grarler. A small dog that, by yapping, alarms the family; 'grarlers' are more feared by burglars than guns or pistols: since ca. 1875: 1889, B & L; slightly ob. I.e., a growler; on the analogy of gnarler—or perhaps rather by a cockney pronunciation of growler.

grass, n. See come grass, to inform to the police. But also independently for 'an informer to the police', as, for example, in Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932; George Dilnot, The Real Detective, 1933; Wilfred Macartney, Walls Have Mouths, 1936; James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936, has turn grass and 'You're a grass'; 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night; 1939, Jim Phelan, In the Can; 1941, Jim Phelan, Murder by Numbers; 1943, Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House; extant. Short for grasshopper, rhyming on copper, n., 3. This grasshopper (late C. 19–20) is itself e.—as, e.g., in Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938, and Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941. Hence:—2. A policeman: mostly race-course gangs': since ca. 1920. Partridge, 1937.

grass, v. To inform to the police, or to prison warders, on (a person): prob. since ca. 1930: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'Anyhow it was a dirty trick grassing his pals'; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night; 1938, F. D. Sharpe; 1940, Jim Phelan, Jail Journey; 1943, Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House; extant. Ex the n., sense 1.

grass, come. See come grass.

grass, cut one's own. See cut one's own grass.

grass, on the. Free; at large. 'A criminal is "on the grass again" after being released from gaol,' Baker, 1942: Australian: C. 20. Ex out at grass: (of a horse) released from work.

grass, turn. See grass, n., 1: Curtis, 1936.

grass widow, 'one that pretends to have been married, but never was', is not c., but s. This is the origin of the modern sense.

grasshopper. 'Common thieves, called amongst the criminal classes, "gunners" and "grass-hoppers", sneak about watching their opportunities to get up the "dancers" (stairs)': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1893, F & H; app. † by 1915. Ex lightness of foot.—2. See grass, n., second paragraph.

grassville. The country as opposed to the town: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; ob. Prob. suggested by daisyville.

grassy is an occ. variant of grass, n., 1 and 2. David Hume, 1935; Partridge, 1937. A contemptuous diminutive.

grate, v. often as vbl n., grating. 'Perhaps your house is broken into; and there are various ways of accomplishing that feat. "Jumping a crib", is entrance by a window; "breaking a crib", forcing a back door; "grating a crib", through cellar gratings; "garreting a crib", through the roof or by an attic window,' The Cornhill Magazine, Jan. 1863, 'The Science of Garotting and House-breaking'; 1901, Jerome Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life, Vol. 2; extant.

gratting is a misprint for gattering.

graud. Some kind of false die: gamesters': (written) 1662, The Cheats, by John Wilson, 'The wax[,] the graud'. Perhaps graud = gravd = grav'd = engraved; the engraving being such as to give a bias to the die. The term may, however, be merely a variant of gravier, as M. C. Nahm suggests in his edition of Wilson's comedy.

gravel, v.t.; gen. gravelled. To hang: 1743, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account (Michael Bewley), 'He should be Gravil'd', glossed as 'hang'd'; † by 1890. To bring a person to the gravel—to the dust.

gravel-tax. 'Money obtained from travellers on the highway': footpads' and highwaymen's: prob. ca. 1730–1850, though app. recorded first in H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 1841, 'Since she's got hold of the nobby cove vot gathers gravel-tax, she arn't know'd nobody' (i.e., she has been too proud to speak to her former companions); 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1890. Origin: a humorous charge for the use of the gravel on the road.

gravel train. In the Dec. 1918 issue of The American Law Review, Joseph Matthew Sullivan, in his running-commentary article, 'Criminal Slang', says that 'The go-between of lobbyists who buy up legislators is called the "gravel train" . . . he has the rocks whereby he can debauch legislators', whereon Godfrey Irwin (letter, Aug. 9, 1937) comments thus, 'This, new to me, is interesting as a possible origin of the common-slang gravy train, anything easy, desirable, productive'; ob. In American English, rock is 'a stone; even a pebble'; and in American cant—later it became slang—rock is 'a precious stone'; have the rocks, therefore, signifies 'to have plenty of cash'.

graveyard. A quarry, lake, or stream where cars in insurance frauds are 'buried': automobile-stealing racket: 1929, The Saturday Evening Post; extant.—2. Hence, a sales-room run by crooks to sell stolen automobiles: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant.—3. The mouth: 1931, Godfrey Irwin: but this, like gravestones or teeth, is low s.—not c.

graveyard robbers. Social investigators: Sing Sing convicts': 1935, Hargan; 1937, Godfrey Irwin (letter of Sept. 21), 'A localism; I have never heard it among investigators' subjects, and I've done a bit of the work'; extant. The investigated convicts, or most of them, regard the investigators as ghouls.

graveyard shift. A night shift—a gang working at night and esp. in the small hours: tramps' (and labour gangs'): C. 20: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin. Not, I think, to be classified as c.

graveyard stew. Hot milk and toast: tramps': C. 20: 1931, Stiff; 1931, IA. Suitable for those whose 'tombstones' (or teeth) are lacking or deficient (Godfrey Irwin).

graveyard trick is synonymous with graveyard shift: industrial and railroad s.—not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

graveyard watch, 'the midnight to 4 a.m. watch aboard ship': nautical s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

gravier (see also granier); ? always pl. Perhaps *gravier*s is by itself meaningless and perhaps the term should be—for it is found only as—*light gravier*s (or light graniers). These are false dice, recorded first by Gilbert Walker in 1552 and not later than 1608 (Dekker). Possibly they are dice formed to look heavier than they are, or so made that they are heavier at one side than elsewhere: 'light heavies'; cf. the etymology of Fr. gravier.

gravil'd. See gravel.

gravney. A ring: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed (p. 9); ibid., p. 14, grafting the gravney, street vending of rings; 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo (where it is spelt grawnney); † by 1920. Ex grawnney comes groiny: but whence grawnney? Perhaps ex gravney, which may distort graven (engraved).

gravy, n. Loot: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, glossary, s.v. 'Loot'; 1925, Leverage, 'Rich spoils'; 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; 1936, Charles H. Garrigues, You're Paying for It!; extant. Gravy being a pleasant addition: so is money.

gravy, v.i. To excite pity and thus obtain money: tramps' and beggars': 1886, Wm Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob. Cf. the n.

gravy hound. A hospital patient in prison: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. In hospital, he enjoys the gravy he gets.

grawler. A beggar: Scottish: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'In two days we got nearly thirty lils, and not so much as [to] sweeten a grawler in the whole of them'; 1823, Egan's Grose; app. † by 1893 (F & H). Because he growls, grumbles, whines.

D.O.U.

grawnney. See gravney.

gray. 'A half-penny, or other coin, having two heads or two tails, and fabricated for the use of gamblers, who, by such a deception, frequently win large sums': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1828, George Smeeton, Doings in London, "'Grays" (gaffing-coins)'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1859, H; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of London (as grey), 'I suppose they have named it after Sir George Grey, because he is a two-faced bloke',—obviously not, for he was born only in 1799; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.), 'A counterfeit'. Ex Romany goy.—2. Silver; silver money: late C. 19–20; ob. Ware, 1909. Ex the colour, silvery-grey.—3. The American sense 'a sucker' is low s., not c. (Flynn's, Aug. 15, 1935.)

gray backs or graybacks; gray-backed uns. Lice: not, I think, c.; almost certainly low s., as was the synonymous gold-backed uns.

Graystone College. Any prison: convicts': since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933. Cf. college.

graze, v.i. To eat; have a meal: South Africa: C. 20; by 1945, low s. Letter (May 23, 1946) from C. P. Wittstock. Humorous: cf. the intransitive use of feed in respect of persons.

grease, n. Money: 1841, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin, 'The grease', glossed as 'money'; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; ca. 1886, in Lewis E. Lawes, Cell 202, Sing Sing (U.S.A.), 1935; app. † by 1890 in Britain; by 1910 in U.S.A. In U.S.A. of ca. 1790–1880, however, it was s. rather than c.: witness esp. The D.A.E. Cf. sense 1 of the v.—2. Nitroglycerin: U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1927, Kane; May 1928, The American Mercury; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; Aug 2, 1930, Liberty; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; March 9, 1935, Flynn's; Feb. 20, 1937, Flynn's, Earl W. Scott; extant. Cf. oil.—3. (A natural development ex sense 1.) 'Money paid for protection. "With all these new monkeys on the river the grease's too stiff"', Burke, 1930: U.S. racketeers': since ca. 1924: 1931, John Wilstach; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Money paid to the police for protection or immunity'; 1933, Ersine; 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle, "'Grease?" "Yeh. Protection money"''; extant.—4. Mostly in put (someone) in (or on) the grease, to get him into trouble: U.S.A.: July 5, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick (. . . in . . .); 1934, Howard N. Rose (. . . on . . .); extant.—5. Butter: U.S. tramps': C. 20: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict. Pejorative.—6. (Prob. ex 4.) A reproof: U.S.A.: since the late 1920's. BVB, 1942.—7. Opium: U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. BVB. Cf. mud.

grease, v. To bribe: perhaps c.—at least, until ca. 1900—in U.S.A.; but in England it was merely s. (E.g., Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne, 1893.) Cf. s. palm-oil.—2. Hence, to pay for protection from criminal gangs: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. sense 3 of the n.—3. (V.i.) To smoke opium, or at any rate to use it as a drug: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 7 of the n.—4. 'To put a blast into a pete' grease ball or greaseball. A tramp that won't wash himself: tramps': 1925, Leverage; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A low-grade tramp, especially one with scant personal cleanliness'; 1933, Ersine, 'A filthy person'; extant.—2. Hence, 'a derelict of Racketland,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; Feb. 1, 1930, Flynn's, Robert H. Rohde; Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; May 28, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; extant.—3. An Italian: convicts': 1935, Hargan; 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy ('Too Much Pep'), 'I have a lot of very good friends among the Italians, and I never speak of them as wops, or guineas, or dagoes, or grease-balls, because I consider this most disrespectful, like calling Jewish people mockies, or Hebes, or geese'; extant. Ex sleek, glossy, pomaded hair, or perhaps suggested by the c. sense of greaser.—4. The sense 'a mechanic' (esp. in a garage) is automobile-trade s., not c.

L

(or safe): U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine. Ex sense 2 of the n.

grease joint; grease spot. A cheap restaurant: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (g. joint); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A grease joint.—A dirty restaurant or lunch-room'; Aug. 10, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan (g. spot); 1938, Damon Runyon, Furthermore (g. joint); extant. Ex the cooking in grease (fat).

grease one's duke. 'When I went to the fence he bested (cheated) me because I was drunk . . . So the next day I went to him and asked him if he was not going to grease my duke (put money into my hand)': 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.; 1889, B & L (at dukes); by 1910, low s. Cf. grease, v., 1, and see duke.

grease spot. See grease joint.

grease-tail. A down-and-out tramp, lice-infested: tramps': 1918, Leon Livingston, quoted by Nels Anderson (in The Hobo, 1923) along with four other terms, lump-defined as 'the dregs of vagrancy'; 1942, BVB. Cf. greaser, 3.

grease the track. To be run over by a train; to commit suicide by throwing oneself before or under a train: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cynical: cf. make a hole in the water.

greaseball. See grease ball.

greased aces. 'Aces so finished that they can be located when the deck is cut,' Ersine: since ca. 1918.

greaser. As 'a Mexican', it is s.; but as 'an Italian', it is c. of ca. 1890–1920, the app. earliest record being No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904 (p. 249); ibid., p. 258, 'Getting the rags from a greaser'. Buying counterfeit paper money from an Italian.' Cf. grease ball, 3.—2. Hence (?), a fellow: 1904 (see quot'n at bark, v., 2); slightly ob.—3. A dirty tramp: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. grease ball and grease-tail.

greasey, n. A motor mechanic; a garage hand: 1927, Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster; extant. Badge of office.—2. A cook: to some extent, tramps'; but orig. and predominantly a labour-gang or a construction-gang word. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

greasy spoon. 'She wouldn't go on the streets, so she got a job in a "greasy spoon" (cheap eating-house),' James Spenser, Limey, 1933: since ca. 1925. Cf. grease joint.

Great Bull, the. See General nurse (and also jockum).

great go. See go, 3.

great gun, 'a trick, a dodge, a "wheeze"': not c. but pedlars' s.

great joseph (or J-). 'Great Joseph, a Stout Coat,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'A surtout'; † by 1860. See joseph.

Great Smoke, the. London: 1889, B & L; by 1900, s. Cf. big smoke. From a distance, as the thief or the tramp approaches London, he sees (or used to see) a pall of smoke.

great tobacco. Opium: drug addicts': C. 20. Kernôt, 1929–31. To them, it is precisely that.

greed. Money: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1893, F & H; † by 1910. 'The love of money is the root of all evil.'

greefo. Marijuana (as a drug): drug addicts': since ca. 1920: 1934, Convict; 1936, Lee Duncan, who spells it griefo; Jan. 8, 1938, Flynn's, Donald Chidsey (grifo); 1942, BVB (griffa as well). The addict soon comes to grief: 'Say, youse guys, them marijuana cigarettes sure is dynamite, they sure is!' Imm., however, prob. ironical on merry, q.v.

Greek. Greeks, 'the low Irish', is not c. but s., except perhaps in U.S.A. ca. 1830–70 (The Ladies' Repository, 1848); as 'card-sharpers', it was S.E.

Greek, St Giles's. See Giles's Greek . . .

Greek fire. Bad whiskey: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); 1893, F & H; † by 1920. Ex the burning sensation it causes. Greek fire (or wildfire) is a highly combustible composition used in warfare (esp. for setting fire to ships); app. invented in C. 13; according to a recipe of 1871, made up of saltpetre 4 parts, meal-powder 6 parts, sulphur 3 parts.

green; esp. make the green. (To manufacture) counterfeit paper-money: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Counterfeiter'; extant. Cf. green goods.—2. A new-hand, whether convict or prison officer: English convicts': C. 20. In, e.g., Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943. Prob. short for s. greeny.

Green, Mrs. See sleep with.

green, turn a white hedge. See white hedge . . .

green and greasy. 'Three thousand dollars of "green and greasy"', worn paper money, in small bills,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926; extant. Cf. green goods.

Green Harbour, the. See Stop-Hole Abbey.

green articles. The 'sawdust swindlers' name for counterfeit bank-notes: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective, 'Of course he [the victim] is required to pay his own good money in advance of receiving the "green articles"': virtually † by 1930. Suggested by greenbacks (see greenback); and cf. green goods.

green ashes; green mud. 'The residue left in an opium pipe, or of an opium pellet after cooking,' BVB, 1942: drug addicts': since ca. 1920. The colour is greenish; cf. mud.

green bug. An emerald: 1925, Leverage; extant. See bug, n., 6; cf. red bug and white bug.

green curtains. See duck in the green curtains.

green fodder. Money; cash: 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant. Suggested by greenback.

green goods. 'He [a "sawdust swindler"] informs his prospective victim that he has a large quantity of "green goods" (counterfeit money) of different denominations': 1887, George W.

Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; by 1890, s.; by 1910, Standard American. Cf. greenback, q.v. For an excellent account of the composition of a 'green goods' gang, see W. T. Stead, Satan's Invisible World Displayed, 1898, at pp. 108-9.

green-goods merchant. A counterfeiter: C. 20. Ersine. Ex prec.

green-goods operator, 'a dealer in counterfeit money'; rather s. than c. Cf. green goods, q.v.

green king's man (or g. kingsman). A green handkerchief with a pattern: 1839, W. A. Miles (see billy); 1839, Brandon says 'silk'; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds; † by 1900. An elaboration of Cockney-s. kingsman, coloured handkerchief.

green light(s). A police-station: yeggs': Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'), in form 'green lights'; 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train, 'green light'; extant. Ex the green light shown outside.

green mud. See green ashes.

green pea. An easy victim; a 'sucker': tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (Glossary, s.v. 'sucker'); app. † by 1930. ('Unknown to me,' says Godfrey Irwin, Sept. 13, 1937). A 'green pea' is both green and soft.

green pill. See cutedered pill.

green(-)stall. See greenstall.

green winchard. See Awdeley's, No. 11; † by 1698 at latest. Origin and etymology?

greenback, 'a U.S. legal-tender currency note, first issued in 1862', was never c. Its colour was green.

greener. A country bumpkin; a 'sucker'; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; extant. Green (inexperienced) in the ways of cities.

Greenfields, Mrs. See Mrs Ashtip.

greenies. Counterfeit paper-money: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Money'; extant. Perhaps a 'familiarization' of green goods; contrast greens.

Greenland, from. Applied to 'a man who is not initiated or who does not know much', The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848; by 1890, s.; by 1937, † (Irwin). With a pun on green, 'inexperienced; ignorant': cf. greener.

greenmans. The fields; the country: Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610, greenemans; app. † by 1780. The green of the fields + the c. suffix mans; cf. daisyville.

greens, 'paper currency; bank notes' (Leverage, 1925): not c., but s. Ex predominant colour.

greenstall. A flock of sheep: 1781, Ralph Tomlinson, A Slang Pastoral; app. † by 1870. Shepherds stall (place) them in green—on grassy land.

gregor. 'Gregor or Moucher . . . Common Beggar': tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; † by 1930. Ex Shelta gegra, 'beggar'.

Gregorian tree, the, the gallows: not c., but s. (Grose.) Gregory Brandon succeeded Derrick as hangman.

grene (or G-) winchard. See green winchard.

grey. See gray.—2. Silver; silver money: 1909, Ware, 'From its colour presumably'; † by 1930.

grey backs (etc.). See gray backs.

grick. See grig.

griddle, v. To sing in the streets for a living: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, ' . . . Whose husband had got a month for "griddling in the main drag" (singing in the high street)'; 1886 (see griddling); 1887, Baumann; by 1889 (B & L), it was low s. in England. Godfrey Irwin in 1931 writes, 'It was a favourite trick of a certain class of mendicants in the United States many years ago, and has now fallen into disrepute as too exhausting and not sufficiently productive': perhaps, therefore, one should add that it was American c. of ca. 1870-1910. Griddle may be a perversion of grizzle, to cry peevishly or speak querulously; to snivel; to whine.

griddler. One who sings in the streets for a living; 'a person who sings in the streets without songs' (i.e., without music sheets): beggars': 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1892, Montagu Williams, Round London; by 1893 (F & H), it was low s. Ex the preceding. (See esp. 'The Griddler' in Edwin Pugh's The Cockney at Home, 1914.)—2. A tinker: tramps': 1889, B & L; ob. Ex his cry.

griddling is the vbl n. of griddle: 1851 (see griddle); 1859, H; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, "'Griddling" or singing in the streets, chiefly hymns'; by 1893 (F & H), it was low or street s.

gridiron, 'a County Court summons', is s.—not c.—2. In pl., 'the bars on a [prison] cell window': F & H, 1893; extant. Ex their appearance.

grief, 'trouble': W. R. Burnett, The Silver Eagle, 1932, 'This means plenty of grief, Frank': orig., on the borderline between c. and s.; by 1935, definitely s.; by 1937, gen. s.

griever. 'The griever, who were habituated to marijuana or Mexican hemp,' Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 1936, i.e., drug addicts of this type; extant. Cf.—presumably ex—griffa or greefo.

griefo. See greefo.

griff, 'to search (a place) without warrant but with authority': police s., not c. Flynn's, March 28, 1931, J. Allan Dunn, 'Front'.

griffa. Marijuana as a drug: addicts': 1934, Rose; extant. A variant of greefo.

griff(-)metol. A sixpence: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; app. † by 1820. Presumably metol = metal; griff may be a disguise for six: a 'six metal' (a 'six' coin).

griffin. A signal; tip the griffin, to give a warning, a signal; the straight griffin, a clear, frank warning or tip: 1888, Cassell's Saturday Journal, Dec. 22, 'Plank yourself at the corner to give the griffin if you see or hear owt'; 1891, J. Newman, Scampering Tricks, 'To give . . . the straight griffin'; 1893, F & H; by 1895, low s. Perhaps ex the idea, 'to tip the "office" (or warning) to the griffin': in s., griffin = a greenhorn, a newcomer.

grifo. See greefo.

grift, n. Phonologically grift is a thinning of the synonymous n. graft, q.v.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage, 'Grift, n. Stealing; theft; graft; line of graft'; by 1928 (witness The White Tops, July-Aug., 'Circus Glossary') it was also circus s.; March 2, 1929, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; Jan. 1931, True Detective Mysteries; E. D. Sullivan; by 1932, no longer justifiably classified as c.—2. A professional criminal: 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, "'He'd be so lit up an old-time Mississippi river-boat cheater could clean him, let alone a couple smart young grifts like us"'; ob. Short for grifter, 1 and, esp., 2.

grift, v. To be—chiefly, to work as—a professional criminal, esp. a professional thief: 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, "Grifting ain't what it used to be. Fourteenth Street's got protection down to a system—a regular underworld tariff on larceny"; 1926, Leverage, 'To steal; to graft'; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 'She was determined to "grift" with me'; 1933, Ersine; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 'To steal'; ibid., 'One mob may grift a spot all day without a score, and another mob come in right behind them and take off a good one'; extant. Ex sense 1 of the n.

grift, on the. Engaged in crime, esp. in theft of some kind: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 'Don't tell her anything about Danny being on the grift'; extant. See grift, n., 1.

grift right. To operate a racket under complete protection: since ca. 1922. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. See grift, v.

grifter. A short-change swindler: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; by 1927 (Flynn's, Sept. 10, Linn Bonnor, 'Hey, Mooch!'), the sense had > 'a commercial swindler' (see quot'n at sharpshooter); Nov. 15, 1930, Flynn's, Earl W. Scott; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'A swindler, con man'; 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube, 'A slicker living by his wits'; 1934, Julien Proskauer, Suckers All, 'a cheap, crooked gambler'; by 1935, s. Ex the v.: cf. sense 2.—2. A professional thief: 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man (p. 213); 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; 1925, Leverage, 'A thief; a grafter'; 1927, Kane; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; May 9, 1931, Flynn's, Lawrance M. Maynard; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Dec. 16, 1933, Flynn's; by 1935, police and journalistic s. Either a thinning of grafter or—the more likely—derivatively ex grift, v.

grifting, n. See grift, v.

grig, n. A farthing: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who, however, does not classify the term as c.; 1797, Potter; 1823, Jon Bee, who adduces the variant grick; 1839, H. Ainsworth, Jack Sheppard; † by 1859 (witness H). A grig is a merry little 'creature'.

grig, v. To collect money: 1925, Leverage; extant. Perhaps ultimately ex prec. term.

grim. '(American thieves).—A skeleton. Also grin, F & H, 1893; extant. A 'grinning skeleton' looks grim; cf. grin.

grime. To cheat or swindle: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, "... The Cheater, when he has no cosin to grime with his stop dice"; † by 1690. Perhaps cognate with Fr. grimer, 'so to paint the face as to make it look older'.

grim. A skeleton: 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H; extant. By a grim jest: cf. grim, q.v.

grin, stand the. To be quizzed, laughed at, ridiculed: 1821, Pierce Egan, Boxiana, III, 'A link boy once, Dick Hellfinch stood the grin, | At Charing Cross he long his toil apply'd'; 1823, Egan's Grose; app. † by 1850, its early demise being caused by the fact that it was not c. but s.—mostly buckish.

grind, 'patter, a spiel, c. showman's speech,' and grinder, 'spieler, ballyhoo man': not c., but circus and carnival s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—2. He who acts as in the v. Ersine, 1933. It is hard work.

grind, v. To talk long and earnestly to (a prospective dupe): 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf.:

grind joint. A crooked auctioneer's mart or sales room: Aug. 7, 1937, The New Yorker, Carlton Brown ('Auction Sale This Day'), 'In the palmy days when they hailed their customers with a "Hey, Rube!" they were known as "Peter Duff auctions"', probably in commemoration of some forgotten pioneer in the game, but more prob. still with a pun on 'duff' goods: see duff, n., 1, 2, and duff, man at the, and duffer, 1, 2.

grind organ. A machine gun: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1934, Rose; slightly ob. Ex the horrible chatter it makes in action: cf. the 1940–45 s. Chicago piano, 'a multiple pom-pom'.

grind wind. To walk the treadmill: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, Glossary, p. 322, 'On the treadmill Grinding wind, on the steel, [on the] everlasting staircase'; 1893, F & H; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2, p. 186, where it is applied to 'work at the cranks' (pump); ob. A mill that grinds wind—i.e., nothing.

grinder. (Usually pl.) A tooth: 1676, Coles, 'Grinders, c. Teeth'; B.E., 1698, 'The Cove has Rum Grinders, c. the Rogue has excellent Teeth'. The term would appear to have remained c. until ca. 1750. Ex the S.E. sense, 'a molar tooth', which goes back to C. 14.

grinding wind. See grind wind.

grindstone and sharpen up, get a. 'The phrase . . . is pure cannon [pickpocket] language. It refers to having a member of the mob pose as a mark while the rusty one re-acquires his former dexterity,' Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'—in The American Mercury, May 1928; extant. Ex put one's nose to the grindstone, to work hard and steadily; cf. sharpen up.

grinny. See ginny, 1, reference of 1848.

gripe. In 'Vincent's law', a gripe is 'he that betteth': 1592, R. Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, in describing this swindle, 'a common deceit or cosenage used in Bowling-allies, amongst the baser sort of people', mentions the 'bawkers' (q.v.) and adds: 'Others, Gentlemen, or Marchants, that delighted with the sport, stand there as beholders to passe away the time: amongst these are certaine old sokers, which are lookers on, and listen for bets, either even or od, and these are called Gripes: and these fellows will refuse no lay, if the ods may grow to their advantage, for the gripes and the bawkers are confederate, and their fortune at play ever sorts according as the gripes have placed their bets, for the Bawker, he marketh how the laies goes, and so throwes his casting'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; app. † by 1690. By a distortion of S.E. grip, n. and v.

griper. The c. sense of the term used by the 'legers' links up with the S.E. sense, 'extortioner' (recorded in Harrison's England in 1587: O.E.D.); as c., it seems to have been current ca. 1590–1620: R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 'There be . . . certaine Colliers that bring coles to London in Barges, and they be called Gripers, and to these comes the leger, & bargains with him for his coles, and sels by retaile with the like cosnage of sakes as I have rehearsed before'—see legering law.

grit, n., 'the road; the dust'—Leverage, 1925—is hardly c., except in hit the grit.

grit, v. 'To travel on foot,' Leverage, 1925: mostly tramps: since ca. 1910. Cf. hit the grit.

grizzle, v. To sing, for money, in the street; to play, e.g., a violin, in the street: 1926, Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows (the former); 1937, implied in grizzling, q.v. A perversion of griddle; prob. there is the influence of coll. grizzle, 'to cry peevishly'.

grizzler. A 'griddler' or street singer: 1932, Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps; April 22, 1935, letter Hugh Milner, who classifies it as tramps' c.; extant. Ex grizzle.

grizzling; street grizzling. Singing or playing in the street for money: since ca. 1920: 1932, Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh, "'Then there's grizzlin' . . . bein' blind and playin' a vile-in'". Ex grizzle.

groaner. See groaner and sigher. Note, however, that the evidence tends to show that groaner and sigher was not an indivisible term (a sense-unit) but merely a pairing of the two synonyms. In U.S.A.: see next entry, for 1859; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms (virtually as in Matsell).

groaner and sigher. 'Groaner and sigher: wretches hired by methodists and others to attend their meetings for the purposes of fraud': 1797, Potter, who slanders the Methodists, for, obviously, the pickpockets merely selected Methodist meetings as profitable; 1809, Andrewes, who defines the terms separately; 1848, Sinks of London, where the terms are implied to be synonymous; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), groaner only; 1889, B & L, 'Groaners . . . funeral and church thieves'; † by 1893 (F & H) in England; 1903, groaner only (see groaner). Ex the hypocritical groans and sighs of the attendant pickpockets.

groaper. Colonel George Hanger's spelling (1801) of gropier, 3.

groat. A ten years' term of imprisonment: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'Legged for Groat . . . Ten Years' Imprisonment'; † by 1930. Cf. Shelta tal geta (10).

grocery. 'Half-pence, or copper coin, in a collective sense': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; by 1880, low s. For the semantic idea, cf. modern s. chicken-feed, 'small change'.

grocery boy. 'A conditioned addict who has developed a large appetite as a result of withdrawal,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic: since ca. 1930. He helps the grocers.

grog'd or grogged, (of a horse that is) foundered, may orig. have been c.; but by 1800 it was s. See grogs, the.

grogham. A horse: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society (see quot'n at daisy-kicker, 2); 1785, Grose; 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; † by 1893 (F & H). Cf. preceding entry.

grogs, the. Foundering (of a horse): 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Horses that . . . have the . . . Grogs'—the gloss being, 'Grog'd is founder'd'; app. † by 1890. Cf. s. groggy, 'shaky'.

groin; occ., groyne. 'Henry. Did he get any sparkle?—George. Yes, a couple of kettles, two or three slangs, a lovely groin and a prop,' Brown (1931), who defines it as 'a ring' (i.e., a finger ring); 1931, Desmond Morse-Boycott, We Do See Life!, 'We bought a lot of duff [bracelets] an' groynes [watch-chains and rings], orl stamped eighteen-carat gold, but orl brass'; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1936, George Ingram, The Muffled Man; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; 1943, Black, 'Groin: a diamond or white stone ring' (i.e., diamond-ring or white-stone ring); extant. Perhaps suggested by joint, n., 2, by anatomical association; for cf. sense 2. Much earlier, however, is gravney or—N.B. !—grawnney: therefore, grawnney > groiny >, by shortening, groin.—2. A racecourse betting-ring: racecourse gangs' (including pickpockets): since ca. 1920. The 'shadier' frequenters of racecourses refer to the bob groin (shilling ring) and the dollar groin (the five-shilling ring): David Hume; Partridge, 1937.

groiny. A finger-ring; diamond (or other gem) when set in a ring: since ca. 1925. Margery Alingham, Look to the Lady, 1931. Ex grawnney, q.v. at gravney.

groom, n. A croupier: gamesters': 1887, Baumann: 1893, F & H; extant—but since ca. 1900, s. Euphemistic.

groom, v. To 'run' (a person) out of town; i.e., (of the police) to send (a person) away and forbid him to return: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. To attend assiduously to.—2. To beat, esp. with stick or club: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex the process of grooming a horse.

grope. 'Of a homosexual, to make a remark or the like as a feeler to discover the willingness of a prospective "customer",' BVB, 1942. Ex the heterosexual grope (see my Shakespeare's Bawdy).

gropier; usually pl. A blind man: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1823, Jon Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1887, Baumann; by 1889, low s. (B & L); by 1910, †. He has to grope his way.—2. As 'midwife', it is not c. but low s.—3. (Usually pl.) A pocket: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'What, have you got red-hot heaters, in your gropers, that you're afraid to thrust your daddles in them?'; 1797, Potter; 1801, George Hanger; 1809, Andrewes; 1829, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, V (grouper); † by 1893 (F & H). One gropes in it for money.

gropersess. A blind woman: 1823, Bee; † by 1890. On gropier, 1.

gropus. 'The coat-pocket—from the manner of groping for its lesser contents': 1823, Bee; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad, 'I never dipped my mawley into a swell's gropus'—glossed as 'a gentleman's pocket'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. A latinizing of gropier.

grouch bag. A bag, a purse, sewn to one's clothes or strung around one's neck, and containing money reserved for emergencies: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1928 (Jim Tully, Circus Parade), it was circus s., as was the derivative grouchy (ibid.), 'one who saves money'. Cf. s. mad money, reserve money carried by a girl, lest her 'fellow' walks out on her or lets her find her own way home.

ground, run into the. See run into the ground.

ground bull. A prison guard 'on the ground'—i.e., not patrolling up on a wall: convicts': since ca. 1910: 1933, James Spenser, Limey; 1935, James Spenser, The Five Mutineers. See bull, n., 5.

ground hog. A railroad brakeman: tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. He is on the ground, not the train, and, in action, he looks as though he were 'rooting' like a hog.—2. A sausage: tramps': 1931, Irwin; extant. Obviously a pun on ground, participial adj. from grind, and ground, 'earth, soil, etc.', the meat being ground up.

ground sweat, 'a grave'—late C. 17–19—is not c. but s.; it appears in B.E. and Grose.

grounder, 'a knock-out blow' or 'a knock-out' (Leverage, 1925): s., not c. groundsels. See blow off on the groundsels.

grouper. See groper, 3.

grouse, always predicatively: 'That's the grouse': that's excellent: Australian: C. 20. Partridge, 1938. Excellent to eat; hence, excellent: cf. English s. lovely grub!, excellent!

grouse, go to the. See go to the grouse.

grow. 'As soon as there was a chance of my going out I had been allowed to "grow", as they call it in [prison]. That is, to leave off having my face scraped every morning . . . My hair was let alone, too,' Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms, 1881: Australian: since ca. 1860; by 1893 (F & H), also English; by 1920, †.

grow one's feathers. To let one's hair and beard grow, as a prisoner is allowed to do towards the end of his sentence: convicts': 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; ob. Cf. the preceding entry.

growl. Female pudend: since ca. 1880. Partridge, 1938.

growler. A whiskey-flask: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Part II, ch. i), but perhaps implied in 1891 (see rush the growler); slightly ob. Ex American s. growler, 'a can or jug for—or of—beer'.—2. Hence, a tin can used by tramps in 'jungles': tramps': since ca. 1920. Ersine.

groyne. See groin.

grub, n. Food; 1659 (O.E.D.); 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Victuals'; 1728, D. Defoe ('Pro-vender'); 1785, Grose; 1785, C. Johnston, The Adventures of Anthony Varnish (see the quot'n at bub, n.)—by which time the term would seem to have > s.; in the U.S.A., however, it was still c. in 1794 (witness Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807). Perhaps ex S.E. grub, 'a maggot; a worm'—grubs being the food of birds.

grub, v.i. To eat: 1724, Harper's 'A Canting Song' in John Thurmond, Harlequin Sheppard, 'I Frisky Moll, with my Rum Coll, | Wou'd Grub in a Bowzing Ken; | But ere for the Scran he had tipt the Cole, | The Harman he came in'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'To Eat, to Dine, &c.'; ca. 1773, Anon., The New Fol de Rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles); 1785, Grose, 'To grub, to dine'; app. it > s. ca. 1780. Ex the n.—2. Hence v.t.: 'To grub a person, is to diet him, or find him in victuals,' J. H. Vaux, 1812. This sense (ex sense 1) may have been c. of ca. 1790–1830.—3. (Ex 1 and 2.) To beg: U.S.A.: 1905, implied in grubber, 2; 1925, Leverage; extant.

grub, in. 'In work, and the means of buying victuals' (Jon Bee, 1823); perhaps c., prob. low s. See grub, n.

grub-crib. Synonymous with grubbing crib (and prob. derivative therefrom) in both senses: ca. 1860–1910: F & H, 1893. On the borderland between c and low s.

grub-hunting. Food-begging: tramps' and beggars': 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; ob. See grub, n.

grub-ken. A variation of grub-crib.

grub-trap. Mouth: 1887, H. Baumann, Londonismen: more prob. low s. than c.

grubb is a variant of grub, n. and v.

grubber. A workhouse; 'the Union': 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow, 'A poor wretch'—in a convict prison—'who openly avowed it to be the ultimate end of his ambition to "live and die in the grubber!"' (the union); 1910, C. E. & B. Russell, Young Gaol-Birds; April 22, 1935, High Milner; 1935, The Garda Review; 1936, W. A. Gape; extant. With reference to the poor grub or food.—2. A beggar: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; rather ob. He begs for grub; perhaps also because he looks grubby.

grubbery. 'A cook's-shop', an eating-house: 1823, Bee; by 1889 (B & L), it was low s. Ex grub.—2. Food: 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III, 'I shall not cut my stick until I have had some grubbery'; † by 1900. This sense is suspect; cf. grub, n.—3. A workhouse: 1889, B & L; ob. Cf. grubber.

grubbiken. A tramps' variant of grubbing ken, 1: ca. 1840–1910. Mayhew, London Labour, III, 416; F & H, 1893. Lit., an eating place or building.

grubbing crib. An eating house: ca. 1810–60; then low s.; F & H, 1893, citing Bee, 1823. Hence, grubbing crib faker, the proprietor, or the manager, of one: † by 1900.—2. A workhouse: tramps': 1893, F & H, but prob. current since ca. 1850; † by 1930. Cf. grubbery, 3, and esp. grubbing ken.

grubbing irons. Tools employed by grave-diggers: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, '[The Sexton's] price being a guinea for the use of the grubbing-irons, adjusting the grave, &c.'; app. † by 1860. Ex grub, to dig, and iron, a tool or weapon.

grubbin(g) ken. A workhouse: 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; † by 1930—prob. by 1920. Cf. grubbiken.—2. 'A cookshop': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann; † by 1920. Cf. sense 1 of grubbing crib.

grubby. Food: 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, Appendix, 'I pattered in flash, like a covey knowing, | "Ay, bub or grubby, I say" '; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; † by 1920. A hypocoristic form of grub, n.

gruel. See the next.—2. Coffee: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H; † by 1930. Both are watery.

gruel, get or have one's. Dating from ca. 1820, this phrase—'to be punished,' 'to meet one's death, esp. by hanging'—may orig. have been c.; more prob. it is s.—at first, low s. Perhaps ex the fact that gruel is frequently administered to invalids.

grumble, v. To pay: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'Simply because the majority of men do part with their money unwillingly' (Irwin).

grumet; properly grummet. A C. 18 term, occurring in Alex. Smith, The History of the Highwaymen, 1714: 'He entered himself into a Gang of Grumets, who take the Name from the Likeness that they have to those young Boys in Ships, who climb up with great Nimbleness, by the Tacklings, to the top of the Mast; and the Sailors call them Cats, or Grumets': the S.E. sense of grummet is 'a ship's boy', ex Sp. grumete (same meaning). 'Those that bear this Name', Smith continues, 'steal by Night, climbing up lightly by a Ladder of Ropes, at the end of which, they have two little Hooks of Iron, to the end, that throwing them up to the Window, they may catch hold there, and they easily get up and empty the House And when they have got their Prize, they cunningly tie a Line made fast to the Point of the little Hooks, which, after they come down, they drawing, the two Hooks are raised, and the Ladder falls, without ever leaving any Print, or Mark of the Theft.'

grunt. A hog: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; † by 1820. Ex grunter, 1. Cf.:—2. Any form of pork as food: U.S. tramps: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

grunter is in C. 17 a c. variant of grunting cheat. Thus Dekker in O per se O, 1612, glosses it: 'Grunters (pigges)'. But both before and after that century, grunter signified a pig to many persons other than canters, for it is an obvious echoic term; nevertheless it is going too far to assert or to imply (as several notable authorities do) that grunter was never c. Dekker is not the only authority for its classification as c.: witness, e.g., the quot'n from Ben Jonson at cackler; Holme has 'Grunters, Pigs' in his glossary, and B.E., 1698, differentiates by defining it as a sucking pig; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 'Grunter, a Hog'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1753, John Poulter; 1785, Grose, whose entry may, however, be taken to imply that by 1760 or 1770 the term had > s.—2. A shilling: 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, Augustus Mayhew. Current ca. 1770–1870, the term may orig. have been c., although Grose does not classify it as such. Suggested by hog.—3. 'Pigs, or Grunsters, police runners': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A country constable'; 1887, Baumann; by 1889 (B & L), it was low s. Ex pig, 2, by suggestion (cf. grunter, 1). grunter's gig. A pig's snout: 1785, Grose. App. the term was current ca. 1760–1840, usually in the sense 'a smoked hog's face' (Grose). See gigg, 1, and grunter.

grunting cheat. 'A grunting chete or a patricos kynchen, a pyg,' Harman, 1566; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1611, Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, in the misprinted form gruntling cheate, which is no worse than Beaumont & Fletcher's granting cheat; 1665, R. Head, 'Grunting cheat . . . A sucking-pig'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley (sucking pig); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (pig); 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; by 1800, †. Lit., a grunting thing: see cheat.—2. Prob. erroneously by confusion with the next, pork: 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 1707.

grunting peck. Pork: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Grunting peck, pork, bacon, or any kind of hog's flesh'; Nov. 15, 1836, W. H. Smith in The Individual, 'Oh! grunting peck in its eating | Is a richly soft and savoury thing'; by 1850, †. Cf. grunting cheat and see peck, n.

gruntler. See grunter (1708).

gruntling, n. An abbr. of the next. (Alex. Smith, 1726.)

gruntling cheat. See grunting cheat.

gruts, 'tea' (Lexicon Balatronicum), is not c. but dial., and the more usual sense is 'dregs of tea (or coffee)'; moreover, gruts is much less common than grouts.

grype. See gripe. (Dekker, 1608.)

gryper. A plain-clothes detective: orig. and mostly Afrikaans-speakers; C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Afrikaans gryp, 'to grasp, grab'; ex Dutch grijpen, 'seize, grasp, grab'.

guelt. See gelt, reference of 1848.

guerilla. 'Guerillas. This name is applied by gamblers to fellows who skin suckers'—cheat greenhorns—'when and where they can, [and] who do not like the professional gamblers, but try to beat them, sometimes inform on them, and tell the suckers that they have been cheated': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; † by 1910. Ex the irregular warfare waged by Spanish armed bands.—2. An occ. variant of gorilla, as in Flynn's, Sept. 29, 1934, Howard McLellan, 'A Recipe for Muscle'.

guff. 'Senseless talk', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; by 1910, s. (In Britain, never other than s.) Perhaps a corruption of the gaff in gaff, stow one's, q.v.

guff, stand the. To undergo the interrogation consequent upon, or preceding, arrest: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, p. 264, 'What do you mean? I'm pinched. Well, you're a wise guy and I'll have to stand the guff and cave . . . What do you mean? I'm under arrest! Well, you are a clever man and I'll submit to arrest and take the punishment'; ob. See guff.

guide. A passer of counterfeit coins: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'The "Guide", or exchanger of coins'; slightly ob. He guides the coins into the hands of the unwary.

guilder, says C. E. Westmacott, The English Spy, 1825, 'is a cant term for gold': this is almost certainly an error for gilt = gelt; and by 'cant', Westmacott may mean 'fashionable' or 'slangy'.

guilt is a rare spelling of gilt, n., l, and of gelt.

guinea or guiney. A man; esp. an Italian: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (guinea); 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves, 'And you say that man was a guiney, a Dago?'; by 1930, low s. See ginny, 3.

guinea-dropper, guinea-dropping are the S.E. equivalents of sweetener and sweetening, qq.v.

guinea-hen, 'a prostitute', is classified by B & L (1889) as 'old cant': on what authority?—It is s. of C. 17—early 18.

guinea-pig. 'A fellow who receives a guinea for puffing off an unsound horse': 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900.

gull, n., a 'simpleton', is S.E.; as the inveigled fool imposed on by professional dicers and card-sharpers, it is c. of C. 17, as in Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9: 'In this battaile of Cardes and Dice, there are several Regiments and severall Officers . . . The fresh Gallant that is fetcht in, is the Gull'. No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, defined gull as 'victim of thieves', but I much doubt whether the term has ever been c. in U.S.A. Prob. ex the bird (rather in the dial. sense 'an unfledged gosling' than in the S.E. sense 'sea gull'); but the comparative dates make it possible that gull, 'a dupe', derives imm. ex gull, v.—2. (Perhaps ironically ex sense 1.) A cheat, a swindler: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict. By ca. 1800, the term would seem to have > s.; by 1880, †.

gull, v. As 'to befool', 'impose on', 'swindle', it is S.E.; but either it borders on c. or it actually is c. when it is used as equivalent to 'practise gull-groping on' in the sense connoted by the c. usage of gull-groper in the next entry. This use of gull arose early in C. 17, but it seems to have been rare after ca. 1700.

gull-groper; gull-groping. These C. 17 terms respectively for a shark, sharp, swindler, illicit adventurer and for their activities, are S.E., not c. Nevertheless, gull-groper has a c. signification: 'Hce that stands by [a tableful of dicers], and lends' money—usually he is, in fact, an old money-lender—to those who have run short 'is the Gull-groper', as Dekker tells us in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9. And the corresponding activity is gull-groping, wherein the prospective victim, some rich young man, is gradually inveigled by the wiles of a set of gamesters, allowed to win at first, and then plucked until he sensibly retires or until 'he hath in the end scarce fethers enough to keepe his owne back warme' (Dekker). In 1698, B.E. defines gull-groper as 'a Bystander that Lends Money to the Gamesters', a definition recurring as late as Egan's Grose; nevertheless, both terms were, I surmise, ob. by 1750 and † by 1830. In Elizabethan and Jacobean English, gull was perhaps the commonest of all words for a simpleton.

gully, n. A liar: 1812 (see quot'n at wrinkler), J. H. Vaux; † by 1895. Ex Lemuel Gulliver of Swift's satiric romance.—2. A knife or poniard: 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. trans.), ch. VI, 'Nabbed with his gully in the dead man's weasand'; † by 1890—and never gen.

gully, v. To tell a lie, to be a liar, to 'romance': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1895. Ex the n.

gully-raker; gully-raking. A cattle thief; cattle-thieving: Australian: 'current before 1847' (Baker, 1945): 1847, A. Harris, Settlers and Convicts; 1864, H. 3rd ed., 'The cattle being stolen out of almost inaccessible valleys, there termed gullies'; 1878, Rolf Boldrewood, Ups and Downs; 1893, F & H; by 1910, ob. and no longer c. Compare the Australian up-country s. sense, 'a cattle-whip'.

gulpin, 'a dupe', 'a too credulous person', 'a softy': despite H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 1841, this is not c. but S.E., now †.

gum, n. Gum-opium: 1925, Leverage; 1933, Ersine, 'Opium that may be chewed like gum'; extant.—2. Short for gumshoe, n.: 1925, Leverage, 'Gums, n.pl., Gumshoe individuals; sneaks'; extant.

gum, v., 'to deceive or impose on (a person)', is not c. but s.—2. To eat opium, esp. gum-opium: 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. imm. ex sense 1 of then.

gum(-)heel. A detective; a policeman: since ca. 1928. Castle, 1938. Cf. gumshoe.

gum shoe. See gumshoe.

gummer. See gummers.

gummers. Trouser-braces (in American, suspenders): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1931, IA; extant. A reference to the elastic employed in making them.—2. 'Soft or rubber shoes worn by sneak-thieves,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, IA; by 1940, (low) s. Ex their india-rubber soles; cf. creepers and sneaks.

gummy, n. Medicine: 1893, F & H; ob. Short for gummy stuff.—2. The sense 'glue' is pitchmen's s. (The Saturday Evening Post, Oct. 19, 1939, 'Alagazam'.—3. A hanger-on: tramps': 1931, Stiff, 'A bum who goes along with the crowd but never contributes'; extant. He sticks.

gummy, adj. Thick-headed, muzzy, dull: 1925, Leverage; by 1940, low s. Ex gum, n., 1, cf. :—

gummy stuff. Medicine: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, where it is spelt gummey-stuff; 1893, F & H; † by 1920. Ex viscous medicines.

gump. A chicken: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, "'I've got a gump in my bindle.'" He unrolled his blankets and produced a live chicken, big and fat'; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, Stiff, citing George Liebst's poem, 'The Hobo's Convention'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'A chicken; any fowl'; 1934, Convict; April 1944, American Speech, Otis Ferguson; extant. Cf. American dialect gump, 'a silly, stupid fellow'.

gump glommer. A chicken thief; hence, any petty thief: since ca. 1915. Ersine. See gump and glom.

gump-stew. Chicken-stew: 1925, Leverage; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant. See gump.

gumshoe, n. A detective: 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, has 'gum-shoe guy'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'gum-shoe—a detective'; 1924, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, where it is applied to a railroad-company detective; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1931, Stiff, 'There is the public detective or the "gum shoe"', "dick", or whatever his tag may be'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Sept. 2, 1933, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly; by 1936—if not, indeed, by 1930—police and journalistic s. He walks softly, silently; often in gumshoes.

gumshoe, v.i. To sneak about: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1935, low s. Imm. ex the n.—2. (Hence?, but prob. direct ex the n.) To be, to act as, a detective: perhaps c. of ca. 1915–25; thereafter, police and journalistic s., as in Great Detective Cases (p. 96), 1929.—3. V.t., to spy on, to observe: since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex sense 1 of the n.

gumshoe guy; gumshoe man. A detective: the former in A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, 1906, and the latter in G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: almost certainly s. by ca. 1930. See gumshoe, n., which they elaborate.

gun, n. 'A view; look; observation; or taking notice; as, there is a strong gun at us, means, we are strictly observed': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1920, in Britain: in C. 20 U.S.A., 'the state of being on guard. "Get on the gun!"': Ersine, 1933. Prob. ex sense 1 of the v.—1a. Hence, 'An expedition for the purpose of rifling a wallet or two is called a "gun"', H. W. Corley, 'Pickpockets'—Flynn's, March 2, 1929; extant.—2. A thief: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1859, H; by 1859, current in New York—see Matsell's Vocabulum; Oct. 7, 1865, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail, (inscription in a prison cell) 'London for sharpers, Brummagem for thieves, Paris for flymen, Sheffield for pitchers of snyde, signed by Darkey, the gun, from Wandsworth Road, for a bust'; 1889, B & L; 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo; 1899, Flynt, Tramping (p. 388), 'A professional thief'; 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey (U.S.A.); 1900, Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Cloud, 'Said "Susan the Gun" to her guests...'; 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief;

1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, where it is spelt gon; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1925, Leverage (gon and gun); 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine (as gon); 1934, Rose; in C. 20, also Canadian. Abbr. of gonnof.—3. Hence, a bungling or amateur pickpocket: 1859, H; app. † by 1900.—4. (A specialization of sense 2.) A pickpocket: mid-C. 19–20: 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, 'Hooks.—These individuals, who are also known as "gunns" and "buzzers", in prison slang, constitute the pickpocket class in its various specialities'; 1893, No. 747; 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood (U.S.A.); 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); Dec. 1918, The American Law Review ('Criminal Slang'); 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'The Gun is a . . . first-class crook . . . usually . . . living in the tramp class to avoid apprehension'; 1924, G. C. Henderson; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1928, Jim Tully, Circus Parade; May 1928, The American Mercury; 1934, Convict; 1937, E. H. Sutherland; extant.—5. (A generalization from sense 2.) A fellow, a chap: American tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); ibid., 'The Tramps' Jargon' (p. 388)—Flynt, however, makes it clear that this term of address is applied, properly, only to thieves; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Any hard character'; Aug. 15, 1931, Flynn's (C. W. Willemse); ob.—6. In the Bowery (New York), it is short for big gun: 1903, Owen Kildare, My Mamie Rose, 'Every man, who has lived all his life on the Bowery, as I have, knows that "gun" means an important personage. A millionaire is a "gun", so is a prominent lawyer, or a politician, or a famous crook; in short, anybody who is foremost in his profession or calling, be he statesman or thief, is a "gun"'; but this sense is s. (perhaps, orig., low s.), not c.—7. A revolver: C. 20: 1904 (implied in gun, push a); 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison; by 1920, low s.; by 1925, gen. s. Perhaps ex shot-gun.—8. A hypodermic needle: 1909, Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery (see doctor, n., 2)—an adumbration of the 'needle' sense; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict, who equates gun with 'hypodermic syringe'; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full, '"I'm on the gun," I said, meaning the syringe'; extant. Cf. 'a shot of dope'.—9. A gunman: U.S. gangsters': Aug. 15, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse; 1933, Ersine; March 25, 1933, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly; by 1935, police and journalistic s.—10. (Ex senses 2, 4, and perhaps 10.) 'A professional criminal of any kind,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: since ca. 1931.

gun, v. 'To gun any thing, is to look at or examine it': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, 'Do you not see we are gunned? an expression used by thieves when they think they are being watched'; by 1859, current in U.S.A.—Matsell, 'To watch; to examine; to look at'; 1887, Baumann; by 1889 (B & L), in U.S.A., it was detectives' s., but also it was still, in 1904, convicts'

c. (No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, has 'Gunning. On the look-out') and still-free criminals' c. as late as 1914 (Jackson & Hellyer)—indeed, as recently as 1934 (see quot'n at gander, v., where it is v.i.—and Ersine, 1933, defines it as 'to be on guard, to watch warily'). The origin presents a problem. The word may perhaps derive ex Southern-English dial. gunny, 'to eye carefully; look at shrewdly': but I suggest that the verb derives ex the S.E. gun, via the process of carefully sighting a gun: one peers along the barrel.—2. '"To gun", to do "crooked work" (thieving)': U.S.A.: Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899, 'The Tramps' Jargon'; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; slightly ob. Ex gun, n., 2.—3. Hence (U.S.A.) as in 'He began to "gun", which means to pick pockets', Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 4 of the n.—4. 'To use a revolver; to seek with a revolver; to shoot,' Leverage, 1925: Am. c. of ca. 1910–25, then s. Ex gun, n., 7.—5. To use a hypodermic syringe (esp., for the administration of a drug): U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex gun, n., 8.

gun, in the. 'He's in the gun, he is drunk, perhaps from an allusion to a vessel called a gun, used for ale in the universities,' Grose, 1785: not c., but s.

gun, on the. Engaged in pickpocketry or in other skilful theft: 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, '"I was jest a little sucker to keep on the gun when there was jobs like this one"'—big 'easy money'—"laying around loose"; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex gun, n., 4, and v., 2.

gun, push a. 'Hold on! Don't push that gun. . . . Stop! Don't shoot!', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (p. 264), 1904; † by 1940. See gun, n., 7.

gun boat. A steel coal-car: tramps': since ca. 1905. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Superficial shape-resemblance.—2. 'An empty tin can, used in the "jungles" for cooking, carrying water or liquor, or for boiling the clothes,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1914. 'Except that the container is made of metal, there seems to be no reason for the name' (Irwin).

gun bull. 'One of the "gun bulls" ([armed] guards, who patrol the walls themselves) let his gun sink comfortably into the crook of his arm and began a conversation with the "ground bull" who had been detailed to guard us,' James Spenser, Limey, 1933: convicts', esp. at San Quentin: since ca. 1910: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; 1938, Castle; extant. See bull, n., 5, and gun, n., 7.

gun joint. A place, a building, frequented by thieves (esp. pickpockets): 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'Whenever I went . . . to a gun joint, a feeling of disgust passed over me. I pity my old pals, but they no longer interest me'; Aug. 29, 1925, Flynn's, John P. McDonald, 'A "gun joint"—a place where thieves met either before or after crimes'; extant. See gun, n., 2 and 4, and joint, 1 and 3.

gun-maker. 'A Fagin; instructor of young thieves', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; ob. See gun, n., 2 and 3.

gun man or gun-man or gunman. 'They looked like gunmen (thieves) to Pat's practised eye,' Barclay Northcote in Flynn's, July 11, 1925; ob. Cf. gun, n., 2 and 4.—2. 'In prison, any man who is charged with robbery while armed,' Ersine, 1933.

gun mob. A gang of pickpockets: 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, "How you ever got in with a 'gun-mob' gets me, George," augmented Morgenstein; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; July 23, 1927, Flynn's, Henry Leverage ('Queer Money'), 'He was a dip, a pickpocket, a wire for a gun, or leather-weeding mob'; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, who postulates a preceding gon(-) mob; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Now used to designate any "mob" . . . of . . . thieves'; 1934, Convict; Sept. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Convict 12627; 1938, Convict 2nd; extant. See gun, n., 4.

gun moll. A woman herself a criminal, or one who, without being actively a criminal, associates closely with criminals: 'In a version of Frankie & Johnny popular in the 1890's,' Jean Bordeaux, letter of Oct. 23, 1945; 1912, Alfred Henry Lewis, Apaches of New York (see quot'n at hanger); 1916, Arthur Stringer, The Door of Dread, 'Yuh were a crook . . . and yuh made me a crook! . . . Yuh were ready to use me for your dirty work. Yuh made me into a gun-moll'; 1918, Leon Livingston; 1918, Arthur Stringer; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang' (a woman thief); 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'Gun Moll . . . A dangerous woman tramp'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Woman pickpocket'; 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; 1925, Leverage, 'Gun Moll, n. A woman who carries a revolver . . . A woman pickpocket'; Dec. 4, 1926, Flynn's; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1928, Chicago May, 'Gun Molls—women who steal from men in the street, br carry guns'; 1928, John O'Connor; Sept. 21, 1929, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; Aug. 8, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A crook's consort . . . Often a woman thief, especially if she carries a revolver . . . A woman vagrant who carries a gun for protection'—but he makes it clear that the predominant nuance is that of 'a criminal's woman, carrying his revolver and thus helping him to evade, or to baffle, suspicion'; Aug. 15, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse, 'She provides a front for the gangster when he moves in public'; 1933, Ersine, 'A gunman's woman. She sometimes carries his rod'; 1933, Eagle; Nov. 10, 1934, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; and so very often since! By 1940, however, the term could no longer be apprehended as c.

gun out. To shoot (somebody): 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. gun, v., 4.

gun-powder. See gunpowder.

gun smith or gun-smith or gunsmith. A variant of gunner: 1893, F & H; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.), 'An armed burglar'; slightly ob. Cf. gun man.

Gunga Din. The chin: mostly Pacific Coast: since ca. 1910. M & B, 1944. Rhyming. Ex Kipling's famous character.

gunja. See dokka.

gunman. See gun man.

gunn. A rare variant of gun, n. (2-4).

gunnel(l)s. Trusses under a railroad freight car: tramps' (and perhaps yeggs'): since middle 1890's: 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Stiff, 'The rods or trucks of a train where hobos ride'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Perhaps introduced by 'sea stiffs' (as a sailorly pronounciation of gunwale); perhaps!

gunner. A common thief: 1889 (see grass-hopper); 1893, F & H; app. † by 1930. An extension of gun, n., 2 (and perhaps 3); cf. gun, v., 1.—2. A gunman: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; ob.

gunnif. See gonnof, reference of 1889.

gunning. See gun, v., 1.

gunoving. See gonnophing.

gunpowder. 'an old woman', is perhaps low s., not c.: 1698, B.E. does not classify it as c., though this may be an oversight; from its appearance in A New Canting Dict., 1725, one can make no sure deduction; Grose, 1785, says that it is c.; its use in The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull, 1827, indicates the status of c.: 'The old woman (or, as her son James used to call her, Gunpowder) was noted for her dexterity in shop-lifting, and, latterly, for stealing pewter-pots from public-houses'.

gunsel or gunshel or gunsil. See gonsil.

gunsmith. See gun smith.

guntzel. See gonsil.

gurrell. 'Here they'—the professional thieves of London—'assemble in the evening . . . to share their spoils—to joke and tell how neatly the skins (purses) were drawn from the kicks (trousers pockets), the thimbles (watches) from the gurrells (fobs)'. 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 138; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; † by 1910.

gut. In describing a 'jungle', Nels Anderson, in The Hobo, 1923, says, 'Now and then . . . someone will shout, asking if anybody wants some. spuds or a piece of punk or a piece of "gut" (sausage); and usually there is an affirmative answer'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'From the fact this food is packed in the [guts or] intestines of the animals' (Irwin).

gut a house. 'Gutting an House, Rifling it, Clearing it,' B.E., 1698; A New Canting Dict., 1725; Grose, ' . . . Clearing it of its furniture': prob. not c. (for B.E. and Grose seem to imply that it is, at any rate, not c.) but a s. development of the S.E. sense. The same applies to gut a quart pot, 'to drink it off', and gut an oyster, 'to eat it'.

gut-butcher. See gut-reamer.

gut hammer. 'a meal bell or dinner gong in a construction or labour camp': not c., but labourers' s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

gut plunge. 'A trip to the butcher to beg meat for "milligan"'. Any kind of scrap meat will do,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910. See gut.

gut(-)reamer; also gut-butcher, -stretcher, -stuffer. 'An active pederast,' says Kane (Dialect Notes, 'The Jargon of the Underworld'), who, 1927, lists all four terms: C. 20: 1931, Godfrey Irwin (the first only).

gut-reaming, n., corresponds to prec.: C. 20. BVB, 1942.

gutlers. See guttlers.

guts. Courage: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar (see quot'n at lose one's guts); by 1920, no longer c., except in come one's guts and lose one's guts. Adopted ex English s., where guts may be physiologically and semantically compared with pluck.—2. Synonymous with gunnells (train trusses), q.v.: tramps': since ca. 1918. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Normally, unseen.—3. (Ex 1.) Effrontery: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. gall.

guts, belch one's. See belch . . .

guts, come one's. See come one's guts.

guts, lose one's. See lose one's guts.

guts, spew one's. To inform to the police, esp. concerning one's friends: since ca. 1930. Part-ridge, 1938. Cf. belch—and spill—one's guts.

guts, spill one's. See spill . . .

gutter. 'Porter' (the drink), says Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859: but this may be an error for gatter, though possibly, as F & H (1893) propose, it is a derivative therefrom.—2. 'The addict who shoots stuff into the veins is said to be a gutter, or main-liner,' Convict, 1934: drug addicts': since ca. 1925. A vein is likened to the gutter at the side of the road or on a house; cf. main-liner.

gutter hotel. The open air; sleeping in the open air: tramps': 1893, F & H; very ob. Cf. hedge square.

gutter hype. 'A very low user of cocaine,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: since ca. 1920. Gutter: self-explanatory. Hype = hyp(odermic needle), but cf. hype, n. 1.

gutter-lane, or G.-L. 'The throat': not c. but s. gutter prowler. A guttersnipe: not c. but s.—2. Hence, a street thief: 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; by 1920, no longer c.

gutter snipe. 'Footman or Groom': tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; † by 1940. Derisive of the footman's duty, or the groom's, of standing at the kerb or in the gutter to open the carriage, or the motor-car, door and of escorting milady to or from the house, from or to the vehicle.

gutters is a misprint for the next. See rum guttlers, ref. of 1848.

gut(t)lers. Liquor: app. only in the combination rum guttlers, q.v.

guvner, made. See governor . . .

guy, n. A dark lantern: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'An allusion to Guy Faux, the principal actor in the gunpowder plot. Stow the guy: conceal the lanthorn'; by the 1850's, current in the U.S.A.—witness Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; by 1893 (F & H), it was low s. in England. With reference to Guy Fawkes.—2. See guy, do a. Independently in Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow, 1903: in this rare independent use, it prob. remained c. until ca. 1910.—3. A victim of a 'green goods' swindle, etc.: U.S.A.: 1898 (see come on); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (a sucker, a chump); † by 1930. Ridiculous—like the guy on Guy Fawkes night.—4. A fellow, a chap: American tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft (general c.); 1904, Life in Sing Sing; by 1905, low s.; by 1910, ordinary s. Ex guy, English s. for 'a ridiculously dressed person' (itself ex Guy Fawkes).—5. A convict that has escaped from prison: 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow, 'For this attempt the "guy" suffered sixteen days' punishment, the loss of all privileges, and three months' additional imprisonment'; app. † by 1940. Ex guy, v.; cf. guy, do a, 1.

guy, v. 'I had not been there a month before I planned with another boy to guy (run away)': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1889, B & L; by 1893 (F & H), low s. Cf. guy, do a.

guy, adj. 'Too familiar': No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; † by 1930. Ex senses 3 and 4 of the n.

guy, do a; make a (or one's) guy. To make off, to run away; to escape: 1885, Arthur Griffiths, Fast and Loose, '“Well, master, that's your affair; we will help him to make his 'guy', only you must pay us our price”'; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary), 'To run away Do a guy'; 1889, B & L; 1891, F & H (at do); by 1893 (F & H) it was low s. Cf. guy, v.; prob. there is a reference to guy, n., 1.—2. To do a guy also = 'to give a false name' (F & H, 1893); † by 1930.

guzzle. To kill, to murder; to shoot (dead): 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls, 'Gloomy Gus Smallwood, who is a very large operator in the alcohol business there, is guzzled right at his front door'; 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy; extant. To fill with lead.—2. To throttle, choke: 1933, Ersine; ob. Cf. sense 4.—3. To drink: 1933, Ersine; by 1940, low s. Cf. —4. To eat (food) hurriedly: 1934, Convict; extant. Ex the S.E. sense.—5. (Ex sense 1.) To question by the strong-arm method: 1934, Rose; extant.—6. 'Anna had just been "guzzled" (that is, arrested)': Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941: since the 1920's.

guzzle the grape, 'to drink champagne' (George Bronson-Howard, The Snob, ca. 1912): rather is it low s. than c.

guzzler. A professional killer; a criminal with homicidal tendencies: Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; extant. Ex guzzle, 1.

gybe or jybe, n. A counterfeit licence to beg; a false pass(port): 1562, Awdeley (gybe); Harman, 1566 (gybe); 1608–9, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie' in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'Gybe, a writing'; 1612, Dekker (see bene feakers of gybes); 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Jybe well jerekt' and, in the glossary, the definition, 'Any writing or pass'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1714, Alex. Smith; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose, 'Gybe, or jybe, any writing or pass with a seal'; † by 1870. Perhaps cf. Ger. schreiben, 'to write'—by a perversion of the first syllable.

gybe, v.; usually in passive. To punish, esp. by imprisonment; to whip, esp. in prison: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (at dawb), 'The Cull was gybbed, because he could not dawb. The Rogue was punished, because he had no Pence to bribe off his Sentence'; app. † by 1820. Perhaps ex S.E. gibe (as v.t.), 'to taunt or flout'; cf. jib, v.

gyger and gygger. See gigger. (Harman, 1566, has both these spellings.)

gygg. See gigg, 3.

gyle. See gile.

gyming (pron. jim-ming). See Jem Mace gyp, n. For sense 'a thief', see gip.—2. A trick; a fraud: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A confidence game'; by 1935, s.—3. Hence (?), a confidence trickster: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, it too was s.—4. (Ex 2, 3.) A thief: 1933, Ersine; by 1940, s.

gyp, v. To trick; to defraud: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, R. Jordan, 'Idioms'; 1925, Leverage, 'Gip, v., To deal in horses or autos'; by 1930, s. Prob. ex sense 2 of the n.—2. Hence, to steal: 1933, Ersine; by 1940, low s.

gyp joint. See grab joint. Since ca. 1910.

gypper; also jipper. A horse-dealer: 1925, Leverage (jipper); extant. Cf. gyp, v.

gyppo. 'A sub-contractor with poor equipment, but who may be good to work for,' Stiff, 1931:

tramps': since ca. 1920. Perhaps ironically ex gyp, n., 3.—2. The sense 'a piece-worker' is I.W.W. s.—not c. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.)

Gypsies are, by A New Canting Dict., 1725, made the 58th Order of Canters: the term itself, however, has always been S.E.—an Englishing of Egyptians.

Gypsy stand-off. A fortune: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. A fortune told by a Gypsy.

gyve. 'Marijuana cigarettes have a dozen names. Right now they are "sticks, reefers, Mary Anns, tea, gyves, gauge- or goofy-butts",' Meyer Berger in The New Yorker, March 12, 1938; ob. Marijuana, a narcotic, gyves or shackles—enchains—its victims.

H

H. Heroin: drug addicts' and peddlers': since early 1920's: 1929, Givens; June 21, 1930, Flynn's, 'A shipment of "M" or "C" or "H"''; 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man; 1934, Ferd. Tuohy, Inside Dope—by this time, it was police and journalistic s. Note.—'The morphine and cocaine users are not given to violence. All they seek is to nest somewhere in peace and doze and dream, and dream and doze. It is the heroin user who is dangerous. He is stirred to action . . . He is the sort of hold-up man who murders his victim first and robs him afterwards,' Charles Somerville, 'Detective "8 Ball"'—in Flynn's, Nov. 29, 1930.

H.M.C. A mixture of H, M, and C (cocaine): drug traffic: since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942. The M represents morphine.

habbled is a misprint for hobbled.

habit. A craving for drugs; thence, the need therefor: from before 1912 (see fierce habit); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Sickness of a narcotic addict deprived of drug'; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'The sufferings they would undergo where there was no more [drug] and the "habit" came on'; 1928, Jim Tully, Circus Parade, 'Life was to him, except when he had "a habit on", a dream that had broken in the middle and left him dazed'; 1929, Givens, 'An addict is "on the habit"''; June 7, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor; 1934, Convict; by 1936, police and journalistic s. Short for drug habit.

habit, be kicking a; also have a habit (BVB). To suffer from the craving for drugs, as a result of inability to procure them: drug addicts': since the 1920's: 1934, Convict; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road. Cf. kick it out and have a yen on, qq.v.

habit, knock the. See knock at the door.

habit off, get the. See get one's yen off.

habitual. A drug addict: 1925, Leverage; extant—but by 1940, medical coll. Ex habit, or perhaps short for habitual drug-taker.

hack, n. A night watchman: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (glossary, s.v. 'Police'); 1925, Leverage, 'A keeper in prison; a watchman; a policeman'; 1929, Jack Callahan (see night hack); July 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A night watchman; a patrolman or marshal'; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer, 'A watchman . . .; a prison guard'; 1934, Convict (prison guard); 1934, Rose (id.); 1935, Hargan (id.); extant. 'Mere hack workers' in the eyes of the underworld.—2. Hence (?), a caboose: 1925, Leverage; extant.—3. An automobile: 1929, Givens (see boat, n., 2); 1931, IA; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; June 22, 1935, Flynn's, Richard B. Sale; extant.

hack, v. To be a highwayman: 1659, Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, '[The Damme Captain] can likewise (if occasion serve) Hack and Pad, not regarding how much he sets his Country on the score for it'; app. † by 1720. Ex S.E. hack, 'to cut clumsily or brutally; to mangle'. —2. To drive a taxi, be a taximan: U.S.A.: Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; Nov. 1931, IA; extant. Ex sense 3 of the n.

hackie. A taximan: Feb. 1, 1930, Flynn's, Robert H. Rohde, 'The Red Duke Takes a Ride'; June 27, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse, 'Behind the Green Lights'—applied, ca. 1902, to 'a hackney-cab driver': which explains the origin and indicates the status: urban s.

hackster, 'cut-throat or swashbuckler', is S.E.; but the following sense in 'Cuthbert Cunnycatcher', The Defence of Conny catching, 1592, seems to be genuine c. and prob. of ca. 1580–1620:—'Is there not heere resident about London, a crew of terryble Hacksters in the habite of Gentlemen, wel appareld, and yet some weare bootes for want of stockings, with a Locke worne at theyr left eare for their mistrisse favour, his Rayper Alla revolto, his Poynado pendent ready for the stab, and cavileuarst like a warlike Magnifico; yet . . . you shal never take them with a penny in theyr purse. Then Souldados, for under that profession most of them wander, have a pollicie to scourge Ale-houses, for where they light in, they never leape out, till they have shewed theyr Arithmatike with chalke on every post in the house . . . Now sir, they have sundry shifts to maintaine them in this versing, for eyther they creep in with the goodwife, and so undo the Goodman, or else they beare it out with great brags if the Host be simple, or else they trip him in some wordes when he is tipsy, that he hath spoken against some Justice of the peace . . . or some other great man: and then they hold him at bay with that, til his backe almost breake. Thus shift they from house to house, having this proverbe amongst them: Such must eate as are hungry and they must pay that have money.'

Hackum or h-. A 'fighting Fellow', B.E., 1698; B.E., however, adds, 'See Captain Hackum'. It is doubtful whether this term had any existence except in that phrase.

had, ppl adj. See have.

had 'em. See haddums.

haddock, 'a purse', may orig. have been c., but prob. it was low s.: 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A haddock stuff'd with beans, is a jocular term for a purse full of guineas!'; it recurs in Ainsworth's Rookwood, 1834. Ex the shape.

Haddums or had 'ems; or H-. As in B.E., 1698, 'The Spark has been at Haddums, He is Clapt, or Poxt'; surviving until ca. 1840, this term existed only as part of the catch phrase, which, in C. 18-19, appears usually as to have been at Had 'em and come home by Clap 'em (Hadham; Clapham); rather than c., it was prob. merely low s. By a pun: cf. come home by Weeping Cross in my Dict. of Slang.

haggard. Such a prospective victim of cony-catchers as will not take the swindlers' bait: see 'Browne's cant vocabulary' for period and associations. Derived ex the S.E. sense, 'A wild (female) hawk caught when in her adult plumage', hence 'a wild and intractable person' (O.E.D.).

hair, get one's. To be allowed, on the approach of release from prison, to grow one's hair long again: convicts': 1895, Arthur Griffiths, Criminals I Have Known; ob. Cf. grow one's feathers.

hair and brain. A chain: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

hair(-)cut; haircut. Syphilis: 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex the hair cut from about the genitals.

hair pin. A woman: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

hair pounder. A teamster, a mule-driver: rather is it construction-camp s. than c., even though tramps use the term. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

haircut. See hair cut.

hairy float. A coat: Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

hairy goat. Throat: mainly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

half. A (counterfeit) half-guinea piece: counterfeiters': 1800 (see small one); app. † by 1900. Cf. whole.—2. Ten shillings: 1931, Brown; extant. Prob. ex coll. half a note.

half a bar. See bar.

half a bean; half bean. Half a guinea: 1799, Sessions Papers, June (p. 419), 'A few queer half beans and a few whites'; 1811, Lex. Bal. (the latter); 1812, J. H. Vaux (the former); 1823, Egan's Grose (latter); † by 1840. See bean.—2. Hence, half a sovereign: 1859, H; † by 1910.

half a bord(e). 'Halfe a borde, sixe pence,' Harman, 1566; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1688, Randle Holme; (1698, B.E.; halfbord); † by 1830. See bord.

half a bull. A half-crown: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; 1859, H; † by 1900. See bull, n., 1.

half-a-C. 'A fifty-dollar bill is called a half-a-C,' Convict, 1934: C. 20. Also in, e.g., Rose, 1934, and Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 1936. Ex C, 2.

half a C note is a Canadian variant of prec. (Anon. letter, June 1, 1946.)

half a case. A bad half-crown: 1839, Brandon; 1859, H; 1890, F & H; slightly ob. See case, n., 5.

half a check. Half a dollar: 1934, Convict; extant.

half a couter. Half a sovereign: prob. since the 1820's: 1859, H; very ob. See cooter.

half a glass. See glass, 2.

half a grand. 500 dollars: 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; ob. In the 1930's and 1940's, this sum is more usually called five yards (see yard). See grand.

half a grunter. Sixpence: 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; † by 1910. See grunter, 2.

half a hog. Sixpence: 1698, B.E.; 1707, J.

Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; by 1870, low s. See hog, 1.—2. Hence, 'a five-cent piece': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1930.

half a job. See job.

half a lick. Ill; suffering from nausea: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on sick.

half a ned. Half a guinea: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1900. See ned.—2. Hence, in U.S.A.: 'a five-dollar gold piece': 1859, Matsell; † by 1910.

half a peck. The neck: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

half a quid. Half a guinea: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1890. See quid.

half a stretch. Six months in prison: 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London, in form half stretch; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life; 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life; 1925, E. Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons; 1943, Brown; extant. See stretch, n.

half a ton. Fifty pounds sterling: black market and gamblers': since ca. 1944. In, e.g., Alan Hoby's article in The People, April 8, 1946. See ton.

half a toosh. See toosh.

half a tosh. A half-crown: 1931, Brown; extant. Ex:—

half a tusheroon; half tusheroon. 'Half-tusheroon, n. Half a crown': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H (the former); by 1890, low s. See tossaroon, tusheroon.

half a yard. Fifty dollars: May 9, 1931, Flynn's, Lawrance M. Maynard, 'On the Make'; extant. See yard, n.

half an hour. Flour: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

half an ounce. Half-a-crown: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1901. See ounce.

half an ox. See ox.

half-ass meal. An inferior meal: convicts': since ca. 1920: 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; extant. The American form of 'half-ar-se'.

half bar, half a bar. Ten shillings: see bar.

half bean. See half a bean.

half board. See:—

half bord(e). Sixpence: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E. (halfbord); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (id.); 1785, Grose (halfbord); 1796, Grose, 3rd ed. (h. board); 1797, Potter (id.); by 1860, †. See bord.

half-bound is an error for half bord. Andrewes, 1809.

half-bull. Sessions Papers, Jan. 1784, at p. 262, 'With him, half-crowns were half-bulls': 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London; 1830, Sessions Papers, 1824-33, VI; July 1861, Sessions Papers; by 1865, low s. Cf. half a bull.

half-bull white. See large white.

half case. A half-crown: 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; by 1878 (A. Pinkerton, Strikers, Communists, Tramps and Detectives), it was current in U.S.A.: by 1890, low s. in Britain. See case, n.

half-century. (A sum of) fifty pounds: 1879 (see pap); by 1920, low s. Ex:—2. Fifty dollars:

U.S.A.: 1859 (see century); 1871, State Prison Life; by 1900, low s. See century.

half-flash and half-foolish. 'This character is applied sarcastically to a person, who has a smattering of the cant language, and having associated a little with family people, pretends to a knowledge of life which he really does not possess, and by this conduct becomes an object of ridicule among his acquaintance': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; app. † by 1890. See flash, adj., 1 and 2.

half-fly flats; rarely singular. 'Roughs ready to be hired to do the dirty work of thieves': 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H, 'A thief's jackal'; ob. Cf. fly flat.

half fushme. Half-a-crown: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob. See fushme.

half G. Five hundred dollars: Dec. 29, 1934, Flynn's, Convict 12627, 'I won a half G once on a horse called "Bad Luck"'; by 1936, no longer c. See G.

half-inch, v. To steal: orig. (late C. 19), c., but by 1910, if not sooner, it had > (low) s. Rhyming s. on 'to pinch'.

half James. See James, 2.

half-Jimmy, 'half a sovereign': low s., rather than c.: late C. 19–20. Jimmy is short for Jimmy O'Goblin, rhyming s. for 'sovereign'.

half-load. A half-crown piece (?); perhaps a packet of counterfeit half-crowns: mostly counterfeiters': Dec. 13, 1892, Sessions Papers, 'He produced three packets of bad half-crowns from his left trousers pocket, each containing ten—he said, "That is all I have got, three half loads"'; extant. See load.

half nab. A venture; hesitation: ca. 1790–1850. Potter; Andrewes; Sinks of London (h. nap). This may be c.—or it may not. See nab, n.

half(-)ned. A half-guinea coin: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; prob. † by 1840, except as a remembered term. See ned.

half-nib. One who apes gentility or importance; also, a gentleman that has come down in the world: 1812, J. H. Vaux, who cites half-swell (but this is s.) as a synonym; † by 1890. See nib, n., 2.

half ounce. See ounce, ref. of 1821.

half piece. A half-ounce of drugs: addicts': C. 20. BVB. Ex the relevant piece.

half(-)scrag. A half-caste gypsy: the half-scrag, half-caste gypsies in general, or half-blood: 1893, No. 747, 'Charley was a posh-rawt, one of the half-scrag'—the ref. being valid for ca. 1865.

half siat. See slat, 2.

half stretch. See half a stretch.

half thicken (or thickun). See thick one.

half tusheroon. See half a tusheroon.

half uncle. See big uncle.

half-woolled. See woolled.

halfbord. See half bord.

halfy. A tramp or hobo train-rider that has lost both legs below the knee: 1923, The Hobo, by Nels Anderson, quoting Leon Livingston (1918); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A beggar with both legs off at the hips; any legless individual'; extant. He is, physically, but half a man.

Hall. See Doctor Hall.

hallelujah band, the. Those convicts who, to make their sentence easier, affect piety—e.g., they sing lustily in chapel: 1880, An Ex-Convict, Our Convict System; ob. Ex the Hallelujah chorus.

hallelujah peddler. A minister of the church; one who tries to 'sell' salvation: mostly tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. prec.

halls, work the. "To work the halls" . . . describes the activities of men and women who steal umbrellas, clothing, or anything valuable on hall-stands—usually having called as a pedler,' David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open, 1935; extant.

haltering place, the. That part of the head which is immediately under the left ear: ca. 1770–1880: perhaps c. but prob. s. Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811, 'Tip him a stoter in the haltering place; . . . under the left ear'. The hangman's noose is set closely against it.

ham, n. A loafer: 1888, The Missouri Republican, March 27, cited by F & H, 1893; app. † by 1900.—2. The senses 'an inexperienced telegraph operator' (the primary sense), 'a poor actor', 'an inefficient worker'—all these are s. (Ex ham-handed.) ham, v. To seize; to knock down: 1786, Sessions Papers, 8th session, p. 1326, 'There lay two as notorious villains as himself; they cried out immediately, ham him, and murder him; upon which he came to lay hold of me'; † by 1900. Ex 'to hamstring'.—2. To walk: tramps' (perhaps orig. yeggs'): U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. For the semantics, cf. ham-cases. 'To travel by means of the ham or leg' (Irwin).

ham and beef, the. The chief warder: convicts': C. 20. In, e.g., Jim Phelan, Murder by Numbers, 1941. Rhyming on chief.

ham and eggs. (Virtually always of a girl's) legs: South Africa: C. 20. Private letter, May 22, 1946. Rhyming.

ham-cases. Breeches: 1785, Grose; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; † by 1900. They encase the hams.

ham-fatter, 'an amateur (in crime)': low s. rather than c. In, e.g., Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 1929.

hames. A necktie: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Ex that part of a horse's harness.

hamlet. 'A High Constable,' B.E., 1698; 1785, Grose—but the term was prob. † by 1760. Is this, by any chance, a derivative of Hamlet, Prince of Denmark?—2. Hence, in U.S.A.: 'a captain of police': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; † by 1920.

hammer, down as a. See down as a hammer.

hammer and tack. The back: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

hammerish is a synonym of down as a hammer: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1900.

hammers to (a person), be. A U.S. phrase (—1794), explained in Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807, 'I'm hammers to ye . . . I know what you mean'; app. † by 1880. Cf. down, adj. and n., and esp. down as a hammer.

hams. Breeches: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859, 'Hams. Pants'; 1889, B & L; app. † by 1910. They enclose the men's thighs or hams.

hand. 'Member of a mob; used especially when designating the number of members in a mob, as "three-handed";' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: since ca. 1910.

hand, by. On foot: 1933, Ersine, 'We did the last ten miles by hand'; by 1935, s. l.e., by natural, not by mechanical means.

hand, old. See old hand.

hand a mouthful. 'I felt too ill to "hand him a mouthful"', as the lags term insolence, Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows, 1939: since ca. 1920.

hand it to. To shoot at: 1912, Alfred Henry Lewis, Apaches of New York (see quot'n at geek); ob. Ironical on the coll. sense, 'to offer'.

hand like a fist. A hand full of trump cards: card-sharpers': 1893, F & H; extant. Fist connotes a containing—of something worth the having.

hand(-)organ. A Thompson sub-machine gun: 1929-31, Kernôt; extant. Cf. English s. Chicago piano, a multiple pom-pom.

hand out. "'Bummers'" is the American for beggars, and a "hand out" is a portion of food handed out to a bum or a tramp at the door when he is not asked inside, Morley Roberts, The Western Avernus, 1887: beggars' and tramps' c., dating from ca. 1880 and, ca. 1890, becoming s.; by 1905, it was coll.; by 1920, it was Standard American. Hence its use in Britain: tramps': since ca. 1920: with an extension of meaning, as in 'A "hand-out" . . . Food or money,' Chris Massie, The Confessions of a Vagabond, 1931.—2. 'A steady girl with whom it is easy to have sexual intercourse,' Hargan, 1935; extant. Prob. ex sense 1, but perhaps ex hand-out, 'a Press release mimeographed and distributed when an individual or a corporation has news for the world' (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 21, 1937).

hand over. 'To cross, to drop, or bribe evidence not to appear against a culprit,' Potter, 1797: this is extremely ambiguous and slightly suspect. Andrewes, 1809, adds: 'To drop an argument, an action'. It recurs in Sinks of London, 1848—in the wake of Andrewes.

hand-saw fencer is merely a London street-s. variant of chive-fencer.

hand-shaker, 'a prison politician' (Ersine, 1933) or 'a prisoner familiar with officials' (Rose, 1934; Hargan, 1935), is a mere colloquialism. The same applies to hand-shake, 'to play up to prison officials' (Ersine, 1933).

hand the match (to someone). To warn or tell him that he is not wanted: tramps': C. 20. IA, 1931. 'From the old tramp custom of giving the intruder at a jungle a match, the unspoken request being, "Go and make a fire of your own; we don't want you"' (Godfrey Irwin).

handed a bit, be. To receive a sentence of imprisonment: 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Bit'; extant. See bit, n., 4.

handful. A five-year sentence: 1933, Eagle; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1935, Hargan; extant. It takes 'some' handling: cf. handful, 'a child difficult to control'. The primary ref., as in sense 2, is to the five 'fingers' of one hand: cf. finnif.—2. Ten pounds (in money): British: 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; but Partridge, 1938, and Black, 1943, define it as 'five pounds', which is prob. correct, for in racing c. of C. 20, handful = five, esp. five lengths (see Partridge, Slang, p. 243).

handicap. A prison sentence: Oct. 11, 1930, Flynn's, Paul Annixter, 'For a man only twenty-four hours out of the Big House, even the breaking of the Sullivan Law'—the carrying of firearms—handle, n. A nose: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; ob. Ex English low s.—2. See handles.

'meant a ten-year handicap'; extant. By a sweet meiosis.

handle, v. See handling.

handles. Side-whiskers: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant. Cf. English s. side levers.

handling. 'A method of concealing certain cards in the palm of the hand, one of the many modes of cheating practised by sharpers': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1893, F & H (as v., handle); by 1900, j. Euphemistic.

handy wagon. A police-patrol wagon or van: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. hurry buggy.

hang a rap (on). To make a charge (against someone): since the 1920's. In, e.g., Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. See rap, n.

hang-bluff. Snuff: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A., esp. New York); by 1870, low rhyming s.; † by 1930.

hang it on. 'Purposely to delay or protract the performance of any task or service you have undertaken, . . . either from natural indolence, or to answer some private end of your own': 1812, Vaux. On the marches between c. and (low) s. Cf. hang it on with.

hang it on the limb; hang one's time on a bush. To escape from prison: convicts': since ca. 1920. Hargan, 1935 (former); 1938, Castle (latter). 'Presumably from hanging the prison clothing on a limb [of a tree] when changing to citizen's clothes after the escape?': Godfrey Irwin, in a letter of 1937.

hang it on with (a woman). 'To form a temporary connexion with her; to cohabit or keep company with her without marriage': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; app. † by 1890. Cf. hang it on.

hang it up. 'Speaking of the Reckoning at a Bowsing-ken, when the Rogues are obliged, for want of Money, to run on Tick,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, who appears, however, to consider it as gen. s., which it had prob. > by 1760; Matsell, 1859, treats it as an American underworld c.p., hang it up!, 'think of it!', 'remember it!'.

hang (e.g., a 'joint') on one's heat or rod. To burgle, or to hold up, at the point of a revolver: since ca. 1910: June 21, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens, 'The Rat' (both the heat and the rod form); extant. But in Britain of ca. 1870-1915, it meant 'to garrote; to rob, with assault, on the street'. Prompted by S.E. hold up.

hang one's time on a bush. See hang it on the limb.

hang oneself. To get oneself a bad impression—or even arrested: commercial underworld: since ca. 1930. Maurer, 1941.

hang-out, n. One's home or lodging: orig., tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary, 'The hobo's home'; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft (as 'a criminal haunt'); 1902, Flynt, The Little Brother (whether camp or lodging); by 1903 (Owen Kildare, My Mamie Rose), it was low s. Ex the v.—2. Hence, a tramps' gathering place: c. of ca. 1890-1910: then s. Leon Livingston, From Coast to Coast with Jack London, ca. 1917, in reference to cross-country trip made in 1894.—3. 'The headquarters of a gang' (Ersine, 1933): c. of ca. 1905-35, then s.

hang out, v. To reside or lodge: 1811, Lexicon

Balatronicum, 'The traps scavey where we hang out; the officers know where we live'; by 1840 or 1850, it was s. in England; but in U.S.A. it may have been c. for as long as ca. 1850-90, as, e.g., in The National Police Gazette, Oct. 7, 1865. 'In allusion to the ancient custom of hanging out signs' (H, 1859).

hang paper. To write fraudulent cheques: 1914 (implied in paper-hanger); 1933, Ersine, 'To pass worthless checks'; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, where a professional thief says that hanging paper is unprofessional—'No thief would ever use the term'.

hang the jury. 'To induce one or more [of the jurors] to "disagree" in a verdict': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; † by 1920.

hang up. See hang it up.—2. 'To rob with violence, to garrotte': 1874, H—but the phrase dates from ca. 1865; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1910. 'Most likely from throttling associations in connexion with the practice of garrotting': H.—3. To pawn: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. It is the pawnbroker who hangs it up or puts it away.

hanger. 'Quickest hand with a hanger, that outside pendant purse wherewith women equip themselves, . . . of all the gun molls between the two oceans,' A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 1912; March 2, 1929, Flynn's, "'Binging the hanger" means opening the hand bag' (H. W. Corley, 'Pickpockets'); extant. Self-explanatory. Hence:—

hanger-snatcher. A professional snatcher of women's hand-bags: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; ob. Here, hanger = that which hangs down, as a handbag from a negligent woman's hands.

hanging cull, ? 'a hangman', is mentioned by Potter, 1797, without definition; but whereas crapping cull is c., hanging cull is low s. Here, cull = fellow.

Hangman's Day. Friday: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, 'From the custom of hanging people on a Friday'; by 1900, no longer c.

hank, no. No joke: perhaps c., prob. low s.: Oct. 1928, Word-Lore, F. C. Taylor, 'The Language of Lags'. Perhaps cf. :—

hank, on the ; at a good hank. At a (considerable) advantage: coll., not c.; so too with hank, 'a hold on, or an advantage over a person'. The origin of these senses is hank, 'a skein, a coil'.

hanker after, to long for, is wrongly classified by B.E. as c.

hankins. Breeches: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; app. † by 1690. Perhaps a perversion of hangings.

hanktelo, 'a silly fellow' (Grose, 1785), is not c. but s.

Hans in Kelder. A child in its mother's womb: not c., but s. Lit., 'Jack in the cellar', ex Dutch, it is recorded by Elisha Coles in his Dictionary, 1676.

happy. Under the influence of—stupefied by—drugs: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. happy dust.

happy dossers, 'the wretched people who roam about the street houseless, and creep in to sleep on the stairs, in the passages and untenanted cellars of the lodging-houses with the doors open night and day' (G. R. Sims, How the Poor Live, 1883): not c. but London street s.

happy dust. Cocaine: mostly drug addicts': 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; 1922, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life, 'The "snow"', or "happy dust", as it is called in the underworld'; 1927, Kane; Sept. 21, 1929, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'On the Spot'; May 31, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Arthur Woods, Dangerous Drugs; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Cocaine or any other powdered narcotic'; April 8, 1933, Flynn's; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Ferd. Tuohy, Inside Dope, where it = any narcotic; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It (any narcotic); 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; by 1940, in U.S.A., police and journalistic s. Ex its effect: cf. heaven dust.—2. Hence, an opiate: since ca. 1930. BVB.

happy duster. 'Snuffers of cocaine are frequently designated as "happy dusters" because of their sense of exhilaration and satisfaction,' Emily Murphy, The Black Candle, 1922; 1925, Leverage; extant—but, by 1940, s. See happy dust.—2. A seller of cocaine: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ditto.

happy hour. A flower; usually in pl.: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

happy powder and happy stuff are occ. variants of happy dust. Kernôt, 1929-31.

hard, n. Iron: 1845, anon. translator of Eugene Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, Pt. 2, ch. XXVIII; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—Matsell, 1859, 'Hard. Metal'; † by 1920. Perhaps short for hard metal.—2. Tobacco: 1865, Thomas Archer, The Pauper, the Thief and the Convict (p. 83); 1902, James Greenwood, The Prisoner in the Dock; 1936, Richmond Harvey, Prison from Within; 1937, 'Red Collar Man', Chokey; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; ob. except in the strict sense 'chewing tobacco; plug or twist'. Orig. applied to twist or plug tobacco (in hard cakes); this has remained the correct underworld nuance.—3. Hard labour: 1889, B & L; 1890, The Globe, Feb. 26; 1893, F & H; by 1900, s.—4. Short for hardware, 1: 1893, F & H; app. † by 1930.

hard and flat. A derby: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on (derby) hat.

hard bird. A man prone to assaulting others; a 'basher': 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (Glossary, s.v. 'Assaulter'); extant.

hard-boiled, 'stern, unbending, relentless in disciplining a prison for an infraction of the prison rules' (Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing, 1928), lies on the borderline between convicts' c. and gen. prison s. A special application of the usual s. sense, 'morally tough'.

hard candy. Sleeping tablets in hospital: Sing Sing: 1935, Hargan; extant. Firm in their effect; sweet in the prospect.

hard coal (or cole). 'Silver or gold money': 1859, Matsell (latter form); 1889, B & L, '(American rhyming slang), hard coal, silver and gold, (also) . . . false coin'; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1930. See cole and contrast soft.

hard-cut. Dropped cigar-ends, picked up and used as pipe tobacco: since ca. 1890; by 1910, low s. Partridge, 1937.

hard game. A card game either between card-sharpers and good players or among card-sharpers: 1894, J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats; extant. Opposed to soft game.

hard graft. Hard labour: convicts': 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; by 1890 or, at latest, 1895, low s. See graft, n.

hard guy. A tough character: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; extant. Cf. hard bird.

hard-luck Charlie. A two-dollar bill (currency note): 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant. Perhaps because it isn't a five-dollar bill.

hard oil. Butter: tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. And when it melts it resembles (soft) oil.

hard rapper. A severe judge: 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose. Ex rap, a sentence to imprisonment.

hard-rock man, hard-rock worker. A rock-quarry worker: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: prob. rather s. than c.

hard stuff. Coin; loot in the form of cash: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; by ca. 1932, if not earlier, Canadian also (anon. letter, June 1, 1946). See stuff.

hard tacks. Commissary candy: Sing Sing: 1935, Hargan; extant. Cf. hard candy.

hard tail. Hard tails. Mules, usually old ones. So named because they show little response to the skinner's whip. Young mules are shave-tails, Stiff, 1931: tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, also records the opposed terms.

hard time. 'Time spent in prison under especially bad conditions; time which a prisoner spends in worry,' Ersine, 1933: since ca. 1915. He 'takes it hard; or, does it the hard way'.

hard-up. A man that collects cigar-ends: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'The cigar-end finders, or "hard-ups", as they are called, who collect the refuse pieces of smoked cigars from the gutters, and having dried them, sell them as tobacco to the very poor'; 1859, H; by 1880, proletarian s.—as also, in C. 20, is hard-up merchant. He is so 'hard-up' (poor) that he has to attempt a livelihood by these precarious means.—2. Tobacco: 1866, James Greenwood, A Night in a Workhouse, "He stood a quarten, and half an ounce of hard-up (tobacco)"; in C. 20, it is on the borderline between c. and street s., as in 'The Hard-up Merchant, who gathers fag-ends' (Desmond Morse-Boycott, We Do See Life!, 1931) and 'Hard-up—tobacco made from cigarette ends' (George Orwell, Down and Out, 1933). It applies to the cigarette-ends themselves (as in Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923), to pipe-tobacco made therefrom, and—as in Michael Harrison, Weep for Lycidas, 1934—to cigarettes made from cigarette-butts.

hardegat. Stubborn: South Africa: late C. 19–20. Letter of May 22, 1946, from Cyrus A. Smith. Lit., 'hard-behind' (cf. ou gut), perhaps on the analogy of S.E. 'hard-hearted'.

hardware. 'False coin': 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; ob.—2. Firearms: 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, (of a gang cornered by the police) "If we start tryin' to unload hardware and seein' coppers through the smoke, we're gone"; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1920, British—as in Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 1924; 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1925, Leverage; 1928, J. K. Ferrier, Crooks and Crime; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Weapons in general'; by 1936, cinema-goers' s. Euphemistic.—3. A burglar's tools: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant.—4. 'Liquor in dry districts,' Leverage, 1925; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1934, Rose; then merely historical.

hardware bloke; gen. pl. A Birmingham man (in Birmingham): 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; by 1900, low s. So much hardware is made there.

hardware swag. A booty of hardware (e.g., razors) exposed for sale in the street: vagabonds': 1887, H. Baumann, Londonismen; ob. See swag, n., 3.

hare it. To 'return; come back': 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H, 'To retrace one's steps; to double back'; rather ob. Ex English hare it, 'to run like a hare', i.e., constantly doubling back.

harman is an abbr. of the next term and app. occurs earliest in B.E., 1698; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'A Harmon, alias Constable'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1860, at latest, in Britain; 1903, Sylva Clapin, Americanisms; by 1920, † in U.S.A.

harman beak. 'The sheriff': 1859, Matsell; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1920. A modernized form of:—

harman beck or hyphenated or single word. 'The harman beck, the Counstable,' Harman, 1566; 1608, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie' in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'Harman bek, a Constable'; 1610, Rowlands (harman becke and harman beake); ca. 1615, Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggars' Bush, 'Let the Quire Cuffin, | And Harmon Beck trine'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Rombold by Harman beck', and in the glossary, the odd spelling harmanback; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E. defines it as a beadle; 1707, J. Shirley; 1708, John Hall, 4th ed. (harminbeck); 1714, Alex. Smith; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (as single word); 1728, D. Defoe (harmanbeck); 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1824, P. Egan; † by 1830. He who brings malefactors to the harmans.

harman(-)beckage, constables collectively; Justice as instrument: 1621, B. Jonson, A Masque of the Gipsies Metamorphos'd, 'Out of the clutch of Harman-beckage'. This is not c., but a term coined by Jonson.

harmanback (or -beck). See harman beck.

harmans. 'The harmans, the stockes,' Harman, 1566; ibid., 'So may we happen on the Harmanes, and cly the Jarke, or to the guyerken and skower quyaer cramprings, and so to tryning on the chates'; 1608, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands (harmons); 1611, Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 'By the sollaman in the Hartmans'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed. (harmin); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London—but prob. † by 1830. The origin may be hard (cf. hartmans) + c. suffix mans.

harmenbeck. See harmanbeck (reference of 1728).

harmin. See the 1708 ref. in harmans.

harminbeck. See harman beck, ref. of 1708.

harmon. See harman, ref. of 1718.

harness. Erroneously (?) for watchmen and police officers: 1848, Sinks of London.—2. Uniform: U.S.A.: 1903 (implied in harness bull); 1912 (ibid.); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage; 1935, Amos Squire, Sing Sing Doctor; extant. As harness about a horse, so uniforms about the old-time 'cops'.—3. A shoplifter's equipment or device for carrying loot under the clothing: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant.—4. A jewel-setting: U.S.A.: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'Stones out of their "harness"' ; extant. The setting is the 'gear' or the 'vehicle'.—5. 'The equipment or "rigging" worn by gamblers to hold cards up the sleeve until wanted to cheat with,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: U.S. card-sharpers': since ca. 1910.—6. A pistol, or revolver, holster: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933.

harness bull. A police officer in uniform ('harness'): 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (San Quentin, 1901-11), 'The sucker . . . brought a harness-bull to the place and L— got pinched along with one other feller'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); Dec. 1918, The American Law Review ('Criminal Slang'); 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; Feb. 7, 1925, Flynn's; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, R. Nichols & J. Tully, Twenty Below; 1928, M. Sharpe, Chicago May; April 19, 1930, Flynn's, Hal Moore; July 5, 1930, Liberty; Feb. 14, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; 1935, Hargan; and very frequently since then.

harness cop, harness copper, are occ. variants of harness bull: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win ('h. cop'); 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers ('h. copper'); 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train ('h. cop'); extant.

harness dick. A detective officer in uniform: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. harness bull.

harnessed box; h. keister. A safe protected by steel bars and levers across the front: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, M. Acklom, 'Would he prefer a harnessed box or a keister?'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (both); 1928, J. K. Ferrier, 'Crime in the United States' in his Crooks and Crime, 'A bank vault is a "harnessed box"'; extant. Ex its appearance.

harp. A woman: 1859, Matsell; † by 1900, as IA implies. Ex harp, 'the Irish expression for woman, or tail, used in tossing up in Ireland' (Grose).—2. An Irishman: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1920, s. Ex the harp traditionally associated with Ireland, e.g., on the coinage.

harpers, blind. See blind harpers.

harpoon, n. A dagger; a knife: 1925, Leverage; extant. Humorous.—2. A hypodermic syringe, used for drug-taking: drug addicts': since ca. 1930, Donald Barr Chidsey, 'The Black Stuff', in Flynn's, March 18, 1939. Perhaps, via harpoon-gun, ex gun, n., 8.

harpoon, v. To give (someone) the worst of it, to 'best' him, defeat him: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage, 'to cut; to stab'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, where, p. 638, throw the harpoon into = thrust a needle or a pin into; Jan. 27, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan, who uses it to mean 'to swindle'; March 9, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington; May 9, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack; extant.

harridan. 'One that is half Whore, half Bawd,'

B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1796, Grose, 3rd ed., 'A miserable, scraggy, worn-out harlot, fit to take her bawd's degree'; 1818, The London Guide, 'Harridan, worn out strumpet'; app. † by 1840. It may have been c. only ca. 1690-1740. 'Derived from the French word, haridelle, a worn-out jade of a horse or mare' (Grose); an etymology that The O.E.D. does not cold-water.

harry (or H-). A countryman, a rustic: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; app. † by 1870. Contrast country Harry and cf. hick (from Richard).

hartmans is a rare variant of harmans, q.v. at quot'n of 1611.

harvest. To arrest, to pull in for questioning, a criminal or a suspect: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. I.e., to gather in.

harvest buzzard. A tramp that works at gathering the harvest: tramps': 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; extant. Cf. jungle buzzard.

hash. To vomit: 1859, Matsell. But is not this a misreading of hash in Grose (flash the hash, to vomit)?

hash, flash the. See flash the hash.

hash-me-gandy. Convenient; conveniently placed; opportune; adroit: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on handy.

hash-slinger, 'a restaurant waiter', is, despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, not c. but s.

hasher. A woman waiter and/or scullery maid in a 'jungle': tramps': since ca. 1912: 1931, Stiff; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 21), it was s. She serves the recurrent hash; cf. hash-slinger.—2. 'One who never succeeds in a criminal enterprise,' Hargan, 1935: mostly convicts'. He 'makes a hash' of everything he attempts.

hasman is an error for harman in Andrewes, 1809.

hat, old. 'A woman's privities': 1785, Grose. Almost certainly not c. but low s. 'Because frequently felt' is the explanation in a later edition.

hat and cap. Gonorrhœa: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on clap.

hat-making. The exchanging by 'groaners' and 'sighers' (see groaner) of good hats for bad at church: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900. See make, v.

hat(-)rack. A prostitute: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Psychologically, there is a pun: the client hangs up his hat in the girl's room and there is a vague allusion to hat, old.

hat trick is not c. but s.; almost mission-jargon. 'Nearly every mission has a corps of men who perform the "hat trick" by going from house to house begging old clothes or cash or whatever the people care to give Some missions divide all cash collections with the solicitors,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923. The collectors raise their hats, most politely, as the door opens to their knock.

hatch. A prison; lock-up; police station: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A country gaol or police station'; extant. Cf. the nautical clap (someone) under hatches.

hatches, under the, 'in trouble, distress, or debt': not c. but s.—orig. nautical, obviously. Matsell makes a sad mess of the term.

hatter. A criminal that works alone and is very secretive: Australian: late C. 19-20. In, e.g., Morris, 1898; Partridge, 1938; Baker, 1942. Also hatting (— 1890): such a way of working and living. Ex the Australian-s. hatter, a miner working and living alone: he may go as mad as a hatter.

hauck, n. and v., 'strong drink'—'to drink heavily': Leverage, 1925: not c. but low s.

haul, n. A quantity of booty: May 18, 1847, Sessions Papers, trial of John Freer and others, 'He turned round and said, "Halloo! ain't somebody had a go in, or a haul, . . . up your way?"'; ibid., Feb. 25, 1851, 'A bloody fine haul'; 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow (U.S.A.); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom: on the borderline between c. and low s., but prob. always low s. I.e., a load—to be hauled.—2. A round-up of suspects: 1933, Ersine; extant.

haul, v. To steal; to rob: since early 1920's. Ersine, 1933. Cf. sense 1 of the n.

haul (one's) heat. To draw one's revolver: Sept. 19, 1931, Flynn's, Paul Annixter, 'A guy who carried a cannister on each hip and thought no more of hauling his heat on a man than blowing his nose'; extant. See heat, n., 3.

haul in. To arrest (someone): since ca. 1918; by 1935, police s. Ersine, 1933.

have, v. To cheat (a person): gamblers': 1770, Richard King, The Frauds of London detected (section entitled 'Gamblers'), 'should you play [at cards or dice], let it be only for trifles, but, above all, beware of betting or engaging in company you or your friends have no knowledge of, for if you do, ten to one but you are had, a cant word they [professional, esp. sharping, gamblers] make use of, instead of saying, as the truth is, we have cheated him'—plagiarized by George Barrington, 1802; 1818—by which time it had > gen. c., as in P. Egan, Boxiana, I (see suit, 2); by 1850, s.—2. To arrest; to imprison: 1823, Bee. In former nuance, also have up. Not c., but low s.

have a basin. To try: mostly tramps' and beggars': C. 20. John Worby, The Other Half, 1937. Ex the humorous s. 'I'll have a basinful of that'.

have a Chinaman (or monkey) on one's back. 'To manifest withdrawal distress,' BVB, 1942: drug addicts'. Cf. English s. monkey on one's house, a mortgage thereon.

have a game dead. Applied, in gamblers' c., to a gambler that 'has a sure thing, and must beat his opponent': 1859, Matsell (at To Have . . .); app. † by 1920. Cf. the s. a dead cert.

have a sucker in line. See line, get in.

have a yen (on). To crave drugs: C. 20. BVB. See yen.

have it off. To be engaged in crime, esp. in profitable theft and burglary: since ca. 1920. Arthur R. L. Gardner, The Art of Crime, 1931, '"Bill has had it off last night"'; Mark Benney, Low Company, 1936, 'I wanted to prove to Bob Bristol and to myself, that I was wily, wide. I wanted to "have it off" on a grand enough scale to win me respect for the rest of my days'; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 'The job had been had off. All that remained was the equally stealthy retreat'; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress; 1939, Jim Phelan, In the Can; extant. Cf. Yorkshire dial. have off, 'to know much about, be well acquainted with'—as in 'He has a good deal off'. (E.D.D. Sup.)

have one's collar felt. To be arrested: Oct. 1928, Word-Lore, F. C. Taylor, 'The Language of Lags'; extant. Humorously allusive rather than euphemistic; moreover, the phrase contains a pun on felt.

have one's tea-pot mended. See tea-pot mended, have one's.

have one's wick snuffed. To get oneself killed: C. 20. In, e.g., Convict 2nd, 1938. Ex the much commoner phrase, snuff a person's wick = put out his light, the light of his life.

have the bags off. To possess private means and to live by them: ca. 1860–1915. Baumann, 1887. Nose-bags?

have the goods on (a person), 'to capture (him) with either burglar's tools or loot upon him', is not c. but coll.—prob. police coll.

have the pencil put on (one). See pencil on . . .

have the shot. See shot, have the.

have twopenn'orth of rope. See twopenny rope.

havidge. 'Collection of bad characters' dwellings, The London Guide, 1818; † by 1890. Perhaps a blend of havoc + rubbish (or, rather, its illiterate form: rubbidge).

haval. A sheep: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A. (Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859); by 1893 (F & H) it was †—in England, at least. Perhaps ex, or cognate with, Northern dial. haveril, 'a half-wit'; cf. that conventional phrase, the silly (simple) sheep.

hawk, n. A sharper: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (a swindler); 1823, Bee (a gambler); 1848, Sinks of London; by 1859, American—Matsell, Vocabulary, 'A confidence man; a swindler'; by 1889, low s. in England (B & L); 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; by 1910, † in U.S.A. 'In opposition to pigeon' (Grose).—2. The sense 'a detective, or other police officer' (Leverage, 1925) is not c.; it is journalese.

hawk, v. To arrest: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 2 of the n.

hawk!, ware. See ware hawk!

hawker. A private detective: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. A disguise he often adopts, with the additional influence of hawk, n., 2.

hawker's gag. Laces to sell, as an excuse for begging: beggars' and tramps': C. 20. The Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932. See gag, n.

Hawkesbury Rivers. A trembling: principally the Western states: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on shivers. Adopted ex Australian s. (Baker, 1942.)

hawking, as used by Dekker at the section entitled 'Falconers' in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9, is prob. Dekker's metaphor for the catch-angel trick there described; it is, however, barely possible that hawking is an ephemeral underworld term: ca. 1605–20. See falconer.

Hawkshaw. 'From the comic papers.) A bungling detective,' Ersine, 1933; by 1935, no longer c.

hawser. See red hawser and white hawser.

hay, 'a bed', may be, whereas hay, 'to go to bed', prob. is c.—tramps' c.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Perhaps ex s. (? tramps') hit the hay, 'to prepare to sleep'.—2. Money: Australian confidence tricksters': since ca. 1920. Baker, 1945. Ex hay as food for livestock.—3. (Also Indian hay.) Marihuana: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. Cf. synonymous weed, and see quot'n at mootie and hit the hay.

hay(-)bag. A woman: tramps' c. and itinerant vendors' s.: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 217; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1893, F & H; in C. 20, also American; by 1920, ob. in Britain; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A woman vagrant'; 1933, Ersine, 'Usually . . . a farm woman'. So many women look like sacks with a rope passed round their middle; F & H, however, propose 'Something to lie upon.'—2. A disreputable woman tramp; an itinerant prostitute: U.S.A.: 1918, Leon Livingston, Mother Delcassee; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by Moreby Acklom; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1925, Leverage; 1942, BVB; extant. Ex sense 1.

hay burner. A horse: tramps': 1931, Godfrey Irwin—but prob. current since ca. 1910. Ex the large amount of hay it eats.—2. The sense, 'an old or worn-out locomotive'—able to burn only hay—is railroad s., not c.—3. A marihuana smoker (also hay head): drug addicts': since ca. 1925. BVB. See hay, 3.

hay butt. A marihuana cigarette: since the 1920's. BVB. See hay, 3.

hay-maker, 'a chambermaid' (Leverage, 1925): not c., but s.

hay-tit. A tramp prostitute: tramps': C. 20. W. L. Gibson Cowan, Loud Report, 1937. A tit (girl, young woman) in the habit of sleeping under hay-stacks.

hay(-)wire or haywire; haywire outfit. 'Hay-wire. When everything is balled up. A haywire outfit is something that is all tied and patched together,' Stiff, 1931: much used by tramps, who, however, have merely adopted them from farm s.: farmhands often tie things with plaits of straw or hay or grass.

Haymarket Hectors, 'bullies who, in the interest of prostitutes, affect the neighbourhood of Leicester Square and the Haymarket' (H, 1874): literary s., not c.!

Hays. 'The name of our venerable High Constable, used as a warning among thieves, to cut and run': 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York; app. current ca. 1850–60. This would be Harry Thompson Hays (1820–76), prominent as a lawyer in New York City politics in the early 1850's.

haywire; haywire outfit. See hay wire; haywire outfit.

hazard(-)drum. A gambling-house: 1860, H, 2nd ed. (at drum); 1889, B & L; ob. See drum, n., 3.

hazer. My role [in the smash-and-grab raid] was to be a hazer, to rush up and render all possible assistance in misleading and misdirecting the police . . . and the passing pedestrians,' Netley Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook, 1925; extant. Ex haze, 'to bewilder'.

hazy lazy Daisy. 'Rich, foolish widow,' Howard Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. By personification; Daisy is then suitably rhymed, and lazy is added for good measure.

he-madame. 'A man who runs a brothel,' Ersine, 1933; 'A male brothel manager,' BVB, 1942: C. 20. See madame.

head. A drug addict: C. 20. In, esp., hop-head, q.v. Also, e.g., veronal head, 'a veronal addict', as in Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 1936. Perhaps suggested by s. dead head, 'useless person'. —2. In Australian c., the term has two senses: (1) A long-sentence prisoner (he is one of 'the heads'): C. 20. (2) A professional two-up gambler (he 'heads 'em'): C. 20. Baker, 1942, both senses. The latter derives ex head, 'a race-course sharp', which has been current since ca. 1885 (Partridge, 1937): regarded by his fellows as a head, or important, man.

head, do on one's. To do (something) with ease: in C. 20, certainly s.; prob. always s., though orig.—in the 1880's and 1890's—it may have been c. Arthur Griffiths, Criminals I Have Known, 1895. I.e., standing on one's head.

head and tail. A prison: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on jail.

head beak. A judge: 1871, Anon., State Prison Life (at Jeffersonville, S. Indiana); slightly ob. See beak, 1.

head bloke. A chief warder: convicts': 1893, F & H; by 1920, low s. By specialization.

head bully (or cully) of the pass bank or of the passage bank. B.E. (bully), 1698, defines it as 'the Top Tilter of that Gang, throughout the whole Army, who Demands and receives Contributions from all the Pass Banks in the Camp', the allusion being to the dicing game of passage, suppressed—for honest citizens—by Parliament in March 1645; B.E. also makes it clear that passbank is properly 'the Stock or Fund thereto belonging; also the playing Place Cut out in the Ground almost Cockpit waies'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (cully); † by 1870—if not, indeed, by 1830.

head end. The front of a train: railroad j., adopted and freely used by tramps in C. 20. Stiff, 1931.

head-guard. 'A billycock (hat) A slouch, head-guard, wake': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); 1893, F & H, 'A hat; specifically, a billy-cock'; by 1930, †. A variation of head-gear.

head in. To get out of sight; hence, to withdraw from an argument, to keep—or become—quiet: tramps': since ca. 1920. IA, 1931. 'From the railroads, where a train "heads in" when it pulls into a side track, off the main line' (Godfrey Irwin).

head screw. A chief warder: 1893, F & H; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (U.S.A.); extant. See screw, n., 5.

head-topper. A hat; a wig: 1890, B & L; † by 1940. The 'hat' sense is prob. an elaboration of topper, 2.

headache, give a. See give . . .

headlight. A half-dollar: mostly tramps': May 23, 1937, The Sunday News, John Chapman; extant.

heads up! Look out: since ca. 1930. F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938.

heap. An automobile or (motor-)car: since ca. 1918: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'—'Heap is fairly recent, about eight or ten years old. Its origin is obvious: Automobile = heap of junk = any machine. "Clouting heaps" is the automobile thief's pastime!'; 1929, Givens; June 15, 1929, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'The Spot'; June 8, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; April 16, 1932, Flynn's; 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man; 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose; by 1936, police and journalistic s. 'From the casual way most mechanics and automobile thieves have of referring to automobiles as heaps of junk, no matter what their actual condition' (Irwin).—2.

A tie-pin: British: since ca. 1930. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.

heap o' coke. A 'bloke', i.e., a chap, a fellow: orig. (ca. 1845-70), beggars' rhyming s.: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 418; 1909, Ware classifies it as thieves'; by 1920, no longer c. in Britain; in C. 20 U.S.A., however, it is c.—witness Chicago May, 1928; Convict, 1934; and M & B, 1944.

heaped to the gills. 'Dope-filled'—completely under the influence of a drug: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. s. back teeth awash, thoroughly drunk.

heapy is a variant of heap o' coke. Ware, 1909.

hear anything knock?, do you (or did you). Do you (or did you) understand this?; do you (or did you) take the hint?: a c.p. of the underworld: 1841, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin, both tenses and both nuances; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880.

hearing cheat; usually in pl. 'Hearing chetes, eares,' Harman, 1566; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London—but prob. † by 1830. Lit., a hearing thing. See cheat.

hearseman. 'A convicted murderer, a lifer,' Ersine, 1933: since ca. 1925. Proleptic.

heart. 'When a pimp has one girl he refers to her as his "broad", "heart", "lover" or "woman". When he has two or more girls, his "heart" and the gang on the street refer to the other girls as "sisters-in-law",' Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, 1936: white-slave traffic: 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 'These other bitches are just hustling for Bill. I'm his heart'; extant. Cf. wife.

heart and lung. Tongue: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

heart's ease. A twenty-shilling piece: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who does not, however, classify it as c., which it had prob. ceased to be ca. 1760. Ex the pleasure it gives.—2. (Ex the same semantic idea.) Gin: 1698, B.E.; 1785, Grose. App. current until ca. 1840, this sense may never have been anything but s.

hearty choak (choke). Usually as in the (?) earliest record, 'He will have a hearty choak and caper sauce for breakfast; i.e., he will be hanged,' Grose, 1785; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'Who cut his last fling with great applause | To the tune of a "hearty choke with caper sauce" '; app. † by 1887 (Baumann). With caper, cf. dance upon nothing.

heat. To have a heat on is to be taking drugs—either the once or habitually: C. 20. In My Life in Prison (San Quentin, 1901-11), Donald Lowrie, whose book was published in 1912, records an old-hand saying, 'A few years ago this dump was full of dope. Every other man y'r met had a heat on, an' lots o' young kids what came here strong an' healthy went out with a habit'; cf. 'She seems to have about half a heat on from drinking gin,' Damon Runyon, Furthermore, 1938. Cf. smoke, n., 2, and warm.—2. Trouble with, a being wanted (and sought-for) by, the police: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth ('The Language of the Underworld'), 'The greatest difficulty for such a mob [of yeggs] was to avoid another's heat. "It's not so much your own heat you got to watch, but you're apt to run into a bunch of hoosiers looking for another outfit just hot from some caper" '; 1930, Burke, 'Either take our beer or it's plenty of heat for yours'; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 1931, D. W. Maurer, 'Excitement, trouble, the "drop" with a gun'; Nov. 1931, IA dates it from before Prohibition—i.e., to earlier than 1920; June 4, 1932, Flynn's; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; by 1936 put the heat on was s.—witness Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; by 1937 heat itself. By 1936 or 1937, it was English c., as in James Curtis, They Drive by Night, 1938, 'The bleeding heat's on here for me', and in David Hume, Death before Honour, 1939; by 1946, low s. in Britain; by 1940, current as c. in Australia—as in Baker, 1945. Cf. coll. make things warm for (someone).—3. A revolver: 1929, Givens; May 24, 1930, Flynn's, Robert N. Leath; July 5, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; Dec. 1930, Burke (see fog, v., 2); Sept. 19, 1931, Flynn's, Paul Annixter; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; Dec. 10, 1932, Flynn's; 1934, Rose; April 3, 1937, Flynn's, Richard Sale; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; Feb. 11, 1939, Flynn's; 1939, Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep; March 7, 1942, Flynn's; 1944, W. R. Burnett, Nobody Lives Forever; extant. Proleptic.—4. Hence, gunfire; esp. in turn on the heat: since the middle 1920's. Ersine, 1933.—5. (Ex sense 2 in specific sense 'police investigation'.) A policeman: since ca. 1930. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937.

heat, give (someone) the. To shoot; to kill with a firearm: 1936, John G. Brandon, The Pawnshop Murder; extant. Cf. heat, 2 and 3.

heat, pack a; stick the heat on (a person). To carry a revolver; to thrust a revolver into his ribs, to cover with a revolver: July 5, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; extant. See heat, n., 3.

heat, turn on the. To cover a person with a firearm, esp. a revolver (heat, 3); to open fire: since the middle 1920's: 1933, Ersine; 1934, Howard N. Rose: not the usual, the predominant sense. See:—2. 'When a crime has been committed, reported to the police and the search is on . . . "the heat has been turned on",' C. Ryley Cooper in The Saturday Evening Post, May 22, 1937: in frequent use since the late 1920's. It applies also to the citizens being aroused and demanding that justice be exacted: Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 27, 1937. See heat, 2.

heat up. 'Even when other mobs use rip-and-tear [i.e., crude] methods that heat up [cause trouble in] the spot, they are never complained of or to,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: since the 1920's.

heated brain. 'Duke Lathrop was a big shot, a guy we sometimes call a heated brain,' Fred C. Painton in Detective Fiction Weekly, Dec. 4, 1937; slightly ob. Cf. brains.

heater. A firearm; a revolver: Nov. 9, 1929, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'An Inside Job'; 'Aw, put up your heaters. If you bump me, you don't git anywheres'; June 14, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Fred. D. Pasley, Al Capone; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1932, W. R. Burnett, The Silver Eagle; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; Sept. 27, 1937, Godfrey Irwin (letter); 1946, Victor Gunn, Ironsides Smells heater-cases. Boots: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx, where it is glossed as 'Wellington boots'; † by 1900. See heaters and cf. gam-cases.

Blood (American log.); extant. From it is 'pumped' the metaphoric 'hot lead' (Irwin).—2. A cigar: since the 1920's. Ersine, 1933. Either because a large cigar shape-resembles a revolver barrel or because an inferior one burns the mouth.—3. See heaters.

heaters. Feet: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'If his shoes are broke and his feet seen through them, you'll hear one say to another, twig his heaters out of their box-irons; box-irons being cant for shoes'; 1792, C. Pigott, The Minor Jockey Club, 'Heaters in the flash tongue are feet'; app. † by 1900. They make or keep the owner warm.

heathen philosopher, 'a sorry poor tatter'd Fellow, whose Brecch may be seen through his Pocket-holes', as B.E. has it in 1698, is not a c. but a s. term.

heave, n. An attempt to wheedle, deceive, trick, swindle; esp. a dead heave, a particularly flagrant instance: ca. 1800–50. Bee, 1823. A sense-development ex:—

heave, v. To rob; 1562, Awdeley, 'To pilfer ware from staules, which they cal heaving of the Bowth'; 1566, Harman has 'to have a bough, to robbe or rifle a boeweth'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1665, R. Head, 'Heave a Booth . . . To rob an house'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E. (heave a bough); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose, 'To heave a case, to rob a house; to heave a bough, to rob a booth'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L (h. a booth—a case); 1890, F & H; † by 1900. For the semantics, cf. hoist and lift.

heave a bough. See bough and heave.

heave a case. To rob a house: see heave, v., and case, n.

heaven dust. Powdered narcotic, esp. cocaine: addicts': since ca. 1925. Howard N. Rose, 1934; BVB, 1942. Cf. God's medicine and happy dust.

heaven in a string, go to. See go to heaven . . .

Heaven(-)reacher. A minister of the Church; an evangelist: 1931, Godfrey Irwin—but current throughout C. 20. 'One who preaches about Heaven, as often as not with many skyward gestures' (Irwin).

heavenly bliss. A kiss: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20: M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

heaver. A breast: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Heaver, the breast', i.e., bosom; 1797, Potter, 'Heaver, the breast'; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1887 (Baumann). Ex the breast-heaving of fear or excitement.—2, 3. See:—

heavers. 'Thieves who make it their business to steal tradesmen's shop books': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; prob. † by 1887 (Baumann). See heave.—2. (The singular is rare.) 'Heavers. Persons in love': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; † by 1910. They heave with sighs.

heaving, vbl n. See heave, v.

heavy, n., or heavy wet, 'porter, or a drink thereof': not c., but s. (orig. low).—2. A stick-up man: U.S.A.: 1928, Chicago May; 1933, Ersine, 'A gunman'; Nov. 10, 1934, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; slightly ob. Cf. strong-arm man.—3. The heavy = safe-blowing: U.S. bank robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1935, James Spenser, The Five Mutineers; extant. Perhaps imm. ex heavy racket.—4. Hence, a safe-robber: U.S.A.; June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch, 'He's a born heavy. He can blow or torch a safe'; 1933, Ersine; extant.—5. (Ex 2, 3, 4.) A flash thief: English: 1935, The Garda Review; extant.

heavy, adj. Dangerous, risky: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 313, where a forged begging letter is described as 'very "heavy" (dangerous)'; app. † by 1930. Prob. ex the heavy penalty attached to forgery.—2. Involving force or violence: U.S.A.: from mid-1920's. See, e.g., heavy guy.—3. 'Having plenty of money' (Ersine, 1933): U.S.A.: extant. Hence:—4. (Of non-professional gamblers that are) addicted to heavy stakes: U.S. gamblers', esp. card-sharpers': 1938, Godfrey Irwin (letter of Feb. 24), '“Fat”, of one with money [concerning fat, adj., 2, reference to Keate]—cf. the “heavy” of today'.

heavy, on the. Engaged in safe-blowing: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant. See heavy, n., 3.

heavy baggage, the. 'In a Canting Sense, the Children and Women, who are unable, upon a March, to travel fast in Gangs of Gypsies and Strolers' or vagabonds, 'are by those called, The heavy baggage,' A New Canting Dict., 1725: ca. 1710–1870, it being recorded also in Egan's Grose, 1823. Cf. the Fr. proverb, pas de bagage en train de plaisir.

heavy foot, 'a detective betraying himself by his large feet and heavy shoes': s., not c. Thomas Minehan, Boy and Girl Tramps, 1934.

heavy gun. A gang leader: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; extant, but never much used. Cf. big gun.

heavy guy. 'Heavy Guys—stick-up men, or safe-breakers,' Chicago May, 1928; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan, 'To Hell and Back'; 1938, Damon Runyon, Furthermore; extant. Cf. heavy, n., 2 and 4.

heavy horse, heavy horsemen. George Barrington in his New London Spy for 1805 (Appendix), under the heading Heavy-Horsemen, writes, 'Under the description of Heavy Horse is comprised that class of labourers called humpers, who are chiefly employed in the lading and discharging of ships and vessels in the River Thames.—These never failed to provide themselves with habiliments, suited to the purpose of secreting and removing whatever they could pilfer and steal of the ship's cargo during the discharge.—Many of them were provided with an under-dress, denominated a jemmy, with pockets before and behind: also with long narrow bags or pouches, which, when filled, were lashed to their legs and thighs, and concealed under wide trowsers.—By these means, they were enabled to carry off sugars, coffee, cocoa, ginger, pimento, and every other article which could be obtained by pillage, in considerable quantities'; 1828, G. Smeeton, Doings in London, where the term is implied to be †. For semantics, cf. light horsemen, q.v.

heavy job. A crime (esp. a theft, a burglary) of violence: since ca. 1920. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. Cf. heavy, n., 3 and 4.

heavy lurker. A comparatively reputable, often well-educated and formerly well-placed professional beggar, operating, in the main, with begging letters and hard-luck stories: C. 20. Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House, 1932. See lurk, n., and lurker.

heavy man or heavyman. A burglar; esp. a bank burglar, a safe-breaker: 1924, George Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain (on p. 99 it is misprinted 'heady man'); 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; July 27, 1929, Flynn's, W. E. Ulich, 'A stickup and heavy man'; 1929-31, Kernôt; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant. Cf. heavy worker, q.v.—2. Hence, an armed guard (e.g., on a contraband-liquor truck) or bodyguard: Sept. 6, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; 1933, Ersine, 'A gunman'; by 1935, merely historical.

heavy money. A big haul in paper money: Aug. 23, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; extant.

heavy paper. 'Big haul in paper-money,' Kernôt, 1929-31; extant. Cf. heavy sugar.

heavy plodder. A stockbroker: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1893 (F & H).

heavy racket, the. Burglary; Aug. 11, 1928, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson, 'Twenty Years outside the Law'; extant.

heavy sugar. A large sum of money: esp., 'big money': gangsters' and racketeers': since ca. 1924: Aug. 24, 1935, Flynn's.

heavy wet, 'malt liquor', is not c. (as in Egan's Grose) but s.

heavy work. Burglary: C. 20. By 1940, English—as in Arthur Gardner, Lower Underworld, 1942.

heavy worker. A burglar: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; anglicized, ca. 1919, as 'safe-breaker'; Partridge, 1938; extant. In contrast to a pickpocket, he carries off comparatively heavy stuff.

heavyweight. A desperate thief or burglar; a yegg; a hold-up man: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; very ob. Cf. heavy, adj., 1; obviously there is a reference to boxing—perhaps to John L. Sullivan ('The Boston Strong Boy') and Jack Johnson.

Hebe (pron. heeb), 'Jewish prisoner': merely a special application of the gen. American s. sense, 'a Hebrew, a Jew'.

Hectoring or h—; Hector. (The profession of) a ruffling, swindling adventurer; a wild young fellow forming one of a gang infesting the streets of London: 1652, Anon., A History of the Knights of the Blade, commonly called Hectors or St Nicholas Clerkes; Anon., The Hectors . . . A Comedy, 1655. They flourished in the second half of C. 17. The term, however, is not c., nor prob. even s. (except perhaps orig.), but—as The O.E.D. holds—S.E. Ex the character of the mythological Trojan hero.

hedge, n. A short-lived synonym of fence (a receiver of stolen goods): 1818, The London Guide. By a somewhat obvious—too obvious—pun.—2. 'Just another method we use to gather the necessary crowd, professionally called a "hedge",' Michael Fane, Racecourse Swindles, 1936; racecourse gangs': since ca. 1920.

hedge, as an adj. in underworld combinations, connotes 'sheltering under hedges' or 'concerned with hedges', hence 'poor, shabby; illicit'. See ensuing phrases.

hedge bird, 'a Scoundrel or sorry Fellow' (B.E., 1698), is not c. but s. that > S.E.

hedge-creeper. 'A Robber of Hedges,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; Egan's Grose, 1823. Falling into disuse ca. 1840, the term prob. means 'a robber from off hedges', whereon laundered clothes were laid out to dry.

hedge crocus. A quack doctor in a very small way and operating 'on the penny and twopenny racket': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 423: not c., but itinerant vendors' s.

Hedge Square, doss or snooze in. See doss in . . . and snooze in . . .

heel, n. An incompetent and undesirable pretender to criminal qualifications: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1916, The Literary Digest (Aug.; article 'Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'), where it is applied to sneak thieves; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'An unreliable person, a yap'; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; by 1933 or so, the sense has virtually merged with or > sense 2. Either shortened from heeler, 'a follower at another's heels', or ex 'down at heels'. (Irwin.)—2. Hence, a till-robber; a shoplifter: 1911 (implied in heel, on the, q.v.); 1924, George S. Dougherty, The Criminal, where heel man = chief man in a gang robbing jewellery stores; Jan. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, Ernest Booth; 1934, Rose, 'A petty thief'; 1937, E. H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 'A sneak thief, a "heel"'; extant.—3. See heel, have a deep. But also independently, as in 'You don't suppose I had enough heel for that,' Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 1918.—4. An informer to the police: 1929, Givens; 1929-31, Kernôt, 'Crook police-informer'; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex sense 1.

heel, v. To run away: 1859, Matsell; 1934, Howard N. Rose ('to escape'). Ex S.E. take to one's heels.—2. Hence (?), to walk: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Perhaps ex heel and toe, competitive walking (Irwin).—3. To beat brutally: 1925, Leverage; extant. To put one's foot on.—4. To practise sneak-thievery: 1925, Leverage; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; Jan. 1931, True Detective Mysteries; extant. Ex heel, n., 1.

heel, cop a. See cop a heel.

heel, have a deep. 'By that time we'd have a deep heel, which means plenty of ready cash,' Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 1918; ob. Prob. suggested by heeled, 2.

heel, on the. Engaged in safe-robbing or till-robbing: 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society (safe-robbing); Dec. 1918, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang', in The American Law Review (till-robbing); 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, defines the heel as 'the racket of stealing by sneaking'; extant. Partly ex quiet gait.

heel and toe, take it on the. See take it on . . .

heel in. To force one's way in unwanted: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. muscle in.

heel man. See heel, n., 2, reference of 1924.

heeled, 'armed, weaponed', so common in the C. 20 American underworld, began as Western American s. (as in Francis Francis the Younger, Saddle and Moccasin, 1887)—‘An allusion to the practice of arming the birds in cock-fighting with steel spurs’ (B & L, 1889); 1914, P & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, ‘Go mittid or heeled—to go armed’; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; 1926, Jack Black, You Can’t Win; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn’s; 1928, John O’Connor, Broadway Racketeers; May 31, 1930, Flynn’s, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; and others.—2. Heeled or well-heeled, ‘wealthy’, is not c. but s.—orig., low s. (J. W. Sullivan, Tenement Tales of New York, 1895).

heeler. ‘An accomplice of the pocket-book dropper. The heeler stoops behind the victim, and strikes one of his heels as if by mistake; this draws his attention to the pocket-book that lies on the ground’: 1859, Matsell; 1881, The Man Traps of New York, ‘A Bowery dive heeler’; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1904, H. Hapgood; slightly ob.—2. A ‘dummy’ or pool-purchasing accomplice in pool-gambling; he acts under the proprietors or manager’s orders: 1883, Anthony Comstock, Traps for the Young; † by 1920.—3. A ‘chucker out’ in brothel or low drinking-place: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant.—4. ‘A ward politician,’ Ersine, 1933; extant.—5. A room prowler (thief specializing in, e.g., hotel bedrooms): 1934, Convict; 1938, Convict 2nd; extant. He walks on rubbered heels and soles.

heesh. Hasheesh: nautical drug-addicts’: since the 1920’s. Otis Ferguson in American Speech, April 1944. Prob. not by aphesis: ‘(has) heesh’; but by conglobation: ‘h(ash)eesh’.

heft, v. To weigh; 1926, Jack Black, You Can’t Win, ‘You’—an imaginary burglar—‘take the silver, “heft” the watch and leave it, it’s not solid’; ibid., ‘His watch “hefts” heavy. You take it, and you take the silver out of his pockets’; extant. Cf. hoist, v.

heifer. A woman: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1910, Harry Franck, A Vagabond Journey, ‘As often as not he’—the British tramp—‘travels with a female companion whom he styles . . . “me Moll” or “me heifer”’; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, ‘A young woman’; 1933, Ersine, ‘Any young woman’; extant. At least it’s more complimentary than cow.—Note that, ca. 1830–1900, the term was predominantly s.

heifer den. A brothel: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; BVB, 1942, cites the variant heifer barn. There, many a heifer and many a cow may be found.

heigh-ho! ‘A cant term for stolen yarn, from the expression used to apprise the dishonest manufacturer that the speaker has stolen yarn to sell.—Norwich cant’: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; ob.

Heinie. See Hiney.

heist; heist guy or heist man; heister. See hist, hist guy, hist man, hister.

hektograph sig. A hektograph signature fraudulently transferred to another cheque: forgers’: since ca. 1930. Maurer, 1941.

Hell, the, was a name given by Australian convicts, ca. 1810–70, to Macquarie Harbour, Port Arthur, and Norfolk Island, either individually or collectively: George E. Boxall, The Story of the Australian Bushrangers, 1899; p. 9. Ex the brutal way in which the convicts were treated at those settlements.

hell is not c., but—at least, orig.—slang, in this the earliest definition: ‘This hel is a place that the tailors have under their shopboard, wher al their stolne shreds is thrust,’ The Defence of Conny catching, by ‘Cuthbert Cunny-catcher’, 1592.—Nor is it c. (as stated in Egan’s Grose) in the sense ‘gambling-house’.

hell dust. Any narcotic; esp. morphine or, above all, heroin: drug addicts’: 1934, Ferd. Tuohy, Inside Dope; extant. Contrast happy dust.

hello, George! ‘Said when meeting a bo’—a hobo—‘is tantamount to meaning “I’m a bo, too”’, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914, where we also find the probably derivative be george, ‘to be shrewd and wide-awake’: Godfrey Irwin doubts hello, George!, but I accept it, for it has a ring of ‘masonic’ truth. Why George? Well, why not? It’s a very common name.

hell’s kitchen. A foundry: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey (p. 98); app. † by 1940. Ex the noise, the heat, and the hard work. Compare Hell’s Kitchen, coll. for ‘the criminal quarter of C. 19 Manhattan Island’.

hemp, v. To choke (a person): 1859, Matsell, ‘Hemp the Flat, Choke the fool’; 1893, F & H; app. † by 1930. Ex the hemp of the hangman’s rope.

hemp, spin (a person’s). See spin hemp.

hemp-scragging. Oakum-picking: 1902, J. Greenwood, The Prisoner in the Dock; ob. By an experienced convict or workhouse-inmate, the oakum is ‘scragged’ or treated roughly.

hempen. This adj. (‘made of hemp’—hence, ‘connected with hemp’) appears, late C. 17–mid-19, in certain phrases, all of which may be low s. rather than c., though it is prob. that two or three of them began as c. See the next seven entries. The reference is to the gallows rope.

hempen casement, ‘a halter’: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880. On the borderline between c. and s.

hempen cravat, ‘the hangmen’s noose’: possibly c., but prob. jailors’ and/or journalists’ s. H, 1874.

hempen fever. ‘A man who was hanged, is said to have died of a hempen fever,’ Grose, 1785: possibly c. at first, but more prob. low s.—unless it were journalistic s. See hempen.

hempen fortune; hempen furniture. ‘Money received as rewards for convicting felons by thief takers’ (it is the thief-takers who receive the rewards): 1797, Potter, (the former); 1809, Andrewes (the latter), ‘Commonly called blood-money’; 1848, Sinks of London (the latter); † by 1880. On the borderline between police s. and prisoners’ c. Cf. hempen widow.

hempen habeas. A halter: 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Bee; app. current ca. 1810–50. In 1828, Bee, in A Living Picture of London, has hempen habeas corpus, which occurs also in The London Guide. Not certainly c.; possibly low—or, maybe, legal—s.

hempen snare, ‘a hangman’s halter’: not c. but s. or perhaps only journalistic j. hempen widow, ‘one whose Husband was Hang’d’ (B.E., 1698), may possibly have, at first, been c.: but prob. it was always s. The term flourished ca. 1690–1840. Cf. hempen fortune and hempen fever.

hen. A whore: 1797, Potter; 1823, Bee; app. † by 1890. Ex s. hen, a woman.—2. See hens and chickens.

Hen House, the. The women's department (of the prison): San Quentin: C. 20. Leo L. Stanley, Men at Their Worst, 1940.

Henry, look for. See look for Henry.

hen(s) and chickens. Hen and chickens, large and small pewter pots': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, I, 276; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; † by ca. 1915. A thematic variation of cat and kittens.

hep. 'Wise', alert, informed; esp. in put (someone) hep: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, a double-crossing police-informer loq., "When it's one of me friends, I puts 'em hep, see!"; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer slangily define it as 'wise', 'next'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1916, Arthur Stringer, The Door of Dread, "Save that for the web-foots," sez I, "for I'm hep to this burg"; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; July 23, 1927, Flynn's, "We're not hep to you!" he rasped. "An' we ain't got no coke—never had—an' that stuff th' mob's smokin' is tobacco"; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1929, Charles Francis Coe, Hooch, 'I thought you were hep to all that'; by 1930, police and journalistic s. in U.S.A.; in the early 1930's it > British c., as in James Spenser, Crime against Society, 1938. Perhaps a corruption of hup (aspirated up) and therefore ex English s. up to, 'aware of'. More prob. imm. ex hep! hep!, encouragement to a team of horses, the teamster calling hep! and the horses getting hep!

herb. A fellow, chap, 'guy'; mostly Londoners': since ca. 1920. James Curtis, There Ain't No Justice, 1937; Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 1937, 'He's only just come out of doing three in Chelmsford . . . Right herb he is and al'; 1939, David Hume, Heads You Live; 1943, Richard Llewellyn, None but the Lonely Heart; extant. Shortened and lower-cased ex Herbert, a very usual font-name among Cockneys.

herder. A prison guard or warder: mostly convicts': since early 1920's: 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest; Dec. 1930, Burke, 'That herder's strictly wrong'; 1931, IA; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. Pejorative.

here and there. A chair: mainly in the West: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

hermon beck is Beaumont & Fletcher's idiosyncratic variant (in The Beggar's Bush, written ca. 1615) of harman beck.

hero. Heroin: 1925, Leverage; 1934 (see hero-gin); by 1940, s.

hero-gin. Gin with a dash of heroin: drug addicts': esp. during the 1920's (though still extant): 1934, Ferd. Tuohy, Inside Dope. See hero and cf. rum-coke.

herring, 'a sailor' (Leverage, 1925), is s.—not c.—2. A virgin (female): 1933, Ersine; extant.

Herring Pond, pike across the. See pike across ... herring pond at the King's expense, cross the; go over the herring pond (Sessions Papers, Nov. 24, 1857). To be transported as a convict: ca. 1760–1865. Grose, 1785. Not certainly c.: it may easily have been journalistic s. The reference is to the ocean, esp. the Atlantic Ocean.

Hessians. Pinkerton detectives: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Ex the Standard American sense, 'mercenaries', which derives from the fact that, in the War of American Independence, the British employed Hessian troops: the police-force supplies the regular, the 'native', detectives, the Pinkerton men constituting an additional nuisance and being non-governmental detectives—outsiders, no better than foreigners!

heve. See heave.

hex. A foolish mistake; a cause of bad luck, a hoodoo: Nov. 13, 1937, Flynn's, Richard Sale, 'Even the professional killers . . . didn't like the idea of fooling around with a newspaperman. They figured it was a hex to bump one'; extant.

hi-roller. See high-roller, 2.

hiccius doccius (or doxius). See hicksius doxius.

hick, n. The sense 'a silly Country Fellow' is prob. s. and certainly the origin of the U.S. s. term; but that of 'any Person of whom any Prey can be made, or Book taken from' is indubitably c.: 1698, B.E. (both senses); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'The eighth is a Bulk, that can Bulk any Hick'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who classifies the 'ignorant clown' as c.—but prob. he has omitted to give the specific sense; nevertheless, the c. sense was prob. † by 1820 at the latest. Hick is an old hypocoristic form of Richard, as Hob is of Robert, and Hodge of Roger.

hick, v. See hike.

hick-jop. See hickjop.

hick-joss is a variant (? ca. 1790–1830) of hick, n. (Potter, 1797.)

hickey. See hicky.

hickjap, is an incorrect form (B & L) of:—

hickjop. A bumpkin; a fool: 1809, Andrewes (h.j.); 1848, Sinks of London, as hick jop; by 1859, current in U.S.A.—Matsell, 'Hickjop. A fool'; by 1900, † in both Britain and America. I.e., hick + a survival of C. 15 S.E. joppe, 'a fool', unless jop is Andrewes's misprint or error for joss (see hick-joss), where, despite the evidence of the dates, joss is prob. short for joskin.

hickory dock. A clock: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming: 'Hickory, dickory dock, The mouse ran up the clock'.

hicks. 'Walnut husks used by the "sure thing" gamblers,' Jackson & Hellyer, 1914; 1925, Leverage, 'A shell game'; 1931, IA; extant. Employed against hicks or rustics?—More prob. a thinning of hucks.—2. Dollars: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; † by 1940. Perhaps ex sense 1.—3. The gamblers mentioned in sense 1: 1931, IA; extant.

hicksam. Andrewes, 1809, has 'Hick-sam, a country fellow, a fool', but this is prob. an error for 'Hick or sam . . .'; repeated in Sinks of London Laid Open, 1848, and in Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859.

hicksius doxius, hiccius doccius, etc. According to Johnson, a c. term (? late C. 17–18) for a juggler or a trickster, derived ex the jugglers' and conjurers' c.p., hiccius doctius or doccius, both of which appear in Anon., Hocus Pocus Junior (1634, enlarged in) 1635,—where there is a section headed, 'Bonus Genius or Nuntius invisibilis, or Hiccius Doccius as my senior calls it'; Coles, in his Dict., 1676, defines it as 'a canting word among Juglers, to amuse the people'. The original is either mock Latin or a corruption of hic (or hicce) est doctus, 'this is the learned man', or hic est corpus, 'here is the body'.

hicky or hickey, 'tipsy; not quite drunk; elated' (Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859), may have been c. in U.S.A., but it is unlikely. The word came from England, where—see Grose—it was low s. Ex hiccough, hiccup.—2. A black eye: not c. but low s. (Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 1923, 'They knew something was wrong when they saw the two beautiful "hiekeys" that I had.')

hicky (or hickey) coffers; usually as vbl n., hick(e)ying coffers, defined by John Chapman in The (N.Y.) Daily News, May 23, 1937, as 'handling trunks'. Here, hick is a variant of hike in sense of 'raise' or 'carry'.

hidden hands. 'There are others, who bind back their hands so that they seem not to have them. These are called "hidden hands",' Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941: mostly beggars': since ca. 1920.

hide. 'Stolen furs are "hot hides",' C. Ryley Cooper in The Saturday Evening Post of May 22, 1937: Godfrey Irwin, private letter of Sept. 27, 1937, glosses thus, 'I take issue with "hot hides", "eats" is the word.'

hide and find. That strap trick in which the dupe is invited to put a pencil into the loop of a strap: since ca. 1880. Anstey, The Man from Blankley's, 1901.

hide out, hide-out, hideout. A hiding place for a person: but never c., although orig. it may have been low s. It occurs, e.g., in Charles Francis Coe's early novels and in W. R. Burnett's Little Caesar, 1929.—2. Hence, a person hiding from justice: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—3. (Ex 1.) 'Whiskers, brush,' Ersine, 1933; extant.

hide up. (Of police or other officials) to shield or defend (a wrongdoer): since ca. 1918. In, e.g., Edgar Wallace, The Flying Squad, 1928.

hideout. See hide out.

high. The senses 'in high spirits' and 'elevated by drink' are s. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931).—2. Hence, drug-exhilarated: since ca. 1920. Hargan, 1935; March 21, 1936, Flynn's, Captain Havelock-Baillie, 'Smugglers "high" on marijuana, sotol, tequila, mescal'; 1937, Courtney R. Cooper, Here's to Crime; March 12, 1938, The New Yorker, Meyer Berger; by 1940, low s. Ex the sense of being physically at the top of one's form.

high, in. Synonymous with prece., 2. BVB.

high and dry, 'cast on shore' (penniless; abandoned by all), is not c. as is stated in Egan's Grose.

high ball, n. Signal for a train to pull out from a town or city platform: since ca. 1910 (Stiff, 1931): but this is rather railroad s. than tramps' e.—2. 'We beat our way on a "High Ball", or "Manifest" as a fast freight-train is called,' Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938: tramps': since ca. 1920.

high-ball or highball, v. To travel swiftly; to go away: tramps': 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 'Presently the lantern "high-balled" a signal to the engine, and the air was applied. . . . The train jerked, and was on its way'; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1930, Lennox Kerr, Backdoor Guest; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—2. Hence, to sentence quickly (an accused person): 1929-31, Kernôt; extant.

high beak, the. 'The first judge; the president; the governor; the head official': 1859, Matsell; ob. Cf. high bloke, 2.

high-binds. One of 'a class of Chinese in San Francisco who blackmail gamblers and prostitutes, and who "remove" by the knife or pistol those who incur the enmity of their organization': 1891, James Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; 1893, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1930.

Ex U.S. s. high-binder, 'a riotous fellow' (Bartlett, 1848).

high bloke. 'A well-dressed fellow': 1859, Matsell; † by 1890.—2. A judge (law-court): 1903, Sylva Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1940.

High Constable and High Shreeve, the. These are two of the male nicknames used for gang-leaders in the C. 17 underworld: Dekker, O per se O, 1612.

high diver. A tramp addicted to pickpocketry; a pickpocket 'on the road': mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931. A diver on the highway.

high fly, the. 'Going the high fly is playing the part of a broken-down gentleman, without selling anything,' i.e., being a seemingly genteel beggar: 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; ibid., see fakement, 4; 1839, Brandon, 'The Highfly—beggars, with letters, pretending to be broken-down gentlemen, captains, etc.'; 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxix, 'Highfly—genteel begging-letter impostor'; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L, who (wrongly, I think) extend it to begging on the highway; 1893, F & H—who copy them; † by 1910. I.e., flying high; ambition. See also sense 2 of:—

high flyer. The senses 'a loose, impudent woman' and 'a bold adventurer', both current ca. 1690-1800, were prob. s., not c.—2. A seemingly genteel begging-letter writer: 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1857, 'Snowden', 3rd ed.; 1857, Augustus Mayhew; 1859, H, 'A genteel beggar, or swindler'; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1887, Baumann; 1893, F & H; 1895, Caminada; slightly ob. Because he (or she) flies high in search of phrase and prey.

high-flying (or one word) is the vbl n. corresponding to the preceding, sense 2: since ca. 1840: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1893, F & H; ob.

high fulhams. See fulhams.

high gag. See gag, be on the high.—2. Hence, 'a fellow that whispers' (? in begging): U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. See gag, n. and v., and cf. gagger.

high gagger. See gagger, n.

high game. A mansion: 1889 (see baronial jug); 1893, F & H; † by 1930. Either because many a mansion is high or else because mansions are usually worth a burglar's trouble.

high gloak. Either short for high tober gloak or an error therefor, such dictionaries as Potter's and Andrewes's being vague and ambiguous in their arrangement of entries.

high grade, high-grade, higrade. To obtain illicitly: since ca. 1905: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, M. H. Weseen; and others since. Adopted ex mining s., where it = to 'salt' (a mine): Irwin.

high-gyve. To tease—to taunt—a marihuana smoker: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Meyer Berger, 'Tea for a Viper'—in The New Yorker, March 12, 1938. See high, 2, and gyve.

high hat. 'An unusually large [opium] pill is referred to as a "high hat", and is usually prepared for the guest of the evening. . . . He told me he would cook me a "high hat",' Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man. Confessions of a Drug Addict, 1933: drug addicts': since ca. 1920: 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; extant.

high-heeled boots. 'Triumphant, confidant [sic] appendages,' Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872; † by 1910. The sense is obscure: does Burnham mean 'flash whores'? Cf:—

high heels. A woman tramp; women tramps collectively: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the height of her shoe-heels as compared with men's.

high iron. A main line; any track of a railroad as opposed to branch lines: though used by tramps (e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931), it is predominantly a railroad usage; in short, s.—not c.

high-jack, hi-jack, n. 'Suddenly a commotion . . . ; a man is roughly rushed into the open. He is a hi-jack caught in the act of robbing a fellow who was sleeping, a greater crime in the jungle than an open hold up,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923: tramps': since ca. 1914; ob. Cf. the origin of sense 1 of the v.—2. An instance of holding up a bootlegger: prob. c. at first; but by 1929, police and journalistic s. Ex sense 1 of the v.—3. A rare variant of high-jacker: Sept. 29, 1934, Flynn's, Howard McLellan.

high-jack or hi-jack, v. To rob men at night while they are asleep in a 'jungle': tramps': 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, "Hi-jacking", or robbing men at night when sleeping in the jungles'; by 1927, no longer specifically c. but also—as 'to rob (a bootlegger)'—s. widely used by journalists and the police, as in "Did you ever hear of the eighteenth Amendment?" the chief [of police] demanded caustically . . . "This bootlegging and hijacking has got to stop!": Peter Perry, 'Guns of England' in Flynn's, April 9, 1927. Irwin derives it ex the traditional tramp-greeting, Hi, Jack! The greeted party stops: so does the person held up or hi-jacked.—2. Hence, to forcibly subject (a boy) to pederasty: 1927, Kane; extant. Ex sense 1; cf. 4.—3. To force I.W.W. membership on (a hobo): tramps': 1927, Kane; extant.—4. To deprive (a fellow-crook) of booty (cf. 1), anglicized ca. 1931. John G. Brandon, The Pawnshop Murder, 1936.—5. To seduce: 1942, BVB. Cf. 2.

high jacker or hyphenated or as one word; hijacker. 'Highjacker. One who robs bootleggers and liquor smugglers of whisky and wine,' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924, but earlier in Robert W. Chambers, The Hi-Jackers, 1923; March 6, 1926, Flynn's, 'Rum-runners and hijackers'; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers—but by this time it had > police and journalistic s., at least in the sense defined by Henderson; 1933, Eagle, where it = one who robs drug-traffickers. Ex high-jack, v.—2. Hence, a criminal tramp (a yegg) that robs his fellows at the point of a firearm or by brute force: tramps': 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'One who robs tramps and hobos'; by 1932, English, as in Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1933; 1933, Ersine, 'A criminal who robs other criminals'; 1936, John G. Brandon, The Pawnshop Murder, of one who acts as at high-jack, v., 4; extant. This sense may antedate the other: cf. high-jack, v., 1.

high jacking; hi-jacking or hijacking. See high-jack, v.

high jinks. 'A gambler at dice, who having a strong head, drinks to intoxicate his adversary, or pigeon': 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'Fellows always on the look-out to rob unwary countrymen at cards, &c.'; 1848, Sinks of London (both nuances); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'High Jinks. Small gamblers'; by 1893 (F & H), † in England; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms, 'A petty gambler'; by 1920, † in U.S.A.

high law. 'Robbery,' says Gilbert Walker in 1552; properly, however, it signifies 'law on the highway' or highway robbery; Walker uses it also of footpaddery. 'Robbing by the highway side,' Greene, who (A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 1591) names the characters thus: 'The Theefe is called a High lawier. He that setteth the Watch, a Scrippet. He that standeth to watch, an Oake. He that is robd the Martin. When he yeeldeth, stouping.' Dekker in The Belman of London, 1608, repeats this list; he calls the setter of the watch, scripper, and the sentinel he spells oke; and pertinently, though his etymology is incorrect (highway being the origin), he remarks: '. . . The High Law: which taketh that name from the high exploits that are acted by it: The Schollers that learne it are called High Lawyers; yet they never walke to Westminster to pleade, though oftentimes they are called to the Barre, but then it is to have them Hold up their hands, that the Hangman may tell them their fortune. All the former Lawes'—Cheating Law, Barnard's Law, Vincent's Law, the Black Art, Curbing Law, Lifting Law—are attained by wit, but the High Law stands both upon Wit and Manhood The cases that he is to plead upon, is onely Stand and Deliver The Counsell a High Lawyer gives, is common, but his fees are unreasonable, for he strips his Clients of all.'

high lawyer. 'The high Lawyer that challengeth a purse by the high way side' (Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 1591) is a description that includes footpad as well as highwayman, the latter being the predominant sense; 1592, Greene, The Blacke Bookes Messenger, 'Let me boast of my selfe a little, in that I came to the credite of a high Lawyer, and with my sword freebooted abroad in the country like a Cavalier on horsebacke'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; app. † by 1720. Ex high law.

high men; also highmen. Dice so loaded as to turn up a high number: mid-C. 16–mid-19: c. >, by 1600, jargonistic S.E. Gilbert Walker, A manifest detection of the moste vyle and detestable use of Diceplay, 1552; 'Cuthbert Cunny-catcher,' The Defence of Conny catching, 1592. Opp. low men, q.v., and synonymous with high runners.

high mob; high mobsmen. Synonymous with swell mob, swell mobsmen, qq.v.: 1896, Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago, p. 124 (both); very rare after ca. 1920.

high monkey-monk, the. The principal person; the chief; the President: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, a professional thief speaking, 'That's what I'd do anyhow if I was the high monkey-monk in this country'; † by 1930. In pejorative derision.

high pad, n. 'The hygh pad, the hygh waye,' Harman, 1566; † by 1800. See pad, n., 1.—2. Hence the high pad, highway robbery, esp. by a highwayman: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'To attempt the hazardous enterprizes of the high pad'; † by 1780.—3. Hence, a highwayman; esp. 'a Highway Robber well Mounted and Armed': 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley (high-pad); 1725, A high-pad, adj. Engaged in highway robbery; pertaining to highway robbery: 1842, Pierce Egan, Captain Macheath ('The Bould Yeoman'), 'A chant I'll tip to you about a High-pad pal so down'; app. † by 1890. See the n., senses 2 and 3.

New Canting Dict., 'The Thirteenth Order of Villains, and the boldest of all others'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (erroneously of footpads); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); app. † by 1890.

high-padsman. A highwayman: 1842, P. Egan, Captain Macheath (song, 'The Bridle-Cull'), 'Tis by these little lays a High-padsman he thrives'; app. † by 1880. Cf. high pad, 1 and 2.

high-power. 'There were outriders, called "high-powers", who, mounted on horses, patrolled outlying regions, armed with high-velocity rifles,' C. Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937; convicts': from ca. 1935. Prob. power = man-power; high, ex their seat on the horse and the kind of rifle.

high-power tank. A cell used for application of the third degree: 1933, James Spenser, Limey, 'Spud stayed in the "high power tank" in the County Jail for two weeks'; 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; extant. See tank, n.

high-pressure, adj. Requiring skilful thieves: since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933, 'The captain uses no choirboys on a high-pressure job like this'. Cf. :—

high-pressure, v. To force (someone) into a deal; to intimidate: racketeers': since ca. 1922. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex high-pressure salesmanship in its ordinary commercial sense (Irwin).

high-pressure salesmanship is a synonym (Ersine, 1933) of canned heat or smoke.

high-rented. 'Very well known to the police,' F & H, 1893; † by 1920.

high roller. A tramp with money; a tramp that lives well: tramps': since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Either ex a high bank-roll, or ex a high (intoxicated) and rolling gait—or, maybe, just a complacent swagger.—2. 'A big-time gambler,' Ersine (who spells it hi-roller), 1933; by 1940, s.

high runners, recorded in 1670, is a rare variant of high men.

high score. 'The gross amount of money mulcted from a suoker,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; extant. See score, n.

high sea; usually pl., high seas, knees: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

high shot. A gang chief: since ca. 1930. In, e.g., Damon Runyon, Furthermore, 1938. An occ. variation of big shot.

High Shre(e)ve, the. See High Constable, the.

high sign; esp. in give the high sign, to give a warning; give the signal: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 'They'll stick you up if everything's O.K. If not, give them the high sign and they'll beat it'; 1933, James Spenser, Limey; by 1935, if not rather earlier, it was s. in U.S.A.; by 1937, English also—as in James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 1937; by 1940, s. in Britain as well. Ex the arm raised as a signal.

high(-)singer. Ten dollars; a ten-dollar bill: May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. It talks loudly. If an Englishman originated the term, there would be a pun on the musical and the banking senses of note.

high slipt or highslipt or high-slipt. See slipt and cf. highmen.

high spice. Highway robbery: 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London, II, i; app. † by 1860. See spice, n.

high spice toby, 'highway', appears to have been cheapjacks' s. of ca. 1820–70: witness C. Hindley, The Life and Adventures of a Cheapjack, 1876, p. 4.

high spicer. A highwayman: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), wrongly spicer high; † by 1890 (B & L) in England. See spicer and cf. high toby.

high spot. A (very) heavy gambler: 1925, Leverage; ob. He 'hits the high spots'.

high-stepper. Pepper: principally in the West: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

high stick. A catch-phrase; 'Close in!': issued as a command to pickpockets: C. 20. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932. Perhaps a memory from the days of footpads.

high-tail, v. To depart, to proceed, promptly and speedily: April 19, 1930, Flynn's, Hal Moore, 'We high-tailed it for the hideout'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, s. 'Adopted from the range country, where a startled mustang . . . elevates his tail . . . and runs like the wind' (Irwin).

high tide. That period of one's affairs 'when the Pocket is full of Money': 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee; by 1870, s. Opp. low tide.

high tober. Potter, 1797—and Sinks of London, 1848, follows him, and Matsell, 1859, varies Sinks—defines this as 'the highest order of thieves, a person who robs on the highway well dressed on horseback, always appears in good company,' but there is something wrong in that definition, for high tober = high toby, the highway (see tober), esp. the highway viewed as the setting for a robbery. Colonel George Hanger, in his Life, 1801, has scamping on his prancer upon the high tober.

high tober gloak. 'A highwayman well dressed and mounted': 1797, Humphry Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1870. Lit, a 'high road man'.

high toby. Highway, highroad, as opp. to a lane: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum (by implication); 1881, Rolf Boldrewood; ob. See tober and toby.—2. Hence, 'the game of highway robbery, that is, exclusively on horseback': 1812, J. H. Vaux; ca. 1819, The Young Prig; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; † by 1889 (B & L).—3. Hence, erroneously, a highwayman: 1823, Egan's Grose; so too in Punch, Jan. 31, 1857, and in Matsell, 1859.—4. "'On the High-toby"—high fellows who spent much money, but care little how 'tis got, generally gamblers': 1823, Jon Bee—but this sense is suspect.

high-toby gloak. A highwayman: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I (high toby gloque); 1823, Bee, 'A highway-robber, well mounted'; 1834 (see toby gloak); † by 1860. See preceding entry and gloak.—2. Hence, erroneously, robbery by a highwayman: ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack.

high(-)toby man. A highwayman: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1841, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin, 'She hooks herself on with Captain Turpin . . . the high tobyman'; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service (but not as a U.S.A. term); † by 1889 (B & L). See high toby.

high toby spice. See spice, the high-toby.

high(-)toff. 'A swell thief,' Leverage, 1925; extant, but never much used.

high topers (R. Burton, Vikram and Vampire, 1870, spells it high-topper), according to Sinks of London, 1848, constitute the 36th Order of Prime Coves; but no definition is given, and the term is suspect.

high-up man. A billiard-player that lives by his wits, putting up 'at the hotel in style and . . . busily reducing the bank balance of the local billiard-players' (Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, 1941): Australian: C. 20. He does things in style.

high water with him, it is. 'He is full of money,' Grose, 1785: almost certainly s.—not c. Cf. high tide.

high wool. 'Big money; big graft,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Very 'warm' (rich) and cosy.

highball. See high-ball, v.

highbinder. See high-binder.

highfly, the. See high fly, the.

highflyer, -ing. See high flyer, -ing.

Highland frisky, 'whiskey', is included in his list of c. terms by C. Bent, Criminal Life, 1891; but it is general rhyming s.

highmen. See high men.

highslipt. See high slipt.

higrade. See high grade.

hijack. See high jack.

hijacker, hijacking. See high jacker, high jacking.

hike. To go: 1724, Harper's 'A Canting Song' in John Thurmond's Harlequin Sheppard, 'I pray now listen a while to my Song, | How my Boman he hick'd away'—glossed as 'Her Rogue had got away'; 1744, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. IV, 'Hyke up to the Gigger and undubb it'—glossed as 'Go up to the Door, and unlock it'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'To hike off; to run away'; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'Off she ikes to the traps' (police); by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—Matsell, 1859, "'Hike; the cops have tumbled to us", run; the officers have seen us'; 1885, J. Greenwood, A Queer Showman, 'Once we were hiking a goodish way from home'; 1887, Baumann; by 1900, low s. Possibly a 'disguise' of pike. Perhaps cf. kick, v., 1. But prob. it is v.i. for v. reflexive, hike oneself off, to remove oneself, where hike (cf. the more recent hoick) seems to be cognate with jerk. Hike is very common in English dial. in senses 'to hoist, to gore or toss; to move suddenly, to go away' (hike off, to decamp).—2. 'To carry stolen property,' Brown, 1931; extant.

hiker. "'Get on to the Hiker"', (countryman) said Patsy to Joe,' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; ob. Ex hick, n.; in form influenced by hiker, 'one who goes (see hike) or walks'.—2. A town marshal: tramps': 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, M. H. Wesen; extant. 'One who walks'—hikes—'over his territory' (Irwin).—3. Hence, a night watchman: 1931, IA; extant.

Hill, the. The Sierra Nevada: tramps': late C. 19–20. Jack London, The Road, 1907 (see quot'n at road kid); extant. By humorous depreciation.

hincty. See hinky.

Hiney; after ca. 1920, gen. Heinie. A German: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1912, s. Ex a common German surname and the prevalence of -ein in German nouns and Proper Names.

hinged dub. 'A hing'd Dubb; a button'd-up Pocket,' John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753; † by 1870. I.e., a pocket hinged as though the flap were a door.

hingy; hingy-wipe. An India handkerchief: 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, "'How many wipcs did you nibble?" "Only two—a bird's eye and a hingy"''; ibid., 'A Slang Dictionary' (hingy-wipe); † by 1900. Prob. via Hindia, illitere for India.

hinky or hincty. Suspicious: since before 1934. Castle, 1938. Yiddish?

hip. A variant of hep (alert, shrewd, well-informed, etc.): Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'I sashayed for a legger an' run into a rube hip agent with a bottle and some jake which helped some'; 1929–31, Kernôt; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

hip, on the. See about town and cf. hip-peddler.

hip(-)inside. 'Inside coat pocket': 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; extant. The hip is designed to mislead overhearers.

hip(-)layer. An opium smoker: since the 1920's. In, e.g., Donald Barr Chidsey, 'The Black Stuff', in Flynn's, March 18, 1939. Ex lay on one's hip.

hip(-)outside. An outside coat-pocket: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; extant. Cf. hip(-)inside.

hip-peddler. A prostitute: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. ass- and butt-peddler.

hipe, v. See hype.

hipped. 'At a disadvantage; stranded; indigent,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Without funds, broke'; extant. Nothing to do with hipped, 'melancholy'; ex wrestling ('to be had—or held—on the hip').—2. 'With one hip slightly atrophied from lying on one side while smoking opium,' BVB, 1942: since ca. 1925. Cf. lie on one's hip (or side).

hippo. A truck: esp. bootleggers': Dec. 7, 1929, Flynn's, Robert H. Rohde, 'Madigan's Mob'; May 17, 1930, Flynn's; since 1934, only historical. Ex its shape—very roughly that of a hippo(potamus).

hippy, 'insane' (Leverage, 1925), is not c.

hips, peddle (or sell) one's. See peddle . . .

Hiram or h-. A yegg: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A self-chosen name for a band of yeggs'; slightly ob. Many old-time yeggs preyed upon country post-offices in districts populated by farmers or 'Hirams' (Irwin).

his means are two pops and a galloper. An underworld c.p. of ca. 1770–1840: 'He is a highwayman' (Grose). See pops and galloper.

his nabs. See nabs.

his nibs. See nibs, his hist (also heist), n. Highjacking; the theft of other bootleggers' liquor: 1930, E. D. Sullivan, Chicago Surrenders, 'Any such giant "heist"''; July 5 and 19, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick, 'Street heist—a hold up committed on the street' and 'Heist-hold-ups'; Dec. 1930, Burke, 'The mutts . . . go on the hist'; March 19, 1932, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'We thought it was a hist gang'; 1933, Ersine (heist), 'A stickup, daylight robbery'; Dec. 29, 1934, Flynn's, Convict 12627, 'He had ten years for a solo heist'; 1935, Hargan, 'Heist, go out on the—to commit [highway] robbery'; now only historical in the hijacking nuance, but extant as 'a hold-up robbery (of, e.g., a bank)' as in Flynn's, Feb. 13, 1937, Richard Sale (heist); 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; 1940, Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely; Sept. 17, 1941, Flynn's, Richard Sale; extant. Prob. ex the v.—

2. Hence, on who practises 'the heist': since the early 1930's. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937.

hist (pronounced higst); often heist. To hold up and steal (liquor): bootleggers': 1927, implied in hister; 1929, in form of hoist (see hoist, v., 4); July 19, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; Dec. 1930, Burke, 'We hist the mutt's plant for fifty cases of skee'; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1933, Ersine (heist), 'To rob at the point of a gun . . .; usually in daylight'; 1934, Thomas Minehan, Boy and Girl Tramps, where it = simply 'to steal'; 1934, Convict, 'H'isting a jug . . . the robbery of a bank'; May 18, 1935, Flynn's, Convict 12627, 'When I heisted the jug'; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 'To rob, esp. with a gun'; 1938, Castle (heist a joint); extant. I.e., hoist, which, in illiterate or in dial. pron., > hist.

hist (or heist) guy. See hister.

hist (or heist) man. See hister, ref. of 1933.

hist racket, the. Hold-up robbery, as a habit or a profession; hijacking: since ca. 1925. In, e.g., Flynn's, Dec. 29, 1934, Convict 12627; Feb. 25, 1939, Flynn's, Richard Sale (heist r.). See hist, n.

hister or heister; also h(e)ist guy. A hold-up man; a 'hijacker': 1927, Kane (heister); July 5, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick (heist guy); April 25, 1931, Flynn's, Louis Weadock (heister); July 1931, Godfrey Irwin (hister); Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn (heister); 1933, Ersine, 'Heistguy, heistman, n. A stickup artist'; Dec. 29, 1934, Flynn's, Convict 12627, 'French Lamar was a heist guy'; 1934, Rose (hist man; rare); May 1, 1937, Flynn's, Richard Sale; 1938, Convict 2nd (heist guy); Feb. 11, 1939, Flynn's; 1940, Raymond Chandler; extant. The gunman hists his victims; the victims hist (hoist, raise) their hands.

histol. 'A gun; a revolver' (Leverage, 1925): s., not c.

hit, n., 'a winning number in a lottery' (The New York Judicial Repository, 1818-19, General Sessions of Nov. 1818), is not c. but s. or j.

hit, v. "'Hit a guy" (ask a man) for a "light piece" (small change . . .) with the best 'bo on the "road"; Terence McGovern, It Paid to Be Tough, 1939: Canadian tramps' and beggars': C. 20. Cf. s. sting.—2. V.i., to begin to feel the effects of a drug: since ca. 1925. BVB.—3. 'Hit, make, make the man, mizake the mizan, score, score a connection or for a connection, shoot the curve, to purchase drugs from a peddler,' BVB, 1942: hit, since ca. 1910. Cf. 'strike lucky', to be lucky.

hit. 'Adj. (Old Bailey).—Convicted,' F & H, 1893: slightly ob. It is a blow.

hit and miss; hit or miss. Urine; to urinate: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20. M & B, 1944 (. . . and . . .). Rhyme on piss.

hit-and-miss habit. See chippy habit.

hit it. To use a drug: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'Some stiffis uses mud but coke don't need any jabbin', cookin' or flops. You can hit it an' go'; extant. Prob. ex hit the pipe.

hit or miss. See hit and miss.

hit the back door; often as vbl n., hitting . . . To beg at kitchen doors: tramps': C. 20. Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler, 1922. Cf. hit, v.; here, however, the verb seems to bear the usual American coll. sense, 'to arrive at'.

hit the ball. To succeed: C. 20: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, whence one derives the impression that the phrase is merely sporting s.—from baseball—as one also does from Stiff's 'Hit the ball—To speed up on the job' (1931). Godfrey Irwin defines it as 'to work hard'.—2. Hence, to travel swiftly: tramps': 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

hit the booze. To drink liquor: ca. 1912, George Bronson-Howard, The Snob; by 1920, low s.

hit the bricks. See bricks.

hit the dope. To take drugs, be a drug addict: Dec. 20, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; by 1945, low s.

hit the flute. To smoke opium; to be an opium-smoker: drug addicts': ca. 1870-1920. In his Opium Smoking, 1882, Dr H. H. Kane quotes The San José Mercury of Oct. 8, 1881, 'The foolish . . . boy . . . who deems it something smart and clever to "visit a joint" or "to hit the flute"'. Cf. the other addict-hit phrases; flute, ex the shape of the opium-pipe.

hit the gong—the gonger. To smoke opium: addicts': 1934, Rose (both); 1942, BVB (both); extant. Cf. kick the gong around.

hit the gow. To indulge in a drug: 1934, Rose; extant. See gow.

hit the grit. To jump, voluntarily, from a train: tramps': late C. 19-20. Jack London, The Road, 1907, 'The shack . . . told me I was risking my life, that it was a fast freight and that she went some. I told him I was used to going some myself . . . and I hit the grit. But I nailed her'—caught the train—'a third time, getting in between on the bumpers'; by 1920, at latest, also railroad s., as Harry Kemp's Tramping on Life (1922) very clearly shows. The grit of the railroad track.—2. To get released from prison: esp. convicts': Feb. 14, 1925, Flynn's, 'If you've got another "bit" | Waiting when you "hit the grit", | Don't be gloomy—laugh at it | With education'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To go away; to get a move on'; extant. Cf. bricks.

hit the hay. To be smoking marihuana: since ca. 1925. BVB. With a pun on s. sense 'to sleep'.

hit the hop. To be using narcotics: 1942, BVB. Cf. hit the gong.

hit the hump. To attempt to escape: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant.

hit the kip. To go to bed: 1934, Howard N. Rose. Cf. s. hit the hay.

hit the pipe. To be an opium-smoker; to smoke opium: 1886, Thomas Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America (p. 385), 'Joe did not "hit the pipe"'; cf. ibid. (p. 386), 'I "hit" my first pipe, as the slang goes, about four o'clock one afternoon'; 1891, J. A. Riis, How the Other Half Lives; 1893, F & H; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1904, Life in Sing Sing, 'Hitting the pipe at a hop-joint'. Smoking opium in an opium joint'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; 1924, George C. Henderson; 1925, Glen H. Mullin; 1926, N. Lucas, London and Its Criminals; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan; by 1930, police and journalistic s. Here (as in the other hit phrases) hit = 'to have recourse to, to take to'.—2. Esp. as vbl n., hitting the pipe, drinking: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; extant. Just to be different from sense 1.

hit the pots. 'Hitting the pots. Excessive drinking,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, at p. 258; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1940, low s.

hit the road. To go tramping: 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Hitting the Road. Travelling' (i.e., tramping); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1930, s. For semantics, cf. hit the pipe.

hit the rods. To depart hastily, to 'clear out': 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; extant. See rods.

hit the stem. To beg on the street: tramps': 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; extant. See stem, n., 1.—2. A variant (since ca. 1910) of hit the pipe, 1: 1929, Jack Callahan; 1933, Eagle; extant.

hit the street. To become a prostitute: C. 20. In, e.g., James Spenser, Limey, 1933. Cf. the euphemistic street walker, 'a prostitute'.—2. A variant of hit the streets; 1935, Hargan.

hit the streets. (Of a prisoner) to become a free man once more: convicts': 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; extant. Prob. suggested by the synonymous hit the bricks.

hit the stuff. To be talking drugs: since ca. 1920. BVB. Cf. hit the gow and hit the stem.

hit the ties. 'Sob-tale was going to "hit the ties" (walk the railroad tracks) to Seattle,' Terence McGovern, It Paid to be Tough, 1939: American and Canadian tramps': since ca. 1910. Cf. hit the grit and tie pass.

hit the turf. To be a professional criminal: 1903, J. Flynt, The Rise of Roderick Clowd, "'Think how long he's been hitting the turf! He had a big rep twenty years ago, an' he's done his share o' prison time, too'"; ob. See turf, n., and, for the form, cf. hit the road.

hit up, to beg from (a person); hit it up, to go begging: tramps': 1933, Ersine (the former); 1934, Howard N. Rose (the former); extant. Cf. hit the stem.

hitch. A sentence to, term of, imprisonment: racketeers': Aug. 2, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, Stiff, who implies that it has been current from before 1918; 1931, IA; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations; extant. 'From soldier slang for "an enlistment period"' (Godfrey Irwin).

hitch up the reindeers. 'To prepare the equipment for an injection of cocaine,' BVB, 1942: addicts': since ca. 1930. Cf. snow, sleigh ride, and the other 'snow = cocaine' metaphors.

hitting; usually good or bad hitting, a good or bad place in which to beg, to get food (and clothes): tramps': 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, '... Peg-leg met a hobo acquaintance who told him that Hot Springs was "good hittin"', generous ... with beggars'; extant. Cf. hit up.

hitting the back door. See hit the back door.

hitting the road. See hit the road.

hitting the pipe, 'opium-smoking', is the vbl n. of hit the pipe. (Darkness and Daylight, 1891.)

Hiver, usually in pl. Hivers are men or women that, esp. in the West, travel with a number of prostitutes and make money by them: ca. 1860–1900. B & L, 1889. Perhaps low s. rather than c. The prostitutes swarmed like bees to districts newly opened up. See, passim, Nard Jones's fine novel of the north-western States in the 1860's–70's: Swift Flows the River, 1939.

Hixey. A German: No. 1500, Life in Sing

Sing, 1904. But isn't this a misprint for Hiney, more usually spelt Heinie (or Heiny)?

hobble, n. See hobble, in a.

hobble, v. See hobble a plant, and hobbled.

hobble, in a. A grave difficulty, a 'fix'. 'Do you recollect that he made use of any threat?—He said he was in a hobble for going along with her': 1779, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey (Brackley Kennet's mayoralty, 1st session, No. I, Part ii, p. 47); Oct. 1835, Sessions Papers; April 1851, Sessions; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. I.e., hampered—as a horse is by a hobble.

hobble a plant. 'To spring it', i.e. to find booty that has been concealed by another party: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1900. Proleptic: the finder hobbles the planter.

hobbled, ppl adj.; other parts of the v. are rare. 'Bound or hobbled, alias Taken', i.e., arrested: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732; 1774, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey (Dec.); 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters (Glossary), 'Hobbled. A term when any of the gang is taken up, and committed for trial, to say, such a one is hobbled'; ibid., 'Hobbled upon the leg ... transported or sent on board the hulks'; 1797, Potter (id.); 1801, The Life of Col. George Hanger; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1848, Sinks of London; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. Ex hobbling a horse.—2. Hence, to cause (a person) to be arrested: 1780, Sessions Papers (4th session, mayoralty Brackley Kennet, Part iii, trial of Mary Holt); † by 1910.

hobbled upon the leg. See the second 1789 quot'n in the preceding entry.

hobgoblin. In speaking of professional house-breakers, Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, 1659, says, 'They endeavour to seduce some servant of that house ...; if that fail, they often convey an Hobgoblin (as they call him) in some Cask or Trunk, who (when there's a fit occasion) lets them all in to perpetrate their work'; app. † by 1700. Ex the fact that the resulting burglary is a mystery to the victims, who suggest that it was a hobgoblin's work.

hobo. A tramp: 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary); ibid., p. 108, 'There are white loafers known as "hoboes", which is the general technical term among white tramps everywhere'—but an earlier record is afforded by Josiah Flynt's article, 'The American Tramp', in The Contemporary Review, Aug. 1891; 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp, 'I'm a hobo—a man that rides free and begs'; 1903, Sylva Clapin, A New Dict. of Americanisms, 'Hobo. A tramp. Originally Western, but wellnigh universal now' and, by implication, no longer c. Since ca. 1910, a hobo has properly been one who 'works and wanders', whereas a tramp 'dreams and wanders' (Dr Ben L. Reitman); a bum is 'a stationary non-worker' (St John Tucker). The origin is obscure. But, as a tramp begs food or money and uses a wheedling voice to obtain it, the word may represent hoboe, a variant of hautboy (now usually oboe), a wind instrument; cf. the origin of cant. The O.E.D. and Weekley essay no etymology; Webster says, 'of uncertain origin' and 'origin unknown'; Irwin condemns the (h)oboe suggestion and proposes the 'homeward bound' reply of soldiers returning home after the Civil War and mentions, à titre de curiosité, the L. 'homo bonus' (or 'good man': cf.

good man, senses 2-4). Nicholas Klein, in The Dearborn Independent; March 18, 1922, says that 'the name originated from the words "hoc-boy" plainly derived from work on the farm'. The D.A.E. thinks the most likely origin to be 'Ho! beau!' in address to, or among, tramps: and that (quantum valeat) is my opinion too.—2. 'We were led to the Hobo and locked in. The "Hobo" is that part of a prison where the minor offenders are confined together in a large iron cage. Since hoboes constitute the principal division of the minor offenders, the aforesaid iron cage is called the Hobo,' Jack London, The Road, 1907, but with reference to the year 1894; 1927, Kane, who cites the variant, the hobo cage, which, however, is rather police s. than c.; extant.

hobo belt. The citrus food belt of California: tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Many migratory workers—i.e., hoboes—go there in the fruit-picking season.

hobo cage, the. See hobo, 2, ref. of 1927.

hobo-monicker (monicker, mon(n)ika, etc.). A name scratched, carved, painted or written on a water-tank, esp. at a recognized stop, or stage, for tramps: 1907, Jack London, The Road (in ref. to period 1892-1900); 1918, L. Livingston, Madame Delcassee; by 1920, no longer to be classified as c. See the separate elements.

hobo night-hawk. A Pennsylvania Railroad policeman disguised as a tramp in order to gain information and to suppress trespassing: 1905, in a story told in Hobo Camp Fire Tales, 7th ed., 1911; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who applies it to any railroad detective so travelling; by 1940, s.

hobo short line. Suicide effected by jumping in front of a train: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin. A short way out, often chosen by old or dispirited tramps (Irwin).

hobo special. 'When a [freight] train carries only empties . . ., she is known on the Road as a Hobo special,' Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925; app. since ca. 1910. Especially suited to the needs of hoboes desirous to travel.

hock, n. See hocks.—2. See hock, in.—3. 'The last card in the box': U.S. gamblers' and card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell (see also hock, in, sense 2); app. † by 1914.—4. A pawnbroker's office: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1940, low s. Perhaps short for English s. hock-shop. Hence:—5. 'Something that can be pawned,' Ersine, 1933; extant.—6. A man that consorts with 'poofs': C. 20. Partridge, 1938.

hock, v. To pawn: 1881, The Man Traps of New York, p. 30; 1895, J. W. Sullivan; 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, 'He had "hocked" the watch'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; by 1935, low s. Perhaps suggested by in hock (see hock, in).—2. To raid (and close to the public): since ca. 1920: 1928, H. Wilson Harris, Human Merchandise, (an American souteneur log.) 'I can show you places where swell joints [fine brothels] opened up, and inside of a week they got hocked (raided)'. Ex sense 1.

hock, adj. See sense 2 of the next entry.

hock, in. 'Caught in hock; caught by the heels': 1859, Matsell; ibid., p. 113, 'In hock . . . in prison'; 1860, Charles Martel, The Detective's Note-Book (England), 'In about ten minutes from that time we had them "in hock" (the cells)'; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, 'Nabbed in the hock, caught in the very act'; 1887, G. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police, 'To defend a man "in hock"'; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; by 1914, police s. Ex S.E. hock, 'a rod, stick, or chain, with a hook at the end' (O.E.D.).—2. 'When one gambler is caught by another, smarter than himself, and is beat, then he is in hock. Men are only caught or put in hock, on the race-tracks, or on the steamboats down South. In a hock-game, if a man hits a card, he is obliged to let his money lie until it either wins or loses. Of course there are nine hundred and ninety-nine chances against the player, and the oldest living man never yet saw him win, and thus he is caught in hock': U.S. card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell; 1880, R. K. Fox; 1893, F & H; 1903, Clapin; extant. See hock, n., 3, but the effective origin is the same as for sense 1.

hock-rock. A precious stone, esp. a diamond; a diamond-ring: 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, '“Pipe the hock-rock on her pinky”'—Arnold glanced as Beau pointed and saw on her hand a marquise, a pure white triangle edged by tiny flat rubies'; 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; slightly ob. See the separate elements.

hock shop. Pawnshop: April 1871, Sessions Papers (p. 485), 'That piece that I dropped in the hock shop'; by 1910, low s. in Britain; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (U.S.A.); 1933, Ersine; by 1936, low s. in U.S.A. Cf. hock, v., 1.

hockey, 'drunk': not c. but s. hock(ey)-dockies or -dockeys. Shoes: 1789, Geo. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx (hock-dockeys); 1874, H (hock-dockies); by 1889 (B & L), low s. In form, cf. hopper-dockers.

hocks, 'feet': not c. but 'a vulgar appellation'.

hocks, on the. See on the hocks.

hocus, n., 'a deleterious drug mixed with wine, &c. which enfeebles the person acted upon': 1823, Bee. For status, cf. the v. Either ex the v. or ex the adj.—2. Hence, narcotics in general: U.S.A.: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. BVB spells it hokus.—3. A wallet or pocketbook: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. A pun on poke.

hocus, v. 'To hocus a man, is to put something into his drink, on the sly, of a sleepy, stupifying quality, that renders him unfit for action': 1821, Pierce Egan, Boxiana, III, 198, where it is classified as a sporting term: prob., even orig., it was sporting s., but it was, for many years, on the borders of c. Prob. ex:—

hocus, adj. Drunk: ca. 1780-1840. Prob. s., not c. In, e.g., Potter, 1797. Ex the next.

hocus pocus may orig. have been c. The earliest record (1624) is in the long † sense, a juggler or a conjuror (B. Jonson, in The Staple of Neues, acted in 1625, has 'When Iniquity came in like Hokos Pokos, in a Juglers jerkin'; in Anon., The Counter Rat, 1635, Hocus Pocus is given as the name of 'The Kings Juggler'); the other senses had all arisen before the end of C. 17. The origin is problematic: 'A celebrated writer supposes it to have been a ludicrous corruption of the words, hoc est corpus, used by the popish priests in consecrating the host' (Grose, 1785).

hoccusser. A professional thief whose method it is to stupefy his prospective victim: 1870, The Broadway, Nov., 'Among Thieves'; ob. Ex hocus, v.

hod. A mason; a builder: 1889, B & L; extant. Cf. (perhaps ex) the obsolescent S.E. hodman, a bricklayer's labourer.—2. A tobacco pipe: C. 20: 1934, Convict.

hod, carry the. See carry the hod.

hog, n.; pl. hogs. A shilling: 1676, Coles; 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia; 1698, B.E., 'You Darkman Budge, will you Fence your Hog in the next Boozing-ken, c. do ye hear you House Creeper, will you Spend your Shilling at the next Ale-house'; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1773, Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles), 'Because we could not three hog pay, | Why we were sent to quod'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (hogg); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, Sessions Papers; 1821, J. Burrowes; 1823, Bee; Nov. 15, 1835, The Individual; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; by 1870, low s. in Britain; in late C. 19–20 South Africa, it appears to have remained c.: J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946. Origin? The prob. explanation will be found at bull, n., 1 (at end).—2. Hence, in U.S.A. (—1794): a pistareen, i.e., a small Spanish silver coin (worth a quarter of a dollar or about 1s. 3d.) formerly current in the West Indies and in the U.S.A.; 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, where it is applied to a ten-cent piece; 1903, Clapin (id.); † by 1920.—3. A locomotive: tramps': since ca. 1920: 1929–31, Kernôt; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1940, as orig., it was predominantly railroad s. It is 'a "hog" for coal' (Irwin).

hog, v. To humbug (a person): 1859, Matsell, Hogging. To humbug'; † by 1910.

hog, on the. See on the hog.

hog box. A crooked faro box: gamblers': ca. 1890–1920. Eagle, 1933: 'Faro hasn't been generally played for years, I've never heard this term, and he must have taken it from some old glossary' (Godfrey Irwin, letter Nov. 10, 1937).

hog eye. 'Large skeleton key for store or public building, as distinguished from a skeleton house key,' Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 1927; 1933, Ersine, 'A patent lock'; extant. Ex its size and shape.

hog-grubber, 'a close-fisted, narrow-soul'd sneaking Fellow' (B.E., 1698), is s., not c. So too—it is prob. a misprint—hog-grabber, 'A sneaking mean fellow, a cadger' (1848, Sinks of London Laid Open).

hog head or hoghead. A railroad engineer: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Stiff, 'This is also a railroad term'; by 1935, definitely to be no longer classified as c. Cf. hog, n., 3.

hog law's got me, the. I'm exhausted: tramps': since ca. 1920. Adopted ex railroad s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'The Federal Sixteen-Hour Law, prohibiting railroad workers from working more than that time without suitable rest'.

Hogan's flop. "Hogan's Flop" is known from coast to coast among hobos. . . The first "Hogan's Flop" was located on South State Street [Chicago]. Later it moved . . . it has been located in several places. The original Hogan, who was a Spanish-American War veteran, has passed to his reward. Only his name remains. Every winter, however, someone starts a "flop" and it invariably inherits the name and fame of Hogan. Hogan is now a myth, a sort of eponymous hero,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923 (in especial reference to Chicago).

hogg. See hog, n., references of 1797 and 1809.

hogger is a variant of hog head: tramps': since ca. 1920: 1931, Stiff. Adopted from railroad s.; and after 1935 at latest, no longer to be classified as c. He drives the 'hog' (see the n., sense 3).

hogo, 'for Haut Goust, a strong Scent', a stink, is not c. but s.

hoghead. See hog head.

hogshead, couch a. See couch a hogshead.

hoist, n. For the underworld practice known as the hoist, see hoist, go (up)on the; first recorded in 1714; current until ca. 1840.—2. As a synonym of 'the lift' (see lift, n., 1): 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected, 'The Lift or Hoist'; 1797, Potter, 'Lift, or hoist, shop-lifting, or robbing a shop'; 1812, Vaux, 'When the hoist is spoken of, it commonly applies to stealing articles of a larger, though less valuable, kind [than those stolen in 'the pinch': see pinch, n., 2], as pieces of muslin, or silk handkerchiefs, printed cotton, &c.'; 1887, Baumann; current in U.S.A. in C. 20, as, e.g., in Jackson & Hellyer, 1914, esp. in be on the hoist; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief (in a straight hoist, the pickpocket raises himself on his toes); 1938, F. D. Sharpe (of The Flying Squad), 'Hoist (the): Shoplifting ("Nell's gone out at the hoist," or "Nell is hoisting")'; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road (as a variant of hist); extant. For semantics, cf. lift, n.—3. 'This'—'the hoist (see hoist, go on the)—'is done by the assistance of a confederate, called the hoist, who leans his head against the wall, making his back a kind of step or ascent': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); app. † by 1893 (F & H), at least in England.—4. 'A person expert at this practice' (sense 2) 'is said to be a good hoist': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1893 (F & H).—5. A kidnapping: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex sense 5 of the v:—6. A shoplifter: C. 20. In, e.g., Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941, and Black, 1943. Ex sense 2.—7. That which is hoisted or stolen by a pickpocket: Canadian: since ca. 1910. Anon. letter of June 1, 1946.

hoist, v. See hoisting, 1, 2. Also occ. independently: e.g., Leverage, 1925, 'Hoist, v. To steal as a shoplifter (from stores)'.—3. 'To rob houses by climbing into a window' (as in n., 3): 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), but doubtless current in England at least a generation earlier; 1893, F & H; † by 1900 in this particular nuance, but in Flynn's (U.S.A.), Aug. 11, 1928, Don H. Thompson uses it of burgling a bank—a nuance that is a mere extension of the 'window-burglary' sense. See hoist, n., 3.—4. To steal: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Hoisting a slab of stones. Stealing a tray of diamonds'; April 13, 1929, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson, 'The Roaring Road', 'We'll just hoist his stuff'—liquor—'and what the hell will he do about it?'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; extant.—5. Hence, to kidnap (someone): U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant.—6. To be engaged, actively, in shoplifting: since ca. 1925. F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938. Ex hoist, n., 2.

hoist, go (up) on the. Alex. Smith, The Hist. of the Highwaymen, 1714, 'He pursued his old Courses of going on the Top or Hoist, that is, breaking into a House in a dark Evening, by getting in at a Window one Story high, which they perform by one Thief standing on the Shoulders of another'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1830.

hoist-guy, occurring several times in John G. Brandon's novels of 1935–46, is incorrect for heist guy.

hoist lay, the. An elaboration of 'the hoist' (see hoist, n., 3): 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), but prob. current in England since ca. 1840; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; † by 1940. See the elements.

hoist merchant. A shoplifter: later C. 19–20. Partridge, 1938. See hoist, n., 2; merchant is s. for 'chap, fellow'.

hoister. 'Hoisters. Such as help one another upon their Backs in the Night-time to get into Windows,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; 1889, B & L (as an Americanism); prob. † by 1900. Ex the basic S.E. sense, 'to raise'.—2. Hence (?). a shoplifter: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; Oct. 7, 1865, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (U.S.A.), with variant hyster; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review ('Criminal Slang')—with variant hyster; April 1919, The (American) Bookman; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, Brown; 1931, IA; 1933, Joseph Augustin; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; 1945, Jack Henry, What Price Crime?; extant.—3. A pickpocket: 1847, J. H. Jesse, London, I; † by 1893 (F & H). Cf. hoisting, 1.—4. 'Wagon thief,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: U.S.A.: by 1930, ob.; by 1940, †.—5. A kidnapper: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex sense 5 of hoist, v. hoister mot. 'Hoister mots—women who go into shops, and privately steal some small article': 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. See hoister, 2, and mot.

hoisting. 'Hoisting, among pickpockets, is, setting a man on his head, that his money, watch, &c. may fall out of his pockets; these they pick up, and hold to be no robbery. See REVERSED': 1796 (therefore, from not later than 1791), Grose, 3rd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1920.—2. Shoplifting: 1859, H; 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1904, Hutchins Hopgood (U.S.A.); 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'Jerry had spilled the hoisting graft an' was on the blank'; 1931, A. R. L. Gardiner; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant. Cf. hoist, n., 2.—3. As an American synonym of hoist lay: 1889, B & L; extant. Cf. hoister, 1.

hoisting graft. See hoisting, 2.

hoisting job. A robbery: 1935, Hargan; extant. Cf. hoisting, 2.

hoisting kicks. 'Very large pockets in a coat or dress, and used for the purpose of concealing stolen goods,' Leverage, 1925; April 18, 1925, Flynn's, '... A shoplifter's "kick", which with newer improvements took on the name "hoisting kick"'. This latter consisted of a lined skirt so stitched that it would hold large quantities of loot'—the reference being, app., to ca. 1905–14; extant. See the elements.

hoker is a C. 16 spelling of hooker (q.v. at angler).

hokey(-)pokey. A punishment cell, a dark cell: convicts': C. 20. Compton Mackenzie, Introduction to 'Red Collar Man', Chokey, 1937. Rhyming on chokey, 1.

hokus. See hocus, n., 2.

Holborn (Hill), go up or ride up; in C. 18, also ride backwards up H.H. To be hanged; lit., to ride up Holborn Hill on the way from Newgate Prison to Tyburn: C. 17–18; then only historical. Dekker & Webster, Northward Hoe, 1607, 'Sfoot'—i.e., by God's foot!—'nothing mooves my choller, but that my chaine is Copper: but tis no matter, better men... have rode up Holburne, with as bad a thing about their neckes as this'; 1611, Rowlands, The Knave of Clubbs, 'They present were for new-gate voyage bound, | From thence up Holborne-hill they were convoid | And so to Tiberne all their quarrell staid'. By 1700, if not earlier, the phrase had > s., verging on the proverbial. In C. 18 often in the form ride up Holborn backwards, as, e.g., in Alex. Smith's The History of the Highwaymen, 1714, and in Anon., The Lives of Whitney, Cottington, and Waters, 1753. 'The last execution at Tyburn, and consequently of this procession, was in the year 1784, since which the criminals have been executed near Newgate,' Grose, 1785. Cf. go west, q.v. at west, go.

hold, n. Retention, in jail, of a prisoner due for release: since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. Ex 'to hold back'.

hold, v. i. 'To have drugs for sale,' BVB, 1942: since ca. 1910. Cf. s., 'How are you holding?'—'How are you off for money?'

hold down. To extract a living from (e.g., a town), esp. by theft or begging: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, (a hobo speaking) 'Course this berg [Boston] ain't Chi, an't ain't 'Frisco either, but I can hold it down all right'; extant. Cf. the colloquial hold down a job, 'to work satisfactorily at it and, therefore, retain it'.

hold heavy. See holding heavy.

hold her down; hold the lady down. See holding the lady down.

hold one's guts. To keep silent; to refuse information to the police: Australian: since ca. 1918. Baker, 1945. Contrast spill one's guts.

hold(-)out, n. A vest hold-out and a sleeve hold out were devices whereby a card-sharper seizes such cards as he wishes to secrete in waistcoat or sleeve: card-sharpers': app. since ca. 1860: B & L, 1889; 1914, J. H. Keate, Mephisto's Greatest Web (gambling in U.S.A.), where a hold-out is a device for holding cards either up one's sleeve or under the table until they are wanted. They held out claws.—2. 'The retention of... an overshare,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Somewhat like a fund of "fall money" in many cases'; extant.

hold out, v. To retain more than one's share of the loot: prob. at least as early as the n. (see sense 2 thereof); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex s. or coll. hold out on (a person).

hold-over. A local jail: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Prisoners are there held-over, awaiting transference.

hold still. 'As the Slaver says, they won't "hold still" (won't be fooled) when they are taken directly to the resort [brothel],' Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909: white-slave traffic: late C. 19–20. I.e., keep still, remain quiet.

hold the bag. To be duped: C. 20; by 1935, s. Partridge, 1938. Short for to be left holding the bag.

hold the kid (down). 'To keep a catamite in subjection,' BVB, 1942: C. 20. See kid, n., 13.

hold-up, n. 'One who robs by "holding up" a traveller, train, etc.' (O.E.D.): 1885, Harper's Magazine, April; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; ob. by 1915; † by 1930.—2. A robbery committed thus: 1896, The Boston Journal, Dec. 29, 'The prisoner confesses to a hold-up' (O.E.D.). By 1900, both senses were s.; by 1915, the latter sense was coll. and by 1930 it was Standard American.

hold up, v. To stop and rob (a person) with violence: not c., but coll. (—1887) > Standard American.—2. To arrest (a person): British: since ca. 1880; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; † by 1930. Prob. ex sense 1.—3. To take care of (a person) in need: U.S.A.: 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; extant.

hold-up man. A member of a hold-up gang; a man operating alone as a 'hold-up' (q.v.): since ca. 1895: Feb. 1901, The North American Review, "The hold-up man" goes abroad after dark to follow his nefarious occupation' (O.E.D.); 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; by 1910, no longer c. Ex hold-up, n.

holdfast. Property; gage or pledge: 1822, P. Egan, The Life of Samuel Denmore Hayward, 'His Uncle was not to be moved [into granting a loan] without having some holdfast in his possession'; † by 1890. That to which one holds fast.

holding heavy. Having plenty of money: since ca. 1918. Ersine, 1933.

holding the lady down; holding her down. Holding a train down, or 'going underneath' or 'swinging under', is: riding on a train, without paying, by ensconcing oneself, in a recumbent position, on the rods underneath a carriage: since the middle 1890's. Jack London, The Road, 1907, heads a chapter thus—'Holding Her Down' and uses the phrase to go underneath; Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'Holding the Lady down.—Riding on the "rods" . . . over a rough stretch of track or on a fast train. . . . The tramp lies prone on the "rods" and holds on tightly to prevent his being shaken off'; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble ('holding her down'); extant. Ex the posture normally assumed by the man in copulation.

hole. For put (a person) in the hole, see garden, put in the.—2. A solitary-confinement cell or prison-section: U.S.A.: C. 20. Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (ca. 1901–11), pub. in 1912, 'When I worked in the mill the rule was that a man should go to the "hole" on bread and water from Saturday night till Monday morning if he failed to have his task completed at the end of the week'; by ca. 1920, rather gen. prison s. than specific c.—3. Hence, an ordinary prison-cell: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; extant.—4. The Hole is the subway: U.S.A.: 1933, Eagle; extant. Prob. short for an orig. naïve the Big Hole: cf. English railwaymen's hole, 'a tunnel'.—5. As 'a shilling', current among tramps (Hugh Milner, letter of April 22, 1935), but perhaps it is rather to be classified as pitchmen's s. (Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934).—6. A criminal's hiding place: U.S.A.: 1931 (see hole, go in a); 1933, Ersine; 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece, 'The best way to leave a Hole was early in the evening' (traffic then being heavy); Feb. 11, 1939, Flynn's, Richard Sale; 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra; extant.

hole, go in a; hole up (much the more usual). To go into hiding: since ca. 1924 (and since ca. 1935, hole up is also Australian: Baker, 1942); 1931, Fred D. Pasley, Al Capone, 'He fled Chicago; went in a hole, as the underworld saying is, for eighteen months'; 1933, Ersine (hole up); Oct 5, 1935, Flynn's, Hugh Crane, "'Sure," said Bain, "I can hole up for the rest of my life. That'd be grand, wouldn't it?"'; by 1937 (James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too), the latter was also English; 1938, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece ('hole up'); Feb. 11, 1939, Flynn's, Richard Sale; 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra; Nov. 1, 1941, Flynn's, James W. Booth; 1944, W. R. Burnett, Nobody Lives Forever; extant.

hole, to a. Esp. suit to a hole, to suit thoroughly, be extremely acceptable to, be just what one wanted: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'This suited Grover, "to a hole"'; by 1910, no longer c. Cf. English s. top-hole, 'excellent'.

hole-card, 'a card with the back up (stud [poker])': 1925, Leverage: on the borderline between card-sharpers' c. and ordinary card-playing s.

hole up, v. See hole, go in a.

holiday. Imprisonment: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Ironic. Cf. vacation.

holler, n. A complaint, or a giving of information, to the police: 1898, W. T. Stead, Satan's Invisible World Displayed, p. 114, quoting a swindler's evidence in a police case of 1894; 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, thief loquitur, 'If I make a touch here in town [N.Y.C.] an' the holler's big, they'll land me 'f they can'; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; by 1910, police s. Cf. squeal (v.), squeak (v.), and squawk (v.).

holler, v. To complain to the police; to give information to the police: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1910, police j. But holler copper, to 'turn copper' (informer), may have remained c.—as in Damon Runyon, Furthermore, 1938. Perhaps imm. ex the n.—2. Hence 'to discover; to detect'; Leverage, 1925; ob.

hollow; bit of hollow. A turkey, a pheasant: not (I think) c. but low s.: 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, III (the latter). Perhaps orig. of a bird that has been prepared for cooking.

Hollywood, go. See go down on.

Holy Ghost, the. The (winning) post: Pacific States: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming. Blasphemy, by the way, is rare in rhyming s.

Holy Ground; Holy Land. (Always the . . .) In Tom Crib's Memorial, 1819, Tom Moore speaks of 'The Buffers [boxers], both "Boys of the Holy Ground"' and, in a footnote, remarks that the quot'n 'is from a celebrated Fancy chant, ending, every verse, thus:—

For we are the Boys of the Holy Ground, And we'll dance upon nothing [be hanged], and turn us round!

It is almost needless to add that the Holy Ground, or Land [e.g., in G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, 1846], is a well-known region of St. Giles's [Parish, London]. The term, which seems to have been current ca. 1785–1870, may have been c. until ca. 1820, then low and pugilistic s. There is obviously a pun on 'St Giles'.

Holy Joe. A prison chaplain: 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; 1889, B & L; 1898, J. W. Horsley, Prisons and Prisoners; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.), 'A preacher (esp. a minister)'; 1935, Hargan, 'Protestant minister' (convicts' term); extant. Joe, by personification; holy, by his office, his talk, his knowledge of the Scriptures.

Holy Land 'the. See Holy Ground.

home. A preventive—a detention—prison: convicts': since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Geo. Ingram, Stir, 1933. Ex:—

Home, the. 'He has . . . been to "the Home", as they'—criminals—'call Camp Hill Detention Prison,' Rev. Eustace Jarvis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, 1925; 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 'Getting the home. Preventive detention'; extant. It becomes as it were a home, for it is at least a temporary one.

home guard. A simple, little-travelled, inexperienced or essentially steady countryman: 1871, Anon., State Prison Life (at Jeffersonville, Southern Indiana), 'There were two men on board, one of whom had been with Morgan, and the other with the "home guards" opposing him'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Howard N. Rose; ob.—2. Hence (?), prob. since ca. 1910, as in 'State Street [Chicago] is the rendezvous of the vagabond who has settled and retired (even if it is only for the winter), the "home guard" as they are rather contemptuously referred to by the tribe of younger and more adventurous men who still [even in the winter] choose to take the road,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; ibid., 'The home guard, like the hobo, is a casual laborer, but he works, often only by the day, now at one and now at another of the multitude of unskilled jobs in the city . . . Contemptuously termed "home guards" by the hobo and the tramp . . . They . . . spend their leisure time on the "main stem"'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1931, Stiff (of a tramp that, always remaining in town or city, never 'hits the road'); 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough, 'Hoosiers, or homeguard stiff'; extant. Ex the home-protection companies formed during the Civil War.

home-made frail. A banker's order-form: since ca. 1930. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. See frail, 2 and 3.

Home of Rest, the. Parkhurst Prison: 1931, Brown; extant. Ironie.

home port. 'A saloon or other place used as a hang-out by a gang,' Ersine, 1933: since the middle 1920's; extant. Humorously nautical.

homework. Burglary: 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'My bum homework around over the country'; extant. Humorous.

homey. See omee.

homo, 'a man': low and buckish s. of ca. 1818–40. (P. Egan, Life in London, 1821.) Also Lingua Franca—usually pronounced omee.—2. (Variant homie). A homosexual: rather is it, even orig., s. than c. Partridge, 1937 (homo); BVB, 1942 (both).

homoney. A wife: 1753 John Poulter, Discoveries, 'My Homoney is in Quod; my Wife is in Gaol'; Jan. 1799, The Monthly Magazine; † by 1893 (F & H). Perhaps a feminizing of L. homo, 'a man'; perhaps even a blend of homo + gypsy romeni, 'wife'. The presence, the influence, of homo is extremely probable, but the further process or influence is problematic.

honest John, 'an ordinary decent citizen': s., now coll.; never c. The term arose ca. 1900. Cf. John, 1 and 2.

honest penny, turn an. To support oneself by prostitution: ca. 1850–1910. In, e.g., Baumann, 1887. Ironie.

honey. Money: 1859, Matsell; by 1903 (Clapin, Americanisms), it was s. Not by rhyme but ex the colour of gold coins.—2. 'A colored person' (esp., a Negro): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1942, BVB, 'A Negro prostitute'; extant in latter nuance. Cf. dinge and shine, both of which are American.—3. A fruit train: 1935, Hargan; extant. 'Perhaps from "honeydew" melons, most of which are brought from long-distances to the New York market' (Godfrey Irwin).

honey(-)dipping. 'Working as a shovel stiff in a sewer, or any kind of unpleasant shovel work,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, IA. The ref. is to human excrement.

honey up. To flatter (someone) for a special purpose: 1934, Rose; by 1940, s. I.e., to sweeten him.

honeymoon stage, the. Drug-exhilaration during its most agreeable period: since ca. 1920: 1931, Arthur Woods, Dangerous Drugs; 1934, Ferdinand Tuohy, Inside Dope, 'One has only to examine the dope vocabulary to find it dominated by Americanese, implying pioneer indulgence. "Helldust", "coke", "the needles", "honeymoon stage", "having an edge", "bull horrors", "the leaps", "hophead", "happy dust", "shot", all are of American origin, and many more besides'; extant. Cf. foolish powder and happy dust.

hong, 'a crowd of Chinese' (Leverage, 1925); rather than c., this is, I think, Chinatown s. Cf. Chinese tong.

honkytonk. A low Negro dive: 'In songs of the California miners of the 50's', Jean Bordeaux, letter of Oct. 23, 1945; 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man; 1925, Leverage; 1928, Chicago May, 'Gaudy saloon with back-room hangout' (for crooks); 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1931, IA, 'A speakeasy with gaudy trimmings'; by 1935, (low) s. 'Honky . . . Banjo music,' says Leverage; echoic. The tonk element is merely reduplicative.

hooch. Whiskey: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (Glossary, s.v. skee); 1924, Geo. G. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Hootch Liquor'; 1926, Edgar Wallace, The Nothing Tramp (American setting); Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1927, C. F. Coe, Me—Gangster; 1929, C. F. Coe, Hooch—but by this time, if not by 1928, the term was also police and journalistic s., therefore no longer eligible. 'The name comes from the Western States, prob.

from Alaska in the first instance'; in Alaska, 'the Indian tribes call liquor of any description "hoocheno" or "kootznahoo"' (Irwin).

hooch racket, the. The liquor business: tramps': 1933, Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby; extant. See hooch.

hood. A criminal—'any male underworld character' (Ersine): racketeers': May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1930, E. D. Sullivan, Chicago Surrenders; 1930, Burke, 'None of those St Louis hoods are going to cut in here, see?'; Sept. 19, 1931, Flynn's, Paul Annixter uses it of a gunman, a killer; Dec. 3, 1932, Flynn's, Dugal O'Liam; 1933, Eagle; April 14, 1934, Flynn's, Carrol John Daly; 1935, David Lamson; Feb. 29, 1936, Flynn's, Richard Wormser; 1937, David Hume, Cemetery First Stop!; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper; 1938, Castle; Nov. 1, 1941, Flynn's, James W. Booth; 1945, John G. Brandon, Death in Duplicate; extant. An abbr. of hoodlum, a rough.

hood-winked. Coles, 1676, has 'Hood-wink't, c. Benighted, belated.' I suspect that there is an error both of definition and of classification. Coles is usually most dependable: but I find no other support than in the not very trustworthy glossary in J. Shirley's The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 1707.

hoodlum, 'a rough', 'a tough hooligan', and hoodlum-wagon, 'a police-patrol van' (rare and journalistic), are not c. but s. that, for hoodlum, has, ca. 1940, > Standard American.

hoof, 'the foot', is s.—not c. (Potter, 1797.) —2. An active homosexual: 1833, trial of Fred Marchell and others, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-34, IX, 'He told me there was a man in the City who was in the habit of giving money for boys; . . . he called them hoofs . . . ; it means a person addicted to unnatural propensities'; 1941, Val Davis (see quot'n at jane, 4); extant. Whence perhaps poof.

hoof, beat it on the. See beat it.

hoof, gad the. See gad the hoof.

hoof, pad the. See pad the hoof.

hoof it, 'to walk', is s.; but the derivative sense 'to run away', recorded by Barrère & Leland, is thieves' c., dating from ca. 1870; ob. Cf. s. pad it on the hoof.

hoofers. A police officer; esp. on a beat: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'He . . . let out an awful squawk an' the hoofers were next'; extant. Cf. flat-foot.—2. The sense 'any cheap actor' lies midway between tramps' c. and itinerant actors' s. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.)

hoofing, vbl n. 'dancing': low s., not c. John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928.

hook, n. See hook and snivey.—2. A pickpocket: 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, 'Hooks.—These individuals, who are also known as "gunns" and "buzzers", in prison slang, constitute the pickpocket class in its various specialties. They can be subdivided into three orders: "men of the world", or professional hooks; ordinary "snatchers", or young and inexperienced thieves; and "thief-cadgers", the lowest species of the class'; by 1886, U.S.A. (Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective); 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1893, F & H; 1919, Dialect Notes, F. H. Sidney, 'Hobo Cant'; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by Moreby Acklom; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1925, Rev. Eustace Jervis; 1926, N. Lucas, London and Its Criminals, 'The "hook" is the "whizzer" who actually picks the pocket'; 1927, Kane (U.S.A.); 1928, Chicago May; May 31, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'The leader of a pickpocket team'; 1935, The Garda Review; 1937, E. H. Sutherland; 1938, F. D. Sharpe; 1943, Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House; extant. He 'hooks' things: cf. next entry.—3. See hooks (fingers).—4. Hence, a hand: 1910, F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol; slightly ob. In U.S.A., the term has always been s.—5. (Ex 2.) A shoplifter: C. 20. Partridge, 1938.—6. A razor: U.S. convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Ex bill-hook? Obviously of an origin different from that of senses 1-5.

hook, v., 'to pilfer; to steal', is s. (orig. and, in the main, still low), but the sense 'to overreach; to trick' may orig. have been c.: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., at hooked; app. † by 1860. Perhaps ex S.E. by hook or by crook.—2. Hook it, 'to run away', has perhaps always been s.—low s., but orig. (say 1840-55) it may have been c., as in Sessions Papers, Feb. 8, 1850 (Margaret Higgins and Elizabeth Smith), 'A male voice said, "So help me God, Bill, it is the copper, hook it!"—copper means policeman, and hook it, make your escape' (a policeman's evidence). Cf. sling one's hook.

hook, on the, 'engaged in theft': rather low s. than c.

hook, sling one's. See sling one's hook.

hook-a-mutton. A button: mostly Pacific States: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

hook alley; H—A—. The underworld district in a city, the 'tenderloin' where crook and low-lifer (and fast-liver) meet: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex The Hook, a tough district of the New York of ca. 1830-1900.

hook and snivey and its synonym, nix the buffer (lit., nothing (for) the dog), occur first in George Parker, A View of Society, 1781: 'This practice is executed by three men and a dog: one of the men counterfeits sickness . . . They go into an ale-house, and are shown a room: having hid the dog under the table, they ring the bell and call for a pot of beer, and desire to know of the landlord if he has got any cold meat in the house, and what two of them must give a-piece to dine, as the third man is very ill?' A smart landlord 'watched them, and saw them give the counterfeit sick man above a pound of beef, and another to the Buffer under the table. When they called to know what was to pay, he told them two shillings for eating, for he would be paid a syebuck a-piece, and would stand no Hook and Snivey, or Nix the Buffer. The people who practise this rig are dog-stealers'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., in the (I believe) erroneous form hook and snivey, with nix the buffer; 1823, Bee (hook and snivvy, no dog being present); 1859, H, hook-um-snivey, by that date, low s. Perhaps cf. hook, 'to pilfer', and snavel, n. and v.; the um is a slovenly corruption of and.

hook-pole lay. A C. 18 term, first recorded in Alex. Smith's Highwaymen, vol. III, 1720, thus: 'Banister was one of the first Villains that went upon the Hook-Pole Lay, which is the way of having long sharp Hooks of Iron fasten'd to the End of long Poles, and then going upon the Foot-pad, the Rogues lies in Ambush behind a Hedge, and when Travellers are Riding by 'em, on Horseback in the Night-time, they suddenly take hold of 'em, and pull 'em off their Horses' and then rob them.

hook shop. A brothel: 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. hooker, 4; in hook shop, however, the ref. is to hooking, successfully inveigling men.

hook-um snivey. See hook and snivey, reference of 1859.

hook-up. 'Such a "contact" as ensures virtual immunity from the Law' (Rose): rather is it police and journalistic s. than c.: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Ersine, 1933, and Rose, 1934.

hook up the reindeers (sic). To inhale a drug: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. Cf. snow and sleigh ride and esp. reindeer dust.

hooked. See hook, v., 1 and 2.—3. Gripped by the drug-habit: U.S.A.: June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, Randolph Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave'; Nov. 29, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville, "'Hooked"—the stage where one must take more narcotics or suffer shattering physical pain'; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor; 1935, Crump & Newton, Our Police; 1936, Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession; by 1940, police and journalistic s. hooked-in. Compromised: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941. Cf. hooked, 3, and :—

hooked-up. Married: 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; by 1940, low s.

hooker. In Harman's Caveat for common cursetors, 1566, it is synonymous with angler, q.v.; 1592, R. Greene, The Blacke Bookes Messenger, 'She compacted with a Hooker, whom some call a Curber'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Hookers, (alias) Anglers'; 1688, Holme, 'Hookers or Anglers, such as draw Cloaths'—clothes, not cloths—'out of Houses with hook-staffs'; 1698, B.E., 'Hookers, c. the third Rank of Canters'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose—but the term was prob. † by 1760, its occurrence in Ainsworth's Rookwood being archaistic. Ex the hook: see curb, n.—2. Hence, a sharper: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A Canting Dict.; app. † by 1780.—3. Hence, loosely, any thief: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1925, Leverage, 'A shoplifter'; slightly ob.—4. 'A resident of The Hook, i.e., a strumpet, a sailor's trull . . . From the number of [brothels] frequented by sailors at the Hook (i.e., Corlear's Hook) in the city of New York': 1859, Bartlett, Americanisms, 2nd ed.; 1893, F & H; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1915 at latest, it was s. in U.S.A. and c. in Britain; 1940, Joseph Crad, Traders in Women; extant.—5. A watch-stealer that, covered by confederates, detaches the watch from its chain: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, where it is contrasted with snatcher, 2; 1893, F & H; ob. hooks. Fingers: C. 19–20. Maginn, 1829; B & L, 1889; 1893, F & H; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss (U.S.A.); by 1910, low s. Cf. forks.—2. Give (a man) the hooks, to handcuff (him) to a girder, with his toes scarcely touching the floor: U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Like carcasses hanging from hooks in a butcher's shop.

hooks and feelers, an occ. variant of hooks, 1. Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, 1877; by 1910, †.

hookses. Cattle (i.e., horned cattle): U.S.A.

(— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; app. † by 1890. Ex their 'hooks' or horns.

hooligan, in American s.—orig. low, means 'a tramp; a rough-neck'; at least, it was thus defined in 1925, by Leverage.

hoop, n. A ring (on the finger): 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'His Tommy has a hoop of stones. His girl has a diamond ring'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do you Speak "Yegg" ?'); 1918, L. Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hoboes; 1919, F. H. Sidney in Dialect Notes; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1928, Chicago May; 1928, John O'Connor; by 1929 (The Saturday Evening Post, Oct. 19), so much pitchmen's s. that it can no longer be classified as c.

hoop, v. 'To make an arrest,' Leverage, 1925; extant. To put on a person the hoops that are handcuffs.

hoop it. To run away: 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1839, op. cit., Brandon, in the glossary; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.). Perhaps a 'disguise' of s. hop it = c. hop the twig.

hoop(-)dropper is the American version of the English ring-dropper: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; extant. See hoop, n.

hoopie. A finger ring: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, whose 'more frequently used [than is hoop] by pitchmen selling "slum" (imitation jewelry)' indicates that by 1930, hoopie was predominantly itinerant vendors' s. Ex hoop, n. hoorsget. See whore's get.

hoosgow, or hoosegow. Prison; a small jail: 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, "'Well, you're a fine lot of gentlemen!" he said, "No thanks for the little lady savin' th' bunch of you from th' 'hoose-gow'"; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, Moreby Acklom, "'Wise-Cracking" Crook Novels' (hoosegow); 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Feb. 7, 1925, Flynn's; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, R. Jordan, 'Idioms'; June 16, 1926, Flynn's; July 9, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1927, Kane; July 7, 1928, Flynn's; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; July 18, 1931, The Saturday Review of Literature; 1933, Ersine; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; 1934, Convict; 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; 1937, John Worby (England); extant. 'Possibly the original was the Spanish juzgado, a cell in which condemned persons are confined' (Godfrey Irwin): for 'possibly' read 'probably'.

hoosier, or H—. A native of Indiana: s., not c. 'Allegedly derived from "Who's here?"' (Irwin).—2. Hence, a rustic; a simpleton; tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary, 'Everybody who does not know the world as the hobo knows it is to him a "farmer", "hoosier", or outsider'; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; Oct. 18, 1924, Flynn's, 'The "hoosiers"—yegg slang for farmers' (article by Wm J. Flynn); 1925, Leverage, 'Hoosier, n. A happy-go-lucky mark; an easy mark; a farmer; a rube'; 1926, Jack Black; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; 1928, J. K. Ferrier, 'Crime in the United States', in his Crooks and Crime; May 1928, The American Mercury; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'An inefficient worker or a victim of some confidence game'; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; 1939, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece (an inexperienced thief); extant.—3. Hence, 'A simple, loutish person . . . likely to be a rat; any person in disfavour with the speaker,' Ersine, 1933; extant.—4. Hence, a person given to prison-visiting: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

Hoosier cop. A policeman in the service of the State of Indiana: 1911, Hobo Camp Fire Tales, 7th ed.; prob. dating from before 1900 and remaining c. until prob. not later than 1915. Indiana is 'the Hoosier State'; see cop, n., 1.

hoosier fiend. An inexperienced addict: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. BVB. See hoosier, 2.

hoosier stiff. A worthless cheque issued or used by a tyro in the art of dud-cheque passing: forgers': since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. See hoosier, 2.

hoot and holler. A dollar: Pacific States: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

hootch. See hooch, ref. of 1924.

hop. Opium in particular, or narcotics in general: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, where 'Many a screw has brought me whiskey and hop' (p. 135) may be either general (see the quot'n at underground railroad, from the preceding paragraph) or, more prob., particular (for that paragraph ends: 'I had no difficulty in supplying my growing need for opium'); ibid., p. 154, definitely opium; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Hop. Opium'; 1909, C. B. Chrysler, White Slavery; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'All China town couldn't show Lulu's equal for cooking hop' (Irwin: 'Preparing opium for the pipe'); 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1927, C. F. Coe, Me—Gangster; 1927, Kane; 1928, May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May; April 27, 1929, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan; Nov. 8, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; July 11, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, Confessions of a Drug Addict; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; by 1935 (The Garda Review) it was also English; by 1937, police and journalistic s. in U.S.A.; extant in Britain as c. Prob. a corruption of some Chinese word, but perhaps because it exhilarates—make the addict hop (cf. high); indeed, hop itself has, since ca. 1930, been used for 'drug-exhilaration': BVB, 1942.—2. Hence, any other drug: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Narcotics in general'; extant.—3. Beer: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; extant.—4. An abbreviated form of hop head: 1930, Burke (quot'n at jiggabo); extant.—5. A policeman: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1945. Short for John Hop.

hop, be on the; hit the hop. To be taking drugs, esp. hop: since ca. 1905. BVB (both).

hop(-)chin. Airy talk; extravagant talk: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, "All this chatter 'bout keisters with false bottoms . . . is mostly pipe stuff and hopchin'; extant. I.e., s. chin, 'talk' induced by hop.

hop (or pipe) dream. An opium dream: C. 20. BVB. See hop.

hop gun. See dope gun. (In, e.g., Ersine 1933.)

hop head. A drug addict: C. 20. Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909 (see next entry); 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison—San Quentin (1901–11), 'In usin' th' jacket on th' hop-heads they got careless an' got t' usin' it on other guys'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle, esp. of an opium addict; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 'She died a hophead. Ravin' nuts'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, Francis C. Coe, Me—Gangster; 1927, Kane; June 8, 1929, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan; May 24, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; July 11, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'An opium addict; more loosely, any drug addict'; 1933, James Spenser, Limey; 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, Confessions of a Drug Addict; 1933, Eagle; and only an addict could say how many times since! By 1934, however, the term had > police and journalistic s.—witness Ferd. Tuohy, Inside Dope, 1934. See hop; head is simply 'a person'.

hop-head gang, the. Such a group of white-slavers as procures its girls by the use of drugs: white-slave traffic: C. 20. Charles Byron Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909. Ex prec. term.

hop-headed is the adj. of hop head. BVB, 1942.

hop hog. A drug addict, not necessarily of opium: March 22, 1930, Flynn's, Robert Carse, 'Jail Break!'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; extant. See hop.

hop joint. 'Place where opium is smoked,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1909, C. B. Chrysler, White Slavery; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; 1918, Arthur Stringer, The Door of Dread; 1924, Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson; 1925, Glen H. Mullin; 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; July 13, 1929, Flynn's, Eddie Guerin, 'I was a Bandit'; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; June 24, 1933, Flynn's; 1933, Eagle; July 7, 1934, Flynn's, Convict 12627; May 2, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack, 'Birds of Prey'; by 1938 or 1939 it was low s. See hop and joint, 1.

hop merchant, 'a dancer'; s., not c. (A New Canting Dict., 1725.)—2. A drug addict: U.S.A.: C. 20. In My Life in Prison, 1912, Donald Lowrie, who served a sentence in 1901–11 at San Quentin, 'I know one hop merchant . . . what lost $300'; extant, but after ca. 1925, little used. See hop.—3. A drug peddler: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A drug pedler with no stated headquarters; one who meets his customers on the street, in doorways, etc.'; extant. Synonym: hop peddler (BVB).

hop picker, 'a prostitute': low s., not c.

hop-pickers. 'The queens of all the four suits': card-sharpers': 1893, F & H; extant. Precisely why?

hop stick (or joy stick). An opium pipe: since ca. 1910. BVB. See hop and cf. gee stick.

hop stiff. A drug addict: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; extant. See hop; stiff, 'a fellow'.

hop talk. A drug addict's lies: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom: by 1940, low s. See hop.

hop the twig. To run away: 1785, Grose; 1789, G. Parker; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes. The phrase remained c. until ca. 1830, Egan in 1823 classifying it as c. Ex a bird's departure, in flight, from a tree. (In s., it means 'to die'.)

hop toad. A stiff drink: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Semantics: hop + the hops of beer.—2. The sense 'a derailing device' is railroad s., not c. (Irwin, 1931).—3. A road: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; a variation of frog and toad.

hop toy. (In reference to an opium-smoker and his store of pellets) 'At last the little horn container, the "hop toy", is empty,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926: addicts': since ca. 1905; 1942, BVB. See hop.

hopfest is the c. variant of low s. hop party, 'an opium party': since ca. 1920. BVB.

hopped up. 'Intoxicated on opium,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; 1927, Charles F. Coe, Me—Gangster, 'They do their shooting when they are all hopped up with dope'; Feb. 2, 1929, Flynn's; Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's, Earl H. Scott; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Under the influence of opium or any other narcotic'; Sept. 19, 1931, Flynn's, Paul Annixter; 1933, James Spenser, Limey; Feb. 29, 1936, Flynn's, Richard Wormser; 1936, Philip S. Van Cise; Oct. 9, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Panton, 'He was hopped to the adenoids'; by 1940, at the latest, it was journalistic s. Ex hop, n.

hopper. A drug addict, esp. to opium: May 14, 1932, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; extant. Cf. hop head and hoppy, 2.

hopper-dockers. Shoes: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1893 (F & H). Cf. hockey-dockies.

hoppie. See hoppy.

hopples. "'Hopples"—the three-quarter length trousers with which boys in the "form" . . . are issued,' The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. A derivative ex Dutch hoop, 'hope, expectation'?

hoppy, n. A cripple: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1925, Leverage; 1931, IA; by 1935, low s. Ex English s. and dial. (applied esp. to a person with a game or a short leg).—2. An opium smoker: 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex hop—or perhaps hop-head.—3. 'Smelling of drugs,' BVB, 1942. Ex hop-head.

hops. See beans.—2. Tea: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1925, Leverage; 1931, IA; extant. 'Tea, the leaves of which are not unlike those of the hop vine' (Godfrey Irwin).—3. Narcotics in gen.: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. BVB. A collectivization of hop, 'opium'.—4. But also opium in particular: 1942, BVB.

hops, on the. On a drinking-bout: since ca. 1920: 1938, Partridge; by 1940, low s. Suggested by coll. on the beer.

hops in, (have) got one's. (To be) tipsy: since ca. 1920. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. A pleasant allusion to the hops used in liquor-making.

hopster, 'opium addict': s. rather than c. BVB, 1942. See hops, 4.

horn. 'A man's nose, bugle,' Ersine, 1933; by 1940, low s. Cf. bugle, q.v.

horn, around (or round) the. See around . . .

Horn, the. 'The triangular extension of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, running from Red Oak, Iowa, southwest some twenty miles, and then northwest to Pacific Junction on the main line,' J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (glossary); then see around the horn.

horn-thumb. A pickpocket: ca. 1560–1630: Preston, Green, Jonson. Not, I think, c. but s. 'From the practice of wearing a sheath of horn to protect the thumb in cutting out', F & H. hornee. See horney.

horness. 'Horness. A watchman': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; † by 1900. The term is suspect; prob. the pl. hornees (see horney) has been misapprehended as singular and then misprinted.

horney, or hornie, horny. A constable: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (spelt -ey); 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter (Glossary), 'Hornies. Constables, watchmen, and peace-officers'; 1797, Potter (hornees); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1812, J. H. Vaux (-ey); 1821, D. Haggart; † by 1860. Perhaps ex Horny, the devil.—2. Hence, in U.S.A. (— 1794), a sheriff: 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative (where it is spelt hornie); † by 1870.

horny, adj. (Of a man) sexually excited; (of conversation or gestures) lewd: tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex low s. the horn, 'the physical state accompanying sexual excitement in a male'.

horrors is c. only in combination—e.g., bull horrors and stir horrors—where its meaning constitutes a natural development ex the coll. the horrors, 'delirium tremens'.

horse. 'Horse, contraction of Horsemonger-lane gaol': 1859, H; after 1878, when the prison was discontinued, the term was merely historical.—2. "'Horses" is the "flash" term for counterfeit bank-notes': 1860, Charles Martel, The Detective's Note-Book; † by 1920. Orig., a code word.—3. A five-pound bank-note: 1874, H; by 1893 (F & H) it was low s. A large note: a large animal.—4. See saddle.—5. See horses.—6. A customer or client: South African prostitutes': C. 20. (Private letter, May 22, 1946.) Cf. cavaulting.

horse, flushed on the. See flushed . . .

Horse, Old. See Old Horse, the.

horse, take. See take horse.

horse-capper. A horse swindler: 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; extant. A twisting of the form and sense of S.E. horse-coper.

horse-car game, the, and the beer game, are variations of the sawdust game; they merely refer to the scenes of operation: 1886, Thomas Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America; † by 1910.

horse chaunter. A thoroughly dishonest horse-coper, employing all sorts of illicit tricks to make horses appear that which they are not: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 24; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1890, low s. See chanter.

horse-coursing, ca. 1595–1620, meant: that cosenage wherein one hires a horse, rides it to some obscure town, makes merry and then sends for the carrier or stableman that has hired out the horse; the latter person, in order to obtain possession of the horse, has to pay the roisterer's hotel bill. S. Rowlands, Greenes Ghost Haunting Coniccatchers, 1602; Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608. By an extension of the S.E. sense, jobbing in horses.

horse-dealing, n. and adj. The business of coining counterfeit money: pertaining thereto: 1860, C. Martel, The Detective's Note-Book, 'The "horse-dealing" fraternity'; † by 1920. Cf. horse, 2.

horse fly. A detective (?): 1925, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, (concerning the bankruptcy racket) 'The D.A.'s are getting hep to the Racket, and horse flies and wised up D.A.'s are hard to fool'; extant. Troublesome, as are horse flies.

horse foaled of an acorn. See acorn, you will ride a horse foaled by an.

horse-pad. A C. 18 variant of high pad: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 'Horse-Pads. Such as rob in the Highway on Horseback'; 1720, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, vol. III.

horse to ride on. A booty: clothes-line thieves': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 346); ob. It helps them on their way.

horseback the drag. To beg from shop to shop, house to house, along a street: mostly tramps': since late 1920's. Ersine, 1933. Horseback is slow in comparison with, e.g., a taxicab.

horseman. 'A collector of immunity money,' J. Allan Dunn, 'Thieves' Honor'—Flynn's, July 5, 1930: ibid., May 31, 1930 (but undefined); Sept. 23, 1933, Flynn's; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex his cavalier ways?

horses. "Tops and bottoms" or "horses" are mis-spotted dice with which it is impossible to make certain losing combinations,' Frank Wrentmore in Flynn's, March 21, 1936: gamblers': C. 20. On them, by them, one rides to victory.

horse's nightcap. A halter: 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields; 1823, Bee; 1859, H (to die in a horse's nightcap, to be hanged); 1909, Ware (the phrase); 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights. 'After being chucked up again he put a copper to bye-bye, and winked out in a horse's nightcap'; † by 1930. One of the numerous grim names associated with hanging.

horsey. (Of addicts) excited, too playful: drug addicts': March 12, 1938, The New Yorker, M. Berger; extant. Ex horse-play, 'rough games'.

horstile (preferably); hostile. 'Angry, unfriendly, hostile,' J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (glossary), 1899, the term being applied both to persons ('I was hostile'; angry) and to places (a hostile town being a town unfriendly to tramps); 1900, Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman; 1907, Jack London, The Road (see quot'ns at main drag and on the hog); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (both forms), 'Antagonistic to tramps': 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler, "It suah is a hostile town," said one negro. The word "hostile" in the vernacular of the road indicates strict police and railroad vigilance'; 1922, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1930, Lennox Kerr, Backdoor Guest; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, M. H. Weseen, by 1937 it had > s.—witness Godfrey Irwin, private letter of Feb. 1 of that year. "Hostile" has exactly same meaning as "horstile", but correct spelling and pronunciation would stamp user as rank amateur among tramps or criminals' (Godfrey Irwin, letter cited).

hose, v. (Of the male) to coït with: 1935, Hargan; extant. In ref. both to penis erectus and to seminis emissio.

hosin'. Third-degree treatment with a (length of) rubber hose: 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. jackin'.

hospital, in the. In jail: 1936, Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld; extant. Euphemistic; cf. dose, 'prison sentence'.

hosteller. A beggar, or an adventurer, frequenting such places as Work Aid Homes: beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1920. W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 1936.

hostile. See horstile.

hot. 'Too well known. "The cove had better move his beaters into Dewsville, it is too hot for him here; if he stops, he'll be sure to be sick for twenty stretches" (in prison for twenty years)': 1859, Matsell; by ca. 1880, also English ('Well known to the police': F & H, 1893); 1906, E. Pugh (see quot'n at poge-hunter); 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; extant. Despite the evidence, this sense is prob. of English origin: in Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, Sept. 1788 (p. 713), a witness (a publican) states, 'Burlton . . . said he had found a watch-case, he wanted to look over my newspapers; he said I have found a gold case; I said, I dare say it is cold enough' (the shorthand writer's italics), the reference being obviously not to the weather (the date being the 2nd or 3rd of July) but prob. to the fact that the case was not so well known as to be dangerous to handle. Ex burning one's fingers metaphorically.—2. Hence, dangerous: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'When I got there I found it so hot (dangerous), because there had been so many tykes (dogs) poisoned, that there was a reeler at almost every double'; 1893, F & H; Nov. 17, 1928, Flynn's (U.S.A.), Thomas Topham, 'Three Curious Burglars'; 1930, C. R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; 1931, Fred D. Pasley, 'Chicago in 1927 and 1928 was tagged in underworld jargon as "hot" for any outsiders who had no business there, so well had Capone . . . systematized his overlordship of vice, gambling, and booze'; 1931, IA; 1933, Ersine; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime (of a town where the police are temporarily officious, energetic); by 1940, s.—3. (Ex senses 1 and 2.) Illegal; criminal; stolen: U.S.A.: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'The hock-shop man . . . knows he has something "hot", or crooked'; May 1928, The American Mercury; by 1930, police s. in U.S.A.—witness True Detective Mysteries, Oct. 1930, Det.-Sgt Robert L. Rauer, 'Hot Diamonds!' By the early 1930's, current in Britain; by 1939 (The Press, Oct. 19) in New Zealand.—4. (Cf. senses 1–3.) Wanted by the police: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth ('The Language of the Underworld') quotes 'He came out of K.C. hot from that P.O. blast' and implies that it has been current since at least as early as 1910; Feb. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, Ernest Booth, 'I am a hot lamster'—a fugitive for whom there is a hue and cry; 1931, Stiff; 'No hobo will travel with a man who is hot'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 1931, D. W. Maurer; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls, 'The Hottest Guy in the World'; by 1936, police s. in U.S.A., and current, as c., in Britain—witness David Hume, The Crime Combine.

hot, on the. Very quickly, speedily, 'burning up the pavement': July 5, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; extant. Proleptic.

hot air, 'senseless or boastful talk', is, despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, not c. but s.—Cf. s. gas.

hot beef, give (a person). 'He followed, giving me hot beef (calling "Stop thief")': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1889, B & L; 1893, F & H; 1931, The Bon Voyage Book ('Hot beef—stop thief!'); extant. A development of hot beef!, low rhyming s. (prob. c., orig.) for 'stop thief!'

hot box. A stolen automobile: 1935, Hargan; extant. Cf. box, n., 3.

hot-car drop; farm. A 'garage where the identity of stolen cars is changed', Howard N. Rose, 1934 (farm): since ca. 1925, the former; since ca. 1930, the latter. Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep, (English ed.) 1939, has the former.

hot chair. The electric chair: Jan. 1, 1927, Flynn's, 'That's one thing I try to dodge—the hot chair'; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1935, no longer c. Cf. hot squat.

hot dogs. 'A persistent case by country bulls' (policemen), Leverage, 1925; extant. Prob. ex the use of bloodhounds; the ref. may, however, be to dogs, 'feet', gone hot and tired with the assiduity of the pursuit.

hot dough. Marked money: Nov. 29, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; extant. Cf. hot, 2 and 3.

hot-foot, n. A running; a hurried departure: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, the former nuance occurring in the glossary—and on p. 260, in the sentence, 'It was a hot-foot', occurs the latter nuance; earlier in do a hot foot, q.v.; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'He gave me th' once over . . . and I went on th' hot-foot'; 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch, 'You dress an' grab a cab, see? Come down here to Zuroto's on the hot foot'; by 1930, low s. Running, one soon has warm feet.—2. Rather police s. than c., is the sense 'a beating on the soles of the feet', administered by a policeman to cause a man to talk or to restore a drunken man to his senses: 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, 'I drew my nightstick . . . and made ready to give my gentleman the "hot foot" . . . Ten shrewd blows, from a sound nightstick, will put life into a corpse.'

hot foot, do a. See do a hot foot.

hot-foot, go on the. See hot-foot, 1, ref. of 1926.

hot-foot it. To run away: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1930, s.

hot grease. Trouble: racketeers': Dec. 1930, Burke, 'That broad put me in the hot grease with the law'; 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. grease, n., 4.

hot hack. A stolen automobile: since ca. 1925. Convict, 1934. See hot, 3, and hack, n., 3.

hot hay. A bay: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming Perhaps connected with Botany Bay.

hot hole. A brothel: C. 20. BVB, 1942. With a 'hot' pun. Cf.:

hot house. A brothel: 1890, C. Hindley, The True History of Tom and Jerry, glossary, p. 179; perhaps only fast-life s. (as I think). In U.S.A. (C. 20), it may perhaps be c.: BVB. Ex hot, sexually ardent.

hot ice. Diamonds that must be promptly disposed of: 1933, Eagle; extant. See hot, 3, and ice.

hot joint. 'Tenanted house located for robbery,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; March 13, 1926, Flynn's, J. G. Dove, ('Burglars'); 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A house or store to be robbed while occupied or while business is being conducted . . . full of eustomers and lively'; extant. See the elements.—2. A brothel, esp. a noisy one: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. hot house.

hot paper. Stolen bonds: Dec. 4, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; extant. See hot, 3.

hot plate. Electric chair; electrocution: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Suggested by hot seat and hot squat; cf. fry.

hot prowl. House-burglary while the occupants are awake: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. :—

hot prowler and cold prowler. 'House burglars, divided in two classes—hot prowlers and cold prowlers,' specializing in occupied and unoccupied houses respectively: since ca. 1920. Convict, 1934. See prowler and the adj.

hot scone; often shortened to scone. A policeman; more usually, a detective: Australian: since the 1920's. Baker, 1942. Hot scone rhymes synonymous John.

hot seat, n. The electric chair: 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; April 27, 1929, Flynn's (Contents page); 1929, Givens; April 26, 1930, Flynn's, Leighton H. Blood, 'Big Nick'; 1930, George London; Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, Burke, 'He draws the hot-seat for taking that rat'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 2, 1932, Flynn's; 1933, James Spenser, Limey; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose; 1935, Hargan; Jan. 9, 1937, Flynn's, Tom Roan; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; by 1939 (or earlier), police and journalistic s. Because, in it, the victim is electrically burnt, as well as shocked, to death.—2. Hence (?), among confidence tricksters, British and American, it has, since ca. 1925, been the name for the swindle mentioned in: 'Among the many confidence tricks practised successfully, perhaps the most conspicuous has been that picturesque operation known to the police as the "Disbursement of Fortune Trick" or "Dropping the Rosary"'. More aptly, the confidence man dubs it the "Hot Seat"; Percy J. Smith, Con Man, 1938, though earlier in Charles E. Leach (1933); Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941; Black, 1943. At the end of the proceedings, the victim is left waiting on a seat—and waiting in vain.

hot-seat, v. To electrocute: since the 1920's. Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943, an American loq., 'Paddy Choice is hot-seated—ah the good Paddy'. Ex sense 1 of the n.

hot-seat mob. Confidence tricksters: since ca. 1930. In., e.g., Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938. See hot seat, 2.

hot short. In the language of the automobile-stealing racket, a 'hot short' is a stolen car: 1929, The Saturday Evening Post; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; extant. See short and hot, 3.

hot-short hustler. An automobile thief (one who steals cars): since ca. 1930. In., e.g., Howard N. Rose. See preceding entry and hustler, 4.

hot shot. A fast train, whether passenger or freight: tramps': since ca. 1920: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; extant. In ref. to the speed: cf. hot, on the.—2. 'An automobile stolen during the preceding few hours, the theft not yet discovered, and reported to the police,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: car thieves': since ca. 1925. A variant of hot short.—3. A well-known gangster: 1933, Eagle; Oct. 9, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, 'I was . . . watching the sniffers, the gunmen and the hot shots drift around'; Aug. 26, 1939, Flynn's, Richard Sale; extant. Cf. big shot.—4. A flashily dressed person, usually male: 1933, Ersine; extant.—5. 'Cyanide or other poison mixed in a narcotic to dispose of a troublesome addict,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic.

hot slough. 'Inhabited apartment which is the object of a robbery,' Rose, 1934; extant. Cf. hot prowler and see slough, n.

hot spot. 'Places where stolen goods are cached are "hot spots",' C. Ryley Cooper, in The Saturday Evening Post, May 22, 1937; extant. See hot, 2; but prob. imm. ex:—2. 'Any dangerous place,' Ersine, 1933; "'Hot spots" are . . . likely sites for crime,' Godfrey Irwin, in private letter of Sept. 28, 1937; extant. Cf. hot joint.—3. A brothel: C. 20. BVB.

hot-spot man. A gang-leader: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. His followers expect him to solve all difficulties.

hot squat. The electric chair: since the early 1890's (see the 1935 quot'n): July 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn ('Thieves' Honor'), 'If he used [a revolver] and was nabbed, it meant the Hot Squat if the victim died, a long sentence anyway'; 1930, Charles F. Coe, Gunman; Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's; June 13, 1931, Flynn's, J. Lane Linklater; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls, allusively in 'the old warm squativoo up in Sing Sing'; June 25, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; April 13, 1935, Flynn's, Anon., 'The electric chair, or the "hot squat", as one of its first victims, Goat McGee, christened it some forty odd years ago'; 1935, Hargan; 1936, Charles Francis Coe, G-Man; Aug. 21, 1937, Flynn's, Richard Sale; Feb. 11, 1939, Flynn's; extant. Cf. hot chair and hot seat.

hot stool is a comparatively rare variant of hot seat. In, e.g., Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough, 1936.

hot stop. 'A comfortable jail for a winter's sojourn,' Leverage, 1925: tramps': since ca. 1910; extant. One 'stops off' where one will be warm.

hot stuff. Goods known to be stolen, goods wanted by the police: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Pawnshops and second-hand stores establish a reputation for handling "hot stuff" and there are very few such establishments that will refuse to buy from a known thief'; June 14, 1930, Flynn's, Erle Stanley Gardner; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; 1933, Ersine, '1. Stolen goods. 2. Contraband'; March 10, 1934, Flynn's, Major C. E. Russell; by 1936 (John G. Brandon, The Pawnshop Murder), it was also English; May 22, 1937, The Saturday Evening Post, C. Ryley Cooper; extant. See hot, 3.—2. 'Good selling propaganda, irrespective of its truth or otherwise', in or by folders, prospectuses, etc., concerning an issue of stocks and shares: commercial underworld: since ca. 1920. Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering, 1931. Ex the ordinary s. sense, 'something exceptionally good or effective'.

hot tongue. A passionate woman: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex lingual osculation.

hot touch. A theft soon discovered: 1925, Leverage; extant. See hot, 4, and touch, n.

hot trap. A stolen sedan (car): 1934, Rose; extant. See hot, 3; with trap, cf. buggy.

hot-water game or scheme. Not c., but police s. or even j. A dodge whereby a pretended pianotuner calls at a flat or a house where he knows a piano to be, calls for hot water, and, while it is being fetched, steals what he can. George W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police, 1887, pp. 132–4.

hot-water house. A low doss-house where, for a penny a night, a dozen or even a score of beggars and tramps and other down-and-outs sleep side by side in their clothes on the floor, men and women and children: Londoners': 1873, James Greenwood, In Strange Company; † by 1915. Prob. ex the wretched lodging-houses in Hot Water Court and its neighbourhood.

hot wire. Good news: mostly convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. By wire or telegram.

hotel is—or was—in the underworld 'ironically used of a mean lodging-house, and extended to prisons—with the keepers' names prefixed': 1823, Bee: since ca. 1775 (see Akerman's hotel).—2. See anti-goss.

hotel barber. A thief that lives in a hotel for the purpose of theft or swindling: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. He 'clips' his victims as the hotel barber clips his customers.

hotel de gink, or H—de G— 'A hotel for tramps or poor persons,' Leverage, 1925; 1931, Stiff, 'A charitable or a municipal lodging house'; extant. See gink.

Hotel de Hash. The State Prison at Auburn: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne, 'So called because that particular dish was on the menu just 365 days a year'; † by 1920.

hotel-lurker is prob. j., not c.: see jilter, 2, reference of 1863.

hotel prowl. 'Theft from hotel rooms by a sneak thief; a sneak thief who steals from hotel rooms,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: since the 1920's. See prowl, n. and v., and cf. :—

hotel prowler. A prowler specializing in hotels: 1928, Chicago May; extant. See prowler and cf.:—

hotel worker. 'A thief who specialises on hotels,' Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 1927; extant. See worker.

hotsy. A prostitute: since ca. 1910. BVB, 1942. She is 'hot stuff'.

Hou jou 'V'! See kop-hou . . .

houdini. 'A clever get-away trick,' Ersine, 1933; E. H. Sutherland, 1937; by 1940, s. Ex the famous self-extricator, Houdini (1874–1926)—see esp. my Name into Word.

hounds, as 'the police', is prob. not c. (Leverage, 1925.)—2. Bad-tempered or cruel prison warders: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex 'blood hound'.

Hounslow Heath. Teeth: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1865 or 1870, low rhyming s.; by 1875, gen. s. (The C. 20 prefers Hampstead Heath.)

house. A brothel: a prostitution, esp. a white-slave, term: since ca. 1860. Prob. ex the slightly earlier Fr. use of maison, i.e., maison tolérée. See, e.g., the quot'n at placer; extant (BVB).—2. the House, the workhouse (in a locality either stated or understood): not c. but s. > coll. See, esp., Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, 1857, Bk. I, ch. i, p. 1.—3. A prison cell: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; extant.

house dog. A fellow, esp. a tramp, that goes about looking for jobs suitable to an odd-job man: tramps': C. 20. Stiff, 1931. Cf. home guard.

house for rent. A widow: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. the C. 18 English s. synonym, house (or tenement) to let.

house man or houseman. A burglar: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang', where it = a burglar of private houses and flats; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1931, IA; 1938, Ernest L. Van Wagner, New York Detective; extant. He specializes in house-work.—2. 'In gambling circles, the player who operates a game or device for the establishment or who acts as a manager or supervisor,' IA, 1931: C. 20.

house-prowler. House burglar: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Cf. house man.

house(-)prowling. House burglary: Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly, G. A. England, 'Underworld Lingo'; extant. See prowling.

house (or tenement) to let. 'A widow's weeds; also an achievement marking the death of a husband, set up on the outside of a mansion; both supposed to indicate that the dolorous widow wants a male comforter' (Grose): not c. but s.—2. The late C. 19–20 sense, 'bet', is a rhyming term—perhaps race-course-gang o., but prob. merely low s.

household barber. A person transiently lodging in a boarding-house or in a private home or an apartment house and robbing the 'household': Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1945. Cf. dwelling dancer and hotel barber.

housekeeper. 'A brothel hostess,' BVB, 1942: white-slave traffic: C. 20. Euphemistic.

houseman. See house man.

housework. Burglary: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; extant. See work, II. and v.; cf. house man.—2. The sense 'door-to-door peddling' is itinerant vendors' s.—not c. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.)

houseworker. A house-burglar: 1879, Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences, p. 210; 1881, A. Pinkerton, Professional Thieves and the Detective; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, 'He had been a well-known house-worker'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; extant. Cf. work, v., 3, and housework.

houtkop. An aborigine or coloured native: South Africa: late C. 19–20. Cyrus A. Smith, letter of May 22, 1946; J. B. Fisher, same date. Ex Afrikaans houtkop, 'a fool' (lit. 'wood-head').

how strong are you? How much money have you?: tramps': C. 20. Stiff, 1931, 'If you have a pile you answer, "So strong, I stink"'.

howling-stick. A flute: low s. and c.: ca. 1840–90. Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, 1857, III, iii. Ex the shape and ex the painful notes produced by an inexperienced performer.

how's pickin's? 'How's it coming?'—'How's tricks?'—'Howdy?': tramps' and thieves': since ca. 1905. 'Without any definite indication that stealing is on,' Godfrey Irwin, letter of March 9, 1938. Cf. Autolycus, picker-up of trifles fecklessly left about.

hoxter. 'An inside coat-pocket': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'No slow'd hoxter my snipes could stay'; 1859, H; 1889, B & L; by 1893 (F & H), ob.; by 1900, †. Ex Scottish (and Northern dial.) oxter, 'the armpit' (cf. L. axilla: O.E.D.).

hoys, the. Shoplifting: 1821, David Haggart, Life; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', 2nd ed.; app. † by 1890.

hubbub. A 'pain in the stomach': 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Ex the rumbling that is a symptom.

huckle my buff (or butt). 'Beer, egg, and brandy, made hot': Grose, 1785 (butt). But almost certainly s., not c. huckleberry. 'A small railway; the country; a suburb,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Huckleberries symbolize the country; cf. Mark Twain's famous character, Huckleberry Finn.

hucks. Walnut shells: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant. Presumably as counters in gambling and as a corruption of hush.

Hudson dusters, 'a gang on the West Side of New York City' (Leverage, 1925), is either journalese or gen. New York City s.

Hudson pup. An Essex automobile: car thieves': since ca. 1925. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Pup in comparison with the Hudson, made by the same firm.

hue, v. To lash, thrash, flog: 1698, B.E., 'The Cove was Hued in the Naskin, c. the Rogue was severely Lasht in Bridewell'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725, and in Grose, 1785; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1887, according to Baumann, but B & L, 1889, record it as current and define it as 'to belabour with a cudgel'; † by 1900. Ex the colour of those weals which ensue.

huey. A town: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'Where do you lodge in the town?'; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1859, H, 'A town, or village'; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, where it is spelt hughy; obsolescent by 1889 (B & L); † by 1910, at latest. Origin? App. not a Gypsy word, nor yet a Celtic—unless it's Shelta: cf. Shelta avali, 'a town'. I suspect it of being the illiterate result of a misapprehended pron. of Fr. ville, as vee-yeh.—2. 'Huey, The National Police Gazette' (New York): U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1871, State Prison Life (S. Indiana); † by 1930. Ex S.E. hue and cry, the reference being to the 'wanted by the police' notices.

huff, a bullying fellow, a hector: S.E.—Captain Huff, a bully, esp. a notorious one, is certainly s., not c.

huff, v. To rob with violence, esp. by throwing one's arms over the victim's shoulders and then removing the money from his pockets: ca. 1810–90. In, e.g., The Examiner, 1832 (cited by O.E.D.). Less prob. ex the draughts sense than ex hough, 'to hamstring'.

hug, n. Garrotting; also put on the hug, v.i., 'to garrote': 1864, The Home Magazine, March 16 (the phrase); 1893, F & H; ob. Euphemistic.

hug, v. 'Hug. To choke.—Hugging the Hooker. Choking the police': 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H; ob. Cf. the n.—2. 'Grab a person is to hug him,' J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946: South Africa: C. 20.

hugger-mugger. Not c., as several lexicographers have it, but s. > S.E. hugging, n. Garrotting: 1893, F & H, but doubtless current from much earlier; ob. Ex hug, v.

huggle my buff is a variant of huckle my buff.

hugby. See huey (reference of 1886).

hugmatee, some kind of ale: late C. 17—early 18: not c., but s.—perhaps, orig., low s.

hukni, the 'great-lie' trick, is a gypsy swindle and a Romany word.

hum, n. An abbr. of hum-box; also in pl. (though see sense 2): 1725, A New Canting Dict. (see quot'n at chop the whiners); app. † by 1870.—2. the hums: the congregation in a church, as in A New Canting Dict., 1725 (see chop the whiners); Grose, 1785, 'Hums, persons at church'; 1797, Potter (humms); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1889 (B & L). Cf. the semantics of hum-box.—3. Hence, 'a liar, a canting deceitful Wesleyan methodist': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; app. † by 1900.—4. A persistent borrower: Australian: C. 20. Vance Marshall, 1919; Baker, 1945. Either because he 'makes things hum' or because his methods 'hum' or stink.

hum, v. To say, intone: 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, Appendix, 'Old Cotton humming his pray', glossed as 'saying his prayers'. This may be merely literary (or fanciful), not actual c. Cf. the n.

hum, adj. Strong: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; app. † by 1830. Ex humming (liquor), potent.

hum(-)box. A pulpit: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, 'H was a Hum-box, where parish-prigs speak'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by 1889 (B & L) it was low s. A box in which one hums and hems and haws.—2. Hence, in U.S.A.: 'an auctioneer's rostrum': 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H, who imply that, by this date, the term is s.; Clapin, Americanisms, 1903, classifies it as still c. in that year.

hum-box patterer. A parson: ca. 1780–1850. G. W. M. Reynolds, 'The House-Breaker's Song' in ch. XXVI of Pickwick Abroad, 'He'd sooner be scragg'd at once than tell; | Though the hum-box patterer talk'd of hell'; by 1893 (F & H) it was low s. One who patters in the 'hum-box' or pulpit.

hum cap, 'very old and strong beer, called also stingo': s., not c., of late C. 17–18. B.E.; Grose.

humble suit, the. See suit, 2, end of Vaux quot'n.

hum. See hum, n., 2.

hummer. A great lie, a 'rapper': not c., but s. (B.E., 1698.)

hummer, on the. See on the hummer.

humming, 'potent' (liquor), is not c., but s. Cf. humming liquor.

humming-gee bowl. An opium-pipe bowl: addicts': since ca. 1930. See the narcotic gee; there is also a feeble pun on humming bird, for, lit., humming gee could = 'humming fellow'.

humming liquor is not c., but s.

humms. See hum, n.

hump, n. Good fortune, good luck: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (see quot'n at ginny, 4); ca. 1912, it merges with sense 2. To touch a hunchback's hump is said to bring good luck.—2. The half-way point in a prison sentence: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Why? Is there an allusion to a camel's hump, roughly half-way along the animal's body and perhaps also to that last straw which breaks a camel's back? Such allusive wit is not uncommon in c. Godfrey Irwin thinks that it may derive from The Hump (see Hump, the); it's all a matter of dates. 'Something which, having been passed, makes the rest of the experience easy', he says: 'a grade down which one may "coast"—travel by gravity': which constitutes an attractive theory.—3. Sexual intercourse: U.S.A.: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—4. 'I became the hump for the outfit. A hump . . . is a guy who can look most'—i.e., almost—'like a statue. He's the lookout for a mob. To be good, he must be able to hunch his shoulders in a brown overcoat, bury his face and look as much like a part of a brick dwelling as its doorway,' Colonel Givens in Flynn's, April 16, 1932; extant.

hump, v., 'to copulate with' (Grose, 1785), is, in England, not c. but fashionable slang; in late C. 19–20 U.S.A., however, it is c.: Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'To have sexual intercourse'. The semantics are comparable with those of Shakespeare's 'make the beast with two backs' (cf. the camel's humps).—2. V.i., to move quickly: U.S.A.: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); by 1900, if not indeed by 1890, it was s. Prob. ex the humped or huddled appearance of certain animals moving at top speed.

hump, hit the. See hit . . .

hump, over the. See over . . .

Hump, the. The Continental Divide in the west of North America: U.S. and Canadian tramps': C. 20: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Stiff, 'Over the hump' means to cross the mountains to the West Coast'; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; extant.

Humphrey. 'A coat used by pickpockets, that has pocket-holes, but no pockets': 1859, Matsell; 1893, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1930. Prob. suggested by such clothes-names as Benjamin and Joseph.

humpty-dumpty, or with capitals. As 'Ale boild with Brandy' (B.E., 1698), it is s.—2. 'Bloody fool to have panicked. Trying to run. Made a dead tumble out of it. A regular humpty dumpty,' James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936; a mistake likely to lead to one's arrest. Cf. fall, n.: 'Humpty Dumpty had a great fall'.

hums. See hum, n., 2.

hunch, n. As 'intuition' or 'inspiration', the term, despite Jackson & Hellyer (1914), has, almost certainly, been s. from the beginning.—2. Hence, a signal, a warning; 'the office': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant.

hunch, v., 'to jostle, or thrust' (Grose), is not c. but S.E.

hundred percenter. 'Salesman or broker, who trades something entirely worthless for a security having a market value,' Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering, 1931: commercial underworld: since ca. 1920.

hundred proof. Purest whiskey: tramps': since ca. 1922: Stiff, 1931. 100 per cent. pure.

hung jury. A jury unable to reach agreement on a verdict: 1929-31, Kernôt; by 1940, s. I.e., hung-up, suspended, in a state of suspense.

Hungarian. Certain lexicographers have adjudged its punning sense (a hungry man) to be c., but it is surely either s. or mere jocular S.E. A titre de curiosité, G. Mynshull, in his Essays and Characters of a Prison and Prisoners, 1618, delivers himself feelingly of this wisecrack: 'Some are of opinion that English prisons lock up none but English men, but I say they are all Hungarians'.

hunger lane or H—L—. A railroad that passes through country 'hostile' to tramps: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

hungry. (Of a place) where it is difficult for a tramp to obtain food: since ca. 1890. Jack London, The Road, 1907, 'It was the hungry hoboes that made the town a "hungry" town'; by 1930, English tramps', as in Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935; 1939, Terence McGovern, It Paid to be Tough, 'Vancouver was sure a tough city . . . a "hungry burg"': extant. Proleptic.

hungry track. A route, district, township or city where it is difficult to obtain free food: Australian tramps': since ca. 1910. Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, 1941. See hungry.

hunk, n. Revenge: 1893 (see get hunk); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1920, low s. 'Originated and still used by the older tramps' (IA, 1931). Ex the local Am. hunk (from Dutch honk) as used in children's games for 'home' or 'goal'.

hunk, v. To avenge a wrong; to get even: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the n.; cf. get hunk.

hunk, get. See get hunk.

hunkie, -y. A non-western European labourer: classified by Jackson & Hellyer, 1914, as c., but certainly s. Ex Hungarian; but imm. a diminutive of the synonymous hunk.

hunky, v. See hunky chunks.

hunky chunks. 'To steal provisions', The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); by 1938, † (Irwin). Chunks of bread or meat; hunky, to 'rhyme' with it.

hunkydory. 'On the right side; everything agreeable': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'Having obtained such information . . . as satisfied him that he was all "hunky-dory", in certain quarters, he rested'; by 1890, s. An elaboration of U.S. s. hunky, 'in good condition; safe and sound; all right'.

hunt, v. See hunting.

hunt a wampus. To go on a wild-goose chase: tramps': C. 20. Stiff, 1931, 'The wampus is a black cat with a white tail'—seriously, a non-existent creature—and it lives in the tall timber' (Stiff); cf. American catawampus.

hunt-box is erroneous for hum-box. Potter, 1797; Andrewes, 1809.

hunt the dummy. To go out stealing pocket-books: 1878, Charles Hindley, Life and Times of James Catnach; 1893, F & H; ob. See dummy.

hunter is short for yokel-hunter, q.v. Mayhew, 1851; Nov. 1870, The Broadway, 'Hunters' . . . thinblierig men, living by low gaming': † by 1920.—2. See pitch the hunters.

hunting. 'Decoying, or drawing others into Play' (gaming): 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Hunting, drawing in unwary persons to play or game'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L, loosely, 'Card-sharping'; so too F & H, 1893; ob. Ex the S.E. sense by a natural anti-social development.

hunting the squirrel. See squirrel-hunting.

hurdle, v.i. To jump off a moving train: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. Ex hurdling (in athletics).

hurdles, the. The third-degree; 'cop making one jump', John Chapman in The (N.Y.) Sunday News, May 23, 1937; extant.

hurl, v.; hurler; hurl(e)y. To betray, to 'squeal'; an informer to the police; apt to, likely to betray one's friends, associates, accomplices: 1925, Leverage; extant. Semantically, cf. throw down.

Hurly Burly is one of the C. 17 underworld nicknames for a gang-leader: 1612, Dekker, O per se O.—Cf. the High Constable.

hurrah boy. Crooks connected with sport (?): Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'I had always worked a lone hand, although I had many a pal among th' touts and hurrah boys'; extant. Ex the Standard American sense, 'a blindly enthusiastic partisan' (D.A.E.). hurridun. See harridan. (B.E., 1698.)

hurry buggy; hurry-up wagon. A patrol wagon: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss (the latter); 1925, Leverage (the latter); 1927, Kane (the former); 1931, Godfrey Irwin (the former); extant. It travels fast.

husband and wife. A knife: principally the Western States: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

husby lour. See husky lour, reference of 1809.

hush, 'to murder', was prob. c., at least orig.; usually in passive: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Hush the cull, murder the fellow'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. Cf. the euphemistic v., silence.

hush berry. A tooth: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'I had a beaut of a swell mouth, an' a bunch of hush berries that would choke an elephant'; extant. Humorous.

hush crib. 'A shop where beer or spirits is sold "on the quiet"—no licence being paid': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1893 (F & H) it was low s. Cf. — hush money has, since ca. 1910, been a Canadian synonym of fall money. Anon. letter of June 9, 1946. Ex S.E. sense.

hush-shop. A speakeasy: 1925, Leverage; ob. Cf. hush crib and speakeasy.

hush-stuff. 'Money given to prevent a witness from testifying': 1859, Matsell; ob. A variation of S.E. hush-money.

huskin lour. See:—

husky lour or husky-lour. A guinea: 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., where it is incorrectly given as huskin lour; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, 'Husky lour, a guinea, a gold coin'; 1809, Andrewes (huskey lour and, in Addenda, husbylour); 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1893 (F & H). Cf. lour; husky implies considerable strength or size.

hustle, n. An instance of 'hustling', q.v.: 1826, The New Newgate Calendar, V, 338, 'A most daring hustle took place at the King's Theatre, in the Haymarket'; † by ca. 1910. By substantivization of the v. implicit in hustling.

hustle, v. To beg for (something); to obtain by begging: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 'One fellow gave his companion a black eye because . . . he "ought to hustle better togs"'; 1902, Flynt, The Little Brother; extant. Cf.:—2. To get busy on theft: 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; June 21, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens, as v.t.; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 'Hustle, v. Operate a racket'; 1938, Francis Chester; extant.—3. To solicit for sexual purposes: 1924 (implied in hustler); 1935, Hargan; by 1937 (see hustler) it was s. in the U.S.A. and c. in Britain; 1940, Joseph Crad, Traders in Women; extant.—4. To sell (something stolen or illicit): since the early 1920's. 'One can "hustle" almost anything that is crooked': 'Slum hustling—Selling fake jewellery. Weave hustling—Selling spurious cloth. Skin hustling—Selling fake fur. Worm hustling—Selling fake silk': Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941. Ex sense 2.

hustle buggy-ride. A journey, a ride, in a police-squad car: tramps': 1934, Thomas Minehan, Boy and Girl Tramps; extant. Cf. hurry buggy.

hustle job. A crime requiring speed: 1935, Hargan; extant.

hustler. One who practises 'hustling' (q.v.); one of those accomplices who assist the actual pickpocket by hustling or jostling the prospective victim: 1826, Knapp & Baldwin, The Newgate Calendar, IV, 295, in reference to the year 1820; 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London; † by 1910. A special application of the S.E. sense.—2. A pimp that occasionally thieves: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'The genteel thief is designated a hustler'; 1933, Ersine, 'A competent thief'; 1942, BVB applies it to any pimp; extant.—3. A prostitute: U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1935, Hargan; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 21) it was s. She hustles, i.e. hurries, i.e., harries her prospects.—4. A small-time, petty racketeer: U.S.A.: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'Dice hustlers'; 1928, R. J. Tasker; Oct. 26, 1929, Flynn's, Lawrance M. Maynard, 'Shakedown Artists'; Aug. 23, 1930, Liberty; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Julien Proskauer, Suckers All, 'Hustlers—crooks; gamblers'; 1935, David Lamson; extant.—5. A robber of drunken men: U.S.A.: 1930, Clifford R. Shaw; extant. Cf. sense 2.

hustling. 'Forcible robbery, by two or more thieves seizing their victim round the body, or at the collar': 1823, Bee; 1826, The New Newgate Calendar, V, 337, 'Transported for hustling'; 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London (pp. 69–72: an excellent account of the methods); 1887, Baumann; † by 1910.—2. Prostitution: U.S.A.: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; by 1938 (Mark Benney, The Scapegoat Dances), English also; extant.—3. (Cf. sense 1.) 'Racketeering; criminal activity in general,' R. Chadwick, Liberty, July 5, 1930; extant.

hut. A prison cell: mostly convicts': 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; extant. Derisive; cf. hutch.

hutch. A cubicle: Borstal: 1932, J. W. Gordon, Borstalians; extant. The place is a rabbit-warren, therefore . . .

huxter. Money: 1874, H, 'Term much in use among costermongers and low sharpers': 1887, Baumann; † by 1915. Perhaps ex hoxter.

hydrophoby lay, the. The savage-dog trick, whereby, e.g., an irate father claims damages for his child's artificial wounds from dog-bite: 1903, G. R. Sims, Living London, III, 158; ob. Fear of hydrophobia is alleged.

hygh pad. See high pad.

hyke. See hike.

hykey. Pride: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; very ob. Corruption of 'high-and-mighty'?

Hymie's. A pawnbroker's shop: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. So many pawnbrokers are named Hymie—or well might be.

hyp. The injection of a drug (esp. of morphine): 1929, Givens; June 7, 1930, Flynn's; 1934, Rose; extant. Cf.:—

hype, n. 'The "hype" or morphine-user. Morphine is taken by hypodermic injections,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; 1934, Convict; Aug. 17, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1936, Lee Duncan; 'The needles or hypes—morphine users'; 1938, Castle, 'A narcotic addict'; extant. Cf. hyp and hypo.—2. 'A short-change game,' Leverage, 1925; May 9, 1931, Flynn's, Lawrance M. Maynard, 'This racket is called the "hype"—or "laying the note"'; 1933, Ersine; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 'A confidence game involving short change'; 1938, Francis Chester; extant. In allusion to the sharpness of a hypodermic needle.—3. (Ex 1.) A hypodermic syringe or injection: since the late 1920's. BVB.

hype (or hipe), v. To short-change; to swindle (someone): 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; Aug. 7, 1937, Carlton Brown in The New Yorker defines hyping as the swindling technique of crooked auctioneers; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; 1938, Castle; extant. To hype = to hypo = to inject with a hypodermic needle = to prick = to sting; cf. 'sharp practices'.

hype, on the. Engaged in the short-changing 'game': since ca. 1925: 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose. See hype, n., 2.

hype artist or hype guy or hype worker. An expert in short-changing: May 9, 1931, Flynn's, Lawrance M. Maynard (the first); Dec. 17, 1938, Flynn's, Convict 12627 (the second and the third); extant. See hype, n., 2.

hype stick. A hypodermic syringe: since ca. 1918. BVB. Cf. hype, n., 1.

hype (oneself) up. To inject oneself with a drug: since ca. 1930. Castle, 1938. See hype, v.

hype worker. See hype artist.

hyper. A short-change trick: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant. Cf.:—2. A 'flim-flammer' (q.v.): 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; extant. I.e., a 'stinger'—to apply a hypodermic needle is to prick or sting the patient.

hyping is merely the vbl n. of hype, v.

hypo, n. and v. A hypodermic needle; to use one, in administering a drug: Feb. 7, 1925, Flynn's (the v.); June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, Randolph Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave' (the n.); by 1929 or 1930, police, journalistic, medical s.—2. Hence, a drug-user that takes the drug in a hypodermic injection: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, who applies it to any drug addict; 1934, Louis Berg; 1934, Convict; July 25, 1936, Flynn's; 1942, BVB.

hypo-smecker. An addict preferring injection.

tions: drug traffic: since late 1920's. BVB, 1942. See the elements.

hyster. See hoister, 2, reference of 1899—repeated in the Caseys' The Gay Cat, 1914, and elsewhere.

I

For C. 16 terms written with initial i where j is meant, see J. Thus Iack(e)man appears at Jack(e)man.

I.C., on the. On the look-out; wary: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Punning on I see.

I.D. Identification: commercial underworld: since ca. 1920. Maurer, 1941. I.e., 'identification'.

I declare or I don't care. A chair: mostly Pacific Coast; late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

I desire. A fire: mostly in the West: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; adopted ex Cockney s.

I don't care. See I declare.

I suppose. Nose: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928; The American Mercury, May 1928, article by Ernest Booth; Convict, 1934. Rhyming; adopted ex Cockney.

ice, n. Collective for 'diamonds': 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 'Along comes a guy . . . a piece of ice in his tie that made Tiffany's front window look like a hardware exhibit'; 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue (quot'n at glass, 3); 1925, Leverage, 'Ice, n., A diamond; diamonds'; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, Randolph Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave'; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly, G. A. England, 'Underworld Lingo'; 1928, Chicago May; April 19, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'Ice. A string of it'; Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's; 1934, Convict; 1935, Hargan; Nov. 13, 1937, Flynn's, Richard Sale; by 1939—or earlier—it was s. in U.S.A.; by 1930 (Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941; Partridge, 1938; John G. Brandon, 1936) it was current in Britain, where it has remained c.; since ca. 1930, also Australian, as in Baker, 1945. Ex the colour and the gleam.—2. Hence, a tie-pin, or other piece of jewellery, set with a diamond: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—3. 'A dirty look,' John Chapman in The (N.Y.) Sunday News, May 23, 1937; extant. Cf. icy stare.

ice, v. To sentence (someone) to imprisonment; 1925, implied in iced; 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. :—

ice, on. In prison: July 18, 1931, The Saturday Review of Literature, article by John Wilstach; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Kept on ice: in the cooler.—2. Hence (?), (of a criminal) in hiding: May 22, 1937, C. Ryley Cooper in The Saturday Evening Post—this, says Godfrey Irwin in letter of Sept. 27, 1937, is a rare usage.

ice(-)box. A prison morgue: 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; 1929, Givens; May 24, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'Behind Closed Doors'; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1932, Lewis E. Lawes, 20,000 Years in Sing Sing; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. Ex its resemblance to a refrigerator.—2. Hence, the coroner's office: 1930, George London; 1934, Rose extant.—3. A solitary-confinement cell: convicts': 1931, IA; 1934, Rose; by ca. 1935, also Australian; Baker, 1942; Baker, 1945, equates it with 'gaol' (cf. fridge). I.e., 'isolation cell' has suggested the term in this sense: cf. iso.—4. A gambling den (also ice-box joint): Aug. 24, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant.

Ice Box, the. The prison at Dannemora: 1935, Hargan; extant. Cf. Siberia, q.v., and on ice (at ice, on).

ice-box doors. 'Used to delay police bent on raiding the premises until gamblers and lingers-on can escape through some hidden exit, or until paraphernalia can be hidden,' Godfrey Irwin, in letter of Sept. 27, 1937, commenting on C. Ryley Cooper's definition in The Saturday Evening Post of May 22.

ice-cream habit. See chippy habit.

ice(-)house is an occ. variant of ice box, 1: as, e.g., in Flynn's, Dec. 13, 1930, J. Allan Dunn, 'I ain't due for the Ice House yet'; extant.—2. A jewelry store (jeweller's shop): Pacific Coast: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant. See ice, 1.

ice palace. A high-class brothel, a fashionable saloon: since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'From the many mirrors and cut-glass chandeliers found in these resorts' (Irwin).

ice-tong doctor. A drug-vendor, strictly a doctor that illegally sells drugs: drug addicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1942, BVB; extant. Prob. ex :—

ice-tongs doctor. An illegal practitioner of medicine: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. The allusion, app. obscure, is sufficiently clear.

iced. 'In jail; in a dark cell in prison,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. on ice (q.v. at ice, on).—2. (Of a pack of cards) stacked or marked: Aug. 17, 1925, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, 'Naw, you don't pull any iced deck on me'; extant. Its users have their opponents cold.—3. 'The place where he'—a criminal—'seeks refuge is said to be "iced", C. Ryley Cooper in The Saturday Evening Post of May 22, 1937—a usage that Godfrey Irwin, in letter of Sept. 27, 1937, thinks is rare and, indeed, open to doubt.

iceman. A thief specializing in the theft of 'ice' (diamonds): Feb. 14, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'His professional moniker of Larry the Iceman'; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex ice, 1.

icken. Oak: 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; † by 1920. The Ger. for 'oak' is Eiche, Eichbaum, Eichenlauf (a poetical term), Eichenholz (oakwood). The earliest example of American c. originating in German.

idea-pot, 'the head', is not (as in B & L, 1889) c. but s.

idle poor. Convicts unemployed: 1933, Ersine, 'The idle gang'; by 1945, gen. prison s. Both sarcastic and ironic.

if and and, 'a band' (musical): M & B, 1944, cite it as Pacific Coast c., by rhyming. The term is suspect: ? if and or if an and.

if it takes a leg! 'Threat of a desperado, in search of revenge': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; app. † by 1920. I.e., even at the cost of a leg.

ignoramus jury, 'a Grand Jury', is not c., as stated by B & L in 1889; perhaps not even s.—see The O.E.D.

Ike or ike, n. 'The professional loafer or "ike"': 1906, C. E. B. Russell and L. J. Rigby, The Making of the Criminal; extant. Perhaps ex do a mike, 'to idle'.—2. A piece of information ('the tip'); a warning ('the office'): 1936, John G. Brandon, The Dragnet, 'E passed the ike that there was somethink on there'; extant. Prob. ex the Gentile idea of Semitic sharpness.

ike, v. To conceal surreptitiously: Australian: 1895, E. Gibb, Thrilling Incidents of the Convict System in Australia. "'Ikeing the rabbit for a fake for his Bingy, and making a coil of a conkey myrniongir" . . . Convict slang . . . it may be freely translated as having surreptitiously concealed some liquor under the excuse that one was ill and it was required for medicine, and ("making a coil") complaining loudly of some fancied grievance on the part of a ("conkey myrnionger") contemptible or ignorant newly-arrived convict'; ob.

ikey or Ikey. A Jewish receiver of stolen goods; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen: 1896, F & H; by ca. 1900, low s. A special application of Ikey, that term of address to a Jew which represents the pet-form of Isaac.

Ikey Mo. A variant of ikey: mid-C. 19–20; in C. 20, low s. I.e., Isaac Moses.

ill fortune. A ninepenny piece: 1698, B.E.; 1785, Grose, who gives the synonymous the picture of ill luck but implies that both terms were, at that date, s. Hence it would seem that ill fortune had > s. by ca. 1760 and that the latter was never anything but s. Because otherwise a shilling would be given.

ill luck, the picture of. See ill fortune.

illchay (or illshay) to the untray! is a carnival, circus, fair-ground c. or perhaps rather, low s., catch-phrase battle cry, meaning: Send away this sucker who's beefing that he's been trimmed: C. 20. Barry Buchanan in The New York Herald Tribune of Feb. 17, 1937. A back-s. form of Chill (him off) to the front (i.e., out of the way): chill > ilch; ilch + the usual suffix -ay > illchay (pron. illshay); front > ontfr > untrf > untray.

illegitimate. A counterfeit sovereign; a counterfeit half-sovereign being a young illegitimate: 1823, Bee; † by 1896 (F & H). See legitimate.

illy-whacker, 'confidence trickster; a shady liver by his wits', comes from whack the illy, 'to live illicitly by one's wits': Australian: since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, 1941 (both terms); Baker, 1945. In whack the illy, whack = to practise (cf. 'to flog' and 'drive a trade'); illy corrupts the eeler of eeler-spee, q.v.

I'm afloat. A boat: mainly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; adopted ex Cockney s.

immediate. An immediate release: 1934, Howard N. Rose: rather is it prison j. than convicts' c.

imp. An impression, esp. in wax, of a key, usually of a house-key: burglars': Aug. 1879 (p. 588), Sessions Papers, (a convict log.) 'He was going next day, Saturday, and should take a wax, and it would not be his fault if he did not bring an imp, meaning an impression'; extant.

impost-taker. A synonym of gull-groper in the c. sense: prob. since ca. 1605 but not recorded until 1620, when it appears in Dekker, Villanies Discovered; B.E., 1698, 'One that stands by and lends money to the Gamester at a very high Interest or Premium'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; by the 1850's, current in New York—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; † by 1896 (F & H).

impudent stealer, app. belongs to ca. 1700–1870. Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708, 'Impudent Stealers. Such as cut out the Backs of Coaches, and take Things out of them'; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), has the adj. impudent, applied to one who does this.

impudent stealing, is the vbl n. corresponding to the preceding agential n.: presumably of the same period; (?) first record, 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.

in, n. Influence: since ca. 1920. 1929, E. D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago, 'His strong "in" with the police, built largely, at the outset, with their organization's money'; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 'Henry Sawyer, a tavern keeper . . . and alleged finger man in the kidnapping boasted that he had an "in" with certain members of the St. Paul Police Department'; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 'An advantageous relationship': 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; by 1942, police and journalistic and political bosses' s.—2. 'An introduction; give an in, to place in a position to bribe. "Give me an in with the skipper of that precinct", James P. Burke, 'The Argot of the Racketeers'—The American Mercury, Dec. 1930; but earlier in E. D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago, 1929, 'Asked him if he could get an "in" at the bootlegging game'; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant.—3. Entrance; esp. make an in, to gain entrance: Nov. 29, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant.

in, adv. In prison: not c. but (orig. proletarian) coll.—2. Into London: tramps': C. 20. W. L. Gibson Cowan, Loud Report, 1937.

in and in. Entirely in; participating, sharing, fully: C. 20: s. (orig., low) rather than c. Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926, 'We know you are "right". That's why you are declared "in and in" with the works'—the works here being a share-out of loot.

in-and-out boy. 'A burglar': perhaps, orig., c.—but prob. always low s. and police s. In, e.g., Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 1937. In and out of the house, flat, etc., as quickly as may be.

in-back. In the death chamber: convicts': 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; 1932, Lewis E. Lawes, 20,000 Years in Sing Sing; extant. Situated at the back.

in drag. See drag, in.

in dutch. In jail; imprisoned: C. 20. Kernôt, 1929–31. A specialization of s. in dutch, 'in trouble'.

in for patter. See patter, be in for the.

in for pound. 'Committed for the assizes': 1889, B & L; ob. Ex the impounding of stray animals.

in front of the gun, be. 'To retail narcotics with the understanding that the peddler protects the "big man" by taking the blame if he is arrested,' BVB: drug traffic: since ca. 1930. The peddler stands to be shot at.

in grease. In trouble: 1929–31, Kernôt; see also grease, n., 4.

in hock. See hock, in.

in it. 'To let another partake of any benefit or acquisition you have acquired by robbery or otherwise, is called putting him in it; a family-man who is accidentally witness to a robbery, &c., effected by one or more others, will say to the latter, Mind, I'm in it; which is generally acceded to, being the established custom; but there seems more of courtesy than right in this practice': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee, 'Concerned in or making part of a gang'; extant.

in lavender. See lavender, in.

in limbo. See limbo.

in line. 'Amenable; in accord with the prevailing standards or code. "Get in line or we smoke you"', Burke, 1930: racketeers': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. In line (not out of step) with current practice.

in (prime) twig. See twig, n., 2.

in quod. See quod, n.

in right. See right, in.

in smoke. In hiding: New Zealand since ca. 1920, and Australian since ca. 1925. 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter); also English, as in Percy J. Smith, Con Man, 1938; 1939, Kylie Tennant, Foveaux; 1942, Baker. Prob. coined by an ex-soldier crook; 'smoke screen'.

in stir, 'in prison': see stir.

in the blue. See blue, in the.

in the book. A thief, esp. a pickpocket: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on the synonymous c. hook.

in the clear. Out of danger; clear of—i.e., free from—blame or suspicion; above suspicion: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'At three o'clock in the morning [in Chicago] you'll be lucky if you find one [policeman] in two miles. They're all in the clear. They don't give a — about you [the ordinary citizen]; they're lookin' for comfort. Even down-town they are likely to be in the clear when you want 'em most', in reference to danger from 'hold-up' and 'strong-arm men'; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1930, Charles F. Coe, Gunman; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by ca. 1931, British also, as in The Passing Show, May 26, 1934, and Partridge, 1937; by 1938, s. in the U.S.A. Not under the shadow of suspicion.—2. Hence (?), applied to net proceeds: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers: this commercial-underworld c. has by 1930 > commercial s. Perhaps, cf. the commercial s. in the red, 'in the deficit column' (O'Connor, 1928).

in the country. See country, the, reference of 1896.

in the frame. See frame . . .

in the hock. See hock, in.

in the hospital. See hospital . . .

in the long grass. See long grass . . .

in the market. See market . . .

in the middle. See middle, in the.

in the pie. See pie, in the.

in the racket. Engaged in a criminal enterprise: since ca. 1860; by 1905 or 1910, low s. (F & H, 1902.) See racket.

in the red, 'in debt; unprofitable': commercial s., not c. Ex red ink indicating a debt.

in the right hit. See right hit.

in the ring. 'In a clique, or clan of conspirators for evil': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1910, no longer c. Cf. in with the push.

in the shade. In prison: 1925, Leverage; extant. Without 'a place in the sun'.

in the sleet. In the street: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

in the take. See take, in the.

in the toils. 'Within the secret control of an officer [of police]', Burnham, 1872, is not c. but police s. in town. 'Flush of money': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; † by 1890. Cf. the American coll. go to town.

in twig. See twig, n., 2.

in with the push. 'Part of the gang,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. See push, n., 5, and cf. in it.

in wrong. See wrong, in.

inching, 'encroaching', is not c. but either s. or coll.

index, 'the face': not c. but pugilistic s.

India wipe. A silk handkerchief: since ca. 1785. Grose, 3rd ed., 1796; † by 1896 (F & H). See wipe, n., 3. (Lit., a handkerchief from India.)

Indian hay. See hay, 3.

Indians about is an American gamblers' term referred to by Matsell, 1859, at steamboat on p. 86—but not treated as promised. It prob. = Beware!

indoor buggy(-)ride. See take for an . . .

indorser. 'A sadist who mistreats prostitutes,' BVB, 1942: C. 20. He is also a pervert.

indoway. A window: 1933, Ersine; extant. I.e., window > indow > indoway: by the American version of back-slang.

info, 'information': since ca. 1920: Dec. 26, 1925, Flynn's, Roy W. Hinds, "'Where'd you pick up the info?'" Tony asked'; March 15, 1930, Flynn's, John Wilstach; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1932, police j. and journalistic s.—2. Hence, advice: from ca. 1925: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

infor. Information; esp., information carried by informers to prison officials: convicts': C. 20; by 1940 or so, it was gen. prison s. Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940. Cf. info, 1.

information fence. 'A criminal who sells information to crooks,' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1940, police j. See fence, n.

ing-bing. See throw an ing-bing.

ingle-box is Andrewes's error (1809) for jingle-box.

ingler. An habitually dishonest horse-dealer: 1797, Humphry Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'The ingler so downey, he plays off his tricks'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1896, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; by 1910, † in Britain; by 1930, † in U.S.A. One who gets into ingles or corners to discuss his business.

ingratus, 'ungrateful (servant)', can hardly be c.: see Awdeley's . . . introductory paragraph and No. 25: the learned element seems to have first invaded the language of the underworld only ca. 1585. Even as special S.E. it seems to have fallen into desuetude by 1700 at latest.

ink. A (very dark) brune or brunette; a Negro: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. dinge.—2. Cheap red wine: since ca. 1925: 1931, Godfrey

Irwin; March 12, 1938, The New Yorker, Meyer Berger; extant. Coloured water.

ink-pot, n. A 'resort for low characters', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review ('Criminal Slang'); 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; slightly ob. Their characters are as black as ink.—2. A jail, a prison dark-cell: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the darkness of the latter, the gloom of the former.

ink-pot, v. To arrest and imprison; to put into a dark cell: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 2 of the n.

ink-slinger, 'an author, reviewer, writer', is classified as c. by No. 1500, who defines it as 'literary person' (Life in Sing Sing, 1904); but it has never been c. Neither has the sense 'a clerk or other office worker' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931).

inkle, v. 'Let him know,' says Matsell, who presumably means 'Inkle. To let (him) know': 1859, Vocabulum; 1896, F & H. But I suspect that this is a mistake. If genuine, it constitutes a back-formation from 'an inkling'.

inky smudge. A judge: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'The Inky Smudge would have quite a few kind words to say. Give him a proper caning he would'; by 1940, (low) s. Rhyming.

innocent. A corpse: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; app. † by 1910. A corpse represents a person now harmless.—2. A convict: 1859, Matsell, 'Innocents. Convicts, because it is supposed that they cannot commit crime'; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A convict or other prisoner'. Perhaps rather because they habitually declare themselves innocent of the crime.

inquiring lay, the. 'A favourite device with thieves of this class [hotel and boarding-house thieves], who are shown all over the premises by confiding landladies, and so gain information or the sight of any unconsidered trifle lying about,' A. Griffiths, Police and Crime, 1898 (ii, 292); ob. See lay, n., 2.

inquisitive. A white-slavers' term dating from the 1890's. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, a pimp speaking: 'We always call magistrates "inquisitives"'. A significant point of view.

ins. A share of winnings or loot: May 28, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch, "'Lissen . . ." I said to him, "I want ins," . . . "What a swell crust a grease-ball like you has got to declare on ins"'; extant. Cf. in, n., 2 and 3.

inside, n. An accomplice inside a place that is to be burgled: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's (p. 637); extant.—2. Inside information; information or knowledge shared by very few persons: since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

inside, v. 'To pick an inside pocket,' Leverage, 1925; extant.

inside, adv. Inside a prison: Oct. 14, 1888, The Referee, cited by Ware, 1909: perhaps orig. c., but by 1918, certainly a mere colloquial euphemism.—2. In an, or the, innermost circle of the underworld: C. 20. John G. Brandon, The Pawnshop Murder, 1936.

inside man, synonymous with inside, n., 1, is hardly c. (D. W. Maurer in The Writer's Digest, Oct. 1931); but the sense, 'that member of a gang of "con men" to whom a prospective victim is brought' (Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937; Flynn's, Jan. 28, 1939, Frank Wrentmore) is c., dating since ca. 1920. Compare outside man.

inside-outside. (Of a crime) fully prepared: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Short for some such phrase as 'ready, both inside and out'.

inside toge. A waistcoat: 1741, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. III, 'He had a pretty rum outside and inside Togee', glossed as 'A good Coat and Waistcoat'; † by 1830. See toge, 1.

inside track may orig. have been c., as Geo. P. Burnham, who defines it as 'the weather-gage; a clear advantage', appears to classify it in his Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872. Ex athletics: the runner on the inside track having an obvious advantage.

inside worker. A synonym of insider, 3: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—2. A pickpocket specializing in inside pockets: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

insider. One in the know: since ca. 1850: 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; by 1900, s. Contrast outsider, 1 and 2.—2. A pocket-book stolen from an inside pocket: Sept. 12, 1846, The National Police Gazette; 1924, George S. Dougherty, The Criminal, "'Insiders"—that is, "leathers" or pocket-books from inside vest pockets'; extant. Cf. sense 5.—3. The inside worker in a gang of burglars: March 1857, Sessions Papers (London), p. 681; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.), 'A pickpocket whose specialty is inside work'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—4. 'A tool used to turn a key,' Leverage, 1925; Dec. 8, 1928, Flynn's; extant.—5. An inside pocket (cf. sense 2): 1925, Leverage; 1933, Ersine; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; 1941, Maurer; extant.

instrument. He who, of a gang, actually picks the pocket: 1925, Leverage; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant. With a pun on tool, n., 2.

int. A sharper: ca. 1620–70. The term occurs in two works by Brathwayt; not certainly, but prob. c. Origin? Perhaps 'intelligent'; less prob. 'interest' or L. 'intus'.

interloper. 'Some of the men with me were mere "interlopers"—men called in on an emergency': thieves': 1872, Diprose's Book about London and London Life; † by 1920. Ex the S.E. sense: punningly.

intimate. 'A shirt', says Matsell (Vocabulum, 1859); but this may be an error, despite the term's inclusion in B & L, 1889. If genuine, it was † by 1920 and owes its origin to its closeness to the wearer.

Invalid Criminal Hotel, the. See Thieves' Palace, the.

Irish buggy. A wheelbarrow: s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

Irish club house. A police station: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review ('Criminal Slang'); 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; by 1930, it was s. So many policemen are Irish.

Irish dividend. 'A shake-down', says Leverage, in 1925, and by 'shake-down' he means extortion by the police, so many of whom, in the U.S.A., are Irish; slightly ob.

Irish Kirby (or Kerby). A derby hat: mostly, Pacific States: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Irish lasses. Spectacles: mostly Pacific Coast:

late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928; Kernôt, 1929–31. Rhyming.

Irish pasture. A faint; a coma: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Irish, because so many phrases are; but why, precisely, pasture? Unless it be that a faint imposes upon the gullible, no less green than are the lush Irish pastures.

Irish toyle; usually pl. 'An Irishe toyle is he that carieth his ware in hys wallet, as laces, pins, poyntes, and such like. He useth to shew no wares untill he have his almes. And if the good man and wyfe be not in the way, he procureth of the ch[i]ldren, or servants, a fleece of wool, or the worth of xii.d. of some other thing, for a peniworth of his wares': thus, in 1562, John Awdeley. Also Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608, 'Strange Enginiers, called Irish-Toyles' and, in the paragraph on this type of beggar, 'An Irish Toyle is a sturdy vagabond, who scorning to take paines that may make him sweat, stalkes only up and downe the country with a wallet at his backe . . . and under cullor of selling [his] wares, both passeth too and fro quietly, and so commits many villanies as it were by warrant'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'The Twelfth Order of Canters'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose—but prob. † by 1750.

Irish turkey, 'corned beef and cabbage': s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

Irishman, the. A species of the confidence trick: C. 20. Partridge, 1938.

iron, n., 'money in general' (Grose, 1785), seems to have been not c. but s.—low s., indeed, as in Edwin Pugh's novel, The Spoilers, 1906. Nor is it c. in U.S.A.—2. Courage: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; by 1920, perhaps by 1910, it was †. Prob. ex the S.E. phrases a man of iron and iron courage.—3. See irons.—4. A revolver: U.S.A.: not c. but s., ex Western shooting iron.—5. An obsolete automobile, a car past its usefulness: U.S. commercial c.: Feb. 19, 1935, The New York Sun; extant. Cf. the street-cry, 'Any old iron?'—6. A (professional) pathic: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'Most of the girls and irons would be out on the bash by now'; 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer; extant.—7. See iron horse, 2.—8. A burglar's jemmy: since ca. 1930. Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941. Made of iron or, at least, of steel.

iron, v. See iron horse, 2.

iron boat, 'a locomotive,' like iron frog, 'a turtle', is not c., but s. Leverage, 1925.

iron cure. See steel cure.

iron doublet, 'a prison', is classified by B.E., 1698, as c.: more prob. was it always s., though perhaps very low s. This term existed ca. 1680–1840. It seems to have been a fanciful elaboration of the much more gen. stone doublet, q.v. And Matsell's definition, 'innocence' (repeated by F & H, 1896), arises from a misapprehension.

iron gang, 'a convict gang working in irons': rather Australian prison officials' j. than convicts' c.: late C. 18–mid-19. Baker, 1945, quoting A. Harris, Convicts and Settlers, 1847.

iron(-)hoof, 'a pathic', is either an elaboration of hoof, 2, not of iron, 6, although these are, obviously, synonyms; or, more prob., it is rhyming s. on pouf: current since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Partridge, 1938, and Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.

iron horse. A jail: 1928, Chicago May: perhaps a mere misprint for iron house.—2. A toss (pron., Cockneywise, torse): rhyming s., orig. low.

'Sometimes abbreviated to "the Iron", or "Ironing"'. ("I'll iron you for it"—"I'll toss you for it"),' F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938. The shortened form, whether n. or v., lay, orig. (ca. 1910), in the no-man's land between c. and low s., but by ca. 1930 it, too, was (low) s.

iron house. A prison; a jail: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, M. H. Weseen; May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. 'From the metal which has such a large part in the cells and bars' (Irwin); cf. iron doublet.

iron man; usually in pl.—ironmen. A coin; coin, cash, money; loot in the form of cash: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Loot'; 1925, Leverage defines it as 'a dollar'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'Iron Men—silver dollars'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A silver dollar; a piece of hard cash'; Jan. 30, 1937, Flynn's, Richard Sale; by 1940, low s. Cf. iron and the Greek pun on archers = Persian darics (coins with figure of archer).

iron out. To kill by shooting: since the middle 1920's. Ersine, 1933. Prob. ex iron, n., 4 (a revolver).

iron parenthesis, 'a prison' (Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811), is s.—perhaps journalistic s.—not c.

iron with one's eyebrows, polish the King's. See polish the King's . . .

ironed. In handcuffs: 1929–31, Kernôt; by 1940, police s., which it may always have been, for irons, 'handcuffs', certainly isn't c.

ironmonger's shop. Only in to keep an ironmonger's shop by the side of a common: 1785, Grose, after glossing it with 'where the sheriff sets one up', defines it as 'to be hanged in chains'; app. current ca. 1770–1840. Cf. dance at Beilby's ball.

irons. Railroad rails: 'tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; extant.

ironworker. A specialist in robbing safes: Eastern States: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; extant. Safes being made of iron or steel.

Isaac, 'a pawnbroker' (Leverage, 1925): s., orig. low.

ishkimmisk is tinkers' s. for 'intoxicated': 1889, B & L. Ex Shelta shkimishk, 'tipsy'.

Island, on the, 'in prison', though used by the New York underworld, was also low s. and police s. See, e.g., Jacob A. Riis, How the Other Half Lives, 1891, p. 74. The reference is to Blackwell's Island.

Island, the. The Parkhurst Prison, Isle of Wight: since the 1920's. Jim Phelan, In the Can, 1939. Cf. 'the Moor' and 'the Ville'.

iso. An isolation cell: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. ice-box, 3.

it, in. See in it.

it won't do! 'Like street robbers, these fellows [burglars] have whistles, and calls, sometimes a word, as "go along, Bob", that is to say,— "proceed vigorously . . ."; again, "it won't do", is the signal for desisting, &c.' : The London Guide, 1818 (as p. 161); app. † by 1880. A special application of the S.E. sense 'it won't serve' (or 'it isn't satisfactory').

Italian bond, travel by. To go on foot: South America: C. 20. Harry Franck, Working North from Patagonia, 1921. Why Italian?

Italian football. A bomb: racketeers': 1929-31, Kernôt; 1930, Burke, 'He gets out of line, so they kick an Italian football round his dump'; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex the large number of Italians in the American gangs, esp. in Chicago—though, in point of fact, there are quite as many Central Europeans.

itching is an ironic synonym of shack fever, q.v.: tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931.

Itchland, 'Scotland', is C. 18-early 19 s., not c.

item. 'A hint, wink, or sly notice. "It was I gave the item that the traps were a coming"'': 1823, Bee, but earlier in The London Guide, 1818 ('hint or sly notice'); 1896, F & H, 'A warning'; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms, 'A secret and unfair information at card-playing'; extant. An item worth consideration.—2. See the next entry.—3. See items.

Item No. 7. A crooked auctioneer's code-phrase 'that warns his abettors to lay off the strong stuff', says Carlton Brown, 'Auction Sale This Day', in The New Yorker, Aug. 7, 1937.

items; occ., item. 'Items. Items derives his name from looking at a party's hand, and conveying to the opposition player what it contains by signs. This is Item's occupation. A looking-glass is sometimes used, sometimes signs which mutes would only '—i.e., which only mutes would—' understand, and sometimes the signs are agreed upon and known only to the parties interested': professional gamblers' and card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; extant. Ex item, 1.

it's good on the star. See good on the star.

ivories, 'teeth', although it was much used in the London underworld of late C. 18-mid-19, has never been other than s.—until C. 20, rather low s. Much the same applies to the late C. 19-20 ivory-box, 'the mouth', which has always been low s.—2. In the sense 'dice', it is gambling s. (F & H, 1896) that may conceivably have orig. been c.

ivory band. Hand: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Convict, 1934; Convict 2nd, 1938. Rhyming.

ivory float. A coat: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

ixnay, 'nothing; not at all; (ixnay on) enough of, stop!': low s., not c. Burke quot'n at kabitz. I.e., nix back-slanged and elaborated.

J

For j written i, cf. note at beginning of I.

J.B. A stetson: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; 1931, IA. A hat made by Messrs. J. B. Stetson.

jab. A hypodermic injection: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer: it may orig. have been c.; but prob. it was s. from the beginning. The same applies to the v. and to the vbl n. jabbing (as in Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1926).

jab joint. A 'dope den': since the 1920's. BVB. Cf. prec. and :—

jab-off or jab-pop or jab-poppo. A hypodermic injection: addicts': resp. since ca. 1920, 1926, 1927. BVB. The first is also a v.: BVB. See prec.—2. Hence, drug-caused exhilaration: since ca. 1930. BVB.

jabber. A prize-fighter: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ob. Cf. familiar S.E. bruiser.—2. A very loquacious person: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ob. He jabbers or is prone to the defect of jabber.—3. Hypodermic syringe: addicts': since ca. 1915. BVB. Cf. jab.—4. A user thereof: since ea. 1920. BVB.

jaboney. A greenhorn; a 'sucker': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. A corruption of gazooney?

jack or Jack, n. A farthing: 1698, B.E., 'He wouldn't tip me Jack, c. not a Farthing wou'd he give me'; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1753, John Poulter; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 'A small coin'; 1889, B & L (id.); 1896, F & H (id.); by 1880, † in England. By personification.—1a. Hence, money: U.S. tramps' and, from ca. 1918, criminals': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'Solid jack—hard cash' and 'Jack—money'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; by 1926, low s.—2. A post-chaise: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, Baumann; † by 1895. By personification.—3. A low prostitute: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; † by 1940. Cf. tom.—4. A watch: 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; † by 1930. Only in christen(ing) Jack and church(ing) Jack. A perversion—or a corruption—of yack.—5. A detective: tramps' and beggars': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House; extant. Ex :—6. A policeman: Sept. 1854, Sessions Papers, 'They said they would put the Jack on me—I suppose meaning the policeman'; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 320); 1896, F & H; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; 1932, Nelson Baylis (New Zealand); 1942, Baker (Australia); by 1945, ob. in Britain.—7. See jacks.—8. Short for Jack in a (or the) box: 1893 (? valid for 1845), F. W. Carew, No. 747, at p. 439; ob.—9. "Jack",—all convicts are Jack,—"do you smoke?" It was a convict peering through the bars, and pushing toward me a fresh clay pipe filled with tobacco,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904 (p. 17); 1910, Harry Franck, A Vagabond Journey, 'As familiar a sound as the "Jack" of the American hobo'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A generic term for any tramp'; 1935, Hippo Neville (English: tramps'); extant. Cf. Jack, a naval sailor; Tommy, a soldier; George, an airman.—10. Short for jack roller: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'Scarcely a day goes by on Madison Street [Chicago] but some man is relieved of a "stake" by some "jack"'; extant.

jack, v. To lock (a door): 1659, Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, 'See the (Gigers jack'd) doors at night locked'; app. † by 1720. Jack = jark (see jark, v.).—2. To make off speedily; run away quickly: 1896, F & H, but prob. from ca. 1870; † by 1945. Perhaps a corruption of jark it, q.v.—3. (Cf. sense 1.) To press; to crowd: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage.—4. Short for jack-boy. A postilion: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1890. See jack, n., 2.

'to hijack': U.S.A., mostly bootleggers': 'Two loads jacked. That's the blow off. You're through,' James P. Burke, in The American Mercury, Dec. 1930; ob.

Jack and Jill. A till: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Jack Catch. See Jack Ketch.

Jack (or j-) cove. 'A dirty fellow, [or an] impudent blustering landlord': 1809, George Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, 'A sloven, dirty fellow'; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 'A mean low fellow'; 1889, B & L (as an Americanism, the term being † by 1870 in England); 1896, F & H (id.); † by 1910 in U.S.A. Prob. suggested by jake cove, for which it may even have been an error.

Jack Dandy. Brandy: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1870, low rhyming s., in which the usual form is Jack a Dandy.

jack-gagger. 'A fellow that lives on the prostitution of his wife': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; ob. by 1920; virtually † by 1946. A variant (or is it merely an error?) for jock-gagger.

Jack in a (or the) box. 'A small but powerful kind of screw, used by burglars to break open safes': 1848, Albert Smith, Christopher Tadpole (. . . the box); 1864, H, 3rd ed. (. . . a box); 1889, B & L, in form . . . the box, as also in F. W. Carew, No. 747, 1893, 'A powerful but compactly-made instrument, familiarly termed the "Jack-in-the-box", for wrenching off any locks which might turn a deaf ear to the blandishments of the "double-enders" or remain obdurate to the insinuating advances of the "spiders"': 1896, F & H (both forms); † by 1940. In allusion to the children's toy.

Jack in the box (or sheep shearer) is one who practises 'ringing the changes' in coin on a merchant lulled into security by the preliminary fair-dealing on the part of him who skilfully works up to obtaining (say) forty pounds for forty shillings: ca. 1605-70. Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608-9.—2. Hence, 'a Sharper, or Cheat' (B.E.): ca. 1670-1830. Grose. Usually Jack in a box (B.E. and Grose).—3. See preceding entry.—4. Socks: Pacific Coast (U.S.A.): late C. 19-20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Jack Ketch, 'a hangman', is rather s. than c., despite B.E., who, by the way, spells it Jack Kitch. Ex an actual hangman: cf. Derrick.

Jack Ketch's certificate. See certificate.

Jack (or jack) man. See jarkman. (Dekker, 1608, has both Jack-man and Jackman.)

Jack of the clock-house, which Dekker in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608-9, presents as distinct from, but is factually the same as, a falconer (q.v.), may simply be one of Dekker's picturesque metaphors, or it may, on the other hand, be a genuine underworld term; if the latter, it could hardly have been current for a period longer than that of ca. 1605-30. The term contains a pun on the striking of a clock and c. strike, to steal.

Jack Randle. A candle: Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; ex English Jack Randall.

jack-roll. To rob (a person) of money while the victim is drunk: since ca. 1920: implied in jack rolling, q.v.; 1930, C. R. Shaw, The Jack Roller,

'You can jack-roll drunks, but it takes nerve in my racket'; 1933, Ersine; 1936, Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession; and many others.

Jack roller; jack roller. 'The "jack roller" . . . the man who robs his fellows, while they are drunk or asleep,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A town crook who fleeces the workers. A tramp thief or yegg who robs his fellows, especially when they are intoxicated'; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant. See the elements.—2. A prostitute addicted to robbing her customers: 1942, BVB.

jack rolling is the vbl n. corresponding to jack roller: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'Jack rollin' th' workstiffs was like takin' candy from th' kids'; 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack Roller; extant.

Jack-run or j.-r. An error for jackrum. Matsell, 1859.

Jack Scratch. A match: Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Jack Shay. To kill or murder: Pacific States: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on slay; perhaps introduced by Australians (Baker, 1945).

Jack Sprat. A child: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on brat.

Jack Surpass. A glass (of liquor): beggars' rhyming s. of ca. 1850-1900: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 418.

jack the interim. (Of accused persons) to be remanded: 1896, F & H; ob. Cf. jack, v., 1.

Jack the Jew. A Jewish thief, a Jewish receiver, 'of the lowest order': 1823, Bee; † by 1910. Cf. Ikey, Ikey Mo. Jack, merely because it alliterates with Jew.

Jack the slipper. The treadmill: convicts': 1896, F & H; † by 1920. On it one slips back unless one plods steadily forward.

jackass. Whiskey: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. A sort of code-name?

jack'd or jacked. (Of a horse) spavined: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, where it appears that the word was orig. used by 'gibbers' or scoundrelly horse-dealers. Prob. by 1830, the term was s.: cf. low s. jacked, 'utterly exhausted', hence 'ruined' (also j. up).—2. Hence, lamed: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; ob.

jackdaw. The jaw: 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; by 1865, low, and by 1875, ordinary rhyming s.

jacked. See jack'd.

jackeman or Jackeman. See jarkman.

jacken-closer, in Andrewes, 1809, and in Sinks of London, 1848, should prob. be—certainly it must orig. have been—jackrum-closer (see jackrum). Meaning 'a seal', it seems to have been current ca. 1790-1850.

jacket, n. See sense 1 of the v.

jacket, v. 'To jacket a person, or to clap a jacket on him, is nearly synonymous with bridging him. See Bridge. But this term—jacket—is more properly applied to removing a man by underhand and vile means from any birth or situation he enjoys, commonly with a view to supplant him; therefore, when a person is supposed to have fallen a victim to such infamous machinations, it is said to have been a jacketing concern': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, plagiarizingly; ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack; † by 1896 (F & H).—2. Hence, in U.S.A., 'To show one up; point one out' (to the police): 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; † by 1920. Prob. ex the idea of strait-jacketing a person.

Jacket and Vest, the. The West End (of London): mostly London crooks': C. 20. Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 1937. The West End > The West >, by rhyming s., The Jacket and Vest.

jacketing concern. See jacket, v.

Jackey. Gin: 1809, The Rambler's Magazine; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'How the blowen lusher jackey'; 1823, Bee; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; by 1860 at the latest, it was s. By personification.

jackin'. A beating-up with a truncheon: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. I.e., a 'blackjacking'.

jackman or Jackman; jackeman. A variant of, possibly even—at least, orig.—a misprint for, jarkman. Awdeley, 1562; Dekker, 1608; B. Jonson, 1721; Winstanley, 1669.

jackpot. Defined by Jackson & Hellyer, 1914, as 'a dilemma, a difficult strait, an arrest', but glossed thus by Godfrey Irwin (letter of Aug. 12, 1937), 'All, I feel, slang'.

jackrum; jukrum. In 1698, B.E., 'Jukrum, c. a License'; 1707, J. Shirley (jacrum); 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1796, Grose (jukrum); 1809, Andrewes (jackrum); 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1896 (F & H). Ex the seal (jark) affixed to the document.

jacks. 'Superior counterfeit coin': 1889, B & L; extant. Perhaps cf. jack, n., 1.

Jacks, the. The police: New Zealand: since ca. 1910. Nelson Baylis, private letter of 1932. Cf. John, 6.

Jack's alive. A five-pound note: rhyming s. (on five), orig. low, but not c.: C. 20. In, e.g., (F. D.) Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938.

Jacksie (or j-). A brothel: Australian: since ca. 1920; by 1940, low s. Baker, 1942. Perhaps where the Jacks, or fellows, go.

Jacky (or j-). See Jackey.

jacky. 'A jacky or stew is anything underhand that has been deliberately arranged, such as a boxing contest in which one of the contestants allows himself to be beaten,' Baker, 1945: Australian: C. 20; by 1940, low and/or sporting s. By obscure—or rather, arbitrary—personification.

Jacob (or j-). A ladder: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'This Staffe [the "filch"] serveth to more uses, then eyther the Crosse-staffe or the Jacobs'; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1801, Colonel George Hanger; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; 1937, David Hume, Halfway to Horror; 1940, Jim Phelan, Jail Journey; extant. Ex the Biblical story of Jacob's dream of a ladder ascending to heaven.—2. Hence, as in Anon., Villainy Unmask'd, 1752: 'There are another Sort of Rogues called Jacobs; these go with Ladders in the Dead of Night, and get in at the Windows, one, two, or three pair-of-Stairs, and sometimes down the Area. They generally go armed, and behave much in the same Manner as [do] those [burglars] with false Keys'; app. † by 1800.—3. An interfering person (?): June 1818, Sessions Papers (p. 297), 'I advised the prosecutor—who had been robbed—to give his money to the landlord until the morning. The prisoner called me a b—dy Jacob, and asked if I thought he was going to be taken-in by a flat of my kind—that he had been too long in town' (i.e., was too shrewd); † by 1900. Perhaps ex climbing a jacob in order to pcep.

Jacobite, 'a detachable collar for a shirt': not c. but s.

Jacob's ladder, 'the forerunner of all other sleeve hold-outs' used by card-sharpers, is not c. but j. or perhaps s.: 1894, J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats, pp. 94–96.

jacrum. See jackrum.

jacum-gag. See jockum gage, reference of 1707.

jade. 'A long term of imprisonment': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; in C. 20, as 'an indefinite term of imprisonment', Australian (Baker, 1942 and 1945); by 1930, † in U.S.A. Like a jade, hard to ride or manage; or, more prob., because jade is hard and convicts have to do hard labour.

jag, n. Intoxication, whether from liquor or from a drug, is low s., not c. Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1926, concerning drug-addict criminals, 'When th' stuff wears off, they blow up for fair and sometimes when th' jag's gone they're as apt to croke a stiff as not'. Cf. — jag, v.; gen. in passive. To vaccinate: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (ch., 'Two Tramps in England'); by 1930, low s. Cf. jab.

Jag, the. The Turf Club races (at Cape Town): South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, June 3, 1946, short article by Alan Nash. Lit., 'the Hunt': these races afford a happy hunting-ground for the crooks and their hangers-on; cf. Dutch jagen, 'to hunt'.

jagged, 'intoxicated', has never been c., despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904.

jagged(-)up. Drug-exhilarated: drug traffic: since ca. 1930. BVB. Ex jag.

jagger. A gentleman: 1839, Brandon, who classifies it as Scottish; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann, Londismen; by 1889, (B & L) it was low s. in England; 1896, F & H; by 1910, † in U.S.A. A corruption—or a deliberate perversion—of gorger. Less prob. is Brandon's proposed origin in Ger. Jäger, 'sportsman, hunter'.

jaggie or jaggy. A saw: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Ex its jagged cutting-edge.

jague. A ditch: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'To mill each ken, let Cove bing then, | Through Ruff-mans, jague, or Laund', the last word being a now archaic term for either pasture or a glade; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1896 (F & H), †. 'Perhaps from jakes' (a privy), says Grose. If not from jakes, it is at least cognate with it.

jail bird, 'a prisoner', may orig. have been c. but prob. was never of a status lower than that of s.; in mid-C. 19–20, S.E. (Grose, 1796.)—2. Hence, among American tramps, it = 'a fellow who boasts about his vag record', Stiff, 1931: C. 20.

jake, n. The state of knowing, familiarity with a secret: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1937—prob. by 1930—it was †. Perhaps ironically ex U.S. coll. country Jake, 'a simpleton'; but prob. ex the adj.—2. Jamaica ginger: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'I . . . run into a rube hip agent with a bottle and some jake'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Used as a beverage and much favoured by the older tramp and more hardened drinker'; 1934, Rose; extant. A contraction of jamake.—3. Methylated spirits as a drink: English: 1932 (see feke-drinker); 1935, Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road; 1936, W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps; extant.

jake, adj. In order; all right; O.K.; good: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1927, Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster; by 1928, (low) s. Cf. jake, n., 1.

jake cove. 'A dirty fellow, an impudent landlord': 1797, Potter; † by 1890. Ex s. jakes, a privy + cove, q.v.

jake-drinker. See fake-drinker.

jake wallah or, by folk etymology, Jake Waller. 'Many of them I knew later as "Jake Wallers": tramps who had given way to the "Meth" craze... If they could not get a supply of "Jake" in the raw they would resort to anything containing alcohol,' W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 1936; extant. See jake, n., 3.

jakey. Jamaica ginger: 1934, Rose; extant. Ex jake, n., 2.

jam, n. See jem, reference of 1809.—2. See jamb.—3. Loot (esp. a burglar's); money: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. the Eng. money for jam, 'money easily earned or acquired'.—4. As a motor-car, it is rhyming s. (low, and pitchmen's), not c.: since ca. 1910. Thus jam is short for jam jar = car.—5. A being wanted by the police: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Better jamb.—6. An overdose of narcotic: Am. addicts': since ca. 1925. BVB. I.e., jam in sense of 'overcrowding'.

jam, v. See jammed.

jam auction. 'An auction, usually in a pawnshop... The crowd is a favorite one with dips,' Ersine, 1933; extant. A sweet thing.

jam-clout, n.; jam clout, v. Or the synonymous jam(-)snatch. 'To shoplift. One member of a team makes a small purchase and holds the clerk's attention while the other steals,' Ersine, 1933: since ca. 1922. See clout, n. and v.

jam pitch. A synonym of jam auction. Ersine, 1933.

jam shot. 'Increased charge of explosive in a safe,' Rose, 1934: bank robbers': since ca. 1920: 1934, Howard N. Rose. Ex jamb shot.

jam snatch. See jam clout.

jamake. Jamaica ginger, as constituting the chief ingredient in a beverage: mostly tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. I.e., 'Jamaica'.

jamb; incorrectly jam. The state of being closed or locked, as of a store or a house: yeggs': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; ob.—2. Hence (?), any form of illicit selling or salesmanship: since ca. 1920: at least as much pitchmen's s. as c.—witness 'Alagazam' in The Saturday Evening Post, Oct. 19, 1929.—3. See jam, n., 5.

jamb shot. 'Safe-blower's method of shooting off safe door by inserting explosive in jamb,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant.

James. 'Jemmy, or James, an iron-crow': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1858, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, xx, 'The "james"—a short crowbar'; Oct. 1879, Macmillan's Magazine; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1889, B & L; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago; 1896, F & H; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; 1934, Howard N. Rose (U.S.A.); ob.—2. 'The firm that received most of his [a counterfeit-coiner's] "favours" was in the habit of prying its "half-James" and "James" (i.e., half and whole sovereigns) at 2s. 10d. and 7s.': 1858, Aug. Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, xvii, 365; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1893, P. H. Emerson (half-James); 1896, F & H; † by 1930. Prob. a refinement on rhyming s. Jimmy o'Goblin, a 'sov'rin': see also jemmy, 3.

jammed. Hanged (as a death sentence): 1735, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, 8th Sessions, 'D— my Eyes, I know I shall be cast, but I shan't be jamm'd; for I have good Friends who will save me, but if they won't they may be damn'd'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1900. I.e., *jamb*ed.—2. Hence jam, to cause to be hanged: 1735, Sessions Papers, trial of Joseph Cole; † by 1800.—3. Also ex sense 1: in U.S.A.: 'killed; murdered': 1859, Matsell; † by 1920.—4. Usually jammed up: U.S.A.: 1933, Eagle, 'In custody'; extant. Prob. ex s. in a jam, in a difficulty.

jamming cull. A hangman: May 1739, Sessions Papers (trial of Wm Bull and Adam Stanton), 'Here comes the Jamming Cull (meaning the Man that was to hang him)': † by 1890. Ex jam, v.: q.v. at jammed.

jamoc. See next, ref. of 1933.

jamoche, jamocha. Coffee: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'There ain't nothin' better in th' booze line than pure alky mixed with jamocha'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (jamoche); 1933, Ersine (jamoche, jamocha); 1934, Rose (jamoche); by 1937 (James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too) the former was English also; extant. The clue lies in jamoche; the word is a blend of Java + Mocha: the names of two places famed for their coffee; cf. Java.

jan. A purse: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All; 1621, B. Jonson, A Masque of the Metamorphosed Gipsies, 'To nip a Jan'; app. † by 1700. Prob. Jan, a personification.

Janasmug. See Janusmug.

Janazaries (or j-). See Janizaries, 2.

Jane, n.; hence, jane. A sovereign (coin): 1864, The Times, April 14 (Law Report), 'He had told me before I went out, that I could keep half a Jane. A Jane is a sovereign', quoted by F & H, 1896; † by 1920. Prob. suggested by—and perhaps a disguising of—James, 2.—2. A woman, a girl: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, and Geo. C. Henderson, Keys, 1924, but Godfrey Irwin (letter of Aug. 12, 1937) is prob. right in thinking that it has always been s. Cf. moll.—3. A revolver: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; ob. Personification.—4. 'The Janes, iron-hoofs (or hooves). Effeminate youths in blackmail gangs,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. Cf. sense 2.

Jane, adj. High-class; of high quality: Glasgow: since ca. 1925. MacArthur & Long, No Mean City, 'Isobel was clearly a real "Jane bit o' stuff"... who wore a hat, without affectation, because she was accustomed to it'. Ex the n., 2.

Janizaries is either c. or s. in the sense, 'any lewd Gang depending upon others': ca. 1680–1830. B.E., 1698. Direct ex the S.E. sense.—2. Hence, 'Janazaries. A mob of pickpockets': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910.

Janusmug. Janasmug. A go-between; one who goes between the thief and the fence' (receiver): 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; † by 1920. Ex Janus, the Roman god facing two ways in his role as the doorkeeper of heaven; the man is a mug because he is a fool to do it, though there is also a pun on 'face' (s. mug).

Jap, 'a colored person' (No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904), is neither c. nor specifically American, nor used so vaguely; it is coll. (orig. s.) for 'Japanese'.

japan. Japanned. A convict is said to be japanned when the chaplain pronounces him to be converted': Matsell, 1859; 1896, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; in C. 20, also Australian, as in Baker, 1942. Ex the English s. sense of to be japanned: 'to enter into holy orders; . . . to put on the black cloth: from the colour of the japan ware, which is black' (Egan's Grose).

jar off. To shoot; to kill: since ca. 1938. Flynn's, April 1942, James Edward Grant. A variation of bump off.

jarck(e). See jark.

jargon, v. To show (someone) a genuine diamond and sell (him) a paste: C. 20. Ex S.E. jargoon, a stone resembling a diamond; cf. :—

jargooneer. 'A convict, nicknamed "Alec the Jargooneer" (fake diamond swindler, in thieves' vernacular)': Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows, 1939; current since ca. 1920.

jark, n. A seal: 1562, Awdeley (jarcke and jarke); 1566, Harman (jarke); 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'Counterfeit Jerkes (or Seales) are graven with the point of a knife'; 1665, R. Head (jarke); 1688, Holme (jerke); 1698, B.E. (jarke); 1707, J. Shirley (jark); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (jarke); 1728, D. Defoe (-e); 1785, Grose (-e); 1788, Grose, 2nd (jark); 1797, Potter; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1859, H; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; † by 1874 (witness H). Origin very obscure. Perhaps a perversion of jerke: ex the jerky movement that may characterize the placing—the affixing—of the seal.—2. Hence, any other ornament worn on a watch-chain: 1859, H; † by 1910.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) A safe-conduct pass: C. 19. 1818, Scott, Midlothian; H, 1874.—4. A writing; a document: Australian convicts': ca. 1810–70. (Price Warung, Tales of the Isle of Death, 1898.) Cf. sense 3.

jark, v. To seal: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Jybe well jerckt'; 1688, Holme, 'Jerk't, Sealed'; † by 1830. Ex the n.

jark (or jarke), cly the. See cly the jerk.

jark it. 'To run away, afar off—as out to sea, or by water; derived from "I ark it"—or take water. See Ark': 1823, Bee, whose derivation from ark (a boat) is almost certainly erroneous; prob. the semantics are the same as for s. put a jerk into it!, 'hurry up!' App. † by 1896 (F & H).

jarke. See jark, n. and v. For jark(e), cly the, see cly the jerk.

jarkman; occ., and perhaps erroneously, written jack(e)man or jack (or J-) man, 'jackman' being almost a misprint for 'jarkman'. Awdeley, 1562, 'A Jackeman is he that can write and reade, and sometime speake latin. He useth to make counterfaite licences, which they call Gybes, and sets to Seales, in their language called Jarkes'; in 1566, however, Harman roundly asserts that although a jarkman is a forger of passports, testimonials, letters, etc., no jarkmen are vagabonds and he implies that most such forgers live in London; Dekker, 1608, is neutral; 1621, B. Jonson, A Masque of the Metamorphos'd Gipsies, where it is spelt Jackman; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue (as jarkeman); 1688, Holme, 'Jackmen, Counterfeiters'; 1698, B.E.,

'The Fourteenth Order of the Canting Tribe'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'The Jack-man is their—the canters'—'Secretary'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (jackman); 1785, Grose—but the term was perhaps † by 1750. Ex jark, n.—2. Hence, a begging-letter writer: app. ca. 1820–80. Ainsworth, Matsell, F & H.

jarred, ppl adj. Arrested: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Cf. jolt, v.

jarvel. A jacket: U.S.A. (—1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; † by 1896 (F & H). Either a misprint for, or a perversion of, jarvey, 2.

jarvey; jarvis. See Jervis.—2. (Only jarvey.) A waistcoat: U.S.A.: perhaps 1794 (see jarvel); 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Familiar form of Jarvis (or Jervis); by personification: cf. Benjamin and Joseph.

jasey or jaz(e)y. A wig: ca. 1773, Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles), 'I at his jazy made a snatch'; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, where it is spelt jazey; 1782, Messink (jazy); 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (jazey); 1789, G. Parker (jasey); 1797, Potter (id.); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1811, Lex. Bal. ('A bob wig'); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; app. † by 1890. Perhaps a scholarly crook's derivation ex 'Jason's fleece': a wig does resemble a fleece, esp. a lamb's fleece. But prob. a corruption (as H, 2nd, 1860, suggests) of 'Jersey worsted' (hence, any worsted): cf. the Lancashire pronunciation, Jarsey.—2. Hence, 'a man with an enormous quantity of hair on his head and face': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; † by 1930.

jasker. A seal (on a letter); 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; † by 1910. Prob. a deliberate perversion of jark, n., 1.

Jason's fleece. In 'ringing the changes' (trimming), this term means changing gold for silver and, in the end, making off with one's gold, plus (say) £40 in silver for perhaps £1, the sleight being effected by means of weighted boxes. Jason's fleece is one of five terms peculiar to this, one of the cleverest tricks of the underworld, the others being Jack in the Box (or sheep-shearer), bleater, white wool, and trimming itself: qq.v. separately. Dekker, in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9, defines thus: 'The Gold which they—the practitioners—bring to the Citizen, is cald Jasons Fleece'. The term seems to have been current ca. 1605–70.—2. Hence, 'a Citizen cheated of his Gold': 1698, B.E.; Grose; app. † by 1840. Both the gold forming the basis of operations (1) and the citizen in (2) are regarded by the underworld as if it and he were as a Jason's fleece.

jauge is a misprint (J. Shirley, 1707) for jague.

jaum. To discover; to espy: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'McBean went in for a blink to his steamer, and jaum'd a scout' or watch 'on the chimney-piece'; 1823, Egan's Grose (jaun); 1896, F & H; † by 1915. Cf. dial. jaum (variant of jam or jamb), 'to corner in an argument' (E.D.D.). I suspect but cannot offer proof, that the word is connected with (Welsh) Gypsy jangav-, 'to awaken (someone)'. jaun is a misprint for the preceding. (D. Haggart, Life, 1821, in Glossary.)

Java. 'A freezing fog was drifting past, and I "hit" some firemen . . . They fixed me up with the leavings from their lunch-pails, and in addition I got out of them nearly a quart of heavenly jaw, v. To go: tramps': 1889, B & L, 'E.g. to jaw on the toby or drum, to go on the road' (to go tramping); 1896, F & H; rather ob.—except among Gypsy-speaking tramps. 'From the Romany java, I go' (B & L); the Romany word derives ex Hindi ex Sanskrit (Sampson at ja).

"Java" (coffee): Jack London, The Road, 1907, but prob. valid for as far back as 1894; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler, 'So long . . . ; thankee fur the java and rolls, too'; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, A Scholar Tramp; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; 1931, Godfrey Irwin—but before this it had > fairly gen. s.; by 1930, current among English tramps—witness, e.g., Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1933. Anon., 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery', Flynn's, March 23, 1929, states that it was low waiters' s. in late C. 19 New York. Much good coffee used to go from Java to North America. (Cf. Mocha in S.E. and jamoke.)

jaw(-)cove. 'Jaw Coves. Auctioneers; lawyers': 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; † by 1930. Ex their plausible and ready speech.

jaw-cracker. A dentist: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; extant. Derogatory.

jaw(-)fest, 'a (long) conversation': s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. The word fest (German for 'feast') occurs in other American s. terms.

jawbone, n. and v. 'Credit; to buy in the company store against one's pay,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1934, Rose, who applies it to time spent in prison before trial and therefore deducible from one's sentence; extant. 'The jawbone of an ass'—as in The Bible.

Jawbone, the. The Montana Railroad: tramps': late C. 19–20: Stiff, 1931. The men that laid the track 'got their tobacco and chuck, and credit in the company store . . . Credit like that was known as "Jawbone"' (Stiff); cf. preceding entry.

jawer. A crooked lawyer: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Cf. the prob. originating mouthpiece.

jay. A simpleton: see flap a jay. Independently, in New Zealand and Australian c., for a dupe, a 'sucker': 1932, Nelson Baylis (in a private letter; N.Z.); 1944, M & B (Aus.); extant.—2. A country post-office: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; ob. Because, in rural districts, the post-office employees are less 'fly'.—3. Hence (?), a bank: Western and Mid-western States bank-robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant.

jaz(e)y. See jasey.

jazz, n. Sexual intercourse: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'Jazz music was so named originally because it was first played in the low dance halls and brothels where sex excitement was the prime purpose, after having been adopted from the savage tribes in whose dances and sexual rites it played such a large part' (Irwin).

jazz, v. To have sexual intercourse: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex the n.—2. Hence, to speed up: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant, but s. by 1940.

jee. See gee, n., 5.

jeer. See jere.

jeff. The sense 'a rope' is not c. but circus-men's s.

Jeff City, 'Jefferson City', may orig. have been tramps' c. It occurs in, e.g., Glen H. Mullins, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925.

jeffey. See jeffy.

jeffing, 'gambling' (Leverage, 1925), is prob. low s. rather than c.

jeffrey gods fo or Jeffrey Gods fo. See Awdeley's, No. 8; † by 1698, at latest, to judge by B.E.'s omission of the term. Origin and etymology are alike mysterious; there would seem to be a gibberish principle at work.

jeffy, or jeffey. 'Jeffey. Lightning', says Matsell, 1859: this may be a genuine derivative from s. done in a jeffy (usually jiffy), 'Done in an instant', 'done like lightning': but, knowing my Matsell, I suspect that he has been guilty—as, so often, he is guilty—of misreading Egan or Sinks of London or 'Ducange Anglicus'.

jeger and jegger are very rare forms (for jeger see seger) of jigger or gigger, a door.

jem. 'Jem, a Gold Ring; Rum-Jem, a Diamond one,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1728, D. Defoe, in Street-Robberies consider'd, defines jem as 'ring' unqualified; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, Dict., where it is misprinted as jam—the error being repeated in Sinks of London, 1848, and in Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859, the latter having also jem; † by 1889 (B & L) in England, by 1910 in U.S.A. Presumably gem.

Jem Mace, v.; usually vbl n. Jem Maceing, "Jem Maceing" or "Jimming" is the name traditionally accorded by the crook artist of the turf to the (in their case) most needful habit of travelling gratis on the railways,' A. R. L. Gardner, The Art of Crime, 1931: C. 20. In Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938, it is spelt gyiming. The former is an elaboration of mace, v., 1, Jem Mace being a famous English pugilist (1831–1910); the latter is simply a derivative of the former.

jemmy. See heavy horsemen.—2. A small crowbar; a (large) chisel: 1811, 'A crow(bar). This instrument is much used by housebreakers. Sometimes called Jemmy Rook,' Lexicon Balatronicum; 1820, Sessions Papers; 1825, Sessions, 'We found a small iron crow, which they call a jemmy'—often it is but a chisel; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1838, Glascock; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist, ch. XX, where, however, the author errs when he says that jemmy, 'a boiled sheep's head', is c., this sense being s.; 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. trans.), ch. XVI; 1848, John Lang, The Forger's Wife; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; 1859, H; 1863, Tom Taylor; 1865, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); Aug. 1869, Sessions; 1879, James McGovan, Hunted Down; by 1880, or soon after, it was s.; by 1900, virtually S.E. Perhaps Jemmy Rook, punning crow(bar), was the earliest form, jemmy only an ellipsis. On the other hand, it may have been created as a male substitute for jenny, 1.—3. A sovereign (coin): 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; by 1870 this c. term had > ordinary rhyming s. Jemmy o' goblin, a 'sov'rin'.

Jenkins, Dr. See Doctor Jenkins.

Jenny; hence, jenny. 'An Instrument to lift up a Grate, and whip any thing out of a Shop-window': 1698, B.E.; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'An iron crow'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Jenney. A hook on the end of a stick'; 1889, B & L (id.); 1896, F & H; ob. For origin, cf. ginny.—2. Hence, 'a picklock key': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1890.—3. A watch: 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life (p. 272); ob. By personification.

jenny, v. To understand: 1909, Ware; † by 1940. Cf. george and jerry.

Jenny Linder. A window: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.) as Jenny Linda; by 1865, low rhyming s. The rhyme is on the sol. winder: with a reference to that famous Swedish singer, Jenny Lind.

jerckt. Sealed. See jark, v.

jere is a rare and incorrect variant of jerk. All the Year Round, March 5, 1870.

jere; jeer. The posterior: 1536, Copland, 'Pek my jere' (lifted by Dekker in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608-9); app. † by 1700. Prob. ex Romany jeer, 'rectum'.—2. 'Jere a Turd', Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610; ibid., 'A gere peck in thy gan', where gere-peck seems to be a nonce-variant; app. † by 1800. Romany jeer, 'excrement'; cf. sense 1.

jerk, n.; esp. in cly the jerk, q.v. Punishment by whipping: 1566, Harman, 'To cly the gerke, to be whynned'; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands; † by 1830. One flinches or jerks the body at each cut of the lash.—2. A seal: C. 17. Dekker, O per se O, 1612; Holme, 1688. An occ. variant of jark, n.—3. A short, or a branch, railway line: U.S.A., mostly tramps': 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'By mistake I had missed the main line and come over a small "jerk" with only two locals a day on it'; extant. Prob. ex the jolting to which one is so often subjected on branch lines.

jerk, v. To seal: 1665, Head; Holme, 1688. A variant of jark, v.—2. To rob; ca. 1850-1910. (J. Greenwood, 'We jerked him for the lot': cited by Baumann, Londonismen, 1886.) By violence.

jerk bumps. Acne vulgaris: mostly convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant.

jerk joint. See grab joint.

jerk town or jerk town. A village; a small town: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Part II, ch. i and ch. iv; ob. Cf. jerk, n., 3.

jerky, 'silly, foolish, dopey'—like its source, jerk, 'a fool, a dope'—is s.; orig., low s.

Jerries. Workers in the section gang of a railroad: tramps': since ca. 1918. Stiff, 1931, 'They do maintenance work while gandy dancers work on contract jobs'. Ex German (labourers).

jerry, n. 'Gerry gan, the ruffian clye thee. A torde in thy mouth [= the modern vulgarity "kiss my arse!"] the devyll take thee': 1566, Harman; app. † by 1800. An anglicized form of jere, 2.—2. 'A fog or mist': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; 1896, F & H; † by 1910. Perhaps ex jere, 2.—3. 'A chamber(-)pot': Matsell wrongly classifies this sense as c.—4. A beer-house: not c. but low s.—5. A watch; jerry-nicking or -sneaking, watch-stealing (as a profession): 1874, H; 1885, Michael Davitt, A Prison Diary; 1886, W. Newton; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; 1896, F & H; very ob. Perhaps ex sense 3: cf. s. turnip for a watch.—6. Hence, a watch-chain: 1889, B & L; ob.—7. 'A "gandy dancer" is a man who works on the railroad track tamping ties. If he works on the section he may be called a "snipe" or a "jerry"', Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923: American tramps'; C. 20. See Jerries.—8. A soft hat (U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage): not c. but s.—9. 'A name applied to any boss,' Ersine, 1933: U.S.A.: since ca. 1918.

jerry, v. To injure: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Jerried. Injured'; extant. Is there some connexion with Jerries?

jerry, adj. Wide-awake, shrewd; well-informed, aware: ca. 1912, George Bronson-Howard, The Snob, 'How are you jerry to all this?'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, "'I'm wise, kid; I'm jerry"''; 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man; 1916, Arthur Stringer, The Door of Dread, where it is spelt gerry; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, M. Acklom (to get jerry, to 'get wise'); Dec. 26, 1925, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. george, whence, via the variant gerry, it comes; unless it has been adopted ex Cockney s., where jerry is short for jerry-cum-mumble, rhyming s. for 'to tumble' (to understand; to perceive a trick; to suspect).—2. Hence, 'happy, okay, good': 1933, Ersine; slightly ob.

jerry and slang. A watch and chain: 1887, Baumann; by 1910, pitchmen's s. See jerry, n., 5, and slang, n., 7.

Jerry Diddle (or jerry diddle). A violin: Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on fiddle.

jerry gan! See jerry, n.

jerry-getting, -nicking, -sneaking, -stealing. Watch-stealing, either as incident or as livelihood: 1874, H (3rd and 4th); 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed (4th); 1889, B & L (2nd and 3rd); 1896, F & H (1st, 2nd, 4th); by 1900, the 3rd and 4th were low s.; extant. See jerry, n., 5.

Jerry McGinn. The chin: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

jerry-on-the-job, adj. Wide-awake, alert, observant: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'We play ball—jerry-on-th'-job every minute'; by 1940, low s. Elaborating jerry, adj.

jerry sneak, 'a henpecked husband', is not c. but s.—2. A thief that specializes in watches: ca. 1860-1910. H, 1874; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; extant. See jerry, n., 5.

jerry-stealing. See jerry-getting.

Jersey City. A female breast: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on low s. titty.

Jersey lightning, 'gin', is low s. and perhaps also c.: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service. In prohibition days (1920-33), inferior whiskey: Kernôt, 1929-31. Made and sold in Jersey City; an elaboration of lightning.

jerv. Sec:—

jerve. A waistcoat pocket: April 1897, Popular Science Monthly, p. 832; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage; 1933, Ersine (jerv), 'A breast pocket'; extant. Perhaps cf. jarvel; certainly cf. jarvey, 2.—2. Earlier, a vest (prob. in sense 'a jacket'): 1871, Anon., State Prison Life (at Jeffersonville, S. Indiana); † by 1920.—3. (Prob. ex sense 1.) That pickpocket who, in a 'mob', actually commits the theft: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'An accomplished pickpocket'; by 1924, virtually superseded by:—

jerver. Synonymous with jerve, 3: 1924, Geo. S. Dougherty, The Criminal, 'The pick-pocket, or "jerver"''; extant. Ex jerve, 1-3.

Jervis; also Jarvis: 'a coachman': it seems to have been, not c. but fast-life s. Grose, 1796; Vaux, 1812. Ex the common surname. The same applies to the derivative jarvie (jarvey), which had by 1830 > low s.

Jessie, n. A bluff, a threat: C. 20: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; May 9, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack, 'I knew . . . that they would try to toss a Jessie (bluff) into me before resorting to guns or knives'; extant. Perhaps ex the old U.S. s. give (a person) Jessie, 'to beat, to thrash; to defeat' (Irwin).

jessie, v. 'I pretended that I had been thoroughly jessied (bluffed) by the ultimatum of the two killers,' Broadway Jack in Flynn's, May 9, 1936: prob. since ca. 1910. Ex the n.

Jesus guy. A man that gets 'saved' for the sake of food and bed: tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931. Cf. Jesus stiff.

Jesus-shouter. A preacher, a missionary: tramps': 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; extant. Cf. the Evangelistic, 'Stand up, stand up for Jesus!'

Jesus stiff. 'A tramp who travels about the country painting exhortations on boulders and fences along the way: "Jesus saves, come to Jesus" and the like,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931; tramps': since ca. 1905. Cf. Jesus guy.

jet, 'a lawyer', is either c. or, less prob., s.: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1889 (B & L). Perhaps ex his black and sober suit of clothes.

jet, autem. See autem jet. Andrewes, 1809, and Matsell, 1859, erroneously give jet autum as the term.

Jew bail. The offering (usually by a Jew to a Jew) of surety to enable a prisoner or an accused person to obtain bail: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society. The term may orig. have been c., but it was almost certainly s. by 1800. Cf. queer bail, q.v.

Jew chum. A vagrant: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on bum.

Jew fencer, 'a Jew street salesman' (H, 1st ed.), is not c. but low and/or street s.

Jew flag. A dollar bill; any paper money: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'A play on the Jew's well-known ability to make money' (Irwin).

jewel case. A chamber pot: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. Humorous, in ref. to golden nuggets.

jewelry. Handcuffs: 1927, Kane; extant. On the analogy of bracelets.

jib or jibb. The tongue: tramps': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; app. † by 1910. Ex Romany jib.—2. Hence, speech, language: 1896, F & H; ob. This sense is current also in Romany.

jib, v. Thus in R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665, "We have been already jibbed", said one, that is jerked at the whipping-post', i.e., flogged; app. † by 1730. Cf. gybe, v.

jibber the kibber 'is the watch-word made use of by the [ship-wreckers] on the Coast of Cornwall to point out a wreck,' G. Parker, A View of Society, 1781. Not c.—but not far off it! Here, jibber is prob. a perversion of jigger; the whole, a rhyming 'disguise'.

jibe. See gybe.

jig. (See also gigg, 3.) 'Jig, a Lock or Door,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1810.—2. A misfortune; a mistake:

U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; † by 1940. Cf. jig is up!—3. A Negro: U.S.A.: 1930, G. London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1933, Ersine; ca. 1934, James T. Farrell, Young Manhood; 1935, David Lamson; 1935, Hargan; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; by 1937, circus s., as Godfrey Irwin notes. Perhaps short for jiggabo.—4. 'A yegg's tools were known as jigs,' Jack London in The American Mercury, April 1933: U.S.A.: app. ca. 1890–1920. Hence, any burglar's tools: 1933, Ersine; extant. Perhaps ex jigger, 7.

jig, nipping. See nipping jig.

jig and prance. A dance: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

jig cut. A gash: 1934, Rose. The term is suspect.

jig is up!, the. The 'game' ends: not c., but s. (Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs, 1872.)

jig shop. 'Blacksmith shop (yegg term),' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. Cf. jig, n., 1.

jiger = jigger, a door: see jigger.

jiggabo. A Negro: racketeers': 1929–31, Kernôt; 1930, Burke, 'Me broad's squawkin' the jiggabo hop tries to make her'; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra, where it is spelt zigzboo; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, where it is jigaboo; extant. An elaboration of jig, n., 3.

jigger, n. For C. 16–18 senses, see jigger.—2. 'Jigger, a Whipping Post,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1823, Egan's Grose, where it is classified as 'sea cant'; † by 1870. Perhaps cf. tricker.—3. A private, i.e. secret, still: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee (with variant chigger); 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, I; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; ob. by 1896 (F & H).—4. A turnkey: 1797, Potter; 1828, G. Smeeton (the door-keeper of a prison); and others. See jigger, 3.—5. A bolt (of a door); a key: 1809, Andrewes (bolt); 1823, Bee (a key); 1848, Sinks of London (bolt); 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', who defines it as 'a lock'; † by 1896 (F & H). The same as jigger, 2.—6. (Ex sense 3.) One who works an illicit still: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 24; ob.—7. A wide-mouthed tool for boring, in a door, a hole 'wide enough to admit the bare hand and arm of a man': ? Scottish: 1879, James McGovan, Hunted Down, p. 6; extant. Prob. ex 5.—8. 'The jigger, an interviewing chamber (in Newgate) where felons, on payment, saw their friends,' The Fortnightly Review, 1882 (xxxii, 798); 1896, F & H; † by 1900. Perhaps cf. senses 4 and 5.—9. A prison cell: 1896, Max Pemberton (O.E.D.); ob. Ex military s. sense, 'guard-room'; cf. senses 4, 5, 8.—10. Among American tramps, it is 'a sore, artificially made, to excite sympathy': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; by 1914, also among criminals—witness Jackson & Hellyer; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, of a scar painted on the face as a means of disguise; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A fake burn or wound'; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; extant. Perhaps, as Irwin suggests, ex chigoe or jigger, an insect that burrows under the skin and causes irritation.—11. (Jigger!) An exclamation of warning: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage (in form jiggeroo); extant.—12. A look-out man: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex prec.

jigger, v. 'Ships or [other] things jiggered into your skin' (the reference is to tattooing), Josiah Flynt, The Little Brother, 1902; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, who define jigger as 'to mar, derange, deface'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To spoil or injure; to deface'; extant. Cf. jigger, n., 10.—2. To watch; to look out: 1914 (implied at sense 1 of the n.); 1925, Leverage; extant.—3. To imprison: Brit. and Am.: 1887, Hall Caine (O.E.D.); 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. senses 4, 5, 10, of the n.

jigger, trigging the. See trig, n.

jigger-dubber 'is a term applied to Jailors or Turnkeys': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1782, Messink, The Choice of Harlequin, 'I'm jigger-dubber here, and you're welcome to mill doll'; 1785, Grose, who spells it gigger dubber; 1823, Bee; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; † by 1910. Lit., a 'door-shutter': see gigger and dub, v., 2.

jigger man. The outside man in a burglary team: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Jiggerman. Lookout'; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex jigger, n., 11 and 12.

jigger screw (P. Egan, Boxiana, I, 122) app. means 'a housebreaker or burglar': ? ca. 1810–60. Ex jigger, 'a door', and screw, v., 2.

jiggered, 'exhausted': prob. not c. but low s. Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899. A euphemizing of buggered.

jiggeroo! Make off!; get!: 1919, Dialect Notes, F. H. Sidney, 'Hobo Cant'; 1925, Leverage; 1927, Kane; extant. An elaboration of jigger, n., 11.

jiggers is a variant of jigger, n., 10: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo (see quot'n at bugs); extant.—2. 'Jiggers—warning. Giving jiggers—on lookout,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; 1931, Clifford R. Shaw, Natural History of a Delinquent; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; by 1935, low s. Cf. jigger, n., 11.

jiggery-gee. 'In 1873, Bert Rhodes and Jeffrey Walton, two inmates [of Sing Sing], started in to solace themselves and a few other inmates (who had the price) by making their own liquor. In prison slang, this was termed giggery-gee. They collected potato parings, apple peelings, and prune juice, put the delectable ingredients into a large wooden bowl with many holes bored in the bottom of it, lined it with coarse cloth and let it ferment and drip into a home-made still, which they concealed in a small tunnel underground,' James Jackson, 'Forty-Five Years a Man-Hunter'—in Flynn's, Jan. 10, 1925.

jigging, vbl n. and adj. (Pertaining to) the making of artificial sores and scars: 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night Hawk, '... Whispering Woodsey, the ex-yegg, was buying a two-ounce bottle of creosote for "jigging" purposes'; extant. Cf. jigger, n., 10.

jiggler. A tool for opening the doors of locked cars: in the car-stealing racket: 1929, The Saturday Evening Post; extant. The user jiggles the tool.

jil to woodrus. (Burglar thinks): 'Live gaffs ... were always leery work ... The old boy might jil to woodrus with a gun ... and start pooping off at anyone he saw,' James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 1937: to 'pop out'; quickly or suddenly appear, come along, arrive: since ca. 1930. Perhaps cf. s. jillo, jildy, 'quickly', and German heraus!, '(come) out!' (adopted in U.S.A.).

jilt, n. See gilt, n., of which it is an occ. variant.

—2. Hence this specific, C. 18 sense, defined by J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 1707, as 'one that pretending Business in a Tavern or Ale-house, takes a private Room, and with Picklocks opens the Trunks or Chests, and taking what he can conveniently, locks them again, pays his Reckoning and departs'.—3. Hence (or ex the v.), 'a crowbar or housebreaking implement': 1859, H—but slightly earlier as gilt (see gilt, n., 4); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; ob.—4. 'A prostitute who hugs and kisses a countryman while her accomplice robs him': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1903, Clapin (of any victim); † by 1930. Ex S.E. jilt, a woman that leads a man up the garden path and then leaves him in the lurch.

jilt, v. To open with a picklock: 1677; Anon., Sadler's Memoirs, 'At several times [this gang of thieves] had Jilted most of his Closets and Chests, but could not meet with any thing Considerable; Sadler undertakes to discover this Concealed Treasure'; app. † by 1890. Ex gilt, n., 2.—2. See jilting.

jilter. See gilter, of which it is an occ. variant.—2. Hence, a sneak-thief: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1863, The Cornhill Magazine, Jan. (pp. 91–92), '"Jilters", or "hotel lurkers"' (English); † by 1900.

jilting, n. 'Getting in [to a house] on the sly, or on false pretences at the door, and sneaking what you can find. It's not a bad game to go into hotels, for instance, as a traveller': 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, but pub. in Temple Bar in 1868; 1896, F & H; † by 1930. Cf. jilter, 2.

jim, adj. A cheap, inferior, or worthless thing: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; slightly ob. Jackson & Hellyer derive it from the s. Jim Crow; cf. crow, adj.

jim, v. To mar; derange; deface: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage, 'To spoil a thing'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Rose, 'Spoil a Plan ... jim a deal'; extant. Cf.—it is prob. ex—the preceding entry.—2. To break open: 1925, Leverage; extant. Short for jimmy, v., 1.

jim up. 'To spoil, ruin': 1933, Ersine; extant. Either an elaboration or an intensive of jim, v., 1. jimming. See Jem Mace.

Jimmy; usually jimmy. A variant of jemmy: 1848, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, IV; by before 1850, current in U.S.A. (The Ladies' Repository, 1848—wrongly defined as 'a set of tools'; E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York, 1851; 1859, Matsell, at pig's foot); 1860, C. Martel, The Detective's Note-Book; Jan. 1869, Sessions Papers; 1879, Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences (U.S.A.); 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; by 1896 (F & H), s. in England; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Jimmy. A chisel with a bend on the end'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1920, s. in U.S.A. also.

jimmy, v. To open with a 'jimmy': 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne, 'The bolts could be "jimmied" without leaving a mark'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, '"Red" jimmied open the door about one in the morning'; 1925, Leverage; by 1930, low s. Ex the n.—2. To hit

(a person) with a 'jimmy': April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by M. Acklom; extant.—3. 'Shooting [a police] officer is "Jimmying a bull"; J. Kenneth Ferrier, 'Crime in the United States' in his Crooks and Crime, 1928; extant.—4. "I'm going to jimmy [cripple] myself, Jack," he said' (one convict to another), Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 1929; extant. An elaboration of jim, v., 1.—5. To spoil, mar: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. jim, v., 1.

Jimmy Low; usually in imperative. Go slow: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Jimmy Skinner, 'dinner', is included in his list of c. terms by Charles Bent, Criminal Life, 1891: but it is safer to regard it as general rhyming s. jingle box; usually pl. 'Jingle-boxes, c. Leathern Jacks tipt and hung with Silver Bells formerly in use among Fuddle caps' (drunkards or toppers): 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose—but since the object was app. † by 1700, presumably the word was † by 1730 or so. Ex the noise made by the bells.

jingler. A horse-courser given to frequenting country fairs, and to cheating at every possible opportunity: ca. 1600–1760, though the term (witness Egan's Grose) may have lingered for a hundred years more. Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9, ch. X, is the 'locus classicus'; B.E., 1698. Dekker enumerates the c. terms of horse-coursing, thus:—'1. When *Horse-courser*s travaille to country faires, they are called Jynglers. 2. When they have the leading of the Horse and serve in Smithfield, they are Drovers. 3. They that stand by and conycatche the Chapman either with Out-bidding, false-praises, &c. are called Goades. 4. The boyes, striplings, &c. that have the ryding of the Jades up and downe are called Skip-jacks.' Grose's mention, 1788, is prob. only an historical memory, the term having almost certainly been † by 1750 or 1760. (The O.E.D.—wrongly, I feel sure—classifies it as s.) Possibly because such a coper, with his shameless lies and abundant patter, is but a tinkling cymbal.

jink. Money; or rather, coin: Feb. 1821, Sessions Papers (p. 143), 'He asked if I had brought the jink. I said, No, it was a deal of money'; ob. Ex S.E. jink, v.i. and v.t., 'to clink; to make a ringing sound'.

Jinny. Its form in late C. 17–18 was Ginny or ginny, q.v. A variant of Jenny, 1: late C. 17–18.—2. A Geneva watch: 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; slightly ob.—3. (Lower-case.) A 'speakeasy': U.S. racketeers, esp. bootleggers': 1930, Burke; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. By personification.—4. (Synthetic) gin: U.S.: since the mid-1920's. Castle, 1938, 'Who hi-jacked the forty thousand load of Jinny?' Jinny ex Jin ex gin.

jintoe. A prostitute: South Africa: late C. 19–20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946; C. P. Wittstock, letter of same date, 'Jintoe, probably from a French ship carrying women, which put in at the Cape many years ago'.

jinx, 'an unlucky object, person, or place' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931), may orig. (? ca. 1910) have been c.; it would be characteristic of the criminals' tendency towards superstition. Origin?

jip; esp., stick of jip. Indian ink: mid-C. 19–20. Anon., No. 747, 1893. Prob. a back-formation ex jipping.

jip, v. See jipping.

jipper. See gypper.

jipping, n. 'Staining a pair of suspicious knees or a bare place with Indian-ink to conceal a blemish. Every coper carries a "stick of jip"—which can be bought at any wholesale stationer's—in his waistcoat pocket. The end of the stick is dipped in water and it is then ready for use. It has the advantage of not coming off on the would-be purchaser's fingers, like blacking does,' footnote on p. 20 of No. 747 . . . the Autobiography of a Gipsy, 1893: horse-copers' c.: since ca. 1840; ob. in this precise sense. Perhaps = gypping, 'swindling'.

jit. A nickel: 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 'Keeping tab on you and knowing what you snatch to the last jit'; 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'We made th' twister look like a plugged jit'—but by this time it was s.: Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926, 'A "jit"', as the Southern negro affectionately calls his nickel'. A shortening of jitney.—2. Hence (ex the idea of cheapness), a Negro or, more usually, a Negress: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Seemingly a term of derision'; by 1935, low s.

jitney. A nickel (five cents): 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage, Jitney Tower, the Woolworth Building, New York City—but this was s., for by 1925 (if not a good deal earlier), jitney was s. jitney worker. A passer of forged cheques for (very) small sums: forgers': since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. See jitney.

Jo Ronce. See Joe Ronce.

job, n. 'A Guinea, Twenty Shillings, or a Piece', i.e., a 22-shilling piece: 1698, B.E., who adds, 'Half a Job, c. half a Guinea, Ten shillings, half a Piece, or an Angel'; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 'Job, a Pound'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (as jobe); 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (jobe); 1809, Andrewes. The term seems to have > † by 1830 at the latest, despite its occurrence in Sinks of London, 1848. Perhaps short for jobbernowl, the head; ex the head on the coin.—2. A theft; 'any criminal deed, esp. one definitely arranged beforehand' (O.E.D.): 1722, Defoe, Moll Flanders, 'It was always reckoned a safe job when we heard of a new shop'; 1739, Sessions Papers (trial of Wm Green and Wm Leeson); 1811, Lex. Bal., 'To do a job; to commit some kind of robbery'; 1812, Vaux, 'Any concerted robbery, which is to be executed at a certain time, is spoken of by the parties as the job, or having a job to do at such a place'; 1822, The Life and Trial of James Blackwell; 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, III, 82, where it takes the form job of work; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1848, The Man in the Moon, 'Flowers of Felony'; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1872, G. P. Burnham (U.S.A.), 'A plot in crime'; 1876, Farley; 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; 1889, B & L, 'A thieving affair, a murder'; 1893, Langdon W. Moore (U.S.A.); 1894, Chief-Inspector Littlechild; by 1895, also police s. (Caminada); 1896, A. Morrison; 1897, D. Fannan, A Burglar's Life Story; by 1900, prob. no longer classifiable as c., except in U.S.A., where it may have remained c. until ca. 1914, for it occurs in A. H. Lewis's Apaches of New York, 1912. A special application of the S.E. sense, 'a specific piece of work (to be done)'.—3. Patience; hence job!, have patience, don't be in a hurry!: 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; app. † by 1910. Ex the cliché, the patience of Job.—4. A 'frame-up': U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 2 of the v.—5. A stolen motor-car: since ca. 1930. Richard Llewellyn, None but the Lonely Heart, 1943. Ex sense 2, above.

job, v. To follow the profession of burglary: 1860, C. Martel, The Detective's Note Book, 'We've jobbed together in 'Meriky'; † by 1910. Ex the n., 2.—2. (V.t.) To convict (a person) with perjured testimony: U.S.A.: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss, 'Protestations that he was "being jobbed"'; 1904, No. 1500, 'Jobbed. Convicted by perjured testimony; persecuted'; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 'They . . . finally tried to "job" me, tried to frame up charges against me'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'To job a man—to railroad him. Jobbed—unjustly convicted'; 1925, Leverage, 'To frame one up; to trick a person'; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To accuse or convict unjustly; to "frame up"'; 1933, Eagle; 1935, Crump & Newton, Our Police; by 1940, police s. Here, job is a variant of S.E. jab; cf. the metaphorical stab (someone) in the back.

job out. 'To partition or distribute counterfeits [money] among coney men'; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'It was his habit . . . to "job out" most of the counterfeit stock'; extant—but, by 1910, no longer c. Cf. Standard Am. and S.E. job lots.

jobbed. See job, v., 3.

jobbernoll, 'a dolt, a simpleton', is S.E. (perhaps orig. s.); not, as B.E. has it, c.

jobber-(k)not is defined by Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859, as 'a tall, ungainly fellow': I'm suspicious of the form and the sense: in short, I think it is a ghost word. Cf. prec. term.

jobe. See job.

jock, n. A sodomite: C. 20. BVB. Short for jocker, n.

jock, v. 'Jock or Jockumcloy, c. to copulate with a Woman,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1889, B & L, 'American thieves), "jocking it with a high-flyer", taking pleasure with a fancy-woman'; by 1896 (F & H) it was low s. Ex jockum via s. jock, the penis.—2. Hence, erroneously, 'to enjoy anything': Matsell, 1859; 1896, F & H, 'To enjoy oneself'.

jock-gagger. See jockum-gagger, reference of 1809.

jock it. See jock, v.

jockam. See jockum.

jocker, n. 'A tramp who travels with a boy and "jockers" him—trains him as a beggar and protects him from persecution by others,' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary, 1899; 1902, Flynt, The Little Brother; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1918, Leon Livingston, Mother Delcassee; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'A jocker is a man who exploits boys; . . . he either exploits their sex or he has them steal or beg for him or both'; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1931, C. R. Shaw, Natural History of a Delinquent, where it = a prisoner enacting the 'male' role in homosexuality; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Victor F. Nelson; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations; 1934, Convict; 1938, Castle; 1942, BVB; extant. Ex jock, v., 1: the jocker is usually a pederast; the boy, his pathic.

jocker, v. Tramps' c., as in the Flynt quot'n in the preceding entry; extant. Ex the n.

jockey. See jockum.—2. A horse-thief: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Ex the dishonesty of certain jockeys.—3. A taxi-driver: U.S.A.: 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; 1938, Damon Runyon, Take it Easy; extant.—4. In Australia, since ca. 1940, a taxi-driver's accomplice pretending to be a passenger in order to force up the price to contending clients. Baker, 1945. He 'makes the pace'.—5. 'Toke' is the word used in prison to designate the small loaves of bread given to the prisoners at meal-times. These loaves are weighed individually, and if they are underweight a suitable piece of bread is tacked on to them with a thin piece of wood. The extra piece of bread is called a "jockey", and the thin piece of wood by which it is attached to the "toke" is called a "jockey-stick"; James Spenser, Limey Breaks In, 1934; 1936, Richmond Harvey, Prison from Within; extant.—6. A synonym of jocker, n.: since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942.

jockey(-)stick. See jockey, 5.

jockum, n.; occ., jockam. The penis: 1566, Harman, 'There was a proud patrico and a nose-gent, he tooke his Jockam in his famble, and a wappinge he went, he dokte the Dell, he pryge to praunce, hy bynged a waste into the darke mans, he fyleht the Cofe, with out any fyleh man'; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All; 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'The great Bull is some one notable lustie Roague, who gets away all their Wenches: for this Great Bull (by report) had in one yeere, three and twenty Doxies, (his Jockie was so lustie)'; 1665, R. Head (Jocky); 1688, Holme (jocky); 1707, J. Shirley; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, as jocum; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1896 (F & H), †.

jockum, v. 'To have connection with a woman': 1797, Potter; † by 1890. Ex the n.; or, by abbr., ex:—

jockum(-)cloy or jockumcloy. To have sexual intercourse (with a woman): 1698, B.E. (see jock, v.); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'To enjoy a woman'; † by 1860. See jockum, n., and cloy = cly; lit., to penis-seize.

jockum(-)gage. Jockum-gage, c. a Chamberpot. Tip me the Jockumgage, c. give me or hand me the Member-mug. Rum Jockum-gage, c. a Silver-chamberpot, B.E., 1698; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (jacum-gag); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); † by 1920. Lit., a penis (see jockum, n.) pot.

jockum-gagger. A man that lives on the prostitution of his wife: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (jock-gagger: ? misprint or variant); 1848, Sinks of London (id.); by 1896 (F & H) it was †. Lit., a 'penis-beggar': see jockum, n., and gagger.

Jocky or jocky; jockey or jockie. Variants of jockum, n., q.v. (The first and the fourth occur in Dekker's O per se O, 1612; the second in Randle Holme, 1688.)—2. Variant of jockey, esp. in sense 5.

jocum. See jockum, ref. of 1741.

Joe or joe, n. Coffee: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'Probably a contraction of "jamoke"' (Irwin); rather, a contracted telescoping, joke becoming jo, which is folk-etymology'd to Joe.—2. As a police trooper, it is Australian—but s., not c. Baker, 1942.

Joe or joe, adj. Shrewd; well-informed; sophisticated: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; slightly ob. Perhaps ex the synonymous George: the written abbreviation of the front-name George is Geo. But cf. Australian rhyming s. brown Joe, 'to know'.

Joe Blake. A steak: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Adopted from Cockney rhyming slang.

Joe Blake the Bartlemy (or the b-). 'To visit a low woman': 1859, H; † by 1930. Joe Blake rhymes either 'to take' or 'a snake', the latter, a priapistic symbol, being the sense here applicable; Bartlemy, Bartholomew, is short for Bartholomew baby, s. for 'a tawdrily or showily dressed woman', orig. 'a gaudily dressed doll'—a reminiscence of the gaiety of St Bartholomew's Fair.

Joe Ghir (or Girr or Gurr). Prison: since ca. 1930: 1935, Geo. Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade, 'Had not his father done a bit of "Joe Ghir"?'; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad ('Joe Gurr'); extant. Crooks' rhyming s. on stir.

Joe Goss. Anyone authorized to approve the payment of a cheque: forgers': since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941, 'From the Australian rhyming argot Joe Goss, the boss'—a sense current also in Am. Pacific Coast c. of C. 20, as in Convict, 1934.

Joe Roke. A—to—smoke: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

Joe (or Jo) Ronce, n. and v. (To live as) a prostitute's protector; Jo Roncing stakes, pimpdom: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid (the shorter, as n., and the longer phrase); current since at least as early as 1920. Rhyming s. on ponce.

Joe Rourke. A thief: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938. Prob. it 'rhymes' on crook.

joern. A police detective: South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. App. an Afrikaans re-shaping of Joe, used as a personification of the officer: cf. Joe, 2, and Jack, 5, 6, and John, 6.

Joey or joey. A fourpenny piece: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. lxi, 'He was a capital fellow, and never took the change when he gave me a joey to pay for his three-penn'orth of rum of a morning'; by 1864 it was s., as indeed, it may always have been. Ex Mr Joseph Hume, M.P., at whose instance fourpenny pieces were coined.—2. Hence, erroneously, four: Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859.—3. A hypocrite: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell: 1896, F & H; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Perhaps cf. English s. holy Joe.—4. A religious hypocrite or humbug: convicts': 1862, H. Mayhew & J. Binny, The Criminal Prisons of London; 1889, B & L; extant. Cf. preceding sense.—5. (Hence ?) a newcomer to prison: convicts': since ca. 1860: 1893, No. 747 (p. 8, note); † by 1940.—6. A sodomite: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942.

jog, 'to fool; to deceive' (Leverage, 1925), is s. not c.

jogar. A street, or an itinerant, musician: parlyaree, not c.: C. 20. 'The jogars and gridders . . . had a language of their own, such as: omic, meaning man, pollone—woman, feelia—boy [properly, girl], suppelar—hat, manjarie—food, parnie—water, and so on,' H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks, 1938. Ex the next, or directly ex It. giocar.

jogerring (or joggering) omee (or omey). A musician: not c. but parlyaree and, later, low theatrical: since ca. 1880. B & L, 'From the Italian giocar, to play, and uomo, a man'.

jogue. A shilling: 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Five jogue is five shillings, and so on, to any other number'; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1896 (F & H). Origin obscure: ? a perversion of synonymous s. bob.

jogul. To 'play up', or simply to play, at cards or other game: card-sharpers': 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, 'jogul . . . spielen'; 1896, F & H; ob. Ex Sp. jugar, 'to play extravagantly for money; to gamble'.

John. A man: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer—but Godfrey Irwin thinks that it has always been s. Ex the fact that John is the commonest of font-names.

—2. Hence, a 'sucker'; an amorous fool; a brothel's customer, a prostitute's client: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1928, M. Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story, 'Johns, Suckers—men who are lured by crooks, mostly women'; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's, 'Johns with heavy sugar' (much money); 1929, Jack Callahan; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1931, IA; 1933, Eagle; 1936, Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant.—3. A homosexual: 1928, May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story; 1942, BVB, 'Sodomite'; extant.—4. A well-dressed tramp; a capable yegg: C. 20: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice (the former nuance); Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan (latter nuance); May 2, 1936, Flynn's. Cf.—perhaps ex—Johnson family.—5. The sense 'a free spender' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931) is s.—not c. Ex John D. Rockefeller.—6. (Usually pl.: Johns.) A policeman, a detective if in uniform: British tramps' c. (and Australian s.) of C. 20: Hugh Milner, letter of April 22, 1935; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime. Also American c. of ca. 1925–45 (then s.): Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely, 1940: prob. of independent origin (John Law). Also—prob. ex England—South African, since ca. 1910: J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946.

john, v. To know; to recognize: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (glossary), 'The Busstrap johns me; the Thief-catcher knows me'; plagiarized by The Monthly Magazine, Jan. 1799; app. † by 1810. Perhaps ex 'put the name John to' (a person).

John Audley. See John Orderly.

John Davis. Money: mostly beggars' and tramps': 1926, Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows; extant. Ex a famous character.

John Doe. 'Any hoosier; an unimportant person,' Ersine, 1933; extant. Ex the legal term.

John Elbow. A detective: 1928, Chicago May; extant. An elaboration of elbow, n., 1, on the analogy of John Law.

John family, the. Yeggs, collectively: mostly tramps': 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1927, Kane; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Selected by the yegg for himself when the former term—yegg—became too common. See "hiram"'; extant. A numerous 'family': John is the font-name of numerous persons. Whence Johnson family.

John Farmer. A yegg; yeggs collectively: 1927, Kane; extant—though slightly ob. Because of the yeggs' preference for country towns.

John Fate, 'luck': Rose, 1934. Suspect: it sounds rather too literary.

John Hancock. A signature: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1918, s. Ex 'the patriot of that name who set his name to the Declaration of Independence' (Godfrey Irwin).

John Hoosier. 'Any hoosier', esp. a simpleton likely to inform to the police: 1933, Ersine; extant. See hoosier, 2, 3.

John Hop; jonnop. A policeman: Australian: since ca. 1900 and 1910, resp.; by 1940, both were low s. Baker, 1945. And (John Hop only) South African of C. 20: J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946. John Hop rhymes the synonymous cop; jonnop corrupts John Hop.

John Law. A policeman: tramps': 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcasse of the Hoboes (where the term is at least once misapplied to a 'railroad bull'); 1919, Dialect Notes, F. H. Sidney, 'Hobo Cant'; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; July 4, 1925, Flynn's, "'John Law"' . . . policeman or detectives in uniform or plain clothes'—i.e., collectively; 1926, Jack Black; 1928, Chicago May; 1928, John O'Connor; Jan. 17, 1931, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1932, s. 'The Law' personified and front-named with the commonest of all font-names.

John O'Brien; also John O. An empty or moneyless safe: yeggs': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Perhaps ex a safe-breaker that, so named, became famous because of his oft-repeated regrets that he had encountered one.—2. A freight train: tramps': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'A box car'; 1925, Leverage, 'A freight train or a freight car'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'The "John O'Brien"—the bums' term for hand car [or trolley], so called because every other section boss in those days [early C. 20] was named O'Brien—and starting it down the railroad'; 1929, Jack Callahan ('box car'); July 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A slow or ordinary freight train, as against the fast freight or "rattler"' ; Nov. 1931, IA, 'Formerly the handcar'; March 16, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington; extant.

John Orderly (or Audley)! Orig. c., as in the earliest record: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'To hold your Tongue: Peter or John Audley'; app. † by 1830. In C. 19–20 it is, derivatively, a showmen's catch-phrase, meaning 'Cut short the performance!' and a theatrical one for 'Abridge the play or the act'. B & L, 1889, derive the phrase from a theatrical anecdote of the 1740's.

John yegg; occ., Johnny yegg. 'John Yeg. Safe blower who travels in the guise of a tramp,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Johnny yegg. Safe-blower'; 1925, Leverage (both); 1933, Eagle ('Johnny . . .'); slightly ob. See yegg and cf. Johnson family.

Johnnie or -y. 'A person who enjoys himself in the company of ballet girls,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: adopted ex English s., it is s. also in U.S.A. (Short for stage-door Johnnie).—2. A policeman: English tramps': since ca. 1930. Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935. In C. 20 Australia, it is s., not c. (Baker, 1942.) Orig., however, it was prob. American: Ersine, 1933, defines it as 'a uniformed patrolman'. Ex John, 6.

Johnny Bates. A 'greenhorn', easy victim, 'sucker': 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; slightly ob. Ex one so named.

D.O.U.

Johnny Bates's Farm is a variant of Charley Bates' Farm, q.v. at Bates' Farm: 1889, B & L.

Johnny Come Lately (or J—c—l—). A novice yegg: ca. 1900–20. Godfrey Irwin, letter of March 18, 1938. Also, a novice tramp: since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin. Self-explanatory.—2. Hence, among pitchmen, a novice pitchman; but this is pitchmen's s. (The Saturday Evening Post, Oct. 19, 1929, 'Alagazam'.)

Johnny Darby. A policeman: 1886, The Graphic, Jan. 30; 1889, B & L; † by 1910. Prob. ex sense 2.—2. Only in pl. (Johnny Darbies): handcuffs: 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; † by 1910. An elaboration of darby, 1.

Johnny Gallacher (or Gallagher or Gallaher): A uniformed policeman: tramps': C. 20. Hugh Milner, letter of April 22, 1935.

Johnny Grab. 'An executioner, hangman', The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848; † by 1937 (Irwin). Johnny is personificatory; with Grab, cf. grab, 'to arrest'.

Johnny ham. A detective: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Depreciative.

Johnny Law. The police in general; hence, occ., a policeman (but rare for a detective): 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1929, Givens (a detective); May 17, 1930, Flynn's, Robert H. Rohde; extant. A variant of John Law.

Johnny O'Brien is an occ. variant of John O'Brien, 2. M. H. Weseen, 1934.

Johnny Raw, 'a country man', is not c. but s. Clarkson & Richardson, Police!, 1889.—2. A saw; the jaw: U.S. Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Johnny rousers. Trousers: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

Johnny Rump. A pump: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Johnny Russell, v.i. To hurry: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on bustle or, more prob., on hustle.

Johnny Scap(p)arey, do a. To abscond; to bilk a landlady: not c. but circusmen's s.: 1875, Thomas Frost, Circus Life. See scarper.

Johnny Skinner. Dinner: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Johnny Tin Plate. A sheriff; any other rural police officer: yeggs', then tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; by 1928, with variant tin-plate, it was circus s.—witness The White Tops, July–Aug. 1928, 'Circus Glossary'. Ex the badge or star he wears: cf. the general s. tin-star cop.

Johnny up in the yard (or hyphenated). A 'model prisoner,' Kernôt, 1929–31: convicts': since ca. 1910. By 1935, gen. prison s. Well up = highly regarded, in the exercise yard.

Johnny Yegg. See John yegg.

Johnson. A prostitute's bully, orig. and strictly if black: since ca. 1908; by 1930, also low s. Partridge, 1938. Ex Jack Johnson, in 1908–15 the heavy-weight champion boxer of the world.

Johnson bar. 'A Johnson bar was a steel crow-bar with a claw on the end like that of a carpenter's hammer. It was used by railroad section laborers to pull up spikes. The Johnson men [i.e., yeggs] used it to pry open the doors of the old-time safes. Needless to say it was always stolen,' Jim Tully, 'Yeggs'—in The American Mercury, April 1933; 1933, Ersine. The term was current ca. 1895–1930, though already ob. by ca. 1920. Because used by 'the Johnson family'.

N

Johnson man. A yegg: ca. 1905–20, then historical. Ersine. Cf. —

Johnsons, or Johnson family, the. 'The bums [of early C. 20: i.e., yeggs] called themselves "Johnsons" probably because they were so numerous,' Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926; ibid., 'One of the "Johnson family"': 1931, IA; 1933, Ersine (Johnson family); Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; 1934, Convict; Sept. 7, 1935, Flynn's, 'The "Johnsons"', as they frequently called themselves'; since ca. 1930, indeed, the term has been merely historical.

join out. To join somebody, go along with him, on the road: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Cassey, The Gay Cat; by 1920, no longer to be regarded as c. It never had been anything but a rather fine-drawn distinction from ordinary workers' s.

joiner. 'One who builds a mob' (gang of criminals), 'an organizer': 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex join out.

joint. A place: Anglo-Irish, but whether it was, orig., c. or low s. is hard to say: 1822, A Real Paddy, Real Life in Ireland, 'I had my education at the boarding-school of Phelim Firebrass . . . He qualified me for a full grown exciseman; and so he did my brother . . .; and when I slept'—ran away from—'the joint, and fang'd the arm, he strengthened the sinews'; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft (U.S.A.); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (p. 341); by 1920, low s. The origin of joint prob. resides in the craft of joinery as an integral part of building—even though sense 1 does not, whereas sense 3 does, = 'a building'.—2. Hence, a betting-place; gambling den: Oct. 24, 1877, Sessions Papers, ' . . . The joints, the offices where the swindle was carried on . . . a cant word': 1879, Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences (U.S.A.), 'He secured an understanding with the police, and at once opening four "joints", or playing-places', i.e., gambling hells; 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; 1891, Jas Maitland; 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; April 20, 1929, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant.—3. (Ex sense 1.) A building: 1880, An ex-Convict, Our Convict System, 'They [certain thieves] soon found him a "joint" to do . . . Doing a "joint" means effecting a burglarious entry'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1927, C. L. Clark & E. E. Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor (U.S.A.); Nov. 17, 1928, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan; 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller, '"There is a joint (meaning a place to rob) I'm going to make soon"'; extant.—4. (Ex sense 2.) An opium den; properly 'a place kept by a man who admits patrons to smoke at a fixed price per head' (Darkness and Daylight, 1891): U.S.A.: 1882, H. H. Kane, M.D., Opium-Smoking in America and China; 1886, Thomas Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America, p. 385, 'Few white men can run a "joint" successfully'; 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; 1891, Jacob A. Riis, How the Other Half Lives; 1898, W. T. Stead, Satan's Invisible World Displayed; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, Clapin; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 'This place . . . where I smoke nowadays—one great joint, believe me'; 1928, J. H. Ferrier, 'Crime in the United States' in his Crooks and Crime; by 1933 (Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man) it was police and journalistic s.—5. A robbery effected by two or more persons; a joint robbery; a partnership: ca. 1870–1910. 1885, The Daily Telegraph, Aug. 18; H. Baumann, Londismen, 1887; 1896, F & H; in C. 20, indistinguishable from sense 11.—6. (Cf. senses 2 and 4.) A low drinking-saloon: mostly U.S.A.: 1889, B & L; 1891, Maitland; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; by 1908, low s.—7. Sessions Papers, Feb. 12, 1897, 'He spoke about having revenge on the two joints, meaning the two labour-masters' (of the Strand Union Workhouse at Edmonton): tramps' and beggars': prob. since ca. 1890. Short for joint masters.—8. The 'joint' of a 'green goods' gang is its set of offices: U.S.A.: 1898, W. T. Stead, Satan's Invisible World Displayed (p. 108), 'The Joint or den where the swindle is completed'; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 'A fake . . . brokerage office'; extant. Prob. ex sense 2.—9. Among American tramps, 'Any place where tramps congregate, drink, and feel at home,' J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (glossary); 1903, Clapin (by implication); 1907, Jack London, The Road; extant. Ex sense 1.—10. (Cf. sense 9.) 'Meeting house for thieves' (No. 1500): U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1906, Owen Kildare, My Old Bailiwick; 1914, J. H. Keate (see sense 10), of the headquarters of a gang of card-sharpers; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'A hangout'; by 1923 (Sidney Felstead, The Underworld of London), English also, in nuance 'rendezvous'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1933, Eagle. ('An old meaning has been listed as modern; properly, any place from a brothel to a cathedral,' Godfrey Irwin, letter of Nov. 10, 1937.)—11. 'The actual operation of getting money from suckers,' Will Irwin, Confessions of a Con Man, 1909, but with reference to the approx. period 1890–1905: U.S.A.; ca. 1880–1930. This term, in the nuance of 'a card-game operated by crooked gamblers', recurs in J. H. Keate's exposure of the tricks employed by card-sharpers, The Destruction of Mephisto's Greatest Web, 1914.—12. A business establishment: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by Moreby Acklom; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black; extant.—13. A brothel: U.S.A., mostly tramps': 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1928, May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May; by 1932 (Nelson Baylis, private letter), current in New Zealand; 1940, J. Crad, Traders in Women; by 1942, low s. Ex senses 4 and 6.—14. (Prob. ex sense 6.) A night-club: U.S.A.: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; extant.—15. (Ex 4.) 'Narcotic tools and equipment,' BVB, 1942: Am. drug addicts': since ca. 1920.

joint, crash a. See crash, v., 4.

joint, do a. See joint, 3.

joint, work the. 'Joint, working the (thieves), swindling in the streets with a lottery table': 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; † by 1930. Cf. joint, 2.—2. 'To solicit patronage,' BVB, 1942: Am. prostitutes': C. 20. Cf. joint, 13.

joint(-)wise. Versed in prison life and ways: 1933, Ersine; extant.

joist. A low 'dive': 1925, Leverage; ob. A perversion of joy?

joker. A hypodermic syringe; a dose of morphine, orig. and properly by injection: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. happy and happy dust.

jol, v. To depart; make off: South Africa: C. 20. C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 22, 1946, 'Let's jol . . . Shall we go?' Ex Afrikaans jol, 'to dance; a dance'; cf. Dutch jolen, 'to make merry'.

jollier. A swindler's accomplice, esp. at false auctions: 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob. Cf. sense 2 of jolly, n.—2. A flatterer: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ob. Ex jolly, v., 3.

jollop, n. and v. A—to—stop: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

jolly, n., 'the head, also jolly nob' (Grose, 1785), is s., not c.—2. 'The Dependents of Cheats are:—1. "Jollies" and "Magsmen", or accomplices of the "Bouncers and Besters". 2. "Bonnetts", or accomplices of Gamblers. 3. Referees, or those who give false character to swindlers and others': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25; 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London, 'One who assists at a sham street row for the purpose of creating a mob, and promoting robbery from the person—a jolly'; 1892, A. Carmichael, Personal Adventures (a confederate of swindlers); 1896, F & H; 1904, Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; extant.—3. The sense 'a pretence', 'a sham', is not c. but costermongers' s.

jolly, v. To irritate an opponent by low or insulting remarks during a boxing-match: not c. but C. 19 pugilistic s.: Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859—but the term was not confined to U.S.A.—2. 'To impose upon, to act as an accomplice or abettor': since ca. 1860; by 1889 (B & L) it was low s. Prob. ex sense 2 of the n.—3. Hence, in U.S.A., to flatter (a person): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ob.

jolly cod. See cod, n.

jolly nob. See jolly, n., 1.

jolt, n. A sentence to a term of imprisonment: 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 'A professional "pete" man had . . . returned exultingly to the jail with a six-year "jolt"'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage, 'A sentence; a term in prison'; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 'I've done two jolts since that'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1928, Jim Tully, Circus Parade; 1928, Chicago May; March 19, 1929, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan; Feb. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, Ernest Booth; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1931, John Wilstach; 1932, Jim Tully, Laughter in Hell; 1933, Ersine; Jan. 27, 1934, Flynn's; 1934, Convict; by 1936 (David Hume, Meet the Dragon) it was also English c.; June 1937, Cavalcade, Courtney R. Cooper; Nov. 26, 1938, Flynn's; 1944, W. R. Burnett, Nobody Lives Forever; extant. Because it comes as a jolt, a shock.—2. A dose of cocaine: British and U.S., mostly drug addicts': 1916, Thomas Burke, Limehouse Nights; 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; 1925, Leverage, 'A dose of dope (gen. by injection)'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (morphine); 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man; by 1934 (Ferdinand Tuohy, Inside Dope) it was s. Cf. Thomas Burke's phrase, 'a weedy opium-jolter' (Limehouse Nights, 1916).—3. The sense, 'a big—a stiff—drink', is s. (orig. low), not c. (Leverage, 1925.)

jolt, v. To sentence to imprisonment: 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 'When any of the judges jolted me, they didn't say, "Well, Kid, you didn't get a fair shake"'; 1925, Leverage; Feb. 6, 1926, Flynn's; 1927, R. Nichols & J. Tully, Twenty Below; Aug. 10, 1929, Flynn's; 1933, Ersine; extant. For the semantics, cf. jarred.—2. 'To give or to take a dose of dope (by injection)', Leverage, 1925; extant.

jolt, big; jolt, grand. A ten-years sentence; a twenty-years sentence: 1925, Leverage; extant. See jolt, n., 1.

jomer or jomer. A girl; a mistress: 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicancy and Crime, 'No cracksmen live in St. Giles's; they reside in Westminster with their "jomens" or girls'; 1839, op. cit., Brandon, in the glossary, 'Jomer—a fancy girl, —term of friendship, as opposed to 'blower'; G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxv, 'Jomen, paramour—fancy girl'; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 'When married they'—the 'swell mobsmen'—'for the most part keep cases (houses of accommodation); some are unmarried, and these, to remove suspicion, take a small house and keep a jomer, or sheelah (mistress), who gives out in the neighbourhood that her husband is a traveller of some description or other'; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H., 'Jomer, a sweetheart, or favourite girl'; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 'A mistress'; 1887, Baumann; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (p. 320), of a woman; by 1896 (F & H) it was s. Perhaps ex Romany chumer, 'a kiss', or Yiddish joma: B & L.

jomer-charming, n. Courting servant girls: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); by 1900, low s. See jomer.

jordain; jordan; jurdain(e). A chamber-pot: this sense, despite B.E., was never c. though it verged on (? achieved) slang. Ex the river Jordan. (See esp. my Name into Word, 1949.)—2. A great staff: 1698, B.E. (jordain); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (-ain); 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1890. The O.E.D. proposes Genesis xxxii, 10.—3. A heavy blow: 1698, B.E., 'I'll tip him a Jordain if I transnear, c. I will give a Blow with my Staff if I get up to him'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1896 (F & H). Prob. ex sense 2.

jordan, adj. 'Disagreeable; hard to be done': 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; † by 1920. Prob. ex jordain (etc.), 1 or 3.

jorum, 'a jug, or large pitcher' (Grose, 1785), is ineligible.

Joseph, hence joseph. Anon., The Catterpillars of this Nation Anatomized, 'If he chance to espy a (Joseph) cloak'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1698, B.E., 'Joseph, c. a Cloak or Coat. A Rum Joseph, c. a good Cloak or Coat. A Queer Joseph, c. a coarse ord'nary Cloak or Coat; also an old or Tatter'd one'; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 'Joseph, a Close Coat'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'A woman's great coat'; 1797, Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1859, Matsell, 'A coat that's patched'—American sense; † by 1887 (Baumann) in England. Prob. ex the story of Joseph and Potiphar's wife: she wanted him to cover her. See Joseph's coat . . .

Joseph's coat, wear a. To be guarded against sexual temptation: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Cf. preceding entry.

Josh, hence josh; also joss (sense 2). A countryman, a rustic: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1931, IA; extant. Cf. hick and rube; it is, of course, short for Joshua—unless, as is less prob., it comes from joskin.—2. A trick; a joke: 1925, Leverage (joss); extant.

josh, v.; also joss. 'Joss, v., to fool,' Leverage, 1925; extant.

josher or josser, 'a simpleton': not c., but (orig. proletarian) s.; cf. the next entry. As 'a depraved old woman', it is Australian—but rather low s. than c. (Baker, 1942.)

joskin. 'A countryman. The dropcove maced the Joskin of twenty quid; the ring dropper cheated the countryman of twenty guineas': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A country-bumbkin'; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III; 1828, G. G., History of George Godfrey; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A countryman; a silly fellow'; 1860, H., 2nd ed.; by 1876, in England, it was cheapjacks' s.—witness C. Hindley, The Life and Adventures of a Cheap Jack. The word may have survived as c. in the U.S.A. until early in C. 20; it occurs in A. H. Lewis's Confessions of a Detective, 1906. Either ex Josh (Joseph: cf. hick, Richard) or ex Yiddish joschen, 'sleepy, stupid': B & L. The Rev. J. W. Horsley, in 'Prison Slang' (Prisons and Prisoners, 1898), supports the Yiddish origin.

joss. See josh, n. and v.

joss house. An opium den: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the incense burnt there to the joss or god.

josser. See josher.

jostle, n. Usually the jostle. Pickpocketry: Aug. 10, 1934, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant. Prob. ex sense 2 of the v. jostle, v. F & H, 1896, 'Jostle, verb. (Old Cant) —To cheat'. On what authority? Cf. hustle, hustler, hustling.—2. To be a pickpocket: U.S.A.: 1929 (implied in jostler); 1935 (implied in jostle, n.); extant.

jostler. A pickpocket: March 2, 1929, Flynn's, J. F. Fullman, 'The Yawn'; Aug. 10, 1934, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant. App. adopted ex Glasgow s. of late C. 19–20.

jota. See:—

jots. Bread: 1935, Hargan; Sept. 21, 1937, Godfrey Irwin, 'Here the copy is hard to read; it may be "jota"; either way, I admit new to me'.

journey. A term in prison: since ca. 1920. Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House, 1932. A journey away from the world.

Journey's End. 'The row of cells housing the lifers,' Colonel Givens in Flynn's, Aug. 27, 1932: convicts': since ca. 1930. R. C. Sherriff's famous war play, Journey's End, was both produced and published in 1929.

jovah. Prison: 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers, "'You never kep' your brains clear while you was in jovah"; ob. Origin obscure. Perhaps a perverted blend of S.E. jail + chokey.

jove, 'to jolly; to joke, with one', and jover, 'a jolly fellow', are s.—not c. Leverage, 1925.

joy. Intoxication drug-induced: 1922 (implied in joy powder); 1925, Leverage; extant.

joy boy. A drug addict: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex prec.; partly by the temptation to rhyme.

joy dust. Narcotic; cocaine: since ca. 1920. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938. Cf. joy powder.

joy flakes. See joy powder.

joy pellet. Narcotic pill: Aug. 10, 1929, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly, 'The Right to Silence'; extant. See joy and cf. —

joy(-)pop. A bout of opium-smoking: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Donald Barr Chidsey, 'The Black Stuff' in Flynn's, March 18, 1939. Cf. joy-stick.—2. A hypodermic injection: 1942, BVB. Cf. jab-pop.

joy(-)popper or joy rider. 'One who takes narcotics irregularly,' BVB, 1942. Cf. prec. and see joy ride.

joy powder. Morphine: 1922, Dialect Notes, W. H. Wells, 'Words used in the Drug Traffic'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1942, BVB, with variant joy flakes; extant. Cf. happy dust and see joy.

joy ride; joy rider. Intoxication caused by a drug; a drug addict: 1925, Leverage (j. ride); 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations (narcotics used to tide one over the long week-end, when prisoners are locked into their cells; any convict doing this); 1934, Rose, 'Occasional use of dope . . . joy-riding'; extant. Cf. sleigh-ride.—2. (Latter only.) 'A legless beggar riding about the streets on a low, wheeled platform,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1920. Callously ironical—like so many underworld terms.

joy-stick. See hop stick.

joy weed. Marijuana; a marijuana cigarette: drug addicts' and white-slave traffic since the 1920's. In, e.g., Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940. An elaboration of weed, n.

ju-ju. A marijuana cigarette: since the early 1930's. In, e.g., Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely, 1940. A reduplication of the accented syllable in 'marijuana' itself.

juckrum. See jukrum.

jude, 'a woman', is Henley's unwarranted perversion in Villon's Good Night, 1887, of Judy.

judge. 'A family-man [i.e., professional criminal], whose talents and experience have rendered him a complete adept in his profession, and who acts with a systematic prudence on all occasions, is allowed to be, and called by his friends, a fine judge': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1900. A special application of the S.E. non-juridical sense. Cf. judgement.

Judge Crater, do a. To keep out of the way; go into (temporary) retirement: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; slightly ob. Ex an incident in American legal history.

judgement is the abstract noun corresponding to judge: 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'On concerting or planning any operations, one party will say, I think it would be judgement to do so and so, meaning expedient to do it'; 1823, Egan's Grose (cribblingly); † by 1900.

Judy, hence judy. Perhaps orig. c., but certainly s. (low at first) by 1850, in the senses given by J. H. Vaux, 1812, 'A blowen' (mistress; prostitute); 'but sometimes used when speaking familiarly of any woman'. In C. 20 U.S.A., a Judy is a Chinese prostitute: prob.—at first, anyway—a c. term: Leverage, 1925. Ex the commonness of the Christian name: cf. Moll.

jug, n. Perhaps orig. Newgate, as in 'Knights of the Jug, Gentlemen of the Stove Pitcher', the Newgate Prison scene in W. T. Moncrieff's The Heart of London, 1830, and in 'And thus was I bowled out at last, | And into the Jug for a lag was cast', Jerry Juniper's Chaunt in W. H. Ainsworth's Rookwood, 1834, but the term, meaning 'prison', was current in U.S.A. in 1815 (D.A.E.); 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad, ch. XXVI (any prison); 1842, P. Egan, Captain Macheath (id.); 1845, anon. translator of E. Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, ch. XXIX; by 1850, thoroughly established in U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); 1857, Punch, Jan. 31; 1859, H; 1887, G. W. Walling (see cooler, 2); 1891, J. W. Sullivan (U.S.A.); 1904, Life in Sing Sing; by 1910, low s. in U.S.A.; by 1880, it had > s. in England; it still is low s. everywhere. Abbr. stone jug, q.v.; there may be a remote connexion with Fr. joug, 'yoke'.—2. Hence, a prison cell: British and American: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1932, Jack of Dartmoor, Dartmoor from Within, 'The "jug", or punishment cells'; extant.—3. And by allusion to the similarity of structure, a bank: American: Nov. 11, 1845, The National Police Gazette, "'Cracking a jug" (entering a bank)'; 1859, Matsell (at cut up), "'The jug was very fat . . .", the bank was very rich'; 1862, The Cornhill (vi, 648); 1877, Bartlett, Americanisms, 4th ed.; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Out to crack a P.O. or jug'—perhaps sense 4; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black; Jan. 8, 1927, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; Aug. 23, 1930, Liberty; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest (D. W. Maurer); Nov. 1931, 1A, 'Among older criminals'; 1933, Leach; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's; 1934, Convict; 1935, George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime; 1943, Black; 1943, Jim Phelan, Letters; extant.—4. A (country) post-office: U.S.A.: 1912 (see sense 3); 1925, Leverage, 'Jugs, n. pl., Country post offices'; extant.—5. A bank-safe: U.S.A.: July 11, 1925, Flynn's, 'This is a seven-plate jug . . . I'll shoot her from the outside'; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 'A safe in a country bank'; 1928, Chicago May; 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; extant.

jug, v. To imprison: ca. 1834, Catlin (D.A.E.); 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York; by 1860, British; 1879, James McGovan, Hunted Down, "'I told you so—jugged within the week!"; 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms (Australia); 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping (U.S.A.); 1902, W. A. Irwin, The Love Sonnets of a Hoodlum; 1904, Life in Sing Sing ('Jugged. Arrested'); by 1905, low s., both in the British Empire and in the U.S.A. Ex the n.—2. Hence, or ex sense 2 of the n.: 'to jug money, etc., to hide it away': 1877, Bartlett, Americanisms, 4th ed.; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; extant. Prob. ex jug, n., 3.—3. (Ex sense 1.) To deny (a prisoner) his privileges and lock him in his cell while his fellows are free to walk in the yard: convicts'; 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; extant. Ex jug, n., 2.—4. Esp. as vbl n., jugging, 'waiting to rob someone coming out of a bank', The Bon Voyage Book (1931), where the usage is said to be English; extant. See jug, n., 3.

jug, crack a. See crack a jug.

jug-breaking. 'Committing a burglary at a bank,' Sylva Clapin, A New Dict. of Americanisms, 1903; extant. See jug, n., 3.

jug head. A mule; a stupid person: since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; by 1940, s. Cf. juggins.

jug heavy. A specialist in blowing bank-safes: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant. See the elements.

jug heist. A bank-robbery: since ca. 1925. In, e.g., Flynn's, April 23, 1938, Convict 12627. See jug, n., 3, and heist, n.

jug man. A bank sneak-thief; a bank burglar: 1925, Leverage (former nuance); 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice (latter); extant. See jug, n., 3.

jug mob. A gang of bank-robbers: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's (see quot'n at fill-out, n.); extant. See jug, n., 3, and mob, n.

jug rap; jug rooter. A bank-robbery charge; a bank-robber: since the mid-1920's. Ersine. See jug, n., 3; rap, n.; root.

jug stiff. 'A cashier's check forged on an out-of-town bank,' Maurer, 1941: commercial underworld, esp. forgers': since the 1920's. I.e., jug, 'a bank' + stiff, 'a cheque'.

jug-work. 'The occupation of a bank-sneak or burglar,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See jug, n., 3.

jugal, 'a dog'; rather is it a Romany tinkers' word than tramps' c. Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1933. Cf. jugelow.

jugareeno. A bank: March 16, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington, 'Will you take a gander at that nice looking jugareeno standing there on the corner, boys?'; extant. I.e., jug, n., 3 + the Italian-seeming suffix arino occasionally encountered in s. jugelow. A dog: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890. Ex Romany juckel and jucko (both meaning 'a dog') by blending, or, more prob., ex the Romany variant jukalo.

jugger. A banker: 1925, Leverage; April 1933, The American Mercury, Jim Tully ('Yeggs'), who implies its currency at least as early as 1919; 1933, Ersine, 'Juggers . . . Bankers who buy stolen bonds'; extant. Ex jug, n., 3.—2. A bank-thief: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex jug, n., 3.

jugging law. As in R. Greene, A Disputation, 1592, 'The Jugging Law, wherein I will set out the disorders at Nynholes and Ryfling (or dicing)'; app. † by 1640. Cf. jug, v., 2, for the semantics.

juggins. 'Food handed out to a beggar,' Leverage, 1925: beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1910. He is a juggins to be put, or to put himself, into that position.

juggler's box. 'The Buming Engine,' The Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708. But what does this mean? That buming may = bumming = booming does not get us much further. Possibly the term denotes a small battering-ram used by housebreakers. Grose, 2nd ed., 1788, may well be right when he says: 'The engine for burning culprits in the hand': in which case, 'buming' is prob. a misprint for 'burning'. The term was app. current throughout C. 18. A fanciful term?

juice. Nitroglycerin: 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 'I'll show you how to pour the juice and blow a safe so's it won't wake a baby'; Oct. 31, 1925, Flynn's; by ca. 1930, English also; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 'Soup, juice. Nitroglycerine and samsonite (latter used by modern safe-breaker'); extant. Cf. oil and grease, 2.

juice joint, 'a soft-drink tent, booth, or store': s., not c.

juice road, 'an electric railway': s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

juicer. The executioner in those prisons where the death sentence is effected by electrocution: convicts': 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex s. juice, 'electricity', via s. juicer, 'electrician'.

juju (or J-), the. (Physical) punishment: 1903, Josiah Flynt, The Rise of Ruderick Clowd, 'In the child-prison where Ruderick lived, Punishment became a living personality to the inmates, an awful monster to whom the youngest even gave a name. They called him "The Juju"', and addressed 'him' as Juju; ob. Prob.—orig., at least—a name invented by Flynt; cf. juju, 'a West African charm or amulet'.

jukin' joint. 'A Negro term, originally designed to describe a gathering at which everyone gets drunk, dances wildly, and usually gets in a fight. The popularity of this form of amusement caused whites to copy it, "jukin' joints" now exist by the hundred, with the coarser touches which the white person can give to anything adapted from the Negro race . . . There is, of course, the prime requisite of liquor,' Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937; extant.

jukrum is a variant of the more logical jackrum, q.v. Both B.E. and Grose, however, spell it jukrum. Potter, 1797, has the rare variation juckrum.

julep; pruno. Prison names for intoxicating concoctions made by prisoners, from stolen fruit and sugar: since ca. 1920. Convict 2nd, 1938.

jump, n. An illicit dodge; a device practised by the underworld: 1602, Samuel Rowlands, Greenes Ghost Haunting Conie-catchers; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, names 'The Five Jumps at Leapfrog' as horse-coursing, carrying stones, fawning, fool-taking, and spoon-meat, qq.v. separately for full details. These are minor tricks not included in the various 'laws'. Current ca. 1595–1630.—2. (As the jump.) 'The dusk of the evening is the time allotted for this, as it prevents any one at a distance from observing what passes; a great number of rogues then gets lurking about, taking advantage of the unpardonable neglect of others; every window they come near that has no light in, they open, if it happens not to be fastened; they then take what is most valuable out of that room, and very often go into others in the same house, acting in the same manner by them, and when they have got as much as they think can be conveniently carried off, they let themselves out at the street door, and go off uninterrupted with their booty,' Anon., Thieving Detected, 1777; 1781 (see also jump, dining-room), G. Parker; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1839, Brandon; 1889 (see long jump; by implication); 1896, F & H; ob. by 1925; virtually † by 1940. Ex jump, v., 1; or perhaps ex the jump made by the thieves as they effect an entry.—3. Hence, one who practises 'the jump': 1809, George Andrewes, 'Jump, or jumpers . . .'; † by 1890.—4. A ground-floor window (ex sense 2): 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'a wi(n)dow'; 1889, B & L (of any window); † by 1910.—5. (Ex 2 and 4.) An escape: burglars' and convicts': 1889 (see long jump burglars'); 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer (convicts'); extant.—6. A journey (free) on a train: U.S. tramps': 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'He likes to tell of making "big jumps" on passenger trains as from the coast to Chicago in five days, or from Chicago to Kansas City or Omaha in one day'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

jump, v. (Of windows) to lift (v.i.), to permit of being raised: 1742, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account (John Gulliford), 'I asked Cook if the Glaze would not jump'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Try the Glass, if it will jump; that is, the Windows, if they will lift up'; ibid., v.t., 'Jump the Glaze . . . lift up the window'—i.e., to make it jump or start; app. † by 1800.—2. '[They] pick him up and take him to the above alehouse to jump him, or do 'cheat or rob' him upon the broads' or cards: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1889, B & L; app. † by 1900.—3. 'To get in at a window, and rob a house in the day time': 1797, Potter; Dec. 1821, Sessions Papers, 'He asked me to jump it'; 1859, H; 1863, Tom Taylor (loosely); 1887, Baumann (jump a house); 1893, No. 747 (see cherpin); 1896, F & H; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2; slightly ob. Cf. the n., 2. Either ex sense 1 or ex jump, n., 2.—4. "'To jump a man", to pounce upon him, and either rob or maltreat him': 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; ob. Perhaps ex sense 2.—5. To surprise and arrest: Australian: ca. 1860–1910. Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms, 1881, 'For fear we might be "jumped" by the police at any time'. Ex sense 4.—6. To escape, to flee; to make off, to depart: U.S.A.: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His own Story, 'He got the "tip" that the officers were looking for him. Without stopping to pack his trunk, he "jumped" to Montreal'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1930, at latest, convicts' c. for 'escape from'—as in Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938, 'I'm jumping no jails'; by 1940, s. Cf. senses 5 and 6 of the n.—7. To ride on a train: U.S. tramps': since ca. 1885: 1891, C. Roberts, Adrift in America (D.A.E.); ca. 1910, O. Henry; 1931, Godfrey Irwin—but by 1915, at latest, it was s. Prob. ex the n., sense 6.—8. To electrocute (a condemned man): U.S. convicts': 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. I.e., 'to cause to jump'; the victim cannot literally jump, because he is strapped to the electric chair.—9. The sense 'to copulate with (a woman)' is low s. in the British Empire, perhaps c. in U.S.A. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

jump, dining-room; usually preceded by the. A variety of 'the jump' (see jump, n., 2); a pretendedly prospective lodger inspecting the dining-room and eyeing the plate, the robbery is later effected by his gang: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; † by 1900. See jump, n., 2.

jump, go a. To burgle a house by entering at a window: 1896, F & H. See the next.

jump, go the. 'To steal into a woman through the window': 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, 'Steal into a room through a window'; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L, 'To enter a house by the window'; ob. See jump, n., 2 and 4.

jump, on the. (Of a robbery) effected by 'the jump' (see jump, n., 2): Oct. 17, 1781, Sessions Papers, trial of Todd and Underwood; rather ob.—2. On the run; as a fugitive from justice: U.S.A.

1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (p. 264); by 1930, s. He has to 'jump' from place to place.

jump, the. See jump, n., 2.

jump out, v.i.; hence n. To steal, to engage in stealing; a stealing expedition or undertaking: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (both n. and v.), e.g., 'On my very first jump-out I got a fall, but the copper was open to reason'; ob. Cf. jump, n., 2, and v., 3.

jump the blind is a Western American tramps' term for 'to steal a ride on the platform of a baggage-car' (on a train): 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; extant. Cf. blind baggage.

jump the cut. Cardsharps' phrase for 'to so manipulate cards when cutting that the result is to give an unfair advantage to the one cutting': Clapin, Americanisms, 1903; extant.

jump the fence. To abscond while one is free on bail: 1933, Ersine; extant.

jump up. To cause (gangsters or other criminals) to move on before they are ready or desirous: since late 1920's. In, e.g., Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937. To make them jump up in haste.

jumper. A criminal practising one or other of the five 'jumps': ca. 1600-30. Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608. See jump, n., 1.—2. A burglar that participates in a robbery by 'the jump' (see jump, n., 2) or by 'the dining-room jump' (see jump, dining-room): 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1809, Andrewes; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L (id.); 1896, F & H; † by 1940.—3. App. synonymous with funker: 1797, Potter; † by 1890.—4. A tenpenny piece: mostly Scottish: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'I went back to the market, where I got two thirty bob screaves, a half dross quid, a six bob bit, three jumpers, and a kid's eye, all in one skin'; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1896 (F & H). Perhaps because it soon goes.—5. A device for defeating ignition locks: the automobile-stealing racket: U.S.A.: 1929, The Saturday Evening Post; extant. Cf. S.E.—6. 'A wire used to divert the alarm circuit while working in a bank,' D. W. Maurer, in The Writer's Digest, Oct. 1931: Am. bank-robbers': since ca. 1925.—7. A teller (at a bank): since the 1920's. Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943, 'The jumper ses the moniker's bent'. A special application of 'counter-jumper'.

jumping, n. 'Getting into a house through the window': 1869, A. Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; ob. Cf. jumper, 2.

jungle, n. A prison: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; very ob. by 1947. In a convict prison, one is among the wild beasts of society.—2. A loafing place, a hang-out: yeggs': C. 20. Jackson & Hellyer, 1914; by 1920, this sense had merged with the next—perhaps, indeed, it would be inept to separate them.—3. Hence, a tramps' camp: since ca. 1905, as in Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hoboes, 1918; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'The hobos have established a series of camps or "jungles" The hobo has no social centers other than the "stem" and the "jungle" The jungle is to the tramp what the camp ground is to the vagabond who travels by auto'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, A Scholar Tramp; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1925, Leverage defines it as 'the country'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black; 1930, Lennox Kerr, Backdoor Guest; 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; 1931, Stiff; since the early 1920's, largely superseded by jungles, which, since the early 1930's, has been virtually the sole form. The semantic idea behind the term is that of 'a return to Nature: a going to the jungle as an escape from urbanism'; association with Negroes would prob. cause the type of jungle envisioned to be African rather than South American.—4. 'Jungle—crooks' territory,' Chicago May, 1928; ob. Where 'the wild beasts of society' live.

jungle, v.i. To meet at a 'jungle' to cook, eat, sleep, drink, etc.: tramps': since ca. 1910. Urbain Ledoux, Ho-bo-ho Medley, No. 1, 1931. Ex sense 3 of the n.

jungle, adj. corresponding to jungle, n., 3; e.g., in Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life, 1922, 'By "jungle" camp-fires . . . I found a feeling of sincere companionship', and in Jim Tully's story, 'Jungle Justice', in The American Mercury, April 1928.

jungle, crush the. See crush the jungle.

jungle buzzard. 'Most "jungle buzzards", men who linger in the jungles from season to season, take an interest in the running of things [in the "jungle" they affect]. For the most part they are parasitic, begging food from others, but they are generally on the alert to keep the place clean and orderly,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; elsewhere in the same book, Anderson mentions that the term occurs in Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hoboes, 1918; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, A Scholar Tramp; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1927, R. Nichols & Jim Tully, Twenty Below; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; extant. See jungle, n., 3; the buzzard is a scavenger.—2. Hence, a tramp or a yegg preying upon his fellows; 'one who holds up the unarmed men gathered in jungles, robbing them of food, drink, money or clothes,' says Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1925: 1928, Chicago May, 'Hobo sneak-thief, preys on his own kind'; 1934, Rose, 'Crook who steals from another crook'; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; extant.

jungle snipe, usually pl. 'Jungle-snipes, n. pl., Country police officials,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Prob. ex jungle, n., 3.

jungle stiff. 'One who rarely leaves the jungles to travel. A bum who lives in jungles instead of in a town,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; extant. I.e., jungle, n., 3 + stiff, n., 13.

jungle up. In the chapter entitled 'A Hobo Camp', Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler, 1922, 'The fire was built in the improvised furnace, and water was carried from the brook. They—the seekers for food—returned laden with meat and eggs, potatoes and coffee . . . The method is called "jungling up" by tramps'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, "'You're welcome to travel with me, kid, if you want to jungle-up for a month or two," my companion said,' where the v. = 'to live together in a "jungle"—or a series of "jungles" '; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To rest, wash and eat at jungles'; 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant. Cf. jungle, n., 3, and jungle, v.—2. Hence, 'To live at a jungles while doing farm labor or odd jobs in a locality,' IA, 1931: since ca. 1912.

jungle wallah. A hardened, long-experienced tramp: British tramps': 1932, Matt Marshall, The Travels of Tramp-Royal; extant. Ex jungle, n., 3 + Hindustani wallah, 'boy, chap, fellow'.

jungler. A tramp: since ca. 1925: 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1935, Hargan. Ex jungle, v.

jungles. "The jungles," any tramp rendezvous just outside the city limits, to be beyond police jurisdiction, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life, 1922; June 30, 1928, Flynn's, Edward Parrish Ware ('The Jungle Beast'), 'The twelve had met in that gathering place of the hobo, called a jungles, by merest chance'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, Jungles.—A tramps' camp The word is always used as "jungles", never in the singular'; by 1932, current among English tramps—as in Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1933; 1933, Ersine, 'Almost every village has a jungles'; 1934, Convict; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant. A collectivization of jungle, n., 3.—2. Hence, among criminals, the country, i.e., a rural district or, collectively, rural districts: 1929, Great Detective Cases, Tom O'Donnell, 'Into the Jaws of Death'—'Burglar alarms on country stores and post-offices in those days were rare things. Jacks had never come across one in the "jungles"'; extant.

junk, n. 'Plated jewelry,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, '[Grifting is] getting like bringing junk from Europe. You'd sooner give it up than pay the duty'—elsewhere in this book, it = genuine jewelry: 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue (ditto); 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hoboes (where it = brass jewelry); 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler (any jewelry); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Cheap jewelry'; 1925, Leverage, 'Jewelry (esp. cheap)'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (cheap jewelry); 1928, C. F. Coe, Swag; 1931, IA, 'Plated or inferior jewelry'; 1933, Eagle; by 1935 or, at latest, 1936, it was fairly gen. s. By humorous depreciation.—2. 'Dere are some good gals wat a bloke's a junk (bad man) if he don't treat right,' H. Hapgood, Types from City Streets, 1910; ob. Ex junk, 'inferior'.—3. A drug; drugs collectively: 1922, implied in junker; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, R. Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave'; 1925, Leverage, 'Cocaine or morphine'; 1927, Kane; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; Feb. 2, 1929, Flynn's; 1929, Ernest Booth; Nov. 8, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; Nov. 29, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Sept. 17, 1932, Flynn's, J. F. Fishman; 1933, J. Spenser, Limey; 1933, Cecil de Lenoir; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Ferd. Tuohy, Inside Dope; 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose; 1935, Hargan; Nov. 1937, For Men Only, Robert Baldwin, 'Dopes Are Dopes'; 1938, Castle; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant.—4. 'Silver money is "junk"; a dollar is a buck,' J. K. Ferrier, 'Crime in the United States' (Crooks and Crime, 1928); extant.—5. Stolen goods: 1933, Ersine; extant. Prob. ex sense 1.

junk, on the. Taking drugs: April 21, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627, 'Both me and the twist was on the junk . . . and they found a spike on me, but no stuff'; extant. Ex junk, n., 3. Synonymous are on the gow—hop—stuff; all four are listed by BVB, 1942.

junk-dealer or junk-peddler. 'Junk Dealer, n.,

One who sells cocaine or morphine,' Leverage, 1925; Oct. 11, 1930, Liberty (the latter); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Junk Peddler.—Especially one who retails the drug to addicts upon the street'; 1933, Ersine (j. peddler); extant. See junk, n., 3.

junk graft. The traffic in drugs (narcotics): C. 20. BVB. See the elements.

junk hog. (BVB) is synonymous with:—

junk hound. A drug addict: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; BVB, 1942, cites also junk man. See junk, 3.

junk(-)moll. 'A woman who displays much jewelry,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See junk, n., 1.

junk parlor. A jewelry store, jeweller's shop: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. prec.

junk-peddler. See junk-dealer.

junk pusher. 'A peddler of narcotics,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; extant. Cf. :—

junk shooter. A peddler of narcotics: Sept. 17, 1932, Flynn's, Joseph F. Fishman; extant. See junk, n., 3. junked(-)up. Drug-exhilarated: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942. See junk, n., 3.

junker. A drug addict: 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, R. Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave'; March 27, 1926, Flynn's; 1927, Kane; 1930, C. R. Shaw, The Jack Roller; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; July 5, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; Feb. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, R. E. Burns; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; April 8, 1933, Flynn's; 1934, Convict; 1934, Louis Berg; by 1935, police and journalistic s. Ex junk, n., 3; cf. :—2. Hence, a peddler of drugs: Nov. 15, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. the development of junkie.

junkie; occ., junkey or junky. 'One type of dope fiend is the Junkie. He uses a "gun" or needle to inject morphine or heroin,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; Feb. 2, 1929, Flynn's, J. F. Fishman, 'Fine Feathers'; June 21, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; 1931, Stiff; March 19, 1932, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; by 1933 (Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man), police and journalistic s. Ex junk, n., 3.—2. (Cf. junker, 2.) A peddler of drugs: Dec. 20, 1930, Flynn's; extant.

jurdain(e). See jordain.

jurk is a rarish variant of jark, n. 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857; Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 1859; 1889, B & L, 'Still current among thieves in America'; 1896, F & H (American).

jury-fixer. One who, representing or working ultimately for a criminal, 'fixes' or bribes the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty: 1901, J. Flynt (see court); by 1910, police j. Cf. fixer.

just broken out is applied to 'one who has newly joined the fraternity [of tramps]': J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 'The Tramps' Jargon'; slightly ob. Cf. :—

just busted out. 'A tramp or hobo who has lately joined the fraternity or just broken out with wanderlust, much as one shows signs of the measles or any eruptive disease,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910.

Justice Child, I'll do. This c. catch-phrase is defined thus by B.E., 1698, 'I will Peach or rather Impeach or Discover the whole gang, and so save my own Bacon'. A New Canting Dict., 1725, prefers the form, I'll do justice, child, the small j and c being, however, deceptive. The phrase would seem to be a mere c. variation of I'll turn King's evidence, and the allusion is app. to Sir Francis Child the Elder (1642-1713), who was in 1690 elected High Sheriff of London; in 1699 he was Lord Mayor of London—an office that he filled most sumptuously; he was £4,000 out of pocket.

Jy hou jou mond soos a gramophone. See kop-hou . . .

iybe. See gybe.

jyngler is a C. 17 variant of jingler. Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608-9.

K

K, adj. Homosexual: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. Perhaps s. queer > kweer > k > K.

K.C. Kansas City: ca. 1870-1905, tramps' c.; thereafter, general s. Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (p. 342); 1901, in form Kay See: see Bean Town. Cf. Casey.

K.M. and X. 'Okay, fine,' Ersine, 1933; extant. Origin?

k.o.; usually K.O. See kayoe.

K.O.'d. Short for knocked out. BVB.

k.o. drops. I.e., knock-out drops, q.v.: 1933, Ersine; extant.

K.O.'s. An opiate: since ca. 1935. BVB. I.e., 'knock-out drops': cf. prec.

K.Y. A whiskey: drinking s., not c. Flynn's, Dec. 11, 1926.

kabitz, kibitz, n. Unwanted advice: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'Ixnay on the kabitz. Get me'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'Can the kabitz or there's heat for you'; by 1936, low s. Godfrey Irwin derives it direct ex:—

kabitz, kibitz, v. 'To meddle, to offer unwanted advice' (Ersine, 1933): by 1935 or 1936, low s. Cf. :—

kabitzer or kibitzer. 'One who volunteers advice and who endeavours to conduct another's affairs,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: c. of ca. 1910-25, then low s. Ex Yiddish; cf. gibitz.

Kaffir. A convict that has been transported from Gt Britain to Botany Bay and has escaped from 'the Bay': ? orig. and mainly U.S.A.: 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York; † by 1880. Derogatory, with an implication of membership in an inferior race.—2. A prostitute's bully: ca. 1880-1910: perhaps c. originally, but prob. always low s. (B & L, 1889.) Ex the low civilization standard of Kaffirs.

kain. See kane.

kale. Money of any kind; esp., bank-notes: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest (article, 'Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); 1922, Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler; 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'I had simply trimmed a sucker for a few kale seeds'; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; by 1928, circus s.—witness The White Tops, July-Aug., 'Circus Glossary', and police s., as in Flynn's, Oct. 20, 1928, Edward Parrish Ware. Origin: 'The "long green" (bank notes), which may have been compared to the leaves of the plant by some fanciful tramp' (Irwin).

kalp is a rare form of kelp.

kane is the Scottish form of ken: D. Haggart, Life, 1821. Also kain and cane (ibid.).

kangar. Twist tobacco: convicts': C. 20. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938, "'Give us a Kangar, Bill," he called across the shed, and a lounging youngster cut him a scrap of pigtail. "Hiding" it from the warder, he stuck it in his cheek'; 1940, Jim Phelan, Jail Journey; Nov. 1943, Lilliput, 'Kangar . . . Kangaroo, a chew of tobacco'. Either ex kangaroo tail, to which a length of twist bears some resemblance, or, more prob., short for kangaroo, rhyming s. for 'a—or to—chew'.

kangaroo, n. See kangaroo court.—2. The sense 'an Australian' (Leverage, 1925) is s.—3. An unjust sentence to imprisonment: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 1 of the v.—4. A chew of tobacco; twist tobacco: British convicts': C. 20. Implied in kangar—where see, esp., the 1943 quot'n and the etymology.

kangaroo, v. To convict (a person) unjustly: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, Moreby Acklom, "'Wise-Cracking" Crook Novels'; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 'In the parlance of the Underworld I was "kangarooed"—convicted in jig-time; convicted because I happened to be a stranger'; 1925, Leverage, 'Kangarooed, adj., Framed; unjustly sent to prison'; 1934, Rose, 'Convict on False evidence (v.): to kangaroo'; extant.—2. To try (a newcomer) by kangaroo court: July 7, 1934, Flynn's, Convict 12627; extant.

kangaroo (court). A mock court (and trial) held by prisoners in a jail: 1853, Paxton (D.A.E.); 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (pp. 81-3), both forms, with variant kangru; 1922, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life (the longer form); 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1925, Leverage; Nov. 12, 1927, Flynn's (the shorter); by 1928, the shorter form was s., which the longer had prob. always been. The kangaroo is a droll creature.

kangaroo (or Anzac) poker; also double-ace poker. A gambling game played by confidence tricksters: since ca. 1915, when hundreds of Anzacs were evacuated, wounded, from Gallipoli: Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. On the verge of c.—but not quite c.

kant is a rare variant of cant, v. Rowlands, 1610:

'Stow your whids and plant
The Cove of the ken can kant'.

kap is a misprint (Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, for rap, v.; solemnly repeated (without acknowledgement) by The Monthly Magazine, Jan. 1799.

kap a baat. To have, take, a drink: South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Adopted ex Afrikaans; lit., 'take a benefit'.

kate or Kate. A pick-lock; a skeleton key: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1698, B.E., 'Tis a Rum Kate, c. that is a Cleaver Picklock,' where clever = 'handy, neat and convenient to use' (O.E.D.); 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul, where it occurs as rum kate: 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1848, Sinks of London; 1887, Baumann—but prob. it was † by 1870 at latest. By personification; cf. Jenny.—2. Hence, a pick-lock burglar: 1725, A New Canting Dict., ‘Tis a Rum Kate; She is a clever Picklock’; 1785, Grosse; † by 1850.—3. (Kate.) ‘A smart, brazen-faced woman’: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, ‘A handsome or popular prostitute’; 1942, BVB, ‘An attractive prostitute’. By personification (cf. moll); prob. influenced by cat, 1.

katey*. A picklock key: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1940. A diminutive of kate, 1.—2. See cady.—3. See Katy.

kath. An indeterminate prison-sentence: Australia and New Zealand: since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Partridge, 1937; Baker, 1941 (N.Z.) and 1942 (Australia). Ex the famous old song, Kathleen Mavourneen (‘It may be for years and it may be for ever’). Cf. the next two entries.

Kathleen Maroon. A three-years prison-sentence: an indefinite term of imprisonment: Australian: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Baker, 1942 (the former sense), and Baker, 1945 (the latter). A corruption of Kathleen Mavourneen (see kath). Cf. :—

Kathleen Mavourneen (or, by corruption, Mavoureen). A confirmed criminal, habitual malefactor: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. For origin, see kath.

katsing. A wig: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, ‘Poll, alias Katsing, alias Wigg’; † by 1830.

katty*. A revolver: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Ex gat?

katy*. A derby hat: 1933, Ersine; extant. See cady.

Katy, the*. The M.K. & T. Railroad: tramps’: 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; ibid., ‘The Katy Flyer’, an express train on that line; 1931, Stiff; extant.—2. Katy only: Kansas City, Missouri: 1925, Leverage; extant.

Kay See*. See K.C.

kayoe* or K.O. ‘To achieve unusual success’: c. of ca. 1910–30, then s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex K.O., pugilistic s. for ‘to knock out’.

kayoe!* or K.O.! All right!; agreed!; good!; I understand!: c. of ca. 1920–30, then s.; ob. Merely a reversal of O.K.; prob. with a pun on pugilistic K.O., ‘a knock out’: ‘It’s a knock-out!’ or ‘s Wonderful (a song-tune by George Gershwin).

ke-keya* or K.-K. ‘Devil; Satan,’ Matsell, 1859; 1896, F & H; ob. Ex a Red Indian word?

keek. See kick, n., 4.

kecks. See kicks, references of 1886 and 1906.

kedge; kedger; kedgers’ coffee-house (or hotel). See cadge, n. and v.; cadger; etc.

keef. Marijuana, smoked in pipe or in cigarette: Anglo-French drug addicts’: C. 20. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938. The Fr. name for marijuana is kif.

keek, adj. corresponding to keeks: 1821, David Haggart, Life, ‘I got the first dive at his keek cloy’ (breeches pocket).

keekelay. Breeches pocket: 1859, ‘Ducange Anglicus’, The Vulgar Tongue, 2nd ed. But is not this an error, or a misprint, for keek cloy (see preceding entry)?

keekers, ‘eyes’ (ex keek, to peer), is not c. but Scottish dial.

keeks is the Scottish form of kicks, breeches: 1821, D. Haggart, Life.

keel bully; usually pl. ‘Lightermen that carry Coals to and from the Ships, so called in Derision’ (B.E., 1698): not c. but nautical s.

keeler*. A robber of drunk men: since ca. 1925. In, e.g., Convict, 1934. He keels ‘em over to get at their pockets.

Keeley Cure, the. ‘When I awoke I found myself in the isolated dungeon, nicknamed the Keeley Cure by the convicts [at Sing Sing],’ Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; ob. Ex the Keeley cure for alcoholism. Leslie E. Keeley (1832–1900) was an American physician, ‘who exploited commercially an institutional cure of chronic alcoholism and drug addiction’ (Dictionary of American Biography).

keen is a misprint for ken, 1.

keep. A boy: 1833, trial of George Coney, in Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–34, X, ‘Keep is a slang’—read ‘cant’—‘term for boys’; † by 1900.

keep a pig*. To live with a woman: tramps’ and beggars’: C. 20. Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1825. Derogatory.

keep nit is a post-1910 Australian corruption (Baker, 1942) of :—

keep nix, to; often keeping nix, whether participial or substantive. To keep watch while one’s accomplice commits a crime, esp. a robbery or a burglary: C. 20. Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, 1925, ‘He had a pal with him . . . and while the pal was “keeping nix” as well as he could, being “blotto”, Cyril hit out a left and a right at the two panes of glass in the windows, as if he were doing a turn at “The Ring” in the Blackfriars Road’. See nix.

keep one’s eyes peeled*, ‘to be wide awake, constantly’, is classified by Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872, as c.: but it was never lower than s.

keep one’s nose clear*, ‘to play square’ (Ersine, 1933), may orig. have been c.

keep open house. To sleep in the open air: tramps’: 1896, F & H; rather ob. Cf. do a starry pitch.

keep sheep by moonlight, ‘to hang in chains’ (applied to malefactors), is not c., but s.

keep tab; keep yow. To act as look-out man: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1945. Cf. :—

keep tabs*. See tabs, keep.

keep the meet*. ‘To keep an appointment with an addict or peddler,’ BVB, 1942: C. 20. Contrast blow the meet.

keep tout. See tout, n., 3.

keep your nose clean!* was orig. a c. c.p. for ‘Give no information away!’: 1929–31, Kernôt. Whence the s. sense, ‘Keep out of trouble!’

keep yow. See keep tab. Perhaps yow is an exclamation.

keeper*. The owner or manager of a brothel: white-slave traffic, but j. rather than c.: late C. 19–20. Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, 1936.

keeping cully. ‘One that maintains a Mistress, and parts with his Money very generously to her,’ B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, ‘One who keeps a mistress as he supposes for his own sake, but really for that of the public’; 1787, Anon., A Dictionary of Love, ‘Cully is one who gives much, and receives at most the appearance of love in return. Their tribe is very numerous: the chief divisions of them are, The marrying-cully and the keeping-cully. The first is used as a cloak; the second, like an orange, squeezed of its juice, and thrown away'; app. † by 1890. I.e., a cully, 2, that keeps or maintains a mistress.

keeping nix. See keep nix.

keester. See Casey quot'n at 1914.

keffel. A horse: 1698, B.E. (keffal); 1796, Grose. These two lexicographers do not classify it as c., but imply that it is s. Prob. it was low s., this word adopted direct ex Cymric. It may, however, have been U.S. c. in C. 19: B & L.

keg, carry the. See cag, carry the.

keister. A handbag, small grip, satchel; also a strong box: 1881, The Man Traps of New York, p. 14, 'Prominent among the small army of confidence operators in this city are: "Grand Central Pete" . . . , "Boston Charlie" . . . , "The Guinea Pig" "Kiester Bob" . . . , where the implication is that Bob specialized in stealing this type of article; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'Keester—the strong box of a safe'; April 1919, The (American) Bookman; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 'The "kiesters"—underworld vernacular for the so-called burglar-proof chests'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Bars on certain type of safe. A handbag that can be strapped and locked'; 1925, Leverage, 'A suit case'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1927, Kane (suitcase, safe, box); by 1928 (witness The White Tops, July–Aug., 'Circus Glossary') it was circus s.; by 1930, gen. low s., except in the sense 'burglar-proof chest', which has remained c.; 1929, Jack Callahan; Aug. 2, 1930, Liberty; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 1931, D. W. Maurer; 1933, Eagle; April 1933, The American Mercury, Jim Tully, 'To a yegg, . . . a keister was the inside box of a safe'; 1933, Ersine, 'A duster [q.v.] A safe within a vault'; by 1934, also Canadian. Ex (? Yiddish, re-shaping) L. cista, 'a chest'; Kane, 1927, 'Suggested etymon, German "kasten"'.—2. Buttocks: convicts' (mostly at Sing Sing): 1933, Ersine; 1935, Hargan; extant.

keister guy; keister mug. A baggageman, a porter: 1925, Leverage; extant. See keister.

keister-lifter. A baggage thief: 1925, Leverage; extant. See keister; cf. S.E. shoplifter.

keister machine. A baggage car or luggage van: 1925, Leverage; extant. See keister.

keister man (or one word). Synonym of keister-lifter: 1933, Ersine; extant.

keister mark. 'A sucker with a grip' (attaché case, small bag): 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex keister; see mark.

keister plant. A bag, suitcase, trunk with a false bottom for the concealment of counterfeit notes or forged cheques: forgers': since ca. 1930. Maurer, 1941. See keister and plant, n.—2. 'Narcotics concealed in the rectum,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic: since the 1920's. An anatomical pun; cf. keister, 2.

keister racket, the. Shoplifting with the aid of a holed or slotted empty cardboard-box, with the hole against the body, the stolen articles being slipped thereinto: from ca. 1920. Dec. 24, 1932, Flynn's, Roscoe Dowell. See keister.

Keith and Proctor. A doctor: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Kelly. A hat: 1925, Leverage; April 14, 1928, A. E. Ullman, 'Beggarmen' in Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A hat, more especially a derby'; May 16, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack; extant. Picked up—or, rather, transformed from the 'pick-up'—from Cockney crooks, who, like other Cockneys, use Derby Kelly as rhyming s. for 'belly': Derby (the hat) = Kelly: therefore, Kelly = a derby.

Kelly Ned. The head: Pacific States: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Prob. 'coined' by Australian crooks: Ned Kelly was the most notorious of all Australian bushrangers. (In Australian rhyming s., Ned Kelly is the belly: Baker, 1945.)

kelp, n. Hat or cap: 1736, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, 'Joseph Cole's Robberies, written by Himself', 'I and Thomas Campion . . . broke open a Hatter's . . . and robbed it of three Dozen of Kilps [that is Hats]'; 1738, ibid., 'An Account of Henry Fluellin', 'A Calp [sic] and Shade (a Hat and Wig)'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Then we jostle him up, and one knocks his Kelp off'; ibid. (glossary), it is spelt calp and defined as 'hat'; 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter (also as calp); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds (calp); † by 1870. Perhaps humorously ex S.E. kelp, a mass or a tangle of large seaweeds.

kelp, v. 'To kelp a person, is to move your hat to him': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1880—perhaps earlier. Ex the n.: cf. S.E. cap, to take off one's hat to (a person).

kelter, 'condition, order' (Grose, 1785), has never been c.—2. Money: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'It won't do I say, to stand here for nicks . . . what, will none of your loose kelter?' 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1842, P. Egan, Captain Macheath; 1848, Bartlett, Americanisms (at tin); 1874, H; † by 1887, according to Baumann, but B & L record it as current in 1889; † by 1900. A variant of gelter.

kemesa is a variant of comesa. (Vaux, 1812; Ainsworth, 1834.)

ken. 'A ken, a house' is Harman's terse entry in his glossary, 1566; ibid., in the dialogue, kene twice; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'To mill each ken, let Cove bing then'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, where it is misprinted keen; 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); app. † (except in combination) by 1865 or so, except in U.S.A., Geo. P. Burnham, in 1872, defining it as 'a house, a booth, or small hotel for criminals', and perhaps among tramps (Wm Newton, 1886) and a few crooks here and there (James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936, 'Rolling up to his mort's ken with a bunch of violets'). Ex Gypsy and, or rather from, Arabic khan, 'an inn', or, more prob., Hindustani khan(n)a, 'house; room'. Variations of this word are common in the Oriental languages: see, e.g., John Sampson's magistral dict. of Welsh Gypsy.

Not ex Shelta kiéna, 'a house', as Vellacott stated it to be.—2. Hence, any building: 1566, in quier (or quyer) ken, a prison; 1608–9, Dekker (see the quot'n at queer ken); 1829, Maginn, Vidocq, Appendix (a shop); ob.—3. Erroneously, a bed: 1837, B. Disraeli, Venetia.—4. (Ex sense 1.) A lodging-house: tramps': 1851, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 217; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1888, J. Greenwood; † by 1930.

ken, bite a or the. See bite, v., 2.

ken, bob; bowman ken. See boman ken.

ken, crack a. See crack a ken.

ken, flash. See flash ken.

ken, mill a. See mill a ken.

ken, slum a. See slum, v.

ken-burster. A housebreaker or burglar: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1900. Cf. ken-cracker and ken-miller, which are synonymous.

ken cadger. 'A beggar, a swindler, a thief': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'A beggar, a swindler of the meanest order'; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; † by 1900. One who cadges at kens or houses.

ken(-)cove. Master of the house, esp. of a 'flash ken' (q.v.): 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; ob. by 1900; † by 1930. See ken, 1, and cf. ken, 4.

ken-crack lay. Housebreaking, burglary: 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial (Appendix No. 1); 1896, F & H; † by 1930. I.e., ken, 1; crack, v.; lay, n., 2.

ken-cracker. A housebreaker, a burglar: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1880, †. See ken, 1, and crack, v.

ken-flash is Andrewes's error (1809) for flash ken.

ken-miller. 'The Ken-Miller or House-breaker,' Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, 1659, where the author has a section on 'these Rogues', who 'have a Society among themselves, over which they have a Principal, or President, which placeth and ordereth every one in his several function . . . When they enterprise any robbery, they consider the difficulty thereof'; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley says that the 'ken-miller' works always at night and seldom alone; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The 62d. Rank of Villains'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1887, Baumann—but prob. it was † by 1880. See ken, 1, and mill, v., 1.

kenchin. See kinchen.

kene is an occ. C. 16 variant of ken. (Harman.)

kennebecker, 'a valise' (Leverage, 1925), is s.—not. c.

Kennedy, hence kennedy. 'A stick of substance, a poker': 1823, Bee, who compares the s. Dennis (a small walking-stick); 1824, J. Wight, Mornings at Bow Street, 'What does Mykle do, but seize the poker, and threaten to "Kennedy him"', glossed thus: 'Kennedy—St. Giles's, for the poker, from a man of that name being killed by a poker, or a man of that name killing another with that instrument'; 1859, H, both n. and v.; in 1874, H records the variant give (a person) Kennedy, which recurs in Henley's Villon's Good Night, 1887; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900.—2. Hence, a blow on the head with a poker: St Giles c.: 1889, B & L; † by 1900.

kennedy, v. See 1824, reference in preceding.

Kennedy, give. See Kennedy, ref. of 1874.

Kennedy rot. A drunkard: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on sot. Introduced by Australian crooks: in Australia, the Kennedy rot is a sort of scurvy.

kennel. A fountain; a spring; a brook: 1781, Ralph Tomlinson, A Slang Pastoral, 'The kennel, that wont to run swiftly along'; app. † by 1850. Prob. a 'disguise' of runnel.—2. A house: British and American tramps': C. 20; e.g., W. H. Davies, Beggars, 1909; Godfrey Irwin, 1931; Arthur Gardner, 1932. Ex ken, 1, with jocular reference to a dog's kennel.

kenner. A variant of ken, 1–2, 4: C. 19–20; ob. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. See etymology at ken, 1: the Hindustani word (khanna) has survived—or been revived.

kennick; kenuck. A penny: 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed (the latter); very ob. A corruption of penny? More prob. an elaboration—or a misapprehension—of Shelta nuk, 'a penny'.—2. 'A mixture of flash-patter [thieves' talk] and padding-ken [tramps' lodging-house] talk,' F. W. Carew, No. 747, 1893, at p. 17 (and see quot'n at gladder); ob. From the ken of the definition.

kenobe. An expert; a 'nob': central s. that orig. and until ca. 1870 was c.: 1857, Augustus Mayhew (see wiring).

Kent, 'a coloured pocket-handkerchief of cotton or linen' (Vaux, 1812), may orig. have been c., but prob. was never other than s.; Kent clout (H, 2nd ed., 1860), however, was almost certainly c. of ca. 1850–80. Ex S.E. kentin(g), 'a kind of fine linen cloth' (O.E.D.).

Kent clout. See the preceding.

Kent Street light horse, 'donkey-drivers (in London)', is prob. Cockney s.—not c.: 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields.

kerbstones. See curbstones.

kernel. Information: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. The kernel of the nut: the pith of the matter.

kerr'b, 'to strike or punch', is tinkers' s.: 1889, B & L. A corruption of Shelta karib, 'to cut; strike; kill'.

kertever. See catever.

kervorte(r)n. See kevarten.

ketch, n., a hangman, is not c. Ex the famous Jack Ketch, public hangman. Cf. derrick and Derrick and Gregorian tree.

ketch, v. To hang (a person): 1859, Matsell, "'I'll ketch you", 'I'll hang you'; 1896, F & H; † by 1910. Ex the n.

keterver. See catever.

kettle. A watch: 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; by ca. 1900, also American, as in No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest (U.S.A.), article 'Do You Speak "Yegg"?'; 1924, Netley Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (U.S.A.); 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1926, N. Lucas, London and Its Criminals; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; 1931, Brown; 1931, The Bon Voyage Book; 1931, IA; by 1934, it was pitchmen's s. in Britain, as in Philip Allingham, Cheapjack; extant as c. in U.S.A.—2. The sense 'a locomotive, esp. a leaky one' is not tramps' c. but railroad s. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.)

kettle, big. A clock: 1925, Leverage; extant. See kettle.

kettle-banger. A thief specializing in watches: since ca. 1925. In, e.g., Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938.

kettling. (The art of) 'unsealing correspondence by steaming,' Kernôt, 1929-31: C. 20. By application of letter to the steam-emitting kettle-spout: see kettle.

kevarthen, 'a quartern', is not c. but Cockney s. Also kervorte(r)n.

kewey. Red-headed: 1933, Ersine; extant. Origin?

kewpie. An infant: 1929, Givens; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex the celluloid kewpics formerly popular as toys and ornaments.

key. Prison; imprisonment: 1933, Ersine, 'Joe got the key today'; extant. Cf. S.E. turnkey.—2. An habitual criminal: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. Perhaps because he possesses a set of skeleton keys.—3. An indefinite term of imprisonment: Australian: since ca. 1925. Baker, 1945. Either ex sense 1 or ex 'kath' (see kath).

key man. 'The member of a mob who closes the deal,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; extant. Ex the S.E. industrial sense.—2. Hence (?), that member of a gang of car-thieves who unlocks the car that has been marked down for removal: the automobile-stealing racket: 1929, The Saturday Evening Post; extant.

keyhole(-)whisperer. "Keyhole whisperers", the skipper-birds [q.v.] are sometimes called, but they're regular travellers', by which it is, presumably, meant that keyhole-whisperers, properly so called, are regular—i.e., ordinary—tramps: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 311; 1859, H (at skipper-birds); 1890, B & L; 1893, No. 747; ob. Because they go early to a kindly house and wait at the door.

keyhole(-)whistler is a variant of the preceding (e.g., F & H, 1896).

keys. 'The chief turnkey is known as keys,' Convict, 1934: convicts': since ca. 1920. He carries a bunch of keys—or has charge of the prison's main keys.

keystone. A district attorney; a detective: 1929, Givens (the latter); 1929-31, Kernôt (ditto); 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube (a prosecutor); 1934, Rose (detective); extant. Perhaps ex 'the Keystone comedies' (film land) with their 'Keystone cops.'

keyster is a variant (John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928) of keister.

kibbets is merely a variant of kabitz.

kibitz, kibitzer. See kabitz and kabitzer.

kibosh. See kye-bosh, reference of 1864.

kick, n. Some kind of scoundrel employed in, or profiting by, organized whoring: 1675, R. Head, Proteus Redivivus. Roughly of the same class as a 'cuff' (q.v.); in the poem 'On Tunbridge-Wells', Head says, 'here walk Cuff and Kick, | Who wait for Women, or lay wait to Nick'—characters referred to also by Shadwell in Epsom Wells, 1675. The term seems to have > † by 1750.—2. See kicks.—3. A sixpence: 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Two, Three, Four, &c. and a Kick; Two, Three, Four, &c. Shillings and Sixpence'; 1728, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose, who does not classify it as c.; it prob. > low s. ca. 1760. Perhaps ex defective pronunciation kickpence; or a perversion of six(pence).—4. (Ex sense 2.) A trousers pocket: Jan. 10, 1846, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1856,

G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 138; in 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, classifies it as low-life s.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); indeed, it seems to have remained c. in U.S.A. (see pit, 3), as in reefing, reference of 1904; as in 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective (U.S.A.) in form kick; in 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; in 1933, Eagle; and elsewhere—as in Baker (Australia), 1945.—5. Hence, as in 'The [female] professionals in [shoplifting] often'—ca. 1895—'concealed large bags for holding their loot beneath their skirts or the back of a cloak. At that time, the device was known as a shoplifter's kick,' Flynn's, April 18, 1925.—6. The kick is 'the third degree; third-degree method or treatment': since ca. 1925. In, e.g., Howard N. Rose, 1934. Ex one of the ingredients in this particular kind of medicine—merely another indication of the dizzy altitudes civilization has reached.—7. A complaint to the police: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 1936; by 1945, s. Cf. s. have no kick coming, to have no complaint to make, to make no complaint.

kick, v. 'Kick'd, gone, flew, departed; as, The Rum Cull kick'd away, i.e. The Rogue made his Escape,' A New Canting Dict., 1725: ca. 1715-60. Perhaps ex a foal's or a calf's giving a kick before running off.—2. 'To borrow money' (from): 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes adds 'to ask a favour'; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1896 (F & H), low s. Ex break shins by suggestion.—3. To complain; to protest: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1930, at latest, it was s. Cf. the Biblical to kick against the pricks.—4. See habit, be kicking a. Also independently as v.i.: 1942, BVB.

kick and prance. To dance: Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; cf. jig and prance.

kick-back. 'Loot that must be returned to avoid arrest,' Ersine, 1933; extant. Ex the v.—2. A return to narcotics after 'kicking a habit' (see habit . . .): addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB.

kick back, v. To return (stolen property) to the victim: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'Kick back with that hooch, or we give you the works'; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. Cf. blow-back.

kick-cloy, 'a pair of breeches', says Matsell (Vocabulum, 1859): but this is almost certainly an error.

kick-in. A hold-up robbery of a house, store, bank, the driver of horse-carriage (or wagon) or motor-car remaining in his seat, one or two gangsters staying outside to keep 'outsiders' away and to watch for the police, while the leader, attended by one or two 'minders', kicks or otherwise forces his way in: since ca. 1905. Herbert Asbury, The Underworld of Chicago, 1941. Cf. sense 3 of the v.

kick in, v. To die: 1925, Leverage; low s., not c.—2. 'Kick-in, v. To divide; to split (spoils, etc.),' Leverage: C. 20; 1909, C. B. Chrysler, White Slavery; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To contribute or donate, usually under duress'; 1933, Walter C. Reckless, Vice in Chicago; by 1940, police and journalistic s.—3. To break into: Jan. 17, 1931, Flynn's, Henry Hyatt, 'Harold G. Slater's big jewelry store safe had been "kicked in" and robbed of twelve thousand dollars'; extant. Perhaps ex the n.

kick in the jack. To pay one's debt; hand over the money that is either due or asked for : since ca. 1920. Seen in a MS on Aug. 31, 1937. Cf. kick in, 2.

kick it apart. 'To elaborate a plan; to lay every detail before one,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: racketeers': since ca. 1910. To kick it apart, so that all its parts may be examined. 'Probably originated by some Marine or soldier who had demolished or "kicked apart" a native hut in the Philippines to make sure no lurking insurrecto was allowed to remain behind the line of advance' (Irwin).

kick it out. To suffer, physically or mentally—or both : since late 1920's : Nov. 11, 1937, Godfrey Irwin (private letter). Prob. ex the prison-medical s. phrase incorporated in 'For 48 to 72 hours they [addicts] were left alone in a cell to "kick it out"', Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor, 1934; whereon Godfrey Irwin comments, 'This describes sufferings of the unfortunates in getting past first dreadful days without drugs'. Compare the entry at habit, be kicking a.

kick off ; kick over. 'Kick off a bank—to rob a bank,' Kane, 1927 : 1930, Burke, 'We kick over the spot for five yards'; 1938, Castle (k. over); extant. Cf. knock over, v., 4.—2. The sense 'to die' (Ersine, 1933) is low s.

kick the bucket, 'to die', was prob. never c.

kick the clouds or wind, 'to be hanged': not c., but s. The latter occurs in Florio's The World of Words, 1598. But kick the clouds (Lex. Bal., 1811) may possibly have been c. of C. 19–20, for it recurs in Leverage (U.S.A., 1925), although his recording the phrase does not prove the fact. Cf. caper sauce.

kick the gonger is a post-1929 variant (BVB, 1942) of :—

kick the (old) gong around. To smoke the opium-pipe : 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, in reference to and valid for ca. 1912 ; 1934, Rose, 'Filled with Dope (v phr) : kicking the gong'; ibid., kick the gong around, kick the gonger; May 2, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; 1939, May Sullivan, My Double Life (quot'n at leaper); extant. See gong, n.

kick through, v.i. To inform to the police : since ca. 1920. Convict, 1934. Cf. synonymous coll. come through.

kick'd. See kick, v., 1.

kicker. A grumbler; one who complains to the prison authorities : convicts' : 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, p. 611; perhaps, in the second nuançe, to be classified as convicts' c. until ca. 1900. It is, however, merely a special application of the general U.S. colloquialism, kicker, 'a protester; an obstructionist'.—2. As 'a dancing-master': not c., but low s.—3. A companion; a confederate, a fellow-gangster : March 22, 1930, Flynn's, Robert Carse ('Jail Break!'), 'Half the damned gun-slingers in the States, there just to wipe you out and all your kickers'; extant. Ex s. side-kick (partner; close companion).

kicking a habit. See habit, be kicking a.

kicks. Breeches : 1698, B.E., 'Tip us your Kicks, we'll have them as well as your Loure, c. pull off your Breeches, for we must have them as well as your Money'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'Kecks . . . Trousers'; 1887, Baumann; by 1889, low s. in England; in 1897 (Popular Science Monthly, April, p. 832), still c. in U.S.A.; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective (U.S.A.)—in form kecks; by 1920, † in U.S.A. That in which one kicks one's legs.—2. Hence (?), shoes : U.S.A. : 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1907, Jack London, The Road (see quot'n at sky-piece)—not an irrefutable allocation, for the sense may here be 'trousers'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict; by 1935 (Hugh Milner, letter of April 22) it was current among British tramps; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; extant. 'Those things with which a kick is delivered' (Irwin); perhaps rather ex the spectacle of high-kicking afforded by female dancers.

kicksees. See sense 2 of kicksey.

kickses. See the Tufts reference in :—

kicksey; gen. kickseys. 'Kicksey, Breeches,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Nap his Tuggs and Kixes; take his Cloaths and Breeches'; 1789, George Parker, 'Breeches. Kickseys'; 1792, The Minor Jockey Club; by 1794, in Am. use (Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807, 'Kickses . . . breeches'); 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Speaking of a purse, &c. taken from the breeches pocket, they say, it was got from the kickseys . . . To turn out a man's kickseys, means to pick the pockets of them, in which operation it was necessary to turn those pockets inside out, in order to get at the contents'; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1839, Brandon, 'Kicksters—a pair of breeches'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850, low s.—witness Mayhew, 1851. A diminutive of kicks.—2. Shoes; boots : 1823, Bee (kicksees). But this I believe to be an error.

kicksters. 'A pair of breeches': 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; by 1889 (B & L), low s. An elaboration of kicks.

kid, n. A child : 1690, D'Urfey; 1698, B.E.; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.: either c., as B.E. and Hall classify it, or low s., as The O.E.D. says; certainly s. by 1830 at the latest and, from ca. 1870, not low; nor was it ever c. in U.S.A., despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904. Ex the young of a goat.—2. Hence, a boy : 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Kid and Kinchin'; Boy and Girl'; 1789, G. Parker, 'Scamp the ballad-singing kid', and 'kid . . . a young boy'; app. † by 1830, except as in senses 6 and 9.—3. Hence, the kid = the kid-lay, q.v. Anon., Thieving Detected, 1777, where it is spelt kidd; app. † by 1820.—4. One of the three 'drop culls' who practise 'the drop' (see drop, n., 2) : 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected; 1889, B & L (also kidd), 'A swindler'; † by 1900. Cf. sense 6.—5. 'A little dapper fellow' : 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1821, P. Egan; 1823, Bee; by 1889 (B & L) it was low s. Perhaps ex next sense.—6. 'Particularly applied to a boy who commences thief at an early age; and when by his dexterity he has become famous, he is called by his acquaintances the kid so and so, mentioning his surname' : 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, plagiarizingly; April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp'; 1848, The Man in the Moon, 'Flowers of Felonry'; by 1850, current in U.S.A.—see E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851, Glossary, 'Kid. A young or little thief'; 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham (U.S.A.); 1890, C. Hindley; 1893, Langdon W. Moore (U.S.A.); by 1896 (F & H), † in England; 1901, J. Flynt (U.S.A.); by 1920, kid, v. 'To coax or wheedle. To inveigle. To amuse a man or divert his attention while another robs him. The sneaksman kidded the cove of the ken, while his pall frisked the panney': 1811, Lex. Bal.; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A. The first nuance was s. by 1860; the second by 1870; the third was always c. and it survived until ca. 1900. Prob. ex the n., senses 3 and 4.—2. To cheat (a person): 1811, Lex. Bal. (at cap); 1812, J. H. Vaux; by 1896 (F & H), low s.

† in U.S.A.—7. A policeman: Londoners': 1879, Thor Fredur, Sketches from Shady Places; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; † by 1920. Perhaps ironically ex sense 5.—8. Plausible talk: since ca. 1850: by 1889 (B & L) it was low s. Ex kid, v., 1.—9. 'Boys are also allowed noms de Tramp; but these must be coupled with the word "kid", signifying youth,' Josiah Flynt, 'The American Tramp', in The Contemporary Review, Aug. 1891; extant.—10. A kidnapper: U.S.A.: April 9, 1862, The New York Tribune (D.A.E.); 1896, F & H; app. † by 1920.—11. See native.—12. A prostitute, esp. if young and pretty: white-slavers': C. 20. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, 'They'—gigolos—'drop into regular work'—as pimps—'and take up with a "kid" that "walks" for them'.—13. A catamite: U.S.A.: C. 20. BVB. Cf. synonymous boy.

kid, nap the. 'The blowen has napped the kid. The girl is with child': 1811, Lex. Bal.; † by 1910. See kid, n., 1, and nap, v., 2 and 5.

kid-glove worker. A criminal clerk: since the 1920's. A passer of forged cheques: since ca. 1930. Both in Maurer, 1941.

kid(-)ken. See kidken.

kid lay, the practiser; the kid-lay, the trick. In 1698, B.E.: 'Kidlay, c. one who meeting a Prentice with a Bundle or Parcel of Goods, wheedles him by fair Words, and whipping Sixpence into his Hand, to step on a short and sham Errand for him, in the mean time Runs away with the Goods'; 1718, C. Hitching; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1726, Alex. Smith; 1752, Anon., Villainy Unmask'd, which shows that the trick was practised also on porters; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, where it is misprinted kide-lye, the lye being caused by Cockney pronunciation; 1776, John Villette, The Annals of Newgate; 1785, Grose, 'These [miscreants] are in cant terms, said to be on the kid lay'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1819, T. Moore; 1848, Sinks of London; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; † by 1900. Ex kid, n., 1, and lay, n., 2.

kid-layer. A variant of the preceding: 1770, Richard King, The Frauds of London detected—plagiarized by George Barrington in 1802. Ex kid lay (the practiser) on S.E. waylayer.

Kid McCoy. See McCoy.

kid-napper. See kidnapper.

kid on, 'to entice' (Brandon, 1839; Snowden, 1857), was prob. c. until ca. 1860, when it > low s.; by 1880 or 1890, it was ordinary s. Ex kid, v., 1.

kid rig. The same as kid lay: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose (kidrig); 1828, G. G., History of George Godfrey; 1859, H., 'Nearly obsolete'. I.e., kid, n., 1 + rig, n., 2.—2. The acquisition of money or property by false pretences: 1812, J. H. Vaux. Ex kid, v., 2 + rig, n., 2.

kid show or kid tent. A circus side-show:

C. 20: tramps' c. and circus s. until ca. 1920, then no longer to be classified as c.: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Godfrey Irwin. 'Not because minors are attracted; rather because the tent in which the side-show is housed is smaller than the main tent—the big top,' Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 18, 1937.

kid(-)simple. (Of men) 'Having a neurotic passion for boys or for one boy. Never applied to the moral degenerate who molests young girls,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. Here — cf. bull-simple — simple connotes single-mindedness, obsession.

kid tent. See kid show.

kid-wy. 'O slumber my Kid-wy, thy dad is a scamp,' the gloss on kid-wy being 'a young one': 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London (cant song in ch. x); ibid., 'The kidwys and kiddiesses' (young people); 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. App. by a fusion and perversion of kid, n., 1, and kiddy.

kidd = kid, n., 4.

kidd, the. See kid, n., 3.

kidded, 'pregnant' (Potter, 1797): perhaps low s.; prob. c. >, by 1830, low s. Ex kid, n., 1.

kidden. See kidken.

kidden-gonnof. A boy thief: 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxiii, 'A fly kidden-gonnof'; † by 1910. But isn't this an error for kiddy gonnof?

kidder. A middleman that profiteeringly deals in corn: 1698, B.E.; but why B.E. included it in his dict. only B.E. knows, for it was an S.E. word.—2. As 'a joker', it is claimed by No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, as American c.; but it has never been lower than s.—3. A street vendor's accomplice that 'buys' goods from the vendor in order to stimulate sales: street vendors' s. rather than tramps' c. (Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932.) The same applies to the corresponding vbl n., kidding.

kiddey. See kiddy.

kiddies. See kiddy.

kiddiess. A young girl: 1821, P. Egan (see kid-wy); 1848, Sinks of London, 'A slap up well-dressed girl'; † by 1900.

kiddily. Smartly; esp. with a loud smartness, the term being applied esp. to the dandies of the underworld: 1823, Bee; 1824, J. Wight, Mornings at Bow Street, 'Very fashionably attired, or, as he would say, kiddily togg'd'; by 1860, low and/or street s. Ex kiddy, adj.; cf. kiddy, n.

kidding is the vbl n. of kid, v., 1 and 2; kidding on, of kid on.—See also kidder, 3.

kiddy, n. A man (fellow, chap) of the underworld; a criminal, esp. if not yet middle-aged: 1781, Ralph Tomlinson, A Slang Pastoral, 'My time, O ye Kiddies, was happily spent, | When Nancy trigg'd with me wherever I went'; ibid., see rum, adj., 6; 1782, Messink; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'And as the kelter runs quite flush, | Like natty shining kiddies: | To treat the coaxing, giggling brims, | With spunk let's post our neddies'; 1796, Grose, 3rd ed., 'Kiddeys, Young thieves'; 1800, The Oracle, 'Fashionable Characters: A Kiddy' (a thief); 1811, Lex. Bal. (see quot'n at cracksman); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A thief of the lower order, who, when he is breeched, by a course of successful depredation, dresses in the extreme of vulgar gentility, and affects a knowingness in his air and conversation, which renders him in reality an object of ridicule';

such a one is pronounced by his associates of the same class, a flash-kiddy, or a rolling-kiddy. My kiddy is a familiar term used by these gentry in addressing each other'; 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial, Appendix No. 2; 1821, J. Burrowes, 'A smart fellow'; 1823, Byron, Don Juan, canto XI, st. 22, 'Poor Tom was once a kiddy upon town, | A thorough varmint, and a real swell'; 1827, Thomas Surr, Richmond; 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by 1850, current in U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); app. † by 1859, in England, to judge by H's comment (1st ed.); by 1870 in U.S.A.; but extant in Australia until ca. 1890 (Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms, 1881). A diminutive of kid, n.: cf. sense 2.—2. Hence, a boy: since ca. 1860: J Greenwood, The Little Ragamuffins, 1884; by 1889 (B & L), low s.—3. A variant of, prob. a misprint for, chivy, 'a knife': July 28, 1897, Sessions Papers.—4. A prostitute's bully: prostitutes' and bullies': 1896, F & H; app. † by 1930. Cf. sense 1.

kiddy, adj. Skilful, dexterous: ca. 1819, Anon., The Song of the Young Prig, (ironically) 'Finedraw a coat-tail sure I can't | So kiddy is my famble' (hand); app. † by ca. 1860. Ex kiddy, n., 1.—2. The sense 'smart, fashionable' was prob. always (low) s.: ca. 1815–1900. Moncrieff, 1823. Cf. the n., sense 1.

kiddy, wagering. See wagering kiddy.

kiddy-ken. See kidken.

kiddy-nipper 'is a man out of work among . . . Journeymen Taylors. [He] frequents the Houses of Call, especially on Saturday night, when those in work have received their wages . . . In the course of the evening, the Kiddy-Nipper, who has a pair of scissors about him, sits on the side of the man whom he has destined for his prey, . . . cuts the bottom of his pocket open, and grabbles all his Bit': 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1797, Potter; † by 1896 (F & H). See the separate elements.

kiddy shallow. A male hat, fashionable ca. 1820–30: 1824, J. Wight, Mornings at Bow Street, 'A hat of that cut called a kiddy shallow'; † by 1860. See kiddy, n., 1, esp. at 1812, and shallow.

kiddyish, 'frolicsome, jovial': not c. but s.

kide-lye. See kid lay, reference of 1753.

kidken; also kidden and kiddy-ken. 'Kidden—boys' lodging-houses' (read '. . . house'): 1839, Brandon; 1859, H, 'Kidden, a low lodging house for boys'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1889, B & L, 'Kiddy-ken (thieves), a house frequented by mere children, boys and girls. During the last two years, the increase of profligacy among "kids" of both sexes has been very great'; 1896, F & H (kidden, kid-ken, kiddy-ken); † by 1930. See kid, n., 1 and 2, and kiddy, n., 2.

kidnapper. See kidnapper.

kidlay. See kid lay.

kidling. A junior dandy of the underworld: 1823, Bee, 'If father and son come it in the same style, the latter is a kidling'; † by 1900.

kidment, n. 'A pocket handkerchief, pinned to the pocket with a corner hanging out to entrap thieves'; 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1896, F & H; † by 1920. Prob. ex kid, v., 1 + ment, the S.E. n. ending.—2. The sense, 'humbug, blarney, deceit, deceitful trick' is not c., but low s.

kidment, adj. 'Comical' (Matsell, Vocabulary, 1859); but this is prob. an error—arising from Matsell's hasty reading.

kidnapper. A stealer of human beings, esp. of children; orig. for exportation to the plantations of North America: 1666, Anon., Leathermore's Advice (known also as The Nicker Nicked), in form kid-napper; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1723, D. Defoe, Colonel Jacque. The term > s. ca. 1750; S.E., ca. 1830. It is to be noted that kidnappers worked in gangs: witness D. Defoe, Colonel Jacque, 'He was got among a Gang of Kidnappers, as they were then call'd, being a Sort of wicked Fellows that us'd to Spirit Peoples Children away, that is to snatch them up in the Dark, and stopping their Mouths, carry them to such Houses where they had Rogues, ready to receive them, and so carry them on Board Ships bound to Virginia, and sell them'. Lit., a child-stealer, a stealer of children: see kid, n., 1, and napper.

kidney, 'a waiter' (Leverage, 1925), is not c., but s.—prob. low s. at first.

kidney blanket. 'A short box coat,' John Chapman in The (N.Y.) Sunday News, May 23, 1937; extant. Cf. English s. bum-freezer, 'a dinner jacket'.

kidney pie. The eye: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming: cf. English (s., not c.) mince pie.

kidrig. See kid rig.

kid's eye. A fivepenny piece: 1821, David Haggart, Life (see quot'n at jumper, 4); 1823, Egan's Grose, where it is said to be Scottish c.; † by 1896 (F & H). Of roughly the same size as a child's eye.

kid's man. See kidsman.

kids' pen. A reformatory: 1900, Josiah Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. See pen; lit., 'children's prison'.

kidsman. 'A man who boards and lodges boys, and trains them to be thieves': 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicancy and Crime; 1859, H, 'One who trains boys to thieve and pick pockets successfully'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1869, J. Greenwood; 1879, J. McGowan, Brought to Bay; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; † by 1920. See kid, n., 6.

kidstake. An imitation or a simulation: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on fake.

kidwy. See kid-wy.

kie show, 'wild-beast, or wild-man, show': pitchmen's s., not c. Philip Allingham, Cheappack, 1934.

kiester. See keister.

kife. See kip, n., 1, reference of 1886.

kifer; usually pl. 'Kifers', glossed as 'implements used by burglars', appears in 1846 in G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. xviii.: prob. a corruption of chife, q.v.

kike. A Jew: 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, "'You keep yer tongue for them as needs it, you kike!" he finished, turning suddenly to Morgenstein. "And—" He observed that the Jew's ears . . .'; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; by 1920, low s. 'From the names of many Russian Jew immigrants, which ended in the typical "ki" or "ky". The people were known as "kikis" and the name was shortened to the logical "kike"' (Irwin).—

2. Hence, a Jewish thief: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant.

Kilkenny. 'An old sorry Frize-Coat,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, who does not, however, classify it as c.—app. it had, by ca. 1760, > s. By ca. 1840 or 1850, the term was †. The small Irish town of Kilkenny, on the Nore, has for centuries been noted for its tanneries.

kill, n. A murder: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. Am. coll. die, 'a death'.

kill, v. 'To squash, fix.' 'The shyster killed the rap,' Ersine, 1933; by 1937, s. kill(-)devil, 'rum', is not c., as several dictionary-makers have it; but s. Not even B.E. claims it for c.

kill-man. A physician: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1900. Cf. the synonymous croaker.

kill-simple. Having a homicidal mania: Jan. 30, 1937, Flynn's, Richard Sale; extant. Cf. bull simple and see kill, n.

kilos, seventeen or twenty or twenty-five, etc., etc. A girl or woman aged 17 or 20 or 25, etc.: white-slavers': C. 20. A. Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, 'Some "articles" are from seventeen to twenty kilos, i.e. women from seventeen to twenty years old'—therefore 'underweight' and described as 'fragile', qq.v. Many white-slaving terms are drawn from the j. of shipping, esp. of freight: cf. baggage, export trade.

kilp. See kelp.

kimbau. See kimbaw.

kimbaw. In 1698, B.E., 'Kimbaw, c. to Trick, Sharp, or Cheat; also to Beat severely or to Bully. Let's Kimbaw the Cull, c. Let's Beat that Fellow, and get his Money (by Huffing and Bullying) from him'; repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725, and in Grose, 1785; 1797, Potter, who spells it kimbaw; 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1848, Sinks of London (id.): app. † by 1859 (witness H., 1st ed.), except perhaps in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulum. The semantic idea is: to treat crookedly: cf. the S.E. phrase, 'with arms akimbo'.

kimbaw, come the. To attempt a fraud: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; app. † by 1890. Prob. ex the preceding term.

kimona, kimono. A coffin: 1933, Ersine (latter only); 1935, Hargan; extant. Cf. wooden surtout.

kin. 'Kin, a Thief; He's one of the Kin, let him pike; said of a Brother Rogue whom one of the Gang knows to be a Villain, tho' not one of their own Crew,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; app. † by 1790. Cf. family and family man.—2. A very rare form of ken: 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected; not recorded later.—3. A stone: U.S.A. (—1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; app. † by 1860. But does he mean a stone or small rock, or a stone weight? Cf. Eng. dial. ken, 300 stone weight of cheese or a hundredweight of corn.

kinch. See dingy kinch.

kinchen; usually kinchin; improperly kenchin. Rare except in combination. Perhaps the earliest example of its being found alone is this in Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608, 'The last Ranke of these Runnagates'—or male beggars—'is filled up with Kinchyn Coes; and they are little boyes whose parents (having beene beggers) are dead, or else such as have run away from their maisters, and instead of a trade to live by, follow this kinde of life to be lowsie by. These Kinchins, the first thing they doe is to learne how to Cant, and the onely thing they practise is to creepe in at windoes, or Celler doores'; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley (kinching); Grose, 1785, 'A little child'; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1841, W. Leman Rede, Sixteen String Jack; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus' (kinichin); † by 1800, except in kinchin lay. Other spellings of the word are kinching, kinchyn, kynchen (or -in), and even kitchen (or -in). Etymology: Ger. Kindchen, a little child.—2. Hence, any child: 1698, B.E., 'Let the Harmanbeck trine with his Kinchins about his Colquarron, c. . . . let the Constable Hang with his Children about his Neck'; 1714, Alex. Smith; Grose, 'a little child'; used in U.S.A. by 1794 (Tufts); 1890, J. Greenwood, Jerry Jacksmith; app. † by 1900, except in kinchin lay.—3. Hence, a girl: 1753, John Poulter (see kid, n., 2); Nov. 15, 1836, The Individual; † by 1920.—4. ? A little man: 1785, Grose, where the kinchin entry is none too clear. If genuine, then C. 18. Cf. kinchin cove.

kinchen (or -in), adj. Little: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; but perhaps arising as early as the n. (q.v.); Holme, 1688 (kinchin).

kinchin co(e). In 1562, John Awdeley horse-before-cartly defines thus: 'A Kitchin Co is called an ydle runagate Boy'; 1566, Harman thus: 'A Kynchen Co is a young boye, traden up to suche pevishe purposes as you have harde of other young ympes before, that when he groweth into yeres, he is better to hang then to drawe forth'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, 'And last'—of the male orders of beggars—'the Kinchin-Coes'; see also first quot'n in the preceding entry; 1665, R. Head (kitchin-coe); 1688, Holme, 'Kitchin-coes, little Rogues'; 1698, B.E., 'Kinchin-coes, c. the Sixteenth Rank of the Canting Tribe, being little Children whose Parents are Dead, having been Beggars; as also young Ladds running from their Masters, who '—the lads—'are first taught Canting, then thieving'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose (kinching coe) applies it to the female sex only, but elsewhere correctly to the male sex; † by 1860. See the elements and cf. :— kinchin (or -en) cove. A little man: 1665, R. Head; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; (? Grose, 1785—the entry being ambiguous); 1823, Egan's Grose; app. † by 1859 (witness H., 1st ed.). Ex preceding term.—2. A boy: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; the sole record, except for untrustworthy Matsell. Obviously suggested by kinchin mort.—3. 'A fellow who procures, or steals children for beggars, gipsies, &c.': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1860.—4. 'An inferior officer of police': 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull, where it is spelt kenchin c.; † by 1890.—5. 'A man who robs children': 1859, H; prob. a misapprehension of sense 3.—6. A young thief: U.S.A.: 1848, The Ladies' Repository; by 1937, † (Godfrey Irwin, letter).

kinchin lay, the. Robbing children—esp. young or innocent children—of their money as they walk along the street with it in their hands, and then jostling them to make it appear that they have fallen down: 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; by ca. 1840, adopted in U.S.A. (The Ladies' Repository, 1848); Sept. 13, 1871, The Standard; 1886, A. Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective, p. 34, 'Generally practised by women'; 1887, Baumann; 1889, kinchin mort. 'A Kitchen Mortes is a Gyrle, she is brought at her full age to the Upright man to be broken, and so she is'—i.e., is thereafter—'called a Doxy, until she come to ye honor of an Altham,' Awdeley, 1562; 1566, Harman speaks thus of 'a Kynching Morte': 'A Kynching Morte is a lytle Gyrle: the Mortes their mothers carries them at their backs in their slates, whiche is their shetes, and bryngs them up savagely, tyll they growe to be rype, and soone rype, soone rotten'; 1608, Dekker (see quot'n at doll); 1665, R. Head (kitchin-mort); 1688, Holme, 'Kitchin Mortes, little young Queans'; 1698, B.E., 'Kinchin-mortes, c. the Twenty seventh and last Order of the Canting Crew,' B.E., adding that the 'mortes', if they have no babies, steal baby girls for the purpose; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (kinchin mott); 1809, Andrewes (misprinted king's mott); 1848, Sinks of London (misprinted king's mot); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1870. See the separate elements.

B & L as—wrongly, I think—kinchins' lay; 1896, F & H; 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers; † by 1920. See kinchen, 2, and lay, n., 2.

kinchin prig. A young thief: 1848, The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). Cf. kinchin cove, 6.

kinching. See kinchen.

kinchins' lay. See kinchin lay, reference of 1889.

kindergarten. A college; college: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. college.

king, n. One's king (esp. my king) is the detective handling the case of the crook concerned: South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Cf. king, the.

king, v. 'To lead or direct a mob' (criminal gang): 1925, Leverage; ob. Pregnant use of the S.E. noun.

king, the. The warden of a prison: not so much c. as gen. prison s. It occurs, e.g., in Flynn's, Feb. 14, 1925, p. 705.

king snipe. Section boss of a railroad gang: tramps': C. 20. 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A section foreman, the man who rules the "snipes" . . . Also a steel or construction boss or foreman': but the term should perhaps be classified rather as railroad and construction-gang s. than as tramps' c.; Jim Tully, however, in his article, 'Yeggs' in The American Mercury, April 1933, classifies the 'section boss' sense as a yegg word and therefore current, prob., since ca. 1890. Both nuances were, by 1935, no longer c.

King's College. King's Bench Prison: 1796 (therefore current at least as early as 1791), Grose, 3rd ed.; † by 1900. See college.

King's Head Inn, the. B.E., 1698, 'King's Head Inn, or the Chequer Inn in Newgate-Street, c. the Prison, or Newgate'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., and in Grose, 1785; Nov. 15, 1836, W. H. Smith, in The Individual, 'But because she lately nimm'd some tin, | They have sent her to lodge at the King's-head Inn'; by 1838, superseded by the Queen's Head Inn.

Kings (or king's) mot or mott. See kinchin mort, references of 1809 and 1848.

King's picture. See King's pictures.

King's picture, drawing the. See drawing the King's picture.

King's pictures. Money: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Coin, money';

1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (King's picture); 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1850, except historically. Ex the king's head on coins: cf. Queen's pictures.

King's plate. Fetters: 1738, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account (James Gardiner's Account of Himself), 'I . . . was committed to the Gate-house, and was immediately honoured with bearing the weight of 60 l. of the King's Plate, which I wore upon my Legs for a Month', glossed as 'Meaning the Irons with which he was shackled'; † by 1896 (F & H). By a pun on plate and with reference to the ruling King of England.

Kingston Bridge. See middle bend, the. Ex the arch.

kinichin. See kinchen, 1, reference of 1857.

kink. A criminal: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. bent and S.E. crooked and crook. Perhaps because he has a kink—a decided twist in his moral nature; cf. :—

kinky. (Of a person or an action) criminal; (of goods) stolen: since ca. 1915: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1935, Hargan, 'Dishonest'; March 1941, The American Mercury, John Kobler, 'First stop for a kinky (hot car) is a well-equipped drop'; extant. Ex kink.

kinky, go. To turn coward: Nov. 14, 1925, Flynn's, Joseph F. Fishman, 'To think that Blowser should go "kinky" and squeal on him to save himself!'; Feb. 12, 1927, Flynn's; extant. To develop a kink, to bend, to wilt, to weaken.

kious! or kius! "Kious, Nan, and we'll go gammon her in", glossed as 'be quiet': 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1910. Ex S.E. quiet! on L. quietus.

kip, n. A bed: 1859, Matsell; by 1870, anglicized—if, indeed, it had not orig. been English; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, where (p. 10) it is misprinted kife; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1889, also low s.; by 1895, no longer fairly to be classified as c. Cf. Dutch kippe, 'mean hut, low alehouse'; hore-kippe, 'brothel' (O.E.D.); B & L, however, think that it may be an abbr. of kipsy. The O.E.D. is doubtless right, in that kip was prob., at first, 'a bed in a brothel': the sense 'brothel' occurs in Goldsmith, 1766 (tattering a kip, wrecking a brothel), and may have been c.—it was, at the least, low s.; as 'a brothel', it seems to have > † by 1880, except in Dublin, where, in late C. 19–20, it is low s.; that sense undoubtedly derives ex the Dutch word.—2. Hence: 1883, The Pall Mall Gazette, Sept. 27, 'The common lodging-house, or "kip"' (O.E.D.), a British sense; March 1884, Sessions Papers; March 4, 1889, Sessions Papers; 1892, Montagu Williams, Round London; by 1900, low s., except in U.S.A.—witness M. Garahan, Stiffs, 1923, and Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924.—3. (Ex sense 1 and perhaps earlier than sense 2.) A sleep: British: Nov. 16, 1893, Sessions Papers, 'He [a burglar] said, "I only came here for a kip . . ." . . . kip means sleep, I believe'; by 1895, low s.—4. (Ex sense 2 or sense 1.) 'Kipp. Person sleeping in a building,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: U.S.A.: 1927, Kane, 'Kip . . . a nightwatchman'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—5. A brothel: U.S.A.: C. 20. BVB. Cf. sense 1, q.v. for the etymology.

kip, v.; frequently as vbln., kippling. 'Kipping, playing the truant': 1821, David Haggart, Life Glossary); 1823, Egan's Grose, where it is said to be a Scottish term; app. † by 1896 (F & H). Perhaps ex kip, n., 1 (latter part of entry): to hide in a hut, and thus keep out of the way.—2. To sleep, to lodge: tramps': since ca. 1870: 1889, B & L; by 1889, also low s.; 1896, F & H; 1899, C. Rook, The Hooligan Nights; by 1900, no longer c. in Britain, although it has remained c. in U.S.A., where it is mostly a tramps' word—see, e.g., the quot'n at flop, v., and G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 1915; Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925; Flynn's, Dec. 13, 1926; Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex kip, n., 1 (cf. sense 2).—3. See kipped. Also independently: U.S.A.: 1927, Kane, 'Kip—to watch, as of a nightwatchman'; extant.

kip, tatter a. See kip, n., 1.

kip dough. Money for a bed or for lodging: mostly tramps': since ca. 1918. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. See kip, n., 2.

kip house. 'A tramps' or vagrants' lodging-house': beggars' and tramps': 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; by 1899, American (J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary, 'A lodging-house'); 1910, Rev. G. Z. Edwards, A Vicar as Vagrant; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Terence Horsley, The Odyssey of an Out-of-Work; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1933, Joseph Augustin, The Human Vagabond; 1934, John Brown, I Was a Tramp; 1937, John Worby; 1937 (Sept. 13, letter), Godfrey Irwin, 'Obsolete now, rare in U.S. at any time'; still current in the British Empire—witness, e.g., John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939, and Black, 1943. Cf. kip, n., 2—and 1.

kip jack. A synonym of kip dough: tramps' and beggars': from ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. See the elements.

kip shop. A 'doss house' (common lodging-house): March 1932, The Fortnightly Review, article by T. B. Gibson Mackenzie; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant. A variation of kip house.

kip town. 'A good lodging-house town,' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary, 1899; slightly ob. See kip, n., 1 and 2.

kip-vat. A bed: 1925, Leverage, who spells it kip-vat; extant. By elaboration.

kipp. See kip.

kipped. (Of a building, house, etc.) 'Protected by person sleeping within,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; March 13, 1926, Flynn's; 1931, IA, 'Guarded by a night watchman'; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose; May 2, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack; extant. Cf. kip, n., 4.

kipper; Kipperville. "'Kinda kippers in this house.'" This term "kippers", much used in the heyday of the Bowery—ca. 1870–1910—'had a curious origin. Kippers were any kind of insect pests, and people who were neither of the underworld nor of the respectable, were called kippers, since they were considered to be nuisances to all other people . . . I found that a great many of the semi-Bohemians were called this by the underworld. Greenwich village, then'—ca. 1896–1905—'very far from being professionally Bohemian, but where there were a good many poor and very real artists of various kinds, was often called "Kipperville"', Anon., 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery', Flynn's, April 6, 1929. Cf. the English s. lodgers, 'lice, nits', and kip, v., 2, and 'bed-bugs'; there, in one or all, lies the generic idea, the semantic origin.—2. (Only kipper.) 'Kiphouse, skiphouse, kipper, or skipper, a doss-house,' John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939: tramps' and beggars': since the 1920's. Ex kip, v.

kipping. See kip, v.

kipping-bude. 'A hotel; a lodging place,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See kip, v. and bude.

kipsy, 'a basket', is given in 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct. 1879, as a c. word: but it was S.E. until C. 19, then dial.; its proper sense is 'a small wicker basket'.

kirjalis. 'Who fears? I fear not; come on': 1859, Geo. W. Matsell, Vocabulum; 1896, F & H; † by 1920. Origin?

kirk, n. In the S.E. of Scotland and Northern England, kirk is simply a doublet of church; but its use by the London underworld for 'a church or chapel' (Vaux, 1812), may, ca. 1790–1860, have been c. Cf. kirk-buzzer and cracking a kirk, q.v. at crack, v., 1, reference of 1859. In the U.S.A., it may have been c., dating from ca. 1890; it occurs, e.g., in No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904.—2. A prison: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob.

kirk, v. To put (a person) into jail: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. kirk, n., 2.—2. The sense, 'to visit a church' (Leverage, 1925), is a borderliner: cf. sense 1 of the n.—3. To break into a house while its occupiers are at kirk or church: British: since the 1920's. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. Cf. kirkling, which may constitute the imm. source.

kirk, cracking a, is a variant of kirkling. Part-ridge, 1937. Cf. kirk, v., 3.

kirk-buzzer. 'A fellow that picks pockets in churches': 1859, Matsell—but prob. taken to New York by English thieves; 1896, F & H; slightly ob. S.E. (Scottish) kirk, a church; buzzer, q.v.

kirkling. 'Housebreaking on Sunday evening by finding a house which has been left untenanted while the occupants are all at church (or kirk), or the servants left in charge enticed out': 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; extant. Cf. the preceding entry.

kish-lak. 'To spend the winter in jail,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Origin? The kish element may be a misprint for kirk, n., 2.

kiss-off, n. and v. A dismissal, esp. to the accompaniment of fraud or injury; to dismiss: racketeers': since ca. 1925: July 1931, Godfrey Irwin (the n.); 1934, Convict (the v., women deserting men gone to prison). Ex 'the "Thief's kiss" or cough, a hissing sound made by the pick-pocket to inform his "mob" that he has obtained his loot and is ready to pass it to one of his accomplices and make his escape' (Irwin).

kiss out. To omit (a person) from a project, exclude from sharing the loot: June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; Aug. 19, 1933, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant. To give someone a dismissive kiss.

kiss-the-cross. One in authority: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on boss.

kiss the dog. 'To face the mark while picking his pocket,' Ersine, 1933; extant.

kisser, 'the mouth', is low s.: both in English and derivatively in American (despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing).—2. Hence, in U.S.A.: the face: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1930, low s.—3. A parting, a separation: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.—4. (Ex sense 2: cf. the sense-development of mug, n.)

A photograph: U.S.A.: since the middle 1920's. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937.

kit, 'a fiddle; a dancing-master': s., not e. A New Canting Dict., 1725.—2. In U.S.A.: 'the implements of a burglar': 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Ex a soldier's kit (clothes and equipment).

kit deal. 'A deal requiring the use of a kit. Objected to by "dynamiters" unless the kit is made up of letters from bankers, etc., approving the deal or the principals,' Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering, 1931: commercial underworld: since ca. 1920.

kitchen, touching the. See touching the kitchen.

kitchen co. See kinchin co(e). Awdeley, 1562.

kitchen mechanic. A 'jungle' cook: tramps': since ca. 1920. Stiff, 1931. For the semantics, cf. stew-builder, and the American low s. kitchen canary, 'a domestic servant; a kitchen-hand' (Leverage, 1925).

kitchen mort. See kinchin mort. (Awdeley, 1562, has mortes for mort.)

kitchen moth. 'A child earried for the purpose of drawing sympathy while begging,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Here, kitchen is a corruption of kinchen; moth, here to-day and gone to-morrow.

kitchener. A thief that frequents thieves' kitchens: 1883, James Greenwood, Rag, Tag, & Co., 'In Quiggles's Kitchen'; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; ob.

kitchin co; kitchin mort. See kinchin co(e) and kinchin mort. Both in Awdeley, 1562, though he spells the latter either kitchen mortes or kitchin mortes, the s being perhaps a slip.

kite, n. Paper: certainly itinerant vendors' s.; possibly also tramps' c.: 1851, H. Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 217; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; ob. Ex the fact that kites consist of paper (or cloth) stretched on a wooden frame.—2. Hence, in U.S.A.: a letter: 1859, Matsell; 1889, (see fly a kite, 2); 1896, F & H; 1925, Leverage, 'A letter or note'; Dec. 4, 1926, Flynn's; 1927, Kane; 1928, R. J. Tasker; June 7, 1930, Flynn's; Aug. 2, 1930, Liberty; 1931, IA, 'A letter smuggled out of jail or prison'; 1933, Eagle; March 3, 1934, Flynn's, Major C. E. Russell; 1934, Convict; 1935, Hargan; 1936, Herbert Corey; June 1937, Cavalcade, Courtney R. Cooper; 1938, Castle; extant.—3. 'The chief of a gang of thieves' (F & H): U.S.A.: 1896, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; † by 1920. He 'flies high'.—4. The sense 'worthless cheque' is American commercial s.—not, as has, on several occasions, been stated, e. In the British Empire, however, it is C. 20 e., as, e.g., in Brown, 1931, in Nelson Baylis (private letter), 1932, and in Baker, 1945.—5. A prostitute: U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; extant. Cf. the (low) s. kite, 'a low, mean and dirty fellow' (Leverage, 1925).—6. 'A message per lip,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant. Cf. kite, v., 2.—7. Stomach: since the late 1920's. In, e.g., Axel Braeey, School for Scoundrels, 1934.

kite, v. To move restlessly from place to place: 1859 (see kiting); 1896, F & H, who, however, do not classify it as c.; app. † by 1920, but Rose, 1934, adduces the sense 'to move slowly'. As a kite moves at the control of wind and winder. . . .—2. To send a message, a signal: 1925, Leverage; 1933, Ersine, 'To send a letter out of prison by illegal means'; 1934 (see kiting, 2); Jan. 4, 1936, Flynn's, Jack Callahan, 'A letter which I had "kited" out of the prison'; extant. Cf. kite, n., 2 and 6.—3. To raise, lift, prise open: Nov. 17, 1928, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'You have a neat trick with that jimmy of yours that kites a window without much noise'; extant.—4. 'To issue a cheque which hasn't sufficient backing' (Rose): commercial underworld: 1933, Ersine; 1938, Castle; extant. Ex sense 4 of the n.

kite, fly a or the. See fly a kite and fly the kite.

kite, pull a. 'kite . . . to pull a—, Grimassen schneiden [to grimace]': 1887, Baumann; app. † by 1910.

kite-fisher; kite-fishing. App. throughout C. 20. 'A "Kite-fisher" . . . makes his living by extracting letters from pillar-boxes and robbing them of their contents,' Sidney Felstead, The Underworld, 1923; The Rev. Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, 1925, "Kite-fishing", which is getting letters out of letter-boxes with a piece of bent wire or string covered with bird-lime, used to be a favourite game'; extant.

kite flyer. A passer of worthless cheques: 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open—but prob. current throughout C. 20.

kite lark, the. Stealing cheques from letters in transit, altering and then selling them: since ca. 1910. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. Cf. the next three entries.

kite man. A crook that specializes in cheques and bills of exchange: since ca. 1910. Edgar Wallace, The Double, 1928. Cf. the entry imm. before and that imm. after this.

kite mob. A gang of criminals specializing in the passing of forged or worthless cheques: since ca. 1910: 1930, Geo. Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad. See kite, n., 4.

kites. The practice of forging cheques and/or issuing cheques against a merely nominal deposit: C. 20. James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936. See kite, n., 4, and cf. kite mob.

kiting, n. Moving restlessly from place to place: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1920. Ex the ranging flight of a kite (bird or toy).—2. Smuggling out letters from prisoners: convicts': since ca. 1920 (see kite, v., 2); 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor; March 3, 1934, Flynn's, Major C. E. Russell; extant.

kitten. A pint—oce., a half-pint—pot (for beer): 1812 (see cat and kitten sneaking); 1851 (see cat, 3); 1896, F & H; ob.

kitties, 'effects, furniture; stock in trade' (Grose), is not e. but s.

kittle. A safe: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Safes, like women, are 'kittle eattle'.

kittler, 'one who tickles or pleases', is given by Matsell in his Vocabulum, 1859, as e.—but it almost certainly wasn't!

kitty. "Forty [cents] out of every dollar you cop out—understand?"—"Who gets the rest?"—"The mob an' the kitty. The kitty is the fall-money reserve. A mob like ours ought to carry a $3000 kitty all the time. It's drawn on when one of us gets arrested an' has to hire lawyers an' get bail. If you get a tumble, for instance, the rest of us'll have to stand by you—see?"': Josiah Flynt, The Rise of Roderick Clowd, 1903; ob. Ex the kitty of eard-games.—2. A prison: 1925, Leverage: rare.—3. 'A kit of tools,' Leverage, 1925: since ca. 1910.—4. An indefinite term of imprisonment; Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1945. Ex kath.

kitty hop. A 'Heads I win, tails you lose' or other cheap fraud; a mean or petty double-cross: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

kittys. See kitties.

kixes is an erroneous form of kickseys, q.v. at reference for 1753.

kiyi. A giving of information to the police; a betrayal: 1925, Leverage; extant. Echoic; imitative of a howl, a squeal. In Am. s., it = a dog.

klapped, 'arrested', is almost certainly Matsell's error (Vocabulary, 1859) for knapped (= napped): see knap, v., 2.

klein crimepies. A minor crime: South Africa: late C. 19-20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Orig. (and still) Afrikaans c., adopted by others; lit., 'small (klein) little crimes'; crimepie = crime + normal Afrikaans diminutive suffix pie corrupted to pie.

klem. 'To strike. "Klem the bloke," hit the man': 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; app. † by 1930.

klep, n. and v., 'a thief; to thieve': not c., but low s. B & L, 1889, 'From kleptomania'.

klotz. A stick, a club: 1925, Leverage; extant.—2. Hence (?), a stupid or very foolish person: 1925, Leverage; extant. (Ex German.)

knab. See nab, v.

knagger. A conspirator: 1925, Leverage; extant. Yiddish?

knap, n. Head, both lit. and fig.: 1552, Gilbert Walker, Diceplay, 'The knapp of the case, the Goodman of the house calleth secretly unto him the third person'. Cf. nap, n., 3.—2. A variant of nap, n., 2: 1741, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. V, 'I had been secreted all day for Fear of a Knap'; † by 1820.

knap, v. To accept, receive; to take, to steal: 1740, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. 5 (Wm Meers), 'Says Coates, lets Knap this Chance', glossed as 'take this Opportunity'; Dec. 1777, Sessions Papers, 'A Peter they had just knapp'd'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To steal; take; receive; accept . . . to knap a clout, is to steal a pocket-handkerchief; . . . in making a bargain, to knap the sum offered you, is to accept it'; 1821, D. Haggart; 1823, Egan's Grose; 'To knap seven or fourteen pen'orth, is to receive sentence of transportation for seven or fourteen years'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds (see etter); in 1864, H. (3rd ed.) classifies it as prison c.; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; extant.—2. To apprehend, to arrest: 1797, Potter, 'Knapped, taken apprehended'; 1809, Andrewes; 1889, B & L (as an Americanism); 1896, F & H (id.); slightly ob. Variant of nap, v., 2.—3. To catch (a disease): 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To knap the glim, is to catch the venereal disease'; 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1889 (B & L), the glim was low s. for gonorrhœa. Cf. nap it.—4. 'Speaking of a woman supposed to be pregnant, it is common to say, I believe Mr. Knap is concerned, meaning that she has knapp'd': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890. A specific application of the 'receive' nuance of sense 1.—5. As a term in dicing, it is j., not c.

knap a jacob . . . 'Knapping a jacob from a danna-drag. This is a curious species of robbery, or rather borrowing without leave, for the purpose of robbery; it signifies taking away the short ladder from a nightman's cart, while the men are gone into a house; the privy of which they are employed emptying, in order to effect an ascent to a one-pair-of-stairs window, to scale a garden-wall, &c., after which the ladder, of course, is left to rejoin its master as it can': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1896 (F & H). See knap, v., 1, and Jacob.

Knap is concerned, Mr. See knap, v., 4.

knap of the case. See knap, n.

knap seven or fourteen penn'orth (or pen'worth, etc.). 'To receive sentence of transportation for seven or fourteen years': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1910. See knap, v., 1, and penn'orth.

knap the ding. See ding, knap the.

knap the stoop. See stoop, nap the.

knap turnips. See turnips.

knapper. See next two entries.

knapper of (k)nappers. See napper of nappers.

knapper's poll. A sheep's head: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1896 (F & H). For knapper, see napper, 2.

knapping. See napping.

knapping a jacob. See knap a jacob.

knapping(-)jigger. A turnpike-gate: 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Dub at a Knapping-Jigger, a collector of taxes at a turnpike-gate'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; † by 1890. Lit., 'a catching door'; see knap, v., 1, and jigger, 1.

knark. See nark, n., 1.

knecker. A low cheat: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. knagger. Perhaps cf. Ger. Knecke, an ugly old woman.

kneeling at the altar. Pederasty: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; BVB, 1942.

kneipe. A speakeasy: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. Ger. Kneip, 'a drinking (bout)'—'a cabaret' (though only in compounds).

knick; usually in pl. Valuables; objets d'art: Nov. 17, 1928, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'Three Curious Burglars', (professional burglar log.) "'House looked right for a couple grand in kale and knicks an' all told I git only a couple centuries"' ; extant. Short for knick-knack.

knickers, get the. To be sentenced to penal servitude: C. 20. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941, 'Convicts once wore knickerbocker suits'.

knickers and stockings. A sentence to penal servitude: C. 20. Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House, 1932, 'They had prophesied that I should get knickers and stockings, by which they meant a lagging'. See prec. entry.

knife it! Be silent!: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee, 'Separate, divide, discontinue it, or go away'; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by ca. 1860, it was low s. Cf. the coll. cut it out!, which means 'stop doing that!' and 'shut up!'

knight, as an underworld term, occurs as early as 1562, when Awdeley, in The Fraternity of Vagabondes, speaks of a fingerer or cheater as 'this nimble fingred knight'; knight of the post, q.v., occurs in Robert Greene's Second Conny-catching, 1592; knight of the blade, or a Hector, occurs in A Notable History of the Knights of the Blade, commonly called Hectors or, St. Nicholas Clerkes, 1652, but this term for a ruffling adventurer living none too honestly by his wits is prob. to be considered as s., not c., and in 1698 B.E. defines it as 'a Heetor or Bully'; knight of the road, 1698, B.E., 'the chief High-wayman best Mounted and Armed, the Stoutest Fellow among them'; in 1785, Grose, by whose time knight of the post was prob. †, has also knight of the blade and knight of the road, both of them no longer e.; his other knight terms (. . . rainbow, a footman; . . . needle, or shears or thimble, a tailor) were never lower than s. For a full list of the knight phrase-terms, see my A Dict. of Slang, 3rd ed., 1949.—2. 'A silly fellow': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'A poor silly fellow'; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880. A class-conscious pejorative.

knight of Alsatia, 'a fellow that treats the whole company' (Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859): a ghost phrase. There is a confusion with squire of Alsatia (see Alsatia . . .); see also squire.

knight of the blade. See the 'knight', as an underworld term' entry.

knight of the brush and moon. An idle, drunken fellow: ca. 1790–1840. Potter, 1797.

knight of the post is recorded for 1580 by The O.E.D., which unhesitatingly classifies it as S.E.; but until ca. 1750, after which it has been preserved only historically, and is indubitably S.E., the term was, I think, slang and, esp. in C. 17, it often verged on and sometimes merged into, or even >, e. Greene, in 1592, does not seem to think it e. when, in The Second Conny-catching, he writes: 'The prigar, when he hath stolne a horse, and hath agreed . . . to sel his horse, bringeth to the toulter . . . two honest men, either appparelled like eittizens, or plaine country yeomen, & they not onely affirme, but offer to depose, that they know the hors to be his . . . although perhaps they never saw man nor horse before, and these perjurde Knaves, bee commonly old Knights of the post, that are foisted off from being taken for baile at the Kings beneh, or other plaees, & seeing for open perjuries they are refused, there they take that course of life, and are wrongly called querries' or sureties; but B.E., 1698, classifies it as e. and defines it thus: 'A Mercenary common Swearer, a Prostitute to every Cause, an Irish evidence'. Perhaps the whipping-post is understood, for perjurers were often punished thereat. For the e. connotation of knight itself, see knight; and for a description of the procedure and nature of these knights of the post, see esp. E. S.'s pamphlet of 1597, The Discoverie of the Knights of the Poste . . . Wherein is shewed . . . many lewde actions, and subtill devises, which are daily practised by them: to the great abuse of the most honorable Councelers, learned Judges, and other grave Majestrates: And also to the defrauding and utter undoing of a greate number of her Majesties good and loyall subjects, wherein one of these knights says to another, "How doe all our ancient acquaintance ye good oath-takers, or common baylers: Alias the Knights of the Poste, the Lordes of lobs pound, and heires apparent to the pillory: who are as ready to baile men out of prison, being then well pleased for their paines, as Tiron is in playing the traitour without eauses".

knight of the road. See knight.

knight of the rumpad. A highwayman: 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial, Appendix No. 4. But this is not, I think, genuine e.: it is, prob., literary c. See rum pad.

knip, v., is a rare and incorrect variant of nip (to cut). It does not occur later than ca. 1850.

knob, 'the head', is not e., but s.; this applies as much to the U.S.A. as to the British Empire. A variant of nob, 1: q.v.—2. A double-headed penny, used in the gambling game of two-up: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Ex sense 1; cf. Australian s. head them, 'to play two-up'.

knob head. A mule; a dolt: since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Perhaps ex '(k)nob = the head'; cf. jug head.

knock, n. Information; intimation; veto; an official report, instruction, warning: C. 20. Donald Lowrie, repeating Ed Morrell's remark—made ca. 1905—about San Quentin (where Lowrie was a prisoner in 1901–11), 'I knew there would be a strong knoek registered against me here, but I made up my mind [that] if they gave me half a ehance I'd do the right thing and try to earn my way out on the square' (My Life in Prison, 1912); 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 'She put in the knock when we offered her fifty-fifty to let us take that Spedden guy', i.e. vetoed the proposal; by 1935, ob.; by 1945, virtually †. Ex knock, v., 3.—2. A prison sentence: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. jolt, n., 1.

knock, v., 'to knoek a woman, to have carnal knowledge of her' (Grose, 1785), was never c.—2. To rob (a place), esp. k. the lob, to rob the till: 1767, Sessions Papers (4th Session of Sir R. Kite, trial of J. Harris and J. Heaheer), 'I heard him say he got twelve shillings once by knocking the lobb'; then esp. knock a peter, 'to explode open a bank-safe and then rob it'—which is Ameriean (Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924, Glossary, s.v. 'Blowing peter'), though usually in the form knock off, q.v. For the semantics, cf. strike, v., 1.—3. To inform to the police: U.S.A.: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, "'I ain't goin' to knoek against you; nobody'll ever find out from me 't you an' that flatty couldn't hit it off together"''; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft (Glossary); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, p. 77, which shows that by that date the term was also police s.—a fact confirmed by A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, 1906. In C. 20 Canada, however, the term has remained e.—anon. letter, June 9, 1946. Ex knoeking at a police-station door.—4. Short for knock off, 4 (to kill, murder): U.S.A.: 1936, Charles Francis Coe, G-Man; extant.—5. V.i., to welsh: raececourse gangs' and crooks': C. 20. Partridge, 1937. I.e., to give the punters a hard knoek.

knock ?, do you hear anything. See hear anything . . .

knock-about, n. One who lives by his wits, a 'wide boy'; a professional criminal: Australian: since ca. 1920. Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939—where (p. 312) it is contrasted with square head (q.v.). One who 'knoeks about the world'.

knock about the bub. 'To hand or pass about the liquor' (H, 2nd ed., 1860), is not e., but low s. of late C. 18–mid-19. George Parker, 1781. Orig., bub was e.

knock against. See knock, v., 3.

knock at the door; knock the habit. To abstain from drugs; to be taking a drug-cure: addicts': resp. since ca. 1930, ca. 1920. BVB. Cf. kick, or be kicking, a habit.

knock-down, n. (A giving of) information to the police: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. knock, v., 3.

knock down, v. To sentence (a person) to imprisonment or to death: to convict: 1811, Lex.

Bal. (see quot'n at college cove); app. † by 1890. Such a sentence 'floors' the convicted person.—2. To steal part of (a sum of money); to rob one's accomplices: U.S.A.: 1882, McCabe, New York, 'Knocking down or appropriating a modest sum to his own use'; 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, 'It was then that Mason and I had some trouble. I accused him of "knocking down" at that time'; by 1896 (F & H) it was s. Cf. knock, v., 2.

knock down for a crop. 'To be knocked down for a crop; to be condemned to be hanged': 1811, Lex. Bal. (at crop); app. † by 1890. An elaboration of the preceding.

knock-in, n., 'a person bidding illicitly at an auction', is not c., but s.

knock in, v. To take a hand at cards: card-sharpers' c. >, by 1900, card-players' s.: 1896, F & H. Cf. chip in (to participate) and chips (counters, in card-playing).

knock-off, n. See knock-off, on the.—2. A murder; a gang-killing: U.S.A.: 1936, Charles Francis Coe, G-Man; by 1940 (John G. Brandon, Gang War!), English also; extant. Ex sense 4 of the v.

knock off, v. 'To give over Thieving' (A New Canting Dict., 1725), may possibly have been c. during the approximate period 1710–50. A 'phrase borrowed from the blacksmith' (Egan's Grose, 1823): it is, therefore, an underworld application of the (s. > coll.) knock off, to cease.—2. To steal; to steal from, to rob: U.S.A.: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'Knocking off a peter—breaking the door of a safe' (glossed by Godfrey Irwin thus, 'More broadly and just as truly, stealing from a safe after breaking in, or while safe is unguarded'); 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 'I knew where there was a bank . . . that could be "knocked off"': by 1924, British too—witness Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 1924; 1927, Kane (to knock off a bank); 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; March 15, 1930, Flynn's, John Wilstach; 1930, T. Whyte Mountain, Life in London's Prisons; 1931, Brown; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1933, George Orwell, Down and Out; 1933, George Ingram, Stir; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; by 1935, low s. in Britain (as in Geo. Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade). In Britain, however, the term seems to have been adopted ex nautical (derivatively, military) s. current throughout C. 20. Perhaps ex knocking things off a stand, a shelf, a barrow, and then making off with them.—3. To arrest: since ca. 1920: English (see its use in George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life, 1930) before ca. 1922, it > American; Feb. 6, 1926, Flynn's (p. 58); 1927, Charles F. Coe, Me—Gangster; 1928, H. Wilson Harris, Human Merchandise; 1929–31, Kernôt; by 1929 (C. F. Coe, Hooch), also police s.; by 1930, no longer classifiable as c. in U.S.A., nor, after ca. 1935, in Britain; 1931, Brown; 1934, B. Leeson, Lost London.—4. To kill; to murder: U.S.A.: March 15, 1930, Flynn's, John Wilstach (see quot'n at finger man); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1933, George Ingram, Stir; May 2, 1936, Flynn's Broadway Jack; 1937, Courtney R. Cooper; extant. Either short for knock off his spot or a development from sense 2.—5. (Cf. sense 3.) To raid: racketeers' (U.S.A.): 1930, Burke, 'The feds knock off the scatter'; 1934, Rose; by 1939 (David Hume, Heads You Live) it was British also; extant.—6. To force (a person) to leave town: U.S.A.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—7. (Ex sense 2.) To kidnap: U.S.A.: 1935, James Spenser, The Five Mutineers, 'My mob . . . is going to knock off Eddie Munson . . . We've been trailin' him around for weeks, and we know just where we can pick him up and stow him away for a while'; extant.—8. (Ex sense 4.) To die, murdered or gang-killed: U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. Castle, 1938, 'I let 'em have it—fas'. They knocked off without a whisper.—9. See knock off a job.

knock-off, on the. Engaged in theft or in burglary: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1939, James Curtis, What Immortal Hand; extant. See knock off, 2.

knock off a job. To commit a crime: 1932, Anon., Dartmoor from Within. Cf. sense 2 of knock off, v.

knock-off gee. A paid killer: since before 1934. In, e.g., Castle, 1938.

knock (someone) off his spot. "I'll have him knocked off his spot for you. That's the kind of guy I am."—"Knocked off his spot . . . That means killed—murdered", Carroll John Daly, 'The Right to Silence', Flynn's, Aug. 10, 1929; extant. Cf. knock off, v., 4.

knock-out, 'a hanger-on at auctions', is s. But the sense, 'division of the illicit spoils among these illicit hangers-on' is on the verge of c.: 1873, James Greenwood, In Strange Company.—2. Knock-outs, 'dice', is on the borderline between c. and s.: 1896, F & H.

knock-out drop; usually pl., drops of some liquid drug put into a drink to stupefy a prospective victim (of, e.g., robbery): 1896, G. Ade, Artie (O.E.D.); 1903, Owen Kildare, My Mamie Rose, 'The pleasing concoction called "knock-out drops"': 1904, Ex-Inspector Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals, 'The use of drugs . . . or what is more familiarly known in criminal circles as "knock-out" drops is common enough in most cities. What is known as "knock-out" drops is chloral hydrate, and from fifteen to thirty grains of it produces a sleep that lasts three hours'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1905, low s.; by 1910, gen. s. But, in C. 20 U.S.A., knock-out drops is also a collective for narcotics in gen.: BVB, 1942. Ex knock-out, 'to render (a person) unconscious'.

knock-over, n. A kidnapping: June 4, 1933, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch, "'Ordinarily I wouldn't take a junkie out on a knock-over," said Gene'. Ex senses 2, 3, of the v.—2. A burglar: June 18, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; Aug. 10, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra; extant. Ex sense 2 of the v.—3. A killing: March 25, 1933, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly; extant. Cf. sense 5 of the v.—4. An arrest: since ca. 1930. Castle, 1938. Ex sense 1 of:—

knock over, v. To arrest: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict; Oct. 31, 1936, Flynn's; 1938, Castle, 'They knocked him over f'r using his [law] offices as a collection agency'; extant. I.e., to cause (a person) to fall.—2. To rob (a person), esp. by pickpocketry; to steal: July 7, 1928, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'When Dips Fall Out' (former nuance); Feb. 6, 1932, Flynn's, Milo Ray Phelps (latter); by ca. 1933, also Australian, as in Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, 1941; extant. Cf. knock off, 2.—3. (Owing something both to sense 1 and to sense 2.) To waylay—to stop—and rob; to capture: 1929, Charles Francis Coe, Hooch, (bootlegger log.) 'The Federal mob just knocked over two of our trucks [carrying liquor]. One was goin' into my territory an' the other into Marty Mitchell's'; extant.—4. To raid (e.g., a club); to hold up and rob: 1931, Godfrey Irwin (former nuance); 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 'Knocking over a can' (robbing a bank); 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra, 'This hotel we're going to knock over'; extant. Cf. knock off, 5.—5. To kill: March 25, 1933, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly; extant.—6. To fire (someone) from a prison job: convicts': since ca. 1930. Castle, 1938.

knock the lob. See knock, 2.

knock the habit. See knock at the door.

knock under, v.i. 'To waive one's opinion; to succumb': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1910, no longer c.

knocked out. 'Rendered unconscious by drugs,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic: C. 20. Ex boxing.

knocker. 'One who speaks ill of another,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; by 1915, s. Ex s. knock, 'to criticize adversely'.—2. In pl., knockers, the fists: 1925, Leverage; extant.—3. Esp. in cop (or get) a knocker, to be arrested: British tramps': since ca. 1920. The Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932. Prob. ex knock off, v., 3.—4. A dynamite cap: mostly bank-robbers': ca. 1890–1920; then ob., as Convict, 1934, makes clear.—5. One who is trying to break himself of the drug habit: since ca. 1925. BVB. He desires to knock off or cease.

knocker-off. A thief that specializes in motor-cars: since ca. 1918. In, e.g., Edgar Wallace, The Door with Seven Locks, 1926. Ex knock off, v., 2.

knocking joint. The stand of a bookmaker that intends, if unlucky, to welsh: racecourse gangs' and sharpers': since before 1932. Partridge, 1937 (on letter from 'John Morris', 1932). Cf. knock, v., 5.

knocking shop. A brothel: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1889, B & L; 1938, James Spenser, Crime against Society; 1943, Black; extant. See knock, v., 1.

knolly. See knowledge box, 2, ref. of 1933.

knose, 'tobacco; smoke', in Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859, arises from a misreading of nose-my-knacker.

know life, in the underworld of ca. 1790–1840, meant: to know the crimes, tricks, ways of criminals, but not necessarily to be a criminal oneself. (Vaux, 1812.) Compare the spiv's attitude.

knowing cull is mentioned in Potter's Dict. of Cant and Flash, 1797, without definition; app. it means a man conversant with the tricks practised by prostitutes and was current ca. 1780–1850. Here, cull = fellow.

knowledge box. The English sense, 'the head', has always been s. (Grose, 1785).—2. A school-house; a school: prob. throughout C. 20: U.S.A.: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1931, Stiff, 'Country school house where hobos sometimes sleep'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, with derivative synonym, knolly; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's.

knowledge factory. A prison school, esp. at Sing Sing; 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; extant. Cf. prec.

knuck, n. 'Knuck, Knuckler, or Knuckling-Cove, a pickpocket, or person professed in the knuckling art': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, 'The knucks in quod did my schoolmen play' and 'An universal knocking of knuckles by knucklers'; current in U.S.A. by ca. 1840, as in The National Police Gazette, Sept. 20, 1845; E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851; Matsell, Vocabulary, 1859; 1877, Bartlett, Americanisms, 4th ed.; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H (as an Americanism); 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood (U.S.A.); 1904, Life in Sing Sing (where it is spelt nuck); 1927, Kane (U.S.A.); app. it was † by 1900 in England, and by 1930 in U.S.A. Short for knuckler.—2. A knuckle-duster: U.S.A.: C. 20. In, e.g., W. R. Burnett, The Giant Swing, 1933; Ersine, 1933, 'Brass knuckles'.

knuck, v. To steal by pickpocketry: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miserieis of New York, 'It's enough to break my heart to see a man of your talent and standing forced to prig prancers, knuck tickers, and go on the low sneaks'; 1896, F & H; 1925, Leverage; † by 1937 (Irwin). Ex the n.

knucker; knucksman. Variants of knuckler (a pickpocket): 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), both forms; April 19, 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by M. Acklom (knucker); † by 1937 (Irwin). Ex knuck, v.

knuckle, n. 'Those only are stiled Knuckles who confine themselves to the picking pockets of watches, snuff-boxes, pocket-books, and money, and most of them are so successful as to be enabled to live in the style of gentlemen; there is scarce a place of entertainment but some of these gentry find access to There is generally two goes together, one is the Knuckle, and the other the Gammon, (the person who Stalls for him) that is keeps before the person they mean to rob, to prevent their going on and [to] receive the property the moment it is got,' Anon., Thieving Detected, 1777; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1896 (F & H). Perhaps ex the skilful employment of one's knuckles in the act of theft.—2. Hence, the knuckle, this particular dodge: 1789, G. Parker, † by 1890.

knuckle, v. To steal: perhaps implied in knuckle, n., 1, in 1777; 1796 (therefore at least as early as 1791), Grose, 3rd ed., 'To Knuckle one's Wipe. To steal his handkerchief'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To pick pockets, but chiefly applied to the more refined branch of that art, namely, extracting notes, loose cash, &c., from the waistcoat or breeches pocket, whereas buzzing is used in a more general sense'—repeated in Egan's Grose, 1823; 1859, H; 1889, B & L, 'To pick pockets': 1896, F & H; † by 1940. Ex the n.—2. (Concerning dog-stealing) 'The only safe way is to knuckle 'em—to catch 'em up with a good choking grip, so that they ain't got a instant to give mouth, and then give 'em one on the top of the head with the knuckles to knock the senses out of 'em tempory A little too hard you crack his skull; a little too soft you only set him yelping': dog-stealers': 1885, James Greenwood, A Queer Showman; extant.—3. To fight (a person) with one's fists: to pummel: 1896, F & H; ob.

knuckle, down on the. See knuckle-bone . . .

knuckle, (go) on or upon the. (To go out) exercising 'the knuckle' (see knuckle, n., 1): 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'I know you are a bad one upon the knuckle, or else you should have your full wack'; 1896, F & H (go on the knuckle); ob.

knuckle(-)bone, down on the; down on the knuckle. Destitute; penniless; hard-up and homeless: Aug. 4, 1883, The Daily Telegraph (the longer phrase); 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747, "S'elp me never, I was down on the knuckle when I got there"—London, after three months in gaol elsewhere—"and no horror"; 1896, F & H (the longer phrase); by 1910, low s.; by 1940, slightly ob. Cf. ribby.

knuckle confounders; knuckle dabs. Ruffles: 1785, Grose, who does not classify either term as c.; prob. neither was ever c.

knuckle-duster, 'an instrument placed across the knuckles of the four fingers of one's stronger hand with a view to injurious fisticuffs', is, orig., American c.: Feb. 15, 1859, The Times (cited by 'Ducange Anglicus', 2nd ed., 1859); by 1875, Am. s.; and by 1885, English s. There is prob. a reference to coll. dust a person's jacket, 'to thrash him'; one does this with what one has on one's knuckles.

knuckler. A pickpocket: 1792, Sessions Papers, Feb., p. 121, 'I saw Pearce, he had a hat on with what they call the Knuckler's cock' (where cock = 'tilt')—admittedly a problematic example; 1801, The Life, Adventures, and Opinions of Col. George Hanger, 'Who is such an adept in the art of frisking a ken, trapping a scamp, or hobbling a nuckler?'; 1812, J. H. Vaux (see quotation at knuck, n.); 1859, H; 1874, M. Clarke, For the Term of His Natural Life; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1889, B & L; app. † by 1896 (F & H). Ex knuckle, v., 1.

knuckling is the n. and adj. corresponding to knuckle, v., 1. (J. H. Vaux, 1812; E. Z. C. Judson, 1851.)

knuckling cove. A pickpocket: 1811, Lex. Bal. (see quot'n at clean, adj., 1); 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1900. Ex knuckle, v.; cf. knuckle, n.

knucksman. See knucker.

knuller, 'a casual chimney sweep', is not c., but s. So too knulling.

kok. To inform on a friend, companion, accomplice: 1925, Leverage; extant. Perhaps a perversion of knock, v., 3.

kokomo. See cokomo.

kokum. Sham kindness: Australian convicts': 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; † by 1914. Cf. cocum, n. and adj.

kone. Counterfeit money: 1859, Matsell; from ca. 1870, the usual form was coney, q.v.; 1889, B & L (with variant cone); 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; in C. 20, also Australian—as in Baker, 1942.

koneyacker (The National Police Gazette, Jan. 20, 1846); koniacker. See coniacker.

konoblin rig. See conoblin rig.

konyacker. See coniacker.

kop. An occ. variant of cop.

kop-hou soos n' Jood, 'to be as sharp as a Jew'; Jy hou jou mond soos a gramophone, 'You talk too much'; Ek sal jou record breek, 'I'll stop you from talking'; Hou jou, V, 'Keep quiet!': Afrikaans c. phrases and recurrent warnings: C. 20. The first: The Cape Times, May 23, 1946; the other three: letter of May 23, 1946, from C. P. Wittstock. In these phrases, hou = 'have; hold'; soos = (so) as; like; mond = 'mouth'; Ek sal breek = 'I shall break'; jou = 'you'; 'V' may perhaps = Dutch verdacht, 'suspicious'.

kopeek(-)gleaner. A (petty) thief: 1929–31, Kernôt; slightly ob. He does not disdain trifling moneys, nor things worth but a kopeek.

kopper is a rare variant (B & L, 1889) of copper, n., 1.

kosh, n. See cosh.

kosher. See cosher.—2. Innocent, guiltless; irreproachable, clean: U.S. racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'Listen, shamus, you got me wrong. I'm strictly kosher'; 1934, Rose, 'Above Reproach . . . kosher'; ibid., 'Not guilty . . . kosher'; 1938, Castle; extant. Ex the Jewish sense (as in kosher food).

kotey. See quota, reference of 1823.

kraal; kraaler. A prison; a prison warder: 1925, Leverage; extant. An adaptation of the South African kraal, 'stockaded village, hence a stockade'.

kracksman is an eccentric American spelling of cracksman: 1847, The National Police Gazette, April 10.

kroo. 'A Negro or other coloured person' (Leverage, 1925): not c., but (low) s.

krum. Of criminal nature or practices; thievish: 1925, Leverage; extant. Short (and then disguised?) for crummy.

krun's joint. An asylum for the insane: 1925, Leverage; ob. Crumbs (or crums) joint?

krupp. A large revolver: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the great German armaments-firm of Krupp.

kuter. Twenty-five cents: from ca. 1910. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931; 1934, Convict, who spells it cuter. 'Merely a play on the word "quarter" (of a dollar)': Irwin. Not to be confused with cuter and cutor.

kye. Eighteenpence (1874, H): not c., but costermongers' s. A shortening of:—

kye-bosh. A piece, or the sum, of one shilling and six pence: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. xxiii, 'K was a Kye-bosh, that paid for his treat; L was a Leaf that fell under his feet'; 1864, H, 3rd ed. (kibosh); by 1896 (F & H) it was costers' s. Kye = 18, bosh = pence: Yiddish.

kynchen or -in. See kinchin.

kypsey, 'a basket', is not c.—despite several lexicographers. It is S.E.; † except in dialect.

L

La Grange necklace. 'When Bounce came out of the box he also received a "pickshack" [a bar of steel attached to the leg] and a "La Grange necklace", the latter being explained as 'a heavy iron collar and five feet of heavy chain': Georgia convicts': 1932, Robert E. Burns, I Am a lab; labs. A kiss; the lips: 1925, Leverage: not c., but s. Ex L. labium, 'a lip'.

Fugitive; extant. Ex the locality of a big Georgia prison.

label. To hit, strike, thrash (a person): South Africa: C. 20. Letter, May 23, 1946, C. P.

Wittstock, 'To hit a man . . . to tune him, label him'; The Cape Times, June 3, 1946, Alan Nash, 'To hit hard: Tune him, label him full of dents'. To set one's mark or signature on him.

labor-skate. A labor-union official: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'So I says to the labor-skate, "Screw, monkey! I'm a noble on this job, see?"'; extant. As elsewhere, skate is derogatory.

lace, v., 'to thrash', is not c., but s.—despite various uncritical lexicographers. Not even, I think, in the U.S.A. has it ever been c.; nevertheless it may be as well to record that Jackson & Hellyer include it in their glossary, where it is defined as 'To slam, punch, beat'. Presumably euphemistic.

lace, adj. Without money, penniless: South Africa: C. 20. (C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946.) Origin? Perhaps via Afrikaans ex Dutch laas, 'alas!'

lace curtains. 'Whiskers, esp. when full and verdant,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': C. 20. Cf. face lace and wind-tormentors.

laced, 'spirituous' (as in laced coffee), is not c., as B & L, 1889, classify it.

laced mutton, 'a woman, esp. a prostitute', was never c.

latch, v. See the 1859 reference of latch, v.

lackin. A wife: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, where also spelt laken and lakin; extant. Either ex dial. lakin, 'a plaything, a toy', or more prob. ex Shelta lakin (see larkin).

lad of (or on) the cross. A thief: ca. 1880–1910. F & H, 1896. See cross, n., 1.

lad of the village. See lads of . . .

lad o(f) wax, a cobbler, is classified by Barrère & Leland, 1889, as c.; it dates from ca. 1790 and > † ca. 1910. Ex the wax used in cobbling.

ladder to rest, go up the. To be hanged: 1785, Grose. Almost certainly this was never a c. term, but s.—perhaps journalistic s. Likewise, mount the ladder and go up a ladder to bed.

laddle. A lady: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; † by 1900. Would-be humour.

lads, the. 'Those individuals who make a living, not by downright thieving, but by victimising and deluding the unwary, by sleight-of-hand devices such as the "purse trick" and the "confidence" dodge, and by various games pronounced by the authorities to be illegal': 1885, James Greenwood, A Queer Showman; 1888, J. Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; ob. Perhaps ex the next; cf. wide boy and boys.

lads of the village. 'Thieves of either kind, who congregate on certain spots': 1823, Bee; app. † by 1880.

lady, 'a very crooked, deformed and ill-shapen Woman' (B.E., 1698), esp. a hunchbacked woman, is not c., but s. Cf. lord, a hunchback.—2. A well-dressed woman that, with an accomplice waiting outside to take over the goods, pilfers from, e.g., a jeweller's shop while she wastes much time over some trifling purchase: 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary (I, 27–30), whence it appears that she may also create a disturbance in the street to enable her accomplice to make a getaway: app. † by 1920.—3. 'The victims [of homosexuals] are criminally'—i.e., among criminals—'called "punks"; they are also known as "fags", "gonsils", and "ladies",' Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor, 1934: U.S. convicts': since ca. 1920. Cf. the homosexual sense of girl.

lady and gentleman (or ladies and gentlemen) racket man. 'One who specializes in the theft of cocks and hens': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 26; in C. 20, also Australian (Baker, 1942). By euphemistic pun.

Lady Green. The prison chaplain: 1869, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H, 'A clergyman; specifically the prison chaplain'; † by 1920. Perhaps ex his 'greenness' in dealing with convicts.

lag, n. For lag of duds, see lage of duds: which covers the rare lag (for lage), 'water'.—2. Arrest; imprisonment: 1760, Anon., Come all you Buffers gay (a song in The Humourist of that date), 'Then at the Old Bailey your'—you're—'found, | And d—n you he'll tip you the Lag'; app. † by 1820. Cf. lag, v., 1.—3. Hence (?), a man transported as a convict: 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, The London Guide; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 'A returned transport'; 1859, H. Kingsley, Geoffrey Hamlyn (of an ex-convict); 1859, H., 'A returned transport, or ticket-of-leave convict'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); since by 1865 or so, any convict, as in A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; 1885, A. Griffiths, Fast and Loose; 1885, M. Davitt; 1887, G. Manville Fenn, This Man's Wife; 1894, Price Warung, Tales of the Early Days; 1896, F & H; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2; 1902, James Greenwood, The Prisoner in the Dock; 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow; 1914, M. Macnaghten, Days of My Years; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1925, E. Bowen-Rowlands, In Court and Out of Court, "'Screws" are not always brutal to "laggs"'; 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1928, J. K. Ferrier, Crooks and Crime; 1930, T. W. Mountain, Life in London's Prisons; 1933, Ersine (U.S.A.), 'A convict'; extant.—4. Hence, transportation; a sentence of transportation as a convict: 1818, The London Guide; 1821, David Haggart, Life (see spunk); 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'Into the Jug for a lag was cast'; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1842, P. Egan, Captain Macheath, 'Never fear the lag'; Feb. 12, 1844, Sessions Papers; † by 1896 (F & H).—5. Hence, a transport ship for convicts: 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1870.—6. Short for old lag: 1903, Charles Booth, Life and Labour of the People in London, V, 139, 'There are boys who are proud to be seen talking with a well-known "lag"'; 1906, G. R. Sims, Mysteries of Modern London; 1927, Edgar Wallace, The Squeaker; extant.—7. A year's imprisonment: U.S.A.: C. 20: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A prison sentence, usually of a year or more'. Ex sense 4; cf. :—8. A three-months prison-sentence: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1942. Contrast lagging, 2.

lag, v. To transport (a person as a convict); but after ca. 1860, the usual sense is 'to sentence to penal servitude', and in C. 20, merely 'to convict' or even 'to arrest': 1797, Potter, Lagged, transported'; 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1811, Lex. Bal., 'The cove was lagged for a drag. The man was transported for stealing something out of a waggon'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To transport for seven years or upwards'; 1823, Bee; 1824 and 1827, Sessions Papers; 1828, P. Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry and Logic; 1838, Glascock; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1837, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad; 1839, Brandon; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1846, G. W. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1847, A. Harris, Settlers and Convicts (Australia); 1848, Sinks of London; 1855, John Lang, The Forger's Wife; 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1857, Borrow; 1859, J. Lang, Botany Bay; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1862, Female Life in Prison; 1869, James Greenwood; 1879, Convict Life; 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms (Australia); 1885, A. Griffiths; 1889, John Boyle O'Reilly, Moondyne; 1889, Charles White, Convict Life; 1890, M. Moser and C. F. Rideal, Stories from Scotland Yard; 1896, S. R. Crockett, Cleg Kelly; 1896, F & H; 1899, Clarence Rook, The Hooligan Nights; 1906, A. H. Lewis, The Boss (U.S.A.); 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; 1925, Netley Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook; 1931, Frank Gray, The Tramp (to arrest); 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 'Lagged: Sent to penal servitude'; extant. By illiterate pronunciation ex leg, v.—2. To make water: 1812, J. H. Vaux; in 1859, H implies that it is †. Ex lage, n., 1 and 3, for lage, v., seems to have been † long before C. 19.—3. 'To lag spirits, wine, &c., is to adulterate them with water': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1900. Ex lage, v., 1.—4. To 'shop' (a person), to give information (about a person) that will bring (him) to penal servitude: v.i. and v.t.: 1874 (implied in lagger, 3); 1887, Henley, Villon's Straight Tip, 'Suppose you duff? Or nose and lag?'; extant.—5. (Prob. ex sense 1.) To hang (a person): U.S.A.: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), in form lagg; app. † by 1900.—6. (Prob. ex sense 1.) To arrest (a person): 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective (U.S.A.); 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers; † by 1920.—7. See lagging, be.

lag, old. See old lag.

lag, tip (a person) the. See lag, n., 2.

lag-boy. A man that has been in prison: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. lag, n., 6.

lag-fever. 'A term of ridicule applied to men who being under sentence of transportation, pretend illness, to avoid being sent from gaol to the hulks,' Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1900. Cf. Botany Bay fever.

lag of duds. See lage of duds.

lag(-)ship. A convict-transport; a hulk, or floating prison: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1896 (F & H). Ex lag, n., 2 and 3, or ex lag, v., 1.

lage, n. See lage of duds.

lage, v. To wash, as in Harman, 1566, 'I saye by the Salomon I will lage it of'—i.e., off—'with a gage of benebouse . . . I sweare by the masse, I wull washe it of with a quart of good drynk'; app. † by 1700. Cf. lage, n., at lage of duds. The origin is prob. Old Fr. l'aigue, 'the water', regarded as one word.

lage of duds. 'A lag of dudes, a bucke of clothes', a buck being the quantity of clothes washed at one time: 1566, Harman, who also has the curt entry, 'Lage, water'; ibid., 'Myll the ken for a lagge of dudes . . . robbe some house for a bucke of clothes'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Lag, Water'; 1785, Grose (lage, water); ibid., lage-a-duds; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1870. Cf. the v.—2. Hence lage, weak drink:

C. 17–18. Brome, A Jovial Crew, 1652, 'I bowse no lage, but a whole gage | Of this I bowse to you'.—3. Hence lage, urine: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 'Lagge water or pisse'; † by 1720.

lagg. See lag, v., 4.

lagge. See lage, n.

lagged. See lag, v.

lagged for one's wind. See wind, be lagged for one's.

lagger. 'A sailor, a person working on the water': 1797, Potter; Feb. 1802, Sessions Papers; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1816, Sessions Papers; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1847, A. Harris, Settlers and Convicts (Australia: where, app., current since ca. 1810); 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; 1889, B & L; † by 1900. Ex lage, n., 1: see lage of duds.—2. 'He was known to his "palls" by the sobriquet of "Jack the Lagger"—i.e., one who had been transported,' G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, II, 1856 (cf. the definition in H, 1874), but earlier in Sessions Papers, May 9, 1844, 'Summers . . . said, "I . . . have been an old lagger" (which means, I believe, a returned transport)'—i.e., convict; app. † by 1900. Ex lag, v., 1.—3. Hence (?), an informer; one who turns King's evidence: 1874, H; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; slightly ob.—4. (Ex sense 2.) One who has been in prison, even for short sentences—prob. loose usage and perhaps not genuine c. Sessions Papers, Feb. 11, 1851, case of Neil and Austin; † by 1910.

lagging, n. and adj. Transportation as a convict, from ca. 1860 usually applied to any term of penal servitude: C. 19–20: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see lagging dues and lagging matter); 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Egan's Grose (id.); 1827, Sessions Papers; 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London, 'Lagging is the worst the diver can come to'; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1863, Tom Taylor, The Ticket-of-Leave Man; May 1872, Sessions Papers, "There goes that lagging cow" (a woman that has given information to the police); 1879 (see easy lagging); 1885, Michael Davitt; 1888, G. Bidwell (U.S.A.), Forging His Chains; 1889, B & L; 1894, A. Griffiths; 1896, Arthur Morison; 1896, F & H; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2; 1907, Jabez Balfour, My Prison Life; 1910, F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol; 1924, Stanley Scott; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1927, Edgar Wallace, The Mixer; 1931, Terence Horsley, An Out-of-Work; 1932 (March), T. B. Gibson Mackenzie in The Fortnightly Review; 1932, Jack of Dartmoor, Dartmoor from Within; 1933, Joseph Augustin, The Human Vagabond; and many times since. Ex lag, v., 1.—2. Hence, a prison sentence of more than two years: Australian: late C. 19–20. Baker, 1942. Contrast lag, n., 8. lagging, be; also lag. To serve as a convict: C. 20. In, e.g., Edgar Wallace, The Brigand, 1927. Either ex lag, v., 1, or ex lag, n., 3. lagging, easy. See easy lagging, and fetch.

lagging(-)cove. A magistrate; a judge: 1833, Benj. Webster, The Golden Farmer; † by 1920. Ex lag, v., 1.

lagging dues. 'Speaking of a person likely to be transported [as a convict], they say lagging dues will be concerned': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago, "As like as not it's laggin' dues, after 'is other convictions," said Bill Rann'; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; ob. Ex lag, v., 1, and dues.

lagging-gage. A chamber-pot: ca. 1720–1900. H, 1874. Cf. lag, v., 2.

lagging matter. 'Any species of crime for which a person is liable on conviction to be transported': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; after ca. 1870, a crime entailing penal servitude; not yet quite †. See lagging.

Lags' (orlags') Bible, the. The Newgate Calendar: ca. 1820–80. Price Warung, Tales of the Early Days, 1894 (p. 189, and note). Lit., the transported convicts' Bible.

lag's luck. That bad luck which appears to be the lot of convicts in relation to warders or to authority in general: late C. 19–20. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938. Rather is it j. than c. Nevertheless, orig. and predominantly a convicts' phrase.

laid. In pawn: Australian: C. 20. After ca. 1935, low s. Baker, 1942. Prob. short for:— laid up in lavender. See lavender, in.

lain. 'A sucker' or dupe, says Ersine, 1933: rare. Origin?

Lake, the. Salt Lake City: late C. 19–20: tramps' c. until ca. 1930, and then (if not a decade earlier) gen. coll. In, e.g., Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926.

laken. See lackin.

Lakers. 'Hoboes who work on the Great Lakes during the open season, and take to the road through the South during cold weather, or live on their savings or on their wits [in the North] during the winter,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1905; by 1935, s.

lakes, 'crazy; a lunatic': not c., but pitchmen's s. Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934. Short for Lakes of Killarney, 'rhyming' barmy.

lakin. See lackin.

lally. 'Shirt. Lally. To wash your own shirt, that is, dabble your lally': 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; † by 1896 (F & H). Prob. ex lully (linen).

lam, n. An escape; a getaway: 1897 (see lam, do a); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1929, Givens, 'escaped convict—on the lam(b); a lamster'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1933, low s. Ex the v.

lam, v. 'If he'—the tool or hook (the actual thief in a gang of pickpockets)—'is rather slow about getting to the wallet or the money, and he notices that the front men are getting somewhat uneasy, he calls out "stick!" This means that in a few seconds he will be successful, and that they are to stay in their respective positions. After he has secured the wallet he will chirp like a bird, or will utter the word "lam!" This means to let the man go, and to get out of the way as soon as possible. This word is also used in case the money cannot be taken, and further attempts are useless': 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; cf. Hobo Camp Fire Tales, 7th ed., 1911, '... Warned us to lamm [sic] for our lives if we saw him'; by 1912, the c. sense had merged with that of the simple v. Lam, 'to run away', is low s.—perhaps orig. c., as, e.g., in Life in Sing Sing, 1904. Prob. ex lammas, but perhaps ex slam, 'to strike': cf. the s. beat it.—2. In the commercial underworld, since ca. 1920, the sense is: to depart before a swindle has been discovered—or can be discovered. Julien Proskauer, Suckers All, 1934. Ex sense 1.

lam, do a. To run; esp., to run away: 1895 (April), Popular Science Monthly, p. 832 (foot); by 1920, s. Cf. lam, v., 1.

lam, on the. See on the lam.

lama; usually pl. 'Lamas. High chips or checks representing $25, $50, and $100': professional gamblers' and card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms (but $125 for $100); extant. Ex lama, a title given to Buddhist priests in Tibet and Mongolia.

lamaster. See lamister.

lamb. 'A young Gentleman or Prentice' fleeced, at gaming, by swindlers: gamesters': 1666, Leathermore's Advice (or The Nicker Nicked); 1674, Cotton, The Compleat Gamester; app. † by 1800. With reference to the fable of the wolf and the lamb.

—2. See lambs.—3. A 'road kid' that is a catamite to a tramp or a hobo: U.S. tramps': 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Thomas Minahan, Boy and Girl Tramps; 1942, BVB; extant. So called because he is the road companion of the wolf (or jockey).—4. Hence (?), an easy victim: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 1. Perhaps ex the Wall Street sense, 'an inexperienced speculator'.

Lamb, the. See White Ewe, the.

lamb(-)fry. A necktie: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928; M & B, 1944. Rhyming: cf. lamb's fry below.

lambing. Sheep-herding: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin.

lambo. 'To beat with a club': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1920. Ex s. lam(b), to beat, thrash.

lambs. 'Tatts, or lambs, dice': 1797, Potter; † by 1900. Perhaps ex the 'docility' with which they obey the touch of an expert dicer; or it may be the tail of Fulhams, pronounced fullams.

lamb's fry. A tie (to wear): Pacific Coast: C. 20. Convict, 1934. Rhyming s., perhaps introduced by Australians; cf. lamb fry above.

lamb's wool, bit of. A 'woollen cloth coat': 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; app. † by 1890. A piece of humour.

lambskin man. In 1698, B.E., 'Lamb-skin-men, c. the Judges of the several Courts'; 1785, Grose (see the quot'n at fortune-teller); 1797, Potter (lamb's-skin man); 1809, Andrewes (id.); Nov. 15, 1836, The Individual; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1860. 'From their robes lined and bordered with ermine,' Grose, 1785 (at lambskin men).

lame duck; usually in plural. 'Ducks, lame—occupants of the invalid ward,' Hargan, 1935: convicts': since ca. 1920. Unavailable for work.—2. An act of copulation: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on *f*ck*.

lamister or lamaster. 'Lamaster. Fugitive from justice; one who forfeits bail-bonds,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; as a v. in A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 1912, 'Spanish was not in town . . ., having lammistered sometime before'; ibid., 'Do you stand pat, or do we do a lam-mister?'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (lamister); Dec. 1918, The American Law Review ('Criminal Slang'; lamaster); April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by Moreby Acklom (lammister); 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain (-mmi-); 1925, Leverage (lamster); Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly (lamaster); 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1929, Givens (lamster); June 21, 1930, Flynn's; Feb. 1931, True Detective Mysteries; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; Feb. 22, 1936, Flynn's, Richard Wormser; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie (lamster); by 1937 (Daily Mirror, N.Y., article by Damon Runyon on Nov. 11), it was journalistic s. Damon Runyon's 'An expert at going away, or leaving, is a master lamme, hence lammaster' (Daily Mirror (N.Y.), Nov. 11, 1937) is—need I say?—a leg-pull. I.e., lam (see lam, v., 1) + agential -aster.

lamm. See lam.

lammas. To make off; depart: 1842, P. Egan. Captain Macheath (song, 'The Bridle Cull'); app. † by 1900. Prob. a deliberate perversion of nammus—but cf. lamister, q.v.

lammer. 'The members of a cannon mob [a gang of pickpockets] are the wire, the stall and the lammer . . .; the lammer is the chap who takes the stolen goods and disappears with all the evidence,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928—in the Glossary lammer is misleadingly defined as 'one who runs' (an existent s., but merely gen. s., term); extant.

lammie. A fugitive from justice: c. of ca. 1930–40, and then low s. Daily Mirror (New York), Nov. 11, 1937, Damon Runyon, 'The number of lammies out of New York City is gradually reaching an all-time high'. A pet formation ex lamister.

lammaster. See lamister.

lammy. A blanket: since ca. 1870. Baumann, 1887; Barrère & Leland, 1889. Ex the nautical S.E. sense, 'a quilted oversuit'.

lamous. Harmless: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. Perhaps suggested by 'harmless' and 'innocuous'.

lamp, n. 'An eye. The cove has a queer lamp. The man has a blind or squinting eye': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Lamps, the eyes; to have queer lamps, is to have sore or weak eyes'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; 1899 (see lamps); 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss (U.S.A.); 1910, F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol; by 1920, low s.—everywhere. Perhaps ex the brightness of eyes and lamp-light.—2. Hence, 'A watchman; a copper [i.e. policeman]; a look-out,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since ca. 1918.

lamp, v. To see; look at: 1916, Arthur Stringer, The Door of Dread, 'A flatty lamped me street-sign'—but (Jean Bordeaux, letter of Oct. 23, 1945) current in the 1870's; 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves, "'I ain't nailin' the lid down on my freedom, Prince Chawming, until I lamp a guy who's goin' to make it consid'able easier goin' for me'"; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 'A guy's only in the world once. He may as well lamp it over while he's at it, even if he has only got one lamp'; 1925, Leverage, 'To eye; to watch'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'Fussytools who insist on lampin' every piece o' goods'; by 1928, also police s.—therefore no longer genuine c.—in U.S.A.; by 1930, English—as in David Hume, Dangerous Mr Dell, 1935, and James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too, 1937, and often since.

lamp-glass and knitting-needle lark. Abortion: since the 1920's. Black, 1943. In ref. to the illicit procedure.

lamp habit, the. The opium habit: drug traffic: since 1920's. BVB. Cf. midnight oil and oil-burning habit.

lamp-post. A policeman; a look-out: 1925, Leverage; extant.

lamps. Eyes: 1899, Clarence Rook, The Hooligan Nights, "'The beak put 'is lamps over the bung [tavern landlord], an' says, solemn as you please, 'Was you intoxicated?'"; 1902, Wallace Admah Irwin, The Love Sonnets of a Hoodlum (U.S.A.); 1925, Leverage—but (see lamp, n.) s. by 1920. Merely the pl. of lamp, n., 1, q.v.

lamster. See lamister, ref. of 1925.

lance(-)knight is a variant of the next: Nashe, 1599: but prob. it is not c.

lance(-)man. Robert Greene, in describing the procedure of a gang of horse-stealers or 'priggers' in The Second Conny-catching, 1592, remarks: 'The Prigger if he be a Launce-man, that is, one that is already horst, then he hath more followers with him, and they ride . . . commonly in the form of Drovers' (ibid.: lanceman prigger); repeated by Dekker in The Belman of London, 1608; † by 1700. Cf. Army lancers.

lance-man prigger. A synonym of the preceding term, q.v.; also prigging lance(-)man, q.v.

lancepresado. See lanspresado.

land-broker. An undertaker: 1859, Matsell, "'The cove buys lands for stiff uns'"; 1896, F & H; † by 1930. Cf. land-yard.

land-loper, a vagabond, is not c.—as several glossaries have it—but S.E.

land navy. Spurious sailors: beggars': late C. 19–20; by 1940, ob. Ware, 1909. Ironic.

land-office business. 'A heavy, prosperous trade': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; † by 1920. Real-estate offices prospered exceedingly in C. 19 U.S.A. land pirate; usually pl. A highwayman: 1676, Coles, who does not classify it as c.; 1698, B.E., who does. Never, I should say, lower than s.; and perhaps always S.E.

land squatter; usually pl. A practiser of land-squatting: American and British tramps': late C. 19–20 (Am.) and from ca. 1910 (British). Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932.

land-squatting. 'Another specialization has become popular in vagabondage. It is called "land-squatting", which means that the beggar in question has chosen a particular district for his operations,' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899; slightly ob.

land-yard. A graveyard: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; by 1896 (F & H) it was s. Cf. land-broker.

landed, be. (Of persons) to be safe, all right: since ca. 1860. 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct. 1879, 'When I fell this time I had between four and five quid found on me, but they gave it me back, so I was landed (was all right)'; 1889, B & L; app. † by 1910.

Lane, the. Horsemonger Lane Jail: 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London (p. 82); 1889, B & L. This prison was closed down in 1878.—2. Petticoat Lane: mid-C. 19–20; if ever c., it was, by 1890, no longer c. (E.g., in 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct. 1879.)—3. The Bowery, New York City: since ca. 1890: 1910, H. Hutchings, Types from City Streets; by ca. 1915, s.

langret. Langrets are false dice that, as defined more precisely in the quot'n, are long in the forehead: 1552, Gilbert Walker, A manifest detection of Diceplay, who spells it langrete and langgret, says: 'A well-favoured die, that seemeth good and square, yet is the forehead longer on the cater and tray than any other way'; see also barred cater trey. Orig. c., the term had, by 1600 > either slang or, more prob., jargon; by 1700, S.E.

Lanky. The Lancashire dialect: 1863, The Story of a Lancashire Thief, "Not a minute ago, you were talking Lanky, and now you've dropped it altogether"; ob.

lanspresado or lansprisado. Recorded first in Anon., The Eighth Liberal Science, 1650; 1698, B.E., 'He that comes into Company with but Two Pence in his Pocket', the term being classified as c.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who does not classify it as c.; almost certainly † by 1830, its occurrence (as lans prisado, by the way) in W. T. Moneriff's Eugene Aram, 1832, being obviously archaistic. One of a set of military terms current in C. 17 drinking.—2. Erroneously, an informer: 1837, B. Disraeli, Venetia.

lap, n. 'Lap, butter milke or whey,' Harman, 1566; Dekker's 'Butter, Milke, or Whaye' ('The Canters Dictionarie' in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9) arises from either a compositor's error or Dekker's misapprehension; 1665, R. Head, 'Lap . . . Pottage'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'Lap, c. Pottage, Butter-milk, or Whey' and 'Tis rum Lap, c. This is excellent Soupe'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd ('Spoon-meat'); 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (lapp); 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); † by 1880. Origin: prob. that which one laps up.—2. Hence, liquor: 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker, 'Come, don't be discourag'd, but drink. There's more Lap in the Cellar'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; ' . . . Rum Lap'; . . . also strong Drink of any Sort'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; Nov. 15, 1836, The Individual; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1870, s.—3. As 'tea', it is not c., but s.

lap, v. 'To take; to steal': 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; † by 1930. As a cat laps milk.

lap, tip the. See tip the lap.

lap-feeder. A silver tea-spoon: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'Silver spoon, pap spoon'; 1848, Sinks of London, loosely of any spoon; by 1896 (F & H) it was low s. See lap, n., 2 and 3.

lap up. 'To wipe out; to put out of sight': 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; app. † by 1920. Cf. English s. mop up and see lap, v.—2. To flatter: British: since ca. 1925. (F. D.) Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938, "They were lapping him up"—They were flattering him'. A reversal of lap up flattery, to enjoy it credulously.

lapel, the. A policeman grabbing one by the lapel: mostly tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant.

lapp. See lap, n., 1, reference of 1809.

lapper. Liquor: 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; ob. Cf. lap, n., 2.—2. A sodomite: U.S.A.: C. 20. BVB.

lappy, adj. Drunk: 1718 (see next entry); app. † by 1830.

lappy cull. A drunk man: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'Lappy-Cull, alias one that is Drunk'; app. † by 1830. Cf. lap, n., 2.

laprogh. 'A goose, a duck, a fowl', is not c., but tinkers' s.: 1889, B & L. Ex Shelta laprog, 'a goose'.

larceny. 'Dishonest cupidity. "A sucker's heart is always full of larceny"', Burke, 1930:

racketeers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; 1938, Damon Runyon, Furthermore; extant. Ironie on the legal term.

larceny sense. A thief's professional acumen: since the late 1920's. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. See larceny.

lard and pail. A prison: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on jail.

larding(-)pin. A knife: 1845, anon. translator of Eugene Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, ch. xxix; † by 1900. With ref. to eutting lard with a knife?

lare, a flashily dressed, loud-spoken fellow; lare up, v.i., to boast, be boastful: C. 20. Partridge, 1937. Ex leary, adj., 2, esp. in the derivative leary bloke.

large house, 'a workhouse' (H, 1874), was prob. not c., but proletarian s. Suggested by big house.

large white; small white. Half a crown, also called a half-bull white; s.w., a shilling: 1823, Bee, who remarks that they are counterfeiters' terms. See white, n., 2.

lark. A boat, according to the glossary in Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; but surely this is an error for ark, despite the fact that it occurs also in Lexicon Balatronicum and recurs in F & H.—2. A spree, fun, sport, a practical joke: this has never been c., but for many years it was low s. Cf. as merry as a lark.—3. 'Larks (American thieves), boys who steal newspapers from door-steps': 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; ob. They rise with the lark in order to do it safely.—4. As 'a line of business' it is pitchmen's s.: cf. caper.

lark, knock up a. 'Lark, fun or sport of any kind, to create which is termed knocking up a lark': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1890. Ex the ordinary s. sense of lark.

lark(-)rig, the. The dodge practised by the sky-larker: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; app. current ca. 1780–1840.

larkin, 'a girl', is tinker's s.: 1889, B & L. Ex Shelta lakin.

larrey. Cunning: 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, p. 180, where it is substantivized to mean 'a cunning remark'; ob.

larries. See lurry.

Larry-happy. Feeble-minded: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on s. sappy, the Larry coming ex coll. as happy as Larry.

Larry Simon. A diamond: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Larry's Farm. The New York County Workhouse: 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. ironically ex as happy as Larry.

lash. A trick, dodge, stratagem: 'Australian: since the 1920's. Baker, 1942; M & B, 1944. Perhaps a corruption of lark, n., 2 and 4.

lashool, 'nice', is not c., but tinkers' s.: 1889, B & L. Ex Shelta lashul, 'pretty'.

last, v. To stay out of gaol: 1891, Jacob A. Riis, How the Other Half Lives, 'Their chances of "lasting" much longer'; 1894, J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats (England); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood (U.S.A.); ob. Cf. reign.

last card of (one's) pack. One's (or his or my, etc.) back: 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; by 1865, low, and by 1875, ordinary rhyming s.

last degree. See take one's last degree.

last waltz, the. A condemned man's last walk:

convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. dance-hall and dance upon nothing.

latch, n. A breastpin: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). A breastpin 'latches' one's necktie.

latch, v. To let in; to admit (a person), esp. to a building of any kind: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary (U.S.A.) as latch; † by 1870 in England; 1896, F & H (as American); † by 1910 in U.S.A.—2. To place (someone) in jail: U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. Convict 2nd, 1938. By antiphrasis for unlatch the door for (a person).

latchman. A burglar that specializes in entry by the sitting- or drawing-room window: 1888, James Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; ob. He works on the latch or catch of the window.

lath and plaster. A master: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1865, low rhyming, by 1880 gen. rhyming s.

lathered up. (Of a safe) soaped ready for the 'nitro' to be put in: 1933, Eagle; 1935, Crump & Newton, Our Police; extant. Ready for shaving.

lathy. Almost empty; esp. of a purse: 1859, Matsell; Vocabulary; ex S.E. as thin as a lath.

laugh, give (someone) the. To give someone the slip: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, 'I . . . took a good look at the Chicago detective squad . . . , "gave them the laugh", left the building, and joined my friend on the corner'; by 1910, s. To laugh at—and leave.

laugh and scratch. To inject, be injected with a narcotic: addicts': since ca. 1915, BVB.

laughing, for. On suspicion, esp. in nicked (etc.) for laughing, 'arrested on suspicion': C. 20. Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909. As if 'for a joke' or 'merely for laughing'.

laughing jag. Drug-caused fit of laughter or continuous laughing: drug traffic: C. 20. BVB. See jag, n.

laughing skuif. 'Dagga [i.e., Cannabis indica]: laughing skuif, boom, tree of knowledge, pill, torpedo, aap, zol,' C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946: South Africa: C. 20. To complete the list add dope and submarine. Cf. laughing weed; skuif = ? Dutch schuif, 'a slide' (cf. sleigh-ride).

laughing water. Alcohol: since middle 1920's. Ersine, 1933.

laughing weed. A Mexican drug, the 'loco weed': June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, Randolph Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave'; extant. Cf. happy dust for the semantics.

launce-man. See lance-man. (R. Greene, The Second Conny-catching, 1592.)

lavender, in. 'Hidden from the police' (Barrère & Leland): mid-C. 19–20. Ex S.E. laid (up) in lavender, 'carefully put aside for prospective use'; H, 1859, records this fuller phrase as being used synonymously with in lavender, and James Greenwood, in The Seven Curses of London, 1869, has the shorter phrase; 1935, R. Thurston Hopkins, Life and Death at the Old Bailey, 'One of the most delicate metaphors in crooks' slang is the term used for a burglar who is hiding from the police . . . his pals speak of him as being "laid up in lavender"'. —2. But an earlier sense of laid up in lavender is 'imprisoned': 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London, II, i; app. † by 1870.

lavender boy. A homosexual: C. 20. BVB. See:—

lavender convention. 'A gathering of male homosexuals,' BVB, 1942: C. 20. Ex the lavender water affected by them; cf. lavender boy.

lavender(-)cove. A pawnbroker: perhaps c., but prob. low s.: Matsell, Vocabulary, 1859. See lavender, in.

law. A branch of roguery; a criminal activity or profession; a 'lay', 'lurk', 'dodge' or 'racket': 1552, Gilbert Walker, A manifest detection of Dice-play, defines and explains it thus:—'Like as law, when the term is truly considered, signifieth an ordinance of good men, established for the commonwealth, to repress all vicious living: so these cheaters turn'd the cat in the pan, giving to divers vile, patching shifts, an honest and goodly title, calling it by the name of a law; because by a multitude of hateful rules, a multitude of dregs and draff as it were, all good learning, govern and rule their idle bodies, to the destruction of the good labouring people. And this is the cause that divers crafty sleights, devised only for guile, hold up the name of a law'; Robert Greene makes great play with the term, which remained the usual one until about the middle of C. 18; its derivative, lay, arose then (witness Grose) and predominated in C. 19, as racket does in C. 20. E.g., cheating law, figging law, high law, sacking law, qq.v.—2. An opportunity to escape, esp. through some legal loophole: U.S.A.: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. A profitable employment of the resources afforded by the law.—3. A prison guard or warder (a law); a detective (the law): U.S.A.: 1929, Givens (both nuances); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer ('a policeman'); 1934, Convict (detective); 1934, Rose (policeman); 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece; extant. Ex the idea resident in the Law or the majesty of the law.

lawaaewater. Strong liquor: South Africa: late C. 19–20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Adopted ex Afrikaans. Lit., 'noise' (Dutch lawaaai) + 'water'; cf. fire-water.

lawful un. A wife: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin: app. † by 1900. Possibly c., as Miles implies, but prob. low s.

lawn. 'A white cambric handkerchief,' Vaux, 1812: not c., for, after all, lawn is a kind of white cambric.

lawn-mower. A sub-machine gun: since middle 1920's. Ersine, 1933. It just mows 'em down!

lawyer. In high lawyer, q.v.

lay, n. Milk: C. 17. Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 1611, 'Pecke, pennam, lay or popler, | Which we mill in deuse a vile'. I.e., Fr. lait.—2. An underworld trick or plan or means of livelihood: 1708, implied in John Hall's cheiving layer, fam layer, mill layer, prad layer, and waggon layer; 1714, T. Lucas, Memoirs of Gamesters, 'And other Sharpers upon that cheating Lay', the illicit game of Luck in a Bag, as dishonest as those other late C. 17–18 swindling games, Cups and Balls, Buckle and Thong, Preaching the Parson; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'An Enterprize, or Attempt'; 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732; 1742, Anon., The Life of Robert Ramsey; 1768, C. Johnson, Chrysal, '[We] found it necessary to change the lay'; 1782, Messink; 1785, Grose; 1819, T. Moore; 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, II; 1834, Ainsworth; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1842, P. Egan, Captain Macheath; 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. trans.), ch. vi; by 1840, current in U.S.A. (The National Police Gazette, 1845; The Ladies' Repository, 1848; E. Z. C. Judson, 1851); 1859, Henry Kingsley, Geoffrey Hamlyn, where it is applied to bushranging; 1860, F. & J. Greenwood, Under a Cloud; 1863, A. Prison Matron, Jane Cameron; 1872, G. P. Burnham; 1879, Convict Life; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; by 1900, low s. in England; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, '... The conny fell to the graft and tipped the sucker to the lay'; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective; 1925, Leverage; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's, John Wilstach, 'The Gun Moll', 'He had a few good lays on, but must receive at least twenty-five per cent of the stuff—as he and his mob took all the risk'; 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch; Aug. 10, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; still current and, in the U.S.A., still c., often in the nuance 'place worth robbing' (Kernôt, 1929–31).—3. 'An Hazard or Chance,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1753, John Poulter; 1785, Grose; † by 1890. Prob. ex sense 2.—4. 'A bunch, or quantity'; goods: Scottish: 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'Flash kanes, where I might fence my snib'd lays'; ibid., 'The cove ... sported a lay of screaves'; 1874, H. 'A piece', † by 1896 (F & H).—5. (Ex sense 2.) 'A place ... where ... a theft can be committed': U.S.A.: 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1927, Kane; by 1936 (James Curtis, The Gilt Kid) it was English too; 1938, Castle; extant.—6. A man's mistress: U.S.A.: since the 1920's. Castle, 1938, 'Th' skirt was th' cutor's lay'; W. R. Burnett, High Sierra, 1940. Cf. sense 3 of the v. He lays her down, and she 'lays down' with him.—7. (A narrowing of sense 2.) A passing of a forged cheque: U.S.A., mostly forgers': since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941.—8. 'The act of smoking opium,' BVB, 1942: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Prob. imm. ex lay on one's hip. Hence:—9. A ration of narcotics: U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. BVB.—10. An opium den (also lay-down joint): U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. BVB.

lay, v. Short for lay down, q.v.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Laying Paper. Passing worthless checks'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1933, Eagle; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; 1941, Maurer; extant.—2. To lie in wait, esp. with a view to robbery or to vengeance: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Suppose he blows in some day and lays for you'. This sense may orig. have been c., but prob. it was always a mere illiterate colloquialism.—3. To have sexual intercourse: 1935, Hargan (v.i.); by 1944 (Raymond Chandler, The Lady in the Lake) it was low s. More often v.t. than v.i. An obvious development ex the S.E. (and the illiterate) sense of lay.

lay, on the. See on the lay.

lay, scrag a. See scrag a lay.

lay, spot a. See spot a lay.

lay, stand a queer. 'He stands a queer Lay; He stands an odd Chance, or is in great Danger,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose (to be in danger); † by 1890. A special application of lay, n., 3.

lay, upon the. See on the lay.

lay, upon the same. In the same illegal, illicit, or criminal way; by the same illegal means: 1732, trial of Thomas Beck, in Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, pub. in 1735; extant. See lay, n., 3.

lay-about. A ne'er-do-well: since ca. 1918: 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1938, Part-ridge, 'A man that lives by cadging from thieves'. He 'lies about the place'.

lay against the engine. See lean against . . .

lay-down, n. 'In tramp language, it was at least a decent "lay down"—i.e., bed,' Everard Wyrall, 'The Spike', 1909; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant. A place where one may lie down.—2. The price, the fee, for opium-smoking, i.e. for admission to an opium den: U.S. drug addicts': since ca. 1920. Convict, 1934. Suggested by lay-out, n., 2.—3. A remand in custody: since ca. 1925. In, e.g., Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938; Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941; Black, 1943. A rest in the interval between arrest and hard labour.

lay down, v. To dispose of forged bank-notes, bonds, etc.: 1886, Thomas Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America (implied in layer down); ibid., p. 298, 'Barlow "laid down" one of these raised [i.e., forged] drafts'; 1912, A. Train, Courts, Criminals and the Camorra; Nov. 14, 1925, Flynn's, 'Thompson went out to "lay down" some of Becker's splendid forgeries'; 1928, Chicago May (to distribute any kind of counterfeit money); extant.—2. To play cards: English: 1896, F & H; ob. Ex to lay cards down.—3. In lay down!, 'be quiet!', the usage is Am. low s. (Ersine, 1933.)

lay-down joint. See lay, n., 10.

lay for sleepers; often as vbl n., laying . . . See sleeper, 3.

lay in. To remain in one's cell and not go to work: convicts': since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933.

lay in a zex. See zex . . .

lay in state. 'Every convict is earning "blood money" or "laying in state",' John Caldwell, 'Patter of the Prisons'—in The Writer's Digest, Feb. 1930; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Grimly humorous ref. to a ceremonial lying-in-state and prob. also to the State prison.

lay joint. A brothel: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Hargan, 1935. Cf. lay, v., 3, and see joint, n.

lay-off, the. A con-men's fraud in relation to horse-racing: C. 20. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.

lay on one's (or the) hip, usually as vbl n., laying . . . To smoke opium; to be an opium-smoker: drug addicts': since ca. 1918: 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man (. . . one's . . .); 1933, Eagle (. . . the . . .); 1934, Convict (. . . the); 1938, Convict 2nd (lie on one's hip); 1938, Francis Chester; 1942, BVB (the).

lay-out, n. Both professional gamblers' j. and, orig., c.—during the approx. period 1850–80—is this:—'Lay-Out. The "lay-out" is composed of all the cards in a suit . . . These cards are posted upon a piece of velvet, which can be spread upon the table whenever the dealer chooses to open the game,' Matsell. The cards are laid out. Whence the next two senses.—2. An opium-smoking equipment: 1882, H. H. Kane, Opium-Smoking in America and China; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; by 1925, s.; by 1930, coll. The same applies to the meaning 'a forger's outfit' (Maurer, 1941).—3. 'A gambling outfit of wheels, cards, dice, chips, etc.,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: gamblers' and card-sharpers': since ca. 1910.—4. Site of a proposed burglary: British and American: 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; 1933, Ersine, 'A place robbed or to be robbed'; extant. Like 5, ultimately ex 1.—5. 'The plans of a place to be robbed,' Ersine, 1933; extant. Cf. senses 4 and 6.—6. A confidence man's plan of action: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. Cf. senses 4 and 5.

lay out, v. To kill (a person): since ca. 1880: 1889, B & L; by 1900, low s. in Britain; ca. 1890–1930, c. in U.S.A. in the sense 'to assault', as in No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, and in Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924. To lay him out on the ground: proleptic.—2. To spy on, watch from ambush: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; slightly ob. by 1945.—3. To plan a robbery: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. senses 4–6 of the n.

lay paper. To pass worthless cheques, money orders, and so forth: C. 20. See lay, v.

lay the duke down. See duke down . . .

lay the hip. To smoke opium: 1933, Ersine; extant. An occ. variant of lay on one's (or the) hip, q.v.

lay the note; usually as vbl n. 'Laying the Note—crooked advertising,' Chicago May, 1928; May 9, 1931, Flynn's, Lawrence M. Maynard, 'On the Make'; extant.—2. See laying the note.

lay the papers. To pass bad checks (cheques): Aug. 12, 1933, Flynn's, Convict 12627, 'I am a Check Artist'; extant. See the elements.

lay the queer. To pass counterfeit money. C. 20. In, e.g., Kernôt, 1929–31. See queer, n.

lay them down. To play cards: 1899, B & L; by 1930, low s. On the table.

layer seems to have, ca. 1750–1810, been short for way-layer = kid-layer, q.v.: 1770, Richard King, The Frauds of London detected—plagiarized by George Barrington in 1802.—2. Short for layer-down: 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights, 'Another—termed the "layer" or "planter"—puts the bad notes into the general circulation'; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); July 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant.—3. Hence, 'A piece of currency,' Ersine, 1933: U.S.A.: extant.

layer(-)down. (Concerning the organization of gangs of forgers) 'The "layers down", the title by which those who finally dispose of fraudulent paper are known': 1886, Thomas Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America; 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective, where it is applied to one who specializes in cashing forged cheques for the forger himself or for the head of a gang; 1888, George Bidwell, Forging His Chains; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; by ca. 1920, it was commercial s.—as, e.g., in Flynn's, Feb. 4, 1928, Joseph W. Barry, 'The Layer Down'.

laying the note. See lay the note.—2. An elaborate form of short-changing someone by means of bank bills changed in succession and to the accompaniment of a smart line of talk (the 'canvass'): 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, where the trick is explained in considerable detail: 1934, Convict; Dec. 17, 1938, Flynn's; extant.

lays. Sexual experiences: mostly convicts': 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; extant. Cf. lay, n., 6.

lazy. A prison guard: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. 'Most of these guards have fixed posts and do not move about' (Godfrey Irwin).

lead, as a shortening of friendly lead, seems to have been c. until ca. 1890. Sessions Papers,

D.O.U.

Dec. 19, 1850 (case of James Cousins), a witness says, 'I believe a lead is a turn given to the publican' and 'Smith said he wanted to know what became of the money that they had had from the lead'; 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct. 1879, 'I was . . . all right . . . this time without them [the gang] getting me up a lead (a collection)'.—2. 'In the hopes of getting a "lead" (information as to crime)', A Chicago Detective ('Le Jemlys'), Shadowed to Europe, 1885 (app. as English c.); by 1900, no longer c. One thing leads to another.—3. A bullet: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex such phrases as fill (someone) with lead, to shoot him.

lead, friendly. See friendly lead.

lead Bruno is a tramps' synonym of carry the banner, 'to walk the street all night for want of a shelter' (Stiff, 1931): since ca. 1920.

lead joint, 'a shooting gallery' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931): not c.; merely fair and carnival s.

lead man. 'One who favors the use of the revolver,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. pour lead into, 'to shoot (someone)'.
 lead-pip cinch. 'Something not difficult,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. An elaboration of pipe, n., 4.

lead thimble. An Ingersoll watch: 1925, Leverage; extant. See thimble, n.

lead towel. A pistol: ca. 1795–1830. Jon Bee, 1823, remarks that by that date it had 'nearly gone out of use'. Contrast oaken towel, q.v.; B & L, 'With which to wipe a man out of existence'.

leader and lumper (both usually in pl.). A genuine article and a faked one (e.g., imitation jewellery, worthless watch): crook auctioneers': C. 20. Carlton Brown, 'Auction Sale this day'—The New Yorker, Aug. 7, 1937. The auctioneer 'leads off' with a good article and follows with a number of inferior ones (lumped together in a lump lot).

leaders. See eagle. (First in Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9.)

leaf. A purse: C. 17. See at aste.—2. (?) Paper: 1829, a counterfeiter's letter (Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, V), 'Go to the fakement and obtain the leaf, then it will be my ingenuity that will settle the slum' or plan; app. † by 1900. Ex leaf of paper.—3. Autumn: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, 'I will be out in the leaf'; 1896, F & H; extant. Ex S.E. fall of the leaf.—4. Tobacco: convicts': since ca. 1860, esp. in bit of leaf, 'a small quantity of tobacco': 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; extant. Short for tobacco-leaf.—5. A hundred-dollar bill: U.S.A.: coined before June 26, 1928, the date of the originator, gangster 'Big Tim' Murphy's death, according to E. D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago, 1929; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; Dec. 19, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1932, W. R. Burnett, The Silver Eagle; 1941, Herbert Asbury, The Underworld of Chicago; extant. Prob. in punning allusion to 'gold-leaf'.—6. (Also leaf gum.) Narcotics in gen.: U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. Cf. 4.

leaf, go off at (G. Parker, 1789) or with the fall of the. To be hanged: 1785, Grose (with). Perhaps only s., but if it were c., it was Anglo-Irish c. With a pun on leaves' autumnal falling and on the leaf or board from which the condemned person drops. See also fall of the leaf.

leaf gum. See leaf, 6.

leafless tree, the, 'the gallows', may possibly have been c. of ca. 1750-1850; but prob. it was s.—perhaps journalists'.

leak, n. See leek.—2. An escape or divulgence of confidential information: U.S.A.: ca. 1873 (Godfrey Irwin's dating), in Cleveland Moffett, True Detective Stories, 1897; by 1910, no longer c. Ex the v.; cf. leaky.—3. Hence, a (secret) means of obtaining something illicit: U.S.A.: C. 20. Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (1901-11), pub. in 1912, "'Well, I've killed th' goose what laid th' golden egg, an' I'll have t' rustle up some new leak now''"; extant. Cf. :—

leak, v. 'To impart a secret': 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; by 1920, low s. Cf. leaky.

Leake. See leek.

leaky. In English, leaky, 'unable to keep a secret', 'apt to blab', is S.E. dating from late C. 17: yet it has appeared in dictionaries of cant.

lean (or lay) against the engine. To smoke opium: addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. The engine is the opium pipe.

lean and fat. A hat: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928, corruptly as leaning fat; Convict 2nd, 1938. Rhyming: cf. next three entries.

lean and lake. A steak: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming: cf. Joe Blake.

lean and linger. A finger: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Convict, 1934; Convict 2nd, 1938; M & B, 1944. Rhyming: cf. long and lingers.

lean and lurch. A church: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1870, low rhyming, > by 1880, gen. rhyming s. In late C. 19-20, it is U.S. Pacific Coast c., as in M & B, 1944.

lean-to. A doss-house: since ca. 1930. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. Depreciative.

leaning fat. See lean and fat.

leap. 'All safe,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; † by 1896 (F & H)—prob. by 1820. Perhaps ex leap!, for all is safe (or it's safe enough).

leap at Tyburn (or in the dark), take a. To be hanged: C. 17-mid-18: almost certainly not c., but s.

leap-frog. A crab: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; † by 1920. Would-be humorous.

leap in the dark. See leap at Tyburn.

leaper. 'She learned that a cocaine addict is spoken of as a "snow-bird" or a "leaper", and that an opium smoker is said to be "kicking the gong around",' Mary Sullivan, My Double Life, 1939: drug addicts': since the early 1920's. Cf. the next two entries.

leaping, adj. Under the influence of a drug: June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, Randolph Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave'; extant. BVB, 1942, has the elaboration, leaping and stinking. Cf. high.

leaps, the. Intense exhilaration induced by drug-taking: drug addicts': since ca. 1925: 1934, Ferd. Tuohy, Inside Dope; 1942, BVB, 'A state approximating delirium tremens resulting from excessive use of cocaine'. Cf.—perhaps prompted by—the preceding entry; cf. lift, 5.

lear. See leer.

learer. See leerer.

leary, n. 'Damaged goods or inferior merchandise; esp. that which is . . . likely to cause trouble for the seller,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: commercial underworld: C. 20. Ex :—

leary, adj.; occ., leery. Shy; suspicious: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'The Cull is leery, alias the Man is shy'; 1796, Grose, 3rd ed., 'Leery. On one's guard. See PEERY'; 1838, Wm Hone, The Table Book; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1865, low s. in England; 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey (U.S.A.), 'Leary of the Pen' (prison); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, 'Leary of a pinch' (an arrest); 1902, Flynt, The Little Brother (as leery); 1903, Flynt, Rudrick Cloud, 'He . . . kept signallin' that things looked leary' (i.e., suspicious in the sense 'ominous' or 'dangerous'); 1904, H. Hapgood (U.S.A.); 1904, Life in Sing Sing, 'Leery. Afraid'; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective (U.S.A.); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; ca. 1917, L. Livingston, With Jack London; and elsewhere—but prob. ob. by 1940, and by 1930 s. Hone derives it ex Ger. Lehre, 'learning or warning'; but I prefer The O.E.D.'s tentative origination in S.E. leer (C. 17-early 19), 'looking askance; . . . sly, underhand'.—2. Hence, alert, wide-awake; shrewd, 'fly': ca. 1811, A Leary Mot; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, Pierce Egan, Boxiana, III; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1827, Thomas Surr, Richmond; 1838, Hone; 1839, Brandon ('cunning'); 1841, W. Leman Rede; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1865, low s.—3. In Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, Appendix (song II), 1829, it is wrongly defined as 'daring'.—4. (Of goods) damaged; (of merchandise) inferior: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin (leary), 1931. Ex sense 1 or ex the n.

leary, v. 'leary . . . v., aufpassen' (to be alert): 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen. The term is suspect; but if it is genuine then obviously it derives ex the adjective.

leary bloke. 'Leary Bloak, a person who dresses showily'; 1859, H; by 1900, †. See leary, adj., 2.—2. Hence (?), 'a clever or artful person': 1874, H; 1887, Baumann; by 1900, low s.

leary cove is a synonym of fly cove, q.v.: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; ob. Ex leary, adj., 2.

leary one. A variant of leary cove and a synonym of fly cove, q.v.: 1860, F. & J. Greenwood, Under a Cloud, ' . . . The leary one—to express in thieves' language all that was, or perhaps could be said about the Pippin'; by 1895, low s. See leary, adj., 2.

leather. A leather bag or pouch: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Come, let us pike to glee', or search, 'for a Pitter or Leather'; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1871, Anon., State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1885, 'Le Jemlys', Shadowed to Europe; 1886, T. Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America (of a purse); 1886, Pinkerton (see pit, 3); 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H (as an American term); April 1897, Popular Science Monthly ('a purse'); 1899, J. Flynt (American tramps'); 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers That Prey; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, Clapin; 1904, H. Hapgood (U.S.A.); 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1915, Frost & Dilnot, The Crime Club; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do you Speak "Yegg" ?'); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Lifting a leather—stealing purse'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, Kane; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; Nov. 15, 1930, Flynn's, Earl W. Scott; 1931, The Bon Voyage Book (as an English usage); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A wallet or pocket-book; never a purse'; 1933, Ersine, 'A pocketbook'; 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube; 1934, M. H. Weseen; 1934, Convict; Sept. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Convict 12627; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; 1938, Convict 2nd; and frequently since. Since ca. 1920, also Australian, as in Baker, 1942; and since ca. 1910, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946). Obviously by a shortening of leather bag (or pouch).—2. Copper: counterfeiters': 1779, Sessions Papers (mayoralty of the Rt Hon. Samuel Plumbe, No. VI, Part iii, trial of Richard Harper), where it is stated that the term has been used 'for nine years past'; app. † by 1850.—3. Beef: U.S. convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex its frequent toughness.

leather, pull off. See pull off leather.

leather, reef a. See reef a leather.

leather, the. A C. 20 Americanism for a 'booting'—a kicking: Sept. 5, 1931, Flynn's, Charles Somerville, 'Once, having downed him, they most strenuously gave him "the leather" . . . they booted the prostrate and unconscious youth, head and body'; by 1932, also British, as in James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936. The leather of the boot of the foot of the kicker.

leather dip. A pickpocket specializing in pocket-books: 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; prob. c. of ca. 1900–20, then police s. as well; by ca. 1930, no longer to be classified as c. See leather, 1, and dip, n., 1.

leather dropper. A confidence worker that operates by dropping a well-filled pocket-book in front of the prospective victim (and an accomplice) and hurries on: C. 20. Recorded by IA, 1931. See leather, 1. leather-head. See leatherhead.

Leather Lane. 'Leather-Lane, any thing paltry, or of bad quality, is called a Leather-lane concern' (Vaux, 1812): perhaps c. during the first score years of C. 19; but more prob. it was always s.; app. † by 1880. Ex the name of a London street.

leather-lay. V.i., rare; recorded in John Poulter's Discoveries but † by 1800, in the sense: to practise the trick mentioned in:— leather lay, the. Stealing leather bags, as a trade: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1890. See lay, a trick, dodge, illicit practice, and leather.

leather merchant. A pickpocket, esp. if inveterate: since ca. 1930. Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938.

leather snatcher. A thief specializing in purses and pocket-books; prob. since ca. 1880: 1912, A. Train, Courts, Criminals and the Camorra; by 1940, low s. See leather, 1.

leather-weeding mob. A gang of pickpockets: July 23, 1927, Flynn's; extant. See the three separate elements.

leatherhead, 'a Thick-skull'd, Heavy-headed Fellow', is not c., but s. The same applies to the senses 'a swindler' and 'a policeman'.

leaver. A paroled convict: Australian: C. 19. Baker, 1942. He is, as it were, on leave.

leaving-shop, 'an unlicensed pawnbroker's', may possibly have been c. in its early period (ca. 1850–65), but prob. it was always s.—though low: 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 2nd ed. One left things there—and prob. called back later for a settlement.

lee of a reefer. Ice-box in a refrigerator car on a train: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin. 'The word "lee" is doubtless a reference to the lee side, something offering shelter' (Irwin).

leek, or Leek. 'Leaks, Welshmen,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1728, D. Defoe, 'Leake, Welshman'; by 1800, no longer s. A leek being the national emblem, as the thistle is of Scotland, the rose of England.

Leekshire, 'Wales': not c., but s. See preceding entry.

leen. See pike on the been.

leer, n. 'cant for a newspaper; if one sees another [criminal] advertised [as wanted by the police], it is said, he is chaunted upon the leer': 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; 1864, H. 3rd ed., 'Print, newspaper'; by 1889 (B & L), †. Ex Ger. Lehre, instruction, learning.—2. See leer, go upon the.

leer, v. 'Togs [were] leered in yokel's downy . . . The clothes were found in the countryman's bed': 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. cxc; † by 1900. But is this genuine c.? I doubt it.

leer, go out upon the. To practise pickpocketry: 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; † by 1890. Perhaps ex the use of a newspaper to cover operations.

leer, roll the. See roll the leer.

leer, spelt in the. See spelt in the leer.

leerer (usually pl., leerers). An eye: 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1910. On the analogy of, and prob. suggested by, ogle, an eye.

leery. See leary, adj.

left chalk, adv. On the left: convicts': since the 1920's. Castle, 1938.

lefty. A tramp or hobo train-rider that has lost his left arm and/or leg: tramps': 1918, Leon Livingston, Mother Delcassee of the Hobos (former nuance); 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'One minus a left arm or hand'; extant.—2. A left-handed person: tramps': 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

leg, n. A blackleg or turf swindler: not c., but racing s.—2. Hence, a gambler: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1925, Leverage; extant.—3. A mainly Scottish variant of lag, n., 3: 1861, James McLevy, The Sliding Scale of Life, "Old legs", as we call the regulars'; 1869, A Merchant, Seven Years in the Prisons of England; still current.—4. The act of running away: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 3 of the v.

leg, v. The early form of lag, to transport (a convict): 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'I am to be legg'd; I am to be transported'—repeated in The Monthly Magazine, Jan. 1799; 1826, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, II, trial of R. King and J. Robinson, "They say you legged some of our chaps"; I understand legging means transporting or convicting'; April 1868, Sessions Papers; † by 1900. Cf. to leg it, to run away. But perhaps because his legs are fettered.—2. See legged, 1, app. the only form in which it occurs.—3. 'To steal by snatching and running off,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.; extant. He grabs, and then 'legs it'.

leg, hobbled upon the. See hobbled, second quot'n of 1789.

leg!, if it takes a. See if it . . .

leg bags. Stockings: U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; † by 1890.

leg covers. Trousers: ca. 1870–1900. Recorded in 1889 (see sin-hiders). Cf. top-cover and shirt-front cover.

leg cull. He who, in a gang that practises 'the old nob' (pricking in the belt), acts the sailor, usually drunk and always with plenty of money, which he flashes about, esp. to the 'flat' or dupe; it is he who carries the 'nob' or leather belt and pricks or pinches it: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1890. See cull, n., 3 and 4; the leg is perhaps an adumbration of leg-pull.

leg-glazier. 'A thief who carries the apparatus of a glazier, and calls at houses when he knows the master and mistress are out, telling the servant that he has been sent to clean and mend the windows. By these means he obtains admission, and plunders the house of any thing which he can conveniently carry off': 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx; app. † by 1890.

leg-kid. 'A lad who, in order to draw the proprietor from his store, etc., takes some articles and runs off,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. leg, n., 4, and v., 3.

leg(-)rope. Hope: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

leg-warmer; usually in pl. 'A pair of stockings . . . Leg-warmers': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); ob. Semantically, cf. leg-covers.

legaler. A barrister: 1933, Ersine, 'A mouth-piece, tongue'; extant. He makes everything 'fine and legal'.

leger. A collier that consistently and deliberately defrauds his customers: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 'Know therefore, that there be inhabiting in & about London, certaine caterpillers (coliers I should say) that term themselves (among themselves) by the name of legers who for that the honourable the L. Maior of the cite of London, & his officers, looke straitly to the measuring of coales, doe (to prevent the execution of his justice,) plant themselves in and about suburbs of London, as Shorditch, White-chappel, Southwark . . . and there they have a house or yard, that hath a back gate, because it is the more convenient for their cosening purpose.' Recorded only in Greene, though again in 1592, and also in the forms legier and lieger, it would seem to have become † long before 1700. Ex the † S.E. adj. leger, 'light', itself ex Fr., itself ex Low L.

legering is less common as n. than as adj. (see, esp., legering law): 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 'The law of legering'; Greene's definition is to be found under legering law; app. † by 1700 at latest. See:—

legering law is the c. term (current ca. 1580–1660) for the practice described in part at leger; that passage continues:—'The Leger, the crafty collier I meane, riseth very early' and, at Croydon, Greenwich or Romford, buys his coal cheap from a country collier. 'Now having bought his coales, he carrieth the Country Collier home to his legering place and there at the backe gate causeth him to unloade . . . As soon as the Countrie Collier hath dispatcht and is gone, then the Leger who hath three or foure hired men under him, bringeth forth his own sacks, which be long & narrow, holding at the most not three bushels, so that they gaine in the change of everie sacke a bushell for their pains . . . But this sufficeth not, for they fill not these sacks full by far, but put into them some two bushels and a halfe, laying in the mouth of the sacke certain great coles, which they call fillers, to make the sack shew faire, although the rest be small wilow coles, and halfe dros. When they have not filled their sacks, but thrust coles into them, that which they lay uppermost, is best filled, to make the greater shew: then a tall sturdie knave, that is all ragd, and durtie on his legs, as thogh he came out of the Countrie (for they durtie theyr hose and shoos on purpose to make themselves seem countrie colliers :) Thus with two sacks a peece they either go out at the back gate, or steal out at the street side, and so go up and downe the suburbs . . . The poore cookes & other citizens that buy them, thinke they be countrie colliers, that have left some coles of their load, and would gladly have monie, supposing (as the statute is) they be good and lawfull sackes, are thus coosned by the legers, and have but two bushels and a halfe for foure bushels, and yet are extreamlie rackt in the price, which is not onely a great hindrance to her Majesties poore commons, but greatly prejudiciall to the master Colliers, that bring true sacks and measure out of the countrie.' For the etymology, see leger.

legged. Fettered: 1839, Brandon, 'In irons'; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 'Full-fettered; double-ironed'; by 1896 (F & H), † in England; by 1910, † in U.S.A. Fettered as to the legs.—2. A variant of lagged (see lag, v., 1), in the nuance 'sent to penal servitude': 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, 'He expected to get "legged" '; 1886 (see groat); 1887, J. W. Horsley; 1895, Caminada; ob. Cf. legging.

legger, 'bootlegger', is not c., but low s. In, e.g., Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1926.

legger, sham. 'Cheats who pretend to sell smuggled goods, but in reality only deal in old shopkeepers' or damaged goods' (1788, Grose, 2nd ed.), the term occurring earlier in Parker, 1781—see sham legger.

legging, n., is a variant of lagging: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, 'His brother's now at Chatham, doing a four years' "legging" '; very rare in C. 20.

legier. See leger.

legit. A stolen car that has been disguised (for sale): the automobile-stealing racket: 1929, The Saturday Evening Post; extant. Rendered legitimate.—2. See on the legit.

legit, on the. See on the legit.

legit guy. An honest citizen: 1935, Hargan; by 1945, low s. Cf. on the legit.

legitimate. A pound (sterling): 1823, Bee; † by 1910. Opposed to illegitimate, q.v. It is legitimate, in reference to the guinea coin, which was, as gen. tender, superseded ca. 1820.

legsman. A racecourse swindler that invites one to 'find the lady': late C. 19–20; slightly ob. Partridge, 1938. See leg, n., 1.

lel. To take, seize, arrest: low London s. verging on c.: mid-C. 19–20. Barrère & Leland. Ex Romany lela, 'he (or she) takes'.

lem-kee. Gum opium: C. 20. BVB. Chinese term? Cf. yen shee.

lemon. One who turns State's evidence: 1934,

Howard N. Rose; 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; extant. He turns sour on his confederates.—2. (As the lemon.) Short for the lemon game: ca. 1890–1930. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937, 'A confidence game involving collusion in betting'—and see foot-race.—2. Also its operator: Kernôt, 1929–31; extant.

lemon bowl. 'A lemon rind fitted in the bowl of an opium pipe,' BVB: since ca. 1925. Contrast orange bowl.

lemon game. A swindle; esp. in a pool game: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Ex lemon, 'something worthless': cf. 'The answer is a lemon' = No!, or No luck!

lemon-squash, the; lemon-squash man. The latter operates the former, which is the rhyming s. form of 'the wash', q.v.: since ca. 1920. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938 (both phrases).

lemon-steerer. An assistant, a decoy, in the lemon game: 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night Hawk, 'A ragged "lemon-steerer" [came] for his little wooden box of low-grade opium-pills'; extant. Cf. bunco-steerer.

length. Six months' imprisonment: 1859, H; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; 1906, G. R. Sims, Mysteries of Modern London, 'The home-coming of father, who has done a "length" or a "stretch"', is sometimes quite a local event'; extant. Suggested by stretch, n., 4. Less gen. than half a stretch.

lent. 'Japanese fibrous morphine,' BVB, 1942. Either because 'lent' by Japan or because it is less 'rich, substantial' than the ordinary sort of morphine.

lesb, lesbie, lesbo. A Lesbian (female pervert): C. 20; by 1940 at latest, they were s. BVB, 1942. The second is also an adj.: BVB.

leso. See lezo.

Less Sleep and More Speed. 'The Lake Shore and Michigan Southern [railroad], with its reputation for speed,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Punning the initial capitals.

lesso. See lezo.

let 'er rip! is an underworld c.p. ('Go ahead with the enterprise!'), where 'er = theft or other crime. In, e.g., Geo. Bronson-Howard, Sears of the Seven Seas, 1907. But it is merely a special application of a very general c.p.

let-in. 'At gambling, a betraying,' The London Guide, 1818; by 1880, gen. s. Ex the s. verbal phrase, to let in (to deceive).

let-loose match, classified in Egan's Grose, 1823, as a c. term, is bull-baiting j.

let loose powder. To 'set off explosive in a safe,' Rose, 1934: since ca. 1920.

latched. (Of a door, a window-fastening that is) difficult to open, hard to handle quietly: since ca. 1920. Kernôt, 1929–31. Cf. s. bitched, 'spoilt, ruined, damaged', and *fu*ked*, 'exhausted, done for', and letch, 'amorous fancy or impulse': partly a cumulative sexual idea, partly latched perverted.

lettary. See letty.

letter carriers; very rare in singular. 'Young tramps, many of whom persist in writing letters home to tell of their "adventures" on the road,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910. They carry the letters they receive—and, until they can post them, the letters they write.

letter Q. 'The mace, or billiard-slum, is sometimes called going upon the letter Q, or the letter Q, alluding to an instrument used in playing billiards': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1896 (F & H). The mace leads to billiard-cue (whence billiard slum); hence to the letter Q.

letter(-)racket. 'Going about to respectable houses with a letter or statement, detailing some case of extreme distress, as shipwreck, sufferings by fire, &c; by which many benevolent, but credulous, persons are induced to relieve the fictitious wants of the impostors, who are generally men, or women, of genteel address, and unfold a plausible tale of affliction': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1896, F & H; extant.

lettered. Burnt, i.e. branded, in the hand as a criminal: 1785, Grose (at charactered); † by 1880. Certain alphabetical letters, encaustic, indicated certain crimes—or categories of criminals:

lettuce. Paper money: Canadian carnival crooks': C. 20. Anon. letter, June 1, 1946. Soft (cf. soft stuff) and green (cf. green fodder); cf. cabbage, 2.

letty, 'a bed' (H, 1859), is not c., but parlyaree, ex It. letto, a bed.—2. Hence, to lodge (at a place): parlyaree: 1875, Thos Frost, Circus Life.—3. (Ex 1 and 2.) Also lettary: lodgings: pitchmen's s.: 1934, Philip Allingham, Cheapjack.

levant. To swindle (a person) on the race-course in the manner described in levanter: race-course c.: 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; app. † by 1850; prob. s. from 1800 or 1810. Perhaps ex Sp. levantar, to lift, as in levantar el campo, to break up camp.

levant, run a. See end of levanter.

levanter, 'an absconder', is ineligible; but it has a race-course sense, which is c.: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, where we learn that a levanter takes a bet (and the stake) and, if and when his accomplice, a 'chosen pell', informs him that he has lost, he disappears with the stake-money; app. † by 1850, after having > s. ca. 1800 or 1810. The practice is known as levanting or running a levant (Vaux, 1812). Prob. ex levant (as above).

levanting. See end of preceding entry.

level, v. To speak, to act, to be 'on the level'—honest, sincere. "Are you leveling? This ain't a ride?" "No, no," he shrugged impatiently, but his eyes made a liar out of him,' Fred C. Painton in Flynn's, Dec. 12, 1936; by 1940, s.

level, on the. See on the level.

Levi Straus(s). An overall without a bib: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex the maker's name?

lezo, also leso or lesso. A Lesbian: Australian: since ca. 1930. Baker, 1942. I.e., 'Lesbian' + the s. suffix -o; cf. lesb.

li yuen (or capitals), 'best grade of smoking opium', Convict, 1934: not c., but drug-traffic j. A Chinese term.

lib, n. Rest; sleep: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All (see quot'n at long lib); 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue (ditto); 1688, Holme; 1753, John Poulter (see long lib); app. † by 1800. Cf. libbege; but prob. ex the v.—2. A mistress or paramour: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; extant. For origin, see the 1698 reference in:—

lib, v.; in C. 16, also lyp. To lie; to sleep, or rest: 1567, Harman, 'In what lipken hast thou lipped in this darkemans . . .?'; 1620, Dekker, Villanies Discovered, 'Store of Strommell wee have here, and i'th Skipper Lib in state'; 1688, Holme, 'Lib, ly, lye down'; 1698, B.E., 'To Tumble—sexually—‘or Lyc together’; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (libb); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1848, Sinks of London (‘To live together’); 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), ‘to sleep’; 1889, B & L; † by 1896 (F & H). Prob. a perversion of lig, the C. 14–16 form of ‘to lie (down)’.

lib-ken. See libken.

libb. See lib, n. and v.

libb(-)ken. See libken.

libbege; libbedge. Harman, 1566, has ‘a lybbege, a bedde’; 1608–9, Dekker, ‘The Canters Dictionarie’ in Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands, ‘Lybbege a bedde’; 1665, R. Head (libedge); 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme (libberdge); 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (libbedge); 1714, Alex. Smith (libege); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant’s Tongue (libbige); 1785, Grose (libbege); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1870. Cf. lib, n. and v., and cf. Erse leabha, ‘a bed’.

libben is a variant of libken, q.v. 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, ‘Libben . . . An house to lie in’; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., ‘A private dwelling House’; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1796, Grose, 3rd ed. (as in B.E.); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1870.

libberdge, libbige, libedge. See libbege.

libken; lipken, lypken. ‘A Lypken, a house to lye in,’ Harman, 1566, i.e., a lodging-house; 1608–9, Dekker, ‘The Canters Dictionarie’ in Lanthorne and Candle-light, ‘Libken, a house to lye in’; 1610, Rowlands, ‘Lybkin, a house to lodge people’; 1612, Dekker, in his description (O per se O) of beggars’ lodgings, spells it libkin; so too Holme, 1688; 1698, B.E. (libkin), ‘A House to Lye in; also a Lodging’—repeated in A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, ‘Libb Ken, a lodging-house’; 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, Augustus Mayhew (libb-ken); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1870 or 1880. I.e., lib, n., 1 + ken, 1.

library bird. A tramp, a beggar, a down-and-out that shelters in a library; esp. one addicted to the practice: tramps’: since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, ‘In order to avoid bad weather, or from an honest desire to . . . improve his mind’.

lick-box. A sodomite: C. 20. BVB, 1942.

lid. ‘A chief of police; police restraint,’ Leverage, 1925; 1942, BVB, ‘Criminal suppression’; extant. Nuance one: ‘He’s “the tops”’; nuance two: ‘That puts the lid on it!’

lid, be in the. To wear—be wearing—a hat: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Lid, ‘a hat’: adopted ex Australian (esp. Sydneysiders’) s.

lie on one’s hip. See lay . . .

lie on one’s (or the) side. To smoke opium: 1934, Rose; 1942, BVB; extant. A polite form of lay on one’s hip.

lie under the blue blanket. To sleep in the open: tramps’: ca. 1860–1910. B & L, 1889, at blue blanket. I.e., the blue blanket of the sky; cf. do a starry.

lieger. See leger.

life. ‘By this term is meant the various cheats and deceptions practised by the designing part of mankind; a person well versed in this kind of knowledge, is said to be one that knows life,’ Vaux, 1812. Hence, it appears that to know life (with prenominal variations) is, in this sense, a sort of c. o.p. of ca. 1790–1830. (Also in Jon Bee and in Egan’s Grose.)

life(-)liner. A reprieve: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. A variant of lifeboat and saver.

life on the instalment plan. An indefinite term of imprisonment: convicts’: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Gallantly humorous.

life-preserver, ‘a slung shot’, is classified by F & H, 1896, as ‘American thieves’ (Matsell, 1859); but it was never c.; indeed, it is prob. to be classified as S.E. It preserves the life of the man that wields it.

lifeboat. A reprieve, a pardon: Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, ‘Criminal Slang’); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1927, Kane; 1930, Burke, ‘A pardon or commutation of sentence. “He goes stool for a lifeboat”’; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1931, John Wilstach; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle, ‘A pardon, a commutation of sentence’; extant. A pleasantly figurative use.

lifer. ‘A convict who is sentenced to transportation for life’ (1860, H, 2nd ed.): 1831, R. Dawson, The Present State of Australia; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1870, B. Farjeon, Grif; 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail, ‘Seven became “lifers”, and three went to Broadmoor’; 1889, B & L; 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne (U.S.A.); 1896, F & H; 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow; 1903, Flynt (U.S.A.); by 1910, s.—2. Hence, a sentence for life: 1832 (O.E.D.); Jan. 4, 1843, trial of John Fulford, ‘“They will only give me a lifer”’ (Sessions Paper. Central Criminal Court); 1863, Tom Taylor, The Ticket-of-Leave Man, ‘If I’m nailed, it’s a lifer’; 1877, Anon., Five Years’ Penal Servitude; 1887, Baumann, ‘He got a lifer’; 1896, F & H; 1908, Edgar Wallace, Angel Esquire; by 1910, s.

lift, n. See lift, the, 1, 2.—3. Ca. 1605–30, as in Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608: ‘Then there is a kind of Lift, who like a Jugler doth all his feates of himselfe, not caring for the helpe of others; he goes attired like a Servingman, booted and spurd and dirtie as if hee had new ridden; his haunts are the best townes in the countrie upon market dayes, but most commonly Faires; the birdes he watches for are Knights, Esquires, or Gentlemen, that light at the greatest Innes, whither most resort is; who shall no sooner come from horse, but this Lifter is readie to hold his stirrop, or to walke his horse, as officiously as if he wore his cloth: So that to the Guest he seemes to be one belonging to the house, and to the servants of the house hee appeares to bee a follower of the Gentleman newly alighted. But the Guest being departed from his Inne, to the towne or into the faire, backe comes this counterfeit Bleucoat, running in all haste for his masters cloake-bag or portmantua, and cals to the ostler or chamberlaine by his name to deliver it, because some things must be taken out for his Knight, or the Gentleman his maister, that are in it. The prey is put (hereupon) into the Vultures tallents, and away flies he presently to his nest, to feede and fat his ravenous gorge with the garbage which he hath gotten.’—4. A robbery: 1665, Anon., The Highway Woman, ‘She . . . was, for a Lift from a Mercer in Pater-Noster Row, taken and committed to Newgate’; † by 1860. Ex 1.—5. Drug-caused exhilaration: Am. drug addicts': since ca. 1910. BVB. Cf. high.

lift (v.t. and v. absolute), 'to shoplift', was c. until ca. 1660, then slang. Skelton, 1526 (O.E.D.); Greene, 1592. For origin, see lifting, n.—2. To assist (a person): U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; slightly ob.—and, by 1910, no longer c.

lift, do upon the. See do upon the lift.

lift, the. Robbing from houses and esp. shops; the art and/or the profession of shoplifting: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 'I omitted divers other divelish vices; as the nature of the lift, the black art, & the curbing law'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'The Lift or Buckteen, that is Shoplifting'; 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected; 1781, G. Parker; 1797, Potter; by 1850, current in U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York); 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary, where lift = a robbery, a theft; 1896, F & H; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); extant. Ex lift, v., 1.—2. In 'lifting law' (shoplifting), the lift is 'he that first stealeth': 1592, R. Greene, The Second Conny-catching—see lifting law for further details; 1608, Dekker; seemingly † by 1660, except as = shoplift(er), which remained c. until ca. 1830.

lift flesh. See pull flesh.

lift the stare. To open a window: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); extant. Stare, because one stares out of it; perhaps with a reference to star, v.

lifter. A synonym of lift, the, 2nd sense: 1592, Greene, The Second Conny-catching, in the section on 'the lifting law', speaks of 'the Lifters villany'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers; 1753, John Poulter. This sense was app. † by 1790.—2. Hence, a (petty) thief: 1666, Anon., Leathermore's Advice (or The Nicker Nicked)—see quot'n at foiler; app. † by 1790.—3. A crutch: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1840. With it one lifts oneself.—4. (Ex sense 1.) Any shoplifter: 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1930, s.—5. A pickpocket: U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. In, e.g., Charles E. Still, Styles in Crime, 1938.

lifting, n. The robbery of goods (not furniture) and parcels from houses and shops; esp., shoplifting: 1592, Robert Greene, A Disputation (Laurence, the pickpocket, addressing Nan, the whore), 'I am sure all thy bravery comes by his Nipping, Foysting, and lifting'; app. this specific sense was † by 1730 at latest. The semantics: the object is raised prior to its being conveyed away.

lifting, adj. Mainly in:—

lifting feathers, vbl n. Pickpocketry: July 7, 1928, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'When Dips Fall Out', 'The gentle art of "lifting feathers"'; extant. Ex the light touch required.

lifting law. In The Second part of Conny-catching, 1592, Robert Greene lists the terms of 'lifting law' ('stealing of any parcels') thus:—'He that first stealeth, the lift. He that receives it, the Markar. He that standeth without and carries it away, the Santar. The goodes gotten, Garbage'; ibid., 'The Lift, is he that stealeth or prowleth any plate, jewells, boults of saten, velvet, or such parcels from any place, by a sleight conveyance under his cloke, or so secretly that it may not be espied: of lifts there be divers kinds as there natures be different, some base rogues, yt'—i.e., that—'lift when they com into alehouses, quart pots, platters, clokes, swords, or any such paltry trash, which commonly is called pilfering or petulacery, for under ye cullor of spending two or three pots of ale, they lift away any thing that commeth within the compasse of their reach, having a fine and nimble agility of the hand . . . : these ar the common and raskall sort of lifts, but the higher degrees & gentlemen lifts have to the performance of their faculty 3. parties of necessity: the Lift, the Marker & the Santar: the lift attired in the forme of a civill Countrey Gentleman, comes with the Marker into some mercers shop, habercashers, goldsmiths, or any such place where any particular parcels of woorth are to be convaidd, and there he cals to see a bout of Saten, velvet, or any such commoditie, and not liking the pile, culler or bracke [i.e., flaw], he cals for more, & the whiles he begins to resolve which of them most fitly may be lifted, and what Garbage (for so he cals the goods stolne) may be most easily convaidd, then he calles to the Mercers man and sais, sirrha, reach me that peece . . . or that jewell . . . , and whilst the fellow turns his back, he commits his garbage to the marker: for note, the Lift is without his cloake, in his doublet and hose, to avoid the more suspition: The Marker which is the receyver of the Lifts luggage, gives a winke to the Santar that walkes before the window, and then the Santar going by in great hast, the Marker calls him and saies, sir a word with you. I have a message to do unto you from a verie friend of yours, and the errand is of some importance: truly sir saies the santar I have verie urgent busines in hand . . . , but one woorde and no more saies the Marker and then hee delivers him whatsoever the Lift hath convaidd unto him, and then the Santar goes his way, who never came within the shop, and is a man unknownen to them all.' Greene goes on to describe variations employed when the prospective victims are lawyers and scriveners and to remark that the receivers of the stolen goods are 'either some notorious Bawds in whose houses they lie . . . or els they bee Brokers'. In Greene's Disputation, 1592, 'I was talking about the Lift'—sense 1—'commending what a good quallitie it was, and how hurtfull it was, seeing we practise in Mercers shops, with Haberdashers of small wares, Haberdashers of Hattes and Cappes, amongst Merchaunt Taylors for Hoase and Doublets, and in suche places getting much gains by Lifting, when there is no good purchase abroad by Foysting'—no worthwhile booty to be had out-of-doors by pickpocketry. Dekker lifts and elaborately manipulates this account when, in The Belman of London, 1608, he comes to give a section to 'the Lifting Law'.

lig. A bed: 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 'A bedstead'; app. † by 1896 (F & H). Lig is a dial. form (rare as n.) of 'to lie (down, or in bed); to rest, a rest'. The c. lig prob. comes from the dial. verb.

lig robber. See ref. of 1931: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A thief who hides under a bed or in a closet until the woman is alone in the house, when she is robbed and possibly assaulted'; extant.

ligating a candle. See lighting a candle.

liggen. To lie down: 1610, Rowlands (see quot'n at couch a hogshhead). The term seems to have had a short life, to judge by the records, for this Rowlands authority is app. the only one. Straight from Dutch.

light, n. Information: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; by 1900, † in this precise nuance, but it survives in the nuance 'piece of evidence'—'a clue'—a 'glimmer': as in George Ingram, The Muffled Man, 1936 (p. 63). Cf. S.E. throw light on a subject.—2. See lights.

light, v. To find out, to detect: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; † by 1920. Ex S.E. alight on.—2. To take a drug: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. light artillery.

light, bring to. 'To inform of any robbery, &c., which has been some time executed and concealed, is called bringing the affair to light; . . . to give up any stolen property for the sake of a reward, to quash a prosecution, is also called bringing it to light. A thief, urging his associates to a division of any booty they have lately made, will desire them to bring the swag to light': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1900. Ex the S.E. sense.

light a candle occurs mostly as a vbl n.: see lighting a candle.

light artillery. (Also artillery.) A drug addict using a hypodermic needle: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'Lay away from him: he's light artillery'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. shot, 'injection of drug by means of hypodermic needle'; cf. also light, v., 2.

light blue. Gin: 1823, Egan's Grose; 1848, Sinks of London; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. Prob. suggested by blue riband, blue ruin, blue tape (2).

light feeder. A silver spoon: 1859, H; perhaps it was s. by 1864, to judge by the implied classification in H, 3rd ed., though F & H, in 1896, classify it as c. It may have been a deliberate variation of wedge feeder; the light refers either to the weight of silver as compared with gold or to the shininess of polished silver.

light gravier (or granier). See gravier.

light horsemen, the singular being extremely rare. George Barrington, Barrington's New London Spy for 1805, Appendix, 'The gangs denominated Light-Horsemen were generally composed of one or more receivers, together with Coopers, Watermen, and Lumpers . . . They went on board [the ships in the Thames] completely prepared with iron crows, adzes, and other utensils, to open and again head up the casks—with shovels to take out the sugar, and a number of bags made to contain 100 lb. each. These bags were denominated black strap; having been previously dyed black, to prevent their being seen in the night, when stowed in the bottom of a wherry . . . The receivers generally furnished the money necessary to bribe the officers and mate in the first instance, which was perhaps from 20 to 30 guineas a night; and also provided the black strap. The Watermen procured as many boats as were wanted. The Lumpers unstowed the casks in the hold. The Coopers took out the heads, and all hands afterwards assisted in filling the bags, dispatching one boat after another to an appointed place'—Barrington shows also that they stole much coffee and rum; 1828, G. Smeeton, Doings in London, where (p. 317) the term is mentioned—or at least implied—as being ob., if not indeed †. For semantics, cf. heavy horsemen, q.v.

light house, 'a man with a very red nose', is classified by Matsell as c., but it was almost certainly 's.—adopted from England.—2. 'One who knows every detective by sight, and can "tip him off" to his comrades,' J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (glossary); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1925, Leverage (a look-out man); 1927, Kane; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (look-out man for gang of thieves, for a brothel, for a speakeasy); 1932, Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps (England), 'A tramp who knows police'; 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant. To his confederates, he serves as a lighthouse against the shoals of observation and the rocks of detection. 'As mariners at sea look for the beacon light . . ., so tramps and criminals look for their "lighthouse"' (Flynt).—3. A close-fisted person: tramps': 1931, Stiff; extant. Perhaps orig. 'inhospitable'.—4. A procurer for a brothel: tramps' and beggars': 1931, Stiff; extant. Contrast sense 2.

light-mans. See lightmans.

light piece. A small gift of money: tramps': since ca. 1890: 1907, Jack London, The Road (see quot'n at set down); 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; 1939, Terence McGovern; extant. Light in comparison with what one would like to receive; light also in comparison with a packet of food or a bundle of clothes.

light stuff. Non-spirituous liquor: bootleggers': Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; by 1945, coll. I.e., not heavy liquor.—2. 'A procurer for a brothel,' BVB, 1942: C. 20. With a pun on 'red-light district'.

light wet. Gin: 1823, Egan's Grose; app. † by 1860. Egan classifies it as c., but prob. it was s. Opp. heavy wet; cf. light blue.

lightening. See lightning.

lighter. A drug addict: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex light, v., 2.

lighter, lump the. See lump the lighter.

lighters, an animal's 'lights': borderline between street s. and tramps' c. In, e.g., Scott Pearson, To the Streets and Back, 1932.

lighthouse. See light house.

lighting a candle. An instance, or the practice, of 'going into public-houses and leaving the reckoning unpaid': 1797, Potter, Dict., where it is misprinted ligating . . .; so too Andrewes, 1809; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880. To light a candle and then to leave it untended.

lightman. See the 1707 reference in:—

lightmans. 'The lightmans, the daye,' Harman, 1566; 1608–9, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie' in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'Lightmans, the day'; 1610, Rowlands, 'Lightmans, the day'; 1676, Coles, 'Light-mans, c. [break of] day'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'Lightmans, c. the Day or Day-break'; 1707, J. Shirley, who also spells it, incorrectly, lightman; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (erroneously, lightmens); 1828, Lytton Bulwer (erroneously, lightman's); 1848, Sinks of London (erroneously, lightments); 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); † by 1880 in Britain. I.e., light (of day) + -mans.

lightments. See lightmans, reference of 1848.

lightning. Gin: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Come we'll go over and give you a noggin of lightning'; 1792, The Minor Jockey Club; 1797, Potter, Dict. of Cant and Flash, where it is spelt lightening—as does George Andrewes in 1809; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; by 1820 (if not, indeed, a few years earlier) it was s. Ex the rapidly intoxicating effect of gin; cf. flash of lightning.

lightning, ride the. See ride . . .

lights. A box (or boxes) of matches; matches: beggars': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 'The majority of match-venders offer one hand to the public for alms, and carry their "lights" (matches) in the other'; extant. By a common figure of speech.

lighty. Youngster; young fellow: South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. App. ex Eng. adj. light (of heart, mind, head).

like mud through a blue goose is a convicts' phrase, indicative of a swift or easy passage through a city or a district: since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. See blue goose: 'The open-mesh or steel-barred sides . . . through which small articles may be thrown, are responsible for the expression' (Irwin).

likeness. 'A phrase used by thieves when the officers or turnkeys are examining their countenance. As, the traps are taking our likeness; the officers are attentively observing us': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1896, F & H; † by 1920. It is the phrase, not the term itself, which is c.; likeness, 'representation of an object, image, portrait' has always been S.E., indeed it dates from C. 10.

liker. A hobble, a halter: horse-copers': late C. 19-20. Edwin Pugh, The Cockney at Home, 1914. Ex Fr. licou.

lil. 'Lill, a pocket-book': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'We therefore determined . . . to content ourselves with one or two rum lils, if they could be had'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', 2nd ed.; by the 1850's, current in New York—to judge by Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1889, B & L; by 1896 (F & H) it was low s. Ex Romany lil, a book; cf. George Borrow's Romano Lavo-Lil, a Romany word-book. Ultimately ex L. liber.—2. Hence (?), a bad bill (or exchange): U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; ob. Cf.—3, 4. The senses, 'a paper or document', 'a five-pound note', are Romany (B & L). Cf.:—5. But if the five-pound note happens to be counterfeit, it falls within this definition:—Feb. 9, 1905, Sessions Papers, 'I have some lils on me which I was going to sell'; 'They carried on a profitable business as manufacturers of "Bank of Engraving" notes, which are known to the fraternity as "Lills", just as base-coin is known as "snyde"', Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, 1925; extant. Cf. senses 2 and 3.

lilies. The hands: since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Perhaps ironic: cf. lily-white. But prob. some romance-reading crook's coinage, prompted by numerous references to the heroine's 'lily-white hands'.

lill. See lil.

lilly is Ersine's spelling of lily, 2.

lilly-white. See lily-white.

lily. A very credulous person; a born 'sucker': 1930, Geo. London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1931, Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering, 'A "high-brow" synonym for a sucker'; Feb. 19, 1935, The New York Sun, 'A sucker has many names among the [commercial] crooks . . . "lily, mug, pushover, mooch" are most common'; extant. A person with very white hands is presumed to be 'soft'.—2. Hence, an effeminate man: 1933, Ersine; by 1940, low s. Cf. Eng. s. pansy.

lily Benjamin (hence b—). A white uppercoat: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, 'What a slap-up lily benjamin he had on when he was nabbed'; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'A white great-coat'; 1887, Baumann; > by 1889 (B & L) low s.; by 1900, †. See Benjamin; lily, ex the colour.

lily(-)white. In 1698, B.E., 'Lilly-white, c. a Chimney-sweeper'; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, who app. deems it to be s.—and it prob. had > s. by 1760 or thereabouts. By antiphrasis ex the colour of a chimney-sweep blackened in the exigencies of his sooty work.—2. A negro: 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial; 1823, Egan's Grose, 'A man of colour'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1880, low s.

lim. A police official: 1925, Leverage; ob. Short for 'limb of the law'?

limb, v., 'to cheat', is not c., but low s.—2. The senses 'to tear to pieces; to thrash' ('Ducange Anglicus', 1857) are low s. rather than c. Ex 'tear (someone) limb from limb'.

limbo. Prison: 1698, B.E. (at quod), 'The Dab's in the Quod, c. the poor Rogue is in Limbo'; 1785, Grose, 'A prison, confinement'. Grose does not classify it as c.: the term may well have > s. before 1785, although it seems to have remained c. in U.S.A. until ca. 1930—witness E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851; G. P. Burnham, Memoirs, 1872; Frank Pinkerton, Cornered at Last, 1887; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage. Ex the S.E. sense, 'purgatory'.

lime, v. To apprehend, to arrest (a person): 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1910. For semantics, cf. the explanation at lime-twig.—2. To dose with cocaine: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 1.

lime-bird. A prisoner: 1841, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1900. Cf. lime and lime-twig.

lime-jolt. A dose of cocaine: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. lime, v., 2, and jolt, n., 2.

lime-twig; usually pl.—in fact, I query whether it was ever used in the singular. In 'bat-fowling' (see cony-catching), Greene tells us, 'The Cards [are] to be called, the Limetwigs', for in this swindle the victim is caught by (faked) cards precisely as a bird is caught on a limed twig. See 'Browne's cant vocabulary'.

limebird. See lime-bird.

Limey, 'an Englishman': not c., but s.—orig., nautical s. 'So called since the days when English men-of-war and other sailing ships served lime juice as a preventive of scurvy . . . used by the American sailors who envied the English tar his immunity from this sickness which they suffered on long voyages' (Irwin).

limit, the. 'When the men get you over against the wall, and really finish up on you, we call that the Limit,' Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937: low dance-halls and low dancing classes; prostitutes' and near-prostitutes': C. 20. I.e., finish or terminate tumescence by experiencing an orgasm.

limiting law. 'The lymitting Lawe, discoursing the orders of such as followe Judges, in their circuites, and goe about from Fayre to Fayre,' R. Greene, A Disputation, 1592; † by 1640. The fair-towns being the limits of their activities?

limmy is a variant of jimmy = jemmy (a burglar's tool): 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'): † by 1900. Perhaps = Lemmy, the pet-form of Lemuel. Nevertheless, I suspect it of being a misprint.

limper. A professional beggar that pretends he has injured his leg and that he has done so in his trade of house-painter: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; extant.

limpy. 'A cripple. If he has a wooden leg he is peg,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': C. 20: 1931, IA; by 1933, low s.—witness W. R. Burnett, The Giant Swing. Ex his limp.

line, n. See line, get in(to).—2. See line, the. Independently in Ersine, 1933: 'Line, n. . . . 3. A redlight district.'—3. As synonym for lay, n., 2, it seems to have been c. in Britain during the approximate period 1810–40, but only when in composition with c. terms: see, e.g., fence line and mace line. In the U.S.A., however, it may have been c. of ca. 1850–1900: e.g., in A. Pinkerton, Professional Thieves and the Detective, 1881. In C. 20 U.S.A., it tends to mean 'a talk that is intended to deceive a mark' (Ersine, 1933). Merely a special application of the S.E. sense, 'a department of activity' (O.E.D.).—4. 'A vein into which injections are made,' BVB, 1942: U.S.A. Cf. channel and main line.

line, v. To lampoon, satirize, banter, chaff: possibly c. of ca. 1818–40, but prob. low s.; 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields.

line, cut the. 'To cut a story short, to end a story': 1889, B & L (at cut . . .); 1891, F & H; app. † by 1918. Cf. cut the string—at string, cut the.

line, down the. See down the line.

line, get in or into (a). 'To get a man into a line, i.e., to divert his attention by a ridiculous or absurd story': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To get a person in a fine, or in a string, is to engage them in a conversation, while your confederate is robbing their person or premises'; 1828, P. Egan, Finish; app. > low s. ca. 1840. Among C. 20 'con men', however, have a sucker in line is to have the intention of swindling someone with whom one has already made contact: Percy J. Smith, Con Man, 1938.

line, in ; line, out of. See in line ; out of line.

line, take it in. See main-line, v.

Line, the, is rather police s. than criminals' c. Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901, p. 108, 'The Line differs in different cities Speaking roughly, the Line is a community's Tenderloin . . . ; . . . in police parlance a trip down the Line implies a general survey of the local criminal situation'; 1911, Clifford G. Roe, Horrors of the White Slave Trade; 1931, Godfrey Irwin. Hence, usually uncapitalised, the line has come to mean 'the red-light district': see line doctor and line load; cf. 'She'd been on every line from San Diego to Ketchikan' (Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough, 1936). Prob. line = a regional strip or stretch.

line, the. Esp. in be in the line, to be a dealer in forged banknotes: ca. 1790–1820. Jon Bee, 1823.—2. In the line of life, living dishonestly: 1823, Bee, 'A w— who does not rob, is not yet got into the line, or manner of doing it—she is only in the way of life'; app. † by 1890.—2. See Line, the.—4. In Australian c., in the line = under police observation: since the 1920's. M & B, 1944. Cf. sense 2 and the line-up of 'possibles' at an identification parade.

line doctor. 'I was, comparatively recently, a "line doctor" (a physician who examines the girls in houses of prostitution),' Harry Roberts, 'Introduction' to Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, English edition, 1936: white-slave traffic: C. 20. Ex red line.

line load. 'He'—a taximan—'told them' (two girls) 'to go over to the — Hotel, a joint that he had often brought patrons to. These are known as "line loads",' Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, 1936: white-slave traffic: since ca. 1920: 1936, ibid., '"Line loads" (taxi-cab customers)'. Cf. the preceding.

line up. To enlist with, associate oneself with; esp., to join a band of hoboes: tramps': since ca. 1890. Jack London, The Road, 1907, 'It all spelled Adventure. Very well; I would tackle this new world. I "lined" myself up alongside those road-kids'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's (of young thieves), 'Until you get wise to th' ropes an' line up with th' mob . . . it's bum pickin's'; extant.

linen armourer. In 1698, B.E., 'Linnen-armourers, c. Tailors'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, by whose time the term had app. > s. By 1830 it was †. A humorous term: cf. knight of the needle—the shears—the thimble, which are C. 18–mid-19 s. jocularities for a tailor.

linen draper. Paper; newspaper: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue,—for orig.—say 1850–65—this rhyming s. term was c.

lingo was in C. 18, and occ. later, a synonym of the slang, the flash (language), 'language of the underworld'; just—only just—possibly it was, for a decade, c. in this specific sense. Ex the Italian and Spanish versions of L. lingua, a tongue.—2. A story: U.S.A., mostly convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'That gee can hand you more lingoes than a book'; extant. A natural extension of the S.E. sense.

link, v. To steal (money) by turning out a pocket: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'The keek-cloy' or breeches pocket 'is easily picked. If the notes are in the long fold, just tip them the forks; but if there is a purse or open money in the case, you must link it'; ibid., 'I link't the blunt from his keek cloy'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open, 'Link it, turn it out'; † by 1900. A link between owner and thief is the pickpocket's hand.

linked, as in 'They were linked notes, that is, forged notes' (Sessions Papers, Feb. 1802, p. 157), is not c. but an idiosyncratic 'disguise' of Yiddish link, 'bad', as opposed to froom, 'good'.

lion, v. 'Lion. Be saucy; lion the fellow; make a lion noise; substitute noise for good sense; frighten; bluff,' Matsell, 1859; † by 1910. I.e., to roar (at a person) like a lion.

lip, n., 'impudence', is usually classified as s., which it had certainly > by 1850; but it may orig. have been c., for the earliest reference—much the earliest—is in David Haggart, Life, 1821. Cf. s. cheek.—2. A house: 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1880. Ex libken.—3. A lawyer, esp. a barrister defending criminals: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; June 7, 1930, Flynn's; 1930, Burke, 'So I says "Get a lip for a writ an' I'll lam" '; 1930, George London; Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's; Nov. 1931, IA; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. Evidently suggested by (the no longer c.) mouthpiece.

lip, v. To sing: 1789, George Parker Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'I'll lip ye a chaunt . . . intitled . . . The World as it wags'; 1809, The Rambler's Magazine; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx, where the song entitled 'The Man of Many Pursuits' begins, 'Come, lip us a chant, pals! Why mum thus your dubber?'; 1874, H; † by 1910. I.e., to give lip to, to utter.—2. Hence, to speak: ca. 1789, The Sandman's Wedding; † by 1870.—3. Hence, to order: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. cxci, 'Sawbones lipped a snitch. . . . The surgeon ordered a general search'; † by 1900.

lip-burner. A short cigarette-butt: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant.

lip-trap. Alcoholic liquor: 1925, Leverage: rather is it low s. than c. lipken. See libken.

lips. See:—

lisper; usually pl. 'Lips, Lispers': 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1797, Potter, who ambiguously puts lips in the position of the c. term to be defined; as also does Andrewes, 1809; by 1889 (B & L), †. That which is concerned when one lisps; but partly by mere verbal resemblance.

list, n. See loist.

list, v., 'to record a criminal and his list of offences' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931): not c., but police j.

listener; usually pl. The ear: s. (low and pugilistic), not c. E.g., J. Burrowes, 1821; P. Egan, passim.

lit; lit up; all lit up (BVB). Cocaine-exhilarated: 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle (lit up); 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, Confessions of a Drug Addict, "Lit up", as the jargon of the dope world has it, like "an Egyptian chemist's shop"; 1934, Rose (all lit up); 1942, BVB; extant. Ex the same terms applied to spirituous and vinous intoxications.

lit the dropper. 'To suck all the air out of the medicine dropper before taking an injection,' BVB, 1942: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. See dropper; lit app. = 'to lighten'.

lit-up. See lit.

little alderman. 'A jemmy in two parts, which can be screwed together': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1896, F & H; ob. Cf. alderman, 3.

Little Barbary, Wapping, is s., not c. B.E., 1698. Ex the wildness, the lack of civilization, of the inhabitants of this poor district of London.

little ben (or Ben). A waistcoat: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1889, B & L; 1896, F & H; † by 1930. By contrast to great Joseph, or to correspond to upper Ben.

little black father. "A little black father, four year old, for eight mag." (A four quart jug for eight sous): 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, III, 55; app. † by 1890. Cf. S.E. toby jug.

little black hole, the. See black hole, 2.

Little Bo-Peep. See Bo-Peep.

Little Bull, the. See General Nurse.

little Dick Fisher. A total of four points on two dice, 3 and 1, or two 2's, at the game of hazard: 1714, T. Lucas, Memoirs of Gamesters, 'Four (call'd by the Nickers and Sharpers, little Dick-Fisher) . . .': app. ca. 1700-40. Prob. ex the name of a noted gamester.

little figure. A card that is an ace, deuce, or 'trey': professional gamblers' and card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; ob. The number is low, not high nor big.

little fully. See fully, n.

little game. A 'ruse, object, or design of criminals': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1900, no longer c. Special application of gen. coll. sense.

little go or L—G—. See go, 3.—2. (Little Go). One's first term of imprisonment: 1909, Ware; † by 1940. 'Invented by a fallen University man' (Ware): ex the name of an examination at Cambridge (England).

Little Go Court. The Commissioners' Court of Requests at Botany Bay: Australian convicts': earlier half of C. 19. Baker, 1945. Ex the legal English sense of the term; cf. prec. entry.

Little Hell, 'a small dark covered passage, leading from London-wall to Bell-alley' (Grose), is C. 18—early 19 s., not c.

little house. A reformatory: since ca. 1905. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. In contrast to—and suggested by—big house.

little joker, the. 'The "best card" known in the pack': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1890, s. Ex the 'tricks' it plays.—2. 'The pea under the thimble in the thimble-rigging game': sharpers': 1896, F & H; extant.

little lady. A passive homosexual: San Quentin: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; extant. Cf. lady, 3.

little one. A (counterfeit) sixpence: counterfeiters': 1796, Sessions Papers, May, p. 556 (trials of Ann Carlton and—in column 2—Mary Joyce); ob. As compared with a shilling or a half-crown.

little party. A State execution: 1929-31, Kernôt; extant. Ironic.

little red wagon. 'A dump wagon. Driving one is a favorite job,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1920.

little school. A reformatory (juveniles' house of correction): 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1927, Kane; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, M. H. Weseen; extant. Contrast big school.

little smack. A ten-shilling piece: mostly beggars' and tramps': 1926, Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows; extant. Contrast smack, n., 3.

little snakesman. 'Little Snakes-Man,' says George Parker in A View of Society, 1781, 'is a rig practised in the following manner: A very small boy is carried by a gang of fellows in the dead of night to a house, the sink-hole of which they have already observed open. When this gang is pretty certain that the family is in bed, they dispatch their ambassador, the boy, or Little Snakes-Man, to obtain their admittance. He turns, winds, and twists until he gets through, and then opens the back-door and admits the whole gang, who immediately plunder the house. After the robbery is completed, the Little Snakesman fastens the door thro' which the gang have departed; and then turns, winds, and twists himself out in the same manner that he entered The censure is generally laid on the innocent yet unfortunate servant'; 1785, Grose; 1859, H; 1869, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1889, B & L; 1893, No. 747; 1896, F & H; † by 1910. Ex his snaking his way into the house and ex his small size; prob. imm. ex sneaksmen, as B & L propose.

live bum. A beggar carrying money: 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; extant. His money talks; cf. live one.

live eels. Fields: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1865, low rhyming, by 1880 gen. rhyming s.

live gaff. A house, a flat, a shop, etc., that is tenanted or occupied; strictly, where people are actually in the place at the time: esp. burglars': 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; extant. Cf. live one, 1; and see gaff, n., 9.

live kite. A (forged) cheque that can be cashed: since ca. 1920. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. Contrast dead kite.

live on pudding. See pudding, 3.

live one. A (pickpocket's) likely prospect: July 7, 1928, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'When Dips Fall Out', 'Generally he could pick a "live one", and on this occasion he did not miss his guess. He selected a man of rural appearance who showed evidences of prosperity'; extant. Cf. live bum and:—2. Esp. among tramps, a person with plenty of money in his pockets: 1930, Lennox Kerr, Back-door Guest; 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller, "'Live ones" (drunks with money)'; extant.—3. An active, esp. a successful, criminal: racketeers': Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant. Contrast dead, 2.

live stock, 'lice, or fleas' (Grose, 1785), was never c.; even orig., it was, at worst, low s.: for the semantics of this expressive phrasal term, cf. chats (lice) and S.E. chattels.—2. Prostitutes: U.S.A.: C. 20. BVB, 1942. White-slave term.

live tally, 'to cohabit, though unmarried, as man and wife', is not c., but s.

live wire. A criminal; a 'wise guy' on the verge of criminality: racketeers': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex the ordinary s. sense, 'energetic, go-ahead person'.—2. 'A mark' or dupe 'with plenty of money,' Ersine, 1933; extant. Cf. live one, 1 and 2.

live with Mrs Greenfields. See Mrs Ashtip.

liver-destroyer. Brandy: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); by 1920, low s. Because, like the other spirits, brandy, if drunk in excess, leads to cirrhosis, non-technically known as 'hob-nailed liver' or 'gin-drinkers' liver'.

living fancy. See fancy, living.

Lizzie. Lisbon red wine: 1934, Mary Ellison, Sparks beneath the Ashes, 'She drinks "Lizzie" and methylated spirit'; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid. Perhaps c. originally, but by 1935 at latest it was certainly s.—low s., public-house s. Lisbon > Lis > Liz > Lizzie.

Lizzie lice. Policemen patrolling in cars: 1933, Eagle; 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 'Policemen in radio car'; extant. Also in singular: 'Lizzie-Lousie, n. A policeman who uses a small coupe' or coupé 'in which to patrol his beat' (Ersine, 1933)—that being a contemptuous diminutive.

Lizzie, orig. a Ford automobile: s., not c.

Lizzie stiff. 'A migratory worker who travels from place to place in an auto,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1918. Ex (tin) lizzie, a Ford car: that being the car most frequently used.

Lizzie tramp is s. for the preceding. Stiff, 1931.

llowyer, 'a book': tinkers' s.: 1889, B & L. (App. not Shelta; cf. Romany lil.)

load, n. Valuables, e.g. watch and chain: 1754, Sessions Papers, No. V, May-June, 'The other ordered her to leave me alone, for that she had got my load; by which I suppose she meant my watch and chain'; app. † by 1810. The load a man carries.—2. A crown-piece: mostly counterfeiters': 1892 (sec half-load).—3. Among counterfeiters, however, there is the further sense: 'Twenty half-crowns is called a load,' Sessions Papers, June 2, 1902; ibid., Jan. 8, 1906, 'Twenty coins form a load'; 1935, Cornish of the 'Yard', 'The coiner seldom gets rid of his products himself, he sells them in packages called "loads", each of which contains a recognised number of coins'; 1937, David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 'When a crook succeeds in disposing of twenty counterfeit coins he has "smashed a load"'; extant.—4. A 'dose', a ration, of a drug: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1942, BVB, also in sense 'hypodermic injection'; extant.—5. A second-hand car: U.S.A.: May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; slightly ob.

load, v. 'Quieting down the too exuberant spirits of a delemescro by "loading" him with laudanum,' No. 747, ed. by F. W. Carew, 1893, the gloss of delemescro being 'kicker' (a horse given to kicking) and the meaning of loading being, obviously, 'dosing; giving a heavy dose': horse-copers' c.: mid-C 19–20. Ex s. load, a 'dose'.

load-carrier. A carrier of counterfeit coins to the actual utterers: late C. 19–20: 1929, Tom Divall, Scoundrels and Scallywags; Ernest Raymond, We, the Accused, 1935. Cf. load, n., 2.

load of culls. A plate of hash: tramps': since ca. 1905: 1931, Godfrey Irwin. Sec culls.

load of tricks. A packet of—usually twenty—counterfeit coins: counterfeiters': Jan. 8, 1906, Sessions Papers; extant. See load, n., 3.

loaded, be. To have (often with an adverb expressive of quantity) money: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'How were they loaded?'; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, concerning a discharged prisoner's artificial arm, 'He was not permitted to take it with him . . . This was done because it was feared that the arm might be "loaded"—it might contain messages or money'; slightly ob. Cf. caravan.—2. The sense 'intoxicated, or excited, with a drug' is low s. rather than c.; it occurs in, e.g., Jim Tully, Circus Parade, 1928.

loaf of bread. The head: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming—ex England.

loafer, 'a lazy vagabond' (hence 'a lazy person'), was never c., but orig. it was certainly s.—2. Hence, a synonym of rounder, q.v.: 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.).

loag. See loge, 2, reference of 1753.

loap. See lope.

loaver. Money: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'They don't mind tipping the loaver'; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1890 (B & L), low s. A variant—by gradual corruption—of lour.

lob, n. A box; a till: the latter nuance is implied in 1708, in sense 3; 1714, Alex. Smith, The History of Highwaymen, 'Taking Lobs from behind Ratlers'; that's to say, Trunks or Boxes from behind Coaches—repeated in C. Johnson's Highwaymen, 1734; 1732, trial of Thomas Beck, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, pub. in 1735, 'We . . . stole a Baker's Lobb', glossed as 'a Money Drawer.

Lobb is a general Name for any kind of Box'; 1754, Poulter; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'To frisk a lob; to rob a till'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1829, Sessions Papers; 1839, Brandon; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); 1863, A Prison Matron, Jane Cameron, "Doing the Lob", that is, robbing the till'; 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail; 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H; 1934, B. Lecson, Lost London; 1935, The Garda Review; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; 1938, F. D. Sharpe; extant.—2. Hence, a snuff-box; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, where it is spelt lobb; 1890, B & L; † by 1896 (F & H).—3. (Always the lob.) 'Some [thieves] are ingenious at the Lob, which is going into a Shop to have a Guinea or a Pistole changed, and the Change being given, the Bringer Palms Two or Three Shillings, and then says there wants so much, which the Shopkeeper telling over again, says 'tis true and very innocently makes up the Sum' by taking more money from the till: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (going on the lob, practising this dodge); 1896, F & H; ob.—4. An awkward person: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1933, Eagle, 'A sap'; 1934, Rose, 'A chump'; extant. Jackson & Hellyer derive it ex Am. s. lobster, which is exactly synonymous.—5. A flunkey; an assistant: U.S.A.: 1934, Rose; July 27, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant. Short for lobbygow.—6. Money: 1937, James Curtis, There Ain't No Justice; 1942, Baker (Australia), Lob. A haul of money'; extant. Perhaps ex sense 1.—7. Short for lobbygow, n., 2: BVB, 1942.

lob, v.i. To rob a till: May 1836, Sessions Papers, p. 221, 'He said, "I have made a good lob . . ."—he said he had not lobbed for nothing this time'; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.), 'To tap a till'; extant. Ex the n., either sense 1 or sense 3.

lob, doing the. See lob, n., 1, reference of 1863.

lob, frisk a. See lob, n., 1, reference of 1811.

lob, knock a or the. See knock, 2.

lob, pinch a. 'To rob a till'; 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1857, Snowden; 1890, B & L; see lob, n., 1, and pinch, v.

lob(-)crawler; lob(-)sneak. "Poor old Jim, the lob crawler" (a till-robber): 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail; 1890, B & L (both forms); 1894, A. Morrison, Tales of Mean Streets (the former); 1896, F & H (id.); 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh (former); extant. See lob, n., and cf. :—

lob-crawling. Till-robbing: 1894, Arthur Morrison, Tales of Mean Streets; extant. See lob, n., 1; cf. lob-crawler.

lob-lay, the. An amplification of lob, 3, q.v.: Alex. Smith, Jonathan Wild, 1726; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); app. † by 1880.

lob-sneak. Lobsneak. A fellow that robs money-drawers': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum,—but prob. adopted from England (cf. next entry); by 1896 (F & H), low s. in England. See lob, n., 1.

lob(-)sneaking. 'A species of this description of thieving'—that effected by 'sneaksmen'—'is done by boys, who go into shops on their hands and feet, get round the counter, take the till, and then sneak out in the same manner—their safety depending on no customer coming in meantime. This is termed lob-sneaking': 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 136; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1887, Baumann; 1896, F & H, who classify it as low s. See lob, n., 1.

lobb. See lob, 2.

lobbie gow or lobby gow or lobby-gow. See lobbygow.

lobby lizzie (or L-). A prostitute: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. hotel hotsy (a variant of hotsy).

lobby-stripper. "I have come to report an impudent robbery over at my house . . . About an hour ago, a lobby-stripper—a young woman, bearing a child in her arms—obtained admittance to the lobby of my house, and carried off a valuable lady's cloak"; 1879, James McGovan, Hunted Down: c. and police s.; by 1890, no longer c. but police coll.

lobbygow, n. An easy 'mark', a born 'sucker', a ready victim; a mere hanger-on, a message-runner: 1909, Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, where it is wrongly defined as 'an informer'; 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, "You keep your face closed, George, and you too, Morgy . . . I ain't gunna have her think Stevey's tied up with a bunch of lobby-gows"; 1925, Leverage; Dec. 14, 1929, Flynn's, Charles Somerville, 'The Crimson Web', 'He had become a mere lobbygow, an errand-chaser, for Owney Madden'; Dec. 20, 1930, Flynn's, 'Lobbiegows (drug passers)'; Sept. 5, 1931, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; Nov. 1931, IA, 'A "fixer" for a crooked ring or politician; or one who acts as a "front" or as a go-between'; 1932, Lewis E. Lawes; April 8, 1933, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1933, Eagle; Sept. 29, 1934, Flynn's; Aug. 17, 1935, Flynn's; 1939, Hickman Powell, Ninety Times Guilty, 'The word lobbygow, I believe, originally was applied to Chinese pimps. It is now commonly used to refer to a stooge or underling or someone in illegal activity . . . Commonly used by those in the prostitution business'; by 1940, low s. Of this word, the lobby part is, I think, the S.E. lobby, with esp. ref. to cheap hotels and low boarding-houses; gow may be the Scottish variant of gull, lit. and fig.—2. Hence, 'a loafer in an opium den' (BVB, 1942): drug traffic: since the 1920's.

lobbygow, v. To run messages, do the odd jobs, for a gang: March 29, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville ('The Murder of Paddy the Priest'), 'Cheap grifter. He lobbiegows fer der real guys'; extant. Ex the n.

lobkin. 'A house to lie in; also a lodging': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1887, Bauman, Londonismen; † by 1900, if not indeed a generation earlier. Prob. a deliberate variation of libken.

lobs, 'words', is not c. but Romany. It is true that in C. 19 it may occ. have been employed by tramps, but it was not in gen. use among them.

lobsneak. See lob-sneak.

lobster, 'a soldier', is s., though it was much used by convicts in Australia in the convict days: cf. Price Warung, Tales of the Isle of Death, 1898—p. 47.—2. 'A dupe; slow[-witted] person,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1925, implied in lobster-steerer; 1933, Ersine; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 26) it was s.

lobster-steerer; lobster work. 'The con-man who lures a victim.—The exploiting of suckers by swindlers,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See lobster, 2; cf. bunco-steerer.

local stiff. 'A "local stiff" is a man who tramps but a short distance from home,' Jim Tully, Emmett Lawler, 1922; extant. Sec stiff, n., 15.

locate; usually as vbl n. 'Locating—getting prospects [for, e.g., a burglary]': Chicago May, 1928; extant. Cf. finder.

locator. 'By this time, incidentally, Kathryn had an underworld reputation as a "locator", or "caser", the person who goes ahead to plan the robbery of a store or bank,' J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding, 1938: since the middle 1920's.

lock, n. B.E., 1698, 'The Lock, c. the Magazine or Ware-house whither the Thieves carry Stolen Goods to be secur'd'—repeated almost verbatim in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1726, J. Gay, The Beggar's Opera, 'Betty hath brought more Goods into our Lock to-year than any five in the Gang'; 1785, Grose, 'A receptacle for stolen goods'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890 (B & L). The goods are there locked up.—2. Hence, a receiver or a buyer of stolen goods: 1708, John Hall; 1724, John Sheppard, A Narrative, 'A Lock or Fence in Bishopsgate-Street to dispose of the Cloth to'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † (in England, at least) by 1890; B & L.—3. A chance: 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'He stood a queer Lock; i.e. He stood an indifferent Chance'; † by 1890 (B & L). Cf. stand a queer lay (at lay, stand . . .).—4. Character: 1785, Grose, 'He stood a queer lock, i.e. he bore but an indifferent character'; 1797, Potter; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary (U.S.A.); † by 1890 (B & L). Cf. lurk, n.—5. Work, livelihood; dodge or 'lay': see cut a lock and fight a lock: † by 1890 (B & L). Cf. lurk, n.—6. 'A trading [i.e., venal] justice's office': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1870.—7. (Ex sense 1.) A house: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy, Progress', 'With Nell he kept a lock, to fence, and tug'; † by 1890.

lock, v. "I . . . advised the Prisoner to deface the Note, and get the Eleven Pounds of the Bank, but he said No, I won't deface it, but I'll lock it to Morrow." "What did you understand by locking?" "That he would sell it, which he did for 20 l."': Select Trials, from 1720 to 1724 (pub. in 1734), report of trial of George Nicholas in Jan. 1721–22; 1738, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. IV (Jos. Johnson), 'Locking Goods, is selling them outright to Persons who make it their Business to buy and dispose of stolen Goods'; † by 1810. Prob. ex lock, n., 2.—2. To occupy a cell: American convicts': 1934, Rose, 'Tell that gee who locks under me to pull in his ears'; extant.

lock, stand. 'Whenever we got any Thing he used to Stand Lock, that is, he used always to dispose of it': 1738, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. II, Wm Udall's Life; † by 1870. See lock, n., 1 and 2.

lock-all-fast. B.E., 1698, 'Lock all fast, c. one that Buys and Conceals Stolen Goods'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; app. † by 1830. Cf. lock, n., 1 and 2.

lock-rum is Andrewes's error (1809) for rum lock.

lock-ticklers. Skeleton keys: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. Sexual imagery.

lock-up chovey. 'A covered cart, in which travelling hawkers convey their goods about the country, and which is secured by a door, lock and key': 1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan's Grose, 1823; † by 1896 (F & H). See chovey.

lock-up joint. 'To place gum in a keyhole so that later one may discover if the door has been opened in his absence,' Ersine, 1933; extant.

locker. 'I am a Locker . . .; I leave Goods at a House, and borrow Money on them, pretending they are run '—smuggled—'Goods,' John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, but recorded in 1718 (C. Hitching, The Regulator); † by 1830. Cf. lock, n., 1.—2. A safe or strong-box: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; extant. It serves to lock things up.

loco weed, 'marihuana': C. 20: s. rather than c. But loco weeds, 'marihuana cigarettes' (BVB, 1942), may orig. have been c. Ex Sp. loco, 'mad': proleptic.

locus; locust; occ., locuss. 'Locuss, to drug a person and then rob them [sic]. The locuss generally consists of beer and snuff' (in C. 20, it is usually liquor with cigar ash dropped into it), 1859, H; but recorded earlier in Mayhew, London Labour, III, 397 (pub. in 1851), 'Some of the convicts would have given me some lush with a locust in it'; 1896, F & H (locust: defined as laudanum); 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers, where it = laudanum; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); extant, mostly for drugs in gen.: BVB, 1942, locus and locust. Perhaps a disguise-perversion of hocus, n., but prob., the word appearing first in the West Indies, ex Sp. loco (pl. locos), 'mad', as The O.E.D. has proposed.—2. A truncheon: c. and police s.: 1882, McCabe, New York, p. 383; 1896, F & H; by 1900, no longer to be classified as c. Ex the American locust tree.

locus, v. To drug a person and then rob him: 1859, H; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, 'locusing is putting a chap to sleep with chloroform . . . drugging'; extant. Imm. ex the n.

locus away. To shanghai (a man) while he is drugged or, derivatively, intoxicated: Australian: since ca. 1890. In, e.g., Baker, 1942. Originally, simply 'to remove a man while he is drugged': English: ca. 1880–1920. In, e.g., Partridge, 1937. An elaboration of locus, v.

locussing, n. See locus, v., reference of 1869.

locust. See locus, n.

lodger in ordinary. See the definition of dress lodger; 1828 (see dress lodger); † by 1900.

lodger-remover. A seller of fine-toothed hair-combs: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary); extant. Such a comb removes the nits.

lodging(-)lay, the. An earlier form of the lodging slum: 1722–23, a trial reported in Select Trials, from 1720 to 1724 (pub. in 1734), 'These four were the only ones that went upon the Lodging-Lay'; app. † by 1810. See lay, n., 2.

lodging(-)slum, the. 'The practice of hiring ready-furnished lodgings, and stripping them of the plate, linen, and other valuables': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1896, F & H; app. † by 1940. A variation of the preceding.

lodgings, 'prison': Australian low s. rather than c. Baker, 1942. Euphemistic.

loft. See loft worker. But also: 'loft thief', one who 'works' the trains and removes trunks, bags, packets, etc., from the racks, as in Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 1913.

loft worker. A burglar stealing from lofts and attics; hence from 'those business premises above the first floor, in which manufacturing, as of dress, fur garments and the like, is carried on' (Godfrey Irwin): 1912, Alfred Henry Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'He's a loft worker'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, "Loft" burglars in New York and other big cities often loot an entire floor, generally through collusion with watchmen"; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

lofter. A variant of loft-worker: 1925, Leverage; Dec. 13, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant. Cf.:—2. A burglar specializing in warehouses: 1925, Leverage; extant.

log. An opium pipe: addicts': since ca. 1925. BVB, 1942, also notes roll the log, 'to smoke opium'. Humorous on bamboo or stem.

loge. See loges.—2. B.E., 1698, 'Loge, c. a Watch. I suppose from the French Horloge, a Clock or Watch. Filed a Cly of a Loge, or Scout, c. Picket a Pocket of a Watch'; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1742 (see vid loge); 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, where it is spelt loag—a spelling that would seem to indicate a change in pronunciation from loge as in the French horloge, to logue (monosyllabic); 1785, Grose, repeating B.E.; 1809, Andrewes; 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890 (B & L), if not indeed by 1870.

loge and tail is a spurious term, defined as 'a repeating watch': 1742, Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV. It is or should be two separate terms, loge and tail.

loges is defined by Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610, as 'a passe or warrant', but the singular may be loge; app. † by 1700. Cf. logier.

loggy. Sense obscure: since ca. 1910. Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925, cites several stanzas of a hobo song, including this:

'Oh, dancing in the poggies, Tra-la, la-la-la loggies Chewin' snipes and stogies Tra-la la-la loggies'.

Perhaps ex low s. log or log-sop, 'a drunken person': cf. s. logwood, 'cheap wine'.

logic. Cheap jewellery: 1925, Leverage; extant. This may be, prob. is, a misprint for logie, 'sham jewellery' (as a theatrical property)—invented by David Logie.

logier. A pocket-book: 1823, Bee, who adds that 'it is Jewish-Dutch', by which he prob. means Yiddish, app. † by 1900.

logs. A prison: Australian convicts': early C. 19. Baker, 1945. Long before 1881, when it was used by Rolf Boldrewood, it > s. or coll. Prob. ex log prison, a prison built of logs.

loist. 'List, or Loist—shop-lifting, or robbing a shop' (Andrewes, 1809) is obviously an error for 'Lift or Hoist'—repeated in Sinks of London, 1848.

loll tongue. 'He has been playing at loll tongue, he has been salivated' or treated for syphilis: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. Not c., but low s.

lolly, n.; lolly-worker. A shop; a swindler that sets up business in a shop only to sell the alleged goodwill: on the borderline between c. and pitchmen's (and cheapjacks') s. Philip Allingham, Cheappjack, 1934—both terms.—2. A confidence trickster's victim: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1945. Sweet to the trickster.

lolly, v. 'He was, however, informed against to the police (lollied)', Brown, 1931; 1933, Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1936, David Hume, The Crime Combine, 'I don't lolly on folks'; extant. Short for lolly-pop (in same sense), which may rhyme slop, 'a policeman' (cf. come copper), but prob. shop, v. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932, 'Lolly-popped = informed against'.

lolly-pop, v. See preceding.

lolly-worker. See lolly, n.

lombard. 'Prior said, "I ought not to have said I came from the other side of the lombard"'. Kinsdale said, "You have done it, and there is ten stretch hanging to your house", in the trial of Mary Kinsdale and Albert Prior for theft from the person of Robert Harvey, in Birdcage Walk, London—recorded in Sessions Papers, April 16, 1849; app. † by 1900. Sense? Perhaps 'a gaol': cf. the next entry.

Lombard Street, in. In gaol: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see quot'n at lumber, v., 2); app. † by 1900 at the latest—prob. by 1880. By a pun on in lumber, q.v. at lumber, v., 2, and on Lombard Street, the traditional home of the Lombard merchants.

London bills is not c., but a s. term for the giving of bills, by almost bankrupt merchants, to sharpers, who thereupon pass them, as payment, to country dealers and to farmers. See John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, at p. 41.

lone hand. 'A thief who works by himself,' Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 1927; extant. Cf. lone wolf.

lone star. 'A thief who works alone,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. lone hand and:—

lone wolf. A pickpocket that operates alone: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, and in Kane, 1927: prob. not c., but j., it being merely the application to pickpocketry of a widely used term current in Standard American.

loney gun, 'a machine gun': Rose, 1934: a suspect term.

long, n. A shortening of long 'un: 1841, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin; extant.

Long Acre. A baker: orig. (ca. 1850–65) this was c.; it did not > gen. rhyming s. until ca. 1875. 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857.

long and broad. See longs and broads.

long and lingers. Fingers: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

long bill. 'A long term of imprisonment. Short-bill = a short term,' F & H, 1896; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (U.S.A.); † by 1940 in U.S.A.; ob. by 1945 in Britain. Cf. the S.E. true bill.

long-bit and short-bit, adj. Serving a long or a short penal sentence: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne (p. 40); † by 1940. See bit, n., 4.—2. 'Long Bit. Fifteen cents or dollars,' Ersine, 1933; extant. Here bit = a coin.

long-cut-short. 'A sawed-off shotgun loaded with shells that were packed with slugs,' J. Allan Dunn, 'Thieves' Honor'—Flynn's, July 5, 1930; extant.

long drag. A very long train: 1935, Hargan; extant.

long-fingered. A convict that steals from his fellows: 1935, Hargan; extant.

long firm. 'A gang of swindlers who obtain goods by false pretences. They generally advertise or answer advertisements' (1874, H); 1879, Thor Fredur, Shady Places; by 1885, commercial s. The earliest record seems to be The Orchestra, Jan. 2, 1869 (quoted by F & H). Ex the length of their credit.

long gone. 'Sentenced for life': 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1920.

long grass, in the. Hiding from the police: since ca. 1920. Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941.

long green. A (counterfeit) note or bill of large denomination: 1891, James Maitland, The American Slang Dict. (counterfeit); 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss (genuine); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (genuine); ca. 1912, G. Bronson-Howard, The Snob (money generally); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, where out after the long green is synonymous with on the spud; 1925, Leverage, 'Money in general; bank notes in particular'; extant. Strictly, long green is c. only for counterfeit; for genuine, it is s. Cf. long-tailed one; green = greenback.

long-hair. Artistic: since ca. 1920: 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; by 1946, s. Ex criminals' observation of Greenwich Village types.

long hand, the. A particular type of hand played in, say, a game of bridge: card-sharpers': C. 20. In, e.g., Percy J. Smith, Con Man, 1938. While the victim's attention is being distracted, a stacked pack is substituted.

Long Horn or Longhorn, 'a Texan, or any other man from the South-West' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931): not c., but s. Ex the long-horn cattle once so numerous in Texas.

Long Island peek. A sly glance from the corner of the eye: tramps': May 23, 1937, John Chapman in The (N.Y.) Sunday News; extant. Ex peeking at Long Island sun-bathers?

long jump. A burglar's term, thus, 'The escape is called a "long jump", a "side jump", a "short jump" or a "back jump"'. A "long" jump is to drop from an upper story window; a "short" jump is to slip out of one of the basement windows; a "side" jump means retiring by the side door; and a "back" jump by the back door': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; extant. See jump, n., 2.

long lib. Lit., long rest; i.e., death. Mostly bing to one's long lib, to die. Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610, 'If that she were dead and bing to his [sic] long Libb, | Then would I pad and maund with thee'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'On Chates to trine by Rome Coves dine, | For his long lib at last'; 1688, Holme; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Mill the Cull to his long Libb; kill the Man dead'; † by 1800. See lib, n., 1.

long one. See long 'un.

long rod. A rifle: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. As Irwin wittily phrases it—'Merely an extension of a "rod"'. long-shore lay, the. Smuggling: 1841, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1910. See lay, n., 2.

long-sleeved top. A silk hat or 'topper': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); 1896, F & H; † by 1940. Cf. the s. chimney-pot.

long tackling. See tackling.

long-tail. A bank-note of high denomination: 1891, J. Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; by ca. 1920, also British; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime (a five-pound note). Short for long-tailed one.

long-tailed, adj. See long-tailed finnip and long-tailed one. It has, however, a separate existence ('of high denomination'), as in 'Long-tailed . . . £10 or £20 notes or higher': C. Bent, Criminal Life, 1891.

long-tailed beggar, 'a cat': merely s.

long-tailed finnip. A bank-note of a denomination higher than ten pounds (a double finnip being a 'tenner'): 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1896, F & H; slightly ob. See finnip.

long-tailed one (usually 'un). A bank-note of high denomination: 1839, Brandon, 'Long-tailed ones—large bank notes'; 1859, H; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H; 1938, F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 'Long-tailed 'uns: Banknotes' (as opp. to mere currency notes); extant. Here long-tailed merely = long = high = valuable.

long-time; long-timer. 'The prisoners who have got long sentences . . . are called by their fellow-prisoners "Long-times" . . . The Long-times wished to become Short-times': 1863, Charles A. Gibson, Life among Convicts, I, 190–191; 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'Only the long-timers knew what it was to have enough to eat'; 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hoboes, ' . . . Had become a "long-timer" or "lifer" '; by 1920, police s.

long tog. A coat: U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; † by 1930. See tog, n.

long trot, do the. 'Sometimes we had to do the "long trot" (go home) with it': beggars': 1869, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; ob.

long 'un. 'Long one. A hare; a term used by poachers': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1896, F & H; ob.—2. A pheasant: poachers': 1909, Ware, 'Referring to the length of the tail'; extant.

longs and broads. Playing-cards: 1823, Egan's Grose; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'Cards made for cheating'; 1887, Baumann (of any playing-cards): Egan does not classify it as c.; but, as the term is obviously an elaboration of c. broads, 'cards', it is almost certainly c.

longs and shorts, 'cards made for cheating': not c.

lonja, 'a rendezvous' (Leverage, 1925), is on the borderline. Mexican Spanish? Or cf. coll. so long!

loof-faker, 'a chimney-sweep', is not c., but low London s.; loof is back-s. for flue.

loogan. See:—

loogins. 'Recruits; amateurs or newcomers to a gang or tramp group,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1920: Dec. 3, 1932, Flynn's, Dugal O'Liam, ' "Better look out, kid, there's some tough Loogans over there" '; 1939, Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep (English ed.), ' "What's a loogan?" "A guy with a gun." "Are you a loogan?" "Sure," I laughed. "But strictly speaking a loogan is on the wrong side of the fence" '; Aug. 26, 1939, Flynn's, Richard Sale, 'Loogans and crooks and shysters and hot shots used to tip their hats when I met them'; extant.

look at. On the marches between c. and S.E. lies this entry in Vaux, 1812: 'Where a plan is laid for robbing a house, &c., upon the crack, or the screw, the parties will go a short time before the execution, to examine the premises, and make any necessary observations; this is called looking at the place'.

The same applies to look over (a place), as used in Confessions of a Convict (U.S.A.), 1893.

look bad ; look good. To look down and out, to be shabbily dressed ; to be well-dressed : 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'He looked bad (poorly dressed) but was glad to see me' ; ibid., 'They saw I was looking good (well-dressed)' ; by 1920, no longer c.

look for Henry. (Of a confidence trickster) to quest for a dupe : since ca. 1920. Partridge, 1938. Euphemistic—but humorously so.

look-out. 'The look-out is the man who is supposed'—at a game of cards—'to keep everything straight, and see that no mistake is made, and that the dealer does not neglect to lift any money that he has won' : professional gamblers' : 1859, Matsell ; 1933, Ersine, 'In a gambling house, a man who watches for cheating players' ; 1936, P. S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 'The center of activity of a pay-off gang game, where one man watches for the steerer's signal' ; extant.

look over. See look at.

look through the wood. See wood, look . . .

look up is, in The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 1741, a mistake (or a misprint) for lope up, q.v. at lope.

looker. A look-out man in or for a gang of criminals : April 19, 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by Moreby Acklom ; 1931, Godfrey Irwin ; extant.

looks (or it looks) like rain. A catch-phrase indicative of 'an arrest in the offing' : tramps' : May 23, 1937, John Chapman in The (N.Y.) Sunday News ; extant.

loon-flat is Barrère & Leland's error for :— loonslate or loonslatt. B.E., 1698, 'Loon-slatt, c. a Thirteen Pence half Penny' ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (same form) ; 1785, Grose (loonslate) ; † by 1830. Perhaps of. slat, n., 2.

loony. A lunatic ward, wing, section, department of a prison ; a prison for insane criminals : convicts' : C. 20. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938, 'Left him behind us there, we did, stone balmy. Finished in a loony.'

loop, on the. See on the loop.

loop game, the. See roll the belt.

loop the loop. A finger-ring : mostly Pacific Coast : C. 20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming on synonymous hoop.

loose, n.—'spare cash'—is s., not c., despite its shady connexions with racketeering. (E. D. Sullivan, Chicago Surrenders, 1930, 'Plenty of "loose" in all these transactions to take care of the cops, political crooks and others in a position to "go along"'.) loose, on the. See on the loose.

loose house. 'Round house or cage,' i.e. lock-up prison, an ordinary gaol : 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open ; † by 1890. It does not hold the prisoners tightly enough. But prob. a mere misprint for louse house, q.v.

looseners. Prunes or any other bowel-aperient fruit : tramps' : since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

lootie, looty. 'Departmental' chief : racketeers' : Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn ; slightly ob. by 1945. I.e., lieutenant.

lope, n. (Always the lope.) One of the two forms of the 'drop' swindle, the other being 'the lumber' (see lumber, n., 2) : 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected, 'At the lope, the scene of performance is a field, and instead of cards, which is used in the Lumber, they jump the Flat out of his property' ; the picker-up takes the flat to the field where a fight (vouched for, further, by the 'cap', who opportunely comes on the scene) is to take place, and there they meet the 'kid' (see kid, n., 4) ; the kid boasts of his skill at jumping, wherein he shows himself to be no good at all and then, the flat having been led on to lay heavy bets, very good—superior to the flat, in fact. Ex senses 1 and 3 of :—

lope, v. ; occ., loap. To run away, decamp : 1698, B.E. (at let's), 'Let's buy a Brush, or Let's Lope, c. let us scour off, and make what shift we can to secure our selves from being apprehended' ; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'To loap off, alias to get away' ; 1725, A New Canting Dict., plagiarizing B.E. ; 1785, Grose (loap) ; 1797, Potter (id.) ; 1809, Andrewes (id.) ; 1848, Sinks of London (id.) ; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.) ; by 1880, no longer c.—2. Hence, to go : 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'To lope in, alias to go in' ; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'To go up Stairs : To look [sic] up the Dancers' ; app. † by 1870.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) To go away ; to depart : 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue ; † by 1870.—4. (Likewise ex 1.) To run : 1796, Grose († 1791), 3rd ed., 'He loped down the dancers ; he ran down stairs' ; † by 1890.—5. To leap : 1796, Grose ; † by 1890.—6. To steal : 1874, H ; ob. by 1896 (F & H) ; † by 1910.

Lord Lovel, 'a shovel', was c. at first (say 1850–65) and then, in Britain, low rhyming s. 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857 ; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.). Extant, as c., on Pacific Coast of U.S.A. : M & B, 1944.

Lord Mansfield's teeth. 'The chevaux de frize round the top of the wall of King's Bench prison' (1788, Grose, 2nd ed.) : not c., but s. Ex that Mansfield (Sir James) who was Lord Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas.

Lord Mayor (or l—m—). A very large crowbar (larger than an alderman), used for opening safes : 1889, B & L (at alderman) ; 1896, F & H ; ob.

Lord Monmouth's, my. See my Lord Monmouth's.

lord of the manor, 'a sixpence', seems to have been c. until ca. 1870 : 1839, Brandon. As it is rhyming s. on tanner, it constitutes the earliest indubitable record of rhyming s.

Lord's supper, the. Bread and water served to a man in solitary confinement : convicts' : C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Blasphemy is comparatively rare in c.

lorry-lifter. 'A wagon thief,' Leverage, 1925 ; extant. He 'lifts' things from lorries, etc.

lorst, in the. Another of Richard Burton's 'leg-pulls' (see Partridge, 1938) : cf. smack the lit.

Los. Los Angeles : tramps' : prob. throughout C. 20 : 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, '“And you made Los all right”' ; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life ; 1931, Godfrey Irwin.

lose one's guts. To become a coward ; to feel fear : 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 'You ain't getting old, Sam, you're losing your guts' ; by 1940, low s. Ex English s. guts, 'courage'.

lose oneself. 'He had . . . got sacked for boozing, and then he lost himself,' glossed as 'went lower and lower' : 1863, The Story of a Lancashire Thief ; app. † by 1930. Short for lose oneself in degradation (or some such phrase).

loser. A 'three-time' — 'four-time' — 'five-time loser' is one who has served three—four—five prison-sentences: C. 20. Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (San Quentin in 1901–11)—the book appeared in 1912—uses it thus, 'T'day some four 'r five time loser'll drive up with a year, an' t'morrer some poor kid . . . will come f'r fifteen 'r twenty' and thus, 'He was a ten-time loser . . .; i.e., he had served nine previous terms'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's, 'A one time loser' in the sense, 'serving a one-year term'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1932, Robert E. Burns; by 1933, journalistic and police s. He has lost his fight against the forces of law and order: 'lost out'.—2. Hence, an ex-convict: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'An ex-convict, or one under restraint'; 1938, Castle (of a recidivist); extant.

lost. Murdered; 'on the spot': 1927, Kane; 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch, 'But what's on your mind? You sound like you was lost'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Euphemistic.

lot. A gang of criminals: 1908, Edgar Wallace, Angel Esquire, chapter headed 'The "Borough Lot"': extant—but not very much used. Cf. mob.—2. See:—

lot, red; white lot. 'A red lot (gold watch and chain),' Brown, 1931; 1934, Axel Bracey, School for Scoundrels; 1934, Ex-Sgt B. Leeson, Lost London; 1936, Michael Fane, Racecourse Swindles ('"Professionally" a "red-lot"'); 1943, Black, 'Red Lot: a gold watch and chain'; extant. In C. 20, current also in South Africa (J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946), in the slightly modified sense, 'gold jewellery'. Ex auctioneering-j. lot; see red, adj., and white, adj.

lot lice, 'carnival and circus hangers-on' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931), is circus and carnival s.—not c.

loud one. A big theft, burglary, hold-up; one that will cause much comment: since ca. 1930: 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra, 'You know, Roy, this is a loud one, and the coppers are really going to give Louis a going over just because he's the clerk'. Ex the loud, excited, talk it causes.

loudspeaker. A wife: 1933, Ersine; 1933, Eagle; extant.

lounge. 'The prisoner's box in a civil court': 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; in C. 20, also Australian—Baker, 1942; by 1940, ob. in U.S.A. Ironic, the box being far from comfortable.

lour, loure; lower, lowr, lowre. Harman, 1566, in the glossary dismisses it as 'lowre, monye'; in the dialogue, he shows that it meant specifically 'cash': 'Why, hast thou any lowre in thy bonge to hourse? But a flagge, a wyn, and a make'; Dekker, 1608–9, 'The Canters Dictionarie' (Lanthorne and Candle-light), 'Lowre, money'; 1610, Rowlands (lower); 1659, Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, 'Lowre or mint, wealth'; 1676, Coles (lour); 1688, Holme (lowre); 1698, B.E. (loure); 1707, J. Shirley (lower); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1745, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, where it is spelt lowyer; 1785, Grose (lowre); by 1794, current (as lour) in U.S.A. (witness Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807); 1797, Potter, 'Lour, or lower, money of any kind, coin'; 1809, Andrewes; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1839, Brandon, 'Lour—coin'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, Snowden (lower); by 1859, according to H, 1st ed., it was †, but in 1889 Clarkson & Richardson record it, in form lower, as current at that date. Ex 'the Wallachian Gipsy word, lowe, coined money' (H, 3rd ed.); cf. the origin of lurry.—2. Wrongly defined as 'a purse': 1742, Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, 348.

Lour Locker, the. The Royal Mint, London: 1824, Pierce Egan, Boxiana, IV; † by 1900. Ex the preceding term.

louse. A tramp mean enough to steal the shoes of a tramp that has befriended him: tramps': C. 20. Stiff, 1931.

louse cage. A hat: tramps': since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

louse house, 'the roundhouse, or cage' (Grose, 1785), i.e. a lock-up or a prison: prob. not c., but low s., although possibly it was, orig., prison c.—2. A (low) lodging-house: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1935, Hargan, 'A cheap hotel on the Bowery'; extant. Cf. s. flea pit.

louse(-)trap, a comb: 1785, Grose. Not c., but s., despite H's classification.

lousiest racket. Lowest form of crime (in the opinion of criminals): from ca. 1925: 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; extant. See racket.

lousy with jack. Well supplied with money: tramps': from ca. 1910: e.g., in 1929, W. R. Burnett (see low down); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1934, low s. See jack, n., 1a.

louter. A professional thief and thug: since ca. 1910. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Rare. Perhaps an elaboration of S.E. lout.

love-note. 'A letter or note sent by one homosexual prisoner to another,' Ersine, 1933: convicts'; extant.

love of the house is gamesters' c. of ca. 1660–1700; thus in Anon., The Nicker Nicked (or Leathermore's Advice; concerning Gaming), 1666, 'If the [gaming] House find you free to the Box and a constant Caster, you shall be Treated below with Suppers at night, and Cawdle in the morning, and have the Honour to be styled, A Love of the House, while your Money lasts, which certainly will not be long'.

lover. 'A man who receives support from a prostitute,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; extant.—2. For its more specifically white-slave-traffic sense, turn to heart.

lover under the lap. A Lesbian: Australian: since ca. 1920. Partridge, 1938; Baker, 1942.

low down, low-down, lowdown. A disadvantage; the inside facts useful to a criminal: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 'The place is lousy with jack. I got the lowdown from Scabby'—whence it appears that 'inside information disadvantageous to a person or a business' is meant; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1933, no longer distinguishable from the gen. s. usage—if, indeed, it ever had been. Perhaps ex boxing: a punch low down knocks out the opponent.

low fulhams. See fulhams. The complementary term is high fulhams, q.v. also at fulhams.

low gagger is the social opposite to high gagger: for both, see gagger, n., reference of 1781.

low-heel, 'a prostitute': C. 20 Australian: but low s., not c. Kylie Tennant, 1939; Baker, 1942.

low in the lay seems to be an error—or a misprint—for lowing lay; but in the sense, 'in straits; (almost) penniless', it may be genuine, although—apart from F & H, 1896—it app. occurs only in Lytton's Paul Clifford, 1830, Lytton's c. being literary rather than practical. Cf. lay, n., 2.

low jack. Donations: beggars': April 14,

1928, Flynn's, A. E. Ullman, 'Beggarmen'; extant. Here, jack = money.

low men or lowmen. Dice so loaded as to turn up a low number: mid-C. 16-mid-19: c. >, by 1600, jargonistic S.E. Gilbert Walker, Diceplay, 1552, would appear to constitute the earliest mention. Cf. low runners and contrast high men.

low pad. A footpad: 1698, B.E. (low-pad); 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Footpads, or low pads, rogues who rob on foot'; † by 1860. See pad, n., 3; cf. low toby. A low pad is the opposite of high pad, a highwayman.

low runners. A C. 17-18 synonym of low men.

low-slipt or low slipt or lowslipt. See slipt. A variation of the dice known as low men, q.v.

low tide, 'when there's no Money in a Man's Pocket' (B.E., 1698), may orig. have been c., but it was certainly s. by 1800. Grose gives the variant low water, which, orig. s., had, by 1850, > coll. Opp. high tide.

low(-)toby, the. 'The practice of footpad robbery' (Vaux): 1807, Sessions Papers, Feb. (p. 133); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1826, The New Newgate Calendar, IV, 362; † by 1910. See toby, n.

low-toby lay, the. Footpad robbery: 1823, Bee; † by 1900. Opp. the toby lay, robbery by highwaymen.

low toby man. A footpad: 1811, Lex. Bal.; † by 1900. See prec. pair of entries.

low water. See low tide.

lowdown. See low down.

lower. See lour.

lower deck. See go lower-deck.

lowhinge chete. See lowing cheat.

lowie; occ., lowy. Money: Scottish: C. 18-20. B & L, 1890. Cf. lour, q.v.

lowing cheat. 'A lowhinge chete, a Cowe,' Harman, 1566; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'A Lowhing chete, a Cow'; † by 1830. Lit., a thing that lows.

lowing(-)lay, the; lowing(-)rig, the. 'Lowling Rig. Stealing oxen or cows': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 'Lowling-Lay. Stealing cattle, oxen, or cows'; by 1896 (F & H), † in England; by 1910, † in U.S.A. See lay, n., 2; lowing, ex the lowing of cattle when they are lost or perturbed—cf. lowing cheat.

lowmen. See low men.

lowre. See lour. Thus in Harman, 1566; Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light (1608-9).

lowslipt. See low-slipt.

lowy. See lowie.

lowyer. See lour.

loy is a rare variant (Old Fr. loy—Mod. Fr. loi) of law. Gilbert Walker, 1552, 'By five fingered figg loy', i.e. pickpocketry.

lu-lu; later lulu. 'Anything unusually worthy or desirable . . . widely used by the older tramp and crook,' Godfrey Irwin: c. of ca. 1910-30, then s.—as in 'It's a lulu!' Perhaps ex the font-name Lulu and perhaps adopted in amorously appreciative reference to the Lulu's and other belles of Hawaii.

lubry, 'a newsboys' lodging house' (Leverage, 1925), is a newsboys' s. word that is also used by beggars and tramps. Prob. a corruption of Fr. l'abri, 'the shelter'.

lucifer lurk, the. A 'lurk' or 'dodge' practised by beggars, who drop matches, pretend these are their last, and thus open up the way to the (usually indirect) solicitation of alms: 1851, Mayhew, London Life and the London Poor, I, 417; † by 1910. See lurk, n.; lucifer matches.

lucky. Booty: since ca. 1840: 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York, 'Divide the lucky'; † by 1910. The thieves are lucky to 'get away with it'.

lucky, cut one's; make one's lucky. See cut quick sticks, 2.

lucky bone. 'The detective who took him into custody found upon him when searching him "the small bone of a sheep's head, which he understood, was known among beggars as the lucky bone", as its possession was supposed to bring good luck to the beggar during the day,' G. A. Sala in The Illustrated London News, Nov. 10, 1883—quoted by F & H, 1896; extant. Underworld folklore rather than c.

Lud's bulwark. Ludgate Prison: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who, however, does not classify it as c.: prob. it had, by 1760 or thereabouts, > s.

luer. A hypodermic syringe: BVB, 1942. Ex lulu, 'any person or thing that excels in attractiveness'?

luey, 'a circus clown': circus s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 'Apparently a corruption of "Joey"'. luff, 'speech' or 'tongue': not c., but low s.

lug, n., 'an ear', was in C. 17 listed by some of the glossarists, e.g. Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610—as a c. word: which, low as it may have sunk, it was not.—2. "My togs are in lug", i.e., in pawn': 1860, H, 2nd ed.: on the borderland between c. and low s.; by 1890 (B & L), certainly low s. Cf. lug chovey.—3. A pawnshop: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, '[The "swag"] is conveyed to the fence's "lug" and melted down'; extant. Either ex sense 2, or a shortening of lug chovey.—4. See lug, drop the.

lug, v. To borrow money from: Australian, esp. among 'con men': since ca. 1910. Baker, 1945. Ex s. bite the ear—or the lug—of, in same sense.

lug, drop the; usually as vbl n., dropping . . ., asking for a loan of money; making a request for alms or favour: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Here, lug prob. = 'ear': cf. s. bite his ear, 'ask him for a loan', and see lug on . . .

lug chovey. A pawnbroker's shop: 1859, H; by 1890 (B & L), low s., though F & H, 1896, classify it as still c. See chovey, 2.

lug on, put the. To beg money from (a person): beggars' and tramps': 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'I learned to ride freight trains, how to "mooch a meal" from restaurants and back doors of residences, and how to "put the lug on a guy" in the streets'; extant. Cf. lug, drop the.

lug out. Whereas lug (v.) has always been familiar S.E. when not dial., lug out seems to have, ca. 1680-1750, been c.; thus T. Shadwell, in 'An Explanation of the Cant' in The Squire of Alsatia, 1688, has 'To lugg out. To draw a Sword' (glossary) and 'The Prigster lugg'd out in defence of his Natural'.

lug(-)rest. 'I . . . went to find a "doss", "kip", or "lug-rest" (a bed)': mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. Cf. pound one's ear and pound the lug.

luge is an error for lage, water. Andrewes, 1809

lugger. A sailor: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; 1896

F & H; ob. Ex the craft so named.—2. See luggers.

luggers. A pair of ear-rings: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; extant. Ex dial. lugs, ears.

luke. Nothing: Scottish and North Country: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'He shewed us the [stolen] dumbie stuffed with cambric-paper, and he quized his brother for having given us so much trouble about luke'; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; app. † by 1896 (F & H). Contrast lumb, by which it may have been suggested. But cf. dial. luke, 'a leaf' (hence, a trifle), and the much less likely Romany luva, 'money'.

lullaby cheat. A baby: 1665, Richard Head, The English Rogue, 'We had every one his doxy or wench, who carried at her back a Lullaby-cheat'; 1698, B.E., 'Lullaby-cheat, e. a Child'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1848, Sinks of London—but the term was almost certainly † by 1820 or, at latest, 1830. Lit., a lullaby thing: that to which one (oft perforce) sings lullabies.

lullaby kid. An infant: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1930. See kid, n., 1, and cf. lullaby cheat.

lullers, 'wet linen' (Egan's Grose, 1823), is almost certainly a misprint, or the editor's mistake, for lulling, q.v. at lully.

lulley and lullies. See:—

lully or lulley. Linen: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Prigers of Lulley, that is, Linen'; 1755, 'History of the Thief-Takers' in Remarkable Trials and Interesting Memoirs, 1760, pub. in 1760, "A brave parcel of Lullies." "What is the meaning of that?" "He meant . . . a Parcel of Linnen"; in 1785, Grose, 'Lulleys, wet linen,' and in 2nd ed., 1788, lullies; 1797, Potter; 1801, Colonel George Hanger; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1880—in Britain, prob. by 1860. Origin?—2. Hence, a shirt: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1890, B & L; by 1909 (Ware), low s.—3. The definition 'a child' (Potter, 1797) is, I think, erroneous, although it is possible that lullaby cheat > abbreviated to lully.

lully by cheat is a wrong form of lullaby cheat: Potter, 1797.

lully(-)prig is an occ. variant of the next: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxviii; † by 1900.

lully-prigger. Earliest in the variant form, prigger of lully, which can hardly be described as a term (for it is a mere collocation of words) and which occurs in John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, 'They are great Prigers of Lulley'; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'Lully-Priggers. People who steal linen from hedges, get over walls and take the wet linen from the lines upon which the laundresses hang it. Linen should never be left without some person to watch it'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); in Britain, prob. † by 1860. See lully and prigger.—2. Hence, 'The lowest order of thieves robbing children of their cloaths and stripping them': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900.

lully-prigging. "How do you work now?" . . . "O, upon the old slang, and sometimes a little lully-prigging", which is glossed as 'stealing wet linen off the hedges': 1789 George Parker, Life's lully snow prigging is erroneous (Potter, 1797, and Sinks of London, 1848) for the preceding or for snow-prigging.

Painter of Variegated Characters; 1801, Colonel George Hanger, Life; † by 1900. Cf. prec., sense 1.

lulu. See lu-lu.

lumb; later, lumbs. Too much: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1896 (F & H), † in England; by 1910, † in U.S.A. Contrast luke, which is app. unrecorded until a century later. Perhaps lumb is a corruption of lump—or short for lumber (disused, useless, cumbrous or cumbering articles).

lumber, n. A room: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Go up Stairs, and fisk the Lumbers, that is search the Rooms'; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890 (B & L). 'From the Lombard Room in which the mediaeval pawnbrokers and bankers stored their pledges' (F & H).—2. (the lumber.) One of the two varieties of the swindle known as 'the drop' (see drop, n., 2): 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected; app. † by 1890. Prob. ex 3, which may well be the earlier.—3. (Ex sense 1.) 'A house convenient for the reception of swindlers, sharpers, and cheats': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1890.—4. See lumber, in.—5. (Ex senses 1 and 3.) In late C. 19–20, the term bears the sense conveyed in 'The proprietor of the lumber, where stolen property is stored pending a suitable buyer, also wants his whack' (Sidney Felstead, The Underworld of London, 1923); 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 'Hide-out for stolen property'.—6. 'Matches; pawnable articles,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant.—7. Food: U.S.A., mostly tramps': 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. lumber camp, which may constitute its immediate source.

lumber, v. To put in a safe place, to store away: 1785, Sessions Papers, Oct., p. 1218, 'Two shillings and sixpence for my share of lumbering the silk'; 1812, J. H. Vaux (at swag), 'Where did you lumber the swag? . . . where did you deposit the stolen property?'; 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, 'To pawn'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); then see sense 4. Ex lumber, n., 1 and 3.—2. George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 1789, in speaking of a gang of 'drop culls', says: 'When the sharp has lumbered you, that is, got you into a room, the gentry begin to fall in one after another'; by 1820, virtually merged with sense 3; 1943, Black, 'Lumber: to implicate'. Ex lumber, n., 1.—3. To imprison; to cause to be arrested; to arrest: 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A man apprehended, and sent to gaol, is said to be lumbered, to be in lumber, or to be in Lombard-Street'; 1821, P. Egan, 'Lumbering . . . Being arrested'; 1823, Bee; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13, "If they lumbered you with the crime, it was because you was a mug," said Lal complacently. "That's what mugs are for—to be lumbered"; 1931, Brown, 'Did the detective (busy) arrest (lumber) Jack?'; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1936, John G. Brandon, The 'Snatch' Game; 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy (U.S.A.); extant. Possibly this sense also comes ex lumber, n., 1; but prob. it derives ex sense 1 of the v.—4. (Ex sense 1.) To impound; (of the police) to remove (something) to be examined—or to be returned to its owner: late

C. 19–20. George Scott Monerief, Café Bar, 1932.—5. To take (a man) to one's room: Australian prostitutes': C. 20. Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939, (lodging-house proprietress loq.) "I don't mind Mabel. When she lumbers a guy she splits fair. But you don't even pay your rent". Cf. lumberer, 4.

lumber, in. Imprisoned. See sense 3 of lumber, v.

lumber camp. A restaurant; a kitchen: tramps': 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. lumber, n, 6.

lumber(-)cove. A landlord (esp. of a tavern) 'that keeps a house for the reception of thieves only': 1797, Potter (at cove); 1809, Andrewes; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1890. See lumber, n, 3, and cove, 3.

lumber(-)house. 'A house appropriated by thieves for the reception of their stolen property': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; May 4, 1889, Ally Sloper's Half-Holiday; 1896, F & H; † by 1930. Cf. lumber, n, 3.

lumber(-)ken. A pawnbroker's shop: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1910.

lumber(-)lag. A transported convict or a convict about to be transported: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II (see floating college); † by 1890.

lumbered. Imprisoned; in prison: 1812 (see lumber, v, 3); 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; then see lumber, v, 3.

lumberer. A pawnbroker: 1859, implied in the next entry: 1896, F & H; ob. Ex lumber, v, 3.—2. 'A swindling tipster, who works his business viva voce instead of by advertisement. His happy hunting-grounds are the bars of fashionable restaurants, though he may also be encountered on race-courses': 1890, B & L; by 1896 (F & H) it was (low) turf s. 'From to lumber, to loiter, stroll lazily' (B & L); perhaps cf. lumber, v, 3.—3. In the confidence game known as 'the pay-off'—and in other confidence games—he 'who finds the victim is known as the "Steerer" or "Lumberer"; it is his part to "mind" his newly found companion,' Percy J. Smith, Con Man, 1938: since ca. 1920. Also in, e.g., Charles E. Leach, 1933, and Black, 1943. Cf. lumber, v, 3. In gen. s., to lumber a person along is simply 'to take him along'.—4. 'She was clever . . . and well in with . . . waiter "lumberers". These . . . are second-rate waiters who assist the best men'—i.e., the cleverest white-slavers—'in first-class hotels, and watch out for rich young pigeons with money or wealthy old men who ogle girls in the hotel,' Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940: white-slave traffic: C. 20. It occurs also in, e.g., W. N. Willis, White Slaves in a Piccadilly Flat, 1915. Since ca. 1920, also Australian (see sense 2). Cf. lumber, v, 2 and 4, and lumberer, 2, 3.—5. 'A brothel tout, a man who decoys men down lanes or alleys for the purposes of robbery,' Baker, 1942: the latter sense is Australian: since ca. 1910. Cf. senses 2 and esp. 3.

lumberer(-)crib. A pawnbroker's shop: 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; ob. Cf. lumber, v, 3, and see crib, n, 3.

lumbering. An arresting, an arrest, a being arrested: 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London, 'Lumbering him never afterwards gave Morland any horrors'; slightly ob. Ex lumber, v, 2.—2. Hence, (an) imprisonment: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1900.—3. The vbl n. corresponding to lumberer, 2: 1894, J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats; by 1900, at latest, it was low turf s.—4. Prostitution: C. 20. Arthur Gardner, Lower Underworld, 1942. Cf. lumber, v, 5, and lumberer, 4, 5.

lumbs. See lumb.

lump, n. Any workhouse: 1874, H (see reference at pan, 2); by 1890 (B & L), also low s.; by 1900, no longer to be classified as c. Ex lump.—2. A lunch; a snack: U.S.A. (orig., esp. at San Quentin): C. 20. Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 1912; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'Food to be taken from the house where begged and eaten elsewhere'; Sept. 1917, Hobo News, Bill Quirke; 1923, Nels Anderson; 1924, G. C. Henderson; 1925, Glen H. Mullin; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A proper lump . . . is one which contains not only the food for sustenance, but some pastry or cake as well'; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; 1934, Convict, 'If the lady of the house gives him some food he says she puts out a lump'; April 1944, American Speech, Otis Ferguson; extant.—3. (Ex sense 1.) A casual ward: beggars' and tramps': C. 20. George Orwell, Down and Out, 1933.—4. Occasionally, since ca. 1930, a police-station. Black, 1943.

lump, v. To beat: 1859, Matsell; ob. To raise lumps (swellings).

Lump; usually the Lump. Marylebone Workhouse: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; extant.

Lump Hotel. A workhouse: tramps': 1896, F & H; by 1900, low s. An elaboration of lump, n, 1.

lump o' (or of) lead. One's head: British c. for the approximate period 1850–65; in the 1860's it > low rhyming s. and then (ca. 1875) gen. rhyming s. 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); in C. 20 U.S.A., however, it has remained c. (of the Pacific Coast): witness Chicago May, 1928, and Convict, 1934.

lump o' stone. A country jail: 1909, Ware; ob. Cf. the stone terms for a jail.

lump of sugar. A silver dollar: 1913, Edwin A. Brown, Broke; ob.—so ob. as to be virtually † by 1948. Sugar has long signified 'money': one 'lump of sugar' is naturally a dollar, and lump emphasizes the weight—the fact that the currency is in metal, not in paper.

lump oil. 'Coal, esp. that used as a fuel on a railroad,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1905.

lump the lighter. To be transported: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1785, Grose; 1859, H; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; 1874, H; 1887, Baumann; † by 1896 (F & H). 'In this case to lump signifies to load' (B & L, 1890).

lumper. 'Lumpers' (defined in Sessions Papers, Sept. 1740, trial of A. Hancock, as 'Men employed in unloading ships'), says George Parker in A View of Society, 1781, are 'the lowest order and most contemptible species of thieving . . . They have been expelled from the society of their brethren for being unable to scamp, prig, or dive, and they then commence Lumpers, which is skulking about ships, lighters, &c. hanging about quays, wharfs, &c. stealing old iron, fruit, sugar, or whatever comes to hand'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; by 1796 (witness Patrick Colquhoun's The Police of the Metropolis), the term may have ceased to be c., at least in the sense 'stevedore'—a sense recorded by Grose, 1785; it is prob. safe to say that the c. sense of lumper was † by 1870. It recurs in H. Ex S.E. lump, to put altogether in one lump.—2. A street vendor that sells old goods furbished to look like new, flimsy goods so treated as to look strong and durable: possibly c., but prob. low London s.: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1896, F & H; in C. 20 U.S.A., it is c.—witness entry at 'leader and lumper'. Contrast duffer.

lumping is the art of the 'lumper': since ca. 1770; † by 1910. Implied in lumper.

lumps, get one's. To be beaten up by the police when one is taken into custody: esp. convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. Proleptic.

lumtum. A fashionable thief: 1882, McCabe, New York (p. 221); 1896, F & H; † by 1920. Perhaps a corruption of London: via the sort of thief that affects to know how to behave in London Society.

lunan. A girl: tramps': 1839, Brandon, who classifies it as gypsy c.; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds. The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxix, 'Lunan—common woman'; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell, as New York c.; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H; by 1910, at latest, it was †. According to B & L, not a Romany word; but I don't much care for their etymology from 'the Swedish or Danish luns, a slatternly girl'. Perhaps a perversion of Romany lubni, 'a whore' (with its radical in Sanskrit lubh, 'to desire'—whence lobhini, 'of a female) desirous': Sampson). Cf. raclan.

lunar. A sentence, a term, of imprisonment for a calendar month: 1841, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin, 'Vell, I vos lumbered for a lunar'—glossed as 'imprisoned for a calendar month'—'though there vos nuffin agin me'; † by 1900. Abbr. lunar month: the discrepancy is prob. deliberate.

lunatic soup. (Cheap) red wine: since ca. 1925. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938.

lurch, n., 'a cheat, a swindle', is not c.; prob. S.E.—cf. the v.

lurch, v., 'to rob, to trick, to swindle', is S.E. despite its (after all, very natural) associations with the underworld. The O.E.D. records it as dictionary in 1530. Cf. the preceding entry.

lurcher, 'a petty thief or swindler', dates from ca. 1520, derives from the preceding term and is likewise S.E. lurching. The abandonment, without warning, of one criminal by another in the course of a crime: 1929–31, Kernôt; prob. throughout C. 20. Ex 'to leave (someone) in the lurch'.

lure. 'An idle Pamphlet,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1790. Perhaps because it attracts the unwary; perhaps, however, cf. leer.

lurk, n. A 'lark' or 'lay', i.e. an illicit means of livelihood; a money-making 'dodge' of the underworld; mostly in combination, as in the foreigner's lurk: 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1859, H, 'A sham, swindle, or representation of feigned distress'; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L, 'A swindle; specially applied to obtaining money by a false begging petition. An occupation'; 1896, F & H; 1899, J. Flynt; current in C. 20 Australia in nuance 'a dodge or scheme to cheat someone' (Baker, 1945), 'a plan of action' (C. J. Dennis 1916). Prob. ex s. lark, influenced by the S.E. to lurk; perhaps, as B & L suggest, ex tinkers' s. lurk, 'an eye' (a sense occurring, by the way, in No. 747); but cf. lurch.—2. The sense 'an occasional customer' (Philip Allingham, Cheappack, 1934) is pitchmen's s.—3. A hanger-on; an eavesdropper: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Cf. lurk, v.

lurk, v. To be a 'lurker', to be engaged on a 'lurk': ca. 1840–1910: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I (see maunder on the fly); ibid., 'We'll lurk on your trade'; 1896, F & H, 'To beg with false letters'. Ex the n.

lurk, dark. See dark lurk.

lurk, dead. See dead lurk.

lurk-cove. 'A double crosser; a treacherous fellow,' Leverage, 1925; since ca. 1918. A 'cove' or fellow that lives by practising various kinds of lurk, n., 1.

lurk(-)man. A confidence trickster; one who lives shadily by his wits: Australian: since ca. 1920. Cf. lurk-cove.

lurker. A 'silver beggar' (q.v.), one who drives a profitable trade in his professional vagrancy; often in combination, as in fire lurker: 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants, 'Lurkers are persons who go about with briefs, containing false statements of losses by fire, shipwrecks, accidents, etc.'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 219, where it is defined as 'an impostor'; 1859, H (as in 1842 quot'n); 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H; 1925, Leverage, 'A swindler'—an American deviation; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades (professional beggar, relying upon hard-luck stories); ob. Prob.—despite dates—ex lurk, v.—2. Hence (?), a Jack of-all-trades: 1896, F & H; ob.

lurking, n. The being, or the practice or profession of, a 'lurker' (q.v.): 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants, 'Poor Brown has . . . had the misfortune to be taken for lurking, and sent to prison'; 1851, Mayhew; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House (hard-luck stories affording the basis of begging); ob.

lurking patterer. A professional beggar specializing in impositions: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; † by 1910.

lurksman. A variant of lurker, 1: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, I (see Spanish lurk); ob.

lurres is a rare variant of lurries (see lurry); 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers.

lurries. See:—

lurry; usually in pl. 'Lurries . . . All manner of clothes': 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1671, F. Kirkman, The English Rogue, Part Two, 'Cloy the lurries'; 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-keepers, '[Housebreakers], if they find [no money], they take the best bulleroyes or Lurries they can find'; 1698, B.E., 'Lurries, c. Money, Watches, Rings, or other Moveables'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., where it is erroneously printed larries; 1725, A New Canting Dict., repeating B.E.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Lurries. Valuables; watches; rings; money'; 1890, B & L; † by 1896 (F & H). 'From the gypsy loure, money,' B & L; Smart & Crofton give the English Gypsy word as loovo, lovo; luva; Sampson the Welsh Gypsy as lovo. The c. term is perhaps a corruption—maybe a perversion—of the Gypsy word; prob. origin, however, is Shelta lūr.—2. Erroneously, booty: 1934, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood.

Luscombe's lambs. Such prisoners (esp. first-timers) as, working in a prison shop, did their best: Dartmoor Prison: 1870's. A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life (p. 46). Ex the name of a warder.

lush, n. Strong beer: 1796 (therefore current at least as early as 1791), Grose, 3rd ed.; 1797, Potter, 'Lush, drink'; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, David Haggart, Life (Glossary); 1823, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-34, IX, trial of George Coney, 'Cab hire, lush and grub, 1l. 10s.'; 1841, Tait's Magazine, April, 'Flowers of Hemp'; 1843, W. J. Moncrieff, The Scamps of London; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1850, if not indeed by 1840, it was low s. in England, but it seems to have survived as c. in U.S.A. until ca. 1940; The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848, defines it as 'spirituous liquors', and Kane, 1927, as 'whiskey', and R. Chadwick, in Liberty, Sept. 6, 1930, as 'liquor'. 'From the gypsy lush or losher, to drink; or German löschen': B & L.—2. The sense 'wine' is rare and, I think, incorrect, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq (pub. in 1829), III, 54.—3. 'To rob a "lush", i.e., a drunken man who has strayed his way, likely enough is lying asleep in the hallway,' Jacob A. Riis, How the Other Half Lives, 1891: U.S.A.: 1891, Wm De Vere, Tramp Poems of the West (a drunkard); 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1927, Kane (of a whiskey drunkard); Nov. 15, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex Lushington.—4. Thieves' booty: U.S.A.: 1872, E. Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York, '... Might steal cartloads of costly silks and not be a dollar the richer, were there no fences to take the lush off his hands'; † by 1937 (Irwin). Perhaps ex S.E. lush (of plants) 'luxuriant'.

lush, v. To drink (beer or other liquor): 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'To lush at Freeman's quay; to drink at another's cost'; ibid., 'How the blown lushes jackey...; how the wench drinks gin'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To drink; speaking of a person who is drunk, they say, Alderman Lushington is concerned, or, he has been voting for the Alderman'; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'Lushing the black strap'; 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, IV, '"Oh, he has been dining with Mr. Lushington today"'; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; Nov. 15, 1836, The Individual; 1838, Glascock; by 1839 (witness G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad) it had > low s. Perhaps ex the n., or direct from Romany.—2. Hence, to render (a person) intoxicated: 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'We lushed the coachman so neatly, that Barney was obliged to drive'; 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers; extant.

lush, adj. 'Lush, or Lushy, drunk, intoxicated': 1812, J. H. Vaux; in C. 20, American also, as in Godfrey Irwin, who, in 1931, defined it as 'hopelessly intoxicated'.

lush at Freeman's quay. See lush, v. (By 1850, it was low s.)

lush betty. A whiskey bottle: 1848, The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). See lush, n., 1, reference of 1848; cf. S.E. sense of betty, 'a pear-shaped bottle for olive oil'.

lush blowen. A drunken woman: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). See lush, adj., and blowen.

lush bum is 'the name given along the Bowery to a roustabout who has worked in lumber camps or on the sea, and, having accumulated a "roll", is out to spend it lavishly and to the last cent,' Charles Somerville in Flynn's, Dec. 13, 1930; extant. Here lush = 'rich'—as in S.E. 'lush grass': with a connotation of 'greenness'.

lush cove is a variant of lushy cove: 1839, Brandon, who, by a typographical error, defines it as 'a public-house'.

lush crib. A public-house; a gin-shop: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, Pierce Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Then blame me not... | For opening a lush crib in Chancery Lane'; 1823, Bee, who (at crib) restricts it to 'a minor public-house'; Feb. 14, 1846, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open, 'Lush cribs, sluicery's, gin shops'; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1864—witness H, 3rd ed.—it was low and public-house s. in England; by 1890, no longer c. in U.S.A. Ex lush, n., 1 + crib, n., 2.

lush-dip. A pickpocket specializing in theft from drunken men: 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue; 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves, '... That ill-odoured inn of incompetents, schlaum-workers and coke-peddlers from the water-front, scoopers and till-tappers and flim-flammers from the lower fringes of the Tenderloin, lush-dips and pocket-slashers and porch-climbers from the city at large. They were all there [in Tiernan's "ink-pot"]'; extant. See lush, n., 3, and dip, n., 1. Synonymous with lush-toucher and -worker.

lush(-)drum. A disreputable drinking-resort of criminals: 1872, George P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'No. 16, East Houston Street, a noted "lush-drum"... which was known as the resort of the leading koniackers of the country'; ob.

lush hound. A drunkard: 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; extant. A 'dog' at the lush.

lush(-)house. 'A low public-house': low s. (F & H, 1896), not c.

lush(-)ken An alehouse: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A public-house, or gin-shop'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1848, Sinks of London; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1896 (F & H), low s. in Britain; by 1900, low s. in U.S.A.

lush-out. A drinking bout: 1823, Bee; † by 1910. Cf. lush up.

lush(-)panny is a variant of lush-ken: ca. 1880-1920. F & H, 1896.

lush-roller; lush Willie. One who specializes in robbing drunken men: 1925, Leverage; by ca. 1935, the former was current in Britain—witness, e.g., Graveney Lodge in The Evening News, Dec. 9, 1936; Partridge, 1938; extant—the latter, slightly ob. Cf. lush worker.

lush stiff. A worthless cheque innocently—and esp., drunkenly—passed by an honest citizen: mostly forgers': since the 1920's. Maurer 1941.

lush(-)toucher. 'A person who robs intoxicated people,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'); Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; extant. See lush, n., 3, and lush-dip and lush worker.

lush up. To become intoxicated: 1934, Rose; 1941, Maurer; extant. An elaboration of lush, v.

lush Willie. See lush-roller.

lush work. 'The robbing of drunken men,' Leverage, 1925: C. 20. Cf. —

lush worker. 'Thieves of the cheap grade known as lush-workers . . . lie about . . . grog shops and when some sailor ashore leaves a place showing considerable slang'—i.e., list—'tail him and take all he has,' Alfred Henry Lewis, Apaches of New York, 1912; 1927, Kane, who applies it also to a prostitute taking this advantage; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; March 2, 1929, Flynn's; Jan. 25, 1930, Flynn's; June 20, 1931, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1935, Hargan; 1938, Francis Chester; 1942, BVB, esp. of a prostitute that robs her customers. A variant of lush toucher; cf. lush-dip.

lusher. A drunkard: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York; 1893, Confessions of a Convict; 1928, Chicago May, 'A lone drinker'; extant. Ex lush, v.—2. A robber of drunken men: 1934, Convict; 1942, BVB (of a prostitute that robs her customers); extant.

lushey. See lushy.

lushing cove is an occ. variant of lushy cove. (E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford, 1830.)

lushing crib. A tavern: 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, II, '[Scroggins's] lushing crib was numerously attended'; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; by 1920, †. Ex lush, v. + crib, n., 2.

lushing(-)ken is a variant of the preceding: 1860, C. Martell, The Detective's Note-Book, 'Two or three "lushing-kens" (drinking places)'; 1886, A Private Detective, Mysteries of Modern Roguery; by 1900. low s.

Lushington. See Alderman, 1, and lush, v. The term, however, soon came to be used independently of those two phrases: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'The Lushingtons, on tipping off the blue ruin, made wry faces at its watery effects'; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Lushingtons, drunkards'; by 1850, low s. in England; in U.S.A., perhaps c. of ca. 1850–90 lushy, 'drunk', was orig. (it arose prob. in first decade of C. 19) c. and it remained c. until ca. 1830, although (witness E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851) it may have remained c. rather longer in the U.S.A.: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'Lushy. Drunk. The rolling kiddeys had a spree, and got bloody lushey; the dashing lads went on a party of pleasure, and got very drunk'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I, 'Burke was rather lushy, and entertaining the Swells round him, how he would serve it out to Jem [Belcher]'; 1821, David Haggart, Life; 1825, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, I. Ex lush, n.

(e.g., Anon., State Prison Life, 1871). It is a pun on lush, n. and v., on the analogy of Washington and similar surnames.

lushy cove. 'A drunken man' (Vaux); a drunkard: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1828, George Smeeton, Doings in London; by 1876 (C. Hindley, The Life and Adventures of a Cheap Jack) it was low s. See lushy.

lustres. Diamonds: 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; † by 1920. Ex their sheen.

lusty cod. See cod, n.

lyb. See lib.

lyb-beg or lybbeg(e). See libbage. The second of these forms occurs in Harman, 1566.

lybken or lybkin. See libken.

lye. See lay.

lyesken chirps is not c., but tinkers' s. (? Shelta) for 'telling a fortune', B & L, 1890.

lying dead. (Of a tramp or a criminal) 'living quietly on money begged or stolen'—having temporarily forsaken 'the Road' or crime: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Perhaps ex:—2. (Of a train or an engine) that, having left the main line, is lying quiet or 'dead' on a side track: tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

lymitting lawe. See limiting law.

lyp is a variant of lib, n., 1, esp. in lypken, and of lib, v.

lypken. It is a variant of lipken, a mere mispronunciation of libken, q.v. (Harman.)

M

M or m. In 1914, Jackson & Hellyer have 'm, morph—sulphate of morphia', but morph is far too little disguised to be c.; 1922, Dialect Notes, article by Whitney Hastings Wells; 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle, defines it as morphine and implies that at this date it was mostly a drug-addicts' term; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, R. Jordan, 'Idioms'; 1929, Givens; June 21, 1930, Flynn's; 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack Roller, 'He started to "hit M" (morphine)'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man; April 21, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627; extant.

M and C. "'Marmon and Cadillac," meaning morphine and cocaine,' Stiff, 1931; drug traffickers' and tramps': since ca. 1918. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'A mixture of morphine and cocaine, usually four parts of the first to one of the second; thought by the addict to prevent too much of a . . . thrill, with a correspondingly weaker reaction'; 1942, BVB, 'M and C, Marmon and Cadillac, Maud C . . . a mixture of cocaine and morphine'; extant.

maak it. To prepare a dagga cigarette: South Africa: C. 20. C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946. Euphemistic; Afrikaans maak (Dutch n., maak; v. maken), 'to make'.

mab, 'a slattern', had currency ca. 1550–1850. The O.E.D. considers it to have been always S.E.—perhaps rightly. Ca. 1690–1750, however, it had sunk very low, though it is very doubtful whether it ever reached the status of c., despite the fact that it seems to have been commonly used in the underworld. Perhaps ex Mabel; but cf. S.E. mop in similar sense.—2. A harlot; see mob.—3. A cabriolet: possibly c., but prob. fast-life s. of ca. 1818–70. In, e.g., W. T. Moncrieff, Tom and Jerry, 1821; H, 3rd ed., 1864. By personification.

mabbed up, says B & L (1890), is 'old cant' for 'dressed carelessly, as a slattern': but on what authority? If genuine, then from mab, 1 or 2.

mabber. A cab-driver: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx; app. † by 1900. Cf. mab, 3.

mac. A pimp: since ca. 1870: 1912 (see mack); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'mac, mack, mackerel . . . A pimp'; 1942, BVB. See mack.—2. 'A generic and casual name for a chance acquaintance,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931; extant. Prob. ex sense 1: cf. the affectionate use of bastard. Not, I think, originating in the Mac of Scottish surnames.

mac(c)aroni. A pony: c. (of ca. 1850–65) before it > low rhyming s.: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue.

mace, n. 'The Mace is perform'd by Confederacy, one or two Persons take a House, and then get what quantity of Goods they can upon Credit, and then go off with them,' being a gloss on 'He . . . proposed to go upon the Mace': 1742, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. II, Part ii; April 1865, Sessions Papers; 1890, B & L; extant, though ob. Perhaps ex Yiddish mōs, 'money; to make money'; cf. Yiddish masser (or meser), 'a betrayer': B & L.—2. Hence, 'The Mace is a man who goes to any capital tradesman (a watchmaker for instance) in an elegant vis-à-vis—a light carriage for two persons sitting vis-à-vis—' with two or three servants behind it. He tells the watchmaker, that he lives in . . . one of the fashionable streets; that . . . some man of fashion has recommended [the watchmaker] as a good workman, and that he wants . . . for instance, a horizontal repeater, capp'd and jewell'd, and that it must be done immediately: in the mean time he wants the loan of a watch until his own shall be made . . . He borrows one and steals another, so the tradesman is two watches out of pocket': George Parker, A View of Society, 1781; 1785, Grose; 1812, J. H. Vaux (obtaining, on credit, goods that one has no intention of paying for); 1859, H, 'A dressy swindler who victimizes tradesmen'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A false pretense man; a swindler'; ob. by 1896 (F & H) in Britain; ca. 1900, Downey's Peter Napoleon Campana Songster (U.S.A.); by 1920, † everywhere.—3. (Ex sense 1.) 'Imposition or robbery' of any sort: 1821, P. Egan, Life in London; 1826, C. E. Westmacott, The English Spy, II; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, of a sham loan-office; 1890, B & L; ob.—4. A 'blackjack', i.e. a policeman's truncheon: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; extant. Coined by someone possessing a nice sense of history and humour.—5. The sense 'face' is (low) rhyming s. in Britain, but c. in Canada. In, e.g., Terence McGovern, It Paid to be Tough, 1939.

mace, v. To cheat 'on the mace' (see mace, on the); in C. 20, to obtain, or effect, illicitly: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1811 (see macing); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To mace a shopkeeper, or give it to him upon the mace, is to obtain: goods on credit, which you never mean to pay for; to run up a score [at an alehouse], or to sponge upon your acquaintance, by continually begging or borrowing from them, is termed macing, or striking the mace'; 1818, The London Guide, p. 57 (simply 'to cheat' in general, a vague sense common by 1820); 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham, 'To swindle a gentleman, did not sound a crime, when it was called "macing a swell"'; 1848, Sinks of London, loosely 'To rob, steal'; 1859, H (summarizing Vaux); 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, Moreby Acklom's article, 'H . . . maces A and B for a split'; 1925, Leverage. 'To beg; to swindle'; Jan. 11, 1936, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; Jan. 16, 1937, Flynn's, Frank Wrentmore's article, 'Macing', where 'to mace' is to obtain possession of a car at far less than its value by paying a deposit and then 'skipping' (or by otherwise evading payment of the remainder); 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 'Macing a ride on a train'; 1938, F. D. Sharpe, 'Macing: Getting something for nothing'; March 1941, The American Mercury, article by John Kobler (as in the Flynn's 1937 quot'n); extant.—2. Hence, to welsh: racecourse crooks': 1874, H; 1887, Henley, Villon's Straight Tip to All Cross-Coves; extant.—3. See mace the rattler.

mace, give it to (one) on or upon the. See mace, v., 1, reference of 1812.

mace, man at the. See man at the mace.

mace, on (or upon) the. By the practice of 'the mace' (see the n.); esp. of furniture: 1742 (see mace, n., 1); Feb. 1776, Sessions Papers, 'I had them on the mace . . . upon credit in . . . the swindling way'; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'The same [swindling] conduct is used with regard to furniture, &c., which being sent to the Gentleman's [actually, the swindlers'] house, are moved immediately to another, and sold for half value', the original vendor receiving nothing; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'On the mace; to live by swindling'; 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, In the Heart of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; by 1896 (F & H), low s. See mace, n., 1.

mace, striking the. See mace, v.: reference of 1812.

mace, work the. To practise the swindles described at mace, n.: 1896, Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago, but prob. current since ca. 1860; extant.

mace(-)cove. 'A swindler, a sharper, a cheat': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Bee, 'The mace-cove is he who will cheat, take in, or swindle, as often as may be'; 1887, Baumann; ob. by 1896 (F & H); † by 1910. See mace, n., 1 and 3.

mace(-)gloak. 'A man who lives upon the mace' (Vaux's sense): 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1870. See mace, n., 1 (cf. sense 3), and gloak.

mace joint. ' . . . Like th' mace joints that open up, pay you twenty-five dollars down on your car an' give you a sixty-day note for th' rest an' when they've bought cars for fifty-nine days, they rise up an' beat it with all th' automobiles, leavin' a lot o' guys with bum notes,' Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937; extant.

mace line, the. A variant of macing: 1831, W. T. Moncrieff, Van Diemen's Land; app. † by 1890.

mace the rattler; mostly as vbl n., macing . . ., 'Travelling in a railway train without paying one's fare': 1890, B & L; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 'Macing the rattler in the proper American way'; May 7, 1938, The Evening News, 'He told the Mayor that "macing the rattler had cost him a lot of money"'; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; extant.

macing. See mace, v.: reference of 1812.

maceman. 'A welcher, magsman, or general swindler; a "street-mugger"'; 1874, H; 1887, Baumann; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Policc!; 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H; slightly ob. A variant of the next.

macer. A swindler, esp. one who goes 'on the mace' (see mace, on the): 1811, Lex. Bal. (see quot'n at fakement); 1828, George Smeeton, Doings in London (at cards); 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, 'Macers . . . Common cheats'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1874, H; 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H; 1902, Bart Kennedy, London in Shadow; extant. Ex mace, v.—2. Hence, one who belongs to a gang ('generally . . . six or eight') that inveigles young men into selling, or buying, goods or property against worthless bonds and thus ruining themselves; dishonest counting-houses are involved: 1812, John Mack-coull, Abuses of Justice, 2nd ed., p. 115, where there is a full account; † by 1900.—3. A welsher: 1874, H; extant. Ex sense 2 of mace, v.—4. A 'swell mobsman': 1884, The Daily News, Jan. 5; ob. Ex sense 1.

macgimp (or MacGimp), McGimper or MacGimper. See megimp.

machine. 'A metal device for holding playing cards in the sleeve,' Ersine, 1933: card-sharpers': since ca. 1920.—2. 'A check protectograph,' Maurer, 1941: forgers': since ca. 1930.

machinery. Hypodermic syringe: 1942, BVB. Cf. works and artillery.

machinist. A professional card-dealer: 1925, Leverage; extant. He deals the cards with mechanical speed and accuracy.

macing, vbl n. Swindling, esp. 'on the mace': 1811, Lex. Bal. (at stoop); 1812, Vaux (see mace, v.); 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1890 (see mace the rattler); extant.—2. Hence, in U.S. commercial c., from ca. 1920; 1935 (see cuffing).

MacIntyre & Heath. Teeth: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

mack, n. A pimp: C. 20. Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 1912 (but valid for 1901–11), 'I ain't never been a mack'; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1942, BVB. Short for Fr. maquereau; variant of mac, 1.

mack, v. To be a pimp: 1887, Henley, Villon's Straight Tip to All Cross-Coves, 'Fiddle, or fence, or mace, or mack'; extant. Cf. the n.

mack on it, put. See put mack on it.

macked out. Well dressed: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex mack, n.: cf. low British s. pimped up. mackerel, 'a bawd', is—despite B.E. (mackarel)—good English.

mackery and mackrey, and mackry. See monkery, references of 1841 and 1809 and 1848.

mad. Excellent: South Africa: C. 20. (C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946.) Perhaps cf. the half-admiring 'What a mad thing to do!'

mad dog, 'strong ale', is not c., but s. Harrison, England, 1586.

mad house. A (very) strict, a severe, prison: mostly convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Proleptic: it tends to send the inmates crazy.

Mad Mick. A pick: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

mad mile. A smile: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

mad Tom. A member of 'the Eighteenth Rank of Canters', B.E., 1698—an order or rank that was closely allied to the 'Abram men', who simulated madness in order that they might the more easily pilfer; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1896 (F & H).

madam, n. A (kept) madam, a mistress, is not c., but (? low) s.: Grose, 1785.—2. 'I tore up my madam (handkerchief) and tied the wedge (silver plate) in small packets, and put them into my pockets': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights in Criminal Matters; extant. In the underworld, it was—at first and for a long time—only the women who used pocket handkerchiefs.—3. 'The Madam—the proprietor of a house of prostitution,' Chicago May, 1928: not c., but low s.—British and American.—4. 'Hot air'; (careless) talk; blarney; nonsense: mostly convicts': since ca. 1920: 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, "What did the old boy say?" "Just the usual madam. 'The public must be protected . . .'"'; 1940, Jim Phelan, Jail Journey; extant. Perhaps suggested by fanny, 2, but see Madam de Luce.

madam, v. To 'tell the tale': since ca. 1920. Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938, "I madamed to him"—"I told him lies"; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; extant. Perhaps ex sense 4 of the n.

Madam de Luce. "Madam" is convict slang for lying propaganda, hypocritical verbal showmanship, a downright deception. Short for "Madam de Luce", it was formerly rhyming slang for "spruce" (see spruce, n. and esp. v.), Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940: since ca. 1920. Ibid., "... Reforms, modern conditions. (Madam, just Madam de Luce, the old lags always said when one discussed such things . . .)"; extant.

Madame Ran is a misprint for:—

Madam Van (Harlot). A whore: 1675, R. Head, Proteus Redivivus, 'Madam Van Harlot takes him aside into another Room, pretending to speak with him about business, and there for a double expence gives him the opportunity to cool his Concupiscence'; 1698, B.E. (Madam Van); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (id.); 1785, Grose, by whose time the term seems to have > s.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., Madam Ran—an error which is repeated by Potter.

madame. See madam, n., 3.

made. See make, v.

made governor. See governor, made.

Madge. A sodomite: 1797, Potter; † by 1890. By ellipsis for Madge cull.

madge. See the note at the end of Madge cull. In U.S.A., madge, 'female genitals', may in C. 19 have been c.: witness Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859, and James D. McCabe, New York by Sunlight and Gaslight, 1882 (p. 510).

Madge cove. 'A keeper of a house for buggerers': 1797, Potter; † by 1890. See Madge.—2. A passive homosexual: 1823, Bee, "Madge Coves" . . . men who enact the parts of women'; † by 1900. Elaboration of Madge.

Madge cull. A man passively homosexual: 1741, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. II (Account of John Johnson); 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'Their chief place of meeting is the Birdcage Walk, in St. James's Park, whither they resort about twilight. They are easily discovered by their signals'; 1785, Grose, 'A sodomite'; 1797, Potter, who implies that it is an active homosexual; † by 1870. Ex cull, n., 4, and Madge, generic for a woman: cf. the C. 18 low s. madge, 'the private parts of a woman' (Grose), and then modern s. Nancy boy.

madza, 'half', is not c., but parlyarce. Esp. in combination as in madza caroon, 'half a crown'; madza poona, 'half a sovereign'; and madza saltee, a 'halfpenny'; cf. madza round the bull, 'half a pound of steak'. (All these terms are recorded by H, 1st ed., 1859.) Also medza. Ex It. mezzo, half.

Mae West, give (someone) the. To say au revoir to: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman, 'I bon soir him and he gives me the Mae West,' which he glosses thus: 'Mae West—come see me'; extant. Ex Mae West the famous film star's famous gag, 'Come up and see me some time!'

mag or meg, n. A halfpenny: ca. 1775, 'The Potatoe Man', in The Ranelagh Songster; 1779, Sessions Papers (Dec. 8, trial of John Pettitt), 'D—n it, I have got a man in the room, and I will have his great coat and boots, and every meg he has''; 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Bless your eyes and limbs, lay out a mag with poor chirruping Joe'; ibid., glossary, meg, which is prob. the Cockney pronunciation; 1797, Potter, 'Magg or megg, a halfpenny, copper coin'; 1809, Andrewes (meg and magg); 1811, Lex. Bal. (magg); 1812, J. H. Vaux 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III; 1823, Bee; 1824, Sessions Papers; 1829, Maginn (see little black father); 1831, Sessions Papers; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, where it is wrongly defined as a farthing; 1843, W. J. Moncrieff, The Scamps of London; 1848, Sinks of London; 1855, J. D. Burn, The Autobiography of a Beggar-Boy (meg); by 1857, it was low s.—witness 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue. Either a corruption or, more prob., a perversion of make, n., 1.—2. Hence, in U.S.A., a half-cent: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, where it is spelt magg; 1896, F & H; 1925—Leverage defines it as 'one cent', and spells it meg; Godfrey Irwin, 1931, spells it meig, q.v.; extant.

mag, v. To chatter: s. (orig. low), not c.—despite Egan's Grose.—2. See nagging, in which, obviously, it is implied. Independently in A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, 1869, 'You can "mag" a man at any time you are playing cards or at billiards'; 1874, H, 'To talk well and persuasively'; 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary, 'The operation of "maggin the gowk out of his purse"'; 1890, B & L, 'Mag, to, to talk, to talk persuasively'; by 1900, low s. Ex sense 1.—3. To steal: 1818, Scott, Midlothian, 'And loot the eartars, mag the coals'; † by 1900. Cf. magging.—4. See magging.

mag, on the. Engaged in swindling, esp. as a confidence trickster: mid-C. 19–20: 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747 (p. 412); ob. Cf. mag, n., 3, and v., 2.

mag-flyer. For definition, see mag-flying extant.

mag-flying. 'As for "mag-flying", that is not good for much. You have seen those blokes at fairs and races, throwing up coppers, or playing at pitch and toss? Well, these are "mag-flyers" . . . They have a . . . "grey"'; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1896, F & H; extant. See mag, n., 1.

mag in the shallow; often as vbl n., magging . . . 'Shaking in the hat', gambling with coins in a hat, a variant of toss-halfpenny: 1828, G. Smeeton, Doings in London; ob. Perhaps ex mag, v., but prob. ex mag, n., 1.

magazine. A six-months' prison sentence:

since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'The time one of the unlettered would require to read a magazine. See "book", "newspaper"' (Irwin).

magg. See mag, n., 1, 2.

maggie. An automatic pistol: yeggs', esp. in the West: Aug. 1916, 'Do You Speak "Yegg"?'—in The Literary Digest; 1925, Leverage, 'A magazine gun'; Dec. 8, 1928, Flynn's; ob. It chatters so!: more prob., however, ex 'magazine'.

Maggie Mahone. A telephone: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

magging, n. 'Getting money by cheating countrymen with balls, patent safes, etc., etc.': 1859, Matsell; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, 'Magging . . . means . . . swindling a greenhorn out of his cash by the mere gift of the gab'; 1896, F & H; ob. Cf. magsman, 3.

magic box. A keyless self-starter on an automobile: car thieves': 1935, Hargan; 1937, Godfrey Irwin (letter, Sept. 21), 'Used by car thieves to start car on which ignition has been locked; really a self-contained battery, with ignition coil, which permits moving car to secluded spot where ignition lock may be forced at leisure'; extant.

magifier. A pimp: 1933, Ersine; extant. A perversion of:—

magimp, magimper. See megimp.

magpie (wrongly defined by Barrère & Leland as sixpence). A halfpenny: 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist, 'I'm at low-water mark—only one bob and a magpie'; app. † by 1910. An elaboration of mag, n., 1, prob. suggested by mag, v.—2. A 'class of chained workers called "magpies", whose dress is black and cinnamon': 1874, J. Greenwood, The Wilds of London; † by 1920.

magsman. 'Magsmen . . . Swell-mobites' (Reynolds); 'a fashionably-dressed swindler' (No. 747, 1893): 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. xviii; 1865, T. Archer, The Pauper, The Thief, and the Convict; Oct. 1879, Macmillan's Magazine, '“Magsmen” (confidence trick men)'; 1885, Arthur Griffiths; 1890, B & L; app. † in this sense by 1900. 'Probably from the Yiddish machas or magas (to which mann may be arbitrarily added), meaning a great swell, a great man or highly honoured lord; or from mag, to talk persuasively' (B & L): the latter seems the more likely.—2. An accomplice of 'bouncers' and 'besters': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III (see jolly, n., 2); 1858, Dickens, 'The Detective Police' in Reprinted Pieces; 1872, J. Diprose; by 1880, it had merged into senses 3 and 4.—3. Hence, 'a street swindler, who watches for countrymen and "gullable" persons': 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Magsmen. Fellows who are too cowardly to steal, but prefer to cheat confiding people by acting upon the cupidity'; 1862, Mayhew, London Labour, IV, 'Unprincipled men who play tricks with cards, skittles, &c., &c., and lay wagers with the view of cheating those strangers who may have the misfortune to be in their company'; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1894, The Reminiscences of Chief-Inspector Littlechild; 1896, F & H; July 13, 1929, Flynn's, Eddie Guerin; † by 1940.—4. Hence, specifically, a card-sharper: 1862, Mayhew, London Labour, IV; 1887, Baumann; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 'Megsman: North-country term for card-sharpers'; extant.—5. Generically, ex sense 1:

'The order of magsmen will comprise card-sharpers, "confidence-trick" workers, begging-letter writers, bogus ministers of religion, professional noblemen, "helpless victims of the cruel world", medical quacks, and the various other clever rogues that figure from time to time in the newspaper records of crime': 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; 1890, B & L; 1895, A. Griffiths, Criminals I have Known; 1897, D. Fannan, A Burglar's Life Story; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; extant.—6. Hence (?), an extremely dishonest horse-dealer: 1890, Clarkson & Richardson, The Rogues' Gallery; ob.—7. A racecourse tipster: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1945. Ex senses 1-3 and perhaps 6.

mahogany. A cheap red wine: beggars': April 14, 1928, Flynn's, A. E. Ullman, 'Beggarmen', 'That flop-house . . . where, if you spent your coin for redstuff called "mahogany", at three jitnies the copy, you could get your "Mulligan" stew free and flop on the sawdust floor nights'; extant. Ex its colour.

mahogany flat, 'a bug', is not c., but s.—prob. low s. at first.

Mahometan gruel, 'coffee: because formerly used chiefly by the Turks' (Grose), is not c., but s. The term occurs as early as in E. Ward, The London Spy, 1698.

maid's adorning. Morning: Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20; ob. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; introduced by Cockney crooks.

Maidstone jailer (or -or), 'a tailor', was c. (ca. 1850-65) before it > rhyming s.: 1857, 'Ducange Anglieus', The Vulgar Tongue. In C. 20 U.S.A. (Pacific Coast), however, it is c.: M & B, 1944.

mail. A liquor-carrier for an illicit saloon, etc. (esp. for a shebeen): South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Perhaps ex mail-carrier (cf. mail-boat).

mail, get up the. See get up the mail.

mail a stiff. See stiff, mail a.

mail order, the; mail-order mob. 'This method [of procuring girls], is called the "mail order", and the Slavers known as "the mail order mob". Either men or women go around the country getting acquainted with girls, getting their names and addresses. They send them—the names and addresses—in to the gang located in Chicago, who write the letters on fake stationery offering positions in stores, offices, on the stage, etc. The object is to get them to get a girl friend and come to Chicago. The Slavers always sending the tickets, which makes it look honest. Then when the girls arrive the same old plans are used to put them into a life of shame by gentle means or forcible ones,' Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909: white-slave traffic: since ca. 1890.

maillhas, mailyas, is not c., but tinkers' s. for 'fingers': 1890, B & L.

main, take it. See main-line, v.

main bull. Chief of detectives; head of police: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant.

main(-)buntlings. See buntlings.

main drag. Main road or street: late C. 19-20 (prob. from early 1890's): 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'On the water-tank at San Marcial, New Mexico, a dozen years ago was the following hobo bill of fare: (1) Main-drag fair. (2) Bulls not hostile. (3) Round-house good for kipping. (4) North-bound trains no good. (5) Privates no good.

(6) Restaurants good for cooks only. (7) Railroad House good for night-work only.—Number one conveys the information that begging for money on the main street is fair; number two, that the police will not bother hoboes Number five means that the residences are not good to beggars'; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1931, Stiff, who differentiates main drag, 'main street of a town', from main stem, 'chief hobo street' (i.e., most frequented by tramps) of a town; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1932, current among English tramps—as in Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1933; 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress; and others. Sec drag, n., 7.—2. Hence, among tramps, the main line of a railroad: since ca. 1915. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

main finger. The chief of a criminal gang: 1925, Leverage; extant. See finger, n.

main fort. 'A large city (especially New York or Chicago),' Leverage, 1925: hardly c.

main guy. A leader (of a criminal gang; of a band of tramps): orig. tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Main Guy. Head person'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, which defines it as 'the boss'; 1927, Kane; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Prob. ex circusmen's main guy, 'manager of a circus', though this itself may possibly have, orig., been tramps' c., as in Wm De Vere's Tramp Songs of the West, 1891.—2. Hence, a 'swell': 1901 (see fake the feathers . . .); 1904 (see on the lam); app. † by 1920.—3. (With capitals.) God: tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. Big Guy.

main line, n. A vein, esp. a large one: drug addicts': since ca. 1925: 1933, Ersine, 'The large artery in the arm'; 1934, implied in main-liner; 1934, Rose, 'The median vein in the arm'; 1936, Lee Duncan; Nov. 10, 1937, Godfrey Irwin (private letter). Whence the nuance, an intravenous injection: since ca. 1930, at latest: BVB, 1942. A vein forms a line, and main rhymes vein.—2. Esp. in San Quentin but also at several other prisons, the main line is the prison mess-hall: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven (San Quentin); 1933, Ersine; Oct. 17, 1936, Flynn's, Convict 12627; extant. Prob. ex the queue that forms.—3. Hence, 'the convicts who eat in the main dining room of a prison': Ersine, 1933; extant.

main-line, v. 'Bust the main line, go into the sewer, main-line, take it in line, take it main, to take narcotics intravenously,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic: since the late 1920's. See prec., 1.

main-line, bust the. See main-line, v.

main-line con. 'A convict having no special privileges,' Castle, 1938: San Quentin: since the late 1920's. Ex main line, 2.

main-liner. A drug addict that 'shoots stuff into the veins', Convict, 1934; BVB, 1942, with variants main-line shooter and vein shooter; extant. Ex main line, 1.

main pusher. The chief illegal vendor of drugs in a city, town, or district: drug traffic: Nov. 29, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; extant. See pusher.

main ring. A sweat shop: 1934, Rose; extant.

main squeeze, a variant of main guy, is s. (orig., low s.), not c. In, e.g., Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924, and Leverage, 1925.

main stem. A main street; usually, the main stem, the main street of a town or city: since ca. 1890: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, 'Investigations that have been begun in "the main stem"'; 1903, Flynt, The Rise of Ruderick Cloud; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1907, Jack London (see batter, v., 2); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); April 1919, The (American) Bookman, M. Acklom; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, where, in relation to Chicago, stem = that part of the city in which the hoboes congregate; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson; 1925, Glen H. Mullins, Adventures of a Scholar-Tramp; April 1928, Flynn's, A. E. Ullman, 'Beggarmen', 'The Main Stem is the principal street for the bum's rush. It isn't the main street—it's the bum's boulevard'; 1929, Jack Callahan; 1930, C. R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; 1931, Stiff, who defines it as the 'chief hobo street' in a town or a city; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Feb. 10, 1934, Flynn's; 1935, Hargan, 'Main Street or business section'; by 1938, low s. See stem and cf. main toby; as main toby is to toby, so is main stem to stem.—2. 'Head person' (No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904): since the late 1890's: 1899, George Ade, Fables in Slang, 'To grow up and be the Main Stem, like Mr Jeffries'; by 1930, it was ob. and by 1940 it was †. An occ. variant of main guy, perhaps via main drag.

main toby. The main road; a highway: 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1896, F & H; by 1900, low s. Imm. ex the earlier form, main tober.

Major Bowes, adv. Well; all right: May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. Ex some topical theme of 1936-37.

make, n. A halfpenny: 1536, Copland, 'Docked the dell for a coper meke'; 1566, Harman, 'A make, a halfpenny'; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands; 1665, R. Head; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1714, Alex. Smith; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. An early form of mag, n., 1, but not necessarily its originator: make is perhaps a corruption of mag (or meg), which is perhaps a personification.—2. 'A successful theft, or swindle': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1890, B & L; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society (U.S.A.); 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue (see quot'n at fade, n.), where the sense is rather 'the booty'; slightly ob. Ex make, v., 1.—3. See moke, 2.

make, v. To steal: 1698, B.E., 'Made, c. Stolen. I Made this Knife at a heat, c. I Stole it cleverly'—repeated in 1725, in A New Canting Dict., where, however, make is defined separately, 'To steal; seize; to run away with'; 1742, Anon., The Life of Robert Ramsey, 'Carr . . . was sent to wait in the Kitchen where it was his Business to make what Plate he conveniently could'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrews; 1822, P. Egan, Samuel Denmore Hayward, "'I made them just now in Cheapside," answered our hero, laughing'; 1839, J. Cosgrave, The Most Notorious Irish Highwayman; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1872, G. P. Burnham (U.S.A.); 1884 (see find, v.); Dec. 1886, Sessions

Papers; 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H; by 1900, military s. in Britain, but still c. in U.S.A., where it has the further sense 'to rob, to burgle' (a place), as in Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926, 'At twenty-five I was an expert house burglar . . . carefully choosing only the best homes . . . I "made" them in the small hours . . . always under arms'. For the semantics, note that, in Fr. c., faire is used in the same way.—2. To make it: U.S.A.: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'To gain a desired point'; by 1885, no longer c. Among C. 20 convicts, the phrase tends to mean 'to get a parole or pardon' (Ersine, 1933).—3. To detect or recognize: U.S.A.: 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, detective to detective, 'You wouldn't have come within a block of him. In the language of the guild [of criminals], Sorg, he would have "made you" and got away'; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, The Enemy to Society; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1927, Charles F. Coe, Me—Gangster; by 1939, police s.—witness Great Detective Cases (p. 126), pub. in that year.—4. To deal with, attend to; esp., to (attempt to) burgle or sell things to (a person) or at (e.g., a house): U.S.A., mostly beggars', but also tramps': C. 20. In, e.g., Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926, an experienced seller of cheap jewellery, and at the same time a professional beggar, says (ca. 1907), 'I'll make the cribs [brothels] myself. I'm dynamite with them old bums in the cribs', and see quot'n at tab up; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 'Make a joint—rob a house'; 1942, BVB, 'To purchase drugs from a peddler' (cf. mizake the mizan); extant. A specialization of the coll. make it, 'to arrive; to succeed'.—5. 'Once I saw a chump made in Snift's place and knew that Snift was wise. When they make a chump it means that they frame him on some smart racket and clean him out of his dough,' Charles F. Coe, Me—Gangster, 1927: U.S.A.; extant. Ex 1.—6. (Ex sense 1.) To rob (a person): U.S.A.: 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller, 'Tony and I continued to "make drunks"': extant.—7. The sense 'to copulate with' (a woman) was, prob., at first c. (almost certainly ex sense 2); it bears a resemblance to sense 4, than which, however, it seems to be much longer established. Its exact sense is 'to get on terms of sexual intimacy with'—a sense current throughout C. 20 in U.S.A. and since ca. 1935 in the British Empire.

make, on the. See on the make.

make a bird's nest. See bird's nest.

make a break, 'to escape from prison', is rather prison-warders' s. (later S.E. and S.Am.) than c.

make a coil. See coil, make a.

make a collar. See collar, make a.

make a croaker for a reader. 'To get, from a doctor, a prescription for drugs': drug addicts': since ca. 1920. BVB. See make, v., 4, and cf. hit, v., 3.

make a getaway. See getaway, 3.

make a guy. See guy, do a.

make a play. See play . . .

make a plunge. See plunge, make a.

make a riffle. See rifle . . .

make a song about it seems orig. (ca. 1880) to have been c., to judge by this quot'n from James Greenwood's Gaol Birds: 'Some poor chap had lost all his money and his return railway ticket, and was making a song (telling everybody) about it'. Cf. Fr. s.

chanter, 'to say'—as in, 'Qu'est-ce que c'est que vous me chantez là ?'

make a spread. See spread the joint.

make a stall. See stall, make a.

make an in. See in, n., 2.

make connection. 'To unite surely, with confederates': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1890, no longer c. make easy. See easy, 2.

make it. See make, v., 2.

make one's elegant. See elegant.

make one's expenses. To gamble in the train: card-sharpers': late C. 19–20. Partridge, 1938. The winnings there can be counted on to pay the fares.

make one's gets. See gets, make one's.

make perde. See perde, make.

make ready a plant. To plan a robbery: 1889 (see pipe a plant); slightly ob. Cf. pipe a plant, q.v.

make (a person) swim for it. See swim for it.

make the boast. See making the boast.

make the brush. See brush . . .

make the gate. See gate.

make the green. See green.

make the man. Synonymous with make, v., 3, ref. of 1942.

make the raffle. See raffle.

make the schleps. See schleps . . .

maker. A counterfeiter, esp. he who makes the plates from which paper currency or cheques are printed: forgers': C. 20. Maurer, 1941.

making a trundle for a goose's eye; making a whim-wham to bridle a goose. See weaving leather aprons.

making that Memphis time. 'He tried to follow but soon gave it up, for I was "making that Memphis time", which on the Road'—i.e., among tramps—'connotes the highest imaginable rate of speed,' Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925; extant. In relation to a certain express train.

making the boast. 'Being released by order of the parole board,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'), where it = speaking plausibly to the parole board and thus obtaining a pardon; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1927, Kane; 1931, IA; extant. With a pun on boast and boost—and perhaps boat.

making the raffle. See raffle.

makins. 'Cigarette tobacco and papers, the makings of a smoke,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps' and beggars': C. 20.

maks. See max, 2.

malark(e)y, the. Back-chat; a false story, a 'run-around': 1933, Ersine, 'Bull, bunk. "It's the old malarky"': Feb. 11, 1939, Flynn's, Richard Sale, 'Andy Willow has a boat. That makes it your boat, and don't give me the malarkey'; by 1945, low s. Origin?

malkin trash, 'one in a rueful Dress, enough to Fright one' (B.E., 1698), is certainly not c., as I have seen it classified in one or two reputable dictionaries. Imm. ex malkin or maukin, a scarecrow.

Mallee root. A whore: Pacific Coast: late C. 1920. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on prostitute. Introduced by Australians; the mallee is a small eucalypt.

maltooling, n. 'Picking pockets in omnibuses':

1862, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV, 324; 1896, F & H; ob. A perversion of moll tooling (q.v. at moll tooler).

malty cove. A beer drinker: ca. 1840–90: either c. or low s.: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open. Lit., a beery man.

man. A pimp, or other man belonging to 'the Centre': white-slavers'; from ca. 1890. A. Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, 'He's the plain-clothes officer who runs in a "man" when he knows he is doing well'. Perhaps orig. U.S., for Jackson & Hellyer, 1914, include it in their glossary of American c.—2. In the U.S.A., the man denotes a prison Warden, whereas a man is merely a prison warder: 1929, Givens (the former); 1931, Godfrey Irwin (the latter); 1931, IA (the former); Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's (the former); 1934, Rose, 'Executive Officer . . . the man'; 1935, Hargan, 'Man—a guard'; March 12, 1938, The New Yorker, Meyer Berger notes the man as a drug addicts' term for a detective, whereas BVB, 1942, defines man (without the) as a drug-trafficker.

-man. See -mans.

man! Hide the contraband!; stop talking!; take care!: convicts': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. I.e., 'Man, look out!'

man and wife. A knife: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1920. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

man at the duff. See duff, man at the.

man at the mace. One who works a swindle by means of a sham loan office: 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief' (Macmillan's Magazine, Oct.); 1890, B & L; extant. See mace, n., 3. man-catcher. 'The shark's assistant who urges a job on the hobo—usually to fill a shipment of men,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': C. 20: 1923, Nels Anderson (see slave market); 1931, Godfrey Irwin.

man chovey, 'a shop-keeper': not c., but costers' s.

man-handle, 'to handle (a person) roughly', is not, as, in B & L, c.: orig. coll., it soon > S.E.

man in the market. 'New-comer in the criminal world, worth watching by the police,' Kernôt, 1929–31: since ca. 1920; by 1935, police s. Cf. market, in the.

man-killer. 'Penitentiary in which the convicts are treated with more than the usual brutality,' Kane, 1927; extant. Ex the (mainly American) s. man-killer, 'anything, any situation, of unusual rigor or severity' (Irwin).

man of the world. A professional thief: 1885, M. Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, 'He so loves to style himself, not from any resemblance to the similarly designated personage of polite society, but from the fact of his accomplishments being such that he can follow his profession anywhere'; 1890, B & L; ob.

man of wool. A soft-hearted and, or, credulous person: 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago, 'Two kinds: the Merely-Soft,—the "man of wool" as the Jago word went,—for whom any tale was good enough, delivered with the proper wistful misery: and the Gullible-Cocksure, confident in a blind experience, who was quite as easy to tap, when approached with a becoming circumspection': † by 1920. Refined wool is soft to the touch.

man-plant is a rare variant of plant, v., 4: Oct. 1836, Sessions Papers (p. 998), 'He said he was man planted, and sold like a bullock'; app. † by 1890.

man-planter. An undertaker: tramps': 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; extant. Ex plant, v., 3.

man robbed himself, the. See robbed himself . . .

man-trap. A brothel: late C 19–20. BVB.

manablins, ‘broken victuals’, is not c., but low s.

manager. ‘Active head of a gang’ (esp. of ‘con men’): Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 1936; extant. Humorously euphemistic.

mañana is a favourite word among tramps, but not a c. term: it ‘embodies the spirit of postponement’ (Stiff, 1931). The Spanish for ‘tomorrow’.

Manchester. The tongue: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan’s Grose; by 1896 (F & H) it was low s. Perhaps, by a pun, ex mang.

mand (rare): see maund, v.

mander. A variant of maunder, v.—2. Noun, also spelt marnder. A prisoner on remand; 1873, James Greenwood, In Strange Company; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; extant.—3. A remand: 1877, J. Greenwood, Dick Temple; id., 1885, A Queer Showman; 1890, B & L; extant.

manderer. A variant of maunderer.

mandozy, ‘a term of endearment among East-end Jews’ (H, 1874), is not c., but East End s.

mandy, ‘a beggar’ (C. 17), is either very rare or else a misprint. Humphry Mill, A Nights Search, Part II, 1646, ‘Three mandies did | Divide their bouns’.

-manes is a C. 16 variant of -mans, q.v.; Harman has harmanes and ruffmanes.

mang. ‘To speak or talk’: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, D. Haggart; 1848, The Ladies’ Repository (U.S.A.); 1859, H, who classifies it as Scottish; 1896, F & H (id.); ob. in Britain by ca. 1930; and by 1937 (Irwin), † in U.S.A. (Cf. the derivative mung.) Ex English Romany mong, ‘to beg, pray, request’ (Smart & Crofton), or Welsh Romany mang, v.i., ‘to beg, to ask alms,’ and v.t., ‘to beg for; to pray, beseech, entreat’—ex Hindi mamgna (Sampson).—2. Hence, to boast: 1821, David Haggart, Life, ‘They said, they had done nothing to mang about’; 1823, Egan’s Grose, where it is said to be Scottish; 1896, F & H (id.); † by 1930.

mangary, manjary. A variant of mungaree, q.v. at mungrily.

mangsgan. A lawyer: 1848, The Ladies’ Repository (‘The Flash Language’); app. † by 1900. Ex mang, 1: cf. mouthpiece.

manicure. To sweep: tramps’: May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman, ‘Have just manicured the box stall and am getting ready for the hay’; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full (in a passage valid for ca. 1920), ‘They make bums manicure the streets in Jacksonville’; extant. Humorous.

manifest, ‘a fast freight [train] carrying fruit or cattle,’ Stiff, 1931: tramps’: since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; by 1940, s. ‘From the “manifest” of the goods carried’ (Irwin).

manjary. See mungaree.

manor. A police district; a policeman’s beat: 1924, Stanley Scott, The Human Side of Crook and Convict Life, ‘There are straight crooks and crooked crooks on the “Manor” of a detective, and he gets to know them apart’; 1932, Arthur Gardner; 1934, Axel Brace, School for Scoundrels; 1935, George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; 1943, Black. Cf. ‘lord of the manor’.

-mans; occ., -man and -manes; the pl., unchanged; the form man’s, a folk-etymologizing error. The list is this:—Cheapmans, clogments, crackmans (or cragmans), darkmans, dolman, Gracemans, greenmans, harmans, lightmans, Newmans or Numans, pitman, ruffmans, togeman (togman, togmans). In the two Proper Names—Cheapmans, Gracemans—mans is a disguise substitute for the second half of the normal word, on the analogy of all the other terms; in the others, -mans = S.E. ‘-ness’ and, like the -ment of French, -mente of Italian adverbs, derives from L. mens, -mans coming direct (as befits these n. terms) and -ment(e) via the L. ablative mente, ‘with a mind, intention, mood’. Perhaps it would be more accurate to say that -mans derives from a Hindi, or a Bengali, word that has a Sanskrit origin valid also for L. mens: manan, ‘mood, mind’. See also -mans in Partridge, 1937.

man’s man. Male homosexual: C. 20. BVB. Ruggedly ironic, yet sturdily literal.

map, ‘face’, is low s.; as ‘personal appearance’, ‘front’ (Leverage, 1925), it may, orig., have been c.; map, ‘to make a good appearance’ (‘put up a good front’), likewise recorded by Leverage, was prob. c. of ca. 1915–30, then low s.; by 1945, ob.—2. A check (cheque): 1928, John O’Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1933, Eagle; Feb. 19, 1935, The New York Sun; extant. Ex the writing on the face of the check.

map(-)dropper. A casher of worthless checks (cheques): 1928, John O’Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. See map, 2.

marble heart. See give the marble heart.

marbles, ‘furniture; movables’, is not c., but low s.: C. 19. Ex Fr. meubles.

marching money. Money for travelling: Australian confidence tricksters’: since ca. 1919. Baker, 1945. Influence of the war of 1914–18.

Marconi, ‘to give a signal in secret’ (Leverage, 1925), is unlikely to have been c.—even at first.

mare. A woman (pejorative); a prostitute: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; by 1940, low s. Cf. pejorative bitch and Henry VIII’s ‘The Flanders Mare’.

margery prater. A hen: 1566, Harman; 1608–9, Dekker, ‘The Canters Dictionarie’ (Lanthorne and Candle-light); ca. 1615, Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggars’ Bush, ‘Or mergery-praters, Rogers, | And Tibs o’ the Buttery?’; 1665, R. Head; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose—but I suspect that the term was † by 1760 or thereabouts. Prater, ex its constant clucking; margery, by association with margery daw, a jackdaw, and margery howlet, an owl: B & L.

margin man. Synonym of big-shot connection: BVB, 1942. Ex the stocks-and-shares market.

mari. Marijuana; esp., a marijuana cigarette: drug traffic and white-slave traffic: since ca. 1925. By ca. 1935, low s. In, e.g., Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940.

marigold or marygold, ‘one million sterling’ (H, 1859): not c., but s. marinated. ‘Transported into some foreign plantation’ as a convict: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who does not, however, classify the term as c.—which it had, by 1760 or 1770, prob. ceased to be. Herbert Cory, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936, records it as current in U.S.A. in C. 20: this, I take leave to doubt. I.e., sent over the sea (L. mare).

mark, n. A likely victim for a thief, esp. for a pickpocket. There is an adumbration of the sense in 1749, where a malefactor says to an honest man, 'You are a full Mark; you can't well be missed' (Remarkable Trials and Interesting Memoirs . . . 1740 to 1764, pub. in 1765), and in the sense of 'a likely booty' the term occurs unmistakably as early as 1742, 'I seeing there was a large Parcel of Plate, told my Companions there was a Mark, and we agreed to have it' (The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. 1: John Gulliford); 1860, F. & J. Greenwood, Under a Cloud, "'There's a mark!" exclaimed one to the other, looking towards the spot where Hatcher was standing'; 1883, J. Greenwood, Tag, Rag, & Co., of the prospective victim of a passer of counterfeit; by ca. 1880, current in U.S.A. (Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective, 1886; both of a person and of a place), where it may have remained c. until ca. 1910—e.g., Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901, 'His "mob" had a "mark"—in their case, an easy bank to rob—in one of the Northern States'; 1903, Owen Kildare, My Mamie Rose; 1904, H. Hapgood; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; by 1890, s. in England. The mark at which the criminal aims.—2. Hence, a scapegoat, esp. in prison: prisoners': 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; extant.—3. Among American tramps, 'A person or house "good" for food, clothes, or money', Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (glossary); 1907, Jack London; but also among English tramps, as in the Rev. G. Z. Edwards, A Vicar as Vagrant, 1910; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1936, W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps; extant. Cf. mark, v., 2.

mark, v. To watch, to observe: 1780, Sessions Papers (mayoralty of Brackley Kennet, 6th session, No. VI, Part x), trial of John Beale, 'Randall looked me full in the face. I said to my son, that man marks me, let us get out of the way'; 1839, implied in marking, q.v.; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxiii, 'Tim twigg'd that a pig—a policeman—'was marking'; 1857, Snowden; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); Feb. 24, 1868, Sessions Papers; 1871, J. McLevy, At War with Society; by 1900, no longer c. Cf. S.E. 'remark a person'.—2. Hence, to mark (a person) down as a prospective victim: American and British: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, "'marked" and located'; 1896, F & H; 1899, C. Rook, The Hooligan Nights, 'Mugs who have been marked for skinning'; by 1920, no longer c. Cf. mark, n., 1.—3. To mark (a place) down to be robbed: 1890, Clarkson & Richardson, The Rogue's Gallery; by 1920, s. and coll. Ex sense 1.

mark, ready the. To prepare the prospective victim for fleecing: Aug. 30, 1930, Flynn's, Lawrance M. Maynard, 'Confidence Rackets'; extant. See mark, n., 1, and ready, v.

mark—or mark for—a connection. To get into touch with a drug-peddler; also to buy drugs from him: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. BVB. See connection.

markar is that form of marker which is common in Greene's Second Conny-catching, 1592.

marked paper. 'Playing cards marked for dishonest purposes,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant.

marker. In 'the lifting law' (mostly shop-lifting), 'He that first stealeth [is] the lift. He that receives [the stolen goods], the Markar', who, hiding the booty beneath a spacious coat, conveys it outside and immediately passes it on to the santar, who hastens away with it to bawd's or fence's: 1592, Robert Greene, The Second Part of Conny-catching, which see for a full account of the marker's role; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; app. † by 1660. Perhaps ex S.E. mark, 'to keep watch'.—2. The U.S. gambling sense ('one who marks down that sum which he bets') is not c. but j. (Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859).—3. Hence (?), an IOU: U.S.A.: 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; extant.

market. A thieves' scene of operations: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 351); ob. Perhaps ex market-place, a favourite haunt for pickpockets.

market, in or on the. Possessed of money: since ca. 1925: 1935, David Hume, Dangerous Mr Del ('on'); 1935, D. Hume, Gaol Gates ('in'); 1939, Val Davis. I.e., in among the money.—2. See man in the market.

market, take to. See take to market.

market for stiffs. A broker's, or a receiver's, office where stolen bonds, etc., may be sold: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. See stiff, n.

marking, vbl n. Watching, observing, with a view to robbery: 1839, Brandon; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H; by 1900, no longer c. Cf. mark, v., 2 and 3.—2. The n. corresponding to marker, 2: not c., but j. (Matsell, 1859).

marking stall. A look-out man: 1889 (see whisper, n.); rather ob. I.e., a stall (n., 1) that marks (see mark, v., 1).

Marmon. See ride, v., 3—and M and C.

marnder. See mander, 2.

Maro or maro, 'a coat' or 'an overcoat' (Leverage, 1925): not, I think c., but s. Ex an Italian tailor's name?

marotte. 'Phony jewelry,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. Fr. marotte, 'fool's bauble'.

married. 'Persons chained or handcuffed together, in order to be conveyed to gaol, or on board the lighters for transportation, are in the cant language said to be married together': 1785, Grose; by the 1850's—and prob. much earlier—current in U.S.A. (see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1896 (F & H), ob. in England; 1927, Kane (U.S.A.); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant in U.S.A. Cf. wife, 2.—2. Having homosexual relations: mostly U.S. tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

marry. See married, 1.—2. To enter into homosexual relations (with): U.S.A.: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; BVB, 1942.

martar is merely a frequent spelling of:—

martar occurs only in horse-stealing ('prigging law'), thus: 'To the effecting of . . . Prigging . . ., there must of necessity be two at the least, and that is the Priggar and the Martar. The Priggar is he that steales the horse, and the Martar is he that receives him, and chops and changeth him away in any Faire, Mart'—the origin of the term—'or other place where any good rent for horses is,' Robert Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, 1592; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; app. † by 1640.

martin. The victim of a highway robbery: 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 'He that is robd the Martin'; 1610, Rowland; 1621, Fletcher, The Island Princess (O.E.D.); app. † by 1660. See high law, quot'n from Greene. Precisely why the victim should be called a martin remains unsolved: the reference is prob. not to the bird but to the saint, for did not St Martin divide his cloak with a beggar?—2. '(Tramps).—A boot', F & H (1896), quoting P. H. Emerson's Signor Lippo Lippi, 1893; but in Lippo Lippi the meaning is not 'boot' but 'a hand'; nor is it tramps', but a strolling players' term.

martingale, in gambling, is not c., but j.

marvel. 'To shy off or walk away quickly', The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). As from something that startles one.

Mary Allen. See Mary Ellen, Ersine ref. of 1933.

Mary and Johnny. Marijuana (cigarette or plant): since ca. 1925. M & B, 1944. Not rhyming: Mari suggests 'Mary' and juana suggests 'Johnny'.

Mary Ann. A Mexican drug—the 'loco weed': June 1925, The Writer's Monthly, Randolph Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave'; March 12, 1938, The New Yorker, Meyer Berger applies it to a marijuana cigarette; extant. An alteration of Mary Jane, the English of the folk-lore interpretation of marijuana: cf. Mary Warner.—2. The sense 'A beer can' (Leverage, 1925) sounds like rhyming s., but the resemblance is prob. accidental; and I query the classification of the term as c.—3. In Britain, it is a C. 20 convicts' term, thus: 'To wash up the dishes and tidy the table, a duty known in the Scrubs as "Mary Ann",' Richmond Harvey, Prison from Within, 1936. Mary Ann: a name common among domestic servants.—4. A fist: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Mostly, Pacific Coast and Canada. 'Rhyming' on hand.

Mary Blane, 'to meet a train', was, prob., thieves' rhyming: 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life; by 1910, no longer c.

Mary Ellen. 'The act of feeling a person's pockets' (before robbing him): 1925, Leverage; 1933, Ersine, 'Mary Allen, Mary Ellen'. 1. A method of robbery. The victim is made drunk and then rolled . . . 2. The act of picking pockets, during which the dip stands sideways to the mark'; Nov. 18, 1933, Flynn's, 'I'm going out on the "Mary Ellen"' (a woman pickpocket robbing the amorous sucker); Sept. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Convict 12627, 'The Mary Ellen worker has but little technique involving the actual removal of the pocketbook'; extant. Prob. ex the name of a notorious pickpocket.

Mary Warner. A marijuana cigarette: drug addicts': since ca. 1920: 1929–31, Kernôt; 1938 (see moot); extant. Cf. Mary Ann and Aunt Jane.

mash. To assault (a person): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Mashed. Assaulted'; by 1930, also British—both v. and, as in Jim Phelan, In the Can, 1939, n. Cf. 'to mash potatoes'; perhaps influenced by 'to bash'.

mashed T-bones. Hamburger: 1933, Ersine; by 1940, low s. Depreciative.

masheen is tinkers' s. for 'a cat': 1890, B & L. Cf. Shelta maksti.

masher. 'A loafer who annoys women by his attentions,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; very ob. An extension of the s. sense, 'an affected fop posing as a "lady-killer"'.—2. 'A low thug,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex mash.

mashing. Tea and sugar, mixed in a small D.O.U.

packet, for throwing into the 'drum' of boiling or near-boiling water: tramps': C. 20. In, e.g., W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 1936. Not literally mashed, but looking rather like it.

maskin is a misprint for naskin, a jail: 1735 ed. of The Triumph of Wit.—2. Said by B & L, 1890, and by F & H, 1896, to be 'old cant', for 'coal': on what authority? It looks very much as if there has been a confusion between coal and gaol: cf. sense 1.

masock. A masochistic sexual pervert: 1928, Chicago May; extant. Either short for masochist or directly, by subtraction, from Sacher Masoch, after whom masochism has been named (see my Name into Word); cf. sad.

mason, n. See mason, on the.—2. 'The Dealers called Masons, that is, giving your [sic] Notes for Money, and never designing to pay it': 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1860. Perhaps ex the idea of swindling implicit in mason's maund.—3. 'A lesbian who takes the active part,' BVB, 1942: U.S.A.: C. 20. Secret ritual and rites and practices.

mason, v.i. To practise 'masoning' (q.v.): 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (as the vbl n. masoning); † by 1860. Prob. ex the n.

mason, on the; get on the mason. A term, current ca. 1740–1800, explained in John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, 'He did not know that they [horses] were stolen, but thought that they were got on the Mason, that is, for Paper'—a bill, an IOU, or some such bond.

masoner. 'Masoners are a Sett of People that give Paper for Goods; there is generally three or four of them that go to a Fair or Market together, where one appears like a Farmer or Grazier, and the other two as Vouchers', and they look for a gullible farmer from whom to buy, e.g., sheep on a note of hand; the gang departs without actually paying and then disposes of the sheep to rascally drovers that work in collusion: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1860. Why masoner? Perhaps because he sets one thing on another.

masoning, n. 'This [practice] is called in the Cant, Masoning; that is, giving your [? you] Notes' i.e., notes of hand, promissory notes, IOU's—'and never designing to pay it': 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1860. Cf. masoner.

masoning cull. A man that practises 'masoning' (see preceding entry): 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1860 at latest. Ex mason, v.; cull, here = fellow.

mason's maund. Dekker, O per se O, 1612, speaking of (false) sores wherewith beggars seek to arouse pity in—and money from—the public, says, 'When the soare is above the elbow, as if it were broken, or hurt by falling from a Scaffold, it is called Masons Mawnd' (cf. footman's maund or soldier's maund); 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; by 1830, †.

masse-stapler. '(Old cant), a rogue disguised as a woman', B & L, 1890: but on what authority and how old? If genuine, the term may derive, as B & L propose, from Yiddish masser (or meser), 'a betrayer'.

master of the black art, 'a beggar': 1896, F & H, who say that it is old. The term is suspect.

mat macer. 'Mat macers, fellows and old women who go round in a morning when the servants are cleaning the doorways and steal the mats, &c.': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1920.

match, the. 'Fraudulent racket in which coins are matched' (Sutherland): 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 'I was hustling the match with Joe Deane'—and see quot'n at pay-off; ibid., 'Beau and me had beat him out of a half-century at the "match" one night when he was drunk'; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant.

mate, n. 'A habitual companion, an associate, fellow, comrade; a fellow-worker or partner' (O.E.D.), is the basic sense-group in S.E. But it is arguable that when mate is used in the underworld to designate an associate in crime and esp. that associate who is one's accomplice in a specific crime—as it was used ca. 1580–1630—it is then c. Thus Robert Greene, in The Third and last Part of Conny-catching, 1592, speaks of a gang of criminals as 'This crew of mates' and has 'A roging mate, & such another with him, were there got upon a stal singing of balets'. As a term of address, it was in use a century before it reached the underworld as 'accomplice in specific crime'.

mate, v. To go about, to tramp, to beg, with another man: mostly tramps' (Canadian): since ca. 1910. Terence McGovern, It Paid to Be Tough, 1939, 'I "mated" with a dyed-in-the-wool "stiff" from 'Frisko'. Ex the n. matin(-)bell. A thieves' rendezvous: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321, foot), 'A thieves' abode or rendezvous . . . A drum, matin bell, evening chimes'; 1896, F & H; ob. Cf. the note at evening chimes.

mattance. Sense undetermined: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, Moreby Acklom, "'Wise-Cracking" Crook Novels'; extant?

Matthew, Dr. See Doctor Matthew.

Maud C. See M and C. By perversion.

mauks. See mawks. (D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd, 1728.)

mauled, 'extremely drunk', appears in both B.E. and Grose: but in neither as c. It was, in fact, a s. term.

mauley or mauly may orig. have been—indeed, it prob. was—c. George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'I say, how are you? slang us your mauly', where the italics imply cant; 1797, Potter, 'Morleys, hands'—so also in Andrewes, 1809; Lexicon Balatronicum (mawley); 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III (morley). Almost certainly pugilistic s. by 1825, if not before; perhaps American c of ca. 1830–60 (The Ladies' Repository, 1848). Ex maillhas, q.v.; prob. influenced by 'to maul'.—2. Hence, a signature: ca. 1830–1900: more prob. low s. than c., even at first: 1851, Mayhew; H, 1874.

mauley, fam the. See fam the mauley.

mauley, tip (a person) the; tip mauleys. See tip the mauley.

maun. (Usually in pl.: mauns.) A hand: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'Tip us yer mauns', glossed as 'give us your hand': but the term is strongly suspect; Miles, I think, unconsciously blended mauleys and fams. (The term recurs in 1848 in Sinks of London Laid Open, the compiler of which seems to have been acquainted with Miles's book.) But it is possible that maun derives ex Fr. main.

maund, n. Begging; a begging: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, has the entry, 'What maund doe you breake [? make], what kind of begging use you?'; app. † by 1700.—2. A means of begging; that disability (inherited, suffered, or induced) which a beggar exhibits to excite compassion and alms: see footman's—mason's—soldier's maund. These substantival senses derive ex the v.

maund, v. 'To maunde, to aske or requyre,' Harman, 1566; ibid., in the dialogue, 'Maund that is bene shyp . . . aske for the best'; ibid., 'Maunde of this mortc what bene pecke is in her ken'; ca. 1615, Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggars' Bush, 'I'll mand no more, nor cant'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'By glymmar to Maund'; 1688, Holme (mawnd); 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Mawnding, asking or begging'; 1817, J. T. Smith, Vagabondiana; † by 1860. Perhaps ex Fr. mendier, 'to beg'.—2. (Usually, v.i.) Hence, to bed: ca. 1615 (see sense 1); 1698, B.E.; 1785, Grose; 1851 (see maund on the fly); 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1896, F & H; † by 1910.

maund, footman's—mason's—soldier's. See footman's maund; mason's maund; and soldier's maund.

maund Abram. S. Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610, defines it implicatively thus: 'He maunds Abram, he begs as a madde man'; app. † by 1800. See maund, v., and abraham cove.

maund it is merely a variant of maund, v., 2.

maunde. See maund. (Harman, 1566, spells the v. thus.)

maunder. A beggar: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, gives as the ninth article of the fraternity of rogues and vagabonds, 'Thou shalt doe no hurt to any Mawnder, but with thine owne hands'; 1641, R. Brome, A Joviall Crew, 'My noble Springlove, the great Commander of the Maunders, and King of Canthers'; 1665, R. Head; 1688, Holme (mawnder); 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1823, Bee, 'Maunders—beggars using much lament'; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1896 (F & H). Ex maund, v.

maunder, v. To beg (v.i.): 1612, implied in maunderer; 1621, implied in maundering, adj.; 1848, implied in maundering, n.; 1851, implied in maunder on the fly; 1874, H; † by 1887 (Baumann). Perhaps an extension of maund, v., or ex Fr. mendier, 'to beg'.

maunder on the fly. To beg on 'the high fly' (q.v.): 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'He has been "lurking" on every conceivable system, from forging a bill of exchange down to "maundering on the fly", for the greater part of his life'; 1859, H; † by 1890. See the elements.

maunderer. A beggar: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'Such as in the Canting tongue are called mawnderers (of begging or demanding)'; app. † by 1700, its occurrence in Ainsworth's Rookwood, 1834, and in Matsell's Vocabulum (as manderer), being mere literary archaisms.

maundering, n. Begging: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; but doubtless contemporaneous with maunderer and maundering, adj.

maundering, adj. (Applied to a vagabond) that begs: 1621, John Taylor ('the Water Poet'), in the line-block on the title page of Beggery, Beggars, and Begging, has 'A Maundering Begger' and 'A Gallant Begger'; app. † by 1700.

maunding, n. 'Asking', says Dekker in 'The Canters Dictionarie' of Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608-9: presumably in the sense, 'begging'. (He spells it mawnding.) In 1610, Rowlands has 'Maunding begging'; thus too Richard Head in The English Rogue, 1665, and E. Coles in An English Dictionary, 1676; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1896 (F & H). See maund, v. maunding, adj. See maunding cove; The Maunding Souldier (an ex-service beggar) is the title of an anonymous ballad of ca. 1629; prob. † by 1890. Cf. the n.

maunding cove. A beggar: ? ca. 1600-80. The only authorities are the anon. ballad, A Sack for my Money, ca. 1603, and F & H, 1896. Cf. maunding, adj., and maund, v., 2.

mauns. See maun.

mause. See mouse.

maut is a rare C. 18 spelling of mort.

maux. See mawks.

maw. Mouth: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; low s. by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.). A sense-perversion of S.E. maw, stomach.

mawderer is a misprint (Dekker, O per se O, 1612) for maunderer.

mawk. A dirty, slatternly prostitute: mostly tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; BVB, 1942. Prob. ex:—

mawks. A slattern; an untidy, disreputable woman: 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker, 'The Maux of a Washer-woman has pawned 'em both'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'An Abbreviation of the Word Malkin'; 1728, D. Defoe (mawks); 1823, Egan's Grose—but the term had > s. as early as 1780. A corruption of maukin, i.e. malkin, 'a kitchen wench' but also a cat—cf., therefore, cat.

mawley. See mauley.

mawnd; mawnder; mawnderer; mawnding. See maund; maunder; maunderer; maunding.

max. Brandy: 1800, The Oracle ('Fashionable Characters: A Kiddy'), 'Tossed off three flashes of lightning and two noggins of max'; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Gin'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Gin or hollands' (hollands = Hollands gin or Hollands geneva, i.e. gin); 1818, The London Guide; 1821, J. Borrowes, Life in St George's Fields; 1823, Bee; by 1830, if not earlier, it had > s. 'Evidently from the Latin maximus ["greatest"], in reference to the strength and goodness of the liquor' (Wm Hone, The Table Book, 1838): but this, to be precise, is the origin of maxim, the immediate origin of max.—2. Hence, liquor in general: 1886 (see mecks); 1891, C. Bent (maks); † by 1920.

maxim. Geneva, i.e. gin (the drink): 1739 (Feb.), Sessions Papers (trial of George Haggis), 'They told me, that when the Men left me, they came in there for each of them a Glass of Maxim, [Geneva] but they could not tell any of the Names'; † by 1830. For origin, see at end of max.

may-gathering. Sheep-stealing: 1889, C. T. Clarke & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary), 'Sheep-stealing . . . Fleecy cla(i)ming, May gathering, bleating marching'; 1896, F & H; ob. White fleeces of sheep: white blossoms of may.

may your prick and purse never fail you! See 'Beggar's benison'.

maze concession. 'A building with criss-cross aisles, hard to find exit once inside,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; extant.

mazuma, 'money'; not c., but s. (Leverage 1925.)

McCoy. 'Neat; good-looking; unusually excellent or genuine. From the pugilist, "Kid" McCoy, who was for some time at the head of his class,' Godfrey Irwin, American Tramp and Under-world Slang, 1931, by which date it was also general s. Earlier records are:—1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'It's the real McCoy, that idea'; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'Real McCoy—The genuine goods'.—2. Hence, genuine liquor: racketeers', esp. bootleggers': May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; Dec. 1930, The American Mercury, James P. Burke; 1931, John Wilstach; 1934, Rose, 'Uncut liquor'; ob.—3. A dependable person: July 18, 1931, The Saturday Review of Literature, article of John Wilstach; extant. Ex sense 1.—4. Nitroglycerin used in safe-blowing: bank robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; extant. Dr Maurer proposes origin in 'a well-known nitroman in the oil fields of Pennsylvania': but the origination exactly parallels that of sense 2: for safe-blowing, 'nitro' is 'the real McCoy'.—5. Medicinal drugs: 1942, BVB, but since ca. 1934. Cf. 2.

McGimper. See macgimper.

meadow. A convict-prison: Wm Maginn's translation, 1828, of Fr. bagne.

meag, 'a halfpenny', is a variant of make (in same sense): 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries—the only instance I have noticed.

meal ticket. 'A person "good" for a meal' (cf. mark, n., 3): tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; by 1920, it had merged with s.—2. A prostitute that supports a lover; a pimp: white-slave traffic: C. 20: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1935, Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession; 1942, BVB.—3. (Ex senses 1 and 2.) Any gratuitous source of income: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1918, s.—4. The sense 'a stop-gap job' has always been s.

mean racket, the. Pocket-picking: since ca. 1918. Kernôt, 1929-31. Despised by other crooks.

measure, n. 'Man. "Jack is your measure, he'll do the job for you"': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue: † by 1910. I.e., a man big enough for the (stated or implied) job; one who can measure up to it.—2. A handkerchief: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus' (see three-quarters); † by 1920. Often used for measurements.

measure, v. (Of, esp., the police) to examine (a suspected criminal) very closely: 1859, Matsell; 1904, Life in Sing Sing (to subject to the Bertillon system of measurement); † by 1920. Self-explanatory.—2. To strike (a person): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Measured. Struck'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Measure. To knock down'; extant. Perhaps 'to cause him to measure his length upon the ground'.—3. (Ex sense 1.) To stare at (a person): 1904, Life in Sing Sing; extant.

meat. Collective for 'women', esp. for 'women regarded sexually' and 'prostitutes': white-slavers': late C. 19-20. Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940, 'Such good "meat" as Mathilde fetched high prices at the "licensed houses"'; ibid., 'The prettier, whiter of skin, and the more beautiful her figure, the more she will fetch in the "meat market"'. Cf. mutton-monger and mutton-walk.

meat, drink, washing and lodging. A term of ca. 1720–50 for gin: see quot'n at white tape. App., mostly prison c.: to many prisoners, gin was as good, as welcome, as all these necessities combined.

meat hound. A male homosexual, esp. a sodomite: C. 20: BVB. Cf. meat.

meat market. See meat.

meat safe. An oblong box-pew, curtain-sided and gauze-fronted, in which sits, during service in chapel, a murderer awaiting the death sentence: since ca. 1920. 'Stuart Wood', Shades of the Prison House, 1932. There is a grim resemblance.

mecks. 'Mecks . . . Wine, Liquors, or Spirits': tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob. From max, q.v.

med man is pitchmen's and carnival s. for a 'medicine man'—a quack. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. medical.

medazas. See medzies.

medical is on the borderland between c. and shady business—but perhaps closer to the former than to the latter in the sense 'a medical charlatan treating venereal disease, or a fake doctor procuring abortion'; as a synonym of med man, however, it clearly is s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

medicine. Narcotics; a narcotic: 1938, Convict 2nd; extant. Cf. God's medicine, q.v. medicine ball. Drug administered to a race-horse: race-course gangs': app. ca. 1900–30. Michael Fane, Racecourse Swindles, 1936. Cf. dynamite, 2.

medlar. 'A fellow that smells bad': 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H, 'A dirty person'; † by 1940. Ex the fruit of that name—despite its lack of offensive smell.

medza caroon is a variant of parlyaree madza caroon, q.v. at madza.

medzies; medazas; medzers. Half-crowns; coins; cash, money: not c., but parlyaree. The third form occurs in H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks, 1938, for 'money'; Wicks cites mezzi-carroon for half-a-crown. Ex It. mezzo, 'half'.

meestle. A dog; late C. 19–20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'Now seldom heard among the younger tramps and criminals'. App. a Romany corruption of either messar or—a dialectal variation of the same word—messet, 'a lap dog'. Burns's and Scott's uses of these words appear to link them with gypsies.

meet is an error for melt, v.: Potter, 1797.—2. A meeting place; a meeting, encounter; a rendezvous; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'At six I was at the meet (trysting-place)'; 1893, Langdon W. Moore. His Own Story (U.S.A.), 'Where he could see the "meet"' and 'He made a "meet" for the following day'; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'A crooks' hang-out'; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; by 1930, s.—3. Hence, 'an appointment with a narcotic peddler' (BVB, 1942): drug traffic.

meg, n.; often megg. A guinea: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia; 1698, B.E., 'Meggs, c. Guineas. We fork'd the rum Cull's Meggs to the tune of Forty, c. We Pickt the Gentleman's Pocket of full Forty Guineas'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1745, The Hist. of Clubs; 1785, Grose (repeating B.E.); † by 1820. Perhaps Meg, by personification.—2. A halfpenny: see mag, n.

meg, v. Implied in megging, q.v.

meg-flying, n. Tossing for halfpence: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; extant. See meg, 2, and mag-flying (the more usual form).

megg. Marihuana: 1942, BVB. Perhaps megg = Meg, by a pun on Mary Warner.

megging is defined by Heinrich Baumann (Londonismen, 1887) as Gaunerei, i.e. swindling or pickpocketry; ob. Perhaps rather a corruption of making (see make, v., 1) than a derivative of meg, n., 1 or 2.

megimp. A pimp: Western States': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant. Variants are MacGimp, McGimp, rhyming on pimp, and the derivative MacGimper (or macgimper), magimper, megimper: all of these except the last appear in BVB, 1942. Note that not only is pimp rhymed but also mac (or mack) is introduced.

megsman. See magsman, 4.

meig. A nickel: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Also one cent when found in the plural, as "fifty meigs" for fifty cents': extant. A variant of mag, n., 2.

mejoge. A shilling: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; ca. 1850, it > midgic (q.v.). The origin is obscure: perhaps ex meg; cf. midgic.

meke is a rare variant of make, n.; not found after C. 16, except in Dekker's Lanthorne and Candle-light (1608–9), in a passage filched from Copland (1536).

melina. A brothel (?): 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 'He'—a detective—'duly canvassed every likely dive, every "melina", every gambling house and yegg hang out'; extant. Mexican Spanish?

mell. '(Old Cant).—The nose,' F & H, 1896: but on what authority?

mellish, a sovereign (coin): s., not c. Jon Bee, 1823.

mellum. Commonsense: 1933, James Spenser, Limey; extant. Origin?

melon. An easy 'mark' or victim: 1925, Leverage; extant. Both are soft.

melt, n. Precious metal(s) that may be melted down: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Loot which may be melted down in a crucible'; extant. Prob. short for 'a melting (-down)'.

melt, v. 'To spend Money. Will you Melt a Bord? c. Will you spend your shilling?': B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'The cull melted a couple of decusses upon us, the gentleman spent a couple of crowns upon us'; 1797, Potter, both melt and the erroneous meet; the latter recurs in Andrewes, 1809; 1836 (see decus); 1849, Sessions Papers (Jan. 31); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, W. E. Henley; 1894, Arthur Morrison; prob. † by 1900, in this sense. I.e., to cause money to melt away.—2. 'To cash bad money; to turn goods into cash,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since ca. 1918. Prob. ex sense 1.

melt hog is not c., but tinkers' s. for 'a shirt': 1890, B & L. Ex Shelta milto.

melting-pot receiver is less a c. term than a technical one, for the person designated is a receiver that has constant recourse to the melting-pot, in order to destroy 'the coat of arms, cypher, &c.' on the plate that is sold to him by the thief: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; also in The Mysteries of London, II, pub. in 1846—G. W. M. Reynolds.

member-mug, 'a chamber pot', is classified by B & L, 1890, as c.: it is C. 18 s.

Memphis time. See making that Memphis time.

menagerie, the. The cell house in a (big) prison: 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest; June 7, 1930, Flynn's; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex the noise and the variety of types.

menjar(l)y. See mungarly.

merchandise. Illicit narcotics: drug traffic: C. 20. BVB. Cf. goods.

merchant lay, the; the Royal (or R'yal) Navy lay. The 'turnpike sailor' (q.v.) falls into either of two classes: those who adopt the role of ex-merchantman and those who adopt that of ex-naval man, for the purpose of begging: 1862, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV, 415; † by 1920. See lay, n., 2.

mergery-prater (rare): see margery prater.

meridian. A year in prison: 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!; extant.

merkin. Hair-dye: 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H; † by 1910. A quaint sense-derivative from S.E. merkin, 'false hair for the pubic area of a woman lacking it'.

merry, n. 'Marijuana, pronounced "merry-hawána," and called "griego" or "merry" by addicts that use it, is a produce of Mexican hemp . . . It is most often taken in the form of a smoke, and sometimes mixed with tobacco. It produces a high exhilaration, and when taken in excess, it motivates brutal criminality,' Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 1936; extant.

merry-go-down, 'strong ale', is classified by F & H, 1896, as c.; it was s. of ca. 1520-1620.

meshuga. Crazy: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'He draws sol till he's meshuga'; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. Ex Yiddish.

mess, 'a difficulty, trouble'—recorded by The O.E.D. at 1834—seems to have, orig., been c. and applied to criminals: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, where it may (II, 175) possibly have the sense 'plot', 'crime', an ostler being mentioned as 'generally in the mess', in reference to a highwayman brought to trial. Ex S.E. mess, a sticky substance.—2. 'The food was known as "mess",' Jim Tully, Jarnegan, 1928: U.S. convicts': since ca. 1910. Pejorative.—3. A girl (regarded sexually); pudendum muliebre: white-slave traffic: C. 20. Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 1937, "'Who's your girl?'" "I haven't got one." "No? That's what all the cheap ponces say when they're trying to get a bit of mess'." Cf. U.S. s. dish, 'a girl'.

mess moll. A woman cook: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; by 1940, low s. See moll.

mess up. To get (someone) into trouble: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Ex s. mess, 'muddle, difficulty, trouble'.

messer. An 'enthusiastic amateur' (or 'near' prostitute) not above accepting money or a present: prostitutes': since ca. 1915. For a cognate, though not a c. meaning, see Partridge, 1938. She 'messes about'.

met, 'to spend' (Sinks of London Laid Open): an error for melt, v.

mesting, n. 'Dissolving; melting': 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; ob. By perversion.

meter. A feigned spasm or fit, in order to obtain drugs from a doctor: drug traffic: since ca. 1930.

BVB, 1942, cites also throw a meter, to feign such a spasm. Cf. figure eight.

metol(l) occurs only in griff metol(l), q.v.

Mexico. Prison: 1925, Leverage: not, however, c.

mezony. See NARCOTICS ZIPH.

mezz. Marijuana: drug addicts': from ca. 1930. Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937 (see fu). By a drastic conflation of marijuana.

mezzi-car(r)oon. See medzies.

mice (the singular being very rare). Counterfeit shillings; white mice, sixpences: counterfeiters': Aug. 1839, Sessions Papers (p. 683), '... Sixpences, which were called white mice He said the . . . shillings, which he called mice, were 1s. 6d. a dozen'; both terms are now ob. White, ex the colour; mice, because small.

mice, white. See preceding.

Michael. 'A flask of liquor,' Jackson & Hellyer, 1914; esp. of spirits: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Prob. ex the Irish love of whiskey and certainly with a reference to Irish whiskey: Michael and Patrick are the two commonest Irish baptismal names: and the Irish have, since the 1840's, migrated in their thousands to the U.S.A.—2. See Mickey Finn, 4.

Michael Finn. See Mickey Finn, 4.

miche; micher. Baumann classifies these as Old Cant: but neither is a c. word.

Michigan. A spectacular ruse; a deceptive (esp. if showy) appearance: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; ob. Merely one of those State-rivalry amenities.

Mick, 'an Irishman': despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, is not c.—even in America.

mick. 'A road mechanic' (for automobiles and motor-cycles), John Chapman in The (New York) Sunday News, May 23, 1937; extant.

Mickey. See micky.—2. Sec 4 of Mickey Finn.

Mickey-finished, or m—f—. Rendered unconscious by drugs: since ca. 1925. BVB, 1942. See Mickey Finn, 4.

Mickey Finn. A 'double' drink of any spirit: C. 20: 1928, May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May, 'I got a bottle of brandy . . . He was lit up . . . but I shot a few more Mickey Finns (double drinks) into him'; 1941, Herbert Asbury, The Underworld of Chicago derives it ex Mickey Finn, a notorious saloon-keeper of Chicago, ca. 1896-1906; by 1942, the potion was gen. drinking s. Cf. micky.—2. Hence, a drink of drugged liquor: since ca. 1904: 1931, IA; 1933, Ersine, 'A drink spiked with knockout drops'; 1935, Hargan; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; 1941, Herbert Asbury, The Underworld of Chicago, 'The name [as in sense 1] was soon applied to knockout drinks of every description'; extant. Cf. sense 4.—3. A strong laxative: Sing Sing: 1935, Hargan; extant.—4. 'Michael, Michael Finn, micky finn, Mickey Finn, Mickey Flynn (opiate, "knockout drops")', BVB, 1942: drug addicts': since ca. 1920. Hardly to be dissociated from sense 2.

micky. (A flask of) spirituous liquor: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (whiskey); 1928, Chicago May; 1931, IA; 1933, Ersine, '1. A drink of hard liquor. 2. A bottle of booze'; extant. Either a familiarization of Michael or, more prob., ex Mickey Finn, 1.—2. See mike, n.

mid-day or midday. (A snack of) bread and cheese: tramps': since ca. 1920. Partridge, 1938. As he leaves a casual ward in the morning, he receives a ration of bread and cheese.

middle is said by B & L, 1890, to be 'an old cant term for a finger. Vide Breton's "Court and Country", 1618': perhaps c. of C. 17. It was, I think, a nonce-use.

middle, in the. In a very difficult—a dangerous—an untenable position: 1930, Burke (put in the middle); 1930, Charles F. Coe, Gunman, 'You'll be in this thing with me unless, between you two, you scrape up enough money for me to take it on the lam. I won't be left in the middle'; 1933, James Spenser, Limey, "'In the middle" (into trouble)'; 1934, Rose; 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train (in trouble); Jan. 4, 1936, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; extant. Unable to escape by either the exit or the entrance.

middle, put in the. See put in the middle.

middle-bend, the. A card-sharpers' term for a variety of the bent (q.v. at brief, 1): 1726, Anon., The Art and Mystery of Gaming detected, gives the three main cheats at whisk as 'Breef Cards, Corner-bend, Middle-bend (or Kingston-bridge)' and explains it as 'Vulgarly call'd Kingston-bridge or the Middle-bend; 'tis done by bending your oft [misprint for own] or Adversary's Tricks two different Ways, which will cause an Opening or Arch in the Middle': app. † by 1800.

middle-britch worker. 'A prostitute who robs her consort during intercourse,' IA, 1931: since ca. 1910.

middle(-)piece, the. The stomach: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Euphemistic? Prob. heavy-handed humour.

middleman. One who specializes in the recovery, on commission, of stolen property: C. 19. B & L, 1890. A special application of the S.E. sense.

midge. A police-record, a criminal's dossier: July 10, 1871, Sessions Papers, a police witness, speaking of two prisoners, 'I heard Mary say, "Bill, how do they know of your bit"—term of imprisonment—"in Dover?"—he said, "They have got a midge at Scotland Yard"': ob.

midget. A two-shilling piece (florin): tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; † by 1930. Perhaps by comparison with a five-shilling piece (crown).

midgic. A shilling: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 320)—but prob. from ca. 1850: 1890, B & L, who, however, classify it as tinkers' s.; 1893, No. 747; by ca. 1910, low s.; in New Zealand it was, by 1930, quite reputable s., as in Sidney J. Baker, New Zealand Slang, 1941; by 1930, it was † in Britain.

midnight oil. Opium: since ca. 1930. BVB. A pun.

mielle pitte, work the. Pass the drink: South Africa: C. 20. C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946. See work, 'to pass'; mielle pitte is Afrikaans.

miesli. See misle.

miggles is a variant of muggles. BVB, 1942.

mike or micky; or with capitals. A casual ward: tramps': since ca. 1890. Partridge, 1938. The former rhymes on spike; the latter derives, naturally enough, ex the former.

inike, v., 'to loiter', is s. (orig. low), not c.—2. ('Tramps').—To hang about: for alms, a job, or a chance to pilfer, F & H, 1896; extant.

miker, 'a petty thief; a beggar', may have been

c. in C. 19; in C. 20, it is low s., ob. by 1920, virtually † by 1940. Ex mike, v., 2.

miking is synonymous with mouching. Same remarks as for miker.

mil-ken. See mill-ken.

milch cow, usually pl. (— kine). 'Milch-Kine, a Term us'd by Gaolers, when their Prisoners will bleed freely to have some Favour, or to be at large,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; app. current until ca. 1840. Not c., but prison officers' s.—2. Hence, in U.S.A., any 'man that is easily cheated of his money': 1859, Matsell; 1925, Leverage, 'A sucker; a soft mark'; extant.

mile-stone. See milestone.

miler. A donkey: 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields; 1896, F & H, ('Vagrants').—An ass', with variant myla; extant. Ex Romany meila (donkey), with which perhaps cf. dial. moil, 'mule' (L. mulus); in Romany, Meilestogav, lit. 'Donkeys' Town', is Doncaster.

milestone. 'A country booby': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose (mile-stone); † by 1896 (F & H). Milestones characterize rural-district roads.

milestone(-)inspector. A professional tramp: tramps': since ca. 1920: 1932, Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps; 1938, F. A. Stanley, A Happy Fortnight. Cf. s. milestone-monger (a tramp).

milk and honey route, the. See Stiff's explanatory quot'n: C. 20. 1926 (see poultice route, the); 1931, 'Dean Stiff', The Milk and Honey Route, 'Often the hobos speak of a railroad as a "milk and honey route"'. The orig. milk and honey route was a railroad from Salt Lake City southward through the valleys of Utah. Along this line were the Mormon villages so euphoniously named . . . In the early days . . . this was the greatest feeding ground for hoboes . . . Any railroad running through a valley of plenty may be called a milk and honey line'; Nov. 1931, IA; et al. With a reference to the Biblical land of milk and honey.

Milk Poultice Route, the. 'On the basis of the kind of food he gets in certain localities, the hobo names the railroads. There is the famous Poultice Route between Salt Lake City and Ogden, Utah, where the hobo goes on a diet restricted to bread and milk, the Apple-butter Route in Southern Ohio over a division of the N. & W., the Sow-belly Hack Line in central Tennessee. The B. & A. up beyond Portland, Maine, is called the Spud Drag,' Glen H. Mullin, The Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925: C. 20. Cf. poultice route, the, q.v.

milk route. 'List of road-houses, speakeasies, etc., to which bootleg trucks deliver the "goods"', Kernôt, 1929-31: ca. 1925-33, then reminiscent. Cf. 1939-45 R.A.F. use of route for any often-travelled course, esp. on bombing raids.

milken. See mill-ken.

milker, short for telegram-milker (-tapper), is not c., but s.

milky. White: 1839 (see milky ones and milky tats); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); ob. Ex the colour of pale milk.—2. Cowardly: see next entry.

milky, turn. To become cowardly; but also milky independently as in 'Your mob's too milky as it is', James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936: since ca. 1925: ibid., 'They just talk that way to make you turn milky'; 1938, Graham Greene, Brighton Rock, 'You aren't milky, are you?'; et al. To turn pale.

milky duds. White clothes: 1859, Matsell—but prob. current in England since ca. 1840; by 1896 (F & H), low s. Milk is white; see duds.

milky ones. White linen rags: 1839, Brandon; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. Cf. the preceding and the following entry.

milky tats. White rags: 1839, Brandon; 1859, H (at tats); 1890, B & L, who define it as 'white linen'—so too in F & H, 1904; slightly ob. See tats, 3.

milky togs is a Canadian variant (C. 20) of milky duds; anon. letter of June 9, 1936. See the elements.

mill, n. Mostly in phrase and combination, the mill is housebreaking: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, 'The manner of those that go upon the Mill, which are called House-Breakers'; app. †, as an independent term, by 1800 at latest. Ex mill, v., 1.—2. A chisel: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; app. † by 1850, except perhaps in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859. Perhaps ex mill, v., 2: see esp. the quot'n of 1738.—3. (Walking on) the treadmill: 1836, Dickens, 'The Prisoners' Van' in Sketches by Boz, 'The mill's a d—d sight better than the Sessions'; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1865, T. Archer, The Pauper, the Thief and the Convict; by 1870, if not earlier, it was s., by 1880 coll., by 1890, S.E. By shortening.—4. Hence, a prison: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, I; 1853, Whyte Melville; 1896, F & H; 1898, St John Adcock, In the Image of God (p. 6, 'Two years on the mill' = two years in prison); 1934, Howard N. Rose (U.S.A.); extant.—5. A typewriter: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex its clatter.—6. A locomotive: U.S. tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex its steam.

mill, v. To rob, burgle, steal: 1566, Harman (see mill a ken); ibid., of a person, 'It were bene-ship to myll hym . . . it were very well done to robbe him'; 1608–9, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie' (Lanthorne and Candle-light), 'To Mill, to steale'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'To mill each ken'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1753, John Poulter; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; app. † by 1819 (witness T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial, p. xxviii), though P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 1821 (p. 621, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Progress'), has 'The boldest lad | That ever mill'd the cly' (pickpocketed); and it occurs also in The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull, 1822. Perhaps ex C. 15–mid-17 S.E. maul, 'to strike' (cf. strike, v., 1).—2. Cognate is the sense 'to break' or 'to break through': 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'Another Mils a Crackmans, breakes a hedge'; 1698, B.E., 'Milling the Gig with a Betty, c. Breaking open the Door with an Iron-Crow'; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 'to break'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1738, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. 2 (Wm Udall), 'A friend . . . brought us a Spring Saw, a Key Hole Saw, and some Gimblets, and I began to mill it away at the Chapel, from whence I broke into adjoining Room, and from thence into a Closet, where I cut the Window Bar, and took off the Casement'; 1753, Poulter, 'Mill the Quod; break'—i.e., escape from—'the Gaol'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1809, Andrewes; app. † by 1860.—3. To spoil: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, gives the c. of 'I'll spoyle your begging' as Ile myll your maund; app. † by 1700. Perhaps ex sense 2.—4. To kill: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'Mill them (kill them)'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Mill quire Cuffin'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (see quot'n at rigging); 1748, Dyche; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial; 1890, B & L; † by 1900. Cf. sense 3.—5. Hence, to beat; to strike (a person): 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; 1748, Dyche; 1785, Grose; 1810, Poole; 1813, Sessions Papers; by 1820, s. Cf. mill doll.—6. Hence, as in The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 1741, 'The Devil break your Neck: The Ruffin mill your Nob'; 1797, Potter; † by 1860.—7. (Cf. senses 3 and 4.) To consume: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Whoring and Drinking consumes all the Money: Wapping and Busing mills all the Lowyer'; † by 1860.—8. To defeat in a boxing match: not c., but pugilistic s. Very frequent in P. Egan's Boxiana (1812–24).—9. To set (a prisoner) to work on a treadmill: ca. 1830–1900: Dickens, 1838; B & L, 1890; F & H, 1896. Cf. mill, n., 3.—10. To walk aimlessly: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1920 s. Ex the flapping of windmill sails.

mill, go (or pass) through the. To pass through the Insolvent Debtors' Court: not c., but commercial s.

mill, go upon the. To be a housebreaker: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers; 1714, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, '[He went] upon the Mill, which is breaking open Houses in the Night'; app. † by 1830. See mill, n., 1.

mill a (or the) glaze. To break a window, esp. in burglary: ca. 1680–1860: B.E.; Grose; Andrewes; Jon Bee; Sinks of London. See mill, v., 2.

mill a ken. To rob a place; burgle a house; implied in 1566 in Harman's milling of the ken and given direct in his 'to myll a ken, to robbe a house'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1659, Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, '(Kens mild) houses broken open'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1718, N. B., A Collection of Tryals, II, 'He answer'd, They were Milling a Ken, (i.e. Breaking open a House)'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected (an excellent account of how burglars operated at this period); 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. See mill, v., 1.

mill a quod; usually . . . the . . . To break out of a gaol; esp. to escape from gaol: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (see mill, v., 2); 1890, B & L; † by 1900. See mill, v., 2, and cf. the modern c. crush the stir.

mill a swag. To break open—burgle—a shop: 1753, John Poulter; app. † before 1900.

mill-clapper, 'a woman's tongue' (Potter, 1797): not c., but s.

mill(-)doll, v. To beat hemp (in prison, or house of correction): 1751, Fielding, Amelia; 1781, Ralph Tomlinson, A Slang Pastoral, 'But now she mills doll'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (milldoll); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1821, P. Egan, Life in London, 'A saucy, tip-slang, moon-eyed hen, | Who oft mills Doll at block'; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870. Cf. mill, v., 5.

Mill-Doll, n. 'An obsolete name for Bridewell house of correction, in Bridge-street, Blackfriars, London': 1782, Messink, The Choice of Harlequin; 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1896 (F & H). Ex the preceding entry: much hemp was beaten there. Bee applies it to that part of the bridewell 'which is appropriated to working, hemp-beating, treading the wheel, &c.'

mill(-)dolly seems to have been used as both n. and, more gen., v.: 1714, Alex. Smith, The History of the Pirates, '... Till he grew to Man's Estate, by which time, having been often punisht at hard Labour in Bridewell, which beating of Hemp the Thieves call Mill-Dolly'; 1718, N. B., A Compleat Collection of Remarkable Tryals, II; superseded, in latter half of C. 18, by mill doll.

mill(-)dose. 'Working in prison': 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H, 'Prison labour'; † by 1940. Cf. mill, n., 3, and familiar S.E. dose, a quantity or experience of something unpleasant.

mill (a person's) glaze. 'I'll mill your glaze; I'll beat out your eye,' Grose: ca. 1780-1840. Ex mill a glaze.

mill-ken. A housebreaker or burglar: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, where it is spelt milken; 1666, Anon., Leathermore's Advice (or The Nicker Nicked)—see quot'n at foiler; 1676, Coles (milken); 1698, B.E. (mil-ken); 1707, J. Shirley; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1742, Fielding, Jonathan Wild; 1857, 'Ducange Anglieus', The Vulgar Tongue—but is not this a survival, the gen. C. 19 term being cracksman? Ex mill a ken.—2. (Erroneously perhaps.) A lodging: 1741, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. III (Catherine Lineham), 'Thence I proposed to go home to our Mill Ken'—glossed as 'Lodging'; † by 1820.

mill lay, the. The process or act mentioned in the next entry: 1708, implied in mill layer; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); app. † by 1890. See mill, n., 1, and lay, n., 2.

mill layer. 'Mill Layers. Such as break into Houses, by forcing Doors or Shutters open with Betties or Chizels,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; † by 1870. Cf. mill lay and see mill, n., 1, and v., 1 and 2.

mill (one's) nob. See mill, v., 6.

mill(-)tag—tog—tuig—twig. A shirt: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'Few had either a milltuig, toper, or crabs'; 1823, Egan's Grose (m.-twig); 1839, Brandon (m. tog); 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxix, 'Mill togs—linen shirts'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 217 (m.-tag); 1857, Snowden (m. togg); 1859, H, who suggests the origin in his comment, 'Most likely the prison garment'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1887, Baumann (milltag, milltog, milltug); 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (m.-tog); by 1890, mill-tog was theatrical s. (B & L); by 1900, †—as c., at least. Perhaps, by folk-etymology, ex melthog.

mill-tapper, 'a criminal specializing in the theft of gold from a mine or its mill', is rather an example of police and mill-owners' j. than of c. Earl Crane, 'Mill-Tapper' in Flynn's, May 21, 1927.

mill the glaze. See mill a glaze.

mill the ken. See mill a ken.

mill the quod. See mill a quod.

milldoll. See mill doll.

mill, n. 'Some one sturdy hell-hound above the rest, undertakes to be the Miller (that is to say, the Killer)': Dekker, O per se O, 1612; 1698, B.E., 'A Killer or Murderer'; repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890 (B & L). Ex mill, v., 4.—2. A boxer: pugilistic s., not c. Ex mill, v., 5.—3. In ken-miller, q.v.

mill, v., is said by B & L, 1890, to be 'old cant' for 'to rob or steal': but on what authority? If authentic, prob. ex Romany, in which mill = 'to convey away' (B & L).

milling. Robbery; esp. in milling (of) the ken (Harman, 1566: see quot'n at autem mort): ca. 1615, Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggar's Bush, 'Tell us, | If it be milling of a lag of duds'; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (concerning 'snow-droppers') 'Good "milling", i.e. shirts, stockings, . . . etc., are switched off the line . . . and all the clothes are bundled into a bag'; 1896, F & H; † by 1920. Ex mill, v., 1.

milling cove, 'a boxer', may orig.—first decade, C. 19—have been c., but prob. it was always boxing s. See mill, v., 5. milling of kens. Housebreaking, burglary: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1870. Cf. mill a ken.

milling-panny, 'a boxing booth or exhibition hall': not c., but pugilistic s. Matsell, 1859.

milling the glaze, vbl n. See mill a glaze. B.E., 1698.

milting. A shirt: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'She will wash any tramp his "Milting" or shirt'; extant. Apparently a corruption of mill-tog.

miltonian (or M-). A policeman: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed (p. 9); ibid., p. 15, it is spelt milthonian; very ob. Perhaps a corruption of milling one, one who can 'mill' or use his fists well: cf. milling cove.

milvad. A blow, a punch: 1821, David Haggart, Life (see quot'n at putter); 1823, Egan's Grose, where it is said to be Scottish; app. † by 1896 (F & H). A disguise of mill (esp. as in v., 5)?

milvader. To punch; to strike, beat or thrash: 1821, implied in milvadering; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; app. † by 1896 (F & H). Cf. milvad.

milvadering. Pummelling; an exchange of blows or punches; boxing: 1821, D. Haggart; 1823, Egan's Grose; app. † by 1896 (F & H). Ex milvader.

mince pies, 'eyes', known to most of us as rhyming s., was orig. (ca. 1850-65) a c. term: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold. In C. 20, it is American c. of the Pacific Coast, whither it was prob. brought by Cockneys: Chicago May, 1928; Convict, 1934; M & B, 1944.

mind, v. To act as bodyguard to: 1896, implied in minder; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 'I've got two boys handy that "mind" me'; 1939, Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows, 'He had probably bribed them . . . to "mind him" from sudden attack'; 1942, Jack Henry, Famous Cases; extant. By humorous meiosis.—2. Hence, to keep a prospective victim in tow and prevent outsiders from giving advice; esp. as vbl n., *mind*ing: confidence tricksters': C. 20. In, e.g., Percy J. Smith, Con Man, 1938.

minder. 'A bodyguard, as in "Minder"—which means a protector or a bully, as you please to regard it—on a racecourse adventure involving bodily risk', Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago, 1896;

1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 'The "minders" his father had put there for his protection'; 1936, John G. Brandon, The Dragnet, 'Devas, with his "minders" around him'; 1939, Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows, where 'minders' = a big-shot convict's prison satellites; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena, 'Used in all sorts of gangs and ways but serves as a protector'; 1942, Jack Henry, Famous Cases; extant. Ex mind, 1.

minding. See mind, 2.

mined. (Of stolen goods that have been) sold: 1929-31, Kernôt; extant. Thereby the police have been undermined: the thieves can no longer be caught with the incriminating property.

minge. The puendum muliebre: orig., tramps': late C. 19-20. James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936, "'Aren't you going to give me half a crown for my taxi, darling?" "I'm going to give you a kick in the minge if you don't shut up"; extant. Ex L. mingere, 'to urinate', via the Gypsy mindj or minsh, 'female genitals'.

minister's head. Boiled pig's head: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. A reflection from the gen. tramps' attitude towards clergymen.

Minnehaha. 'Champagne, laughing water,' Ersine, 1933; by 1940, s. Minnehaha is the name of the heroine in Longfellow's Hiawatha, 1855; perhaps from the Indian name of a waterfall near Minneapolis.

Minnie. Minneapolis: orig., tramps' c.: but it has long been s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

minor clergy, 'young chimney sweepers' (Grose), is not c., but s.

mint. 'Mynt, golde,' Harman, 1566: i.e., esp. as money; 1608-9, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionary' (Lanthorne and Candle-light), where also it is spelt mynt; as again in Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610; 1659, Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized; 1665, R. Head (mynt); 1676, Coles (mynt); 1688, Holme (mynt); 1698, B.E. (mint); 1707, J. Shirley (mint); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1800. It existed in this sense in O.E.; but its use in c. prob. arises, as The O.E.D. remarks, from a borrowing, in C. 16, ex Low German.

Mint, the. In 1698, B.E.: 'A late Sanctuary (in Southwark) for such as broke either out of Necessity, or in Design to bring their Creditors the more easily to a Composition'. Minters: Those who had recourse to—and those who lived and traded in—the sanctuary of the Mint. (B.E.) The term may, in C. 17, have been c.; but prob. it was s.

mish, n. A shirt: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'A Shirt or Smock'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1887 (Baumann). Ex commission—but not, as H suggests, via smish, which comes much later.—2. Hence, a chemise or shift: 1698, B.E.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; † by 1880.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) A sheet: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1860.

mish, v., is not c., but tinkers' s. for 'to hit (hard)': 1890, B & L.

mish-topper. 'A Coat or Petticoat': 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley (mishtopper); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, erroneously, 'A coat and petticoat'—carefully copied by Andrewes, 1809, and in Sinks of London, 1848 (misstopper); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); †1896 (F & H). Because it tops—is worn over—one's mish, i.e. shirt or shift.

mislain is tinkers' s. (Shelta) for 'rain' and 'to rain': 1890, B & L.

misle, misli. Variants of mizzle, v. The former occurs in M. Davitt's A Prison Diary, 1885 (see quot'n at dog, v.); B & L, 1890, record miesli and misli as tinkers' s.

miss a (or one's) tip, 'to fail in a scheme' (C. 19), may orig. have been c., but prob. was always low s. Ex circus s., where it = 'to fail in one's leap'.

Miss Emma. Morphine: addicts': since ca. 1925. BVB. Morphine > M > em > signalese emma > Emma > Miss Emma.

miss-out; usually in pl. A crooked dice: professional gamblers': 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1934, Julien Proskauer (see misser); March 21, 1936, Flynn's, Frank Wrentmore, 'Dice . . . cut for a banking or fading advantage (called "miss-outs" or "missing" dice)'; extant. Honesty 'missed out'—omitted.

Miss Pantywaist. A floor-walker in a department store: since ca. 1930. Rather is it s. than c. Maurer, 1941.

Miss Slang all upon the safe, stand. 'She was appointed (as being a young Novice in the Art) to stand Miss Slang all upon the Safe, (that is, to stand safe at a Distance, as if not one of the Gang, in order to receive the Things stolen)': Jan. 1741, trial of Mary Young, in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, 1742; app. † by 1810. See also slang upon the safe.

miss the number. See number, miss the.

miss too many boats. To lose one's wits in prison: convicts': 1929, Givens; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. 'The "too many boats" idiom is applied, in the tropics, to any Nordic who has remained so long that he has become filled with the lassitude of the country, lost his alert manner of acting and thinking' (Godfrey Irwin).

miss-topper. See mish-topper.

missel. To dismiss; get rid of: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'The Sailor cries, Missel the Gloke; then the Dropper takes him'—the 'flat' or dupe—'by the Arm and has him out of Doors'; app. † by 1890. Ultimately ex the supine of L. mittere, to send; imm., perhaps a disguising of dismiss. The similarity to mizzle is prob. accidental.

missing, adj. See miss-out, quot'n of 1936.

mission bum. A tramp, hobo, bum, frequenter of missions: tramps': 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, in reference to bums, drug addicts, and inveterate drunkards, 'From this class are recruited the so-called "mission stiffs", who are so unpopular among the Hobohemian population . . . L. D., forty-five years old, is a typical . . . "mission bum" . . . During winter he is always present in some mission'; extant.

mission squawker. An evangelist: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'One who not infrequently "squawks" or raises his voice to unnecessary heights' (Irwin).

mission stiff. A missionary: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; very ob. Here stiff = fellow, man, person.—2. Hence (?), a convert; a frequenter of missions: 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1909, W. H. Davies, Beggars; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'); 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo (see mission bum); 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; 1925, Leverage, 'One who reforms'; 1931, Stiff, 'Man who gets "saved" for food and a flop'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; April 1944, American Speech; extant.

missionary. A pimp; a procurer, a white-slaver: since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931, and BVB, 1942. Ironical.—2. 'One engaged in creating drug addicts and directing customers to narcotic dealers,' BVB: drug traffic: since ca. 1920.

missionary act, the. Begging: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'A reference to the plea for funds made more or less regularly by the Mission Boards' (Irwin).

misstopper. See mish-topper.

missus, the. A brothel 'madam': (esp. London) prostitutes': C. 20. W. N. Willis, The White Slaves of London, 1912. A proletarian variation of madame.—2. A ponce's girl or woman working for him as a prostitute: white-slave traffic, esp. in London: C. 20. In, e.g., W. N. Willis, The White Slaves of London, 1912. Cf. wife, 1.

mister . . . See Mr . . .

mit. See mitt, n. and v.

mite; mitey. A cheesemonger; full of cheese: resp. s. and S.E.

mitglom. See mitt-glom.

mithonian. See miltonian.

mitney. A policeman: since ca. 1910. (Not very common.) Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Perhaps, via a hypothetical mittery, ex s. mitts, 'hands'; ex hands clapped by policemen on malefactors' shoulders.

mitre. A hat: U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; 1925, Leverage (miter); extant. Jocular on the S.E. sense.

mitt, n. See throw the mitt.—2. In that phrase, mitt = 'hand': a sense claimed by No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, as c.; but it has never been c., whether in the U.S.A. or in its 'adopted' home, the British Empire. Short for mitten.—3. But it is c. when it = a hand at cards in a confidence-game or in any other card-game where the cards have been pre-arranged: card-sharpers': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex sense 2.

mitt, v. See mitted, go.—2. The senses 'shake hands with' and hence 'congratulate' are s.—3. To hand (something to a person): 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, "'O'Shea . . . 'mitts' him five century notes"; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 'Put hush-money into an officer's hand'; extant.—4. To seize, grab, lay hold of (a person): 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man, p. 128; extant.

mitt, glad. A 'warm welcome', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; despite No. 1500, it has, like icy mitt, 'a rebuff, a chilly reception', always been s.

mitt, throw(ing) the. See throw the mitt.

mitt-glom. Ersine, who spells it mitglom, defines it as 'to play up to officials' and quotes 'The rat is up there mitglomming with the screw now' (1933); extant. Ex mitt, n., 1, and glom.

mitt(-)glommer. A 'yes' man: esp. convicts': 1933, Ersine; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Lit., a hand-shaker; a too affable person: imm. ex prec. entry.

mitt joint. A crooked gambling-house: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant. I.e., mitt, n., 3 + joint, 2.—2. A palmist's booth: tramps' c., but also circus s.: 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; by 1937 it could no longer be classified as c., as Godfrey Irwin remarks in letter of Aug. 12, 1937.

mitt me! Shake my hand!: classified by Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924, as c.; but it's almost certainly s.—low s. at first. Cf. the U.S.A. s. match me!, 'Give me a match—a light'.

mitted, go. To go armed: orig. and mostly tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; ob. Cf. heeled.

mittens. The hands: 1812, J. H. Vaux; by 1896 (F & H), low s. By transference from the encasers to the encased.—2. Handcuffs: since ca. 1918. In, e.g., Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933, and David Humc, Halfway to Horror, 1937.

mitting. See:—

mitting game, the; mitting-hunting. The mitting game is that which is practised by those who beg shirts, a mitting being a shirt; a species of the shallow dodge: tramps': 1886, Wm Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob. Mitting is prob. a corruption of milting, itself a corruption of mill-tog.

mitts. The sense 'gloves' had been English boxing s. for some years before 1812, when it was first recorded, by Vaux.—2. A tramp or hobo train-rider that has lost one or both hands: U.S. tramps': 1918, Leon Livingston, Mother Delcasse; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A one-handed or a handless person'; extant. Ex s. mitt, 'hand'.

mix, 'the glad hand' (Leverage, 1925): U.S. s., not c.—2. 'Then there was the "Mix"'. This meant the enlistment (innocently or otherwise) of a warder, to make trouble and procure punishment for a hated and successful rival [in homosexuality]: Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940: convicts': C. 20. Phelan, ibid., re-defines it, thus, 'A Mix . . . is an act of revenge in which one convict uses the jail-machine against another'.

mix it. See end of next entry.—2. To work a mix, 2, q.v.: convicts': C. 20. Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940. A specialization of the sense implied in:—

mix it up. 'To agree secretly how the parties shall make up a tale, or colour a transaction in order to cheat or deceive another party, as in case of a justice-hearing, of a law-suit, or a cross in a boxing-match for money': 1823, Bee; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1896 (F & H) it was low s. Low s. also is mix it for, to inform to the police about (someone), as in Mark Benney, The Big Wheel, 1940.

mix me a hike! Pay me off!; give it to me!: tramps': since ca. 1920: 1931, Stiff. Ex the 'walking' sense of hike, n. and v.

mix up, 'a fight': s., not c.; not even in U.S.A., despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904.

mizake the mizan. To make a purchase from a peddler of drugs: drug traffic: C. 20. BVB, 1942. An example of gibberish (cf. sizendizup): 'm(iz)ake the m(iz)an'. See NARCOTICS ZIPH.

mizzard is a corruption of s. mazzard, 'the head': low s.: 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo.

mizzle, n. 'When they—criminals—make their escape from a constable, [they say] I tipt him the rum mizzle': 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; by 1860, low s. Ex the v.

mizzle, v. To run away; to decamp; to sneak off: 1781, implied in rum mizzler; 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Don't mizzle yet'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes;

ca. 1811, A Leary Mot; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To quit or go away from any place or company; to elope; or run away'; 1818, The London Guide, 'To get away slily'; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I, 'The Frenchman soon got milled, and, shortly afterwards, mizzled'; 1823, Egan's Grose, 'To elope, run off'; 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1836, Autobiography of Jack Ketch; 1838, Glascock; 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. translator), ch. vii; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1864—witness H, 3rd ed.—it was low s. Ex tinkers' s. (Shelta) miesli or misli, 'to go, to come': B & L, 1890.

mizzler. One who runs away: 1781, G. Parker (see rum mizzler); 1812, 1823, 1834, 1859, 1860 (for all these, see needy mizzler); by 1880, low s. Short for rum mizzler.—2. Hence, 'A person who is clever at effecting an escape, or getting out of a difficulty': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s.—3. A pitiable, wretched beggar: 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; ob. Prob. ex sense 1.

Moabites. 'Serjeants, Bailiffs and their Crew': 1698, B.E. This term, which enjoyed currency and indeed popularity until ca. 1830, is not c., but s. By Biblical allusion.

moak. See moke.

moan and wail. A prison: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on jail: cf. lard and pail.

moat, n. A river: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin).—2. A rejection, an abandonment; a betrayal (e.g., by information to the police): 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. ex the v.—3. A betrayer; an informer: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Prob. ex the v.

moat, v. To throw away, to discard, abandon; to betray, inform on to the police: 1925, Leverage; extant. Suggested by ditch, v.

moat palace. A steamboat (on a river): 1848, The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). See moat, n., 1: luxury afloat.

moater. 'One who throws spoils away.—A treacherous pal,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex moat, v.

mob. 'Mob or Mab, n. . . . a Harlot,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; by 1896 (F & H), low s. Ex mob or mab, a wench; cf. mab, q.v.—2. (Usually pl., mobs.) 'Mobs—companions. Working with mobs. Robbing with companions': 1839, Brandon; 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police, 'There are many Manchester and Liverpool thieves there [at York] They were most of them parties, called "working in mobs", i.e. parties'; by 1850, also street vendors' s. (witness Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 1851); 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 133, 'Thieves, gonophs, or crossmen, in London, are divided into several mobs or gangs, named from the district which they inhabit'; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H, 'Two or more "patterers" working together in the streets'—but this was prob. a low street-s. sense; ibid., 'Mobs, companions'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1872, Edward Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1886, A Private Detective, Mysteries of Modern Roguery; 1886, Thomas Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America; 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective (U.S.A.); 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1890, B & L; 1891, Darkness and Daylight (U.S.A.); 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story (U.S.A.); 1896, Arthur Morrison; 1896, F & H; 1900, G. R. Sims, In London's Heart; 1900, J. Flynt & E. Walton, The Powers That Prey (U.S.A.); 1900, Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, Glossary, 'A collection of guns who work together. Five men generally make up a good-sized mob'; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; 1904, H. Hapgood (U.S.A.); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Mob. Three or more people who travel to steal'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'Two or more confederates in criminal activity'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1916, The Literary Digest (Aug., 'Do You Speak "Yegg" ?') of one pick-pocket individually—at least twice; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'), 'A gang of Pickpockets'; 1925, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals; Feb. 12, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1927, Kane; 1928, Lewis E. Lawes; 1928, John O'Connor; March 2, 1929, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan; 1930, Chas F. Coe, Gunman; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; and ad nauseam since in Canada (letter of June 9, 1946), as well as in Britain and U.S.A. Ex the ordinary S.E. sense of mob; by diminution and depreciation.—3. Hence, a group of dishonest business men: since ca. 1924. In, e.g., Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights, 1933.

mob gee. Member of a gang: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. I.e., mob, 2 + gee, 1.

mob marker. That 'member of a gang who spots places to be robbed', Rose, 1934; extant. See mob, 2.

mob of cannons. A gang of pickpockets: May 1928, The American Mercury, Edwin Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. See the elements.

mob work, or hyphenated. 'Theft, etc., executed by an organized band,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See mob, 2, and work, n.

mobbed up with. Associated with (someone) in a criminal gang: since the middle 1920's. Damon Runyon, Furthermore, 1938, 'A couple of Harlem guys Joe the Joker is mobbed up with'. See mob, 2, and cf. mob work.

mobsman. "Mobsmen", or those who plunder by manual dexterity—as the "light-fingered gentry": 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25, Mayhew including under this term buzzers, wires, prop-nailers, thimble-screwdrivers, and shoplifters; 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London; 1859, H, 'Mobsmen, dressy swindlers'; Nov. 1870, The Broadway; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!, 'Companions in crime . . . Mobsmen, old vultures'; 1890, B & L, 'Pick-pocket. Getting obsolete'; by 1900, †—except in swell mobsman. I.e., 'a mob's man' or 'a mobs man': see mob, 2.

mobster. A gangster: since ca. 1920; by 1935, police s. Ersine, 1933. Ex mob, 2.

mocassin telegraph. 'Like all yeggs, he was an upholder of the "mocassin telegraph", a wanderer and a carrier of stray tidings as to the movements of others along the undergrooves of the world', Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 1913: not c., but s.; cf. bush telegraph and grapevine.

mocha. Cloth: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer.

'New to me,' says Godfrey Irwin in a letter of Aug. 12, 1937. I suspect that there is a printer's error or that Jackson & Hellyer have misheard or been misinformed; nevertheless, cf. moka finish.

mocher. See moker, 2.

mock, 'a newcomer immigrant', is low New York s., not c. "'Mock" in the slang of the East Side meaning a newly arrived immigrant,' C. W. Willemse in Flynn's, Aug. 8, 1931.

mock Litany men. 'Sing-song beggars who utter complaints or requests in a chanting manner', Ware, 1909: Irish beggars': ? ca 1880-1930. Cf. the origin of canter.

Mockey. A Jew; Jewish: since the 1920's. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937 (the adj.); 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy (quot'n at grease-ball, 3); extant. Ex Yiddish?

Model, the. Pentonville Prison, a prison 'for transports and "penal servitude" men': 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London; by 1880, low s. This prison was designed as a model prison.

moelevy. A suit of clothes: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman. Perhaps a perversion of Goadby Loew, q.v.

moer! or your moer! Go to hell!: South Africa: late C. 19-20. Cyrus A. Smith, letter of May 22, 1946, 'A word used only in the worst of company'. Cf.:—

moerskont: from Dutch moer, 'mother'; and kont, 'female genitals'. 'This word is commonly used as a term of moderate abuse among the submerged classes in South Africa. I have heard it used almost as a term of jocular endearment (as "bugger" is sometimes used in English and "bastard" in Australian). The term originated as the last and more deadly insult in an exchange of abuse, in the form jou moer se kont—"your mother's c". The word se (which is never accented) was elided in the slurred speech of the Cape coloured community, resulting in the sound jou moerskont. This, among the illiterate, was taken to be a substantive, and is now commonly used as a substantive. (Jou in Afrikaans can mean either "your" or "you".) Few of those who use it know what it means: cf. again the word "bugger" in English, which has been heard from virgins who think it is merely an interesting variant of "beggar". (Note from D. A. D'Ewes, Cape Town: May 22, 1946.)

moey. 'A petition. A convict would say to another: "My pals have got up a bene moey to send to the head bloke . . .", my partners have got up a good petition to send to the Governor': 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; † by 1910. Ex low Eng. s. mo(o)e, 'the mouth', itself ex Romany moee (or mui), 'the face, the mouth'.

moffing-chete, or mofing chete. See muffling cheat.

mog. A lie: ca. 1840-90: possibly c., but prob. low s.: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1890, B & L, 'Moging (tailors), telling an untruth'. Also spelt mogue; perhaps suggested by mug, 'a dupe'.

mogador. 'He thought he was wide [i.e., criminally smart] . . . But I got 'im mogador' (i.e., beaten), Mark Benney, Low Company, 1936; 1936, George Ingram, The Muffled Man, "'I don't know," Charlie said hopelessly, "it's got me all 'mogodored'" —footnoted 'Bewildered'; extant. Perhaps an elaboration of mog.

moiety, 'a share or portion', is careless English, not c.—2. Fifty: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H, who imply that it is ob.; by 1910, †. I.e., half of a hundred.

mojo. Narcotics in gen., but esp. morphine, or heroin or cocaine; hence, on the mojo: since ca. 1930. BVB. A 'disguise'—much more effective than morph—for 'morphine'.

moka (? mocha) finish, the. ' . . . Hop stiffs of some kind that ain't quite reached th' moka finish,' Belle, the Swell Booster, in Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1926; extant. Cf. mocha: does the m.f. therefore = 'a shroud'? Cf. moker, 2.

moke or moak, 'a donkey', is given by Brandon, 1839, as gypsy c.; but it is merely a Romany 'anglicizing' of a gypsy word—see A Dict. of Slang and Unconventional English.—2. Hence (?), a negro: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1871, Anon., State Prison Life (misprinted as make); by 1896 (F & H), no longer c.

moker or mokker. A pickpocket complains that there are 'Too many punks and boobs, and then there are the hopstiffs and mokers, an' they put th' biz on th' blink,' Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1926; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn (mokker); extant. Cf. moka . . .—2. (Usually mokker; occ., mocher.) Master; head of a gang: May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'If this Flatty trick turns up wrong, you quit the mob. I'm mokker here'; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'This Big Boss, this mocher of a liquor mob'; extant. A corruption of master?

mokoy is a phonetic inaccuracy for McCoy. (Rose, 1934.)

moll, n. A woman: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (see quot'n at slang, n., 1); ca. 1775 (see sense 2); 1839, Brandon ('a girl'); 1841, H. D. Miles, "'You might ha' knowed his moll, a spicey, swellish sort of a bit o' muslin"' ; 1857, Snowden, who implies obsolescence; 1859, H, who incorrectly asserts its obsolescence as a c. term, for, despite the fact that it reached low s. in the 1850's, it retains a c. status in combination—see the ensuing terms. In U.S.A., it remained c. for sixty or seventy years longer: see, e.g., Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859; Geo. P. Burnham, 1872; Life in Sing Sing, 1904. I.e., Moll, Mary: ex the commonness of the name.—2. Hence, a whore: ca. 1775, 'The Potatoe Man' in The Ranelagh Concert, 'A moll I keep that sells fine fruit' (perhaps, however, sense 1); 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, 'Moll, a flash name for a whore'; 1823, Bee, 'Molls—are the female companions of low thieves, at bed, board, and business'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; 1887, W. E. Henley; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; by 1895, low s. except in U.S.A., where it may have remained c. until ca. 1910, the term occurring (as 'prostitute') in Josiah Flynt's works.—3. A criminal's, a gangster's, female confederate: U.S.A.: Oct. 8, 1865, The National Police Gazette; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow; 1925, A. Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1927, Kane ('woman of the underworld'); Nov. 24, 1928, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson; Nov. 1, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; 1933, Eagle; 1933, Ersine, 'Gradually being replaced by doll and broad'; 1934, Rose, 'Gangster girl'; Jan. 19, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, 'Today it is the accepted term applied to women who run and work with desperadoes'; by 1936, police and journalistic s.—4. (Ex sense 1.) One's sister: English tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (p. 241); never very general and app. † by 1920. But prob. Flynt meant it as in sense 2.—5. A tramp's woman: tramps': C. 20: 1910 (see quot'n at heifer); Hugh Milner, letter of April 22, 1935. Prob. ex sense 3.

moll, v. See molled.

moll-buzz. To pick women's pockets: implied in the next entry; independently in Leverage, 1925, and in Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937.

moll buzzer. 'A thief that devotes himself to picking the pockets of women': 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H, who imply that it is also English; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1910, H. Hapgood, Types from City Streets; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'; April 1919, The (American) Bookman; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, where it = a beggar, a tramp, that specializes in begging from women; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1927, Kane; 1928, M. C. Sharpe, Chicago May; March 22, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, The Bon Voyage Book; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; Sept. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Convict 12627; 1937, E. H. Sutherland; 1938, F. D. Sharpe; 1941, Ben Reitman. In C. 20, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946). A 'buzzer' of 'molls': see buzzer, 1 and moll, n., 1.—2. A ladies' man: 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow (concerning a deputy district attorney) 'One of his most valuable assets . . . was his speaking acquaintance with the women of the underworld. He remained aloof from them even while he mixed with them. He never grew into a "moll-buzzer". But in his rough way he cultivated them'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, A. Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; extant. One who 'buzzes' round 'molls' (moll, n., 1).—3. (Rare; properly, unhyphenated.) A female pickpocket: 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 'A moll buzzer . . . She worked wit' a gang o' dips, an' sported a little on the side'; April 24, 1926, Flynn's, 'She also worked by herself as a "moll buzzer"'; 1927, Kane defines it, prob. wrongly, as 'a lady beggar'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Nov. 18, 1933, Flynn's; Dec. 9, 1936, The Evening News (England—since, indeed, ca. 1932); extant. Whereas sense 1 is objective, sense 3 is subjective.

moll-buzzing is the vbl n. corresponding to the preceding (sense 1): 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, 'Her gift for mathematics made it clear that "moll-buzzing" was much more remunerative than sleeping in cellars and peddling Park Row literature'; 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night Hawk, 'A man who hasn't a soul above moll-buzzing is hopeless'; Jan. 27, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; et al.

moll dick. A woman detective: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's (see quot'n at fill-out, n.); extant.

moll gang. A white-slavers' group consisting of girls, who paint rosy pictures of the prostitute's life: C. 20. Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909.

moll hook. A woman (or girl) pickpocket: 1890, B & L; ob. by 1930; † by 1940. See moll, n., 1, and hook, n., 2.

moll-hunter, 'a man constantly lurking after women; a woman chaser', is not c., but low s. (Ware, 1909.)

Moll Pentley's or Pratly's gig or jig(g), 'a rogering bout' or copulation: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.: not c., but low s. In allusion to a song very popular in C. 18.

moll(-)sack. A reticule: 1839, Brandon (moll-sack); 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1859, H., 'Mollsack, a reticule, or market basket'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H, 'A lady's handbag; a market basket'; ob.

moll slavery, according to Barrère & Leland, is a servant maid; this is correct, for see the quot'n at slavery, 2. The term seems to have been current, as c., ca. 1780–1810, and to have disappeared ca. 1820 in favour of slavery. I.e., moll, n., 1, and slave.

Moll Thompson's mark. 'M.T., i.e. empty; take away this bottle, it has Moll Thompson's mark upon it' (Grose, 1785): s., not c.

moll-tooler; moll tooling. A female pickpocket; pickpocketry by women: 1859, H. (m.-tooler); 1887; Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L (the former); 1896, F & H (id.); ob. Elaborations of tooler and tooling.

moll whiz. A female pickpocket: 1933, Eagle; 1933, Ersine; extant. See the elements.

moll wire is synonymous with moll buzzer, 1: 1896, F & H; extant. See the elements.

moll-worker. A pickpocket preying upon women: from ca. 1925; Godfrey Irwin, 1931. See the elements.

molled; molled up. Having a mistress; momentarily with a woman in tow: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, "Needys (nightly lodgers) that are moll'd up", that is to say, associated with women in the sleeping-rooms'; July 1853, Sessions Papers; 1859, H., 'Moll'd, followed, or accompanied by a woman'; 1887, Baumann; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. in the nuance 'with a woman on one's arm'; 1896, F & H; Jan. 19, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan (U.S.A.), 'with each man moll'd, and his moll posing as his wife, they would not attract the suspicion which would be directed against a mob of men living together and without visible means of support'; extant on both sides of the Atlantic. Ex moll, n., 2—and 1.

mollisher. A woman; esp. a prostitute: 1765 (Sept.), Sessions Papers (No. VII, Part ii for that year: trial of Edward Jones), 'The prisoner and another came to the [shew] glass . . .; the other . . . bid the prisoner look who was in the shop; he answered that there was a Monisher in the shop; I suppose a cant word for a woman,' adds the speaker, a bystander in the shop—he almost certainly misheard the term, the two thieves doubtless speaking very low; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'To give the broads a tiny bit of rest, bid goodbye to the Mollishers at the Spell over the water, turn aside from staggering to his dab full of smoke and heavy at peep o' day'; 1828, P. Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry, and Logic, where mollishers is called 'an old slang phrase, Low women on the town'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'One old mollesher (woman)'; 1859, H, 'A low girl or woman; generally a female cohabiting with a man, and jointly getting their living by thieving'; 1887, Baumann; 1890, C. Hindley, 'Mollishers . . . low prostitutes'; 1896, F & H, 'A thief's mistress'; † by 1910. An elaboration of moll, n., 2.

mollsack. See moll-sack.

molly (or M-), 'a passive homosexual', is not c., but s.—orig., and long, low s.—2. A prostitute: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; extant. A diminutive of moll, n., 2, or a direct adoption of the English s. molly (Tom D'Urfey, 1719): see Partridge, 1937.—3. A female accomplice: Canada: C. 20. Anon. letter, June 9, 1946. Diminutive of moll, 3.

Molly puff, 'a gambler's decoy': C. 17: not c., but s. molrowing, 'associating with whores', is not c., but low s.

monacher (B & L, 1890) is a variant of monnicker; so is monaker (Josiah Flynt, The Rise of Ruderick Clowd, 1903); and so are monacker, monacre (Jackson & Hellyer, 1914).

monarch; monarcher. For etymology and gen. remarks, see monnicker. A sovereign (coin): not c., but low s. and Cockney s. (Mayhew, London Labour, I, 1851).—2. A name: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H (both forms); 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; app. monarch was † by 1930. A c. variant of monnicker, q.v.—3. Hence, a signature: 1890, B & L; by 1895, low s.

monastery. A prison: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the silence imposed at certain hours and in certain circumstances.

Monday men is not c., but circus s.: 1928, Jim Tully, Circus Parade, 'A group of whining morons . . . were ever at our heels. They were known as "Monday men"'. As the family washing was generally done on Monday, they would steal it from the line and sell it to those it might almost fit.'

monekeer; moneker; monekeur; monekur. Variants of monnicker.

money-dropper is a 'dropper', q.v. Orig. it was prob. S.E., but John Poulter, in The Discoveries, 1753, in his section on 'The Art of Old Nobb, call'd pricking in the Belt', uses it as though it were a c. term, for he speaks of 'two Pickers up, or Money Droppers, to bring in Flats'. Perhaps it may be considered as having been c. in the mid-C. 18.

money joint. A place worth robbing: 1935, Hargan; extant. I.e., moneyed place, building, flat, etc.

money machine. 'A confidence game involving a machine represented as capable of making money or of raising the value of money,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: con men's: since the 1920's.

mongar(l)y. See mungarly.

mongee, n. Food: since ca. 1919. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. The Fr. manger; prob. introduced by crooks that had served with the A.E.F. in France in 1918.

mongee, v. To eat: since ca. 1919. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Fr. manger: see remark at the n.

mongrel. See falconer for its sense ca. 1605–30.—2. Hence (?), 'a Hanger on among the Cheats, a sponger [in the underworld]': 1698, B.E.; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; † by 1860. As a mongrel to a thoroughbred dog, so a hanger-on to a 'real' criminal or crook.

monica is a common American form of monnicker, q.v.

monick. A rare variant of:—

monicker is a very frequent variant of monnicker; moniker, an occasional one.

monikey. A 'tramp's nickname, as "New Orleans Blackie", "Mississippi Red", etc.': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; ob. A variant of monnicker.

monisher. See mollisher.

monk, 'a low or vulgar fellow', is classified by Baumann, Londonismen, 1887, as c.; but it was, I believe, never c. And the American senses recorded by Leverage, 1925: 'dullard', 'silent person': these, too, are not c., but s.—2. A Negro; a Chinese: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex monkey, 2.—3. A Judge of the Supreme Court: U.S.A.: 1934, Rose; extant. Ex his black gown.

monkery; occ., monkry. The country as opp. to the town, esp. to London: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (erroneously, mackrey); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'The country parts of England are called The Monkery'; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III; 1824, Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'The advantages resulting from exchanging the unwholesome air of the darkey for the pure invigorating breezes of the monkery'; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, where it is spelt mackery and glossed as 'a slang phrase for the country; applied to being in prison, at which time the thief was supposed to be out of town'; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Mackry, the country'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I (monkry); 1859, H, 'The country, or rural districts'; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L, who give it as also tinkers' s.; 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lipppo; 1896, F & H; 1911 (Sept.), The Nineteenth Century and After, D. MacRitchie, 'The Speech of the Roads'; by 1934, pitchmen's and cheapjacks' s., as in Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, for 'a district'.—2. Hence, occ. as adj.: 1828, P. Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry, and Logic ('a monkery chaunt'); ob.—3. (Ex sense 1.) Collectively for country tramps and itinerant vendors: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 310, "'The place was well known to the monkry'"; 1896, F & H, who classify it as a tramps' term; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.), 'Trampdom'; extant. Prob. ex † S.E. monkery, monastic life; acc. to B & L, however, it comes straight from Shelta; certainly the Shelta word for 'country' is munk'ri.

monkery, on the. On the tramp; on the country roads as a vagrant; in the country, as a beggar: 1851, Henry Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'Two whole years on the "monkry"', before he saw a lodging-house for tramps'; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, 'Out all day on the "monkry"'; 1896, F & H; ob. See monkery.

monkery, stall the. To travel the country as a tramp, or a beggar: 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, "'When I was about fourteen I slung my 'ook and joined some travellin' Barks—turnpike-sailors and silver-beggars, most of 'em—and stalled the monkry with 'em for two or three year'"'; ob. See monkery, 1; cf. sense 3.

monkey. A padlock: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'Prison cant'; 1896, F & H; 1937, David Hume, Halfway to Horror; extant. Perhaps the use of padlocks is, by criminals, regarded as a monkey's trick.—2. (Usually in pl.) A Chinese: U.S.A.: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1931, IA; 1933, Ersine; extant. By racial depreciation. Perhaps because the Chinese face is, usually, smaller than the 'white' face (Godfrey Irwin).—3. A stranger: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, who err in making the s. sense, 'a chap, fellow, guy', a c. sense; slightly ob. Cf. sense 2 and 4 and 6.—4. A Jew: U.S.A.: Aug. 2, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Cf. senses 2, 3, 6.—5. A 'sucker': Jan. 8, 1930, Variety: low s., not c.—6. A Prohibition officer: U.S.A.: 1930, Burke; 1934, Rose; then reminiscent. Cf. sense 3.—7. Five hundred pounds (in money); in U.S.A. $500: C. 20 racing: orig., c.; by 1930, low s.

monkey(-)chaser. A West Indian; a Negro from the tropics: tramps': since ca. 1918: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; et al. 'People the average tramp visualizes as spending much of their time in chasing the monkeys and doing but little else' (Irwin).

monkey-driver. 'A heavy-headed, short-handled hammer, or "monkey-driver", with its business end protected with leather to deaden the sound, for driving the aforesaid "sergeant major" (cold chisel)'; F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, 1893; ob.

monkey(-)jacket button; plated waistcoat-button. Resp. a counterfeit half-crown and a counterfeit shilling: counterfeit-coiners': 1858, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, xviii, 364; ob. Ex sizes. (Cf. gilt nail.)

monkey money. 'Script or tokens issued in lieu of cash in a currency store or commissary' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931): not c., but construction-camp and labour-camp s.—2. Any foreign currency: since ca. 1925: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Generally below the par of United States gold, and so considered as of small account'.

monkey on one's back, have a. See have a Chinaman (or monkey) . . .

monkey tie. A gaudy, a bright-coloured, tie: South Africa: C. 20; by ca. 1940, (low) s. Alan Nash in The Cape Times, June 3, 1946. Suggested by the South African s. zoo tie, a pun on zoot tie, zoot being Afrikaans for 'bright-coloured; attractive' (Dutch zoet, 'sweet').

monkry. See monkery.

Monmouth's, my Lord. See my . . .

monneker. See:—

monnicker. 'What is your "monekeer" (name)?': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 218, where it is given as itinerant vendors' s., which indeed it was,—but also, until ca. 1870, it was tramps' c.; ibid., 'He was heard to say, with a sigh: "Ah! once I could 'screeve a fakement' (write a petition) or 'cooper a monekur' (forge a signature) with any man alive"' ; ibid., p. 313, 'Ream monekeers (genuine signatures)'; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1859, H. 'Cooper a moneker', to forge a signature' and 'Monekeer, a person's name or signature'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Moneker. A name'; 1864, H. 3rd ed., 'Tramps' Cant'; 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary, 'Many of them [viz., convicts] having a fresh "monicker" (name) each conviction, to be dropped, for obvious reasons, upon release'; monocker is a rare variant of monnicker (W. Newton, Tramp Life, 1886, p. 16).

1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed (spelt moniker); 1887, Baumann, who classifies it as beggars' c., has the forms monaker, moneker, monekeer; by 1890 (B & L, monacher, moniker) it was low s. in England; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft (U.S.A.), in nuance 'nickname'; 1907, Jack London, The Road; ca. 1912, G. Bronson-Howard; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'A nickname, a professional cognomen'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; by 1918, low s. in North America too. Not a corruption of monarch, as B & L state: monnicker seems to be considerably the earlier. But it may derive from Gergo (Italian c.) monarco, lit. 'a monarch or king', hence proudly 'I' or 'I myself' (cf. colloquial his lordship, 'he', and her ladyship, 'she'); the word may have come into English c. via Italian showmen, circusmen, organ-grinders, and their like. Nevertheless, Jack Black's explanation (see monoger) may be the correct one.

monogen; monogin. See monoyer.

monoger. A rare variant (cf. monocker) of monnicker: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'His "monoger" (a corruption of monogram), "Hannibal", was carved on every water tank between the two Portlands'; 1928, May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story.

monoyer. 'Rum or monoyer, good, the highest in the flash'—i.e., in c.: 1797, Potter. This is the only record of the term, which I believe to be a ghost word; Andrewes, however, has monogen in the same signification—but this makes no more sense; nor does monogin in Sinks of London, 1848.

mont, 'to pawn', is prob. low s.; but the sense 'to commit perjury' (likewise recorded by Leverage, 1925) lies on the borderland between c. and police s. The latter sense derives from the former, and the former from mont de piété, a pawnbroker's shop.

montra. A watch: 1812, J. H. Vaux: 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen—but prob. the term was † by 1870. Ex Fr. montre, the stressed -tre easily giving rise to -tra.

moocah. Marijuana: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Courtney R. Cooper, 1937 (see fu); Jan. 8, 1938, Flynn's, Donald Barr Chidsey; extant. Cf. mojo.

mooch, n. See mooch, on the. Independently, begging: U.S.A.: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—2. Dismissal; an order to depart: American tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, "'W'y, I's got the mooch out o' Boston . . . I got ter tellin' fortunes, 'n' the bulls snared me, 'n' his Honor tole me to crawl"' ; ob. Cf. sense 1 of the v.—3. Hence, a departure: American criminals' (and tramps'): 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers That Prey, "'I'll have to make a pinch if you hang around, so you'd better try a mooch"' ; 1900, Flynt, An Itinerant Policeman, 'He'll take a mooch', move on elsewhere; by 1910, low s. Cf. mooch, v., 1.—4. A beggar: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex mooch, v., 3.—5. 'The sucker, or "Fall Guy"—any person who gives his money into the hands of these vampires of the financial underworld [the slick swindlers]—is known to the larcenous fraternity as a "mooch"' ; Linn Bonner, 'Dynamiters' in Flynn's, Aug. 13, 1927—cf. Bonner's article, 'Hey, Mooch!' in the Sept. 10, 1927, issue of Flynn's— and William Francis's 'Sucker List' in the issue of March 3, 1928; 1931, Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering; Feb. 19, 1935, The New York Sun (see quot'n at lily); extant.

mooch or mouch, v. 'To slink away, and allow your friend to pay for the entertainment': 1859, H—but almost certainly current from before 1857 (cf. mosh, q.v.); possibly c. at first, but rather more prob. always s. In U.S.A. it may, ca. 1870–1910, have been c.: 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers That Prey; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd.—2. "I don't mean to say that if I see anything laying about handy that I don't mouch it (i.e. steal it)": 1862, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV, 418; 1864, H, 3rd ed. (by implication); 1896, F & H; † by 1910. Ex sense 1.—3. To beg: implied in mooching; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (U.S.A.); 1925, Glen H. Mullins, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'A hobo who can't mooch tobacco has to shoot snipes'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'To beg along a drag'; 1935, Hargan; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; 1937, John Worby; Feb. 27, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, 'The beggars . . . pay the racket head for exclusive privilege to mooch that region'; 1938, Just a Tramp (English), 'Along came two tramps and "mooched" (begged) us for twopence for a cup of tea'; extant.

mooch, clip the. See clip the mooch.

mooch, on the. 'On the look-out for any articles or circumstances which may be turned to profitable account': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1896, F & H (at mike); slightly ob. Cf. mooch, v., 2.—2. See on the mooch, 2.

mooch the stem (or main stem); mooch the (main) drag. To beg along the (main) street: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (see quot'n at buzz the main drag); 1925, Glen H. Mullins, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'We'll see you in Terry Hut, moochin' the stem, some rainy Toosday'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (mooching the stem); extant. See the elements.

moocher; moucher. 'Moucher . . . Beggar'; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1874, Marcus Clarke, For the Term of His Natural Life; 1879, Thor Fredur, Sketches from Shady Places (as moucher); 1886, Wm Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'The poorest of beggars, or "Mouchers", the lowest in the profession'; 1887, Baumann; by 1890 (B & L), low s. in the British Empire. In late C. 19–20 Britain, it also = 'a tramp' (as in Harry Franck, A Vagabond Journey, 1910), and in this nuance it lies between c. and low s. It seems to have been c. in U.S.A. during the approx. period 1890–1940. It occurs, e.g., in Leon Livingston, 1918; in 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo: 'The chief classes of beggars are the "panhandlers" and the "moochers" The "panhandler" is a beggar who knows how to beg without loss of dignity [and usually for dollars] The "moocher" begs for nickels and dimes His appeal is to pity'; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; Feb. 27, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 'Moochers: those who ask for food in stores or back doors'; extant.—2. See mutcher, the more usual form (in this sense).

mooching, n. and adj. Begging: tramps' and beggars': 1879, Thor Fredur, Sketches from Shady Places, 'Here I assume the proper mouching pose', mouching being glossed as 'Slang for "begging"'; ibid., 'The mouching trade'; by 1890, American (B & L); 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps; 1931, Stiff, 'A low form of begging'; 1934, Convict, 'mooching or stemming'; 1934, Hippo Neville (English); extant. See mooch, v., 3.

mooching kid. A young (male) beggar; a young, hanger-on, incipient criminal: Dec. 14, 1929, Flynn's, Charles Somerville, 'The Crimson Web', 'He would no longer be a "mooching kid", a "punk" This . . . put him in the man class'; extant. See mooch, v., 3.

moody, n., 'gentle persuasion, blarney, flattery' (Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934): pitchmen's and cheapjacks' s.

moody, v. To deceive, esp. in a confidence-game: since ca. 1930. Black, 1943. Ex the n.

mooe. The female pudenda: mostly tramps': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; extant—but not very usual in C. 20. Cf. the note at moey. The word derives ex Romany mooe or mui, 'the mouth'.—2. The mouth: tramps': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; extant. Ex Romany mooe (or mui); cf. sense 1.

moon; pl., moon. A month's imprisonment; 'one month at the treadmill', as it is defined in the reference of 1857: 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'I . . . got two moon at Bromley Petty Sessions as a rogue and vagabond'; 1886, Wm Newton; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1891, C. Bent, 'Nine moon . . . nine months'; 1894, A. Morrison, Martin Hewitt, Investigator; 1896, F & H; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Plant me for a few moons till the smoke rolls away'; 1910, F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol, 'Moon an' a half' (six weeks); by 1930, low s.—e.g., pitchmen's (Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934). Ex the poetic S.E. sense, 'a month'.—2. A cheese: see work the moons.—3. A night: American tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 'The Tramps' Jargon'; slightly ob. Whether the moon shines or not.—4. A card game: San Quentin: since the 1920's; 1935, David Lamson, We Who are about to Die, 'I'm goin' to go show the boys how moon really should be played. Boy, I won six sacks last night off a guy that thought I didn't know the deck was marked'. Perhaps ironically ex S.E. moonshine.—5. 'Illegal booze,' Ersine, 1933; extant. Cf. moonshine.

moon, shove the. See shoving the moon.

moon(-)curser. A link-boy: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Link boys are said to curse the moon, because it renders their assistance unnecessary'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London,—but was not the term † by 1840?—2. Hence, 'one that under Colour of lighting Men, Robs them, or leads them to a gang of Rogues, that will do it for him,' 1698, B.E.; 1725, A Canting Dict. (the 46th 'Order of Canters'); 1785, Grose (by implication); † by 1870.

moon-eyed hen, 'a squinting wench' (Grose, 1785), was, even orig., more prob. s. than c.; but certainly low s.—see the 1821 quot'n at mill doll.

moon men; moon-men; moonmen. Gypsies:

ca. 1600–1750. The O.E.D. treats this term as S.E.: rightly, despite the prominence given to it in Dekker's Lanthorne and Candle-light, which, 1608–9, constitutes the earliest reference. Dekker explains the term as 'madmen': cf. S.E. lunatic.

moons, work the. See work the moons.

moonshine. 'The white brandy smuggled on the coasts of Kent and Sussex' (Grose, 1785), may or g. have been c., but prob. it was always s. The same applies to the variant moonlight (H, 3rd ed., 1864) and to moonshiner (U.S.A.), a manufacturer of illicit whiskey.

Moor, the. Dartmoor Prison: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, "How long were you at the Moor, Dick?" "Three years"; 1895, Arthur Griffiths, Criminals I Have Known; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 'I was on the "moor" with him'; 1925, Netley Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life, 'Dartmoor . . . known to the initiated as the "Moor" '; 1931, Brown, 'On the Moor (at Dartmoor Prison)'; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades; 1932, Jock of Dartmoor, Dartmoor from Within; 1933, David Hume, Crime Unlimited; by 1935, no longer to be classified as c.

moos-shifting. Cattle-stealing: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); ob. Cf. the nursery moo-cow, for strictly moos is the plural of moo.

moose-face. 'A rich, ugly-faced man; a poor but handsome young girl who marries an old, wrinkle-faced, ill-looking rich man, is said to have married a moose-face': 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; † by 1940.

moosh. See mush, n., 3.—2. For an English sense, see mush, n., 5.—3. Prison food: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1945. Pejorative.

moota. A marijuana cigarette: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. Flynn's, Jan. 8, 1938, Donald Barr Chidsey ('On Your Way Out'), 'He found plenty of marijuana . . . As always, it came in cigarettes, called "reefers", "muggles", "moocahs", "mus", "grifos", "mootas", or sometimes, playfully, "Mary Warners"' (the entire story is valuable on the theme of marijuana); extant. Also mootie, q.v.

mootie. 'This drug . . . looked like chopped hay, or dried clover, and was rolled up in a double brown cigarette paper. In short, a "muggles", "weed", or "mootie", cannabis indica, Indian hemp, or, to give it its Mexican name, marijuana, which translated into English just means Mary Jane!'—Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man; Confessions of a Drug Addict, 1933: drug addicts': since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942, spells it mutah. Perhaps a Mexican Sp. name, ex mutar, 'to change'.

Mop. The Missouri Pacific Railroad: tramps': since ca. 1910: Godfrey Irwin, 1931. I.e., Mo.P.

mop Mary. A 'scrub' woman—i.e., a char-woman: tramps': C. 20. Stiff, 1931; Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

mop-squeezer, 'a servant-maid', is not c., but s., despite Pierce Egan's assertion in The Life of Samuel Denmore Hayward, 1822.

mopas, 'a farthing': this is an erroneous form and an erroneous sense: see mopus.

mope, n. A departure, esp. an escape from prison: 1932 (see cop a mope); 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'How would you like to take a mope?'; extant. Prob. ex:—

mope, v. To walk away; make off: 1914, D.O.U.

Jackson & Hellyer; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer, 'To stroll, to walk'; 1934, Convict, 'To escape from prison'; 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. the sense-developments of mooch, n. and v.

moper; moping. 'A bum that is even lower than a moocher' (Stiff); begging lower than is 'mooching': tramps' and beggars': C. 20. In, e.g., Stiff, 1931 (both terms). As early as 1887 (Baumann) moper was recorded as English military s. for 'a deserter'. Ex mope, v. moppy. Drunk: 1823, Egan's Grose, where it is classified as c.; more prob., however, it was always s.; a s. status would account for its (app.) brief existence. Perhaps ex the excessive drinking at country fairs of the kind known as mops; or ex be mops and brooms, to be half-drunk.

moprey. 'A classic jest among criminals: it is supposed to consist of exhibiting oneself in the nude to a blind woman,' says a most dependable correspondent in letter of Sept. 9, 1946. An arbitrary word.

mopus. 'A half Penny or Farthing': 1698, B.E.; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp'; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1870, s.; by 1920, †. The O.E.D., Webster, Wright essay no etymology; the word may derive ex mop, 'a grimace', with a sly reference to the grimacing faces of the heads on the old coins, as B & L, 1890, hint but do not state: this seems more probable than F & H's (1896) derivation ex 'Sir Giles Mompesson, a monopolist notorious in the reign of James I'.—2. Hence, the mopusses, money: 1785, Grose; 1828, Pierce Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry, and Logic, 'You are of no use in a crib like this, if you cannot produce the mopusses'; 1833, W. Leman Rede, The Rake's Progress, Har[ry] Markham. "My exchequer's below zero." Ned. "Yes, sir, I must own the mopusses have been shy of late"; by 1855, s.—witness 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857, and H, 1859.

morfiend. 'A morphine addict' (BVB, 1942): journalistic s. rather than c.: blend of morphine + fiend.

morgan-rattler. A loaded club, stick, cane: 1890, Clarkson & Richardson, The Rogues' Gallery, 'Why do the thieves carry life-preservers, knuckledusters, and "morgan-rattlers" unless to kill or maim any one who opposes them?'; † by 1920. App. adopted ex dial. (see E.D.D.); prob. ex a man's name—cf. the synonymous neddy.

morgue. A low grog-shop or 'dive': 1891, Jacob A. Riis, How the Other Half Lives, 'In the lowest down-town "morgues" that make the lowest degradation of tramp-humanity pan out a paying interest . . .'; by 1903, according to Clapin, Americanisms, it was 'a slang word for a saloon where all liquors are sold for 5 cents'. Ex their dreariness.

mork. (Usually in pl.) A policeman: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 'To hear if there are any "morks" (police) or any one [else] in the way'; 1896, F & H; † by 1920. Cf. Romany mooshkero (constable): of which it might be a telescoping.

morley. See mauley.

Mormon dinner. See potatoes and with-it.

morning bladders. Morning newspapers: Jan. 5, 1947, letter from Wm Kernôt. With a urinary pun on Dutch blad, 'a sheet'.

morning(-)drop. 'The gallows. He napped the king's pardon and escaped the morning drop; he was pardoned, and was not hanged,' Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811: on the borderline between c. and s., but much more likely to be s. than c. Cf. new drop, q.v.

morning lay, the. A variant of the next: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1910. See lay, n., 2.

morning(-)sneak, the. For earliest record, see night sneak. In 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, defines it thus: 'To walk about the Streets in a Morning betimes, and 'sping'—i.e., spying—any Body to go out of Doors, then immediately the Thief goes in'; 1741, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'On this lay, there is two goes together'; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1828, George Smeeton; 1842, Pierce Egan, Captain Macheath; † by 1896 (F & H). See sneak, n., 1.—2. Hence, a thief that does this: 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected, 'The morning and evening sneaks'; 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; 1785, Grose; † by 1890.

morning-sneak cove; m.-s. covess. A male—a female—that practises 'the morning sneak' (see preceding, 1): 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London, 'Mother Brimstone, an old cadger, and a morning-sneak covess'; † by 1900. See pree.

morocco man. 'The men who are sent about to public houses to entice poor people into illegal lottery insurances, are called Morocco-men': 1798, M. & R. L. Edgeworth, Practical Education, p. 247, in a passage drawing on Colquhoun's Police, 1796; † by 1896 (F & H). There is prob. an allusion to the Moroccan pirates.

morph is too obviously 'morphine' for the term to be c. (Flynn's, Dec. 6, 1930.)

morris, v., 'to depart', was never c. Grose, 1785. Ex the morris dance.—2. To be hanged, to dangle in the air: 'old cant', say B & L—but on what authority? If genuine, the term comes from the quivering legs of the hanged man and the motions of the morris dance.

mort appears first in Awdeley, The Fraternitey of Vacabondes, 1562, but only in combination (e.g., autem mort); alone, first in Harman, 1567, 'Their harlots, whiche they terme Mortes and Doxes'; Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608 (see quot'n at dopey); ibid., 'Of Morts there be two kindes, . . . A walking Mort and an Autem-mort', qq.v. separately; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Bing out, bien Morts'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme, 'Mort, a Woman, a Punk'; 1698, B.E., 'A wife [of a vagabond or a criminal], Woman, or Wench'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; 1785, Grose (as for B.E.); 1797, Potter; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham (as term of address); 1838, J. Cosgrave, The Irish Highwaymen; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); but the term was, among criminals, ob. by 1800 and prob. † by 1840. It would appear to have survived among tramps; at least, among those with a knowledge of Romany—witness Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1833, 'Mort, woman, mistress'. Perhaps of Romany origin: cf. Hindustani mahar, 'a wife, woman': B & L. More prob., however, a perversion of Dutch (cf. mot), as in mot-huys, 'brothel' (Hexham). John Sampson's derivation ex Fr. amourette (flirtation) is ingenious, but mort is too old to admit of that origin.—2. Hence, though somewhat obscurely, a yeoman's daughter: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1840.

mort of the boozing ken. A tavern landlady: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'An Hostess, The Mort of the Buesing Ken'; app. † by 1850. See the elements.

mort wap-apace. 'A Woman of Experience [in whoring], or very expert at the Sport' of sexual intercourse: 1698, B.E.; Grose; app. † by 1830. Ex mort + wap.

morte. See mort.

moschineer. See moskeneer.

Moscow, in. In pawn: New Zealand: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., The Press (Christchurch, New Zealand), special report of Oct. 18, 1939, 'He had a "spark in Moscow" (meaning in pawn)', a spark being a diamond ring; extant. The Australian form, current since ca. 1935, and recorded by Baker, 1942, is gone to Moscow or moscowed; in Australia, too, Moscow may be used independently to mean 'a pawnshop'. By 1945, in both countries, the n., the v. and the phrases were low s. Moscow being regarded as distant, remote.

moser. A runaway, a fugitive: 1925, Leverage: not c., but low s. Ex s. mosey, 'to go, to move slowly: to clear out'.

Moses. See meet one's Moses.

mosh. "'Doing the mosh on the quiet.'" Dining at an eating-house, and not paying': 1857, 'Ducange Anglieus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L, who give also mosh, v., to do this—so too, 1896, in F & H, who do not mention the n.; ob. A perversion of the n. corresponding to mooch, v.—2. To pawn: a C. 20 variant of mosk. Manchon, Le Slang, 1923.

moshkeneer. See moskeneer.

mosk, v., esp. as vbl n. mosking. 'To moskeneer' (q.v.), of which it is a shortened form; a mosking and the agential mosker are derivatives. Likewise low, esp. East End, s. is the n. mosk, 'pawnbroker'.

moskeneer; moshkeneer (B & L); moschineer (P. H. Emerson, 1893) or moscheneer (ibid.); mosker or mossker. 'Moskeneer, to pawn with a view to obtaining more than the actual value of an article. There are . . . men who make moskeneering a profession—that is, they buy jewellery, which though fairly good, is not so good as it seems, and pawn it as opportunity occurs'; 1874, H; not c., but low s. Ex Modern Hebrew mishken, 'to pawn': The O.E.D.

moskeneering. See preceding entry.

mosking. See mosk.

mosque. A church: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'I must go to mosque to-morrow, where I am to nap a couple of neds from the Humane Society'; † by 1890 (B & L). Ex the S.E. term.

moss, n. 'A cant term for lead, because both are found on the tops of buildings': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1896, F & H; ob.

moss, v. To pawn: a variant of mosk, q.v.: C. 20: low s., rather than c. Val Davis, Phenomena, 1941.

mossker. See moskeneer.

mossy face (or with capitals). The female pudend: prob. not c., but low s.

most, n. F & H, 1896, classify this as American thieves' c. and quote Matsell, 1859, 'Dining at an eating-house and leaving without making payment'; which is the sense of mosh. Obviously this is an editorial misreading of mosh.

mot or mott. A girl or woman; a whore: ca. 1773, Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles), 'The first time I saw the flaming mot, | Was at the sign of the Porter Pot'; 1785, Grose, 'Mot, a girl, or wench'; ca. 1789, The Sandman's Wedding; 1797, Potter, 'Morts, or motts, lewd women, whores, shop-lifters, &c.'; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Mott, a blowen, or woman of the town'; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets of the Fancy. Triumph', 'The motts lament for Tyburn's merry roam' (ramble, or outing); 1823, Bee, 'A young woman, desirable for a sweetheart'; 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, III; 1839, Brandon (mott); 1845, anon. translator of E. Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, ch. VI; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Mots, cyprians, whores'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H, 'A girl of indifferent character'; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1896, F & H; ob. Ex mort, by disguise; or, more prob., ex Dutch (cf. mott kast, a brothel): mot, 'a whore', is old Dutch s.—2. Hence, a landlady: 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, i, '“We can sell 'em to the 'mot' (landlady) of the 'libb-ken' (lodging-house)”'; † by 1920.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) 'Mott. Any decent female, generally a mother, or sister, or wife,' The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848: U.S.A.: † by 1937 (Irwin).

mot(-)cart. A 'loose box'—a brougham or other vehicle kept for the use of a dame de compagnie: 1864, H, 3rd ed. (mott-cart); 1887, Baumann; by 1896 (F & H) it was low s. See mot.

mot case. A brothel: late C. 19–20. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Ex Dutch: see etymological matter at end of mot, 1.

mother; the mother. A bawd; a procuress; a female brothel-keeper or -manager: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, by whose time the term seems to have > low s. Euphemistic.

Mother Abbess. The same as the preceding: C. 18–mid-19. Perhaps orig. c.; more prob. always low s. (Grose, 1785.)

mother and daughter. Water: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Convict, 1934; M & B, 1944. Rhyming s., introduced by Cockneys.

Mother Midnight. The sense 'midwife' (B.E., 1698; Grose) is presumably s., but that of 'bawd' is prob. c. and an elaboration of mother, q.v.: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1830. Cf. mother of the maids.

mother of all saints (or A—S—); mother of all souls (or A—S—). The female pudend: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (. . . saints); 1796, Grose, 3rd ed. (also . . . souls); 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum (both; also mother of St Patrick). Prob. not c., but low s.

mother of the maids. A bawd; a female brothel-keeper: 1796 (therefore current at least as early as 1791), Grose, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. Not certainly c., but prob. c. at first and perhaps until ca. 1810. Ex the S.E. sense (she who has control over the maids-in-waiting).

motorman's glove, 'a real outlet': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman's article: borderline case between tramps' c. and eating-house s. Ex the colour.

mott. See mot.

motting, n. Wenching: 1896, F & H; app. of ca. 1860–1920. See mot, 1.

motto. Topsy: tramps': C. 20. Jules Manchon, 1923. Ex Romany, direct: motto or motti. The Romany variant matto suggests that it may derive ex L. maculatus—via It. or Sp.

mouch. See mooch.

mouche. To betray: 1925, Leverage. Like mouchoir, 'an informer; a squealer' (Leverage), the term is suspect—in the sense that I doubt their use by the American underworld. If genuine, the term derives ex Fr. s. mouche, a spy.

moucher. See moocher.

mouchey. 'A Jew': not c., but low s.

mouching. See mooching.

mougrell ('He that walkes the horses, and hunts dry-foote is called a Mougrell'), in Dekker, Villanies Discovered, 1620, is a misprint for mongrel, 1.

moulder. A coiner of counterfeit: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322), 'Coiners . . . Bit-makers, snidemen, moulders'; extant. With a pun on a metal moulder.

mounch-present. See munch-present.

mounging. See munging, reference of 1864.

mounseer-faked. Of French manufacture: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx, 'A Mounseer-fak'd calp'; † by 1910. Monsieur-made.

mount, n. See Mount, the.—2. Hence, any bridge: ca. 1730–1800. B & L.

mount, v. To act as 'mounter' (q.v.): 1781 (implied at mounter); 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Their price is five shillings for what they call mounting; they have been known to mount two or three times in one day'; 1797, Potter, 'Mount, to give false evidence'; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; † by 1900. Ex mounting into the witness box.—2. 'To mount for a person is also synonymous with bonnetting for him': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890. Ex sense 1. Cf. Mount, the.—3. To read the record of the previous convictions of (a criminal): C. 20. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. Done under oath and in the witness-box, to which the detective or other police officer mounts from the body of the court.

Mount, the. London Bridge (the Tower Bridge): 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Stall on the Mount; stop on the Bridge'; app. † by 1830. Ex the fact that it stands rather higher than the ground on either shore.—2. Montreal: Canadian tramps': late C. 19–20, W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 1936.

mount a (or the) horse foaled by an acorn. To be hanged: 1845, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 4th ed. A variant of ride . . ., q.v. at acorn.

Mount Shasta. See Shasta.

mountain goat. Mutton: convicts': since ca. 1925. Hargan, 1935. Pejorative—like most of the convict terms for food.

mountain(-)pecker, 'a sheep's head', is not c., but low s.

mounted, work; mounted pitcher: ' (to be) a pitchman talking and demonstrating from high in, or atop, his stall, well above the crowd': pitchmen's s.: Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934.

mounter. 'There is another set of Queer Bail, who, as they are equally common [with those who provide Jew bail], are also equally formidable, and who are distinguished by the name of Mounters. They are so denominated from the party's borrowing the clothes when he goes to give Bail. There are houses which lett out wigs and coats for this purpose; the wigs are well-powdered, and the coats large . . . Mounted in this tradesman-like manner, these Bail are brought to the Court,' George Parker, A View of Society, 1781; 1785, Grose, 'From their mounting particular dresses suitable for the occasion'; 1797, Potter; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; † by 1900. Ex mount, v.—2. A staircase: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'So, do you wait on the mounter, vile I goes in'; † by 1900. I.e., that on or by which one mounts to an upper storey.

mounting is the vbl. n. corresponding to mounter. (George Parker, 1789.)

mourner's bench*, the. The form on which sit the newcomers to a prison before the various examinations, bath, etc., etc., take place: not c., but gen. prison s. Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 1912.

mouse, n. A C. 18 term, spelt mause—I surmise, erroneously for mouse—in C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718, 'A Mause, alias Bundles'; ? rather 'bundle', as appears, 1735, in Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, 'That's a Fencing Mort, says Abraham, and I dare swear, she has got a Mause of Wedge—Let's Bone her'; that it may, however, signify 'a sum of money' and have lasted well into C. 19, appears from a professional thief's letter of 1829 (Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, V, trial of Jn Daly), 'I hame cumming up on Mondy, and thry to get me as much mouse as you cane'. Prob. there is no etymology in the accepted sense; an arbitrary—a code—choice of word.—2. See mice.—3. An informer: U.S.A.: 1935, Hargan; extant. Word-play on rat, n., 5.

mouse*, v. 'Be quiet; be still; talk low; whisper; step light; make no noise': 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1900. Ex as quiet as a mouse.—2. To steal (in a petty way): 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. S.E. 'sneak thief'.

mouse, white. See mice, white.

mouser*. A male degenerate, a 'fairy': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1937, says Godfrey Irwin (letter of Aug. 12), 'Slang, I believe, rather than cant'. 'A reference to the quiet, mouse-like habits of these persons' (Irwin).

mouse-trap is said by B & L, 1890, to be 'old cant' for 'marriage': it was never of a status lower than that of s. mousey. Cheese: tramps': C. 20. Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1933. Ex the mouse's traditional—and actual—fondness for cheese.

moush*. See mush, n., 3.

mousing*. Petty theft: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex mouse, v., 2.

mouth, n.; mouth almighty. A noisy fellow: 1698, B.E. (the former): resp. late C 17–18 and C. 19–20; ob. Not e., as I have seen it classified, but s. Perhaps an abbr. of all mouth.—2. Hence, (only mouth) 'an ignorant Person'; a gullible person, a dupe (esp. if an easy one): 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Another shall look out for a Mouth that has a Horse to sell or change'; 1797, Potter, 'A foolish easy person'; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'A silly fellow. A dupe'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A man who does a very imprudent act, is said to be a rank mouth'; 1823, Bee; app. † by 1870.

mouth*, v. To weep: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1910. Ex the puckering of the weeper's mouth.

mouth, stand. To be duped: 1811, Lex. Bal.; † by 1890. Lit., to stand being a 'mouth': see mouth, n., 2.

mouth habit*, the. 'The habit of taking narcotics orally,' BVB: drug traffic: C. 20: by 1930, also police j. and journalistic coll.

mouthful, hand a. See hand a mouthful.

mouthpiece. A counsel, a barrister: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, where it is wrongly classified as gen. s.; 1859, H; Oct. 7, 1865, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); July 10, 1871, Sessions Papers; 1874, H, 'Thieves and their associates always speak of a counsel as a mouthpiece'; 1887, Baumann; 1888, James Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; 1890, B & L; 1891, J. Bent, Criminal Life (applied to a solicitor); 1896, F & H; 1898, J. W. Horsley, Prisons and Prisoners; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (U.S.A.), 'If a thief has not enough money to hire a "mouth-piece" (criminal lawyer) he is in a bad way'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Mouth-Piece. Spokesman; a lawyer'; 1908, Edgar Wallace, Angel Esquire; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1913, Arthur Stringer; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, 'Criminal Slang' by J. M. Sullivan (swell mouthpiece, a very able lawyer); April 1919, The (American) Bookman; by 1920, low s., both in Britain and in U.S.A. Simply: one who serves as a mouth for another.—2. An informer to the police: U.S.A.: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, "'I'm a bad lot if you like, but I wouldn't turn mouth-piece for the whole five thousand'"'; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, Glossary, 'Mouth-piece, a thief in the pay of the police'; ibid., p. 125, 'The Mouth-Piece System. A mouth-piece is a thief who tells tales to the police about his pals. In New York City he is also called a stool-pigeon. The "profession"—the criminal underworld—generally speak of him as a squealer'; ibid., p. 131, 'Once a mouth-piece always a mouth-piece, is the theory of the Under World'; 1902, Flynt, The Little Brother; by ca. 1910, ob., and by 1920, † in U.S.A.; current throughout C. 20 in Canada (anon. letter, June 9, 1946.)

movables. See moveables.

move, n., 'the secret spring by which any project is conducted, as, There is a move in that Business which you are not down to' (Vaux, 1812): this particular sense ('motive') may well be c., despite the fact that 'action', 'operation', 'device', 'trick', 'procedure' are S.E. senses.

move*, v. "'The swell moved to the Moll as they crossed", the gentleman bowed to the girl as they passed each other': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1920. I.e., to move one's head.

moveables or movables. Ex the S.E. sense, 'goods and effects easily moved or, rather, removed', comes the special underworld application, which is c.: 1698, B.E., 'Moveables, c. Rings, Watches, Swords and such Toies of value. As we bit all the Cull's Cole and Moveables, c. we won '—stole—' all the Man's Money, Rings, Watches, &c.'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1896, F & H; † by 1870.

moved. See move, v. (Matsell inexplicably lists move as moved.)

mover. 'Spotters are the gentlemen whose sad destiny it is to locate country post-offices in which money may be stored in iron boxes. Always they travel ahead of the boxmen, or yeggs. They are the cautious advance-guard of theft. They are known in their own circle as movers, (thieves on the move)': Jim Tully, 'Jungle Justice' in The American Mercury, April 1929; extant.

mow, n., appears in J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 1707, as c. for a cow. If genuine, the term is obviously an abbr. of moo-cow, but it is strongly suspect.

mow, v. 'To kiss . . . "The bloke was mowing the molly", the man was kissing the girl': 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Ex S.E. mow, 'to make faces or grimaces'.

mow-beater. See mow-heater.

mow down. 'To kill with a tommygun,' Ersine, 1933; extant. Ex the corresponding S.E. sense.

mow-heater. A drover: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley (mow-beater, presumably a misprint); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1870, All the Year Round, March 5, 'By-gone Cant' (m.-beater); † by 1890 (B & L). Grose explains thus: 'From their frequent sleeping on hay mows'; but perhaps lit., one who 'burns up' the mows or heaps of hay, corn, etc.; there is possibly a pun on eater (via consume).

mowat. A woman: C. 20. Partridge, 1938. Of North Country origin: cf. dial. -mow, 'to copulate'.

mower. A cow: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who does not, however, classify it as c. It was prob. s. by 1780 or so. I.e., a 'moorer': cf. the nursery moo-cow.

moxey or moxie. Nerve, courage; energy, power: 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls, 'I always figure Louie a petty-larceny kind of guy, with no more moxie than a canary bird'; Oct. 9, 1937, Flynn's, 'A roving Coast Guard cutter that had plenty of moxie in her engines'; 1942, BVB, 'Impertinent assurance'; extant. Yiddish?

Mr Block. See Block, Mr.

Mr Fakus. See Fakus.

Mr Fish. An addict that, to break himself of the habit, gives himself up to the Federal officers: drug traffic: since ca. 1930. BVB. Cf. fish.

Mr Knap. See knap, v., 4.

Mr Nash. See nash.

Mr Palmer. See palm, 2.

Mr Pullen. See pull, v., 1.

Mr Whiskers. See Whiskers, Mr.

Mrs Ashtip; Mrs Greenfields. A night's sleep or rest in the open, the former in an ash-tip or a brick-kiln, the latter in the fields: mostly tramps': C. 20: 1936, W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 1936 (both); 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 'Living with Mrs. Greenfields. Sleeping in the park'. For an Australian variation, see sleep with . . . With the latter term, cf. greenmans.

Mrs Lukey Props. A female brothel-keeper: tramps': late C. 19-20. F & H, 1896. Prob. ex one thus named.

Mrs White. 'The name used to and for dope-peddlers,' Chicago May, 1928; extant. Ex the white colour of most drugs in powdered form.

mu. Marijuana: drug addicts': since late 1920's. Courtney R. Cooper, 1937 (see fu). Ex muggles—or, more prob., moocah.

mucaro. A look-out man for a gang: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the language of Italian gangsters.

much toper feeker. See mush toper faker.

muck, n., is said by B & L, 1890, to have been 'old cant' for 'money': it certainly was never c., whatever else it may have been.—2. See running a muck.

muck, v., 'to beat, to excell': s., orig. low.—2. See:—

muck out, v. To clean (a person) out of his money: professional gamblers': 1823, Egan's Grose, 'Mucked out. Lost all the cash. Cant'; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; ob. Cf. 'to clean': to get the 'muck' (or money) out of a person.

muck(-)snipe. 'The Castle (a beer-shop). "Takes in all sorts . . . I was a muck-snipe when I was there—why, a muck-snipe, sir, is a man regularly done up, coopered, and humped altogether"' (a 'down-and-out', in short): 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, 1; 1859, H; if H, 3rd ed., 1864, is right in his classification, the term > low s. in the early 1860's. Opprobriously allusive: snipe is offensive and muck makes it worse: cf. S.E. guttersnipe.

muck stick. A long-handled shovel: tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; Howard N. Rose, 1934. With it he shovels the 'muck'; cf. mucker.

muck toper feeker is an error (Egan's Grose, 1823) for mush-topper faker.

muckenger. See muckinger.

mucker. 'A "mucker" or a "shovel stiff" is a man'—among tramps, a hobo—'who does manual labor or construction jobs,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. He handles muck.

muckinger; occ., muckenger. A handkerchief: not c.

muckstick. See muck stick.

mud. 'A Fool, or Thick skull Fellow,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., but obviously copying Hall; app. † by 1800, except in U.S.A.—witness Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859. Perhaps cf. as dull as ditch-water for semantics.—2. A tobacco pipe: Nov. 15, 1836, The Individual (see fog, v.); † by 1890. Why? Because a pipe is so often a dirty brown, like mud? Or because a 'wet' smoker causes it to gurgle, much as mud squelches when one walks in it?—3. Opium: U.S.A., esp. among dope peddlers: 1922, Dialect Notes, article by Whitney H. Wells; 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; Dec. 13, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville, "'Mud" to Sell'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; 'Mud—gum opium'; 1934, Convict; 1936, Lee Duncan (for the smoker himself); Nov. 1937, For Men Only, Robert Baldwin, 'Dopes Are Dopes'; 1938, Convict 2nd; extant. 'It looks like mud—like thick, gummy, black mire', Charles Somerville, &c.—4. 'A cup of mud (black coffee)': Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925: U.S. tramps': app. since ca. 1910: 1929-31, Kernôt; 1931, Stiff, 'Strong coffee mixed with weak milk'; 1935, Hargan; et al.—5. Chocolate pudding: convicts': 1934, Rose; 1935, Hargan; extant. Colour.

mud fence. A lip of soap (or other plastic material) that, shaped about the crack of a safe-door, is used to lead the liquid explosive (usually nitroglycerin) to the safe's hinges or to its combination-device: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant. Mud, because the c. name for nitroglycerin is soup.

mud-kicker or mush-worker. A prostitute given to robbing her customers: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. jack roller.

mud(-)lark. 'Men and boys, known [as] mud-larks, who prowl about, and watch under the ship when the tide will permit, and to whom they'—dishonest stevedores—'throw small parcels of sugar, coffee, and other articles of plunder, which are conveyed to the receivers by these mud-larks, who generally have a certain share of the booty': 1796, P. Colquhoun, The Police of the Metropolis; 1798, M. & R. L. Edgeworth, Practical Education; 1805, George Barrington, New London Spy; 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1828, George Smeeton, Doings in London, where (p. 317) the term is said to be 'nearly extinct'; Nov. 8, 1836, The Individual. Ex the fact that they disport themselves in the Thames mud.—2. The derivative sense, 'a scavenger in (esp. the Thames) mud', is s.; but the equally derivative sense, 'such a scavenger' who steals 'pieces of rope and lumps of coal from among the vessels at the river-side' is c.: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 26; but occurring as early as Nov. 1840 in Sessions Papers (p. 36); Nov. 1870, The Broadway, 'Among Thieves', "'Mudlarks", who supply the marine-store dealers with bits of iron and rope, scuttles of coal and armfuls of wood'; 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H; † by 1920.

mud-plunger; mud-plunging. "'That rascal and his wife are street singers. Fine weather don't suit 'em; they can't come out strong enough. Give 'em a soaking wet day, with the mud over their naked toes, or a freezing cold one, with a good breeze to set their rags flying . . .": 1875, James Greenwood, Low-Life Deeps; Feb. 8, 1883, The Daily Telegraph (the latter); 1896, F & H (id.); extant. The mud of the streets.

mudge. 'A hat: 1888, The Sportsman, Dec. 28, 'The judge said that he had noticed that one of the witnesses had referred to the hat as a mudge, a word he had never heard before', with the implication that it is a Liverpool word; 1896, F & H; † by 1910. Perhaps a corruption of mush, 'an umbrella', both in form and in meaning.

mudhop. See mud-hop.

muff. The female pudend: 1698, B.E., 'Muff, c. a Woman's Secrets. To the well-wearing of your Muff, Mort, c. to the happy Consummation of your Marriage, Madam, a Health' in the underworld; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725, and Grose, 1785; by 1870, low s. With a reference to the pubic hair.—2. A foolish fellow, an easy dupe: 1812, J. H. Vaux; by 1830, it was s. in England; possibly c. in U.S.A. ca. 1830–90 (P. Farley, Criminals of America, 1876). Ex the softness of a muff, the 'softness' of a dupe.—3. A gangster girl; gangster's 'moll': U.S.A.: 1934, Rose; ob.

muff-diver. A male cunnilingist: 1935, Hargan; extant. BVB, 1942, cites muff-diving, the practice. See muff, 1.

muffin baker. A Quaker: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; introduced by Cockneys.

muffler. A crape mask worn by burglars: 1838, Glascock, 'The dark lanterns—the mufflers—and the jemmy'; 1896, F & H; ob. Ex the † S.E. sense, 'a kind of vizard or veil worn by women' (F & H).

muffling cheat. 'A moffing chete, a napkyn,' Harman, 1566; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'A Muffling chete, signifies a Napkin'; 1665, R. Head (muffling cheat); 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. A thing that muffles up.

mug, n., 'the face', is s., orig. low; but as 'the mouth' (Egan's Grose, 1823) it may, as Pierce Egan states, be c.—2. 'Dupe. "Who is the mug?"': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.) by implication; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; by 1895, s. Perhaps ex the broad-grinning, often silly faces on Toby mugs.—3. Always the mug; often put the mug on. Garrotting: Nov. 26, 1862, Sessions Papers (case: Roberts), police witness, 'I apprehended Roberts . . . he said, "You want me for putting the mug on, do you? I will put the b—y mug on you," . . . mug is slang used by thieves; it means garrotting'; 1925, Leverage, 'A neck hold'; extant.—4. (Ex sense 1.) A photograph, esp. of a criminal: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 323), 'Circulating thieves' photos . . . Pushing the mugs round'; 1895, in a story of that date in Hobo Camp Fire Tales, 7th ed., 1911; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft (U.S.A.), Glossary; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1925, Leverage; 1927, Kane; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; by 1929 (Great Detective Cases, p. 126) it was police s.—5. A rough, a thief, a thievish rough: U.S.A.: 1890, B & L; 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'Crude Gangster . . . mugg'; ob. Prob. by antiphrasis ex sense 2.—6. Among American tramps, app. ca. 1880–1915, a chap, a fellow: 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp; 1904, Life in Sing Sing (among criminals and convicts); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat.—7. Hence (?), a policeman: U.S.A.: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (p. 267); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest, 'Do You Speak "Yegg"?'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Glen H. Mullin; 1925, Leverage, 'A detective'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; slightly ob.—8. A male degenerate: U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. Perhaps ex sense 2.—9. Extortion, blackmail, exacted from a male pervert: U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. Edwin H. Sutherland, 1937. Ex sense 8.

mug, v., 'to thrash', is not c., but pugilistic s.—in U.S.A., very low s. Cf. Erse mugaim, 'to defeat', and Gaelic muck, 'to smother'.—2. Hence, 'to rob by the garrote (sic)': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1904, Life in Sing Sing ('to strangle'); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys, 'To choke'; 1931, IA; 1935, Hargan; ob.—3. Hence, to swindle: 1874, H; by 1896 (F & H), low s.—4. To photograph: U.S.A.: 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers That Prey, "'Good job for us we wasn't mugged that time that old Freckleton got 'is glims on us'"'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Mugged. Photographed' (participial adj.); 1912, A. Train, Courts, Criminals and the Camorra; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1918, L. Livingston, Madame Delcassee; 1918, Arthur Stringer; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Jim Tully; 1925, Leverage; 1927, Kane; 1928, May Churchill Sharpe; 1928, John O'Connor; 1929, Givens; Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; and scores of times since in U.S.A.: by ca. 1940, also British, as in Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941, and by 1910 Canadian (letter of June 9, 1946). Ex sense 4 of the n.

mug, stall one's. 'To go home, or to take shelter': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue (at to . . .); 1859, H., 'Stall your Mug, go away; spoken sharply by anyone who wishes to get rid of a troublesome or inconvenient person'; according to H, 3rd ed., it was s. by 1864—low s., no doubt; but in 1890, B & L classify it unreservedly as c. Lit., 'to place (instal) one's face elsewhere'.

mug burg. 'A town in which all who are arrested are photographed,' M. H. Weseen, A Dict. of Am. Slang, 1934: tramps': since ca. 1920. Ex mug, n., 4.

mug copper; mug john. A policeman: Australian: C. 20: perhaps always low s.; certainly low s. since 1940 at latest. Baker, 1945.

mug-faker. 'Schreier, Komodiant, Sänger', i.e. public crier, comedian or actor, singer: 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen; app. † by 1910.—2. A street photographer: mostly London: from ca. 1910 (George Orwell, Down and Out, 1933); from ca. 1935, street s.—3. A camera: pitchmen's s. Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934.

mug-hunter. 'An old mug-hunter, one, that is to say, of the wretched horde who haunt the street at midnight to rob drunken men, calls me a Job's comforter because I had indicated that her path was more likely to be strewn with oakum than with roses': 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail; 1890, B & L; 1896, F & H; ob.

mug-hunting. The vbl n. corresponding to mug-hunter.—2. Living by one's wits, esp. by confidence-trickery: 1894, J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats (p. 213); by 1920, low s.

mug john. See mug copper.

mug-lumberer. A fashionably dressed swindler: C. 20. Jules Manchon, 1923. Cf. mug-hunter and lumberer.

mug on, put the. See put the mug on.

mug room. That room at a police headquarters in which the accused and the suspects are photographed: police s., rather than c. Rose, 1934.

mug-show. 'Confrontation with witnesses,' Leverage: by 1930—if not, indeed, always—as much police s. as c. See mug, n., 1.

mug up. To eat: 1933, Ersine; extant. I.e., to 'feed one's face' (or mug).

mugged; unmugged (q.v. also separately). One who has—one who has not—his photograph in the rogues' gallery: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, pp. 4–5; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 'Mugged-gun' applied, also, derivatively to a criminal meriting such photography, hence, because 'wanted', dangerous to other criminals; extant. Ex mug, v., 4.

mugger. A swindler, esp. one who operates in the street: 1874, H (at maceman), 'A "street-mugger"', but only mugger is a c. term; ob. Ex mug, v., 2, 3.—2. A strangler, a garrotter: ca. 1870–1925; in U.S.A., ca. 1890–1925. IA, 1931. See mug, v., 2—and n., 3.

muggill. 'The Muggill, the Beadle', Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610; app. † by 1700. Origin obscure: perhaps cf. dial. muggle, 'to muddle along', but prob. an arbitrary formation.

mugging, n. Photography; subjecting criminals (and others) to photographic recording: 1899 (implied in mugging fiend); 1912, A. Train, Courts, Criminals and the Camorra; extant. Ex mug, v., 4.—2. A silent warning: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex the sense in theatrical s.: 'making funny grimaces, in order to excite laughter'.

mugging burg or joint. 'In some cities suspicious characters are arrested on general principle and immediately photographed by the police authorities. Such towns are called "muggin' joints", and the police authorities "muggin' fiends"', J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (ch. on 'The Tramps' Jargon'); 1927, Kane (m. joint); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. See mugging, 1.—2. (Only m. joint.) A gallery of photographs: U.S.A.: April 8, 1938, Godfrey Irwin (letter); extant.

mugging fiend. See mugging burg, 1st reference.

mugging joint. See mugging burg.

muggins. Food: 1933, Ersine; extant. Suggested by mug, n., 1; cf. mug up.

muggled. 'A term applied to cheap trash offered for sale as smuggled goods', F & H (1896), who quote Mayhew, London Labour, II, 44 (pub. in 1851), 'Another ruse to introduce muggled or "duffers" goods'; app. † by 1910. A perversion of smuggled, perhaps with an allusion to mug, n., 2.

muggled-up. Under the influence of marijuana: since ca. 1925. In, e.g., C. de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man, 1933. Ex:—

muggles; occ. variant, miggles. 'I found myself on the Mexican border with a bad "yin" and nothing to relieve me but the native drug marijuana. In New Orleans and other Southern American towns—towns in the Southern States of the U.S.A.—this is known as "muggles", being sold in the form of cigarettes . . . I would like to warn you that marijuana, cannabis indica, Indian hemp, hasheesh (call it what you will, for it is all the same, and by any other name would be as rotten) is the most degrading of all the narcotic group,' Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man: Confessions of a Drug Addict, 1933: drug addicts': since ca. 1920: 1933, Ersine, 'Cigarettes containing dope'; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 21) it was s.

mule. 'Corn liquor; cheap whisky,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since early 1920's; 1933, Ersine. Cf. white mule, q.v.

mule's ear, 'an illicit device for controlling a roulette wheel' (see, e.g., A. B. Reeve, Guy Garrick, 1914), is prob. not c., but a police name.

mull, n., as in make a mull of it, is not c., but s.

mull, v. To spend money: 1859, Matsell; 1896, F & H; † by 1920. To mull beer or wine is to spice and, esp., to warm it: cf. melt.

mulligan. An Irish stew; a tramps' stew: since early 1890's: 1907, Jack London, The Road; in My Life in Prison, 1912—a book valid for San Quentin for the period 1901–11—Donald Lowrie writes, 'It is strictly against the rules to cook in the cells, but we used to make "hash" or a "mulligan"' each Sunday night'; 1913, Edwin A. Brown, Broke; 1918, L. Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hoboes; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 'In the "jungle" the hobo not only cooks his own food, but has even invented dishes that are peculiar to jungle life. Chief among these is "mulligan" stew. "Mulligan", or "combination", is a "throw together" of vegetables and meat. There are certain ideal mixtures . . . , but the tramp makes "mulligan" from anything that is at hand. Onions, potatoes, and beef are the prime essentials'; 1925, Leverage; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'I promise myself some famous mulligans around these parts'; 1928, Chicago May; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; 1930, Lennox Kerr, Backdoor Guest; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; and many writers since then. By the way, it > current among English tramps ca. 1930—as, e.g., in Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1933, and among Australians ca. 1920, Baker recording it, in 1942, as mulligan stew. An Irish stew; Mulligan is a very common Irish surname—cf. the semantics of micky and shamus.—2. Hence, a hobo: Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's, Earl H. Scott ('The Bull Buster'), '. . . Scrapin' acquaintance with some bo's who might have seen him . . . but none of the mulligans had seen Pinky': but prob. allusive s. (? police and journalistic) rather than c.—3. Usually in pl., mulligans: playing cards: Australian, esp. among confidence tricksters: since ca. 1930. Baker, 1945. Cards bring mulligan and other food to the confidence trickster and the card-sharper.

multa, multee, multy. Usually in combination, esp. in multa bona fakement and multee kertever or kerterver, resp., 'a very good device or dodge' and 'very bad': not c., but parlyaree, ex It. molto, 'much' or 'very'.

mum! 'silence!', is not c.—nor even s. Nor, despite No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, is mum, 'silent'.

mum, the. The dead; those who have died: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne; † by 1930. Ex to keep mum (or to be mum), to maintain (or be) silent.

Mum-Glass, 'the monument erected on Fish-street hill, London, in memory of the great fire of 1666' (Grose, 1785), is not c., but s.

mum-tip. A payment of hush-money: rather, app., low s. than c. Pierce Egan, Life in London, 1821.

mum your dubber! See dubber, mum one's.

mumbler. A 'mumper' (q.v.), esp. one who pretends to be a ruined tradesman: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1890. He mumbles his pitiful tale.

mumbling cove. 'An ill-natured shabby fellow, a sneaking landlord': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1860.

mumbly pegs. (A girl's) legs: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928; Howard Rose, 1934; 1938, Convict 2nd; M & B, 1944. Rhyming s.—ex Cockney crooks mummed. See mum.

mummer, 'the mouth' (Grose, 1785): it is doubtful whether this is c., but it is not certain that it isn't. It seems to have been current ca. 1770–1860. Cf. mum!

mummery(-)cove, 'a actor': ? ca. 1810–80: possibly c.; prob. low s. F & H, 1896: but on what authority?

mumming. A theatrical booth: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; † by 1890 (B & L). Cf. S.E. mummer, an actor.

mumms is an error for muns. (Andrewes, 1809.)

mump. V.t., to cheat or overreach: 1651 (O.E.D.); 1671, F. Kirkman, The English Rogue, Part Two, 'To mump the farmer out of some money'. The term > archaic ca. 1800. Orig., it may have been c., but more prob. it was s.—2. Hence, in C. 18–mid-19, v.i. Ex the Dutch mompén, 'to cheat': prob. brought to England by soldiers that had served in the war.

mump, be on the. To exercise one's avocation of mendicancy; to earn, or try to earn, a living as a beggar: beggars: late C. 19–20; by 1940, almost †. Edwin Pugh, The Cockney at Home, essay on 'The Master-Beggar'. Cf. — mumper. A genteel beggar: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Mumpers, c. Gentile-Beggars, who will not accept of Victuals, but Money or Cloths' (clothes); 1709, E. Ward, The History of the London Clubs, in the description of the Beggars' Club mentions 'Blind Gunpowder-blasted Mumpers', which may accord with James Shirley's 'The Mumper is the general Beggar, Male and Female, which lie in Cross-ways, or Travel to and fro, carrying for the most part Children with them; which generally are By-blows, and delivered to them, with a Sum of Money, almost as soon as born'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The Forty-seventh Order of Canters'; 1785, Grose, 'Mumpers, originally beggars of the genteel kind, but since used for beggars in general'—from which it appears likely that the term had > s. some years before 1785. Ex mump, to beg.

mumpers' hall. In 1698, B.E., 'Mumpers-Hall, c. several Ale-houses in and about this City'—London—and Suburbs, in Allies, and By-places, much used by them—the 'mumpers'—and resorted to in the Evening, where they will be very Merry, Drunk, and Frolicksom—repeated, 1725, in A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1870. See mumper.

mumping; mumpus. 'Bettler-Cant: das was man zusammengbettelt hat' (that which one has amassed by—or in—begging): 1887, Baumann, Londonismen. Possibly c., but prob. never lower than s. Cf. mumper.

mum. See muns. The participial adj. (only, by the way, in combination) is not munned but, for the sake of euphony or, at least, ease in speech, mummed: see, e.g., dubber-mummed.

munch-present. See Awdeley's, No. 16. The term is prob. not c. but simply Awdeley's designation. Unrecorded by B.E., therefore almost certainly † by 1698, at latest. Lit., muncher of presents.

munches, 'tobacco': not c., but tinkers' s.: 1890, B & L. Strictly, the Shelta form is muntes.

mund is an American form (and derivative) of muns. Matsell, 1859.

munds. See muns.

mundungus, though recorded by D. Defoe, in the glossary of Street-Robberies consider'd, 1728, as c., is almost certainly s. Defoe defines it as 'sad stuff'; Grose as 'bad or rank tobacco'. The root of the word is perhaps dung, elaborated (on the analogy of fungus) to dungus, and then disguised with a fanciful rhyming prefix.

mung. To beg: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'Mung, kiddey. Mung the gorger; beg, child, beg, of the gentleman'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, by implication (see munging); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'To solicit; to beg'; 1864, H (munging); 1887, Baumann; 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo (where it appears as munge); 1896, F & H; ob. Ex mang, 1.

mungarly; also mungaree or -ry; also mongaree, etc., and mangary, etc. Bread; food: parlyaree. Common (mid-C. 19-20) among tramps: W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life, 1886, and Hugh Milner, letter of April 22, 1935. Ex Lingua Franca mangiare (ex It.), 'to eat'.

mungarly casa. A baker's shop: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; Oct. 18, 1864, The Times (cited by F & H); by 1890 (B & L) it was low s., though F & H, 1896, still classify it as c. See mungarly and carser.

mungary is an occ. form of mungaree, q.v. at mungarly. Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934.

munge, n. 'The Munge, alias the Dark,' C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'Keep in the munge as much as you can'; † by 1900. Origin obscure.

munge, v.i. To beg: to be a professional beggar: an occ. variant of mung.

munging, n. Begging: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 'I sold small articles . . . and by "munging" (begging) over them,—sometimes in Latin—got a better living than I expected or probably deserved'; 1864, H, 3rd ed. (munging and mounging); ob. See mung.

munie. A municipal lodging-house: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1920. Stiff, 1931. Municipal.

munns. See muns.

muns, n.; less correctly munns, as also in the earliest record: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Munns . . . The face'—but also, later in the glossary, muns; 1676, Coles (muns); 1698, B.E., 'Toute his Muns, c. note his Phis, or mark his Face well'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Chive his Muns; cut his Face'; 1785, Grose, 'Muns, the face, or rather the mouth, from the German word mund, the mouth'; 1789, G. Parker, 'Saucy queer-gamm'd smutty muns'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (mumms); 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial ('mouth'); 1823, Bee (id.); 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1859 (H, 1st ed.).—2. In the quot'n at sneak, go upon the, B.E. seems to make at muns = 'at night'. But his renderings of c. phrases are so free that we can hardly deduce from them.—3. A beau; rum muns, a great beau: Jan. 1741, trial of Mary Young, in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV (both terms); † by 1820. Ex sense 1.

muns, v. To kiss: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; app. † by 1830. Ex the n., sense 1.

muns, glim in the. See glim, v.

muogh is tinkers' s. for 'a pig': B & L, 1890.

mur, 'rum', is back s., orig. low; in C. 20, preserved by the Regular Army.

murder or murderer. 'Racketeer who butts in on rival racketeers' rackets,' Kernôt, 1929-31: since ca. 1924. The short form derives ex the longer; the longer connotes a grim jest on the fact that such a racketeer virtually murders himself.

murder grift. Theft or burglary in complete safety: 1937, Edwin H. Sunderland, The Professional Thief; extant. 'It's just murder, it's so easy!'

murerk. 'The mistress of the house': 1859, H; 1890, B & L, 'Murerk (tinker and tramps), the mistress of a house, a lady'; 1896, F & H, who classify it as tramps'; slightly ob. 'Perhaps it has a common origin with Spanish cant marca, a woman; Italian furbeschi marcona; French argot marque,' B & L.

murk. Coffee: tramps': from ca. 1910. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'From its cloudy, murky appearance with milk' (Irwin).

murrer. To die: since ca. 1930. James Curtis, They Drive by Night, 1938, "'I'm going to die, I think. I can't stand this pain.'" "Bloody well murrer then"''. Either ex Sp. morir (to die) or, more prob., ex It. morire (to die).

muscle, n. The influence, reputation, of—the fear inspired by—a gang-leader: Sept. 5, 1931, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, 'Trigger Muscle'—'He works unobtrusively . . . He lets his "muscle" speak for him. When the police drag his name into every gang killing or big shot feud he makes no denial. This circumstance has given Madden that terrorizing thing known in the underworld as "muscle" and highly respected in the realm of gangs'; Sept. 29, 1934, Flynn's; slightly ob. by 1947. 'Might is right'!—2. Short for muscle work: 1936, Charles F. Coe, G-Man, 'Winky an' Palmy ain't hot for the muscle'; extant.—3. Short for muscle man: since the middle 1930's. Flynn's, May 1942, James Edward Grant, 'You were the best muscle in the whole crowd, Julio'.

muscle, v. See muscle in, 1931 (Irwin) reference.—2. Short for 'muscle in on': 1936, Charles Francis Coe, G-Man, 'Mebbe it's a new mob. If they're musclin' Rap, it won't be long before they're musclin' us too'; extant.

muscle, adj. Violent; murderous: 1930, C. F. Coe, Gunner, "'If you hire the bump-off . . . do it the right way.'" "I'm pretty fair at that muscle stuff myself," Mouse avowed with due pride'; extant. Cf. muscle, n., 2—and muscle in.

muscle, on the. See on the muscle.

muscle in. To encroach on another gang's territory—or on its 'racket': 1929, E. D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 'If you think you can muscle into this joint you're off your nut'; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; Dec. 1930, Burke, 'To secure a share by forc. "Broke? Go muscle in some beer-joint"''; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; June 20, 1931, Flynn's, Frederick Nebel; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Muscle.—To use force or intimidation so as to secure a share in a "racket" or graft, or to force one's way into an enterprise or [a] gang by threat of violence. Also "muscle in"''; 1932, David Hume, Bullets Bite Deep; 1933, James Spenser, Limey; 1933, Eagle; 1933, Ersine, 'To take, by force or cunning, business that belongs to another gang'; Sept. 29, 1934, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; 1936, David Hume, The Crime Combine; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Nov. 10), it was s. in U.S.A.; by 1939, s. in the British Empire also. I.e., to muscle one's way in—force one's way in.

muscle man. One who 'muscles in'—esp. one who makes a practice of doing so: 1929–31, Kernôt; 1931, Fred D. Pasley, Al Capone; June 20, 1931, Flynn's, Frederick Nebel, 'Muscle Man'; Aug. 29, 1931, Flynn's, Claire Pomeroy, 'Muscle Men'; Sept. 29, 1934, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1936, Charles Francis Coc, G-Man; by 1937, police and journalistic s.

muscle mob. Such a gang of criminals as encroaches—or tries to encroach—or another gang's racket or on its territory: 1930, Charles Francis Coc, Gunman, 'I built me a nice steel cage just to keep away from the muscle mob'; extant. Cf. muscle, n., 2.

muscle work. The employment of violence, esp. in intimidation: racketeers': Sept. 19, 1931, Flynn's, Paul Annixter, 'Muscle Work'; extant.

muscling in, vbl n. corresponding to muscle in; in, e.g., Fred D. Pasley, Muscling In, 1931.

mush, n. An umbrella: 1851, implied in mush-faker; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1870, wholly s. in England—cf. remarks at mush-faker; in U.S.A., however, it may have remained c., for it is classified as c. by No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, by Jackson & Hellyer, 1914, by J. M. Sullivan, 1918, by Geo. C. Henderson, 1924, and by Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Abbr. mushroom.—2. The mouth: not c., but U.S. pugilistic s. (Matsell, 1859).—3. The face: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, in the very odd spelling moosh, moush. 'I prefer the simpler, more familiar, "mush", which I consider slang and not cant', Godfrey Irwin (letter of Aug. 12, 1937). Prob. a perversion of s. mug, 'face'.—4. 'A cab or hack owner,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant.—5. A fellow: 1936, James Curtis (sec coring mush and rye mush); 1943, Black, Moosh: a person, an individual'; extant. Prob. ex sense 3 via mug.

mush, v. To be an itinerant vendor and/or mender: 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'There were two more in their gang, who were . . . "mushing" in Harrisburg'; extant. Perhaps because a staple of their trade is the mush or umbrella.—2. See mushed up.

mush-faker. A maker of umbrellas—he was also, usually, a repairer and vendor of umbrellas: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, II, 24, 'In Umbrellas and Parasols the second-hand traffic is large, but those vended in the streets are nearly all "done up" for street sale by the class known as "mush . . . Fakers"'; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), of a hawker; by 1850, it had > partly, and by 1870 it was wholly, London s.—orig., street vendors'. In U.S.A., it may, esp. among tramps, have remained c.; it occurs, e.g., in J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (glossary), and in P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914, as mush-faker, and in Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hoboes, 1918, as mush-faker, with the variant mush-rigger; in Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923, 'He may be a tinker, a glazier, an umbrella mender, or he may repair sewing machines or typewriters'; in Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925; in Kane, 1927; in Stiff, 1931; et al. A shortening of mushroom-faker.—2. Hence, 'A tramp who pretends to be mending umbrellas to avoid arrest as a mere vagrant,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: U.S. tramps': since ca. 1910.—3. (Prob. ex sense 1.) 'Any low-grade tramp': tramps': since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931 Howard N.

Rose, 1934.—4. 'An itinerant umbrella mender who is often a beggar or petty thief,' Ersine, 1933; extant. Cf. senses 2, 3; imm. ex sense 1.

mush-faking is, among tramps, collective umbrella-mending, tinkering, and other such jobs and practices: 1931, Stiff; extant.

mush-rigger is an occ. variant (ca. 1910–30) of mush-faker. Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee, 1918; Glen H. Mullin, Adventures, 1925.

mush-top(p)er. An umbrella: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'In one shop, they nabbed two mush-topers'; app. † by 1900. Cf. mush, n., 1.

mush-top(p)erfaker. An umbrella-maker: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'We met in with Tom Wilson, alias Tommy Twenty, a mush toper feeker, and another cove'; ibid., Glossary, much . . ., which is a misprint; 1823, Egan's Grose (erroneously as muck-topper-feeker); † by 1890. A faker (or maker) of mush-toppers (or 'mushes' or umbrellas).

mush worker. 'An attractive woman who fleeces men by some pitiful "ghost story" or "racket"', Godfrey Irwin, 1931: beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1910. 'Crying and showing a deep emotion by the working of her ["mush"—i.e.] face' (Irwin).—2. Hence as at mud kicker, q.v.

mushed up. 'If a crook is smartly dressed he is "mushed up"', David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937: C. 20. Perhaps because to carry a rolled umbrella (mush, n., 1) is to look smart.

musher. An itinerant vendor of, e.g., mushes (umbrellas), or an itinerant mender, esp. of umbrellas: 1907, Jack London, The Road. Perhaps ex Fr. marcheur (and/or marchand); perhaps ex mush, v.; perhaps a telescoping of mush-faker.

mushroom-faker. 'Itinerant umbrella makers and repairers . . . are called mushroom fakers': 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxix, 'Mushroom faker—a man who goes about ostensibly to buy old umbrellas, but really to thieve'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, II—where it appears that, by this time, the term was also, if not indeed wholly, street vendors' s., in its lit. sense at least. Ex the shape of the umbrella; see faker (maker).

music, as money or other booty delivered perforce to a thief (esp. to a highwayman), is recorded as early as in The Widdow, by Jonson, Fletcher & Middleton, pub. in 1652 but written ca. 1616, for there a highwayman says, 'You must pay your Musick, sir, | Where ere you come'; in C. 18—early 19, it survived only as an element in 'the music's paid'.—2. Only as music(k)!: see next entry, reference of 1785.—3. 'The verdict of a jury when they find "not guilty"': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; ob. The verdict is sweet music to a prisoner's ear.

music's paid, the. (Cf. preceding entry.) B.E.; 1698, 'The Musick's paid, c. the Watch-word among High-way-men, to let the Company they were to Rob, alone, in return to some Courtesy from some Gentleman among them'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; another early example occurs at p. 21 of Anon., The Jacobite Robber, 1693; 1785, Grose, who implies that, by his time, it had been shortened to music; app. † by 1860. Cf. give the word of protection, q.v., at protection, give . . .

muslin; esp. a bit of muslin. A girl; a woman, esp. an attractive one: not c., but s.

muss. 'A quarrel; a row': 1859, Matsell; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Muss. A fight'; by 1910, no longer s. But The O.E.D. records the term, in sense 'a disturbance, row', as early as 1840 and treats it, prob. rightly, as Standard American. The nuance 'fight' may, however, have been genuine c. An American pronunciation of mess (perhaps on muddle).—2. Hence, a riot: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1910, no longer c.

muss up. To beat (a person) up, to assault grievously: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. To make a muss (or 'mess') of a person; cf. muss.

musseling cheat. See muzzling cheat.

musser. 'A fighter; a bully,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Musser—one who picks fights'; extant. Cf. muss, 1, and U.S. muss, 'to make untidy' (an English dial. form of mess) and muss up.

mustard. A Chinese: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex colour.

mustard, the. (?) The top-notchers in any criminal 'line': Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'Pickin's was good in th' old days but still I ain't more than a cartload of kale to the mustard'; extant. They're hot stuff at their job.

mustard pot. A passive homosexual: mostly convicts': 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; extant.

mustard shine. See Irwin's definition: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'The use of oil of mustard upon the shoes to prevent dogs from following the scent'; extant. 'The sharp odor . . . effectually covers any scent, and . . . actually hurts the delicate nose of the dog' (Irwin).

mut, n. See mutt, n., 1.

mut, v., 'to act in a cowardly manner' (Leverage, 1925); extant. Cf. mutt, its effective originator.

mutah. See mootah.

mutcher. Extremely rare as a variant of moocher in sense 1.—2. 'Stealing from Drunken Persons. There is a very common low class of male thieves, who go prowling about at all times of the day and night for this purpose. They loiter about the streets and public houses to steal from drunken persons, and are called "Bug-hunters" and "mutchers",' 1862, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV; 1896, F & H; † by 1910. Ex sense 1.

mutt, n. A dog: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. origin of sense 2.—2. A cowardly gangster: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Prob. ex s. mutt, 'a fool'; perhaps imm. ex sense 1.

mutt, v. See mut, v.—2. See:—

mutted up, ppl adj. 'Guarded by a dog. "Every joint in town is mutted up,"' Ersine, 1933; extant. Ex mutt, n., 1.

mutton, 'a woman' and 'generic woman', hence 'woman as sexual pleasure': not c., but s.

mutton-monger. A whoremonger: ca. 1530–1830. Not c., as several lexicographers affirm, but s. See mutton.—2. A sheep-stealer: ca. 1680–1800. B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict. Ex Fr. mouton, a sheep, or direct ex English.

mutton-shunter, 'a policeman', is not c., but either street or police s.—or both. Ware, 1909.

mutton(-)walk. 'The saloon of a theatre':

1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, where 'saloon' = 'salon'; 1859, H., 'The saloon at Drury Lane Theatre'; app. † by 1890 (C. Hindley, The True History of Tom and Jerry, glossary, p. 191). The term verges on fast-life s. See mutton.

muzzel; work the muzzel. (Occ., muzzle.) A charm; to sell charms: pitchmen's s., not c. Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934. Ex Yiddish.

muzzle, n. 'A Beard, (usually) long and nasty,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, who, however, does not classify it as c.—2. Mostly in flash the muzzle, which, occurring in a song heard by Byron in the early years of C. 19 ('very popular at least in my early days,' he says), is quoted in Don Juan (XIX), 1823, and is defined by E. H. Coleridge (in his excellent edition, 1906) as 'to show off the face, to swagger openly'; app. † by 1890.—3. See muzzel.—4. A male degenerate, a 'fairy': U.S.A.: since the 1920's. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. Cf. mug, n., 8; perhaps imm. ex:—5. (Always the muzzle), extortion from, blackmail of, homosexuals: since ca. 1910. Edwin H. Sutherland, or rather the thief he edits, 'The muzzle began as a professional racket about 1909 or 1910 in a poolroom . . . in New York City'. Ex the lit. sense of put the muzzle on (e.g., a dog).

muzzle, v. To strike (a person) in the face: 1851, Mayhew (see second quot'n at stir): perhaps c., but prob. low s.; certainly it was no longer c. by 1864 at latest—witness H, 3rd ed. I.e., to strike in the muzzle (sense 2).—2. Hence, to throttle; to garrote: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; ob. by 1910; † by 1940.—3. Hence, to rob; properly, with violence: Australian: late C. 19–20. Baker, 1945.

muzzle, work the. See muzzel.

muzzler, 'a violent blow on the mouth' (Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811), is not c., but (orig. low) pugilistic s.—2. An inferior person: esp. at San Quentin: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; 1933, Ersine, 'A heel, yap'; slightly ob.—3. A homosexual: U.S. convicts': 1933, Victor F. Nelson (see the quot'n at daddy, 4, for the precise meaning); April 1944, American Speech, article by Otis Ferguson; extant.

muzzling cheat. A napkin: 1688, Holme (musseling . . .); † by 1780. Cf. muffling cheat, for which it is prob. a misapprehension or a misreading.

my kiddy. See kiddy, reference of 1812.

my Lord Monmouth's. Clothes bought—or the buying of clothes—in Monmouth Street: 1740, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. 4 (John Clark), 'My Livery being shabby, I went with my Share of the Booty to my Lord Monmouth's (as we call refitting ourselves in Monmouth Street)'; app. † by 1830.

my nabs. 'Mynabs, mc, myself': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'My nabs, myself; his nabs, himself.—North Country Cant.' See nabs.

myla. See miler.

myliers. Hands: ? tramps': 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, "'Bein' jest a bit too 'andy with my myliers'", glossed (on p. 414) as 'fingers'. Prob. not c., but tinkers' and gypsies': see mauley and esp. maillhas.

myll. See mill, v.

mynabs. See my nabs.

mynt. See mint.

myrmidon; usually pl. This abbr. of myrmidon(s) of the law was current ca. 1685–1850: prob. s. >, ca. 1800, familiar S.E., it may orig. have been c., as witness the earliest record, B.E., 1698: 'Myrmidons, c. the Constable's Attendants, or those whom he commands (in the King's Name) to Aid and assist him; also the Watchmen'. Ex the Myrmidons of Greek legend.

myrmionger. A newly arrived convict: Australian convicts': C. 19. In, e.g., Eric Gibb, Stirring Incidents of the Convict System in Australasia (see ike). Origin?

mystery. 'Girl who is down and out, come to town to look for a job,' John Worby, The Other Half, 1937: mostly beggars' and tramps': from ca. 1920.

N

N.G. Nitroglycerin: 1925, Leverage; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant.

N.Q.A. No questions will be asked: 1935, Hargan: rather is this gen. prison j. than convicts' c.

nab, n. 'Nab, a head,' Harman, 1566; ibid., the dialogue has the form nabe (see the quot'n at nase nab); 1610, Rowlands; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'Head; also a Coxcomb' in its lit. sense, a cock's comb; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1830. Prob. ex knab, n., 1; perhaps ex Scandinavian nabb, 'beak or face, once a synonym for face and head' (B & L).—2. Hence, the head or top of something: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'A Ferme in the Nab of his Filch' (a hole in the head of his staff); app. † by 1700.—3. Hence, a hat: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (glossary), 'A rumm Nab, A good Beaver'; 1698, B.E., 'A hat, Cap . . .', and see his comment at shappeau; 1714, Alex. Smith; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1760, Bampfylde-Moore Carew, 5th ed.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1860.—4. A coxcomb: 1698, B.E. (see nazy nab); A New Canting Dict., 1725; Grose; Matsell, 1859; app. † by 1870. Ex the 'cock's comb' nuance of sense 1.—5. A police officer: 1813 (O.E.D.); by 1845, U.S.A.: 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York; 1901, F & H; † by 1930—and, in Britain, low s. in C. 20. Ex nab, v., 2.—6. An arrest: 1860, C. Martell, The Detective's Note-book; by 1870, low s. Ex nab, v., 2.

nab, v. To take: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (by implication); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'To take, receive'; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1860, low s. Directly ex nab, v., 2, 'Of obscure origin: cf. nap, v., in same sense' (O.E.D.) and dial. nab, 'to nibble' (see nibble).—2. Hence, to seize or arrest: 1698, B.E., 'Nab'd, c. Apprehended . . . or Arrested'; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1781, R. Tomlinson, A Slang Pastoral; 1785, Grose, 'To seize, or catch unawares'; 1782, The Minor Jockey Club; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1823, Bee, 'The arrest of any one who has long been sought after'; 1827, Thomas Surr, Richmond; 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, III; 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. trans.), ch. IV; 1848, Sinks of London; 1849, J. W., Perils, Pastimes, and Pleasures (Australia); 1855, J. D. Burn, The Autobiography of a Beggar Boy; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1864, low s.—witness H, 3rd ed., except in U.S.A. (1887, Anna K. Green, 7 to 12, '“Nabbed them”, cried he'), where it may have remained c. until ca. 1910, for in 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, classifies it as c. Cf. nap, v., 1.—3. (Likewise ex sense 1.) To steal; steal from:

1698, B.E., 'I'll Nab ye, c. I'll have your Hat or Cap'; 1725, A Canting Dict.; ca. 1773, Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles), 'To nab his rattle'; 1800, The Oracle ('Fashionable Characters'); 1809, Andrewes; 1825, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, II; 1838, J. Cosgrave, The Irish Highwaymen; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by 1890 (B & L), low s.—4. To cheat: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Nab . . . To take; or cheat'; 1723, Alex. Smith, The Lives of the Bayliffs; † by 1830. Ex senses 1 and 2.—5. (Ex sense 1.) To receive or take in (stolen goods): 1890, B & L; ob.

nab cheat. 'Nabchet, a hat or cap,' Harman, 1566; 1608, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'Nab (in the canting tongue) is a head, and Nabcheate, a hat or a cap'; 1610, Rowlands, 'Nabcheate an hat'; 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'A hat, (or Nabcheate)'; 1665, R. Head (nab-cheat); 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.)—but was it not † by 1800 or 1810? Lit., a head-thing: see nab, n., 1, and cheat.

nab(-)girder. A bridle: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E. (nab-girder); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (nabgarder); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Nab girder, or nob girder, a bridle'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1901 (F & H). Ex nab, n., 1, and S.E. gird (one's loins).

nab in the hock. See hock, in, reference of 1872.

nab the bib. To weep: ca. 1800–50. (Andrewes, 1809; Sinks of London, 1848.) Usually nap the bib.

nab the bit. To receive or get a good booty: 1809, Andrewes; † by 1910.

nab the cramp. To receive sentence of death: 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. See the elements.

nab the regulars. See regulars.

nab the rust. (Of a horse) to become restive, to be refractory: 1785, Grose ('a jockey term'); ibid. (at rust), 'To be refractory . . . applied . . . figuratively to the human species'. Prob. c., orig., but possibly always low s.—2. To receive money: 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; app. † by 1900. See nab, v., 1; rust ex the colour of gold.

nab the snow. 'To steal linen left out to bleach or dry': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; ob. See snow, 1.

nab the stifles. To be hanged: mid-C. 19–20; ob. Cf. nab the cramp.

nab the stoop. To stand in the pillory: 1785, Grose; † by 1870. One is forced to stoop. nab the teize. To be privately whipped, i.e. in the prison yard, not in the public street: 1785, Grose; 1811, Lex. Bal. (. . . teaze); † by 1890.

Also nap the teize (q.v. at teize), which is recorded four years earlier.

nabb ; nabbe. See nab.

nabber. A thief: 1859, Bartlett, Americanisms, 2nd ed.; † by 1925. Ex nab, v., 3.

nabbing cheat (or chit), the. The gallows: 1720, 'The Thieves' Grammar' (Alex. Smith, The Highwaymen), cited by Baumann; 1800, The Oracle ('Fashionable Characters: A Kiddy'), 'One of the beaks told me, that instead of crossing the herring-pond at the expense of Government, I should now pay my respects to the nabbing cheat'; † by 1860. See nab, v., 1, 2, and cheat.

nabbing cull. An officer of the law; a constable: 1781, Ralph Tomlinson, A Slang Pastoral, 'Will no blood-hunting footpad, that hears me complain, | Stop the wind of that nabbing-cull, constable Payne?'; app. † by 1860. Ex nab, v., 2, and cull, n., 4.

nabbing work(s). A cheat; cheating: 1785, Sessions Papers, Feb., p. 454, 'Waters [afterwards adjudged guilty, of theft] went to the door, and said there shall be no nabbing works going forwards here, for fear of giving information to Sir Sampson'; † by 1900. Cf. nab, v., 4.

nabby. 'Smart; clever; fly,' Leverage, 1925: low s., not c. Perhaps ex nab, n., 5.

nabcheat, nabcheate, nabchit. See nab cheat.

nabe. See nab, n.

nabgarder, nabgirder. See nab girder.

nabman is a variant of nabbing cull: 1816, Daniel Terry's dramatic adaptation of Scott's Guy Mannering, II, iii, 'Old Donton has sent the nabman after him at last'; certainly † by 1900, and prob. never anything but a literarism. Ex nab, v., 2.

nabs. 'A person of either sex': 1797, Humphry Potter; 1809, George Andrewes, 'Familiar method of talking, as, how are you my nabs?'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'His-Nabs, him, or himself; a term used by way of emphasis, when speaking of a third person'; ibid., 'Mynabs, me, myself'; ibid., 'Yournabs, yourself; an emphatical term used in speaking to another person'; 1823, Bee, 'A coxcomical fellow is spoken of as "his nabs"'; 1839, J. Cosgrave, The Irish Highwaymen; 1857, A. Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1874, H., 'Nabs, self'; 1889, Baumann; † by 1910. Cf. nase nab and nibs.—2. See:— nabs on, is a thieves' phrase for the hall-mark on, esp., a snuff-box: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 320); 1901, F & H; extant. Perhaps ex nab, n., 1 and 2.

nace, n. See nase.

nace, adj. A C. 16–mid-17 variant of nazy, drunken: 1536, Copland.

nack. A horse: ca. 1860–1910. It occurs in the glossary (p. 320) of C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 1889, and in F & H, 1901. A perversion of the coll. nag, or perhaps a mere misprint for S.E. hack.

nader. 'Naider. Nothing; can't have it' (i.e., a potential c.p.); 1859, Matsell; † by 1915. Was this orig. an astronomical underworlder's pun on S.E. nadir?

nads. 'Napper, or Nads, a sheepstealer': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open. But the term lies under the gravest suspicion: there is some confusion with napper of naps, q.v.

nag(-)drag. A prison sentence of three months: since ca. 1885: 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; † by 1940. A rhyming reduplication of drag, n., 6.

naider. See nader.

nail, n. 'A person of an over-reaching, imposing disposition, is called a nail, a dead nail, a nailing rascal, a rank needle, or a needle pointer': 1812, J. H. Vaux: the nail synonyms may orig. have been c., but there seems to be little doubt that they were s. by 1820 at the latest; the needle synonyms were almost certainly s.—In 1818, The London Guide defines a dead nail as 'one who cheats, preserving appearances'. Cf. nail, v., 2 and 5, and needle-point.—2. Hence, 'a cheat, who runs into debt without intending to pay': 1823, Bee; prob. c., but perhaps only low s.—3. The sense 'the head', recorded by Leverage, 1925, may possibly have been U.S. c. of C. 20. Ex sense 7 of the v.—4. Hypodermic syringe: drug addicts': since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. Derogatory.

nail, v. To apprehend, to arrest: 1732, trial of Thomas Beck (in John Villette, The Annals of Newgate, 1776), after Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, pub. in 1735, 'He told me himself, that Peter [Buck] was nailed in his company'; 1823, Bee, 'The man is nailed who is laid hands upon'; 1827, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, III; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1851, Mayhew; 1859, H; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed), low s. By 1859, American (Matsell); and it seems to have remained c. in North America until ca. 1940; certainly it appears in Jackson & Hellyer, 1914, in Godfrey Irwin, 1931, and in Ersine, 1933. Ex the idea of nailing (something) down in order to make it secure.—2. The sense 'to nail down' (fix, secure) is not c., but s. (Grose).—3. To seize, take hold of, take possession of: 1732, trial of Thomas Beck, in Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, pub. in 1735, 'In general, to take possession of any Thing'; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum (at panny), 'The pigs frisked my panney, and nailed my screws; the officers searched my house, and seized my picklock keys'; 1831, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, VIII; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1890, low s.—witness B & L.—4. Hence, to rob, to steal: 1732, trial of Thomas Beck, Select Trials, pub. in 1735, 'To take away or steal Money or Goods'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'I nail'd him for (or of) his reader, I robbed him of his pocket-book; I nail'd the swell's montra in the push . . .'; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Triumph', 'To nail the ticker or to mill the cly'; 1828, Sessions Papers; 1839, Brandon (nailing); 1851, Mayhew; 1857, Snowden; by 1864, low s.—witness H, 3rd ed.—in England; in U.S.A., c. until ca. 1930 or perhaps even later; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'The best tool [pickpocket] that ever nailed a leather'; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 'Benny "nailed two pokes"'; in C. 20, c. in Canada (anon. letter, June 8, 1946).—5. To cheat (a person): 1812, J. H. Vaux; not certainly c., for it seems to have been s. in 1819 (O.E.D.).—6. To catch (a train or other conveyance): U.S. tramps': 1907, Jack London, The Road, in reference to at least ten years earlier, 'We . . . tried to "nail" the same freight. But he was ditched, and I rode her out alone'; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Nail a Rattler.—To board a fast train once it has got away'; extant. Ex sense 3.—7. 'To comprehend; to conceive; to discover,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: C. 20. Ex sense 2.—8. To murder: U.S.A.: 1934, Rose; extant. Prob. by intensification of either 1 or, more prob., 3.

nail, gilt. See gilt nail.

nail a rattler, 'to catch a train': tramps': C. 20. It occurs in the works of such writers as Jack London, Jim Tully, Glen Mullin. There are variants, such as 'nail a blind' in Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble, 1936. See nail, v., 3 and 6, and rattler, 3.

nail a strike. To steal a watch: 1909, Ware. The only record of strike in the sense 'a watch'. Obviously suggested by those watches which do strike the hour.

nail work. 'Detective work (esp. cleverly done)', Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. nail, v., 1, 2, 7.

nailed. 'Pinned, as a pocket,' Ersine, 1933; extant. Ex nail, v., 2.

nailer, 'a policeman', 'a detective': 1863, Tom Taylor, The Ticket-of-Leave Man: not c., but low s. Ex nail, v., 1.—2. A nailer on is a prejudice against: 1887, Baumann; by ea. 1900, low s. Very hard and sharp towards.

nailling is the vbl n. of nail, v.

nakodo. A go-between: 1925, Leverage; extant. Japanese?

nale may be old Scottish e. for 'an ale-house', as Jamieson notes in his Dictionary, 1808.

namas. See the second 1859 reference in nammous.

name, v. (Of a jury) to bring (the accused) in guilty; to find (the accused) guilty: 1859, Matsell, at pattered, 'His godfathers named him' . . . the jury convicted him'; ob. I.e., to name as guilty; or, to name the crime of (the accused).

nammous or namous or nammus; oee., nomm(o)us; rarely, namase. To depart, betake oneself off, make off, run away: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'None of us knowed then . . . as Polly was the cause . . . , till it was blown . . . by some of the coves. Vell, she nammused, as you may guess'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I (namous and nommus); 1859, H (namus and namous); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.)—as namas; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was low s. Possibly a perversion of Sp. vamos, 'let us be off'—perhaps influenced by Ger. nehmen, to take (cf. nim).—2. Hence, nammus!, look out!, beware: from ea. 1860: B & L, 1890, by which date it was also costermongers' s.

nan. A maidservant: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe, Street Robberies consider'd, 'A Maid of the House'; † by 1830. I.e., Nan, the pet-form of Nancy.

nance. A 'sissy' or 'nancy', i.e. an effeminate man: 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom. Perhaps e. for a few years (say 1910–25), but prob. always s.—orig., low s. Hence, nance walk, a 'girlish' walk in a male. Short for English s. nancy.

Nancy; hence, nancy. The posteriors: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1887 (Baumann). By personification: cf. s. fanny.—2. In the derivative (?) sense 'an effeminate man; esp. a passive homosexual', it has always been s. in England; prob. always in U.S.A. also, although No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, classifies it as American e. Cf. molly, 1.

Nancy Prance (or n—p—). A dance: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming: cf. jig and prance and kick and prance.

nanny house. A bawdy-house: 1698, B.E.; Grose; † by 1870. Though dictionaryed by several knowledgeable persons as indubitable e., it is doubtful whether it ever was c.: and certainly neither B.E. nor Grose claims it as such. Lit., a house containing female goats.

nanny(-)shop. A brothel: prob. c. until ea. 1870, then low s.: 1859, H. The successor to nanny house, q.v. for semantics: shop because there one buys the nannies.

nantee or nanty; oee., nunt (or -tee) or even nenty (P. H. Emerson, 1893). Not any; none; often elliptically for 'I have none', 'I haven't any': not c., but parlyaree. The same applies to nantie palaver!, 'stop talking!', 'hold your tongue!'—later corrupted to nantee panarly (B & L, 1890) and in C. 20 usually shortened to nantee! or nanty!, as in Philip Allingham, Cheappack, 1934, 'Nanty!—Cave! (Beware).' Note that nantee dinarly = (I have) no money. It. niente, 'nothing'.

nap, n. 'A Clap, or Pox'; i.e. gonorrhœa or syphilis: 1698, B.E.; 1925, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1860. Cf. nap it.—2. An arrest: 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; 1741 (see knap, n., 2); † by 1820. Ex nap, v., 2.—3. 'Nap, or napper, a hat . . . Old Cant': 1864, H, 3rd ed. Possibly, but what is his evidence—beyond saying, 'From nab, a hat, cap, or head'? In Sessions Papers, 8th session, 1786, however, there occurs on p. 1193 the passage, 'They demanded my napp, or napper, I will not be sure which, by which I concluded they meant my hat': so prob. Hotten is right.

nap, v. 'By Cheating with the dice to secure one Chance,' B.E., 1698: anticipated in napping, this vbl n. being found earlier than the v. in 1674, Cotton, The Compleat Gamester, where he writes thus of napping, 'Knapping, that is when you strike a Die dead that it shall not stir, this is best done within the Tables; where note there is no securing but of one Dye, although there are some who boast of securing both'; 1676, Coles, 'Nap, c. to cheat at Dice'; 1714, T. Lucas (knapping); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890. Cf. Scandinavian napp, 'to catch; to bite', and nab, v., 1.—2. Hence (?), to catch or seize; to arrest: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, 'But if the cully nap us | and the Lurres from us take, | O then they rub us to the Whitt | And it is hardly worth a Make'; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1725 (see ounce); 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Ready for the Word nap it'; 1797, Potter; by ea. 1850, it had been superseded by nab.—3. Hence, to take illicitly, to steal: 1698, B.E., 'Nap the Wiper, c. to Steal the Handkerchief'; repeated in A Canting Dict., 1725; 1730, Anon., A History of Executions; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; 1821, D. Haggart (knap); 1827, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1826–33, III; 1842, P. Egan, Captain Macheath; by 1864, low s.—witness H, 3rd ed.—except in nap the regulars.—4. See nap it and nap it at the nask. Here the sense is 'catch it', receive it, take it.—5. Often simply: to receive: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter, 'Nap a couple of neds. To get two guineas'; 1859, H; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was low s.—except in nap the teize.—6. See the phrases.

nap a blinder. See blinder.

nap a jacob. See knap a jacob . . .

nap a scald. See scald.

nap a winder. To be convicted to penal servitude, esp. transportation as a convict: 1811 (see winder); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Some rubbed to whit had napped a blinder'; † by 1900. See the elements.

nap it. To contract a venereal disease: 1698, B.E., 'You have Napt it, c. You are Clapt, Sir'—repeated, 1725, in A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1860. A specialized phrase, direct ex nap, v., 2.

nap it at the nask. To be flogged in prison: 1698, B.E. (at nask), 'He Napt it at the Nask, c. he was Lasht at Bridewell'; app. † by 1820. Cf. nap, v., 2 and 4, and nap the flog.

nap one's or the bib. To weep: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1797, Potter; by 1794, in use in U.S.A. (Henry Tufts, 1807); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'The mollisher nap'd her bib'; 1821, J. Burrowes; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed), low s. Lit., to take one's bib (to wipe one's eyes).

nap the bit. See bit, nap the.

nap the flog. To be whipt, as a (prison) punishment: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1830. Cf. nap it at the nask.

nap the kid. See kid, nap the.

nap the regulars. See regulars.

nap the stoop. See stoop, nap the.

nap the suck. See suck, nap the.

nap the teaze or teize. See teize, nap the.

nape. See napper of naps, reference of 1707.

naper. Incorrect for napper.

napkin-snatching. A synonym of fogle-hunting, the art and practice of stealing handkerchiefs by pickpocketry: 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1901 (F & H). Napkin: prob. a supposed disguising of 'handkerchief'.

napp, n. See napper of naps, quot'n of 1698. For the v., see nap.

napper. 'A Cheat, or Thief,' B.E., 1698: 1653, A Total Rout of . . . Nappers, Mobs, and Spanners (O.E.D.); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1848, Sinks of London ('a sheepstealer'); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1901 (F & H). Ex nap, v., 3.—2. A sheep: 1741 (see napper's poll); 1785, Grose; app. † by 1850. Earlier (and ? more gen.) knapper. A pun on the nap of wool.—3. (The) head: 1724, trials of the New-Minters, in Select Trials, 1734; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1821, J. Burrowes; by ca. 1850 it was s. Origin?—4. A hat: 1786, Sessions Papers, 8th session, p. 1193; † by 1860. Prob. ex sense 3.

napper, stoop(-). See stoop-napper.

napper of bleating cheats. A sheep-stealer: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, where it is spelt . . . blaring (for blating or bleating) cheats.

napper of nappers. 'Knapper of Knappers . . . A sheep-stealer,' R. Head, 1665, possibly in error for the next; † by 1830. See napper, 1 and 2.

napper of naps. A sheep-stealer: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E. (. . . napps); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (napper of napes); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1870, as in All the Year Round, March 5, 1870, 'Byegone Cant' (naper . . .). See the elements.

napper of naves is a misprint for the preceding: 1735, ed. of The Triumph of Wit.

napper's poll. A sheep's head: 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; † by 1850. See napper, 2.

napping. The vbl. n. of the gaming sense of nap, v.: 1675, Cotton, The Compleat Gamester, 'By Topping, Knapping, and foul play some win'; 1714, T. Lucas, Memoirs of Gamesters.

napping bull. A bailiff: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; † by 1860. Napping comes ex nap, v., 2; bull ex the fierceness of that animal. This term supplies an origin for the American bull, policeman.

napping cove. A constable; a thief-taker: 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'The Hue and Cry is belated . . . The Napping-Cove is hoodwink'd.' See nabbing cull.

napping jigger. See knapping jigger.

nappy, adj. See beany.

nappy ale, 'strong ale', is so far from being c. that it is usually classified as S.E.; possibly it was, at first, coll.

narcotic bull or narcotic copper. A Federal narcotic agent: since ca. 1920. BVB. Lit., a narcotic policeman.

NARCOTICS ZIPH, i.e. the 'secret language' of drug-traffickers. BVB, 1942, cites the following examples: mezonny (? mizonny: 'm[iz]oney'), which 'signifies that the addict is about to make connection with a peddler'; mizake the mizan; rizolin (? 'r[iz]oll in'), 'signifying that an order has been placed for the addict'—like mezonny, it is a code word; and sizendizup, which 'signifies that the coast is clear and the delivery can be made', the word (cf. mizake . . .) sizendizup being merely 's[iz]end [iz]up' (as an instruction, an order); iz is inserted after the initial consonant and, if a word begins with a vowel, before the initial vowel. See Ziph and esp. Partridge, Slang.

nard is an error for sense 2 of:—

nark, n. As 'a disagreeable and/or uncharitable person', it is s., orig. low, rather than c. (Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, 1851, at I, 315: knark.) Its origin is prob. the Fr. narquois, sly, slyly cunning.—2. Hence, 'a person who obtains information under seal of confidence, and afterwards breaks faith': 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 2nd ed., citing The Times, April 2, 1859; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; † by 1880.—3. Hence, 'One who gets his living by laying traps for policemen, etc.': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; app. † in this sense by 1890.—4. (Also ex sense 2.) 'A common informer': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; Sept. 19, 1866, Sessions Papers; 1874, H, 'Now . . . applied to the lowest class of informers'; Oct. 1879, 'Auto-biography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'He had a nark (a policeman's spy) with him'; 1887, W. E. Henley; Jan. 31, 1888, Sessions Papers; 1890, B & L; 1894, The Reminiscences of Chief-Inspector Littlechild (see copper's nark); 1886, A. Morrison; 1900, G. R. Sims, In London's Heart; 1901, F & H; 1906, G. R. Sims, Mysteries of Modern London; 1910, Charles E. B. Russell, Young Gaol-Birds; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; 1923, M. Garahan; 1926, N. Lucas, London and Its Criminals; Oct. 1928, Word-Lore; June 14, 1930, Flynn's; 1931, Brown; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1933, George Dilnot, The Real Detective; 1935, The Garda Review; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; by 1937, low s. Current in South Africa since ca. 1890: J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946.—5. Hence, any person set to watch another: 1885, Arthur Griffiths, Fast and Loose, "“ Luckily I put on the ‘nark’ (watch) ””; 1930, George Smithson (of a prison ‘nark’ or ‘copper’); extant.—6. (Hence ?) a detective: 1888, G. R. Sims, ‘A Plank Bed Ballad’; 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747 (p. 65); 1925, Leverage (prob. merely repeating); extant.—7. Among professional beggars, a ‘nark’ is one who, not a true beggar, does odd jobs or even has a small income or pension, yet avails himself of the ‘common lodging-houses’ or of the casual wards and persists in doing so, to the inevitable detriment of the genuine beggars, and who, as likely as not, acts as a tell-tale for the lodging-house keeper: from ca. 1890. See esp. the chapter entitled ‘Narks’ in W. H. Davies’s Beggars, 1909. Cf. senses 2, 4, 5.

nark, v. ‘To watch, or look after; “nark the titter”, watch the girl’: 1859, H; 1890, B & L, ‘To watch, observe, look after or into closely’; 1901, F & H; 1909, Ware; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.), who may be, and prob. is, merely repeating B & L; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker’s Kitchen, ‘Nark it = look out!’; 1943, Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House (ditto); extant. Possibly a disguising of S.E. ‘mark (down) a person’; or direct ex nark, n., 2, 3, 4. But cf. Dutch narruken, ‘to follow about; to spy’.—2. (Hence, or ex nark, n.) To be a police spy; to lay information with the police (about): 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago (see narking dues); ibid., ““ Ole Weech narked ye? ””; 1902, A. Morrison, The Hole in the Wall; 1906, G. R. Sims, Mysteries of Modern London; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1938, H. U. Tristram, Men in Cages, ‘I asked him who was the kind friend who had “narked” on me’; 1940, Mark Benney, The Big Wheel, ‘He’s not the narking type’—but, by this date, it was low s.

narking dues is a phrase used when someone has been, or is, laying information with the police: 1896, Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago, ‘Presently he said: “I bin put away this time . . .”’—“Wot?” answered Bill, “narkin’ dues is it?”—Josh nodded.—“’Oo done it then? ’Oo narked?”’; by 1940, ob.

narl(e). See gnarl, flash the, and gnarl, v.

narp. A shirt: 1839, Brandon, who classifies it as Scottish; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxix, ‘Narps—calico shirts’; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1901, F & H (‘Scots’); ob. Origin? Neither a Shelta nor a Romany word.

nary red. ‘Out of pocket; “broke” of ready funds’: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1890, s. I.e. nary a (not any) red cent.

nase, adj. (as in nase nab), is a mere spelling variant—pronounced as a dissyllable—of nazy, q.v. E.g., in Harman, 1566; Copland, 1536, spells it nace (‘With bowsey Cove maund Nace’).

nase nab. Lit., a drunken head, i.e. a drunkard: 1566, Harman, ‘Now I se that good drinke makes a dronken heade’; 1688, Holme, ‘Nase Nabs, Red Noses, Drunkards’; by 1700, it has merged with nazy nab, q.v. See nase.

nash. ‘To go away from, or quit, any place or company; speaking of a person who is gone, they say, he is nash’d, or Mr Nash is concerned’: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee, ‘Nashed—gone, or run away’; 1823, Egan’s Grose, plagiarizing Vaux; ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack (only Mr Nash); 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1887 (Baumann). ‘Gypsy, nasher, to run away, to lose, . . . forget, spoil, injure,’ B & L.

Nash, Mr. See nash.

nashed, be. See nash.

nasie. See nazy.

nask; naskin. ‘Naskin, c. a jail or Bridewell,’ Coles, 1676; 1686, Higden (id.); 1698, B.E., ‘Nask, c. or Naskin, c. A Prison or Bridewell. The old Nask, c. the City Bridewell. The New Nask, c. Clerkenwell Bridewell. Tuttle Nask, c. the Bridewel in Tuttle-Fields’; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (naskin); 1725, A New Canting Dict., plagiarizing B.E.; as does Grose, 1785; 1797, Potter (nask); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.: nask); † by 1870. Nask is short for naskin, but what is the origin of the latter? Perhaps the word = nask, Scots for ‘a withe’ + ken, ‘a place’; but it may be a perversion of the Gypsy word that has given us stir.

nass is a variant of the preceding; app. only in Old Nass (C. Hitching, 1718), which may have been a mere misprint by Hitching’s printer.

nasty man. That member of a gang of garroters who performs the actual garrotting: Jan. 1863, The Cornhill Magazine; 1863, Trevelyan, The Competition Wallah, ‘The fell embraces of “the nasty man”’ (O.E.D.); 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747, where (p. 422) it is applied to the strong-arm man in a gang of burglars and also (p. 419) to the heavy-work assistant to a cracksman; 1901, F & H; ob. He does the nasty work.

nasy. See nazy.

Nat Wills. An old suit: tramps’: May 23, 1937, John Chapman, in The (N.Y.) Sunday News; extant. Ex the name of a tailor?

native. ‘Low life as I know it in America is composed of three distinct classes, and they are called, in outcasts’ slang, the “Kids”, the “Natives”, and the “Old Bucks”. The Kids, as their name suggests, are boys and girls, the Natives are the middle-aged outcasts, and the Old Bucks are the superannuated,’ Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (p. 68); rather ob.

natty, ‘smartly dressed’, seems to have, orig., been c.: 1785 (see natty lad); 1789, G. Parker, Life’s Painter, ‘Like natty shining kiddies’; by 1820, it was, I think, low s., despite Matsell’s natty kids. A perversion of S.E. neat.

natty lad; usually pl. ‘Natty lads, young thieves or pickpockets’: 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1847, Halliwell; by 1870, †. Ex tendency to dress himself smartly (see natty).

natural, n. A mistress; a whore: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (see quot’n at blowen); 1698, B.E., ‘A Mistress, a Wench’—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. Either because, in C. 17–18, it was natural for a man to have one or because she satisfies a natural need in man.—2. A child: 1769 (therefore existing in 1791), Grose, 3rd ed.; app. † by 1890. A shortening of and derivation from S.E. natural child, a bastard.—3. A winning throw at dice: U.S. gamblers’ c. until ca. 1920; then s. IA, 1931.—4. Hence, ‘a seven-year rap’ (Ersine, 1933): U.S. convicts’: since ca. 1925.—5. An exceptionally smart racketeer: U.S.A.: 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex the s. sense ‘a person or thing unusually good—or superior to almost anyone or anything else’.

natural, adj. Liberal, generous: 1859, Matsell, "The bloke is very natural," the fellow is very liberal'; † by 1910. Men unspoilt by civilization tend to be generous.

natural, in the. 'Billy appeared in the natural (naked)': Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; ob. Cf. in puris naturalibus and s. in his birthday suit.

natural crip. A cripple not feigning his disability or deformity: C. 20: 1931, IA. The opposite of phony crip (q.v. at crip).

naturallifer, 'a prisoner in jail on a life-sentence' (Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing, 1928), is less c. than gen. prison s. 'For the term of his natural life.'

naughty!, it's. It's dangerous: an underworld c.p.: since ca. 1920; by 1942, ob.

navy. Collective for 'butts of cigars and cigarettes': beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1918. Stiff, 1931. Perhaps introduced by a British beggar, ex Wills's famous pipe-tobacco, 'Navy Cut'—and their 'Capstan' cigarettes.

Navy Office, the. The Fleet Prison: 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1901 (F & H). For semantics, see Commander of the Fleet.

naze. See nase.

nazie. See:—

nazy. 'Nasie, c. drunken,' Coles, 1676; 1698, B.E., 'Nazie, c. Drunken'; 1707, J. Shirley (nazzy); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (nazy); 1859, Matsell; † by 1890 (B & L). Perhaps ex Fr. niais, 'silly': the orig. meaning may have been 'silly through drink', or, as B & L propose, ex Ger. nass, 'wet'.

nazy cove. In 1698, B.E. thus: 'Nazie-cove, c. a Drunkard'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (nazzy cove); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890 (B & L). See nazy.

nazy mort. 'A drunken . . . harlot,' Grose, 1785; but the term prob. arose contemporaneously with nazy cove; † by ca. 1840. See nazy and mort.

nazy nab. 'Nazy-nabs, c. Drunken coxcombs,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890 (B & L). Lit., drunken head: see nazy.

nazzy; nazzy cove. See nazy; nazy cove.

ne-dash. See nedash.

near(-)and(-)far. A bar (for drinks); a motor-car: Pacific Coast: resp. C. 20 and since ca. 1905. Chicago May, 1928; Convict, 1934. Rhyming.

neb, 'a person's mouth', was never c.; at the lowest, coll. Ex nab, 'a bird's beak'.

necessary, the. Counterfeit coinage(?): counterfeiters' 1779, Sessions Papers, mayoralty of the Rt Hon. Samuel Plumbe, No. VI, Part iii, trial of Richard Harper; app. † by 1860. Cf. s. the necessary, 'money'.

neck, n. The sense 'a hanging' (cf. sense 1 of the v.) was prob. never c., but low s.—2. Betrayal of a companion, associate, accomplice: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 3 of:—

neck, v., 'to hang': never c.—2. To peer; to watch, to scrutinize: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To stare at or watch closely'; by 1935, low s. Ex rubberneck.—3. 'To betray a pal,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant. Cf. necker, 2, q.v.

neck-stamper. A pot-boy: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'The Pot-Boy at a Tavern or Ale-house'— repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'The boy who collects the pots belonging to an ale-house, sent out with beer to private houses'; † by 1840. Perhaps because sometimes he carried them strung from his neck—and stamped about.

D.O.U.

neck verse, despite several lexicographers, is S.E., not c. The imputation of c. arose from its association with condemned criminals.

neck weed, 'hemp' (Grose, 1788), is not c., but s.—either low or journalistic s.

necker. The sense, 'a hangman' (Leverage, 1925) may have been c.—but prob. low s.—2. A betrayer; an informer on friend or accomplice: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. s. rubber-neck(er), 'unduly inquisitive person'.

necking. A scrutiny, an impertinent staring: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1935, low s. Cf. sense 2 of prec.

necklace. As 'a hangman's noose', it is American low s., rather than c., of C. 20. Leverage, 1925.—2. A garrotter: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. His arms form, as it were, a necklace about the victim's neck.

necktie on, put a. To hang (a person); 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 'Don't get nervous with that gat of yours, or they'll put a necktie on you'; extant. Cynically euphemistic.

necktie party. A lynching: 1891, James Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; by 1900, s. (Cf. hempen cravat.) An American s. synonym is necktie sociable.—2. A hanging, an execution: convicts': C. 20. In, e.g., Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941.

ned. A guinea piece: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Ringing of Neds and Sixes. Putting off bad Guineas and Thirty-six shilling Pieces'; ibid., 'Tip him a Nedd; give him a Guinea'; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; app. † by 1840, except historically. By personification.—2. Hence, a sovereign: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxviii, 'Swot promised us ten neds each'; † by 1900.—3. Hence, 'a ten-dollar gold piece': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1882, James D. McCabe, New York; 1901, F & H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

nedash. 'Ne-dash, nothing': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, 'Of no use. Nothing'; 1831, W. T. Moncrieff, Van Diemen's Land; † by 1901 (F & H). Ex Romany nastis, nastissa, nestis, 'I (etc.) cannot'. Perhaps cf. ultimately L. nequeo.

nedd. See ned, 1, second quot'n.

Neddie. See sense 2 (reference of 1879) in:—

neddy. A guinea; in pl., often money, cash: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'With spunk let's post our neddies'; 1792, The Minor Jockey Club; app. † by 1840. A diminutive of ned.—2. A life-preserver: 1845, in No. 747 (pub. in 1893—p. 423); 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, "I gave him a blow on the I suppose . . . with this here neddy"; 1858, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, xx; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A slung-shot'; 1863, Tom Taylor, The Ticket-of-Leave Man; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, where it is spelt Neddie; 1884, J. McGovan, Traced and Tracked; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1894, H. A. White (Australia); 1896, A. Morrison; 1901, F & H; very ob. By euphemistic personification.

needle, n., as a synonym for nail, n. (q.v.), is not

c., but s.—2. 'The doctor came and gave him the "needle"—a hypodermic injection,' Josiah Flynt, The Rise of Ruderick Clowd; by 1910, s. Short for hypodermic needle.—3. Hence, a morphine-user: U.S. drug traffic: 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant.—4. A knife: 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; extant. Humorous; proleptic ex the pricking sensation caused by a stab.

needle, v. To haggle with (a person) and cheat him if possible, even in the most trifling article: 1812, J. H. Vaux: possibly c. for a few years, but prob. s. Cf. needle-point.—2. To give (a person) a hypodermic injection; from ca. 1922, to dope liquor with, e.g., ether: U.S.A.: 1903, Josiah Flynt, The Rise of Ruderick Clowd, 'They were again knocked on the head and "needled"': 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'Needled—Charged with dope'; 1930, Burke; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; by 1936, s. Ex needle, n., 2.—3. 'To puncture the tires of an automobile or a taxi cab. This latter is common practice when two factions are fighting for the control of a lucrative cab-stand, and is easily and almost silently done, with an ice pick,' IA, 1931; extant.—4. To worry, heckle (someone): U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; by 1940, s. needle, break the. See break . . .

needle, on the. Engaged in a bout of, addicted to, drug-taking by injection: drug addicts': since ca. 1910. Otis Ferguson in American Speech, April 1944. See needle, n., 2; often contrasted with in the smoke.

needle beer, 'near beer shot with alki or ether' (A. E. Ullman, 'Beggarmen': Flynn's, April 14, 1928), is not c., but s. > coll. Cf. spiked, 2.

needle habit, the. 'The habit of taking narcotics hypodermically,' BVB: drug traffic: C. 20: by 1930, police j. and journalistic coll. Contrast mouth habit and cf. :—

needle jabber. See :—

needle man. 'So surely was Howard a needle man—that is, a hopeless drug addict,' Barclay Northcote in Flynn's, July 11, 1925; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant. Ex needle, n., 2. Properly one who prefers injections: BVB cites variants needle jabber—nipper—pusher.

needle-point. A sharper: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; app. † by 1840. The later needle-pointer (see nail, n.) is s. Because as sharp as the point of a needle.

needle pusher. See needle man.

needle-shy, 'with a phobia against the hypodermic needle' (BVB), is coll.—not c.

needle trouble. 'Mechanical difficulty in making an injection,' BVB: since ca. 1910. Ex needle, n., 2.

needle yen. 'The desire for narcotics taken hypodermically,' BVB: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. See yen and cf. needle habit.

needled. See needle, v., 2, ref. 1928.

needles, take. To receive treatment for syphilis: convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex application of curative serum, etc., by means of a 'needle'.

needles, the. A mixture of nerves and muscular twitchings induced by abstinence from cocaine: since ca. 1918: 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; extant. Cf. English s. needle, 'bad feeling; bitter rivalry'—esp. get the needle, 'to become annoyed'.—2. 'A common hallucination with heroin is that of having an electric current switched through the body, giving "the needles",' Ferdinand needy. "'Brighton is a town where there is a great many furnished cribs, let to needys (nightly lodgers)'"': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1859, H, 'A nightly lodger, or tramp'; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed (applied to tramps); 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo; app. † by 1910. Ex 'needy person'.—2. Hence, a beggar: 1909, W. H. Davies, Beggars, 'The other said: "That kennel never yet failed a needy"'': extant.

Tuohy, Inside Dope, 1934: British and American drug addicts': since ca. 1920.

needy mizzler. 'A poor ragged object of either sex; a shabby-looking person': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'Though a needy mizzler myself, I likes to see a cove vot's vel dressed'; 1859, H, 'A shabby person'; 1860, H, 2nd ed., 'A tramp who runs away without paying for his lodging'; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1901, F & H; ob. See needy and mizzler.—2. Hence, a tramp: 1890, B & L; † by 1920.

needy(-)mizzling, n. Being vocationally a 'needy mizzler': prob. from ca. 1830: 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, 'Well, his game is "needy-mizzling". He'll go out without a shirt, perhaps, and beg one from house to house' and sells what he gets; 1901, F & H; ob. See the elements.

negress. A 'parcel wrapped in black oil-skin': 1845, anon. translator of E. Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, ch. xxix; † by 1900. Humorous? Ex the colour.

neman, n. 'Stealing': 1859, Matsell; 1901, F & H; † by 1910. A corruption of nimming: or is it a mere mishearing?

nentee or nenti or nenity. See nantee.

Neptune's daughter. Water: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20; ob. M & B, 1944. Rhyming: cf. mother and daughter.

nerving is a term in horse-copers' c.: 1893 (see powdering). It has some such meaning as 'strengthening; giving a factitious appearance of strength or liveliness'.

nest; usually pl., nests. A variety: certainly itinerant vendors' s., and only possibly c.: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 217; 1901, F & H; † by 1930. Ex the variety of objects in, e.g., a jackdaw's nest.

nethers. Money for one's lodging: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ibid. (also p. 10), "'Nethers", or lodgings'; ob. Ex Shelta nedas, 'to lodge'.

nethers, boss of the. See boss of the nethers.

nethers ken. A lodging house: tramps': 1886, W. Newton; ob. See nethers and ken.

nettled, ppl. adj. Diseased, esp. venereally: 1859, Matsell; ob. Cf. Eng. s. stung.

neves stretch. Seven years' imprisonment: since ca. 1850. See stretch, n., 4; neves is back s. for seven.

neves to fere. Odds of 7 to 4: racecourse crooks' and gangsters': C. 20. Partridge, 1937. Whereas neves is 'seven' back-slanged, fere is Ger. vier.

nevis stretch is incorrect for neves stretch.

new chopper. 'A "New Chopper", or recruit "On the Mooch" (on tramp)': tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob. He chops wood to merit a meal.

new chum. A new prisoner: convicts': 1903,

Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow; extant. A special application of the ordinary sense, 'a newcomer'. Cf. :—

New College. The Royal Exchange: ca. 1695–1830. A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose. In opp. to College, q.v. at College, the.

new drop, the. Not c., but either s. > S.E. or always S.E., this is the term applied to that method of hanging which is described at fall of the leaf. The derivative sense, 'Newgate Prison' (P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 1821), is merely allusive—and very rare.

new fish. A new prisoner: convicts': 1893, Langdon W. Moore. His Own Story, 'We found forty "new fish" prisoners when we arrived at the old prison'; ob. See fish, n., 2.

new jice. A beginner: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. A corruption of new dice, connoting a venture?

new knock, the. A C. 20 variant of new drop. Edgar Wallace, The Squeaker, 1927.

new light. 'New coin; new money': 1859, Matsell; 1901, F & H; ob. Prob. with pun on the religious new light, fresh inspiration.

New Nask, the. See nask, quot'n of 1698.

New South. Mouth, esp. if big: Pacific States: C. 20. M & B, 1944; Baker, 1945. Presumably coined by Australian crooks in the U.S.A., for New South is an Australian colloquialism for New South Wales.

new stuff. An occ. synonym of fresh stuff. Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940.

Newgate, the old prison for the City of London, occurs in numerous c. and s. and other allusive phrases, with the connotation of 'gaol', hence 'criminal' (n. and adj.). Dating—in its original form—from the time of King John, it was pulled down ca. 1885. Cf., however, the note at Tyburn.

Newgate, in the. In the inside vest pocket: pickpockets': C. 20. Critchell Rimington, The Bon Voyage Books, 1931. Money placed there is tolerably safe—out of the way; cf. prec. entry.

Newgate bird, 'a thief or sharper, frequently caged in Newgate' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), is not c., but s.

Newgate Calendar is a variant of Newgate frill: 1878, James McGovan, Brought to Bay—but prob. in use already in the 1860's. Cf. Newgate.

Newgate collar is a variant of the next. It is recorded in F & H, 1901, but prob. it was never c.

Newgate frill or fringe. 'The collar of beard worn under the chin; so called from its occupying the position of the rope when Jack Ketch operates. Another name for it is a Tyburn collar': 1860, H, 2nd ed. (both); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen (both); 1890, B & L (the latter); † by 1910.

Newgate frisk is a variant of the next: 1901, F & H; low s.

Newgate hornpipe, 'a hanging': not c., but low s.: 1829, Maginn; 1890, B & L.

Newgate knocker. 'The lock of hair which costermongers and thieves usually twist back towards the ear. The shape is supposed to resemble the knocker on the prisoners' door at Newgate—a resemblance that would appear to carry a rather unpleasant suggestion to the wearer': 1859, H; 1860, H, 2nd ed., 'Sometimes termed a cobbler's knot, or cow-lick'; 1873, J. Greenwood, In Strange Company; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen, where it is implied that the term had > also costers' s.

Newgate nightingale is not c., but an early synonym of 'Newgate gaol-bird'. Its occurrence in Robert Copland's poem, The hye Way to the Spyttell hous, 1536, suggests that quire bird was already in existence.

Newgate ring, 'moustache and lower beard worn as one, the side whiskers being shaved off' (B & L, 1890), is not c., but low s. Contrast Newgate frill.

Newgate seize me! Among criminals, a solemn and binding oath: 1823, Bee; by 1890, †. I.e., may I be sent to Newgate prison (if I do so-and-so)!

Newgate solicitor, 'a pettyfogging and roguish attorney, who attends the gaols to assist villains in evading justice' (Grose), is not c., but s.

newman. Theft, thieving: 1929–31, Kernôt. App. a noun-use of Ger. nehmen, or Dutch nemen, 'to take'.

Newmans; Numans. 'Numans Newgate market,' Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610; 1811 (see the next three entries); 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham, "'A square crib, indeed! aye, square as Mr. Newman's courtyard—ding boys on three sides, and the crap on the fourth!'"'; † by 1860. I.e., 'Newgate' + the c. suffix mans.

Newman's hotel. Newgate Prison: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; app. † by 1860. An elaboration of Newmans.

Newman's lift. The gallows: 1811, Lex. Bal.; app. † by 1860. See Newmans.

Newman's tea-gardens. Newgate Prison: 1811, Lex. Bal.; app. † by 1860. See Newmans.

news of the day (or hyphenated). A public-house: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, p. 321, 'A public-house. . . A news-of-the-day, churchwarden, bellringer'; very ob. Ex that exchange of news (and gossip) which characterizes a public-house.

newspaper. A thirty-days jail sentence: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. The time it takes an illiterate to read one; cf. magazine.

next, 'aware, alert; informed', as in put (a person) next to (something), 'to inform him about it or warn him', is not c., but s.—orig., low s. The word occurs frequently in Josiah Flynt's writings.

Niagara Falls. Balls (any sort); (theatre) stalls: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

nib, n., 'the human mouth', is a variant of neb and is not c., except perhaps in U.S.A.—witness B & L, 1890.—2. 'A gentleman or person of the higher order': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 85; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'A rank nib . . . A real gentleman'; by 1887 it was † (Baumann); the low s. nibs having superseded it, though with the modified sense, 'person' (his nibs = he). Cf. s. nob, 'an important person', and nabs.

nib, v. A variant of nip, mostly in the phrase nib a bung, to cut a purse: 1659, Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, 'Before they nib a bung they jog the pocket, either to know whether there be any money there, or to jumble it all into one corner thereof'; app. † by 1700.—2. To take into custody: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1901 (F & H). Prob. ex nab, 'to arrest', influenced by nip.

nib(-)cove. A gentleman: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds. The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx, 'The nib-cove was chanting the play'; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'Beggar's Cant'; by 1887, Baumann implies, it was †. A development from, or an elaboration of, nib, n., 2.

nib-like. Gentlemanly; stylish: 1834, W. H.

Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'All my togs were so niblike and splash'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1890 (B & L), costermongers' s. Ex nib, n., 2.

nibber. See bung-nibber and cf. nib, v.

nibbing cull. A cheat; a tradesman that gives short measure: ca. 1775, 'The Potato Man', in The Ranelagh Concert, 'There's five pounds two-pence honest weight, | Your own scales take and try; | For nibbing culls I always hate, | For I in safety cry'; app. † by 1870. Cf. next entry.

nibble, v. 'To pilfer trifling articles, not having spirit to touch anything of consequence': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, "'How many wipes did you nibble?" "Only two"'; 1823, Bee, 'Stealing or cheating for trifles'; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1890, C. Hindley,—but by this date (see B & L) it was low s. Cf. the semantics of bite, v.—2. To apprehend (a criminal): Oct. 31, 1843, Sessions Papers, trial of J. Kennedy and T. Bryan, 'I heard the sailor say to Bryan, D—n his eyes if he would carry it any further, he should be nibbled'; extant. A frequentative or perhaps rather a softening of nib, v., 2. nibbler. 'A pilferer or petty thief': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. Ex nibble.

nibbling is the vbl n. of nibble: as 'pilfering', it occurs, e.g., in The London Guide, 1818.

niblike. See nib-like.

nibs, 'self': see next two phrases.

nibs, his. A later form of his nabs, q.v. at nabs; a form prob. determined in part by nib, n., 2. By 1864, at latest, low s.—2. A term of reference to a police magistrate: U.S.A., esp. among tramps: 1931, Stiff; extant.

nibs, your. You: see nabs, 1812, 2nd reference. Much less gen. than his nibs (q.v. at nibs, his) and app. † by 1890—if not long before that date.

nibski, 'a fresh'—impudent—'and windy'—talkative, boastful—'Jew', and nibsowitch, 'a Judge of Jewish birth', both recorded by Leverage, 1925: the former, certainly s.; the latter, partly s. and perhaps partly c.

nibsom. Gentlemanly: 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, 'The House-Breaker's Song' in Pickwick Abroad, 'Betray his pals in a nibsom game'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx, 'Nibsomest cribs. Best houses'; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'Nibsomest cribs, best or gentlemen's houses'; 1887, Baumann; 1901, F & H; by 1910, †. Cf. nib-like.

nibsowitch. Dee nibski.

nichey. See nitchey.

Nichol Hartles—see Awdeley's, No. 8—is much less likely to be c. than a slangy or coll. nickname; it may even be Awdeley's coining. I.e., Nicholas Without-Courage.

nick, n. See nick, out on the. But also independently, as in Flynn's, Feb. 4, 1928, John Wilstach, "'How much do you figure the first nick?" "Oh, about ten grand. That's strong enough for a starter"': where, clearly, the sense is 'swindle' or 'robbery'.—2. A thief: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; slightly ob. Ex sense 4 of the v.—3. A watch: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.—4. A trousers pocket: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.—5. A police station; but more usually, a prison: 1882 (Australia), recorded by Baker, 1945 (as a prison; ob.); 1931, Brown (the former); 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House (the latter); 1933, Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby (ditto); 1935, George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1936, Mark Benney, Low Company; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1938, F. D. Sharpe (police-station); 1943, Black (ditto); Nov. 1943, Lilliput (ditto); 1944, Cecil Bishop, Tales of Crime and the Underworld; extant. Ex sense 1 of the v.

nick, v. To catch; arrest: 1622, Fletcher & Massinger (O.E.D.); 1830, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, VI, "'He beat us on Friday—but I will nick him on Monday"'—but by this time it was s.—except in U.S.A. (as in Godfrey Irwin, 1931). Perhaps it = 'catch in the nick of time'.—2. As a gaming term of not precisely ascertained meaning, it occurs in Anon., Leathermore's Advice, 1666; perhaps 'to throw' or 'to score'. More prob. j. than c.—3. 1823, Bee, "'To nick . . . means "to cheat"—of money, of chattels, or of life'; app. † by 1890. Ex sense 1.—4. Hence (?), to rob; to steal: 1829, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, V, accused's letter, '. . . That oil-shop the corner of Cannon-street, i went in a'—i.e., to—'nick the lob of 7 peg' (or shillings); by ca. 1845 current in U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851), where it meant specifically to cut a person's pocket and remove the contents; 1866, James Greenwood, A Night in a Workhouse; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, 'I used to "nick" little things, such as fruit, etc., when I was a kid'; 1874, H; by 1880, low s. in England; 1900, J. Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman (to rob, v.t., a person); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood; by 1910, low s. in U.S.A. Prob. ex sense 1.—5. The U.S.A. sense, 'to beg (one's companions) for small change', is s. Allan Pinkerton, Strikers, Communists, Tramps and Detectives, 1878.—6. To strike, severely, to assault (a person): U.S.A.: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Assault'; 1925, Leverage, 'To do away with; to kill'; extant. To nick or cut him.—7. To detect; to discover: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 1.

nick, out on the. Out thieving; on a thieving expedition or venture: mid-C. 19–20; ob. H, 1874; 1901, F & H. Also on the nick: Baumann, 1887. Ex nick, v., 4.

nickel and dime. Time: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

nickel note. A five-dollar bill: mostly tramps': from ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; et al.

nickel nurser, 'a stingy person': s., not c.

nicker. One who cheats at dice or cards: gamesters': 1666, Anon., Leathermore's Advice; concerning Gaming, known also as The Nicker Nicked; app. † by 1700. Cf. nick, to win at cards (Grose, 1785).—2. A pound sterling: June 1, 1910, Sessions Papers, 'I suppose this has cost you a couple of "nickers"': 1925, Netley Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook, 'I got "five hundred nicker" (£500 worth of swag)'; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1933, Joseph Augustin, The Human Vagabond; by 1934 (Philip Allingham, Cheapjack) it was pitchmen's s. and low s. The origin is obscure; but with it one can nick (obtain slyly) many pleasures.—3. A detective: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. nick, v., 1.—4. A watch: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Rhyming ticker?—5. 'Swag', booty: U.S.A.: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Ex nick, v., 4.

nickin; nikey; nizey. 'Nikin, a Natural, or very soft creature,' B.E., 1698, and A New Canting Dict., 1725. Not, I think, c.; but s. Perhaps nikin = Nikin, a hypocoristic form of Isaac, as also is Nikey (in C. 19–20, usually Ikey); but there is prob. some influence exercised by nigit = idiot.

nickin, vbl n., occurs in all the senses of the v.—esp. 4 and 7.

nicks. See nix.

nickum. 'A Sharper; also a Rooking Ale-house [keeper] or Innkeeper, Vintner, or any Retailer,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; app. † by 1780. I.e., nick 'em.—2. A thief; a pickpocket: Scottish: 1896, S. R. Crockett, Cleg Kelly, 'A gang of the most high-toned "nickums" in the whole city'; extant. Prob. ex nick, v., 4; cf. nickum, 1.

nidering. 'Bad; without mitigation of any kind': 1859, Matsell; but the term is not c.: it is a Scott-revival.

nifty. Too familiar (in manner): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1942, BVB, 'Insolent, "cocky"'; extant. Ex the ordinary s. sense.—2. The senses 'excellent; desirable' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931) are s., not c.

nifty, bit of. Sexual intercourse: late C. 19–20; by ca. 1930, low s. Partridge, 1938. Ex prec., 2.

nig, n. 'The Clippings of Money': 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (nigg); 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1887 (Baumann). Prob. imm. ex nig, v., 1.

nig, v. To clip (money): 1698, B.E. implies it in his nigging, as does A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); app. † by 1887 (Baumann). Perhaps a perversion of nick, 'to cut a nick in; to notch'.—2. To catch: 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'Tho' he tips them the Pikes they nig him again'; app. † by 1780. A variant form of nick, v., 1.

nigg. See nig, n.

nigger. 'Niggers—fellows who clip the gold coin and file it'; prob. ca. 1690–1860, though my first record is in Andrewes, 1809; 1848, Sinks of London. Ex nig, v., 1—or it may well be a misprint for niggler.

nigging. The illicit clipping of money, esp. of gold coins: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by ca. 1860. Cf. prec.

niggle. 'To nygle, to have to do with a woman carnally,' Harman, 1566: c. until ca. 1680, then S.E. Richard Head, in The English Rogue, makes it clear that it is also applied to the female: 'And wapping Dell, that niggles well, | And takes lowre for her hire'; by the end of the century, or soon after, this nuance, also, was S.E. In U.S.A., however, it is C. 20 c., in the sense 'to have sexual intercourse' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931). The word is perhaps cognate with S.E. nibble.

niggler. An illicit clipper of money: 1698, B.E. (nigler); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (id.); 1785, Grose (id.); † by 1901 (F & H)—prob. by 1860. Ex nig, v., influenced by niggle.

nigging. In 1608–9, Dekker, in 'The Canters Dictionary', which forms part of Lanthorne and Candle-light, has 'Nigging, companying with a woman' in the sense of niggle, above; 1610, Rowlands (Martin Mark-All) roundly asserts that it has been superseded by wapping. The term > S.E. either ca. 1680 or, at the latest, ca. 1710.

nigh enuff (or enough). A pathic; a male prostitute: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'You're not a man. You're a pouf. A bleeding nigh enuff it's my belief'; extant. Rhyming s. on puff, n., 2; cf. collar and cuff.

night and day. A play: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

night dog. 'A night keeper (in prison),' Leverage, 1925: convicts': since ca. 1910. Derogatory.

night-flier. Usually pl. An early C. 18 term, defined by Defoe in Moll Flanders, 1721: 'I knew one Fellow, that while I was a Prisoner in Newgate, was one of those they called then Night-fliers . . . ; but he was one, who by Connivance was permitted to go Abroad every Evening, when he play'd his Pranks, and furnish'd . . . Thief-Catchers with Business to find out next Day, and restore for a Reward, what they had stolen the evening before'.

night(-)gamester. Punningly defined in what constitutes the earliest and app. the only record of the term: Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708, 'Night-Gamesters. Such as rob Parks a Nights for Venison, which proves to be Dear if they are taken'.

night hack. A (night) watchman or policeman: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, '“We've got to tab the "night hack" (watchman)," he said; "get a line on his movements"'; ibid., 'There's only one "night hack" (cop) in the town, and he goes home at one in the morning and doesn't come out again until five'; July 5, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; extant. See hack, n.

night hawk. A thief, a burglar, specializing in night work: 1925, Leverage; 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night-Hawk; by 1930, also Australian, as in Baker, 1942, with the variant night-hunter.

night(-)hunter, 'poacher' (Northern), 'prostitute' (London): not c., but s.: H, 1874.—2. See night hawk.

night magistrate, 'a constable', is either s. or jocular S.E.: it certainly isn't c.

night man. A burglar; a safe-blower: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; extant. Cf. night-hawk and night prowler.

night pack. A gang of thieves, burglars, operating at night: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. night hawk and S.E. pack of wolves.

night prowler. See prowler.

night(-)snap, recorded by Baumann, 1887, in 'Old Cant', is, I feel sure, an error.

night(-)sneak, the. The dodge by which a thief, esp. a young one, gets into a house at night and lies hidden until a favourable opportunity arises for the intended theft: 1714, Alex. Smith, The History of the Highwaymen, 'The Morning, Noon, or Night Sneak, which is privately sneaking into Houses at any of those Times, and carry off what next comes to Hand, for all's Fish that comes to Net, with them, who are term'd Saint Peter's Children, as having every Finger a Fish-hook'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Three or more Persons go together at Dark, searching of Gentlemen's Houses'; ob. by ca. 1890, but not † until ca. 1930. See sneak, n.

night-walker, 'prostitute, bully or thief plying at night', is S.E.; but the sense, 'a bellman', current ca. 1680–1750, is perhaps c., as B.E. says it is.

nightingale, as used by Damon Runyon (e.g., in Take It Easy, 1939), for 'an informer', is not c., but a felicitous example of journalistic invention : and 'the same goes' for the synonymous singer in the same delightful story, 'Cemetery Bait' : ma, se non sono veri, sono ben trovati. nightingale of Newgate. See Newgate nightingale.

nigle ; nigler ; nigling. See niggle ; niggler ; nigging.

nigmenog, 'a very silly'—i.e., simple—'Fellow', B.E., 1698 : not c., but s. Cf. nickin, q.v.

nikey ; nikin. See nickin.

nil, 'nothing', is included in Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859—hence implied to be c., which, obviously, it isn't.

Nile, down the : in Nile Street, Hoxton, London : Hoxton s., not c. Charles E. Leach, 1933.

nilling of the ken is a misprint (copied by Wm Winstanley in The New Help to Discourse, 1669) in Dekker's The Belman of London, 1608, for milling of the ken.

nim, n. A thief : ca. 1610–50. Taylor the Water Poet. Ex :—

nim, v. In C. 9—mid-16 (though rarely after C. 15) it was S.E. ('to take'), as The O.E.D. makes clear ; but it reappeared in C. 17 as c. : in C. 18–20, though after ca. 1730 mostly as a survival, it was still c. ; also it has often been used jocularly—as coll. or slang. Its c. sense is, 'steal', v.t. and v.i. Thus, Thomas Middleton, The Blacke Booke, 1604, 'I give and bequeath to you Benedick Bottomlesse, most deepe Cut-purse, all the benefitte of Pageant-dayes, great Market-dayes, Ballat-places, but especially . . . Play-houses, to Cut, Dive, or Nim, with as much speede, Arte, and dexteritie, as may be handled by honest Rogues of thy qualitie'—an obvious pastiche of Villon's famous Testament ; 1606, T. Middleton, Your Five Gallants, (stage direction) 'The boy in his pocket nims away Fitsgraves Jewell here, and exit' ; 1698, B.E., 'To Steal, or whip off or away any thing. . . . Nim a Cloak, c. to cut off the Buttons in a Crowd, or whip it off a Man's Shoulders' ; 1720, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, III, 'Nim the Nab . . . to steal a Man's Hat off his Head, and run away with it' ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (as in B.E.) ; 1770, Thomas Bridges, A Burlesque Translation of Homer, 'A fellow that would nim a smock | From off a hedge if it was loose' ; 1785, Grose ; 1797, Potter ; 1809, Andrewes ; 1817, J. J. Stockdale, The Greeks ; 1823, Bee ; Nov. 15, 1836, The Individual ; as c., it was † by 1830. Ex Ger. nehmen, 'to take'.

nim-gimmer. See nimgimmer.

nimbles. Fingers : C. 17. Ben Jonson, A Masque of the Metamorphos'd Gipsies, 1621, 'Using your nimbles | in diving the pocketts . . .'

nimgimmer. 'Nim-gimmer, c. A Doctor, Surgeon, Apothecary or any one that cures a Clap or the Pox,' B.E., 1698 ; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725 ; 1785, Grose ; † by 1830. I.e., nim, to take or remove ; gimmer, prob. in sense of 'hinge'.

niming. See nimming.

nimmer. 'A thief of the lowest order' : 1797, Potter ; 1809, Andrewes ; by 1830, †—as c., at least. Ex nim, v.

nimming, n. Theft ; petty theft : 1621, Middleton & Rowley, The Spanish Gipsie, 'The arts of Cocoquismo, and Germania us'd by our Spanish Pickeroes (I meane Filching, Foysting, Niming, Jilting)' ; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies considered ('stealing') ; as c., it was † by 1830. See nim, v., rather than direct (as H, 1st ed., 1859, implies) ex Ger. nehmen, 'to take'.

nimming, adj. Thievish ; following the 'trade' of thieving : 1726, J. Gay, The Beggar's Opera, 'Twas only Nimming Ned', obviously a nickname ; as c., † by 1830. Ex nim, v.

nine, go for the. To assume a consequential air ; to put on airs of importance : 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'The clipper turns caster [i.e., coiner], and goes for the nine, | Till he's sent to the sheriff's to lodge' ; † by 1900. Cf. s. togged up to the nines.

nine of hearts. A catch-phrase, meaning 'Give him no chance !' : 1936, Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster ! ; extant. Ex card-playing.

nine-tail bruiser ; nine-tail mouser. A cat o' nine tails : convicts' : since ca. 1890. F & H, 1901 ; by 1940, ob.

niner. A convict with a nine years' sentence : prob. since ca. 1820. Price Warung, Tales of the Early Days, 1894. Cf. fiver, 2, and sevens and tenner.

nines. Thus in Jackson & Hellyer, 1914 ; they define it as 'the limit' : should it not, therefore, be the nines, and is it not a mere slangy adoption of the English s. phrase, which is nearly always dressed (up) to the nines ?

nineteener. A sharper, a swindler ; a loafer : Australian : since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. Perhaps because he is a fast (i.e., clever) talker, 'nineteen to the dozen'.

ninny. 'A Canting whining Beggar' : 1698, B.E. ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. ; 1748, Dyche (5th ed.) ; app. † by 1820. Prob. ex S.E. ninny, 'a fool'.

nip, n. A cut-purse thief : 1591, Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 'The Nip, which the common people call a Cut-purse', the miscreant being further described in Greene's Second Conny-catching, 1592 : 'The Nip and the foyst, although their subject is one which they worke on, that is, a well lined purse, yet their manner is different, for the nip useth his knife, and the foist his hand : the one cutting the purse [or the purse-strings], the other drawing the pocket : but of these two scurvy trades, the Foist holdeth himself of the highest degree and therefore tearme themselves Gentlemen foists, and so much disdaine to be called Cut-purses . . . that the Foist refuseth even to weare a knife about him, least he be suspected to grow into the nature of the nip' ; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, adds that there is mortal enmity between the nips and foists of London and those of the provinces ; 1611, Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, or Moll Cut Purse ; 1658, The Honest Ghost ; app. † by 1690. Ex nip, v., 1.—2. Hence, a cheat, a swindler : 1698, B.E. ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. ; 1785, Grose ; 1797, Potter ; 1809, Andrewes ; 1848, Sinks of London ; † by 1910.

nip, v. 'To nyp a bounge, to cut a purse,' Harman, 1566 ; R. Greene, A Disputation, 1592, uses it both as v.t. and as v. absolute, to be a cut-purse or to practise robbery by purse-cutting ; 1592, 'Cuthbert Cunny-catcher', The Defence of Conny catching, 'I had consorts that could verse, nippe, and foyst' ; 1610, Rowlands, 'To nip a Jan, to cut a purse' ; 1688, Holme ; 1698, B.E. ; 1707, J. Shirley ; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 'Nip, to Pick' (a purse) ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. ; app. † by 1780. Ex S.E. nip, 'to pinch ; to squeeze sharply' ; cf. pinch, v., 1.—2. Hence, 'to Pinch or Sharp any thing' : 1698, B.E. ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. ; 1860, H, 2nd ed., 'To steal ; to take up quickly' ; 1887, G. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; by 1880, s. in England, and by 1900, s. in U.S.A.—3. 'To bite', says D. Defoe in Street-Robberies consider'd, 1728: if he means to bite, literally, with teeth, then he is wrong in classifying it as c.; but he may intend it to = 'to cheat', which would be a c. sense.—4. To arrest (a person): since ca. 1550. R. Edwards, ca. 1566 (O.E.D.); 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, III, 147; 1904, Life in Sing Sing (U.S.A.); ob. Cf. pinch, v., 3.—5. 'To open a locked door by means of a small pair of hollow nipper,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: burglars': C. 20.—6. To borrow money from: Australian confidence tricksters': C. 20. Baker, 1945. Cf. senses 2, 3.

nip-inside. A snuff-box, esp. if of old gold: ca. 1860–1910. Recorded in C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 1889, in the glossary (p. 320). The pickpocket nips (or steals) it from inside.

nip the slag. 'One "nips the slag" when one cuts the watch chain, a practice practically defunct now,' H. W. Corley, 'Pickpockets', Flynn's, March 2, 1929; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Cf. nip, v., 1 and 2; and see slag.

nip up. To raise the amount of (a cheque): forgers': since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933. Cf. s. hit it up.

nipp is a rare C. 18 variant of nip, n., 2.

nippe is an occ. variant of nip, n., 1. (R. Greene, The Thirde Part of Conny-catching, 1592.)

nipper, n. A cut-purse: 1585, Fleetwood, 'He that could take a peece of sylver out of the purse without the noise of any of the bells [attached thereto, in order to render theft more difficult], he was adjudged a judicall Nypper' (O.E.D.); 1592, Robert Greene, The Thirde and last Part of Conny-catching, 'This fellow he had heard to be one of the finest Nippers about the towne, and ever carried his queane with him, for conveiance when the stratageme was performed'. The term, by itself, may have > † by 1660, though it survived in bung-nipper. H's 'Old Cant for a boy cut-purse' is an erroneous definition, influenced by s. nipper, 'a small boy'—which was unknown until C. 19!—2, 3, 4. See nippers, 1, 2, 3.—5. A policeman: ca. 1830–1900, Sessions Papers, Jan. 5, 1843 (trial of James Baker); Baumann, Londonismen, 1887. Ex nip, v., 4.—6. A pickpocket; any thief: U.S.A.: C. 20. 1925, Leverage (nypper); 1927, Kane.

nipper, v. To arrest: 1823, Bee, 'Nipped—caught, taken up. "What d'ye think? My eyes, if Bill Soames warn't nipped only for a fogle little better than a wipe"'; † by 1901 (F & H). Perhaps ex nippers, 1.—2. V.t., to use nippers (nippers, 2) on (a door): U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; ob. Perhaps ex:—3. To pick the purse of (a person): Dec. 1817, Sessions Papers, 'He asked if I had any money—I said I had. He said he had been nipped three times, at Chelsea, that day'; app. † by 1890. Cf. nipper, n.

nipperkin, 'a small measure of liquor', classified by B.E. in 1698, as c., is S.E.

nippers. Handcuffs: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'That's one of the bulkies from Dumfries, wanting to clap the nippers on me'; 1823, Egan's Grose; by 1887, † according to Baumann, but F & H, 1901, list it as current, as do Clapin, Americanisms, 1903, and No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904. They nip the wrists; cf. nip, v., 4.—2. 'An instrument for turning a key on the outside of the door, used by hotel thieves': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1901, F & H (as English)—as a synonym of American tweezers; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; 1925, Leverage; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1935, police j.—3. Hence (?), 'a pickpocket's shears for cutting stickpins', George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who, however, lists it as a singular (nipper); by 1940, police j.

nipping, n. The practice or profession or act of theft or purse-cutting: 1592, Robert Greene, A Disputation, (Lawrence the pickpocket speaking to Nan the whore) 'Truth if fortune so favour thy husband, that hee be neither smoakt nor cloyed, for I am sure all thy bravery comes by his Nipping, Foysting, and lifting'; † by 1730. Cf. nipper.

nipping, adj., appears first, it would seem, in the phrase the nipping craft, the craft of the cut-purse: 1592, R. Greene, The Thirde and last part of Conny-catching, 'A good fellowe that was newly entered into the nipping craft, and had not as yet attained to any acquaintance with ye chiefe and cunning maisters of that trade . . .'; † by 1730. See nip, v., 1.

nipping jig. The gallows: U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 'He's going to the nipping jig to be topt. . . . He is going to the gallows to be hanged'; † by 1901 (F & H). Cf. Paddington frisk; the hangman's rope nips or pinches the victim's throat.

nippitate, 'strong liquor', is not c. nor even s. or coll.; it is S.E.: F & H's 'old cant' is therefore a bad mistake.

nipps; nips. 'Nipps, c. The shears with which Money was won't [sic] to be Clipt'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who does not, however, classify it as c.

nique. 'Contempt; don't care', writes Matsell in his Vocabulum, 1859; but this is very obscure! Perhaps Matsell intended to write, 'A term of contempt: "I don't care!"' (F & H, 1901, 'Contemptuous indifference'): if so, cf. C. 20 American s. nit, 'nothing', as used by O. Henry. It may well be a ghost-singular ex nix.

nish! 'Keep still; be quiet,' says Matsell, 1859—quite correctly; earlier in Sessions Papers, May 19, 1851 (case of Daley, Carter, Tuck), a police witness reports, 'Daley hallooed out, "Nish!" that means, keep quiet'; app. † in both Britain and U.S.A. by 1910. Is this, by any chance, a blend of nix and S.E. hush?

nit. 'A "sunder", or "nit", that is, general "look-out" man for a notorious Whitechapel "fence", Mrs A. MacKirdy and W. N. Willis, The White Slave Market, 1912: C. 20: ob., in Britain. In Australia, since ca. 1920, it is a criminal gang's look-out man: Baker, 1942 and 1945. See keep nit.

nit-keeper. See keep nit. Also nit-keep (Baker, 1945).

nitchey. 'To go down,' The Garda Review, 1935: to commit pederasty: C. 20. Alternative spelling nickey. Ex S.E. niche.

nitro. Nitroglycerin: ca. 1886, in Lewis E. Lawes, Cell 202, Sing Sing, 1935; 1925, Leverage—but, by this time, no longer c.

nits and lices. Starting prices at horse-racing: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

nix. Nothing: 1753, John Poulter (see next entry); 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'It won't do I say, to stand here for nicks—all hearers and no buyers' and, in the glossary, 'How they brought a German word into cant I know not'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV; 1834, Ainsworth; Nov. 8, 1836, The Individual; 1848, Sinks of London (nicks and nix); by 1850, low s. Ex Ger. nichts, 'nothing'.

nix! 'He answered me by saying, "Nix", which meant "Drop it"' (stop talking about that or like that), Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; 1933, Ersine, 'Nix, ex[clamation]. Stop'; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 'Nix . . . A word of warning'; extant. Ex the preceding.

nix, keep or keeping. See keep nix.

nix in masoning! Don't cheat: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; app. † by 1830. See nix and cf. nix!; see also masoning.

nix in whiddling! Don't speak: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (where it is spelt . . . whide-ling); app. † by 1830. Ex nix.

nix me-doll. See 1824 quotation in :—

nix my doll. Nothing: 1797, Humphry Potter; 1809, George Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'Peter presently let fly at the Pet's . . . appetite-basket, . . . which the latter parried, and it passed for nix me-doll'; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood, 'Jerry Juniper's Chaunt', where 'Nix my doll palls, fake away' is the refrain—burlesqued in 'Flowers of Hemp' (Tait's Magazine, April 1841), in the poem entitled 'On Hearing "Nix My Dolly Pals, Fake away!" played by the Bells of St. Giles's Cathedral, 14th May, 1840'—'Still singing "Nix my doll!", still singing "Fake away!"'; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Nix, or nix my doll, nothing'; 1864, H. 3rd ed.; † by 1880. App. a mere fanciful elaboration of nix, although, as Thomas Lawrence in Notes & Queries of Aug. 14, 1852, suggested, dolly may be dole, 'share'.

nix my dolly is imaginary c.: see preceding entry, reference of 1841.

nix the buffer. See hook and snivey.

nixer. 'One who is afraid to steal,' Leverage, 1925; extant. One who is of no account: he amounts to nix, nothing (Ger. nichts).

nixi or nixy. A look-out man: 1925, Leverage; extant. See nix!

nizey; nizey; nizzie or -y. A fool; a coxcomb: not c., as B.E. would have us believe, but either S.E., as The O.E.D. implies, or s. Current ca. 1680–1840, the term derives ex Fr. niais, 'foolish, excessively simple'.

nizzie or nizzy. A variant of the preceding.

no conjure! No good; useless: since the 1920's. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932. The magic doesn't work.

no down! See down, n., 1.

no hank. See hank, no.

no miss. 'A preparation on his finger tips to facilitate dealing from the bottom of the deck, called, "No miss",' Frank Wrentmore in Flynn's, March 28, 1936: card-sharpers': C. 20.

No. 9. See Number Nine.

No. 909. See number nine-o-nine.

no score. 'Pocket-picking slang for no luck,' Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936; extant. See score, n.

noah or Noah. A flatboat: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Noah's ark was prob. a flat-bottomed boat.

Noah's ark. An informer to the police: England and Australia: C. 20. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941; Baker, 1942. Rhyming on synonymous nark.—2. A pawnshop: South America: since ca. 1905. Harry Franck, Working North from Patagonia, 1921. Allusive to Jews as proprietors of pawnshops.—3. In U.S. (Pacific Coast), a spoilsport: since ca. 1920. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on synonymous Australian low s. nark.—4. A park: Pacific Coast, U.S.A.: C. 20. M & B. Rhyming.

nob, n. A head (of person): 1698, B.E.; N. B., 1718, A Compleat Collection of Remarkable Tryals, II, 'He answered, Ay Master, I believe my Nob must make a Button (meaning in the Loophole of a halter)'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; by Grose's time (1785), it was no longer c., but s. Cognate with—perhaps a mere variant of—the S.E. knob: but undoubtedly cognate with nab, n., 1; nib, 2 (cf. sense 1); and nub, n., 1. (It is, therefore, evident that nab, neb, nib, nob, and nub are variants, with the semantically constant sense: protuberance, hence head of thing or person. If we knew the full history of nub, 'the neck', S.E. nub, 'a knob' (hence, in U.S.A., the 'head' or gist of a matter, subject, or story), and S.E. knub, 'a knot, a protuberance', we should find that semantically the c. sense ('the neck') is a derivative of an original 'head' sense. The *kn-*forms orig. showed a difference of pronunciation: now, they are phonetic variants.)—2. Hence, ? erroneously, neck: 1741 (see mill, v., 6).—3. An illicit game or trick: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'We defrauded an old Farmer of fifteen Guineas, at the old Nobb, call'd Pricking in the Belt'; ibid., 'At the Old Nobb, or Pricking in the Belt', whence it appears that (the) old nob is a c. name for Pricking in the Belt; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870.—4. But (the) nob or (the) old nob is also the leather belt used in the game: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, section on 'The Art of Old Nobb'.—5. A law-enforcement officer: U.S.A.: since the 1920's. Castle, 1938.

nob, v. See nob it.—2. 'To steal by trickery; to swindle,' Leverage, 1925; since ca. 1910. Cf nob, n., 3.

nob, do the: to take up a collection: not c., but showmen's s.

nob cheat (or chete), a variant of nab cheat, appears in Copland, 1536, in the form nobchete and, it would seem, in the sense 'head'.

nob for. To feel for (e.g., one's handkerchief): possibly c.; perhaps a witness's error: 1829, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, V, trial of George Gibbs and Wm Jones.

nob(-)girder. A variant of nab girder (Grose, 1785).

nob in the fur trade. 'Let nob in the fur-trade hold their jaw, | And let the jug be free', glossed as 'Old Bailey pleaders': 1839, 'The House-Breaker's Song' in Pickwick Abroad, ch. xxvi; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; † by 1901 (F & H). Ex the fur on their gowns; cf. fur man.

nob it. 'To act with such prudence and knowledge of the world, as to prosper and become independent without any labour or bodily exertion; this is termed nobbing it, or fighting nob work. To effect any purpose, or obtain any thing, by means of good judgment and sagacity, is called nobbing it for such a thing': 1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan's Grose, 1823; † by 1901 (F & H). I.e., to use one's nob or head.

nob(-)pitcher. 'Nob-Pitchers, a general term for those sharpers who attend at fairs, races, &c., to take in the flats at prick in the garter, cups and balls, and other similar devices': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose (cribblingly); † by 1901 (F & H). Cf. nob, n., 3 and 4.

nob the glazes is not c., but circus and showmen's s.: 1875, Thomas Frost, Circus Life, 'Going round the assemblage with a hat', if done 'at the windows of a street, sometimes . . . by one performer standing on the shoulders of another, is "nobbing the glazes"'.

nob the pitcher is implied in nob-pitcher.

nob-work, fight. See nob it.

nobb. An occ. form (late C. 17-18) of nob, n.

nobba, 'nine', is not c., but parlyaree, as of course is nobba saltee, 'ninepence'. H, 1859. Ex It. nove or, less prob. Sp. nueve.

nobber. 'A blow on the head' (P. Egan, Boxiana, 1818), is not c., but pugilistic s.—2. See nobba, of which it forms a variant.—3. A collector to, e.g., a 'griddler' (q.v.): beggars' and tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; by 1890, also showmen's s.; by 1901 (F & H), no longer c.—the C. 20 c. equivalent being bottler. Cf. nob, do the.

nobbing. See:—

nobbing or nobbings. 'Nobbing, collecting money, "what nobbings?" how much have you got?': 1859, H: not c., but showmen's and nigger minstrels' s. Nobbing slum is the bag for holding the money collected.

nobbing cheat. 'The gallows.—Old Cant', says H, 1874. But I doubt whether this variant of nubbing cheat ever existed. Nubbing > nobbing, owing to the influence of s. nob, 'the head'.

nobbing it. See nob it.

nobbing the glazes. See nob the glazes.

nobbish. See nobby.

nobble. To cheat, to overreach, to swindle: 1839, implied in nobbler; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. Prob. ex nob, n., 3.—2. Hence, to steal: 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude, 'I . . . took a chance to overhaul what she'd nobbled'; by 1920, low s., except in the derivative C. 20 nuance, 'to kidnap' (as in Evelyn Waugh, Decline and Fall, 1928).—3. To kill (perhaps by throttling): 1877, J. Greenwood, Dick Temple; † by 1930. Prob. with reference to nob, n., 1.

nobbler. 'Nobblers—confederates of the thimblemen, who appear to play to induce others to do the same': 1839, Brandon; 1854, Whyte Melville, General Bounce; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), where it is spelt nobler; 1869, J. Greenwood; 1876, C. Hindley, Cheap Jack; app. † by 1890 (B & L). Ex nobble, v., 1.

nobby, like nobbish, 'fine; stylish, smart', was never c., despite B & L; orig., low s.

noble. 'A guard for strike breakers,' Burke, 1930: racketeers': 1934, Rose; extant. Ironic.

noble, the. See work the noble.

noch. A Jewish shelter for homeless men: tramps' and beggars': C. 20: 1931, Stiff, 'They treat you fine if you know how to get by the gate'. Ex hochnosis orchim, 'a place to make welcome' (Stiff).

nock, 'the breech, or posterior', and nock, 'the female pudend', are not c., but s. 'From nock, a notch,' says Grose.

nocks. Narcotics in general: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. Perhaps cognate with or directly ex noch: shelter; welcome; comfort. But prob., orig., in ref. to narcotics that are inhaled, ex Romany nok, 'the nose'.

nocky (boy). 'Nocky, c. a silly'—i.e., simple—'dull Fellow,' B.E., 1698; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (nocky boy)—but by Grose's day it had ceased to be c. In some way connected with knocked (on the head).

nod, play the. To feel drowsy from over-indulgence in drugs: drug addicts': since ca. 1925. BVB, 1942. But even Homer nods noddy, 'a fool', was classified by B.E. as c.; the term has always, in this sense, been S.E.

noge, says Potter in his Dict., 1797, is a guinea: but the term is severely suspect, despite its recurrence in Sinks of London, 1848.

noise. Nitrolycerin or dynamite in reference to safe-blowing: bank robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. puff.—2. Heroin: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB.

noise, the. 'If [a criminal] plans a job and hears that the police have been warned, then that is a "rumble", or "the noise", or "the blow off", ' Givens, 1929; extant. By meiosis.

noisy-dog racket. 'Stealing brass knockers from doors': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; † by 1901 (F & H). See racket; the noise is either that of the knockers as they are being wrenched away or that made by an accomplice in imitation of a barking dog.

noisy pegs. 'A pair of boots . . . Stamps, prints, noisy pegs': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 321); ob. Perhaps suggested by s. pegs, 'legs'.

noisy-racket (man). One who steals 'china and glass from outside of china-shops': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25 (the longer form); Nov. 1870, The Broadway, 'Among Thieves' (the shorter); † by 1920. See racket.

Nokkums. Scottish gypsy-tinkers: their own name for themselves: 1894, F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . the Autobiography of a Gipsy, p. 49.

nola. A homosexual: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1942, BVB. Ex Nola, a feminine given-name; cf. synonymous s. molly and pansy.

noll. A wig: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1797, Potter; app. † by 1870.

nomm(o)ous. See nammous.

nonsense, 'melting butter in a wig' (Lex. Bal., 1811), may orig. have been c., but prob. it was always s.—2. Money: mostly beggars' and tramps': 1926, Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows; extant. Ironic.

noodle. 'A cheap thief,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex S.E. noodle, 'nincompoop'.

nook. A penny: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'There's others what flogs them [viz., cigarette-ends] round the spikes at three nooks an ounce'; 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night; extant. Ex synonymous Shelta nuk.

nooky. Sexual intercourse: convicts': since ca. 1925: 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor; extant. Ex getting into nooks and corners to indulge in it.

noon(-)sneak. See night sneak.

noose, v. See:—

noozed, 'married or hanged', is prob. not c., as several lexicographers have classed it, but s.—decidedly low s. Perhaps, however, ‘married’ is s., and ‘hanged’ is c. Late C. 17–mid-19; e.g., in B.E. and Grose. Ex the hangman’s noose.

nope. A blow: 1725, A New Canting Dict., ‘A Blow, a Knock on the Pate; as, We hit him a Nope on the Costard’; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1901 (F & H), as c.; it survives in dial. Perhaps a disguising—a perversion—of knock; but cf. † S.E. nolp.

Nor Loch trout, ‘a leg of mutton’, is classified by B & L, 1890, as ‘old Scottish cant’; it was never worse than s.

Norfolk dumpling, often preceded by the. A convict’s transportation, or transference, to Norfolk Island, where convict life was hell: Australia and Norfolk Island: ca. 1820–70. In, e.g., J. W., Perils, Pleasures and Pastimes, 1849, cited by Baker, 1945. Prompted by ‘Norfolk Island’, with ironic reference to Norfolk dumpling, a favourite dish in East Anglia.

nork is given by Baumann, Londonismen, 1887, as a variant, both by itself and in copper’s nork, cf. nark, n., 4.

north and south (or N— and S—). The mouth: 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; by 1864, low, and by 1875, ordinary, rhyming s. In C. 20, it is U.S. Pacific Coast c.—introduced by Cockneys: witness Chicago May, 1928; Convict 2nd, 1938; and M & B, 1944. Cf. East and South.

North Castle, ‘Holloway Gaol’, recorded by Ware, 1909, as ‘slang of the impecunious’, 1880, is, as Ware says, s.—not c. This gaol is situated in North London.

Norway neckcloth (or necklace). ‘Norway neckcloth, the pillory, usually made of Norway fir’: 1785, Grose, who was prob. right in not classifying it as c.; app. current ca. 1760–1830. The rare variant, Norway cravat (e.g., in H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 1841), is likewise s.

nose, n. ‘Nose. Snitch,’ Parker, 1789; ‘A rumour ran through the prison, that he was about to turn “nose”’, glossed ‘i.e. informer’, in vol. IV of The Criminal Recorder, 1809; ‘A man who informs or turns king’s evidence,’ 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, ‘A thief who becomes an evidence against his accomplices; also, a person who seeing one or more suspicious characters in the streets, makes a point of watching them in order to frustrate any attempt they may make, or to cause their apprehension; also, a spy or informer of any description’; 1815, Sessions Papers; 1817, Jon Bee, in The New Monthly Magazine; 1823, Bee, Dict.; 1828, Sessions Papers; 1828, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, I; ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. trans.), ch. V; 1846 (see chirp, turn); 1848, Sinks of London; 1851, Mayhew; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1875, Arthur Griffiths, Memorials of Newgate; 1880, Sessions Papers; 1888, J. Greenwood, The Policeman’s Lantern; 1889, Clarkson & Hall Richardson; 1901, F & H; 1930, Burke (racketeers’); 1931, Brown; 1933, Geo. Dilnot; 1934, Rôse; 1936, Grierson Dickson, Design for Treason; 1936, David Hume, The Crime Combine; extant. Prob. suggested by snitch, n., 4.—2. Hence, one who complains to the prison authorities of maltreatment by fellow prisoners: prisoners’: 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life,

I; ob.—3. A detective: 1860, F. & J. Greenwood, Under a Cloud, III, 2; 1890, B & L; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1933, Ersine (U.S.A.); ob. by 1940 in Britain.—4. (Ex sense 1.) ‘A spy or watch’: 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London, Act III; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1890, B & L; 1894, Chief-Inspector Littlechild (see definition at copper’s nark); 1895, A. Griffiths; 1903, No. 7, Twenty-Five Years in Seventeen Prisons; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1933, David Hume, Crime Unlimited; 1934, Axel Brace, Public Enemies; 1935, David Hume, Gaol Gates, “‘Snout,” “nose”, or “nark””; 1938, Castle (U.S.A.); 1940, John G. Brandon, Gang War; 1940, Leo L. Stanley, Men at Their Worst (U.S.A.); 1941, Jim Phelan, Murder by Numbers; extant.—5. One who supplies information to criminals: since ca. 1910. Edgar Wallace, The Clue of the New Pin, 1923.—6. A police magistrate: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1945. Suggested by beak.

nose, v. ‘To Nose. To give evidence. To inform. His pall nosed and he was twisted for a crack; his confederate turned king’s evidence, and he was hanged for burglary,’ Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811, but recorded earlier in The Rambler’s Magazine, 1809, as ‘to observe’; 1821, P. Egan, Life in London; 1822, The Life and Trial of James Mack-coull, ‘Nosed . . . Watched and informed against’; 1828, Sessions Papers; 1836 (see crack, n., 2); 1838, Glascock; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1846, anon. translator of E. Sue’s The Mysteries of Paris, Pt. 2, ch. xlviii; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1874, Marcus Clarke, For the Term of His Natural Life, “‘Does the girl look like nosing us now?’”; 1887, W. E. Henley; 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; 1941, Jim Phelan, Murder by Numbers; extant. Ex either the n. or nose of; cf. snitch, v., 3.—2. To bully: 1811, Lex. Bal.; † by 1890.—3. (Ex sense 1.) To detect (a person) in a crime: 1827, Thomas Surr, Richmond; † by 1920. To nose him—smell him out.—4. To spy; to spy in or into, give information about: Oct. 1877, Sessions Papers (p. 643), ‘How do you account for this? I suppose Sawyer was nosing for Mr Abrahams?’; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13, “‘What’s the graft?’” asked Johnny with deadly calm. “‘Jeff Legge put you here to nose the house for him, and keep him wise as to what was going on’”; extant. Cf. sense 4 of the n.

nose, gammon on a. See gammon on a nose.

nose, on the. On the pry; looking for crime: 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London, ‘The beaks were out on the nose’; 1827, Thomas Surr, Richmond; 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime, ‘The officers were not on the scent, “upon the nose”, as it is called’; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1859, H; 1890, C. Hindley; by ca. 1900, low s. Cf. nose, n., 1.

nose, turn. To turn king’s evidence: 1809 (see nose, n., 1); 1812, J. H. Vaux (see split, v.); † by 1910. See nose, n., 1.

nose and chin, v. To win (a race): Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; ex Cockney crooks.

nose(-)bag, n. A snack, a meal, handed out in a paper bag: tramps’: since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; also British, as in Arthur Gardner, Tinker’s Kitchen, 1932; extant. With humorous reference to a horse’s nose-bag.

nose(-)bag, v. To eat: tramps’: since ca. 1912. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex the n.

nose-bag, put on the. To eat; to take lunch: 1933, Ersine; extant. See nose-bag, n.

nose(-)candy. Narcotics; esp. and properly, those which are inhaled: 1936, Charles Francis Coe, G-Man; 1942, BVB, 'Cocaine'. Euphemistic.

nose clean, keep your. Mind your own business!: prob. low s., not c.: C. 20.

nose-dive, n. Joining in prayer in order to get a meal: beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1930. American Speech, April 1944, article by Otis Ferguson. See:—

nose-dive, v. To pray: beggars' and tramps': since the 1920's: 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough. Ex the gesture of head 'buried' in hands.

nose 'em, 'tobacco' (H, 2nd ed., 1860), may have been c. until ca. 1865. Ex nose-my(-knacker).

nose gent or nosegent. 'Nosegent, a Nunne,' Harman, 1566; 1608-9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'A Recluse or Nun'; 1785, Grose; † by 1870. Etymology obscure. Possibly 'dainty nose' or 'gentle (or courteous) nose': cf. the semantics of nazy nab.

nose-my(-knacker). Tobacco: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue (shortened form); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1865, low rhyming s.

nose of. To spy on, to watch (persons): 1774, Sessions Papers, 6th Frederick Bull session, trial of Wm Waine, 'The prisoner . . . said, d—n your eyes, what [!] are you nosing of us? I said, if you have done no harm you need not be afraid of my looking at you'; app. † by 1870. Semantics: sniffing at (a person), as a dog does; cf. nose, v., 1, and nose upon.

nose powder. Powdered narcotic (for inhalation): addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. Cf. nose candy.

nose upon (a person) is the v.t. form of nose, v., 1: 1812, Vaux; † by 1901 (F & H).

nose(-)watch. Person; one's collective self: 1566, Harman, 'I saye by the Salomon I will lage it of with a gage of benebouse; then cut to my nose watch', wherein the last six words = 'then speak to me'; app. † by 1660. Apparently always with my, thy, etc., and perhaps an elaboration of watch, q.v.

nosegent. See nose gent.

nosemy. Matsell's form of nose-my(-knacker).

noser is a variant (ex nose, v., 1) of nose, n., 1: 1860, The Cornhill Magazine, Sept., p. 336; ob. by 1910; † by 1920.

nosey(-)me(-)knacker. Tobacco: orig. (ca. 1845-70), beggars' rhyming s.: Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 418. Cf. nose-my(-knacker).

nosing is the vbl n. of nose, v., esp. in sense 1. E.g., Jon Bec, in The New Monthly Magazine, 1823.

nosing, adj. Connected with or consisting in informing to the police: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'Summat in the nosing way'; extant. See nose, v., 1.

notch, 'the private parts of a woman' (Grose, 1785), is not c., but s.—very low, but still s.; cf. nock.—2. A pocket: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; in C. 20, † in U.S.A., but (Baker, 1942) current in Australia.—3. To have got a notch is to be drug-intoxicated: U.S.A.: Aug. 15, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse; extant. To be a notch higher: cf. high.—4. See:— notch girl, or notch. A prostitute: C. 20.

BVB, 1942. Cf. next. Although prob. ex notch, 1, it may pervert S.E. nautch girl.

notch house or notch joint. A brothel: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers (the latter); 1931, Stiff (the former), who implies that notch house is, in the main, a tramps' usage; 1933, Eagle; 1935, Hargan (latter); extant. BVB cites the occ. variant notcherie (or -y). See notch, 1.

note, n. A singer: 1859, Matsell; 1901, F & H; † by 1920.

note, v. 'To put down or pass bad paper [money]': Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. note-layer.

note, lay the. See lay the note.

note-blanker is a ghost word, fathered by F & H, 1896 (at jilter): for the true original, see jilter, 2, reference of 1863.

note-layer, 'a distributor of counterfeit paper-money' (Chicago May, 1928) is not c.; it is either police coll. or police j. John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928, defines it as 'a short change artist': which sense is c.; it recurs in, e.g., Castle, 1938.

note racket, the. That method of robbing wholesale houses by which the thief, an expert with skeleton keys, calls at a business house to speak to a clerk (or other) that he knows isn't there, and obtains permission to write a note to him at a likely desk and, when a confederate enters and engages the clerk in conversation as far away as possible, opens the drawer, takes the money, and then tells the clerk that he will not trouble to wait, thus slipping away without exciting curiosity': 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; ob.

notice to quit. 'When a person is in danger of dying from bad health, it is said, he has received "a notice to quit"', 1823, Egan's Grose, where the comment is prefaced with, 'a cant phrase'; here, however, Egan means a catch-phrase.

nozzle. A chimney: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1920. Ex a tall chimney's vague resemblance to a hose-pipe.

nub, n.; often spelt nubb. Neck: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1887 (Baumann). Perhaps a deliberate perversion of nape; but prob. a mere variant of, or—at farthest—a term cognate with nob, 1: cf. nab, n., 1, q.v.—2. Hence (the nub), a hanging by the neck; 1698, B.E. (at glim), 'As the Cull was Glimm'd, he gangs to the Nubb, c. if the Fellow has been Burnt in the Hand, he'll be Hang'd now'; † by 1850.—3. Coition: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1901 (F & H). Origin obscure; but cf. S.E. nub, 'a knob or protuberance' (penis erectus).—4. (Old Cant).—A husband,' F & H, 1901: H, 2nd ed., 1860: perhaps a ghost-sense; if it is genuine, cf. 3.

nub, v. To hang (a person): 1676, implied in nubbing cheat, nubbing cove, nubbing ken; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'The Horse-stealer is Hanged . . . The Prigger of Prancers is nubbed'; 1718, N. B., A Compleat Collection of Remarkable Tryals, II, 'For fear of being Nubb'd at the Nubbing Chit (i.e. hang'd at Tyburn); † by 1780.

nubb. See nub, n.

nubbing, n. Hanging: 1676, Coles; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.); † by 1880. See nub, v.—2. Sexual intercourse: mid-C. 18—early 19. Grose. Cf. nub, n., 3.

nubbing(-)cheat, the. The gallows: 1676, Coles (who hyphenates); 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1714, Alex. Smith, The History of the Highwaymen, '... For fear the Nubbing-Chit... should catch him at last'; 1718, N. B., A Collection of Tryals, II (see nub, v.); 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1822 (see next entry); Nov. 8, 1836, The Individual; April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp' (nubbing chit); 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890 (B & L). See nub, v., and cheat, n. nubbing(-)cheat, shirk the. To cheat the gallows: 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul; † by 1890. See prec.

nubbing-cheat trick, the; do the... A hanging; to perform a hanging: Australian convicts': ca. 1820–60. Price Warung, Tales of the Early Days, p. 13. See nubbing cheat.

nubbing chit, the. See nubbing cheat.

nubbing cove. A hangman: 1676, Coles (who hyphenates); 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880. Lit., a hanging fellow: see nubbing and cove.

nubbing ken. A sessions house: 1676, Coles (who hyphenates); 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880. Lit., a hanging place, house, room: the place where the sentence of hanging is pronounced.

nubbling chit. A corrupt form of nubbing cheat.

nuck. See knuck, n.

nuckler. See knuckler, reference of 1801.

nudge, n., and v., nudger; nudging. 'Nudge. This is not often practised in the game of faro; it is applicable, as its name implies, to cribbage and similar games. The office of a nudger is to touch an associate with his feet. These touchings are signs, which are denominated nudging': 1859, Matsell; only very improbably c. The v. is ordinary S.E., and nudger and nudging mere special applications of the S.E. senses of those words.

nug, n., 'darling': not c., but s. Ex:—

nug, v., 'to fondle; to copulate with (a woman)': not c., but s.

nugget. 'To steal unbranded calves from a neighbour,' Baker, 1942: Australian: since ca. 1860. Baker, 1945, has at pp. 49–50 a section on cattle-duffing c. Though small, yet, like a nugget of gold, they are valuable.

nugging dress is not c., but s. It relates to a particular fashion in women's dress—already out of date by 1698.

nugging house. A brothel: on borderland between c. and low s., but nearer the latter: 1796 (therefore current at least as early as 1791), Grose, 3rd ed.; † by 1887 (Baumann). Ex nug, v.

null, v. To beat or thrash: 1785, Grose, who does not classify it as c.: app. current ca. 1770–1830, it may orig. have been c.; it may always have been c. Humorously ex annul, to cancel: perhaps the semantics are 'to cancel the debt of' (a person).

null-groper. 'Null-Groppers. Persons who sweep the streets, in search of old iron, nails, &c.': 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1901 (F & H). Perhaps 'a groper for nails' (slovenly: nulls?).

nulling cove. A pugilist: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, where it is not classified as c.—perhaps by 1820 it had > pugilistic s. See null and cove.

Numans. See Newmans (Rowlands, 1610).

number, v. 'The College cove has numbered him, and if he is knocked down he'll be twisted; the turnkey of Newgate has told the judge how many times the prisoner has been tried before, and therefore if he is found guilty, he certainly will be hanged': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, where it is explained that the turnkey holds up as many fingers as there have been trials; app. † by 1900.

number, miss the. To fail to understand: 1904, Life in Sing Sing (see quot'n at shot, have the); † by 1940. Ex telephony.

Number Nine. Fleet prison: 1823, Bee, 'No. 9—Fleet-market; the Fleet prison. "You'll find him always at home, at No. 9"'; † by 1901 (F & H).

number nine-o-nine; usually written No. 909. A convict of certain undetermined characteristics: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, synonymy at 'Convict' (p. 401), without definition; extant.

number taken, have one's (or the), 'to be reported for a violation of prison rules': prison j., not c. Rose, 1934.

number up, put (someone's): also put up (someone's) number. To mark (a person) for death; to determine, or to arrange, to kill him: May 31, 1929 (?), Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'The Gray Gangster' (former); Sept. 20, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn (the latter); by 1940, low s.

numms or nums. 'Numms, c. a Sham, or Collar Shirt, to hide the other when Dirty,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1755, DeaneSwift (O.E.D.); 1785, Grose; app. † by 1830 or so. A clearer definition is that by F & H, 'a clean collar on a dirty shirt'. Origin obscure. I suspect that the word either derives from or is at the least cognate with dial. num, 'stupid', or numby, 'a dolt'.

numquam. See nunquam.

nums. See numms.

nunnery, 'a brothel', is, despite Grose, S.E.; nun, 'a harlot', is s.

nunquam. See Awdeley's, No. 24. Prob. Awdeley's designation, not a c. term.

nuntee or nunty. See nantee.

nunyare, 'food', is parlyaree: a corruption of mungary (see mungarly).

nupson, despite Grose, is S.E.

Nurmi. See do a Nurmi.

nurse—'to cheat; they nursed him out of it' (Grose, 1785)—may orig. have just possibly been c.; but almost certainly it was always s. To have in pupilage, therefore at one's mercy.

nursery. A reform school: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ironical.—2. A rendezvous for swindlers: 1925, Leverage; extant. There, they nurse their talents.

nut, n. A present, a pleasing little act of assiduity, employed in courting a person: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; † by 1900. Cf. nut, v., 3, and nutting, 2.—2. The sense 'head' has always been s., even (despite Life in Sing Sing, 1904), in U.S.A.—3. 'General term among gamblers for the expenses,' Will Irwin, Confessions of a Con Man, 1909, the period covered, however, being ca. 1890–1905: U.S.A.: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, where it = the outlay, the original capital, of a gang of thieves that went on tour; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'Money invested, esp. in a crooked gambling game, by gamblers'; by 1929, (The Saturday Evening Post, Oct. 19, 'Alagazam') it was well-established s. among pitchmen. To the professional gamblers, it is a sweet sum—'sweet as a nut'.—4. See nuts, 3.—5. 'A man who is apparently mentally deranged,' Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923: U.S.A.: 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; by 1925, s. Perhaps ex nutty, 3.—6. An easy safe: esp. burglars', U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ersine, 1933, defines it as 'the combination of a safe'. Cf. sense 1, and nuts, 2, and:—6a. But for a safe that isn't easy to open, see shell, n., 6; cf. sense 6. Ersine.—7. The art of 'nutting a screw' (see sense 4 of the v.): since ca. 1920. Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940.

nut, v.—1, 2. See nutting.—3. 'The cove's nutting the Blown; the man is trying to please the girl': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux (to court, to flatter); 1820, The London Magazine; † by 1901 (F & H). Perhaps ex nut, n., 1.—4. To attract the attention of: 'convicts': since ca. 1920. Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940, 'Try to pass things without getting someone to "nut the screw," i.e. attract the warder's attention'. Also as v.i., 'to gain the warder's attention': as in Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943, 'Thus the convict nutted, securing a few unsurveyed seconds'. To cause (a person) to turn his 'nut' or head.

nut, on the. See on the nut.

Nut Alley. That part of San Quentin which is set apart for the insane: 'convicts': since ca. 1910. Castle, 1938. Cf. nut college and nut factory.

nut college. An insane asylum, esp. for criminals; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. nut factory.

nut-crackers. A pillory: 1698, B.E., 'The Cull lookt through the Nut-Crackers, the Rogue stood in the Pillory'; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, 'Nut-crackers, or stoop, a pillory'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1901 (F & H)—prob. by 1870. Ex shape, and ex effect on the occupant.

nut factory, the. The insane ward or department in a (State) prison: C. 20: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 'They should have been in the "nut factory" . . . the insane department'; March 30, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington. Cf. foolish factory.—2. Hence, an asylum for the insane: 'tramps': 1931, Stiff; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; extant, but by 1940, low s.

nut foundry is an occ. variant of nut factory: June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch. He's 'nuts': nuts suggests a foundry: cf. nut factory.

nut house. An asylum for the insane: mostly 'tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. See nut, n., 5, and cf. nut factory, 2.

nut money is an occ. variant of nut, n., 3. In, e.g., Flynn's, Feb. 4, 1928, John Wilstach, 'The Gun Moll'.

nut stiff. A cheque for a small amount, esp. if passed at the week-end (when the banks are closed) and usually to pay one's travelling expenses: 'forgers': since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. See nut, n., 3. nutcrackers. See nut-crackers.

nuts. 'The blown was nutts upon the Kiddy because he is well-hung; the girl is pleased with the youth because his genitals are large': 1785, Grose (at well-hung); 1811, Lex. Bal. (at pound), 'How the milling cove pounded the cull for being nuts on his blown; how the boxer beat the fellow for taking liberties with his mistress'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; by 1850, it was s. I.e., 'to be sweet upon': cf. familiar S.E. as sweet as a nut.—2. Be nuts for, 'to be agreeable to', is S.E. > s—not c.—3. The walnut shells used in a 'sure-thing' gambling game: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant. Cf. hucks.

nuts and bolts. A variation of bolts and nuts. Ersine, 1933.

nuts upon (another), be. See nuts, 1.

nuts upon (oneself), be. 'Nuts upon yourself, a man who is much gratified with any bargain he has made, narrow escape he has had, or other event in which he is interested, will express his self-satisfaction or gladness by declaring that he is, or was, quite nuts upon himself': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, plagiarizingly; by 1860, low s. Ex nuts, 1.

nutted, 'taken in by a man who professed to be nuts upon you' (H, 2nd ed., 1860), is not c., but low s. See nuts, 1. nuttery. An asylum for the insane: mostly 'tramps': since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Stiff, 1931.

nutting, n. Keeping a swindled person quiet by leading him further up the garden path: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'This is called nutting of you'; by 1870, low s. I.e., keeping him 'as sweet as a nut'.—2. Hence, 'To please a person by any little act of assiduity, by a present, or by flattering words, is called nutting him': 1812, J. H. Vaux; app. † by 1890.

nutty. Infatuated, in love: 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A person who conceives a strong inclination for another of the opposite sex, is said to be quite nutty, or nuts upon him or her'; 1818, The London Guide, 'Nutty, amatory' (amorous); 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields, 'Nutty, amorous'; by 1860, low s. Cf. nutting, 2, and nuts, 1.—2. Fascinating; spruce: 1823, Byron, Don Juan, XI, xix, 'Who on a lark with black-eyed Sal (his blowing), | So prime—so swell—so nutty—and so knowing?'; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, 'The House-Breaker's Song' in Pickwick Abroad (ch. xxvi), 'And the beak wore his nuttiest wig!'; 1841, Martin & Aytoun, The Bon Gaultier Ballads; by 1850, low s. Perhaps ex nut, n., 1.—3. Insane: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1932, low s. 'Touched' in the head (nut, n., 2); cf. nuts, 3, and nut, n., 5.

nux. 'The "plant", or object in view; "stoll up to the nux?" Do you fully comprehend what is wanted?—North Country Cant': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1901, F & H; by 1920, it was †. Perhaps a pun on L. nux, 'a nut': a squirrel's store of nuts.—2. Tea (the beverage): U.S.A.: 1934, Rose; extant. By a clever pun on sense 1.

nux-man or nuxman. 'Some are more expert than others at pocket-picking; these are termed buzmen or nuxmen': 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 134; † by 1910. Cf. nux, q.v.

nygle. See niggle.

nym. See nim.

nyp. See nip.

nypper. See nipper.

O

O. A tramp's sign for 'No obstacles; you may do pretty well here': 1888, James Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; extant.—2. Opium: U.S. drug addicts': 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. C—H—M.—3. An ounce of narcotics: addicts': 1942, BVB. Short for O.Z.

O.B. The O.B.: The Old Bailey (or Central Criminal Court): late C. 19–20. Ware, 1909.—2. An O.B.: see obey.

O'Brien (Leverage, 1925) is short for John O'Brien (sense 2).

O.B.U. 'One Big Union. The ideal of the soap boxers,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1918.

o'clock, know what's, 'to be alert, wide-awake, shrewd': C. 19–20: not c., but (orig., low) s.

O for October is a swindling trick, now (1949) rarely seen but formerly much practised on race-courses and at fairs; app. the name, which occurs in Binstead passim, arose ca. 1860. It is explained by 'J. J. Connington' in In Whose Dim Shadow, 1935: 'You have twenty-six cards with one capital letter of the alphabet printed on each. You stuff each card into a separate envelope. The size of the envelope makes the top half of the card stick out, so that you can see the upper part of the capital letter. Then you pitch the envelopes down in a heap and offer to bet even money that no one picks out the capital "O". Whence the slogan "O for October" When our man went through the young gentleman's cards he found two capital Q's. In the bright alphabet of that youth there was no such letter as O at all. Your colleague on the bench seemed to think the game almost unfair. Three months.'

O'Leary. See Dan O'Leary.

O.O., give the. See double O, n.

O.P., the. 'I went to the "O.P.", as crooks called the Ohio stir,' 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington, '15 years in the Underworld'—Flynn's, March 9, 1935. I.e., the Ohio State Prison.

O.P.M. 'It cost me nothing to play the game, because I played it with O.P.M. (other people's money)', a thief speaking in The World of Graft, by Josiah Flynt, 1901; by 1905, low s.; by 1910, gen. s.; by 1920, virtually †.

O'Sullivan. 'A yap', Ersine, 1933; extant. Uncomplimentary to the Irish.

O yes. See oyes.

O.Z. A ration of narcotic, usually one ounce: drug addicts': 1933, Ersine; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex oz = 'ounce(s)'; in measurements of doses.

oak, n. That highwayman (in a gang) who keeps watch—'He that standeth to watch, an Oake,' as R. Greene puts it in A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 1591; 1608, Dekker in The Belman of London spells it oke. App. this sense was † by 1660. As on oak wood, so on him much depended.—2. 'A rich Man, of good Substance and Credit,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809 Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1850. Ex the value of oakwood as merchandise.

oak, adj. Strong; rich: 1859, Matsell; 1901, F & H; 1903, Clapin; by 1920, †. Ex sense 2 of the n.

oak towel. 'An oaken cudgel': 1859, Matsell; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A policeman's club'; extant. Ex oaken towel; the policeman's club, 'often of oak', is 'used to "rub down" refractory prisoners' (Irwin).

oake. See oak.

oaken towel. 'An oaken cudgel; to rub a man down with an oaken towel, to beat him,' Grose, 1785: less prob. c. than jocular s.

Oaths. 'The favourite oaths of the thieves at the present day are, "God strike me blind!" "I wish my bloody eyes may drop out if it is not true!" "So help me God!" "Bloody end to me!"': Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811.

oats and chaff, 'footpath', was orig. c.—in, say, 1850–65—before it > low rhyming s. 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857.

obey or obie. A post office: 1927, Kane; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'A small-town post office'; 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'Post Office . . . an obie; O.B.'; extant. Post Office = P.O.; reversed, it = O.P.; these have been corrupted, or rather, deliberately changed, to O.B., which is slurred to obee, obey, obie.

obloquium. See Awdeley's, No. 6; prob. Awdeley's coined designation for this class of objectionable servant. Recorded only by Awdeley in The Fraternitry of Vacabondes, 1562. Obloquium, 'a contradiction', is post-Classical L. observationist. 'One who looks out tempting objects for the skilful thief to steal, etc.': 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; † by 1920. Cf. look-out.

occupy. 'To wear. "The cove occupies the oaf's benjamin"', The fellow wears the silly man's coat': 1859, Matsell; 1901, F & H; † by 1920. Deliberately pretentious humour.

ocean wave. A shave: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928; M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

ochive. See oschive.

ochre, 'money', 'cash' (esp. in gold coin), may have been c. in its first decade (? ca. 1835–45), but by the time (1854) it was used by Dickens, it was low s.; app. first in H. Downes Miles Dick Turpin, 1841. Obviously ex the colour of gold.

octo. Oxyacetylene blowpipe: 1925, Leverage; extant. By compression.

oday. Money; cash: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; 1934, Howard N. Rose; et al. Perhaps a corrupted back-s. formation (pay > ayp > aypay > oday), but prob. ex a back-slanting of the first syllable of do-ray-me (do > od > oday: cf. ugmay).

odd fellows. 'Fraternal symbol: three dough-nuts and coffee,' Stiff, 1931: tramps' and beggars': C. 20. Derisive of the Odd Fellows' Lodge.

odd-trick man, 'a hanger-on at auctions', is not c., but s.

odds and ends, 'the scrap meat begged from a butcher for "mulligan"' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931), can hardly be classified as c.

odno, ride on the; usually riding on the odno, 'travelling in a railway train without paying the fare', B & L, 1890; 1901, F & H, quoting The Sporting Times of 1889. Here, odno is either back-s. for no do (here = 'not to pay') or nod back-slanged to odn, the final o being added for euphony—i.e., 'ride on the nod'.

off, be. To abstain from drugs; to be taking a drug-cure: drug traffic: since ca. 1910. BVB, 1942. Cf. coll. 'be off a thing'—to have taken a dislike to it.

off duty. See duty, off.

office, n., 'a hint, a private intimation', is recorded first in 1803 (O.E.D.), app. as sporting s.; but ca. 1800–40 it was also c., as in Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811, 'To give the office; to give information [to the police], or make signs to the officers to take a thief', and in Vaux, 1812, 'A hint, signal, or private intimation, from one person to another; this is termed officing him, or giving him the office; to take the office, is to understand and profit by the hint given'; 1823, Bee. In Australia, it is c. of ca. 1805–60, as in A. Harris, Settlers and Convicts, 1847; in S. Africa, c. of ca. 1880–1920. In U.S.A., app. c. of ca. 1850–1910; it occurs, e.g., in Flynt's Tramping with Tramps, 1899, and in H. G. Crickmore's Dictionary of Racing Terms, 1880. Information frequently comes from an office.

office, v. To warn; to instruct; to provide with information immediately (or very soon) needed: 1812 (see office, n.); 1819, Tom Crib's Memorial; 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man (U.S.A.), '“Joe spots the Swede coming, and offices me to pull some rough stuff”'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'Sanc . . . "officed" me to follow him out'; 1930, Burke (quot'n at patsy); 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant. Ex the n.

office, give the; office, take the. See office, n., reference of 1812.

office, tip the. See tip the office.

office lark, the. Stealing from offices: C. 20. Black, 1943 (see dancer, 6). See lark, n., and cf. caper.

office man. A headquarters detective: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1930 at latest, s. Cf. Front-Office stiff, which office man shortens and varies.

officing. 'A preconcerted signal': 1859, Mat-sell; ob. Ex office, v.

og is merely 'og; i.e., hog (a shilling). But sometimes it is written or spoken as though it were a word in its own right—e.g., in Robert Westerby, Wide Boys Never Work, 1937, 'Some of them drop a couple of og, to one bloke who works from the centre of the stand' and as in Baker (Australia), 1942, with variant ogg.

ogle, n. See ogles. The singular is very rare; it occurs in T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial, 1819.

ogle, v. To eye; to look at: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'We went into the slangs, and, on seeing a conish cove ogling the yelpers, the Doctor eased him of his dross-scout'; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1863, A Lancashire Thief (as a v.i.); by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.), low s. Ex ogle, n. (see ogles) rather than directly ex the S.E. senses of the v.

ogled, ppl adj. See queer-ogled.

ogler, 'a lascivious woman' (Potter, 1797), may possibly have been c. of ca. 1780–1840 oglers. A variant, ca. 1815–60, of ogles: 1821, D. Haggart, Life (see putter); † by 1890.

ogles. Eyes: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Ogles, c. Eyes. Rum Ogles, c. Fine, bright, clear, piercing Eyes . . . The Gentry Mort has rum Ogles, c. that Lady has charming black Eyes'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1785, Grose; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial, Appendix No. 2; 1823, Bee; 1826, C. E. Westmacott, The English Spy, vol. II; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; by 1840, low s.—the term had > much used in pugilistic s. by 1818 or so. The O.E.D. suggests that it comes ex the S.E. sense of the v.: unfortunately the n. ogles appears earlier in c. than does the S.E. v.i., ogle, 'to look with fond or amorous eyes'. This being so, ogles (or rather, its singular) prob. derives ex the Dutch oogelijn, 'a little eye', as H. Mayhew suggests (The Great World of London, 1856, at p. 67); or, less convincingly, ex Ger. Auglein, 'a little eye'.

ogling appears to have been c. until ca. 1750. In 1698, B.E. writes: 'Ogling, c. casting a sheep's Eye at Handsom Women'. See ogle, v.

ogre; ogress. 'Liberated convicts who keep a house of refuge for thieves. Words not generally used. Taken from Eugene Sue's "The Mysteries of Paris"' (pub. in France in 1843–44; in English translations in 1844, 1845–46, and 1846), The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848; certainly † by 1937 (Irwin), prob. by 1860. Cf. nasty man.

oh by heck. The neck: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming. Strictly, oh, by heck!

oh my. Near-beer: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. I.e., oh my dear, rhyming s. for 'beer': Convict, 1934, says that the fuller phrase is current on the Pacific Coast, and this is confirmed by M & B, 1944, as well as by Chicago May, 1928.

oil, n. (Concerning safe-breaking) 'Dynamite is seldom used, nitroglycerin, known as "soup" or "oil", being preferable,' Wm J. Flynn, 'My Life' in Flynn's, Oct. 18, 1924; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Arthur Stringer, Night Hawk, ' . . . Nitric ether . . . the "oil" or "soup" of the gentlemen of the Under Groove, the nitro-glycerin of the world at large'; Feb. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, Ernest Booth; extant. Cf. grease, n., 2.—2. The sense 'information' is Australian (dinkum oil) and New Zealand s.—3. Bribe money: Aug. 31, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, 'She didn't slip the oil to the cops herself'; Jan. 4, 1936, Flynn's; extant. Cf. grease.

oil, v. To use nitroglycerin on (a safe): 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. imm. ex sense 1 of the n.—2. To bribe (v.i. and v.t.): 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, several times in 'I am a Public Enemy': rather s. than c. Cf. sense 3 of the n.

oil-burning habit, the. The drug habit: since ca. 1930. BVB. Cf. midnight oil and lamp habit.

oil-can. 'A yap, heel,' Ersine, 1933; extant. Greasy, unpleasant.

oil merchant. A flatterer: 1935, Hargan; extant. 'Obviously from the slang "the oil"—flattery' (Godfrey Irwin).

oil of angels, 'a gift of money; a bribe' (ex the coin angel): not c., but s.—as 'money', very low s., e.g., in Frank Jennings, In London's Shadows, 1926.

oil of joy. Any strong drink: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. It lubricates the gullet and it brings joy.

oil of palms, 'money', 'bribery': not c., as is stated in Egan's Grose, but allusive S.E. that was orig. s.

oiled, 'intoxicated': low s. or merely s.; not c.—even in U.S.A.

oiler. A burglar addicted to the use of nitroglycerin: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. oil, n., 1, and v., 1.

oilskin, 'a bribe', like oiler, 'one given to bribing others', and oil, 'to bribe': s., not c. Leverage, 1925.

oke. See oak.

oke. A wallet: since ca. 1934. Partridge, 1938. Prob. short for okey-doke, itself C. 20 c., rhyming on poke.

old. Ugly: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1830. Ex the wrinkles of old age.

Old Bailey underwriter, 'a forger', is not c., but s.—prob. journalistic s. It occurs, e.g., in W. T. Moncrieff, Van Diemen's Land, 1831. One who, by his 'underwriting' or overwriting, brings himself into the dock at the Old Bailey.

Old Bates' Farm. See Bates' Farm.

old bird. An old hand in prison: 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, p. 32—but the term had been current from at least as early as the 1860's; 1899, The Star (Jan. 3); 1901, F & H; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 'An old crook'; extant.

old bitch; old mare. 'A woman who lectures, perhaps only with her eyes, as she refuses [money or food]', Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935: tramps' (since ca. 1910).

old buck. See native.

old chap, employed in the vocative, is declared in Egan's Grose to be c., but even if it were much used in the underworld, it was as early, and has been more, used elsewhere.

old dog. 'The "old dogs", as they termed the prisoners who were placed over them as flagellators, constables, and watchmen': Australian convicts': ca. 1820–70. J. L. Burke, The Adventures of Martin Cash, 1870, p. 129; Marcus Clarke, For the Term of His Natural Life, 1874, defines them as 'the experienced convicts'. Cf. the proverbial 'an old dog for a hard road'.—2. The bowl of a tobacco pipe: English convicts': ca. 1885–1920: 1890, B & L; by 1901 it was low s., according to F & H, who define it as 'dottle'. Perhaps ex its battered appearance—or its smell.

old donah, one's. One's mother: tramps': 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo Lippi; 1901, F & H; extant. Cf. the Cockney old woman, 'wife' and 'mother'. See donah.

Old Doss, the. 'The Tombs (New York Prison): 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L (id.); ob. Cf. doss, n., 1. Ex, or cf.:—2. Bridewell: 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1890.

old fake. A criminal undergoing his second probation: Australian: ca. 1840–1910. Baker, 1942.

old gentlemen. Gamblers', esp. card-sharpers', c. of ca. 1810–1910, explained in 1828—app. the earliest record—by George Smeeton in Doings in London. 'A well known macer, who is celebrated for slipping an "old gentleman" (a long card) into the pack . . .'; ibid., p. 27, 'A card somewhat larger and thicker than the rest, and now in considerable use amongst the "legs"': 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H. Old gentlemen are usually thin; cf. old lady, q.v. Perhaps, however, ex the s. sense, 'the devil'.

old gown, 'smuggled tea', may orig. (—1860) have been c., but prob. was always low s. H, 2nd ed. A disguise-name.

old hand. "Old hands", is a term in frequent use, to designate prisoners who have been long in the Colony [of Van Diemen's Land]; and especially those of notoriously bad character': Australian: 1834, 'Report upon the State of the Prisoners in Van Diemen's Land', by Backhouse & G. W. Walker, in James Backhouse, A Visit to the Australian Colonies, 1843; by 1850, coll. Ex the S.E. sense.—2. In Price Warung's Tales of the Early Days, 1894, we read, in the footnote on p. 11: "Old hand"—At Norfolk Island this term had a different application to that given it on the Continent [of Australia] in later days. It signified a "doubly-convicted" convict—a prisoner with both a British and a Colonial sentence,' the reference being to the 1830's and 1840's.

old hat. See hat, old.

old head. A veteran convict: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. old bird.

Old Horse, the. G. L. Chesterton, in Revelations of Prison Life, 1856, at I, 22, mentions that Cold Bath Fields Prison was in his day known as 'the Steel' and continues: 'There was likewise a distinctive name prevalent among [professional criminals] for every prison in the metropolis, and thus, the New Prison at Clerkenwell was styled "The Wells": Newgate, the "Stone Jug": Horsemonger-Lane, "The Old Horse": and Tot-hill Fields, "The Tea Garden"': in the same year, however, Mayhew, in The Great World of London (p. 82), says that 'the Old Horse' is the 'City Bridewell, Bridge Street, Blackfriars' and that the Horsemonger Lane Jail is known as 'the Lane'; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', 'The old horse. Horse-monger-lane Gaol'; obsolescent by 1889 (B & L), Horsemonger Lane Gaol having been closed in 1878.

old ladies' home. 'A brothel where decorum and the proprieties must be observed,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: mostly tramps': since ca. 1905. Both ironic and sarcastic.

old lady. 'A card broader than the rest': card-sharpers': 1828, G. Smeeton, Doings in London; 1901, F & H; ob. Old ladies tend to be 'broad in the beam'; cf. old gentleman.—2. A female 'fence': U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Euphemistic.

old lady white. Powdered narcotic: addicts': since late 1920's. BVB, 1942. Ex colour.

old lag, 'an ex-convict', may first have been used by the underworld (Vaux, 1812), and is to be classified as c. for the approximate period 1800–80. In Scotland, old leg: see leg, 3. The derivative sense 'artful prisoner' may always have been prison s. (not c.)—cf. old soldier—but prob. it was c. of ca. 1820–80, then gen. prison s.; in, e.g., W. W. Dobie, A Visit to Port Phillip, 1856 (cited by Baker, 1945), where it is written old leg. See lag, n., 3.

old lay, the. Thieving: since ca. 1730; ob. E.g., The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, Dec. 1744, old leg. A Scottish variant of old lag.

'Jeff asked Uptebake whether he still sent on the Old Lay'. See lay, n., 2.

old man. In a 'green goods' gang, one member is 'the Old Man, a respectable-looking old gentleman, who says nothing, but who sits solemnly in the Joint when the "beat" is being carried through', W. T. Stead, Satan's Invisible World Displayed, 1898, p. 108; ob. Ex s. old man, 'father'.—2. In sense 'head person', not c. (despite Life in Sing Sing, 1904), but s.

Old Man (or old man) Red Eye. Whiskey: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat (Glossary, s.v. skee); by 1920, low s. An elaboration of red eye, q.v.—2. A safe-breaking tool: 1925, Leverage; extant.

old mare. See old bitch.

old mark. A lady: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary); slightly ob. Perhaps 'a capital victim': cf. s. old (intensive adj.) and see mark, n., 1.

old Mr Gory. 'A piece of Gold', i.e. a gold coin: 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'A piece of old Gold'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. A personification of goree.

Old Nask, the. See nask, quot'n of 1698. Hitching spells it . . . Nass. (Wrongly defined in Mackcoull, 1822, as Tothill Fields bridewell.) old nob, the. See nob, 3.

old ooman's ticket. See dummy old ooman's ticket.

old raven. See raven.

old settler. An experienced rogue, e.g., in counterfeiting money: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; † by 1930. Cf. old hand.

old shoe, 'good luck', is, according to B & L (1890), c.; on what authority? If genuine, the term arises from the fact that old shoes and slippers are thrown at a newly married couple as they depart for their honeymoon.

old smoky. See ride old smoky.

Old Snoozy. See snoozy.

old squaretoes, one's father, is more prob. low s. than c.: ca. 1770–1850. Grose, 1785 (at back'd), 'He wishes to have the senior, or old squaretoes back'd. He longs to have his father on six men's shoulders, that is, carrying to the grave.' Perhaps ex the unfashionable, i.e. square-toed, shoes or boots, that are preferred by old men.

Old Start, the. See Start, 2.

Old Steve. Powdered narcotic: addicts': since ca. 1920. BVB. Personification—and mystification.

old timer. A prisoner that has served more than five years: convicts': C. 20; but after ca. 1939, gen. prison coll. Castle, 1938.

old toast, 'a brisk old Fellow' (B.E., 1698), is not c., but fashionable or, rather, fast-life s. B.E. does not, Grose does, classify it as c. old Tom, 'gin', is not c., but s. old vulture. A companion in crime: 1889, Clarkson & Richardson (see mobsmen); † by 1930. Vulture, because a bird of prey; old, ex the connotation 'hardened'.

old woman, 'wife', is not c., but s.—orig., low s.—2. See:—

old women, the. 'The stocking-knitting gang' at Dartmoor: since ca. 1865; ob. Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, 1877, at pp. 188–9; 1890, B & L, 'Those prisoners who, being unfit for physically hard work, are employed in knitting stockings'; 1901, F & H, who admit the singular. Old women affect knitting.

olges is a misprint for ogles (eyes): the 1735 ed. of The Triumph of Wit.

oli compoli is Moncrieff's spelling (1832) of olli compolli.

Olive (James D. McCabe, New York, 1882) is an error for the next.

Oliver. The moon: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Tis a rum Darky, and Oliver shows; 'tis a good Night, and the Moon shines'; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'When Oliver don't widdle' glossed as 'The Moon not up'; by 1794, it was current in U.S.A. (witness Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807), and the term recurs in The Ladies' Repository, 1848; 1797, Potter, 'Oliver whiddles, the moon shines. Oliver sneaks, hid under a cloud, has got his upper Ben on'—repeated by Andrewes, 1809; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Oliver is in Town, a phrase signifying that the nights are moonlight, and consequently unfavourable to depredation.—Oliver's up, the moon has risen'; 1823, Bee; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, 'Ducange Anglieus' ('Oliver is sleepy tonight'—does not shine); 1859, H. 'Nearly obsolete'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1880 in England; 1931, Godfrey Irwin and D. W. Maurer; by 1947, slightly ob. in U.S.A. A personification. 'A facetious nickname for the moon: designed, it may be, in a humour of compliment, to the Lord Protector,' H. B. Marriott Watson, Galloping Dick, 1896, p. 155, note.—2. See Oliver Twist, 2.—3. See Olivers.

oliver, root with the ; root (or work) against the. See root with . . .

Oliver blabs. The moon shines bright: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1880. See Oliver and cf. Oliver sneaks.

Oliver is in Town. See Oliver, reference of 1812.

Oliver is sleepy. See Oliver, quot'n of 1857.

Oliver sneaks. See Oliver, quot'n of 1797.

Oliver Twist. A fist: c. until ca. 1865, then low rhyming s. >, by 1870, ordinary rhyming s. Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, 1857.—2. The Oliver Twist, often shortened to the Oliver: a dishonest twist: racecourses': since ca. 1910. Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938, 'A dishonest bookmaker wishing his clerk to enter the bet wrongly, would say: "Put the Oliver on it," instead of saying: "Put the Twist on it"—which might be understood by the "Mug"'. I.e., the Oliver Twist punningly elaborates twist (a dishonest trick), and the usual shortening of the elaboration is the Oliver, not the Twist.

Oliver whiddles. See Oliver, quotations of 1781 and 1797, and cf. Oliver blabs.

Olivers. Stockings: tramps': since ca. 1870. Baumann, 1887. A personification of Romany olivas or hoolavas or oulavers (Smart & Crofton).

Oliver's night-cap is an allusive phrase, of ca. 1840–1910; in reference to moon-set. E.g., in The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848. See Oliver.

Oliver's up. See Oliver, reference of 1812.

olivet. Sense undetermined: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, Moreby Acklom, "'Wise-Cracking" Crook Novels'; ob.

ollap. 'Save the "ollap", "twalap" and "trepenns" (penny, twopence and tickey) and you might end up by being the "world" yourself,' The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. One-lap, two-lap: lap may be the Dutch lap, 'piece; strip': the three money-terms are, all of them, Afrikaans, but the third (trepenns) is not c.

olli compolli is a c. nickname rather than a c. designation: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'And of these Nick-names, some are given to them for some special cause: as Olli Compolli, is the By-name of some one principall Roague amongst them, being an Abram, being bestowed upon him, because by that hee is knowne to be the head or chiefe amongst them'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose—but the term was prob. † by 1740 at the latest, its occurrence in W. T. Moncrieff's play, Eugene Aram, 1832, being patently archaistic. Perhaps olli = ally = all; compolli, a reduplication.

om skottelgoed vuil te maak. Applied to a prison sentence only 'long enough to dirty the dishes': Afrikaans (and partially adopted by English-speakers): C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Lit., om is a preposition, '(a)round, about', which, with te, = 'in order to, so as to'; skottelgoed = 'dish things'; vuil = '(physically) vile, i.e. dirty'; te maak, 'to make'.

omee or omey; or, as in H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks, 1938, omie; oee., homey. A man; hence, a master, a landlord, as in the omee of the cassey, 'the master of the house' (H, 1859): not e., but parlyaree in origin and, predominantly, in use; nevertheless, it was common among thieves, ca. 1860–1905: see, e.g., The Echo, Jan. 25, 1883, and F & H, 1901.

on. One: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1910. Perhaps ex Fr. on dit, 'one says'; cf. oney.—2. The sense, 'aware, cognizant; alert', though cited by Jackson & Hellyer, 1914, was always s.—whether in U.S.A. or elsewhere.—3. Addicted to drugs: drug traffic: since ca. 1910. BVB. Short for on drugs or on the dope.

on ice. See ice, on.

on one's uppers, 'destitute', is not c., but s.—orig., low s.

on page eight. See page eight.

on the abram (or A-) sham. (Of beggars) feigning sickness: ? ca. 1840–1900. Suspect; for its occurrence in W. E. Henley's Villon's Good Night, 1887, does not prove that it was c.—or anything but literary c. Cf. abraham cove.

on the arm. Charged to one's account; on credit: 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex s. on the cuff, 'on credit'—whence s. cuff it, 'to write it on the cuff'. (Irwin.)

on the back and on the bat. See about town. With on the bat, cf. :—

on the batter. 'Literally "on the streets", or given up to roistering and debauchery' (H, 1860), is not c., but low s. But as 'engaged in prostitution' (late C. 19–20), it may be classified as on the borderline between prostitutes' e. and low street s., as in John Brown, I Was a Tramp, 1934. Perhaps cf. Fr. battre le pavé, 'to walk the streets'.

on the beach. Down and out: tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'Usually heard among . . . "sea stiffs"'. Prob. suggested by beachcomber.

on the beefment. On the look-out; on watch: 1889, B & L; 1890, F & H; † by 1930. Cf. beef, n. and v.; for the formation in -ment, cf. fakement.

on the bend. See bend, on the.

on the bleed. See bleed, on the.

on the blind. See blind, on the.

on the blink. See blink, be on the.

on the blob. See blob, n.

on the blue. Unlucky: since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942. Cf. the blues, 'mental and moral depression'.

on the bo. See bo, on the.

on the boost. Engaged in shoplifting: since ca. 1915: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Nov. 18, 1933, Flynn's, 'Lucy got nabbed on the boost'; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; extant. See boost, n. and v. on the bottle. See bottle, on the.

on the bow. See bow, on the.

on the budge. Engaged in 'the budge': see budge, the.

on the bum. See bum, on the.

on the climb. See climb, on the.

on the crack. See crack, on the. The first record is in Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859, at mill lay: but it was almost certainly in use from ca. 1811.

on the crook. See crook, on the.

on the cross. See cross, on the.

on the cuff. On credit: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'The mutt puts me on the cuff for the drinks'; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; 1935, Hargan; by 1937, s. in U.S.A.—teste Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 18; by 1938, current in Britain (F. D. Sharpe); by 1945, it was s.—still low—there too. Ex the writing of memoranda, telephone numbers, etc., on one's shirt-cuffs.

on the cushions. Riding on the cushioned seats of a passenger train, esp. as a paying passenger: tramps': since ca. 1910: see cushions; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; and numerous others—later. Cf. plush.—2. Hence, from ca. 1915: enjoying plenty of money—ease—comfort: tramps'. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

on the dead sneak. Acting with the furtive silence of a sneak thief; engaged in sneak-thievery: 1893, Langdon W. Moore. His Own Story, 'Thinking I was going over the line [the border] in disguise and "on the dead sneak"': extant. See sneak, n.

on the decks. See deck, n., 2.

on the dip. See dip, go on the.

on the dodge. Avoiding the police; fleeing from justice: C. 20; by 1935, s. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.) The criminal 'dodges about'.

on the double. See double, on the.

on the downright. See downright, on the.

on the drag. Engaged in robbing vehicles: 1785, Grose (see drag, go on the); app. † by 1870. See drag, n., 3.—2. 'When a "molly", or [effeminate] young man, dresses like a girl, for immoral purposes, he is said to be "on the drag"': 1889, B & L; extant. See drag, n., 8.—3. Horsecopers' e., applied to horses paraded 'on the off-chance of attracting the attention of a purchaser': F. W. Carcw, No. 747, 1893; extant.—4. Engaged in begging: U.S.A.: C. 20. Jack Callahan, 1929 (quot'n at plinger).

on the drop. See drop, on the.

on the ear-hole. 'It seemed that the whole town had arrived here "On the ear-hole" (begging),' Scott Pearson, To the Streets and Back, 1932: C. 20: 1938 (see bow, on the). Ex whispering in ear of the prospective giver of alms.

on the Erie. 'Living by informing to the police. "That mug has always been on the Erie," Ersine, 1933; extant. Ex:—

On the Erie! Shut up!—someone is listening; go on the Erie, to keep silent: racketeers', esp. bootleggers': since early 1920's: 1930, Burke; 1933, Eagle; April 21, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627, "Honest John," who might be "on the Erie Canal" (listening) and 'When one is on the Erie Canal he is listening in on a private conversation'; 1935, Hargan, 'Erie, on the—someone's listening'; 1937 (letter of Nov. 10), Godfrey Irwin, 'Eavesdropping'; 1938, Convict 2nd (on the Erie Canal); 1938, Castle; extant. With a pun on early, 'with ears straining; given to listening to the conversation of others'.

on the fade. See fade, on the.

on the filch. See filch.

on the fly. Earliest in on the high-fly, q.v. at high-fly. 'On the fly, getting one's living by thieving or other illegitimate means': 1859, H; 1890, B & L; ob.—2. See downright, on the.—3. The sense 'moving swiftly' is s., not c. Common among American tramps. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.)

on the gag. See gag, on the.

on the game. Thieving: 1738 (see game, n., 5); 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H, 'Out thieving'; 1893, F & H; 1928, M. Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story, 'He put her on the game (had her taught thieving)'; ob. See game, n., 4.—2. See game, the, 2: engaged in prostitution: late C. 19–20.

on the gear. See gear, on the.

on the good. See good, on the.

on the gow. See junk, on the.

on the grass. See grass, on the.

on the grift. See grift, on the.

on the gun. See gun, on the.

on the habit. See habit, ref. of 1929.

on the half shell. (Of bank and other safes) with the lock-combination overcome by, e.g., blasting: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, 'I touched a match to the fuse, and stepped to the side of the safe till the puff was heard. I then stepped to the front, and found the door open "on the half shell"'; † by 1920. Technical.

on the heavy. See heavy, on the.

on the heel. See heel, on the.

on the high-fly. See high-fly.

on the high gag. See gag, on the.

on the hip. See about town.

on the hist. See hist, n. on the hocks. Destitute: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. With an allusion to s. hocks, 'feet', with perhaps a connotation of down at heels.

on the hog. 'On the tramp; also, "busted", "dead broke"', Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (in the glossary); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, (an old professional thief speaking) 'There's only one of my old gang that's got any money today . . . The rest are all dead or on the hog'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, where it is defined as 'no good'; 1907, Jack London, The Road, "'Salinas is on the 'hog', the bulls is horstile'"; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, where (p. 213) it is applied to a city on the hog, 'with no money to give to tramps'; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, 'On the bum or on the hog means one who is broke or is vagabonding'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Aug. 5, 1933, Flynn's, Thomas Topham; extant. 'Forced to accept anything, much as a hog roots for whatever it can find' (Irwin).

on the hoist. See hoist, go (up) on the.

on the hop. See junk, on the.

on the hot. See hot, on the.

on the hammer. 'On the bum' but not 'down and out': tramps': 1929–31, Kernôt; 1931, Stiff; extant. A hammer comes down hard.

on the hype. See hype, on the.

on the I.C. See I.C.

on the job. Engaged in planning a robbery; while planning one: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; extant.

on the junk. See junk, on the.

on the kid lay. See kid lay, reference of 1785.

on the knuckle. See knuckle-bone.

on the lam. (As a fugitive) on the run from the police: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'He plugged the main guy for keeps and I took it on the lam for mine. He shot and killed the head of the household and I ran away and left him'; but by 1911 (G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society) it had > fairly gen. s.—e.g., among newspapermen. See lam.

on the lay. Engaged in crime; engaged in a specific criminal enterprise: 1782, Messink, The Choice of the Harlequin, 'Ye scamps, ye pads, ye divers, and all upon the lay'—but the term was in common c. use from at least as early as 1730 (see, e.g., lay, upon the same) and prob. from ca. 1710; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist, 'Dodger, Charley, it's time you were on the lay'; by late 1840's, in use in U.S.A.; 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 'Let's hear what's on the lay'; ob. by 1900, but not even by 1949 quite †. See lay, n., 2.—2. 'In ambush, or lying in wait': 1890, B & L; app. † by 1920.

on the legit. 'trustworthy; in earnest, genuine'; s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—2. Avoiding crime, living an honest life: criminals': since ca. 1925. Louis Berg, Revelations, 1934.

on the level. Honourably, honestly: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1901 (see escape); by ca. 1905, no longer c. Opp. crooked.

on the loop. Travelling at high speed: tramps': since ca. 1912. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. In the wiring of electric motors, 'the high speed is obtained when the controller handle is at the last point in its radius, or "on the loop"'; prob. introduced by mechanics that went 'on the Road'. (Irwin.)

on the loose. 'Obtaining a living by prostitution': 1859, H; prob. it was c. at first, but app.—witness H, 3rd ed.—it was (low) s. by 1864. I.e., running free, unrestrained.—2. Engaged in theft: 1872, Diprose's Book about London and London Life; † by 1910.

on the low gag. See gag, on the.

on the mace. See mace, on the.

on the mag. See mag, on the.

on the make. 'Anxious, or intent on gain, no matter how': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen, '... on the [make] auf Gaunerei, Schwindelei aus' (engaged in swindling; in the thieving 'line'); by 1896 (F & H) it was low s. Cf. make, v., 1, and make, n., 2.—2. Hence (?), engaged in crime: 1876, P. Farley, Criminals of America; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'Working at a racket'; extant.

on the mason. See mason, on the.

*on the mojo. See mojo.

on the mooch. See mooch, on the.—2. On tramp: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1902, Josiah Flynt, The Little Brother (U.S.A.: in nuance 'begging'); extant. Perhaps ex sense 1 (cf. mooch, v., 3).

*on the muscle. Engaged in pugilism: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum, which has also on his muscle, with the example, "The fellow travels on his muscle", he presumes on his abilities to fight"; † by 1920. Brawn, not brains.—2. Hence, angry; quarrelsome: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'He busts up to me strictly on the muscle. So I let him have it'; 1930, Charles F. Coe, Gunman; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Quarrelsome—overbearing'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1938, Castle; extant.

*on the needle. See needle, on the.

on the nose. See nose, on the.

*on the nut. Short of cash; (almost) penniless: since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict, 'If he'—the criminal—'owes money he is on the nut'; 1934, Rose; extant. Perhaps in ref. to nut, n., 3; perhaps, however, implying the necessity of living on nuts found as one walks the road.—2. Hence, 'Figuratively, a place where losses are taken. "He put a grand on the gee-gaws and took it on the nut"', Ersine, 1933; extant.

*on the Oregon short. See Oregon short.

on the pad. Applied esp. to highway robbery and to begging: C. 17—mid-19. See quot'n at pad, n., chiefly for the phrase maund on the pad. E.g., R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665, 'Being now upon the pad alone'. In The Young Prig, ca. 1819, it is applied to pickpocketry.

*on the pen and ink. 'A person disliked for any reason is said to be "on the pen and ink"', Convict 2nd, 1938: Pacific Coast: C. 20. I.e., he stinks: rhyming s., introduced by either Australians or Cockneys. Also, pen and ink, 'a stink; to stink': Kernôt, 1929–31; BVB, 1942.

on the picaroon. In search of anything profitable: H, 1874. Possibly but improbably c. A picaroon is a vagrant thief: ex Spanish.

on the pinch. Out on a thieving expedition or venture: 1874, H (at nick); by 1910, low s. See pinch, n. and v.

*on the pipe. Engaged in opium-smoking; smoking opium: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'When I saw an opium smoker doubled up with cramps and pleading for hop, and learned he had been "on the pipe" only three months, I got interested and began thinking it over'; by 1940, police and journalistic s. The pipe is, obviously, the opium-pipe.

*on the pling. See pling, on the.

*on the plush. 'By an unknown writer, "The Bum on the Rods and the Bum on the Plush" states the case of labor against capital in the language and accents of the hobo,' Nels Anderson, Tho Hobo, 1923; 1931, Godfrey Irwin equates it with on the cushions (in both of its senses); extant. Plush, to the naïve uncultured, betokens physical comfort and monetary well-being.

*on the pork. Synonymous with—and doubtless prompted by—on the hog, q.v.: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

*on the prig. See prig, go on the.

on the prigging lay. 'Out on a thieving expedition, picking pockets, etc.': B & L, 1890: current ca. 1820–1900. See prigging lay.

*on the prod. See prod, on the.

*on the prowl. See prowl, n., the sense being 'engaged in that particular kind of theft'.—2. Hence, living by one's wits: since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

on the queer. See queer, on the.

on the quick. See quick, on the.

*on the racket. Engaged in a 'racket'; crooked; criminal: since ca. 1921: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Howard N. Rose; by 1940, gen. s. See racket.

*on the rap. See rap, go on the.

*on the rats. See rats . . .

on the ribs. See ribs, on the.

*on the road. See road.

*on the rods. See rods.

*on the roll. See roll, on the.

on the rory. See rory . . .

on the rush. See rush, v., and rush, do it on the.

on the scamp. See scamp, go (up) on the.

*on the scare. Engaged in blackmail or, more widely, the extortion racket: racketeers': 1930, Burke (quot'n at scare, 2); extant. Blackmailers depend upon the cowardice of their victims.

*on the scow. See scow, on the.

on the scran. See scran, (out) on the.

*on the shake; esp. put on the shake, to exhort money from: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'Tony puts all the creep-joints on the shake'; 1934, Rose; extant. See shake, n. and v. on the shallow. See shallow, do the; cf. shallows, go on the.

on the sharp. See sharp, on the.—2. In U.S.A., applied to 'persons who are well acquainted with the mysteries of gaming, and therefore not easily cheated': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; 1890, B & L; ob.

on the sharpo. See sharpo . . .

on the shelf. See shelf, on the.

*on the skin. See skin, n., 6.

on the sneak. See sneak, go upon the; also sneak, upon the.

*on the spot. See spot, on the.

*on the spud. See spud, out on the.

on the square. See square, n. on the steel. (Walking) on the treadmill: 1889 (see grind wind), C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary); † by 1930. See steel, 2.

*on the stuff. Indulging in drug-taking; having a bout of it: drug addicts': 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, Glossary, s.v. 'Drug addict'; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor; 1934, Convict; extant. Cf. on the go—hop—junk.

*on the take. See take, on the.

on the tap. Begging for money: C. 20. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932; 1933, Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld; since ca. 1940, usually at the tap. See tap, at the.

*on the tar. See tar, n., 2.

on the tiles. 'On the spree', 'carousing': not c., but s.—orig., low s. on the toby. See toby, n., 1.

*on the turf. Indigent; 'hard up': 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Forced to sleep on ground'; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; by 1940, low s. See turf.

*on the up and up; hence, occ., up and up. 'Truthful; honest,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; 1929, Charles Francis Coe, Hooch, 'Dopey is busy tryin' to keep his collectors on the up an' up. He's got five guys runnin' around after money'; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 'It's an up and up place'; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, Allan J. Dunn; 1931, Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering, 'An honest transaction or a legitimate deal is said to be "on the up and up"'; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1932, gen. s.—2. Attempting to break a drug-habit: addicts': since the late 1920's. BVB.

on one's or the uppers. Being on the bum and nearly down and out: British and American tramps' and beggars': C. 20: 1931, Stiff (the); 1932, the Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps (. . . one's . . .); by 1935, no longer c.—if it ever were! I.e., walking on the uppers of one's footwear, the soles having gone (almost).

on the wake. 'Open to a proposal,' BVB, 1942: since ca. 1925. I.e., wide-awake, esp. to illegal propositions.

on the walk. See walk, on the.

on the wallaby-track; hence, on the wallaby. See wallaby . . .

on the wheel. See wheel . . .

on the whiz(z). See whiz(z), n.

on top. See bet on top.

on track 13 and a wash-out. See track 13.

on velvet. 'Playing on velvet. Playing on the money that has been won from the bank': professional gamblers': 1859, Matsell; 1903, Sylva Clapin, Americanisms; by 1910, s.

once over. A sharp, brief survey or examination of, e.g., a room; a (usually long) penetrating glance at a person: since ca. 1918: by 1932, s. It occurs, e.g., in Edgar Wallace, The Black, 1929, and in W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, same date, and was almost certainly American before it was English.

oncer. A pound (twenty shillings): C. 20: 1931, Brown; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; 1933, Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'He flipped a pound-note out of his pocket at her. "Take this oncer," he said'; 1937, David Hume, Halfway to Horror; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress; by 1940, low s. Twenty shillings once.

one and a bender. One shilling and sixpence: tramps': 1933, Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby; extant.

one and two; usually in pl., ones and twos (or twos). A shoe: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928; Convict, 1934; M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

one-arm joint. A cheap eating-house, esp. if self-service: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; Feb. 18, 1939, Flynn's, Cornell Woolrich, 'A one-arm joint is a white-tiled place that suggests a clinic. Two long rows of armchairs line the walls. The right arm of each chair is expanded into china-topped slab. You park your food on it. Hooks on the wall above the chairs'; extant.

one-call racket, the. A sales campaign in which if the prospective victim fails to buy at the first approach of the crooked shares salesman, no second telephone call or visit is made: commercial underworld: Feb. 19, 1935, The New York Sun; extant.

one-eyed Connolly. A gate-crasher: tramps': 1931, Stiff; extant. The term 'refers to the famous no-pay fight fan by that name. He has hobo imitators' (Stiff).

one from Mt Shasta. See Shasta.

one in ten, 'a parson', is not c., but s.

one of my cousins, or one of us, 'a harlot', is not c., but s. Grose.

one of the Burlap sisters. A prostitute: C. 20. BVB, 1942. A pun on synonymous bag, burlap being a material sometimes used for bag-making.

one(-)spot. A prison term of one year: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft (Glossary, at spot); extant. See spot, n., 3.

one thousand miles. 'A dark or black shirt,' Herbert Corey, Farewell, Mr Gangster!, 1936. Perhaps with a suggestion that tramps travel 1,000 miles-or-so before they change a shirt.

one-time loser. 'Big Bill Douglas was enjoying a year's vacation from his usual haunts up at Sing Sing at the expense of the State. To his underworld associates he was doing a short bit in the Big House, or a one time loser,' John Wilstach, 'The Gun Moll', Flynn's, Feb. 4, 1928; extant. See loser.

one-two. A quick getaway (evasion, escape): 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex boxing: two quick punches and then out of the way.

one-two-three and splash. A dish frequently served in prison, e.g. a stew: convicts': 1934, Rose; extant. After three dips, there remains but a splash—i.e., liquid.

one-way guy. An honest fellow: 1933, Eagle; extant. Ersine, 1933, gives the adj. independently. Ex the simplicity of a one-way street.

one-way ride is an occasional variant of ride, n., 2, q.v.; see also take for a ride, for take for a one-way ride does occur—though not very often. It has been used since the late 1920's; by 1936, s. in U.S.A. and adopted by British c.—as is implied in John G. Brandon, The Dragnet, 1936 (pp. 80–1).

oney, 'one'; occ., onee. Not c., but parlyaree. H, 1859, at saltee has: 'Oney saltee, a penny.—Oney beong, one shilling'. Italianization or a Lingua Franca-ing of one.

onicker, 'a prostitute', is not c., but low s. Walford's Antiquarian, 1887.

onion. A seal; esp. a seal attached to a watch-chain: 1797, Potter, 'Yack and onions, watch and seals'; 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A watch-seal, a bunch of onions, is several seals worn upon one ring'; 1822, David Carey, Life in Paris; 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, Appendix; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open, 'Bunch of onions, chain and seals'; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H, 'A seal: generally in plural'; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.), 'A watch charm'; extant. Ex the shape.—2. A tear-gas bomb: U.S.A.: since ca. 1926. Ersine, 1933. Both are lachrymatory.—3. Of, e.g., an enterprise, a crime: a failure: U.S.A.: since late 1920's. Cf. the s. use of lemon.

onion-hunter. 'Onion hunters, a class of young thieves who are on the look out for gentlemen who wear their seals suspended on a ribbon, which they cut, and thus secure the seals or other trinkets suspended to the watch': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; ob. See prce.

ooday. To do: 1933, Ersine, and at least a decade earlier; extant. Back-slang of the American variety do > od; + ay; oday > ooday to avoid confusion with oday.

oof tish, 'money': not c., but low s.

oozle. To steal; to acquire illicitly or surreptitiously: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942; Baker, 1945. Perhaps ex 'bamboozle'.

op or ope. Opium: 1929, Givens (ope); 1934, Rose (ope); by 1940, low s.—2. The sense 'telegraph operator' (op only) is Post Office and railroad s.—not c. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.)—3. (Also opp.) An agency detective: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Ex 'private operator'.

op die draad. (Of, e.g., burglars) on the look-out: South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Afrikaans c., adopted partly by crooks not A.-speakers; lit., 'on the thread'—i.e., on the watch.

ope. See op, 1.

open, v. 'Scold loudly,' The London Guide, 1818; app. † by 1880. Cf. 'He fairly opened up!' = 'He let himself go properly in his scolding or reprimanding'.—2. To kill; to murder: U.S.A.: 1936, Charles Francis Coe, G-Man, "What's old Knuckle been doin'?" "Knuckle's dumped," Rap snapped . . . "They opened him in an alley this morning"; extant. Cf. a surgeon's opening-up a patient; esp. applicable to a knifing or, above all, a spraying with Tommy-gun bullets: a being 'cut to pieces'.

open and shut. Adjectives applied to a town or city that is—or is not—"open" (available; comfortably livable-in) to tramps, beggars, criminals, provided that, from time to time, they pay 'protection money' to the police: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft (see esp. pp. 12, 16); extant.

open air, n. and adj. A county fair, a carnival, a sports meeting, or any other outdoor gathering suitable for pickpockets, confidence men, and their like: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant.

open big gash. Sense rather obscure, but prob. 'a squealer' or 'to squeal': 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924, Glossary, s.v. 'Squeal'; ob. In low s., gash = mouth; cf. spill one's guts.

open road. 'In criminal and, esp., tramp circles, a railroad or a railroad division easy for a tramp to travel. The reverse of "bad road",' IA, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1915.

open up, 'to become confidential'; coll.—not even s., let alone c.! Cited because the phrase has been classified as c.

open work. Safe-blowing: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Proleptic.

openers. 'Certain cards in a game of chance which allow the player to open the play,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: gamblers': C. 20—2. Cathartic pills: tramps': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. looseners.

operate, v.i. To be engaged in criminal activities, esp. theft or robbery: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, in reference to 'strong-arm' men, 'The West Side grafters of this character who have "operated" in Chicago off and on for years'; extant. A variation of work, v., 3; cf. operator.—2. To repair (e.g., an automobile): May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant.

operator. A pickpocket: ca. 1830–80: perhaps c., but prob. jocular s.: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open. Cf. operate.

opp. See op, 3.

opposite. 'No "lighty" . . . should presume to call her a "jintoe" . . . the lighty would be guilty of using "opposite" (obscene) language,'

The Cape Times, Cape Town, May 23, 1946: South Africa: C. 20. Opposite (opposed) to moral decency.

optime No. 1. 'Optime. Class. "He's optime No. one as a screwsman", he is a first-class burglar': 1859, Matsell; † by 1890. Ex a University distinction.

oracle. See work the oracle. Matsell's definition in Vocabulum, 1859, is defective and misleading: 'Oracle. To plan a robbery or any kind of deceit.'

orang-utang (or one word). 'A gangster, usually one who is a member of a rival gang; a big, husky man,' Ersine: since ca. 1927. Prompted by gorilla.

orange bowl. 'A large half-orange shell used as a shade for an opium lamp,' BVB, 1942: addicts': since ca. 1925.

orday. A door: since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933. Back-slang: door (> dor) > ord; add -ay. Cf. ooday.

order racket. 'Obtaining goods from a shopkeeper, by means of a forged order or false pretence': 1812, J. H. Vaux,—plagiarized in Egan's Grose, 1823; † by 1901 (F & H). See racket.

Orders of rogues and vagabonds: see the entries at Awdeley's (though these be merely dishonest servants); Dekker's; Eighteenth-Century Rogues.

Oregon boot. In My Life in Prison (1912)—he was a prisoner at San Quentin, 1901–11—Donald Lowrie remarks, 'Some years ago a parole violator was apprehended at Memphis, Tenn. . . . Before leaving Memphis the officer had locked an "Oregon boot" on the prisoner's leg'; he explains that 'An "Oregon boot" consists of a lead collar that fits about the ankle. It weighs, I should judge, between twenty and thirty pounds'—prob. a stone would be nearer the mark. 'It is either riveted or locked about the ankle . . . He can only walk by dragging the weighted leg behind him.'—1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; July 17, 1926, Flynn's; April 16, 1927, Flynn's, Joseph Fishman ('Convicts'), ' . . . The "Oregon boot" . . . used in some prisons in this country twenty and twenty-five years ago'; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1936, Lee Duncan; et al. 'Although I made several efforts to learn why this device is called an "Oregon boot" I never found out,' says Donald Lowrie. Perhaps the Oregon penitentiaries were the first to use this type of fetter; in Over the Wall (1936), Lee Duncan refers to it as 'a product of the ingenious brain of a former convict of the Salem stir': the Oregon State Prison, where Duncan himself spent many years.—2. Hence, a ball-and-chain: convicts': from ca. 1910. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

Oregon short, on the. 'When he'—the criminal—is without funds he says he is on the Oregon Short, Convict, 1934: mostly Pacific Coast: since ca. 1925. It recurs in Convict 2nd, 1938. Convict, 1934, says that it has been adopted from Australian s.—but the Oregon renders that supposition improbable. A famous American phrase is on the Oregon trail.

organ, 'a pipe', is more prob. s. than c. Grose, 1785.

Original Ham and Egg Route. The Oberlin, Hampton and Eastern railroad: tramps': since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Stiff, 1931. Ex the initials

O.H. & E., with a reference to vanished gastronomic blisses.

orphan. See rolling orphan.

os-chive. See oschive.

oscar, n. A revolver: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant. Perhaps a perverted reversal of roscoe.—2. A floor-walker in a department store; a hotel clerk: since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. With imputation of effeminacy, and reference to Oscar Wilde. Cf.:—3. A male sexual pervert: Australian: since ca. 1905. Baker, 1942.—4. Applied to any male disliked by the speaker: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. senses 2, 3.

oscar, v. To go away, get away, make off, decamp, escape; to walk: 1927, Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster, 'The morning papers told me about a gang that had stuck up a bank wagon and oscarred with forty thousand dollars in ready money'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; slightly ob. Perhaps cf. 'I'll be your Oscar Wilde an' say purty things to you' (old tramp to a 'road kid'), Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 1925. 'No reason for the word is known,' Godfrey Irwin.

Oscar hocks. Socks: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928; M & B, 1944. Rhyming, as is:—

Oscar Joes. Toes: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928.

oschive. 'Os-chives, Bone-handled Knives,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1728, D. Defoe, 'Oss Chives, Bone handled Knives'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (oschive); 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.: ochive); † by 1890 (B & L). L. os, 'a bone', + chive, n.

oss chive. See oschive.

ossified. Tippy: 1933, Ersine; by 1940, s. A rather arbitrary term, partly echoic.

ostler, 'a house thief' (Matsell, 1859), is an error for 'a horse thief'—and, in any case, not c.

ostrich. 'A lady . . . A silkster, ostrich, peacock, old mark,' C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 320): ca. 1860–1910. Ex the ostrich feathers worn in her hat; cf. peacock.

other, the. Buggery: C. 20. James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936, '“Doing half [six months in prison] I was.”—“What for? The other?” “Yes.” The pansy simpered'; ibid., 'He gets a stretch for screwing and another stretch on top of that for the other'. I.e., 'the other kind of sexual intercourse'.

otter. A sailor: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; † by 1820. Because of his (presumed) ability to swim.—2. Eightpence: not e., but parlyaree: 1859, H. Ex It. otto, eight.—3. An ex-policeman: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1910. I.e., a police officer that is out of office (an outer); an otter spends much time out of water.

ou gat. An 'old hand' or confirmed criminal: South Africa (orig., Afrikaans only; partly adopted in non-Afrikaans c.): since ca. 1890. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. 'Old arse' (cf. hardegat): more lit., 'old arse-hole', ex the wider Afrikaans gat, '(any) hole'; both the broad and the narrow sense are current in Dutch too.

ou masters soek. (Of prostitutes) to solicit: since ca. 1870. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Lit., 'to seek old masters': ou, Afrikaans (ex Dutch oud) for 'old'; soek, Afrikaans (ex Dutch zoeken), 'to seek'; with Eng. master, cf. Dutch meester.

oughday. Money: Sept. 23, 1933, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant. I.e., dough > d-ough > ough-d > ough + d + ay > ough-day > oughday.

ounce. A crown (five shillings): 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker, 'The Bum . . . swears he'll Nap you, unless you'll come down another Ounce'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'I sunk into a cove's benjy cloy, and eased him of eight half ounces'; 1823, Bee; † by 1901 (F & H). 'Silver being formerly estimated at a crown or five shillings an ounce', Grose, 1785 (at half an ounce).—2. A one-pound currency note: since ca. 1930. Black, 1943. Perhaps a corruption of oncer.

out, n. An alibi: racketeers': June 21, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens, 'Tho Rat'; Dec. 1930, Burke, 'The lip comes through with a swell-out for me'; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'An alibi . . . a means of getting out of trouble'; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer, 'A way to freedom or a means of getaway'; 1933, Eagle; Feb. 3, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; 1934, Rose; 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 'A way out of a difficult situation'; 1938, Castle; by 1940, (low) s. Short for a 'way out'; cf. sense 2, almost certainly the earlier.—2. An escape—a way of escape—from prison: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; 1933, Ersine, 'A means of escape'; Sept. 21, 1935, Flynn's, Convict 12627; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; Nov. 20, 1937, Flynn's; extant. Cf. sense 1.

out, v. To kill (a person): 1898, Binstead, A Pink 'Un and a Pelican (by implication—see p. 279); 1900, G. R. Sims, In London's Heart, '“Looks like I've outed him”'; 1901, F & H; by 1910, low s. To put out of life; perhaps ex pugilistic out, 'to render unconscious with a punch'; cf. out:—

out, adj. Dead: 1898, Binstead, A Pink 'Un and a Pelican, '“He is out”, gasped the Jew'; 1901, F & H; by 1910, low s. Cf. out, v.—2. Out of prison; or rather, released from prison: prob. from mid-C. 19; 1901, F & H; by 1910, low s.

out, be. To be engaged in bushranging: Australian: ca. 1830–80. In, e.g., 'A Pioneer', Reminiscences of Australian Early Life, 1893. Short for be out bushranging.—2. To have been robbed of: U.S.A.: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Ikey was out a red watch and sixty dollars'; by 1930 (low) s. Cf. out of pocket, deficient in the amount of (say, ten dollars).—3. To have been murdered: U.S.A.: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Pugilistic 'knocked out'.

out and in. One's chin: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

out and out, adj., seems, in c. of ca. 1815–70, to mean 'counterfeit' as applied to coin, as in Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, IV, pub. in 1828. 'He said he had got some out and out counters, meaning counterfeit sovereigns, to sell'—but out and out may here = 'excellent', as it does in non-c. speech.

out and out, adv. See do out and out.

out and outer. The senses 'cad', 'rank outsider', belong to s.; c., however, is:—2. 'A person of a resolute determined spirit, who pursues his object without regard to danger or difficulties; also an incorrigible depredator, who will rob friend or stranger indiscriminately, being possessed of neither honour nor principle': 1812, J. H. Vaux; Oct.

1815, Sessions Papers, 'It means, one of the very worst description of thieves'; by 1860, it had merged with the gen. coll. sense 'a person, or thing, superlative'.

out-front guy. 'I was supposed to be the out-front guy for the mob; that is, I cased the joints that we were to hang on our rods,' Colonel Givens, 'The Rat'—Flynn's, June 21, 1930; extant.

out glim, 'flash for "put out the candle"': a c.p.: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; app. † by 1900. See glim, n., 2; cf. douse the glim.

out of joint. 'Disarranged; supplanted; something going wrong': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1890, coll. Cf. the orig. sense of s. a screw loose.

out of line. Recalcitrant, hard to control, unmanageable; not in accord with prevailing code, customs, standards: racketeers': 1930, Burke (quot'n at Italian football); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

out of print. 'Not, at present, wanted by the police,' Kernôt, 1929-31; extant. Not on the 'wanted' lists. With a pun on the book-trade phrase.

out of the way for. 'A thief who knows that he is sought after by the traps on some information, and consequently goes out of town, or otherwise conceals himself, is said by his pals to be out of the way for so and so, naming the particular offence he stands charged with': 1812, J. H. Vaux—copied in Egan's Grose, 1823; app. † by 1900.

out of town, 'out of cash; locked up for debt' (Bee, 1823), lies on the borderland between c. and s.: ca. 1810-50. Cf. in the country.

out of turn. 'Not in accord with the code. "You're strictly out of turn. Get in line"', Burke, 1930: racketeers': 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. out of line.

out of twig. 'To put yourself out of twig, is to disguise your dress and appearance, to avoid being recognised, on some particular account; a man reduced by poverty to wear a shabby dress is said by his acquaintance to be out of twig; to put any article out of twig, as a stolen coat, cloak, &c., is to alter it in such a way that it cannot be identified': 1812, J. H. Vaux, copied in Egan's Grose, 1823; † by 1901 (F & H). Cf. twig, n., 2.—2. For another sense of put out of twig, see twig, put out of.

out on the long green. See long green, ref. of 1924.

out on the nick. See nick, out on the.

out on the picaroon. See on the picaroon.

out on the scan. See scan, out on the.

out on the shorts. See shorts, out on the.

out on the spud. See spud, out on the.

outer. See gentleman outer.—2. A coat (see top cover); † by 1940.—3. Hence, an outside coat-pocket: late C. 19-20. Partridge, 1938. Contrast insider, 5.

outfit. A number of tramps travelling in company: tramps': from ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex the s. sense, 'a commercial firm'.—2. Hence, a gang, esp. of thieves: 1933, Ersine, 'Any gang'; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief (particular); extant.

outing. See:—

outing dues. A hanging; or rather, a matter of hanging, a hanging matter: 1900, G. R. Sims, In London's Heart, "I'm hanged if I haven't done for him. It's outing dues this time if we're copped"; 1901, F & H; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; extant, though slightly ob. See dues, 2.

outside. (A place—any place, every place) not in jail; 1903, Josiah Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd, 'A boy in a Reform School with a "plant" on the "outside" takes a high place among his companions'; by 1920, no longer to be reckoned as c. Contrast inside.—2. Not included in an arrangement, a plan, a crime: racketeers': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. I.e., left outside in the cold.

outside man, in a gang of confidence tricksters, is he who watches for detectival, or other interference: American and British: C. 20. In, e.g., Percy J. Smith, Con Man, 1938, and, a year earlier, in Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief (U.S.A.). Cf. inside man.

outside pal. 'The thief that watches outside when his confederates are working within': 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1910. See pal and cf. outside man.

outside plant. 'A sly place in which the receiver generally keep[s] his goods after purchasing': 1859, Matsell; extant. See plant, n., 1.

outside toge. A cloak or coat. 1738, Ordinary of Newgate's Account ('An Account of . . . Henry Fluellin'); 1741 (see inside toge); † by 1860. See tog, n., 1, and cf. toge.

outsider. A person 'not in the secret; not of our party', i.e. not one of the criminal gang in question: 1859, Matsell; by 1900, no longer c.—2. Hence, in professional gamblers' c., not one of the card-sharping clique: 1859, Matsell (see rounder); in C. 20, no longer c.—3. (In reference to tools used by hotel thieves.) 'Terrible instruments, called outsiders—resemble pair of long pincers with end round and hollow,' The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), July 18, 1846; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1901, F & H (as English c.); 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 'Long-nosed pincers used on the outside to turn a key which is on the inside of a door-lock'; but in C. 20, the term is j. rather than c. They go outside wards of keys, etc.—4. 'I had to keep watch outdoors while the big fellows was inside gettin' the coin. A fellow that does that an' pipes off places that are to be touched up'—robbed—is called an outsider,' Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901; by 1930, no longer c.—5. An outside pocket: 1925, Leverage; extant.—6. Hence, 'one who favours the picking of outside pockets,' Leverage, 1925; extant.

ovah! Encore!; do it again!: San Quentin: C. 20. Castle, 1938. Burlesquing 'haw-haw English' pronunciation of over.

oval. "To oval", is a term in use among convicts, and means to so bend the round ring of the ankle fetter that the heel can be drawn up through it': Australian: ca. 1820-80: 1874, Marcus Clarke, For the Term of His Natural Life.

oven. A mould for the making of counterfeit coin: C. 20. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. For the semantics, cf. cook dough.

over; over-all. A coat: ca. 1860-1905. See top cover and, semantically, cf. outer, 2.

over(-)issue. A 'green goods' swindle predicted on the 'over issue' of money or stocks, which are offered the dupe as genuine, a 'detective' appearing as the money is about to change hands, 'arresting' the dupe, and then blackmailing him indefinitely after he has, as he fatuously thinks, bought his freedom: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant.

*over-night job. See overnight job.

over the Alps. See Alps.

*over the blue wall. In the hospital for the criminally insane; esp. in such a department or ward in a large prison: convicts': 1929, Givens; June 21, 1930, Flynn's; Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex the colour with which the exterior is painted.

over the hill(s). To—in—into prison: 1929–31, Kernôt; 1934, Axel Bracey, School for Scoundrels, 'Over the Hills—Penal servitude; Dartmoor'; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 'I went over the hill'; extant.—2. "Gone over the hill." That phrase means after you have served half your sentence,' Charles Francis Coe, Ransom, 1936: U.S. convicts': since ca. 1920. A variation of hump, n., 2.

*over the hump. See Hump, the.—2. Drug-exhilarated: addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. Coll. 'well away' (fairly launched).

*over the hurdles; esp., send over . . ., to exact the death penalty from (a person): June 21, 1930, Flynn's, Colonel Givens, 'The Fat': prison and police s. rather than c. over the left! I don't believe you!: low s., not c. over the letter. 'A partridge before 1st September, or a pheasant before 1st October,' Ware, 1909: poachers': since ca. 1870. A bird snared or shot out of season: not at the right time. Shot over the left shoulder, as it were, the right hand not knowing what the left does.

*over the road, send. See send over the road.

*over the stile, go. To stand trial: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

over the wall. In(to) prison; imprisoned: British and American: late C. 19–20: 1923, Sidney Felstead, The Underworld of London; July 20, 1929, Flynn's, Eddie Guerin, 'I Was a Bandit', 'Dago Frank had served twenty years for safe-breaking, while Flash Bill could also claim to have been "over the wall" pretty often'; 1943, Black; extant. On the wrong side of the wall.—2. Hence, specifically at Dannemora, N.Y.: from before 1920, teste C. W. Willemse, 'Behind the Green Lights'—Flynn's, Aug. 15, 1931; extant.—3. To go over the wall is to escape from prison, as in Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 1936, 'Us guys . . . pull wires to get jobs as guards, and you convicts go over the wall whenever you can'; 1940, Leo F. Stanley, Men at Their Worst; extant.

over the water. In the King's Bench Prison: Surrey-side c. of ca. 1780–1850. Jon Bee.

*overboard. Lost; beyond recovery: since ca. 1925; by 1940, s. Ersine, 1933. Nautical: swept or thrown overboard.

*overcharged. Over-drugged: drug traffic: since the 1920's. BVB. See charge, n. and v.

*overloading, 'putting too heavy a charge of explosive in a safe' (George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924), is a borderline case, with c. on one side and j. on the other.

*overnight job. 'An automobile stolen within the previous twenty-four hours and not as yet reported to the police,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: car thieves': since ca. 1923. Euphemistic.

overseer. See:—

overseer of the (new) pavement, 'a person set in the pillory', is c. until ca. 1820, by which date this long term had been discarded for overseer: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1785, Grose, 'A man standing in the pillory, is from his elevated position, said to be made an overseer'; 1797, Potter (overseer); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1848, Sinks of London (id.); † by 1870.

*owl. A night watchman: 1925, Leverage; extant. Stays up at night.—2. As the owl it = night-time burglary. See fall for the owl. The owl being emblematic of the hours of darkness.—3. Prostitute that walks the streets at night: C. 20. BVB, 1942.

owner. A prostitute's bully: white-slavers': late C. 19–20. Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940, 'She did not want to leave her "owner"'. Sordidly euphemistic.

*owner's job is a synonym of consent job, q.v.: car thieves': since ca. 1925. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Humorously euphemistic.

ox. Five shillings; half an ox, half a crown: c. of ca. 1930–40, then low s. In, e.g., James Curtis, What Immortal Hand, 1939. Short for oxford.—2. 'A labourer, working stiff,' Ersine, 1933: U.S.A.: since ca. 1925. Contemptuous: 'wide boys never work'.

oxford. Five shillings: 1931, Brown. Although used by the underworld, it is an adoption of rhyming s.: short for Oxford scholar, 'a dollar'—pragmatically, 'five shillings'.

oxo. Nothing; no money: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'If she comes to you with oxo, nobody can call you a ponce'; extant. A punning elaboration of the figure nought: 0: 'oxo'; compare the use of letter o for cypher 0 in telephony.

*oyes, oyez; o yes. A criminal's cry of warning to his confederates; a police officer's cry, giving the alarm: 1859, Matsell, 'The O yes of beef was rushing out of his oven like steam from a bull', the cry of stop thief was rushing out of his big mouth like steam from a locomotive'; † by 1930. Ex the oyez of official criers.

*oyster. A Society woman wearing stolen pearls and being paid by a big 'fence' for so doing, he desirous of obtaining, thus, a good offer for them: receivers': from ca. 1920: July 2, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch. Pearl-producing oysters.

*oz. An ounce, hence a ration, of narcotics: addicts': since ca. 1920, BVB. Cf. O.Z.

P

*P.A. American tramps' pronunciation of the abbreviation Pa, Pennsylvania. (J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary, 1899.) By 1905, no longer to be classified as c.—2. As 'prosecuting attorney': American police coll. or j.—3. See P.R.

P. and D. A castle: ca. 1870–1910. Recorded at the foot of p. 320 of C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 1889. Origin? Very improbably 'palace (or park) and drawbridge'.

*P.G. 'A camphorated tincture of opium from which the drug is extracted,' BVB: drug addicts': since ca. 1925. I.e., 'paregoric'.

*P.I. or pee-eye (BVB). A prostitute's bully; a pandar; a procurer: from ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1935, Hargan; by 1937 (Irwin, letter of Sept. 21) it was low s. I.e., 'pimp' syllabled. (Irwin.)

P.K. Principal keeper at a reformatory: C. 20: in, e.g., Stiff, 1931: reformatory and prison j.—not c.

P.L. A forged personal cheque: forgers': since the 1920's. Maurer, 1946. I.e., 'personal'.

P. man. A plain-clothes detective: since the 1920's. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932 ('pee-man'); Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941.

P.O. 'The much-feared Post Office Inspector,' Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering, 1931: commercial underworld: since ca. 1910.

P.P. A pickpocket: 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen; app. † by 1920.—2. A plaster of paris cast, to conceal a pretended fracture on a beggar's limb: U.S.A., mostly beggars': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

P.R. A probation, after sentence but before service; whereas a P.A., a parole, obviously can come only after service of sentence has commenced: convicts': since ca. 1910. Ersine, 1933.

Pa. Pennsylvania: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'They had me in Pa, but I ducked them neat'; extant. P.A. merged into one syllable.

pab is a misprint in The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.), 1848, for pal, n.

pack, n. 'House of a Poor Man': tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; extant. Pejorative: ex pack, 'a hurdle; a large wallet, etc.'—2. A gang: 1890, B & L, who call it 'old cant' and quote 'No hooker of another pack.—Oath of the Canting Crew', without saying where they have found or heard this oath.—3. A packet of cigarettes: U.S.A.: 1928, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; by 1930, s.; by 1940, coll.

pack, v. To carry (a firearm): C. 20. Lewis, Wolfville Days, 1902 (D.A.E.); P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, Moreby Acklom (packing a rod); by 1920, no longer c. except in such phrases as pack a gat (or rod), etc. Ex pack, 'to carry in a pack on one's back'.

pack a bit away. To serve a term of imprisonment: convicts': since ca. 1918: 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights, 'By the time he's packed that bit away'. Cf. pack, v., and bit, n., 4; also:—

pack in. To serve or complete a sentence: 1935, Hargan; extant. Perhaps ex s. pack in ('pack it in'), to yield, to give up, to quit, to cease; cf. pack a bit away.

pack of rockets. See rockets.

pack up. (Of dope-peddlers) to cease operations while the police are known to be active: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Ex s. pack it up, 'to cease'.

package, 'a sentence of imprisonment' (Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 1912), is not c., but low s.

packet; gen. the packet. A strait-jacket: 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (San Quentin, 1901–11); extant. Either by rhyming s. or perhaps on the analogy of s. cop a packet, 'to incur something disagreeable'.

packing. Food: 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life (p. 272); extant. Humorous. Hence:— packing(-)ken. A low eating house: 1909, Ware, who may be right to classify it as 'lower class' (slang). 'Because you pack the food in your stomach then and there' (Ware).

packing molly; the packing racket. The p. racket is carried on by 'packing mollies' and their accomplices: 1881, The Man Traps of New York, p. 21, "'Packing mollies" is the term applied by the fraternity [of thieves] to a certain class of dishonest [female] domestics After learning where the household valuables are stored they pave the way for their outside confederates to lay hold of the prize and carry it away. One of their plans is to remove the screws of the nosing of the [door]-bolt and also of the locks'; ibid., packing racket; ob.

packing (the) mustard. Carrying the hod: tramps' and labour gangs': since ca. 1905: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; and others. Some mortar, like some cement, looks remotely like some mustard.

pad, n. 'Pad, a Way' (i.e., a road), Dekker in 'The Canters Dictionarie' (Lanthorne and Candle-light), 1608–9, but earlier in combination (see high pad); 1610, Rowlands; ca. 1615, Beaumont & Fletcher, The Beggars' Bush, 'I crown thy nab with a gag of ben-bouse, | And stall thee by the salmon into the clowes, | To maund on the pad, and strike all the cheats'; 1676, Coles, 'Pad . . . also (c.) the high-way'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose ('the highway'); 1839, Brandon ('a walk'); 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A street; highway'; by 1890, †. Prob. from Dutch (or perhaps Low Ger.) pad = Old High Ger. Pfad, 'a path': O.E.D.—2. Hence, highway robbery: (written) 1662, The Cheats, by John Wilson, 'I was out tother night | upon the randan, and whoe should I meet with | but our old gang, Some of St Nicholas Clerks, | pad was the word, the booty Sett by The Chamberlaine, | we tooke it, and Shard it'; 1677, Anon., News from Newgate, 'This new Profession of the Genteel Pad'; 1693, Anon., The Jacobite Robber; 1823, Bee; † by 1870.—3. Hence, a highway robber: 1666, Anon., Leathermore's Advice (or The Nicker Nicked)—see quot'n at foiler; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1782, Messink uses it of a footpad; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes; 1817, J. J. Stockdale; 1848, Sinks; by 1860, †.—4. Sense 1 used semi-fig.: 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'Keep your own ways . . . Maundo'—i.e., maund o'—'your own pads'. Current throughout C. 18.—5. A street robber: 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Jon Bee; 1841, H. D. Miles; † by 1900. Ex sense 3.—6. Perhaps rather s. than e., and app. only ca. 1710–1850 in Britain: a bed: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1839, Brandon; recorded as current in U.S.A. in C. 20. (Jackson & Hellyer, 1914; Godfrey Irwin, 1931.) A natural development ex the mid-C. 16–mid-C. 18 S.E. pad, a bundle of straw to lie on.—7. A tramp (the person): 1859, H; app. † by 1900.—8. A written label or placard, worn by a beggar that does not speak; see pad, stand.—9. A walk: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary); † by 1930. Cf. sense 1.—10. Short for tea pad: U.S. drug addicts': March 12, 1938, The New Yorker, Meyer Berger.—11. A dark cell, a separate cell, 'chokey': convicts': since ca. 1930. Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House, 1943. Either ex padded cell or an extension of sense 6 ('a bed').

pad, v. To be a footpad: 1659, Anon., The Caterpillars of this Nation Anatomized (see quot'n at hack, v., 1); 1665, Richard Head, The English Rogue; 1698, B.E.; 1797, Potter; † by 1860. Ex n., 1: cf. 2.—2. Hence v.t., (of a highwayman) to rob (a person) on the highway: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers (of a 'tongue-padder' or 'setter'), 'He pads them in Town and his Confederates [pad them] upon the Road'; † by 1860—at the very latest.

pad, gentleman of the. This phrase for a highwayman is much more likely, even at the time of its origin (Farquhar, The Beaux' Stratagem, 1707), to have been a mere periphrasis than c.; possibly, however, it was (in C. 18, at least) not S.E., as The O.E.D. has it, but jocular s. The same applies to brother of the pad: 1693, Anon., The Jacobite Robber.

pad, go upon or on the. 'Goes upon the Pad, or a Padding, c. Robbs upon the Highway,' B.E., 1698; so too, 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'To go out upon the pad, to go out in order to commit a robbery'; † by 1860. See pad, n., 2.—Hence, (of a woman) 'to go on the street': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; very ob.

pad, high and low. See high pad and low pad.

pad, on or upon the. See on the pad.

pad, rum. See rum pad.

pad, sit. See pad, stand, and sitting pad.

pad, squire of the, 'a highwayman': not c., but a literary phrase. Tom Brown of Shifnal, Amusements Serious and Comical, 1700.

pad, stand. To stand and beg by the roadside, by holding in one's hand or having on one's chest a card or a sheet of paper inscribed (e.g., 'I'm starving'): 1842, implied in standing pad, q.v. at sitting pad; 1859, H; 1862, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV; 1887, Baumann (both stand pad and sit pad); 1890, B & L, 'Literally to stand on the pad, obsolete English for footpath, road' (B & L); 1901, F & H ('vagrants'); April 22, 1935, Hugh Milner, "'Swag"-selling from a stationary position: Standing Pad or Paddy'; extant. In C. 20, it verges upon low street s. See quot'n of 1890.

pad-borrower, 'a horse-stealer', is not c., but s. Grose, 1785.

pad-clinking, n. and adj. (Given to) hobnobbing with footpads: 1865, Henry Kingsley, The Hillyars and the Burtons: but this is prob. a literarism, not genuine c. Cf. pad, n., 2.—2. Admission charge to an opium den: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942, cites also the synonym lay-down. Cf. pad, n., 6.

pad it, 'to walk', is not c., but S.E.

pad money. 'Money for lodgings,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1912, A. H. Lewis, The Apaches of New York; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. pad, n., 6.

pad one's limber. To hurry; proceed: 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, "'Vot's that? Pad your limber and let's ear vot it is!'" But I suspect the phrase.

pad-prigger. A horse-thief: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1920. Prob. 'one who rides a horse on the pad (n., 1) to prig'.

pad roll, n. and v. 'Rolling dice on a bed in such a way that the roller cannot lose,' Kernôt, 1929-31: gamblers': C. 20. See pad, n., 6.

pad the hoof. To walk; esp. to tramp: ca. 1773. Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles), 'I padded the hoof for many miles | To show the strength of my flame'; 1788, Grose, 2nd end.; 1789, G. Parker; by 1850, low s., except among American tramps—teste Stiff, 1931, and Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. pad it.—2. (Hence (?), of prostitutes, to walk the street: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; by 1910, low s.; by 1940, †. Cf. pad, go on the, sense 2.

pad with a fakement, stand; usually as vbl n., standing pad . . . 'I used to stand with a paper before my face, as if ashamed—

"To a Humane Public.

I have seen better days."

This is called standing pad with a fakement. It is a wet-weather dodge, and isn't so good as screeving': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; † by 1930.

padded. (Esp. of shoplifters) having loot concealed about the person: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

padden-crib; padding crib. A boys' or youths' lodging-house: 1839, Brandon (the former); 1857, Snowden (the latter); 1859, H, who, however, synonymizes it with padding ken; 1901, F & H (padding-crib); † by 1930. Cf. pad, n., 6.

padden-kane. See padding(-)ken, reference of 1855.

padder. 'An high-way robber or purse-taker', Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610; 1671, Francis Kirkman, The English Rogue, Part III, where the sense is rather 'footpad'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'The third was a Padder, that fell to Decay, | And when he was Living took to the Highway'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., at Bully-Ruffins, as 'footpad'; app. † by 1790. Ex pad, n., 1, 2; cf. the v.—2. (Usually pl.) A boot: 1828, P. Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry, and Logic, 'My padders, my stampers, my buckets, otherwise my boots'; † by 1900. This may be not c., but low and/or fast-life s. Cf. pad the hoof.

padding, ppl adj. Engaged in the trade of highwayman or, more gen., footpad: 1672, Eachard (O.E.D.); 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Padding Jack and diving Ned'; † by 1890. Ex pad, v., 2; cf. padder, 1.

padding(-)crib. See padden-crib.

padding(-)ken. A low, cheap lodging-house: 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime, 'He . . . draws up fakements for the high-fly, at the padding kens'; op. cit., Brandon, in the glossary, applies it to a tramps' lodging-house; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1855, J. D. Burn, The Autobiography of a Beggar-Boy, which gives the Scottish form, padden-kane; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed., 'Padding kens (trampers' lodging-houses)'; 1857, A. Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1888, J. Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2; 1901, F & H; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.)—but ob. by this time in U.S.A.; Oct. 1928, Word-Lore; 1931, Frank Gray, The Tramp, 'Common lodging-houses, or "doss" houses, or "padding-kens", as they are popularly known to the vagrant and others of his class'; 1935, Gipsy Petulengro, A Romany Life, where it is spelt paddencan; extant—though slightly ob. Ex pad, n., 6, or, more prob., ex pad, 'to tramp as a beggar'; + ken. B & L derive it ex pad, n., 1: which origin does not convince me.

Paddington fair (day). 'Paddington-Fair, c. an Execution of Malefactors at Tyburn,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; † by 1840. Ex the 'real Fair at the village of that Name, near that Place' (B.E.), Tyburn being in the Parish of Paddington.

Paddington frisk, dance the. To be hanged: 1785, Grose. The term may orig. have been c., but it was almost certainly s. by 1820. Cf. the preceding term.

Paddington spectacles. A cap drawn over a malefactor's eyes at his hanging: early C. 19. Cf. prec. two entries.

paddle, n. A strap: convicts': prob. from before 1900; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1931, Geoffrey Irwin, who adds, 'No matter what the instrument of punishment, the usual name for it is "paddle"'; by 1934, prison j. Like a paddle, or an oar, a strap is flat; cf. the v.—2. A certain brutal punishment—a beating with a sand-covered paddle—meted out to convicts (see, esp., Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 1923); not c., but prison j., esp. prison officers' j. See the v.

paddle, v.; vbl n., paddling. 'One of the laws of the [prison] cell was that no man should steal another's bread. The punishment for this crime was a severe flogging with a belt, "paddling", as it was called,' Bart Kennedy, A Man Adrift, 1899; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Paddle . . . to beat with a strap'; ob. Cf. English dial. as in "I am glad our old woman's not here" . . . "Why? Would she paddle you for taking too much [liquor]?" dryly remarked the man of the world,' Jerome Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life (at Manchester), Vol. 2, 1901. In U.S.A., the term had been current since ca. 1850 for 'to spank' (see D.A.E.).

paddler; usually pl., paddlers. A foot: 1845, anon. trans. of Eugene Sue, The Mysteries of Paris, ch. III, 'When you have a stove under your paddlers, and a chinchilla boa . . .?' In C. 20, paddles: Partridge, 1938. That with which one paddles.

paddling. See paddle.

paddy. A padlock: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant.—2. A Chinese: Australian: since the 1920's. M & B, 1944. By perverse humour: Paddy, obviously 'an Irishman', > less obviously 'a Chinaman'.

paddy, stand. See pad, stand, reference of 1935.

paddy print; usually in pl. A finger-print: July 5, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; extant. The paddy is obscure; perhaps cf. pad, n., 8.

paddy wagon. A police patrol-wagon: since ca. 1925: 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; extant. Because its driver and the company are pretty sure to be Irish; or perhaps ex paddy, 1.

pads. See pad, n., 4.

pahnee or pahny. See parny.

page eight (or 8), on. Blacklisted: since ca. 1926. Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942. A reference to a police manual or other printed work.

paillard. See palliard. (J. Shirley, 1707).

pain-killer (or one word). Intoxicating liquor: 1933, Ersine; extant. Care-dispelling.

paint, v. To bribe: since ca. 1890; rather ob. Arthur Henry Lewis, The Boss, 1903, "'We've got eight of 'em painted,'" he whispered. "I'd have had all twelve [jurors]". Cf. smear, v., 2, for the semantics.

painted Willie. See Willie.

pair of braces. (Horse-)races: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

pair of wings. Oars: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A pair of oars'; † by 1887 (Baumann). Actually, wings is the c. word, app. never in the singular. Oars give wings, as it were, to a rowing-boat.

pal, n. A friend, a friendly companion, a comrade: 1760, Come all you Buffers gay (a song in The Humourist, of that date), 'Let your Pal that follows behind, | Tip your Bulk pretty soon'; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society (see chosen pells, pell being the Cockney pronunciation); ibid., 'The Pell rides across'; Sept. 1788, Sessions Papers (pell); 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters (Glossary), 'Pal. A comrade, when highwaymen rob in pairs, they say such a one was his or my pal', the text having pal; 1797, Potter, 'Pal, an accomplice, a companion'; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'Pall. A companion. One who generally accompanies another, or who commit robberies together'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial; 1821, David Haggart, 'Pall, companion; associate'; 1822, The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull (as pell); 1823, Bee; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1839, Brandon; 1841, W. Leman Rede, Sixteen string Jack; 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1846, anon. trans. of Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, Vol. III; 1847, A. Harris (Australia); by 1850, current in U.S.A. for 'an assistant to a thief' (E. Z. C. Judson, 1851); 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; to judge by H, 3rd ed., the term was, by 1864, low s. except in U.S.A., where it remained c. until ca. 1890, and ca. 1915 > gen. s. Wm Hone's derivation from Palamon is absurd; his suggestion, 'the Persian palaker, a comrade', is nearer the mark, for the term comes from Romany pal (brother; mate': cf. Romany paleskro, 'brotherly, friendly'), which is from Hindustani: cf. Turkish Gypsy plal or pral. (Smart & Crofton; Sampson.)

pal, v. See pal in.—2. To take a sweetheart or a lover: 1870, from a letter cited by M. Davitt, A Prison Diary, 1885, 'I am sorry wot you are lagged, and i wont pal with nobody wile your in quod good by Jim from your tru luv, Sally'; ob.—3. See pal with.

pal in. See palling in.—Usually as vbl. n., as in: 1862, A Prison Matron, Female Life in Prison, I, 61, 'There are breaks in the monotony of [the female prisoners'] existence; letter-writing days . . . days of schooling—days of extra-duties out of their cell . . . —days of association or "palling in", as they term it at Brixton Prison . . .'; ob. Ex pal, n.—3. (Of vagrants or beggars) to pool resources; share food, cooking, etc., e.g. in a doss-house or a casual ward: 1874, 'Detective', A Week in a Common Lodging-House; slightly ob.—4. To aid and abet in a shady affair: U.S.A.: 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, 'There are policemen and lawyers who pal in', the one with the other, in order to defraud a third party; ob.

pal with. To associate with; to throw in one's lot with: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers That Prey, "'[Hoboes] ain't bad blokes to pal with"'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, "'My Gawd," he says, "when I think of th' dopes an' rats an pigeons I used to pal with . . ."' by 1940, low s. Cf. pal, v., 2, and palling in.

palarie, 'to talk or speak', is not c., but parlyaree, though it has, to some small extent, been used by tramps. See, e.g., P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo Lippi, 1893; F & H, 1901. Of the same origin as parlary and parlyaree.

palatch, 'a hangman' (Leverage, 1925): the word and the sense alike are suspect.

palaver, n., 'talk, glib talk, smooth talk as of a confidence man': not c., but s. See Dict. of Slang.

palaver, v. 'To ask, or talk,—not deceitfully, as the term usually signifies; "Palaver to the nibs for a shant of bivvy", ask the master for a quart of becr. In this sense used by Tramps': 1859, H, but prob. since ca. 1840 or 1845; an earlier instance occurs in Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, 1857, at III, i. Ex the S.E. sense.

palaver to. See preceding.

pale Vienna. A tramps' term: C. 20; after ca. 1939, little used. Jack London, The Road, 1907 (but covering the period ca. 1892–1904), 'We even disdained to use coffee boiled in water. We made our coffee out of milk, calling the wonderful beverage, if I remember rightly, "pale Vienna"'.

palfrey, a horse, would seem to occur only in prigger of palfreys, q.v.

pall, n. See pal.

pall, v. To detect: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, 'It was difficult to pall him upon any racket (detect him in any pretence)'; 1859, H; 1901, F & H; † by 1920. Perhaps ex nautical pall that!, 'stop (doing) that!': itself ex pawl, a device for stopping the windlass.

pallard is a misprint (J. Shirley, 1707) for:—

palliard; usually pl. 'A Palliard,' Awdeley curtly tells us in 1562, 'is he that goeth in a patched cloke, and hys Doxy goeth in like apparell'; four years later, however, Harman devotes a section to the Pallyard: 'The Palliardes be called also Clapperdogens: these go with patched clokes, and have their Morts with them, which they cal wives; and if he goe to one house, to aske his almes, his wife shall goe to a nother: for what they get (as bread, cheese, malte, and woll) they sell the same for redy money; for so they get more and'—i.e., than—'if they went together. Although they be thus devided in the daie, yet they mete jompe at night. Yf they chaunce to come to some gentylmans house standinge a lone, and be dcmaunded whether they be man and wyfe, and if he perceave that any doubteth thereof, he sheweth them a Testimonial with the ministers name, and others of the same parishe (name a parishe in shere fare distant from the place where he sheweth the same). This writing he carieth to salve that sore. Ther be many Irishe men that goe about with counterfeate licenses; and if they perceive you wil straytly examen them, they will immediatly saye they can speake no Englishe. Farther, understand for trouth that the worst and wickedest of all this beastly generation are scarce comparable to these prating Pallyardes. All for the most parte of these wil either lay to thcir legs an herb called Sperewort, eyther Arsnicke, which is called Ratesbanc. The nature of this Spereworte wyll rayse a great blister in a night upon the soundest part of his body; and if the same be taken away, it wyl dry up againe and no harme. But this Arsnicke will so poyson the same legge or sore, that it will ever after bo incurable: this do they for gaine and to be pitied. The most of these that walke about be Walchmen'—Welshman. Also in Dekker, The Belman, 1608; in O per se O, 1612, Dekker, classifies 'palliards' as artificial 'clapperdogens', for 'they are not Beggars-borne' and rely on 'cleymes' or artificial sores to excite compassion; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, where, as so often in C. 16–17, it is spelt pallyard, though the glossary has 'Palliard . . . One whose father is a beggar born'; 1688, Holme, 'Pallyards, poor Beggars'; 1698, B.E., 'The Seventh Rank of the Canting Crew'; 1707, James Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (paillard—by Fr. influence, no doubt); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose. But the term was † by 1750 at latest. Ex Fr. paillard, a professional beggar or vagabond, wont to sleep on straw (paille) in barns. As a generic term for such a beggar or vagabond, the word came to England ca. 1480 and is S.E.; only in its specific sense is it c.

palling in, n. 'A connection formed by a male and female thief to steal and sleep together': 1859, Matsell; or between any two thieves (A Prison Matron, Jane Cameron), 1863; ibid., of a morbid passion between two female convicts (II, 46); Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's (but without in); extant. Cf. pal in, 3.—2. See pal in, 2.

palm, v. 'He paums, he cheats': 1785, Grose; app. ca. 1690–1830, for this v.i. sense and usage seem to be implied in B.E.'s 'He paumes it, he cheats, or plays foul'. Ex palming a die, concealing it in the palm of one's hand.—2. Of a person that is bribed, the underworld used to say that he 'is palmed, or that Mr Palmer is concerned': 1812, J. H. Vaux; ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Palm, to fee'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890. Ex money slipped into the palm by one who palms it to the recipient.—3. Implied in palming, q.v.

palm-cove; paum-cove. See pennyweights, palm.

palm nippers. 'The society thief is usually an excellent hand at picking a pocket, and a ready wielder of the "palm nippers", which are used to snip off jewels from the ears and persons of those who wear them': 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; ob.

palm oil. A money bribe: in English, s. (also oil of palms); in U.S.A., c. of C. 20: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Money paid as a bribe or for protection against police interference' (the latter nuance being a racketeer usage). Cf. oil of angels.

palm pennyweights. See pennyweights, palm.

palm the character upon (a person). See character.

palmer. The actual stealer in the process described at palming and at palming racket: ca. 1800–70. By deduction; also, independently, in Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed., p. 86, and B & L, 1890.—2. Esp. one who, on the pretext of obtaining small change (esp. of some stated sort), palms money—and then removes it: 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; 1864, H, 3rd ed. (of a beggar that pretends to collect 'harp' halfpence); 1869, J. Greenwood; ob. by 1900, † by 1920.—3. (Ex 1 and 2.) 'A thief that adroitly slips jewelry from the top of a show-case into his pocket': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; slightly ob.

Palmer is concerned, Mr. See palm, 2.

palming. 'Robbing in shops by pairs, one bargains as with intent to purchase, while the other watchos his opportunity to steal': 1839, Brandon;

1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; ob. Perhaps suggested by palming racket.—2. 'Exchanging spurious articles, e.g., watches, rings, diamonds, coins, for real ones': 1890, B & L; extant. Prob. ex palming racket, but perhaps, as B & L propose, ex 'the term in legerdemain'.

palming racket. 'Secreting money in the palm of the hand, a game at which some are very expert': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; app. † by 1890. Contrast palming, 1.

palone(y) or pol(l)one(y), 'a girl, a usually young woman': not c., but parlyarce (H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks, 1938: pollone); hence showmen's and cheapjacks' s. as in Philip Allingham, Cheap-jack, 1934 (paloney). Origin? Perhaps It. pollone, 'tender shoot, or twig, of a tree'; or a corruption of blowen.

palooka. This is not c., but boxing s. (orig. low) for 'a third-rater': 'a roving boxer who lives in the past' (Stiff, 1931). See my The World of Words.—2. 'Palookas—dishonest gamblers or gangsters,' Julien Proskauer, Suckers All, 1934: the sense is suspect. 'This is a strange usage, indeed': Godfrey Irwin, letter of March 9, 1938.

Pan. St Pancras Workhouse: 1864, H.

pan, n. A bed: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; app. † by 1820. Perhaps a perversion of pen: the pen in which one sleeps.—2. '(Old Cant).—Money,' say F & H, citing Halliwell (1847), who merely says, 'Money, a cant term', without dates or sources. If it is genuine, the word may derive from the fact that both culinary pans and coins are round: which seems rather feeble.—3. "'Pan" and "Lump" are now terms applied to all work-houses by tramps and costers': 1874, H; 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo; 1901, F & H; ob. Common n., ex Pan.—4. A person's face: U.S.A.: ca. 1886, in Lewis E. Lawes, Cell 202, Sing Sing; by 1900, low s. Pejorative: cf. s. dial and esp. mug.—5. An arrest: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 2 of the v.—6. A police station: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Likewise.—7. A woman's genitals: U.S.A.: 1927, Kane; extant.

pan, v. To defame: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; but it soon >, perhaps it always had been s.; cf. pan (someone's) face, 'to criticize adversely', as in John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928.—2. Hence, to arrest (a person): 1925, Leverage; extant.—3. To beg (usually v.t.): British tramps': since ca. 1920. W. L. Gibson-Cowan, Loud Report, 1937. A back-formation ex pan-handling, q.v.—4. Likewise in Britain, to strike, to fight (a person): since ca. 1930. Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940. Prob. ex sense 4 of the n.: to punch in the face.

pan-handle, v. See pan-handling.

pan-handler. 'Along the Pacific Coast, an undeserving beggar, and, specifically, any tough character who is out of a job, and is ready to go into the "hold-up" business,' Clapin, Americanisms, 1903, but occurring in George Ade, Doc Horne, 1899, neutrally as in Hapgood; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, where it is applied to any beggar anywhere in the U.S.A.; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing ('professional beggar'); 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo (see quot'n at moocher); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1925, s. 'From those long-handled arrangements shaped like a frying-pan, which they push at you in churches'

(Clapin); Irwin, however, derives it from 'his bowl for the receipt of alms'.

pan-handling, vbl n.; occ., pan-handle as v.i. Begging; to beg: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo, '[“Fat”] only “panhandles” when his money is gone He seldom “panhandles” in summer'; by 1925, it was s.—to judge from the Glen H. Mullin quot'n at stemming. By back-formation ex pan-handler.

pan-handling con. 'Woman who begs for an organization, saying that it is for charity or some good cause, and then pockets all of the money,' Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941: beggars' and tramps': since ca. 1910.

pan-yen. See pen-yen.

panam. See pannam.

panarly. See at nantee.

pancake, 'a girl, a young woman': low s., not c. Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls, 1931.

pandemonium. 'Learned gamblers use this word for a gambling-house, instead of "hell",' Jon Bec, 1823: possibly c., prob. gaming s.

pander. In 'sacking law' (q.v.), 'the Bawd if it be a woman, a Pander,' R. Greene informs us in A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 1591, the bawd, if a man, being called an apple squire (q.v.): this specific sense, current ca. 1580–1630, is almost certainly to be classified as c., for in S.E. a pander (ex L. Pandarus of Classical legend) is a male procurer or go-between.

panea is a misprint for pan(n)am. Sinks of London, 1848.

panel. A prostitute that is an inmate of a panel crib: ca. 1860–1930. B & L, 1890; Chicago May, 1928. Short for panel-girl or -woman.

panel, come the. To rob (a man) by the 'panel dodge': 1848, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, '“Come the panel over him, eh? Was the swell a goldfinch?”'; ob.

panel(-)crib. A harlot's room, a courtesan's apartment: 1848, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York, 'We will leave her to seek a victim for her panel-crib, for she has long been an active panel-thief'; 1859, Matsell, 'A place especially and ingeniously fitted up for the robbery of gentlemen who are enticed thereto by women who make it their business to pick up strangers. Panel-cribs are sometimes called badger-cribs, shakedown, touch-cribs'; 1865, Tricks and Traps of New York; 1880, R. K. Fox; 1890, B & L; by 1901 (F & H), low s., though Clapin, 1903, implies that it is still c. Prob. ex panny, 3.

panel(-)den. A brothel where the ulterior activity is theft: 1859, Bartlett, Americanisms, 2nd ed.; by 1901 (F & H), prob. it was low s., although Clapin, 1903, lists it as c. A—prob. deliberate—variant of the preceding.

panel(-)dodge. The robbing of a harlot's customer either by the prostitute that has 'picked up' the prospective victim or by a confederate of hers: 1885, Sir Richard Burton, The Thousand and One Nights, I, 323, 'The panel-dodge is common throughout the East': prob. not authentic c., but a literarism—an imagined or invented synonym of:—

panel(-)game. The practice of robbery effected in a 'panel house' or 'panel crib' (qq.v.): 1859, Bartlett, 2nd ed.; 1872, E. Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York; 1881, The Man Traps of New York; 1891, James Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; by 1910, police s. The origin of the term is explained in Man Traps (p. 18), thus: 'The room is papered and a panel cut in the paper, or one of the panels of a door opening into an adjoining room is fitted to slide softly The bolts, bars, and locks are peculiar, and so made as to lock on the inside, though they do not. They really fasten on the outside. And while the visitor imagines he has locked all-comers out, he is really locked in himself, and cannot escape till he has been robbed.'—2. Hence, in the 'sawdust game', q.v.: 'While the two men [swindler and dupe] are busy looking at the bonds, a confederate in the next room opens a slide or panel at the back of the desk and substitutes another satchel in the place of the one with the greenbacks. The customer is then handed the bag and hurries away, and the swindler closes up his office for a month or so and moves to another similarly equipped establishment': 1886, Thomas Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America; 1891, Darkness and Daylight, where it is implied that the swindle is no longer practised.

panel-girl, a synonym of panel-woman, q.v., is not c.

panel(-)house. A house containing rooms let off to harlot thieves: 1848, Judson: see remark in:—

panel-thief. A thief operating in a 'panel crib' (q.v.): 1848, E. Z. C. Judson: possibly c., but prob. police s. Matsell, 1859, says that it is also applied to one who fits up a 'panel-crib'. The term panel-thieving (The Man Traps of New York, 1881) was not c., but police j.

panel-woman, 'a prostitute in a panel house' (1881, The Man Traps of New York), is not c.; prob., police s.

panel-worker. A thief working the panel game: 1903, Sylva Clapin, A New Dict. of Americanisms; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'), where it is applied specifically to the decoy, i.e. to the woman; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Panel-worker. Thief who uses woman decoy'; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; by 1928, indeed by 1920, it had > also police s.; and after ca. 1928, is not to be classified as c.

paneller. 'A panel thief': 1848, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, where it is misspelt panneller; † by 1930. Cf. panel crib.

panelling is the vbl n. variant of panel game: late C. 19–20. In, e.g., Chicago May, 1928. Cf. badgering and creeping.

pany. Five pounds (sterling): 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, "'A fiver. Five pounds, five nicker, five quid, five oncers, pany bar. That clear?" The Gilt Kid laughed'; extant. A corruption of It. cinque? : cf. s. fiver.

panhandle(r). See pan-handle(r) in the pan group.

panic. Shortage of narcotics: drug addicts': since ca. 1918. Kernôt, 1929–31; 1942, BVB. It causes them to panic.

panic man. See gapper.—2. A drug trafficker: 1942, BVB.

pannam or pannum; occ., panam or panum. 'Pannam, bread,' Harman, 1566; ca. 1635 (see quot'n at casum); 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, "'Pannam" . . . bread'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E. (panam); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (panam); 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed. (panum); 1725,

A New Canting Dict. (panam); 1785, Grose (pannam); 1797, Potter (panam); 1812, J. H. Vaux (pannum); 1823, Bee (panum, as a Gypsy word—which it is not); 1837, B. Disraeli, Venetia; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'Vill yer have some panum, eh?'; 1856, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue (panum); 1859, H. (pannam); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); ca. 1864, The Chickaleary Cove; 1887, Baumann, but prob. † by 1880 at latest, toke having superseded it—although Ware, it is true, records it without mentioning or implying obsolescence. Ex L. panis, 'bread' + am or um, a common c. suffix.—2. Hence (erroneously?), victuals: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by 1890 (B & L), low s.

pannam-bound or pannum-bound. (Of a prisoner) whose rations have been stopped or much reduced: 1859, H.; † by 1890. See pannam.

pannam (or -um) fence. 'Pannum (or cokey-) fence = a street pastry cook,' F & H, 1901; almost certainly an error for:— pannam (or -um) fencer. A vendor—esp. a street vendor—of bread: 1859, implied in cakey-pannum fencer; 1887, Baumann, but prob. † by 1885. See pannam and fencer, 2.

pan(n)am-struck or pan(n)um-struck. 'Panum-struck, very hungry, wanting something to eat': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; † by 1900. Stricken for lack of 'pannam' (bread).

panneller. See paneller.

panney; pannie. See panny.

pannum. See pannam.

panny. Road, highway; always the pann(e)y, generic for 'the road', or particular for some specifically named highway: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (see quot'n at slaving gloak); app. † by 1830. The origin is problematic. The sense-developments of drum perhaps afford a parallel. Sense 2 may be independent of 1 and may be derived ex Romany pan, pand, 'to shut, fasten'.—2. 'A house. To do a panny; to rob a house': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee, 'A small house'; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; 1859, H, 'A house—public or otherwise'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1909, Ware, who classifies it as low s. and defines it as 'a familiar house'—does he mean a brothel?; app. † by 1920. 'Probably, panny originally meant the butler's pantry, where the knives and forks, spoons, &c. are usually kept' (Grose, 2nd ed.).—3. Hence, an apartment: 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London, in reference to the apartments of actresses and prostitutes; 1823, Bee, 'A . . . low apartment; a dwelling shed, or gipsy building without stairs'; 1828, P. Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry, and Logic, 'My Panny—that is, my Assembly Room'; † by 1901 (F & H).—4. (Also ex sense 2.) A burglary: ca. 1790–1880: e.g., G. W. M. Reynolds, 'The House-Breaker's Song' in Pickwick Abroad (ch. XXVI), 'I ne'er was a nosc, for the reglars came| Whenever a pannie was done'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, where it is incorrectly given as pany—an error aggravated by Matsell, Vocabulum (U.S.A.), 1859, panzy (sic) being there defined as a burglar; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1901 (F & H).

pann(e)y, do a. See panny, 2. Here, do = rob.

pann(e)y, flash. See flash panney.

pann(e)y, scamp on the. To be a highwayman:

1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'I'll scamp on the Panney; I'll go on the Highway'; † by 1830. See panny, 1.

pann(e)y lay, the. Burglary: a C. 19 extension of panny, 4.

panny(-)man. 'Housebreakers . . . Cracksmen, pannymen': 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1860, H, 2nd ed., 'Panny Men, housebreakers': 1890, B & L; app. † by 1901 (F & H). See panny, 2.

pannyman. See panny man.

panny(-)work. A burglary: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; † by 1920. See panny, 4.

pano. Bread: French-Canadian tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, p. 95, 'If he can have his daily páno and his usual supply of dohun (tobacco), he [the French-Canadian tramp] is a comparatively happy fellow'; ob. A corruption of Fr. pain (bread).

pansy. With its c. sense, ('a passive homosexual': Ersine, 1933; Rose, 1934; Hargan, 1935: s. by 1937, Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 21) cf. daddy, 4; app. since ca. 1920. A special application of English s. pansy, 'an effeminate'.

panter. A hart: 1698, B.E.; 1785, Grose, 'That animal is, in the psalms, said to pant after the fresh water brooks'; † by 1870.—2. Hence, the heart: 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (glossary and Song XVIII); 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'The human heart, which often pants in time of danger'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); app. † by 1887 (Baumann).

panzy. A burglar: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. Perhaps a perversion of panel-worker; yet cf. panny, 4, ref. of 1859.—2. See panny, 4, ref. of 1857, for what is prob. a mere misprint.

panum. See pannam.

panyar, 'to seize, to kidnap' (Charles Johnson, Pirates, I, 417; published in 1724), is not pirates' c. but West African pidgin.

pap. Paper money; bank and/or currency notes: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, "'We have had a lucky touch for a half-century in pap" (50 l. in paper, i.e. notes)'; 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; in C. 20 current in Australia, esp. among 'con men' (Baker, 1945); by 1920, ob. in Britain. Probably not from paper but from:—2. Counterfeit bank-notes, collectively: April 1820, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey (p. 325), 'He said to the prisoner'—charged with, and found guilty of, disposing of counterfeit notes—"Here is a chap that will pass pap for you, and I know he is all right" (he wasn't: he gave evidence for the Crown); † by 1900. Ex its softness: in comparison with false coin.

pap-feeder. A spoon: 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London, Act III; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, iii; † by 1900. Cf. feeder and wedge feeder.

pap(-)lap. An infant: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. The infant subsists on pap and exists on laps.

papa. A woman's lover: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (p. 261); in the white-slave traffic, a prostitute's pimp—as in Robert Neumann, 23 Women, 1940. Cf. the American s. sugar daddy.—2. A Lincoln automobile: since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. An old and respected make of car.

pape. "'Here's the pape's"—and the girl handed him the letters of recommendation': 1848, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York; † by 1910. Obviously 'paper'.

paper, n. 'Stocks and bonds', J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; by 1910, commercial s.; by 1920, commercial j.—2. Forged notes or cheques; marked cards: 1914 (implied in paper-hanger); 1925, Leverage; July 5, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick, 'Phony checks or forged documents'; 1933, Ersine, 'A forged check'; Aug. 12, 1933, Flynn's; 1934, Rose; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland; 1941, Maurer; extant. Papers, as 'playing cards', has existed in U.S.A. since ca. 1840.—3. See paper guy.—4. Money in general: July 5, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; extant. Ex senses 1, 2.—5. A railroad ticket: tramps': from ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex the long tickets issued for very long journeys (Irwin).—6. A drug-traffic synonym of card, q.v.: BVB, 1942.

paper, v. 'To cover (say with [a news-]paper), as a stall, in order to conceal the actions of a confederate,' Leverage, 1925; extant.—2. 'To pass worthless or forged checks,' Leverage, 1925; 1941, Maurer, 'Paper the Burg. To pass a quantity of forged checks'; extant. Ex sense 2 of the n.

paper guy, often shortened to paper. 'The one who covers in a case of theft; a stall,' Leverage, 1925; extant. He uses a newspaper as a screen: cf. paper, v., 1.

paper-hanger. A forger; or, one who passes bad paper-money: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by Moreby Acklom; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; 1931, John Wilstach; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'One who passes bad cheques or counterfeit [paper-]money'; Aug. 12, 1933, Flynn's; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; 1935, Amos Squire, Sing Sing Doctor; 1938, Convict 2nd; by 1941 (John G. Brandon, The Death in the Quarry), also English; 1941, Maurer (2nd nuance); extant. Since ca. 1930, current also in Australia (Baker, 1942). Cf. paper-layer, by which it may have been suggested. The corresponding verbal n. is paper-hanging: as, e.g., in Flynn's, Aug. 30, 1930, Lawrance M. Maynard.

paper-layer. 'I went to the coast with a mob of paper-layers . . . I went to California with others to pass worthless checks,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, p. 261; extant. Cf. the earlier layer-down and note-layer.

paper-maker. 'Paper-Makers—a nickname for beggars who pretend to belong to a paper mill, or that they are agents to collect rags': 1839, Brandon; 1859, H; app. † by 1920.

paper man. A variant of paper-hanger: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; March 1941, The American Mercury, John Kobler; extant.—2. A variant of paper guy: 1925, Leverage.

paper(-)pusher. ' . . . The best paper pusher in the West. His racket had been to steal post-office money-order blanks and stamps, and then make his own money-orders,' Jim Tully, 'Jungle Justice' in The American Mercury, April 1928; Maurer, 1941, defines it as a passer of counterfeit paper money. Cf. paper-hanger and pusher.

paper-work. 'Forgery; stalling with a paper; putting down forged or worthless checks, notes, etc.,' Leverage, 1925; extant. See paper, n. and v., in the various senses; cf. the other paper combinations.

paper-worker, 'a street vendor of ballads, cheap fiction, and other reading matter', is not c., but s. See esp. Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 1851 (p. 214).

papers, get the. See get . . .

paplar, papler, poplar, popler, poplers, etc. 'Poppelars, porage,' Harman, 1566; ibid., in the dialogue, 'And popplarr of yarum . . . and mylke porrage'; 1608-9, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie' (Lanthorne and Candle-light), 'Poplars, Pottage'; 1611, Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 'Pecke, pennam, lay or popler'; 1665, R. Head, 'Paplar . . . Milk-pottage'; 1688, Holme, 'Poplar, Pottage'; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley (papler); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Pottage, Poplars'; 1785, Grose (papler and poplers); 1797, Potter (poplers); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1848, Sinks of London (id.); † by 1887 (Baumann). I.e., pap (soft food) + a disguise-suffix.

pappy. 'The ideal victim for a pickpocket is an elderly man whose clothes are baggy and whose pockets have become sagged. Such a victim is called a "pappy";' Convict 12627, in Flynn's, Sept. 12, 1936: since ca. 1910. Domestic coll. pappy, 'papa'. Such a man as would be addressed as 'Pop'.

parachute. 'A thief's word for a parasol or umbrella': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; † by 1910. Underworld poetry.

parade. A being reviewed in a police line-up: 1929-31, Kernôt; extant. Soldiers' influence.

paraffin, ' (suit of) clothes': low s. rather than c. Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough, 1936.

paralysed (or -zed), 'paralytic drunk': drinkers' s., not c.

param, 'bread', is an error or a misprint for pan(n)am. (George Andrewes, Dict., 1809; Sinks of London, 1848.) And as 'milk' it is an error for yarrum. (F & H, 1901.)

parchment. A convict's ticket of leave: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. It consists of parchment.

parchment cove. A ticket-of-leave man: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. See preceding entry.

parell. To make clear: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Ex S.E. appear. But it is perchance a ghost word?

parenthesis. See iron parenthesis and wooden parenthesis.

parings, 'the Clippings of Money' (B.E., 1698), is, despite B.E. and Grose, not c., but—fairly obviously, one would have thought—S.E. parish bull, prig, stallion; all three terms are occ. hyphenated. 'Parish Bull. A parson,' Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, 'Would you tell this story to the parish prig, if so beas you was going to Tuck-up Fair to-morrow morning?'; 1864, H, 3rd ed. (p. bull; p. prig); 1887, Baumann (p. bull); † by 1900. Proletarian satire.

Park, the. 'The Park is also the rules or privileged circuit round the king's-bench or fleet'—the King's Bench or the Fleet Prison; "'The park is well stocked", when many prisoners have obtained the rules': 1823, Bee; † by 1900.

park, in the. See Bushy Park.

parker; parkey. To talk; not c., but parlyaree. —2. To part; to give: 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers, "'Not a man among 'em but would parker with his last deaner to buy a pal some tommy!'"'; 1914, E. Pugh, The Cockney at Home, "'I couldn't parker no wedge to you"''; slightly ob. By corruption of part; perhaps influenced by sense 1.

parlieu. 'For instance, the player puts $5 on the table, and it wins; instead of lifting it, he lets the original sum lie—that is called a parlieu': professional gamblers' c. >, by 1870 at latest, j.: 1859, Matsell. Presumably the Fr. par lieu.

parlor house. A better-class brothel, or house of assignation, in which the men meet the women in the parlor (drawing-room): 1872, E. Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York; 1931, IA; ob.

parlor man. A safe-blower: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ironic.

parlour(-)jump, v. Implied in the next. Also independently of the vbl n., as in 'No boy would parlour-jump nor dip the lob for him', Arthur Morrison, Tales of Mean Streets, 1894, and in Netley Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook, 1925, 'No self-respecting crook will "parlor jump" if there is any more attractive work on hand'.

parlour(-)jumping. 'I palled in with some older hands at the game who used to take me a parlour-jumping (robbing rooms), putting me in where the windows was open': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L; 1894, Arthur Morrison, Tales of Mean Streets; 1901, F & H; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; 1925, N. Lucas (who errs in thinking it American in origin), The Autobiography of a Crook; 1934, Ex-Sgt B. Leeson, Lost London, "'Parlour jumping" (entering through the window of the front room from the footway)' (and then committing theft); 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; extant.

parlaree or -ry; parlyaree; or with capitals. The language of circusmen, showmen and itinerant and/or low actors; based on Italian and, to some extent, on Lingua Franca, it > common in England ca. 1850, though it existed very much earlier; the term itself is not c. See, e.g., Thomas Frost, Circus Life and Celebrities, 1875; P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo Lippi, 1893; and the circus books by Edward Seago and Eleanor Smith. It often merges with the language of tramps. Ex It. parlare, 'to speak'.

parney, parny, or parnee; pahnee, or pahny. Rain: 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London (see dowry): not c., despite Mayhew's implication that it is c.; but parlyaree. Via Romany, ex Hindustani pani, pronounced pahnée. Among soldiers, who orig. picked it up in India, the form is more usually pawnee or pawny. —2. 'A ring', says Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859; but this arises from a misreading of 'rain' in some glossarist's definition.

parsons' and priests' men. 'Religious, or "parsons' and priests'" men [convicts], as they are designated by ungodly prisoners': 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; 1894, Price Warung, Tales of the Early Days, "'I be'n't no parson's or Super's pet!'"'; by 1910, prison j. Contemptuous.

partial, adj. 'Putting one's hand into another man's pocket; stealing': 1859, Matsell; † by 1930. I.e., 'partial' to the property of others.

partner, one's. A man accused of same crime as oneself: since ca. 1925. Ersine. Humorous.

partridge, spring a; spring partridges. See spring a partridge.

pash. A stiver (small coin): 1839, Brandon; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.). But this is simply Brandon's error, religiously copied by Matsell, for posh, 1 and 2.

pass along. To send (stuff, stolen property) to a receiver: since ca. 1910. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Euphemistic.

passenger stiff. 'A tramp or hobo with a mania for riding only the faster freight or passenger trains,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910.

passer. Describing a gang of pickpockets, H. W. Corley, in 'Pickpockets'—a story in Flynn's, March 2, 1929, remarks that 'There is the "passer" or "carrier", who makes the getaway with the swag, carrying the evidence far into safety before there is a chance for a hue and cry'; extant.—2. As 'passer of counterfeit money' (Flynn's, May 25, 1929, H. W. Corley, 'Passing the Queer'), it is police j.—3. (Usually in plural.) "'Passers" are dice that always come up 7 or 11,' Julien Proskauer, Suckers All, 1934: professional gamblers': since ca. 1920: March 21, 1936, Flynn's, Frank Wrentmore. Contrast misser, q.v.

passing(-)lay, the. 'They went upon what they call The Passing-Lay; that is, one of them takes a Countryman into an Alehouse, under pretence of any Business they can think of: then the other comes in as a Stranger, and in a little time finds a Pack of Cards . . . At last one of [the two Sharpers] offers to lay a great Wager on the Game, and stakes the Money down; the other shews his Cards to the Countryman, and convinces him that he must certainly win, and offers to let him go halves in the Wager: But soon after the Countryman has laid down his Money, the Sharpers manage the Matters so as to pass off with it': Jan. 1723–24, trial of Stephen Gardner, in Select Trials, from 1720 to 1724, pub. in 1734; 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732, where it is mentioned as synonymous with preaching the parson; app. † by 1800.

passing the punk. See punk, n., 3.

pasteboard, 'a ticket (to, e.g., a ball)', is not c., but s. It occurs early in A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 1912.

pasty(-)face. An addict: drug traffic: since ca. 1925. BVB. Symptomatic.

Pat or pat; usually pl. 'An accomplice, a companion' (Sinks of London Laid Open, 1848); but this is either an egregious error, or a mere misprint, for pal.—2. A Chinese: New Zealand and Australia: since ca. 1920: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter; N.Z.); 1942, Baker. Ex synonymous paddy.

pat, on one's. See Pat Malone.

pat, stand. See stand pat.

Pat Malone, on one's; usually shortened to on one's pat. Alone: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; introduced by Australians.

patch-worker. A pickpocket specializing in outside pockets other than fob-pockets: since ca. 1910. The Evening News, Dec. 9, 1936. A worker on (S.E.) patch-pockets.

patent(-)coat. 'Inside skirt coat pocket': 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H., 'A coat with the pockets inside the skirts,—termed patent from the difficulty of picking it'; † by 1901 (F & H).

patent-safe game (or operation); patent-safe operator. (A practiser of) a variety of the confidence trick, a safe playing a part: not c., but police s.: 1859, Bartlett, Americanisms, 2nd ed.

pater. See patter, v., 7.—2. A rare variant of peter (a safe). Kernôt, 1929–31.

pater cove; patrico (or, as in R. Head, patri-coe); patriark co; patring (or patrying) cove. A priest:

1536, Copland, patrying cove; 1562, Awdeley, 'A Patriarke Co doth make mariages, and that is untill death depart the married folke, which is after this sort; When they come to a dead Horse or any dead Catell, then they shake hands and so depart every one of them a severall way'; in 1566, Harman gives patrico as the correct, patriarcho as an indefensible form, but he adds that he has, by many tramps, been assured that vagabondia possesses no priests, only one couple in a hundred being married, 'for they take lechery for no sinne, but naturall fellowship and good lyking love'—which is not the same thing as saying that there were no priests in the Elizabethan underworld; in 1608, however, Dekker, in The Belman of London, supports Awdeley rather than, as usual, filches from Harman, when he writes, 'This Jackman (for his knowledge) is hayle fellow well met with a Patrico, who amongst Beggars is their priest: every hedge beeing his parish, every wandring harlott and Rogue his parishioners, the service he sayes, is onely the marrying of couples . . . The wedding dinner is kept at the next Alehouse they stumble into, where the musick is nothing but knocking with kannes, and their dances none but drunken Brawles'; 1610, Rowlands (patrico); 1614, B. Jonson, Bartholomew Fair, 'You are the Patrico! are you? the Patriarch of the eutpurses?'; 1665, Richard Head, The English Rogue; 1688, Holme (patri-coe); 1698, B.E., 'Patrico, c. or Pater-cove, c. the Fifteenth Rank of the Canting Tribe'; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose—but this sense was prob. † by 1760. Lit., 'a (reverend) father fellow'.—2. Hence, by 1630 or so, patrico is occ. used for the chief of a band of beggars; e.g., in R. Brome, A Joviall Crew, 1631. This derivative sense is little used in C. 18 and seems to have > † by 1800.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) 'Any minister or parson' (Grose, 1785): ca. 1750–1830 (Lytton Bulwer, Pelham, 1828): app. in both forms: pater cove and patrico. In the U.S.A., however, the forms are pater cove and pater covey and the term was app. current ca. 1830–70: The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 1848.

patering. See pattering.

pathfinder. A 'prospector' for a gang of thieves: 1927, Kane; June 22, 1929, Flynn's, Thomas Topham ('The Eel'), 'Lynch and me worked the job through a bird named Cuneo . . . that Lynch knew. Cuneo was the pathfinder, I guess, or maybe it was Lynch found out about the Hackensaw express office having pay roll money in big wads from time to time'; March 29, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville, 'Pathfinder, too, sometimes. Steers them to where he thinks there's kale to be pinched'; 1931, IA, 'Any tipster working for a criminal gang'; March 19, 1932, Flynn's; extant. Semantically cf. the R.A.F.'s use of the term.—2. An informer to, a spy for, the police: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Deriving naturally ex sense 1.

patient. 'The victims of hotel thieves are designated by the very delicate title of "patients", and the usual patient manner in which they submit to the operations of the skilful robber amply justifies the application of the term': 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; ob. Ironic.

patriarcho; patriark(e)co; patri-coe; patrico. See pater cove.

patrico's kinchin. 'A grunting chete or a patricos kynchén, a pyg,' Harman, 1566; app. † by 1700. Lit., a pater cove's kinchin (or child).

patring (or patryng) cove. See pater cove.

patriot. A romantic person; esp. of a male: 1933, Ersine; by 1945, ob. Ironie.

Patsy or patsy; the Patsy. 'Patsy, adj. All right. "The mutt offices patsy and we walk into a collar." Burke, 1930: racketeers': 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. Patsy is an affectionate diminutive of Patrick; the affection connotes that all is well.—2. Hence, a dupe, a 'sucker': 1933, Ersine; extant.

patter, n. A trial: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'I've receiv'd my Patter; I've had my Tryal'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, The London Guide, 'Patter, examination before magistrates, &c.'; 1821, David Haggart, Life; 1823, Bee; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, "'Bill is 'to rights' at his patter." No chance at his trial, is sure to be convicted'; 1859, H, 'A judge's summing up; a trial'; 1887, Baumann; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades; ob. Prob. ex sense 2, despite the recorded dates: there being much talk at a trial.—2. The language of the underworld: 1758, Anon., Jon. Wild's Advice to his Successor (O.E.D.); 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1882, James D. McCabe, New York; April 1897, Popular Science Monthly; ob. 'It has been derived from paternoster. It is the old gypsy pat, or paterava; Hindu[stani] bat, which means slang or secret language,' B & L, 1890: cf. the s. sling the bat.—3. Hence (?) the language, or oratory, of a cheapjack: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter; 1823, Bee; 1859, H; by 1864, it was street vendors' s.—4. Hence (?) swearing; boasting: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1890.—5. (Prob. ex sense 3.) A talk: 1878, James McGovan, Brought to Bay, "'Come, let's have a patter with her", said Salmon Bob'; ob.

patter, v. To sing: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'I strum and patter; I play on the Dulcimore and sing'; app. † by 1820. Cf. patter, n., senses 2-3.—2. To wheedle with plausible speech; to speak wheedlingly: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'My genius [of a barber] begins to patter you'; c. until ca. 1800, then (low) s.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (see pattering); 1842, An Exposure of Vagrants (v.i.). Cf. the n., sense 3.—3. To speak: see patter flash; also v.i., to talk, as, e.g., in W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London, 1830; 1909, W. H. Davies, Beggars. (Occ. of speaking a foreign language, as in An Exposure of Vagrants, 1842.)—4. (Usually in passive.) To try (an accused person) for a crime: 1797, Potter, 'Patter'd, tried in a court of justice for felony'; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1910. Ex sense 1 of the n.—5. To preach: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. cxc; † by 1920. Prob. ex senses 2 and 3.—6. (Prob. ex sense 2.) V.i., to beg: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; † by 1910.—7. (Cf. 5.) To pray: U.S.A.: 1848, The Ladies' Repository, in form pater; † by 1937 (Irwin).

patter, be in for—or stand—the. 'Patter'd, tried in a court of justice; a man who has undergone this ordeal, is said to have stood the patter'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose (at stand . . .), 'Stand the patter. To be tried for an offence'; 1860, H, 2nd ed., 'In for Patter, waiting for trial'; 1887, Baumann (stand the patter); 1932, Stuart Wood, 'Sent for patter (trial)'; ob. See patter, n., 1.

patter, sling one's. See sling one's patter.

patter-box. The mouth: 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. translator), ch. VI, 'I have my vitriol in my pocket, and will break the phial in his patter-box'; very ob.

patter(-)cove. 'Brodie . . . what are you, and where are you from?—Hunt. A patter-cove from Seven Dials,' R. L. Stevenson & W. E. Henley, Deacon Brodie, performed in 1884 and published in 1892—a patter cove being a clergyman, a priest. Never much used: literary rather than authentic.

patter(-)crib. A public-house, tavern, or other haunt of the underworld: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. xxiii, 'He was not a little proud of the reputation he had acquired in the parlours of the "boozing-kens" and "patter cribs" which he was in the habit of frequenting'; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; † by 1920. See patter, n., 2, and crib, n., 2-4.

patter flash. 'To patter flash, to speak the slang language,' i.e. to talk in the language of the underworld: 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I; 1825, C. E. Westmacott, The English Spy; 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. translator), ch. I, 'You patter flash like a family man'; 1848, Sinks of London; by 1845, current in parts of U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1848); 1859, H; by 1860, the phrase was s. See patter, v., 3, and flash, n., 3.

patter the flash. A variant of, and less gen. than, the preceding.

patteran or patrin is not a c. but a Romany term. "'Do you know what a patteran means?" "Of course, Ursula; the gypsy trail, the handful of grass which the gypsies strew in the roads as they travel, to give information to any of their companions who may be behind, as to the route they have taken . . ." ". . . The name for a leaf is patteran"' George Borrow, The Romany Rye, 1857 (Vol. I, ch. xi); in Whyte Melville's Katerfelto, 1875, the word appears as patrin.

pattered. See patter, be in for.

patterer. See public patterer.—2. The sense 'a street orator', 'a street vendor that employs much "patter" or sales-talk', is not c., but s.—mostly Cockney s. See esp. Vol. I, p. 213, of Mayhew's London Labour and the London Poor, 1851.—3. A professional beggar: 1851, Mayhew: prob. c., orig. at least.

patterer, humbox. See hum-box patterer. pattering. 'Talk or pallaver'—flattery—in order to amuse one intended to be cheated': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; extant. Ex patter, v., 2.

patty wagon. A police patrol-waggon: 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack Roller; s.—perhaps low s.; but certainly not c.

Paul Bunyan. 'A chronic, but none the less interesting, liar,' Stiff, 1931: since the late 1920's. Ex James Stevens's Paul Bunyan, 1925—a collection of American timber-lumbering stories, which achieved a very considerable popularity.

paum. See palm, v.

pauny is incorrect for panny. (Benj. Webster, Paul Clifford, 1833.)

paup. A pauper: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; very ob. and, by 1914, no longer c.

pavement artist. 'A "pavement artist" has no connection with the crayon specialists [see screever]. He is a pavement dealer in precious stones,' David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937: in 1933, Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, had defined the term as a 'dealer in precious stones who stands about in Hatton Garden'; extant.

pavours' workshop, 'the street' (Grose, 1785), is s., not c.

paw, glim in the. See glim, v.

pawn, v. B.E., 1698 (the earliest record), does not classify it as c., but that it may be c. and not s. appears from his definition: 'To Pawn any Body, to steal away and leave him or them to Pay the Reckoning'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; app. † by 1820. To use him as a 'pledge'.—2. Short for pawnbroker: not c., but low s.: July 10, 1871, Sessions Papers.

pawn, wee. See wee pawn.

pawned. Imprisoned; in prison: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. Cf. hock, in.

pawnee or pawny. (For etymology and general remarks, see parney.) Water: tramps': C. 20. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932.

pay(-)chee. A pay-check: forgers': since ca. 1920. Maurer, 1941.

pay-off, n. Short for pay-off game (see ref. of 1924): 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, Specialists in check-raising, wireless wire-tapping, "the match", "the pay-off", and cards'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Pay off game. Swindle game in which sucker is told he has won but in which he must show certain amount of money before being paid off. Then he is robbed'; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, esp. the chapter, 'The Pay Off' (a race-course swindle); 1933, Ersine; 1936, P. S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 'Pay-off game.—Swindle in which the victim is twice paid off before losing his money'; July 16, 1937, a New York newspaper's article on the race-horse and/or stocks-and-shares swindle known as 'the wire'—'Another name for "The Wire" is the "Pay-off"': by 1938 (Percy J. Smith, Con Man), also British; 1941, Val Davis; 1943, Black; extant.—2. Hence, the confidence game: 1928 (implied in pay-off boy); March 23, 1935, Flynn's, 'Frisco Jimmy Harrington, 'The old "pay off" racket . . ., which has netted the con men of this sucker country over five million dollars a year for the last twenty-five years'; extant.—3. Short for pay-off boy (a confidence trickster): 1928, Chicago May, 'I have been a badger, pay-off, note-layer, creep, panel, and blackmailer, mostly'; extant.—4. The sense 'pay day' is circus s. > gen. coll.—5. A gang 'settlement of accounts'—occ. by a 'squeal', but usually by murder: Oct. 11, 1930, Flynn's, Paul Annixter, 'The Pay-Off'; by 1934, also English (John G. Brandon, The One-Minute Murder); 1940, John G. Brandon, Gang War!, 'It's a gang "knock-off", or "pay-off", whichever you like'; extant. Ex senses 1 and 4.—6. Division of spoils after a robbery: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex the obvious lit. S.E. sense.—7. A bribe, esp. by racketeer to the police: 1933, Ersine; 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; extant. Prob. ex sense 6; perhaps ex the v.

pay off, v. To pay a regular bribe to the warders: convicts': 1933, Ersine; 1933, James Spenser, Limey, 'The men who "paid off" could work or loaf as they pleased'; 1935, David Lamson; extant. Cf. sense 1 of the n.—2. To split loo'; 1933, Ersine; extant. See n., 6.

pay-off boy; pay off man. 'My friend . . . sold the big diamond to one of the pay-off boys (confidence men) for three hundred and fifty dollars,' May Churchill Sharpe, Chicago May—Her Story, 1928; ibid., 'Criminal Jargon', 'Pay-Off Men, or Cons—confidence men (or women)'; extant.—2. (Only pay-off man.) The cashier of a gang of criminals or racketeers: 1930, Burke; Aug. 8, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse, 'Behind the Green Lights'; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant.

pay-off game. See pay-off, n., 1.

pay off in gold. (Of a Federal agent) 'to purchase narcotics from a peddler in order to secure his arrest,' BVB: drug traffic: since ca. 1925: by 1940, no longer c.

pay off in mileage. To walk out of shop or restaurant without paying: since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933. Humorous.

pay-off man. See pay-off boy.

pay-off mob. A gang of confidence trieksters, esp. one that operates a race-course swindle: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'One brushes by the fur-robed gun moll, leaning on the arm of her boy friend, the key-man in a pay-off mob'; ibid., the chapter entitled 'The Pay Off'; 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy; extant. See pay-off (n.), 1, 2.

pay out. To purchase a pardon or a parole: convicts': Feb. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, R. E. Burns; extant. Ex 'pay one's way out'.

pay station. 'Social welfare agency that gives out money. Very rare,' Stiff, 1931: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1920.

pay streak. A job that pays well: tramps': since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Stiff, 1931.

pay with a hook. 'To obtain the article, not by payment, but by hooking it, or running away.

You bought them? Ah, I fear me, John, you paid them with a hook.—J. Brunton Stephens: My Chinese Cook [ca. 1880]':

1890, B & L, who classify it as Australian: 1901, F & H; 1942, Baker, 'To steal'. Cf. hook, v.

paymaster. He who, in a 'booze convoy', has the job of 'fixing' the police—if the police should stop the convoy: bootleggers': since ca. 1924: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

payster. A paying teller (in a bank): 1925, Leverage; by 1940, no longer c. Cf. pay-off boy, 2.

pea, n. and v. A bullet, cartridge, shot; to shoot a person: 1925, Leverage; 1929, Givens (a bullet); June 7, 1930, Flynn's; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Grimly ex pea-shooter.

pea soup. A 'Canuck' or French Canadian: tramps': C. 20: 1931, Stiff; 1931, IA, who adds 'Or any lumberjack or woodsman'. Ex a favourite dish of French Canadians.—2. No good: convicts': 1934, Rose, 'That gee is pee soup'; extant. I.e., weak and thin—like the pea soup that is served in prisons.

peace. See piece.

peach, 'to inform against, to betray', is occ. given as c., as, e.g., in 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857: but this is an absurd classification.

peaches and pears. Stairs: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; cf. English apples and pears.

peacock. A lady: 1889 (see ostrich); ob. Ex her gay appearance; cf. s. peacocks, 'haughty; stately'.

pead is a misprint (John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753) for prad, a horse.

peak. R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665, 'Peake . . . any lace'; 1676, Coles, 'Peak, c. lace'; 1698, B.E., 'Any kind of Lace'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (peake); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1725, D. Defoe; 1785, Grose, by whose time the term may have > s. Possibly it remained c. in U.S.A.—esp. in New York—until ca. 1870: Matsell, 1859, has 'Peak. Lace goods'. Perhaps ex S.E. peak, 'a crest or top'; prob. ex Fr. piqué, 'pricked', with reference to the fact that it is open work.

peanut farm. A workhouse (country or small jail) where the inmates crack stones: tramps': 1931, Stiff; extant.

peanut stuff. "Peanut stuff" is the vernacular for small and piffing thievery, Roy W. Hinds, 'Fancy Stuff' in Flynn's, Feb. 12, 1927; by 1940, low s. Cf. s. chicken feed, 'petty cash'.

peanuts is a variant of the preceding: 1934, Howard N. Rose, 'The job was peanuts'; extant.—2. Small change: 1933, Ersine; by 1945, s. pear, n. See pear-making.

pear, v. 'To draw supplies from both sides; to give the [police] officers information, and then tell the thieves to get out of the way': 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; † by 1920. Prob. ex sense 1 of the next.

pear-making. 'Taking bounties from several regiments and immediately deserting. The cove was fined in the steel for pear making; the fellow was imprisoned in the house of correction . . .': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1890, B & L; app. † by 1900. Perhaps with a pun on S.E. pair and pair off (B & L).—2. Hence, in U.S.A., the act defined in pear, v.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920.

pearl diver; (seldom used) dive for pearls. A dishwasher; to wash dishes: 1913, Edwin A. Brown, Broke; 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hoboes (the former); 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp (the latter); 1925, Leverage (former); 1927, Kane; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1939, s. Cf. the French s. synonym—plongeur.—2. A type of sexual pervert: 1927, Kane; 1935, Hargan, who defines it as a cunnilingist; extant. BVB cites pearl diving, the practice itself.

peasant. A country fellow; farmer; yokel: 1936, Charles Francis Coe, G-Man; extant. Ex the ungrounded urban contempt for country people.

peat; peatman. A strong-box, a safe; a safe-blower: 1919, Dialect Notes, F. H. Sidney, 'Hobo Cant' (both terms); 1927, Kane (both); ob. A (? punning) variation of pete man.—2. Some kind of professional commercial swindle and swindler: commercial underworld: Aug. 13, 1927, Flynn's (see quot'n at reloader for peat man); ibid., 'Dynamite Dan and Packey counseled Red to get a "line" on his sucker and if he seemed possessed of sufficient "sugar" or money, they would work a "peat" on him. In other words, make him the subject of a real killing by selling him a given stock and then pretending to have a market wherein, if he had several times the number of shares he was known to hold, he could sell his block [of shares] at a substantial profit' (Linn Bonner, 'Dynamiters'); extant.

pebble. An incorrigible prisoner: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1945. A very 'hard "nut" or case'.

peck, n. 'Pek, meate'—i.e., food: 1566, Harman (pek); ibid., 'Maunde of this morte what bene pecke is in her ken. Aske of this wyfe what good meate shee hath in her house'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands denies that peck bears this meaning—but his contempt for Dekker has misled him, it seems; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'The Gentry Cove tipt us rum Peck and rum Gutlers . . .', the Gentleman gave us so much good Victuals, and Canary'; 1723, Alex. Smith, The Lives of Bayliffs; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1821, D. Haggart (pick); 1823, Bee; 1843, W. J. Moncrieff, The Scamps of London; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, Punch, Jan. 31; 1859, H; by 1859, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulum; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.), low s.; by 1890, †. Despite the date, prob. ex:—

peck, v. To eat: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 'Pecke is taken to eate or byte: as the Buffa peckes me by the stampes, the dogge bites me by the shinnes'; 1665, R. Head (see quot'n at rumly); 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Eat much, eat little: Peck rum, Peck quer'; 1826, C. E. Westmacott, The English Spy, Vol. II, 'Repeating the landlord's own words, that peck high or peck low, it was all the same price'; by 1887 (Baumann) it was low s. Cf. familiar S.E. peck at.

peck(-)alley, 'the throat', is not c., but low s. H, 1874. See peck, n.

peck and booze (or tipple). 'Peck and booze, victuals and drink': 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (. . . booze); 1809, Andrewes; † by 1890. See the elements.

peck and perch. Board (or rather, food) and lodging: 1828 (O.E.D.); † by 1940. Low s. rather than c. See peck, n.; cf. s. go to one's perch, 'to go to bed'.

peck and tipple. See peck and booze.

peckage; peckidge. Food: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All (the former spelling); 1665, R. Head, 'Peckidge . . . Meat', i.e. food; 1676, Coles (peckidg); 1698, B.E. (peckidge); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., where it is misprinted peckridge; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1760 or thereabouts. An elaboration of peck, n.

pecke. See peck. (Harman.)

peckeridge is an error for peckidge. (The 1735 ed. of The Triumph of Wit.)

peckidge. See peckage.

peckish, 'hungry', may orig. (— 1785) have been c., but by 1800 it was certainly s.—low, at first. Ex peck, n.

peckridge. See peckage. (J. Shirley, 1707.)

peculiar. A mistress, esp. a kept mistress: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann—but prob., in England at least, † by 1870. I.e., peculiar to oneself (or so one hopes).

ped, 'a basket', is classified by Grose, 1785, as c.; it is a mainly dial. word; although it may have been much used by C. 18 vagabonds, that in itself does not make it a c. term.

peddle (or sell) one's hips. To operate as a prostitute: C. 20. BVB. Cf. hip-peddler.

peddler. 'An itinerant counterfeit money-seller': 1782, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; ob. He pretends to be an ordinary peddler or hawker.—2. A local train, part passenger, part freight: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'Any train that stops at every station along the line'; 1931, Stiff; et al.—3. That member of a kidnapping ring who sells to the gang the necessary information about the prospective victim: Dec. 29, 1934, Flynn's, Tracy French; extant.—4. A prostitute: C. 20. BVB, 1942.—5. A pimp: C. 20. BVB.

peddler's (or peddling) French. See pedlar's French.

peddling out, n. 'Selling or trading the old clothes which have been begged from housewives, and which are not needed by the tramp, who obtains from his fellows food, drink or tobacco, in exchange for his goods,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910.

pedigree. A criminal's police-record: British and American from ca. 1910: 1923 (see next); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; and others. See:— pedigree man. A recidivist: since ca. 1910. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. His career can, by the police, be traced quite a long way back.

pedlar's French; peddling French. The language of the underworld, esp. of vagabondia: 1536, Robert Copland, The hye Way to the Spyttell hous, 'And thus they babble tyll theyr thrift is thin | I wote not what with theyr pedlying frenche'; 1566, Harman speaks of 'the leud, lousey language' and adds, 'Whyeh language they terme Peddelars Frenche'—which indicates that in C. 16, these two names may have been c.; B.E. mentions it as being both true cant and an artificial gibberish. I suspect that the orig. phrase was piddling French, which > peddling French, prob. by folk etymology; this process would then account for the later pedlar's French.

pee-eye. See P.I.

pee-man. See P. man.

peel, n. 'Any swindling game,' Leverage, 1925; slightly ob. Suggested by skin game.

peel a poke. To remove money from a pocket-book: 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, 'We grifters had a dam good right to nick a front or peel a poke so long as Wall Street and Washington were picking everybody's pockets'; extant.

peep, n. (Gen. pl.) An eye: ? orig. and mainly U.S.A.: 1848, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York, 'They does keep their peeps purty vide hopen'; ob.

peep, v. To sleep: 1698, B.E., 'As the Cull Peeps let's Mill him, c. when the Man is a Sleep, let's Kill him'; app. † by 1820. Cf. peeping and peepy.—2. To inform to the police: U.S.A.: since ca. 1925. Ersine. 'A little bird told me.'

peeper. (Cf. peepers, l.) A looking-glass: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Track up the dancers and pike with the peeper, whip up stairs and run off with the looking glass'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1887 (Baumann). That into which one pceps.—2. See peepers, 2.—3. (Ex sense l.) 'A spying glass', i.e. either opera-glass or field-glass (telescope): 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); app. † by 1900.—4. (Usually in pl.) 'Peepers . . . Detectives; spies,' Leverage, 1925; 1923, Manchon, (England) 'Policeman'; 1939, Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep (English ed.), where 'peeper' = a detective; so too in the same author's Farewell, My Lovely, 1940; in short, 'detective' is, after ca. 1930, decidedly the predominant sense.

peeper, single. See single peeper.

peepers. 'A Looking-glass', i.e. a mirror: 1698, B.E., 'Track the Dancers, and pike with the Peepers, c. whip up the Stairs, and trip off with the Looking-glass'; by 1750, it had been superseded by peeper, q.v.—2. (The usual sense.) Eyes: 1698, B.E.; 1782, Messink, The Choice of Harlequin, 'My peepers! who've we here? Why, this is sure black Moll'; 1785, Grose; 1789, George Parker; 1797, Potter ('Peeper, an eye'); 1809, Andrewes (id.); by 1818 (witness P. Egan, Boxiana, II, 46, and elsewhere in the four volumes of Boxiana) the term was low and pugilistic s. In the U.S.A. (witness E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1848, ch. x), the term seems to have remained c. until much later; even John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928, would seem to imply that, even at that date, it is c., as also does George London, 1930. Those organs with which one peeps.—3. Spectacles: late C. 19–20; ob. Partridge, 1937.

peeping. Drowsy, sleepy: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; app. † by 1780. Cf. peepy.

peeping Tom, 'a Paul Pry', is not c., as B & L classify it.

peepy. Drowsy, sleepy: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1910. Ex peep, v.

peer, v. 'To be circumspect', alert, cautious: 1785, Grose; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859; † by 1910. Ex S.E. peer, to look about one. Cf. peery, adj.

peerey is an occ. form of peery, n. and adj.

peery, n. (Ex the adj.) A suspicion; a likelihood of suspicion: 1698, B.E. (at case), 'There's a peerey, 'tis snicht, c. there are a great many People, there's no good to be don'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; so too in Grose, 1785, except that snitch (? an error) displaces snicht; † by 1850.—2. A foot: C. 20. Partridge, 1938. Ultimately ex L. pes (genetive pedis), 'a foot'?

peery, adj. Suspicious, alert for danger, fearful of danger: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, where it is misprinted perry; 1676, Coles ('fearfull'); 1698, B.E., 'Peery, c. fearful, shy, fly. The Cull's Peery, c. the Rogue's afraid to venture'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, H. D., The Life of Jonathan Wild, 'Peery (that was [Jonathan's] Term for sharp)'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose, 'Inquisitive, suspicious'; 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial, 'Fixing his eye on the Porpus's snout, | Which he knew that Adonis felt peery about . . .'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was low s. Cf. peer.

peeter. See peter.

peety. Cheerful: 1870, 'Byegone Cant' in All the Year Round, March 5; the earliest record being in Bailey's dictionary, 1726. Prob. a perversion of dial. peart, 'brisk, lively, cheerful'.

peewee soft song men. 'Door peddlars with a fast line of chatter,' Rose, 1934; extant. Kernôt, 1929–31, defines it as 'petty confidence tricksters'. Que chantez-vous là?—Des mots aussi doux que des chants d'oiseaux.

peg, n. 'Teeth. Pegs': 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters. Recorded in the late C. 16 as S.E., it has in C. 19–20 been both a dial. and a nursery term; but it seems to have, ca. 1770–1840, been also a c. word. Ex the shape.—2. ‘Peg, or peg stick, a shilling’: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, V (see nick, v., 4); 1839, Brandon (peg); 1848, Sinks of London; by 1851 (witness Mayhew, London Labour, I, p. 52) it was also low, esp. Cockney s.; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H. With peg(-)stick, cf. bob(-)stick, a shilling.—3. Hence, a counterfeit shilling: 1830, Sessions Papers, trial of James Crouch and Mary Welch; ob.—4. A policeman: Scottish: 1865 (E.D.D.); 1884, James McGovan, Traced and Tracked, (a criminal speaking) “‘Pegs is an awful bad lot’”; by 1900, s. Cf. pig, 2.—5. A tramp or hobo train-rider that has lost a foot or a leg: U.S. tramps’: 1918, Leon Livingston, Mother Delcassee of the Hobos; 1923, N. Anderson, The Hobo; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex s. peg, a leg (whether natural or artificial).

peg, v. See peg a hack. Prob. ex:—2. To steal (something): 1788, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, Sept., p. 693, ‘It was a pegged one, that is, a stolen one’; † by 1900. Perhaps ex the idea of pegging down.—3. See pegged, have.—4. Hence, to recognize or identify (a person): U.S.A.: 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; extant.

Peg, the. Winnipeg: Canadian tramps’: C. 20. W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 1936.

peg a hack. ‘To mount the box of a hackney-coach, drive yourself, and give the Jarvey a holiday’: 1823, Egan’s Grose (between thwack and tib!), where it is classified as c.: but was it not buckish s. of ca. 1810–40?

peg house. A building, a house, a barn, etc., where a tramp may meet a punk: tramps’: since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; Nov. 1931, IA, ‘A resort where homosexuals foregather’; 1942, BVB, ‘A male homosexual brothel or gathering place’. Godfrey Irwin thinks that the term originated as sea slang for the male brothels of the East.

peg-leg. A variant of peg, n., 5: 1931, Stiff; by 1940, low s.

peg-legging. Mendicancy: beggars’ and tramps’: since ca. 1920: 1933, Mat Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby. Rhyming on begging; a peg-leg is a one-legged beggar or tramp.

peg(-)stick. See peg, n., 2.

peg up, v.i. To rise to one’s feet: 1848, The Ladies’ Repository (‘The Flash Language’), ‘Peg up and morrice—get up and come, or go’; † by 1937 (Irwin). Perhaps ex removal of tent-pegs in preparation to depart.

pegged, have (a place). ‘The expression, “I have him pegged”, which has crept into common usage, is thieves’ slang pure and simple, and has nothing to do with the game of cribbage as many suppose. The thief, to save himself the trouble of staying up all night watching a place to make sure no one enters it after closing hours, puts a small wooden peg in the door jamb after the place is locked up. At five or six o’clock in the morning he takes a look. If the peg is in place the door has not been opened. If it is found lying in the doorway, that means somebody has opened the door in the night. If he finds the place is visited in the night he must then stay out and learn why and at what time and how often. He now has the place “pegged” and plans accordingly or passes it up as too tough,’ Jack Black, You Can’t Win, 1926; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, ‘Peg.—To watch or spy on a person or place’; Feb. 10, 1934, Flynn’s, Jack Callahan; extant.

peggy. A one-legged man: 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road (a legless beggar); extant. Ex peg, n., 5.

pegs. See peg, n., 1, 5.

pek. See peck, n.

pelfry. In ‘the black art’—the picking of locks with a view to burglary—the booty resulting from the burglary is ‘pelfry’: 1592, Robert Greene, The Second part of Connycatching; Dekker, The Belman of London, 1608; app. † by 1700. Punning S.E. pelf.

pelican. A magistrate: 1925, Leverage; extant. A bird with a mighty beak.

pell. See pal, n.

pelter. A womanizer; a whoremonger: tramps’: 1901, F & H; rather ob. Cf. s. bang, ‘coit with (a woman)’.

pen. A prison: 1884 (D.A.E.); 1891, James Maitland, The American Slang Dict., ‘Pen (Am.), the penitentiary’; Aug. 1891, The Contemporary Review, Josiah Flynt, ‘The American Tramp’, ‘Prisons, “pens”’; 1892, Jacob A. Riis, The Children of the Poor, ‘He was sentenced to four years’ imprisonment. That was how he got into “the pen”’; 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary, ‘A penitentiary’; 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers That Prey; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; 1903, G. Burgess & W. Irwin, The Picaroons, “‘Yer no better than convicks in the Penn!’”; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison; 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson; 1925, Leverage; 1927, G. Dilnot, The Crook’s Game (an American loq.); 1927, R. Nichols & J. Tully, Twenty Below; 1928, May Churchill Sharpo; 1928, John O’Conner; March 16, 1929, Flynn’s (Martin J. Porter, ‘The Moll’); July 13, 1929, Flynn’s, Eddie Guerin; March 22, 1930, Flynn’s, Robert Carse; Feb. 7, 1931, Flynn’s, Henry Hyatt; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; from ca. 1932, too well known, too much used by journalists and police officers to rank any longer as c.—in U.S.A.; by 1935 (The Garda Review), current, as c., in Britain; 1939, Kylie Tennant, Foveaux (Australia); 1944, Cecil Bishop, Crime and the Underworld; extant. As early as 1865 (A. O. Abbott, Prison Life in the South) we find a (war) prisoners’ stockade described as a pen: hence the civilian sonse. This I think more acceptable than the derivation ex penitentiary, though undoubtedly the word penitentiary helped to fix the sense.—2. A forger: since ca. 1912. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931, and Ersine, 1933. Short for pen man.

pen and ink. See on the pen . . .

pen man. A forger, esp. of cheques: April 11, 1865, Sessions Papers (p. 519), a police witness, ‘I said, “Bob, I want you”—he said, “What for?”—I said, “For being concerned with Jemmy the Penman, and others, now in custody”—for ‘Jim the Penman’ (James Seward), see George Dilnot, The Trial of Jim the Penman, 1930; 1887, Geo. W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police; 1888, Julian Hawthorne, An American Penman; 1893, No. 747; 1897, Price Warung, Tales of the Old Regime (Australian); by 1900, s. in U.S.A.; by 1920, s. in Great Britain. He uses the pen to good purpose.—2. Hence, a prisoner given to writing to the officials: U.S. convicts': 1934, Rose; extant.

pen shot. (Also penitentiary shot.) An injection with a pin and a medicine dropper: drug addicts': since ca. 1925. BVB, 1942, cites pen (or pin) shot and penitentiary shot. Since pin shot seems to be the earliest, it prob. suggested pen shot, which in turn suggested penitentiary shot; and point shot (BVB) sprang from either pen shot or pin shot—or from both.

pen yang or pen yen. Opium: British and American: 1915, George Bronson-Howard, God's Man, "You bluff . . . and that's 'good poker'. Like that Waldemar you work for, buying up all the pen-yen and not selling it unless you've got a doctor's letter-head"; 1916, Thomas Burke, Limehouse Nights; 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle (in form pen yang and as the Chinese name for it); 1922, Dialect Notes, W. H. Wells, 'Words Used in the Drug Traffic', where it is defined as 'the Chinese word for opium'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict; 1942, BVB cites the variant pan-yen and adduces another sense, 'a craving for drugs, esp. opium'.

penals. (A term of) penal servitude: 1897, D. Fannan, A Burglar's Life Story: not c., but police s. penance board. 'Pennance-bord, c. a Pillory,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who does not, however, classify it as c.; it may have > s. somewhere about 1760; by 1850 or earlier it was †. To have to put one's head in it is a penance; the top-piece is a board.

penbank. (Old Cant).—A beggar's can.—Bailey (1728), F & H, 1901. Bailey may have been in error; I find no other instance of the term. A ghost word, I think.

pencil fever is not c., but a racing s. term.

pencil put on one, have the. To get oneself reported for a violation of prison rules: convicts': 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest; 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. pen man, 2.

peninsula(r). A female pickpocket: 1859, H (the longer form); ob. by 1910, † by 1940. Each deft finger is a peninsula projected into the money and goods of others.

penitent, 'a person sent to serve a sentence in a penitentiary or prison', lies on the borderland between c. and police s.: since ca. 1890; ob. Josiah Flynt & Francis Walton, The Powers that Prey, 1900, 'Three days later Detective Ackeraay arrived at the great — Penitentiary with a batch of penitents, for whose bodies he was given a receipt by the warden'.

penitentiary shot. See pen.

penman. See pen man.

penn. See pen, 2nd reference of 1903.

pennam is a rare variant of pannam. (Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 1611.)

pennance-bord. See penance board.

pennies. Money; esp., cash: tramps': C. 20. 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, "If you're goin' west you better learn to talk west." "Yes", said the other, "and 'pennies' don't mean pennies. It means money, on the road"; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, IA, 'Money; not alone the coins, but any money'; 1933, Ersine defines plenty pennies as 'much money'; extant.

pennif is a corruption of fin(n)if (see finif): 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, "I gets clean off with the scawfer and 'bout 'er thirty quid in single-pennifs and silver": but it is rare, although F & H, 1901, quote from The Cornhill Magazine of 1862.

penn'orth. See pennyworth.

Pennsy, the. The Pennsylvania Railroad: tramps' and beggars': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (p. 279); April 14, 1928, Flynn's, A. E. Ullmann, 'Beggarmen'; extant.

Pennsylvania diet. Bread and water: 1925, Leverage; extant.

Pennsylvania feathers. '[The freight train] was loaded from tender to caboose with Pennsylvania feathers (soft coal),' Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925: tramps': 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Coke'—the more usual definition; extant. 'Largely the product of the Pennsylvania coal-fields, and of course much lighter in weight than coal' (Irwin).

Pennsylvania salve. Apple butter: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Apple butter is a thick apple-sauce; it used to be a favourite Pennsylvanian dish—'vory popular with the farmers of the State' (Irwin).

penny gaff. A theatre or other entertainment to which the entrance fee is only one penny: low s. >, in C. 20, s. See gaff, n., 3.

penny loaf. 'Cur—one afraid to steal; a man who would rather live on a penny loaf than steal good beef,' Ware, 1909: ca. 1880–1914.

pennyweight. See pennyweights, palm. But it has an independent singular, as in: 1859, Matsell, 'Pennyweight. Jewelry; gold and silver trinkets'; 1890 (Dec. 1), The Daily Chronicle (London); 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; 1928 (see pennyweight work); extant.—2. 'The racket of stealing by substituting spurious jewelry for good jewelry,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937; extant. Either ex sense 1, or, more prob., short for pennyweight job.

pennyweight job. 'A man . . . was wanted in three different States on charges of safe-breaking, a bank robbery, and a "pennyweight job" (robbery of jewels),' Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'The standard of measure'—read 'weight'—'for precious stones has been taken as a [derivative] noun,' as Irwin remarks. Cf. pennyweighter, than which it is prob. earlier.

pennyweight work. Jewel-thieving: 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'He knew that the punishment meted out to criminals in that State was by no means so severe as the punishment in the other two States for safe-breaking and bank-robberies'; 1928, Chicago May, 'Working the pennyweight, i.e. sizing up gems for weight, colour, etc., with a view to stealing them, after substitution of fakes'; extant. Cf. the preceding.

pennyweighter. A jewellery thief: 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Pennyweighter. Expert thief who robs jewelers'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); Dec. 1918, The American Law Review; Dec. 4, 1926, Flynn's; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1928, Chicago May; 1931, IA; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Roso; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland; extant. His booty weighs little (in relation to its value); but cf. pennyweight job.

pennyweighting, n. Jewel-stealing: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1924, Geo. S. Dougherty; Aug. 3, 1929, Flynn's, Eddie Guerin, 'I was a Bandit'; 1931, A. R. L. Gardiner, Prisoner at the Bar; extant. Cf. pennyweight work, q.v.

pennyweights, palm. "To paum pennyweights", to steal rings or any kind of jewelry by working it with the fingers under the palm of the hand, and then up the sleeve or into a pocket. These fellows are called paum-coves': 1859, Matsell; extant. Cf. palm, v., 3, and palming racket.

pennyworth. A year's imprisonment: 1886 (see five pennyworth); 1931, Brown, 'Five years' penal servitude (five pennyworth) . . . three years' penal servitude (three pennyworth)'; 1934, Michael Harrison, Weep for Lycidas; 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer, "Sure. Five penn'orth down there," Curt answered. "Not a bad stir"; extant—but, by 1940, low s.

pensioner, 'a man supported in idleness by his "fancy woman"': not c.

Pent, the. Pentonville Prison—the Model Prison, completed in 1842—is actually in the parish of Islington (on the outskirts of London): 1857, Punch, Jan. 31, 'For if Guv'ment wos here, not the Alderman's Bench, | Newgit soon 'ud be bad as "the Pent", or "the Tench"': extant.

penthouse nab; B.E. spells it pentice . . . 'A very broad-brim'd Hat': 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (penthouse . . .); 1785, Grose, 'Penthouse nab, a large hat'; † by 1901 (F & H). See nab, n., 3; penthouse, ex the overhanging brim, likened to the overhang of a penthouse.

pentice nab. See penthouse nab.

people may be short for good people, q.v., but it exists quite independently and, orig., was English: 1887, Baumann; 1933, Ersine, 'A person who is reliable and trustworthy, who is solid. "Jake is real people"': April 28, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627, "'Stick yer four-bits in yer shoe," he snorted, "I'm people"': extant. Cf. folks.

Peoria. 'Thin soup. Generally potato water with salt,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910: also in, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. 'Perhaps so called from a similar article of food served in the Illinois State Prison at the city of [that] name, perhaps also from the fact that much of the State provides poor pickings for tramps' (Irwin). Ersine, 1933, defines Peoria water, Peory water, as 'soup made of potato water, onions, and seasoning'.

peppermint candy. 'Sweets following a marihuana cigarette,' BVB, 1942: addicts': since the 1920's.

per, short for per cent., is not c., but s.—perhaps low s. at first. Josiah Flynt, The Rise of Ruderick Clowd, 1903, "'I wouldn't give any kid more'n twenty-five per"' of the proceeds of the booty stolen by the 'kid', Ruderick.

percentage bull; percentage copper. 'If there was trouble about the get-away—if the holler was big—one of us used to go direct to the percentage coppers on the force, tell 'em our tale o' woe, whack up the plunder, an' stop worryin', Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901, the Glossary defining it as 'policemen and detectives who protect thieves for a percentage of their plunder'; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (p. bull); since ca. 1920, current—usually as percentage copper—in Canada (anon. letter, June 9, 1946).

perch. An elevated sentry-box: Australian and Norfolk Island convicts': ca. 1810–70. Price Warung, Tales of the Early Days, 1894 (p. 57). Pejorative.

perd. A customer, client: South African prostitutes': late C. 19–20. (Letter of May 22, 1947: J. B. Fisher.) Cf. horse: perd is Afrikaans for 'a horse' (ex Dutch paard).

perde, make. To cause trouble: South Africa: C. 20. Letter of May 23, 1946: C. P. Wittstock.—Alan Nash, The Cape Times, June 3, 1946, 'To make trouble: To make perde (horses)'. Cf. perd.

perfesh, the. The underworld; esp., criminals collectively; but also, since ca. 1905, tramps in general: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey (p. 242); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Tramp life in general'; extant. Short for perfection, an illiterate metathesis of profession.—2. Hence (?) a professional—an experienced—tramp: tramps': since ca. 1912. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—3. Hence, 'any expert in some particular line': since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Both (2) and (3) may derive ex professional rather than ex profession.

perform. 'When the hobo goes out to beg he says he performs,' Convict, 1934: tramps': since ca. 1925. Cf. caper.

perform an autopsy. See autopsy.

perform on. 'To cozen, cheat, swindle (e.g., a flat—a fool)': ca. 1860–1910. H, 1874; by 1901 (F & H) it was s. Prob. a shortening of perform an operation on (a person).

perks, 'perquisites'; 'petty gains by petty theft': the former is s.; the latter, c.—witness James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London, 1869; ob.

perpetual staircase. A treadmill: 1909, Ware; app. † by 1930. Perhaps its currency is rather of the approx. period, 1850–1920. The victim has to keep on walking.

perry (Head, 1665) is a misprint for peery.

persuader. A spur; but very rare in singular. Not c., but s.—2. A weapon: again, not c., but s.—3. Especially a revolver: U.S.A.: 1900, George Ade, More Fables in Slang; 1934, Convict. Perhaps it may be classified as c. of ca. 1890–1940; but orig. (Dickens, Martin Chuzzlewit, 1844) it was s., and prob. it always has been s.—4. (Likewise ex sense 2.) A heavy truncheon: U.S.A.: May 10, 1930, Flynn's (quot'n at sap, n., 2); 1934, Howard N. Rose; by 1940, s. persuading plate. 'An instrument used by burglars' for forcing safes. 'It is an iron disk, revolving on a pivot with a cutting point': 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; ob. For semantics, cf. persuader, 1.

perve. To be, to act as, a sexual pervert; esp. of a male: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942.

peso. A bottle of liquor: ca. 1920–34. Kernôt, 1929–31. Ex the price of inferior liquor smuggled in from Mexico or Cuba.

pester; pester up. To pay; to pay up: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'She had to pester up herself out of the pound you give her'; ibid., 'Tell him to pester about seven and six for it'; extant. Perhaps ex the idea of being 'pestered to pay', but much more prob. ex the Romany synonym, peesser.

petar(r); properly petard. Some kind of false die; or, less prob., some kind of cheating with dice: (written) 1662, The Cheats by John Wilson, 'The use of up hills, | downe hills, and petarrs'. The term may have survived until the early C. 19. Cf. S.E. hoist with his own petard.

pete, n. A variant of peter, n., 7, i.e. a safe: 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison (see quot'n at jolt); ibid., 'They caught him blowin' a pete right in th' heart o' th' city in th' dead o' night'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'A safe, a strong box'; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson; Dec. 11, 1926, Flynn's; 1929, Great Detective Cases; 1929, Jack Callahan; July 5, 1930, Liberty; 1931, Damon Runyon; April 8, 1933, Flynn's; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's; 1936, Lee Duncan; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland; extant.—2. Hence (?), a synonym of peter man: 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by Moreby Acklom; slightly ob.—3. A variant of peter, n., 10 (knock-out drops): 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant.—4. Nitroglycerin; bank robbers': Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; extant. Cf. peter, v., 3, and:—

pete, v. To use nitroglycerin on (a safe): 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 1 of the n.

pete dice. False dice: 1925, Leverage; extant.

peter man is an occ. variant of peter man, 2: 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; Sept. 20, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; 1933, Ersine; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant.

pete mark. A safe to be robbed: Oct. 11, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; extant. See pete, n., 2, and mark, n.

pete mob. A gang of safe-breakers: since ca. 1920. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. I.e., pete, n., 2 + mob.

pete tumbler. 'This guy . . . claimed to be a pete tumbler Nobody but movie actors can feel the tumblers of a safe and make it click the right way,' Colonel Givens in Flynn's, Aug. 27, 1932; extant. See pete, n., 1.

peter, n. 'Bite the Peter or Roger . . . steal the portmantle or cloak-bag,' R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665; 1676, Coles (peeter); B.E., 1698, 'Bite the Peeter, c. to whip off'—i.e., whip away with—'the Cloak-bag'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1734, C. Johnson; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, where it is spelt petter and even pitter; 1777, The Sessions of the Peace (1st session, mayoralty of Sir James Esdaile); 1785, Grose; 1823, Bee; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1891, C. Bent; 1894, A. Morrison; not yet †, for it is, for instance, still current in U.S.A. (witness, Leverage, 1925, 'A suit ease, a bag') and also, as s., among British pitchmen and cheapjacks. Obviously, it is difficult, sometimes, to distinguish this sense from the next. The word peter might well be a disguise-shortening of portmantua, via the solecistic pronunciation port-manter.—2. Hence, a trunk; a box (orig. for clothes), a chest: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1753, Poulter, 'A Petter . . . that is, a Portmanteau, or Box'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, David Haggart, Life; 1823, Bee; 1827, P. Cunningham,

Two Years in New South Wales; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1859, H (a valise); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A trunk; an iron chest'; by 1920, ob.; but still extant in 1932 (G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar).—3. (Ex sense 2.) 'A parcel or bundle, whether large or small'; in C. 20, usually a tramps' pack: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1859, H; Oct. 1879, Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; 1932, Rev. Frank Jennings; 1932, Nelson Baylis (New Zealand); 1932, Matt Marshall, The Travels of Tramp-Royal, 'Peter, tramp's pack'; 1935, Hippo Neville (ditto); 1937, John Worby (ditto); 1942, Baker (Australia); extant.—4. 'A cash-box': ? U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1862, Mayhew (see peter-cutter); June 1863, Sessions Papers; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years (a safe); Oct. 1879, Macmillan's Magazine; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1890, B & L; app. † by 1910, except in N.Z. and Australia.—5. A partridge: poachers': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; ob. Prob. by personification.—6. See Peter, stand.—7. (Ex sense 4.) A safe; 1869 (implied in peter-screwing); 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1900 (implied in peter man, 2: U.S.A.); in C. 20, also Canadian (letter June 9, 1946); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; Jan. 1931, True Detective Mysteries; and frequently ever since—e.g., in Black, 1943.—8. A punishment cell: Australian convicts': 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; in C. 20 Britain, any prison cell, as in Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938; 1942, Baker ('Prison, a cell') records its use in Australia in 1891 and declares its obsolescence there; again in Baker, 1945. C. 20, eurrent in S. Africa for any prison cell: J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946.—9. A thief specializing in safes: U.S.A.: 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; ob. Ex sense 7.—10. 'Knock-out drops': U.S.A.: 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'A drug known as knock-out drops'; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, 'In five [minutes] he'll have the peter in his drink'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1931, IA; June 18, 1932, Flynn's; 1934, Rose; 1942, BVB; extant. By a pun: knock-out drops render a robbery safe for the robber; a safe is, in c., a peter (sense 7).—11. Nitroglycerin: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; 1933, Ersine; extant. Prob. ex senses 7, 9.—12. See peters.

peter, v. Perhaps implied in 1781 in peterer; † by 1880.—2. See peter that!—3. To use nitroglycerin: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 11 of the n.

Peter (or p-), big. See big Peter.

peter, on the. Engaged in safe-blowing: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose; extant. See peter, n., 7.

Peter, stand. 'Flack went in and took the Goods, and I stood Peter on the Outside', glossed thus, 'To stand Peter, in the Language of these unhappy Wretches, signifies to lie [? be] on the Watch': 1741, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. II (Account of John Lupton); app. † by 1800. Peter of the rock-like faith: cf. Peter, tip.

Peter, tickle the. To steal from cash-box or till : New Zealand and Australia : since ca. 1920 : 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter) ; 1942, Baker.

Peter, tip (a person). To give warning to (one's accomplice) : 1741 (7th Sessions), Sessions Papers, 'Lupton was standing at the end of the court to tip him Peter' ; † by 1860. Ex the great Peter of the New Testament.

Peter Audley. See John Orderly.

peter-biter. (Ex biter of peters, q.v. at peters, biter of.) 'Peter-Biter. A man who steals baggage at hotels, railroad depots, and from the back of coaches' : 1859, Matsell ; ob. by 1901 (F & H) ; † by 1920.

peter-claimer ; peter-claiming. A box-, bag- or trunk-stealer ; the stealing of bags, boxes, trunks : Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine (the former) ; 1890, B & L ; 1894, A. Morrison, Tales of Mean Streets (the latter) ; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago (the former) ; 1901, F & H ; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights (the former) ; extant. See peter, n., 1-3, and claim.

peter-cloy is given by C. Johnson, in Highwaymen, Murderers, Street-Robbers, 1734, as = a portmanteau or cloak-bag ; but this, I am sure, is an error.

peter-cutter. 'Some cracksmen have what is called a petter-cutter, that is, a cutter for iron safes ; an instrument made similar to a centrebit, in which drills are fixed. They fasten this into the keyhole by a screw with a strong pressure outside. The turning part so fixed that the drills cut a piece out over the keyhole sufficiently large to get to the wards of the lock. They then pull the bolt of the lock back and open the door' : 1862, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV ; app. † by 1910. See peter, n., 7.

peter(-)drag. 'Robbery from vehicles of all kinds' (F & H, 1901) : perhaps ca. 1810-90. See peter, n., 1, 2, 3, and drag, n., 2.

peter-drops. Knock-out drops : 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey ; extant. Also peter : see peter, n., 10.

Peter Duff auction, prob. s.—not c. : see grind-joint.

peter-hunter is prob. contemporaneous with the next term, q.v. esp. at the reference of 1812.

peter-hunting. The searching for, and stealing, portmanteaux, esp. in inn yards : the trick is described but not named in Sir John Fielding's London and Westminster, 1776 ; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Traversing the streets or roads for the purpose of cutting away trunks, &c., from travelling carriages ; persons who follow this game, are from thence called peter-hunters, whereas the drag more properly applies to robbing carts or waggons' ; 1823, Egan's Grose ; ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack ; app. † by 1887 (Baumann). See peter, n., 1.

peter-hunting jemmy. 'A small iron crow, particularly adapted for breaking the patent chain, with which the luggage is of late years secured to gentlemen's carriages ; and which, being of steel, case-hardened, is fallaciously supposed to be proof against the attempts of thieves' : 1812, J. H. Vaux ; 1823, Egan's Grose, plagiarizingly ; app. † by 1890. See the preceding entry, and jemmy.

peter-job. A safe-robbery ; a bank-robbery : 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft (p. 78) ; extant. See peter, n., 7.

peter lark, the. The late C. 19-20 shape of the preceding. In, e.g., Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938. Cf. peter-hunting, q.v.

peter lay, the. The practice, art, or trick of stealing portmanteaux or trunks, esp. from coaches : 1720, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, Vol. III ; 1724, Harper (see quot'n in sense 2) ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. ; in 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, describes the method, which was practised at about 6 p.m. in the winter ; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. ; app. † by 1890. Cf. peter-hunting.—2. In Harper's 'A Canting Song', 1724 (in John Thurmond, Harleyquin Sheppard), the phrase 'you of the Peter Lay' is glossed as 'Those that break Shop-Glasses, or cut Portmanteaus behind Coaches' ; † by 1860.—3. (? Erroneously) one who practises this trick : 1753, Poulter (petter lay).

peter man. 'Petermen—those who follow coaches and waggons to cut off packages' : 1821, Bee ; 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime ; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds ; 1859, H (peterman) ; 1863, The Story of a Lancashire Thief ; † by 1901 (F & H). See peter, n., 1, 2, 3.—2. A safe-robber, esp. if expert : U.S.A. : 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey (p. 176) ; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 'Peter-men' . . . Safe-blowers, bank robbers' ; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood ; 1904, Life in Sing Sing ; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat ; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review ; 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain ; Jan. 24, 1925, Flynn's ; July 23, 1927, Flynn's ; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor ; 1928, Chicago May ; 1929, Great Detective Cases ; 1929, Jack Callahan ; by 1930, British also ; May 24, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn ; 1930, George London ; Jan. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, Ernest Booth ; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot ; 1931, Godfrey Irwin ; Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer ; 1933, David Hume, Crime Unlimited ; 1934, Convict ; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It ; by 1938, at latest, also Canadian (letter of June 9, 1946) ; and very often since.—3. A 'person who administers a drug for the purpose of robbery', No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904 ; extant.

Peter Orderly. See John Orderly.

peter-screwing. Opening a safe and stealing the contents, esp. money : 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England ; ob. See peter, n., 7.

peter school. A gambling den : New Zealand and Australian : 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter ; N.Z.) ; 1941, Sidney J. Baker, New Zealand Slang ; 1942, Baker, Australian Slang ; 1944, M & B (Aus.) ; extant.

peter that! Be silent ! : 1812, J. H. Vaux ; † by 1901 (F & H). Lit., 'box that !' ; cf. modern s. can it ! and the older shut up !

peter-thrower. A criminal, esp. a thief, that uses 'knock-out drops' : 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom ; extant. See peter, n., 10, and cf. peter man, 3.

peter work. Safe-blowing : 1900, Josiah Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman (in his The World of Graft, 1901, Flynt speaks of 'the peter-business', but not as a c. expression) ; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Safe-robbery'—not necessarily by blowing ; extant. 'Work' on peter, n., 7.

peter yourself! See petre yourself!

peteree. See the 1797 reference in :—

peterer. 'Peterers are those who follow coaches and chaises, cutting off the portmanteaus, trunks, &c. from behind' : 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; 1797, Potter, who, by a misprint, has peteree; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, where the feminine peterness is given; † by 1890. Ex peter, n., 1, 2; or ex later recorded v.

peterness. See peterer, reference of 1848.

peterman. See peter man.

peters. A kind of loaded dice; (also peter) the using thereof: ca. 1660–1750. John Wilson, 1662, The Cheats. Ex S.E. petard? See petar.

peters, biter of. Defined in 1698, by B.E. (at peeter), ‘Biter of Peeters, c. one that makes a Trade of whipping Boxes and Trunks from behind a Coach or out of a Waggon, or off a Horse’s Back’; 1785, Grose; † by 1890. See peter, n., 1.

Peter’s children or son(s), Saint. See Saint Peter’s children.

petre (? peter) yourself! ‘Petre yourself . . . (a watchword) take care of yourself’: U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; † by 1850. Perhaps ex Biblical Peter, but prob. ex peter that!

petter is a rare form of peter, n., 1 and 2. (John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753.)

petter! ‘Petter, in Cant, stands for a great many Things, as hold your Tongue, let it alone, or stand still, or the like,’ John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753; app. † by 1830 at the latest. Perhaps = petter, n.: the idea of ‘box (it)!’ occurs also in the modern s. phrase can it!

petter lay. See peter lay (Poulter, 1753.)

petticoat, ‘a woman’, is wrongly classified by ‘Ducange Anglicus’, 1857, as c.

petty lashery or petulacery. Robert Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, 1592, ‘Of lifts there be divers kinds . . ., some base rogues, yt—that—’ ‘lift when they com into alehouses, quart pots, platters, clokes, swords, or any such paltry trash, which commonly is called pilfering or petulacery’; 1592, Greene, The Blacke Bookes Messenger, ‘It bootes little to rehearse the pettie sinnes of my Non-age; as disobedience to my parents, contempt of good counsaile, despising of mine elders, filching, pettilashery, and such trifling toyes: but with these follyes I inurde myselfe, till waxing in yeares, I grew into greater villanies’; app. † by 1660. Origin obscure: but Greene himself affords a clue towards the possibility that the term is a corruption—rather, prob., a perversion—of paltry trash by a kind of metathesis.

pewter, ‘money’: perhaps orig. c., but prob. always (ca. 1815–70) s.—at first, fast-life s. W. T. Moncrieff, Tom and Jerry, 1821 (stump the pewter). Ex bright pewter’s resemblance to silver.—2. Silver (plate): 1823, Egan’s Grose; 1851 (see snide, adj.); 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); 1945, Baker (Australia), ‘Bad silver coins’. For semantics, cf. senso 1.

pfun. ‘A portion of opium,’ Leverage, 1925; extant. See the Byrnes quot’n at yen-yen.

pharse. ‘The eighth part’ (properly, ‘an e.p.’): 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. Of obscure origin; but perhaps cf. Ger. der achte Teil (the eighth part) or Dutch achtste, eighth.

pheniff is the spelling of finnif in Anon., State Prison Life (U.S.A.), 1871.

philip. A policeman: 1874, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1890, according to B & L; but F & H, 1901, record it as extant; certainly † by 1910. Perhaps orig. a personification.

philip! ‘Waro the police!’: 1874, H; 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; † by 1910. Prob. ex the n.

philiper or philliper. ‘A thief’s accomplice, one who stands by and looks out for the police while the others commit the robbery.—[The Times, 5th September 1860’: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; † by 1910. I.e., one who calls out philip!

Philistines, ‘bailiffs’, ‘police officers’, ‘drunkards’: all these senses are s., not c. Cf. Moabites.

philliper. See philiper.

Philly or Phillie. Philadelphia: tramps’ c. in the approximate period, 1880–1910; then gen. s.: 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1900, Flynt, The World of Graft; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd.

phinn(e)y. ‘A Phinney, alias Burial,’ C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718; † by 1830. Origin?

phizgig. A variant of fizgig.

phoenix. ‘One who enters the world after long imprisonment,’ Leverage, 1925: not c., but crime-reporters’ journalese. Ex the fabulous re-birth of the fabulous phoenix. There is a pun on the fact that the phoenix is a bird: cf. bird, n., 3, and canary.

phoney, n. Imitation jewellery: 1905, Owen Kildare (see phoney, adj.); 1918, Leon Livingston (see phoney stiff); 1831 and 1934 (see phoney man); slightly ob. See the adj.—2. Counterfeit paper-money: 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13, ‘Slush is funny stuff—they call it “phoney” in America’; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Rather direct ex the adj. than ex sense 1 above.—3. A false warning or piece of information: 1934, Howard N. Rose; by 1940, police and journalistic c. Cf. sense 2 of the adj.—4. Blarney: British: since ca. 1930. James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936. Ex a combination of senses 1, 2 or an accumulation of 1–3.—5. A ‘phoney’—i.e., a confederate—participator in a gambling game: gamblers’ (British): since 1944. In, e.g., Alan Hoby, ‘Mayfair’s Fantastic Gamblers!’ in The People, April 7, 1946.

phoney (occ. spelt phony), adj. Imitation; false; counterfeit; illicit, open to legal suspicion: 1900, George Ade, More Fables; 1905, Owen Kildare, The Wisdom of the Simple, ‘There was that indescribable something about [his clothes], which is always noticed in the wearing apparel of so-called “sports”, race track followers and professional crooks. To trade-mark himself still further Coleman sported a florid necktie illuminated with an enormously large diamond pin of the “phony” sort’; ibid., ‘Commonly known as “Jake the Phony Guy”, on account of his recent calling as seller of “phony” or shoddy jewelry’; 1909, Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery; 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison, ‘There is a phony note in his voice . . . He’s a slick one, and he fooled me’; 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, when ‘phoney grifters’ is applied to petty swindlers; 1917, H. M. Wodson, The Whirlpool (Canadian); 1918, L. Livingston, Madame Delcassee, ‘A “phoney stiff”’, peddling “cheap” jewelry’; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson; 1925, Edgar Wallace, A King by Night—by this time, it is English too; May 30, 1925, Flynn’s, ‘A fugitive from justice because of his “phony” money exploits in America’; 1926, Jack Black, You Can’t Win, ‘Git a phony name and street number ready’; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, ‘False; unreal; imitation; worthless’—in this nuance, s. by ca.

1930, after which the predominant underworld sense is 'suspect; crooked, criminal', itself s. by 1937 at the latest. Not from funny (cf. 'funny business'), as Webster suggests; nor from telephone (or telephony), as Godfrey Irwin thinks and The O.E.D. hesitantly proposes; but from fawney, n., used attributively as in 'the fawney rig' (q.v.): fawney (ex Erse fainné, a ring) is the ring—usually made of imitation jewellery—that figures in the 'lay' or 'dodge' or 'rig' of ring-dropping (the fawney rig, often shortened to the fawney); fawney soon came to imply 'a ring made of imitation jewellery' and 'a ring used for illicit purposes—a ring wanted by the police'. In English c., moreover, the word was used attributively so early as 1781 in fawney rig; fawney cove occurs in 1848, fawney dropping in 1851, fawney bouncing in 1859; cf. also the two American terms, fawney man and fawney shop, qq.v.—2. Guilty of informing to the police: since ca. 1920: 1934, Convict. Ex sense 1.

phoney crip. See crip.

phoney hand, to deal (someone) a. To bluff; to outwit: tramps': since ca. 1925. Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby, 1933. See phoney, adj., 1.

phoney man is a later form of phoney stiff: tramps': 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who writes it phoneyman, as also do M. H. Wesecn, 1934, and BVB, 1942; extant. See phoney, n., 1, and adj., 1.

phoney mon(n)iker. A false name, an alias: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; by 1930, low s. See the elements.

phoney stiff. A vagrant that sells imitation jewellery: mostly tramps': 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hobos; 1923, N. Anderson, The Hobo; extant. Cf. phoney, n., 1, but see esp. the adj., 1.

phonograph, turn on the. To confess; to admit guilt; to inform to the police: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'The Gray Gangster'; extant. Sarcastic.

phos. Phosphorus; a bottle of phosphorus: 1800, Sessions Papers, April (p. 213), 'Davis pulled out some phos, and lit a candle'; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Used by housebreakers to light their lanterns'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Foss or Phoss, a phosphorus bottle'; app. † by 1887 (Baumann).

phun. A small packet containing a narcotic: 1933, Cecil de Lenoir, The Hundredth Man, 'Sooner or later there comes a time when the "bindle" or "deck" or "phun" is not to be had save at exorbitant prices'; extant. A variant of pfun.

phunt, 'one pound sterling': pitchmen's and cheapjacks' s. of late C. 19–20. In, e.g., Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934. Ex Ger. Pfund.

pi. See P.I.

piano, play the. To have one's finger-prints taken: since ca. 1912. Partridge, 1938. Ex the manner in which the fingers are posed.

picaroon, 'a sharper' (Grose, 1785), is more prob. s. (perhaps journalistic) than c. 'Now an ordinary thief', says H, 1874: not c.

picaroon, on the. See on the picaroon.

piccolo. Automatic phonograph in a tea pad: drug addicts': March 12, 1938, The New Yorker, Meyer Berger; extant. By humorous 'disguise'.

pick, n. See peck, n., reference of 1812. A rare variant.—2. The actual pickpocket in a mob: U.S.A.: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Auto- biography of a Thief, 'Two or three of us generally went together. One acted as the "dip", or "pick", and the other two as "stalls"'; slightly ob.

pick a berry. To steal from a clothes-line: 1934, Rose; extant. Prob. suggested by gooseberry, v.

pick a poke. To steal a purse: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; extant. See poke.

pick-me-up. A police van: South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. Me being the apprehended criminal. Cf. dim-liggies and wikkel (Afrikaans synonyms).

pick the daisies at — Station. To rob passengers arriving (esp. in London) by the Continental boat-trains: since ca. 1920. Partridge, 1937. Cf. pick-up, n., 5; the best bags, etc., are 'daisies'.

pick up, n.; pick-up. An arrest, esp. an arrest upon suspicion: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations; by 1935, police s. in U.S.A.; since ca. 1920, also (perhaps orig.) British; Partridge, 1938; by 1940, s. in Britain too. Prob. ex sense 6 of the v.—2. Theft by picking-up bags, cases, portmanteaux, etc., hence a pick-up man: Sept. 8, 1928, Flynn's, Captain Charles H. Moss, 'International Crooks I Have Known; No. 6—"Gentleman George", Pick-Up Man,' 'The opportunity arose to "pick-up" his all-important bag'; Sept. 27, 1937, Godfrey Irwin (private letter), 'A petty theft'; 1938, F. D. Sharpe (Britain), 'Pick up (the): Stealing from unattended cars'; extant. Ex the v., sense 5.—3. A person arrested: from ca. 1925: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Either ex sense 1 or ex the v., sense 6.—4. A man successfully solicited: prostitutes': late C. 19–20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex the v., sense 2.—5. A luggage thief: British: 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades, implies that it is police s. Ex sense 2.—6. A ration of narcotics: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. Short for pick-me-up.—7. Hence, exhilaration: drug addicts': since ca. 1925. BVB.

pick up, v. To rob on the highway: highwaymen's: ca. 1760–1840. Richard King, The Frauds of London detected, 1770, '[Highwaymen] have various schemes for carrying on their business, such as seeing ostlers, bribing landlords, on the road, for intelligence of who is worth picking up'.—2. Possibly c. at first, but more prob. always low s., is the sense: (of prostitutes) to accost, to succeed in interesting, a man sexually; 'To pick up a cull, is a term used by blowens in their vocation of street-walking' (Vaux, 1812). This sense arose at least as early as 1720, and it occurs, e.g., in Thomas Bridges, A Burlesque Translation of Homer, 1770, and earlier in Select Trials, from 1720 to 1724, pub. in 1734, but reporting a trial held in 1721.—3. Hence (?), 'to accost, or enter into conversation with any person, for the purpose of executing some design upon his personal property; thus, among gamblers, it is called picking up a flat, or a mouth: sharpeners . . . use the same phrase,' as do also 'drop coves': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), p. 115; by 1901 (F & H), no longer c.—4. (Ex sense 1.) To cheat (a person): 1874, H; app. † by 1910.—5. To steal: 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow, 'Within twenty-four hours of that man's release the three prison-made thieves were looking round the town to see what they could "pick up"—in plain language, to see what they could thieve'; Sept. 8, 1928, Flynn's (see the n., sense 2); Sept. 27, 1937, Godfrey Irwin (letter), 'To pilfer or take something of scant value'; by 1940, s.—6. To arrest (a person): U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; by 1935, police s. in U.S.A. Throughout C. 20, also British: as, e.g., in John G. Brandon, The Pawnshop Murder, 1936.—7. 'Pick (someone) up, to provide narcotics for an addict or to administer an injection,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic: since ca. 1920.

pick-up man. See pick up, n., 2.

picked hatch. See pickt hatch.

picked(-)up. Drug-exhilarated: since ca. 1920. BVB. Ex pick up, v., 7.

picker. Pickers, 'the hands', is not c., but s.

picker-up. He who, in that gang of three which practises 'the drop' (see drop, n., 2), 'picks up' the 'flat' (intended victim): 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1901 (F & H). Cf. pick up, v., 3.—2. In U.S.A., 'the picker-up takes his man to a gambling-saloon, and there leaves him to be . . . allured by what he sees. Sometimes he only gives the man he has picked up his card, which will admit him to a gaming house . . . The roper-in and the picker-up . . . should not be confounded. The picker-up is always a gentleman . . . He first sees the man's name on the hotel-register, and where he is from. He then see[k]s him out, studies his character and ascertains his means and the object of his visit to the city; and the picker-up, if smart, reads his victim phrenologically without touching his head . . . It does not take him long generally to get a stranger to visit a gambling-hell. Very many of the servants of hotels are in the pay of pickers-up—the duty of the servant being to get information concerning guests, which his employer can use': 1859, Matsell; July 13, 1929, Flynn's, Eddie Guerin; extant.—3. A prostitute: Ware (1909) classifies it as c. and sets it in C. 19, I know not on what authority; prob. he had, in late C. 19, heard it used.

pickets. Teeth: mostly tramps' and convicts': since ca. 1915: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict; 1938, Castle. Ex the upright palings—pickets, usually painted white—forming a picket fence (Irwin).

picking. 'little Stealing, Pilfering, petty Larceny' (B.E., 1698), is not c., nor even, as B.E. and Grose imply, s.—nor, for that matter, coll. It is familiar S.E., now ob.; esp. in picking and stealing.

picking the daisies. Robbing incoming passengers, at a (big) railway station, esp. from the Continent or from America, chiefly in London: since ca. 1920. Netley Lucas, My Selves, 1934. The victims are 'as fresh as a daisy'—and as easy to 'pluck'. See also pick the daises.

picking-up moll. "I heard a bloke talking about a 'picking-up moll' he used to live with. What did he mean by that?" "O! that's a very common racket. He meant a 'flash-tail', or prostitute who goes about the streets at nights trying to pick up 'toffs'": 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, "Coshers" and "trippers", or—in reference to trippers only—"picking-up molls", are vile men and women who travel from town to town. The women are "put on" to old "swells" who are the worse for drink, or farmers and others who may be in the same condition, and having got them into corners or secluded places, ease them of their money and watches. Should an outcry be made, their "guns", or [their] "bullies", come to their help, and silence the dupes by maltreating them"; 1901, F & H; ob. See moll.

pickins. 'Money obtained by begging, or by any other dubious means or "graft"', Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': C. 20. I.e., pickings: cf., in form, makins and, in subject, Shakespeare's description of Autolycus's activities.

pickling-tubs. (Rare in singular.) 'Shoes and boots': 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Tubs is derisive, pickling an insult.

pickt hatch. A brothel: 1598, Shakespeare (O.E.D.); 1604, T. Middleton, The Blacke Booke, 'I would build a Nunnery in Pickt-hatch here, and turne the walke in Powles'—St Paul's—'into a Bowling Alley'; ibid., as adj., 'Copper Capitaines, and Pickt-hatch Commanders'; 1614, B. Jonson, Bartholomew Fair, 'Yes Goodman Hogrubber, o' Pickt-hatch', as an insult; the term was prob. † by 1660. Grose refers to the phrase, go to the manor of pickt hatch, to visit a brothel in that part of London.

picot, v. (Of prostitutes) to solicit: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; ob. Prob. ex Fr. picoter, 'to touch with the neb; hence, to tease'.

picture frame. See sheriff's picture frame.

picture of ill luck, the. See ill fortune.

piddle. A hospital: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB. Either ex the urine tests carried out by the staff or ex hospital illiterately pronounced hospiddle.

pidge. An informer, esp. in prison: mostly convicts': C. 20. In, e.g., Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937. Ex 'stool pigeon'.

pidgeon. See all pigeon entries.

pie, v. To bungle: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. s. and coll. senses of mess, n. and v.

pie, in the. Involved in a criminal racket: Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn, 'Once a gangster always a gangster, the saying ran. Racketeer, rum-runner, chiseler or gangster, once a man was on the bend, in the pie, he stayed there for the rest of his life, which was a short one'; extant. Cf. pie, v.

Pie and Cake County (or Neighbourhood), the. Yorkshire: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (ch., 'Two Tramps in England'); ob. Cf. Bread and Cheese County.

pie book, 'a book of meal tickets, usually issued as an advance against wages', is not c., but s. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.) Cf. monkey money.

pie-can or piecan. 'A weakling from the Stiff's point of view . . . "He is no piecan" is a term of great praise,' Melbourne Garahan, Stiffs, 1923: tramps': 1935, The Garda Review, in the sense 'simpleton'; by 1943 (Richard Llewellyn, None but the Lonely Heart) it was low s.

pie card. One who sponges upon a remittance man or upon any other person with money: tramps': from ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931. Cf. s. meal-ticket.

pie-eyed, 'hopelessly drunk': low s., not c.

pie in the sky. One's reward after death: late C. 19–20: orig.—until (say) 1910—it was c., esp. among tramps and beggars. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex that parody of the hymn In the Sweet Bye and Bye which ends its chorus with the consolatory assurance, 'You'll get pie in the sky when you die'.

pie(-)wagon. A police patrol van: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Pie Wagon: Patrol wagon'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage; Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; Feb. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, R. E. Burns; 1933, Ersine; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 27) it was s. I.e., p(atrol) wagon elaborated.

piecan. See pie-can.

piece, 'a girl', seems to have been S.E. during the period C. 14-18; since ca. 1800, it has been slang or, at best, coll. There is, however, some reason to believe that, used in the senses 'mistress, concubine; harlot', it was, as employed in the underworld, c. from ca. 1580 until ca. 1830; in U.S.A., perhaps until ca. 1870—see Matsell, 1859. Thus Robert Greene, in A Disputation, 1592, 'Then was my prettie peace brought in, who being a handsome Trul, blusht as if she had been full of grace'. Ex an individual's being regarded as a piece of a multitude, an army, a company.—2. 'She took out of that place a paper parcel, containing six smaller parcels of 5s. each; in count 30s., which they [some counterfeiters] called a piece,' Sessions Papers, Dec. 1795, p. 36; ob.—3. A share: U.S. racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'He muscled in for a piece of the cleaners' racket'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. Cf. end.—4. Hence (?), a ration of narcotics: U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942.

piece-broker, a piece-broker (a dealer in shreds and remnants of cloth) that receives stolen cloth: 1890, B & L. But this is merely a normal application of the S.E. sense of the term.

piece of goods. A prostitute: white-slavers': late C. 19-20. Joseph Crad, Traders in Women, 1940. See goods and transit piece of goods.

pieces. Money; esp., coin: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'I got more pieces (money) for the wedge (silver plate)'; 1890, B & L; ob. Short for pieces of money.

pieman. See pyman.

pig, n. A sixpence: 1698, B.E., 'The Cull tipt me a Pig, c. the Man gave me Sixpence'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'Pig, sixpence; a sow's baby'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1839, Brandon; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Augustus Mayhew; 1859, H; by 1901 (F & H) it was low s. Suggested by hog, n., 1.—2. 'A police officer. A China street pig; a Bow-street officer. Floor the pig and bolt; knock down the officer and run away': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1813, Sessions Papers; 1818, The London Guide; 1821, P. Egan, Life in London, 'Thou renowned hero of the police, Townshend . . . thou bashaw of the pigs'; ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack; 1839, Brandon (p. 168); by 1845, current in U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851; 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; but earliest in The National Police Gazette, Feb. 21, 1846); † by 1887, Baumann. Ex proletarian dislike of policemen.—2a. 'A common nickname for a fat prison guard' (Ersine): convicts': C. 20.—3. A person: 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; ob. Ex S.E. pig, 'objectionable person'.—4. Erroneously, a shilling: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin.—5. A hardware store: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant. Perhaps direct ex pigeon, n., 3, or perhaps ex pigeon joint, but prob. short for pig-iron dump.—6. A racehorse of questionable merit: U.S.A.: on the borderline between sporting s. and racecourse-gang c., but rather the former than the latter. (Lian Bonner, 'Your Millions', Flynn's, Aug. 20, 1927; G. G. Rice, My Adventures with Your Money, 1913).—7. Meat: convicts' (U.S.A.): 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest; 1934, Rose. Most of the convict terms for food are uncomplimentary.—8. Short for blind pig (a speakeasy): U.S.A.: since ca. 1924. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; Ersine, 1933.—9. 'A dirty, worn-out old harlot,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. Ersine, 1933, 'A lewd woman'. Ex her filthiness.—10. A locomotive: tramps' (U.S.A.): since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. hog, n., 3.—11. A bubo, a chancre: prostitutes': 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'A pig in the groin'; extant. Cf. sense 9.—12. A dollar: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. senses 1, 4.

pig, v.; esp. pig it. 'Even the copper began to pig it (weaken), probably thinking he might as well get a share of my "dough", since it began to look as if I should beat the case,' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; ob. Perhaps ex squeal like a pig.—2. (Cf. sense 1.) 'Pigging, Deserting,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904, p. 251; ibid., p. 259, 'He pigged with the darb. He absconded with the money'; ob.

pig-iron dump. A hardware store: C. 20. Jack Black (in ref. to early C. 20), You Can't Win, 1926. Many things sold there are made of pig iron.

pig Latin. See anyay.

pigeon, n., 'dupe', may orig. have been—indeed, it prob. was—s. But in the specific sense of a gambler's dupe, fleeced by a set of sharpening dicers or card-players, it may, ca. 1760-1830, have been c., for, in this sense, it was a sharpeners' term: witness, e.g., Richard King, The Frauds of London detected, 1770, and his revision (1781) of The Complete London Spy.—2. One of a gang of 'carrier pigeons' (q.v.): 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1823, Egan's Grose, 'An obsolete trick'.—3. Short for blue pigeon (lead): Jan. 1823, Sessions Papers; 1823, Bee; 1833, Sessions Papers of the Old Bailey, 1824-34, IX, trial of Sophia Birch; 1859, implied in pigeon-cracking; 1912, R. A. Fuller, Recollections; extant.—4. Orig., U.S.A.: 'A thief that joins with other thieves to commit a crime, and then informs the [police] officer, who he pigeons for,' Matsell, 1859: May 12, 1849, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1874, H, 'An informer'; 1876, P. Farley (U.S.A.); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Prisoner who reports another; stool-pigeon'; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1928, Chicago May; 1930, George London; † by 1931 (IA). Short for stool pigeon.—5. A letter: U.S.A.: 1871, State Prison Life; app. † by 1920. Semantically ex pigeon post or letters by pigeon post.—6. 'A pigeon is a carrier, whether he is working for . . . a snide mob—for drug-traffickers or just plain carrying hard (i.e. chewing tobacco) around a stir,' Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 1937; extant. Ex carrier pigeon.—7. 'The best embezzlers—called thimble-riggers in the old day, but now simply known as pigeons—always work alone,'

News-Week, Feb. 13, 1937 : U.S.A. : since ca. 1920. Ironic : he does the plucking !

pigeon, v. To inform to the police : 1859, Matsell ; 1925, Leverage ; extant. Ex sense 4 of the n.

pigeon, adj. 'False or "pigeon" numbers are given by the managers of policy [a gambling game ; or rather, a kind of lottery] to friends to play on "outside books". If the outsiders get an inkling that the pigeon number is out they promptly decline to pay any one who may have played that number' : 1881, The Man Traps of New York, ch. IX ; app. † by 1920. Ex pigeon, n., 4.

pigeon, fly a blue. See blue pigeon, fly the.

pigeon, fly the, is a variant (ca. 1810-50) of blue pigeon, fly the. Bee, 1823.

pigeon act, the. Being a 'stool pigeon' : 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 'Loony Ryan, an old-time "box-man" . . . allowed to roam with a clipped wing . . . a suspended sentence. Loony, for the liberty thus doled out to him, rewarded his benefactors by an occasional indulgence in the "pigeon-act" ; by 1925, police s. pigeon-cracking, n. 'Breaking into empty houses and stealing lead' : 1859, H ; slightly ob. See pigeon, n., 3.

pigeon-drop, the. A confidence game, in which a pocket-book is dropped : since the 1920's. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937. See dropping the pigeon.

pigeon-fancier. A professional gambler : gaming c. of ca. 1800-50. John Joseph Stockdale, The Greeks, 1817 (see quot'n at workman). Ex pigeon, n., 1, with a pun on the S.E. sense of pigeon-fancier.

pigeon-flying, n. 'Breaking into empty houses and stealing lead' : 1784, H ; slightly ob. A shortening of blue-pigeon flying.

pigeon-holes ; app. never in singular. A hand-vice, for use while an offender is being flogged ; hence, the stocks : 1592, R. Greene, A Disputation, 'I dare scarce speake of Bridewell, because my shoulders tremble at the name of it, I have so often deserved it, yet looke but in there, and you shall heare poore men with their handes in their Piggen hoales crye, Oh fie upon whores, when Foulter gives them the terrible lash' ; app. † by 1700. Ex the shape.

pigeon joint. A hardware store, esp. as delimited by Irwin : 1927, Kane ; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A store where burglars' tools may be purchased, or a resort specializing in the supply of such instruments' ; extant. See pigeon, n., 3.

pigeons is the shortened form of carrier pigeons. See also pigeon, 2.

pigeons, fly the. To steal coal as one carts it : C. 20, Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Prob. suggested by pigeon-flying or an allied pigeon term.

piggen hoales. See pigeon-holes.

pigman. A policeman : ca. 1820-60. Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 9 vols., 1824-33, Vol. I, trial of Wm White ; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open. An elaboration of pig, n., 2.—Hence, a bailiff : 1848, Sinks of London ; † by 1910.

pig's face. Lace : Pacific Coast : C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

pig's foot. 'A jimmy [q.v.] cloven at one end like a pig's foot' : 1859, Matsell ; 1890, B & L ; 1925, Leverage ; extant.

pig's vest with buttons. Sow belly ; fat bacon : tramps' : since ca. 1910 : 1931, Stiff. Hobo poetry.

pigtail. Twist tobacco : convicts' : C. 20. In, e.g., W. G. Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows, 1939. Ex its appearance.

pike, n., 'a turnpike', is not c.—2. A farm : U.S.A. : Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's (p. 639) ; extant. Turnpike roads being characteristic of rural districts.

pike, v. ; pike off. To slink away ; decamp, make off : 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, '[Housebreakers], if they find [no money], they take the best . . . Lurries they can find' ; 1698, B.E., 'To run away, flee, quit the Place . . . As he Pikes, c. he walks or goes' ; 1707, J. Shirley (pike off) ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. ; 1785, Grose, 'Pike, to run away ; pike off, run away' ; 1797, Potter ; 1809, Andrewes ; 1848, Sinks of London ; 1859, H ; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.) ; † by 1887, according to Baumann ; but J. W. Horsley, Prisons and Prisoners, 1898, implies that it is still current at that date ; † by 1910. Prob. ex S.E. pike = a turnpike road ; cf. the Road.—2. Hence, to die : 1698, B.E., 'Piked off, c. . . . Dead' ; 1725, A Canting Dict. ; app. † by 1820.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) To go : 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Pike up . . . go up' ; app. † by 1830.—4. See piker, 1.—5. 'To break an appointment or promise,' Ersine, 1933 : U.S.A. : since ca. 1925. Cf. piker, 6.

pike, take (someone) down the. To defraud : C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. the s. take down the garden path, sweetly to deceive.—2. 'To so pummel an individual that he is no longer a nuisance or a menace, but amenable to instruction or discipline,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931 : C. 20. To take him along the turnpike road, get him alone, and 'let him have it'.

pike, tip a. As v.i., to walk, to depart ; as v.t., to escape from, give the slip to : C. 18-early 19. Song, 1712, 'Tho' he tips them a pike, they oft nap him again'. Cf. pike off and pike on the been.

pike across the Herring Pond. 'To go to Botany Bay' : 1799, The Monthly Magazine (Jan.) ; app. † by 1860. See pike, v., 1, and Herring Pond.

pike it. "Pike it" is said as a hasty and contemptuous, if not angry dismissal ; "if you don't like it, take a short stick and pike it" : 1864, H, 3rd ed. ; 1890, B & L, 'Pike it, to (popular and thieves), to run away' ; by 1895, no longer to be classified as c. See pike, v., 1.

pike off. See pike, v.

pike on the been. 'Pike on the been'—obviously a misprint—'Run as fast as you can,' R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665 ; 1676, Coles, 'Pike on the been, c. run for it' ; 1698, B.E. ; 1707, J. Shirley, 'Run for it as well as you can . . . Pike on the been' ; 1714, Alex. Smith, who, in Highwaymen, repeats Head's error, but in 'The Thieves' Grammar' in Vol. III, 1720, he gives it correctly ; 1725, A New Canting Dict., as pike on the bene ; † by 1830. See pike, v., 1 ; on the been prob. = on the bene, well.

pike to the ruffian (or ruffin) ! Go to the devil : 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (where it is spelt ruffen) ; † by 1870. See pike, v., 1.

piker. 'A man who plays very small amounts. Plays a quarter, wins, pockets the winnings, and keeps at quarters [of a dollar] ; and never, if he can help it, bets on his winnings' : professional gamblers' and card-sharpers' : 1859, Matsell ; 1901, F & H ; 1903, Sylva Clapin, Americanisms, where also is 'Pike (to). In gambling parlance, to play cautiously and for small amounts, never advancing the value of the stake', but it is prob. that, by this date, neither the n. nor the v. was c. Ex pike, v., 1; cf. playing on velvet, q.v. at on velvet.—2. A tramp; a vagrant; occ., a gypsy: British: 1874, George Borrow, Romano Lavo-Lil; ob. Adopted ex dial., where current 1838. Prob. ex pike, v., 1.—3. A busybody: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; † by 1940. Ex sense 1.—4. (Prob. also ex sense 1.) A lounge: 1904, Life in Sing Sing; † by 1940.—5. A hobo: 1904, Life in Sing Sing; ob. See pike, v., 1, but imm. ex sense 2 above, influenced perhaps by hiker.—6. A confidence man; one who lives by the illicit exercise of his wits: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1942; Baker, 1945. Prob. ex senses 1, 5. Ex pike, v., 1. (Cf. playing on velvet, q.v. at on velvet).—7. A breaker of promises: U.S.A.: since ca. 1925. Ersine. Ex pike, v., 5.

pikey. A tramp; a gypsy: 1874, H; by 1890, low s., according to B & L. Perhaps because he so often used the turnpike roads (H); cf. piker, 2, 5.

pilch. To pilfer: 1901, F & H (on what authority for classification as c. ?); ob. Cf. S.E. filch.

pilcher is defined by 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857, as 'A stealer; applied to pickpockets. "A pilcher of fogles"' and classified as c. Possibly it was c. of ca. 1840–90, although The O.E.D. records it and its origin, pilch, 'to filch', as S.E. of C. 16–18, dial. of C. 19–20.

pile(-)driver. 'Pile driver or java.—Coffee, but good strong coffee,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': from ca. 1910. It 'goes through', like a pile driven into mud.

pilfer. To steal in small quantities and/or values; to filch. Despite several lexicographers of slang, this word, dating from 1550 in writing, has always been S.E. The same remark applies to pilfering, first recorded in Hall's Chronicle, 1548. Perhaps a subconscious association with filch caused the wrong classification.

pilfering. See pilfer.

pill, n. A bullet: May 1820, Sessions Papers (p. 418), 'Daws told me, that as soon as he got out of custody he would give me a pill, by day or by night, and when he came to the Bar, he hoped they would send him out of the country, for there were more Thistlewoods than one'; by 1890, s. Cf. s. leaden favour or pill.—2. A pellet of opium: U.S.A.: 1911, George Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, 'The "pill" having disappeared in smoke, he rested the butt of the bamboo pipe against the bunk'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; July 8, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant.—3. A 'doped' cigarette: U.S.A.: c. of ca. 1925–35, then s.: 1929–31, Kernôt (marijuana cigarette); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict.—In C. 20 S. Africa, it = a small dagga-cigarette; a 'shot' of dagga: The Cape Times, May 22 and 23, 1946. Ultimately ex the motion of putting pill or cigarette into one's mouth, but imm. ex sense 2 or, more prob., ex Canadian s. pill, 'a cigarette', current since well before 1914.

pill, v. To shoot (a person): 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex sense 1 of the n.

pill, do one's bit on a. 'As an addict expressed it to me, its use [i.e., the use of a drug] is "prison life made easy". It is known among the prisoners as "doing your bit on a pill",' Joseph F. Fishman, 'Insido the Crater' in Flynn's, Nov. 20, 1926; extant. Cf. pill, n., 2 and 3.

pill-cooker. An opium addict: since ca. 1915. BVB. See pill, n., 2.

pill(-)peddler. A physician: tramps': C. 20. Esp. in Stiff, 1931. Cf. pill-shooter.

pill(-)shooter; pill-twister. A physician: from ca. 1919. Godfrey Irwin, 1931 (former); 1934, Convict (latter: esp. among convicts). Cf. pill-peddler.

pilliard is either a very rare variant of or, more prob., a mere slip for palliard. (Awdeley, 1562.)

pillinger. A bum that solicits alms at stores, offices, and residences: 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hobos; 1923, N. Anderson, The Hobo; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A beggar who solicits alms before public buildings and stores'; 1942, BVB; extant. Perhaps, as Irwin proposes, a mere illiterate corruption of pillager; cf. plinger.

pillow. An opiate; 'knock-out drops': since ca. 1930. BVB. Proleptic.

pillus, 'a doctor' (Leverage, 1925), is s.; cf. the † Eng. s. bolus.

pilot. A boy, or a dog, leading a blind beggar: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1918. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.) By 1940, no longer c.

pilot man. 'One who drives the first car in a booze convoy,' Rose, 1934: bootleggers': since ca. 1925; after 1933, merely historical.

pimp, n. and v. An informer, to inform, to the police: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1942. In Australia, a white-slave pimp is heartily despised and contemned.

pimp-ship. A procuress: white-slave traffickers': 1928, J. Kenneth Ferricr, Crooks and Crime, 'The house which Mrs Blank, a "pimp-ship", had opened ready to receive the expected guests'; extant. With a pun on pimp and s. to pump ship.

pimp(-)stick. A cigarette: since ca. 1890. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Obviously the term arose in U.S.A. before cigarette-smoking (as opposed to cigar- and pipe-smoking) became general there. All over the European and the (either-) American world, the cigarette hanging from upper lip or dangling from the corner of the mouth has long been a hall-mark of the prostitute's bully, the pimp.

pimp whisk (in), a pimp: not c., as several lexicographers have stated, but s. The longer, the orig. form, appears in Ford's The fancies chast and noble, and in Humphry Mill's A Nights Search, Part I, 1640; the shorter not before Captain John Stevens's translation of Quevedo's Complete Works, 1709. Earlier, however, is whiskin, a pauder (Brome, 1632). O.E.D.

pimple. A procurer: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Punning pimp.

pimp's turban. A hard hat, a bowler: tramps': 1931, Stiff; slightly ob. Cf. pimp stick, q.v.

pin, n. See pins.—2. A policeman: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex pin, v., 1.

pin, v. To arrest (a person): 1859, Matsell; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'To catch, apprehend'; 1925, Leverage; 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Ex S.E. pin, 'to confine' (a person), 'to impound' (a beast).—2. 'To steal rapidly': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1901, F & H; 1925, Leverage; extant. Perhaps ex the sharpness of a pin-prick.—3. See pinning.

pin artist. An abortionist: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Abortion procured by the use of a pin is described in Anon., Thirty Years Battle with Crime, 1874; simple—and dangerous.

pin grease. Butter: mostly tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex 'the yellow lubricant used to grease the pins on a locomotive's driving-wheel bearings' (Irwin).

pin-head. See pinhead.

pin-money. 'Money received by a married woman for prostituting her person': 1859, Matsell; † by 1930. Ex the Eng. sense, 'a married woman's dress-allowance'.

pin shot. An administration of drug with safety-pin and eye-dropper rather than with a hypodermic: drug addicts': 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; by 1934 (Ferd. Tuohy, Inside Dope) it was police and medical j. 'Many of the poorer cases will just slit the vein open with a safety-pin and absorb the drug from an eye-dropper (the "pin-shot")': Tuohy.

pin work. Pin marks on playing cards: card-sharpers': since ca. 1920. Ersine. See work, n.

pinch, n. (Always the pinch.) The dodge of 'ringing the changes' (see pincher); 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected, where a section is headed 'The Pinch or Truck'; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; app. † by 1860. Ex pinch, v., 2.—2. Hence, purloining 'small articles of value in the shops of jewellers, &c., while pretending to purchase or bespeak some trinket': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); † by 1910.—3. An arrest: U.S.A.: c. of ca. 1880–1915 (J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, 1900); then police s., which it was, in part, as early as 1901 (Flynt, The World of Graft), at least; 1907, Jack London, The Road. Ex pinch, v., 3.—4. A small theft: U.S. pickpockets': J. Flynt, The Rise of Roderick Clowd, pp. 64, 66; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. sense 2; prob. ex pinch, v., 1, though possibly it connotes 'what can be stolen in one pinching motion of the fingers'.—5. Short for pinch-board: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

pinch, v. To rob (a person): 1656, Anon., The Witty Rogue Arraigned (see quot'n at cully); 1698, B.E., 'To steal, or sliely convey any thing away'—copied by A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1812, J. H. Vaux (as in nuance at pinch, n., 2); ibid., 'I pinch'd him for a fawney'; 1839, Brandon; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'To steal, or cheat'; 1869, J. Greenwood; by 1880, low s.; by 1900, gen. s. The thief pinches a small article between two fingers as he abstracts it from, e.g., a pocket.—2. To 'ring the changes': 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (and see pincher); 1785, Grose, 'To steal money under pretence of getting change for gold'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; extant.—3. To apprehend; to arrest (a malefactor): Oct. 1837, Sessions Papers, p. 157, "'D—d if I'm not pinched for housebreaking at last'"; 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1859, Matsell; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1887, J. W. Horsley; 1890, B & L; 1891, Jacob A. Riis (U.S.A.); 1897, Crofton (U.S.A.); by 1900, low s. Prob. ex sense 1.—4. To reduce a bet: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; by 1940, low s.

pinch, on the. See on the pinch.

pinch a bob. 'To rob a till': 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; but this is prob. a misprint for the next. See pinch, v., 1.

pinch a lob. See lob, pinch a. pinch-board. 'A swindling roulette-table,' B & L: ca. 1875–1910. Also in F & H, 1901. Cf. pinch, v., 1.

pinch(-)gloak. 'A man who works upon the pinch' (as in pinch, n., 2): 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1887 (Baumann). See gloak.

pinch out. 'Oil swindler's term. To cut down natural flow of oil by pinching out a well,' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. Cf. pinch out, 'to extinguish'.

pinch the regulars. "'He 'cused me of . . . pinchin' the reg'lars, as we call it,'" glossed as 'keeping back part of the plunder', F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, 1893 (p. 414); extant. See regulars.

pinchback. A prison uniform: convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex its tight fit.

pincher. One who, in changing money or, less usually, in making purchases, habitually (as a livelihood) 'rings the changes': 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'The Turners and Pinchers, that is those getting Change for Money, and putting back Part and keeping some'; ibid., article entitled 'Turners and Pinchers', 'Two of them goes together, one of whom gets as many Half Crowns as he can, and goes into a House or Booth, and calls for Liquor, and then asks the Landlord or Landlady for Change of Half a Crown, who generally pulls out a Handful of Silver to give them two Shillings and Sixpence, and the other Person says you need not change; then he secretes a Shilling between his Finger and Thumb, and turns his Hand upside down over his or her's [sic], and by that Means will get several Shillings in a day. If a Person pulls out a Handful of Silver to give them Change for Half a Crown, they will ask for a Queen Anne's Six pence to put in a Letter; the Person being ignorant of their Intent, lets them look in their Hand or Purse; and if there is Gold in the same, they are sure to lose it, by his pinching it between his Thumb and middle Finger; they then thank them and go their Way, the People not knowing they have lost any Thing'; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1796, Grose, 3rd ed.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890.—2. A pickpocket: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex pinch, v., 2.—3. (Usually pl.) A shoe; pinchers, a pair of shoes: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; extant. New, it does pinch.

pincher on, put (the). To arrest (a person): Australian: ca. 1880–1910. B & L, 1890. Ex pinch, v., 3.

pinchers. See pincher, 3.

Pinchgut. Fort Denison, a convict establishment on a little island in Sydney Harbour: Australian: early C. 19. Baker, 1945. Ex the meagreness of the rations.

pinching. 'Secreting small trinkets of value in a shop, while pretending to select and purchase something': 1819, J. H. Vaux, Memoirs; † by 1890. Cf. pincher, 1.

pinching lay, the. The dodge or livelihood described at pincher, 1: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1901, F & H—but by that time it was either ob. or †. Cf. pinch, v., 2, and lay, n., 2; also pinch, n., 1.—2. A synonym of pinch, n., 2, according to F & H, 1901; but this sense has not been authenticated.

pineapple, n. 'It was a pineapple—a bomb,' Albert Chenicek, 'The Pineapple', Flynn's, July 6, 1929; 1929, E. D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago; May 31, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1930, George London; 1930, Burke; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin. Adopted ex military s. of 1914-18, when it = a Mills bomb; by 1931—teste Irwin—it was widely used by the police; c.—and rather doubtfully c.—only ca. 1920-30. 'So called . . . from the segmented markings on the casing, which ensured the missile breaking up and covering a lot of ground when exploding' (Irwin); those markings caused the Mills bomb, externally, to resemble a pineapple.

pineapple, v. To bomb: since ca. 1922. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex the n.—2. Hence, to dynamite: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

pineapple-tossers. 'Bombing gangsters of Chicago's underworld,' Kernôt, 1929-31; slightly ob. See pineapple, n.

pinhead; pin-head. A chap, fellow, 'guy'; a fool: 1919, Arthur Stringer, The Man who Couldn't Sleep, "Here," he commanded. "Bring that gun and guard this pin-head!"; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex the Am. coll. pinhead, 'a dull, stupid person'.—2. Hence (?), a drug addict: since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1942, BVB. Cf. pin shot, which may form the effective origin.—3. The sense 'railroad brakeman' is railroad s.—4. 'Convict, after having had his head shaved closely,' Kernôt, 1929-31; extant.

Pink. See Pinks.

pink, n. (Also Pink.) A private detective, any private detective: from ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; Ersine, 1933. Ex Pinks, q.v.—2. An urgent telegram: since ca. 1917. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Such telegrams are sent on pink forms.

pink, v. She pinked . . .

pink, adj. Esp. in turn pink, to turn State's evidence: 1924, George Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain, 'What is the one thing that always lands crooks in the can, hey? . . . Why, it's "turning pink", "turning copper", of course'; extant. Prob. ex pink, n., 1.

pink, turn. See pink, adj.

pink-eye; pinko; pinky. An addict of, drunk on, pinky, methylated spirits coloured with Condy's crystals: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1942.

pinked between the lacings. 'Convicted by reason of perjury. A man encased in steel or iron is only vulnerable at those parts where his corselet is laced': 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L, 'Still current among criminals and detectives in New York'; † by 1910. Ex rapier-duelling.

pinko. See pink-eye.

Pinks, the. The Pinkerton detective agency: late C. 19-20: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'The Pinks are a hard mob to throw, and I'm wise . . . The Pinkertons are very hard to lose and I know it'; ibid., same page (263), 'Pink had me framed', where the firm is singularized and individualized; 1925, Leverage, 'Pinks. . . . The Pinkerton detectives'; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; by 1930, s. Allan Pinkerton (1819-84) instituted the agency in 1850. Several of his books have been frequently quoted in this dictionary.

pinky. A girl's (or a young woman's) hand: 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man (see quot'n at hock-rock); ob. Sentimental poeticizing ex colour.—2. Usually Pinky; a Pinkerton detective: 1925, Leverage; 1941, Maurer; extant. A pet form of Pink (see Pinks).—3. See pink-eye.

pinnel. Penal servitude: 1874, H., 'Pinnel, or pennel,—corruption of penal servitude. As, "four-year pinnel"'; 1890, B & L; by 1910, low s. Cf. penals.

pinner-up. 'The wall-song-sellers (or "pinners-up", as they are technically termed)': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; i.e., song-sellers that take their stand by a wall; 'pinners-up', because they support the wall, or, more prob., because they pin their songs against the wall (Mayhew, I, 215). Not a c. but a s. term.

pinning, vbl n. Begging: tramps' and beggars': 1930, Lennox Kerr, Backdoor Guest; extant. Ex 'pinning a person down to make a gift'.

pinnipe. A crab: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary, where also 'Pinniped. Sideways; crab-fashion'; 1901, F & H (n. and adj.); ob. Can there be any connexion with scientific pinnified, 'web-footed', and pinnipedia, 'a sub-order of aquatic carnivorous mammals' (Webster), including all seals and walruses?

pins, 'legs', is classified in Egan's Grose as c.: but it has always been s.

pint peddler. A petty bootlegger: ca. 1925-34. Ersine. He deals in very small quantities of liquor.

pint pot. A drunkard: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on sot.

pinwheel, 'a revolving door' (Leverage, 1925): s., not c.

pinyon. Opium: drug addicts' and dealers': Nov. 29, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; ibid., Dec. 13, 1930; extant. 'Pinyon is the Chinese term for it' (Charles Somerville, Flynn's, Dec. 13, 1930); prob., in form, influenced by piñon, 'the nut-like seed of) a low-growing West American pine-tree'.

pious lay, the. 'The sanctimonious assumption of base hypocrites', i.e. a sanctimonious or pious bearing assumed the better to withdraw attention from some illicit project or livelihood: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; † by 1920. See lay, n., 2.

pipe, n. A detective, a shadower, a watcher: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, 'You must come here tomorrow . . . and report to me. See that no "pipe" is put on you'; by 1920, ob.; by 1930, †. Ex pipe, v., 2.—2. A watch(ing): 1893, Langdon W. Moore, 'The other man . . . kept a "pipe" on the hotel'; very ob. by 1940. Cf. sense 3 of the v.—3. A cigar: 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.) at 'The Flash Language'; † by 1937 (Irwin). Ex its length and its purpose.—4. 'Something easy,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'A sure thing, a cinch'; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 'if ever there was a "gift" this bank was one . . . It was a "pipe"'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, Leverage; Oct. 27, 1928, Flynn's, Joseph F. Fishman; by 1929, it was police and journalistic s. Perhaps ex 'a pipe-dream'.—5. (Cf. sense 4.) A 'person under the influence of intoxicants', Life in Sing Sing, 1904; ob. Also cf. pipes, adj.—6. A rifle (?): 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, ' . . . Carry a pipe or gun, and be ready to kill': † by 1935. Ex shape of the barrel.—7. A pipeful of opium: addicts': since ca. 1920. Ersine.

pipe, v. To understand: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, "I'm blessed if I pipe you, Jack," said Fielder; "You're queering me now"; app. † by 1880. Cognate with sense 2: therefore prob. from peep, 'to look slyly': cf. peepers, 2.—2. As in 'Piping. Following; trailing; dogging; looking after; watching' (a person): U.S.A.: 1848, The Ladies' Repository; definition is from Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859; 1860, C. Martel, The Detective's Note-Book (England); by 1864, low s. (detectives': see H, 3rd ed.), except in U.S.A. (Burnham, 1872; Allan Pinkerton, 1879); there, it remained e. until ea. 1890. Prob. ex sense 1.—3. To observe or examine (a building) beforehand, with a view to robbing it: 1888, G. R. Sims, 'A Plank Bed Ballad'; 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story, 'We "piped" the Francetown Bank' (U.S.A.); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (as v.i.); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1918, s. Ex sense 2.—4. Hence, to find: U.S.A.: since the 1920's. Castle, 1938.

pipe, adj. See pipe-house.

pipe, hit the. See hit the pipe.

pipe, on the. See on the pipe.

pipe a plant. To plan a robbery: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322), 'Putting up a robbery . . . To pipe, make ready, a plant'; ob. Cf. a whistle that 'pipes' to duty; see pipe, v., 2, and plant, n., 5.

pipe down. To follow, shadow, track (a criminal); run him down: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; † by 1910. An elaboration of pipe, v., 2.

pipe dream. See hop dream. A peculiar twist to the S.E. sense.

pipe-hitter. An opium-smoker: C. 20. Kernôt, 1929–31; BVB, 1942. Ex hit the pipe.

pipe-house. A lunatic asylum: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, '“You might as well go to the pipe-house and let them cure you”'; by 1940, virtually †. Cf. bug-house and pipes, adj. The allusion is prob. to opium pipes.

pipe joint. An opium den: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; extant. See the elements.

pipe off. (Of a thief's accomplice) to watch for (a policeman): E. Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York, 1872. (Esp. of a detective) 'to follow or dog a suspected person's tracks,' Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs, Oct. 24, 1877, Sessions Papers, 'Piped off . . . followed or watched'; 1879, Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences; 1891, James Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; 1893, Langdon W. Moore; by 1895, s. Cf. pipe down.—2. To wisecrack: 1923, Ersine; extant. Perhaps ef. coll. pipe up, 'to speak'.

pipe-smoker, 'a smoker of opium', is not c., but police and medical s. Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 1929.

piped. 'Under influence of liquor or narcotics,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; slightly ob. Cf. pipe, n., 5, and pipe joint. The reference is to the opium pipe.

piper, 'a broken-winded horse', is s., not c. Cf. pipers. But the sense 'a short-winded person' (Matsell, 1859), may have been American e. of ea. 1840–90.—2. A thieves' look-out man: U.S.A.: 1879, Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences, p. 94; 1881, A. Pinkerton, Professional Thieves; by 1890 (B & L), police s. Cf. piper!

piper! A thieves' warning cry: 1834, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–34, X, trial of John Kelly and John Mills, (a policeman) '“I followed them down Oxford-street . . . I saw Kelly turn round and say, 'Piper',—meaning that I was watching them”'; † by 1890. Cf. piping dues.

piper-off. 'A spy or "spotter"': 1891, J. Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; by 1895, or soon after, it was s. Ex pipe off.

Piperheidsieck. To look; to see: 1928, Chicago May; extant. The fanciful Proper Name puns pipe, v., 2, 3, and 'hide-and-see'.

pipers, the. A broken wind, esp. of a horse: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1890. Because a horse affected therewith is said to pipe or whistle.

pipes, n. Boots: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. Both objects are hollow—until occupied.

pipes, adj. '“Jimmy, is it true that you are pipes (crazy)?”': Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; by 1940, almost †. As bugs, 'mad', comes from bug house, so pipes comes from pipe-house.

pipey or pipie, n. and adj. An opium addict; under the influence of opium: since ea. 1920. Ersine; BVB. Cf. pipe-hitter.

piping may be merely a nonce-word, or it may well be a—prob. short-lived—card-sharpers' c. term in Anon., The Art and Mystery of Gaming detected, 1626, in reference to whisk: 'By Piping I mean, when one of the Company that does not play (which frequently happens) sits down in a convenient Place to smoke a Pipe and so look on, pretending to amuse himself that Way. Now the disposing of his Fingers on the Pipe, whilst smoking, discovers the principal Cards that are in the Person's Hand he overlooks.'—2. For the U.S. sense, see pipe, v., 2.

piping dues. 'He looked round when I asked how he became possessed of it, and said, "The piping dues are on", meaning somebody had been giving information, and they would get paid handsomely for it': 1829, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, V, trial of Richard Chick and others; † by 1890. See dues, 2, and ef. piper!

piss more than one drinks. This underworld o.p. was implied by B.E. (at vain-glorious) in 1698; stated in 1725, at vain-glorious, in A New Canting Dict., which has the entry, 'Vain-Glorious, or Ostentatious Men [sic], one that boasts without Reason, or, as the Canterers say, pisses more than he drinks': as a c. saying, it was current until ca. 1760, when it > a gen. s. e.p.

piss when he can't whistle!, he will. He will be hanged: e.p.: possibly c., prob. low s. Grose, 1785.

pistol route, the. Death by shooting: 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. A grim jest on 'a way out'.

pistol-whip, v. To threaten, or intimidate, someone with pistol or revolver: 1934, Howard N. Rose; Feb. 27, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; slightly ob. With a pun on to horse-whip.

pit, 'the hole under the Gallows into which those that Pay not the Fee, viz. 6s. 8d., are east and Buried' (B.E., 1698), is not c., despite B.E.'s classification, but S.E.—2. 'A watch fob. He drew a rare thimble from the swell's pit; he took a handsome watch from the gentleman's pocket': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'The bosom pocket in a coat'; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 'The pits (breast pockets)'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A pocket'; 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; 1923, Sidney Felstead; 1927, Kane; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly (U.S.A.), 'Inside coat pocket'; 1931, The Bon Voyage Book (as pitt); 1933, Ersine, 'Inside breast pocket of a man's coat'; 1938, F. D. Sharpe; extant. Because usually it is deep: the thief has to descend as if into a pit.—3. 'Among thieves certain terms are used to represent articles which otherwise have proper names. A pocket-book is called "leather"; a wallet a "pittman" or "pitt"; a pocket is called a "kick"; hands are termed "dukes"; a handkerchief a "wipe", and a hat is dubbed a "tile"': U.S.A.: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; extant. Ex mining? But cf. sense 2.

pit-man. See pitman.

pitch, n. The sense 'a vendor's or an orator's stand or position' is not c., but street vendors' s. > S.E.—2. Jackson & Hellyer, 1914, classify pitch as American c. in the sense 'effort, essay, attempt', but Godfrey Irwin (letter of Aug. 12, 1937) states that it is—and always has been—s.—3. The sense 'money' is pitchmen's s.: money being what they obtain from successful work at their pitch (platform, stand, etc.).

pitch, v. To take up a 'pitch' or position: not c.—2. As in: 'The ignorant are destroyed by their numbers. There is one who swags—that is, carries the coin; there is another who pitches or passes it; there is a third who watches the police': 1858, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, xvii: implied earlier in shoful-pitcher, q.v., and occurring independently in Sessions Papers, May 1839; 1874, H; 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; 1890, B & L; Feb. 6, 1906, Sessions Papers; extant. Ex pitch, 'to toss'.—3. To peddle drugs: U.S. drug traffic: C. 20. BVB. Cf. s. pitchman, 'peddler'.

pitch a snide. See pitch the snide (ref. of 1887).

pitch it. To pass counterfeit coin: 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen; slightly ob. I.e., to 'pitch the snide' (q.v.); cf. pitch, v., 2.

pitch one's (or the) gammon. To talk plausibly; to leg-pull; to bluff (v.i.): 1784, Sessions Papers, July, p. 962, 'You have no call to pitch none of your gammon to me'; 1823, Bee, 'Pitching his gammon', telling fibs with strong assumption of veraciousness; 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'In chaff was he the primest going, and in pitching the gammon . . . he shone pre-eminent'; by 1850 it was s., by 1920 †. See gammon, n., 4.

pitch the baby card. See baby card.

pitch the fork. To tell a pitiful tale: beggars' and tramps': 1859, H; 1863, The Story of a Lancashire Thief, 'Brummagem Joe (a cove as eould patter and pitch the fork with anyone)'; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; 1890, B & L; 1933, Joseph Augustin, The Human Vagabond; 1935, Hippo Neville; by 1936 or 1937, it was low s. Cf. pitch one's gammon.

pitch the gammon. See pitch one's gammon.

pitch the hunters, to 'put up the "three sticks a penny" business' (C. Hindley, Cheap Jack, 1876), is not c., but showmen's and cheapjacks' s. Cf. hunter, 1.

pitch the nob. To 'prick the garter' (q.v.), of which it seems to have been, in C. 19 at least, the c. equivalent: 1859, H; 1890, B & L; ob.

pitch the plod. To plough the ground: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on sod.

pitch the snide. To pass—or try to pass—counterfeit coin: 1885, M. Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; 1887, Henley (pitch a snide); extant. See pitch, v., 2.

pitcher. 'Newgate [Prison] in London is called by various names, as the pitcher, the stone pitcher, the start, and the stone jug, according to the humour of the speaker': 1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan's Grose, 1823; † by 1887 (Baumann). Cf. jug, n.—2. Short for snide-pitcher: 1874, H (see quot'n at snide, n.); 1890, B & L; 1895, Caminada; 1901, F & H; 1904, Ex-Inspector Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals; 1929, Tom Divall, Scoundrels and Scallywags; extant.

pitcher bawd, 'the poor Hack that runs of Errands to fetch Wenches or Liquor,' B.E., 1698, is almost certainly not c., but s.

pitman. 'Pit-man, a pocket-book worn in the bosom-pocket': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood, where it is defined as 'a small pocket book'; 1886, Allan Pinkerton (U.S.A.)—see pit, 3; 1887, Baumann; 1901, F & H, who imply that it is †. Ex pit, 2; man = mans.

pitt. See pit, 3.

pitter. A portmanteau: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Come, let us pike to glee'—or search—'for a Pitter or [a] Leather'. A rare variant († by 1785) of peter, n., 1 and 2. pitter-lay is a rare verb (ca. 1740–1800), recorded in John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753. To practise:—

pitter lay, the. The stealing, as a trade, of portmanteaux: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries. This is a rare variant of peter lay, q.v.; Poulter also spells it as petter lay.

Pittite. A mutton-bird: Norfolk Island convicts': ca. 1820–70. Baker, 1945. Ex Mount Pitt on Norfolk Island.

pittman. See pitman.

Pittsy. Pittsburgh: perhaps, orig., tramps' c. (as in Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 1925), but prob. always s. Cf. Cincie (or -y).

pity-cadger. '[Lags] have a great contempt for the man who openly drops tears at concerts. "Pity-cadger" they call him,' Stanley Scott, The Human Side of Crook and Convict Life, 1924; extant. Cf. s. sob sister.

pivot. To solicit for immoral purposes: since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1942, BVB, 'To solicit from a brothel window'. She pivots on the window.

pix. A homosexual (esp. a male passive): 1942, BVB. Short for pixy (suggested by fairy).

place. A hiding-place for stolen property: since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933.—2. A brothel: C. 20. BVB. Euphemistic?

place, v. To hide, esp. stolen property: since ca. 1920. Ersine. Cf. the n.

placer. Dating from the 1880's as a term in prostitution and since the late 1890's as a white-slavers', it has been defined by Albert Londres in The Road to Buenos Ayres, translated by Eric Sutton, 1928, in a passage dealing with the classes of women from whom the pimps recruit their 'remounts': 'There are also "placers": a strictly official position. Their job is to tend the sacred flame, under the eye of the law, in the "houses" of France. They have not the right to take any part in exportation; but they do.' Cf. the Fr. une bonne place, a good job.

plain. A policeman in plain clothes: 1925, Leverage; by 1930, also police s.—perhaps it always was rather police s. than c.

plain bob. See bob, n., 3.

plainer. A tramp: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. From walking over the great plains of the U.S.A.

plaiul, v. To go home: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary; † by 1910—if it ever existed. Is this a disguise-amplification of S.E. ply ('The Vulcan plies between Plymouth and Dover')?

plan. To steal: 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxv, 'If you should pinch a lob—or plan | A sneezer, or a randlesman'; † by 1900. Short for plan the theft of.

plank, n. A hiding-place, esp. for stolen goods: Scottish: 1892, A. Carmichael, Personal Adventures of a Detective, 'To carry the "swag" to the "plank"'; rather ob. by 1945. A corruption of plant, n., 2—or, more prob., ex plank, v.—2. A criminal plan or 'dodge': U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage. See sense 2 of the v.

plank, v. To conceal: Scottish: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'I took two screaves from the blunt which I had plankt there'; ibid., 'I was nicely plank't amongst the hay'; 1823, Egan's Grose, where it is classified as Scottish c.; 1848, Sinks of London; 1866, J. MacLevy, Curiosities of Crime; ob. Either a perversion (or a misapprehension) of plant, v., 1, or a confusion of plant, v., 1, and S.E. plank, to place.—2. 'Plank, v. To plan a campaign of theft,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.; extant. Prob. ex sense 2 of the n., which may originate in the 'plank of an electioneering platform (i.e., policy)'.—3. To imprison: C. 20. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Perhaps ex sense 1. plannam, in F. Kirkman, The English Rogue, Part Two, 1671, is a misprint for pannam.

plant, n. 'The place in the house of a fence, where stolen goods are secreted': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; by 1810, this sense has flowed into—or merged with—sense 2. Either ex plant, v., 1, or ex sense 2; in the latter case, sense 2 comes from plant, v., 1.—2. 'Any place where stolen goods are concealed,' Lex. Bal., 1811, but occurring in Sessions Papers, April 1785 (p. 582), 'He opened a place in the wainscot, which is called a "plant", it was a secret cupboard'—also, op. cit., Dec. 1787 (p. 96); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'I know of a fine plant . . . a secure hiding place'; 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1846, C. Roweroft, The Bushranger of Van Diemen's Land; 1881, Rolf Boldrewood; 1893, Langdon W. Moore (U.S.A.); 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey; by 1905, low s. Cf. sense 1.—3. Hence, 'any thing hid is called, the plant, when alluded to in conversation; such article is said to be in plant': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, IV; 1863, 'Waters', Autobiography of an English Detective; 1874, H., 'A hidden store of money or valuables'; 1886, A. Pinkerton (U.S.A.), Thirty Years a Detective; 1887, Baumann; 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story (U.S.A.); 1898, Price Warung, Tales of the Isle of Death; 1901, Caminaad, Vol. 2; 1901, F & H; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1912, D. Lowrie, My Life in Prison (U.S.A.); Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (drug-outfit secreted about one's person); 1933, Ersine; extant.—4. (Also ex sense 2.) 'A person's money, or valuables, secreted about his house, or person, is called his plant': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; 1890, B & L; 1903, Flynt, Rudrick Cloud (U.S.A.); ob. by 1930.—

5. (Prob. ex sense 3.) A trap, a plot; a preconcerted swindle; a person employed as a trap (rarely, a detective: 1812, The Sporting Magazine, cited by O.E.D.) or as an unpleasant surprise; a 'dark horse': 1818, The London Guide; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, II, '[Dutch] Sam, . . . understanding that Britton was a plant upon him, dealt out his death-like punishment so rapidly upon his opponent, that he was ultimately finished in style'; 1824, Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'Wells, a strong, wiry chap, and said to be a bit of a plant'; 1825, C. E. Westmacott, The English Spy; 1826, The New Newgate Calendar, VI, 403 (a gamblers' decoy); 1829, Maginn, Vidocq, III; 1833, Sessions Papers; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1839, Anon., On the Establishment of a Rural Police; 1845, anon. trans., E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris, ch. xii; 1851, Mayhew; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; 1859, H; 1872, G. P. Burnham (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; by 1900, low s.; in C. 20 U.S.A., however, it='framed evidence' (Ersine, 1933).—6. Hence (?), a hoax; a joke: 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'The latter gentleman . . . facetiously observed, "it was a plant upon him by an old friend . . ." Mr. Jackson, in reply, said "it was no plant"'; but this sense very quickly > sporting s.—may, indeed, have always been sporting s.—7. (Cf. 8.) A place to be robbed: ca. 1819, The Young Prig; 1893, Confessions of a Convict; 1893, No. 747, p. 419; 1904, Life in Sing Sing (U.S.A.); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; extant.—8. A prospective victim, esp. of a robbery; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist, "Do you see that old cove . . . ?" "The old gentleman . . . ?" said Oliver. "Yes, I see him." "He'll do," said the Dodger. "A prime plant," observed Charley Bates'; 1839, W. A. Miles, 'A plant (. . . a person marked out for plunder)'; 1859, H (at prime plant); 1869, J. Greenwood; 1893, No. 747; ob. Either ironically ex sense 5 or ex plant upon; cf. sense 7.—9. Loosely and prob. incorrectly: any crime less than murder, as in 'Thrilling long-winded descriptions of robberies and other "plants",' Arthur Griffiths, Chronicles of Newgate, 1884, II, 205.—10. 'The "plant", or factory, where the [counterfeit bank-]notes had been made and printed': 1890, M. Moser & C. F. Rideal, Stories from Scotland Yard; extant. Cf. senses 2 and 3.—11. A (burglars') look-out man; a police watcher: Mareh 1848, Sessions Papers (former); 1890, B & L (former); 1895, Caminada (latter); 1927, F. C. Coe, Me—Gangster; extant. He is planted there.—12. Among bootleggers, since ca. 1922: 1930, Burke, 'a cache where liquor is stored; a place where synthetic liquor is made. "He's got a thirty-case plant in a Hudson." "That mob has a hundred-gallon boiler in their plant"'; 1933, Ersine, 'A place where something illegal is made; a still, a counterfeiter's shop'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; then merely historical. Cf. —13. (Ex sense 3: it is usually carried hidden in a small bag inside a trouser-leg.) A drug addict's outfit—the drug and the needle, etc.: U.S. drug traffic: 1931, IA; April 21, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627; extant. Cf. biz and works, joint and lay-out.—14. 'Sometimes it is a "plant"—a house or other fixed point—from which visitors to one of the suspects can be noted unobserved,' George Dilnot, The Real Detective, 1933: police s., not c. Cf. sense 11.—15. An opium-den: U.S.A.: 1934, Rose; extant.—16. Solitary confinement; the cell where the prisoner undergoes it: U.S. convicts': 1935, Hargan; extant. Ex senses 1-3.—17. A 'salted' mine or mining-claim: Australian commercial underworld: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942.

plant, v. To hide, v.i. and, much more commonly, v.t.; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All; 1612, Dekker, O per se O, likewise v.i., 'Then we did creepe, And plant in ruffe-mans low'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Plant. . . . To lay or hide'; 1676, Coles, 'Plant, e. to lay, place, or hide'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1735, Select Trials; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1785, Grose (as in Coles); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'To secrete any thing, to hide any article stolen'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; Jan. 1818, Sessions Papers; 1839, Brandon, 'To deposit in some secret or settled place'; 1846, C. Rowcroft, The Bushranger of Van Diemen's Land; 1847, A. Harris, Settlers and Convicts (Australia); 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1863, Tom Taylor; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham (U.S.A.); 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude; 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms, "'Don't go planting in the gully, or someone'll think you're wanted, and let on to the police'"; ibid., "'He might have planted a lot'"; 1887, G. W. Walling (U.S.A.); 1890, M. Moser & C. F. Rideal, Stories from Scotland Yard; 1893, Langdon W. Moore (U.S.A.); 1898, A. Griffiths, Police and Crime; 1899, George E. Boxall, Australian Bushrangers; 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers that Prey; 1904, No. 1500; by 1905, low s. in Britain; by 1910 low s. in U.S.A., for which country the earliest record is The National Police Gazette, 1845. Ex S.E. plant, 'to set seed in soil'.—2. See plant one's (or the) whids.—3. As 'to bury' (a person), it is much more likely to be low s. than to be c. (Ca. 1770-1940).—4. To lay a trap for (a person); to 'frame' (a person): 1790, Sessions Papers (Feb., p. 394), 'Damn his eyes, he was planted'; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, 'An officer, not acting "square" with a prisoner got "planted" and "sucked in"'; 1890, Clarkson & Richardson, The Rogue's Gallery; 1901, F & H; Oct. 10, 1925, Flynn's (U.S.A.); slightly ob. Cf. sense 5 of the n.—5. (Cf. senses 5 and 8 of the n.) 'To mark a person out for plunder': 1839, Brandon; to mark a building down for burglary: 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed., p. 88; 1860, H, 3rd ed.; Jan. 1863, The Cornhill Magazine (of both person and building); 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; ob.—6. To prepare: 1890, B & L, 'To plant the job, to . . . prepare . . . a robbery' (esp. a burglary); 1901, F & H; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys (U.S.A.); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. sense 7 of the n.—7. To pass (spurious coin): counterfeiters': 1883, J. Greenwood, Rag, Tag & Co.; 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; extant. Cf. plant the sour, q.v. at sour, plant the.—8. To stack unfairly: see plant the books.—9. To place (something) as incriminating evidence in a man's pocket, etc.: U.S.A.: C. 20; by 1930, police s. (Eagle, 1933).—10. To hide (stolen cattle or horses) and then sell: Australian: since ca. 1840. Rolf Boldrewood, Ups and Downs, 1878; A Pioneer, Reminiscences of Australian Life, 1893; Baker, 1942. Merely a special application of sense 1.—11. 'To smuggle narcotics into jail by means of a confederate with narcotics on him who allows himself to be arrested,' BVB, 1942: Am. drug traffic: since ca. 1910. Cf. sense 9.

plant, do. To (find a place at which to) arrange bets with, esp., the inexperienced: 1851, Sessions Papers (Oct. 29, case against Coyle), 'Borrowing people's houses to do plant with some nice fledgelings'; ob. Cf. plant, n., 1 and 2.

plant, hobble a. See hobble a plant.

plant, in. (Of an article, esp. a stolen article) bestowed in a hiding-place; concealed: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see plant, n., 3); 1823, Egan's Grose; 1901, F & H; slightly ob. See plant, n., 1 and 2.

plant, pipe a. See pipe a plant.

plant, raise a. See the 1886 and 1893 and 1937 references in:—

plant, rise the. 'To take up and remove anything that has been hid, whether by yourself or another': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1886, Allan Pinkerton (U.S.A.), Thirty Years a Detective, 'The important occupation of "raising a plant"'; 1887, Baumann; 1893, Langdon W. Moore (U.S.A.: raise . . .); Nov. 20, 1937, Flynn's, Convict 12627, 'It now became the job of the engineer's clerk to "raise the plant"'; extant.

plant, spring a. 'To find any thing'—esp. articles that have been stolen—that has been concealed by another': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1826, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-33, II, trial of Wm Harris and James Ayres. 'Harris said some one had sprung the plant—I asked what he meant—he said some one had taken some lead of theirs'; 1836, Sessions Papers; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'To discover the place where stolen property is concealed; to remove stolen property from its place of concealment'; Aug. 16, 1865, Sessions Papers; 1874, H; 1887, Baumann; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (p. 322); 1901, F & H; extant. See plant, n., 2, and cf. raise the swag.

plant one's or the whids. To be careful of what one says: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Plant your whids . . . Have a care of what you say'; 1698, B.E., 'Plant your Whids and Stow them, c. be wary what you say or let slip'; 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. See plant, v., 1, and whid, n.

plant the books. A card-sharpers' phrase, dating from ca. 1880: 'to place the cards in the pack unfairly, for the purpose of cheating at play, or deceiving by legerdemain,' B & L, 1890; 1901, F & H (by implication); et al. Cf. plant, v., senses 1, 6, 7.

plant the sour. See sour, plant the.

plant the swag. To hide the plunder: thieves', esp. burglars': 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary—but the phrase was in existence very much earlier. See plant, v., 1, and swag, n., 3.

plant the whids. See plant one's whids.

plant upon. 'To plant upon a man, is to get somebody to watch his motions; also to place anything purposely in his way, that he may steal it and be immediately detected': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, plagiarizingly; † by 1900. See plant, v.—esp. sense 4.

planter. 'One who hides stolen property': 1859, Matsell; in mid-C. 19-20 Australia, one who hides stolen horses or cattle (Baker, 1942)—cf. planting, 2, q.v. Ex plant, v., 1—and, for Australia, ex sense 10.—2. A passer of counterfeit money: 1895, J. Greenwood, Behind a Bus; 1923, J. C. Goodwin (see layer, 2); extant. Ex plant, v., 7.

planting. A bridewell, or house of correction: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'I got other sixty days in the Planting'; app. † by 1870. Prob. ex plant, v., 1—cf. sense 3.—2. A concealing of stolen goods: prob. from ca. 1660: 1845, Chamber's Miscellany, I (Australian use of the term); 1859, Wm Kelly, Life in Victoria, 'Planting is a branch of colonial horse traffic, which consists in first, stealing a horse, and, as soon as the reward for his recovery is offered, planting or placing him in a place where the thief pretends to have found him accidentally'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); ob. Ex plant, v., 1; cf. sense 10.

planting the sour(s). Passing counterfeit money; see sour, plant the.

plaster, n. An indictment; a warrant: 1925, Leverage (the former); 1934, Convict (the latter); extant.—2. A dollar: April 13, 1929, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson, 'The Roaring Road', 'Jacobs, the smartest guy in town buys one barrel of good whisky for twenty-five hundred plasters. Oh, boy, it will be good for a laugh ten years from now'; extant. Short for shin-plaster—or, at the least, derived from it.—3. Butter: tramps': 1899–1914 (see punk and plaster); 1931, Stiff; 1931, IA; extant. Cf. axle grease and punk and plaster-route.

plaster, v. To assault: 1931, IA; extant. Prob. since 1918, when returning soldiers brought with them the adopted British-Army sense, 'to shell the enemy's lines'.—2. To bet heavily on (horse or dog): English racing gangs': 1937, Robert Westerby, Wide Boys Never Work; extant. Cf. s. 'make a splash'.—3. Plaster the burg, to issue, carefully, many forged cheques in one locality: U.S.A., esp. forgers': since ca. 1920. Maurer, 1941. Cf. paper-hanging.

plastic. 'A model artist,' says Matsell, 1859: but what precisely, does he mean? Presumably a sculptor: cf. Ger. Plastik, 'sculpture', and Plastiker, 'sculptor'.

plat. Platinum: since ca. 1920. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938, 'Does a gaff . . . Straight smash. Tray o' groins, red an' plat'; extant.

plate, 'money, silver, prize' (Grose, 1785): not c., but s.—2. The sense 'combination dial (of a safe)'—Leverage, 1925—may possibly be c.; but it sounds more like a mere colloquialism, based on appearance.

plate (or plates) of meat. A street: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, has plates . . ., but Matsell, 1859, has the more convincing plate . . ., 'a street or highway'; by 1865, low, and by 1875 gen., rhyming s., although it may have remained c. in U.S.A. until the end of the century, the term recurring, c.g., in James D. McCabe, New York, 1882, and F & H, 1901.—2. In C. 20, in the U.S. Pacific Coast, plates of meat = feet: witness Chicago May, 1928; Convict 2nd, 1938; M & B, 1944. Adopted ex Cockney s. plated waistcoat-button. See monkey-jacket button.

plates of meat. See plate of meat.

play, v. 'To scheme; to rob; to gamble,' Burke, 1930: racketeers': 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To scheme or gamble on success as in a hold-up or robbery'; 1934, Rose ('rob'); extant.—2. Hence, to tell (a dupe) a story by which to get his money: American and British: since ca. 1920. Ersinc, 1933; Partridge, 1938. Or directly ex 'to pay a fish'.

play, chant the. See chant the play.

play, make a play, v.i.; v.t., make a play on.

To attempt a robbery or theft; to attempt to rob: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'We make a play on their plant, but don't score'; extant. Cf. play, 1.

play a-cross. To play booty: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1900. See cross, n.

play around. 'To indulge irregularly in narcotics,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic: since the 1920's. I.e., not to take it seriously.

play baby. 'To whine, "squawk" [i.e., inform to the police]; or assume innocence': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1910, no longer c. Prob. suggested by 'to squeal'; a baby's squealing or crying.

play booty. See booty, play.

play house. A prison where conditions are good, work light: convicts': 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (where it is printed playhouse); 1928, Chicago May; 1931, IA; extant. Cf. rest house.—2. 'Jail easily escaped from', Kernôt, 1929–31; extant. Less usual than 1.

play on velvet. See on velvet.

play stickers. See stickers.

play the bird with the long neck. To look (hard, earnestly, carefully) for someone or something: 1934, Rose; slightly ob. An elaboration of gander, v.—cf. s. rubberneck.

play the high heel. 'May . . . was a clever woman who played the high heel (begged) over in the East Side, New York. What that baby did not know, in that game, wasn't worth knowing,' Chicago May, 1928; extant. Ex the gentility advisable in a female beggar.

play the match. To 'engage in a confidence game,' Rose, 1934; extant. Cf. play and player, 2.

play the nod. See nod . . .

play the piano. See piano . . .

play the whole game, 'to cheat', may possibly—not probably—be gamesters' c. of ca. 1770–1860.

play to the wall. 'Simulated stock exchange,' P. S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 1936: commercial crooks': since ca. 1929. I.e., to Wall Street.

play up to (a person), put a or the. To ask (him) to handle a (or, the) situation: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Let me get Ricey. He's got a good nut an' I'll put the play up to him'; by 1920, s. Ex the idea of a ball-game in which one player passes or kicks the ball to another.

play with the squirrels. To be insane; to be an inmate of a lunatic asylum: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

played against the wall. See wall, 2.

player. In the 'pay-off' (a stocks-and-shares swindle), 'the man who plays the principal part is known in the profession as the "player"', Percy J. Smith, Con Man, 1938: confidence tricksters': prob. since ca. 1920.—2. One who forms part of a gang operating a confidence trick: since ca. 1925. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. Cf. play the match and sitter-in.

player queer-checker. See queer-checker.

playhouse. See play house.

playthings. 'Burglar's tools': 1859, Matsell; † by 1940. Humorously euphemistic.

pleasure jolt. 'An occasional indulgence by one who is not a confirmed addict,' BVB, 1942: drug addicts': since ca. 1925. Also pleasure user: the 'addict himself,' BVB. See jolt, n., 2, and cf. :—

pleasure smoker. 'One who smokes opium irregularly,' BVB: since ca. 1920. Cf. prec. entry. plier; plyer. A crutch: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—witness Matsell's Vocabulary, 1859; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. The person plies it as he moves along; also there may be a reminiscence of Fr. plier, 'to bend'.

pling, n. A beggar: 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. short for either plinger or pillinger.—2. Begging, beggary; esp. in on the pling, q.v. at pling, on the.

pling, v. To beg: C. 20 (implied in plinger, q.v.): 1925, Leverage; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To beg on the street'. Cf. sense 1 of the n.

pling, on the. Engaged in begging or in soliciting: Oct. 26, 1929, Flynn's, Lawrence M. Maynard, 'Shake-down Artists', '... The street beggars and hustlers, who make their living "on the pling"—which is underworld slang for on the street'; extant. Cf. pling, n., 1, and pling, v.

plinger. 'The "plingers", the professional tramps who could go out on the drag and get almost anything they wanted,' Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 1929, but with ref. to the early years of the century, though implying that the term was still current; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan, 'To Hell and Back'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; May 2, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack; extant. Prob. a shortening of pillinger.

plonk. Cheap Australian wine, laced with methylated spirits: Australian; since ca. 1919. Baker, 1942. Ex Fr. 'vin blanc', prob. influenced by 1914–18 war s. plonk, 'mud'.

plover, 'a wanton': early C. 17 (Ben Jonson): not c., but a s. variant of quail. The sense 'a dupe': ca. 1615–45: prob. a s. synonym of pigeon.

plow the deep. To sleep: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20; ob. Convict, 1934; M & B, 1944. Rhyming; adopted ex Cockney s.

pluck, 'to cheat', was prob. never worse than s., but the phrase pluck a pigeon, may orig. have been c. as a term used by sharps at dice and cards: witness Richard King's revision, 1781, of The Complete London Spy; there we find 'He can palm a card, pluck a pigeon, or cog a die, as the phrase is, with any man'. Ex the lit. sense of pluck (to denude of feathers); and see pigeon.

pluck a brand. 'To fake a new brand on stolen cattle or horses by pulling out the hairs around the existing brand,' Baker, 1942: Australian cattle duffers: since ca. 1860.

plug, n. A fellow, a chap: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 'A nickname for a homely [i.e., ugly] man'; 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1933, Ersine defines it as a working stiff; by 1945, almost †. Perhaps a shortening of plug-ugly.—2. A hat: 1848, The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). Prob. ex the basic sense, 'something used as a wedge or stop-gap'.

plug, v. In the sense 'to shoot (a person)' it has prob. been always s.—at first, low s., as in the quot'n at on the lam.—2. As to 'shoot dead'—deliberately and not in war—it may perhaps have been c. of ca. 1900–30. (George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924, has it as a synonym of 'murder'.)

plug(-)cutter. 'The mortise [door-]bolts that necessitate a revolution or semi-revolution to release them are overcome by an instrument known as a "plug cutter" and a pair of nippers': 1881, plug-tail, 'a man's penis' (Grose, 1785), is not c., but low s.

The Man Traps of New York, ch. VI, 'Hotel Sneak Thieves'; ob. Cf. the etymological note to plug, n., 2.

plug-ugly, 'a rowdy, a tough'; s. (orig. low), not c. In New York of mid-C. 19, existed a gang of 'toughs' known as 'The Plug Uglies', so named from 'the enormous plug hats of the members, which they stuffed with wool and leather and drew down over their ears to serve as helmets when they went into battle' (Herbert Asbury, 'The Old-Time Gangs of New York' in The American Mercury, Aug. 1927).

plugged dime, 'a loaded coin' (W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 1929): low s., not c.

plugger. 'One who plays in a gambling house to induce the belief that a game is going on': 1891, J. Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; 1903, Clapin, plagiaristically; rather ob. He plugs, or fills, a gap.—2. An energetic worker: 1924, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1910, it was s. He plugs along and plugs at it.

plum or plumb, 'a hundred thousand pounds' in money: s., not c.—2. 'A soft mark; a sueker,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: C. 20. Ex a ripe eating plum's softness.—3. The phrase do a plum, 'to eat too much' (Leverage, 1925), is U.S. s.

plumby. See plummy.

plumer; usually pl. Alexander Smith, 1720, in Vol. III of his Highwaymen, defines this term, which app. had currency only ca. 1700–50: 'That Set of Rascals that wore Cloaks and Hats cockt up on one Side, with a Plume of Feathers on the other, whence that Fraternity receiv'd the Name of Plumers. Their Exercise by Day-time, was to wander about the streets, and create Quarrels upon nothing, purposely to try if they could handsomly twitch a Cloak among the confused Multitude'; at nights they were gaming sharps; and ever they kept on the right side of the law.

plummy. Satisfactory: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'It is all plummy; i.e. all is right, or as it ought to be'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), plumby; by 1850 in Britain, by 1870 in U.S.A., it had > s.—still rather low, all the same! Prob. ex S.E. plum(b), 'straightforward, direct'.

plummy and slam. All right; safe: 1890, B & L, but prob. in use as early as 1830; † by 1920. An elaboration of plummy.

plump, v. 'To shoot', may orig. have been c.; possibly, however, it was always s.: 1785, Grose, 'He pulled out his pops and plumped him, he drew out his pistols and shot him'; † by 1880. Echoic: cf. 'He fell plump into the water'.

plump, adj. 'Rich; full of money. "A plump skin", a full purse': 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Cf. the s. senses of fat.

plunder, 'a common word in the horse trade to express profit', is not c., but s.

plunder-dump, 'a restaurant; a kitchen,' Leverage, 1925: prob. low s. rather than c.

plunge, n. Money obtained by begging; prob. since ca. 1905: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1931, IA, 'The money or food obtained by begging'; extant. Ex:—

plunge, v. 'To sally forth with specific purpose in mind; to try hard', Jackson & Hellyer, 1914; by 1920, s. Cf. 'A . . . peddler out on the street "making a plunge" for enough coin to buy himself another micky of alcohol' (Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926). To plunge into water, as opposed to merely falling into it, connotes energy and determination.—2. Specifically, to beg on the street: C. 20. IA, 1931.

plunk. A dollar: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, 'It cost his push a thousand plunks to spring him from the coppers'; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; 1902, Flynt, The Little Brother; 1903, Flynt, Ruderrick Clowd; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; April 14, 1928, Flynn's; slightly ob. Perhaps a perversion of chunk (a dollar being a small chunk of money).

plush. A passenger car (on a train): 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the plush upholstery: cf. cushions.

plush, on the. See on the plush. Ersine cites the variant on plush. plyer. See plier.

Plymouth cloak, 'a cudgel', is very common in C. 17; but it is s., not c.

Pocaloo. Pocatello, Idaho, a railroad town: tramps': C. 20. IA, 1931. Adopted ex railroad s.

pocket, 'the stomach' and 'to eat': low s. rather than c. Leverage, 1925.

pocket-book dropper; pocket-book dropping. Not c., but policemen's and journalists' j. for ' (he who practises) the drop game'. Bartlett, 4th ed., 1877.

pocketful of rattles. See rattles.

pockets to let, 'lack of money', is classified in Egan's Grose as c.: obviously it is no such thing!: cf. s. tenements to let.

poddy, in Australia, is half-a-crown: C. 20 low s. rather than c. Short for poddy calf, rhyming 'half a easer'. Baker, 1945.

poddy(-)dodging. 'The stealing of unbranded calves,' Baker, 1945: Australian cattle duffers': since ca. 1860. A poddy is strictly a hand-fed calf.

podgy. See pogy.

poegaai. Topsy: S. Africa: late C. 19–20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946; C. P. Wittstock, letter, same date, 'Drunk: rook-gat, poegaai'. Cf. Dutch pooien, 'to tipple'; pooier, 'tippler'. Also cf. English c. pogy.

poesy. See posey.

pog, n., 'a jailer', and v., 'to jail': 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. the v. is the earlier; ex pogey.

poge or pogue, the g in poge being hard. A bag; a purse: 1812, J. H. Vaux (pogue); 1823, Egan's Grose; May 6, 1867, Sessions Papers; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'I . . . touched for . . . a poge (purse), with over five quid in it'; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1896, A. Morrison; 1901, F & H; very ob. Prob. a corruption of poke, as Vaux suggests.—2. A male homosexual: U.S.A.: C. 20. BVB. Prob. ex low s. poke, 'copulate with (a woman)'.

poge-hunter; pogue-hunter. A pickpocket specializing in purses: 1896, Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago, p. 229; 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers, "' . . . When the tiggies made a raid for a 'ot poge-hunter or snidesman'"'; ob. See poge; cf. dummy-hunter.

pogey. A workhouse, which, in America, is not what is known in Britain as a workhouse, but a kind of house of correction for minor offences, with something of the casual ward: Aug. 1891, The Contemporary Review, Josiah Flynt, 'The American Tramp'; 'Poorhouses, "pogies"': 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft (p. 155); 1903, Flynt, The Rise of Ruderrick Clowd; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1921, Anon., Hobo Songs, Poems, Ballads; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, who spells it poggy; 1925, Leverage, 'Pogy . . . A poor house or a workhouse'; 1931, Stiff, 'The workhouse. Sometimes the poor farm'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; April 1933, The American Mercury (Jim Tully); and frequently since. Perhaps a corruption—or rather, a perversion—of poorhouse; perhaps, however, a perversion of poky (small, dark) rooms.—2. Hence, a county jail: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (spelt pogie); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, where spelt poogie; Nov. 8, 1924, Flynn's; 1925, Leverage, 'A small jail'; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls, 'Lags who escape from the county pokey'; 1933, Ersine, defines pokey as 'any jail'; 1934, Rose; extant.—3. Hence (?), a prison hospital: since ca. 1920: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; April 1, 1933, Flynn's; 1934, Convict; 1935, Hargan; Oct. 21, 1936, Flynn's; 1938, Convict 2nd; 1940, Leo L. Stanley, Men at their Worst; extant.—4. Hence, in Canada, a relief centre: since ca. 1930. Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough, 1936.

poggy. See pogey and pogy.

pogie. See pogey, 2.

pogue. See poge.

pogy. Drunk: 1785, Grose, who does not classify it as c.; 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull, where it is implied to be c. in 'She admitted she was very poggy'; 1859, H, who spells it podgy; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1901 (F & H). See poegaai for the prob. Dutch origin. Perhaps cf. Romany pogado, 'broken; crooked'—badly bent.

pogy (or pogey) aqua! Make the grog strong!: 1823, Jon Bee; † by 1900. Lit., 'Little (It. poco) water'. Parlyaree rather than c.

point, v. To pay: 1859, Geo. W. Matsell; app. † by 1900. I.e., to come to the point.

point-out. 'The part of a confidence game in which one member of a mob is pointed out and described as a person of great importance,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: con men's; since ca. 1920.

point shot. See pen shot.

pointer. One who points out thieves to the police: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1900.—2. The Australian senses 'swindler; a mere evader' are s., orig. low. Late C. 19–20. The same applies to the corresponding v., point, and to work a point. (Baker, 1945.)

poison. A tobacco train; a silk train: 1935, Hargan (the former); Sept. 21, 1937, Godfrey Irwin (letter), the latter term; extant. 'So called because of the armed guards [the train] carries . . . promising trouble' (Irwin).—2. A doctor that refuses to sell drugs to addicts: drug traffic: since ca. 1910. BVB.

Poison Act, the. The Federal Narcotics Act: drug traffic: C. 20. BVB. It's poison to the traffickers.

poison joint. A drug store (chemist's shop): 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. prec.

poke, n., 'a bag, a sack', is often wrongly classified: for instance, it occurs in George Andrewes's Dict. of Cant and Slang, 1809.

Actually it is S.E. Even the sense 'purse' is not c. in Britain; it is, however, c. in U.S.A., and has been since ca. 1850. Among the C. 20 authorities being, e.g., Kane, 1927; Willemse, 1931; Edwin H. Sutherland, 1937. Also, as 'purse', it has always been c. in Australia, where (Baker, 1945) it is extant; as also in S. Africa (J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946). Cf. Fr. poche, 'pocket'.—2. Hence, booty; plunder: 1860, The Times, Nov. 29 (cited by H, 3rd ed., 1864); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1901, F & H, 'Stolen property'; 1943, Black, 'Poke: the money on one's person'.—3. 'An old-time key safe (very scarce)', Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: since ca. 1905; by 1940, virtually †. Pejoratively ex sense 1.—4. A policeman: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; ob. Ex his, to the underworld, objectionable habit of poking his nose into other people's business.—5. A pocket: 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life, in a passage valid for ca. 1910; extant. Ex Fr. poche, 'pocket'.—6. A speakeasy: U.S. tramps': from ca. 1920. Stiff, 1931.

poke, v. To pick pockets: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex poke, n., 1.

poke, drop (usually vbl n. dropping) the. See dropping . . .

poke-a-moke, 'policy (the gambling game)', is not c., but s. Anthony Comstock, Traps for the Young, 1883.

poke-getter. A pickpocket: 1925, Leverage; extant. See poke, n., 1.

poke-out. A lunch; esp. a lunch handed out to a tramp: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers that Prey; 1907, Jack London, The Road (see quot'n at set-down); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1932, Frank Jennings (of use among British tramps): 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; 1939, Terence McGovern, It Paid to Be Tough; extant. Prob. suggested by the synonymous hand-out.

poke-out pocket. A (capacious) pocket in which a tramp keeps the 'poke-outs' he receives: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (p. 156); extant.

poke-outer. A tramp that specializes in obtaining 'poke-out' meals; he is looked-down-upon by genuine hoboes: 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping, p. 144; slightly ob. Ex poke-out.

poker. A sword: s., not c., of late C. 17–mid-19.—2. Penis: late C. 18–19: possibly c., prob. low s. (Lex. Bal., 1811, 'To burn your poker; to catch the venereal disease'.)—3. fore pokers are the 'aces and kings at cards': 1811, Lex. Bal.; † by 1901 (F & H). Because one pokes them forward?

pokey. See pogey.

pokey stiff. A tramp subsisting on 'hand-outs' or 'poke-outs' only: tramps': 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hobos; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. poke-outer.

pol; usually in pl. 'Pols.—Rackets based on political projects,' John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; Dec. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, 'She's in with the pols—and how!', where the relevant racketeers are implied; extant.

Polack or Polak. Among white-slavers, this C. 20 term is used as in A. Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928, '... The Polaks (Poles, Russians, and Czechs who deal in Polish Jewesses)'; ibid., 'Franchuchas!

Polaks!'

The Franchuchas constitute the aristocracy: five pesos. The Polaks form the Third Estate: two pesos'; 1940, Robert Neumann, 23 Women, 'The traders from eastern Europe who dominate the business are known to the trade as "Polacks"'.—

pole; usually poled, 'stolen'. To steal: New Zealand and Australian: C. 20. Sidney J. Baker, New Zealand Slang, 1941, and Australian Slang, 1942. I.e., to 'put up the pole'—to spoil, to ruin.

police gig is a special variety of the gig (or set of three numbers) in the gambling game, policy: 1898, W. T. Stead, Satan's Invisible World Displayed, p. 121, 'There are many kinds of "gigs" . . . , the "police gig" being one of those most in vogue'.

policy skin, the. Card-sharping—esp. the fleecing of greenhorns—at the gambling game known as policy: 1881, The Man Traps of New York, ch. ix; ob.

polish the King's iron with one's eyebrows. 'To look out of grated or prison windows, or, as the Irishman expressed them, the iron glass windows': 1785, Grose, who does not classify the phrase as c.; but it almost certainly was prison c. It seems to have been current ca. 1760–1840. In the U.S.A., the phrase > polish the people's iron . . . (Matsell, Vocabulum, 1859).

polish the mug. 'To wash the hands and face,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910.

polisher. 'One who is in prison': 1859, Matsell; in C. 20, current in Australia (Baker, 1942); by 1920, † in U.S.A. Ex polish the King's iron . . . , q.v.

political. (Of work, a job, treatment) easy, favoured: convicts': since ca. 1910: Jan. 20, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan, 'I became . . . the holder of a political job in the Nashville kindergarten'; 1934, Rose; and others. Cf. politician, there being an implication of political influence.

political pauper, a 'person holding office under a political government' (No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904), is not, I think, c., but police and political s.

politician. A clerk in those prisons where only clerks are allowed to wear white shirts (cf. Fauntleroy): convicts': 1929, Givens; Aug. 27, 1932, Flynn's; 1934, Rose; 1935, Hargan, 'Politicians—inmates with good jobs'; et al. Cf. political.—2. 'Art stood high in the gang as a "politician"—a wire puller,' Paul Annixter in Flynn's, Oct. 11, 1930; 1933, Ersino (as in Rose); 1934, Rose, 'Prisoner who "handshakes" the officials'; extant. poll, n. A peruke: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator ('a Wigg'); 1725 (see snabble); 1730, Anon., A History of Executions, 'I napp'd his Poll'; app. † by 1770 or earlier. Ex S.E. poll, the head; the head as scat of hair.—2. 'A woman of unsteady character': prob. not c., but low s.: ca. 1840–1910. See polled up.

poll (a person), v., is to cheat him of his share or payment: 1839, Brandon, who applies it to knavish receivers; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; 1893, P. H. Emerson. From ca. 1890, mostly theatrical and showmen's s. Ex S.E. (late C. 15–17) poll, 'to plunder, to fleece'.

poll, come to it through. See come to it through poll.

poll-thief. A thief; an informer: ca. 1880–1914. F & H; Partridge, 1937. Cf. poll, v., and poller, 2.

polled up. 'Living with a woman without being married to her': 1859, H; by 1890 (B & L), low s. Prob. ex s. poll, 'a female of unsteady character', on the analogy of molled up.

poller. A pistol: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, 'When [housebreakers] enter, they carry in one hand a dark Glim, and in the other a Poller, which is a dark Lanthorn and a Pistol'; app. † by 1720. Perhaps ex S.E. poll, to plunder.—2. A swindler; esp., one who does not hand over another's full share: 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo, where, however, it is low theatrical, or showmen's s., which it certainly is, predominantly, in C. 20; ob. Ex poll, v.

pollies. Trousers: 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo (p. 48); 1901, F & H who classify it as tramps'; ob. Origin? Prob. short for some rhyming phrase that I haven't succeeded in discovering.—2. Politicians: U.S. s., not c.

polling is the vbl n. of poll, v.

pollone or polloney. See paloney.

polluted. Drug-exhilarated: addicts': since ca. 1932. BVB. Self-depreciatory.

Polly, hence p—. See pollies.—2. See do polly.

polly-cage. A jail: July 18, 1925, Barclay Northcote in Flynn's, 'The . . . attorney . . . retained to defend both him and Billy Kane, before their joint escape from the polly-cage'; extant—but not much used. Cf. synonymous bird-cage; polly = Polly (parrot's name).

polone(y). See paloney.

pols. See pol.

polt, 'a blow, esp. a blow on the head', is not c.

ponce, n.; pounce; pouncey (app. not before ca. 1880). 'A man who is kept by a woman': 1859, Matsell, but prob. earlier in English c. H, 1874, defines it as 'a degraded man who lives upon a woman's prostitution'; by 1887 (Baumann, Londonismen, has ponce and pouncey), it was low s. in the British Empire; in C. 20 U.S.A., its predominant sense is 'a young man . . . maintained by a woman of means as a lover, or because his presence seems to rejuvenate his benefactress' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931)—cf. Valentino. Prob. ex French Alphonse (cf. the quot'n at diddly-donce), a French name for a souteneur; by the populace, Alphonse is held to be a 'nancy' name. With influence, perhaps, ex pouncer or pounce on. For a sociological definition, see Charles Booth, Life and Labour of the People in London, V., 1903, at p. 125.

ponce, v. To be a prostitute's protector; ponce on (a woman): late C. 19–20. Prob. always low s. Ex the n.

poncess. 'A woman that keeps a man by prostitution': 1859, Matsell; 1882, James D. McCabe, New York; by 1890 (B & L) it was also English; 1901, F & H, 'A woman supporting another woman by prostitution'; by 1910, †. Ex ponce, n.

pond. See herring pond. Hence:—2. A lake: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant.

poney. See pony.

pong. A Chinese: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Ex the prevalence of -ong terminations in the Chinese language.

ponging is not c., but parlyaree: 1854, Dickens, Hard Times, "Loose in his ponging." ". . . Bad in his tumbling"; in reference to circus work. The theatrical sense ('amplifying', 'gagging') is derivative. Ex L. ponere, 'to place', via Italian.

ponte, 'a sovereign (coin)', is not c., but showmen's s.—parlyaree.

Pontius Pilate. A judge: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex the famous Roman governor of Palestine temp. Jesus Christ.

pony. Poney. Money. Post the poney; lay down the money': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; by the 1850's, current in U.S.A.—see Matsell, 1859; by 1890, low s. Why? Because a pony represents—will bring—money?—2. The sense '£25', has always been s.—3. A double-headed (or -tailed) coin: gamblers': late C. 19–20. Partridge, 1937.

pony and trap. Silver articles (regarded as loot): since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. As silver to gold, so is pony-and-trap to a motor-car.

pony in white. Sum or value of 25 shillings: racing: C. 20; Partridge, 1937. Ex pony, 2, and white (silver).

pooch. 'A dog or pet. By extension, any prison mascot, be it dog, cat, parrot, monkey, or any other animal,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1910. A corruption of pug?

pood. An effeminate though not necessarily homosexual male: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Perhaps generated by 'poodle faker' (squire of dames) and influenced by poofter.

poodle benjamin is either c. or, more prob., fast-life s.: 1824, P. Egan, Boxiana, IV, 'The Fighter', 'Poodle benjamins, with capes behind', glossed as 'White shaggy great-coats, resembling the coat of a poodle dog'. See benjamin.

poof; pouf (the commonest spelling) or pouffe; early, puff. In 1902, F & H classify puff as tramps' c. and define it—correctly, of course—as 'a sodomist'; but it usually denotes the passive homosexual, as in 'Give me a thief any time to the "ponces" and "poofs" who giggle their way through the prisons of England back to the . . . brothel and the leprous streets of the West End!' (Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House, 1932); 1932, George Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1934, Axel Bracey; 1936, James Spenser, The Gilt Kid; 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer; 1943, Black, 'Poof, Pouff, Pouffe'; an effeminate male, a 'nancy boy'; extant. Any attempt at an etymology must proceed from the starting-point of puff, the earliest form: puff, 'a pathic', almost certainly derives—one contempt being substituted for, or rather being a natural successor to, the other—ex puff, 'an informer to the police' (puff, 1).

poof-rorting (or -wroughting), vbl n.—rarely adj. Robbery-with-violence of male harlots by a particularly brutal type of criminal: since ca. 1920. Partridge, 1938. See prec. and cf. rorty and also rort.

poofter is an Australian variant of poof: from at least as early as 1910. Baker, 1942.

poogie. See pogey, 2, ref. of 1924.

poona, 'a pound sterling', is parlyaree. (H, 1859.) It is an Italiante form of pound, prob. on the analogy of It. corona (a crown or coronet).

poor, she's very good to the. A c.p. applied to a prostitute known to be a price-cutter: prostitutes':

C. 20. Partridge, 1938. Ironical on 'It's the poor as 'elps the poor'.

Poor Tom's flock of wild geese. See Tom of Bedlam.

pootch. A firearm; gun; revolver: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'He used to have a pet pootch, an old smoke wagon with a barrel as long as a telegraph pole'; slightly ob. Perhaps ex pouch, pron. pooch, and ex the resemblance between a revolver in its holster and a large, full pouch.

pooter. A prostitute: Feb. 7, 1856, Sessions Papers (p. 491), 'He called her a black pooter, which means a black w—'; app. † by 1920. By a telescoping of prostitute?

poove; pooving. Food; feeding: parlyaree, not c.

pop, n. See pops.—2. A 'shot' of some drug or other: American drug addicts': from ca. 1925. Convict, 1934. Prob. suggested by shot itself or by bang.—3. 'A girl is called a pop, which [in Afrikaans] means a doll,' J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946: South Africa: C. 20. The Afrikaans word comes straight from Dutch: pop, doll; puppet.

pop, v., 'to fire a Pistol, &c.', A New Canting Dict., 1725, may have been c. (direct ex pops) in the approximate period, 1715–60. Cf. 'He . . . popt a pair of slugs into the Watchman', N. B., A Collection of Tryals, II, 1718.—2. Hence, to shoot (v.t.): 1734, Sessions Papers, 6th Session, "'Or else G—d—'em I'll Pop 'em, or do their Business some other way'"; 1785, Grose, 'I popt the cull, I shot the man'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1901 (F & H) in Britain; 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar, 'You hire these bums here to pop me'; 1933, Ersine; extant.—3. To pawn: s., not c.

pop off. To talk extravagantly or threateningly; to argue, heatedly and wildly: C. 20: perhaps orig. c., but certainly s. from ca. 1925 onwards. Ex the safety (or 'pop') valve on a boiler (Irwin).

pop one's bubble. To go crazy: convicts': 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'You're nuts. You've popped your bubble. What the hell's the matter with you?'; extant. Prob. suggested by blow one's top, 2; cf. pop off.

poplar(s), popler, poplers, poppelars, poppelers or popelers. See papler.

popper. A pistol: 1809, The Criminal Recorder, Vol. IV, ' . . . One of the thieves said, "If they come I have poppers" (pistols)'; 1823, Bee, 'A Popper—a gun—pistols are the poppers'; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. Ex pop, v., 1.—2. Hence (?): "'Poppers", as shooting-case-people were called,' Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940: mostly convicts': C. 20.

popplarr. See papler.

popps. See pops.

poppy. Money: since ca. 1935. Black, 1943. Cf. coriander seeds.—2. Opium: U.S.A.: journalistic s. rather than c. But poppy train, 'opium, or opium-smoking': c.: since ca. 1925. BVB, 1942. Ditto, poppy head, an opium addict: BVB.

poppy ally. An opium district: since the 1920's. BVB. Cf. prec., 2.

poppy head; poppy train. See poppy, 2.

pops; the singular is comparatively rare. 'Pop, a Pistol', Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; 1714, Alex. Smith, Highwaymen, 'His Pop, that's what they call any Thing of a Gun'; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1724, Harper, 'A Canting Song', in John Thurmond, Harlequin Sheppard, 'A Famble, a Tattle, and two Pops, | Had my Boman when he was ta'en'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1725, D. Defoe; 1734, C. Johnson (plagiarizing Alex. Smith); 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1764, Select Trials, III; 1785, Grose; by 1794, current in U.S.A. (Henry Tufts, 1807); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Pistols; an obsolete term', though Haggart uses it in 1821 as current; still current in U.S.A. in 1848 (The Ladies' Repository), but † by 1937 (Irwin). Ex the sound of the pistol-shot.

poque is an erratic—and rare—spelling of poke, 1.

porch, v. To operate as a porch-climber: 1925, Leverage; extant.

porch-climber. A second-storey thief; 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, p. 27; 1903, Flynt, The Rise of Roderick Cloud, "'Jimmie the Pole"—the prized "porch-climber"; 1906, Owen Kildare, My Old Bailiwick, "'Guffy" Leary, the prince of "porch climbers"; 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'), where it = a burglar that specializes in flats and private houses; 1924, George Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain; 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1929, Charles F. Coc, Hooch; Jan. 20, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; by 1935, Australian (Baker, 1945); by 1935, or earlier, Canadian (letter, June 9, 1946); by 1940 or perhaps rather by ca. 1936, it was, in U.S.A., police and journalistic s. That, precisely and literally, is what he is.

porch-climbing. Theft in the sense indicated at porch-climber, ref. of 1918: 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue; Nov. 17, 1928, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'Three Curious Burglars'; extant.

pork, n. A corpse: 1859, implied in the v.; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'A cold-blooded reference to the general appearance of a human cadaver, generally bloodless and not unlike a side of pork' (Irwin).—2. A Jew: 1933, Ersine; extant. Ironical ex Jewish abstention from pork.

pork, v. 'To inform the coroner of the whereabouts of the corpse': 1859, Matsell; † by 1930. See the n.

pork(-)chops. Food in general: 1933, Ersine; by 1946, slightly ob.

Pork Dump; usually the . . . Clinton Prison, New York State: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1931, IA; extant. 'Does not "pork" mean a corpse, and are not many of the inmates hopelessly tubercular?': Godfrey Irwin.

pork-packer. 'A neurotic with necrophilist tendencies,' Kane, 1927; 1942, BVB. With ref. to Chicago's grimmest depths.

porker. A sword: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, 'The Captain whipt his Porker out'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1830. Prob. a perversion of the jocular s. poker in the same sense (e.g., in A New Canting Dict., 1725).—2. A Jew: not c., but low s.—3. 'A saddle. Saddles are mostly made of hog's [sic] skins': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1900.

Porridge Island, 'an alley leading from St. Martin's church-yard, to Round-court, chiefly inhabited by cooks, who cut off ready dressed meat of all sorts, and also sell soup,' Grose, 1785: just possibly c., but more prob. London s.

port and sherry! I'm wise to it: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1910. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on jerry, adj.

port (or P-) St Martin is an American variant of the next: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; † by 1900. For the origin, cf. that of the next term; but why Martin? Possibly it is that St Martin who cut his cloak (O vere pretiosa chlamys, Paulinus) in half for a beggar: a portmanteau († portmantle) being, lit., a 'cloak-carrier'. For the Saint in both of these terms, cf. that in Saint Peter's children.

port (or P-) St Peter; usually pl., port St Peters. A portmanteau, a trunk: 1857, The Times, Dec. 5 (cited by 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 2nd ed., 1859); † by 1900. Suggested by 'portmanteau', considered as an amplification of peter, n., 1 and 2. There are, by the way, no such places as Port St Martin and Port St Peter.

portrait, 'a sovereign' (20 shillings): not c., but s.

posey; posy. 'I shall see you ride backward up Holborn Hill, with a book in one hand and a posey in t'other' was an underworld c.p. of C. 18. Recorded in, e.g., Lexicon Balatronicum, it is a mere elaboration of ride (backwards) up Holborn Hill, q.v. at Holborn (Hill). 'Malefactors who piqued themselves on being properly equipped for that occasion, had always a nosegay to smell to, and a prayer book, although they could not read': Lex. Bal.

posh. A farthing; a halfpenny: 1839, Brandon (at p. 168 of W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime), 'The paper makers get the tats and never tip the motts a posh—a farthing, perhaps fig.; 1859, H., 'A halfpenny, or trifling coin'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890. Perhaps a specific application of sense 2, but prob. it is the other way about: according to B & L, it comes from the Romany pash or posh, 'a half'; 'In Romany poshero, the affix ero being corrupted from haro, copper, i.e., a copper or a penny'.—2. Money: 1830, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, VI, trial of Charles Wells, a witness: 'He had not got the posh (which means money) yet'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1864, H., 3rd ed., 'A generic term for money'; 1864, Anon., Revelations of a Lady Detective; 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed, 'Posh . . . money of all kind'; 1893, P. H. Emerson; 1897, Morley Roberts, Maurice Quain—by which time it was low s. See sense 1.

possesh. A boy companion: tramps': 1931, Urbain Ledoux, Ho-bo-ho Medley No. 1; 1931, Stiff, 'The hobo's boy companion'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A possession, but generally applied only to a "prushun"'; 1942, BVB defines it as 'catamite'; extant. The possession of the jocker.

possibles, money (Bec, 1823): perhaps c., but prob. s. 'Tis wholly impossible to live without.'

possish. One's position in the underworld's social scale: mostly tramps': 1931, IA. Ex the first two syllables—as pronounced—of 'position'.

possum. A thief: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1945. Short for opossum: opossums come out at night and can be seen on the branches of eucalyptus trees.—2. But also 'a trickster's victim' (Baker, 1945).

possum belly. 'The boxes under passenger cars where hobos sometimes ride,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A ride on top of a passenger train, in which the rider must remain flat on his belly to avoid being jolted off by the motion of the train'; extant. Cf. the origin of possum, 1.

possum trick. 'A feigned injury or illness alongside a highway to persuade an automobilist to stop,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910. Ex Am. coll. possum, 'to feign death'.

post, v. To pay, set down (money): 1781, C. Johnston, Life and Adventures of Juniper-Jack, 'Toby having, in his own phrase, posted the cole [staked down the money] . . .'; 1785, Grose, 'Post the cole, pay down the money'; 1811 (see pony); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To stake, or lay down the money'; 1823, Bee (with variant post down); 1824, J. Wight, Mornings at Bow Street, 'Mr. Jonas Tunks should post the blunt for it—that is to say, he should pay for it'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1870, sporting s. Ex the S.E. sense, 'to dispatch'.—2. Hence, to spend: 1789, G. Parker, 'With spunk let's post our neddies'; app. † by 1870.—3. Post it, to swear, to take oath: 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul; † by 1900.

post-loller. One who 'lolls against a post' outside a brothel and watches, in order to follow the men leaving it and to see whether they are gentlemen, gentlemen being unlikely to prosecute the brothel-keeper for money or effects stolen or extorted: 1743, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. IV; † by 1860.

post-office. A countryman, rustic, yokel: ca. 1870–1910. Recorded in the glossary (p. 320) of C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 1889. Perhaps because village post-masters (and -mistresses) are—or were—simple.

post(-)pointer, 'a house-painter', is not c., but s. Grose.

post the blunt and post the cole. See post.

post the pon(e)y. See pony.

posy. See posey.

pot, n. A woman: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, '"This old pot, we will turn her," We will pick this woman's pocket'; app. † by 1900. Ex her shape?—2. Among U.S. professional gamblers, it is 'the six, seven, and eight': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum (p. 118); extant.

pot, v. To kill: 1925, Leverage. Not, I think, c., but sportsmen's s.—2. 'To succeed in a trick,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant. Ex billiards.

pot and pan. A man: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20; ob. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; adopted ex Cockney s. pot(-)faker, 'a hawker of crockery and general earthenware' (H., 1874), is London street s., not c.

pot gang. A cluster of tramps gathered about the 'pot' (or cooking vessel) in a 'jungle': tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

pot-hunter is the term that, in 'bat-fowling', represents the barnacle (q.v.) of the synonymous and much more gen. 'cony-catching': for the period and associations of this list of terms derived ex the technicalities of fowling, see 'Browne's cant vocabulary' (supra). In C. 16 S.E., the predominant sense of pot-hunter seems to have been 'one who hunts game only for the food it represents'. Whence:—2. 'A poor person who steals food only to prevent himself from starving': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1900. Ex the S.E. sense: see 1, sub finem.

pot of glue. A Jew: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

pot of jelly. Belly. Pacific Coast: C. 20.

M & B, 1944. Rhyming; prob. suggested by s. jelly-belly ('fat guts').

potash. 'Swag; booty; spoils', Leverage, 1925; slightly ob. Precisely why? Perhaps because potash is a powerful caustic agent: booty brings money, which 'talks like hell' (cf. Potash and Perlmutter).

potato water. A brew of liquor made in prison: convicts': since ca. 1920. Lewis E. Lawes, 20,000 Years in Sing Sing, 1932. Hardly c.: rather is it prison j.

potatoes. Money: since ca. 1920; by 1935, low s. Ersine.

potatoes and with it. A Western Coast 'jungles' dish: tramps': since ca. 1910: Stiff, 1931, 'This is not a dish but a dinner. Some hobos call it "Mormon dinner", because the natives of Utah seem to be so fond of it'—potatoes, gravy, stirred-in milk, slices of a small boiled carrot, and, if available, a few slices of crispy fried bacon fragmented into the mixture. For the and with it element, cf. coll. Fr. café avec (rum or cognac).

potiguaya. Crude marihuana: C. 20. BVB. A Mexican-Indian name?

pots, hit the. See hit the pots.

pouch a gun. To carry a revolver: 1927, Edgar Wallace, The Squeaker, 'Do you pouch a gun?': extant. Cf. Am. pack a rod.

pouf or pouffe. See poof.—pouf-rorting (or -wroughting). See poof-rorting.

poulain, 'a chancre', is not c., but s. B.E., 1698.

poulerer. 'A person that guts letters; i.e. opens them and secretes the money': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'A fellow who opens letters, abstracts the money, and then drops them back into the post-office box'; 1890, B & L; † by 1902 (F & H). Ex poultry rig by jocular suggestion.

poultice. A dish of bread and gravy: tramps': since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Pejorative.

poultice plumber. A doctor; esp. a prison medical officer: Oct. 1928, Word-Lore, F. C. Taylor, 'The Language of Lags': rather s., low s., than c.

poultice route, the. "'When I make the poultice route.'" "What's that?" I asked. "That's southern Utah, kid, the land of milk and honey. You're always sure of a big pan of milk and fresh loaf of home bread—the poultice route, see?"', Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Any route through Utah . . . where bread and gravy is always to be had even though . . . meat may be scarce'; extant. Cf. Milk Poultice Route, the, which it shortens.

poultry(-)rig, the. 'The kiddey was topped for the poultry rig; the young fellow was hanged for secreting a letter and taking out the contents': 1811, Lex. Bal.; † by 1900. Ex plucking a fowl: cf. the s. feathers, 'money'.

pounce and pouncey. See ponce.

pound, n. A five-dollar bill: 1935, Hargan. Godfrey Irwin—in letter of Sept. 21, 1937—points out that, although it was much used by convicts, the term was, orig., taxi-drivers' s. and that it remained s. The same applies to the synonymous pound note.

pound, v., or pound it. 'to wager': not c., but low and sporting s.—2. The sense, 'to question, interrogate', is American police s. rather than c. Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 1913, 'Blake . . .

had "pounded" too many Christy Street Chinks to be in any way intimidated by a queue and a yellow face'. Prob. short for 'pound away at' (to question relentlessly).

pound, in for. Committed for trial: 1902, F & H; ob. Ex the impounding of stray animals.

pound it. See pound, v.

pound one's (or the) ear. To sleep: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary (the latter); 1902, Flynt, The Little Brother (id.); 1907, Jack London, The Road (see quot'n at flop, v.); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat ('the'); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, where it is misprinted pound the air; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1931, Stiff, 'To sleep in a bed'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin ('the'); by 1933 (Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby), current among English tramps: by 1934, low s. in U.S.A. Cf. the Fr. dormir sur les deux oreilles, to sleep soundly.

pound the lug. To sleep: 1925, Leverage; by 1940, low s. A development ex the prec.; cf. lug-rest.

poundage cove. 'A fellow who receives poundage for procuring customers for damaged goods': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900. A natural transference from thing to person.

pounder. A patrolman—policeman on a beat. Low s. rather than c. In, e.g., Meyer Berger's 'Tea for a Viper' in The New Yorker, March 12, 1938. He pounds the sidewalk.

poverty point. A place—any place or building: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1910. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on synonymous joint.

powder, n. A drink of strong liquor: mostly tramps': since ca. 1918. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Likened to medicine in powder form.—2. Dynamite: since ca. 1919. Ersine. The explosive powder in general use.—3. Powdered narcotic: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. BVB.

powder, v. To pass by; to depart; to flee; to escape: since ca. 1920: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict, in the nuance 'to escape from prison'—as in Tasker; Sept. 26, 1936, Flynn's, Cornell Woolrich; and others. Ex s. take a powder (on someone), 'to run out on him', itself short for take a run-out powder (on him).

powder monkey, 'anyone using dynamite or other explosive': not c., but s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

powder up. To drink (strong liquor); to become intoxicated: mostly tramps': since ca. 1920: as in Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex powder, n., 1, q.v.

powder wagon. A sawed-off shotgun: 1929, Givens; 1929–31, Kernôt; 1934, Rose; extant. Compare smoke wagon.

powdering. 'Such operations as jipping, nerving, bishoping, powdering a nok' (glandered horse), No. 747, ed. by F. W. Carew, 1893; app. a term in horse-copers' c.

power. Nitroglycerin: 1929, Givens; 1929–31, Kernôt; 1934, Rose; extant. It represents power.

pox. 'An opium pill,' Ersine, 1933; 'a ration of opium prepared for smoking,' BVB, 1942: addicts': since ca. 1920. A pun: ex yen-pok, q.v.

practitioner. A thief: 1869, James Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London; by 1889 (B & L) it was London street s. I.e., one who practises (theft).

prad. A horse: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Do the Horses eat heartily? Do the Prads peck Rum?'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, where it is, on one occasion, misprinted pead; 1775, Sessions Papers; 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; by 1794, current in U.S.A. (Tufts); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'The swell flashes a rum prad; the gentleman sports a fine horse'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial; 1823, Bee, 'Prads—are riding-horses of any description, ponies included'; 1825, Sessions Papers; 1839, Brandon; by 1840, low s. in Britain, but it seems to have been c. in U.S.A. until ca. 1870 (e.g., in The Ladies' Repository, 1848). 'By metathesis from Du. paard a horse' (O.E.D.).

prad-borrower. A horse-stealer: 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society, where it is stated that a favourite trick of C. 18 horse-thieves was to geld a horse and, immediately the wound was healed, to steal it; if arrested for the theft of a horse, they pointed out that it was a gelding; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1910. Ex prad; with borrower, cf. old s. conveyancer.

prad(-)cove. A horse-dealer: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'The prad cove finding himself worsted, made off'; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1902 (F & H). See prad.

prad-holder. A bridle: U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; † by 1902 (F & H). See prad.

prad lay, the. The trick involved in the next entry: 1708, implied in prad layer; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † in England by 1890, in U.S.A. certainly by 1937 (Irwin)—prob. by 1910. See prad and lay, n., 2.

prad(-)layer. 'Prad-Layers. Such as cut Bags from behind Horses as People ride along in the Dark,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; † by 1800. Cf. the preceding entry.

prad-napper; prad-napping. A horse-stealer; horse-stealing: ca. 1770–1860: 1807, Henry Tufts, who shows that the latter term was current in U.S.A. from before 1794; 1859, H (the latter); † by 1874 (H). Ex prad (q.v.) and nap, to steal.

prad(-)prigger. A horse-stealer: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, where, in the section 'Prad Priggers', the procedure is described and where it is made clear that the actual stealers usually worked in gangs and that they had associates among drovers and copers; app. † by 1860. See prad and prigger.

pradback. Horseback: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1900. See prad.

prag, spelt pragge. This variant of prig (n.), in the sense of thief, occurs only in Robert Greene's 'disputation between Laurence a Foist and faire Nan a Traffique' in A Disputation Betweene a Hee Conny-catcher, and a Shee Conny-catcher, 1592, 'I will prove that women, I meane of our facultie, a trafficque, or as base knaves tearme us strumpets, are more subtile, more dangerous, in the commonwealth, and more full of wyles to get crownes, then the cunningest Foyst, Nip, Lift, Pragges, or whatsoever that lives at this day'.

pram. A motor-car: since the late 1930's. Richard Llewellyn, None but the Lonely Heart, 1943. By playful depreciation.

prancar is an occ. variant of prancer. Robert Greene, The Second Conny-catching, 1592.

prance; in Copland, 1536, prounce; in Harman, 1566, prauince. A horse: mid-C. 16–18. The occurrence of the word in Lexicon Balatronicum (at snaffler) is prob. accidental—a printer's error.

prance-gager is given in Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 1741, as a bridle: I do not suspect the definition, but should not the term be prance- (or possibly prancer-)gagger? App. it did not survive C. 18.

prancer. A horse: 1566, Harman (see the quot'n at prigger of prancers; it occurs in Harman's glossary as prauincer); 1592, R. Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, defining the terms in 'prigging law' (horse-stealing), has 'The horse-stealer, the Prigger. The horse, the Prancar'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; 1610, Rowlands (prauincer); 1612, Dekker, O per se O (as the name of a lodging); 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 'A good Horse'; 1718, C. Hitching (prancer); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose; 1834, Ainsworth; 1848, Sinks of London; by ca. 1845, current in U.S.A. (E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1848); 1859, Matsell; by 1860, † in England. A spirited horse often prances.—2. A horse-stealer: perhaps in Day, 1600 (see quot'n at prigger, 2); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'The fifteenth's a Prancer, whose Courage is small, | If they catch him Horse-stealing he's nooz'd for all'; app. † by 1870. Ex prigger of prancers.—3. In pl., erroneously for dancers. John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, 'Pike up the Prancers, that is go up Stairs'.

prancer's nab (or poll). A horse's head, esp. as in the earliest dictionary-record, B.E., 1698, 'Prancers-nab, e. a Horse's Head used in a Sham-Seal to such a Pass', i.e. to a counterfeit passport or licence; ibid., 'Prancers-poll, c. the same as before; also the Sign of the Nag's Head [Inn]'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., plagiarizing B.E.—as Grose does in 1785; † by 1860. See prancer and nab, n., 1. pranker is a variant of prancer, a horse: 1592, R. Greene, The Second Conny-catching, 'Where prankers or horses be'; † by 1660.

pranser. See prancer.

prap is a misprint for trap, 2.

prat, n. and v. See pratt, n. and v.

prate roast, 'a talkative boy', is classified by Grose, in 1785, as c.; but nobody else so classifies it. It is a s. term: cf. the S.E. prate-apace.

prater. A hen: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; by 1890 (B & L) it was †. Ex its clucking and general loquacity.—2. '... Tramp parsons. These travel in fours and fives. The head man calls himself the "Prater", or preacher. Their only object is to make money', collections being made after the companions form the nucleus of a congregation: English tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob.

prating cheat. One's tongue: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; Nov. 15, 1836, W. H. Smith in The Individual, 'She's wide awake, and her prating cheat | For humming a cove was never beat'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1880. Lit., a talking thing.

pratling cheat or (chete). See prattling cheat.

pratt, n.; occ. with pl. as singular. 'Prat, a buttocke,' Harman, 1566; 'Pratt, a Buttock', Dekker, 1608-9, 'The Canters Dictionarie' (Lanthorne and Candle-light); 1610, Rowlands, 'Tip lowr with thy prat', which shows that pratt occ. = seat, fundament; 1665, R. Head, 'Prats . . . Thighs'; so too Coles, 1676; 1688, Holme, 'Prat, a Buttock, Thighs'; 1698, B.E., 'Pratts, c. Buttock'; 1714, Alex. Smith, 'Prat, a Thigh'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'Pratt—buttocks'; 1848, Sinks of London (id.); 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary, where it is euphemistically defined as 'back parts'; 1887, Baumann; by 1890 (B & L) low s. in Britain; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (U.S.A.), who genteelly define it as 'a human rear'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Pratt.—The buttocks'; et al. Origin obscure. Perhaps cf. Shelta prask, 'to break wind'; certainly cf. the v., 1.—2. Hence, female pudend: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, concerning the 'morts' and 'doxies' of the regimented vagabonds, says, 'How cold soever the weather be, their female furies come hotly and smoaking from [the gang's meeting-place], carrying about them Glymmar in the Prat (fire in the touch-bore) by whose flashes oftentimes there is Glymmar in the Jocky, (the flaske is blowne up too)'; app. † by 1730.—3. Upper thigh; this sense merges with sense 1: 1665, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1725, A New Canting Dict., Song VII, 'No Gentry-Mort hath Prats like thine, | No Cove ever wap'd with such an one', Englished as 'No Girl in Silks hath Thighs like thine, | No Man ever kiss'd a Wenche like mine'; this sense would seem to have been † by 1780.—4. 'A Tinder-box or Touch-box', B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; † by 1870. Perhaps cf. sense 2.—5. (Prob. ex sense 1.) A hip-pocket: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Sept. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Convict 12627; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland; 1946, Wm Kernôt (letter of June 30).

pratt, v. To break wind (with cognate object): 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 'Your'—misprint for 'you'—'prat whids Romely, you fart lustily'; app. † by 1690. Cf. pratt, n., senses 1 and 4.—2. To go: 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief' (see double, n., 2); 1890, B & L; 1901, F & H; 1914, E. Pugh, The Cockney at Home, '“Here's luck!” she said . . . An' pratted off'; ob. Perhaps cf. the low arse one's way (into a place): cf. sense 1 of the n.—3. 'To push gently, especially by backing into a person,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: mostly pickpockets': since ca. 1920. The full phrase is prat a man in, to manœuvre him into position (for the 'wire') by backing into him. Ex pratt, n., 1.

pratt-digger. A pickpocket, orig. and esp. of one who specializes in theft from trousers-pockets: 1929-31, Kernôt; extant. See pratt, n., 1, and cf. pratt, v., 3.

pratt-digging, vbl n. The theft of a pocket book, etc., from a trousers-pocket: Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly, G. A. England, 'Underworld Lingo'; extant. Cf. prec.

pratt frisk. See pratt poke.

pratt kick. A hip pocket: 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1941, Maurer; extant. Cf. pratt, n., 1 and 3.

pratt poke. 'Purse kept in hip pocket. Pratt frisk—stealing such a purse, reefing a britch,' prattling ken. 'He had sought the seclusion of the Travellers' Rest—a public lodging-house, or prattling-ken, on the Southampton Road,' F. W. Carew, No 747 . . . The Autobiography of a Gipsy, 1893, p. 18; ibid., p. 407, there is a reference that may be valid for the year 1845; † by 1930. A ken where one may set one's pratt.

D.O.U.

Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: 1931, IA; extant. See the elements.

prattle cheat. See prattling cheat.

prattler. A book: 1829, Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III, 249; † by 1890. I suspect the term of being 'literary'—a mere invention by Maginn and never used by the underworld itself.

prattling box, 'a pulpit', is not c., but s. Grose, 1785.

prattling (or prattle) cheat. 'A prattling chete, a tounge,' Harman, 1566; 1608, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'A Prattling chete, is a tongue'; 1665, R. Head (prattling . . .); 1688, Holme (prattling . . .); by 1720, or soon after, superseded by prating cheat, q.v.

pratts. See pratt, n.

prancer. See prancer. Harman, 1566.

prayer-book is the smallest size or quantity of lead stolen by the 'blue-pigeon flyer', q.v.: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; † by 1900. Ex Church nomenclature: cf. its opposite bible, q.v., and its synonym testament.

preach at Tyburn Cross, 'to go to Tyburn and there be hanged': not c., but s.—prob. journalistic s. See Tyburn.

preacher of the parson is a C. 18 term for either of the two men that decoy 'Clergymen, or other wealthy Persons, to Inns or Taverns to drink Saek, or other sweet Wines' and then, by card-sharping or by confidence-tricking, swindle them of money: Anon., Villainy Unmask'd, 1752. The vbl n. is:—

preaching the parson. The practice described in the preceding entry. The earliest record occurs in Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732 (pub. in 1735), where it is mentioned as synonymous with the passing lay.

prell, v. To steal: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex Ger. s. prellen, 'to filch; to acquire illicitly or schemingly'.

premonitory. A penitentiary: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulary; † by 1930. By a pun, suggested perhaps by a mispronunciation.

presenter. A passer of counterfeit bank-notes or bills: 1893, Langdon W. Moore, His Own Story (p. 46); ob. He presents them at the bank.

preshun is a variant of prushun; e.g., in Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hobos, 1918; 1931, Stiff; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; 1942, BVB.

press, n. 'When a man wins a bet, and instead of lifting and pocketing the winnings, he adds to the original stake and winnings, it becomes a press': professional gamblers' and card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell; ob. For the semantics, cf. S.E. 'crowd on sail' in order to press forward. Cf. — press, v. 'To increase a bet. "Press the mark before he hears that our horse won",' Ersine, 1933; extant. Cf. prec.

press the bricks. To lie down: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; extant. Prompted as an antithesis of s. hit the hay.

pressure. Examination or investigation by the police: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1942. Ex S.E. 'put pressure on' (a person).

previous. Previous conviction(s): midway between c. and street (and police) s.: C. 20. George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade, 1935.

prey. Money: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1880. Money is hunted, as if it were a precious beast of prey, by the majority.

prick. A pin: tramps' and beggars': 1909, W. H. Davies, Beggars, in the chapter entitled 'Beggars' Slang', where it is implied that the plural is much more often used than the singular; extant. Ex the effect of running a pin into one's body.

prick for panam in the wicker—gen. pricking . . . —is a variant (ca. 1840–80) of pricking in the wicker . . . : 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, iii.

prick (in) the garter, like the earlier prick (in) the belt, is an illicit game or dodge, usually worked by a gang: but this is the S.E. name—the c. term, for prick (in) the belt at least, being Old Nob or the old nob. See esp. John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, at pp. 31–33.

pricking in the wicker for a dolphin. 'Stealing loaves from baker's baskets when they are in public houses': 1797, Humphry Potter, A Dict. of Cant and Flash; 1809, Andrewes; 1841, H. D. Miles, who omits in; 1848, Sinks of London; app. current ca. 1780–1860. Here, wicker = a wicker basket; pricking is a pun on prigging (stealing) or it may be allusive to pricking the garter (see preceding entry); dolphin evokes the idea of fishing.

prid is a misprint (The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 1741) for sense 2 of prig, n.

pride and joy. A boy: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Conviet, 1934; M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

prig, n. For a special C. 16 sense, see drunken tinker.—2. A thief; esp. a professional thief; ca. 1780–1870, mostly a pickpocket: 1566, Harman, of a gang of tramps and beggars asleep in a barn, 'Sometime shall come in some Roge, some pyckinge knave, a nymble Prygge; he walketh in softly a nights, when they be at their rest, and plucketh of as many garmentes as be ought worth that he maye come by, and worth money, and maye easely cary the same, and runneth a waye with the same with great seleritye'; 1592, R. Greene, A Disputation, as prag (actually spelt pragge), q.v.; ca. 1615, in Beaumont & Fletcher's The Beggars' Bush, Prig is one of the beggars; 1666, Anon., Leathermore's Advice (or The Nicker Nicked); 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'A Thief, a Cheat' and 'Priggs, c. the Ninth Rank of Canting Rogues, Thieves'; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1714, Alex. Smith; 1724, Harper, 'A Canting Song' in John Thurmond's Harlequin Sheppard, 'Priggs that snaffle the Prancers strong'—but see remark at prigs; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1743, Fielding, Jonathan Wild; 1785, Grose (as in B.E.); Sept. 1789, Sessions Papers, p. 785, 'A prig, meaning a pickpocket'; 1797, Potter, 'Prigg, a pickpocket'; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, Sessions Papers; 1821, J. Burrowes, 'A knowing fellow' (in dishonesty); 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'A pickpocket'; 1823, Bee (general thief; pickpocket); 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1839, W. A. Miles; 1839, Brandon ('a house thief'); 1841, Tait's Magazine; 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. translator), chap. I; 1848, Sinks of London; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1851, Borrow, Lavengro; 1851, E. Z. C.

Judson, The Mysteries of New York; June 1854, Sessions Papers; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was † or virtually †, though it seems to have survived here and there until C. 20. Ex prig, v., 1.—3. Thomas Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, 1688, errs in classifying as e. the sense 'pert coxcomb', which, beginning as s., may have > coll.—4. A friend: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed. I suspect this sense, of which I find no other record.—5. As 'a convict', the term is merely an example of poetic licence: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Triumph'—where 'bubbled prigs' is glossed as 'convicts under sentence'.

prig, v. 'To prigge signifieth in their'—the underworld's—'language to steale,' Harman, 1566; 1592, R. Greene, A Disputation, 'How like you of this[,] Lawrence, cannot we wenches prigge well'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Prig and cloy so beshiply'; 1698, 1725 (see prigging, n., 2); 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1781, G. Parker; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, Sessions Papers; 1822, David Carey, Life in Paris; 1823, Bee; 1825, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–1833, I, 'A man there said he would prig all he could lay hold of'; 1828, G. Smeeton, Doings in London; 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, III; 1838, Wm Hone, The Table Book; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds; 1839, Brandon; 1841, Tait's Magazine; by 1845, current in U.S.A. (The Ladies' Repository, 1848; E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; by 1860, s. Possibly ex Sp. preguntar, 'to demand', or ex It. pregare, 'to entreat'; via priega, 'a petition'. But the solution may lie in semantics, not in etymology: sense 2 is prob. the earlier; if it is, then the reference is to the lit. S.E. to prick (with a sharp instrument), and the semantic clue is provided by sting ('to rob or to defraud').—2. 'To pryge, to ryde,' Harman, 1566; ibid., 'He pryge [prygt or prygd] to praunce', he rode to horse, i.e. he leapt on a horse; 1620, Dekker, Villanies Discovered, 'Let's prig in sport'; 1665, R. Head, 'Prigg . . . To ride'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E. (at prigging); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (by implication); † by 1870. Prob. a perversion of S.E. prick, 'to ride'.

prig, go on the. To go stealing: tramps': 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp (p. 295)—but prob. current throughout C. 19 as well; slightly ob. Cf. prig, n., 1, and v., 1; prob. short for on the prigging lay.

prig, prince. First defined in B.E., 1698, as 'a King of the Gypsies; also a Top-Thief, or Receiver General,' i.e., a thief ranking high in his profession, or a 'fence' at the top of his; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. See prig, n., 1.

prig, work on the. To be a pickpocket: C. 19. See prig, n., 2, and work, v., 3; cf. prig, go on the.

prig and buzz, work upon the. To pick pockets: 1789, Parker; † by 1910. See the two vv.

prig(-)man. See prigman.

prig-napper. A horse-stealer: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1780. With this prig, cf. prig, v., 2; napper, a thief.—2. A thief-taker: 1698, B.E.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (priggnapper); † by 1887 (Baumann). One who 'nabs' thieves (prig, n., 2).

prig-star. A rival in love: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E. (prigstar); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (id.), and in Song XVI; 1785, Grose (id.); app. † by 1830. Perhaps simply prigster, one who filches (the love of the woman concerned).

prigar is a rare variant (Greene, 1592) of prigger.

priger. A rare variant of prigger, 2: 1735 ed. of The Triumph of Wit.

prigg(e). See prig, n. and v.

prigger; in C. 16–17, often priggar or pryggar (or -er). A thief: 1562, Awdeley (see quot'n at quire bird); Harman (see prigger of prancers); Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, 1592, shows that by this date the term had come to be applied almost solely to a horse-thief and begins his list of horse-stealing terms with the bald phrase, 'The horse-stealer, the Priggar'; 1608, Dekker; 1688, Holme, 'Priggers, Robbers, Stealers, Highway Men'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Priggers, thieves in general'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1880. Ex prig, v., 1.—2. A rider; esp. a mounted highwayman: ca. 1595–1750. Day, 1600, 'He wo'd be your prigger, your prancer, your high-lawyer' (O.E.D.); 1707, J. Shirley, 'Riders . . . Priggers'.—3. (A special application of sense 1.) One of three persons forming a shoplifting gang: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1830.

prigger napper. A constable: U.S.A.: ca. 1830–80. Matsell, 1859. Lit., thief-taker.

prigger of palfreys. A horse-thief: 1562, Awdeley (see quot'n at quire bird).

prigger of prancers. The usual c. term for a horse-thief ca. 1550–1850. Harman, 1566, has a section on these malefactors; the meat thereof being:—'A Prigger of Prauncers be horse stealers; for to prigge signifieth in their language to steale, and a Prauncer is a horse; so being put together, the matter is playne. These go commonly in Jerkins of leatherr, or of white frese, and carry little wands in their hands, and will walke through grounds and pastures, to search and se horses meete for their purpose. And if they chaunce to be met and asked by the owners of the groundes what they make there, they fayne strayghte that they have loste their waye, and desyre to be enstructed the beste way to such a place. These will also repayre to gentlemens houses and aske their charitye, and wyll offer their service. And if you aske them what they can do, they wyll saye that they can kepe two or thre Geldinges, and waite upon a Gentleman. These have also their women, that walkinge from them in other places, marke where and what they see abroad, and sheweth these Priggars thereof when they meete, which is with in a weeke or two. And loke, where they steale any thinge, they convey the same at the least three score miles of or more'; 1608, Dekker, plagiarizingly in The Belman of London; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'The Sixth Order of the Canting Crewe'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose; 1809, The Rambler's Magazine; † by 1860. See prigger and prancer.

prigger of (the) cacklers. A poultry-stealer: 1698, B.E. (longer form); 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A Canting Dict.; † by 1850. See the elements.

priggery. Thieving; esp., petty theft; ca. 1720–1820. Fielding, 1743. Ex prig, n., 1, and v., 1.

priggin (Greene, A Disputation, 1592). See:—

prigging, n. Horse-stealing: 1592, R. Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching. 'This base villany of Prigging or horse-stealing'; in A Disputation, Between a Hee Conny-catcher, and a Shee Conny-catcher, 'What say you to priggin or horse stealing'; by 1700, or rather by 1660, the sense had > generalized to 'stealing of any kind', as, e.g., in Sessions Papers, Sept. 1824—in Wm Maginn, Memoirs of Vidocq, III, 1829—and in J. D. Burn, The Autobiography of a Beggar-Boy, 1855; 1857, Snowden; by 1860, low s. Ex prig, v., 1.—2. Riding: 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1785, Grose; † by 1870. Ex prig, n.—3. Hence, 'Lying with a Woman': B.E., 1698; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by ca. 1830.

prigging, adj. Given to thieving; belonging to a gang of thieves, esp. of horse-thieves; characteristic of thieves: 1566, Harman (concerning a horse-thief), 'A Farmer . . . charging this prity prigging person to walke his horse well'; 1592, Robert Greene (see the next entry but one); rare by 1860, † by 1920. Ex prig, v., 1. prigging lance-man. A horse-thief that goes about the country in seeming respectability and on horseback: 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; app. † by 1720. Ex prig, v., 1.

prigging law. In Prigging Law, Robert Greene tells us in The Second part of Conny-catching, 1592, the terms are these:—'The horse-stealer, the Priggar. The horse, the Prancar. The toulng place, All hallowes. The towler, the Rifler. The Suerties, Quetries', a list from which he has omitted marter (or -ar); ibid., the section of this 'law' runs, abridged, thus:—'To the effecting of this base villany of Prigging or horse-stealing, there must of necessity be two at the least, and that is the Priggar and the Martar. The Priggar is he that steales the horse, and the Martar is he that receives him, and chops and changeth him away in any Faire, Mart, or other place where any good rent for horses is: and their method is thus. The Priggar, if he be a Launce-man, that is, one that is already horst, then he hath more followers with him, and they ride like Gentlemen, and commonly in the form of Drovers, and so comming into pasture grounds, or inclosures, as if they ment to survey for Cattell, doe take an especiall and perfect view, where prankers or horses be, that are of worth, & whether they have horse-locks or no, then lie they hovering about till fit opertunitie serve, and in the night they take him or them away, and are skilfull in the blacke Art, for picking open the tramels or lockes, and so make hast till they be out of those quarters. Now if the Priggars steale a horse in Yorkshire, commonly they have vent for him in Surrey, Kent, or Sussex, and their Martars . . . chops them away in some blind Faires after they have kept them a moneth or two, till the hue and cry be ceast and past over. Now if their horse be of any great value, and sore sought after, and so branded or eare-markt, that they can hardly sell him without extream daunger, either they brand him with a crosse brand . . ., or take away his eare-marke, & so keepe him at hard-meat till he be whole', or else hide him in some distant part. But 'if hee be onely coloured and without brands, they will straight spotte him by sundry pollicies, and in a blacke horse, marke saddle spots, or star him in the forehead, and change his taile'. The thief may, however, be 'some base Priggar that steales of meere necessity, and beside is a Trailer. The Trailer is one that goeth on foot, but meanely attired like some plaine gran of the country, . . . having a long staffe on his necke, and a blacke buckram bag at his back, like some poore client that had some writing in it, and there he hath his saddle, bridle and spurs, stirhops and stirhop leathers, so quaintly and artificially made, that it may bee put in ye slop of a mans hose . . . Now, this Trailer he bestrides the horse which he priggeth, and saddles and bridles him as orderly as if he were his own, and then carieth him far from the place of his breed, and ther sels him . . . The prigar, when he hath stolne a horse, and hath agreed with his Martar, or with any other his confederate, or with an honest person to sel his horse, bringeth to the toulter, which they call the rifler, two honest men, . . . and they not onely affirme, but offer to depose, that they know the hors to be his, although perhaps they never saw man nor horse before, and these perjurde knaves, bee commonly old Knights of the post.' Dekker in The Belman of London (1608) merely diversifies this account.

prigging lay, the. Thieving business; the profession and the art of theft: 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, Appendix; 1846, anon. trans. of Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, Pt. 2., ch. lxviii; † by 1920. See prig, v., 1, and lay, n., 2.

priggish. Thievish: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1812, T. Smith, Highgate Tunnel, 'Then the hack | By priggish Cockney guided, prime, bang-up, | Whose threatened lash is all my eye, like that | Beneath his mistress' eyebrow'; † by 1880. Ex prig, n., 2.

priggism, a rare term of ca. 1730–80, occurs in Henry Fielding, The Life of Mr Jonathan Wild, 1743, 'An undeniable Testimony of the great Antiquity of Priggism', the footnote being: 'This Word in the Cant Language signifies Thievery'. Ex prig, v., 1, or n., 2. priggnapper. See prig-napper.

prigman. Awdeley's description, 1562, is the earliest: 'A Prygman goeth with a stycke in hys hand like an idle person. His propertye is to steale cloathes of the hedge, which they call storing of the Rogeman [misprint for: Togeman]; or else filth Poultry, carying them to the Alehouse, whych they call the Bowsyng In, and thersyt playing at cardes and dice, tyl that is spent which they have so fylched'. This seems to be the only record I have of the term, which I believe to have > † by 1690. Cf. prig, n., 1, and v., 1.

prigs. See prig, n., 1–3. It is to be noted that in C. 18, prigs (almost always in the pl.) had a specific sense, developing naturally from that of 'thieves': and that is 'highwaymen'. For instance, in Harper's 'A Canting Song' (appearing in John Thurmond's masque, Harlequin Sheppard, 1724), the phrase 'Priggs that snaffle the Prancers strong' is glossed as 'Gentlemen of the Pad'.

prigs, spruce. See spruce prigs.

prigstar. See prig-star.

prigster. Shadwell, in The Squire of Alsatia, 1688, errs in classifying as c. the sense 'pert coxcomb' (cf. prig, n., 3).—2. See prig-star.

prim. 'A handsome woman'. 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. On the assumption that 'she can afford to be'.

prima donna. "Prima Donnas", or those [seclusive prostitutes] who belong to the "first class", and live in a superior style'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 26; † by 1910. Lit., 'first lady'; ironic on the operative sense.

prime flat. An easy dupe: 1812, Vaux; 1890, B & L; by 1900, low s. and ob. See flat, n., 2.

prime plant. 'A good subject for plunder': 1839 (see plant, n., 7); 1859, H; slightly ob. See plant, n., 7; prime is, by itself, s.

primed to the ears. Drug-exhilarated: since ca. 1925. BVB. Cf. primed, 'intoxicated', and esp. high.

prinado. A sharper, perhaps a female sharper: ca. 1610–70. It occurs in Dekker, 1620; Braithwait, 1631; The Honest Ghost, 1658: in contexts that show it to be at least s., perhaps c. The origin is obscure; possibly the word is a corruption of Sp. primado, 'the first', in, e.g., dignity or skill.

prince, v. To 'work on' a dupe: since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933, 'Prince the mark and we'll get him to play the scal'. To treat him royally.

Prince Alberts is a variant—prob. the original—of alberts. (Baker, 1942.) Also Prince Alfreds.

Prince of Wales. A gangster that dresses and lives elegantly: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; † by 1945.

prince prig. See prig, prince.

print, 'to manufacture counterfeit bank notes', and printer, 'a counterfeiter', both recorded by Leverage in 1925, are less c. than police j.—2. To finger-print someone (Ersine, 1933): not c., but police j.

print, out of. See out of print.

printer. A crossed cheque: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. Cf. sense 1, recorded at print.

prints. A pair of boots: 1889 (see noisy pegs); rather ob. Suggested by foot-prints. — 2. As 'finger-prints': police coll. or j.

prison bird. 'A criminal who has once been in prison': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1890, s. Cf. canary bird and birds of a feather.

prison-broke. Accustomed to prison life: gen. prison s., not c. Castle, 1938.

prison bug. One who spends most of his time in prison: since ca. 1920. Partridge, 1937. The second element is intentionally pejorative.

prison hustler. A 'prisoner who tries to put on airs,' Rose, 1934: convicts': since ca. 1920.

prison(-)simple. With mind deranged by prison conditions: June 20, 1925, Flynn's (p. 515), 'Was he getting "prison simple"? Was he beginning to imagine things?'; Nov. 20, 1926, Flynn's, Joseph F. Fishman ('Inside the Crater'), '... Those of weak will who are suffering from what penitentiary physicians call "prison psychosis". They are termed "prison simple" by the inmates' (the other convicts); March 2, 1929, Flynn's; April 5, 1930, Flynn's; extant—but, by 1935, s. See simple.

private. A private house: tramps': since the middle 1890's: 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'I could not tear myself away [from Niagara Falls] long enough to "batter" the "privates" (domiciles) for my supper'; ibid., see quot'n at main drag; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; May 1928, The American Mercury (see quot'n at bum beef); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A private house; a home'; 1934, Convict; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; extant. Short for private dwelling.

private game. 'So called because the dupe is led to suppose that no professional gamblers are admitted, and thus he is the more easily duped': card-sharpers': 1859, Matsell, who lists also public game, to which anybody can be admitted—but this latter term is obviously S.E.; † by 1930.

private thief. One who, not a thief himself or, more often, herself, goes into service in a fine house and gives information to actual thieves, who, on entering, gag all the servants—even their accomplice: 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers. Almost certainly not a c. term, but merely the author's application of the phrase to such an accomplice.

privates, batter the. See batter . . .

pro. See prohi.

proctor appears only in Awdeley's The Fraternitye of Vacabondes, 1562, and there it is spelt proctour; see Awdeley's, No. 12. Almost certainly not c., but merely Awdeley's designation. In sense, the term seems to approximate rather to the archaic senses, 'steward', 'agent' or 'proxy', than to the university sense.

prod. 'A cart or wagon; a coach': 1859, Matsell; † by 1900. The origin is obscure, and—'These etymologists are so cowardly!'—I suspect the authenticity of the term. Perhaps ironically prompted by synonymous drag.—2. A hypodermic injection: since ca. 1922. BVB. Cf. jab.

prod, on the. Engaged in drug-taking: Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's, Earl H. Scott, 'He got his name from knowin' every crook on the prod'; 1942, BVB; extant. See prod, 2.

prodder. A drug addict that uses a hypodermic needle: 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; extant. Cf. prod, 2.

produce. To substantiate a boast: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. :—

producer. 'Chief of a gang of yeggs, tramps, or beggars.' Kane, 1927 ('Doubtful': Godfrey Irwin, letter of April 8, 1938). If genuine, it reflects the influence of Hollywood.

profesh. A professional hobo: since the middle 1890's: 1907, Jack London, The Road (see blowed-in-the-glass and road kid); ibid., 'The profesh are the aristocracy of The Road. They are the lords and masters, the aggressive men, the primordial noblemen, the blond beasts so beloved of Nietzsche'; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble, 'I ain't out to help out punks. I'm a profesh, see?'; 1939, Terence McGovern, It Paid to be Tough, 'A "profess 'bo" '; extant.—2. Hence, the world of professional criminals: Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly, G. A. England, 'Underworld Lingo'; extant.

professional. 'An avowed, well known and able crook or even prostitute,' IA, 1931: late C. 19–20. Cf. profesh.

professor. A confirmed recidivist convict of the professional criminal class; 1885, M. Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, 'Many "professors" will reckon from two to four experiences of convict life'; † by 1920.

prog, n. Food: 1655, Fuller (O.E.D.); 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (glossary), 'Prog. Meat'; 1698, B.E., 'Rum Prog, c. nice Eating. The Cull tipt us Rum Prog, c. the Gentleman Treated us very High'; T. H., 1705, A Glimpse of Hell, 'And then their Progg for to digest, | Friend Serjant's Pot can have no Rest'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose—by whose time (say 1770) it may have > low s., though I think that it remained c. until ca. 1830, as indeed Potter's and Andrewes's glossaries (1797, 1809) and Maginn's Memoirs of Vidocq, III (1829), lead one to suppose; in the U.S.A., indeed, it may have been c. even so late as 1870—see, e.g., Matsell's Vocabulum, 1859, and The Ladies' Repository, 1848. App. ex the v., which is recorded in 1618 (O.E.D.).—2. The sense 'a tramp' (the person)—Leverage, 1925—is suspect.

prog, v. 'To hunt for provision' (of food): 1785, Grose. Not c., but S.E.

progg is Potter's variant (1797) of prog, n.

prohi, 'a Federal law-enforcement officer working in the cause of Prohibition', is bootleggers' but also gen. police s. In, e.g., Flynn's, April 13, 1929, Don H. Thompson, 'The Roaring Road'; Ersine, 1933, also with shortening, pro.

promote. To steal; to acquire: racketeers': 1929–31, Kernôt; 1930, Burke, 'We got to promote a boat to run the stuff in'; Sept. 19, 1931, Flynn's, Paul Annixter, "Get busy and promote that cutie," advised Dapper Collins . . ., "Or some other punk'll beat your time", where the nuance is 'to get'; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex the dishonesty of much share-promotion.

prone the body. To lie down and rest: tramps': since ca. 1919. In, e.g., Stiff. Ex military j. pronterinose is a c. (as pronterino is a s.) variant of the coll. pronto!, '(be) quick!': Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, ' . . . I balled out, "Vamose, pronterinose" '; ob. Elaboration of a kind much more usual in s. than in c.

prop, n. A pin (esp. a tie-pin), a brooch: 1851, implied in prop-nailer, q.v.; 1858, Dickens, 'Three "Detective" Anecdotes, II,' in Reprinted Pieces, 'In his shirt-front there's a beautiful diamond prop'; 1859, H., 'A gold scarf pin'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1860, C. Martel; 1863, A Lancashire Thief; 1886, A. Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective (pin or stud); 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail; 1890, B & L; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; 1902, F & H; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, '[He] sprung the prop'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'A diamond stud'; April 1919, The (American) Bookman; 1925, Netley Lucas, Autobiography; 1925, Leverage, 'A large diamond'; 1931, Brown; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Rose; 1935, David Hume; and often since.—2. See props, 2.—3. A pickpocket's 'stall' or assistant: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. He props, or supports, the other.—4. A hypodermic injection: U.S.A., mostly among drug addicts: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. Cf. jab and jolt, synonyms.

prop, v. (Of pickpockets) to press against, to jostle (an intended victim): 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 'The old bloak . . . was propped (squeezed), and his skin drawn from his fan where he had been seen just before to deposit it for better security'; extant. One or two of the gang usually prop up the victim while the actual thief operates.

prop-getter. A scarf or tie-pin thief (esp., pickpocket): 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, p. 27; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'), 'Prop getters or stone getters—steal diamonds and other precious stones from the person'; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom. 'Prop wires. Pickpockets who steal stickpins. Also called prop-getters, cutters, snippers'; 1931, Brown (London); extant. See prop, n., 1, and cf. toy-getter.

prop-nailer. One who steals—esp. a pickpocket specializing in—pins and brooches: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25; 1859, H, 'A man who steals, or rather snatches pins from gentlemen's scarfs'; Nov. 1870, The Broadway; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1902, F & H; slightly ob. See prop, n., 1, and nail, v., 4.

prop wire. See prop-getter, ref. of 1924.

prop with sparks. 'A tie-pin set with diamonds,' Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, 1925, but this prison chaplain, implying that the term was used ca. 1890–1920, says—on the authority of an 'old lag'—that it fell into disuse 'years ago' (i.e., years before 1925). See prop, n., 1, and spark, n., and cf. spark-prop.

proper stiff. A tramp that considers work the acme of disgrace: tramps'; 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hobos; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; extant. Cf. dyed in the wool, q.v.

proposition, v. To approach (a prospective victim) with a proposition—a scheme—by which he may be enticed into a swindle: confidence men's and card-sharpers': 1914, J. H. Keate, The Destruction of Mephisto's Greatest Web (i.e., gambling); by 1925, no longer c.

props, 'erutches', is not c., but s.—2. Dice: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; ob. If loaded, a sure prop.—3. The game otherwise known as craps (played with four shells or four coffee-beans), orig. peculiar to Boston: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910.

pros. See pross.

prospecting, n. 'Looking for something to steal': 1859, Matsell; by 1910, no longer c. Ex the S.E. prospecting for gold.

pross, n. A prosecutor, whether private or an official of the Law: 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life, 'Square pross . . . make it right with prosecutor'; 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube (U.S.A.), "'Pros"—a prosecuting attorney'; extant, on both sides of the Atlantic.—2. The sense 'a prostitute' is low s.

pross, v. As v.i., 'to ask delicately for a loan or drink', is not c., but s.—orig., showmen's s. Thomas Frost, Circus Life, 1875.—2. To prosecute (a person): Feb. 7, 1894, Sessions Papers, a robbery-with-violence criminal log., 'If he prosses me I will put a knife into him when I come out'; 1935, George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade; 1941, Jim Phelan, Murder by Numbers; extant.

prosser. A male prostitute: 1890, B & L; slightly ob. Prob. ex 'prostitute'.—2. A 'ponce': since ca. 1870. H, 1874. Cf. pross, n., 2.

prossy or prosty. 'A prostitute: late C. 19–20. BVB, 1942. Ex pross, n., 2.

Protec or Proteck. 'He had just escaped from the Catholic Protectory . . . I grew bolder, for if Jack could "beat" the "Proteck" in three months, I argued I could do it in twenty-four hours,' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; extant.

protection, give the word of. Defined by Alex. Smith, in Highwaymen, Vol. III, 1720, thus: 'When your Horse or Foot-pads have robbed any Person, and permit him to go about his Business, in Case then he should fall among other Rogues by the Way, and is stopt by them, by telling a certain Word, they know he has been robbed, and so let him pass, and the Watch-words generally given by them are, The Wit be burnt. The floughing [= flogging] Cull be damn'd. The nubbing Chit be cursed.' Highwaymen's and footpads' c. of C. 18. Cf. 'the music's paid'.

protection, take under one's. A C. 20 white-slavers' term. Albert Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, 1928: 'When a Pole has chosen a Jewish girl he calls it "taking her under his protection"', because he removes her from circumstances of distress in her own Central European home (not necessarily Poland itself).

pronounce. See prance. (Prob. a Copland misprint repeated by Dekker.)

provender. 'He that feedes' the rankriders when they are more properly termed strollers 'with money is called the provander', Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9: ca. 1600–70. Ex S.E. provender, 'food'.—2. Hence (?), 'he from whom any Money is taken on the Highway': B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London—but prob. it was † by 1830. Ex the lit. S.E. sense, 'provisions'; perhaps influenced by S.E. provider.

prowl, n. A theft, a robbery, burglary; an expedition or bout or period of, a survey for, professional robbery: 1903, Josiah Flynt, The Rise of Roderick Clowd, "'I said it was to be my last prowl if I tumbled"' (were arrested); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; July 18, 1925, Flynn's, 'He went about his prowl quite alone'; 1927, Charles F. Coe, Me—Gangster; Feb. 4, 1928, Flynn's, 'It was up to Bill to . . . lead his mob on the prowl'; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; Jan. 31, 1931, Flynn's, Henry Hyatt; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'Living by robbing houses. "All three brothers are on the prowl"'; Jan. 20, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; Aug. 17, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; extant. Ex:— prowl, v.i. To steal: 1884, James Greenwood (see find, v.); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (U.S.A.); July 25, 1925, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To burglarize'; 1933, Ersine, who applies it to taking only the most valuable articles in a residence; 1934, Thomas Minehan, 'To steal by stealth' (!); Aug. 17, 1935, Flynn's; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; extant.—2. To survey the ground—'spy out the land'—with a view to theft, robbery, burglary; to burgle: U.S.A.: in reference to and valid for ca. 1897, Anon., 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery', Flynn's, April 6, 1929 (pp. 533, 534); 1909, Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 'Off we went to New York to "prowl" the mansions of the rich'; May 1928, The American Mercury (see quot'n at bum beef); 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1944, Raymond Chandler, The Lady in the Lake; extant. Short for 'to prowl about (a place)'.

prowler : prowling. A (petty) thief; (petty) thieving; in England, petty: but in America, neutral: 1884, the latter term (see find, v.); 1885, The Daily Telegraph, Sept 4 (the former); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (U.S.A.), 'He was one of the best night prowlers (burglars) in the profession'; 1912, Donald Lowric, My Life in Prison (U.S.A.), 'Lefty . . . was a professional prowler': 1914, P. & T. Cascy, The Gay Cat; 1916, Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in the Underworld (prowler: a burglar); 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; July 18, 1925, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; Feb. 12, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, C. L. Clarke & E. E. Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor, 'His terms main graft was prowling, which means that he entered a house after midnight and robbed the place while the people were in bed sleeping. A good prowler is considered at the top of the class when it comes to classifying house thieves'; 1928, May Churchill Sharpe (both); 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice (both); 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life (latter); Aug. 30, 1930, Flynn's; Jan. 24, 1931, Flynn's, (latter); July 1931, Godfrey Irwin (prowler); 1933, Ersine, 'A house burglar'; Aug. 19, 1933, Flynn's, Howard McLellan: Jan. 20, 1934, Flynn's (former); 1934, Convict (id.); 1938, Convict 2nd (id.); extant.

prowly. A policeman in a patrol car: since ca. 1930: rather police and journalistic s. than c. Raymond Chandler, Farewell, my Lovely, 1940. Cf. s. prowl car.

prugge. A female partner; a doxy: 1631, Clitus, Whimzies. A Cater-Character, the sole authority. Possibly c., prob. s. A corruption of prig, n., 2?

prune(-)picker. A Californian; a hobo working on the prune crop: the former is tramps' c., the latter Standard American, given by tramps a special application: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

pruno. See julep.

prushun; rarely Prussian. 'Prushun: a tramp boy. An "ex-prushun" is one who has served his apprenticeship as a "kid" and is "looking for revenge" i.e. for a lad that he can "snare" and "jocker" as he himself was "snared" and "jockeyed"; Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; 1902, Flynt, The Little Brother, 'Blackie had said "he was goin' to be an ace-high Prushun"' (an experienced boy beggar or tramp); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Prussian. Tramp who has a boy to beg for him'; 1907, Jack London, The Road, (of 'road boys') 'If he travels with a "profesh", he is known possessively as a "prushun"'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage (Prushin); 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1942, BVB, defines it as 'cata-mite'; extant. In the 1880's and early '90's, the word (teste IA, 1931) designated the older member of the pair, the man that had a boy to beg for him: this man often behaved like a Prussian bully. The reversal of the sense prob. arose through the underworld's inveterate irony.

pryggar or -er. See prigger. Harman, 1566.

pryg(ge). See prig. pryman. See prigman.

prying lay, the. Spying; prying; 1838, Glascock, Land Sharks and Sea Gulls, "'I tells ye"', resumed Dick, "he's on the prying lay"; by 1860, low s. See lay, n., 2.

pryle. (At poker) 'three of anything,' says John Worby, The Other Half, 1937: gamblers': since ca. 1920. Perversion of tri?

psalm-singer. A prisoner that 'stool-pigeons' on his fellows: since ca. 1905: Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang'; extant. So many hypocrites are basically crooks.

psycho or psyco. 'Psychos:—Drug addicts,' Kernôt, 1929–31; extant. Because they perhaps need psycho-analysing?

pub, the. The public: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, 'The pub don't hear of a really good gun bein' copped out in this berg [N.Y.C.] once in six months'; † by 1930.

public game. See private game.

public patterer. 'Public Patterers . . . Swell-mobites who affect to be dissenting ministers, and preach in the open air to collect crowds, upon whose pockets their confederates work': 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. xviii; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L, who, wrongly (I think), classify it as low s.; † by 1902 (F & H). Cf. patterer, 2, and patter, v., 2.

pucker, n., 'deshabille' or 'fright': very far from being c.

pucker, v. To speak privately, secretly, incomprehensibly (to outsiders' ears): 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1859, H, 'Puckering, talking privately'; by 1890, showmen's s.—as in Philip Allingham, Cheappjack, 1934. Ex Romany rokker or vokker, 'to talk'—perhaps influenced by patter.

puckering, n. See preceding entry, reference of 1859.

pudden, n. A variant of pudding.

pudden, v. To silence (a dog) by throwing to it pudding, n., 1: 1859, Youatt (O.E.D.); extant.

pudding. 'We went one day to Erith; I went in a place and when I opened a door there was a great tike laying in front of the door, so I pulled out a piece of pudding (liver prepared to silence dogs) and threw it to him': 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, Oct. 1879: mid-C. 19–20: 1858, implied in pudden, v.; 1890, B & L; 1902, F & H, 'Drugged liver'; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights on Crime, 'Raw meat—into which strychnine has been introduced. This combination, known to the fraternity as "pudding", is tossed to a watchdog guarding the property which they are burgling'; extant. Short for meat pudding.—2. In U.S.A., an easy 'job' (or crime); a place easy to rob: 1887, George W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police, 'It was an "inside" job from the start . . . In thieves' slang it was a "pudding"; the bank was wealthy, and always kept a large amount of cash and negotiable security, on hand; the vault, though apparently impregnable, was easy to enter, and enough police protection from subordinates in the department was assured to render surprise in the commission of the burglary difficult'; app. † by 1920. A pudding is soft; an easy task is a soft job.—3. Prostitution; living on pudding, living by prostitution: prostitutes' and white-slavers': since ca. 1920. In, e.g., The Garda Review, 1935.

pudding(-)and(-)pie. The eye: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

pudding-ken. A cook-shop; cheap eating-house: since ca. 1880. In, e.g., P. H. Emerson, Lippo Lippi, 1893. See ken.

pudding(-)snammer. 'One who steals from a cook shop': 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1890 (B & L), low s. For the origin of snammer, see snam; cf. snaffle and snabble as other vv. of the same kind.

puddle. 'Injury; ruin; damage', Leverage 1925; extant. Meiosis; with perhaps an unexpressed rhyme (muddle).

puff, n. An informer esp. a 'King's informer': 1735, Sessions Papers, 7th Sessions, trial of James Farrel and Charles Hooper; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'He is turned a Puff; he is turned an Evidence'; app. † by 1890. Prob. ex puff, v. 2: cf. blow, v. 1 and 3.—2. An early form of pouf (q.v. at poof): since ca. 1870. F & H, 1902. Although less common than pouf, it is extant; it recurs in, e.g., Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938. Prob. ex sense 1, in both senses being contemptuous.—3. 'Sammy was a good box-man (safe-robber). He never used puff (nitro-glycerine), but with a few tools opened the safes artistically', Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904: U.S.A.: prob. since ca. 1890, as Hapgood implies and as also does Jim Tully, 'Yeggs', in The American Mercury, April 1933: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Puff. Explosive powder'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'Powder used to blow a safe'; Feb. 6, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (dynamite; any explosive); 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Powder to be employed in blowing a safe; any explosion'; 1933, Ersine (dynamite); Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's; extant. Echoic.—4. An opium addict: drug traffic (U.S.A.): since ca. 1930. BVB. Cf. pipey.

puff, v., 'to bid at auctions; praise unduly from interested motives', is not c.—2. To inform to the police: Jan. 1737, Sessions Papers, trial of Thomas Jenkins, 'When the Prisoner was taken, his Wife swore bitterly that he should Puff against me'; 1740, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account (Joseph Parker), 'But if he offer'd to Puff, they told him they would blow his brains out', glossed as 'Blow, or discover, or make himself an Evidence'; † by 1860. For semantics, cf. blow, v., 1 and 2.—3. Puff the glim is to fill up the hollows above old horses' eyes, in order to make them look younger: dishonest horse-dealers': 1891, Tit-Bits, April 11; 1902, F & H; extant.—4. To land: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; † by 1930. Why?—5. 'To blow a safe,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: extant. Ex puff, n., 3.—6. To smoke opium: Am. drug addicts': since the 1920's. BVB. Cf. puff at one's pipe.

puff(-)box. A machine-gun: 1929, Charles Francis Coe, Hooch, 'He's ridin' Zuroto's trucks now with the puff box laid across both knees'; slightly ob. Cf. puffer, 5.

puff-peddler; puff racket, the. The former operates the racket—that of eulogistic write-ups in an inferior periodical, the subject paying handsomely for the dubious honour of appearing in print: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers: it is journalistic and police s. (or even j.), not c. puffanagrass. 'An effeminate "homo" and carries information to warders,' Jim Phelan, Jail Journey, 1940: convicts': since ca. 1910. See puff, n., 2, and grass, n.

puffer. 'There has been a trick to obtain credit from shop-keepers lately practised with success.—A very young well-dressed man purchases trifling articles at different times, and pays ready money, and the tradesman sends them home to his lodging. A gentleman, who chances to be in the shop whilst the young man buys somewhat, observes to the shopkeeper, that it is a pity that some friend does not advise the young man not to be so profuse of his property; that his parents died a few months before he came of age, and had left him a very large sum of ready money, which he now was squandering with all the prodigality of youth.—This kind humane remark encourages the shopkeeper to trust the chap [presumably the young fellow], who at length (in the phrase of swindling) dishes him for something considerable,' Anon., The Swindler Detected, revised ed., 1781: ca. 1770–1840. This passage is not as unambiguous as one would wish, for it is not clear which of the accomplices is the 'puffer': the usual sense of puffer is advertiser, recommender, (not too scrupulous) eulogizer, and therefore puffer, here, is the chance shopper; but the trend of the passage might lead one to surmise that the puffer is the young spendthrift. Only if the latter alternative be correct, does the term belong to c. Ex puff, to recommend, praise excessively.—2. 'One who speaks well of another,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; U.S.A.: by 1910, no longer c.—if, indeed, it ever were.—3. A safe-blower: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex puff, v., 5.—4. An explosion: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. puff, n., 3.—5. A gun: U.S.A.: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Ex 4?

pug. One who is trying to break himself of the drug habit: drug traffic: since ca. 1925. BVB. He's a pug—pugilist—fighter.

puggard. In the passage in Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 1611, 'You yourself shall cant | Better than poore Mol can, and know more lawes | Of cheaters, lifters, nips, foysts, puggards, curbers, | Withall the divels blacke guard', a puggard is a thief of some kind. The term does not seem to have survived the C. 17. Its prob. origin is S.E. pug, to tug or pull.

pull, n., 'having an advantage over another' (Potter, 1797) and occurring in Sessions Papers, Sept. 1785, p. 1027, may have started as low s., but it was, I think, never c.—2. 'A person speaking of any intricate affair, or feat of ingenuity, which he cannot comprehend, will say, There is some pull at the bottom of it, that I'm not fly to': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1902 (F & H)—except in card-sharpers' nuance, 'an illicit manipulation' (Mayhew, 1861). Cf. There is a string attached to it: a reservation.—3. An arrest: May 1835, Sessions Papers (p. 147), policeman witness, 'Bantin said, we had been after him a good while, but it was no pull this time'; ob. Ex pull, v., 1.—4. A booty: Sessions Papers, June 1838 (p. 286), 'She said . . . she had got a pull of 4 l.'; very ob. Cf. familiar S.E. (orig., coll.) haul.

pull, v. 'To be pulled; to be arrested by a police officer': 1811, Lex. Bal.; ca. 1811, A Leary Mot; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'To pull a man, or have him pulled, is to cause his apprehension for some offence; and it is then said, that Mr Pullen is concerned'; 1821, Haggart; 1822, P. Egan, The Life of Samuel Denmore Hayward; 1823, Bee, 'Pulled—had up for crime before the magistrate'; 1828, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, IV, 'I know what you have done, you have pulled Bill Box for the Hounslow business'; Sept. 1845, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1859, H; 1859, Matsell; by 1860, low s. Either 'pull by the sleeve' or 'pull into prison'.—2. See pull flesh. But it is also used independently as 'to steal': 1821, Haggart, 'I pulled a scout, and passed it to Graham'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'to pull a purse', is to steal a purse'; † by 1902

(F & H). Perhaps ex sense 1.—3. (Of the police) to raid, e.g., a gambling den: U.S.A.: 1872 (see pulling); earlier in Figaro, April 15, 1871; 1881, The Man Traps of New York, p. 28, 'When a place is "pulled", it is promptly opened next morning, and business resumed'; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp; 1903, Clapin; by 1910, low s. Ex sense 1.—4. See pull a swag.—5. Esp. pull a job, to commit a crime: C. 20: cf. pull a trick, q.v. In, e.g., Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals, 1926, '... A "fence", who is already cognisant that the "job" is being "pulled"'; by 1930, low s. Cf. also pull a swag and pull flesh.—6. To rob: U.S.A.: Jan. 31, 1931, Flynn's, Henry Hyatt, 'I was going to pull that joint'; extant. Cf. sense 5.

pull, in. In confinement, custody, prison: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see pull up, 2); † by 1900. Prob. jocularly ex pull, v., 1: cf. Mr Pullen (see pull, v.).

pull a cluck. See cluck, pull a.

pull a fast one. To play a trick on, to double-cross, one's fellow criminals: 1933, Ersine; by 1936, low s. Ex baseball?

pull a job. See pull a trick.

pull a kite. See kite, pull a.

pull a swag. To obtain valuables by burglary: 1888, George Bidwell, Forging His Chains; extant. Cf. pull up and:—

pull (or pull off) a trick. To commit a crime: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys, with variant pull a job; Jan. 22, 1927, Flynn's; extant. Cf. pull a swag and pull flesh, where pull = 'to achieve, to obtain' or certain nuances thereof: cf. s. pull something off, to succeed in it.

pull down. 'To steal from shop doors': 1839, Brandon; 1857, Snowden; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); ob.

pull flesh. 'We lived by thieving, and I do still—by pulling flesh (stealing meat)': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 44; op. cit., I, 476, there occurs the variant lift flesh; app. † by 1902 (F & H). See pull, v., 2.

pull in is a variant of pull, v., 1: 1846, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), March 7; 1933, Ersine; by 1945, slightly ob.

pull in your barber-pole! (not very common); —ears!; —neck! Shut up: esp. convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. the synonymous quee down!, suck in your guts!, (get) under the bunk!

pull off a trick. See pull a trick.

pull off leather. 'To steal pocket-books or purses', Clapin, Americanisms, 1903; slightly ob. See leather, 1.

pull on. 'One night these boys "pulled" on a pawn-shop. That is, they wrenched the iron grille from the windows, smashed a pan, and took a few trays containing rings, watches, brooches,' Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938: since ca. 1920. They place their hands on the grille and pull heavily with their weight as well as with their arms.

pull out. To 'come it strong', i.e. to exaggerate: 1848, Sinks of London: possibly c., but prob. low s.

pull the pin. To quit work; to depart: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin. 'From the railroad, where to pull the pin is to uncouple a car or engine by lifting the coupling pin, hence, when a car is left standing, to finish a job' (Irwin).

pull the whiskers off (someone's) face. To send

(a person) to prison: late C. 19–20: 1929, Tom Divall, Scoundrels and Scallywags.

pull the sneak. To commit a sneak-theft: 1924, George S. Dougherty, The Criminal as a Human Being; extant.

pull through it. See through it.

pull up. To rob (a person) on the highway: 1800, The Oracle, 'Fashionable Characters: A Kiddy', 'A titlark [q.v.] swore that a few evenings since I had pulled him up on Hounslow Heath'; 1812, J. H. Vaux (see pull up a jack); app. † by 1890. Lit., to cause the person to pull up, i.e. pull in, his horses.—2. To arrest: 1799 (see quot'n at scampsman); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Pulled, Pulled up, or in Pull. Taken in custody; in confinement'; 1827, Peter Cunningham, Two Years in New South Wales; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s.

pull up a jack. 'To stop a post-chaise on the highway' and rob its occupants: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1870. See pull up.

Pullen, Mr. See pull, v. The pun is on pull 'im or pull 'em or pull in.

puller. A smuggler of liquor: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'The pullers use faster boats'—motor-cars—'than the feds'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; then historical only.—2. Remover of gems from stolen jewellery: British: since the 1920's. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. He pulls them out of their settings.

puller-up. A sentinel to a gang of safe-breakers: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; ob. He 'pulls up', or engages in conversation, any meddlesome or inconvenient person.

pullet. A young prostitute; (also virgin pullet) that has not yet given birth to a child: 1823, Bee; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus' (see rogue and pullet), 1859, H., 'Pulley, a confederate thief,—generally a woman'; 1890, B & L (pulley); 1902, F & H, both nuances; slightly ob. Ex Fr. poulet, a chicken: cf. Fr. s. poule, a prostitute.

pulley or pully. A variant—prob. indicating the pronunciation—of the preceding.—2. A trial; sessions: 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life, (thief writing) 'I have got 9 moon at the last pulley'; but this is almost certainly a misprint for fully, n.

pullied. See fully, reference of 1889.

pulling. In reference to brothels, 'Police make the raid, release those men having no money with which to pay fine, and', by inference (says Godfrey Irwin), 'take bribes from "madam" and from inmates for their release': 1872, Edward Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York; ob. See pull, v., 3.

pump. v. To steal (something): 1824, The Atlantic Magazine, I, 344 (cited by F & H); 1902, F & H; by 1920, †. Semantics: to pump (e.g., a well) dry. And cf. crush, v.—2. 'To draw the air from a safe,' Leverage, 1925; extant.

pump full of junk. 'To give or take a large injection of narcotics, BVB, 1942: drug addicts': since the 1920's. See junk, n., 3.

pump-handle. To shoot, esp. to shoot dead with a 'tommy gun': 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves, a gunman's wife loq.: 'They sent him up the river f'r pump-handlin' Pip Siegel, who welched on the Gas-House Gang'; slightly ob. To pump bullets into someone.

punce. A male homosexual; properly, a passive, a pathic: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. (The u is pronounced like oo in 'book'.) Ex ponce.—2. Hence (?), the female pudend: Australian: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1942.

punch. (Usually punch it.) To go; to walk: 1781, Ralph Tomlinson, A Slang Pastoral, 'But now she to Bridewell has punch'd it along'; † by 1902 (F & H). Perhaps ex dial. punch, to kick.—2. Hence, 'to punch it, is a cant term for running away': 1811, Lex. Bal.; app. † by 1900.—3. To open a door, or a safe, by force: U.S. bank robbers': from the 1920's: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Rose, 'Open a Safe . . . punch a box'; extant. Simply suggested by break.

punch outsides. To go outside: 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'I said, "I will punch outsides with your nibs, but not with that gloach"'; † by 1900. See punch.

punish one's teeth, 'to eat': s., not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

punk, n. Bread: orig., tramps': Aug. 1891, The Contemporary Review, Josiah Flynt, 'The American Tramp', 'Bread is called "punk"': 1899 (implied in punk and plaster); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'She gives you a slice of sow-belly and a chunk of dry "punk"': 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. 'Some say that it comes from the French word pain, and immigrated to the United States from Canada, where the hoboes had heard their Canadian confreres use it . . . Certainly it is as near the pronunciation as the average vagabond can come. But a more natural explanation is that punk (touchwood; dry, decayed, crumbly wood) being dry, and bread, particularly that given to tramps, being also dry, the resemblance . . . impressed itself on some sensitive tramp's mind. The disgust with which beggars frequently speak the word helps to substantiate this theory' (J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899, 'The Tramps' Jargon').—2. (Prob. ex sense 1.) A male pervert (the passive partner): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1907, Jack London, The Road (see quot'n at road kid); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'A sodomite youth'; 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee (a boy discarded by a jocker); 1923, N. Anderson, The Hobo, 'It had a special meaning at one time but is beginning to have a milder and more general use and the term "lamb" is taking its place', but later in the book, Anderson writes, 'A punk is a boy who travels about the country with a man known as a jocker'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Glen H. Mullin (A Scholar Tramp), who defines it as a 'beggin' kid'; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black; Jan. 8, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, R. Nichols & J. Tully, Twenty Below; 1931, C. R. Shaw, Natural History of a Delinquent; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, of a homosexual boy; and very frequently since, as, e.g., in Castle, 1938, in ref. to prison pathics.—3. In Jack London's The Road, 1907, passing the punk is providing fire wherewith the convicts may light their pipes or cigarettes; but this hardly constitutes genuine c.—4. (Ex sense 2.) A no-good, a waster, a person of no importance: c. of ca. 1910–30, then low s. Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 1929, ref. to ca. 1912; Flynn's, Jan. 8, 1927, Charles Somerville, '"I always thought this here Wheezer was a muck—a punk," he declared, "but me hand is out to that bird from tonight"'. By ca. 1930, English—as in James Spenser, Racket, 1937.—5. (Prob. ex sense 2.) 'Punks—children, babies, or young animals or colts' (The White Tops, July–Aug. 1928, 'Circus Glossary') is circus s.—6. An apprentice thief or gangster: 1928, Chicago May; Dec. 14, 1929 (quot'n at mooching kid); 1930, E. D. Sullivan, Chicago Surrenders; July 19, 1930, Liberty; Jan. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, E. D. Sullivan, '25,000 hoodlums—from Bit Shots to Punks'; Aug. 8, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse; April 7, 1934, Flynn's, Major C. E. Russell, '"Punks", as he called the crooked merchants'; Dec. 29, 1934, Flynn's, Tracy French (who applies it to the mere 'muscle men' in a kidnapping gang); 1935, Haigan, 'Gun punk—one of an outfit who carries the weapons'; Feb. 29, 1936, Flynn's, Richard Wormser; Oct. 9, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton (of a gunman); 1938, Castle; Sept. 1941, The American Mercury, John Richmond, 'Portrait of a Punk'; by ca. 1940, current in Britain—as, e.g., in David Hume, Destiny is My Name, 1942; extant. Prob. ex sense 2.—7. (Cf. senses 2, 5, 6.) A young prisoner: convicts': 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest; Jan. 17, 1931, Flynn's, Henry Hyatt; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; extant.

punk, adj. 'Of little account; displeasing; worthless' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931); 'of scant account as a beggar' (Irwin); orig. (ca. 1905–25), tramps' c., then low s. Prob. ex sense 2 of the n.; cf. sense 4.

punk and gut. Bread and cheese: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. See punk, n., 1; gut: prob. because of the clogging effect of cheese upon the gut or bowels.

punk and plaster. Bread and butter: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931 (implied in next entry); 1932, Frank Jennings, current among British tramps for 'bread and margarine'; extant. 'Bread and butter is the usual "hand out"' (Irwin).

punk and plaster route. A journey, any road, among the Pennsylvania Dutch: tramps': C. 20: 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; et al. See preceding entry.

punk-grafter. An older tramp that has a boy do all his begging and all his chores: 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1927, R. Nichols & J. Tully, Twenty Below; extant. I.e., a punk (n., 2) worker.

punk kid. A catamite: since ca. 1910. BVB. It combines punk, n., 2 + road kid.

punker. A neophyte in crime: 1930, Burke, 'Say, I'm no punker. Wasn't I in college (a reformatory)?'; ob. Ex punk, n., 5, 6, 7, by accumulative influence.

punsh. See punch outsides.

punt; punter; punting. These are not c. but racing s. terms. Punter occurs also in pitchmen's and cheapjacks' s. for 'a grafter's customer, client or victim' (Philip Allingham, Cheapjack, 1934).

punter. That pickpocket's assistant who, while the pickpocket operates, diverts the victim's attention: New Zealand: since ca. 1910. Sidney J. Baker, New Zealand Slang, 1941. Ex the sense of punter recorded in prec. entry.

punting shop. A gambling house: C. 19. H., 1874. Possibly c. at first; but prob. always (orig., low) sporting s. Ex punt, 'to lay a stake'.

pup, sell a. In c., to sell someone a pup is to swindle him ; it is applied esp. to those who swindle greenhorns : 1902, F & H ; by 1910, low s.

puppies. 'Nevada Mike, at whose burglarious puppies (feet to you) I learned the somewhat gentle art of blowing safes and bank vaults,' Jack Callahan, in Flynn's, May 30, 1936 ; extant. A pun on s. dogs, 'feet' (see dog, n., 5).

puppy, n. A blind man : c. of ca. 1840-90 ; then low s. (F & H, 1902.) Cf. the adj.—2. A stolen car disguised for sale : American automobile-stealing racket : 1929, The Saturday Evening Post ; extant. It is new-born ; cf. the synonymous baby. —3. See puppies.

puppy, adj. Blind : 1859, Matsell ; by 1902 (F & H)—prob. by 1890—it was low s. Ex the new-born puppy's lack of sight.

purchase, n. 'The money that is wonne, Purchase,' says R. Greene in A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, 1591, in defining the terms used in 'the cony-catching law', i.e., in card-sharping skillfully prepared by a gang of confidence men. This specific delimitation of the very old and long † S.E. sense, 'that which is purchased or acquired' (O.E.D.), is fairly to be accounted c.—and prob. it was current for some forty years (ca. 1580-1620) ; in A Disputation, 1592, he has it as 'illegal earnings'—this also is c. ; and ibid., he employs it thrice for 'those who yield booty', which again is c. ; but when Greene uses it as = 'booty', e.g., in 'He spying ye purse in his aprone, had cut it passing cunningly, and then having his purchase close in his hand, made answer', he merely uses it in a genuine S.E. manner. In S.E. the word came to denote that booty which fell to the lot of a privateer.

purchase, v. To gain in or as booty : 1656, Anon., The Speech and Confession of Mr Richard Hannam, concerning a highwayman : '... Who in one half year, had purchased about 3000 l. as the Canters term it' ; † by 1720. Prob. imm. ex the n.

pure. A mistress ; more usually a whore : 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (see quot'n at blowen) ; 1698, B.E. ; 1725, A New Canting Dict. ; 1785, Grose, 'A harlot, or lady of easy virtue' ; † by 1870. Ironical. (I doubt David MacRitchie's derivation—The Nineteenth Century, Sept. 1911, 'The Speech of the Roads'—from Shelta.)—2. See doss in the pure.

pure-finder, 'a street collector of dog's dung' : not c., but s.

purest pure. A mistress ; gen., a whore : 1688, Thomas Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (see quot'n at blowen) ; 1698, B.E., 'A Top Mistress, or Fine Woman'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725 ; 1785, Grose, 'A courtesan of high fashion' ; † by 1870. Cf. pure.

purity. 'Absolute vagrancy and the ability to support oneself by begging or petty thieving, lost when the tramp applies to a mission or charitable society for aid,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931 : tramps' : since ca. 1915. Uncontaminated loafing.

purple dromedary. 'You are a purple Dromedary, c. You are a Bungler or a dull Fellow at thieving,' B.E., 1698 ; Grose : late C. 17—mid-19. See dromedary. This sense of purple affords an interesting parallel to the modern s. puce, inferior or objectionable. purring ; purring like a cat. Drug-contented : drug traffic : since ca. 1930. BVB. Like a cat after a satisfactory consumption of cream.

purse, v., 'to steal ; esp., to steal purses', is not c. ; indeed, it is a literarism.

purse-nets or pursenets. In the 'racket' known as ferreting (fl. 1600-1750) pursenets are those goods which are hired at extortionate rates, from a confederate tradesman ; goods let go as a means to getting a strangle-hold on some rich young man. Dekker, 1608-9, Lanthorne and Candle-light ; B.E., 1698 ; Egan's Grose, 1823. Ex S.E. purse-net, i.e. 'a bag-shaped net . . . used esp. for catching rabbits' (O.E.D.) or *coney*s.

pus palmer. An initiate into the tricks of the race-course : 1873, James Greenwood, In Strange Company, p. 249 ; † by 1920. Why pus ? Perhaps there is a pun on the name of one Perce (Percy) Palmer.

push, n. A crowd, usually if fortuitous ; esp. a crowd that offers excellent opportunity to pick-pockets : 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator (see quot'n at pushing tout) ; ibid., 'A Push, alias a great Concourse of People' ; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, where it is defined as 'a throng' ; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'When any particular scene of crowding is alluded to, they [the underworld] say, the push, as, the push at the spell doors ; the push at the stooping-match, &c.' ; by 1848, at latest, current in U.S.A. (witness E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York) ; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I ; 1859, H ; 1859, Matsell ; by 1870, no longer c. in England, but in 1897 (Popular Science Monthly, April, p. 833) it was still c. in U.S.A., where it > s. only ca. 1905. A crowd pushes one about.—2. Hence, a gang or band of tramps or criminals : 1845, ref. in No. 747, 1893 ; by 1890, also Am., as in Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 ; 1900, Flynt, Notes of an Itinerant Policeman, where it is stated that push, 'a gang of criminal tramps', came into use sometime after 1875 ; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft ; 1902, F & H ; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (by implication) ; 1907, Jack London, The Road ; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York ; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer ; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat ; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys ; 1927, Kane ; 1931, Brown ; 1931, Godfrey Irwin ; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble ; 1943, Black ; extant.—3. Hence (?), 'a robbery or swindle. "I'm in this push", the notice given by one magman to another that he means to "stand in"': 1874, H ; 1887, Baumann ; 1890, B & L ; 1902, F & H ; ob.—4. A labour gang of convicts : 1885, M. Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary, 'I one day missed my labour "chum" from his place in our "push" or gang, and learned that he had "nosed" another prisoner, that is, struck him a blow on that organ, and was undergoing three days' "chokey" (bread and water) for indulging in such a luxury' ; 1890, B & L ; 1895, A. Griffiths, Criminals I Have Known ; by 1900, merged with sense 5. From sense 2, as is :—5. A group, a clique, of convicts : 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary, '... The stocking-knitting party, which, in consequence [of the bogus noblemen in it], became known among the rest of the prisoners as "the upper-ten push"' (at Dartmoor in the 1880's) ; 1895, A. Griffiths, Criminals I Have Known ; 1902, F & H ; 1907, Jack London, The Road (U.S.A.) ; 1945, Baker (Australia) 'The head prisoners in a jail'. Derisive of prison pretensions.—6. A rare variant of posh, 2. (Wm Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life, 1886, p. 12.)—7. 'Any boss,' Ersine, 1933 : U.S.A. : since ca. 1925. He pushes his underlings around.

push, v. To get rid of counterfeit money here, there, everywhere: 1904, implied in pusher; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict, 'Pushing the queer'; extant.—2. To peddle—or to smuggle—narcotics: since ca. 1920. BVB. Cf. pusher, 4.

push a gun. See gun, push a.

push and pull. Gasoline and oil: May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. Humorous.

push and slide. A kind of short-change trick in which the money is counted-out on to a desk or a counter and then slid into the victim's hand—part of the money being retained by palming: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; extant.

push grift. 'Theft in a crowd by pickpockets,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: mostly pickpockets': since ca. 1920. See the elements.

push in. To break into; to rob (esp. a bank) by a hold-up: Dec. 4, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton, 'You pushed in a few banks'; extant. Cf. crush.

push-over. A burglary very easy to commit: Aug. 11, 1928, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson, 'Twenty years outside the Law'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A crime easy to commit without fear of detection'; 1933, Ersine; by 1940, police and journalistic. One has only to stretch one's arm—and over the obstacle goes!—2. A 'sucker': commercial underworld: 1935 (quot'n at lily); 1941, Maurer; by 1945, commercial s.—Cf.:—3. The sense, 'a girl easy to "make"' is low s., orig. U.S. (e.g., Ersine), then British.

push shorts. To retail drugs in small quantities: drug traffic: since ca. 1925. BVB. See the elements.

push the brush out. 'If a convict in prison tries to attract the attention of a warder he is "pushing the brush out",' David Hume, Halfway to Horror, 1937; earlier in Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933; extant. He works energetically with brush—or with broom—in order to make a favourable impression.

push the coke. To sell drugs: drug traffic: Nov. 29, 1930, Flynn's, Charles Somerville; extant. See coke, 2, and cf. pusher, 3.

push the knot. To be a tramp: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. The knot that binds the swag. The tramp 'pushes along'.

push-up, be at the; push-up mob. To be engaged in pickpocketry; a gang of pickpockets: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., Charles E. Leach, 1933; Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938; Black, 1943 (p.-u. mob). Cf.:—

push-up for. To approach a prospective victim: Australian pickpockets': since ca. 1925. Baker, 1942, 'Whence, "pushing up": such tactics'. To push one's way cautiously.

push-up man. A pickpocket's confederate: Australian: since ca. 1925. Baker, 1945. Cf. push-up, be at the.

push-up mob. See push-up, be at the.

pusher. '... Pushers. These go in advance of the thief and locate the whereabouts of the plunder for him. They rush and push to and fro in the crowd... When the pusher discovers the pocket that plunder is sure to be found in, the fellow signals to the pickpocket... Then the robbery follows': 1886, Thomas Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America; † by 1920.—2. A passer of counterfeit money (coin or notes): 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'It was like finding rags to the pusher' (counterfeit notes on the person of the 'smasher' or utterer); May 25, 1929, Flynn's, H. W. Corley, 'Shoving the Queer'; May 9, 1931, Flynn's, Lawrence M. Maynard; 1933, Ersine; 1941, Maurer; extant.—3. Hence, a vendor of narcotics: Nov. 15, 1930, Chas Somerville in Flynn's; March 19, 1932, Flynn's; 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor; 1935, Hargan; Nov. 1937, For Men Only, Robert Baldwin; extant.—4. One in charge of a job: as much labour-gang s. as tramps' c. Stiff, 1931.—5. He who, of a pickpocket gang, pushes the prospective victim against the tool or wire: C. 20. Charles E. Leach, 1933.

pusher-out. A variation of pusher, 3. Kernôt, 1929–31.

pushing school, 'a brothel', is not c., but low s. B.E.; Grose. With a pun on the sense, 'fencing school'.

pushing the mugs round. See mug, n., 3.

pushing the packets, vbl n. 'Selling packets of "jewellery", etc., in the street; see Windbags,' Black, 1943: since the 1920's. On the borderline between c. and cheapjacks' s.

pushing tout. C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718, describes a man as 'an old worn-out Thief... now a pushing Tote, alias Thieves Watchman, that lies scouting in and about the City to get and bring Intelligence to the Thieves, and where there is a Push, alias an accidental crowd of People, that they may be there to pick Pockets, which is the Occasion of his coming at this time, and of their collecting Money for him'; † by 1930. Cf. push, n., 1, and see tout, n., 1.

pushing up. See push up for.

pu, 'the face': low s., not c. In, e.g., Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909. The same for the nuance 'mouth'.

pussy. A fur: 1937, David Hume, Halfway to Horror, but prob. current ever since ca. 1890; 1943, D. Hume, Dishonour among Thieves; extant. Suggested by cat, 2.—2. A flogging: convicts': C. 20. Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938; id., Letters from the Big House, 1943. I.e., 'the cat' (cat o' nine tails).

pussy(-)bumping. See corn-hole and cf. muff diving; the agents are pussy-bumper and muff-diver.

pussy-fetcher. 'A pussy-fetcher, I conclude, is a cat-burglar, Sid.'—"You got it, sir, first go"; E. Charles Vivian, Ladies in the Case, 1933: since ca. 1920.

pussy-foot. As 'detective', it is s.; as 'a sneaky investigation' (Jackson & Hellyer, 1914), it may orig. have been c. Cf. gum shoe.

put, n. 'A Putt. One who is easily whedled and cheated,' T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, 1688; 1698, not classified as c. by B.E., where the sense is rather that of 'simpleton'. But by ca. 1704, the term had invaded the fashionable s. of male society; usually mere put or, esp., (mere) country put. 'Origin unascertained': O.E.D. But 'Webster' aptly compares Welsh pwt, any short thing—esp. in pwt o ddyn, a squab of a person.

put a down upon. See down upon, put a.

put a head on. To punish; to bruise: 1872, George P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'A new cant term'; 1890, B & L; by 1900, s. Prob. to raise a lump on the head of (a person).

put a necktie on. See necktie on...

put away. To lock-up; to imprison: 1859,

Matsell; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs, in the sense, 'to send (a person) to a State prison after his conviction'; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1890, s.; by 1895, coll. As one would put away a discarded object.—2. To inform on (another criminal): English: 1875, Arthur Griffiths, Memorials of Millbank, 'They concluded that one of their number had "rounded" or "put them away", in other words, had turned informer'; 1885, M. Davitt; 1887, J. W. Horsley, Jottings from Jail; 1890, B & L; by 1900, s. Perhaps ex sense 1.

put buff in downy. See downy, put buff in.

put dick(ey) on (a person). See dickey, 3.

put down. 'To put a swell down, signifies to alarm or put a gentleman on his guard, when in the attempt to pick his pocket, you fail to effect it at once, and by having touched him a little too roughly, you cause him to suspect your design, and to use precautions accordingly; or perhaps, in the act of sounding him, by having been too precipitate or incautious, his suspicions may have been excited, and it is then said that you have put him down, put him fly, or spoiled him. See spoil it': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1900. See down, adj.—2. To get rid of, to distribute, counterfeit coins or forged cheques: 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen (coin); 1945, implied in putter-down (cheques).

put (a person) down to (something). 'To apprise him of, elucidate, or explain it to him': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1910. See put down, 1, and cf. :—

put flash. To apprise (a person), put him on his guard: ca. 1800–50. See flash, adj., 3.

put fly. See put down, end of Vaux quot'n.

put hep. See hep, put.

put in a hole; put in the hole. See garden, put in the.

put in it. See in it.

put in the air. To hold up (a person) in order to rob him: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'They'—the police—'say it's us, too, who put that rube in the air over in Division Street'; slightly ob. To force the victim to stand, hands raised, in the open air.

put in the grease. See grease, n., 4.

put in the middle. To place (someone) in an untenable, very difficult, or dangerous position: racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'What's the idea? Trying to put me in the middle with the law?'; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; 1939, Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep; extant. In a position difficult to escape from.

put in the squeak. To inform to the police: 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; 1943, Black; extant. See squeak, n.

put in the well. See well, v., and garden, put in the.

put mack on it. To open a safe: 1934, Rose. But prob. in error for :—

put marks on it. To open a safe: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. By meiosis.

put (someone's) number up. See number up.

put off. To pass, get rid of, counterfeit money: 1810, Sessions Papers, Oct., p. 405; 1883, James Greenwood, Tag, Rag & Co., 'Mr Maloney . . . told us that he has "put off" as many as fifteen shilling "sours" on a Saturday night'; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1935, G. W. Cornish, Cornish of the Yard; extant.

put on. 'To steal from; originally meant to steal from a person while putting—i.e., helping—him on a street car or other conveyance,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: pickpockets': since ca. 1910.

put on a circus; put the croaker on the send for a jolt. To feign a spasm, in order to obtain narcotics from a doctor: drug traffic: since the 1920's. BVB, 1942. Cf. cart-wheel and figure eight.

put on the balmy or barmy. See barmy, put on the.

put on the blink. 'Then there are the hopstiffs and mokers, an' they put th' biz on th' blink,' Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1926, where the sense appears to be 'to endanger', 'to render very uncertain and ehancy'; in Flynn's, Aug. 21, 1926, 'The violence of the revolution put all business "on the blink"', the sense is obviously 'upset'. After ca. 1930, if not earlier, the phrase was s. See blink, on the.

put on the bricks. See bricks . . .

put on the crook. See crook, put on the.

put on the double-double. See double-double.

put on the flimp. See fimp, n.

put on the grease. See grease, n., 4.

put on the hug. See hug, n.

put (someone) on the pan. To discuss, talk about, derisively: 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; extant. See pan, n. and v.

put on the spot. See spot, on the.

put one's back up. "Putting his back up" indicates that the stall is putting the mark, yap, sucker, or hoosier into the right position to insure a successful operation by the wire, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld', The American Mercury, May 1928; extant. Synonymous with give (one) a roust, set up, throw a hump.

put one's forks down, v.i. and v.t. To pick a pocket: C. 19–20; ob. J. H. Vaux, 1812; B & L, 1890. See fork, n., 2.

put out. To pay a bribe (or bribes); to pay for protection; to donate: 1933, Ersine, 'To give, donate'; 1935, David Lamson, We who Are About to Die, 'The guy offers to put out to him, and he turns it down'; extant.—2. To prostitute oneself: 1933, Ersine; extant.

put out a lump. See lump, n., 2, Convict quot'n, 1934.

put out (a person's) light. See put the light out.

put out a twig. See out of twig and twig, put out of.

put the black. See black, put the.

put the black on. To blackmail (a person): 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13 (quot'n at black, the); extant. See black, the.

put the blast on. See blast on . . .

put the block; variant black may be a corruption or even an error. To screen a thief, a pickpocket, at work: since ca. 1920. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. I.e., to block the view of the potentially interested.

put the blocks to. See blocks to . . .

put the bong in. To effect in counterfeit the ring of genuine coin: counterfeiters': C. 20. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. Echoic.

put the boots to. 'To have intercourse [with a woman], especially when [she] has been talked into the idea, and when no move to a room or brothel has been made,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1910. Also in, e.g., Hargan, 1935. I.e., without removing one's boots or shoes.

put the chair on. See chair on.

put the choke on, v.i. and v.t. To choke (not necessarily to death) a person and then rob him: 1888, James Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; slightly ob.

put the clown to bed. To see that a small-town police has gone home before 'pulling a job': since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933.

put the collar on (a person). 'To arrest a criminal and "iron" him': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1900 it was police s.

put the croaker on the send for a jolt. See put on a circus.

put the cross on. To mark (a person) down for death, to 'place on the spot': racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'Lay off, Smoky, or we put the cross on you, see?'; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot, 'Con's due for the works. We've put a cross on him'; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant.

put the doctors upon. See doctors.

put the duke down. 'Among pickpockets, "putting the duke down" refers to the work of the wire who abstracts the objective from the victim's kick,' Ernest Booth in The American Mercury, May 1928; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; extant.

put the finger on. To betray (a person) to the police: ca. 1886, in Lewis E. Lawes, Cell 202, Sing Sing, 1935; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; 1929, C. F. Coe, Hooch; 1929, Givens; Aug. 2, 1930, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1935, Hargan; extant. By ca. 1930, also British: Partridge, 1938. Ex the gesture of pointing one's finger at someone.—2. 'To point out. A dip's stall puts his finger on a prospective victim,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; 'to recognise' is the nuance in Robert Carse, 'Jail Break!'—Flynn's, March 22, 1930; 'to identify' is that in Flynn's, Oct. 25, 1930, Col. Givens, 'Lights'—but by 1930, these two latter nuances were also police s., as also, by 1935, was the nuance 'to arrest' (Julian Proskauer, 1934). Early in the 1930's the phrase was adopted in Britain in the nuances 'identify' and 'find when needed'—as, e.g., in David Hume, Mick Cardby Works Overtime, 1944, and Come Back for the Body, 1945.—3. To arrest: American and British: 1937, James Curtis, You're in the Racket Too; Nov. 6, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; extant. Ex senses 1 and 2.

put the gloves on. To improve (a person): Scottish: 1909, Ware; slightly ob. Gloves symbolizing the gentry.

put the heat on. See heat, n., 2.

put the (or one's) light out; put out (a person's) light. Not c., but s.—orig., low s.

put the lug on. See lug on, put the.

put the mug on (a person). See mug, n., 3.—2. To gag him: U.S.A.: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'I explained how I would "put the mug on her" while my husky pal went through her' (searched her); slightly ob. Ex mug, n., 3.

put the pincher on. See pincher on.

put the screw on. See screw on . . .

put the skates on. To make off, run away: since ca. 1930. In, e.g., F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938.

put the skids to. See skids to, put the.

put the sleeve on. To borrow from: convicts': 1934, Rose, 'Wait'll I put the sleeve on Joe fer some chewin''; extant. Ex the gesture of plucking at the borrowee's sleeve.

put the whacks on. To compel (a person): 1934, Rose; extant. Perhaps suggested by:—

put the works on. To kill (a person): since ca. 1912, to judge by Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, (a gangster loq. in ref. to his 'broad') 'I've put the works on more than one mug fer trying to make her, kid; so if yer a wise brat, lay off'; extant. See works and give the works.

put (persons) through. 'Put 'em through, [to subject] persons to a thorough searching ordeal': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1895, no longer c. By ellipsis.

put to find. To send (someone) to prison: since ca. 1890; very ob. Ware, 1909. To 'put into a confined space (or place)'?

put-up, n. A derivative of put-up, adj.; applied to any such robbery: 1818, The London Guide (p. 239); 1823, Bee (by implication); 1845, E. Sue, The Mysteries of Paris (anon. trans.), ch. xvi; 1859, Matsell; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant.—2. 'When one rogue splits upon another, this is also "a put-up"': 1823, Bee; † by 1900.—3. Information facilitating burglary: 1880, R. K. Fox; 1890, B & L. Ex sense 1 and, in C. 20, not to be distinguished therefrom.

put up, v. 'To suggest to another, the means of committing a depredation, or effecting any other business, is termed putting him up to it': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, The London Guide, 'To acquaint thieves what robbery to undertake'; then merging with sense 2.—2. Hence (?), to furnish (house-breakers) with information likely to render a robbery successful: 1822, P. Egan, The Life of Samuel Denmore Hayward; 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London; 1830, Sessions Papers, 1824-33, VI; by ca. 1845, current in U.S.A.—witness E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1848; 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed.; 1862, Mayhew, London Labour, IV; 1888, J. Greenwood, The Policemen's Lantern; 1889, Clarkson & Hall Richardson; 1890, B & L; 1895, Caminada; by 1900, s.; by 1940, S.E.—3. Hence, to give such information about (a shop, a house): 1858, The Times, March 16, 'There was a jeweller's shop put up', wrongly glossed by 'Ducange Anglicus' (The Vulgar Tongue, 2nd ed., 1859), as 'being watched'; 1874, H, 'To inspect or plan out with a view to robbery'; 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life; 1893, A. Lansdowne, A Life's Reminiscences; 1925, Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons; extant.—4. To rob (a building) after careful preliminary investigation: 1890, Clarkson & Richardson, The Rogues' Gallery, 'Nowadays "putting up a bank" is an event which is more frequently chronicled in the newspapers of some of our colonies than in those of the mother-country'; ob. Ex sense 3.—5. To illicitly stack (a pack of cards): card-sharpers': 1894, J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats (p. 138); extant.—6. Also card-sharpers' is this, in Maskelyne, 1894, 'The methods employed . . . to cheat the bank. This is done where the players are professional sharps who have contrived to "put up a mug"' put(-)up, adj. 'Put up Affair, any preconcerted plan or scheme to effect a robbery, &c., undertaken at the suggestion of another person, who possessing a knowledge of the premises, is competent to advise the principal how best to succeed': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1838, Dickens, Oliver Twist, 'It can't be a put-up job, as we expected'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1872, Geo. P. Burnham (U.S.A.); 1884, A. Griffiths, Chronicles of Newgate; 1890, B & L; 1902, J. Greenwood; by 1905, low s.

(i.e. to persuade a dupe) to take the bank [at faro]'; extant.—7. To give information to the police about (a person): Dec. 1898 (p. 116), Sessions Papers, 'On the way to the [police] station, he'—an utterer of counterfeit—said, "I should like to know who has put us up"'; extant. Prob. ex senses 2 and 3.

put up a squeak. To give information to the police: since ca. 1920. Edgar Wallace, passim. See squeak, n.

put-up job. See put up, adj.—2. A synonym of faked fitting: 1895, Eric Gibb: prob. current ca. 1830–75.

put up the fanny. See fanny, put up the.

put (a man) up to his arm-pits. See arm-pits, put . . .

putt. See put.

putt-putt. 'An out-board motorboat used in liquor running. "A sneaker's no good. Water's too shallow. Got to use a putt-putt"', Burke, 1930: racketeers': 1934, Rose; then historical. Echoic of the muffled throb of the motor-engine.

putter. A calf's or cow's foot, as a delicacy: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'Both his ogles being darkened by the milvad with the putter'; † by 1902 (F & H). That which the animal constantly puts to ground? In Scottish, a putter is an animal that butts with its head or horns—as a calf does.

putter(-)down. A passer of counterfeit money or forged cheques: since the 1920's: 1933, Chas E. Leach; 1935, Ex-Supt G. W. Cornish, Cornish of the Yard (counterfeit); 1945, Det.-Insp. Jack Henry, What Price Crime? (cheques); extant. Ex put down, 2.

putter-in. 'The Putter-in, or steerer. The con-man who makes the dupe's acquaintance and steers him to his confederates,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941: confidence-men's: C. 20.

putter-off. A distributor of counterfeit: 1890, Clarkson & Richardson, The Rogues' Gallery, 'The "putters-off" of base coin have many expedients; some work single-handed and carry their stock with them; others, generally a man and woman, work in pairs'; slightly ob. Ex put off.

putter(-)up. 'The projector or planner of a put-up affair [see put-up, adj.], as a servant in a gentleman's family, who proposes to a gang of house-breakers the robbery of his master's house, and informs them where the plate, &c., is deposited, (instances of which are frequent in London) is termed the putter up, and usually shares equally in the booty with the parties executing, although the former may lie dormant, and take no part in the actual commission of the fact': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, plagiarizingly; 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; Jan. 10, 1846, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1857, Snowden's Magistrate's Assistant, 3rd ed., where, at p. 330, we find also the corresponding vbl n., putting(-)up; 1859, Matsell; 1862, Mayhew, London Labour, IV; 1874, H., 'A man who travels about for the purpose of obtaining information useful to professional burglars'; 1887, G. W. Walling (U.S.A.), Recollections; 1887, Baumann; 1890, Clarkson & Richardson, The Rogues' Gallery; 1893, No. 747; 1933, Charles E. Leach; 1938, Percy J. Smith, Con Man; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime; extant. Ex put up, v. putting-up, n. See putter(-)up, reference of 1857.

putty cove; p. covess. 'A man or woman upon whom no dependence can be placed; i.e., they are as liable'—read 'pliable'—'as putty, which can be bent any way': 1823, Egan's Grose; app. † by 1887 (Baumann). Ex the softness of putty.

putty won't stick is a phrase applied to 'any attempted deceit that miscarries': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'This kind of "putty won't stick" much with him', this kind of trick won't gain much credence from him; app. † by 1910.

puzzle(-)cove. A lawyer: 1859, Matsell; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, "Puzzle-coves, hard-headed lawyers and attorneys"; by 1902 (F & H), ob; by 1910, †. Perhaps suggested by S.E. puzzle-cause, 'a lawyer'.

puzzling(-)sticks. 'The triangles to which culprits are tied up, for the purpose of undergoing flagellation': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1902 (F & H). They more than puzzled the victim: in Vaux's time, puzzle meant 'to bewilder'.

pyman; ? properly pieman. Some kind of thievish criminal: 1666, Anon., Leathermore's Advice (or The Nicker Nicked)—see quot'n at foiler.

Q

Q. See letter Q.—2. (As the Q.) The American tramps' version of the colloquial C., B. & Q., the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad: 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.

Q.T. A quarter (share, dollar, etc.): 1933, Ersine; extant. Ex the abbreviation qt.

Q.T. cutie. A prostitute: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. Cutie, 'girl': pron. q.t.: hence reduplication q.t. q.t. > Q.T. cutie.

qua is app. the earliest form in which quad or quod, 'a prison', appears in the U.S.A. (—1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 'Qua . . . a jail.—

Qua keeper . . . a jail keeper.—Undub the qua . . . unlock the jail.—Crack the qua . . . break the jail'. Leverage, 1925, repeats it, thus: 'Qua, n., A prison; a jail'. Prob. a mere misprint in Tufts.

qua-keeper. See the preceding.

quack, v. To inform to the police: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. squeak, v., and squawk, v.

quacking cheat. 'A quacking chete or a red shanke, a drake or ducke,' Harman, 1566; 1608, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'A Quacking chete, a duck'; 1665, R. Head; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell quad, n. An occ. form of quod, n.: 1752, Fielding, Amelia, 'There is not such a Pickpocket in the whole Quad', to which the footnote is 'A cant Word for a Prison'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; by 1794, current in U.S.A.—see qua; Leverage, 1925, repeats it, but it had long been † in U.S.A.—2. A horse: 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747; not c., but s. or coll. Short for quadruped.

(U.S.A.); † by 1887 (Baumann). Lit., a quacking thing.

quad, adj. In, e.g.:—

quad cull. See quod cull.

quad strass or Quad Strass, 'a prison', occurs several times in No. 7, Twenty-Five Years in Seventeen Prisons, 1903 (e.g., at p. 34). Quad is quod; but what of strass? Perhaps it = Ger. Strasse, a street: cf. s. Queer Street.

quag. 'Unsafe; not reliable; not to be trusted': 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. Perhaps ex S.E. quaggy, 'shaky underfoot', 'flabby'; but cf. quay.

quail. An old maid: 1859, Matsell; app. English by 1890 (B & L); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'Quails are supposed to be very amorous' (B & L); in C. 17 England a quail was a prostitute. But Irwin's explanation is more probable—'most [old maids] are easily frightened by tramps or beggars'.—2. Hence, a girl: U.S.A.: C. 20. Hargan, 1935.

quaking(-)chete. See quacking cheat.—2. (Always q. cheat.) A calf; a sheep: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell—but was it not † by 1820? Ex their pronounced trembling when they are perturbed.

qualley worker. A bum, a beggar: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Origin? A perversion of galley worker?

quandong. A prostitute: Australian: C. 20. Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939, 'In this crowd of low heels, quandonges and ripperty men, she looked at her ease and yet not of them'. Named 'after the fruit—soft on the outside, a hard centre': Sidney J. Baker, letter of Aug. 3, 1946.

quarantine. An enforced wait or delay: tramps': since ca. 1918. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'As when a man is thrown from a train and forced to wait at a water tank or town for a later one'.

quare is a very rare form of—? a misprint for—queer, adj. (John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753: see frisk, v., 2), and queer, adv.

quarren is a misprint, in the 1735 ed. of The Triumph of Wit, for:— quar(r)om(e)s or quarron(s). 'Quaromes, a body,' Harman, 1566; ibid., 'Bene Lightmans to thy quarromes', i.e., good morning to you!; 1608–9, Dekker, 'The Canters Dietionarie' in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'Quaromes, a body'; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, enlarges—'Quarroms, the body, or armes, or backe'; 1641, R. Brome, A Joviall Crew, 'To comfort the Quarron'; 1665, R. Head (quarron); 1676, Coles, 'Quarron, c. a body'; 1688, Holmes (quaromes and quarrons); 1698, B.E. (quarron); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (quarron and quarrons); 1714, Alex. Smith; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (quarron); 1785, Grose (quarromes and quarron); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (quarroms); 1848, Sinks of London (id.); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), as quarroom; † by 1870. Prob. ex carogne, a Norman-Picard form of charogne, 'a carcase', itself ex a Low L. form of caro (genitive caronis), 'flesh'.—

2. Hence, almost tautologically as in B.E. (at fib), 1698, 'Fib the Cove's quarrons . . . c. Beat the Man'; † by 1870.

quarrow is an error, or a misprint, in Potter, 1797, for the preceding.

quarter is an occ. spelling, ? orig. c., of quatre in dicing; see quater. G. Walker, 1552. In Matsell, 1859, quarter and quatre (pron. quater or quarter) are given as = 4.

quarter, v. To receive a part of (the profits): 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Cf. end.

quarter piece. A quarter-ounce of narcotics: since ca. 1930. See piece, 4.

quarter pot. A drunkard: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on sot; prob. a corruption of quart pot.

quarter stretch; sometimes shortened to quarter. A three-months' term of imprisonment, or a sentence thereto: 1909, Ware, ' . . . "Saucy Sal's got a quarter with hard" '; extant. See stretch, n., 3.

quartereen, 'a farthing', is not c., but parlyaree. H, 1859. A transformation of quarter. Contrast:—

quarterer, 'four', is not c., but parlyaree. H, 1859, at saltee, has: 'Quarterer saltee, fourpence'. Ex It. quattro, four.

quatern as used by Awdeley in 1562: 'The XXV Orders of Knaves, otherwise called a quarterne of Knaves': is merely a special application of a term current in S.E. as early as C. 16.

quash. To kill (a person): 1859, Matsell; † by 1918. Ex S.E. quash, 'to annul; to destroy (a thing); to crush (a movement)'.

quatch. 'To betray secrets,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. quack and quag.

quater or cater is a semi-c., semi-illiterate spelling and pronunciation of the quatre (4) of dicing.

quay. 'Unsafe, not to be trusted': since ca. 1860: 1890, B & L; 1902, F & H; † by 1920. 'Dutch kwaed, bad, etc.' (B & L); the usual spelling is kwaad; cf. quag.

quean. This S.E. word ('a harlot') has by its associations been occ. classified as c.: cf. Robert Greene, The Blacke Bookes Messenger, 1592, 'Not a whore or queane about the towne but they know, and can tell you her marks, and where and with whom she hosts'.—2. Hence, a passive homosexual: in Australia, since ca. 1880 (c. until ca. 1900): whence, ca. 1905, to the U.S.A., where, esp. in the Pacific States, it ranks as c. Concerning San Quentin, where he was an inmate, David Lamson writes, 'We did hear startling tales, from both cons and guards, of "family" life, of marriage ceremonies, of fights with knives for the favours of some "quean", as the perverts are called in prison' (We Who Are About to Die, 1935); Ersine, 1933, defines it as 'a male sexual pervert' and spells it queen. It passed to Britain, in 1915, via the Australian soldiers; and sometimes it is, there, spelt queen (cf. queenie), as in John Worby, The Other Half, 1937; 1938, Castle; 1939, Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep, where it is spelt queen; 1940, Leo. L. Stanley (like Castle, he speaks of San Quentin); extant.

quear cull. See queer cull.

quee is a misprint for quod, n.: 1735 ed. of The Triumph of Wit.

quee down! Shut up!: mostly convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. I.e., 'quiet down!'; cf. English s. on the q.t., on the quiet.

queen. See quean, 2.—2. 'A young woman, usually a pretty one,' Ersine, 1933: U.S.A.: by 1939, s.

Queen Elizabeth. 'A queen Elizabeth in her mauley, that is, the key of the street door in her hand': 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; 1801, Col. George Hanger, Life, Adventures, and Opinions; 1902, F & H; † by 1930. Perhaps with a pun on betty.

queenie; esp. as term of address. A passive homosexual: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'Queenie was looking prim': also Am.—Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942. By 1945, low s. everywhere. Ex queen, 2.

Queen's bus; — carriage. A prison van: ca. 1880–1902. Baumann, 1887 (carriage); 1890, B & L (bus). Ex the V.R. on the van; 'the V.R. . . . is also interpreted by its habitual occupants as standing for Virtue Rewarded,' say B & L.

Queen's Head Inn, the. A ca. 1837–90 variant of the King's Head Inn. (F & H, 1896.)

Queen's pictures. (See also King's pictures.) Money; or rather, coin: ca. 1837–1901. Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, 1857.

queer, n. 'False counterfeit money': 1777, Anon., Thieving Detected, where it is spelt quere; 1810, Sessions Papers; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Queer, or Queer-Bit, base money'; 1821, W. T. Moncrieff, Tom and Jerry; 1827, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, III, 'Newton had asked them for a score of queer'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1886, A. Pinkerton (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; 1893, Langdon W. Moore (U.S.A.); 1898, A. Binstead; 1899, J. Flynt; 1901, Flynt; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1909, Ware; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, Leverage; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; 1928, Chicago May; 1928, John O'Connor; May 9, 1931, Flynn's, Lawrence M. Maynard; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; 1937, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime; June 9, 1946, anon. letter, affirming Canadian currency, which it had possessed throughout C. 20 and prob. since mid-C. 19. Ex the adj.—2. 'A term made use of by the dealers in soot, signifying a substitute imposed upon the unwary, . . . inferior in point of value 4d per bushel': 1819, P. Egan, Boxiana, II; app. † by 1890. On the borderland between c. and trade s.—3. Imprisonment; app. only as tip (one) queer or tip the queer: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Progress', 'The knowing bench had tipp'd her buzer queer'; † by 1900. Perhaps with an allusion to sense 1.—4. (Ex sense 1.) A counterfeit bank-note: U.S.A.: Jan. 9, 1847, The National Police Gazette, '“Bogus” is base coin, “queer” is counterfeit paper'; 1859, Matsell; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'Mr Applegate took the $10 “queer”'; 1872, E. Crapsey; 1881, The Man Traps of New York; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; ob.—5. A homosexual: U.S.A.: 1935, Hargan; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall; by 1940, low s. Ex the c. > low s. adj. queer, 'homosexual'.

queer, v. To cheat: ca. 1773, Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles), 'We have . . . queer'd the flats at thrums' (a game); 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, where the sense may be 'to corrupt', 'to make a criminal of (by cheating)'; ca. 1819, The Young Prig; 1823, Byron, Don Juan, XI (xix), 'Queer a flat'; 1845, R. H. Barham; by 1864, low s. Prob. ex the adj.—2. Hence, to puzzle, to confound, esp. with a false story: 1796, Grose, 3rd ed. (therefore, existing in 1791), 'To Queer. To puzzle or confound. I have queered the old full bottom; i.e., I have puzzled the judge'; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, II ('to confound'); 1823, Bee; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was low s.—3. To hinder a person, check or spoil an enterprise, prevent a person from succeeding: 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Queer it, to spoil it'; 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1826, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–1833, II; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; by 1875, low s. (T. Frost, Circus Life); by 1890, gen. s. in England; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Queered. Disappointed'; 1933, Ersine, 'A mark beefed and queered the game'; ob. by 1945 in U.S.A.—4. To steal: 1822 (see queer a stilt).

queer, adj. 'Quier, nought'—i.e., of no account, worthless: 1566, Harman; ibid., 'I cutt it is quyer buose, I bousd a flagge the laste dark mans. I say it is small and naughtye drynke. I dranke a groate there the last night.—But bouse there a bord, and thou shalt have beneship. But drinke there a shyllinge, and thou shalt have very good'; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 'Quire, this word is always taken in il sense, for naught'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, '“Quire”, which is wicked or knavish', hence inimical, as in ibid., 'Quire Cuffin'—a justice of the peace—'So quire to ben Coves watch' (so hard on good fellows)—and, in the glossary, 'Quier. . . . Wicked or roguish'; 1676, Coles, 'Quire, Queer, c. base, roguish'; 1688, Holme (quier); 1698, B.E., 'Queere, c. base, Roguish, naught' (inferior); 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'Cunning . . . Queer'—elsewhere than in the glossary, Shirley spells it quere; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 'Small, not Good'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (as for B.E.); 1734, Vol. I of Select Trials, 1734–35, footnote on p. 249, 'Queer, Is a general Epithet to express Dislike, or signify any ill Quality'; 1738, Ordinary of Newgate's Account ('An Account of Henry Fluellin'), of a sham or inferior ring; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Victuals not fit to eat, Quer Peck'; 1785, Grose, 'Queer, or quire [† by 1750 at latest], base, roguish, bad, naught [of no account], worthless . . . it also means odd, uncommon', these last two nuances being s., orig. low; 1799 (see half a bean: nuance 'counterfeit'); 1809, Andrewes, 'Base, doubtful, good-for-nothing, bad'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Bad; counterfeit; false'; 1818, Sessions Papers; 1823, Bee, 'Counterfeit'; 1848, Sinks of London, plagiarizing Andrewes; but ob. by 1830 and † by 1860—except in the sense 'counterfeit' (and in the phrases in which that sense is present). The origin is uncertain; but Hotten is prob. right in his supposition that 'it was brought into this country by the gipsies from Germany, where quer signifies “cross” or “crooked”'.—2. Hence, stolen: prob. C. 18—mid-19: 1826, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, II, trial of John Hayes, (witness) 'It was not the first time I heard the word queer—it means stolen'; ob.—3. Not to be trusted, wrong: U.S.A.: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth; extant.—4. Crooked; criminal: U.S.A.: since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; extant. Prob. ex senses 1, 2.—5. (Of men or boys) sexually degenerate: since ca. 1910 in U.S.A., and since ca. 1915 in the British Empire; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; by 1935, s. everywhere. Cf. senses 1, 3, 4.

queer, adv. Badly, poorly, dishonestly: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Eat little, Peck quer'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'He kaps quare'; he swears false'; 1832, trial of Samuel Day (Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824-34, IX), 'I had a 5*l.* note that was got queer' (dishonestly); by 1850, low s. Ex the adj.

queer, dealer in. An utterer, i.e., a passer, of counterfeit money: C. 19. See queer, n., 1.

queer, in. Regarded with suspicion or disfavour by the police: late C. 19-20; by 1940, low s. Partridge, 1937.

queer, on the. Living dishonestly: 1910, Charles E. B. Russell, Young Gaoi-Birds, 'Convinced that he could get along as well "on the queer"', i.e., by thieving, as he could by keeping straight'; extant. See queer, adj.—2. Engaged in making counterfeit money: U.S.A.: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. See queer, n., 1.

queer, shove the; shove queer. To pass counterfeit money: 1859, Matsell (s.q.); 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service (s. the q.); 1881, The Man Traps of New York; 1887, Baumann; 1903, F & H; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1935, Hargan; extant. See queer, n., 1.

queer, shover of the. A passer of counterfeit money: 1872. See shover of the queer.

queer, tip the. To pass sentence of imprisonment on: since ca. 1820; † by 1940. Cf. queer, in.

queer a stilt. 'To steal a pocket-book': 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoul—but is not stilt an error for lil?

queer amen-curler. A 'drunken parish clerk', Andrewes, 1809—so too in Sinks of London, 1848: prob. ca. 1750-1850. I.e., queer, adj., and s. amen-curler, a parish clerk.

queer bail. One who gives himself as surety for a bail but does not possess the requisite money; bail given in these circumstances: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1785, Grose, 'Insolvent sharpers who make a profession of bailing persons arrested'; 1809 (see queer bid); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1859, H, 'Nearly obsolete'; † by 1900. Here queer = worthless: see queer, adj., 1.

queer beak. A severe justice or judge: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. Lit., a bad magistrate.

queer bid is, in George Andrewes's Dict., 1809, a misprint (or an error) for queer bail.

queer bird. (See also quire bird, the earliest form of the term.) To Awdeley's definition in 1562, to be seen at quire bird, add the information given by Dekker in The Belman of London, 1608: 'Your Quire Birdes are suche as have sung in such cages as Newgate or a country Gaole, and having their bells given them to fly, they seeke presently to build their nests under some honest mans rooffe, not with intent to bring him in any profit, but onely to put themselves into money or apparell (though it be by filching) and then they take their flight'; 1698, B.E., 'Queere Birds, c. such as having got loose, return to their old Trade of Roguing and Thieving'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.)—but was not the term † by 1820?

queer bit. Bad money, i.e., counterfeit coin: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, in his section (Vol. II) on 'queer-bit makers'; 1785, Grose, by implication; 1809, Andrewes (queer bitt); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1890, B & L; prob. † by 1905. See queer, adj., and bit, n., 1.

queer-bit maker. 'It is a cant word for Coiner' of counterfeit: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, where there is an interesting section on this malefactor; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1859, H; by 1909 (Ware), police s. See the preceding.

queer bitch, 'an odd out of the way fellow' (Grose, 1785): not c., but s. Hero, queer bears its s. sense ('odd, uncommon'), not its c. sense ('of the underworld', 'inferior').

queer blowen (or -ing). 'Ugly wench': 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; prob. current ca. 1700-1880. See queer, adj. + blowen.

queer bluffer. B.E., 1698, 'Queere-bluffer, c. a sneaking, sharpening, Cut-throat Ale-house [keeper] or Inn-keeper', repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'The master of a public-house, the resort of rogues and sharpers, a cut-throat inn or ale-house keeper'; 1809, Andrewes, Dict., where it is misprinted q. buffer—an error repeated in Sinks of London, 1848; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'The keeper of a rum-shop that is the resort of the worst kind of rogues, and who assists them in various ways'; app. † by 1900.

queer blunt. Counterfeit money: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; † by 1890. See the elements.

queer booze. 'Quire bowse bad drinke,' Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Bad Drink, Quer Bues or [Quer] Suck'; 1809, Andrewes, 'Queer bowse—bad beer'; 1848, Sinks of London (q. booze); † by 1900.

queer bub. Bad liquor: ca. 1770-1840. Andrewes, 1809 (q. bubb).

queer buffer (Andrewes, 1809) is an error for queer bluffer.—2. A cur (dog): 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900.

queer bung. 'Queere-bung, c. an empty Purse,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1870. See queer, adj. + bung.

queer bury, defined by Matsell, 1859, as 'an empty purse', is an error for the preceding.

queer chant. A false name or address: 1823, Egan's Grose (see chant, n., 4); † by 1920. See chant, n.

queer checker or player queer(-)checker. A swindler that defrauds country theatres by tricking, and then making an accomplice of, the woman entrusted with the checks or tickets: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (a swindling door-keeper at a theatre); † by 1870. See queer, adj.

queer(-)checking. The illicit practice of the queer checker: ca. 1770-1850. George Parker, 1781.

queer chum. 'A suspicious companion': 1809, Andrewes. Not c., but s.

queer clout. 'A sorry, coarse, ordinary or old Handkerchief, not worth Nimming,' B.E., 1698 (queere-clout); so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1860.

queer coal. See queer cole.

queer cog. See cog, n., 3.

queer cole. 'Queere cole, c. Clipt, Counterfeit, or Brass Money,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Naughty Money: Quere Cole'; 1785, Grose, by implication; † by 1890. See queer, adj. + cole.

queer-cole fencer. 'Queere cole-fencer, c. a Receiver and putter off'—sc. of—'false Money', B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'A putter off or utterer of bad money', i.e., a distributor of counterfeit: 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); app. † by 1900. See the preceding entry + fencer.

queer-cole maker. 'Queere cole-maker, c. a false-Coyner,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'A master of bad money', by which he prob. means the owner or the manager of a counterfeit-coin-making business; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1872, Geo. P. Burnham (U.S.A.), 'Manufacturer of bogus bank-notes'; † by 1900 in England, by 1910 in U.S.A. Lit., a bad-money maker.

queer cove. A rogue: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, where it is spelt Quier-Cove; 1698, B.E. (queere-cove); 1707, J. Shirley (quere cove); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1734, C. Johnson, 'A Quier Cove, a profest Rogue'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'A rogue, villain' and 'sturdy resolute man' (from the viewpoint of criminals); 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1902 (F & H). See queer, adj., and cove.—2. A poor man, i.e., a man with very little or no money: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, where it is spelt quer cove; † by 1830. See queer, adj., 1.—3. An 'ill-principled man': 1809, Andrewes; 1836, The Individual (see crack, n., 2); † by 1900. This sense derives naturally ex sense 1.—4. A turnkey: 1848, Sinks of London: this sense is suspect.

queer cramp-ring; usually pl. 'Quier cramp-ringes, boltes or fetters,' Harman, 1566; ibid., guyar cramprings; prob. † by 1780, at latest. See queer, adj., and cramp-rings.

queer cuffin. 'The quier cuffyn, the Justicer of peace,' Harman, 1566 also as, ibid., in the dialogue, 'Yonder dwelleth a quere cuffen, it were beneship to myll hym. Yonder dwelleth a hoggishe and choyrlyshe man, it were very well donne to robbe him'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light (see quot'n at cove); R. Head, The English Rogue, makes it clear that the canters speak of a justice of the peace as 'quire cuffin' because to them he is 'a wicked, knavish, or foolish man'; 1676, Coles (justice of the peace: cuffin quire); 1688, Holme (quier cuffing); both senses appear thus curtly in B.E., 1698: 'Queere-cuffin, c. a Justice of Peace; also a Churl', B.E. also noting the variant cuffin-quire; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1728, D. Defoe (cuffin queere); 1785, Grose (both senses); 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford, 'Brought before the queer cuffin', glossed as 'magistrate'—but the term was prob. † by 1800 or so, beak being the usual C. 19–20 term for a magistrate. The former sense occurs occ. in the form cuffin queer; e.g., Dekker, Villanies Discovered, 1620, 'Duds and Cheates thou oft hast wonne, | Yet the Cuffin Quire coulds shunne'; R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665, hyphenates it ('Cuffin-Quire'). See queer, adj., and cuffin.

queer cull. 'Queere-cull, c. a Fop, or Fool, a Codshead; also a shabby poor Fellow,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1860. See queer, adj., and cull, n., 1.—2. 'Quear-Cull, alias one that puts off bad Money,' C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open—but the term was † by 1800, having been superseded by smasher. Cf. queer, n.; cull, n., 4.

queer degen. B.E., 1698, 'Queere-degen, c. an Iron, Steel, or Brass-hilted sword', a definition in which there should be a hyphen after both 'Iron' and 'Steel'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1809, Andrewes, Dict., where it is misprinted q. dogen—copied in Sinks of London, 1848; † by 1890. See the elements.

queer diver. 'Queere diver, c. a bungling Pick-pocket,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1830. Queer, adj. + diver.

queer dogen. See queer degen, ref. of 1809.

queer doxy. 'Queere-doxy, c. a jilting Jade, a sorry shabby Wench,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1860. Queer, adj. + doxy.—2. Hence, a clumsy woman: 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890.

queer drawers. 'Queere-drawers, c. Yarn, coarse Worsted, ordinary or old Stockings,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1860. Queer, adj. + drawers.

queer dubs. Picklock keys: 1781, Sessions Papers, No. V, Part iii, p. 227; † by 1890. See dubs.

queer duke. 'Queere duke, c. a poor decayed Gentleman; also a lean, thin, half-starving fellow,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1830. See queer, adj., and duke.

queer 'em; queerum. A gallow-platform: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Triumph', 'The queerum queerly smear'd with dirty black'; 1823, Bee, 'Queer 'em—the gallows or drop'; † by 1900. Lit., a bad one (queer 'un); or a thing that queers 'em.

queer flash. See flash, n., 1. (B.E., 1698.)

queer flicker. See flicker, n.: B.E.

queer fun. 'Queere fun, c. a bungling Cheat or Trick,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1820. See queer, adj., and fun, n.

queer-gammed. Bandy-legged; (rarely) spindly-legged; tottering on one's feet: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Though saucy queer-gamm'd smutty muns | Was once my fav'rite man . . .'; app. † by 1900. Queer, adj. + gam, n., 1.

queer gams. 'If a man has bow legs, he has queer gams, gams being cant for legs': 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; † by 1900. Cf. the prec.

queer gill. 'Suspicious fellow,' say Andrewes, 1809, and Sinks of London, 1848; perhaps 'fellow worthy of suspicion' is what they mean; nevertheless A. Mayhew, 1857, corroborates Andrewes's definition: app. ca. 1790–1860 (or 1870). See the elements.—2. In Ainsworth, Rookwood, 1834, it seems, however, to mean 'inferior criminal'—a sense that is suspect.

queer glim. 'Queer glymm—bad light; farthing rush-light': 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1902 (F & H). See glim, n., 2 and 3.

queer glimstick. See glimstick. (B.E., 1698.) queer harman beak is a variant (Sinks of London, 1848) of:—

queer harman beck, 'a strict beadle,' Andrewes, 1809: prob. ca. 1700–1840.

queer hen. 'a bad woman' (Andrewes, 1809), is on the border-line of c. and s.; prob.—until ca. 1820, at least—it was c.

queer it. See queer, v., 3.

queer Joseph. See Joseph. (B.E.)

queer ken. 'Quyerkyn, a pryson house,' Harman, 1566; ibid., quyerken; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'Ken, signifying a house, they call a prison, a Quier ken, thats to say, an ill house'; 1610, Rowlands (quire kcn and quirken); 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Till Crampings [sic] quire tip Cove liis hire, | And Quire ken do them catch'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E. (queere-ken); 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1890.

Queer, adj. + ken.—2. A poor house; a house not worth robbing: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1809, Andrewes, '(A) gentleman's house without the furniture'—so too in Sinks of London, 1848; † by 1890.

queer-ken hall. Prison: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All (see the quot'n at cly, v.; where he spells it quirken hall): note, however, that this may not be a genuine c. term, the elaboration of queer ken, 'prison', having perhaps arisen owing to the exigencies of rhyme.

queer kicks. 'Queere-kicks, c. coarse, ord'nary or old Breeches,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'A bad pair of breeches'; 1809, Andrewes, Dict., where it is misprinted qucer nicks—an error religiously copied in Sinks of London, 1848; † by 1902 (F & H). See the elements.

queer lambs. Falsified dice: 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. See lambs.

queer lamp. See lamp, n.

queer lap. Bad liquor: ca. 1720–1840 (Andrewes, 1809). See lap, n., 2.

queer lay. 'A dangerous adventure' is the gloss in Select Trials, 1734, and in John Villette, The Annals of Newgate, 1776, on the report of a trial held in Jan. 1722–3, for which date the term is valid; app. † by 1890. Queer, adj. + lay, n., 2.

queer lock. A bad matter, a difficulty; poverty: C. 18–early 19. (Potter, 1797.) See lock, n.

queer lully. 'Ill-deformed child,' says Andrewes, 1809; this may be correct (cf. the note at lully, 2), but the term is not free of suspicion. If it be genuine, then it was current ca. 1790–1850. (Its recurrence in Sinks of London Laid Open does not reinforce its genuineness.) See lully.

queer-maker. 'A poor old "dago" grafter, a queer-makor (counterfeiter)'—maker of counterfeit money: Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; extant. See queer, n., 1.

queer mort. A woman, a harlot, that is syphilitic: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Quier-Mort . . . A pocky jade'; 1698, B.E., 'Queere-mort, c. a dirty drab, a jilting Wench, a Pocky Jade'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'A diseased strumpet'; † by 1870. See queer, adj., and mort.—2. 'A poor Woman' (i.e., the opposite of a rich woman): 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, where it is spelt quer mort; † by 1830.

queer nab. 'Queere-nab, c. a Felt, Carolina, Cloth, or ord'nary Hat, not worth whipping off a Man's Head,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'A felt, or other bad (inferior) hat'; † by 1830. Queer, adj. + nab, n., 3.

queer nabs. A shabby genteel fellow: 1823, Bee; † by 1890. Ex Captain Queer-Nabs.

queer nicks. See queer kicks, ref. of 1809.

queer-ogled. Squinting: 1823, Jon. Bee; † by 1900. Ex the next.

queer ogles. Squinting eyes: prob. ca. 1790–1900. George Andrewes, 1809; 1848, Sinks of London. See the elements.

queer on—queer to, to be. To rob (a person): 1902, F & H; ob. See queer, adj., 1.

queer on (a person), put the. To cheat; to baffle: 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; app. † by 1902 (F & H). Cf. queer, v., 2 and 3, and n., 3.

queer one. A sham piece of jewellery: 1738 (see queer, adj., 1); † by 1830. See queer, adj.—2. A counterfeit coin: 1740, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account (Joseph Parker), 'Instead of returning the good Guinea again, they used to give a Queer One'; † by 1890. Cf. queer, n.

queer patter. A foreign language: ca. 1800–60. Andrewes, 1809, 'Talking in a foreign language'; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Foreign talk'. Queer, adj. + patter, n., 2 and 3.

queer peeper. 'Queere-peepers, c. old-fashion'd, ord'nary, black-fram'd, or common Looking-glasses,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1830. Queer, adj. + peeper, 1.—2. 'Poreblind [sic], or dim-sighted Eyes, in Opposition to Rum Peepers, beautiful Eyes,' A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1830. Cf. peepers, 2.

queer place, the. Gaol: since ca. 1925. James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936, "'Yes," he said . . . with obvious pride, "this whistle [i.e., suit] I got on's a bit different from the old grey one they dish you out with back in the queer place'. Cf. awful place.

queer plunger. 'Queer plungers, cheats who throw themselves into the water in order that they might be taken up by some of their accomplices, who carry them to one of the houses appointed by the humane society for the recovery of drowned persons, where they are rewarded by the society, with a guinea each, and the supposed drowned person pretending to be driven to that extremity by great necessity, is also frequently sent away with a contribution in his pocket': 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. Lit., dishonest plungers (into water).

queer pops. Inferior pistols: 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; but prob. current only ca. 1710–1830. See pops.

queer prad. A broken-kneed horse: prob. current ca. 1750–1860: 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London. See queer, adj., and prad.

queer prancer. 'Queere-prancer, c. a Founder'd Jade, an ord'nary low-priz'd Horse,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1900. Queer, adj. + prancer.—2. 'A cowardly or faint-hearted Horse-stealer,' A Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; † by 1860.—3. 'A foundered whore', F & H, 1902; a mistake arising out of B.E.'s definition.

queer prog. Bad food: ca. 1690–1840. (E.g., George Andrewes, 1809.) See queer, adj., and prog, n.

queer rag. 'Ill-looking money; bad', i.e., counterfeit money: 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. See rag, n., 2.—2. A bad farthing: 1809, Andrewes; † by 1890—if, indeed, it ever existed. See rag, n., 1.

queer ridge ; queer wedge. Resp. counterfeit gold money and counterfeit silver money: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). See queer, n., 1, and ridge and wedge.

queer roost, dorse (or doss)—or sleep—(up)on the. To pretend to sleep, in the manner described in the next entry: 1801, Colonel George Hanger, Life, Adventures, and Opinions, 'Dorsing a darkey upon the queer roost'; † by 1900. Cf. the next.

queer rooster, says George Parker in A View of Society, 1781, 'is a fellow who gets into a house of rendezvous for thieves, pretends to be asleep, and listens to their conversation in order to discover it to some Justice, or to inform for a reward'; the crooks view a stranger asleep with suspicion and beat him out of the house; 1785, Grose, '... Overhears the conversation of thieves in night cellars'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L, who classify it as American; prob. † by 1900 in England, by 1910 in U.S.A. He roosts like a bird and is queer.

queer rotan. 'Bad, ill-looking coach'; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; prob. current ca. 1750–1850. See queer, adj., and rotan.

queer-rums. 'Literally "bad good", or rubbing rough and smooth; confounding talk': 1823, Bee; † by 1900. Queer, adj. + rum, n., 1.

queer screen. A counterfeit bank-note: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'The cove was twisted for smashing queer screens; the fellow was hanged for uttering forged bank-notes'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1859, H; 1869, J. Greenwood; 1887, Baumann; 1902, F & H; † by 1930 in Britain, † by 1937 in U.S.A. (Irwin). See screen and queer, adj., 1.

queer-shover is a variant of shover of the queer, q.v. It occurs, e.g., in No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; in Ware, Passing English, 1909; in Flynn's, Jan. 16, 1926; John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928; Eagle, 1933; extant.

queer skin. See skin, n.

queer soft. A forged bank-note; forged bank-notes, collectively: 1822, Pierce Egan, The Life of Samuel Denmore Hayward ... the Modern Macheath; 1859, H, loosely 'Bad money'; 1890, B & L; slightly ob. See queer, adj., and soft, 1.

Queer Street. 'Wrong. Improper. Contrary to one's wish. It is queer street, a cant phrase, to signify that it is wrong or different to our wish,' Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811; app. the sole record. This phrase (see queer, adj.) seems to have been e. of the period 1800–40 (or so); the derivative to be in Queer Street is s., and seems to have arisen in the early 1830's.

queer stuff. Stolen goods: C. 20: Feb. 3, 1928, Flynn's, John Wilstach ('The Gun Moll'), 'Queer stuff has to go through a lot of hands'; extant. See the elements.

queer suck. See queer booze.

queer swag. See swag, 2.

queer tat(t)s. Dice that have been falsified: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; app. † by 1890. See queer, adj., and tats.

queer the stifler. To avoid the gallows: prob. ca. 1780–1900: 1818, Scott, The Heart of Midlothian, 'I think Handie Dandie and I may queer the stifler for all that is come and gone'; 1890, B & L. See queer, v.; stifler, for it is a stifler.

queer thimble. A valueless watch: ca. 1790–1860. Andrewes, 1809. See thimble.

queer to. See queer on.

queer tol. 'A Queer-Tol, e. a Brass or Steel-hilted or ord'nary Sword,' B.E., 1698: app. current ca. 1680–1780. See tol and contrast rum tol.

queer topping. 'Queere-topping, e. sorry Com-modes or Head-dresses,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; app. † by 1830. See queer, adj.; topping, because for the head.

queer vinegar. 'Bad, worn out woman's cloak': 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. See queer, adj., and vinegar.

queer wedge. A large and, presumably, cheap and cheap-looking buckle: 1796 (therefore existing at least as early as 1791), Grose, 3rd ed.; † by 1890. Ex queer, adj. + wedge, silver.—2. See queer ridge.

queer whid; usually pl. (See, too, cut queer whids.) An unfavourable, a violent or unkind, an evil word; a refusal: 1566, Harman, 'To eutte quyre whyddes, to give evell wordes or evell language'; B.E.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; † by 1830. See queer, adj., and whid, n.

queer whidding. 'What a quire whidding keepe you, what a scolding keep you!': Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610; † by 1820. Cf. the pree. entry.

queer whids. See queer whid.

queere. See queer, adj.

queerie or queery. 'In every prison are many sex pervers. We know them the minute they step through the front gates on their way into prison. They are known as the "Queens", the "Fairies", the "Queeries", and by other names,' Leo L. Stanley, Men at Their Worst, 1940: San Quentin: since ca. 1920.

queerly. Malevolently; criminally: 1698, B.E. (at queere), 'How queerly the Cull Touts! e. how roguishly the Fellow looks'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725, and in Grose, 1785; † by 1840. Ex queer, adj.—2. 'Poorly; little: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'The keller [money] tumbles in but queerly'; app. † by 1890.

queers is a collective plural of queer, n., 1: 1872 (see queersman); extant.

queersman. 'A regular professional counterfeiter' (Burnham): Feb. 21, 1846, The National Police Gazette; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'Fred Biebusch steadily followed the traffic of the "queersman" in the west and southwest'; ob. See queer, n., 1.

queerum. See queer 'em.

queery. See queerie.

quek! Look out! be careful! beware!: 1925, Leverage; extant. A thinning of quack?

quemar! Burn the fellow!: 1859, Matsell; † by 1900. I.e., Sp. quemar, 'to burn'.

quer. See queer, adj. and adv.

quere. See queer, adj., 2nd ref. at 1707, and queer, n., first ref.

querier, 'a chimney-sweep who calls from house to house', is not e., but s.—or possibly even S.E.

querry or quetry, the former being the more usual form. Robert Greene, The Second Conny-catching, 1592, in his list of 'prigging' (horse-stealing) terms, mentions 'The Suerties, Quetries', and in the description of 'prigging' has this passage: 'The prigar when he hath stolne a horse, & hath agreed ... to sel his horse, bringeth to the toulter'—or toll-collector—'two honest men . . . & they not onely affirmo, but offer to depose, that they know the hors to be his . . . , and these perjurde knaves, beo commonly old Knights of the post . . . and are wrongly called querries'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; app. † by 1640 or so. Perhaps cf. the † faleonry term, quarry, 'act of attacking prey'.

question lay, the. An underworld dodge, described first by Alex. Smith in The History of the Highwaymen, 1714, thus, 'Before Moll Hawkins projected Shop-lifting, she went upon the Question-Lay, which is putting herself into a good handsome Dress, like some Exchange Girl' (a shop-girl at 'the New Exchange' or Stock Exchange), 'then she takes an empty Band-box in her Hand, and passing for a Milliner's or Sempstress's 'Prentice, she goes early to a Person of Quality's House, and knocking at the Door, she asks the Servant if the Lady is stirring yet; for if she was, she had brought homo, according to order, the Suit of Knots, (or what else the Devil puts in her Head) which her Ladyship had bespoke over Night; then the Servant going up Stairs to acquaint the Lady of this Message, she in the mean time robs the House, and goes away without an Answer'; C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1734, C. Johnson, plagiarizing Alex. Smith; † by 1790. I.e., 'the questing lay' or trick.

queter. A quarter-dollar, 25 cents: tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. By perversion.

quick, on the. By stealing; stolen: mostly London: C. 20: 1934, Ex-Sgt B. Leeson, Lost London, 'He'd got a dozen boxes of butter "on the quick"': extant. More quickly than by honestly working for it.

quick sticks, cut. See cut quick sticks.

quickly grown, n. A false beard: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); ob.

quicunque vult. See Athanasian wench.

quid. A guinea: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, 'Let me Equip you with a Quid'; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Guinea. Ned, quid, or ridge'; by 1794, current in U.S.A. (Tufts); 1803, Sessions Papers; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, J. Burrowes; 1821, D. Haggart; 1823, Bee; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; † by 1840. Ex quid pro quo, something in exchange?—2. Hence, a pound: 1811, Lex. Bal., 'The swell tipped me fifty quid for the prad; the gentleman gave fifty pounds for the horse', the pl. being quid (not quids); 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.), low s.—3. (Also ex sense 1.) In pl., cash, money: see quids. Also as quid: May 1792, Sessions Papers, 'They expected to find many quid'.—4. A shilling: 1796, Grose, 3rd ed. But this sense is gravely suspect.—5. A dollar: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1900.

quid-fishing. Skilful thieving: 1909, Ware; † by 1940. It brings in 'quids'.

quids. Money: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'Quidds, Cash, or ready Money. Can ye tip me any Quidds? Can you lend me any Money?'; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1864, low s.—witness H, 3rd ed. Prob. ex quid, 1.

quien, 'a dog'—in Charles Reade's The Cloister and the Hearth, 1861—is not c. Cf. Fr. chien.

quier. See queer, adj. (Harman, 1566; Dekker, 1609; Head, 1665.)

quiff. A cheap prostitute: 1934, Rose; 1935, Hargan ('A girl'); 1942, BVB, 'A low or slovenly prostitute'; extant. Perhaps cf. quiff, 'a puff, a whiff', ex lavish use of cheap scent.

quiffing, 'rogering' (Grose, 2nd ed., 1788), i.e., copulation: almost certainly not c., but low s.

quill-pipes. 'Quillpipes . . . boots,' Henry Tufts, A Narrative, 1807, but valid for 1794 in U.S.A. and perhaps for as early as 1770 in England; † by 1890. Depreciatory.

quillpipes. See quill-pipes.

quilt, 'to thrash' (a person), is not c., as it is stated to be in Egan's Grose, 1823, but s. and dial. Ex s. quilt one's jacket.

quim, cop a. See cop . . .

quino, 'a poor deal' (Leverage, 1925): hardly c.! quinsey, v. "Quinsey the bloke while I frisk his sacks", choke the fellow while I pick his pockets,' Matsell, 1859; † by 1900. Ex the choking sensations caused by that affliction.

quinsey, hempen. Death by strangling on the gallows: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'Choaked by a hempen quinsey; hanged': possibly c., but very much more prob. s.—either low or journalistic. Cf. hearty choke.

quire. See queer, adj. Rowlands, 1610.—For all quire compounds (except quire bird) see the queer group.

quire bird. (See also queer bird.) 'A Quire bird,' says Awdeley in 1562, 'is one that came lately out of prison, and goeth to seeke service. He is commonly a stealer of Horses, which they', i.e. the underworld, 'terme a Priggar of Paulfreys'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London (see quot'n at queer bird); 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Quire or Choir Bird. A complete rogue, one that has sung in different choirs or cages, i.e. gaols'; † by 1890.

quisby, adj. Dirty, ragged: 1794 (implied in the next two entries); 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), 'Ragged, dirty, suspicious'; † by 1937 (Irwin)—prob. by 1890. Perhaps ex the notion of a queer person that one quizzes: by a fusion of ideas and a blend of forms. In English s., quisby means 'not quite right; queer; bankrupt'.

quisby cove. 'A mean fellow' (Tufts, A Narrative, 1807): U.S.A. (— 1794); † by 1890. Cf. English s. quisby, 'a queer card' or odd fellow, and see the prec. entry.

quisby gorge. 'A mean (dirty) fellow': U.S.A. (— 1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; † by 1890. Cf. the prec. and gorger, 2.

quiz, v.i. and v.t. To play the spy; to watch: since ca. 1890; † by 1940. Partridge, 1937. Ex dial.

quoad (Haggart, 1821) is a rare form of quod.

quockerwodger. 'A wooden image, pulled with a string': 1863, The Story of a Lancashire Thief; by 1864, according to H, 3rd ed., it was s. A fanciful term formed perhaps on quaver (or quiver) + dodger.

quod, n. In 1698, B.E. has 'Quod, c. Newgate; also any Prison, tho'—even if—'for Debt'; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 'Quod, a Prison'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1752, Fielding (quod); 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Piking to Quod; going to Gaol'—also as quad; 1773, Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles), 'We were sent to quod'; 1785, Grose; 1792, The Minor Jockey Club; 1794 (see qua); 1801, Sessions

Papers; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, J. Burrowes; 1823, Bee; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; 1831, Sessions Papers; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1848, Sinks of London; 1855, J. D. Burn, A Beggar-Boy; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1864, low s. Current in U.S.A. by 1845 (The National Police Gazette, Nov. 11); there, by 1880 no longer c. Prob. short for quadrangle.—2. Hence as adj.—a rare usage. T. H., A Glimpse of Hell, 1705, dedicates his poem 'To all my Quod Companions and Pretended Friends'.

quod, v. 'To quod a person is to send him to gaol': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III; 1827, John Wight, More Mornings at Bow Street; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1857, Punch, Jan. 31; 1859, H; by 1870, low s. Ex the n.

quod, in. See quod, n.

quod(-)cove. A gaoler or turnkey: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'The keeper of a gaol'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. See quod, n.; lit., a prison man.

quod(-)cull. 'The Quod-Cull, alias Turnkey,' C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718; 1753, Poulter, quod strass. See quad strass.

'A quad Cull . . .; a Gaoler'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. Lit., 'prison fellow'.

quodding. Imprisonment: 1812 (see next entry); 1827, J. Wight; ob. Ex quod, v.

quodding dues (concerned). 'Speaking of a man likely to go to jail, one will say, there will be quodding dues concerned': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1890. Ex quod, v., and dues.

quota. 'Snack, Share, Part, Proportion or Dividend. Tip me my Quota, c. give me my Part of the Winnings, Booty, Plunder, &c.,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; Potter, 1797, and Andrewes, 1809, misprint it quoto; 1823, Bee, 'Vulgo "kotey"'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890. Cf. end and whack.

quter is Ersine's c. variant (1933) of coll. quarter, a 25-cents piece.

quyaer, quyer, quyere, and quyre. See queer, adj. Harman has all four forms, which are rare after C. 16.

quyerken and quyerkyn. See queer ken. (Both in Harman.)

R

R.F.D. 'An itinerant addict who depends upon small town doctors for his drugs,' BVB: since ca. 1930. Ex 'rural free delivery of mail'.

R.O. See run-out.

R.R. mug. A railroad detective: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's (p. 640); extant. I.e., 'railroad'; mug, depreciatory.

rab. A till: since ca. 1930. Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938. Perhaps back-s. for bar, the bar—the counter—on which the till stands.

Rabbi is a frequent 'monniker' among the few Jewish tramps: tramps': C. 20. Stiff, 1931.

rabbit, n. 'A rowdy. "Dead rabbit", a very athletic rowdy fellow': 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L, James Maitland, 'A loafer or tough'; † by 1900. By antiphrasis or, as explained by B & L, 'From a gang of roughs who paraded New York in 1848, carrying a dead rabbit as a standard, the dead rabbit meaning a conquered enemy'—witness also Herbert Asbury, 'The Old-Time Gangs of New York' in The American Mercury, Aug. 1927.—2. (As the rabbit.) Liquor: Australian: 1895 (see ike); ob.

rabbit, v. To run away, esp. in a cowardly manner, and hide: 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece, 'Things started getting hot and he rabbitied to Mexico'; extant. A rabbit is both timorous and speedy.

rabbit(-)buyer. A receiver (of stolen goods) that deals chiefly in furs: C. 20. Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. See buyer; rabbit, depreciatively: cf. skins (furs).

rabbit-sucker. One who, with two or three confederates, goes bond with the rich young fool (rabbit) to be caught with 'purse-nets' (q.v.), the last being ultimately the sole effective taker-up of the goods, the gang having no money and no intention of losing any money that they may temporarily possess: ca. 1600–50, although the term may possibly have lingered on for another twenty or thirty years. Dekker, 1608–9. See ferreting.—2. Hence (?), ca. 1680–1870, an improvident young fellow 'taking up Goods upon Tick at excessive rates' (B.E., 1698); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890.—3. (Directly ex sense 1.) 'Rabbit-Suckers, is also a Name given to Pawnbrokers and Tally-men . . ., who by exorbitant Premiums, &c. impose upon, and take-in uncautious Prodigals, profuse Spendthrifts, or young, giddy-headed Heirs,' A New Canting Dict., 1725: a sense current ca. 1720–60.

race. To extort money; to seek it: from ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Especially applied to the methods of pimps and "gold diggers"': extant. Either ex the speedy methods (cf. English s., 'to rush a person'—to ask him for money, to charge him too much, etc.) or ex the gouge or hooked knife called a race (Irwin). And cf. racings.

Racehorse Charley (or -lie). Powdered narcotic: drug traffic: since ca. 1930. BVB. By personification.

races, be at the. To walk the streets as a prostitute: C. 20: by ca. 1935, also low s. Part-ridge, 1938. Semantics: fillies and filles-de-joie.

racings, vbl n. Passing a forged cheque; the practice of passing such cheques: since ca. 1930. Black, 1943.

rackaback, 'a gormagon' (see my Dict. of Slang): 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.: not c., but s.

racket. An underworld trick or means of livelihood: 1811, Lex. Bal. (see black-spice racket); 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Some particular kinds of fraud and robbery aro so termed, when called by their flash titles, and others Rig; as, the Letter-racket, the Order-racket; the Kid-rig; the Cat and Kitten-rig, &c., but all these terms depend upon the fancy of the speaker. In fact, any game may be termed a rig, racket, suit, slum, &c., by prefixing thereto the particular branch of fraud or depredation in question'; 1823, Egan's Grose, cribbingly; 1859, H, 'A dodge, manœuvre, exhibition'; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.), low s.—Ca. 1850, it > U.S. c.; by 1890, U.S. s.; by 1920, Standard American. That the term was adopted in Australia appears from Rolf Boldrewood's Robbery under Arms, 1881; in book, at I, 3. Perhaps ex S.E. racket, 'the whirl of society', 'excessive social excitement or dissipation' (O.E.D.), but more prob. ex racket, 'a din; a disturbance'.—2. Hence, a public dance, a ball, devised for the promoter's profit: U.S.A.: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'He drew his big income from a yearly ball. "He gives a racket," declared Whitey Dutch; "that's how Ike gets his dough"'; † by 1931 (Godfrey Irwin).

racket, in the. See in the racket.

racket, on the. See on the racket.

racket, work the. To cheat, to operate a swindle or practise extortion: 1895, J. W. Sullivan, Tenement Tales of New York; by 1900 or, at latest, 1905, it was low s., according to F & H, 1902. See racket.

racket guy. A racketeer; a professional crook: since ca. 1925. In, e.g., Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road, 1941. See racket.

racket(-)man. A thief, esp. of crockery or poultry; 1856, H. Mayhew, The Great World of London, p. 46 (crockery; poultry); 1902, F & H; app. † by 1930. Either from the noise the thief makes to cover the noise made by falling crockery or protesting fowls, or from the noise of the crockery or poultry.

racketeer, 'a criminal big shot': journalese, not c. Godfrey Irwin's comments on 'racket' and 'racketeer' are illuminating.

raclan. A married woman: 1839, Brandon (who classifies it as gypsy c.—by which he merely signifies Romany); 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxiii, 'Queering a raclan . . . looking like a respectable female'; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), misprints it rack-law; 1864, H, 3rd ed., 'Originally Gipsy, but now a term with English tramps'; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1902, F & H; † by 1930. Ex Romany raklo or racklo, a woman.

rad, n. and v., (to ride on) a bicycle, car, etc., and radder, 'the "rider"': not c., but s. Leverage, 1925.

Raddie. An Italian: since ca. 1925. F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938. Perhaps ex raddled, in ref. to the high colour of many, esp. Southern, Italians.

radiator. A large diamond: 1925, Leverage; extant. With a pun: it emits rays of light; ray-diator.

rafe, 'a pawnbroker's duplicate' (H, 1874), is not c., but Norwich s.

rag, n. A farthing: 1698, B.E., 'Not a Rag left, c. I have Lost or Spent, all my Monecy'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1890. A farthing, like a rag, is worth very little.—2. Hence, money; esp., paper money: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (at queer rag); 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Rag. Bank notes. Money in general. The cove has no rag; the fellow has no money'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I; 1823, Bee; 1824, Egan, Boxiana, IV, 651, where it is opposed to coin; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, H (a bank-note); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.).

'Rags. Paper money'; 1887, Henley (of a false bank-note); 1890, B & L; 1902, F & H; 1903, Clapin; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; by 1910, low s.—3. The sense 'the tongue' is not c., but low s. Cf. red rag, q.v.—4. (Ex sense 2.) A dollar: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1903, Sylva Clapin, Americanisms; app. † by 1920. Properly: a dollar bill, i.e. paper-money: see sense 2.—5. A woman; a girl: in reference to—and used at least as early as—ca. 1897, Anon., 'When Crime Ruled the Bowery', Flynn's, April 6, 1929, p. 538: U.S.A.: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, 'Within the limits of her clique, and it was not small, she was the "swiftest rag on the coast"'; 1903, Flynt, Ruderick Clowd; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'the rag Josie and I was chinnin' about it'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant—though slightly ob. Cf. English s. skirt, 'a woman, a girl'.—6. A flag: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; extant. Depreciative, dysphemistic.—7. Pl., rags: U.S.A., tramps' mostly: 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win, 'There was a grand jungle by a small, clean river where they boiled up their vermined clothes, or "rags" as they are always called'; extant. Pejorative.—8. Mostly in plural: cards other than the 'Court cards': card-sharpers': 1928, J. H. Ferrier, Crooks and Crime; extant.—9. Among confidence men, the rag is a stocks-and-shares swindle of a particularly clever kind, described in detail by Ex-Detective Percy J. Smith, Con Man, 1938; app. current since ca. 1920. Black, 1943, 'A confidence trick similar to the Pay Off—buying shares from a confederate'. Cf. sense 2.

rag, v. 'To divide or share; "let's rag it", or go rags, i.e., share it equally between us.—Norwich': 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1902, F & H; by 1930, †. Possibly Norwich c., but prob. Norwich s. Semantics: to tear into rags, or strips, i.e., into pieces.

rag-chewer. A story, tale, account, narrative: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, "'I s'pose you want to hear my rag-chewer now?"; rather ob. Ex chew the rag, q.v.

rag-front, 'a tent show; the banners and signs advertizing it', is circus and carnival s.—not c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

rag(-)gorger (or gorgy). 'Rag-Gorgy, a rich or monied man, but generally used in conversation when a particular gentleman, or person high in offices is hinted at; instead of mentioning his name, they say, the Rag-gorgy, knowing themselves to be understood by those they are addressing': 1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan's Grose, 1823; 1859, H, 'Rag Splawyer'—an error—'a rich man'; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1902 (F & H). Ex rag, n., 2 + gorger.

rag(-)head. An Oriental: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex the turbans some Orientals wear.

rag house. A tent: as much circus and carnival s. as c. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

rag-seeker. See rag-sooker.

rag shop. A bank: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1902, F & H; by 1930, ob.; by 1945 †. See rag, n., 2.

rag-shop boss (American); rag-shop cove. A banker: 1902, F & H; † by 1940. See rag shop.—2. (Only the latter.) A cashier: 1902, F & H; † by 1940.

rag-sooker; occ. rag-suker. 'The ragsooker, an instrument attached to the end of a long pole for removing clothes-pins from the lines, and afterwards dragging the released clothes over the fence,' Anon., The Tramp Exposed, 1878: since ca. 1860; ob. Cf. angler.

rag-splaywer. 'A rich man': 1859, H; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; † by 1902 (F & H). This seems to be an error for rag gorer.

rag-timer or ragtimer. A person serving a six-months prison-sentence: Australian: since ca. 1910. Vance Marshall, 1919; Baker, 1945. Cf. dream and s. rag-time, 'inferior; laughable' (as in rag-time army).

rag up, v. "Now, boys, I propose that we . . . will all rag up"—meaning that they would beg clothes and put on the appearance of gentlemen,' W. H. Davies, The Autobiography of a Super-Tramp, 1908; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; extant. Cf. low s. clobbered up ' (well-) dressed'.

rags. See rag, n., 2.

rags, go. See rag, v.

rags a gallop, tip one's. To depart hastily; make off: not c., but low s.: C. 19.

rail, n. See rails.—2. 'He was not only a thief, he was also a "rail", the thief's term for an ex-railroad employee,' Barclay Northcote in Flynn's, July 18, 1925; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A railroad worker, one in train service especially'; extant.

rail, v. 'To frame-up and send to prison,' Leverage, 1925; extant. A shortening of:— railroad, v. To convict (an accused person); often to charge—or to sentence—unjustly or against the evidence: 1877, 1884, in D.A.E.; 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne, "They railroaded me . . . because I couldn't grease the wheels. I swear I know nothing of the burglary they charge me with. Somebody had to be settled for the job, that's all"; 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey (p. 220); 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft, a professional thief speaking, 'I've been railroaded (convicted, sentenced, and punished) four times'; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective; 1912, Donald Lowrie, My Life in Prison; 1925, Leverage, 'To frame-up one and send him to prison'; by 1928 (G. Dilnot, Triumphs of Detection), police s. Lit., to send by railroad. In s., railroad is to force a person to leave a place, to remove him forcibly, as, e.g., in Langdon W. Moore. His Own Story, 1893, at p. 658.—2. To travel by railroad without paying the fare: tramps': C. 20 (and perhaps from as early as 1890). Jack London, The Road, 1907.

railroad bull. A member of a railroad company's police-force: tramps': since ca. 1890; by 1920, s. (Leon Livingston, From Coast to Coast with Jack London, published ea. 1917, but in reference to a trip made in 1894.) See bull, n., 5.

railroad fever. An incurable passion, among tramps (or of a tramp), for travelling, free, by railroad: 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 'Victims of what tramps call the "railroad fever"'; extant.

rails. A sentence to imprisonment: 1903, Josiah Flynt, The Rise of Ruderick Clowd, "I got a year myself at the same time. It was my first trip over the rails, and I was rather down in the mouth, an' he told me not to worry"; slightly ob. Prob. suggested by railroad.

rain check. A parade of prisoners: convicts': 1934, Rose. I suspect this of being a misapprehension of raincheck.

rain-napper. An umbrella: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II, ch. clxxx, 'A nice silk rain-napper'; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1859, H; by 1864—to judge by H, 3rd ed.—it was low s. Lit., rain-taker or -receiver.

raincheck. 'Commutation from a life sentence, or from a death sentence to a life term,' Eagle, 1933: convicts': since ca. 1920: 1935, Hargan, 'Raincheck—a parole'; extant. Cf. lifeboat.

raise, n. A burglary, esp. a notable one: 1851, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York, "Why don't you make a raise?" . . . "I've not got the spunk to make a real large haul"; app. † by 1910. Cf. 'shoplifting'.—2. Placing—or rather, manoeuvring—the victim into a better position for the theft: pickpockets': C. 20. IA, 1931.

raise, v. The sense 'to raise a draft', i.e., 'fraudulently to increase its nominal value by fraudulent alteration', is not c., but j. (Allan Pinkerton, 1886.)—2. To steal, esp. from the person: British: 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open, 'I couldn't raise his prop'; extant. Cf. hoist.

raise a barney. See rise a barney.

raise a cloud. See cloud.

raise a plant. See plant, rise the.

raise the swag is synonymous with spring a (or the) plant: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 322); ob. A late variant of rise (later, raise) the plant.

raiser. One who specializes in 'raising' drafts: on the borderland between c. and j., but prob. to be classified as the latter. (Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective, 1886.) Ex raise, v.—2. A kick on the behind: 1902, Josiah Flynt, The Little Brother; extant. It (almost) raises the victim off his feet.

rake, n. A share—a portion of plunder: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'): † by 1937 (Irwin). Prob. imm. ex the v.; cf. the modern rake-off, 'a (usually illicit) commission'.—2. Mostly English beggars' c., as in the professional beggar's dictum, 'If you carry in your hand a decent rake (a comb), a flashy pair of snips (scissors) and a card of good links and studs—that is certainly a good bible for a living', contained in W. H. Davies, The Autobiography of a Super Tramp, 1908; by 1910, also American; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen; extant. With a comb, one rakes a crop of hair.—3. See raking.

rake, v. 'To apportion; share,' Matsell, 1859; ibid., at flicking, "Flick the Peter and rake the swag . . .", cut the portmanteau and divide the plunder; but earlier (1848) in The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), as 'range or rake—to divide stolen property'; † by 1937 (Irwin). Perhaps ex raking out the ashes to find embers, etc., for further use.—2. See raking.

rake-off, 'protection money paid by professional gamblers to the police' (J. H. Keate, The Destruction of Mephisto's Greatest Web, 1914), may have been card-sharpers' c. of ca. 1880–1920; but by 1920 at latest it could no longer have been regarded as c., the same applying to the v. Cf. rake, n., 1.

raker. A letter-box thief: since the 1920's

Jack Henry, What Price Crime?, 1945. Ex the v. implied in :—

raking ; stuffing. 'By means of a sheet of paper called a "rake" the thieves extract letters under the door. If the door contains a letter-box it is "stuffed" with old paper so that the letters drop on to it and are accessible to the fingers,' Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941 : since ca. 1920. See also Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933.

Ralph (Spoooner), 'a fool', is s., not c.

ram. A crook's, a criminal's, accomplice or confederate : Australian and S. African : C. 20. Rhymed as amsterdam, which is often shortened to amster or ampster, Baker, 1942 ; J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946.

ram(-)cat, 'a he cat', is s., not c.

ram(-)cat (or ran-cat or rancat) cove. A man dressed in furs : American and British : 1859, Matsell (ran-cat cove), 'A man covered with furs' ; 1890, B & L ; 1902, F & H ; ob. Ex the preceding.

ramble. An automobile ; esp. a taxicab : since the late 1930's. Flynn's, March 8, 1942, Fred C. Painton. In it one may ramble at will.

rambler. 'Many hobos with a mania for speed take unto themselves the label "rambler" ;' Stiff, 1931 : tramps' : since ca. 1910 : 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A high-class tramp or hobo, one who rides only fast passenger trains, and usually for long distances' ; 1934, Convict ; and others. Humorous.

rambling. Always on the move ; bitten with the speed bug : tramps' : since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931. Cf. :—2. As a n., 'Travelling at high speed, afoot or by rail or other means of conveyance' (Godfrey Irwin, 1931) : tramps' : since ca. 1910. Cf. rambler.

rambling Katie. 'Men on the road'—i.e., tramps—'have their own pet name for the League [of Our Father] prayer-rooms. They playfully call them "Rambling Kates" ;' the Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932 ; extant. By personification—of a very vague sort ; any old name will do !

ramcat cove. See ram cat cove.

ramese. Trousers : South Africa : late C. 19–20. J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946. Origin ? The resemblance to Romany rokoňyus, esp. in its variants riknies and hámýar (short for rokhámýas) is prob.—not certainly—illusory ; Dutch affords no clue ; the form may have been suggested by comesa (a shirt).

rammer. 'Rammer. The arm. The bus-napper's kenchin seized my rammer ; i.e. the watchman laid hold of my arm' : 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. ; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.) ; by 1887, low s. (Baumann) and by 1902 (F & H), † in Britain ; 1927, Kane (U.S.A.) ; extant in U.S.A. Cf. smiter.

rammy. A free-for-all fight ; a gang fight : Glasgow : but less c. than low, or at least street, s. : 1935, Alex. McArthur & Kingsley Long, No Mean City, 'Johnny decided that when he came out [of jail] he would go in for "something higher"—as he termed it—than just the ordinary "rammies" and raids' ; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough, 'I nearly got hit with a flying bottle during a street rammy between two gangs'. Perhaps ex rammer, but prob. ex Scottish rammish, 'untamed ; violent'.

ramp, n. Robbery by violence or sudden snatching, whether from person or from place : 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A man convicted of the offence, is said to have been done for a ramp. This audacious game is called by prigs, the ramp, and is nearly similar to the rush'—copied in Egan's Grose, 1823 ; 1832, W. T. Moncrieff, Eugene Aram (where it is used anachronistically), 'It's tho last ramp and ruffle I shall be engaged in' ; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen ; 1895, Caminada, '... Watching them perform the "ramp"—a sudden rush and bustle in which robberies are committed' ; 1902, F & H ; ob. by 1930, but not, even by 1946, †. Prob. ex the v.—2. A hall-mark : Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'They told me all about wedge (silver-plate), how I should know it by the ramp (hall-mark—rampant lion ?)' ; 1890, B & L ; 1902, F & H ; extant.—3. 'Ramps', or swindles' : 1883, G. R. Sims, How the Poor Live ; 1890, B & L ; 1902, F & H ; by 1920, low s. Ex sense 1.—4. A member of a gang of snatch-thieves, esp. on a racecourse ; a racecourse trickster : 1888, J. Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern ; 1902, F & H ; ob. Ex sense 1.—5. Counter (of shop, public-house, etc.) : 1931, Brown, 'The other day a tea-leaf leaned over a ramp and knocked off a float' ; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen ; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open ; extant. Ex the architectural ramp.—6. Hence, a public-house : March 25, 1938, Daily Express ; extant.

ramp, v. 'To rob any person or place by open violence or suddenly snatching at something and running off with it, as, I ramp'd him of his montra ; why did you not ramp his castor ? &c.' : 1812, J. H. Vaux ; 1820, Sessions Papers ; 1822, P. Egan, Samuel Denmore Hayward ; 1823, Bee, 'To steal forcibly from the person' ; 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London ; Nov. 21, 1846, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.) ; 1859, H, 'Ramp, to thieve or rob with violence' ; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.) ; 1887, Baumann ; 1890, B & L ; 1902, F & H ; 1925, Leverage—but prob., by that time, † in U.S.A. ; by 1930, ob. in Britain. Prob. ex † S.E. ramp, 'to snatch'.

ramp, on the. Engaged in swindling : late C. 19–20. Jules Manchon, 1923. See ramp, n., 3. rampage. 'Thieving and taking in', i.e., swindling : 1890, B & L ; ob. Ex ramp, n., 1, 3 ; with a pun on S.E. 'to rampage'.

ramper. One who practises 'ramping' (q.v.) : 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.) at floorers, but almost certainly used earlier in England ; 1874, H ; 1890, B & L (a ticket-snatcher on racecourses, a welsher) ; Oct. 1891, Sessions Papers ; 1902, F & H. Ex ramp, v.

ramping is the vbl n. of ramp, v. : 1823, Bee, who shows that a common method is to persuade the prospective victim to join in a romp or a 'lark' : 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 135, where it is applied to concerted robbery by jostling in the street ; 1857, Snowden, 'Robbing drunken men'—an error ; 1874, H ; 1890, B & L (obtaining, on false pretences, parcels recently delivered by tradesmen) ; ob.

rampoman is, in B & L, a printer's error for rampman.

ramps. A fictitious quarrel or 'row' to cover a theft or a swindle : since ca. 1910. Manchon, 1923. Cf. ramp, n., 3.

rampman. A footpad—one of the 2nd group of 'Those who Plunder with Violence' : 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, III, 25 ; 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London ; ran-cat (or rancat) cove. See ram cat cove.

1859, H; Nov. 1870, The Broadway; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1890 (B & L). Ex ramp, n., 1.—2. Hence, a 'burglar who plunders by force': Nov. 1870, The Broadway, Anon., 'Among Thieves'; slightly ob.

Randalsman or Randlesman; or r-. A green handkerchief (esp. of silk), white-spotted: prob. pugilistic > gen. sporting s., but much used in the underworld of ca. 1820–60—see billy, passage from W. A. Miles. Ex Jack Randall, a celebrated boxer often mentioned in Pierce Egan's Boxiana, 1818–24.

randy beggar, 'a gypsy tinker', is not c., but Northern dial.

range. 'A tier or gallery in a prison,' Leverage, 1925; extant. A normal sense-development.

ranging, 'intriguing, and enjoying many Women' (B.E., 1698), is not c.—as B.E. classifies it—but S.E.

rank, n. 'In its original sense it denoted (1) a job that was being bunglingly handled. Then it was associated with (2) jobs whose consummation was interrupted by legal interference, and, in logical order, with (3) anything that went wrong with a plan,' Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld', in The American Mercury, May 1928. Sense (1): ca. 1900–40 (Godfrey Irwin, 1931); sense (2): ca. 1914–20; sense (3): since ca. 1920 (e.g., see quot'n at casing).—4. A recognition, esp. an untimely one; a detection, a discovery: since ca. 1922: 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; May 18, 1935, Flynn's, Convict 12627; 1936, Lee Duncan; 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece; extant. Cf.—prob. ex—sense 4 of the v.

rank, v. To cheat: ca. 1860–1900: possibly c., prob. s. H, 3rd ed., 1864; Baumann, Londonismen; F & H, 1902. Cf. dial. rank, 'mischievous; cunning'; H, 1874, considers it a perversion of ramp, v.: he is probably right.—2. To blunder at, fail at or with or in, as in to rank a job: U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1930, Burke, 'Ranked, adj. Gone awry. "The play's ranked"' ; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1941, Maurer, 'To rank a play. To excite suspicion and have a check refused'; extant. Ex 'rank failure'.—3. 'Verbally, as in "ranking his partner"'. (That is, allowing, often inadvertently, information concerning a past job to get into the hands of the police.) "She ranked him by busting out with that new fur so soon after the robbery", Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld' in The American Mercury, May 1928; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant.—4. To discover, detect, seriously suspect (a person); to discover that a crime has been committed in (e.g., a building); to investigate: 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life, "If only that bull don't rank us [about to 'hold up' a bank]!" "If he does—it's just too bad for him," said Buddy'; Feb. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, Ernest Booth, "He's ranked the job," Eddie called'; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To be ranked is to be recognised or to be seen while committing a crime'; 1933, Ersine, 'To notice, see; always with an element of danger to the one observed'; 1934, Convict; 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'They've ranked us' (spotted or discovered us); extant.

rank a play. See rank, v., 2, refs. of 1930, 1941.

rank bounce. 'A person well or fashionably drest, is said to be a rank bounce'; 1812, J. H.

Vaux; 1889, B & L; † by 1900. Rank is the S.E. intensive adj.; cf. bounce, n., 3.

rank cat; gen. pl. 'Rank cats.—Lowest of the genus bum,' Stiff, 1931: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1910. Cf. gay cat.

rank one. See rank 'un.

rank rider. One of a gang of men riding about from county to county, staying at inns (where they pretend to be a Knight's or a rich gentleman's retainers), and, by guile, obtaining possession of a good horse for each of them and going off, ostensibly to meet their master (who, need one say?, intends to lodge at this inn) but actually to sell these horses at some fair eighty or a hundred miles distant: ca. 1600–60. Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9, is the chief authority; he particularizes the four terms of this roguesy as colt, provender, ring, snaffle (n.), qq.v. See also stroller.—2. Hence, a highwayman: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1870.

rank swell. See swell, n.

rank 'un. A counterfeit coin: 1885, James Greenwood, A Queer Showman; by 1910, low s. Prob. short for rank bad 'un (person or thing).

ranked. See rank, v., 2 (1930).

rannel, despite F & H, is S.E.: a whore.

rantum scantum, play at. To copulate: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.: not c., but low s.

rap, n. In the earliest record of this noun, the sense is obscure: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (concerning a stolen 'bit' or purse), 'To prevent a Rapp, it is a Bit of Rige or Wage', i.e., of ridge or wedge: where the sense may be 'a perjury' or 'a lie', the phrase being possibly = not to tell a lie.—2. An accusation, a charge, a complaint: U.S.A.: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, "What makes you look so glum?"—" . . . Turned out of police court this morning"—"What was the rap, Mike?"—"I'm looking too respectable. They asked me where I got the clothes"; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'There's been a rap about that Savoy safe job'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1928, Chicago May; 1928, John O'Connor, 'A complaint filed with the authorities'; March 16, 1929, Flynn's, Martin J. Porter, 'The Moll'—"Carrol took a fifteen-year rap in Leavenworth"; 1931, Fred D. Pasley, Al Capone, where it = a police inquiry; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; April 21, 1934, Flynn's, Convict No. 12627; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; by 1938, police and journalistic s.—it had, of course, been freely used by policemen and journalists ever since ca. 1925.—3. A 'tip', a warning: U.S.A.: 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society, "They've probably sent a 'rap' to all the ferries"; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'It was upon his own sly rap to the bulls, who made the collar, that Mashier got pinched'; slightly ob. Ex the v., sense 2.—4. 'Recognition; identification,' Leverage, 1925; U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Ex sense 3 of the v.—5. 'The accuser in a criminal case,' Leverage, 1925; U.S.A.: since ca. 1910. Ex sense 3 of the v.—6. Any sort of betrayal or indiscretion: since ca. 1925: Ernest Booth, 1928; Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—7. (In prison): a laying of information: convicts':

prob. since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex sense 2.—8. A prison sentence: since ca. 1925; 1928, R. J. Tasker, Grimhaven; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Julian Proskauer, Suckers All; 1934, Rose; Feb. 6, 1937, Flynn's, Convict 12627, 'Misconduct reports in prison are most commonly called "raps", but in several institutions they are referred to as "red tags"'; 1938, Castle, 'A prison sentence, punishment'; extant. Cf. 7.

rap, v. To commit perjury: 1732 (see quot'n at 1776); 1743 (see rapping); 1752, Fielding, Amelia, 'Though I never saw the Lady in my Life, she need not be shy of us, d—n my Eyes! I scorn to rap against any Lady,' the footnote being, 'A Cant Word, meaning to swear, or rather to perjure yourself'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'He kaps [sic] quare; he swears false'; 1776, John Villette, The Annals of Newgate (trial of Thomas Beck, April 1732), after Select Trials from 1724 to 1732, pub. in 1735, 'He will rap anything for the sake of the cole'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'To take false oath'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1887 (Baumann) it was † in Britain. Prob. ex S.E. rap out (an oath).—2. Hence, to say, to speak; to acknowledge (a person): Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'A reeler came up to me and rapped (said), "Now . . ."' ; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1890, B & L; 1904, Life in Sing Sing (U.S.A.), 'Don't rap . . . Don't address me'; 1925, Leverage, 'To acknowledge or bow to a person'; May 1928, The American Mercury, where it = speak openly or indiscreetly; 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch, 'No matter what you find out, you don't rap to anybody'; 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict; May 23, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack; 1938, Damon Runyon, Furthermore; by 1939 at latest, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946). Prob. ex S.E. rap out (a remark).—3. (Ex sense 2.) To inform to the police; to charge or prosecute (a person): U.S.A.: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft, Glossary, 'Rap, knock, beef, and squeal'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing (to charge; to prosecute); 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Every one of 'em's is a right guy. They won't rap'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys, 'Rap to—to recognize, as "I rapped to him"'; 1925, Leverage, 'To identify (a prisoner)'; Feb. 6, 1926, Flynn's; 1928, Chicago May, 'To put wise'; in nuance 'to recognize', it was police s. by 1929 (Great Detective Cases, p. 126); extant. Hence:—4. As in 'The judge rapped a fin [five years' sentence] on Hank,' Ersine, 1933: U.S.A.: since ca. 1920.—5. To knock out, stun; to kill: Australian: since ca. 1850; by 1900, low s. Rolf Boldrewood, 1881. Ex Scots rap, 'to knock heavily; to strike' (E.D.D.).

rap, beat the. See beat the game.

rap, get. To 'get wise': April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by M. Acklom; ob. Ex rap, n., 3.

rap, give (a house, a householder) the. To rap or knock at a house-door and ask for food: tramps': 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp (p. 291); extant. Cf. rapper, 2, and:—

rap, go on the. To go to a house, rap at the door, and ask for food: tramps': 1902, Bart Kennedy, an experienced hobo speaking, 'You bet the road'—tramping—'s all right. But I guess

I'm not dead stuck'—keen—'on having to go on the rap for my chuck in the South'; extant. Cf. prec.

rap, take the. See take the rap.

rape fiend; rape hound. 'A person serving time on a rape rap,' Ersine, 1933: convicts': since ca. 1918.

rapper. A perjurer: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); app. † by 1900. Ex rap, v., 1.—2. Among American tramps, one who raps at house-doors to ask for food: 1902, Bart Kennedy, A Sailor Tramp, an experienced hobo speaking, 'I'm the greatest rapper you ever laid eyes on. I could get my chuck where any other mug would have to kick out an' lie stiff'; slightly ob.—3. 'Prosecutor; complainant,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904: U.S.A.: 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (an accuser); Dec. 1918, The American Law Review (J. M. Sullivan); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly (R. Jordan); 1928, Chicago May (a 'squealer'); May 1928, The American Mercury, 'A rapper was the main witness against a man'—Ernest Booth implies that the sense has > ob.; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Nov. 1931, IA, 'A Stato Attorney'; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; 1935, Hargan; 1941, Maurer (of one who identifies a criminal); extant. Ex rap, v., 3.—4. A law case in which someone 'takes the rap' in order to bolster-up the reputation of the police: U.S.A.: since the 1920's. In, e.g., Raymond Chandler, Farewell, My Lovely, 1940.

rapping, says Fielding, in The Life of Mr Jonathan Wild, 1743, 'is a Cant Term for Perjury'; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; † by 1900. Ex rap, v.

rasher waggon. A frying-pan: tramps': 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; extant. That which carries a load of bacon-rashers.

rasberry. To steal lead piping from newly erected buildings: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the rasping noise it makes in being removed?

rasberry, give (a person) the, 'to ridicule him or send him away': not c., as Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924, implies, but s. The c. phrase is give the razoo, q.v. at razoo . . .

raspin; occ., rispin. A prison; a lock-up: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'A Rispin . . .'; a Bridewell'; † by 1890 (B & L); continued as reesbin, q.v. 'So called from the task there of rasping wood' (B & L). rasping gang. 'The mob of roughs and thieves who attend prize-fights': 1864, H, 3rd ed.; app. † by 1930. With a pun on rough.

rat, n. A counter-rat, i.e., 'a Drunken Man or Woman taken up by the Watch, and carried by the Constable to the Counter' (B.E., 1698): 1635, R. S(speed), The Counter-Rat, 'Pricke up your ears,—for I begin To tell, what Rats, by night, came in,

Caught without Cat, or Trap, or Ginne,
But mildely.

Being call'd before the Bench of Wits,
Who sit out midnights Bedlame fits;
But some being rid, like Jades with bits, Ran wildely.'

The term recurs in A New Canting Dict., 1725, and Andrewes, 1809, and as late as 1823, in Egan's Grose, where, as in B.E., it is classified as c. In 1848, the anon. compiler of Sinks of London Laid Open, gives it a specific twist: 'Rat, drunken man or woman taken in custody for breaking the lamps'. A rat is a pejorative animal.—2. 'A trick; a cheat': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Perhaps ex S.E. smell a rat.—3. 'Old cant for a clergyman', says H, 2nd ed., 1860: but is this correct? This sense was probably s.—4. Short for river rat: 1883, James Greenwood, Tag, Rag & Co., ch. 'River Rats'; 1890, B & L; app. † by 1910.—5. A spy for the police, a 'nark': mostly U.S.A.: 1902, F & H; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief (U.S.A.), 'These detestable rats (stool-pigeons)'; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly; Sept. 10, 1927, Flynn's; 1927, C. F. Coe, Me—Gangster; 1928, Lewis E. Lawes; 1928, Chicago May; May 18, 1928, Flynn's; by 1929, police s.—6. A prisoner that steals from a fellow-prisoner: American convicts': 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; extant. Pejorative.—7. A passenger train; a tramcar: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Short for rattler, 3, 4.—8. A perversion of rap, n., 2: U.S.A.: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'Th' twister had me pinched, an' made an awful rat to th' beak'; extant.—9. See rat and mouse.—10. A policeman: Australian: since ca. 1910; after ca. 1940, low s. Baker, 1945. Prob. ex sense 5.—11. A thief: since ca. 1918. Edgar Wallace, The Twister, 1928.

rat, v. To inform to the police—or to prison warders: since ca. 1910: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; 1938, Castle (convicts)'; by 1940, British also, as in John G. Brandon, Murder for a Million; extant. Ex sense 5 of the n.—2. To steal from a corpse: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. To 'ferret through someone's belongings'.

rat and mouse. A house: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1920. Convict, 1934. Adopted ex English rhyming s., where often shortened to rat.

rat-bag. A (plain-clothes) detective: Australian: since ca. 1930. Kylie Tennant, The Battlers, 1941. Cf. rat, n., 10.

rat caper, 'a mean trick' (Ersine, 1933). See fink caper. The ref. is to rat, 'informer'.

rat crusher. A box-car burglar: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'Probably from the "rattler" or fast freight train'—cf. rat, n., 7—'in which the "rat crusher"'—ex crush, v., 2—'finds his loot' (Irwin).

rat mob. A gang of pickpockets operating on passenger trains and/or street-cars: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; extant. See rat, n., 7.

rat(-)thieving. 'Sneak-thieving; petty pilfering from carriages, etc.', Clapin, Americanisms, 1903; ob. Cf. rat crusher.

ratepayers' hotel, the. A workhouse: tramps': since ca. 1920. Hugh Milner, letter of April 22, 1935. The hotel is ironic; the ratepayers do provide the money.

ratler; ratling cove; ratling mumper. See rattler; rattling . . .

rats, on the. Engaged in robbing box-cars: 1934, Rose; extant. Cf. rat, n., 7.

rats and mice. Dice: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; ex Cockney sense.

rattle, n., 'a coach' (Grose, 1785), is prob. a misprint for rattler. But it recurs in The Young Prig (ca. 1819); Farmer, in Musa Pedestris, 1896, wrongly defines it as 'a watch'.

rattle, v. 'To Rattle, c. to move off, or be gone,' B.E. (at Rattling Mumpers), 1698; app. † by 1790. Ex the noise one makes; prob. in reference to the noise of a thief's booty, if it is not carefully stowed.—2. 'To ride in or on a freight car,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A., mostly tramps'; extant.—3. To search (someone) for contraband; to demand a bribe from: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant.

rattle, give (a person) the. See give the rattle.

rattle, take. 'We'll take Rattle, c. we must not tarry, but whip away,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1790. Perhaps rattle is short for rattler (sense 1).

rattle, work the. See work the rattle.

rattle and hiss. To urinate: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on piss.

rattle and jar. A car—usually a street-car, occ. a motor-car: mostly Pacific Coast: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

rattle up is much less used than the vbl n., rattling up, q.v.

rattler. A coach: 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley (raller); 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1721, N. B., A Collection of Tryals, III (ratler); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Two or three or us hold him up, whilst some Prads or Rattlers come by'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'Hackney-coach'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1816, Sessions Papers (id.); 1819, T. Moore, Tom Crib's Memorial, 'And long before daylight, gigs, rattlers, and prads, | Were in motion for Moulsey, brimful of the Lads'; 1823, Bee; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; by 1859 (H, 1st ed.) it was †. Ex the noise it makes as it moves.—2. Hence, a cart, a cab: 1859, H; but app. current ca. 1820–50.—3. See rattlers, the. Also singular, as in 'I will go to London Bridge rattler (railway)': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L; 1893, No. 747; by 1895, low s. in Britain; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); April 1919, The (American) Bookman, "'Wise-Cracking" Crook Novels'; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, where it is applied to a 'freight'—a goods—train; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1928, J. K. Ferrier (a freight train); 1928, John O'Connor; 1929, Jack Callahan; 1931, Stiff, 'A fast train, same as cannonball. In the West a box-car'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A passenger train or fast freight'; 1933, Ersine; and others.—4. In U.S.A.: a street-car: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ibid., p. 258, of a freight car; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage, 'A freight car'; extant.

rattler, give the. See give the rattle.

rattler, skin a. See skin a rattler.

rattler, spin the. See spin the rattler.

rattler, touch the. See touch the rattler.

rattler house. A railway station: 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights on Criminal Matters; extant. See rattler, 3. rattlers, the. The railway: 1859, H; app. current in England ca. 1845–95, and not certainly c. at any time; but prob. c. until ca. 1885. In U.S.A., however, it may have survived (always as c.)

until much later; it occurs, e.g., in J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, 1900, and in Wellington Scott's Seventeen Years in the Underworld, 1916. H has the phraso 'On the rattlers to the stretchers', which he 'translates' as 'going to the races by railway'. See also rattler, 3. For the semantics, cf. rattler, 1.

rattles, esp. in pocketful of rattles, plenty of silver money: convicts' (? only at Sing Sing): 1935, Hargan; ibid., in Glossary, 'Rattles—small chango'; extant. It jingles in the pocket.

rattling cove. 'Ratling-Cove, c. a Coachman,' Coles, 1676; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'Hackney coach man'; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1902 (F & H). Either ex the cracking of his whip or ex the noise the coach makes as it goes along.

rattling gloak (or gloke). A coachman: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Mill the Rattling Gloke; kill the Coachman'; 1797, Pottor (r. gloak); 1809, Andrewes, who misdefines; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870. Cf. preceding entry.

rattling(-)lay, the. 'The Ratling-Lay, alias to snatch things out of Coaches as they go along the streets,' C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718; 1735, Select Trials from 1724 to 1732; † by 1870. Cf. rattler, 1, and lay, n., 2. rattling mumper. 'Ratling-Mumpers, c. beggars at Coaches,' Coles, 1676; 1698, B.E., 'Such Beggars as Ply Coaches'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The Fifty-fifth Order of Villains'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1887 (Baumann). See rattler, 1, and mumper.

rattling peeper. A coach window: 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., 'The Coach-beggar has broke the Coach-glass . . . The Rattling-mumper broke the Rattling peeper'; app. † by 1820, for I have found no other instance. See peeper and cf. rattling cove and rattling mumper.

rattling(-)up. 'Throwing merchandise off trains while they were travelling swiftly was called rattling up,' Jim Tully, 'Yeggs', The American Mercury, April 1933: yeggs': ca. 1890-1920. The term survives in the more gen. sense, 'theft, stealing, from a freight train'—as in Ersine, 1933. Cf. rattler, 'railway train'.

rauge is a variant form of rake (both n. and v.): 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language').

raunch, n., 'smoke; loud talk' (Leverage, 1925), is not c. Ex Ger. rauchen, 'to smoke (a pipe)'.

raven or old raven. 'A bird that hunts for carrion;—an undertaker': 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull, "'Here's the old raven I told you of'"; † by 1902. Ex an undertaker's black clothes and melancholy occupation.

Ravilliac, 'an assassin', is, despite F & H, not c. Properly Ravaillac.

raw. A person; esp. a person regarded as a prospective victim: 1886, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 320), 'A person . . . A pig, mark, raw'; ob. He is raw or green; cf. the s. Johnny Raw, a rustic.

raw and ripe. A tobacco pipe: Pacific Coast: late C. 19-20; ob. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; with allusion to bubbling and smell of a 'juicy' pipe.

raw-jaw. 'Unhindered, unafraid, without caution,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: esp. among pickpockets and shoplifters: 1932 (implied in raw-jawed clout); extant. Cf. raw one.

raw-jawed clout. See cold-turkey heel.

raw lobster. A policeman: ca. 1850-1900, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! Ex policeman's blue coats and the fact that lobsters, before boiling, are of a dark bluish colour; in contrast with lobsters, 'soldiers' (red-coated): B & L.

raw one. 'That buster you tipped me to, was a raw one . . . That burglar you introduced me to was a novice,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; extant. Cf. raw, q.v.

rawg, 'a waggon', is tinkers' s., not c.: 1890, B & L. A Shelta word.

rawhide, v.; rawhider. To work desperately hard, to force others to do so; one who does either of these things, esp. the latter: not c., but labour-gang, construction-camp s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. American s. rawhide, 'a boor'.

rawnial, runnial, 'beer'; not c., but tinkers' s.: 1890, B & L. A Shelta word.

ray. 'Joe said to him, "There [? this] is Dick's first trial, and you must give him a 'ray' for it", i.e., 1/6d': 1862, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, IV, 319; 1902, F & H; slightly ob. Origin undetermined. Perhaps cf. the † S.E. ray, 'small pioco of gold or gold leaf'.

razoo, give the. To give (somebody) the slip; to be evasive towards: Jan. 16, 1926 (see quot'n at ginny, 4); 1939, Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep, where it is spelt razzoo; extant. A perversion of raspberry, give the, q.v.

razor back. A circus roustabout: as much circus s. as tramps' c.: C. 20: 1931, Stiff; Feb. 17, 1937, The New York Herald Tribune, Barry Buchanan, who derives it from the fact that as circus hands loaded the small wagons into a railroad truck, they were exhorted, 'Raise your backs, you so-and-so!'—2. The sense 'Arkansas hog' (Stiff, 1931) is farmers' s. at least as much as it is tramps' c.

razor king, the. The leader of a gang of hooligans: Glasgow: since ca. 1918. MacArthur & Long, No Mean City, 1935. The gang's weapons are razors.

razz; esp. in give (someone) the razz. To reprimand: April 6, 1929, Flynn's, Joseph F. Fishman, 'Old Calamity', "'Old man [the warden] givin' somebody the razz," he'—a convict—'announced to Inky' (another); by 1940, low s. Ex s. give (someone) a raspberry.—2. The sales talk of a slick salesman of crooked shares: commercial underworld: Feb. 19, 1935, The New York Sun; extant.

razz, v.; short for razzle. To steal: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Perhaps ex s. go on the razzle, influenced by 'to raid'.

razzle. See razz, v.

razzo. Nose: 1899, Clarence Rook, The Hooligan Nights; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'He would get hit right on the razzo. It was as red as the queen of hearts, anyhow'; by 1940, low s.—esp. Londoners'. Echoic: cf. the rasping noises that come from certain noses.

razzoo. See razoo . . .

re-christen. See rechristen.

reach, n. 'A bank-sneak,' says Leverage, 1925; i.e., a thief specializing in the robbery of banks; extant. He reaches over the counter.

reach, v. To turn (a person) away from justice, esp. by bribery but also by an appeal to self-interest; to tamper with (e.g., a detective): 1906, A. H. Lewis, Confessions of a Detective, 'I'd been squared; it was known that I could be reached'; 1912, A. Train, Courts, Criminals and the Camorra; 1929, Charles F. Coe, Hooch, 'You could reach the . . . Attorney without tippin' your hand to him at all'—but, by this time, the word had > police, political, journalistic s. Cf. the euphemistic S.E. get at (a person).

reacher. A bank-thief: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. reach, n., q.v.

read, v. To steal pocket-books; often as vbl n., reading, as in Anon., The Young Prig, ca. 1819, 'And I my Reading learnt betime, From studying pocket-books, Sirs'; 1903, F & H; ob. Ex reader, l.—2. See read one's shirt.

read and write. To fight: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1865 low, and by 1875 gen., rhyming s. The same applies to read and write as n., 'a flight': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', '"He took to read and write"'—so too in Matsell's Vocabulum (U.S.A.). In U.S.A., esp. on Pacific Coast, it remains c.—as in M & B, 1944.

read one's shirt. To examine one's clothes (not only one's shirt) for lice: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; extant. Ex British military s.

reader, n. A pocket-book (to hold money, esp. paper money): 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'Reader is Cant for a Pocket-book'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter (q.v. at pp. 151–2 for an excellent account of the 'reader'-stealing 'lay'); 1792, The Minor Jockey Club; 1797, Potter; 1801, Colonel George Hanger; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1818, The London Guide; 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields; 1823, Bee; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1839, Brandon; 1848, The Man in the Moon, 'Flowers of Felony'; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; in C. 20, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946). There one finds matter interesting to read as well as to handle.—2. 'A letter, book, newspaper': 1890, B & L (thieves' and tinkers'); 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow, 'A "reader" (a newspaper)'; 1903, F & H; 1938, James Curtis, They Drive by Night (a newspaper); as 'letter', † by 1940.—3. A faked playing-card: card-sharpers': 1894, J. N. Maskelyne, Sharps and Flats; then see readers.—4. 'A license, a certificate, a permit', Jackson & Hellyer, 1914: U.S.A.: by 1928 (The White Tops, July–Aug., 'Circus Glossary'), reader is circus s. for the State, the County, or the town licence to perform.—5. Hence, a warrant of arrest: U.S.A.: since ca. 1918: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose, 'Warrant for arrest with a Reward . . . a reader with a tail'; 1939, Raymond Chandler, The Big Sleep; by 1940, police s.—6. (Ex sense 2.) An advertisement, announcement, poster: U.S.A.: and British tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin (U.S.A.); 1933, Joseph Augustin, The Human Vagabond (British).—7. (Also reader with a tail.) 'A prescription for narcotics', BVB, 1942: American drug traffic: since ca. 1925. Cf. scrip and script and writing.

reader, v. See readered, be.

reader and writer. A boxer; a 'well-plucked 'un': Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on fighter.

reader-hunter is a synonym (Vaux, 1812; F & H, 1903) of dummy-hunter and:— reader merchant. A pickpocket specializing in pocket-books: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, in the section on 'Reader-Merchants', says that 'This business is practised by young Jews, who ply only at the Bank [of England] and the Royal Exchange'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., ' . . . To steal the pocket-books of persons who have just received their dividends'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1887, according to Baumann, but F & H, 1903, record it as extant. See reader; merchant is s. for 'fellow, chap, man'.

readered, be. '"Most in general works the South Coast lines on the mag, but I reckon he's readered there, or he wouldn't be going our way"' F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, 1893, the gloss (p. 412) being, 'In the Police News'; ibid. (see stiff, n., 12), p. 417, where the nuance is 'apprised by the police'; 1903, F & H, 'Advertised in the Police Gazette'; extant. Ex reader, n., 2.

readers. Marked playing-cards: 1894 (implied in reader, n., 3); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (U.S.A.); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Julian Proskauer, Suckers All; Aug. 17, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant. They can be read from the back.

reading. See read.

ready, n.; usually the ready. Cash: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (see quot'n at cole); 1692, Anon., The Notorious Impostor; 1698, B.E. Perhaps orig. c.; but by 1705 it was s., which it has remained. Abbr. of ready money.—2. See ready, work a.

ready, v. ' . . . The expression "readying the job". The preliminary to house-breaking, by day or by night, is for the burglars . . . to "ready" the place, whether it be shop, dwelling, office, or warehouse; that is, they find out the habits and ways of the occupiers or their servants': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1903, G. R. Sims, Living London, III, 156 (of 'preparing' the prospective victim of a swindle); by 1909 (Ware) it was low s. in the sense 'to bribe' (a policeman); 1928, Edgar Wallace, The Gunner (to drug someone in order to incapacitate him); extant. I.e., to get it (or him) ready.—2. 'Changing the appearance of [a horse's] age by "readying" (i.e. tampering with) the teeth': 1890, Clarkson & Richardson, The Rogue's Gallery; extant. Ex sense 1.

ready, adj., means 'in cash' and appears to be used only in combination: see ready gilt, ready rhino, ready thick un.

ready, work a. To effect a swindle: Aus.: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Cf. ready, v.

ready for the wire. See wire, the, reference of 1937.

ready gilt. Money; cash: 1890, B & L; by 1900, no longer to be classified as c. Cf. ready rhino and gilt, n., 3.

ready-over. A walk: ca. 1870–1910. Recorded at p. 320 of Clarkson & Richardson, Police!, 1889. A ready means of walking over a distance.

ready(-)placers. A well-dressed man and woman that rob jewellers by substituting a worthless facsimile for the valuable piece they steal; they make no actual purchase, for they say that they will call later for the object they have been examining: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; extant. They readily place the facsimile where the original jewel has been.

ready rhino. See rhino, than which it is more common.

ready Rover; usually as vbl n. 'Readying Rover (poisoning [the] dog)': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); ob.

ready the job. To make one's preparations for a burglary: 1889 (see ready, v.); extant. See ready, v., and job, n., 2.

ready the mark. See mark, ready the.

ready thick un. A sovereign: since ca. 1860; ob. Prob. c. only until ca. 1880, B & L classifying it in 1890 as thieves' and others'. See ready, adj., and thick un.

ready up. 'E.g., "to ready-up a case", to plant goods to tempt a thief,' Baker, 1942: Australian: C. 20. An elaboration of ready, v. Contrast ready the job.—2. Also ready up, n.: 'A swindle: a trap set for someone to fall into' (Baker); with corresponding v.

real McCoy, the. See McCoy.

real swell is Egan's variant (Life in London, 1821) of rank swell at swell, n., q.v.

ream, v.t. To commit sodomy upon: C. 20. BVB.—2. To cheat, swindle, esp. by a confidence trick: since ca. 1920. Ersine, 1933.

ream, adj., is a phonological variant (pron. reem) of rum, 'excellent, first-class, superior, genuine': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 313, applied to a forgery; 1859, H., 'Good or genuine.—Ream-bloak, a good man'; 1887, Baumann; by 1890 (B & L), theatrical s.

reamer. A sodomite: C. 20. BVB. Cf. the gut terms. Imm. ex ream, v.—2. A confidence trickster: since early 1920's. Ersine. Ex ream, v. 2.

rear. The thrill, the exhilaration, produced by the daily dose of some drug, esp. cocaine: mostly drug addicts': 1922, Emily Murphy, The Black Candle; extant. Cf. high.

rechristen is a variant of christen: 1889 (see christen); 1901, Jerome Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life, Vol. 2; extant.

reckon. To cheat: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. A 'smart' reckoning.

recollection man. A body-snatcher: 1833, trial of Abraham Scott and others, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey 1824-34, IX; † by 1870. By a grim pun.

record. A police record: of ea. 1885-1905, then police j. 'Only a few are aware that he has a "record";' J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901.

recruit. A newly made tramp, criminal, prostitute: C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. But this is too close to standard usage to be differentiated therefrom.

recruiting service, 'robbing on the highway' (Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811), may have been c. of ea. 1800-70, but prob. it was s.: cf. s. recruit, 'to get a fresh supply of money'—with which cf. recruits. 'Recruiting. Thieves hunting for plunder' (Matsell) may have been U.S. c. of ea. 1840-80.

recruits. Money due or looked-for: 1698, B.E., 'Recruits, c. Money (Expected). Have you rais'd the Recruits, c. is the Money come in?'; repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1860. It recruits one's financial position or prospects.

red, n. 'Gold; a cent': 1859, Matsell; but prob. current in Britain since a generation earlier; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H, 'Gold'; 1934, Axel Bracey, School for Scoundrels; 1934, Rose, 'Penny (n.): a red'; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'Stones, a bit of red?'; 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; extant. Ex the colour of (some kinds of) gold.—2. Hence, a sovereign: C. 20. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923; by 1948, ob.—3, 4. See red, in, and red, in the.

red, adj. Golden; of gold: see, e.g., red clock, red kettle, red super, red tackle, red 'un. Independently in, e.g., A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 1912 (quot'n at out, be), and Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938 (quot'n at plat). Simply the n. used attributively.

red, in. RED, n. 1. The third grade, the lowest of convict classes. "Jim went in red yesterday"; Ersine, 1933: convicts': since ca. 1924. By 1945, gen. prison s. Ex the red 'star' against or red underlining of the convict's name. Cf.:

red, in the. RED, n. . . . 2. Figuratively, a place where losses are. "This job is in the red"; Ersine: since ca. 1918. Ex commercial-s. sense, 'in debt; bankrupt'.

red ball. A fast fruit-train: tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff, 'Good for long rides'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin. 'Cars of dispatch in such a train are "carded" or marked with cards bearing a large red ball to indicate at once the importance of the car and its contents' (Irwin).

red block. A gold watch: 1925, Leverage; extant. See red, adj., and block, n.

red bug. A ruby: 1925, Leverage; extant. See bug, n., 6, and cf. green bug and white bug.

red clock. A gold watch: 1874, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!; 1890, B & L; 1896, A. Morrison. Perhaps always s.; certainly s. in C. 20. Cf. red, n. and adj., and see clock, 2.

red cross or Red Cross. Morphine: 1922, Dialect Notes, W. H. Wells, 'Words used in the Drug Traffic', 'Red Cross—As differentiated from White Cross, or cocaine'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'Most sufferers from railroad and street accidents are eased by its administration at the hands of the ambulance wagon' (Irwin).

red eye, 'fiery whiskey, esp. if new', is not c., but s. (Bartlett, 2nd ed., 1859; Oct. 7, 1865, The National Police Gazette). Ex its effect.—2. A (fried) egg: tramps': C. 20. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. In railroad s., red eye is the danger signal; there is a vague resemblance.

red front. 'He gave a "red-front" (gold watch and chain)'; Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; extant. See front, n., 2, and red, adj.

red fustian, 'claret or port', is rather s. than c.: current ca. 1680-1830. B.E.; A New Canting Dict.; Grose.

red gut. A sausage contained within a red skin: convicts': since ea. 1920. Ersine, 1933.

red hawser. A gold chain: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. red block.

red-hot. A hijacker, i.e., an illicit holder-up of trucks, etc., carrying contraband liquor: April 13, 1929, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson, 'The Roaring Road', "You won't be bothered by the red-hots," said the gangster, "and the law will lay off as long as you work on the quiet"; Oct. 11, 1930, Flynn's, Paul Annixter, 'Jerry the Duke, ace red-hot'; after Repeal of Prohibition (1934), merely historical.—2. A prostitute (?): Feb. 20, 1937, Flynn's, Earl W. Scott; extant. Sexually 'hot'—not amorous but sexually expert.

red-hot cinder. A window: Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on illiterate winder.

red ink, 'red wine', is low s. rather than c. Jack Black (see quot'n at foot juice).

red jerry. A gold watch: 1885, M. Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; rather ob. See jerry, n., 5.

red kettle. A gold watch: 1889, B & L (at kettle); 1896, F & H (id.); extant. See red, adj., and kettle; cf. red clock and red 'un.

red lane, 'the throat', is very improbably c., prob. s. Grose, 1785.

red lattice, 'a public house', is almost certainly s. Grose, 1785.

red lay-out. A gold watch and chain: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. One of many synonyms: cf. red front.

red lead. Catsup (or ketchup): tramps': since ca. 1910. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Colour-similarity.

red light, n. A gold watch: 1889, B & L (at blowing); slightly ob. Cf. white light: light, ex the shining face.

red(-)light, v. To kick (a person) out of a moving train: 1928, Jim Tully, Circus Parade, 'Most of the borrowers of Slug's money spent it for liquor or cocaine. So long as they owed Cameron or Finnerty money they were not "red-lighted"'; this sense, however, is as much circus s. as tramps' c.; indeed, the tramps' use of the term was adopted from the language of circus hands and performers, as the following passage from Circus Parade makes fairly clear:—'Silver Moon Dugan was known as the greatest "red-lighter" in the country. Red-lighting was an ancient dishonourable custom indulged in by many a circus twenty years ago. The act consisted in opening the side door of a moving car, and kicking the undesirable traveller out Some ruffian authorities claimed that men were only kicked off trains near the red lights of a railroad yard There can be no doubt that the practice originated in order to cheat circus labourers and other roustabouts out of their wages.' Cf. The White Tops, July–Aug. 1928, 'Circus Glossary', where red lighting = ejection from a train: circus s. The ejection is made after the gullible victim has been 'taken to the rear platform "to fix the red light"' (Julian Proskauer, Suckers All, 1934); an explanation accepted by Godfrey Irwin (letter of March 9, 1938).

red-lighter. A prostitute: C. 20; by 1940, s. BVB, 1942. Ex 'red-light district'.

red line, the. Prostitution: white-slave traffic: C. 20. Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession, 1936. Here the 'line' (of business) is that of the 'Red Light' district of a town.

red-liner. 'An officer of the Mendicity Society': beggars': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, but earlier in Henry Mayhew, London Labour, II, 564 (pub. in 1851); 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, where it is spelt red lioner; 1859, H; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; app. † by 1910. Perhaps from underlining, in red ink, an offender's name.

red lot. See lot, red.

D.O.U.

red Mike, 'canned corned beef' (Leverage, 1925): not c., but low s.

red one. (For the English usage, see the much more frequent red 'un.) In U.S.A., red one is the usual form of the red term for 'a watch': 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; extant. Cf. red kettle, red lot.—2. The sense 'a poor business stand' is pitchmen's s.

red rag, 'one's tongue', is not c., but s.—low s., admittedly; occurring first in R. Dixon, Canidia, 1683. This is the orig. of the late C. 18–20 low s. rag, in the same sense.

red ribbin. See:—

red ribbon. 'Red Ribbin. Brandy': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; † by 1903 (F & H). Contrast blue ribbon.

red rogue. A gold coin, esp. a guinea-piece: 1617, Fletcher, The Mad Lover, 'There's a red rogue, to buy thee handkerchiefs'; app. † by 1700. But prob. not c.; prob. a nonce-word, a literarism. Cf. yellow boy.

red sail-yard docker. 'Red Sail-Yard Dockers,' says George Parker in A View of Society, 1781, 'are people who live by buying and selling the King's [naval] stores and who are seldom or ever detected, from the King's mark not being commonly known but to those who are very conversant in the Royal Yards' (dockyards); 1785, Grose; app. † by 1890. See also devil himself.

red scatter; scatter. A brothel: since ca. 1920. BVB. See scatter, 2; ref. to red-light district.

red shank; redshank. 'A quakinge chete or a red shanke, a drake or ducke,' Harman, 1566; 1612, Dekker, O per se O; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Rod-shanke. . . . A mallard', rod being an obvious misprint; 1688, Holme defines it as drake or mallard; 1698, B.E. (duck); 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (duck or mallard); 1785, Grose; † by 1860. Ex their red legs.

red shirt. A back cut and bleeding as the result of a flogging with the cat-o'-nine-tails: Australian convicts': ca. 1820–1910. A Harris, Settlers and Convicts, 1847; Baker, 1942. The shirt becomes blood-stained, either during—or, usually, after—the flogging.—2. A refractory or a dangerous prisoner: American convicts': 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; slightly ob. Such a shirt was, in the old days, worn by such a prisoner—for conspicuousness' sake (Irwin).—3. A girl, a woman: Pacific Coast of U.S.A.: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on skirt.

red slang. A gold watch-guard: 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest (U.S.A.), 'Do you Speak "Yegg"?', where it = a gold watch-chain; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights, incorrectly as 'a gold watch'; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.), 'A gold [watch-]chain'; extant.

red sneezer. A snuff-box made of gold: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (p. 320); extant. See red, n. and adj., and sneezer.

red spot. A (professional) killer: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. He 'sees red'.

red steer. A beer: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; prob. coined by Australian crooks in U.S.A. red stuff. (Gold) jewellery: 1926, Netley Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1933, Joseph Augustin, The Human Vagabond; 1935, George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade; 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; 1939, Val Davis; extant.

red super (or souper). A gold watch: 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.)—but prob. the term was earlier in use in England; 1891, James Maitland (U.S.A.); 1904, Hutchins Hapgood (id.); 1925, Leverage; extant. See the elements.

red tackle. A gold watch-chain: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; extant. See red, n. and adj., and cf. red toy.

red tag. See rap, n., 8, ref. of 1937.

red tape. Earliest recorded in 1725—see quot'n at tape; 1785, Grose (see ibid.); app. † by 1860. Some strong drink, ? claret or port wine; H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 1841, defines it as brandy—so too Sinks of London Laid Open, 1848. Cf. red ribbon and blue tape and see tape itself.

red thimble. A gold watch: C. 20. Leverage, 1925.

red toy. 'One day I went to Croydon and touched for a red toy (gold watch)': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1923, J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights; extant. See toy.

red 'un. A gold watch: 1864, H, 3rd ed. (at redding: by inference); 1885, M. Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; 1887, Baumann; 1888, James Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern; 1890, B & L; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago; 1901, Caminada, Vol. 2; 1903, F & H; 1929, Tom Divall, Scoundrels and Scallywags; extant. See red, n. and adj.—2. A sovereign: 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1935. Cf. red, n.

red wagon, 'ticket office' (of a circus): not c., but circus-men's s.—No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904.

redding. A gold watch: 1863 (see quot'n at darby, 3); 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1909, Ware; extant. A corruption of red 'un.

redding strake. The employment of truncheons or clubs (by warders): convicts': 1897, D. Fannan, A Burglar's Life Story, 'Occasionally fierce fights took place among the convicts, when it was so dangerous to interfere that the warders very wisely allowed them to tire themselves out before trying the "redding strake"': † by 1940. Strake is prob. a perversion of S.E. strike; redding, perhaps from the letting of blood.

redge is a mostly C. 19 variant of ridge, 1 (gold): 1839, Brandon; 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III, ch. xxix, 'Redge yack—gold watch'; ibid., 'Redge fawney—gold ring'; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob. Prob. influenced by wedge and perhaps by red, n.

redge cully is a rare variant of ridge cully. (F & H, 1903.)

redman. 'Penitentiary apple-sauce,' Kernôt, 1929–31: convicts': since ca. 1910. Ex its colour.

redraw, 'a warder', is perhaps not c., for it is back-slang; nevertheless, it prob. was used orig. and mostly by convicts: J. Greenwood, Low-Life Deeps, 1876, and B & L, 1890, seem to bear out the classification of the word as c. redshank. See red shank.

reef, v. See reef a leather and reefing; also as in "Did you get pretty slick at fobbin'?"—"I got so I c'u'd reef a roll", J. Flynt, The Rise of Roderick Clowd, 1903; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Reef. To work lining of pocket to top of opening'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage; March 2, 1929, Flynn's, H. W. Corley, 'Pickpockets'; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff (England); 1933, Ersine; extant. Prob. ex nautical take in a reef.—2. Hence, 'to search; to frisk' (Leverage, 1925); extant.

reef a kick. See reefing (ref. of 1924).

reef a leather. "To reef a leather" means that the pickpocket pulls out the lining of a pocket containing the "leather"; this is frequently the best way of capturing a pocket-book, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (glossary at leather); 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers that Prey; 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, Glossary, "Raising the lining of a pocket in which the pickpocket has located a "book". It is a difficult undertaking'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth; since ca. 1930, also Canadian (anon. letter, June 9, 1946). See reefing.

reefer. 'We chanced upon an empty reefer (refrigerator-car),' Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925: mostly tramps', though adopted ex railroad s.: 1931, Stiff—but by this time, teste Irwin, it was fairly gen s. A corrupted shortening of refrigerator.—2. Usually pl., reefers, marijuana cigarettes: since ca. 1925: 1935, Hargan; by 1937 (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Sept. 21) it was s.—3. A pickpocket's accomplice; the actual pickpocket: C. 20: 1933, Ersine; also, by 1920, Australian, as in Baker, 1942. Ex reef.

reefing. Reefing. Drawing. "Reefing up into work," drawing up the pocket until the purse or port-monnaie is within reach of the fingers': 1859, Matsell; 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective, 'First bending one finger and then the other, he [the pickpocket] draws the pocket up little by little, which is known as "reefing", until the pocket-book is drawn up within reach'; 1890, B & L—now English c. also; 1896 (implied in reef a leather); 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Reefing a Kick. Working the lining of a pocket at top of opening' (properly of a trousers pocket); 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys, 'Reef a kick. Picking a pocket by gently pulling out lining. Reefing a britch'; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; 1931, A. R. L. Gardiner, Prisoner at the Bar; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Sept. 12, 1936, Flynn's, Convict 12627, "Reefing a kick"; extant. See reef, 1.

reefing man. Marijuana-smoker; drug traffic: since the late 1920's. BVB. Ex reefer, 2.

reek. '(Old Cant).—Money', F & H, 1903; but on what authority?

reeler. A policeman; usually pl., the reelers, the police: Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine, 'All this time I had escaped the hands of the reelers (police)'; 1888, G. R. Sims, 'A Plank Bed Ballad'; 1894, A. Morrison, Martin Hewitt, Investigator; 1903, F & H; ob. A perversion of the s. synonym, peeler—or perhaps, as suggested by Barrère & Leland, ex 'his rolling gait when sauntering about'.—2. A drunken man: 1885, M. Davitt, A Prison Diary; very ob. Ex his reeling motion.

reeling, n. Drunkard-robbing: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); extant. Cf. reeler, 2.

reener. A shilling (?); a coin, however small: 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo, 'The old man' —her husband—‘never give her a reener’; 1903, F & H, who classify it as tramps’; ob. Perhaps a disguising of deaner.

reesbin. A prison: tramps’ (and tinkers’): since ca. 1840: 1890, B & L; 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747; 1903, F & H, who confine it to tinkers. Prob. an adaptation of raspin.

ref. A reform school; an American Borstal: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, “All fly crooks has been trained in de Ref”; 1903, Flynt, The Rise of Ruderick Clowd; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, “You knows how hard and wicious them Ref boys is”; by 1918, low s.

reg rooker. ‘A fine fellow: a reg rooker,’ C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946: S. Africa: C. 20. See rooker; reg is either short for Eng. regal or ex some Dutch word (perhaps regaal, ‘royal prerogative’, cf. regalia) deriving ex L. rex, king.

register, n. A person’s face: tramps’: 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, p. 271, “I hain’t seen your register for many a day”; † by 1940. It registers emotions.

register, v. ‘To apply a very light suction to the hypodermic needle before injecting,’ BVB, 1942: drug addicts’: since ca. 1930. Ex registering in gunnery and marksmanship.

reglars. See regulars, ref. of 1839.

regular, n. For the English sense, see regulars.—2. ‘One who conforms to the usages of the underworld,’ Godfrey Irwin, 1931: since ca. 1905.

regular, adj. Honest; honestly obtained: June 17, 1856, Sessions Papers (p. 356), “I said nothing about its being regular, or on the cross, nor anything to that effect”; extant. Cf. —2. The American sense ‘trustworthy’ is s., but the nuance (prevalent among criminals and convicts), ‘unlikely to inform to the police; friendly to criminal, to convict’, is perhaps c. of C. 20, until ca. 1930, anyway. In, e.g., Flynn’s, Sept. 11, 1926, ‘But this Dutch did only after he had learned from some of Gray’s pals in the prison that [Chapman] was “regular”’; 1927, Charles F. Coe, Me—Gangster.

regulars. ‘Regulars. Share of the booty. The coves cracked the swell’s crib, fenced the swag, and each cracksman napped his regular; some fellows broke open a gentleman’s house and after selling the property which they had stolen, they divided the money between them’: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1812, J. H. Vaux, ‘Regulars, one’s due share of a booty, &c. on a division taking place’; 1821, D. Haggart; 1821, Sessions Papers; 1823, Bee; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford, ‘Napped the regulars. . . Took over shares’; 1836 (see crack, n., 2); 1837, Sessions Papers; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, ‘The House-Breaker’s Song’ in Pickwick Abroad (ch. xxvi), ‘I ne’er was a nose, for the reglars came | Whenever a pannie was done’; 1839, W. A. Miles; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; Jan. 8, 1856, The Times (cited by ‘Ducange Anglicus’); 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1860, H, 2nd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (glossary), ‘A share . . . Regular, split, drop’; 1890, B & L; 1893, No. 747, ‘Having previously “napped his regulars”, or deducted his commission’ (a warder); 1902, A. Morrison, The Hole in the Wall; 1903, F & H; Oct. 19, 1929, Flynn’s (U.S.A.); slightly ob. Short for regular share?

reign, n. ‘The length or continuance of a man’s career in a system of wickedness, which when he is ultimately bowled out, is said to have been a long, or a short reign, according to its duration’: 1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan’s Grose, 1823; 1890, B & L, who classify it as Australian convicts’; 1901, Rolf Boldrewood, ‘Morgan the Bushranger’—in In Bad Company and Other Stories; 1934, James Spenser, Limey Breaks In, ‘My “reign”, as the crooks say, came to an abrupt end, about four months after [my] getting back from France’; 1937, James Curtis, You’re in the Racket Too; extant. By a punning ref. to royalty.

reign, v. To contrive to avoid being imprisoned: Jan. 1818, Sessions Papers, ‘The prisoner . . . did not deny it’—the charge; ‘he said he had reigned long enough, or something of that’; by 1903 (F & H), also Australian c.; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker’s Kitchen; 1934, James Spenser, Limey Breaks In, “Full time crooks don’t ‘reign’ long, y’ know” [said the “fence”]”; 1942, Baker; extant.

Reilly. ‘One who leads a very happy life, as Reilly did,’ Ersine, 1933; extant. Ex s. as happy as Reilly, where the name may be a corruption of the Larry of coll. as happy as Larry.

reindeer dust. Powdered narcotic: drug traffic: since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942. Cf. snow and sleigh ride.

reindeers. See hook up the reindeers, also hitch-up . . .

relievers. Shoes: tramps’: since ca. 1908. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex the relief that a good pair affords to the tramps’ sore, tired feet.

religious dodge. The English equivalent of ‘the pious lay’: 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; by 1910, no longer c.

reload, v. Implied in reloader and reloading, which see!

reloader. One who practises reloading: commercial crooks’: Aug. 13, 1927, Flynn’s, Lin Bonner, ‘Dynamiters’, ‘Ridding New York City and State of bucketshops, “Dynamiters”, “Re-loaders”, and “Peat” men’; 1931, Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering; Feb. 19, 1935, The New York Sun; extant.

reloading. ‘Victimizing a victim the second time on worthless stock,’ Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant.

remedy. A sovereign (coin): 1823, Egan’s Grose; app. † by 1890, certainly by 1903 (F & H). Ex the fact that it remedies many ills: cf. the phrase, a sovereign cure.

remedy critch, ‘a chamber pot, or member mug’ (Grose, 1788), is not c., but s.—prob. low s.

remittance man. A tramp paid by his family to stay away from home and the home town: tramps’: since ca. 1910 (Stiff, 1931): Standard Am., not c. remount is white-slavers’ c. for a woman exported to Argentina to become a prostitute; ‘remount’ because she is sent to replace another or to help meet an increasing demand: C. 20. A. Londres, The Road to Buenos Ayres, trans. by Eric Sutton, 1928. Hence:—

remount service. The procuring of European women for Argentine prostitution; on remount service, engaged in such procuration, as in A. Londres, ‘South America was becoming more and more fashionable . . . Our colleagues back [in Europe] “on remount service” told us stories of its riches’.

remove Vic. 'Robbing a stamp office . . . Removing Vic': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); † by 1902. Vic = (Queen) Victoria, whose head appeared on postage and duty stamps.

rent. Money: 1821, W. T. Moncrieff, Tom and Jerry, where nap the rent is equated with tip the brads, stump the pewter, post the poney, 'to pay the money', though one would expect nap the rent to mean 'receive the money'; 1823, Bee (cf. next entry); 1903, F & H; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'A whole lot of dough . . . flock of rent'; extant.

rent, collect the. 'To obtain money upon the highway': 1823, Bee, who adds '"We have collected the rent" cannot be misunderstood for goods, however valuable'; † by 1890 (B & L).

rent, nap the. See rent.

rent(-)collector. A highwayman who robs for money only: 1823, Bee (cf. rent, collect the); † by 1890. See rent, collect the.

rep. Reputation: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Bum rep—poor reputation'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Especially applied to some worthy crook or tramp whose ability or exploits have made him a topic of news'; extant, but by 1940 it was s. repairs, stand no. See stand no repairs.

repeater. 'For instance, when a card wins or loses at one deal, and the same thing occurs the next deal, it is a repeater,' Matsell, 1859; professional gamblers' c. >, by 1870, gen. card s.—2. See repeaters.—3. One who has had previous prison experience in the same town,—thus in a story of 1895, included in Hobo Camp Fire Tales, 7th ed., 1911; 'Repeater, or Revolver; an old-timer; a professional criminal and [? or] a "blowed-in-the-glass" tramp,' J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1928, Lewis E. Lawes, Life and Death in Sing Sing; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. He repeats his crimes or his trappings.

repeaters. 'A great multitude of ignorant, untrained, passionate irreligious boys and young men are formed, who become the "dangerous class" of [New York]. They form the "Nineteenth-street Gangs", the young burglars and murderers, the garroters and rioters, the thieves and flash-men, the "repeaters" and ruffians, so well known to all who know this metropolis': 1872, C. L. Brace, The Dangerous Classes of New York; this sense (men who illegally vote more than once) was s. by 1900.—2. Beans: tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. artillery.

repository, 'a lock-up or spunging house, a gaol. Also livery stables' (Grose, 1788), is not c., but s.

residence dealer. A dishonest merchant that makes a practice of stocking apartments with inferior furniture and sells it as 'personal property sacrificed': commercial underworld: since ca. 1930: Feb. 19, 1935, Flynn's, where a stuffed flat is the sort of apartment concerned.

respectable family man lurk, the. A beggar's pretence of being a respectable family man out of work and destitute (usually accompanied by a temporary wife and hired children), with a view to exciting passers-by to compassion and alms: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; ob. See lurk, n.

respun, 'to steal', is not c., but tinkers' s.: 1890, B & L.

rest, n. A year's imprisonment: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Cf. rest-house and sleep.

rest, v. To be in prison: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942 (resting) and 1945. Ironical; cf. theatrical resting, 'unemployed'.

rest house. 'A prison, or other penal institution where the work is easy and the discipline not severe,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910; extant. Cf. play house and rest, n.

resting. Imprisoned: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. A humorous application of theatrical s. resting, 'out of work'.

resurrection cove. 'A stealer of dead bodies': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; † by 1903 (F & H). Cf.—and see—the next two entries.

resurrection doctor. A doctor that buys bodies from grave-riflers ('resurrection men', itself orig. s.): 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, 'They go to a Resurrection Doctor, who agrees for a price, which is generally five guineas, for the body of the man'; † by 1900.

resurrection rig is the livelihood gained, the 'lay' practised in G. Parker's 'These are fellows who live by stealing and selling dead bodies, coffins, shrouds, &c. They are always upon the look-out': 1781, A View of Society (see also quot'n at resurrection doctor); † by 1890. Rig = illegal practice; criminal trick.

retailer. A pimp: white-slave traffic: late C. 19–20. Clifford G. Roe, Horrors of the White Slave Trade, 1911. Compare and contrast wholesaler.

retie (strictly re-tie). 'Trimming a sucker for the second time,' Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 1936: commercial crooks': since ca. 1925. Tying him up for swindling again.

retriever (spelt retriver by Greene) is the term employed in 'Browne's cant vocabulary', q.v., to displace verser—the verser not of 'Barnard's law', nor of 'versing law', but of 'cony-catching law'. It is he who, the prospective victim not having been caught by the first device, goes after and retrieves the 'bird' or dupe.

return horse is Wm Maginn's translation of the Fr. cheval de retour, 'a fugitive galley-slave': therefore, obviously, not c. (Memoirs of Vidocq, I, 126: 1828.)

Reub or reub. See rube.

Reubens, 'country folk', as in P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914: Godfrey Irwin doubts whether it was ever c. See rube.

reversed has in c. a special application (ca. 1690–1870) of the S.E. sense, occurring first in B.E., but more fully defined in Egan's Grose, 1823: '[Of a man] set, by bullies, on his head, that his money may fall out of his breeches, which [money] they afterwards, by accident, pick up'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.).

reversible is rather j. than c. in the following passage, descriptive of the preliminary observation of a house by burglars, in The Cornhill Magazine, Jan. 1863, article on 'The Science of Garotting and Housebreaking':—'The housebreakers' wives and children, maybe, take their turn during the day: at night, the men themselves watch. On such occasions they often wear "reversibles", or coats which may be worn inside out; one side being of a bright, the other of a dark colour . . . Should the watcher find himself observed, he goes into some quiet corner in the neighbourhood, turns his coat, exchanges his hat for a cap, and returns to his post another man to all appearance'.

revolver. A convict that serves many sentences in the course of his life: 1888, George Bidwell, Forging His Chains; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary, where it is applied also to a confirmed tramp—so too in P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. Cf. the pun in repeater, 3. This sort of criminal so often comes full circle.

r'goghlin or gogh'leen, 'to laugh', is tinkers' s.: 1890, B & L. A perversion or a corruption of Shelta ragli.

rheumatism in the shoulder, have or get. To be arrested: 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1920. For semantics, cf. shoulder-clapper.

rhino. Ready money: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (see quot'n at cole); 1693, Anon., The Jacobite Robber, 'Whom having eased of all the Ready Rhino'; 1698, B.E.; 1705, T. H., A Glimpse of Hell, 'The Evening draws on, and now | They're all as drunk as David's Sow, | And all the Ready Rhinoceros Spent, | And ev'ry Soul's a Malecontent'; 1725, Anon., An Authentick History of Jonathan Wild, 'Possess'd of a round some [sic] of Ready Rhino'; by this date (1725) it had got into s. (witness the Preface to A New Canting Dict.), and by 1800 it was hardly classifiable as c. any longer; in C. 20, decidedly ob. In U.S.A., though increasingly ob., it has remained c.: see bimbo, 1st quot'n; Kane, 1927, and others record it as c. The origin is obscure: I venture the suggestion that the term represents an abbr. of rhinoceros (cf. rhinocercical), the rhinoceros being, in late C. 17—early 18, a vast animal as mirific as a large sum of money to the wretches of the underworld of that time. For what I regard as the alternative explanation, see Addenda of 3rd ed. of A Dict. of Slang, 1949.—2. The sense 'the nose' is American (witness Leverage, 1925); but s., not c. rhinocercal. See 1860 reference in the next. H, 2nd ed.

rhinocercical. 'Full of money,' T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia (glossary); 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'The cull is rhinocercical'; 1797, Potter (rhinociveal—presumably an error or a misprint, repeated by Andrewes, 1809). In Britain, † by 1860 when rhinocercal was still in use (H, 2nd ed.), though this too was † by 1887 (Baumann). Lit., rhinoceros-like: for the 'rhinoceros' motif and etymology, see rhino.

rhinociveal. See prec. entry, ref. of 1797.

rhubarbs. Suburbs: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Rhubarb leaves are green; cf. sticks.

ria, 'a drink of any intoxicant' (Leverage, 1925): not c., merely s.

rib, n. A female accomplice: 1909, Arthur Stringer, The Gun Runner; 1918, Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 'He kept me away from what he called the "skirts" and "ribs" of his profession' (which was diamond-stealing and other 'high-class' theft); 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves, '"I'm a suite-renter, and with the right sort o' rib, I can work this town for a ten hundred-dollar haul!"'; 1934, Rose, 'Gangster girl (n): a broad; frill; jane; moll; muff; rib; skirt; twist; fluff; sweet; doll'; 1935, Hargan, 'Rib—a girl'; extant. Ex the traditional origin of Eve from one of Adam's ribs.

rib, v. See rib up, v., 1 and 2.—3. To work as an accomplice: 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves, '"What'd he be achin' to have me rib-along with him for, if he thought I was an Alliance slooth?"'; extant. Cf. senses 2 and 4.—4. "Ribbing" is inciting to murder, by vicious gossip or by the old question in gangland, "What's the matter? Are you a-scared of him?"', E. D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago, 1929; extant. To touch in a sensitive spot, as, e.g., to tickle in the ribs.—5. Hence, to beguile, trick, 'kid': racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'We rib the sap that it's McCoy and he goes for it'; June 21, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; 1934, Rose; by ca. 1938, also Australian, as in Baker, 1942, 'To swindle'.

rib-doctor. An umbrella-mender: ca. 1870–1905. Recorded in the glossary (p. 321) of C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 1880. With reference to the ribs or framework of umbrellas.

rib-up, n. An arrangement; a pre-arranged deal; a 'frame-up': since ca. 1924. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex the v., sense 2.

rib up, v. To arm: 1912, Alfred Henry Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Take my tip and rib yourself up with a rod'; slightly ob. Cf. heeled, 'armed'. —2. To arrange, plan, devise: 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar, 'They were "ribbing" it up between them to nail me to the cross'; Nov. 17, 1928, Flynn's, Thomas Topham's tale; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To "frame" or arrange'; extant. Ex a butcher's procedure in cutting chops from ribs; or, 'Employed in the sense of something being strengthened in structure by the use of ribs or braces, as a ship, etc.' (Irwin).

ribband is a variant of ribbin: 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Ribband, money in general'; † by 1903 (F & H).

ribben. See ribbin.

ribber. He who assists a crooked auctioneer by advising prospective buyers to 'get in on a good thing': C. 20. Carlton Brown, 'Auction Sale this Day', in The New Yorker, Aug. 7, 1937. Cf. rib, v., 2, and rib up, v., 2.

ribbin. Money: 1698, B.E., 'The Ribbin runs thick, c. his breeches are well lined with Money. The Ribbin runs thin, c. he has but little Cash about him'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (ribbon); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1823, Bee (Addenda), 'Ribbon, or ribben—money'; 1848, Sinks of London (-on); 1887, Baumann (ribbon); † by 1900. The semantic origin may be compared with that of 'His pockets are well-lined'.

ribbon. See ribbin, references of 1797 and 1887. —2. See blue ribbin and red ribbin. —3. See white ribbon. Matsell's definition of ribbon as 'liquor' is suspect; I doubt its independent existence, at least in c.—4. A road: U.S.A.: 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece, 'He looked back. The ribbon was clear'; extant. Cf. the sociological ribbon development.

ribbon, blue; r., red; r., white. See blue ribbon, etc.

ribby is a synonym of—and a derivative from—the next: 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar, '"You're ribby?" Conrad asked at length. "Flat on the ribs?" said Porlock'; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'Ribby kind of a gaff, but I might as well go in'; 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; 1939, John Worby, Spiu's Progress; extant. Cf. Cockney s. ribby, 'inferior; of no account'.

riboast. A youngster: 1933, Ersine; extant. Origin?

ribs, on the. "On the ribs," or, as the law so thoughtfully puts it, "Without any visible means of subsistence," Arthur R. L. Gardner, Prisoner at the Bar, 1931; 1932, G. Scott Moncrieff, Café Bar; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, "Spick gaols are on the ribs then?"; 1938, Sharpe of the Flying Squad defines it as 'no good'; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena; extant. Perhaps: so poor, so starved, that one's ribs show; cf. the perhaps earlier (and, if so, the imm. origin) racing c. sense, ('Of horse or dog) no good at all'—current since ca. 1926.

rich is a mispronunciation of ridge, 1. 'It was Oakey that took the money, and said it was rich' (report of a trial in Jan. 1722–3): see ridge, 1, ref. of 1776.

Richard. A deformed man; esp. a hunchback: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Prob. ex Richard Crookback, Richard III, King of England.—2. A detective: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; extant. Suggested by Dick, dick, 3.

rick, 'a pitchman's or a cheapjack's accomplice, mingling with the crowd and boosting sales': pitchmen's and cheapjack's s. Philip Allingham, 1934.

ricky. A mistake: mostly Londoners': since ca. 1920. George Ingram, The Muffled Man, 1936, 'You can think yourself jolly lucky I never made such a big "ricky" as that'. Either ex richochet or ex rickety.

ridcully is a misprint for ridge cully: 1735 ed. of The Triumph of Wit.

ride, n. 'A trip to prison, or from one prison to another,' Leverage, 1925; Aug. 17, 1929, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly, 'The Right to Silence', 'You framed Tommy Henderson once for his ride, Benny. You're framing him for his death now'; March 22, 1930, Flynn's, Robert Carse, 'Jail Break'; extant. By special application.—2. See take for a ride. Also independently, as in 'The famous "ride" from which squawkers seldom return even on foot,' Lawrance M. Maynard, 'Shakedown Artists'—Flynn's, Oct. 26, 1929; 1930, Charles F. Coe, Gunman, 'You walked right into a ride, see? . . . You've fell for a sweet little frame-up'; 1931, Edgar Wallace, On the Spot; Aug. 8, 1931, Flynn's, C. W. Willemse; Aug. 5, 1933, Flynn's; 1933, Ersine; June 2, 1934, Flynn's, Colonel Givens; by 1936 (John G. Brandon, The Dragnet) it was also English.—3. An automobile: 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; extant.

ride, v. 'To send (a person) to prison: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 1 of the n.—2. The sense 'annoy, mistreat, bully, esp. for a long time', is s.—not c. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.)—3. To take as a narcotic: since ca. 1920. Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938, "What you all ridin'?" he asked, as soon as he knew of a junker. "Cadillac or Marmon?" These are two American types of car. I realized at once that he meant "C" or "M", cocaine or morphine,' Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938: drug addicts': since at least as early as 1915. Cf. sleigh ride, which may constitute its effective origin.

ride a body. In the horse-racing swindle known as 'the wire'. 'A steer'—see steer, n., 2—'taking a fish [i.e., a dupe] to the location of a store'—see store—'is "riding a body"', New York newspaper of July 16, 1937, in a short article on 'The Wire'.

ride in the sleigh is an occ. variant of sleigh-ride, v.: since the 1920's. Castle, 1938.

ride it out; usually as vbl n., riding it out. To continue, despite the train crew's opposition, to ride a certain train without payment: tramps': since ca. 1908. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

ride old smoky. To suffer the death-penalty by electrocution: mostly convicts': 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex the smoke that arises from the victim's burning clothes and burnt flesh.

ride on the odno. See odno, ride on the.

ride plush. To travel illicitly free in a passenger's compartment on a train: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. I.e., on plush-covered seats.—2. To hush: Pacific Coast (U.S.A.): C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

ride the beef. To carry incriminating evidence: Nov. 29, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; extant. See beef, n.

ride the cushions. To train-travel as a paying passenger: tramps': 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'What he liked was "ridin' the cushions wid a ducat inyer coffee-bag"'; that is, riding inside a coach with a ticket in one's coat pocket'; 1931, Stiff; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; extant. Cf. on the plush for the semantics of the phrase.

ride the deck. To commit sodomy: since ca. 1910. BVB. Ex train-riding (see deck).

ride the donkey. See donkey, ride the.

ride the lightning. To be electrocuted (penally): convicts': since ca. 1925: 1935, Hargan; extant. Cf. burn, v., and esp. ride old smoky.

ride the plush is a gangsters' and racketeers' variation of ride the cushions, q.v.: since ca. 1925. Howard McLellan, 'I Am a Public Enemy'—in Flynn's, Aug. 24, 1935. Contrast ride plush.

ride the rods; usually as vbl n., riding the rods. To train-travel by sitting on the long truss-rods that run longitudinally beneath the cars or carriages or trucks: tramps': since the early 1890's: 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar-Tramp; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's, Earl H. Scott, 'The Bull Buster'; 1930, C. R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; by 1942, no longer c. See rods.

ride the trucks; frequently as vbl n., riding the trucks. To travel, free, in railroad trucks: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (p. 319); by 1910, no longer c.

ride the waves; 'be riding . . . To feel the soothing effect of a narcotic: drug addicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Cf. sleigh-ride.

ride up Holborn (Hill). See Holborn Hill.

rider. A cloak, says John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, but I suppose this to be a misprint for 'cloak', that which rides its wearer; 1797, Potter, 'Ryder, a cloak'; 1809, Andrewes, 'Ryder—cloak, upper garment'; 1848, Sinks of London ('a cloak'); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; by 1903 (F & H) it was low s.—2. A prosecuting attorney: U.S.A.: 1929, Givens; June 21, 1930, Flynn's; 1934, Rose; extant.

ridg-cully and ridgcully. See ridge cully.

ridge, n. App. first (in print) in ridge cully, q.v. 'Ridge, alias Gold,' C. Hitching, The Regulator, 1718; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, where it is spelt rige; 1776, John Villette, The Annals of New- gate, and earlier in Select Trials, 1734, in both of which places it is spelt rich; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Gold, whether in coin or any other shape, as a ridge-montra, a gold watch; a clay-full of ridge, a pocket full of gold'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1841, H. D. Miles; 1848, Sinks of London, 'Gold outside of a watch or other article'; 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1856, G. L. Chester-ton; 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1934, Rose (U.S.A.), 'Gold Coin of Any Denomination (n): a ridge'; ob. Origin: problematic. Perhaps ex the ridges on the edge of gold guineas.—2. Hence, a guinea: Jan. 1741, trial of Mary Young, in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, pub. in 1742; 1785, Grose; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; † by 1872.—3. A 'lay', dodge, illicit trick or means of livelihood: 1753, Poulter, Discoveries, 'What Ridge or Lay do you go on in this Gaff or Vile; What Business do you go on in this Fair or Town'; † by 1860. A variant of rig, n., 2.

ridge, adj. Valuable; (very) good: Australian: late C. 19–20; ob. Partridge, 1938. Ex ridge, n., 1.

ridge, thimble of: ridge thimble. A gold watch: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'), U.S.A., the latter form—by 1937, † in U.S.A. (Irwin). See ridge, n., 1, and thimble.

ridge blunt, 'gold money', is American of ca. 1830–70: it occurs in The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'). See ridge, n., 1, and blunt, n.

ridge cove. A goldsmith: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, where it is erroneously defined as 'a wealthy goldsmith'; † by 1900. As a variation on the next.

ridge cully. A goldsmith: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue; 1676, Coles (ridg-cully); 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley (ridgcully); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1890 (B & L). See ridge, n., 1, and cully; lit., the term = 'gold man'.

ridge montra. A gold watch: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see quot'n at ridge, n., 1); † by 1903 (F & H). I.e., ridge, n., 1 + montra.

riding a wave or r. the waves is applied to an addict upon whom a drug is taking effect: 1929–31, Kernôt (the former); 1942, BVB (both). Cf. sleigh-ride and high.

riding it out. See ride it out.

riding on the odno. See odno, ride on the.

riding the donkey. See donkey, ride the.

riding the rods. See ride the rods.

riding the trucks. See ride the trucks.

rifle, n. and v. 'To do work of any kind,' Leverage, 1925; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld', 'Once this has been accomplished it is said that the pickpocket has "made the rifle"'; 1931, Stiff, make a rifle, to get the money; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Making the Rifle.—Succeeding'; by 1940, s. 'From the gold-miner's expression describing the collecting of the gold dust and small nuggets caught in the "rifles" or small cleats fastened across the bottom of a cradle or slide down which the powdered rock is carried in a stream of water, the lighter dirt running away with the water, the heavier metal sinking to the bottom of the sluice' (Godfrey Irwin). The n. and the v. rifle represent, ultimately, a thinning of ruffle.—2. Hence, to borrow (esp. a car); to steal skilfully and successfully: March 12, 1932, Flynn's, R. H. Rohde; extant.

rifler. 'The towler, the Rifler,' says Robert Greene, who, in the description of 'prigging law' (horse-stealing profession and procedure) in The Second part of Conny-catching, 1592, clarifies thus: 'The prigar when he hath stolne a horse, and hath agreed with his Martar . . ., to sel his horse, bringeth to the toulter, which they'—the horse-thieves—'call the rifler, two honest men . . ., and they not onely affirme, but offer to depose that they know the hors to be his,' this toller being simply a toll-collector or tax-gatherer, who 'rifles' them—because he taxes them—of the toll-dues; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London; app. † by 1650.

rifling (S.E. 'plundering') has in c. a special sense: plundering dead bodies in the river (esp. the Thames) and turning them adrift again: 1885, James Greenwood, A Queer Showman (pp. 100–4); app. † by 1930.

rig, n., 'sport, banter, ridicule' (O.E.D.), which seems to have > s. by ca. 1720 and coll. by (say) 1800, was prob. c. in the approx. period, 1700–20: A New Canting Dict., 1725, lists it among those c. terms which 'we have insensibly adopted . . . into our Vulgar Tongue' (cf. bilk, bite (v.), booze, filch, rhino). Its origin is obscure.—2. Hence, an underworld trick, activity; illicit practice: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'We went at Night on our old Rigg'; ca. 1773, Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles), 'Every knowing rig'; 1781, G. Parker (see foot-pad rig); 1785, Grose, 'I am up to your rig, I am a match for your tricks'; 1797, Potter; 1800, The Oracle; 1812, J. H. Vaux (see racket); 1823, Bee; 1827, Sessions Papers at the Old Bailey, 1824–33, III, 'What he called a "corn rig"'; 1828, G. Smeeton, Doings in London; 1838, Glascock; 1839, W. A. Miles, Poverty, Mendicity and Crime; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I; 1849, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.), Sept. 1; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was low s. in England; by 1890, low s. in U.S.A.—3. An automobile, a taxicab: U.S.A.: 1931, IA; slightly ob. 'From the old livery-stable days, when any wheeled equipage was a "rig"', Godfrey Irwin.

rig, v. A misprint for ring, to change: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries.—2. To swindle (a person): 1828, George Smeeton, Doings in London; 1903, F & H; † by 1910—as c. Ex rig, n., 2.

rig sale, 'a false sale, a swindling sale', is not c., but London s. of C. 19. Ware.

rige. See ridge, reference of 1753.

rigg. See rig, n., 2.

rigg-conoblin is an error for conoblin rig.

rigged joint. A crooked gambling-house: since ca. 1910. Ersine, 1933. See rig, v., 2, and joint, n., 2.

rigging. Clothes: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia; 1698, B.E., 'Rum Rigging, c. fine Cloaths'; 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'The Cull has Rum Rigging, let's ding him, mill him, and pike; The Man has very good Cloaths, let us knock him down, kill him, and scour off'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'Your flame vith rum rigging'; Oct. 31, 1846, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1857, Augustus Mayhew; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1860, s. in England; by 1890, s. in U.S.A. Of nautical origin: cf. tackle, 2.—2. A gambler's harness: U.S. gamblers': since ca. 1905. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

rigging packer, 'an I.W.W. organizer': labour s., not c. (Godfrey Irwin, 1931.) right, adj. See right!, all.—2. (Of stolen goods) with no alarm given, no advertisement in press or notice at police stations: U.S.A.: 1846, The National Police Gazette, June 13, 'Are they'—the reference is to stolen goods—'all square—are they right, you know?'; app. † by 1920. Right, not wrong; safe, not dangerous.—3. Friendly to thieves or to professional criminals in general, or trustworthy in crime: 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 137, 'They'—the 'swell mobsmen'—'frequent those public-houses the landlords of which they know to be what they term right (i.e. a thief's friend)'; 1886, Allan Pinkerton (U.S.A.), Thirty Years a Detective, "You will find him game, a good workman an a ded right man" (applied by one criminal in writing to another, concerning a third party); 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life; 1893, No. 747, 'Warder—who, when accessible to a bribe, is termed a "right-screw"'; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft (U.S.A.); 1904, Hapgood (id.); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'Sympathetic, fixed, "squared"'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1929, Great Detective Cases, 'That underworld nickname, "Right Bill"' (because he never 'squeals'); 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, '1. Trustworthy, loyal. 2. Willing to overlook a law violation for a price'; 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; 1938, Jim Phelan, Lifer; extant.—4. Justly charged or arrested: U.S.A.: C. 20: 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, 'The police had me "right"'. The job in—was "a square rap"'.

 right, v. To bribe or otherwise influence (a person) to permit—or, at the least, to ignore—a crime or an illicit act: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. right, adj., 3.
 right, all. Applied to 'one who may be trusted, sure': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; extant. Cf. right, adj., 2. right!, all. In ordinary English, this phrase came into gen. use in the 1830's; but orig. it was c., which it seems to have been ca. 1805–30. Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811, 'All right! A favourite expression among thieves, to signify that all is as they wish, or proper for their purpose. All right, hand down the jemmy; everything is in proper order, give me the crow.'
 right, in. 'Properly protected from the authorities,' George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. right and fly. 'Complete': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1910. right cop. A police officer that will accept bribes: 1933, Ersine; extant. Contrast:—
 right copper. 'He was known throughout the underworld as a "right copper", meaning a copper who couldn't be fixed and a copper who never accepted a nickel from a crook,' Jack Callahan, in Flynn's, Feb. 17, 1934; extant. Cf. right guy.
 right croaker. A doctor that illegally sells drugs: drug traffic: since ca. 1910. BVB. See right, adj., 3. right fanny. 'Real, or pathetic story or tale,' George Ingram, Stir, 1933: orig. (ca. 1920), convicts': 1936, George Ingram, The Muffled Man, 'He tells the people, who come up when they see jewelry, a right "fanny" about the quality goods he's got'; by 1940, low s. See fanny, 2.

right grift is the n. corresponding to the vbl phrase grift right, q.v.: 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937.

right guy. A man to be trusted and depended on, esp. by the underworld: 1911, G. Bronson-Howard, An Enemy to Society; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; July 23, 1927, Flynn's, 'He was no squealer—he was a right guy'; by 1928 (as in C. F. Coe, Swag) it was police and journalistic s. See right, adj., 2, 3.—2. 'An automobile dealer who will buy a stolen car as long as he is not afraid that the theft will be discovered and in any way traced to him and his associates,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: car thieves': since ca. 1924.

right hit. 'Gahagan said, that if McDonald had not exposed him, he would have put him in the right hit, or right way of getting his money again': Dec. 3, 1777, The Sessions of the Peace (trial of John and Elizabeth Gahagan); † by 1890.

right jug. A bank working in collusion with 'con men' or with thieves: since the 1920's. Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937.

right man. A burglar: 1898 (see good man, 4); ob.

right one. 'One who can be bribed; a reliable person' (from the criminal's viewpoint): 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. right guy.

right people. A person sympathetic, esp. to criminals: 1932, Jim Tully, Laughter in Hell; extant. Cf. good people.

right screw. A prison guard willing to traffic with the prisoners: convicts': since ca. 1880: 1893 (see right, adj., 2); 1934, Louis Berg, Revelations; by 1935, at latest, also British, as in Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938. Cf. right one.

righteous. 'Cheap "righteous" watches, or such as had been honestly obtained': 1884, A. Griffiths, Chronicles of Newgate, II, 320; ob. Opp. on the cross (q.v. at cross, on the).

righteous man. 'Tater-trap Sam, that "righteous man"', glossed as 'a regular cracksman': 1858, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold, III, xx; app. † by 1900. By humorous euphemism.

righto. A reliable person: 1930, Burke, 'I go for that gee. He's a righto'; extant. I.e., 'right one' (q.v.).

rights, to. Nov. 1848, Sessions Papers (Surrey cases, C. Roberts and C. Haine), policeman loq., 'I found on him nine 4d. pieces in this paper . . . he said, "You have got me to rights at last"': "Oh then you are to rights this time. There is a clear case against you", 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857; by 1859, American—Matsell, Dead to Rights. Positively guilty, and no way of getting clear'; 1860, H, 2nd ed., "To have one to rights", to be even with him, to serve him out'; 1872, E. Crapsey (U.S.A.); 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'Dead to rights, caught, with positive proof of guilt'; in Britain, it had, by 1880, > low s. and by 1889 (B & L), police s.; 1893, Langdon W. Moore. His Own Story (U.S.A.); by 1900, police and low s. in U.S.A. also: superseded, in U.S., by bang to rights.

righty. A tramp or hobo train-rider that has lost right arm and leg: tramps': 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hobos; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; extant. Contrast lefty

—2. 'One who looks enough like another to be taken for him. A disguise,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931 : since ca. 1920.

riglars. See regulars.

rim. To bugger (a woman) : C. 20. Anatomical ; cf. synonymous bottle : C. 20.

rim up, v. To support, to assist (?) : ca. 1929, Bunko Kelley, Thirteen Years in the Penitentiary, 'Other guards were "rimming up" Farrell. Yet Tracey killed him'—Tiffany, a guard—'first' ; extant.

rinse pytcher (i.e., rinse-pitcher : cf. toss-pot) is prob. not c., but s. or coll. : see Awdeley's, No. 7. If c., then, as such, † by 1700.

ring, n., is the name given by 'rank riders' (see rank rider, 1) to that money which they get on false pretences from a country gentleman or a rich farmer : ca. 1600–70. Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light, 1608–9.—2. Hence, 'Money extorted by Rogues on the High-way, or by Gentlemen Beggars,' B.E., 1698 ; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725 ; 1785, Grose, 'Money procured by begging, and beggars so call it, from its ringing when thrown to them' ; † by 1830 or so.—3. A sworn band or group of convicts (mutual aid) : Norfolk Island and Australian : ca. 1830–70. R. P. Stewart, 1846, A Report on Norfolk Island, 'He . . . moved to a part of the mess known as the "Ring", where all the worst characters collected' : 'This "Ring" . . .', says Arthur Griffiths in Memorials of Millbank, 1875, II, 104–5, 'was in itself a power on the island. All the worst men were leagued together in it, and exercised a species of terrorism over the rest.' The mention in J. West's History of Tasmania (Vol. II, 1852) establishes its use before 1845, as Sidney Baker has pointed out. Marcus Clarke, For the Term of His Natural Life, 1874, p. 392. For an excellent description, see Price Warung, Tales of the Early Days, 1894.—4. 'A criminal clique' : U.S.A. : 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service ; by 1929 (The Saturday Evening Post), a gang of car-stealing thieves ; extant.

ring, v. To change (good money) for bad : 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, '[He] takes up the [good] Piece of Gold again and rings it, that is, changes it for a bad one' ; 1797, Potter, 'Ring, to change one thing for another'—repeated by Andrewes, 1809 ; 1812, J. H. Vaux ; 1848, Sinks of London ; 1859, H. ; 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England ; 1890, B & L ; by 1900, (low) s. To cause it to circulate.—2. 'When housebreakers are disturbed and have to abandon their plunder they say that they have rung themselves,' The Cornhill Magazine, 1863 (vii, 91) : mid-C. 19—early 20. To ring a warning bell.—3. To rob (a person) : 1885, 'Le Jemlys' (A Chicago Detective), Shadowed to Europe, ' . . . Was "ringed" (had pocket picked) of his watch' ; ob. Precise origin obscure.—4. 'To resemble or pass for another,' Leverage, 1925 : U.S.A. : since ca. 1918. Prob. ex Australian s. be the dead ring of, 'to be a person's double'.

ring, in the. See in the ring.

ring-dropper. He who practises 'ring-dropping' (q.v.), otherwise known as 'fawney rig' : 1809, Andrewes ; but if it were c. at that time, it was certainly s. by 1820 and S.E. by 1840 or 1850. Cf. :—

ring-dropping was not so called until ca. 1720, though it was perhaps implied in dropper, q.v. But Awdeley, in The Fraternitie of Vacabondes, 1562, described thus the synonymous ring-faller :—'A Ryng faller is he that getteth fayre copper rings, some made like signets, & some after other fashions, very fair gylded, & walketh up and down the streetes, til he spieth some man of the country, or some other simple body whom he thinketh he may deceave, and so goeth a lyttle before him or them, and letteth fall one of these ringes, which when the party that commeth after spieth and taketh it up, he having an eye backward, crieth halfe part, the party that taketh it up, thinking it to be of great value, profereth him some money for his part, which he not fully denieth, but willeth him to come into some alehouse or taverne, and there they will common upon the matter. Which when they come in, and are set in some solitary place (as commonly they call for such a place) there he desireth the party that found the ring to shew it him. When he seeth it, he falleth a entreating the party that found it, and desireth him to take money for his part, and telleth him that if ever he may do him any friendship hereafter he shal commaund him, for he maketh as though he were very desirous to have it. The symple man seeing him so importune upon it, thinketh the ring to bee of great valure, and so is the more lother to part from it. At last this ring faller asketh him what he will give him for his part, for, saith he, seeing you wyl not let me have the ring, allowe me my part, and take you the ring. The other asketh what he counteth the ring to be worth, he answereth, v. or vi. pound. No, saith he, it is not so much worth. Well (saith this Ring-faller) let me have it, and I wyll allow you .XL. s. for your part. The other party standyng in a doubt, and looking on the ryng, asketh if he wyll geve the money out of hand. The other answereth, he hath not so much ready mony about him, but he wil go fetch so much for him, if he wil go with him. The other that found the ring, thinking he meaneth truly, beginneth to profor him .XX. s. for his part, sometymes more, or les, which he verve scornfullye refuseth at the first, and styl entreateth that he might have the ring, which maketh the other more fonder of it, and desireth him to take the money for his part, and so profereth him money. This ring faller, seeing ye mony, maketh it very straunge, and first questioneth with him wher he dwelleth, and asketh him what is his name, and telleth him that he semeth to be an honest man, and therefore he wil do somewhat for friendships sake, hoping to have as friendly a pleasure at his hand hereafter, and so profereth hym for .X. s. more he should have the ryng. At last, with entreatye on both partes, he geveth the Ring faller the money, and so departeth, thinkyng he hath gotten a very great Jewell. These kynde of deceyving Vacabondes have other practises with their rings, as sometimes to come to buy wares of mens Prentesies, and sometimes of their Maisters, and when he hath agreed of the price, he sayth he hath not so much money about him, but pulleth of one of these rings of from his fyngers, and profereth to leave it in pawne, tyl his Maister or his friendes hath sene it, so promising to bring the money, the seller thinketh he meaneth truly, letteth him go and never seeth him after, tyll perhaps at Tyburne or at such lyke place. Ther is another kinde of these Ring choppers, which commonly cary about them a faire gold ring in deede, and these have other counterfait rings made so lyke this gold ring, as ye shal not perceive the contrary, tyl it be brought to ye touchstone. This child wyl come to borow mony of the right gold ring, the party mistrusting the Ring not to be good, goeth to the Goldsmith with the partye that hath the ryng, and tryeth it whether it be good golde, and also wayeth it to know how much it is worth. The Goldsmith tryeth it to be good gold, and also to have hys ful weight like gold, and warenteth the party which shall lend the money that the ring is worth so much money according to the waight, this yoncker comming home with the party which shall lend the money, and having the gold ring againe, putteth up the gold ring, and pulleth out a counterfaite ring very like the same, and so delivereth it to the party which lendeth the money, they thinking it to be the same which they tryed, and so delivreth the money or sometimes wares, and thus vily be deceived.' Cf. the short account given by Dekker in John Fielding's London and Westminster, 1776. In 1786, it is referred to as 'the stale practice of ring dropping' (Sessions Papers, 7th Sessions, p. 1103).

ring(-)faller is the earliest name for a ring-dropper: 1562, Awdeley. Of his activities and procedure, the preceding entry contains an adequate account.

ring figures; or ring the figures. 'To blow a safe with a com shot,' Ersine, 1933; extant.

ring in. To exchange (bad money for good): 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'Ringing the changes, is a fraud practised by smashers, who when they receive good money in change of a guinea, &c., ring-in one or more pieces of base with great dexterity, and then request the party to change them'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1826, Baldwin & Knapp, The Newgate Calendar, IV; by 1860, s.—2. 'To ring in is to join in with another and appear to think as he thinks; to intrude; to force oneself into company where he is not wanted,' Matsell, 1859: U.S.A.: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood (of sincere participation in crime); 1904, Life in Sing Sing (id.).—3. V.t., 'to add surreptitiously or substitute cards in a pack': card-sharpers': 1890, B & L; or a fresh die in dieing (Maskelyne, 1894); 1903, F & H; 1914, J. H. Keate (U.S.A.); by 1920, it was s. Ex sense 1.—4. As applied to race-horses, it is racing s. (E.g., Edgar Wallace, Room 13, 1924.) The same applies to the Australian ring-in, 'a horse or dog fraudulently entered for a race': C. 20. (E.g., Baker, 1942.)

ring in a cold deck. 'To substitute a fresh pack, in which the cards are prearranged': since ca. 1880: 1890, B & L; after ca. 1920, it was s. or even coll. See ring in, 3.

ring in a grey, or ring in the (or a) knob. '(In a game of two-up): To substitute a double-headed or a double-tailed penny for a genuine coin,' Baker, 1942: Australian: late C. 19–20. Ex ring in, 3.

ring seats. See tugs, ring.

ring-tail. A petty criminal: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1929, Jack Callahan, who (Man's Grim Justice) implies that it had been current since the late 1890's; extant. Perhaps 2 is the earlier and, if so, then the determining sense.—2. 'There he was dressed in "ringtails" . . . a uniform with the stripes running around the body instead of lengthwise. These were put on refractory prisoners . . . these were not permitted to remove their coats while at work . . . That amounted to torture for "ringtailers" on the rock gang,' Roy W. Hinds, 'Ringtails', in Flynn's, Aug. 28, 1926: c. of ca. 1915–30, then s.—3. A hobo with a grouch, or a boastful one: tramps': 1931, Urbain Ledoux, Ho-bo-ho Medley No. 1; 1931, Stiff, 'An unpopular fellow'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Jan. 13, 1934, Flynn's, Jack Callahan; 1934, Convict (the 'boaster' nuance); extant. Ex 'some vicious or dangerous animal which happened to have a tail marked with a ring of different-coloured fur' (Irwin).—4. A catamite: since ca. 1925. Ersine, 1933; BVB, 1942. A combination of 1 and 3?

ring the changes. 'When a person receives silver in change, to shift some good shillings and put bad ones in their place,' Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811, but the vbl n., ringing . . ., occurs in Sessions Papers, Sept. 1801 (p. 549); 1812, J. H. Vaux, who shows that the same procedure is applied to gold; 1818, The London Guide; 1823, Bee; 1859, H., 'Ringing the Changes, changing bad money for good'; 1887, Baumann; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson; 1890, B & L; 1895, Caminada; 1903, G. R. Sims, Living London, III; 1925, Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons—but prob. it was low s. by 1910 or so.—2. See twisting.

ring the figures. See ring figures.

ring tugs. See tugs, ring.

ring-up, n. An alteration effected in a stolen car: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by Moreby Acklom; extant. See the v.

ring up, v. To alter the appearance of: automobile thieves': since ca. 1918: 1934, Rose, 'Joe wants you to ring up this shot short'. Cf. ring, v., 1.

ringer (or Ringer). A member of 'the Ring' (see ring, n., 3): prob. ca. 1830–70. Price Warung, Tales of the Early Days, 1894, and Baker, 1945.—2. In the 'green goods' gang, an important member is 'the Ringer, a confederate behind the partition, who dexterously replaces [i.e., displaces] the good money shown in the bank roll by the bundles of bogus notes', W. T. Stead, Satan's Invisible World Displayed, 1898 (p. 109): U.S.A.: 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Something or someone introduced into a game of chance or a shady deal to give an unfair advantage; an accomplice'; extant. Ex ring the changes.—3. A bell: American tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; app. † by 1930. Echoic.—4. A substitute; an impostor: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; ca. 1912, G. Bronson-Howard, The Snob; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'A similarity, a double, a disguise'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys, 'a duplicate. Exact resemblance'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; extant.—5. A policeman that refuses bribes and graft: U.S.A.: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Truc blue rings true.—6. An exceptionally quick changer of disguises: C. 20. Edgar Wallace, The Ringer, 1929. He 'rings the changes'.

ringfaller is a variant (in Awdeley) of ring(-)faller.

ringie or ringy. The keeper of a two-up 'ring' or school: Australian: late C. 19–20; by 1920, low s. Baker, 1942.

ringing. The changing of good money (coin) for bad: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, where, at p. 41, the art is described in detail; by 1900, low s. See ring, v., 1.

ringing castors. 'Frequenting churches and other public assemblies, for the purpose of changing hats, by taking away a good, and leaving a shabby one in its place; a petty game now seldom practised': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1859, H; † by 1910. Castor is s. for 'hat'.

ringing the changes. See ring-in and ring the changes.

ringster. A member of a car-stealing gang: 1929, The Saturday Evening Post; extant. He 'rings the changes' on car-numbers, colour of paint, etc.

ringtail. See ring-tail.

ringtailer. See ring-tail, 2.

ringy. See ringie.

rino is an occ. variant of rhino. E.g., Alex. Smith, The History of the Highwaymen, 1714, 'Come, come, down with your Rino this Moment'.

rinsings. See cotton, n., 2.

riot gun. A shot-gun sawn off short: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; April 26, 1930, Flynn's, Leighton H. Blood, 'Big Nick'; Oct. 11, 1930, Flynn's, Paul Annixter, 'The Pay-Off'; June 27, 1931, Flynn's, Erle Stanley Gardner, 'Not so Dumb'; by 1932, police and journalistic s. Useful, either to create panic or to quell a riot.

rip, n., 'a poor devil', is not c., as B & L, 1890, state it is.—2. 'On the rip—brazen outlawry,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: U.S.A.; extant.—3. A prostitute: s. rather than c.

rip, v. 'To steal with impunity,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; 1931, IA, 'To steal, especially when the theft is made without detection or suspicion'; extant. Cf. rip open.—2. To tear (a safe) open with a 'can-opener': 1925, Leverage; extant.—3. 'To do a big job,' Leverage, 1925; extant.

rip-and-tear, adj. 'Without caution; same as "raw-jaw" or "murder grift",' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937; extant. An elaboration ex—rather than of—rip, n., 2.

rip (a place) open. To despoil it by theft and robbery; to steal everything that is worth stealing in it: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, "'If Renshaw goes in [as Mayor] we'll all have to mooch [decamp], and the guns that ain't known here'll come to town an' rip it open an' get all the plunder"' ; by 1930, police and journalistic s. Cf. tear open.

ripe. Possessing, esp. carrying on one's person, a considerable sum of money: 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller; extant. Ripe for picking.

ripper. 'A new and ingenious implement of burglars, used in opening safes or vaults with iron surfaces,' Sylva Clapin, A New Dict. of Americanisms, 1903; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex its modus operandi.—2. A daring murderer of women: mostly London: ca. 1892–1920. Ware.—In C. 20 U.S.A., it = 'a vicious attacker of women' (BVB, 1942). Ex the eight woman-murders committed by Jack the Ripper in Dec. 1887–July 1889 (see esp. 'Jack the Ripper' in L. Forbes Winslow's Recollections of Forty Years, 1910).

rippers. Spurs: 1859, Matsell; ob. They rip the horse's sides. Perhaps suggested by allusive S.E. Ripons, 'spurs'.

ripperty man. A prostitute's bully: Australian: since ca. 1920. Kylie Tennant, Foveaux, 1939; Sidney J. Baker, letter of Aug. 3, 1946, from Sydney, 'Ripperty men are . . . better known in these parts as bludgers'—a much older term. Perhaps an elaboration of rip, 'dissolute fellow'.

ripsey rousers (or rowers). An occ. synonym of song and dance: trousers: Pacific Coast: C. 20.

Convict, 1934; M & B, 1944. Part of the so-called Australian slang; obviously it rhymes.

rise (or raise) a barney. 'To collect a mob': 1859, H; not c., but a 'term used by patterers'—street vendors—and "schwassle-box" (Punch and Judy) men', H, 3rd ed.

rise and shine. Wine: mostly Pacific Coast: late C. 19–20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

rise the plant. See plant, rise the.

riser. 'An "eye opener", a scare, a fright,' Jackson & Hellyer, 1914; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Anything that stirs to action. Something which brings an individual or a group to its feet.'

rispin. See raspin.

ritz. To snub someone or treat him superciliously: ca. 1925–35, then s. Ersine, 1933. Ex s. ritzzy, 'fashionable'.

river (or R-), up the. In Sing-Sing Prison: 1891, Darkness and Daylight; 1893, Confessions of a Convict; 1903, Owen Kildare, My Mamie Rose; 1903, J. Flynt, Roderick Clowd; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, generalizes it to 'to prison'—any prison; by 1928 (John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers) it was journalistic s. Sing-Sing Prison is at Ossining on the Hudson River and some 30 miles north of New York City.—2. Hence, in any prison: c. of ca. 1910–30, then police and journalistic s.: 1924 (see sense 1); 1931, Godfrey Irwin.—3. Hence, 'out of things', unavailable (for, say, a burglary): since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

river pirates, 'river thieves', is not c., but journalistic or police s.

river(-)rat. A Thamesido robber of drowned persons: 1883, James Greenwood, Tag, Rag & Co., ch. title, 'River Rats'; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; by 1900, s.

river-tick. 'I plunge neck and heels into sweet river-tick', glossed as 'tradesmen's books', and implied as c., by G. W. M. Reynolds, 1846, is Oxford University s.

riveter. A thief's, esp. a pickpocket's, accomplice: ca. 1860–1910. Recorded in the glossary (p. 320) of C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 1889. He makes things secure.

rizolin. See NARCOTICS ZIPH.

roach. A low prostitute: 1930, George London, Les Bandits de Chicago; extant. Short for cockroach, a loathsome insect.—2. 'A pinched-off smoke, or stub [of a marijuana cigarette], is a "roach",' Meyer Berger in The New Yorker, March 12, 1938: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. The roach is a stubby fish.

roach(-)bender. A marijuana-smoker: since ca. 1930. BVB, 1942. See roach, 2.

road; always the road. The underworld: since ca. 1890: it occurs in the works of Josiah Flynt, e.g., in Roderick Clowd, 1903 (concerning a clever young pickpocket), 'The Road is always watching for coming experts'; 1925, Leverage, 'On the road—out stealing with a mob'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; extant—but by 1946, slightly ob. Prob. orig. a tramps' term, cf. turf and rocky path.—2. Among tramps, it means 'the life of the road'—'tramping'—and is usually written the Road: 1897, Josiah Flynt in The Forum (D.A.E.); 1907, Jack London, The Road; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; and others. By 1918, at the latest, it was no longer to be classified as c. Cf. roadster.

road, send over the. See send over the road.

road, skid the. See skid the road.

road, up the, 'in prison' (properly, for a week, fortnight, a month), is euphemistic s. rather than c., and used by relatives rather than by the victim. See, e.g., Major Wallace Blake, Quod, 1927.

road-bum's corona. 'We had to rely on "Kerbstone Mixture" and "Road-bum's Coronas" . . . cast-away cigarette-ends,' Val Davis, Gentlemen of the Broad Arrows, 1939: convicts' and tramps': since ca. 1920. Derisively humorous allusion to a well-known brand of cigar.

road hog. 'A tramp who is always on the move, riding fast trains and seemingly unable to get enough of train riding,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1918.

road kid. A boy tramp: since ca. 1890. Jack London, The Road, 1907, in reference to early 1890's, 'They talked differently . . . It was a vernacular. They were road-kids . . . "No kid is a road-kid until he has gone over 'the hill'" —such was the law of The Road I heard expounded in Sacramento . . . "The hill," by the way, was the Sierra Nevadas'; ibid., 'A boy on the Road . . . is never a gay-cat; he is a road-kid or a "punk", and if he travels with a "profesh", he is known possessively as a "prushun"': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1918, Leon Livingston; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1925, Leverage; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; 1931, Stiff; 1931, IA; 1933, Ersine; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; by 1940, no longer c. See road, 2.

road(-)mug. A railroad detective: 1925, Leverage; extant.

road(-)pinker. 'Then there were "road-pinkers", these are a kind of "gay-cat", who have not yet graduated into a "profesh 'bo"', Terence McGovern, It Paid to Be Tough, 1939: Canadian tramps': since ca. 1910.

road(-)roll. 'Bill having arranged a "road-roll", or a showy pile of bills of small denomination, was willing to expend that much to ascertain definitely that Devol had played him false': 1879, Allan Pinkerton, Criminal Reminiscences; ob. Road expenses, as it were.

road sister. A female tramp; a female hobo: tramps': C. 20. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

road stake. Money by which to live while one is on the Road; money with which to procure transportation: tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Here, stake = 'grub stake'.

road starver. '(Mendicants, [from] 1881.) Long coat made without pockets, especially without a fob for money. Road meaning generally the mass of beggars—the starver is that which deprives the road of food,' Ware, 1909; † by 1930.

road work. 'Pocket picking, etc., done while travelling,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. road, 1.

roadster. 'The roadsters, or hobos who travel are seldom without smoking or chewing tobacco; for them snipe-shooting is the last resort,' Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 1925; elsewhere the term occurs at least thirty years earlier, and it is still current. Prob. never c.; or, at best, only ca. 1910–25. Ex road, 2, q.v.

roage. See rogue, n. (Harman; C. Johnson, 1734.) The same applies to roague (Dekker).

roar, n. A complaint, whether to a policeman or not: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, Jackson &

Hellyer, 'A protest'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Against some criminal act or against tramp's actions or mere presence'; by 1933, low s.; by 1940, gen. s. Prob. suggested by squeal, n., 2.—2. Hence, an alarm raised during or after a crime: since perhaps as early as sense 1: 1933, Eagle (after); Nov. 10, 1937, Godfrey Irwin (in a letter: during or after); extant—but police s. by 1935.

roar, v. To protest loudly; to complain, esp. to the authorities: mostly tramps': since ca. 1912: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1935, low s.; by 1939 or 1940, gen. s. Cf. the n.

roarer. As 'a broken-winded horse', it is turf s. that has > S.E.

roaring boy. This term may orig. have been c., though that is unlikely. One of the earliest descriptions is 'A Roaring Boyes Description' in S. Rowlands, A Paire of Spy-Knaves, 1613 ('His whole estate is borrow, coozen, cheate'); Anon., The brave English Jipsie, 1620 ('We are no roaring Boyes'). Ex his noisy behaviour.

Roary O'More. See Rory O'More.

roast, n. A reprimand: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1930, it was s. Cf. roast, v., 4.—2. But the roast is (death by) the electric chair: since ca. 1934. Flynn's, June 11, 1938, Richard Sale; extant. Cf. hot plate.

roast, v. To arrest: 1698, B.E., 'I'll Roast the Dab, I will Arrest the Rascal'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1870. I.e., to 'make it hot' for a person.—2. To rally, banter, quiz: dating from ca. 1700, it was s. by 1725 (witness the Preface of A New Canting Dict. of that date) and coll. by ca. 1800. The semantics are prob.: one so quizzes a man that he burns with shame or embarrassment.—3. (Of a detective) to watch (a suspect) closely: 1888, G. R. Sims; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob.—4. To speak ill of (another person): U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1940, very ob. indeed—but, even by 1949, not †. To 'make it hot' for him.

roast (a person) brown, to. (Of a detective) to watch, observe: 1888, G. R. Sims, 'A Plank Bed Ballad'; 1890, B & L; Jules Manchon, 1923; slightly ob. I.e., to do to a turn; cf. give a roasting.

roasting, give a. See give a roasting.

roasty roast. The winning-post in horse-racing: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on post.

rob the mail; usually robbing the mail, 'snatching food and milk delivered at the doorstep early in the morning,' Stiff, 1931; tramps': since ca. 1910; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, who applies it to the abstracting of titbits from a 'lump' or a 'hand-out' to be shared with one or more other tramps—a nuance going back at least as far as 1908. Cf. Eng. coll. come home with the milk, at about the time when the milk is—or used to be—delivered in the morning.

robbed himself, the man. An underworld c.p., 'Someone in the house assisted the thieves': 1859, Matsell; † by 1900. Ironic.

Robert's men. 'Mighty thieves, like Robin-hood,' says Coles, 1676: not c., as several lexicographers have implied, but good S.E.; B.E., 'Roberts-men . . . the third (old) Rank of the Canting Crew'.

robin. See round robin. The sense 'police officer' is s.—short for:—

robin redbreast, 'a Bow Street runner': not c.; merely s.

Robin's men. 'Expert thieves; grand larceny men; bank robbers, etc.': 1859, Matsell; † by 1890. For the origin, cf. Robert's men.

rock. A precious stone, esp. a diamond: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'Rocks—diamonds'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1927, Clark & Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice; Oct. 11, 1930, Liberty, R. Chadwick; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, W. R. Burnett, The Giant Swing; Jan. 20, 1934, Flynn's; by 1935, s.—it had, indeed, been familiar to policemen and journalists at least a lustrum earlier. Rock = stone = a precious stone. —2. An overcoat: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex rokelay. —3. A policeman's truncheon, a 'black-jack': 1929, Givens; 1934, Rose; extant. Ex its hardness; also it causes the recipient to rock or totter.

Rock, the. The penitentiary at Alcatraz: since the 1920's. Flynn's, Feb. 11, 1939, Richard Sale, 'He's on the Rock, doing from now on'. This prison is built on a rocky island off the Californian coast.

rock-pile cure; quarry cure. Synonymous with steel cure (a sudden forced abstinence): drug addicts': since ca. 1930. BVB, 'A form of "cold turkey" treatment in which addicts are worked on the stone quarry' (1942).

rocked. 'Superannuated, forgetful, absent in mind; old lags are commonly said to be thus affected, probably caused by the sufferings they have undergone': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1900. By ellipsis ex s. rocked in a stone kitchen, 'addled' (recorded by Grose).

rocked in a stone cradle. 'Born in a prison': 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Cf. stone jug and see note at end of rocked.

rocker. To speak: 1856, Mayhew, The Great World of London, "'Can you roker Romany (can you speak cant)?'"; 1876, C. Hindley, The Life of a Cheap Jack, "'Can you rocker Romanie, Can you patter flash, Can you rocker Romanie, Can you fake a bosh?'"; 1887, Baumann (roker); 1890, B & L, who classify it as Romany, although it was certainly current among tramps; 1903, F & H, 'Rocker (or rokker), verb. (Tramps': originally Gypsy.)—1. To understand; (2) to speak'; 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers, 'I must have 'em to go away with. Rokker?' (i.e., Do you understand?); by 1910, low s. Is not this Romany word (usually rokker) a perversion of—or rather, a phonetic development ex—L. vocare?

rockets. Marijuana cigarettes: since ca. 1930. BVB, who notes pack of rockets, a packet thereof. They send one very high.

rocks. Money: 1891, J. Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; by 1900, it was s.—perhaps it always was s. (Bartlett, Americanisms, 1848, 'Rock. A piece of money. A slang term peculiar to the South'.) Cf. s. dust and dirt, 'money'. —2. The usual form of rock, n., 1: diamonds: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Feb. 12, 1927, Flynn's; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; April 12, 1930, Flynn's, Thomas Topham; 1933, Ersine, 'Jewels, stones'; 1934, Convict; by 1935, s. in U.S.A. and c. in the British Empire; 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; and later English writers. —3. Dominoes: 1934, Rose; 1935, Hargan; extant.

rocks, sleep on. See sleep on rocks.

Rocks, the. More prob. local s. than c. of ca. 1810–40 is this, in History of George Godfrey, by Himself, 1828, III, 47: 'In Sydney, on the rocky ground opposite Bennilong's point, on which the Government House is established, there are a number of dirty streets, which, from the vicinity to the King's Wharf, are generally peopled with sailors, and all the disorderlies which usually abound where mariners find a temporary home. Low public-houses and brothels, are by no means scarce in this part of the town; and the whole neighbourhood, the St Giles's, or rather the St Katherine's of that quarter, is known by the name of "The Rocks"'. An earlier reference occurs in Thomas Reid, Two Voyages to New South Wales and Van Diemen's Land, 1822, at p. 267.

rocks and boulders. Shoulders: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

rocky path, the. The career of a criminal; criminal activities: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'Them that hit the rocky path'; ob. Cf. turf, q.v., and road.

rod, n. A revolver: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'The dago dropped the smoke-wagon and the bartender threatened to put him in prison for pulling a rod on respectable people'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'The gun slammed a rod to his nut. The thief put a pistol to his head'; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg"'); 1916, Wellington Scott, Seventeen Years in the Underworld; Sept. 1917, Hobo News, Bill Quirke, 'Hobo Memories'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; March 14, 1925, Flynn's; June 1925, The Writer's Monthly (R. Jordan); March 27, 1926, Flynn's; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1927, C. Francis Coe, Me—Gangster; 1928, J. K. Ferrier, Crooks and Crime; by 1929–30, police and journalistic s. in U.S.A.; by 1933 (Matt Marshall, Tramp-Royal on the Toby), current among British tramps, and by 1934 (Axel Bracey) in the London gangs. Ex the shape of the barrel, esp. in the long-barrelled type of revolvers. —2. Short for rod man or rod toter: 1929, E. D. Sullivan, Look at Chicago; Nov. 15, 1930, Flynn's, Earl W. Scott, 'Wolf wanted Brock put away, and he'd picked him, a strange rod, for the job'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Nov. 19, 1932, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly; Feb. 28, 1937, Flynn's; slightly ob. —3. An overcoat; a macintosh: British, esp. London: since ca. 1920. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932; F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938. Perhaps a corruption of rock, 2.

rod, v. To hold up at point of pistol or revolver; to drive away under threat of shooting: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1937, Godfrey Irwin (letter of Sept. 27), 'To use a gun'; extant. Ex the n.—2. Rod oneself, to arm oneself with a revolver; to 'pack a rod': Aug. 31, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, 'He told Hymie he better rod himself . . . "We better all be rodged"'; extant. See sense 1 of the n.

rod man; rod toter. A gunman: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (Glossary, s.v. 'Assaulter'); June 22, 1929, Flynn's, Charles Somerville, 'The Eel', 'A "rod-man" with a ready trigger finger'; March 15, 1930, Flynn's, John Wilstach (rod-toter); 1930, C. F. Coe, Gunman, 'Explain that to the rod-tosser'—prob. a mere personal variation; Oct. 24, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn (rodman); Nov. 19, 1932, Flynn's, Carroll John Daly (rodman); 1934, Rose; March 14, 1936, Flynn's, Richard Wormser (rodman); 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; 1940, W. R. Burnett, High Sierra, 'We need a rodman . . . You're it'; May 1942, Flynn's, Richard Sale (rod toter); extant. See rod, n., 1.

rod off. To shoot; esp. to shoot dead with a revolver: since ca. 1920: 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'The casual remark by either Jones or Murray of "rodding off the guy"'; extant. Cf. rod, n. and v.

rod-shank (Head, 1665) is a misprint for red-shank.

rod up. See:—

rodded(-)up. Armed with a revolver: April 12, 1930, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'I was rodded up an' I could 'a' give him the works . . .', but it wasn't worth it'; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; 1933, Ersine quotes 'Rod up and we'll blow'; extant. Ex rod, n., 1.

rodder. A gunman: June 18, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; slightly ob. See rod, n., 1, and v., 2.

rodger. See roger.

Rodney. A tramp: 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. with a pun on rods.

rods; mostly in on the rods, 'riding beneath a train'. The phrase bum on the rods is used by tramps to mean 'tramps and hoboes in general', as in the anon. poem, 'The Bum on the Rods and the Bum on the Plush', quoted by Nels Anderson in The Hobo, 1923; 1925, Glen H. Mullin (see ride the rods); 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, "'Let's beat the damned [engine] out on the rods," snapped Bill'; Sept. 6, 1930, Flynn's, Earl H. Scott; 1931, Stiff, 'The nether structure of a freight car. Modern cars do not have rods'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1938, Francis Chester, Shot Full; by 1939, no longer c. Short for draw-rods.

rof-efil. Criminals' back-s. on for life, it means 'a life sentence': 1903, F & H—but prob. current since ca. 1870; as c., † by 1920.

roge. See roguing.

rogeman is a misprint, in Awdeley, for togeman.

Roger. 'A begging vagabond who pretended to be a poor scholar from Oxford or Cambridge' (O.E.D.): 1536, Copland, The Hye Way of the Spyttel House; app. † by 1590. Perhaps, as The O.E.D. remarks, a variant of rogue.—2. See Roger of the Buttery.—3. A portmanteau: 1665, R. Head (see quot'n at peter, n., 1); ibid., in the glossary, 'Roger . . . A cloak-bag'; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), as rodger; † by 1887 (Baumann). Prob. by personification—possibly suggested by peter, n., 1.—4. The sense, 'a man's penis', recorded by B.E., 1698, may orig. have been c., but was certainly s. by 1800. Prob. ex Roger, a pet name for a ram.—5. A thief-taker: ca. 1710–60. A New Canting Dict., 1725. Perhaps as if = roguer.—6. A tramp: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. sense 1.—7. A racketeer: U.S.A.: 1929–31, Kernôt; slightly ob. Prob. ex the jolly roger of piracy.

Roger (or Tib) of the buttery. 'A Roger or tyb of the buttery, a Goose,' Harman, 1566; Dekker's entry in 'The Canters Dictionarie' (Lanthorne and Candle-light), 1608–9, 'Roger, or Tib of the Buttry, a Goose', tends to confirm my suspicion that the two terms are (1) Roger, and (2) Tib of the Buttery, not Roger of the buttry and Tib of the buttry,—a confirmation rendered the more likely by Beaumont & Fletcher's 'Or mergery-praters, Rogers, | And Tibs o' the Buttry' in The Beggars Bush, written ca. 1615; 1688, Holme; 1785, Grose; † by 1903 (F & H).

roging mate. See roguing mate.

roglan is tinkers' s. (B & L, 1890) for a four-wheeled vehicle: cf. rotan.

rogue, n. (See also rogues.) This term, orig. c., remained a c. term, with a specific sense, until C. 18; its S.E. acceptance was authorized by a legal definition ca. 1571. Awdeley, 1562 (see the first quot'n at wild rogue); Harman, 1566, has on the Rogue, a section commencing thus: 'A Roge is neither so stoute or hardy as the upright man. Many of them will go fayntly and looke piteously when they see, either meete any person, having a kercher, as white as my shooes, tyed about their head, with a short staffe in their hand, haltinge, although they nede not, requiring almes of such as they meete, or to what house they shal com. But you may easily perceive by their colour that they cary both health and hipocrisie about them, wherby they get gaine, when others want that cannot fayne and dissemble. Others therebee that walke sturdely about the countrey, and faineth to seke a brother or kinsman of his, dwelling within som part of the shire;—either that he hath a letter to deliver to som honest housholder, dwelling out of an other Shyre, and will shewe you the same fayre sealed, with the superscription to the partye he speaketh of, because you shall not thinke him to runne idelly about the countrey;—either have they this shyfte; they wyll cary a certificate or pasport about them from som Justicer of the peace, with his hand and seale unto the same, howe hee hath bene whipped and punished for a vacabonde according to the lawes of this realme, and that he muste returne to .T., where he was borne or last dwelt, by a certayne daye lymited in the same, which shalbe a goode long daye. And all this fayned, bycause without feare they would wyckedly wander, and wyll renue the same where or when it pleaseth them; for they have of their affinity that can wryte and read. These also wyll picke and steale as the upright men, and hath their women and metinges at places apoynted, and nothings to them inferiour in all kynde of knavery. There bee of these Roges Curtales'—i.e., among them are Rogues Curtaal—'wearinge shorte clokes, that wyll chaunge their apparell, as occasion servethe. And their end is eyther hanginge, whiche they call trininge in their language, or die miserably of the pockes.' This account is shamelessly plagiarized by Dekker in The Belman of London, 1608. By 1660 the term was no longer c.—2. A shilling: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942. Short for rogue and villain.

rogue, v.; vbl n., roguing. To tramp—tramping—as a rogue or as a vagrant: ca. 1560–1720. Harrison, 1577 (O.E.D.), has roguing. Ex the n.

rogue, stall to the. See stall to the rogue.

rogue, wild. See wild rogue.

rogue and pullet (usually spelt pull(e)y). "Rogue and Pulley." A man and woman going out to rob gentlemen': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), the same form; 1887, Baumann (id.); 1890, B & L (id.); 1903, F & H, 'A man and woman in confederacy as thieves'; † by 1920. Cf. Fr. s. poule, a prostitute.

rogue and villain. A shilling: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1865, low rhyming s.; by 1875, gen. rhyming s.

rogues. (See also rogue and wild rogue.) Its specific sense in c. of C. 16-18 is that given by Randle Holme, The Academy of Armory, 1688, 'Common Beggars that will not Work though they are able'; in 1698, B.E. delimits them as 'the fourth Order of Canters'; as does A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1800.

rogues' yarn. A red or blue thread worked into the ropes and canvas manufactured in Government dockyards, 'to identify them if stolen' (H, 3rd ed., 1864); not c., but s.

roguing. See rogue, v.

roguing mate. A fellow given to vagabondage and/or roguery; an associate in roguery or vagabondage: 1592, Robert Greene, The Thirde Part of Conny-catching, 'Let us . . . com to Gracious street, wher this villanous pranke was performed. A roging mate, and such another with him, were there got upon a stal'; app. † by 1690. See rogue, v.

roister. See royster.

roker or rokker is a variant of rock.

roll, n. See roll of snow.—2. See blanket roll.—3. A bundle or roll of bank-notes: U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1920, it has > generic for 'money'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1932, no longer c.

roll, v. To drive: 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum, 'Roll your dickey; drive your ass'; app. † by 1890. ? Cause him to 'roll along'.—2. To rob, steal from the person: U.S.A.: 1907, Jack London, The Road, concerning 'road kids', 'Robbing a drunken man they call "rolling a stiff"'—the passage being valid for the early 1890's; 1912, D. Lowrie, My Life in Prison, 'A plain case of rollin' a drunk'; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'To rob a sleeping or intoxicated person'; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1927, Francis C. Coe, Me—Gangster; 1927, Kane; 1930, Lennox Kerr, Backdoor Guest; 1931, C. R. Shaw, Natural History of a Delinquent; 1931, Stiff, 'To rob a sleeping drunk'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; 1934, Convict; 1935, Hargan; 1937, Daniel Boyle, Keeping in Trouble; 1941, Ben Reitman, Sister of the Road; 1942, Baker (Australia: where current since ca. 1930); extant. Ex rolling him over to get at his money.

roll, on the. Living as a tramp: 1925, Lever-age; extant. Prob. on the road, influenced by the coll. to roll along.

roll a pill. To prepare opium for smoking: addicts': since the 1920's. BVB. See pill, n., 2.

roll around. See roll round!

roll in. To practise; be alert to or cognizant of: ca. 1773, Anon., The New Fol de rol Tit (or The Flash Man of St Giles), 'We roll in every knowing rig'; † by 1890.

roll in one's ivory (or ivories). To kiss (a person) lasciviously: 1781, Ralph Tomlinson, A Slang Pastoral, 'To roll in her ivory, to pleasure her eye'; app. † by 1890. Cf. s. ivories, teeth. Lingual osculation.

roll in the sawdust. To be so drunk that one cannot stand: tramps': C. 20. Stiff, 1931, 'In the barrel house, now extinct, they put sawdust on the floor for the convenience of the drunks'.

roll of snow. A 'piece of Irish linen': 1838, Brandon: 1847, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, III; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; extant. See snow, 1.

roll on . . .! "A burst in the City. Copped while boning the swag. 7 Stretch, 1869. Roll on 1876. Cheer up, pals." Another—"Hook, 7 ys. Roll on time" (inscriptions in convicts' cells): 1885, Michael Davitt, Leaves from a Prison Diary; 1894, A. Griffiths, Secrets of the Prison House, 'They'—convicts—'keep mental calendars like school-boys, and for ever reiterate the old refrain, "Roll on, time". To shorten time, in fact or fancy, is their perpetual prayer'; 1901, Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life, Vol. 2; 1930, T. Whyte Mountain, Life in London's Great Prisons, "'Roll-on" is one of the phrases most frequently heard on the lips of the prisoner'. Soldiers were using it at least as early as 1914.

roll on, cocoa! May the end of the working part of the day come!: convicts': since ca. 1918. In, e.g., James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 1936. Cocoa forms part of the convict supper.

roll on, time! See roll on . . .!, reference of 1894.

roll-over, the. The night before one's release from prison: convicts': 1934, Rose, but current at least a decade earlier; extant. Cf. the synonymous turn-over; to roll, or turn, over constantly in one's bunk in the sleeplessness natural to the occasion.

roll round! is an American version of roll on . . .! Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904, 'Just before I went to bed [on my last night in Auburn Prison] I sang for the last time a popular prison song . . .: "Roll round, '89, '90, '91, sweet '92 roll around. | How happy I shall be the morning I go free, sweet '92 roll around"'—a passage implying currency at least as early as 1889; ob.

roll stuff. 'To smuggle narcotics in wholesale quantities,' BVB, 1942: since the 1920's. See stuff, n., 8.

roll the belt. "Rolling the belt", or "[the] strap", or "the loop game". In England it is called "rolling the garter". This is simply a "can't win" sport in which the mug endeavours—vainly, of course—to insert a pencil in the loop of a rolled-up belt,' Francis Chester, Shot Full, 1938: C. 20.

roll the garter. See the preceding.

roll the lear (or leer). To practise pickpocketry, be a pickpocket: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Progress', 'The boldest lad | That ever mill'd the cly, or roll'd the leer'; † by 1900. See leer and leer, go out upon the.

roll the log. See log, n.

roll under cover (v.i.). To hide, go into hiding: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant.

roller. 'Rollers, horse and foot patrol, who parade the roads round about London during the night, for the prevention of robberies': 1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan's Grose; app. † by 1860.—2. A thief, esp. as in roll, v., 2: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. In the white-slave vocabulary, a prostitute fond of robbing her customers: BVB, 1942.—3. To take the rollers, 'to walk away; to depart' (Hargan, 1935), is Am. s.—not c.—4. A drug addict: Am. addicts' and traffickers': since ca. 1930. BVB.

Rolley roar. A floor: Pacific Coast: M & B, 1944. A corruption of Rory O'More, 1.

rollicking. A reprimand; a 'telling-off': since ca. 1930. Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938, 'He gave the copper a real rollicking'. A perversion, prob. deliberate and humorous, of low s. bollicking, which is synonymous.

rolling. Smartly dressed: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'Wedlock's noose | Together fast has tied | Moll Blabbermums and rowling Joe'; ibid., Glossary, 'Rolling Joe. A kind of fellow who dresses smart, or what they term natty'; app. † by 1850. He rolls along with a swaggering gait.

rolling a stiff. See roll, v., 2, quot'n of 1914.

rolling Joe. (Old cant), a smartly dressed fellow, B & L, 1890: see rolling. The term seems to have been current ca. 1770–1850. Joe is generic for 'chap, fellow'; rolling refers to his swaggering gait.

rolling kiddy. A flashy and adroit thief, still young or youngish: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see quot'n at kiddy); 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Progress', 'With rolling kiddies, Dick would dive and buz'; † by 1900. See rolling and kiddy.

rolling orphan. 'A stolen car whose marks of identification have been removed,' Hargan, 1935: car thieves': since the late 1920's. 'Automobile salesman's and motorist's slang had "orphan car" for any automobile whose maker had retired, or any car no longer manufactured; parts for repairing these machines were hard to find' (Godfrey Irwin).

rom. See rum, adj.

Romany as a c. synonym for 'cant' was never gen. and seems to have been confined to a few tramps and to perhaps not so few itinerant vendors: 1851, Mayhew (see voker): ca. 1830–80.

rombol(e) is an occ. variant of romboyle, v., q.v. at the quot'n of 1665.

romboyle, n. Thus in Dekker, O per se O, 1612: 'Roagues taken in Romboyles (that is to say, in Watches or Wardes) by the Petty Harman Beck (. . . a petty Constable)'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Romboyle . . . A watch or ward'; 1676, Coles ('the Watch'); 1698, B.E., 'Romboyles, c. Watch and Ward'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725, and in Grose, 1785; † by 1800. Prob. ex:—

romboyle, v. To take or seize: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'Duds and Ruffe-pecke, rumboild by Harman becke, | and won by Mawnders feates'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Duds & Ruffe-peck, Rombold by Harman becke'; 1676, Coles, 'Romboyld, c. with a warrant', i.e. arrested with a warrant; 1698, B.E. defines romboyld as 'sought after with a Warrant'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1860. An echoic word; ? cf. Scot. romble, to beat.

Rome or rome. See rum, adj. Harman, 1566.

rome bouse. See rum booze. Harman, 1566, has Rome bouse.

rome cove. See rum cove.

Rome-culle. See rum cull.

rome mort. See rum mort.

Rome vil(l)e or Romeville. See Rum ville. Harman, 1566, has Rome vyle.

romely. See rumly. (Rowlands, 1610.)

romer, 'a drinking glass', is not c., but an † variant of S.E. rummer.

romoners, 'fortune tellers' (Potter, 1797): a suspect term. But it may derive ex Romanies, Gypsies.

romoney, 'a Gypsy': 1859, Matsell: only doubtfully c. I.e., Romany.

ronnie or ronny. A potato: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'I . . . leapt a hedge into a field, where some coves were rousting ronnies', i.e., digging up—lit., raising—potatoes; † by 1903 (F & H). Perhaps by personification: cf. the s. synonym, Murphy.

roofer. A hat: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. It roofs the head: cf. s. lid.—2. 'I . . . went for gatherings where we knew we should find "roofers", or country gentlemen,' Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 1904; app. † by 1930. He 'has a roof over his head'.—3. A speed-maniac hobo or tramp that rides the roofs of trains: tramps': since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

rook, n., 'a swindler or a thief' (1577: O.E.D.) is usually thought to be S.E.; but ca. 1550–1750, in the specific sense of 'a sharper at gaming', it may have been s. or even c.: witness, e.g., Anon., Leathermore's Advice (or The Nicker Nicked), 1666, at p. A3, and also B.E., 1698. Ex 'the thievish disposition' of that bird (Grose).—2. A knave: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; app. † by 1800. Presumably ex sense 1.—3. 'The cant name for a crow used in house-breaking,' Grose, 2nd ed., 1788, but occurring in Sessions Papers, May 31, 1786, p. 710, 'They went there with an iron crow, which in their way they call a rook', and ibid., Sept. 1792, p. 357; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A small iron crow'; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1903, F & H; † by 1910. By a pun on crow(bar).

rook, v. To cheat (a person), esp. at gaming; to 'play the Knave': 1698, B.E. Perhaps c. until ca. 1750. Ex the n., 1.

rook-gat. Tipsy: Afrikaans-speakers', hence other South African crooks': late C. 19–20. C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946. Lit., smoke-arse: cf. babbeljas.

rookery (or R-), the, 'the slum area round about Tottenham Court Road': not c., but s. There is an excellent description in 'Gin-Shops', Sketches by Boz, First Series, 1836.

rooky, 'rascally, rakish, scampish' (H, 2nd ed., 1860), is not c., but s. rooled up, ppl adj. 'Put in a spunging house' (Sinks of London, 1848): prob. low s. Properly ruled.

room or roome. See rum. E.g., roome cuttle = rum cuttle, q.v.—2. Room only: a prison cell: U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Euphemistic.

roon. A mushroom: tramps': late C. 19–20. In, e.g., W. L. Gibson Cowan, Loud Report, 1937. A perversion of Kentish dial. room.

roosher. A police constable: ca. 1870–1920. F & H, 1903. A rare variant of rozzer.

roost(-)lay, the. Stealing poultry: 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); app. † by 1887 (Baumann). See lay, n., 2.

rooster. See queer rooster and stale rooster.

Rooster Brand is 'a bootleg brand of opium' (Convict, 1934); not c. roosting-ken. An inn: 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L, 'Lodging-house, inn'; † by 1940. Lit., a roosting house (see ken).

root, v. See rooting.

root against—with—the oliver. To work at a burglary, esp. at a bank-robbery, with—without—the moonlight showing one up: esp. bank robbers': since the early 1920's: Oct. 1931, The Writer's Digest, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Howard N. Rose. See rooting and Oliver; and cf. the synonymous phrases s.v. Oliver.

rooter. 'A heister, stickup man,' Ersine: since mid-1920's. See:—

rooting, vbl n. Stealing, theft: C. 20: 1928, Chicago May; May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld', 'Rooting implies that several men are going out on robbery bent. "Come on, let's root against that jug today." "Larry got shot rooting single-handed." Rooting belongs to the old yeggs, but during the war [of 1914–18] there was very little rough stealing in this country, and the verb fell into disuse. Then along about 1919 or 1920 it started to come back'; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice, "On our way downtown," Benny said, "We might as well do a little 'rooting', git a few leathers, a stone or two, and then we can lay off for a few days and 'kick the old gong around'"; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'To rob at the point of a gun'; extant. 'No doubt first used in the sense that the stolen goods were "rooted out", hauled away by main force, as with a safe which was . . . carried away and then broken into at leisure' (Irwin).

roots. Boots: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1910. M & B, 1944. Short for Cockney rhyming s. daisy roots.

rooty. Casual-ward bread: tramps': since ca. 1919. The Rev. Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932. Adopted ex Army s., Hindustani rooti.

rope, n. 'A decoy (person or thing); bait,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. line and string.—2. A cigar: Nov. 10, 1934, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant. Orig., an inferior cigar—ex the bad smell of rope and of bad cigars: 'What are you smoking? Old rope?'—3. Execution by hanging: 1934, Rose, 'Jim got a rope this morning'; extant. Grimly proleptic.

rope, v. 'Roped. Led astray: taken in and done for': 1859, Matsell; 1882, J. D. McCabe, New York (in reference to gambling dens); 1903, F & H; by 1905, s. Cf. rope, n., 1.

rope, cut the. 'To cut a story short; to stop yarning', F & H, 1891; ob. Cf. cut the line or string (at line and string).

rope, take the. To commit suicide: 1935, Hargan; extant. Contrast rope, n., 3.

rope in is the v. corresponding to roper-in: 1859, Matsell; 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; 1887, G. W. Walling, Recollections; by 1890, s. I.e., to pull in as with a rope; cf. s. roping in, 'cheating' (Bartlett, Americanisms, 1848).—2. To bring about a deal (in counterfeit) between informers and criminals; to hoist a criminal with his own petard: U.S.A.: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; † by 1930.

roper, 'a hangman', seems to have been current ca. 1780–1820, to judge from the entry in Jon Bee, Dict. (Addenda), 1823. He who handles the halter.—2. 'A man who is sure to be hanged when apprehended': 1855, John Lang, The Forger's Wife; app. † by 1920.—3. A variant of roper-in: U.S.A.: 1875, E. King, The Southern States, 'The ropers for the gambling-houses . . . haunt each conspicuous corner' (O.E.D.); 1903, Clapin, Americanisms; by 1905, s. See rope, v., and roper-in.—4. 'One who is well versed in a given subject,' Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: not c., but s.—5. (Ex sense 3.) A 'roper-in' to a brothel: white-slave traffic (U.S.A.): 1936, Ben Reitman, The Second Oldest Profession; 1940, Joseph Crad, Traders in Women.

roper-in. 'A man who visits hotels and other places for the purpose of ingratiating himself with persons who are supposed to have plenty of cash and little prudence, and inducing them to visit gaming-houses': 1859, Matsell; but at p. 115 (picker-up) Matsell repudiates this definition by stating that such a man is a 'picker-up' (q.v.) and by defining 'roper-in' thus, 'It is usually confidence-men, ball-players, pocket-book droppers, and others attached to that fraternity. The roper-in takes a man over to Brooklyn or New Jersey, and is an actor in the swindle'; 1865, Tricks and Traps of New York, in reference to faked auctions; 1876, P. Farley, Criminals of America; 1881, The Man Traps of New York; as decoy to a faro gang, in George W. Walling, Recollections of a New York Chief of Police, 1887; 1888, George Bidwell, Forging His Chains; by 1890, s. Ex rope in.

ropper. A comforter, a muffler: 1873, J. Greenwood, In Strange Company; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. Perhaps a perversion of wrapper.

roram. The sun: U.S.A. (—1794): 1807, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; † by 1890. F & H's ingenious and prob. viable suggestion is that as Oliver is c. for the moon, roram may be a disguised—or a corrupted—form of Roland, ex the proverbial phrase a Roland for an Oliver; for the ending -am, cf. pannam and cassam (= cassan).

rort; rorter; rorting. An illicit or criminal trick or procedure, a racket; a professional sharper or swindler; sharp practice, esp. confidence-trickery: Australia: since ca. 1910. Baker, 1942. The second and third derive from the first, which appears to be a back-formation ex English (hence Australian) s. rorty, 'boisterous; mischievous'; cf. poof-rorting.

rory. A door: 1931, Brown, 'He . . . forced a door open with a jemmy (screwed a rory)'; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant. An underworld shortening of Rory O'More, 'a door'. Cf.:—

rory, on the. Penniless: since ca. 1920. In, e.g., F. D. Sharpe, Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938, and Mark Benney, The Big Wheel, 1943. I.e., on the Rory O'More: on the floor: down and out.

Rory O'More. A floor: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1865, low rhyming s.; by 1875, gen. rhyming s. In late C. 19–20, however, it is c. of the Pacific Coast of the U.S.A.: M & B, 1944.

rosary, do the. To serve a 30-days' imprisonment: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Time in which to tell one's beads.

rosary, the. A variation of the confidence trick: since ca. 1910. Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld, 1933. Piety being victimized.

roscoe. A revolver: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1929, Givens; 1930, Burke, 'Rosco, n. A hand gun. "They settle him on a rosco rap"'; 1930, Charles F. Coe, Gunman; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 1931, D. W. Maurer, who spells it rosco; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; 1933, Ersine, 'A large, heavy pistol; an iron'; 1933, Eagle, 'Roscoes—automatics': whereon Godfrey Irwin's comment (letter of Nov. 10, 1937) is 'Any pistol or revolver'; 1934, Convict; 1934, Rose; Feb. 8, 1936, Flynn's, Richard Wormser, 'He wanted me to tote a roscoe'; Dec. 4, 1937, Flynn's, Fred C. Painton; 1938, Damon Runyon, Furthermore, 'He outs with a big John Roscoe and fires six shot'; June 11, 1938, Flynn's, Richard Sale; 1938, Castle, 'A hand gun'; extant. Origin?—2. 'We found fifty or seventy-five knights of the road congregated round the watering-tank. . . . Here and there one saw a comparatively well-dressed "Roscoe", as they call themselves. Most of them, however, were ragged and hungry looking,' Broadway Jack in Flynn's, May 2, 1936; extant. Ex a well-dressed tramp named Roscoe?

rose. A secret: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. Prob. ex S.E. under the rose or sub rosa.

rose room, the. A room set apart for third-degree questioning: Nov. 1937, For Men Only, Robert Baldwin, 'Narcotic offenders are seldom pampered in the Rose Room'; extant. Ironical: it affords no 'bed of roses' to the third-degree'd.

roses red. A bed: Pacific Coast: C. 20. Convict, 1934; M & B, 1944. Rhyming s., perhaps introduced by Australians. (The English rhyming s. term is Uncle Ned.) rosser. See rozzier.

rotan. A wheel: 1698, B.E. (see quot'n at croppen) at flogging; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., where it is misspelt or misprinted rottam; app. † by 1750 or, at the very latest, 1800. Ex L. rota, a wheel.—2. Hence, 'a Coach, or Waggon, any thing that runs upon Wheels; but principally a Cart', A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, who (at queer rotan) misprints it as rotar; 1823, Bee; 1848, Sinks of London, where it is misprinted rotau; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1887 (Baumann).

Rotan Row. The ride in Hyde Park: ca. 1750–1815. Jon Bee, 1823, 'now misspelt Rotten-row'. See rotan, 2.

rotar. See rotan, 2, reference of 1809.

rotary, a specially shaped, revolving cell-block, is prison j.—not convicts' c.

rotau. See rotan, 2, ref. of 1848.

rottam. See rotan, 1, ref. of 1707.

Rotten Row. A V.D. ward in, or section of, a prison: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; extant. Humorous on London's fashionable Rotten Row (see Rotan Row).

roue. See row.

rough, v. See rough it.

rough, lie. See rough it.

rough customer. 'An unmanageable or pugnacious prisoner': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; almost certainly not c., but police s.

rough(-)fam, or r.-fammy. 'The waistcoat pocket': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1903 (F & H). Rough, from the texture; fam 'a hand': ex the habit of putting one's hands (partly) in one's waistcoat pocket(s) as one talks.

rough it. To sleep on the stairs (in order to draw chumage from a richer prisoner): prisoners' c.: 1785, Grose, 'To lie rough, to lie all night in one's clothes; called also roughing it'; † by 1890. I.e., to lie rough.

rough 'un. 'A tramp does not spend all his life in casual wards. For the best part of the summer he sleeps out; choosing his spots well away from the main roads, he has his regular "rough-uns"'. One night it may be on the sands of the seashore, the next in a forest. Hayricks and barns provide comfort for many a weary traveller,' W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 1936: tramps': C. 20.

rough-up. See dead rough-up.

rougher. See ruffier, 2.

roughing it is the n. corresponding to rough it. Grose, 1785.

Roumanian box trick. 'A swindle game in which victim places money in money-making machine and loses it,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924: hardly c.; rather, police s. or, more prob. j.

round, n. '7. A Round': 1859, Matsell; ob. Prob. ex some card game.

round, v. To inform; esp. in round on, 'to inform against': Dec. 5, 1857, The Times, 'I will round on you' (cited by 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 2nd ed., 1859); 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); Feb. 28, 1871, Sessions Papers; 1875, A. Griffiths, Memorials of Millbank; March 1879, Sessions Papers; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. in England; 1904, Life in Sing Sing; by 1910, no longer c. in U.S.A. Ex S.E. round, 'to take a winding course' (nautical).

round, adj. Honest, not engaged in crime: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; by 1903 (F & H), no longer c. Not crooked.

round-about. 'An instrument used in house-breaking. This instrument has not been long in use. It will cut a round piece about five inches in diameter out of a shutter or door': 1811, Lexicon Balatronicum; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; ob.—2. A 'female thief's pocket, which encircles her body and reaches down to the knees, with two apertures; it will stand a common search undetected; a watch, spoons, or money sliding round from side to side; and if the wearer be bulky, much larger articles pass undiscovered' (Bee): 1818, The London Guide (p. 164); 1823, Bee; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; extant.—3. A treadmill of the kind invented by Cubit in 1821: prisoners': 1823, Bee; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; by 1910, it was †. It resembles a round-about in a fair.

round-bottom. See roundbottom.

round chalk. 'A report for punishment in prison,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Cf. square chalk.

round heels. A detective: 1934, Rose; extant. Prob. ex the round rubber-heels attached, for silence' sake, to his footwear: cf. soft heel.

round me houses; later, round the houses. 'Trousers, pronounced trouses': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1865, low, and by 1875, gen. rhyming s. In C. 20 U.S.A., however, it is—as round the houses—c.: M & B, 1944.

round on. See round, v.

round robin, 'a circular petition', may orig. have been s., but it certainly was never c.; in fact, the occasional misapprehension that it may once have been c. can be due only to the fact that it appears in several glossaries that contain much c.—2. Hence (?), 'a burglar's instrument': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1940.—3. 'They . . . take a house, furnish it, and then go in for a "round robin" or good heavy swindle': 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (concerning 'swell mobsmen'); 1903, F & H; ob.

round the clock. See clock, n., 4, and cf. all the year round.

round the horn (or Horn). See around the horn.

round to. To recover from a faint: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 'Rounding To. Coming to'; by 1920, no longer c. I.e., to come round.

roundabout. See round-about.

roundbottom. A justice of the peace: 1822, Anon., The Life and Trial of James Mackcoull, 'To shirk the roundbottom . . . To cheat the justice'; † by 1900. Ex his full-bottomed wig.

roundem. A button: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann; 1903, F & H; ob. It is round; -em, a disguise-suffix, with which cf. the -am of pannam.—2. Hence the human head: C. 20. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923.

rounder. 'One who hangs around faro-banks, but does not play. In other words, a loafer, a man who travels on his shape, and is supported by a woman, but does not receive enough money to enable him to play faro. Gamblers call such men rounders, outsiders, loafers': 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; 1891, Darkness and Daylight; 1902, W. A. Irwin, The Love Sonnets of a Hoodlum; by 1903 (Clapin, Americanisms) it was s. I.e., 'one who hangs around'.—2. A vehicle on four wheels (not a wagon): English: 1863, The Story of a Lancashire Thief; † by 1900.—3. An informer to the police: English: Sept. 17, 1880, Sessions Papers, detective log., 'Benjamin said, "There sits Cornwall at his door; don't let him see me with you, I do not want to be considered by him a — rounder"': † by 1940. Ex round, v.—4. 'Any underworld character, but usually one old and of wide acquaintance,' Ersine: since ca. 1910. Prob. ex 1.

Roundhead. A Swede: tramps': C. 20. In, e.g., Stiff, 1931.

rounding, 'betraying, betrayal': the vbl n. of round, v.

rounding-to. See round to.

rounds. Trousers: mostly tramps': 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo Lippi, 'One day he walked straight into this kitchen clobbered in a black pair of rounds, tight to his legs'; 1903, F & H; † by 1940. 'Short for round-the-houses (rhyming s.):' F & H.

roundy, or roundy-ken. A round-house, a watch-house or lock-up: 1828, P. Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry, and Logic, 'Anxious to avoid a night's lodging in the roundy-ken, or committal by the magistrates for a month as disorderly'; 1848, Sinks of London, in form roundyken; by 1903 (F & H) it was †. Ex its shape; ken = house or place.

rouny is a misapprehension—or a mere misprint—for ronnie (or ronny): 1903, F & H, vi, 61.

rouse, v. 'When I got to the corner I heard a cry of "Rouse"—that means rescue the prisoners, or something of that sort—there was a gang of thieves there—I saw the two prisoners struggling with the prosecutor and Isaacs,' policeman witness, May 6, 1867 (p. 9), Sessions Papers; by 1900 it had merged with sense 2. V.i. for v. reflexive (rouse yourselves).—2. (Concerning the operations of a gang of pick-pockets) 'It sometimes happens that it is somewhat difficult to get the wallet or package out of the pocket, and if any unusual force is used in withdrawing it, the man will feel it, and give the alarm. In cases of this kind, the "tool" [or actual thief], when he has the wallet in his fingers and ready to be drawn out, will cry, "Rouse!" At this signal all of the "stalls" give the man a general push at the same time, and during the confusion of the moment, the "tool" deftly pulls out the wallet and decamps': U.S.A.: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective; 1925, Leverage, 'To pick a pocket under cover of a faked crush in a crowd'; extant. A special application of an S.E. sense: 'bestir yourselves!'

roust. To dig up (potatoes): 1821, David Haggart, Life (see quot'n at ronnie); † by 1903 (F & H). Lit., to arouse, i.e., to raise.—2. To jostle (a person): U.S.A.: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'To crowd or jostle a prospective victim' (of pickpockets); 1925, Leverage; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. A variant of rouse, q.v.

router-putter or router's putter; usually pl. A cow's foot, as a delicacy: 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'He brought us two routers putters, and left the room'; † by 1903 (F & H). F & H imply that router (= rooter?) is a cow; putter, its foot.

Rover Boys, the. The State Troopers: 1935, Hargan; extant. 'The Rover Boys were three or four juveniles of that namo, heroes of a series of books for young people several years ago; the State Troopers cover large areas,' Godfrey Irwin (letter of Sept. 21, 1937).

rovers. Thoughts: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. Ex S.E. roving thoughts.

row, 'a disturbance, a din', seems to have been, orig., a c. term, for in 1753, John Poulter, in his Discoveries, has 'We'—a gang of highwaymen and swindlers—'were afraid he would make too big a row when he lost that [sum of money], that is, a great Noise'. The word, however, > gen. s. ca. 1800 and is recorded by Grose in 1785 as s.; as late as 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, says: 'Roue. A cant word signifying a noise made by some of the company, or a terrible quarrel kicked up, which is called a bloody Roue.' Of Romany origin, as J. W. Horsley, Prisons and Prisoners, 1898, was one of the earliest to point out; but he omitted to indicate the word: prob. rov, 'to cry, weep; to lament; to cry out' (perhaps cf. Welsh Gypsy ruv, 'a wolf'—notoriously given to howling); rov goes back to Sanskrit via Hindi, as John Sampson shows in his great dictionary.

row in. To share, take part, in a crime, a transaction: late C. 19–20. Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen, 1932. Short for:—

row in the boat; row (in one boat) with (a person). 'Row in the boat, to go snacks, or have a share in the benefit arising from any transaction to which you are privy. To let a person row with you, is to admit him to a share,' J. H. Vaux, 1812; but it occurs earlier in Sessions Papers, Feb. 1787, 'If you will row in one boat with me, and become an accomplice of mine, I will put some hundreds in your way'; also ibid., May 1792, p. 280 in shortened form, 'She knew of a good speak, and she would row in it'; 1823, Bee, 'To row in the boat—to participate in the adventure, as robbery, gambling, &c.'; 1823, Egan's Grose; app. †, as c., by 1890. Contrast the coll. paddle one's own canoe.

rowdy, 'money', is not c., but s.—2. 'A riotous, turbulent fellow,' Bartlett, Americanisms, 1848: not c., but s.; by 1890, Standard American. Bartlett, Americanisms, 2nd ed., 1859, gives the following gang-names: New York: Bowery Boys, Dead Rabbits, Forty Thieves, Huge Paws, Killers, Robin Hood Club, Short Boys, Shoulder Hitters, Skinners, Swill Boys. Philadelphia: Killers, Moyamensing Hounds, Northern Liberty Skivers, Peep o' Day Boys, Schuylkill Annihilators. Baltimore: Black Snakes, Blood Tubs, Dips, Double rowdy dowdy. 'Rowdy-dowdy means a rough turning and twisting of the mark' (the pickpocket's victim) by the pickpocket and/or his confederate(s): May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. A reduplication of rowdy (a street tough).

Pumps, Gladiators, Hard Times, Little Fellows, Plug Uglies, Ranters, Rip-Raps, Rough Skins, Stay Lates, Tigers.—3. The sense 'a sheriff' (Leverage, 1925) is likewise s.

rowling. See rolling.

royal, spread (or tell) the. To give (the) evidence: 1931, Brown, 'A split told the royal and poor old Jack got fullied'; 1932, Arthur Gardner, Tinker's Kitchen (tell); 1935, David Hume, The Gaol Gates Are Open, "Spreading the Royal," giving evidence'; 1939, D. Hume, Heads You Live, 'Once the girl started "spreading the royal" she could say a real mouthful'; 1943, Black, 'Tell the Royal: to give evidence'; 1944, David Hume, Toast to a Corpse ('spread'); 1945, David Hume, Come Back for the Body ('spread'); extant.

(royal) foot scamp. '(Royal) foot scamps' are defined by George Parker, who has the shorter form, as 'men not having horses, who are on the Foot-pad Rig, but whose behaviour is correspondent with that of those who are on the Royal Scamp' (1781, A View of Society); 1785, Grose; † by 1870. See scamp, n.

Royal Navy lay, the. See merchant lay, the.

royal scamp. 'Royal Scamp is the term appropriated to those Highwaymen who rob without using ill; they never shoot or maim; they ride good horses; never rob trade's-people, nor any person but those whom they imagine to be uninjured by depriving them of their purse, &c.': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1785, Grose, 'A highwayman who robs civilly'; † by 1859 (H, 1st ed.), if not indeed by 1820 or 1830. See scamp, n., 3; royal, ex the generous treatment.

royster, a roisterer, one of B.E.'s 'rude, Roaring Rogues', has always been S.E., despite B.E.'s classification.

rozzer. 'Rosser, rozzer (thieves), a new term for a detective': 1890, B & L; a sense app. † by 1900. Prob. a corruption of roaster, 'one who roasts' (see roast, 3); perhaps, however, a disguise-perversion of the synonymous s. Robert, from 'Sir Robert Peel', as Charles Booth proposes at p. 138, Vol. V (pub. in 1903) of Life and Labour of the People in London. Not impossible is Ware's derivation (s.v. readied the rosser) of the word from Fr. rosseur, 'one who harries and worries'—but less likely than either Booth's suggestion or mine; with mine, however, cf. Romany roozlo (or roozlus), 'strong'.—2. Hence, any police constable: 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo; 1898, A. Binstead, A Pink 'Un and a Pelican; 1903, C. Booth, Life and Labour of the People of London, V, 138, 'The thieves call the police "rozzer"''; 1903, F & H; 1906, E. Pugh, The Spoilers; 1909, Ware; 1910, F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol; by 1914, low s. rozzer's nark. One who spies for and gives information to the police: April 6, 1901, The Sporting Times; 1903, F & H; very ob. See rozzer, 2, and nark, n., 4. Less gen. than copper's nark.

rub, n. See rubs.

rub, v. To run away: in 1688, Thomas Shadwell, in the glossary, to The Squire of Alsatia, gives it as a c. synonym of scamper and scour; B.E. also classifies it as c. The O.E.D. thinks it is S.E., as indeed its gen. history makes it tolerably certain it is. But for a c. sense, see rub to.—2. Esp. of a gang: to rob (many) people in, commit (many) burglaries, in (e.g., a town): U.S.A.: Dec. 26, 1925, Flynn's, Roy W. Hinds, 'Take a spot like that, that the boys ain't never "rubbed"', and they get careless'; extant. The rub of 'wear and tear' (constant use).

rub-a-dub, 'a club, especially a night club': 1931, Brown: low rhyming s. rather than c.

rub down. 'Persons are usually rubbed down in the streets preparatory to robbery; this is to frisk,' Bee, 1823; 1877, Anon., Five Years' Penal Servitude, 'On the parade [at Dartmoor prison, ca. 1870] every man is searched—"rubbed down" it is called'; 1887, A. Griffiths (see turn over, 1); 1895, A. Griffiths, Criminals I Have Known; by 1903 (F & H) it was also—as indeed it had been for thirty years—police s. The searcher rubs his hands slowly down the victim's person.

rub-down dippy. "'Rub-down dippies"—the men who search all arrivals for dope, liquor, guns and other contraband,' James Spenser, Limey, 1933: convicts, esp. at San Quentin: since ca. 1920: 1935, James Spenser, The Five Mutineers.

rub down with an oaken towel. See oaken towel.

rub off. See rubbed off.—2. The sense 'to run away' is a variant of rub, v., 1; therefore not c.

rub out. To kill: since ca. 1850: H and Baumann (rubbed out, dead); by 1890, low s. In U.S.A. (Bartlett, Americanisms, 2nd ed., 1859) it seems not to have been c., although the n., rub-out, may be c. of C. 20—as in Ersine, 1933. Ex the idea of erasure.

rub to or unto. To send to (prison): 1676, Anon., A Warning for House-Keepers, 'O then they rub us to the Whitt| And it is hardly worth a Make'; ibid., 'We bite the Culley of his cole But we are rubbed unto the Whitt'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'Don't rub us to the whit, don't send us to Newgate'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1870—if not, indeed, half a century earlier. I.e., rub, v., rendered transitive.

rubbed out. See rub out.

rubber, n. See fake the rubber.—2. A professional killer: U.S.A.: 1934, Rose; extant. Ex rub out.

rubber, adj. Forged; counterfeit: 1933, Ersine; then see rubber check.

rubber, v. To stare; to rubber over is to look over, to examine: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, "'P'raps he is goin' to let us rubber over the recovered 'stolen goods' museum to see if we recognize any little trinkets o' our own"''; ibid., 'He was "rubbering"', i.e., watching for persons or places to rob; ibid., "'Tain't nice in any push, respectable or otherwise, to rubber at a bloke that's gone to pieces"''; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; by 1903, low s.—as F & H imply. Ex rubberneck.

rubber-ball. 'A wire-tapping swindle,' Leverage, 1925; extant. Ex the method, which involves such a ball.

rubber bum. 'A bum who travels in an old hack' (car), Ersine: since mid-1920's. Cf.:—

rubber check. A worthless cheque: since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1935, commercial s. in U.S.A. and c. in Britain; 1943, Black; extant. It so quickly 'bounces back' from the bank on which it has been drawn. Irwin. Compare fly-back.

rubber heels. Meat loaf: convicts' (? only at Sing Sing): 1935, Hargan; extant. In point of fact, the meat is chopped up—therefore far from hard. Ex sheer depreciativeness.

rubber-neck. See rubberneck.

rubber sock. A delicate or a timid man: adopted, ca. 1919, by tramps ex the Marine Corps, who apply it to a recruit. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. A pun on galoshes or rubbers.

rubber-tired googs. 'Horn-rimmed glasses[,] which are a very effective disguise,' Ersine: since early 1920's. See googs.

rubberneck. 'A person who is always listening to other people's conversation is called a rubberneck,' A. F. B. Crofton in Popular Science Monthly, April 1897; by 1903 (Clapin), low s.; by 1910, gen. s. He turns his head about as if his neck were made of rubber; cf. rubber, v.

rubberoo. A worthless cheque, a forged cheque; since ca. 1930: Aug. 24, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, 'With these rubberoos Sir Gilbert hit for Washington'; by 1945, commercial s. Ex rubber check.

rubbity rub (often rubbity or rubby). A saloon, a public-house: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on pub.—2. A tub: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B.

rube or R-; occ., Reub. A rustic; a simpleton: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary, 'Rube: a "hoosier", or "farmer" '; 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers that Prey; 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'The Reubs in Connecticut'; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; by 1914, low s. ('All citizens were called rubes by circus people,' Jim Tully, Circus Parade, 1928.) The diminutive of Reuben: as hick (Hick) is of Richard.—2. Hence, a circus worker: 1904, Life in Sing Sing: not c., but circusmen's s.; this sense, however, is suspect—see the Jim Tully quot'n in sense 1.

rubies, 'the lips': prob. s. rather than c. Leverage, 1925.

rubs. 'Years of penal servitude': 1891, C. Bent, Criminal Life (p. 271); rather ob. The rubs of misfortune.

ruby note. A note to the value of ten shillings: since ca. 1910; by 1930, (low) s. Partridge, 1938. Approx. ex the colour.

ruby wine. Methylated spirits used as liquor: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1910. W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, 1936. Ironic.

ruck, n. A senseless or idiotic word or deposition: late C. 19–20. Jules Manchon, Le Slang, 1923. Ex:—

ruck, v.i. To inform to the police: 1884 (implied in next entry); June 24, 1889, Sessions Papers, (Police Inspector log.) 'He said, "Has Cleasby rucked? If he has, I will b—y well kill him when I come out"—ruck means telling'; by 1890, low s. See:—

ruck on. To betray (a person): Sept. 1884 (p. 676), Sessions Papers, (policeman log.) 'On the way to the station he said, "I know who has rucked on me," meaning "informed on me" '; 1887, Heinrich Baumann, Londonismen; by 1890 (B & L), low s. Semantically, cf. split (v.): both vv. may be metaphors from tailoring or dressmaking. Yet ruck may = 'ruck', short for the Ger. adverb zuruck ruddocks, 'money' (esp., gold coin): not c., but s. Cf. red 'un, 2.

(back); cf. 'raus!, short for heraus!, ' (come) out!'; or it may be a perverted shortening of rocker; nevertheless, I prefer the tailoring origin to either of the other two.

ruddy; pl., usually ruddy. A gold coin, esp. a sovereign or a half-sovereign: 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; very ob. Ex its colour: cf. red, n., and ruddocks.

rufe peck. See rum ruff peck, ref. of 1797.

ruff, n. An occ. shortening of wooden ruff, a pillory: e.g., in H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 1841.

ruff, v. See rough it.

ruff, wooden. See wooden ruff.

ruff cull is listed, with other 'cull' terms, at cull, by Potter, 1797, without definition and without a corresponding entry at ruff cull: the meaning, prob., is either as ruffmans, 2, or (the more likely) 'he who sets a malefactor in the stocks or pillory'.

ruff mans. See ruffmans.

ruff(-)peck. 'Ruff pek, baken,' Harman, 1566; ibid., 'Ruff Pecke . . . baken'; 1608–9, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie' in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'Ruffpeck, Bacon'; 1610, Rowlands, 'Ruff peck Bacon'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Duds and Ruffe-peck'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1800. I.e., rough food: see peck, n.

ruffe-mans. A C. 17 variant of ruffmans.

ruffelar or -er. See ruffler.

rufflemans. A C. 16–17 variant of ruffmans. (E.g., Harman.)

Ruffen. See ruffian, 1.

ruffer. See ruffler.—2. Also rougher. A bed made of bushes; or of twigs and leaves: tramps' C. 20. Matt Marshall, The Travels of Tramp-Royal, 1932, thinks that it may be from ruffmans, q.v., but prob. it derives ex 'to sleep rough'.

ruffian; ruffin. Harman, 1566, 'To the ruffian, to the devell'—i.e., go to the devil! ibid., 'The ruffian cly the, the devyll take thee'; 1608–9, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie' in Lanthorne and Candle-light, 'Ruffian, the Divell'; 1610, Rowlands; 1612, Dekker, O per se O, spells it Ruffin; 1665, R. Head (Ruffin); 1676, Coles (Ruffin); 1688, Holme (Ruffian and Ruffin); 1698, B.E. (Ruffin); 1707, J. Shirley (Ruffin); 1714, Alex. Smith (-in); 1725, A New Canting Dict. (-in); 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue (-in); 1753, John Poulter (Ruffen); 1785, Grose (-in); 1788, Grose, 2nd ed. (-ian); 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890. Ultimately cognate with rough?—2. Hence, a justice of the peace: 1698, B.E. (ruffin); 1725, A Canting Dict. (id.); 1785, Grose; † by 1870.

ruffian, to the. 'To the nines; or, to the ruffian. These terms are synonymous, and imply an extreme of any kind, or the superlative degree': 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1880. I.e., 'to the ruffian (or, devil) degree', hence 'devilishly' (very).

ruffin. See ruffian.

ruffle, n. See ruffles.

ruffle, v.; usually as past p'ple, as in 'His hands were tied or "ruffled" behind him,' Allan Pinkerton, Professional Thieves and the Detective, 1881; † by 1920. Ex ruffles.

ruffler. 'A Ruffler'—thus Awdeley, 1562—'goeth wyth a weapon to seeke service, saying he hath bene a Servitor in the wars, and beggeth for his relieve. But his chiefest trade is to robbe poore wayfaring men and market women'; 1566, Harman (Rufflar), 'Eyther he hath served in the warres, or els he hath bene a servinge man' and 'These rufflars, after a yeare or two at the farthest, become upryght men, unlesse they be prevented by twind hempe'; 1608, Dekker in The Belman of London, ranks 'rufflers' next to 'upright men', whereas R. Head, The English Rogue, 1665, sets a 'ruffler' not only above the 'upright man' but designates him as 'our chief commander'; 1676, Coles, 'A notorious Rogue'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'Rufflers, . . . the first Rank of Canters; also notorious Rogues'; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed. (ruffer, a misprint); 1725, A Canting Dict., 'The Second Rank of Canters'; 1741, The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'A stout Rogue'; though listed by Grose, the term had prob., in c., fallen into disuse before the date of his Vulgar Tongue (1785). First appearing in c. in Copland (1536), it had an independent existence in S.E.—earliest in a statute of 1535. Cf. S.E. ruffle it, to swagger.

ruffles. (Extremely rare in singular.) Hand-cuffs: 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, Dict., where it is misprinted ruffler; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1822, Anon., James Mackcoull; 1823, Bee; Feb. 7, 1846, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1859, Matsell; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs (U.S.A.); by 1890 (B & L), † in Britain; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; by 1930, ob.—and by 1946, †—in U.S.A. Ex ruffles (frills) worn at the wrist by men in C. 18—early 19.

ruffman and ruffmanes. See:—

ruffmans. 'The ruffmans, the wodes or bushes,' Harman, 1566; ibid., 'Bynge we a waste to the hygh pad, the ruffmanes is by . . . Let us go hence to the hygh waye, the wodes is at hand'; ibid., 'The Ruffemans'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 'Not the hedge or bushes as heretofore; but now the eavesing of houses or roofes'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'To mill each ken, let the Cove bing then, | Through Ruff-mans, jague, or Laund'; 1688, Holme, 'Ruffe-Mans, the Woods or Bushes'; 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley, The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed., has the oddly erroneous 'Breaking the Ruffman's Hedges'; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed. (ruffman); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'The woods, hedges, or bushes'; but the term may have been † by 1770 or thereabouts. See -mans; ruff prob. = rough.—2. A police officer (or any other person) who handles a thief very 'ruffly'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes. But the entry is gravely suspect, nor does ruffman (Sinks of London, 1848) carry conviction.

ruffpeck. See ruff peck.

Rufus. A rural policeman: 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief, 'The New York police are at least a little sensible [in the exaction of bribes] at times, but when these Rufus's up the State get a Yorker or a wise guy, they'll strip him down to his socks'; ob. Many rural (and other) policemen being red-headed Irishmen.

rug. 'It's all Rug, c. the Game is secured,' B.E., 1698; 1725, Anon., The Prison-Breaker, 'How are all the Bloods in the Market?—All rug, all well, my Master'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'It is all rug, all right and safe, the game is secure'; 1797, Potter (rugg); 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.);

† by 1887 (Baumann). Cf. all snug (at snug . . .) and the proverbial as snug as a bug in a rug.—2. Hence, among sharpening gamesters, 'Making all Rugg at Dice, as the Cant is for securing a Die between two fingers', Lucas, The Gamesters, 1714; prob. † by 1860.

rug, at. Asleep: 1811, Lex. Bal., 'The whole gill is safe at rug; the people of the house are fast asleep'; app. † by 1887 (Baumann). Prob. ex the preceding, sense 1.

rugg. See rug, ref. of 1797.

Ruggins's. 'To go to bed, is called going to Ruggins's': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1828, Lytton Bulwer, Pelham, "'Stash the lush!" cried Mrs. Brimstone, "aye, and toddle off to Ruggins"'; † by 1887 (Baumann). With a pun on, and a personification of, a bed-rug.

ruin. Gin: 1839, Brandon; by 1890 (B & L), low s. A shortening of blue ruin.

rule (or ruler) over, run the. See run the (or a) rule over.

rum, n. Pierce Egan, Boxiana, IV, 1824, has 'he'd tip a chaunt [sing a song], run the rums, | Chaff a tale, queer all bums' (confound all bailiffs), where rum is short for rum customer in the sense of 'queer "customer"'; this sense, therefore, is not c., but s.—2. An ignorant, or an inefficient, person: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage, 'A farmer; a rustic'; ob. Ex rum, adj., 7.—3. During Prohibition (1920–33) 'any kind of booze': Ersine.

rum, adj. Excellent; of the best (or very good) quality: 1610, Rowlands (room), 'This word is always taken in the best sense, to shew a thing extraordinary or excellent'; 1665, R. Head, 'Rome . . . Gallant'; so too Coles, 1676; 1698, B.E., 'Gallant, Fine, Rich, best or excellent'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, 'Good, the highest in the flash'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; but by 1819, this sense was extremely ob., for in Tom Crib's Memorial, Thomas Moore remarks (p. xxviii), 'The word rum, which in Ben Jonson's time, and even so late as Grose, meant fine and good, is now generally used'—though not in c.—'for the very opposite qualities', although in 1821, David Haggart speaks of 'rum lils' or well-filled pocket-books. Hotten proposed derivation ex Rome, and I hope that some day I shall be able to prove that prob. he was right. Meanwhile: the word seems to have come to Britain with the gypsies, who, earlier in C. 15–16, sojourned in Rome; 'the grandeur that was Rome' must have profoundly impressed them; in Turkish, Rûm = 'Roman'.—2. Hence, handsome or beautiful: 1698, B.E. (at wicket), ' . . . His Gentry-mort, whose Munns are the Rummet I ever touted before, c. . . . a Gentlewoman, whose Face is the fairest I have ever seen'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1848, trial of Mary Young, in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, 1742, 'The rummet Froes'; † by 1800 or so.—3. Strong: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1823, Bee; † by 1830. Likewise ex 1.—4. (More or less implied in sense 1.) Rich; (of a purse) full; valuable: 1665 (see rum cull); 1741 (see rum cove, 4); 1753 (see bit, n., 2 and 3); 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1821 (see sense 1); † by 1830.—5. Hence, temporarily in funds: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'Are you rum or seedy; are you stout or poor'; † by 1800.—6 (Ex sense 1; cf. sense 3.) Large: 1823, Bee—but prob. current from ca. 1700; † by 1830 at latest.—7. (By association with the underworld—see Partridge, 1937—it acquires the modern pejorative sense.) Foolish, stupid: unskilful: 1780, R. Tomlinson, A Slang Pastoral; 1823, Bee. This sense is not c., but low s.

rum, adv. Excellently; much; heartily: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Eat much, Peck rum'; † by ca. 1830. Ex the adj., sense 1.

rum, come it, 'to talk oddly' (Bee, 1823), is not c., but low s.; it merely exemplifies sense 7 of rum, adj.

rum bark (or Bark). A good-natured Irishman: 1809, Andrewes, Dict., where it is misprinted r. back; so too in Sinks of London, 1848; † by 1890.

rum beak. A lenient or a venal justice or judge: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1797, Potter (at beak), 'A justice that will do any thing for money' and (at rum beak) 'A sensible justice of the peace' (repeated by Andrewes, 1809); 1823, Bee, 'A mild justico of the peace'; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1865 or so. I.e., a magistrate or judge that is good from the criminal's point of view.

rum beck. 'Rum-beck, c. any Justice of the Peace,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose; † by 1810. See rum, adj., and beck.

rum bing. A full purse: 1890, B & L. But did the term ever exist? If it did, bing is a thinning of bung.

rum bit, 'a full purse or a rich booty': see bit, n., 2 and 3.—2. Good money, as opp. counterfeit: 1823, Bee; † by 1880.—3. The sense 'a rogue' (B & L, 1890) is spurious.

rum bite. 'A cleaver Cheat, a neat Trick,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'A clever cheat, a clean trick'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1900. See the elements.

rum bleating cheat. 'A very fat Weather' (wether), B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'A fat sheep'; 1848, Sinks of London (id.); † by 1890. Lit., a fine sheep (bleating cheat).

rum blowen. A pretty woman: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters (glossary); 1797, Potter (r. blowing); 1801, Col. George Hanger; 1809, Andrewes; 1811, Lex. Bal., 'A handsome wonch'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1900. Ex rum, 'excellent', and blowen, 2.—2. A gentlewoman: U.S.A. (—1794): 1809, Henry Tufts, A Narrative; † by 1880. Ex rum, adj. † blowen, 2. The English c. is rum mort.

rum blower. 'Rum-blower, c. a very Handsom Mistress, kept by a particular Man', B.E., 1698; repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1830. See rum, adj.; blower is a disguise-variation of blowen.—2. Hence, 'a handsome wench', i.e., whore: 1785, Grose; † by 1860.

rum blowing. A variant of rum blowen. Potter, 1797; Sinks of London, 1848.

rum bluffer. 'A jolly Host, Inn-keeper, or Victualler,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1900. Rum, adj.; bluffer. rum bo dick, 'a dirty shabby fellow' (Andrewes, 1809): something wrong here! Nor is rum bodick in Sinks of London, 1848, any more convincing.

rum bob. A young apprentice: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1900.—2. 'A sharp, sly Trick,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1870.—3. Here, bob is not c.; the phrase is c.—4. 'Rum bobb—a shop-till' (Andrewes, 1809) is incorrect for rum lob(b).

rum booze. 'Rome bouse, wyne,' Harman, 1566; ibid., though in the dialogue, 'This bouse is as benschyp as rome bouse. This drinke is as good as wyne'; 1608–9, Dekker, 'The Canters Dictionarie' (Lanthorne and Candle-light), 'Rome-Bowse, Wine'; 1610, Rowlands; 1611, Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 'A gage of ben Rom-bouse|In a bousing ken of Rom-vile'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell, who misprints it rumbose; † by 1890. See the elements.—2. Hence, any good liquor: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'All their cry was for Rum-booz (i.e., for good liquor)'; 1698, B.E. (rumbose and rum-booze); 1725, A Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Good Drink, Rum Bues or [Rum] Suck'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1839, J. Cosgrave, The Most Notorious Irish Highwaymen; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890.

rum boozing welts (properly boozing-welts). Bunches of grapes: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E. (rum-boozing-welts); 1707, J. Shirley, 'A cluster of Grapes . . . Rum boozing Welts'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. Misprinted as . . . wells by B & L. Lit., 'excellent liquor (or drinking) bunches'.

rum bow. 'Ropo stolen from the king's dock-yard': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. I.e., rum, adj., 1; bow may = bowline.

rum bub. Excellent liquor: 1698, B.E. (at bub), 'Rum-bub, c. very good Tip'—i.e., tippie; 1725, A New Canting Dict., as rum bub; 1809, Andrewes (rum bubb); † by 1860. See the elements.

rum bubbler. 'A cleaver or dextrous Fellow at Stealing Silver-Tankards (formerly) from Publick Houses,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. I.e., rum, adj. + bubbler, 3.

rum bues. See rum booze, 2, ref. of 1741.

rum buffer is a variant of the next. Potter, 1797; Andrewes, 1809; Sinks of London, 1848.

rum bugher. 'Rum-bughar, c. a very pretty and Valuable Dog,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell, as rumbuglar; † by 1900. See the elements.

rum bung. A full purse: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880. I.e., rum, adj. + bung.

rum bung-nipper. A skilful cut-purse: 1725, A New Canting Dict., by implication at rum diver; † by 1800. Rum, adj. + bung-nipper.

rum chant. A song: 1796 (therefore existing at least as early as 1791), Grose, 3rd ed.; 1809, Andrewes, 'Rum chaunt—good song', which definition seems more likely to be right than Grose's; ca. 1819, The Young Prig; 1848, Sinks of London, as in Andrewes; † by 1880. Rum, adj. + chant, n., 2.

rum chub. 'A rich Fool, that can be easily Bit, or Cheated by any body; also one that is very generous and kind to a Mistress,' B.E., 1698; 1785, Grose narrows the term to use among butchers—a fact that makes it prob. that the term had, by his day, ceased to be c. As 'simpleton' or 'fool', chub is recorded (as S.E.) by Cockeram, 1623; and see rum, adj.

rum clank. A large silver tankard: 1698, B.E. (at clank), 'Tip me a rum Clank a Booz, c. give me a double Tankard of Drink'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1823, Bee; † by 1890. Rum, adj. + clank, 1.

rum clout. 'A Silk, fine Cambrick, or Holland Handkerchief,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725, and Grose, 1785; 1797, Potter, who wrongly defines it as merely 'a handkerchief'—as does Andrewes, 1809; so too Sinks of London, 1848; † by 1860. Rum, adj. + clout, n., 1.

rum cly. 'Rum dye, a full pocket', i.e., a pocket full of money: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880. Rum, adj. + cly, n., 2.

rum cod. 'A good Purse of Gold, or round Summ of Money,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, 'A good piece of gold'; † by 1840. Rum, adj. + cod, n., 2.

rum coe. A variant of rum cove. Anon., The Beggar Boy of the North, ca. 1635, 'Although in the Quier-ken I have been oft,

And by the Rumcoe and the Harmanbecke frighted,

Yet my old Trade I will set aloft,

Wherein all my lineage have chiefly delighted'; prob. not current later than C. 17.

rum-coke. Rum with a dash of cocaine: drug addict's: from the early 1920's and esp. during the 1920's: 1934, Ferd. Tuohy, Inside Dope. See coke and cf. hero-gin.

rum cole. 'New Money, or Medals, curiously Coynd,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880. Rum, adj. + cole.

rum coll. 'clever thief': see coll.—2. (Always the . . .) See rum cull, 2.

rum cove. A gentleman: 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All (see quot'n at rum mort); 1612, Dekker, O per se O, spells it Rome cove, as does R. Head in The English Rogue, 1665; 1688, Holme (ditto); by 1794, current in U.S.A. (Henry Tufts); † by 1860. Rum, adj. + cove, 1.—2. A great or utter rogue: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'A dexterous, or clever rogue'; † by 1870.—3. A hangman; usually the rum cove: 1698, B.E. (at flogging), ' . . . Flogg'd by the Rum Cove, . . . soundly Whipt by the Hangman'; † by 1820.—4. (Ex, or cf., sense 1.) A rich man: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; † by 1830.—5. A good landlord: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'Good-natured landlord'; 1848, Sinks of London (id.); † by 1890.—6. 'A king; the president': U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell (rome cove); † by 1880.

rum cull. A rich fool, simpleton or dupe: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue. 'Rome culle . . . A rich coxcomb'—but culle may be Head's phonetic attempt at cully (cf. next entry); 1698, B.E., 'A rich Fool, that can be easily Bit, or Cheated by any body; also one that is very generous and kind to a Mistress'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1745, The History of Clubs; 1785, Grose, 'A rich fool, easily cheated, particularly by his mistress'; † by 1840. Rum, adj. + cull, n., 1.—2. (Always the rum cull or coll.) 'The King: The rum Coll,' Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 1741; app. † by 1840. Suggested by rum mort, 1.—3. A gentleman; ? a magistrate: 1800, The Oracle ('Fashionable Characters: A Kiddy'); app. † by 1850. I.e., rum, adj. + cull, n., 4.—4. A theatre manager: 1864, H, 3rd ed.; possibly c., but prob. low theatrical s.

rum cully. A simpleton, esp. if a gentleman and rich: 1659, Anon., The Catterpillers of this Nation Anatomized, 'This Dammee Captain by his Wit, Sword, and Baskethilt-Oathes; the two last he makes use of to frighten Rum-Cullies out of their cash . . .'; 1676, Coles, 'Rum-Cully, c. A rich fool'; 1707, J. Shirley; † by 1800. See the elements.

rum cuttle. A sword; also, lit., an excellent knife: ca. 1590–1640. Rowlands. See cuttle.

rum dab. 'A very dextrous fellow at fileing, thieving, Cheating, Sharping, etc.': 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1820. See rum, adj., 1, and dab.

rum damber. 'Good natured prince of the canting crew': 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, where it is misprinted r. dumber; † by 1880. See the elements.

rum darbies. A light pair of handcuffs or hand-chains: 1799, The Monthly Magazine (Jan.); † by 1870. See elements.

rum degen. 'A Silver-hilted or inland Sword,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'A handsome Sword'; 1797, Potter, who misspells—or whose printer misprints—it as rum dogen, an error carefully repeated in 1809 by Andrewes, who'd repeat anything!; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880. Rum, adj. + degen.

rum dell. A fashionable or a very pretty whore; a beautiful woman: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose ('a fine wench'—i.e., whore); † by 1840. Rum, adj. + dell.

rum diver. A clever, or skilful and clever, pick-pocket: 1698, B.E. (at cove and at rum diver); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, 'A female pickpocket'—a definition almost certainly erroneous; 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1848, Sinks of London (id.); † by 1880. Rum, adj. + diver.

rum dogen. See rum degen.

rum doxy. 'A beautiful Woman, or [a] light Lady' (i.e., better-class whore): 1698, B.E.; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'A fine wench', i.e., a very pretty or a handsome whore; 1797, Potter (r. dozey); 1809, Andrewes, 'Fine made wench'; 1848, Sinks of London (id.); † by 1880. Rum, adj. + doxy.

rum dragger. See dragger.

rum drawers. 'Silk stockings, or very fine Worsted Hose,' B.E., 1698; thus also in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'Silk, or other fine stockings'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880. Rum, adj. + drawers.

rum droper. See:—

rum dropper. A vintner: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1745, The History of Clubs, where misprinted rum droper; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890 (B & L). Rum, adj.; drops of the grape.

rum dubber. 'An experienc'd or expert Picker of Locks': 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, who gives it as a synonym of gilt dubber, q.v., and also as in B.E.; † by 1860. Rum, adj. + dubber.

rum duchess. 'Rum-dutchess, c. a jolly handsom Woman,' B.E., 1698; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1820. Rum, adj.; duchess, used playfully.

rum duds. 'Rum dudds, c. fine or rich cloaths'—clothes—'or Goods,' B.E., 1698: a sense current until ca. 1790. See rum, adj., and duds.

rum duke. 'A jolly handsom Man,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, who records the s. sense (see duke), which gradually came to predominate over—indeed to oust—the c. sense; 1820, W. T. Moncrieff, The Collegians; app. † by ca. 1840. See rum, adj., 2; but why duke, unless it be ironic?—2. (Usually pl.) 'Rum-dukes, c. the boldest or stoutest Fellows (lately) amongst the Alsations, Minters, Savoyards, &c. Sent to remove and guard the Goods of such Bankrupts as intended to take Sanctuary in those Places': therefore, app. ca. 1665–95.—3. 'A warme old fellow': 1797, Potter, Dict., where 'warm' = 'rich'; the sense is slightly suspect, despite Andrewes's 'rich man' and the repetition thereof in Sinks, 1848.—4. A 'queer old fellow', where 'queer' = 'odd'; this sense (recorded by Andrewes, 1809) is obviously s., for rum is being used in its s., not its c., sense.

rum dum. Foolish-drunk, though still able to walk: prob. always s.; perhaps c. originally and until ca. 1932. Godfrey Irwin, 1931, 'Merely a changing of "dumb from rum"'. BVB, 1942, lists 'rum-dum, dum-dumb, drunken, hence no account, shiftless' as c.

rum dutchess. See rum duchess.

rum fam. A gold ring: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1741, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. III (rum fem: a diamond ring); prob. † by 1850. See fam, n., 2.

rum feeder. A large silver spoon: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (wrongly r. fender); 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. See the elements.

rum fem. See rum fam.

Rum File, is an error for Rum vile. Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 1741.

rum file. A very experienced, an expert pick-pocket: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, where it is wrongly confined to 'a female pick-pocket'; † by 1880. Rum, adj. + file, n., 1.

rum flash. See flash, n., 1. B.E., 1698.

rum flicker. See flicker, n. B.E.

rum froe. See rum, adj., 2 (for 1741).

rum fuddle. B.E., 1698, 'This is Rum Fuddle, c. this is excellent tipples'; Grose; app. † by 1830. See rum, adj., and fuddle.

rum fun. 'A cleaver Cheat, or sharp Trick,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870. Rum, adj. + fun, 1.

rum gagger. 'Rum gaggers, cheats who tell wonderful stories of their sufferings at sea, or when taken by the Algerines': 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; by 1890 (B & L) it was nautical s. Ex rum, adj., 1 + gagger, n., 1.

rum gammon. Plausible talk of considerable merit or fluency: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'They now begin to drop the glanthem (part with their money), I must tip 'em some rum gammon'; † by 1850. Rum, adj. + gammon, n., 4.

rum gelt (occ., ghelt). New money, rarely other than coin and esp. gold; new and 'curiously Coyn'd' medals: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880. Rum, adj. + gelt.

rum gem. See rum jem.

rum ghelt. See rum gelt.

rum gill. 'A gentleman who appears to have money that is meant to be robbed': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, who does not suggest that he should be robbed: 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood, where it seems to be used as = rum one, 1; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1888. Rum, adj. + gill.

rum gilt. See gilt, n., 1 (reference of 1725).

rum glimfender. A silver andiron: ca. 1690–1830. (B.E.)

rum glimmer. 'Rum-glymmar, c. King or Chief of the Link-boies,' B.E., 1698; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose (rum glymmer); 1797, Potter; † by 1820. See rum, adj., and glimmer.

rum glimstick. See glimstick. (B.E.)

rum gloak. 'A well dressed man': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1860. Rum, adj. + gloak.

rum go, 'a queer business', may have been c. during the approx. period, 1775–1800: 1783, Sessions Papers, Oct. (p. 952), thief loquitur, 'By God, this is a rum go'. Perhaps ex sense 4 of rum, adj.

rum grab. See rum speaker.

rum gutlers. See rum guttlers.

rum gutlets, a canary: Barrère & Leland's error, of both spelling and definition, for:— rum guttlers. Canary wine: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'The Gentry Cove tipt us rum Peck and rum Gutlers, till we were all Bowsy, and snapt all the Flickers, the Gentleman gave us so much good Victuals, and Canary, that we were all Damn'd drunk, and broke all the Drinking Glasses'; 1725, A New Canting Dict; 1745, The History of Clubs; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, where it is misprinted r. gutters; † by 1890 (B & L, rum gutlets). Rum, adj.; cf. S.E. guzzle.—2. 'Fine Eating': 1725, A Canting Dict.; † by 1820. Perhaps an error for sense 1.

rum hooper is Barrère & Leland's form—prob. incorrect—of the next; taken from J. Shirley's The Triumph of Wit, 5th ed.

rum hopper. A drawer or tapster: 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Rum-hopper; tip us a presently a Boozing-cheat of Rum-gutlers, c. Drawer fill us presently a Bottle of the best Canary'; 1707, J. Shirley (rum-hooper); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870. He 'hops about' very briskly.

rum hustle is the same as stall, n., 2: app. ca. 1770–1850. See running rumbler.

rum jam. See jem.

rum job is wrongly defined in Sinks of London, 1848, as 'a handsome sword': if it means anything, it certainly doesn't mean that!

rum jockum-gage. See jockum-gage.

rum Joseph. See Joseph.

rum kate. See kate.

rum ken. 'A brave, stately House'; a house well worth robbing: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; ? in H. Baumann, Londonismen, 1887 (p. vi)—prob., however, the term was, in this sense, † by 1830. Rum, adj. + ken, 1.

rum kicks. 'Silver or Gold Brocado Breeches, or very rich with Gold or Silver Galoon,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, erroneously as simply 'breeches'—an error religiously copied by Andrewes, 1809; 1848, Sinks of London, erroneously as mere 'breeches'; † by 1860. See rum, adj., 1, 2, and kicks.

rum kiddy. A clever young thief: ca. 1780–1850. In, e.g., W. T. Moncrieff, All at Coventry, 1816. Rum, adj. + kiddy.

rum lap. See lap, n., 1 and 2.

rum lay, going upon the. 'A good or bad way of getting of Money': 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; † by 1860. Rum, adj. + lay, n., 2.

rum lob, says Potter (1797), is a shop-till: he should have said 'a shop-till containing much money'.

rum lock. A good or profitable matter, enterprise, hazard; riches: C. 18–mid-19. In, e.g., Potter and Andrewes and Sinks of London.

rum luries. 'Good Apparel': 1722–23, trial reported in Select Trials, 1734; † by 1850. Rum, adj. + luries.

rum maund (or mawnd). Beggary practised by one who pretends to be a fool or an idiot: 1612, Dekker, O per se O, 'Some of them can . . . begge Rum Mawnd (countorfeit to be a Foole)'; † by 1780 or, at latest, 1800. Rum, adj. + maund, n., 1.—2. (Ex sense 1.) 'One that Counterfeits himself a Fool': 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes makes it clear that the term applies to a boggar that does this; † by 1840.

rum maunder. 'A Beggar Fool, slaving Fool,' Randle Holme, The Academy of Armory, 1688; app. † by 1790. Rum, adj. + maunder.

rum mill. A low tavern or groggery: 1877, Bartlett, Americanisms, 4th ed.; 1903, F & H; by 1910, it was †. Cf. s. gin mill.

rum mizzle, 'an escapo': see mizzle, n.

rum mizzler; usually pl. 'Rum Mizzlers. Fellows who are clever in making their escape; or, as it is termed in flash, tipping the double to sherry, getting off, or running away'—though the last is certainly not c.—'when taken or going to be taken': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1859, H; † by 1890. Ex rum, adj., 1; and mizzler is the agent of mizzle.

rum mort. 'Rome mort, the Quene' (i.e., Queen Elizabeth), Harman, 1566; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light (in section entitled 'The Canters Dictionary'), 'Rome-mort, a Queene'; 1610, Rowlands, in Martin Mark-All, has 'Roome mort a Queene or Gentlewoman, and so Roome Cove a Gentleman'; 1665, R. Head, 'Rome-Mort . . . A gallant girl'; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E., 'A Queen or great Lady'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'Rome mort, a queen'—also rum mort (queen; great lady); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.)—rome mort; † by 1860 in England, by 1880 in U.S.A. Rum, adj. + mort.—2. Hence, loosely, any fine-looking woman, esp. one that is the mistress or (usually supposed) wife of a criminal: 1659, Anon., The Catterpillars of this Nation Anatomized, 'The Hector or Knight of the Blade, with his Rum-Mort, or Doxie'; 1728, D. Defoe, 'Fine Woman'; † by 1850.—3. 'A woman of the town', a whore: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London, in form r. mot; † by 1860.

rum muns. 'A great Beau': Jan. 1741, trial of Mary Young, in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, 1742; † by 1820. Lit., handsome face: see rum, adj., and muns.

rum nab. A superior hat, esp. a good beaver: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia; 1698, B.E., 'Rum-nab, c. a Beaver, or very good Hat'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. Rum, adj. + nab, n., 3.

rum nantz. 'True French Brandy,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'Good French brandy'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, erroneously just 'brandy'; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870. Rum, adj. + Nantz = Nantes (where good brandy was made for centuries).

rum Ned, hence rum ned. 'A very silly'—simple—'Fellow': 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'A very rich silly fellow'; 1797, Potter; † by 1890 (B & L). Rum, adj. + Ned, 'a fool': cf. silly Billy.

rum ogles. See ogles. (B.E., 1698.)

rum omee of the case, the proprietor of a travelling-show: not c., but parlyaree.

rum one. A criminal, or a near-criminal: 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'Ye flats, sharps, and rum ones, who make up this pother'; 1817, J. J. Stockdale, The Greeks; † by 1870. Lit., a good or clever one.—2. An expert; a splendid fellow (at, e.g., some sport): 1818, P. Egan, Boxiana, I, app. in reference to the year 1813, and citing a poem by Tom Hazel, 'A true Briton from Bristol, a rum one to fib, . . . Tom Crib'; 1826, The Universal Songster, III, 204, 'I'm a rum one for tipping it'; 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1848, Sinks of London; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham (U.S.A.: r. 'un); † by 1880 in Britain and by 1910 in U.S.A. Same origin as sense 1.—3. 'Any thing large, good, or strong, is "a rum one"': 1823, Bec; 1826, Sessions Papers, on several occasions: a severe blow or punch; † by 1890. See rum, adj., 1, 3, 6.

rum pad. Dekker, O per se O, 'In the Rome-pad, . . . by the high-way'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Rom-pad . . . the highway'; 1688, Holme (Rome-pad); 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1860. Rum, adj. + pad, n., 1.—2. Hence, a main street: 1698, B.E. at flogging—see quot'n at croppen; † by 1820.—3. 'A daring or stout Highway-man': 1698, B.E.; 1707, J. Shirley ('a highway-man'); 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood, but this sense was almost certainly † by 1800. Ex sense 1, influenced by:—

rum padder. A highwayman: 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, where it is spelt Rome-padder; 1676, Coles; 1698, B.E., 'Rum-padders, c. the better sort of Highway-men, well-mounted and Armed'; 1707, J. Shirley; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue; 1785, Grose (as in B.E.); 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood—but prob. it was † by 1820. Ex rum pad or rum, adj. 1 + padder.—2. A horse: 1707, J. Shirley (ram-padder). Almost certainly an error.

rum patter. Excellently plausible talk; convincing and fluent speech of a showman or a swindler or an illicit street vendor: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters (see quot'n at gammon, v., 2); † by 1860. Rum, adj. + patter, n., 3; cf. rum gammon.

rum peeper (or peepers). A superior mirror: 1698, B.E., 'Rum-peepers, c. a Silver Lookingglass'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, 'Rum peepers, fine looking glasses'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880. Rum, adj. + peepers, 1.—2. (Only in pl.) Fine or beautiful eyes: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1900. Cf. peepers, 2.

rum prad. 'A highwayman's horse': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870. Here, rum seems to be used in its s. and not its c. sense: i.e., as 'odd' or 'queer' or 'dubious', not as 'excellent'; unless, of course, it refers, as it well may do, to the fact that a highwayman was obliged to have a good horse. Cf.:—

rum prancer. 'A very beautiful Horse,' B.E., 1698; so too in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'A fine horse'; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes, 'Good fine horse'; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1860. Rum, adj. + prancer.

rum prog. See prog.

rum quids. 'A great Booty, or large Snack' (share of burglars' booty): 1698, B.E.; thus also in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose; † by 1840. Properly, booty or share in coin: see quids. —2. Guineas: 1797, Potter, but the definition is suspect: Andrewes's repetition (1809) does little, if anything, to render it less suspect. At rum quid, however, Andrewes defines rum quid as a 'good'—i.e., not counterfeit—'guinea': this clears up the mystery.

rum quiz. A smart, 'good fellow': 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields; † by 1860. See rum, adj., 1.

rum quod cull. A gaoler: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes. But the entry is suspect.

rum rigging. See rigging.

rum ruff(-)peck. Westphalia ham: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter (r. rufe peck); 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1860. Rum, adj. + ruff peck.

rum rush. 'A number of villians [sic] rushing into a house in order to rob it': 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1880. A mere elaboration—slightly suspect, too!—of rush, n., 2.

rum screen. A bank-note: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; † by 1860. Rum, adj. + screen; rum screen, however, antedates screen in such print as I have consulted.

rum slim. First-class punch; punch of the best quality: 1789, George Parker (see slim); 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. cxxxii, where it is glossed as 'rum-punch'; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) it was s. Rum, adj. + slim.

rum snatch is J. Shirley's misprint, 1707, for:— rum snitch. 'A good fillip on the Nose,' B.E., 1698; so too A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose ('a smart fillip . . .'); † by 1840. Rum, adj. + snitch, n., 1.

rum snooze, come the. (To have) a sound sleep: ca. 1775–1830. George Parker, Life's Painter, 1789.

rum snoozer (or, occ., snooser). One who goes to sleep in a brothel and has his hat and hair, or hat and wig, burnt by some rascal that will then, for a large tip, acquaint the victim with the perpetrator's—or rather, of an alleged perpetrator's—name: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; † by 1860. Rum, adj. + snoozer.—2. 'A person that sleeps soundly': 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; † by 1860. I.e., rum (excellent) + snoozer (sleeper); cf. sense 1.

rum speaker. 'Rum Speaker or [rum] grab, a good booty,' says Humphry Potter, 1797: rum grab is correct, but rum speaker, in this sense at any rate, is almost certainly an error; Andrewes, 1809, has r. speaker, not the other term. But rum speak would be correct—and it probably existed.

rum squeeze. 'Much Wino or good Liquor given among the Fidlers': 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1860. Rum, adj. + the squeeze of the grape.—2. A 'harvest' for pickpockets: 1789, G. Parker (see spell, n., 2); 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, II; † by 1880. Ex the squeezing of the crowd.

rum start, 'a queer incident or business', is not c., but s.—orig. low.

rum strum. A long, or a fine, or a fine and long periwig: 1698, B.E. (at strum); † by 1830. Rum, adj. + strum, n., 1.—2. A pretty wench, a handsome whore: 1698, B.E. (at strum); † by 1780. Rum, adj. + strum, n., 2.

rum suck. See suck.

rum swag. See swag, 1 and 2.

rum tackle. See tackle, 2.

rum tat(t)s. Dice that have not been falsified: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870. See tats; opp. queer tats.

rum tilter. A handsome and expensive sword: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1830. Rum, adj. + tilter.

rum tob. See reference of 1797 in rum tol.

rum togemans. See togemans, quot'n of 1698.

rum-togged. See tog, v.

rum tol. A fine and costly sword: 1698, B.E., who remarks that it is a newer phrase than rum degen and, at tol, defines it as 'a Silver-hilted Sword'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, Dict., where it is misprinted r. tob; † by 1830. See tol and contrast queer tol.

rum Tom Pat. A genuine clergyman, not a hedgo priest: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'What are Noll and you adam'd (married)? . . . Yes we are, and by a rum Tom Pat too'; 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds; † by 1890 (B & L). See rum, adj., and Tom Pat.

rum topping. 'A rich Commode or Head-dress'; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1820. Rum, adj. + topping, 2.

rum 'un. See rum one.

Rum vil(l)e or Rum vyle; Rom vil(l)e or Rom-vyle; Rumville. 'Rome vyle, London,' Harman, 1566; ibid., 'Byng we to rome vyle, to nyp a bong . . . Go we to London, to cut a purse'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light (at 'The Canters Dictionarie'), 'Rome-vile, London'; 1610, Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 'Roome vile a great towne, commonly taken for London'; 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Bing out of the Rome vile bine'; 1676, Coles; 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E. (Rum-vile); 1707, J. Shirley; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed. (Rumvil); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1741 (see Rum File); 1785, Grose (Romeville and Rum ville); 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes (Rome ville); 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890. Lit., Fine Town (or City). See rum, adj. + ville. —2. Hence, in U.S.A.: New York: 1859, Matsell; † by 1900—if not, indeed, by 1880.

rum whids. Good words: 1741, Anon., The Amorous Gallant's Tongue, 'Speak well, Tip Rum Whids'; † by 1840. Rum, adj. + whid, n., 1. This phrase was much less gen. than bene whids.

rum wipe is a C. 19 variant of the next; but c. only until ca. 1860. See wipe, n.

rum wiper. A dainty and/or expensive handkerchief: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; † by 1850. Rum, adj. + wiper.

rumbing is Matsell's error for rum bung.

rumble, n. Short for running rumble; always the rumble: 1789, George Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters, 'If you work with me at the rumble . . .'; app. † by 1850.—2. An arrest; in U.S.A., esp. get a rumble, to be arrested: Dec. 1898 (p. 115), Sessions Papers, (an utterer log.) 'God blind me, I nearly had a rumble yesterday; the old woman kept looking at the coin, and at me, but she took it and gave me the change'; in C. 20, current in U.S.A. also; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; extant. Cf. senses 3, 4.—3. (Ex sense 2 and often hardly distinguishable from it.) A suspicion; a detection; an alarm, a warning: U.S.A.: 1911, Clifford G. Roe, Horrors of the White Slave Trade; 1913, Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 'But he blew out for Frisco this morning,' continued the puzzled Sheiner. "Shot through as though he had just had a rumble!"; 1918, A. Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 'When an alarm went up and Bud seemed to be in for a rumble, I'd swoon'—cf. Leverage, 1925, 'A riot; a disturbance'; Dec. 13, 1926, Flynn's; May 1928, The American Mercury; 1929, Givens; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 1931, D. W. Maurer; 1933, Ersine; 1933, Bert Chipman; 1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece; extant.—4. 'A botch that precipitates discovery, a faux pas, an awkward situation,' Jackson & Hellyer, 1914: U.S.A.: Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest, where ('Do You Speak "Yegg"?') it is defined as 'danger'; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, "'Wise-cracking" Crook Novels'; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys (to get a rumble, to botch a job); 1925, Leverage, 'A plan that has been spoiled (it was a rumble)'; 1929, Jack Callahan, 'Without a "rumble" (accident)'; extant.—5. Attention; service: U.S.A.: 1934, Rose, 'When Tony wants rumble, he means it'; slightly ob. Echoic: cf. S.E. bustle and hustle.

rumble, v. To feel in (pockets), to put one's hand feloniously in (a pocket): 1821, David Haggart, Life, 'I was rumbling the cloys of the twigs'; app. † by 1905. Cf. origin of sense 2.—2. Hence (?), to rob or pillage: 1821, D. Haggart, 'I . . . rumbled the swag of all the dross that was in it'; † by 1905. Ex English s. rumble, itself ex romboyle.—3. To arouse suspicion; to be discovered, detected: U.S.A.: 1914; Jackson & Hellyer; extant. Cf. English s. rumble, 'to detect' (v.t.), and rumble, n., 3. Whence:—4. To spoil, fail in: U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Many a good job was "ranked" or "rumbled" (spoiled) because the gunpowder did not have sufficient explosive force'; 1933, Bert Chipman, Hey Rube; extant. Perhaps ex rumble, n., 4, but prob. ex sense 3 of the v.—5. 'To detect or discover (person or object)': U.S.A.: Leverage, 1925; 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1931, D. W. Maurer; 1934, Convict; extant. Ex English s.

rumble and shock. A knock (on the door): Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming, and app. indigenous to U.S.A.

rumble the flats. To play cards: 1934, Rose. Suspect—as to the sense, anyway.

rumble-tumble. A stage-coach: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1870. Ex the noise it makes and the movement it often causes among the passengers and packets.

rumbler, 'a coach', is prob. fast-life s., not c. (W. T. Moncrieff, Tom and Jerry, 1821.) Cf. the preceding term. In the anonymous The Night before Larry Was Stretched, ca. 1816, it means 'a cart'—possibly c. rumbler, running. See running rumbler.

Rumbo. Newgate Prison: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'The Rumboe, alias Whit, alias Newgate'; 1724, Anon., The Prison-Breaker; † by 1780. Origin obscure: but perhaps the term has been ironically derived ex rum, adj., 1.—2. Hence rumbo, any prison: 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1860.—3. Much; plenty: not c., but parlyaree: 1876, C. Hindley, The Life of a Cheap Jack, "'Chuck rumbo" (eat plenty), "my lad, for you will get no more till night"'.
rumbo ken. A pawnbroker's shop: 1724, Harper, 'A Canting Song' in Thurmond's Harlequin Sheppard, 'But fileing of a Rumbo Ken, | My Boman is snabbed again'; 1728, D. Defoe; by 1890 (B & L) it was theatrical s. See ken, 1; but why rumbo?

rumbob is Matsell's error for rum lob.

Rumboe, the. See Rumbo, 1.

rumboil(e) or rumboyl(e). See romboyle.

rumbooze, rumbowse. See rum booze.

rumboyle. See romboyle.

rumhub. See rum hub.

rumcoe. See rum coe.

rumdum, 'a queer character; one who acts objectionably': low s., not c.

rumly. Excellently: 1610, Rowlands (see quot'n at pratt, v.—the spelling being romily); 1665, R. Head, The English Rogue, 'Most of the night we spent in boozing, pecking rumly or wapping'; 1698, B.E., 'Bravely, cleverly, delicately, &c.'—repeated in A New Canting Dict.; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'W(h)id rumley; speak well'; 1760, Anon., Come all you Buffers gay, 'That rumly do pad the City'; 1785, Grose (at taille drawers: 'cleverly'); † by 1830. Ex rum, adj.

rummy, n. A drunkard so besotted as to be either helpless or untrustworthy: not c., but s.: 1884, Mark Twain (D.A.E.); 1909, Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery (the 'helpless' nuance); 1931, Godfrey Irwin (the 'untrustworthy' nuance); extant. Ex rum, the drink.

rummy, adj. The senses 'odd, queer, disreputable', are s.—2. See rummy stiff.

rummy, adv. Excellently: 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London, 'We chaunt so rummy, | And slang so plummy, | And scorn the Dub Cove's key, | For we are resolved to be merry'; † by 1860. Ex the adj., or perhaps direct ex rum, adj., 1.

rummy stiff. A tramp, hobo, bum of mind deranged by habitual use of raw liquor: tramps': 1918, Leon Livingston, Madame Delcassee of the Hobos; 1923, Nels Anderson, The Hobo; extant. See the elements.

rump, n. A 'robber of drunken people': 1849, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, V, ch. lxxvi; if genuine, † by 1880. Perhaps a misprint for an unrecorded early currency of ramp, n., 4.

rump, v. To flog; to scourge: 1812, J. H.

Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; † by 1900. On the back and the rump.

rump and kidney men is not c., but s. B.E. defines thus: 'Fidlers that Play at Feasts, Fairs, Weddings, &c. And Live chiefly on the Remnants, or Victuals'.

rump-hooper is a misprint for rum hopper. The 1835 ed. of The Triumph of Wit.

rumpty dollar. A shout, a cry: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming on holler.

rumpus, 'a din', 'a commotion', 'a disturbance', was orig. s. and never c.—2. Hence, a masquerade: 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1890.

rumslim or rumsling. See rum slim.

Rumvil and Rumville. See Rum ville.

rumy. 'A good woman or girl': 1859, H; 1887, Baumann: a Gypsy word, it was, ca. 1850–1900, used occ. by tramps. Either ex rum, adj., 1, or more prob., directly ex Continental Gypsy romi, 'a woman, a wife', as H, 3rd ed., maintains.

run, n. An attempt to rob a place, esp. a bank: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey (p. 153); ob. Perhaps with a pun on S.E. 'a run on the bank'.

run, v., 'to comprehend', as in 'I don't run to it', is not c., but s.—2. 'In tramp language, to be "run" is to be handed over to the police', Everard Wyrall, The Spike, 1909: since ca. 1880; by 1930, low s. Short for s. run in.—3. To report (a prisoner) for punishment: convicts': 1933, George Ingram, Stir; by 1940, prison j. Prob. ex run in.—4. To transport illegal liquor: U.S.A.: ca. 1921–34. Ersine. Short for 'to run booze'.

run a rule over. See run the rule over.

run a tier. See climb a tier.

run amuck. See running a muck (or amuck).

run and gets. Among bank robbers ('jug heavies'), since ca. 1925, it has borne the sense in 'As you run the roads'—make, in a car, a preliminary reconnaissance of the route for the return journey—you make a "run and gets", which is a getaway chart with signals on it, Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937; extant. On the run in the getaway, the s. suffix s being added (as in American bugs and English crackers, for 'crazy'); cf. make one's gets, q.v. at gets.

run around. To avoid meeting—to fail to meet—(someone) at a pre-arranged point: esp. tramps': since ca. 1910; by 1935, s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; Ersine, 1933.

run in, 'to arrest (a person)', is police s., not c. Matsell, 1859; H, 1874. The same applies to the C. 20 run-in, 'an arrest'.

run into the ground. To overdo; to carry to a useless, or a foolish, extremity: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 'A plan that worked like a charm, for a while, but which the knaves "run into the ground"': by 1890, s.; by 1900, coll. Perhaps ex knocking a stake too far into the ground.

run-out, n.; often r.o. or R.O. A fake auction: 1934, Philip Allingham, Cheapjack. Pitchmen's and cheapjacks' s., as also prob., run-out mob, 'a gang that conducts mock auctions' (Black, 1943).

run-out, v. To escape from prison: convicts': Feb. 1931, True Detective Mysteries, R. E. Burns; extant.

run rigs, 'to play pranks', is classified by B & L, 1890, as 'old cant': but was it ever c.?

run the roads down. 'Map out the best roads for a get-away, before the job,' Rose, 1934 (he means, to map them in advance): since ca. 1925. To run up and down the roads and look for important features. Cf. run and gets.

run the (occ. a) rule (rarely ruler) over. 'Among thieves, to try all a person's pockets quietly, as done by themselves, or to search anyone thoroughly, as at the police-station': 1874, H; Oct. 1879, Macmillan's Magazine; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police! (glossary), 'Robbing a County Court office . . . Running the ruler over the registrar'; 1890, B & L; 1893 (but perhaps valid for 1845), F. W. Carew, No. 747, p. 412; 1903, F & H; by 1930, s.

run through. 'Running him through. A term used by gamblers when they play cards with a sucker, and don't give him a chance to win a single point': 1859, Matsell; 1890, B & L; extant.

runner. The same as a 'budge', q.v. at sense 1: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † by 1780. He runs quietly, furtively, into the house.—2. A dog-stealer; 1909, Ware; extant. He runs off with the stolen animal.—3. Among American bootleggers (from ca. 1922), Burke says, a runner is 'one who transports liquor from the border to inland towns'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; then merely 'nostalgic'. Short for liquor runner.—4. A gang-leader's messenger: U.S.A.: since ca. 1924. Ersine.—5. A pimp or a procurer: U.S.A.: C. 20. BVB, 1942. He 'runs about' in the course of business.—6. 'Made a bit of money out of being a runner (contact man for a fah-fee game)': The Cape Times, May 23, 1946: South Africa: C. 20. Ex the military sense, 'messenger'.

runniel. See rawniel.

running a muck (or amuck). 'After a running fight on the street with the officer (this sort of procedure being called in the slang of criminals, "running a muck")', Allan Pinkerton, Professional Thieves and the Detective, 1881; † by 1920. Ex the S.E. sense, 'to run mad and kill people'.

running doss. See running skipper.

running glazier. 'This fellow is on the look-out what families are leaving London. So soon as the families are gone he gets a Glazier's apron, a little round hat on his head, and a large pane of glass, with a lump of putty stuck on the corner, in his hand, knocks at the door, and tells the house-keeper that he has had orders to clean and mend the windows: but no sooner is he left alone seemingly cleaning and mending, than he takes an opportunity of robbing the house': 1781, Geo. Parker, A View of Society; † by 1870.

running patterer. Such a seller of songs and ballads as kept on the move: not c., but s. An excellent account appears in Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 1851.

running postman. 'He was what they [some travelling thieves] called a "running postman". He obtained money by calling at the house of country gentlemen and well-to-do farmers, and presenting letters which went to show that he was engaged in some good work of evangelisation. He was successful for years in picking up money, getting hospitably treated, and generally walking off with a spoon or two, or something else, for the loss of which servants were probably blamed': 1880, An Ex-Convict, Our Convict System; † by 1930.

running rumble, the. The dodge or livelihood practised by the 'running rumbler': 1789, George running rumbler. 'The running rumbler is a fellow belonging to a gang of pickpockets, who, in order to give them an opportunity of working upon the prig and buz, that is, picking of pockets, gets a large grinding-stone, which he rolls along the pavement, the passengers hearing the rumble, get out of the way, for fear of its running against them, or over their toes; in this critical moment some of the gang give you the rum hustle, or pick your pocket or your purse, book [pocket-book], or handkerchief': 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter of Variegated Characters; † by 1890 (B & L).

Parker, Life's Painter, 'I shall go upon the running rumble'; † by 1870.

running skipper or running doss. 'That sleeping place which, on a damp night, a tramp obtains by kicking a cow and lying down on the warm, dry spot vacated by the animal,' Partridge, 1938: tramps': C. 20. See doss, n., and skipper, n.

running(-)smabble. See:— running smobble is the trick very briefly described in the next entry: 1708, implied in running smobler; 1714, Alex. Smith, The History of the Highwaymen, '[Jack Hall] went with some of his wicked Associates upon the Running-Smoble, which is, in a dark Evening for one of them to go into a Shop, and pretending to be drunk, after some troublesome Behaviour, he puts the Candles out, and taking away whatever comes first to Hand . . . , he runs off, whilst another flings Handfuls of Dirt and Nastiness into the Mouth and Face of the Person that cries out to stop Thief, which puts him or her into a sudden Surprise, it gives 'em an Opportunity of going off without apprehending'; 1714, C. Hitching, The Regulator, where it is spelt r. smabble; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1840. Cf. snabble.

running(-)smobler. 'Running Smoblers. Such as go into a Shop in the Night, where People are busie in the Back-room, or elsewhere, and snatching something that's nearest them, they run away with it,' Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed., 1708; † by 1800. Cf. the preceding entry.

running snavel is practised by 'men and women who watch little boys of a Monday morning going to school, with their satchel of books thrown over their shoulders, and the money for their week's schooling in their pockets, and a large piece of bread and butter in their hands. As soon as the Snaveller is up to this, he or she coazes the child up some by-alley, narrow court, or dark passage, and grabbles the whole': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1801 (see runny snarel); † by 1860. Cf. snabble and see snavel.

running stationer was, prob., never c.; but it was certainly s. in C. 17–18. In 1698, B.E. defines it thus: 'Running-stationers, Hawkers, or those that cry News and Books about the Streets'; Grose thus: 'Hawkers of newspapers, trials, and dying speeches'. So called because they kept on the move; they had practically died out by the end of C. 19, their most flourishing period having been ca. 1820–80. The locus classicus is in Mayhew's London Labour and the London Poor.

running the cook is 'ringing the changes' (passing counterfeit money): tramps': 1886, Wm Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob.

runny snarel is an error or a misprint for running snavel: 1801, Colonel George Hanger, Life, Adventures, and Opinions.

rurales. Country police: 1929, W. R. Burnett, Little Caesar; extant. Some erudite tramp's coinage: L. ruralis, 'rustic', ex rus, 'country' as opp. to town.

rush, n. (Always the . . .) 'The fourth way [of burglary], they stile the Rush, a term very applicable to the manner of doing it, which is to knock at the door, and the moment it opens, rush in, knock down the person that opens it, secure the rest that are in the house, by binding them separately, or together, and then rifle the place of every thing that is of value', section on housebreaking in Anon., Thieving Detected, 1777; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1903 (F & H). Self-explanatory.—2. Hence, the thieves engaged therein: 1797, Potter, 'Rush, a number of persons rushing into a house together to rob it'; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1870.

rush, v. Implied in rusher, q.v., in 1785; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'A sudden and violent effort to get into any place [in order to rob it], or vice versa to effect your exit, as from a place of confinement, &c., is called rushing them, or giving it to 'em upon the rush'—copied in Egan's Grose, 1823; † by 1870 in Britain, but app. current in U.S.A. until ca. 1920—witness Arthur Stringer, The Shadow, 1913 (p. 85). Cf. rush, n., 1.

rush, do it on the. To effect a robbery and then decamp speedily: 1859, H, by implication; † by 1900. See rush, n., 1, and cf.:—

rush, give it to 'em (up)on the. See rush, v., quot'n of 1812.

rush act, the. 'A swindle in which criminals impersonate [police] officers and shake down other law violators. "Ed put the rush act on a ginmill and collected two C-notes", 'Ersine, 1933; extant. Everything is done at speed.

rush-in, n. 'When a good citizen, when you buzz [i.e., beg] him for a dime, rushes you into a restaurant and orders a meal for you,' P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914: tramps: C. 20.

rush the growler. To drink alcoholic liquor, esp. in some considerable quantity: Aug. 1891, The Contemporary Review, Josiah Flynt, 'The American Tramp', 'Liquor drinking, "rushing the growler"'; extant. See growler.

rusher. 'Rushers, thieves who knock at the doors of great houses in London, in summer time, when the families are out of town, and on the door being opened by a woman, rush in and rob the house; also housebreakers, who enter lone houses by force': 1785, Grose; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann; † by 1903 (by implication from F & H). Cf. rush, n.—2. A drug-seller, esp. if illicit: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.

rushing business. '(Thieves and Public-house.) Robbery by adroitness, cheating under the semblance of fair treatment,' Ware (1909): ca. 1875–1930. Ware quotes from an 1882 source.

rushing the growler. See rush the growler.

russer or R-. 'A big player', i.e., one who stakes large sums: professional gamblers and card-sharpers: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. Is this a pun on rusher and Russia, that very large country?

Russia or russia. A pocket-book: 1877 (but referring to ca. 1870), Five Years' Penal Servitude, 'Lift a swell of his russia with flimsies for 300 l. in it'; 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747; 1903, F & H; ob. by 1940; † by 1946. Ex S.E. Russia (or r-) = Russia leather.

Russian Coffee-House, the. The Brown Bear tavern and night-house: 1800, The Oracle ('Fashionable Characters: A Kiddy'), where it seems to be classified as c.; it was orig. (late C. 18) c., and it may have remained c. until ca. 1820, when it > s. George Barrington, in his New London Spy, 1805, mentions it as 'a house equally frequented by bloods, bullies, pimps, chairmen, and those persons who are unfortunate enough to be shut out of their lodgings'; and in 1812, J. H. Vaux glosses it thus: 'A name given by some punster of the family, to the Brown Bear public-house in Bow-Street, Covent-garden'. In 1823, Jon Bee calls it the Russian hotel. By an obvious pun on the name.

rust. See nab the rust, both senses.—2. The sense 'a sour person' is American s. Leverage, 1925.—3. As 'money' (Leverage, 1925) it is American—though cf. nab the rust—but prob. s., not c.

rust-eater. 'A "rust-eater" usually works on extra-gangs or track-laying jobs; handles steel' (properly applied to a hobo), Nels Anderson, The Hobo, 1923: tramps': 1931, Stiff, 'If he works on iron bridges he is a "rust eater"': 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. 'Much of these materials is covered with scaly rust' (Irwin).

rustle. To operate as a prostitute: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. hustle—hustler—rustler, 2.

rustler 'has lately . . . got to mean a thief, or swindler, from the abuse of the powers of activity and craft necessary to succeed in that "profession"', Clapin, Americanisms, 1903; 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; slightly ob. Cf. hustler. It prob. derives ex South-Western slang 'to rustle cattle' and 'cattle rustler'.—2. A pimp, a procurer: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Cf. runner, 4.

rusty, turn a. To become an informer; to inform: ca. 1750–1850. (B & L, 1890.) But I much doubt its genuineness, for it comes from Lytton Bulwer's Paul Clifford, 1830—and that author is not to be trusted in the matter of c., any more than Disraeli and Ainsworth, likewise of the 1830's, are to be trusted, for all three were literary revivalists, not knowledgeable canters.

rusty(-)toucher. A drunken (or drunkard) thief: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary, p. 322); ob. Ex touch, v.

rutter. Mentioned by Gilbert Walker in 1552; in 1591, Greene notes that in Barnard's law, the rutter is that member of the gang who 'makes the fray'—picks the quarrel and bears the brunt of it, while the rest of the gang slip away quietly; a point repeated by Dekker in The Belman of London, 1608; app. † by 1660. Prob. ex a stag in rut.

ruyer is a misprint in Holme's Armory, 1688, for queer.

R'yal Navy lay, the. See merchant lay, the.

rybuck. See ryebuck.

ryder. See rider.

rye is a Romany term for a young man (often, a young gentleman); occ. used by tramps in C. 19–20.

rye mort; rye mush. A lady; a gentleman: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid (both terms); 1939, J. Curtis, What Immortal Hand (2nd); extant. See rye and mort and mush, n., 5.

ryebuck or rybuck or, rarely, rye buck. Rybuck. All right; straight; it will do (i.e., satisfactory); I am satisfied': 1859, Matsell, Vocabulum; ibid. at moey, 'My pals have got up a bene moey to send to the head bloke, and if it comes off rye buck, I shall soon vamoso from the stir'; † by 1900. Ex Hebrew reivach, 'profit' or 'good business', prob. via Yiddish; ca. 1900, the word found its way into Australian s.

ryer. One shilling and sixpence: turf: C. 20. 'John Morris' in The Cornhill Magazine, June 1932. A corruption of kye?

ryng(-)faller. See ring-faller.

S

S.A., 'a State Attorney': police coll. or j.

S.A.N. "'Who are you?' "Only an S.A.N. man, mate"—footnoted thus: 'S.A.N., Criminal . . . for "Stop at Nothing"'; thus in David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live, 1934.

S.P. rap. A charge against, esp. a tramp, for being a suspicious person: mostly tramps': since ca. 1910. Convict, 1934. I.e., rap (a charge or accusation) against a suspicious person.

S.S. See skin shot and contrast V.S.

sa. 'six', as in sa soldi, 'sixpence', is parlyaree. Ex Italian sei.

sab(-)cat. A member of the I.W.W.: tramps': 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; by 1920, industrial s. Perhaps it always had been industrial s. and the tramps had merely adopted it. Ex sabotage + cat; the latter = 'a person', as in gay cat.

Sac. Sacramento: ca. 1880–1905, tramps' c.; thereafter, general s. Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (p. 338). Cf. Chi and Los.

sach. Narcotics hidden on the person or in a cache: drug traffic: since the 1920's. BVB. Perversion of cache.

sacheverel(l). 'An iron door': 1859, Matsell; sack, n. In 1698, B.E.: 'Sack, c. a Pocket. Dive into his Sack, c. to Pick his Pocket'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725, and Grose, 1785; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1848, Sinks of London; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1903 (F & H). Ex Fr. sac, 'a wallet'.—2. Hence, a purse: 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'Twenty strike in his sack'; 1797, Potter (at purse); † by 1870.—3. Short for sack o' bull: U.S.A.: 1935, David Lamson (quot'n at moon, 4); extant.

† by 1910. Ex the name of a noted 'heavy man'?

sack, v. 'To sack any thing is to pocket it': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Bee, 'To appropriate things to oneself'; 1823, Sessions Papers; 1838, Glascok; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1903 (F & H). Ex sack, n., 1: cf. the s. pouch.—2. To empty: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Education', of a shoeblack, "'Come black, your Worship, for a single mag"', | And while he shined, his Nelly sack'd the bag', glossed as 'emptied the pocket'; † by 1900.—3. To rob (a place) and put the loot into bags or sacks: U.S.A.:

1937, Anon., Twenty Grand Apiece, 'A Hole that you could be cooling off in within an hour after a bank was sacked'; March 18, 1937, Godfrey Irwin (letter); extant.

sack-diver. A pickpocket specializing in the removal of purses, esp. from pockets: 1781, G. Parker, A View of Society; † by 1890. See diver; sack = Fr. sac, 'bag'; handbag—which usually contains a purse.

sack o' bull; sack o' dust. A prison tobacco-ration: convicts': 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant. See bull, n., 6, and dust, n., 3.

sacker. 'A brutal thief who grabs all,' Leverage, 1925; slightly ob. Ex S.E. sack, 'to pillage'.

sacking. Prostitution: 1592, Robert Greene, A Disputation (Laurence, the pickpocket, addressing Nan, a harlot), 'Why Nan, are you growne so stiffe, to thincke that your faire lookes can get as much as our nimble fingers, or that your sacking can gaine as much as our foysting . . .'; † by 1660. The (vulva and) vagina likened to a pouch; vagina pouching the penis.

sacking law. Whoremongering: 1552, Gilbert Walker, Diceplay ('Whoredom'); 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, sets thus the stage—'The Bawd if it be a woman, a Pander. The Bawd, if a man, an Apple squire. The whoore, a Commodity. The whoore house, a Trugging place'; 1608, Dekker, The Belman of London, repeats that list, which he prefaces thus, 'The companion of a theefe is commonly a Whore; it is not amisse therefore, to pinion them together; for what the theefe gets the strumpet spends. The trade of these Tale-bearers goes under the name of the Sacking law; and rightly may it be called sacking, for as in the sacking of a City, all the villanies of the world are set abroad, so when a Harlot comes to the sacking of a mans wealth and reputation (for she besiegeth both together) she leaves no stratagem unpractised to bring him to confusion. Westminster and Holborn have chambers full of these students of the Sacking law. In Clerkenwell, they had wont and are still well cliented; White Friars is famous for their meeting: The Spittle flourishes with the yong fry, that are put to it to learne it. Sackes come to these milles every houre, but the Sacking-lawe ompties them faster then a Miller grinds his bushels of corne.' (Cf. crossbiting law.) Cf. etymology of prec. entry.

Sacred Tract Road, the. 'The Boston & Albany Railroad . . . which runs through a section where but little food and much pious advice is given to tramps,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1910. The good women hand out religious tracts instead of 'hand-outs'.

sad, n. A sadistic sexual pervert: 1928, Chicago May; extant. Short for sadist; cf., masock.

sad, adj. Mean, ungenerous, stingy; South Africa: C. 20. C. T. Wittstock, letter of May 3, 1946, 'Don't be sad . . . Don't be mean'. Cf. Dutch saai, 'dull'.

sad cattle. See cattle. Here sad is 'confirmed'; cf. S.E. sad dog.

saddle. 'The most of the money spent in policy is on "gigs" and "combinations".—A "gig" is composed of three numbers and they must all come out in the same lottery to entitle the player to win. Besides "gigs" there are "saddles", "capitals", "horses", "cross-plays" and "station numbers". Gigs pay $100 for one, capital saddles $500 for a dollar, and station numbers $60,' The Man Traps of New York, 1881 (p. 27). In James D. McCabe's New York by Sunlight and Gaslight, 1882, at p. 551, we read that, at the American gambling-game, Policy, 'If a single number is chosen and drawn, he [the player] wins $5; two members constitute a "saddle", and if both are drawn the player wins from $24 to $32; three numbers make a "gig", and win from $150 to $225; four numbers make a "horse" and win $640. A "capital straddle" [sic] is a bet that two numbers will be among the first three drawn, and wins $500. The player may take any number of "saddles", "gigs", or "horses", paying $1 for each bet.' These terms are almost certainly not c. They belong to the jargon of gambling.—2. In English tramps' c., saddle is a coat: 1886, W. Newton, Secrets of Tramp Life Revealed; ob. Both are carried.

saddle and bridle. 'An opium smoker's outfit,' BVB, 1942: dope traffic: since ca. 1930. The saddle is the couch or bunk; the bridle, the pipe.

saddle blankets. Griddle cakes: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex appearance.

safe; usually the safe. Inside coat-pocket: esp. pickpockets': late C. 19–20. Partridge, 1938. Ex its comparative security.

safe, out on the. Engaged in breaking open and robbing safes: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'Sammy Hart, who was out on the safe as outside man and to help in carrying the tools'; by 1945, slightly ob. By an ironic pun.

safe card, 'a shrewd, alert person', is not c., but C. 19 s.

safe one (gen. 'un), 'a horse that will not run or, at most, will not try', is turf s.

sag, n. 'N and v Club', F. H. Sidney, 'Hobo Cant', in Dialect Notes, 1919; extant. Cf. the v.—2. Hence, a policeman's truncheon: since ca. 1919. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

sag, v. To strike, as with a truncheon: 1919 (see sag, n., 1); 1927, Kane; 1931, Godfrey Irwin. To cause the victim to sag.

sagebrush philosopher. A talkative fellow from the Western States: tramps': from ca. 1920. Stiff, 1931. Cf. the Sagebrush State, Nevada.

sago, 'money' (Leverage, 1925): s.

sail, v.; turn, v. 'To consent to sell narcotics to an addict,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. Euphemistic.—2, 3. (Only sail.) To comply, do willingly; to be a prostitute or an 'enthusiastic amateur', as in 'She sails': since ca. 1925, 1927, resp. Ersine, 1933. Moves with 'sailing' ease; is 'easy'.

Saint George, the dragon upon. See dragon . . .

Saint Giles. See Giles.

Saint Giles buzzman. 'A handkerchief thief': 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. See Giles and buzzman.

Saint Martin's-le-Grand, n. Hand: 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue. It is doubtful whether this ever got into gen. rhyming s., the usual rhyming s. term being German band.

Saint Peter's children, but usually Saint Peter's son(s). Thieves: 1714, Alex. Smith, The History of the Highwaymen; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society, where the phrase is given as Peter's sons, with every finger a fish-hook—referring to St Peter's being the greatest (or at least, the most famous) of fishermen; † by 1820.

Saint Terra or s.t. A churchyard: 1859, Matsell; † by 1910. Because it is consecrated ground or holy land; terra, 'land, earth'.

Sal. The Salvation Army: tramps' and beggars': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. Sally.

salamander. 'Salamanders, street acrobats and jugglers who eat fire': 1859, H: not c., but showmen's s.

Salamon. See salmon.

sale. 'Sale, or beat. Trimming a sucker,' Philip S. Van Cise, Fighting the Underworld, 1936: commercial crooks': C. 20.

sales lady. A prostitute: from ca. 1918. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Being in possession of all the necessary information, she knows intimately all the goods she proposes to sell.

salesman. A confidence trickster; properly, the pickup man in a 'con mob': since ca. 1925. In, e.g., Howard N. Rose, 1934, and Philip S. Van Cise, 1936. Ex the similarity of 'the confidence game' to 'high-pressure' salesmanship; cf. sale.—2. A pimp, a procurer: C. 20. BVB, 1942. Contrast the complementary sales lady.—3. A male homosexual, esp. one 'who looks for patrons'. BVB, 1942. Cf. sense 2. salesman's dog, a tradesman's 'barker', is not c., but s. Recorded by B.E. and Grose. A mere variation of barker.

Sally; Sallies. The Salvation Army; 'Salvation Army hotels and industrial workshops,' Stiff, 1931: tramps' and beggars': the former term, late C. 19–20, but also s.; the latter, since ca. 1915: 1931, Godfrey Irwin (the former only); 1934, Convict (do.); 1941, Kylie Tennant, The Battlers (Australian—but low s.); extant. Punning 'Salvation'.

sally lid. A straw hat (man's): tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931. Prob. a Sally lid, a girlish hat.

sallying. See the first quot'n at gladder; where, admittedly, it may be an S.E. term (in bell-ringing), but where, to judge from the remark about 'Kennick', it should be a tramps' term. From the second quot'n at gladder, it would seem that sallying is, or was, some variety of confidence-trickery.

salmon. An altar; a mass, the Mass; both senses are given by Harman (1566) at Salomon in the glossary; 1536, Copland, 'Cyarum, by Salmon'; 1566, Harman, in the dialogue, 'I saye by the Salomon . . . I sweare by the masse . . .'; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light (in 'The Canters Dictionarie'), 'Salomon, the masse'; 1610, Rowlands in Martin Mark-All, proposes a fanciful origin, 'Marry there was one Soloman in K. HENRY the eight's time that was a jolly fellow among them [the vagabonds and beggars], who kept his Court most an end at Fore Hall at the upper end of Lambeth . . . who was Successor to Cocke Lorrell'; 1614, Sir Thomas Overbury, Characters, of 'A canting Rogue', remarks that 'He will not beg out of his limit though hee starve; nor breake his oath if he sweare by his Salomon, though you hang him'; 1665, R. Head (Solomon); 1676, Coles, 'Salomon, c. the Mass'; 1688, Holme (Solomon); 1698, B.E., 'Salmon, c. the Beggars Sacrament and Oath'; 1725, A New Canting Dict. (salamon); 1785, Grose (salamon and salmon); 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; † by 1860. If 'oath' were the primary sense, one would postulate either Fr. serment, 'an oath', or Romany sal (or sol), 'an oath', influenced by S.E. solemn: cf. Australian, my Colonial oath! But the origin seems to be Solomon or rather its L. form Salomon, as in one of the Carmina Burana (C. 13)—the poem beginning 'Omne genus demoniorum' (Every member of the demon race), wherein occurs the bidding:

D.O.U.

'Per sigillum Salomonis et per magos Pharaonis Omnes vos conjuro,
Omnes exorcizo'—

'By the seal of Solomon,
By king Pharaoh's wise enchanter

I summon you and bind you'— as Helen Waddell renders it in her Medieval Latin Lyrics, 1929. In the Middle Ages, Solomon's seal was a mystic symbol—a pair of interlaced triangles—that, emblematic of soul's union with body, served as an amulet against disease, especially against fever.—2. A drowned person on whose pockets is a large or largish sum of money: 1883, James Greenwood, Tag, Rag & Co., p. 35; 1890, B & L; † by 1945. A salmon is a superior kind of fish; contrast dab, 4, and flounder.

salmon belly. 'The [bank] roll interests you, the outside one is what you'—an imaginary burglar, pickpocket, swindler—'call a "salmon belly"'. It is a yellowback—a big bill' (or bank-note), Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926; extant. Ex the colour

Salomon. See salmon. (Harman, 1566.)

salt, n. and v. Murder; to murder: 1925, Leverage; extant. Salt is used in the refrigeration of dead animals.—2. 'Plain tobacco to mix with dagga,' C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946: South Africa: C. 20. To improve the flavour.

salt and rob. Assault and robbery: South Africa: C. 20. The Cape Times, May 23, 1946. By truncation—aphesis and abridgement.

salt(-)box; usually pl. 'Salt-Boxes, the condemned cells in Newgate are so called': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1859, H; 1869, J. Greenwood, The Seven Curses of London, 'The condemned cell—the salt-box'; 1890, B & L; then only historical. Ex their shape and perhaps their smallness.

salt-box cly. 'The outside coat-pocket, with a flap': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1887 (Baumann). See cly, n., 2; salt-box (or cellar), ex its shape.

Salt Creek; e.g., go to Salt Creek. (E.g., to go to) the electric chair: since ca. 1905: Dec. 1918, The American Law Review ('Criminal Slang', by J. M. Sullivan); 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 'Up salt creek—to the electric chair'; ob. 'Query: From the salt-water-soaked sponge electrodes used to carry current to the condemned's limbs and head?': thus Godfrey Irwin in letter of Aug. 9, 1937.

saltee, 'one, or a, penny': not c., but parlyaree. Mostly in combination. Ex It. soldo (pl. soldi), a halfpenny—approximately.

salvation, 'a station', is included in his list of c. terms by Charles Bent, Criminal Life, 1891: certainly it was, orig., thieves' rhyming s. and prob. it remained c. until ca. 1900.

salvation rancher. A missionary, an evangelist; any preacher: tramps': since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Cf. sky pilot.

salve, n. 'A complaint,' P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat, 1914: But Godfrey Irwin (letter of Sept. 13, 1937) comments thus: 'This I cannot agree with: Properly, "soft soap", a complimentary speech, or even a well-planned attempt to talk one's way out of a bad situation or into a soft "berth"'; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review, J. M. Sullivan, 'Criminal Slang', where it = deliberate flattery, esp. by a criminal and of a police officer; by 1920, in any event, it was s. Ex its soothing effect.—2. Butter: tramps': since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; Convict, 1934. Pejorative.

salve, v. 'To bribe officer with money or soft words,' Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom, 1924; extant. Cf. grease, v., and salve, n., 1.

salve-eater. 'A snuff-chewing Swede,' Stiff, 1931; extant. Cf. candle eater.

Sam, 'a Chinese saloon-keeper', and samshoo, 'Chinese whiskey', are s. (Leverage, 1925.)

sam, 'a stupid, easy fellow', is not c., but s.; orig., low s.

Sammy. The U.S.A. Government: Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'Sammy got wise to th' bum kale; put a crimp in the bindle shover an' he squealed'; extant. Ex Uncle Sam.

sampler. A thief specializing in obtaining goods on credit, never paying for them, and selling them for what he can get: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. He samples this and that.

sampsman is Barrère & Leland's mistake for scampsman.

San Berdoo (or Berdu). 'We sauntered over to Sam Bernadino—"San Berdu", as the tramps call it', Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life, 1922; 1931, Godfrey Irwin (San Berdoo); throughout C. 20.

san lo (or capitals): 'No. 2 grade yen shee' (Convict, 1934): not c., but opium-traffic j. A Chinese term. With variant son-lo (BVB, 1942).

San Toys. Crooks and/or near-crooks: C. 20. In P. P., Rhyming Slang, 1932. Rhyming on (the) boys.

sand. 'Moist sugar': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1903 (F & H). Ex similarity of appearance.—2. Any sugar: see beans. U.S.A. 'Sand—prison term for sugar,' Randolph Jordan, 'Idioms of the Road and Pave'—in The Writer's Monthly, June 1925; 1925, Leverage, 'Sand-Box. A sugar-bowl'; 1929, Givens (as convicts' c.); Feb. 1936, The Writer's Digest; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict; extant. Pejorative.

sand! Take it easy!: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. 'sweetly does it' and prec. entry.

sand-bag (or sandbag), v.; sand-bagger (or sandbagger). To blackmail (v.t.); a blackmailer: 1891, James Maitland, The American Slang Dict.; 1903, Clapin, Americanisms (both); ob. by 1930, † by 1940. Ex the lit. senses, 'to hit with a sand-bag' and 'a sandbagging footpad'.

sand-bag fake, the; sand-bag faker. (One who practises) stealing linnets, canaries, etc., with the adroit use of a sand-bag to knock cages down, and then selling them in the bird-markets and bird-shops: 1896, Arthur Morrison, A Child of the Jago (pp. 276–77); ob.

sand-bagger. See sand-bag.

sand-box. See sand, 2, Leverage reference.

sandman. A footpad: Australian: since 1919, when 'Diggers', returning from Europe, introduced it to their own country. Baker, 1942. This footpad uses a sandbag, or a stocking filled with sand, to fell his victim. This was, in 1916–18, a common practice among Australian deserters on the outskirts of Etaples and on Salisbury Plain.

sandstone; soft crawler. Australian convicts' c. of ca. 1820–70, as in Louis Becke, Old Convict Days, 1899 (p. 63), 'If a man, while receiving his hundred strokes [with "the cat"]', shouted out through pain, he was looked upon as a "sandstone" or "soft crawler". Cf. 'I had . . . been considered an incorrigible—"a government pebble and no sandstone"' (ibid., 55).

sandy blight. Dead right: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming; prob. coined by Australian crooks.

sans prisado is an error for lansprisado: see lanspresado. Sinks of London, 1948.

santar or santer. In shoplifting ('the lifting law') there are '3. parties of necessity: the Lift, the Marker & the Santar': the lift steals the piece of merchandise, hands it to the marker; the marker hides it within his voluminous cloak; then 'the Marker gives a winke to the Santar that walks before the window, and then the Santar going by in great hast, the Marker calks him and saies, sir . . . I have a message . . . from a verie friend of yours . . . : truly sir saies the santar I have verie urgent busines in hand . . . , but one woorde and no more saies the Marker, and then hec delivers him whatsoever the Lift hath convaied unto him, and then the Santar goes his way, who never came within the shop, and is a man unknownen to them all,' R. Greene, The Second part of Conny-catching, 1592; 1608, Dekker, who spells it sentar; † by 1660—prob. by 1640. He is safe from suspicion: cf. S.E. sanctuary.

sap, n. See saps.—2. A club; a crutch: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1926, Black (see below); 1927, Kane; by 1928 (The White Tops, July–Aug., 'Circus Glossary'), also circus s.; by 1930, no longer to be treated as c. in the former nuance. As 'a crutch', however, it remains beggars' c.—as in Flynn's, Jan. 13, 1934, Jack Callahan; 1934, Convict; Oct. 21, 1936, Flynn's; and others. Cf. saps and sap-stick. Jack Black, You Can't Win, 1926, 'The bums then began "pestering the natives" by begging and stealing till the whole town got sore. The town marshal would then appear with a posse armed with "saps", which is short for saplings, young trees. He stood guard with a shotgun, while the posse fell upon the convention and "sapped up" on those therein assembled and . . . ran them out of town.'—3. Hence, as in Flynn's, May 10, 1930, J. Allan Dunn, 'Papers . . . held down by what crooks call a "sap" or a "persuader"'. It was a slingshot, blackjack, worn slick and dark' (i.e., a loaded truncheon); 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'A piece of rubber hose'; extant—but by 1940, it was no longer c.

sap, v.; sap up on. To beat, thrash, 'slug', assault: 1924, George Henderson, Keys to Crookdom (the longer); 1925, Leverage, 'To stroke one on the head'; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp, 'I was sapped by a yard dick'; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life (in sapping day); 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win; 1927, Kane; by 1928 (as for the n., sense 2), also circus s.; May 18, 1929, Flynn's; by 1930, no longer genuinely c. Prob. ex sap, n., 2.

sap-stick. A crutch: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex saps; or perhaps an elaboration of sap, n., 2.

sap up on. See sap, v., and sap, n., 2 (etymology).

sapping day. A day on which a tramp finds himself involved in a timber-lesson: tramps': 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life, 'I'd heard o' sappin' days in other states, but I never bumped into one in this 'un before'; extant. See sap, v.

sappy, 'simple', 'foolish', is not c., but s. (Grose, 1785.) Cf. green, 'inexperienced'.

saps. 'A clubbing with weapons made from saplings; synonymous with "timber",' Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (Glossary), 1899; extant. Ex sap, n., 2.—2. The country; a country town; outer suburb of a city: 1933, Ersine; extant. With pun on synonymous sticks.

sap's racket. 'In the language of the underworld, once extortion is reported to the [F.B.I.], it becomes a "sap's racket"' (as does any other 'racket' in these circumstances): J. Edgar Hoover, Persons in Hiding, 1938; extant.

sapskull, 'a simple fellow' (Grose, 1785), is s., not c.

sarbot, n. and v. An informer—to inform—to the police: Oct. 1928, Word-Lore, F. C. Taylor, 'The Language of Lags' (both n. and v.); extant (?). The term is suspect.

sarve. See serve, v., 3.

sat. 'A "sat" is an ordinary letter, the paper of which has been soaked in morphine solution and allowed to dry. The inmate receiving it puts the paper back into water and lets it soak for a few moments. At the end of that time he has a morphine solution ready to use,' Louis Berg, Revelations of a Prison Doctor, 1934; recorded also by Kernôt, 1929–31: drug addicts': since ca. 1923. Short for saturation or perhaps saturated letter.

Satan's Circus. The Haymarket on Sixth Avenue, New York City: ca. 1890–1914. Broadway Jack, in Flynn's, May 2, 1936, says that the Haymarket 'was The Dump of Dumps! The can-can was . . . staged . . . nightly', and 'All the "hustlers" [prostitutes] of the city congregated there nightly to corral suckers'.

satchel. A girl or young woman: since ca. 1920: 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'A good-looking satchel can work miracles with an old twist-crazy guy like the Parole Officer' (in ref. to the year 1925); slightly ob. Ex the bag, or the satchel, she normally carries.

satchel, get (someone) in the. To accuse, on the grounds of conclusive evidence, esp. a dishonest official: 1933, Victor F. Nelson, Prison Days and Nights; extant. I.e., to 'have in the bag' (to be sure of).

satín, 'gin': not c., but s.

satín and silk. Milk: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

Saturday-night habit. 'Dope addicts' term for those who take an occasional injection of dope in the arm,' Kernôt, 1929–31; extant. See habit.

Saturday spread. See spread, n., 7.

satyr; usually pl. Alexander Smith, The History of the Highwaymen, 1714: '[He] got into a Gang of Satyrs, who are Men living wild in the Fields, that keep their Holds and Dwellings in the Country and forsaken Places, stealing Horses, Kine, Sheep, and all other sort of Cattle which come in their way'. App. current only in the first half of the C. 18. Ex their wild appearance.

saucer, 'the eye' (Leverage, 1925) not c.; merely s. Ex saucer-eyed.

saulty, 'a penny': parlyaree. Thomas Frost, Circus Life, 1875. See saltee.

sauneý. See sawney.

sausage, n., 'a (small) coin; any trifling sum of money' (e.g., 'I haven't a sausage!'); not c., but s.—2. Sense unascertained: U.S.A.: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by Moreby Acklom; extant (?).

sausage, v. To cash: since ca. 1905: 1937, James Curtis (see goose's); by 1940, low s. Short for rhyming s. sausage and mash.

sausages. Fetters: possibly c., prob. low s.: 1848, Sinks of London. Ex the shape.

savage. A recruit policeman eager to make an arrest: 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. He acts 'tough'.

saver. An occ. variant of lifeboat, 'a reprieve': 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant.

Savoyards were the inhabitants of, and resorters for sanctuary to, 'Savoy', which was some London district of the same kind as 'Alsatia': app. ca. 1665–1700. B.E.: see quot'n at rum duke, 2.

saw. Ten dollars; a ten-dollar note: from the 1920's. Damon Runyon, Furthermore, 1938. Short for sawbuck.

saw them off. To snore; to sleep: esp. tramps': C. 20. By 1940, or so, it was low s. In, e.g., John Worby, Spiv's Progress, 1939. Ex the resemblance to the sound of wood being sawn into logs or blocks.

sawbuck. A ten-dollar bill: mid-C. 19–20: s., not c. Ex 'the X shape of a sawyer's sawbuck' (D.A.E.).—2. Hence, a sentence to ten years' imprisonment: 1925, Leverage; 1929, Givens; Feb. 1930, The Writer's Digest; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; April 8, 1933, Flynn's, Convict 12627; 1933, Victor F. Nelson; 1934, Rose; 1936, Lee Duncan; 1938, Castle; extant.

sawdust, n. See sawdust game and s. racket, both of which sawdust supersedes in C. 20—though not as c.—2. Dynamite: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; slightly ob.

sawdust, v. To work the sawdust game: 1925, Leverage; extant.

sawdust game (c.); s. swindle (s.). Both occur in Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872: 'A new device for skilful robbery of the uninitiated has been introduced . . . by sharpers and shysters . . . known as the "Sawdust" or "Circular" Game . . . [It] is played by only two parties; . . . sharp knaves and dull fools'—a variety of the confidence trick, on the theme of 'easy money', the victim receiving a neat little box or packet filled with sawdust or shavings; 1880, A. Comstock, Frauds Exposed, where (p. 196) it is, specifically, a pretended dealing in counterfeit money; 1881, The Man Traps of New York, p. 41 (s. game); by 1910, s. game was s.

sawdust man. A dealer in counterfeit money: 1906, Owen Kildare, My Old Bailiwick, 'Barney Dwyer, king of "sawdust" men'; ob. See sawdust game.

sawdust racket, the. A variant of the sawdust game: 1886, Allan Pinkerton, Thirty Years a Detective, 'The "sawdust racket" is put into operation', and see chromo; † by 1920.

sawed-off, n. 1927, Charles Francis Coe, Me—Gangster, "'He can handle the sawed-off when we make the grab" . . . It meant a ten-inch-barrel shotgun with two barrels, and buckshot shells that spread like hail in the wind'; by 1930, s.—in 1929, at latest, it was superseded by sawyer.

saweer. 'To Saweer clearly, (that is, to keep a good Look out) that they should have . . .': Jan. 1741, trial of Mary Young, in Select Trials at the Old Bailey, IV, 1742; † by 1810. A corruption of seer = see-er, one who sees.

sawgosh player. An insane or exceptionally foolish person: convicts' (? only Sing Sing): 1935, Hargan; extant. 'I admit this beats me,' Godfrey Irwin. Me too; unless there be a connexion with meshuga.

sawney. 'Sawn(e)y, a Scotsman', is s., not c.—2. Bacon: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose, 'A flitch of bacon'; 1839, Brandon; 1851, H. Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I, 255; 1857, Snowden; 1857, Augustus Mayhew, Paved with Gold; 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Bacon; fat pork'; 1889, Clarkson & Richardson, Police!; 1890, B & L (also sauney), 'Bacon, pork'; by 1903 (F & H) it was low s. Ex Romany sani, 'pork'.—3. A soldier: U.S.A.: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Ex s. sawney, 'a lazy and easy-going person'; cf. galoot.

sawney-hunter. 'Sawney-Hunters', or those who go purloining bacon from cheesmongers' shop-doors': 1851, London Labour, III, 25; 1859, H, 'One who steals bacon'; Nov. 1870, The Broadway; † by 1940. See sawney, 2.

sawyer. A sawn-off shotgun: 1929, Givens; 1931, IA, 'As used by liquor runners or racketeers. Usually a double-barrelled affair, cut down so that it does not exceed a foot in length, with a heavy pistol grip and no shoulder stock. It can be carried under an overcoat or tucked in beside the seat of an automobile, and it has a deadly efficiency at short range'; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Ex sawed (for sawn), with agential -er.

saxophone. 'An opium pipe is sometimes referred to as a stem or saxophone,' Convict, 1934: drug addicts': since the late 1920's. Prob. short for Chinese saxophone.

say, six; say saltee, sixpence: not c., but parlyaree. H, 1859. Ex It. sei, six; sei soldi, six 'coppers'. Hence, say oney saltee (lit., 6-1 'coppers'), sevenpence (also setter saltee); say dooe saltee (lit., 6-2 'coppers'), eightpence (also otter saltee); say tray saltee, ninepence; say quarterer saltee, tenpence; say chinker saltee, elevenpence.

say, v. 'We said that plant. . . . We robbed that house,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904; † by 1940. Cf. speak, v., 1.

scab, 'a strike-breaker; a person willing to work for lower than normal wages'; scab, 'to work on a strike job, or for lower than normal wages': labour s., not c. Pejorative: a sore upon the body of Labour?

scab herder, 'a guard protecting scabs working where a strike has been declared': labour s. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. See prec.

scalded. 'A clap' or gonorrhœa; 'The cull has napped a scalded; the fellow has got a clap,' Lexicon Balatronicum, 1811; 1887, Baumann; † by 1910. Not certainly c., although it may orig. have been c.; rather more prob. was it always s.—low s. Ex burning sensation.

scaldrum dodge. 'By these Peter was initiated into the "scaldrum dodge", or the art of burning the body with a mixture of acids and gunpowder, so as to suit the hues and complexions of the accident to be deplored': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I—plagiarized by H, 1859; 1887, Baumann; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H, who classify it as tramps'; † by 1930. A perversion of scalding.

scale, n. Money; esp. bribe (or hush) money: 1900, J. Flynt and F. Walton, The Powers that Prey (p. 88); 1901, Flynt, The World of Graft, (of a policeman) 'He . . . takes in as much "scale" as his position allows'; app. † by 1930. Either because it tips the scales of venal justice, or because gold-dust is weighed in scales to determine its value; cf., however, s. scales, 'money'.—2. A louse: mostly convicts': 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. It's a climber!

scale, v. To ride illicitly free on train, tram, bus; esp., scale a rattler, to ride free on a train: Australian: since ca. 1920. Baker, 1942. Ex climbing on to the conveyance.—2. To steal; to rob (someone): Australian: since ca. 1925. Baker, 1942. See scaler, 1, and cf.:—3. To swindle (someone): Australian: since ca. 1925. Baker, 1942.

scaler. A burglar, or other criminal, that decamps with a confederate's share of the loot: New Zealand since ca. 1920 and, after ca. 1935, Australia: 1932, Nelson Baylis (private letter); 1941, Sidney J. Baker, New Zealand Slang; 1942, Baker, who defines it also as 'a swindler'. Ex Australian and New Zealand (low) s. scale, 'to run away'.—2. One who rides illicitly free on a train: Australian: since ca. 1930. Baker, 1942. Ex S.E. scale, 'to climb'.

scamander, 'to wander about without a settled purpose' (H, 1860), is not c., but s. scammered, tipsy: 1859, H: perhaps orig. c., but H, 1864, classifies it as s.; app. † by 1914. Perhaps cf. dial. scammed, 'injured, bruised', and, less prob., dial. scammish, 'rough, awkward, untidy' (E.D.D.).

scamp, n. A highway: 1742, implied in scamp-cull; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'On the Scamp . . .; that is, on the Highway'; † by 1840. Undoubtedly related to S.E. scamper, n. and v.; this sense may, however, derive ex sense 2; the latter seems the better theory, for sense 2 follows more easily than sense 1, from the S.E. word scamper.—2. Hence (?), the scamp, highway robbery; a scamp, an instance thereof: 1738 (see scamp, go upon the); 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, (heading of section) 'The bold Adventure called the Scamp'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'The game of highway robbery . . . the scamp . . . Done for a scamp signifies convicted of a highway robbery'; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1859 (H, 1st ed.). It is instructive to note that, for this term, there exists an exact parallel in law-court English, where the highway = a highway robbery or, collectively, highway robbery: 'Thomas Supple, for the Highway, 1749', is a heading in Remarkable Trials and Interesting Memoirs . . . 1740 to 1764, pub. in 1765.—3. Hence (?), a highway robber; esp. a highwayman: 1753, Poulter, 'Scamps, Prigs, and Files', ibid., 'When Mr Scamp comes, he calls for a Bottle'; 1782, Messink; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter, 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1817, J. J. Stockdale, The Greeks; 1818, The London Guide, 'Scamps, ragged street thieves'; 1821, P. Egan, Life in London (footpad); 1834, Ainsworth, Rookwood; † by 1859 (H, 1st ed.).—4. Loosely, 'a thief': 1821, P. Egan, Boziana, III, 'Sonnets for the Fancy. Triumph', 'And from the start, the scamps are cropt at home'; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1870.—5. A 'hustler' (q.v.): 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London; † by 1890. A natural development ex sense 3.

scamp, v. To go as a highwayman; to be a highwayman: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'I'll scamp on the Panney; I'll go on the Highway'; 1781, George Parker, A View of Society (see quot'n at lumper); 1801, The Life of Col. George Hanger; † by 1870. Prob. ex the n.—2. Hence (?), 'to scamp a person is to rob him on the highway': Aug. 1754, trial of McDaniel and others, 'Lets scamp him,' Select Trials, from 1741 to 1764, III; 1812, J. H. Vaux; † by 1870.

scamp, done for a. Convicted of a robbery on the highway: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see scamp, n., 2); † by 1860.

scamp, foot. See foot scamp.

scamp, go (up)on the. To go out as a highwayman; to be a highwayman: 1738, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. 2 (James Leonard), 'He asked me if I would not go with him, and some more of our Countrymen upon the Scamp'; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (see quot'n at scamp, n., 1); Aug. 17, 1854, trial of McDaniel and others, in Select Trials, from 1741 to 1764, III, pub. in 1764; 1755, 'History of the Thief-Takers' in Remarkable Trials and Interesting Memoirs, 1760; 1776, Sessions Papers; in this sense, † by 1840. See scamp, n., 1 and 2.—2. Hence, 'Beggars, who would turn their hands to any thing occasionally, without inquiring in whom the thing vested, are said to "go upon the scamp"': 1823, Bee; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1900.

scamp, royal. See royal scamp.

scamp, royal foot. See royal foot scamp.

scamp-cull. A highwayman: 1742, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, No. II (Jesse Walden); app. † by 1830. Cf. scamp, n., 1, and cull, n., 4.

scamp-foot is an error for foot scamp.

scamp(-)lay, the. Robbery on the highway: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; † by 1830. Scamp, n., 2 + lay, n., 2.

scamp-man. A highwayman: 1790, Anon., The High-Way-Man, 'Bold boys a thieving never go, | To bring the Scamp-man's act so low'; † by 1840. Ex scamp, n., 1.

scamper. To run away; make off: 1687, Tom Brown (O.E.D.); 1688, Thomas Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, where, in the glossary, it is classified as c.; B.E. also adjudges it to be c. Prob., however, as B.E.'s entry justifies us in suggesting, it was, orig., military s. on the verge of being c. As The O.E.D. points out, it is either and more prob. ex Dutch schampen, to make off, to escape, or ex It. scampare, to run away.

scamperer, used by Steele, early in C. 18, for 'a street ruffian': rather s. than c. Ex prec.

scamping, adj.; esp. in scamping tricks, thus 'Fellows who pilfer in markets, from stalls or orchards, who snatch off hats, cheat publicans out of liquor, or toss up cheatingly—commit scamping tricks': 1823, Bee; earlier, however, in Sessions Papers, Sept. 1809, "'They sung some scamping song'" (songs in c.); † by 1900. Ex scamp, v.

scampsmen. A highwayman: Oct. 1791, Sessions Papers, p. 605, 'He came out and said, Will, these are three Scampsmen; by that I understood highway-men'; 1799, The Spirit of the Public Journals, 'Memorandum.—If any thing done by scampsmen on the Fulham road, send the traps to pull up Bounce and Blunderbuss' (O.E.D.); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; April 1841, Tait's Magazine, 'Flowers of Hemp'; 1842, P. Egan, Captain Macheath (song, 'The By-Blow of the Jug'); † by 1870. Lit., 'man of the scamp, or highway'.

scandal-proof, in its specific underworld sense, was, ca. 1670–1700, applied, in the words of B.E., 1698, to 'a thorough pac'd Alsatian, or Minter, one harden'd or past Shame'.

scandalous. A periwig: 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict., whose definition may imply the origin of the term—'Scandalous, a sorry Perriwig'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; † by 1840.

scapali. See scarper.

Scap(p)arey, do a Johnny. See Johnny Scaparey . . .

scare, 'a coward' (? ex scare-baby), and scare, 'to discover immediately' (? ex scare up, 'to arouse'): these two meanings, both recorded by Leverage, 1925, belong to s.—2. Hence, as the scare, it = 'the extortion racket': racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'That torpedo is with a mob on the scare'; 1934, Rose; extant.

scarecrow. "'Never take up with a fresh hand till you've shopped your scarecrow.'" The scarecrow is the boy who has served him [a thief] until he is well known to the police, and is so closely watched that he may as well stay at home as go out,' James Greenwood, The Little Ragamuffin, 1884; 1890, B & L; † by 1920. As obvious as a scarecrow in the fields.

scared cat. 'The con-man had caught sight of either a bluebird [policeman in uniform] or a scared cat—which latter is simply an officer in plain clothes,' Arthur Stringer, The House of Intrigue, 1918; rather ob. Out of uniform, a policeman is unlikely to be attacked.

scarlet. Blood: 1893, Confessions of a Convict, ed. by Julian Hawthorne; † by 1920. Ex its colour.

scarlet pips. Lips: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1918. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

scarper, 'to run away': 1859, H, "'Scarper with the feele of the donna of the cassey", to run away with the daughter of the landlady of the house': not c., but parlyaree, although H (3rd ed., 1864), who remarks that this is 'almost pure Italian, "Scappare colla figlia della donna della casa"', classifies it as 'Seven Dials and Prison Cant, from the Lingua Franca'. Now, and since ca. 1870, common among showmen, and touring-company actors. B & L, 1890, record a variant: scapali. It. scappare, 'to flee', 'to escape', via Lingua Franca.

scarp or -ie, 'a policeman': parlyaree. In, e.g., H. W. Wicks, The Prisoner Speaks, 1938. Ex scarper, prob. through flatty.

scat. Whiskey: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article of M. Acklom; ob. Perhaps proleptic: it causes intelligence to scat, to scatter, to vanish: cf. the English proverb, when the wine is in, the wit is out.

scatter is a c. shortening of scatter-gun, 'a shot-gun', at least ca. 1845–60; after which it was s. or coll.: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language').—2. A resort; a home (= institution): Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'), 'A respectable "scatter" . . . for reformed pickpockets'; 1925, Leverage, 'A saloon; a hiding-place for thieves'; July 23, 1927, Flynn's; 1929, Ernest Booth, Stealing through Life; 1930, Burke, 'Usually refers to a blind pig'; June 4, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch; 1934, Rose (hiding-place); 1938, Damon Runyon, Furthermore, 'Joe the Joker . . . starts telling me about a little scatter that he has up in the Harlem'; 1942, BVB, 'A "dope den"'; 1944, Raymond Chandler, The Lady in the Lake; extant. A place tramps and gangsters, and their like, scatter to.—3. See red scatter.—4. A flight from justice: June 18, 1932, Flynn's, Al Hurwitch, "'Dangerous stuff, Gene," I said to him. "We're on a hot scatter and the girl'll just be dead weight to carry along"'; Jan. 19, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan, 'Assisting gunmen on the scatter from a job'; extant. A natural sense-development ex the S.E. word.—5. 'Small change is called scatter,' Convict, 1934; 1941, Maurer, 'The odd change on a check' (forgers' nuance); extant.

scatter-gun. A sawn-off shotgun: 1933, Ersine; by 1940, police s. The pellets scatter.

scatter(-)joint is a variation of scatter, 2: Oct. 24 1931, J. Allan Dunn in Flynn's; extant.

scawfer. See scoffer.

scellum. See skellum.

sceneries. Spectacles (nose-glasses): 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; app. † by 1930. Punning on see.

scenery. Clothing: tramps': from ca. 1930. Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough, 1936. Ironical.—2. 'A Board of Directors whose names carry weight sometimes used to refer to dividend checks carried by reloaders,' Wm L. Stoddard, Financial Racketeering, 1931: commercial crooks': since ca. 1910. Because impressive or attractive.

scenery bum. 'A tramp who is continually talking about the glories of nature, or who persists in "grabbing scenery"' (Irwin): tramps': 1931, Stiff; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; by 1940, low s.

scent. 'Bad management. "The cove was nabbed on the scent", the fellow was arrested by reason of his own bad management': Geo. W. Matsell; † by 1910. The affair stinks.

scew. See skew.

schemer. A malingerer: prisoners': 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; by 1900, merged with the familiar S.E. usage.

schice. See shice, n.

schill is an occ. variant of shill.

ship or occ. ship or most commonly skip. Wine: South Africa: C. 20. C. P. Wittstock, letter of May 23, 1946, 'Prob. from a brand of sherry, "Ship Sherry"'.
 schlamwerker or -worker. A criminal, esp. a burglar, that works only at night: 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'He shifted to night jobs, and took his dingy place . . . as a schlamwerker. As such he turned off house, flats, and stores, taking what Fate sent him'; 1925, Arthur Stringer, The Diamond Thieves (the -worker form); 1926, A. Stringer, Night Hawk; extant. Ex Yiddish: cf. and contrast skush, q.v. In Ger., Schlamm = mud.

schleifer. 'Goldman was in league with the dynamiters [dynamiter, 2], acting as the "schleifer" or fence for the gang and taking a rake-off, for each bit of plunder of which he disposed,' Linn Bonner, 'Dynamiters' in Flynn's, Aug. 13, 1927; extant.

A 'fence' is a 'sleeping partner': cf. Ger. Schläfer, 'sleeper'.

schlent, n. and v. A 'con man', an impostor; to be persuasive, like a con man,—to be neatly, skilfully, evasive: 1936, John G. Brandon, The Pawnshop Murder, "'Boys," he said in a low, almost numb voice, "you'll think I'm schlenting, but it's God's truth that I don't know where the stuff is"'; ibid., 'Ginger O'Connor was a schlent; he was a toff too'. Ex:—

schlenter, adj. Untrustworthy, dubious, make-believe: S. Africa: since ca. 1885; by 1900, low s. Pettman, Africanderisms, 1913. For origin, cf.:—2, 3. Hence, imitation gold; imitation diamonds: S. Africa: since ca. 1890. Pettman. Ex Dutch slenter, 'a trick' (O.E.D.).

schleps, make the. To 'get the bundle', Kernôt, 1929–31; extant. The n. comes from Yiddish.

schliver (pron. shliver). 'A clasp-knife of some length, not meant to lie inoffensively, when the owner is grabb'd': 1823, Bee; 1887, Baumann; † by 1910. Cf. chife (chive), n., 1, and chiver.

schlock. Narcotics in gen.: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942. Yiddish? Cf.:—

schmecken. Narcotics: 1942, BVB. Via Yiddish ex Ger. schmecken, 'to taste'.

schnozzler; incorrectly snozzler. An addict that only sniffs, not 'eats' nor injects, drugs: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Ex low s. schnozzle, 'the nose': cf. sniffer.

schofel. See shoful.

scholar. See at college and contrast collegian and collegiate. In 'An Account of the Robberies committed by Henry Fluellin', in Ordinary of Newgate's Account, 1738, the term is applied to the young assistants of a master highwayman.

school. 'A party of persons met together for the purpose of gambling': 1812, J. H. Vaux—plagiarized in Egan's Grosc, 1823; by 1870, s. Cf. college. Hence:—2. 'Two or more "patterers" working together in the streets' (H, 1859): not c., but street vendors' s.—3. 'A gang of thieves': ? American: 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1860, C. Martel, The Detective's Note-Book (England); 1862, Female Life in Prison; 1865, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1885, James Greenwood, A Queer Showman (p. 69: a 'ring' of stolen-dog merchants); 1888, J. Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern, 'Connected with the "school", as the criminal brotherhood style themselves'; 1890, B & L; 1894, The Reminiscences of Chief Inspector Littlechild; 1904, Elliott, Tracking Glasgow Criminals; slightly ob.

school man. See schoolman.

school of Venus. A brothel: since ca. 1690: ob. Prob. c. until ca. 1750. B.E. classifies it as c.; Grose does not.

schooling. 'A low gambling party': 1859, H; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1888, The Globe (March 25), 'Playing pitch and toss—in the local vernacular, schooling'; 1903, F & H; ob. Cf. school, 1.—2. "'This is young — just home from a schooling" (a term in a reformatory)': Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L; by 1895, it was s.—3. A prison sentence: 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', 'Marylebone is the court I got my schooling from' (18 months); very ob. Cf. schoolmate.

schoolman; school man. A companion in crime; a member of a criminal gang: ca. 1830—

1900: 1934, Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1890, B & L. Cf. school, 1 and 3.

schoolmate. A fellow convict: 1934, Rose; extant. For the semantics, cf. collegian, etc.

schwassle-box, 'the street performance of Punch and Judy' (H, 1859), is not c., but showmen's and, to some extent, London street s. In Anon., Revelations of a Lady Detective, 1864, a Schwostle is defined as 'Punch and Judy show'. (Prob. via Yiddish) ex Ger. schwatzen, 'to chatter': hence, lit., 'a chatter-box'. Swatchel-cove, therefore, is a 'chatter fellow'.

scissor (or scissors) bill. Defined in 1923, by Nels Anderson, The Hobo (plural here is 'scissor bills'), thus, 'The Scissors Bill is a man who carries with him tools to sharpen saws, knives, razors, etc. Often he pushes a grindstone along the street'; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's, 'All th' rubes and scissor-bills rubbered while th' twister fanned me'; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (see convention); 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1934, Convict; 1936, Kenneth Mackenzie, Living Rough; extant.—2. Hence, a 'hobo who believes he can become President. He never gets next himself, or anyone else,' Stiff, 1931: tramps': since ca. 1920.—3. A hobo that, having 'struck it rich', looks down upon his former associates: tramps': since ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931.—4. (Ex 1.) A farmer: 1933, Ersine; extant.

scissorbill front. Clothes, address, speech, etc., of a sort that enables a counterfeiter or a dud-cheque passer to pose as a working man: commercial underworld: since ca. 1930. Maurer, 1941. Ex prec. entry + front, n.

scissors bill. See scissor bill.

scoff, n. Food: tramps': 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'Food, a meal'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; by 1933, low s. Ex English s., itself ex S. African coll. (ex Cape Dutch).

scoff, v.i. To eat; esp., to eat well, to gorge oneself: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; Sept. 1917, Hobo News, Bill Quirke; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; Jan. 8, 1927, Flynn's; by 1928, (low) s. The term has been current, throughout C. 20, also in Canada, where, before 1946 (anon. letter, June), it > carnival s. Ex English s. (modified by S. African usage: see Partridge, 1937).—2. To provide (a person) with food; to give (a person) a meal: tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping, p. 384, "'It's a priest; he'll scoff ye"' ; extant. Ex the n., 1, rather than ex sense 1 of the v.—3. To take narcotics orally: drug traffic: since ca. 1920. BVB, 1942.

scoff Jack. (A collection of) money for food: tramps': since ca. 1920: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; extant. See the n. elements.

scoff joint. See chow joint.

scoffaw. Either a homosexual, or a drunk well supplied with money: 1930, Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller, '... A rather dark section of the city, so it was easy to strong arm the "scoffaws"'. There were a lot of homosexuals and we played our game on them'; extant.

scoffer or scawfer. Plate (for the table); esp. silver plate: 1893, No. 747 (see pennif); 1903, F & H (scoffer); ob. That from which one scoffs one's food.

scoffings. Food: 1907, Jack London, The Road, where he implies its currency in 1892; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, Glen H. Mullin; 1925, Leverage; Nov. 6, 1926, Flynn's; 1933, Ersine, as scoffins and, corrupted, scoggins; extant. See scoff, v., 1 and 2.

scoggins. See prec., ref. of 1933.

scold's cure, 'a coffin', is prob. s., but just possibly c.: 1823, Egan's Grose, 'The blowen has napped the scold's cure; the wench is in her coffin'; app. † by 1890.

scone. See hot scone.

scooper. A haul of stolen goods: 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police!, 'They had been doing smash, and had to do a "scooper" from somewhere'; extant. Cf. journalistic scoop.—2. Sense unascertained: U.S.A.: 1925, Arthur Stringer (see lush-dip); ? extant.

scooping. Counterfeiters' c., thus in James Greenwood, The Policeman's Lantern, 1888, 'By an ingenious process of "scooping", as it was termed, they were enabled to take away the greater part of the . . . gold contained in a sovereign, leaving one side of the coin intact, as well as the edge and the "milling", filling in the shell with a weighty composition, and then "facing" and finishing it so accurately that it was an exact imitation of the genuine article, though the actual value of it was not more than eight or nine shilling'; app. † by 1910.

scoot. To run: 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; by 1910 at latest, it was s. or even coll., for it is doubtful whether, even in the U.S.A., it was ever c.

scooter. A liquor-running car: ca. 1924–33, then historical. Ersine. Jocose ref. to children's conveyance-toy.—2. Mostly in hot scooter, a stolen car: 1935, Hargan; extant.

scorch, n. A case of arson on a house; any instance of arson: April 1881, Sessions Papers, (a convict log.) 'He said, "I have heard of a public-house that will just suit you . . .," and he added that if I could not do a large trade it would do for a scorch'; extant. By a pretty piece of meiosis.—2. An arrest: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex the v.

scorch, v. To arrest (someone): 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. heat, n., 2.

scorcher. A policeman; a detective: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex scorch, v.

score, n. The proceeds of a theft: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'The proceeds of a transaction in a racket'; 1929, C. F. Coe, Hooch; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; 1933, Ersine; 1936, P. S. Van Cise; 1937, Charles Prior; extant. Ex the value of the loot.—2. Hence, a place to be robbed: since ca. 1925. Ersine.—3. Twenty pounds sterling: English: C. 20. Geo. Ingram, Stir, 1933; 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid; April 7, 1946, The People (article by Alan Hoby).

score, v. To commit a theft; to 'pull off' a confidence trick: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1933, Ersine; 1944, W. R. Burnett, Nobody Lives Forever; extant. Ex the s. sense, 'to be successful' (against someone).—2. See hit, v., 3.

score a connection. See hit, v., 3.

score dough. The price of a 'bindle' of narcotics: addicts': since ca. 1920. BVB.

score off. See scour, 2. 'Perhaps from score, i.e. full speed, or as fast as legs would carry one.' Current ca. 1770–1830.

scotch, n. Death in the electric chair: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex:—

scotch, v. To electrocute (a person); to be electrocuted: 1925, Leverage; extant. A grim development ex scotching a snake.

Scotch peg. 'A leg': 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; by 1865, low, and by 1870, gen. rhyming s. In late C. 19–20, U.S.A. (Pacific Coast) c.—as in M & B, 1944.

scotches, 'legs', is not e., but a s. derivative of the preceding.

Scotchmen. Lice: ca. 1870–1920. Baumann, 1887. Ex s. Scotch greys.

Scotty. A Scottish tramp: English tramps': 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (ch., 'Two Tramps in England'); but hardly e.

scour. See the next two entries.—2. To run; esp. to run away, make off: 1688, T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, where it is spelt scowre; 1693, Anon., The Jacobite Robber; 1698, B.E., 'Scoure, e. to run away or scamper. Let us Scoure, or we shall be Boned, c. let us run away or we shall be Taken'; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1725, D. Defoe, 'Get off'; 1785, Grose, 'To scower or score off, to run away'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.),—but was it not † by 1820? Cf. the s. trickle off, 'to depart'.

scour the cramp(-)rings. Orig. s. (Anon., Man-kind, 1450; John Heywood, Pardoner and Frere, 1533) as The O.E.D. shows, it > c. ca. 1550. 'To skower the cramp-rings, to weare boltes or fetters,' Harman, 1566; 1608–9, Dekker, Lanthorne and Candle-light (at 'The Canters Dictionarie'), 'To scowre the Cramp-ring: to weare bouldts'; 1611, Middleton & Dekker, The Roaring Girl, 'And scoure the Quire cramp ring'; 1665, R. Head, 'Scoure . . . To wear'; 1676, Coles (id.); 1688, Holme; 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'To scower the cramp ring, to wear bolts or fetters'; † by 1840. Perhaps to 'wash' them with one's sweat.

scour the darbies. To be in fetters: 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; † by 1840. A variant of the prec. phrase.

scoure. See scour.

scourer. A member of those several groups of wild young men of means and birth who infested London streets at night and made very considerable nuisances of themselves; they flourished ca. 1670–1720. Mentioned by Wycherley in 1672, they were pilloried by Thomas Shadwell in his entertaining comedy, The Scourers, 1691. So named because they scoured the streets.

scouring, as the vbl n. corresponding to scourer, is not c.—2. (A term of) imprisonment: 1721, Defoe; † by 1830. Cf. scour the cramp rings and scour the darbies.

scout. A watchman: 1676, Coles; 1688, Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia; 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries; 1784, Sessions of the Old Bailey; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1797, Potter, 'A watchman, a beadle'; 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1870. An 'abbreviation' of S.E. scout-watch.—2. Hence, a watch (time-piece): 1698, B.E. (see esp. the quot'n at loge); 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.; 1821, D. Haggart, Life; 1890, B & L; † by 1900.—3. A detective: Glasgow (—1934). Partridge, 1937.

scout(-)cull. A watchman: 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; 1736, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account; † by 1840. Scout, 1 + cull, n., 4. scout-ken. A watch-house: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1870. Ex scout, 1, and ken.

scout on the lay. 'To go in search of booty', F & H (1903), who classify it as thieves' and imply that it was current ca. 1780–1900. See lay, n., 2.

scow, n. and v. A beggar; to beg: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex scowbanker = scullbanker = malingerer.—2. See scows.

scow, on the. Engaged or operating as a beggar: 1925, Leverage; extant. See prec.

scower. Variant (mostly C. 17) of scour.

scowl. A surly prison warder: convicts': 1925, Leverage; extant.

scowre. See scour.

scowrer. See scourer.

scows. Shoes: 1925, Leverage; extant. Perhaps with a pun on scows = a kind of boat: boots and boats.

scrag, n. (A person's) neck: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (see quot'n at blunt); 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter; 1797, Potter (scragg); 1829, Wm Maginn, Vidocq, Appendix (III); 1837, E. Lytton Bulwer, Ernest Maltravers; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.). By 1864 (H, 3rd ed.) at latest, the term had, in Britain, > s., though still somewhat low. Cf. S.E. sense, 'the lean and inferior end of a neck of mutton'.—2. Hence, the (or one's) scrag, a hanging; a sentence to death by hanging: 1753, Poulter, Discoveries, 'I am down for my Scragg; I am to be hang'd'; 1890, B & L; † by 1900.—3. A gallows: this sense is postulated by F & H (1903), but its existence is doubtful.

scrag, v. To hang (a person): 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator, 'Topp'd, alias Scragg'd, alias Hang'd'; 1735, Select Trials, from 1724 to 1732; 1760, Sessions Papers; 1773, Anon., The Bow-Street Opera; 1780, Ralph Tomlinson, A Slang Pastoral, 'What kiddy's so rum as to get himself scragg'd?'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, T. Smith, Highgate Tunnel; 1828, G. G., History of George Godfrey, 'Is it anything . . . for which you are likely to be lagged or scragged?'; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; 1838, Glascock; 1839, G. W. M. Reynolds, Pickwick Abroad; 1845, anon. translator of E. Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, ch. xxix; 1857, Borrow, The Romany Rye; 1857, A. Mayhew; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1879, James McGovern, Hunted Down; 1887, Heinrich Baumann, 'A Slang Ditty', in Londonismen, 'Rum coves that relieve us | Of chinkers and pieces, | Is gen'rally lagged, | Or, wuss luck, gits scragged'; 1881, Rolf Boldrewood, Robbery under Arms; 1890, B & L; 1894, Price Warung; by 1900 †. Cf. sense 2 of the n.—2. Hence, to choke or throttle (a person): Aug. 16, 1871, Sessions Papers, where it is spelt scragg; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; † by 1920.—3. Hence, to kill (a person): U.S.A.: 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; extant.

scrag a lay. 'To take clothes from the hedges' (Tufts): U.S.A. (—1794) and prob. in England (perhaps as early as 1760); † by 1903 (F & H). Synonymous with go snow-gathering (see snow-dropping). Perhaps cf. lay, n., 4.

scrag(-)boy. A hangman: ca. 1787, 'Kilmainham Minit', a song in Ireland Sixty Years Ago, ca. 1850; † by 1903 (F & H). Ex scrag, n., 2, or v., 1.

scrag 'em fair; scrag fair. 'Scragg'em Fair. A public execution': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1823, Bee (Addenda), 'Scrag-fair—a hanging-bout'; † by 1903 (F & H). See scrag, v., 1.

scrag-squeezer. A gallows: 1903, F & H—but on what authority, except that of W. E. Henley's Villon's Straight Tip, 1887, 'Until the squeezer nips your scrag'? If genuine, it comes ex scrag, v., 1.

scragg. See scrag, n. and v. scragger. A hangman: 1897, Price Warung (O.E.D.): app. of ca. 1820–1910. Ex scrag, v., 1.

scragging, vbl n. and ppl adj. related to scrag, v., 1: ca. 1720–1870: any later references are, I think, merely historical. See scrag, v., 1.

scragging(-)post. A gallows: 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; 1828, G. G., History of George Godfrey, 'Braving every variety of punishment, from the stoop to the scragging post, as these demons, with an air of mirthful waggery, were accustomed to designate the pillory and the gallows'; 1830, E. Lytton Bulwer, Paul Clifford; 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1887, Baumann; † by 1900. Ex scrag, v., 1.

Scragg's Hotel. A workhouse: since ca. 1870; † by 1920. Recorded in Heinrich Baumann's Londonismen, 1887, with a quot'n from James Greenwood; Jan. 1, 1886, The Daily Telegraph; 1903, F & H, who classify it as tramps'. Perhaps an elaboration of S.E. scrag: see scrag, n.

scragsman. A hangman: 1845, anon. translator of Eugene Sue's The Mysteries of Paris, ch. xxix; † by 1900. Ex scrag, n., 1, or ex the v.

scram, 'to run away, to depart': s. But as 'to hide': c., dating from the 1920's: Castle, 1938. Short for scramble.

scrammer. An absconder: 1936, Lee Duncan, Over the Wall, 'At the circus, they appointed me a lousy ambulance chaser who was a scrammer'; extant. Ex prec.

scran, n. Food: 1724, Harper, 'A Canting Song' in John Thurmond's masque, Harlequin Sheppard, 'But ere for the Scran he had tipt the Cole, | The Harman he came in', the relevant phrase being glossed as 'Before the Reckoning was paid'; 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'Victuals'; 1797, Potter (scrann); 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields; 1828, G. G., History of George Godfrey; 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin, 'The old voman's all right for scrans', glossed as 'victuals': 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants, 'Scran (broken victuals)'; 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1855, J. D. Burn, The Autobiography of a Beggar-Boy; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1860, low s. 'Of obscure origin; the coincidence with mod. Icel[andic] skran rubbish, odds and ends . . . is prob. accidental' (O.E.D.); Weekley thinks it cognate with S.E. scrannel.—2. A reckoning at inn or tavern, a sense prob. implied in the 1724 ref. in sense 1: 1725, A New Canting Dict.; † long before 1859 (H).—3. See scran, (out) on the. Leverage errs in equating it with 'a road'.—4. (Ex sense 1.) Casual-ward bread: tramps': 1932, Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps; extant.

scran, v. ('to beg for victuals'), is implied in scranning. It occurs so late as 1925 in Leverage (U.S.A.).—2. To supply with food: ca. 1742, in Hone's Every-Day Book (1827), II, 527, 'Tickets to be had for three Megs a Carcass to scran their Pannum-boxes' (quoted by O.E.D.); app. † by 1860. I.e., to supply with scran, n., 1.

scran, (out) on the. 'Begging for broken victuals': from ca. 1850: H, 3rd ed., 1864; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H (on the s.); 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.), 'On the scran—on the road'; extant. See scran, n., 1.

scran(-)bag. A bag or wallet in which a beggar carries such food (esp. broken victuals) as he is given—or as he steals: 1855, J. D. Burn, The Autobiography of a Beggar-Boy; by 1860, low s. See scran, n., 1. scrann. See scran, n., 1, ref. of 1797.

scranning, vbl n. Begging: 1839, Brandon; 1859, H (more precisely), 'Begging for broken victuals'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1890, B & L; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.), 'Scranning . . . Begging for food'; ob. Ex scran, v. Hence:—

scranning cove. 'A cadger': 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; † by 1900. See prec.

scranny. See chuck a scranny.

scrap, n. 'Scrappers, fatte and glorious bites: sound blowes and bangings. The muggill will tip you fat scraps and glorious bits, the Beadle will well bumbast you,' Rowlands, Martin Mark-All, 1610; † by 1660. Cf. mod. s. scrap, 'a fight'.—2. 'A Design, a purpos'd Villainy, a vile Intention; also a perpetrated Roguery; He whiddles the whole Scrap; He discovers all he knows,' A New Canting Dict., 1725—virtually repeated by Grose, 1785; 1797, Potter (scrapp); 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), as scrapp; † by 1900.

scrap, v., 'to fight'—orig. and esp. with one's fists—though of low origin, was never c.; in U.S.A. of ca. 1860–90, it was low s., as, at first, it was in England also.—2. 'To commit petty theft', Leverage, 1925: U.S.A.: C. 20; ob. As it were, to scrape off the surface, not take the whole.

scrape, n. and v. Disciplinary punishment in prison; to punish in prison: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex s. scrape, 'trouble'.

scrape a mug. To shave one's face: tramps': C. 20. In, e.g., Godfrey Irwin, 1931.

scrape the pavement. To have or to get a shave: tramps' and beggars': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931.

scraper. '1. A barber . . . 2. A razor,' Ersine, 1933; extant. Pejorative.

scraper's school. A haircutting school for barber trainees, tramps being able to get a free shave or haircut there—for the improvement of the apprentices' skill: tramps': from ca. 1915. Stiff, 1931. Pejorative: cf. prec.

scrapp; scrappe. See scrap.

scrapper. 'A victim of either tramps or criminals who "puts up a fight"', Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, 1899 (Glossary); ob.

scratch, n. Any piece of writing; a letter; a signature: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1925, Leverage (implied at soft scratch); Dec. 13, 1926, Flynn's; May 23, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack, 'I gave them the dope in a short scratch (note)'; extant. Pejorative.—2. Paper-money: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; by 1925, also British; 1931, Brown, who defines it 'Bank notes'; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; Oct. 1931, D. W. Maurer; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Rose; 1935, David Hume, Dangerous Mr Dell; extant. Ex sense 1.—3. Hence (?), any money: Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest ('Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 'Silver Money'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'Forged cheques'; 1931, Damon Runyon, Guys and Dolls; 1933, Ersine, 'A forged check . . .

Paper money . . . Small change'; 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy; by 1940 (D. Hume, Five Aces), English too; 1941, Val Davis.—4. A forger: British c. of C. 20: 1925, Rev. Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, ' . . . Information having previously been obtained as to how big a cheque could safely be prepared by the "scratch" (forger)'; also American, as in Godfrey Irwin, 1931; 1935, George Ingram, Stir Train; extant.—5. (Prob. ex sense 1.) A genuine complaint or accusation: July 17, 1926, Flynn's, 'There was not a scratch against any of the men ironed' (in the penitentiary); extant.—6. (Ex sense 1.) A newspaper: since ca. 1928. Damon Runyon, Furthermore ('The Lemon Drop Kid'), 1938.—7. An inferior lodging-house: 1933, Ersine; extant. Short for scratch house.—8. 'The short-timers . . . called a day a scratch and a year a stretch,' Jim Phelan, Lifer, 1938: British: C. 20. Ex the scratch made each day on a scratch-calendar, which only short-sentence men take the trouble to keep.—9. A pen; esp., a fountain pen: mostly forgers': since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941. Cf. senses 1 and 4.

scratch, v. 'To write; to forge': 1859, Matsell; Nov. 6, 1926, Flynn's, 'Well, scratch th' note an' we'll blow'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Ersine, 'To forge checks or other papers'; extant. The 'write' sense takes us, full circle, to the etymological sense—the orig. meaning of write.

scratch a rap. To cancel a charge, waive a charge (against a person): tramps': May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; extant. To erase it: cf. scratch (oneself) from a contest'.

scratch house. A cheap lodging-house or brothel: tramps' and beggars': C. 20. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Ex the vermin that cause one to scratch.

scratch man. A forger: 1915, G. Bronson-Howard, God's Man; April 1919, The (American) Bookman, Moreby Acklom, "'Wise-Cracking" Crook Novels'; 1924, George C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; 1925, Leverage (scratchman); Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1938, Charles E. Still, Styles in Crime, implies that at this date it was ob.; in 1948, however, it was still current. Depreciatory; cf. scratch, n., 2.

scratch spread. A letter: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); by 1937, it was † (Irwin). Cf. spread, 5; scratch, ex the scratching of the pen.

scratch work; occ., scratchwork. Forging; forgery: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. scratcher, 1.

scratched, have one's back. See back scratched . . .

scratcher. 'A forger; a copyist': 1859, Matsell; 1886, T. Byrnes, Professional Criminals of America; 1904, No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing; 1924, G. C. Henderson, Keys; 1925, Leverage; Nov. 1927, The Writer's Monthly; April 13, 1929, Flynn's; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Howard N. Rose; 1935, Hargan; by ca. 1937, English; 1941, Val Davis, Phenomena; extant. Ex scratch, v.—2. A saw, esp. one used in a 'getaway': convicts': since ca. 1930. (Wm Kernôt, letter of Jan. 5, 1947.) Echoic.—3. (Usually in plural.) 'Scratchers . . . Matches,' Leverage, 1925; by 1930, also S. African (J. B. Fisher, letter of May 22, 1946); extant. Ex the noise they make when being struck.

scratches. Trousers: mostly tramps': 1925, Leverage; extant. Of poor material, and perhaps worn without underpants, they irritate the skin.

scratching. Forgery: prob. since ca. 1860. In, e.g., A. Train, Courts, Criminals and the Camorra, 1912.

scream, n. A giving of information to the police, esp. by one criminal against another: 1915, Edgar Wallace, The Melody of Death, "'Look here, George, . . . is it a scream?" "A scream?" Mr Wallis was puzzled innocence itself, "Will you turn King's evidence?" said the other shortly'; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); extant. Cf. squeal, n., and sense 2 of:—

scream, v. When a thief is robbed by another and he applies to the police, he is said to scream: 1890, B & L; by 1920, merged with sense 2. Cf. 'to squeal'.—2. (Also scream the place down: C. 20: Partridge, 1938.) To give information to the police, esp. as by one criminal against another: 1915, Edgar Wallace, The Melody of Death, "'I don't want to hear any more about your conscience," said the [police] officer wearily. "Do you scream or don't you?" "I don't scream," said Mr Wallis emphatically'; by 1925, also in U.S.A.: 1942, Jack Henry, Famous Cases; 1943, Black; Nov. 1943, Lilliput article by 'Lemuel Gulliver'; extant. Prob. ex sense 1.

scream and holler. A dollar: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

screamer. 'A thief who, robbed by another thief, applies to the police', F & H, 1903: since ca. 1905, mostly in sense 'informer'. Ex scream, v., 1 and 2.

screave; screaver. See screeve, n. and v., and screever.

screech; screech-owl. 'A giving—the giver—of information to the police: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. squeak and squeal, squeaker and squealer.

screen. A currency note, i.e., a note of the value of ten shillings or one pound; a bank-note: the former is implied in rum screen (a bank-note), 1789; 1797, Potter, 'Skreen, a bank note'; 1809, Andrewes (id.); 1811, Lex. Bal., 'Queer screens; forged bank notes'; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1821, J. Burrowes; 1823, Bee, 'Screens—vel screeves; forged notes of the Bank of England'; 1827, Thomas Surr, Richmond (a £1 note); 1834, W. H. Ainsworth, Rookwood; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; app. † by 1930. It screens one's poverty; or, it screens one temporarily from want.—2. Hence, a counterfeit note: 1818, The London Guide; 1826 (but app. valid for 1809), The New Newgate Calendar, V, 189, 'The cant terms for false notes are Softs and Screens—of counterfeit gold, Yellows'—also in Sessions Papers, Jan. 1822; 1887, Baumann; † by 1930.

screen-faking, n. The counterfeiting of currency notes: 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, The Heart of London, II, "'What the deuce brought you here [Newgate]?"—"Oh, a little screen faking, that's all"' ; 1903, F & H, 'Fingering notes' (prob. a misprint; certainly an error); † by 1936. See screen, 2; here, faking = making.

screens. 'For even a minor infraction of the rules, a prisoner would be sent to the "screens" or "hole". That is, the solitary confinement. It is just a dark, barren cell,' Clifford R. Shaw, The Jack-Roller, 1930; 1938, James Martin in C. R. Shaw, Brothers in Crime; extant. 'It [the cell] has a toilet and bowl and a dark screen in front of it [the cell], so the prisoner cannot see out or have anything to eat or smoke pushed through to him' (Shaw).

screens, queer. See screen, ref. of 1811, and queer screen.

screeve, n. 'A letter, or written paper': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; 1828, P. Egan, Finish to Tom, Jerry and Logic, where it is written scribe; 1859, H., 'A letter, a begging petition'; 1890, B & L; 1896, A. Morrison, A Child of the Jago; 1903, F & H, 'Anything written; a begging letter, a testimonial, chalk pavement work, etc.'; 1938, Damon Runyon, Take It Easy, 'Once she writes me a screeve'; since ca. 1910, however, the term has been little used. Ex It. scrivere, 'to write'. —2. Hence, a bank-note: 1821, D. Haggart, Life, 'I was standing by him with my arms across, and in that position touched him of his screave'; ibid., 'I had eased his benjy cloy of 33 quid screaves'; 1823, Bee (see screen); 1828, Jon Bee, A Living Picture of London, 'He . . . smashed in coin as well as screens or screeves'; 1859, 'Ducange Anglicus', 2nd ed. (screave); 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1903, F & H; very ob.—3. A variant of screever, 2: 1895, Jerome Caminada, Twenty-Five Years of Detective Life, 'The "screeve", or chalk artist, who draws pictures upon the flags, with such sentences as:—Hunger is a sharp thorn . . .'; ob. Ex the v., 1.—4. (Usually in pl.: screeves.) A pavement artist's pictures, or any pictures sold from a pitch on the pavement: 1895 (implied in sense 3); 1935, Hugh Milner (letter of April 22); extant.

screeve, v. To write piteous sentences on the pavement in order to obtain alms: 1842, implied in screever (q.v.) and screewing; ob. Cf. sense 3 of the n. Ultimately ex L. scribere, 'to write'; imm. ex It. scrivere. —2. Hence, to write: 1851 (see monnicker, 2nd quot'n); 1857, Augustus Mayhew; 1859, H., 'To write, or devise; "to screeve a fake-moment", to concoct or write a begging letter, or other impostor's document'; 1863, A Lancashire Thief; 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; 1890, B & L; 1893, No. 747; extant.—3. To draw, with coloured chalks, on the pavement: 1851 (implied in screever, 2); 1859, 1863 (id.); by 1890, street s.

screeve-faker, 'a begging-letter writer; a pavement artist in chalk', is postulated by F & H (1903), as a synonym of screever.

screeve-model. Forgery; also attributively, as in 'The high-toby, mob, crack and screeve-model school', Punch, Jan. 31, 1857; app. † by 1910. Cf. screeve, n., 2, and v., 2.

screever. 'Cadgers' Screewing.—There are many cadgers who write short sentences with chalk on the flags [of the pavement] . . .; these are called screevers . . . [E.g.] "I cannot get work, and to beg I am ashamed"; 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; 1887, H. Baumann, 'A Slang Ditty', in Londonismen; by 1890, low s. Ex screeve, v.—2. Hence, "Screevers" or draughtsmen in coloured chalks on the pavement': 1851, Mayhew, London Labour and the London Poor, I; 1859, H.; 1863, The Story of a Lancashire Thief; by 1890 (B & L) it was low s. —3. (Also ex sense 1.) A writer of begging-letters and petitions, whether for himself or, more usually, for others: 1851, Mayhew, London Labour, I, 311–15 (an excellent account); 1858, Dickens, 'The Begging-Letter Writer', in Reprinted Pieces—not the word, but an admirable account of the thing; 1903, G. R. Sims, 'Some London "Dodges"' in Vol. III of his Living London, 3 vols., 1901–3; 1903, F & H; ob.—4. (Ex sense 2.) Any beggar that sells paintings from his 'pitch' on a pavement: C. 20. Edwin Pugh, 'The Screever' in his The Cockney at Home, 1914; Hugh Milner, letter of April 22, 1935.

Screeveton. The Bank of England: ca. 1870–1910; 1903, F & H. See screeve, n., 1; -ton as in town-names.

screewing, vbl n. See screever, to which it corresponds in all senses; e.g., 'It's agin rules is screevin' to pals out o' gaol' (Punch, Jan. 31, 1857).

screw, n. 'A Strumpet, a common Prostitute': 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose, 'A female screw, a common prostitute'—but Grose implies that, by that date, the term was not c., but s. For the origin, cf. screw, v., 1.—2. 'A false key', i.e., a skeleton, or picklock key: 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Groser; 1828, Sessions Papers; 1840, ibid.; by 1845, current in U.S.A. (witness The Ladies' Repository, 1848; E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries of New York, 1851); 1856, G. L. Chesterton; 1857, Snowden; 1859, H. (any kind of key); 1859, Matsell (id.); 1871, State Prison Life (U.S.A.); Oct. 1879, Macmillan's Magazine; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1904, Life in Sing Sing (p. 258); 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1923, Anon., The Confessions of a Bank Burglar; 1924, G. C. Henderson; 1925, Leverage; 1926, Jack Black; 1927, C. L. Clark & E. E. Eubank, Lockstep and Corridor; 1928, Chicago May; 1929, Jack Callahan; 1931, D. W. Maurer; 1933, Ersine; 1934, Convict; March 2, 1935, Flynn's; 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; and others. With it, one screws open a door.—3. Hence, 'any robbery effected by such means is termed a screw': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1816 (see screw, on the); † by 1900. This sense merges with the next. In Sessions Papers, May 11, 1850 (case of John Dismond) screw is used for an article thus stolen.—4. (Likewise ex sense 2.) 'To screw a place is to enter it by false keys; this game is called the screw': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow; app. † by 1920.—5. A gaoler: 1821, P. Egan, Boxiana, III, 'One of the under Screws belonging to Horsemonger Lane'; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1859, H.; 1863, Jane Cameron; 1869, A. Merchant, Six Years; 1877, Sessions Papers; 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life; 1887, A. Griffiths; 1890, B & L; Aug. 1891, Josiah Flynt, 'The American Tramp' in The Contemporary Review; 1893, Confessions of a Convict (U.S.A.); 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps; 1903, F & H; 1904, Hutchins Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1907, Jabez Balfour, My Prison Life, 'The warder, or screw, as he is called, not only by prisoners but among warders themselves'; 1910, F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer (U.S.A.); 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest (U.S.A.); Dec. 1918, The American Law Review; 1924, Edgar Wallace, Room 13; 1924, G. Bronson-Howard, The Devil's Chaplain (U.S.A.); 1925, E. Bowen-Rowlands, In Court and Out of Court; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); but after 1925—perhaps, rather, after 1920—no longer to be classified as c., for at that time it > gen. prison s. and gen. police s. —6. A dose; a tonic: 1877, Five Years' Penal Servitude, 'He . . . poured out his customary "screw" and swallowed it'; ob. Prob. ex a screw, twist or spill of powder—an exact dose, to be taken either dry or in water.—7. (Ex 5.) A policeman: U.S. tramps: 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; extant. Not in very general use, and, by 1949, ob.

screw, v. To copulate with (a woman): 1725, A New Canting Dict.; ca. 1770 it > s. The mechanico-anatomical origin hardly requires explanation.—2. To use false or skeleton keys to enter (a place) with a view to robbing it: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see screw, n., 4); 1850, Sessions Papers; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; Oct. 1879, Macmillan's Magazine; 1890, B & L; 1896, A. Morrison; 1925, Rev. Eustace Jervis, Twenty-Five Years in Six Prisons, 'Some of the "boys" . . . "go screwing" (burglars)'; 1925, N. Lucas, Autobiography; 1926, N. Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1926, Jack Black, You Can't Win (U.S.A.), 'We could screw (key) out of his jail'; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; 1931, Brown; 1933, Joseph Augustin; 1934, B. Leeson, Lost London; 1935, George Ingram; 1936, Wilfred Macartney; 1937, Charles Prior; 1938, F. A. Stanley, A Happy Fortnight, 'A chance to "screw a gaff"'; 1939, George Ingram, Welded Lives; 1943, Black; Nov. 1943, Lilliput, article by 'Lemuel Gulliver'; extant. Ex sense 2 of the n.—3. 'I've screwed a pig', glossed as 'saved a shilling': 1841, H. D. Miles, Dick Turpin. The sense is suspect; if it ever existed, it was, at any rate, † by 1900.—4. To lock up in a cell: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; 1931, Godfrey Irwin.—5. (Mostly in the imperative.) To move away, to depart; make off hurriedly or speedily: U.S.A.: 1928, John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers; Jan. 8, 1930, Variety, Ruth Morris, 'A Carnival Grifter in Winter'; Jan. 10, 1931, Flynn's, J. Allan Dunn; July 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, Eagle; extant—but after ca. 1935, only as s. Perhaps short for screw out, q.v.—6. To look: British and American; since the 1920's: 1933, Charles E. Leach, On Top of the Underworld (to keep watch for one's burglar confederate); 1937, Charles Prior, So I Wrote It; May 23, 1937, The (N.Y.) Sunday News, John Chapman; 1937, Sharpe of the Flying Squad; by ca. 1939, also Australian—e.g., in Baker, 1942 ('To watch, look at, or notice'); by 1945, low s. everywhere in Britain—among cheapjacks it had prob. been s. since the first, as Philip Allingham's Cheapjack, 1934, suggests. The 'Leach' nuance indicates derivation ex sense 2.

screw, on the. In Sessions Papers, Sept. 1816, p. 377, 'Donnelly said, they . . . went in on the screw and sneaked out a piece of broady. Q. What does the screw mean?—A. Turning round the latch of a door; broady, means broad cloth'; † by 1890. Cf. screw, n., 2 and 3, and v., 3, and:—

screw, stand on the. ' . . . Signifies that a door is not bolted, but merely locked': 1811, Lex. Bal.; † by 1930. The reference is to screw, n., 2.

screw, under the. In gaol: 1846, G. W. M. Reynolds, The Mysteries of London, I, ch. cxxxii; 1848, Sinks of London; 1864, H, 3rd ed.; 1890, C. Hindley; ob. I.e., under lock and key; cf. screw, n., 5.

screw, upon the. See screw, on the.

screw(-)game, the. A synonym of screw, n., 4: C. 19. F & H, 1903.

screw on (a person), put the. 'To extort money (from a person) by threats', is classified by B & L, 1890, as c., which, indeed, it may have been ca.

1870–1900. The usual C. 20 form is put the screws on; but this is indubitably s. Ex tightening a screw with a screw-driver.

screw one up, 'to exact upon one in a bargain or reckoning', is not c., but s.

screw one's nut. To 'get wise' to oneself; pull oneself together: April 1919, The (American) Bookman, article by Moreby Acklom; 1931, Stiff; extant.—2. Hence, to depart, esp. quietly, secretly: 1934, Convict; extant.

screw out. To make off: since the 1890's: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York, 'As I don't want no part of it, I screws out', extant. To screw (oneself) out of the way.

screw up. See screw one up.—2. To choke or garrotte (a person): U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; Jan. 1863, The Cornhill Magazine, on p. 81 (English); 1893, F. W. Carew, No. 747 (English), where, at p. 419, the vbl n., screwing-up, is used; app. † by 1900.—3. To arrest: Jan. 11, 1856, Sessions Papers (p. 362), (accused loquitur) 'A bad night's job . . .; Jack has got off, and I am blowed if we two ain't screwed up'; app. † by 1920. Cf. screw, n., 5.

screwbado. See scrubado.

screwdom. 'The world of prison-warders and guards': 1893, Confessions of a Convict (glossary), ed. by Julian Hawthorne; by 1910, no longer c.—if it ever were! Ex screw, n., 5; contrast condom.

screw is an occ. variant of screwsman. Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House, 1932. Ex screw, v., 1.

screwing, vbl n. and ppl adj. See screw, v., esp. in sense 2.

screwing, chance. 'My brother and I and another bloke went out "chance screwing" one winter, and we averaged three pounds a night each. My brother had a spring cart and a fast-trotting horse, so when it began to grow dark, off we set to the outskirts of London. I did the screwing in this way. Wherever I saw a lobby lighted with gas, I looked in at the key-hole. If I saw anything worth lifting I "screwed" the door . . . seized the things, into the cart with them, and off to the next place,' A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England, 1869; ob. See prec.

screwing job. Burglary: C. 20. In, e.g., Charles Prior, So I Wrote It, 1937, and James Curtis, They Drive by Night, 1938. See screw, b., 2, and job, n. screwing-up. See screw up, 2, ref. of 1893.

screwman (J. C. Goodwin, Sidelights, 1923; Edgar Wallace, Soooper Speaking) is either incorrect or very rare for screwsman.

screws. 'Housebreaking implements': 1839, Brandon; app. † by 1900. An elaboration of screw, n., 2.

screwsman. 'A thief who goes out a screwing', i.e., practises such burglary as is prefaced with key-effected entry: 1812, J. H. Vaux; July 25, 1846, The National Police Gazette (U.S.A.); 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1869, A Merchant, Six Years in the Prisons of England; 1877, Bartlett, 4th ed.; Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine; 1888, G. R. Sims; 1890, B & L; 1903, F & H; 1910, F. Martyn, A Holiday in Gaol; 1924, Stanley Martin, The Human Side; 1925, Netley Lucas, The Autobiography of a Crook; 1926, N. Lucas, London and Its Criminals; 1930, George Smithson, Raffles in Real Life; 1931, Brown; 1931, The Bon Voyage Book; 1932, Stuart Wood, Shades of the Prison House; 1934, David Hume, Too Dangerous to Live; 1935, George Ingram, Cockney Cavalcade; 1937, Charles Prior; 1937, Ernest Raymond, The Marsh; 1938, F. D. Sharpe; 1939, John Worby, Spiv's Progress; 1941, Val Davis; 1943, Black; extant. Ex screw, n., 2; i.e., a screws (skeleton keys) man.—2. Hence, a key-maker; esp. a maker of skeleton keys for burglars: U.S.A.: 1848, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York; † by 1900—and never much used.—3. A turnkey: prisoners': 1848, The Ladies' Repository (U.S.A.); 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I; † by 1910. Cf screw, n., 5.

screwy. Eccentric; crazy; mad; hence, 'phoney'; all these senses are s.—orig., low s.; but s., not c.

scrib. To write: 1925, Leverage: rather s. than c. Cf. scribing gloak and scribs.

scribe. A forger: since ca. 1930. Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938; Val Davis, Phenomena in Crime, 1941. A deliberate synonym of pen man.

scribing gloak (or gloke). A clerk: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries, 'A scribing Gloak to the Beak; a Clerk to the Justice'; app. † by 1830. A gloak or bloke or fellow that scribes, i.e., writes. Cf. — scribs. A note, a letter: 1925, Leverage: not c., but s. Cf. scrib and scribing gloak.

screeve. See screeve.

scriff. To betray; to inform to the police about (a person): 1925, Leverage; somewhat rare. Perhaps a thinned form of scruff, 'to handle roughly'.

scrip. 'Scrip, c. [a piece of] paper,' Coles, 1676; 1698, B.E., 'Scrip, c. a shred or scrap of Paper. As the Cully did freely blot the Scrip, and tipt me 40 Hogs, c. one enter'd into Bond with me for 40 Shillings'—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; 1785, Grose, 'A scrap or slip of paper'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'Writing paper'; † by 1903 (F & H), except in the C. 20 American sense, 'a forged cheque' (Maurer, 1941). Cf. S.E. senses of scrip (that on which one writes).—2. Hence, a dollar bill: U.S.A.: 1935, Hargan; extant.—3. Description of a forger or of a passer of forged cheques: U.S.A., esp. among forgers: since the 1920's. Maurer, 1941.—4. 'Reader, reader with a tail, scrip, script, writing, a prescription for narcotics,' BVB, 1942: U.S.A.: since ca. 1930. The phrase is to write scrip. Ex the writing on the prescription-label.

scrip, blot the; blot the scrip and jark it. See blot the scrip and jark it.

scripper is a variant of scrippet. Dekker in 1608, in The Belman of London, says, 'He that setteth the watch is a Scripper'.

scrippet. In a gang of highwaymen, esp. when a concerted robbery is being prepared, the scrippet is 'he that setteth the Watch', he that keeps watch being the 'oak': 1591, R. Greene, A Notable Discovery of Coosnage, in his list of terms employed in high law; † by 1660 at latest—prob. by 1630. Perhaps, sometimes at least, he wrote (L. scripsit, ex scribere: cf. scrip) his instructions.

script, 'money, paper money' (Chicago May, 1928), is not c., but commercial s. > commercial j.—2. See scrip. 4.

scriptures. Prison rules and regulations: convicts': 1925, Leverage; extant. Ironic.

scribe. See screeve.

scrix. To inform against; to betray: 1925, Leverage; 1934, Howard N. Rose; extant. Perhaps a sharpening of scriff, q.v.

scrixy. Apt to inform against one's companions or accomplices: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex prec.

scrobe. See scrobey.

scrobey or scroby, the. 'The Scroby is being whipped in the Sessions House yard before the Justices': 1781, George Parker, A View of Society; 1785, Grose, 'To be tipt the scroby, to be whipt before the justices'; 1809, Andrewes (wrongly scrobe); 1859, H., "To get scroby", to be whipped in prison before the justices'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), as scrobe; 1869, J. Greenwood; 1890, B & L; † by 1903 (F & H). Contrast 'the teize'. Origin? Perhaps ex scrubado, q.v.: cf. jocular tickle, to thrash.—2. Hence, 'a thief to be whipt privately': 1797, Potter; but the sense is suspect.

scroll. To write: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Prob. ex the scrolls (and flourishes) of legal hand-writing.

scroller. A person able to write: 1848, The Ladies' Repository; † by 1937 (Irwin). Ex scroll.

scroof, n. A variant of scroofer: 1903, F & H; ob. Cf. — scroof, v. 'To go about living with friends at their expence': 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London Laid Open; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887 (Baumann); 1890, B & L; by 1903 (Clapin, Americanisms) it was s. Cf. dial. scrouge and dial. > s. scrounge.

scroofer. 'A sponge, a parasite': 1890, B & L—but prob. current from ca. 1810: 1903, F & H; † by 1920. Ex scroof, v.

scrope. A farthing: 1708, Memoirs of John Hall, 4th ed.; 1811, Lex. Bal.; † by 1903 (F & H). Ex John Scrope (1662–1752), the celebrated judge, who was famous as early as 1708, in which year (May 13) he was appointed baron of the Scottish court of exchequer. The semantics: a farthing is a jack; Jack Scrope was a brilliant lawyer.

scrub. A beggar woman that begs on four days a week, works on one and drinks rum on the other two: New York: 1891, Jacob A. Riis, How the Other Half Lives (pp. 248–9). Pejorative, as is:—2. A novice: 1925, Leverage; extant.

scrub 'er. To sponge off the big odds on one's (bookmaker's) board or book: turf (—1932). 'John Morris' in The Cornhill Magazine, June 1933. Cf. scrubbing brush, 2; lit., to wash (it) out.

scrub out, 'to clean (e.g. a city) of corruption, to purge it', as in J. Flynt, The World of Graft, 1901, is rather s. than c.

scrub-running. 'The combing of wild country for stock (esp. cattle) to steal,' Baker, 1945: Australian duffers': since ca. 1860. Scrub: uncultivated or unimproved country, where eucalyptus trees grow.

scrubado or scrubbado, 'the itch', 'eczema', is so far from being c. that it may possibly have been S.E. (the classification made by The O.E.D.); though more prob. it was s., esp. in C. 18; current ca. 1640–1830. Ex S.E. scrub, to scratch (a part of the body).—2. (Usually screwbado.) Hence, 'a dirty fellow, a mean pittiful rascal': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1890.

scrubbed. Robbed of everything : 1934, Rose ; extant. I.e., scrubbed clean, cleaned out.

scrubbing brush. 'Perhaps the first example of convict slang in Australia was . . . scrubbing brushes for bread containing more chaff and bran than flour—noted by D. Collins in his "Account of the N.S.W." (1802), Baker, 1945 : app. ca. 1790–1820.—2. The 'outside horse' (or dog) that 'scrubs' or beats the favourites : turf (— 1932). 'John Morris' in The Cornhill Magazine, June 1933. Cf. scrub'er.

Scrubs, the. Wormwood Scrubs Prison : since ca. 1880 : 1903, Convict 77, The Mark of the Broad Arrow, 'The warders at "the Scrubbs"'; 1903, No. 7, Twenty-Five Years in Seventeen Prisons; 1907, Jabez Balfour, My Prison Life, where spelt 'Scrubbs'; 1908, Edgar Wallace, Angel Esquire ('Scrubbs'); by 1910, low s. This convict prison, some six miles west of St Paul's, was built in 1875.

scrumpy. 'Scrumpy—the Tramps' cocktail, half of jake [i.e., methylated spirits], half of cider,' Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935 : tramps' : since ca. 1925 : 1936, W. A. Gape, Half a Million Tramps, where it is defined as 'cheap cider' ; extant. Cf. dial. scrumping, 'apple-stealing' (by children).

scud. 'To run, or sneak off (among rogues)' : 1823, Bee ; by 1870, at latest, it had re-combined with the S.E. v., which dates from C. 16 and is of obscure origin. Not from the scut of a hare, as Bee suggests.

scuddick. See scurrick.

scue. See skew.

scuff. 'This got a scuff (crowd) round us' : Oct. 1879, 'Autobiography of a Thief', Macmillan's Magazine ; 1888, G. R. Sims ; 1890, B & L ; ob. Either a shortening of scuffle or a development ex the S.E. sense, 'a noisy crowd'.

scuffle-hunter ; usually pl. 'Scuffle-Hunters. These are literally composed of the lowest class of the community.—When goods are shipped or landed upon the Quays, they are ever ready to offer their assistance to work as porters by the day or the hour, and they generally come prepared with long aprons, not so much as a convenient habiliment to enable them the better to perform their labour, as to furnish them with the means of suddenly concealing what they pilfer, with which, when obtained, they generally disappear' : 1805, George Barrington, New London Spy (appendix) ; said by George Smeeton in Doings in London, 1828, to be 'nearly extinct'.

scuffer, 'a policeman' ; not c., but North Country s. (H, 2nd ed., 1860.) scum! I have enough ! : 1728, D. Defoe, Street-Robberies consider'd ; † by 1800. Perhaps ex 'You scum ! Go away !'

scurf, v. 'Scurf'd, taken in custody', arrested : 1812, J. H. Vaux ; 1823, Egan's Grose ; 1903, F & H—but prob. it was † by that date. Perhaps ex seizure by the nape of the neck : where scurf shows and is not brushed away by the criminal class.

scurrick ; scuddick. 'Scuddick, a halfpenny,' 1821, J. Burrowes, Life in St George's Fields ; 1823, Bee, 'Scuddick—is used negatively ; "not a scuddick" . . . "every scuddick gone, she gets not a scuddick from me"' ; 1823, Egan's Grose (scurrick) ; 1843, W. J. Moncrieff, The Scamps of London (as scuddick) ; by 1887, ob. (Baumann, Londonismen) ; by 1903 (F & H) it was †. Either ex dial. scud, 'a wisp of straw'—or ex † S.E. scud, 'refuse, rubbish'.

scuttle, n. A drink : South African : C. 20. Letter of May 23, 1946, from C. P. Wittstock. Suggested by sluk in skep a sluk, q.v.

scuttle, v. 'To cut a pocket' : 1859, Matsell ; † by 1920. As a ship is scuttled, so is the victim's pocket-book.—2. 'To stab, rip a man open,' B & L, 1890 : English : ca. 1880–1910. It occurs also in F & H, 1903. Cf. sense 1.

scuttler ; scuttling, n. and adj. A member of a gang of roughs indulging in gang warfare and concerted assaults ; (of, characteristic of, belonging to) gang warfare and/or concerted assaults : Manchester and the surrounding districts : ca. 1870–1910 : 1891, Charles Bent, Criminal Life, ch. xx (all three) ; 1901, Caminada, vol. 2 (both forms).

sea food. A sailor : tramps' : since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931. Cf. gun-fodder, 'a soldier ; soldiers collectively'.

sea-going hack, 'a horse-drawn open carriage' (John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928), is New York s.—not c.

sea stiff. A sailor tramp : tramps' : since ca. 1905. Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Here stiff = either 'fellow', or, more prob., 'tramp' : see stiff, n.

sea(-)swag bloke. A marine-store dealer : 1889, C. T. Clarkson & J. Hall Richardson, Police! (glossary) ; ob.

seal, the. A confidence trick based upon poker : 1933, Ersine ; extant. 'The various hands of a poker game are sealed in envelopes' (Ersine).

sealed stuff. 'Canned or bottled opium,' Kernôt, 1929–31 : addicts' : since ca. 1920. See stuff, n., 8.

sealer. 'One that gives Bonds and Judgments for Goods and Money,' T. Shadwell, The Squire of Alsatia, 1688 ; 1698, B.E. repeats this definition verbatim, as does A New Canting Dict., 1725 ; 1785, Grose ; † by 1860. Ex the seal the documents carry.

seam shot. 'A blast set off in the seam of a pete [bank safe] or in the door crack,' Ersine, 1933 : since ca. 1918.

seam-squirrel. A louse : 1925, Leverage ; 1929, Jack Callahan, Man's Grim Justice ; 1931, Stiff ; 1934, Rose ; by 1937, (Godfrey Irwin, letter of Feb. 1) it was s. Lice hide in seams ; like squirrels, they come out of their 'lairs' for food.

seat. A saddle : 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries—see also quot'n at tug ; app. † by 1860. Cf. the modern have a good seat (in the saddle).—2. The seat is the hip pocket : esp. pickpockets' : late C. 19–20. Partridge, 1938. Cf. outer.

second horse, the. A race-course variation of the confidence trick : C. 20. Partridge, 1938.

second-storey sneak, 'a thief specializing in the theft of goods and edibles from residences ; esp. one entering flats on the second storey', is police s. or j. ; in, e.g., E. Crapsey, The Nether Side of New York, 1872. The same applies to second-story worker (synonym) : in, e.g., Chicago May, 1928. And to second-story man : Ersine, 1933.

second-timer. A prisoner serving his (or her) second sentence : prisoners' c. and warders' s. : 1879, A Ticket-of-Leave Man, Convict Life, 'There is a tacit understanding between all "second-timers" and old thieves, and the officers who have charge of them' ; 1890, B & L ; by 1900, coll.

seconds. See firsts and seconds.—2. A certain kind of card-swindle : U.S.A. : 1925, Leverage ; extant.

seconds, take the. See take . . .

secret, let into the. 'When one is drawn in at Horse-racing, Cock-fighting, Bowling, and other Sports or Games, and Bit' (cheated or swindled): 1698, B.E.; 1725, A New Canting Dict.; 1785, Grose; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); † by 1890. Experientia docet.

section stick. 'A sectional jemmy,' Leverage, 1925; extant.

section stem, is not c., but j.; unrecorded in The O.E.D. and Webster. See widdy.

secure, v. To act as the actual pickpocket's accomplice (i.e., to 'stall'): Australian: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth; extant. To make things sure for him.

security is an American synonym of swagsman: 1876, Phil Farley, Criminals of America; † by 1910. He is his accomplices' security for the safe removal of the stolen goods, esp. to a receiver's.

see, n. See sees.

see, v. To bribe (a policeman or a politician): late C. 19–20. Charles B. Chrysler, White Slavery, 1909; Aug. 11, 1928, Flynn's, Don H. Thompson, 'Twenty-Years outside the Law'; June 22, 1929, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'The Eel'; 1933, Ersine, 'To interview with the intention to influence or threaten'; 1934, Rose, 'Met and satisfactorily bribed . . . seen'; April 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack; by 1940, political, police, journalistic s. To see and speak to, as in 'I'll see him about it'.—2. Mostly as seen, q.v.

see company. See company, see.

see it is an American c. shortening of the English and American s. see the elephant, 'to gain worldly experience', 'to learn one's lesson', esp. 'to have experience of low and/or criminal life': 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, "'It didn't coss'd you on'y $750, to 'see it'"; † by 1920.

see-me pinch. An arrest where the arrester is open to bribery: May 9, 1936, Flynn's, Broadway Jack, 'It was one of those "see me" pinches. "See me" with a handout of dough-ra-me and you will not have to go down to police headquarters and the old line-up.'

see the shine. To give a dime: Pacific Coast: C. 20. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

seed. A dollar: tramps': 1923, Jack Melone, Nature: Human and Real (cited by 'Dean Stiff'); 1931, IA, 'Also in the plural, as "two seed", etc.'; extant. It can grow.

seedy, 'poor', seems to have, orig. and until ca. 1830, been c. before it > s.: 1753, John Poulter, Discoveries (see quot'n at rum, adj., 5); 1789, G. Parker, Life's Painter, 'Warbling, seedy Dick, | The prince of ballad-singers'; 1818, The London Guide, 'Seedy, [of] shabby dress. [With] no money'; 1823, Bee, 'Seedy-cove—threadbare, dirty, unshaved, or ragged'.

seen. Murdered: 1929–31, Kernôt; extant. Euphemistic.

sees. The eyes: 1785, Grose, 'Sow up his sees, to close up a man's eyes in boxing' (at day lights): this entry leads us to presume that the term was not c., but boxing s.

seger is, in John Poulter, Discoveries, 1753, a misprint for jeger = jigger or gigger, a door.

seldom see. B.V.D.: C. 20. Chicago May, 1928. Rhyming.

seldom seen. A limousine: Pacific Coast: since ca. 1920. M & B, 1944. Rhyming.

self-catching breezer. A 'convict with poor "escaping ideas"', Wm Kernôt, letter of Jan. 5, 1947. Ex s. breeze, to make off, escape.

self-starter. An addict that voluntarily places himself in an institution in order to break himself of the drug habit: since the 1920's. BVB. Ex the automobile self-starter.

sell. 'To sell a man is to betray him, by giving information against him, or otherwise to injure him clandestinely for the sake of interest . . . A man who falls a victim to any treachery of this kind, is said to have been sold like a bullock in Smithfield,' J. H. Vaux, 1812; 1843 (Sept.), Sessions Papers; by 1880, no longer c.

sell one's bacon. To operate as a prostitute: C. 20. BVB. The variant sell one's flesh is not c. but a Standard euphemism; cf. :—

sell one's hips. See peddle one's hips.

sell-out, n. See sense 2 of :—

sell out, v. To betray (a person) to the police: 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1890, journalistic coll. An elaboration of sell.—2. Hence, by contrast, v.i. and n.: 'To die, death, in a gun fight rather than surrender to the police,' Ersine, 1933: since ca. 1924.

semoleon. A dollar; the plural is often used generically for 'cash', as in Josiah Flynt & Francis Walton, The Powers that Prey, 1900, "'He knew of a place where there were semoleons lyin' loose, an' we went an' got 'em'". Perhaps c. of ca. 1890–1905, but prob. always low s. Perhaps a corruption of semola or semona or semolino (variants of semolina), or a blend thereof: for the semantics, cf. s. chicken-feed and c. coliander seed.

send, n. The act of sending a prospective victim of a confidence game to his home to secure money,' Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief, 1937: since ca. 1920.—2. See send, be on the.

send, v.i. To smoke marijuana: since ca. 1930. BVB. A sort of code word; at the least, arbitrary.

send, be on the; have someone on the send. 'To obtain drugs through a runner,' BVB, 1942: drug traffic: since ca. 1910.

send, on the. In the stocks-and-shares swindle known as 'the wire': 'A fish'—i.e., a sucker—. 'going after his collateral is "on the send"', a New York newspaper of July 16, 1937, in a short article dealing with that swindle: commercial underworld; since ca. 1920. See send, n.

send a boy on a man's errand. To make a boy the passive partner in an act of homosexuality: Australian: C. 20. Baker, 1942.

send (one) a message. To murder a person: 1828, G. G., History of George Godfrey, 'He looked so fierce that I began to think he had it in contemplation to send me a message'; † by 1900. Euphemistic.

send across. To send to prison: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. Perhaps cf. 'up the river'.

send-in, n. A note; a hint; a recommendation; a piece of information (e.g., about a likely place to rob): 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; 1935, David Lamson, We Who Are About to Die; Aug. 24, 1935, Flynn's, Howard McLellan; extant. It is sent-in.

send in, v. 'Send. To drive or break in. Hand down the Jemmy and send it in; apply the crow to the door, and drive it in', Lex. Bal., 1811; Jan.

1809, Sessions Papers; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); by 1903 (F & H) it was †.

send over. To send a person to prison: British and American: 1860, C. Martel, The Detective's Note-Book; 1872, Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; † by 1930. Cf. send up.

send over the road. To send (a person) to prison: 1900, J. Flynt & F. Walton, The Powers that Prey, "You wouldn't send a fellow like that over the road, would you?"; 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss, "I'm goin' to send him over th' road for robbery"; 1933, Ersine; extant. Either an elaboration of send over or a blend of send over and road; cf. over the wall.

send to church. See church, send to.

send to the cleaners, 'to clean (a person) out of money'; s., not c. Flynn's, May 28, 1932, Al Hurwitch.

send to the country. See country, send to the.

send (someone) to the goats. To cause (usually a policeman) to be transferred to the country: since the 1890's: 1903, A. H. Lewis, The Boss, "I'll have you out . . . with the goats before tomorrow night"; March 15, 1930, Flynn's, John Wiltach, (gangster log., about the police) 'They're not bad fellows, and generally do what they are told; if not, we get 'em sent to the goats'; by 1935, if not much earlier, it was police s. I.e., among the goats—to the goat country.

send up. 'To get me "sent up", means to get [me] sent to the states prison': 1848, E. Z. C. Judson, The Mysteries and Miseries of New York; 1891, Jacob A. Riis, How the Other Half Lives; by 1900, s.

send up the river. To send a convicted man to Sing Sing prison; to give such information about him as will cause him to be sent there: 1901, Josiah Flynt, The World of Graft (2nd nuance); by 1930, police s. See river, up the.

sent. (Of an addict) 'When he reaches a stage of full contentment,' Meyer Berger in The New Yorker, March 12, 1938: drug addicts': since ca. 1930. A stage further than high—this is so among marijuana smokers at least.

sentence. 'He got a stretch in the sentence. He got one year in the sentence,' No. 1500, Life in Sing Sing, 1904.

separates. 'The first nine months of a sentence of penal servitude, which are passed in separate and solitary confinement in Pentonville or Millbank prisons before going to a convict prison,' B & L, 1890; by 1896, s. It arose ca. 1855: The Cornhill Magazine (vi, 640), 1862, has it. Short for separate confinement.

seran is, in G. G., Hist. of George Godfrey, 1828 (III, 171), a misprint for seran.

serene!, all: not c., as stated by 'Dixcange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, 1857, but a street s. c.p. sergeant-major. 'A large cold-chisel, called the "sergeant-major", for cutting through metal plates,' F. W. Carew, No. 747 . . . Autobiography of a Gipsy, 1893: ca. 1840–1920. Ex its size and importance.

servant's or servants' lurk, the. 'There are considerable numbers [of professional beggars] who go on the servants' lurk, or as servants out of place; and both males and females frequently succeed well in imposing on servants, and others by false statements, and tales of distress': 1842, An Exposure of the Impositions Practised by Vagrants; † by 1910. See lurk, n.

serve, v. 'Served. Found guilty. Convicted. Ordered to be punished or transported': 1811, Lex. Bal.; 1856, G. L. Chesterton, Revelations of Prison Life, I, 'Transported (lugged or served)'; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1887, Baumann, Londonismen; † by 1903 (F & H). I.e., to serve (a sentence) to.—2. 'How the dubber served the cull with hung beef; how the turnkey beat the fellow with a bull's pizzle': 1811, Lex. Bal.; app. † by 1890.—3. To rob (person or place): Feb. 1807, Sessions Papers, p. 133, 'To sarve a gentleman. Q. What does that language mean?—A. That is, rob a gentleman on Hounslow Heath'; 1812, J. H. Vaux, 'I serv'd him for his thimble, I rob'd him of his watch; that crib has been served before, that shop has already been robbed'; 1823, Egan's Grose; 1827, Sessions Papers; † by 1887 (Baumann). Ex the S.E. sense, 'to treat (a person) in such or such a way'.—4. 'To serve a man, also sometimes signifies to maim, wound, or do him some bodily hurt': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1903 (F & H).—5. V.i., to undergo penal servitude: 1873, J. Greenwood, In Strange Company; 1890, B & L; by 1910, police j.

serve out. To strike; to thrash (a person): July 1802, Sessions Papers, p. 343; 'To serve a cull out; to beat a man soundly,' Lex. Bal., 1811; by 1820 it was, in its pugilistic sense ('to defeat utterly') at least, s., the term occurring frequently in Pierce Egan, Boxiana, I, published in 1818. An elaboration of serve, 2, or of serve, 4 (if sense 4 is, after all, earlier than serve out). Cf. the next entry.—2. A variant of serve, 4: Sept. 1820, Sessions Papers (p. 537); 1833, ibid., trial of Mary Brown and Charlotte Smith; † by 1920.

serve out and out. 'To serve a man, . . . signifies to maim, wound, or do him some bodily hurt; and to serve him out and out, is to kill him': 1812, J. H. Vaux; 1823, Egan's Grose; † by 1910. Cf. serve, 1 and 4.

serve (a person) with a notice to quit. To kill: 1827, Thomas Surr, Richmond; † by 1910. Cf. serve, 4; by a legal pun.

served with one's papers, be. To be dealt with as an habitual criminal: since ca. 1925. Sharpe of the Flying Squad, 1938.

service lay, the. Alexander Smith, Highwaymen, 1714, 'Her usual Way of Thieving, was the Service-Lay, which was hiring herself for a Servant in any good Family, and then, as Opportunity serv'd, robb'd them'; 1718, C. Hitching, The Regulator; app. † by 1820. Cf. S.E. in service, 'in employment as a domestic servant'; lay, n., 2.

service station. A brothel: since ca. 1925. BVB. Cf. the stock-breeding service.

set, n. See set, a dead.

set, v., is a term employed to describe the actions of bailiffs that watch for, watch, and trick you into suitable proximity: 1781, George Parker, A View of Society (see also quot'n at body-snatcher, 1), 'They or their agents are continually setting you'; 1797, Potter, 'Sett, pointed out' (ppl adj.); 1809, Andrewes (id.); app. † by 1900. Ex a setter (dog) that 'sets' game: cf. setter and setting dog.

set, ppl adj. See set, v., ref. of 1797.

set, a dead. A careful, relentless watch set upon defaulters and criminals by bailiffs and constables: ca. 1770–1800. Deduced from set, v.—2. 'A dead set, a concerted scheme to defraud a person by gaming': 1785, Grose; by 1859, American—Matsell, 'A concentrated attack on a person or thing'; by 1864 (H, 3rd ed.), s. Cf. dead plant. Prob. imm. ex.—3. A robbery certain to succeed: 1744, The Ordinary of Newgate's Account, Dec. 24, p. 23, 'I have now a dead Set, if you will go along with me'; app. † by 1830. Cf. sense 1.

set-down. A proper meal: orig. and esp. tramps': since ca. 1890: 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary, 'A square meal'; 1901, J. Flynt, The World of Graft; 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'I could "throw my feet" with the next one when it came to "slamming a gate" for a "poke out" or a "set-down", or hitting for a "light piece" on the street'; 1910, Harry Franck, A Vagabond Journey; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; 1922, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp,—whose use of it shows that, after this date, it can no longer be fairly classified as c. in U.S.A.; by ca. 1920, current among British tramps: see, e.g., Frank Jennings, Tramping with Tramps, 1932. Contrast hand out.

set in, be. 'To be protected. "Don't let the law worry you. I'm set in, I am",' Burke, 1930: racketeers': 1934, Rose, 'Have Protection of the Law . . . to be set in'; 1942, BVB; extant.

set over, v. To kill, to murder: since ca. 1925: 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1944, W. R. Burnett, Nobody Lives Forever, 'I've been trying to find you ever since you set Doc over'; extant. 'The victim is set over or apart' (Irwin).

set thing. 'Set. Prepared beforehand, "a set thing", a trap,' Matsell, 1859; by 1900, no longer c.

set-up, n. A suitable place or position for a robbery, e.g. by pickpockets: since ca. 1910. Godfrey Irwin, 1931 (place); 1933, Ersine (position). Perhaps ex the v.—2. In Australia, since ca. 1920, 'a trickster's plan of action' (Baker, 1945). Cf. lay-out in same sense—and country.

set up, v. To place (a pickpocket's 'prospect') in the right position for the wire to rob him: May 1928, The American Mercury, Ernest Booth, 'The Language of the Underworld'; extant. For the semantics, cf. the synonymous put one's back up and give one a roust.

sett. See set, v., ref. of 1797.

setter. In the 'cony-catching law' (q.v.), the gang consists of three: barnacle, setter, verser. 'The nature of the Setter,' says Greene in 1591 (A Notable Discovery of Coosnage), 'is to draw any person familiarly to drinke with him, which person they call the Conie, and their methode is according to the man they aime at: if a Gentleman, Marchant, or Apprentice, the Connie is the more easily caught, in that they are soone induced to plaie': the yeoman is their favourite victim: honest, simple; in London only when not penniless. 'The Conny-catchers, apparalled like honest civil gentlemen, or good fellows, . . . after dinner when the clients are come from Westminster hal and are at leasure to walke up and downe Paules, Fleet-street, Holborne, the sttrond, and such common hanted places, where these cosning companions attend onely to spie out a praie: who as soone as they see a plaine cuntry felow wel and cleanly apparellled, either in a coat of home spun russet, or of freeze, as the time requires, and a side pouch at his side, there is a connie, saith one. At that word out flies the Setter and overtaking the man, begins to salute him thus:

Sir, God save you, you are welcom to London, how doth all our good friends in the cuntry, I hope they be all in health? The cuntry man seeing a man so curteous he knowes not, halfe in a browne studie at this strange salutation, perhaps makes him this aunswere, Sir, all our friends . . . are well . . ., but truly I know you not . . . Why sir, saith the setter, gessing by his tong what country man'—i.e., of which county—'hee is, are you not such a cuntry man, if he say yes, then he creeps upon him closely: if he say no, then straight the setter comes over him thus: In good sooth, sir, I know you by your face and have bin in your companie before, I praie you (if without offence) let me crave your name, and the place of your abode. The simple man straight tels him where he dwels his name, and who be his next neighbors, and what Gentlemen dwell about him. After he hath learned al of him, then he comes over his fallowes kindly: sir, though I have bin somewhat bold to be inquisitive of your name, yet holde me excused . . . but since . . . I have made you slacke your busines, wele drinke a quart of wine, or a pot of Ale together: if the foole be so readie as to go, then the Connie is caught: but if he smack the setter, and smels a rat by his clawing, and will not drinke with him, then away goes the setter, and discourseth to the verser the name of the man, the parish hee dwels in, and what gentlemen are his near neighbours, with that away goes he [the verser], and crossing the man at some turning, meetes him, ful in the face, and greetes him'—using the information gained by the setter. (He corresponds, therefore, to the 'taker' or 'taker up' of Barnard's Law.) The term recurs in Charles Cotton's The Compleat Gamester, 1674, in a list of 'rooks'; and in B.E., 1698 (see setting dog). But in Cotton and B.E., the sense (2) is derivative; as also (3), in Anon., A Warning for House-keepers, 1676—he who gets information (see tongue-padder) for a highwayman: ca. 1660–1750. Another sense (4) is that given in Anon., The Tricks of The Town laid open, a sense that prob. dates from ca. 1690: 'His Way of recommending himself is . . . by sly Insinuations and Flatteries, by hypocritical Cringes, and Fawnings, and smooth and knavish Pretences, and formal Dissimulations . . . His ordinary Occupation is to attend the Motion of young Heirs, to draw and trapan them into mean and unequal matches, and so impose upon them Jilts and Whores, under the Character of Heiresses and Virtuosa's; and this he does with so much Dexterity, and so many subtle Arts, and crafty Stratagems, that 'tis almost impossible, if you should once be so unfortunate [as] to fall into his Management, to escape out of it again, without being undone, for the Remainder of your Life . . . If this Business of a Wife don't pass upon you, he'll try in the second Place if he can draw you into Sham Projects and Chimera's: He and his Friends have a new invented Engine upon the Stocks, by the Help of which you may walk with [as] much Freedom and Ease, in the Bottom of the Sea, as in your own Garden', and other extravagancies wherewith to 'get rich quick'; 1770, R. King, The Frauds of London detected; 1802, G. Barrington, plagiarizing King; app. † by 1810.—As 'a bailiff's follower' or 'an exciseman' (Grose, 1785), it was s.—6. (Perhaps related to or even derived from sense 5.) 'A person [who] uses the haunts of thieves, and gives information for the reward': 1797, Potter; 1809, Andrewes; 1848, Sinks of London; 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.), 'An officer in disguise, who points out the thief for the others to arrest'; 1890, B & L; † by 1920—7. Seven: not c., but parlyaree: 1859, H, 'Setter saltee, sevenpence'. Ex It. sette, seven.

setting(-)dog. In 1698, B.E.: 'Setters, or Setting-dogs they that draw in Bubbles' or dupes, 'for old Gamesters to Rook';—repeated in A New Canting Dict., 1725; † by 1820. Ex hunting.

settle. To stun; to knock down: 1725, A New Canting Dict., 'We settled the Cull by a Stoter on his Nob; i.e., We took him such a Blow on the Head, as quite stunn'd him'; 1785, Grose; 1797, Potter; by 1850, American; 1859, Matsell, 'Settled. Knocked down; murdered'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin, 'To kill'; 1933, Ersine, 'To kill'; in C. 20, no longer c. in Britain.—2. Rare except as ppl adj.: see settled.—3. To arrange something shady, to 'fix': U.S.A.: from ca. 1920. Godfrey Irwin, 1931; Rose, 1934 ('to frame').

settle one's hash, 'to murder a person', s. in England, may have, until ca. 1880, been c. in U.S.A.: witness Geo. P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service, 1872.

settled, ppl adj. Transported: March 5, 1849, Sessions Papers (p. 55); 1857, 'Dueange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue; 1871, State Prison Life, 'Sentenced to State Prison, settled'; 1899, J. Flynt, Tramping with Tramps (U.S.A.), Glossary, 'Settled: in prison'; 1900, Flynt & Walton, The Powers that Prey (U.S.A.: id.); 1903, F & H, 'Settle . . . To give (or get) penal servitude for life': 1904, H. Hapgood, The Autobiography of a Thief; 1912, A. H. Lewis, Apaches of New York; 1914, Jackson & Hellyer, 'Convicted'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest; Dec. 1918, The American Law Review; April 1919, The (American) Bookman; 1925, Leverage (U.S.A.); July 3, 1926, Flynn's; 1928, J. K. Ferrier, Crooks and Crime (in respect of U.S.A.); 1930, Burke; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; and often since.

settler. A sentence to penal servitude; in 1850's to transportation: March 1857, Sessions Papers (p. 681), "'If you get nailed for this, it will be a settler for you'"; extant. Cf. settled.

settling. A murder: 1859, Matsell; † by 1930. Ex settle, 1.

seven(-)pence. See sevenpence.

seven penn'orth. Transportation, as convict, for seven years: 1812, J. H. Vaux (see knap seven penn'orth); Oct. 1817, Sessions Papers (in form seven pennyworth); 1823, Bee; ca. 1830, W. T. Moncrieff, Gipsy Jack; 1857, 'Ducange Anglicus', The Vulgar Tongue, in form seven penny-worth; 1859, J. Lang, Botany Bay, 'As drunkenness is not held as an excuse for felony, he got his seven-penn'orth'; 1859, H; 1890, B & L (7 years in a convict prison: seven pennyworth); 1903, F & H; 1943, Jim Phelan, Letters from the Big House; slightly ob. By jocular elaboration.

seven-up, 'a store' (Leverage, 1925); s., not c. But seven-up hustler, 'one who robs general stores' (Rose, 1934), is c. severer. A convict with a seven-years' sentence: prob. since ca. 1820. Price Warung, Tales of the Early Days, 1894.

sevenpence. 'My Lord, if I am to stand seven-pence', glossed as 'seven years transportation': 1821, Pierce Egan, Life in London; 1848, Sinks of London; † by 1903 (F & H). Directly ex seven penn'orth.

sevenpenn'orth. See seven penn'orth.

seventeenner. A corpse: Australian: since ca. 1919. M & B, 1944; Baker, 1945. Perhaps introduced by ex-service crooks, in allusion to the heavy British losses on the Western Front in 1917, esp. at Passchendaele.

sew up. To put (a person) into prison: 1925, Leverage; 1927, Kane, 'Sew up—to convict on overwhelming evidence'; by 1940, police and journalistic s. Cf. British Army and R.A.F. s. (1939–45): 'It's all sewn up'—decided, arranged.

sewer is synonymous with main line: BVB, 1942. Cf. channel.

sewer, go into the. See go into . . .

sewer hogs. Ditch-diggers: tramps': since ca. 1910. Stiff, 1931; Godfrey Irwin, 1931. Pejorative wit.

sewing machine. A machine gun?: June 15, 1929, Flynn's, Thomas Topham, 'The Spot'; extant. Cf. typewriter.

sey, 'yes', is not c., but back-s.

shab, v.i. To run away: tramps' (and gypsies'): mid-C. 19–20; ob. Smart & Crofton, 1875. Ex S.E. shab off, 'to sneak away'.

shack, n. A professional adventurer, a chevalier d'industrie: 1860, H, 2nd ed.; app. † by 1910. Prob. by telescoping the Fr. term.—2. A brakeman (on a railroad): American tramps': since ca. 1890: 1899, Josiah Flynt, Tramping with Tramps, Glossary; 1907, Jack London, The Road, 'About midnight I nailed a freight out of Philadelphia. The shacks ditched me'; 1914, P. & T. Casey, The Gay Cat; Aug. 1916, The Literary Digest; 1922, Harry Kemp, Tramping on Life; 1924, Geo. C. Henderson; 1925, Glen H. Mullin, Adventures of a Scholar Tramp; 1925, Jim Tully, Beggars of Life; Jan. 16, 1926, Flynn's; 1929, Jack Callahan; by 1930, more railroad s. than tramps' e.—witness Stiff, 1931. Ex the shack or cabin he occupies.

shack, v. To sleep in a shed: tramps': 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex S. Am. shack, 'a hut; a very small and humble cottage built of wood'.

shack fever. That tired feeling which comes to a tramp in the spring, when he has once more to 'hit the road': tramps': since ca. 1910: 1931, Stiff, 'It is also called itching feet'; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; et al. 'Originated on the railroads, where the caboose (or shack) is equipped with bunks' (Irwin).

shack-stoner, 'a sixpence': not c., but low s.: 1893, P. H. Emerson, Signor Lippo.

shacker, n. A filthy tramp: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex shack, v.

shacker, v. 'To peddle or deal as a Shylock,' Leverage, 1925: s., not c.

shackers. A brakeman: tramps': 1925, Leverage; extant. Prob. ex shack, n., 2.

shackester. See shakester.

shackle-up, n. 'A great cooking of food in a pot,' Hippo Neville, Sneak Thief on the Road, 1935: tramps': since ca. 1920: 1936, James Curtis, The Gilt Kid, 'A couple o' tins in case they want to have a shackle up'; extant. Prob. ex shackles.

shackle up, v. To cook one's stew, esp. in a 'jungle': tramps': since ca. 1920: 1937, John Worby, The Other Half; extant. Cf. the n.

shackles. Soup: British and American: tramps' and beggars': 1909, W. H. Davies, Beggars; 1931, Godfrey Irwin; 1933, George Orwell, Down and Out; extant. Prob. coined in some prison where soup was so cathartic as to keep the prisoners

'shackled' to—or near—a latrine; an ingenious theory, but incorrect. Short for shackle (or knuckle) bones, shackles has, in Britain at least, been long a proletarian word for 'remnants and scrapings of meat in a butcher's shop' (Partridge, 1937).

shacks. A brakeman: tramps': 1925, Leverage; extant. A 'familiarizing' of shack, n., 2.—2. A receiver of stolen goods: 1925, Leverage; extant. Cf. shacker, v.; perhaps shacks is a corruption of 'Shylock'.

shade, n. A wig: 1738, Ordinary of Newgate's Account (An Account of Henry Fluellin), 'A Calm and Shade (a Hat and Wig)'; † by 1820. Ex the protection it gives from the sun; cf. —2. An umbrella: U.S.A.: 1848, The Ladies' Repository; by 1890, coll. Short for sun-shade.—3. A prison: U.S.A., esp. among yeggs: 1916, The Literary Digest (Aug., 'Do You Speak "Yegg" ?'); 1925, implied in in the shade; slightly ob.—4. A pick-pocket's assistant: U.S.A.: 1933, Ersine; extant. Cf. sense 1 of the v.

shade, v. 'To conceal (something), keep (it) secret': 1890, B & L; 1925, Leverage, 'To cover an illegal act; to protect'; 1933, Ersine, 'To assist a pickpocket at his work. "John shades for Abe"'; 1937, Edwin H. Sutherland, The Professional Thief; extant. I.e., to keep it in the shade, 'to keep it dark'; to work in shadow.—2. To put (a person) into prison: U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant. Ex shade, n., 3.

shade, in the. See in the shade.

shade-glim. A door; a window: 1848, The Ladies' Repository ('The Flash Language'); † by 1937 (Irwin). Cf. glim, n., 3.

shade(-)work. Cheating at cards, by marks on the backs: 1925, Leverage; 1933, Ersine; extant. Perhaps by a pun on S.E. shady work.

shadow, n. 'A first-class police officer'; esp. if a detective: 1859, Matsell; by 1890 (B & L), English; by 1895, no longer c. He 'shadows' suspects.—2. A female that watches 'dress-women' prostitutes: ca. 1860–1910. James Greenwood.—3. An observation or shadowing of a suspect: U.S.A.: 1885, 'Le Jemlys', Shadowed to Europe; † by 1930.

shadow, v. (Of a detective) to follow (a person) stealthily; dog him: 1872, Geo P. Burnham, Memoirs of the United States Secret Service; by 1890, no longer c.

shady. 'Quiet; out of sight; not easily found': 1859, Matsell; 1872, Egglestone (D.A.E.); † by 1930.

shady glim. A dark lantern: 1859, Matsell; † by 1920. Cf. glim, n., 1.

shaffle. See snaffle, n., 2, ref. of 1848.

shaft, n. 'A leg, especially when attached to an attractive young woman, and used generally with some adjective expressing admiration,' IA, 1931; extant.

shaft, v. To act as a go-between: 1925, Leverage; extant. Perhaps cf. the n.

shag, n., 'a man in the act of copulation': 1788, Grose, 2nd ed., 'He is but bad shag; he is no able woman's man': almost certainly not c., but low s. Likewise low s., not c., is the still current sense, 'sexual intercourse'. Ex the v.—2. A brakeman: U.S.A.: 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys to Crookdom; extant. A perversion of shack, n., 2.—3. 'A chase or organised pursuit by the police or an irate citizenry,' Godfrey Irwin, 1931: tramps':

since ca. 1918.—4. Hence (or cf. sense 3 of the v.), a uniformed policeman: 1933, Ersine; extant.

shag, v. To copulate with (a woman): 1788, Grose, 2nd ed.: not c., but low s.—2. To recognize, identify; discover: U.S.A.: 1914, Jackson & Hellyer; slightly ob. Cf. —3. Hence (?), to follow (a person): 1924, Geo. C. Henderson, Keys; 1933, Eagle; 1933, Ersine, '1. To walk. 2. To chase, usually on foot'; extant. Perhaps (cf. sense 1) because it = to keep on the tail of.

shag, adj. Worthless: orig. racketeers': 1930, Burke, 'The white stuff we run off is shag'; 1934, Rose; 1938, Castle; extant.

shagger. A police shadow: 1934, Rose; extant. Ex shag, v., 3.

shake, n. A robbery: 1848, H. Downes Miles, Dick Turpin, 'It isn't the matter of a shake as I'd spoil a trump like you for'; 1865, E. H. Savage, Police Recollections (U.S.A.); after ca. 1920, it appears to be, in U.S.A., short for shake-down, 2 and 4, as in Courtney Ryley Cooper, Here's to Crime, 1937, and in Britain, as the shake, to = pick-pocketry (Partridge, 1938).—2. A prostitute: 1859, Matsell (U.S.A.); 1860, H, 2nd ed. (Northern c. and low s.); 1887, Baumann; by 1900, †. Perhaps properly and orig. a thievish prostitute: cf. the v. A shortening of shakester.—3. A dicer, a gambler: U.S.A.: 1859, Matsell; app. † by 1925. He shakes dice.—4. 'The cold shoulder; a throw-down' (i.e., abandonment, betrayal): U.S.A.: 1925, Leverage; extant.—5. As short for shake-down, n., 2, it is circus s. (The White Tops, July–Aug. 1928, 'Circus Glossary') and low s. of the racketeers (John O'Connor, Broadway Racketeers, 1928).

