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1900. Why?—2. A tramp or hobo riding the 'blinds' or on the back of the engine tender: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. He needs the agility of a cat, or its watchfulness, to hang on—or to avoid discovery.

catting up; catted up. 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'Others . . . fell into the yeggs' clutches and got "catted up". Honest workers were called blanket stiffes or gay cats, and the process of pistoling them away from their money was known as catting them up. Train crews flourished by carrying the gay cats over their divisions in the box cars at a dollar each. Bands of yeggs worked with the brakemen, who let them into the cars, where they stuck up the cats, took their money, and forced them to jump out the side doors between stations'; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, M. H. Wesen; extant. Ex cat, 4.

cattle. Whores: 1698, B.E., 'Cattle, Whores. Sad Cattle, Impudent Lewd Women.' B.E. does not classify it as c., but Grose (sad cattle) docs. Whether c. or s., it was current ca. 1690-1840. There is perhaps a punning allusion to the s. terms, cat, a whore, and catting, whoremongering; prob. another on cattle as beasts of burden.—2. Hence, girls or women purchased from procurers for service as prostitutes: U.S.A.: late C. 19-20. Chas B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909.

cattle, black. See black cattle.

cattle, sad. See cattle.

cattle stiff. A cowboy; a cattle-driver: tramps': 1909 (but with reference to late 1890's), W. H. Davies, Beggars; 1910, H. A. Frank, A Vagabond Journey around the World; by 1915, s. See stiff, n., 14.

caught going down to second. Caught stealing: May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. Ex baseball: second base.

caught in a snow-storm. Drugged with cocaine: 1930, Burke, 'the broad gets caught in a snow-storm an' goes meshuga'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. Cf. sleigh ride and snow (cocaine).

caught up, be. Synonymous with away from the habit, be. BVB, 1942.

caught with a biscuit. See biscuit, catch with a cauk is a misprint for cank. The 1735 ed. of The Triumph of Wit.

caune or cauney; gen. pl. A fowl: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Caunes and Bucket-chats, that is, Sheep and Fowl'; † by 1830. This is the Cockney pronunciation of It. carne, flesh, and the term was suggested by the juxtaposition in the old proverb, neither (fish,) flesh, fowl, nor good red herring.

cauney-prigging. Fowl-stealing; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Pike a Cauney Prigging; go a Fowl-stealing'; † by 1830. See prec.

causau; causum. See cassam, ref. of 1848, and cassan at 1741.

cavan-hunter. 'A gossip; an inquisitive person,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; ob. Is there some obscure reference to the town, or the province, of Cavan in Ulster? More prob. to caven (or cavin or, esp., cavings), 'refuse of hay or straw': cf. sift the wheat from the straw.

cavaulting. Sexual intercourse, esp. in cavaulting school; by 1864, (witness H, 3rd ed.: 'A vulgar phrase'), it was low s. 'Equivalent to "horsing" (which is low s.). The Italian cavallino, signifies a rake or debaucher.—Lingua Franca, cavolta' (H, 3rd ed.).

cavaulting school. A bawdy house, a brothel: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; by 1864, low s. Ex the preceding; cf. vaulting school.

cave, which, in Middleton & Dekker's The Roaring Girl, 1611, occurs twice in the one speech ('No, but a ben cave, a brave cave, a gentry cuffin') for cove, is clearly a misprint.—2. A prison cell: U.S.A., mostly convicts': 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, John Caldwell in The Writer's Digest; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex its darkness and its chilliness.—3. A room or apartment, esp. if used as a 'hide-out': U.S.A.: June 7, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; June 21, 1930, Flynn's, Givens, 'Hustling pool caves and dance halls'; 1934, Rose, 'Hiding Place'; extant. Pejorative.

cave, v.i. To give in; to surrender, esp. to the police; to admit a crime: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary; 1929–31, Kernôt. Ex the coll. cave in.

cave-in. To yield; to confess: never c., despite the classification in Geo. P. Burnham's Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872.

caz. 'Caz, cheese; As good as caz, is a phrase signifying that any projected fraud or robbery may be easily and certainly accomplished; any person who is the object of such attempt, and is known to be an easy dupe, is declared to be as good as caz, meaning that success is certain': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose (plagiarizing Vaux); ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack; 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. A shortening of cassan.—2. Hence, an easy dupe; mid-C. 19–20; very ob. B & L, 1889.

Cecil. 'Cocaine is C or Cecil,' Convict, 1934: drug addicts': since ca. 1925: 1933, Ersine, who defines it as morphine; 1938, Castle. Code-euphemistic.—2. Thus, derivatively: morphine: 1942, BVB.

cedar. A pencil: convicts': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1940, Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 'A "chip o' cedar", i.e. a tiny stump of pencil, was a treasured possession in the early days of my sentence'. Many lead-pencils are, or were, made from cedar-wood.

cee. A convict: convicts': 1904, Anon., Pentonville Prison from Within (p. 26); app. † by 1930.—2. A variant of C, 2—i.e., 100 dollars: U.S.A.: May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant.—3. Variant of C, 1—i.e., cocaine: U.S.A.: 1942, BVB.

cell, n. '[A Shoplifter] wears a loose "swinger" (jacket) with very convenient "cells", or pockets, inside': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; ob. As dark as a solitary-confinement cell.

cell, v. To share a prison cell (with another prisoner): 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, Flynt, The Rise of Roderick Cloud, "'I celled for a couple o' years with old Darbsey—he was doin' life"''; by 1930, coll. Both The O.E.D. and Webster remark of the sense 'to live in a cell' that it is both † and rare.

cement is synonymous with goods, 4: drug traffickers': since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. Merely a 'disguise' word.

cement water, 'bad whiskey': low s. rather than c. Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936.

Centre, the. 'The confraternity of White Slave Traffickers,' A. Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928; in Fr., le Milieu, as in Jean Lacassagne, L'Argot du 'Milieu' (2nd ed., 1935). On the border-line between j. and c., this term hardly antedates the C. 20.

centre lead (pron. led). Forehead: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

century. One hundred dollars: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, "'I fenced the swag for half a century"', . . . fifty dollars' (the quot'n being at buzzing); 1871, State Prison Life; 1880, H. G. Crickmore, Dictionary of Racing Terms, the word being, by this date, racing s. Obviously because a century = 100.—2. Hence, one hundred pounds: British: 1879, implied in half-century, q.v.; ibid., 'A century of quids'; Sept. 1884, Sessions Papers; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; by 1930, low s.

century-grand. One hundred thousand dollars: 1925, Leverage; extant. See the elements.

cert. A forged certified check: forgers': since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941.

certain rest. 'A village . . . A wild province, silence, certain rest,' C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 320), 1889; prob. current only ca. 1870–1900. Semantically to be compared with silence, 2.

certificate, Jack Ketch's. A sound flogging: 1823, Jon Bee; † by 1900. 'Given under his hand': Jack Ketch being generic for a hangman; it was the hangman who administered official floggings.

chafe. To beat, thrash, strike violently: 1676, Coles, 'Chaft, c. beaten, bang'd'; 1698, B.E., 'Chaft, c. well beaten or bang'd'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Chafed, well beaten', but as he does not classify it as c., the term had, ca. 1750 or 1760, > s. By jocularly ex the S.E. sense, to rub, to abrade.

chafe-litter. See No. 5 in the entry at Awdeley's. The term may have become † as early as 1600; it had certainly become † some years before 1698.

chafed or chaft. See chafe.

chafer. A treadmill: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary; † by 1910. Ex cockchafer.

chaff, 'to deceive or "gammon" (a person)', may have, ca. 1860–80, been c. in U.S.A.; but I doubt it. Classified as c. by Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs, 1872.

chaff-cutter. 'A knowing person, one whose tongue is of great use to him, in order to silence an antagonist, whether right or wrong': 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. A pun on chaff, banter.

chaffer, 'the tongue' or 'the mouth': low s., not c. chaffing-crib, 'a conversation room', is fast-life s. of ca. 1818–50. Pierce Egan, passim.

chai. See chie.

chain gang. Jewellers; watch-chain makers: 1891, F & H; slightly ob. With a grim pun.

chain man. A pickpocket, or an ordinary thief, specializing in watches: since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. prec.

chair and cross; Charing Cross. A horse: mostly Pacific Coast: resp. C. 20 and late C. 19–20.

M & B, 1944. The former is either a corruption or, less prob., a deliberate variation of the latter, which was adopted ex Cockney rhyming s.

chair on, put the. To sentence (a person) to electrocution: 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece; ob. Cf. hot seat and hot squat.

chal; chai or chi(e). Chal is Romany for 'a man' (hence, 'a sweetheart' or 'a lover'); chai or chie, for 'a woman' (hence, 'a sweetheart' or 'a mistress'). Never adopted by the criminal underworld, but occasionally used by tramps and showmen. Sampson notes that the origin of the Romany word 'has never been satisfactorily explained' but thinks that it is a by-form of Romany chavo (see chavvy).

chal droch, 'a knife', is tinkers' s. (? Shelta): 1889, B & L.

chalk, n. Milk: convicts': 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest; 1934, Rose; extant. One of many derogatory convict words for prison food and drink.

chalk, v. (The sense 'to slash'—cf. chalker—is, despite F & H, not c.) 'To chalk him off. To observe a person attentively so as to remember him': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1859, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulum; 1887, Baumann; app. † by 1900. Perhaps to chalk up a mark or score against a person.—2. To report (a prisoner); to lock (him) in a dark cell: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; extant. Cf. square chalk; and see chalked, which may supply the immediate origin.

chalk boulders. Shoulders: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

Chalk Farm, 'an arm', was orig. (ca. 1850–70) c.; by 1880, it was gen. rhyming, after being low rhyming s. 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857; app. current in New York by 1859 (Matsell's Vocabulum). In the U.S.A. it has remained c. and in late C. 19–20 it is confined to the Pacific Coast—witness Chicago May, 1928, and Convict 2nd, 1938.

chalk-in, n. A report against a prisoner; his ensuing punishment: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex:—

chalk in, v. See chalked, ref. of 1935. Implied in the n.

chalk-in victim. 'A prisoner who is frequently reported,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex chalk-in. Contrast chalker, 2.

chalked. 'Detained in [prison] cell with a chalk-mark on the door,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, 'Chalked. [With a] chalk mark placed on cell door as promise of punishment'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Detained by the police, often with no definite charge as yet entered against the prisoner'; 1934, M. H. Weseen; 1935, Hargan, 'Chalked in—reported to Warden's Court'; extant.

chalker; gen. pl. 'Chalkers, men of wit in Ireland, who in the night amuse themselves with cutting inoffensive passengers'—passers-by, or pedestrians—'across the face with knives. They are somewhat like those facetious gentlemen, some time ago known in England, by the title of sweaters and mohocks': 1785, Grose. Perhaps orig. s., but hardly c. The inscriptions are made with a knife instead of with chalk.—2. 'A keeper who frequently reports prisoners', Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since

ca. 1905. Ex chalk, v., 2, and cf. chalk-in and square chalk, and contrast chalk-in victim.

chalking. 'The amusement above described', i.e., at chalker, 1: 1785, Grose.

chambermaid to the mules. A stableman in, e.g., a labour camp: tramps': 1931, Stiff; extant.

chance. A prospective booty: 1732, trial of Thomas Beck, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, pub. in 1735, 'The next Night we went into Chancery Lane, where Edwards said there was a Chance'; 1742, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account (John Jennings), 'A Chance is when we have a House in our Eye, where we have an Expectation of getting something; but if we say we have a dead Chance, then we are sure we can do it'; † by 1890. Elliptical for a chance of booty.

chance screwing. See screwing, chance.

change in. Usually changing in, q.v.

changer. A mechanic that, knowing where the registration-numbers of automobiles are, can change them: the stolen-car racket: 1929, The Saturday Evening Post; 1939, Dick O'Connor, G-Men at Work; extant.

changes, ring the. See ring the changes.

changing in. A gamblers' term for 'handing in your money for the chips': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; by 1890, no longer c.

channel. 'The vein into which injections are made,' BVB, 1942: drug addicts': since ca. 1915. Cf. line and sewer.

chant; chaunt. (Always the —.) News: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'We are all in the Chant; we are all in the News'; † by 1870. Prob. ex:—2. A song; singing: though not specifically c., since it has been used in poetic S.E. since the mid-C. 17, it may be admitted into the category of c., for it has been much used by the underworld since ca. 1770: see Grose, Parker, Vaux, and later s. and c. lexicographers.—3. Hence, 'writing of any kind': U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; app. † by 1890.—4. (Also ex sense 2.) Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, April 1820 (p. 326), '... The chaunt.—Q. What was the chaunt?—A. The direction of some neighbour's door', which is made clearer by:—'A person's name, address, or designation; thus, a thief, who assumes a feigned name on his apprehension to avoid being known, or a swindler who gives a false address to a tradesman, is said to tip them a queer chant': 1823, Egan's Grose; 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1859, Matsell; 1887, Baumann; by 1890, † in Britain, by 1900 in U.S.A.—5. (Prob. also ex sense 2.) 'A cipher, initials, or mark of any kind, on a piece of plate, linen, or other article; anything so marked is said to be chanted': 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood (cipher, crest); 1887, Baumann.—6. An advertisement, or a notice, in newspaper or hand-bill, concerning (e.g.) a robbery: 1823, Egan's Grose (who notes the corresponding v.); 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. Cf. sense 4.

chant, v.; chaunt. 'I chant ...; I sing Ballads,' John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753; 1809, Andrewes, 'To sing, chaunt'; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'To talk'; ibid., at screwing up, chant beef is given as 'to cry "stop thief!"'; 1908, W. H. Davies, The Autobiography of a Super Tramp, where (p. 201) chanting = 'griddling' (singing, for money, in the street); 1936, W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 'To "chant" this town' (i.e., to sing in it for alms); extant.—2. Hence (?), to number; to count: 1753, John Poulter, 'Chant his Tuggs; count his Cloaths', i.e. clothes; app. † by 1890.—3. To advertise (a person); advertise for (a thing): 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'Chaunted upon the leer', advertised in the newspaper as a wanted person; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee ('to praise off, inordinately'); 1823, Egan's Grose (thing); ob. by 1898, † by 1920.—4. To publish; make known: 1797, Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'The kiddey was chaunted for a toby; his examination concerning a highway robbery was published in the papers'; 1821, P. Egan, Life in London, 'If your name had not been chaunted'—written—'in it' (a pocket-book); 1859, Matsell; † by 1890.—5. To mark, or to initial (clothes, linen, plate, etc.): 1823, Egan's Grose (see chant, n., 5); 1834, misused in Ainsworth's Rookwood; app. † by 1910. Ex the n., sense 5.

chant, lip a. To sing a song: see lip, v.

chant (or chaunt), tip a. To sing a song; to sing: 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'He'd tip a chaunt, run the rums, Chaff a tale, queer all bums'; † by 1910. Lit., give a song. Perhaps in error for the preceding.

chant cove. A newspaper reporter: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1920. Cf. chant, v., 4, and esp. chanter cove.

chant (or chaunt) the play; often as vbl n. (Chanting the play). 'So, finding the nib-cove was chanting the play, | I shov'd my trunk nimbly and got clean away': 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. CLXXX; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'To chaunt the play', to explain the tricks and manœuvres of thieves'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. To 'sing' about something; to speak with unnecessary loudness about it.

chant (or chaunt) upon the leer. To advertise (a person) in a newspaper, esp. if he is wanted by the police: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; † by 1889 (B & L). See chant, v., 3, and leer.

chanted; chaunted. Wanted by the police; 1831, W. T. Moncrieff, Van Diemen's Land, as chaunted, but prob. in use as early as 1790; app. † by 1910. See chant, v., 3, and chant upon the leer.

chanter; chaunter. 'Chaunters, that is, Ballad Singers, will not stick to commit any Roguery that lies in their Way': 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1840, if not some years before.—2. The sense, 'such a street vendor of ballads, pamphlets, dying speeches, etc., as chants the titles and/or contents', is not c. but London s. (See esp. London Labour and the London Poor, I, 215.)—3. A dishonest horse-dealer: 1867, J. Greenwood, Unsentimental Journeys ('The Horse Repository'); by 1891 (F & H), low s. Perhaps because he sings the praises of inferior horses. See esp. 'The Chanter', in Edwin Pugh's The Cockney at Home, 1914.—4. A street singer: (mostly London) beggars': C. 20: 1933, George Orwell, Down and Out; April 22, 1935, Hugh Milner (in letter).

chanter (gen. chaunter) cove. A newspaper reporter: since ca. 1840: 1891, F & H; app. ob. by 1920, † by 1940. Cf. chant, n., 1, and v., 4; cove, a fellow.

chanter (gen. chaunter) cull. One who, for seven shillings and sixpence, will write you a ballad or a satire, as libellously or as scurrilously as you desire: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, where it is spelt chaunter-cull; 1785, Grose, 'Chaunter culls, Grub-street writers, who compose songs, carols, &c. for ballad singers'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1859, H, who remarks that the practice is rapidly dying out; † by 1891 (F & H). See chanter and cull, n.

chanter (or chaunter) upon the leer. An advertiser in a newspaper: ca. 1790–1870 (F & H).

chanting; occ. chaunting. The vbl n. of chant, v.—2. Esp., singing in the streets: beggars' and vagrants': C. 19–20; ob. In, e.g., James Greenwood's The Seven Curses of London, 1869; 1891, F & H. See chant, v., 1.

chanting (or chaunting) cove. A dishonest horse-dealer that advertises in the newspapers: 1823, Egan's Grose (chaunting c.); † by 1900. See chant, v., 3.

chanting (occ. chaunting) ken. A music-hall: app. since ca. 1880: in 1909, Ware classifies it as 'low London' (slang), which, by that time, it may well have been. See the separate elements.

chanting lay, the. 'The street-singing business,' Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1933: tramps' and beggars: since ca. 1910.

chanting the play. See chant the play.

chapel of little ease, 'a police station, or the cells there', may have been c., as F & H, classify it, but prob. it was low s. of ca. 1860–1900. The Daily Telegraph, 25 and 27 Jan. 1871; F & H, 1891. Ex its discomfort.

chaplains' and priests' men. Religious, or only apparently devout, prisoners: convicts': 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; by 1910, prison j. chapped; chapt. 'Dry or thirsty . . . Chapt,' J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 1707; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); 1887, Baumann; by 1910, it was † in Britain; by 1920, it was no longer used anywhere at all. Cf. 'chapped hands'.

character. The branding of a criminal in the hand: 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'They have pawm'd'—palmed—'the Character upon him'; i.e., they have burnt the Rogue in the Hand'; so too in Grose, 1785; † by 1860. Ex character, a letter of the alphabet. Hence:— character academy. 'A rendezvous for characterless shopmen, footmen, barmen, and others, whereat false characters are concocted, and other plans are matured for robbing employers': 1889, B & L (at academy); 1890, F & H; ob. Ex S.E. character, 'a testimonial to a person's—esp. a servant's—character and ability'.

charactered. Branded, as a criminal, in the hand: 1785, Grose, 'Charactered, or lettered, burnt in the hand'; † by 1860. Ex character.

charge, n. A dose, esp. by injection, of a drug: 1929, Givens; 1935, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. charged up.—2. 'The advance at the beginning of a holdup,' Ersine: since ca. 1920.

charge, v. 'To advance upon and rob,' Ersine (1933), who cites 'Seven rooters charged the jug'.

charge out; usually as vbl n., charging out, 'going out to work': esp., bank robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant. Ironic.

charged (up), adj. Drug-excited to the point of desire to commit homicide: 1922, Emily Ferguson, charing. 'A flash term for any thing that is wrong' (illicit); 'i.e., on the cross: derived from Charing Cross': 1823, Egan's Groser; † by 1900.

The Black Candle (the longer term); 1933, Ersine (id.); 1942, BVB (both); extant. Ex charge, n., 1.

Charing Cross (pron. crorse). A horse: orig. (ca. 1850–70), c.; not gen. rhyming s. until ca. 1880. 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857.

chariot. An omnibus: 1859 (implied in chariot-buzzing); 1891, F & H; by 1925 (Leverage), also American; ob. in Britain.

chariot-buzzing, n. 'Picking pockets in an omnibus': 1859, H; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1920. See buzzing; chariot is jocular.

charley. A watchman: 1812, J. H. Vaux; June 1813, Sessions; 1848, Sinks of London; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); † by 1870. But this sense is prob. s., not c. Prob. Charley at first; personification.—2. Hence, a (gold) watch: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1903, Sylva Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1930 in U.S.A.; in C. 20, also Australian (Baker, 1942).—3. A souteneur or 'ponce': white-slave traffic: 1934, Howard N. Rose, who classifies it as English.

Charley Bates'(s) Farm. See Bates' Farm.

Charley Beck. A check (anglicé cheque), esp. if worthless: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Charley Brady. A hat: 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life; ob. It is thieves' rhyming s. on s. cady, 'a hat'.

Charley Chalk. Talk: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Charley Coke. A cocaine addict: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. I.e., coke personified.

Charley Cotton, or Cotton brothers. 'The cotton placed in the "cooker" as a filter, or the material through which a dissolved drug is strained,' BVB, 1942: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Word-play on cotton, n., 2.

Charley (or -ie) Hock; usually in pl. 'Socks are called "Charley Hocks",' Convict 2nd, 1938; earlier in Convict, 1934: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Rhyming.

Charley Horner. A corner: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; cf. English rhyming-s. Jack Horner (as in the nursery rhyme).

charley-ken. A watchmen's look-out box: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; † by 1880. See charley, 1, and ken.

Charley Lancaster. A handkerchief: orig. (ca. 1850–70) c.; low rhyming s. until ca. 1880, then gen. rhyming s. 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857. The rhyme is on the solecistic hankercher.

Charley Paddock. An escape; a prompt and swift departure: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; † by 1940.

Ex the world-champion American sprinter of that name; he flourished in the second-third decade of C. 20. (Cf. the entry at take it on . . .)

charley pitcher. 'The "Hunter[s]" and "Charley Pitchers" obtain what they want by gaming; as thimblery men, etc.', the footnote being, 'A Charley Pitcher seems to be one who pitches [a tale] to the Ceorla, or country man, and hence is equivalent to the term Yokel-hunter': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III,—but charley is simply Charley, either a generic Christian name (cf. Hodge) or a polite evasion of churl; ibid., 'The "Charley Pitchers" appertain more [than do the "Flat-Catchers"] to the conjuring or sleight-of-hand and blackleg class'; 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London; 1859, H, Charley-Pitchers, low, cheating gamblers'; 1870, The Broadway, Nov.; 1889, B & L, 'One who plays to win watches, or charleys'; 1891, F & H, 'A prowling sharper'; † by 1910.

Charley Prescott(t). A waistcoat: orig. (ca. 1850–70) c.; after being low it > gen. rhyming s. ca. 1895. 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.). In U.S.A., esp. on the Pacific Coast, it has remained c.—witness M & B, 1944.

Charley Rocks. Socks: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944, 'Rare'. Rhyming (cf. Cockney almond rocks).

Charley Rollar. A dollar: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928 (C. Rawler); M & B, 1944. Rhyming.—2. A collar: 1934, Convict.

charley wag, play the. To disappear: 1887, W. E. Henley, Villon's Straight Tip to All Cross Coves, 'It's up the spout and Charley-wag | With wiper and pickers and what not': literary, not actual c. Ex the school-s. sense, 'to play truant'.

Charley Wood. A police constable's truncheon: since ca. 1930. Black, 1943. Of the same type of personification as that exhibited by Corporal Dunlop.

charlie. See charley.

charm. First defined by Robert Greene in The Second part of Conny-catching, 1592: 'The Black Art is picking of Locks, and . . . two persons are required, the Charme and the Stand: the Charm is he that doth the feat, and the Stand is he that watcheth,'—a quot'n clearly showing that the instrument is not meant; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; app. † by 1660.—2. Hence (?), a picklock: 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859, current in U.S.A.—or, at the least, in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); 1881, The New York Slang Dict.; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H, who imply that it is † in England. It works like a charm, like magic.

charm game, the. A variety of the confidence trick; worked in conjunction with a fortune-teller: 1865, E. H. Savage, Police Recollections ('A Charm Game'); app. † by 1910. The money is charmed away.

charms. A burglar's implements: April 11, 1865, Sessions Papers, where a burglar refers to a piece of steel, some keys, and a 'jemmy' as 'that bunch of charms'; ob. Cf. charm, 2.

charpering ome (or omer); charpering carsey. A policeman; a police-station: not c. but parlyaree. See 'Parlyaree' in my Here, There and Everywhere, 1949.

char(r)shom or chershom, 'a five-shilling piece': tinkers' s. (? Shelta): 1889, B & L.

charver, 'to despoil. To interfere and spoil one's business': pitchmen's and cheapjacks' s. (ex Romany): Phillip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934.

chase whiskers. To (follow the postman as he delivers the mail and then) rob letter-boxes of currency notes (bills) and cheques: esp. forgers': since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. Cf. Mr Whiskers: whiskers connotes respectability, Government employment.

chat. (For ultimate etymology, see cheats.) A louse: 1698, B.E., 'Chatts, c. Lice. Squeeze the Chatts, c. to Crack or Kill those Vermin'; 1720, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, III; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Chatts, lice, . . . perhaps an abbreviation of chattels, lice being the chief live stock or chattels of beggars, gypsies, and the rest of the canting crew'; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—witness Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.), low s. in England and by 1890, s. in U.S.A. For the origin, see quot'n of 1785; but chat may = chcat, 'a thing', and the term may orig. have been euphemistic or, more prob., jocular or ironic.—2. A rare variant of cheat.—3. a seal: gen. in pl.; see chatts, 4.—4. A house: 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct., 'I had not been at Sutton very long before I piped a slavey . . . come out of a chat (house)'; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1896, A. Morrison, 'He did no vulgar thievery; he never screwed a chat, nor claimed a peter, nor worked the mace'; 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers, 'He approached the "chat" from the rearward'; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too; extant. Ex cheat, 1.—5. Hence, a burglary: C. 20; ob. Edwin Pugh, The Spoilers, 1906, 'The chat we're on is called the Observatory'.—6. Mostly in plural: chats, 'footwear'—lit., two (i.e., a pair of) boots or shoes: 1936, Geo. Ingram, The Muffled Man, 'Get them "chats" off'; extant.

chat-hole. 'It is the custom . . . for prisoners [in the dark cells] to bore a small hole through the partition; near to the [floor], through which the chat takes place. The one prisoner lies down on the ground and talks and listens, with his mouth or ear to the chat-hole; his neighbour sits at the window, which opens on to the landing along which the officer in charge walks. If he approaches, a knock from the watcher causes the chat to be suspended until he has passed, when it commences again': 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; by 1920, prison j. Ex chat, conversation.

chates. A frequent form of chatts, gallows: 1566, Harman (who also spells it chattes); 1608–9, Dekker in 'The Canters Dictionary' (Lanthorne and Candle-light), has 'Chates, the Gallows'; which form is severely condemned in 1610 (Martin Mark-All) by Rowlands, who adds that it should be treyning—i.e., trining—cheate; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'On Chates to trine by Rome Coves dine,' but, in the glossary, 'Chats . . . The gallows'; 1688, Holme, 'Chates, the Gallows'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Geo. Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London. But the term was, I suspect, † by 1800.

chats and chats, the. See chat, n., and chatts.

chatter, 'a shouter; a spieler' (Leverage, 1925), is not c. but s.—prob. low, at first. One who 'chats', or talks, at the top of his voice.

chatter(-)box. A machine-gun: since ca. 1930. Hargan, 1935. Cf. typewriter.

chatterers. The teeth: 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1891 (F & H), it was low s. One's teeth chatter with cold or fear.

chattery. Cotton; cotton goods: 1821, David Haggart, Life; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1891, F & H; ob. Origin? Perhaps an elaboration of c. cheat, chat, 'a thing'.

chattery feeder. See chatty feeder.

chattes. See chatts

chattry feeder. See chatty feeder.

chatts. Gallows: 1566, Harman, who spells it chattes and chates; 1611, Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, where it is spelt cheats; 1665, R. Head (see quot'n at chates); 1676, Coles (chats); 1725, A New Canting Dict., Song XI, 'At the Chats we trine in the Lightmans'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1800. For etymology, see cheat.—2. Pl. of chat, n., 1, q.v.—3. Pl. of cheat, a thing.—4. Seals: 1821, D. Haggart, 'An elegant dross-scout' or gold watch, 'drag' or chain, 'and chats'; ibid., in singular; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H, 'A bunch of seals'; 1891, F & H; ob.—5. Dice: 1859, H; ob. Perhaps with a pun on cheat, a thing.

chatty. Lousy, lice-infested: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'The Cull is chatty; the Man is lousey'; by 1840, low s. Ex chat, n., 1.

chatty feeder; chatterer feeder. 'Chattry feeder—a spoon': 1839, Brandon, who classifies it as Scottish; 1859, H (chattry-feeder); by 1859, moreover, it was current in U.S.A. (Matsell's Vocabulary: chatty feeder); 1881, The New York Slang Dict.; 1889, B & L; by 1891 (F & H), † in England. The form chatty derives from chattery, which is prob. a derivative from chatterers.

chauffeur. A bandit, a hold-up man: ca. 1910–30. Kernôt, 1929–31, 'An old term'. Highway robbery is easier from a car or van or lorry.

chaunt, n. and v. See chant, n. and v.

chaunt the play. See chant the play.

chaunt upon the leer. See chant upon the leer.

chaunted. See chanted.

chaunter; chaunter cove; chaunter cull. See chanter; chanter cove; chanter cull.

chaunter upon the leer. See chanter upon . . .

chanting; chanting cove; chanting ken. See chanting; chanting cove; chanting ken.

chauver. A variant of charver. Cf. :—

chauvering. Sexual intercourse: since ca. 1840. 1889, B & L; ob. Rather parlyaree and low s. than c. Cf. Romany charva (or -er or -o), 'to touch; meddle with'.

chauvering donna or moll. A prostitute: C. 19: 1889, B & L (the latter); 1891, F & H (both). See chauvering and moll; lit., 'a copulating girl or woman'.

chavvy or chary, 'Chavies . . . Children—Boys or Girls': tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; by 1934 (Philip Allingham, Cheapjack), it was pitchmen's and cheapjacks' s. Ex Romany chavo or chavi, 'child'.

chaw. See chow, 1.—2. An Irishman: U.S.A.: C. 20: 1931, Stiff; 1934, Convict; extant. Short for ob. S.E. chaw-bacon, 'a rustic'.

chaw-de-groy. Horse-stealing: Canadian (?): C. 20. Kernôt, 1929–31. Ex French-Canadian? Cf. Fr. cheval, 'a horse'.

cheap. 'Mean; stingy,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; by 1910, s. He buys cheap meals for his friends, mean clothes for himself.

Cheapmans; Chepemans. 'Chepemans, Cheape-side market,' Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610, in reference to Cheapside, London; prob. † by 1830. Cheap + the c. suffix mans.

cheat. For the sense 'thing', in which it is, except in combination, almost always pl., see cheats. Dekker in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9, remarks: 'Which word cheate being coupled to other wordes, stands in verry good stead, and does excellent service'; 1610, Rowlands; 1688, Holme, The Academy of Armory, 'Cheat, a stollen thing', a definition showing the associations acquired by this term; except in combination, † by 1830 at latest. F & H's derivation from O.E. ceat, 'a thing', won't do: there is no such O.E. word, the nearest being sceatt, 'property, goods' (Bosworth & Toller, Anglo-Saxon Dict. and Supplement). The prob. origin is S.E. cheat, 'booty, spoil', a sense deriving ex the earlier sense 'escheat, property accruing to a lord by fine, forfeit, or lapse' (see The O.E.D.).—2. Hence, the cheat, the gallows: 1743, Fielding, Jonathan Wild; † by 1889 (B & L).

cheat 'em. To obtain either a pardon or a shortened term of imprisonment: convicts': 1929, Givens; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Here, 'em = the authorities, the Law.

cheater. In c., it is a synonym of fingerer (q.v.), he who entices men, esp. rich young men, to gambling, chiefly at cards or dice; he who invites the prospective victim to his home or lodgings and there treats him royally and gradually inducts him into gaming: 1552, Gilbert Walker (Diceplay), who spells it either cheater or cheator; Awdeley has cheatour. As a specific c. term, it seems to have become † by 1700 at latest.—2. See:— cheaters. Those that practise this studie [of winning money with false dice] call themselves Cheators, the dice Cheaters, and the money which they purchase'—i.e., win—'Cheates'; but the term has survived, or been renewed, or perhaps independently coined in U.S.A.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Marked cards or dishonest dice'.—2. The sense 'spectacles' is American s.; recorded by Leverage, 1925. Not much used in Britain; Black, 1943, cites it as c.

cheating law. Cheating at dice or at cards: gamesters' >, ca. 1600, gen. c.: 1552, Gilbert Walker, A manifest detection of Diceplay, however, makes it clear that it usually bears the wider senses of 'sharping' and 'enticement to gamble' (see cheater); 1591, R. Greene: A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, defines it as 'play at false dice'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'Of all which Lawes, the Highest in place, and the Highest in perdition is the Cheating Law or the Art of winning money by false dyce'; app. † by 1720.

cheator or cheatour. See cheater.

cheats. The singular, except in combination, is rare in the sense 'thing', 'object'; in C. 16–17, it is very often spelt chete. Gilbert Walker, Diceplay, 1552 (see the quot'n at cross-bite, v., where, however, cheats may mean 'instruments wherewith to cheat'); Harman, 1567, adduces, in his glossary, chattes (see chatts) and fourteen compounds, e.g., smellinge chete, an orchard—bletinge chete, a sheep—nabchet, a hat; Greene; B.E.; Grose. The term did not, I think, survive the C. 18; and prob. most of Grose's cheat phrases were already †.—2. Very early, the pl. was used as a collective = 'property, goods', or, for the underworld, 'booty', as in Harman (1566), where a Wild Rogue, on leaving his doxy, enjoins her 'to worke warely for some chetes, that their meting might be the merier'. The C. 19 use of this sense was only historical.—3. Money won with false dice: 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, says that the professional dicers borrowed 'the tearme from our common Lawyers, with whome all such casuals as fall to the Lord at the holding of his Leetes'—i.e., court-leets—as Waifes, Strayes and such like, are sayd to be Escheated to the Lords use and are called Cheates'; app. † by 1700.—4. The gallows: C. 17. Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 1611, 'Else trine me on the cheats: hang me'. Cf. chates and chatts.—5. The sense 'sham cuffs or wristbands' may orig. have been c., but it was certainly s. by 1780: 1688, R. Holme; 1698, B.E. Prob. ex senses 2 and 3.

cheb (Sessions, Sept. 11, 1902) is a mishearing of chev = chiv(e), 'a knife; to knife'.

check. A silver dollar: 1934, Convict, 'A silver dollar [is called] a buck, check or slug'; extant. Because one does not usually draw a cheque for so small a sum.—2. A ration of narcotic: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

check artist. "Check artists"—guilty of insufficient funds, forgery, grand theft, and embezzlement,' Leo. F. Stanley, Men at Their Worst, 1940: C. 20.

check cop. 'A device used for stealing poker chips,' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (Glossary), 1924: gamblers', card-sharpers': prob. since ca. 1910; 1934, Rose, 'Sticky substance on the palm'; extant. Properly check-cop, where cop ('to take; taker') governs check.

check-copper. 'One who steals poker chips,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex preceding.

check-kiting, 'flying a kite', issuing a cheque without funds in the bank to cover it—but with the intention of depositing cash in time: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom: commercial s., not c. The same applies to check-kiter, a practitioner of 'check-kiting'—which occurs in, e.g., Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 1918.

checker. 'One who passes worthless checks,' Leverage, 1925; slightly ob. Merely agential.

checkerboard crew. A gang of workers both white and Negro: C. 20: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, s. A draughts-board consists of black squares and white (usually light-yellow) ones.

checkers. A 'stool pigeon': 1925, Leverage; ob. He 'checks on' criminals.

cheek, 'a share, a portion', is not c. but s.—orig., prob. low s. (Cf. to one's own cheek, to one's own account.)

cheeks or C-. An imaginary person: mid-C. 19: possibly c., in its origin at least; but prob. low s.

Cheno. A Chinese: 1934, Convict; extant.

cheer. A cab: 1857, The Times, Dec. 5 (cited by 'Ducange Anglicus', 2nd ed., 1859); by 1900, †. Prob. a sense-perversion and a form-alteration of chair (perhaps sedan chair).

cheese is, in Australia, short for cheese and kisses, 'wife': C. 20. Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939. Cf. :—

cheese and kisses. One's (esp. a crook's) wife: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. May 1928, The American Mercury (Ernest Booth); M & B, 1944. Rhyming (the) missus: hence perhaps adopted ex Cockney—but see cheese.

cheese and spices. Prices (race-horse starting-prices): Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

cheese-eater. An informer to the police or to prison guards: since ca. 1930. Hargan, 1935. Suggested by rat, n., 5, a rat being an avid eater of cheese.

cheese it! 'Be silent, be quiet, don't do it. Cheese it, the coves are fly; be silent, the people understand our discourse': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, P. Egan, Life in London ('take no notice of it'); 1827, Sessions

Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, III, trial of Nathan Cohen, 'I put my hand into my pocket to give him 6s., and he said cheese it, which means not to give it to him at that moment'; by 1850 or perhaps even by 1840, it was low s. in England; perhaps not s. in U.S.A. until ca. 1880—see, e.g. State Prison Life, 1871. Obviously a perversion of cease it! (Cf. chise it!) cheese-screamer. A religious hypocrite, esp. one who affects religion only in order to win favours from the chaplain: convicts': since ca. 1920. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938, 'Can't be a copper [informer] one day and a bottle-merchant [pederast or pathic] the next and a cheese-screamer the next, and one of ours'—the right ones—the next, that's all'. Here, cheese = Jeez = Jēs = Jesus.

cheesecake steamer. "Steamer" [a 'mug' or 'easy mark'] who is not very wealthy and gives you only threepence,' John Worby, The Other Half, 1937: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1925. See steamer; cheesecake, because, in the 1920's and 1930's, costing usually threepence.

cheeses, sing for. To sing in the choir: convicts': since ca. 1920, perhaps considerably earlier. In, e.g., Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938. Cf. cheese-screamer, q.v.

cheesy. Bad: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; in 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, defines it as 'very bad indeed'; extant. Ex maggoty cheese and its concomitant effluvium. Hence:—2. 'Filthy with dirt': tramps': since ca. 1920. Stiff, 1931.

chef, n. 'A Chinaman who cooks opium pills,' Leverage, 1925, but the term had prob. been current since ca. 1890, my own earliest reference being for 1911 (Clifford G. Roe, Horrors of the White Slave Trade, p. 78); July 23, 1927, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice (any such cooker, not necessarily Chinese); Nov. 18, 1933, Flynn's; 1934, Convict; 1938, Convict 2nd; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant. Perhaps suggested by cook, v., 3.—2. Hence, synonymous with green ashes: BVB, 1942.—3. The executioner: convicts': 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster! With a grim ref. to heads.

chef, v. To cook (opium pills): drug addicts': July 23, 1927, Flynn's (see quot'n at cook up, 3); 1942, BVB; extant. Ex the n., 1.

cheiving layer. See chiving layer.

chemise. A strait-jacket: 1925, Leverage (shemise); extant.

Chepmans. See Cheapmans.

Chequer Inn (in Newgate Street), the. See King's Head Inn.

cherpin, 'a book', is a debased tinkers' s. word: 1889, B & L. But it was occ. used in c., as in F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, 1893, p. 434, "'We 'ad ought 'er jump the crib, cop the cherpin, and misli in an 'our and a 'arf'", glossed as 'Break into the house, get hold of the book, and be off'—the passage being valid for ca. 1845. Origin? Perhaps cf. Shelta gílikhon, 'a book', cognate with Gr. bíblion.

cherruping. See chirruping.

cherry. A young girl: since ca. 1860: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1935, Hargan (U.S.A.), 'A virgin [girl]'; extant in both countries, but ob. in Britain. Perhaps ex cherry ripe, but prob. by poetic imagery.—2. The hymen: U.S.A.: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 18, 1937.

cherry-coloured, 'black', is not c. but s. Grose, Cherry-Coloured Cat. A black cat, there being black cherries as well as red'.

cherry-colored cat, the, is a variety of the confidence trick: March 5, 1932, Flynn's, Lew Allen Bird, 'Among the Wolves'; extant.

cherry nose. Sherry: South Africa: late C. 19-20; by ca. 1935, (low) s. Alan Nash in The Cape Times, June 3, 1946. Prob. because cherry rhymes with sherry, secondly because sherry is cherry-coloured, and thirdly because a cherry nose suggests sherry-drinking.

cherry pipe is, I think, Matsell's error for sense 2 of cherry ripe; B & L (1889) and F & H (1891), however, give cherry pipe as 'a woman'. If it be correct, it rhymes on cherry ripe.

cherry ripe. A pipe: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1870, low rhyming, by 1880 gen. rhyming s. In C. 20, current on U.S. Pacific Coast: Chicago May, 1928; M & B, 1944.—2. 'A full-grown woman': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, where it is misprinted c. pipe; prob. anglicized by 1870; 1891, F & H; app. † by 1920 in Britain, by 1910 in U.S.A. Ex appearance.

Chesapeake shad. Not bad: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

chested, ppl adj. 'It was as near burglar-proof as any safe could be, and in addition to this it was "chested", which, in terms of burglary, means it had a steel chest inside—a safe within a safe,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926: since ca. 1910.

chete. See cheats. Likewise chet, used by Harman, 1566.

cheting law. See cheating law.

chev; chev(-)man. 'A "chevman" fights with a knife . . . knife or razor is a "chev", "ax", "blade", or "steel"', Givens, 1929; 1934, Rose, 'Knife (n): a chev'; ibid., 'Gangster Who Uses a Knife . . . a chev man'; extant. A variant of chiv.

cheval de retour. See return horse. Why this term should ever have been dictionaried as English c., it is difficult to see; its inclusion in several works of the late C. 19 has led others astray—though not, perhaps, for long.

cheve (or cheving) the froe. See chiving the froe.

Chevy Chase. A face: 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; by 1864, low and by 1870 ordinary rhyming s. In late C. 19-20, current on the Pacific Coast of the U.S.A.: 1944, M & B.

chew, n. A piece of tobacco, esp. of chewing-tobacco: convicts': since ca. 1870; 1889, B & L; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp (U.S.A.); extant. A piece large enough to make a good quid; cf. chewin.

chew, v.i. 'To eat or "feed"', Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary), 1899; ibid., p. 271, "'You can chew all right there, but divil a cent can you beg"''; ibid., p. 272, 'I had heard of Buffalo as a good "chewing town"', i.e. a town where tramps can easily beg for—and obtain—food; 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp, a hobo speaking, 'How did youse make out for chewin', lately?'; 1913, Edwin A. Brown; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. chewins; prob. short for 'to chew (one's) food'.—2. To talk: tramps': since ca. 1915. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Short for chew the rag.

chew the fat. To talk: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Prob. adopted ex English s.; cf. — chew the rag. To talk: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1900, Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1902, Flynt, The Little Brother; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1925, Leverage; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Lit., 'chew the tongue': rag is low s. for 'tongue'. In English s., the phrase = 'to talk endlessly; argue; grumble'.

chewin. Chewing tobacco: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Contrast chewins.

chewing. Food; a meal, a snack: Aug. 1891, The Contemporary Review, Josiah Flynt, 'The American Tramp', 'Begging is called "battering for chewing"' ; ob. by 1910, † by 1920. It passes into the form chewins, q.v. Obviously, 'material for mastication'.

chewing town. See chew, v., 3rd Flynt quotation.

chewins. Food; a meal, a snack: since ca. 1890 (if not earlier), to judge by 'Road-Kids and Gay-Cats'—a chapter in Jack London's The Road, 1907; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex chewing.

chewre. 'Chewre, verb (Old Cant).—To steal,' F & H, 1891: on what authority?

chews and molasses. Spectacles: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on glasses.

Chi (pron. shy). Chicago: since ca. 1880: tramps' c. >, by 1910, general s. Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary), 1899; Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901; 1907, Jack London, The Road.

chib. See chive, v., reference of 1827.

chibibis. Nonsense; foolishness; foolery: 1933, Ersine; extant. Perhaps cf. Fr. s. chichi, fuss.

Chicago overcoat. A coffin: since ca. 1930. Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep, (English ed.) 1939. Chicago being the racketeering gangster-ridden centre par excellence during the Prohibition days (1920–34).

chice. See shice, n.

Chick Lane. 'West-street, Smithfield': 1846, Geo. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; app. † by 1900. On the borderline between c. and low s. Prob. ex the commodity sold in that part of the great meat-market.

chickaleary, 'artful'—it is also, derivatively, a n.—is usually classified as costers' s., which it undoubtedly was after ca. 1865; but it may orig. have been c.: in W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicancy and Crime, 1839, the chorus of an underworld song is, 'He's a right down chap, a chickle-a-leary chap, and a loving cove'.

chicken. See hen and chickens.—2. A catamite: U.S.A.: C. 20. BVB. But perhaps ex English c., where it has existed since well before 1938 (Part-ridge). Cf. synonymous boy.

chicken feed, 'small change; modest sum of money': s., not c. (Food for chickens, not for animals.) But among the gangsters and racketeers of ca. 1920–35, the term referred to five-, ten-, twenty-dollar bills: Herbert Asbury, The Underworld of Chicago, 1941, at p. 329 of the English edition.

chicken in the clay. A fowl rolled in mud and then roasted—one of the tramps' many culinary methods and 'dodges': since ca. 1915: 1931, Stiff, who explains that, although the bird is cleaned internally, the feathers are left—clay on the feathers—for the better roasting of the flesh thus protected.

chickory or chicory. Unimportant; cheap; inferior: since ca. 1925. Ersine. Ex chicory as a substitute for coffee.

chickster. See shickster, 2.

chie; occ. chai. See chal.—2. 'Chie. Who is it? do you know?': U.S.A.: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; † by 1910. I.e., the It. chi, 'who' (ex L. qui) + è, 'is'.

chief. 1. Any Indian. 2. A gang leader,' Ersine, 1933: since ca. 1920. Ex Indian chief.

chieve and chif. See:—

chife or chive, 'Chive, c. a Knife,' B.E., 1698; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed. (chieve); 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Chive, a Knife, File or Saw'; 1728, D. Defoe (chive); 1734, C. Johnson; 1753, Poulter (chive); 1785, Grose (both forms); 1789, G. Parker (chif); 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum (chive and chiff); 1821, D. Haggart, '[A] pen chive'; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1859, H. (chive); 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.), where it is misprinted thrive; 1879, Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.; 1887, Baumann; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1891, F & H (chiv and chive); 1902, A. Morrison, The Hole in the Wall; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube (U.S.A.: knife; dagger); extant.—2. Hence, a file: 1725 (see sense 1); 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); extant—though very ob.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) A saw: 1725 (see sense 1); 1785, Grose; 1859, H, 'A sharp tool of any kind'; also in U.S.A. (Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859); slightly ob.

chife, v.; chiff. See chive.

chigger. See jigger, 3.

chiggers! Look out! Ware danger!: 1933, Ersine; slightly ob.

child. A parcel, or a bundle, of stolen goods: ca. 1770–1830. See Anon., or perhaps the preface-writer (F. J. C.), Police!!, (Liverpool) 1910, p. 10, where the period referred to is very vaguely indicated. Prob. ex the appearance of a baby in long clothes, esp. when wrapped-up for outdoors.

child-dropping. The abandonment of infants, esp. new-born infants, at the doors of other persons and of hospitals, churches, etc.: 1826, The New Newgate Calendar, V, 209; † by 1890.

child of darkmans. A bellman: 1698, B.E. (at darkmans); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1790.

chill, v. See chilled, 1, 2.—3. To refuse to recognize (a person), to stare icily: 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief (but the term has been current since ca. 1925), 'They chilled for him . . . He should never have stared after them when they chilled'; extant. Cf.—perhaps ex—give someone the chill, q.v. at chill, give . . .—4. V.i., to submit to arrest: drug traffic: since ca. 1930. BVB. Esp., of set plan, 'in cold blood'.—5. To get a charge or accusation dropped: 1933, Ersine; extant. I.e., to kill it.

chill, give (someone) the—or put the chill on. 'Until proved [other than an intruder into the underworld] he is given the chill. Cold stares are aimed at him, his every move is openly watched and he is generally made to feel so uncomfortably out of place that he soon disappears for warmer and more friendly spots,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; 1933, Eagle ('put on . . .'); extant. Cf. circus and fair-ground grifters' chill off, 'to lead away, get rid of' a troublesome sucker.

chill off; usually in the passive. To kill (a person): since ca. 1930. Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep (English ed.), 1939, 'I might get chilled off just for being there'.

chilled. Killed, murdered: 1933, Eagle; extant.—2. 'Being trailed by the law,' Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; ob.

chime, v.; gen. as vbl n., chiming, 'Praising a person or thing that is unworthy, for the purpose of getting off a bad bargain': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. Perhaps in reference to the chiming of church bells.

chimmel, 'a stick'; chimmes, 'wood': tinkers' s. (? Shelta): 1889, B & L. Cf. k'ima, Shelta for 'a stick'.

chimney cly. 'Upper vest pocket, chimney clye', Anon., State Prison Life (glossary), 1871; extant—but never very gen. See cly, n., 2: chimney, perhaps ex its shape.

chin. 'A child', says Matsell in his Vocabulary, 1859: but I suspect an error: ? for bul(l)chin, 'a fat, chubby child' (Egan's Groser). Nevertheless, B & L give it, and add that it is 'probably an abbreviation of kinchin'.—2. Talk: 'convicts': 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne, 'As the captain's eye was always upon Condom, all "chin" had to be carried on by fits and starts, and was liable at any moment to sudden stoppage'; by 1910, it was s. Perhaps ex:—

chin, v. To talk to: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, '... Time to wash up for mess. During these ten minutes cons are permitted to "chin their pals" in a whisper'; by 1910, low s.; by 1920, gen. s. Cf. s. chin-wag, n. and v.—2. As v.i., 'to talk', it has prob. always been s.—perhaps low s. at first. (A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 1912, 'the rag Josie and I was chinnin' about it only last night'.)

chin straps. 'Pieces of bacon scrounged by tramps,' John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939: tramps': since ca. 1919. Ex toughness.

China Street. Bow Street (London): 1823, Egan's Groser; but implied earlier at pig, 2; app. † by 1889 (B & L). Perhaps in reference to China oranges, Bow Street being in the Covent Garden district.

China Street pig. See pig, 2.

Chinaman on one's back, a. Distress caused by withdrawal of drug: addicts': since ca. 1920. BVB. Chinaman evokes the idea of the traditional Chinese addiction to opium.

chincer in The O.E.D. is S.E. of C. 14–15 for a niggard; in 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., includes it in his glossary of c. and defines it as 'a crafty Fellow', but both this sense and this classification are suspect.

Chinese joint, the. The prison at Sing-Sing: since ca. 1910. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938. In ref. to the 'Chinese' name, Sing-Sing.

Chinese needlework. Injection of drugs: since ca. 1920. BVB. The allusion is to the Chinese addiction to opium—which, however, they smoke, not inject.

Chinese saxophone. An opium pipe: since ca. 1925. Convict 2nd, 1938. Cf. prec.

chink. Despite B.E.'s classification, chink, 'money', is not c. but s.—2. A tankard: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'I'm a Sneak for Chinks or Feeders; I'm a Thief for Tankards or Spoons'; † by 1820. Echoic; cf. clank, 1.—3. Chink (or chink), 'a Chinese', is s. in the British Empire, but it may, ca. 1890–1910, have been c. in the chink-backed 'un. See bobby horse.

U.S.A., as, e.g., No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, claims.

chink-runner. One who smuggles aliens into the U.S.A.: 1927, Kane; extant. Orig. Chink (a Chinese)-runner.

chinker. See chinkers.—2. Five: 1859, H (at saltee), 'Chinker saltee, fivepence': not c. but parlyaree. Ex It. cinque, five.

chinkers. 'Irons worn by prisoners': 1809, Geo. Andrewes, Dict.; 1827, A New Dictionary of Flash or Cant Language; by 1859, current in U.S.A. (Matsell's Vocabulary); 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H, 'Handcuffs united by a chain'; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1925, Leverage; extant.—2. Money: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1864 (witness H, 3rd ed.), it was s.; Matsell, 1859, records its use in New York. For semantics, cf. chink, 1.

chinky. 'Supplied with money; flush; well fixed,' Leverage, 1925: not c., but low s. Cf. chinkers, 2.

chino. A Chinese trafficker in narcotics: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. BVB. Cf. s. Chink.

chip. As pl., chips, 'money', it is not c. but s.—orig. low s.—2. Chips, 'a carpenter', has always been s.—3. A young girl: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; by 1918, low s. Cf. low-s. chippy, a young girl (George C. Henderson, 1924).—4. A cash-box, a till, without bell or other alarm-device: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; rather ob. Perhaps ex 3.—5. A bank safe: U.S.A.: 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; extant. Perhaps ex the 'chips' or money placed there; cf. chip damper.—6. A shilling: mostly race-course gangs': since ca. 1920. Michael Fane, Racecourse Swindles, 1936—earlier in Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932.

chip and chase. Face: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928 (chips . . .); M & B, 1944. Rhyming; a variation—perhaps a corruption—of Chevy Chase.

chip damper. A till: 1933, Eagle; extant. A damper for 'chips' (money).

chip o'cedar. See cedar.

chippy, n. Cocaine: 1924 (implied in chippy-user); slightly ob. For origin, cf. the suggestions made at chippy-user and chippy with coke.—2. A mild narcotic: 1942, BVB. Cf. chippy-user.—3. Short for chippy-user, BVB.—4. The senses, 'a young girl' (usually derogatory), 'a prostitute' (BVB), are low s.—not c. Ex chip, 3. The v. chippy, 'to operate as a prostitute': a borderline case: BVB, 1942.

chippy, v. To go with a girl; esp., make love to her: 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'Are you afraid that if I get down there alone with Gwen, I'll chippey on you?' (to his 'real' girl—a gangsters' moll); extant.

chippy around. A variant of chippy with coke, but applied to any drug: since the 1920's.

chippy fence. 'There are hundreds of "street-buyers" [of clothes, gadgets, jewels, watches, etc.] or "chippy fences";' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Cf. chippy-user.

chippy habit. 'Chippy habit, coffee-and habit, cotton habit, hit-and-miss habit, ice-cream habit, Saturday night habit, week-end habit, indulgence in small amounts of narcotics at irregular intervals,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. Cf. :—

chippy-user; -using. A moderate user—use—of narcotics: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (the former); 1929–31, Kernôt (the latter); extant. In low s. chippy = chip, 3, i.e., 'a young girl': to numerous men, women are but sexual narcotics.

chippy with coke. To use cocaine occasionally or in moderation: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Semantics: to 'dally' with it: chippy is low s. for a 'young girl'. See chippy habit.

chips. See chip, 1, 2.

chirp, n. See chirp, turn.

chirp, v. To inform to the police: 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, 'The House-breaker's Song' (ch. xxvi) in Pickwick Abroad, 'Oh! who would chirp to dishonour his name, | And betray his pals in a nibsome game | To the traps?—Not I for one!'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1884, J. Greenwood, The Little Ragamuffins; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; Aug. 2, 1930, Flynn's—but rather as American police s. than as c. Ex the chirping of birds.—2. Hence, to talk: 1891, F & H; by 1920, s.

chirp, turn. To turn King's Evidence: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. xxiii ('The Thieves' Alphabet'), 'N was a Nose that turned chirp on his pal',—but does it exist elsewhere?

chirping, vbl n. of chirp, v., 1 (J. Greenwood, The Little Ragamuffins, 1884.)

chirruping is an adj. that, in the underworld, is applied to 'a good ballad singer': 1789, G. Parker, Life's Pointer, both as chirruping and as cherruping; app. † by 1860. Ex the singing of birds.

chis. See:—

chise, n. A knife: 1823, Jon Bee, 'Chise is a knife, sometimes called a chiser, from chisel, a carpenter's sharp instrument'. But the term is suspect, the correct—or, at least, much the most usual—word being chife or chive. Suspect, too, is Baumann's chis, in the same sense.

chise, v. To cut: 1823, Jon Bee. Suspect: cf. the n. Note also:—

chise it! Give over; stop!: 1823, Jon Bee, 'Whether that ['it'] be the talk, or some action, as robbery'; † by 1920. See chise, v.; cf. the s. phrase, cut it out! But prob. the phrase was intended as a disguise of cheese it!

chisel, n. 'A cheat; a fraud; a swindle,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Prob. ex:—

chisel, v. To be a petty swindler or thief: 1928, implied in chiseler; June 21, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens, 'I chiseled along a little ever since I left school'; Sept. 6, 1930, Liberty, 'Chisel,—to beat down in price'; 1933, Ersine, 'Often used with around'; 1934, Thos Minchan, Boy and Girl Tramps; 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex coll. chisel, 'to cheat, swindle', v.t.

chisel(er). 'Chiseler. One who works at any racket as long as there is a dollar in it,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; May 31, 1930, Flynn's; 1930, Burke, 'A small operator [i.e., criminal]; a petty thief'; 1931, Irwin, 'A petty thief, a cheap gambler' (chisler); 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube; 1934, Rose; et al. See chisel, v.

chiser, a knife: 1823, Jon Bee. Ex chise, n. or v.; but the term is suspect: see chise, n.

chisler. See chiseller.

chit is an occ. C. 18 variant of cheat, chete, a thing.

The Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708, has belly-chit; A Collection of Tryals, II, 1718, has nubbing-chit.

Chitney pace, n. Face: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1910. Convict, 1934; Convict 2nd, 1938. Rhyming s.

chiv, n. A knife: this form seems to be recorded for the U.S.A. before it was recorded for England: from before 1794 (witness Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807); 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields; 1827, Thomas Surr, Richmond; 1837, B. Disraeli, Venetia; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1848, Sinks of London; Sept. 26, 1867, Sessions; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L (chiv and chive); Oct. 24, 1902, Sessions; 1910, F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; 1934, B. Leeson, Lost London; 1935, Hargan; 1937, Courtney R. Cooper; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress; extant. A thinning of chive, q.v. at chife.—2. Hence, a razor: C. 20: 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House; 1937, 'Red Collar Man', Chokey, "'Chivs" are razor blades fixed in a piece of wood . . . very nasty weapons indeed in a "rough house"'; 1939, John Worby.

chiv, v. See chive, v.

chiv artist. An expert in using a knife (or a razor) as a weapon: 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; extant. See chiv, n., 1, 2, and cf.:

chiv(-)man. A criminal apt to use a knife or a razor as an offensive weapon: 1936, John G. Brandon, The Pawnshop Murder; 1941, Jim Phelan, Murder by Numbers; extant. See chiv, n.

chivalry or chivarley, 'coition', is not c. but parlyaree; cf. cavaulting, for the semantic idea ('horsing') is common to both.

chive, n. See chife.

chive, v.; also chiv. To cut; to cut off; hence, saw asunder: 1714, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, 'Chiving Bags or Port-mantles from behind Horses, that's cutting them off'; 1724, Harper, in Thurmond's Harlequin Sheppard, 'He broke thro' all Rubbs in the Whitt, | And chiv'd his Darbies in twain'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1734, C. Johnson, The Most Famous Highwaymen; 1753, Poulter, Discoveries; 1785, Grose, 'To chive the bouns of the frows, to cut off women's pockets'; 1799, The Monthly Magazine (Jan.), 'Chive his Munns'; 1797, Potter, 'Chiffed, cut with knives'; 1816, Sessions Papers, Sept., p. 377, 'They will chiv me; that means stabbing him; putting a knife into him'; 1827, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, III, trial of Wm Herring, "'Now, Bill, chiv the b—r"''; 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London, 'I'll soon chive you'; 1832, W. T. Moncrieff, Eugene Aram; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1859, H, 'To cut, saw, or file'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); Nov. 1861, Sessions Papers; Sept. 1884, Sessions; 1891, F & H, 'To stab; to "knife"''; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago; 1897, Sessions; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (U.S.A.), who spell it chiv; 1925, Leverage; 1931, Brown; 1933, Chas E. Leach (chiv), 'To smash a glass in one's face'; 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer; 1943, Black, 'chiv: to wound with a knife'; extant. Ex Romany chive, 'to stab', or imm. ex the English n. (q.v. at chife).—2. Hence, to knock (a person) out: convicts': 1938, H. U. Triston, Men in Chains; extant.

chive-fencer. 'A street hawker of cutlery':

1859, H; by 1889 (B & L), it was street s. See chive, n.; fencer = vendor.—2. Ware defines chiv(e)-fencer as a defender, a protector, of criminals; as he also notes sense 1, he may be right; if he is, then this sense existed ca. 1880–1920, and fencer bears its etymological meaning.

chive knife, 'one with two hidden locks. Bets are made that a stranger can't open the knife' (Julien Proskauer, Suckers All, 1934), is rather low s. of the fairs and carnivals than c. chiver. A knife: 1823, Jon Bee (at chise); 1887, Baumann. The term is mildly suspect. If genuine, it derives ex chive, v.—2. 'One who favours the use of a knife in a fight,' Leverage, 1924: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910.

chivey. See chivy.

chiving or chivving. The vbl n. of chive, v.; cf. chiving lay, q.v.—2. "Chivving" is to smash a glass in someone's face—a practice somewhat peculiar to racecourse gangs,' David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937: since the 1920's. Cf. chiv, v., ref. of 1933 (Leach).

chiving lay. The trick or 'lay' described in the next entry: 1708, implied in chiving layer, q.v.; 1796, Grose, 3rd ed., 'Also, formerly, cutting the back of the coach to steal the fine large wigs then worn'; app. † by 1830. Cf. chive, v., and lay, n., 2.—2. 'The Chiving Lay is to frequent Masquerades, Balls, Assemblies, Installations and Places resorted to by Ladies of Quality, where by the Assistance of the Gang, the Ladies Girdles are cut with a keen Lancet or Penknife, and by drawing them off they often get a rich Buckle, and frequently a Gold Watch, &c.': 1738, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. iv (Jos. Johnston); † by 1840.

chiving layer. 'Cheiving layers. Such as cut the Leathers which bears up Coaches behind, and whilst the Coachmen come off their Boxes to see what's the Matter, they take a Box or Trunk from under his Seat,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; † by 1830. See chiv, or chive, n. and v., and cf. prec. entry.

chiving the froe. (The verb is rare in other parts.) 'Their Business, that evening, was to go upon Cheving the Froe (That is, Cutting off Women's Pockets): Jan. 1741, trial of Mary Young, alias Jenny Diver, nicknamed 'Diving Jenny', in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, 1742; † by 1840. See chiv, chive, v., and froe.

chivving. See chiving.

chivvy. A variant of chife (q.v.) or chive, 'a knife' and 'to knife'.

chivy or chivey, 'a scolding' (Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811), may orig. have been c., but prob. it was low s. Ex Chevy Chase by obvious gradations.—2. A variant of chive (see chife). Mostly, however, as theatrical s., except in Australia, where, C. 20, it is c.,—as in Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939.—3. The face: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; by 1910, low s. A corruption of chevy, short for Chevy Chase, 'a face'.

chivy (occ. chevy), v., is an occ. variant of chive: July 28, 1897, Sessions Papers, 'Give me a kiddy [sic]; I will chevy him'; April 5, 1906, ibid.; Oct. 1928, Word-Lore, F. C. Taylor, 'The Language of Lags' (chivy); 1938, Partridge; extant.

chivy, adj. 'Relating to the use of a knife,' Ware, 1909. Ware cites, from The People, Jan. 6, 1895, the heading, 'A "Chivy" Duel—Described by a "Costy"'; ob. Ex c. chiv(e), a knife.

chivy (or chivvy) duel. See the preceding: for not the entire phrase, but only the first element, is c. Ware, 1909.

chlorhin, 'to bear', is tinkers' s. (? Shelta): 1889, B & L.

choakee. See chokey.

choaker. See choker.

chockers. Boots: tramps': C. 20. Gipsy Petulengro, A Romany Life, 1935. Ex Romany.

chocolate baby, 'a Negro, esp. a Negress': Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: much more prob. (low) s. than c.

choir boy. 'An apprenticed thief,' Ersine, 1933; extant. He does more than sing for money.

choke, n. Bread: convicts': ca. 1870–1920. Compton Mackenzie, 'Introduction' to 'Red Collar Man', Chokey, 1937. Ex its tendency (so doughy was it) to choke the eater.—2. A bribe; bribe money: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the v.—3. A stranglehold: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant.

choke, v. 'To induce an official not to do his duty' (Leverage); to bribe; 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. s. choke (person) off, to prevent him from talking or doing.

choke off. To ignore the request of (a prisoner): prisoners': 1879, Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life. 'Every prisoner who goes before the director with a complaint is, to use a prison phrase, "choked off"'; by 1900, s. I.e., to 'strangle' a request, the requester, 'at birth'.

choke on, put the. See put the choke on.

chokee. See chokey.

choker (or choaker), the. The drop (from the gallows) at Newgate: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open, where it is misprinted cloaker; 1891, F & H, 'The hangman's rope or "squeezer"; a halter'; ob. Proleptic.—2. A garotter: 1859, H; 1889, B & L; by 1891 (F & H), it was low s. Cf. the sense 'a hangman', recorded in 1925 by Leverage (U.S.A.).—3. A clergyman, priest; chaplain: 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'Gulling a choker . . . Deceiving a Minister'; 1889, B & L; also, since ca. 1870, Am. (IA, 1931); ob. Ex his white choker, 'white tie'.—4. A cell: convicts': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1930. Perversion of chokey.—5. Cheese: U.S. tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who, however, points out that it is also lumbermen's and harvesters' s.—therefore not strictly c. (Ex effect upon bowels.)

chokey, n.; also choakee, chokee. 'When the prisoner came out of "Chokey", as the punishment cells are called by the prisoners,' A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, 1869; 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, where it is spelt chokee; 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow; by 1905, low s. Ex sense 2.—2. Prison: the word occurs on June 19, 1856, in Sessions Papers (p. 395), where in chokey is defined as 'a nautical term for "in prison"'—the reference being to a ship sailing from Melbourne and manned by toughs, including, prob., several ex-convicts; it is more likely to have been convict-cant than nautical slang; 1874, H; by 1890, low s. "Chokey", derives from an Anglo-Indian transliteration for the Hindu "chauki" . . . originally a custom, or toll station, in India, and finally a word for a police-station,' Compton Mackenzie in his 'Introduction' to 'Red Collar Man', Chokey, 1937.—3. Hence, a police-station: 1889, B & L; by 1910, at latest, it had > low s.—4. A custom (or a toll) house: 1889, B & L; ob. Ex the liability of goods to be 'imprisoned there': and see sense 2, sub finem.

chokey, v. (Usually in passive.) To put into solitary—into a separate cell—on bread and water: convicts': since ca. 1910. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938. Ex sense 1 of the n.

chole. Mixed currency: 1925, Leverage; ob. Origin? Perhaps ex cole.

chommie or chommie(-)blue. A friend; a close companion or confederate: South Africa: late C. 19–20. Resp., The Cape Times, May 23, 1946, and C. P. Wittstock, letter of same date. With the latter term, cf. pallie-blue; chommie is an Afrikaans re-shaping of Eng. chummy, diminutive of chum.

chonk. 'To hit over the head, usually with a sap,' Ersine: since ca. 1925. Echoic.

chop, n. 'A job, or booty, as A Chop by Chance, a rare Booty, an Extraordinary or uncommon Prize, out of course, where 'twas not expected,' A New Canting Dict., 1725: app. ca. 1715–50. Either ex † S.E. chop, an exchange or a barter (O.E.D.) or a perversion of job.

chop, v. To despatch with all possible speed; to hasten with, at, or over; to sloven over: see chop the whiners.—2. To quit: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage, 'Chop, v., to cut out (of prison)'; 1933, Ersine (also chop off); slightly ob. Perhaps short for chop off; cf. 'to cut short' (a career, a conversation, a story).—3. To kill with a 'tommy-gun': U.S.A.: since ca. 1929. Ersine, 1933. Cf. chopper, 1, 2.

chop a hoosier. 'To stop a sucker from beefing or from following up an extraordinary run of luck. "Chop that hoosier before he takes us for our roll"', Ersine: since ca. 1920. Cf. chop, v., 2.

chop-chain is an underworld 'dodge', whereby one obtains money (often two or three pounds) by the substitution of a cheap chain for one of some value: apparently ca. 1590–1630. Samuel Rowlands, Greenes Ghost Haunting Coniecatchers, 1602. With a pun on S.E. chop and change.

chop the whiners; or chop up . . . 'The Autem-Bawler, will soon quit the Hums, for he chops up the whiners; i.e., The Parson will soon have dispatch'd the Congregation, for he huddles over the Prayers; used by such as wait till Divine Service is over, to pick Pockets, &c.,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; so too in Grose, 1785; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; 1891, F & H; app. † by 1920. Chop, 'to speak rapidly' + whiners.

chop up, n. A division of booty: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1945. Cf. chopping up the swag.

chop up, v. See chopping up the swag.

choplogyke is obviously chop-logic and a special application of the S.E. sense: for definition, see the entry at Awdeley's, No. 21. In this sense, the term had fallen into disuse by 1698 at latest.

chopper. A Thompson sub-machine gunner (in a criminal gang): 1929, E. D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago, 'They were . . . mowed down by "choppers"—that is, machine gun killers'; Jan. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, E. D. Sullivan; Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'To resist meant massacre against those chopper guns'; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1932, Edgar Wallace, When the Gangs Came to London; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1935, Hargan; June 6, 1936, Flynn's, George Bruce;

Feb. 27, 1937, Flynn's, Cornell Woolrich; Feb. 5, 1938, Flynn's, Dale Clark; Aug. 26, 1939, Flynn's, Richard Sale; extant.—2. Hence, the gun itself: July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; 1942, John G. Brandon, Murder for a Million (American gangster loq.); extant. As bloody in its effect as a chopper or cleaver.—3. A policeman: Pacific Coast, mainly: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Not rhyming s. but a grimly humorous perversion of copper, n., 1.

chopping. 'A card which commences to win and lose alternately, is called chopping, and to commence to lose and win alternately, is anti-chopping'; professional gamblers' and card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; ob. Cf. S.E. chopping and changing.

chopping up the swag. 'When large quantities [of booty] are sold to a receiver, they are divided into small lots, and put into various houses, and this is called "chopping up the swag"': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; ob.

choring. Stealing; theft: Scottish: 1889, B & L; 1896, The Gentleman's Magazine, Oct., article by C. H. Vellacott, who spells it choreing; extant. Ex Romany chore, 'to steal'.

chorist. A look-out (person): 1925, Leverage; extant. As a chorister looks down upon the congregation.

chorlo. To inform on an accomplice, a companion, a friend: 1925, Leverage; extant.

chorta, n. A bank watchman: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf.:

chorta, v. 'To beg food,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Perhaps ex:

chortle, v.i. 'To inform on another,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Humorous.

chosen pells, says George Parker, in A View of Society, 1781, 'are companions who ride in pairs. They shoe their horses with leather, stop coaches in town, strip Ladies, take down their hair, and extract the jewels from their heads, &c., besides taking their purses, &c.': since ca. 1750: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., '. . . In the streets and squares of London'; † by 1870. Here, pell is a Cockney pronunciation of pal, n.; each chooses the other as accomplice and companion.

chout, 'an entertainment', is not c. but East End of London s. chovey. A cart, esp. a travelling hawker's covered cart: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see lock-up chovey); † by 1890. Origin? If sense 2 is the earlier, then sense 1 = 'a travelling shop', for chovey in 2 is either a corruption or, more prob., a perversion, of casa.—2. Hence (?), a shop: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 'A shop or store'; by 1870, in England it was costermongers' s.

chow, n. A quid of tobacco: 1874, J. Greenwood, The Wilds of London, '"One chow" (or chaw) [of tobacco]'; slightly ob. Cf. sense 2; a chew, perverted.—2. Food: American tramps' c. of ca. 1900–15, then s. Stiff, 1931, 'Becoming now a common word meaning food'. Ex English s., where it derives ex chow-chow, a particular Chinese dish.

chow, v. To eat: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex sense 2 of the n.

chow joint; scoff joint. A restaurant: 1934, Convict, 'Where the criminal eats he says he scoffs, and if he goes to a restaurant it is called a beanery, chow joint or seoff joint'; extant. See chow, n., 2, and scoff, n.

Christ-killing. Soap-box oratory in favour of the economic interpretation of social problems (cf. economic argument, q.v.): tramps': since ca. 1920. Stiff, 1931.

christen. John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, 'He wanted me to change Watches with him, the Gold one for a Silver one, which he said was . . . sent him down as a Present by a Family Man', or thief, 'but that it was ehristen'd before it came, that is the Name and Number taken out, and others put in'; 1788, Grose (by implication); 1839, Brandon, 'To Christen a Yack—to alter the maker's name . . . to avoid detection'; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxiii, 'To-day Tim sent the yack to ehureh and ehristen'; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; by the 1850's, it was current in the U.S.A. (Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859); 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London, as christening Jack; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!, 'Changing names and numbers on watches . . . Rechristening thimbles'; 1891, J. Bent, Criminal Life; 1909, Ware (christen a jack); ob. To give it a new identity.

christener. One who 'ehristens' watches: 1901, Jerome Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life, Vol. 2; extant.

christening is the vbl n. of christen. (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788.)

chromo. A chromolithographed counterfeit bank-note: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective (swindler loquitur, to a victim), "'If you have any doubt about the 'ehromos' being negotiable and all right anywhere on the Continent [of North America], why, we'll just go out and try them. Put 'em to a practical test, you know, and that'll settle it. . . . If you don't get your ehange out of the 'ehromos' without any fuss or foolin', why the bargain's off"''; but the prospective dealer in counterfeit notes is driven by greed and receives, instead of the notes, a packet of sawdust; app. † by 1930.—2. A prostitute: Australian; since ca. 1930: orig., prob. c.; by 1942 (Baker), definitely low s. Ex flashy clothes compared with flashy magazine-covers and book-jackets.

chronic, n. A drug addict: since ca. 1920. BVB. It is a 'ehronic ease'.—2. Short for chronicker, 2, 3: Ersine, 1933.

chronic, v. To beg: tramps': since ca. 1910. Irwin, 1931. A chronic habit.—2. To investigate: 1931, Irwin; slightly ob. Ex 1?

chronicker. A hobo that carries cooking utensils: tramps': 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, quoting from Leon Livingston (1918); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A confirmed beggar. An ill-natured tramp'; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex chronic, v., 1.—2. 'An habitual beefer' (grouser): 1933, Ersine.—3. 'A bum who begs handouts but not money': tramps': since ca. 1925. Ersine.

Chrysler; crysler. 'Crysler, n. A squealer; a traitor; a coward,' Leverage, 1925; extant. A punning elaboration of cry, 'to "squeal"', and a punning reference to Chrysler automobiles.

chub, 'a dolt, a fool', is S.E.; but indubitably e.—though admittedly a special application—is:—'Chub, e. he is a young chub, or a meer chub, e. very ignorant or inexperienced in gaming, not at all acquainted with Sharping,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'An allusion to a fish of that name, easily taken'; † by 1830. Cf. the fig. sense of gudgeon.—2. In the quotation at smash, v., 1, B.E. seems to imply a sense directly opposed to sense 1; but this may be a slip of the pen.

chuck, n., 'food', is not e. but, in Britain, s.—orig., low s.; for U.S.A., see sense 4.—2. Hence, the specific prison sense, 'bread': prison e. of ca. 1860–90. Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, 1877, but in reference to the 1860's and 'two large slices of bread', 'Some prisoner who . . . had forgotten to eat what in prison slang is called his "toke", or "ehuck"''.—3. An acquittal: 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail, "'7 or the ehuck for a clock"'—seven years' imprisonment, or a release, for (stealing) a watch; 1889, B & L; extant. Cf. chuck, v., 4, and chuck up, qq.v.—4. (Cf. sense 2.) 'In thieves' argot, refreshments, delicacies,' Clapin, Americanisms, 1903; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, A Scholar Tramp; 1928, Chicago May (as in Mullin, simply 'food'); extant. Ex sense 1; cf. sense 3.—5. Hence (?), money: U.S.A.: 1903, Clapin; ob.

chuck, v. 'To show a propensity for a man. The mort chucks; the wench wants to be doing': 1785, Grose; app. † by 1870. Since a chuck is a chicken, it is natural that this v., chuck, should have been suggested by cluck, v.—2. To eat: not e. but eheapjaeks' and showmen's s. (C. Hindley, A Cheap Jack, 1876.)—3. See cluck, v., 2.—4. To release; to acquit: 1887, J. W. Horsley; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1903, No. 7, Twenty-Five Years in Seventeen Prisons; 1924, Stanley Scott, The Human Side of Crook and Convict Life; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1938, J. Curtis, They Drive by Night; 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer; extant. Cf. chuck up, perhaps chuck is short for coll. chuck out, 'to dismiss, to eject'.

chuck, drop the. See drop . . .

chuck a charley. A dollar: mainly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Perhaps it is rhyming s.—but on what would it rhyme?

chuck a chest. To 'tell the tale', to beg: vagrants': C. 20. Partridge, 1937. Prob. ex street-s. chuck a chest, to throw the chest well forward—with a confident air to reinforce the effect.

chuck a dummy. 'I was startled while at work one day in Dartmoor by seeing the hook [or pick-pocket] . . . leap off the seat next mine, . . . fall upon his back, and go through the most horrible writhings I had ever witnessed. His eyes appeared as if bursting from their sockets, blood and foam issued from his mouth, while four other prisoners could scarcely hold his arms, so fearfully was his whole body convulsed What we call "chucking a dummy", or, as you might name it, in your less expressive manner of speaking, "counterfeiting a fit"'': 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, Lecture XII; 1889, B & L (as chuck the dummy); 1891, F & H (id.); 1931, Stiff (U.S. tramps'), 'To pretend a fainting fit' (ex English s.); 1931, Irwin, 'To simulate a faint on the street to excite sympathy'; Nov. 1943, Lilliput; 1945, Baker (Australia), as a pickpocket's trick in a crowd; extant.—2. Hence, 'To "chuck a dummy" is to pretend to be simple and guileless,' F. C. Taylor, 'The Language of Lags' in Word-Lore, Oct. 1928; extant.

chuck a jolly, 'when a coostermonger praises the inferior article his mate is trying to sell' (H, 1859), is not e. but London street, esp. street vendors', s.

chuck a scranny. Australian variant (C. 20) of chuck a dummy, 1. Baker, 1945. Scranny perhaps implies weakness from lack of scran or food.

chuck a stall. 'Chucking a stall, where one rogue walks in front of a person while another picks his pockets': since ca. 1840: 1859, H; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H, 'To attract a person's attention while a confederate picks his pocket or otherwise robs him'; 1893, No. 747; slightly ob. See stall, n. and v.

chuck (or throw) a wing-ding. To feign a spasm, in order to obtain a drug from a doctor: since the 1920's. BVB. Also see wing-ding.

chuck and flop. Board and lodging: mostly tramps': C. 20. The (New York) Sunday News, May 23, 1937, John Chapman. See the elements: lit., food and bed.

chuck-bread. Bread that, although offered to a tramp or a beggar, would have been thrown away but for the mendicant's arrival: tramps' and beggars': late C. 19-20. In, e.g., Ware, 1909. I.e., bread to 'chuck away'.

chuck dough. Money for food: since ca. 1905. Ersine, 1933. See the elements.

chuck habit. 'The enormous appetite which the addict develops under forced abstinence,' BVB, 1942: since ca. 1930. Cf. sense 2 of:—

chuck horrors, the. 'Several new-looking prisoners walked about, making no effort to get food. They were "new fish", new arrivals, who had not yet acquired the "chuck horrors", that awful animal craving for food that comes after missing half a dozen meals,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926: convicts': since ca. 1905. Ersine, 1933, defines it as 'a great fear of going hungry which often overcomes beggars'.—2. Hence, 'Increased craving for dope while breaking the habit,' Howard N. Rose, 1934; drug addicts': since ca. 1920: 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full, where it is applied to the insatiable food-appetite caused by a drug-cure. BVB, however, in 1942 defines it as 'a decided distaste for food when breaking the drug habit'.

chuck the dummy. See chuck a dummy. (Both forms occur in M. Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, 1885.)

chuck-up. A release from prison: convicts': C. 20. In, e.g., Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943. Imm. ex the v.

chuck up (gen. in passive). 'It would be safe until he was "chucked up" (released [from prison])': 1885, M. Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; 1886, Wm Newton, Tramp Life; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; extant. I.e., to throw up from the depths.

chucked is a participial adjective, formed from chuck, v., 4 (q.v.): 1887, J. W. Horsley.—2. Amorous; fast: prostitutes': 1891, F & H; ob. Prob. ex chuck, v., 1.

chucker. A guinea: 1774, Sessions Papers, 2nd Session of Frederick Bull, trial of Dennis Currin, 'I said I have got a son-in-law has not seen so many guineas a good while; I called him and said, did you ever see so pretty a sight before? He said, they are pretty chuckers'; app. † by 1860. Perhaps something that can easily be chucked or thrown.

chuckling cabbage. U.S.A. and Canadian paper currency in a 'bunch' of small denominations: U.S. and Canadian: since ca. 1935. Wm Kernôt, letter of Sept. 9, 1946.

chuff, 'saucy', 'impudent': not c. but low s.

chug-wagon or chugwagon. A motor-car:

1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; slightly ob. and, in any case, s. by 1940. Ex the noise it makes.

chum, n., 'a constant companion', seems to have been, orig. (1684) and long, University s. (at Oxford the earlier), but also it seems to have insinuated itself, ca. 1700, into c., esp. in the sense, 'a fellow prisoner': Grose's definition (1785), 'A chamber-fellow, particularly at the universities and in prison', illustrates both its c. tendency (and, prob., actuality) and its dual development; 'Chiefly used among imprisoned debtors', says Jon Bee, 1823. The c. sense, qua c., disappeared in England ca. 1850, although it survived until ca. 1900 in the U.S.A. (see, e.g., Judson, New York, 1851) and so late as 1889 it occurs in Clarkson & Richardson's Police! (England), listed in the glossary thus, 'An associate . . . A pal, chum, silent'; but the term is now and has for a century (in England, at least) been coll. in its gen. acceptation. Almost certainly a doublet of comrade, which in C. 17 is often spelt camrade: by Fr. influence (chambre, chambrée) ex Sp. camarada. It may, however, represent an abbr. of chamber-mate (or -fellow) influenced by the 'cumrad' pron. of comrade.—2. A haystack: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. To the tramps it is indeed a friend.

chum, v.; usually chum it. To sleep in a haystack: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 2 of the n.

chummage. 'A cruel custom obtains in most of our Gaols, which is that of the prisoners demanding of a new comer garnish, footing, or (as it is called in some London Gaols) chummage. "Pay or strip," are the fatal words. I say fatal, for they are so to some; who having no money, are obliged to give up part of their scanty apparel; and if they have no bedding or straw to sleep on, contract diseases, which I have known to prove mortal': 1777, John Howard, The State of the Prisons in England and Wales; 1785, Grose, 'Money paid by the richer sort of prisoners in the Fleet and King's Bench, to the poorer for their share of a room'; after ca. 1820, only historical. Ex chum.

chumming-up is a variant of the preceding: 1859, H; † by 1870 at the latest.

chump, n., 'a softy; a fool; an easy dupe', is s. in England and prob. s. in U.S.A. also; No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, includes it in his glossary of American c. It is applied especially to the victim of fair-ground 'gaffs' and 'grind-joints': qq.v.

chump, v. To swindle: June 21, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens, 'Every once in a while I chump a guy for some real dough'; extant. I.e., make a chump of him.

chump, get one's own. To earn one's own living: 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1891, F & H; † by 1930. For semantics, cf. the underworld saying, Wide boys never work.

chunk of beef. A boss or leader: mainly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on chief.

church, n. See church, send to.—2. Hence, 'the switchwork of a watch', Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant.—3. Hiding-place; flat, room, etc., i.e. 'home', unknown to the police: U.S.A.: June 7, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; extant. Sanctuary.

church, v. 'To Church a Yack—to have the works of the watch put into another case to prevent detection': 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London, as churching Jack; 1891, F & H; 1909, Ware; † by 1920. Prob. suggested by christen a yack (see christen).

church, my. 'A term of endearment': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1900. A corruption of Fr. ma chatte.

church, send to. 'A watch is "sent to church" when it is put into another case,' Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago, 1896; slightly ob. By a pun on church, v.

churching Jack. See church, v., reference of 1869.

churchman. A watch-maker: 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxiii; † by 1910. Ex church, v., and with a pun on S.E. churchman.

churchwarden. A public-house: 1889 (see news of the day); † by 1930. As a churchwarden collects the offertory of the devout, so does the public-house collect the earnings of the profane.

churchyard job. A murder: 1887, H. Baumann, Londonismen; by 1900, low s. A crime that ends with the victim's burial.

churn; churn-man (or one word). A safe; a safe-blower: 1925, Leverage (both terms); extant. Ex the shape of many safes.

chury, 'a knife', may be an error for chiv(e)y = chive = chife. (Egan's Grose, 1823). But if it is not a printer's error, the classification is incorrect: chury is a Roman word.

chut. 'One who regards every man as a policeman,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Whenever he sees a policeman, he says chut!, 'Be quiet!'

chutes. Subway trains: since early 1920's. Ersine, 1933. Ex the ramp entrances and exits.

chy is an occ. spelling of chie = chal.

cicada. 'A lookout; a guard,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex the warning noise he makes on the approach of interference.

Cicely Bumtrinket, a 'doxy' or a 'dell'—R. Broome, A Joviall Crew, 1641, speaks of 'Cisley Bumtrinket that lies in the Strummel'—may be c.; but it may rather be a coinage, or an idiosyncratic personification, of Broome's.

cicero. 'One who stalls or entertains a person while a confederate robs him,' Leverage, 1925; extant. A pretty tribute to the traditional eloquence of Roman Cicero.

cicerone, v. 'To act as a prospector for a mob' (i.e., for a gang of criminals): 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the S.E. sense, 'a guide'.

cigarette paper. 'A "bindle" of heroin,' BVB; drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Cf. pill.

cinch, n. An act of theft: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. cincher, q.v.

cinch, v., 'to put the screw on (a person)', is not, as stated by B & L, c.; orig. a colloquialism, it has long been Standard American.

cinched (put into a strait jacket; D. Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 1912) and be cinched (be bound, be destined, be certain to do or suffer something: A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 1912): neither sense has, I think, ever been c.; even the former was, prob., gen. prison s. Origin: as in the popular It's a cinch (a certainty), orig. a cowboy's phrase.—2. Hence, be cinched, to be arrested for a serious crime: Aug. 11, 1928, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson, 'Twenty Years outside the Law'; extant.

cincher. 'A grab-anything thief,' Leverage, 1925; extant. 'It's a cinch!'

Cincie or Cincy. Cincinnati: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler,—but by 1920, if not indeed by 1918, the word had > gen. s.

cinder bull. A railroad detective or policeman: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'A "bull" who works on the cinders or right of way' (Irwin).

cinder-sifter. A tramp, esp. one travelling on foot along the railroad tracks: tramps': 1931, Irwin; 1944, M & B, 'A drifter'; extant. Cf. C. 18 English s. cinder-garbler, a kitchen maid. Perhaps rhyming on drifter.

cinderella. 'A neat little thief,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Poetic.

cinke. Five: 1859, Matsell; ob. Ex Fr. cing.

circle. See sun.

circling boy. 'A species of roarer; one who in some way drew a man into a snare, to cheat or rob him' (Nares); though Carroll Storrs Alden, in his excellent edition (1904) of Bartholomew Fair, defines the term as 'a swaggering bully': 1614, B. Jonson, Bartholomew Fair, 'One Val Cutting'—a 'roarer', he—'that helps Captaine Jordan to roare, a circling boy'. Cf. S.E. circle, v.i., 'to move in a circle (round)'; perhaps cf. the s. or coll. run rings round, 'to be much superior to, to befool'. (The O.E.D. classifies the term as s., but it is almost certainly c.)

circular game, the. A synonym of 'the sawdust game', q.v. (Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs, 1872.) Circular: circulars are sent to prospective dupes.

circus. A confidence trick in which the victim signs a blank cheque: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf.: —2. Law Court, court of justice: 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant. By humorous depreciation. —3. A sexual, orgiastic, collective exhibition by prostitutes for the 'benefit' of men assembled in a brothel: white-slavers': C. 20. Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940. Cf.: —4. A feigned narcotic spasm: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942.

circus, give (someone) the. To apply third-degree methods to: July 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; slightly ob. To 'put through the hoops'.

circus, put on a. See put on . . .

circus bees, 'body lice'; not c., for it is circus and showmen's s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

circus cuss. A circus rider: not c., as Baumann (1887) states, but circus s.

circus squirrels is a variant of circus bees and, for the same reasons as apply to that term, it is not c.

Cisley Bumtrinket. See Cicely Bumtrinket.

citizen. 'The smaller bars'—crowbars smaller than 'the alderman'—were called "citizens": thieves': 1872, Diprose's Book about London and London Life; 1891, F & H; ob. by 1940. Suggested by alderman, 3.

citizen's friend. 'A smaller wedge than the citizen [q.v.], for "prizing open" safes': 1891, F & H; ob. by 1940. Cf. alderman and mayor.

City, the. New York City: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 'That wonderful town known among vagrants as the "City" and also as "York"': by 1920, s.; by 1935, coll.

City College, the. Newgate Prison: 1796 (therefore current at least as early as 1791), Grose, 3rd ed.; 1889, B & L; † by 1900. See college.—2. Hence, in New York: the City Prison, the Tombs: 1859 civil rig, the. 'A trick of the beggars to obtain [money] by over civility': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. Obviously S.E. civil, 'polite' + rig, n., 2.

Matsell; 1882, James D. McCabe, New York; 1891, F & H; ob.—3. Hence, any city jail or lock-up: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. Ersine, 1933.

civilian. Any person—usually a man—that is not a criminal: late C. 19–20. Partridge, 1937. I.e., not actively engaged in the war between criminals and the police.

clack the countryman. See clacking the countryman.

clack the doctor. See clacking the doctor.

clacking the countryman, n. Swindling a greenhorn from the country by pretending to find him a place with a nobleman or some rich man and, in the interval between the proposal and the alleged date for taking up his post, showing him the sights—and getting his money either at gaming or by a confidence trick: 1740, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account (Joseph Parker); app. † by 1830. Cf. the next.

clacking the doctor, n. Practising a swindle on a quack doctor by going to his place of business when he is known to be out and then, as one waits, robbing him of anything (esp. money and valuables) on which one can lay one's hands: ca. 1730–90. Ordinary of Newgate's Account (Life of George Whalley), 'Intending to clack the Doctor', glossed thus, 'Clacking the Doctor, is when one of the Gang personates a Physician, and under Pretence of coming with a Patient to the Surgeon for Advice, they watch their Opportunity to rob him'; Anon., The Life of Robert Ramsey, 1742, 'First of all they went upon the same Lay as Snowd and he had done before, viz. Clacking the Doctor': wherein a passage at pp. 31–32 shows that this trick was practised, with suitable variations, on others than doctors. Cf. clack, to talk fluently.

clacking the taverns, n. 'They went upon . . . the Lay, call'd, Clacking, or Bilking the Taverns' (a form of confidence trick): 1742, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. 1 (Robert Ramsey); † by 1830. Cf. the prec. entry.

claim, v. 'I piped three or four pair of daisy-roots (boots). So I claimed (stole) them': 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1896, Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago; ob. I.e., lay a claim to (something): 'Finding's keeping': 'Bags I!'—2. Hence, to arrest: 1935, David Hume; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant.

clam, n. A victim, a 'sucker': 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; slightly ob. Ironic: he 'opens' his mouth and his purse much too readily and easily.

clam, v.i. To beg: 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo, 'The old man wouldn't have him home, so he started walking about clamming, getting a few medazas from one and another'; ob. Perhaps a corruption of claim, with a deviation of sense.—2. To refuse to speak: U.S.A.: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; extant. Ex S.E. clam, an invincibly silent person. Perhaps, imm., short for:—

clam up, v.i. To be, to keep, quiet: ca. 1900–40: 1928, Chicago May; 1931, IA, 'Now largely superseded by "dummy up"'. Cf. clam, v., 2.

clank. A silver tankard: 1698, B.E.; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'A Clank, alias Tankard'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1823, Jon Bee (by implication); 1837, B. Disraeli, Venetia; by 1890, †. Echoic.—2. Hence, 'silver vessels, spoons, candlesticks' (collectively): 1823, Bee; by 1890, †.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) A pewter pot: 1891, F & H; ob.

clank-napper. 'A Silver-tankard Stealer', B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1891 (F & H). See clank, 1, and napper.

clanker, 'a great lie', is not c. but s. B.E.; Grose.—2. A synonym of clank, 1: 1797, Humphry Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); by 1889 (B & L), † in Britain; 1903, Sylva Clapin, A New Dict. of Americanisms, 'Clankers. A cant word for silver, pitchers, and the like'; by 1940, † in U.S.A. Echoic.

clanker-napper is an occ. C. 19 variant of clank-napper, q.v.

clap a jacket on. See jacket, v.

clap and syph racket, the. The organised cashing-in, chiefly by quacks, on venereal disease, especially among men: since ca. 1920. In Here's to Crime, 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper has a chapter ('Soldiers in Slime') on the subject. Ex coll. clap, 'gonorrhœa', and s. syph, 'syphilis'.

claperdudgeon is an occ. variant of clapperdodgeon. Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggars' Bush, written ca. 1615.

clapper. See clappers.—2. The sense 'a sandwich-board man' is not c., but street s. (Desmond Morse-Boycott, We Do See Life!, 1931.)

clapperdodgeon. 'These Palliades', says Harman in 1566, 'be called also Clapperdogens'—see, therefore, palliard; this statement, as are so many of Harman's, is repeated by Dekker, in The Belman of London, 1608; 1610, Rowlands (clapper dudgeon); 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'This fellow (above all other that are in the Regiment of Roagues) goeth best armed against the crueltie of Winter: . . . wearing a patched Castor (a Cloake) for his upper roabe: under that a Togmans (a Gowne) with high Stampers (shooes) the soles an inch thicke pegged, or else patches at his Girdle, ready to be clapt on . . . A brace of greasie Night-caps on his head, and over them, (least hee should catch a knavish colde) a hat . . . with a smugge Doxie, attyred fit for such a Roaguish Companion'; it is here that Dekker distinguishes clapperdodgeons as artificial, 'palliards', and natural, 'clapperdodgeons' pure and simple; 1625, B. Jonson, The Staple of Newes, 'What! a Clapper Dudgeon!'; 1665, R. Head, 'Clapperdodgeon . . . A beggar born'; 1676, Colcs; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1709, E. Ward, The History of the London Clubs; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The Forty-first Order of Varlets . . . generally the most to be apprehended as Thieves and Robbers, wherever they have Opportunity; being equally void of Principle and of Industry. The Children of these Villains are still'd Palliards'; 1728, D. Defoe; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, where it is spelt clapperdugion; 1785, Grose—but the term was prob. † by 1750; however, as late as in The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull, 1822, we find clapperdodgeons glossed as 'poor beggars'. I.e., clapper + dudgeon (hilt of dagger): perhaps he tapped his dagger against his clap-dish (beggar's bowl), as J. P. Collier suggested.

clappers. A sandwichman's boards: mostly beggars': C. 20; but ob. by 1932 and virtually † by 1946. Echoic.

clark. See clerk.

clash, 'a set battle between gangs': not c., but Glasgow s. of C. 20.

class, do a bit of. See do a . . .

class man. A 'prisoner who has passed out of his first stage,' George Ingram, Stir, 1933: C. 20. Prison j. rather than convicts' c.

Classes of Rogues. See Orders of Rogues.

clatter. A police-patrol wagon: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; ob. by 1930, † by 1945. Ex the clatter it makes as it rushes about the streets.

claw, n. 'A lash of the cat-o'-nine-tails': convicts': 1866, James Greenwood, A Night in a Workhouse, 'Oh! cuss that old Kerr, who condemned me to twenty-five claws with the cat'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. With a pun on a cat's claws and the lashes from a cat (o'nine tails).—2. The expert that, of a pocket-picking mob, commits the actual theft: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1927, Kane; extant. He claws or seizes, 'gets his claws on'.

claw, v. To seize; to steal, esp. to pickpocket (money): 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'The signal . . . which is Kinching, Claw the Lower'. Perhaps merely an error for clay (or cly), but prob. in reference to fingers expertly used as claws—particularly adhesive claws.—2. To arrest: U.S. tramps': 1917, Bill Quirke, 'Hobo Memories'—in Hobo News, Sept. issue, 'They tried to make a get-away | When the bulls called them to a halt; | And they all got clawed in Gettasford | For a mangy bag of salt'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex the claw or hand that the Law lays upon the victim.

claws for breakfast. '[A] whipping while in prison—scroby or claws for breakfast': 1869, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1873, J. Greenwood, In Strange Company; 1888, J. Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; extant—though slightly ob. See claw, n., 1, of which it is a humorous elaboration.

clay, n. A 'gold brick': 1925, Leverage; extant. 'Gold'—Mammon—with 'feet of clay'.

clay, v. 'To play the bunco or gold-brick game on one,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. the n.

clay on the feathers. See chicken in the clay.

clay on the shuck. 'Ears of green corn rolled in clay and put in to roast,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': C. 20. Cf. chicken in the clay.

clay pigeon. A person 'on the spot'—i.e., in grave danger of being murdered: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. There to be shot at.

clay the jerk is a misprint for cly the jerk: 1735 ed. of The Triumph of Wit.

clay work or claywork. The gold-brick game: 1925, Leverage; extant. See clay, n. and v. clean, v. To strip clean, i.e., rob of every cent: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man (see quot'n at grift, 2); 1925, Leverage, 'To take everything; to weed a pocket-book'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth; 1931, Irwin; 1934, Rose; 1937, E. H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; by 1940, police and journalistic s. Proleptic.—2. 'To escape from an officer or prison,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Short for get clean away from.—3. (Ex sense 1.) 'Rid oneself of stolen property; . . . take labels out of stolen clothing,' E. H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: since ca. 1920.

clean, adj. 'Expert; clever. Among the knuckling coves he is reckoned very clean; he is considered very expert as a pickpocket': 1811, Lex. Bal.; by the 1850's, current in America (Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859); 1889, B & L; rather ob. Applied to one who does his work cleanly—neatly, skilfully.—2. Without money: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Short for clean broke.—3. Free from suspicion; containing nothing suspicious; carrying no firearm: U.S.A.: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'I . . . thought of my room and was thankful that it was "clean"'; by 1938 (David Hume, Good-bye to Life), also British.

clean a kite. To remove original writing on cheque in preparation for forging: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.

clean deal. A cash sale of worthless or almost worthless bonds: commercial underworld: since ca. 1920. Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering, 1931.

clean family lurk, the. "'We dressed to give the notion that, however humble, at least we were clean in all our poverty. On this lurk we stand by the side of the pavement in silence, the wife in a perticler clean cap, and a milk-white apron. The kids have long clean pinafores . . .; they're only used in clean lurk, and taken off directly they come home. The husband and father is in a white flannel jacket, a clean apron and . . . and polished shoes. To succeed in this caper, there must be no rags, but plenty of darns. A pack of pawntickets is carried in the waistcoat pocket. . . . That's to show they parted with their little all before they came to that" . . .', 1851, London Labour and the London Poor, I; app. † by 1900.

clean-finger. A skilful pickpocket; dexterous thief: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex clean, 'neat in movement'.

clean for the works, v. To strip, or cheat, or rob (a person) of everything: 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, "'So you make hay while the sun shines and clean him for the works"' ; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by Moreby Acklom; extant. An elaboration of clean, v., 1.

clean lurk, the. A shortened form of 'the clean family lurk'.

clean one. An empty safe: since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Not soiled with 'filthy lucre'.—2. A stolen car from which all means of identification have been removed: automobile thieves': 1931, Irwin; extant.

clean out. 'To rob, take from forcibly, or to search the person [of]': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1934, Convict, 'Tap a till or clean out the damper, which means robbing a cash register'; by 1940, s. Ex English s. that soon > coll.

clean potato. A free man: Australian convicts': early C. 19. Baker, 1945. Morally clean, readily acceptable.

clean shirt. "'Next week Bill boned a red slang, was lagged and given thirteen clean shirts for his corpse" 'Next week Bill stole a gold watch, was convicted, and given three months' hard labour The phrase "thirteen clean shirts" refers to the fact that convicts are supplied with one clean shirt on their reception into the prison, and with a clean shirt every week after. Thus thirteen clean ones would be issued during the course of a three months' sentence,' J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights on Criminal Matters, 1923; extant.

clean the fish; feed the fish. (Of a fair 'gaffer' or operator) to tell his men or his confederates to drop out, all but one, there being enough customers playing for him to make a heavy winning; (feed . . .) to tell his men or his confederates, to bet high (on, e.g., the wheel) in order to induce the customers (fish) to bet high also: 'carnival crooks', U.S.A. and Canada: C. 20. Anon. letter, June 1, 1946 (Canadian). Cf. clean, v., 1, and fish.

clean the joint! A crooked fair 'gaffer' thus warns his workers and confederates to 'beat it' from the police or to depart without paying rent: Canadian: C. 20. Anon. letter, June 1, 1946. Cf. the prec. entry.

clean-up. A larceny: 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; extant. Cf. clean, v., 1.

cleaner. A robber; a thief, esp. one who 'makes a clean sweep': April 1919, The (American) Bookman, M. Acklom, 'Differentiate a door-rapper from a cleaner'; 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex clean, v., 1.—2. 'Besides "shills" and "steerers", there were "cleaners", who, as soon as a "shill" won anything, had to collect it and hand it back to the man on the stall,' Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938: 'carnival grifters': since ca. 1910; by 1940, circus and carnival s. cleaners, send to the. See send . . .

cleaning racket, the. Burglary: since ca. 1922: July 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke; et al.

clear, v. To succeed in a burglary: 1912, R. A. Fuller, Recollections of a Detective, 'He always "fell" when he worked with an accomplice, but "cleared" all right if he tackled a thing alone'; slightly ob. Cf. the coll. to get clear off, to escape suspicion.

clear, adj. 'Very Drunk', T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, 1688; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'The cull is clear, let's bite him; the fellow is very drunk, let's cheat him'; 1889, B & L; † by 1891 (F & H). Ironical: lucus a non lucendo, as F & H remark.

clear, in the. See in the clear.

clearskin. An unbranded animal (whether horses or cattle): Australian cattle duffers' and horse duffers': ca. 1860–1900, then s. Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery Under Arms, 1881, in The Sydney Mail; in 1878 (Ups and Down), Rolf Boldrewood speaks of "'clean-skinned" cattle'.—2. Hence, 'a man who has had no convictions recorded against him,' Baker, 1945: Australian: C. 20. Baker records it only in the form cleanskin, which is the more usual; and this form has the variant cleanskins, as, e.g., in Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939.

cleave or cleft. See cloven.

clem, n., 'a fight', lies on the borderland between tramps' c. and circus s.; by 1930, it could no longer be classified as c. In Jim Tully's Circus Parade, 1928, there is (pp. 41–42) the well-known circus-song, titled with the battle-cry of the circus: hey, rube!, where rube = an ordinary law-abiding citizen; the term is also recorded in, e.g., The White Tops (the circus periodical) in July 1928.

clem, v. To starve: tramps': late C. 19–20. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932; Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935. Adopted ex dialect.

clemo. An order for a parole or for a shortened sentence: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; ibid., 'take clemo'—to get release by such an order extant. Ex clemency.

clerk, n. An employee in a gambling house: 1930, Burke, 'I get me a job as a clerk in a creep joint'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Euphemistic.

clerk, v.; gen. be clerked or as ppl adj. clerked. To flatter successfully; to fool; to impose on with fair speech: 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker (Jack Sheppard loquitur, concerning Jonathan Wild), 'I clark'd him as he did me: But he swears he'll have you'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1726, Anon., The Art and Mystery of Gaming detected, 'These Lurchers take care to Clark you up for the Interest and Good of the House,' the marginal gloss on 'Clark' being, 'To speak in Praise'; 1785, Grose, 'Clerked, soothed, funned, imposed on'; 1797, Potter, 'Soothed, framed, or imposed on'; 1809, Andrewes, 'Clerked—cheated; imposed on'; 1848, Sinks of London; by the 1850's, current in America (Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859); by 1889 (B & L), it was † in Britain.

cleymans is either a variant of—or an error for—the next. (Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859.) cleyme. A sore; esp. a running sore that is self-induced: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'Bodies of soares (which they call their great cleymes)'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'His chief aim was to make counterfeit sores or "clymes" '; 1688, Randle Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., where it is spelt cleyim; 1785, Grose; † by 1860. A good short account appears in B.E.; a good longer description is given in O per se O, 1612, by Dekker in his section on 'counterfeit soldiers':—'Take unslaked lime and Sope, with the rust of olde yron: these mingled together, and spread thicke on two pieces of leather which are clap [sic] upon the arme, one against the other: two small pieces of wood (fitted to the purpose) holding the leathers downe, all which are bound hard to the arme with a Garter: which in a few howers fretting the skin with blisters, and being taken off, the flesh will appeare all raw, then a linnen cloath being applyed to the raw blistered flesh, it stickes so fast, that upon plucking it off, it bleedes; which bloud (or else some other,) is rubbd all over the arme, by which meanes (after it is well dried on) the arme appeares blacke, and the soare raw and reddish, but white about the edges like an old wound: which if they desire to heale, a browne paper with butter and waxe being applyed, they are cured: And thus (without weapon) doe you see how our Mawndering Counterfeite Souldiers come maymed.' For another method, see palliard. Is it a Cockney pronunciation of claim, the sore constituting a claim to pity?

cleyme, v. To render sore: 1620, Dekker, Villanies Discovered, 'Thus cuffin getting Glymmer, | i'th Prat, so cleymd his Jocky', etc. Ex the n.

click, n. Grose, 1785, 'Click, a blow . . . a click in the muns, a blow or knock in the face'; 1809, Andrewes, 'Click—blow, thrust, knock-down'; 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial, 'Old Corcoran's click, that laid customers flat'; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850 or so, s. It may, in America, have remained c. until ca. 1870 (Matsell, Vocabulum). Echoic. Whence:—2. A robbery or theft: 1896, Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago, “‘I ’ope ’e’s done a click . . . copped some-think . . . Nicked somethink’’; 1925, Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons—where it appears to have > low s. For the semantics, cf. strike, n., 2.—3. A jail, prison: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. click, v., 3, and clicker, 5.

click, v. ‘Click, c. to Snatch. I have clickt the Nab from the Cull, c. I whipt the Hat from the Man’s Head,’ B.E., 1698; 1720, Alexander Smith, Highwaymen, III, ‘Click the Poll from the Cull . . . That is, to snatch a Periwig off a Man’s Head’; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1792, Sessions Papers; 1809, George Andrewes; 1822, Sessions; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1870, s. Ex dial. click (cognate with clutch), to snatch, lay hold of, seize.—2. Among tramps and beggars: to beg successfully: 1923, M. Garahan, Stiffs; extant. A special application of the s. word.—3. To put into jail, to imprison: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. clicker, 5.

click-handed clout, defined by Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936, as ‘left-handed gunman’, is open to the gravest suspicion.

clicker is, ‘among the Canters, used for the Person whom they intrust to divide their Spoils, and proportion to every one his Share,’ A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; † by 1891 (F & H). He who ‘whacks’ it: see whack, v., and click, n.—2. A watch (time-piecer): 1782, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, Sir Wm Plomer’s mayoralty, 6th Session (July), Part iii, p. 479, ‘She said, If you will let me off, I will produce the clicker; and, with a deal of difficulty, I got the watch from her’; † by 1890. For semantics, cf. ticker, 2, and tick.—3. A knock-down blow: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; by 1900, low s. Prob. an agential elaboration of click, n.—4. A thief, esp. a snatch-and-grab thief or a petty thief: 1896, Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago; ob. Ex click, v., 1; cf. click, n., 2.—5. ‘A jailer; a keeper,’ Leverage, 1925: U.S.A. He makes the door go click when he locks or bolts it; cf. click, v., 3.—6. A tout: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; ob. Cf. click, v., 2.

clicket is on the marches of c. and low s.: B.E., who does not classify it as c., remarks, ‘Copulation of Foxes, and sometimes, used waggishly for that of Men and Women’; Grose (1785), however, has ‘. . . Copulation of foxes; and thence used, in a canting sense, for that of men and women: as, The cull and mort are at clicket in the dyke; the man and woman are copulating in the ditch’. Ex S.E. clicket, (of the fox) to be in heat.—The same applies to clicket, to copulate, and the vbl n. clicketting.

clicking. ‘Stealing hats from gentlemen’s heads’: 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull; † by 1900. Ex click, v., 1.

clickman toad, a watch (Grose, 1785), is not c. but s.

clie. See cly.

cliff. A prison: 1925, Leverage; extant. There are high, unscalable walls around it.

cliff, v. To put (a person) into prison: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the n.

clift, v. To steal: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1920. Prob. ex S.E. cleave, ‘adhere to’: sticky fingers.

climb, v.i. To be a cat-burglar: 1900 (implied in climber and climbing); extant—though little used. See climber and cf. :—

climb, at the or on the. Engaged in ‘cat-burglary’—in which climbing ability is required

1931, A. R. L. Gardner, Prisoner at the Bar; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant. Cf. climb.

climb (or run) a tier; go to town. ‘To look for a catamite,’ BVB, 1942. Perhaps by burgle (or burglar) out of climb.

climb (the) three trees with a ladder. To be hanged: 1566, Harman, in his description of the ‘upright man’, says of vagabonds that ‘Repentance is never thought upon untill they clyme three trees with a ladder’; 1788, Grose,—but merely repeating Harman. Possibly c. of ca. 1560–1830, but more prob. s. of a shorter period. Cf. three-legged mare.

climber. A cat-burglar: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, ‘“An’ I say that we hunt up a good sneak an’ climber (sneak-thief and burglar)”’; 1925, Leverage, ‘A porch-climber’ (q.v.); by ca. 1930, English too—as in Axel Bracey, School for Scoundrels, 1934; Arthur Gardner, Lower Underworld, 1942; Black, 1943. He is a skilful climber of buildings.

climbing, n. Cat-burglary: 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers That Prey, ‘“You’re too young to do climbin”’; extant. Cf. climber and see the imm. origin, climb.

clinch, n. A prison cell: 1847 and 1864 (see clinch, get the); 1891, F & H; by 1930, †. Perhaps ex the S.E. sense, ‘a firm hold’.

clinch, v. To settle the business of (a person), to render harmless: 1755, No. VI, Part ii, Sessions Papers, ‘Did you not say, d—n the bitch, when it comes to my turn I’ll clinch the bitch?’; † by 1830. Ex the S.E. sense.—2. To imprison; usually clinchd, in prison: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Cf. :—

clinch, get or kiss the. ‘Get the clinch, be locked up in gaol’: 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxv; 1864, H, 3rd ed. (get . . .); 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1910. See clinch, n.

clinch. A matron ‘hard to be moved’, shrewd and firm: female prisoners’: 1866, A Prison Matron, Prison Characters; slightly ob. A special application of the s. clinch.

clink-rig is a corruption of clink-rig—or, more prob., an error (at first, anyway) therefor: 1864, H, 3rd ed., the first and second edd. having clink-rig; the ed. of 1874, however, has clink-rig; † by 1891 (F & H).

clink, ‘a gaol’, may orig. have been c., but prob. it has always been (low) s.—in the British Empire; in C. 20 U.S.A., however, it is c.—as in Ersine, 1933, and in Bert Chipman, Hey Rube, 1933. The Clink was the gaol in Southwark. ‘From the elinking of the prisoners’ chains or fetters’ (Grose).—2. A silver tankard: 1781 (see clink-rig); 1789, George Parker, Life’s Painter of Variegated Characters; app. † by 1850 in this specific sense. Less common the likewise echoic clank.—3. Hence, ‘Clinks . . . silver milk jugs or silver basins’: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. elxviii; 1889, B & L, ‘Clink . . . plate’; 1891, F & H; † by 1940.—4. Money: U.S.A.: 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York; † by 1920. Cf. chink, 1. Ex Scottish colloquial usage.

clink, v. To arrest; to imprison: 1848, Sinks of London; by 1860, low s. Ex clink, n., 1.—2. To grab; to snatch: Matsell’s error; he misprinted clink for click.

clink and blank. A bank: mostly Pacific Coast : C. 20. M & B., 1944. Rhyming : ? either a perversion, or a misapprehension, of clink and clank, which would be much more in accord with the characteristics of rhyming s.

clink-rig. 'Stealing silver tankards, pints, &c. Landlords too readily trust strangers into rooms where they deposit plate, &c., which is conveyed to a person who waits on the stairs to carry it away': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1859, H; 1889, B & L; † by 1891 (F & H). See the elements.

clinker. 'A crafty fellow,' Coles, 1676; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1891 (F & H). Prob. ex the shipbuilding sense: a workman that clinches the bolts.—2. See clinkers.—3. 'A jailer; a keeper,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A. The term is suspect, both for classification and for country.—4. In the clinker, 'locked up', Hargan, 1935. Perhaps a Sing-Sing term, unknown elsewhere.

clinkers. 'The Irons Felons wear in Gaols [sic]', B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; by 1900—if not by ca. 1890—it was s. Echoic.

clip, v. See clipped, 1, 2. (Ersine, 'Clip, v. To con, cheat'.)—3. To rob; to burgle: Sept. 2, 1937, The Mirror, Mark Hellinger, 'There was the time I clipped a jewelry store'; Nov. 1937, E. H. Sutherland, The Professional Crook; extant. Cf. S.E. clip a coin, or sheep, etc.

clip joint. A gambling den: from ca. 1925: 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; 1935, Hargan, 'Night club with exorbitant prices'; 1939, Mary Sullivan, My Double Life (as in Hargan); extant. Cf. clipped; joint, n., 2.

clip-nit. A dirty ruffian: late C. 17—mid-18. Ned Ward, 1703. Hair-nits connote lousiness, negligence, etc.

clip the mooch. To trim a stocks-and-shares 'sucker': commercial underworld: Sept. 10, 1927, Flynn's, Linn Bonner ('Hey, Mooch!'), '. . . Mr Clipper—what a name for a man in a business where "clipping the mooch" is a trade term'; extant. See mooch, n., 5. Cf. :—

clipped. 'Having been pleasantly separated from one's surplus currency,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928: commercial underworld: 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube; 1933, Victor Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; 1935, Hargan, 'Clip—to rob'; by 1937, commercial and journalistic s. Prob. suggested by S.E. fleeced, 'swindled'.—2. Arrested: 1935, Hargan; extant.

clipper artist. A hobo sheep-shearer; tramps': C. 20. Stiff, 1931. One skilled with the shears or the clippers.

clishpen, 'to break (something) by letting it fall'; clisp, 'to let fall; v.i., to fall': tinkers' s. (? Shelta): 1889, B & L. Shelta has three forms of the word: clisp (or klisp), clispen, chlispen, which R. A. Stewart Macalister, The Secret Languages of Ireland, 1937, derives ex the Erse bris.

clive is a misprint for chive, q.v. at chife. Andrewes, 1809.

cloak. A (gold) watch-case: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'They greatly benefit; either by a Suit, alias Gold-Watch, or two or three Cloaks, alias Gold Watch-Cases'; 1839, Ainsworth, Jack Sheppard, '"Cloaks", commonly called watch-cases'; 1891, F & H; ob. The case 'cloaks' the mechanism.—2. See suit and cloak.

cloak-twitcher. One who steals cloaks by twitching them off persons' backs: 1720, Alexander Smith (see quot'n at silk-snatcher); 1725, A New Canting Dict. makes it clear that the practice has ceased, cloaks no longer being worn by the majority, and adds that these villains constituted the 33rd Order of Canters; the term, therefore, seems to have been current only ca. 1700–24.

cloaker. See choker.

clobber, n. 'A kipsy [basket] full of clobber (clothes)': 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'Clobber . . . Clothes of any kind'; 1889, B & L, who classify it as thieves' c. and as proletarian s.; by ca. 1895, it is no longer c. properly so called. Perhaps an elaborated perversion of clothes, as B & L suggest.—2. One who has often been in prison: since ca. 1920. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932.

clobber, v.i. To dress: 1887, W. E. Henley, Villon's Good-night, 'You judes that clobber for the stramm'; by 1910, no longer s.—witness, e.g., Ware. Ex the n.

clobber, do. To do clobber at a fence is 'to sell stolen clothes': 1891, F & H; by 1900, low s. See clobber, n., and fence, n.

clobberer. An old-clothes dealer: 1827, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, IV, trial of Aaron Lazarus, 'It is Levi the clobberer'; † by 1890. Prob. ex clobber, n., 1.

clock, n. An error for cloak in suit and cloak, q.v., at the reference for 1797.—2. A watch (red clock, a gold one; white c., a silver): 1874, H; not a c. but a low s. term, which >, in c., red 'un and white 'un, qq.v. In the U.S.A., however, it may have been c.—as, e.g., in A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 1912. Humorous.—3. The sense 'human face' is low s.—not, even in U.S.A., c. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931).—4. (Also round the clock.) A year's imprisonment: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Twelve months: the twelve numerals on the clock-face.

clock, v. To capture; to arrest: 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Capture'; extant. Ex industrial clocking-in.

clock and sling. Watch and chain: also Canadian: C. 20. Kernôt, 1929–31. See clock, n., 2, and cf. slang, n.

clock-makers; watch-makers. Resp. 'the hard-working people' and 'the most dissolute persons and young prostitutes' of Calmet Buildings, Oxford Street: local London c. or, more prob., low s. of ca. 1830–60. W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime, 1839.

clock racket, the. A drug-traffic system whereby peddlers contact their customers at given times and places (both changed frequently, according to a schedule): drug traffic: Jan. 11, 1936, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant.

clocky, 'a watchman', may be c., but more prob. low s.: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open. He works 'by the clock'.

clocky, adj., 'ready to fight' (Leverage, 1925): almost certainly not c. but s. Trained to the minute.

clod; usually pl. 'Clods—coppers (i.e., the coins),' George Orwell, Down and Out, 1933: not c., but low London s. In C. 20 South Africa, however, the term may, at least until ca. 1940, be c.: J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946.—2. A street dancer: (mostly London) beggars': C. 20. George Orwell, Down and Out, 1933.

clodhopper. A country bumpkin—cf. clodpate, 'a heavy, dull Fellow' (B.E.)—seems to have orig. been either c., as B.E. holds, or s.; but by 1800, at latest, it had > S.E. Note, however, that B.E. defines the term as 'ploughman': it is therefore admissible to suppose that this, its orig. sense, was c. and that it soon > s. in the s. or coll. sense, a bumpkin. Lit., one who hops the clods that form the furrows in a field actually under the plough.

clogger. "'I put away"—pawned—"all our clogger (clothes) to buy grub"; No. 7, Twenty-Five Years in Seventeen Prisons, 1903; † by 1940. A perversion of clobber—or a blend of clobber + togs.

clogments, the. The stocks: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'In the Clogments; in the Stocks'; † by 1860. Prob. the correct form is clogmans; that which clogs or hinders; mans, c. suffix.

close file. A secretive fellow: C. 19. See file, n.

close mouth. A disreputable establishment or resort: Scottish: C. 20. Partridge, 1937. Cf. speakeasy.

close up a joint. 'To watch a place'—office, shop, etc.—'until the owner locks it up,' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. Cf. case, v.

closer. 'Jarke or closer, a seal': 1797, Humphry Potter; † by 1890. Lit., that which seals or closes.

cloth in the wind, shake a. See shake a cloth . . .

clothes-line. Backdoor gossip between or among neighbours: tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'From the backyard chat between housewives while hanging out the wash' (Irwin).

clothes-line affair. A petty crime: 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police, 'He was never known to be connected with what is termed a "clothes-line affair"'. He started in at the top of the ladder'; by 1895, s. With derogatory reference to the stealing of linen from clothes-lines.

clothes-liner. A petty thief: 1887, G. W. Walling, Recollections; by 1895, s. Ex prec.

clotter is a misprint in C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718, for clouter.

cloud. 'Cloud, c. Tobacco. Will ye raise a Cloud, c. shall we smoke a pipe?', B.E., 1698; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'To take Tobacco . . . Raise a Cloud'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1819, T. Moore (see blow a cloud); app. † by 1860. Ex the smoke it makes when ignited in a pipe.—2. An attic: 1889 (see dig oneself away); extant. Either ex its altitude or ex its being away from the rest of the house.—3. A policeman: South America: C. 20. Harry Franck, Working North from Patagonia, 1921. Proleptic.

clour. A basket: 1797, Humphry Potter (at ped); 1809, George Andrewes; † by 1890.

clout, n. A handkerchief: 1621, B. Jonson, A Masque of the Metamorphos'd Gipsies, 'And Tisle-foot has lost his Clout he says | with a three pence and fower tokens in it'; 1698, B.E.; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'A Wipe, or Clout, alias Handkerchief'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1753, Poulter, Discoveries; 1785, Grose; by 1794, used in U.S.A. (Henry Tufts, 1807); 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'Any pocket handkerchief except a silk one'; 1839, Brandon, 'A pocket handkerchief'; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1859 (witness H, 1st ed.), though it may have survived longer in New York—witness Matsell, 1859. Ex S.E. clout, a cloth, a rag.—2. A blow: Grose, 1785, wrongly classified it as c.—3. Hence (or ex sense 1 of the v.), a robbery, theft: U.S.A.: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; Dec. 24, 1932, Flynn's, Roscoe Dowell; Jan. 19, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant.—4. 'A heavy, awkward, and easily-picked lock', Ersine: since late 1920's.—5. 'Shop-Lifter. Booster, Derrick or Clout. The girl'—or man—'who steals things from stores,' Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Ex:— clout, v. To steal (pocket handkerchiefs): 1734, implied in clouting, q.v.; 1823 (see the same); 1889, B & L (id.); † by 1900, except in New Zealand (Partridge, 1937)—and in Australia (Baker, 1942)—and in U.S.A., where it is recorded in 1914 by Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (U.S.A.), 'clouting . . . Stealing from stores and homes'; 1925, Leverage; May 1928, The American Mercury; 1929, Ernest Booth; 1930, Burke; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To steal, generally by force, from the person. Clouting heaps—Stealing automobiles'; Nov. 7, 1931, Flynn's, George Holmes; July 2, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; 1933, Ersine, 'Usually to shoplift'; April 21, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; extant. Cf. strike, v. Ex clout, n.; cf. knock, v., 2, and knock off.—2. (Esp. as vbl n.) To assault (a person): U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Clouting. Assaulting'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Assault'; 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex the informal-S.E. word.

clout on. An Australian C. 20 variant of clout, v., 1. Baker, 1942.

clouter. 'Clouters. Such as take Handkerchiefs out of Folks Pockets,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, where it is loosely defined as a pickpocket; 1839, Ainsworth, Jack Sheppard (id.); † by 1900—perhaps by 1860. Ex clout, n., 1.—2. A shoplifter: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex clout, v.—3. He who, in a gang of automobile-stealers, actually makes off with a car: car-stealing racket: 1929, The Saturday Evening Post; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; extant. Perhaps ex sense 2, but prob. ex clout, v., 1.

clouting, n. Picking Handkerchiefs out of Pockets, C. Johnson, A History of the Most Famous Highwaymen, Murderers, Street-Robbers, 1734; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1889, B & L; † by 1900. See clout, v., 1.—2. See clout, v., 2.—3. It survives in Britain in a narrowed sense: the carrying, by a female shoplifter, of rolls of silk or cloth between the legs: C. 20. In, e.g., Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933.

clouting heaps, vbl n. Theft of automobiles: since ca. 1920. See clout, v., 1.

clouting lay. 'Picking pockets of handkerchiefs': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; app. † by 1890. Ex clout, n., 1, and v., 1, + lay, n., 2.

cloven. 'Cloven, Cleave or Cleft, used in a Canting Sense, to denote a young Woman who passes for a Maid, and is not one,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'Cleave, one that will cleave, used of a forward or wanton woman'. Perhaps cleave is a c.

verb, whence cloven or cleft, ppl adj. for 'wanton' or 'no longer virgin'.

Clover Meadows. A generic name for a 'good' town, i.e. a town favourable to tramps or thieves or 'con men': 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; slightly ob. Ex pigs in clover.

clowe. A rogue: ca. 1615, Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggars' Bush, '[I] stall thee by the salmon into the clowes', which is translated as '[I] a Rogue thee install'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. Cognate with cloy, itself a variant of cly.

clown. A law officer in country districts: tramps': C. 20: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'For those who have no money, but enough courage to "bum lumps", it is well that the jungles be not too far from a town, though far enough to escape the attention of the natives and officials, the town "clowns"'; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant. Ex the townsman's stupid contempt for the countryman.—2. Hence (?), countryman: tramps' and lesser criminals': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; extant.

clowt. See clout.

cloy, n.; occ. cloye. 'Cloyes, thieves, robbers, &c.' (Grose): 1741 (perhaps)—see cly, n., 3; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. Either by back formation ex cloyer, 2, or direct ex:—2. A pocket: 1821, D. Haggart, Life; † by 1890. A variant of cly, n., 2.

cloy, v., is a variant of cly, its immediate origin; for etymology, see therefore cly. This form dates from rather further back than The O.E.D. gives us to understand, for it occurs in R. Greene, A Disputation, 1592, 'If fortune so favour thy husband, that he be neither smoakt nor cloyed', where the sense is 'to arrest', the basic senses of cly being 'to get, take, seize'; occ. used absolutely or intransitively, as in 'Then take they the opportunity to fibb and cloy' (Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, 1659), where, as in R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665, 'So she and I did stall, and cloy, | Whatever we could catch,' the sense is 'to steal', this sense and its usage as v.t. being the commonest of all—and the only one given in Coles's English Dictionary, 1676, and in B.E.'s Dict. of the Canting Crew, 1698; 1707, J. Shirley (see claw, v.); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1840.—2. See:— cloy the bung. At bung-nipper, B.E., 1698, has this: 'Cloying the Bung, c. cutting the Purse, or Picking the Pocket,' which I take to mean, stealing the purse either by cutting the purse-strings or by removing it from the victim's pocket.

cloye. See cloy, n.

cloyer. An inexperienced pickpocket's or cut-purse's hanger-on, who, immediately the novice brings off a coup, comes along and, on the threat of information to the authorities if his request be refused, demands a share of the booty: 1602, S. Rowlands, Greenes Ghost Haunting Coniecatchers; in Dekker's The Belman of London, 1608, however, cloyer is, in 'figging law', used simply as a synonym of snap (the cutpurse's confederate); † by 1700. Ex cloy, v.—2. Hence, a common thief: 1659, Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, where it is given as a synonym of filer; 1688, Holme, 'Cloyers, Thieves, Purloyners'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Cloyers, Thieves, Robbers, Rogues', the third nuance being a loose usage; † by 1820.

clotyping. The vbl n. of cloyer; 1602, Rowlands, Greenes Ghost, 'The arte of cloying or following'.—2. Of cloy, v., 1; see, e.g., cloy the bung. B.E., 1698, defines it as 'Stealing, Thieving, Robbing'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1739, Poor Robin; † by 1840.

club(-)guy, 'a brutal policeman' (Leverage, 1925), is prob. not c., but s. He uses his club, truncheon, 'billy', much too freely.

clubs and sticks; rare in singular. Detectives: mainly in the West: since ca. 1920: 1934, Convict; 1938, Convict 2nd; 1944, M & B. Rhyming on s. dicks; adopted ex Australian criminals and tramps operating in U.S.A.

cluck, n. A counterfeit coin: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Cluck. Counterfeit money'; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1931, IA; extant. Perhaps because the best counterfeit coins make, on being rung, a noise like that of genuine coins; cf. the jocular make a noise like a human being, to have at least one human characteristic.—2. 'A chump, mark' (Ersine), i.e. an easy dupe: since ca. 1925.

cluck, v. A C. 18 term, defined and first recorded in A New Canting Dict., 1725, 'The Noise made by Hens . . . Whence 'tis us'd, in a Canting Sense, to signify a Wench's Propensity to make Male-Conversation, by her Romping and Playfulness; when they say, The Mort Clucks; or You may know what she'd be at, by her Clucking.'—2. To acquit at sessions or assizes: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); † by 1920. Possibly a misprint for chuck; there is, however, a phonetic connexion, between cluck and chuck.

cluck, pulla. To die: 1931, IA, 'Never used to denominated a killing'; extant. Perhaps the death rattle is to be taken as the root' (Godfrey Irwin).

clush. Easy; suspiciously easy: ca. 1840–1900: 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747, pp. 415–416, '"He could put me up to a real soft thing . . . a snug little crib . . . the sideboard were covered with gold and silver plate.—Well, I tell you, I thought at first it sounded just a bit too clush"'. Prob. not c. at all: it 'sounds' low s. Origin obscure.

cly, n. 'Cly, c. Money Let's strike his Cly, c. let's get his Money from him; also a Pocket. Filed a Cly, c. Picket a Pocket,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Let's strike his Cly; Let's get his Money from him'; 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732; ca. 1775, 'The Potatoe Man', in The Ranelagh Concert; 1785, Grose; 1823, Bee derives it ex sense 2 ('purse or pocket'), thus—'By an easy transition, the shining inhabitants thereof'; app. † by 1860, Henley's employment of the word in Culture in the Slums, 1887, being archaistic.—2. (Prob. the earliest sense.) A pocket: 1698, B.E. (see sense 1); 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd (where it is spelt clie); 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'The Files go before the Cull, and try his Cly'; ca. 1773, Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St. Giles); 1785, Grose; by 1794, in use in U.S.A. (Henry Tufts, 1807); 1809, Andrewes; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III; 1823, Bee, 'Purse or pocket'; 1829, Sessions Papers; 1829, Maginn, Vidocq, III; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1841, Tait's Magazine; 1848, The Man in the Moon, 'Flowers of Felonry'; 1856, Mayhew; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1863, A Lancashire Thief; by 1870, it was †, except in the U.S.A., where it survived until

ca. 1890. A pocket catches or holds things; see cly, v., 1.—3. Pickpocket, A File or a Cly, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 1741; app. † by 1820. A variant of clroy, n.—4. (Ex 2.) A pocket handkerchief: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets . . . Triumph'; app. † by 1870.

cly, v. 'The ruffian clye thee . . . the devyll take thee,' Harman, 1566; ibid., 'To cly the Jerke, to be whypped,' lit., to catch the jerk; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All,

'The quire coves are budgd to the bowsing ken,
As Romely as a ball,
But if we be spid we shall be clyd,
And carried to the quirken hall';

1688, Randle Holme, 'Cly, Haunt, Molest'; app. † by 1800. Possibly a perversion of claw, to scratch with claws (cf. claw, v.). See also clroy, a derivative form.—2. Hence, to pocket: ca. 1789, The Sandman's Wedding, 'Joe sold his sand, and cly'd his cole, sir'; by ca. 1810 it has >:—3. To steal: ca. 1810–70. H, 1874. Possibly ex sense 1; cf. the variant form, clroy.

cly, fake a. See fake a cly.

cly, file a. See cly, n., 1, quotation.

clroy-fake, 'to pick pockets'—says Leverage, 1925. But the usual expression is fake a cly; and even if fake-cly exists, I doubt its existence so late as 1925.

clroy-faker. A pickpocket: 1823, Egan's Grose; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford, 'He . . . muttered something about "upstart, and vulgar clyfakers being admitted to the company of swell Tobymen"'; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin (in form: clyfaker); 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), of Nov. 1; 1849, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, V; 1851, Borrow, Lavengro; 1857, Snowden; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1872, J. Diprose; 1875, G. J. Whyte Melville, Katerfelto; 1891, F & H; † by 1900, despite its occurrence in J. C. Goodwin's Sidelights on Criminal Matters, 1923. I.e., cly, n., 2, and faker.

clroy-faking. Pickpocketry: since ca. 1820: 1851, Borrow, Lavengro, II, iii; by 1845, current in New York (The National Police Gazette, March 21, 1846); 1859, Matsell; 1891, F & H; prob. † by 1900. Cf. preceding.

clroy off, 'to carry away': C. 17. (B & L; F & H cite Brome's The Jovial Crew, 1656.) See cly, v., 1.

clroy the jark(e). See:—

clroy the jerk. 'To clye the gerke, to be whypped,' Harman, 1566; ibid., clroy the jarke, which is either a misprint or a confusion of jerk with jark (q.v.); 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All (. . . jarke); 1665, R. Head, 'Cly the Jerk . . . To be whipped'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; † by 1850—if not, indeed, by 1830. lit., to catch the jerk (jerk referring to the jerk of the flogger's arm).

clroy thee!, the ruffian. See ruffian.

clroye. See clroy.

clroyfaker. See clroy-faker.

clroyme is a variant of clroyme. (R. Head, 1665.)

co. See coe.

coach. A barrow, esp. a coster's barrow: 1743, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. II (James Smith), where it is classified as gamblers' c.; app. † by 1820. Humorously ironic.

coach, take. See take coach.

coach-wheel. A dollar: possibly c., but prob. s. Matsell, 1859. Ex English s. for 'a crown piece'.

coal; in C. 17, occ. coale. See cole.

coal chutes blackie. A Negro: since ca. 1920. Ersine.

coal eight. 'A coal car or gondola, the hobo's landau', Ersine: since ca. 1925.

coal-hell. A coal-mine: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. cxxxii, 'In the bottom of a coal-hell in the county of Stafford'; † by 1900. Not certainly c. Ex the severity of the conditions in coal-mines.

coale. See cole.

coaping cull. See coping cull.

coast. 'To wander from place to place' (Leverage, 1925): but the implied classification as c. is incorrect.—2. To enjoy quietly 'the floating sensation that follows . . . a shot of dope' (Ersine): drug addicts': since ca. 1920. One just coasts along.

coastabout. A roustabout: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

coasting (as in 'He's coasting'). 'Full of dope' (drugs), Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Cf. the semantics of sleigh ride.

coat, n. 'Coat, coating; evidence of previous convictions,' Black, 1943: coat since ca. 1934, coating since before 1931. Prob. coat shortens coating, which obviously derives ex:—

coat, v.; esp. give (someone) a coating. 'The detective (bogey) informed the Court minutely of all his bad points (gave him a coating),' Brown, 1931; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House, 'Having heard his imaginary persecutors severely "coated" by the "screw" . . .'; 1933, George Ingram, Stir, 'Coat, censure, tell off'; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1937, Partridge; extant. Ex tearing the coat from a man's back in a fight, a struggle.—2. Hence (?), to arrest (a person): 1938, Partridge.

coating, n. See coat, n.

cob, 'a dollar', is not c., though it may have been s.—2. A (dark) punishment-cell: convicts': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; app. † by 1920. Perhaps ex s. cob, 'to strike someone upon the buttocks'.

Cobar shower. A flower: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Introduced by Australian tramps and 'con men', Cobar being a small town in New South Wales.

cobble. A convict: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. cxcii, 'A peter cracked and frisked, while the cobbles dorsed . . . A chest broken open and robbed while the convicts slept'; † by 1890. Ex convict and cobbler?

cobble-colter. 'Cobble-colter, c. a Turkey. A rum Cobble-colter, c. a fat large Cock-Turkey,' B.E., 1698; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., exemplifying thus, 'A rum Cobble-colter, a fat, large Cock-Turkey'; 1785, Grose, who classifies it as s., which it had prob. > by 1750 or 1760. Perhaps echoic, or reduplicatory on gobble(r). cobbler, 'a ball': not c. but pitchmen's s.: Philip Allingham, Cheappack, 1934. Ex the next.

cobblers. Testicles: in late C. 19, c.; in C. 20, low s. Short for cobblers' awls, rhyming s. on 'balls'.

cobbler's knot. See Newgate knocker. By 1864 (H, 3rd ed.), it was low s. cobbler's paste. (A dish of) arrowroot: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in an English Prison; ob. Ex its appearance.

cobra, 'to play false with one's friends' (Leverage, 1925); not c.

cobweb cheat, a transparent or easily detectable one: never c. and prob. never lower than coll.; 'S.E.' seems to be the most likely classification.

cocainized, 'under the influence of cocaine' (BVB); not c. but j.

cock, 'a man', 'a fellow', seems to have, in C. 18, been c.: in the trial of Thomas Edwards and others—Feb. 1731–2—a malefactor says, 'Paste cried out, Boys, here's a cock! (that is, a man)', recorded by John Villette in The Annals of Newgate, 1776, after Select Trials, from 1724 to 1382, pub. in 1735.—2. 'A fellow who died game' at the gallows: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; app. † by 1830. Perhaps ex S.E. game cock, a fighting cock.—3. A Londoner, esp. a Cockney born and bred: 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, 'Manchester "hooks" (pick-pockets) who boasts of being the rivals of the "Cocks", or Londoners, in the art of obtaining other people's property without paying for it'; 1891, F & H; ob.

cock, v. To arrest (a person): 1827, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, III, trial of S. Cummings and Charlotte Fuller, 'Both prisoners said that I should be cocked for passing bad money'—but did he mishear copped?; † by 1890.

cock-a-brass. 'A fellow that stands at an ale-house door, when the gentlemen of the drop SPEAK to a man, as they phrase it; that is, pick him up and take him to the above alehouse to jump him, or do him upon the broads, which means cards; as soon as ever they mizzle, if the flat suspects he has been cheated . . . , he comes out in a great hurry to the door, and asks the cock-a-brass which way such men went, the cock-a-brass points out a contrary way This is done in order that . . . no suspicion should fall upon the house. The cock-a-brass is a fellow that can't work himself in their way, and therefore fit for nothing else, than this standing at the door, and acting in the manner described,' 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; † by 1889 (B & L).

cock and hen. A £10 note; ten pounds' worth of money: C. 20. In, e.g., Axel Bracey, Public Enemies, 1934, and David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937, and (F. D.) Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938. Although much used by the underworld, it is to be classified rather as low rhyming s. (on ten).—2. But as 'ten years' sentence or imprisonment', it is c., esp. convicts': C. 20. In, e.g., Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943.

cock bawd. 'A Man that follows that base Employment,' B.E., 1698: less ambiguously, a procurer, a pimp, 'a male keeper of a bawdy-house' (Grose): late C. 17–mid-19. Not c. but s. Most bawds are women; cock differentiates the men from the hen brothel-house keepers.

cock broth. Soup: tramps': 1936, W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps; extant. A humorous animadversion upon its (non-) aphrodisiac properties.

cock-catching. See catch cocks.

cock-eyed. Tipsy: since ca. 1918; by 1935, low s. Ersine, 1933.

cock one's toes. To die: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1870, s.

cock pimp, 'a Supposed Husband to a Bawd' (B.E.), i.e., to either a procuress or a brothel-house keeper or even to a whore, for bawd is loose and varied in its applications: not c. but s.—Cf. cock bawd.

cockatoo. 'Cockatoos.—This name was applied to a body of desperate men, who were imprisoned on Cockatoo Island [in Sydney Harbour, and now named Biloela] . . . under a strong military guard': Australian c., and police (and perhaps also official) s., of ca. 1840–60: 1870, J. L. Burke, The Adventures of Martin Cash, p. 123. Baker, 1945, notes the variants Cockatoo bird, Cockatoo hand, Cockatoo islander, and adds 'Cockatoo Island, Sydney, was first established as a place for convicts in February, 1839, and was constituted the penal settlement N.S.W. in 1841'.—2. A look-out man for a gang or a 'mob': Australian: C. 19–20. Baker, 1942. Also, C. 20, as v.i. Cunningham, Five Years in New South Wales, 1826, refers to cockatoo gangs of convicts, who put a sentry on guard, 'following the example of that wary bird' (cited by Baker, 1945). Perhaps ex Australian cockatoo, 'small farmer': for he is constantly on the look-out for straying stock and for changes in the weather.

cockatooer. A variant of cockatoo, 2. Baker, 1945. Imm. ex the v.

cockchafer. 'Three months' exercise on the "cockchafer" (treadmill)': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, II, 51; 1859, H; 1891, F & H; † by 1910.

cocked hat. An informer to the police: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1910. M & B, 1944. Rhyming rat, n., 5; cf. cabbage hat.

cockernen. As 'a pen' it is rhyming s. As 'ten pounds sterling' it is still rhyming s.—pitchmen's and cheapjacks'. Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934.

cookie or cocky. A derivative variant of cockatoo, 2: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1942.

cookie's clip. A pickpocket: mainly on the Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Presumably introduced by Australians, for cocky is Australian s. (ex cockatoo) for 'farmer'; clip is a sheep-farming term, but there may also be a reference to the v. in clipped. The term rhymes on synonymous dip.

cockles, cry. To be hanged: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'Perhaps from the noise made whilst strangling'; app. † by 1870.

cockpit, the. The punishment cells: C. 20. Not c. but gen. prison s. in several English gaols, e.g. Parkhurst, as in Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows, 1939.

cocktail. A prostitute: since ca. 1919. BVB, 1942. Like a cocktail, she stimulates and excites; there is, moreover, a pun on cock, 'penis', and tail, 'female genitals', as well as one upon cock-tale, 'a bawdy story'.

coco. The head: since ca. 1910: 1931, IA; 1933, Ersine, who spells it cocoa; by 1940, low s. Short for coconut (whence, prob., also the synonymous nut).

cocoa, n. See prec. entry.

cocoa, v. To say, assert, 'bet': 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'She don't do so bad, I should cocoa'; 1937, Robt Westerby, Wide Boys Never Work; extant. Short for rhyming s. coffee (or, occ., tea) and cocoa: 'say so'.

coconuts, 'money': pitchmen's s., not c. The Saturday Evening Post, Oct. 19, 1929, 'Alagazam'.

cocum, n. Advantage: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1859, H, 'Advantage, luck, cunning'; by 1889, low s. (mostly in London),—B & L. Ex the next.

cocum or cokum, adj. 'Very cunning and sly'; fight cocum, 'to be wary': 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; by 1860, low s.; except perhaps in U.S.A.—witness Matsell's Vocabulum. Ex Yiddish kochem, 'wisdom'.

cod, n. In 1698, B.E., thus: 'Cod, a good sum of Money . . . A rum cod, c. a good round sum of Money. A jolly or lusty Cod, c. the same'—cf. the modern s. healthy (sum of money), considerable sum; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1830.—2. Hence (?), a purse: ca. 1690–1910: in 1698, it is implied at rum cod; 1785, Grose; B & L, who derive it from Gaelic cod, 'a bag'; F & H, 1891.—3. 'Humorist' (i.e., a wag), No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: U.S.A.: C. 20; slightly ob. Ex cod, v.i. and v.t., 'to make fun of; to pull a person's leg'.

cod, v. Ware asserts that this is c. of C. 18 and defines it thus:—'To cheat meanly by way of familiarity in relation to eccentric erotics.' If he is justified, then the term is of the same origin as cod, n., 3.

codger, 'a fellow', is s. in England; in U.S.A., prob. low s., although No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, holds it to be c.

coe; rarely co. A form of cove, but found only in combination: see kinchin coe.

cofe. An early form of cove: 1566, Harman, in gentry cofe's ken (q.v.); ibid., in the dialogue, cofe is used as a term of address (see the quot'n at benat); 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light (see quot'n at cove); 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; almost certainly † by 1750.

coffee. Beans: 1859, Matsell; 1891, F & H; app. † by 1920. Ex coffee-beans.—2. A negro: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex colour.

coffee-an. Coffee and a roll: mostly tramps': C. 20. Prob. rather a coll. than a c. term. Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923, 'Old men who do not move around much will live a long time on "coffee-an"'.
 coffee-and habit. See chippy habit.

coffee-bag. A coat-pocket: tramps': 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures (see quot'n at ride the cushions); extant. Where the coffee is carried.

coffee bum. A parole agent: since the late 1920's. Hargan, 1935. 'Perhaps since a job found for a paroled prisoner by a parole agent is one with small pay, one returning what the thief would consider merely "coffee money"' (Godfrey Irwin, private letter, Sept. 18, 1937).

coffee-cooler. A negro: 1925, Leverage; but I doubt its qualifications to be classified as c.: in 1927, Chief Inspector W. C. Gough, in From Kew Observatory to Scotland Yard, mentions that Frank Craig, a Negro boxer, was known as 'the Coffee Cooler'.—2. 'A dead beat; a loafer' (Leverage, 1925): rather police s. than c.

coffee-mill, 'a watchman's rattle' (P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 1824), current ca. 1820–50, may orig. have been c., but prob. it was always s. Ex the noise it makes.

coffee-royal, 'coffee laced with alcohol'—see the first quot'n at alki—is prob. coffee-stall and cheap-café s., not c. The term occurs in P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914.

coffee(-)shop. 'The boss's office,' Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936; extant. Perhaps because he has coffee served there—quite often.

coffin, n., is a rare variant of cuffin, q.v.; see also the 1688 quot'n at cove.—2. A safe, esp. a bank's: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex its appearance; cf.—3. A prison cell: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant.—4. Usually the coffin. A large box wherein, under a tarpaulin, a down-and-out may sleep: since ca. 1919. George Orwell, 1933. The sleeper looks like a shrouded corpse in a coffin.

coffin, v. 'To kill; to put out; to die,' Leverage, 1925; ob. Proleptic.

coffin, the. See coffin, n., 3.

coffin cull is mentioned by H. Potter, 1797, but not defined; perhaps a resurrection man.

coffin-hood. Imitation jewellery: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Ex ornamentation of coffin-lids.

coffin nail, 'a cigarette'; current, ca. 1900–30, among tramps ('a vanishing term': Stiff, 1931), but adopted by them ex gen. s.

coffin-varnish. Bootleg whiskey: ca. 1922–34. Kernôt, 1929–31. Deadly stuff.

cog, n. A piece of money, a coin: 1552, G. Walker (see quot'n at bite, n.); 1698, B.E., 'The Money or whatever the Sweetners drop to draw in the Bubbles'. This sense seems to have fallen into disuse by the middle of C. 19.—2. A method of cheating at dice, esp. by the palming of a die: 1552, G. Walker, Diceplay, 'There be divers kinds of cogging, but . . . the Spanish cog bears the bell, and seldom raiseth any smoke': c. >, by 1590, j. >, by 1640, S.E.—3. Hence, a piece of money dropped as in drop a cog, q.v.: late C. 17–mid-19. B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; Grose implies that the more usual term is a dropped cog.—4. A tooth: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'How the cull flashes his queer cogs; how the fool shows his rotten teeth'; 1823, Bee; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.): 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. Ex cog, a die (in gaming): both teeth and dice being white.—5. (Cf. sense 3.) 'A decoy bank roll,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant.

cog, v.i., to cheat at gaming: 1552, Gilbert Walker, Diceplay: c. >, by 1590, jargon; app. † by 1890 at latest, Egan's Grose prob. recording an obsolescence.—2. Hence, to conceal (a die); to secure it: mid-C. 16–20; ob. Implied in Walker's Diceplay; B.E.; Grose.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) V.i., to cheat, orig. at gaming: since the 1580's: c. >, by 1640, jargon; † by 1900. Robert Greene.—4. To obtain by wheedling or begging: c. (—1698) and low slang. B.E., 'Cog a Dinner, to wheedle a Spark out of a Dinner': 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1850.—5. 'To show a decoy bank roll,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: C. 20. Cf. sense 5 of the n.

cog-foist. A cheater, orig. at cards or gaming: recorded only in C. 17, but prob. extant until ca. 1800. Wily Beguiled, 1606 (O.E.D.). See the elements.

cogg. See cog, n. and v. cogger. A (card)sharper, a cheater at gaming: 1576, Woolton, 'Stealers, cut-purses, coggers, dicers' (O.E.D.): c. >, by 1590, slang >, by 1640, S.E. Ex cog, v.

coggies. Turnips: tramps': late C. 19-20. Gipsy Petulengro, A Romany Life, 1935. Ex Romany? Perhaps a corruption of Romany konafni. Much more prob. an adoption of Shelta kogi, a turnip.

cogging is the vbl n. of cog, v., 1: 1552, G. Walker, Diceplay.—2. And its ppl adj.: 1585, John Higgins in The Nomenclator, defines aleator improbus et pravaricator as 'A cogging, foysting, or cousening gamster at dice'.

coglione. 'A fool; a woman's dupe; a fop,' says Matsell, 1859: but is not this an error arising from a misreading of Grose's note on the origin of cully?

cogman. A beggar pretending to be a shipwrecked sailor: late C. 19-20. In, e.g., F. Bowen, Sea Slang, 1929. Cf. cog, v.

cogniacer. See coniaccker, reference of 1889.

cohab. 'The penitentiary was small then. There was no work except farming and gardening, which was all done by "cohabs", Mormons convicted of unlawful cohabitation,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926; extant.

coil, make a. To complain loudly; make a great fuss: Australian: 1895 (see ike); by 1930, ob.; by 1946, †. Cf. S.E. coil, 'trouble; fuss'.

coiler. A beggar, a 'dead-beat', that sleeps on wharves or in parks: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. He just coils up anywhere and goes to sleep.

coke, n. Cocaine: 1919, Arthur Stringer, The Man Who Couldn't Sleep, "'Do you know why he's called Coke Whelan?" she demanded . . . "It's because he's a heroin and cocaine fiend"' ; 1922, Emily Ferguson, The Black Candle; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; by 1926 (witness Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals), it was also English c.; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; 1928, John O'Connor; March 23, 1929, Flynn's, the article 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery' implies that the term was current in the New York underworld as early as ca. 1899; May 24, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, Mrs Cecil Chesterton, Women of the Underworld; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1932, David Hume, Bullets Bite Deep; 1933, Ersine (coke, coque); 1933, Cecil de Lenoir; by 1935, far too widely used to rank any longer as c. Obviously 'cocaine'.—2. Hence, any type of narcotic: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1933, Eagle; extant.—3. (Ex sense 1.) 'An unlikely or exaggerated story from the well-known effect of cocaine on the addict's power of reasoning and ability to stick to the truth,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931; extant.—4. A cocaine addict: 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant. Either ex sense 1 or short for cokey.

coke, v. Always either in the passive (see the coked up entry) or in the reflexive, as in David Hume, Cemetery First Stop, 1937, 'He didn't mind men getting tangled with marihuana smokes or "coking" themselves at times': since ca. 1920: by 1940, low s. Ex the n.

coke-blower. A cocaine addict, who takes the drug by sniffing it: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Drug addict'; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; extant. See the elements.

coke fiend—G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924—is, I feel, not a genuinely underworld variant of coke-head: it is a shade too reminiscent of dope fiend.

coke head. A cocaine addict: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'Not infrequently "coke heads" or "snow-birds" are found among the hobo workers': 1927, Kane, 'Coke heads—cocaine addicts; by extension, users of any drugs'; 1931, Stiff; Sept. 19, 1931, Flynn's, Paul Annixter; 1933, Eagle (cocaine—and other drugs); July 7, 1934, Flynn's, Convict 12627; 1942, BVB; extant. See coke, n., 1, and cf. hop-head.

coke joint. 'A place where cocaine is sold,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See the elements and cf. — coke oven. A resort of cocaine addicts: since ca. 1930. BVB.

coke party. 'A gathering at which cocaine or some other drug furnishes the stimulation usually found in liquor,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931; by 1935, journalistic s. See coke, n., 1 and 2.

coke-peddler, 'one who peddles cocaine', seems to have always been police s.—low s.—s., anyway. It occurs in, e.g., Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves, 1925.

coked up. Excited, or exalted, by having taken cocaine: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; July 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'Some coked-up rummy'; Aug. 15, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse; Feb. 27, 1937, Flynn's, Cornell Woolrich, 'Coked to the eyebrows'; extant. Ex coke, n., 1.

coker. 'Cokir . . . A liar,' R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665; but Coles, 1676, defines it as 'a lye', as do B.E., J. Shirley (The Triumph of Wit), and Grose; Alexander Smith, however, in The History of the Highwaymen, 1714, repeats Head's definition (and spelling). B.E.'s entry runs: 'Coker, c. a Lye, rum Coker, c. a whisking'—i.e., great—'Lye'. As c., the term fell into disuse ca. 1840; it may even have > s. as early as 1740. In a way, coker is its descendant, but, etymologically, both coker and corker may be mere variants of caulker.

cokey or cokie. A cocaine addict: 1922, Emily Ferguson, The Black Candle; 1925, Leverage; 1928, May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story; Feb. 2, 1929, Flynn's, J. F. Fishman, 'Fine Feathers'; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, in ref. to and valid for ca. 1908; 1930, Charles F. Coe, Gunman; by ca. 1930, current in England (as in John G. Brandon, The One-Minute Murder, 1934); Jan. 31, 1931, Flynn's; Aug. 15, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse; 1933, Ersine; 1933, James Spenser, Limey; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations, whence it appears that the term was certainly current ca. 1912-15 in New York City; 1935, Hargan; 1939, Hickman Powell, Ninety Times Guilty; by 1940, low s. in U.S.A.; in Britain, it has remained c. Ex coke, n., 1.—2. Hence, a dreamer: 1935, Hargan; extant.

cokomo, kokomo. A drug addict (esp. to cocaine): since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. Fanciful on coke.

cokum. See cocum.

cold. (Of a house or other building) unoccupied, untenanted: 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'If they are going to rob it "cold" (when no one is there) . . .'; (of a person) alone, as in Kernôt, 1929-31; extant. Lacking human warmth.—2. No longer wanted or sought-for by the police: 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life, where it is applied to a motor-car; extant. Not hot.—3. Unlikely to furnish action or give results, outmoded: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1936, Herbert Corey, 'No chance for action'; extant. Ex a corpse, 'cold as death'.

cold, in the. Imprisoned; in prison: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. There is no heating in the cells.

cold-biting; cold-botting. A beggar's frank request for a loan (-biting) or, at a house-door, for a meal (-botting): New Zealand and Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1941 and 1942. Cf. s. bite, 'to ask (someone) for a loan'; bot is low Australian s. for 'to sponge'. Ex the persistent bot-fly.

cold-cock, v. 'To render insensible by a blow with a bottle, club, etc.': 1931, Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; extant. To cool the ardour of (someone).

cold cook, an undertaker of funerals: s., not c. Grose, 1785. It is, however, possible that its C. 20 use in U.S.A.—as in Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936—is c.; cf. cold-meat party.

cold deck, n. 'A prepared deck of cards played on a novice or "sucker"': 1859, Matsell; ibid., p. 110, 'This is generally done in short cards, or short games. . . . When cleverly done, the trick cannot be discovered'; 1891, F & H; by 1900, no longer c. Deck itself was never c., and since ca. 1910, it has been virtually standard American. A pack is laid or spread on the table—on the deck, as it were. Cold, because the preparation is made in cold blood.

cold-deck, v. To substitute a stacked pack of cards for the pack honestly shuffled and cut: late C. 19–20. First record, 1909, in Confessions of a Con Man, by Will Irwin, who deals with the approximate period 1890–1905. Since ca. 1925, it = 'to cheat, not necessarily with cards'—as in Bert Chipman, Hey Rube, 1933. Ex the noun-phrase (preceding entry).

cold-decker. A card-sharper: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Gambler'; extant. Ex the preceding.

cold iron. 'Derisory Periphrasis for a Sword,' says B.E., 1698: certainly not, as several lexicographers state, a c. term.

cold(-)meat. A corpse: 1924 (implied in cold-meat party); 1930, Burke, 'Get me, sucker: lay off or you'll be cold meat'; 1933, Ersine, 'Usually a murdered one'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex English.

cold-meat cart. A hearse: 1930, Burke, 'Ambulance hell! It's the cold-meat cart you want'; 1934, Rose; extant. See prec.

cold-meat party. A wake; a funeral: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1931, John Wilstach; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. See cold meat.

cold one. An empty wallet, money-box, cash register, safe: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. cold.

cold pig, 'the throwing of cold water upon a lie-abed', is s.—2. Hence (?), in U.S.A., 'a person that has been robbed of his clothes': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1930.—3. A corpse: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; extant—but by 1920, it was low s. Cf. cannibals' long pig.

cold pigging. A New Zealand variation of cold-biting. Baker, 1941.

cold prowler; cold prowler. The former is a variant of cold-slough prowler; for the latter, see hot prowler: Nov. 1928, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'Three Curious Burglars' (c. prowl); 1934, Convict (c. prowler); 1938, Convict 2nd (id.); extant.

cold slough. 'Deserted house to be burglarized,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; 1925, Leverage; March 13, 1926, Flynn's; 1935, Howard N. Rose; extant. Perhaps humorously ex S. Am. coleslaw, 'salad of chopped cabbage'.

cold-slough prowler (or prowling); cold slough prowler. Thieving (or a theft) from a deserted house; a burglar specializing in deserted houses: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (all three); March 13, 1926, Flynn's (the second); 1927, Kane (2nd); 1931, Godfrey Irwin (2nd); by 1932, mostly superseded by cold prowler, c. prowler.

cold turkey. 'French leave; a departure without explanation,' Leverage, 1925; ob.—2. 'Absolutely, with no possibility of evasion,' IA, 1931; extant. Prob. ex:—3. 'A form of drug "cure", the addict being taken off his drug at once and given various body-building tonics to restore his health,' IA, 1931: drug addicts': 1931, Arthur Woods, Dangerous Drugs; 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, Confessions of a Drug Addict; by 1934 (Ferd. Tuohy, Inside Dope), it was medical and journalistic s.

cold-turkey heel and its synonym raw-jawed clout. Among shoplifters, these two terms 'refer to the act of going into a store and carrying out several articles without using any finesses at all,' Roscoe Dowell in Flynn's, Dec. 24, 1932; extant.

cold turkey rap. An accusation, a charge, against a person caught in the act: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; extant. Prob. ex cold turkey, 3.

cole; by Greene in The Second Conny-catching, 1592, it is spelt cool. Money: 1592, Greene; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers; 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (glossary), 'Coale, Ready, Rhino, Darby. Ready money'; 1692, Anon., The Notorious Impostor, 'What should we handle Cattle unless we had Cole to buy 'em'; 1698, B.E. (cole); 1720, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, III; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1776, J. Villette, The Annals of Newgate; 1785, Grose; ca. 1789, The Sandman's Wedding; 1809, Geo. Andrewes; 1823, Bee; 1825, The Universal Songster, I, 'Zedekiah, the Jew', '. . . All thought I've got is | To pocket the cole!'; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open, 'Cole, or coal, blunt, money'; by 1860, s. and often spelt coal. (In late C. 19–20 pitchmen's s., coal = a penny: Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934. Perhaps = coal, which, like money, keeps men warm.—2. A misprint for coll (= cull), a man: 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue.

cole, post the. See post.

cole, flash one's. To be extravagant; throw one's money about: 1746, trial of Henry Simms, in Select Trials, from 1741 to 1764, I, pub. in 1764; ca. 1860, it > low s. See cole.

cole prophet. See No. 17 in the entry at Awdeley's. The term was † by 1660 at latest. Here, cole = trickster; since the phrase cole prophet = a necromancer or a fortune-teller, and since it is S.E., Awdeley's sense, 'would-be necromancer', is prob. to be likewise classified as S.E. colguarian. See colquarron.

coliander (or coriander) seed(s). Money: 1698, B.E. (coliander-seed); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (col-); 1730, Anon., A History of Executions, 'Their Companions, tho' in the Dumps for the loss of the Corriander Seed, could not forbear grinning'; 1785, Grose (colliander—or coriander—seeds); 1802, M. Edgeworth (corianders); 1809, Andrewes (coriander s.); 1823, Bee, 'Coriander-seed—coined money'; 1836, Autobiography of Jack Ketch, 'I . . . shoved the corianders into this pocket'; 1841; H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'As long as the corianders vill last'; by ca. 1845, current in U.S.A.—but as s. (witness D.A.E.); 1848, Sinks of London, 'Coriander seed, money'; † by 1891, according to F & H, but the Rev. Frank Jennings (In London's Shadows) records it as still in use as late as 1926. With a pun on cole; the plant referred to is Coriandrum sativum.

coll is an occ. mid-C. 17—mid-18 variant of cull. Charles Cotton, The Compleat Gamester, 1674, 'Lambs, or Colls'; 1724, Harper (see quot'n at boozing ken); 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue.

collar, n. As the collar, it = arrest: 1872 (see collar, give the); 1893 (see collar, get the); 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'It was for that stick-up . . . the two [policemen] made the collar'. But from ca. 1890 it had also been police s. Ex collar, v., 2.—2. Hence, or directly ex collar, v., 2, a police officer: since ca. 1895: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'It is better to keep under cover while the collars are warm'; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; ob.—3. Short for collar and cuff, q.v.: C. 20. Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934.

collar, v. To seize; steal: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd, gives 'Collar the Cole, Lay hold on the Money' as a c. phrase; collar may have been c. until ca. 1770, though H, 1874, as good as says that it was still c. in the early 1870's. 'Put a collar on.'—2. Hence, to arrest: Oct. 1853, Sessions Papers; soon U.S.A.—witness Matsell, 1859; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1885, M. Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; 1903, Owen Kildare, My Mamie Rose, '"Collared" by a "cop"'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1905, low s., in the British Empire; by 1910, perhaps by 1905, police s. in U.S.A.

collar, get the. To be arrested: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne, 'I done them jobs Shay got the collar for'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; but in C. 20, it is as much police s. as it is c.—therefore, strictly, no longer c. at all. Cf. the next entry.

collar, give the. To put under arrest: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'Jackson and "Shultz" were "given the collar" by U.S. Detectives, and taken direct to the headquarters of Chief Whitley'; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; by 1900—if not a decade earlier—it was also police s. An elaboration of collar, v., 2, or of the n., sense 1.

collar and cuff. An effeminate; a passive homosexual: late C. 19–20; by 1930, low s. Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934. Rhyming s.—? on 'a piece of stuff'; more prob. on puff, n., 2.

collar and elbow joint. A restaurant where the customers sit close together at one long table: 1933, Ersine; by 1940, s.

collar and shoulder style. All the food on the table and the tramp allowed to help himself to it: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who, however, makes it clear that the phrase, besides coming from cheap boarding houses and from construction camps, is s. used in those places.

collar bent. A scarf or a tie: 1889 (see apple-guard); app. † by 1930. A scarf—though not a tie—hides the lack of a collar; a stock takes the place of a collar and tie.

collar bum. 'A cheap thief,' Leverage, 1925; extant.

collar day, 'execution day' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), may orig. have been c., but prob. it was always s. That day on which the condemned person dons a hempen collar.

collar (a person's) dragons. To steal his money: see dragon.

collar felt, get one's, 'to be arrested': C. 20: police (and other) s. rather than c. In, e.g., Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941—and in many earlier works.

collar on, put the. See put the collar on.

collat. As 'Money; bonds (no doubt from collateral),' as Leverage, 1925, has it, is commercial s., not c.; but derivatively as 'jewellery' (Leverage, 1925) it may possibly be c.—though I doubt it. The same applies to colleague.

colle, 'money; cash' (Leverage, 1925).

colleague. A fellow prisoner: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. college chum.

collector, a highwayman: s., not c. Grose, 1785.

colledge. See:

college, in the ancient and not so ancient underworld, meant a school wherein novices learned the arts of crime, esp. of pickpocketry, burglary, confidence trickery, these novices being called scholars: 1552, Gilbert Walker, Diceplay, has both terms; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'Thou art yet but a mere fresh-man in our Colledge'; 1625, B. Jonson, The Staple of Newes, 'And enter your great worke of Canter's Colledge, | Your worke and worthy of a Chronicle'; 1677, Anon., Sadler's Memoirs. This sense was app. † by 1690 or so.—2. See College, the.

college, go to, in C. 20 England = to go to one of H.M. Borstal Institutions. Arthur Gardner, Lower Underworld, 1942. See College, the, 2.

College, New. See New College.

College, the. 'Newgate; also the Royal Exchange,' B.E.: 1677, Sadler's Memoirs (Newgate); 1721, D. Defoe, Moll Flanders, in reference to Newgate Prison; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1890. Cf. college, 1.—2. Hence, any other large London prison: 1770, R. King, The Frauds of London detected, where it is applied to King's Bench Prison and Fleet Prison; 1785, Grose, 'College, Newgate, or any other prison'; 1802, G. Barrington, plagiarizing King; 1822, J. Burrows, Life in St George's Fields (the King's Bench Prison); 1823, Bee (the Fleet Prison); 1848, Sinks of London, 'The King's Bench or Fleet Prison'; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 'A State prison'; † by 1880 in England, but still current in U.S.A. in 1925, when Leverage defines college thus, 'A prison; especially a State prison'; Burke, 1930, defines it as a reformatory; D. W. Maurer (The Writer's Digest, Oct. 1931), as a penitentiary; 1934, Rose; 1935, David Lamson; 1938, Castle; 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy; and others since.

college chum. A fellow prisoner: 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A. (Matsell, 1859); 1891, F & H; 1944, Cecil Bishop, Crime and the Underworld; extant. See college and College, the.

college copper. 'Highly placed officials . . . had let loose against the underworld hordes of half-trained and half-baked detectives from the police college at Hendon. "College Coppers" these new men were called in the underworld,' James Spenser, Crime against Society, 1938: since ca. 1930.

college cove, a turnkey; the College cove, the (Chief) turnkey at Newgate Prison: 1811, Lex. Bal.; † by 1890. See College, the, 1 and 2.

college town, 'a country town; a rural sort of town or township', may orig. have been tramps' c., but prob. not. Josiah Flynt, 'The American Tramp', in The Contemporary Review, Aug. 1891, 'Clothes are best obtained in what are termed "college towns", and are as often stolen from clothes-lines as begged. Some tramps get all their apparel in this way.'

collegian. A prisoner in Newgate: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; † by 1890. See College, the.—2. Hence, a prisoner in any civil prison: 1820, W. T. Moncrieff, The Collegians; 1891, F & H; † by 1900 in Britain; but app. the term has been current in U.S.A. since ca. 1890—it occurs, e.g., in Leverage, 1925.

collegiate; usually pl. After defining College as 'Newgate; also the Royal Exchange,' B.E., 1698, lists Collegiates, which he defines as 'those Prisoners, and Shop-keepers'; that is, prisoners in Newgate—but what precisely does he mean by 'shop-keepers'? Grose, 1785, makes it clear that it is the shop-keepers of the Royal Exchange who are meant; 1891, F & H; † by 1900. Cf. collegian.

collier's lurk, the. Feigning to be a miner or a collier out of work, gen. as the result of a terrible accident: 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; app. † by 1900. See lurk.

colly. To understand: commercial underworld: since ca. 1920. Maurer, 1941. Prob. a perversion of s. compre.

Colonel Chesterton's everlasting staircase. 'Everlasting Staircase, the treadmill. Sometimes called "Colonel Chesterton's everlasting staircase," from the gallant inventor or improver': 1859, H; † by 1900. See everlasting staircase. Not the inventor; the inventor was one Cubitt.

Colonel Sparkler. 'A slick jewel-thief,' Kernôt, 1929-31. See sparkler; Colonel is an ironic courtesy-title.

colonial livery. See Botany Bay coat-of-arms.

colonial Puck. Sexual intercourse: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on the famous four-letter word.

colored stuff. 'The jewel thief . . . knows exactly where to go . . . There are numerous contracts to be made, with one man who specialises in diamonds, another who sells pearls, a third perhaps who goes in for "colored stuff", as rubies, emeralds, and other colored stones are called,' Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937; extant.

colquarron. A man's neck: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'His Colquarron is just about to be twisted. He is just going to be turn'd off'; 1785, Grose; 1809, Geo. Andrewes, wrongly colquarion; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford, 'Mum's the word, for my own little colquarren'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1848, Sinks of London, where it is oddly spelt colquarian; † by 1891 (F & H). Origin? Perhaps Fr. col, neck + c. quarron (body).

colt. 'The Inne-keeper or Hackney-man, of whom they—the gang of rank riders (see rank rider, 1)—"have"—actually, steal—"horses, is cald A Colt,' Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608-9: app. current only ca. 1600-70.—2. Hence, 'an Inn-keeper that lends a Horse to a Highwayman, or to Gentlemen Beggars,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1850.—3. 'A Lad newly initiated into Roguery': 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1850. Ex S.E. sense, 'an apprentice newly bound or engaged.'—4. A thief's 'billy' (billy, 3): 1891, F & H; † by 1940.

colt man. Coltman. One who lets horses and vehicles to burglars': 1859, Matsell; 1891, F & H; † by 1920. An elaboration of colt, 2.

com, comb, combo. A combination knob on a safe: Aug. 2, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick (com); Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer (comb, combo); April 16, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; 1934, Howard N. Rose (2nd, 3rd); extant.

com shot. 'A blast set off in the combination lock of a pete,' Ersine, 1933: since late 1920's. See prec.

comb. See com.—2. Carpenter's file: convicts': since ca. 1920. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938, 'A comb an' slider, an' thirty quid . . . A comb and slider! A file and hacksaw!'

combination. 'Vegetable stew; a tramp dish cooked up on those days when materials for "mulligan" are not to be had': tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1933 (W. R. Burnett, The Giant Swing), it was eating-house s. Short for combination stew.

combination train is railroad j., adopted by tramps, for a mixed passenger and freight train. 'It is also called an accommodation, or peddler' (Stiff, 1931): see these terms.

combine. The lock-portion, the combination mechanism, of a bank-safe: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; extant.

combo. See com.—2. A synonym of combination; any meal: Ersine, 1933.

come. To lend (money): 1698, B.E., 'Has he come it?', c. has he lent it you?'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1823, Bee, 'To Come it—to comply with a request, as lending money'; † by 1891 (F & H). Cf. modern s. come across with (an object, information).—2. To perpetrate; to do or suggest (something illicit or downright criminal): 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'He—the ring-dropper—then comes the stale story of, "If you will give me eight or nine shillings for my share, you shall have the whole"; 1823, Bee, "Come it strong, To"—is to pitch lies heavily'; April 1859, Sessions (p. 581), 'I told the prisoner if she came it any more, I certainly would lock her up'; by 1865, low s.—3. See come it, 2. (Also W. Leman Rede, The Rake's Progress, 1833, ' . . . Snump, who threatens to peach—if he comes, all's up'.)—4. 'A thief, observing any article in a shop, or other situation, which he conceives may be easily purloined, will say to his accomplice, I think there is so and so to come,' Egan's Grose, 1823, but an earlier example occurs in Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, Dec. 1821 (p. 13), 'I asked Hall if he was coming home, he said, No; there was something to come very easy, and he should not leave till he got it. He asked me to jump it; "No, I shan't"'; moreover, Egan plagiarizes Vaux (1812); app. † by 1890.

come-along. (Usually in pl.) 'Come-alongs. Articles of twine or wire, used by policemen in lieu of handcuffs,' Sylva Clapin, A New Dict. of Americanisms, 1903; 1929-31, Kernôt, 'Handcuffs'; 1931, IA; extant. Ex the policeman's 'Come along, you!' Cf. :—2. 'Device for pulling a lock out by the roots,' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; July 11, 1925, Flynn's; 1931, IA; April 16, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; 1934, Rose; extant.

come-back or comeback. Concerning the operations of a gang of 'green goods' swindlers, W. T. Stead, at p. 114 of Satan's Invisible World Displayed, 1898, writes, 'A considerable number of the guys, or the victims, never came back, being too thoroughly ashamed of their folly to face an exposure; but a certain proportion did. These "Come-backs", as they were called, naturally applied to the Detective Bureau'; at the foot of the same page, it is clear from a citation of the Lexow report, 1894, that the term was also applied to the complaint lodged by a victim; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'He said he was afraid I would kill the old fellow, and that the come-back would be too strong,' where the sense is 'outcry' or 'police hue-and-cry'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Come Back. Vehement complaint'; since ca. 1925, merely historical.—2. Hence (?), 'A wire-tapping swindle,' Leverage, 1925; extant.—3. A prompt or quick detection (of a crime or a criminal, by the police): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1930, or rather earlier, police j.

come clean. 'to make a clean breast of it': perhaps, orig., c., but prob. always s. Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1933.

come copper. To become an informer, to give information, to the police: June 29, 1905 (Essex cases), Sessions Papers; 1929, Tom Divall, Scoundrels and Scallywags, 'Jones, with others, was going to lure the suspected informant into an old dilapidated house . . . and there hang him for "coming copper" (giving information)'; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote it; 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night; 1939, Geo. Ingram, Welded Lives; 1943, Black; extant. Cf. come grass; and see copper, n., 3.

come down. To pay up; hand over money, or all one's money: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator. 'The Cull comes down, alias the Man puts his hand in his Pocket'; 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732; 1848, Sinks of London, 'To give, stand treat'; by 1860, s.—2. To confess to a crime: U.S.A.; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; † by 1920. To come down from one's perch of proud silence.

come grass. To inform to the police: 1931, Brown; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1936, David Hume, Bring 'Em Back Dead!, 'He didn't come grass on Rooley, but I thought it was time somebody did'; 1938, F. D. Sharpe (of the Flying Squad); 1943, Black; extant. See grass, n., and cf. come copper.

come-in (man). That member of a confidence gang who, apparently a complete stranger, comes in at a moment suitable to the making of an impression upon the prospective victim: since ca. 1910. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938.

come it. See come, 1.—2. (Often as vbl n., coming it.) To be an informer; to inform to the police: 1812, J. H. Vaux (at wear it); 1823, Egan's Grose, 'They say of a thief, who has turned evidence against his accomplices, that he is coming all he knows, or that he comes it as strong as a horse'; 1835, Sessions (Jan.); 1839, Brandon; 1846, The National Police Gazette, March 21 (U.S.A.); 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms (Australia, where current since ca. 1820); 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1891, F & H; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; 1935, Geo. Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade; extant. Cf. come, 1 and 2.—3. See :— come it! Be quiet!: ca. 1860-1910. (B & L, 1889.) Perhaps an ellipsis of s. come off it!

come it as strong as a horse. See the 1823 reference in come it, 2.

come it at the box; come it at the broads. To dice (box); to play cards (broads): since ca. 1880: 1889, B & L; slightly ob. See broads.

come it over. 'to trick, to imprison; to persuade', is not c., but s., orig. low.

come it strong. To do a thing vigorously or thoroughly, as in W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicancy and Crime, 1839, '[In the hulks] the fellows sing psalms vigorously, and if they "come it strong" as they call it, they calculate upon a remission of their sentence': not c., but s.—see Partridge, 1937.

come-off. 'A clean get-away,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. :—2. 'The "come-off", as the confidence man calls the process of relieving the sucker of his dough,' Roy W. Hinds, 'Ben Holds the Job' in Flynn's, Dec. 11, 1926; extant. Ex the v. in 'It came off'—succeeded.

come-on. 'The victim [in a 'green goods' swindle], who was known as a "Come on" or as a "Guy", was swindled by a variety of methods,' W. T. Stead, Satan's Invisible World Displayed, 1898, p. 109; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, where, however, it forms an example of police s.; by 1910, perhaps even by 1907, it can no longer be classified as c. The victim, when urged to 'Come on! Here's an opportunity', obligingly 'comes on'. —2. (Hence ?) a circus-employee that buys the first tickets, to encourage legitimate trade: either tramps' c. and circus s., or the latter merely adopted by the former; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat. —3. The sense 'deception; lure; enticement' is implicit in sense 1, but my first record of it as used independently is in Leverage, 1925; extant.—4. Hence (?), a confidence man's inducement to his prospective victim: Australian: since ca. 1925. Baker, 1942 and 1945.

come-on game. 'Trick devised to rob victim of his money,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; by 1930, police s. Cf. come-on, 1.

come-on guy. An accomplice, acting the part of 'sucker' or 'spectator', in a swindling game or in a confidence game: 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 'A young man from New York, who had the concession to run an "if-you-win-you-lose game", engaged us as "come-on guys" . . . Each of the "come-on guys" was given five dollars with which to gamble'; by 1930, English, too; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'Come on guy for a con gang, ain't you?'; extant. Ex his persuasive 'come on!' to the real dupe.—2. Among tramps (and labour gangs), 'a fellow who boosts things along on the job, for which the boss gives him on the sly a little more pay,' Stiff, 1931; extant.

come one's guts. To confess fully to the police, to tell them all one knows: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'But supposing he comes his guts and puts the squeak in'; 1939, id., What Immortal Hand; extant. Cf. come grass and spill one's guts.

come over. 'To come over any one, to cheat or over-reach him': 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1870, low s. Perhaps a punning reversal of overcome, 'to get the better of'.—2. To admit an offence, to plead guilty to a charge: New Zealand: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter); extant.

come the fawney. See fawney, come the.

come the slang. See slang, come the.

come the Traviata. To feign phthisis: better-class prostitutes': ca. 1854–90: Ware, 1909. Ex Verdi's opera La Traviata, 1853, based on Dumas the Younger's La Dame aux Camélias.

come through (with). To deliver, surrender: ca. 1912, George Bronson-Howard, The Snob, 'Come through with them' (give them up); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'He learned to "come through" Coming through is crook slang, which indicates the act of the stall [i.e., accomplice] in colliding with the victim to enable the wire [the expert pick-pocket] to "lift the leather"': by 1930, it was fairly gen. s.—2. 'To confess; to tell the truth,' Leverage, 1925; by 1940, police and journalistic s. Prob. ex sense 1.

come to it through poll, 'to inform to the police through spite' (G. W. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxiii), is prob. not a genuine c. phrase. Cf. come it, 2.

come-to-Jesus. 'A come-to-Jesus manner, means to feign piety. A come-to-Jesus collar is one worn by a preacher,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': C. 20: 1931, IA, 'Pious, or religious'; by ca. 1932, it was low s.—cf. the English creeping Jesus, 'a sneak; a sanctimonious hypocrite'. Among tramps, too, a detachable shirt-collar is a come-to-Jesus band (Stiff, 1931).

come to the heath. 'A phrase signifying to pay or give money, and synonymous with tipping, from which word it takes its rise, there being a place called Tiptree heath, in the county of Essex,' Egan's Grose, 1823, plagiarizing Vaux, 1812; † by 1850.

come up. (Of favourites) to win: race-course gangsters' and crooks': C. 20; by 1940, low s. Partridge, 1937. I.e., the favourite 'comes up to the mark'.

comeback. See come back.

comer. A promising candidate, one who shows that he may go far: 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, "'But when it comes to talkin', anybuddy nd think Jeffries was still a 'comer'"; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar (a big gang-chief to a smaller one), 'You're on the square, Rico, and you're a comer, see'; by 1935, low s. A 'comer-on'.

comet. A long-experienced, very resourceful, (by his fellows) highly regarded tramp: tramps': prob. since ca. 1890. Jack London, The Road, published in 1907 but in a passage referring to a period nearly twenty years earlier, 'He was only two days ahead of me. I was a "comer" and "tramp-royal", so was Skysail Jack; and it was up to my pride and reputation to catch up with him'; 1925, Leverage, 'An aristocrat of the road';

app. † by 1930. Because he travels fast and dazzles with his eloquently plausible 'spiel'.—2. Hence (?), 'a tramp or hobo, usually with a decided psychosis, riding only fast trains, and for long distances, even though there be no reason for such moves,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910.—3. 'A tramp new to the road, or to tramp life': since ca. 1925. Irwin, 1931. 'So called since these persons are . . . inclined to move quickly when anyone seems to be watching them' (Irwin).

comfeck. See confect.

comida. 'A meal; a hand-out', Leverage, 1925: tramps': C. 20. Ex Spanish.

coming home. Just released from prison: 1931, Brown; extant.

comino. A ride: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex Mexican Spanish? Cf. Sp. caminar, 'to travel'—and camino, 'a road,' of which it is a corruption (if it isn't a mistake!).

Commander of the Fleet, the. The warden of the Fleet Prison: 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890. Cf. Navy Office, which was prob. suggested by Commander of the Fleet.

commercial. A tramp; an itinerant thief: ca. 1855–1914: 1886, Tit-Bits, July 31; 1891, F & H. Like a commercial traveller, he gets about the country.

commission. A shirt: 1566, Harman; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All; ca. 1615, Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggar's Bush; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open, 'Commission, a shirt.—Commission, to shake your [:] to shake your whole frame'; app. † by 1859, for H, at comesa, says: 'Ancient cant, commission'; but it may have survived for a few years after that date in U.S.A. Prob. ex the Sp. camisa, or possibly the It. camicia, with an obscure pun on Eng. commission.

commission, shake one's. See commission, reference of 1848.

commissionaire. A late C. 19–20 prostitution term and a C. 20 white-slavers' term (relating not merely to the Argentine). Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, 'A "commissionaire", rather more appetising and attractive [than the ordinary harlot], with fine teeth'. Ex the external magnificence of a commissionaire.

commister. See camister.

commit. To inform to the police: 1859, Mat-sell; app. † by 1910. Prob. elliptical for 'commit oneself (thus far)'.

commit(t)er of tidings. (Awdeley spells it commitour.) See the entry at Awdeley's, No. 13, for the sense. The term seems to have > by 1698 at the latest.

commodity. In 'sacking law' (q.v.), the harlot serving as decoy to the blackmailers: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 'The whoore, a Commodity'; 1608, Dekker. In Dekker & Webster, Northward Hoe, 1607, it is applied to any whore. In both nuances, the term seems to have > † by the end of C. 17. Ex the S.E. sense, 'wares or merchandise'. Cf. the slang derivative commodity, the female pudend—a sense punned-on by Shakespeare in 'Commodity, the bias of the world' (King John) and alluded to in Anon., The Crafty Whore, 1658, where a courtesan says 'I had Customers enouw for my Ware and Commodities';

Grose defines it as 'the private parts of a modest woman, and the public parts of a prostitute'.

common bounce (or bouncer). 'They train young lads, generally thieves whom they are bringing out, to follow such men—always, alas! old men—as they believe to be "game" [i.e. fair game], and endeavour to entice them to some out-of-the-way place, where the soundrel who is watching pounces upon the victim, and, under a threat of giving them into custody upon the most abominable of all charges, obtains a sum of money': 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary (where both forms occur); 1889, B & L (c. bounce); † by 1920.

commoner, 'a novice', is c., according to Egan's Grose, 1823; but it was pugilistic s. of ca. 1810–50. Ex peer: commoner.

communion bloke. A religious hypocrite: convicts': 1889, B & L; extant. Going to Mass or Communion is, by most convicts, regarded as an affectation.

company, see. 'To enter into a course of prostitution': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1823, Bee, 'Company (to see)—said of a highflyer lass'; 1891, F & H, 'To see company . . . (prostitutes)'.—To live by prostitution'; slightly ob. Euphemistic.

compartment. A cash-box: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 321); rather ob. A cash-box is usually divided into compartments.

compo king. 'A social parasite who makes a practice of injuring himself or malingering in order to secure workers' compensation,' Sidney J. Baker, New Zealand Slang, 1941; perhaps, orig., c.; by 1940, at latest, workers' and labour-exchange s. Ex 'composition'?

compound jimmy. Possibly c., prob. j. 'The "compound jimmy". This is an implement made of fine tempered steel, and in two sections . . . With this instrument, supplemented by the combined strength of two muscular men, the door is soon forced open, and the property of the bank is at the mercy of the plunderers': 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective.

compter prig. 'Compter-Prigs . . . Swell-mobites, who steal from the compters'—i.e., counters—'in shops, while their confederates make some trifling purchase. These thieves often contrive to empty the till': 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. xviii; † by 1890. See prig, n., 2.

con. n. A convict: 1893, The Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne, 'Prisoners are known as "con"', which is short for convict, and the whole body of prisoners is designated "condom"—short for convictdom'; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1909—see Ware—also British; 1912, D. Lowrie, My Life in Prison (U.S.A.); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Dec. 4, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black; 1927, Kane; 1928, Chicago May; by 1929, prison s. and police s.—2. A conductor (on a train): tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1916, The Literary Digest (Aug., 'Do you Speak "Yegg" ?'); 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures; 1925, Jim Tulley, Beggars of Life; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Irwin; 1934, Convict; by 1935, it was s.—3. Plausible talk; confidence-trick readiness of speech; a confession or admission; a lie: 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, p. 100, "'It's mine," I said . . . They took'—accepted—the con'; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'A convincing tale'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; by 1925, s.—4. Hence, a confidence game: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'It is not easy to throw the religious con (confidence game) into a convict'; extant.—5. (Also ex sense 3.) A plausible speaker: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Con . . . Fluent talker'; 1925, Leverage, 'A confidence man'; 1928, Chicago May; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant.—6. Tuberculosis; a person afflicted therewith: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1923, Nels Anderson; by 1925, s. Ex consumption.—7. A conviction to imprisonment: 1925, Netley Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook, "'Got any cons?" he said. "I beg your pardon." "Cons—been lagged before?"'; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life, where it is implied that the term has been current from at least as early as 1913; 1933, Chas. E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too; by 1940 at latest, it was police s.—8. A lavatory attendant: English: C. 20. Partridge, 1938, '? abbr. confidential'.

con, v. To speak plausibly to; to blarney (a person); to deceive: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'I conned him again and said: "Yes." He showed the old, familiar grin'; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Don't con yourself'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1916, Arthur Stringer, The Door of Dread; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; by 1930, current in England (Jock of Dartmoor, Dartmoor from Within, 1932); 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; 1933, Ersine; by 1935, s. in U.S.A.; 1940, Joseph Crad, Traders in Women; 1943, Black; extant.—2. Hence, to swindle: since ca. 1918. Ersine.

con boss. A convict in charge of a gang, a room, etc.: C. 20; but by 1930, almost certainly mere gen. prison s.: 1912 (but valid some years earlier), Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (San Quentin), 'Miller . . . had aroused the deadly enmity of the "con boss" of his section. This "con boss" was a mulatto'; 1933, James Spenser, Limey (concerning San Quentin); by 1935—teste David Lamson—it was prison j.

con game. A 'leg-pull'; a confidence game: 1907, Jack London, The Road; by 1910, current in the British Empire; by 1918, s. in U.S.A., and by 1925, police and journalistic s. in the Empire. See con, n., 3.

con girl. A female confidence trickster: Australian: since ca. 1910; by 1940, s. Baker, 1945. On the analogy of con man.

con(-)head. A confidence trickster: 1931, Brown; extant. An elaboration of con, n., 5; head implies a notability.

con-herr. 'A confidence man; a swindler,' Leverage, 1925 (where it is spelt conn-herr); ob. Lit., 'confidence (-trickery) gentleman' (Ger. Herr).

con man. 'Con men (Am.), or confidence men, swindlers, bunko steerers': 1891, Jas Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; 1915, F. Frost & G. Dilnot, The Crime Club; 1925, E. Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons; 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1927, W. C. Gough, From Kew Observatory to Scotland Yard; by 1918, in U.S.A., by 1930 in the Brit. Empire, it was s.—2. An ex-convict: 1931, Stiff; extant.

con mob. A gang of confidence tricksters: 1925, Leverage (s.v. stringer); Feb. 3, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan, 'To Hell and Back'; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant. See con, n., 5, and mob.

con racket. The—or a—confidence game: since ca. 1912: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; April 25, 1936, Flynn's, 'Birds of Prey'; extant. Obviously short for confidence racket.

con-wise (or unhyphenated). Well versed in the ways of convicts; esp., aware of all their tricks and dodges: C. 20; by 1920 no longer c. Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 1912, 'He had been a prison officer nearly all his life, and was what is known as "con-wise"'. See con, n., 1.—2. Hence, of one who knows too much to speak: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant.

con woman. 'Madge Carson, one of the smartest "con" women (confidence tricksters) in England and America,' Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals, 1926; 1928, Chicago May; by 1930, police and low s. Cf. con man.

concaves and convexes, as applied to cards cut concave or convex, is j., not c.

concerned. Its use in c. (of ca. 1790–1850) was signalized first by J. H. Vaux, 1812: 'In using many cant words, the lovers of flash, by way of variation, adopt this term, for an illustration of which, see Bolt-in-Tun, Alderman Lushington, Mr Palmer, &c.' See also dues, 2.

concertina. A broken silk hat ('topper'): 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 321); ob. Ex its shape.

condom. See con, n., 1.

cone. A presumed or, at best, a very rare form of kone, q.v.

coney, and coney compounds. See cony and compounds.—2. (Only coney.) See cony, n., 2, and adj.

Coney Island. A room set apart or, at the least, used for the application of third-degree methods: 1934, Howard N. Rose; slightly ob. A grim piece of irony, Coney Island synonymizing 'amusement park'.

confeck. See:

confect, adj. Counterfeit: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, spells it confeck; 1665, R. Head, in The English Rogue, spells it confeck; so does Coles, 1676; 1688, Holme (confeck); 1698, B.E. (confect); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (confeck); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose ('counterfeited'). But the term seems to have > s. by 1750 or thereabouts.

confidence man. Never a c. term. An early example occurs in The National Gazette (U.S.A.) of Oct. 27, 1849.

confidence racket, the. Swindling, or deception, by the confidence trick; the art and profession of the confidence trick: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story (p. 283); by 1900, police and low s. See racket.

conhood. Convicts as a class; 'convictdom': 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne; ob.—by 1930, no longer c. Ex con, n., 1; cf. condom.

conic-catching law. See cony-catching law.

coniacker; gen. koniacker. A counterfeiter: 1846, Jan. 24, The National Police Gazette; 1848, Bartlett, Americanisms, Appendix (the former); 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum (the latter); 1871, De Vere, Americanisms; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1881, The Man Traps of New York (k-); 1886, T. Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America, 'A "coniacker" (dealer in counterfeit money)'; 1886, A. Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; 1889, B & L (also cogniac-er); 1891, F & H; 1903, Clapin; Dec. 26, 1925, Flynn's, reminiscently of Frederick Biebusch, nicknamed 'The Great Southwest Coniacker'; in C. 20, also Australian, as in Baker, 1942 (koniacker). See kone. Coniacker or koniacker is perhaps a corruption of kone-faker (maker of counterfeit). But there is something to be said for F & H's derivation ex coin + hacker (mutilator).

conie. See cony. (Rare after C. 16.)

conish. Genteel; gentlemanly: 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; † by 1891 (F & H) in England; 1893, Confessions of a Convict (U.S.A.), ed. by Julian Hawthorne; † by 1920 in U.S.A. See:—

conish cove. A gentleman: Scottish: 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'McGuire . . . pointed out a conish cove, with a great swell in his suck'; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890. Conish is a perversion of tonish, fashionable, modish.

conjobble. Despite Baumann, it is s., not c. conjuror. A judge, esp. in a criminal court: ca. 1770–1840. Grose, 1785 (see fortune-teller, of which it is prob. a deliberately variational synonym).

conk, n. 'A thief who impeaches his accomplices; a spy; informer, or tell-tale. See Nose and Wear it': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. For semantics, cf. nose, n.: for, in s., conk is the nose.

conk, v. (Often as conking it, vbl n.) To be an informer; to inform to the police: 1812, J. H. Vaux (at wear it); 1821, P. Egan (see conking); † by 1890. Ex conk, n.; cf. nose, v.—2. The sense 'to hit a person on the head' (Leverage, 1925) is American—prob. low s. rather than c. Ex s. conk, 'the head'.

conkey. Contemptible; ignorant: Australian: 1895 (see ike); † by 1920. Cf. nosey and conk, n., q.v.

conking is the vbl n. of conk, v. Pierce Egan, Life in London, 'But remember, no conking'. Ex conk, n.

conn-herr. See con-herr.

connect. To succeed in obtaining food by begging for it, loot by stealing it: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, "'Did you connect, kid?" he asked when (—after the burglary—) we were on the street. "Yes, a coat pocket full," I said, brushing the cobwebs and dust off my clothes'; 1931, Stiff, 'To make a touch. The reward for good pan-handling'; 1938 (in ref. to ca. 1920), Francis Chester, Shot Full, of obtaining drugs; extant. To connect achievement to the desire.—2. To enter into an agreement: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex boxing.

connector, -or. An intermediary, a liaison man; a messenger or errand-boy; a forager; a beggar: beggars' and tramps': 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, "'You're a good connector, kid; sure you didn't have to pay for this?" one of them said'; 1928, Chicago May, 'Connector—beggar'; July 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, IA, 'One adept at begging or at securing favors'; extant. Ex connect, 1.—2. Hence, synonymous with connection, 1: drug traffic: since the 1920's. BVB.

connection. 'The person from whom the addict buys his stuff is called a connection,' Convict, 1934: drug addicts': since ca. 1920. Cf. :—2. A counterfeiter, or a forger, supplying a paper-hanger with forged cheques: counterfeiters' and forgers': since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941.—3. A go-between; an influential person helping or protecting a criminal: 1933, Ersine; extant.

connection dough. 'The price of a "bindle" of narcotics,' BVB: since ca. 1920. See sense 1 of prec.

conner. 'One who practises deceit,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex con, v.

connicatch; connicatching (adj.). See cony-catch and cony-catching (adj.). Both in Dekker & Webster, Northward Hoe, 1607.

connie. See cony. (Robert Greene, The Thirde Part of Conny-catching, 1592.)

conning. 'Lying; deceiving; deception,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex con, v.

connive. 'Every bribed guard connived with the prisoners in breaking prison rules. The very word "conniving" became part of the special San Quentin slang. The wise guys connived their commissaries, their forbidden knives, their uncensored correspondence, their soft jobs. By a curious inversion it was the convict who was the conniver and the officer who was scarcely more than a trader,' James Spenser, Limey, 1933: since ca. 1922: 1934, Convict, 'Conniving . . . scheming to break prison rules and obtain contraband articles, or perhaps sending out underground kites' (uncensored letters); 1935, David Lamson; 1938, Convict 2nd; 1938, Castle; extant. A special application of the S.E. verb.

conniver, n.; conniving. See connive.

conniver, v.i. To swindle; to be 'shady' or act suspiciously: since the late 1930's. Richard Llewellyn, None but the Lonely Heart, 1943, "'You pair of dirty conniving Kosher crooks, you," Jim says'. Ex S.E. connive rather than ex c. connive.

conny (see also next entry); conny-catch; conny-catcher; conny-catching. See cony, etc. Greene, e.g.

conny. A conductor (of, e.g., a street car): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1931, Irwin, 'A railroad conductor'; by 1940, s. Cf. con, n., 2.—2. A consumptive: esp., convicts': 1904, No. 1500, Sing Sing; 1925, Leverage; extant—but s. by 1935.

connycatch; connycatcher, connycatching. See cony-catch; cony-catcher, -catching.

conoblin rig. 'Cutting the string of large coals hanging at the doors of coals-sheds, &c.,' 1809, George Andrewes (who prints it as rigg-conoblin, an obvious error), after Humphry Potter (1797): ca. 1780–1860. Also konoblin rig (e.g., in Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811).

consent job. A theft, an arson committed with the owner's or landlord's consent; a car stolen with the owner's consent: 1929–31, Kernôt; 1931, Irwin; by 1940, police j.

consolation. 'Consolation. Assassination. To kill a man, is to give him consolation': 1859, D.O.U.

Matsell; 1882, James D. McCabe, New York; † by 1920. Grimly euphemistic.

contact, 'a connection or affiliation made by a criminal to protect himself from arrest or to make crime easy' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931), although much used by criminals, is not c., for it has always been a frequent term among the police and among journalists.

content. 'In a Canting and Vulgar Sense, for a Person, who in fighting is beat so that he can scarce go or stand,' also = 'murdered', as in 'The Cull's content'; i.e., He can tell no Tales; He is past complaining': 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'The cull's content; the man is past complaining, (cant) saying of a person murdered for resisting the robbers'; † by 1891 (F & H). Cf. easy, 2, q.v.

contract. An obligation to the underworld: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. With humorous ref. to legal agreements and bonds.

contrary; prob. always pl. A die so formed as to lie on the face opposite to that which the dicer intends that it shall fall: c. >, by 1600, jargon. Gilbert Walker, Diceplay, 1552, 'Contraries . . . forged clean against the apparent vantage'.

contretemps. 'Contre-Temps . . . In a Canting Sense, a fruitless Attempt, or at an unseasonable Time, to rob and plunder a House, or Passenger,' A New Canting Dict., 1725: a term current ca. 1715–50. A special application of the S.E. sense.

control fortune, to. To cheat at cards: card-sharpers': 1891, F & H; ob. Humorous.

conveniency. 'Conveniency, c. a Wife; also a Mistress,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1780. A natural development ex :—

convenient. A mistress; a whore: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (see quot'n at blowen); 1698, B.E. (both nuances); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (both); 1785, Grose (a mistress); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1823, Bee, "'Convenient (My)"—a woman open to the speaker'; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A. (Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859); by 1870, † in Britain. Origin implied in ref. of 1823.

convent. A penitentiary: South America: C. 20. Harry Franck, Working North from Patagonia, 1921. Ironic.

convention. A formal gathering of tramps, generally lapsing soon into informality and often becoming a mere collective drinking-bout: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'When a bums' "convention" is to be held, the jungle is first cleared of all outsiders such as "gay cats", "ding-bats", "whangs", "bindle stiffs", "jungle buzzards", and "scissors bills"'; 1931, Stiff quotes in full George Liebst's poem, 'The Hobo's Convention'; 1931, IA; extant. By jocular magniloquence.

convert. A new drug addict: since ca. 1920. BVB. Euphemistic—or else derisive of religion.

convexes. See concaves.

conveyancer. A pickpocket: 1823, Bee; 1857, Snowden; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; † by 1900. This is comparable to the rare S.E. sense, 'a dexterous thief' (Smollett, 1753: O.E.D.), which is a legal pun, suggested prob. by Shakespeare's 'Convey the wise it call: steal? foh: a ficio for the phrase' (Merry Wives, I, iii, 31).

conveyancing, n. Pickpocketry: ca. 1830–1900. (B & L, 1889.) Suggested by preceding term.

convincer. Initial winning, to encourage a 'sucker' to continue: card-sharpers', con men's, commercial crooks': 1936, Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Crook (of con men); extant. Cf. coll. clinch.

cony, n.; variants being conny, conie, connie, mostly in C. 16; and coney, mostly C. 18. The victim of swindlers; esp. of a gang of confidence men: ca. 1580-1750: recorded first in c. pamphlets, it prob. remained c. until ca. 1620 and then > s. By 1698 (witness B.E.), it meant 'a silly'—i.e., simple—'Fellow', and as Tom Cony (Nathan Bailey) it meant 'a fool': cf. the C. 20 use of rabbit. Robert Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 1591, 'There be requisit effectually to act the Art of Cony-catching three several parties . . . The nature of the Setter, is to draw any person familiarly to drinke with him, which person they'—the three swindlers—'call the Conie, and their methode is according to the man they aime at'; 1592, Greene, The Thirde Part of Conny-catching, heads one of his sections thus, 'A pleasant tale howe an honest substantiall Citizen was made a Connie, and simply entertained a knave that carried awaie hys goods very politickely'.—2. Counterfeit notes, of any denomination: U.S.A.: 1859, kone, q.v.; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'His . . . traffic in the manufacture and circulation of "coney" must be stopped'; 1891, James Maitland; 1903, Clapin; Dec. 26, 1925, Flynn's, reminiscently of the Bibbush Gang; ob.

cony (or coney), adj. Of, characteristic of, pertaining to, connected with the counterfeit-money 'racket': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'Give up "coney" traffic'; 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective, 'At the head of the "Coney" business as a cutter or engraver'; app. † in this sense, by 1920, except historically. Ex cony, n., 2.—2. 'Tricky; capricious' (Leverage, 1925) derives from sense 1 and may have been c. for a while.

cony-catch appears first in cony-catching law, q.v.—i.e., in Robert Greene, 1591; 1592, R. Greene, The Thirde Conny-catching, has a section headed 'A merry Tale taken not far from Fetter Lane end, of a new-found Conny-catcher, that was Conny-catcht himsele'; 1607, Dekker & Webster, Northward Hoe; † by 1700.

conny catcher. A swindler; an adventurer preying upon simple citizens; esp. one of a gang specializing in 'cosenage by cards': since ca. 1590; † by 1700. Robert Greene's Conny-Catching pamphlets of 1591-92, as, e.g., in The Thirde and last Part of Conny-catching, 1592, 'Nowe as divers guests . . . came into the room to listen, so among the rest entered an artificiall Conny-catcher'; ibid., the forms cony catcher, conny catcher, cunny catcher.

cony-catching, n. The swindling, cheating, or defrauding of a law-abiding citizen by the underworld; esp. by the confidence trick or at cards (see cony-catching law); 1591, Robert Greene, 'The Art of Conny Catching' in A Notable Discovery of Coosnage; 1591-92, Greene's other Conny-Catching pamphlets; † by 1700.

cony-catching, adj. corresponding to the n.; 1591, Greene (see, e.g., the ensuing entry); 1607, Dekker & Webster, Northward Hoe, 'Connicatching punckes'; † by 1700.

cony-catching law. 'Cosenage by cards,' Greene, 1591, in A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, where this swindle is described at great length; it is a species of the genus confidence trick, for it entails striking up acquaintance, inspiring confidence, and skilfully separating the dupe (or 'cony') from his money.

cony- (or coney-) dealer. 'One who deals in, passes, or handles counterfeit,' Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs, 1872; app. † by 1910. See cony, n., 2; cf. cony man.

cony dog. One who assists in cheating: late C. 17-early 18. B.E., 1698. Cf. the prec. cony terms.

cony(-)man; coney(-)man. A bank-note counterfeiter; one known as such to the police: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'Another famous Western "coney-man"'; 1881, A. Pinkerton, Professional Thieves and the Detective; app. † by 1910. Cf. coniac; ex cony, n., 2. conyacker. See coniac.

cook, n. One who 'cooks' opium; esp., an expert thereat: drug addicts': since ca. 1920: 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1942, BVB. Cf. cook, v., 3, and chef.

cook, v, 'to arrange desirably for the occasion', may orig. (— 1872) have, in U.S.A., been c.: witness Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; but it was certainly s. by 1890 at latest.—2. To kill: Australian convicts': June 19, 1856, Sessions Papers (p. 396); 1857, concerning the murder of John Price on March 26, 'A convict named Bryant was said to have struck Price with a heavy navy's shovel. He then shouted "Come on. He's cooked. He wants no more";' Geo. E. Boxall, Australian Bushrangers, 1899, p. 154; by ca. 1900, also U.S.A.—witness A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, 1906, "'Settle" and "cook", in the language of the Five Points [a New York district], always mean "kill" and never mean anything else'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; rather ob. Short for s. cook (a person's) goose.—3. Synonym of cook-up, 3: 1916, Thomas Burke, Limehouse Nights; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1933, Ersine; 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man; extant.—4. 'To reclaim denatured alcohol. "We cook this alky so it's as good as McCoy",' Burke, 1930: bootleggers': 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; then merely reminiscent.—5. Usually cooked, electrocuted: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant.

cook dough. To make counterfeit coin: since ca. 1930. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.

cook hop. See hop, quot'n of 1912 (A. H. Lewis).

cook ruffi(a)n. In 1698, B.E. thus: 'Cook-ruffin, c. the Devil of a Cook, or a very bad one'; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., concerning a newcomer to Newgate, 'Then Cook Ruffian (that scalded the Devil in his Feathers) comes up to him for Three Pence for dressing the Charity-meat' (meat presented by the charitable); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (. . . ruffin); 1785, Grose, whose entry implies that, by this date, the term had > either s. or merely historical. See ruffian (or ruffin).

cook up. 'Cooking up. Boiling nitroglycerin out of dynamite,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. A culinary figure.—2. (Esp. as vbl n., cooking up.) To cook food in a 'jungle': tramps': G. C. Henderson Keys to Crookdom; by 1930, no longer c.—if, indeed, it ever had been.—3. To prepare opium for smoking: July 23, 1927, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, "Who wants me to cook up?" he heard Grogan inquire. "Pass me the yenhawk, Fong. See if I can chef a few pills for th' boys"; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. An elaboration of cook, v., 3.—4. 'To arrange or "frame up" a situation or a plan,' Irwin, 1931: perhaps c. at first, but obviously soon s.

cooked up (BVB, 1942) is synonymous with coked up, of which it may primarily be a perversion—with influence from cookee, 4.

cookee, cookie, cooky. An opium-den: 1925, Leverage (third form); extant. Ex cook in its specific sense, 'to prepare opium pills for smoking' (Leverage, 1925).—2. (Usually the first.) A 'jungle' cook's assistant: tramps': 1931, Stiff.—3. The sense 'girl, young woman' is low s., not c. Damon Runyon, 1931.—4. Cocaine, as used by drug addicts: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose (cookie); extant. With some reference to sense 1; the predominant semantics, however, may be found in the idea 'doubly sweet in adversity' (cf. the synonymous candy).—5. The sense 'drug addict; esp. an opium smoker' occurs also in Rose, 1934, and in BVB, 1942.—6. Synonym of chef, n.: BVB.

cookee wagon. See cookie wagon.

cooker. A revolver: 1936, Charles Francis Coe, Ransom; extant. Suggested by heater.—2. See cooking spoon.

cookie wagon. A police van or wagon: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. To travel in it is not a 'treat'—not 'a piece of cake'.

cooking spoon; cooker. 'The receptacle, usually actually a spoon, in which narcotics are cooked,' BVB, 1942; since ca. 1910.—2. (Only cooker.) A drug, esp. an opium, addict: 1942, BVB.

cookshop. A pawnbroker's: mainly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Perhaps suggested by s. hock shop.

cool, n. Robert Greene, The Second Part of Conny-catching, 1592, 'It fortun'd that a Nip and his staull drinking at the three tuns in Newgate market, sitting in one of the roomes next to the street, they might perceive where a meal-man stood selling of meale, and had a large bag by his side, where by conjecture was some store of mony: the old cool, the old cut-purse I mean, spying this, was delighted with the shew of so glorious an object'. This appears to be the only instance of the word. Perhaps because he is a cool hand at a robbery or a theft.

cool, v. To kill: tramps', then criminals': Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's, Earl W. Scott, 'Eight stick-up Johnnies out of ten aren't so hot about coolin' a cop'; 1936, Charles Francis Coe, G-Man, 'They cooled Knuckle. Stretched him flat'; Dec. 4, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Panton; extant. Proleptic.—2. To put (someone) in gaol: 1933, Ersine; extant. Prob. ex cooler, 2.

cool, adj. No longer hot (wanted by the police; advertised for). See esp. cool money.

cool-cock, v. To beat (someone) until he faints away: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. A variation of cold-cock, q.v.

coollady, 'a Wench that sells Brandy (in Camps),' B.E., 1698, is s., not c. Prob. suggested by cool Nantes, 'Brandy': that is, with a pun on cool Nance.

cool money. 'Ransom money with no publicity,' Herb. Corey, 1936; 1938, J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding; extant.

cool off. To stay in hiding until the police hue-and-cry is over: 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece; 1937, E. H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; 1938, J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding; extant. Suggested by heat, n., 2; cf. cooling joint.—2. To 'assuage or comfort a victim after he has suffered a loss,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: mostly thieves': C. 20.—3. To kill: since ca. 1928. Damon Runyon, Furthermore, 1938; W. R. Burnett, High Sierra, 1940. An elaboration of cool, v., 1.

cool the beef. See beef, cool the.

cooler, a woman: 1698, B.E., who, however, does not classify it as c.; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, 'A woman, a whore'; † by 1850. Because, by yielding to one's ardour, she cools it: cf. B.E.'s s. antidote, 'A very homely'—i.e., plain.—'Woman'.—2. A prison; esp. a country prison: U.S.A.: 1884 (D.A.E.); ca. 1886, on the evidence of Lewis E. Lawes, Cell 202, Sing Sing (1935), where, in reference to that period, it is applied to a solitary confinement cell; 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police, 'To the residents of any precinct the station-house occupies the same place as the "coop", "cooler", "jug", etc., do to the inhabitants of a country town'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary), 'A dark cell'; 1903, Clapin (police-station); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing ('dark cell'); 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective; 1909, W. H. Davies, Beggars; by 1910, low s. in the senses 'police-station', 'lock-up', 'small jail', but it is still c. in the sense 'dark cell', as, e.g., in Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926, in Godfrey Irwin, 1931; and in 'Red Collar Man', Chokey, 1937 (English), and Black, 1943 (English). One has much time in which to cool one's heels.—3. 'A deck of prepared cards,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928: U.S. card-sharpers': 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose, 'Marked Cards . . . coolers; paper'; March 28, 1936, Flynn's, Frank Wrentmore, 'In his coat the gambler may have a "cooler" installed, so called because this machine'—mechanical device—'carries a "cold" or stacked deck of cards which may be substituted for the regular deck when needed'; extant.

coolie mud. Inferior opium: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. I.e., mud fit only for coolies.

cooling(-)joint, or cooling-off joint. 'Hide-out to be used while the heat is on' (during the 'wanted' period): 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster! (the former); 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime (the latter); extant. There the wanted criminal has time to cool off.

coop. A (gen., from ca. 1880, a country-town) prison: 1785, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, Sept., p. 1111, 'He has been in coop for a week'; 1877, James Greenwood, Dick Temple; by 1910, low s. Cf. the S.E. hen-coop.—2. Hence, a prison cell: U.S.A.: Oct. 27, 1928, Flynn's, Joseph F. Fishman, 'By a Nose', "He hacks out his coop when de ship changes, . . . then runs t'rough fer de big get-away"; extant.—3. A coupé: U.S. car thieves': 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. In it, one can remain cool.

coop(-)up. Imprisoned: (of a person) in prison: 1887, H. Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, C. Hindley; by 1910, low s. Cf. coop, 1.

cooper, n. 'A casual ward to be avoided' (by tramps), the Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932: tramps': C. 20. Perhaps cf. sense 2 of the v.

cooper, v. To mark a house in the manner described at coopered, q.v.: 1851, implied in coopered, with which it is contemporaneous. Ex the rough repair-work of a cooper.—2. To forge (a document): 1851 (see monnicker, 2nd quot'n); 1859, H. 'To forge, or imitate in writing'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. Ex coll. cooper, 'to render presentable'.—3. See coopered.—4. To understand: U.S.A.: 1891, F & H; † by 1920. Ex 1?

coopered. 'Spoiled by the imprudence of some other patterer' (itinerant vendor)—or, for that matter, some tramp: itinerant vendors' s. and tramps. c.: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 218, where Mayhew gives the corresponding sign, chalked on or near the front door, as ∇; ibid., 315, of a person whose charity has been quenched by impostors; 1858, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; April 22, 1935, Hugh Milner (in private letter); extant.

coor; usually as ppl adj., coored; occ. as vbl n., cooring. To whip: Scottish: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'There were three boys to be coored through the veil'—or town—'next day'; ibid., 'We attended the cooring next day'; 1823, Egan's Groser; † by 1891 (F & H). Prob. ex S.E. coir, 'cordage, (fibre for) ropes': via 'to use a rope on, i.e. to flog'.

coosin. See cousin.

cooter; gen. couter. A sovereign (20 shillings); among counterfeiterers, a bad sovereign: 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, IV, trial of Robert White, where it is used in the two senses and where the victim (a lodging-house keeper) says, 'I knew what a couter meant, it is a very common word'; app. † by 1910.

cootie cage, 'a berth in a carnival or circus sleeping car': circus s., not c. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.) With ref. to s. cootie, 'a louse'.

cop, n. A policeman: 1859, Matsell, 'A Hundred Stretches Hence', 'And where are the buffer, bruiser, blowen, | And all the cops and beaks so knowin', | A hundred stretches hence?'; by 1865, Anglicized; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, 'Cop, or Copper, a U.S. Detective, or Police Officer'; by 1875 or so, low s. in England; 1893, Confessions of a Convict (U.S.A.), ed. by Julian Hawthorne; 1899, Arthur Stringer, The Loom of Destiny; 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps; 1903, Owen Kildare, My Mamie Rose; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood; 1904, No. 1500; 1906, A. H. Lewis; by 1910, low s. in U.S.A. A shortening of copper, n.—2. A capture by the police: English: 1891, J. Bent, Criminal Life, 'As soon as I found the watch, the thief called out, "This is a clear cop, Mr. Bent"'; 1895, Caminada (a fair cop); 1896, Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago; 1908, Edgar Wallace, Angel Esquire; by 1910, low s., by 1920, gen. s. Ex sense 1 of the v.—3. 'A theft or unlawful acquisition,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: U.S.A.; since ca. 1910.—4. Hence (?), 'Profit, job or trick from which a large return is gained,' Baker, 1945: Australian confidence tricksters': since ca. 1920. Perhaps suggested by the English saying It's not much cop (disadvantageous).

cop, v. To catch, to arrest: 1827 (see cock, v.); March 1857, Sessions Papers; by 1859, current in U.S.A.—witness Matsell's Vocabulum; 1860, C. Martel, The Detective's Note-Book; 1869, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1872, Geo. P. Burnham (U.S.A.); by 1870, low s. in England; 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery . . . (Australia); 1888, George Bidwell (U.S.A.), Forging his Chains; 1899, Josiah Flynt; 1904, H. Hapgood (U.S.A.); by 1905, low s. in U.S.A. and Australia. Perhaps, as The O.E.D. proposes, a broad pronunciation of Scottish cap, 'to lay hold of', which represents either Dutch kapen, 'to take', or, via Old Fr., L. capere, 'to capture'.—2. To hand (something to a person), make over: 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxiii, 'I'll cop them to you for edging the gaff'; 1849, Sessions Papers (see cop a fiver); 1889, B & L; app. † by 1910.—3. To steal: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief' in Macmillan's Magazine, 'I was taken by two pals (companions) to an orchard to cop (steal) some fruit'; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1896, Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago; by 1900, U.S.A.: as in A. H. Lewis, The Boss, 1903; No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Sept. 1, 1928, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1931, The Bon Voyage Book; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube, in the sense 'to confiscate'; Aug. 10, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant. Cf. note at end of sense 4.—4. To buy: Feb. 1824, Sessions (p. 151), 'He . . . said, "Will you cop" (buy) "any, for they are rare good things . . ."; † by 1890. The basic sense here, as in sense 1, is 'to take'; cf. sense 3.—5. (Cop or cop it.) To be hit; to receive a wound: U.S.A. as c. (ex Cockney s. of late C. 19-20): 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, "'What was that shooting?"—"Oh, a couple of geeks started to hand it to each other. One of 'em cops it, th' other blew."—"What became of the one who copped?"'; extant. It = a wound, an injury—by tacit acceptance.—6. To win, to obtain: U.S.A. tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1934, Julien Proskauer, Suckers All; also English, as in Mark Benney, Low Company, 1936.—7. To understand: 1936, Charles F. Coe, G-Man, 'One tax, to start off with, is three bucks a gallon. Cop that, Rap'; extant. Cf. the s. Get that!, 'Understand that!'.—8. (Cf. sense 6.) If a bookmaker wins on a race, he has copped, and his clerk marks the book with a c: racing: prob. c. orig.; by 1940 at latest, s. 'John Morris' in The Cornhill Magazine, June 1933; Partridge, 1937.

cop a fiver. To pass a five-pound note: 1849, Sessions Papers (Jan. 31st, trial of Wm Hy Jones), "'I have copped, or done, a fiver" . . . he used both words, "copped or done"; this sense had app. fallen into disuse by the end of the century. Cf. cop, v., 2.

cop a heel. (Of, e.g., a trusty) to sneak out of prison: convicts': since ca. 1925. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. I.e., to take to one's heels.—2. To assault a person from behind: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1930. Castle, 1938. To assail him in his Achilles' heel—every man's vulnerable spot—his rear.

cop a lam. A synonym (not very gen.) of the next. Howard N. Rose, 1934.

cop a mope. To depart, esp. quietly away from trouble; to run away, esp. from prison: since at least as early as 1915—teste Lewis E. Lawes, 20,000 Years in Sing Sing, 1932, 'Expecting that Mike wanted to get away, "cop a mope" as they termed it in those days'; 1933, James Spenser, Limey, "'I'll 'cop a mope'" (go away)'; 1934, Rose; 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; extant. Cf. cop a sneak.

cop a plea. 'To accept the opportunity of pleading guilty to a lesser crime than that [one] is charged with, or to plead guilty to the charge, thus saving the State expense and (possibly) winning leniency from the court,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1925: 1933, James Spenser, Limey; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor; 1934, Convict; 1935, Hargan; 1937, Courtney R. Cooper, Here's to Crime,—but by this time it was gen. police and legal s.

cop a quim. To get hold of a girl: white-slave traffic: late C 19–20. Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909, 'How easy to go out and "cop a quim" and peddle her'. Here, cop is s. ('to take'); quim is low s. for 'the female genitals', used, as *c*nt* so often is, for 'girl, woman, regarded sexually'. cop a register. To get or to do a job (esp. in the sense of job, n., 2): 1893 (but prob. valid for 1845), F. W. Carew, No. 747 (p. 412); † by 1920. Cf. cop, v., for general sense.

cop a sneak. To run away from prison: 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, in a passage valid for 1901, 'They put him to work outside, in the vegetable garden, on account of his health, and he copped a sneak one day. Got clear over the hill They . . . found him hidin' in a barn 'bout three miles from here'; Oct. 11, 1930, Liberty, where it is erroneously defined as 'take a look; scout'; 1931, Irwin, 'To leave, generally in haste and quietly'; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; Feb. 3, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; 1936, Lee Duncan; extant.—2. 'To commit a burglary or theft on spur of moment,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss, "'Some fly guy might cop a sneak on it"' ; extant.

cop-bumper. A murderer of a policeman; a criminal apt to murder policemen: Jan. 28, 1928, Flynn's, Joseph F. Fishman, 'Cop-Bumper', by punning implication; extant. See the elements.

cop bung! 'Johnny Miller, who was to have his regulars, called out, "cop-bung", for . . . a fly-cop was marking,' glossed as 'Johnny Miller . . . called out to him: "Hand over the stolen property—a detective is observing your manœuvres"' : 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; † by 1930. But this may well be an error for cop-busy!, the imperative of copbusy, q.v.

cop-busy. See copbusy.

cop for. To accept; hold out one's hands for: since ca. 1920. Lilliput, Nov. 1943, Lemuel Gulliver, 'At the "Moor" a little Jew boy "worked me a kangar" and a basket of a "screw" spotted me "coppin'" for it'. Cf. cop, v., 2.

cop it. See cop, v., 5.

cop off. To seduce; (of a pimp) to obtain (a girl) for prostitution: white-slave traffic: since ca. 1910. Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, 1936.—2. To accept bribes: since ca. 1920: in Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940.

cop on, 'to receive', used for the synonymous cop, is rather London low s. than c. In, e.g., (F. D.) Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938.

cop on the cross. By cunning, to discover the guilt of (a person): late C. 19–20; 1909, Ware; Partridge, 1937. See cop, v., 1, and cross, adj.

cop out. To arrest: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, "'More good guns talk themselves into the Stir in a year," he said, "than all the force could cop out in a century"' ; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To arrest, to haul a criminal from his hiding place or out of a crowd'; since ca. 1930, current in Canada (anon. letter, June 9, 1946); by 1945, slightly ob. in U.S.A. An elaboration of cop, v., 1.—2. To obtain, esp. to steal: 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers That Prey, "'The outside talent that the Front Office wasn't next to [= didn't know] railroaded [= took the train] to town and copped out the coin"' ; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Cloud; slightly ob. Cf. cop, v., 3.

cop out for. To plead guilty and then receive (a sentence to imprisonment): since ca. 1925. Flynn's, April 23, 1938, Convict 12627, 'It was a bum beef, but I copped out for a deuce because I was hot on a jug heist that called for a double sawbuck'. A natural development ex, or extension of, cop out.

cop(-)simple. Morbidly afraid of the police: mostly convicts': from ca. 1920. Jack Callahan in Flynn's, Feb. 3, 1934. On the analogy of bull-simple.

cop-sop. An alias given on arrest: 1929–31, Kernôt; slightly ob. A sop to a policeman.

cop the borax. To be a bounty-jumper; 'to jump with the U.S. Military bounty': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, "'Cranky Tom" had contrived to "cop the borax" . . . twenty-three different times'; † by 1900. There is prob. a pun on bonus; here cop = receive.

cop the coin. See copping . . .

cop the drop. To accept a bribe (mostly applied to policemen): since ca. 1910. Partridge, 1938. See drop, n., 9.

cop the edge. 'To take advantage of an opportunity, as by stealing from an employer,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant.

cop the tale. To believe a confidence trickster's story: since ca. 1920. Partridge, 1938. Contrast tell the tale.

copbusy. 'To hand over the booty to another at the time to prevent its being found on him [the actual thief] if given in charge, or to give over the booty merely': 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1857, Snowden; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.) gives it as a n.—the act itself; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; in C. 20 Australia as a n.—Baker, 1942.

cope-man is possibly some kind of thief operating on the Thames, or a dishonest middleman, or more prob. a 'fence', dealing with such thieves: ca. 1790–1830: George Smeeton, Doings in London, 1828. Cf. such terms as light horsemen, mud lark, scuffle-hunter. For the cope, perhaps cf. S.E. coper; note, however, that in Wm Maginn's translation of Memoirs of Vidocq, I, 206, the spelling is copman, glossed as receleur, Fr. for 'a receiver'.

opesmate or copemate, an accomplice or confederate, is not c., nor even slang or coll.; it is S.E., recorded for 1570 by The O.E.D. coping cull. 'A Horse Jockey', says John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753 (spelt as coaping); but does he not mean a horse-coper, a dealer in horses?; ca. 1740–90. See cull, n.

copisettic. Satisfactory; (very) good: 1933, Ersine; ob. With a reminiscence of no cop, 'no good' + aesthetic.

copman. A policeman: Australian: late C. 19–20; † by 1945 (Baker). Baker, 1942. Cf. copper-man and copshop.

copper, n. A policeman: orig. (ca. 1840–65), this was c., as 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857, classifies it, and as it is understood to be in The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.) of Feb. 21, 1846; May 16, 1846, Sessions Papers, 'I have heard the police called coppers before'; 1860, H, 2nd ed. In U.S.A. (see, e.g., State Prison Life, 1871, and Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872, and Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, 1893), however, it remained c. until ca. 1900. Ex cop, v., 1.—2. Hence, a prisoner—esp. a convict—that informs on his fellow prisoners: 1885, Michael Davitt, A Prison Diary; by 1900, merged with:—3. (Ex sense 1.) Any informer to the police: Oct. 24, 1891, Sessions Papers, 'He has turned copper on us'; Oct. 1894, Sessions; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'To charge that the Darby Kid turned copper and wised up the Central Office dicks . . . is a serious thing'; 1924, Stanley Scott, The Human Side of Crook and Convict Life; 1924, George Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain (see pink, turn); 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'Then Annie . . . turned copper on me'; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's; Oct. 1928, Word-Lore (English), F. C. Taylor, 'The Language of Legs'; 1929, Tom Divall, Scoundrels and Scallywags; 1930, George Smithson; Nov. 29, 1930, Liberty ('Turn copper—turn . . . State's evidence'); 1932, Stuart Wood; 1933, George Ingram, Stir; 1934, Mary Ellison, Sparks; 1934, Convict; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night, 'I'm a prostitute admitted, but I ain't a copper'; 1938, H. U. Triston, Men in Cages; extant.—4. Allowance for good conduct in prison: U.S. convicts': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; April 16, 1927, Flynn's, '"Copper"', as the prisoner calls his allowance of a certain number of days per month for good behaviour' (Joseph Fishman); 1931, Irwin; 1938, Convict 2nd; 1938, Castle; extant. Ex senses 2, 3: for behaviour as good as that of a copper.

copper, v. 'A card can be played to win or lose, at the option of the player. If he wishes to play any particular card to lose, he places a penny on top of the money he stakes. This signifies that he plays it to lose; hence it is called coppering'; professional gamblers' and card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell; extant. Ex English s. copper, 'a penny'. —2. 'They are more frequently coppered, that is, arrested,' E. Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York, 1872; † by 1930. Ex copper, n., 1.—3. To detect: tramps': C. 20. Jack London, The Road, 1907, 'Our intention was to take the first train out, but the railroad officials "coppered" our play—and won. There was no first train'; ob. Ex copper, n., 2 (and perhaps 3).—4. To be, to become, an informer to the police; to give information:

Feb. 12, 1897, Sessions, 'Are you going to copper?'; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1924, Stanley Scott, The Human Side of Crook and Convict Life, '"Coppering"', or turning informant, is the deadly sin among crooks'; in C. 20, also American, as in Flynn's, March 9, 1935, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington, 'I don't mean to say that he'd copper on anybody'; extant. Ex copper, n., 3.

copper, come. See come copper.

copper, turn. See copper, n., 3.

copper-factory. A police station: since ca. 1930. Black, 1943. An elaboration of factory: see Factory, the.

copper-hearted. 'At heart a policeman; anxious to see others in trouble' (Irwin): since ca. 1920: 1930, Burke, 'By nature a police informer'; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; Oct. 1931, D. W. Maurer; 1933, Ersine, 'Instinctively mean; vicious'; 1934, Rose; 1936, Herbert Corey; 1937, letter of Oct. 29 from Godfrey Irwin; 1938, Castle; extant. Ex copper, n., 1.

copper-house. A police station: since ca. 1930. James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936. Cf. copper-factory and copper-shop.

copper-in-harness is an occ. variant of harness bull: 1925, Leverage; somewhat ob.

Copper John(s). The State Prison at Auburn, New York State: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne (C. John's); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (C. John); 1931, IA (C. John); extant. 'Perhaps because discipline was at one time lighter here than in some penal institutions, so that a man could be sure of more "copper"'—copper, n., 4—'being his' (Godfrey Irwin); and cf. stone John. Perhaps, however, ex the late C. 19–early 20 Warden, widely known as 'Copper John': see Lewis E. Lawes, 20,000 Years in Sing Sing, 1932, pp. 41–43.

copper(-)man; copperman. A policeman: Australian convicts': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; Partridge, 1937; 1942, Baker; † by 1945 (Baker). An elaboration of copper, n., 1.

copper nark is an Australian variation of copper's nark: C. 20. Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, 1941; Baker, 1945.

copper-off, n. A thief, a robber: 1925, Leverage; ob. Cf. cop, v., 3, and:—

copper off, v. To gain or win by deceit or trickery: 1925, Leverage; ob. Cf. the n.; cf. also cop, v., 3, 4.

copper-picker. A stealer of pieces of copper: 1872, C. L. Brace, The Dangerous Classes of New York, 'The Eleventh Ward [of New York] and "Corlear's Hook", where the "copper-pickers", and young wood-stealers, and the thieves who beset the shipyards congregated'; by 1910, police j. copper(-)shop. A police station: since ca. 1935. David Hume, Get Out the Cuffs, 1943. A variant of copper-factory, q.v.

coppering. See copper, v., 1 and 4.

copperman. See copper-man.

copper's nark. 'Another complains that he is "put away by Charly Start, the Copper's Nark", or policeman's spy,' J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail, 1887, the term being recorded earlier in Notes & Queries (1879, Series V, xi, 406); 1890, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1894, The Reminiscences of Chief-Inspector Littlechild, 'A "nark", or informant, is . . . a humble and more or less regular auxiliary of the detective' and 'Betrayed by a "Copper's Nark"' (chapter heading); 1894,

A. Morrison, Tales of Mean Streets; 1900, G. R. Sims, In London's Heart; 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers; 1909, Ware; 1916, Thomas Burke, Limehouse Nights; 1925, J. C. Goodwin, Queer Fish; 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1945, Baker (Australia).

copper's nose is a rare variant of the preceding: 1903, Chas Booth, Life and Labour of the People in London, V, 138.

copping is the vbl n. corresponding to cop, v., esp. in sense 3 (stealing).

copping (usually coppin') the coin. Engaged in swindling, esp. as in on the spud (see spud, on the): 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant.

copshop. A police station: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Ex cop, n., 1.

coque. See coke, n., 1, ref. of 1933.

core; gen. as vbl n., coreing or coring. To pick up, i.e., to pilfer, small articles in shops: 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'We remained [in Edinburgh] about three months, during which time, we were principally engaged upon the hoys and coreing'; † by 1891 (F & H). Semantics: cf. coor and strike (v.). But perhaps ex Romany cor, to steal.—2. See coring mush.

coriander seed(s). See coliander seed.

coring. See core.

coring mush. A boxer: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, where also 'coring match'—a bout of fisticuffs—hardly c.; extant. Lit., a 'striking fellow': see coor and mush. The Romany term is kooromengro, lit. 'fight-man'.

Corinth as a synonym for an immoral city, is allusive S.E., as is Corinthian, a rake, orig. a frequenter of brothels. But Corinth, 'a bawdy house' (Grose, 1785), may have been—Grose says it is—c., of the approximate period 1770–1830. Ex the reputation of the Greek city as a centre of fashionable whoredom.

cork. 'Corks (shoes)': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 322); † by 1930. Burglars' shoes were often cork-soled.

corn, n. Liquor made from corn: bootleggers': ca. 1920–34. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; 1933, Ersine, 'Moonshine, alky'.—2. Small change: 1931, Irwin; extant. Prompted by the s. synonym, chicken feed.

corn, v. To arrest: 1925, Leverage; ob. Perhaps ex the successful enticement of a shy horse by the display of corn in the hand or in bag or bucket.

corn-hole. 'Corn-hole, daisy chain, goose, gut reaming, kiss, kiss-off, muff-diving, pearl diving, pussy bumping, sixty-nine, sixty-three, sexual variants,' BVB, 1942: C. 20. Not all are c.; the genuine c. terms are listed separately.

corn rig. Not a genuine c. term: see rig, n., 2, reference of 1827.

corned. Tippy: ca. 1925–35, then s. Ersine. Ex corn, n., 1.

corneggie. 'A dish composed of sweet corn and eggs,' Ersine, 1933: by 1936, it was s.

corner. 'A share—generally a share in the proceeds of a robbery': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's (U.S.A.), 'The kale is cut up an' th' biggest corner goes to th' brains'; 1932, Jock of Dartmoor, Dartmoor from Within; 1936, James Curtis; 1937, Chas Prior; 1942, Arthur Gardner, Lower Underworld; extant. Ex the commercial or Stock Exchange sense.—2. A police officer: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; by 1940, it was ob. Ex his fondness for standing at street-corners.—3. An arrest: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

corner-bend, the. At whisk, 'Four cards turn'd down finely, a Signal to Cut by' (Anon., The Art and Mystery of Gaming detected, 1726): C. 18 card-sharpers'. Cf. middle-bend, q.v.

corner man. A crook, of either sex, acting as look-out or lending a hand in a theft: since ca. 1930. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.

cornfield clemo. An escape from prison: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Here, cornfield suggests the country around; see clemo.

corns, blow off one's (loose). See blow off one's corns.

Corporal Dunlop. 'From the one pocket he drew his "Corporal Dunlop"—a short rubber truncheon; from the other he took his automatic', David Hume, Heads You Live, 1939; since ca. 1930. By a pun on Dunlop rubber tyres.

corriander. See coliander seed.

corset. A supposedly bullet-proof vest, 'worn by gangsters and stickup men': since ca. 1924. Ersine. Humorous.

cory favell. See No. 18 in the entry at Awdeley's. The term had fallen into disuse by 1698 at latest; had it not, B.E. is almost certain to have listed it. Lit., curry-favell, one who combs a fallow-coloured horse; hence, in S.E., a curry-favour, a flatterer aiming at profit.

cosan (Head, The English Rogue, 1665) is prob. a misprint for casan = cassan.

cosey. An occ. variant of carsey = casa = case. Partridge, 1937.

cosh, n. A life-preserver, usually carried not as a defence but as a weapon of offence: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1874, H., 'A neddy, a life-preserver; any short, loaded bludgeon'; 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, 'He [the bruiser] very often resorts to a method . . . namely, "carrying the kosh" (bludgeon). Armed with this weapon, which he carries in his sleeve . . .'; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; by 1891 (F & H), also low s. Origin: Romany koshter, 'a stick, a skewer', or more prob. the shortened kosh.—2. Hence, a policeman's baton: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1895, A. Griffiths, Criminals I have Known; 1925, E. Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons; by 1930, also police s. but not much used.—3. A blow with a cosh: 1896, F & H (at kosh); 1908, Edgar Wallace, Angel Esquire. Ex sense 1.

cosh, v. To hit, esp. to fell, with a cosh: 1896, Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago, ' . . . With a sudden blow behind the head, the stranger was happily coshed, and whatever was found on him as he lay insensible was the profit on the transaction'; 1908, Edgar Wallace, Angel Esquire, 'When he coshed Ike Steen'; by 1910, low s. Ex the n., sense 1.

cosh, carry the. See carry . . .

cosh-carrier; cosh-carrying. A prostitute's bully; the being one: late C. 19–20; ob. The former in The E.D.D. 1893; the latter recorded, for 1896, by The O.E.D. Sup. Ex carry the cosh.

cosh(-)poke. A bludgeon; a truncheon: convicts': C. 20. Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940. An elaboration of cosh, n., 1 and 2.

coshier. A thief or 'bully' armed with a 'cosh'; esp. as the assistant of a tripper: 1889 (see picking-up moll); 1895, Caminada, Detective Life (a prostitute's cosh-armed bully); ibid., p. 164, 'Coshers', a class of criminals for whom a certain section of unfortunates act as decoys'; slightly ob. Ex cosh, v.; cf. cosh-carrier.

coshman. A man (esp. a prostitute's bully) that carries a life-preserver: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; † by 1910. See cosh, n.

cosin is an occ. late C. 16-17 variant of cousin. (R. Greene, 1591.)

cossock, 'a policeman': not c. but low s.

cotton. Paper money: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Ex the material from which paper money is manufactured.—2. (Also rinsings.) 'The residue extracted from a "cooker" filter, or cloth through which drugs have been strained,' BVB, 1942: drug addicts': C. 20. The cloth, faute de mieux, may serve as a drug: BVB.

cotton, die with—in one's ears; go to sleep with one's ears full of cotton. To have one's last sleep before being hanged: possibly c., prob. prison officers' (or even journalistic) s.; ca. 1790-1900. See, e.g., History of George Godfrey, by Himself, 1828, II, 162 (the latter); H. Mayhew, London Characters, enlarged ed., 1874 (the former). Ex Cotton, a chaplain at the Old Bailey.

cotton, down to the. See down . . .

Cotton brothers. See Charley Cotton.

cotton(-)glaumer. A hobo that picks cotton: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; extant. Cf. glau; literally, a cotton-grabber.

cotton habit. See chippy habit.

cotton lurk, the. The selling of reels of cotton, with very little cotton on the large reels: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 363, where the dodge is mentioned as already outworn. Contrast cotton-spinner's lurk.

cotton-shooter. A destitute drug-addict that cadges cotton, 2: 1942, BVB.

cotton-spinner's lurk, the. Pretending to be a cotton-spinner out of work, for the sake of alms: 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; † by 1900. See lurk.

couch occurs first and thus in Richard Head's The English Rogue, 1665: 'Couch . . . To lie or sleep. Couch a Hogshead . . . To go to sleep'; J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 1707, has 'To lie down . . . Couch'.

couch a hogshead. To lie down with a view to sleep; to go to bed; hence, to sleep: 1566, Harman, 'To couch a hogshead, to lye downe and sleepe'; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light ('The Canters Dictionarie'), 'To couch a Hogshead, to lye downe a sleepe'; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 'Couch a Hogshead, to lie downe and sleepe: this phrase is like an Alminacke that is out of date: now the duch word to slope is with them used, to sleepe, and liggen to lie downe'; 1665, R. Head (see quot'n at couch); 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, 'To go to sleep'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. I.e., to lay one's head on a couch (etc.).

couch a porker. To go to bed: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; † by 1790. A punning variation of the preceding.

cough, n. A signal of warning: 1925, Leverage; extant. I.e., any signal of warning: ex a monitory cough.

cough, v. (Of a criminal) to confess; to give information, esp. under duress: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 'He was copped out'—arrested —'on suspicion. They put him in the sweat-box, made him cough, and you know the rest', which was imprisonment; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; by 1932 (Flynn's, May 28, Al Hurwitch), it was police s. A specific abridgement and application of the English s. cough up, 'to divulge' (information), 'to disgorge' (money or booty). Hence:—2. To disgorge (money): 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, 'The poor crook never suspects his lawyer, who tells him the stuff goes—every dollar of it—to square the copper, and that he'll get a stretch or two in Sing Sing if he doesn't cough'; extant.—3. 'To signal a pal by a cluck,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex cough, n.

cough slum, 'cough lozenges': cheapjacks' s., as in Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934.

cough up, 'to disgorge' (money or booty), is not c. but s.—prob. low s. at first.—2. To tell; to confess: American tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; by 1920, s. Cf. cough, v., 1.—3. Hence, to give information to the police: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920: Convict, 1934; extant.

councillor or counsellor. A small crowbar used by burglars: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 322); ob. It is smaller than an alderman but larger than a citizen.

count, population of, or a roll-call in, prison: rather is it prison j. than convicts' c. Ersine, 1933; Rose, 1934.

counter. An occasion of sexual intercourse, from the angle of the woman: prostitute's and, esp., white-slavers': C. 20; by 1930, the term had > rather j. than c. Applied properly to a harlot in a whore-house where a check is kept by means of counters, on the number of customers. Passim in Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928.

counter-creeping. 'The most difficult branch of the "profession" for the young thief to learn is "counter creeping"'. To enter a shop on your hands and knees, crawl round behind the counter, and secure the till unnoticed by the shopkeeper requires the most skilful use, not only of the hands, but of the knees . . . Yet, in spite of the difficulties, this branch of the business has many apprentices, who practise in a room in which an imitation counter is fitted up,' G. R. Sims, Mysteries of Modern London, 1906; by 1940, no longer c.

counterfeit crank; properly counterfeit-crank (one who counterfeits 'the crank'). Harman, 1566, has a section entitled A COUNTERFET CRANKE, of which the opening and much the most important paragraph runs:—'These that do counterfet the Cranke be yong knaves and yonge harlots, that depely dissemble'—i.e., simulate—'the falling sicknes. For the Cranke in their language is the falling evyll' or epilepsy. 'I have seene some of these with fayre writings testimoniall, with the names and seales of some men of worshyp in Shropshyre, and in other Shieres farre of, that I have well knowne, and have taken the same from them. Many of these do go without writings, and wyll go halfe naked, and looke most pitiously. And if any clothes be geven them, they immediately sell the same, for weare it they wyll not, because'—i.e., in order that—'they would be the more pitied, and weare fylthy clothes on their heades, and never go without a peece of whyte sope about them, which, if they see cause or present gaine, they wyll prively convey the same into their mouth, and so worke the same there, that they wyll fome as it were a Boore [i.e., boar], and marvelously for a tyme torment them selves; and thus deceive they the common people, and gayne much. These have commonly their harlots as the other.' Also in Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608, a mere plagiarism; 1610, Rowlands (counterfeit cranck); 1698, B.E., assigns them to the 20th Order of Canters; in 1725, A New Canting Dict. assigns them to the 60th and notes their changed activities, 'A genteel Cheat, a Sham or Impostor, appearing in divers shapes; one who sometimes counterfeits Mens Hands, or forges Writings; at other Times personates other Men: Who is sometimes a Clipper or Coiner; at other Times deals in Counterfeit Jewels . . . Sometimes he sets up for a strowling Mountebank or Player . . . To Day he is a Clergyman in Distress; to Morrow a reduced Gentleman: In Short . . . a perfect Proteus'; 1785, Grose, who records both senses—but by his time the term was, I suspect, merely historical. See crank.

counterfeit cranker is a rare variant of the preceding. (Randle Holme, 1688.)

counterfeit soldier. Dekker, O per se O, 1612, 'These may well be called Counterfeit Soldiers, for not one (scarce) among the whole Armie of them, ever discharged so much as a Caliver. The weapons they carry are short Crab-tree Cudgels: and these, (because they have the name of Souldiers), never march but in troopes two or three in a company: of all sorts of Roagues these are the most impudent and boldest, for they knocke at mens doores, as if they had serious businesse there, whereas the doore being opened to them, they beginne this parle' (their professional patter), making much of their sores; not genuinely c.

country, send to the. To 'send to Dartmoor or a penal establishment', Black, 1943: since ca. 1920. See Country, the, and country, the.

Country, the. Dartmoor (prison): since ca. 1920: 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open. Perhaps suggested by the synonymous the Moor, but prob. a particularization of:—

country, the. Prison; imprisonment: 1862, A Prison Matron, Female Life in Prison, I, 179; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago, 'Wives . . . temporarily widowed by the absence of husbands "in the country"'; 1927, Wallace Blake, Quod; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; by 1940, low s. I.e., as compared with London.

country Harry. A waggoner: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; app. † by 1830. Harry is a very common country name.

countryman seems to be an Australian variant of family man (thief): ca. 1820–70. Alexander Harris, The Emigrant Family, 1849, quotes a song that begins, 'There's never a chap—Bob, Arthur, or Dan—lives half such a life as "a countryman"'.

countryman, clacking the. See clacking the countryman.

county crop. 'Hair cut close and round, as if guided by a basin—an indication of having been in prison': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; ob. The ref. is to a County gaol.

couple. 'To live with': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary; ob. Prob. short for 'make a couple with' rather than ex couple with, 'copulate with'.

coupling-up. 'Marriage or "coupling up" with an exploiter, the latter having his advantage which she cannot combat,' quoted by Dick O'Connor, G-Men at Work, 1939, from an outline discovered by 'G-Men'—an outline setting forth 'the methods of operation advocated by a ring of coloured procurers of white women operating between the Middle West and the Atlantic coast' (O'Connor): white-slavers': C. 20.

courage pill(s). Heroin: 1934, Howard N. Rose; BVB, 1942, 'Heroin in tablet form'. Cf. Dutch courage.

courbe; courber; courbing law. See curb; curber; curbing law.

court, the. A, or the, judge in a court of law: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'The Powers that Rule with whom the thief has most to do, and to whom he pays the greater part of his corruption fund, are the policeman, the district attorney, the "court", and the "jury-fixer" . . . by this I do not mean that every town has a corrupt sheriff, district attorney, and "court"—far from it!—but I do mean that . . .'; by 1920, no longer c.

courtesy man. See curtesy man.

cousin is a sharking gamesters', esp. dicers', name for a prospective victim: 1552, Gilbert Walker, Diceplay (master dicer loquitur), 'Be they young, be they old, that falleth into our laps, and be ignorant of our arte, we call them all by the name of a couzin; as men that we make as much of as if they were of our kin'; also the prospective or actual victim of confidence men (esp. of card-sharpers), as in Greene's 'Cony-Catching' pamphlets, 1591–92; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, as cozen; app. † by 1720.

cousin Betty. 'a travelling prostitute, frequenting fairs, races, &c.' (Jon Bee, 1823), is an underworld—mostly tramps—development of the dial. sense, 'a vagrant, a wandering Bedlamite' (see E.D.D.): ca. 1800–60.

cousin Jack. 'Generally refers to a Cornish miner, but, like the term Cockney, may be applied to any Englishman' (Stiff, 1931): common among tramps, who, however, have merely adopted the two terms from gen. s. usage.

couter. See cooter.

couzin. See cousin.

cove. Earliest as co, q.v., and cofe, q.v. First recorded as cove in Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9: 'The word Cove, or Cofe, or Cuffin, signifies a Man, a Fellow, &c. But differs something in his propertie, according as it meetes with other wordes; For a Gentleman is called a Gentry Cove, or Cofe: A good fellow is a Bene Cofe; a Churle is called, a Quier Cuffin; Quier signifies naught [i.e., worthless], and Cuffin . . . a man: and in Canting they terme a Justice of peace, (because he punisheth them belike) by no other name then by Quier cuffin, that is to say a Churle, or a naughty man'; 1610, Rowlands (cove); 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue (always cove); 1676, Coles; 1688, Randle Holme, 'Cove, or Cofe, Coffin or Cuffin, a Man, a Fellow. Coves, Fellows, Rogues'; 1698, B.E., 'A Man, a Fellow, also a Rogue'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1718, C. Hitching; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (as in B.E.); 1785, Grose ('a sham, a fellow, a rogue'); by 1794, in use in U.S.A. (Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807); 1812, Vaux; 1823, Bee, 'Any body whatever, masculine'; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; by 1850, low s.; by 1870, gen. s. In U.S.A. before 1859—Matsell; it may have remained c. in U.S.A. until ca. 1910 (e.g., The Autobiography of a Beggar, 1903; Life in Sing Sing, 1904). Perhaps ex Romany cove (or covo), 'that man'; cf. covi, 'that woman'.—2. Hence, a rogue: ca. 1680–1830. See sense 1, quotations of 1688, 1725, 1785.—3. (Ex sense 1.) The man or master of the house, the tavern, the 'fence shop', the brothel, etc.: 1732, trial of Thomas Beck in Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, published in 1735; 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1847, A. Harris, Settlers and Convicts; 1848, Sinks of London; 1889, B & L; by 1910, ob.; by 1930, †.

'cove dubber or quod', in Potter, 1797, p. 14, is an error—or a misprint—for 'cove, dubber or quod'.

cove of the case is implied in 'Several Coves of Cases and procuresses, keeping a most vigilant eye [on their girls]': 1821, P. Egan, Life in London; † by 1910. See case, n., 3, and cove, 3.

cove of the dossing ken. A landlord of a common lodging-house: mid-C. 19—early 20. Partridge, 1937.

cove of the ken. 'The master of the house' (Egan); a landlord: 1744, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. 14; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1832, W. T. Moncrieff, Eugene Aram (landlord); † by ca. 1910.

covee or covey. A diminutive of cove, 1: since ca. 1810 (ca. 1811, A Leary Mot; by 1860—or possibly as early as 1850—it was s. W. T. Moncrieff, Tom and Jerry, 1821 (covey); Pierce Egan, Boxiana, IV, 1824 (see quot'n at togaman covee); 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, III; 1836, The Individual; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1841, W. Leman Rede; 1843, W. T. Moncrieff, The Scamps of London; by 1847, at latest, in use in U.S.A.—witness E. Z. C. Judson's The Mysteries and Miseries of New York, 1851, and The Ladies' Repository, 1848; 1859, Sessions Papers.

Covent Garden. A farthing: orig. (ca. 1850–65), this was c.; after being low rhyming s. it >, by 1880, gen. rhyming s. 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857. The rhyme is on the sol. garden.

Covent Garden abdess. A bawd or procuress: 1785, Grose; † by 1891 (F & H). See abdess. In C. 18, Covent Garden 'teemed with brothels: as Fielding's Covent Garden Tragedy (1751–2) suggests' (F & H).

Covent Garden ague. 'The venereal disease': 1785, Grose, who prob. means his vagueness to precision syphilis; † by 1891 (F & H). See the preceding.

Covent Garden nun. A prostitute: 1785, Grose; † by 1891 (F & H). See Covent Garden abdess.

cover, n. 'Cover, to stand in such a situation as to obscure your Pall, who is committing a robbery, from the view of bystanders, or persons passing, is called covering him. Anybody whose dress or stature renders him particularly eligible for this purpose, is said to be a good cover': 1812, J. H. Vaux; by 1845, current in U.S.A., to judge by The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848, and Matsell, 1859; 1888, J. Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1904, Ex-Inspector Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals; by 1905, police j.—2. 'I . . . ordered him to return the cover (overcoat)': U.S.A.: C. 20. May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story, 1928. It does cover one's body.—3. A criminal's hiding place: U.S.A.: since the early 1920's. Ersine, 1933.

cover, v. See preceding, sense 1: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1891, F & H; 1904, Elliott; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); by 1930, police j.

cover, at the, adj. and adv. applied to a confederate cloaking the movements of the actual pick-pocket: mid-C. 19–20. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. Cf. cover, n., 1.

cover, driven to. See drive to cover.

cover, under. See under cover.

cover car. A decoy car; a car 'used to block pursuit after a robbery': since ca. 1923. Ersine, 1933.

cover-down. 'A tossing coin with a false cover, enabling either head or tail to be shown, according as the cover is left on or taken off': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1874, H, 'This style of cheating is now obsolete'.

cover-joint. An apparently honest place (club, restaurant, pool-room, what-have-you) where criminals meet, confer, etc.: May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'The Gray Gangster'; extant.

cover with the moon. To sleep in the open: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

coverer. A synonym of cover, n., 1. 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890.

covering is the vbl n. of cover, v. (see the n.): e.g., in Ex-Inspector Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals, 1904.

coves who try it on. See try it on.

covess. A landlady (of inn or tavern): 1789, G. Parker (see quot'n at slavey, 2); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I, 442, where it is applied to a brothel-keeper; 1821, P. Egan, Life in London (landlady); 1848, Sinks of London, 'Covess of a ken, a female keeper of a brothel'; † by 1889 (B & L). On cove, 3.—2. Simply as the female of cove, 1: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, The London Guide, 'Female cheat, bawdy-house keeper, old trull'; 1823, Jon Bee; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 639, where it is used of whores ('The queer covesses of his vicinage'); 1859, H, 'Once popular, but it has fallen into disuse'.—3. See sense 2, reference of 1818, first nuance: † by 1880.

covess dingy. See dingy blown.

covey, in c., is elliptical for covey of whores: 1785, Grose, 'A collection of whores'; app. the term was current ca. 1770–1840. Ex the lit. S.E. sense.—2. See covee.

coving. 'Palming; stealing jewelry before the face and eyes of the owner, or person that is selling it': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; in C. 20, also Australian—Baker, 1942.

cow. 'A dilapidated prostitute': 1859, Matsell; 1942, BVB; extant. By depreciation: cf. mare.—2. (Prob. ex sense 1.) A wife; mistress; 'girl': C. 20: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 'The philosophy of the old-time bank-burglar that . . . the cracksman who had a steady "cow" should be side-tracked was gradually passing into the discard'; 1933, Ersine, 'A woman'; April 1933, The American Mercury, Jim Tully, who implies its currency since ca. 1890; extant.

cow and calf. A laugh: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

cow-crazy. 'Mad' about women; C. 20: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice. See cow, 2.

cow-simple. Simple-minded in regard to, or easily duped by, women: C. 20: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 'We young fellows began to cultivate the ladies. The old-timers . . . said we were "cow-simple" . . . "Let 'em play the cows," Mike declared, "and it won't be long before they'll be on the inside looking out.'' See cow, 2.

cowboy. 'A gunman who is fond of displaying his weapons' (Ersine, 1933): since ca. 1925.

cowch. See couch a hoghead.

cowl. A priest: 1925, Leverage; extant—but not much used. Cucullus non facit monachum.

cows and kisses. Ladies; women: orig. (ca. 1850–70), it was c., as in 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857. This piece of rhyming s. hardly outlived the C. 19; the rhyme, obviously, is on misses. It reached New York—see Matsell; also M & B, 1944.

cow's baby, 'a calf', is s., not c., as also is cow's spouse, a bull.

cow's calf. Ten shillings—in value, coin, paper: racing: C. 20; by 1940, low s. Perhaps it rhymes on 'half a sov'.

Cow's Udder, the. See Stop-Hole Abbey.

coxy. An inexperienced salesman: commercial underworld: 1931, Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering; Feb. 19, 1935, The New York Sun; extant. Ex Scottish and Eng. dial. coxy, 'self-conceited'; "cocky".

cozen. See cousin.

cozer. A 'stool pigeon': 1925, Leverage; extant. Yiddish?

cozey. 'A female stool pigeon,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex prec.

cozza, 'pork', is cheapjacks' s.: 1876, C. Hindley, The Life and Adventures of a Cheap Jack.

cozzy. A men's (public) lavatory: mostly beggars' and tramps': 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; extant. A corruption of cosy, the job of attendant being an easy one.

crab, n.; usually in pl. A shoe; a boot: U.S.A. (—1794), but prob. ex England: 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; 1821, D. Haggart, 'A crab . . . heeled with iron'—English example; 1839, Brandon: 1848, The Ladies Repository (U.S.A.); Dec. 1848, Sessions Papers; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; † by 1920. Short for crab-shells (witness Lexicon Balatronicum)—a piece of Irish s.—2. An informer to the police: Australian: C. 20. In, e.g., Baker, 1945. He 'crabs'—spoils, prevents—the activities of criminals.

crab, v. 'To prevent the perfection or execution of any intended matter or business, by saying anything offensive or unpleasant, is called crabbing it, or throwing a crab': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 218; 1860, H, 2nd ed., 'To inform against'. This specific sense was prob. c. in origin and until ca. 1860. In U.S.A., it seems to have been c. of ca. 1850–80: e.g., at least once, in The National Police Gazette, during the 1850's. Ex S.E. crab, (of hawks) 'to scratch, claw or fight with each other' (O.E.D.).—2. Hence, to cheat (a person): 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; † by 1910.—3. To pilfer (trifling articles): U.S.A.: 1848, 'The Flash Language' in The Ladies' Repository; 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 'At eight [years of age] I was crabbing drop-cakes from the Greenwich House cooking-class'; † by 1937 (Irwin).—4. (Ex sense 1.) To prevent (a person) from committing, e.g., a theft: 1849, Sessions Papers, March 5 (trial of the Phillips brothers and others), 'You had been to a place where your brother was living to do a job [i.e., to steal] but you had been crabbed, for your brother had not unfastened the window'; by 1890, low s.

crab, throw a. See crab, v., 1.

crab-ken; crabkin. A shoemaker's shop: U.S.A. (—1794): 1807, Henry Tufts (crabkin); † by 1890. Lit., a shoe-place: see crab, n., 1.

crab-shells. See crab, n., 1, at end.

crabkin. See crab-ken.

crabs, 'a losing throw to the main at hazard', is not c. but s.—2. See crab, n., 1.—3. Feet: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1910. Ex s. crab-shells, 'shoes', or ex crab, n., 1.

crabs, get. To receive no money: since ca. 1910. J. Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Perhaps in allusion to crabs, 'body lice'.

crabs, move one's. To run away: 1889, B & L; † by 1940. See crabs, 3.

crack, n., 'a whore' (Durfey, 1676), is classified by B.E., 1698, as c., but it was never lower than s. (So too crackish.) Either anatomical or ex S.E. crack, a flaw.—2. A burglary, a forcible entry: 1811, Lex. Bal., 'The pigs grabbed the kiddy for a crack; the officers seized the youth for a burglary'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1817, Sessions; 1828 (Feb.), ibid., 'They were going on a crack'; 1823, Bee; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1836, The Individual, Nov. 8, 'But if for the last crack I doesn't nap my riglars, | Blest if I don't nose that queer cove Bill!'; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, 'The House-Breaker's Song' in Pickwick Abroad; 1841, W. Leman Rede; 1848, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, IV; May 1854, Sessions; 1860, C. Martell, The Detective's Note-Book; 1862, Mayhew, London Labour, IV; 1865, The Rogues and Rogueries of New York; 1888, James Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1894, Chief-Inspector Littlechild; 1895, Caminada, who shows that by this date it was also police s. in Britain; on the crack (which belongs equally to sense 3) is, however, recorded in U.S.A. in C. 20, as, e.g., in Kane, 1927, and Godfrey Irwin, 1931 ('Out for burglary or other theft'). Ex crack, v., 1.—3. 'The crack is the game of house-breaking': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), at gait; app. † by 1900. In Sessions Papers, April 16, 1849, it is used attributively—'They were all crack words'.—4. Dry firewood: 'Modern Gipsy', says H, 1874. And occ. by tramps, but hardly gen. enough to be considered as c.; it occurs in vol. I (p. 358) of London Labour, 1851.—5. A difficulty (Julien Proskauer, Suckers All, 1934): U.S.A.: on the borderline between c. and s. Perhaps ex mountaineering.

crack, v. To break open burglariously; orig. crack up, and of a door: 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'To break open; as, To crack up a Door; To break a Door Open'; 1781, George Parker (see ken-cracker); 1797, Potter, 'To break open, to burst'; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Progress', 'Cracking kens concluded every day'; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1839, Brandon; 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), Nov. 11; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1848, Sinks of London; 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York; March 1857, Sessions Papers; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1858, Augustus Mayhew; 1859, H, 'Cracking a Kirk, breaking into a church or chapel'; 1865, The Rogues and Rogueries of New York; 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1872, Geo. P.

Burnham (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1894, The Reminiscences of Chief-Inspector Little-child; 1900, G. R. Sims, In London's Heart; 1901, J. Flynt (U.S.A.); 1909, Ware, 'Crack a case . . . To break into a house'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1931, IA; 1932, Nelson Baylis (New Zealand), by private letter; 1933, Ersine, 'To blast, blow' (a safe); in C. 20, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946), esp. as crack a case.—2. To break out of (gaol): U.S.A. (—1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative, p. 293, 'Crack the qua . . . break the gaol'; app. † by 1900. Cf. S.E. 'to break gaol' and c. crush stir.—3. See crack a whid. But crack, by itself, is C. 20 American s. in the sense 'to talk; to speak' (v.i.), as, e.g., in 'As the criminal mingles with the other cons in the prison-yard he learns that when a man cracks or raps to another he is merely speaking to him' (Convict, 1934). Ersine's nuance 'to speak inopportunely' is s., not c.—4. To discuss (a plan, a robbery, etc.): May 19, 1851, Sessions Papers (Daley, Carter, Tuck); 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 'He . . . could hear nothing "cracked"', so he asked . . . no questions'; app. † by 1930. Cf. next sense.—5. To give information to the police (v.i.): perhaps from as early as 1850: July 10, 1871, Sessions Papers (p. 156); 1891, F & H; Nov. 17, 1928, Flynn's (U.S.A.), Thomas Topham; ob. Cf. crack a whid.—6. 'To forge or utter worthless paper' (v.t.): U.S.A.: 1891, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms, 'To forge bank-notes, cheques; to utter worthless paper'; ob.—7. To declare (a person) insane: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage, who notes also the sense 'to drive insane', which I believe to be not c. but low s.; extant.

crack, adj. See sense 3 of the n.

crack, do a. To break into a house: 1887, Henley (see dead-lurk, v.); app. † by 1920. See crack, n., 2.

crack, on the. Engaged in, or while engaged in, burglary: C. 19–20. See crack, n., 2.

crack a boo. To flirt; to make love: principally Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on (bill and) coo.—2. In C. 20 Australia, to betray a secret: borderline between c. and low s. C. J. Dennis, 1916; Baker, 1942.

crack a box. To blast open a safe: prob. since ca. 1915: Kane, 1927. See crack, v., 1, and box.

crack a case is a variant of the next. Brandon, 1839; J. Greenwood, 1869.

crack a crib. To break open, burgle, a house: 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford, 'Crack a swell's crib . . . Break into a gentleman's house'; 1833, Sessions; 1841, W. Leman Rede, Sixteen String Jack; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; by 1850, in U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; 1879, James McGovan, Brought to Bay; 1887, G. W. Walling (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann (with variant crack a drum); 1891, F & H; 1898, Fergus Hume, Hagar of the Pawn Shop; 1925, E. Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, "Cracking a crib" . . . dead and buried since Charles Dickens' in Britain; still current (though by 1940, ob.) in U.S.A., but since ca. 1910 only in the sense 'to blast a safe' (Kane, 1927). In C. 20, it exists only as literary c.: the C. 20 phrase is screw a joint.

crack a cry. To die: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

crack a jug. 'Cracking the jug'. Forcing an entrance into a bank, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; extant. See crack, v., 1, and jug, n., 2.

crack a ken. To break burglariously into a house: from ca. 1770: 1781, implied in ken-cracker; 1821, P. Egan (see crack, v., 1); 1841, W. Leman Rede, Sixteen String Jack; 1891, F & H; ob. by 1890; † by 1920. See crack, v., 1.

crack a lay. To speak; esp., to divulge a plan: July 1861 (p. 338), Sessions Papers; ob. Cf. crack, v., 3, and lay, n., 2.

crack a swag. To break into a shop: C. 19. (F & H, 1891.) See crack, v., 1, and swag, n., 1.

crack a whid. 'To speak or utter: as, he crack'd some queer whids, he dropt some bad or ugly expressions; crack a whid for me, intercede, or put in a word for me': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Jon Bee, "'To crack a whid'", to give a prisoner a character—good'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; July 10, 1871, Sessions Papers; 1876, Hindley; 1889, B & L; 1894, Price Warung, Tales of the Old Days, "'Cracking a whid in prime twig."—Making a speech in a stylish or masterly manner'; † by 1900. In Sessions, May 1835, it occurs as crack a weed. See whid, n.

crack down. To commit a crime, esp. a theft: Jan. 22, 1927, Flynn's, Roy W. Hynds, 'You'll walk outa this joint a crook You'll hook up with some mob. You'll crack down. You'll keep on cracking down till you fall again. Then you'll land back in this joint, or some place like it Sure—just give you time, and you'll be a crook'; ob. Ex the s. sense, 'to work unusually hard'.

crack-fencer. 'A man who sells nuts' (in the street): c. and low street s.: 1859; by 1890, no longer c. See fencer, 2; crack, for the obvious reason that one cracks nuts.

crack in, v.i. To break into a building in order to rob it: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, p. 205; extant—but slightly ob. An elaboration of crack, v., 1.

crack lay, the. 'The Crack Lay, of late is used, in the cant language, to signify the art and mystery of house-breaking': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1848, 'The Flash Language' in The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.), 'An expedition for the purpose of house-breaking'; † by 1920 in Britain and by 1937 (Irwin) in U.S.A. Ex crack, v., 1; cf. sense 2 of the n.

crack salesman. A prostitute: C. 20. BVB, 1942. She sells her crack.—2. A pimp, a procurer: C. 20. Ibid. He peddles 'cracks'.

crack-shop. An asylum for the insane: 1925, Leverage; ob. Cf. crack, v., 7, and English s. cracked (and crackers), 'insane'.

crack the pitch. To discontinue a 'lurk' (q.v.), esp. because of someone divulging the imposition: beggars': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 416; app. † by 1900. Prob. with ref. to a cheapjack's (or a showman's) pitch or stand or stall or booth.

crack the qua. See crack, v., 2.

crack the works. To inform to the police; to confess: 1927, C. Francis Coe, Me—Gangster, 'Make a pinch with me and I'll crack the works on the kid'; extant. Cf. crack, v., 3 and 5.

crack up. See crack, v., 1.

cracked ice. See quot'n from Irwin: 1927.

Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Diamonds, usually those stones which have not yet been set, or those removed from their settings'; extant.

cracker. The backside or posteriors: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1860. Ex noise therefrom emitted.—2. A crust: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who records also the S.E. sense. Ex its noise in being broken. Whence S.E. cracker, a thin, hard biscuit.—3. Hence, 'a small loaf, served to prisoners in gaols, for their daily subsistence': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1890.—4. Extremely rare (? existent at all) by itself, it occurs in ken-cracker, q.v. But later (—1870), it was a shortening of cracksman: 1870, The Broadway, Nov., 'Among Thieves'; † by 1900. Ex crack, v., 1.—5. See crackers.—6. A safe: U.S.A.: 1929–31, Kernôt; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant—but uncommon. It is something the bank-burglar 'cracks'.

crackers. "Crackers" . . . These are men of all ages who have received head injuries, or such injuries to the cerebral column as to render them at times at least irresponsible . . . Also those who have suicidal tendencies,' T. B. Gibson Mackenzie, 'The British Prison'—in The Fortnightly Review, March 1932; extant. Cf. (low) s. crackers, 'insane'—the prob. origin.

crackers and toast. (Winning) post: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

cracking, vbl n.; hence attributively. Burglary: 1805, 'This is a fine night for cracking', words spoken by George Webb when, under sentence of death, he lay in Maidstone Gaol—as reported in The New Newgate Calendar, 1826, in vol. V, p. 92; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Cracking tools. Implements of housebreaking'; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'At a cracking consarn', glossed as 'a burglary'; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, 'The cracking line (house-breaking)'; 1891, F & H; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (hence, American); 1924, George C. Henderson; ob. Ex crack, v., 1.—2. Talking, speaking: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Adopted ex Scottish; cf. crack, v., 3.—3. An act of striking (a person): U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Sing Sing; by 1940—perhaps by 1930—it was (low) s. Ex Australian s. crack, 'to smite (a person)'.

cracking concern (or consarn). See cracking, 1.

crackish, whorish, may orig. have been s.; but it was never, as B.E., 1698, classifies it, a c. term. See crack, n., 1. crackler. A crust: 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; app. † by 1830. Echoic in itself and in ref. to the noise a dry crust makes while being eaten.

crackling cheat. A chicken: 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'The Foragers . . . fetch in Crackling Cheats . . . that is, Chickens'. This may be a misprint or a misapprehension, for Shirley's forms are far from impeccable.

crackmans; later, cragmans. A hedge: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, has the former spelling, as also has R. Head in The English Rogue, 1665; 1688, Holme (crackmans); 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The Cull thought to have loap'd, by breaking through the Crackmans. . . . The Gentleman thought to escape, by breaking through the Hedges'; 1734, C. Johnson, The Most Famous Highwaymen, in incorrect form crackman's; 1785, Grose (crackmans); † by 1830—prob. by 1810.

A hedge is 'full' of gaps or cracks; mans is a c. suffix.

cracksman. 'A house breaker, a burglar': 1797, Humphry Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'The kiddy is a clever cracksman; the young fellow is a very expert house-breaker'; ca. 1819, The Young Prig; 1823, Jon Bee; 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, Appendix (II), 'Are they fogle-hunters, or cracksmen leary?'; 1833, Sessions Papers; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1838, Glascock; 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1841, Tait's Magazine, April, 'Flowers of Hemp'; 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1845, anon. translator of E. Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, ch. XVI; 1848, The Man in the Moon, 'Flowers of Felonry'; 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York; 1851, Mayhew; 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1857, Snowden; 1858, Dickens; 1859, H; 1860, C. Martel; 1865, A Practical Hand, Convicts; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham; 1881, J. McGovan, Strange Clues; 1889, Clarkson & Hall Richardson; 1894, Chief-Inspector Littlechild; by 1900, s. See crack, v., 1. cracksman's crook, tip (one) the. To shake hands with that grip which is a 'masonical' sign among housebreakers: 1863, Tom Taylor, The Ticket-of-Leave Man, IV; extant, though ob.

craft rig, the. 'A new and curious species of robbery practised upon the river Thames. Two fellows, who dress and look like watermen, steal a boat, row down the river to meet the Kent hoys, particularly from Margate and Ramsgate: they hale [sic] the hoys, and want to know who wishes to go on shore, and as sure as any lady or gentleman gets into their boat, in a very little time they will jump up and rob you, tie you neck and heels, row you up to the west country craft, heave you on board, take your peter, that is, your trunk, ashore with them, where it is guttled and disposed of the same night': 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; † by 1870.

cragmans. See crackmans.

cram, the. See work the cram.

crammer. One's stomach: 1848, 'The Flash Language' in The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin). That into which one crams food.

cramp, n. A hanging: 1725, implied in cramp word(s); 1809 (see nab the cramp); † by 1860. Ex the ensuing effect.—2. Hence as at cramp saying.

cramp, v. See cramped.

cramp rings; or hyphenated; or one word. Fetters. Earliest (Harman, 1566), in queer cramp rings, q.v.; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Till Crampings [sic] quire tip Cove his hire' and, in the glossary, 'Cramp-rings . . . Bolt or shackles'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose, 'Bolts, shackles, or fetters'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 'Shackles or handcuffs'; by 1870, at latest, † in Britain; by 1890 at latest, † in U.S.A. A chain, made of rings or links, gives one the cramp—or it cramps one's movements.

cramp(-)rings, scour the. See scour the cramp rings.

cramp (saying). A saying peculiar to the underworld, esp. in Scotland: 1863, A Prison Matron, Jane Cameron, II, 128; 1866, id., Prison Characters, I, 33, where it is clear that cramp, n., bore the sense 'underworld' and was often used as an adj.; † by 1910. Ex cramp, n., 1.

cramp word(s). Cramp-Words. Sentence of death passed upon a Criminal by the Judge; as, He has just undergone the Cramp-Word; i.e., Sentence is just passed upon him; us'd by Canterers, when one of their Gang is condemn'd to be hang'd, A New Canting Dict., 1725,—so too in Grose, 1785; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—witness Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859; by 1880, at latest, † in Britain; by 1900, † in U.S.A. Ex † S.E. cramp word, an uncommon word or a word difficult to pronounce.

cramped. 'Killed; murdered; hanged': 1859, George W. Matsell; 1889, B & L; † by 1891 (F & H). Cf. cramp, n., 1, and cramp word.

cramping cull. 'Executioner; hangman': 1859, Matsell; † by 1889 (B & L). Ex the v. implied in cramped + cull, n.

crampings (see quot'n from Head at cramp rings) is almost certainly a misprint.

crampings. See cramp rings.

cran. 'He heard some broad hints of the cran', glossed 'i.e. forged notes', occurs in vol. IV (1809) of The Criminal Recorder, and earlier in Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, April 1802. App. an Anglo-Irish form of screen.

cranck(e). See crank.

craniers, in Dekker's The Belman of London, 1608, represents perhaps graniers = the graviars of Gilbert Walker. See graniers.

crank. See counterfeit crank, which it rarely abbreviates: 1622, Fletcher; † by 1700.—2. Independently, the crank is epilepsy, early known as the falling sickness: 1566, Harman (see the quot'n at counterfeit crank); 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All (where, as often in C. 17, it is spelt cranck and crancke); 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.,—but as this is prob. a mere copying from Harman, it is fairly safe to conclude that the term was † by 1730 at latest. Ex Ger., or prob. rather Dutch, krank, 'ill' or 'diseased'.

crank-cuffin, in W. H. Ainsworth's Rookwood, 1834, seems (in the song at II, 339) to signify a tyro in a canting crew, or a candidate for admission to such a crew: but I think that the term existed only in Ainsworth's fancy. According to F & H (1891), however, it means 'He who, in a canting crew, specialized in feigning sickness'; ca. 1710–1840. If so, cf. the preceding entry.

crank-driver, 'an attendant in an insane asylum' (Leverage, 1925), is low s.—not e. cranke. See crank.

cranky(-)hutch. An asylum for the insane: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1910. Cf. booby hutch, 'prison'.

crap, n. Money: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Nim the Crap; Steal the Money'; 1785, Grose (crap and crop); 1797, Potter (crapp and crop); 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee, 'Crapp—money, and the whole of it that could be obtained'; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1889 (B & L). Ex dial. crap, crop or harvest. Cf. crop, n., 2.—2. Always the crap, hanging: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'He was knocked down for the crap the last sessions—he went off at the fall of the leaf, at tuck 'em fair'; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1889 (B & L), at latest. Ex crap, v.—3. Hence, the galls: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1828, Lytton Bulwer (see Newmans); 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1841, Tait's Magazine, April, 'Flowers of Hemp'; † by 1850.—4. Defined by Jackson & Hellyer, 1914, as 'treachery' and classified as c.; but Godfrey Irwin (letter of Aug. 12, 1937) writes, 'I disagree; the word stands for deceit, is properly slang rather than cant'—a verdict that should be accepted as decisive.—5. Inferior goods (esp. jewellery): burglars': 1935, George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade; extant. Ex low s. crap, excrement; cf. Am. low s. crap, 'hot air', idle talk.—6. Among drug addicts (at first, and still, mainly American) it has, since ca. 1925, possessed a specific, almost an esoteric, meaning, thus: 'Pure heroin looks like talcum . . . Peddlers who sell it . . . at race tracks and joy palaces get from $10 to $22 an ounce for it after it has been cut with 80–92% of sugar milk. The resulting mixture is known to the trade as "crap", a cant expression probably derived from some lost Asiatic dialect,' Robert Baldwin in For Men Only, Nov. 1937. He who peddles it is a crap artist (Baldwin). The 'lost Asiatic dialect' is obviously a leg-pull: compared with pure heroin, this 'diluted' mixture is mere crap.

crap, v. To hang (a person): 1753, implied in crapping cull, q.v.; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'The senteneing some more to be crapped'; 1785, Grose; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'Crapp me . . .' ('hang me!' as an exclamation); 1809, Andrewes, 'To execute'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; † by 1880 at latest—prob. by 1870. Lit., to harvest: cf. the origin of crap, n., 1.

crap artist. See crap, n., 6.

crap-merchant. A hangman: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'The world vulgarly call him the hang-man, but here he is stiled the crap-merchant'; app. † by 1860. See crap, v.

craping cull. See crapping cull.

crapp. See crap, n., 1.

crapped is the ppl adj. from crap, v.: 'hanged'.

crapper. Prison: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, IA; extant. For the semantics, cf. can, n., 3: to put an underworld—that is, not too fine a—point on it, the place is no better than a water-closet or crapper (late C. 19–20 low s.). crapping-casa, -case, -castle; -ken; croppen ken or cropping-ken, this being the only form until C. 19. A privy: 1676, Coles, 'Croppin-ken, c. a privy'; 1698, B.E., 'Croppin-ken, c. a Privy, or Bog-house'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'A Bog-house . . . Croppin-ken'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (croppin-ken); 1785, Grose, 'Croppen ken; the necessary house'; 1859, H, 'Crapping Case, a privy, or water-closet'; 1860, H, 2nd ed. (crapping case and c. ken); 1887, Baumann (crapping castle); by 1889 (B & L), c. casa was low theatrical s. Ex crap, 'to defecate', and casa, case, ken, 'house'; castle is ironic.

crapping cull. A hangman: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'A Rispin and a Crapping Cull; a Bridewell and a Hangman'; 1797, Potter, Dict.; 1809, Andrewes, wrongly c. curl—an error repeated in Sinks of London, 1848; † by 1900. Ex crap, v.

crash, n. A burglary: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. bust, n., 1.—2. A break-out from jail: March 16, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington. Cf. sense 5 of the v.

crash, v. To kill or slay: 1620, Dekker, Villanies Discovered, 'Crash a grunting cheate thats young'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Crash that cull; kill that fellow'; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary (U.S.A.); app. † by 1890. Lit., to fell with a crash.—2. To eat: earliest in crashing cheats: 1688, Randle Holme, 'Crash, eat'; app. † by 1780. Perhaps a perversion of crunch.—3. To steal: 1734, C. Johnson, A History of the Most Famous Highwaymen, 'The Lurries Crash . . . convey all Manner of Things'; app. † by 1790. Perhaps cf.:—4. To break into (a place, with view to burglary): U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'As, crash a joint'; March 13, 1926, Flynn's; 1927, Kane; Nov. 17, 1928, Flynn's, 'If I've crashed the joint . . .'; June 21, 1930, Flynn's, Col. Givens, 'The Rat'; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 'Often they [women] "crash"' (break into a store window); extant.—5. 'To break jail,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: Dec. 29, 1934, Flynn's, Convict 12627; 1937, E. H. Sutherland; 1938, Convict 2nd; extant. Cf. crush the stir.

crash boy. A burglar: since ca. 1920. Kernôt, 1929–31. Cf. crasher.

crash-out. A break-out from prison: since 1910: March 23, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington; slightly ob. Cf. crash, v., 5.

crash the pog(e)y. To gain admittance to the prison hospital: April 1, 1933, Flynn's, Convict 12627; extant. See crash, v., 4, and pogey, 3.

crasher. A burglar: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex crash, v., 4.—2. A fugitive; an escaper from prison: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex crash, v., 5.

crashingc heats. 'Crashing chetes, teeth,' Harman, 1566; ibid., 'Crassingc chetes, apels, peares, or anye other frute'; 1665, R. Head, 'Crashing cheats . . . Teeth'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Randle Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., where it is printed crushing-cheats; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1830,—if not, indeed, by 1800. Lit., things that crash or crush.—2. See the second Harman quot'n in sense 1; 'Crashing Cheates, Apples,' Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610; app. † by 1720 at latest.

crassing cheats, in Harman, is a misprint for crashing cheats, despite the fact that he differentiates the sense by the spelling.

crate. 'A safe in underworld parlance is called a box, crate, crib, pete, can and other names. The safe burglar is called a box-man, a peteman or yegg. The latter term [yegg] is seldom used now,' Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 1936; extant.—2. An automobile: Feb. 13, 1937, Flynn's, Richard Sale; Feb. 11, 1939, Flynn's; extant. By humorous depreciation; cf the English airman's use of the term for an aircraft.

cravat. See sleep in one's cravat.

craw, v. 'To crawl; to weaken,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Either short for craw-fish or a truncation of crawl.

craw-fish, v. 'To back out; refuse to do anything after starting to do it,' The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848; by 1890, s. Ex the motion of a craw-fish.

crawl, v. To go; to make off, to depart: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt (see quot'n at mooch, n., 2); 1925, Leverage, 'To weaken; to give in; to curry favour'—but in this nuance it was already s.

crawler. A convict that, with the collusion of a working-gang overseer, escapes and, after a brief interval, allows himself to be recaptured by that overseer, so that the latter may claim the reward; also, a convict that malingers: Australian convicts': ca. 1810–50 and ca. 1820–60, respectively: both in The Adventures of Ralph Rashleigh: 1825–44, edited by Lord Birkenhead in 1929. Ex 'crawl like some loathsome insect or, esp., reptile': the very word reptile = crawler, something that glides or slithers along on its belly instead of holding itself upright like a man.—2. A legless beggar: American: C. 20: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1928, Jim Tully, Circus Parade, 'Legless men called crawlers, who travelled with their bodies strapped to small wheeled platforms. They propelled themselves with stirrups held in each hand'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; et al.

crawlers. A dark or solitary cell: Australian convicts': ca. 1830–1910. E.g., in E. W. Hornung, The Rogue's March, 1896 (p. 233). Ex the vermin crawling there.

crazy alley. 'The number of men . . . taken straight from the "hole" to "crazy alley", the place where lunatic prisoners were kept, was beyond all computation,' James Spenser, The Five Mutineers, 1935: convicts' (esp. at San Quentin): since ca. 1920. Also in, e.g., Kernôt, 1929–31.

crazy as a bed bug: low s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

cream fancy. A handkerchief with a pattern on the cream ground: 1839, W. A. Miles (see billy); 1839, Brandon (c. f. Billy); 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds; by 1870, no longer c.

crease, v. To strike; to stun; to kill: 1934, David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live, 'One of you has got to crease a watchman—just a tap to make him dumb for half an hour'; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'If he hit him too hard, he'd probably crease him . . . He'd get topped for that'; by 1938 (James Curtis, They Drive by Night), police and low. s. Perhaps ex (big-game) hunting j. crease, to shoot in the upper part of the neck, so as to stun (an animal).

credie (pron. credly). A bank's Credit Manager: commercial underworld: since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. Ex 'credit'.

creds, 'credentials': rather is it commercial s. than commercial c. Maurer, 1941.

creed. 'A written authorization to solicit funds or advertising copy for an organization,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928: commercial underworld: since ca. 1910. Not intentionally blasphemous: prob. suggested by 'letter of credit' and/or 'accredited agent'.

creek, 'a swim, a bath' (Leverage, 1925), may orig. have been tramps' c. I.e., a bath, a swim, in a creek, 'rivulet'.

creeme, 'to slip or slide anything into another's Hand' (B.E.), is not c. but Northern dial.

creep, n. A brothel (or similar) thief that crawls quietly along the floor to examine the clothes of that 'sucker' who is in bed with a woman—a woman that is, obviously, the thief's confederate: 1894 (see creep joint); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage, 'A sneak thief'; 1928, Chicago May, where it is applied to the woman; slightly ob.—2. A worthless person: 1935, Hargan; extant. Short for creeper, perhaps sense 1 but prob. sense 4.—3. See creep, at the, 2, and creep, do a.

creep, v. To crawl in the specific sense implied in the noun, sense 1: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage, 'To sneak; as a thief in a store or a bank'; also British, as in Mark Benney, Low Company, 1936; extant.—2. To escape: British (esp. London): since ca. 1925. James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936. Partly ex 'creep away' and partly ex sense 1.

creep, at the. Engaged in picking a woman's skirt pocket while she is walking: 1931, Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Book (the definition is suspected of being too narrow); Black, 1943, 'Creep, at the: engaged in petty thieving'.—2. 'To steal from a house while the tenants are in is to be "at the creep"', David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937: 1933, Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 'Creep (the): Stealing by stealth such as creeping into temporarily unattended shops and warehouses and stealing the till, or other property. A thief so engaged would be described as "at the creep"': 1943, Black (see sense 1); extant.

creep, do a. To be 'at the creep' (see preceding, sense 2): 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; extant.

creep, work the. See work . . .

creep(-)game, the. The criminal activity defined at creep, n., 1: May Churchill Sharpe, in her autobiography, Chicago May—Her Story, 1929, implies that the term was already current in 1894; June 20, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse, 'Behind the Green Lights'; extant. Cf. creeping and creeping law.

creep-joint. A private apartment, or an apartment house (or even a brothel), where the woman has a male accomplice that, while the victim is in bed with her, steals money, watch, etc., from the 'sucker': C. 20. In, e.g., May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story, 1928, and in Flynn's, June 27, 1931, C. W. Willemse, 'Behind the Green Lights'—in ref. to 'Chicago May' herself; 1931, Godfrey Irwin. See creep, n., 1, and cf. creep-game.—2. 'A gambling house that moves to a different apartment each night,' Burke, 1930: racketeers': 1931, John Wilstach; April 16, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; 1933, James Spenser, Limey; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1935, Geo. Ingram, Stir Train; May 2, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; 1938, Castle; extant.

creeper. 'One who curries favour by hypocrisy and tale-bearing': convicts': 1889, B & L; by 1900, low s.; by 1920, gen. s. He creeps about.—2. A cat: tramps': Sept. 1911, The Nineteenth Century and After, David MacRitchie, 'The Speech of the Roads'; extant.—3. A girl: U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Girl'; ob.—4. The male accomplice in the creep game: U.S.A.: 1928, Chicago May; May 31, 1930, Flynn's; June 20, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse; extant.—5. A synonym of creep-joint, 2: 1933, Ersine; extant.—6. Hence, a 'thief who steals garments,' Rose, 1934: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. Cf. creep, v., 1; but prob. imm. ex creeper, 4.—7. A prostitute that robs her customers: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. Cf. sense 4.

creeper joint. A tea pad 'where semi-conscious smokers are robbed,' Meyer Berger in The New Yorker, March 12, 1938: 'drug addicts': since ca. 1930. See creeper, 3, and joint, n. creepers. Feet: not c., but low s. (B & L, 1889).—2. 'Soft shoes worn by burglars, sneak-thieves and prison guards', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Irwin; extant. Cf. sneaks for the semantic notion.

creeping. 'In . . . creeping, I mean where men and women do rob together' (with esp. reference to prostitution): 1592, Robert Greene, A Disputation, Betweene a Hee Conny-catcher, and a Shee Conny-catcher; app. † by 1650. Cf. creeping law.—2. The vbl n. variant of creep-game, q.v.: U.S.A.: 1928, Chicago May.

creeping law. 'The creeping Law of petty thieves, that rob about the Suburbs,' R. Greene, A Disputation, 1592; app. † by 1650. That sort of crime in which the criminals creep about; see law (modern lay).

creeping to the Cross, n. and ppl adj. 'Starting to reform,' Kernôt, 1929–31; extant. Cf. mission stiff. Such blasphemy is rare in c.; perhaps influenced by s. creeping Jesus, 'a too humble, nauseatingly goody-goody person'.

Créole; hence créolo. A white-slavers' term, used orig. and mostly in the Argentine and hardly before the C. 20. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, 'The Créolo is the Argentine Caftane'—pimp. 'The French of the Centre gave him this name . . . He is also called Canfinflero—a man who exploits one woman only, as the Créolo does. One is quite enough for him: he is averse to undue labour. In slang, Canfinflero becomes Cafishio. "Le compadre" is another term for him.' Ex the Sp. Creolo, 'a Creole'—or ex Creolo + Fr. créole.

crew; in C. 16–17, occ. crue. In Robert Greene's day and indeed until ca. 1850, crew was used much as 'mob (or push or gang) of criminals' is now employed: when employed by the underworld in this specific sense, it verged on c., even though this is a natural offshoot from the S.E. group of senses, 'lot, set, gang, mob, herd' (O.E.D.). Robert Greene, The Thirde Conny-catching, 1592, 'A crew of these wicked companions' and 'Oft this crew of mates met together, and said there was no hope of nipping the boung'; B.E., 1698, having given several S.E. senses, concludes, 'Also an ill Knot or Gang, as a Crew of Rogues'; A New Canting Dict., 1725, 'In a Canting Sense, Crew signifies a Knot or Gang; as, A Crew of Rogues'; Grose, like B.E., refers to the collective underworld as 'the Canting Crew'. Etymologically parallel to S.E. accrue: ex L. creocere, to increase.

crib, n. Belly: 1641, R. Brome, A Jovial Crew, 'Here's Pannum and Lap, and good Poplars of Yarrum, | To fill up the Crib, and to comfort the Quarron'—in which passage The O.E.D. suggests that the sense may be 'supply of provisions', which, however, is nearer to Brome's use of cribbing, cited below; † by 1790.—2. A house; 1809, John Mackcoull, Abuses of Justice; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A house, sometimes applied to shops' (see, e.g., thimble crib); 1821, D. Haggart, 'A mean house'; 1829, Sessions Papers; 1930, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1839, Brandon; 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. trans.), ch. V; 1846, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), March 28; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850, low s. in Britain; in U.S.A., however, it has remained c., although now it is ob.—very ob. Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926, but in ref. to ca. 1907, reports an old beggar as saying, 'I'll make the cribs myself. I'm dynamite with them old brums in the cribs,' where the sense of crib is 'brothel'; F. H. Sidney, 'Hobo Cant'—in Dialect Notes, 1919—defines it as a dive.—3. Hence, 'crib implies a single place, as a tap-room, a drinking-booth, coffee-shop, &c.,' Jon Bee, 1823; 1825, C. E. Westmacott, The English Spy; 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London (of a shop); 1848, Sinks of London, 'A mean looking room'; 1859, H; by 1860, low s. in England; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (U.S.A.); 1933, Ersine, 'A one-room brothel'; slightly ob. in U.S.A.—4. Hence, a low public-house: 1828, Geo. Smeeton, Doings in London; 1843, W. T. Moncrieff, The Scamps of London; in U.S.A. by 1845 (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); 1859, H; by 1860 or 1865, low s. in England; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps; by 1920 ob. and by 1948 virtually † in U.S.A.—5. A building to be burgled: 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; by 1845, current in U.S.A. (Judson, The Mysteries of New York); 1863 (see good crib); 1903, G. R. Sims, Living London, III; by 1910, ob. Ex sense 2.—6. The sense, 'a job, a situation', was never c.; and that of 'lodgings, apartments' (H, 2nd ed., 1860) was prob. always low s.—except perhaps in U.S.A. (a harlot's room: Godfrey Irwin, 1931).—7. A gambling-den: U.S.A.: 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Irwin; since ca. 1920, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946). Ex sense 3, 4.—8. A hang-out: U.S.A., mostly tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; † by 1945.—9. 'A fraud; a cheat; a swindle,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant.—10. A safe: U.S.A.: 1927, Kane, 'Crack a crib—to blast a safe'; 1929, Givens; 1931, Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict, 'Boxes, cans, cribs, or petes . . . safes'; 1934, Rose; Aug. 10, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; 1938, Castle; extant.—11. A thieves' meeting-place: 1935, The Garda Review; extant.—12. (Prob. ex sense 2.) A brothel: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942.

crib, v. 'To withhold, keep back, pinch, or thief a part out of money given to lay out for necessities': 1748, Dyche; 1785, Grose, 'To purloin, or appropriate to one's own use, part of any thing intrusted to one's care'. But the term seems to have > s. by ca. 1770. Prob. ex the S.E. sense, 'to shut up, to confine'.

crib, crack a. See crack a crib.

crib, square. See square crib.

crib-cracker. A burglar: 1883, G. R. Sims, How the Poor Live, 'His talents as a "cribcracker"', and his adventures as a pickpocket'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1920 at the latest. Ex crack a crib; cf. :—

crib-cracking. Burglary: 1852, Punch; 1879, Thor Fredur, Sketches from Shady Places; 1891, F & H; 1899, Clarence Rook, The Hooligan Nights; ob. by 1915; † by 1930. Ex crack a crib.

crib lay. An 'expedition for the purpose of stealing out of houses,' The Ladies' Repository, 1848; † by 1937 (Irwin). See crib, n., 2, and lay, n., 2.

cribber. 'A house thief; a burglar,' Leverage, 1925; ob. Ex crib, n., 2.—2. A safe-blower: 1925, Leverage; 1938, Castle, 'A "cribber" is a safe cracker'; extant. Ex crib, n., 10.

cribbing. Provisions; food: 1631, R. Brome,

A Joviall Crew, 'For all this bene Cribbing and Peck let us then, | Bowse a health to the Gentry Cofe of the Ken'; app. † by 1790. Cf crib, n., 1.

cribman. A thief specializing in bank safes: Pacific Coast: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; extant. Cf cribber, 2.

cribo, v. 'To play false to one's pals,' Leverage, 1925; ob. Perhaps ex 'cheating at cribbage'; obviously, however, there is a connexion with crib, v.

cricket-bird, v. 'To serve as a look-out,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Leverage also cites cricket, 'a lookout', and 'to be, to serve as a look-out', which lie on the borderline between c. and s. crimepies. See klein crimepies.

crimp, n., 'a runner for sailors' boarding-house', is low s., not c. Brown, 1931. As a swindler, it is Australian low s. of C. 20: Baker, 1942.

crimp, v. To charge (a prisoner) with a breach of the rules: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant.

crimp, play; crimp it. To play booty: ca. 1690–1830. Not classified by B.E., nor by A New Canting Dict., nor by Grose, as c., it yet may, orig., have been gamesters' c. Perhaps ex S.E. crimp, to curl or to compress.

crimp sham governor, i.e., a sham or bogus governor of crimps, this governor being the head of a gang of crimps: 1781, Geo. Parker, A View of Society. The term is, I think, s.—not c.; † by 1860.

crimps. Rheumatism: tramps': C. 20: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, if not much sooner, low s. 'Not improbably since many of those afflicted with this trouble are more or less deformed or "crimped"' (Irwin). The word is a 'thinning' of cramps. For the semantics, cf. the English s. (and dialect) screws.

crimpy. (Of weather that is very) cold: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Irwin; by 1940, low s. I.e., 'crampy' weather; cf. crimps, q.v.

crimson Rambler. A bed bug: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ironical ex the well-known, hardy climbing rose.

crimum, 'a sheep', is tinkers' s. (Shelta): 1889, B & L.

crin-cum or crincum, 'to draw back from a job' (Leverage, 1925): perhaps c.; prob. low s.

cringle, n. and v. An informer, a 'squealer'; to inform to the police, to 'squeal': 1925, Leverage (n. and v.); extant. Ex S.E. cringe.

crinkums, syphilis, is not, as several lexicographers classify it, c.: but it was prob. very low s. B.E., 1698, has it.

crip, 'a cripple', is hardly c. in its own right, but the phrase phoney crip, 'a fake (a pretended) cripple', is undoubtedly c., and it appears in Leon Livingston's Madame Delcassee of the Hoboes, 1918; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1929–31, Kernôt, of a thief forced, through injury, to retire, and, under the guise of beggar, acting as go-between for crooks; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

crip(-)faker. A 'phoney crip' as at crip, q.v.: tramps' and beggars': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

cripple, n. Sixpence; properly a coin of that value: 1785, Grose, 'That piece being commonly much bent and distorted'; app. current since ca. 1770 and not yet quite obsolete. Grose does not classify the term as c., so perhaps it was only s.; but George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 1789, in the glossary has, 'Sixpence. A bender, crook, or cripple,' so prob. it was c. until (say) 1800; note, however, that as late as 1926—

Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows—it still existed in the language of beggars. Ex the fact that it so easily becomes bent and battered: cf. bender.—2. 'The advance man or gay-cat for a yegg mob,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant. Prob. because he often pretends to be a cripple.

cripple, v. 'To play gay-cat for yeggs,' Leverage, 1925—in reference to its imm. origin, the n., sense 2; extant.

crippled. 'When we found the cut shillings he said, "Yes, they are crippled"; that means that they had been tendered and returned' (i.e., refused, rejected), Sessions Papers, Nov. 1862 (p. 681): counterfeiters': mid-C. 19–20; ob. Cf. cripple, n., 1.

crippled under the hat, 'insane; half-crazy; very eccentric', may orig. have been c., but it certainly was not c. for long. Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899, 'The Tramps' Jargon'.

crippy. A paralytic beggar: mostly beggars': C. 20. In, e.g., Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941. Ex cripple or crippled: cf. crip.

croacus. An occ. variant of crocus, 2. (Stiff, 1931.)

croak, n. 'A last dying speech': not c. but London street-vendors' s.—2. A killing, a murder: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the v., sense 3.

croak, v. To die: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Jon Bee; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); by 1864, low s.—witness, H, 3rd ed.—in England; 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne; 1897, Popular Science Monthly, April (U.S.A.); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1910, low s. in U.S.A. also. Ex the croaking noise sometimes made by a dying person.—2. Hence, v.t., to hang: 1823, Egan's Grose, 'A flash term among keepers of prisons'; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest (U.S.A.; article, 'Do you Speak "Yegg" ?'); extant.—3. (Of a person) to kill (someone): mostly U.S.A.: 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1859, Matsell, 'To murder'; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L; 1897, Popular Science Monthly, April (U.S.A.); 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps; 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1912, D. Lowrie, My Life in Prison; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, who spell it croke; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1918, Arthur Stringer; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; by 1928, it was also circus s.—witness The White Tops, article entitled 'Circus Glossary. Lot Lingo', July–Aug. 1928; by 1930, gen. low s. in U.S.A.—4. Hence (of a thing, an act) to kill (a person): 1884, J. Greenwood, The Little Ragamuffins, "Jiggered if I don't think that crack on the head croaked him"; extant.—5. 'To inform on; to squeal on,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: 1919 (see croak, v., 1); ob.

croak sheet. A life insurance policy used as a credential: commercial underworld: since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. See croak, v., 1.

croaker or croker. 'Croaker, c. a Groat or Fourpence,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (croker); 1785, Grose (croker); 1809, Geo. Andrewes; † by 1889 (B & L).—2. (croaker only.)

A beggar: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; low s. by 1889 (B & L); † by 1900. Ex the sad tales he tells in a croaking voice.—3. (Both forms.) A physician; esp. a prison doctor: 1859, H; 1879, A Ticket-of-leave Man, Convict Life, 'I have scores of men . . . who used to chuckle to their pals over their success in hoodwinking the "croker"'; 1880, An Ex-Convict, Our Convict System; 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1893, Confessions of a Convict (U.S.A.), ed. by Julian Hawthorne; 1897, (April) Popular Science Monthly (U.S.A.); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1912, D. Lowrie, My Life in Prison (San Quentin, U.S.A.); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (croker); Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures; Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1925, Leverage; 1927, Kane; 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; 1928, Jim Tully, Jarnegan; 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest; June 7, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict; and hundreds of times since—more often in U.S.A. than in Britain. Cf. the croakus variant of crocus.—4. A newspaper: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1900. Its use in C. 20 Australia is s.—Baker, 1942. Cf. sense 2.—5. 'A corpse, or a dying person beyond hope': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1870, low s. Ex croaky voice.—6. Hence, (a case of) death: 1898, James McGovan, Brought to Bay, "Ah, Peep!" he faintly whispered, "I'm afraid it's a croaker with me. I'm goin' to die, after all"; ob.—7. A murderer: mostly U.S.A. and rare before C. 20; after 1930, low s. It occurs in, e.g., The White Tops, 'Circus Glossary', July–Aug. 1928. Ex croak, v., 3.

croaker joint. A physician's office; esp. a prison doctor's office: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. See croaker, 3.

croaker's chovey. A pharmaceutical chemist's shop: 1859, H. But this is an error (founded on a mishearing?) for crocus chovey.

croaker's line, the. The queue of men seeking medical treatment in a prison: convicts': since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Flynn's, April 1, 1933, Convict 12627. See croaker, 3.

croaking. A murder: 1903, Josiah Flynt, The Rise of Ruderrick Clowd, "What did you get sent up for?"—"They called it a croaking, but they never proved it."; by 1930, low s. Ex croak, v., 3.

croaksman. One who will murder; a 'killer': 1848, 'The Flash Language' in The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). Cf. croak, v., 3.

croakus. See crocus.

crock, n. A safe: 1925, Leverage; extant. Depreciative.—2. Jewellery: 1925, Leverage; extant. Perhaps rhyming on rock.—3. An opium-pipe, or its bowl: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. Ex crocks, 'furniture'.

crock, v. To give information: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, Moreby Acklom, 'Ditched through a pal crocking to a snitch' (Acklom does not define the term, which, to me, is suspect); prob. a misapprehension of croak, v., 5.—2. To blow a safe: 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. ex the n., as is:—3. To steal (esp. jewellery): 1925, Leverage; extant.

crocker. A safe blower: 1925, Leverage; ob. Prob. a pun on cracker, 4; but cf. crock, v., 2.—

2. A jewellery-thief: 1925, Leverage; extant. Perhaps a back-formation ex:—

crockery. Jewellery: 1925, Leverage; by 1938 (James Spenser, Crime against Society, 'That crockery on her chest . . .'), also English; extant. Cf. croak, n., 2.

crockery-bude. A jeweller's shop: 1925, Leverage; extant. See the elements.

crockery(-)moll. 'A woman who wears much jewelry,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See crockery.

crocus. 'Crocus, or crocus metallorum, a nickname for the surgeons of the army and navy': 1785, Grose. This specific sense appears to have > † by 1830. But crocus, as applied to any doctor, was prob. common in C. 19; e.g., Matsell, 1859, records its use in America—and spells it crokus, and in 1899 Josiah Flynt records it as American tramps' c. Perhaps a pun on croak (kill) us, croakus being a variant form; certainly ex croak—cf. croaker, 3.—2. Hence, a quack doctor; a seller of quack medicines: 1781, implied in crocussing rig; 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxix, 'Crocus—an itinerant quack doctor'; by 1850, it was also showmen's and itinerant vendors' s. (witness Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, 1851, at I, 217); 1859, H., 'Crokus, or Croakus, a quack or travelling doctor'; in 1864, it was still classified as c.—witness H., 3rd ed. (crocus and croakus); but by 1890, it could, I think, no longer have been c., despite Ware's classification in 1909. In U.S.A., it occurs as late as 1940: P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914; F. H. Sidney, 'Hobo Cant' in Dialect Notes, 1919; 1931, Stiff, 'Croaker or croacus'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (crocus); 1934, M. H. Wesen.

crocus chovey. A pharmaceutical chemist's shop: 1791, B. M. Carew (quoted by E.D.D.); 1859, H., who in this ed. spells it croakers c. but in the next ed. (1860) changes it to crocus c.; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. See crocus and chovey.—2. Hence, a doctor's consulting-room; a surgery: mid-C. 19–20; ob. H., 1860.

crocus metallorum. See crocus.

crocus pitcher. A street vendor of medicines: since ca. 1870: c. and low street s.: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; extant. Cf. crocus, 3.

crocussing, n. or adj. See:—

crocussing rig, the. This activity 'is performed by men and women, who travel as Doctors or Doctoresses', who, having insinuated themselves into the good graces of a wealthy patient, prescribe a regimen and a medicine, and extract two or three guineas, 'for which the greatest value left is the bottle, which is worth a penny; for the medicine itself, is merely chalk and vinegar': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; † by 1891 (F & H). Cf. crocus.

croft, n., 'Any strong, intoxicating liquor.—A whiskey or gin bottle,'; and v., 'To drink intoxicants'; and the derivative crofter, 'a heavy drinker'—all recorded by Leverage, 1925: not c., but low s.

croke. See croak, v.

croker. See croaker, 1 and 3.

crokus. See crocus.

crone, 'a clown', is not c. but circus s. (B & L, 1889.)

crunk, adj. (Of goods that have been) stolen, or obtained fraudulently: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Ex Australian s. crunk, 'ill, unfit; inferior, worthless'—itself ex Ger. kranke, 'ill, weak'.

crony. 'In a Canting Sense, Two or Three Rogues, who agree to beg or rob in Partnership, call one another Crony; as, Such a one is my Crony; as much as to say, He and I go Snacks', A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'A confederate in a robbery'; by 1830, no longer c. Ex University s. for 'a chum' (O.E.D.).

crook, n. (Usually pl.) A finger: 1789, Geo. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Fingers. Crooks'; app. † by 1890. Perhaps because one can crook it.—2. A sixpence: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter (see quot'n at cripple, n., 1); 1796, Grose; July 1805, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey (p. 450), 'She then asked me if I had seen any of her crooks, meaning sixpences; shillings she called shans'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III; † by 1891 (F & H). For semantics, cf. bender and cripple; also the s. crookback.—3. (Police-Sergeant N. log.) 'He said, "You will find no crook here"—crook means stolen goods—I found twenty-one pawn-tickets, including one for the wedding-ring,' Sessions Papers, March 8, 1890; ob. Perhaps ex crook, 'a criminal'.

crook, v. To steal: since ca. 1910. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Ex get on the crook: see crook, on the.

crook, adj. Stolen; wanted by the police; illicit: May 23, 1900, Sessions Papers, (concerning a stolen clock) 'I bought it from you b——straight; I did not know it was crook'; June 30, 1903, Sessions; 1931, Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Book, 'It's crook—dangerous or bad'; slightly ob. Ex sense 3 of the n.

crook, go off the. To become 'straight' or 'square' or honest: 1898, A. Griffiths, Mysteries of Police and Crime, ii, 180, 'Burglars often go "off the crook" and turn to honest ways of life, backed by the capital they have acquired'; ob. Cf. shake the cross, q.v. at cross . . .

crook, on the. Dishonest(ly): 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct., 'A toy and tackle, which he had bought on the crook'; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1896, A. Morrison, 'Probably she had boys of her own on the crook' (living by thievery and swindling); 1923, Sidney Felstead, The Underworld of London; 1926, N. Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1934, James Spenser, Limey Breaks In; extant. Crook or crooked is the opposite of straight; cf. cross, on the.

crook, put on the. "Putting on the crook" is performed by throwing the left arm round the neck of some unsuspecting person, bringing the left knee into the small of his back, and then pulling back his head by the hair with the hand that is free. While this treatment is in progress by one from behind, others work in front and rifle the victim's pockets. If held too long in this position, death ensues': 1875, Arthur Griffiths, Memorials of Millbank; slightly ob.

crook, tip (one) the cracksman's. See cracksman's crook . . .

crooked, adj. 'A term used among dog-stealers . . . to denote anything stolen': 1864, H., 3rd ed.; 1889, B & L, 'Crooked (thieves), stolen'; 1891, J. Maitland (U.S.A.); 1903, Clapin (U.S.A.); extant.—2. Illicit; connected with crime: 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life, 'One scamp . . . requested me to carry a "crooked message" to this brother'; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; only possibly c.; certainly, by 1900, it was no longer c. For semantics, cf. cross, adj., and see crook, on the.

crooked drag. See drag, crooked.

crooked man. A thief: tramps': 1899, J. Flint, Tramping, p. 270; ob.—and never very usual.

crooked work. Thieving: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); ob. See crooked, 1 and 2.

crookology. 'Convict lore,' Confessions of a Convict (glossary), ed. by Julian Hawthorne; by 1900, s.—but prob. it never was c. Ex crook, a criminal.

crooks. See crook, n., 1.

crop, n. Booty: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'There is not a more honest and better File, alias Pick-Pocket ever went abroad, than he was . . . : Poor Harry, I shall greatly miss him, for he was a good Customer to me, by spending much of his Crop at my Case'; † by 1800. (In smugglers' s. of C. 18-19, crop was the contraband cargo.)—2. 'A common Canting Word for Money': 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. Lit., that which is harvested: cf. crap, n., 1.—3. A hanging: see knock down for a crop.

crop, v. To hang (a person): 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III; 1859, H; by 1890, ob.; by 1920, †. Ex the S.E. sense, to cut off as in harvesting a cereal crop or a crop of hay.

crop, knock down for a. See knock down . . .

cropping-ken; croppen ken. See crapping-casa.

croppen; occ., croppin(g). Tail: 1698, B.E. (at flogging) has: 'The Prancer drew the Queer-Cove, at the cropping of the Rotan, [through] the Rum Pads of the Rum vile, and was Flogg'd by the Rum Cove, c. the Rogue was dragg'd at the Cart's tail through the chief Streets of London, and was soundly whipt by the Hangman'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (croppin); 1785, Grose, 'The croppen of the rotan; the tail of the cart'; 1809, Andrewes (cropping); 1848, Sinks of London (id.); † by 1870. Perhaps ex crap, to defecate.

croppie or croppy. 'Croppie. One who has had his hair cropped in prison': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H; 1863, Charles A. Gibson, Life among Convicts; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; ob.

croppin. See croppen. (A Canting Dict., 1725.)

cropping. See croppen. (B.E., 1698.)

croppin(g)-ken. See crapping-casa. (Coles, 1676; B.E., 1698; A New Canting Dict., 1725; etc., etc.)

croppy. See croppie.

cross-biter; cross-biting. See cross-biter; -biting.

crossbite. See cross-bite, v.

cross, n. 'Illegal or dishonest practices in general are called the cross, in opposition to the square': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, 'Any collusion or unfair dealing between several parties'; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1843, W. T. Moncrieff, The Scamps of London ('a cross': a dishonest deal); 1859, H; 1891, F & H, 'A pre-arranged swindle'; 1895, A. Griffiths; extant. I.e., something not straight; imm. ex the adj.—2. A match lost deliberately, esp. in the boxing ring: not c., but pugilistic s. deriving naturally ex sense 1. (P. Egan, Boxiana, in all 4 vols., 1818-24.) Often written XX or X. In U.S.A., often applied to horseracing: but as turf s.—3. A thief: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; by 1930, †. Ex sense 1.—4. A sixpence: tramps': 1872, Hamilton Aidé, Morals and Mysteries; † by 1910. From X; the tramps' sign that a house is 'good for' sixpence.—5. A betrayal: 1894, A. Griffiths, Secrets of the Prison House, 'He at once suspected a "cross"'; that is, to use his own language, he had been put away, betrayed, sold either by the "blokes" or his "pals"'; extant.

cross, v. To inform to the police, to 'squeal'; to betray: 1925, Leverage; extant, though slightly ob. To double-cross someone in respect of the police.—2. 'To deceive; to cheat one's pals,' Leverage, 1925; 1927, Kane; extant. Short for double-cross, v.

cross, adj. Dishonest; living as a member of the underworld, or at any rate illicitly: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux (see next entry); Aug. 1835, Sessions, 'a cross-price'; by the 1840's, current in U.S.A.—witness Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859, and The Ladies' Repository, 1848; by 1840, at latest, current in Australia (Alex. Harris, The Emigrant Family, 1849; Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms, 1881, "What's the use of all this cross work?" I said to father; "we're bound to be caught some day if we keep on at it"); since ca. 1910, slightly ob. in England, and † by 1937 in U.S.A. (Irwin).—2. Hence (of money), counterfeit: 1889, Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); extant.

cross, double. See double cross.

cross, give the. See give the cross.

cross, of the. 'Of the thievish profession': 1846, The National Police Gazette, April 18; ob. by 1910; virtually † by 1946. See cross, n., 1, and cf. the next entry.

cross, on (or upon) the. 'Any article which has been irregularly obtained, is said to have been got upon the cross, and is emphatically termed a cross article,' J. H. Vaux, 1812, but occurring as early as 1802 in Sessions Papers, June (p. 334), 'I got it on . . . the cross'; 1818, Sessions; 1823, Bee, 'To "live upon the cross" is to exist by dishonest means'; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'Those whose cupidity prevailed upon him, so to act upon the X'; 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, IV, 'He thought I bought things on the cross'; 1939, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime, 'He has been . . . eight months "on the cross", that is, thieving'; 1847, A. Harris, Settlers and Convicts (Australia); 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, 'On the cross, out thieving'; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850, current in U.S.A.—witness E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851; 1856, G. L. Chester-ton; 1857, Snowden; 1857, Augustus Mayhew; 1859, H; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms (Australia); 1884, A. Griffiths, Chronicles of Newgate; 1886, W. Newton; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1895, Caminada, 'Persons "on the cross"'; 1903, G. R. Sims, Living London, III; 1912, T. Holmes, London's Underworld; 1923, Sidney Felstead, The Underworld of London; 1925, J. C. Goodwin, Queer Fish; 1942, Baker; extant.

cross, shake the. To give up 'the cross' (see cross, n., 1): 1877, Mark Twain, Life on the Mississippi, 'If I would shake the cross and live on the square for three months . . .'; 1891, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; by 1920, ob.; by 1940, †. Here, shake = shake off, abandon; see cross, n., 1.

Cross, the. The immediate neighbourhood of Villiers Street, Charing Cross: London: C. 20. Arthur R. L. Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932. Short for Charing Cross.

cross, the. 'Mark of impending death,' Kernôt, 1929-31: gangsters': since ca. 1924. Perhaps in ref. to The Cross of the Crucifixion.

cross beasts. Stolen cattle or horses: Australian cattle and horse sufferers': since ca. 1850. In, e.g., Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms (in The Sydney Mail), 1881. See cross, adj.

cross-bite, n. As a swindle, a deception, it occurs in Greene in 1591, was slang by ca. 1620, S.E. by ca. 1720, † by ca. 1800.—2. As a rare variant of cross-biter, it appears in R. Greene, A Disputation, 1592 (see the third quot'n in the following entry), prob. remained c., and perhaps was † by 1700.—3. 'One who combines with a sharper to draw in a friend': 1785, Grose; app. current ca. 1700-1830. Prob. ex cross-bite, v., 2.

cross-bite, v. To defraud: 1552, Gilbert Walker, 'If ye lack contraries'—a kind of false dice—'to crosbite him withall, I shall lend you a pair of the same size that his cheats be': 1591, R. Greene, 'Nor when the Foyst . . . is cros-bitten by the Snap,'—which helps to show that from ca. 1580, the term was applied esp. to one criminal being swindled by another, though the gen. sense remained, as, e.g., in Greene's A Disputation, 1592, 'You know Laurence that though you can foyst, nyp, prig, lift, courbe, and use the blacke Art, yet you cannot crosbite without the helpe of a woman, which crosbiting now adaies is growne to a marvellous profitable exercise, for some cowardly knaves that for feare of the gallows, leave nipping and foysting, become Crosbites, knowing there is no danger therein but a little punishment, at the most the Pillorie,' a passage relevant to 'cross-biting law', q.v. By 1650, at the latest (and prob. by 1620), despite B.E.'s classification as c., the term had > slang; by 1720, S.E.; by 1850, †.—2. But B.E.'s sense, 'to draw in a friend, yet snack with the Sharper', may well have been c. of ca. 1690-1830.

cross-biter. In 'the cross-biting law' (q.v.), the cross-biter is the harlot's bully—the bully being also a thief and a clever, shameless blackmailer: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage; 1592, Greene, A Disputation (see the third quot'n at cross-bite, v.); 1608, Dekker; app. † by 1690. Ex cross-bite, v.—2. Hence, a swindler (?): 1666, Anon., Leathermore's Advice (or The Nicker Nicked)—see the quot'n at foiler; app. † by 1790.

cross-biting as a synonym of cross-biting law appears first (?) in Greene's A Disputation, 1592; by 1630 at the latest, it was slang.

cross-biting, adj. Mostly in the next two entries.

cross-biting cully. A sharpening dicer: 1700, T. Brown, Amusements Serious and Comical, 'The old trade of Cross-biting Cullies, assisting the Frail square Dye with high and low Fullums, and other Napping Tricks'; app. † by 1820. Ex cross-bite, v., and cully.

cross-biting law. 'Cosenage by whores', working in conjunction with their blackmailing and thievish bullies: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, defines the 'racket' as at the beginning of this entry and sets the stage thus:—'The whore, the Traffique. The man that is brought in, the Simpler. The villaines that take them, the Cros-biters'; in his long description of 'the art of Cros- biting', Greene shows that the gang or the criminal couple rely far more on blackmail than on theft, but that theft plays a part; see too the third quot'n at cross-bite, v. The 'cross-biter' pretends to be the outraged husband of a whore, who 'picks up' a simpleton or a too amorous fellow: moneys or bonds pass: see, e.g., Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608; app. † by 1690.

cross(-)boy. A crook: Australian: mid-C. 19-20; ob. Rolf Boldrewood, The Miner's Right, 1890 (cited by The O.E.D.). A variation of cross chap—or of cross cove.

cross-byte, -byter, -byting. See cross-bite, etc.

cross(-)chap. A thief: 1851, H. Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; by 1920, †. A variant of cross cove.

cross-country, do a. See do . . . But also cross-country is a v., 'to run away from police' (Kernôt, 1929-31).

cross cove. A youth, or a man, that lives by stealing or in any other dishonest manner: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A man . . . who lives upon the cross'; 1823, Jon Bee, 'A cross-cove' is applied to a swindler of every degree'; 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; by the 1840's, current in America (Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859, and The Ladies' Repository, 1848); 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1893, No. 747; by 1920, ob. in Britain, and by 1937, † in U.S.A. (Irwin). Lit., 'a dishonest fellow': see cross, adj.

cross crib. 'Cross-Crib, a house inhabited, or kept by family people. See Square Crib': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; Nov. 8, 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), as 'a thieves' den'; 1859, H, 'A house frequented by thieves'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H, 'A thieves' hotel'; by 1920, †. Opposed to square crib.

cross-dropping is a confidence trick that, both in the fact and in this name, existed before 1796 (witness the trial of Joseph Hodges and Richard Probin in that year: The Newgate Calendar). The trick is worked by two accomplices: one drops a packet, 'finds' it in the presence of the prospective dupe, consults the other as an ostensible stranger; the value of the contents—usually a piece of jewellery—is assessed at such and such a price; on a suitable pretext, the dupe deposits money and/or a watch as a security for his share; the dupe is left with the worthless article, and the accomplices decamp with the security. Not current later than C. 19.

cross drum. 'A drinking-place where thieves resort': 1859, George W. Matsell, Vocabulum—but prob. adopted from England; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; slightly ob.—2. Hence, 'a country tavern, upon the road': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1930, †.

cross-fam. See:—

cross-fan, v. 'Cross-Fam, to cross-fam a person, is to pick his pocket, by crossing your arms in a particular position': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H., loosely, thus: 'Cross-Fanning in a crowd', robbing persons of their scarf pins'; by the 1850's, used in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859); 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H (both forms); 1893, No. 747; extant. See fan, v.

cross(-)girl. A prostitute given to thieving or to assisting her bully to thieve: 1862, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV; by 1920, ob.; by 1945, †. See cross, adj.

cross house is a synonym of cross drum: e.g., in The National Police Gazette, 1845; app. † by 1900.

cross I win, pile you lose, 'heads I win, tails you lose', is not c., but s. > coll. > S.E.

cross jarvie (or jarvey or jarvy) is the driver of a cross-rattler: ca. 1810-1900: Bee, 1823; 1887, Baumann records the variant cross jarvis. See cross, adj.

cross-kid, v. 'A reeler (policeman) came to the cell and cross-kidded (questioned) me, but I was too wide for him': 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; by 1920, †.

cross-life man; gen. in pl. A thief; one who lives by felony: 1878, says Ware, who quotes a newspaper cutting of 1880 in ref. to the trial Bignell v. Horsley; app. † by 1920. Cf. cross man and see cross, adj. and n.

cross-lift. An ocean liner; a card-sharper operating on one: 1929-31, Kernôt (latter); 1934, Howard N. Rose (former); extant. The vessel lifts or transports the card-sharpers and other crooks across the Atlantic Ocean, the sharper lifts his fellow-passengers' money.

cross lots, cross-lots, crosslots, adj. and adv. In reference to evasion or flight: across-country; esp., away from the much- (or the more) travelled roads: yeggs': 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1930, no longer to be classified as c. Lit., across fields or farms. A special application of a U.S. coll. phrase current since before 1825 (D.A.E.).

cross man, cross-man, crossman. 'Cross-men—those who rob persons are so called': 1823, Bee; current in U.S.A. by 1845 (The National Police Gazette, Sept. 27, 1845); 1849, Alex. Harris, The Emigrant Family (Australia); 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I (crossman); 1860, C. Martel, The Detective's Note-book; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'Crossman, a thief, or one who lives by dishonest practice'; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1895, Caminada; by 1920, ob.; by 1946, virtually †. See cross, adj.

cross mollisher. 'A . . . woman who lives upon the cross, i.e., dishonestly': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1859, H (a female professional thief); 1889, B & L; † by 1920. See cross, adj., and mollisher.

cross on, put the. See put . . .

cross-play. See saddle.

cross(-)rattler. 'A hackney coach, the driver of which, under the appearance of taking up a fare, assists robbers in carrying off their stolen goods,' P. Egan, The Life of Samuel Denmore Hayward, 1822, but it occurs in Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, Oct. 1811 (p. 516), 'A cross rattler (a coach to take away stolen goods)'; 1823, Jon Bee, '“Cross-jarvy with a cross-rattler”—a co-thief driving his hackney-coach'; † by 1890. See cross, adj., and rattler.

cross stiff. A letter smuggled out of—less often, into—prison: since ca. 1860; ob. Partridge, 1937. See cross, adj., and stiff, n., 3; literally, 'illicit letter'.

cross the Alps. See Alps, the.

cross the herring pond at the King's expense. See herring pond, cross . . .

cross the mitt. In 'Pickpockets' (Flynn's, March 2, 1929), H. W. Corley explains that "Crossing the mitt" means operating with the hand farthest from the victim, the arms innocently folded to bring it into play'; 1929-31, Kernôt; extant. Orig. mitt was boxing s. for a glove, then for a hand.

cross-trade, the. Theft and/or swindling as a profession: 1827, P. Cunningham, Two Years in New South Wales; app. † by 1890. See cross, n., and adj.

crossleite is an error in Matsell for cross-bite, v.

crosslots. See cross lots.

crow, n. A man that attests the honour of those professional gamblers with whom he works in league, esp. to 'pluck a pigeon': gaming c. (and buckish s.) of ca. 1805-1840. John Joseph Stockwell, The Greeks, 1817 (see quot'n at workman); 1823, Bee. Suggested by S.E. rook, 'a sharper', possibly with an allusion to cro (or *cro*s), buckish s. ex Fr. escroc.—2. Hence (?), a thief's (or thieves') look-out man: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; 1862, Mayhew, London Labour, IV; 1863, The Cornhill Magazine; 1874, Marcus Clarke, For the Term of His Natural Life; 1886, A. Pinkerton (U.S.A.), Thirty Years a Detective; 1889 (see whisper, n.); 1891, F & H; 1893, No. 747; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1928, J. N. Ferrier, Crooks and Crime (gamblers' look-out man); Dec. 20, 1930, Flynn's; 1934, B. Leeson, Lost London; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; extant.—3. Hence, the watch kept by a 'crow': 1857, Snowden; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House, 'Telling me to "stand crow" in case someone saw us'; extant.—4. (Ex sense 2.) A counterfeit coiners' look-out man: 1862, Mayhew, London Labour, IV, 378; extant.

crow, v. i. To act as look-out man to a gang of thieves: since ca. 1840: 1889, B & L; 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747 (p. 416); 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1936, W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, where it = to keep watch for a gang of chanters (street singers) and warn off intruding chanters; extant. Ex. crow, n., 2.

crow, adj.; Crow McGee, adj. and n. Trivial, mean, poor, worthless: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (crow); 1938, Castle, 'Crow McGee—not real, no good, a double-crosser'; extant. A crow is poor eating: prob. it was, orig., a tramps' word.

crowded, be. To be in doubt: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, "Should an officer"—a policeman—"show unexpectedly up, he [the outside man of a burglary team] must stand him off at the muzzle of his gat, and if crowded shoot and shoot to kill"; extant. Crowded, one tends to feel bewildered, hence in doubt.

crowder, a fiddler—given by Poulter, 1753, as c.—is familiar S.E.; now ob. dial.—2. A string; not c., but tinkers' s. (Shelta krauder): 1889, B & L.

crown. 'Crown, verb (thieves).—To inspect a window with a view to operations': 1891, F & H; ob. The crowning touch—so far as the preliminaries are concerned.—2. To hang (a person): U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Cf. top, v.

crown sheet. Seat of a pair of trousers: since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933. Prob. sheet from glossiness; with crown, cf. cheeks, 'posteriors'.

crowner. A hangman: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Ex crown, v., 2.

crow's foot. 'The Government broad arrow', F & H, 1891; ob. Rough resemblance.

cruise. To beg (v.i.): 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; app. † by 1800. Prob. a back-formation ex cruiser.—2. To operate as a prostitute; variant cruise for trade: U.S.A.: C. 20. BVB, 1942.

cruiser; gen. pl. A beggar: 1698, B.E.; 1718, C. Hitching (cruser); 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Cruisers, Beggars of all Denominations: Also Highway Spies, who traverse'—i.e. travel—'the Road, to give Intelligence of a Booty, etc.'; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1800. He cruises about.—2. (Cf. sense 1.) 'Even the Bowery "cruisers" (street-walkers) carried them' (fine silk handkerchiefs), Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904: U.S.A. (esp. New York): 1910, H. Hapgood, Types from City Streets, where (p. 140) she appears as a prostitute-adventuress; ob. She cruises about. Hence:—3. 'A homosexual who looks for patrons,' BVB, 1942: U.S.A.: C. 20.

crue. See crew.

crum. (Also crumb.) A body louse: tramps': 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'If there is crumbs hoppin' around on me, I don't want to encourage 'em too much'; 1930, Lennox Kerr, Backdoor Guest; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (crum and crumb); 1933, Ersine (crumb); 1934, Rose (crumb); by 1937, low s. (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 18, 1937).—2. Hence, a dishonest act (a 'lousy trick'): 1925, Leverage; extant—though, since 1940, little used.—3. (Ex sense 1.) A filthy, esp. a lousy, person: 1934, Rose; Oct. 9, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, who uses it figuratively; extant.—4. 'Crumb—an inmate [of a prison] who does more than his share of the work in order to curry favour with the officials,' Hargan, 1935: convicts': since ca. 1920. Such a man is a louse: see sense 1 above.

crum boss. The man that makes fires in a bunk-house: mostly tramps': 1931, Stiff; 1931, Irwin, 'A bunk-house janitor'; extant. Cf. crum, 1 and 3.

Crum Hill. For the definition, see Crumb Hill: tramps': C. 20: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, s.

crum joint. A cheap and dirty hotel or boarding house: 1935, Hargan; 1936, Kenneth MacKenzie, Living Rough; by 1945, low s. See crum, 1.

crum roll. A bed-roll, a bundle of blankets: tramps': 1931, Irwin; extant. See crum, 1; cf. s. flea-pit, 'sleeping-bag'.

crum (or crumb) up. To 'boil up' (wash one's clothes): tramps': C. 20. 1931, Stiff; 1931, Irwin (like Stiff, he prefers crum); 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'Boiling Lousy Clothing . . . crumbing up'.

crumb. See crum.

Crumb Hill. 'A certain high spot of ground in the park'—Jefferson Park, Chicago—'is generally designated as "Crumb Hill" . . . The drunk and the drowsy seem inevitably to drift to this rise of ground,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923: mostly tramps': prob. since ca. 1910. The correct form is Crum Hill, q.v.

crumb joint. See crum joint.

crumbing up. See crum up.

crumbo. A bum: since ca. 1930. Damon

Runyon, Take It Easy, 1938. Elaboration of crum, 3.

crummy. See crummy, adj.

crummy, n. A railroad caboose: tramps': 1931, Stiff; 1931, Irwin; 1934, Convict; extant. I.e., verminous: these cabooses, esp. those which are chain-ganged, are, many of them, far from clean. (Irwin).—2. Hence (?), 'the jail in which he'—the criminal—is confined may be called a can, crummy, hoosegow, or jug, Convict, 1934; extant.

crummy, adj. As 'fat' or 'fleshy', it is s.—2. Lousy; filthy: not c. but low s.—3. Rich; with well-filled pockets: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † in U.S.A. by 1900, and in Britain by 1920. Perhaps crummy, 'having plenty of bread—hence, of food—hence, of goods'.—4. Undesirable; cheap; inferior: perhaps c. in U.S.A., at least ca. 1910–35, then low s.; 1931, Godfrey Irwin. Ex sense 2. crummy doss, 'a lousy or filthy bed' (H, 1859), may orig. have been c., but by 1864 (witness H, 3rd ed.), it was certainly low s. See doss, n.

crump. In 1698, B.E. defines it thus: 'One that helps Solicitors to Affidavit men, and Swearers, and Bail, who for a small Sum will be Bound or Swear for any Body; on that occasion, putting on good Cloaths to make a good appearance, that Bail may be accepted'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, but app. the term had > s. by 1750 or so. A perversion of crimp, as in play crimp, 'to employ illicit and/or cunning means to get money, win a game, a race, etc.'

crumpet, get a. (Of a man) to coit—in a particular instance. James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936. This phrase, like crumpet, 'female genitals', hence 'woman as sex', is low s., rather than c. For the semantics, cf. battered bun.

crumple, v. See crumpled.—2. To hang (a person): U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. To cause him to crumple up.

crumpled, be. To be detected; arrested: 1910, D. Crane, A Vicarious Vagabond, 'Burglary on a small scale . . . was not worth the candle. You were more likely to get "crumpled" (caught); while the loot . . . was more difficult to dispose of'; ob.

crumpler. A hangman: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex crumple, v., 2.

cruser. See cruiser.

crush, n. As 'a crowd', it is neither English nor (despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904) American c.—2. A policeman: Sessions Papers, June (Surrey cases), 1844; † by 1890. Short for crusher.—3. A forcible exit or entrance: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Nov. 8, 1924, Flynn's (an escape from prison); April 24, 1926, Flynn's (ditto); Feb. 10, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan (do); extant. Ex crush, v., 2.—4. A gang of criminals or of convicts: 1935, David Hume, Call In the Yard (criminals); 1943, Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House (convicts); extant. Ex Army s. for a unit, a battalion, a regiment, a troop, etc.

crush, v. 'To run, decamp rapidly' (Hotten): mostly North Country: Oct. 1835, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey (p. 970), a police constable giving evidence, 'Warley said to Williams, "Crush, you b—y fool, there is a Peeler"'; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by 1889, low s., according to B & L. Cf. S.E. pound along, 'to run heavily', and hit the road and punch.—2. Hence, to escape from (jail), to force (a door): U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing crush down sides. To 'run to a place of safety, or to the appointed rendezvous.—North Country Cant': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1891, F & H; by 1920, ob.; by 1945, virtually †. An elaboration of crush, v., 1.

Sing; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1927, The Saturday Evening Post, C. F. Coe, 'The River Pirate'; Feb. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, Ernest Booth; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1937, Courtney R. Cooper, Here's to Crime, 'Crush a ean' (break open a bank-safe); extant.

crush-out, n. An escape from prison: July 4, 1925, Flynn's; Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's; Jan. 27, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; by 1936 (Flynn's, Jan. 25, Richard B. Sale), it was journalistic s. Ex the v.

crush out, v. To escape from prison: July 4, 1925, Flynn's, James Jackson, 'Great Getaways from Sing Sing', 'Other men had "crushed out"', as the term is. No prison is always impregnable to all men'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1929, Givens; 1931, Irwin, 'To break gaol, especially when this is accompanied with violence to guards or when a wall or building is blasted or dug away'; 1934, Rose; by 1936, it was a police and journalistic commonplace. Irwin's definition clarifies the semantics.

crush stir. See crush the stir.

crush the jungle. To escape from prison: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; app. † by 1930. Cf. prec. and ensuing entries.

crush the stir. 'To break from prison,' Ware (who spells it . . . stur), 1909: late C. 19–20. After ca. 1930, usually crush stir. A modernizing of mill the quod; see crush, v., 1 and 2, and stir.

crusher. A policeman: prob. orig. c., but perhaps always low London s. (Aug. 1835, Sessions Papers, p. 643; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 474.) In the U.S.A., however, and esp. in New York, it was—witness Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859—almost certainly e., and it survived until ea. 1940. Godfrey Irwin records it as eurrent in 1931. George E. Boxall, Australian Bushrangers, 1899, at p. 290 records its use among bushrangers in 1864. Ex the size of the average policeman's boots; or perhaps ex 'their heavy-footed interference with the liberty of the subject' (A. Griffiths, Mysteries of Police and Crime, 1898, at I, 85).—2. Usually in pl.: 1925, Leverage, 'Crushers. . . . The feet, a pair of shoes': U.S.A.: since ea. 1910; ob. Perhaps ex sense 1.

crushing chats, in the 1735 ed. of The Triumph of Wit, is a variant of:

crushing cheats. See crashing cheats, I, reference of 1707.

crust-flop; crust-flopper. 'To eat bread crusts, etc. One who eontents himself with remnants,' Leverage, 1925: rather, low s. than e. crutch, under the. See under the arm.

cry. To inform to the police: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. squeak and squeal.

cry carrots (and turnips). Alexander Smith, The History of the Highwaymen, 1714, 'Whipt at the Cart's Arse, which they'—thieves—'call Shove the Tumbler, or Crying Carrots'; † by 1820. Perhaps ex the resemblance between such a cart and a eostermonger's light eart for the conveyance of, e.g., vegetables.

crysler. See Chrysler.

C's, the three. The Central Criminal Court (London): convicts': 1889, B & L; rather ob.

cub. In 1698, B.E. thus: 'Cub, or young Cub, c. a new Gamester drawn in to be rookt',—repeated by the editor of A New Canting Dict., 1725; Grose, 1788; app. † by 1830 or 1840. Ex S.E. sense ('a youngster').—2. 'A young lad in a hobo gang,' Leverage, 1925: U.S. tramps'; extant.

cube. 'One of a pair of dice,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928: professional gamblers': but, as Godfrey Irwin says, rather j. than e.

cubes. Morphine, says Eagle, 1933; strictly, a cube is 'a eubic packet of morphine,' BVB, 1942.

Cubit (or c.), punishment by the. The treadmill (known in s. as Cubitt's machine): prison c.: ca. 1821–50. Jon Bee, 'Cubit being the inventor's name': read Cubitt. Cf. round-about, 3.

cuckoos is a C. 17 term for money (see at aste): prob. for coins. Cf. canary, 2.

cue, n. See letter Q. (As 'sign or signal' it was, of eourse, never c.—despite Geo. P. Burnham.)—2. 'A calculation which eonfirmed gamblers are guided altogether by in playing. They know that after three eards of one denomination have gone out, they cannot be split': U.S. gamblers' and card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; ob. That is their cue or hint.

cue, v. To go upon 'the mace' (see mace, n.): 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. Ex letter Q.

cue-box; cue-keeper. 'An exaet representation of the lay-out of the eards on the table'; 'the man who keeps the cues or marks, so that a player knows by looking at it, which eard is in and which is out': gamblers' and card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell; extant.

cues. 'The points', says Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859. But what, precisely, does he mean? Perhaps see cue, n., 2, and certainly see cue-box.

cuff is some kind of scoundrel connected with organized whoring: 1675, R. Head, Proteus Redivivus. See also kick, n., 1.

cuff, v. To handcuff: 1933, Ersine; extant.

cuff, on the. See on the cuff.

cuffen is an occ. C. 16 variant of cuffin. Harman, 1566, 'A quyere cuffen'.

cuffer. A man; a rustic: 1859, Matsell (cuffir); 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1920. Perhaps ex Yiddish kaffer, 'a stupid fellow' (cf. Hebrew kaffori, 'a peasant'): B & L.

cuffin. Apparently earliest in eombination: see queer cuffin. First recorded independently in Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9 (see the quot'n at cove); 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, "'Cove" or "Cuffin" is in general terms a man'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme, with variants coffin and cuffing; 1698, B.E.; 1714, Alex. Smith; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose; prob. † by 1830, despite the entry in Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859. The origin is obscure; cuffin, however, is prob. eognate with cove, cove.—2. A justice of the peace: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; app. † by 1820. Abbr. of cuffin queer (or quire).—3. The sense 'a warder' in Punch, Jan. 31, 1857, is a literary error; or, at least, a literarism—not actual c. cuffin queer(e) or quire. See queer cuffin. (Coles, 1676; B.E.; A Canting Dict., 1725.)

cuffing and cuffyn. See cuffin.

cuffing or macing. A practice to which dishonest automobile dealers are given—buying a car from an individual for small cash-payments and for a series of notes that are never met: commercial c.: Feb. 19, 1935, The New York Sun; extant. Cf. strike, n. and v., for the basic semantics.

cuffir. See cuffer.

cuffyn. See cuffin.

cul. See cull, n.

cule, n. A reticule: 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxix; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by 1900, no longer c. Cf. culing.

cule or cull, v. To make a cull or dupe of; often as vbl n.: 1698, J. W., Youth's Safety, 'Policies and Intrigues, Cheats, Wheedles, Culling, Shams, and the like'; app. † by 1790. Ex cull, n., 1.—2. (Usually cule.) Implied in culing, q.v.

culing. 'Much money is made at races by watching carriages in which there are ladies, and who [at race-meetings], in the excitement of the moment, when the horses are passing, jump up and leave their reticule on the seats; this is called culing': 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H (culling); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; by 1920, ob.; by 1930, †. I.e., 'reticuling', with a pun on culling ('to cull, to gather').

cull, n. 'A sap-headed fellow,' says R. Head in The English Rogue, 1665, but the spelling is given as culle, which may represent not cull but cully; elsewhere in the glossary, however, we find 'The Cul Snylches . . . The man eyes you,' where there seems to be no pejorative connotation of folly or weak-headedness; 1674, Cotton, The Compleat Gamester, 'Lambs, or Colls' (see lamb): 1698, B.E. (both 'any man' and 'a fool'); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1744, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account; 1776, Sir John Fielding, London and Westminster; 1782, Messink; 1818, The London Guide, 'Cull, the dupe of prostitutes'; 1823, Jon Bee (by implication: see sense 6); 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. trans.), ch. VI; † by 1889 (B & L). Prob. short for S.E. cullion, 'a man vile, despicable, or rascally', though immediately it may be a shortening of cully, q.v.—2. Hence, a gentleman: 1698, B.E. (see quot'n at bil); 1717, Anon., The History of the Press-Yard, 'Dol, We shall have a Hot Supper to Night, the Cull looks as if he had the Blunt, and I must come in for a share of it'; 1725 (see quot'n at crackmans); 1735, Select Trials; 1785, Grose (see quot'n at melt, v.); app. † by 1860.—3. A rogue: 1698, B.E., 'The Cull's Cank, c. the Rogue's Dumb'; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 'Cull, a Man, either Honest, or otherwise'; 1773, Anon., The Bow-Street Opera; 1785, Grose (at cat match); app. † by 1830.—4. (Hence, ex all the preceding senses.) Any man: 1665 (see sense 1); 1735, Select Trials; 1753, John Poulter (see stretch, n. 1); 1785, Grose; 1822, Anon., James Mackcoull; 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, III; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1864, low s. in Britain. In the U.S.A., the word has, in low-criminal circles, survived as a c. term of address, usually in the plural ('mates, friends, pals')—witness Henry Leverage, 'Queer Money' in Flynn's, July 23, 1927, "Oh, it's all right, culs," muttered the Garroter. "No coppers around".—5. A prostitute's favourite man: ca. 1760–1815. The London Guide, 1818 (p. 104); Jon Bee. Hence:—6. 'A customer of any sort who pays for "favours secret, sweet, and precious": 1823, Bee; † by 1891 (F & H).

cull, v. See cule, v.—2. 'To form and nurse a friendship,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: C. 20. Ex cull, n., 4; cf. cully, n., 6.

cull, bob. See bob cull.

cull, fox the. See fox, v., 1.

cull-money. 'Profit obtained by the keepers of houses of ill fame, by retaining the change of moneys sent out for liquors, or by enhancing the price of the same, or by bringing a short quantity': 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1900. See cull, n., 1.

cull of the bing. See bing, n.

culley. See cully.

culling. See cule, quotation of 1698.—2. See culing, reference of 1859.

cullot. A loafer: 1848, 'The Flash Language' in The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). Perhaps a perversion of Scottish (orig. S.E.) callet, 'a strumpet'.

culls. Hash: mostly tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'Usually made of inferior or culled meats and vegetables' (Irwin).

cull's content, the. A c.p.: see content.

cully, n. A fellow or chap: 1656, Anon., The Witty Rogue Arraigned, 'Pinched the Cully of a Casket of Jewels'; 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers; 1698, B.E. (by implication); 1719, D'Urfey, 'Blowzabella, my bouncing Doxie, | Come let's trudge it to Kirkham Fair, | There's stout liquor enough to Fox me, | And young Cullies to buy thy Ware'; by 1780 or 1790, the term, in this sense, appears to have > s.; in C. 19–20 it has been mainly a Cockney word, esp. as a vocative. Grose derives it ex the It. coglione, 'a dolt'; this etymology is tenable, esp. if we admit that cully prob. came via † S.E. cullion, a rascal. Sense 2 may have been the earlier.—2. Hence (?), a dupe, a prospective victim; a simpleton; a fool: 1664, 'Hudibras' Butler; 1665, Anon., The High-Way Women, 'They plyed the Cully so hard with the Creature [strong liquor], that they laid him fast asleep on a bench; where one of the Women pick'd out of his Pocket 14 pieces of Gold'; 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers; 1698, B.E.; 1701, D'Urfey, The Bath; 1707, J. Shirley; 1770, R. King; 1785, Grose; 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Bee; 1866, J. MacLevy; † by 1889 (B & L).—3. A rogue: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1780.—4. A fop: 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1810.—5. A partner: U.S.A.: 1848, 'The Flash Language' in The Ladies' Repository; by 1903 (Clapin, Americanisms), it was s.; † by 1937 (Irwin). Ex sense 1.—6. Hence, a friend, a companion: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; current throughout C. 20; by 1945, slightly ob. This sense exists—has long existed—in English low (mostly London) s. and it springs from cully, n., 3.

cully, v. To dupe, cheat or defraud; obtain money from by a confidence trick: 1680, Thomas Dangerfield, Don Tomazo; 1698, B.E. (see quot'n at buzzard); † by 1780.

cully, adj. 'Friendly; sociable,' Leverage, 1925; by 1945, ob.

cully gorgor, 'a companion, a brother actor', is low theatrical s., not c.; the same applies to the sense 'manager of a theatre'.

cunnel, 'a potato', is tinkers' s. (Shelta): 1889, B & L. cunning man. A judge: ca. 1770–1840. Grose, 1785: see fortune-teller.—2. 'A cheat, who pretends by his skill in astrology to assist persons in recovering stolen goods': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; app. † by 1870.

cunny, cunny-catch, cunny-catcher, cunny-catching. See cony, etc. Greene, e.g., speaks of 'these Coosening Cunny-catchers', and Dekker in 1608 has 'And so they are cunny-caught'.

cunny-warren. A brothel: ? ca. 1750–1850. Grose, 1785. Cf. warren, 2.

cup of tea. To see: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; prob. introduced by Australians, for Australians adore 'a nice cuppa', whereas Americans do not drink much tea.

Cupid's itch. A venereal disease—any venereal disease: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Venereal = of Venus, goddess of love.

cur, turn. To become an informer, to give information, to the police: ca. 1860–1920. Baumann. Prob. suggested by turn copper (see copper, n., 3).

curb, n. 'The Courber . . . is he that with a Curb (as they—the curbers—term it) or hook, doth pul out of a window any . . . houshold stuffe whatsoever,' Robert Greene, The Second Part of Conny-catching, 1592; ibid., 'Then doth [the curber] thrust in a long hooke some nine foote in length (which he calleth a curbe) that hath at the end a crooke, with three tynes turned contrary . . . It is mayde with joyntes like an angle rod, and can be conveyed into the forme of a truncheon, and worne in the hand like a walking staffe untill they come to their purpose, and then they let it out at the length, and hook . . . whatsoever is lose and within the reach'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'The Hooke is the Courb'; 1785, Grose,—but the term had prob. > † by 1700. Cf. Fr. courbe, a curve: cf., for sense, the S.E. crook.

curb, v. Recorded first in curbing law, q.v.; 1592, Greene, The Second Conny-catching, 'They let [the curb] out at the length, and hook or curb whatsoever is lose and within the reach'; in 1592, Greene, A Disputation, it is also used absolutely, 'Though you [men] can foyst, nyp, prig, lift, courbe, and use the blacke Art, yet you cannot crosbite without the helpe of a woman'; app. † by 1690. Cf. the note at the end of preceding entry; the v. prob. derives imm. ex the n.—2. To strike or hit: 1893 (perhaps valid for 1845), F. W. Carew, No. 747, "'You jist curb his nibs on the pea [glossed: 'strike him on the head'] with the jemmy'" ; † by 1920. Ex S.E. curb, to restrain.

curb one's (or the) clapper. To be silent; not to speak: 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322), 'Not to talk. . . . Curb clapper, whip still, tongue glued'; ob. Clapper, the tongue.

curbar. See curber.

curbe. See curb, n.

curber appears earliest in Greene's Second Conny-catching, 1592, 'The Courber, which the common people call the Hooker, is he that with a Curb . . . doth pul out of a window any loose linnen cloth, apparell, or els any other houshold stuffe whatsoever, which stolne parcels, they in their Art cal snappings'; 1602, S. Rowlands, Greenes Ghost, spells it curbar; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; 1785, Grose,—but the term seems to have been † by 1700 or earlier. Ex curb, v.

curbing, n. and adj., appears respectively in curbing law and in curbing: the former slightly the earlier (see next entry); the latter in 1592, R. Greene, The Second Part of Conny-catching, 'Fat snappings worth the Curbing'; app. † by 1700 at the latest. Ex curb, v.

curbing law. The stealing of property by the means of hooked staves, which the curbers thrust through an open window and with which they remove accessible articles, esp. clothes: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 'The lift, the black art, and the curbing law, which is [respectively] the filchers and theeves that come into houses or shops, and lift away anything: or pick-locks, or hookers at windows'; 1592, Greene, The Second Part of Conny-catching, lists the terms thus: 'He that hookes, the Curber. He that watcheth[,] the warpe. The hooke, the Curbe. The goods, Snappings. The gin to open the window[,] the Trickar'; ibid., 'The Courber . . . doth pul out of a window any . . . household stuffe whatsoever, which stolne parcels, they in their Art cal snappings: to the performance of this law there be required, duly two persons, the Curber and the Warpe: the curber his office is to spy in the day time fit places wher his trade may be practised at night, and comming unto anie window if it be open, then he hath his purpose, if shut, then growing into the nature of the blacke Art, hath his trickers which are engins of Iron so cunningly wrought, that he will cut a barre of Iron in two with them so easily, that scarcely shal the standers by heare him: then when hee hath the window open and spies any fat snappings worth the Curbing, then streight he sets the Warp to watch, who hath a long cloke to cover whatsoever he gets: then doth the other thrust in a long hooke . . . (. . . a curbe) that hath at the end a crooke . . . so that tis impossible to misse, if there be any snappings abroad And then he—the curber—conveies it to the warp, and from thence . . . their snappings go to the Broker—the receiver—or to the Bawd'. Dekker merely adapts this passage when, in The Belman of London, he comes to deal with 'the Courbing Law'; 1785, Grose,—but curbing law was almost certainly † by 1700. Matsell's entry, therefore, means nothing—chronologically. See curb, v., and law.

Curbstone Court, freed at. Criminals 'will also speak of being freed at curbstone court, which means that they have paid off'—i.e., bribed—the arresting officer on the street to prevent being taken to jail, Convict, 1934: since ca. 1925. I.e., on the curb (anglicé, kerb).

curbstone sailor. A prostitute of the streets: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. She walks the streets, stands expectantly on the curb. Ex English s.

curbstones. Cigar-ends and cigarette-butts picked up from the sidewalk or the gutter: beggars' and tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; by 1930, English, as, e.g., in Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows, 1939. Cf. stoop tobacco.

curl; usually pl. 'Curls—human teeth obtained by the body-snatchers'; 1823, Bcc; † by 1870. Euphemistic.

curle. Clippings of money: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Curle, clippings of money, which curls up in the operation'; 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1890. Grose's explanation of the origin is prob. correct.

curler. One who sweats gold coins 'by rubbing them together for the dust': 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859, American (Matsell); † by 1890 in Britain; current in late C. 19–20 Australia—Baker, 1942; † by 1930 in U.S.A. Ex the preceding.

curls. See curl.

curry favell. See cory favell.

cursetor; cursetor. The sense 'vagabonds' is S.E. When B.E. speaks of cursetors as 'the first (old) Rank of Canters', he refers to rogues flourishing in C. 14–early 16: even here, the term cannot be considered c., for the name was current before there was such a thing as c. in England. The sense 'vagabonds trading on a pretended or, at best, a very defective knowledge of the law', recorded by A New Canting Dict., 1725, as 'the Forty-second Order of Vagabonds', may, however, be a genuine c. term of C. 18, for Grose classifies it as c. and defines thus: 'Cursetors, broken pettyfogging attornies, or Newgate solicitors'. Ex L. currere, to run; via de cursu.

curst cull. 'An ill-natur'd Fellow, a Churl to a Woman', esp. to a whore, for it is opp. to bob cull, q.v.: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1870. See cull, n.

curtail; curtal. The earliest definition is to be found in Awdeley's Vocabondes, 1562: 'A Curtall is much like to the Upright man [q.v.], but hys authority is not fully so great. He useth commonly to go with a short cloke, like to grey Friars, & his woman with him in like livery, which he calleth his Altham if she be hys wyfe, and if she be his harlot, she is called hys Doxy'; by Harman, in 1566, called rogue curtal (see quot'n, from Harman, at rogue, n.); 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'Curtals, c. The Eleventh Rank of the Canting Crew'—this sense seems to have > † ca. 1700, and B.E.'s ranking may belong to the next sense. Their cloaks were curtailed.—2. A New Canting Dict., 1725, makes them 'the Eleventh Rank of the Canting Crew; so called from their Practise to cut off Pieces of Silk, Cloth, Linen or Stuff, that were hung out at the Shop-Windows of Mercers, Drapers, &c. as also sometimes the Tails of Womens Gowns, their Hoods, Scarves, Pinnars, &c. if richly Lac'd: Nor do they stick at cutting off as far as they can reach, leaden Water-pipes, Gutters, and Spouts, or any thing, either in Whole or in Part, they can lay their Hands on'; 1785, Grose. This sense was † by 1840 at the latest. Ex the process of cutting short.—3. Hence: 'A Species of Cut-purses': 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, implied in Grose; † by 1840.

curtains. In 'It's curtains' (It's the end—ruin—death) the word occurs on several occasions in Donald Lowrie's My Life in Prison, 1912; but in that sense, derived obviously from the end of a performance in a theatre, it can hardly, even at first, have been other than s., perhaps a mere catch-phrase.

curtal(l). See curtail.

curtesy (or curtsey) man. One who, well clothed and well mannered, passes himself off as a gentleman soldier now disastrously without employment; he addresses himself to gentlefolk and usually speaks on behalf, and in the behalf, of a small group of (allegedly) like-circumstanced, humbly visible and discreetly silent men; but, if he be hospitably housed, he is not too proud or too gentlemanly to steal 'a paire of sheetes, or Coverlet' and then depart before the household is stirring: 1562, Awdeley, who provides an excellent account of the modus operandi; † by 1620. Ex his courteous approach and method: he does it with a grace.

curtison is a ghost word for cursetor (see cursetor): Matsell, 1859.

curve. A beautiful or a 'luscious' woman: tramps'; since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'In a tramp's eyes, one with a deal of form and substance' (Irwin); cf. s. curves, 'female contours'.

cush. A prostitute's bully: 1864, A Prison Matron, Memoirs of Jane Cameron, Female Convict, 'Jane Cameron's "Cush" was the elegant sobriquet bestowed upon this ruffian—the cant Scotch name for all men whom these mistaught, misguided creatures of our sex cling to, struggle for, and even love'; app. † by 1920. Perhaps short for cushion—something warm and comfortable.—2. Money: U.S.A.: late C. 19–20; its use ca. 1898 is implied in Anon., 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery', Flynn's, March 23, 1929; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Coin'; 1925, Leverage; Jan. 8, 1927, Flynn's; by 1928, it was circus s.—witness The White Tops, July–Aug. 1928, 'Circus Glossary'; 1929, W. R. Burnett; by 1930, gen. low s. A cushion is a sign and a means of comfort; money brings comfort.—3. (Either ex sense 2, or a perversion of the first syllable.) A cashier in, e.g., a bank: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'In making my get-away, the cush got my mug The cashier saw my face as I fled from the bank'; ob.—4. (Ex sense 2.) A tip (pourboire); bribe money: U.S.A.: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar (former); 1934, Rose (latter); extant.

cusher. A moneymaker (person): 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. ex cush, 2; perhaps influenced by the connotations of 'bank cashier' (cf. cush, 3).

cushion, n. See cushions.

cushion, v. To hide or conceal: on the borderline between c. and low s.: 1874, H; 1891, F & H; app. † by 1940. Cf. S.E. 'to stifle'.

cushions. A passenger train or a passenger car: yeggs' and tramps': Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg"?'); 1925, Leverage, 'Cushions, n.pl., Passenger cars'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'We ditched th' Lizzie soon and went home on th' cushions'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex the cushioned seats of the passengers' compartments.—2. Hence (?), ease, comfort, luxury: tramps': since ca. 1918. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. on the cushions, 2.

cushions, ride the. To live in luxury: since ca. 1918. Irwin; Ersine. See prec. entry.

cussine, 'a male', says Matsell, 1859: but this is either a ghost word or an unnecessary form; and if Matsell means cousin, then it is not c. Baumann, 1887, has 'cussin, a man': perhaps ex cuss, 'a fellow', but prob. an error for cuffin.

customer. A victim of thieves or other crooks: since ca. 1880; ob. B & L, 1889. A commercial relationship; cf. sense 3.—2. 'Customers—inmates recently admitted,' Hargan, 1935; convicts': since ca. 1910. Cf. 'a lawyer's clients'.—3. A prospective victim of a swindle: British: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. Cf. sense 1.

cut, n., 'a division—hence, a share—of the loot': low s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. The same applies to the corresponding v.—2. A diminution of a sentence : convicts' : since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933.—3. A diluting of liquor : since ca. 1920 ; by 1935, s. Ersine.

cut, v. To speak : ca. 1500 ; Anon., Maid Emlyn, 'Than wolde she metc, | With her lamman swete, | And cutte with him' (O.E.D.) ; 'To cutte, to saye,' Harman, 1566—cf. cut bene whids ; ibid., also in the form cutt ; Dekker, 1608–9, Lanthorne and Candle-light ; 1676, Coles, 'Cut, c. speak' ; 1688, Holme ; 1698, B.E. ; 1707, J. Shirley ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. ; 1785, Grose (in cut bene whids) ; † by 1830. Hardly, as The O.E.D. silently implies, ex cut, 'to make an incision in' (etc.) ; prob. ex L. loqui, 'to speak', past participle locutus, wherein the 'English' second syllable is -cut- and is stressed.—2. Hence, to name : 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 'Then budge we to the bowsing ken, | Thats cut the Robin Hood' ; app. † by 1700.—3. To practise purse-cutting ; be a cut-purse : C. 17. Thomas Middleton, The Blacke Booke, 1604 (see quot'n at nim, v.). By shortening of to cut purses.—4. To do : see, e.g., slop-tubs.—5. 'To dilute liquor with water and [pure] alcohol. "Now, we don't cut hooch any more ; we make the bunk with malt",' Burke, 1930 : U.S. bootleggers' : 1933, Ersine ; 1934, Howard N. Rose ; by 1937, s.—6. To shorten (a prison sentence) : U.S. convicts' : since ca. 1920. Ersine.

Cut, the. The house of correction at Jessup's Cut, Maryland : ca. 1870–1910. Flynn's, March 14, 1931, Henry Hyatt, 'I've Stolen $1,000,000 !'

cut a bosh ; cut a flash. To cut a figure. Not c. but low s.

cut a lock. George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 1789, 'What lock do you cut now ?', glossed thus, 'What way do you get your livelihood now ? . . . Or, how do you work ?' ; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II ; app. current ca. 1775–1860. See lock, 5, and fight a lock.

cut a sham. See sham, cut a.

cut a wheadle. See wheadle, n., 2.

cut and dried. (Of a place) whose robbery has been carefully planned : 1879, 'The Autobiography of a Thief' (Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.) ; slightly ob. A special application of the S.E. phrase.

cut and slicer. A hat : mostly Pacific Coast : C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on dicer.

cut benar whids. See cut bene whids.

cut bene. As in Dekker's 'The Canters Dictionarie', in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9 : 'To cutt bene, to speake gently' ; 1688, Holme ; B.E., 1698, defines cut bene as 'to Speak gently, civilly or kindly' ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. ; 1785, Grose ; 1823, Bee ; 1848, Sinks of London ; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.) ; but the phrase was prob. † by 1830. See cut, v., 1, and bene, adj. ; short, however, for the next.

cut bene (or bien) whids. 'To cutte bene whydds, to speake or geve good wordes', i.e. to speak civilly ; also to speak ingratiatingly : thus Harman, 1566 ; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, has cutt bene whiddes ; 1665, R. Head (cut bien whids) ; 1688, Holme ; 1698, B.E., 'Cut bene (or benar) whids, c. to give good Words' ; 1707, J. Shirley ; 1725, A Canting Dict. ; 1785, Grose.

cut benle (i.e., benly), 'to speake gently' : 1566, Harman ; † by 1850. See cut, v., and benly ; cf. cut bene.

cut caper sauce. To be hanged : ca. 1770–1880. H, 1784. See also hearty choke.

cut in ; cut out. To admit, to exclude, from a share of loot : since ca. 1915. Ersine.

cut into. To make contact with : 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief ; extant.

cut it, 'to depart', may have been c., at least orig., as 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857, classifies it. If so, it was prob. a derivative of cut quick sticks, etc.

cut it fine. To make money by passing counterfeit coin : 1869, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London ; ob. With a pun on the lit. and fig. senses.

cut one's cart. To expose a person's tricks : tramps' : 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, '[Tramps] like to be there [at kindly homes, in order to beg] before any one cuts their cart' ; 1859, H ; 1891, F & H ; by 1920, ob. ; by 1945, †. I.e., to hamper or inconvenience someone.

cut one's eyes ; often as vbl n., cutting his eyes, which Matsell, 1859, defines as 'Beginning to see ; learning ; suspicious' : 1889, B & L ; 1891, F & H ; ob. by 1920 ; † by 1940. Prob. ex cutty-eye, q.v. ; cf. coll. keep one's eyes peeled.

cut one's lucky. See cut quick sticks.

cut one's own grass, 'to earn one's own living', is not c. but proletarian s. James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London, 1869.

cut one's stick. See cut quick sticks.

cut out. See cut in . . .—2. To depart from a drug addicts' parlour or club ; to quit the addicts' circle : drug addicts' : March 12, 1938, The New Yorker, Meyer Berger ; extant. A special application of a phrase that means 'to cease' (perhaps ex card-games).

cut queer whids. (Often opposed to cut bene whids, q.v.) 'To cutte quyre whyddes, to geve evell wordes or evell language,' Harman, 1566—i.e., to speak discourteously ; also to use bad language ; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, has 'To cutt quier whiddes, to give evill language' ; 1665, R. Head, 'Cut quire whids. To speak evilly' ; 1688, Holme ; 1698, B.E. ; 1707, J. Shirley ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. ; 1728, D. Defoe ('To Scold') ; 1785, Grose, 'To give foul language' ; by 1830, †. See cut, v., 1—queer, adj.—whid, n.

cut quick sticks ; cut one's stick. To be off, to depart : in 1823, Egan (in his ed. of Grose) declares the latter to be c. ; but neither term was, I think, ever c., though prob. both were low s. for many years. Perhaps suggested by broom (v.). The same applies to cut one's lucky, which may orig. (ca. 1820) have been c., but prob. was always s., admittedly low until ca. 1860 ; and to make one's lucky (Dickens, Oliver Twist, 1838 ; G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad, 1839). Possibly c. was the variant cut one's wind : 1827, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, III, 'Some man said [to a caught thief], "Cut your wind"—but the waiter said, "no—that won't do"' ; app. † by 1860. Prob. nautical in origin.

cut second. To cheat (someone) ; also v.i. : since early 1920's. Ersine, 1933. Into second place.

cut the bull. To cease talking wildly or extravagantly or boastfully or nonsensically : tramps' of ca. 1910–20, then low s. : 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat. In full, to cut out the bull-shit ; bull(-shit) is low s., not c.

cut the line. See line, cut the.

cut the rope. See rope, cut the.

cut the string. See string, cut the.

cut (someone's) throat. To betray: 1934, Thos Minchan, Boy and Girl Tramps; by 1938 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of March 9), it was s.

cut-up. A rural constable (?): 1925, Glen H. Mullin (see quot'n at yard bull); extant. Because he 'cuts up rough'.—2. A share-out of burglars' booty or gangsters' spoils: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Cf. carve-up.

cut up, 'to turn out to be rich', is not c. but s., despite Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859.—2. To share (among thieves): 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct., 'We done very well at poges (purses); we found . . . we had between sixty and seventy quid to cut up'; 1891, F & H, 'To divide plunder'; in C. 20, also American, as in Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. A special application of the S.E. sense.

cute. A warrant (of arrest): 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; † by 1790. Ex 'prosecution'.

cuter. A surprise: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; ob. Perhaps ex 'Ain't that cute!'.—2. A fool, greenhand, 'boob': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; ob. Ironic, cf. fly flat.—3. See cutor, ref. of 1930.—4. See kuter.

cutered pill or green pill. 'A strong unpalatable smoke [of opium], BVB: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Cf. green ashes; pill, 'a ration of opium prepared for smoking' (BVB).

cuties. Body lice: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. A deliberation variant of low s. cooties (in the same sense), perhaps with an ironic pun on cutie, 'a female sweetheart'.

cutle (bounge). See cuttle (bung).

cutor. Prosecuting attorney; prosecutor (if an officer of the Law): 1927, Kane; 1929, Givens; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn (the Cuter); July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer (cutter—an unjustifiable spelling, for the word is pronounced kew'ter); March 19, 1932, Flynn's; 1933, Eagle; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose (who reproduces Maurer's mistake); 1935, David Lamson; Feb. 29, 1936, Flynn's, Richard Wormser; 1938, Convict 2nd; 1938, Castle; 1939, Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep, shows that, by that date, it was police and journalistic s.

cutt is Dekker's spelling of cut, v., 1.

cutte. See cut, v., 1. Harman, 1566; rare after C. 16; † by 1700.

cutter, 'a bravo', 'a cut-throat', has by some been thought to be c.; but The O.E.D. is presumably right in adjudging it to be S.E.; the same applies to cutting trade, the profession of bravo or highway robber.—2. As 'a tool for cutting', it is obviously S.E.; but in the New York underworld of ca. 1850–80, it is 'a peculiar instrument that first-class screwsmen [burglars] use for cutting through iron chests, doors, etc.': 1859, Matsell.—3. Among American tramps, a cutter is one who fights—settles his quarrels—with a knife: 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (p. 377); app. † by 1920.—4. Incorrect for cutor.—5. A rare synonym of prop-getter, q.v. at '1924'.—6. A boy: U.S.A.: 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece; extant. 'Here cutter seems to be an abbreviation of the vulgar "piss-cutter" . . . any man or boy with an opinion of himself not justified by . . . any standard of measurement,' Godfrey Irwin (letter of March 17, 1937).—7. (Cf. sense 2.) An oxy-acetylene blowpipe: since the late 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. Very effective.

cutting gloak. A man very apt to draw, or a man well known for drawing, a knife and slashing therewith any person he quarrels with: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1870. See gloak.

cutting one's eyes. See cut one's eyes.

cutting up. Ill-natured or, at the mildest, uncomplimentary talk about another person: 1931, Godfrey Irwin: hardly c.; merely coll.

cuttings. A share of the booty (burglars', pickpockets', card-sharpers'): 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant—though slightly ob. Cf. the coll, cut, a share.

cuttle. A knife: implied by Robert Greene in 1591 (see next entry); app. † by 1700. Either an elaboration of 'to cut' or a perversion of cutter. Cf. — cuttle bung. A knife used by pickpockets in cutting purses (see bung): 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 'The knife, the Cuttle bounge'; 1592, Greene, The Second Conny-catching, 'A Nip having by fortune lost his cutle bounge, or having not one fit for his purpose, went to a cunning Cuttler to have a new one made'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; app. † 1700.

cutty-eye. 'To look out of the corners of one's eyes, to leer, to look askance. The cull cutty-eyed at us; the fellow looked suspicious at us': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; current in U.S.A. by 1859 (and prob. long before)—Matsell's Vocabulum; † by 1920. To look out of eyes so narrowed as to resemble slits; cf. cut one's eyes.

cutty-eyed. Suspicious; looking sharply about one: prob. since ca. 1790 and prob. orig. English: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. by 1910; † by 1930. Ex preceding.

Cy or cy (pron. as sigh). A simpleton: 1925, Leverage; not c. but s. Cf. hick and rube: prob. for Cy = Cyrus; or perhaps (there being an alternative spelling, Sy) for 'simple Simon'.

cyarum occurs only in cyarum, by salmon; for the second element of this underworld oath, see salmon. Current ca. 1530–1630. Copland, 1536, in a canting song plagiarized in toto by Dekker in Lanthorne and Candle-light (1608–9), has 'Cyarum, by Salmon; and thou shalt pek my Jere'. An artificial word.

cyclone shot, esp. in use a c. s., to 'drill several holes in a safe for explosives' (Rose, 1934): bank-robbers': since ca. 1925. Ex its effect.

cygaret is a C. 18 term, appearing first and thus in Alexander Smith, The History of the Highwaymen, 1714: 'He became a Cygaret, whose particular Office is to haunt Churches, Feasts and publick Assemblies, at which he cuts off the half of a good Cloak, Cassock-Sleeves, half a Gown, or hinder part of a Petticoat, of which he made money'. Origin? I surmise an agential perversion of secret.

cymbal. A watch (time-piece): 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1859, current in New York—witness Matsell's Vocabulum; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1930. Ex the 'chiming' noise it emits.

cynchin-co is a misprint for kinchen co. (Wm Winstanley, The New Help to Discourse, 1669.)

czar. A penitentiary or prison warden: 1927, Kane; 1931, Irwin; extant. 'A man with absolute power over his charges'—much as the Czar of all the Russias once possessed this power over his subjects; 'not unlikely from Dannemora, New York's State Prison . . . where discipline is severe, and which institution has long been called "Siberia" by the underworld' (Irwin).

D

d or D. A detective: 1879, Thor Fredur, Sketches from Shady Places, 'I have a few friends among the D's (detectives)'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H, 'Among thieves, a policeman'; by 1895, low s. A detective.

D.A. A drug addict: since ca. 1925. BVB. (The sense 'district attorney' is s.)

d and d (or D and D), also D.D.; D.D., v., usually as vbl n., D.D.ing or D.D.-ing. Deaf and dumb; to pretend to be deaf and dumb: beggars' and tramps': 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, "Well, it's this way," he went on. "I was dummyin' up, see? Imitatin' a deaf an' dumb man. D.D.ing, see?"'; ibid., 'I'm D.D., see, an' don't want to . . . give myself a bawl-out in front of the woman'; 1928, Chicago May, 'D.D.—deaf and dumb'; 1931 (at dee dee); 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant.

D. and R.G. See Damn Rotten Grub.

d.b. Disciplinary barracks: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Abbreviation.

D.c. Don't cap: crook auctioneers' codephrase to their 'cappers': C. 20. Carlton Brown, 'Auction Sale this Day', The New Yorker, Aug. 7, 1937. See cap, v., 2.

D. S. Jack. 'Plain-clothes officers are known as "D. S. Jacks"', splits, F. C. Taylor, 'The Language of Lags' in Word-Lore, Oct. 1928; extant. A Jack is a policeman; D.S.: ? detective sergeant.

Daar is water! A e.p. indicative of warm approval among Afrikaans-speaking crooks: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946, 'Wearing this [suit] and a flashy "blaar" . . . he would draw envious cries of "daar is water!" or "Wah-ka! Aan is jy" from his pallies'. The latter phrase, solely Afrikaans. Lit., 'There is water!'

dab. An 'expert exquisite in Roguery': ca. 1690–1830 (e.g., in B.E., 1698; 1725, A Canting Dict.; Poulter, 1753): this sense merges with that of 'an expert or adept', which, first recorded in 1691 (O.E.D.), is s. Perhaps ex dab, to strike smartly; perhaps a corruption of adept. See also rum dab.—2. Hence, any rogue: 1785, Grose, 'The dab's in quod, the poor rogue is in prison'; † by 1889 (B & L).—3. A bed: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'The Nonpareil was at length furnished with a dab; and went to roost'; 1823, Bee; 1826, C. E. Westmacott, The English Spy, II; 1831, W. T. Monerieff, Van Diemen's Land; 1847, A. Harris, Settlers and Convicts; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.), low s. Improbably back-s.; prob. ex the flatness of the fish named dab.—4. A drowned woman (cf. flounder) with little money on her person: 1883, J. Greenwood, Tag, Rag & Co., p. 35; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. In contrast with salmon, 2.—5. A prison warder: 1888, James Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; app. † by 1920. Perhaps back-s. for bad (a bad man: from prisoners' angle).—6. A fingerprint: 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1931, Brown; 1933, George Dilnot, The Real Detective; by 1934, police and journalistic s. Ex the literal sense, as in 'a dab of rouge'.—7. A pimp. a bawd: C. 20. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Prob. ex sense 1.

dab, v. To take a wax impression of (e.g., a key, a lock): since the 1920's. In, e.g., Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940. Prob. ex sense 6 of the n.—2. To take a person's fingerprints: since ca. 1930. Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941, 'Mugged and dabbed'. Ex sense 6 of the n.

dab it up with (a woman). 'To agree to cohabit with her': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; † by 1891 (F & H). Prob. suggested by dab, n., 3.

dabble. To wash (clothes): 1789, Geo. Parker, Life's Painter (see quot'n at lally); † by 1890. Ex the lit. S.E. sense, 'to wet by splashing'.—2. 'To indulge irregularly'—or mildly—'in narcotics': U.S.A.: BVB, 1942.

dabbler. One who, though not a professed thief, is friendly to and with thieves: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). He dabbles in crime; cf. dabble, 2.—2. Hence, a receiver of stolen property: C. 20. Kernôt, 1929–31.

dace. Twopence: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Tip me a dace; lend me twopence'; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee; † by 1860. Cf. dews wins: a corruption of deuce.—2. Hence, in U.S.A.: two cents: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1920.

dacha, 'ten', occurs in dacha saltee, 'tenpence', dacha-one(y), 'elevenpence': it is not e. but parlyaree, and represents It. diece, 'ten'. See, esp., H, 1859 and 1864, at salter.

dachers. Morning: 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo (pp. 91, 94); ob. Perhaps a perversion of day(time).

dad, n. and adj. (A person) of no account; no good: 1925, Leverage: not c., but s. 'Oh, Dad doesn't count: he's only the meal-ticket, the bread-winner.'

daddle; usually in pl. The hand, a hand: 1782, Messink, The Choice of Harlequin, 'They've got nimble daddles'; 1785, Grose, 'Tip us your daddle, give me your hand'; 1789, G. Parker; 1809, George Andrewes; 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial; 1822, A Real Paddy, Real Life in Ireland; 1823, Bee, who restricts it to the right hand; 1836, Autobiography of Jack Ketch; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850 or so, it had > low s.—except perhaps in U.S.A. (witness Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859), though even there (see p. 127) it was mostly pugilistic s. Perhaps ex dial. daddle, 'to trifle; to wriggle' (the fidgeting of hands), for daddle, 'a hand', is common in dial. (App. not a gypsy word.)

daddle, tip (a person) one's. To shake hands with (a person): 1785, Grose (see daddle); 1810, J. Poole, Hamlet Travestie, 'Laertes, I'll have revenge. King. You shall.—Tip us your daddle'; 1838, Glascock, Land Sharks and Sea Gulls; by 1890 (B & L), it was low s. See tip, v., 1, and daddle.

daddy, n. 'At mock raffles, lotteries, etc., the daddy is an accomplice, most commonly the getter up of the swindle, and in all cases the person that has been previously arranged to win the prize': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1889, B & L; ob. Ex his respectable appearance.—2. A workhouse keeper: 1866, James Greenwood, A Night in a Workhouse; 1889, B & L, 'At casual wards the daddy is the pauper in charge'; extant.—3. A Cadillac automobile; esp. car thieves': 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'Popular with "buggy bandits" from size, speed and sturdy construction' (Irwin): for the semantics, cf. the English coll. the father and mother of a 'row'.—4. (Concerning convicts' sexual habits:) 'The oral copulators are variously referred to as muzzlers, fairies, fargs, pansies . . .; the passive participants in sodomy are called punks, gonsils, mustard pots The active daddies, etc., are looked upon with comparative respect . . . their behaviour is male,' Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights, 1933; U.S. convicts': since ca. 1920: 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor; 1938, Castle.

daddy, adj. Cheap; of little worth: Leverage, 1925: not c., but s. See dad.

dads. 'An old Man': 1729, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; app. † by 1800. A perversion of dad (father).

daffy, n.; daffy moll; daffy mug. Gin; a woman addicted to gin-drinking; a gin-addict: 1925, Leverage: the first is low s., but the other two are c.

daffy, adj. 'Demented' is the definition in No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; ca. 1912, G. Bronson-Howard, The Snob; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1933, Eagle; by 1939, low s. Ex Scottish daft, silly; eccentric; mad.

daffy moll, daffy mug. See daffy, n.

dagen or degen. A sword: 1698, B.E. (degen); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (id.); 1785, Grose, 'Degen or dagen, a sword; . . . nim the degen, steal the sword. Dagen is Dutch for a sword'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, where it is spelt dagan—but I suspect that the term was † by 1850, even in America. For origin, see quot'n of 1785.

dagga is not c. but the Standard South African name for Cannabis indica (hashish, marijuana).

dagga rooker is a dagga-smoker, hence a wastrel, even a scoundrel: South Africa: C. 20. Cyrus A. Smith, letter of May 22, 1946. See dagga; rooker in Afrikaans = 'a smoker'—as it does in Dutch.

dago bunco-game; dago bunk game. 'A swindle game worked on Italians,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (both forms): by 1930, low s. Cf. wop game.

dago-red, '(cheap) red wine': low s., not c. Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack Roller, 1930. 'Such as that usually drunk by Italian labourers' (Irwin).

Daily Mail, The. See ship under sail.

dairy, 'female bosom', and dairies, 'female breasts': low s., not c.

dairy off, take the. See take . . .

daisies. Boots: South Africa: late C. 19–20 (J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946). Ex English rhyming s.: see daisy roots.

daisies, doss with the. See doss with . . .

daisy. 'A safe-breaking tool (much like a jimmy)', Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex s. daisy, 'anything very good'.—2. 'A leader (gen. best-educated) of a mob,' Leverage, 1925; rather ob.

daisy beat. 'A swindle of the first water; a robbery of magnitude': 1890, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1930. See beat, n.

daisy chain. (See corn-hole.) 'A group of active sodomites' (BVB).

daisy-kicker. 'Daisy-kickers are Hostlers belonging to large inns, and are known to each other by this name'; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, where it is implied that the term is properly used only of dishonest hostlers; 1785, Grose; by 1820, at latest, it was low s.

daisy-kicking. Illicit dealing, in horses, by hostlers; dishonest treatment of horses by hostlers: 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society, 'The master-stroke of Daisy-kicking'; by 1820, s. By back-formation ex daisy-kicker, 1.

daisy roots. Boots (or shoes): 1859, Matsell; c. until ca. 1865 in England, and until ca. 1890 in New York. Reintroduced, ca. 1900, into the Pacific Coast States (perhaps by Australians): Chicago May, 1928; M & B, 1944. Sydney (Australia) rhyming s.—adopted ex the immigrant Cockneys.

daisyville or D—. The country: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, but prob. current in England by 1850 at the latest; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. A folk-etymology form of deuseville, q.v.

dakma. To silence: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, "'Dakma the bloke, and cloy his cole'", silence the man, and steal his money' (but orig. English); 1881, The New York Slang Dict.; 1889, B & L; in C. 20, current in Australia (Baker, 1942). Origin obscure; but I think that dakma comes ex Hindustani dekhna, 'to look'—via the idea of an eloquent glance of warning, to ensure silence.

dal is a rare variant (? a Cockney pron.) of dell. Anon., The Song of the Beggar, 1620, 'My daintie Dals, my Doxis'.

damber, n. A rascal: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley ('a villain'); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; prob. † by 1800, if not indeed by 1760 or so. Origin? Cf. dimber.

damber, adj. A ghost word: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, 'First'.

damber cove. 'The head man', says Matsell: an error.

Damn Rotten Grub is a tramps' name for the D. & R. G.—the Denver and Rio Grande Railroad: C. 20: 1931, Stiff; 1931, IA.

damp powder. 'One who tells loud and unconvincing tales', George Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. They misfire. Cf. S.E. damp squib and:—2. A false alarm: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys; ob.

damper, a snack or a light luncheon: s. not c. (Grose).—2. A till, 1848, Chaplain's Twenty-Fifth Report of the Preston House of Correction, 'Draw a damper . . . take a money-drawer': 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed., 'To rob a till . . . draw a damper'; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1872, E. Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York ('a safe'); 1886, Wm Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Damper. A money-drawer': 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Feb. 6, 1926, Flynn's; 1927, Kane; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1931, Stiff, 'Cash till or cash register'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube; 1934, Convict; 1938, Francis Chester; and frequently since. It puts a damper on the ordinary thief's hopes—or is supposed to do so!

damper-drawing, n. Till-robbing: 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (glossary); slightly ob. See damper, 2, and draw, v., 1.

damper-getter. 'Thief who robs money-drawers' (tills), No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; extant. See dampner, 2, and, for the form, cf. toy-getter.

dampner pad. A bank pass-book; a cheque-book: commercial underworld: since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. Cf. dampner, 2.

dampner sneak. 'The dampner sneak is . . . a bond robber, but confines his depredations to brokers' offices,' James D. McCabe, New York by Sunlight and Gaslight, 1882; earlier in E. Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York, 1872; ob. See dampner, 2.

dan. Dynamite: 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, where the author implies that it had been in use for twenty years or more; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, IA; extant. By perversion of the first three letters (dyn) of 'dynamite'.

Dan O'Leary; or simply O'Leary. To walk: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman, 'So we O'Leary into Buffalo', and in the glossary to his article, the term in full. Presumably ex the name of a famous walker—or a famous tramp.

danan, 'stairs' (Matsell, 1859): an error.

dance, n. 'Dance, n. Stairs. "Up the dance": 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1887, Baumann; 1891, F & H; by 1930, †. Ex dancers, q.v.

dance, v. See the next entry and dance at the sheriff's ball and dance the Paddington frisk. 'But it is not sweet with nimble feet | To dance upon the air' (Oscar Wilde).—2. See dancing, in which it is implied.

dance at his death!, may he. May he be hanged!: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1910. Cf. dance the Paddington frisk.

dance at the sheriff's ball. See sheriff's ball.

dance floor. See dance programme.

dance(-)hall. Pre-execution chamber in which the condemned man spends his last few hours: 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; 1929, Givens ('death house'); Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest; Dec. 1930, Burke, 'I'm layin' in the dance-hall when he sends me a lifeboat'; 1931, IA; 1932, Lewis E. Lawes, 20,000 Years in Sing Sing; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1935, Amos O. Squire, 'The corridor upon which the pre-execution cells open'; 1935, Hargan, 'The anteroom to the electrocution chamber'; 1936, Charles F. Coe, G-Man; 1938, Castle; extant. Because so near to, because leading to, the place 'where the condemned "dance on empty air" at the end of a rope, or are contorted when the electricity is turned on through the chair' (Godfrey Irwin).

dance-master. See dance programme.

dance programme. 'Records of the condemned man are kept in a little red notebook by the hangman The prisoners call it the "dance programme". They call the hanging room the "dance hall", and the gallows the "dance floor". The hangman is the "dance master"; Castle, 1938: mostly convicts' and, properly, at penitentiaries where men are hanged, not gassed nor electrocuted, esp. at San Quentin: 'dance programme'—'hall'—'floor'—'master', all since the 1920's. (For 'dance hall', see separate entry.) For the semantics, cf. dance, v.

dance the Paddington frisk. See Paddington frisk . . .

dance the stairs. 'Immediately afterwards he danced the stairs . . . went upstairs,' Brown, 1931; 1933, Charles E. Leach; 1937, David Hume (see sense 2); extant. Suggested by dancers.—2. 'Men who break into flats and offices are "dancing the stairs" and the same phrase is used to mean a speedily executed job,' David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937; earlier in, e.g., Axel Bracey, School for Scoundrels, 1934; 1945, Jack Henry, What Price Crime?; extant.

dance upon nothing, 'to be hanged', may orig. have been c. before, ca. 1810, it > s.; but I suspect that it was, at first, journalistic s. Cf. dance at the sheriff's ball: q.v. at sheriff's ball.

dancer. See dancers.—2. (Usually in pl.) 'Dancers. Shooting stars': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; ob. Prob., by sense perversion, ex S.E. the (Merry) Dancers, the Aurora Borealis.—3. (Mostly pl.) 'Dancers . . . fellows who do not remain long in one place': 1859. Matsell; † by 1920. Cf. S.E. dance with rage and fidget with impatience.—4. See dancing master.—5. One who dies by hanging: U.S.A.: C. 20. Howard N. Rose, 1934; et al. Cf. dance upon nothing.—6. 'One who steals from blocks of offices by walking upstairs and into any unattended office; see Office Lark,' Black, 1943; since at least as early as 1930. Cf. dancing and dancers, 1.

dancers. Stairs: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue (glossary); 'Track up the Dancers . . . Go up the stairs'; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1785, Grose; 1809, Geo. Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1828, P. Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry and Logic, "'Stow the chaunt!" says Tommy, "I thinks as how I hears a bit of a scummage below the dancers"'; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1859, H; Oct., 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, of area steps; 1886, W. Newton; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1891, F & H; 1896, A. Morrison, Adventures of Martin Hewitt (dancer: a single tread); 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant.

dancing, vbl n. 'Sneaking up stairs to commit a larceny': 1859, Matsell; in C. 20, also British, as in Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932, 'Dancing = daylight housebreaking'. Cf. dancers.

dancing master. 'Dancer, or Dancing-master, a thief who prowls about the roofs of houses, and effects an entrance by attic windows, etc. Called also a Garreter': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (only dancer); 1889, B & L (both); 1891, F & H (both); ob. Cf. dancer, 6, and dance the stairs.

dandy. A counterfeit 'gold' coin; pl. dandys or dandies; generic, the dandy or dandies: 1883, James Greenwood, Tag, Rag & Co., ch. III, 'It is not in paltry pewter "sours" with which'—for 'with which' read 'that'—'the young woman has dealings, but in "dandys", which, rendered into intelligible English, means imitation gold coin—half sovereigns and whole ones . . . The spurious coin is well made, and its composition includes a portion of gold'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. It looks well; but, like the majority of dandies, it doesn't amount to much.

dandy master. A dealer in counterfeit gold coins: esp. one who employs agents for its distribution; 1883, J. Greenwood, Tag, Rag & Co., 'Public-houses known to the "dandy master"': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. See dandy.

danger(-)signal. A policeman: ca. 1870–1905.

C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 320), 'A policeman A fly, Jack, B.D., slop; crusher, peeler, body-snatcher, raw lobster, tin ribs, stalk, danger signal, terror, etc.'

dangle in the sheriff's picture frame!, I shall see you. 'I shall see you hanging on the gallows' (Grose, 1785): an underworld c.p. of ca. 1760-1830.

dangler, 'one who follows women in general, without any particular attachment' (Grose, 1785), is s., not c.—2. 'Danglers. A bunch of seals': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; extant. They dangle from the waistcoat or from a belt.—3. A 'white-slaver', a procurer—esp. for the white-slave traffic: ca. 1890-1920. IA, 1931, 'Possibly since these creatures dangle various rewards and inducements before their victims'; cf. sense 1.—4. A watch-fob, an ear-ring, a pendant: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant. Ex 2.—5. 'A freight train is a "rattler". An express train a "dangler"', J. K. Ferrier, 'Crime in the United States', in his Crooks and Crime, 1928; 1929, Jack Callahan; 1933, Ersine; extant. He who rides it has to hang on as best he can; moreover, the train loiters along.—6. 'A "rambler" riding the "rods" or [the] brake beams, in both of which cases he more or less dangles from his perch,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: U.S. tramps': since ca. 1910.—7. A male exhibitionist: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. Irwin, 1931; BVB, 1942. He 'exposes the person'—i.e., his danglers (low s. for testicles).—8. A beggar: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. Flynn's, Jan. 13, 1934, article by Jack Callahan, 'A dinger . . . was . . . a beggar. They also were known as plingers, moochers and danglers'; ob.

danna. 'Human, or other excrement': 1797, implied in dunnaken; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; ob. Prob. a disguising of dung; perhaps cf. Shelta kuna.

danna(-)drag; gen. pronounced dunnick drag. A nightman's cart: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see quot'n at knap a jacob from a danna-drag); 1860, H, 2nd ed., 'A nightman's or dustman's cart'; ob. See prec. † drag, n., 3.

danna-ken may have existed; but, in any case, dunnaken is the usual form.

Danny Tucker (occ., Rucker). Butter: principally, the Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B., 1944. Rhyming imperfectly, as so often.

dap. To pick up illicitly, to steal (esp. luggage): C. 20. Partridge, 1937. Perhaps a corruption of do up in its slovenly form dup.

dapper. 'Well made, "The crack"—burglary—"was dapper"': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; ob. Ex S.E. dapper, neatly or smartly dressed.

darb, n. Money; loot in cash: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1928, M. Sharpe, Chicago May; extant. Ex darby, n., 2.—2. Always the darb: the 'very thing', 'the tops'; first-class: 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, "'Pink starts to bang the box"—play the piano—" . . . and one of the head fellows . . . said Pink's playing was the darb—jest the local-color touch they needed"''; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; by 1930, low s. Leverage, 1925, darb, adj., 'fine; good': only doubtfully distinguishable from darb in the darb. Cf. darby, adj.: but prob. ex Ger. darb, 'massive'; cf. the literal and s. senses of Ger. kolossal.—3. Hence, a dandy: Oct. 11, 1930, D.O.U.

Flynn's, Paul Annixter, 'He was well in with the North Side's tony set. He was what was known as a darb, in the argot of the mob'; extant.

darb, v. To treat well, nicely: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex darb, n., 2.

darb, adj. See darb, n., 2.

darbey. See darby, 3.

darbies. See darby.

darble, 'devil', was never c., despite B & L's classification. Ex Fr. diable.

darby, n. In pl., 'Irons, shackles or Fetters' (B.E.): 1665, Head; 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, 'But when that we come to the Whitt | Our Darbies to behold'; 1698, B.E.; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1724, Harper (see quot'n at chive, v.); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1753, John Poulter; 1782, Messink; 1784, Sessions Papers; Grose, 3rd ed. (1796); 1809, Andrewes; 1821, D. Haggart, 'Irons for the legs'; 1823, Egan's 'Grose', where it is still classified as c.—but it had certainly > s. by 1840; perhaps was by 1830. In the U.S.A., however, it still is almost c.: witness Ersine, 1933. Ex S.E. Father Darby's (or Derby's) bands, a rigid bond affecting a money-lender's debtor, itself perhaps ex a notorious C. 16 money-lender. Whence:—2. (Ready) money: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (see quot'n at cole); ibid., 'The Ready, the Darby', the being gen. prefixed; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The Call tipp'd us the Darby'; The Fellow gave us all his ready Money'; 1785, Grose; 1796, Grose, 3rd ed., 'Derbies. To come down with the derbies; to pay the money'; 1809, Andrewes; July 1817, Sessions Papers (counterfeit coins); 1848, Sinks of London; by 1860, low s. and ob., except in the U.S.A. (Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; Leverage, 1925; Jack Callahan, 1929).—3. A haul of stolen property: March 1863, a thief's intercepted letter, quoted by Ware thus, 'All the "lads" expect to make a good "darbey"'. Old Bill Clark expects about 24 reddings, and old Tom and Joe expect twice as many.' Prob. ex sense 2.

darby, adj. (Very) good; fine: 1925, Leverage; 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex darb, n., 2.

darby cove. A blacksmith: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). See darby, n., 1, and cove.

darby crib. See darby ken.

Darby Fair. 'Removing day at Newgate' (Potter, 1797), i.e. execution day, when the male-factors, shackled, left the prison for the gallows: app. ca. 1770-1850; it occurs also in H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin, 1841. With a pun on Derby Fair and darby, 1.

Darby Kelly. See Derby Kelly.

darby ken; darby crib. A blacksmith's shop: 1848, The Ladies' Repository, 'The Flash Language' (both); † by 1937 (Irwin). Lit., an irons place (or room or house).

darby roll. "'The Darby-roll"—discharged felons, who have long worn the darbies, fancying they are still fettered, acquire a roll in their gait—not easily overcome': 1823, Bee; † by 1891 (F & H). darby's dyke. The grave; hence, death: 1891, F & H, who say that it is 'old':? ca. 1820-80. Prob. suggested by Darby Fair, q.v.

darby's fair. 'Darbies Fair—the day when people are removed to Newgate for trial': 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London (Darby's fair); † by 1891 (F & H). For a different form and definition, see Darby Fair.

dard, 'penis', is not c. but obsolete venery.

dark. A dark cell: prison c. and prison-officers' s.: since ca. 1840: 1862, A Prison Matron, Female Life in Prison, I, 53; by 1875 (Arthur Griffiths, Memorials of Millbank) it was no longer c.—2. Hence, imprisonment in a dark cell; esp. get the dark: since ca. 1840: 1866, A Prison Matron, Prison Characters; by 1875, no longer c.

dark!, keep it. Orig. (ca. 1850–65) a thieves' c.p. ('Keep it a secret!'): witness 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857.

dark cully. 'A marry'd Man, who keeps a Mistress, and creeps to her in the Night, for fear of Discovery,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; by 1859, current in New York—witness Matsell's Vocabulum; by 1889 (B & L) it was †. See cully.

dark glim is not c., though glim, lantern, is a c. term. John Poulter, 1753.

dark lantern. A dishonest police officer that takes bribes from thieves to let them escape: 1845, The National Police Gazette; † by 1900. He turns his lantern away from the thief.

dark lurk, the. 'The woman loiters late at night, in a quiet neighbourhood, her aim being to lead any foolish fellow to where the man is lurking, who sets on him unawares and half stuns him with a blow on the head. Thus the two bully and frighten him out of his money, the man most often laying claim to the woman as his wife, and perhaps making a pretence to strike her as well': 1888, James Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; ob. Lit., a dodge (lurk) worked at night.

dark man, darke mans, dark mans, and darke-mans. See darkmans. (Harman, 1566.)

dark moon. 'There was a "dark moon", a phrase which means no moon at all': 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story; slightly ob. By the semantic process of lucus a non lucendo.

darkee; darkey. See darky.

darkened shades. An allusive phrase, applied to one who is 'on the spot': 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; but to me it 'shouts' journalism, not underworld.

darkman, n. See darkmans, ref. of 1707.—2. A watchman: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies considered; † by 1820.

darkman, adj. Dark, as of night: 1536, Copland, 'The darkman cace'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; app. † by 1780. Despite the evidence of the dates, prob. ex:—

darkmans. 'The darkemans, the nyght,' Harman, 1566; ibid., 'The laste dark mans . . . the last night'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, spells it darkemans, as does Rowlands in 1610 (Martin Mark-All); 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'Bingd a waste in a darkmans, stole away from me in the night time'; 1641, R. Brome, A Joviall Crew, 'And couch a Hogs-head, till the dark man's past', this s-less form being very rare and, here, perhaps caused by the wish to avoid the awkwardness of darkmans's; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Bien Darkmans then, Bouse, Mort and Ken' and, in the glossary, 'Darkmans . . . Night and evening' (so too Coles, 1676); 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (darkman); 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1734, C. Johnson (erroneously darkman's); 1741 (see darkum); 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1837, B. Disraeli, Venetia; 1848, Sinks of London; 1860, H, 2nd; by 1890, †. I.e., dark, 'black' + -mans, q.v.—2. Hence, a dark lantern: 1823, Bee; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; app. † by 1890.

darkmans, child of. See child of darkmans.

darkmans budge. 'Darkmans-Budge, c. a House-creeper, one that slides into a House in the dusk, to let in more Rogues to rob,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The Sixty-first Order of Rogues'; 1785, Grose, paraphrasing B.E.; by 1830—prob. by 1800—it was †. See darkmans and budge, n., 1.

darks, 'night; twilight', is given by F & H (1891), as a synonym of darkmans and darky: but on what authority?

darkum, a night, is almost certainly a misprint for darkman (see darkmans) in Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'To Six Pence a Night, Its a Sice a Darkum'.

darky or darkey. 'Last Darkey, that is the last Night': 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; ibid., 'At Darky . . . at Night'; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; 1792, The Minor Jockey Club; 1801, Colonel George Hanger; 1812, J. H. Vaux; ca. 1816, The Night Before Larry was Stretched; 1821, D. Haggart; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1887, Baumann; † by 1891 (F & H). Cf. darkman.—2. (Ex sense 1.) Twilight: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society (as darkey); 1821, D. Haggart ('darkening'); 1859, H; 1889, B & L; † by 1920.—3. A dark lantern: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum (as darkee); 1812, Vaux; 1838, Dickens; 1840, Sessions Papers; 1841, Tait's Magazine; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1857, Snowden; by 1859, U.S.A. (Matsell); 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; † by 1891 (F & H).—4. A city: 1824, P. Egan (see monkery); 1827, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, III, trial of John Hutchinson, app. of a city street, 'She . . . took two females to the public-house at the corner of the darkey'; † by 1890.—5. A beggar that pretends to be blind: 1862, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV, 432; ob.

darky, adj. Cloudy: U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; app. † by 1900. Cf. dark moon.

dart. An illicit or criminal plan or scheme or trick: Australian bushrangers' and duffers': since ca. 1850. In, e.g., Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery Under Arms, serialized in The Sydney Mail, 1881. By 1920, at latest, it was low s. and by 1945 general s. in Australia (Baker, 1942). Something as keen or as swift as a well-thrown dart?

dasher. One of 'the swell mob': 1849, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, V, ch. lxxvi, † by 1890. A special application of the s. dasher, 'a dashing fellow (or girl)'.

date, 'an appointment, a rendezvous': has prob. been always s.; No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, claimed it as c. in the former nuance.

date back to, 'to remember'—as in 'I can date back to the introduction of motor-cars'—may, orig., have been c., although I strongly doubt it. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.) Ex 'Such or such a thing dates back to (say) 1860'.

daub, n. See sense 2 of the v.—2. A ribbon: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; app. † by 1910. Ex dobbin.—3. 'Color compound for marking cards,' Rose, 1934: U.S. card-sharpers': C. 20.

daub, v. To bribe: 1698, B.E. implies it (see daubing); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (see quot'n at gybe, v.); 1785, Grose, 'The cull was scragged because he could not daub, the rogue was hanged because he could not bribe'; by 1859, American (Matsell's Vocabulum); by 1890, † in Britain. Cf. S.E. palm-oil.—2. Hence, n.: 1725, A Canting Dict., 'Daub, a Bribe; a Reward for secret service'; by 1890, †.

dauber. 'A painter who does quick jobs for automobile thieves, changing the appearance of the car so that it can be held in safety until such time as it may be sold,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1920.

daubing. Bribing, bribery: 1698, B.E. (dawbing); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1820. Daubing with 'palm oil'.

davy, 'an affidavit': s., not c.—not even in U.S.A. 'Now seldom heard except among the older tramps,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

Davy's dust. Gunpowder: 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, 'The House-Breaker's Song' in Pickwick Abroad, 'Let Davy's-dust and a well-fak'd claw / For fancy coves be the only law'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; † by 1900. Prob. ex Davy's lamp: that lamp being a protection against explosive gases.

dawb; dawbing. See daub and daubing.

day door. Not c. but j. (unrecorded in the dictionaries): see sneak door.

day man. 'A thief who works during the day exclusively,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Euphemistic.

day sneak, the. 'With them I agreed to go upon the Day Sneak; we used to watch our Opportunities when People's Doors were open to slip in, and bring off any Thing we could meet with': 1742, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. II; ob. Cf. morning sneak, q.v.

daybreak (or D-) boy, 'a member of a gang of young New York City river thieves', is not c. but s. See, e.g., Darkness and Daylight, 1891.

daylight. A sneak thief that operates in daylight: 1881, The Man Traps of New York, p. 19; app. † by 1930.—2. The state of being out of—released from—prison: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant.

daylights, eyes, is s.—prob. low at first—not c. Grose, 1785.

deacon, n. That member of a gang who keeps guard at a side door: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex a church deacon's position by the door.

dead. See have a man dead.—2. 'A "dead" criminal is either discouraged or reformed,' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; ibid., p. 387, "'Dead" means that he [the tramp] has left the fraternity and is trying to live respectably'; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, 'The Dead Ones are the inhabitants of the Under World who have "squared it"'; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, "'Dead" (out of the game)'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. So far as the underworld is concerned, he is dead.—3. Quiet; silent: U.S.A.: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, a murderer's 'pal' to the murderer, "'I can keep as dead about that as you can"'; ob. Cf. sense 2; perhaps short for dead quiet.—4. Stupid; not alert; slow: U.S.A.: 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers That Prey, 'Some [railroad detectives] are "dead" and can do nothing more profitable than ride on their passes; others are half "dead" and are equal to but little more than arresting tramps and train-jumpers; and others are very much "alive" [to their own interests]'; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'As a rule, when the city copper ain't a dead one he's a crooked one'; ibid., Glossary, 'The antithesis of "wise"'; 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, "'Dead", or ignorant'; 1924, implied in dead one, 1; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'The opposite of "wise"'; extant.—5. (Of a house, a flat, etc.) unoccupied: 1879 (see dead 'un); 1932, Arthur Gardner; 1934, David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1938, F. A. Stanley, A Happy Fortnight; extant. Cf. dead lurk.—6. Short for dead easy: since ca. 1920, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936.

dead bang rap. 'If he—the criminal—"figures they have the evidence on him he says it is a dead bang rap, or that he was caught bang to rights," Convict, 1934; Nov. 26, 1938, Flynn's; extant.

dead-beat, 'an utterly worthless fellow' (Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs, 1872), may orig. have been c., but I doubt it.

dead-book. To hang: 1821, P. Egan (see quot'n at whack, n., 2); app. † by 1900. Lit., to book (persons) for death, or to put the person's name in the dead book, the death book.

dead-broke, 'penniless', was never c.—despite Geo. P. Burnham.

dead cargo. 'A term . . . used by Rogues, when they are disappointed in the Value of their Booty,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1889, B & L; by 1910, it was †. Ex the nautical sense ('a very light cargo'); cf. cargo, q.v.

dead chance. See chance, reference of 1742.

dead(-)copper. An informer to the police: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1945. Cf. copper-hearted. Although not a policeman, he causes men to be 'copped'.

dead eye. A wall; the outside of a house or garden wall: 1863, The Story of a Lancashire Thief; extant. Cf. walls have ears (proverbial).

dead-fall. A saloon, brothel, boarding-house 'in which drunken sailors might be lured and robbed': 1891, J. C. Powell, American Siberia; ob. A special application of the s. sense, 'a low saloon, a gambling dive'. Perhaps with allusion to S.E. landfall.

dead game. 'A term used by gamblers when they have a certainty of winning'; 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. I.e., as certain as death.

dead-head or deadhead. Any empty freight train or car (coach or truck or van): mostly tramps: since ca. 1910. Ersine. No paying goods.

dead-head, v.; usually as vbl n., dead-heading. To ride on a train without paying the fare: 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1930, if not indeed a lustrum or even a decade earlier, it was s.—esp. railroad s. Ex the s. dead head, 'one who gets into a theatre free'.

dead(-)house. 'A low drinking dive,' Leverage, 1925; ob.

dead kite. A cheque that cannot be cashed: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941. Cf. live kite.

dead letter. An unclaimed corpse: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Ex Post Office phraseology.

dead-lock, n. and v. (To place in) a lock-up or a cell: 1933, Ersine; extant.

dead lurk, n. 'The art—and practice—of entering dwelling-houses during divine service': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1859, H; 1869, J. Greenwood; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1925, Leverage, who (U.S.A.) defines it as, simply, burglary; extant. See lurk, n.; the houses are then 'dead quiet', for they are empty—or empty except for the servants (down in the basement). Cf. dead set.

dead-lurk, v. Henley, Villon's Straight Tip, 1887, 'Dead-lurk a crib, or do a crack', glossed by Farmer in Musa Pedestris, 1896, as a 'house-break in church time'; extant. Ex the n.

dead lurker. "'Dead Lurkers", or those who steal coats and umbrellas from passages at dusk, or on Sunday afternoons': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25; extant. Ex dead lurk, n.

dead-man's lurk. See deadman's lurk.

dead man's shirt. A 'shirt given to prisoner upon discharge,' Rose, 1934: convicts': since ca. 1920.

dead men, 'loaves falsely charged to their master's customers' (Grose 1785) is journeymen bakers' s., not c.

dead nail. See nail, n., 1. Dead, because he seems so little alive; he is not suspected of being a wide-awake cheat or swindler.

dead nap. A cheat, a swindler; an utter rogue: provincial: 1889, B & L; ob. He naps or takes one in; the intensive dead.

dead one. A stupid person: 1901 (see dead, 4); 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Person who is . . . incompetent'; extant. Cf. dead, adj., 4.—2. A reformed criminal: 1901 (see dead, 2); 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1904, Life in Sing Sing (by implication); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A reformed criminal; a former tramp'; extant. He has become dead to crime; hence, useless to criminals: see dead, adj., 2.—3. (Esp. in give a dead one.) A piece of false or misleading information: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, a double-crossing stool-pigeon loq., 'Sure, I give him'—a police officer—'a dead one now an' then, just be way of puttin' in a prop for myself' (with his non-police companions); slightly ob.—4. (Perhaps ex sense 1.) A penniless person: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Stiff, 'A hobo who has just spent all his money'; extant.—5. 'A drunken hobo,' Stiff, 1931; tramps': since ca. 1910.—6. 'One who refuses to accede to a plan or who is of no use in an enterprise,' Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1910.—7. One who (habitually) refuses alms: British tramps': 1933, Joseph Augustin, The Human Vagabond; extant. Cf. sense 2.

dead open-and-shut. Applied to 'a pretty sure thing; a clear fact'; esp. of a case, a charge against a person: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1900, s. A case one can open safely and close finally; dead is intensive.

dead picker. A robber of drunk men: 1931, Stiff, 'He kicks him first to see if he is dead to the world and then robs him'; extant, esp. of a prostitute that does this—as in BVB, 1942. Cf. dead one, 5; he picks on those who are as good as dead.

dead pipe. 'An easy thing,' Leverage, 1925—e.g., a crime easy to commit: since ca. 1915; by 1930, s. As easy as pipe-smoking.

dead plant. An imposition whereby an inferior horse or an inferior article is exchanged for a better one or is sold as being of high quality: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'The Rider . . . who now is set upon by two thieves . . .', and a dead plant is made upon him'; † by 1930. For dead, cf. the phrase dead set, q.v.; plant = placing.

dead rabbit. See rabbit.

dead-right, adj. With definite proof: since ca. 1925. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. Ex dead to rights.

dead-room chisel(l)ers. 'Professional singers at funerals and hangings,' Howard N. Rose, 1934; extant. See chiseller; dead-room = morgue, etc.

dead rough-up. A rough-and-ready theft by a (lone) pickpocket: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1945. Here dead = utter; rough-up, ex the summary lack of finesse.

dead set. See set, a dead.

dead sneak, the. See on the dead sneak.

dead soldier. 'An empty whiskey bottle lying beside the road,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910. Cf. the English dead marine, 'an empty liquor-bottle'.

dead steal. An easy theft, esp. of an automobile: car-stealers': June 13, 1931, Flynn's, Thomas Thursday, 'A Dead Steal'; extant. Cf. dead pipe.

dead swag. '[Booty] not worth so much as it was thought to be; things stolen that are not easily disposed of': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum—but prob. it was orig. English; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; slightly ob. See swag, n., 3, and cf. dead cargo.

dead to rights. See rights, to.

dead tumble. A strong suspicion; an alarm: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, 'After giving the "All right", "stop work", and "dead tumble" signals' (cf. pp. 354, 456); extant. The opposite of tumble, n.

dead un (or 'un). 'Me and the screwsmen went to Gravesend, and I found a dead 'un (uninhabited house)': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1896, Arthur Morrison; 1937, J. J. Connington, A Minor Operation; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; extant. Cf. dead lurk.—2. A half quartern loaf: 1889, B & L; by 1900, low s. It contains hardly enough to keep one alive.

dead up to, be. A U.S. phrase (— 1794), as in Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807, 'I'm dead up to the cove . . . I know the man well'; † by 1900. I.e., right up to = level with = equal to = aware of his character, and of his tricks.

dead voice, the. Concerted shouting of convicts in remonstrance or indignation: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne, '[The food] was found too bad even for cons; they could not stomach it, and they started the "dead voice"'; app. † by 1940.

dead(-)wood. Evidence sufficient for conviction: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, "'You've got the 'dead wood' on me, Colonel", said Bill, despondingly. "I know it, and I knock under"'; ob. by 1910; † by 1930.

deadly nevergreen; often deadly nevergreen, that bears fruit all the year round. The gallows: ca. 1770–1840. Possibly c. but more prob. s. (Grose, 1785.) With a pun on evergreen and on allusion to deadly nightshade.

deadman's lurk, the. 'A crafty scheme laid by swindlers to extort money from the relatives of a deceased person': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. See lurk, n.

deaf and dumb lurk, the. Feigning to be deaf and dumb in order to excite compassion—and alms: 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; extant. See lurk.

deafy. A deaf beggar: beggars': late C. 19-20. In, e.g., Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941.

deal. 'Usually a thousand-dollar sale with sufficient cash collected to pay the commission. Also a contract to sell an issue of stock,' Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering, 1931 (the reference being to worthless bonds): commercial underworld: since ca. 1910.—2. A successful crime: British: since ca. 1925. Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938, 'A thief would say after pulling off a job: "I had a deal last night"': extant. Either ex business j. or ex card-playing.

deal a phoney hand. See phoney hand.

dealer. 'Wholesaler of bogus currency,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom: commercial underworld: C. 20; extant. Euphemistic: cf. buyer.—2. A trafficker in narcotics: the drug traffic: since ca. 1925. BVB. Cf. broker.

dealer, general. 'A species of fence very common in the City, which sprung up with the necessities of the war'—Napoleonic Wars; 'They buy, at quarter-cost, goods of multifarious kinds—no matter how obtained': 1823, Jon Bee. Either c. of ca. 1812-40 or, more prob., a satirical fling at general dealers properly so called.

dealer in queer. See queer, dealer in.

deaner, dener, dena, denar. 'Deaner—a shilling, (country phrase)': 1839, Brandon, who errs in making it, even predominantly, a rural term; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, "'No, I'll give you a deuce o' deeners (two shillings)'"'; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed. (deaner); 1859, H (id.); Aug. 14, 1865, Sessions Papers (as denes: ? dener); 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct. (id.); 1886, W. Newton (id.); 1888, G. R. Sims; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers; by 1910, pitchmen's and cheapjacks' s.—Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934 (in form denar). Perhaps ex Yiddish dinoh, 'a coin'.

deano. The mouth: 1935, The Garda Review; extant.

deanseaville is B & L's error for deuseaville.

deasyville is another error for the same: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue.

death drop. Butyl chloride: C. 20. Partridge, 1937. A very powerful drug: sometimes administered as a 'knock-out'.

debutramp. A débutante: mostly convicts': 1935, Hargan; ob. By perversion.

deck, n. As a pack of cards, it may orig. have been c.: by 1850, U.S.A., it being recorded in 1853 in Paxton (see the D.A.E.): but prob. it had, by ca. 1880, > card-players' s. everywhere. It was, orig., not American, but English: Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, Jan. 1787, Trial of Thos Smith, p. 245, 'Did you know the prisoner?—I never saw him till the Sunday night he came to enquire after my husband; he said, he wanted to borrow a deck of cards, and I said, two or three times, a deck of cards! you mean a pack of cards.' Ex a ship's deck, no doubt: but precisely why?—2. 'I am on top of the train—on the "decks", as the tramps call it,' Jack London, The Road, 1907: U.S.A.: prob. since the early 1890's.—1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; extant. The D.A.E. classifies it as Standard American: the plural certainly is, at best, s., and the singular (cited for 1853) must orig. have been at least coll. Cf. a boat-deck.—3. A (small) packet—a thin paper fold—of some drug: U.S.A., mostly drug addicts': app. since ca. 1899, to judge by Anon., 'When Crime ruled the Bowery' (p. 162), in Flynn's, March 23, 1929; 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle (where it is small); 1925, Leverage (where large); July 9, 1927, Flynn's; May 31, 1930, Flynn's; 1930, C. R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1933, Cecil de Lenoir; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Louis Berg; 1934, Convict; Oct. 9, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; extant. Ex its resemblance to a tiny pack of very thin cards.—4. 'The paper or other article used to cover a theft,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.; extant. Ex sense 1 or 3.

deck, v. To see; look at: 1859, Matsell (see gage, 4); † by 1910. Ex British Army dekko, 'a glance, a look'.—2. Deck her (later, deck 'em), to sit on the top of a train and, holding on to, e.g., a ventilator, to travel free: tramps': 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'This process . . . is by them called decking her'; ibid., "'As soon as youse two nail a blind, deck her'"; 1922, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life; 1925, Glen H. Mullin; 1931, Stiff, 'Deck 'em—To ride the top of a passenger train'; 1931, Irwin; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 'You'll have . . . to deck it'; extant. See deck, n., 2; for her, cf. holding her down.—3. To screen, with a newspaper, a theft as it is being effected: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. deck, n., 4, which prob. constitutes the immediate origin.—4. See decked.—5. To open (a safe) by drilling through the top: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; slightly ob.

deck, on the. Without shelter for the night: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; extant. Exposed to the weather, as on the open deck of a ship.

deck address. A secret address: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. deck, n., 4, and v., 3.

deck 'em. See deck, v., 2.

deck hand. 'Deckhand.—A domestic, one who does the ordinary work about a house,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1933, Eagle; extant. Introduced by 'sea stiffs': deck hands scrub the decks, polish the brass-work, etc., etc.

deck her, v.; decking her. See deck, v., 2.

deck off. See dek off.

decked. 'Guarded by a watchman above stairs,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex:—

decker. A watchman posted upstairs: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. decked. As if on the upper deck of a ship.—2. 'A thief who covers the action of his pal,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex deck, v., 3.

decking is the art defined at deck, v., 5, and decking her that described at deck, v., 2.

decko. Watch, guard; keep decko, to act as look-out: since ca. 1925. Ersine. Ex English s. dekko, 'a glance or look'.

decko, v. To peek, glance, look: since ca. 1925. Ersine. Cf. prec. entry.

declare oneself in. 'To obtain an interest by force or threat. "I declare meself in on the cleaners' racket"; Burke, 1930: racketeers': Sept. 29, 1934, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant.

decorate the mahogany, 'to buy the drinks at the bar-counter; sit there and drink': s., not c. Stiff, 1931.

decus. A crown piece (5 shillings): 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia; 1698, B.E., 'The Cull tipt me a score of Decuses, c. my Camerade lent me five Pounds'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, George Andrewes; 1836, The Individual, Nov. 8, 'Ve'll melt another decus afore ve mizzles'; by 1889, say B & L, it was †—but it was almost certainly † by 1850. 'From the motto [thereon], Decus et Tutamen' (B & L): well, perhaps.

dee; occ. (? erroneously) die. A pocket-book: 1839, Brandon, who classifies it as gypsy c.; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxix, 'Dee—pocket-book of small size'; 1859, H., 'A pocket book, term used by tramps. Gipsy'; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L (tramps); 1891, F & H; ob. 'Prob. an abbreviation of dummy, which see' (B & L).—2. As 'a detective policeman', it is low s.; perhaps, orig. c.,—see d.—3. In Sessions Papers, July 1861 (p. 342), it is wrongly (?) said to mean 'a shilling'; again in Aug. 1865 (p. 289). In any event, dee, 'a penny', is not c.; it must, however, be admitted that in the Rowe, Evans case (Sessions, pp. 288–290) of Aug. 14, 1865, the evidence twice states that a dee is a shilling ("a b—dee . . ."—that is the slang name for a shilling among coiners') and 'a dee means a bad shilling': and dee, 'a shilling', may be c.

dee dee. A deaf mute, real or pretended: tramps' and beggars': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. I.e., 'deaf and dumb'; see also d and d.

deek, n. A detective: since ca. 1926. Ersine. Perhaps a corruption of 'detective'; but cf. decko.

deek, v. To observe or watch: 1821, implied in deeker; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Deek the Cove. See the fellow; look at him'; † by 1910. Ex Hindustani, via either Romany or British Army s.

deeker. 'A thief kept in pay by a constable': Scottish: 1821, D. Haggart, Life (Glossary), where also occurs the sentence, 'We observed a good many deekers watching the prigs' (pickpockets); † by 1891 (F & H). Ex the preceding.

deem. A variant (Ersine) of:—

deemer. A dime (10 cents): C. 20. Ersine, 1933; Convict, 1934; Rose, 1934 (demier); May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman. By perversion.

deener. See deaner.

deep file, a variant of the next, is either low s. or, at first, c. Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III, 1829.

deep one, 'a thorough-paced rogue', 'a sly criminal', may possibly have been c. of ca. 1790–1830. But deep, 'cunning', is s. of C. 17–20.

deep-sea; deep-sea men or deep-sea fishermen. Card-sharping—card-sharpers—on an ocean-going ship: 1925, Leverage (the first two phrases); 1933, Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld (third: English); 1937, David Hume, Halfway to Horror (the third). They go deep-sea fishing for 'mugs'; they are fishermen—and deep; cf.:—

deep-water gang. 'The different gangs of [White] Slavers who live in New York but work in Europe are known as the "deep water gang",' Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909: white-slave traffic: since ca. 1890. Cf. the preceding entry.

degen. See dagen.

degree. 'A jail-bird is said to have taken his degrees who has inhabited one of those "academies" called starts': 1823, Jon Bee; app. † by 1890. Cf. college and collegian for the general semantic idea.

dehorn. 'Canned heat, smoke [qq.v.]': 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex:—

dehorn, 'to be inimical, or dangerous, to the I.W.W.', and dehorn committee, 'workers picketing saloons and brothels during a strike, to prevent strikers from becoming "drunk and disorderly" and thus courting arrest': these are I.W.W. s. terms, not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

dek off. To look at, regard closely, observe penetratingly: South Africa: late C. 19–20; by 1940, low s. (C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946.) Cf. deck, v., 1; adopted from the numerous Hindu labourers and shopkeepers in the Union.

Dekker's orders of rogues, as set forth in Lan-thorne and Candle-light, 1608–9:—

Rufflers	Roagues
Up-right men	Wilde Roagues
Hookers, alias Anglers	Priggers of Prancers
Paillards	Irish Toyles
Fraters	Swigman
Abraham-men	Jarkmen
Mad Tom alias of	Patricoes
Bedlam	Kinchin-Coes
Whip-Jacks	Glymmerers
Counterfet Crankes	Bawdy-Baskets
Dommerars	Autem Morts
Prigges	Doxies
Swaddlers	Dells
Curtalls	Kinchin-Morts.

Cf. the lists at Awdeley's and Eighteenth-Century.

dekko or decko. Not c., although much used by the underworld. Introduced into Britain by regular soldiers from India. See my A Dictionary of Slang, 3rd ed., 1949.

del is an occ. C. 16–early 17 form of dell. (Harman, 1566.)

delicate. A subscription book (esp. one headed by the names of fictitious but app. generous donors), carried by professional vagrants, chiefly 'lurkers': 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; 1864, H., 3rd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1893, No. 747; † by 1930. It is a delicate business; cf.:—2. A begging letter: since ca. 1840: † by 1930. No. 747, 1893.

delivered dodge, the. A trick by which one orders goods, has them delivered, and insists on keeping them on the ground that they are now one's own property and with the assurance that one will call at the shop and pay for them (as, of course, one does not): 1889, B & L; † by 1920.

dell. A girl that, in the underworld, is still a virgin: 1536, Copland (see quot'n at make, n.); 1566, Harman, 'A Dell is a yonge wenche, able for generation, and not yet knowen or broken by the upright man. These go abroad yong, eyther by the death of their parentes, and no bodye to looke unto them, or els by some sharpe mystres that they serve, do runne away out of service; eyther she is naturally borne one, and then she is a wyld Dell: these are broken verve yonge; when they have beene lyen with all by the upright man, then they be Doxes, and no Dels. These wylde dels, beinge traded up with their monstrous mothers, must of necessity be as evill, or worse, then their parents, for neither we gather grapes from greene bryars, neither fygs from Thystels. But such buds, such blossoms, such evyll sede sowen, wel worse beinge growen'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; 1620, dal, q.v.; 1665, R. Head; 1676, Coles, 'Dell, Doxy, c. a Wench'; 1688, Holme, 'Dells, Trulls, dirty Drabs'; 1698, B.E., makes dells the 26th Order of Canters; 1725, A Canting Dict., 'Also a common Strumpet'; 1785, Grose,—but prob. † by 1760.—2. Hence, 'a common strumpet' (B.E., 1698): see sense 1, references of 1676, 1688, 1725, 1785; prob. † by 1800. Its etymology is obscure, and The O.E.D. essays none. 'In Old Dutch slang dil, del, and dille also mean a girl. Dielken, filie de joie (Derenbourg) . . . In German Hebrew [i.e., Yiddish], dilla means a maiden' (B & L).

delle is a rare variant of dell (Grose, at crew).

dels nam o' the barracks (the 'old man—i.e., the master—of the house'), is not c. but obsolete back-s.

demandor for, or of, glimmer. 'These Demaunders for glymmer be for the moste parte women; for glymmar, in their language, is fyre. These goe with fayned lycences and counterfayted wrytings, having the hands and seales of suche gentlemen as dwelleth nere to the place where they fayne them selves to have bene burnt, and their goods consumed with fyre. They wyll most lamentable demaunde your charitie, and wyll quicklie shed saltē teares, they be so tender harted. They wyll never begge in that Shiere where their losses (as they say) was. Some of these goe with slates at their backes, which is a sheete, to lye in a nightes. The upright men be very familiare with these kynde of wemen, and one of them helpes an other'; thus Harman, 1566. In 1608, Dekker (in The Belman of London) draws generously on the by then dead Harman—see the quot'n at glimmering mort; app. † by 1700. See glimmer.

demi-bar. See demy.

demi-doss. A penny sleep; an uncomfortable 'bed' (for a few hours): beggars' and tramps': 1886, The Daily News, Nov. 3 (quoted by F & H, 1891); by 1910, ob.; by 1930, †. Lit., '(only) half a sleep'.

demier is incorrect for deemer, q.v.

demies. See demy.

demon. A Van Diemen's Land convict: Australian: ca. 1820–70. Baker, 1945. Van Diemen's Land is the old name for Tasmania, whither convicts ceased in 1852 to be sent. Compare Derwent duck, 'a Hobart convict' (ex the Derwent River of Tasmania): which, however, sounds like prison officers' and journalistic s., not c.—2. (Usually pl.) A policeman: Australian: since ca. 1880: 1889, B & L, '"The demons put pincher on me", I was apprehended'; 1891, F & H; ob. They are 'the very devil'—from the criminal's point of view.—3. Hence, a detective: New Zealand: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter); by 1935, also Australian; 1941, Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, '"Demons" or plain-clothes detectives'; 1942, Baker; extant.

dempstered, be. To be hanged: ca. 1700–1790: B & L; 1889, 'From "dempster", the executioner, so called because it was his duty to repeat the sentence to the prisoner in open court. This was discontinued in 1773': but was it c.?

demy; gen. pl. A false die: gaming sharks' c. >, by 1800 (witness O.E.D.), jargon: 1552, Gilbert Walker, Diceplay. Also known as a demi-bar, which term may never have been c.

dena or denar. See deaner.

denarli or -y. Also denarlies. See dinarly.

dener, denes. See deaner.

dent. Economic depression; slump: May 23, 1937, The (New York) Sunday News, John Chapman: by 1940, s. A humorous sense-development ex the lit. Standard Am. word.

dep. A prison's deputy-governor, esp. at Dartmoor: C. 20. Partridge, 1937.

deputing, n. Being a servant in a common lodging-house: tramps' and beggars': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob. Ex deputize.

derac(k). See drac.

derbies. See darby, 2.

Derby Kelly. Belly: Pacific Coast (in the main): late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928 (Darby . . .); M & B, 1944. Rhyming; adopted ex Cockney s.

derrey or derry. 'Derrey. An eye-glass': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1920. Prob. ex:—2. An alarm; or rather, a search by the police, a hue-and-cry: Australian: since ca. 1860. Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms, 1881, 'When the "derry" was off he'd take him over himself' and 'When all the derry was over': by 1910 it was low s., as in Baker, 1942. Perhaps ex. s. Derry Down Triangle, nickname for Castlereagh, who, in 1796–98, caused Irish backs to be 'tickled at the halberts' (Bee, 1823).

derrick, n. A shoplifter: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'As a derrick she's got . . . the rest of 'em beat'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1933, Ersine; 1933, Eagle; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant. Cf. booster, hoister, and 'shoplifter' itself for the semantic idea.—2. A casual ward; a workhouse: British, esp. English, tramps': since ca. 1925: Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935 (former nuance); April 22, 1935, Hugh Milner (latter nuance); extant. Ex its forbidding appearance—like that of a derrick, esp. in hangman associations (derrick, v.).

derrick, v. 'To set out on some enterprize': 1797, Humphry Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'The high tober derricks', glossed as 'sets out on an adventure'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1867, Smythe; by 1889 (B & L), it was †. Ex Derrick, the Tyburn executioner.—2. To steal (goods) from a shop: U.S.A.: Nov. 10, 1934, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, 'Caching places for "loads" they derricked'; 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Ex derrick, n., 1.

derry. See derrey.

Derwent duck. See demon, 1.

designer, 'counterfeiter': Maurer, 1941, rightly views it with suspicion.

despatchers or dispatchers. 'Dispatchers. Loaded or false dice': 1811, Lex. Bal. (the latter form); 1823, Egan's Grose, '. . . So contrived as always to throw a nick'; 1856, The Times, Nov. 27 (des-); 1864, H, 3rd ed. (id.); 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1894, J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats, 'These are of two kinds called "high" and "low", according as they have "an aggregate of pips . . . higher or lower than should be the case. They owe their origin to the fact that it is impossible to see more than three sides of a cube at once'; extant.

despatches. See dispatches.

destitute mechanics' (or mechanic's) lurk, the. A beggar's pretence of being a mechanic out of work and penniless, with a view to obtaining alms: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 416; app. † by 1910. See lurk, n.

deuce, n. Twopence: C. 19: perhaps implied in dace. (Sinks of London, 1848.) Prob. ex deus wins: see dews wins, though perhaps direct ex Fr. deux.—2. Hence, a two-year term, a sentence to two years, in a prison: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; Jan. 22, 1927, Flynn's, 'So here I am with a lousy deuce'; 1933, Ersine; April 21, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627; 1935, Hargan; April 23, 1938, Flynn's; extant.—3. Two dollars; a two-dollar bill: U.S.A.: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago, and Godfrey Irwin, 1931: rather is this sense low s. (and carnival s.—Canadian too), than c.

deuce, v. To supply (a person) with two marijuana cigarettes: drug addicts': since the middle 1930's: March 12, 1938, The New Yorker, Meyer Berger, "'Deuce me, man,'" he said. "Deuce for Buck," chanted Chappy, bringing out two reefers.' For origin, see sense 1 of the n.

deuce o' deaners (or denas). Two shillings; a florin: ca. 1860–1920: 1909, Ware. Cf. deuce, n., 1, and see deaner.

deuce(-)spot. Two dollars: mostly tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; extant. See spot, n.

deuces. Odds of 2 to 1: since ca. 1860: racing c. >, by 1920, racing s. 'John Morris' in The Cornhill Magazine, June 1933; Partridge, 1937. Cf. deuce, n., 1.

deusaville is a misprint (Shirley, 1707) for:—

deusea ville or D—V—; or as one word. 'Dewse a vyle, the countrey,' Harman, 1566; ibid., deuseavyl; 1608–9, Dekker (dewse-a-vile); 1610, Rowlands, in Martin Mark-All, has the odd spelling dewsavell; 1611, Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 'Which we mill in deuse a vile'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'And prig and cloy so banshiply, | All the Deusea-vile within'; 1676, Coles (deuseaville); 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E. (deuseavile); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1708, John Hall (duceavil); 1714, Alex. Smith (deuse-avil); 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; by 1850, if not some years earlier, it had > daisyville. The origin is obscure: the ville element = 'a town' (see ville), and therefore I propose this moonbeam from the (I hope) larger lunacy:—deuseaville = deuse a ville = deuce a ville = the deuce a ville = the deuce, a ville! = the deuce it is a ville! = The Devil it's a ville! = 'Like hell it's a town (or city)', i.e. 'It certainly isn't a town'; hence, 'It's the opposite, the contrary, of a town'; therefore it must be the country, a rural district, etc.

deusea ville, or deuseavil(l)e, stamper. A country carrier: 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1850—if not by 1810 or so. See prec.

deuseaville. See deusea ville.

deusville is a rare variant of deusea ville. Dekker, O per se O, 1612.

deuswins. See dews wins.

deux-wins. See dews wins.

deuxis. An occ. spelling of deuces. Gilbert Walker, 1552, has this—and deuis.

devil. As the Devil, it = Billy Sunday (1863–1935), who became an evangelist in 1896: C. 20; by 1945, ob. Leverage, 1925.—2. As devil, it = any preacher: 1925, Leverage; extant. Perhaps short for s. devil-dodger, 'a clergyman'.

devil himself, the. 'Red sail-yard dockers' (q.v.) remove the devil, that thread which in ropes or cables constitutes the mark of Government property; whence comes a 'species of villainy among the [Royal Dockyards] stores which respects the sails, and is called the Devil himself, in which rig many people about the [Royal] Yard have been concerned'; the sails are sold and then so treated by a tanner that the distinguishing blue thread is obliterated: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1785, Grose; † by 1890.

devil's claws, the. The Government broad arrow on prison clothes: convicts': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. by 1930; † by 1945. Ex its shape—and its significance.

dew-beaters. Feet: 1785, Grose; 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'I gave him such a gallows snatch of the dew-beaters, that he was dead near twenty minutes by the sheriff's watch before the other two'; 1809, Andrewes (dewbeaters); 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV; 1848, Sinks of London; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.), low s. Cf. Norfolk dial. dew-beaters, 'heavy shoes to resist wet' (H, 3rd ed.).

dew-drop or dewdrop, v. 'To hurl lumps of coal—the dewdrops—' back over the train in hopes of striking a tramp riding between the cars,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910. Ironical ref. to 'the gentle dew from heaven'.

dewbeaters. See dew-beaters.

dews. A crown piece: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1890. Prob. dews = deux, two: see dews wins. Elliptical for dews half-bulls, two half-crowns.—2. Hence (loosely), 'A gold eagle; ten dollars': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910.

dews (or deus or deux) wins. 'Deuswins . . . Twopence,' R. Head, 1665; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Dews-wins, c. two Pence'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (both dews-wins and deux-wins); 1785, Grose (dews wins and deux wins); 1809, Andrewes (deux-wins); 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open (deux wins); 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold (id.); † by 1889 (B & L). Fr. deux 'two' † win, n.

dewsavell is Rowlands's version (1610) of deusea ville. Cf. — dewse-a-vyle. An occ. C. 16–17 variant of deusea ville. Harman, 1566; Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9; † by 1680. Cf. Dewsville.

dewskitch. A thrashing, a beating: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1859, H, 'A good thrashing'; by 1874, low s. ? dues-catch, as H suggests. Perhaps rather a dialectal word, based on the Deuce, the Devil.

Dewsville. The country as opposed to the town: 1859, Matsell (at hot); † by 1920. A modernized form of deusea ville; cf. Daisyville.

deyseaville is incorrect for deusea ville. (George Andrewes, 1809.)

dial, 'face', is not c. but s.—orig., low s.

dial, 'to photograph' (a person), is not c. but (low) s.; in, e.g., Leverage, 1925.

Dials. 'Members of the criminal class who live about the Seven Dials, in London' (W.C.):

since ca. 1850 : 1889, B & L ; 1891, F & H ; † by 1920.

diamond, v. 'To diamond a horse, to put a stone under the shoe to make it appear lame': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; ob. A stone as hard, almost, as a diamond.

diamond charmer, 'a diamond swindler', is not c. but detectives' s.: 1881, Anon., The Man Traps of New York.

diamond-cracking. Stone-breaking: Australian convicts': since ca. 1880 : 1889, B & L, 'The metaphor is obvious, breaking those precious [or devilish hard] stones'; 1891, F & H; Baker, 1945.

diamond-cutting. 'The art of cutting ice in the winter is called "glass blowing" or "diamond cutting"', Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1915.

diamond pusher. A railroad fireman (anglicé, railway stoker): tramps': since ca. 1910 : 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, railway s. Ex black diamonds, 'coal'.

diamond squad, the. Rich and/or influential people: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1910. Prob. imm. ex sight of bejewelled ladies, alighting at opera or theatre.

diary, v. 'To remember; to enter in a book. "I'll diary the joskin", I'll remember the fool': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; by 1900, low s. To record as in a diary.

dib, 'a small part or share', may be c.—or it may be s.; certainly it is rare. Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, Appendix, 1829, 'If you'd share the swag, or have one dib', glossed as 'the least share'. Perhaps ex s. dibs, 'money'.

Dice, names of false; often called dice bard. See the list at barred dice.

dice train. 'A slow train is called a drag, the fast freight train a dice train or hot shot, and a man who rides the latter making long jumps is called a fast Rambler,' Convict, 1934: tramps': since ca. 1920. Because it rattles like dice in a shaken box.

dicer. A hat: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'Dicer—a hat; synonymous with "lid" or "beany"'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Derby hat'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, M. H. Weseen; Aug. 17, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1938, Castle; extant. It is often used for the drawing of lots to settle a choice, etc.; but cf. the explanation at end of sense 2.—2. A fast freight (anglicé, goods) train: tramps': since ca. 1910 : 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, M. H. Weseen; extant. 'Old tramps say the first is taken from [the shape of] the cups used for throwing dice, and the second from the motion of the train, not unlike that used in shaking the dice' (Irwin).—3. Much; a number of, 'a lot': 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Such as the dice may bring.

Dick; hence dick. A man that is a simpleton: 1659, Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, 'Her [the whore's] part is to pick up a Dick that is full of money, whom she invites to her house, where he is blackmailed by her pimp; app. † by 1720. Cf. hick, q.v.—2. A riding-whip: 1848, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx, 'Gold-headed dick'; by 1891 (F & H), s. Perhaps it rhymes on stick.—3. The sense 'a detective' has always, whether in the British Empire or in the United States, been s.—prob. low s. at first. Perhaps ex dick, v., with a little help from s. 'tec.

dick, v. To look sharply about one; to gaze intently: mid-C. 19–20: 1864, H, 3rd ed., "Look! the bulky is dicking", i.e., the constable has his eye on you.—North Country Cant'; 1889, B & L, '(Gypsy, also common cant), to see, to look'; 1891, F & H; by 1910, low s. Ex the imperative of the Hindustani dekhna, 'to look': cf. Regular Army dekko, 'a glance'. In Anglo-Indian, the form is deck, used mostly as a n.

Dick in the green, adj. phrase. 'Weak, inferior, poor': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. by 1920; virtually † by 1940. 'A pun on the word "dicky" [s. for 'inferior, paltry; unwell'], as bolt-in-tun is on "to bolt"': B & L.

Dick (or dick)-smith, 'a four-flusher; a reneger', as in Leverage, 1925, is not c., but s.

dickey. 'Cant for a worn-out shirt,' George Parker, A View of Society, 1781; † by 1859 (witness H, 1st ed.).—2. The sense 'a woman's under-petticoat' (Grose, 1788) is s.—3. A strangling: May 8, 1867, Sessions Papers, 'The prisoner . . . put his knee on his belly and his hands on his throat, and said: "Shall I put dicky on the b—?" which means, strangle him'; app. † by 1920. By means of a shirt?

dicky-bird. "I was tipped off to you by a Dicky Bird (stool pigeon [or informer]), damn him!" Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; ob. Suggested by stool pigeon; ex the semi-proverbial a little bird told me.

dicky dirt; by corruption, dicky dirk. A shirt: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Convict, 1934. Rhyming s., introduced by Australians.

diddikay(e). See diddykay(e).

diddle. Geneva, i.e., gin: 1724, Harper (see diddle shop); 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker, 'Diddle; or, in plain English, Geneva'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The Cant Word for Geneva, a Liquor very much drank by the lowest Rank of People'; 1728, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose, 'Diddle, gin'; 1809, Andrewes, 'Rum, brandy, gin, &c.', 1836, The Individual, Nov. 15; 1848, Sinks of London; implied by H, 1859, to be †; by 1859, current in U.S.A. (Matsell); by 1910, † in U.S.A. Diddle is, I believe, an echoic word.

diddle cove. 'The keeper of a gin shop': 1797, Humphry Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, Augustus Mayhew; by 1859, current in America (Matsell); 1891, F & H; † by 1910. See diddle and cove.

diddle shop. 'Had he not Bowz'd in the Diddle Shops, | He'd still been in Drury-Lane' is glossed as 'Geneva Shops' in Harper's 'A Canting Song' in John Thurmond's Harlequin Sheppard, 1724; † by 1890. Cf. prec. entry.

diddler, 'an artful swindler': not c. but s.

diddly-donce, like candle-sconce, is a C. 20 underworld term rhyming on ponce. Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943, "An alphonse, a candle-sconce, a diddly-donce, of the first water" . . . Dicker had been a souteneur."

diddykay(e) or diddikay(e); properly didekei (or -ki); occ. didycoy or didikoi. In Mary Carpenter's Juvenile Delinquents, 1853, we find (p. 126) the synonymy, 'Gipseys, romaneys, didycoys, "our people", as they call themselves'; 1933, George Orwell, Down and Out, 'A dideki—a gypsy'—Orwell calls it 'London slang', but it is c., mostly tramps'; 1935, Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road; extant. In Romany, diddikai is a 'half-bred Romany' (Gipsy Petulengro, A Romany Life, 1935); in Smart & Crofton the form is didakei—the sense is the same.

didō. 'To steal from carts in the street,' Baker, 1942: Australian: since ca. 1920. Prob. ex s. cut up didoes, to play pranks.

die, 'a last dying speech; a report of a criminal's trial', is not c. but London street—esp. street vendors'—s. H, 1859.—2. See dee.

die game, 'to die courageously, uncomplainingly, and without impeaching one's accomplices', was orig. c., and c. it remained until ca. 1840, although it had crept into gen. use by 1800. Occurring in Gay, The Beggar's Opera, 1727, it dates from ca. 1700; in The Newgate Calendar, e.g., we read of Richard Haywood and John Tennant, that, on hearing (in 1805) of their approaching execution, 'they uttered the most horrid imprecations; and, after declaring in cant terms that they would die game, threatened to murder the Ordinary if he attempted to visit them'. Ex the resolute dying of game cocks.

die in a devil's nightcap. To be hanged: only possibly is this a c. phrase; almost certainly it is. This C. 18-mid-19 jocularity is much less characteristic of the criminal than of the journalist: the latter's neck was not in jeopardy. But die in a horse's nightcap (see horse's nightcap) may have been c.

die like a dog, 'to be hanged', is not c. but s.—perhaps journalistic s. B.E., 1698, adds: 'The worst Employment a Man can be put to'. A hanged man dies with a halter about his neck; a dog lives with a collar around his.

die out. To die in prison: convicts': Feb. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, R. E. Burns; extant. I.e., to get out of prison by dying.

die under the stick. To be hanged: see stick, n., 2.

die with cotton in one's ears or die with one's ears full of cotton. See cotton, die with . . .

diener is a South African variant of deaner, q.v.—2. A policeman: South African: C. 20. Letter of May 22, 1946 (J. B. Fisher); The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. An adoption of the normal Afrikaans word for 'a policeman' (ex Dutch dienaar, 'a servant'; cf. Dutch dienen, 'to serve' God, one's country). For this, as for a number of Afrikaans words, I owe a special debt to Mr D. R. D. Ewes, Acting Editor of The Cape Times, for notes he sent me in May-June 1946.

Dietrich. A skeleton key, a pass key: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. This German proper name has been adopted ex the German underworld; cf. betty and jemmy.

difference, the. A weapon, esp. a revolver: since ca. 1905. In, e.g., BVB. It makes a great difference to one who has it: contrast equalizer.

dift cove, 'a neat little man' (Matsell, 1859), is almost certainly an error—prob. for dimber cove (see dimber).

dig, n., 'a hard blow' or punch, is not c.—despite Egan's Grose.—2. A cache for stolen goods: Am. tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1941, Maurer (for contraband); extant. Yeggs often ground-cached their loot until they could safely retrieve it by digging it up; cf. British archeological s. dig, 'an excavation'.—3. An awkward pickpocket: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex:—

dig, v. To pick pockets: 1925, Leverage; 1927, Kane; 1933, Ersine, 'To pick pockets in a clumsy manner'; extant. With one's fingers, one digs in pockets.—2. To stab (a person): convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Ex 'give (someone) a dig'.—3. 'A group of "con" men was "digging"—i.e., making contacts and enquiries—' amongst bucket-shop-keepers and other financial sharks,' James Spenser, Crime against Society, 1938: British, mostly 'con men's': since ca. 1920. As a gold prospector digs, so also does a confidence trickster.

dig and dirt. A shirt: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928. A corruption of Cockney rhyming s. Dicky Dirt.

dig in. To steal: 1927, C. L. Clarke & E. E. Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Cf. dig, v., 1 and 3.

dig oneself away. 'To "dig themselves away", namely, to hide themselves under the mattress of a disused bed, or in the "cloud" (attic), until all is quiet'; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; ob. To dig a hole wherein to hide.

digger; gen. pl. A spur: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Prig the Diggers, they are wage; steal the Spurs, they are Silver'; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; by 1830, s. That with which one digs one's horse's flanks.—2. 'Diggers Finger-nails': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; by 1889 (B & L), it was low s. Ex the dirt in finger-nails.—3. A pickpocket: U.S.A.: 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. digging.—4. A 'thief who cuts ladies' stockings'. Kernôt, 1929–31: U.S.A.: extant. Cf. dig, v., 2.

digging. Pickpocketry: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex dig, v., 1.

dike. A female homosexual: 1935, Hargan; extant. Cf. bull dike, of which (sense 2) it represents an abridgement.

diles, 'money', is, I feel sure, a ghost word: Matsell, at flash her diles. Presumably for dibs, s. for 'money'.

dill. A dupe; an easy victim: Australian, esp. confidence tricksters': since the 1920's. In, e.g., Baker, 1942. Perhaps silly Billy > Billy > Bill >, by 'rhyme', dill; but prob. ex daffydill, illiterate for daffodil, for daffy is American s. for 'simple, stupid, crazy', and the n. daffy is short for daffydill.

Dilly, the. Piccadilly: London street s., not c. In, e.g., James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936.

dillybag. A tramp's makeshift housewife for darning and mending: Australian tramps': C. 20. Baker, 1942. Ex Australian s. dillybag, a woman's shopping bag, itself app. a corruption of nautical ditty bag, i.e., a commodity bag.

dim or dimo. A dime (ten cents): 1925, Leverage: the former (pron. dim) may orig. have been c.; the latter has prob. been always s. dim-liggies. A police van: South Africa: C. 20. Letter from C. P. Wittstock, May 23, 1946, 'Police van: pick-me-up, dim-liggies, wikkell'; The Cape Times, June 3, 1946, Alan Nash. Lit., dim-lights: Eng. dim + Afrikaans liggie, 'small light' (lig—from Dutch licht).

dim-mort is B.E.'s misprint for dimber mort, q.v. at dimber.

dimbar is a rare variant of:

dimber. Pretty; handsome: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Dimber-cove, a pretty Fellow.—Dim [sic]-mort, c. a pretty Wench'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Dimber-Mort, a pretty Wench', and, in Song VII, 'O my dimbar wapping Dell'; 1785, Grose (virtually copying B.E.); 1797, Potter,

'Dimber mott, a pretty wench'; 1809, Andrewes; by 1830, if not by 1820, it was archaic or literary, as in W. T. Moncrieff, Eugene Aram, 1832, 'Ah, she's a dimber lady, the lady moon'. The origin is a mystery. The word may, however, be either a corruption or a perversion of Romany rinkeno, 'pretty'. —2. Hence, loosely: lively: 1837, B. Disraeli, Venetia, 'Tis a dimber cove . . . 'Tis a lively lad'; † by 1860.

dimber cove. See dimber.

dimber damber, commander of a 'knot' or gang of rogues, or of vagabonds, or of both, seems orig. to have been a nickname given to one such chief (Dekker); hence to other chiefs; hence, by 1690 or so, it had > generic for any such principal rogue. In 1698, B.E., 'Dimber-Damber, c. a Top-man or Prince, among the Canting Crew; also the chief Rogue of the Gang, or the compleatest Cheat' (so too A New Canting Dict., 1725); 1785, Grose, — but I suspect that the term had > † by 1760 at the latest. Note, however, that dimber damber had, by 1688 (Randle Holme, The Academy of Armory) > also the mere combination of dimber and damber, qq.v.—i.e., a handsome rascal. For origin, see the separate elements.

dimber damber, adj., 'very pretty': open to grave suspicions. (E.g., Hotten, 1860.) Ex the preceding.

dimber mort. See dimber.

dimbo. A dime: 1935, Hargan; extant. By perversion, with the typical argotic suffix -o.

dime a pop. A policeman: mostly Pacific Coast, but also Chicago; since ca. 1925. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on cop, n., 1. There is a grim innuendo that during the gang-warfare of the 1920's and early 1930's it cost approx. only one dime to have a pop (a shot) at a cop.

dime up. 'To pool small change to buy odds and ends of food,' Ersine, 1933; extant. Ex dime, a 10-cent piece.

dime's worth, a. 'When they'—white-slavers—'speak of "a dime's worth" they mean morphine, as that'—take a dime's worth—'is the favorite method of suicide,' Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909: app. ca. 1890–1920. The cost of a 'bundle' or 'deck'.

diminishing way, in the. Engaged in clipping or filing coins of the realm: 1773, Sessions, 5th Session in the mayoralty of James Townsend, trial of Samuel Bennet (for 'clipping and filing a guinea'), 'We were concerned together in the diminishing way'; app. † by 1870. By meiosis.

dimker is an error for dimber: 1837, B. Disraeli, Venetia, 'Like a dimker mort as you are'.

dimmer. A dime (a 10-cent piece): tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1937 (The New York Herald Tribune, Feb. 17, Barry Buchanan), it was fair-ground, carnival, circus s. A 'thinned' pet-name form of dime; or else an elaborated corruption.

dimmock, 'money', may orig. (—1812) have been c., but more prob. it was s. Vaux; Egan's Grose; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1848, Sinks of London; 1860, H, 2nd ed. Perhaps ex S.E. dime, 'a tithe': cf. tithe-money.—2. Hence, counterfeit coin: 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life, where it is spelt dimnick; slightly ob.

Dimmy, 'Democrat', is not c. but s.; e.g., in Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901, p. 37.

dimo. See dim.

din, a loud noise, is by B.E., 1698, wrongly classified as c.

Dinah or dinah. Dynamite: 1929, Givens; 1930, Burke, who defines it as 'nitroglycerin' and exemplifies it thus, 'We got to get dinah for them pineapples'; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; Nov. 1931, IA; April 16, 1932, Flynn's; 1933, Ersine (dinah, dino, dyno); 1933, Eagle (loosely: nitroglycerin); 1934, Rose (ditto); March 16, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington, 'Cooking "dyne" is a sickening job. The fumes . . . give one a violent headache'; 1938, Castle; extant. The first two syllables of 'dynamite' have been personified.—2. Hence, a bomb: 1934, David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live (see quot'n at stick, n., 9); extant.

dinarly, 'money', is not c. but parlyaree; e.g., nantee dinarly, 'no money'. Also denarlies, dinarlies: the former is in Thos Frost, Circus Life, 1875. Ex It. denari, small coins (denaro or danaro, money).

dine appears to be a variant of ding, n., in 'The bien Coves bings awast, | On Chates to trine by Rome Coves dine' (R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665), where dine may be 'blow' or 'thrust' or 'push' (? 'effort').—2. Hence (?), spite, malice: 1688, Holme, The Academy of Armory; † by 1790.—3. Dynamite: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; Feb. 10, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan.

dine-dance-dice-dope-dame joint (the 2nd element is often, the 3rd sometimes, the 5th rarely omitted): 'a dope den plus,' BVB, 1942: not c. but, rather obviously, sophisticated s.

diner is a rare variant of deaner: racing c. of C. 20. By corruption—or perhaps by perversion.

dinero, 'money', although used by Western tramps, is gen. Western s. of late C. 19–20 (Godfrey Irwin, 1931). Adopted direct ex Spanish.

ding is the n. of sense 3 of the v.; not very gen. George Parker, Life's Painter, 'I'll give you a rum ding of a tick or a reader'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Any article you have stolen, either because it is worthless, or that there is danger of immediate apprehension' and therefore thrown away or handed to an accomplice; 1817, Sessions Papers (Dec.), 'When I'—a constable—'went into the tap-room they'—thieves—'called out, "here is a ding", which is a signal to throw anything away'; 1823, Jon Bee (going upon the ding: theft as in ding, v., 5); 1824, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, I, trial of James Goodwin, '[the prisoner] said his brother had taken the cheese, and he [the prisoner] had taken ding of it'; † by 1870.—2. A harmless, unenterprising person, usually male: U.S.A.: 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; extant. He has been dinged, or struck, on the head.—3. See ding on, put the.—4. An able-bodied beggar: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex sense 7 of:—

ding, v. To ding down, i.e. to knock down: 1698, B.E.: this sense (ca. 1690–1830) may be c., as B.E. and Grose classify it; but it is more prob. S.E.—2. Hence, to throw away or to discard (a thing) where it is not likely to be found immediately: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Then we go and fisk'—i.e., search—'the Bit' or purse, 'and ding the empty Bit, for fear it should be found'; 1755, 'History of the Thief-Takers' in Remarkable Trials and Interesting Memoirs, 1760; 1777, Sessions Papers, July, p. 386; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'A high-wayman will ding his Upper-Benjamin; ibid., 'Dinging is a term for throwing away or hiding', and is used esp. of highwaymen; 1795, Sessions; 1809, G. Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, P. Egan, Life in London (of discarding something worthless); 1839, Sessions; 1847, A. Harris (Australia); 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; by 1859, U.S.A. (Matsell); by 1864, low s.—3. Hence, as in George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters (glossary), 'The word ding is to pass any thing quick from one to another The moment they have picked your pocket of either [article], one dings it to his pal, . . . who sometimes passes it to another'; 1812, Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1826, Sessions Papers; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1864, low s.—4. To drop the acquaintance of (a person): 1812, Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, 'Also, to quit his company'; by 1860, low s. Ex sense 2.—5. 'To steal by a single effort "Ding the tót", run away with the whole—as the pot from the fire, mutton and all,' Jon Bee, 1823; 1818, The London Guide, 'Ding, to carry off hastily'; app. † by 1890. Prob. ex senses 1–3; tót = Fr. tout, everything.—6. To send to a receiver of stolen goods: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxviii, 'We shan't object to waiting for the rest of our reg'lars till the swag is dinged'; app. † by 1890. Ex senses 2 and 3.—7. To beg (esp. food); both v.i., as in ding for a lump, and v.t.: 1919; 1933, Ersine (to beg food from); Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan, 'To teach me how to ding food'; extant. Cf. sense 5.

ding, knap the; take ding. 'To ding to your pal, is to convey to him, privately, the property you have just stolen; and he who receives it is said to take ding, or to knap the ding'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1900. Here, ding derives ex ding, v., 3.

ding, upon the. On the prowl: C. 19. Bee, 1823. Cf. prec. entry, and ding, v., 5.

ding bat. See dingbat.

ding boy. Occurring first in Thomas Shadwell's The Scowlers, 1691, as one of those two scoundrels who are companions to Wachum; 1698, B.E., 'Ding-boy, c. a Rogue, a Hector, a Bully, Sharper'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; and in Grose, 1785; 1809, Andrewes, 'A rogue, knave, sly fellow'; 1828 (see Newmans); 1848, Sinks of London, repeating Andrewes; by 1860, †. Ex ding, v., 1.

ding cove. 'A Robbing fellow', The London Guide, 1818 (at cove); app. † by 1890. Cf. ding, n., 1, and v., 5.

ding-dong, 'or bell; usually a door-bell or a dinner bell'; 'A childish allusion, yet used generally by the older tramps' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931). Cf. toot the ding-dong.

ding-donging, be. To travel throughout the country, begging from door to door: tramps': since ca. 1910. IA, 1931. Ex the n.; cf. ding for a lump.

ding for a lump. (Of a tramp) to ask for a snack: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by Moreby Acklom; extant.

ding on (somebody), put the. To beg for money or food: 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; extant. Cf. ding, v., 7; also ding for . . ., prob. the imm. source.

ding the tót. See ding, v., 5.

ding-thrift. See dyng thrift.

dingable. 'This phrase is often applied by sharps to a flat whom they have cleaned out; and by abandoned women to a keeper, who having spent his all upon them, must be discarded, or ding'd as soon as possible'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890. See ding, v., 2 and 4.

dingaling. Crazy, crazed, insane: convicts', esp. at San Quentin: C. 20. Leo L. Stanley, Men at Their Worst, 1940. Ding-a-ling: 'bats in the belfry'—where bells ring-ding-a-ling.

dingbat. A low tramp; a look-out man for tramps: 1923, in The Hobo, Nels Anderson merely defines it, along with four other terms, as 'the dregs of vagrancy'; he quotes from Leon Livingston (1918); 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, where he implies its currency as early as ca. 1902; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A bum or tramp of low degree, usually a "bindle stiff" '; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's; 1934, Convict; May 2, 1936, Flynn's; 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece; extant.—2. 'A stircrazy convict': convicts': since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933. Cf. English s. bats, 'crazy'.—3. The from-sense-1 derivative 'boy under 12 years of age' (Clifford R. Shaw, Brothers in Crime, 1938—p. 342), would seem to be low s., not c.—4. (Prob. ex sense 1.) A Chinese: Australian: since ca. 1930. M & B, 1944.

dinge, n. A dark night: from before 1794: 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; app. † by 1900. Either ex S.E. dinge, 'a discoloration', or ex Eng. dial. dingy, 'dirty', which > S.E.—2. A Negro: 1848, The Ladies' Repository; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1910, low s.

dinge, v. 'To blacken; to slander; to defame,' Leverage, 1925, with derivative dinger (pron. dindjer), 'a slanderer' (ibid.): these are not c., but low s. To render dingy (to blacken) the character of.

dinger is a highwayman who, on committing a robbery, 'dings' such garments and accoutrements (e.g., spurs and pistols) as might serve to incriminate him: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1891 (F & H)—prob. by 1860. Ex ding, v., 2.—2. (? Ex sense 1.) 'A thief, a pick-pocket': 1797, Potter—but the definition is suspect, for Andrewes, 1809, by merely plagiarizing, does not strengthen Potter at all; nor does Sinks of London (1848), for the glossary therein tends to repeat Andrewes, errors and all.—3. A till, a cash-box, fitted with a bell or other alarm-device: U.S.A.: 1937 (Aug. 12), letter from Godfrey Irwin; also an alarm bell outside a bank: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; extant.—4. See dinge, v.—5. A railroad yardmaster. U.S. tramps': since ca. 1910. IA, 1931. Perhaps short for s. humdinger, someone of great ability or power. (Godfrey Irwin.)—6. A beggar, esp. 'on the road': yeggs': C. 20: app. ob. by 1934—witness Jack Callahan, 'To Hell and Back' in Flynn's, Jan. 13. Cf. the s. hit (a person) up for (a loan).—7. A burglar alarm: U.S.A.: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. sense 3.—8. A coloured person: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920; by 1940, low s. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938. Ex dinge, n., 2.—9. A simulated fit to obtain alms: Am. beggars': since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933. Cf. wing-ding.—10. Any fit: 1933, Ersine.—11. A burglars' look-out man, esp. if old and of no use for anything else: U.S.A.: since 1925. Ersine. A corruption of dino, 2. dingey. See dingy, n. and adj.

dinghiyen ; dingus. See emergency gun.
dinging, vbl n. See ding, v., 2, second reference for 1781.

dingoes. Tramps or vagrants refusing work even though they claim to be looking for a job: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Irwin; and others. They snarl when confronted with anything so disturbing as work ('Who the hell wants to work, anyway?'): dingoes, the Australian wild dogs, are creatures not excessively amiable.

dingy, n. A Negro vagabond: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, quoting Leon Livingston (1918); extant. A special application of s. dingy; see dingy cove.

dingy, adj. Very eccentric; insane: convicts': 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'We all get dingier'n a pet coon inside these dumps'; 1938, Castle (dingey); extant.

dingy blowen. See dingy coves.

dingy cove. A Negro man: U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; app. † by 1880. Lit., a dirty (dingy-coloured) fellow; cf. the U.S. dial. and s. dingy, 'A Negro'.

dingy covess ; dingy blowen. A Negress: both are in The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848, the former being erroneously transposed as covess dinge for dinge covess and the latter printed as dinge blowen, where dinge is almost certainly dissyllabic (cf. preceding entry); † by 1900. Cf. dingy cove, q.v., and see blowen.

dingy kinch. A Negro child: 1848, The Ladies' Repository, 'The Flash Language', where it is spelt dinge k.; † by 1937 (Irwin). Cf. dingy covess, q.v.; kinch is short for kinchin (q.v. at kinchen).

dining-room jump. See jump, dining-room.

dining-room post 'is a mode of stealing by a man, who, pretending to be the Post-man, goes to lodging-houses under the pretence of having letters for the lodgers. These sham letters being sent up for the postage, which he seems to wait for, as soon as he is left alone, he goes into the first room which he finds open, and whips off with him whatever he can lay hold of, nor once minds the postage of his letter': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1891 (F & H).

dink, 'an imitation': Leverage, 1925: s., I think.—2. A Chinese: Australian: since ca. 1930. M & B, 1944. By 'rhyming' the low-s. synonym, chink.

dink(e)y, as 'a hat', is not c., but s. (Leverage, 1925, dinky).—2. The little finger: 1925, Leverage; by 1940, s. Cf. pinky.

dinky dirt. A shirt: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. A perversion of Cockney (and Australian) Dicky Dirt.

dinky dong. A song: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming: adopted ex Cockney s.

dink(e)y skinner. That member of a labour gang who works the donkey engine: tramps': since ca. 1910. IA and Stiff, 1931; by 1940, labour s. Clearly, *dinke*y is a thinning of 'donkey'; and see skinner, 7.

dink(e)y stuff. 'Jimmy Cunniffe's beginning was at small thieveries, or, as the crooks say, "dinky stuff",' Charles Somerville in Flynn's, Sept. 12, 1931; extant. Too dinky ('dainty') to be 'big stuff'.

dinner sneak, the. Burglary effected while the inmates are at their evening meal: Nov. 17, 1928, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'Three Curious Burglars'; extant.

dinny. A detective: July 27, 1929, Flynn's, W. E. Ulich ('Something for Kitty'), 'How about soft pedalling it? No word to the bulls—private dinnies instead—on account of unpleasant newspaper publicity'; March 19, 1932, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; slightly ob. Perhaps ex detective + investigator.

dino. See dyno.—2. Esp. in sense, 'a decrepit old man serving as look-out to burglars': 1933, Ersine.

dip, n. A pickpocket: 1850, a prison report (in The Prison Chaplain: a Memoir of John Clay, 1861); 1859, George Matsell (U.S.A.); Oct. 7, 1865, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L; 1889, F & H; 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1904, H. Hapgood (U.S.A.); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective (U.S.A.); 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow; 1914, J. H. Keate, Mephisto's Greatest Web (U.S.A.); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1916, Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in the Underworld; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review; April 1919, The Bookman (U.S.A.); 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1925, Leverage; 1927, C. L. Clarke & E. E. Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1928, Mary Churchill Sharpe; 1928, John O'Connor; 1929, G. Dilnot, Triumphs of Detection; 1929, C. F. Coe, Hooch; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's; Jan. 24, 1931, Flynn's, Henry Hyatt; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; and only the Recording Angel knows how many times since! In 1938, Convict 2nd remarks that it is ob. in U.S.A.; and in 1945, Baker notes that it is current in Australia—it prob. has been ever since ca. 1910. Current in Canada throughout C. 20 (anon. letter, June 1, 1946).—2. 'The act of putting a hand into a pocket': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1900, Flynt and Walton, The Powers That Prey, "'We got pinched for goin' on the dip'" ; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'On the dip, on a pocket-picking expedition'; extant. Cf. sense 2 of the v.—3. A pinch of snuff, a portion of narcotic: U.S.A.: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. For which one dips into the little container.—4. Hence (?), a drug addict: since ca. 1934. BVB.

dip, v., to pawn or mortgage, occurs first in Glapthorne, 1640 (O.E.D.), and is prob. s.: ca. 1690–1750, however, it may have been c., as B.E., 1698, deems it to have been. Perhaps ex the dipping of a cat in water and thus drowning it, for the mortgaging of an estate is often but the beginning of the end.—2. 'Dip, v. To pick pockets': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1859, used in America (Matsell's Vocabulum); 1889, B & L; Feb. 1898, Sessions Papers; 1891, F & H; 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers That Prey (U.S.A.); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (U.S.A.); 1925, Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, 'To get "dipped" (have your pockets picked)'; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); Jan. 8, 1927, Flynn's, 'He dipped you for that wad'; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly (U.S.A.); March 2, 1929, Flynn's, 'The first fourteen years I dipped I got grabbed eleven times'; 1933, Ersine; 1941, John G. Brandon, The Death in the Quarry, 'They'd been "dipped"'; extant. Suggested by dive, v.—3. Hence, to steal from, to rob (esp. a till): 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail, 'Another . . . has "dipped a lob for 6 quid", or stolen £6 from a till'; 1889, B & L; 1912, D. Lowrie, My Life in Prison (1901–11, San Quentin); 1934, B. Leeson, Lost London, '"Dipping the lob" (stealing from tills)'; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh (id.); extant.—4. To be dipped, 'to be convicted; to get into trouble', F & H, 1891; 1894, A. Morrison; ob.

dip on. 'To pick-pocket a person is called to squeeze or dip on him,' J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946: South Africa: C. 20. Ex dip, v., 2.

dip south. Mouth: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Prob. a perversion of Cockney rhyming-s. north and south.

dipe, (go) on the. To engage in—engaged in—picking pockets: 1877, Mark Twain, Life on the Mississippi (the full phrase); in C. 20, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1945). A variation of dip, n., 2.

dipped, pawned or in pawn: see dip, v. 1.

dipper, an Anabaptist, is s., not c., whereas autem dipper is c., not s.—2. A pickpocket: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1894, J. Greenwood, Behind a Bus; very ob.—dip having virtually superseded it. Ex dip, v., 2.

dipping. Pickpocketry: prob. since the 1850's; 1894, The Reminiscences of Chief-Inspector Littlechild; 1904, Ex-Inspector Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (U.S.A.); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1909, Ware; 1943, Black; slightly ob. Ex dip, v., 1.

dipping bloke. A pickpocket: since ca. 1860; ca. 1864, The Chickalery Cove; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. Ex dip, v., 1.

dipping cloudy. Drunkard-robbing: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); ob. Ex dip, v., 2; cloudy refers to the hazy mind of the drunkard that is robbed.

dipping gag, the. 'She finally persuaded me to cut the dipping gag (quit picking pockets),' Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 1929: since ca. 1905; ob.

dipping-house. 'There were women who ran dipping-houses in Custom House Place [Chicago]. They were like booths, into which you took your man. If you succeeded in getting him in, the landlady soon helped you trim him,' May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May, 1928, in ref. to the year 1890; ob. See dipping: at this time, 'Chicago May' was a pickpocket.

dippy, 'demented' (Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924), is not c. but s.—prob. at first, low s. Adopted ex English s.

dips, 'a drunkard': s., not c. Leverage, 1925.

dipse, dipsy. A sentence to a workhouse (country jail, minor prison): tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff and Irwin, 1931. 'Perhaps connected with "deep sea"—by sailors pronounced "dipsey"' (Irwin).

dirk. A knife: 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece; 1938, Convict 2nd, '"Dirks"' (prison-made knives)'; extant. Humorous.

dirt. Money: 1925, Leverage; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. For the semantics, cf. the cliché'd filthy lucre.—2. See dish the dirt.—3. Sugar: convicts' since ca. 1925. Rose, 1934. Ex the sand in the sugar.—4. 'Unsympathetic normal persons who attend a homosexual social affair' (a drag), BVB, 1942: C. 20. From the pervert viewpoint.

dirty. Having (plenty of) money: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex dirt: in opposition to clean, adj., 2.

dirty spot. A brothel: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Here, spot = 'place'.

disc-potting, n. 'Snatching from the hand, bag, or basket . . . Fly-hooking, disc-potting': 1889, C. J. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary): † by 1930. Presumably disc is 'coin'; potting may come from billiards.

discard artist. 'One who carries around or wears picked-up clothes,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1920.

discharge; be discharged. 'To resign from gang,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary (former); BVB, 1942 (latter); extant. Short for humorous discharge oneself.

dish was, orig., c.: in the sense 'to cheat', 'to swindle': 1781, Anon., The Swindler Detected, revised ed., ' . . . Who at length (in the phrase of swindling) dishes him'—a tradesman—'for something considerable'. Doubtless the phrase had existed since 1770 or even a decade earlier; prob. it had > s. (orig., low) by 1785. Ex the idea of food being done and dished up, as The O.E.D. remarks.

dish the dirt, 'to talk scandal': s. (orig., low), not c. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931). I.e., to serve, tastily, the spicy bits.

dismal ditty. 'A cant expression for a psalm sung by a criminal at the gallows': 1748, Dyer, Dict. (5th ed.); Grose; † by 1840.

dispatch. See dispatches.

dispatchers. See despatchers.

dispatches. 'A Mittimus, a Justice of Peace's Warrant to send a Rogue to Prison, etc.,' A New Canting Dict., 1725, where is, at barnacles, the sentence, 'I saw the Cuffin Quire with his Nose Barnacled, making out the Cove's Dispatches'; 1785, Grose; by 1859, American as mittimus (Matsell); app. † by 1890. The J.P. dispatches the warrant, which is a sort of dispatch.—2. 'False dice used by gamblers, so contrived as always to throw a nick': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus' (despatches); 1859, H (id.); † by 1891 (F & H). Ex dispatchers (see despatchers).

distiller. 'One who is easily vexed and betrays his chagrin': Australian convicts': ca. 1820–1910: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H. Ex walking distiller: see carry the cag.

ditch, v. To get (a person) into trouble: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary), 'Ditch, or Be Ditched: to get into trouble, or to fail at what one has undertaken. To be "ditched" when riding on trains means to be put off, or to get locked into a car'; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft (of getting a dishonest policeman into disgrace with his superiors); 1903, Flynt, Rudrick Cloud (of informing on a criminal); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (as in the 'Flynt, 1899' citation); April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by M. Acklom; 1932, Frank Jennings, who notes its currency among English tramps; by 1940, low s. in U.S.A. Ex the S.E. sense, 'to throw (a person) into a ditch' (Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, May 1816, p. 248).—2. To abandon (a person): ca. 1886, in Lewis E. Lawes, Cell 202, Sing Sing, 1935; (valid for ca. 1899) Flynn's, March 30, 1929, Anon., 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery'; Nov. 1, 1930, Liberty; 1930, C. R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1935, s., in U.S.A.; by 1936, current in England, where also, by 1946, it > s.—3. To throw or force (esp. a tramp) off a train: tramps': 1899 (sense 1, first quot'n); 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1931, Irwin; extant. I.e., so that he comes to rest at the foot of the embankment.—4. To arrest (a person); to send (him) to prison: 1928, J. K. Ferrier, 'Crime in the United States' in his Crooks and Crime; May 1928, The American Mercury (see bum beef); extant.—5. (Ex sense 3). To hide (something): 1928, Chicago May; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 'Ditch that can [i.e. automobile] . . . Ditch it good and proper'; 1931, Irwin, 'To hide, to secrete'; extant.

ditch out, v.i. To depart, make off, before one's impending arrest; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. To get out of the dry ditch where one rested comfortably.

ditched, be. See ditch.

ditty, n. and v. An informer; to be an informer, to inform: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sing.

div. To pick pockets: 1925, Leverage; extant. By a thinning of dive, v.

dive, n. See dive, make the.—2. 'A dive, is a thief who stands ready to receive goods thrown out to him, by a little boy put in at a window,' Grose, 1785: but 'dive' is almost certainly a misprint for 'diver', for the definition agrees with that at diver, 1.—3. A place of low resort, esp. an illegal drinking-den: U.S.A.: 1881, The Man Traps of New York, opp. p. 16, 'The Perils of the Dives'; 1883, Anthony Comstock, Traps for the Young, 'The Keeper of the dive or gambling saloon'; 1887, G. W. Walling, Recollections; by 1890, general s., the term having been detectives' s. from before 1872, for, in that year, E. Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York, says that 'in detective parlance, every foul place is a dive, whether it be a cellar or garret, or neither'.—4. Hence, any place objectionable to the underworld: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. the apparent contradiction inherent in rum, adj.—5. (Ex 1.) A pick-pocket: U.S.A.: C. 20. Ersine, 1933, 'Implies a lack of finesse'.

dive, v. To pick (pockets); v.i., then soon v.t. Thos Middleton, The Blacke Booke, 1604 (see quot'n at nim, v.)—cf. S. Rowlands's 'the diving tricks' (The Knave Of Harts, 1613), which is a literary elaboration, not c.; 1621, B. Jonson, The Metamorphos'd Gipsies, 'Using your nimbles | in diving the pockets'; 1698, B.E., 'Dive, c. to pick a Pocket'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1781, G. Parker; 1785, Grose; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'To dive into the sack; to pick a pocket'; 1818, The London Guide; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III; 1823, Bee; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; by 1891 (F & H), it was †, except in U.S.A. (Ersine, 1933). The semantics: cf. dip, v., 1.

dive, make the. To effect a robbery by pick-pocketry: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'The person into whose pockets they intend making the dive'; ibid., 'If they can make the dive, . . . then they are qualified to . . . follow the profession of a Buz-napper'; 1818, The London Guide, 'When [ladies] wore pockets with hoops, scarcely any operation in all the light finger trade was easier than the dive, or putting in one's fingers'; 1925, Leverage, who does not, however, do more than say, 'Dive, n., Pocket picking'. The pickpocket dives into the pocket.

dive for pearls, 'to wash dishes', is very much rarer than pearl-diver, q.v.

diver. 'Beside [the Curber], there is a Diver, which is in the verie nature of the Curber, for as he'—the latter—'puts in a hooker, so the other puts in at the windowe some little figging boy, who plaies his part nobly, and perhaps the youth is so wel instructed, that he . . . can picke a lock if it be not too crosse warded, and deliver to the Diver what snappings'—booty—'he finds in the chamber,' R. Greene, The Second Part of Conny-catching, 1592, in the section on 'curbing law'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London. This sense appears to have fallen into disuse by 1660 or so, for Grose's reference (see dive, n., 2) is almost certainly historical only. For semantics, cf. sense 2.—Hence, a pickpocket: 1611, Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 'A diver with two fingers, a pickpocket'; ca. 1663, A Caveat for Cut-purses, 'The Diver of hell in his trade is not worse | Then Gilter, and Diver, and Cutter of purse'; 1681, F. Kirkman, The English Rogue, Part Three; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1745, The History of Clubs; 1781, G. Parker; 1785, Grose; 1817, J. J. Stockdale, The Greeks; 1818, The London Guide; 1824, P. Egan (diver-kid); 1828, Jon Bee; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1859, H; 1887, H. Baumann, 'A Slang Ditty', in Londonismen, 'Are smashers and divers | And noble contrivers | Not sold to the beaks | By the coppers an' sneaks?'; 1889, B & L; 1909, Ware; 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1933, Eagle; by 1935, ob. in Britain.—2a. Hence, in U.S.A., a pickpocket having courage to act only against drunken men, The National Police Gazette, Dec. 26, 1846; † by 1920.—3. 'One who lives in a cellar': 1785, Grose; app. † by 1850. This sense, however, may be s., not c. Because he 'dives down' to reach it.—4. (Gen. pl.) A finger: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1930.

diving, n. Pickpocketry: 1714, Alex Smith, Highwaymen; 1752, Anon., Villainy Unmask'd; 1820, Anon., The King of the Swindlers; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1900.

diving, adj. Thievish; esp. pickpocket: 1662 (see budge, give the); 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'One of our diving companions picked their pockets'; 1726, Alex. Smith, Memoirs of Jonathan Wild, 'The diving trade'; 1742, Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV; 1789, G. Parker (see padding, adj.).

diving bell. 'A rum-shop in a basement': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs; by 1891 (F & H), it was low s. Cf. diver, 3.

diving-hooks. Appliances for picking pockets: late C. 18–19; R. H. Thornton, An American Glossary, 1912, cites instances for the years 1795 and 1821. See dive, v.

diving lay, the. Pickpocketry: 1732, trial of Thomas Beck (in John Vilette, The Annals of Newgate, 1776), 'He has been upon the diving lay with Peter Buck', which occurs first in Select Trials, 1735; current until ca. 1930—though ob. since ca. 1890. See preceding entry † lay.

division hopper. 'A bum who rides back and forth over the same railroad division,' Ersine, 1933: tramps'.

division leap. 'Division leaps belonged to the old yeggs, who beat the trains in long jumps from one division to another,' Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld', The American Mercury, May 1928: prob. since ca. 1890: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant—though slightly ob.

divorce. 'Loss of man by jail sentence,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: since ca. 1910. Cf. — divorced. Separated from a friend or a gang-companion because of arrest and conviction: Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'); 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. As if man and wife, parted by actual divorce.

divvy, n. A share of plunder; a dividend of profit: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'He agreed to make a fair "divvy" of the funds then in his hands'; 1891, Wm de Vere, Tramp Poems of the West; by 1895, s. Either ex 'division' or ex 'dividend'.

divvy, v. To divide; to share: 1881, A. Pinkerton, Professional Thieves and the Detective; 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 'It is a notorious fact that he [a tramp] will "divvy" his last meal with a pal'; 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers That Prey (p. 205, as a criminal's term); 1903, Flynt, The Rise of Roderick Cloud; by 1905 it was low s. Cf. the n., whence it may imm. derive.

do, n. An affair: 1823, 'A gallows do', it is when any of the party may be nipped and split upon', Jon Bee, but prob. it was current a lustrum or even a decade earlier; low s. by 1860; general s. by 1910. A substantivizing of the v.—2. A swindle: 1818 (see double do); 1821, Sessions Papers, June (p. 261), 'Redding said, "This is a do for the purpose of defrauding your creditors"'; 1828 (see double do); 1828, ibid., 'Your officiousness will be rewarded by some do or other, in the end'; 1863, ibid.; low s. by 1889 (B & L).—3. Hence, the do: swindling: 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London, 'Some one or other among them may find opportunity to be upon the do'; app. † by 1880.—4. Robbery: 1818, The London Guide, p. 37, 'Upon the do' (engaged in robbery); app. † by 1890. Cf. senses 2 and 3.—5. (Perhaps ex sense 4.) A gaming-house: 1818, The London Guide (p. 50), 'Lately a general blow up hath taken place of nearly all the do's at the west end of the town', where, however, the sense may be as in 2; if genuine, it was † by 1880. (A reference on p. 61 of The Guide supports the authenticity of the 'gaming-house' definition.)

do, v. The sense 'to swindle' is s.; it may, however, be noted that ca. 1770–1840 it was much used by professional swindlers (see, e.g., Anon., The Swindler Detected, revised ed., 1781, and George Parker, A View of Society, 'You are done for your pocket book'). In the U.S.A., too, it may have been c. during the approximate period 1780–1820: witness Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807. 'Do is derived from the chase term: when a head of deer is taken, they say "Do him", i.e. cut his throat and chop his head; then "he is done"', Jon Bee, 1823.—2. To convict; to hang: see done.—3. To utter (counterfeit money): 'a term used by smashers': 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To do a queer half-quid, or a queer screen, is to utter a counterfeit half-guinea, or a forged bank-note'; 1823, Egan's Grose; Feb. 1847, Sessions Papers, 'I want you to do a little bill for me'; 1891, F & H; by 1920, †.—4. To rob (a person), esp. by picking his pocket:

1777, Sessions Papers, 1st Sir James Esdaile session, trial of Wm Brown; 1818, The London Guide; 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'He was talking to a gentleman, when I slipp'd past and did him'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, Sessions; 1889, Charles White, Convict Life; ob. Ex sense 1.—5. To rob or burgle (a building); to steal: 1774, Sessions Papers, 1st John Wilkes Session, trial of Amos Merritt; 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James MacKcoul, 'To do the bank'; 1850, Sessions; 1861, James McLevy, The Sliding Scale of Life, 'She made occasionally great "catches", having once "done" £400'; 1879, Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.; 1889, B & L; 1892, Sessions; 1936, George Ingram, The Muffled Man; extant, esp. in do a gaff—a job—a joint.—6. To kill: 1780, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, mayoralty of Brackley Kennet, No. VI, Part xiii, p. 611, col. 2; 1810, Sessions Papers; 1823, Bee, 'Do him, Joey: i.e. let fly and kill him'; 1891, Jacob A. Riis (U.S.A.); by 1920, low s. Cf. sense 2.—7. To pawn: 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct., 'I . . . done the wedge (silver-plate) for five-and-twenty quid'; by 1920, low s.—8. To catch or seize hold of; to hand over to the police; to arrest: 1784, Sessions Papers, Jan., p. 221, 'He stepped on one side of me and said, you have not done me yet'; 1936, Geo. Ingram, The Muffled Man, 'Blow me if one of your tribe'—policemen—'don't go and do me and I get found a quid'; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant. Cf. done, 1.—9. To inform on (a person) to the police: U.S.A.: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'He tells his friends in stir that "Al done him", and pretty soon poor Al, who may be an honest [i.e., loyal] thief, is put down as a rat' (an informer); ob. Perhaps short for s. do for, 'to ruin'.—10. To have homosexual relations with: convicts': C. 20. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938.—11. (Esp. of the police) to search, as in do a drum, to search a house for incriminating articles: since ca. 1925. David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open, 1935; Richard Llewellyn, None but the Lonely Heart, 1943.—12. To serve time in prison: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine. Short for do time.

do, upon the. See do, n., 3 and 4.

do a bit. See do one's bit.

do a bit of class. To commit a crime either notable or, at lowest, worthy of one's abilities: ca. 1880–1930. Clarence Rook, The Hooligan Nights, 1899. Coll. class = high class, as in 'She's real class, she is!'

do a bit of stiff. See stiff, bit of.

do a bookful is an occ. synonym of do it all. Rose, 1934. Bookful is an elaboration of book, n., 3.

do a Botany, Australian for 'to decamp', may orig.—? ca. 1860—have been c., esp. in its full form, do a Botany Bay, rhyming on 'run away'. In C. 20, it is low s.: Baker, 1945.

do a Brodie. See brodie.

do a bust. To commit a burglary: see bust, do a.

do a crack. See crack, do a.

do a crib. To rob a house: 1891, F & H; ob. by 1920; virtually † by 1930. See do, v., 5, and crib, n.

do a cross-country (cf. do a Nurmi). To run away from the police: since ca. 1928. Howard N. Rose, 1934. I.e., a running (away).

do a drum. See do, v., 11.

do a duck (esp. as vbl n., doing). To travel by train without paying one's fare: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; extant. One 'does a duck' (disappears) when the ticket-collector approaches.

do a dutch. To run away from the law; to disappear: 1929-31, Kernôt; extant. Ex Dutch act.

do a figure eight. See figure eight.

do a flit. See flit, do a.

do a gaff. To commit a burglary: 1931, Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Book; 1936, George Ingram, The Muffled Man; extant. See gaff, n., 9 and 10, and do, v., 5.

do a guy. See guy, do a.

do a hot foot. 'To run away from a police officer is to do a hot foot.' Popular Science Monthly, April 1897, A. F. B. Crofton, 'The Language of Crime'; † by 1940. To get one's feet hot by running.

do a job. To commit a robbery, esp. to break into and rob a house: 1811 (see job, 2); 1812 (id.); and often throughout C. 19 and C. 20—e.g., in Ronald A. Fuller, Recollections of a Detective, 1912, 'The two were engaged "doing a job" at a lonely place . . . when two mounted patrols came upon them'; by 1930, at the latest, New Zealand c. for 'to commit a crime' (Nelson Baylis, private letter, 1932); current, C. 20, in South Africa for 'commit a burglary' (J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946).

do a joint. See joint, 3.

do a Judge Crater. See Judge Crater.

do a lam. See lam, do a.

do a Nurmi. To run away; depart hastily: ca. 1925-35: 1929, Givens; 1934, Howard N. Rose. Ex the famous Finnish long-distance runner of the 1920's-early 1930's. For other athletes philologically involved with the underworld, cf. Duffy and Paddock.

do a push. To depart; to run away: mid-C. 19-20; ob. Partridge, 1937. Cf. the s. push off, 'to depart'.

do a skipper. See skipper, do a.

do a sneak. To depart; make off: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; ob. Cf. cop a sneak.

do a solo. To turn State's evidence: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. All by himself, all alone, he abandons the gang to which he has belonged.

do a star pitch. 'to sleep in the open air' (F & H, 1891), is theatrical s. Cf. :—

do a starry. To sleep in the open: mostly tramps': 1926, Netley Lucas, London and its Criminals; 1934, Netley Lucas, My Selves; extant. Cf. lie under the blue blanket, doss with the daisies, and Fr. s. coucher à l'hôtel de l'Etoile. Perhaps imm. ex the theatrical s. synonym, do a star pitch.

do a trick. To serve a prison sentence: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Convict'; extant. Ex nautical j. do a trick, a turn at the wheel.

do and dare. (Female) underwear: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

do away. 'Do it away, to fence or dispose of a stolen article beyond the reach of probable detection': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1891, F & H; ob. I.e., put (it) away.

do for. 'to murder', may always have been low s., but, judging by its use in Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, trial of Stephen Saunders, July 9, 1740, ('"D-mn you, I'll do for you"') and, ibid., in the trial of John Stubbs (Dec. 1797), and ibid., Oct. 1823, and in the anon. translation of Eugene Sue's

The Mysteries of Paris, I, pub. in 1845, "'What, do they mean to do for him?" "No, not quite, but to make him more careful in future"' (translation) I think that orig. (? ca. 1730) and until ca. 1860, it was c. Prob. elliptical for 'do a person's business for him'.—2. To sentence or convict (an accused person): 1812, Vaux (see done); 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1891, F & H; by 1910, low s. Cf. do, v., 2.

do in. To denounce (someone) to the police: C. 20; by 1925, low s. A. Neil Lyons, 1914—cited by Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Cf. do for, 2.

do it all; esp. as vbl n., doing it all. To serve a life term: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, John Caldwell; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; Jan. 27, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; 1934, Rose; 1935, David Lamson; 1936, Herbert Corey; 1938, Castle; extant. All that could be done.

do it away. See do away.

do it easy; do it tough. To be lucky; to 'take it hard'; in prison: convicts': C. 20. Castle, 1938, 'I knew these lonely ones were "doing it tough"'.

do it up. See do up, 2. Cf. :—

do it up in good twig. 'A person who contrives by nob-work, or ingenuity, to live an easy life, and appears to improve daily in circumstances, is said to do it up in good twig': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1900.

do on one's head. See head, do on one's.

do one's bit; more usually do a bit. To serve a sentence of imprisonment: 1884, Arthur Griffiths (see bit, n., 4); 1885, A. Griffiths, Fast and Loose, "'They will think we have been doing a 'bit' in the country"' ; 1894, A. Griffiths, Secrets of the Prison House; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1909, Ware; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom ('do a bit', as always in U.S.A.); Nov. 20, 1926, Flynn's; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; by 1930, low s. See bit, n., 4.

do one's bit on a pill. See pill . . .

do one's own time. Rare except in do your own time!, q.v.

do out. 'To plead guilty and exonerate an accomplice': 1891, F & H; ob.

do out and out; usually done out and out. To rob (a person) of everything, or rather of everything that he carries in bag and on person: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society (see fox, v., 1); † by 1930. An intensification of do, v., 4.—2. To murder (a person): 1784, Sessions Papers, Dec. 10th (but relating to and valid for 1782), p. 15, 'They [convicts] had [at Fort Morea, West Africa] an expression, by doing out and out, they meant killing': app. † by 1890. An elaboration of do, v., 6.

do over. To cheat; to swindle: 1781, Geo. Parker, A View of Society, 'And now, Hostler, can't you tell me how you have done 'em over?'; 1785, Grose, 'I have done him over, I have robbed him'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'A man that has easily been robbed at cards, &c. the sharp says, "I did him over"' ; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1890, s. Perhaps = turn over, upset; as the next sense also may.—2. To ruin; be the (lit.) death of; to convict: 1773 (see done); 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, '[Of] a man . . . cast for death, [criminals and their companions would say that] the judge did him over'; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890.—3.

To rob (a building): Sessions, Feb. 1, 1855 (p. 376), 'Doing a drum over—I understand that that is breaking into a house'; ibid., Feb. 25, 1858; 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life; ob.—4. 'To search a victim's pockets without his knowing it': 1891, F & H; extant. Cf. run the rule over.

do polly (or P-). 'Doing Polly. Picking oakum in prison': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1901, F & H (at polly); extant. In late C. 19–20, also Australian: Baker, 1942.

do-ray (or re-me). Money; esp., cash: 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights (-ray-); 1933, Eagle (-re-); Sept. 7, 1935, Flynn's, Ex-Burglar; by 1937 (letter of Nov. 5, from Godfrey Irwin), it was s. Either rhyming l.s.d. (cash) and adopted ex English crooks operating in the U.S.A., or more prob. suggested by s. dough, 'money'—as the following quot'n suggests: 'It was a fine safe; therefore my comrade and I thought it contained some doughrame,' Ex-Burglar, 'Why Burglars Become Bandits' (as above).

do-right John; square John, hence square apple. A non-addict to drugs: since ca. 1925. BVB. John = 'guy', fellow.

do some short time. To serve time in the work-house for petty offences: 1895, J. W. Sullivan, Tenement Tales of New York; by 1900, low s. Cf. do time.

do stir. See stir, do.

do the barmy. See barmy, do the.

do the Dutch act. See Dutch act.

do the lob. See lob, 1, reference of 1863.

do the long trot. See long trot . . .

do the rosary. See rosary.

do the story with. See story with, do the.

do the swag. 'To sell stolen property,' F & H, 1891; rather ob. See swag, n., 3.

do the trick. 'To accomplish any robbery, or other business successfully; a thief who has been fortunate enough to acquire an independence, and prudent enough to tie it up in time, is said by his former associates to have done the trick; a man who has imprudently involved himself in some great misfortune, from which there is little hope of his extrication is declared by his friends, with an air of commiseration, to have done the trick for himself; that is, his ruin or downfall is nearly certain': 1812, J. H. Vaux; May 1818, Sessions Papers; 1823, Egan's Grose (plagiarizingly from Vaux); by 1840, s.; by 1860, coll.; by 1880, S.E.

do time, 'to serve a sentence in prison', may orig. have been c., but prob. it began as proletarian s. In the U.S.A., it may have been c. during the approximate period, 1860–1900: see, e.g., Darkness and Daylight, 1891, at p. 253.

do time on one's ear. To be a lucky, a happy-go-lucky, or a specially favoured prisoner: convicts': April 16, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; extant. Cf. s. do a thing on one's head, i.e., easily.

do up. To ruin: 1797, Humphry Potter, 'Done up, ruined by gaming, or extravagance'; by 1860, s. Perhaps ex the idea of doing (or tying) up a thing and so, finishing with it.—2. 'Do it up, to accomplish any object you have in view; to obtain any thing you were in quest of, is called doing it up for such a thing': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1890.—3. (Ex sense 1.) To injure seriously; to kill: U.S.A.: 1891, Jacob A. Riis, How the Other Half Lives, '[In the gangs] "doing up" a policeman [is] cause for promotion'; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; † by 1941.—4. To rob: U.S.A.: since the 1890's: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; ob. Ex senses 1, 2.

do up a job. To commit a burglary: 1892, Jacob A. Riis, The Children of the Poor (p. 90); † by 1930. Cf. do a job and do up, 2.

do upon the lift. To rob (a person, a shop) by shoplifting: 1781, Geo. Parker, A View of Society, 'Off she sets, with thanks for being a customer, who has done them upon the Lift'; app. † by 1890. See lift, the.

do your own time! Take your sentence quietly, courageously, uncomplainingly: since ca. 1919. Lewis E. Lawes, 20,000 Years in Sing Sing, 1932, 'You mustn't let anyone else do your bit. Do your own time. Be careful of the wolves in the institution'; 1938, Don Castle, Do Your Own Time; extant.

doash. A cloak: 1698, B.E.; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed. (dose); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—if Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859, is to be trusted; by 1891 (F & H), it was †. A perversion of Romany plochta (or plashta): cf. Shelta shlaka.

dobash, 'a crooked broker' (Leverage, 1925): (orig. low) commercial s., not c. dobbin. See cant of dobbin, dobbin rig and:—

dobbin, go upon the. To practise the 'dobbin rig': 1781, George Parker (. . . dobin); † by 1860.

dobbin lay, the. A variation of the next: Matsell, 1859.

dobbin rig, the. 'Done by a woman about seven o'clock on a winter's morning, who is dressed like a servant-maid If she spies an apprentice at a Haberdasher's opening the shop windows, she applies for a yard and a half of ribbon, but takes care to stand in the darkest part of the shop As soon as the ribbon-drawer is set before her in order to choose the colour, she begins to work; and after she has disturbed the whole economy of the drawers, she orders a yard and a half of such a coloured ribbon; and while the fool of an apprentice is taking down the other shutter, or looking for a pair of scissors, Madam is cutting, shuffling, and working the rolls of ribbon into a large pocket that hangs before her for that purpose. It has been well known, that in a few mornings a woman has made on the Dobbin Rig two or three hundred yards of ribbon': 1781, Geo. Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1891 (F & H). See rig, n.; dobbin may be a perversion of ribbon.

dobbing cant, the. 1801, Col. George Hanger, Life, Adventures, and Opinions: an error for cant of dobbin. The Colonel didn't know much about it!

dobbins, 'one's clothes', is suspect. It occurs in G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. xcxi: 1846.

dobe. A dollar: 1933, Ersine. By perversion or perhaps by corruption of dollar.

dobe shot. A very small charge of explosive. 'A dobe shot ought to crack this old safe': Ersine, 1933. Ex prec.

dobin. See dobbin, go upon the. Parker also has dobin rig.

dobbing lay, the. Matsell's spelling. See dobbin lay.

dock. (Of the man) to copulate with: 1536, Copland, 'Docked a dell'; 1566, Harman, 'He dakte the Dell'—it is usually dell, prob. ex—and for—the alliteration; 1665, R. Head, 'Dock . . . To —'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; by 1830, †. Sadistic ex the

S.E. dock, to cut (an animal) short in, esp., the tail : cf. s. tail, the female pudend, and modern s. tail, the posteriors.—2. Hence, v.i. (of both parties) : 1620, Dekker, Villanies Discovered, 'Being a wast to Romeville then, | (O my Doxie, O my Dell) | Weele heave a Booth, and Dock agen, | And Tryning scape, and all his [sic] well'; 1688, Holme; † by 1810.—3. The sense 'to cut' is not c., despite Defoe in Street-Robberies consider'd, 1728.—4. 'To serve opium,' Leverage, 1925 : U.S.A. : since ca. 1910; slightly ob. Short for 'to doctor'?—5. 'To park an automobile,' Ersine, 1933 : U.S.A. Ex 'dock a ship'.

docket. See ducket, 2.

doctor, n. See doctors.—2. 'A "doctor", a little rubber piece of tube or pouch which when squeezed would allow the drug to flow into the glass or cup with a quick squirt,' Chas B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909 : white-slavers' : C. 20. Also gun (Chrysler, l.c.). Cf. doctor, v.—3. 'One who loads or uses loaded dice,' Leverage, 1925 : since ca. 1910. Ex sense 1.

doctor, v. 'To poison (a term much used in prison),' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ignorance has always distrusted doctors and the medicines they prescribe : cf. black bottle.

doctor, clack(ing) the. See clacking the doctor.

Doctor Bates. A dangerous ex-convict : since ca. 1915. IA, 1931, 'From a certain individual of the same name'; 1934, Rose; extant.—2. Hence, since ca. 1920, 'any really "tough" tramp or hobo' : 1931, IA.

Doctor Green. 'A young inexperienced fellow' : 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1910. Cf. that famous mid-C. 19 English novel, Verdant Green.

Doctor Hall; often shortened to Hall. 'The first peddler returned in an hour with his quota of "Dr. Hall" (alcohol), and the drinking began afresh,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926—with the implication that the term was already current ca. 1907; ibid., 'I was full of "Hall" (liquor)'; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, IA; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan, '"Dr. Hall" (alcohol and water) Yorkey Ned, the poet of Yeagdom, wrote a song about Yeags and "Dr. Hall"'; 1934, Rose; extant. Either by perversion (alco-hol > alky-hall : alky > alker, which suggests doctor), as I propose; or, as Godfrey Irwin proposes, ex the name or the nickname of some old-timer especially addicted to, or marvellously capacious of, alcohol.

Doctor Jenkins. A dangerous person : convicts' : since ca. 1925. Howard N. Rose, 1934. Prob. ex some prison doctor that, named Jenkins, was a shade too fond of the surgeon's 'knife'.

Doctor Mat(t)hew. A dangerous person : convicts' : since the 1920's. Howard N. Rose. Cf. prec. entry.

Doctor White. The drug habit : since ca. 1925. BVB, 1942. Cf. white powder, white stuff.

Doctor Wilson. A prisoner that is to be released in a few hours' time : convicts' : 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. 'This is what the doctor ordered! I will soon be out'; that, or something like it, lies behind the term.

doctors; rare in the singular. False dice : 1552, Gilbert Walker, 'A finer [trick] than this invented an Italian, and won much money with it by our doctors'—though here 'doctors' may signify card-sharpers; B.E. defines doctor as 'a false Die, that will run but two or three Chances', as T. Shadwell did in The Squire of Alsatia, 1688; 1698, B.E., 'They put the Doctor upon him, c. they cheated him with false Dice'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'They put the doctors upon him, they cheated him with loaded dice'; 1792, The Minor Jockey Club; 1809, Andrewes; 1828, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, I; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 'False cards or dice'; 1887, Baumann; by 1891 (F & H), †. Dice that are 'learned' (in the hands of a card-sharper).—2. 'Hence any noted Cheat or Impostor, or any tricking Tradesman or Gamester is often called Doctor,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1840.—3. Hence (or ex sense 1), 'the last throw at play—whether of dice or ninepins' : 1823, Bee (the doctor); † by 1891 (F & H).—4. Counterfeit coin : C. 20. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Prob. ex sense 1.

doctor's and governor's men. 'As a rule they [begging-letter writers] are a troublesome type of men for prison officials to deal with, exceedingly averse to anything approaching hard labour, but having a similar detestation for the diminution of rations served to men at minor laborious tasks. They are consequently known among other prisoners as "doctor's and governor's men"—that is, men who are constantly complaining and seeking favours or more agreeable forms of occupation' : 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; ob. by 1918; † by 1940.

dodge, n. As a synonym for lay, n., 2, it was, ca. 1850–90, much used in the underworld : but this is, essentially, the sense in which the term was (and still is) used elsewhere : therefore, hardly c.

dodge, v., 'to track one in a stealthy manner' (as in Dickens's Oliver Twist), is not, I think, c.; prob. s. In The London Guide, 1818, it is defined as 'to follow at a distance'. There is undoubtedly some reference to or reminiscence of 'to dog'.

dodge, delivered. See delivered dodge.—dodge, on the. See on the dodge.

dodger, 'a dram', is not c. but s.; s., too, is the sense 'a swindler'.—2. A ten-shilling piece : beggars' and tramps' : since ca. 1905. Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows, 1926.—3. A folder containing a wanted man's description and picture : U.S.A. : 1933, Ersine; by 1945, s.

dodo. A drug addict : 1929–31, Kernôt; May 14, 1932, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; extant—though slightly ob. by 1945. If intensive, he soon becomes as 'dead as the dodo'.

dodsey. A woman : 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1811, Lex. Bal.; app. † by 1830. A perversion of doxy.

doee. See docee.

doe. An infant : 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1931, IA, 'A child'; slightly ob. Ex the tender animal; perhaps with a veiled pun on dear ('the little dear') and deer.

doen my kop se ding. For this Afrikaans phrase, see carry in one's heart. Lit., 'do my head's thing'—fulfil what I have in mind.

dog, n. 'A contrivance that directs the chain along the plate' in which a door-lock is set : 1881, The Man Traps of New York, Ch. VI, 'Hotel Sneak Thieves', section concerning the opening of chain bolts; 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; extant. As useful and as faithful as a dog?—2. A traitor to fellow criminals; an informer to the police : U.S.A. : 1846, The National Police Gazette, Feb. 21;

app. † by 1900. A dog barks: cf. squeal, v.—3. Hence, a warder: Australian convicts': 1894, H. S. White, Tales of Crime and Criminals in Australia (p. 46). After ca. 1918, a plain-clothes railroad detective, as in Baker, 1942. Ex dog, v., 2.—4. The moon: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. It eyes—or is dangerous to—the criminal much as a watch-dog would eye—or be dangerous to—him.—5. The sense 'a fool'—it is, by the way, used mostly in the pl.—may orig. have been tramps' c.; after, ca. 1935, as prob. always, it was low s. 'Possibly from the expression "dogging one's footsteps"; more likely from a humorous reference to the size of an individual's feet ["Well, I'll be doggon"]': Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—6. The residue after gum opium has been cooked and strained: drug addict': since the 1920's. Ben Reitman, Sister of Road, 1941. This residue, left on the cheese cloth-strainer resembles a dog's coat.—7. A cigarette-end: vagrants': since ca. 1925. Michael Harrison, Spring in Tartarus, 1935. Short for dog-end.—8. Hence, a vagrant searcher for cigarette-ends: since ca. 1925, Michael Harrison, Weep for Lycidas, 1934.

dog, v. To see: 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, "Islema! Ogda the Opperca!" which in slang is—"Misle! Dog the copper!" otherwise—"Vanish! See the policemen!"; † by 1920. Ex a dog's keen vision.—2. The sense 'to follow (a person)' is S.E. in England; nor, despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, has it ever been c. in the U.S.A.—3. To put on side, to show off: U.S.A.: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; extant. Short for s. put on dog.—4. To withdraw from, go back on a plan of committing a crime; to make off without doing anything: to turn coward: U.S.A.: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life, 'Do we root [i.e., burgle]—or are you going to dog it?'; Sept. 19, 1931, Flynn's, Paul Annixter, 'Paul's friends had persuaded him to dog it out of town while he was all in a piece'; Jan. 27, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan, 'Was I going to dog it?' (to abandon a project); extant. Like a dog with its tail between its legs.—5. Hence, to run, to flee: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine.

dog buffer; usually pl. 'Dog Buffers. Dog stealers, who kill those dogs not advertised for, sell their skins, and feed the remaining dogs with their flesh': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1900. The same as buffer, 2.

dog-end; usually in pl. 'Hard-up, dog-ends—cigarettes from the gutter,' Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1920. Also in, e.g., James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936.

dog eye; dog's eye. 'Dog's eye. Sidelong glance. Give him the dog eye—to glare at him,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Dog Eye.—A close inspection or scrutiny'; Aug. 10, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, 'I felt like a big bull was giving me the dog-eye'; extant. Such as a dog gives a stranger.

dog-eye, v. To inspect; to scrutinize: 1931, Irwin; 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 'To size-up at a glance'; extant. Ex the n.

dog-house. A railroad calaboose: tramps': C. 20: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, railroad s. Ex its formerly small size.—2. 'A small garage in a residential neighbourhood, often one owned by a householder and rented by a gang of automobile thieves in which to store their stolen cars until pursuit and discovery seem unlikely,' Irwin, 1931: car thieves': since ca. 1920. Humorous.—3. A 'watch tower on prison wall,' Rose, 1934: convicts': since the middle 1920's. Derisive.

dog it. See dog, v., 4.

dog-nipper. 'Dog-Nippers. Rogues who steal dogs, and restore them to their owners after a reward has been offered': 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Ex nip (to steal).

dog on (anyone), walk the black. 'A punishment inflicted in the night on a fresh prisoner, by his comrades, in case of his refusal to pay the usual footing or garnish': prison c.: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.: app. † by 1900. Black, because the trick is worked in the dark; dog, ex the quietness with which it is done.

dog robber. A boarding-house keeper; occ., a boarding-house servant: tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931.

dogger-out. A look-out man (or boy) for a gambling-school or for a gang of burglars: 1931, Desmond Morse-Boycott, We Do See Life! (the former nuance); extant—but not very gen. See dog, v., 2, and cf. S.E. watch-dog.

doggery, 'a low "dive" or unlicensed whisky shop' (Maitland, 1891; also in Bartlett, 2nd ed., 1859), is on the borderline between c. and low s.

dogs, 'sausages'—cf. hot dogs—is s., not c. 'Where, oh where, has my little dog gone? Where, oh where, can he be?'—2. Whereas the sense 'feet' is low s., the sense 'a pair of shoes' is c.—Ersine, 1933.

dog's body. Bully beef: tramps': 1933, Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby; extant. By humorous depreciation. See prec. entry.

dog's eye. See dog eye.

dog's nose, 'gin and beer'; not c. but public-house s.

dog's paste. 'Sausage-meat; mince meat': 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. See dogs.

dog's rig. 'To copulate until you are tired, and then turn tail to it' (Grose); not c., but low s.

dog's soup, 'water': s., not c.

dohun. Tobacco: French-Canadian tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (see quot'n at pano); extant. Prob. ex some American dialect: cf. Fr. petun, tobacco.

doing. The bashing of a convict by warders: convicts': 1888, George Bidwell, Forging His Chains (American; but concerning an English prison); † by 1940. Cf. do, v., 6.

doing a duck. See do a duck.

doing it all. See do it all.

dok. See dock.

dokka; gunja. Hashish; derivatively, hashish or marijuana smoked in a cigarette: Anglo-Indian drug addicts': since ca. 1920. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938. Indian names for hashish, of which marijuana is the Mexican form.

dole; doler. To receive—a receiver of—stolen goods: 1925, Leverage; extant—but not much used. With a sly reference to the predominant C. 20 sense of dole.

doll or Doll. A member of one of the female orders (or classes or types) of beggars: 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'The Victualers to the campe [of a beggar gang] are women . . . some are Glymerers, some Bawdy-Baskets, some Autem-Morts: others Walking-Morts: some Dopers, others are Dols, the last and least are called Kinchyn-Morts; app. † by 1700. I.e., Doll = Dorothy; cf. moll. (Cf. doll in the supplement of the 3rd ed. of my Dict. of Slang).—2. Hemp: see mill doll.—3. A girl; esp. if member of a gang, or an associate of one or more of its members: 1849, Sessions Papers (March 5, trial of the Phillips brothers), policeman log., '[The prisoner] said he intended to give himself up to clear the two dolls, meaning the girls'; in C. 20, American, as in Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909, and Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls, 1931, and Eagle, 1933 ('Doll—a good-looking girl'); by 1935, low s. in U.S.A. and ob. in Britain.—4. 'A pretty and well-dressed young woman A new and very popular word in the underworld,' Ersine, 1933.

doll, mill. See mill doll.

dollop. A three months' term of imprisonment: 1860, H, 2nd ed. (at braggadocio); † by 1910. Ex S.E. and dial. dollop, a portion; cf. dose, n., 4, and jolt.

dolly. See nix my doll.—2. A candle; tramps': C. 20. Partridge, 1938. See dolly up.

dolly pal. A spurious term, coined by Aytoun & Martin (Tait's Magazine, April 1841, 'Flowers of Hemp'), in burlesque of Ainsworth's 'Nix my doll palls, fake away'—see nix my doll.

dolly shop. An illegal pawn-shop; a receiver's parlour—or office: since ca. 1840: in, e.g., Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 1851; No. 747, 1893; and Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932.

Dolly Sisters. 'Policemen patrolling the streets together'—i.e., in pairs—'in automobile or motor-cycle and sidecar': Nov. 1931, IA; ob. Ex that famous pair of entertainers.

dolly up, v.i. To heat water or tea with a candle: tramps': since ca. 1905. Partridge, 1938. Ex dolly, 2. This dolly may be a corruption of s. tolly, 'a candle (itself ex tallow)—perhaps introduced by a Public School man come down in the world.

dollymop, 'a street-walker', 'an amateur prostitute': not c. but low s.

dolman. Newgate Prison bell, rung for a hanging: 1821, Pierce Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Triumph,' 'The dolman sounding, while the sheriffs nod'; † by 1890. I.e., S.E. dole, 'grief' + -man (see -mans).

dolphin. See pricking in the wicker . . .

doltish, 'foolish, stupid', is wrongly classified by B.E., 1698, as c.

domela is an error (Potter, 1797) for dommerar.

domine(e), -ie. A person: not c. (as in Egan's Grose), but S.E. domino. 'The last lash in a flogging,' Baker, 1945: Australian convicts': ca. 1810–70. Ex the end of a game of dominoes.

domino box, 'the mouth', is not c., as classified in Egan's Grose, but s.

dommerar, -er; occ., dummerar (or -er). 'These Dommerars'—pretended dumb men—'are leud and most subtyll people: the most parte of these are Walch men, and wyll never speake, unless they have extreame punishment, but wyll gape, and with a marvellous force wyll hold downe their touns doubled, groning for your charyty, and holding up their handes full pitiously, so that with their deepe dissimulation they get very much. There are of these many, and but one that I understand of hath lost his tounge in ded,' Harman, 1566; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, spells it dummerar; 1665, R. Head, 'Dommerar . . . A madman';

1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 'Dommerer, a Madman, a Bedlam'—a weakening of the correct sense; 1698, B.E. states that the domerars are the 21st Order of Canters; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., says that, 'by a forged writing', they give the public to understand that 'their tongues were cut out in the Turkish Slavery, for reviling the Prophet Mahomet, or refusing to comply with his damnable Doctrine'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Domerars, or Drommerars'; 1785, Grose—but the term was almost certainly † by 1760.—2. Hence, 'the Word is also used for Mad-men,' A New Canting Dict., 1725 (see also sense 1, refs. of 1665 and 1688); † by 1760.

dona or donna or doner.—Not c. but parlyaree and thence low London street s.: esp. in donna and feeles, a woman and children (It. donna et figli or figlie). See, e.g., Thomas Frost, Circus Life, 1875. In modern s., it is gen. spelt donah, and has the meaning, '(One's) best girl'.

dona Jack, 'a prostitute's bully': in the border-country between low s. and c.: late C. 19–20; rather ob. Ware, 1909. Here, Jack = a fellow; see dona.

donaker. See dunaker.

donbite, 'a street' (Matsell), is an error.

done; done over. Convicted (by a judge): 1773, Anon., The Bow-Street Opera, 'Turnkey, Dick Finchley, Sir, is done over.—Governor (of Prison). An incautious dog! This is the seventeenth time that he has been convicted for the first offence'; 1780, Sessions Papers (Jan. 12th); 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'Convicted or hanged'; 1789, G. Parker; 1812, Vaux, 'He was done for a crack'; 1825, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, I; 1859, H; by 1859, current in U.S.A.—Matsell's Vocabulary; 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant.—2. Robbed: see do, v., 1.

done for. See do for.

done out and out. See do out and out.

done over. See done.

done up. See do up.

donegan. A privy: 1821, P. Egan, Life in London, 'If your name had not been chaunted [written] in it [a pocket-book], it would have been dinged into the dunagan'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (U.S.A.), 'A toilet or wash-room'; extant. The word is merely a derivative variant of dunnaken, q.v.

donegan worker. A criminal that specializes in theft from public w.c.'s and wash-rooms: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, describes the modi operandi of these low-brow fellows. See donegan; worker = thief.

doner is the spelling in Baumann (1887) and in Clarkson & Richardson, Police!, 1889, of dona.

donkey, ride the. To cheat in weighing out purchases or, as by 'fences', weighing plate: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1859, current in U.S.A. (Matsell); by 1889 (B & L), it was low s. Making donkeys of the customers.

donkey(-)dipper. 'A low pickpocket who works on the principle of "grip, rip and run",' Baker, 1945: Australian: C. 20. He 'dips' (dip, v.) 'donkeys'—asses, 'mugs', victims.

donna. See dona.

donnaker. See dunaker.

donner or donnez. To give: 1859, Matsell (latter form); app. †—as c., at the least—by 1910. An adoption of the Fr. word.

donnicker. A water-closet: 1933, Ersine. A corruption of dunaker.

donny. A woman: convicts': 1888, G. R. Sims, 'A Plank Bid Ballad'; 1889, B & L; app. † by 1930. A perversion of dona. Cf. — dony. A woman of the underworld: C. 20: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, IA; slightly ob. Cf. donny.

doo is a rare variant of do, n. and v. Colonel George Hanger, 1801.

dood. See dude.

dooe(e) or dooe. Two: not c. but parlyaree. H, 1859 (at saltee), 'Dooe saltee, twopence.—Dooe beong say saltee . . . two shillings and sixpence'. Ex It. due, two.

doogan, 'a stupid fellow', like donkey, 'an Irishman', are not c., but s. Both are recorded by Leverage, 1925.

dook; dook-reading; dookering (and see dukking). A hand; hand-reading, i.e., palmistry: pitchmen's and fair-ground s., as in Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934. Not, I think, from Romany: dook prob. = duke, as in Duke o' Yorks = forks = fingers = hands.

dookey or dooky or dukey or dukee or dukie. A 'penny gaff', i.e., a shop turned into a temporary theatre to which the price of admission is one penny: since ca. 1860: H, 1874; by 1891 (F & H), it was theatrical s. Perhaps cf. dookin.—2. (Dukie.) A 'hand-out' (q.v.): yeggs' (U.S.A.): 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures; but by ca. 1925 (Godfrey Irwin, in letter of Aug. 12, 1937), it was—if, indeed, it had not always been—circus s. See duke, 'hand'.

dookin. Fortune-telling: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1891, F & H, 'Dookin and Dookering . . . (thieves' and gypsies)'.—Fortune-telling; 1909, Ware; by 1920, low s. Ex dook.

dookin cove. A male fortune-teller: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; by 1895, low s. Ex the preceding.

dooky. See dookey.

dooley, doolie, dooly. Nitroglycerin: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, Moreby Acklom, 'Would he make use of soup or of dooley, and why?'; 1925, Leverage; extant. Like 'Mr Dooley', it is 'funny stuff'. The character of Mr Dooley was created by the American author, F. R. Dunne (1867–1936); the series covered the period 1898–1919.

dooley-boy; dooley man. A safe-robber that employs nitroglycerin: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex prec.

door. Glass of a watch: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, ' . . . Takes one clock—a red one with two doors'; extant. Humorous.

door, knock at the. See knock at . . .

door-mat. A coward: 1933, Ersine. Cf. door-matter.

door-mat thief. A petty thief, a 'sneak thief': 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, a thief speaking, 'Nine out of every ten pinches [in N.Y.C.] is East Side door-mat thieves'; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood; Dec. 26, 1936, Flynn's, Convict 12627, 'A petty burglar, sometimes referred to as a "door-mat thief"'; slightly ob.

door-matter. A petty thief: 1934, Howard N. Rosc; extant. He loiters on the door-mat to ascertain whether anyone is at home. Cf. prec. entry.

door-rapper. A petty thief: April 1919, M. Acklom, in The (American) Bookman; ob. He raps on the door to ascertain whether the house or flat is occupied; cf. door-mat thief.

dope, n. 'The opium used for smoking—called by the smokers "dope"—is an aqueous extract of the ordinary commercial gum': 1891, Darkness and Daylight; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'A dope copper who smoked too much [opium]'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1912, D. Lowrie, My Life in Prison; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'Drug of any form'; 1917, H. M. Wodson, The Whirlpool (Canadian); Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'; by 1920, s. Ex Dutch doopen, 'to dip'—via doop, 'dipping; sauce' (O.E.D.).—2. Hence, medicine: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, "'Give me some more o' that dope there—quick—I—I—am—dyin'"; 1902, W. A. Irwin, The Love Sonnets of a Hoodlum; 1917, L. Livingston, From Coast to Coast with Jack London; by 1918, s.—3. 'Picking winners from past performances,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; by 1920, racing s.—4. Information: 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; by 1918, low—and by 1925, general—s.—5. A drug addict: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'He denied being a "dope"'; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar—but, by this time, it was police and journalistic s. See sense 1; but prob. short for dope addict.—6. See dope smoke.

dope, v. To dose with a drug; to poison: 1889, B & L; 1891, J. Maitland, The American Slang Dictionary; by 1900, s. Perhaps ex sense 1 of the n.—2. To take drugs: 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals: prob. c. of ca. 1900–20, then s. Ex dope, n., 1.—3. 'To plan a job. "Dope the score and we'll start"', Ersine, 1933: U.S.A.

Dope, the. The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'Because the [rail]-road was so liberal in the use of the packing on its rolling stock' (Irwin)—i.e., of 'grease-soaked cotton-waste used to pack axle boxes on railroad cars' (Irwin); 'Because it is so greasy' (Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, p. 91).

dope(-)booster is the c. synonym of s. drug booster, 'one who incites to drug taking and directs customers to traffickers': since ca. 1910. BVB.

dope daddy. A protector that provides drugs: since ca. 1925. Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 1936, 'Bargaining for her "dope daddy's" freedom'; extant. See dope, n., 1; formed on s. sugar daddy.

dope den and doperie (or -y), for 'a resort of drug addicts', are not c., but s. BVB, 1942. See dope, n., 1.

dope-fighter. An addict that is fighting against the habit: since ca. 1910; by 1940, s. BVB.

dope (or hop) gun. A hypodermic syringe: addicts': C., 20. BVB. See the elements.

dope-head. A drug addict: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant—though slightly ob. Cf. coke-head and hop-head. Formed on analogy of the latter.

dope hop. Exhilaration drug-caused: addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. See dope, n., 1, and cf. high, 2. Whence:—2. A drug addict: 1942, BVB.

dope jag; jag. 'A narcotic spree,' BVB, 1942: since ca. 1918. Am. jag, s. for 'a drunken spree'.

dope out. To 'think up', plan, devise: 1914, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, "'Set your thinking-box going and dope out a way . . . to grab a chunk"'; 1916, Arthur Stringer; by 1918, s. Prob. ex sense 4 of the n.

dope-peddler, an itinerant vendor of drugs, esp. opium: hardly c.: s. that, by 1920, had > almost Standard American. (See dope, n., 1.) The same applies to the dope racket, the traffic in drugs.

dope(-)runner. A trafficker in narcotics: drug traffic: C. 20. BVB.

dope smoke. A smoke of dope or dagga (Cannabis indica, marijuana): South Africa: late C. 19–20. J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946. Ex dope, n., 1.

dope stick. 'A stick for dipping narcotics,' BVB: drug traffic: C. 20; by 1935, police s. See dope, n., 1.

dope up. 'We sat on the railroad tracks . . . and tore up little pieces of rags which we saturated with oil of mustard and tied to our shoes.—To put blood-hounds off the scent.—'. . . After we had "doped up" we ran on for about a half mile,' Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 1923: C. 20: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; extant.—2. To be taking drugs: since ca. 1910. BVB. Cf. dope, n., 1.

doper. A woman belonging to some female order of beggars: 1608, Dekker (see quot'n at doll). I surmise, however, that this is a misprint for the next, for later in the same pamphlet Dekker has it in the form dopye, although I shouldn't be surprised if both were misprints for dox(e)y.

dopey. A beggar's whore; one of that female order of beggars which consists in beggars' trulls: 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, describing an underworld orgy, 'Some did nothing but weepe and protest love to their Morts, another swore daggers and knives to cut the throat of his Dopye, if he found her tripping'; ibid., 'These Dells . . . after the Upright-men have deflowred them, . . . then they are free for any of the brother-hood, and are called Dells no more but Dopers . . . When they have gotten the title of Dopies, then . . . they . . . walke for the most part with their betters . . . called Morts, but wheresoever an Upright-man is in presence, the Doxye is onely at his command'—a passage that seems to confirm the 'etymology' proposed at doper; 1785, Grose; by 1859, American (Matsell); † by 1900.—2. (A person) addicted to drugs; drugged: U.S. tramps': C. 20. In, e.g., Stiff, 1931, and in Godfrey Irwin, 1931. By ca. 1932, it was being used in Britain, as, e.g., in John G. Brandon, The One-Minute Murder, 1934. Ex dope, n., 1.

dopey, adj. Drugged: 1933, Ersine. See dope, n., 1.

dopium, 'opium'—i.e., dope + opium, BVB—is not c., but journalistic fantasy. BVB's Thesaurus is a splendid piece of work, yet many of the terms it lists in the 'Underworld' section are not c.

dopp. Some kind of burglary tool: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey (p. 48), "'What I want is a 'dopp' just like this one without the break,'" and he handed Cober a little instrument newly broken'; extant? Perhaps ex German doppel, 'double'.

doppie. A drink: South Africa (esp. and orig. Afrikaans-speakers'): C. 20. J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946. Connected with Dutch dop, 'a shell'?

dopye. See doper and dopey.

dorse is the earliest form of doss, n. and v. (Geo. Parker, 1789.)

dos. See doss, v., reference of 1851.

dose, n. Burglary: 1698, B.E. (see quot'n at cast); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; † by 1889 (B & L). A dose of medicine for the victims.—2. An occ. spelling of doash: C. 18.—3. A man asleep: 1732, trial of Thomas Beck, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, pub. in 1735, 'He took me to Covent-Garden, where we naild a Dose', glossed as 'Rob'd a Man asleep'; app. † by 1820. Prob. of same origin as doss, n. and v.—i.e., from L. dorsum, the term perhaps meaning, orig., '(a man on his) back'. Certainly it might well be the effective origin of doze, 'a light sleep'.—4. Three months' imprisonment, esp. as a known thief: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1870, employed in Australia (B. Farjeon, Grif; a Story of Australian Life); 1891, F & H; † by 1930. Perhaps a special application of:—5. Any prison sentence: April 1871, Sessions Papers; 1877 (but referring to ca. 1870), Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, "'What's yer dose? . . . Five, oh, you can do that little lot on yer 'ed easy'"'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1894, H. A. White (Australia); 1910, F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol; extant. Unpleasant medicine; cf. sense 1.

dose, v. To 'hocus' (a person): 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx, 'Sometimes as a mabber'—a cab-driver—'I dose the swell fred', glossed as 'Inveigle the fare into a public-house and hocus him'; by 1910, †—or > a mere euphemism. Euphemistic.

doss, n.; earliest as dorse. 'Dorse. The place where a person sleeps, or a bed' (Parker): 1744, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. IV (Richard Lee); 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1797, Potter (dorse); 1801, The Life, Adventures, and Opinions of Col. George Hanger, 'Dorsing a darkey upon the queer roost'; 1809, Andrewes, 'Place of rest, sleep'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Dorse, a lodging'; 1823, Bee (dorse); 1823, Egan's Grose (id.); 1839, Brandon, 'Doss—a bed'; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III (doss); 1848, Sinks of London; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; by 1859 (H, 1st ed.), low s.—except in U.S.A., where it may have remained c. until ca. 1910: witness State Prison Life, 1871, and Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899. By back-formation ex L. dorsum, the back; perhaps existent before the v.; cf. dose, n., 3.—2. A month's imprisonment: 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary, 'I was lugged before a beak, who gave me six doss in the Steel'; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; in C. 20, current also in Australia—see six doss . . . (Baker, 1942).

doss, v.; earliest as dorse. To sleep at a place; to go to bed, to occupy a bed: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter, 'We dors'd some time together upon the queer-roost' and 'I dorsed there last darkey'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To dorse with a woman, signifies to sleep with her'; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'To dorse in a barn'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds (dorse); 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'Where do you dos?'; by 1860, low s. in England; 1871, State Prison Life ('Sleeping, dossing'); 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1907, Jack London (see flop, v.); by 1915, low s. in U.S.A. also. Prob. ex the n.

doss crib. See dossing crib.

doss house. A lodging house, especially 'the common lodging-houses where beds are fourpence a night': 1889, B & L, who classify it as tramps' and thieves'; 1890, Montagu Williams, Leaves from a Life; 1891, F & H, who classify it as vagrants'; by 1900 low s. in England; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (U.S.A.); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (American tramps); by 1915, low s. in U.S.A. See doss, n., 1.

doss in Hedge-Square. To sleep in the open: beggars' and tramps': 1893, F & H; slightly ob. Cf. snooze in Hedge Square.

doss in the pure. To sleep in the open: tramps' and beggars': C. 20. Edwin Pugh, The Cockney at Home, 1913; slightly ob. I.e., in the pure air. Cf. preceding entry.

doss ken. A (low) lodging-house: 1859, H; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1940, ob. in Britain and, by 1930, † in U.S.A. See doss, n., 1, and ken.

doss ticket. A chit for a night's lodging: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1870 (Baumann, 1887): by 1910, low s. Ex doss, n., 1.

doss with the daisies. To sleep in the open: tramps': ca. 1860-1910. B & L, 1889. Cf. do a starry and lie under the blue blanket.

dosser. A frequenter of doss houses: 1902, G. R. Sims, Living London, vol. II; 1910, D. Crane, A Vicarious Vagabond; by 1915, low s. Ex doss, v.—2. Hence, a tramp: since ca. 1920: April 22, 1935, Hugh Milner (private letter); 1935, Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road.

dosser's hotel. A casual ward: tramps': since ca. 1918; 1932, The Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps; see dosser, 1 and 2. dossing crib. In C. 20 often doss crib. A lodging-house: mostly among tramps: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1887, Baumann; 1889, The Tramp (the latter); slightly ob. by 1945. Ex doss, v., and crib, n., 2.

dossing-ken. A low lodging-house: since ca. 1830: 1838 (recorded by Partridge, 1937); 1874, H; 1887, Baumann; 1891, F & H; 1898, R. J. A. Power-Berry, The Bye-Ways of Crime; by 1930, ob. Ex doss, v., and crib, n., 2.

dossy. A tinker's or vagrant's woman: 1895, Jerome Caminada, Detective Life, 'The travelling tinker . . . and with him his "dossy" (woman)'; extant. A perversion of doxy, prob. influenced by doss, n. and v.; the woman he sleeps with.

dot. A ribbon: 1821, David Haggart, Life (Glossary); 1823, Egan's Grose, where it is wrongly classified as nautical; 1889, B & L; by 1900, †. Prob. ex dobbin; see dobbin rig.—2. A copper coin; properly, a tramps' mark to indicate that a house is 'good for' a penny to a beggar: tramps': 1872, Hamilton Aidé, Morals and Mysteries; † by 1930.—3. A worthless fellow: U.S.A.: 1848, The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). Perhaps cf. S.E. cypher, 'a nonentity'.

dot and dash. Moustache: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.—2. A mistake: 1929-31, Kernôt; extant. Rhyming on the italicized word in 'to make a hash of something'.

dot drag. A watch-ribbon: 1821, D. Haggart, Life (Glossary); 1823, Egan's Grose; 1889, B & L; by 1910, †. See dot, 1, and drag, n., 5.

dots. Money: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulary; by 1889 (B & L), low s. Cf. spot, n.—2.

Piano keys: British: C. 20, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932.

dotty, n. 'The fancy man of prostitutes of the lowest type,' F & H, 1891; ob. He's dotty to be it.

doubite. A street: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary, where it is misprinted donbite; † by 1891 (F & H). But is this an error—a misprint—for double, n., 2?

double, n. See tip one the double.—2. A turning (in a path, a road, a street): Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'When she had got a little way up the double (turning), I pratted (went) in the house'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. The point at which a fugitive criminal doubles.—3. "She did not come home, but went and paid for a double"—that means a double bed—"in a kip"—that is a common lodging-house—"With a man named Scully", Sessions Papers, March 1884 (Surrey cases): mostly prostitutes': 1890, Montagu Williams, Leaves of a Life; 1934, Ex-Sgt B. Leeson, Lost London, 'Late that night . . . I arrested the woman and the second man in a common lodging-house known as "the double"'; extant.—4. Short for double-cross in its criminal nuance: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant.—5. A key made, for illicit purposes, from the original: bank robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant.

double, v. 'To double a person, or tip him the Dublin packet, signifies either to run away from him openly, and elude his attempts to overtake you, or to give him the slip in the streets, or elsewhere, unperceived, commonly done to escape from an officer who has you in custody, or to turn up a flat of any kind, whom you have a wish to get rid of,' J. H. Vaux, 1812; but 'to double (a person)' occurs as early as 1781 in Sessions Papers, Sept. (No. VII, Part i, of Sir Watkin Lewes's mayoralty, at p. 398, col. 2); † by 1890.—2. White-slaver speaking to one of the prostitutes working for him: "We want money. When you're up to it, you shall marry me. In the meantime I'm going to 'double' you" (take a second woman), Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928: white-slave traffic: C. 20.

double, on the. Double-locked: mostly convicts': since ca. 1915: 1933, George Ingram, Stir.

double, tip the. See tip the double.

double-ace poker. See kangaroo poker.

double card. 'Two cards of the same denomination,' Matsell, 1859: possibly gamblers' and card-sharpers' c., but prob. mere j.

double cross, n., seems to have been horse-racing s. before it was adopted by the underworld: and therefore is hardly c. It occurs in Henry G. Crickmore's Dictionary of Racing Terms and Slang, 1880, for a race in which a jockey that has undertaken to lose, at some time in the race (and for the rest of the race), decides to try to win it. See cross, n., 2, and the first quot'n at get it in the neck.

double cross (or hyphenated), v. Never, I think, c.; cf. preceding entry.

double do. A 'ringing of the changes' (see ring the changes) twice on the one person: 1818, The London Guide (p. 13); 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London; † by 1920. See do, n., 2, and do, v., 1.

double-double, put (a person) on the. To employ that dodge by which 'a thief, having arranged with other thieves to lose a race, so that they may safely "lay" against him, deceives them and runs to win': 1889, B & L; extant. Cf. double cross, n., q.v.

double-ender. 'Skeleton keys with wards at both ends, termed "double-enders",' F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of Gipsy—but occurring earlier in The Cornhill Magazine, Jan. 1863 (p. 83); extant.

double fin(n). A ten-pound note: 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; extant. See finif.

double finnif(f); double quarter; double tray. The numbers 10—8—6: 1859, Matsell; extant. See finif and quarter and treys.—2. Ten dollars: U.S.A.: 1871, State Prison Life (as d. pheniff); extant.

double finnip. A ten-pound note: see finif.

double-header. (A train) with two engines at the head of the train: tramps': C. 20. Jack London, The Road, 1907 (but referring to at least three years earlier), 'At a stop, I went forward to the engine. We had on a "double-header" (two engines) to take us over the grade'; by 1930, if not indeed by 1920, it was also railroadmen's s.

double insider. 'Pockets range from "side kicks" to "double insiders", which [latter] are inner vest [i.e., jacket] pockets,' The Literary Digest ('Do you Speak "Yegg" ?'), Aug. 1916; extant.

double O, n. A survey, observation, scrutiny; a spying: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Rose, 'Scrutinize sharply . . . to give the double O; give the OO'; extant. 'A play on the expression "once over", [give the once over] meaning to cast the eyes over, to examine' (Irwin). Probably Irwin is right; it is, however, possible that there is an allusion to a pair of wide-open eyes (two O's), esp. in give the O.O. Contrast the pun in:—2. Mostly get and give the double-O, to be double-crossed and to double-cross somebody: 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch, 'I guess you guys know what it is to get the double-o, don't you? . . . It never hurt nobody to know what happens to wise guys, with the double-cross in their hearts'; extant.

double-O, v. To double-cross (a person): 1929, Charles Francis Coe, Hooch, '"Sooner or later he'll double-cross you," the alderman snapped . . . "What d'you mean, double-o me?" he demanded'; extant. To render doubly null (nought: o).

double plant. 'Burglars never allow a "putter up" to accompany them to a robbery, nor do they let him know the time they themselves intend to go, thus avoiding "a double plant"; that is, being "planted" by the "putter up" and surprised by the police,' 1890, Clarkson & Richardson, The Rogue's Gallery; extant. See plant, n., 5, and plant, v., 5.

double quarter. See double finnif.

double saw. A twenty-dollar bill: 1934, Rose; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. Short for:—

double sawbuck. A twenty-dollar note or bill; twenty dollars: s., not c. 'From the double X as indicating money in Roman numerals' (Irwin); see sawbuck.—2. Hence, a sentence to twenty years' imprisonment: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Con-vict; April 23, 1938, Flynn's; extant.

double slangs. Double irons or fetters: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; ob. See slangs, 2.

double(-)team. 'To gang up on a mark,' Ersine, 1933; extant.

double to sherry, tip the. See tip the double to sherry.

double-tongued squib. See squib, n.

double tray. See double finnif.

double tripe. 'You filched some double tripe (lead)': 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III; 1845, anon. translator of E. Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, Pt. 2, ch. xxviii; † by 1900. A sort of code-term.

double-wedges is synonymous with strippers: 1894, J. H. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats (p. 222); extant. Ex shape.

doubled-up, adj. 'Married; paired; two in a room,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904,—but prob. the 2nd and 3rd nuances have never been c.; extant.

doublet, 'a spurious diamond, made up of two smaller stones for pawning or duffing purposes' (H, 1874), so far from being c. is S.E.

douce is a rare variant (noted by Baumann, 1887) of douse (see dowse).

dough, 'money', has always been s., whether in the British Empire or—despite 'Do you Speak "Yegg" ?' in The Literary Digest, Aug. 1916—in U.S.A. 'Man cannot live by bread alone'; but if he have the 'makings' of bread . . .—2. Counterfeit coins: see cook dough. Cf. the continuance of the metaphor in oven.

dough, finger the. See finger.

dough-copper. An absconder; embezzler: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Embezzler'; extant. He cops or takes (steals) the dough or money.

dough-heavy, 'well provided with money', is low s.—not c. Flynn's, April 27, 1929, Erle Stanley Gardner, 'The Pay Off'.

doughnut. 'An automobile tire.' "'We clout ten doughnuts an' call it a day,'" Burke, 1930; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex the colour?

Doughnut Lane. 'The Trenton-Harrisburg cut-off . . . on the Pennsylvania Railroad, so called since the tramp finds that much of the food to be had from the farmers along this line is the popular fried cake, "sinker" or doughnut,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': C. 20.

doughnut philosopher. 'A fellow who is satisfied with a coffee and feed. He does not object to the doughnut hole getting larger because it will take more dough to go around it. He is the original breadline optimist,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': C. 20.

dous; douse. See dowse. Nevertheless, douse is the better form.

doused glim. A black eye: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Bunger'; extant. Darkened: cf. 'Douse the glim!'—put out the light.

douser. A murderer: 1925, Leverage; ob. He 'douses the glim' of the victim.

dove is a mishearing of dub, 'a key': 1773, Sessions Papers, 2nd session in the mayoralty of James Townsend.

down, n. Awareness; knowledge; alertness: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'There is no down. A cant phrase used by housebreakers to signify that the persons belonging to the house are not on their guard, or that they are fast asleep, and have not heard any noise to alarm them'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A down is a suspicion, alarm, or discovery, which taking place, obliges yourself and palls to desist from the business or depredation you were engaged in'; 1823, Bee; by 1850, it had merged with sense 3.—2. See down upon, put a (i.e., information).—3. Hence, an alarm, a suspicion: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'We therefore determined not to raise a down'—arouse suspicion—'by doing any petty jobs'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1835, Sessions Papers; 1835, Anon., The History of Van Diemen's Land, convict constable log., 'There is a h— of a down on Smith'; 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 2nd ed., 'A hue and cry'; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—witness Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms (Australia), '"Drawing a down on the whole thing"'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; by 1900, low s. in nuance 'suspicion'; as 'hue-and-cry', it was † by 1920.—4. A cheat, a swindle, a fraud: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Prob. ex do (a person) down, to swindle him.

down, v. 'To understand, to know': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; app. † by 1900. Ex:—

down, adj. 'Sometimes synonymous with awake, as, when the party you are about to rob, sees or suspects your intention, it is then said that the cove is down,' J. H. Vaux, 1812; but a rather earlier record occurs in Sessions Papers, 6th Frederick Bull session, 1774, in the trial of Wm Wayne, thus, 'Then he [the prisoner] said to the man who had the bag d—n your eyes he is down! he is down! meaning as I am told that I was watching them'; cf. ibid., Oct. 1810, p. 405, 'Butt . . . asked me if I was down to the queer'; 1818, The London Guide; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I (concerning Dutch Sam), 'Down to all the tricks of life'; 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, 'Up to every thing'; 1823, Bee; 1826, The Universal Songster, II, 315, 'I was down to as much as you vas up'; 1827, Thomas Surr, Richmond; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1860, low s. Humorously opposed to up (q.v.), which arose rather earlier. In the early 1820's, there were numerous puns and jests on these two app. contrary, actually synonymous terms.

down, put. See put down.

down as a hammer; down as a trippet. 'These are merely emphatical phrases . . . to signify being down, leary, fly, or awake to any matter, meaning, or design': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1893 (F & H), the former was low s., the latter †. See down, adj.; a hammer comes down with a crushing impact; a trippet is the 'cut' in the game of tip-cat. The variant down as a nail (J. J. Stockdale, The Greeks, 1817) is fast-life, buckish s.—an obvious derivative ex down as a hammer.

down buttock and sham file. See buttock and twang.

down(-)hills; downhill. False dice that run upon the low numbers: gamesters': (written) 1662, The Cheats, by John Wilson, 'Taught yow the use of up hills, | downe hills, and petarrs'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1890.

down on. See down upon.

down on, be. See drop down upon.

down on, put a. See down upon, put a.

down on the knuckle. See knuckle-bone . . .

down right, on the. See downright, on the.

down South. 'The Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta. Of recent origin and wide use,' IA, Nov. 1931; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

down the chute. In gaol: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Cf. the s. down the drain, 'wasted; lost', and :— down the line. In gaol: tramps': 1935, Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road; extant.

down to, drop; down to, put. See drop down to and put down to.

down to the cotton. Gripped by a craving for drugs: drug addicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'If I don't get some coke soon, I'll be down to the cotton'; 1942, BVB, 'Out of drugs and forced to extract the residue from "cottons"'; extant. See cotton, n., 2.

down upon (a person) = up to him, aware of his character or purpose, suspicious of him: ca. 1805–70. John Joseph Stockdale, The Greeks, 1817; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.). Cf. the next three entries.—2. Also applied to things or plans: 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist, 'It was a robbery, miss, that hardly anybody would have been down upon'.

down upon (oneself), be. See drop down upon.

down upon (oneself), drop. See drop down upon.

down upon (a person), put a. 'To put a down upon, a man, is to give information of any robbery or fraud he is about to perpetrate, so as to cause his failure or detection': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1890, B & L, who classify it as Australian; † by 1891 (F & H). Prob. ex down, n., 1.

downer. A sixpence: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1889 (B & L) it was low s. Possibly because it is constantly slipping from one's fingers; prob. a deliberate perversion of tanner.—2. A sleep: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'She gets him in a line to take a downer at her crib'; among C. 20 tramps and beggars, also a bed—teste Hugh Milner, private letter of April 22, 1935. Cf. coll. get down to it, to go to bed, to go to sleep.—3. (Ex sense 1.) A five-cent piece: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1930.—4. A swindle: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant—but not very gen. Cf. down, n., 4.

downhills. See down hills.

downright. 'The "downright", or cadger from door to door,' J. Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life, 1895; ob. Ex the next entry.

downright, on the. 'Cadgers on the down right are those who beg from door to door, and cadgers on the fly are those who beg of ladies and gentlemen as they pass along the tober (road)': 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; 1886, Wm Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life, of 'people . . . found in the lowest of lodging-houses, in the union workhouse casual wards, etc.'; 1908, W. H. Davies, The Autobiography of a Super-Tramp; 1910, D. Crane, A Vicarious Vagabond; 1932, The Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps; April 22, 1935, Hugh Milner (letter), 'Begging—the downright'. Because they are downright or perfectly open about it.

downright buttock and sham file. See buttock and twang.

downrighter. Such a beggar as operates in the manner described at downright, on the: 1908, W. H. Davies, The Autobiography of a Super-Tramp: 'There is the down-righter, the man who makes no pretence to selling, but boldly asks people for the price of his bed and board'; 1910, D. Crane, A Vicarious Vagabond; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; 1933, W. H. Davies, in a review (The New Statesman, March 18); extant. Ex downright, on the, q.v.

downs, or Downs, the. Tothill Fields House of Correction: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London; 1859, H; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; in C. 20, merely historical. Cf. Tea Garden, the.

downy, n., is a variant (and possibly a derivative) of downy cove; it seems, orig. at least, to have been c. Pierce Egan, Life in London, 1821, '[He] had long been christened by the downies, the "dashing covey"' ; † by 1890. Ex down, n., l, or rather imm. ex low s. downy.

downy, put buff in. 'We haven't put buff in downy since the night afore last', glossed as 'We have not gone to bed' in: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, chap. lxiii; ob. by 1890; † by 1920. The phrase is c. despite the fact that buff, 'skin', is S.E. and downy is s.

downy cove, 'a shrewd or very alert fellow', may possibly, at its origin (ca. 1820), have been c., but prob. it was always low s.; it may have started in the boxing world: 1823, Jon Bee (at down); 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'Abbot now proved himself a downey cove, and grassed poor Sampson like a fly'. See down, adj.

downy earwig. A sympathetic person: tramps' and beggars': C. 20. The Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932. The adj. implies cleverness, attractiveness; the noun implies an ability, and a willingness, to listen.

dowry, 'much', 'a lot': 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London, "'Will you have a shant o' gatter (pot of beer) after all this dowry of parny (lot of rain)?"': perhaps c., as Mayhew maintains; at least until ca. 1880, for B & L, in 1889, classify it as s. Not a Romany word, says Leland, who thinks that it may be of Yiddish origin; the nearest Romany word is dosta, 'plenty'—which is a shade too remote. But there is no semantic objection to, much to be said for, a special application of S.E. dowry, with an implication that the money involved is considerable.

dowse; usually douse. To put out; to extinguish (a light): 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Dous the Glims; put out the Candles'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'Dowse the glim; put out the candle'; by 1794, in use in U.S.A. (Henry Tufts, 1807); in 1857 ('Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue), it was still classified as c., but it had prob. > low s. by 1850 at latest; by 1880, it was fairly gen. s. Ex its sense in nautical j., 'to strike (a sail) or close (a porthole)'.—2. Hence, to secrete: U.S.A.: 1871, State Prison Life (at Jeffersonville, S. Indiana), old hand to newcomer, 'If you have anything you want to save you had better douse it'; † by 1910.

dowse on the chops. 'A blow in the face': 1785, Grose, who does not, however, classify it as c.; app. † by 1890. It is, I think, dialect.

dox. 'To woo (as a sweetheart)', Leverage, 1925; ob. Presumably ex doxy.

doxe. An occ. C. 16, as doxi is a rare C. 17, and doxie (Defoe, 1828) is a rare C. 18, spelling of:—

doxy. A beggar's harlot; a prostitute serving the men of, or one allied with, the underworld: 1562, Awdeley (see first quot'n at upright man and also that at curtail), who implies that only unmarried women were so defined, and adds: 'Note especially all which go abroad working laces and shirt stringes, they name them Doxies'; 1566, Harman speaks more leisurely, thus: 'These

Doxes be broken and spoyled of their maydenhead by the upright men, and then they have their name of Doxes, and not afore'; i.e., only when they have been docked do they earn the name. 'And afterwarde she is commen and indifferent for any that wyll use her, as homo is a commen name to all men. Such as be fayre and some what handsome, kepe company with the walkinge Mortes, and are redye alwayes for the upright men, and are cheifely mayntayned by them, for others shalbe spoyled for their sakes: the other, inferior, sort wyll resorte to noble mens places, and gentlemens houses, standing at the gate, eyther lurking on the backesyde about backe houses, eyther in hedge rowes, or some other thycket, espectinge their praye which is for the uncomely company of some curteous gest, of whome they be refreshed with meate and some money, where eschaunge is made, ware for ware: this bread and meate they use to carrye in their greate hosen; so that these beastlye brybinge breeches serve manye tymes for bawdye purposes. . . . Such as hath gone anye tyme abroad, wyll never forsake their trade, to dye therefore'; 1596, Nash, Have with you to Saffron-Walden; 1608, Dekker in The Belman of London spells it indifferently doxye, dopye, dopey, and doper; 1630, John Taylor (doxi); 1665, R. Head; 1676, Coles, 'a Wench', 'a she-beggar, trull' (doxie); 1688, Holme, 'Doxies, Whores and Bawds'; ibid., 'Doxie, Sweet-heart, Chuck, Whore'; 1698, B.E., who says that doxies are the 25th Order of Canthers, remarks that they are 'very dextrous at picking Pockets (in the action)' of sexual intercourse; 1701, D'Urfey, The Bath, 'And Beaus, that in Boxes, lie nouzling the Doxies | In Wigs that hang down to their Bums'; Grose. The word was, as c., † by 1750, being thereafter merely historical and literary except perhaps in U.S.A. (witness Henry Tufts, 1807). But it survived in London street s. until ca. 1890; see, e.g., Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, 1857. Origin: 'Derivation unknown,' says The O.E.D.; I suggest that it derives ex dock: a docksy, 'a woman one docks'.

doxy dell is perhaps a mere poetical amplification of dell or doxy: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'This Doxy Dell can cut bien whids'.

dozing crib. 'A sleeping room': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1891 (F & H). Ex doze, to sleep lightly.

Dr Bates; Dr Hall; etc. See Doctor . . .

drab, 'a nasty sluttish whore' (Grose, 1785), is not c., but S.E. dating from C. 16.—2. Poison: not c. but Romany.

d'rac or drac or derac or derack; the first is the rarest, the third the most usual, the second the correct form; mostly in plural. 'You were with the broad mob, handling deracs day and night' (footnoted 'Cards'), David Hume, Dangerous Mr Dell, 1935: C. 20: 1933, Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, where it is idiosyncratically spelt durac; 1940, D. Hume, Five Aces. Back s.: card > drac >, for euphony, derac.

drag, n. John Hall, the notorious housebreaker who, executed at Tyburn in 1707, is the subject of a famous and ribald song, is said by Alex. Smith, The History of the Highwayman, 1714, to have been expert at various 'lays', including 'the Drag, which is, having a Hook fasten'd to the End of a Stick, with which they—thieves—'drag anything out of a Shop Window in a dark Evening'; 1720, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, Vol III; 1734, C. Johnson (plagiarizing Alex. Smith); app. † by 1800. Explained in Smith's definition.—2. See drag, go on the. I.e., a robbery (or, in gen., robbery) from cart or waggon: Grose. The separate, independent term (the drag) is extant, but since ca. 1905, it has mostly been applied to theft from motor-cars, as in James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 1937, or as in 'He made his living by removing suit-cases from tramcars and stations—"the drag"', as the underworld calls it' (Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938.—3. App. ca. 1770–1830, drag, 'a waggon, or cart' (Potter, 1797), was c.; implied in drag, go on the, in 1785; Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, 1817; T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial, 1819, 'Drag, The Flash term for a cart'; 1823, Jon Bee. But in extended use for 'tilbury, dennet, Stanhope, &c.', it was 'London slang' (C. E. Westmacott, The English Spy, 1825).—4. A prisoner, a convict: U.S.A. (—1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; app. † by 1900. Perhaps because he drags himself along.—5. A (watch-)chain: 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'A conish cove, who sported a dross-scout, drag, and chats'; † by 1891 (F & H). Cf. S.E. drag-chain.—6. A prison sentence of three months: 1840, Sessions Papers, March, p. 739; 1845, Sessions, Dec. 20; 1851, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 219; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; 1859, H; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1886, W. Newton; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1894, A. Morrison, Tales of Mean Streets; 1895, Caminada; 1901, Caminada, vol. 2; 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow; 1929, Tom Divall, Scoundrels and Scallywags; 1930, George Smithson; 1938, (F. D.) Sharpe of the Flying Squad; 1939, K. Tennant, Foveaux (Aus.); 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime; extant. A drag upon one's spirits and activities.—7. A street: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, I, 248; 1859, H, 'A street, or road', 'back-drag, back street'; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1891, F & H; 1893, P. H. Emerson; 1907, Jack London, The Road (American tramps); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, of a main street; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1931, Chris Massie, The Confessions of a Vagabond; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Howard N. Rose; and often since.—8. 'Feminine attire worn by men': 1874, H; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H, who cite Reynolds, 1870; by 1909 (Ware), theatrical s. in Britain; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (U.S.A.); extant. A skirt drags on a man until he becomes accustomed to its hampering effect on his movements.—9. A lure, a stratagem: March 1857, Sessions Papers (p. 681); 1889, B & L; app. † by 1920. Cf. senses 2 and 8.—10. A type of drill or other tool, used by a burglar: 1890, Clarkson & Richardson, The Rogues' Gallery (p. 99); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (American, therefore), 'Burglar's tool'; 1924, G. C. Henderson (U.S.A.); 1925, Leverage; by 1931, very, very ob., as IA remarks. Ex its action when it is properly used.—11. A 'horse and wagon', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904. A subterranean survival and extension of sense 3.—12. The sense 'influence', esp. 'influence illicitly utilized', is U.S.A.: but low s., not c. (Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 1912.) Obviously suggested by pull.—13. A 'rake-off', a commission, a share: U.S. tramps': C. 20. In, e.g., Jack London, The Road, 1907, 'He got a "drag" out of the constable's fees'; by 1940, the 'rake-off' nuance was s. Because dragged out of the payer?; cf. sense 17.—14. 'We caught a slow freight [train] commonly called a "drag"', Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 1925: U.S.A.; though much used by tramps, this is railroad, almost general, s. It drags along.—15. A false arrest: 1931, Brown; 1936, David Hume, The Crime Combine, 'A "drag" is an unjustified arrest'; extant.—16. A homosexuals' ball or party: U.S. tramps': 1931, Stiff (party); 1933, Ersine; 1935, Hargan, 'Drag—a transvestite ball'; 1937, Courtney R. Cooper, Here's to Crime, 'Thousands of homosexuals gather at tremendous dances called "drags", where most of them are dressed as women'; 1942, BVB; extant. Prob. ex sense 8.—17. Loot: U.S.A.: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'This often has to be dragged away from the scene of the robbery' (Irwin); cf. sense 13.—18. A motor car: since ca. 1925: 1934, R. Thurston Hopkins (see quot'n at drag, crooked); 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 'Hot drag, a stolen car'; 1943, Black (by implication); extant. A special application of sense 3. 'With the decline of horse vehicles the slang name was used to denote a motor-car' (Hopkins).—19. Hence, patrol by police: since ca. 1927: 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open, 'We met the Squad on the drag, got wiped up, and finished in flowery'.

drag, v. To rob carts or carriages or, in C. 20, motor-cars: implied in dragging, q.v.—2. 'To use a jimmy or a sort of can-opener,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant. Ex drag, n., 10.—3. (Ex sense 1.) To steal; to rob: U.S.A.: Nov. 15, 1930, Flynn's, Earl W. Scott ('Wolf Trap'), 'He'd just sapped Scar Face Meeker . . . and was draggin' his leather when we blew up'; slightly ob.—4. To arrest, esp. if unjustifiably: since ca. 1910. Edgar Wallace, passim; Partridge, 1937. Cf. drag, n., 15; perhaps ex 'drag in to the police station'.

drag, crooked or hot; drag, straight or cold. 'To-day smash and grab bandits call a stolen motor-car a "crooked drag". A motor-car genuinely owned by the raider is a "straight drag"', R. Thurston Hopkins, Life and Death at the Old Bailey, 1935; 1937, John Worby, The Other Half (all four terms); extant. See drag, n., 18.

drag, flash the. To 'wear women's clothes for an improper purpose', John Farmer's gloss (Musa Pedestris, 1896) of Henley's employment of the phrase in Villon's Straight Tip to All Cross-Coves, 1887; extant. See drag, n., 8.

drag, go on the. 'To follow a cart or waggon in order to rob it': 1785, Grose; 1812, Vaux; app. † by 1870. See drag, n., 3.—2. See on the drag, 2.

drag, hot. See at drag, crooked.

drag, in. 'Of a male homosexual, in female costume,' BVB: C. 20. See drag, n., 8.

drag, on the. See on the drag.

drag, straight. See drag, crooked.

drag, the. See drag, n., 1, 2.

drag cove. A driver of a cart, a drayman: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, Baumann; † by 1891 (F & H). Ex drag, n., 3.

drag lay, the. The stealing of portmanteaus, boxes, packets from carriers' waggons: 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected, where we see that it was effected either from the inside or, more often, by thieves that were not travelling on the waggon, and that the robbery was generally done by accomplices; 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul; † by 1887 (Baumann). See lay, n., 2, and cf. dragging.

drag-lifter. 'A thief who steals from wagoins,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex drag, n., 3.

drag-man. 'A burglar who handles the jimmy,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See drag, n., 10.—2. "Drag-men" who lifted suit-cases from unattended motor-cars and stations,' Francis Chester, Shot-Full, 1938: British: since ca. 1910, or perhaps as early as 1905. John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939.

drag(-)net, or one word. A round-up of suspects. Ersine, 1933.

drag one's piles. To walk: tramps': since ca. 1910. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.) 'A crude and vulgar way of expressing the fact that one is weary, barely able to progress' (Irwin).

dragsneak. "'Drag Sneaks", or those who steal goods or luggage from carts and coaches': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25; 1870, The Broadway, Nov.; † by 1891 (F & H). See drag, go on the.

drag work. Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904, describes it thus:—"Drag" work is a rather complicated kind of stealing and success at it requires considerable skill. Usually a "mob" of four grafters work together. They get "tipped off" to some store where there is a line of valuable goods, perhaps a large silk or clothing-house. One of the four, called the "watcher", times the last employee that leaves the place to be "touched". The "watcher" is at his post again early in the morning, to find out at what time the first employee arrives. He may even hire a room opposite the store, in order to secure himself against identification by some Central Office detective who might stroll by. When he has learned the hours of the employees, he reports to his "pals". At a late hour at night the four go to the store, put a spindle in the Yale lock, and break it with a blow from a hammer. They go inside, take another Yale lock, which they have brought with them, lock themselves in, go upstairs, carry the most valuable goods downstairs and pile them near the door. Then they go away, and, in the morning, before the employees are due, they drive up boldly to the store with a truck; representing a driver, two laborers and a shipping clerk. They load the wagon with the goods, lock the door, and drive away. They have been known to do the work in full view of the unsuspecting policeman on the beat.' Ex drag, n., 3.

drag-worker. One who engages in drag work: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood. dragg. See drag, n., 3.

dragged, be. To be returned to a penal-servitude prison to serve the remainder of one's sentence: C. 20. In, e.g., Edgar Wallace, Mr Reeder, 1925; Partridge, 1937. Cf. drag, v., 4.

dragger; or, in full (and orig.), rum dragger. 'The Rum Dragger', says George Parker in A View of Society, 1781, 'generally follows broad-wheel wagoins on horse-back, and counterfeiting drunkenness, rides up against the shaft-horses, or strikes against the wheels. The waggoner cautions him . . . The Rum Dragger says, in a drunken tone, that he will give the Waggoner half-a-crown if he will lead his horse, and let him get half an hour's sleep in his waggon. This the Waggoner foolishly consents to; but as soon as he gets in, he begins to work . . . He takes off the directions from the trunks and parcels, and puts on others addressed to fictitious personages; which done, he quits the waggon, pretending to be much refreshed, gives the half-a-crown, and rides on to London. By that time he thinks the waggon unloading (for he knows the inns at which all wagoins and coaches put up, and the hours they go out and come in at) a Ticket-porter comes into the yard, demands the trunk or parcel as directed, confuses the Book-keeper, takes advantage of the mistakes of direction—perhaps goods taken up on the road. The trunk is delivered, carried to the Dragger, and emptied by him of the whole of its contents, which are disposed of immediately'; still current in C. 20 in the nuance 'vehicle thief': Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. Ex drag, v., 1: cf. drag lay and dragging.—2. One who practises dragging, 2: late C. 19–20: 1934, Ex-Sgt B. Leeson, Lost London; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; 1945, Jack Henry, What Price Crime? (thief specializing in stealing bags, cases, etc., from railway platforms); extant.

dragging is merely a synonym of the drag lay, q.v.: 1812, J. A. Vaux (see quot'n at dragsman); 1859, H; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; in C. 20, 'stealing from vans' (F. D. Sharpe, 1938), but after ca. 1925, this sense > increasingly ob. in favour of sense 3.—2. 'Stealing from shop-doors': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; extant in English shop-dragging, q.v. An extension of sense 1.—3. "'Dragging" is patrolling in a stolen car to carry out petty larcenies from parked motor cars,' R. Thurston Hopkins, Life and Death at the Old Bailey, 1935; any thieving from motor-cars: since ca. 1925. Mark Benney, Low Life, 1936; Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 1937. Ex senses 1 and 2.

dragging game or lark, the. Stealing from motor-cars parked in the street: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'He ought to know I'm a screwsman and not on the dragging lark'; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 'Nothing in the dragging game nowadays'; extant.

dragon, 'a sovereign', may be s. but is prob. c. of ca. 1820–1900. Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, Appendix, 1829, 'Collar his dragons'; 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L. Ex St George and the Dragon on the obverse of a sovereign. See collar, v., 1.

dragon on (or upon) St George, the. 'The Woman uppermost' in the sexual act: ca. 1690–1850. B.E. (upon) classifies it as c., but it was more prob. s. In jocular allusion to the legend.

dragsman. 'A thief who follows the game of dragging': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1849, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1862, Mayhew, London Labour, IV; 1869, J. Greenwood; † by 1900. Ex drag, n., 2 and 3.—2. A carman, a carter, a waggoner: 1823, Bee; app. † by 1889. Ex drag, n., 3.—3. 'Fellows who ply about the theatres at night, called dragsmen—a very dangerous sort of gentry. They are very fond of helping gentlemen into coaches, and paying themselves for their trouble by prigging a watch or a pocket-book,' i.e., coachmen-thieves: 1828, G. Smeeton, Doings in London; 1839, Brandon; † by 1900. Ex drag, n., 3.

drake. To duck (a thief) in a pond as a punishment: 1812, Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; app. † by 1870. By a pun.

draw, n. Usually go on the draw, to go picking pockets, esp. as in draw, v., 1: 1823, Bee; † by 1890. Ex the v.—2. (Likewise ex senses 1, 2 of the v.) A robbery; a booty: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; app. † by 1890.—3. 'An entrapping question,' The London Guide, 1818: more prob. s. than c. Ex 'to draw a person on' or 'out'.

draw, v. To steal by stealthy removal (cf. drawing fogles, q.v.): 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, notes that in 'figging law' (q.v.) 'taking the purse' is 'drawing'; 1592, Greene, The Second Conny-catching, a master foist speaking, 'It shall not be said such a base peasant shall slip away . . . and not have his purse drawn'; 1698, B.E. (see quot'n at witcher-tilter); 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1822, The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul; 1829, Sessions Papers; 1848 (see dampner, 2); 1857, Snowden; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1882, James D. McCabe, New York; 1887, Baumann (at dampner); 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; rather ob.—2. Hence, to rob (a person): 1811, Lex. Bal. (see breech, v., and draw); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To pick his pocket'; 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Bee; 1827, Sessions Papers; 1845, anon. trans. of E. Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, ch. VI; † by 1900.—3. See draw of.

draw-latches, classified by B.E., 1698, as c., is S.E.: 'the fourth (old) Order of the Canting Tribe of Rogues' in C. 14—early 16: obviously burglars. In C. 18, however, they constituted the 57th Order of Canters and, in this sense, the term is c.: A New Canting Dict., 1725.

draw of. 'To obtain money or goods of a person by a false or plausible story, is called drawing him of so and so': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1900. Cf. draw, v., 1.

draw one's wallet; draw the wallet. To be open-handed, generous, in footing a bill, esp. in order to escape justice: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service (d. the w. in glossary), 'Whenever the exigency arose, he was ready to "draw his wallet", and pay roundly, to escape arraignment before the Courts'; by 1910, s.

draw the King's—the Queen's—picture. See drawing the . . .

drawers. 'Hosen', as Harman shapes it, in 1566; so too in Dekker's 'The Canters Dictionarie' (Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9) and Rowland's Martin Mark-All, 1610; 1665, R. Head ('Drawers . . . Stockings'); 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1859 (witness H, 1st ed). Because one draws them on.

drawing, vbl n. See draw, v.

drawing a wipe(r); drawing fogles, vbl n. 'Picking a pocket of a handkerchief': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open (drawing a wiper); the former, † by 1930; the latter, † by 1910. See draw, v., 1, and the nouns.

drawing the King's (later Queen's) picture. Coining of counterfeit money: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; in C. 20, s.—and ob. Ex the presence of royal faces on the face of coins of the realm.

dray. Three: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1920. A thick pronunciation of tray (see treys).

dream. Six months' imprisonment: Australian: since ca. 1925. Baker, 1942. Prob. suggested by sleep.

dream stick. An opium pipe: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. On analogy of s. joy stick; cf. next entry.

dream wax; dreams. Opium: 1929, Givens (both); 1934, Howard N. Rose (both); extant. Opium brings dreams; in its cooked state it vaguely resembles a dark wax in a soft state.

dredgerman. A river thief pretending to be engaged in dredging: ca. 1840–1900: 1857, Dickens, 'Down with the Tide', in Reprinted Pieces.

dress (a person's) front. 'I was given my appointment Of course I was immediately beset by the usual bevy of "dips", "guns", and "green goods" men, who one and all offered to "dress my front" for me; that is, give me pins and watches and chains, as a means of currying favour, and get me to let them "work" in peace,' A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, 1906; extant. See front, n.

dress a hat. 'Dress a Hat, to—a system of robbery very difficult of detection. It is managed by two or more servants or shopmen of different employers, exchanging their master's [? masters'] goods—as, for instance, a shoemaker's shopman receives shirts or other articles from a hosiers, in return for a pair of boots this practical communistic operation is styled dressing a hat': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; app. † by 1900.

dress a roll, 'to arrange a roll of bills [bank-notes] so that bills of high denomination are on the outside' (Kane, 1927): prob. (low) s. rather than c.

dress fencer, or hyphenated. A tramp, a peddler, that sells lace: tramps' and beggars': C. 20. Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House, 1932. A corruption of driz-fencer.

dress house, or hyphenated. A brothel that specializes in 'dress lodgers' (see dress lodger): not c. but low s.

dress in numbers. To don prison clothes: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Ex the prisoner's number on the prisoner's clothes.

dress lodger, or hyphenated. 'Professional Prostitutes. 1. Seclusives 2. Convives a. Those who are independent of the mistress of the house. b. Those who are subject to the mistress of a brothel. i. "Board Lodgers", or those who give a portion of what they receive to the mistress of the brothel, in return for their board and lodging. ii. "Dress Lodgers", or those who give either a portion or the whole of what they get to the mistress of the brothel in return for their board, lodging, and clothes' (Mayhew): prostitutes' c.: 1828. Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, V, 'I was living with Mrs Belasco—she keeps a brothel . . . ; there are dress lodgers and lodgers in ordinary—I was a lodger in ordinary'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 26; 1865, T. Archer; 1869, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1889, B & L; by 1891 (F & H), low s.

dress-up. A good suit of clothes, a 'front': 1933, Ersine.

dressed in. Given one's prison clothes on one's arrival: prob. since ca. 1910: 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; by 1930, prison j. Cf. — dressed out. Fitted out with civilian clothes on one's being discharged from prison: esp. convicts' and ex-convicts': 1916, Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in the Underworld; by 1930, prison j. Cf. preceding entry.

dressing a hat. See dress a hat.

dried up. See dry up.

drift. A small pocket of cocaine : drug addicts'; 1922, Emily Ferguson, The Black Candle; slightly ob. Suggested by snow, 3; cf. sleigh-ride.

drigger, in Dekker's O per se O, 1612, is a misprint for prigger.

drill, n., 'a freight train or engine doing odd jobs over a division, or a freight engine or switcher working in the yard, making up trains, etc.': rather is it railroad s. than c., familiar though it be to many tramps. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

drill, v. To walk; to go, to proceed : orig. and mostly tramps': 1899 (see 2nd Flynt quot'n at blanket stiff); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'drill on—to walk on', i.e., to keep on walking; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'We hit the grit an' had to drill out to the jungles'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex U.S. s. drill, 'to work hard' (Irwin, letter of Sept. 13, 1937).—2. To shoot (a person): 1930, Burke, 'Go drill the mutt. He's strictly stool'; 1931, Irwin; 1933, Eagle; by 1935, police and journalistic s. An adoption of the Western colloquialism, used by Bret Harte and other such writers. Perhaps short for drill a hole in.

drill on. See drill, v., quot'n of 1914.

driman. A dram (of drink): 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Tip us a Driman; give us a Dram'; app. † by 1860. A disguising of dram; perhaps assisted by pun, that a dram is good for a dry man.

drink, n. 'Any body of water,' Ersine, 1933. Ex English nautical s.

drink, v. To drown: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Ex s. the drink, 'the sea, the ocean'.

drip, 'nonsense; triviality; worthless advice': s. (orig., low), not c.

dripper, 'a sort of Clap, or venereal gleating', lies on the marches between c. and low s.: B.E. classifies it as the former; Grose as the latter: prob. it is safest to hedge thus: c. in late C. 17–mid-18 and then (low) s. Ex a symptom of the disease.—2. See emergency gun.

driss. See driz, reference of 1851.

drive. Exhilaration derived from narcotics: ca. 1920–30. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'Now, any temporary pleasure or uplift of spirit'. The narcotic gives one drive or energy.

drive a Duzendorf (sic). To 'work in the Prison Clothing Production Department', Rose, 1934: convicts': since ca. 1920. Ex the sound of the (usually, electrically driven) sewing-machine one operates there; Duizendorf is the name for a make of automobile.

drive(-)away. That member of a gang of automobile thieves who drives the stolen car away to the 'drop' or hiding-place: since ca. 1924. In, e.g., J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding, 1938.

drive in. 'To smuggle narcotics in,' BVB: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. In a car, truck, etc.

drive to cover; usually as past p'ple. 'Driven to cover, compelled to seek seclusion (i.e., to hide from the police), for a time': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; † by 1910. Ex hunting.

driving alky, vbl n. Liquor running: bootleggers': since ca. 1922; ob. Howard N. Rose, 1934. See alky (alky).

driz. 'Lace, as sold on cards by the haberdashers, &c.': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'My thimble of ridge and my driz kemesa'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, where it is manifest that by 1850, at latest, the term was also itinerant vendors' s., and where it is spelt both driz and driss; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L, who classify it as thieves' and gypsies'; 1891, F & H; extant. 'From the gypsy doriez, thread or lace' (B & L); cf. Welsh-gypsy dori, 'string, cord' (Sampson).

driz fencer, or hyphenated. 'A person who sells lace': 1859, H; in C. 20, dress fencer—and verging on peddlers' s. See driz and fencer, 2.

driz kemesa. A lace shirt: ca. 1810–80. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 1834, 'And sported my flashest toggery . . . My thimble of ridge, and my driz kemesa' (cited by The E.D.D.). See driz and kemesa.

dromedary. A rogue; esp. a thief: 1698, B.E.—see also purple dromedary; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'A heavy, bungling Thief or Rogue'; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Dromedary, a clumsy thief, a beginner'; by 1859, used in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); 1889, B & L; app. † by 1891 (F & H)—in Britain, at least. Ex the ungainliness of the animal so named.

drommerar is a corrupted form of dommerar. In, e.g., B.E., 1698.

drop, n. A piece of money, esp. of gold, let fall with the design of swindling an onlooker or picker-up: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1820. Ex the S.E. verb.—2. (the drop.) A swindle whereby a gang of three 'drop culls' (see drop cull) wheedle a 'flat' into gambling at dice or cards; winning at first from 'the kid' (a pretended squire, young and foolish), the 'flat' is duly and delicately fleeced of all his money: 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected, where it appears that there are a 'picker-up' (scrapper of acquaintance) and a 'cap' or abettor, in addition to the 'kid',—and where it appears that this variety of 'the drop' is specifically called 'the lumber', the other variety being 'the lope'; 1789, G. Parker; 1797, Potter; † by 1830. Cf. drop, give the.—3. One who practises 'the drop' (drop, n., 2): 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859, American—see Matsell, who, however, applies it to sense 4; † by 1900.—4. 'The game of ring-dropping is called the drop,' J. H. Vaux, 1802 (see drop, on the); 1823, Egan's Grose; 1939, Jim Phelan, In the Can; extant.—5. A share (of booty): 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (glossary); extant. Cf. drop, v., 1, and sense 8 of the n.—6. The sense 'gallows' is—pace Ware—not c.—7. An arrest: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage. See dropped.—8. A receiver of stolen goods: 1915, The Times (March 19: cited by O.E.D. Sup.); extant—but not very gen. Cf. sense 11 of the n. and 8 of the v.—9. Money; esp. money as alms or as a bribe: tramps' and beggars', and then general: since ca., 1920. Chris Massie, The Confessions of a Vagabond, 1931; 1933, George Orwell, Down and Out; 1937, Robert Westerby, Wide Boys Never Work; 1939, James Curtis, What Immortal Hand; 1943, Black. The donor drops it into one's hand; perhaps a development ex sense 5.—10. 'A hiding place for liquor; a depot where smuggled liquors are deposited to be picked up by other members of the gang or by customers,' IA, 1931: bootleggers': 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1936, Chas F. Coe, G-Man, reminiscently for after 1934 it applies contemporaneously, to drug-traffic entrepôts, as in Courtney R. Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937.—11. Hence (?), a place to dispose of stolen articles:

U.S.A.; 1935, Hargan; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime (in relation to the disposal of stolen dogs); 1938, J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding (ditto for stolen cars); March 1941, The American Mercury, John Kobler (ditto); extant.—12. (Ex sense 8.) Among prostitutes, the drop is the fee, payment for services rendered: 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night, 'His caresses began to get more insistent . . . Now was the time to ask for the drop'; extant.—13. A tip; a warning; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant. Perhaps imm. ex transport workers's. (see Partridge, 1937); semantically, 'a hint dropped to someone'.

drop, v. To part with (money): 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters (see entry at glanthen, drop the); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1860, it had > s., with the nuance 'to lose'.—2. Hence, to pay (money): 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'They drop him, as they call it, from a crown to a guinea'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'He dropp'd me a quid, he gave me a guinea'; 1823, Bee, 'To drop the blunt, to pay freely'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; by 1860, it had, in Britain, merged with sense 1. In C. 20, however, 'Drop!' in racecourse-gang c. means 'Pay—or else!': sheer extortion: see Robert Westerby, Wide Boys Never Work, 1937, pp. 153–5. In C. 20 U.S.A., tramps use it of a person giving alms, as in ' . . . How much a priest was likely to "drop",' Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938.—3. To stun (a person), esp. as a preliminary to robbing him: 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police; in C. 20 U.S.A., 'To assault, knock down, or kill' (IA, 1931). I.e., to cause him to drop to the ground.—4. See drop the main tober.—5. See dropped.—6. 'To play the drop trick or game,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. Cf. drop, n., 1 and 4.—7. To sell (e.g., cheap jewellery, esp. at a good price): U.S.A.: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; by ca. 1930, also Australian, as in Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, 'People who "faked" or "dropped" small articles . . . anything and everything'; extant.—8. To dispose of (something) to a 'fence': 1930 (but in a passage valid for ca. 1912), Geo. Smithson, Raffles in Real Life, "'Here," he [a petty thief] said, "I've got a bit of 'stuff' I should like you to 'drop' for me, if you will'"; extant.—9. To catch (a person) in possession of stolen property: U.S.A.: 1935, Hargan; extant.—10. To utter a false cheque; usually v.t.: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938.—11. (Cf. sense 9.) To lose a confederate, owing to his capture by the police: since ca. 1925. Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938, 'Those who escaped would say: "We dropped Bill last night"'—12. To get rid of a person, to 'lose' him: New Zealand: since late 1920's. Nelson Baylis, private letter, 1932. Cf. senses 11 and 13.—13. (Cf. 11.) To be arrested by the police; to get into trouble with prison officials: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; since ca. 1930 in Britain; Jim Phelan, In the Can, 1938, 'The black's an 'ard lark—yer gets a woeful spotta stir when yer drop'; 1940, Jim Phelan, Jail Journey (the latter nuance); extant.

drop, cop the. See cop.

drop, give (one) the. To leave the company or the service of a person, esp. after robbing or defrauding him of money: 1722, Anon., Tyburn's Worthies.

drop, on the; e.g., got (something) on the drop. "I got it on the drop, meaning dropping the ring", Sessions Papers, June 1802 (p. 334); app. † by 1920. Ex drop, n., 3 (cf. sense 1).

drop, take the. To accept a bribe; esp. of a police officer taking one from a crook: since the 1920's. Black, 1943. See drop, n., 8.

drop a cog. 'To let fall (with design to draw in and cheat) a Piece of Gold,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1890. Cf. drop cove and drop game.

drop a whid. 'To let fall a word, either inadvertently or designedly': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1910. See whid, n.

drop-case. A gambling den (?): gamblers': since ca. 1920. Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937, where it is cursorily mentioned, not defined.

drop cove, or hyphenated. One who practises the dropping of coins or jewellery for the inveiglement of the unwary: 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. Cf. fawney rig, q.v.

drop cull. He whose 'chief business is to make himself acquainted with those places where the most property is to be got', esp. inns and taverns; he imparts his information to a sneak thief, from whom, if the attempt is successful, he gets a 'rake-off' of one-quarter or one-third: 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected; app. † by 1890. Lit., a fellow that drops a hint.—2. One who practises 'the drop' (see drop, n., 2): 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected, where it appears that 'drop culls' work in gangs of three—the 'picker-up', the 'cap', and the 'kid'; † by 1900.

drop down. 'To be dispirited. This expression is used by thieves to signify that their companion did not die game, as the kiddy dropped down when he went to be twisted; the young fellow was very low spirited when he walked out to be hanged': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1833, trial of Wm Halford and Wm Rowland, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–34, IX, 'Halford said, "Do not drop down, it is all right"' ; by the 1850's, American (Matsell, Vocabulary, 1859); † by 1900. To be depressed.

drop down to (a person). 'To discover or be aware of his character or designs': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1900. See down, adj.

drop down upon (oneself). 'To drop down upon yourself, is to become melancholy, or feel symptoms of remorse or compunction, on being committed to jail, cast for death, &c. To sink under misfortunes of any kind. A man who gives way to this weakness, is said to be down upon himself': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1900. See drop down.

drop down upon one's luck. To be hanged: 1828, P. Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry and Logic; but in The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), 1845, it is merely 'to have bad luck'.

drop game, or hyphenated. The 'game' practised by a drop cove: 1785, Grose; 1845, in U.S.A. (see D.A.E.); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); †, in Britain, by 1891 (F & H); 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1925, Leverage; extant in U.S.A. The exponent lets things drop in the sight of the prospective victim.

drop joint. 'Drop Joints. Places selected for conveniently "losing" articles referred to in "The Glim Dropper" and "Sidewalk Rackets",' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; 1933, Eagle; extant. See the terms mentioned.

drop (someone's) lug. See lug . . .

drop lullaby. A hanging: Australian: late C. 19–20. Baker, 1942. The drop or gallows sends one to the long sleep more surely than does even a lullaby.

drop merchant. The same as drop cull, 2: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; app. † by 1860. See drop, n., 2.

drop the chuck. To 'frame' (someone): 1934, Howard N. Rose; ob.

drop the glanthem. See glanthem, drop the.

drop the main tober or toby. To leave, branch off from, the main road: tramps': 1851 (see tobey); 1859, H (. . . tobey); 1889, B & L (. . . toby); extant. See the nn. tobey and toby.

drop the pigeon. Implied in dropping the pigeon.

drop the swag in good twig, 'to part with goods or effects freely or readily', is an elaboration from drop, v., 1 (Vaux, 1812).

drop to. To recognize (a person): 1859, Matsell, at measure; by 1910 it had merged with— or, earlier, > the s. sense 'to become aware or cognisant of' (esp. a trick, a racket, a crime).

drop trick. 'The trick of dropping notes in a bank,' Leverage, 1925: late C. 19–20. In, e.g., A. H. Lewis, The Boss, 1903.

dropped; rare in other parts of the v. 'Dropped. Arrested,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, R. Jordan, 'Idioms'; 1925, Leverage, 'Drop, v., to be responsible for the arrest of a pal'; May 8, 1931, Flynn's, Lawrence M. Maynard; Nov. 1931, IA; extant. (One who has been) caused to fall.

dropped cog (C. 18–mid-19). See cog, n., 2.

dropper. He who drops some—usually counterfeit—valuable to be picked up by a simpleton, who is induced to buy the valuable at a seemingly low price: 1666, Anon., Leathermore's Advice (or The Nicker Nicker)—see quot'n at foiler; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1770, R. King, The Frauds of London Detected; by the 1840's, current in U.S.A.—see The D.A.E.; 1859, Matsell; by 1891 (F & H), † in Britain. A shortening of money-dropper, though the latter seems to be recorded later in c.—2. The same, but in the game or dodge called 'the old nob' (pricking in the garter), wherein he acts as a decoy, to lure the 'flat' into playing this game: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; app. † by 1820.—3. A professional killer: U.S. racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'We got to send East for a couple of droppers'; 1831, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; Aug. 1, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse, who implies its currency in—perhaps throughout—the 1920's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Usually a gunman, although sometimes applied to a [chopper]'; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose—incorrectly, I believe—defines it as 'a thief who knocks out his victims'; by 1935 (David Hume, Call in The Yard), English also; 1938, Castle; extant. 'He drops his victim much as a hunter drops his game' (Irwin).—4. A passer of counterfeit, esp. if paper, money: since ca. 1910. (H. T. F. Rhodes, communication: 1937.) Cf.:—5. (Cf. 1 and 2.) He who cashes forged cheques for a gang: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941; 1943, Black.—6. See emergency gun.

dropper man. An informer—esp. if habitual—to the police: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1945. A man that drops information; also, he causes men to 'drop' or 'fall' (be arrested).

dropping. Bribery: 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room D.O.U.

13, 'Emmanuel had "straightened" many a young detective, and not a few advanced in years. He knew the art of "dropping" to perfection. In all his life, he had met only three or four men who were superior to the well-camouflaged bribe'; extant. Cf. drop, v., 1, 2, and drop, take the.

dropping four. Sense obscure—but prob. connected with dropper, 1, 2: Oct. 27, 1891, Sessions Papers (Detective-Inspector S. loq.), 'I found one of the dropping fours on Albert' (a ramper); extant? Not cited by BVB, 1942.

dropping rig, the. Ring-dropping: 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, IV; app. † by 1900. Cf. drop game.

dropping the pigeon; dropping the poke. Godfrey Irwin, in private letter (1937), says of a passage in The National Police Gazette, Feb. 6, 1847: 'The old pocket-book dropper's trick is called "dropping the pigeon"'; dropping the poke is the more usual C. 20 form of the phrase, as, e.g., in Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. With a proleptic allusion to the dupe or pigeon that picks it up.

drops. 'Glasses', says The London Guide, 1818, without specifying the kind; † by 1900. If drinking-glasses, then the semantic origin is the drops of liquor left in glasses.—2. Gin: 1818, The London Guide; by 1890, low s. The normal 'dose' being very small.

dropsy, 'bribery': pitchmen's s. of C. 20: Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934. But also used by the underworld for any 'illegal or improper payment': F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938, and Black, 1943: prob. as a borrowing from the pitchmen. Ex drop, v., 2.

dross, n. and adj. Gold: 1821, David Haggart, Life (see drag, n.); † by 1900. Ex 'gold is dross'.

dross-scout. A gold watch: 1821, D. Haggart; 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', 2nd ed.; † by 1890. See dross and scout, 2.

drover. See the quot'n at jingler. Ca. 1600–50. Dekker. A special underworld application of the S.E. sense.

drum, n. See speel the drum.—2. A street: ca. 1789, The Sandman's Wedding; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'We drop the main toper [sic] . . . and slink into the crib (house) in the back drum (street)'; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1859, H; 1864, H, 3rd ed. (a road); 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L, 'A street, a road'; 1891, F & H; by 1910, ob.; by 1930, †. Prob. ex Roman 'drum (old form drom, which is, truly, from the Greek δρομός, a road' (B & L).—3. A house; a home, a lodging; in C. 20, often of a flat: beggars': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 418; Feb. 1, 1855, Sessions Papers; 1859, H; 1865, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), Oct. 7; 1869 (see drum, break a); 1872, Geo. P. Burnham (U.S.A.); 1877, Sessions Papers; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!, 'A thieves' abode . . . A drum'; 1891, F & H; 1899, Richard Whiteing, No. 5 John Street; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss (U.S.A.); 1909, Ware; 1916, Arthur Stringer, The Door of Dread (U.S.A.); April 1919, The (American) Bookman; 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1931, Brown, 'House or flat'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A crooks' hangout or den'; 1933, Charles E. Leach; 1935, David Hume, Dangerous Mr Dell; 1936, David Hume, The Crime Combine;

1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; 1943, David Hume, Get Out the Cuffs, 'Cardby had learnt the art of "busting a drum" from men only too well qualified to act as instructors!'; 1943, Black, 'Drum: house, lodgings'; 1943, Richard Llewellyn, None but the Lonely Heart; extant. Possibly ex sense 2: or is it, as Mayhew implies, rhyming s.; but if rhyming s., on what does it rhyme (surely not on home)?—4. 'A drinking place': ? U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1867, J. Greenwood, Unsentimental Journeys; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, 'A . . . small tavern'; 1891, F & H; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, IA; 1938, Damon Runyon, Furthermore; by 1940, low s. Ex sense 3.—5. A brothel: U.S.A.: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; slightly ob. Ex sense 3, via flash drum, 2.—6. A prison cell: 1909, Ware; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (U.S.A.); 1934, Convict; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; 1938, Convict 2nd; 1940, David Hume, You'll Catch Your Death; extant. Ex sense 3.—7. A (bank-)safe: U.S.A.: 1913 (implied in drum-snuffer); 1919, 1928 (implied at snuff, v., 2); 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex its shape.—8. 'He will bring his "billy-can" or "drum" to the door of a cottage or mansion and beg a little hot water to make a cup of tea,' Frank Gray, The Tramp, 1931: tramps': from the beginning of C. 20, I believe: 1931, Terence Horsley, An Out-of-Work; 1932, Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps; 1932, Matt Marshall, The Travels of Tramp-Royal; 1933, Joseph Augustin, The Human Vagabond; 1933, George Orwell, Down and Out; 1935, Hippo Neville; 1936, W. A. Gape, Half-a-Million Tramps; 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; extant. Prob. ex the drum of an 'oil drum' or some similar kind of canister. Frank Gray, 'A "drum" is an old tin, say a half-pound coffee tin; two holes are made at the lip so that the string may be threaded to carry and control it. This is the one and only equipment common to all genuine tramps, and with it much is done.'—9. A tramp's swag or bundle: Australian tramps': mid-C. 19–20. William Stainer, Recollections of a Life of Adventure, 1866.—10. See drum, v., 3.

drum, v.i. To beg (on the streets): 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo (see quot'n at ballyhoo): but I suspect it to be street s.—at first, low—rather than c. and to derive, not from any sense of drum, n., but simply from 'to beat the big drum'.—2. See drum a gaff. But also independently, as a v.i.—e.g., in Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933, and Walter Hambrook, Hambrook of the Yard, 1936, and F. A. Stanley, A Happy Fortnight, 1938. By drumming—knocking—on the door.—3. 'To drum, drum up, give someone a drum, to warn, to tip off,' Baker, 1945: Australian: since ca. 1920. Prob. 'to sound the drum' as a summons.

drum, break a. To burgle a house, a shop, etc.: 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; † by 1930. See drum, n., 3.

drum, crack a. A rare variant of crack a crib (q.v. at second 1887 reference).

drum, give (someone) a. See drum, v., 3.

drum, hump one's. To carry one's swag: Australian tramps': since ca. 1860; by 1890, s.; by 1920, ob.—hump one's bluey having > much more usual. In, e.g., Wm Stainer, 1866. See drum, n., 9.

drum, speel the. See speel the drum.

drum a gaff. To ascertain whether there is anybody in a house, flat, etc.: burglars': 1931, Brown; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1936, Walter Hambrook; extant. See the separate elements.

drum(-)snuffer. A safe-blower: 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 'His eyes fell on Abe Shiner, a drum snuffer with whom he'—a Deputy District Attorney—'had had previous and somewhat painful encounters'; extant. See drum, n., 8, and snuffer.

drum-up, n. Preparation of a meal; esp. boiling a billy-can of, or for, tea: tramps': C. 20: 1931, Frank Gray, The Tramp; 1932, Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress. Ex:—

drum up, v. To boil a kettle, billy-can, etc., and make tea, esp. in the open air: tramps': since ca. 1860 (see Partridge, 1937); No. 747, 1893; then in C. 20: 1931, Frank Gray, The Tramp, 'It is a wide and general term which may be defined as the operation of preparing a meal'; 1931, Terence Horsley, The Odyssey of an Out-of-Work; 1932, Matt Marshall, The Travels of Tramp-Royal; 1935, Hippo Neville; 1936, James Curtis; 1938, Just a Tramp; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress; 1943, Richard Llewellyn, None but the Lonely Heart; extant. Ex the drumming noise that boiling water makes in a tin can.—2. Hence, to make stew in a 'drum': tramps': 1937, John Worby, The Other Half. Cf. American shackle up.—3. See drum, v., 3.

drummer. 'Those who "Hocus", or Plunder their Victims when stupified [sic].—1. "Drummers", or those who render people insensible. a. By handkerchiefs steeped in chloroform. b. By drugs poured into liquor.—2. "Bug hunters", or those who go round to the public-houses and plunder drunken men': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 24; 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London; 1859, H; Nov. 1870, The Broadway, Anon., 'Among Thieves', 'The "Drummer" plunders either by stupefying or frightening his victims'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1920. 'Probably a corruption of "drammer" (a dram-drinker) from "dram"' (B & L).—2. One who practises the criminal art of drumming: 1925, Netley Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook; 1933, Charles E. Leach; 1934, David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live, p. 85, footnote, 'Drummer: Small crooks [sic] employed to knock at doors to find whether a house is "dead" before a robbery is committed'; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1939, Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows; extant. Ex the v. drum in drumming.

drumming, vbl n. Calling at houses in the suburbs, upon some pretence or other, and, if nobody is at home, entering the houses (it's so easily done by the experts!) and removing cash and valuables, the 'dodge' being usually worked by two persons (normally men): C. 20: e.g., Eustace Jarvis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, 1925, for a full account (pp. 131–3) of the modus operandi; 1925, Netley Lucas, Autobiography (pp. 105–6), where it is applied to a similar rifling of offices in the town; 1931, A. R. L. Gardner, Prisoner at the Bar; 1934, Netley Lucas, My Selves; 1936, Walter drumming-up station. 'A place where tramps know there is enough wood to keep a fire alight while they "drum-up" with their tea-cans,' Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935: tramps': C. 20.

Hambrook, Hambrook of the Yard; 1937, Charles Prior; 1943, Black; extant. Ex drum, n., 3.

Drummond. 'Any scheme or project considered to be infallible, or any event which is deemed inevitably certain, is declared to be a Drummond; meaning, it is as sure as the credit of that respectable banking-house, Drummond and Co.': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1860.

drunken tinker. 'These dronken Tynckers, called also Prygges, be beastly people, and these '—apparently an error for 'the'—'young knaves be the wurst. These never go with out their Doxes, and of their women have anye thing about them, as apparell or lynnenn, that is worth the selling, they laye the same to gage, or sell it out right, for bene bowse at their bowsing ken. And full sone wyll they be wearye of them, and have a newe. When they happen one '—on—'woorke at any good house, their Doxes lynger alofe, and tarry for them in some corner; and yf he taryeth longe from her, then she knoweth he hath worke, and walketh neare, and sitteth downe by him. For besydes money, he looketh for meate and drinke for doinge his dame pleasure. For yf she have three or foure holes in a pan, he wyll make as many more for speddy gaine. And if he se any old kete, chafer, or pewter dish abroad in the yard where he worketh, he quicklye snappeth the same up, and in to the booget it goeth round. Thus they lyve with deceite With picking and stealing, mingled with a lytle worke for a coulour [i.e., pretext], they passe their time.'

Drury Lane ague, syphilis; Drury Lane vestal, a prostitute; these are s. terms of mid-C. 18—early 19.

dry bath. Search of a stripped prisoner: convicts': since ca. 1918. George Ingram, Stir, 1933.

dry-bread cove. A man not quite penniless: prob. low London s., not c.: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I. He is reduced to eating dry bread.

dry combo. 'Any meal which needs no cooking; cheese and crackers,' Ersine: mostly tramps': since ca. 1920. Here, combo = combination; cf. dry lump.

dry fist, with a. Gamesters' c. of ca. 1650–1750. Anon., Leathermore's Advice; concerning Gaming, more gen. known as The Nicker Nicked, 'Of these Rooks some . . ., others will throw at a summe of money with a dry fist (as they call it) that is, if they nick you, 'tis theirs, if they lose, they owe you so much'; 1674, C. Cotton, The Compleat Gamester, 'He '—a 'bully rock'—'throws the Main, and crys, who comes at Seven? | Thus with a dry fist nicks it with Eleven.'

dry goods. Strong liquor, alcohol: bootleggers' (and others'): Sept. 21, 1929, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, "'You bring that 'dry goods' . . . ?" she asked, "I'd like a shot of the real stuff. I'm sick of this Miquelon potato-alky, doped up"' ; after 1934, merely historical. Euphemistic (and ironical), with a pun on dry, 'of, in, for, by Prohibition'.

dry grog. Narcotics: drug traffic: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. Dutch courage.

dry house. A dungeon: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Ironically ex its dampness.

dry-land Jack. An itinerant beggar pretending to be an unfortunate mariner: ca. 1850–1910. C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, The Rogues' Gallery, 1890, at p. 29. Cf. freshwater mariner and freshwater seaman.

dry lump. 'A dry handout; sandwiches,' Ersine: mostly tramps': since ca. 1915. See lump and cf. dry combo.

dry room. A prison: 1891, F & H; † by 1930. Perhaps by antiphrasis.

dry-rub, v., 'to search the person of (a prisoner) for contraband': at least as much prison warders' s. as convicts' c. Jock of Dartmoor, Dartmoor from Within, 1932. Cf. dry bath.

dry scan. Bread: tramps' and beggars': 1887, C. W. Craven, A Night in the Workhouse; by 1910, low s. See scan, n., 1.

dry up; esp. as be dried up, to have concluded, to have done or said all one can: not c., as Geo. P. Burnham, 1872, classifies it.

drying(-)room. A police third-degree room: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant.

dub, n. 'A Pick-lock-key,' B.E., 1698; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 'Dub, a Picklock or Key'; 1718, C. Hitching; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected, 'Dub, (a name for a false key)'; 1785, Grose; 1789, G. Parker; by 1794, in Am. use (Henry Tufts, 1807); 1812, Vaux (any key); 1822, The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul; 1848, Sinks of London; 1851, E. Z. C. Judson (U.S.A.); 1859, H; † by 1900. Ex sense 1 of the v.—2. Always the dub. Earliest in upon the dub, q.v. below; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'The Lay called the Dub'; † by 1900.—3. App. a pocket, but only in hing'd dub, q.v.—4. See dubs.—5. A fool; a 'softy': U.S.A.: C. 20. A. H. Lewis, The Boss, 1903; Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 1912; by 1920, low s.—if not, indeed, s. from the beginning.

dub, v. To open: earliest as dup, q.v.; 1688, Holme (dub); 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., which, after B.E., has 'Dub the Jigger, open the Door'; so too Grose, 1785; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—Matsell's Vocabulum; 1889, B & L; † by 1891 (F & H). I.e., dup; ex do ope, do—i.e., cause to—open.—2. To lock, to shut: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Dubb'd, that is . . . lock'd or bolted'; 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society, 'Dub the Jigger is, in other words, shut the door'; 1797, Potter; 1821, D. Haggart (of buttoning up one's coat); 1823, Bee, "'Dub your mummer"—shut your mouth'; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. I.e., do up, fasten.

dub, upon the. (Of theft or burglary) by opening the door: 1698, B.E., 'We'll strike it upon the dub, c. we will rob that Place' and 'Going upon the dub, c. Breaking a House with Picklocks'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; by 1850, current in U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); 1889, B & L; † by 1900. See dub, n., 1 and 2.

dub, young. See young dub.

dub at a knapping jigger. 'A collector of tolls at a turnpike-gate': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee (. . . napping g.); 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; † by 1889 (B & L). Lit., a picklock key (the man that opens purses) at the striking door.

dub cove. A turnkey: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'I . . . got very gracious with the dub coves, on account of my being a quiet orderly prisoner'; 1823, Egan's Groser; 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London; † by 1891 (F & H). Ex dub, n., 1.

dub cull. A turnkey, a warder: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'A quad Cull and a dubb Cull, a Gaoler and a Turnkey'; † by 1890. See dub, n., 1, and v., 2; cull, n.

dub-lay, the. 'Robbing houses by picking the locks': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; by the 1850's, current in America—Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; † by 1891 (F & H). Ex dub, n., 1, and lay, n., 2.

dub o' the hick, 'a lick'—or blow—'on the head' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), is not c. but s.

dub the jigger. To open the door: 1566, Harman, dup the gyger; 1688, Holme, dub the giger; 1698, B.E.; † by 1860. Ex do ope, cause to open.—2. To shut the door: 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900. Ex do up, to close, shut.

dub up. 'To lock up or secure any thing or place; also to button one's pocket, coat, &c.': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1900. See dub, v., 2.

dubb is an occ. variant of dub, n.: see, e.g., dub cull.

dubber. 'A Picker of Locks,' B.E., 1698; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 'Dubbers. Such as rob Dwelling-Houses, Ware-houses, Choach [sic] houses or Stables, by picking the Locks thereof'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; by 1900, †. Ex dub, v., 1.—2. The mouth: 1789, implied in dubber-mummed; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx (see lip, v.); 1864, H., 3rd ed. "Mum your dubber", hold your tongue'; 1887, Baumann; by 1890, †. Ex dub, v., 2.

dubber, mum one's. To be silent: 1789, implied in dubber-mummed; 1846 (see lip, v.); † by 1890. Lit., to be silent (as to) one's mouth.

dubber-mummed. Silent; hesitating to speak: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Aye do, why should you be dubber-mumm'd?', glossed as 'To keep your mouth shut, or be obliged to hold your tongue'; 1792, C. Pigott, The Minor Jockey Club; † by 1890. Cf. dub, v., 2, and muns.

dubler. An error for dubber, 1. (Matsell, 1859.)

Dublin packet, the. See double, v. (A pun on doubling.)

dubs. 'Cant for a bunch of small keys': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1782, Sessions Papers; 1821, D. Haggart, Life; 1859, H., 'Dubs, a bunch of keys'; ob. in 1860; † by 1890. Ex dub, n., 1.—2. 'Money, of the copper kind': 1823, Jon Bee (dubbs); † by 1900. Perhaps ex sense 1.—3. A turnkey: 1887, Henley; † by 1900. But in the Henley reference (Villon's Good-Night)—see the quot'n at snam, on the—the singular may be dub. Short for dubsman.—4. A fool: U.S.A.: not c., but low s. (J. Flynt, Ruderick Clowd, 1903.)

dubsman. A turnkey: 1812, J. H. Vaux; ca. 1819, The Young Prig; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'But I slipped my darbies one morn in May|Fake away,|And gave to the dubsman a holiday'; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H.; † by 1889 (B & L). Ex dubs, 1.

ducat. A (railway) ticket: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'I took a ducat for Sutton in Surrey'; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H, 'Also a pawnbroker's duplicate; raffle-card'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (U.S.A.)—ticket of admission or transportation; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg"?'); 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1926, Jack Black; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1934, Convict; 1938, Convict 2nd; extant. A special form and application of ducket.—2. A dollar: U.S.A.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'Merely a play on the word for the old Italian coin' (Irwin).—3. A doctor's certificate stating dumbness or blindness or inability to work: U.S. beggars': since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933. Ex 1. A variant of ducket, 5.

duce. Twopence: 1698, B.E.; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1789, Geo. Parker, Life's Painter; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1859, H.; 1886, W. Newton; † by 1900. A variant spelling of deuce; imm. ex deuswins (see dews wind).—2. Hence in U.S.A. two cents: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910.

duce hog. Two shillings: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; extant. See hog.

duceavil is that spelling of deusea ville which appears in the Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed. 1708.

duck, n. A simple person, easily duped: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; † by 1936 (Irwin). Cf. pigeon, 1.—2. 'It was a "duck" (an old-fashioned worthless watch)' Jerome Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life, Vol. 2, p. 107 (with the implication that the term was already in use ca. 1869); app. † by 1930. Cf. duffer, 2.—3. 'A ha'porth of "duck"—which is just all the old scraps of all kinds of meat at the butcher's shop baked together in the oven,' Rev. G. Z. Edwards, A Vicar as Vagrant, 1910: tramps': C. 20. Ironical.—4. (Ex sense 1.) A fellow or chap: U.S.A.: since ca. 1870. But s.—not c. Perhaps ironic on the endearment duck.—5. 'A tin pail in which beer is carried,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Why? Cf. growler, q.v.—6. See lame duck.

duck, v. To run; run away: South Africa: since ca. 1918. (J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946.) Perhaps ex 1914–18 ducking one's head during a bombardment. Prob., however, directly ex American (low) s. duck, 'to escape from' (as in No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904) and, v.i., 'to run away, make off' (as in A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 1912).

duck, do a. See do a duck.

duck, fake the. See faking the duck.

duck a rat. To avoid a prosecution; to evade being tried by law: since ca. 1920. It occurs in, e.g., Charles F. Coe's Hooch, 1929.

duck-coy sunk-before. A castle: ca. 1870–1900. Recorded at p. 320 of C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 1889. The sunk-before refers prob. to the usual moat; duck-coy to the fact that on the moat, ducks are usually to be seen swimming.

duck in the green curtains. 'An old lag . . . might find it convenient to "duck in the green curtains" for a while (sleep on the slopes of Table Mountain),' The Cape Times, May 23, 1946: South Africa: C. 20. See duck, v.; the green curtains refers to grass and shrubs.

duck out. Not c., but s.

duck(-)soup. Anything easy to do: since ca.

1915; by 1935, s. Ersine, 1935. A duck's soup is ready-made, for it is water.

duck the nut. To hide; to get quietly out of the way—out of sight: since ca. 1917: after ca. 1935, s. (Godfrey Irwin.) To lower the head and thus render oneself less conspicuous.

ducker. A Dodge automobile: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant—though slightly ob. 'A play on the word "dodge"' (Irwin): cf. s. to duck and run.

ducket, 'a ticket of any kind. Usually applied to pawnbroker's duplicates and [to] raffle cards. Prob. from docket,' H, 1874: not c. but proletarian s.—2. A hawk's licence: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed (where also spelt docket); extant. Ex 1.—3. A railway ticket: c. since ca. 1860 in U.S.A.; it appears, e.g., in Anon., State Prison Life, 1871, and Moreby Acklom in The (American) Bookman of April 1919, but its predominant U.S. form is ducat, q.v.; 1931, Godfrey Irwin.—4. A ticket or card 'good for a feed or a flop', Stiff, 1931: U.S. tramps': 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A Union card'; extant.—5. 'A begging letter carried by a cripple or a deaf and dumb person,' to enable him to avoid arrest: mostly beggars': U.S.A.: C. 20. Irwin, 1931. Cf. senses 1, 3, 4. See also ducat, 3.

du, n. See duds.—2. As a 'counterfeit coin', it seems to have never been c. Ex:—3. A substitute; a fake: c. in early C. 20, then soldiers' s. IA, 1931.

du, adj. Counterfeit: April 22, 1907, Sessions Papers; by ca. 1909, it was low s. Ex senses 2 and 3 of the n.

du up; face. Australian hawkers' and cheap-jacks' s., of C. 20, for 'to arrange wares for sale so that goods of poor quality are hidden,' Baker, 1945.

dudder. 'The Duders, that is, Sellers of Handkerchiefs,' John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753; not only handkerchiefs but such articles as aprons and ruffles, as appears in Poulter's section entitled 'Dudders', which begins: 'They are a Sett of People that resort to Fairs and Markets, under pretence of being Smugglers, and selling nothing but prohibited Goods; at the same time it is ordinary Goods made in England'; by urging haste, lest the exciseman come upon them, they often obtain double what the goods are worth; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, where they are also called 'whispering dudders'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1859, H, 'The term and practice are nearly obsolete'; by 1889 (B & L), †. Prob. cognate with duds; but cf. duff, n., and duffer.—2. Hence, a swindler, esp. 'one who passes off harmless powder as cocaine or morphia': Australian: late C. 19–20. Partridge, 1937; Baker, 1942.

dudder, v.; n. 'To peddle second hand clothes.—A peddler of second hand clothes' (Leverage, 1925): not c., but low s. So too with duddery, 'secondhand clothing' (Leverage).

duddering rake, 'a thundering rake, a buck of the first head, one extremely rude' (Grose, 1796), is not c. but s.

duddes, dudds, and dudes. See duds.

dude. Light; a light: tramps' and beggars': C. 20. Jules Manchon, 1923. Ex English gypsy dood.

duder. See dudder.

dudes. See duds.

duds. 'Dudes, clothes,' Harman, 1566; ibid., 'We wyll fylche some duddes of the Ruffemans'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, in form dudes; 1610, Rowlands (dudes); 1665, R. Head (duds); 1676, Coles, 'Duds, c. Goods'; 1688, Holme (dudes); 1698, B.E. (dudds); 1718, C. Hitching, 'Dudds, alias Linnen'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; 1782, G. Parker (dud, a garment); 1785, Grose—but the term may have > s. as early as 1750 or 1760, though it may, in the U.S.A., have remained c. until ca. 1870—witness E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851, and Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859.—2. Hence, goods: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A Canting Dict., 'Dudds, Cloaths or Goods'; 1859, H—but prob. even this sense was s. by 1800.

duds, lag of. See lage of duds.

duds, sweat. To pawn clothes: ? ca. 1750–1870. In 1889, B & L (sole authority) say that it is old. See duds, 1.

duds cheer, in Sinks of London, 1848, is an error for duds, queer, 'queer' (i.e., ragged) clothes.

dudsman. A variant of dudder. (H, 3rd ed., 1864; † by 1889 (B & L).) Lit., a clothes man.

dues. 'This term is sometimes used to express money, where any certain sum or payment is spoken of; a man asking for money due to him for any service done, or a blowen requiring her previous payment from a family-man, would say, Come, tip us the dues. So a thief, requiring his share of booty from his palls, will desire them to bring the dues to light': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1891 (F & H). The origin is implicit in Vaux's explanation; hence comes the modern s. do's or doos (as in fair doos, a fair share, justice).—2. 'This word is often introduced by the lovers of flash on many occasions, but merely out of fancy, and can only be understood from the context of their discourse; like many other cant terms, it is not easily explained on paper: for example, speaking of a man likely to go to jail, one will say, there will be quodding dues concerned, of a man likely to be executed; there will be topping dues, if anything is alluded to that will require a fee or bribe, there must be tipping dues, or palming dues concerned, &c.': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, plagiarizingly; see lagging dues. The usage, though less gen. than it was, is not †: criminals still speak of outing dues, which corresponds to topping dues.

duey, 'twopence', is parlyaree. Thomas Frost, Circus Life, 1875.

duff, n. (Always the duff.) The art and trade of the 'dudder', q.v.: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; app. † by 1889 (B & L).—2. See duff, man at the: the passing or distribution of sham jewellery.—3. Hence, bracelets: 1931, Desmond Morse-Boycott (see groin); extant.

duff, v.; often duff it. To act as, to practise as, to be, a 'duffer', q.v.: 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London, 'He "cut up" at ten thousand pounds, was a free liver, but never duffed it in the streets of London, so far as I could ascertain'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. Perhaps imm. ex the n., sense 1.—2. Hence, to steal (cattle or horses); v.i. and v.t.: Australian c. of ca. 1850–1900; then s. Carton Booth in Another England, 1869; Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms, 1881, for both the transitive and the intransitive usage.

duff, adj. Spurious, counterfeit: 1889, B & L; Nov. 24, 1910, Sessions Papers; extant. Cf.:

duff, man at the. 'Men at the duff (passing false jewellery)': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1889. B & L; duff groin. A faked-gold, or fake-gemmed, ring: since ca. 1920. Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941. See duff, n., 2, and groin.

1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; extant. Cf. duff, adj.

duff it. See duff, v.

duffer. In the earliest record (The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, 1742, No. IV), the term is restricted to a vendor of allegedly smuggled liquor, especially brandy; 'Duffers', says Richard King, in his The Frauds of London detected, 1770, 'are a set of men that prey on the credulity . . . of both sexes, by plying at the corners of streets, courts and alleys to vend their contraband wares, generally composed of silk handkerchiefs made in Spital Fields, remnants of silk purchased at the piece-brokers, which they tell you are true India, stockings from Rag Fair or Field Lane, sometimes stolen, sometimes bought at a very low price, which they declare are just smuggled from France, and therefore can afford you a bargain if you will become a purchaser'—they display genuine foreign goods, but sell goods that are not foreign or, at the least, not contraband, and they pretend to fear detection by the Revenue Officers; 1776, Sir John Fielding, London and Westminster, where there is described a variation—the duffers leave inferior goods as security with, e.g., a publican; 1785, Grose (as in King); 1796, P. Colquhoun, The Police of the Metropolis; 1802, G. Barrington (plagiarizing King); 1823, Bee; 1827, J. Wight, More Mornings at Bow Street; 1828, Sessions Papers; 1839, Brandon; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1848, Sinks of London; 1851, Mayhew; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; by 1860, or so, s. Cf. dudder, q.v.—2. Hence, a watch that, sold by a 'duffer', has no works in it: 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, V, trial of Daniel Carter; 1830, op. cit.; VI, 'It is made to sell, not to go'; 1849, Sessions (Dec. 3), 'I do not call all silver watches duffers—they are obliged to put duffing works into silver cases to make them appear genuine'; Feb. 1857, Sessions; extant.—3. A swindler: 1849, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, V, ch. lxxvi; † by 1900. Ex sense 1.—4. (Cf. sense 2.) A counterfeit coin: June 1864, Sessions Papers (p. 150); 1877, Five Years Penal Servitude; 1885, J. Greenwood, A Queer Showman; 1889, B & L; by 1890, low s.—5. Cattle-thief: Australian c. of ca. 1850–1900; then s. Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms, 1881.—6. 'A name applied in contempt' (= fool), No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904. In English, the word is s.; it emigrated to the U.S.A., where it may have been c. during the approximate period 1890–1910.—7. 'I received punk (bread) and a cup of mud (black coffee) or—to use the familiar hobo expression for the combination—duffer,' Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925; U.S. tramps': ? since ca. 1910; 1938, Castle (San Quentin, 1934–5: bread alone); extant.—8. A tough; a criminal hooligan: London: since ca. 1930. Richard Llewellyn, None but the Lonely Heart, 1943. He's a 'bad'un'.

duffey. See duffy.

duffing, n., 'the selling of ordinary as if they were smuggled goods', is prob. to be considered as having been orig. (ca. 1730–1840) c.; the same applies to the adjective. See duff, v., and duffer.—2. See duffing yard and duffing racket. But in the earliest record, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, 1742, No. IV, we find this definition, 'Duffing is buying Spirituous Liquors from the Still and hawking 'em about, making People imagine 'em to be fine genuine Liquor, which they had smuggled, and to make it appear more like run Goods, they frequently rub the Head of the Cask over with Sand, and swear to you that they had just dug it out of the Ballast of the Ship'.

duffing, adj. See duffing, n., 1.—2. "Duffing" jewellery—that is, goods apparently of solid gold, but plated only, sufficiently deep, however, to withstand the acid test,' The Reminiscences of Chief-Inspector Littlechild, 1894; but the term is applied also to (say) watches and to metals other than gold—see, at duffer, 2, the quot'n of 1849 from Sessions Papers, where (Dec. 3, trial of John Galley) we find 'duffing chronometer' applied to a watch consisting of a silver case and useless works; cf. Sessions, Feb. 1864, 'There was a spurious chain . . . what is called a "duffing chain"' and ibid., April 1, 1881, 'I have a lot of duffing jewellery'.—3. Hence, dishonest, swindling, illicit, crookedly operated: Oct. 1877, Sessions Papers (p. 628), 'There will be a duffing bank in it'; ob.

duffing-ken. See duffing yard.

duffing racket, the. Cattle-stealing: Australian c. of ca. 1860–1900; then s. Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms, 1881. Cf. duff, v., 2, and duffer, 5.

duffing yard. A cattle-branding yard: Australian cattle duffers' and horse duffers': since ca. 1860. Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms, 1881, 'It was a "duffing" yard sure enough. No one but people who had cattle to hide and young stock they didn't want other people to see branded would have made a place there'; by 1910, low s. In The (Sydney) Bulletin, Aug. 13, 1892, occurs the synonym duffing-ken, cited in 1945 by Baker, who notes that it is an 'English-sounding expression': see ken. Ex duff, v., 2. duffman. Low-grade: C. 20. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932. Cf. duffing, adj., 3.

duffsman. A circulator of counterfeit money: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Cf. duff, adj.

duffy or duffey. Counterfeit money: 1925, Leverage; extant. Perhaps ex duff, adj.—2. A hard hat, a bowler: tramps': C. 20. Stiff, 1931.

dug-out. 'A "dug-out", in prison parlance, is a convict who eats everything given to him, everything he can beg, everything he can steal, and still wants more,' Convict 12627, Flynn's, Dec. 25, 1937: since ca. 1920. He eats, or can eat, so much that he simply must be hollow inside.

duis is a rare variant of duce or of deux in deux wins. (Potter, 1797.)

duke or rum duke. 'A queer unaccountable fellow': 1785, Grose. The term is more prob. low s. than c., for this sense of rum is s.—low at first. But earlier (see rum duke) it had, as rum duke, the status of c. and a very different sense.—2. As 'a hand', it is rhyming s.: Duke of Yorks = s. forks = fingers = hands. But the phrase grease one's duke (arising ca. 1865) is prob. c.—orig., at least. In U.S.A., duke has remained c.: witness the quot'n at pit, 3; an entry in Jackson & Hellyer, 1914; John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; Eagle, 1933; Convict, 1934; E. H. Sutherland, 1937; Convict 2nd, 1938; and later writers.—3. 'Any transaction in the shape of a burglary': 1891, F & H; app. † by 1930 at the latest. Perhaps ex sense 2. Semantics: a participation, taking a hand, in.—4. 'A confidence game involving fraud at cards,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. As the duke, not merely duke. Also the big mitt. Sleight-of-hand is required.

duke, v.; duke in (see quot'n of 1934). To shake hands with: 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, 'Morgenstein . . . held out his hand. "Duke me, Steve!" he said huskily. "You're a regular fella!"'; 1934, Convict, 'When the criminal asks to be introduced to another person he says he wants to be duked in'; 1938, Damon Runyon, Furthermore; extant. Ex duke, 'a hand'.

duke, grease one's. See grease one's duke.

duke (or D-), the. The Warden: convicts': since ca. 1920. Hargan, 1935. Ex general s., where it indicates 'someone with good clothes and an "air"', rather than one necessarily with authority' (Godfrey Irwin).

duke down, lay (or put) the. To work one's pickpocketry: 1928 (see put the duke down); 1938, Convict. Ex duke, 'hand'.

duke in. See duke, v.

duke man. That assistant to a pickpocket who helps to hide the latter's hand: since ca. 1920. Kernôt, 1929–31. Cf. duke down.

Duke of Cork; Duke of York. A talk or a walk: Pacific Coast: resp. C. 20 and late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944; Duke of York, 'talk', occurs in The American Mercury, May 1928 (Ernest Booth). The former is a deliberate American variant of the latter, which was adopted ex Cockney rhyming s. See also:—

Duke of (or o') York. 'Conversation between crooks,' Kernôt, 1929–31; extant. Rhyming on talk. See also prec.

dukee. See dookey, 2.

dukeman. One who operates duke, n., 4; a card-sharper: since ca. 1925. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. Also duke player: Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941.

dukes. See rum duke, 2.—2. The hands: s. in England; but c. in America until C. 20. Matsell, 1859.

dukey. See dookey.

dukkerin(g) or dookerin(g), 'fortune-telling': not c. but pitchmen's s. The variant dookin is perhaps c.

dum-dum(b). See rum-dum.

dum tam. A bundle of clothes carried on back, but under the coat, by a beggar or a tramp: (North) Scottish: C. 19. (E.D.D.) Here dum = 'dumb': though carried as if a child, it is mute. And tam, perhaps = tam o'shanter, but prob. = Tam, generic for a (male) child.

dumb arm, 'a lame arm' (Grose, 1785), may possibly, ca. 1770–1830, have been c.; more prob. low s.

dumb gat. A revolver fitted with a silencer: 1925, Leverage; extant. See gat, n.

dumb lock. '[Dudders] will sometimes pretend'—against a deposit of money—'to leave a Bag of Tea, which generally proves to be a Bag of Saw Dust, with a little Tea at the Top, just at the Mouth of the Bag. This is called a Dumb Lock': 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries. Perhaps because the tea is a dumb witness to the supposed honesty of the deal; a lock thereon. But the lock may be sense 3 of lock, q.v.

dumb sparkler. 'Some "dumb sparklers", or silent matches,' F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Auto- biography of a Gipsy, 1893: ca. 1840–1910. It shines, but makes no noise on being struck.

dumb watch, 'a venereal bubo in the groin' (Grose, 1785), may have, orig. at least, been c., but more prob. it was always low s.; app. current ca. 1770–1850. Cf. dumb arm.

dumber is a misprint for damber. Sinks of London, 1848.

dumbie. See dummy, 1, ref. of 1821.

dummacker, 'a knowing or acute person' (H, 2nd ed., 1860), prob. is not c. but low s.; possibly, however, it remained c. until ca. 1870. It recurs in The Story of a Lancashire Thief, 1863. Prob. a slovenly pronunciation of durrnacker.

dummee. See dummy.—dummee-hunter. See dummy-hunter.

dummerar or -er. An occ. C. 17–mid-18 variant of dommerar. (Dekker, 1608, The Belman of London; J. Shirley, 1707.)

dummed up. See dummy up, 2.

dummy. A pocket book, a wallet: 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Frisk the dummee of the screens; take all the bank notes out of the pocket book'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; ca. 1819, The Young Prig; 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'He shewed us the dumbie stuffed with cambric-paper'; 1823, Bee (dummie); 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'Then out with the dummy, and off with the bit'; 1835, Sessions Papers; 1839, Brandon (dummie); 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxix, 'Dummie—pocket-book of large size'; by ca. 1850, well-established in U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); 1851, Mayhew (see buzzer); 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell; 1860, C. Martell, The Detective's Note Book; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1931, The Bon Voyage Book; 1937, David Hume, Halfway to Horror; 1933, F. D. Sharpe (of the Flying Squad); extant. That which, although dumb, speaks eloquently. Cf. dee.—2. The sense, 'a watch with no works inside', is rather low s. than c. (Anon., Tricks and Traps of New York, 1865).—3. A loaf: 1909, Ware, 'Prob. from the softness of the crumb'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (U.S.A.), 'Bread'; 1934, Convict, 'Bread he'—the U.S. criminal—'calls punk or dummy'; 1934, Rose; extant.—4. A tramp, hobo, or bum that pretends to be deaf and dumb: tramps' (U.S.A.): 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, quoting Leon Livingston (1918); ibid., independently, 'A Dummy is a man who is dumb or deaf and dumb'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant.—5. A detective: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; Sept. 5, 1931, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1934, Rose; extant. Popularly supposed to be dumb, 'stupid'.—6. The penis: U.S.A.: C. 20. Thomas Minehan, Boy and Girl Tramps, 1934. Though eloquent, it speaks not.—7. 'The "dummy" who steals for small rewards,' J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding, 1938: U.S.A.: since ca. 1925.

dummy, chuck a. See chuck a dummy.

dummy, sing. See sing dummy.

dummy brief. A worthless betting-slip: race-course gangs': C. 20. Michael Fane, Racecourse Swindles, 1936.

dummy-chucker. A criminal given to pretending to be deaf and dumb whenever it suits his convenience; addicted to convenient fainting: 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 'When a police surgeon hit on the idea of etherizing an obdurate "dummy chucker", to determine if the prisoner could talk or not, Blake appropriated the suggestion as his own'; 1918, A. Stringer, The House of Intrigue (2nd nuance): either c. or a police s. variant of dummy, 4.

dummy-daddle dodge. 'Picking pockets in an omnibus under cover of a sham hand': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1920. See daddle.

dummy gag, the. A pretending to be mute: tramps' and beggars': C. 20. Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan, 'To Hell and Back'. Here, gag = trick, and dummy = dumby.

dummy-hunter. 'A pickpocket, who lurks about to steal pocket books out of gentlemen's pockets': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'No dummy-hunter had forks so fly'; April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1889, B & L; † by 1891 (F & H). See dummy, 1.

dummy old woman's ticket. Australian convicts' c. since ca. 1840, as in Price Warung, Tales of the Old Regime, 1897, p. 11, note, 'Dummy old ooman's tickets: Forged bankstock certificates, in convict slang'; app. † by 1920. Dummy is s. for 'not genuine'; the old woman is 'the Old Woman of Threadneedle Street' (The Bank of England).

dummy(-)up. To pretend to an affliction: beggars' (and tramps'): 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (see quot'n at d and d); extant.—2. Hence, 'to cease talking or giving information' (Irwin); to be, to keep, quiet: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict, 'Dummy up means to be quiet'; 1935, David Lamson; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; 1938, Don Castle; 1943, Raymond Chandler, The High Window, but thus: "'How long do you expect to stay dummied up?" he asked—and it had > police s.

dump, n. 'Dumps . . . Buttons': tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1890, James Greenwood, Jerry Jacksmith; extant. Ex the small coin so named: resemblance in shape and appearance.—2. 'A lodging-house or restaurant; synonymous with "hang-out"', Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (U.S.A.), glossary, 1899; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'; by ca. 1918, English—as in Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923; 1928, J. K. Ferrier, 'Crime in the United States' in his Crooks and Crime; by 1929 (C. F. Coe, Hooch), police and journalistic s. in U.S.A., esp. in nuance 'drinking saloon'. Ex dump, a heap of refuse: pejorative.—3. Hence, any building, esp. a prison: U.S.A.: 1904, Hutchings Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (in respect of a prison); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (glossary), 'A prison'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by M. Acklom; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1928, J. K. Ferrier, Crooks and Crime; 1933, Ersine; extant.—4. 'Railroad transfer or terminals' (a railway junction or terminus), No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: U.S.A.: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, IA, who implies obsolescence and compares spill.—5. Hence (?), a cheap brothel; a brothel in a low quarter of a town: American white-slavers': C. 20. In, e.g., Terence McGovern, It Paid to Be Tough, 1939.—6. A meeting-place; a rendezvous: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hoboes, 'Isn't that the hobo dump where yeggs and other vicious tramp criminals hatch their plots?'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Criminal rendezvous'; 1931, Stiff, 'Hobo hangout or gathering place'; 1931, Irwin; extant.—7. A forsaking or abandonment: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.—8. A place (esp. a building, a room) for the storage of stolen property: New Zealand and Australia: since ca. 1919: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter: N.Z.); 1942, Baker (Australia); extant. Prob. coined by ex-service crooks, who in 1914–18 saw many huge dumps on the Western Front—and elsewhere.

dump, v. 'To deceive; to forsake, to treat shabbily,' Leverage, 1925; Nov. 15, 1930, Liberty (to tip a person off to the police); extant.—2. 'To throw away (say booty, in order to be clean),' Leverage, 1925; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1933, police and journalistic s.—3. 'If . . . he is given the third degree, he'—the criminal—'says he is dumped or tamped up,' Convict, 1934: since ca. 1925.—4. To 'bump off', kill, murder: 1936, Charles Francis Coe, G-Man, 'There ain't no reason for dumpin' Knuckle unless it was done by pals of guys Knuckle has dumped'; extant.

dump fencer; usually hyphenated. 'A man who sells buttons': 1859, H; by 1870, low s. I.e., fencer, 2 (a vendor), and the resemblance of a button to a dump or perforated coin.

dunagan. See dunnaken.

dunaker, dunnaker, don(n)aker, is by B.E. defined as a cow-stealer; by Grose (1785) as a stealer of cows and calves—a sense that may, in any case, have been current as early as 1670 and of which the origin may be dun (cow)-napper (though see below); but this definition seems hardly to fit that passage (see foiler) in which it occurs in The Nicker Nicked, 1666, though it not impossibly bears the cow-stealing sense even there. 'The Forty-third Order of Villains,' A New Canting Dict., 1725. The term seems to have survived until ca. 1870: H, 1859, remarks, 'Nearly obsolete'; by the 1850's it was current in U.S.A. (witness Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859: duneker). Prob.—despite the dates—direct ex dunnock.

Duncan Campbell's floating academy. See Campbell's academy.

duncarring, 'buggery', has been classified as c., but there seems to be little—if any—justification for this classification; B.E., 1698 (the earliest record), does not give it as c. The word prob. springs from the surname of some notable bugger.

dunce-cap, v. To corner: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. Ex former school procedure of putting a dunce, wearing a dunce's cap, into a corner.

dunegan. See the 1811 reference in dunnaken.

duneker. See dunaker.

dunnaken or -kin. A privy: 1797, Humphry Potter, 'Dunnakin, a necessary'; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal. (as dunegan); 1821, P. Egan (dunagan; see donegan); 1822, A Real Paddy, Real Life in Ireland, 'What is in London gaols termed a dunniken'; 1823, Bee (donneken); 1823, Egan's Grose (dunagan and dunegan); 1848, Sinks of London; 1860, H, 2nd ed. (dunny-ken); by 1864, low s. (witness H, 3rd ed.). I.e., danna + ken.—2. Hence (or is it an error?), in U.S.A., dunnaken!, It can't be helped; It's necessary: Matsell, 1859. Ex the definition, 'a necessary (house)'.—3. A chamber pot: U.S.A.: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1930. Ex sense 1. dunnaken-drag. A night-cart: 1823, Egan's Groser; 1823, Bee (at Jacob); ca. 1800–40 (or 50). See preceding term and drag, n., 3.

dunnaker. See dunaker.

dunney. See dunny.

dunnick-drag. See danna-drag.

dunniken. See dunnaken, reference of 1822.

dunnock. A cow: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; by 1900, †. Perhaps ex dun, the colour of many cows.

dunny or dunney. A bullock: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Bucket-chats and Dunneys; Sheep and Bullocks'; † by 1890. An alteration of dunnock in both form and sense.

dunny-ken. See dunnaken, reference of 1860.

duo. Two: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. Ex L. duo; cf. It. due, and dews.

dup. To open (esp. a door): 1566, Harman, 'to dup gyger, the to open the doore'; so too in 'The Canters Dictionarie', in Dekker's Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9; Rowlands, 1611 (dup the gigger); 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, defines it as 'to enter', as does Coles, 1676 ('Dup. c. enter (the house)'); 1698, B.E., 'Dup, c. to enter, or open the door, dup the ken, c. enter the House, dup the boozing ken and booz a gage, c. go into the Ale-house and drink a Pot'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1840. I.e., do ope = do open, cause to open.

duper. An enema: mostly convicts': since the 1920's. Hargan, 1935. I.e., a 'do-upper'.

durac is rare for derac, q.v. at d'rac.

duria. Fire: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1859, current in U.S.A. (Matsell); by 1891 (F & H), †—in Britain at least. Prob. ex some Romany dialect: cf. dood (or dud), 'light' (English and Welsh gypsies'), and esp. dudyar, 'to light up, to illuminate' (Welsh; as in Sampson).—2. Hence, erroneously: a file. (James D. McCabe, New York, 1882.)

durrynacker. One who practises the trick mentioned in the next entry, esp. as it is defined by Mayhew: prob. from before 1840 (cf. durry-nacking); 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, where it is spelt durnacker as well as durrynacker; 1891, F & H; † by 1920. See durrynacking.—2. Hence, loosely, a female hawker: convicts': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1930.

durrynacking. 'Durrynakin—Begging': 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, 'Tim put on the tats yesterday and went out a durnynakin on the shallows'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 424, 'Durnacking, or duryking', which is applied to the dodge whereby beggars (usually women), carrying some inferior goods (e.g., lace) as a blind, tell fortunes, esp. among servant girls in the country; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1891, F & H; ob. by 1920; † by 1940. Perhaps a perversion of dukking.

duryking; durnacker, durnacking. See durry-nacking; durrynacker.

duseaville. See deuseaville.

dust, n., 'money', recorded by The O.E.D. for 1607, is s.—not c. Cf. S.E. gold dust.—2. Hence (?), stolen goods: C. 20: George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life, 1930, causes a young thief to use it, app. validly, in ca. 1912.—3. Tobacco: U.S. convicts': since ca. 1910: 1934 (see at sack o' bull). Ex its too frequent resemblance to dust, in the ration handed to convicts.—4. Powdered narcotic (morphine, cocaine, heroin): U.S. drug addicts': C. 20. BVB. Cf. happy dust.

dust, v.; dust out. To flee from the police: since ca. 1910: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (latter form); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Dust.—To leave in a hurry'; by 1940, s. 'To move so swiftly that one raises dust' (Irwin): special application of a common American coll.—2. 'To spend money' (Leverage, 1925): perhaps c., prob. s. See the n.

dust tight; wide open. Phrases indicative of the police attitude towards gambling at fairs: the former, hostile; the latter, permissive or indifferent: Canadian carnival crooks': since ca. 1910. (Anon. letter, June 1, 1946.) In the former, dust = money; the latter = 'wide open for gambling'.

duster. A box-car or freight-car thief: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—2. A chicken thief: 1931, Irwin; extant. 'In both cases since once the theft is made the thief "dusts" or leaves hastily' (Irwin).—3. An inner safe-door: bank robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; extant. A protection against dust.

dustman, 'a dead man' (Grose, 1785), is more likely to have been low s. than c. Dead, one becomes dust.

dusty. 'Dusty. Dangerous. "Two fly-cops and a beak tumbled to us, and Bill thought as how it was rather dusty, and so, shady was the word", two detectives and a magistrate came upon us suddenly; Bill said it was rather dangerous, and so we got out of sight': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; † by 1910. Not improbably by ironical development. Ex the dusty of the s. phrase, not so dusty.

Dutch. A woman: 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life, 'Tell the Dutch to get that Jenny (watch) out'; app. † by 1940. Prob. ex Cockney s. my old Dutch, 'my wife' (see Partridge, 1938).

dutch, in. See in Dutch.

Dutch act, the, is suicide; do the Dutch act, or go (or take) the Dutch route (or the Dutch way out), is to commit suicide: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'A week later Dal was found dead in his cell, and I believe he did the Dutch act (suicide)'; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (San Quentin, 1901–11), 'Condemned men . . . would cheat the gallows by going the "Dutch route" if not closely watched during the last fortnight'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Took the Dutch way out'; 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven ('the Dutch route'); 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1933, Ersine (do a Dutch act); Sept. 29, 1934, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1935, Hargan, 'To take the Dutch way out'; by 1936, low s. The Dutch are no more suicidal than any other nationals: this late Dutch phrase merely reflects the influence of all the other Dutch pejoratives. Prob., too, Dutch here = 'German'.

Dutch courage. Narcotics: drug traffic: C. 20. BVB. Cf. the synonymous dry grog.

Dutch housemen. 'Among the second story'—second-storey—'men or "Dutch Housemen", as they are classified in the underworld, . . . Frank Davis was doubtless the star of his time,' Charles Somerville, 'The Crooks' Parade'—in Flynn's, Feb. 16, 1929; July 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'Limpy was a Dutch Houseman, in the ironic humour of the mob one who made a speciality of cleaning up flats'; April 8, 1933, Flynn's; 1938, Ernest L. Van Wagner, New York Detective, where, in police s., it = a burglar that, when cornered, tends to resort to desperate measures; a sense noted also, in 1924, by George S. Dougherty, The Criminal as a Human Being, where the spelling is D. horseman and the Dutch is said to = 'German'.

duty, off. Not engaged in stealing: since ca. 1860; slightly ob. Baumann, 1887. Ironic, in ref. to policemen's rounds and beats.

dwelling dancer. A burglar, esp. a transient lodger that pillages boarding-houses: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1945. Cf. dancer, 6, of which it is prob. an elaboration—and an alteration in sense.

dyn, n. and v. Dynamite; to blow up with dynamite: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. dine and dyno.

dynamite, n. 'Heroin, a synthetic drug made from morphine,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933, defines it as 'cocaine', whereas BVB, 1942, defines it both as 'cocaine' and as 'a strong narcotic'—any strong narcotic. Ex its 'kick'.—2. ' . . . One set [of dice] in particular, which are nicely loaded, and which he'—the keeper of the game—' affectionately terms "The Dynamite"'. This pair is only used when an especially green player is steered in, for they are so heavily loaded with quicksilver that they almost turn somersaults to show up the desired number,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928: professional gamblers'; extant.—3. (Ex 1.) 'Snuff made and used by convicts. It consists of tobacco, soda, salt, and sugar,' Ersine, 1933.

dynamite, adj. 'Like snuff,' Ersine: convicts': since ca. 1925. Ex sense 3 of the n.—2. Dangerous; criminal; likely to attract the police: 1933, Ersine; extant—but by 1939 it was s. Ex the lit. sense of the n.: 'explosive'.

dynamiter. 'Some harmless blanket stiff who has specialized in chicken coops and in back doors for "hand outs" on the "main stem" or principal street,' article 'Do you Speak "Yegg"?' (virtually a reprint of an article in The Star of Hope, June 1916) in The Literary Digest, Aug. 1916; 1923, N. Anderson (see dyno, 2); 1925, Leverage; by 1930, the sense has changed to 'A tramp who begs from his fellows in preference to begging for his own food from the public' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931); Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; May 2, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack; extant. Ironic. —2. As 'a clever, fast-working commercial swindler, esp. one who uses high-powered sales-talk', dynamiter may always have been commercial s.; more prob., however, it began as c. of the commercial underworld and then > low commercial s. and, finally, gen. commercial s. See esp. Linn Bonner's article, 'Dynamiters', in Flynn's, Aug. 13, 1927. Hence:—3. A 'high pressure booking salesman,' Rose, 1934: since ca. 1925; ob.

dyng thrift. See Awdeley's, No. 19. Lit., one who dings (throws away) thrift; † by 1700 at the latest. See ding, v.

dyno; occ., dino. A hobo that 'works with and handles dynamite': tramps': 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1927, Robert Nichols & Jim Tully, Twenty Below, where it is applied to an itinerant safe-blower (i.e., a yegg); 1931, Stiff, 'A rock man who handles dynamite'—this sense, therefore, had > labour-gang s. by 1930, if not rather earlier.—2. 'Dino or dynamiter . . . Sponged food of fellow hobos,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923, quoting Leon Livingston, Mother Delcassee of The Hoboes, 1918; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'The stew-bums or old dynos of the barrel-house saloons and ten-cent flops'—and cf. next entry; 1931, Urbain Ledoux, Ho-bo-ho Medley No. 1, 'Dinoes—those [tramps] who walk the pikes and live off the country'; 1931, Stiff, 'On the [Pacific] Coast he is a front and back man who carries his blanket on his back like a western hobo and his cooking cans in front like an Australian tramp'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A tramp travelling the highway in preference to the railroad'; 1933, Ersine (see dinah); extant.—3. (Strong) liquor: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. Irwin, 1931. Ex its 'explosive' kick.

dyno rouser. 'They were petty pilferers and dyno-rousters (thieves who specialize in robbing . . . drunken men),' Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

E

eagle. When, at an ordinary, a group of professional card-players or professional dicers play with a view to fleecing a simpleton (or some too rash fellow not necessarily a fool), the following terms, current ca. 1600–1750 (eagle, e.g., reappears in the c. dictionary published in 1725), are applied to the various parties set forth by Dekker in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9: 'They that sit downe to play, are at first cald Leaders. They that lose, are the Forlorne Hope. He that stands by and Ventures [a kind of punter], is the Woodpecker. The fresh Gallant that is fetcht in, is the Gull. He that stands by, and leads, is the Gull-groper'; 1698, B.E., 'Eagle, c. the winning Gamester'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (id.); † by 1820. He is sharp of eye: 'eagle-eyed'. Cf. :—

eagle-eye. A detective: 1925, Leverage; 1927, C. L. Clark & E. E. Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; extant. Cf. eye.—2. A locomotive engineer, i.e. an engine-driver: 1925, Leverage, and 1931, Godfrey Irwin: but this sense is as much railroad s. as tramps' c.; certainly after ca. 1935, it can no longer be classified as c. He has to watch very carefully and sharply for signals and obstructions.—3. A specially prepared 'narcotic, with some other drug added to counteract the effect on the eye and thus make the user's detection less likely on casual observation', Irwin, 1931: drug addicts' (since ca. 1925).

ear-bender. An over-talkative person: 1935, Hargan; extant. He causes one's ears to wilt with fatigue.

ear-hole, on the. See on the ear-hole.

earie, 'a stool pigeon' (Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936); a mistake, I believe, for on the Erie.

early-risers. Rugs or blankets carried by a tramp in his 'bluey' or swag: Australian tramps': C. 20. Baker, 1942. Prob. ironic.

earn blood-money. See blood money.

earnest. A share: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Tip me my Earnest . . . Give me my part or share'; 1676, Coles, 'Earnest, c. a part or share'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; app. †, as c., by 1750 or thereabouts.

earth bath, 'a grave', is not c. but s. Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811. earwig. A clergyman: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1864 (witness H, 3rd ed.), it was low s. Because of his exhortations.—2. An eavesdropper: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941.

earwig! A warning: 'Be quiet, there is someone listening!': 1849, Sessions Papers (April 16, trial of Mary Kinsdale & Albert Prior), 'He said "earwig, earwig" (meaning somebody listening)—they were then silent'; ob. By a pun on ear; cf. the next two entries.

earwigger. Eavesdropper: convicts': since the 1920's. Jim Phelan, Murder by Numbers, 1941.

earwiggling. 'Eavesdropping, "wagging" the ear to catch every word of a conversation,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931; also British, as in Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932; extant. Perhaps by ironic antiphrasis ex the ordinary American sense 'to influence (a person) by talk'; but cf. earwig!

ease, 'to rob', is not c. but s. > S.E.

easing powder. An opiate: C. 20; by 1940, coll. BVB. Ex its effect: cf. happy dust.

eason. To tell: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; 1881, The New York Slang Dictionary, where it is defined as 'to listen' (B & L deriving it from English dial. easen, 'eaves': eavesdropping); 1891, F & H; † by 1930. Origin obscure; I suggest that it comes from 'say on!', i.e., continue the tale.

East and South, 'mouth', was thieves' before it >, ca. 1865, low rhyming s.; † by 1890, when North and South was already well established. 'Ducange Anglicus', 1857. On the Pacific Coast of the U.S.A., however, both East and South and North and South have been current, as c., throughout C. 20 (M & B, 1944); there, too, East and West = a vest (M & B).

eastery, 'private business': not c., but cheap-jacks' s. Charles Hindley, The Life of a Cheap Jack, 1876.

eastman. A pimp, a procurer: C. 20. BVB, 1942. With an implication of Oriental vice?

easy, in the late C. 17–early 19 underworld, meant 'easily manageable', 'easily gulled', a sense noted by B.E., 1698, and A New Canting Dict., 1725: in gen. use, it is either S.E. or, at least orig., coll.; but as an underworld usage, it may be considered as c.—2. Only in make easy: 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Make the Cull easy; Gagg him that he may make no Noise; sometimes used for murdering a Person robbed, for fear of Discovery'; 1785, Grose; by the 1850's, and prob. long before, it was current in U.S.A. (Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859); † by 1870. Cf. content, q.v.—3. (Of persons, e.g., police officers, detectives) 'pliable; approachable; bribeable; purchaseable': U.S.A.: 1872, Geo. P.

Burnham, Memoirs of the American Secret Service; by 1900, no longer c.

easy faker. A mender of cane-bottomed chairs: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); slightly ob. Here, faker = maker; the easy may represent a shortening of easy-chair, but as there is no hyphen, it prob. refers to the comparative easiness of the work.

easy lagging. 'Whenever these hopefuls [professional thieves] are caught and drafted into a convict prison, they set their cunning to work to pass what they call an "easy lagging", and the truth is that they get through their sentences with less than half the difficulty and less than half the punishment experienced by green hands such as I was': 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; by 1930, low s. See lagging, n.

easy mort. 'A forward or coming wench,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; by 1790, ob.—though prob. current as easy mot. See mort.

easy time is the American form of easy lagging. Ersine, 1933.

eat a fig. To commit burglary: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. Rhyming s. on crack a crib.

eat snowballs. To stay in the North and follow 'the road' instead of retiring for the winter to a common lodging-house or instead of following the road in the warmer South: tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931.

eatable lay, the. Theft of edibles from residences: before 1872, by which date it was obsolescent or obsolete (Edward Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York).

eaves. See eves.

eaves-dropper; eavesdropper. See evesdropper.

ebb-water. 'When there's but little Money in the Pocket,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; by 1820, s. A Nature analogy; cf. the opposite 'When the tide's at the flood'.

éclat. Booty; stolen goods: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'They'—detectives—'searched the house, expecting to find, if not éclat, at least burglar's tools'—nor is this the only example in the book (e.g., p. 190, "'Éclat" worth thousands'); † by 1920. In short, the term did not 'catch on'. It proves a burglar's—a thief's—success; it shines forth with éclat, a beacon to his fame in the underworld.

eclipse. Fraudulent manipulation of a die; it is done with the little finger: gamblers': late C. 17–18. J. Puckle, 1711 (cited by O.E.D.). Proleptic: it leads to the eclipse of the victim by the sharp.

economic argument. Soap-box oratory about economics; usually opposed to the angel food type of argument: tramps': 1931, Stiff; extant.

edge, n. That member of a pickpocket gang who breaks the way into the crowd: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. the v. and also edge-man.—2. See edge, have an.—3. An advantage: since the mid-1920's; by 1935, low s. Ersine, 1933. Cf. edge, v., 2, and edge in.

edge, v. To make off; to escape: Nov. 1886, The Daily News (cited by Ware), 'One of the other two called out "Edge" (a slang term, to be off), and they ran away'; 1909, Ware; extant.—2. To edge one's way into a crowd in order to pick pockets: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. See edge, n.

edge, cop the. See cop the edge.

edge, have an. To be keyed-up, just after the exhilaration has passed but before the yen proper sets in: drug addicts': since ca. 1920: 1934, Ferdinand Tuohy, Inside Dope; extant. A derivative ex be on edge, to be 'nervy'.

edge in. To muscle in: Ersine, 1933; extant. Cf. edge, v., 2.

edge-man or edgeman. A pickpocket's accomplice: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 320), as edgeman; ob. He operates on the edge of the gang; cf. edge, n.

edge the gaff. To 'wangle' something; to obtain something with illicit skill; to succeed in something nefarious: 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxiii; app. † by 1895. Ex the game of two-up.

edge-work; edge-worker. The marking of cards, marked cards; he who marks, or plays with marked, cards: 1925, Leverage (both); 1933, Ersine (-work); extant. The markings are at or near the edges.

educate. To terrorize (someone); to assault; to bomb: since ca. 1924. Kernôt, 1929-31. Grimly euphemistic: 'That'll learn 'em!' Cf.:

educational committee. 'He did not approve of educational committees, the strong arm squads that would beat up this side today, and that tomorrow,' J. Allan Dunn, 'The Gray Gangster', Flynn's, May 31, 1930; ob. They proceed on the principle of the argumentum ad baculum.

eel. A cunning prisoner: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex the simile as slippery as an eel.

eeler-spee or eeler-whack. A confidence trickster; anyone living shadily by his wits and fluent speech: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1945. I.e., spieler, in the form speeler, is reversed or backslanged: speeler > eelersp > eelerspee.

eerquay. Sexually perverted; homosexual: since ca. 1920. BVB. The synonymous s. queer > eerqu; -ay is added.—Cf. afgay, apcray, ugmay, etc.

efter. 'A thief who frequents theatres' is the gloss to: 1846, 'The Thieves' Alphabet' in vol. I (ch. xxiii) of G. W. M. Reynolds' The Mysteries of London, 'E was an Efter, that went to the play; F was a Fogle he knapped on his way'; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1891, F & H; ob. by 1930. By a perversion of theatre.

egg. A sucker: confidence tricksters' and commercial crooks': 1936, Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld; extant. Cf. the proverbial to teach one's grandmother to suck eggs.

egger. 'Every operator at [the thimble rig] is attended by certain of his friends, called *egg*ers and bonnetters—the eggers, to egg on the green ones to bet, by betting themselves; and the bonnetters, to bonnet any green one who may happen to win—that is to say, to knock his hat over his eyes, whilst the operator and the others bolt with the stakes': 1827, John Wight, More Mornings at Bow Street: since ca. 1810; ob.

eight-ball. '[To the criminal] a Negro [is] a dinge, jig, eight ball or eightivity,' Convict, 1934; slightly earlier in Ersine (1933); extant. Prob. ex the American pool game, where the eight ball is a black ball numbered '8'.

eight-wheeler. 'A box-car burglar, one who robs trains while in transit or while unguarded in a yard or station,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1910. Most railroad cars have eight wheels.

Eighteenth-Century Rogues. In A New Canting Dict. (preface), 1725, there is a list of the criminal and vagabond classes either existing at that date or possessing names that survive: in gen., it may be said that this classification holds good, as a whole, for the approximate period 1680-1750, some of the terms being still in use at the end of C. 18. All the terms will be found in the course of this dict.; but they are listed here for convenience' sake and in the spelling of the Canting Dict. mentioned above.

- | | |
|-----------------------------------|--|
| 1. Upright-men. | 34. Rum-Padders. |
| 2. Rufflers. | 35. Files, or Bung-nippers, or Rum-Divers. |
| 3. Anglers, alias Hookers. | 36. Tat-Mongers. |
| 4. Rogues. | 37. Tatter-de-mallions. |
| 5. Wild Rogues. | 38. Wiper-Drawers. |
| 6. Priggers of Francers. | 39. Adam-Tilers. |
| 7. Palliards. | 40. Beau-Traps. |
| 8. Fraters. | 41. Clapperdungeons. |
| 9. Prigs. | 42. Cursitors. |
| 10. Swaddlers. | 43. Dunakers. |
| 11. Curtals. | 44. Foot-Pads, or Low-Pads. |
| 12. Irish Toils. | 45. Kidlays. |
| 13. Swig-men. | 46. Moon-cursors. |
| 14. Jarke men. | 47. Mumpers. |
| 15. Patri-Coes. | 48. Roberds-men. |
| 16. Kinchin-Coes. | 49. Strowling-Morts. |
| 17. Abram-men. | 50. Sturdy-Beggars. |
| 18. Badgers. | 51. Sweetners. |
| 19. Whip-Jacks. | 52. Rum-Bubbers. |
| 20. Strowlers. | 53. Rum-Dubbers, or Gilt, or Picklocks. |
| 21. Dommerers. | 54. Draw-Latches. |
| 22. Glimmerers. | 55. Rattling-Mumpers. |
| 23. Bawdy-Baskets. | 56. Blind-Harpers. |
| 24. Autem-Morts. | 57. Glaziers. |
| 25. Doxies. | 58. Gypsies. |
| 26. Dells. | 59. Tartars. |
| 27. Faytors, or Fators. | 60. Counterfeit Cranks. |
| 28. Bully-Huffs. | 61. Darkmans Budge. |
| 29. Bully-Rocks. | 62. Ken-Millers. |
| 30. High-Pads, or Bully-Ruffins. | 63. Water-Pads. |
| 31. Buffers. | 64. Shop-Lifts. |
| 32. Buffe-knappers. | |
| 33. Cloak-Twitchers. | |

But in 1785, Grose divides 'the canting crew' into 23 orders, thus:—

MEN.

- | | |
|------------------------|-----------------------|
| 1. Rufflers, | 10. Fresh water |
| 2. Upright men, | mariners or whip |
| 3. Hookers or anglers, | jacks, |
| 4. Rogues, | 11. Dummerers, |
| 5. Wild rogues, | 12. Drunken tinkers, |
| 6. Priggers of | 13. Swadders or |
| Francers, | pedlars, |
| 7. Palliades, | 14. Jarkmen or patri- |
| 8. Fraters, | coes. |
| 9. Abrams, | |

WOMEN.

- | | |
|-------------------|--------------------|
| 1. Demanders for | 5. Walking morts, |
| glimmer, or fire, | 6. Doxies, |
| 2. Bawdy baskets, | 7. Delles, |
| 3. Morts, | 8. Kinching morts, |
| 4. Autem morts, | 9. Kinching coes. |

But it is doubtful whether these names were—at least, some of them—in underworld use so late as 1785.

eighter. An eight-ounce loaf: convicts': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob.

eightivity. A Negro: 1934, Convict; slightly ob. Perhaps ex synonymous eight-ball, with some queer semantic influence exercised by activity.

eilasha (or -er). A girl: Australian: late C. 19–20; since ca. 1940, low s. Baker, 1945. Back-s. form of Australian s. sheila: sheila > eilash >, for euphony's sake, eilasha.

Eine, 'London', is not c. but parlyaree. (R. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo, 1893: p. 11.)

Ek sal jou record breek. See kop-hou . . .

El, the. Elmira Reformatory: since ca. 1920. Hargan, 1935. 'Elmira', 'the El'—perhaps in ref. to its s. sense, the Elevated Railway of New York.

elastic. A purse: 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (p. 320); by 1940, ob. Perhaps ex the elastic band on many purses.

elbow, n. A (plain-clothes) detective: tramps' and criminals': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary; also at p. 385); 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers that Prey; 1900, Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Glen H. Mullin; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1927, Kane; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer (of any policeman); 1933, Ersine; 1938, Damon Runyon, Furthermore; since ca. 1910, also Canadian (letter, June 9, 1946). 'From the detective's habit of elbowing his way through a crowd' (Flynt).—2. An 'edge', that pickpocket who elbows a way for his accomplice the 'wire': 1925, Leverage; extant.

elbow, v. 'Turn the corner; get out of sight': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L, who give it as English; 1891, F & H ('American'); app. † by 1920. The semantic clue is in the crooked (bent), hence crooked (dishonest), elbow.—2. To act as an 'elbow' (sense 2 of the n.): 1925, Leverage; extant.

elbow-crooker, 'a hard drinker', is classified by B & L, 1889, as c.: but it was s.

elbow-shaker, 'a dicer or gamester': not c. but s.

elboweer. 'A fugitive; one that "elbows", i.e., turns the corner, or gets out of sight': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1930. Ex elbow, v., 1.

electric cure, the. See take the electric cure.

electric flash. An electric hand-torch: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat—'I doubt it; sounds too much like an ordinary coined word' (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 13, 1937); by 1920, no longer c.—if it ever existed. The light flashes on when the button (etc.) is pressed or the catch released.

elegant; esp. make one's elegant. "'I am determined to make my elegant, (escape) come what will",' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; † by 1940. Euphemistic: cf. make one's lucky, q.v. at cut quick sticks.

elephant. A booty too large for safety and convenience: 1859, Matsell, Elephant. The fellow has an enormous booty, and knows not how to secrete it. If he had less, he would be able to save more'; † by 1920.—2. 'A victim possessed of much money': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1930. Cf. caravan, 1.

elephant ears. A policeman: Nov. 15, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'There's a couple of elephant ears . . . spotting this joint'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster! ('a detective'); extant. Popular report has it that he listens so often, so long, so hard, that his ears grow to a monstrous size.—2. Apricots (the singular is rare): convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. 'Undoubtedly the dried fruit, stewed as an article of prison food; from the shape' (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 18, 1937).

elephant trunk. Topsy: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming; corrupted ex Cockney elephant's trunk, 'drunk'.

elevate. To hold (a person) up at the point of a gun: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1934, Convict, '[Criminals] will tell how they elevated a slum joint when they speak of robbing a jewelry store'; extant.

elevated, 'intoxicated with liquor': British and American slang; 'drug-exhilarated': American c. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931). Cf. high.

elevation. See fall for the elevation. For the semantics, cf. stick-up.

elevator. A shoplifter; a 'stick-up man': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; app. † by 1940. Cf. booster, derrick, hoister.

eleven twenty-nine, the. Eleven months twenty-nine days (a legal wangle, for a year's imprisonment would 'rate' a new suit of clothes, a railway warrant, and a few dollars, to the released prisoner) spent in working on a chain-gang (euphemistically, i.e., officially, a 'State Farm'): Georgia convicts' and other prisoners': since ca. 1925. Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough, 1936.

elf. Little: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'A little man or woman'—but Grose does not classify the term as c. It prob. did not survive the C. 18. Ex the S.E. sense, 'a fairy'.

elfen, v. 'Walk light; on tiptoe': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1920. I.e., to walk like an elf; cf. Tennyson's 'airy, fairy Lilian'.

Eliza smiles. A c.p. applied to a planned burglary: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 'Put-up robbery On the job, Eliza smiles, going to marry'; † by 1910. Eliza is prob. generic for servant girls, from whom burglars obtain valuable information.

Ellenborough Lodge. The King's Bench Prison: 1811, Lex. Bal.; † by 1891 (F & H), if not, indeed, by 1820. Ex Lord Chief Justice Ellenborough (1750–1818), Chief Justice from 1806 until the year of his death.

Ellenborough's teeth. The chevaux de frise along the top of the wall of the King's Bench Prison: 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London (of these obstacles), 'Formerly called Ellenborough's teeth; but now Abbott's.' See prec. entry.

ellsway. Yes or 'rather!'; well or excellent: C. 20. James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 1937, "'So everything went off fine and dandy?" "Ellsway".' Back s., American style: swell > ellsw > ellswa or ellsway, the term being comparable, in form, with eerquay.

em. See M. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.)

emergency gun. Citing the synonyms dinghiyen, dingus, dripper, dropper, fake, fake-aloo, BVB, 1942, defines the drug addicts' term as 'an improvised hypodermic syringe made from a medicine dropper and a pin or nail'. Cf. gun, 8, which, blending with dingus (ex s. dingus, 'a thingummy'), yields dinghiyen; the drug drips from the dripper or 'medicine dropper'; and the whole thing is a fake, often elaborated to fakeloo.

emperor. 'A drunk man': 1859, Matsell; 1881, The New York Slang Dict.; 1891, F & H; † by 1920. Ex s. as drunk as an emperor (ten times as drunk as a lord).

empty, adj., is a C. 18 term, set forth thus in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 'The Cull looks Empty; or, 'Tis all Empty: A Canting Word to signify by an Intelligencer, that the Person or House has not the Riches reported, or is not worth attempting'.

empty, v. To rob (a person): 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, 'He [a well-known cheat] boasted . . . of having "emptied" a young Etonian of his gold watch and 20 l. while travelling with his dupe on the short journey from London to Windsor'; ob. Euphemistic: cf. the underworld ease.

empty-can trick. A variant of the possum trick: since ca. 1920. IA, 1931, 'The tramp waves an empty gasoline tin at the motorist on a deserted road, then slugs and robs him when he stops to offer assistance and drives away with the car'. Obviously not c.

en route. 'Incommunicado in jail,' Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936; extant. Euphemistic.

end. 'Any part of the proceeds of a theft,' Leverage, 1925: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss, "'That's always th' Tammany end; forty per cent"' ; 1926, Jack Black; Aug. 11, 1928, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson, 'Twenty Years outside the Law'; 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch, 'Ain't this bird satisfied with his end?'; 1930, Burke, 'I muscle in for an end of the beer racket'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Rose (a share); by 1936 (B. Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession), the sense 'mere share; a commission' was police s.

end(-)squeeze. An illicit trick: card-sharpers': late C. 19-20. Arthur Henry Lewis, The Boss, 1903, "'He's in Barclay Street with these Indians"' —card-sharpers—"'and they handin' him out every sort of brace from an 'end-squeeze' to a 'balance-top', where they give him two cards at a clatter, to a 'snake' box, when they kindly lets him deal, but do him just the same"' . Manipulation by squeezing the end of the pack of cards.

end-strippers is 'a variety of [strippers q.v.], the only difference being that they are trimmed up at the ends, instead of at the sides,' J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats, 1894: card-sharpers': by 1900, j.

enforcer. 'Hard-boiled member of a mob, who works on the outside to keep saloon keepers and other tribute payers in line,' Kernôt, 1929-31: since ca. 1920; by 1942, slightly ob. Grandiose.

eng shee. 'An addict, when impoverished and desperate, will sometimes resort to "eng shee" . This is the black "cake" that accumulates in an opium pipe A tincture can be obtained by soaking "eng shee" in alcohol. This is strained through a handkerchief and injected with a hypodermic needle,' Amos O. Squire, Sing Sing Doctor, 1935. Drug traffic j., not c. Perhaps the origin of, certainly very closely connected with, yen shee.

engine. An opium-smoker's outfit or equipment: addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. Stove, pipe, etc.

engineer. Planner of a crime: since the early 1930's. W. R. Burnett, High Sierra, 1940.

English. 'He'—the average American—'thinks we [Englishmen] put on side or "English",' James Spenser, Limey, 1933; by 1936, s.

entertain. To get (a sucker) interested: con men's and commercial crooks': 1936, Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld; extant. Euphemistic.

entjie. A cigarette-butt: South Africa: late C. 19-20; by 1930, s. (C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946.) An Afrikaans word (cf. toppertjie), comparable with English s. 'fag-end' and derived ex Dutch eindje, 'cigar- or cigarette-end or -butt'. —2. Hence, a short person: South Africa: C. 20; by 1940, (low) s. (C. P. Wittstock, l.c.; Alan Nash in The Cape Times, June 3, 1946.)

entrance man. 'One who paves the way for the actual criminals,' Hargan, 1935; extant. Perhaps euphemistic.

eppus, adj. and n., implying worthlessness or contempt—or both. Ersine, 1933, cites 'That's the eppus!'—'He carries iron for an eppus outfit'—'Eppus on you!' Origin obscure; perhaps a perversion of piss—cf. R.A.F. slang piss-poor.

Epsom races. Braces: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1865, low rhyming s.; by 1875, gen. rhyming s equalizer. A firearm; esp. a revolver; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; 1933, Eagle; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant. According to a famous gangster of the 1920's ('Them was the days!'), Smith and Wesson made all men equal.

equip. To furnish (a person): 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (see quot'n at quid); 1698, B.E., 'The Cull equipt me with a brace of Meggs, c. the Gentleman furnish'd me with a couple of Guineas'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1880.

equipt. 'Rich; also having new Clothes. Well equipt, c. plump in the Pocket, or very full of Money; also very well drest,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—Matsell's Vocabulum; by 1880, † in Britain; by 1900, † in U.S.A. A special application of the S.E. equipped.

erase, n. A killing, a murder: 1933, Ersine. Ex:—

erase, v. To kill: 1933, Ersine; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Suggested by rub out.

eraser. '1. A killer. 2. A pistol,' Ersine: since the middle 1920's. Ex erase, v.; cf. erase, n.

erbay. Beer: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; extant. I.e., b-er > eerb > erb (two e's being, initially, clumsy) + that -ay which American underworld back-slangers add to the reversed form of the original word.

Erie (Canal). See on the Erie.

eriff. 'Eriffs . . . Rogues just initiated, and beginning to practise,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, plagiarizing; 1809, Andrewes, 'Eriffs—young thieves training'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Eriffs. Young thieves; minor rogues'; 1881, The New York Slang Dictionary; 1891, F & H; † by 1910. Ex the S.E. eriff (later, also eress or eriss), 'a canary bird two years old' (first in B.E., 1698).

escape; esp., go up the escape. 'When a man who has been a known thief makes up his mind to quit stealing and live "on the level" they say in the Under World that he has "squared it" . If he dies in prison before having had a chance to put his new resolution to a test, they say that he has gone "up the escape"; Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901; 1903, Flynt, Rudrick Cloud, p. 190 (simply: to die); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (id.); ob. I.e., the fire-escape, with an allusion to hell-fire.

esen dropper; usually pl. See Awdeley's, No. 20; † by 1660 at the latest—unless (as is prob.) this is a misprint for evesdropper (= eavesdropper). If esen is not a misprint, what is its etymology?

Esquimaux! Drive north!: a 'code direction in kidnapping cases, etc.', Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936; extant. Obviously because the Eskimos live in the north: cf. the ice-cream thus named.

et cetera; usually written &c. ' &c. a Book-seller,' D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd, 1728; app. † by 1810. Ex the ' &c ' appearing so frequently in publishers' and booksellers' lists and catalogues.

etching. A bill (currency or bank-note): since ca. 1930. May 2, 1936, Flynn's, Cornell Woolrich. Ex the 'decoration' thereon.

eve. See eves.

eve-dropper. See evesdropper.

evening chimes. A thieves' rendezvous, esp. a low lodging-house: 1889 (see matin bell); 1890, The Rogue's Gallery; † by 1940. The chimes of the bell call the devout to church.

evening sneak. One who goes on 'the sneak' (q.v.) in the evening: 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected; 1781, G. Parker; 1785, Grose; by 1794, used in U.S.A. (Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807); 1809, Andrewes; 1903, F & H; ob.

everlasting staircase. 'It came to his turn again to ascend the (what thieves term) the everlasting staircase, of which each step is eight inches high', i.e., the treadmill: 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell gives it as everlasting, which may have been an American shortening; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (glossary); 1891, F & H; 1903, No. 7, Twenty-Five Years in Seventeen Prisons; † by 1920.

Everton toffee. Coffee: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1865, low rhyming s.; by 1875, or 1880, gen. rhyming s.

eves. Hen-roosts: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose; by 1859, American—Matsell's Vocabulum; 1889, B & L, '(American thieves), a hen-roost'; 1891, F & H, who spell it eaves, the usual American form; app. † by 1930. Prob. ex the tendency of birds to roost in the eaves of a house—if they can!

evesdropper; (American) eavesdropper. 'A Villain that lurks about the Doors of Houses, to watch his Opportunity to rob or steal,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'One that lurks about to rob hen roosts'; 1797, Potter, 'Evedropper (then as in Grose)'; 1809, Andrewes, repeating the incorrect form; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A petty larceny vagabond'; 1889, B & L, '(American thieves), a chicken thief, or a low sneak or thief generally'; † by 1900. See eves; with pun on S.E. sense of eavesdropper.

evil. A halter: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; by the 1850's, American—Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; † by 1900. Euphemistic.—2, 3. Despite Matsell, the senses 'wife' and 'matrimony' are not c. but s.

ewe. 'Ewe, or the White Ewe, c. a Top-woman among the Canting Crew, very Beautiful,' B.E., 1698—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; by the 1850's, current in America—witness Matsell, 1859; 1887, Baumann; in 1889, B & L imply that it is †.

ex. A former convict: since ca. 1925. Convict * 2nd, 1938. Ex:—

ex-con. A former convict: C. 20: 1931, Stiff; by 1932, police and journalistic s. See con, n., 1.

ex-gun. On who was formerly a professional thief (sec gun, n., 2 and 4: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'He would hardly be picked out as an "ex-gun"'); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; extant.

ex-prushun. See prushun.

ex-ray. See X ray.

ex-vic. A former convict: since ca. 1920. Howard N. Rose, 1934. Cf. ex-con.

exchanger. An American synonym of pincher, q.v.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (at pinchers); † by 1910. Euphemistic: cf. borrow, 'to steal'.

execution day or E—D—. Washing day: 1698, B.E.; Grose. Neither of these lexicographers classifies it as c.: from which fact, we may perhaps infer that, rather than c., it was s. of the lower classes. It may, however, be c. in its usage by U.S. tramps in C. 20: M. H. Weseen, 1934, lists it and Godfrey Irwin (letter of Feb. 1, 1937) approves it. Ex the frequency with which executions were held on Monday.

exes (or exis) to fere. Odds of 6 to 4: racing: C. 20. 'John Morris' in The Cornhill Magazine, June 1933. Clearly, exes (or exis) is six backslanged; and fere is either a perversion of four or a derivation ex Ger. vier.

exhibition; exhibition meal. 'Exhibition meal. A handout eaten on the doorstep. The madam wants the neighbors to witness her generosity,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': 1931, Irwin (exhibition); extant.

exis to fere. See exes to fere.

expand one's chest. To be self-assured: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, 'What! I expand my chest easily? What, I have unlimited confidence in myself?'; ob. Ex pride's tendency to chest-expansion: cf. coll. chesty, 'full of confidence'.

eye, as a synonym for hell, where cabbage is hidden, is rather to be classified as tailors' s. than as c. (Grose, 1785, at cabbage).—2. 'Nonsense; humbug': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1910. Perhaps ex English s. all my eye and Betty Martin, 'all nonsense'.—3. An operative of the Pinkerton agency (private detectives); the Eye, the Pinkerton agency: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant. Ex the 'trade sign' of the Pinkerton's: a large wide-open eye.—4. A signal of warning: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. IA, 1931. Prob. ex sense 3.—5. (Ex sense 3.) Any detective, but esp. any private detective: U.S.A.: since the late 1920's. Ersine, 1933; Castle, 1938; Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely, 1940; by 1943 (Raymond Chandler, The High Window), it was as much police s. as it was c.—6. A look-out man: since ca. 1930. Partridge, 1938. Prob. ex 3.

eye-ball buster is the thief in "Look here!" he shouts . . . As the sailor looks straight at him he extends his first and second fingers out like prongs—lunges forward—and prods him in the eyes. The sailor is blinded for the moment, and in that moment the prodger goes like lightning through his pockets—gets his money and runs off,' 1902, Bart Kennedy, London in Shadow, where it is said that 'The "eye-ball buster" is an up-to-date evolution of the [London] docks. He is unlike either a crimp or a bum. He is bolder in his methods—more daring'; † by 1930.

eye doctor. A beggar that can catch and unwaveringly hold his client's eye: tramps' and beggars': 1931, Stiff; extant.—2. A pederast: mostly tramps': 1931, Stiff; extant. Cf. eye-opener.

eye-dropper dope. 'One who uses an eyedropper as an improvised syringe,' BVB: since ca. 1930. Here dope = an addict.

eye(-)man. A Pinkerton detective: since ca. 1920. Kernôt, 1929–31. An elaboration of eye, 3.

eye me float, 'a coat', is thieves' rhyming s.: 1891, Charles Bent, Criminal Life; ob.

eye-opener. 'An early morning drink, often begged from the bartender when he opens up in the morning,' Stiff, 1931: beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, and later writers.—2. A pederast: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'Most people refuse to accept the existence of these perverts until they are only too strongly made aware of them' (Irwin): they come as an eye-opener. Cf. eye doctor, 2.—3. 'The first injection of the day,' BVB, 1942: drug addicts': since ca. 1910.

Eye people, the. (Members of) Pinkerton's detective agency: not c., but an allusive phrase common among the police and the underworld: e.g., in J. Flynt and F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, 1900, p. 32. Ex the 'trade-sign' of the agency: a wide-open eye.

eye-water, 'gin', is not (as in Egan's Grose, 1823) c., but low s.

F

face, v. See dud up.

face lace, 'whiskers—esp. the large, old-fashioned ones': (low) s.—not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

face like a mountain goat's, have a. To be a dupe: C. 20. Partridge, 1938. With a pun on s. mug, 'face' and 'dupe', and on goat, 'fool'.

face the show-up; often as vbl n., facing . . . 'When he—the criminal—parades before the detectives and victims of crimes at Headquarters he says he is facing the show-up or walking the plank,' Convict, 1934: since ca. 1918. Cf. face the music.

facer. A large cup, or tankard, brimful: 1688, J. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, 'Come to our Facers. It is the prettiest way of Drinking'; B.E., 1698, 'Facer, c. a Bumper without Lip-room'; 1785, Grose—but by then, the terms had > s.—2. As 'a (violent) blow on the face', hence 'a dilemma', it is s.—3. 'A staller, or one who places himself in the way of persons who are in hot pursuit of his accomplices': U.S.A.: 1859, Mattsell; 1889, B & L, who give it as English: 1891, F & H; † by 1920. He faces them.—4. 'A witness who confronts an accused person,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant.

faces, make. 'To go back, or "round" upon a friend': convicts': 1891, F & H; † by 1930. 'In allusion to the convicts' habit of distorting their features under the [photographic] lens,' F & H. I.e., to grimace—instead of smiling—at the photographer.

Factory, the. Perhaps, at first, applied only to the Police Station at Cork; in C. 20, any police-station: 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747, p. 426 (? Old Scotland Yard), 'A stranger . . . whom a plain-clothes D. from the "Factory" would most assuredly have catalogued as suspicious'; 1938, F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 'Factory (the): The police-station'; 1943, Black; extant. Ex its appearance.

fad. To hide safely; to make (booty) secure: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, "What could he have done with the swag?" "Oh, he's fadded that safely enough"; 1846, op. cit., II, ch. cxci, 'Fadded the dobbins in a yokel's crib . . . thrust the clothes . . . into a countryman's berth'; app. † by 1890. Prob. ex S.E. and dial. fadge, 'to fit' (v.t.).

fade, n. A (hurried) departure; an escape, a 'getaway': 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, (a professional thief's girl accomplice:) 'I got so I could face a tight fade without a quaver, and do my gay-cat part in sloughing out make as easily as falling off a log'; Nov. 15, 1930, Flynn's, Earl W. Scott, 'Wolf Trap'; since ca. 1930, also Australian, esp. as in 'on the fade: (to be) evading the law, dodging the police' (Baker, 1942); extant.

fade, v. To make off, run away, disappear (quickly): 1912, Alfred Henry Lewis, Apaches of New York, "'Fade's the woid!'"'; 1927, Kane ('to escape'); March 16, 1929, Flynn's, Martin J. Porter ('The Moll'), 'You can dig up the dough yourself, and then I'll fade'; May 3, 1930, Flynn's, R. H. Watkins, 'The Bungler'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Especially when the departure is made quietly'; 1933, Ersine, 'Usually after a job'; by 1940, (low) s.

fade-out, n. A fleeing from the police; a speedy and timely disappearance: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. fade, n., 1, and:—

fade-out, v. A variant of fade, v.: 1933, Ersine; extant.—2. To kill (a person): British: since ca. 1940. David Hume, They Never Come Back, 1945, 'Well, boys, don't you think she ought to be faded out?' Short for cause (someone) to fade out.

faded bogey; occ., faded boogie. A Negro acting as a stool pigeon: 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1927, Kane; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Perhaps faded is added because a Negro turning informer seems to be still more anonymous.

fadge, n. A farthing: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850, s. A perversion-shortening of farthing.

fadge, v., 'to serve, fit, or suffice', esp. in it won't fadge, is not c., as several lexicographers have affirmed. It is 'perfectly good' S.E. fadger. A glazier's frame: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx, 'A leg-glazier, with fadger and squibs'; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.), it was no longer c. Ex fadge, v.

fading dice. 'Dice loaded to bring up 3 and 7 frequently to benefit fader or banker,' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: professional gamblers': C. 20.

fag, n. A low pickpocket: 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicancy and Crime, concerning certain skilful pickpockets, 'These thieves are the swell mob, and excite no suspicion; the dirty "fag" being out of sight'; app. † by 1900. Prob. ex the British Public School sense of fag.—2. 'A lawyer's clerk': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1891, F & H; † by 1910. Cf. the origin of sense 1.—3. A boy (occ. a man) catamite: U.S.A., mostly tramps': 1923 (see fairy, 2); 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who applies it to a homosexual of any age; 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights, 'Fags—male degenerates'; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor; 1935, Hargan; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 18), it was, like fairy by that time, low s. Short for faggot, 3, perhaps; but it may have been adopted ex the English Public School fag.

fag, v. To beat or thrash: 1698, B.E., 'Fag the Bloss, c. bang the Wench.—Fag the Fen, c. drub the Whore'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (fagg); 1809, Andrewes, 'Fagg—to ill use'; by 1830, low s.; by 1850 or 1860, gen. s. Origin? Prob. echoic.

fag factory. 'A male homosexual brothel or gathering place,' BVB, 1942: since ca. 1925. See fag, n., 3.

Fagan. See Fagin, 2.

faget. See faggot, v.

fagg. See fag, v.

fagger. 'A little boy put in at a window to rob the house': 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, in the form figure; 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1823, Egan's Grose (both fagger and figger); 1848, Sinks of London, repeating Andrewes; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell, 1859; 1889, B & L; † by 1891 (F & H). Prob. 'one who fags—works hard—for another'.

fagging lay is given by F & H, 1891, as a variant of figging lay; but on what authority?

faggot, n. See faggot and storm.—2. A whore: 1797, H. Potter; app. † by 1900. Prob. ex her slatternly appearance.—3. 'A road kid with homosexual tendencies,' Stiff, who spells it fagot: U.S. tramps': 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who does not limit the age; 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; 1942, BVB. Cf. sense 1; also fag, n., 3.—4. A cigarette: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. A punning elaboration of s. fag, a cigarette.

faggot, v. To bind or truss: 1676, Anon., A Warning for Housekeepers, '[Housebreakers] bind all in the house, and some they gagg, which they [respectively] call faget and storm'; 1698, B.E.; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., where the terms are given as faggot and stall; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'An allusion to the faggots made up by the woodmen, which are all bound'; by 1859 (Matsell), American; 1889, B & L; † by 1891 (F & H).

faggot, go upon fire and. See fire and faggot . . . faggot and storm; esp. go upon the faggot and storm, 'Breaking into People's Houses, and tying and gagging all whom they find in 'em,' Alex. Smith, The History of the Highwayman, 1714; app. † by 1790. To storm one's way in and then to make faggots of the victims.

faggoty. Homosexual in tendency: 1942, BVB. Ex faggot, n., 3.

Fagin, a 'fence', is allusive and literary—certainly not c. But fagin, 'to receive stolen goods', may possibly have been c. of ca. 1910–30. Both terms are included by Henry Leverage in his 'Dictionary of the Underworld' (Flynn's, 1925). Ex the Fagin of Dickens's Oliver Twist.—2. ' (From the comic papers.) Any tough character,' Ersine, 1933 (as Fagan); extant.

fagot. See faggot, n., 3.

faike, n. See fake, n. 4.

faiking. See faking, n., 2.

fain is, in The Monthly Magazine of Jan. 1799, a misprint for fam, n., 1.

faint. (Of an automobile engine) to stall: May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. To (begin to) 'pass out'.

fair (or F—), the. 'A set of subterraneous rooms in the Fleet Prison': 1811, Lex. Bal.; † by 1890. Either ex the motley gathering of persons there or ex the resemblance of these rooms to stalls.

fair cop. See cop, n., 2, reference of 1895: by 1910, it was low s.

fair meat. An easy dupe: since ca. 1910. Partridge, 1938. Cf. s. easy meat, a woman easy to 'make'.

fair roe-buck, a C. 18 term, is 'a Woman in the Bloom of her Beauty', A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1830. Ex the S.E. sense, 'a roe-buck in its fifth year'.

fair trade, 'smuggling', classified by B & L, 1889, as thieves' c., is called by The O.E.D. a 'popular' (i.e., proletarian) euphemism of C. 18.

fairy. Opium-smokers': 1891, Darkness and Daylight, 'The little lamp on the [opium-smoker's] tray is called "the fairy"'; it was shielded by glass to prevent its being easily extinguished, and was supplied with peanut oil'; ob. Perhaps, 'the genie of the lamp'.—2. 'Fairies or Fags are men or boys who exploit sex for profit' (i.e., who are passive homosexuals), Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; 1927, Robert Nichols & Jim Tully, Twenty Below, 'I'll say I was a man . . . you little Broadway fairy'; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'An effeminate man or boy. Not as extreme in its meaning as "fag"'; by ca. 1930, anglicized, as in M. Lincoln, Oh, Definitely!; 1933, Ersine; 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; 1934, Thomas Minehan, Boy and Girl Tramps; 1935, Hargan; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 18), it was low s. in the U.S.A., and by 1940 low s. in Britain. Sarcastic on the 'fairy-like' walk, gestures, talk of such boys and men.

fairy story. A hard-luck story: tramps': 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'I told her an abominable pack of lies—a fairy-story, as we call such fabrications on the Road'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1932, English also; by 1940, low s. in U.S.A. Ex its improbable elements.

faith man. A 'mission stiff'—one who professes to be 'saved', in order to obtain free food and bed: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Stiff, 1931. He believes in the profession of faith as opposed to the mere doing of good works.

faithful, one of the. 'A taylor who gives long credit; his faith has made him unwhole, i.e., trusting too much broke him': 1785, Grose. Much more prob. s. than c. There is an allusion to the Biblical his faith hath made him whole.

faitor; fator; faytor; rarely fater. Randle Holme, 1688, gives it as a synonym of frater; but this is almost certainly an error.—2 'Faytors, c. the Second (old) Rank of the Canting Crew', B.E., 1698: the reference is to C. 14—early 16; therefore, seeing that the word is equally old, it cannot have been c.; but note that A New Canting Dict., 1725, synonymizes it with 'fortune-telling Gypsies' and says that, as an underworld group, they are 'now obsolete'; but reckon'd the Twenty-seventh Order of Canters'.—3. A fortune-teller: 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; almost certainly an error (confusion with fate), quite certainly not c.

fake, n. An illegal, illicit or criminal action: 1829, William Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, Appendix, 'And the fogle-hunters doing . . . Their morning fake in the priggish lay', glossed as 'morning thievery'; 1889, B & L; by 1895 (if not, indeed, by 1890), low s. Ex fake, v., 1 and 2.—Short for fakement, 4.: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 312, "Get Joe the Loryer to write a fake for William"; app. † by 1910.—3. 'A mixture supposed to be used for purposes of "making safe"' (= hocus, n.): 1874, H; † by 1920. Cf. sense 8 of the v.—4. 'They ["snatchers"] are always taken in hand by the old "faikes" (old experienced criminals), trained in all the ways of theft, and fixed for life in a circle of reproductive crime': 1885, M. Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; † by 1930. Prob. ex sense 1.—5. Hence (?), a person simulating insanity: American convicts': 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; but by 1930, at latest, it was s.—6. Imitation; nonsense: perhaps orig. c. (as in E. Pugh, The Spoilers, 1905, "O, cut that fake!"), but by 1910, at the latest, it was s.—7. An American derivative of fakement, 2: commercial underworld: since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941, 'When one cannot remember or does not wish to refer to any particular object . . . "thingamajig"'. fake, v. To do; to make: 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Fake . . . describes the doing any act, or the fabricating anything . . .; to fake a screeve, is to write any letter, or other paper; to fake a screw, is to shape a skeleton or false key'; 1823, Egan's Grose (a crib); 1834; W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'With my strummel faked in the newest twig'; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; by 1900, †—except in fake a screeve and fake a screw, which > ob. ca. 1940. Ex L. facere, 'to make, to cause'; or else ex S.E. feak or feague: cf. coll. Ger. fegen; 'to plunder', ex good Ger. fegen, 'to clean up, to sweep'.—2. To rob (a person or place), steal from (a place); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To fake a person or place, may signify to rob them'—and see fake a cly; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, Ainsworth; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1859, H; 1875, Thomas Frost, Circus Life, where we see the sense merge with sense 6. Ex sense 1: cf. work, 1, 3, and work for.—3. To hurt; cut, wound: 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To . . . wound, cut' and 'If a man's shoe happens to pinch, or gall his foot, . . . he will complain that his shoe fakes his foot sadly' and 'A man who inflicts wounds upon, or otherwise disfigures himself, for any sinister purpose, is said to have faked himself' and 'To fake your slangs, is to cut your irons'; 1823, Egan's Grose (cribbingly);

1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; 1888, G. Bidwell; 1889, B & L; 1903, Convict 77; in C. 20, also v.i., as in Manchon, 1923. Cf. the coll. work, 'to ache' (though this = wark).—4. (Cf. senses 1 and 3.) To shoot (a person): 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; app. † by 1870 at latest. Cf. fake out and out.—5. To give to something a desirable appearance by illicit means: 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To fake your pin, is to create a sore leg, or to cut it, . . . in hopes to obtain a discharge from the army or navy, to get into the doctor's list, &c.'; 1823, Egan's Grose (cribbingly); by 1875 (Thos Frost), circus-men's s. Cf. sense 1—and sense 3. Obviously it constitutes the origin of the modern to fake, 'to invest something with a plausible appearance of verisimilitude or authenticity'.—6. (A natural development ex sense 2.) To steal: 1859, J. Lang, Botany Bay, "Whether he had faked the swag or not, he was a tip-top mob"; 1859, H; 1875, T. Frost, Circus Life; † by 1910.—7. To cheat, to swindle: 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; † by 1915. Ex senses 2 and 5.—8. To hocus, or stupefy with poison; to drug: 1874, H (the former nuance); 1899, C. Rook, The Hooligan Nights, "It's a faked ceegar"; ob.—9. See fake away.—10. To prepare a house, a flat, a room for a robbery: U.S.A.: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective, 'When the thief has properly "faked" the room, as he calls it—that is, "fixed" it for his entrance in the evening . . .',—a development of 'to cut out the wards of a key' (Matsell, 1859); 1889, B & L; ob. Prob. ex sense 1.—11. To sell: Australian vagrants': C. 20. Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, 1941. Cf. sense 5.

fake a cly or a poke. To pick a pocket: 1812, J. H. Vaux (the former); 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'No dummy hunter had forks so fly. No knuckler so deftly could fake a cly'; April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp'; 1848, The Man in the Moon, 'Flowers of Felonry'; 1859, H; 1909, Ware; app. † by 1920. See fake, v., 2.

fake away! Go ahead!: 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Fake away, there's no down, an intimation from a thief to his pall, during the commission of a robbery, or other act, meaning, go on with your operations, there is no sign of any alarm or detection'; 1823, Egan's Grose (plagiarism); ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack; 1834, W. Ainsworth, Rookwood; April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp', 'The all but universal summons to exertion of every description is "Fake away!"'; 1859, H; 1889, B & L; † by 1900. See etymology of fake, v., 1: fake away = 'continue to do', away implying continuance.

fake boodle 'is a roll of paper, over which, after folding, a few bills'—anglicé, bank or currency notes—are so disposed that it looks as if the whole was made up of a large sum of money,' Sylva Clapin, A New Dict. of Americanisms, 1903: ca. 1870–1920. See boodle, n., 3; fake = 'faked'.

fake oneself. See fake, v., 3.

fake out. To exhaust the selling potentialities of (a route, a town, etc.): Australian vagrants': since ca. 1910. Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, 1941, 'There were no buyers. The district was "faked out"'. Cf. fake, v., 11.

fake (a person) out and out. To kill: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1900. An intensive form of fake, v., 4, or of fake, v., 3.

fake the broads. See broads, fake the.

fake the duck. See faking the duck.

fake the feathers of the main guys. To imitate the 'swells', to ape the fashionable world: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft; † by 1930. Cf. fake, v., 5, and main guy: 'fine feathers make fine birds'.

fake the rubber. 'My gropus clinks coppers, and I'll fake the rubber', glossed as 'My pocket has got money in it. Stand treat this time': 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx; 1864, H, 3rd ed., "Fake the rubber", i.e., stand treat; † by 1900. There's the rub!

fake the sweetner. See faking . . .

fake up is a variant of fake, v., 5: since ca. 1840: by 1870 or so, s.; by 1890, coll. Mayhew, 1851.

faked fitting. A charge trumped up by the police against an ex-convict (or a ticket-of-leave man): Australian: ca. 1830-70. Eric Gibb, Stirring Incidents of the Convict System in Australasia (p. 126: also put-up job). See fake, v., 5.

fakeloo. A 'fairy story' (q.v.): mostly tramps': since ca. 1905. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf.: —2. See emergency gun.

fakeman charley. See sense 2 of:—

fakement. 'A counterfeit signature. A forgery. Tell the macers to mind their fakements; desire the swindlers to be careful not to forge another person's signature': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, Vaux; 1839 and 1851 (see sense 4); 1857, Augustus Mayhew; 1859, H; app. † by 1900. Cf. fake, v., 5; -ment is prob. a variant of -man (see -mans). This seems more prob. than that fakement comes direct ex L. facimentum, as Mayhew implies in London Labour, II, 24.—2. 'Fakeman-Charley; Fakement. As to fake signifies to do any act, or make any thing, so the fakement means the act or thing alluded to, and on which your discourse turns; consequently, any stranger, unacquainted with your subject will not comprehend what is meant by the fakement; for instance, having recently been concerned with another in some robbery, and immediately separated, the latter taking the booty with him, on your next meeting you will inquire what he has done with the fakement? meaning the article stolen, whether it was a pocket-book, piece of linen, or what not. Speaking of any stolen property which has a private mark, one will say, there is a fakeman-charley on it; a forgery which is well executed, is said to be a prime fakement; in a word, any thing is liable to be termed a fakement, or a fakeman-charley, provided the person you address knows to what you allude': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose (cribbingly); 1829, Sessions Papers, 1824-33, V, 604; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; by 1851 (witness Mayhew, London Labour, I, p. 52), it was low s. See fake, v., 1—the note at the end of fakement, 1—and cf. the modern s. the doings, which is employed in exactly the same way.—3. A note; a letter: 1826, C. E. Westmacott, The English Spy, II, 'I make this fakement to let you know I and morning spread [breakfast] are waiting'; by 1850, occ. a begging letter, as in Snowden, 1857; by 1859, current in New York (Matsell's Vocabulum); by 1920, ob.; by 1946, virtually †. Ex sense 1; cf.: —4. Hence, a faked petition: 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime, 'He . . . draws up fakements for the high-fly'; 1839, Brandon; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, I; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; 1859, H; 1889, B & L; † by 1920.—5.

'Fakements, scraps, morsels', Sinks of London, 1848; a sense gravely suspect.—6. 'The depositions of a witness': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; † by 1900. Ex sense 2.

fakement charley. See sense 2 of the preceding.

fakement dodger. A begging-letter, or false-document writer: ca. 1850-1900, Mayhew, London Labour, IV, 447. See fakement, 1, 3, 4.

faker. A maker: 1688, Randle Holme, seems to be the earliest record of this, the usual C. 19-20 form. But as feager it occurs in 1610 (see feager of loges), and as feaker in 1612 (see bene feakers of gybes) and as feker in 1797 (see strommel-faker). See fake, v., 1.—2. Hence, a forger: 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1849, G. W. M. Reynolds; † by 1910.—3. (Ex fake, v., 2.) A thief: April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp'; 1851, Borrow, Lavengro; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1910.—4. A jeweller: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, Matsell; 1860, Martel; † by 1914. Ex sense 1.—5. 'New York . . . celebrated for its large army of petty swindlers, or, as they style themselves, "fakers"': 1881, The Man Traps of New York, Ch. XI, 'Small Swindles to beware of'; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft (as fakir); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex fake, v., 3, 6, and esp. 7.—6. A prostitute's lover or 'bully': c. and low s. of ca. 1870-1910. B & L, 1889; F & H, 1891.—7. A confidence man (usually fakir): U.S.A.: Feb. 14, 1925, Flynn's; 1933, Ersine; slightly ob. Ex fake, v., 7.

faking, n. Theft; swindling; active dishonesty: April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp'; ca. 1910, it > low s. Ex fake, v., 2.—2. 'Cutting out the wards of a key': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; app. † by 1945.—3. Malingering in prison: 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, where it is spelt faking; ob. Cf. fake, v., 7.

faking, ppl adj. Connected with—practising—theft: 1841, Tait's Magazine, song entitled 'The Faking Boy'; app. † by 1920. Cf. fake, v., 2 and 6.

faking the duck. The adulteration of liquor: ca. 1850-1920. B & L, 1889. See fake, v., 5; but why duck?—2. Hence (?), swindling: ca. 1870-1920. B & L.

faking the sweet(er)ner. Kissing and caressing: C. 19. Charles Hindley, The True History of Tom and Jerry, 1890. Ex fake, v., 1.

fakir. A circus worker: tramps' c. and circus-men's s.; by 1900, no longer to be classified as c. Wm De Vere, Tramp Poems of the West, 1891. Prob. a pun on faker.—2. See faker, 6.

Fakus, Mr. A department-store detective; a floor-walker: since ca. 1930. Maurer, 1941.

falconer is one who, looking like a knight and posing as a man of letters, travels about the country with a confederate who looks like an esquire and is, in the underworld, known as a mongrel; that 'knight or some gentlemen of like qualitie' who 'comes to the Lure' or, in plain English, is beguiled—is called a tercel gentle. With a few specimen pages, the 'falconer' seeks the patronage of the victim, the while his assistant walks their two horses up and down in the courtyard. The graceless pair continue their journeying until they weary of raking in the angels: but the patrons (or subscribers in advance, as we call them nowadays) will see no more of the book than those attractive 'prelimin-aries'. This set of terms would seem to have been current only ca. 1605–20, although mongrel and tercel gentle survived until well on in C. 17, possibly until ca. 1630–40, in derivative and more general senses. The 'locus classicus' of this illicit practice is Dekker's Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9, at the section entitled 'Falconers'. Dekker concludes thus:

'These at every doore
Their labors Dedicate. But (as at Faïres)
Like Pedlars, they shew still one sort of wares Unto all commers (with some filde oration)
And thus to give bookes, now's an occupation.
One booke hath seaven score patrons: thus desart
Is cheated of her due: thus noble art Gives Ignorance (that common strumpet) place, Thus the true schollers name growes cheap and base'.

—2, 3. (App. always faulkner.) See faulkner, 1 and 2.

fall, n. An arrest: 1893, implied in fall money; 1894, The Reminiscences of Chief-Inspector Littlechild (England); 1904 (see fall money); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (U.S.A.); Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Take a fall—to get jailed'; 1925, Leverage; Feb. 6, 1926, Flynn's; 1927, C. F. Coe, Me—Gangster; July 7, 1928, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; and often since. Ex the v.—2. Hence, a term in prison: U.S.A.: since the mid-1920's. Ersine, 1933; Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937, 'Bates was philosophic about it [an arrest, with a charge against him]. Even if he couldn't "fix", it would be a "short fall", with the possibility of an early parole.'

fall, v. To fall into the hands of the police; to be or get arrested: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'I fell (was taken up) again at St. Mary Cray for being found at the back of a house'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story (U.S.A.), in the nuance 'to be convicted'; 1894, Chief-Inspector Littlechild; 1896, Arthur Morrison; 1897, Popular Science Monthly, April, p. 833 (to be convicted: U.S.A.); 1899, Clarence Rook, The Hooligan Nights; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, (U.S.A.); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood (id.); 1904, Life in Sing Sing; June 26, 1908, Sessions Papers; 1912, R. A. Fuller, Recollections of a Detective; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'To be deceived'; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review; 1925, Leverage; May 29, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black; May 1928, The American Mercury; Oct. 1928, Word-Lore; July 20, 1929, Flynn's, Eddie Guerin; 1930, Geo. Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; 1931, Chris Massie; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; and often since.—2. 'To believe a misleading or unlikely story . . . and to accede to the demand . . . of the storyteller,' Irwin, 1931: U.S. tramps': since ca. 1910. Short for fall a victim.—3. (Ex 1.) To be sent to prison: U.S.A.: since mid-1920's. Ersine, 1933.

fall, take a. To be arrested: since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Hargan, 1935. See fall, n.; the phrase comes from the hunting field, where, by the way, take a toss is more usual; or perhaps from wrestling.

fall apart. To lose one's nerve completely: 1929, E. D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago, 'The killer who returns from a job and is all unnerved and upset is frequently "given a ride" himself just to be sure that he won't "fall apart" and talk in his delirium'; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot (which owes much, both in the subject and in the language, to Sullivan's book); 1932, Edgar Wallace, When the Gangs Came to London; extant. Cf. coll. go all to pieces.

fall-back. A friend in need: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ob. One can fall back upon him at times of need or difficulty. Cf. fill-in.

fall dough. Reserve money for use in the event of one's arrest: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage; June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; 1941, Maurer; extant. Obviously a development from fall money and, after ca. 1929, the predominant form.

fall for. To be convicted on a charge of: since ca. 1920: 1931 (see fall for the heavy); 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. See fall, v.

fall for a hot short. To be convicted of automobile stealing: car thieves': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. See fall for and hot short.

fall for paper-hanging. To be convicted of forgery: 1934, Rose; extant. See paper-hanging.

fall for the elevation. To be convicted of highway robbery: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex the command 'Put up your hands!'

fall for the heavy; fall for the jug. To be convicted of safe-blowing; of bank robbery: bank robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant. See fall, v., and heavy, n.

fall for the owl. To be convicted of burgling a house at night: 1934, Rose; extant. The owl symbolizes night.

fall for the slough. To be convicted of day-time burglary: 1934, Rose; extant. See slough, n.

fall for the tools. To be convicted of possessing a burglar's tools: 1934, Rose; extant. See fall for.

fall guy. That criminal member of a criminal gang or group who, whether he knows it beforehand or not, will take the blame, either because someone must or in order to divert attention from the other members: C. 20: 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, "'He's free" "What about us? We ain't goin' to be th' 'fall guys' for Steve," shouted Le Fay. "If we've got to do time, so has he!"'; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (valid for San Quentin, 1901–11), 'He landed on me as the fall guy in the gun fairy tale'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'A victim, a scapegoat'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, where it is loosely and inaccurately defined (Glossary, s.v. sucker) as 'an easy victim'; 1922, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life, where—without reference to a gang—it is applied to a tramp made to suffer innocently; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (loosely: a 'sucker'); Jan. 1925, Leverage ('An easy mark; a victim'); June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, R. Jordan, 'Idioms'; Jan. 11, 1927, Flynn's, "'Fall Guy" Granger . . . the professional police goat whenever public clamor over a sensational robbery or hold-up harried the police into the necessity of making some showing . . . The Fall Guy would be notified to hold himself ready for arrest'; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; July-Aug. 1928, The White Tops, 'Circus Glossary, hot lingo'—which shows that in the loose sense, 'anyone to blame for anything wrong, one responsible, one to attach blame to', it has > circus s.; Aug. 2, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, whose use of the term shows that it has > police s.; about this time, it > English c.—as in Charles Gordon, Crooks, 1929, and John G. Brandon, The 'Snatch' Game, 1936. He is selected to fall, v., or 'take a fall'.—2. The derivative sense, 'sucker' (esp. in respect of stocks and shares), is commercial s. See, e.g., the quotation at mooch, n., 5.

fall jack is an occ. variant of fall money: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941.

fall money. Money set aside by professional criminals to fee their defending barrister and pay other expenses entailed by the attempt to defeat justice: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, 'If any accident happened to either of us, Hall was to stand his part of the "fall" money'; in C. 20, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946); 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey; 1900, Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, 'If he'—generic for 'thieves'—'s got enough "fall money" he can square the whole bloomin' town'; ibid., Glossary, 'Fall money, funds saved by criminals to pay lawyers, secure cash bail, and to bribe officials'; 1903 (see kitty); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'I always had great difficulty in saving "fall-money" (the same as spring-money; that is, money to be used in case of a "fall", or arrest)'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg"?'), 'When he was searched a "plant" was found in his cuff links [surely: cuffs?] consisting of a folded ten-thousand dollar bill and another of smaller denomination; an evidence of forethought and carefully secreted "fall money"'; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'); 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1927, Kane; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; March 2, 1929, Flynn's; by 1930, police and journalistic s.

fall of the leaf. Grose, 1785; George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 1789, 'The new mode of hanging. The culprit is brought out upon a stage, and placed upon a leaf, [and] when the rope is fixed about his neck leaf falls, and the body immediately becomes pendent. This is termed the fall of the leaf', the phrase therefore being = 'death on the gallows'; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds: perhaps c., perhaps low or prison s.: current ca. 1784–1850. See also leaf, go off at the fall of the, and the quotation at crap, n., 2.

fall out, usually in (such or such a town). To be arrested and convicted: 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'Duke fell out in Chi last week'; extant. An extension of fall, v.

fall togs. 'Clothing especially selected by a criminal or by his lawyer to give him a good appearance on trial and so possibly influence the jury or judges in his favour,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1910. On analogy of fall money.

faloo. 'A sad story,' Kernôt, 1929–31: tramps' and beggars'. Contraction of fakeloo.

fam, n.; usually in pl. In 1698, B.E., 'Famms, c. Hands'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1741, trial of Mary Young, in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, 1742, 'Upon his Feme (that is, Hand)'; 1785, Grose; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1819, T. Moore, 'Delicate fams'; 1821, D. Haggart, Life (fig. of a hand at cards); 1823, Bee (fam); 1827, Thomas Surr, Richmond; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; app. † by 1859 (H, 1st ed.), except perhaps in U.S.A. (see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859) and in literary c.—e.g., in Henley, 1887. An abbr. of famble, 1.

fam, v.t. 'To feel a Woman where they generally have a Fancy': 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue tipp'd with golden expressions; 1812, Vaux, 'To feel'; 1891, F & H, 'To fam a donna'; † by 1940. Ex the n., sense 1. Hence:—2. 'To handle': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1925, Leverage—prob. not as a survival but merely as a repetition of the English authorities.

fam, tip (a person) one's. 'Tip us your Fam; give us your Hand', i.e., shake hands with me: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; current until ca. 1880.

fam cheat. A ring: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; † by 1820. Cf. fam, n., 2.—2. A glove: 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; † by 1830. By abbr. ex famble cheat.

fam-grasp. See famgrasp.

fam lay. The trick described in the next term: 1708, implied in fam layer, q.v.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; by the 1850's, current in New York—witness Matsell, 1859; prob. † by 1880. See fam, n., 1 and 2; and lay, n., 2.—2. Hence, loosely and rarely, 'robbing a store by pretending to examine goods': ? ca. 1800–90. B & L., 1889.

fam(-)layer. 'Fam-Layers. Such as go into Goldsmith's Shops, with pretence to buy a Ring, and several being laid upon the Counter, they Palm One or Two by means of a little Ale held in a Spoon over the Fire, with which the Palm being daub'd, any Light Thing sticks to it', Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; app. † by 1830. See fam, n., 2; layer, one who practises a lay, 2.

fam-snatcher; usually in pl. A glove: 1828, Pierce Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry and Logic, 'To Jerry Hawthorne, Esq., I resign my fam-snatchers—i.e. my gloves'; † by 1891 (F & H). See fam, n., 1, and cf. fam cheat, 2.

fam-squeeze. Strangling; garotting: 1889, B & L; † by 1891 (F & H). App. the term was current only ca. 1850–90.

fam-string; usually in pl. 'Famstrings, alias Gloves,' C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718; † by 1930. See fam, n., 1.

fam-struck. 'Baffled in ascertaining the whereabouts of valuables on the person of an intended victim': 1891, F & H; † by 1940. See fam, n., 1.—2. Handcuffed: 1891, F & H; † by 1940.

fam the mauley. To shake hands: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum (at mauley); † by 1910. Cf. fam, v., 2, and see mauley.

famble. (Except in combination—e.g., famble cheat—the singular is comparatively rare.) 'Fambles, handes,' Harman, 1566; ibid., 'In his famble'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands; 1665, R. Head; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Famms, or Fambles, hands'; 1819, T. Moore; 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1859 (H, 1st ed.). A perversion of fam, n., 1.—2. Hence, perhaps by confusion with famble cheat, a ring: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia; 1724, Harper, in Thurmond's Harlequin Sheppard; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; † by 1830.—3. An error for fambler, 2: 1725, A New Canting Dict., Song III.—4. (Usually pl.) 'Fambles, gloves': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1890.

famble(-)cheat. A ring; a glove: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue (both); 1676, Coles (both); 1698, B.E. (both); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (both); 1725, A New Canting Dict. postulates 'a gold ring', a definition found nowhere else; 1785, Grose (both senses); † by 1830. See famble, 1 and 2.

fambler. See famblers.—2. A seller of (counterfeit gold) rings: 1666, Anon., The Nicker Nicked (see quot'n at foiler); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1830. Presumably—despite the dates—ex famble, 2.

famblers. A pair of gloves: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All; app. † by 1700. Ex famble, 1.

fambles. See famble.

fambling cheat; in C. 16–17, often f—chete. 'A fambling chete,' says Harman in 1566, is 'a rynge on thy [sic] hand'; 1608, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'Fambles are Hands: and thereupon a ring is called a Fambling chete'; 1610, Rowlands; 1688, Holme; † by 1750. Cf. famble cheat.

famgrasp. Coles, 1676, 'Fam-grasp, c. agree with'; 1698, B.E., 'Famgrasp, c. to agree or make up a Difference. Famgrasp the Cove, c. to agree with the Adversary'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (famgrasp); by the 1850's, current in New York—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859 ('To shake hands'); by 1880, † everywhere. Lit., to grasp (the) hand.

family, one of the. A variant of family man: 1846, The National Police Gazette, April 18.

family, the. 'Thieves, sharpers and all others who get their living upon the cross, are comprehended under the title of "The Family,"' J. H. Vaux, 1812—but the term was almost certainly current as early as 1740 (see Bamfylde-Moore Carew, 1749, and family man); 1823, Egan's Grose; 1828–29, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, passim; 1838, Glascock, Land Sharks and Sea Gulls; April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp', '"The Family"' . . . The generic name for thieves, pickpockets, gamblers, housebreakers, et hoc genus omne'; 1846, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), June 20; 1884, J. McGovan, Traced and Tracked; 1894, A. Morrison, Martin Hewitt, Investigator, 'I knew enough . . . to know that . . . the "family" was the time-honoured expression for a gang of thieves'; ob. For the origin, cf. the remark at the end of sense 1 of family man.

family entrance. 'The pool room was a cover joint . . . It had back rooms too, for craps and poker, more than one "family entrance", or get-away,' J. Allan Dunn, 'The Gray Gangster'—Flynn's, May 31, 1930; 1930, George London; 1934, Rose; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, in private letter), it was s.

family man. A thief: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'The said C—, Brown, and I, were never apart . . . at Exon; for Brown knew him for twelve Years last past in London, and they had been out together on the Sneak: He is an old Family Man'; 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1821, J. Burrows, Life in St George's Fields, 'A house breaker'; 1823, The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull; 1828, G. G., History of George Godfrey; 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1845, Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. translator), ch. I; 1849, Alex. Harris, The Emigrant Family; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell († New York); 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; ob. by 1891 (F & H); 1898, A. Griffiths, Police and Crime; by 1930, almost †. I.e., one of the family or brotherhood of thieves: see family, the.—2. Hence, a receiver of stolen goods: 1811, Lex. Bal.; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell, 1859; 1882, James D. McCabe, New York; 1889, B & L; by 1930, ob.—3. Family men, 'thieves and their associates': 1809, John Mackcoull, Abuses of Justice, where the associates are not only receivers but also such hangers-on as purveyors of information, 'ponces', and the like.—4. A burglar: 1898 (see quot'n at good man, 4); but the nuance is implied in sense 1, q.v.

family people is a synonym of the family: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1839, W. A. Miles; 1859, H; ob. by 1920; virtually † by 1946. Cf. family man and family woman, also good people.

family way, the. 'The thieving line', theft as an art or as a practice: ca. 1820–60; 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, Appendix, 'Lend me a lift in the family way'. See family, the.

family woman. A female thief: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1930, ob. Cf. family man.

famms or fams. See fam, n.

fammy. See rough fam.

famstring. See fam-string.

fan, n. A waistcoat: 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1847, Snowden; 1849, H; 1859, Matsell (New York); 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!, 'A waistcoat . . . A fan, shirt-front cover'; 1891, F & H; † by 1930. Not unlike the opening-out of a fan.—2. Hence, a waistcoat pocket: 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 138; † by 1940.—3. 'A pickpocket who feels the pockets of a prospective victim', Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.; extant. Ex fan, v., 1.—4. See fanner.

fan, v. 'He had "fanned" the gentleman's pocket, i.e., had felt the pocket, and knew there was a handkerchief,' Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV, 1862, but first in The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), Jan. 16, 1847; 1889, B & L (quoting a New York newspaper); 1891, F & H; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Fanning, Locating purse'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; April 1919, The (American) Bookman; 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain, 'Fan the other one for hardware'; 1925, Leverage; by 1929, it had > 'to search' and police s. ('We'll fan the place,' Flynn's, Oct. 26)—no longer wholly c. in U.S.A.; 1937, David Hume, Halfway to Horror—it is still c. in Britain.—2. The sense 'to beat, to thrash', is s. in England, prob. s. in U.S.A.; No. 1500, however, in his Life in Sing Sing, 1904, classifies fanning ('spanking') as c.—3. 'Fanning a revolver hammer—cocking gun rapidly with hand,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, is not

c. but a mere fire-arm technicality.—4. To depart hastily from, to escape from, to leave, to depart from (a place): U.S.A.: 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch, 'She got her dough from him an' fanned the town as soon as Dopey passed out'; extant. A development from sense 2, on the analogy of beat, v., 2.—5. The sense 'to search' (esp. fanning a joint) is police s., as, e.g., in Flynn's, Sept. 6, 1930, Earl H. Scott, 'We began fannin' the joints on South Halstead and Clarke, but Pinky had flitted'.—6. See fanner. Ex fan, to winnow (wheat, etc.).

fan on, turn the. 'Boots, Feeny and Terry turned the fan on, that is they lammed,' Col. Givens, 'The Rat'—Flynn's, June 21, 1930; slightly ob. Cf. semantically, breeze, v., 2.

fan one's face. 'I was so despondent that I did not even "fan my face" (turn my head away to avoid the outside world becoming familiar with my features) when visitors went through the hospital,' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; ob. As though to hide one's face behind a fan.

fancy, n. A 'fancy man' or a 'fancy woman': 1818, The London Guide, p. 120 (former); 1867, J. MacLevy, Curiosities of Crime in Edinburgh (both); 1865, T. Archer, The Pauper, the Thief, and the Convict (former); by 1900, †.

fancy. Short for fancy man: C. 20. BVB, 1942.

fancy, living, vbl n. A living fancy is a probationary union or trial marriage: 1885, Indoor Paupers, by One of Them; ob. The term was also low s. I.e., living fiancés.

fancy bloke (or f. bloak). A 'fancy man', q.v., 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; by 1864, low s.

fancy cove is misused by G. W. M. Reynolds, in 'The House Breaker's Song' (Pickwick Abroad, ch. XXVI, 1839) to mean 'a professional thief'.

fancy house. A brothel: prostitutes': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1940. Cf. fancy man . . .

fancy lay, the. Pugilism; the practice of boxing, boxing as a livelihood: 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I; 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial; † by 1880. The Fancy, 'pugilism', is sporting s.; see lay, n., 2.

fancy man; fancy woman. 'A woman who is the particular favourite of any man, is termed his fancy woman, and vice versa': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London; low s. by 1830—the same applying to fancy pieces (courtesans, prostitutes, kept women: Egan's Grose, 1823), though this, prob., was always s. The person who is one's amorous fancy.

fancy room. 'The "fancy room"—that is, draper's shop': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; ob. by 1930; virtually † by 1942. In addition to the ordinary stock, fancy goods are sold there.

fanner or fan. Of the police: to hit (a tramp, a beggar) on the soles while he is sleeping on a park bench; get a fanner, to be moved on by the police: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1905. Stiff, 1931. Cf. fan, v., 2.—2. 'A gunman who uses the hammer, not the trigger of his pistol,' Ersine, 1933; extant. Ex fan, v., 3.—3. 'The "fanner", whose business it is to open the ball by "fanning" the victim—that is, touching him in such a way as to be aware of what pocket contains the wallet and other valuables,' Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938: British: since ca. 1920. Ex fan, v., 1.

fanning. The vbl n. of fan, v.: prob. since ca. 1860; 1886, Allan Pinkerton (U.S.A.), Thirty Years a Detective, 'The first thing to be done is to ascertain in which pocket the money is carried, and to do this the thief lightly runs his hand across the front of both pockets of the "mark" [or victim]—and this operation of feeling for a pocket-book is called "fanning"': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1904 (see fan, v., 1); 1931, A. R. L. Gardiner, Prisoner at the Bar; extant.

fanning a sucker. 'Searching a victim's clothes for loot which he has not disgorged on command,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: C. 20. See fan, v., 1.

fanning bee. A discussion: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1933, Eagle, 'A discussion or conference'; extant. Ironic on the use of fans.

fanny, n., 'feminine pudend', is not c., but English low s. (B & L, 1889.) The same applies to the American fanny, 'behind, posteriors', which, orig. low s., as in '"Say, you fellas," said the constable . . . addressing us collectively, "if you don't fly your fannies out o' town pretty quick on the next freight, I'll throw you all in the jug"' (Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925), had by 1935, > gen. American s. and, by 1939, fairly common in Britain, where, by 1945, it was very widely used—and still is. (Via c. fun, it derives ex 'fundament'.—2. See right fanny and fanny, put up the. Independently, as 'persuasive talk; an eloquent story', it was, at first (ca. 1910), c., but already by 1930 at latest (Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934), it was also pitchmen's and cheap-jacks' s. Semantically, a parallel is afforded by the low s. bull = bullshit = nonsense, tripe.—3, 'Search made by prison guards or [by] police,' Howard N. Rose, 1934: U.S.A.: since the 1920's. By a pun on fan, v., 1 and 5.

fanny, v. To talk glibly, persuasively; to bluff: c. of ca. 1920–40, then low s. James Curtis, They Drive by Night, 1938, 'Try to fanny it out the way this bloke had said'; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full. Ex sense 2 of the n.

fanny, put up the. To tell a false story: 1931, Brown, 'The card-sharper (broadsmen) told a false story (put up the fanny) to the confidence trickster (con-head)'; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; extant. See fanny, n., 2; cf.—2. To explain the details of a plan (e.g., for a burglary) to other criminals, in order to persuade them to participate: since ca. 1930. David Hume, ca. 1934; Partridge, 1937.

Fanny Blair, 'hair', was prob. c. in New York (see Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859), but mere rhyming s. in London (see H, 2nd ed., 1860). As a New York term, it was current ca. 1855–90; then it > restricted, more or less, to the West (M & B, 1944).

fanny merchant. A confidence trickster; one who lives by his wits, esp. by being a 'quick talker': since ca. 1920. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938. See fanny, n., 2.

far and near. Beer: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming—perhaps introduced by Australians; the Cockney term is O my dear or pig's ear.

farcing. Robert Greene, in the list of burglars' terms appearing at the beginning of The Second part of Conny-catching, 1592, has: 'Picking the lock, Farsing'; Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608, also spells it farsing; app. † by 1650. Perhaps a perversion of forcing (violence); or a pun on farcing (stuffing), the lock being forced with a key.

farcy. In c., it occurs only in:—

farcy gam(b). 'Farcy gambs; sore or swelled legs': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum (at gambs); 1887, Baumann; † by 1930. See gam, n.; lit., farcy (Fr. farcî) = stuffed.

farg. A passive homosexual: 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights (see daddy, 4); extant. Perhaps a corruption or, more likely, a perversion of fag, n., 3.

farger. A false die: late C. 16—mid 17. Greene, Coosnage, 1591. Perhaps a perversion, or merely a corruption, of forger; more prob. ex Fr. farcî—see etymology of farcing.

farm, fetch the. See fetch the farm.

farm, the. The prison hospital: convicts': 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1879 (see fetch the farm); 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1893, A. Griffiths, A Prison Princess; 1900, A. Griffiths, The Brand of the Broad Arrow; ob. Ex its comparative freshness and better diet.—2. As the Farm or the farm: Pentridge Prison: Australian: since ca. 1854. H. A. White, Tales of Crime and Criminals in Australia (p. 1919), 1894; extant. The prison, properly called Pentridge Stockade, is in the State of Victoria. 'It was founded in the year 1851, and proclaimed a house of correction on April 24th, 1852' (White).

farmarly beggars. See fermerdy beggars.

farmer. An alderman: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1859, Matsell (New York); 1889, B & L; † by 1910. Perhaps ex his lobster-rosy cheeks; or ex his farming-out of contracts.—2. A simple person (male): U.S.A.: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss, "'You're fly to some things, an' a farmer on others'"; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1933, Ersine, 'Any stupid or boorish person . . .; a person not knowing in criminal ways'; slightly ob. Cf. hick and rube.

farsing. See farcing, which is more likely to be correct.

farthings. 'Beggars in London lodging-houses use the slang of lodging houses, and not of the road'—rather too sweeping a statement. 'They always say "fourpence for 'doss' or 'kip'"'; but true, wandering beggars say "sixteen farthings for the feather"; W. H. Davies, Beggars, 1909; and on the same page (103) of that book we find a true beggar using 'eight farthings' for 'two pence'. A matter, obviously, of usage—not of vocabulary.

farting crackers. Breeches: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1890. Cf. the South African colloquial crackers, 'leather breeches'.

fashono, 'fictitious': not c. but Romany.

fast, n. A skilful thief (esp. pickpocket): 1925, Leverage; extant. A fast worker; cf. fast gun and fast wire.

fast-fu*k. A 'short time', as opposed to an all-night session: prostitutes': 1891, F & H; extant.

fast gun. A clever thief: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. fast wire; see fast, n., and gun, n., 2.

fast man. 'A desperate, reckless man,' The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848; † by 1890. Cf. fast; in fast man, however, fast = firm-minded.

fast one. Any shady transaction; a bad cheque; a 'frame-up'; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, Randolph Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave'; 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'A clever swindle'; ibid., 'A frame-up'; extant. Prob. ex baseball. 'Usually there is the connotation of fast work to "put it over" before the other party becomes aware of what's afoot' (Godfrey Irwin, letter of March 18, 1938).

fast rambler is an occ. variant of the much more general rambler. Convict, 1934 (see quot'n at dice train).

fast wire. An adroit pickpocket: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. fast, n., and fast gun; see wire, n., 1.

fastener; fastner. A warrant for arrest: 1698, B.E. (fastner); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850, current in U.S.A.—witness E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851, and Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859; † by 1891 (F & H). Proleptic.

fat, n. The sense 'money' is not c. but s., except perhaps in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859.—2. Luck; profit or other advantage in money or food or clothes: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, "'Where did you graft in Wandsworth?"—"Cleaner."—"Blimey, that was a bit of fat for you, wasn't it?"—"Yeah, but you couldn't pinch no grub"; by 1940, low s. Ex fat as opposed to lean: cf. 'a fat profit' and 'lean times'.

fat, adj. Rich: 1698, B.E. (fat cull); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (id.); 1785, Grose (fat cull); by 1850 at latest, current in U.S.A.—see the glossary in E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851; by 1860 it was s. in England. Fat men eat much: food costs money (much food, much money): heavy eaters are rich.—2. Hence, among card-sharpers, fat players are those (esp. non-sharpers) who bet heavily: 1894, J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats; 1894, J. H. Keate, The Destruction of Mephisto's Greatest Web (U.S.A.: gambling); slightly ob.

fat cull. 'A rich Fellow,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1887, Baumann; by 1900, †. See fat, adj., and cull, n., 1 and 2.

fater. See faitor.

father. A receiver of stolen property: a synonym (ca. 1850–1910), not at all gen., of 'fence', which survived its competition: 1859, H; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H. Prob. suggested by s. uncle, 'pawnbroker'.

Father Time. A prison judge; any judge: April 16, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens (former nuanee); 1934, Rose (latter); extant. With a pun on time (imprisonment).

fator. See faitor.

Fattenin(g)-up State, the. Pennsylvania: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (p. 152); ob. That State being a good one for tramps.

faulkner. 'One that Decoys, or draws others into Play' (gaming): 1698, B.E.; † by 1780. Ex S.E. falconer.—2. 'One that shows Tricks with and without a Hoop,' B.E., 1698; 'A tumbler, juggler, or shower of tricks', Grose, after A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1809, Andrewes; app. † by 1840.

fauney or fauny. See fawney.

Fauntleroy. A clerk, in those prisons where only clerks may wear white shirts: convicts': 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex the ironic resemblance of such prisoners to the traditional snowy shirt of the eponymous 'hero' of Mrs Frances Hodgson Burnett's sensationally successful novel, Little Lord Fauntleroy, 1886.

favell, a cunning or treacherous fellow, is † S.E.

Faw or faw. Extremely rare (? existent at all) in singular. See Faws.

fawn-guest. See fawning.

fawney or fawny. A ring used in the 'lay' or dodge of ring-dropping; any finger-ring: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'The Fawney Rig'; 1797, Potter, 'A ring'; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A finger-ring'; 1822 (see forney); 1823, Bee; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1839, Brandon; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850, current in U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); 1851, Mayhew; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell; 1863 (see twist, v., 2); 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L, 'Also "Fauney"'; 1891, F & H; 1897, Price Warung; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective (U.S.A.); extant—though slightly ob. Ex Erse fainne, a ring.—2. Hence, he who practises 'the fawney rig': 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society, 'The Fawney says, "I daresay some poor woman has lost her pocket"' or hand-bag; app. † by 1890.—3. Hence, the fawney = the fawney rig. G. Parker, 1781; 1859, H; 1891, F & H; ob.—4. An imitation: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 1; cf. the derivative phoney.

fawn(e)y, adj. At first merely attributive: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'These fawny gentlemen'. See the n. fawney, come the. Same as next: ca. 1790–1850. George Hanger, 1801.

fawney, go on the. To embark on, or to practise, 'the fawney rig': 1781, Geo. Parker, A View of Society, 'There is a large shop in London where these kind of rings are sold, for the purpose of going on the Fawney'; † by 1900.

fawney bouncer. One who practises 'fawney-bouncing', q.v.: 1859, H; ob. See fawney, n., 1; and cf. :—

fawney-bouncing. 'Selling rings for a wager', the rings being 'brass, double gilt': 1859, H; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. See fawney, n., 1.

fawney(-)cove. One who practises 'the fawney rig': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; ob. by 1930; virtually † by 1940. See fawney, n., 1.

fawney-dropper. The agent corresponding to the next: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; ob. See fawney, n., 1, and dropper.

fawney-dropping. The 'fawney rig': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1891, F & H; ob. See fawney, n., 1.

fawney-fammed (or -fam'd); fawneyed or fawnied. 'Having one or more rings on the finger': 1812, J. H. Vaux (fawney-fam'd and fawnied); 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'With my fawnied famms and my onions gay'; 1889, B & L, 'Fawnied (thieves), with rings, wearing rings'; 1891, F & H (fawnied); the longer term was † by 1900, the shorter ob. by 1920. Ex fawney, n., 1.

fawney man. 'Fawny Man: a peddler of bogus jewellery,' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary), 1899,—but it had already occurred in Flynt's article, 'The American Tramp', in The Contemporary Review, Aug. 1891; in C. 20, also English as in the Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932; by 1930, it had, in U.S.A., > phoney man. See fawney, n., 1.

fawney rig, the. This is practised by the ring-dropper, 'a fellow who has gotten a woman's pocket, with'—inside the hand-bag—'a pair of scissors, a thread, a thimble, and a housewife with a ring in it, which'—the bag—'he drops for some credulous person to pick up. As soon as he has got some gudgeon to bite at his hook and to pick up his pocket, he claims halves for being present, and they begin to examine it. The Fawney says, "... Here's a ring..." He then comes the stale story of, "If you will give me eight or nine shillings for my share, you shall have the whole." If you accede to this and swallow his bait, you have the ring and pocket, worth about sixpence: for though the ring itself cost as much, yet the intrinsic value of it is not a halfpenny. Queer as this rig may appear, there is a large shop in London where these kinds of rings are sold, for the purpose of going on the Fawney': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1823, Bee; Nov. 8, 1836, The Individual; 1859, H, who implies that this game was, by that time, dying out; 1887, Baumann; by 1900, †. See rig, n., 1, and fawney, 1. fawney rigger. A ring-dropper: 1781 (implied in fawney rig quotation); † by 1900. See prec.

fawney rigging is the practising of 'the fawney rig', q.v. It occurs, e.g., in No. 747 (see quot'n at gladder).

fawney shop. A shop that sells imitation jewellery: 1904, Hutchings Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, where it is spelt fauny; ob. See fawney, n., 1.

fawneyed or fawnied. See fawney-fammed.

fawning; fawn-guest. Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608, 'The third Jump'—or underworld trick—is called Fawning: those that leape at it are Fawneguests; and that is done in the edge of an evening, when a Cheater meeting a stranger in the darke and taking him for another, gets the stranger by some slight to a Taverne, where calling for two pintes of sundry wines, the drawer setting the wines downe with two cups, as the custome is, the Jumper tastes of one pinte (no matter which) and findes fault with the wine, saying tis too hard, but rose-water and sugar would send it downe merrily; and for that purpose takes up one of the cuppes, telling the stranger that he is well acquainted with the Boy at the barre, and can have two peny worth of rose-water for a peny of him, and so steps from his seate; the stranger suspecting no harme because the Fawne-guest leaves his cloake at the end of the table behinde him. But this Jump comming to be measured, it is found that he who went to take his rising at the barre, hath stolne ground and out-leaped the other more feete than he can recover in haste, for the cup is leaped away with him, for which the wood-cock that is taken in the springe, must pay fifty shillings or three pound, amends for his losses.' Ca. 1600–30.

fawny. See fawney.

Faws or faws. Gypsies: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1820. Origin obscure. Perhaps ex a family so named.

fay, n. A white man: Negroes': Nov. 29, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; extant.

Because fairies are usually represented as white or as wearing white garments?

fay, v. To shoot (a person): 1799, Sessions Papers, Jan., p. 98, 'He [a criminal] said, he had been fayed, or shot'; app. † by 1890. Either ex S.E. (in C. 19-20, dial.) fay, 'to suit or fit' (ironically), or, less prob., ex S.E. (now dial.) fay or feigh, 'to clean; to clear away (filth, etc.)', O.E.D.

fiaytor. See faitor; the form fayter is rare.

fazzled, 'disconcerted' (W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 1929), is low s. rather than c. A blend of phaze + dazzle.

feag(u)er of loges. Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610, 'A Feager of Loges one that beggeth with counterfeit writings': app. † by 1720. Feager = faker; see loge.

feaker. See faker.

feather is first recorded, defined first (and only) in Alex. Smith, The History of the Highwaymen (1719-20), 'Whilst Stephen was bargaining for three Quarters of a Yard of Cloth . . . his Companion had the Opportunity of taking the Feather, as Thieves call it, out of a Pin in the Window'—app. a jewel. Semantically, cf. a feather in his cap (something to be proud of).—2. A bed: mostly beggars': 1908, W. H. Davies, The Autobiography of a Super-Tramp, (a professional beggar says:) 'I never fail to get the sixteen farthings for my feather (bed), I get all the scrand (food) I can eat'; by 1934 (Philip Allingham, Cheappack), it was pitchmen's s. Obviously suggested by 'feather bed'; perhaps via feather and flip, rhyming s. on kip, 'bed'.

feather to fly with, not a, 'penniless; ruined', is classified in Egan's Grose, 1823, as c.: but it was s.—buckish at first. Cf. S.E. feather one's nest.

feathers. 'Money. "He has lots of feathers in his nest', 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was s. Ex S.E. feather one's nest, to put money aside.—2. A bed: U.S.A., esp. among convicts ('nostalgically'): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; extant. Suggested, prob. by feather bed; cf. feather, 2. feathers, grow one's. See grow one's feathers.

feck, v. 'To look out—to discover the most probable means to obtain the articles to be stolen': 1797, Humphry Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open, 'To discover which is the safest way of obtaining stolen goods'; † by 1891 (F & H). Cf. fake, v., 2.

fed rap. A term in a Federal prison: since ca. 1925. Howard N. Rose, 1934.

Feds, the. Federal law-enforcement officers: 1916, Arthur Stringer, The Door of Dread (p. 53); 1930, Burke, who applies it to the Prohibition enforcement officers—but by that date, it was fairly gen. s.

feeb. A chap, fellow, 'guy': 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, "'Did that tip come from these two old weasels here?" I demanded, designating the two old uncles . . . "Those two old feebs!" was Big Ben's none too flattering exclamation'; 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves (woman detective asking, gunman's 'moll' replying), "'Does that Dago friend of yours know you're here?" . . . "He knows more than most feebs imagine," she replied'; little used after 1930. Perhaps ex feeble.

feeblo. A prison intelligence-test: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Prob. ex:—2. A feeble-minded person (esp. a prisoner): convicts': 1934, Rose.

feed. Money: not c. but s. (Clapin, Americanisms, 1903.) Cf. s. chicken-feed, 'small change; an insignificant sum of money'.—2. Narcotics: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. feed, 'food; a meal'.

feed the fish. See clean the fish.

feeder. A spoon: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; Sept. 1785, Sessions Papers; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'To nab the feeder; to steal a spoon'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'We succeeded in carrying off twelve wedge desert-feeders, eight wedge table-feeders, and some other small articles'; 1823, Jon Bee, 'A spoon (of silver)'; 1839, Brandon; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (New York); by 1860, ob., and by 1890, † in England. That with which one 'feeds' or eats.—2. 'He said from a feeder, which she said was a basket to carry things to Petticoat-lane': 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, IV, trial of Wm Borne and Ann Paget; † by 1890.—3. (Cf. sense 1.) A silver fork: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910.

feeder-prigger. One who specializes in 'prigging' or stealing spoons: 1823, Bee; † by 1880. See feeder, 1.

feeding birk. A cookshop: ca. 1880-1920. Ware, 1909. Perhaps birk is a corruption of barrack.

feeding the chickens . . . See Bates' Farm.

feel (someone's) collar. See collar felt.

feel (a person) out. To pump for information; to sound: C. 20: 1904 (implied in feeler-out); 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose. Cf. feeler, 2, and feeler out.

feele. A daughter; a child; a girl: 1859, H (at feele and donna and feeles): not c., but parlyaree; introduced either by organ-grinders or by circus performers. 'Corrupted French', says H; but prob. it was corrupted Italian figlia (pl. figlie), via Lingua Franca.

feeler. That member of a pair or a gang of banco or other gambling swindlers who accosts a prospective victim and learns his name and address: 1876, P. Farley, Criminals of America; 1881, The Man Traps of New York, Ch. III, 'The Banco Swindle'; app. † by 1930. He feels his way. (See also catcher.) Cf.:—2. The sense 'a question asked to elicit information' lies orig. on the borderline between c. and police s., but, if not always non-c., it very quickly > s. > coll. > S.E. and Standard American.—3. A gang's contact man: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Cf.:—

feeler-out. One who keeps his eyes and ears open to discover places or persons worth robbing: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'A jeweler, who was a well-known "fence", put us on to a place where we could get thousands. He was one of the most successful "feelers-out" in the business'; ob. An elaboration of the preceding (sense 1).

feelers, 'questions asked for the purpose of extracting information' (Burke, 1930), is not c. but coll.

feelier is the parlyaree form of feele.

feero. An incendiary: 1934, Rose; extant. Ex fire-bug.

feet near the lime, have one's. To be near death by legal execution: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. Cf. English military s., sweating on the top line; lime, because of 'burial' in a lime-pit.

feint; usually vbl n., feinting. 'Feinting . . . a Term in Fencing, to deceive the Adversary, by pretending to thrust in one Place, and really doing it in another. Whence it is used, in a Canting Sense, for an Attempt of Villains on one Part of a House, or Road, &c. when their chief Stress or Attempt lies in another,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; by 1800, no longer to be classified as c.—2. A pawnbroker: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by 1859, current in New York—see Matsell's Vocabulum; † by 1891 (F & H). Because his business is often a feint or pretext for receiving stolen goods.

feke-drinker or jake-drinker. 'This class'—the short-sentence men in a prison—'represents the real human wreckage . . . Over twenty-five per cent. are "jake" or "feke" drinkers . . . They drink methylated spirits either in water or beer . . . The jake drinker's life is a short one and most of it he passes in prison suffering the agonies of a terrible reaction,' T. B. Gibson Mackenzie, 'The British Prison'—in The Fortnightly Review, March 1932; extant. Cf. fake, n., 6.

feker. An occ. form of faker, q.v. (Potter, 1797.)—2. 'Trade; profession,' says Matsell, U.S.A.: but this doesn't make sense.

fellow(-)men. 'Afterwards Bewley took for his Fellow-Man one Richard Clay', the gloss being, 'Fellow-Man, one who robs in Company with another': 1743, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. II, Part ii (Michael Bewley); † by 1850. A perversion of the S.E. sense.

fem is a rare variant of—? rather, an error for—ferme: q.v. at 1848.—2. Also a variant of fam, n., 1: 1889, B & L (at fam).

feme. See fam, n., 1, reference of 1741.

fen. A thief: 1698 (at bone, where it is derived ex fence, n.); † by 1780.—2. A whore: 1698, B.E. (see quot'n at fag, v.); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (fenn); by the 1850's, current in New York—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; by 1880, † in Britain. Either ex sense 1 or, more prob., ex † S.E. fen, filth.—3. Whence, a bawd: 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (fenn); † by 1880.

fence, n. 'Fence, c. a Receiver and Securer of Stolen-goods,' B.E., 1698: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 'Fence, one that Buys Stolen Goods'; 1718, C. Hitching; 1925, A New Canting Dict.; 1742, Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1764, Select Trials, from 1741 to 1764, III; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Bee; 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III; 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; ca. 1843, George Benson, The Horrors of Transportation; 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. trans.), ch. XVI; 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell; 1860, C. Martel; 1863, A. Forrester, Secret Service; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham (U.S.A.); 1881, Rolf Boldrewood (Australia); 1882, J. D. McCabe (U.S.A.); 1885, A. Griffiths; 1887, G. W. Walling (U.S.A.); 1891, F & H; 1897, D. Fannan, A Burglar's Life Story; by 1900, low s. all over the world. Ex sense 1 of the v.—2. Goods stored or hidden by a 'fence': 1698, B.E. (see 2nd quot'n at bone, v., 1); app. † by 1780.—3. (Ex sense 1.) A receiver's depot or shop: 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, IV, trial of Mary Ann Brown, 'Johnson kept a fence and a brothel'; in use in U.S.A. by 1850—witness E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851, Ch. IV; 1859, H; 1876, P. Farley, Criminals of America; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1940.—4. 'A bloke ain't got no show wid a gal if he ain't good-lookin'; wid good clothes, wid a fence (collar) round his neck,' Hutchins Hapgood, Types from City Streets, 1910, in ref. to the speech of professional 'bums' or beggars; † by 1940. Humorous.

fence, v. Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610, 'To Fence property, to sell any thing that is stolne'; 1742, Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV; 1753, John Poulter (see quot'n at buss); 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1816, Sessions Papers; 1821, D. Haggart; 1823, Bee; 1827, Sessions; 1830, Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (America); 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft (U.S.A.); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood (id.); 1906, A. H. Lewis (id.); 1925, Flynn's (id.); by 1930, s. The orig. and basic sense is of selling goods to a receiver: ex S.E. sense, 'to protect'.—1a. Rarely employed of the receiver himself: 1665, implied in fencing cully; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Progress', 'With Nell he kept a lock, to fence, and tuz'; 1887, Henley; 1891, F & H; 1904 (see fencing way); 1933, Ersine (U.S.A.); ob. in Britain.—2. To spend: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'to Spend or Lay out'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'To spend one's money: Fence one's Cole'; 1785, Grose; 1889, B & L;—but was not this sense † by ca. 1860?—3. To pawn (goods): 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life; 1889, B & L; ob. Ex sense 1.

fence, stand. To act as a receiver of stolen goods: 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police, p. 96, 'All rag-shops "stand fence for anything", and buy any stolen property'; ob. I.e., stand as a 'fence'.

fence cull. 'A keeper of the house where stolen goods are received': 1797, Potter; † by 1910. See fence, n., 1, and v., 1.

fence house is not properly c., the c. equivalent being fence (or fencing) ken. Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824.

fence(-)ken is a synonym (ca. 1730–1840) of fencing ken. (The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, 1741; Potter, 1797.)

fence line, the. The receiving of stolen goods: 1831, W. T. Moncrieff, Van Diemen's Land; ob. Cf. mace line and see line, n., 3.

fence(-)man; fenceman. A receiver of stolen property: 1859, Matsell (at anglers); † by 1920. Cf. fence cull.

fence master. A receiver of stolen goods: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; † by 1930. Cf. fence cull.

fence(-)shop. A shop where stolen property is sold: ca. 1770–1860. George Parker. Ex fence, n., 2.

fence work = fencing, q.v.: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; ob.

fenceman. See fence man.

fencer. 'Receiver of stolen goods,' D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd, 1728; 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, 'More Cole . . . than you can expect from the Rascally Fencer'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; † by 1890 in England; 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, p. 91, footnote, 'Mother Mandelbaum was the most notorious "fencer" New York has ever had'; † by 1920 in U.S.A. Ex fence, v., 1.—2. A vendor: only in combination (see, e.g., spunk-fencer). This sense passes into London street s. Ex fence, v., 1.

fencing, n. App. first recorded in combination: see fencing cull, fencing cully and fencing ken. Only occ. is it used independently, as in Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'Their "fencing" . . . does not extend to any plate, or jewellery, or articles of value'. See fence, v., 1a.

fencing(-)crib. 'A place where stolen goods are bought or hidden': 1839, W. H. Ainsworth, Jack Sheppard; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York; 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1930 in Britain; by 1937, † in U.S.A. (Irwin). Ex fence, v., and crib, n., 2.

fencing(-)cull. A receiver of stolen goods: 1725, trial of Jonathan Wild, in Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, pub. in 1735; † by 1890. Imm. ex the next; cf. fence cull.

fencing cully is 'one that receives stolen goods', i.e., a 'fence': 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1889 (B & L). See fence, v., 1 and 1a; and cully.

fencing ken. 'Fencing-ken, c. the Magazine, or Warehouse, where Stolen-goods are secured,' B.E., 1698—repeated in A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850, current in U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); 1887, Baumann; 1891, F & H; by 1910, † in Britain; by 1920, † in U.S.A. See fence, v., 1 and 1a, and ken.

fencing mort is the feminine of fencing cully: ca. 1719, in trial of Jonathan Wild, at p. 99, of Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732; † by 1850. See fence, v., 1 and 1a.

fencing way, in the. Engaged as a buyer of stolen goods: ca. 1880–1910, as c.; then low s. In, e.g., Ex-Inspector Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals, 1904. Ex fence, v., 1a.

fend off. To take; to steal: New Zealand: since ca. 1920: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter). Perhaps to fend off the inquisitive and take what one requires.

fenn. See fen, 2 and 3.

feret. See ferret, n., 2, reference of 1848.

ferm. See ferme.

fermarly beggars. See fermerdy beggars.

ferme. Dekker, O per se O, 1612, 'A Ferme (that is to say, a hole)'; 1665, R. Head; 1676, Coles (ferm); 1688, Holme, 'Ferme, Hole, Cave, or hiding place'; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., where it is erroneously printed form; 1714, Alex. Smith; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (ferm); 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, in the strange shape of fem; by 1859, used in New York—see Matsell's Vocabulary, where it is spelt ferm; † by 1891 (F & H). Perhaps ex Fr. lieu fermé, 'closed place'.

fermerdy (or fermerly) beggars. 'The Clapper- dogeons [q.v.] that have got the great Cleyme [or artificial sore], are called Farmarly Beggars,' Dekker, O per se O, 1612; 1698, B.E., 'Formerly Beggars, c. all those that have got the Sham-sores or Cleymes'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1830. With sores open like pits in the ground; cf. preceding entry.

ferret, n. That shopkeeper or merchant who, in 'ferreting' (q.v.), sells goods to rich and foolish young men at an extortionate price and with such aims in view as are set forth in ferreting: 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1698, B.E.; Egan's Grose, 1823, 'A tradesman who sells goods to young unthrift heirs, at excessive rates, and then continually duns them for the debt'; † by 1889 (B & L). From his sharpness.—2. A pawnbroker: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (ferret); 1823, Bee, who applies it also to a tallyman; 1848, Sinks of London (feret); by 1890, low s.—3. 'A young thief who gets into a coal barge and throws coal over the side to his confederates': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1930.

ferret, v. To cheat (a person) as in the next entry: 1698, B.E., 'Ferreted, c. Cheated'; 1725, A Canting Dict.—2. 'To haunt one for money': 1823, Bee; † by 1870.

ferreting is 'the manner of undooing Gentlemen by taking up of commodities': ca. 1600–1850, for, mentioned as early as 1608–9 by Dekker, it appears, by implication, as late as 1823, when Egan defines ferret as in the preceding entry. The following are the parties to this 'racket' and transaction, as described by Dekker in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9: '1. He that hunts up and downe to find game'—to search out the 'mugs'—'is called the Tumbler. 2. The commodities that are taken up are cald Purse-nets. 3. The Cittizen that selles them is the Ferret. 4. They that take up are the Rabbit-suckers. 5. He upon whose credit these rabbit-suckers runne, is called the Warren.' In short, a set of needy fellows (usually four in number) find a 'tumbler', the 'tumbler' both a victim and a 'ferret'; the ferret supplies goods to the four scamps and the 'rabbit-sucker' in chief (i.e., the victim), under bond, for, say, £500. At a carefully chosen time, the four rascals disappear; the victim has to pay £500 to the 'ferret' or obliging tradesman; all the confederates share in the ensuing £500; the hired goods having been seized by the 'ferret'.

ferry. A prostitute: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. On the borderline between c. and low s. She carries many passengers; cf. load in the glossary of my Shakespeare's Bawdy.

fetch. To obtain, secure; to incur; to enjoy; e.g., fetch an easy lagging is so to work things in prison that one's sentence is easy: 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; 1885, M. Davitt; 1889, B & L, 'Fetch a lagging, to (thieves), to be serving out one's sentence at a convict establishment'; 1891, F & H; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades, 'Most of them appeared to have "fetched" Parkhurst'; extant. Cf. the ambiguity of S.E. 'to get'.—2. Hence (?), to steal: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. euphemistic and quite independent of sense 1.

fetch an easy one. To be in the prison infirmary: convicts': C. 20. Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940. Prob. suggested by:—

fetch the farm. 'Thieves' language for obtaining admission to the [prison] infirmary': prisoners': 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; 1885, M. Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1895, A. Griffiths; app. † by 1930—prob. it had been superseded by fetch an easy one as early as 1920. See fetch and farm.

fetcher*. A thief: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex fetch, v., 2.

few*, a. Less than fifteen days (of a prison sentence): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; extant. Esp. in relation to the release from prison.

fib, n. A stick: 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1900. Ex sense 2 of the v.—2. 'One of the females asked him what he meant by a fib—he said it was a £5-note,' trial of W. H. Jones, Feb. 1, 1849 (Session Paper of that date); † by 1890. A corruption of five.

fib, v. To strike, punch; to beat; implied, I think, in Harman's 1566 definition of filch, v.; from that definition, it would seem that, in Harman, filch was preceded by fib and that the printer, having omitted the key-word, fib, jumbled the two definitions together, placing the two senses belonging to fib before the one sense belonging to filch. Rowlands has it too, but then Rowlands plagiarized not merely shamefully but not always wisely. Coles, 1676; B.E., 1698; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (fibb); 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To beat with a stick'; by 1813 it was mainly pugilistic s.—witness esp. Pierce Egan, Boxiana, 1818–24. The American sense, 'to strike, to beat with a club, a truncheon' (Leverage, 1925), lies in the disputed region between low s. and c. Wm Hone, in The Table Book, 1838, derives it ex that fibb which is a rare variant of fib, v., 1.: cf. It. affibiare, 'to give a . . . spiteful blow' (Hoare).—2. Hence, to steal: 1659, Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, 'When there's a great company gathered of gaping spectators, then take they'—cutpurses and pickpockets—the opportunity to fibb and cloy'; app. † by 1700. Cf. strike, v., 1, for semantics.

fibbing gloak. A pugilist: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee, who applies it to a third-rater; † by 1889 (B & L). See fib, v., and gloak.

fibbing match, 'a boxing match' (Vaux, 1812), is (low) pugilistic s., not c.

fibble and ben is a misprint (or an error) for fidlam ben.

fibre. A match-box: South Africa: C. 20: by 1940, (low) s. Letter of May 23, 1946, from C. P. Wittstock. Wood-fibre.

fick*, 'to fight, to strike, to beat' and ficked, 'beaten; exhausted' and ficker, 'a fighter; a rough' (all recorded by Leverage, 1925), are not c., but s. Ex Ger. ficken, 'to strike'.

fid*. To cheat or swindle (a person): 1925, Leverage; extant. Short for fiddle, v., 5. fidlam ben. See fidlam ben.

fiddle, n. 'A Writ to Arrest,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1860. With the threat it imports, one plays a pretty tune (on, e.g., a debtor).—2. A whip: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1930. Perhaps because one can 'tune up' a person with a whip.—3. A sharper, esp. one who operates in the street: 1874, H; by 1889 (B & L), it was low s.—4. A swindle; an imposture: U.S.A.: 1874, H; 1891, F & H; 1925, Leverage; 1927, Kane; extant. Cf. fiddle, v., 2.—5. 'The taskmaster warder came in, bringing with him the "fiddle" on which I was to play a tune called "Four pounds of oakum a day"'. It consisted of nothing but a piece of rope and a long crooked nail': 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude—the reference being to the 1860's; 1891, F & H; 1902, J. Greenwood, The Prisoner in the Dock, where it is defined as 'a neat little iron hook' (used in oakum-picking); ob.—6. 'The criminal calls a suit of clothes a fiddle, a contraction from the Australian slang term, fiddle and flute, meaning the same thing,' Convict, 1934: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920: 1929–31, Kernôt; Feb. 17, 1937, The New York Herald Tribune, Barry Buchanan; 1938, Convict 2nd; 1941, Maurer; 1944, M & B; extant.—7. A silly person: U.S.A., mostly convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. 'Perhaps from the "simple" individual's habit of aimless movements' (Godfrey Irwin).

fiddle, v.; frequently as vbl n., fiddling. 'The argousins made regular rounds, to assure themselves that no one was engaged in fiddling (sawing their fetters),' Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, I, 1828—but the term prob. dates from ca. 1810; app. † by 1860. Cf. the S.E. simile of a bad violinist's sawing away, and fiddlestick.—2. To humbug; wheedle: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'The way the globe man (a kind of fortune teller) does is to go among the old women and fiddle (humbug) them'; by 1860 (F. & J. Greenwood, Under a Cloud), it was low s. Cf. S.E. 'play on a person's feelings'.—3, 4, 5. See fiddling, 3–5.—6. To hocus (liquor); to drug; 1899, C. Rook, The Hooligan Nights, "'One of 'em 'e tasted 'imself, so's to show me it wasn't fiddled, I s'pose'"'; ibid., p. 179, "'If you come across Lizzie an' she offered you a rose," he said, "an' arst you to smell it, it wouldn't be worf your while."—"Why not?" I asked.—"Fiddled," said young Alf.—"You mean —"—"Drugged, you unnerstand"''; † by 1940. I.e., 'to fiddle with'.—7. See fiddling, 6; the vbl n. is far more usual than the v.—8. To conceal (e.g., loot): U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Perhaps ex an apparently aimless fiddling with one's fingers while in fact one is hiding some small and valuable article.—9. Arthur Stanley, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932, 'To make a living . . . just within the limits of the law'; Black, 1943.—10. (Ex the fiddle implied in fiddling, 3–6; cf. sense 9.) 'To go about begging from different people and trying to get as much money as you possibly can' (no matter how dishonestly), John Worby, The Other Half, 1936: C. 20.—11. (Of warders) to make extra money by selling tobacco to, and doing other favours for, the prisoners: convicts': C. 20. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938.

fiddle, at the. Engaged in the sort of 'shadiness' implied at fiddle, v., 9. Black, 1943.

fiddle and flute*. A suit: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928; Convict 2nd, 1938. Less gen. than whistle and flute, q.v.

fiddler. A sixpence: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by 1857, it had app. > s., for 'Ducange Anglicus', in The Vulgar Tongue, classifies it as gen. s. (The sense 'farthing'—e.g., in H, 1874—is almost certainly erroneous.) Prob. ex s. fiddler's money, 'sixpences', for sixpence was 'the usual sum paid by each couple for music at country wakes and hops' (Egan's Grose, 1823).—2. 'A sharper, or cheat': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1879, Thor Fredur, Sketches from Shady Places; by 1889 (B & L), it was low s., except perhaps in U.S.A., where it is classified as c. as late as 1925—by Leverage. Prob. ex fiddle, v., 2; cf. fiddling, 5.—3. A 'wangler': convicts': since ca. 1920. Anon., Dartmoor from Within, 1932. Prob. ex fiddle, v., 2.

fiddlestick. A spring saw: mostly Scottish: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'I . . . remained there a day, during which I was occupied in obtaining a fiddlestick for Barney' (who was in prison); 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', 2nd ed.; 1891, F & H; ob. Vague resemblance in shape.

fiddley, £1, is C. 20 Australian, but low s. rather than c. Baker, 1945. Short for fiddle did, which rhymes with synonymous quid.

fiddling, n. For senses 1, 2, see fiddle, v., 1, 2.—3. The sense, 'holding horses, or picking up money anyhow' (1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 199), is almost certainly London proletarian s., not c. Prob. ex fiddling about, pottering about, doing trifling things.—4. Hence (?), gambling: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1889, B & L, by implication; 1891, F & H, who classify it as gamblers'; app. † by 1920.—5. Cheating: 1884, J. Greenwood, The Little Ragamuffins, p. 300; cf. J. Greenwood, A Queer Showman, 1885, 'I'll fiddle the tossing' (cheat at, dishonestly manipulate it); 1889, B & L, by implication; 1891, F & H; 1925, Leverage, 'Fiddle . . . To swindle; to cheat'; extant. Cf. fiddle, v., 2.—6. Pickpocketry; an instance thereof: 1931, Chris Massie, The Confessions of a Vagabond; extant.

fiddling screw. A warder that will take money in return for illicit privileges (e.g., tobacco): convicts': C. 20. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938. Cf. fiddle, v., 11, and fiddling, 3.

fidlam (or fidlum) ben. One of 'a kind of general tradesmen' (thieves), 'who are likewise called Peter's sons, with every finger a fish-hook. They watch all opportunities, rob at all times and places from a diamond ring on a lady's toilet down to a dish-clout in the sink-hole,' George Parker, A View of Society, 1781; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, erroneously, 'Fibble and ben, general thieves'; by the 1850's, current in New York—see Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; by 1900, †. Prob. ben = Ben, personification; fidlam may be a corruption of fiddling (clever. finger-work)—and cf. fiddle, n., 3.

fidlam cove. 'Fidlam Coves. Small'—i.e., petty—'thieves who steal any thing they can lay hands on': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1910. Ex the preceding.

Fido. A prison 'trusty', i.e., an inmate entrusted with jobs indicative of official confidence: convicts': 1933, Ersine; 1935, Hargan; extant. Fido: a frequent dog's, esp. a watchdog's, name: ex L. fidus, 'trustworthy'.

field marshal. The chief (of a gang, a racket): since ca. 1919: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant.

field of wheat. A street: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Recorded by Chicago May in 1928, by Convict 12627 in 1938, by M & B in 1944. Rhyming.

field worker. "Field Workers" (These include street-walkers and cheap hotel girls who pick up their men on the street, dance-halls, etc.):

Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, 1936. Not white-slave c. but j. I.e., they don't live in brothels.

fielder. A railroad brakeman: tramps': 1931; Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'In baseball the fielder is in the outfield: like the brakeman, he works at a distance from the centre of things' (Irwin).

Fields, the. Goodman's Fields, London: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin—but prob. current from at least forty years earlier; †—or no longer c.—by 1900.

fields of wheat. A variant of field of wheat.

fiend. A drug addict: since ca. 1920. BVB. Short for dope fiend.

fierce habit. "A fierce habit" meant '—the passage is valid for ca. 1898—'that a fellow had an appetite for opium and the pipe that couldn't be broken. It meant that he had been up against the stem (pipe) for a long time,' Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 1929; extant. See habit.

fifteen and seven. Glorious, 'swell', perfect: Pacific Coast: C. 20: M & B, 1944. Rhyming on in heaven or 'It's heaven!'

fifteen and two. A Jew: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Variation of Cockney three by two.

fifty cards in the deck. A dull, simple fellow: since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; by 1935, (low) s. The deck or pack is thus short of two cards: cf. English s. a shingle short.

fifty-fifty clown. 'A small-town policeman who is on duty from noon to midnight,' Ersine: since ca. 1920. See clown; half the day.

fig, n. 'The fifth and last species of base coin made in imitation of silver money of the realm, is what is called Figs or Fig Things. It is a very inferior sort of counterfeit money, of which composition however the chief part of the sixpences now in circulation are made. These sixpences are cast in moulds, and are for the most part blanché copper': 1796, P. Colquhoun, The Police of the Metropolis—drawn on by M. & R. L. Edgeworth in Practical Education, 1798, 'Figs, or figthings'; in 1800, Sessions Papers, Oct., p. 651, we hear of fig-shillings, which, however, are superior counterfeits; app. † by 1890. The term is cognate with fake, n. and adj.—2. A horse thief: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. the note towards the end of fig, v., 1.

fig, v. To steal (v.i.): 1552, Gilbert Walker, Diceplay, seems to use it as = to steal slyly, thus: 'When all other deceits fail, look which of them in play gets any store of money into his hands, he will every foot, as he draweth a hand, be figging more or less, and rather than fail, cram it and hide it in his hose, to make his gain greatest'; hence, to pick-pocket. Also as v.t.: 1552, Gilbert Walker, ibid., 'Fig a link or two'. An odd survival is this:—In 1925, Henry Leverage, in his 'Dictionary of the Underworld' (Flynn's, Jan. 24), includes the entry, 'Fig, v., To steal horses'—cf. fig, n., 2. Perhaps ex Ger. ficken, 'to strike': cf. strike, 'to steal'; cf. also:—2. To wound or shoot (a person): 1799, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, Jan., p. 93 (foot of col. 2); † by 1890. Cf. origin of sense 1.—3. The sense 'to chew tobacco' (Leverage, 1925) is low s. of the U.S.A.

fig-boy. One who practises 'the figging law' (q.v.): 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, after remarking that their chiefs call a meeting at some house or other in order to plan coups and attend to other business matters, says that 'whensoever any notable or workmanlike Stroke is stricken, though it were as farre as the North-borders, yet can the rest of the Fig-boies here resident in London, tell by whom this worthy Act was plaid'; app. † by 1660.

fig thing. See fig, n.

figary. A notion, idea, plan: May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman, 'I take a figary to hop a rattler'; by 1940, s. Either ex I figure (I estimate, I believe, or think) or ex vagary.

figdean. To kill: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell, 1859; by 1890, † in England. Perhaps a disguise-elaboration of fig, v., 2; possibly, however, ex Fr. figer.

figg is the adj., in Gilbert Walker, corresponding to fig, v. E.g., figg boys, pickpockets.

figg loy is a variant, C. 16, of figging law. Gilbert Walker, 1552. Influenced by Fr. loi.

figger. A pickpocket: 1552, G. Walker, Dice-play, 'They be but petty figgers and unlessoned lads that have such ready passage to the gallows'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, applies figger to that boy who assists a 'diver' (q.v.); so too does Grose, 1785—but the term may well have been † long before 1785. Ex fig, v.—2. A rare form of fagger: late C. 18–19. Current in U.S.A. by 1859—see Matsell's Vocabulum.

figging, adj. Esp. in:— figging law. Pickpocketry: 1552, Gilbert Walker, Diceplay, 'Figging law, pick-purse craft'; 1591, Robert Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, details the terms proper to the craft—

'The Cutpurse, a Nip
He that is halfe with him, the Snap
The knife, the Cuttle bounge
The picke pocket, a Foin
He that faceth the man [the victim], the Stale Taking the purse, Drawing Spying of him, Smoaking
The purse, the Bong
The monie, the Shels
The Act doing, striking';

1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, repeats this list but offers three variations—the second is 'the Snap or the Cloyer'; the pickpocket 'is called a Foist'; the spying 'is called Smoaking or Boiling'; Dekker interestingly adds: 'These schollers of the Figging lawe, are infinite in number, their Colledge is great, their orders many, and their degrees (which are given to them by the Seniors of the house) very ancient, but very abominable. The language which they speak is none of those which came in at the confusion of Tongues, for neither infidell nor Christian (that is honest) understandes it, but the Dialect is such and so crabbed, that seven yeeres study is little enough to reach to the bottome of it, and to make it run off glib from the tongue: by meanes of this Gibrish, they know their owne nation when they meete, albeit they never sawe one another before (As if a whole kingdom were theirs) they allot such countries'—i.e., districts—to this Band of Foists, such townes to those, and such a City to so many Nips.' Grose, 1785, has figging law, but the term was prob. † by 1700; and Matsell's inclusion of the term means precisely nothing.

figging(-)lay, the. The successor to figging law, q.v.: ca. 1790–1870. The Individual, Nov. 8, 1836, 'Come the fawney-rig, the figging-lay'.

fight a lock. 'Lock. A scheme, a mode. I must fight that lock; I must try that scheme': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; † by 1900. See lock, 5, and cf. cut a lock.

fight cocum. See cocum.

fight nob-work. See nob-work, fight.

fighting cove; fighting gill. A boxer: perhaps orig. c., but prob. always pugilistic s. Pierce Egan, Boxiana, I, 1818, has the latter; op. cit., II, 1818, the former.

figner is an error in Matsell for figger, 2.

figthing = fig thing (see fig, n.).

figure = figger, 2 = fagger, q.v. Potter, 1797; Andrewes, 1809; Sinks of London, 1848.

figure dancer. 'One who alters figures on bank notes, converting tens to hundreds': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—witness Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; app. † by 1920. He makes the figures dance to an attractive tune.

figure eight. A feigned agony or fit: drug addicts': since ca. 1925: 1934, Convict (see quot'n at cart-wheel, 2); extant. Ex the form and posture into which the addict throws himself, the vbl phase being do a figure eight: BVB, 1942.

figure six, a Cockney style (male) of hair-dressing: not c. but s.

filch, n. A staff; esp. that carried by an 'abram cove': 1612, Dekker, O per se O, describes these beggars as carrying 'a good Filch (or Staffe) of growne Ash, or else Hazell, in his Famble (in his Hand)'; ibid., concerning vagabonds active in the provinces, 'Every one of them carryes a short staffe in his hand, which is called a Filch, having in the Nab or head of it, a Ferme (. . . a hole) into which, upon any piece of service, when he goes a Filching, he putteth a hoake or yron, with which hooke hee angles at a window in the dead of night, for shirts, smockes, or any other linnen or woollen: and for that reason is the staffe tearmed a Filch'; 1665, R. Head; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1810. Perhaps ex the v. If, however, the n. is the earlier, the origin is obscure: a dial. original may be surmised, for app. it is not a Gypsy word.

filch, v. In 1566, Harman has 'to fylche, to beate, to stryke, to robbe', but in the edition of 1573, 'to fylche' is defined simply as 'to robbe'; the usual sense is, to steal; for the semantics, cf. strike, to steal. 1566, Harman, 'We wyll fylche some duddes of the Ruffemans'; ibid., 'He fylcht the Cofe'—the fellow—'without any fylch man'; 1592, R. Greene, A Disputation, 'You are not good Lifts . . . to filche a boulte of Satten or Velvet'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands (Martin Mark-All), reverts to the 'beat' sense; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E. ('steal'); 1707, J. Shirley (filsh); the term must have > s. by ca. 1720 (and S.E. by 1830 or so), for in 1725 A New Canting Dict. lists it among those c. terms which 'we have insensibly adopted . . . into our Vulgar Tongue', others being bilk, booze, flog, queer, rhino, rum. Origin obscure; but if the n. is the earlier, then the n. is the imm. origin.

filch, on the. See on the filch.

filch (or fylch) man. See filchman.

filcher (a petty thief). Its use by John Higgins in The Nomenclator, 1585, makes one ask whether it were ever c.; certainly it must have been S.E. by 1620 or soon after. The analogy of the verb and that of filchman, however, do indicate a c. origin and the probability of a c. status until some years after the turn of the century; B.E., 1698, classifies it as c., but it must have ceased being c. long before that.—2. A thief using a 'filch': 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; † by 1830. See filch, n.—3. A misprint for flicker, n.: 1735 ed. of The Triumph of Wit.

filching, n. and adj. Thieving, thievish: c. until ca. 1600, slang in C. 17, then S.E. See filch, v.

filching cove; filching mort. A male, a female thief: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; Grose; prob. † by 1850. Ex filch, v.

filching staffe is merely Dekker's literary variation—O per se O, 1612—of filch, n.

filchman. A staff; a truncheon; esp. a hooked staff wherewith to steal articles from windows, hedges, and other such accessibilities: 1562, Awdeley (see first quot'n at upright man); 1566, Harman, 'He fyleht the Cofe, with out any fylch man'; 1608, Dekker in The Belman of London, applies it esp. to that short truncheon which an 'upright man' carries as a staff of office; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, defines it as 'a cudgell or staffe'; † by 1690. See filch, n.; the -man is the c. suffix that occurs mostly as -mans.

file, n. A pickpocket: 1665, R. Head (see bulk and file); 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, 'A File is a Pickpocket, a Bulk is his came-Rogue, who goes alwaies with the File, for he can do nothing without the File, wherefore he is subject to the File, and must do what the File would have him, so that the poor Bulk is beaten many times, for the File doth cause the Bulk to quarrel and fight, but he is not one thats to part them, for while they are fighting he is busy picking their pockets that stands to see them fight, or go about to part them: so having got what he can away he goes and leaves the Bulk to come off as well as he can . . . The File will never jostle you' if he is working with an accomplice; 1698, B.E.; ambiguously J. Shirley, 1707, says that 'the File is the same with the Diver, tho' for the most part he goes without the Bulk'; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'Files, alias Night-walking Pickpockets'; in 1725, A New Canting Dict. makes 'files' the 35th Order of Rogues; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'The term is now obsolete'. But it seems to have been current in U.S.A. since ca. 1810: 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York, where it is defined as a pickpocket's assistant; and Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859—the actual pickpocket; and The New York Slang Dictionary, 1880—the pickpocket himself; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Like "wipe" and "tool" used by every crook and many policemen'; extant. Perhaps ex the instrument; or imm. ex file, v., 1.—2. Hence, orig. loosely, cheating; only in (go) on the file: ca. 1740–1830. See file, on the.—3. (A special application of sense 1.) One of a gang of three persons engaged in shoplifting: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; app. † by 1810.—4. A sharper (cf. sense 2); 'a deep one': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum (at green and at suck, v.); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A person who has had a long course of experience in the arts of fraud, so as to have become an adept, is termed an old file upon the town'; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV; † by 1890.

file, v. To steal, or steal from; to petty-steal: 1659, Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, 'If he chance to espy a . . . cloak, hang in a shop any thing likely to be fil'd, it will go hard if it escape him'; 1698, B.E., 'To Rob, or Cheat' and, at cly, 'Filed a cly, c. Pickt a Pocket'; 1814, Alex. Smith; 1721, N.B., A Collection of Tryals, III; 1724, Harper, 'Fileing of a Rumbo Ken', glossed as 'Robbing a Pawn-broker's Shop'; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1859 (witness H, 1st ed.). Prob. ex S.E. file, 'to use a file upon'.—2. To be the pickpocket working with a 'bulk': 1698, B.E. (at tout), 'Do you Bulk and I'll File, c. if you'll jostle him, I will pick his Pocket'; † by 1830 at latest.—3. To cheat: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1859 (H, 1st ed.).

file, on the; go on the file. Cheating; to go cheating, to cheat: John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Tobin left our Company, and went for West-chester on the File', the phrase being glossed as 'A Cant Word for Cheating'; † by 1850, at latest. See file, n.

file and buttock. 'A lewd woman picking the pocket of her cull [or victim] whilst in the act of coition': 1797, Potter; app. † by 1890. See file, n., 1, and buttock.

file(-)cloy; file-cly. A pickpocket: 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'The sixth is a File-cloy, that not one Hick spares'; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, where it is spelt file-cly; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (also foyl-cloy); 1785, Grose; † by 1850. See file, v., 1, and cly, n., 2.—2. Hence, any thief; a rogue: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1850.

file(-)lay, the. The art and practice of being a 'file': 1725 (see quot'n at sneak, n.).

file-lifter. A pickpocket: ca. 1670–1800, if the term is genuine (F & H). Properly, I think, file and lifter, 'pickpocket and shoplift'.

file the cly. To pick pockets as a livelihood: C. 18. The History of Clubs, 1745. Cf. file-cloy.

filel. A thief's hooked staff: 1785, Grose, 'Filch, or filel, a beggar's staff with an iron hook at the end to pluck clothes from a hedge or any thing out of a casement'. The term was app. current only ca. 1770–1830. Not impossibly it is an error committed by Grose; but if it is a genuine word, it may represent a disguising of filch, n.

filer. 'The Filer or Cloyer (alias) a common Theif,' Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, 1659, it being there stated that his activities range from shoplifting to cloak-snatching or button-removing; ca. 1670, Anon., The Joviall Crew, 'A Craver my Father, | A Maunder my Mother, | A Filer my Sister, | A Filcher my Brother, | A Canter my Uncle | That car'd not for Pelfe; | A Lifter my Aunt, a Begger my selfe; | In white wheaten straw, when their bellies were full, | Then I was begot, between Tinker and Trull. (Chorus) And therefore a Begger, a Begger I'll be, | For none hath a spirit so jocond as he'; prob. † by 1750, the entry in Sinks of London, 1848, being unreliable. Ex file, v.

filing. 'The great Trade or knowing Art called Filing, that is, picking Pockets,' John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, but prob. in use from as early as 1710; † by 1880 at the latest. Ex file, v.

filing a cly. Pickpocketry: 1734, C. Johnson, The Most Famous Highwaymen, Murderers, Street-Robbers; † by 1890. See file, v., 1, and cly, n., 2.

filing lay, the. Pocket-picking, pickpocketry: 1743, Fielding, The Life of Mr Jonathan Wild, 'D—n me, I am committed for the Filing-Lay, man, and we shall be both nubbed together'; † by 1850 at latest. See file, v., 1 and 2, and lay, n., 2.

fill. See fill in, quot'n of 1914.

fill, give a. See give a fill.

fill a blanket. To roll a cigarette: esp. among convicts: 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; extant. See blanket.

fill in. 'To become one of a party', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; ibid., p. 261, 'I filled in with a yeg mob . . . I met a gang of safe burglars whom I joined'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, who cite only the simpler form—fill; 1924, G. C. Henderson, 'Gambling term, To join in game'; by 1930, s.—2. Hence, v.t.: 'To fill him in—to add an extra man for a special job,' D. W. Maurer, The Writer's Digest, Oct. 1931; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 'Add a member to a mob'; extant. Perhaps 'to fill in (complete) with (a person)'.

fill-out, n. 'This fillout is th' same as th' gay cat in th' jug mob and his biz is to locate an' spot every gumshoe an' moll dick so you has to get wise to who is who,' Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1926; extant. Ex the v.

fill out, v. 'To locate valuables or places worth while to rob': 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; extant. To fill out, or complete, one's preliminary information.—2. 'Obtaining information through diplomacy,' Life in Sing Sing, 1904; ob. Cf. sense 1.—3. To join a gang and bring it up to strength: March 19, 1938, Godfrey Irwin (letter); extant. A variant of fill in.

filled blanket. A cigarette: convicts': Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest, John Caldwell, 'Patter of the Prisons'; extant. Ex fill a blanket.

filler. One of several large coals placed, for show and fraud, in the mouth of a sack: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage—see the quot'n at legering law. By Dryden's heyday this sense had merged into the more gen. S.E. sense: that which fills a gap or is a make-weight. It is c. only as used by 'legers'.

fillet of veal. A house of correction; a prison: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; app. † by 1920. It rhymes on steel.—2. A wheel: Pacific Coast of U.S.A.: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

filling station. A lunch-room; a speakeasy: since ca. 1920; by 1935, sense 1 was s.; by 1945, sense 2 was ob. Ersine, 1933. A gastronomic pun.

filly. A daughter: 1891, F & H; by 1930, no longer c.—nor much used either. A corruption of feelee or a humorous pronunciation of Fr. fille.—2. A woman of questionable morals: U.S.A. 1914, Jackson & Hellyer—but Godfrey Irwin doubts both the sense and the classification as c. Easy to ride.

filsh is J. Shirley's mis-spelling in The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 1707, of filch, v.

filch; filchman. See filch; filchman.

fin. A five-pound bank-note; in C. 20, in U.S.A. and Canada, five dollars (esp. as a note): 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England (see quot'n at snide-pitching); Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'The same fence fell for buying two finns (5 l. notes)'; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1891, F & H; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; Aug. 23, 1930, Liberty; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, W. R. Burnett, The Giant Swing; by 1935, low s. in U.S.A. A shortening of finif.—2. The sense 'a hand', included both in Jackson & Hellyer and in Casey, The Gay Cat—these two works appeared in 1914—has always been s., even in U.S.A.—3. (Ex sense 1.) A five-year term of imprisonment: 1925, Leverage; June 21, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens, 'I'd do a fin for auto banditry'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; 1938, Castle (fin alone; also fin up, from five years to life); extant.

find, v. To steal: 1851, implied in finder; 1865, T. Archer, The Pauper, The Thief, and the Convict; 1884, James Greenwood, The Little Ragamuffins, "' . . . Prowlin', sneaking, makin'—Pinchin', findin', gleanin', some coves calls it '"'; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago; little used after ca. 1910. Euphemistic.

find with a biscuit. See biscuit, find with a.

finder. A thief; esp. as in: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, where it is applied to boys and young men that, with a bag, infest the meat, fish, and game markets, begging food where possible and stealing whenever they get a chance; 1859, H, 'One who finds bacon and meat at the market before they are lost, i.e. steals them'; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1929–31, Kernôt (U.S.A.), 'A young thief'; slightly ob. See find.—2. Investigator; spy: 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow (see quot'n at spot, n., 1); more prob. police s. than c.—3. (Ex sense 1.) One who, in advance, reconnoitres persons and buildings, esp. for a yegg: U.S.A.: 1924, George S. Dougherty, The Criminal; 1928, J. K. Ferrier, Crooks and Crime (chapter XVII, 'Crime in the United States'); Jan. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, E. D. Sullivan; extant.—4. 'Finder. One who follows up a dropper and finds "lost articles"', John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920.

fine, n. A term of transportation as a convict: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1859, derivatively, any term of hard labour—Matsell's Vocabulum (New York); 1891, F & H; by 1930, † in Britain; by 1940, ob. in U.S.A. Ex the S.E. sense, 'a penalty in money'.

fine, v. To confine: 1811, Lex. Bal. (see quot'n at pear-making); 1891, F & H, 'To sentence' (a man) to prison; †—as c., at least—by 1930. Possibly at first a coll., it yet seems to have been used mostly by, and in, the underworld.

fine and dandy. Brandy: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; prob. adopted ex Cockney s.

fine as silk. 'In good condition', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; ob. Silk has always appealed to criminals, with whom it seems to synonymize 'excellence'.

fine-draw. 'To get at a secret', The London Guide, 1818; † by 1890. To draw out finely or delicately.

fine ken. A house at which it is profitable to solicit alms: vagrants': 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; ob. See ken, 1.

fine wirer. 'Long-fingered thieves expert in emptying ladies' pockets—fine wirers': 1869, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; extant—though rather ob.

fine work. Buying off or persuading a swindled man not to prosecute: 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police, 'The friends of the swindlers get in their "fine work", as it is termed'; extant. A matter of some delicacy.

fine-worker. A pickpocket: late C. 19–20; ob. Arthur Henry Lewis, The Boss, 1903. Cf. prec. term.

finger, n. 'A woman: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 320); † by 1920. Possibly a disguise-blend of Fr. femme + jomer; more prob. a shortening of finger smith, 1.—2. A policeman: American tramps' and, in C. 20, criminals': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft (glossary), 'Finger, uniformed policeman' (synonymous with flatty, 4); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, in the nuance, 'investigator'; 1914, P. & T. Casey (fingers—prob. a printer's error); 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (with variant finger fatty—? f. flatty); 1925, Leverage, 'A detective'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; ob. 'From the policeman's supposed love of grabbing offenders' (Flynt).—3. Hence, an informer: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1933, Ersine; extant.—4. A pickpocket: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Short for finger-smith, 2.—5. 'The café owner had taken me for a professional finger, one of the scouts of the underworld who tips off its raiders to live bankrolls and easy victims, or information service which nets the finger ten per cent of the loot,' Al Hurwitch in Flynn's, May 28, 1932: U.S.A.: 1940, Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely; extant. Short for finger man, 1.—6. A term of contempt for man or woman: convicts': since ca. 1925: 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; 1933, George Ingram, Stir; by 1934 (Philip Allingham, Cheapjack), it was pitchmen's s. Ex sense 1, perhaps influenced by sense 3.—7. An acetylene blow-lamp: 1934, David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live; extant.—8. That member of a kidnapping gang 'who does the scouting preliminary to the actual snatch,' Tracy French in Flynn's, Dec. 29, 1934: U.S.A.: since the late 1920's. Ex sense 5.—9. A fingerprint: since ca. 1910: Jan. 25, 1935, Flynn's, Jack Callahan, 'No half-smart crook leaves his "finger" behind him at the scene of his crime'; extant.—10. Also—the orig. form—finger of stuff: a rubber, drug-containing condom either swallowed or concealed in the rectum: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. Cf. keister plant.

finger, v. The sense 'to take the finger prints of' (a person), recorded by Leverage, 1925, is police s., not c.—2. To pick pockets: 1925, Leverage; extant. The thief fingers the pocket—and its contents.—3. To arrest: 1929, Charles Francis Coe, Hooch, 'When a single bootlegger is fingered, he can't reach us'—the bootlegging higher-ups; 'because he won't even know us, or where the booze comes from'; 1935, Charles F. Coe, G-Man; slightly ob.—4. To inform on (a person): Dec. 13, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville, 'Frank Lee, wreaking his revenge, had "fingered" many, many dealers to the Feds'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, who also records the nuance 'to testify in court'; Dec. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; extant.—5. To point out, to identify; to declare to be trustworthy: drug traffic: Dec. 20, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube; 1934, Rose; extant.—9. To deliver; to give: May 21, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch, 'I'll . . . make him finger the stuff back to you'; extant. A deliberate variation of 'to hand (over, back, etc.)'.—7. To act as prospector or finder to a gang or to another criminal (esp. a burglar or a safe-blower): May 28, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; extant. Cf. senses 5, 8 and 10.—8. To mark a person down for revenge, esp. for death: Dec. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, '"Mutt Prance has got me fingered," she whispered. "They're going to kill me"''; extant. To put a finger on—or to turn down the thumbs in the traditional gesture of condemnation to death.—9. To plan the details of (a coup): Dec. 4, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, 'Duke Lathrop is fingering the job'; by 1940, British, as in David Hume, Come Back for the Body, 1945. To point out the details as though with a finger.—10. To get information about (someone) before kidnapping him: 1938, J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding; extant. Prob. ex senses 8 and 9.

finger, get the. To be arrested: 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch; extant. Cf. finger, v., 3.

finger and thumb. Rum: orig. (ca. 1845–70), beggars' rhyming s., as Mayhew makes clear at p. 418, vol. I, of his London Labour and the London Poor. (Cf. heap of coke, Jack Surpass, and yard of tripe.) 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857, also classifies it as c.; he cites the less gen. form, finger-thumb. In late C. 19–20 U.S.A., esp. on the Pacific Coast, it is c.: M & B, 1944.—2. A road; the highway: tramps' rhyming s.: 1891, F & H; extant. Rhyming on drum, n., 2.

finger better. American gamblers' c. for 'a fellow who wants to bet on credit, and indicates the favourite card by pointing to it with his finger': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; app. † by 1900.

finger fatty. See finger, n., ref. of 1924.

finger in one's mouth, go around with one's. See go around . . .

finger louse. An informer to the police: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. An elaboration of finger, n., 3.

finger man. That gang member who obtains precise information: March 15, 1930, Flynn's, John Wilstach, 'Martin was knocked off . . . It was thought Butch Swang'—a rival gangster—'had brought in the finger men to put Martin on the spot'; Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke; May 14, 1932, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; Dec. 10, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; July 27, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1936, Herbert Corey; by 1937 (David Hume, Cemetery First Stop!) it was current in England; 1937, Courtney R. Cooper, Here's to Crime; 1940, Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely; 1943, David Hume, Dishonour among Thieves; extant. Cf. finger, n., 8.—2. Hence, 'one who points out victims for a kidnapping gang,' Rose, 1934; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; extant.—3. The sense 'safe-blower' (Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough, 1934) is prob. a mistake. It should be 'inside man for—an employee supplying information to—a gang of bank robbers', as in Convict 2nd, 1938.

finger mob. A gang that operates under police protection: since ca. 1925. Rose, 1934. The police can 'put a finger' on its members at any time.

finger of stuff. See finger, n., 10.

finger on, put the. See put the finger on.

finger-print. A signature: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant. To leave one's finger-prints is tantamount to leaving a signed note; hence . . .

finger(-)smith. A midwife: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1889, B & L; app. † by 1900. Ex digital assistance.—2. A thief; esp. a pick-pocket: 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, J. H. Horsley; 1891, F & H; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights on Criminal Matters; 1929–31, Kernôt (U.S.A.); app. † by 1945 in Britain. Ex digital skill.

finger the dough. To beg successfully for dough, i.e., money: tramps' and beggars': 1923, Melbourne Garahan, Stiffs; extant.

finger-thumb. See finger and thumb.

fingerer. (See also cheater.) This term, which was current mid-C. 16–early 17 and which may = 'one who fingers' or, much more prob., derive ex L. fingerere, 'to feign', is defined and explained, first and best, by Awdeley in 1562:—'A CHEATOUR OR FINGERER. These commonly be such kinde of idle Vacabondes as scarcely a man shall discern, they go so gorgeously, sometime with waiting men, and sometime without. Their trade is to walke in such places, where as gentlemen & other worshipfull Citizens do resorte, as at Poules [St Paul's], or at Christes Hospital; and sometime at ye Royal exchange. These have very many acquaintaunces, yea, and for the most part will acquaint them selves with every man, and fayne a society, in one place or other. But chiefly they will seeke their acquaintance of such (which they have learned by diligent enquiring where they resort) as have receyved some porcioun of money of their friends, as yong Gentlemen which are sent to London to study the lawes, or els some yong Marchant man or other kynde of Occupier, whose friendes hath given them a stock of mony to occupy withall. When they have thus found out such a pray, they will find the meanes by theyr familiarity, as very curteously to bid him to breakfast at one place or other, where they are best acquainted, and closely amonge themselves will appoint one of their Fraternity, which they call a Fyngerer, an olde beaten childe, not only in such deceites, but also such a one as by his age is painted out with gray heares, wrinkled face, crooked back, and most commonly lame, as it might seeme with age, yea and such a one as to shew a simplicity, shall weare a homely cloke and hat scarce worth .vi. d. This nimble fingred knight (being appointed to this place) commeth in as one not knownen of these Cheatours, but as unawares shal sit down at the end of the bord where they syt, & call for his peny pot of wine, or a pinte of Ale, as the place serveth. This sitting as it were alone, mumbling on a crust, or some such thing, these other yonckers wil finde some kind of mery talke with him, some times questioning wher he dwelleth, & sometimes enquiring what trade he useth, which commonly he telleth them he useth husbandry: & talking thus merely, at last they aske him, how sayest thou, Father, wylt thou play for thy breakfast with one of us, that we may have some pastime as we syt? Thys olde Karle making it straunge at the first saith: My maysters, ich am an old man, and halfe blinde, and can skyl of very few games, yet for that you seeme to be such good Gentlemen, as to profer to play for that of which you had no part, but onely

I my selfe, and therefore of right ich am worthy to pay for it, I shal with al my hart fulfyl your request. And so falleth to play, sometimes at Cardes & sometime at dice. Which through his counterfaiit simplicity in the play sometimes over counteth himself, or playeth sometimes against his wyl, so as he would not, & then counterfaiiteth to be angry, and falleth to swearing, & so leeing that, profereth to play for a shillyng or two. The other therat having good sport, seming to mocke him, falleth againe to play, and so by their legerdemane, & counterfaiiting, winneth ech of them a shilling or twain, & at last whispereth the yong man in the eare to play with hym also, that ech one might have a fling at him. This yong man for company falleth againe to play also with the sayd Fyngerer, and winneth as the other did which when had' loste a noble or .vi. s. maketh as though he had lost al his mony, and falleth to a intreating for parte thereof againe to bring him home, which the other knowing his mind and intent, stoutely denieth and jesteth, & scoffeth at him. This Fingerer seeming then to be in a rage, desireth them as they are true gentlemen, to tarry till he fetcheth more store of money, or else to point some place where they may meete. They seeming greedy hereof, promiseth faithfully and clappeth handes so to meete. They thus ticklyng the young man in the eare, willeth him to make as much money as he can, and they wil make as much as they can, and consent as though they wil play booty against him. But in the ende, they so use the matter, that both the young man leeseth his part, and, as it seemeth to him, they leeing theirs also, and so maketh as though they would fal together by the eares with this fingerer, which by one wyle or other at last conveyeth him selfe away, & they as it were raging lyke mad bedlams, one runneth one way, an other an other way, leaving the loser indeede all alone. Thuse these Cheatours at their accustomed hosteries meete closely together, and there receive ech one his part of this their vile spoyle. Of this fraternity there be that be called helpers, which commonly haunt tavernes or ale-houses, and commeth in as men not acquainted with none in the companye, but spying them at any game, wil byd them God spede and God be at their game, and will so place him selfe that he will shew his fellow sygnes and tokens, without speech commonly, but some time with far fetched wordes, what cardes he hath in his hand, and how he may play against him. And those betwene them both getteth money out of the others purse.'

fingerine. A female pickpocket: 1925, Leverage; not very gen.; by 1945, ob. Ex finger, n., 4.

fingers or fingy. A tramp or hobo train-rider that has lost one or more fingers: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, quoting Leon Livingston (1918); 1931, Godfrey Irwin (fingy); extant.

finger's end. A ten per cent. share: racketeers': 1929–31, Kernôt; 1930, Burke, 'Say, you gees, I want more than the finger's end on this'; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1941, Maurer; extant. An elaboration of end; finger's = fingers = one's ten 'fingers', hence the ten per cent.

finfy. See fingers.

finif or finnif; rarely finith; fin(n)uf; finnip or finnup. 'If he finds any "finnips" (5 l. notes) in the skin or purse, he gives them to Nelson to fence': 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1839, Brandon, who adds double finnip, a £10 note; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III (finnip; double finnip); ibid., 'Single finnip—five-pound note'; by 1850, also low, esp. Cockney s.—Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 1851, 'Upper Benjamins, built on a downey plan, a monarch to half a finnuff'; 1857, Snowden; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus' (finuff); 1859, H (finuf; double finuff, a £10 note); by 1859, current in America for 5 dollars (finnif and finniff: Matsell); 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1887, Arthur Griffiths, Locked Up (as finnup); 1887, Baumann, 'finnuf, finuff . . . (aus dem deutschen fünf) Fünfpfundnote'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain (U.S.A.); 1925, Leverage; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's; April 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn (finnick); 1931, Godfrey Irwin (finif); 1931, Damon Runyon; and hundreds of times since then. Ex Ger. fünf, five.—2. Hence, (a prison sentence or term of) five years: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; extant—though slightly ob.

finif (or finith) to fere. Odds of 5 to 4: racing: C. 20; by 1935, or so, it was (low) racing s. Corruption of Ger. fünf and vier: cf. exes to fere, q.v.

finishing academy. 'A private brothel, where a staff of young (not common) prostitutes are kept on hire' before they go on the streets: C. 19. Recorded by B & L, 1889, at academy. With a pun on S.E. finishing school.

fink, n. An unreliable confederate: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice (in nuance 'petty criminal'); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Any questionable person'; 1933, Eagle (nuance: 'a traitor'); Feb. 17, 1934, Flynn's; 1934, Howard N. Rose; May 2, 1936, Flynn's (an inferior tramp); 1938, Damon Runyon, Furthermore; by 1940, low s. Perhaps a thinning of funk, 'a timorous person'.—2. Hence, an informer to the police: 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; Aug. 2, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Irwin; Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; April 8, 1933, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1933, Ersine, 'A rat, especially one who continually reports minor matters to the authorities'; 1934, Convict; 1935, David Lamson; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; Feb. 27, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; March 19, 1938, Flynn's; 1938, Castle; 1940, Raymond Chandler; extant.—3. Hence, one who takes a striker's job, but does no work: mostly tramps': 1931, Stiff; 1931, Irwin; 1934, Rose, 'Guard at a strike'; Dec. 4, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, 'I was a fink—a strikebreaker'; by 1938, industrial s.

fink, v. To inform on (a person), to 'squeal': 1925, Leverage; Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens, 'I knew Suds Carew had finked. I knew that that cell house was lousy with screws'; 1933, Ersine; 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; 1935, James Spenser, The Five Mutineers, 'His'—an informer's—'procedure was called "finking"': March 26, 1938, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, 'He had a job he wanted me to fink on'; extant. Ex the n., sense 2.

fink caper; cat caper; rat caper. 'A petty or contemptible trick,' BVB, 1942: since ca. 1925, Ersine in 1933 defining all three terms as 'a mean or petty trick'. See the four nouns. Hence:—

2. A small burglary or other robbery: 1933, Ersine (at cat caper and fink caper).

finn. See fin, reference of 1879.

finnif. A variant (e.g., in Ersine, 1933) of finif.

finnio. A £5 note: 1937, David Hume, Halfway to Horror; extant. A perversion of finif.

finnuf or finnup. See finif.

finny, 'a funeral': 1834, W. H. Harrison, Rookwood: the term is suspect and almost certainly not c.

finuff. See finif.

fi'penny or fippenny. A clasp-knife: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'I've made my fi'penny as sharp as a razor'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1920. Ex the cost, ca. 1800, of an inferior pocket-knife.

fire, n. Danger: 1859, Matsell, '"This place is all on fire; I must pad like a bull or the cops will nail me," every body is after me in this place; I must run like a locomotive or the officers will arrest me'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1929–31, Kernôt; Nov. 15, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; slightly ob. 'Fire is a good servant but a bad master.'

fire, v.i. To inject drugs: addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. Prompted by bang, n., 1, and v., 3.

fire and faggot, go upon. To pretend to set fire to a barn and, while the occupants of the farmhouse are outside seeking to save their hay, etc., to steal from the house itself: 1745, The History of Clubs. This self-explanatory term seems not to have survived the C. 18.

fire boy. A railroad fireman (or stoker): tramps': 1931, Godfrey Irwin; only doubtfully c.—and, if at all, then only in the North and West. 'So called from the name applied to these workers in the South' (Irwin).

fire bug or firebug. An incendiary; esp. a professional one: 1872, O. W. Holmes, and 1881, Mark Twain (D.A.E.); 1903, Josiah Flynt, The Rise of Roderick Cloud, '"Say that first-class firebugs want double price when people 'a' got to be burned up"''; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; March 13, 1926, Flynn's. But the term is s., not c., despite Flynt and Henderson.

fire-eater. 'In Old Cant a quick worker,' F & H, 1891: the sense is correct but the classification is wrong, for the term is printers' s.: Savage, 1841.

fire(-)lurker. 'One who goes about begging for [money to make good a] loss by fire': 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants, where the full procedure of this type of 'lurking' is described, the 'lurker' usually carrying a subscription-book; † by 1930. See lurker.

fire-plug. 'A large ration of opium,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic: since ca. 1925. A plug or pellet for smoking.

fire(-)prigger. Under the heading 'Fire-Priggers', George Parker, in A View of Society, 1781, writes: 'No beast of prey is so noxious to Society, or so destitute of feeling, as these wretches. The Tyger who leaps on the unguarded passenger will fly from the fire, and the traveller shall be protected by it; while these wretches who attend on fires, and rob the sufferers under pretence of coming to give assistance; and assuming the style and manner of neighbours, take advantage of distress and confusion. Such wretches have a more eminent claim to the detestation of Society, than almost any other of those who prey upon it'; 1785, Grose; prob. † by 1870. Under the cover of a fire, he steals.

fire-proofed. 'Having made peace with the world before dying,' Ersine, 1933. Cf. :—

fire-proofer. 'A racketeer who preys on religious people,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; 1933, Eagle; extant. With a pun on church-going as a form of insurance against hell-fire.

fire ship, 'a Pockey Whore' (B.E., 1698), is not c. but low s.

firebug. See fire bug.

fireman. One who, from kidney trouble, wets his bunk: mostly convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant.

fireworks. Gun play: 1931, Godfrey Irwin: on the borderland between c. and journalistic s.—ex World War No. 1, when the term was frequently employed.

firm. A 'fixer' and his 'mob': 1936, Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld; extant.

first-aid. 'Attorney who waits for his fee,' Kernôt, 1929–31; extant. Prompt assistance: prompt settlement.

first and seconds, the. Some card-sharpping trick, mentioned but not defined by Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 418 (pub. in 1851); alluded-to, in 1894, by J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats, (at p. 52 and) at p. 57, where to deal seconds appears to be 'keeping back a good card' for one's second turn; ibid., 118–21, for a description of the art of dealing seconds. By 1890, I think, these terms had > j.

first friend, the. 'Person to whom a prisoner is paroled,' Howard N. Rose, 1934: convicts': since ca. 1920.

first-hand man. In the business of forging coins and notes and the disposal thereof, the 'first-hand man' is the wholesaler: counterfeiters' c. and, soon, police s.: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective. He is the seller at first hand, the retailers selling only at second hand.

First of May, the. A tramp that has newly joined a 'push'; an inexperienced tramp: tramps': 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Adopted ex circus s. for a new employee; the circus season begins on or about the First of May. (Irwin.)

first-past-the-post operators, 'Men who procure the name of the winning horse in a race before it is flashed to the bookmaker. They make bets on the winning horse by a margin of seconds, and, of course, collect' (John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928), is sporting and police s.—not c.

first-timer. See time, to do.

fish, n. A seaman: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1900. Like a fish, he lives on the sea.—2. A convict; in C. 20, always a new arrival in prison: 1871 (implied in fresh fish); ca. 1886 (implied in big fish); 1893 (implied in new fish); 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 'The new arrival, or fish, is always an object of interest to the other prisoners'; 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, James Spenser, Limey; 1934, Convict; 1935, David Lamson; 1937, Charles Prior; 1938, Michael Martin in C. R. Shaw, Brothers in Crime; but by this date it had > gen. prison s.—witness Don Castle, Do Your Own Time.—3. As a collective, fish is 'thieves': 1925, Leverage; but this sense is suspect. As 'customer(s)' at a fair, it is carnival s.

—4. A dollar: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1933, Ersine; Aug. 5, 1933, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'I lose at least fifty fish on it'; Nov. 3, 1934, Flynn's, Richard B. Sale; July 25, 1936, Flynn's, Convict 12627; by 1937, journalistic s. Short for fish-skin.—5. (Ex sense 2.) In commercial c., a fish has, since ca. 1920, been a sucker, especially one who falls for the stocks-and-shares swindle known as 'the wire'. In, e.g., Ersine, 1933, and in a New York newspaper's article on 'The Wire': July 16, 1937.

fish, v. To search: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Fish his Cly for his Bit'; search his Pocket for his Purse'; 1821, Sessions Papers, Dec., p. 16, 'A man behind him said, "You have been fishing for this"' (a stolen handkerchief); app. † by 1860. Either fish in or an error for fisk.—2. To commit cunnilingus: U.S.A.: 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex low American s. fish, the female genitals.

fish, clean the; fish, feed the. See clean the fish.

fish, stam. See stam flash, reference of 1848.

fish and shrimp. A prostitute's bully: white-slavers of the Pacific Coast: C. 20. BVB, 1942; M & B, 1944. Rhyming on pimp.

fish bull. A prison warder new to his work: convicts': C. 20. Castle, 1938. See fish, n., 2, and bull, n., 5 and 7.

fish clothes. A new convict's clothes: C. 20.

fish-eye. A diamond: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; slightly ob. Ironical: a fish's eye is dull, not diamond-bright.

fish-eyes, 'tapioca pudding': s. not c. Hargan, 1935.

fish(-)hooks, 'fingers': not c. but low s.—2. Irish whiskey: 1889 (see glisten of fish-hooks); ob. For semantics, cf. the remark at liver-destroyer.

fish(-)oil. Cod-liver oil: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1920, coll.

fish-skin, 'a dollar': on the borderline between c. and low s. Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 1936.

fish tank. The cell in which a new arrival is kept for the first fortnight of his imprisonment: convicts': since ca. 1920: 1934, Convict. Ex fish, n., 2; tank, because while there, he learns to 'swim'.

fisher. A police officer, esp. a detective: 1925, Leverage; extant. He 'fishes' for information and clues.

fisherman. A confidence-trickster: 1936, Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld; extant. A self-profiting optimist; cf. fishing season.

fishery. 'Missions along the main stem,' Stiff, 1931; tramps': since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Fishery.—A mission in a poor neighbourhood'; extant. Fishing for souls, not soles.

fishes. Pearls: 1925, Leverage; extant. By a folk-etymologizing account of the origin of pearls.

fishing. Theft (from, e.g., a post office) with a hook, or some similar means: March 3, 1908, Sessions Papers, 'Larceny of a post letter from a post office . . . The method adopted by [the] prisoners was that known as "fishing"''; 1934, James Spenser, Limey Breaks In (theft of letters from a pillar-box); extant. Cf. angler, angling.—2. 'Attempting to secure anything by dubious means,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910.—3. 'The method taken by a hostile train crew to get rid of a tramp known to be riding under the cars on brake beams or "rods". A coupling pin is tied firmly to a length of bell cord, and let down from the front end of the car . . . , so that the pin bounces on the ballast and ties as the train moves. By moving the cord from one side of the car to the other, paying out the line and hauling it in, the pin plays a devil's tattoo on the entire under side of the car, and sooner or later strikes the tramp, . . . breaking his hold. . . . Merely another . . . trespasser killed by a train,' Irwin, 1931: U.S. tramps': since ca. 1912.

fishing season. 'When it is safe to pick up suckers,' P. S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 1936: esp. confidence-tricksters'. Cf. fisherman.

fisk is the earlier form of frisk, v., to search the clothes or the pocket or the purse of (a person): 1724, Defoe, The Remarkable Life of John Shepherd, 'Desiring him to Fisk him, viz., 'search him'; John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753. An † form of S.E. frisk, to move briskly. See also frisk, v.

fisno. A tip, a warning: 1893 (perhaps valid for 1845), F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, p. 412, "'A near miss he 'adn't a wired you, but that wouldn't a suited my book and I give him the fisno straight''"; app. † by 1920. The basic sense may be 'a look' (a warning look or glance): if that is so, the word perhaps derives ex physiognomy.

fit, n. Sufficient evidence to convict: New Zealand: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter); by 1940, also Australian; Baker, 1945, 'A fit, a case that can be proved against a criminal'. The evidence fits the case.

fit, v. To catch (metaphorically), to befool; to swindle: Australian c. of ca. 1850-90, then s. Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms, 1881, "'He'll get 'fitted' quite simple some day if he doesn't keep a better look out''". Cf. prec. entry.—2. V.i., 'to enjoy the favor of politicians or law officers. "That stool fits with the Chief; he can get by with anything"; Ersine: U.S.A.; since ca. 1920. Hand-and-glove.

fit house. Hospital for the criminal insane: mostly convicts': 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex the fits they tend to suffer from.

fitsy. See fitzy.

fitter. 'A fellow that fits keys to locks for burglars': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; 1865, The National Police Gazette, Oct. 7; ca. 1873 (Godfrey Irwin's dating), in Cleveland Moffett, True Detective Stories, 1897; app. English by 1889, B & L defining it as 'a locksmith who makes burglars' keys'; 1891, F & H; by 1937, † in U.S.A., says Irwin; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime; extant in Britain. Euphemistic.

fitzy or fitsy. A beggar with epilepsy: beggars': C. 20. Ben Reitman, Sister of The Road, 1941, 'Those with . . . the epilepsies "fitzies"'. Ex 'epileptic fits'.

five-acre farm. An arm: 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; by 1865, it was low rhyming s.; by 1890, †. Never so gen. as Chalk Farm.

five C note. A 500-dollar bill (bank-note): C. 20; by 1939, s. In, e.g., Howard N. Rose, 1934. See C.

five-dollar boodle-game, the. See boodle-game.

five G note. A 5000-dollar bill: C. 20. Rose, 1934.

five pennyworth. Five years' imprisonment:

1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob. Cf. seven penn'orth and:—

five specker and five spot are American variations of the next: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'Bob Pinkerton copped me out, an' I got a five spot up in Connecticut'; Sept. 22, 1928, Flynn's, Bob Davis, 'O. Henry's Prison-Made Name' (the latter); 1929, Jack Callahan (the former); March 14, 1931, Flynn's (latter); 1933, Ersine (latter); 1934, Louis Berg (latter); 1938, Castle (former); extant. See spot, n., 3, and cf. the s. sense, 'five dollars'.

five stretch. Five years' penal servitude: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; extant. See stretch, n., 4.

five win. Fivepence: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; app. † by 1850. See win, n.

fiveer. A sentence of five years' imprisonment: since ca. 1820. E.g., Sessions Papers, Sept. 9, 1896; in C. 20 Britain, low s. rather than c. Current also in U.S.A. in C. 20, but less used than five spot; e.g., M. Acklom, in The (American) Bookman, April 1919. Cf. tenner.—2. A convict with a five-years' sentence: prob. since ca. 1820. Price Warung, Tales of the Early Days, 1894.—3. A five-dollar bill: U.S.A.: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York: but prob. never other than s.

fives, bunch of. The hand (1823, Bee): low s., not c. Four fingers + one thumb.

fives going, keep one's. To be a thief, esp. a pick-pocket: ca. 1820-90. Jon Bee, 1823. Cf. prec. entry.

fix, n. A scrape, a difficult situation: despite H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 1841, this is not c.—2. Bribery, bribing; an instance thereof, a bribe: U.S. racketeers': since ca. 1920: 1930, E. D. Sullivan, Chicago Surrenders; Dec. 16, 1933, Flynn's, 'Most of [the money] had gone for lawyers and "fixes"'; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; by 1937, it was political, police, journalistic s. Ex sense 2 of the v.—3. 'One who arranges immunity,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: since the late 1920's. Damon Runyon, Take it Easy, 1938.—4. (Also fix-up.) A ration of drugs: addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. Just enough to 'fix up' or satisfy the addict.

fix, v. To arrest: 1781, Sessions Papers (No. II, Part i; Jan. 10, p. 66), 'If they fix you, you will be done,' convicted; 'You'd snitch upon us . . . and fix us, in putting a lap-feeder in our sack, that you or your blowen had prig'd yourselves, though we should stand the frisk for it', glossed as, 'Putting them into the hands of justice, called fixing them'; 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack, 'They fixed me'—convicted me; 1865, E. H. Savage, Police Recollections (U.S.A.); † by 1889 (B & L). Cf. sense 1 of the n.—2. To bribe (a person) to do as one wishes: U.S.A.: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'When Biebusch saw this man in Court, whom he fancied he had "fixed" for certain, the criminal wilted'; 1886, A. Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; 1887, G. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; by 1905 or very soon after, it was s. To arrange a person to one's own liking.—3. So to tamper with (a room, a door, a house, etc.) that entrance by thieves is facilitated: 1886, Thomas Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America, 'At their leisure these [hotel] thieves spend their time "fixing" rooms' and '... The tenant in one of the "fixed" rooms'; 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; by 1910, it has merged with the gen. coll. sense, 'to arrange'.—4. To 'hocus' liquor in order to stupefy a prospective victim: U.S.A.: 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police, 'An almost endless quantity of nonsense has been written about the skill of criminals in the "fixing" of drugged fluids and the administration of them'; slightly ob. Cf. American horse-racing s.: 'A horse ... is fixed when ... put in such a condition he cannot win—lamed, poisoned, given a pail of water before running' (Henry G. Crickmore, Dictionary of Racing Terms and Slang, 1880).—5. (Ex sense 1.) To injure (a person): U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; slightly ob. 'I'll fix him!'.—6. (Ex sense 2.) Usually fix (or square) the beef. To bribe one's way out of; to get (a crime) hushed up, a (case) annulled: U.S.A.: C. 20: 1900, 1909, 1914, 1919, 1924, 1926, implied in fixer; 1929 (see quot'n at big boy)—but by 1925 or so, it was police and journalistic s. and, by 1930, gen. s.

fix on, put the. To impose upon, impress; have (a person) scared and submissive; to bribe: April 13, 1929, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson, "'Brother Bascom has certain put the fix on the boys," said he. "All of 'em are scared pink"'; 1929, E. D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago; by 1940, low s. See fix, n. and v.—2. Intransitively: to arrange things so that there will be no trouble: April 20, 1929, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson, 'I can put the fix on for you so you can run your stuff over the line and straight into Chicago'; extant. Cf. sense 1.

fix-up. A 'shot' of narcotic: drug addicts': since the mid-1920's: 1934, Convict.

fix up, v. To arrange to suit the wishes or plans of the arranging party: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1890, coll.—2. Hence, (of a woman) to copulate with: 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; extant.

fixer. One who arranges or facilitates illicit activities for criminals: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey; 1900, Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman; 1909, W. Irwin, Confessions of a Con Man, 'Fixer ... the circus attache who bribes or "stalls" the city authorities to permit crooked gambling'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'go-between'; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan's article, 'Criminal Slang', where he defines it as he who 'looks after interest of man who is arrested, squares the sucker [i.e., the victim], hires the lawyer and attends to all necessary details'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1928, M. C. Sharpe, Chicago May; Aug. 11, 1928, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson; March 2, 1929, Flynn's, H. W. Corley; by 1930, police and journalistic s. Ex fix, v., 2; cf. v., 6.—2. 'Nor was the Second Deputy above resorting to the use of "plants" [plots, traps]. Sometimes he had to call in a "fixer" to manufacture evidence, that the far-off ends of justice might not be defeated,' Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 1913; app. † by 1930.—3. A diluter of genuine liquor, or a blender of alcohol therewith: bootleggers': since ca. 1921. Godfrey Irwin 1931; by 1935, ob.—4.

'The fixer takes care of the [police and other] protection, and the pimp must be on good terms with him,' Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, 1936: white-slave traffic: C. 20. It occurs much earlier in, e.g., Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909.

fixing. The vbl n. of fix, v.—chiefly in senses 2, 3.

fixings. Copulation: prostitutes' and criminals': C. 20. In, e.g., Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights, 1933. Prob. ex fix up, 2.

fiz or fizz, n. See fizgig.

fiz, v.; fizzer or fiz(z)ler. To swindle; a swindler: 1925, Leverage (all three); extant. Perhaps ex fizzle, 'a failure; to fail'.

fizgig or fizzgig. An informer to the 'police': Australian: since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Partridge, 1937, and Sidney J. Baker, A Dictionary of Australian Slang, 1942 (and, a year earlier, in his New Zealand Slang). Often shortened to fiz(z): Baker, 1945. By contemptuous euphemism; not unrelated to thingamijig. Baker (1945), however, points out that it may derive from fizgig, Australian for 'fishing spear': cf. therefore, spear, v., 1.

fizz, n. A dynamite cap: 1934, David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live; extant. For the semantics, cf. puff, n., 3. fizzer. See fiz, v.

fizzle. An escape: 1859, Matsell, "'The cove made a fizzle", the fellow escaped': the sense gradually > 'a failure'—as in Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, and that sense is, in C. 20, s.

fizzler. See fiz, v.

fla, says Jon Bee, 1823, is short for flash (see flash, adj., 3): but I doubt the term's existence in c., except as a stage transitional to fly.

flag, n. 'Flagg, a groate', Harman, 1566; ibid., as flagge; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candlelight, 'Flag, a Goat'—an error reproduced in the Temple Classics edition; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All; 1665, R. Head; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1714, Alex. Smith; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose (flagge); 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; 1797, Potter (flagg); 1809, George Andrewes; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; 1848, Sinks of London; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; by 1855, or 1856, it was s.—witness 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857; by 1870, †. Cf. M.L.G. vleger, 'a coin worth somewhat more than a Bremer groat' (O.E.D.).—2. 'Nabbed ... for faking a flag from a blowen's nutty-arm,' glossed as '[Arrested for] stealing a lady's reticule from her pretty arm': 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; † by 1900. A reticule is as a signal—a flag—to pickpockets and other thieves.—3. An apron: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 218; 1859, H; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1887, Henley; by 1889 (B & L), it was low s. Perhaps ex its flapping about.—4. See carrying a flag.

flag, v. 'When a man is said by criminals or tramps to be "flagged", it means that he is permitted to go unmolested,' J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary), 1899—copied by P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who restricts the usage to criminals; 1933, Ersine; extant. From flagging a train—waving (or signaling) it on.—2. Hence, to release from lock-up, detention cell, prison: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom 'Flagged. Released from eustody'; extant.—3. Esp. be flagged, to be driven out of town; refused money or food: tramps': 1931, Stiff; extant. To be waved on—as is a train not allowed to stop or to remain.—4. (Of a tramp) to accost a citizen: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—5. (Of a crook) to warn, esp. quietly, unnoticeably, another crook: since ca. 1912. Irwin, 1931.

flag, carry a or fly a. To go under a false name: since the late 1920's. Maurer, 1941.

flag(-)about. 'A low strumpet': 1859, Matsell; † by 1891 (F & H). Perhaps in reference to flag, 'a paving-stone', as F & H propose: cf. flagger.

flag down. To halt (either a person or a vehicle) since ca. 1924. Ersine. To set the flag against someone by lowering it.

flag the banner; usually as vbl n. 'Flagging the banner. Soliciting by a male prostitute,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.

flagg; flagge. See flag, n., 1. Both of these forms occur in Harman's Caveat, and Grose has the latter.

flagged. See flag, v.

flagger, 'a street-walking prostitute', is not c. but police s.: 1891, F & H. (She walks the flags or paving-stones).—2. A look-out man for a gang of pickpockets or burglars: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Signaller, in short: as one flags a train, so he, etc.—Cf. flag, v., 5.

flaggings. Meat as food: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; ob. A pun on flagons?

flake. A small packet of cocaine; mostly drug addicts': 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; extant. Short for snow-flake: see snow, 3, and cf. drift.

flam (a trick, a sham story; to deceive with either of these) is not, as is stated in several dictionaries, c.; it is excellent S.E.; not even B.E. claims it as c.—2. As v., it is an error in J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1707, for stam.—3. Erroneous for fam, n., 2: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx, 'A pal knaps his ticker, or frisks off his flamms'. This error recurs in H, 3rd ed., 1864.

flame chair, the. 'The electric chair', as in Flynn's, Dec. 13, 1930, is 'literary' rather than genuine c.

flamer. In Proteus Redivivus, 1675, R. Head, speaking of a London sharper, says: 'He carries perpetually about him a Catalogue of all the Whores he can hear of about the Town, ranking them into three Columes apart, and thus distinguished; the Flamer, Frisker, and Wast-coater [waistcoateer]: The two first are new names given the Does, or Bona Roba's . . . and they are [respectively] the upper and middle sort; the last pitiful and mean, who by her incomes, or plying, never could purchase her self cloaths becoming the Society of Gentlemen.' These fanciful names—though admittedly the metaphors involved are simple—appear to have > † by 1750 at latest.—2. Vitriol: U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative: † by 1920. Perhaps spirits of vitriol.

flamm. See flam, 2.

flange, a card-sharper's mechanical device for slipping a card up one's sleeve, is j. rather than c. Charles Somerville, 'Rogue of the World' in Flynn's, Dec. 25, 1926.

flanker. A thief: 1867, Goss, A Soldier's Story

(cited by D.A.E.); † by 1910. He attacks from the flank.

flank(e)y. The posterior(s): ca. 1840–80: possibly c., but prob. low s. Sinks of London, 1848. App. by a corporal lapse.

flannel mouth. 'An Irishman. Sometimes called a chaw,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910. IA, 1931; extant. Cf. the R.A.F.'s flannel, 'flattery; to flatter, to wheedle (a person)', and: 2. 'A mealy-mouthed person, a liar,' Ersine, 1933, who cites the adj., flannel-mouthed.

flap, n. Sheet copper: 1845, anon. translator of Eugene Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, Part 2, ch. xxviii; 1874, H, 'Lead used for the coverings of roofs'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; slightly ob. It tends to flap about—to buckle very easily.—2. A woman; the female genitals: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; former nuance, † by 1940. Cf. origin of sense 1.—3. A cheque: C. 20. Partridge, 1938. A large one tends to flap—to fold upon itself.

flap, v. To steal: 1760, Anon., Come all you Buffers gay (a song in The Humorist, of that date), 'But if you should flape his staunch Wipe | Then away to the Fence you may go'; app. † by 1820. Cf. s. flap a jay, to rob a simpleton.

flap it in one's face. See fling it . . .

flape. See flap, v.

flapman. Convicts' c. for such a man in the first or second class of prisoners as is—on account of good behaviour—entitled to a pint of tea, instead of gruel, at night: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1930.

flappers. Hands: 1859, Matsell; by 1891 (F & H), it was low s. Cf. English s. flippers, 'hands'.—2. A sandwichman's boards: English tramps' and beggars': 1920's, it being transitional between clappers and wings. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932. They do so flap about!

flare. To whisk (a handkerchief) out of a pocket: pickpockets': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; † by 1910. 'As quick as light' (flare: flash).

flare, all of a. Bunglingly; clumsily; ca. 1825–90. See H. Brandon in Poverty, Mendicity, and Crime, 1939. Perhaps by catachresis for all of a fluster.

flare up is a c. catch-phrase of ca. 1815–50. It occurs in the trial of Richard Deane in 1834 (Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–34, vol. X), 'I met the prisoner . . . with some velvet under his arm inside his coat—I said "Halloo", and he said, "Flare up, and you shall have a velvet bonnet"; it occurs also in the trial of Geo. Warren and Geo. Spencer (burglars), thus: 'Warren had said in the coffee-shop there, "Flare up! we won't have a penny egg, bring me a three-half-penny one"', whence it appears that the sense is 'cheer up!' or 'here's luck!'

flash, n. 'Flash, c. a Periwig. Rum Flash, e. a long, full, high-prized Wig. Queer Flash, c. a sorry weather-beaten Wig, not worth Stealing, fit only to put on a Pole or dress a Scare-Crow,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; † by 1840. Ex the S.E. sense: in the sun, a clean periwig shines forth like a good deed.—2. Cheating, thieving; the underworld. This is a presumed n., for it occurs only in combination: from before 1698; ob. from ca. 1820 and † by ca. 1890. See flash case—cove— house—ken—man. The flashing quickness of the hand deceives the inexperienced or the unwary eye.—3. Hence, the language of the underworld: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'In the language of flash blow up the neighbourhood'; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'To talk flash; that is, to speak the cant language'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To speak good flash is to be well versed in cant terms'; 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Bee; by 1840, current in U.S.A. (witness The Ladies' Repository, 1848, and E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); 857, Snowden; by 1859, no longer c. I prefer this derivation ex sense 2 to that from the Derbyshire village of Flash—a theory set forth by Canon Isaac Taylor († 1901) in his Words and Places.—4. A suit of clothes: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; 1941, Maurer, who extends it to cover the same ground as front—'anything to create a good impression'—as Ersine had done in 1933 ('anything that is meant to be impressive', e.g. cheap jewellery); by 1935, at latest, also Australian (esp. con-men's), as in Baker, 1945.—5. A gaudy or well-dressed person; a very smart appearance: U.S.A.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin: but rather, I think, low s. than c. Among English white-slavers, it means 'a flashily dressed prostitute': Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940.—6. A mirror: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine. Ex its refraction of light.—7. Hence, or perhaps short for flash lamp: a light: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine.—8. 'Flash: a cheque, usually worthless, for a large amount, used to impress a prospective victim that the holder has money or credit,' Black, 1943: since ca. 1930.

flash, v. Anon., A Caveat for Cut-purses, ca. 1663, 'But you should pray, you begin for to curse | The hand that first shewd you to flash at a purse': there we may have either a c. sense (? to move cunningly or criminally) or merely an unrecorded nuance of the S.E. flash, to move lightning-fast.—2. To show ostentatiously; to 'sport': 1754, The Tryal of Stephen McDaniel and Others, 'He gave me that, as he said, to flash to the boys, to shew it to them'; 1785, Grose. This sense, orig., was c., but by 1785 it was low s., in England, despite its presence in a number of English c. phrases; in the U.S.A., however, it may have been c. of C. 19-early 20 (see, e.g., No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904).—3. To sell to a receiver of stolen goods, to 'fence': 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'I flashed the wedge' or silverware 'to Mrs Dougall for three quids'; app. † by 1900. I.e., to exhibit the goods to the receiver.—4. To turn State's evidence: U.S.A.: since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. To flash one's information—or rather, one's secret knowledge.

flash, adj. App. recorded earliest in combination (see flash ken), it = belonged to or connected with, hence characteristic of, the underworld: 1698, B.E.; 1718, C. Hitching, in The Regulator, uses Flash Gaming Houses to mean gaming houses of the underworld or frequented by the underworld; 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected, 'In the flash language'; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I (frequently); 1835, Sessions Papers; 1859, H; but by 1850, prob. no longer c.—2. Hence, illicit; dishonest: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'We went to Nantwich Fair . . . where we met with two Flash Horse Jockeys'; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I, 102; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1859, H; by 1880, low s.—3. (Also ex sense 1.)

Awake or alert to, cognizant of; usually flash to: 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; 'A brother sharper who is flash to the rig' or illicit trick; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I; 1859, H; by 1860, s.—4. Counterfeit: 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London ('flash notes'); 1829, Sessions Papers; 1859, H; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years; 1885, J. Greenwood, A Queer Showman; 1889, B & L; 1891, T. P. McNaught; 1897, Price Warung; 1898, R. J. A. Power-Berry; Feb. 9, 1905, Sessions Papers; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; extant.—5. (Ex senses 2, 4.) Bogus; wanted by the police—cf. C. 20 hot: 1843, Sessions Papers (Feb. 3, trial of F. W. Messow), 'Prisoner. The bill is a flash one, not a forgery, . . . it is drawn on a house which does not exist in London and from a house which does not exist in Hamburg; it cannot be called a forged bill'; app. † by 1900.—6. In U.S.A. (but never in England), the sense 'gaudy' or 'ostentatious' may have been c. of ca. 1840–1910: see, e.g., No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904.

flash, patter. See patter flash.

flash, put (a person). 'To put a person flash to any thing is to put him on his guard, to explain or inform him of what he was before unacquainted with': 1812, J. H. Vaux; current throughout C. 19. See flash, adj., 3.

flash, show the. To 'show off'; to flash a lot of money, esp. after a burglary: June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch, 'Do you think I want . . . to have us all collared in a bunch because we're showing the flash? That's how saps in this racket get tipped off'; extant. Cf. flash a roll.

flash a roll. To display one's money: 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; by 1930, low s. See flash, v., 2; a roll of notes or bills.

flash blowen. A dishonest woman: prob. ca. 1760–1870. E.g., in The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.), 1848. See the elements.

flash cane. See flash kane.

flash cant. 'A song interlarded with flash' or cant: ca. 1790–1850. E.g., Egan's Grose.

flash(-)case. A house, esp. a public-house, frequented by the underworld, esp. by thieves: 1718, C. Hitching, 'An account of the Flash Cases' in The Regulator; app. † by 1800. See flash, adj., 1 + case, n.

flash cove. 'The Cull is flash, alias . . . he associates himself with Thieves,' C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718; 1797, Potter, 'The keeper of a house for the reception of thieves'; 1809, George Andrewes, 'The keeper of a house for the reception of stolen goods'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Flash Cove, or (*Flash-)*Covess, the landlord or landlady of a flash-ken'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1848, Sinks of London (a 'fence'); 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H, 'A thief; a sharper'; by 1910, ob.; by 1940, †. See the separate elements.

flash covess. See flash cove, reference of 1812.

flash crib. 'Flash-Crib, Flash-Ken, or Flash-Panny, a public-house resorted to chiefly by family people, the master of which is commonly an old prig, and not unfrequently an old lag': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1828, George Smeeton, Doings in London; 1887, H. Baumann, 'A Slang Ditty', in Londonismen; 1891, F & H; † by 1920. See flash, adj., and crib, n.

flash customer. A male member of the underworld: ca. 1810–40. John Joseph Stockdale, flash dona. A high-flying prostitute, a courtesan: since ca. 1880; by 1910, low s. Ware, 1909. See the separate elements.

The Greeks, 1817, where it is equated with rum one.

flash drum. 'A drinking-place resorted to by thieves': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; very ob. See flash, adj., 1, and drum, n., 3 and 4.—2. A brothel: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; slightly ob. Cf. sense 1.

flash (one's) gab. To air one's vocabulary: 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Flashing his gab, showing off his talk'; † by 1890.

flash gang. A set of confidence men: 1929–31, Kernôt: not very usual. Cf. swell mob.

flash gentry. 'The higher class of thieves' (B & L): ca. 1820–1910: 1830, E. Bulwer Lytton, Paul Clifford; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2. See flash, 1 and 2.

flash gill. A man of the underworld: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1870. See flash, adj., 1 and gill.

flash house. 'A house that harbours Thieves': 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1776, John Villette, The Annals of Newgate; 1821, D. Haggart, Life; 1829, G. Smeeton; 1833, Sessions Papers; 1889, B & L; † by 1900. A variation of the more usual flash ken; and by 1876, or so, no longer c.—2. Often used specifically of a gambling-den frequented by thieves: in, e.g., C. T. Clarkson & J. H. Richardson, The Rogue's Gallery, 1890. Cf.: —3. (Ex sense 1.) The sense 'a disreputable public-house' prob. dates from mid-C. 19; by 1929 (George Dilnot, Triumphs of Detection, p. 32) it was police s.

flash(-)junk. Valuable jewellery: 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves, 'Then he dives for the chiffonier where she keeps her flash-junk and hock-rocks'; extant. See the elements.

flash kane is a Scottish variant of flash ken, q.v. for 1821. Also flash cane. Both forms are in D. Haggart, Life, 1821.

flash ken. 'Flash-ken, c. a House where Thieves use'—i.e., which they frequent—and are connived at,' B.E., 1698; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'A house that harbours thieves'; 1797, Potter; 1812, Vaux (see flash crib); 1821, D. Haggart (flash kane and f. kain and f. cane); 1833, Benj. Webster, Paul Clifford; 1848, Sinks of London; 1849, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), Sept. 1; 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; by 1910, it was †. See flash, adj., 1, and ken.

flash kiddy. See kiddy, reference of 1812.

flash lingo. 'The canting or slang language,' Grose, 1785: perhaps orig. c., but very soon—if not always—s. Ex flash, adj., 1.

flash ma'am (or marm). See flash woman.

flash man. A thief; a criminal, a member of the underworld: ca. 1773, Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles), 'I was a flash man of St Giles'; 1793, C. Piggott, The Minor Jockey Club; by 1794, in use in U.S.A. (witness Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807); 1823, Jon Bee, who applies it to highwaymen and implies that the term is, in that nuance, long since †; 1872, C. L. Brace (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L, but already obsolescent by 1850 and † by 1900. See flash, adj., 1 and 2.—2. Hence, 'A bully to a bawdy house': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter, 'A fellow that lives upon the hackneyed prostitution of an unfortunate woman of the town'; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'The flashman . . . the girl's bully'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Bee, 'The favourite, or protector, of a prostitute'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; † by 1900.

flash mob is a synonym of swell mob: 1906, G. R. Sims, Mysteries of Modern London, 'He has put a spy to watch, and inform him if any overtures are made to the "pigeon" by any other members of the "flash mob"'; † by 1940.

flash moll. A 'prostitute of the gayest sort': 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1885, 'Le Jemlys', Shadowed to Europe (any prostitute); extant. See the elements.

flash mollisher. A female professional criminal, esp. if a thief or a sharper: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, P. Egan, Life in London, 'A slang term made use of by thieves and police-officers for low prostitutes'; 1889, B & L; † by 1940. See mollisher.

flash of lightning, 'a glass of gin', may orig. (ca. 1780) have been c., as Geo. Parker implies in Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 1789, and may have remained c. until ca. 1810, when it > (if indeed it were not always) low s. See lightning.

flash one. See flash 'un.

flash one's cole. See cole, flash one's.

flash one's rank. 'Unlike the ordinary bogus aristocrat, "Sir Roger" [Tichborne] never "flashed his rank"—that is, when he walked or talked with other prisoners, he did not "put on airs", or adopt the patronising manners that both outside, as well as in prison, usually denote alike the parvenu and the impostor': 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; by 1910, low s. See flash, v., 2.

flash one's screeves. See flash the screeves.

flash panney. 'Flash Panneys. Houses to which thieves and prostitutes resort': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, quoting an underworld song, 'Next for his favourite mot the kiddey looks about, | And if she's in a flash panney he swears he'll have her out'; 1812, Vaux (see flash crib); 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; 1859, H, 'A public-house frequented by thieves'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1905 in Britain and by 1920 in U.S.A. See flash, adj., 1, and panney, 2.

flash patter, 'cant: slang', is an elaboration of patter, n., 2: in nuance 'slang', it certainly is not c.; in nuance 'cant', it is improbably c. Mostly C. 19.

flash screen. A counterfeit bank-note: since ca. 1807: † by 1900. Knapp & Baldwin, Newgate Calendar, vol. IV, 1826 (p. 9). See flash, adj., 1, 2, and screen.

flash song is not c., though flash chant would be. Vaux, 1812, defines it as 'a song interlarded with flash [i.e., cant] words, generally relating to the exploits of the prigging fraternity in their various branches of depredation'.

flash-tail. See picking-up moll.

flash the dickey. To show the shirt-front: prob. c. of ca. 1780–1850, then low s. B & L, 1889.

flash the drag. See drag, flash the.

flash the hash. To vomit: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L—but prob. low s. by 1870.

flash the (or one's) screeves. To throw money about; be extravagant with one's money: 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London; † by 1890. An error for screens?

flash thief. A petty larceny thief: 1925,

Leverage—or is he merely 'repeating' what he supposes to be English c.?

flash 'un. A counterfeit note: 1897, Price Warung, Tales of the Old Regime (see at work off); † by 1930, but current since ca. 1830. See flash, adj., 4.

flash woman. A prostitute under the protection of a particular bully: 1823, Bee, 'She is called . . . his flash-woman; but, in the lower degrees of misery, they have it flash ma'am, or marm'; † by 1910. See flash, adj., 1.

flushed up. Dressed up: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'She was all flushed up good'; extant. See flash, adj., and cf. s. flashy.

flasher. A counterfeit bank-note: Glasgow: C. 20. Partridge, 1937. Cf. flash, adj., 4.

flashery is prob. not c. but low s. 'Elegance, boasting talk, showing off' (1889, B & L, but prob. current ca. 1820–1900); 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'.

flashly, 'elegantly', may have been c. of ca. 1810–90, then low s.; but prob. it was always s. B & L.

flashman. See flash man.

flashy blade, 'a fellow who dresses smart': not c. (as stated by B & L), but s.

flat, n. A kind of false die; presumably one that is slightly thinner than the others, the difference imparting a tendency to fall with a certain facet upwards: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage.—2. A dupe; a gullible person: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Two Pickers up . . . to bring in Flats'; ca. 1772, Anon., The Flash Man of St Giles. The O.E.D. says that the word is s. and, for earliest example, quotes Goldsmith (1762): but the Goldsmith passage is obviously based on, if not indeed cribbed from Poulter; and the word did not > s. until ca. 1780—possibly not till a decade later. In U.S.A., it app. remained c. until ca. 1820: witness Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807. Prob. ex the S.E. adjective flat, 'vapid or stupid'.—3. Hence, any person ignorant of the wiles of the underworld: common in C. 19–20, and verging on S.E. (Sessions Papers, 1818; Matsell; Baumann; and many others.)—4. 'Bulls and half bulls are crowns and half crowns, in [false-]coiner's language and a bob is a shilling, flat is metal,' Sessions Papers, June 1789, p. 550 (John Clarke, witness, loquitur); 1813, ibid., April, p. 200, 'Q. What are flats—A. Bad shillings'; † by 1890. Cf. flats, 1.—5, 6. See flats.—7. "'Flats", i.e., the ignorant section of convicts who are outside the "profession" [professional criminals]': 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; ob.—8. "'What a lot of flats you have brought with you" (flats being the thieves' term for policemen n uniform)', ca. 1910; 1925, Leverage, who, however, defines it—wrongly, I think—as 'a detective'; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open, 'The uniform police are "flats", "flatties", or "rozzers"'; extant. Not necessarily short for flat foot: more prob. ex senses 2, 3 of flat, n., thieves believing policemen to be fools.—9. 'Flats.—Flat cars,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: U.S.A., mostly tramps': 1934, Convict; extant.—10. See flat bit.

flat, adj. See flat dice.

flat, pick up a. To find a customer: prostitutes': mid-C. 19–20. Partridge, 1937. See flat, n., 2.

flat (bit). A prison sentence in which the minimum and maximum terms are the same: since ca. 1920; 1935, Hargan (flat bit); 1936, Lee Duncan (flat). Flat—not variable or varying.

flat-catcher; flat-catching. These associated terms are explained by the careless entry in Egan's Grose, 1823: 'Flat-catching. Simple persons, who are easily imposed upon, who believe any story that is told them. Cant'; 1827, John Wight, More Mornings at Bow Street, 'Minor members of "The Fancy"', who are technically called flat-catchers, and who pick up a very pretty living by means of a quick hand, a deal board, three thimbles, and a pepper-corn'; 1851, Mayhew, in London Labour, III, 32, applies it to 'swindlers, duffers, ring droppers, and cheats of all kinds'; by 1870, s. See flat, 2.

flat cater (or quater) treys is a loaded or other false die; ? one that will turn up only 4 or 3: 1552, Gilbert Walker, A manifest detection of Diceplay; 'The Cheater,' remarks Dekker in The Belman of London, 1608, 'marketh well the Flat, and bendeth a great part of his studie to learne when he is abroad, for so long as that is stirring, he will never Cast at Much'. Orig. it was almost certainly a c. term, but by 1600 it was prob. jargon.

flat dice, used ca. 1918–35, had by 1936 merged with flats, 3. (Ersine, 1933.)

flat floosie. A prostitute operating in a flat or a room: C. 20. BVB, 1942.

flat foot. A police officer on beat, a patrolman: 'Definitely goes back to the Tenderloin days . . . 1900–1910,' Jean Bordeaux, letter of Oct. 23, 1945; 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1927, Kane; Sept. 7, 1929, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'Blondy Ross saw only a bull, a flat-foot, dull of brain'; Nov. 15, 1930, Flynn's, Earl W. Scott; June 13, 1931, Flynn's, J. Lane Linklater; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1933 (E. C. Vivian, Ladies in the Case), also British; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; by 1935, s.

flat joint. Any game of chance (esp. at fairs or carnivals) with a counter on—or across—which the swindle is worked: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Feb. 17, 1937, The New York Herald Tribune, Barry Buchanan; 1937, Courtney R. Cooper, Here's to Crime; by 1938, fairground, carnival, circus s. See flat, 2, and joint, 10.

flat move. 'Any attempt or project that mis-carries, or any act of folly or mismanagement in human affairs is said to be a flat move': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1889, B & L; † by 1910. See flat, n., 2.

flat that's never down, it's a good. 'A proverb among flash people' (the underworld); 'meaning, that though a man may be repeatedly duped or taken in, he must in the end have his eyes opened to his folly': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose (cribbingly): † by 1870. See flat, n., 2, and down, adj.

flat tyre. An impotent man: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. An obvious application of the motoring term; as also is:—2. A woman (recently) cast aside by her lover; a prostitute abandoned by the pimp that no longer finds her sufficiently remunerative: since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. No longer in circulation.

flat wheel. 'Flat wheel. A slow fellow, stupid person,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Cf. flat tyre.—2. A railroad detective: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant.

flat worker. A burglar specializing in robbing apartments: since ca. 1905: Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; extant. Here, worker = a thief.

flatch. A bad half-crown: counterfeiters': from ca. 1870: 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; extant. Ex back-s. flatch, 'a half'.

flats. Of counterfeit coins, 'the first . . . are denominated flats, from the circumstance of this species of money being cut of flatted plates composed of a mixture of silver and blanché copper': 1796, P. Colquhoun, The Police of the Metropolis; 1798, M. & R. L. Edgeworth, drawing, in Practical Education, on Colquhoun; † by 1891 (F & H). Cf. flat, n., 4.—2. 'A cant name for playing cards': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'We played at flats in a budging crib'; 1823, Egan's Groser (flatts); 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; 1925, Leverage; 1934, Rose; ob. Semantically, cf. broads.—3. "Flats" are dice which measure less on certain sides . . . This slight dimensional difference is sufficient to produce certain favored combinations,' Frank Wrentmore in Flynn's, March 21, 1936: U.S.A., mostly gamblers': extant. Ersine had, in 1933, recorded it imprecisely as 'crooked dice'.

flatt is a variant of flat, n., 2 (Grose, 1796; Andrewes, 1809), and of flats, 2.

flatten out (v.i.). To hide, go into hiding: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. To get down out of sight.

flatter(-)trap. The mouth: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; by 1891 (F & H), low s.

flatty. See flatty gory.—2. Hence, a countryman; an ordinary, decent citizen: tramps' c. and itinerant vendors' s.: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 218; 1859, H; by 1891 (F & H) no longer to be classified as c. Cf. flatty cove.—3. 'One who does not understand the Cant': tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; † by 1940.—4. A policeman (in uniform): U.S.A.: 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers that Prey; 1900, Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, where, however, the definition is, 'An officer in plain clothes'; by ca. 1910, also British, as in Sessions Papers, Feb. 13, 1911, 'One of the men says, "Look out, here comes a 'flatty'" (meaning a policeman)'; 1913, Arthur Stringer; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; April 1919, The (American) Bookman (M. Acklom); 1919, Edgar Wallace, The Green Rust; 1924, G. C. Henderson; 1925, A. Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1927, Edgar Wallace, The Mixer; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1927, Kane; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers ('a detective'); Aug. 10, 1929, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly, 'The Right to Silence'; Oct. 11, 1930, Flynn's, Paul Annixter; Feb. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, Ernest Booth; 1931, Brown; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Often applied to a detective promoted from the uniformed force'; Sept. 19, 1931, Flynn's, Paul Annixter; 1933, George Orwell; 1934, B. Leeson, Lost London; and a thousand times since—by 1940, however, it was s. in both U.S.A. and the British Empire, though still low in the latter. 'One who has pounded the pavement so long that his feet have become flat' (Irwin).

flatty cove. An ordinary, decent person, esp. if a man: 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants (see stow your patter!); † by 1900. Cf. the next two entries.

flatty cully. A simpleton; a susceptible fellow: 1842, Pierce Egan, 'Miss Dolly Trull' in Captain Macheath, 'She ogles, nods and patters flash | To ev'ry flatty cully | Until she frisks him, at a splash | Of rhino, wedge and tully'; app. † by 1890. Cf. the preceding and the following entry.

flatty(-)gory. 'The person whom you have a design to rob or defraud, who is termed the flat, or the flatty-gory': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; † by 1870. See flatty, 2, and gory.

flatty ken. 'Many [tramps] take up their abode in what they call "flatty-kens", that is, houses the landlord of which is not "awake" or "fly" to the "moves" and dodges of the trade' (of professional vagrancy): 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1859, H, 'A public house, the landlord of which is ignorant of the practices of thieves and tramps': 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H; † by 1920. See ken and cf. flatty, 2.

flawed; flaw'd; flawd. Topsy, drunk: mid-C. 17—mid-19. Not c., as B.E. classifies it, but s.; orig. it was public-house or, at the least, drinking s.—see esp. 'Tavern terms' in my Dict. of Slang and Unconventional English, 3rd ed., 1949. Lit., cracked in one's sobriety.—The spelling floored (J. H. Vaux, 1812) is a folk-etymologizing variant.

flax. (Counterfeit) shillings: 1800, Sessions Papers, May, p. 409, 'I told her . . . that he could pass a great deal of bad money; and he bought two shillings, and three sixpences; she called the shillings flax; he gave her one shilling and sixpence for them'; † by 1890. Ex the resemblance in colour.

flea and louse. A brothel: Pacific Coast: late C. 19—20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on house (of ill fame); cf. flea box.

flea bag. A bed roll; a sleeping bag: British and American tramps' c. of ca. 1900—14, then military s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

flea box. A cheap lodging-house; a dirty, inferior hotel: tramps' and beggars': C. 20. Irwin, 1931. Cf. flea and louse.

fleas and ants. Trousers: mainly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on pants.

fleck; flecker. To spy upon; a spy, a spotter: 1925, Leverage; ob. Via Yiddish ex Ger. flecken, to soil, to fly-speck, 'to spot'.

fleece is a C. 17 term for a purse (see at aste). Perhaps in allusion to Jason's golden fleece.—2. A swindle: perhaps American commercial s. rather, than c. John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928. Ex the S.E. fleece, 'to swindle' (someone).

fleecy-claiming. Sheep-stealing: 1889 (see may-gathering); extant. 'Claiming' the fleeces (and the bodies).

fleet. A gang or other group of criminals: 1912, Alfred Henry Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Tail 'em . . . an' when the fleet gets there, go in with your cannisters an' bump 'em off'; 1929—31, Kernôt, 'More than one mob of crooks'; extant. They cruise about.

fleet note. A forged (Bank of England or other bank) note: 1818, The London Guide, p. 69, 'The found money is counterfeit, or screeens, or else Fleet notes'; app. † by 1890. Perhaps because printed in or near Fleet Street (London), then, as now, a centre of newspapers and printing.

flesh. See stam flash.—2. Meat: 1839, Brandon; 1851 (see pull flesh); † by 1910.

flesh, lift or pull. See pull flesh.

flesh bag, 'a shirt', is not c. but low s. H, 1859.

flesh factory. A brothel: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. next two entries.

flesh market. 'A resort of bad girls,' The London Guide, 1818; † by 1890 in Britain; current in late C. 19–20 in U.S.A. BVB, 1942. Cf. — flesh-peddler; -peddling. A prostitute; prostitution: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. butt-peddler and flesh market.

fletch. A spurious coin: mostly convicts': March 2, 1885, Sessions Papers (p. 668); 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; ob. A perversion and generalization of flatch.

flick, n. 'Flick, or Old Flick, an old chap or fellow' (H, 2nd ed., 1860), is not c. but s.—orig. low.—2. "We must prepare for the very worst, if I have not been able to send out my flick to Sheerness," that is, my letter to Colkett, Sessions Papers, Oct. 1877 (p. 689); app. † by 1920. Prob. in reference to urgency and speed.—3. 'A cut; a stab wound,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A., current throughout C. 20. Ex flick, v.—4. Acetylene gas: 1935, The Garda Review; extant. It flickers.

flick, v. To cut: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Flick me some Panam and Cash, c. cut me some Bread and Cheese. Flick the Peeter, c. cut off the Cloak-bag or Port-manteau'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, Dict. (Addenda), 'Flick me some panem and cassan . . .'; 1837, B. Disraeli, Venetia; 1848, Sinks of London, where, in one place, it is misprinted flick; by the 1850's, current in New York—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; 1889, B & L; by 1920, † in Britain, but surviving in U.S.A., as in Leverage, 1925, 'To cut; to stab'. Perhaps cf. 'to flick with a whip' (though unrecorded before C. 19); prob. cognate with flitch, 'to cut', though that, too, seems to be unrecorded before C. 19.

flicker, n. A glass: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Flicker, c. a Drinking Glass . . . Rum Flicker, c. a large Glass or Rummer. Queer Flicker, c. a Green or ordinary Glass'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (repeating B.E.); 1797, Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1889, B & L; † by 1893 (F & H). Ex the light that flickers in and off a glass as one drinks from it.—2. A faint or a pretended faint: American tramps': 1899 (see sense 2 of the v.); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; extant.

flicker, v. To drink: British and American: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; † by 1920. Ex the n., sense 1.—2. 'Flicker: noun, a faint; verb, to faint or pretend to faint,' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary), 1899: U.S. tramps' and beggars': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (the v.); 1931, Stiff, 'To faint or simulate fainting'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (n. and v.); extant. A pun on the literal sense of flicker, 'an uncertain wavering like that of a dying flame'; 'to waver uncertainly like such a flame' (Irwin).

flicker out. To die: 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. By elaboration of flicker, v., 2.

flickers. Fainting, gen. or particular: tramps': since ca. 1918: 1932, the Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps. An elaboration, or a familiarization, of flicker, n., 2.

flicking is the vbl n. of flick, v.

flier; fliers. See flyer; flyers.

flim, n. A letter: 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, Ch. xxiii, 'A fly kidden-gonnof will leave this flim'—glossed as 'A sharp boy-thief will leave this letter'. Perhaps in error for:—2. A shortening of flimsy, 1: 1870, Chamber's Journal, July 9 (quoted by F & H); by 1934 (Philip Allingham, Cheappack) it was pitchmen's s., except in the specific sense, 'a £5 note'—as in Axel Bracey, Public Enemies, 1934, and David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937, and Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938, and Alan Hoby's article, 'Mayfair's Fantastic Gamblers', in The People, April 7, 1946.—3. Short for flim-flam, 1: U.S.A.: July 25, 1925, Flynn's, 'The flim is a hoary trick, but generally works'.

flim, v. See:—

flim-flam, n. The generic name for the various dodges by which a thief, in changing money (paper or coin), obtains more than he gives, whether from tradesmen or even from tellers in banks: 1881, The Man Traps of New York, Ch. X; 1889, B & L, 'Flimming, flim-flamming (American thieves' flash . . .) . . . "ringing the changes"'; by 1905, the latter was low s., but flimming remained c.—1904, Hutchins Hapgood, 'Flim-flam (returning short change)'; 1925, Leverage, 'Flim, v., To cheat; to swindle'; and later. Cf. S.E. flam, 'to cheat', and flim-flam, 'to cheat'.—2. Hence, 'stealing with dexterity,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; extant.

flim-flam, v. Ersine, 1933, defines it as 'to berate'; the definition is suspect.

flim-flammer. One who practises the 'flim-flam', q.v.: 1881, The Man Traps of New York, p. 28; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; by 1930, s.

flimflam worker. A variant of the preceding: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1930, s.

flimp, n. 'Putting on the flimp. Garotte robbery': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, 'Put the "flimp" on him'; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L (to put (a person) on the flimp); 1891, F & H; app. † by 1910. Ex the v.—2. A synonym of flimper: 1893 (but perhaps valid for 1845), F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, p. 409, "'I'll square the chatty flymps . . . I'll precious quick make 'em granny who's omee here'"; † by 1930.

flimp or flymp, v. 'To take a man's watch is to "flimp him", it can only be done in a crowd, one gets behind and pushes him in the back, while the other in front is robbing him. They frequently bawl out at the time to divert the person's attention—it is quite easy to take one out of a waistcoat pocket, they will unbutton the coat to get at it': 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1839, op. cit., Brandon (in the glossary), 'To Flimp—to hustle, rob'; 1856 (see flimping); 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1863, Tom Taylor, The Ticket-of-leave Man (loosely of pilfering a spoon); 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1896, A. Morrison; 1902, A. Morrison, The Hole in the Wall, "'That there visitor was flimped clean, clean as a whistle'"; flimp, put (a person) on the. To 'flimp' him: ca. 1850–1910. See flimp, n.

1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective (U.S.A.); by 1940, † in Britain, ob. in U.S.A. 'Cf. west Flemish flimpe, knock, slap in the face,' O.E.D.

flimper. One who practises 'flimping', q.v.: 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, but prob. in use since ca. 1830; † by 1940. Ex flimp, v.

flimping, n. 'Some thieves are expert at snatching anything from the person, and this branch [of robbery] is termed flimping. A lady's reticule, a gentleman's watch, or a child's necklace, in a press (or, as they term it, a push), is readily taken by the flimper, who, behind others, watches his opportunity to snatch it away. This is most frequently practised at theatres': 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 134–5; 1859, Matsell, 'Garroting; highway robbery'; 1891, F & H; † by 1940. Ex flimp, v.

flimping, adj. See preceding entry. (A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, 1869.)

flimsy. A bank-note: 1792, C. Piggott, The Minor Jockey Club; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, where it is spelt flymsey; 1821, J. Burrowes; 1823, Bee; 1824, Egan, Boxiana, IV; 1837, E. Lytton Bulwer, Ernest Maltravers, 'The old girl had thirty shiners, besides flimsies'; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, 'The House-Breaker's Song' in Pickwick Abroad (of false notes); Jan. 17, 1946, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1848, Sinks of London; 1855, John Lang, The Forger's Wife; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus' (flimsey); 1859, H; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1863, Tom Taylor; 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1887, Arthur Griffiths, Locked Up; by 1889, low s.: B & L. Ex the thinness of the paper.—2. Hence, a counterfeit bank-note: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 321); ob.

flimsy(-)kiddy. 'Flimsy-Kiddies . . . Persons'—properly, young fellows—'who pass forged bank-notes at races, fairs, &c.': 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. xviii; app. † by 1890. See the elements.

fling, v. The sense 'to cheat, to trick', is not c., but s.—dating from before 1749, when it occurs in Goadby (O.E.D.).

fling it in one's face; flap it . . . (Resp. of both sexes and of the male alone) to expose the person: prostitutes': 1893, F & H; extant. It being the sexual organ or parts.

flinger. A double-crosser: 1925, Leverage; extant. He flings his confederates, and others, away.

flip, n. A snatch or snatching: 1821, Haggart, Life; by 1893 (F & H), s. Flip implies speed and skill.—2. A beggar: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Cf. sense 3 of the v.—3. A policeman's baton: U.S.A.: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. With it the officer gives many a smart flip.

flip, v. To shoot: 1812, J. H. Vaux: 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, "'Flip him, Dick . . . I'm taken," cried King'; (by implication in) 1879, J. McGovan, Brought to Bay; 1893, F & H; app. † by 1910. Ex the smart, crisp action of the S.E. v. and n. flip.—2. To abstract—to remove smartly and deftly—from, e.g., a pocket: U.S.A.: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, '[He] flipped the thimble' (glossed by Godfrey Irwin as 'abstracted the watch from the pocket of the victim'); extant. Hence:—3. To beg: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.—4. To flip a rattler, 'to board, a moving box-car,' Stiff, 1931: U.S. tramps': C. 20: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Flip.—To board a moving train'; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 'All the freight trains we flipped were crowded'; extant. Cf. the origin of sense 1.

flip, adj. 'Too outspoken,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, as 'pert, saucy, gaily insolent'; by 1920, low s. I.e., flippant.

flip merchant. A racing tipster: race-course underworld: C. 20. Michael Fane, Racecourse Swindles, 1936.

flipped. Rendered unconscious by drugs: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. Cf. knocked out.

flipper, 'the hand', is not c. but low s.—2. A 'killer' that uses a gun; a criminal that, on provocation, uses a gun or a pistol: 1879, James McGovan, Brought to Bay, 'To face a "flipper"', and actually meditate treachery the while—he might well pause and look grave over attempting it'; † by 1915. Ex flip, v., 1.—3. A beggar: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex flip, v., 3.—4. 'A tramp who "flips" or rides trains, as opposed to the "dyno" who uses the highways to get about the country,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: U.S. tramps': C. 20. Ex flip, v., 4.

flipping is the vbl n. corresponding to flip, v.—esp. in sense 4.

flit. A male homosexual: C. 20. BVB. He flits daintily about.

flit, do a. To run away with another's share of the booty: C. 20. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. A specialization of the s. phrase do a flit, to depart unobtrusively.

float, n. 'The other day a thief . . . stole (knocked off) the contents of the till (the float),' Brown, 1931; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1943, Black; extant. Because it holds 'floating' (readily disposable and constantly changing) money?—2. A coat: South Africa: C. 20. J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946. Ex the English rhyming s. synonym, I'm afloat.

float, v.t. To pass counterfeit money: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the consecrated 'to float a loan'.—2. V.i., to react to a narcotic: drug addicts': since the mid-1920's. Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937, in ref. to marijuana, 'There is no girl who can . . . resist (sexual intercourse), once she has begun "to float"'. Cf. high, adj.

floater. A drowned corpse; esp. of a robbed man that has been thrown into sea or river: 1891, Jacob A. Riis, How the Other Half Lives, 'Floaters come ashore every now and then with pockets picked inside out, not always evidence of a post-mortem inspection by dock-rats': 1891, Maitland; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; Sept. 28, 1929, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'The Frame-Up'; 1939, Mary Sullivan, My Double Life; extant.—2. A professional sponger frequenting the public rooms of good hotels and using their amenities without paying for them: 1891, Darkness and Daylight (U.S.A.); by 1900, s. Cf. the S.E. phrase, floating population.—3. A suspended sentence and an order to move on, to leave town: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1931, Stiff, 'To get a floater is to be turned loose by the judge'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine;

April 21, 1934, Flynn's; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Thief; extant.—4. A tramp much on the move—not quite so restless as, rather less determined than, a boomer: tramps': C. 20: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'One who moves from place to place, but who has some excuse for this in that he works occasionally'; 1933, Ersine; and others. He 'floats about'. A specialization of the gen. sense, 'a wanderer'.—5. A person drug-intoxicated: drug addicts': since the late 1920's. Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937. Cf. floating.

float, get a. See float, 3, Stiff ref. of 1931.

floating; flying in the clouds. Drug-exhilarated: drug traffic: since ca. 1925. 1933, Ersine (the former); BVB, 1942 (both). Cf. high.

floating academy. A hulk used as a convict prison: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'He was . . . sentenced to improve as a pupil to Mr. Duncan Campbell's Floating Academy for five years'; ibid., 'This is a new institution, made in consequence of the troubles in America, whither the felons who now work on the water in heaving ballast, &c. were formerly transported'—the hulks on the Thames being first used in August 1776 (John Howard, The State of the Prisons in England and Wales, Appendix, 1780); 1785, Grose, 'The floating academy, the lighters on board which those persons are confined, who . . . are condemned to hard labour'; 1809, Andrewes, 'The hulks at Woolwich, for convicts'; 1823, Bee; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1848, Sinks of London; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1889 (B & L). Cf. academy, 2, and see Campbell's academy.

floating capital; floating black tissue-paper mixed with tea. Tea-robbery: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 322); † by 1930.

floating college. A rare variant of floating academy: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. cxc, 'To parish prigs one gives degrees, | To lumber-lags the latter'—i.e., 'the Floating College' of a previous verse; † by 1890.

floating game. A game of chance, held at a different 'joint' every night, to lessen the risk of detection by the police and of 'muscling in' by rival racketeers: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

floating parole is rather police and prison j. than c. for 'parole in which permission is given to travel' (Hargan, 1935).

flock. 'A great number of anything' (Ersine): since ca. 1922; by 1935, s.—2. A bed: British tramps': C. 20. Partridge, 1938. Ex the flock in a mattress.

flock of money, 'a (large) sum of money': low s., not c. Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 1937. See flock, 1.

flog, n. A flogging: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'I napt the Flog at the Tumbler; I was whipt at the Cart's Tail'; app. † by 1820.—2. A whip: U.S.A.: 1893, F & H; ob. Ex flogger.

flog, v. Orig. c., as appears, clearly enough, from E. Coles, An English Dict., 1676, 'Flog, c. to whip' and B.E., 1698, 'Flog, c. to whip. Flog'd, c. severely Lasht'; an assumption strengthened by the fact that, in 1725, A New Canting Dict. includes it (in the Preface) among those terms which, from c., 'we have insensibly adopted . . . into our Vulgar Tongue', from which we may fairly deduce that, by 1720 or so, it was s., though still, it would seem, low s. The term may derive from S.E. flap, 'to strike with a sudden blow' + L. flagellare.—2. To exchange or barter: esp. convicts': since ca. 1919. In, e.g., Anon., Dartmoor from Within, 1932. Of the same origin as:—3. (Of a crook) to sell to anyone not a 'fence': 1934 (implied in flogger, 3); 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; by 1940, low s. Ex Army s., 'to sell (Government property) illicitly'.

flog, nap the. See flog, n., 1. flogged at the tumbler. 'Whipt at the Cart's Arse,' B.E., 1698; app. † by 1860. See also tumbler.

flogger. A whip: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'A highwayman will ding . . . his Flogger, his Diggers, his Beater Cases, &c. and having all these on him when he committed the robbery, is totally transformed by dinging'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'A horsewhip'; 1797, Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1827, A New Dictionary of Flash or Cant Language; 1848, Sinks of London; ob. by 1859 (H, 1st ed.); very ob. by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.); † by 1870. Ex flog, v.—2. An overcoat: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Glen H. Mullins, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1925, Leverage; May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman, who defines it as a 'good overcoat'; extant. Because it flaps about one's legs—strikes them.—3. 'The "flogger" acted as intermediary between the thief and the receiver,' David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live, 1934; extant. Ex flog, v., 3.

flogger stiff. A thief specializing in the stealing of overcoats: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. I.e., flogger, 2 + stiff, n., 12.

flogging. 'Flogging, c. a naked Woman's whipping (with Rods) an old (usually) and (sometimes) a Young Lecher,' B.E., 1698—where it is implied that any flogging was c. in late C. 17–mid-18. Cf. flogging cully.

flogging, adj. Orig. c., as in the next three entries.

flogging(-)cove. 'The Beadle, or Whipper in Bridewell, or any such Place,' B.E., 1698; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (repeating B.E.); 1889, B & L, '(Prison), the official who administers the cat [o' nine tails]'; 1893, F & H; † by 1930. See flog, v., and cove.

flogging cull. A hangman: see quot'n at protection, give. This sense is suspect.—2. A beadle: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; app. † by 1830. A variation of flogging cove.

flogging cully. Edward Ward, The London Spy, 1698, 'This unnatural Beast gives Money to those Strumpets which you see, and they down with his Breeches, and Scourg his Privities till they have laid his Lechery. He all the time begs their Mercy, like an Offender at a Whipping-Post, and beseeches their forbearance; but the more importunate he seems for their favourable usage, the severer Vapulation they are to exercise upon him, till they find by his Beastly Extasie, when to with-hold their Weapons'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. notes a natural sense-development, thus, 'Flogging-Cully, an old Lecher, who, to stimulate himself to Venery, causes himself to be Whipp'd with Rods'; 1785, Grose (as Ward); 1823, Jon Bee, who attests its obsolescence at that date; 1893, F & H, who do not state that it is †; †, however, by 1930. Since ca. 1920, he would have been called a masock. Lit., a fellow addicted to flogging (by others of himself).

flogging-stake. A whipping-post: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who implies that it is s., which it had prob. been from ca. 1750. See flog, v.

flogging tumbler. See shove the flogging tumbler.

floor. To cause to be arrested: 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III, 'He it was who floored Bailli'; by 1880, no longer c. Ex the pugilistic s.

floor, on the. Destitute, luckless; as adverb, without making any money, (in respect of earnings) very badly: beggars': C. 20. Edwin Pugh, 'The Master-Beggar', in The Cockney at Home, 1914, (one beggar to another) "'Ow you done?" . . . "On the floor!"; 1931, Desmond Morse-Boycott, We Do See Life!; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; by 1933, low s., mostly Londoners'. Prob. short for 'sleeping on the floor', instead of in a bed.

floored. See flawed.

floorer. 'Floorers, fellows who throw persons down, after which their companions (under pretence of assisting [the victim] and detecting the offender) rob them in the act of lifting them up': 1797, Humphry Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—Matsell, Vocabulary, 1859; 1893, F & H; by 1920, † in both countries. Ex the boxing s.—2. Nine: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1900. App. a corruption—or maybe a perversion—of It. nove, '9'.

flooring is the vbl n. corresponding to sense 1 of the preceding: 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London; † by 1880.

floorless jig. A hanging: since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933. Cf. dance upon air.

floorman. One of a crooked auctioneer's confederates: since ca. 1935. In, e.g., Jack Henry, What Price Crime?, 1945. He works from the floor of the hall, not from the rostrum.

flookey (or -ie), floozey (or -ie), fluzey, n. A woman; a questionable female: 1909, Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1920, low s. Either a 'disguise' of Flossie (cf. English s. Tottie, 'a prostitute'); or simply a pet-form of Florence, as in, e.g., Ngaio Marsh, Died in the Wool, 1944.

flookey or -zey, adj. Dissipated: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex the n.

flop, n. An arrest: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; rather ob. Cf. fall, n., which prob. suggested it.—2. A bed; a rest, a sleep: 1913, Edwin A. Brown, Broke; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (bed); 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life (sleep); Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; by 1937, s. in U.S.A.; by 1935, current in Britain; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress; also Canadian since ca. 1915. Ex the v.—3. Short for flop-house: mostly tramps': 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'Every winter . . . someone starts a "flop" and it invariably inherits the name and fame of Hogan' (the original flop-house keeper); 1925, Glen H. Mullins; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1928, Chicago May, 'A cheap place to sleep'; extant.—4. A failure to obtain parole: convicts': since ca. 1920; in, e.g., Convict, 1934. Perhaps ex sense 1.—5. (Ex 3.) A temporary address, esp. one that will make a good impression: commercial underworld, esp. forgers': since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941, with alternative flop joint.

flop, v. "'Kip", "doss", "flop", "pound your ear", all mean the same thing; namely, to sleep,' Jack London, The Road, 1907, but valid since the mid-1890's; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, A Vocabulary of Criminal Slang; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (v.i.; also v.t., 'The place was "flopped" in'); 1931, Stiff; 1933, Ersine; 1935, Hargan; 1936, W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps (British); by 1937, low s. in U.S.A., and by 1940, low s. in Britain. To flop down in exhaustion.—2. To be arrested: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. fall, v. Ex the low-s. sense 'to fail' (Ersine).—3. To beg; to ask for and get from (a person): mostly tramps' and beggars': July 23, 1927, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'Last night, I flops a guy on Halstead for two bucks'; extant—though little used, even at the beginning. I.e., to ask for money with which to ensure oneself a flop or lodging.

flop(-)dough. Lodging money: 1933, Ersine. See the elements.

flop-house. "'Flophouses" are nearly all alike. Guests sleep on the floor or in bare, wooden bunks. The only privilege they buy is the privilege to lie down somewhere in a warm room,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; 1931, Stiff, 'A cheap lodging house or any hobo hotel'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who shows that the term had by that date > fairly gen. low s. See flop, n., 2.

flop joint. See flop, n., 5. But it also = flop, n., 3: and this is the earlier sense.

flop plant. A hotel (or apartment) bedroom place of concealment for counterfeit money (properly, paper): counterfeiters' and their distributors': since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. See flop, n., 3, and plant, n.

flop worker. 'One who robs sleepers in railroad waiting rooms, public parks or on the trains,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931; mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. See flop, n., 2 and 3.

flopper. 'Floppers—crippled beggars who crouch on the sidewalks to solicit alms,' L. Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hoboes, 1918: beggars': since ca. 1910: 1923, N. Anderson, The Hobo; 1925, Leverage, 'A one-armed man'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, "'Floppers", the ones who pretend being crippled'; extant. Cf. flops, q.v.

flopping(s). A place to sleep—not necessarily a bed; a lodging-house: 1907 (but see flop, v.), Jack London, The Road; 1918, L. Livingston, Madame Delcassee, has flopping dump, 'a cheap lodging-house', which Godfrey Irwin, in letter of Oct. 21, 1938, deprecates as 'a new and, I think, redundant usage'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'None o' the mob ought t' plant any th' loot around their floppin's. Too many rubbernecks'; April 1944, American Speech, article by Otis Ferguson, 'That's good floppings'; extant. Cf. flop, n., 2 and 3.

flopping dump. See flopping, ref. of 1918.

flops (invariable). A legless beggar: tramps' and beggars': from ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. He flops about; cf. flopper.

floss (out). 'Bud flossed me out with a Bonwit-Teller hand-me-down and I joined him at Albany,' Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 1918: to fit (someone) out handsomely: low s. rather than c.

flossie, 'a prostitute' (BVB, 1942): low s. rather than c. Cf. floosey.

flotz. A 'stool pigeon': 1925, Leverage; ob. Yiddish?—Cf. Ger. Floss, 'a raft; a sledge'.

floughing cull. See flogging cull.

flounder. A drowned man, esp. one with little money on his person: river rats' c.: 1883, James Greenwood, Tag, Rag & Co., p. 35; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1923, Jules Manchon, Le Slang; slightly ob. For origin, cf. dab, n., 4, and salmon, 2.

flounder and dab. A cab: orig. (ca. 1850–65 or –70), it was c.; from ca. 1865 to ca. 1880, it was low; only ca. 1880 did it > gen. rhyming s. In C. 20 U.S.A.—mostly on the Pacific Coast—it means 'taxicab': M & B, 1944.

flowery. A lodging: 1859, H: c. until ca. 1870, then low s. Ex:—2. A cell, i.e. a prison cell: since ca. 1850. The term is short for flowery dell, which rhymes 'cell'. In 1925, the Rev. Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, says that it went out of use among convicts some years before that date; that, however, is untrue—witness, e.g., James Curtis, They Drive by Night, 1938; H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks, 1938; David Hume, Heads you Live, 1939; Lilliput, Nov. 1943; and elsewhere.

flown, it is. See slang, v., 1.

flu or flue, n. 'A variation of the hype is a [short-changing] confidence game known as the "flu"', Lawrance M. Maynard, 'On the Make'—Flynn's, May 9, 1931; extant. Ex:—

flue, v. To short-change (a person) by the envelope trick: 1925, Leverage; extant. To so influence a person that he doesn't notice he's being swindled; cf. the n.

flue-faker. A chimney-sweeper: 1812, J. H. Vaux: 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx, 'But when on these dodges the blue-bottles blow, | As a flue-faker togg'd then at day-break I show'; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859 (H, 1st ed.), it was low s. Lit., a flue-maker or rather, a doer of flues.

flue-faking is the vocational n. and the adj. corresponding to flue-faker: 1824, J. Wight, Mornings at Bow Street, 'A flue-feaking establishment'; by 1860, low s.

flue-game, the. A small-scale confidence trick involving the changing and palming of money: ca. 1880–1925. Kernôt, 1929–31, 'One time operation of petty thief'. To put the influence on? See flue, n. and v.

fluff, n. A gangster girl; a gangster's mistress: since ca. 1929. Howard N. Rose, 1934; extant. Ex English s. bit of fluff, a girl, a (young) woman.—2. In the British underworld, esp. among beggars and tramps, it has, since ca. 1925, borne the specific sense, 'Passing girl who is very young and shy, won't even look or smile,' John Worby, The Other Half, 1937.

fluff, v.; fluffer. To short-change (someone); an operator of the short-change swindle: 1925, Leverage (both); extant. Ex English railway-clerks' s., recorded by H in 1874.

flukum, 'nickel-plate ware' (The Saturday Evening Post, Oct. 19, 1929, 'Alagazam'), is pitchmen's s.—not c.

flummoxed or -uxed. 'Flummuxed, done up, sure of a month in quod, or prison': 1859, H; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; ob. Ex s. flummox, to perplex, to hinder. See, too, the next.

flummut. 'Sure of a month in quod' (Mayhew) if a tramp or an itinerant vendor approaches a house classified among tramps and itinerant vendors as even more dangerous than is a 'gammy' one, the corresponding sign (chalked on or near the door) being ☉: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 218; 1893, F & H, '(Vagrants)'—A month in prison'; † by 1930. A corruption of s. flummoxed, 'perplexed'; see prec. entry.

flummuxed. See flummoxed.

flunk. A steel compartment, fitted with a thin iron door, within a safe: bank robbers': since ca. 1910. Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; Jan. 20, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Prob. short for flunkey, 'a servant'.

flunkey. A 'jungle' (tramps' camp) waiter: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff, 'Always male. A woman is a hasher'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (of any menial worker); extant. A specialization of the S.E. sense.

flunkey-graft. Menial work: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'I next lined up on some flunkey graft in a beanery where I could rubber the lay. The graft was an old peter that was easy'; by 1930, low s. Cf. prec. entry.

flush, 'well supplied (with money)', occurs mostly in the next two terms; but that, even in C. 18, it had an independent existence, appears from the fact that in Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, pub. in 1735, there is 'He was pretty flush of the cole'; whence, further, it would seem that, ca. 1710–50, flush, when used by itself, may possibly have been c.; prob., however, it was mere chance that this S.E. term was, at this period, much used by the underworld. Nor has it, I think, ever been c. in U.S.A., despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, 'Flush. Having plenty of money'.

flush in the fob. 'The Cull is flush in the Fob, the Spark's Pocket is well lined with Money,' B.E., 1698; A New Canting Dict., 1725; Grose, 1785; by 1810, low s. Here, a fob pocket is used for any pocket. Cf. — flush in the pocket. Defined by B.E. as 'full of Money' and classified as c.; but the term can never have been of status lower than s. Cf. preceding phase.

flushed on the horse. Privately whipped in gaol: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1893, F & H; † by 1930. Perhaps ex the victim's posture on the whipping-horse (later, in any other posture): flushed of complexion or perhaps flushed, 'cleaned', by the punishment.

flute. 'The Recorder'—legal official—'of London, or of any other Town,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Flute, the recorder of a corporation: a recorder was an ancient musical instrument' not unlike a flute; 1797, Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; app. American by 1859 (and prob., many years earlier)—Matsell's Vocabulary; † (in England at least) by 1893: F & H.—2. A police whistle: since the 1920's. In, e.g., Axel Bracey, School for Scoundrels, 1934; by ca. 1940, police s. The v. flute, 'to blow a whistle' (Jim Phelan, Murder by Numbers, 1941), was prob. s. from the beginning—police or prison warders' s. By humorous 'magniloquence'.—3. A sodomite: U.S.A.: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Penis erectus?

flute, hit the. See hit the flute.

fluter. A male sexual degenerate; passive, and esp. in the sense of one addicted to penilingism (low s. flute, penis): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Fluter. A degenerate'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1935, Hargan; extant.—2. A sodomite, says BVB, 1942. Prob. both senses are correct; cf. flute, 3.

flux, v., 'to cheat, cozen, or over-reach' (Grose, 1785), seems to have been a s., not a c. term of ca. 1770–1910, although B & L, 1889, classify it as c. Ex the lit. S.E. sense.

fluzey. See flookey.

fly, n. A waggon: rural c. of C. 18. Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708, 'Fly, a Waggon, i.e. Country Cant'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1860. Cf. the S.E. sense.—2. See high fly.—3. A policeman: 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; by 1893 (F & H) it was low s. Cf. Fr. mouche, a spy.—4. A police detective: U.S.A.: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; rather ob. A shortening of fly cop, 2.—5. 'The "fly", or cadger who begs . . . along the "tober" (streets)', J. Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life, 1895; ob. I.e., one who operates on the move: see fly, take on the.—6. See touch on the fly.

fly, v. To steal: 1777 (see flying the basket); app. † by 1820.—2, etc. See the fly verbal phrases.—3. To open a window: see fly a window. I.e., to make it fly open.—4. To cheat, to swindle: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Ex fly, adj., 1.

fly, adj. 'Knowing. Acquainted with another's meaning or proceeding. The rattling cove is fly; the coachman knows what we are about': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Vigilant; suspicious; cunning; not easily robbed or duped . . .; I'm fly to you'; 1823, Bee; 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad, 'Or we'll knap a fogle with fingers fly', glossed as 'skilful'; 1851, Mayhew; 1852, R. W. Vanderkiste, A Six Years' Mission among the Dens of London, 'His forks were not fly enough, that is, his fingers were not sufficiently lithe'. By 1855 or 1860, it had > low s., except in U.S.A., where it remained c. until ca. 1900: G. P. Burnham, 1872, defines it as 'sharp, quick, knowing, experienced, posted'; A. Pinkerton, 1881. As The O.E.D. remarks, it prob. derives from the S.E. v., to fly: to mankind, flying has ever connoted unusual skill. Jon Bee (1823), however, may possibly be right when he says that it 'is a corruption of Fla (for flash)'.—2. One who understands and speaks cant: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life; extant.

fly, high. See high fly.

fly, maunder on the. See maunder on the fly.

fly, on the. See downright, on the; also see fly, take on the. Independently: e.g., in J. D. Burn, The Autobiography of a Beggar-Boy, 1855; Mayhew, London Labour, IV, 1862; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years; 1893, F & H.

fly, put. See put down, at end of Vaux quot'n.

fly, take on the. To beg from a person as he is walking: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor; 1893, F & H; extant.

fly a blue pigeon. See blue pigeon, fly the.

fly a flag. See flag, carry a.

fly a kite. See fly the kite.—2. (Concerning safe-breakers) 'If they smell a job, they "fly a kite"; that is, send a letter to the fence, who will "fly a stiff" (likewise send a letter) in reply': 1889, C. T.

Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; in C. 20, also U.S.A., as in Flynn's, April 28, 1934, Convict No. 12639, "Flying a kite," or passing a note'; 1934, Rose; extant.—3. Rare for 'to pass counterfeit money': U.S.A.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

fly a stiff. See fly a kite, 2.

fly a window. To raise a window: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1894, F & H; extant. I.e., to cause it to fly up.

fly(-)away. A deserter from the army or from the navy: tramps': since ca. 1917: 1931, Stiff; 1931, IA; by 1943, s. One who flies—i.e., runs—away.

fly-back. A worthless cheque: since ca. 1930. Black, 1943. Perhaps suggested by bouncer, 7.

fly ball. A detective: 1919, Dialect Notes, F. H. Sidney, 'Hobo Cant'; 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Especially one who is a member of a city police forec'; 1934, M. H. Weseen; extant. By perversion of bull, n., 5.

fly bloke. A shrewd tramp; a clever criminal: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, "I'm proud 't he's turned out a fly bloke"; by 1920, low s. See fly, adj., and bloke, 2.

fly-buzzing is mentioned—without definition—in A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, 1869, at p. 71, where it seems to mean 'pick-pocketry'; ob. Lit., shrewd pocket-picking. See the elements.

fly-by-night. 'A "fly-by-night" is the more daring young tramp who seldom rides anything but fast mail or passenger trains,' Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler, 1922; extant. He boards them at night.

fly canaries. 'To pass off used tram tickets as new ones,' Baker, 1945: Australian: since ca. 1910. Cf. the semantics of fly the kite.

fly catch. An easy capture or arrest: since ca. 1910; slightly ob. IA, 1931. The fly refers to the shrewdness (fly, adj., 1) of the captor.

fly cop. A 'sharp (police) officer; an officer that is well posted,' i.e. informed; 'one who understands his business': 1859, Matsell; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, 'A ready, quick-witted [police] officer or detective'; 1889, B & L, who note its currency, at that date, among English thieves; 1893, F & H; by ca. 1903, it had been assimilated into sense 2. See fly, adj., and cop, n.—2. A detective: 1859, Matsell (at dusty); 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne; 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps; 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers That Prey; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, G. Burgess & W. Irwin, The Picaroons; 1904, H. Hapgood, 'The fly-cops (detectives) of Philadelphia'; 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1909, Ware, citing it as American; April 1919, The (American) Bookman; 1919, Edgar Wallace, The Green Rust (citing it as U.S.); 1923, N. Anderson, The Hobo; 1924, G. C. Henderson; Oct. 18, 1924, Flynn's; 1925, Glen H. Mullins; April 27, 1929, Flynn's; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; 1933, Ersine, 'An elbow, usually one eager for promotion'; 1934, M. H. Weseen—but by this date, it was s. in U.S.—teste Godfrey Irwin, letter of Feb. 1, 1937; by 1946 (anon. letter, June 9), verging on s. in Canada.

fly copper is an occ. variant of fly cop, 1: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, 'The officers . . . left in true "fly copper" style'; by 1930, no longer c. See fly, adj., and copper, n.

fly cove. A person that is vigilant, not easily duped or robbed: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude; by 1890, s. See fly, adj., and cove, 1.

fly dick. A smart detective; a detective that is a member of a city police force: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, M. H. Wesen; by 1940, s. See the elements.

fly faker. A smart (petty) swindler: 1883, James Greenwood, Odd People in Odd Places, "You've come to the wrong shop for beds, guv'ner. You won't get 'em here, at Flyfaker's 'Otel"; ob. by 1930; † by 1945.

fly-flapped, 'whipt in the stocks, or at the cart's tail' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788): s., not c.

fly flat. "I have an appointment with a fly flat (i.e. a clever fool)"; Anon., Revelations of a Lady Detective, 1864; by 1889 (B & L), it was turf s. See fly, adj., and flat, n.—2. A revolver or a pistol: U.S.A., esp. on Pacific Coast: since 1920. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on gat.

fly-gay. Intelligent victim of a confidence man or other swindler: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942 and 1945. Cf. fly flat, 1, and gay cat; and see gay.

fly-hooking, n. 'Snatching from the hand, bag, or basket': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 321); ob. Robbery as easy as fly-catching; or, if fly is adj. (not noun), the term connotes smart thieving.

fly low. 'Thieves are said to fly low when keeping out of the way, because "wanted" by the police': c. and low s., from ca. 1870: 1889, B & L; by 1900, no longer fairly classifiable as c.

fly man is a criminal that is not only very shrewd and alert but also well acquainted with the law: prob. since ca. 1830, despite the fact that my earliest record seems to be The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), 1845; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1887, J. W. Horsley (as flyman); 1927, Edgar Wallace, The Squeaker; extant. See fly, adj.—2. 'I . . . was caught by a flyman (policeman), and taken to the station house,' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904: U.S.A.: 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, where (p. 23) it is applied to 'the store "flyman"' or house detective; slightly ob. Cf. fly cop, 1.

fly mug. A policeman: yeggs': 1916, The Literary Digest (Aug.; article 'Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); 1925, Leverage, who defines it as 'a detective'—as also does Kane, 1927; Sept. 1, 1928, Flynn's, Henry Leverage, 'The Man Who Couldn't Squeal' (detective); 1931, Stiff (private detective); extant. See the elements.

fly my kite. A light: orig. (ca. 1850–65), c.; by 1900, †. 'Ducange Anglicus', 1857. It began as a thieves' rhyming term.

fly(-)paper, be on the; the fly-paper act. To have had one's fingerprints taken; to be a criminal (esp. a burglar, a thief) known to the police: since ca. 1910, the Act having been passed in 1909: 1933, Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'He gets nicked for suspect and, being on the flypaper, he gets a stretch in the Ville'; ibid., 'He would be uncommon lucky if the judge didn't put him under the Prevention of Crimes Act for seven years. And when a bloke was on the flypaper, well he just stayed on. Twelve months for suspect every time a boggy so much as looked at him'; 1937, David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 'The Prevention of Crimes Act is referred to as the "flypaper Act"'; extant.

fly pitch; fly pitcher. Pitchmen's s. for 'a wandering peddler's sales-stand, occupied for only a few minutes' quick business'; 'one who practises the art'. Philip Allingham, Cheappack, 1934.

fly the basket. Usually as vbl n., flying the basket, q.v.

fly the blue pigeon. See blue pigeon, fly the.

fly the kite, 'to raise money on bills, whether good or bad', is classified by 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857, as s.; commercial s., which it remains even in the sense, 'to issue a worthless cheque' (fly a kite).—2. 'To evacuate from a window—a term used in . . . low lodging houses': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L, (Thieves), to make one's exit by a window'; 1893, F & H (both nuances); extant. Ex the aerial nature of the exploit.—3. To despatch a letter, esp. from prison: U.S.A.: 1927, Kane; April 5, 1930, (Joseph F. Fishman in) Flynn's; extant. See kite, n., 2.

fly the mags. 'To gamble, by tossing up halfpence': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, "Fly the mags, and let's see," replied Rust'; 1859, H; 1889, B & L; slightly ob. See mag, n.

flyer or flier, usually pl. A shoe: 1698, B.E., 'Flyers, c. Shoes'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1880, The New York Slang Dictionary; app. † by 1890 in Britain and by 1900 in U.S.A. Because in shoes one can run fast?—2. An express train: American tramps': 1922, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life, 'Decking on top of a "flyer"'; by 1930, no longer c. Obviously ex its speed.—3. A fugitive from justice: American: 1935, Hargan; extant.—4. A drug addict: U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. BVB (flier and flyer). He 'flies' from reality; an escapist.

flyers (or F—), the. The Flying Squad: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Edgar Wallace, The Flying Squad, 1928.

flying camps. 'Beggars plying in Bodies at Funerals,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose (repeating B.E.); † by 1893 (F & H)—prob. by 1860. They move about in gangs.

flying caper. An escape from prison: 1864 (a newspaper, cited by F & H); 1893, F & H; 1923, Jules Manchon, Le Slang; extant. Cf. caper, 2.

flying cat. An owl: 1698, B.E. (at flutter); † by 1890 (F & H). Cats and owls are active at night.

flying cove. 'Flying Coves. Fellows who obtain money by pretending to persons who have been robbed, that they can give them information that will be the means of recovering their lost goods': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; † by 1940.

flying gigger; or better, f. jigger. A turnpike gate: 1785, Grose (. . . gigger); by the 1850's, used in America—Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; † by 1900. See jigger.

flying in the clouds. See floating.

flying jib. 'A souse; one who is talkative while intoxicated' (Leverage): 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (Glossary, s.v. 'Bum'—loosely as a synonym of that term); 1925, Leverage; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. nautical three sheets in the wind, 'tipsy'.

flying jigger. See flying gigger.

flying light. Travelling light; without food; hungry: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

flying porter 'is a fellow dressed like a porter; a pen and ink and sheet of paper set him up. He watches the ale-houses which sell purl early in the morning, where he looks over the yesterday's Daily Advertiser, and drinks a pennyworth. He looks out for some robbery that has been committed,' notes all the details, writes to the owner and offers to discover the goods, goes to the owner, receives a reward and a tip, and then completely disappears, the owner failing to receive the goods: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1860.

flying stationer, 'a ballad singer; a hawk of penny histories', was perhaps orig. c., but prob. always s.: 1796 (therefore current at least as early as 1791), Grose, 3rd ed. Because he kept on the move. For an excellent account, see Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I (1851), at pp. 214-15.

flying the basket. 'As there is not a stage coach or machine which comes to London, but hath been robbed in this manner; it is an unpardonable neglect to suffer any portmanteau, box, or any parcel to be in the basket behind, unless there is somebody in it, till it comes to the inn it is going to . . . ; a minute is sufficient to do the business, it being customary now for thieves to have little boys, which they chuck into the basket, who hands what they find there out to the others,' Anon., Thieving Detected, 1777; † by 1860. This basket is 'the overhanging back compartment on the outside of a stage-coach' (O.E.D.); for the fly, cf. fly the blue pigeon.

flying the blue pigeon. See blue pigeon, flying the.

flying the kite. See fly the kite.

flyman. See fly man.

flymp. See fimp.

flyms(e)y. See flimsy.

flymy. 'Knowing, cunning, roguish': 1859, H; 1864, H, 3rd ed., classifies it as 'Seven Dials and Low Life'; by 1887 (Baumann) no longer c. Either a disguise-elaboration of fly, adj., or a blend of fly, adj. + slimy—though this is less likely.

flypaper. See fly paper, be on the.

foaled by an acorn. See acorn . . .

fob, n. A cheat; a trick: since ca. 1620. The O.E.D. considers it to have been S.E. until C. 19, during which it was s.; it is now very ob. But B.E., 1698, may have been right in classifying it as c., and c. it may have remained for a generation. Ex fob, to cheat or deceive.—2. Hence, a pickpocket: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.—3. 'Special names are given to the pockets, such as . . . fob (under the belt),' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937; Ersine, 1933, had defined it as 'the change pocket in trousers': U.S.A.: C. 20.

fob, v., 'to pick (a person's) pocket', is given by B & L (1889), as 'old cant': but this seems to be the only record, if we except Leverage (1925)—but then Leverage may be merely copying from B & L. Ex S.E. fob, a fob pocket.—2. Hence (?), in U.S.A., to snatch money from pockets: 1903, Josiah Flynt, The Rise of Roderick Clowd, 'He declared defiantly that he would learn to "fob" as well as anybody, and he kept his threat': ob. Cf. fobbing, q.v.

fob, gut a. To steal a watch from the fob (or small breeches-pocket): ca. 1780-1850. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial, 1819.

fob-diver. A pickpocket: since ca. 1880; ob. Binstead. Cf. fob, n., 3, and see diver.

fob-worker. A pickpocket specializing in the contents (notably watches) of fobs: since ca. 1890. The Evening News, Dec. 9, 1936. Cf. prec.: worker = thief.

fobber. A pickpocket that specializes in snatching coin (or other money) from persons' loose-change pockets: 1903, J. Flynt, The Rise of Roderick Clowd (p. 61); 1925, Leverage; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'An old pickpocket, or one . . . able only to steal from outside or fob pockets'; 1938, Charles E. Still, Styles in Crime; slightly ob. See the next entry.—2. A swindler: 1925, Leverage. Suspect.

fobbing, n. "'D'y'u ever do any fobbin', Rud?" . . . "What's fobbin'?" Roderick returned innocently. "Switchin' [i.e., stealing by snatching: see switch] change out o' change pockets. If yer slick at it you can take in a lot", Josiah Flynt, The Rise of Roderick Clowd (p. 60), 1903; 1938, Charles E. Still, Styles in Crime; slightly ob. Ex 'fob pocket'.

focus. 'Light for a pipe,' D. Haggart, Life (Glossary), 1821: ca. 1810-60. Possibly ex, or suggested by, fogus, and:

fog, n. Smoke: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; app. †, in Britain at least, by 1890. Abbr. fogus; or transferred sense of S.E. fog, 'a thick mist', as The O.E.D. holds.

fog, v. To smoke (a pipe): Nov. 15, 1836, W. H. Smith in The Individual, 'There is a nook in the boozing ken, | Where many a mud I fog'; † by 1890. Ex the n.—2. To fire, shoot off, a firearm; to shoot (a person): U.S.A.: 1929, Givens, 'Fogging or smoking—shooting a gun'; April 12, 1930, Flynn's Thomas Topham; 1930, Burke, 'I takes me heat an' fogs 'em'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. Proleptic: 'After gun-play a haze of powder smoke hangs over the scene. See "smoke", "smoke wagon"' (Irwin).

fogle. A silk handkerchief (contrast clout and wipe): 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, Sessions Papers; ca. 1819, The Young Prig; 1823, Bee; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'Whether the blue fogle . . . or the yellow-man'; 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III, 'Skilful old pickpockets, who knew all the rigs of priggling a reader or fogle'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'Fogles and fawnies soon went their way'; 1838, Wm Hone, The Table Book, 'Properly and strictly a handkerchief with a bird's eye pattern upon it'—but the 'strictly' is rather misleading, the definition being caused by the etymology, 'from the German vogel, a bird' (Hone); possibly, however, the origin is the It. foglia, 'a leaf'; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad; 1839, Brandon, 'A handkerchief'; April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp'; 1842, P. Egan, Captain Macheath; 1846 (see etter); 1848, Sinks of London; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1856, G. L. Chester-ton; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; 1857, Augustus Mayhew; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1925, Leverage—perhaps merely copying B & L, but cf. fogle-getter; by 1930, † in Britain; by 1940, ob. in U.S.A. Origin: see the note at quotation of 1838; Mayhew, The Great World of London, 1856, p. 6, supports the Ger. origin and says that the term 'has been taken . . . from the German vagrants, such as the bird-cage men'; B & L prefer the Italian origin.

fogle-drawing = fogle-hunting: ca. 1810–90. Bec, 1823. See draw, v.

fogle-getter. 'One who steals handkerchiefs or trifles,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See fogle.

fogle-hunter. A pickpocket specializing in 'fogles' (see fogle): 1822, A Real Paddy, Real Life in Ireland; 1823, Bee; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'The lower cockneys, including diver-kids and fogle-hunters'; 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, Appendix; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford, 'Who's here so base as would be a fogle-hunter?'; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.), of a neckerchief-thief; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 'Most young thieves commence their career by taking handkerchiefs, and are called fogle-hunters'; 1865, A Practical Hand, Convicts; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; † by 1930. See fogle.

fogle-hunting. The art and practice of stealing pocket handkerchiefs (from the person): 1823, Egan's Grose (at napkin-snatching); 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1859, Matsell; 1887, Baumann; 1893, F & H; † by 1930. See fogle.

fogled(-)up. Wrapped in a handkerchief: 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'His right hand, fogled up and slung'; † by 1930. Ex fogle.

fogram. A fussy old fellow: 1881, The New York Slang Dictionary; 1889, B & L; † by 1920. An elaboration of 'old fogey': adopted from late C. 18–mid-19 English s.

fogue. Fierce, fiery, hot-tempered: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; † by 1920. If authentic, this word prob. originates in Fr. fougueux.

fogus. 'Tobacco or smoke': 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles, 'Fogus, c. Tabacco'; 1698, B.E. (tobacco); 1707, J. Shirley (tobacco); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (id.); 1785, Grose, 'Tip me a gage of fogus, give me a pipe of tobacco'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; app. † by 1859, to judge by H, 1st ed., though it may have survived until ca. 1870 or 1880 in U.S.A.—cf. Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859. 'Possibly from fog, fouge, moss, and foggage, rank grass. This derivation is borne out by the analogy of "weed" . . . tobacco with "to fog" (to smoke)', B & L: but why not a 'Latin' elaboration of S.E. fog, a dense mist?

fogus, gage of. Late C. 17–early 19, with meaning as in B.E., 1698, 'Fogus, c. Tobacco. Tip me (a) gage of Fogus, c. give me a Pipe of Tobacco'; Grose. See gage and fogus.

foil (or foyl) cloy. 'Foyl-cloy, c. a Pickpocket, a Thief, a Rogue,' B.E., 1698—but B.E. means a rogue specializing in theft, usually pickpocketry—not just any rogue; 1725 (see file-cloy); app. † by 1790. Cf. file-cloy.

foiler. A pickpocket: 1666, Leathermore's Advice (or The Nicker Nicked), 'Towards night, when Ravenous Beasts usually seek their Prey, there comes in shoals of Hectors, Trappanners, Guiltis, Pads, Biters, Prigs, Divers, Lifters, Kid-Nappers, Vouchers, Mill-kens, Pymen, Decoys, Shop-Lifters, Foilers, Bulkers, Droppers, Famblers, Donnakers, Crosbyters, &c. Under the general appellation of Rooks'; app. † by 1720. Cf. filer and foil cloy.

foin. In Figging Law (the art, science, profession of pickpocketry), the foin is that member of a gang of pickpockets who actually picks the pocket: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage: app. only ca. 1585–1620. Much less gen. than foist. He makes the thrust—he thrusts his fingers into pockets. A fencing metaphor.

foist, n.; in C. 16–mid-18, usually foyst. Greene, 1591 (foist); Greene, The Second Conny-catching, 1592 (foist and foyst),—see esp. the quot'n at nip, n., where this foist or true pickpocket is clearly distinguished from the nip or cutpurse; ibid., 'The Foist is so nimble-handed, that he exceeds the jugler for agilitie, and hath his legiar de maine as perfectly. Therefore an exquisite Foist must have three properties that a good Surgeon should have, and that is, an Eagles eie, a Ladies hand, and a Lions heart. An Eagles eie to spy out a purchase, to have a quicke insight where the boung lies, and then a Lions heart, not to feare what the end will be, and then a Ladies hande to be light and nimble, the better and the more easie to dive into any mans pocket'; 1592, Greene gives an excellent description of his activities—abridged thus from what seems to be a conscious elaboration of the preceding passage:—'He must as the Cat watch for a Mouse, and walke Powles [i.e., St Paul's], Westminster, the Exchange, and such common haunted places, and there have a curious eye to the person, whether he be Gentleman, Citizen or Farmer, and note, either where his boung lyes, whether in his hoase or pockets and then dogge the partie into a presse where his staule'—accomplice—'with heaving and shoving shall so molest him, that hee shall not feele when wee strip him of his boung, although it bee never so fast or cunningly coucht about him . . . Besides in faires and markets, and in the circuites after Judges, what infinit mony is gotten from honest meaning men, that either busie about their necessarie affaires, or carelessly looking to their Crownes, light amongst us that be foysts, tush wee dissemble in show, we goe so neat in apparrell, so orderly in outward appearance, some like Lawyers Clarkes, others like Servingmen, that attended there about their maisters businesse, that wee are hardly smoakt, versing upon all men with kinde courtesies and faire wordes, and yet being so warily watchful, that a good purse cannot be put up in a faire, but wee sigh if wee share it not amongst us . . . Who is so base, that if he see a pocket faire before him, wil not foyst in if he may, or if foysting will not serve, use his knife and nip, for although there bee some foysts that will not use their knives, yet I holde him not a perfect workeman or maister of his Mysterie, that will not cut a purse as well as Foyst a pocket.' The term seems to have > † before 1700; nevertheless it occurs as 'female pickpocket' in Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull, 1822, as being used in 1820! App. a substantivization of foist, v., 2.—2. Hence (orig. loosely), 'a Cheat, a Rogue' given to swindling: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † in England by 1889 (B & L) and in U.S.A. by 1910.—3. A sham, a thing that is inferior or unguenuine: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, where it is applied to a stolen watch; † by 1920.

foist, v.; in C. 16–mid-18, often foyst. To slip (an extraneous die), esp. by palming, into the game; to substitute (an inferior article for a valuable one): c. >, by 1700, j. >, by 1800, gen. S.E.: as a dicing term, it was mentioned by Ascham in 1545 (O.E.D.); Gilbert Walker, Diceplay, 1552, uses it also as 'to substitute'. Prob. ex Dutch dial. vuisten, 'to take in the vuist—hand, fist': O.E.D.—2. Hence (?), v.i., to be a pickpocket (not a cut-purse): 1585, Fleetwood (O.E.D.), 'Note that ffoyst is to cutt a pocket, nyppe is to cutt a purse, lyft is to robbe a shoppe'; 1592, Greene, A Disputation (Lawrence, pickpocket, speaking), 'Who is so base, that if he see a pocket faire before him, wil not foist in if he may, or if foysting will not serve, use his knife and nip'; also v.t., to rob of . . . by foisting, as ibid., 'That woulde goes hard if I foyst him not of all that hee hath'; 1785, Grose—but the term may have been † by 1660 or even a generation earlier.—3. V.t., to steal from a pocket: perhaps implied in the 1585 quot'n of sense 2; 1592, Greene, The Blacke Bookes Messenger, 'She could foyst a pocket well, and get me some pence'; 1610, Rowlands; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.—but the term may have been † as early as 1700.

foist, gentleman. See gentleman foist.

foister. He who 'foists' at gaming: 1552, Gilbert Walker, A manifest detection of Diceplay; by 1600 it had prob. > s. See foist, v., 1.—2. A pickpocket: ca. 1580–1630. Grose, 1785, attests to it at nyppe, and I deduce the period from foist, v., 2 and 3. Matsell's inclusion of the term in Vocabulum, 1859, may safely be ignored. See foist, v., 2 and 3.

foisting. Orig. c., it had, by 1600, or soon after, > jargon. Gilbert Walker, 1552: 'R. But what shift have they to bring the flat'—a false die of low value—'in and out?—M. A jolly fine shift, that properly is called foysting, and it is nothing else but a sleight to carry easily within the hand . . . So that when either he or his partner shall cast the dice, the flat comes not abroad till he have made a great hand, and won as much as him list . . . To foist finely, and redily, and with the same hand to tell money to and fro, is a thing hardly learned, and asketh a bold sprite and long experience, though it be one of the first [to] be learned'.—2. Pick-pocketry as art or profession: 1592, Robert Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, differentiates between this and purse-cutting, which is termed nipping; in A Disputation he has a most informative 'disputation between Laurence a Foist and faire Nan a Traffique, whether a Whore or a Thiefe, is most prejuditial'.

fold up. v.i. To abstain from drugs; to take a drug-cure: since ca. 1925. BVB, 1942. Cf. English s. fold up, 'to cease; to collapse'.

folks. 'Any individual known to be in league with or friendly to criminals,' IA, 1931; 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra, 'I keep forgetting you're folks'—i.e., a criminal, capable and dependable; extant. Cf. people—also good people and right people.

follow the stiffs. To attend a funeral: esp. among pickpockets: Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); extant.

foney is a rare variant of phoney. (M. H. Wesen, 1934.)

foo-foo dust. Powdered narcotic: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. Cf. dust, n., 3; foo-foo may duplicate foo, ex foon = fun, n., 3.

fool-taker; fool-taking. In their gen. senses

(fool-maker, -making), these words are S.E., but in their specific senses (cony-catcher, cony-catching) they are prob. to be classified as c. during the period 1592–ca. 1610. Robert Greene, The Thirde and last Part of Conny-catching. With the new devised Knarish Art of Foole-taking, heads a section thus: 'Of a notable knave, who for his cunning deceiving a Gentleman of his purse: scorned the name of a Conny-catcher, and would needes be termed a Foole-taker, as master and beginner of that new found Arte'; 1608, Dekker, both terms.—2. Also certainly c. is that sense, prob. current ca. 1600–30, which Dekker—after Rowlands, 1602—gives to it in The Belman of London, 1608: 'The fourth Jump is called Foole-taking; and that is done severall waies, sometimes by setting a couple of suttile rogues to sing ballads on a stall, till a number of people presse about them to buy their trash, and then their purses being discovered, are quickly in the Nips fingers. Others are Fooletaken by letting chambers to fellowes like serving-men, in the name of such an Esquire, or such a Knight, or such a Captaine new come from the low countries, bringing in a trunk exceeding heavy, and crambd full of brick-bats, which is left in the hired chamber, and five times the value of it lifted away in stead of it. With this Jump many maidservants, and their wealthy Maisters have been over-reached by counterfeite kinsmen that have brought a cheese or a gammon of Bacon to the poore wench, claiming kinred of her whether she will or no, and afterwards being (for his cheese and bacon) invited to the Citizens table, have in the night time taken away plate or other commodities in exchange of his white-meates.'

foolish. 'An expression among impures'—i.e., among prostitutes—'signifying the cully who pays, in opposition to a flash man [or harlot's bully]. Is he foolish or flash?': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1893, F & H; † by 1930.

foolish factory, 'department, wing, ward, etc., for insane convicts'; not convicts' c. but gen. prison s. In, e.g., Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 1936.

foolish powder. Heroin: 1930, Burke, 'The mutts bang up on foolish powder and go on the hist'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who implies currency since ca. 1920; 1933, Eagle; slightly ob. Proleptic: cf. happy dust.—2. 'More lately, any narcotic which robs the user of his senses and judgment,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931; since ca. 1928.

Fool's Paradise. London. But the following quot'n does not justify us in classifying the term as indubitable c.: 1659, Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, '[The Damnee Captain] makes London (by a new denomination called Fool's Paradise) his tenement, from which he receives good round summes of money for rent'.

foon. See fun, n., 3.

foont. A sovereign (20 shillings): 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, 'The skin had three finlips and a foont'; 1859, H; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'Five or six foont (sovereigns)'; in 1887, Baumann implies that it is †; but it did not fall into disuse until after 1889 (B & L)—prob. ca. 1910. I.e., Ger. Pfund.

foot-it. 'A walk . . . A pad, ready-over, stride, foot-it,' C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary): ca. 1870–1914. Cf. coll. foot it, to walk.

foot juice. Of 'the wine dumps, where wine bums . . . hung out,' Jack Black, referring to the first decade of the century, remarks 'Long, dark, dirty rooms with rows of rickety tables and a long bar behind which were barrels of the deadly "foot juice" or "red ink", as the "winos" called it,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926; 1931, IA, 'Cheap, potent liquor'; extant. 'That which trips one up' (Godfrey Irwin): cf. s. tanglefoot, 'whiskey'.

foot pad; foot-pad; footpad. One who, on foot, robs in highway and byway: 1683, Dryden (O.E.D.); 1698, B.E. (foot-pad); Grose 1785 (foot pad). Prob. c. until ca. 1750, then s. until ca. 1800, then S.E. In the Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708, there is a nuance: 'Foot-Pads. Such as rob Foot-Passengers.' (Note that A New Canting Dict., 1725, gives the synonym low pad and makes this, 'generally a bloody and merciless Crew of Villains', the 44th Order of Canters.) Cf. pad, n.

foot-pad, go out on the. To (go and) rob on the highway as a footpad: 1721, Trial of John Dykes, in Select Trials, 1734; † by 1890.

foot-pad rig. Foot-paddery: 1781, Geo. Parker, A View of Society (see quot'n at royal foot scamp); † by 1900.

foot-padder. A footpad: 1683, Anon., A Murther Committed at Islington . . . by Four Foot-padders; app. † by 1780. One who pads it—travels—afoot.

foot race. 'A confidence game in which a runner enters into collusion to defraud a victim who bets on the race,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937, where the professional thief concerned has written that 'Both the lemon and the foot race are now ancient history'; the term, therefore, was app. current ca. 1890–1930.

foot scamp is a variant of royal foot scamp, q.v., but it also = a footpad, as appears, e.g., in Potter, 1797, and in Andrewes, 1809; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1859 (H, 1st ed.), at latest. See scamp, n., 3.

foot(-)scamperer. A footpad: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator (glossary); app. † by 1810. Compare prec. entry.

footballer. A warder addicted to kicking the prisoners: Australian convicts': C. 20. Vance Marshall, The World of the Living Dead, 1919; Baker, 1945. He treats them as if they were footballs.

footman's maund. A special sore designed to excite the public to give alms to him who has it or induces it: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'When a soare is placed on the backe of the hand, and that hee saith hee was hurt by an horse, then it is called Foote-mans Mawnd' (cf. mason's maund and soldier's maund); 1698, B.E., 'An artificial Sore made with unslack'd Lime, Soap and the Rust of old Iron, on the Back of a Beggar's hand'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, combining Dekker and B.E.; † by 1860. See maund, n. and v.

footpad. See foot pad.

for keeps, 'definitively; for good and all': not c. but s., app. orig. American.

foraging, 'stealing articles of life, as fowls, apples, garden-stuff, hay, turnip-tops, &c.' (Jon Bee, 1823), may possibly have been c., but prob. it was euphemistic s.

force the voucher is not c. but low sporting—esp. turf—s.

Ford children. Illegitimate children; esp. those born of a 'Ford marriage' (q.v.): tramps':

since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; by 1940, low s.

Ford family. 'A family cruising about the country in a cheap automobile. The man sometimes works, at fruit-picking or in the harvests, and the children as like as not steal to help support the group' (Godfrey Irwin): tramps': since ca. 1920: by 1940, s. The commonest automobile in the U.S.A. is the Ford.

Ford marriage. 'A union usually born of gasoline and good nature. The man and woman continue to live together, travelling about the country from job to job until the man tires of his consort . . . If the two get along well together, or if the man is "easy" or has a sense of responsibility, a "Ford family" results' (Godfrey Irwin): tramps': since ca. 1910; by 1940, low s. Cf. Ford children.

Ford mother. The adult female in a 'Ford family' (q.v.); a woman travelling by car with a migratory worker: tramps': since ca. 1920; by 1940, s. (Godfrey Irwin.)

fore pokers. See poker, 3.

fore stall. See forestall.

foreign parts, go to. To be transported as a convict: 1823, Bee; in 1818, The London Guide has 'Foreign Parts, transportation generally'; † by 1900. Cf. go out foreign.

foreign lurker. A vagrant specializing in 'the foreigner's lurk' (q.v.): 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; † by 1900.

foreigner. See the quot'n at accidental; 1933, Ersine, 'Any convict who is not a professional thief'; 1935, Hargan, 'An inmate not in for rackets; rapists, etc.'; extant. Not a 'native' of crime.

foreigner's lurk, the. 'Considerable numbers go on this lurk; they represent themselves as Foreigners in distress' and usually carry a faked letter of recommendation: 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; app. † by 1900. See lurk, n., 1.

foreskins. Chopped beef: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex circumcision.

forestall; better, fore-stall. 'In garotting, a look-out in front of the operator, or ugly-man (q.v.); the watch behind is the back-stall (q.v.)': 1893, F & H; ob. I.e., fore, 'in front' + stall, n., 1.

forger is a false die of some sort: the sole authority seems to be R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 1591, apropos of 'cheating law' (q.v.), 'Pardon me Gentlemen, for although no man could better then my self this lawe and his tearmes, and the name of their Cheats, Barddice, Flats, Forgers, Langrets, Gourds, Demies, and many other, with their nature, and the crosses and contraries to them upon advantage, yet for some speciall reasons, herein I will be silent'. Cf. the † legal forger, 'the action of forging', which is recorded some thirty years earlier.

forget-me-not. A venereal disease: convicts': since ca. 1918: 1935, Hargan. An effectual remembrancer of that dear girl who made the gift.

fork, n. A pickpocket: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; by 1859, current—or, at least, known—in New York (see Matsell's Vocabulum); 1889, B & L; † by 1893 (F & H). Prob. associated semantically with the idea in sense 2.—2. 'Forks, the two fore-fingers of the hand': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee, 'The middle and fore-finger, being both of a length, are those with which pick-pockets fork out the contents of pockets, &c.'; 1833, Benj. Webster, The Golden Farmer, where it is used in the singular, either for the index finger or for the whole hand; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1852, R. W. Vanderkiste (fly, adj.); 1859, Matsell; by 1864, at latest in England, it was (low) s.—see H, 3rd ed.—3. Erroneously, a pocket: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open. A misreading of the entry in Andrewes (see sense 1).

fork, v. To pick the pocket of: 1698, B.E., 'Let's fork him, c. let us Pick that Man's Pocket, the newest and most dextrous way: It is, to thrust the Fingers, strait, stiff, open, and very quick into the Pocket, and so closing them, hook what can be held between them'; 1820, Alex Smith, Highwaymen, III; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1859 (witness H, 1st ed.) in Britain; still current in U.S.A.—witness, e.g., Leverage, 1925, and Kane, 1927. Cf. fork, n., 1.—2. Hence, to steal by pickpocketry in the manner described in sense 1: 1698, B.E. (see quot'n at meg); ca. 1819, Anon., The Young Prig; 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'A skin, which I forked out of a keek cloy'; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; Sept. 1852, Sessions Papers, 'He'—a criminal—'said, "Charley, fork it; fork it!"'; 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', 2nd ed.; 1859, H, 1st ed.; 1896, E. W. Hornung, The Rogue's March; † by 1900—perhaps by 1860 or 1870.—3. Hence, loosely, to steal in any way: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. xxiii, 'C was a Cracksman, that forked all the plate'; † by 1893 (F & H).—4. To give: since ca. 1925: Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938, 'I forked him a quid'. Ex fork out.

fork, pitch the. See pitch the fork.

fork out, 'to supply the money needed', 'to pay the bill', seems to have, orig., been low s.—it is, e.g., used by the young pickpocket with whom Oliver Twist falls in on his way to London—but it was, I think, never c. Lit., 'to take out with one's "forks" or fingers'.

forker. A pickpocket: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; ob. by 1900; † by 1920. Ex fork, v., 2.

forking is the vbl n. that corresponds to fork, v., with which it is contemporaneous.

forkless. Clumsy; unworkmanlike, unprofessional: 1821, Haggart, Life, 'Two very willing, but poor snibs, accompanying a lushy cove, and going to work in a very forkless manner'; 1893, F & H; † by 1940. As if without 'forks' (see fork, n., 2).

forks. See fork, n., 2.

forks, tip the. To steal (e.g., bank-notes) by slipping one's fingers into the person's pocket; 1821, D. Haggart (see link); ob. by 1910; by 1945, virtually †. See fork, n., 2.

forks down, put one's. See put one's forks down.

forlorn hope. In gambling at cards or at dice, those who, in a group game, lose are called the forlorn hope: 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1698, B.E., 'Forlorn-hope, c. losing Gamesters'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; the sense appears to have > † by 1750 or so. Ex the lit. sense—'a lost detachment'—of the Dutch original.—2. Hence, 'a gamester's last stake': 1785, Grose. Perhaps gamesters' c., but prob. a mere particular application of the S.E. sense, 'a remote chance'.

form. See ferm(e), reference of 1707.—2. Reformatory: South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946, 'Trousers with which boys in the "form" or reformatory are issued'. Cf. the American ref.

forney is a variant of fawney, n., esp. in sense 1: 1822, Pierce Egan, The Life of Samuel Denmore Hayward, the Modern Macheath; 1828, P. Egan, Finish of Tom, Jerry, and Logic, 'He sports a diamond forney on his little finger'; 1893, F & H; † by 1920.

fortie or forty. A crook; a swindler: Australian: C. 20. 1927 (O.E.D. Sup.); Baker, 1942. Either because he 'comes it strong', that being his forte, or in reference to the fact that in his forties a man is in his mental prime; or, most prob., an allusion to 'Ali Baba and the Forty Thieves'.

fortune-teller. A judge: 1698, B.E., 'Fortune-Tellers, c. the Judges of Life and Death, so called by the Canting Crew'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Fortune teller, or cunning man, a judge, who tells every prisoner his fortune, lot, or doom; to go before the fortune teller, lambskin man, or conjuror, to be tried at an assize'; 1828, P. Egan, Finish of Tom, Jerry, and Logic, 'He had been werry cruelly used by Fortune Tellers, when he was quite a mere boy'—glossed as 'the Judges at the Old Bailey'; † by 1893 (F & H) in Britain, the term has survived—or, in C. 20, been revived—in the U.S.A.: witness Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936.

forty. See the next two entries.—3. See fortie.

forty, snitch for the. See snitch for . . .

forty, weigh. See weigh. In a song current in Byron's youth and quoted by Byron in a note to st. XIX of canto XI (1823) of Don Juan, there occurs the significant 'When she hears of your scaly mistake, | She'll surely turn snitch for the forty'.

forty-fives. 'Monicker for navy beans, givers of energy,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1917. I.e., Colt .45 revolvers: cf. repeaters (beans), other energy-givers.

forty-four. A prostitute: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on whore.

forty-pounder. 'The rascally forty-pounders', glossed as 'a cant name for [police] officers; who received that reward with each "Tyburn ticket"': 1841, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1890. Cf. the entry at weigh.

forty-rod. Strong liquor, esp. whiskey. It occurs in P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914, yet it is not tramps' c. but mid-C 19-20 s., as The D.A.E. makes quite clear; current also in Canada—witness Captain Burton Deane's Mounted Police Life in Canada (1916), where it is cited, along with red eye, as current in 1889. Effective at long distance; with 'a hell of a kick'.

foss, n. See phos.

fossed, thrown in a boxing-match, is not c., but pugilistic s. Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 1859—see p. 126. But in the general sense, 'thrown down' (cf. dinged: ding, v., 2), it may be c.: 1881, The New York Slang Dict. I.e., ditched: from fosse, a deep ditch.

foul. Patently guilty: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (at spread), 'The cove pinched a keeler of spread, and was pulled foul . . .', the fellow stole a tub of butter, and was arrested with it in his possession'; 1860, C. Martel, The Detective's Notebook (England); † by 1910. Ex S.E. sense.

Foul Water and Dirty Cars. The F.W. and D.C.—the Fort Worth and Denver City railroad: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; 1931, I.A.

foulcher. A purse: 1877 (but referring to ca. 1870), Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, 'What! try it on to sling my hook after a few foulchers and tickers when I'd 300 quid safe?—not I'; 1893, F & H; † by 1930.

four bits. 'Fifty cents, or dollars', Ersine, 1933: C. 20. By 1940, s.

four bones. The knees: 1857, Punch, Jan. 21; 1893, F & H; † by 1920.

four-flusher, 'a shameless or most impudent bluffer', or, as No. 1500 phrases it in Life in Sing Sing, 1904, 'one who poses for effect', is not c. but s.—orig., poker players' s.

four-footed cardinal. A mounted policeman: South America: since ca. 1910. Harry Franck, Working North from Patagonia, 1921. Cf.:—

four-runner. A horse: ca. 1870–1905. Recorded in the glossary (p. 320) of C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 1889. A horse runs on four legs, in contrast to a man.

four-string. A set or group or gang of four persons: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; slightly ob. Like four horses in a team or in a racing stable.

fourpenny. A low common lodging-house, frequented by beggars, tramps, and other outcasts: 1926, Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows; ob. Ex the price charged.

fourteen penn'orth. Transportation, as convict, for fourteen years: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see knap seven penn'orth); 1823, Bee (f.p. of it); 1839, D. Jerrold, The Handbook of Swindling, "Goodbye", he said; "we may never meet again, for I am now two-and-forty, and you know . . . it's fourteen penn'orth"; app. † by 1900. Monetary references are common in prison-sentence words and phrases: cf. finif, five spot and sawbuck.

fourth degree, the. The denying, to a prisoner, of food and tobacco in order to make him talk: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Ex the journalism-engendered third degree.

fourth of July. A (gang) fight with firearms: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Like unto the fireworks of the Fourth of July celebrations.

fowl-roost. To assist (a pickpocket): Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on boost, v.

fox, n., 'a sword', is not c., as B & L assert, but metaphorical S.E.—or, at lowest, s.—2. 'Daring youths . . . were . . . in the habit of making "foxes" (artificial sores)': 1862, H. Mayhew & J. Binney, The Criminal Prisons of London; † by 1920. Ex a fox regarded as the embodiment of artful, crafty cunning.—3. 'A tramp (especially a young one)', Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant.—4. 'A "rambler" who rides, in a train, on forged or stolen hat checks or conductors' identifications slips, or in the toilet of a passenger car,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': 1934, M. H. Weseen; extant.—5. A fugitive; a running away: U.S.A.: 1933, Eagle (both); 1933, Ersine, 'Any man on the lam'; extant.

fox, v. (Of prisoners) to put a handkerchief over the eyes of a visitor that ventures among them, hustle him, and rifle his pockets,—in which process the visitor is 'done out and out, as they call it': 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society, 'So sure as you venture among them they will fox you', the practice being called to fox the cull; app. † by 1880. Prob. ex S.E. fox, to befuddle.—2. See foxing.—3. Cf. 'to follow (a person) stealthily and watch closely,' The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848: U.S.A.: † by 1937 (Irwin). Prob. suggested by S.E. dog.—4. To steal: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Cf. foxing.—5. 'To raise an artificial sore,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since ca. 1890. Prob. ex fox, n., 2.

fox the cull, often as an order. See fox, v., 1.

foxing. 'Watching in the streets for any occurrence which may be turned to profitable account': 1859, H; ob. Ex a fox's watchfulness.

foy, 'a swindler', is given by F & H (1893) as current in early C. 17: an error caused by a misreading or a misunderstanding.

foyl-cloy. See file cloy (and foil cloy).

foyst, n. See foist, n.

foyst, v. See foist, v.

foyster. See foister.

foysting. See foisting.

fragile is the white-slavers' adjective applied to girls exported under age: see kilos. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928.

frail. A woman: 1912, Alfred Henry Lewis, Apaches of New York, "What do you think . . . of them . . . showin' up at Luna Park in them skirts . . . ? It goes to prove how some frails ain't more'n half-baked"; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 'Why do these frails fall for such a louse?'; 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; March 20, 1926, Flynn's, "Oh, baby, pipe the frails he's brung with him!"; 1927, The Saturday Evening Post, C. F. Coe, 'The River Pirate'; by 1928, low s.—or merely police and journalistic s., as in John O'Connor's Broadway Racketeers. Perhaps because a woman, compared with a man, is frail-looking: 'the weaker sex'.—2. Hence, a crook's female accomplice: since ca. 1920; ob. Kernôt, 1929–31.—3. A stolen cheque: English: since ca. 1930. Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941. Ironically ex its strength: its ability to cause the thief, the casher, to fall.—4. See home-made frail.

frail die. Some kind of false die: (written) 1662, The Cheats, by John Wilson, 'Did not I teach you . . . Shewd you the mistery of your Jack in a box, | and the frail dye'; app. † by 1780. Too frail for an opponent gambler to be able to trust to its virtue.

frame, n. A 'frame-up', q.v.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; by 1930, police and journalistic s.—2. The position or posture in which a pickpocket works: since ca. 1920. Ersine.

frame, v. To arrange (a 'frame-up'); to subject a person to a 'frame-up': late C. 19–20: its use ca. 1898 is implied by Anon., 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery', Flynn's, March 23, 1929; 1919, Arthur Stringer, The Man Who Couldn't Sleep, 'I was the chicken-hearted pen-wiper . . . who had been "framed" '; 1924, George Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain, ' . . . The Big Noise's been framin' this for months'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; April 18, 1925, Flynn's; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly (R. Jordan); 1927, Charles F. Coe, Me—Gangster; by 1928, police and journalistic s. in U.S.A. The term was current in Britain at least as early as 1917: witness p. 92 (inscriptions on prison wall) of Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938. By 1935, it was—thanks to the sound-film—s. in Britain too. Short for frame up, v., and app. ex criminals' photographs hung in frames, as in 'In making my get-away, the cush got my mug. Pink had me framed and it was like finding rags to the pusher. He picked me right and the bulls were turned loose . . . The cashier saw my face as I fled from the bank and picked my picture from the Rogues' gallery, where Pinkerton placed it sometime ago,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, pp. 263-4.—2. The sense 'to arrange' (without reference to a 'frame-up'), if ever it were c., was no longer c. by ca. 1925; prob. it never was c.

frame, in the. Wanted by the police: since the late 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941.

frame a twister. To simulate a narcotic spasm, in order to obtain a drug from a doctor: addicts': since ca. 1930. See frame, v., 2, and cf. brodie.

frame-up, n. A criminal act in which an innocent person is made to appear to be a criminal; any act so arranged that the guilt will fall on a person innocent of the act: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey (p. 141); 1909, Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 'Getting the job . . . was all part of a little by-play, a nice little frame-up between him and the Captain'; 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow; 1914, A. B. Reeve, Guy Garrick; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; 1918, Arthur Stringer; 1922, Harry Kemp; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, where, however, the term simply = a trap pre-arranged by police and trainmen for criminals. By 1923, therefore, the term can no longer be strictly classified as c. Cf. the v.—2. Preliminary arrangements, including a survey of the scene of the prospective crime: since ca. 1910: "The most important part of the job is the frame-up," he went on. "Always look your mark over carefully before you go up against it. Look for wires, the make of the safe and —", Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 1929; by 1935, s.—3. 'A citizen robbed by a pickpocket,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931; extant. Cf. frame, n., 2.

frame up, v.i. and v.t. The v. corresponding to sense 1 of prec. entry: since late 1890's: 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective (see quot'n at canister, 3); 1922, H. Kemp, Tramping on Life; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar—cf. the 1923 reference in the preceding entry; 1925, Leverage (see at railroad); 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; by 1929, police and journalistic s. See frame, v., 1, 2nd paragraph.—2. Hence, to plan (a 'racket' or a crime, esp. a theft) in all its details: 1909, Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery; 1929 (but with reference to ca. 1912), Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 'Never pull off anything until you have framed up your get-away'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To arrange things in advance so that a crime may be successfully carried out'; extant.

framer. A shawl: 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H; † by 1920. It frames the wearer's shoulders.

frammagem. See frummagem.

France and Spain. Rain: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; adopted ex Cockney.

Franchucha is an Argentine word meaning a French girl or woman, hence a courtesan or a harlot, many prostitutes in the Argentine being French; orig., most of them were. Hence, it is a C. 20 white-slave term for a Frenchwoman serving as a whore of some kind in the Argentine. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928: see, e.g., the quotation at Polak.

Frank. A Dutchman: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). A slight perversion of the S.E. sense.

Frank and Hank. A bank (savings; joint stock; etc.): mainly the Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; native to U.S.A., as a surprisingly large number of rhyming terms are.

frater in S.E. signifies a friar: a sense unprinted so early as 1562, which represents the date of the earliest occurrence of the term in c. In c. it bears the meaning set forth by Awdeley: 'A Frater goeth wyth a like Lisence'—see whipjack—'to beg for some Spittlehouse or Hospital. Their pray is commonly upon poore women as they go and come to the Markets.' Harman's account adds to Awdeley's, thus: 'Some of these Fraters will cary blacke boxes at their gyrdel, wher in they have a briefe of the Queenes majesties letters patentes, geven to suche poor spittlehouse for the reliefe of the poore there, whiche briefe is a coppie of the letters patentes, and utterly fained, if it be in paper or in parchment without the great seale. Also, if the same brief be in printe, it is also of auctoritie. For the Printers wil see and wel understand, before it come in presse, that the same is lawfull.' Dekker in The Belman of London, 1608, virtually repeats Harman: ca. 1615, Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggars' Bush; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'Fraters, c. the eighth Order of Canters'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'They have been so often detected and punished, that scarce anything but the Name remains at this Day; for it being a publick Fraud, it is more narrowly pry'd into than those that are Personal and Private'; 1725, A Canting Dict. indicates that it has > a mostly rural sport; 1785, Grose—but the term was prob. † by 1750 or 1760.

frazzle. 'To steal or to rob a person is to frazzle, oozle, muzzle, razz, razzle, rat, roll . . . , scale, stiffen or touch someone,' Baker, 1945: Australian: since ca. 1910. To 'do' (cheat, rob) someone 'to a frazzle' (utterly).

fred. A cabman's passenger (?): 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds (see dose, v.); † by 1910. Possibly by personification (Fred) or by a pun on fare—fares.

free, v. To steal: 1839, Brandon, 'To Free a Prad—to steal a horse'; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H., 'Free, to steal,—generally applied to horses'; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1874, H., "To free a cat", i.e., to steal a muff'; 1882, James F. McCabe, New York; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H, who imply that it is ob.; † by 1910. I.e., to set free before taking away: cf. the 1944-45 Army s. to liberate, q.v. in my A Dictionary of Forces' Slang, 1948.

free dosser. A tramp that sleeps in the open, esp. in haystacks: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (ch., 'Two Tramps in England'); extant.

free-lot racket, the. The selling of either non-existent or worthless lots of land; commercial (and police) s.—not c. John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928.

*freed at Curbstone Court. See Curbstone Court . . .

*freeholder. 'A man supported by a prostitute,' BVB, 1942: C. 20. He pays no rent for his occupation.

Freeman's Quay, lush at. See lush, v., for earliest record and sense. 'This quay,' says H, 2nd ed., 1860, 'was formerly a celebrated wharf next London Bridge, and the saying arose from the beer which was given gratis to porters and carmen who went there on business'.

*freeze, v. To appropriate; to steal: 1893, F & H; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Freeze. To retain'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Freeze on to—to retain'—but the phrase, in this sense, was s. by 1920 at the latest. To render immobile—and then remove.—2. 'To grow cold toward a husband or lover in prison, "Ed's moll is beginning to freeze",' Ersine, 1933; extant.

*freezer. A refrigerator car: tramps': since ca. 1905. IA, 1931; by 1935, s. Self-explanatory.—2. A solitary confinement cell: convicts': since ca. 1910. IA, 1931. Hence:—3. A prison: Australian: since ca. 1930. Baker, 1942. But also American: since ca. 1920. Kernôt, 1929–31.

*freight. 'Liquor in transit across the border,' Burke, 1930: bootleggers': 1934, Howard N. Rose; since 1934, merely reminiscent. Euphemistic.—2. Money for bribery: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex sense 1.

French Consular Guard, the. Mostly a white-slavers' term, C. 20, as in A. Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, concerning French prostitutes of the streets there, 'You find her'—the Franchucha—'in the street. They are called by the initiated "The French Consular Guard." At six o'clock of an evening they walk up and down before the [French] Consulate.'

French faggot-stick, suffer by a blow over the snout with a. To lose one's nose from syphilis: ca. 1770–1850. (Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811.) More prob. low s. than c. Cf. the (low) s. French gout, syphilis.

*Frenchy. A French Canadian tramp: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 'Canada is left pretty much in the hands of the local vagabonds, who are called "Frenchies"': extant.

fresh, 'uninitiated, green', is classified as c. by B & L (1889); but the classification obviously is incorrect.—2. 'The gang, afraid to spend this "hot stuff" (stolen bank-notes, of which the serial numbers had been published by the F.B.I.), wanted ordinary or "fresh" money,' J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding, 1936: U.S.A.: since the middle 1920's.

*fresh bull. See quot'n from Irwin: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'An energetic policeman, or one who cannot be bribed or silenced'; extant. To the racketeers, he appears to be 'getting fresh'—acting most presumptuously towards the 'little Caesars'.

*fresh cat. 'He did not want his own presence disgraced by a new-made beggar—who is known to the profession [of tramps] by the name of "fresh cat",' W. H. Davies, Beggars, 1909, but in reference to ca. 1899; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A neophyte tramp'; extant. Cf. gay cat, 1.

*fresh cow. A person with a newly contracted or newly developed venereal disease: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Perhaps ex cow, 1.

*fresh fish. 'Fresh fish' is the name applied to all newcomers' (to and in prison), Anon., State Prison Life (at Jeffersonville, S. Indiana), 1871; 1925, Leverage, Fresh Fish, n. pl., new arrivals in prison'; 1926, Jack Black; April 16, 1927, Flynn's; 1929–31, Kernôt; ob.—fish being much the most usual term since ca. 1930. Cf. fresh cat.

fresh meat. Girls new to prostitution, girls enticed into prostitution: white-slave traffic: C. 20. Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940, 'Leah . . . had been shooting off her mouth about what she could tell if she liked about "fresh meat sales" and the shipping of "young stuff" across the Channel'. See meat.

*fresh one. An occ. variant of fresh fish. Rose, 1934.

Fresh Water (or Freshwater) Bay. Fleet Street Market: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900. A reference to the Fleet brook that now runs under Fleet Street.

freshwater mariner. 'These Freshwater Mariners', says Harman, 1566, 'their shipes were drowned in the playne of Salisbery. These kynde of Caterpillers counterfet great losses on the sea; these bee some Western men, and most bee Irishe men. These wyll runne about the countrey wyth a counterfet lycence, fayning either shypwracke, or spoyled by Pyrates, neare the coaste of Cornwall or Devonshyre, and set a land at some haven towne there, havynge a large and formall wrytinge, . . . with the names and seales of suche men of worshyppe, at the leaste foure or five, as dwelleth neare or next to the place where they fayne their landinge. And neare to those shieres wyll they not begge, untill they come into Wylshyre, Hamshyre, Barkeshyre, Oxfordshyre, Harfordshyre, Middelsex, and so to London, and downe by the ryver, to seeke for their shyppe and goods that they never hade: then passe they through Surrey, Sossex, by the sea costes, and so into Kent, demanding almes to bring them home to their country. Some tyme they counterfet the seale of the Admiraltie. I have divers tymes taken a waye from them their lycences, of both sortes, wyth suche money as they have gathered, and have confiscated the same to the poverty nigh adjoyninge to me. And they wyll not bec longe with out another. For at anye good towne they wyll renewe the same. Once wyth muche threateninge and faire promises, I required to knowe of one company who made their lycence. And they sweare that they bought the same at Portsmouth, of a Mariner there, and it cost them two shillinges; with such warrantes to be so good and efectuell, that if any of the best men of lawe, or learned, aboute London, should peruse the same, they weare able to fynde no faute there with, but would assuredly allow the same.' App. current only ca. 1550–1600.

freshwater seaman, listed by several lexicographers as c., is not properly a synonym of the preceding term but a familiar S.E. phrase, app. earliest defined by B.E., 1698: 'Fresh-water-seamen, that have never been on the Salt, or made any Voyage, meer Land-Men'—landlubbers, in short.

frisk. See frisk, v., 3.

frib. A stick: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'A Jacob and Frib; a Ladder and Stick'; † by 1890. Origin obscure.

frick. 'A simple fellow; a soft mark [i.e., easy victim]': Leverage, 1925; extant. Origin? Possibly a corruption of hick or an imperfect, yet natural blend of 'foolish hick'.

Friday face. 'The face of a man who is sentenced to be executed' (Friday being 'hangman's day'): 1859, Matsell; 1941, Maurer, who notes it of passers of forged cheques—often 'broke' on Friday, most of their work being done on Saturday. Ex English s. fridge. A prison: Australian: since ca. 1925. Baker, 1942. Cf. freezer, 1, 2, 3, and ice-box.

fried, be. See fry.

friendly lead, a subscription by a whip-round: not e. but s.—orig., low s. Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, 1857.

frigate, a woman, usually a wench, oec. a whore, is not, as several lexicographers either state or imply, a e. term, but s. B.E., for instance, has 'Friggat, well rigg'd, a Woman well Drest and Gentile'. Doubtless nautical in origin and, for the most part, nautical in usage.

frill. A girl, a young woman, esp. if in a gang or attached to a gangster: Aug. 18, 1928, Flynn's, Seven Anderton, 'The Fighting Frill'; 1934, John G. Brandon, The One-Minute Murder (British); 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'Gangster Girl . . . frill'; Feb. 29, 1936, Flynn's, Richard Wormser; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; 1936, Charles Francis Coe, G-Man; by 1938, (low) s. Either a perversion of frail or indicative of feminine charm—and frills.

frilled gizzard. A 'lounge lizard': Pacific Coast: since ca. 1920. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

frint, 'a pawnbroker', recorded by F & H (1893) for 1821, is not e. but s. Perhaps a perversion of friend (cf. s. uncle).

frisk, n. A search of one's person by the police: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'We should stand the frisk for it'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To stand frisk is to stand search'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing ('a search'); 1912, D. Lowrie, My Life in Prison (U.S.A.); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (a search whether of person or of room); Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'A quick searching of a person'; by 1935 in the U.S.A., it was police and journalistic s. Ex sense 1 of:—

frisk, v. To search in (a pocket, or a purse): 1724, perhaps implied (see fisk); 1737, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Then we go and fisk [sic] the Bit', or purse, 'and ding the empty Bit, for fear it should be found'; 1786, Sessions Papers; 1812, J. H. Vaux (frisk); ca. 1819, The Young Prig; 1821, J. Burrowes; 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; by 1840, current in U.S.A. (The National Police Gazette, 1845; E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); 1859, H; 1893, F & H; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1920, low s. in U.S.A.; 1933, Matt Marshall (England); 1935, Hippo Neville (do.); 1937, John Worby, The Other Half, 'To pick someone's pockets'; by 1938, police s. in Britain. To move one's hands rapidly over: cf. the movements of a lamb frisking about.—2. Hence, to examine: 1753, John Poulter, in continuation of the passage cited in sense 1, 'And fisk [sic] the Blunt' or money, 'and gee'—? 'see'—'if none is quare' (= queer, worthless); 1801, Colonel George Hanger (frisking a ken); 1809, John Mackeoull, Abuses of Justice; 1823, Jon Bee; ca. 1830, W. T. Monerieff, Gipsy Jack; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1899, B & L; 1893, F & H; † by 1920.—3. (A nuance of sense 1.) To search the clothes of (a person): 1724, Defoe (see fisk); 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'Friz, or Frisk. Used by thieves to signify searching a person whom they have robbed. Blast his eyes! Friz, or frisk him'; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter (frisk); 1823, Bee; 1825, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, I; 1829, op. cit., V, 'Lee come in and was fresking me'; 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police; by 1845, used in U.S.A. (The National Police Gazette, March 7, 1846); Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective (U.S.A.); 1912, Donald Lowrie (U.S.A.); 1914, P. & T. Casey; by 1920, low s. in U.S.A.; by 1932, current in New Zealand (letter from Nelson Baylis); extant.—4. To rob (a place) or steal (a thing): 1802 (April), Sessions Papers (the latter); 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, quoting a e. song, 'He fisks his master's lob' (till); 1827, P. Cunningham; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds (see cobble); 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London; 1887, Baumann; 1893, F & H; 1928, Chicago May (U.S.A.); 1929, W. R. Burnett; extant. Directly ex sense 1.—5. Among American tramps, 'to frisk' has a specific sense: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'He [a "hi-jack"] is "frisked", that is, ordered to donate all but one dollar to the jungle'; extant.—Cf. the approximate synonym in 'You have to keep your eye open for some cop who'll frisk you for'—extort—a quid or threaten to take you up, W. L. Gibson Cowan, Loud Report, 1937 (English tramps). Ex the accumulative pressure of senses 1–4.

frisk, dance the Paddington. See Paddington frisk . . .

frisker. See flamer.—2. A pickpocket: 1802, Sessions Papers, April (p. 288); † by 1910. Ex frisk, v., 1.—3. See:—

friskers. 'A new type (1930) of pickpockets, operating in a city's subways, robbing jewelry salesmen or dealers. Three in a gang. One distracts victim's attention . . ., whilst the other two frisk with more than usual pickpockets' skill while the victim is turning and looking around to find out who his "acquaintance" should be. Quick getaways are the feature,' Kernôt, 1929–31; extant. Cf. frisker, 2. friskings. Money and effects obtained by frisk, v., 3: 1830, W. T. Monerieff, The Heart of London, II; app. † by 1900.

fritter. The rind and/or fat of bacon wrapped in a rag and serving as a fire-lighter: tramps': C. 20. Partridge, 1938. A 'telescoping' of fire-lighter.

fritzer (or F-), adj. Inferior: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Fritzer. Not good'; ibid., p. 261, 'The graft was on the fritzer . . . There wasn't any money in it'; ca. 1930, it merges with low s. the fritz (as in 'Things is the fritz'—bad: Flynn's, Feb. 6, 1932). A Fritz, oec. Fritzer, is a German; large quantities of cheap German goods were exported to America, as also to England, before the war of 1914–18.

friz, v., is a variant of frisk, v., esp. in sense 3. (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788.) frizzler. An Irish hawker (and tramp): since ca. 1840: 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . the Autobiography of a Gipsy (p. 67); ob. by 1920; † by 1940. Origin? Perhaps ex driz-fencer.

frock. A suit of clothes: 1929, Givens; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1941, Maurer, who remarks that it has > ob. Either ex frock-coat or, more prob., in humorous allusion to feminine frocks.

froe. Thus in B.E., 1698: 'Froe, c. for Vrowe, (Dutch) a Wife, Mistress, or Whore. Brush to your Froe, (or Bloss), and wheelde for Crap, c. whip to your Mistress and speak her fair to give, or lend you some Money'—repeated in A New Canting Dict.; repeated again in Grose, 1785, except that Grose has crop for crap; ca. 1789, The Sandman's Wedding; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'Froe, or Vroe. A woman, wife, or mistress'; † by 1830. For etymology, see frow.

froe, chiving the. See chiving the froe.

frog. A policeman: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.), low s. A proletarian pejorative, would-be humorous.—2. A one-dollar bill: U.S.A.: 1933, Eagle; extant. Short for frog-skin.—3. A road; the highway: esp. tramps': C. 20. Hugh Milner, letter of April 22, 1935; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too. Short for Cockney rhyming s. frog and toad.

frog a log. A dog: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

frog and feather. A pocket-book, a wallet (for money): mainly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on leather.

frog and toad. A highway: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming: adopted ex Cockney s.

frog and toe, or F. and T. London: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 'We will go to frog and toe. Thieves coming up to London with plunder'; 1859, Matsell, 'The city of New York'; 1893, F & H; 1929–31, Kernôt ('New York City'); app. † by 1945. Origin obscure: but cf. prec. entry, for—to the English crook—all roads lead to London.

frog-skin. 'A gink can't peddle dope and frog-skins, at one and the same time . . . I had hid the layout [for making counterfeit money] and cached about two hundred grand—toad and frog skins, for I never monkeyed with the iron men,' Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1926, where frog skins = counterfeit dollar-bills; hence, by 1930, any dollar bill, or, as in Ersine, the sum of one dollar; extant. By a vague similarity of bank-notes to the dried skins of frogs.

frog-sticker. '[The potatoes] were peeled with pocket knives, called "frogstickers",' Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 1925; not tramps' e., but s. current since ca. 1830. Cf. the military s. sense, 'a bayonet'.

frolic. A criminal activity: since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. caper. 'Originated by professional entertainers to indicate the number of times they appear in one day' (Irwin) and adopted by the underworld.

from Mt Shasta. See Shasta . . .

from now on. 'Life'—a life sentence—'is called the book, or from now on,' Convict, 1934; so too, in Ersine, a year earlier; extant.

front, n. The sense 'a good appearance, an impressive exterior; a bluff' may orig. have been

e., as in "'It riles a bloke's sense o' justice to be accused false an' helps him put up a front,'" declared the other' (Josiah Flynt & Francis Walton, The Powers That Prey, 1900); but prob. it was always s.—admittedly low, at first. In Australia, where current since ca. 1910, it is, however, confidence-tricksters' c.—as in Baker, 1945. Cf. the S.E. metaphorical use of façade.—2. 'It was not many weeks . . . before I could . . . get a man's "front" (watch and chain) as easily as I could relieve a Moll of her "leather",' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 'To nick a front or peel a poke'; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage, 'A watch chain'; March 2, 1929, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. They create a 'front' (sense 1); cf. senses 3 and 6.—3. A suit of clothes: 1905, in a story included in Hobo Camp Fire Tales, 7th ed., 1911, 'My own humble $40 front (suit)'; ca. 1912, G. Bronson-Howard, The Snob (dress clothes); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'Clothes'; 1929, Givens (suit); 1931, Stiff, 'A whole layout of new clothes'; 1934, Rose; 1941, Maurer; extant.—4. A subterfuge: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'The store was but a "front" or blind for a poker game and dice games in the back room . . . I was part of the "front"'; by 1930, s.—5. 'The one of a mob [i.e., gang of pickpockets, thieves] who talks or stalls,' Leverage, 1925: since ca. 1915.—6. (Ultimately ex sense 1: it creates a good impression; imm. ex sense 2.) Jewellery: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—7. (Cf. 1, 2, 6.) A person that will assist or, at the least, recommend: 1933, Ersine.—8. Administrative offices of city or prison: 1933, Ersine. Ex usual position.—9. The scene of a thief's operations (cf. front, v., 2): British: since the middle 1920's. Julian Franklyn, This Gutter Life, 1934.

front, v. 'My pal said, "Front me" (cover me), "and I will do him for it" (a diamond pin). So he pulled out his madam and done him for it': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago, 'As it commonly took three men to secure a single watch in the open street—one to "front", one to snatch, and a third to take from the snatcher—the gains of the toy-getting [watch-stealing] trade were poor, except to the fence'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (U.S.A.), 'To hide'—an ambiguous definition; app. † by 1930 in England and U.S.A.; in C. 20 current—and extant—in Australia, as in Baker, 1942. Pregnant for get in front of.—2. 'A burglar entering premises by the front door is "fronting",' David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937, but earlier in Charles E. Leach (1933): current since ca. 1920: 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 'Never fronted a job in his life . . . If you couldn't back a job, pass it up'.—3. 'To use one's influence for another,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: U.S.A.: since ca. 1922. Cf. sense 1 of the n.—4. Hence, front for, to recommend (someone): U.S.A.: since ca. 1925. BVB, 1942.

front gee. One who acts as a 'blind' to a pick-pocket: 1934, Rose; extant.

front guy. A go-between; a 'fixer'; a lawyer: 1933, Eagle (where it is incorrectly defined); Nov. 10, 1937, Godfrey Irwin (private letter); 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; extant.

He 'shows up' in front; the really important man remains behind the scenes.

front job. 'A bank robbery in which only the money in the cashier's cage is taken,' Ersine: since ca. 1925.

front man. 'Representative who poses as the "big shot" of a gang,' Rose, 1934; 1939, Hickman Powell, Ninety Times Guilty; extant.

front money, 'money advanced to salesmen for expenses' (The New York Sun, Feb. 19, 1935); 'money advanced to a salesman before commissions are earned' (Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering, 1931): commercial s.

Front Office, the. The State or municipal detective-police department: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, 'The Front Office wanted to know who made that touch'—robbery—'in Jersey'; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'These Front Office people'; ibid., Glossary, 'Front Office, police headquarters'; 1903, Flynt, Rudrick Cloud; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'The detective bureau at police headquarters'; 1941, Maurer; since ca. 1930, current in Canada (anon. letter, June 9, 1946).—2. (Often lower-cased.) A prison warden's office, esp. at Sing Sing: convicts': 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; by 1930, gen. prison s.

Front-Office stiff. A detective: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, "'Crooks blow their dough as fast as they get it; and right too; some lawyer or Front-Office stiff 'ud cop it out if they saved it up'"; ob. See Front Office and stiff, n., 12; cf. office man.

front prop. A scarf; a tie: 1889 (see apple-guard and collar bent); extant. It is the front into which a prop is stuck.

front room. A sedan or limousine: since ca. 1920: 1929–31, Kernôt, 'Stolen sedan car'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (any sedan car). Through the glass windows, one sees ladies and gentlemen taking their ease, much as one sees into a front room.

front stall. 1863, The Cornhill Magazine, Jan., p. 80 (in reference to a garotte-trio); concerning the operations of a gang of pickpockets—the hook or actual thief, and the stalls or his accomplices, Allan Pinkerton writes, in 1886, 'Two of the "stalls" will immediately manage to get in front of the man—and these men are called "front stalls"—this is done for the purpose of stopping him [the victim] or blocking his way for a moment when the time arrives' (Thirty Years a Detective); 1893, No. 747 (English); extant. Cf. back stall.

fronter. 'One who maintains an apparently innocent enterprise or store as a blind behind which bootleggers or other lawless persons operate without fear of molestation': since ca. 1925. Cf. front, n., 1.—2. A 'come-on' man for a gang of crooked-investment dealers: commercial underworld: Feb. 19, 1935, The New York Sun; extant.—3. That crook in a 'confidence' gang who separates the 'mug' from his money: English: since ca. 1930. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.

fronts. Counterfeit money: since ca. 1925. Howard N. Rose, 1934. Everything in the front of the shop, nothing in the shop itself.

frow. A prostitute: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'The Frow is with Kid; the Whore is with Child'; 1785, Grose (at chive); 1789, G. Parker; 1797, Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H (by implication); by 1880, †.

Ex German frau, via Dutch vrouw, a woman. Cf. froe.

fruit. An 'easy mark'—a ready sucker: since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'Easy picking', like so much fruit.—2. Hence, a girl, a woman, ready to oblige: since ca. 1910. Irwin, 1931.—3. Hence, a passive male degenerate: convicts': since before 1933 (Ersine); anglicized ca. 1937 (Partridge, 1938); Castle, 1938; BVB, 1942.

fruit tramp, 'a migratory worker specializing in fruit-picking': not c. but journalistic coll. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

fruiter. A male sexual pervert: mostly tramps': 1934, Thomas Minehan, Boy and Girl Tramps; 1935, Hargan; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; extant. Either a perversion of fluter, q.v., or a variation of fruit, 3.

frummagem. To choke: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles, 'Frummagen, c. choaked'—prob. a slip of the pen; 1698, B.E., frummagem'd, c. choaked'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Choaked, strangled'; 1785, Grose, 'Choaked, strangled, or hanged'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1819, T. Moore; 1823, Bee (frammagemm'd); 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1859 (H, 1st ed.). This seems to be, like s. spiflicate, a word of arbitrary formation.—2. Hence (likewise usually as past p'ple passive), to hang: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1859.

frump, 'a wrinkled old woman' (B & L, 1889), was never c., I believe (despite B & L).

frumper, 'a mocker', 'a bullying fellow', and frumpery, 'mockery', are so far from being c. that they are S.E.; Humphry Potter includes the former in his Dict. of All the Cant and Flash Language. Ex S.E. frump, 'to mock'—long †.

fry, n. An electrocution: mostly convicts': since ca. 1920. Ersine. Cf. — fry, v. To be, in accomplishment of the death-sentence, electrocuted in the electric chair: prob. since ca. 1890, at Sing Sing at least (see frying-pan, 3); Flynn's, Aug. 17, 1929, Carroll John Day, 'The Right to Silence', "'I got him," he said. . . . "I'll fry for it, I suppose—that's the law, Doc"''; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; Jan. 30, 1937, Flynn's, Richard Sale; extant. Compare burn, 4.—2. Hence (?), to electrocute, to cause to be electrocuted: 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict, 'He will hear of men sitting in the hot seat to be burnt, or fried'; Dec. 19, 1936, Flynn's, Richard Sale, 'That scar will fry you, Simon. That and your finger-prints'; extant.

fry the pewter. 'To melt down pewter measures,' F & H, 1893; slight ob. Humorous.

frying-pan; gen. pl. 'Frying-pans, halfpence of the basest metal' (i.e., the most humble of even counterfeit coins): 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1900. Ex its rough-and-ready appearance.—2. A (large) silver watch: 1862, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV, 321; by 1900, low s. Ex the shape.—3. The electric chair: U.S.A.: late C. 19–20: April 27, 1929, Flynn's, Charles Somerville ('The Barbarity of the Chair'), 'The law responsible for the creation of the electric chair, or "frying pan", as the prisoners in Sing Sing call it, was passed on June 4, 1888, and went into effect January 1, 1889'; extant. Ex fry, v., 1 and 2.

frying-pan brand. 'A large brand used by cattle thieves to cover the rightful owner's brand,' Baker (1945), who notes its use in 1857: also by horse thieves: Australian. In C. 20, it is s. Ex both the size and the shape.

fu. '... Marijuana. Commonly it is now being called "fu", "mezz", "mu", "moocah", "muggles", "weed", and "reefers"; but by any name at all, its ultimate effect is the same... insanity,' Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Perhaps ex phew!

fubsey, 'fat', is not c.—despite B & L, 1889; it is familiar S.E. and Northern dial.

fubs(e)y dummy. A well-filled pocket-book: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1889, B & L; † by 1910. See preceding entry and dummy.

fuddle, liquor, 'dates from 1680 (L'Estrange: O.E.D.) and is classified by The O.E.D. as either s. or coll.: it may perhaps have been c. until ca. 1710, then s.; B.E., 1698, judged it to be c. It derives ex the S.E. fuddle, to drink (oneself stupid). See also rum fuddle.

fuine in J. C. Goodwin's Sidelights on Criminal Matters, 1923, p. 165, is defined as 'five-pound notes'; perhaps an error, or a misprint, for finif.

fulhams or F-; also fullams and, occ., fullums. Apparently always in the pl., it is the name of false dice, defined in this passage from Gilbert Walker's Diceplay, 1552: 'Provide also a bale'—a set—'or two of fullans, for they have great use at the hazard: and though they be square outward, yet being within at the corner with lead or other ponderous matter stopped, minister as great an advantage as any of the rest'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'High-fullums, which seldom run any other chance than four, five, and six; Low-fullums, which run one, two, and three'; 1680, Thomas Dangerfield, Don Tomazo, 'The little cheats of high and low Fullums'; 1714, T. Lucas, Memoirs of Gamesters; 1785, Grose, who implies that the term was † by that date. 'Either because they were made at Fulham, or from that place being the resort of sharpers' (Grose).

full, 'intoxicated' ('full of drink'): not c., but low s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

full as an egg. A 'slug'—a punch, or blow—on the head: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming, it must be: there can be no other explanation. That the word egg only very imperfectly rhymes head does not invalidate the assumption.

full-bottom. A judge (in the law courts): ca. 1780–1840. Grose, 3rd ed., 1796: see quot'n at queer, v., 2. Not certainly but prob. eligible, though possibly it may have been no more than s. Ex the full-bottom wigs worn by judges.

full of junk. Drug-exhilarated: since ca. 1910. BVB. With a pun on junk, 'drugs', and junk, 'rubbish'.

full of larceny. Briable: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; extant. See larceny.

fullams (G. Walker, 1552, has fullans) is a variant of fulhams, q.v.

fulley. See fully, n.

fullied, be. See fully, v.

fullman, 'loaded dice'—Leverage, 1925. Suspect. Prob. for fulhams.

fulloms; fullums. See fulhams.

fully, n. 'To talk of who was for "big fulley" (assizes), or "little fulley" (sessions)', Jerome Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life, 1895; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2; Nov. 1943, Lilliput, article by 'Lemuel Gulliver'; extant. Ex the v.

fully, v. To commit (a person) for trial: 1849, Sessions Papers, Feb. 1, trial of W. H. Jones, 'The prisoner said... he expected either to be turned up or fully'd—those are cant expressions, meaning either to be discharged, or committed for trial' (a policeman's evidence); 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 'Fullied. Committed for trial'—but doubtless adopted from England; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; Oct. 1879, Macmillan's Magazine; 1887, J. W. Horsley; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!, p. 321, where it is app. misprinted pullied (but see pulley, 2); 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1896, Arthur Morrison; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2; 1910, F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol; 1925, Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons; 1931, Brown; 1935, George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade; 1935, David Hume; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1943, Black; extant. 'From the slang of the penny-a-liner, "the prisoner was fully committed for trial"' (H). fumbles. Gloves: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1899, B & L; 1893, F & H. This, I suspect, is merely an error for fambles: see famble, 4.—2. A variant of fambles (see famble, 1): 1889, B & L (at fambles). But cf. sense 1.

fume, v.; usually as vbl n., thus: 'Fuming:—Detecting with acids, suspected forged handwriting, written over original ditto,' Kernôt, 1929–30; by 1940, police s. or j. Acids cause the paper to smoke.

fun, n. 'A cheat, or slippery Trick... He put the Fun upon the Cull, c. he sharp'd the Fellow,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1860. Ex the v.—2. 'An Arse... I'll Kick your Fun, c. I'll Kick your Arse,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; Grose, 1785, 'The breech, from being the abbreviation of fundament'; app. † by 1860.—3. The Chinese unit of weight for pipe-opium: U.S.A.: not c., but j. (Convict, 1934.) A Chinese word. Variant: foon (BVB).

fun, v. In 1698, B.E., 'What do you fun me? Do you think to Sharp or Trick me?... I Funn'd him, c. I was too hard for him, I outwitted or rook'd him'; 1785, Grose, 'Do you think to fun me out of it, do you think to cheat me?'; 1856, James Bonwick, The Bushrangers, 'Don't be a fool, and stand there funning me'; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—according, at least, to Matsell in his Vocabulum, 1859; by 1893 (F & H), † in England at least. Prob. a dial. form (and survival) of M.E. fon, 'to befool' (O.E.D.).

funk, n. The orig. sense, 'a stink' (1623: O.E.D.), is S.E.—2. Hence, tobacco smoke: ca. 1680–1760. B.E. classifies it, rightly (I think), as c.: 'Funk, c. Tobacco Smoak... What a Funk here is! What a thick Smoak of Tobacco is here!'—3. A cheat; a swindler: U.S.A.: 1846, The National Police Gazette, July 4; app. † by 1900. Ex the v.—4. An informer or 'squealer': U.S.A.: C. 20: 1925, Leverage; 1927, Kane; extant. Cf.:—5. A sneak thief: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. The sneak thief's timorousness accounts for the term.

funk, v. To cheat: 1809, Andrewes, but this is a schoolboys' term (in use at marbles), as Egan's Grose makes clear, and is merely s.

funk 'em or funk um. See funkum.

funker. 'Funkers, idle and disorderly fellows of the lowest order of thieves', esp. those who rob houses 'on the jump': 1797, Humphry Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H, 'A low thief'; † by 1910. Cf. funk, n., 5.—2. 'Prostitutes'.—A girl that shirks her trade in bad weather': 1893, F & H; extant. Ex funk, 'to fear'.

funkum. 'Lavender or other perfume sold in envelopes,' George Orwell, Down and Out, 1933: mostly London: since ca. 1910; and, since ca. 1935, street s. By 1934, at latest, it was also pitchmen's s., as in Philip Allingham, Cheapjack. Ex funk, n., 1, 2, with mock-Latin suffix -um.

fur. Money: 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 'Eddie's handlin' plenty dough . . . Yeah, Eddie's got heavy fur'; ibid., 'Dig up the "furs", as money is sometimes called in gangdom'; extant. The wearing of genuine furs implies money.

fur man, fur-man, furman; usually pl. An alderman: 1698, B.E. (hyphenated); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (as one word); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1823, Bee; † by 1889 (B & L). 'From their robes of office being trimmed with fur' (B & L).

fur-trade, nob in the. See nob in the fur-trade.

fur-traders. Traders in women: mostly rather a South American police term than an underworld one. Robert Neumann, 23 Women, 1940. Cf. French white-slave and prostitutes' s. fourrer, 'to copulate'.

furman. See fur man.

furrer. A poacher specializing in rabbits: 1891, John Newman, Scamping Tricks, p. 123; extant. Ex the rabbit's fur.

furs. See fur.

fushme. The sum of five shillings; or a crown, a five-shilling piece: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob. by 1920; virtually † by 1930. Is this a perversion—or perhaps merely a slovenly corruption—of Romany pansh kola (lit., five shillings)?

fussy tail, fuzzy tail; fuzzy-tailed. In P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914, occurs the reported speech, 'None of these fuzzy-tailed prowlers is that mugged gun', i.e. None of these tramp criminals is that photographed (hence, wanted, dangerous) criminal; 1918, Leon Livingston (fuzzy tail); 1923, N. Anderson, The Hobo (id.); Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's (p. 638: fussytool, a rarish variant); 1931, Urbain Ledoux, Ho-bo-ho Medley No. 1, 'Fuzzy tails, ring tails—hoboes with a grouch'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Any individual with a "grouch" or hard to please'; 1933, Ersine, 'A conceited person'; 1934, Convict, of a boastful tramp; by 1945, low s.

fustian, 'wine', and white fustian, 'champagne': despite B & L (1889), not c. but s.

Futility Hill. The penitentiary graveyard at San Quentin: since ca. 1920. Castle, 1938.

fuz-chats; fuzz-chats. 'The people who camp out on commons amongst the "furze"'. Generally show-people, and gipsy cheap-jacks, also gipsies proper, Ware, 1909: tramps' and beggars': late C. 19—20; ob. by 1940. Ware implies derivation ex furze.

fuzz, n. Police force: 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life, "'Take it on the natural," came from Dan. He was still covering the people in the bank. "Don't run, and rank yourself—the fuzz don't know what's doin' yet"'"; Sept. 20, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; extant. See Irwin's explanation of sense 2.—2. Hence, a detective; a prison warder: July 1931, Godfrey Irwin (both nuances); April 21, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627, 'We runs into a couple of fuzz and they sneeze us'; 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy, 'A fuzz being a way of saying a detective'; extant. 'Here it is likely that "fuzz" was originally "fuss"—one hard to please or over-particular' (Irwin)—3. Hence (?), the third degree: 1933, Ersine; extant.—4. A police constable: Canada: since ca. 1930. Anon. letter, June 1, 1946. Ex either 1 or 2.

fuzz, v., 'to shuffle cards minutely; also, to change the pack' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), is not c., but s. dating since ca. 1750.

fuzz-chats. See fuz-chats.

fuzz-face. A young, or an inexperienced, tramp: tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'Unable to grow a self-respecting beard, but carrying a growth of fuzz on the face' (Irwin).

fuzz tail. An unpopular fellow: tramps': 1931, Stiff; extant. Prob. ex fussy tail.

fuzzy. A policeman very diligent in enforcing the law: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer (fuzey—an unfortunate spelling); 1934, Rose (ditto); extant. A thickening of fussy, or perhaps a blend of fuzz, n., and fussy; for the idea, cf. busy.

fuzzy tail(ed). See fussy tail.

fye-buck or fyebuck is an error—caused by the similarity of the long s to f—for syebuck, q.v. Recorded correctly in George Parker, 1781, and by Egan in 1823, it was printed as fyebuck by Hotten (all edd.) and by B & L.

fylich or fylche; -er. See filch and filcher.

G

G. One thousand dollars: 1923, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'They had me in the bag for nearly ten G's before I pulled the string and let the joint go blooey'; 1930, Burke, who spells it gee; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; Nov. 18, 1933, Flynn's; 1934, Convict; June 6, 1936, Flynn's, George Bruce; 1936, Charles F. Coe, G-Man; Oct. 9, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; extant. I.e., 'grand' (q.v.).

G(-)guy is synonymous with G man: ca. 1925—36, then journalistic s. Flynn's, Aug. 24, 1935, Howard McLellan, 'I Am a Public Enemy'.

g.m. Gone midnight: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'About three, g.m., we got ditched in some hick burg'; slightly ob.

G man, 'a Government agent'—a Federal officer, may orig. (ca. 1922) have been c. (Fred D. Pasley, Al Capone, 1931.)

G.O.M. Morphine: drug addicts': since ca.

1925. BVB, 1942. I.e., 'God's own medicine': cf. God's medicine.

G rap. 'Charge made by the federal officers,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: since ca. 1932. Cf. G man.

gab, 'mouth', hence 'loquacity', is not c. but orig. and largely dial. It must, however, be admitted that in C. 18-early 19, it was very frequently used in the English underworld; and in 1904, No. 1500, in his Life in Sing Sing, claimed it as American c. A variant of gob.

gab, blow the. 'To confess, or peach': 1785, Grose; 1834, Ainsworth: † by 1850, the phrase being superseded by blow the gaff. Here gab = mouth or, derivatively, loquacity.

gab(-)string, a bridle; low s., not c. Grose, 1785.

gabbling dommerar (or -er). A pretended dumb man who mouths gabblingly: 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'In another troope are Gabbling Dommerers'; † by 1690. See dommerar.

gabbo. A talkative person: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Ex:—

gabby. 'A gossip; a tale-bearer [in prison]'; No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; by 1915, s. Ex English dial. gabby, 'loquacious; esp., too loquacious'.

gad. A shirt: tramps': C. 20. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. A Romany word; cf. Hindi gat, 'apparel'.

gad the hoof, 'to go without shoes', may orig. (— 1839) have been beggars' c., as its occurrence in Brandon's glossary suggests; slightly more prob., however, it was always low s. Perhaps suggested by pad the hoof.

gadgie (or -y), gadje (or -y). A husband; a lover: tramps': C. 20. John Worby, The Other Half, 1937. Adopted ex Romany gaujo, gauger, 'a stranger', perhaps via North Country gadgy, C. 20 c. or low s. for 'a man'.

gaff, n. A fair: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (see quot'n at buss); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'The drop coves maced the joskins at the gaff'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, D. Haggart; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (Vocabulum: U.S.A.); 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1880, showmen's s. Of obscure origin, gaff, 'a fair' (with its noise), is prob. cognate with gab, 'much or loud talk'.—2. 'A meeting of gamblers for the purpose of play': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1890. Ex sense 1.—3. 'Any public place of amusement is liable to be called the gaff, when spoken of in flash company who know to what it alludes' (whence Cockney s. penny gaff, a cheap theatre or music-hall): 1812, J. H. Vaux; by 1855, low s. Ex sense 1.—4. 'A ring worn on the fore-finger of the dealer' at cards and used in order to deal specific cards to this or that person: U.S. card-sharpers': ca. 1830-65: 1859, Matsell. Prob. ex S.E. gaff, a steel hook, or the fighting cock's artificial spur.—5. A pretence; an imposture: convicts': 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; by 1920, †. Perhaps ex sense 4.—6. 'Mental or physical punishment,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: U.S.A.: by 1929 it had merged with, or rather it had > sense 8.—7. 'Means of making player lose or win at will on . . . a "skin game",' Irving Baltimore, 'About Carnival and Pitchment' in The Editor, Dec. 2, 1916: U.S.A. (and Canada): rather showmen's s. than c.—8. 'Police examination or interrogation,'

D.O.U.

W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 1929; extant. Perhaps ex sense 7, but prob. ex the gaff used in fishing.—9. (Prob. ex sense 3.) A house; a room; one's abode, one's 'place': 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1934, Axel Bracey, School for Scoundrels; 1935, George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade; 1935, David Hume; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night; 1939, G. Ingram, Welded Lives; 1943, Black; extant.—10. Hence (?), a shop: 1932, Arthur Gardner, 'Any sort of building'; 1935, R. Thurston Hopkins, Life and Death at the Old Bailey; 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; 1936, G. Ingram, The Muffled Man; 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night; 1943, Black; extant.—11. (Ex sense 1.) A race-meeting: racecourse underworld: late C. 19-20. Michael Fane, Racecourse Swindles, 1936.—12. Synonym of gimick, 4: U.S.A.: since ca. 1925. Cf. senses 6, 7, 8.—13. (Ex 9 and 10.) 'A place chosen for a robbery, or the "job" itself,' John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939: since the 1920's. David Hume, 1935; James Curtis, 1936.

gaff, v. 'To game by tossing up halfpence': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To gamble with cards, dice, &c., or to toss up'; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1849, Alex. Harris, The Emigrant Family (Australia); 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed., where it is misprinted goff; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.: gaffing), it was low s.; Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms (Australia), 1881. Cf. gaff, n., 2.—2. To punish (someone): U.S.A.: 1903, Arthur Henry Lewis, The Boss; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. the n., sense 6.—3. To abide, to remain, too long in any one place: U.S.A.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Perhaps: 'to punish oneself' (cf. sense 2).—4. To cheat or defraud: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine and Eagle; extant.—5. To render (a game, a device) crooked, dishonest: U.S.A.: 1934, Julian Proskauer, Suckers All, 'There was a way of gaffing every game'; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant. Cf. sense 4.

gaff, blow the. See blow the gaff.

gaff, do a. See do a gaff.

gaff, drum the. See drum the gaff.

gaff, edge the. See edge the gaff.

gaff, stand the. To (be obliged to) stand up—no matter how much one is exposed to the weather—for a long while: tramps': 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler, 'There was nothing to do but stand it until the next stop. For "standing the gaff" was one thing a young tramp had to learn who dared to ride mail trains'; 1925, Tully, Beggars of Life; extant.—2. To take punishment (e.g., third degree): criminals': 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1931 (Flynn's, Aug. 1; C. W. Willemse), it was police s. Both senses have developed ex the gen. coll. sense of the phrase, 'to endure hardship'.

gaff, stow one's. To be quiet, to 'shut up': Australian: since ca. 1840; by 1890, low s. Marcus Clarke, For the Term of His Natural Life, 1874, "'Stow yer gaff", says Troke, with another oath and impatiently striking the lad with his thong'. See the various stow phrases for the enjoining of silence.

Gaff, the. Shoreditch: Londoners': 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief' (see blow, n., 4); by 1910, low s. Ex the gaff, or typical penny music-hall in that district of London.

K

gaff joint. A dishonest gambling-den: since ca. 1925. Ersine. Cf. gaff, n., 7.

gaff wheel. 'A gambling wheel controlled by the foot of the operator': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. But by 1930, at the latest, it was carnival s. rather than tramps' c. 'The players, the "suckers" or "fish" are gaffed, and their money taken from them' (Irwin).

gaffer. A professional, or an expert, or a regular player, at toss-halfpenny: 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London, '... They lend a prime gaffer money to begin the play'; 1828, G. Smeeton; by 1870, it was low s. Ex gaff, v., 1.—2. As 'a fair-ground superintendent' it is pitchmen's s.: Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934. (Ex gaff, n., 1.)

gaffing, 'playing at toss-halfpenny': ca. 1810–65, it was e., then low s.: 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London; 1828, G. Smeeton; 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.). Ex gaff, v., 1.

gag, n. A rare form of—perhaps a misprint for—gage. Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggars' Bush, written ca. 1615.—2. The gag that is a mouth-stopper dates from ca. 1550 and, despite several lexicographers' classification and its associations with criminals, has always been S.E. Ex the v., which dates from early C. 16 and has likewise originated and continued in the path of philological virtue.—3. A handbill: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'The advantages of a good bill (a gag), ... placard': possibly c., prob. low s.—4. A speech, e.g., the patter of a beggar: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 621; 1823, Bee (of a mountebank's professions or speech); 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, 'G was a Gag, which he told to the beak' (concerning a lying tale); 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (American tramps), 'A fake story'; then the sense merges with that of (6).—5. Hence, a lie, a deliberate misrepresentation: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by 1893 (F & H) it was low s.—6. (Ex the v., sense 3.) 'Any begging trick': American tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1900, Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman (a hard-luck story); 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Gag. A trick or scheme'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, George Orwell, Down and Out (British); extant.—7. See hawker's gag.

gag, v. See gag, n., 2.—2. To beg: 1753, J. Poulter, Discoveries, 'I chant, I gagg; I sing ballads, I beg'; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'An old Soldier had gagg'd about London for many years'; 1797, Potter; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1887, Henley; 1931, Chris Massie, The Confessions of a Vagabond, 'With the pence he "gagged" on the road he would bother ... way-side shops'; 1936, W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps; extant. Cf. sense 4 of the n.—3. Hence, to beg from (a person): 1781, G. Parker, 'Having discovered the weak side of him he means to gag'; † by 1890.—4. To inform; usually gag on, to inform on (a person): 1891, The Morning Advertiser, March 28; 1893, F & H; slightly ob. Short for put a gag on—a stop to someone's activities.

gag, be or go on the high; be or go on the low gag. (To beg) 'on the whisper'; (low gag, to beg) 'alms in the streets, with a pretended broken arm, leg, &c.': 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, where the phrases (to) gag high and (to) gag low are given; † by 1893 (F & H). This gag is the same as that in the next entry. It represents gage (see gag, n., 1), I think; gage in the sense 'a pledge, a security'; the semantics will be clarified and, I believe, confirmed by a reference to The O.E.D. at gage, sb., 1, b.

gag, stand the. To take one's stand and wait for custom: ca. 1775, 'The Potatoe Man', in The Ranelagh Concert, 'A link boy once I stood the gag, | At Charing-Cross did ply, | Here's light, your honour, for a mag, | But now my potatoes cry'; app. † by 1890. See preceding entry, for origin.

gag high; gag low. Resp. 'to beg on the whisper', i.e., genteelly in company, and 'to beg in the streets': 1797, Potter; 1848 (see gag, be on the high). See gag, v., 2 and 3; these are the v. forms of the nn. high gag and low gag.

gag-maker. A tramp that begs his way with pitiful tales: 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob. See gag, n., 4, and cf. gag, v., 2.

gaga. Topsy: since 1928; slightly ob. by 1945. Ex s. gaga, crazy.

gage. 1566, Harman, 'A gage of bowse, whiche is a quarte pot of drink'; ibid., in the glossary, 'a gage, a quarte pot'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; 1610, Rowlands; ca. 1615, Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggars' Bush, 'I crown thy nab with a gag of ben-bouse'; 1665, R. Head, 'Gage ... A pot'; 1676, Coles, 'A pot or pipe', the latter a cask for wine; 1688, Holme; 1707, J. Shirley (gagg); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who notes that in his day it was also a pint (pot); as does Potter, 1797; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1860.—2. A tobacco pipe: 1698, B.E.; Grose; † by 1860. This sense leads from sense 1: via pipe, a vessel containing liquor.—3. An exciseman: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; † by 1830. It almost certainly should, in more modern spelling, be gauge, a means of measuring: an exciseman measures quantity.—4. A man: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, 'Deck the gage, see the man'; † by 1910. Ex gorger; C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718, uses the perhaps imm. originating gager for gorger.

gager. A rich man: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'An old Gager, alias a rich old Man': a C. 18 form of gorger, q.v.—2. See gagers.—3. In U.S.A., 'Middle man [in the underworld]; person who disposes of stolen goods,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'Th' getaway takes th' junk'—shoplifters' loot—to a gager; he ain't a fence but he is somethin' of a crook and something of a go-between'; extant.

gagers. Eyes: 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H; 1941, Maurer; extant. I.e., gaugers.

gagg. See gage. (J. Shirley, 1707.)—As v., see gag, v., 2.

gagger, n. At 'Gaggers' (section heading), John Poulter, in his Discoveries, 1753, writes, 'Beggars: They are a very deceitful Sett of People in general, that deserve a Prison more than Relief, pretending they were Galley Slaves, and that their Tongues were cut out by the Turks, and their Arms were burnt in the Row Gallies: To deceive the World they cut the Strings of their Tongues, and so swallow it down their Throat, that none can perceive it, and make their Arms raw by perpetual Blisters ... These Impostors are a great Nuisance to the Country, and a Hurt to those that are real Objects of Charity'; 1781, George Parker, in A View of Society, distinguishes between a 'high gagger', who insinuates himself into a gentleman's house and then borrows money or obtains lodging, and a 'low gagger', who (old soldier, old sailor, gypsy or tinker) gets money by pretending to be badly injured or limb-poisoned; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. Ex gag, v., 2.—2. A prison warder or keeper: 1782, Messink, The Choice of Harlequin, 'Tho' you're a flashy coachman, here the Gagger holds the whip', the speaker being a warder; † by 1870. Perhaps correct; but perhaps a confusion of S.E. gagger, one who gags a victim + dubber.—3. A player, an actor: 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1880, it had merged with the modern theatrical s. sense, 'an actor much given to gagging'.—4. 'One who lives on the immoral earnings of his wife; or one who forces his wife into prostitution,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: U.S.A.: since ca. 1905. Also jack gagger: BVB, 1942. 'Enough to make the average man . . . ill' (Irwin): i.e., to make him gag or retch.—5. 'A gagger—a beggar or street performer of any kind,' George Orwell, Down and Out, 1933: mostly London: late C. 19–20: April 22, 1935, Hugh Milner cites it as a tramps' term; 1936, W. H. Gape, Half a Million Tramps. Ex gag, v., 2.

gagger, v. 'To tell the tale, to move to pity,' the Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932; tramps': C. 20. Cf. sense 5 of the n.

gagging. Theft of money by pickpocketry to which several men working together have cleverly led up by engaging a man in conversation, taking him to a public-house, and skilfully causing him to disclose how much money he has: 1828, George Smeeton, Doings in London; † by 1890. Cf. gag, n., 4.—2. Begging for money: tramps' and London beggars': late C. 19–20. Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935; 1935, Hugh Milner, private letter.

gagging lark, the. A variation of gagging, 2: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'Irish janes were good to fellows on the bum and to the boys on the gagging lark, he'd heard somewhere'; extant. See the separate elements.

gaggle's coach. A hurdle for the transportation—gen. to the gallows—of a prisoner: 1797, Humphry Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880. Perhaps by a disguising of gaoler's coach.

gait. 'Manner; fashion; way; profession. "I say, Tim, what's your gait now?" "Why, you see, I'm on the crack" (burglary)': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L, 'Manner of making a living, profession, calling'; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1929–31, Kernôt; ob. One's walk in life.

gajo is not c. A variant form of Romany gaujo, 'a stranger; a non-gypsy'.

galaney. See galeny.

galbe, 'profile of a violent character, and even applied to any eccentricity of shape above the knees. This is from the French . . . and comes from the Emperor Galba,' Ware, who—in 1909—classifies it as c. Having found it nowhere else, I believe that Ware is in error.

galena. Salt pork: 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H—by this date it was, app., s. App. ex the next, by sense-perversion and form-perversion; F & H, however, derive it ex Galen, Illinois, a hog-raising, pork-packing centre.

galen(e)y or galan(e)y. 'Galeney, a fowl': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H (galeny), 'Old cant term for a fowl of any kind; now a respectable word in the west of England, signifying a china hen'. Prob. ex the Sp. or the It. gallina, 'a hen'.

gall. 'Impudence, effrontery': never worse than fairly gen. s. See, esp., The D.A.E.

gall is not yet broken, his. 'A saying used in prisons of a man just brought in, who appears melancholy and dejected': 1785, Grose; app. † by 1870. Ironical on the lit. sense, 'his spirit is not yet subdued'—cf. the American gall.

gallagher. 'A run; a get-away,' Leverage, 1925; slightly ob. Cf. s. do a mick (or mike), 'to decamp' (mick: Mick: gallagher: Gallagher)—there being some allusion to Irish temperament or resourcefulness.

gallersgood, 'good enough for the gallows', i.e., extremely bad, is classified by Ware as C. 18 c.; this classification is almost certainly erroneous.

Gallery Thirteen. 'Most prisons have some such name as "Gallery Thirteen" for their burial ground,' Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 21, 1937; extant. Ex 13 as the bad-luck number.

gallies. 'A pair of boots': tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob. Possibly ex dial. galligaskins, leggings, gaiters.

galoot. See galoot.

galloper. 'A blood horse . . . The toby gill clapped his bleeders to his galloper and tipped the straps'—erroneous for 'traps'—'the double. The highwayman spurred his horse and got away from the officers': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; † by 1893, (F & H). On the borderline of c. and S.E., for the S.E. sense is 'a horse good at galloping'.

gallows apples of, make: to hang. Not c., merely a literary simulation of c.—one of Lytton's (see O.E.D.). gallow's-trap. A Bow Street officer: ca. 1810–50. Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul, 1822. An elaboration of trap, 2.

gallyslopes. Breeches: 'old cant', say B & L—in 1889—but on what authority? If genuine, the term is a corruption of S.E. galligaskins (loose breeches).

galoot. 'Galoot, a soldier': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1830, nautical s. for 'a young (and awkward) marine'; by 1870, gen. s. term approximately synonymous with chump; cf. sawney, 3. H enters it as geeloot. B & L wrongly derive it ex It. galeotto, 'a galley slave'; The O.E.D. and Webster essay no etymology; prob. it is from an Erse n. meaning 'a dolt', or adj. meaning 'credulous', although Weekley suggests Dutch geluht, a eunuch.

galtee. To spend: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'He . . . "galtees"', or spends all he has got'; ob. Origin?

galter. 'Galters; blacklegs, gamblers': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900. Cf. galtee.

Galway (or derivatively g-). A Catholic priest: American tramps': Aug. 1891, Josiah Flynt, 'The American Tramp' in The Contemporary Review, 'The Catholic priest is nicknamed "The Galway"'; 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1900, Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman, where it is applied to a priest officiating in a prison; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review ('Criminal Slang'); April 1919, The (American) Bookman (M. Acklom); 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Galway is perhaps the most Catholic county, quantitatively, in the whole of Ireland: about 97·5% of its population is Catholic. And many Galway people emigrated to the U.S.A. in the 1880's and 1890's.

gam, n.; also gamb. 'Gambs. Thin, ill-shaped legs': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Gams, the legs, to have queer gams, is to be bandy-legged, or otherwise deformed' (in leg or legs); 1819, Tom Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial, Appendix No. 2, 'With tottering gams'; 1838, Wm Hone, The Table Book; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; 1848, Sinks of London; 1874, H; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (U.S.A.); 1925, Leverage, 'Gams, n.pl. The nether limbs of girls'; by 1931 (Godfrey Irwin) gams, 'a girl's legs', was gen. theatrical and carnival s. A corruption of the Fr. jambe, prob. via Northern French; derivation (as suggested by Wm Hone) ex It. gamba is less convincing.—2. Stealing: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H; † by 1930. Perhaps short for gammon, n., 1 and 2.—3. Gameness; pluck: 1888, Cassell's Saturday Journal, Dec. 8; 1893, F & H; † by ca. 1916.—4. A talk: U.S.A.: not c. but low (e.g., circus and carnival) s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—5. Short for gambler: on borderline between police s. and c. Arthur Henry Lewis, The Boss, 1903.

gam, v. To steal: 1893, F & H; † by 1940. Ex gam, n., 2.

gam-case; usually pl. 'Stockings. Gam-cases': 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; † by 1893 (F & H). Ex gam, n., 1.

gamb. See gam, n., 1.

gambler, 'a sharper, a tricking gamester' (Grose), may orig., in this sense, have been s., but it never was c.—2. 'A Gambler is one of the Modern Cant Names for a Money Dropper': 1735, Sessions Papers, 6th Session, trial of John Boswell, footnote; † by 1830. By a queer sort of euphemism. Cf. — gambling. Money-dropping: 1738 (Oct.), Sessions, trial of Thomas Jones, 'He is in the Compter (says I) for Gambling, and on Suspicion of stealing a Watch'; † by 1830. Cf. gambler, 2.

gambs. See gam, n.

game, n. Booty: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, 'For when that we have bit the bloe | We carry away the game': but carry away the game may mean, not 'remove the booty' but 'have the advantage or win a victory', for bite the blow = to capture the booty. If game here = booty, this is the sole instance.—2. Dupes: gamesters' c.: 1698, B.E., 'Game, c. Bubbles drawn in to be cheated'; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1823, Egan's Grose; app. † by 1860. Cf. S.E. fair game.—3. 'At a Bawdy-house, Lewd Women. Have ye any Game Mother? Have ye any Whores Mistress Bawd?' (B.E.); 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1823, Egan's Grose; app. † by 1870. Cf. Fr. poule and see game pullet.—4. 'Any mode of robbing. The toby is now a queer game; to rob on the highway is now a bad mode of acting': 1811, Lex. Bal., which adds that 'this observation is frequently made by thieves'; 1826, Sessions Papers; 1857, Snowden; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); Oct. 1879, Macmillan's Magazine; 1882, James D. McCabe; 1893, F & H; † by 1940. Ex the next sense.—5. Almost any criminal or illicit livelihood or vocation: 1738, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. 2

(Wm Udall), 'Out again upon the Old Game, till I was taken up for Clacking the Doctor'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'The Cadge is the game or profession of begging'; 1859, Matsell; 1872, G. P. Burnham, 'A sharp trick, or device with sinister design'; 1893, F & H; 1907, G. Bronson-Howard, Sears of the Seven Seas; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (U.S.A.). But in C. 20, senses 4, 5 cannot strictly be classified as c. in Britain, nor after ca. 1910 in U.S.A.

game, v. To befool; jeer at: 1698, B.E., 'What you game me? c. do you jeer me, or pretend'—presume—to expose me, to make a May-game of me'; app. † by 1800. The O.E.D. classifies it as S.E.; B.E. as c. Perhaps it was a s. term that was much used by the underworld. It derives imm. ex the C. 17 S.E. game at, to deride.—2. Hence (?) 'to wink at or encourage theft,' The London Guide, 1818; app. † by 1880.

game, adj. Dishonest; mixed up with or actually belonging to the underworld: 1805, George Barrington, in his New London Spy (Appendix), speaks of 'game lightermen', who concealed goods (afterwards sold illicitly) in their lockers; 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Bee; 1828, G. Smeeton, Doings in London ('game watermen', in the same sense as 'g. lightermen'); 1828, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, I, 208 ('game ships'); 1888, J. Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, '"Game", or corrupted, revenue officers'; 1893, F & H; † by 1910. Cf. the low s. sense, 'whorish; engaged in prostitution': 1821, D. Haggart, 'Two blones . . . both completely flash, as well as game'; although, here, flash may = 'alert', it yet prob. = 'dishonest'.—2. The senses 'courageous' (person) and 'crippled' (limb; or, in limb), have never, I think, even in U.S.A., been c., despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904.

game, die. See die game.

game, on the. See on the game.

game, the. Thieving: C. 19–20; ob. See game, n., 4.—2. Prostitution: late C 19–20: 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar, '"Is she on the game?" asked the Scot. "No, she's strite"''; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress. Cf. game, n., 3.

game dead, have a. See have a . . .

game lighterman. See game, adj.

game one. See game un.

game pullet. 'A young whore, or forward girl in the way of becoming one': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann; by 1829 (B & L), low s.; by 1900, †. Cf. game, n., 3.

game un (or 'un). A person—esp. a man—living dishonestly, as burglar, swindler, etc.: ca. 1840–1914. E.g., in C. Booth, Life and Labour of the People in London, I, 206: pub. in 1892. See game, adj.

game waterman. See game, adj.

gamester is app. recorded only by J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 1707: 'The fourteenth a Gamester, if he sees the Hick sweet, | He presently drops down a Cog in the Street'. Cf. ring-dropper.

gammon, n. The accomplice of a pickpocket; he who so jostles the prospective victim that the actual thief can possess himself easily of his booty: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1720, A. Smith (see gammon, give); 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected (see quot'n at knuckle, n.); app. † by 1800. Possibly a survival of O.E. gamen, game, sport, scoff: Thomas Lawrence, in Notes & Queries, Aug. 14, 1852.—2. Hence, the assistance rendered to a pickpocket by his accomplice(s): 1720 (see gammon, give); 1753 (see gammon, cry); † by 1800.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) That accomplice of a shoplifter ('the lift') who diverts the attention of the shopkeepers while the theft is being effected: 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected; † by 1810.—4. Plausible talk; humbug: 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; s. by 1820 at latest in England; in U.S.A., c. in ca. 1840–60: The Ladies' Repository, 1848. Prob. ex gammon and patter.—5. Hence (?), 'The language of cant': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; app. † by 1820 or 1830—and not very satisfactorily attested.—6. (Ex sense 4.) 'In the course of this conversation (or gammon as it is technically called)': 1818, Wm Jackson, The Newgate Calendar, vol. VIII; † by 1890.

gammon, v. To render the assistance of an accomplice to a pickpocket: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'There is a Cull that has a rum Loag, gammon: Then we jostle him up'; ibid., 'Will you gammon me; will you help me'; 1757, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, No. IV, Part ii; † by 1800. Imm. ex gammon, n., 1.—2. To speak cant: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'When one of them [the underworld] speaks well, another says he gammons well, or he has got a great deal of rum patter'—but the sense may simply be 'to speak'; † by 1820 or 1830.—3. 'To humbug. To deceive. To tell lies' (Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811; Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, 1817): prob. from as early as 1775; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I, 'A mountebank, who was gammoning the flats'; by 1820, or soon after, it was (low) s. Ex gammon, n., 4.—4. Hence, 'To gammon a shop-keeper, &c., is to engage his attention to your discourse, while your accomplice is executing some preconcerted plan of depredation upon his property': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, D. Haggart (of a similar practice among pickpockets); app. † by 1850. Prob. imm. ex gammon, n., 3.—5. To simulate; pretend to have: 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London, 'I'll knock you down—you must gammon a maimed rib or so'; by 1890, low s. gammon, cry. A variation of the next entry: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'The Files go before the Cull, and try his Cly, and if they feel a Bit, cry gammon; then two or three of us hold him up'—jostle him and hem him in; † by 1830. See gammon, n., 1.

gammon, give or keep in. Esp. in command, thus: 'Give me Gammon . . . That is to side, shoulder, or stand close to a Man, or a Woman, whilst another picks his, or her Pocket, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, III, 1720; 1821, D. Haggart, Life; † by 1880. See gammon, n., 1.

gammon, pitch the. See pitch the gammon.

gammon, rum. See rum gammon.

gammon, stand the. To listen credulously to the plausible speech of a sharper or a confidence-trickster or a professional fortune-hunter: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'The widow having pretty well stood this gammon, . . . his next business was to ply her with some good Madeira'; app. † by 1890. See gammon, n., 4.

gammon and patter. Plausible talk, 'jaw': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; app. s. by 1800 at latest. Prob. ex gammon, n., 2, and patter, v., 1. Whence low s. gammon and spinach.—2. 'The language of cant, spoke among themselves' (the underworld): 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; † by 1893 (F & H). Cf. gammon, n., 5.—3. (Ex sense 1.) A meeting, a conference: 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; † by 1920.

gammon lushy; gammon queer. 'To gammon lushy or queer, is to pretend drunkenness [lushy], or sickness [queer], for some private end': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1893, F & H; by 1900, low s.—and slightly ob. Cf. gammon, v., 5.

gammon on a nose. To decoy (a person) into a quiet corner: 1827, Thomas Surr, Richmond; † by 1900. See gammon, v., 3, 4, and nose, n.

gammon the twelve. 'A man who has been tried by a criminal court, and by a plausible defence, has induced the jury to acquit him, or to banish the capital part of the charge, and so save his life, is said, by his associates to have gammoned the twelve in prime twig, alluding to the number of jurymen': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, plagiarizingly; ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; by 1910, it was †. See gammon, v., 3, and twelve godfathers.

gammoner. 'A man who is ready at invention, and has always a flow of plausible language on these occasions' (see, e.g., gammoning, adj.), 'is said to be a prime gammoner': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I, concerning Dutch Sam, 'A gammoner of the first brilliancy'; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Gammoners, cheats, swindlers'; by 1880, low s. Ex gammon, v., 3.—2. A variant of gammon, n., 1: 1821, D. Haggart; 1893, F & H; † by 1910. Ex gammon, v., 1.

gammoning, n. See gammon, v.

gammoning, adj. 'A thief detected in a house which he has entered, upon the sneak, for the purpose of robbing it, will endeavour by some gammoning'—plausible—'story to account for his intrusion, and to get off with a good grace': 1812, J. H. Vaux; by ca. 1880, low s. Ex gammon, v., 3; cf. gammoner, 1.—2. Counterfeit, false: 1802, Sessions Papers, June, p. 334, 'Says he, here is a good five-pound note, and some gammoning notes'; † by 1900.

gammoning academy. 'A reformatory for juvenile criminals': 1889, B & L, but prob. the term was current ca. 1820–1910; 1893, F & H; † by 1920. See gammoning, adj. + academy, 2 and 3.

gammoning cove. A swindler; a confidence trickster: 1828, George Smeeton, Doings in London, '[He] charged a fellow well known as a gammoning cove, who gave his name as William Allen, with robbing him of eighteen sovereigns'; † by 1930. Cf. gammoning, adj., and cove.

gammy, n. Always the gammy. Cant, the language of the underworld: Northern: 1864, H, 3rd ed. (see side!); 1893, F & H, who classify it as tramps' c.; ob. Prob. ex:—

gammy, adj. Bad: since ca. 1740: Bampfylde Moore-Carew uses it of mean hard householders; 1839, Brandon, 'Gammy Stuff—spurious soap or medicine'; ibid., 'Gammy Lour—bad coin'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 313, 'Gammy monekurs (forged names)'; 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1887, A. Griffiths, Locked Up; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1893, F & H; 1925, Leverage, 'False; deceitful'; ob. It derives, says Mayhew (op. cit. of 1856, at p. 6), 'from the Welsh gam, crooked, queer': cf. the s. 'gammy legs'. Celtic, yes; but perhaps rather the Gaelic than the Cymric cam (not gam), 'crooked'. Perhaps cf. Shelta gyami, 'bad'. —2. Hence, of places or things that are dangerous: 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants, 'Places which are gammy (dangerous [for beggars] to call [at])'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 218, where the tramps—and itinerant vendors—sign (chalked on or near front door or gate-post) is given () and the term defined as 'likely to have you taken up'; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1895, A. Griffiths; † by 1920.—3. See gammy vendor. Perhaps only the adjective is c.

gammy lour; gammy stuff. See gammy, adj., 1.

gammy vendor. One who makes a very inferior soap and sells it as Windsor Soap and who, while at a house, purloins spoons or anything else within easy reach: 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 'Manufacturers of spurious soap, oils and of many other deceptive commodities . . . These latter, in their own slang, are described as "gammy vendors"'; † by 1930. See gammy, adj.

gammy vial (or vile or ville). 'A town where the police will not let persons hawk': tramps': 1859, H; 1889, B & L; † by 1920. See gammy, adj., 2 and vile.

gamon. See gammon, n. and v. (Grose, 1796.)

gams. See gam, n.

gan. Mouth: 1536, Copland; 1566, Harman; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands; 1641, R. Brome, A Joviall Crew, 'This Bowse is better then Rom-bowse | It sets the Gan a gigling'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 'The mouth or lips'—but see sense 2; † by 1887 (Baumann). Cf. Scottish gane and Scandinavian-dial. gan, 'fish-gill' (E.D.D.). For the differentiation between senses 1 and 2, cf. that between mun and muns.—2. Hence, in pl., lips; the singular is, in this sense, rather rare: 1665, R. Head, 'Gan . . . A lip'; 1698, B.E., 'Ganns, e. the Lipps'; 1707, J. Shirley (gans); 1714, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, where it is misprinted gar; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; † by 1887 (Baumann).

gander, n. A look, a glance: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life, 'It looks like it's going to rain, so we better make the lower yard for a quick gander, and then get back'; 1933, Ersine; March 16, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington; Sept. 26, 1936, Flynn's, Cornell Woolrich; 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too (English); by 1933, s. in U.S.A. A gander (the domestic fowl) has a long neck: an allusive pun on s. rubber-necking, 'gazing inquisitively'.

gander, v.; usually as vbl n., gandering, 'looking for someone or something': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict, 'To gander, or gun, is to look'; 1934, Rose; March 26, 1938, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, 'She gandered me up and down'; by 1940, low s. Ex the n.—2. To walk: from before 1934. Castle, 1938. A gander is the male of the goose; either rhyming with vamoose or short for goose and gander, to wander.

gandy. Short for gandy dancer: 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'The bright lights looked so good after that hard life with the gandies, I got drunker than a fiddler's bitch'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

gandy dancer. 'A "gandy dancer" is a man'—among tramps, properly a hobo that does this—'who works on the railroad track tamping ties,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1930, Lennox Kerr, Backdoor Guest; 1931, Stiff, 'Hobo track laborer, tie tamper and rail layer'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict—but by this time it had > labourers' s., as is shown by Kenneth Mackenzie's Living Rough (1936), p. 114. 'A worker who walks with a peculiar gait, not unlike that of a gander or a goose, when working with a tamping bar or pick along the track,' Godfrey Irwin, who asserts the term's currency as far back as the 1860's and implies that it was railroad s. before it > (predominantly tramps') c.—2. Hence, a petty crook: since middle 1920's. Ersine.

gandy gumbo. A hobo dish: tramps': 1931, Stiff, 'This famous concoction of the gandy dancers is sometimes called giggle. First you boil potatoes in their jackets. Boil some ordinary dry peas. Mash the two to a flaky pulp. Mix into this some raw chopped meat and a little bit of flour. If you have some chopped onions to add, so much the better. Roll the mixture into small flat cakes about half an inch in thickness and three inches across. Fry in hot beef tallow'; extant. See gandy and perhaps cf. gump-stew.

gandy stiff. A hobo that works only very occasionally and then only for a day or two at a time: 1918, Leon Livingston, quoted by Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; extant. Cf. gandy dancer.

gang of thieves or other criminals, like crew, q.v., has occ.—such is the force of associated ideas—been classed as c.; but this word, which as applied to persons dates from early C. 17, has always been quite impeccable S.E.

gang, v. To gang-kill (someone); to 'remove' by the concerted action of the gang: Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's, John Wilstach, 'The Gun Moll'—'Douglas [the gang-leader] knew of Morton's finish before he read their notice. A traitor had been ganged, that was all'; extant. Cf. :—

gang up, v.i. To combine in order to (1) defraud or to (2) fight: mostly convicts': 1933, Ersine (1); 1934, Rose (2); extant. Ex s. gang up, (of persons) 'to get into a bunch, a cluster, a group, a huddle'.

ganiff is a rare variant—an incorrect form—of gonnoif (etc.). Downey's Peter Napoleon Campana Songster, ca. 1900.

ganns and gans. See gan, 2. Cf. the difference between muns and mun.

gaoler's coach. A hurdle (on which a prisoner is carried to the place of execution); actually, it was often a sledge: 1698, B.E., who spells it gaolers-coach; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (goaler's . . .). The term was prob. † by 1830 at the latest. Neither B.E. nor Grose classifies it as c., but, as it was almost certainly a prisoners' term, it prob. is c.

gap. To erave a drug: addicts': since the 1920's. BVB, 1942. To feel a gap, a want, a craving.

gaper. 'Small mirror held in the hand while dealing cards,' Rose, 1934: card-sharpers': C. 20. One glances, not gapes, at it.

gapper ; panic man. An addict desperate for drugs : since ca. 1930. BVB. The former perhaps 'disguises' gaper but prob. derives ex gap.

gar. See gan, 2., reference of 1714.

garbage. In 'the lifting law' (shoplifting), 'the goodes gotten' : 1592, Robert Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, 'The whiles he begins to resolve which of [the goods he has been examining on the shop counter] most fitly may be lifted, and what Garbage (for so he calls the goods stolne) may be most easilie convoid, then he calles to the Mercers man and sais, reach me that piece of velvet or satten, or that jewel, . . . and whilst the fellow turns his back, he commits his garbage to the marker'—or long-cloaked man that carries off the booty : an account plagiarized by Dekker in The Belman of London, 1608. This word may be the origin of tailors' s. cabbage.—2. Food : U.S. convicts' : since ca. 1920. Leverage, 1925 ; 1938, Castle ; extant. Cf. the numerous pejorative particularities of convict references to food.

garbage can. 'An old prostitute, probably, therefore, none too clean' : C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931 ; BVB, 1942. Self-explanatory of a slut.—2. 'A construction camp where the food is poor or ill-cooked, hence . . . regarded as garbage' (Irwin) : but as much construction camps' s. as it is tramps' c.

garden, put (one) in the. 'To put a person in the garden, in the hole, in the bucket or in the well, are synonymous phrases, signifying to defraud him of his due share of the booty by embezzling a part of the property, or the money, it is fenced for ; this phrase also applies generally to defrauding any one with whom you are confidentially connected of what is justly his due' : 1812, J. H. Vaux ; 1823, Bee (put in the hole only ; first nuance) ; 1823, Egan's Grose (plagiarizing Vaux) : 1833, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-34, IX (put in the hole) ; 1839, Brandon (. . . hole) ; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open, 'To put him in the hole (cheat him)' ; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), put in a hole, recorded not as put but as To Put . . . ; 1887, Baumann ; 1890, B & L (garden and hole and well) ; 1893, F & H ; 1893, Langdon W. Moore. His Own Story (U.S.A. : hole) ; † by 1920 in Britain, and by 1930 in U.S.A. Cf. s. lead up the garden path.

garden-gate. A magistrate : Pacific Coast : late C. 19-20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming ; adopted ex Cockney s.

garden-hop, v. To betray (an accomplice) : since ca. 1910. Edgar Wallace, The Missing Million, 1933. Rhyming on shop.

garden party, the. Tubercular prisoners 'doing their time' in the open air : convicts' : since ca. 1920 : March 1932, The Fortnightly Review, T. B. Gibson Mackenzie, 'The British Prison'. They work in the garden.

garden stuff. "Scotty" was wild with both, telling them that they had been using "garden stuff", meaning that they had been giving information, Jerome Caminada, Detective Life, 1895 ; slightly ob. Ex garden, put in the.

garlic and glue. (Beef) stew : Pacific Coast : late C. 19-20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

garnish, n. Money extorted from a new prisoner, either as gaoler's fee or to buy drink for the other prisoners : 1592, Greene (O.E.D.) ; 1617, W. Fennor, The Compter's Commonwealth. Perhaps orig. c., but certainly s. by 1700 at latest. (This practice was abolished in the time of George IV.)

Ex the S.E. sense : that which embellishes.—2. Fetters ; handcuffs : 1893, F & H ; ob. Ex :—

garnish, v. To handcuff ; to fetter : 1893, F & H ; 1925, Leverage, 'Garnish, v. To chain ; to fetter.—Garnishings, n. pl. Fetters ; chains' ; ob.

garotte. See garrotte.

garret, n., 'the head', is not c. but s.—2. 'The fob-pocket' : 1812, J. H. Vaux ; 1823, Egan's Grose ; 1959, H ; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'Prison term' ; ob. Ex its position and 'architecture'.

garret, v. Usually in the form garret(t)ing, q.v.

garreteer is a variant of the next : 1893, F & H ; ob.

garreter. A thief that, prowling on the roofs of houses, effects an entrance through skylights or attic windows : 1864, H, 3rd ed. ; 1887, Baumann ; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! ; slightly ob. Ex S.E. garret or imm. ex next entry ; cf. the synonymous dancing master.

garret(t)ing, n. 'To rob a house by entering it through the scuttle'—trap-door—'or an upper window' : 1859, Matsell ; 1863, The Cornhill Magazine, Jan, p. 90 (garreting a crib)—English ; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2 (English) ; ob. Ex the garrets of a house, with a pun on S.E. garrotting.

garrotte, v. To strangle and rob : not c. but S.E.—perhaps orig. s.—2. See garrotting.

garrotte, tip the. To practise the garrotte (robbery with strangulation) : 1856, Punch (O.E.D.) ; by 1900, low s. garrotting. 'A mode of cheating practised amongst card-sharpers, by concealing certain cards at the back of the neck' : 1874, H ; 1889, B & L ; 1893, F & H ; extant. Ex S.E. sense.

garter. An indefinite prison-sentence : convicts' : 1934, Rose ; extant. Something that loosely 'ties' the wearer.

garter(-)bob. See bob, n., 3.

garter story, the. The swindling game known as 'prick (in) the garter', q.v. : 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime ; 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police ; app. † by 1900. Also known as roll (or rolling) the garter : see roll the belt.

garters. Leg-irons : 1925, Leverage ; extant. Cf. garter.

gas, n. 'Bragging talk, boasting,' The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848 ; by 1890, s. Cf. the C. 20 hot air, 'boasting ; empty talk'.—2. 'Impure liquor, such as doped cider or wine, "needle beer", "smoke" and the like,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931 : racketeers' : since ca. 1924 ; ob.

gas hotel. A garage : Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn ; by 1940, s. Gas = gasoline.

gas hound. One who drinks inferior liquor ; a person habitually under the influence of such liquor : 1931, Godfrey Irwin ; 1934, Convict, 'The man who gets his kick out of a can of canned heat is called a gas hound' ; April 1944, American Speech, Otis Ferguson ; extant. See gas, n., 2.

gas mug. The man that does the talking for a gang of safe-blowers : 1925, Leverage ; extant. Ex s. gas, 'much talk, airy talk'.

gash. The mouth : U.S.A. : 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing ; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom ; 1931, Godfrey Irwin ; extant. Ex the appearance of a (very) long mouth half-closed.—2. A woman : 1914, Jackson & Hellyer ; by 1925, it had merged with sense 3. Ex a brutally realistic

s. name for the female genitals.—3. Also a prostitute: since ca. 1920: Godfrey Irwin, 1931; BVB, 1942.

Gashouse micks, 'low class Irishmen' (W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 1929), is police s.—not c.

gasman. A braggart: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); by 1937, † (Irwin). See gas, n., 1.

gassy, n. A talkative person: convicts': 1934, Rose; by 1940, s. Ex s. gas, ('overmuch talk'); cf. :—

gassy, adj. 'Given to boasting,' The Ladies' Repository, 1848; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1910, s. Ex gas, n., 1.

gasumph; -er. See gezumph . . .

gat. 'Gatt. A revolver,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Gatts is East Sidese for pistols'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'A gun, pistol, firearm'; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg"?'); 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by M. Acklom; 1919, F. H. Sidney; 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1925, Leverage, 'Gat . . . A revolver; a pistol, a rifle'; March 27, 1926, Flynn's; Jan. 1, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, Chas. F. Coe, Me—Gangster; 1927, Kane; 1927, C. L. Clark & E. E. Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; by 1928 the term could no longer be classified as c. in U.S.A.; ca. 1930–40, c. in Britain (as, e.g., Axel Brace, School for Scoundrels, 1937, and John Worby, The Other Half, 1937), and then 'cinematic' s. Short for '*gatl*ing gun', which was a machine gun; gat has never been restricted to an automatic, nor applied to a sub-machine gun.

gat goose. A hold-up man: 1935, Hargan; extant. See gat and cf. cat-up man.

gat-toter. A gunman: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Assaulter': low s. rather than c. See gat; lit., revolver-carrier.

gat(-)up. 'To gat-up means to hold up a person or place with a gun,' Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld' in The American Mercury, May 1928; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex gat. —2. V.i., to arm oneself with a revolver: 1933, Ersine, 'Gat up and we'll blow'; extant.

gate, n. See next two entries.—The sense 'dismissal' (Leverage, 1925) is U.S. s.

gate, get or make the. To be released from prison: 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing (the former); April 8, 1933, Flynn's, Convict 12627, '"Making the gate" (gaining their freedom) through pardon or parole'; 1938, Convict 2nd (ditto); extant. The reference is to the outer gateway.—2. (Of a prisoner) placed in an observation-cell: since ca. 1920. George Ingram, Stir, 1933. The door is left open.

gate, on the. On remand: 1893, F & H; extant. Prob. the reference is to the gateway through which the accused enters the dock: cf. the hospital s. sense, 'in danger'.

gate, the. The Gatehouse Prison: Londoners': 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1880.—2. Newgate Prison: ca. 1850–1900. H, 1874; 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude.

gater. See gatter, reference of 1848.

gates, 'railroad switches': at least as much railway s. as it is tramps' c.; prob. very much more! Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

gather, v. See gathering.

gather gravel-tax. See gravel-tax.

gathering, n.; gather, v., 1. Pilfering: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, (concerning a certain kind of beggar, an old-clothes collector), 'He never goes out without his bag. He goes from door to door, preferring the back doors, for there he frequently finds something lying about that is very handy to pick up. After "gathering" the night before, he never goes out with more than threepence . . . for a day's journey; so he will put in the bag all he can lay his hands on'; ob. Cf. gleaner, gleaning.

gathering(-in) of rent(s). In Thomas Middleton, The Blacke Booke, 1604, we learn that highwaymen speak of their robberies as 'gathering in of their Rents and name all Passengers as their Tenants at will'; app. † by 1650.

gatt. See gat.

gatted mob. An armed gang of criminals: June 25, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; Nov. 10, 1934, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant. Ex gat.

gatter. Porter: 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, Appendix, '"Lots of gatter", quo' she, "are flowing"'; Nov. 8, 1836, The Individual, 'Gatter is the liquor as I loves to see flow'; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'He's a fool who would doze o'er his gatter'; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open, 'Brown gater droppings, heavy wet, heavy brown, beer'—which is slightly ambiguous; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 218, 'They have a "shant of gatter" (pot of beer)'; 1859, H (gatta and gatter: beer); 1886, W. Newton, 'Beer or Porter'; 1887, Baumann; by 1889 (B & L), no longer c. Possibly a rough-and-ready rhyming disguise of porter; cf. too the sol. pron. of water (approx. rhyming with porter) as watter. Or it may be a corruption of Lingua Franca aqua, 'water'.—2. Hence, 'drink of any kind': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1925, Leverage ('Beer; wine'); slightly ob.

gattering, n. Drinking, tipping; also, a public-house: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'He pulls off his . . . boots, and goes out bare feet, and by this gains another day's "gattering"'; ibid., p. 19, misprinted grattering; p. 311, 'The "Gattering", or public-house'; ob. Cf. gatter.

gauge-butt; goofy-butt. A marijuana cigarette: drug addicts': March 12, 1938, The New Yorker, Meyer Berger; extant. A cigarette-butt or end; marijuana sends people insane; gauge or measure of insanity.

Gaul. A Frenchman: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). (Cf. Frank, q.v.) Properly—i.e., in S.E.—a Gaul is an inhabitant of ancient Gaul; admittedly, S.E. shows instances of Gaul used either poetically or humorously for a modern Frenchman, but the American underworld employment of the term is legitimately to be classified as c.

gawdy dancer, in Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1926 (p. 639), is either in error for gandy dancer or a mistake of some kind, for app. it is applied to a farmer.

gay. A dupe, esp. of a confidence trickster: Australian: since ca. 1920. Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939; Aug. 3, 1936, Sidney J. Baker in private letter, 'Both a bunny and a gay are dupes, but the gay is the more worthwhile object of the trickster's art'. Ironic on the dupe's gay innocence.

gay and frisky. Whiskey: Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20. In, e.g., Chicago May, 1928, and Convict, 1934. Introduced by Australians, who adopted it ex Cockney rhyming s.

gay cat, n. 'An amateur tramp who works when his begging courage fails him,' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899, glossary; ibid., p. 13, 'The dilettante, or "gay-cat"', as he [the regular hobo] calls him'; ibid. (see stake-man); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'A tramp on the move'; 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'Mere dubs and "gay-cats" and amateurs beside one' and 'Gay-cat is the synonym for tenderfoot in Hobo Land' and 'A gay cat is a newcomer . . . man-grown; or, at least, youth-grown. A boy on The Road . . . no matter how young he is, is never a gay-cat'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, where the glossary definition is 'quite wrong' (Godfrey Irwin), therefore not quoted here; 1918, Leon Livingston; 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler; 1923, N. Anderson, The Hobo; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Criminal Tramps. One who commits sabotage'; 1925, Glen Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'A gay cat, as the apprentice tramp is universally called on the Road'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1931, Stiff; 1933, Ersine; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's; May 2, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack; 1939, Terence McGovern, It Paid to Be Tough; extant. Here gay = 'not serious; unprofessional'; cat prob. refers to restlessness.—2. 'Now it means a cheap, no-account grafter' (i.e., criminal), Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life, 1922—a sense app. applied earlier in Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 1918, 'When no one answered the ring [at the door] Bud would slip in and make his clean-up. I'd play gay-cat while he dug for glass and junk'—and perhaps earlier still in the verb; Oct. 18, 1924, Flynn's (p. 810), concerning a gang of bank-thieves, 'The actual workers send out a finder, or . . . in yeggdom, a gay cat'; 1925, Leverage (see cripple, n., 2); 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night Hawk; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict, of a look-out man; extant.—3. 'One not to be trusted,' F. H. Sidney, 'Hobo Cant' in Dialect Notes, 1919; extant. Ex sense 2.—4. 'One who travels only when the weather is fine, works only to accumulate a "stake", criticizes everyone and everything and lives on charity in the larger cities during the winter,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910. App. a blend of senses 1 and 2.—5. (Prob. ex 2.) A pompous person: 1933, Ersine; extant.—6. A homosexual boy: 1933, Ersine. Ex 1.

gay cat, v. To operate as a petty criminal, or as an accomplice to a bigger one, or as a 'general runabout' to a gang, but esp. as advance agent, spy, locator, for a gang: 1916, Arthur Stringer, The Door of Dread, 'How d'yuh know he ain't gay-cattin' for Keudell right along?' demanded Sadie'; March 27, 1926, Flynn's, 'He had left the train there to "gay-cat" a job that "sounded sweet"'; Aug. 17, 1929, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly, 'The Right to Silence'; extant. Ex gay cat, n., 2.

gay cat spotter. A look-out, an outside man, in a gang of burglars or other thieves: 1924, Geo. C.

Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, glossary, s.v. 'Jiggerman'; extant. Cf. gay cat, n., 2.

gay-tike boy, 'a dog-fancier': much more likely to be low s. than c. It occurs, e.g., in G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, 'As a jolly gay-tyke boy I sometimes appear, | And chirp for the curs that are spelt in the leer'.

gazebo. A man; chap, fellow: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, where it is spelt gazabo; 1925, Leverage, 'Gazeboo, n., A leader (as "the main guy")'; 1933, Ersine, 'Any rough character'; ob. Perhaps ex the S.E. sense of the word, by confusion with S.E. gazer.

gazer. A Federal agent in the investigation of narcotics: 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1942, BVB; extant. He looks long, hard, often.

gazock. A lad: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. :—

gazook. A catamite: C. 20. BVB. A perversion of gazooney, 2?

gazoon(e)y, gazuny. A man; chap, fellow, 'guy': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; † by 1930. See sense 2.—2. Hence (?), a young tramp travelling under the 'protection' of a jockey; tramps': since ca. 1920: 1931, IA; 1933, Ersine (any lad); 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1942, BVB, 'Catamite'; extant. Perhaps ex Fr. garçon or Irish gossoon, with addition of the familiar or affectionate y.

gazump; gazumpher. See gezumph . . .

geach, n. A professional thief: Scottish: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'He was a tolerable geach'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1893, F & H; ob. by 1900; † by 1920. Perhaps thief disguised.

geach, v. To steal: Scottish: 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'I bought two wedge table-feeders, and a small dross scout, . . . which I knew had been geached from the house of Mrs Campbell'; 1893, F & H; ob. by 1900; † by 1920. Either ex the n., or a disguising of 'to thieve'.

gear, adj. Of homosexual tendencies: 1933, Ersine; 1942, BVB. Prob. a perversion of synonymous s. queer.

gear, on the. In the hip pocket: pickpockets': 1931, Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Book; extant. Prob. ex the semi-euphemistic male gear, 'genitals'.

geblakker. Topsy: South Africa: C. 20. (J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946.) Adopted ex Afrikaans; ? cf. Dutch blaken, 'to burn'.

geco. A good friend; a trustworthy companion or associate: 1925, Leverage; app. † by 1940. Is not Gecko a favourite (? Italian) name for a barrel-organ monkey? But the word may represent gecko, an elaboration of geek.

gee, n. 'Gee, guy, gun, mug, plug, stiff, etc., a fellow', P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (tramps'), 1914; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 'The big gees who're running the game': 1930, Burke; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1934, Rose; Sept. 9, 1937, The (New York) Mirror, Mark Hellinger, who spells it ghee; 1938, Damon Runyon; by 1940, if not a year or two earlier, it was journalistic s. 'A contraction of "guy" or [less prob.] "geezer" as a reference to any individual' (Irwin).—2. 'An easy mark; a softy,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex sense 1.—3. Usually in pl., the gees, the convicts: San Quentin: 1928, Robert J. Tasker, Grimhaven; extant. A special application of sense 1.—4. A variant of G: 1930, Burke; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'A thousand-dollar bill was a Gee'; extant.—5. 'A glass of liquor; a gallon, especially when alcohol or liquor in large quantities is referred to,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: racketeers': since ca. 1926. App. the initial of 'glass' and 'gallon'.—6. 'A gee (or jee—it is pronounced jee)—the accomplice of a cheapjack, who stimulates trade by pretending to buy something,' George Orwell, Down and Out, 1933: perhaps orig. c.; but prob. always London street (esp. cheapjacks') s., as Philip Allingham's Cheapjack, 1934, suggests. In C. 20 South Africa, however, it = 'a crook's accomplice' and is c.: J. B. Fisher (letter), May 22, 1946. Prob. ex sense 1. But George Orwell's suggestion is worthy of consideration: "'Gee",' he writes, 'is a curious word; conceivably it has arisen out of "gee", meaning horse, in the sense of stalking horse,' Philip Allingham believes this sense to be of Yiddish origin.—7. Loose talk, 'hot air', bluff: English: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'It's only gee. They just talk that way to make you turn milky'; extant. Perhaps ex sense 6.—8. The phrase the gee = showing off, 'side': 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'Curly had dough on the level and was not just putting on the gee'; extant. Cf. sense 7.—9. A drug: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Perhaps ex gee yen, but prob. gow > G > gee: cf. geed up.—10. See boo-gee.

gee*, v. A misprint for glee. John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, 'Then we f[r]isk the Blunt, and gee if none is quare': but gee may here = 'be suited', 'be successful'.—2. To deceive, 'kid', 'blarney' (someone): 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'He could flash a few oncers before her eyes if he wanted to gee her up'; extant. Ex senses 6–8 of the n.—3. To incite; to delude: since the early 1920's. Anon., Dartmoor from Within, 1932. Cf. senses 2 and 7 of the n.

gee, get at the. To 'spoof': since ca. 1920. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. See gee, n., 7 and 8.

gee, give the. 'To give a grafter a gee is to buy something off him to encourage the crowd': pitchmen's and cheapjacks' s.: Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934. See gee, n., 6.

gee, put in the. To tell a plausible tale; to blarney: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid. See gee, n., 7.

gee, put on the. See gee, n., 8.

gee-chee*. 'A Charleston negro, teased for his soft speech,' Hargan, 1935: since the 1920's. Prob. gee, n., 1, with echoic reduplication.

gee-fat*. Narcotics: since ca. 1910. BVB. Cf. gee, n., 9—gee yen—and feed, 2.

gee-gaws*, 'horses' (John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928), is racing s.—not c.

gee(-)man is an Australian variant of gee, n., 6. Baker, 1945. Cheapjack s. rather than c.

gee-rag; gee stick. A g.r. is the packing inserted to render water-tight the connection between the stem and the bowl of the g.s. or opium pipe: addicts': since ca. 1920. BVB. Cf. boo-gee and:—

gee yen*. 'Residue of opium in stem (of pipe),' Convict, 1934: not c., but j. Chinese phrase.

geed up*. Opium-exhilarated: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Donald Barr Chidsey, 'The Black Stuff' in Flynn's, March 18, 1939. Prob. gowed-up > g'd up > geed up.

geek*. A person; esp. a chap, a fellow: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, "'What was that shooting?"—"Oh, a couple of geeks started to hand it to each other"' (were firing at each other); Sept. 5, 1931, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; May 21, 1932, Flynn's; 1933, Ersine, 'Any man, but the implication usually is that he's something of a sucker'; Aug. 31, 1935, Flynn's; extant. Is it a blend of gee, 'guy' + bloke, 'fellow'?

geekie. A police-office or station: Scottish: 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; extant. Perhaps cf. geach, n., but more prob. ex geek, 'to peer about'.

geeloot. See galoot.

geese*. Jews: since ca. 1930. In, e.g., Damon Runyon, Take It Easy, 1938 (see quot'n at grease-ball, 3); extant. By perversion; perhaps with a pun on gee, n., 1.

geetas* or geetis. 'The criminal has a slang term for almost every denomination of money. Money in general, he refers to as dough, cash, mazuma, jack, geetis, and sometimes diners,' Convict, 1934: 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'I wanted some cash, geetas, dough-ra-me, a bunch of green fodder that makes the world go round'; extant. Origin? Perhaps a corruption of gelt.

geezed-up*. Drug-exhilarated: 1934, Rose; extant, BVB citing the intensive all geezed up. Ex geez, 3 + geed up.

geez*. 'A fellow', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; imported from England, where it had long and always been s.; it may be c. in U.S.A.; Jackson & Hellyer, 1914, include it in their glossary of criminals' s.—as does Leverage (1925) in his, where it is defined as 'a red-headed person'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin.—2. A drink: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'A strong drink'; extant. Presumably ex geyser, either the Icelandic or the bathroom type: cf. the use of fountain in 'soda fountain'.—3. A dose or injection of a drug: 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life, 'I take a geezer once in a while myself' (the reference is to morphine); 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose, 'Dope which is inhaled'; extant. As shot, 'a drink', is also 'an injection of a drug', so with geez—which does not invalidate the geyser implication in sense 2.

geezo*. A convict: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. A perversion of geez, 1.

geloot. See galoot.

gelt. Money: 1698, B.E., 'There is no Gelt to be got, c. Trading is very Dead'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., with variant gilt; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London, Act III; 1842, An Exposure of Various Impositions Practised by Vagrants, where it is spelt guilt; 1848, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, IV (guelt); by 1890, no longer c. in Britain. Its use in the U.S.A., among C. 20 racketeers, is prob. independent of the English; Burke, 1930, 'We cut the gelt three ways'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; and later.

gelter. Potter has 'Gelt, or Gelter, money'; but gelter is under grave suspicion. That Andrewes also has gelter means nothing, for he is constantly plagiarizing Potter; that it occurs also in Sinks of London Laid Open, 1848, means no more, for that compiler is continually plagiarizing Andrewes; Matsell, who also has it, owes much rubbish to the Sinks. Cf., however, kelter, 2.

gem. See jem.

gen, 'a shilling': not c. but costermongers' s.

gendarme; usually pl. A detective: since ca. 1930. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.

general dealer. See dealer, general.

general monks. A menagerie: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Ex the monkey-house; in s., a monkey is a monk.

General Nurse is a C. 17 underworld nickname for a gang-leader: in O per se O, 1612, Dekker mentions also Dimber Damber, the Great Bull, the High Constable (or Shreve), Hurly Burly, the little Bull, Olli Compolti, and, for women, the Lamb and the White Ewe. This seems to be an ironical nickname, perhaps = 'fuss-pot'.

gennauf. See gonnof, reference of 1845.

gent. Silver: 1859, H; 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo; extant. Ex the Fr. argent, silver.—2. Hence, money: 1864, La Revue des Deux-Mondes, Sept. 15, article by E. D. Forgues; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; ob.

gentleman. A crowbar: prob. English c. before it > (—1794) U.S.A.: 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; 1893, F & H; ob. 'A perfect little gentleman'—if rightly handled.—Cf. alderman.

gentleman foist is only doubtfully c.: see foist, n., and the Greene quotation at nip, n. gentleman lag, 'a well-educated prisoner', is not c. but prison officers' s. Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, 1877, at p. 179.

gentleman of the green baize road, 'a card-sharper' (C. 19): possibly card-sharping c., but prob. journalistic s.: 1889, B & L. Card and dicing tables being usually covered with green baize.

gentleman of the pad. See pad, gentleman of the.

gentleman outer. 'Gentlemen Outers, in plain English, Highwaymen,' The History of Clubs, 1745; † by 1830. Earliest in Ned Ward, 1709. Because they ride out.

gentry. 'The leading natives of a place, the socially elect,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1919. Ex the S.E. sense.

gentry coe is an occ. variant (e.g., in Anon., The Song of the Beggar, 1620, where it is spelt gentrie coe) of:—

gentry cofe (later cove). A gentleman; a nobleman: 1566, Harman, who implies it in 'a gentry cofes ken' (see next entry) and has it by itself ('a gentry cofe, a noble or gentleman'); 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'A gentleman is called a Gentry Cove, or Cofe'; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Gentry-cove, c. a Gentle-man'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; Nov. 8, 1836, The Individual, 'Ven I'm corned, I can gammon a gentry cove'; 1837, B. Disraeli, Venetia; 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. translator), "'Gentry coves" (rich people)'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1885, A. Griffiths, Fast and Loose—but the term was almost certainly † by 1860. I.e., S.E. gentry (gentlefolk) + cove, 1.

gentry cofe's (later cove's) ken. 'A gentry cofes ken, a noble or gentlemen's house,' Harman, 1566; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'Gentry cofes Ken, a Noble mans house'; 1610, Rowlands, 'a Gentlemans house'; 1688, Holme (. . . cofes . . .); 1698, B.E., 'Gentry-cove-ken, c. a Nobleman's or Gentleman's House'—repeated in A Canting Dict., 1725, and in Grose, 1785; † by 1840, by which time swell ken and gentry ken were in use.

gentry cove ken. See gentry cofe's ken.

gentry cuffin is a rare C. 17 variant of gentry cofe

(or cove). E.g., in Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 1611, 'A ben cave [sic], a brave cave, a gentry cuffin'.

gentry ken. A gentleman's house: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. An ellipsis of gentry cofe's (or cove's) ken.

gentry mort. 'A gentry morte,' says Harman in 1566, is 'a noble or gentle woman'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'Gentry Mort, a Gentlewoman'; 1610, Rowlands; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741 (see slanging the gentry mort . . .); 1785, Grose; † by 1860 at the latest—prob. by 1800. Cf. gentry cofe (or cove).—2. Hence, 'a gallant wench': R. Head, The English Rogue; app. † by 1780.

george, n. A half-crown piece: 1659, in a political ballad (O.E.D.); 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia; 1692, Anon., The Notorious Impostor, 'Equipping his Brother Clodpate with a George to stay and Drink till they returned'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1860. It bore the image of St George.—2. Erroneously, a guinea: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin.

george, adj. Esp. be george, to be shrewd, alert, well-informed, 'wise': tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Stiff synonymizes it with jake, adj.; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, M. H. Wesen; extant. Cf. hello, George! and jake.

george, yellow. See yellow george.

George (or george) plateroon is app. an elaboration of george, n., and—again app.—it denotes a counterfeit half-crown: 1714, Alexander Smith, The History of the Highwayman, 'What the Professors of this hellish Art' (of false-coining) 'call George Plateroon, is all Copper within, with only a thin Plate' (of silver) 'about it', plate indicating the etymology, plateroon being possibly a pun on doubloon.

George Robey, the. The highway; 'the Road': tramps': 1933, Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby; extant. Rhyming on toby, 2., q.v.

georgy (or G-). A quartern loaf: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1890. By personification.—2. An Anglo-Irish form of george, 1: 1822, A Real Paddy, Real Life in Ireland; † by 1910.

gere (peck). See jere.

gerk(e), cly the. See cly the jerk.

German band. A hand: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928; M & B, 1944. Rhyming; adopted ex Cockney s.

German flutes, 'boots', was orig. (ca. 1850–65) c.: Augustus Mayhew, 1857; H, 1859; Matsell, 1859. This rhyming term was, in England, superseded by daisy roots before 1900. It survives, as c., in the Western U.S.A.: M & B, 1944.

German racket, the. Swindling Germans by various confidence-trick dodges: 1881, The Man Traps of New York, pp. 16–17; † by 1920.

gerry; gerry gan! See jerry, n.

gerry, adj. See jerry, adj.

gerver. A safe-blower; hence, almost, a bank-robber: Dec. 1918, Joseph Matthew Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang', The American Review, where it is synonymous with gopher man and peter man and yeggman; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant.

get, n. Among counterfeiterers: 'Pieces of white metal, which are called gets, Jan. 1835, Sessions Papers (p. 447; it occurs also on 446): but Feb. 1835, p. 573, 'Here is the get which fills the channel to the mould' shows that it may have been j. A c. or at least a low s. variant is git, as in Cornish of the 'Yard' (1935), where, however, it is defined as that hole in the side of the mould through which the molten metal is poured. It is used, presumably, in coining—in moulding; hence it derives from the S.E. sense, 'a yield, or produce', because it has a part in producing the counterfeit coin.

get, v. To steal: 1823, Bee, 'To "get a watch" is to steal it'; 1929–31, Kernôt (U.S.A.); extant. To acquire it, but illicitly.—2. To kill; to wound with intent to injure seriously and in revenge: U.S.A.: 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1916, Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in the Underworld; by 1925, low s.; by 1930, gen. s. A particularly pregnant—almost a proleptic—use of this verb.—3. See get a box.—4. See get his.

get a box. To blow a safe open with explosives: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. See box, n.

get a fanner. See fanner.

get a floater. See floater, 3, 'Stiff' ref. (1931).

get a grindstone. See grindstone . . .

get a rank. See rank, n.

get a rumble. See rumble, n., 4.

get a sneak on. See sneak on, get a.

get around the horn. See around . . .

get at the gee. See gee, get at the.

get away or get-away. See getaway.

get by. See getting by.

get down close. 'Got him down close. Know all about him; know where to find him'; 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; † by 1910: Cf.:

get down fine. 'Got him down fine. Know for a certainty; know all his antecedents': 1859, Matsell; by 1890, s.

get from the kickseys. See kickseys, reference of 1812.

get his. To be killed, 'bumped off', shot: ca. 1920–30, then low s.; e.g., April 20, 1929, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson, 'The Roaring Road', 'One of the most powerful overlords of hooch and crime was killed as he stood in front of his place of business, riddled with slugs . . . The other mobs survived, but they took what they could get after "Humpy" got his.' Short perhaps for such phrases as get one's quietus; prob. for get the works, 2.

get hunk. To retaliate: since ca. 1870: 1893, Confessions of a Convict (glossary), ed. by Julian Hawthorne; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; by 1910, low s. Hunk is prob. short for hunkydory.

get in a line (or string). See line, get in a.

get in the satchel. See satchel.

get it down the spout. See tea-pot mended, have one's.

get it in the neck. To be punished; to incur trouble, punishment; to suffer: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 'Sometimes the mouth-piece—informer to the police—sees it to his advantage to fake service to the police, and really work in secret with the thieves, and then the police get what is called the "double cross" and the public "gets it in the neck", as the tramp says'; by 1910, if not indeed by 1905 or so, it was low s.; by 1914, gen. s. Ex execution by axe or guillotine.

get jerry. See jerry, adj.

get off. To run away; to escape: 1781, George Parker (see quot'n at run mizzler); c. until ca. 1830, then s.

get off the button. See button.

get off the squash. See squash.

get off with one's wind. See wind, get off.

get-on. 'Place where many people enter a street-car or other public conveyance,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: pick-pockets': from ca. 1920. Where passengers get on or ascend.

get on the mason. See mason, on the.

get on the sharp. See sharp, on the.

get one's hair. See hair, get one's.

get one's lumps. See lumps.

get one's yen off; get the habit off. 'To allay withdrawal distress by occasional indulgence in drugs,' BVB: since ca. 1910. See yen and habit.

get pooped. To be murdered; to be killed by a gang: 1934, Rose; extant. Lit., to get oneself shot.

get queer. See queer, adv., reference of 1832.

get (a person) right. To obtain sufficient evidence against: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, A. B. Reeve, Guy Garrick (see quot'n at strong-arm, adj.); by 1935, police s. Cf. —perhaps ex—dead to rights.

get scrubbed (of the favourite or expected second horse), to lose the race or a place: C. 20: perhaps, orig., racing o. but prob. always racing s. I.e., washed out.

get the blue ink. See blue ink.

get the boat. See boat, n., references of 1874, 1886.

get the bricks. See bricks, get the.

get the clinch. See clinch, get the.

get the collar. See collar, get the.

get the gate. See gate, get the.

get the habit off. See get one's yen off.

get the home. See Home, the.

get the knickers. See knickers.

get the papers; usually as vbl n. "Getting the papers" means to be indicted as an habitual criminal,' David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open, 1935: since ca. 1920. Also in, e.g., Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.

get the skids. To die by gang violence; to be murdered: since the late 1920's: 1934, Howard N. Rose.

get the speer. See spur, get the.

get the works. To be sent to prison: C. 20. Jim Tully, 'Jungle Justice' in The American Mercury, April 1928, 'One-Lung here squealed, an' I got the works for two years—poundin' rocks wit' a sledge'; extant. With a pun on '(hard) work'?—2. To be killed, esp. by shooting: since ca. 1925: passim. By 1937 it was journalistic s. I.e., to receive the entire works, the whole thing, the final touch.

get through it; get through the piece. See through it.

get to. To bribe; to obtain a tacit protection by (someone): 1927, Kane; 1930, E. D. Sullivan, Chicago Surrenders, 'Gangsters can't operate on a satisfactory scale anywhere until they have "got to someone"'—as, in Chicago, they 'got to' Jack Lingle of The Tribune; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, police and political s. Semantically comparable is reach.

get-up, as in 'I've got six days and a get-up': morning of release from prison: convicts': 1934, get up the mail. To find money for a prisoner's defence: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); 1893, F & H (at get); 1896, F & H (at mail); slightly ob. Mail is short for blackmail: a shyster lawyer has to be briefed.

Rose; 1935, Hargan; extant. 'It's nice to get up in the morning . . .'

getaway. A locomotive: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. It gets the train away.—2. A railway (rail-road) train: 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H; † by 1920.—3. Esp. in make a getaway; an escape: 1893, Langdon W. Moore. His Own Story (both the separate term and the phrase); 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, 'Where the "get-away" took place'; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, 'If we made a get-away all right an' knew that the police wasn't on to us, course we didn't cough up any coin to 'em': ibid., glossary, 'Successful retreat with plunder'; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; by 1910, s.; by 1920, coll.; by 1930, familiar Standard American—and common in England.—4. That member of a gang (esp. of shop-lifters) who gets away, from the scene of the theft, with the stolen goods: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'Passin' th' bindles to th' getaways that come with their keisters'; extant.—5. (Ex sense 3; cf. senses 1, 2.) The means to effect a getaway: a weapon; money for bribes and/or transportation; a motor-car, an aeroplane, etc.: since ca. 1925. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

gets, make one's. To escape: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'Patsy was too large to squeeze himself through the opening, but "stalled" for Johnny while the latter "made his gets"': ob. Cf. s. do a get, 'to depart hastily', and cf. run and gets, q.v.

getter. A thief; esp. in combination, as, e.g., prop-getter: late C. 19–20.—2. A stealer of cheques: British: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.—3. 'One who steals from letter boxes,' Black, 1943: British: since ca. 1930.

getting a thing. Theft: since ca. 1920. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932.

getting by, vbl n. 'This business of wringing from chance sources enough money each day to supply one's insistent wants is known on the "stem" as "getting by"'. "Getting by" may mean anything from putting in a few hours a day at the most casual labor to picking a pocket or purloining an overcoat. It includes working at odd jobs, peddling small articles, street faking, "putting over" old and new forms of grafts, "working" the folks at home, "white collar" begging, stealing, and "jack rolling",' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; by 1925, s.; by 1930, coll.

geycat. A rare, illogical spelling of gay cat. (Ersine, 1933.)

gezumph; gezumph; or ga-. To swindle—also, a swindle; a swindler: low s., not c.: 1932, George Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar, where it is spelt gasumph; 1934, Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 'Gezumph (Y)—To swindle. Gezumph (Y)—A swindler.' Ex Yiddish.

ghee. See gee, 1, ref. of 1937.

gheed-up. Drug-exhilarated: (nautical) drug addicts': since ca. 1930. American Speech, April 1944, Otis Ferguson, 'Gassed up; gas-hound, gheed-up, rumdum, and goofed up'.

ghelt is a rare form of gelt.

ghost. An opium smoker: 1925, Leverage; ob. He comes to look like one.

ghost story. 'Any statement or report that is not true. When told to young boys it means a "faked" story of tramp life,' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary), 1899; ibid., p. 98, "Ghost-stories" (fancy tales of tramp life)'; 1902, Flynt, The Little Brother; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Stiff, 'Plausible tale told to the housewife'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A begging yarn'; by 1930, at latest, current among British tramps for a hard-luck story—as in Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932; extant. The basis of fact is so shadowy.—2. Hence, an alibi; an excuse: 1933, Ersine; extant.

ghoul. 'Ghouls. Fellows who watch assignation-houses, and follow females that come out of them to their homes and then threaten to expose them to their husbands, if they refuse to give them not only money, but also the use of their bodies': 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H; app. † by 1910.—2. 'Member of prison scavenger gang, convict in charge of morgue,' Castle, 1938: convicts', esp. at San Quentin: since ca. 1910. Collectively, the ghouls = the scavenger gang (Castle).—3. A beggar that looks haggard and imitates a tubercular cough: mostly beggars': since ca. 1920. Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941. He seems so pale, so ghost-like.

ghow is a variant of gow.

Gib. Gibraltar: mid-C. 19–20: orig. c., from convicts working there; but soon, predominantly s. (B & L, 1889).—2. Hence, a convict prison: 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude, 'I did a lagging (prison sentence) of seven (i.e., seven years), and was at the Gib. three out of it'; 1893, F & H; † by 1910, except, perhaps, in U.S.A., for Leverage has it in 1925.

gibber. A horse-dealer, esp. an illicit or dishonest one: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'There is generally three of them together at a Fair [or a Market]; their method is to buy Horses that are 'crocked, 'on purpose to deceive ignorant People in changing them'; they exaggerate the merits of the defective horse and, in exchange, obtain a sound horse of three or more times the value; † by 1890. Origin?

gibe. See gybe.

gibel. 'Gibel the chive, bring the knife,' Disraeli, Venetia, 1837; 1893, F & H. But is it genuine? F & H merely quote Disraeli, who was no sort of authority on c.: Disraeli's novel belongs to the period (ca. 1830–40) of 'literary' cant, found also in Bulwer Lytton and Harrison Ainsworth.

gibitz. 'A looker-on at stuss,' Leverage, 1925: extant. Rather is it (low) s. than c.—Cf. kabitzer.

giddyap, 'racehorse'—as in, e.g., Damon Runyon, Take It Easy, 1938—is racecourse s. rather than c. Ex get up!

gift. An easy burglary: 1833, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–34, IX, trial of James Isaacs for burglary, 'Isaacs said to me, "Mr and Mrs Parker are out; there is a gift, will you go?"' . . . I did not know what he meant by a gift'; by 1890, s.—2. Hence, 'any article which has been stolen and afterwards sold at a low price': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1900, no longer c.

gig, n. See gigg.—2. See saddle.—3. A gigolo: U.S.A.: since ca. 1925; by 1940, low s. Ersine.

gig, v. To look: 1718, C. Hitchings, The Regulator, 'The Cull gigs, alias the Man looks'; app. † by 1830. Perhaps cf. Cornish dial. geek, 'to peep; to stare about'.—2. 'To gigger a Smithfield hank, to hamstring an over drove ox,' Grose, 1785, where hank = a baiting; † by 1890.

gige is a misprint for gigger. (The 1735 edition of The Triumph of Wit.)

giger. See gigger.

gigg or gig, n. Nose: 1676, Coles (gigg); 1698, B.E. (gig); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Grunter's gigger, a hog's snout'; 1797, Potter; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); † by 1870. Origin obscure.—2. 'A Woman's Privities,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; app. † by 1870. Perhaps ex sense 1: cf. the semantics of the parson's nose, 'a goose's rump'.—3. Abbr. of gigger: 1698, B.E. (at case), 'Tis all Bob, and then to dub the gigger, c. now the coast is clear, there's good Booty, let's fall on, and Rob the House'; 1718, C. Hitching (gygg); Lytton Bulwer, Pelham, 1828; app. † by 1840.—4. Mouth: 1828, P. Egan, Finish, 'The bit of myrtle in his gig'; † by 1893 (F & H). Perhaps ex sense 2.—5. A farthing: mid-C. 19: on borderline between c. and low s. Perhaps ex grig. (Only as gig.) gigg, v. See gig, v.

gigger. Harman, 1566, has both 'a gygger, a doore' and 'to dup the gyger, to open the doore'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, spells it gigger in 'The Canters Dictionarie', giger in the ensuing song in c.; 1610, Rowlands; 1665, R. Head (giger); 1676, Coles (gigger); 1688, Holme (giger and gigger); 1698, B.E.; 1714, Alex. Smith; 1718, C. Hitching (jigger); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1781, G. Parker (jigger); 1785, Grose (jigger); by 1794, used in U.S.A. (Tufts); 1797, Potter; 1812, Vaux (jigger); 1821, D. Haggart (jiger); 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rockwood; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1851, Mayhew (jigger); 1859, H. (id.); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), both jigger and jigger; 1889, B & L, 'Jigger (canting and gypsy), a gate or door'; † by 1920. Prob. ex old Romany stigga (or stekka) 'a gate'—? cf. Romany wuder, 'a door' (B & L).—2. Hence, a latch: 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell, 'A lock'; † by 1930.—3. A turnkey: 1797, Potter; † by 1890. Also jigger: see jigger, 4.—4. See jigger, 8.

jigger-dubber. See jigger-dubber.

giggery-gee. See jiggery-gee.

giggle. See gandy gumbo.

giggle stick. Penis: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Prob. it rhymes on prick, but it may be a double variation (form, sense) of s. joy stick.

giggle water, 'champagne': Eagle, 1933: s. (orig., low), not c. giggler; gen. pl. 'Gigglers, c. wanton Women,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1860. The lit. sense has prob. been influenced by giglot, a wanton.

gilder. See guilder.

gile (or gyle) hather. See Awdeley's, No. 14: † by 1700 at the very latest. The term derives ex Captain Giles Hather, a notable swindler and leader of vagabonds: Rowlands, in Martin Mark-All, 1610, says that he 'first beganne' in 1528: 'concerning whom, there is nothing made mention of, but of his coosonage and deceit'.

Giles's (or St Giles's) breed. A s., not a c., term applied to criminals living, as so many of them did, in the parish of St Giles—now London, W.C.1. Cf.:

Giles's Greek, Saint. The language of the underworld, esp. of London: 1785, Grose. But this term is either s. or allusive S.E.

gilk. A false key: see the next entry.

gilk(e)s for the gigger. 'False keys for the doore or pick-lockes,' Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610; app. † by 1720. A gigger is a door; gilk is cognate with gilt, n., 2.

gill. A man, chap, fellow, app. first recorded in combination: 1797 (see rum gill); 1809 (see queer gill); 1811 (see toby gill); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A word used by way of variation, similar to cove, gloak, or gory; but generally coupled to some other descriptive term, as a flash-gill, a toby-gill, &c.'; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I, 'The numerous gills he has punished'; 1823, Egan's Grose (as for Vaux); 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London, II, i, 'I haven't a downier gill in the whole college [Newgate] than you are'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, Augustus Mayhew (see queer gill); † by 1900. Prob. a corruption of Romany chal, 'fellow'.—2. Hence, collectively, people, persons; a household: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'The whole gill is safe at rug; the people of the house are fast asleep'; app. † by 1860.—3. (Ex sense 1.) In U.S.A., gills is circus s., not c., for 'countrymen, farmers, outsiders (non-circus persons)'—witness The White Tops, July–Aug. 1928, 'Circus Glossary'.—4. Hence (?), 'a confidence worker's victim; one likely to fall an easy prey to a sharper' (Irwin): since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

gillfurl, 'a proud minks, a vain capricious woman' (Grose, 1785), is not c., but S.E.—properly gill-flirt—of ca. 1630–1870.

gilligan; in full, gilligan hitch. A strangle-hold effected from the rear, with crook of elbow in the forefront of the victim's throat: since ca. 1925. Ersine, 'From Mr Gilligan, an old-time strong-arm actor'.

gilly, n. A man, fellow, 'guy': May 21, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch. Perhaps ex gill, 1, but prob. ex gill, 3 or 4; cf.:

gilly, adj. Inexperienced: 1909, Will Irwin, Confessions of a Con Man, 'Gilly help . . . inexperienced circus help' (i.e., new hand): so perhaps rather circus s. than c. The n., meaning 'a sucker' (Barry Buchanan, in The New York Herald Tribune of Feb. 17, 1937), is circus and fairground s.—after ca. 1920, anyway. Ex gill, 3 (and 4?).

gilt, n. A thief; esp. a picklock burglar: 1620, John Melton, Astrologaster (O.E.D.); 1666, Anon., Leathermore's Advice (or The Nicker Nicked), where it is spelt guilt; (1707, J. Shirley: see jilt, n., 2;) 1725, A New Canting Dict., which, at rum dubber, implies rum gilt, a dextrous picklock burglar, and which classifies 'gilt' as the 53rd Order of Villains; app. † by 1780. Perhaps because he aims to steal gold; if so, ex sense 3.—2. Hence, a picklock; a skeleton key: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1675, Anon., News from Tybourne, 'W. V. was taken with a bag of Gilt' about him, which are great and small Picklock-keyes and other Instruments fit for that purpose [burglary]'; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, where it is misprinted tylt; 1728, D. Defoe; at some date in early C. 19, it shaded off into sense 4.—3. A variant of gelt: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1835, Sessions Papers; by 1850, low (esp. Cockney) s. Before C. 18, it was S.E., already deteriorating in C. 17. Gold and gilt.—4. (Ex sense 2.) A crowbar: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 'Pronounced jilt'; 1859, Matsell—hence American; 1882, James D. McCabe, New York; 1889, B & L; † by 1920.

gilt, v. See jilt, v. (A presumed form.)

gilt, adj. With very fair, light-golden hair: since the 1920's. James Curtis, The Gilt Kid (a young 'screwsman'), 1936. Underworld poetry.

gilt (or rum) dubber. 'A thief who picks locks, so called from the gilt or pick-lock key; many of them are so expert, that from the lock of a church door to that of the smallest cabinet, they will find means to open it; these go into reputable public-houses, where pretending business, they contrive to get into public rooms, up stairs, where they open any bureaus or trunks they happen to find there': 1785, Grose. Whereas rum dubber, q.v., had a very long life, gilt dubber seems to have been current only ca. 1760–1840, though it may have survived until ca. 1898 in the U.S.A., where, in New York at least, it bore the meaning, 'a hotel-thief' (Matsell, 1859; 1882, James D. McCabe).

gilt nail; gilt tack. Esp. a counterfeit sovereign and a counterfeit half-sovereign: counterfeiters': 1858, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, xvii; † by 1920. Complementary terms, based on proportional size.

gilter. A professional housebreaker, expert in the use of keys and tools: ca. 1663, Anon., A Caveat for Cut-purses (see quot'n at diver, 2); 1676, Anon., A Warning for Housekeepers, 'This Gilter is one that hath all sorts of Picklocks and false Keys to open any Locks both of Dore, Chests, Trunks and the like. There are several sorts that do creep to these sort of Thieves'—e.g., the budge, the lifter, the private thief, qq.v.; app. † by 1720. Despite dates, it presumably derives ex jilt, v., which almost certainly had the variant form gilt; cf. gilt, n., 2.

gilyore is a ghost word—Matsell's error for s. galore, plenty.

gimcrack, 'a spruce Wench' (B.E., 1698), is not c., but s.

gimick or gimmick. A secret knack; any trick aiding the operation of a device or a game; a sales trick: always as much pitchmen's s., both American and Canadian, as c.—witness the article 'Alagazam' in The Saturday Evening Post, Oct. 19, 1929. But the sense 'fellow, chap, guy'—as in Flynn's, March 22, 1930, Robert Carse, 'Jail Break!'—may be c. of ca. 1920–35, and then low s.—3. A synonym of gimpy, but with form determined by gimick, 2: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—4. (Ex sense 1.) A legal manoeuvre designed to make things easier for a criminal, esp. a racketeer or a gangster: 1937, C. Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 'These jurors do not know that the apparent severity [of a judge's sentence] may be a device known to the underworld as a "gimmick" or a "gaff"': extant. Prob. implied in Ersine's definition, 1933: 'any cheating device'.

gimp, n. and adj. A lame leg; lame: 1925, Leverage; extant. App. a perversion of gammy (leg), perhaps influenced by crip.

gimpy. 'The only name I ever knew the fellow by was "Gimpy", or "Memphis Gimpy" . . . He was crippled in one leg, which fact accounted for his moniker, for on the Road a lame man is a gimpy,' Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Gimpy.—Lame; crippled'; extant. Ex gimp.

gin. A coloured woman; a Negress: 1925, Leverage; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A coloured prostitute'; extant, esp. in the 'prostitute' nuance (BVB, 1942). Adopted from Australian crooks and hoboes: in Australia, a gin is an aboriginal woman.

gin-mill. A speakeasy: tramps': since ca. 1920: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'a low, dirty dive'; 1933, Ersine. An adaptation of the much older s. sense, 'a (liquor) saloon'.

gin-mill racket, the. Fraud practised on the drinking saloons: 1895, J. W. Sullivan, Tenement Tales of New York; app. † by 1920. See prec.

ginger, v.; gingerer; gingering. (Of a prostitute) to rob a man by taking money for his clothes; a prostitute doing this; the action implied: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1945. She 'gingers him up'.

ginger ale. A prison: esp. Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on jail.

ginger beer. A tear (lacrima): Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

gingerbread door. A bank-safe door with many useless trimmings: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

gingerer; gingering. See ginger.

gingery. (Of persons) bad-tempered: 1823, Bee, 'At a flashhouse, "how gingery is Cow-cross Billy today"'; app. † by 1900. Ex stable s.: 'lively' (horses).

gink. A man; a chap, fellow, 'guy': 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1917, H. M. Wodson, The Whirlpool (Canadian), old offender to a newspaper, 'The last time yer wrote me up, the ginks at the Jail Farm wuz laughin' fer a month. Cut it out. See?'; 1918, Leon Livingston; by 1920, low s., and by 1930, general s. For a fuller treatment of the etymology, see my The World of Words, 1938; Irwin is prob. correct when, in American Tramp and Underworld Slang, he says: 'Possibly derived from "gink", as a trick, whence "ginkie", a term of reproach applied to a woman in Scottish dialect': cf. the sense development from gimick, 1., to gimick, 2.

ginned. Topsy: 'Whether from too much gin or any other liquor,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1905; by 1935, low s.

ginny or Ginny. 'An instrument to lift up a Grate, the better to Steal what is in the Window,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, where it is erroneously printed grinny; † by 1890. The g- may be the result of gin, an engine, a mechanical device. I.e., Jinny = Jenny, which prob. arose as a 'female' counterpart to Jemmy (or jemmy).—2. Hence, though severely suspect, a burglar using it: 'The ninth is a Ginny, to lift up a Grate, | If he sees but the Lurry with his Hooks he will bate,' J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 1707; current only ca. 1685–1730.—3. (Or G.) An Italian: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, "'If I'd been born a Hunky or a Ginny, or even a Yiddisher boy—but Irish——!'"'; 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch, 'That little ginney over there'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Probably first applied to some Italian, Spanish, or Portuguese seaman from the Guinea Coast, and used generally throughout America to designate anyone of the Latin races, especially in a derogatory way'—from which it emerges that, by 1930 at latest, the term was s.—rather low s. See Irwin quot'n. Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls, 1931, in 'Dark Dolores' has the forms Guinea and Guin.—4. 'Speaking in the first person,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, p. 249; ibid., p. 261, 'I was patting this ginny on the hump . . . I was congratulating myself on my good fortune', where ginny simply = 'person'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'The ginny with th' poke gave th' razoo an' we split a bunch of nifty kale'; extant. Cf. s. this child (myself); prob. ex sense 3.

gip. A thief: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; by 1910, low s. Abbr. gypsy, gipsy.—2. Hence, 'a dealer in horses or autos,' Leverage, 1925; extant.

gip artist. A confidence man, a professional crook: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Ex prec. term.

giraffe. An inquisitor or prying person: since late 1920's. Ersine, 1933. Ex its long neck: cf. s. rubberneck.

girl. In low speech, girl has, from ca. 1770, connoted a harlot: that usage, however, is not c., but merely coll. In the jargon of the white-slavers, girls is generic for females that are prostitutes, the world of prostitutes: this usage, which dates from the latter half of the C. 19, may fairly be classified as c. See, e.g., Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, translated by Eric Sutton, 1928, at p. 117.

girl and boy. A saveloy: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; adopted ex Cockney v.

girl below the line. A prostitute: C. 20. BVB (whose other girl terms are not c.), 1942. Here, line = waist.

git. See get.

gitaway. See getaway.

give a coating. See coat.

give a dead one. See dead one, 3.

give (someone) a drink. To 'take him for a ride': New York: since ca. 1924. Kernôt, 1929–31. The corpse is thrown into the Hudson.

give a drum. See drum, v., 3.

give a fill to. To deceive: 1909, Ware, '“I gave the blue belly a fill”—would mean that you sent the policeman on a wrong scent'; app. † by 1930. A 'bellyful' of trouble.

give (someone) a headache. To render—esp., to knock—unconscious: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. When he recovers consciousness, the victim has one.

give (a prisoner) a hole. To put in solitary confinement: convicts': C. 20. Rose, 1934. See hole, 2. give a roasting. 'I see a reeler (policeman) giving me a roasting (watching me)': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; extant. Cf. roast, v., 2; and see roast brown.

give a toss. 'One of them suggested . . . that it might be well to "give the marshal a toss" (rob him)': Ernest L. Van Wagner, New York Detective, 1938: pickpockets': C. 20.

give (someone) a tumble. To suspect: Howard N. Rose, 1934. See tumble, n.

give away. To turn (a person) over to the law: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1890, no longer c.

give away one's kisser. See give up one's kisser. give (a person) best. To leave, abandon, keep out of the way of: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'After a time I gave him best (left him) because he used to want to bite my ear (borrow) too often'; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; by 1910, no longer c. Cf. the s. sense, 'to acknowledge the superiority of'.

give (someone) charity. To kill while robbing (him): South American: C. 20. Harry Franck, Working North from Patagonia, 1921. Cf. donner le coup de grâce.

give (one) consolation. See consolation.

give gammon. See gammon, give.

give hot beef. See hot beef, give.

give in best. See best, give in.

give it 'em on the back slum—on the billiard slum. See back slum—billiard slum.

give it to. 'To rob or defraud any place or person, as, I gave it to him for his reader, I robb'd him of his pocket-book. What suit did you give it them upon? In what manner, or by what means, did you effect your purpose? Also, to impose upon a person's credulity by telling him a string of falsehoods; or to take any unfair advantage of another's inadvertence or unsuspecting temper, on any occasion; in either case, the party at last dropping down, that is, detecting your imposition, will say, I believe you have been giving it to me nicely all this while': 1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan's Groser, 1823; 1859, H (at reader); † by 1880.

give Kennedy. See Kennedy, reference of 1874.

give (one) some stick. To encourage punters to bet freely on (a certain horse, esp. the favourite): C. 20: racing c. >, by 1935, low racing s. 'John Morris' in The Cornhill Magazine, June 1933. Ex the use of the jockey's whip.

give the blocks. See blocks.

give (one) the budge. See budge, give the.

give the chill. See chill . . .

give the circus. See circus . . .

give the collar. See collar, give the.

give the cross. To double-cross; to cheat, deceive, a person: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'She's givin' you the cross'; extant. See cross, n., 1.

give the double O. See double O, n.

give the go-by. To refuse to sell (to an addict): drug traffic: since ca. 1920. BVB. Ex the coll. sense, 'to ignore; to pass by'.

give (someone) the gripes, 'to disgust': Sept. 20, 1930, Liberty: not c. but low s.

give the heat. To murder with a firearm: anglicized ca. 1932. John G. Brandon, 1936. See heat, n. and phrase.

give the laugh. See laugh . . .

give the marble heart. 'To refuse a person's appeal is to give him the marble heart,' A. F. B. Crofton, 'The Language of Crime', Popular Science Monthly, April 1897; ob. by 1920; † by 1930. Cf. the S.E. to be hard-hearted and to have a heart like a stone.

give the O.O. See double O, n.

give the rap. See rap, give the.

give (a person) the rattle. 'To talk to a man so as to divert his attention, as, for instance, while robbing him. To confuse by talking,' B & L, 1890; 1902, F & H; current ca. 1880–1910. Prob. ex 'to rattle a person', to confuse him.

give the razoo. See razoo, give the.

give the roust. See roust, give the.

give the spur. See spur, give the.

give the wire. See wire, give the.

give the word of protection. See protection, give . . .

give (one) the works. To tell: 1927, George Dilnot, The Crooks' Game, 'I'll give you the whole works if you want it' (an American speaking); 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch, "'Well," Flenger snapped, without any greeting, "give us the works. What'd they do?"'; by 1938, s. To tell all, the works being 'the whole works'.—2. To deceive (as, e.g., a girl, a man): Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's, John Wilstach, 'The Gun Moll'; extant.—3. To kill: 1929, C. F. Coe, Hooch, 'I figger . . . that this man never was bumped here at all. They gave him the works some place a long way off an' waited until early mornin' to dump him here'; July 6, 1929, Flynn's, Albert Chenicek, 'The Pineapple'; 1930, Burke (quot'n at kick back); 1930, Charles F. Coe, Gunman; 1930, E. D. Sullivan, Chicago Surrenders; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To give another "the works" is to kill him, usually by shooting'; 1932, Edgar Wallace, When the Gangs Came to London; by 1937, cinema-goers' s.—4. Mostly in passive. Given the works, 'given a job by a social agency, or sent to the rock pile by the judge,' Stiff, 1931: mostly tramps', and perhaps the earliest sense—for it is literal; extant. Here, works = work = labour.—5. (Ex sense 3.) To thrash, beat up, assault: 1935, Crump & Newton, Our Police; Sept. 27, 1937, Godfrey Irwin (letter); extant.

Give Tie Passes. 'The Grand Trunk Pacific [railroad] is said to "Give Tie Passes",' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1920. Ex the initials G.T.P.; and see tie pass.

give (a person) turnips. See turnips.

give up. To pay a bribe to policemen or other officials: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, ' . . . An English Moll, who had fallen up-State and had to "give up" heavily'; 1904, Life in Sing Sing, 'Giving Up. Paying for protection'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; ob. I.e., to yield (money).—2. To give information: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1930, Burke, 'To turn informer. "That mutt! One sock in the puss and he'd give up"'; 1934, Rose; 1935, Crump & Newton, Our Police; extant. To yield what one has to tell.

give up—also give away—one's kisser. 'To show one's face; to risk identification': Aug. 2, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick (both forms); extant. Cf. give up, 2; kisser is low s. for 'mouth; face'.

glad mitt. See mitt, glad.

glad stuff. 'Opium; morphine; cocaine,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. happy dust.

gladder (or gladher); gladdering. 'At shortening, sallying, trucking, gladdering—to descend from gentle Romnimus to base-born Kennick—shoful-pitching, fawney-rigging, and the thousand and one ingenious little devices, whereby the impecunious endeavour to augment their balances at their bankers', he was . . . facile princeps, 'No. 747 (ed. by F. W. Carew), p. 19; ibid., p. 118, 'Anybody with a bit of bluff can truck, gladdher, or sally, but it takes a perffessor to caur' (steal by slight of hand). Current ca. 1830–1900. Not true c. but a gypsy term; 'to tinker; tinkering'; yet not true Romany. 'Artificially formed from solder (pronounced "sawther") by substituting gl- for the true initial,' says John Sampson, s.v. glathera (solder, pewter), in The Dialect of the Gypsies of Wales.

glahm. See glaum.

glaise. See glaze, n.

glam. See glaum.

glammer. See glaumer.

glanthem or glanthorne. Money; esp. as in: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters (glossary), 'Drop the glanthem. Parting with money'; ibid. (text), 'Now they begin to drop the glanthem, I must tip 'em some rum gammon'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II (drop the glanthem); † by 1893 (F & H). Perhaps because, like a lanthorn, it lightens our darkness.

glasier. See glazier—glasiers. See glaziers.

glass. Collective n., windows: 1753, John Poulter (see quot'n at jump, v.); app. † by 1820.—2. An hour: U.S.A.: since ca. 1850: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; ob. By abbr. of S.E. hour-glass. Hence half a glass, 'half-an-hour', and a glass and a half, 'an hour and a half'.—3. 'He specialized on glass or ice, which same means simply diamonds,' Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 1918: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910: 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'A scarf pin . . . with a nice hunk of glass in it'; 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra, 'All the safety-deposit boxes are lousy with glass'; by 1941 (Val Davis, Phenomena), also British—indeed, prob. British since ca. 1937; extant. Appearance.—4. A hypodermic syringe: U.S. addicts': since ca. 1925. BVB, 1942. Made of glass.

glass, v. 'The cardsharp was slashed on the face with a razor (chivved) and struck with a broken drinking glass (glassed)': Brown, 1931; 1936, Mark Benney, Low Company; 1942, Baker (Australia); 1943, Black, 'To wound with broken glass'; extant.

glass arm, 'an arm partially or completely paralyzed' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931); not c., but s.

glass(-)blowing. See diamond-cutting.

glass case. The face: 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; c. until ca. 1865, then low rhyming s.; † by 1890. The term was never so gen. as Chevy Chase.

glass-eyes; glassy-eye. A drug addict: dope traffic: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. A symptom.

glass jaw. A coward; a person easily defeated: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1935, s. Ex sporting s., where the term = a weak or sensitive jaw (Irwin).

glass rag. A broken tumbler, base-held in a handkerchief (serving also to hide it) and used as a weapon: since ca. 1930. Jim Phelan, In the Can, 1939. Cf. glass, v.

glass work. The use of a tiny convex mirror 'fastened with shellac to the lower corner of the left palm, opposite the thumb'; it 'reflects the cards as dealt': card-sharpers': since ca. 1880: 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H, 'An obsolete method of cheating at cards'; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.), 'Glasswork, n. Cheating with the help of a mirror'; 1933, Ersine; extant in U.S.A.

glassy-eye. See glass-eyes. The corresponding adj. is glassy-eyed: BVB, 1942.

glasyers. See glaziers.

glaum, glom, etc. Ex the v., and much less frequent. See '1925, Leverage' in sense 1 of the v.—2. A glance, a look: since ca. 1935. Flynn's, June 11, 1938, Richard Sale, 'I got a glam at the rod in his right hand'. Ex sense 4 of the v.

glaum, v.; occ. glahm or glam or glom. To seize; to take illicitly: tramps' and criminals': 1907, Jack London, The Road (in ref. to ca. 1901),

'We discovered that our hands were gloved. "Where'd ye glahm 'em?" I asked. "Out of an engine-cab," he answered; "and where did you?" "They belonged to a fireman," said I; "he was eareless"' ; 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, "The 'dicks' rushed in and glomed him"' ; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, Criminal Slang, at glom—'To snatch, to grab, to take' ; 1919, Dialect Notes, F. H. Sidney, 'Hobo Cant', 'Glaum—to steal' ; 1925, Leverage, 'Glam. Theft ; graft.—Glam, v., To steal' ; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, "'Course, th' rule is, glom while th' glommin's good"' ; 1927, Kane, who records glam, glaum, glom ; Jan. 25, 1930, Flynn's, Robert H. Rohde, 'In his hip-pocket, where even the lowest kind of busk worker would have no difficulty in glomming it' ; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (glaum and glom) ; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer (glom) ; 1933, Eagle ; 1934, Thomas Minehan ; 1934, Rose ; 1936, Charles Francis Coe, Ransom ; 1938, Castle, 'Glom—to steal, to grab' ; 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra ; extant. App. ex Scottish glaum or glam, 'to clutch'.—2. Hence, to arrest : 1917, Leon Livingston, From Coast to Coast with Jack London, 'glummed' [sic] for 'arrested' ; 1919, F. H. Sidney ; June 20, 1925, Flynn's, 'Many of the boys would not have been "glommed" had it not been for their women testifying against them' ; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice ; 1934, Convict ; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road ; extant.—3. (Ex sense 1.) To catch (esp., a train) : tramps' : 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures, 'Well, Slim, this ain't glommin' a rattler' ; extant.—4. Hence, to glaum (etc.) his pan, to have a good look at or scrutinize someone's face : March 22, 1930, Flynn's, Robert Carse, 'Jail Break !' ; Aug. 2, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick ; 1933, Ersine, 'To see' ; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall ; extant.—5. (Prob. ex senses 1 and 3.) To eat : 1934, Thomas Minehan, Boy and Girl Tramps ; 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece, "'You want to glom?" "Man, I'll say !"' ; extant.

glauum (or glom) onto. 'To steal, to take ; usually by force,' Ersine, 1933 ; extant. See glauum.

glauumer or glammer. A thief : 1925, Leverage (glammer) ; extant. Ex glauum, v., 1.

glauiming. (Crop-)gathering : tramps' : since ca. 1920 : 1931, Stiff, 'We have berry glauiming, apple glauiming or knocking, cherry glauiming, etc.' Ex the radical idea behind glauum, v.

glaver, 'to flatter, to curry favour', has somewhere been said to be c. : it is † S.E.

glaze, n. A glass window : 1698, B.E. ; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed. ; 1718, C. Hitching (glaise) ; 1720, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, III, 'Look slily into the Glaze. That is, look privately into a Window, to see if there's no body in the Parlour, that they may go in to rob it' ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. ; 1753, Poulter, Discoveries ; 1777 (see star, v.) ; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. ; by 1794, in use in U.S.A. (Henry Tufts, 1807, 'A square of glass') ; 1797, Potter ; 1809, Andrewes ; 1812, Vaux ; 1823, Bee ; 1839, Brandon ; 1851, E. Z. C. Judson (U.S.A.) ; 1857, Snowden ; 1859, Matsell ; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.) ; 1887, Baumann ; by 1889 (B & L) it was low s. 'Glaze for glass in old gypsy' (B & L).—2. Hence (or was it always implicit in sense 1 ?), glass : 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society, 'Glaze is eant for glass' ; 1797, Potter ; 1859, H. ; by 1889, low s., according to B & L.—3. (Ex 1.) An eye : ca. 1780–1840. See mill (a person's) glaze.

glaze, v. To cheat (a person) at cards by putting a mirror behind him : 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, where it is implied in 'Glazing (that is, putting a looking glass behind you)' ; 1821, P. Egan ; † by 1893 (F & H). Prob. ex glaze, n., 1.—2. Hence (?), to flatter (a person) : U.S.A. : 1925, Leverage ; extant.

glaze, mill or star a. For the latter, see star, v. The sense is : to cut a square out of a window as a preliminary to burglary. A 'glaze' is a window ; to 'mill' is to break. The latter phrase occurs in 1777 ; the former in 1698 (see mill a glaze).—2. (Only mill . . .) See mill (a person's) glaze.

glaze, on the ; often go(ing) on the glaze. Engaged in 'robbing jewellers' shops by smashing the windows' (F & H, 1893) : C. 18–20. It occurs, e.g., in C. Johnson's Highwaymen and Pyrates, 1724–34, and in Ally Sloper (May 4, 1889) : † by 1910. Ex the preceding (and see mill a glaze).

glaze, snap the. See snap the glaze.

glaze, spank the. See spank, v.

glaze, star the. See star, v.

glazes, nob the. See nob the glazes.

glazier. See glaziers.—2. 'Glazyer . . . One that goes in at the windows' as independent burglar or as one of a gang of house-breakers : 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue ; 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, spells it glasier and says, 'They are a sort of cowardly thieves ; they take out a pane of glass, and go in at the window, and take what stands next them' ; 1698, B.E. ; 1707, J. Shirley ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. ; a sense app. † by 1760. Cf. glaze, n., 1.—3. Hence, 'one who breaks windows and shew glasses'—show cases—'to steal goods exposed'—exhibited—'for sale' : 1785, Grose ; 1797, Potter ; 1809, Andrewes ; 1848, Sinks of London ; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.) ; 1887, Baumann ; † by 1900. Ex glaze, n., 1. glaziers ; very rare in the singular. 'Glasyers, eyes,' Harman, 1566 ; 1610, Rowlands (glasiers) ; 1641, R. Brome (see quot'n at tower) ; 1665, R. Head ; 1676, Coles ; 1688, Holme ; 1698, B.E., 'The Cove has Rum Glaziers, c. that Rogue has excellent Eyes, or an Eye like a Cat' ; 1707, J. Shirley ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. ; 1785, Grose ; 1797, Potter ; 1809, George Andrewes ; app. † by 1860. Cf. glaze, n. ; glaziers is a pun on the S.E. glazier, 'a glass-maker ; (hence) a glazer of windows'.—2. Hence, windows : 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, where spelt glasiers ; † by 1860.

glazing, vbl n. The card-sharping trick mentioned at glaze, v.

gleaner ; gleaning. A thief ; thieving : perhaps c., perhaps only London street s. : ca. 1850–1910. See find, v., quot'n of 1884.

glee. To look, glance, see, search (v.i.) : 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Then we pike to glee if there is a Cull that has a Bit' (or purse) ; ibid., 'Come, let us pike' or go 'to glee for a Pitter or Leather' ; ibid., 'They . . . glee into them, that is, look into them, to see if . . .' ; † by 1820. Possibly a perversion of see.

glib, n. A ribbon : 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'A Lobb full of Glibbs ; a Box full of Ribbons' ; repeated in The Monthly Magazine, Jan. 1799 ; app. † by 1820. Ex S.E. glib, smooth.—2. Hence, the tongue ; hence, talk : 1821, J.

Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, 'You must observe that, as he is very full you must let him have all the jaw-work to himself'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx, 'Slacken your glib . . . Loosen your tongue'; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by 1870, low s.

glib, adj. Polite: 1859, Matsell, 'The cove is glib,' the fellow is polite'; † by 1920. Ex the S.E. senses, 'ready-tongued', 'smooth-tongued'.

glibb. See glib, reference of 1753.

glibe or glybe. 'Glybe, a writing': 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (glybe); 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Glibe.—Writing; a written agreement'; 1893, F & H (as American c.); 1903, Clapin; † by 1905 in Britain, and by 1930 in U.S.A. Perhaps a disguising of gybe, q.v.

glide. A skiff: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); by 1937, † (Irwin). Ex its gliding motion when it is skilfully propelled.

glim or glimm. A (dark) lantern: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers; 1698, B.E., 'Glim, c. a Dark-Lantern used in Robbing Houses'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1821, W. T. Moncrieff, Tom and Jerry (any lantern); 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; by 1850 at latest, current in U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); † by 1880 in England, though it lingered on in U.S.A.; in 1914, Jackson & Hellyer define it as 'lamp'; so, too, in Flynn's, Dec. 11, 1926. In 1929, Cornell Woolrich, in Flynn's of Sept. 26, 1936, uses it of automobile lamps—now a predominant sense in the U.S.A. Senses 1-4 (esp. 4) are to be related to glimmer.—2. Hence, a candle: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society (see out glim); 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1812, Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); by 1860, s. in England; by 1900, s. in U.S.A.—3. (Prob. ex sense 2.) A light; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; 1797, Potter; by 1794, in use in U.S.A. (Henry Tufts, 1807, 'Douse the glim . . . put out the light'); 1809, Andrewes; 1812, Vaux; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1848, Sinks of London; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); by ca. 1850, it was low s. in England, and by 1900, in U.S.A.—4. (Cf. senses 2, 3.) (A) fire; 1676, 1698, 1725, implied in glimfender; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose, who seems to be recording glim as fire in general, not a specific conflagration; † by 1870.—5. See glimms, eyes.—6. Hence, eyesight: 1823, Egan's Grose; 1891 (see puff, v., 3); † by 1920.—7. (Ex senses 2-4.) A venereal disease, esp. syphilis: see knap, v., 3.—8. See glimms, 2 (stars).—9 See glimms, 3 (spectacles).—10. See glim lurk.—11. A match (ignition): U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage; ob. Prob. ex sense 3.—12. A window; a door, i.e., an open door: U.S.A.: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), which adds, 'Light in general'; the sense 'door' was † by 1937 at latest (Irwin). Cf. sense 3; prob. short for shade-glim.—13. A sharp fellow: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Perhaps ex sense 3.—14. An electric torch, esp. one with a very small aperture: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1932, Arthur Gardner; 1935, David glim, v. To brand (a person) in the hand by burning, to show that he has been a criminal: 1698, B.E., 'As the Cull was Glimm'd, he gangs to the Nubb, c.'; 1718, C. Hitching; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1726, Alex. Smith, Jonathan Wild, has glim in the muns (face) and glim in the paw (hand); 1753, Poulter (glim'd in the Fam); 1785, Grose; † by 1860. Ex the n.: esp. senses 1-4.—2. To see, catch sight of: U.S. tramps', but perhaps only ca. 1905-20: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, where a criminal tramp says, 'Was afraid they had glimbed me'. Ex glim, n., 6 and 9.—3. Hence, 'to observe one sharply,' Leverage, 1925: U.S. criminals': extant. Ex glim, n., 5.—4. To illuminate: U.S.A.: March 16, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington, 'Stopped in front of Eddie's cell to "glim" it'; extant. Ex glim, n., 3.

Hume, Gaol Gates; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; extant. —15. A card-sharper's device (a small mirror): U.S.A.: 1936 (see shiner, 1).

glim, on the, adj. and adv. A-begging: C. 20. Partridge, 1938. I.e., looking about: cf. glim, n., 5.

glim-drop, the. 'A confidence game involving the use of an artificial eye,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1938: since the 1920's. Cf. next entry and see glim, n., 5 and 9.

glim(-)dropper. One who 'loses' his glass-eye and 'cashes in' when it is found: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, where there is an entire chapter on the procedure adopted in this 'eye'-for-'ring' variation of the ring-dropping game; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland; extant. Cf. glim, n., 9.

glim-fender. See glimfender.

glim-flashy; glim flushly. See glimflashy.

glim jack. See glimjack.

glim lurk; also simply glim. The soliciting of alms by a tale of loss by fire: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 219 (the shorter form, and also the longer); 1859, H (the longer); 1889, B & L (id.); 1893, F & H; † by 1920. Ex glim, n., 4 + lurk, n.

glim star. A finger-ring: Jan. 1741, trial of Mary Young, in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, 1742; † by 1810. Ex glim, n., 2 and 3.

glim(-)stick. See glimstick.

glim up. 'As a precautionary measure we "glimmed up" (flashed our light around) the interior of the bank for the purpose of seeing whether or not all was well,' Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 1929: burglars', bank-robbers': C. 20.

glimfender. (Usually pl.) An andiron: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1890—prob. by 1860 or 1870. Cf. glim, n., 4.—2. Hence, in Bee, 'Glim-fenders—hand-cuffs, or wrist manacles': 1797, Potter, 'Glim Fenders, hand irons'. But is not this an error, perpetrated by Potter (and > hand)? It recurs in Sinks of London, 1848. Certainly † by 1890.

glimflashy. Angry: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Angry or in a Passion'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'Angry . . . Glim flushly', which is almost certainly either the author's error or the printer's mistake; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (repeating B.E.); 1797, Potter, 'Glim Flashy, angry cove'; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary (U.S.A.); † by 1870—if not, indeed, by 1810! Prob. = 'flashy of glims', with flashing eyes.—2. Hence, an angry man: 1797, Potter (see sense 1); 1809, Andrewes, 'A person in a passion'; 1848, Sinks of London, where it is erroneously printed glims flashy; † by 1880.

glimjack or glim jack; glym jack. Coles, 1676, 'Glym jack, c. a link-boy'; 1698, B.E. (glimjack); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (glimjack); 1723, Alex. Smith, The Lives of the Bayliffs; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870. A 'Jack' (or fellow) that carries a 'glim': cf. glim, n., 1-3.

glimm. See glim.

glimm(-)fender. See glimfender, reference of 1797.

glimmer. Fire: 1566, Harman (see the quot'n at demand for glimmer) spells it glymmar; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, '... For Glymmer (in canting) signifies fire'; 1610, Rowlands; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'By glymmar to Maund'; 1676, Coles (glimmer and glymmer); 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1714, Alex. Smith; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1809, Andrewes; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); † by 1893 (F & H) in England at least. Perhaps, despite dates, ex S.E. glimmer, 'a feeble light'; but prob. ex S.E. glimmer in its † sense, 'to shine brightly'.—2. Hence, syphilis: 1620, Dekker, Villanies Discovered, 'Dimber Damber fare thee well, | Palliards all thou didst excell: | And thy Jockey bare the bell, | Glymmer on it never fell'; 1785, Grose (glymmer); 1797, Potter (id.); app. † by 1870.—3. (Ex sense 1.) A match (ignition): U.S.A.: 1871, Anon., State Prison Life; 1925, Leverage, 'A light; a match'; extant.—4. 'The eye; a glance,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'He was referred to as "The bird with the trick glimmer"'; 1933, Eagle; 1933, Ersine, 'A black eye'; extant.—5. 'One who watches vacant motor-cars,' George Orwell, Down and Out, 1933: (mostly London) beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1910. Black, 1943, 'Glimmer: a beggar'. Cf. glim, v., 2 and 3.

glimmerer. A variant of the next term: 1608, Dekker (glymerer); 1665, Richard Head, The English Rogue (glymmerer); 1688, Holme, 'Glymmerers, Firers of Houses, thereby to Steal in Confusions'; 1698, B.E., 'Glimmerer, c. the Twenty-second Rank of the Canting Tribe, begging with Sham Licences, pretending to Losses by Fire, &c.'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. Cf. glimmer, 1.

glimmering mort is a female demand for glimmer (q.v.); nearly all 'demanders for glimmer' were, in point of fact, women: 1566, Harman; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'The selfe same truce'—reciprocal assistance with money—'is taken betweene the Upright men and the Demaunders of Glymmer, that is to say, those who travell up and downe with licenses to begge, because their houses have been consumed with fire... These Glymmering Morts are so tender hearted, that then shed teares if they make but mention of their loss, and tel a lamentable story how the fire destroyes their barnes, stables, &c., all that they speake being meere lyes: they likewise carrie wallets at their backes, and are onely attended upon and defended by the Upright-men, who never walke along with them through any towne, but keepe aloofe'; app. † by 1700. Cf. glimmer, 1, and see mort.

glimming. A branding in the hand; rarely in the face: 1714, Alex. Smith, The History of the Highwaymen, 'Burnt in the Hand or Face, which they'—thieves—'call glimming'; † by 1860. See glim, v.

glimming at bank-business. Bank-robbery (gen. and specific): 1893, Confessions of a Convict; † by 1930. Cf. glim, v., 4.

glimms; glims. Eyes: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1792, The Minor Jockey Club; 1797, Potter (glimms); 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum (glimms); 1823, Bee (Addenda); 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1889 (B & L), low s. in Britain; 1901, J. Flynt; 1903, Clapin; by 1910, low s. in U.S.A. Cf. glim, n., 2 and 3.—2. Hence (?), stars: U.S.A. (—1794): 1807, Henry Tufts (glims); † by 1900.—3. Spectacles: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx; by 1889 (B & L), it was s., except among beggars (W. H. Davies, Beggars, 1909) and in U.S.A.: Jackson & Hellyer, 1914 (glims), and G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924 (id.), and elsewhere. In U.S.A., it was, by 1929 (The Saturday Evening Post, Oct. 19, 'Alagazam'), predominantly pitchmen's s.

glims flashy. See glimflashy, reference of 1848.

glimstick or glim (or glym) stick. Coles, 1676, 'Glym-stick, c. a Candlestick'; 1698, B.E., 'Rum Glimsticks, c. Silver Candlesticks. Queer Glimsticks, c. Brass, Pewter or Iron Candlesticks'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1893 (F & H) in English at least. Cf. glim, n., 1-4.—2. A dark lantern: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; app. † by 1820. An elaboration of glim, n., 1.—3. (Ex sense 1.) A penis: 1770, Thomas Bridges, A Burlesque Translation of Homer (Argument to Bk V), 'nor shall you that sly gypsy nick | With any weapon but your—stick'; app. † by 1890.

glin. See glim, n., 3; glins—see glimms, 2. Tufts may have misheard the word.

glisten. 'A term used by thieves for diamonds' (singular, glisten; pl. glistens): 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York; † by 1900.

glistener. A sovereign (coin): 1823, Egan's Grose; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'The Fighter', 'But backers kind were found, who soon could brag, | They had on Jack the glist'ner, or the rag'; 1887, Baumann; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows; extant. Ex its brightness (when it is new).

glist. See next entry.

glist of fish-hooks. A glass of Irish whiskey: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); 1893, F & H; ob. See fish-hooks, 2; glist refers to the glitter of whiskey that has been poured from a fresh bottle.

gloach (rare spelling); gloak; rarely gloque; occ. gloke. All are pron. glōk. A man, chap, fellow; mostly derisive or depreciatory: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, in describing the end of a game at 'the old nobb' and referring to the 'flat' or dupe, 'The Sailor cries, Missel the Gloke; then the Dropper takes him by the Arm and has him out of Doors'; ibid., gloak (see scribing gloke); 1797, Potter, 'Gloak, a man'; 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1812, Vaux (see quot'n at gill); 1818, P. Egan (see high-toby gloak); 1821, D. Haggart (gloach); 1823, Egan's Grose; 1841, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin, 'She ketches hold ov an old gloak, and makes ridge out on 'im like dirt'; 1842, P. Egan, Captain Macheath; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1860, † except in Scotland—if we accept the testimony of H, 1st ed., 1859. Semantically comparable with bloke, the word is obscure of origin; but it seems to be an adoption of Shelta glōkh (pron. gloke), 'a man'—perhaps cognate with Erse oglak, 'hero', as R. A. Stewart Macalister proposes in The Secret Languages of Ireland, 1937.

gloak, v. 'To tell the tale' (a hard-luck story): tramps': C. 20. The Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932. Ex the preceding—unless, perchance, it represents a deliberate perversion of croak, 'to speak lugubriously'.

globe. Pewter; esp., a pewter pot: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 'Globe, Pewter'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1893 (F & H). Ex the vague resemblance between globes and pewter pots.

glock. A half-wit: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; rather ob. Origin? Perhaps a sense-derivation from and a form-corruption of gloach.

gloke. See gloach.

glom. See glaum.

glom-and-hide grift, the. Kidnapping: since ca. 1925. May 30, 1936, Flynn's, Jack Callahan. See glaum and grift (n.).

glomming the grapevine. 'I learned that stealing clothes from a clothes-line is expressed in Hoboland by the hilarious phrase "glomming the grape-vine";' Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925; extant. Cf. gooseberry.

gloque. See gloach.

glorious sinner. Dinner: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; adopted ex Cockney s.

glory(-)hole. A small cell wherein, at the court, a prisoner is kept on the day of trial: 1845 (O.E.D.); extant. Ironical.

glove. A sort of drinking vessel: early C. 17. Dekker, The Gull's Horn-Book. Ex its shape.

glove trick. 'The taking in a dishonest person in such a way as to make the "victim" think that he is cheating the one who is the master-thief': since ca. 1880: 1889, B & L, who quote an American newspaper, 'The properties consist of a handsome kid glove and a cheap ring with a stone in it' (it is a variation of 'the fawney rig', q.v.); app. † by 1925.

glow. 'To observe; to eye sharply,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex the glow of the observant eye; cf. :—

glows. Eyes: 1925, Leverage; extant—though rare. Cf. glimms.

glue, n. Venereal disease: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; app. † by 1920. Cf. glued, q.v.

glue, v. To seize, to intercept, to arrest; (2) to steal: 1925, Leverage (both senses); Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan, 'A copper glued me, backed me up against a wall, and frished me'; May 2, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack; extant. A corruption of glaum, q.v., rather than from adhesive glue.

glue neck. A filthy prostitute: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. glued.

glue-pot, 'a clergyman'; not c. (B & L), but s.—2. A post-office: U.S.A.: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Cf. stickers, the prob. origin—by suggestion.

glued, ppl adj. 'Tainted with the venereal disease': 1797, Potter; † by 1900. Ex a glutinous symptom.

glum. See glaum, 2.

glybe. See glibe.

glym; -mar, or -mer; glymmerer; glymmering. See resp. glim, glimmer, glimmerer, glimmering.

glym-jack; -stick. See glimjack; glimstick.

gnarl. 'To gnarl upon a person, is the same as splitting or nosing upon him; a man guilty of this treachery is called a gnarling scoundrel, &c.' (Vaux): 1788, Sessions Papers, Dec., p. 8, 'I heard Merryman and Thrust say to the accomplice, Sherrington, you B—r, what did you narle for . . . Had Sherrington at that time told?—Yes, he had told the whole'; † by 1890. To bark at the wrong time.

gnarl, flash the. To growl; to take grumbling exception: 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, 'Lest the Doctor should flash the narl, they managed to leave the room unobserved'; † by 1900. Lit., to exhibit the canine growl.

gnarler. 'A little dog that by his barking alarms the family when any person is breaking into the house': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; 1893, F & H, 'A watch dog'; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms, 'A generic name, among burglars, for a watch dog'; ob. Lit., a growler; cf. snarler for form.

gnarling. See gnarl.

gnawler is a late C. 19–20 variant of gnarler. Manchon, 1923. Echoic.

gnerts! Ersine's spelling (1933) of nerts!: low s., not c.

gnof, or gnoff. See gonnof.

gnostic, 'a knowing one', 'a sharp', is not c., but s.

go, n., in verbal phrases of the underworld. See the ensuing entries.—2. A thief's booty: ca. 1773, Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles), 'We have mill'd a precious go' (i.e., 'made a rich haul', as Farmer glosses it in Musa Pedestris); 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Education', 'And thus they sometimes stagg'd a precious go', loosely glossed as 'got booty' instead of 'espied a valuable booty'; 1829, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, V, trial of E. Martelly and H. Jubilee Conway; app. † by 1880.—3. Hence (?), a lottery: mostly in great go and little go, a big or a small lottery: 1798, M. & R. L. Edgworth, Practical Education, in a passage that draws heavily on Colquhoun's Police, 1796; 1818, The London Guide; 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull; † by 1890. With a pun on the University phrases.—4. A burglary: prob. late C. 19–20: George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life, 1930, implies its currency ca. 1930; extant. A special application of the s. sense 'an attempt; a bout'—as in have a go (at something).—5. A ration of drugs: U.S. addicts': C. 20. BVB. Cf. 4.—6. An injection of a drug: U.S. addicts': C. 20. BVB.

go, v.; often as vbl n. To escape from prison: convicts': C. 20. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938, 'Once—long, long ago, last year or yesterday—he had sworn that he was never "going"'. That was when he had seen someone tanned for the first time.' A humorous euphemism.

go, great ; go, little. See go, n., 3.

Go, Little. See Little Go.

go a jump. See jump, go a.

go abroad, 'to be transported': not c. (B & L), but s.

go against. To (attempt to) burgle or rob: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'It was soft, and good for a few hundred dollars, so I decided to go against it alone'; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; extant.

go(-)along, n. A thief: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H; † by 1910.—2. A fool, a dupe: 1851, Mayhew; 1874, H; by 1889 (B & L) it was low s. Ex go-alonger; cf. :—

go along, v. To aid and abet racketeering: racketeers': from mid-1920's: 1930, E. D. Sullivan (quot'n at loose); et al.

go-alonger. 'A simple easy person, who suffers himself to be made a tool of, and is readily persuaded to any act or undertaking by his associates, who inwardly laugh at his folly, and ridicule him behind his back': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, plagiarizingly; by 1889 (B & L) it was low s.

go around with one's finger in one's mouth. To be gullible; to be over-generous: convicts' (orig. and mainly Sing Sing): since the 1920's. Hargan, 1935. In the manner of a simple rustic gazing awestruck at the sights and lights of a big city.

go away or hyphenated or goaway. 'Goaways. Railroad trains. "The knuck was working the goaways at Jersey City"': 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H; † by 1920. Cf. getaway, 2.

go back. To repeat a theft, a burglary, against a particula, victim: thieves': C. 20. Edwin H. Sutherland The Professional Thief, 1937. And as n.: also in Sutherland.

go back on. To turn traitor on (an accomplice): 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1900, no longer c. A special application of the S.E. sense, 'to fail' (a person), 'to let (him) down'.

go boots and shoes. See boots and shoes.

go by hand. To walk; to hike to the next water tank: tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931; Godfrey Irwin, 1931; et al. Not by rail, nor by car.

go calph rope. To plead for mercy: mostly convicts': 1934, Rose; extant.

go case ; go caseo. See case . . . and caseo.

go down. To be sent to prison: 1906, C. E. B. Russell & L. M. Rigby, The Making of the Criminal, "'Going down," as it is termed, for seven or fourteen days . . . the same youth will "go down" time after time, and become more reckless and indifferent with every repetition'; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1926, N. Lucas, London and Its Criminals; extant. Cf. fall, v.—2. To rob (from the person): late C. 19–20: e.g., in Sessions Papers of 1901, 1902, and Jan. 13, 1903, 'He . . . tried to take my purse away—he found he could not get it, and he went down my young man'; 1912, R. A. Fuller, Recollections, 'They think nothing of clapping a victim's hat over his eyes, while they "go down" him for all he has'; extant. To rub one's hands down the victim's body—patting his pockets as one goes.

go down blazing. To die, shot to pieces; to be shot to death: since ca. 1919. Howard N. Rose, 1934. Ex aeroplanes coming down in flames in 1918.

go down on ; go Hollywood. Resp. v.t., v.i. To commit sodomy: since ca. 1905, 1920 resp. BVB, 1942.

go for. 'To have implicit confidence in,' Burke, 1930 (see quot'n at righto): racketeers': 1938, Castle, in the specific sense, 'arrange an alibi for' (someone); by 1940, political, police, journalistic s.; in the nuance 'to accept (a cheque)', however, it has remained c.—as in Maurer, 1941. Ex s. go for, 'to like; to lust after; to love'—as in 'I could go for that guy in a big way!'

go for a walk. See walk . . .

go-getter. 'A hobo who worries the social workers by writing to or calling on the wealthy contributors,' Stiff, 1931; extant. A hustler.

go heeled. See heeled go Hollywood. See go down on.

go in. To thrust oneself into a free fight, a quarrel, an argument: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'When he finds it necessary to "go in" in any controversy, he has a most persistent habit of "staying"': † by 1920.

go in a hole. See hole, go in a.

go in the skin. 'To inject in the skin rather than the vein,' BVB: addicts': since ca. 1930. Cf. go, n., 6.

go into smoke. See smoke, go into.

go into the sewer. To inject a drug into the vein: addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. See sewer.

go it. To get on with the business; despatch one's business: 1775, Sessions Papers, 2nd John Wilkes session, p. 61, vol. 1, an assault case, 'The smallest of the two prisoners said D—n you, why don't you go it, then they all surrounded me'; 1790, Sessions Papers, Feb. (p. 257); † by 1900.

go kinky. See kinky.

go loco. To smoke marihuana cigarettes: drug traffic: since ca. 1925. BVB. Maddening things.

go lower-deck. To travel by 'blind baggage': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. As opp. to travelling on the decks (railroad-car tops).

go mitted. See mitted.

go off. (Of a club, hotel, etc.) to be police-raided for gambling or after-hours drinking; (of a race, horse) to have been 'fixed' to win: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1942.

go off at (or with) the fall of the leaf. See leaf, go off . . . and fall of the leaf.

go on. A counterfeiters' phrasal v., as in Sessions Papers, Oct. 1810, p. 406, 'I asked Cope if he would let me have any white ones'—silver coins—'to go on, that is, to pass them off in circulation'; † by 1900.

go on (or take) a sleigh ride. To inhale narcotics: since the 1920's. BVB. See sleigh ride.

go on the big green carpet. To be brought before the warden as a result of breaking a prison regulation: convicts': Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest, John Caldwell, 'Patter of the Prisons'; 1934, Rose; extant. The convict stands on the carpet in front of the warden.

go on the blink. See blink, be on the.

go on the boat. To go on a draft to another prison: convicts': since ca. 1918. Hargan, 1935. Ex drafts of American soldiers going overseas in 1917–18.

go on the crack. See crack, n., 2.

go on the dip. See dip, n., 2.

*go on the dipe. See dipe . . . go on the draw. See draw, n. *go on the dub. See dub, upon the.
 *go on the farm. (Of a train) to go on to a side-track (a shunting line): tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931.

go on the file. See file, on the.

go on the game. To become a prostitute: late C. 19-20. In, e.g., John Worby, The Other Half, 1937. See game, n., 3 and 5.

go on the glaze. See glaze, on the.

*go on the hot-foot. See hot-foot, n., 1.

go on the lob. See lob, 3.

go on the pad. See pad, go upon the.

*go on the prig. See prig, go on the.

*go on the rap. See rap, go on the.

go on the shallows. See shallows, go on the.

go on the sharpo. See sharpo . . .

go on the spike. See spike . . .

*go on the stem. See stemming, ref. of 1925.

*go (or be) on the up-and-up. See up-and-up . . .

go on the upright. See upright, go on the.

go out. 'To follow the profession of thieving; two or more persons who usually rob in company, are said to go out together' (J. H. Vaux, 1812): 1777 (Dec.), Sessions Papers, 1st Sir James Esdaile session; 1823, Bee; 1887, Baumann; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago; extant. They go out, as if for a walk.—2. To die: U.S.A.: Sept. 2, 1933, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly; May 18, 1935, Flynn's, Convict 12627 (to die of hanging or by electrocution); extant. I.e., to go out like a light. Perhaps ex British military s., where it was used in 1914-18.

go out foreign. 'To emigrate under shady circumstances,' Ware, 1909; ob. Cf. 'go to foreign parts', q.v. at foreign parts.

*go out into the country with. To 'take for a ride': 1929-31, Kernôt; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. The criminals go into the country—to commit the crime and then dump the body.

*go out on skush. See skush.

go out together. See go out.

go out upon the pad. See pad, go upon the, at reference for 1785.

*go over. To be sent to a penitentiary or other prison: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service—cf. 'The accused . . . "went over the road"' (as the Western expression is, meaning that he went to the penitentiary) for two years, Capt. Burton Deane, Mounted Police Life in Canada, 1916; ob.—2. To steal things from the person of: English: 1889, The Referee, June 2, 'A few who had . . . gone over the landlord, left him skinned'; extant. Cf. go through, 1.—3. (Of a male) to become a sexual pervert: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Cf. S.E. go over to the enemy.

go over the Alps. See Alps, the.

*go over the hill. To escape from prison: 1927, Kane; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex U.S. Army s. go over the hill, 'to desert'.

*go over the jumps, 'to be arrested; to go to prison', is low s., not c. Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster, 1927.

*go over the stile. See over the stile.

*go over the wall. To escape from prison: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. go over the hill.

go screwing. See screw, v., 2 (reference of 1925).

go sideways. To commit a crime: 1899, C. Rook, The Hooligan Nights; ob. Cf. 'on the cross' and 'crooked'.

go snowing. See snowing, go.

*go south with. To cheat; to steal; to abscond: June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, Randolph Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave' (in sense 'to steal'); 1925, Leverage, 'Going South, n., Cheating one's pals; running off'; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'Going South—Taking for oneself'; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Julien Proskauer, Suckers All, 'He went south (stole) only sixty bucks'; 1940, Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely; by 1942, police and journalistic s.—2. To be gang-killed: 1936, Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, 'If he don't join the mob he'll "go south" or "take a little ride"'; extant. To go 'down under' (South).

*go the cross. To engage in a criminal or illicit enterprise: 1845, The National Police Gazette, 'I take such chances when I go the "cross"'; ob. by 1910; † by 1930. See cross, n.

go the jump. See jump, go the.

*go through. To rob (a person) thoroughly: 1865, The Rogues and Rogueries of New York; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1889 (B & L) it was also English; 1893, F & H; 1907, Jack London, The Road; extant. I.e., to go carefully through all his pockets.—2. (Of the police) to search (a suspected person) thoroughly: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham; by 1910 or so, it was police j.—3. To take the rap or incur punishment: June 1937, Cavalcade, Courtney Ryley Cooper, 'I can go through for a pal'; c. of ca. 1920-38, it > police and journalistic s. at least as early as 1938. Short for go through with it, 'to persevere; to endure'.—4. V.i., to abscond, decamp: Australian confidence tricksters': since ca. 1920. Baker, 1945. Perhaps to go through a place (pillage it) and pass rapidly on.

go to college. To go to prison: ca. 1700-1870. B & L. Inferred, as to earlier limit, from College, the, 2.

go to foreign parts. See foreign parts.

go to heaven in a string. To be hanged: 1592, Robert Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, 'Whereupon the quest went upon him, and condemned him, and so the prigger'—i.e., horse-thief—'went to heaven in a string, as so many of his faculty had done before'; app. † by 1690 or so. The string is the halter.

*go to the bat. See bat, go to the.

. go to the country. To go to prison: mid-C. 19-20. Cf. country, the (1862); Edgar Wallace, The Brigand, 1927. Euphemistic.—2. To be 'taken for a ride'—driven somewhere in a car and shot: since ca. 1925. In, e.g., Flynn's, Oct. 5, 1935, Hugh Crane, "'You're goin' to the country, rat—now!" He dug the gun into Bain's armpit and pumped four bullets into him.' Cf. go out into the country with.

*go to the floor with. (Of shoplifters) to drop on the floor (some article too dangerous to retain): shoplifters': C. 20. Edwin H. Sutherland, 1937.

go to the grouse. To go to places other than one's native or adopted town: Scottish: 1867, James MacLevy, Curiosities of Crime in Edinburgh; app. † by 1930. To go into the country; to 'get about'.

*go to the kip. To go to bed: C. 20. Rose, 1934.

*go under(neath). To ride on and among the rods that are placed underneath a railroad carriage: C. 20: 1907, Jack London, The Road (the chapter entitled, 'Holding her down'), the longer phrase; 1939, Terence McGovern, It Paid to be Tough (the shorter); extant. Cf. swing under and see holding the lady down.

go up. To be sent to a State prison: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'When Wal' "went up", a big gun was spiked among the coney fraternity'; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'The Gray Gangster'—but by this time, it was police and journalistic s.—2. To raise one's arms, at the point of a gun: 1926 (see throw up); extant.—3. 'To blow up with a bomb,' Kernôt, 1929–31; extant. V.i. > v.t.

go up a ladder to bed. See ladder to rest.

go up against. To attempt to rob or burgle: 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'To go up against a safe—to attempt to blow the safe'; extant. Euphemistic: cf. go against.

go up Holborn Hill. See Holborn Hill.

go up the escape. See escape.

go up the ladder to rest. See ladder to rest.

go up the steps. See steps.

go upon fire and faggot. See fire and faggot.

go upon the bonny lay. See bonny lay . . .

go upon the dub. See dub, upon the.

go upon the hoist. See hoist, go . . .

go upon the mill. See mill, go upon the.

go upon the pad. See pad, go upon the.

go upon the rum lay. See rum lay.

go upstairs. (Of criminals) to go into hiding: New York City: ca. 1890–1910. Anon., 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery', Flynn's, March 23, 1929 (p. 168).

go west. See west, go.

go with the birds. To go South for the winter: tramps': C. 20. Stiff, 1931. To migrate south to warmth, as, in the Northern Hemisphere, so many birds migrate.

go with the woollies; usually as vbl n., going . . . See woolly, 2.

goad. One of those who, allied with thoroughly dishonest horse-courers, conspire to delude honest dealers and others into buying worthless or damaged horses: ca. 1600–1870, though one may surmise that the term was little used after ca. 1750. Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9 (see the quot'n at jingler); B.E.; Egan's Grose (evidently copying B.E.); 1859, Matsell. He acts as a goad.

Goadby Loew. A tailored suit: mostly tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. Ex the name of a very well-known American tailoring firm.

goads, unrecorded by The O.E.D., refers to some kind of false dice: (written in) 1662, John Wilson, The Cheats; app. † by 1790, although Leverage, 1925, records it and defines it as 'an auctioneer's decoy'. It is prob. a corruption of gourds: see, therefore, gourd for earlier history.

goaler's coach. See gaoler's coach.

goat, n. A scapegoat: ca. 1886, in Lewis E. Lawes, Cell 202, Sing Sing, 1935; extant. Cf. sense 3.—2. Anger: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ob. Ex s. get someone's goat, which, by the way, Kernôt, 1929–31, declares to have originated as c.—3. A dupe; swindler's victim: South Africa: since ca. 1920. Letter (May 22, 1946) from J. B. Fisher.

goat, v. To anger; to exasperate: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ob. Either direct ex sense 2 of the n.; or a corruption of 'to goad'.

goat meat. Veal, mutton, lamb: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. Derisive.

goater. Dress: 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H; 1929–31, Kernôt; ob. Ex goat-skin?

goaway. See go away.

gob. The mouth: a Northern dial. word from C. 16 onwards; in Southern England, however, it seems to have been c. from ca. 1680 until ca. 1800 and then to have > low s.; and low s. it has remained. B.E., 1698; Grose, 1785. Prob. derived from Gaelic gob, beak or mouth: O.E.D.—2. (As the gob.) Theft in a public lavatory (wash-house: cf. the wash): C. 20. 'The thief picks his victim in the street, spits on his back, says "Your clothes are in a mess, guv'nor," and steers him towards a public lavatory. There he helps to brush the coat—and takes the wallet. This trick is usually done by two thieves working together. They chew some substance which will provide a good spittle,' G. W. Stonier, in private letter of May 25, 1937. Ex proletarian gob, the mouth.

gob, bother (a person's). 'Their right hand can be employed in cutting, and grabbing the money at one and the same time, whilst the left is engaged no less usefully in bothering his [the victim's] gob. This latter, is nothing more than placing the flat hand (back or palm) over the mouth, (or gob) of a fellow who is likely to sing out . . . In all mobs where there is not sufficient noise, this bothering the gob, is invariably had recourse to,' The London Guide, 1818; app. † by 1900. See gob, 1; bother, to give trouble to.

gob-stick. A silver table-spoon: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1792, The Minor Jockey Club; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxviii, loosely of any silver spoons; 1848, Sinks of London; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—witness Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859; by 1893 (F & H), † in England; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms, 'Gobsticks. Silver forks and spoons'; by 1930, † in U.S.A. Low s. gob, the mouth.

gob-string is a variant of gab-string, q.v. Grose, 1785.

gobble. To snatch up suddenly: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; ob. As a turkey does.—2. (Of police officers) to arrest or secure neatly, cleverly: 1872, Burnham; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer define gobbled as 'arrested'; extant.

gobbler, a turkey cock: s. > coll. (Grose, 1785).—2. A sodomite: U.S.A.: C. 20. BVB. Cf. cannibal.

goblin prater. A magpie: 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields; app. † by 1900. For prater, cf. margery prater; goblin prob. contains a pun on gob, the mouth.

God forbid. A child: principally in the West: C. 20. The American Mercury, May 1928 (Ernest Booth); M & B, 1944. Rhyming on kid; adopted ex Cockney s.

God(-)man. A clergyman: since ca. 1910. Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 1924. Ex the ob. man of God.

godfathers. See twelve godfathers.

God's medicine; medicine. Morphine: drug addicts': since ca. 1925. BVB. Cf. heaven dust.

Gowerments-hond. A uniformed policeman: South Africa: late C. 19–20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Adoption of Afrikaans c.; lit., 'Government hound'.

gofer. See gopher.

goff ; goffing. See gaff, v., reference of 1857.

gofor. An (easy) dupe, a 'sucker': racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'Listen, monkey, don't be a gofor all your life'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex 'eager, or credulously ready, to go for—to seek, to attempt to obtain—something': a gofor would 'go for' anything. Perhaps influenced by goofer.—2. 'They were all gofors—men on the make,' J. Allan Dunn in Flynn's, Dec. 19, 1931; ob. Prob. suggested by antiphrasis to sense 1.

going the high fly. See high fly, the.

going to marry. See Eliza smiles. Current ca. 1870–1910. It is the servant girl who thinks she's 'going to marry'.

going upon the dub. See dub, upon the.

going with the woollies. See woolly, 2.

gold-backed uns. See gray backs.

gold braid. The chief, or a principal, warder: convicts': since ca. 1920. George Ingram, Stir, 1933. Worn on his uniform.

gold brick, n. See gold brick game; also, an actual (or spurious) gold brick. By 1885, it was s.—2. Hence, a shirker; a malingerer: since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. sense 2 of the v.

gold brick, v. To defraud (a person); represent (a proposition) falsely: 1931, Godfrey Irwin—but current throughout C. 20; by 1940, s. Either ex the n. or ex gold brick game.—2. V.i., to have an easy time in prison because one has plenty of money: 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant.

gold brick game, the. 'It consists simply in the swindler approaching the confiding stranger and inducing him to advance some money on a bar of gold bullion': 1881, The Man Traps of New York, Ch. XVI, 'The Gold Brick Trick'; ibid., 'The gold brick swindle is an old one but it crops up constantly'; by 1885, it was s. See gold brick, n.

gold(-)digger. The original sense of the term is an underworld sense: 'any woman who gets whatever she can from men, avoiding the necessity of making any return' (Godfrey Irwin): but long before 1931, the term had been generalized in usage and corrupted in sense to 'a girl that makes her lover pay very dearly for her favours'.

gold-dropper. B.E.'s definition, 1698, 'Sweeteners, Cheats, Sharpers' (repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725), is much too wide; the definition in Grose, 1785, will serve: 'Gold Droppers, Sharpers who drop a piece of gold, which they pick up in the presence of some inexperienced person, for whom the trap is laid; this they pretend to have found, and, as he saw them pick it up, they invite him to a public-house to partake of it; when there, two or three of their comrades drop in, as if by accident, and propose cards, or some other game, when they seldom fail of stripping their prey'. Ca. 1830, the term ceased to be c.—if indeed it ever were c.

gold dust. Cocaine: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1942, BVB; extant. Cf. happy dust, which is synonymous. 'From its value and from the happiness and comfort, however fleeting, which it gives to its devotees' (Irwin).

gold-finch. See goldfinch.

gold-finder, an emptier of 'Jakes or Houses of Office' (B.E., 1698), is not c. but s.—prob. low s.—2. A C. 18 synonym of sweetener, 1: 1748, T. Dyche, Dictionary, 5th ed. A variation of gold-dropper; with an allusion to sense 1.

golden brown. 'French toast with jam, the convict's delight,' Ersine: since ca. 1925.

golden cream. Rum: 1889, C. T. Clarkson &

J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); 1893, F & H; ob. Ex its colour and its richness.

goldfinch. 'He that has always a Purse or Cod of Gold in his Fob,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1735, Anon., Lives of the Most Remarkable Criminals, 'We must examine the nest a little, I fancy the goldfinches are not yet flown'; 1785, Grose; by 1845, current in U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1848); † by 1870. Ex the colour of gold.—2. Hence (usually pl.), a guinea: 1785, Grose, who does not, however, classify it as c.; 1797, Potter, 'Gold finch, a gold coin'; 1809, Andrewes; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by 1850, a sovereign ('Ducange Anglicus', 1857, and H., 1859); by 1860, s.; current in U.S.A. by the 1850's for any gold coin (Matsell); and by 1895 or 1900, †.

goldfish ; goldfish room. 'The [police officer's] closet held certain lengths of rubber hose technically known as "goldfish" in underworld jargon,' J. Allan Dunn, Flynn's, May 10, 1930; June 21, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens, 'He was deathly afraid . . . This town has a bloodthirsty bunch of dicks. They take their third degrees seriously'; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; by 1938 (Edward Martin in Clifford R. Shaw, Brothers in Crime), the term was police s. rather than underworld language. Ironical.—2. Hence (goldfish), 'A prisoner in line-up at a police station,' Ersine, 1933; extant.

golfer. A Cadillac car: automobile thieves': since ca. 1919. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Because these thieves 'found that many men of leisure and wealth, club members and the like, owned such a car' (Irwin).

gollof, in Sessions Papers, Jan. 31, 1861, trial of Graham, Williams, Rinkin, is said to mean 'thief': but this is in error for gonnof.

gollup up, 'to drink down quickly', is not c., as it is classified in Egan's Grose, but dial. >, ca. 1890, familiar S.E. Its usual form and sense is gollop, to eat or drink hurriedly; the earliest O.E.D. record, by the way, is 1882.

gom. A man: C. 17. Beaumont & Fletcher. Perhaps ex Gr. γονεύς (goneus), 'father; lit., procreator', by corruption of the first syllable.—2. A policeman: U.S.A.: since the early 1920's. Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose. Prob. ex gumshoe: cf. gum, n., 2.

gon. See gun, n., 2.

gondola. An open railway-car; a truck: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 'I was in a "gondola", and he espied me from the top of a box-car'; 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'The car occupied by us was an empty gondola (pronounced gon-do-la, a coal-car)'; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; April 14, 1928, Flynn's; Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's, Earl H. Scott; 1933, Ersine, 'An open freight car'; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; 1938, Clifford R. Shaw, Brothers in Crime; 1939, Terence McGovern, It Paid to be Tough; extant. Shape-resemblance.—2. Hence, a stolen sedan: 1934, Rose; extant.

gone over the hill. See over the hill, 2.

gone to Moscow. See Moscow.

gonef. See gonnof.

goner. 'A used-up, convicted, finished individual': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1889, in England (Clarkson & Richardson, Police!), of a person convicted of a crime; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'One who has been convicted of a crime'; 1924; Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Cf. the s. goner, a person doomed to die.

goney. See gory, 2, reference of 1857.

gong, beat (or hit) the. See beat . . .

gong, kick the. See kick . . .

gong, the. Opium; opium pipe: 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 'Come, lie round and join in the fun;

With the aid of "the gong",
We will quit the mad throng,
For the Land of the Pure Li-un'—

Li-un being a much sought-after grade or brand of opium: 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'Opium Pipe . . . a gong; gonger; stem'; extant. Ex some Chinese word?

gong(-)kicker. An opium-smoker: since ca. 1930. Flynn's, March 18, 1934. Ex kick the gong around.

gonger. An opium pipe: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; July 8, 1934, Flynn's, Convict 12627; 1934, Rose; extant. 'There is but scant doubt that the word is of Chinese origin' (Irwin).—2. Hence, an opium addict: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. gong.

gonger, hit the. See beat the gong.

gonger, kick the. See kick . . .

gongola. An opium pipe: since ca. 1930. BVB. Perhaps a humorous blend of gonger + gorgonzola.

gonif. See gonnof (etc.).

goniva. A stolen diamond: South African (and illicit diamond men's): 1887, as recorded in Pettman; 1898, A. Griffiths, Mysteries of Police and Crime (ii, 269); extant. Via Hebrew genavah, 'a theft; a thing stolen', ex South African s. goniv, 'an illicit diamond-buyer'. See esp. Pettman, Africanderisms, 1913.

gonnafing. See gonnophing.

gonner. The 1889 reference spelling of goner.

gon(n)of(f), gon(n)oph; gonov. 'Gonnoff—a thief': 1839, Brandon; by 1845, current in U.S.A.—witness The National Police Gazette, 1845, in forms gennauf, gonnauf, and E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851, 'He . . . became a "gnof" or pickpocket' and 'Gnof. Pronounced gonof'; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 133 (gonoph); 1857, Snowden (gonnoff); 1858, Dickens, 'On Duty with Inspector Field', in Reprinted Pieces (gonoph); 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Gonnoff. A thief that has attained the higher walks of his profession'; H, 1874, gonnof, gonnuf, gunnof; 1887, J. W. Horsley (gonoph); 1888, G. R. Sims; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson (gonoph and gunnif); 1893, A. Griffiths, A Prison Princess; 1894, Arthur Morrison; 1898, A. Binstead, A Pink 'Un and a Pelican; 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers; 1909, Ware; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York (as gonoph); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (goniv); 1927, Kane (gonif); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine (gonif); 1933, Eagle; Aug. 17, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper (gonif); 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland (gonnif); extant—though slightly ob. Ex Hebrew gannabh (cf. Exodus, XXII, 2 and 6) via the Yiddish, esp. Jewish Dutch, gannef (Weekley); compare the Parisian gniaffe, a term of abuse, and, in low Glasgow s., n'aff or gnaff, 'a low, disreputable fellow, not above theft and informing to the police'.—2. Hence, an amateur or bungling pickpocket: 1858, H; † by 1910.—3. A retired rogue (esp. a retired thief): U.S.A.: 1871, State Prison Life; † by 1920.—4. 'Gonif, gonof, gonof, gonoph . . . Sodomite,' BVB, 1942: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Cf. burglar.

gonnof, etc., as v. 'To wheedle out of, to cheat'; also to steal, esp. by pickpocketry: since ca. 1850: 1858, implied in gonnophing; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1899, A. Binstead, Houndsditch Day by Day, "'Then up 'nd roll another one, an' gonoph yer umbreller'"; slightly ob. Ex the n.

gonnopher (or -ofer). A thief; esp. a pickpocket: 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo (p. 96); ob. Ex gonnof (or -oph), v., cf. :—

gon(n)ophing, n. Thieving, esp. by pickpocketry: 1858, Dickens, 'The Detective Police', in Reprinted Pieces, 'Designing young people who go out "gonophing"'; 1874, H, who spells it gunoving; 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo, where it is spelt gonnafing and gonnofing; slightly ob. Ex gonnof, v.

gonof(f), gonoph. See gonnof.

gonsil; also gonsel, gonsel, gonzel, gunsil, guntzel (the last four in BVB). In 1914, Jackson & Hellyer spell it gunshel ('This form of gonsil is new to me', Godfrey Irwin, Aug. 12, 1937): a boy, a youth, with implication of sexual perversion: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, where it is synonymized with prushun and where spelt gonsel; 1918, Leon Livingston; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'Gonsil . . . Youth not yet adopted by jocker'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A young tramp, not yet taken in hand . . . by an older man . . . A passive male homosexual, usually a youth or younger man'; 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations; 1934, Rose (gonsel); 1942, BVB; extant. Origin? Not impossibly a perversion of gazooney.

goo or gooh. 'Gooh. A prostitute': 1859, Matsell; 1931, IA (gooh), who adds, 'Seldom, if ever, heard now'. Perhaps goo is simply a perversion of the radical cu, which is, in many languages, expressive of quintessential femininity: as in L. cunnius and English cow.

good. 'A place or person, which promises to be easily robbed, is said to be good, as, that house is good upon the crack; this shop is good upon the star; the swell is good for his montra; &c. A man who declares himself good for any favour or thing, means, that he has sufficient influence, or possesses the certain means to obtain it; good as bread, or good as cheese, are merely emphatical phrases to the same effect': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, plagiarizingly; ob. Euphemistic? Cf. good people.—2. In U.S.A.: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'I had a long talk with Billy and Ida about old pals. They told me who was dead, who were in stir and who were good (prosperous)'; ob. Cf. coll. to feel good.—3. As applied to a criminal: dead: U.S.A.: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. the 1914–18 military c.p., The only good Hun is a dead Hun.

good, look. See at look bad.

good, on the. All right; safe, secure; proceeding well and according to plan: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Everything was on the good, when we got a blow' (Everything was going well, when [suddenly] we were discovered); ob. Cf. coll. on the mend.

good as bread ; good as cheese. See good.

good crib. A house worth burgling: 1863, The Cornhill Magazine, Jan., p. 91; by 1910, †. See crib, n., 5.

good fellow. See goodfellow.

good for. See good. By 1830, this was s., by 1860 coll., by 1900 S.E.

good head. A person well disposed towards, or kindly to, tramps; a charitable person: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Possessed of a good head and a good heart.—2. A person to be trusted: 1931, Irwin; 1933, Ersine (a faithful and trustworthy fellow-convict); 1934 (see good heads); extant.

good heads. 'Old time criminals who have proved their reliability [as criminals worthy of trust from fellow criminals] are called good heads or good people,' Convict, 1934; extant. Eulogistically.

good man, as defined by Grose, 1785, is not c. but coll. or, more prob., S.E.—2. See bad man.—3. A very skilful sharper: card-sharpers': 1894, J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats; extant.—4. 'The burglar has always stood at the head of his evil profession [theft]; he is chief among the fraternity of thieves, having risen above the "low thieves" to the rank of "right man", "good man", "family man", "cracksman", by all of which titles he has been called,' Arthur Griffiths, Mysteries of Police and Crime, 1898, at ii, 179; ob. Cf. good people.

good on the star. Easy to open: 1859, H; † by 1940. Is not the reference to star, n., 2?

good people. "'Come round to my house, Jim, and . . . I will introduce you to some good people (meaning thieves)'" Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, where it is applied to the most skilful pickpockets, burglars, safe-robbers; Nov. 7, 1931, Flynn's, George Holmes, who applies it to all criminals trusted by criminals; April 21, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'Joe's good people' (as in the 1931 quot'n); extant. Cf. good man, 4. I.e., good in the eyes of criminals.

good screw. 'A "good screw" [warder], amongst prisoners, means a man who does not do his duty': 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; extant. Cf. square, adj., 2, and square bull.

good time. Time deducted from one's sentence as a reward for good behaviour: convicts': 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; 1934, Rose; by 1940, prison j. Time off for being good.

good-woolled, 'unflinchingly courageous', is not c. but s.

goodfellow (or good fellow). A thief: C. 20: Dec. 1918, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang' in The American Law Review; extant. Cf. good man, 4.—2. A man or a woman that pays his or her bills: Dec. 1918 (as in sense 1); extant. Dependable.

goodman. See good man.

goods. Counterfeit coins; counterfeiters': 1805, Sessions Papers, July (p. 450), 'I asked her—a vendor of counterfeit—if she had got any goods; she said, yes . . . She knew what I meant perfectly; she asked me how many I wanted'; ob. Cf. stuff, n., 4 and —2. 'Fake stock,' P. S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 1936: U.S. commercial crooks.—3. Girls, young women: white-slavers': C. 20, Mrs A. Mackirdy & W. N. Willis, The White Slave Market, 1912; Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940, 'Recognized dealers who specialize in certain types of "goods", and in virgins of varying ages'. For the semantics, cf. baggage, 2.—4. Illicit narcotics: drug traffickers': C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. merchandise.

goof. A salutation: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex 'Hullo, goof!' (= 'Hullo, mug!').

goof-ball, is an occ. variant of the next. BVB, 1942.

goof-butt. "'Reefers", or "goof-butts", as the marijuana cigarettes are called,' Mary Sullivan, My Double Life, 1939: since the late 1920's. A man is a 'goof' to smoke such 'butts'.

goofed(-)up. Drug-exhilarated: (nautical) drug addicts': since ca. 1930. American Speech, April 1944, Otis Ferguson. Ex goof-butt.

goofer. A simpleton; a dupe: tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex s. goofy, 'crazy'.—2. Hence, a gangster: 1933, Ersine; extant.

goofus. A fool: 1933, Ersine; by 1938. s. I.e., goof + L. -us.

goofy. Crazy for lack of a drug: drug addicts': 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle, 'I had a craving [for drugs] and was "goofey"'; 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven, where it = stir-simple; extant. Ex s. goof: cf. goof-butt.

goog, n. See googs.—2. Beef: 1925, Leverage; extant. Echoic of mastication?—3. The sense 'a black eye' is low (and pugilistic) s.—not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

goog, v., 'to squint'—Leverage, 1925—is (low) s. rather than c. Ex:—

googons. Spectacles, esp. as used for disguise: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex gorgon on:—

googs. Spectacles: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1929, predominantly pitchmen's s.—witness The Saturday Evening Post, Oct. 19, 'Alagazam'. Cf. goog, n., 3; ? ex 'to make goo-goo eyes'.

gooh. See goo.

gooi a canary. 'When the gang is on a job there is always a lookout, "die tong", who will "gooi a canary" (whistle) if he should sight a diener or "Transvaler",' The Cape Times, May 23, 1946: South Africa: C. 20. Lit., 'to throw (cf. s. throw a party) a canary'; gooi comes ex Dutch gooien, 'to cast, throw'.

gook, 'a prostitute' (F & H, 1893): not c. but low s.—2. As 'a tramp' (A. Neil Lyons, Arthur's, 1914) it is perhaps low s., rather than c.: British, esp. Londoners': late C. 19–20; ob. Prob. ex a dial. variant of gowk, n.—3. The senses 'a fool' and, as v., 'to befool', are s., not c. Leverage, 1925.

goon. A 'strong-arm man': since ca. 1920. BVB. Because he's usually a goon or 'stupid fellow': ? goof + coon.

goona or goona-goona. 'A love potion,' BVB, 1942: drug addicts': since ca. 1925. I.e., an aphrodisiac drug. Cf. prec.

gooner, give the. To dismiss summarily, to expel, 'throw out': 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant. I.e., the 'go on!'-er.

goose, n. A Jew: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Prob. via Jews: geese.—2. Hence, a swindle: 1925, Leverage; extant.—3. See corn-hole.

goose, v. 'To Jew down; to swindle,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex the n.—2. 'To tickle on the buttock,' Ersine, 1933; extant. To induce 'goose-flesh'.—3. To commit sodomy: BVB, 1942. Short for goose and duck? Or ex 2?

goose and duck. Copulation: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on *fu*k*.

goose(-)gun. A shot-gun: 1933, Ersine; extant. Because used for shooting geese.

gooseberry, n. 'A line of clothes', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904—but the term was implied almost sixty years earlier in gooseberry lay; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (clothes-line; the clothes on it; line and clothes together); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1931, Stiff, 'Gooseberry bush—The clothes line. Gooseberries are the garments that adorn the line in the moonlight'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; 1944 (April), American Speech, Otis Ferguson, 'A clothesline ripe for the taking is a gooseberry bush'; extant. Clothes on a line, like gooseberries on their bush, invite a thief to pick them.—2. A wife unaware that her husband is a crook: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. She 'plays gooseberry' to his profession.

gooseberry, v. To steal from clothes-lines: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the n.

gooseberry bush. See gooseberry, ref. of 1931.

gooseberry lay, the. 'Stealing wet clothes from clothes-lines or bushes' (Geo. W. Matsell): 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 'Gooseberry lay—to steal clothes hung out to dry'; 1893, F & H; by 1937, † in U.S.A. (Irwin). As though the wet clothes were gooseberries on a bush: see gooseberry, n.

gooseberry pickings. Easy stealing: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Cf. gooseberry lay.

gooseberry pudding (or pudden). A woman: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue (-ing); 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); by 1870, it was low s.; by 1885, gen. rhyming s.—2. Hence, 'a wanton, especially one not too clean or neat in appearance or dress': mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931 ('g. pudding').

gooseberry ranch. A brothel: late C. 19–20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; BVB, 1942. Perhaps gooseberry (short for gooseberry pudding) + ranch, on the analogy of heifer den.

gooseberrying is a frequent vbl n., corresponding to gooseberry, v. (Leverage, 1925).

gooser. A sentence—or, a term—of penal service abroad: 1843, Sessions Papers (Feb. 3, trial of James Thompson for unlawfully uttering counterfeit coin), Charles Wright (Police constable N 304), '... I apprehended the prisoner ... he said, "I guess what you want, it is all a gooser now," which I believe means to be transported'; app. † by 1900. Perhaps ex the convicts' suspicion that he has been a goose to run the risk.

goose's. "You'll have to sausage me a goose's" ... "What the hell are you talking about?" ... "Cash me a cheque, dopey", James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 1937; extant. ? Short for goose's neck, rhyming s. for 'cheque'.

goosey, 'a person that cannot bear to be touched' (Jim Tulley, Circus Parade, 1928), is (low) s.—not c. Ex the figurative S.E. goose-flesh.

goosing ranch. A brothel: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; BVB, 1942.

goosing slum. A brothel: 1859, Matsell; Aug. 11, 1877, Chicago Sporting Gazette (cited by Herbert Asbury); ca. 1910, superseded by goosing ranch. Cf. slum, n., 3.

goozlum. Gravy: tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'A long-winded play in the slang word "goeey", thick or gummy in substance, prob. originating from either glue or gumbo, the latter a silty, alkaline soil of the S.W. United States, which becomes very sticky when wet' (Irwin); perhaps goeey has blended with guzzle.

goph. Short for gopher, 3: 1903, Arthur Henry Lewis, The Boss (ch. xii, 'Darby the Gopher'), "'What's his name?" I inquired. "Darby the Goph"': ob.

gopher, n. A safe; a vault or strong-room: 1893, Confessions of a Convict (glossary), ed. by Julian Hawthorne; but the nuance 'safe' occurs in Anon., State Prison Life, 1871, in glossary as gofer; 1901 (in gophermen); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing ('a safe'); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; slightly ob. Cf. sense 2; a gopher is a safe (i.e., not a dangerous) animal. In this sense, the reference may be to the gopher turtle.—2. 'A young thief; especially a boy employed by burglars to enter houses through windows, skylights, etc.': 1893, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms, where, however, it is classified as police s. 'In natural history gopher = a burrowing squirrel' (F & H).—3. A safe-blower; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss, ch. xii, 'Darby the Gopher'; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1928, Chicago May, 'One who tunnels to steal'; May 28, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; 1934, Rose; ob. Short for gopher man.—4. 'A gangster or other hard character,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931; ob.

gopher, v. 'To do a job on a safe,' Leverage, 1925; slightly ob. Ex gopher, n., 1.

gopher man. Safe-blower: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft (Glossary); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Gopher-Man. Safe blower or burglar'; 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'); 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; slightly ob. by 1945, in U.S.A.; current since ca. 1920 in Canada (anon. letter, June 9, 1946). Jack Black explains the origin in this reference: '... Famous "gopher man", who tunneled under banks like gophers and carried away their plunder after months of dangerous endeavor' (op. cit., 1926).

gopher mob. 'Tunnelers who dig into vaults from underneath,' D. W. Maurer in The Writer's Digest, Oct. 1931: bank robbers': 1934, Rose; slightly ob. See gopher, n., and cf. gopher man.

gord or gorde. See gourd.

gorree. 'Money, but chiefly Gold,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Money, Gory'; 1785, Grose, 'Perhaps from the traffick carried on at that place, which is chiefly for gold dust'; 1797, Potter; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), of gold dust; † by 1880, in England at least. Grose's explanation of the origin is prob. correct: Goree is an island off the West coast of Africa. In the C. 17 it was occupied—not simultaneously—by the Dutch, English, French. But possibly ex the reddish (gory) colour of some gold.

gorger. 'A gentleman. A well dressed man': 1811, Lex. Bal.—but for a much earlier example, see gager; 1859, H, who wrongly derives it ex gorgeous;

1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1889 (B & L), it was low s. in England. Earliest as gager, q.v., it derives ex the Romany gorgio, 'a non-Gypsy'.—2. Hence, a man: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; † by 1910.—3. Hence, an employer, a manager: 1864, H, 3rd ed.: not c. but s.

gorgio, 'a man; esp. a gentleman', is not c. but Romany. The c. gerger is a derivative. Likewise, gorgio camp, 'a town, a city', is gipsy s., not tramps' c.: Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on Toby, 1933.

goril or gorill is an occ. variant, ca. 1925–35, of the next. Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls, 1931.

gorilla. A brutal thief or other criminal: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'He displayed a split lip, given him by the biggest bully in the ward A few nights later, L—met the bully who had beaten him and said he had a present for him. "Is it something good?" asked the gorilla. "Yes," said L—, and shot him dead'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Gorilla. Thief who uses violence in committing a crime'; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang', where it = a strong-arm highwayman; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Violent Criminal'; 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night Hawk, where, p. 290, it is spelt guerilla and the context is 'An "overhead guerilla" like Miron . . . would make for the roof'; 1927, C. F. Coe, Me—Gangster; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's; April 20, 1929, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson, 'Chicago It's full of gorillas . . . They shoot eight or ten men up there every night'; April 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, "'Gorillas" . . . men who broke strikes, who beat up scabs, who made life miserable for merchants who would not kick-in with tribute'; 1931, Fred D. Pasley, Al Capone; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'A brutal mobster'; 1933, James Spenser, Limey; Feb. 29, 1936, Flynn's, Richard Wormser; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; 1939, Hickman Powell, Ninety Times Guilty; 1940, Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely; extant. More prob. ex gorilla, the great ape, with an allusion to the brutish or at least the brutal appearance of many such killers, than ex guerilla used for guerillero, an expert in guerilla (open, catch-as-catch-can) warfare.

gorm. Tobacco for chewing: tramps': C. 20. The Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932. Perhaps ex gormandize.

gory. See goree.—2. A man, chap, fellow: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see quot'n at gill); 1857, Punch, Jan. 31, where, erroneously, it is spelt goney; † by 1890. Prob. a corruption of gorger.

gospel-grinder, 'a city missionary or scripture reader' (Greenwood), was never, I think, c.—but it was orig. low s.: James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London, 1869. The same applies to U.S.A. gospel-shark, 'a clergyman': Wm De Vere, Tramp Poems of the West, 1891. Prob. also to U.S. gospel-spieler, 'a clergyman': Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 1913.

goss. See anti-goss.

gossip, up to (one's or the). Shrewd, alert, wide-awake; well-informed, esp. of illicit happenings, or underworld tricks and activities: ca. 1760–1910. It seems to have been either c. or low s. at first: witness George Parker, A View of Society, 1781, in several places; he italicizes the term—and most of his italicized terms are c. Lit., capable of dealing with gossip.

got-neck; esp. as pres. p'ple or as vbl n. To keep a sharp look-out: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, Moreby Acklom, 'The main stem and W a moving dick got-necking thereon'; extant. Perhaps it = goat-neck, 'rubberneck'.

got on well, to have. 'When he'—the criminal—'has paid his debts or made his expenses in connection with any deal, he says he has got on well,' Convict, 1934: prob. since ca. 1920. Euphemistic or perhaps, rather, humorous.

gouger, 'a swindler': not c. but s.

gouging, 'a swindle; swindling': not c. but s.; prob. the same applies to gouger, 'one who takes excessive profits' (Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924, glossary, s.v. 'Profiteer').

gourd; in C. 16–17, often spelt gord or gorde; very rare in the singular. Gourds are a kind of false dice, mentioned first by Gilbert Walker in A Manifest detection of Diceplay, 1552 ('Now too gross a practice to be put in use'); from R. Greenc's A Notable Discovery of Coosnage it is, however, clear that the term was extant in 1591; 1592, The Defence of Conny catching. B.E.'s goads prob. represents the same kind of die.

Government man. A prisoner—esp. a first-time prisoner—that, working in a prison shop, does his best: 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; ob. He is working for the State, not for himself.

Government securities. 'Handcuffs are known as the darbies, the bracelets, and by some, with a gift of wit, as "Government securities",' F. C. Taylor, 'The Language of Lags' in Word-Lore, Oct. 1928; extant.

governor, made. 'O'Dea had been "made guvner"', a jail phrase meaning . . . selected by a judge to fill the role of ring-leader. When five burglars "fell" together, uppermost in each man's mind, quite apart from the ordinary risks, was the fear that he might be "made guvner"', Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938: C. 20.

governor's stiff. 'A governor's pardon', i.e. the pardon granted by a State governor to a condemned criminal: 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H; by 1910, prison j. See stiff, n., 2 and 3.

gow, n. Opium; any other drug: 1922, W. H. Wills, 'Words Used in the Drug Traffic' (Dialect Notes); 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'You're in with what "gow" I've got. Let's bang it up before they come in and take it away from us' (actually 'it' is morphine); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'Under the influence of dope . . . on the gow'; Aug. 17, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1938, Castle (morphine); March 18, 1939, Flynn's, Donald Barr Chidsey; 1942, BVB, notes the variant ghow, as Ersine, 1933, has done; extant. Ex a Chinese radical.

gow, v. 'To remove the residue from an opium pipe,' BVB: addicts': since ca. 1920. Ex prec.

gow, on the. Addicted to or under the influence of drugs: since ca. 1920. Rose; BVB. See gow, n.

gow-head; gowster. An opium addict: since ca. 1925. BVB. See prec. and cf. hop-head.

gow out (usually as vbl n., gowing out) the lemon bowl. To smoke opium: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Donald Barr Chidsey, 'The Black Stuff', Flynn's, March 18, 1939. See gow and csp. lemon bowl.

gowed up. Drug-exhilarated, even to the point of craving to commit murder: since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Under the influence of drugs or liquor'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; 1938, Castle; 1942, BVB. 'Even though "gow" (or opium) may not be the drug employed' (Irwin).

gowing. See gow out.

gowk. 'A "gowk" (countryman [rustic]) is generally the quarry for whose capture the workers of this little game—the confidence trick—are always on the alert': 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H, 'A simpleton'; ob. Ex dial. gowk, 'a cuckoo; a fool'.

gowler. A dog: North Country: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by 1889 (B & L), it was sporting s. Ex dial. gowl, to howl; cf. gnarler.

gowster. See gow-head.

goy, n. and adj. A Gentile; non-Jewish: 1930, Burke, 'The mob's strictly goy, see'; 1931, Stiff, 'Goy. Hobo who can work the Jewish agencies. Plural, goyem'; 1933, Eagle; by 1934 (Philip Allingham, Cheapjack), pitchmen's s. in England; 1934, Howard N. Rose; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Nov. 10), 'almost a colloquialism' in U.S.A. In England it has always been Yiddish—j. rather than s.—and never adopted by the Gentile; cf. its use in 'The young woman, half Jewess, half goy' (Ernest Raymond, The Marsh, 1937). A Hebrew word: cf. 'The Goyah, which is literally heathen female, did everything required on the Sabbath,' Israel Zangwill, Children of the Ghetto, 1892.

goynik. Narcotics: drug traffickers': since ca. 1920. BVB. Perhaps a perversion of gow.

gozzle. To choke (a person): 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Echoic of the victim's gurgle; prompted by S.E. guzzle.

grab, n. A capture; esp., an arrest; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'For Fear of a Grab, that is, for Fear of being taken; and if so, the others will rescue him'; by 1890, low coll. Cf. sense 1 of the v.—2. Booty: 1797, Potter, 'Rum speaker or [rum] grab, a good booty'; by 1890, †. That which one grabs.—3. A robbery: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'He . . . yelped to the grab'; by 1889 (B & L), it was also U.S.A.; 1893, F & H (as American); ob. Prob. ex sense 2.

grab, v. To capture, apprehend; to arrest: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'We all—members of a thieving, swindling gang—"resolv'd, if Brown was grabb'd, that is, taken, to rescue him"; 1798, Sessions Papers; 1812, Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1828, Sessions; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1846, anon. translator of E. Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, Pt. 2, ch. xlvi; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1857, Snowden; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1870, s.; by 1900, coll. Ex S.E. grab, to seize eagerly.—2. See grab on.

grab an armful of box-cars. To board a train: 1934, Rose; extant. By humorous elaboration.

grab-gains. 'The trick of snatching a purse, etc., and making off,' F & H, 1893; app. † by 1930.

grab game, the. Stealing the stakes put down by greenhorns in a card game or in a wager; hence any 'stealing, and making off with the booty': 1877, Bartlett, Americanisms, 4th ed.; extant. Cf. grab, n., 2 and 3.

grab iron. 'A handrail on the side or end of a railroad car, near the steps or ladder,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910; by 1940, s. The hand-rail is of iron or steel, and one grabs at it.

grab joint. A cheap store or shop, esp. in a poor district: since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941, 'Also gyp joint, jerk joint'. Cf. grab, n., 3, and see joint.

grab off. To obtain (something) by either illicit or underhand means: mostly convicts': 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; extant. Ex grabbing, e.g. fruit from the top of box or basket or case.

grab on. To 'get along'; to live, not luxuriously: ca. 1840–1900. Mayhew, London Labour, III, 149, 'I do manage to grab on somehow'. Semantics: cf. to hold on, 'to keep oneself going; to subsist'.

grab scenery. See grabbing scenery.

grabber. A watch-stealer: 1849, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, V, ch. lxxvi; very ob.—2. A garotter: 1909, Ware; † by 1940.

grabbing. An arrest: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; by 1890, low coll. See grab, v., and cf. grab, n. 1.

grabbing scenery. Gazing, from concealment on a train, at the scenery or the scene: tramps': from ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'A procedure, which, marking the inexperienced tramp, is frowned upon by the older, wiser ones, since it is likely to lead to detection and a consequent "ditching" by the train men'. Derisive.

grabble, to steal, is prob. a genuine c. term as used by George Parker, A View of Society, 1781 ('Grabbles all his Bit', takes all his money); I suspect that it may be a confusion of grab + snabble (q.v.): though obviously this theory does not preclude the possibility of the term's being genuine c. Grose, 2nd ed., 1788, defines it as 'to seize' and thus strengthens the likelihood of the term's genuineness. It was app. current ca. 1770–1870, Matsell (1859) including it in Vocabulum.

grabby. A London policeman: 1925, Leverage; ob. Cf. grab, n., 1, and v., 1.

Gracemans. 'Gratious street market' (i.e., Gracechurch Street, London), Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610; app. † by 1830. Grace + the c. suffix mans.

grade. 'The third grade in prison', Ersine: convicts': since ca. 1918.

graduate. An able and experienced criminal: May 31, 1930, Flynn's, Allan Dunn, 'The Gray Gangster'; extant. Cf. the semantics of college and college chum.

gradus, the; or the step. Causing a card to project slightly from the pack: card-sharpers': since ca. 1820. F & H; Partridge, 1937. A gradus (L. for 'a step; a degree') towards success.

gradus ad parnassum. 'The tread-wheel, when trod by a pupil of school attainments': 1823, Jon Bee; but this term (app. current ca. 1810–40) was almost certainly not c. Lit., 'step to Parnassus'.

graft, n. As 'work' and as 'kind of work', i.e., 'employment, trade, vocation', it is s. (H, 1874). In U.S.A., it may have been c. during the approximate period ca. 1860–80, as, e.g., in The National Police Gazette, Oct. 7, 1865. This is the earlier sense, therefore Webster's proposed derivation from the S.E. gardening sense is not viable. Perhaps ex Dutch graaf, 'a spade': not directly, but via graafwerk, 'spade-work, navvying'.—2. Hence, an illicit means of livelihood: 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, where it is applied to 'smashing'; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (U.S.A.); 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers that Prey; 1900, J. Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, "Graft" . . . all kinds of theft and illegal practices generally'; 1903, Flynt, Ruderick Clowd; 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1910, H. Hapgood, Types from City Streets; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat ('a method of begging'); 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 'Forget about this prowling gag; it's bum graft'; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A generic term for any criminal activity'; by 1930 or earlier, however, it had, in U.S.A., > police j. and journalistic s.; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; still c. in Britain.—3. 'The order goes forth to search all "grafts" (grafts, in con slang, are special quarters occupied by sine-curists (favoured convicts, doing no or very little work)'; 1893, Confessions of a Convict (U.S.A.); by 1930, s.—and merged with sense 2, whence it derived.—4. (Ex sense 2.) A share in the proceeds (profits, commission); a 'rake-off': U.S.A.: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, "Chi ain't no free soup kitchen. The City Hall people want their graft just as much as I [a criminal] do"; by 1910, low s.—5. (Ex sense 2.) 'Something easy,' says No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, the contexts showing that the term implies 'easy money' or 'goods easily pilfered or stolen': U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant.

graft, v. The sense 'to work' was, orig., low s.; never c.—2. Hence, to (help another to) steal: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, in the form of the vbl. n., grafting; 1865, The National Police Gazette, Oct. 7; 1893, F & H, 'To steal'; 1893, C. Moffett, True Detective Stories, 'Grafting with a mob of pickpockets'; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, Flynt, Ruderick Clowd; 1903, Clapin, 'To pick pockets, To help another to steal'; 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1933, Ersine, 'To use political power as a means of robbery or swindle'; extant.—3. To operate secretly: U.S.A.: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; app. † by 1920. A special application of sense 1.—4. To beg, to be out begging, as a professional: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'He said, "I have been out 'grafting' for about an hour, and . . . got . . . bread and cheese, with a good belly full of meat, a good shirt and muffler . . ., and eightpence in money"'; 1910, Harry Franck, A Vagabond Journey; slightly ob.

graft, adj. (Of a convict) favoured by the prison warden or governor, or by the warders: 1893, Confessions of a Convict; ob. See graft, n., 3.

grafter. A pickpocket: orig., tramps': prob. since ca. 1850: 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (by implication); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review ('Criminal Slang'); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom ('A thief'); extant. Ex graft, v., 2.—2. A criminal: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey (p. 204); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, Flynt, Ruderick Clowd; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1910, H. Hapgood, Types from City Streets; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; by ca. 1918, British; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1929, Charles Gordon, Crooks; 1931, Godfrey Irwin—but by this time it was, in U.S.A., no longer c. Cf. graft, n., 2.—3. Hence, one who, though not a professional or outright criminal, aids criminals or draws profit from criminal or, at the least, 'shady' enterprises or businesses: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; 1909, Will Irwin, Confessions of a Con Man, 'One who uses skin games as a vehicle for stalling through life'; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'The Grafter is frequently a man who is able to exploit the . . . charity organizations, or the fraternal organizations'; by 1928—see The White Tops, July-Aug., 'Circus Glossary'—it was circus s.—4. In British pitchmen's s., it = 'one who works a line in a fair or market; as fortune-teller, quack doctor, mock auctioneer, etc.': Philip Allingham, Cheappjack, 1934.

grafting. See graft, v., 2, 3, 4, of which it is the vbl n.

grafting peck. A workman's or labourer's house: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'The working-class houses, or "grafting pecks"'; ob. See graft, v., 1, and peck, n.

grafting the gravney. See gravney.

gran. See grand, 3rd ref. of 1929, and the note from Pasley.

granam. See grannam. (Rowlands, 1610.)

grand. A thousand dollars: 'Racetrack cant as far back as Saratoga Springs heyday in the 1880's,' Jean Bordeaux, letter of Oct. 23, 1945; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 'The Chief [of Detectives] has got us dead to rights on the Harmond Bank job, but is willing to turn deaf, dumb and blind for forty-five "grand"'; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'That leather kicked in two grand'; 1926, N. Lucas, London and Its Criminals (American woman using it); 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1928, Chicago May; 1928, John O'Connor; 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch; 1929, W. R. Burnett; 1929, Jack Callahan, who uses the form gran and implies that the term has been current for at least a generation; May 24, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1930, Charles F. Coe, Gunman; Sept. 6, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; on innumerable occasions since, but from ca. 1932, no longer to be classified as c. (In Al Capone, 1931, Fred D. Pasley says that the shortened gran > current in 1924.) Since ca. 1930, c. in Britain, as, e.g., in The People, April 7, 1946, article of Alan Hoby; by 1947, however, (low) s. in Britain too. Prob. because it was a grand sum of money.

grand jolt. See at jolt, big.

Grand Quay. State Prison: 1871, Anon., State Prison Life (at Jeffersonville, S. Indiana); extant. 'Is this perhaps a play on "dock"' (of harbour, and in a court of justice), Irwin pertinently asks.

granier. Dekker's variant of gravier.—In 'the Temple Classics' it appears as craniers: but is not this simply a misreading of the text?—Grose, also, has granier; it occurs in his list of false dice.

grannam. 'Grannam, corne,' Harman, 1566, and by 'corn' he means either wheat or the cereals collectively—prob. the latter; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands (granam); 1665, R. Head; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1839, James Cosgrave, The Irish Highwaymen (wheat); † by 1887, according to Baumann. Perhaps ex grain and granary, the form grannam being a pun on the S.E. sense of grannam, 'grandmother'.

granting cheat, in Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggars' Bush, written ca. 1615, is a misprint for grunting cheat.

granny, n. Perception; knowledge; recognition; detection: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 364, with reference to street sellers of cutlery, 'A compound of black lead and tallow, to "take the granny" off them as has white hands'; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; app. † by 1920. Perhaps ex the proverbial teach one's grandmother to suck eggs; cf. the v.—2. Hence (? erroneously): importance; pride: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; F & H, 1893.

granny, v. To perceive, discern; to understand; to recognize: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'The "swells" (especially those who have "been in the service") "come down with a couter" (sovereign) if they "granny the mauley" (perceive the signature) of a brother officer or friend'; ibid., 'The shallow got so grannied (known) . . .'; 1859, H, 'Do you granny the bloke?'; 1887, Baumann; 1893, F & H; 1893, No. 747, p. 409, a reference prob. valid for 1845; app. † by 1920. Prob. ex the n.

grape. Champagne: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1929–31, Kernôt; 1933, Eagle; 1936, Charles Francis Coe, Ransom; extant. Allusive: cf. S.E. the juice of the grape, 'wine'.

grapevine is the C. 20 predominating equivalent of 'the underground railroad', q.v.: adumbrated in R. K. Fox, The New York Slang Dictionary, 1880, and in F & H, 1893 (grapevine telegraph); Jan. 30, 1926, Flynn's, 'That mysterious source of underground information . . . "the grapevine"'; 1928, Mary Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May; by 1930, journalistic s. Adopted, ca. 1920, in England. Ex grapevine telegraph, the Civil War system of verbal messages (unofficial); cf. bush telegraph and mocassin telegraph.—2. See glomming the grapevine.

grapevine route. A synonym of sense 1 of prec. entry. Ersine, 1933; by 1940, s.

grappa. 'Brandy, made by distilling wine or mash,' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; after 1934, merely reminiscent. Cf. grape.

grapple the rails. 'A cant name used in Ireland for whiskey,' says Grose, 1785; but by 'cant', Grose here almost certainly means what we now call slang.

