Edited by DAVID CRYSTAL

A DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE:
AN ANTHOLOGY

SAMUEL JOHNSON was born in Lichfield in 1709, the son of a bookseller and stationer. Educated at Lichfield Grammar School and, for a short time, at Pembroke College, Oxford, he moved to London, where he became a writer for The Gentleman's Magazine and established his reputation as a moral essayist, critic, poet and lexicographer. Johnson produced a 'Short Scheme for compiling a New Dictionary of the English Language' in 1746 and, after nine years spent taming the 'wild and barbarous jargon', published his Dictionary in 1755. The work dominated British lexicography for over a century, continuing to be reprinted until the 1880s and earning its author the name 'Dictionary Johnson'. Johnson met his biographer, James Boswell, in 1763, by which time he had become a literary celebrity in the London of his day. He died in December 1784.

DAVID CRYSTAL'S language expertise has led to him being described as 'A sort of latter-day Johnson' (The Times Higher Education Supplement). He was born in 1941 and grew up in Holyhead. After a long and distinguished career in the field of linguistics, he now works as a writer, language consultant, reference-book editor and broadcaster, and travels extensively, lecturing on language to audiences throughout the world. In 1995 he was awarded the OBE for services to the English language. He has published over ninety books, including The English Language, Words on Words, written in collaboration with Hilary Crystal, Shakespeare's Words and The Shakespeare Miscellany, written in collaboration with actor son Ben Crystal, and The Stories of English. David Crystal is also President of the Samuel Johnson Society for 2005–2006.

Introduction

The concept of an anthology is routine with reference to such genres as poetry and the short story, but it is unusual, to say the least, in relation to a dictionary. For a dictionary is a tool, compiled to solve a problem of the moment – to check a spelling, a pronunciation, a meaning, a point of usage. It is not there for browsing. Who, apart from lexicographers suffering from withdrawal symptoms, would ever want to read for pleasure a selection of entries from – a dictionary? For such an exercise to succeed, the source work would have to be of very special historical significance, and its compiler a person whose literary or linguistic standing was sufficiently pre-eminent to demand respect, and sufficiently idiosyncratic to evoke curiosity. There would probably also need to be a special occasion.

All three criteria are satisfied in the case of Samuel Johnson's Dictionary of the English Language. It was written at a critical time in English linguistic history, at the very beginning of a period which would introduce prescriptive principles into English language study, and when the demand for a standard language was at its strongest. It was written – as James Boswell claims in the final sentence of his biography – by a man 'whose talents, acquirements, and virtues, were so extraordinary, that the more his character is considered, the more he will be regarded by the present age, and by posterity, with admiration and reverence', a judgement with which few would quarrel. Who else, after all, has been given the sobriquet of a genre in the way that 'Dictionary Johnson' was? And the first edition of the Dictionary was published in 1755 – thus motivating those who believe in the significance of round numbers to treat 2005 as a year of special memorial consequence.

So, how does one anthologize a lexicographer? I believe, in the same way that one would a poet. The editor has to look for works (entries, in the lexicographer's case) that are acknowledged to be the writer's best, or which illustrate special features of style, or points of biographical interest, such as upbringing, milieu, beliefs – or, indeed, eccentricities. There will be a concern to be genuinely representative of the oeuvre as a whole. Some works (entries) might be chosen because they illustrate a stage in the author's career, or a particular stage in literary – or, in this case, linguistic – history. And some will be there because, quite simply, the editor likes them. Background information about the writer's intentions will also be useful: just as the Preface to the Lyrical Ballads was invaluable in informing our thinking about William Wordsworth and Samuel Taylor Coleridge, so Johnson's Plan and Preface, as well as the relevant parts of Boswell's biography, provide an indispensable perspective for reading the Dictionary entries (which is why they are included in this book).

Applying these criteria to the present case, several types of entry in the Dictionary immediately clamour for inclusion, and some of them have to be regretfully declined. Within the latter category I would place the kinds of lengthy entry which indeed live up to Johnson's characterization of his task as 'drudgery' (see the entry at lexicographer, and also dull sense 8). Every lexicographer knows what these are – the need to handle with precision the grammatical words of the language (such as what, as, of, but), the everyday words (one, two, three, January, December), the remarkable number of words beginning with such prefixes as un- and self-, or those 'light verbs' – verbs of 'vague and indeterminate' use, as he puts it in his Preface – which play an important part in English idiom, such as make and do. In Johnson's case, the longest entry is for take, whose 134 uses (including phrasal verbs) take up 11 full columns of print; but a special mention should be made of the verbs set (88 uses), put (80), stand (69), go and run (both 68). Such mammoth entries were unprecedented in English dictionaries, and they are remarkable in their attention to semantic nuance, but they can hardly be illustrated in a small anthology, which therefore loses in representativeness what it gains in interest by focusing on shorter entries. However, I have included a few of Johnson's medium-length entries – such as clear, foot and manner – to convey something of the flavour of his more ambitious treatments, and I have included a sprinkling of the shorter grammatical entries (such as he, that and the).

THE INDIVIDUALIST

But how to select among the thousands of remaining entries?<sup>1</sup> There are of course a number which have to be included because they have achieved a certain degree of notoriety due to the personal opinions expressed in their definitions. Characterizing them as instances of 'capricious and humourous indulgence' (p. xlii), Boswell lists Tory, Whig, pension, oats, excise, 'and a few more' – by which he means such entries as lexicographer, patron, leader (sense 4), reformation and reformer, aleconner, palmistry and stockjobber. As a characteristic of Johnson's lexicography, their fame far exceeds their significance; some routinely appear in books of quotations. There are less than twenty of them in the whole work, and the most famous one of all – oats defined as ‘grain, which in England is generally given to horses, but in Scotland supports the people’ – was almost certainly one of those in-jokes that lexicographers love to bury in their books. It would have been no more than a friendly dig at his amanuenses, five of whom, as Boswell points out (p. xxxiii) were from Scotland, and whose influence is reflected in dozens of allusions to Scottish English throughout the Dictionary. A similar sympathy pervades his famous definition of lexicographer: I have never met one of these individuals who did not delight in the characterization of their profession as that of a ‘harmless drudge’.<sup>2</sup>

These entries illustrate Johnson’s authorial fingerprints on a genre which in later times is notable for the absence of personality traits. But they are far outnumbered by other signs of individualism. He repeatedly cites his own limitations. ‘Of this word I know not the meaning’, he says of dogbolt, and similar sentiments are to be found in several entries, such as etch, minnock, skilt and stammel (though he had tracked down a meaning for this last item by the fourth edition). The derivation of tatterdemalion is described as ‘tatter and I know not what’. Of deciding between tricker and trigger, he comments ‘I know not which is right’. Of plication all he can say is that it is ‘used somewhere in [Samuel Richardson’s] Clarissa’. Such honesty is endearing, and it is conscious honesty, for he repeatedly acknowledges his limitations in his Preface. At the same time, we have sometimes to take his self-dismissal with a pinch of salt. Of the verb bear, for example, he says, ‘This is a word used with such latitude, that it is not easily explained.’ He then goes on to distinguish, with impressive precision, thirty-eight uses – too many to illustrate in the present selection.

He does not shirk to acknowledge other people’s limitations too. If he feels that someone uses a word carelessly, he says so: of hyper as a noun, he comments drily, Matthew Prior (whom he quotes using it) ‘did not know the meaning of the word’. He is especially scathing about some of his etymological sources. Of scamble, he says, ‘This word, which is scarcely in use, has much exercised the etymological sagacity of Meric Casaubon; but, as is usual, to no purpose’ (see also the etymological note at spruce). Of quaff, he says, ‘Junius, with his usual idleness of conjecture, derives it from the Greek.’ He is severe in his judgements about individual words, and his linguistic temperament permeates the dictionary: dissever ‘ought to be ejected from our language’; finesse is ‘an unnecessary word’; twittletwattle is ‘A vile word’; opiniatry is a word ‘not yet received, nor is it wanted’; shab gets three barrels – ‘a low barbarous cant word’; and of precarious he asserts ‘No word is more unskilfully used.’ There are words he favours too – impartible, for example, ‘is elegant, though used by few writers’ – but his recorded dislikes seriously exceed his likes.

He is quite open about his preferences. Foreign loan words, in particular, have to be kept under control, as he asserts in his Preface:

The words which our authours have introduced by their knowledge of foreign languages, or ignorance of their own, by vanity or wantonness, by compliance with fashion, or lust of innovation, I have registred as they occurred, though commonly only to censure them, and warn others against the folly of naturalizing useless foreigners to the injury of the natives.

And censure he does. Thus of souvenance he comments: ‘A French word which with many more is now happily disused.’ He is suspicious of noun-to-verb conversion too: to proselyte is ‘A bad word’; to proverb is ‘Not a good word’ (notwithstanding the quotations accompanying it from Milton and Shakespeare). He is ready to defer to custom when the evidence starts to pile up against him, as can be seen by his comments at friend sense 3, outragious and strew. But the two principles are contradictory, and the tension between them can be sensed throughout the Dictionary.

THE OBSERVER

Alongside Johnson the opinionator, there is Johnson the observer, and his observations include far more than what is strictly linguistic. Although he distances himself in his Preface from proper names (p. 26), he is very much an encyclopedist by temperament, and the Dictionary contains a great deal of real-world (what he calls ‘extradictionary’) information. ‘I have determined to consult the best writers for explanations real as well as verbal’, he says in his Plan, and some of his quotations are indeed extensive, especially in the domain of science: we find a 750-word explanation for comet, and a 400-word one on ammoniac; he lists 84 species at pear, 27 at plant and 34 at vine. These entries are too large for inclusion in this anthology, but a hint of his encyclopedic interests can be seen in the items I have included relating to manufactured products (such as cardmatch, rocket), social structure, both secular and religious (Bilingsgate, board-wages, cardinal, stocah), and contemporary beliefs and practices (all fours, plenist, vacuist, tarantula, toad, electricity, scarify, parlour). A good example of a straightforward encyclopedic entry is Doomsday-book.

But Johnson is above all a linguistic observer; and as most readers of this anthology will be language enthusiasts too, it seemed appropriate to include all the entries where he makes a point of linguistic interest, such as many-languaged, nominative, solecism, style, syncopist and verb. I have included all his letter-openers (A, B, etc.), because of the information they contain about contemporary spelling.<sup>3</sup> And I have also included most of the entries which make an observation about regional usage. There are not many of them, but they fall into three main types: words from his home town and county, Lichfield and Staffordshire (gnarled, goldfinch, moreland, orrery, shaw), occasional observations about other English dialects (amper, atter, haver, onset), and above all usages from Scottish English (mow, scambler, sponk), which are common enough to suggest that his amanuenses were being used for far more than their copy-writing skills.

Of antiquated or obsolete words, none will be inserted but such as are to be found in authors who wrote since the accession of Elizabeth, from which we date the golden age of our language;<sup>4</sup> and of these many might be omitted, but that the reader may require, with an appearance of reason, that no difficulty should be left unresolved in books which he finds himself invited to read, as confessed and established models of stile.

It is certainly a sensible aim to include words which readers of great literature are likely to encounter: 'Obsolete words are admitted, when they are found in authours not obsolete, or when they have any force or beauty that may deserve revival' (Preface). But this period of coverage, from Edmund Spenser to his own time, is some two hundred years, and a great deal of lexical change had taken place during that period. Although Johnson does often say that a word is 'not in use' (accourt, diswitted, morbosity, reverb), he is by no means systematic in his observations, and the idiosyncratic use of many of Shakespeare's coinages, for example, are not given any comment (though see the long note at intrenchant). A good example is cousin, which is given in its Shakespearian senses, and largely illustrated from the bard. Was this still in use when Johnson was compiling? Judging by the Oxford English Dictionary,<sup>5</sup> the general sense of cousin had died out – its last citation was 1748 – but there is no suggestion of this in the entry. Sevennight, by contrast, is given a helpful usage note about its continuing usage. Another type of instance is the Latinate 'hard word'; examples are encountered on most pages of the Dictionary. How many of these scholarly ('inkhorn') coinages (deambulation, misacceptation) were still in use? They are often unillustrated, or given a reference simply to a preceding dictionary.<sup>6</sup>

To a modern reader, a great deal of the interest of the Dictionary is the information it provides about eighteenth-century usage. For example, some prefixes (such as circum- and ob-) were evidently much more commonly used then than they are today. Hundreds of entries show the way the language has changed between then and now, demonstrating the wisdom of Johnson's famously revised opinion. In his Plan, he had been unequivocal: one great end of this undertaking is to fix the English language.

In his Preface he is more realistic:

Those who have been persuaded to think well of my design, require that it should fix our language, and put a stop to those alterations which time and chance have hitherto been suffered to make in it without opposition. With this consequence I will confess that I flattered myself for a while; but now begin to fear that I have indulged expectation which neither reason nor experience can justify. When we see men grow old and die at a certain time one after another, from century to century, we laugh at the elixir that promises to prolong life to a thousand years; and with equal justice may the lexicographer be derided, who being able to produce no example of a nation that has preserved their words and phrases from mutability, shall imagine that his dictionary can embalm his language, and secure it from corruption and decay . . .

Notions of corruption and decay make no sense at all when studying lexical change, as the changes move in all kinds of semantic directions. New words and senses are continually entering the language, and old words and senses are disappearing, all at different rates. Johnson is better at drawing our attention to the arrivals than the departures, as any lexicographer would be, because the birth of a word is something readily noticeable, whereas the death of a word usually goes unremarked until long after it has happened. Examples of innovations noted can be found at methodist, tea and verdant. He does quite often suggest that a word is out of use, but the comment is sometimes misleading. Among those words said to be no longer used are chivalrous, expropriate, ignore, jeopardy, missive (sense 1), remediate – all still in the language today. Among those which have definitely died are the following, many of which continue to fascinate wordsmiths because of their different semantic perspective:

airling, armisonous, compotation, curtain-lecture, fopdoodle, fribble, horrisonous, merrythought, nappiness, nidget, nidorous, noctuary, novercal, nullibiety, optimity, orbity, oscitancy, pandect, pandiculation, perpotation, pugil, querimoni-ous, rhabarbarate, shapsmith, smellfeast, sternutation, stirious, suggilate, suppe-daneous, tepefaction, traveltainted, vaticide, vitellary, worldling

Anyone who encounters merrythought, for example, is unlikely to think of a wishbone in exactly the same way thereafter. And if nothing else, such words show how difficult it is for anyone to state confidently that ‘there has never been such a word in English’.

Most words disappear because there is no longer a need for them, or because an alternative word becomes the norm, as in the case of chirurgion (surgeon). An example is toothdrawer, which was leaving the language while Johnson was writing. Its replacement, dentist, has its first recorded usage in 1759, and the quotation in the Oxford English Dictionary shows that it was being seen as an innovation:

Dentist figures it now in our newspapers, and may do well enough for a French puffer; but we fancy Rutter is content with being called a tooth-drawer.

Johnson does not include dentist, one of many surprising omissions in his coverage. Several words also lack senses which would have been strong in the eighteenth century: sentence, for example, lacks linguistic definition; towel lacks an ecclesiastical sense; degree is missing its sense of academic proficiency.

It remains one of the great mysteries of historical lexicology why some words stay in the language and others disappear. Words are often in competition with each other, and it is never possible to predict the ones that are going to be successful. An interesting feature of the Dictionary is to see several such pairs of words evidently in competition at the time: examples include apliable and applicable, difficil and difficult, preconceit and preconception, primeval and primevous, promulgate and promulge, rivality and rivalry, schemer and schematist, subtile and subtle. An example of a three-way competition is momentany, momentaneous and momentary. A more complex example, because of the overlaps of meaning involved, is review, revisal, revise and revision. The winners of the competitions, of course, we now know.

Comparing Johnson’s definitions with those we find in a modern dictionary, there are many interesting points of comparison. Some words have lost senses (fluster its drunkenness sense, saucer its sauce sense (sense 1), humanist and humanity their philological sense); some have gained them (overture a musical sense, romantick an amatory sense, temperature a scientific sense, titillation a sexual sense). Some words have reduced in force: bloody-minded is no longer just 'inclined to bloodshed', worry no longer 'mangle' or 'persecute brutally'. Some words have narrowed in meaning (cabaret no longer refers to a location, police no longer refers to general regulation, tomboy no longer applies to both sexes); some have broadened (ethnick 'Heathen', novel 'A small tale, generally of love', paraphernalia 'Goods in the wife's disposal', salesman 'One who sells cloaths ready made', veterinarian 'One skilled in the diseases of cattle'). Some have changed their domain of application: aftermath from agriculture, attitude from art forms, technical from the arts in general, handkerchief from the neck, urinator from diving. Several words have lost their negative associations: sophistication ('adulteration'), storyteller (its usage note says: 'In contempt'), strapping ('Used of large men or women in contempt'), sturdy ('always used of men with some disagreeable idea of coarseness or rudeness'). Some of the older definitions can still cause a frisson of surprise (lunch 'As much food as one's hand can hold', scavenger 'A petty magistrate, whose province is to keep the streets clean'). Of particular interest are the idioms which have now gone out of use: at rovers, to serve one the same sauce (see sauce), to stave and tail (see stave), to be in the suds, to be on the tenters, to weather a point.

VARIATION IN USAGE

There are several other aspects of eighteenth-century usage represented in the Dictionary which an anthology ought to reflect. A number of entries provide information about contemporary pronunciation or the way it was changing: chagrin, fault, heronry, medicine, medicinal, mesh, quoit (in the entry on letter Q), seraglio, toll. Most headwords show the location of the primary stress, with a mark placed after the first vowel of the stressed syllable (an innovation introduced earlier in the century by the lexicographer Nathan Bailey). The location of this stress in a polysyllabic word seems to have varied as much then as it does today (examples such as avenue, revenue and sojourn correspond to modern variation in research, dispute and controversy), the issue being heightened by the way poets varied the words to meet different metrical constraints. And Johnson seems to have a phonetician's ear, if entries such as pence are anything to go by:

The plural of penny; formed from pennies, by a contraction usual in the rapidity of colloquial speech.

His phonetic observations are not frequent, but I have included them when they occur.

Many words show the distance that English spelling had to travel before it reached the present-day standard (fewel, raindeer, villany). Some words were printed solid which today would be given spaces (anotherguess, brownstudy, illnature, welldone, wellmet, whitewine). Words ending in -c were routinely spelled -ck (acrostick, antick, comick): ‘The English never use c at the end of a word’ says the opening entry at letter K. The choice between final -l and -ll was still in flux: downfal but pitfall, petrol but comptroll. So was the choice between -or and -our: confessor and inheritor alongside oratour and possessour. Johnson often comments on the variation. He acknowledges that there are problems with certain endings: resistance or resistence, sailer or sailor. And he points out in the Preface: ‘Some combinations of letters having the same power are used indifferently without any discoverable reason of choice, as in choak, choke; soap, sope; fewel, fuel, and many others; which I have sometimes inserted twice, that those who search for them under either form, may not search in vain.’ Other examples are shrug and shrugg, choir and quire, summersault and somersault, evesdropper and eavesdrop, and hearse and herse – though it should be noted that Johnson does not always draw attention to the connection, and judging by the inconsistencies of treatment between entries he may not always have noticed it (with hearse/herse, a connection is pointed out only in the fourth edition). Such pairs as sicamore and sycamore or screen and skreen appear to have been composed independently, with similar definitions but different quotations. His own spellings reflect the uncertain spelling of the time. He sometimes changes his mind: the spelling of sciomachy alters between first and fourth editions, as does his treatment of dependant (see note to dependent). He sometimes gets into a tangle: sizers is cross-referred to scissars (which is indeed his usual spelling – see its use at snip, for example), but there is no such item in the dictionary; the entry on this object is found at scissor. At other times, well aware of the problems posed by a pair of overlapping spellings, he recommends a solution, which in the case of travel and travail was the one eventually adopted.

Stylistic variation is another important dimension of language, so I have included many of the entries which contain an observation about eighteenth-century usage – or, at least, Johnson’s opinion about contemporary usage.

The stylistic range of the Dictionary is in fact very wide. At one extreme we find highly formal words of classical origin (adumbrate, prognostication, sagacity); at the other we find colloquial interjections (ay, foh, hist, look, right, tush, tut). We find social locutions (howd'ye), terms of address (servant) and gender differences ('women's words', such as frightfully and horrid). Johnson is well aware of the modern difference between semantics and pragmatics, as his entry on surely illustrates:

Certainly; undoubtedly; without doubt. It is often used rather to intend and strengthen the meaning of the sentence, than with any distinct and explicable meaning.

At the same time, being part of the spirit of his age, he routinely draws attention to words he considers improper, using such terms as 'bad', 'low', 'vulgar', 'cant', 'barbarous', 'ludicrous' and 'corrupt' to describe such words as alamode, budge, cajole, coax, nowise, plaguy and sconce (sense 2). We can sense his concern to warn his readers about words which it might be dangerous to use in 'polite' society. However, we should not exaggerate his attitudes: terms such as 'low' and 'vulgar' may have been intended to convey no more than the labels used by modern lexicographers, such as 'informal'.

A critical consideration for Johnson was to ensure that a word is of good breeding, by having a demonstrable etymology from Classical or Germanic sources:

By tracing in this manner every word to its original, and not admitting, but with great caution, any of which no original can be found, we shall secure our language from being over-run with cant, from being crouded with low terms, the spawn of folly or affectation, which arise from no just principles of speech, and of which therefore no legitimate derivation can be shown. (Plan)

Tiff and traipse, for example, are considered 'low' words, so he supposes they will have no etymology. He is firm in his belief that spelling should reflect etymology, as we can see from his remarks at hoop, strew, tong, or his explanation at sithe (i.e. scythe) 'I have chosen the orthography which is at once most simple and most agreeable to etymology.' His etymological notes are often quite extensive (agast/aghast, sleeveless – the longest is at loord), and he readily criticizes writers who are 'inattentive' to etymology (as at kindly). Ironically, it is in this domain that his own work has been most strongly criticized. Even Boswell was circumspect: 'The etymologies, though they exhibit learning and judgement, are not, I think, entitled to the first praise amongst the various parts of this immense work' (p. xli).

They do indeed need to be read with extreme caution. His explanations are often wrong, and he continually cites analogues in a few languages (especially Welsh) that are often irrelevant (looby, mug, trice). Stallion illustrates his reasoning:

ysdalwyn, an old Welch word: the one is derived from the other; but which from which I cannot certainly tell.

But we must be fair. Johnson warns us about his etymologies himself, and here there is no false modesty: ‘the orthography which I recommend is still controvertible, the etymology which I adopt is uncertain, and perhaps frequently erroneous’. And we must remember that this work was carried out in the 1750s. It would not be until 1785 that Sir William Jones would make his statement about the common origins of cognate words, and launch the science of comparative philology.

TREATMENT

Of the two major dimensions in any dictionary – coverage (which items to include) and treatment (how to deal with them) – Johnson is in no doubt that treatment is the greater problem. As he says in his Plan, after talking about issues to do with selection and identification: ‘The great labour is yet to come, the labour of interpreting these words and phrases with brevity, fulness and perspicuity.’ It was indeed a huge labour, and when we look at a sequence of Johnsonian definitions today, it is obvious how much thought must have gone into them. They are the dictionary’s primary strength, and its chief claim to fame. Anyone can get a sense of the problem by trying to formulate for themselves appropriate definitions for such words as effect, may, nature, relation and sign, and comparing their attempt with Johnson’s entries. The plural, ‘definitions’, is important: most words in a language have more than one sense. Some, as we have seen, have dozens. Abstract words pose particular problems, but all words require definitions that are clear, succinct, well-sequenced and contrastive (with words of related meaning), and Johnson’s achievement can be seen on virtually any page. For clarity and succinctness, see acquiescence, dovetail, falsifier, heresiarch (with its cheeky alliteration), message, preparation, proximate, rear. His definitions are often elegant (history: ‘A narration of events and facts delivered with dignity’), thoughtful (such as his additional note to sorrow: ‘Sorrow is not commonly understood as the effect of present evil, but of lost good’), and perceptive, such as his definition of sorry:

Grieved for something past. It is generally used of slight or casual miscarriages or vexations, but sometimes of greater things. It does not imply any long continuance of grief.

There are many illustrations of the care he takes to sequence his definitions in a semantically related way, and to provide a balance between definition and associated quotation: illustrative are fierceness, flesh, knowledge, ring (noun), shade and taste. His concern to relate words to other words can be seen in his synonym lists, as at careless, chafe and flatter. Most lexicographers would be satisfied with just two or three synonyms: Johnson's careless, for example, gives twelve. And the way in which he draws attention to contrasts in meaning can be seen in such entries as amend (distinguished from improve), ancient (vs. old), bowl (vs. cup), staff sense 3 (vs. club), tempest (vs. breeze, gale, gust, storm) and sore (vs. wound, tumour, bruise) – a feature which is particularly noticeable in the second half of the Dictionary. 'It is necessary likewise to explain many words by their opposition to others; for contraries are best seen when they stand together', he commented in his Plan. In this respect he anticipates twentieth-century structural semantics.

'A large work is difficult because it is large', Johnson remarked in his Preface; so it is not surprising to find definitions that are weak by his own exacting standards. Volcano could have been better defined than 'burning mountain', and there is more to warren than 'A kind of park for rabbits', delightful though this last characterization is. Sometimes the definition strays into an anecdote (as in dilemma). Sometimes he lets his sources do the job for him: holly is defined as 'A plant', with the detail left to a quotation from Philip Miller; and the complexity of spectrum is left to a quotation from Isaac Newton. (Cases where a quotation replaces a definition are shown in this anthology by leaving the quotation in roman type.) Sometimes Johnson simply gives up: drayplough ('A plough of a particular kind'), sonata ('A tune'), surprise sense 2 ('A dish, I suppose, which has nothing in it'). This is reminiscent of the approach of earlier English lexicographers.

Johnson has often been criticized for the 'difficulty' of his definitions, in such cases as cough ('A convulsion of the lungs, vellicated by some sharp serosity') and network ('Any thing reticulated or decussated, at equal distances, with interstices between the intersections'). The importance of the point has been exaggerated, for there are not many like these. But here, as in so many other ways, he anticipated his critics:

sometimes easier words are changed into harder, as burial into sepulture or interment, drier into desiccative, dryness into siccidity or aridity, fit into paroxysm;

for the easiest word, whatever it be, can never be translated into one more easy. But easiness and difficulty are merely relative, and if the present prevalence of our language should invite foreigners to this dictionary, many will be assisted by those words which now seem only to increase or produce obscurity. (Preface)

To modern eyes, such definitions do often seem lexically abstruse, but they have to be seen in the context of his time, which was a period when ‘hard words’ were much more routine than today. The definitions would have been challenging, but not obscure, to his contemporaries. And the frequency with which some of the hard words were used makes them more palatable, even to the modern reader: reticulated is one of several words in the dictionary beginning with reti-; interstice turns up in a number of entries (dense, imporous, mesh, net), both in definitions and quotations, and also has a entry of its own.

An analysis of Johnson’s use of quotations – over 113,000 in the first edition (including some duplications), and a further 3,000 in the fourth – would take an essay in itself. Though his approach has several continental forerunners, this is the first English dictionary to use quotations in such an integrated and extensive way (only a few specialist dictionaries had used examples previously), and its influence on later lexicography was unparalleled, both in following his practice as well as reacting against it. Shakespeare, John Dryden, Joseph Addison and Francis Bacon provide over a third of the quotations, but there are over 500 authors used in all. It has often been pointed out that his selection was only partly based on linguistic considerations. Many quotes are there because they represent a moral point of view in which he strongly believed, such as the frequent quotations from conservative Anglican theologians and the absence of quotations from the freethinking Thomas Hobbes. As he states in his Plan:

In citing authorities, on which the credit of every part of this work must depend, it will be proper to observe some obvious rules, such as of preferring writers of the first reputation to those of an inferior rank; of noting the quotations with accuracy; and of selecting, when it can be conveniently done, such sentences, as, besides their immediate use, may give pleasure or instruction by conveying some elegance of language, or some precept of prudence, or piety.

Many illustrations are also there for educational reasons, providing encyclopedic information and informing readers about the current state of knowledge: see his mini-essay on electricity, for example. This is a big difference with later lexicographic uses of quotation (such as in the Oxford English Dictionary), where the illustration is chosen to show the historical evolution of a word rather than its encyclopedic status or literary excellence. But he is actually very good at finding quotations which illustrate linguistic issues, as in his quotation at arrant, which shows both comparative and superlative forms. (His illustration at twister needs no comment.) His quotations policy is often serendipitous. It is obvious that he had a copy of a work by Abraham Cowley to hand when he was preparing the entries on that and the: nine of the twenty-eight quotations for the former, and five of the eleven quotations for the latter, are from that author. And sometimes he just didn't know how to stop. There is no space to include in this anthology the seriously over-quoted entries, such as the 27 quotations attached to for in the sense of 'because of', the 38 quotations for the adverbial use of new, or the 55 quotations for the adverbial use of ill. But fault sense 1 is an example of an entry which does not really need all the quotations it receives.

LINGUIST

Johnson is by temperament – and also as a result of his working experience – a descriptive linguist who found himself living in a prescriptive age. From Boswell's accounts we know he rejoiced in linguistic diversity, and he repeatedly demonstrates his interest in linguistic minutiae. He is surprisingly modern in some of his usage notes, taking into account points of grammatical or semantic importance: he notes the use of that with notwithstanding, the way alone usually goes with (collocates with) let, and the collocations of amicable and ail (sense 4). His account of ought and this/that would not seem out of place in a modern grammar. Alongside this, he reflects the emerging prescriptive spirit of his age, with its disparagement of lower-class usage and its emphasis on logical analysis and etymological priorities. Thus he worries about the 'illogic' of such verbs as unloose, and will not allow a word like extreme to be given a superlative use because of its already superlative meaning. And while acknowledging the role of custom, for the use of some words, he does not hesitate to impose his own critical judgement upon the use of others.

There is a profound and unresolved contradiction in what he was trying to do. On the one hand, his Plan promises to show that 'every word will have its history'; on the other, he intends to restrict his search to 'the pure sources of genuine diction'. On the one hand, he intends to 'discover and promulgate the decrees of custom'; on the other, he is ready 'to interpose my own judgment . . . to support what appears to me most consonant to grammar and reason'. He wants to present the whole of a word's history, but does not go back further than Spenser and ignores writers of whom he disapproves. It is, of course, not possible to have it both ways. On the whole, as we have already seen, the descriptive linguist in him carried the day. 'All change is of itself an evil', he said in his Plan. By the time the Dictionary appeared he had already revised his view (see p. xii), recognizing the inevitability of change and trying to describe it. But there is an unevenness of application of this fresh vision throughout the work.

In summarizing the development of a historical frame of reference in early dictionary-writing, US lexicographer Allan Walker Read had this to say:

It was necessary that the lexicographer should present the evidence of actual usage, that he should trust it in determining the treatment of words, and that he should extend the scope both as to time and as to the variety of the writers drawn upon. Samuel Johnson assumes the most important place in this development . . .<sup>7</sup>

Notwithstanding the various European models on which Johnson drew, his Dictionary contains an unprecedented amount of innovation in lexicographical method, especially in its application to English, such as his sophisticated analysis of senses (as seen in the original dictionary with take and come), his usage essays, the complementary roles of definition and quotation, and the inclusion of phrasal verbs (come in, come off, etc.) – more than just a detail, for such verbs are a major characteristic of the English language. The sociolinguistic impact of his work on English dictionary-making was immense, reaching across the Atlantic (where his Dictionary became the standard reference for over fifty years), and extending into the end of the nineteenth century, when James Murray's 'New' English dictionary bowed respectfully in its direction. Johnson's contribution to lexicography continues to be assessed and revised, as more information becomes known about his working methods, but his place in the history of this subject remains unchallenged, and he will continue to be a focus of study as lexicography itself develops as an academic subject. Expect a great deal more to be published in the next few years. With the arrival of an electronic version of the Dictionary,<sup>8</sup> and with the increasing availability of his sources online, we seem to be at the beginning of a new investigative era.

THE PRESENT ANTHOLOGY

It remains only to summarize my editorial approach and the conventions I have used in compiling this anthology. I have tried to reflect Johnson's balance of treatment through the alphabet, giving proportionately more space to those letters he treats in greater depth. Much has been said about a supposed imbalance in his Dictionary, due to his devoting too much attention to the opening letters of the alphabet; but in fact in this respect his practice is not very different from that of modern lexicographers. His letter C ends at p. 477<sup>9</sup> (out of 2,261 pages – 21%); the New Oxford Dictionary of English (1998) has its letter C ending at p. 460 (out of 2,152 – 21%); the Longman Dictionary of the English Language (1984) has its letter C ending at p. 366 (out of 1,760 – 21%). If there is a bias, it is one shared by all lexicographers.

I have not interfered with Johnson's alphabetical ordering of entries, which is a mixture of principles. It is generally letter-by-letter, as is usual in modern dictionaries, but it is sometimes word by word (common precedes common law which precedes commonage), sometimes word-class by word-class (moderns (noun) precedes modernism (noun) which precedes modernise (verb)), sometimes based on morphology (with the base form first, as when hypercritick precedes hypercritical), and sometimes based on semantics (as when deter is followed by determent which precedes deterge and detergent). A detail about ordering is to note that I/J and U/V are conflated: for example, ejectment precedes eigh and avast precedes auction.

Once I had selected an entry, I used all of it, not excluding any quotation or sense. I have left the information in the entries as it is, and not made editorial changes to content, even in cases where there are clearly errors in a source or in an etymology. Where there are spelling variations, in his definitions or sources, I have retained them. So, for example, we find both Antony and Anthony along with Cleopatra, Friar alongside Fryar, and Cornwal as well as Cornwall. The only name I have altered is that of Ben Jonson (always spelled Johnson by Samuel), where I have used the modern spelling to avoid confusion in cases where a quote is assigned simply to Johnson. Similarly, I have retained Johnson's variants in describing his sources – for example, sometimes referring to PARADISE LOST and sometimes to MILTON'S PARADISE LOST. However, I have expanded the abbreviations used in identifying the authors of quotations, whose names were often arbitrarily and sometimes heavily truncated to make them fit into the printed line. Shakespeare, for example, is often abbreviated to Shakesp, Shak, Sh and even S in the Dictionary, but in the interests of clarity the name is given in full in this anthology. Similarly, abbreviated words in titles of sources have also been expanded.

Punctuation and spelling in all entries (as well as in the Plan and Preface) are as in the original work, with just one exception. In the case of 'Saxon' words in etymologies, I have replaced Old English letters wynn and yogh by w and g respectively. I have kept his long dash (—) to show a switch between characters in a quotation from a play. I have silently corrected a few obvious typographical errors of spacing and punctuation, such as Thosepeople in antipodes, and incorporated any such changes when these were made in the fourth edition of 1773. I have retained Johnson's use of italic capitals in headwords to mark a word he considers foreign (Plan), but not distinguished between headwords printed in large vs. small capitals.

It has often been said that Johnson's Dictionary is not one dictionary but two, for many additions, deletions, and alterations were made in preparing the fourth edition. I have therefore systematically included all fourth-edition changes made to the selection of entries included in this anthology, and these are described in the Notes. For a full appreciation of Johnson's method it is important to read them, for they illustrate his continued interest in the Dictionary and his obsessive search for the perfection that he knew would ever evade him.

Notes

1. There are 42,733 entries in the first edition and 43,279 in the fourth.
2. Only two of his personal definitions seem to have caused Johnson any trouble. The story of excise is told by Boswell (see note 11 to p. xlii). And Johnson's view of a pension as 'pay given to a state hireling for treason to his country' was the source of much merriment, some quite vindictive, when he accepted just such a pension (of £300) from the king in 1762. All quotations from Boswell's The Life of Samuel Johnson, LL.D., 4 vols. (1826).
3. Of special interest is X, where he says there are no words in the language beginning with this letter. In fact there are over thirty words recorded in the Oxford English Dictionary as having occurred in English before Johnson's time, several of which were in use in his century. They are mainly technical – such as xebec, xenodochium, xerasia, xerophagy, xiphias, xoanon, xyphoid, xystus – apart from Xmas.

4. In fact there are a few references to Middle English, as in the references to Chaucer at braid, drotchel and glitterand.
5. On the 'OED', as it is popularly known, see p. xxviii.
6. The source for many entries is given simply as Dict. (=Dictionaries), which most often seems to mean Nathan Bailey's Universal Etymological English Dictionary, first published in 1723. There were many later editions, including a 1736 revision which was the one Johnson used.

8. The first and fourth editions are available on CD-ROM, in an edition prepared by Anne McDermott and published by Cambridge University Press in 1996 – an invaluable aid in the preparation of the present anthology.
9. This is my numeration: the pages of the Dictionary are not numbered sequentially.

Samuel Johnson

Samuel Johnson was born at Lichfield, in Staffordshire, on the 18th of September, N. S.<sup>1</sup> 1709; and his initiation into the Christian church was not delayed; for his baptism is recorded, in the register of St. Mary's parish in that city, to have been performed on the day of his birth . . .

Thus James Boswell opens his account of the life of Johnson, one of the most dominant literary figures of the eighteenth century. The son of a provincial bookseller and stationer, he was one of two children: there was a younger brother Nathanael, who died at the age of twenty-five. A physical condition early affected him, as Boswell goes on to report:

Young Johnson had the misfortune to be much afflicted with the scrophula,<sup>2</sup> or king's evil, which disfigured a countenance naturally well formed, and hurt his visual nerves so much, that he did not see at all with one of his eyes, though its appearance was little different from that of the other. There is amongst his prayers one inscribed "When my EYE was restored to its use," which ascertains a defect that many of his friends knew he had, though I never perceived it.

He attended school in Lichfield until he was fifteen, spent a year at a school in Stourbridge, then stayed at home for two years. Boswell, in his opening chapter, takes up the story:

The two years which he spent at home, after his return from Stourbridge, he passed in what he thought idleness, and was scolded by his father for his want of steady application. He had no settled plan of life, nor looked forward at all, but merely lived from day to day. Yet he read a great deal in a desultory manner, without any scheme of study; as chance threw books in his way, and inclination directed him through them.

There is an illustration:

He used to mention one curious instance of his casual reading, when but a boy. Having imagined that his brother had hid some apples behind a large folio upon an upper shelf in his father's shop, he climbed up to search for them. There were no apples; but the large folio proved to be Petrarch, whom he had seen mentioned, in some preface, as one of the restorers of learning. His curiosity having been thus excited, he sat down with avidity, and read a great part of the book.

This was evidently not the only occasion:

What he read during these two years, he told me, was not works of mere amusement, "not voyages and travels, but all literature, Sir, all ancient writers, all manly: though but little Greek, only some of Anacreon and Hesiod: but in this irregular manner (added he) I had looked into a great many books, which were not commonly known at the Universities, where they seldom read any books but what are put into their hands by their tutors; so that when I came to Oxford, Dr. Adams, now master of Pembroke College, told me, I was the best qualified for the University that he had ever known come there."

Dr Percy, the Bishop of Dromore, told Boswell another story:

[W]hen a boy he was immoderately fond of reading romances of chivalry, and he retained his fondness for them through life; so that (adds his lordship) spending part of a summer at my parsonage-house in the country, he chose for his regular reading the old Spanish romance of FELIXMARTE OF HIRCANIA, in folio, which he read quite through. Yet I have heard him attribute to these extravagant fictions that unsettled turn of mind which prevented his ever fixing in any profession.

There are several anecdotes concerning his prodigious memory:

He was uncommonly inquisitive; and his memory was so tenacious, that he never forgot any thing that he either heard or read. Mr. Hector remembers having recited to him eighteen verses, which, after a little pause, he repeated verbatim, varying only one epithet, by which he improved the line.

Johnson went up to Pembroke College, Oxford, when he was nineteen, in October 1728, but was unable to complete his degree. Although his father had earlier been successful in his business, he lost most of his wealth after a failed venture in the manufacture of parchment, and was no longer able to support his son. Johnson was forced to leave Oxford in 1731, and the next year obtained employment as usher in the school at Market Bosworth, in Leicestershire. However, according to Boswell, he found the repetitive daily routine of the school 'painful drudgery', and left after a few months. He then spent some time with Thomas Warren, the first bookseller to be established in Birmingham. Warren found the young man a great help, both for his knowledge of literature and for his writing ability, and Johnson was able to contribute items to Warren's newspaper.

Johnson returned home in 1734. He married a much older woman – a widow, Elisabeth Porter – then set up a private academy at Edial, near Lichfield, where one of his pupils was David Garrick, later a Shakespearian actor. But within two years he had decided to move to London. There he began to write for the Gentleman's Magazine, and regular contributions to it became his main source of income. He also worked on the book catalogue for the Earl of Oxford's Harleian Library. Copyright problems prevented him from proceeding with an edition of Shakespeare, so he turned instead to lexicography. He was already familiar with dictionary-writing, having helped his friend Robert James compile his Medicinal Dictionary (1743–5). He also knew the work of Denis Diderot and the French encyclopedists, who were compiling their Encyclopédie at the time.

He produced a 'Short Scheme for compiling a new Dictionary of the English Language' on 30 April 1746, and on 18 June signed a contract with a consortium of booksellers (see p. xxx). Work began immediately: the first of his amanuenses, Francis Stewart, was paid an advance of three guineas, and began work on midsummer day. An elaborated plan of the dictionary appeared the following year (see 'Plan', pp. 3–19). Johnson approached Lord Chesterfield, secretary of state, as a patron, but received little support from him, so when Chesterfield sent two eulogistic but condescending papers to the World<sup>3</sup> at the end of 1754, a few months before the Dictionary's publication, Johnson responded with a letter which has become renowned for its scornful rejection of their content (pp. xxxvii–xxxviii).

The work had occupied seven years, with little financial support other than the booksellers' advance. It took Johnson some three years to read his source works and mark the citations to be used. He underlined the word to be illustrated and wrote its initial letter as a capital in the margin. The beginning and end of the extract were identified using vertical strokes. These were then copied by his amanuenses on to slips of paper and filed alphabetically. Only after all slips were collated did he begin to draft definitions. Definitions and quotations were then pasted on to large sheets of paper, and these were sent for printing.

The first seventy sheets (A to Carry) were printed by the end of 1750, and further sections were slowly printed over the next three years. He was perhaps surprised by the amount of space the entries took: letter A comprises 137 folio pages (40 × 25 cm), and by the end of letter C the book had reached 477 pages – 43 per cent of the first volume.<sup>4</sup> At that rate the whole dictionary would have made three or four folio volumes. Later letters show greater economy in coverage and treatment. Even so, the two volumes together comprise 2,261 pages, exclusive of the 51 pages of preliminary matter (the Preface, an outline History of the English Language and an outline Grammar).

The work was complete by 1754, and an edition of 2,000 copies appeared on 15 April 1755, priced £4. 10s. A few weeks later there was a second edition, published in 165 weekly sections at sixpence each. A third edition of 1,024 copies was published in 1765, to coincide with Johnson's edition of Shakespeare. And in 1771 he began a major revision of the work, which was published as the fourth edition in 1773. Other editions followed after his death. The work dominated British lexicography for over a century, continuing to be reprinted until the 1880s. It only began to lose its authority with the arrival of the 'new' English dictionary, edited by James Murray, the first part published in 1884, and the forerunner of the present-day Oxford English Dictionary.

Although the Dictionary took up an enormous amount of time and energy, Johnson nonetheless managed to continue with his literary work. Indeed, creative writing proved a welcome relief. In 1750, as Boswell put it, 'he came forth in the character for which he was eminently qualified, a majestick teacher of moral and religious wisdom', introducing a periodical which he named The Rambler. He published it without interruption every Tuesday and Saturday for two years, until it closed, on Saturday 17 March 1752. It was the day which also saw the death of his wife.

After the Dictionary was published, Johnson continued as a literary journalist, and received financial security from a pension granted by George III. He met his biographer, James Boswell, in 1763, and in 1764 founded the Literary Club, where many of his famous conversations took place. Later major works include the eight-volume edition of Shakespeare's plays and a ten-volume Lives of the Most Eminent English Poets.

In June 1783 he suffered a stroke, which temporarily robbed him of his speech but left him able to write. A letter he wrote to Harriet Thrale three days later (19 June) reports the event, incidentally including a typically Johnsonian procedure:

On Monday, the 16th, I sat for my picture, and walked a considerable way with little inconvenience. In the afternoon and evening I felt myself light and easy, and began to plan schemes of life. Thus I went to bed, and in a short time waked and sat up, as has long been my custom, when I felt a confusion and indistinctness in my head, which lasted, I suppose, about half a minute. I was alarmed, and prayed GOD, that however he might afflict my body, he would spare my understanding.

This prayer, that I might try the integrity of my faculties, I made in Latin verse. The lines were not very good, but I knew them not to be very good: I made them easily, and concluded myself to be unimpaired in my faculties.

He died on 13 December 1784, and was buried a week later in Westminster Abbey.

He had received a master of arts degree from Oxford in 1754, and was granted an honorary doctorate by Trinity College Dublin in 1765, and another doctorate by Oxford in 1775. Thus he received the title by which he has come to be most widely known: Dr Johnson. But perhaps, for the present book, it is more fitting to refer to him by the other name which he received at the time: Dictionary Johnson.

Notes

1. N.S. is 'New Style', according to the Gregorian Calendar, adopted 1752.
2. Scrofula, in its modern spelling, is a tuberculous skin disease affecting the lymph nodes of the neck and certain other parts of the body, causing inflammation and sores which can leave scars.
3. The World was a weekly periodical, published between 1753 and 1757, devoted to satirizing fashionable society.

James Boswell's account of the Dictionary project

But the year 1747 is distinguished as the epoch, when Johnson's arduous and important work, his DICTIONARY OF THE ENGLISH LANGUAGE, was announced to the world, by the publication of its Plan or Prospectus.

How long this immense undertaking had been the object of his contemplation, I do not know. I once asked him by what means he had attained to that astonishing knowledge of our language, by which he was enabled to realise a design of such extent and accumulated difficulty. He told me, that "it was not the effect of particular study; but that it had grown up in his mind insensibly." I have been informed by Mr. James Dodsley, that several years before this period, when Johnson was one day sitting in his brother Robert's shop, he heard his brother suggest to him that a Dictionary of the English Language would be a work that would be well received by the publick; that Johnson seemed at first to catch at the proposition, but, after a pause, said, in his abrupt decisive manner, "I believe I shall not undertake it." That he, however, had bestowed much thought upon the subject, before he published his "Plan," is evident from the enlarged, clear, and accurate views which it exhibits; and we find him mentioning in that tract, that many of the writers whose testimonies were to be produced as authorities, were selected by Pope; which proves that he had been furnished, probably by Mr. Robert Dodsley, with whatever hints that eminent poet had contributed towards a great literary project, that had been the subject of important consideration in a former reign.

The booksellers who contracted with Johnson, single and unaided, for the execution of a work, which in other countries has not been effected but by the co-operating exertions of many, were Mr. Robert Dodsley, Mr. Charles Hitch, Mr. Andrew Millar, the two Messieurs Longman, and the two Messieurs Knapton. The price stipulated was 1575*l*.

The "Plan" was addressed to Philip Dormer, Earl of Chesterfield, then one of his Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State; a nobleman who was very ambitious of literary distinction, and who, upon being informed of the design, had expressed himself in terms very favourable to its success. There is, perhaps, in every thing of any consequence, a secret history which it would be amusing to know, could we have it authentically communicated. Johnson told me, "Sir, the way in which the plan of my Dictionary came to be inscribed to Lord Chesterfield, was this: I had neglected to write it by the time appointed. Dodsley suggested a desire to have it addressed to Lord Chesterfield. I laid hold of this as a pretext for delay, that it might be better done, and let Dodsley have his desire. I said to my friend, Dr. Bathurst, 'Now if any good comes of my addressing to Lord Chesterfield, it will be ascribed to deep policy, when, in fact, it was only a casual excuse for laziness.'"

It is worthy of observation, that the "Plan" has not only the substantial merit of comprehension, perspicuity, and precision, but that the language of it is unexceptionably excellent; it being altogether free from that inflation of style, and those uncommon but apt and energetick words, which in some of his writings have been censured, with more petulance than justice; and never was there a more dignified strain of compliment than that in which he courts the attention of one who, he had been persuaded to believe would be a respectable patron.

"With regard to questions of purity or propriety (says he), I was once in doubt whether I should not attribute to myself too much in attempting to decide them, and whether my province was to extend beyond the proposition of the question, and the display of the suffrages on each side; but I have been since determined by your Lordship's opinion, to interpose my own judgement, and shall therefore endeavour to support what appears to me most consonant to grammar and reason. Ausonius thought that modesty forbad him to plead inability for a task to which Cæsar had judged him equal:

And I may hope, my Lord, that since you, whose authority in our language is so generally acknowledged, have commissioned me to declare my own opinion, I shall be considered as exercising a kind of vicarious jurisdiction; and that the power which might have been denied to my own claim, will be readily allowed me as the delegate of your Lordship."

This passage proves, that Johnson's addressing his "Plan" to Lord Chesterfield was not merely in consequence of the result of a report by means of Dodsley, that the Earl favoured the design; but that there had been a particular communication with his Lordship concerning it. Dr. Taylor told me, that Johnson sent his "Plan" to him in manuscript for his perusal: and that when it was lying upon his table, Mr. William Whitehead happened to pay him a visit, and being shewn it, was highly pleased with such parts of it as he had time to read, and begged to take it home with him, which he was allowed to do; that from him it got into the hands of a noble Lord, who carried it to Lord Chesterfield. When Taylor observed this might be an advantage, Johnson replied, "No, Sir, it would have come out with more bloom, if it had not been seen before by any body."

The opinion conceived of it by another noble authour, appears from the following extract of a letter from the Earl of Orrery to Dr. Birch:

"Caledon, Dec. 30, 1747.

"I HAVE just now seen the specimen of Mr. Johnson's Dictionary, addressed to Lord Chesterfield. I am much pleased with the plan, and I think the specimen is one of the best that I have ever read. Most specimens disgust, rather than prejudice us in favour of the work to follow; but the language of Mr. Johnson's is good, and the arguments are properly and modestly expressed. However, some expressions may be cavilled at, but they are trifles. I'll mention one: the barren laurel. The laurel is not barren, in any sense whatever; it bears fruits and flowers. Sed hæ sunt nugæ,<sup>3</sup> and I have great expectations from the performance."

1748

That he was fully aware of the arduous nature of the undertaking, he acknowledges; and shews himself perfectly sensible of it in the conclusion of his "Plan;" but he had a noble consciousness of his own abilities, which enabled him to go on with undaunted spirit.

Dr. Adams found him one day busy at his Dictionary, when the following dialogue ensued. ADAMS: This is a great work, Sir. How are you to get all the etymologies? JOHNSON: Why, Sir, here is a shelf with Junius, and Skinner, and others; and there is a Welsh gentleman who has published a collection of Welsh proverbs, who will help me with the Welsh. ADAMS: But, Sir, how can you do this in three years? JOHNSON: Sir, I have no doubt that I can do it in three years. ADAMS: But the French Academy, which consists of forty members, took forty years to compile their Dictionary. JOHNSON: Sir, thus it is. This is the proportion. Let me see; forty times forty is sixteen hundred. As three to sixteen hundred, so is the proportion of an Englishman to a Frenchman." With so much ease and pleasantry could he talk of that prodigious labour which he had undertaken to execute.<sup>4</sup>

done in this country by prior Lexicographers; and no doubt Johnson was wise to avail himself of them, so far as they went; but the learned, yet judicious research of etymology, the various, yet accurate display of definition, and the rich collection of authorities, were reserved for the superiour mind of our great philologist. For the mechanical part he employed, as he told me, six amanuenses; and let it be remembered by the natives of North Britain, to whom he is supposed to have been so hostile, that five of them were of that country. There were two Messieurs Macbean; Mr. Shiels, who we shall hereafter see partly wrote the Lives of the Poets to which the name of [Colley] Cibber is affixed; Mr. Stewart, son of Mr. George Stewart, bookseller at Edinburgh; and a Mr. Maitland. The sixth of these humble assistants was Mr. Peyton, who, I believe, taught French, and published some elementary tracts.

To all these painful labourers, Johnson shewed a never-ceasing kindness, so far as they stood in need of it. The elder Mr. Macbean had afterwards the honour of being Librarian to Archibald, Duke of Argyle, for many years, but was left without a shilling. Johnson wrote for him a Preface to, "A System of Ancient Geography;" and, by the favour of Lord Thurlow, got him admitted a poor brother of the Charter-house. For Shiels, who died of a consumption, he had much tenderness; and it has been thought that some choice sentences in the Lives of the Poets were supplied by him. Peyton, when reduced to penury, had frequent aid from the bounty of Johnson, who at last was at the expense of burying him and his wife.

While the Dictionary was going forward, Johnson lived part of the time in Holborn, part in Gough-square, Fleet-street; and he had an upper room fitted up like a counting-house for the purpose, in which he gave to the copyists their several tasks. The words, partly taken from other dictionaries, and partly supplied by himself, having been first written down with spaces left between them, he delivered in writing their etymologies, definitions, and various significations. The authorities were copied from the books themselves, in which he had marked the passages with a black-lead pencil, the traces of which could easily be effaced. I have seen several of them, in which that trouble had not been taken; so that they were just as when used by the copyists. It is remarkable, that he was so attentive in the choice of the passages in which words are authorized, that one may read page after page of his Dictionary with improvement and pleasure; and it should not pass unobserved, that he has quoted no authour whose writings had a tendency to hurt sound religion and morality.

The necessary expense of preparing a work of such magnitude for the press, must have been a considerable deduction from the price stipulated to be paid for the copyright. I understand that nothing was allowed by the booksellers on that account; and I remember his telling me, that a large portion of it having, by mistake, been written upon both sides of the paper, so as to be inconvenient for the compositor, it cost him twenty pounds to have it transcribed upon one side only.

He is now to be considered as "tugging at his oar," as engaged in a steady continued course of occupation, sufficient to employ all his time for some years; and which was the best preventive of that constitutional melancholy which was ever lurking about him, ready to trouble his quiet. But his enlarged and lively mind could not be satisfied without more diversity of employment, and the pleasure of animated relaxation. He therefore not only exerted his talents in occasional composition, very different from Lexicography, but formed a club in Ivy-lane, Paternoster-row, with a view to enjoy literary discussion, and amuse his evening hours . . .

The Dictionary, we may believe, afforded Johnson full occupation this year. As it approached to its conclusion, he probably worked with redoubled vigour, as seamen increase their exertion and alacrity when they have a near prospect of their haven.

Lord Chesterfield, to whom Johnson had paid the high compliment of addressing to his Lordship the Plan of his Dictionary, had behaved to him in such a manner as to excite his contempt and indignation. The world has been for many years amused with a story confidently told, and as confidently repeated with additional circumstances, that a sudden disgust was taken by Johnson upon occasion of his having been one day kept long in waiting in his Lordship's antechamber, for which the reason assigned was, that he had company with him; and that at last, when the door opened, out walked Colley Cibber; and that Johnson was so violently provoked when he found for whom he had been so long excluded, that he went away in a passion, and never would return. I remember having mentioned this story to George Lord Lyttelton, who told me, he was very intimate with Lord Chesterfield; and holding it as a well-known truth, defended Lord Chesterfield by saying, that "Cibber, who had been introduced familiarly by the back-stairs, had probably not been there above ten minutes." It may seem strange even to entertain a doubt concerning a story so long and so widely current, and thus implicitly adopted, if not sanctioned, by the authority which I have mentioned; but Johnson himself assured me, that there was not the least foundation for it. He told me, that there never was any particular incident which produced a quarrel between Lord Chesterfield and him; but that his Lordship's continued neglect was the reason why he resolved to have no connexion with him. When the Dictionary was upon the eve of publication, Lord Chesterfield, who, it is said, had flattered himself with expectations that Johnson would dedicate the work to him, attempted, in a courtly manner, to soothe and insinuate himself with the Sage, conscious, as it should seem, of the cold indifference with which he had treated its learned authour; and farther attempted to conciliate him, by writing two papers in "The World," in recommendation of the work; and it must be confessed, that they contain some studied compliments, so finely turned, that if there had been no previous offence, it is probable that Johnson would have been highly delighted. Praise, in general, was pleasing to him; but by praise from a man of rank and elegant accomplishments, he was peculiarly gratified.

His lordship says, "I think the publick in general, and the republick of letters in particular, are greatly obliged to Mr. Johnson, for having undertaken, and executed so great and desirable a work. Perfection is not to be expected from man; but if we are to judge by the various works of Johnson already published, we have good reason to believe, that he will bring this as near to perfection as any man could do. The Plan of it, which he published some years ago, seems to me to be a proof of it. Nothing can be more rationally imagined, or more accurately and elegantly expressed. I therefore recommend the previous perusal of it to all those who intend to buy the Dictionary, and who, I suppose, are all those who can afford it."

"It must be owned, that our language is, at present, in a state of anarchy, and hitherto, perhaps, it may not have been the worse for it. During our free and open trade, many words and expressions have been imported, adopted, and naturalized from other languages, which have greatly enriched our own. Let it still preserve what real strength and beauty it may have borrowed from others; but let it not, like the Tarpeian maid, be overwhelmed and crushed by unnecessary ornaments. The time for discrimination seems to be now come. Toleration, adoption, and naturalization have run their lengths. Good order and authority are now necessary. But where shall we find them, and, at the same time, the obedience due to them? We must have recourse to the old Roman expedient in times of confusion, and choose a dictator. Upon this principle, I give my vote for Mr. Johnson to fill that great and arduous post. And I hereby declare, that I make a total surrender of all my rights and privileges in the English language, as a free-born British subject, to the said Mr. Johnson, during the term of his dictatorship. Nay more, I will not only obey him like an old Roman, as my dictator, but, like a modern Roman, I will implicitly believe in him as my Pope, and hold him to be infallible while in the chair, but no longer. More than this he cannot well require; for, I presume, that obedience can never be expected, where there is neither terrour to enforce, nor interest to invite it."

"But a Grammar, a Dictionary, and a History of our Language through its several stages, were still wanting at home, and importunately called for from abroad. Mr. Johnson's labours will now, I dare say, very fully supply that want, and greatly contribute to the farther spreading of our language in other countries. Learners were discouraged, by finding no standard to resort to; and, consequently, thought it incapable of any. They will now be undeceived and encouraged."

This courtly device failed of its effect. Johnson, who thought that "all was false and hollow," despised the honeyed words, and was even indignant that Lord Chesterfield should, for a moment, imagine, that he could be the dupe of such an artifice. His expression to me concerning Lord Chesterfield, upon this occasion, was, "Sir, after making great professions, he had, for many years, taken no notice of me; but when my Dictionary was coming out, he fell a scribbling in 'The World' about it. Upon which, I wrote him a letter expressed in civil terms, but such as might shew him that I did not mind what he said or wrote, and that I had done with him."

This is that celebrated letter of which so much has been said, and about which curiosity has been so long excited, without being gratified. I for many years solicited Johnson to favour me with a copy of it, that so excellent a composition might not be lost to posterity. He delayed from time to time to give it me;<sup>5</sup> till at last in 1781, when we were on a visit at Mr. Dilly's, at Southill in Bedfordshire, he was pleased to dictate it to me from memory. He afterwards found among his papers a copy of it, which he had dictated to Mr. Baretto, with its title and corrections, in his own hand-writing. This he gave to Mr. Langton; adding, that if it were to come into print, he wished it to be from that copy. By Mr. Langton's kindness, I am enabled to enrich my work with a perfect transcript of what the world has so eagerly desired to see.

“TO THE RIGHT HONOURABLE THE EARL OF CHESTERFIELD.

February 7, 1755.

“MY LORD,

“I HAVE been lately informed, by the proprietor of the World, that two papers, in which my Dictionary is recommended to the publick, were written by your Lordship. To be so distinguished, is an honour, which, being very little accustomed to favours from the great, I know not well how to receive, or in what terms to acknowledge.

“When, upon some slight encouragement, I first visited your Lordship, I was overpowered, like the rest of mankind, by the enchantment of your address, and could not forbear to wish that I might boast myself Le vainqueur du vainqueur de la terre;<sup>6</sup>—that I might obtain that regard for which I saw the world contending; but I found my attendance so little encouraged, that neither pride nor modesty would suffer me to continue it. When I had once addressed your Lordship in publick, I had exhausted all the art of pleasing which a retired and uncourtly scholar can possess. I had done all that I could; and no man is well pleased to have his all neglected, be it ever so little.

“Seven years, my Lord, have now past, since I waited in your outward rooms, or was repulsed from your door; during which time I have been pushing on my work through difficulties, of which it is useless to complain, and have brought it, at last, to the verge of publication, without one act of assistance,<sup>7</sup> one word of encouragement, or one smile of favour. Such treatment I did not expect, for I never had a Patron before.

“Is not a Patron, my Lord, one who looks with unconcern on a man struggling for life in the water, and, when he has reached ground, encumbers him with help? The notice which you have been pleased to take of my labours, had it been early, had been kind; but it has been delayed till I am indifferent, and cannot enjoy it; till I am solitary, and cannot impart it; till I am known, and do not want it. I hope it is no very cynical asperity not to confess obligations where no benefit has been received, or to be unwilling that the publick should consider me as owing that to a Patron, which Providence has enabled me to do for myself.

“Having carried on my work thus far with so little obligation to any favourer of learning, I shall not be disappointed though I should conclude it, if less be possible, with less; for I have been long wakened from that dream of hope, in which I once boasted myself with so much exultation, my Lord,

“Your Lordship’s most humble
“SAM. JOHNSON.”

“While this was the talk of the town (says Dr. Adams, in a letter to me), I happened to visit Dr. Warburton, who finding that I was acquainted with Johnson, desired me earnestly to carry his compliments to him, and to tell him, that he honoured him for his manly behaviour in rejecting these condescensions of Lord Chesterfield, and for resenting the treatment he had received from him with a proper spirit. Johnson was visibly pleased with this compliment, for he had always a high opinion of Warburton.” Indeed, the force of mind which appeared in this letter, was congenial with that which Warburton himself amply possessed.

There is a curious minute circumstance which struck me, in comparing the various editions of Johnson’s Imitations of Juvenal. In the tenth Satire one of the couplets upon the vanity of wishes even for literary distinction stood thus:

“Yet think what ills the scholar’s life assail, Toil, envy, want, the garret, and the jail.”

But after experiencing the uneasiness which Lord Chesterfield’s fallacious patronage made him feel, he dismissed the word garret from the sad group, and in all the subsequent editions the line stands,

“Toil, envy, want, the Patron, and the jail.”

That Lord Chesterfield must have been mortified by the lofty contempt, and polite, yet keen, satire with which Johnson exhibited him to himself in this letter, it is impossible to doubt. He, however, with that glossy duplicity which was his constant study, affected to be quite unconcerned. Dr. Adams mentioned to Mr. Robert Dodsley that he was sorry Johnson had written his letter to Lord Chesterfield. Dodsley, with the true feelings of trade, said “he was very sorry too; for that he had a property in the Dictionary, to which his Lordship’s patronage might have been of consequence.” He then told Dr. Adams, that Lord Chesterfield had shewn him the letter. “I should have imagined (replied Dr. Adams) that Lord Chesterfield would have concealed it.” “Poh! (said Dodsley) do you think a letter from Johnson could hurt Lord Chesterfield? Not at all, Sir. It lay upon his table, where any body might see it. He read it to me; said, 'this man has great powers,' pointed out the severest passages, and observed how well they were expressed." This air of indifference, which imposed upon the worthy Dodsley, was certainly nothing but a specimen of that dissimulation which Lord Chesterfield inculcated as one of the most essential lessons for the conduct of life. His Lordship endeavoured to justify himself to Dodsley from the charges brought against him by Johnson; but we may judge of the flimsiness of his defence, from his having excused his neglect of Johnson, by saying, "that he had heard he had changed his lodgings, and did not know where he lived;" as if there could have been the smallest difficulty to inform himself of that circumstance, by inquiring in the literary circle with which his Lordship was well acquainted, and was, indeed, himself, one of its ornaments.

Dr. Adams expostulated with Johnson, and suggested, that his not being admitted when he called on him, was probably not to be imputed to Lord Chesterfield; for his Lordship had declared to Dodsley, that "he would have turned off the best servant he ever had if he had known that he denied him to a man who would have been always more than welcome;" and in confirmation of this, he insisted on Lord Chesterfield's general affability and easiness of access, especially to literary men. "Sir (said Johnson), that is not Lord Chesterfield; he is the proudest man this day existing." "No (said Dr. Adams), there is one person, at least, as proud; I think, by your own account you are the prouder man of the two." "But mine (replied Johnson instantly) was defensive pride." This, as Dr. Adams well observed, was one of those happy turns for which he was so remarkably ready.

Johnson having now explicitly avowed his opinion of Lord Chesterfield, did not refrain from expressing himself concerning that nobleman with pointed freedom: "This man (said he) I thought had been a Lord among wits; but, I find, he is only a wit among Lords." And when his Letters to his natural son were published, he observed, that "they teach the morals of a whore, and the manners of a dancing-master."

The character of a "respectable Hottentot," in Lord Chesterfield's letters, has been generally understood to be meant for Johnson, and I have no doubt that it was. But I remember when the Literary Property of those letters were contested in the Court of Session in Scotland, and Mr. Henry Dundas, one of the counsel for the proprietors, read this character as an exhibition of Johnson, Sir David Dalrymple, Lord Hailes, one of the judges, maintained, with some warmth, that it was not intended as a portrait of Johnson, but of a late noble Lord, distinguished for abstruse science. I have heard Johnson himself talk of the character, and say that it was meant for George Lord Lyttelton, in which I could by no means agree; for his Lordship had nothing of that violence which is a conspicuous feature in the composition. Finding that my illustrious friend could bear to have it supposed that it might be meant for him, I said, laughingly, that there was one trait which unquestionably did not belong to him; "he throws his meat any where but down his throat." "Sir (said he), Lord Chesterfield never saw me eat in his life." . . .

The Dictionary, with a Grammar and History of the English Language, being now at length published, in two volumes folio, the world contemplated with wonder so stupendous a work achieved by one man, while other countries had thought such undertakings fit only for whole academies. Vast as his powers were, I cannot but think that his imagination deceived him, when he supposed that by constant application he might have performed the task in three years. Let the Preface be attentively perused, in which is given, in a clear, strong, and glowing style, a comprehensive, yet particular view of what he had done; and it will be evident, that the time he employed upon it was comparatively short. I am unwilling to swell my book with long quotations from what is in every body's hands, and I believe there are few prose compositions in the English language that are read with more delight, or are more impressed upon the memory, than that preliminary discourse. One of its excellencies has always struck me with peculiar admiration; I mean the perspicuity with which he has expressed abstract scientific notions. As an instance of this, I shall quote the following sentence: "When the radical idea branches out into parallel ramifications, how can a consecutive series be formed of senses in their own nature collateral?" We have here an example of what has been often said, and I believe with justice, that there is for every thought a certain nice adaptation of words which none other could equal, and which when a man has been so fortunate as to hit, he has attained, in that particular case, the perfection of language.

The extensive reading which was absolutely necessary for the accumulation of authorities, and which alone may account for Johnson's retentive mind being enriched with a very large and various store of knowledge and imagery, must have occupied several years. The Preface furnishes an eminent instance of a double talent, of which Johnson was fully conscious. Sir Joshua

Reynolds<sup>9</sup> heard him say, "There are two things which I am confident I can do very well: one is an introduction to any literary work, stating what it is to contain, and how it should be executed in the most perfect manner; the other is a conclusion, shewing from various causes why the execution has not been equal to what the authour promised to himself and to the publick."

How should puny scribblers be abashed and disappointed, when they find him displaying a perfect theory of lexicographical excellence, yet at the same time candidly and modestly allowing that he "had not satisfied his own expectations." Here was a fair occasion for the exercise of Johnson's modesty, when he was called upon to compare his own arduous performance, not with those of other individuals (in which case his inflexible regard to truth would have been violated had he affected diffidence), but with speculative perfection; as he, who can outstrip all his competitors in the race, may yet be sensible of his deficiency when he runs against time. Well might he say, that "the English Dictionary was written with little assistance of the learned;" for he told me, that the only aid which he received was a paper containing twenty etymologies, sent to him by a person then unknown, who he was afterwards informed was Dr. Pearce, Bishop of Rochester. The etymologies, though they exhibit learning and judgement, are not, I think, entitled to the first praise amongst the various parts of this immense work. The definitions have always appeared to me such astonishing proofs of acuteness of intellect and precision of language, as indicate a genius of the highest rank. This it is which marks the superiour excellence of Johnson's Dictionary over others equally or even more voluminous, and must have made it a work of much greater mental labour than mere Lexicons, or Word-Books, as the Dutch call them. They, who will make the experiment of trying how they can define a few words of whatever nature, will soon be satisfied of the unquestionable justice of this observation, which I can assure my readers is founded upon much study, and upon communication with more minds than my own.

A few of his definitions must be admitted to be erroneous. Thus, Windward and Leeward, though directly of opposite meaning, are defined identically the same way,<sup>10</sup> as to which inconsiderable specks it is enough to observe, that his Preface announces that he was aware there might be many such in so immense a work; nor was he at all disconcerted when an instance was pointed out to him. A lady once asked him how he came to define Pastern the knee of a horse: instead of making an elaborate defence, as she expected, he at once answered, "Ignorance, Madam, pure ignorance." His definition of Network has been often quoted with sportive malignity, as obscuring a thing in itself very plain. But to these frivolous censures no other answer is necessary than that with which we are furnished by his own Preface. "To explain, requires the use of terms less abstruse than that which is to be explained, and such terms cannot always be found. For as nothing can be proved but by supposing something intuitively known, and evident without proof, so nothing can be defined but by the use of words too plain to admit of definition. Sometimes easier words are changed into harder; as, burial, into sepulture or interment; dry, into desiccative; dryness, into siccity, or aridity; fit, into paroxysm; for, the easiest word, whatever it be, can never be translated into one more easy."

His introducing his own opinions, and even prejudices, under general definitions of words, while at the same time the original meaning of the words is not explained, as his Tory, Whig, Pension, Oats, Excise,<sup>11</sup> and a few more, cannot be fully defended, and must be placed to the account of capricious and humourous indulgence. Talking to me upon this subject when we were at Ashbourne in 1777, he mentioned a still stronger instance of the predominance of his private feelings in the composition of this work, than any now to be found in it. "You know, Sir, Lord Gower forsook the old Jacobite interest. When I came to the word Renegado, after telling that it meant 'one who deserts to the enemy, a revolter,' I added, Sometimes we say a GOWER. Thus it went to the press: but the printer had more wit than I, and struck it out."

Let it, however, be remembered, that this indulgence does not display itself only in sarcasm towards others, but sometimes in playful allusion to the notions commonly entertained of his own laborious task. Thus; "Grub-street, the name of a street in London, much inhabited by writers of small histories, dictionaries, and temporary poems; whence any mean production is called Grub-street."—"Lexicographer, a writer of dictionaries, a harmless drudge."

At the time when he was concluding his very eloquent Preface, Johnson's mind appears to have been in such a state of depression, that we cannot contemplate without wonder the vigorous and splendid thoughts which so highly distinguish that performance. "I (says he) may surely be contented without the praise of perfection, which if I could obtain in this gloom of solitude, what would it avail me? I have protracted my work till most of those whom I wished to please have sunk into the grave; and success and miscarriage are empty sounds. I therefore dismiss it with frigid tranquillity, having little to fear or hope from censure or from praise." That this indifference was rather a temporary than an habitual feeling, appears, I think, from his letters to Mr. Warton; and however he may have been affected for the moment, certain it is that the honours which his great work procured him, both at home and abroad, were very grateful to him. His friend the Earl of Corke and Orrery, being at Florence, presented it to the Accademia della Crusca. That Academy sent Johnson their Vocabulario, and the French Academy sent him their Dictionnaire, which Mr. Langton had the pleasure to convey to him.

It must undoubtedly seem strange, that the conclusion of his Preface should be expressed in terms so desponding, when it is considered that the authour was then only in his forty-sixth year. But we must ascribe its gloom to that miserable dejection of spirits to which he was constitutionally subject, and which was aggravated by the death of his wife two years before. I have heard it ingeniously observed by a lady of rank and elegance, that "his melancholy was then at its meridian." It pleased GOD to grant him almost thirty years of life after this time; and once when he was in a placid frame of mind, he was obliged to own to me that he had enjoyed happier days, and had many more friends, since that gloomy hour, than before . . .

1756

In 1756 Johnson found that the great fame of his Dictionary had not set him above the necessity of "making provision for the day that was passing over him." No royal or noble patron extended a munificent hand to give independence to the man who had conferred stability on the language of his country. We may feel indignant that there should have been such unworthy neglect; but we must, at the same time, congratulate ourselves, when we consider, that to this very neglect, operating to rouse the natural indolence of his constitution, we owe many valuable productions, which otherwise, perhaps, might never have appeared.

He had spent, during the progress of the work, the money for which he had contracted to write his Dictionary. We have seen that the reward of his labour was only fifteen hundred and seventy-five pounds; and when the expense of amanuenses and paper, and other articles, are deducted, his clear profit was very inconsiderable. I once said to him, "I am sorry, Sir, you did not get more for your Dictionary." His answer was, "I am sorry too. But it was very well. The booksellers are generous liberal-minded men." He, upon all occasions, did ample justice to their character in this respect. He considered them as the patrons of literature; and, indeed, although they have eventually been considerable gainers by his Dictionary, it is to them that we owe its having been undertaken and carried through at the risk of great expense, for they were not absolutely sure of being indemnified.

Notes

1. These extracts are taken from Boswell's Life of Johnson, for the stated years.
2. 'Why should I deny possession of that which he believes me to possess?' (Ausonius, Praefatiunculae, sect. 1).
3. But these are trifles.
4. David Garrick later wrote a complimentary epigram 'On Johnson's Dictionary':

Talk of war with a Briton, he'll boldly advance,
That one English soldier will beat ten of France;
Would we alter the boast from the sword to the pen,
Our odds are still greater, still greater our men;
In the deep mines of science though Frenchmen may toil,
Can their strength be compar'd to Locke, Newton, and Boyle?
Let them rally their heroes, send forth all their pow'rs,
Their verse-men and prose-men, then match them with ours!
First Shakspeare and Milton, like Gods in the fight,
Have put their whole drama and epick to flight;
In satires, epistles, and odes, would they cope,
Their numbers retreat before Dryden and Pope;
And Johnson, well-arm'd like a hero of yore,
Has beat forty French, and will beat forty more!

5. Boswell's footnote at this point:

Dr. Johnson appeared to have had a remarkable delicacy with respect to the circulation of this letter; for Dr. Douglas, Bishop of Salisbury, informs me, that having many years ago pressed him to be allowed to read it to the second Lord Hardwicke, who was very desirous to hear it (promising at the same time, that no copy of it should be taken), Johnson seemed much pleased that it had attracted the attention of a nobleman of such a respectable character; but, after pausing some time, declined to comply with the request, saying, with a smile, "No, Sir; I have hurt the dog too much already;" or words to that purpose.

The following note is subjoined by Mr. Langton. "Dr. Johnson, when he gave me this copy of his letter, desired that I would annex to it his information to me, that whereas it is said in the letter that 'no assistance has been received,' he did once receive from Lord Chesterfield the sum of 10*l.*, but as that was so inconsiderable a sum, he thought the mention of it could not properly find a place in a letter of the kind that this was."

10. Boswell adds a remark from the music historian Charles Burney: 'He owns in his Preface the deficiency of the technical part of his work; and he said, he should be much obliged to me for definitions of musical terms for his next edition, which he did not live to superintend.'

11. Boswell's footnote:

He thus defines Excise—"A hateful tax levied upon commodities, and adjudged not by the common judges of property, but wretches hired by those to whom Excise is paid." The Commissioners of Excise being offended by this severe reflection, consulted Mr. Murray, then Attorney-General, to know whether redress could be legally obtained. I wished to have procured for my readers a copy of the opinion which he gave, and which may now be justly considered as history: but the mysterious secrecy of office it seems would not permit it. I am, however, informed by very good authority, that its import was, that the passage might be considered as actionable; but that it would be more prudent in the board not to prosecute. Johnson never made the smallest alteration in this passage. We find he still retained his early prejudice against Excise; for in "The Idler, No. 65," there is the following very extraordinary paragraph: "The authenticity of Clarendon's history, though printed with the sanction of one of the first Universities of the world, had not an unexpected manuscript been happily discovered, would, with the help of factious credulity, have been brought into question, by the two lowest of all human beings, a Scribbler for a party, and a Commissioner of Excise." The persons to whom he alludes were Mr. John Oldmixon, and George Ducket, Esq.

MDCCXLVII.)

MY LORD,

WHEN first I undertook to write an English Dictionary, I had no expectation of any higher patronage than that of the proprietors of the copy, nor prospect of any other advantage than the price of my labour; I knew, that the work in which I engaged is generally considered as drudgery for the blind, as the proper toil of artless industry; a task that requires neither the light of learning, nor the activity of genius, but may be successfully performed without any higher quality than that of bearing burdens with dull patience, and beating the track of the alphabet with sluggish resolution.

Whether this opinion, so long transmitted and so widely propagated, had its beginning from truth and nature, or from accident and prejudice, whether it be decreed by the authority of reason, or the tyranny of ignorance, that of all the candidates for literary praise, the unhappy lexicographer holds the lowest place, neither vanity nor interest incited me to inquire. It appeared that the province allotted me was of all the regions of learning generally confessed to be the least delightful, that it was believed to produce neither fruits nor flowers, and that after a long and laborious cultivation, not even the barren laurel had been found upon it.

Yet on this province, my Lord, I enter'd with the pleasing hope, that as it was low, it likewise would be safe. I was drawn forward with the prospect of employment, which, tho' not splendid, would be useful; and which tho' it could not make my life envied, would keep it innocent; which would awaken no passion, engage me in no contention, nor throw in my way any temptation to disturb the quiet of others by censure, or my own by flattery.

I had read indeed of times, in which princes and statesmen thought it part of their honour to promote the improvement of their native tongues, and in which dictionaries were written under the protection of greatness.

To the patrons of such undertakings, I willingly paid the homage of believing that they, who were thus solicitous for the perpetuity of their language, had reason to expect that their actions would be celebrated by posterity, and that the eloquence which they promoted would be employed in their praise. But I considered such acts of beneficence as prodigies, recorded rather to raise wonder than expectation; and content with the terms that I had stipulated, had not suffer'd my imagination to flatter me with any other encouragement, when I found that my design had been thought by your Lordship of importance sufficient to attract your favour.

How far this unexpected distinction can be rated among the happy incidents of life, I am not yet able to determine. Its first effect has been to make me anxious lest it should fix the attention of the public<sup>1</sup> too much upon me, and as it once happened to an epic poet of France, by raising the reputation of the attempt, obstruct the reception of the work. I imagine what the world will expect from a scheme, prosecuted under your Lordship's influence, and I know that expectation, when her wings are once expanded, easily reaches heights which performance never will attain, and when she has mounted the summit of perfection, derides her follower, who dies in the pursuit.

Not therefore, to raise expectation, but to repress it, I here lay before your Lordship the plan of my undertaking, that more may not be demanded than I intend; and that before it is too far advanced to be thrown into a new method, I may be advertised of its defects or superfluities. Such informations I may justly hope from the emulation with which those who desire the praise of elegance or discernment must contend in the promotion of a design that you, my Lord, have not thought unworthy to share your attention with treaties and with wars.

In the first attempt to methodise my ideas, I found a difficulty which extended itself to the whole work. It was not easy to determine by what rule of distinction the words of this dictionary were to be chosen. The chief intent of it is to preserve the purity and ascertain the meaning of our English idiom; and this seems to require nothing more than that our language be considered so far as it is our own; that the words and phrases used in the general intercourse of life, or found in the works of those whom we commonly stile polite writers, be selected, without including the terms of particular professions, since, with the arts to which they relate, they are generally derived from other nations, and are very often the same in all the languages of this part of the world. This is perhaps the exact and pure idea of a grammatical dictionary; but in lexicography, as in other arts, naked science is too delicate for the purposes of life. The value of a work must be estimated by its use; it is not enough that a dictionary delights the critic, unless at the same time it instructs the learner; as it is to little purpose, that an engine amuses the philosopher by the subtilty of its mechanism, if it requires so much knowledge in its application as to be of no advantage to the common workman.

The title which I prefix to my work has long conveyed a very miscellaneous idea, and they that take a dictionary into their hands have been accustomed to expect from it, a solution of almost every difficulty. If foreign words therefore were rejected, it could be little regarded, except by critics, or those who aspire to criticism; and however it might enlighten those that write, would be all darkness to them that only read. The unlearned much oftener consult their dictionaries, for the meaning of words, than for their structures or formations; and the words that most want explanation, are generally terms of art, which therefore experience has taught my predecessors to spread with a kind of pompous luxuriance over their productions.

The academicians of France, indeed, rejected terms of science in their first essay, but found afterwards a necessity of relaxing the rigour of their determination; and, tho' they would not naturalize them at once by a single act, permitted them by degrees to settle themselves among the natives, with little opposition, and it would surely be no proof of judgment to imitate them in an error which they have now retracted, and deprive the book of its chief use by scrupulous distinctions.

Of such words however, all are not equally to be considered as parts of our language; for some of them are naturalized and incorporated, but others still continue aliens, and are rather auxiliaries than subjects. This naturalization is produced either by an admission into common speech in some metaphorical signification, which is the acquisition of a kind of property among us; as we say the zenith of advancement, the meridian of life, the †cynosure of neighbouring eyes; or it is the consequence of long intermixture and frequent use, by which the ear is accustomed to the sound of words till their original is forgotten, as in equator, satellites; or of the change of a foreign to an English termination, and a conformity to the laws of the speech into which they are adopted, as in category, cachexy, peripneumony.

Of those which still continue in the state of aliens, and have made no approaches towards assimilation, some seem necessary to be retained, because the purchasers of the dictionary will expect to find them. Such are many words in the common law, as capias, habeas corpus, præmunire, nisi prius: such are some terms of controversial divinity, as hypostasis; and of physick, as the names of diseases; and in general all terms which can be found in books not written professedly upon particular arts, or can be supposed necessary to those who do not regularly study them. Thus when a reader not skilled in physick happens in Milton upon this line,

- - - - pining atrophy,
Marasmus, and wide-wasting pestilence.

he will with equal expectation look into his dictionary for the word marasmus, as for atrophy, or pestilence; and will have reason to complain if he does not find it.

It seems necessary to the completion of a dictionary design'd not merely for critics but for popular use, that it should comprise, in some degree, the peculiar words of every profession; that the terms of war and navigation should be inserted so far as they can be required by readers of travels, and of history; and those of law, merchandise and mechanical trades, so far as they can be supposed useful in the occurrences of common life.

But there ought, however, to be some distinction made between the different classes of words, and therefore it will be proper to print those which are incorporated into the language in the usual character, and those which are still to be considered as foreign, in the Italick letter.

Another question may arise, with regard to appellatives, or the names of species. It seems of no great use to set down the words horse, dog, cat, willow, alder, dasy,<sup>2</sup> rose, and a thousand others, of which it will be hard to give an explanation not more obscure than the word itself. Yet it is to be considered, that, if the names of animals be inserted, we must admit those which are more known, as well as those with which we are, by accident, less acquainted; and if they are all rejected, how will the reader be relieved from difficulties produced by allusions to the crocodile, the camæleon,<sup>3</sup> the ichneumon, and the hyæna? If no plants are to be mentioned, the most pleasing part of nature will be excluded, and many beautiful epithets be unexplained. If only those which are less known are to be mentioned, who shall fix the limits of the reader's learning? The importance of such explications appears from the mistakes which the want of them has occasioned. Had Shakespeare had a dictionary of this kind, he had not made the woodbine entwine the honeysuckle; nor would Milton, with such assistance, have disposed so improperly of his ellops and his scorpion.

Besides, as such words, like others, require that their accents should be settled, their sounds ascertained, and their etymologies deduced, they cannot be properly omitted in the dictionary. And though the explanations of some may be censured as trivial, because they are almost universally understood, and those of others as unnecessary, because they will seldom occur, yet it seems not proper to omit them; since it is rather to be wished that many readers should find more than they expect, than that one should miss what he might hope to find.

When all the words are selected and arranged, the first part of the work to be considered is the ORTHOGRAPHY, which was long vague and uncertain, which at last, when its fluctuation ceased, was in many cases settled but by accident, and in which, according to your Lordship's observation, there is still great uncertainty among the best critics; nor is it easy to state a rule by which we may decide between custom and reason, or between the equiponderant authorities of writers alike eminent for judgment and accuracy.

The great orthographical contest has long subsisted between etymology and pronunciation. It has been demanded, on one hand, that men should write as they speak; but as it has been shewn that this conformity never was attained in any language, and that it is not more easy to persuade men to agree exactly in speaking than in writing, it may be asked with equal propriety, why men do not rather speak as they write. In France, where this controversy was at its greatest height, neither party, however ardent, durst adhere steadily to their own rule; the etymologist was often forced to spell with the people; and the advocate for the authority of pronunciation, found it sometimes deviating so capriciously from the received use of writing, that he was constrained to comply with the rule of his adversaries, lest he should lose the end by the means, and be left alone by following the croud.

When a question of orthography is dubious, that practice has, in my opinion, a claim to preference, which preserves the greatest number of radical letters, or seems most to comply with the general custom of our language. But the chief rule which I propose to follow, is to make no innovation, without a reason sufficient to balance the inconvenience of change; and such reasons I do not expect often to find. All change is of itself an evil, which ought not to be hazarded but for evident advantage; and as inconstancy is in every case a mark of weakness, it will add nothing to the reputation of our tongue. There are, indeed, some who despise the inconveniencies of confusion, who seem to take pleasure in departing from custom, and to think alteration desirable for its own sake; and the reformation of our orthography, which these writers have attempted, should not pass without its due honours, but that I suppose they hold singularity its own reward, or may dread the fascination of lavish praise.

The present usage of spelling, where the present usage can be distinguished, will therefore in this work be generally followed, yet there will be often occasion to observe, that it is in itself inaccurate, and tolerated rather than chosen; particularly, when by the change of one letter, or more, the meaning of a word is obscured, as in farrier for ferrier, as it was formerly written, from ferrum or fer; in gibberish for gebrish, the jargon of Geber and his chymical followers, understood by none but their own tribe. It will be likewise sometimes proper to trace back the orthography of different ages, and shew by what gradations the word departed from its original.

Closely connected with orthography is PRONUNCIATION, the stability of which is of great importance to the duration of a language, because the first change will naturally begin by corruptions in the living speech. The want of certain rules for the pronunciation of former ages, has made us wholly ignorant of the metrical art of our ancient poets; and since those who study their sentiments regret the loss of their numbers, it is surely time to provide that the harmony of the moderns may be more permanent.

A NEW pronunciation will make almost a new speech, and therefore since one great end of this undertaking is to fix the English language, care will be taken to determine the accentuation of all polysyllables by proper authorities, as it is one of those capricious phænomena which cannot be easily reduced to rules. Thus there is no antecedent reason for difference of accent in the two words dolorous and sonorous; yet of the one Milton gives the sound in this line,

He pass'd o'er many a region dolorous, and that of the other in this,

Sonorous metal blowing martial sounds.

It may be likewise proper to remark metrical licences, such as contractions generous, gen'rous; reverend, rev'rend; and coalitions, as region, question.

But it is still more necessary to fix the pronunciation of monosyllables, by placing with them words of correspondent sound, that one may guard the other against the danger of that variation, which to some of the most common, has already happened, so that the words wound, and wind, as they are now frequently pronounced, will not rhyme to sound, and mind. It is to be remarked that many words written alike are differently pronounced, as flow, and brow, which may be thus registered flow, woe, brow, now, or of which the exemplification may be generally given by a distich. Thus the words tear or lacerate, and tear the water of the eye, have the same letters, but may be distinguished thus, tear, dare; tear, peer.

Some words have two sounds, which may be equally admitted, as being equally defensible by authority. Thus great is differently used.

For Swift and him despis'd the farce of state,
The sober follies of the wise and great. POPE.

As if misfortune made the throne her seat,
And none could be unhappy but the great. ROWE.

The care of such minute particulars may be censured as trifling, but these particulars have not been thought unworthy of attention in more polished languages.

The accuracy of the French, in stating the sounds of their letters, is well known; and, among the Italians, Crescembeni has not thought it unnecessary to inform his countrymen of the words, which, in compliance with different rhymes, are allowed to be differently spelt, and of which the number is now so fix'd, that no modern poet is suffered to encrease it.

When the orthography and pronunciation are adjusted, the ETYMOLOGY or DERIVATION is next to be considered, and the words are to be distinguished according to the different classes, whether simple, as day, light, or compound as day-light; whether primitive, as, to act, or derivative, as action, actionable; active, activity. This will much facilitate the attainment of our language, which now stands in our dictionaries a confused heap of words without dependence, and without relation.

When this part of the work is performed, it will be necessary to inquire how our primitives are to be deduced from foreign languages, which may be often very successfully performed by the assistance of our own etymologists. This search will give occasion to many curious disquisitions, and sometimes perhaps to conjectures, which, to readers unacquainted with this kind of study, cannot but appear improbable and capricious. But it may be reasonably imagined, that what is so much in the power of men as language, will very often be capriciously conducted. Nor are these disquisitions and conjectures to be considered altogether as wanton sports of wit, or vain shews of learning; our language is well known not to be primitive or self-originated, but to have adopted words of every generation, and either for the supply of its necessities, or the encrease of its copiousness, to have received additions from very distant regions; so that in search of the progenitors of our speech, we may wander from the tropic to the frozen zone, and find some in the vallies of Palestine and some upon the rocks of Norway.

Beside the derivation of particular words, there is likewise an etymology of phrases. Expressions are often taken from other languages, some apparently, as to run a risque, courir un risque; and some even when we do not seem to borrow their words; thus, to bring about or accomplish, appears an English phrase, but in reality our native word about has no such import, and it is only a French expression, of which we have an example in the common phrase, venir à bout d'une affaire.

In exhibiting the descent of our language, our etymologists seem to have been too lavish of their learning, having traced almost every word through various tongues, only to shew what was shewn sufficiently by the first derivation. This practice is of great use in synoptical lexicons, where mutilated and doubtful languages are explained by their affinity to others more certain and extensive, but is generally superfluous in English etymologies. When the word is easily deduced from a Saxon original, I shall not often enquire further, since we know not the parent of the Saxon dialect, but when it is borrowed from the French, I shall shew whence the French is apparently derived. Where a Saxon root cannot be found, the defect may be supplied from kindred languages, which will be generally furnished with much liberality by the writers of our glossaries; writers who deserve often the highest praise, both of judgment and industry, and may expect at least to be mentioned with honour by me, whom they have freed from the greatest part of a very laborious work, and on whom they have imposed, at worst, only the easy task of rejecting superfluities.

By tracing in this manner every word to its original, and not admitting, but with great caution, any of which no original can be found, we shall secure our language from being over-run with cant, from being crouded with low terms, the spawn of folly or affectation, which arise from no just principles of speech, and of which therefore no legitimate derivation can be shown.

When the etymology is thus adjusted, the ANALOGY of our language is next to be considered; when we have discovered whence our words are derived, we are to examine by what rules they are governed, and how they are inflected through their various terminations. The terminations of the English are few, but those few have hitherto remained unregarded by the writers of our dictionaries. Our substantives are declined only by the plural termination, our adjectives admit no variation but in the degrees of comparison, and our verbs are conjugated by auxiliary words, and are only changed in the preter tense.

To our language may be with great justness applied the observation of Quintilian, that speech was not formed by an analogy sent from heaven. It did not descend to us in a state of uniformity and perfection, but was produced by necessity and enlarged by accident, and is therefore composed of dissimilar parts, thrown together by negligence, by affectation, by learning, or by ignorance.

Our inflections therefore are by no means constant, but admit of numberless irregularities, which in this dictionary will be diligently noted. Thus fox makes in the plural foxes, but ox makes oxen. Sheep is the same in both numbers. Adjectives are sometimes compared by changing the last syllable, as proud, prouder, proudest; and sometimes by particles prefixed, as ambitious, more ambitious, most ambitious. The forms of our verbs are subject to great variety; some end their preter tense in ed, as I love, I loved, I have loved, which may be called the regular form, and is followed by most of our verbs of southern original. But many depart from this rule, without agreeing in any other, as I shake, I shook, I have shaken, or shook, as it is sometimes written in poetry; I make, I made, I have made; I bring, I brought; I wring, I wrung; and many others, which, as they cannot be reduced to rules, must be learned from the dictionary rather than the grammar.

The verbs are likewise to be distinguished according to their qualities, as actives from neuters; the neglect of which has already introduced some barbarities in our conversation, which, if not obviated by just animadversions, may in time creep into our writings.

Thus, my Lord, will our language be laid down, distinct in its minutest subdivisions, and resolved into its elemental principles. And who upon this survey can forbear to wish, that these fundamental atoms of our speech might obtain the firmness and immutability of the primogenial and constituent particles of matter, that they might retain their substance while they alter their appearance, and be varied and compounded, yet not destroyed.

But this is a privilege which words are scarcely to expect; for, like their author, when they are not gaining strength, they are generally losing it. Though art may sometimes prolong their duration, it will rarely give them perpetuity; and their changes will be almost always informing us, that language is the work of man, of a being from whom permanence and stability cannot be derived.

Words having been hitherto considered as separate and unconnected, are now to be likewise examined as they are ranged in their various relations to others by the rules of SYNTAX or construction, to which I do not know that any regard has been yet shewn in English dictionaries, and in which the grammarians can give little assistance. The syntax of this language is too inconstant to be reduced to rules, and can be only learned by the distinct consideration of particular words as they are used by the best authors. Thus, we say, according to the present modes of speech, the soldier died of his wounds, and the sailor perished with hunger; and every man acquainted with our language would be offended by a change of these particles, which yet seem originally assigned by chance, there being no reason to be drawn from grammar why a man may not, with equal propriety, be said to dye with a wound, or perish of hunger.

Our syntax therefore is not to be taught by general rules, but by special precedents; and in examining whether Addison has been with justice accused of a solecism in this passage,

The poor inhabitant—
 Starves in the midst of nature's bounty curst,
 And in the loaden vineyard dies for thirst—

it is not in our power to have recourse to any established laws of speech, but we must remark how the writers of former ages have used the same word, and consider whether he can be acquitted of impropriety, upon the testimony of Davies, given in his favour by a similar passage.

She loaths the watry glass wherein she gaz'd,
 And shuns it still, although for thirst she dye.

When the construction of a word is explained, it is necessary to pursue it through its train of PHRASEOLOGY, through those forms where it is used in a manner peculiar to our language, or in senses not to be comprised in the general explanations; as from the verb make, arise these phrases, to make love, to make an end, to make way; as he made way for his followers, the ship made way before the wind; to make a bed, to make merry, to make a mock, to make presents, to make a doubt, to make out an assertion, to make good a breach, to make good a cause, to make nothing of an attempt, to make lamentation, to make a merit, and many others which will occur in reading with that view, and which only their frequency hinders from being generally remarked.

The great labour is yet to come, the labour of interpreting these words and phrases with brevity, fulness and perspicuity; a task of which the extent and intricacy is sufficiently shown by the miscarriage of those who have generally attempted it. This difficulty is increased by the necessity of explaining the words in the same language, for there is often only one word for one idea; and though it be easy to translate the words bright, sweet, salt, bitter, into another language, it is not easy to explain them.

With regard to the INTERPRETATION many other questions have required consideration. It was some time doubted whether it be necessary to explain the things implied by particular words. As under the term baronet, whether instead of this explanation, a title of honour next in degree to that of baron, it would be better to mention more particularly the creation, privileges and rank of baronets; and whether under the word barometer, instead of being satisfied with observing that it is an instrument to discover the weight of the air, it would be fit to spend a few lines upon its invention, construction and principles. It is not to be expected that with the explanation of the one the herald should be satisfied, or the philosopher with that of the other; but since it will be required by common readers, that the explications should be sufficient for common use, and since without some attention to such demands the dictionary cannot become generally valuable, I have determined to consult the best writers for explanations real as well as verbal, and perhaps I may at last have reason to say, after one of the augmenters of Furetier, that my book is more learned than its author.

In explaining the general and popular language, it seems necessary to sort the several senses of each word, and to exhibit first its natural and primitive signification, as

To arrive, to reach the shore in a voyage. He arrived at a safe harbour.

Then to give its consequential meaning, to arrive, to reach any place whether by land or sea; as, he arrived at his country seat.

Then its metaphorical sense, to obtain any thing desired; as, he arrived at a peerage.

Then to mention any observation that arises from the comparison of one meaning with another; as, it may be remarked of the word arrive, that in consequence of its original and etymological sense, it cannot be properly applied but to words signifying something desirable; thus, we say a man arrived at happiness, but cannot say without a mixture of irony, he arrived at misery.

Ground, the earth, generally as opposed to the air or water. He swam till he reached ground. The bird fell to the ground.

Then follows the accidental or consequential signification, in which ground implies any thing that lies under another; as, he laid colours upon a rough ground. The silk had blue flowers on a red ground.

Then the remoter or metaphorical signification; as, the ground of his opinion was a false computation. The ground of his work was his father's manuscript.

After having gone through the natural and figurative senses, it will be proper to subjoin the poetical sense of each word, where it differs from that which is in common use; as, wanton applied to any thing of which the motion is irregular without terror, as

In wanton ringlets curl'd her hair.

To the poetical sense may succeed the familiar; as of toast, used to imply the person whose health is drunk.

The wise man's passion, and the vain man's toast. POPE.

The familiar may be followed by the burlesque; as of mellow, applied to good fellowship:

In all thy humours whether grave, or mellow. ADDISON.

Or of bite used for cheat:

—More a dupe than wit,
Sappho can tell you, how this man was bit. POPE.

And lastly, may be produced the peculiar sense, in which a word is found in any great author. As faculties in Shakespeare signifies the powers of authority.

—This Duncan
Has borne his faculties so meek, has been So clear in his great office, that &c.

The signification of adjectives, may be often ascertained by uniting them to substantives, as simple swain, simple sheep; sometimes the sense of a substantive may be elucidated by the epithets annexed to it in good authors, as the boundless ocean, the open lawns, and where such advantage can be gained by a short quotation, it is not to be omitted.

The difference of signification in words generally accounted synonymous, ought to be carefully observed; as in pride, haughtiness, arrogance; and the strict and critical meaning ought to be distinguished from that which is loose and popular; as in the word perfection, which though in its philosophical and exact sense, it can be of little use among human beings, is often so much degraded from its original signification, that the academicians have inserted in their work the perfection of a language, and with a little more licentiousness might have prevailed on themselves to have added the perfection of a dictionary.

There are many other characters of words which it will be of use to mention. Some have both an active and passive signification, as fearful, that which gives or which feels terror, a fearful prodigy, a fearful hare. Some have a personal, some a real meaning, as in opposition to old we use the adjective young of animated beings, and new of other things. Some are restrained to the sense of praise, and others to that of disapprobation, so commonly, though not always, we exhort to good actions, we instigate to ill; we animate, incite and encourage indifferently to good or bad. So we usually ascribe good, but impute evil; yet neither the use of these words, nor perhaps of any other in our licentious language, is so established as not to be often reversed by the correctest writers. I shall therefore, since the rules of stile, like those of law, arise from precedents often repeated, collect the testimonies on both sides, and endeavour to discover and promulgate the decrees of custom, who has so long possessed, whether by right or by usurpation, the sovereignty of words.

It is necessary likewise to explain many words by their opposition to others; for contraries are best seen when they stand together. Thus the verb stand has one sense as opposed to fall, and another as opposed to fly; for want of attending to which distinction, obvious as it is, the learned Dr. Bentley has squandered his criticism to no purpose, on these lines of Paradise Lost:

— — — In heaps Chariot and charioteer lay over-turn'd,
 And fiery foaming steeds. What stood, recoil'd, O'erwearied, through the faint Satanic host,
 Defensive scarce, or with pale fear surpris'd,
Fled ignominious — — —

“Here,” says the critick, “as the sentence is now read, we find that what stood, fled,” and therefore he proposes an alteration, which he might have spared if he had consulted a dictionary, and found that nothing more was affirmed than that those fled who did not fall.

In explaining such meanings as seem accidental and adventitious, I shall endeavour to give an account of the means by which they were introduced. Thus, to eke out any thing, signifies to lengthen it beyond its just dimensions by some low artifice, because the word eke was the usual refuge of our old writers when they wanted a syllable. And buxom, which means only obedient, is now made, in familiar phrases, to stand for wanton, because in an antient form of marriage, before the reformation, the bride promised complaisance and obedience in these terms: "I will be bonair and buxom in bed and at board."

I know well, my Lord, how trifling many of these remarks will appear separately considered, and how easily they may give occasion to the contemptuous merriment of sportive idleness, and the gloomy censures of arrogant stupidity; but dulness it is easy to despise, and laughter it is easy to repay. I shall not be solicitous what is thought of my work, by such as know not the difficulty or importance of philological studies, nor shall think those that have done nothing qualified to condemn me for doing little. It may not, however, be improper to remind them, that no terrestrial greatness is more than an aggregate of little things, and to inculcate after the Arabian proverb, that drops added to drops constitute the ocean.

There remains yet to be considered the DISTRIBUTION of words into their proper classes, or that part of lexicography which is strictly critical.

The popular part of the language, which includes all words not appropriated to particular sciences, admits of many distinctions and subdivisions; as, into words of general use; words employed chiefly in poetry; words obsolete; words which are admitted only by particular writers, yet not in themselves improper; words used only in burlesque writing; and words impure and barbarous.

Words of general use will be known by having no sign of particularity, and their various senses will be supported by authorities of all ages.

The words appropriated to poetry will be distinguished by some mark prefixed, or will be known by having no authorities but those of poets.

Of antiquated or obsolete words, none will be inserted but such as are to be found in authors who wrote since the accession of Elizabeth, from which we date the golden age of our language; and of these many might be omitted, but that the reader may require, with an appearance of reason, that no difficulty should be left unresolved in books which he finds himself invited to read, as confessed and established models of stile. These will be likewise pointed out by some note of exclusion, but not of disgrace.

The words which are found only in particular books, will be known by the single name of him that has used them; but such will be omitted, unless either their propriety, elegance, or force, or the reputation of their authors affords some extraordinary reason for their reception.

Words used in burlesque and familiar compositions, will be likewise mentioned with their proper authorities, such as dudgeon from Butler, and leasing from Prior, and will be diligently characterized by marks of distinction.

Barbarous or impure words and expressions, may be branded with some note of infamy, as they are carefully to be eradicated wherever they are found; and they occur too frequently, even in the best writers. As in Pope,

— — — in endless error hurl'd.
'Tis these that early taint the female soul.

In Addison,

Attend to what a lesser muse indites.

And in Dryden:

A dreadful quiet felt, and worser far
Than arms — — —

If this part of the work can be well performed, it will be equivalent to the proposal made by Boileau to the academicians, that they should review all their polite writers, and correct such impurities as might be found in them, that their authority might not contribute, at any distant time, to the depravation of the language.

With regard to questions of purity, or propriety, I was once in doubt whether I should not attribute too much to myself in attempting to decide them, and whether my province was to extend beyond the proposition of the question, and the display of the suffrages on each side; but I have been since determined by your Lordship's opinion, to interpose my own judgment, and shall therefore endeavour to support what appears to me most consonant to grammar and reason. Ausonius thought that modesty forbad him to plead inability for a task to which Caesar had judged him equal.

And I may hope, my Lord, that since you, whose authority in our language is so generally acknowledged, have commissioned me to declare my own opinion, I shall be considered as exercising a kind of vicarious jurisdiction, and that the power which might have been denied to my own claim, will be readily allowed me as the delegate of your Lordship.

In citing authorities, on which the credit of every part of this work must depend, it will be proper to observe some obvious rules, such as of preferring writers of the first reputation to those of an inferior rank; of noting the quotations with accuracy; and of selecting, when it can be conveniently done, such sentences, as, besides their immediate use, may give pleasure or instruction by conveying some elegance of language, or some precept of prudence, or piety.

It has been asked, on some occasions, who shall judge the judges? And since with regard to this design, a question may arise by what authority the authorities are selected, it is necessary to obviate it, by declaring that many of the writers whose testimonies will be alleged, were selected by Mr. Pope, of whom I may be justified in affirming, that were he still alive, solicitous as he was for the success of this work, he would not be displeas'd that I have undertaken it.

It will be proper that the quotations be ranged according to the ages of their authors, and it will afford an agreeable amusement, if to the words and phrases which are not of our own growth, the name of the writer who first introduced them can be affixed, and if, to words which are now antiquated, the authority be subjoined of him who last admitted them. Thus for scathe and buxom, now obsolete, Milton may be cited.

— — — The mountain oak Stands scath'd to heaven — — —
 — — — He with broad sails
 Winnow'd the buxom air — — —

By this method every word will have its history, and the reader will be informed of the gradual changes of the language, and have before his eyes the rise of some words, and the fall of others. But observations so minute and accurate are to be desired rather than expected, and if use be carefully supplied, curiosity must sometimes bear its disappointments.

This, my Lord, is my idea of an English dictionary, a dictionary by which the pronunciation of our language may be fixed, and its attainment facilitated; by which its purity may be preserved, its use ascertained, and its duration lengthened. And though, perhaps, to correct the language of nations by books of grammar, and amend their manners by discourses of morality, may be tasks equally difficult; yet as it is unavoidable to wish, it is natural likewise to hope, that your Lordship's patronage may not be wholly lost; that it may contribute to the preservation of antient, and the improvement of modern writers; that it may promote the reformation of those translators, who for want of understanding the characteristical difference of tongues, have formed a chaotic dialect of heterogeneous phrases; and awaken to the care of purer diction some men of genius, whose attention to argument makes them negligent of stile, or whose rapid imagination, like the Peruvian torrents, when it brings down gold, mingles it with sand.

When I survey the Plan which I have laid before you, I cannot, my Lord, but confess, that I am frighted at its extent, and, like the soldiers of Cæsar, look on Britain as a new world, which it is almost madness to invade. But I hope, that though I should not complete the conquest, I shall at least discover the coast, civilize part of the inhabitants, and make it easy for some other adventurer to proceed farther, to reduce them wholly to subjection, and settle them under laws.

We are taught by the great Roman orator, that every man should propose to himself the highest degree of excellence, but that he may stop with honour at the second or third: though therefore my performance should fall below the excellence of other dictionaries, I may obtain, at least, the praise of having endeavoured well, nor shall I think it any reproach to my diligence, that I have retired without a triumph from a contest with united academies and long successions of learned compilers. I cannot hope in the warmest moments, to preserve so much caution through so long a work, as not often to sink into negligence, or to obtain so much knowledge of all its parts, as not frequently to fail by ignorance. I expect that sometimes the desire of accuracy, will urge me to superfluities, and sometimes the fear of prolixity betray me to omissions; that in the extent of such variety I shall be often bewildred, and in the mazes of such intricacy, be frequently entangled; that in one part refinement will be subtilized beyond exactness, and evidence dilated in another beyond perspicuity. Yet I do not despair of approbation from those who knowing the uncertainty of conjecture, the scantiness of knowledge, the fallibility of memory, and the unsteadiness of attention, can compare the causes of error with the means of avoiding it, and the extent of art with the capacity of man; and whatever be the event of my endeavours, I shall not easily regret an attempt which has procured me the honour of appearing thus publickly,

My Lord, Your Lordship's Most Obedient and Most Humble Servant, SAM. JOHNSON.

Notes

1. For the most part, words ending in -c are printed without a final -k in the Plan, though in the Dictionary the -ck spelling is recommended (see the opening entry in letter K). Similarly, several words which in the Dictionary are spelled with -our (errour, terroùr, inferiour, oratour) are here spelled with -or.
2. daisy.
3. chameleon.

The Preface to A Dictionary of the English Language

It is the fate of those who toil at the lower employments of life, to be rather driven by the fear of evil, than attracted by the prospect of good; to be exposed to censure, without hope of praise; to be disgraced by miscarriage, or punished for neglect, where success would have been without applause, and diligence without reward.

Among these unhappy mortals is the writer of dictionaries; whom mankind have considered, not as the pupil, but the slave of science, the pionier of literature, doomed only to remove rubbish and clear obstructions from the paths of Learning and Genius, who press forward to conquest and glory, without bestowing a smile on the humble drudge that facilitates their progress. Every other authour may aspire to praise; the lexicographer can only hope to escape reproach, and even this negative recompense has been yet granted to very few.

I have, notwithstanding this discouragement, attempted a dictionary of the English language, which, while it was employed in the cultivation of every species of literature, has itself been hitherto neglected, suffered to spread, under the direction of chance, into wild exuberance, resigned to the tyranny of time and fashion, and exposed to the corruptions of ignorance, and caprices of innovation.

When I took the first survey of my undertaking, I found our speech copious without order, and energetick without rules: wherever I turned my view, there was perplexity to be disentangled, and confusion to be regulated; choice was to be made out of boundless variety, without any established principle of selection; adulterations were to be detected, without a settled test of purity; and modes of expression to be rejected or received, without the suffrages of any writers of classical reputation or acknowledged authority.

Having therefore no assistance but from general grammar, I applied myself to the perusal of our writers; and noting whatever might be of use to ascertain or illustrate any word or phrase, accumulated in time the materials of a dictionary, which, by degrees, I reduced to method, establishing to myself, in the progress of the work, such rules as experience and analogy suggested to me; experience, which practice and observation were continually increasing; and analogy, which, though in some words obscure, was evident in others.

In adjusting the ORTHOGRAPHY, which has been to this time unsettled and fortuitous, I found it necessary to distinguish those irregularities that are inherent in our tongue, and perhaps coeval with it, from others which the ignorance or negligence of later writers has produced. Every language has its anomalies, which, though inconvenient, and in themselves once unnecessary, must be tolerated among the imperfections of human things, and which require only to be registred, that they may not be increased, and ascertained, that they may not be confounded: but every language has likewise its improprieties and absurdities, which it is the duty of the lexicographer to correct or proscribe.

As language was at its beginning merely oral, all words of necessary or common use were spoken before they were written; and while they were unfixed by any visible signs, must have been spoken with great diversity, as we now observe those who cannot read to catch sounds imperfectly, and utter them negligently. When this wild and barbarous jargon was first reduced to an alphabet, every penman endeavoured to express, as he could, the sounds which he was accustomed to pronounce or to receive, and vitiated in writing such words as were already vitiated in speech. The powers of the letters, when they were applied to a new language, must have been vague and unsettled, and therefore different hands would exhibit the same sound by different combinations.

From this uncertain pronunciation arise in a great part the various dialects of the same country, which will always be observed to grow fewer, and less different, as books are multiplied; and from this arbitrary representation of sounds by letters, proceeds that diversity of spelling observable in the Saxon remains, and I suppose in the first books of every nation, which perplexes or destroys analogy, and produces anomalous formations, which, being once incorporated, can never be afterward dismissed or reformed.

Of this kind are the derivatives length from long, strength from strong, darling from dear, breadth from broad, from dry, drought, and from high, height, which Milton, in zeal for analogy, writes highth; Quid te exempta juvat spinis de pluribus una;<sup>1</sup> to change all would be too much, and to change one is nothing.

This uncertainty is most frequent in the vowels, which are so capriciously pronounced, and so differently modified, by accident or affectation, not only in every province, but in every mouth, that to them, as is well known to etymologists, little regard is to be shewn in the deduction of one language from another.

Such defects are not errors in orthography, but spots of barbarity impressed so deep in the English language, that criticism can never wash them away; these, therefore, must be permitted to remain untouched: but many words have likewise been altered by accident, or depraved by ignorance, as the pronunciation of the vulgar has been weakly followed; and some still continue to be variously written, as authours differ in their care or skill: of these it was proper to enquire the true orthography, which I have always considered as depending on their derivation, and have therefore referred them to their original languages: thus I write enchant, enchantment, enchanter, after the French, and incantation after the Latin; thus entire is chosen rather than intire, because it passed to us not from the Latin integer, but from the French entier.

Of many words it is difficult to say whether they were immediately received from the Latin or the French, since at the time when we had dominions in France, we had Latin service in our churches. It is, however, my opinion, that the French generally supplied us; for we have few Latin words, among the terms of domestick use, which are not French; but many French, which are very remote from Latin.

Even in words of which the derivation is apparent, I have been often obliged to sacrifice uniformity to custom; thus I write, in compliance with a numberless majority, convey and inveigh, deceit and receipt, fancy and phantom; sometimes the derivative varies from the primitive, as explain and explanation, repeat and repetition.

Some combinations of letters having the same power are used indifferently without any discoverable reason of choice, as in choak, choke; soap, sope; fewel, fuel, and many others; which I have sometimes inserted twice, that those who search for them under either form, may not search in vain.

In examining the orthography of any doubtful word, the mode of spelling by which it is inserted in the series of the dictionary, is to be considered as that to which I give, perhaps not often rashly, the preference. I have left, in the examples, to every authour his own practice unmolested, that the reader may balance suffrages, and judge between us: but this question is not always to be determined by reputed or by real learning; some men, intent upon greater things, have thought little on sounds and derivations; some, knowing in the ancient tongues, have neglected those in which our words are commonly to be sought. Thus Hammond writes fecibleness for feasibleness, because I suppose he imagined it derived immediately from the Latin; and some words, such as dependant, dependent; dependance, dependence, vary their final syllable, as one or other language is present to the writer.

In this part of the work, where caprice has long wanted without controul, and vanity sought praise by petty reformation, I have endeavoured to proceed with a scholar's reverence for antiquity, and a grammarian's regard to the genius of our tongue. I have attempted few alterations, and among those few, perhaps the greater part is from the modern to the ancient practice; and I hope I may be allowed to recommend to those, whose thoughts have been, perhaps, employed too anxiously on verbal singularities, not to disturb, upon narrow views, or for minute propriety, the orthography of their fathers. It has been asserted, that for the law to be known, is of more importance than to be right. Change, says Hooker, is not made without inconvenience, even from worse to better. There is in constancy and stability a general and lasting advantage, which will always overbalance the slow improvements of gradual correction. Much less ought our written language to comply with the corruptions of oral utterance, or copy that which every variation of time or place makes different from itself, and imitate those changes, which will again be changed, while imitation is employed in observing them.

This recommendation of steadiness and uniformity does not proceed from an opinion, that particular combinations of letters have much influence on human happiness; or that truth may not be successfully taught by modes of spelling fanciful and erroneous: I am not yet so lost in lexicography, as to forget that words are the daughters of earth, and that things are the sons of heaven. Language is only the instrument of science, and words are but the signs of ideas: I wish, however, that the instrument might be less apt to decay, and that signs might be permanent, like the things which they denote.

In settling the orthography, I have not wholly neglected the pronunciation, which I have directed, by printing an accent upon the acute or elevated syllable. It will sometimes be found, that the accent is placed by the authour quoted, on a different syllable from that marked in the alphabetical series; it is then to be understood, that custom has varied, or that the authour has, in my opinion, pronounced wrong. Short directions are sometimes given where the sound of letters is irregular; and if they are sometimes omitted, defect in such minute observations will be more easily excused, than superfluity.

In the investigation both of the orthography and signification of words, their ETYMOLOGY was necessarily to be considered, and they were therefore to be divided into primitives and derivatives. A primitive word, is that which can be traced no further to any English root; thus circumspect, circumvent, circumstance, delude, concave, and complicate, though compounds in the Latin, are to us primitives. Derivatives, are all those that can be referred to any word in English of greater simplicity.

The derivatives I have referred to their primitives, with an accuracy sometimes needless; for who does not see that remoteness comes from remote, lovely from love, concavity from concave, and demonstrative from demonstrate? but this grammatical exuberance the scheme of my work did not allow me to repress. It is of great importance in examining the general fabrick of a language, to trace one word from another, by noting the usual modes of derivation and inflection; and uniformity must be preserved in systematical works, though sometimes at the expence of particular propriety.

Among other derivatives I have been careful to insert and elucidate the anomalous plurals of nouns and preterites of verbs, which in the Teutonical dialects are very frequent, and, though familiar to those who have always used them, interrupt and embarrass the learners of our language.

The two languages from which our primitives have been derived are the Roman and Teutonical: under the Roman I comprehend the French and provincial tongues; and under the Teutonical range the Saxon, German, and all their kindred dialects. Most of our polysyllables are Roman, and our words of one syllable are very often Teutonical.

In assigning the Roman original, it has perhaps sometimes happened that I have mentioned only the Latin, when the word was borrowed from the French; and considering myself as employed only in the illustration of my own language, I have not been very careful to observe whether the Latin word be pure or barbarous, or the French elegant or obsolete.

For the Teutonical etymologies I am commonly indebted to Junius and Skinner, the only names which I have forbore to quote when I copied their books; not that I might appropriate their labours or usurp their honours, but that I might spare a perpetual repetition by one general acknowledgment. Of these, whom I ought not to mention but with the reverence due to instructors and benefactors, Junius appears to have excelled in extent of learning, and Skinner in rectitude of understanding. Junius was accurately skilled in all the northern languages, Skinner probably examined the ancient and remoter dialects only by occasional inspection into dictionaries; but the learning of Junius is often of no other use than to show him a track by which he may deviate from his purpose, to which Skinner always presses forward by the shortest way. Skinner is often ignorant, but never ridiculous: Junius is always full of knowledge; but his variety distracts his judgment, and his learning is very frequently disgraced by his absurdities.

The votaries of the northern muses will not perhaps easily restrain their indignation, when they find the name of Junius thus degraded by a disadvantageous comparison; but whatever reverence is due to his diligence, or his attainments, it can be no criminal degree of censoriousness to charge that etymologist with want of judgment, who can seriously derive dream from drama, because life is a drama, and a drama is a dream; and who declares with a tone of defiance, that no man can fail to derive moan from μόνος, monos, who considers that grief naturally loves to be alone.<sup>2</sup>

Our knowledge of the northern literature is so scanty, that of words undoubtedly Teutonic the original is not always to be found in any ancient language; and I have therefore inserted Dutch or German substitutes, which I consider not as radical but parallel, not as the parents, but sisters of the English.

The words which are represented as thus related by descent or cognation, do not always agree in sense; for it is incident to words, as to their authours, to degenerate from their ancestors, and to change their manners when they change their country. It is sufficient, in etymological enquiries, if the senses of kindred words be found such as may easily pass into each other, or such as may both be referred to one general idea.

The etymology, so far as it is yet known, was easily found in the volumes where it is particularly and professedly delivered; and, by proper attention to the rules of derivation, the orthography was soon adjusted. But to COLLECT the WORDS of our language was a task of greater difficulty: the deficiency of dictionaries was immediately apparent; and when they were exhausted, what was yet wanting must be sought by fortuitous and unguided excursions into books, and gleaned as industry should find, or chance should offer it, in the boundless chaos of a living speech. My search, however, has been either skilful or lucky; for I have much augmented the vocabulary.

As my design was a dictionary, common or appellative, I have omitted all words which have relation to proper names; such as Arian, Socinian, Calvinist, Benedictine, Mahometan; but have retained those of a more general nature, as Heathen, Pagan.

Of the terms of art I have received such as could be found either in books of science or technical dictionaries; and have often inserted, from philosophical writers, words which are supported perhaps only by a single authority, and which being not admitted into general use, stand yet as candidates or probationers, and must depend for their adoption on the suffrage of futurity.

The words which our authours have introduced by their knowledge of foreign languages, or ignorance of their own, by vanity or wantonness, by compliance with fashion, or lust of innovation, I have registred as they occurred, though commonly only to censure them, and warn others against the folly of naturalizing useless foreigners to the injury of the natives.

I have not rejected any by design, merely because they were unnecessary or exuberant; but have received those which by different writers have been differently formed, as viscid, and viscidity, viscous, and viscosity.

Compounded or double words I have seldom noted, except when they obtain a signification different from that which the components have in their simple state. Thus highwayman, woodman, and horsecourser, require an explication; but of thieflike or coachdriver no notice was needed, because the primitives contain the meaning of the compounds.

Words arbitrarily formed by a constant and settled analogy, like diminutive adjectives in ish, as greenish, bluish, adverbs in ly, as dully, openly, substantives in ness, as vileness, faultiness, were less diligently sought, and many sometimes have been omitted, when I had no authority that invited me to insert them; not that they are not genuine and regular offsprings of English roots, but because their relation to the primitive being always the same, their signification cannot be mistaken.

The verbal nouns in ing, such as the keeping of the castle, the leading of the army, are always neglected, or placed only to illustrate the sense of the verb, except when they signify things as well as actions, and have therefore a plural number, as dwelling, living; or have an absolute and abstract signification, as colouring, painting, learning.

The participles are likewise omitted, unless, by signifying rather qualities than action, they take the nature of adjectives; as a thinking man, a man of prudence; a pacing horse, a horse that can pace: these I have ventured to call participial adjectives. But neither are these always inserted, because they are commonly to be understood, without any danger of mistake, by consulting the verb.

Obsolete words are admitted, when they are found in authours not obsolete, or when they have any force or beauty that may deserve revival.

As composition is one of the chief characteristicks of a language, I have endeavoured to make some reparation for the universal negligence of my predecessors, by inserting great numbers of compounded words, as may be found under after, fore, new, night, fair, and many more. These, numerous as they are, might be multiplied, but that use and curiosity are here satisfied, and the frame of our language and modes of our combination amply discovered.

Of some forms of composition, such as that by which re is prefixed to note repetition, and un to signify contrariety or privation, all the examples cannot be accumulated, because the use of these particles, if not wholly arbitrary, is so little limited, that they are hourly affixed to new words as occasion requires, or is imagined to require them.

There is another kind of composition more frequent in our language than perhaps in any other, from which arises to foreigners the greatest difficulty. We modify the signification of many verbs by a particle subjoined; as to come off, to escape by a fetch; to fall on, to attack; to fall off, to apostatize; to break off, to stop abruptly; to bear out, to justify; to fall in, to comply; to give over, to cease; to set off, to embellish; to set in, to begin a continual tenour; to set out, to begin a course or journey; to take off, to copy; with innumerable expressions of the same kind, of which some appear wildly irregular, being so far distant from the sense of the simple words, that no sagacity will be able to trace the steps by which they arrived at the present use. These I have noted with great care; and though I cannot flatter myself that the collection is complete, I believe I have so far assisted the students of our language, that this kind of phraseology will be no longer insuperable; and the combinations of verbs and particles, by chance omitted, will be easily explained by comparison with those that may be found.

Many words yet stand supported only by the name of Bailey, Ainsworth, Philips, or the contracted Dict. for Dictionaries subjoined: of these I am not always certain that they are read in any book but the works of lexicographers. Of such I have omitted many, because I had never read them; and many I have inserted, because they may perhaps exist, though they have escaped my notice: they are, however, to be yet considered as resting only upon the credit of former dictionaries. Others, which I considered as useful, or know to be proper, though I could not at present support them by authorities, I have suffered to stand upon my own attestation, claiming the same privilege with my predecessors of being sometimes credited without proof.

The words, thus selected and disposed, are grammatically considered: they are referred to the different parts of speech; traced, when they are irregularly inflected, through their various terminations; and illustrated by observations, not indeed of great or striking importance, separately considered, but necessary to the elucidation of our language, and hitherto neglected or forgotten by English grammarians.

That part of my work on which I expect malignity most frequently to fasten, is the Explanation; in which I cannot hope to satisfy those, who are perhaps not inclined to be pleased, since I have not always been able to satisfy myself. To interpret a language by itself is very difficult; many words cannot be explained by synonymes, because the idea signified by them has not more than one appellation; nor by paraphrase, because simple ideas cannot be described. When the nature of things is unknown, or the notion unsettled and indefinite, and various in various minds, the words by which such notions are conveyed, or such things denoted, will be ambiguous and perplexed. And such is the fate of hapless lexicography, that not only darkness, but light, impedes and distresses it; things may be not only too little, but too much known, to be happily illustrated. To explain, requires the use of terms less abstruse than that which is to be explained, and such terms cannot always be found; for as nothing can be proved but by supposing something intuitively known, and evident without proof, so nothing can be defined but by the use of words too plain to admit a definition.

Other words there are, of which the sense is too subtle and evanescent to be fixed in a paraphrase; such are all those which are by the grammarians termed expletives, and, in dead languages, are suffered to pass for empty sounds, of no other use than to fill a verse, or to modulate a period, but which are easily perceived in living tongues to have power and emphasis, though it be sometimes such as no other form of expression can convey.

My labour has likewise been much increased by a class of verbs too frequent in the English language, of which the signification is so loose and general, the use so vague and indeterminate, and the senses detorted so widely from the first idea, that it is hard to trace them through the maze of variation, to catch them on the brink of utter inanity, to circumscribe them by any limitations, or interpret them by any words of distinct and settled meaning: such are bear, break, come, cast, full, get, give, do, put, set, go, run, make, take, turn, throw. If of these the whole power is not accurately delivered, it must be remembered, that while our language is yet living, and variable by the caprice of every one that speaks it, these words are hourly shifting their relations, and can no more be ascertained in a dictionary, than a grove, in the agitation of a storm, can be accurately delineated from its picture in the water.

The particles are among all nations applied with so great latitude, that they are not easily reducible under any regular scheme of explication: this difficulty is not less, nor perhaps greater, in English, than in other languages. I have laboured them with diligence, I hope with success; such at least as can be expected in a task, which no man, however learned or sagacious, has yet been able to perform.

Some words there are which I cannot explain, because I do not understand them; these might have been omitted very often with little inconvenience, but I would not so far indulge my vanity as to decline this confession: for when Tully owns himself ignorant whether lessus, in the twelve tables, means a funeral song, or mourning garment; and Aristotle doubts whether οὔρευς, in the Iliad, signifies a mule, or muleteer, I may freely, without shame, leave some obscurities to happier industry, or future information.

The rigour of interpretative lexicography requires that the explanation, and the word explained, should be always reciprocal; this I have always endeavoured, but could not always attain. Words are seldom exactly synonymous; a new term was not introduced, but because the former was thought inadequate: names, therefore, have often many ideas, but few ideas have many names. It was then necessary to use the proximate word, for the deficiency of single terms can very seldom be supplied by circumlocution; nor is the inconvenience great of such mutilated interpretations, because the sense may easily be collected entire from the examples.

In every word of extensive use, it was requisite to mark the progress of its meaning, and show by what gradations of intermediate sense it has passed from its primitive to its remote and accidental signification; so that every foregoing explanation should tend to that which follows, and the series be regularly concatenated from the first notion to the last.

This is specious, but not always practicable; kindred senses may be so interwoven, that the perplexity cannot be disentangled, nor any reason be assigned why one should be ranged before the other. When the radical idea branches out into parallel ramifications, how can a consecutive series be formed of senses in their nature collateral? The shades of meaning sometimes pass imperceptibly into each other; so that though on one side they apparently differ, yet it is impossible to mark the point of contact. Ideas of the same race, though not exactly alike, are sometimes so little different, that no words can express the dissimilitude, though the mind easily perceives it, when they are exhibited together; and sometimes there is such a confusion of acceptations, that discernment is wearied, and distinction puzzled, and perseverance herself hurries to an end, by crowding together what she cannot separate.

These complaints of difficulty will, by those that have never considered words beyond their popular use, be thought only the jargon of a man willing to magnify his labours, and procure veneration to his studies by involution and obscurity. But every art is obscure to those that have not learned it: this uncertainty of terms, and commixture of ideas, is well known to those who have joined philosophy with grammar; and if I have not expressed them very clearly, it must be remembered that I am speaking of that which words are insufficient to explain.

The original sense of words is often driven out of use by their metaphorical acceptations, yet must be inserted for the sake of a regular origination. Thus I know not whether ardour is used for material heat, or whether flagrant, in English, ever signifies the same with burning; yet such are the primitive ideas of these words, which are therefore set first, though without examples, that the figurative senses may be commodiously deduced.

Such is the exuberance of signification which many words have obtained, that it was scarcely possible to collect all their senses; sometimes the meaning of derivatives must be sought in the mother term, and sometimes deficient explanations of the primitive may be supplied in the train of derivation. In any case of doubt or difficulty, it will be always proper to examine all the words of the same race; for some words are slightly passed over to avoid repetition, some admitted easier and clearer explanation than others, and all will be better understood, as they are considered in greater variety of structures and relations.

All the interpretations of words are not written with the same skill, or the same happiness: things equally easy in themselves, are not all equally easy to any single mind. Every writer of a long work commits errors, where there appears neither ambiguity to mislead, nor obscurity to confound him; and in a search like this, many felicities of expression will be casually overlooked, many convenient parallels will be forgotten, and many particulars will admit improvement from a mind utterly unequal to the whole performance.

But many seeming faults are to be imputed rather to the nature of the undertaking, than the negligence of the performer. Thus some explanations are unavoidably reciprocal or circular, as hind, the female of the stag; stag, the male of the hind: sometimes easier words are changed into harder, as burial into sepulture or interment, drier into desiccative, dryness into siccidity or aridity, fit into paroxysm; for the easiest word, whatever it be, can never be translated into one more easy. But easiness and difficulty are merely relative, and if the present prevalence of our language should invite foreigners to this dictionary, many will be assisted by those words which now seem only to increase or produce obscurity. For this reason I have endeavoured frequently to join a Teutonick and Roman interpretation, as to CHEER to gladden, or exhilarate, that every learner of English may be assisted by his own tongue.

The solution of all difficulties, and the supply of all defects, must be sought in the examples, subjoined to the various senses of each word, and ranged according to the time of their authours.

When first I collected these authorities, I was desirous that every quotation should be useful to some other end than the illustration of a word; I therefore extracted from philosophers principles of science; from historians remarkable facts; from chymists complete processes; from divines striking exhortations; and from poets beautiful descriptions. Such is design, while it is yet at a distance from execution. When the time called upon me to range this accumulation of elegance and wisdom into an alphabetical series, I soon discovered that the bulk of my volumes would fright away the student, and was forced to depart from my scheme of including all that was pleasing or useful in English literature, and reduce my transcripts very often to clusters of words, in which scarcely any meaning is retained; thus to the weariness of copying, I was condemned to add the vexation of expunging. Some passages I have yet spared, which may relieve the labour of verbal searches, and intersperse with verdure and flowers the dusty deserts of barren philology.

The examples, thus mutilated, are no longer to be considered as conveying the sentiments or doctrine of their authours; the word for the sake of which they are inserted, with all its appendant clauses, has been carefully preserved; but it may sometimes happen, by hasty detraction, that the general tendency of the sentence may be changed: the divine may desert his tenets, or the philosopher his system.

Some of the examples have been taken from writers who were never mentioned as masters of elegance or models of stile; but words must be sought where they are used; and in what pages, eminent for purity, can terms of manufacture or agriculture be found? Many quotations serve no other purpose, than that of proving the bare existence of words, and are therefore selected with less scrupulousness than those which are to teach their structures and relations.

My purpose was to admit no testimony of living authours, that I might not be misled by partiality, and that none of my cotemporaries might have reason to complain; nor have I departed from this resolution, but when some performance of uncommon excellence excited my veneration, when my memory supplied me, from late books, with an example that was wanting, or when my heart, in the tenderness of friendship, solicited admission for a favourite name.

So far have I been from any care to grace my pages with modern decorations, that I have studiously endeavoured to collect examples and authorities from the writers before the restoration, whose works I regard as the wells of English undefiled, as the pure sources of genuine diction. Our language, for almost a century, has, by the concurrence of many causes, been gradually departing from its original Teutonick character, and deviating towards a Gallick structure and phraseology, from which it ought to be our endeavour to recal it, by making our ancient volumes the ground-work of stile, admitting among the additions of later times, only such as may supply real deficiencies, such as are readily adopted by the genius of our tongue, and incorporate easily with our native idioms.

But as every language has a time of rudeness antecedent to perfection, as well as of false refinement and declension, I have been cautious lest my zeal for antiquity might drive me into times too remote, and croud my book with words now no longer understood. I have fixed Sidney's work for the boundary, beyond which I make few excursions. From the authours which rose in the time of Elizabeth, a speech might be formed adequate to all the purposes of use and elegance. If the language of theology were extracted from Hooker and the translation of the Bible; the terms of natural knowledge from Bacon; the phrases of policy, war, and navigation from Raleigh; the dialect of poetry and fiction from Spenser and Sidney; and the diction of common life from Shakespeare, few ideas would be lost to mankind, for want of English words, in which they might be expressed.

It is not sufficient that a word is found, unless it be so combined as that its meaning is apparently determined by the tract and tenour of the sentence; such passages I have therefore chosen, and when it happened that any authour gave a definition of a term, or such an explanation as is equivalent to a definition, I have placed his authority as a supplement to my own, without regard to the chronological order, that is otherwise observed.

Some words, indeed, stand unsupported by any authority, but they are commonly derivative nouns or adverbs, formed from their primitives by regular and constant analogy, or names of things seldom occurring in books, or words of which I have reason to doubt the existence.

There is more danger of censure from the multiplicity than paucity of examples; authorities will sometimes seem to have been accumulated without necessity or use, and perhaps some will be found, which might, without loss, have been omitted. But a work of this kind is not hastily to be charged with superfluities: those quotations which to careless or unskilful perusers appear only to repeat the same sense, will often exhibit, to a more accurate examiner, diversities of signification, or, at least, afford different shades of the same meaning: one will shew the word applied to persons, another to things; one will express an ill, another a good, and a third a neutral sense; one will prove the expression genuine from an ancient authour; another will shew it elegant from a modern: a doubtful authority is corroborated by another of more credit; an ambiguous sentence is ascertained by a passage clear and determinate; the word, how often soever repeated, appears with new associates and in different combinations, and every quotation contributes something to the stability or enlargement of the language.

When words are used equivocally, I receive them in either sense; when they are metaphorical, I adopt them in their primitive acceptation.

I have sometimes, though rarely, yielded to the temptation of exhibiting a genealogy of sentiments, by shewing how one authour copied the thoughts and diction of another: such quotations are indeed little more than repetitions, which might justly be censured, did they not gratify the mind, by affording a kind of intellectual history.

The various syntactical structures occurring in the examples have been carefully noted; the licence or negligence with which many words have been hitherto used, has made our stile capricious and indeterminate; when the different combinations of the same word are exhibited together, the preference is readily given to propriety, and I have often endeavoured to direct the choice.

Thus have I laboured to settle the orthography, display the analogy, regulate the structures, and ascertain the signification of English words, to perform all the parts of a faithful lexicographer: but I have not always executed my own scheme, or satisfied my own expectations. The work, whatever proofs of diligence and attention it may exhibit, is yet capable of many improvements: the orthography which I recommend is still convertible, the etymology which I adopt is uncertain, and perhaps frequently erroneous; the explanations are sometimes too much contracted, and sometimes too much diffused, the significations are distinguished rather with subtilty than skill, and the attention is harrassed with unnecessary minuteness.

The examples are too often injudiciously truncated, and perhaps sometimes, I hope very rarely, alleged in a mistaken sense; for in making this collection I trusted more to memory, than, in a state of disquiet and embarrassment, memory can contain, and purposed to supply at the review what was left incomplete in the first transcription.

Many terms appropriated to particular occupations, though necessary and significant, are undoubtedly omitted; and of the words most studiously considered and exemplified, many senses have escaped observation.

Yet these failures, however frequent, may admit extenuation and apology. To have attempted much is always laudable, even when the enterprize is above the strength that undertakes it: To rest below his own aim is incident to every one whose fancy is active, and whose views are comprehensive; nor is any man satisfied with himself because he has done much, but because he can conceive little. When first I engaged in this work, I resolved to leave neither words nor things unexamined, and pleased myself with a prospect of the hours which I should revel away in feasts of literature, the obscure recesses of northern learning, which I should enter and ransack, the treasures with which I expected every search into those neglected mines to reward my labour, and the triumph with which I should display my acquisitions to mankind. When I had thus enquired into the original of words, I resolved to show likewise my attention to things; to pierce deep into every science, to enquire the nature of every substance of which I inserted the name, to limit every idea by a definition strictly logical, and exhibit every production of art or nature in an accurate description, that my book might be in place of all other dictionaries whether appellative or technical. But these were the dreams of a poet doomed at last to wake a lexicographer. I soon found that it is too late to look for instruments, when the work calls for execution, and that whatever abilities I had brought to my task, with those I must finally perform it. To deliberate whenever I doubted, to enquire whenever I was ignorant, would have protracted the undertaking without end, and, perhaps, without much improvement; for I did not find by my first experiments, that what I had not of my own was easily to be obtained: I saw that one enquiry only gave occasion to another, that book referred to book, that to search was not always to find, and to find was not always to be informed; and that thus to persue perfection, was, like the first inhabitants of Arcadia, to chace the sun, which, when they had reached the hill where he seemed to rest, was still beheld at the same distance from them.

I then contracted my design, determining to confide in myself, and no longer to solicit auxiliaries, which produced more incumbrance than assistance: by this I obtained at least one advantage, that I set limits to my work, which would in time be finished, though not completed.

Despondency has never so far prevailed as to depress me to negligence; some faults will at last appear to be the effects of anxious diligence and persevering activity. The nice and subtle ramifications of meaning were not easily avoided by a mind intent upon accuracy, and convinced of the necessity of disentangling combinations, and separating similitudes. Many of the distinctions which to common readers appear useless and idle, will be found real and important by men versed in the school philosophy, without which no dictionary ever shall be accurately compiled, or skilfully examined.

Some senses however there are, which, though not the same, are yet so nearly allied, that they are often confounded. Most men think indistinctly, and therefore cannot speak with exactness; and consequently some examples might be indifferently put to either signification: this uncertainty is not to be imputed to me, who do not form, but register the language; who do not teach men how they should think, but relate how they have hitherto expressed their thoughts.

The imperfect sense of some examples I lamented, but could not remedy, and hope they will be compensated by innumerable passages selected with propriety, and preserved with exactness; some shining with sparks of imagination, and some replete with treasures of wisdom.

The orthography and etymology, though imperfect, are not imperfect for want of care, but because care will not always be successful, and recollection or information come too late for use.

That many terms of art and manufacture are omitted, must be frankly acknowledged; but for this defect I may boldly allege that it was unavoidable: I could not visit caverns to learn the miner's language, nor take a voyage to perfect my skill in the dialect of navigation, nor visit the warehouses of merchants, and shops of artificers, to gain the names of wares, tools and operations, of which no mention is found in books; what favourable accident, or easy enquiry brought within my reach, has not been neglected; but it had been a hopeless labour to glean up words, by courting living information, and contesting with the sullenness of one, and the roughness of another.

To furnish the academicians della Crusca with words of this kind, a series of comedies called la Fiera, or the Fair, was professedly written by Buonaroti; but I had no such assistant, and therefore was content to want what they must have wanted likewise, had they not luckily been so supplied.

Nor are all words which are not found in the vocabulary, to be lamented as omissions. Of the laborious and mercantile part of the people, the diction is in a great measure casual and mutable; many of their terms are formed for some temporary or local convenience, and though current at certain times and places, are in others utterly unknown. This fugitive cant, which is always in a state of increase or decay, cannot be regarded as any part of the durable materials of a language, and therefore must be suffered to perish with other things unworthy of preservation.

Care will sometimes betray to the appearance of negligence. He that is catching opportunities which seldom occur, will suffer those to pass by unregarded, which he expects hourly to return; he that is searching for rare and remote things, will neglect those that are obvious and familiar: thus many of the most common and cursory words have been inserted with little illustration, because in gathering the authorities, I forbore to copy those which I thought likely to occur whenever they were wanted. It is remarkable that, in reviewing my collection, I found the word SEA unexemplified.

Thus it happens, that in things difficult there is danger from ignorance, and in things easy from confidence; the mind, afraid of greatness, and disdainful of littleness, hastily withdraws herself from painful searches, and passes with scornful rapidity over tasks not adequate to her powers, sometimes too secure for caution, and again too anxious for vigorous effort; sometimes idle in a plain path, and sometimes distracted in labyrinths, and dissipated by different intentions.

A large work is difficult because it is large, even though all its parts might singly be performed with facility; where there are many things to be done, each must be allowed its share of time and labour, in the proportion only which it bears to the whole; nor can it be expected, that the stones which form the dome of a temple, should be squared and polished like the diamond of a ring.

Of the event of this work, for which, having laboured it with so much application, I cannot but have some degree of parental fondness, it is natural to form conjectures. Those who have been persuaded to think well of my design, require that it should fix our language, and put a stop to those alterations which time and chance have hitherto been suffered to make in it without opposition. With this consequence I will confess that I flattered myself for a while; but now begin to fear that I have indulged expectation which neither reason nor experience can justify. When we see men grow old and die at a certain time one after another, from century to century, we laugh at the elixir that promises to prolong life to a thousand years; and with equal justice may the lexicographer be derided, who being able to produce no example of a nation that has preserved their words and phrases from mutability, shall imagine that his dictionary can embalm his language, and secure it from corruption and decay, that it is in his power to change sublunary nature, or clear the world at once from folly, vanity, and affectation.

With this hope, however, academies have been instituted, to guard the avenues of their languages, to retain fugitives, and repulse intruders; but their vigilance and activity have hitherto been vain; sounds are too volatile and subtile for legal restraints; to enchain syllables, and to lash the wind, are equally the undertakings of pride, unwilling to measure its desires by its strength. The French language has visibly changed under the inspection of the academy; the stile of Amelot's translation of father Paul is observed by Le Courayer to be un peu passè; and no Italian will maintain, that the diction of any modern writer is not perceptibly different from that of Boccace, Machiavel, or Caro.

Total and sudden transformations of a language seldom happen; conquests and migrations are now very rare: but there are other causes of change, which, though slow in their operation, and invisible in their progress, are perhaps as much superiour to human resistance, as the revolutions of the sky, or intumescence of the tide. Commerce, however necessary, however lucrative, as it depraves the manners, corrupts the language; they that have frequent intercourse with strangers, to whom they endeavour to accommodate themselves, must in time learn a mingled dialect, like the jargon which serves the traffickers on the Mediterranean and Indian coasts. This will not always be confined to the exchange, the warehouse, or the port, but will be communicated by degrees to other ranks of the people, and be at last incorporated with the current speech.

There are likewise internal causes equally forcible. The language most likely to continue long without alteration, would be that of a nation raised a little, and but a little, above barbarity, secluded from strangers, and totally employed in procuring the conveniencies of life; either without books, or, like some of the Mahometan countries, with very few: men thus busied and unlearned, having only such words as common use requires, would perhaps long continue to express the same notions by the same signs. But no such constancy can be expected in a people polished by arts, and classed by subordination, where one part of the community is sustained and accommodated by the labour of the other. Those who have much leisure to think, will always be enlarging the stock of ideas, and every increase of knowledge, whether real or fancied, will produce new words, or combinations of words. When the mind is unchained from necessity, it will range after convenience; when it is left at large in the fields of speculation, it will shift opinions; as any custom is disused, the words that expressed it must perish with it; as any opinion grows popular, it will innovate speech in the same proportion as it alters practice.

As by the cultivation of various sciences, a language is amplified, it will be more furnished with words deflected from their original sense; the geometrician will talk of a courtier's zenith, or the excentrick virtue of a wild hero, and the physician of sanguine expectations and phlegmatick delays. Copiousness of speech will give opportunities to capricious choice, by which some words will be preferred, and others degraded; vicissitudes of fashion will enforce the use of new, or extend the signification of known terms. The tropes of poetry will make hourly encroachments, and the metaphorical will become the current sense: pronunciation will be varied by levity or ignorance, and the pen must at length comply with the tongue; illiterate writers will at one time or other, by publick infatuation, rise into renown, who, not knowing the original import of words, will use them with colloquial licentiousness, confound distinction, and forget propriety. As politeness increases, some expressions will be considered as too gross and vulgar for the delicate, others as too formal and ceremonious for the gay and airy; new phrases are therefore adopted, which must, for the same reasons, be in time dismissed. Swift, in his petty treatise on the English language, allows that new words must sometimes be introduced, but proposes that none should be suffered to become obsolete. But what makes a word obsolete, more than general agreement to forbear it? and how shall it be continued, when it conveys an offensive idea, or recalled again into the mouths of mankind, when it has once by disuse become unfamiliar, and by unfamiliarity unpleasing.

There is another cause of alteration more prevalent than any other, which yet in the present state of the world cannot be obviated. A mixture of two languages will produce a third distinct from both, and they will always be mixed, where the chief part of education, and the most conspicuous accomplishment, is skill in ancient or in foreign tongues. He that has long cultivated another language, will find its words and combinations croud upon his memory; and haste or negligence, refinement or affectation, will obtrude borrowed terms and exotick expressions.

The great pest of speech is frequency of translation. No book was ever turned from one language into another, without imparting something of its native idiom; this is the most mischievous and comprehensive innovation; single words may enter by thousands, and the fabrick of the tongue continue the same, but new phraseology changes much at once; it alters not the single stones of the building, but the order of the columns. If an academy should be established for the cultivation of our stile, which I, who can never wish to see dependance multiplied, hope the spirit of English liberty will hinder or destroy, let them, instead of compiling grammars and dictionaries, endeavour, with all their influence, to stop the licence of translatours, whose idleness and ignorance, if it be suffered to proceed, will reduce us to babble a dialect of France.

If the changes that we fear be thus irresistible, what remains but to acquiesce with silence, as in the other insurmountable distresses of humanity? it remains that we retard what we cannot repel, that we palliate what we cannot cure. Life may be lengthened by care, though death cannot be ultimately defeated: tongues, like governments, have a natural tendency to degeneration; we have long preserved our constitution, let us make some struggles for our language.

In hope of giving longevity to that which its own nature forbids to be immortal, I have devoted this book, the labour of years, to the honour of my country, that we may no longer yield the palm of philology to the nations of the continent. The chief glory of every people arises from its authours: whether I shall add any thing by my own writings to the reputation of English literature, must be left to time: much of my life has been lost under the pressures of disease; much has been trifled away; and much has always been spent in provision for the day that was passing over me; but I shall not think my employment useless or ignoble, if by my assistance foreign nations, and distant ages, gain access to the propagators of knowledge, and understand the teachers of truth; if my labours afford light to the repositories of science, and add celebrity to Bacon, to Hooker, to Milton, and to Boyle.

When I am animated by this wish, I look with pleasure on my book, however defective, and deliver it to the world with the spirit of a man that has endeavoured well. That it will immediately become popular I have not promised to myself: a few wild blunders, and risible absurdities, from which no work of such multiplicity was ever free, may for a time furnish folly with laughter, and harden ignorance in contempt; but useful diligence will at last prevail, and there never can be wanting some who distinguish desert; who will consider that no dictionary of a living tongue ever can be perfect, since while it is hastening to publication, some words are budding, and some falling away; that a whole life cannot be spent upon syntax and etymology, and that even a whole life would not be sufficient; that he, whose design includes whatever language can express, must often speak of what he does not understand; that a writer will sometimes be hurried by eagerness to the end, and sometimes faint with weariness under a task, which Scaliger compares to the labours of the anvil and the mine; that what is obvious is not always known, and what is known is not always present; that sudden fits of inadvertency will surprize vigilance, slight avocations will seduce attention, and casual eclipses of the mind will darken learning; and that the writer shall often in vain trace his memory at the moment of need, for that which yesterday he knew with intuitive readiness, and which will come uncalled into his thoughts to-morrow.

In this work, when it shall be found that much is omitted, let it not be forgotten that much likewise is performed; and though no book was ever spared out of tenderness to the authour, and the world is little solicitous to know whence proceeded the faults of that which it condemns; yet it may gratify curiosity to inform it, that the English Dictionary was written with little assistance of the learned, and without any patronage of the great; not in the soft obscurities of retirement, or under the shelter of academick bowers, but amidst inconvenience and distraction, in sickness and in sorrow: and it may repress the triumph of malignant criticism to observe, that if our language is not here fully displayed, I have only failed in an attempt which no human powers have hitherto completed. If the lexicons of ancient tongues, now immutably fixed, and comprised in a few volumes, be yet, after the toil of successive ages, inadequate and delusive; if the aggregated knowledge, and co-operating diligence of the Italian academicians, did not secure them from the censure of Beni; if the embodied criticks of France, when fifty years had been spent upon their work, were obliged to change its oeconomy, and give their second edition another form, I may surely be contented without the praise of perfection, which, if I could obtain, in this gloom of solitude, what would it avail me? I have protracted my work till most of those whom I wished to please, have sunk into the grave, and success and miscarriage are empty sounds: I therefore dismiss it with frigid tranquillity, having little to fear or hope from censure or from praise.

Italics in a headword (e.g. ABA'CTOR) indicate words 'which are still to be considered as foreign' (see Plan).

Note that the letters i and j are conflated as a single letter in the Dictionary, as are u and v. For example, inward is followed by job, journalist by iris, unwriting by vocabulary, and ustorious by vulgar.

A

The first letter of the European alphabets, has, in the English language, three different sounds, which may be termed the broad, open, and slender.

The broad sound resembling that of the German a is found, in many of our monosyllables, as all, wall, malt, salt; in which a is pronounced as au in cause, or aw in law. Many of these words were anciently written with au, as fault, waulk; which happens to be still retained in fault. This was probably the ancient sound of the Saxons, since it is almost uniformly preserved in the rustic pronunciation, and the Northern dialects, as maun for man, haund for hand.

A open, not unlike the a of the Italians, is found in father, rather, and more obscurely in fancy, fast, &c.

A slender or close, is the peculiar a of the English language, resembling the sound of the French e masculine, or diphthong ai in païs, or perhaps a middle sound between them, or between the a and e; to this the Arabic a is said nearly to approach. Of this sound we have examples in the words, place, face, waste, and all those that terminate in ation; as, relation, nation, generation.

A is short, as, glass, grass; or long, as, glaze, graze: it is marked long, generally, by an e final, plane, or by an i added, as, plain.

A, an article set before nouns of the singular number; a man, a tree; denoting the number one, as, a man is coming, that is, no more than one; or an indefinite indication, as, a man may come this way; that is, any man. This article has no plural signification. Before a word beginning with a vowel, it is written an, as, an ox, an egg, of which a is the contraction.

A is sometimes a noun; as, a great A, a little a.

A is placed before a participle, or participial noun; and is considered by Wallis as a contraction of at, when it is put before a word denoting some action not yet finished; as, I am a walking. It also seems to be anciently contracted from at, when placed before local surnames; as, Thomas a Becket. In other cases, it seems to signify to, like the French à.

A hunting Chloë went. PRIOR.

They go a begging to a bankrupt's door.
DRYDEN.

*May pure contents for ever pitch their tents
Upon these downs, these meads, these rocks,
these mountains,
And peace still slumber by these purling fountains!*

*Which we may every year
Find when we come a fishing here.*

WOTTON.

officers of remains called to account.

WOTTON.

Another falls a ringing a Pescennius Niger, and judiciously distinguishes the sound of it to be modern. ADDISON ON MEDALS.

A has a peculiar signification, denoting
the proportion of one thing to another.
Thus we say, The landlord hath a hundred a year; The ship's crew gained a thousand pounds a man.

The river Inn, that had been hitherto shut up among mountains, passes generally through a wide open country, during all its course through Bavaria; which is a voyage of two days, after the rate of twenty leagues
a day. ADDISON ON ITALY.

A is used in burlesque poetry, to lengthen out a syllable, without adding to the sense.

For cloves and nutmegs to the line-a,
And even for oranges to China.

DRYDEN.

A is sometimes, in familiar writings, put by a barbarous corruption for he.

A, in composition, seems to have sometimes the power of the French a in these phrases, a droit, a gauche, &c. and sometimes to be contracted from at; as,
aside, aslope, afoot, asleep, athirst,
aware.

If this, which he avouches, does appear,
There is no flying hence, nor tarrying here.
I gin to be a weary of the sun;
And wish the state of the world were now undone. SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

And now a breeze from shore began to row;

Then hoist their yards a-trip, and all their sails

Let fall, to court the wind, and catch the gales. DRYDEN'S CEYX AND ALCYONE.

A is sometimes redundant; as, arise,
arouse, awake; the same with rise,
rouse, wake.

A, in abbreviations, stands for artium,
or arts; as, A.B. bachelor of arts, artium
baccalaureus; A.M. master of arts,
artium magister; or, anno; as, A.D.

ABA'CTOR. n.s. [Lat. abactor, a steal cattle in herds, or great numbers at once, in distinction from those that steal only a sheep or two. Blount.

ABA'SED. adj. [with heralds] is a term used of the wings of eagles, when the top looks downwards towards the point of the shield; or when the wings are shut; the natural way of bearing them being spread with the top pointing to the chief of the angle.
Bailey. Chambers.

A'BATURE. n.s. [a hunting term.]
Those sprigs of grass which are thrown down by a stag in his passing by.
Dictionaries.

ABB. n.s. The yarn on a weaver's warp; a term among clothiers.
Chambers.

ABECEDA'RIAN. n.s. [from the names of a, b, c, the three first letters of the alphabet.] He that teaches or learns the alphabet, or first rudiments of literature.

This word is used by Wood in his
Athenæ Oxonienses, where mentioning Farnaby the critic, he relates, that, in some part of his life, he was reduced to follow the trade of an abecedarian by his misfortunes.

A'BECEDARY. adj. [See ABE-CEDARIAN.]

1. Belonging to the alphabet.
2. Inscribed with the alphabet.

This is pretended from the sympathy of two needles touched with the loadstone, and placed in the center of two abecedary circles, or rings of letters, described round about them, one friend keeping one, and another the other, and agreeing upon an hour wherein they will communicate.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. II. C. 2.

ABLIGURI'TION. n.s. [abliguratio, Lat.] A prodigal spending on meat and drink. Dictionaries.

ABNODA'TION. n.s. [abnodatio, Lat.] The act of cutting away knots from trees; a term of gardening. Dictionaries.

ABORI'GINES. n.s. Lat. The earliest inhabitants of a country; those of whom no original is to be traced; as, the Welsh in Britain.

ABOVE-BOARD. In open sight; without artifice or trick. A figurative expression, borrowed from gamblers, who, when they put their hands under the table, are changing their cards. It is used only in familiar language.

It is the part also of an honest man to deal above-board, and without tricks.

L'ESTRANGE.

Though there have not been wanting such heretofore, as have practised these unworthy arts (for as much as there have been villains in all places, and all ages) yet now-a-days they are owned above-board.

ABRACADA'BRA. A superstitious charm against agues.

To ABRI'DGE. v.a. [abreger, Fr. abbrevio, Lat.]

1. To make shorter in words, keeping still the same substance.

All these sayings, being declared by Jason of Cyrene in five books, we will essay to abridge in one volume.

BIBLE 2 MACCABEES, II. 23.

2. To contract, to diminish, to cut short.

The determination of the will, upon enquiry, is following the direction of that guide; and he, that has a power to act or not to act, according as such determination directs, is free. Such determination abridges not that power wherein liberty consists.

LOCKE.

3. To deprive of; in which sense it is followed by the particle from, or of, preceding the thing taken away.

*I have disabled mine estate,
By shewing something a more swelling port,
Than my faint means would grant continuance;
Nor do I now make moan to be abridg'd
From such a noble rate.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF VENICE.

They were formerly, by the common law, discharged from pontage and murage; but this privilege has been abridged them since by several statutes.

AYLIFFE'S PARERGOON JURIS CANONICI.

ABSENTE'E. n.s. He that is absent from his station or employment, or country. A word used commonly with regard to Irishmen living out of their country.

Then was the first statute made against absentees, commanding all such as had land in Ireland, to return and reside thereupon.

SIR JOHN DAVIES ON IRELAND.

A great part of estates in Ireland are owned by absentees, and such as draw over the profits raised out of Ireland, refunding nothing.

CHILD'S DISCOURSE ON TRADE.

ABSI'NTHIATED. part. [from absinthium, Lat. wormwood.]

Imbittered, impregnated with wormwood. Dictionaries.

To ABSTA'IN. v.n. [abstineo, Lat.]

To forbear, to deny one's self any gratification; with the particle from.

*If thou judge it hard and difficult,
Conversing, looking, loving, to abstain
From love's due rites, nuptial embraces sweet;*

And, with desires, to languish without hope.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. X. L. 993.

*To be perpetually longing, and impatiently desirous of any thing, so that a man cannot abstain from it, is to lose a man's liberty, and to become a servant of meat and drink,
or smoke.*

TAYLOR'S RULE OF LIVING HOLY.

Even then the doubtful billows scarce abstain

From the toss'd vessel on the troubled main. DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

AC, AK, or AKE. Being initials in the names of places, as Acton, signify an oak, from the Saxon ac, an oak. Gibson's Camden.

A'CCENT. n.s. [accentus, Lat.]

1. The manner of speaking or pronouncing, with regard either to force or elegance.

I know, Sir, I am no flatterer; he that beguiled you in a plain accent was a plain knave; which, for my part, I will not be.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

Your accent is something finer than you could purchase in so removed a dwelling.

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

2. In grammar, the marks made upon syllables to regulate their pronunciation.

Accent, as in the Greek names and usage, seems to have regarded the tune of the voice; the acute accent raising the voice in some certain syllables to a higher, i.e. more acute pitch or tone, and the grave depressing it lower, and both having some emphasis, i.e. more vigorous pronunciation.

HOLDER'S ELEMENTS OF SPEECH.

3. Poetically, language or words.

*How many ages hence
Shall this our lofty scene be acted o'er,
In states unborn, and accents yet unknown.*

SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

*Winds on your wings to heav'n her accents
bear;*

Such words as heav'n alone is fit to hear.

DRYDEN'S VIRGIL'S PASTORALS, 3.

4. A modification of the voice, expressive of the passions or sentiments.

*The tender accent of a woman's cry
Will pass unheard, will unregarded die;
When the rough seaman's louder shouts prevail,
When fair occasion shews the springing gale.* PRIOR.

To ACCE'NT. v.a. [from accentus, Lat.]

1. To pronounce, to speak words with particular regard to the grammatical marks or rules.

Having got somebody to mark the last syllable but one, where it is long, in words above two syllables (which is enough to regulate her pronunciation, and accenting the words) let her read daily in the gospels, and avoid understanding them in Latin, if she can. LOCKE ON EDUCATION, §177.

2. In poetry, to pronounce or utter in general.

*O my unhappy lines! you that before
Have serv'd my youth to vent some wanton cries,*

*And, now congeal'd with grief, can scarce implore
Strength to accent, Here my Albertus lies!*
WOTTON.

3. To write or note the accents.

ACCE'PTION. [acception, Fr. from acceptio, Lat.] The received sense of a word; the meaning.

That this hath been esteemed the due and proper acception of this word, I shall testify by one evidence, which gave me the first hint of this notion.

HAMMOND ON FUNDAMENTALS.

A'CCIDENCE. n.s. [a corruption of accidents, from accidentia, Lat.] The little book containing the first rudiments of grammar, and explaining the properties of the eight parts of speech.

*I do confess I do want eloquence,
And never yet did learn mine accident.*

TAYLOR THE WATER-POET.

ACCO'MPTANT. n.s. [accomptant, Fr.] A reckoner, computer. See ACCOUNTANT.

*As the accompt runs on, generally the

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

ACCO'MPTING-DAY. The day on which the reckoning is to be settled.

To whom thou much dost owe, thou much must pay;

Think on the debt against th' accompting-day. SIR J. DENHAM.

To ACCO'ST. v.a. [accoster, Fr.] To speak to first; to address; to salute.

*You mistake, knight: accost her, front her,
board her, woo her, assail her.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TWELFTH NIGHT.

*At length, collecting all his serpent wiles,
With soothing words renew'd, him thus accosts.* PARADISE REGAIN'D.

*I first accosted him: I su'd, I sought,
And, with a loving force, to Pheneus brought.* DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

ACCOU'NTANT. n.s. [See ACCOMPTANT.] A computer; a man skilled or employed in accounts.

The different compute of divers states; the short and irreconcilable years of some; the exceeding error in the natural frame of others; and the false deductions of ordinary accountants in most.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

ACCO'UNT-BOOK. n.s. A book containing accounts.

I would endeavour to comfort myself upon the loss of friends, as I do upon the loss of money; by turning to my account-book, and seeing whether I have enough left for my support. SWIFT, LETTER LXII.

ACCO'UNTING. n.s. [from account.] The act of reckoning, or making up of accounts.

This method faithfully observed, must keep a man from breaking, or running behind hand in his spiritual estate; which, without frequent accountings, he will hardly be able to prevent. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

To ACCO'UPLE. v.a. [accoupler, Fr.] To join, to link together.<sup>2</sup>

He sent a solemn embassy to treat a peace and league with the king; accoupling it with an article in the nature of a request. BACON'S HENRY VII.

To ACCO'URT. v.a. [See To COURT.] To entertain with courtship, or courtesy; a word now not in use.

Who all this while were at their wanton rest,

Accourting each her friend with lavish feast. FAIRY QUEEN, B. II. C. II.

ACCUBA'TION. n.s. [from accubo, to lye down to, Lat.] The antient posture of leaning at meals.

It will appear, that accubation, or lying down at meals, was a gesture used by very many nations.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. V.

To ACCU'MB. v.a. [accumbo, Lat.]
To lie at the table, according to the ancient manner.

A'CE. n.s. [As not only signified a piece of money, but any integer, from whence is derived the word ace, or unit. Thus As signified the whole inheritance. Arbuthnot on Coins.]

1. An unit; a single point on cards or dice.

When lots are shuffled together in a lap, urn, or pitcher; or if a man blindfold casts a die, what reason in the world can he have to presume, that he shall draw a white stone rather than a black, or throw an ace rather than a sise. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

2. A small quantity.<sup>3</sup>

He will not bate an ace of absolute certainty; but however doubtful or improbable the thing is, coming from him it must go for an indisputable truth.

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE, §11.

I'll not wag an ace farther: the whole world shall not bribe me to it.

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRIAR.

ACE'RB. adj. [acerbus, Lat.] Acid, with an addition of roughness, as most fruits are before they are ripe.
Quincy.

ACE'RBITY. n.s. [acerbitas, Lat.]

1. A rough sower taste.

2. Applied to men, sharpness of temper; severity.

True it is, that the talents for criticism, namely, smartness, quick censure, vivacity of remark, indeed all but acerbity, seem rather the gifts of youth than of old age.

POPE'S INTRODUCTION TO DUNCIAD.

ACHE. n.s. [ace, Sax. ἄχος, Gr. now generally written ake, and in the plural
akes, of one syllable; the primitive manner being preserved chiefly in poetry, for the sake of the measure.] A

*I'll rack thee with old cramps;
Fill all thy bones with aches, make thee
roar,*

That beasts shall tremble at thy din.

SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

*A coming show'r your shooting corns
presage,*

Old aches throb, your hollow tooth will urge. SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

ACHOR. n.s. [achor, Lat. ἄχωρ, Gr.
furfur.] A species of the herpes; it appears with a crusty scab, which causes an itching on the surface of the head, occasioned by a salt sharp serum oozing through the skin. Quincy.

A'CONITE. n.s. [aconitum, Lat.] Properly the herb wolfs-bane, but commonly used in poetical language for poison in general.

*Our land is from the rage of tygers freed,
Nor nourishes the lion's angry seed;
Nor pois'nous aconite is here produc'd,
Or grows unknown, or is, when known,
refus'd.* DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

*Despair, that aconite does prove,
And certain death to others, love,
That poison never yet withstood,
Does nourish mine, and turns to blood.*
GRANVILLE'S POEMS.

ACO'USTICKS. n.s. [Ἀκουστικά, of ἰακούω, Gr. to hear.]

1. The doctrine or theory of sounds.

2. Medicines to help the hearing.

To ACQUIE'SCE. v.n. [acquiescer, Fr. acquiescere, Lat.] To rest in, or remain satisfied with, without opposition or discontent.<sup>4</sup>

*Neither a bare approbation of, nor a mere wishing, nor unactive complacency in; nor,
lastly, a natural inclination to things virtuous and good, can pass before God for a man's willing of such things; and, consequently, if men, upon this account, will needs take up and acquiesce in an airy ungrounded persuasion, that they will those* things which really they not will, they fall thereby into a gross and fatal delusion.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

He hath employed his transcendent wisdom and power, that by these he might make way for his benignity, as the end wherein they ultimately acquiesce.

GREW'S COSMOLOGIA SACRA. B. I.

ACQUIE'SCENCE. n.s. [from acquiesce.]

1. A silent appearance of content, distinguished on one side from avowed consent, on the other from opposition.

Neither from any of the nobility, nor of the clergy, who were thought most averse from it, there appeared any sign of contradiction to that; but an entire acquiescence in all the bishops thought fit to do.

CLARENDON.

2. Satisfaction, rest, content.

Many indeed have given over their pursuits after fame, either from disappointment, or from experience of the little pleasure which attends it, or the better informations or natural coldness of old-age; but seldom from a full satisfaction and acquiescence in their present enjoyments of it.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO 256.

3. Submission.<sup>5</sup>

The greatest part of the world take up their persuasions concerning good and evil, by an implicit faith, and a full acquiescence in the word of those, who shall represent things to them under these characters.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

A'CRE. n.s. [Æcre, Sax.] A quantity of land containing in length forty perches, and four in breadth, or four thousand eight hundred and forty square yards. Dictionaries.

*Search ev'ry acre in the high-grown field,
And bring him to our eye.*

ACROAMA'TICAL. adj.
[ἄκροάομαι, Gr. I bear.] Of or pertaining to deep learning; the opposite of exoterical.

An ACRO'STICK. n.s. [from ἄκρος and στίχος, Gr.] A poem in which the first letter of every line being taken, makes up the name of the person or thing on which the poem is written.

1. That which relates to an acrostick.

2. That which contains acrosticks.

Leave writing plays, and choose for thy command

Some peaceful province in acrostick land:

There thou may'st wings display, and altars raise,

And torture one poor word ten thousand ways. DRYDEN.

To A'CTIVATE. v.a. [from active.]

To make active. This word is perhaps used only by the author alleged.

*As snow and ice, especially being holpen,
and their cold activated by nitre or salt, will turn water into ice, and that in a few hours; so it may be, it will turn wood or stiff clay into stone, in longer time.*

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY,
NO 83.

ACTUO'SE. adj. [from act.] That which hath strong powers of action; a word little used.

ACU'LEATE. adj. [aculeatus, Lat.]

That which has a point or sting; prickly; that which terminates in a sharp point.

A'DAGE. n.s. [adagium, Lat.] A maxim handed down from antiquity; a proverb.

Shallow unimproved intellects, that are confident pretenders to certainty; as if,

contrary to the adage, science had no friend but ignorance.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA,
C. 2.

*Fine fruits of learning! old ambitious fool,
Dar'st thou apply that adage of the school;
As if 'tis nothing worth that lies conceal'd;
And science is not science till reveal'd?*

DRYDEN'S PERSIUS, SATIRE I.

ADA'GIO. n.s. [Italian.] A term used by musicians, to mark a slow time.

A'DDLE. adj. [from aðel, a disease, Sax. according to Skinner and Junius; perhaps from yðel, idle, barren, unfruitful.] Originally applied to eggs, and signifying such as produce nothing, but grow rotten under the hen; thence transferred to brains that produce nothing.

*There's one with truncheon, like a ladle,
That carries eggs too fresh or addle;
And still at random, as he goes,
Among the rabble rout bestows.*

HUDIBRAS, P. II. CANT. II.

After much solitariness, fasting, or long sickness, their brains were addle, and their bellies as empty of meat as their heads of wit. BURTON ON MELANCHOLY.

*Thus far the poet; but his brains grow addle:
And all the rest is purely from this noddle.*

DRYDEN'S DON SEBASTIAN.

To A'DDLE. v.a. [from addle, adj.] To make addle; to corrupt; to make barren.

This is also evidenced in eggs, whereof the sound ones sink, and such as are addled swim; as do also those that are termed hypenemiæ, or wind-eggs.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. IV.

A'DDLE-PATED. adj. Having addled brains. See ADDLE.

*Poor slaves in metre, dull and addle-pated,
Who rhyme below even David's psalms translated.*

DRYDEN'S ABSALOM AND ACHITOPHEL.

ADIEU'. adv. [from à Dieu, used elliptically for à Dieu je vous commende, used at the departure of friends.] The form of parting, originally importing a commendation to the Divine care, but now used, in a popular sense, sometimes to things inanimate; farewell.

*Ne gave him leave to bid that aged fire
Adieu, but nimbly ran her wonted course.*

FAIRY QUEEN, B. II.

Use a more spacious ceremony to the noble lords; you restrained yourself within the list of too cold an adieu; be more expressive to them.

SHAKESPEARE'S ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

*While now I take my last adieu,
Heave thou no sigh, nor shed a tear;
Lest yet my half-clos'd eye may view
On earth an object worth its care.*

PRIOR.

A'DIPOUS. adj. [adiposus, Lat.] Fat.

A'DJUTANT. n.s. A petty officer, whose duty is to assist the major, by distributing the pay, and overseeing the punishment, of the common men.

To ADMO'NISH. v.a. [admoneo, Lat.] To warn of a fault; to reprove gently; to counsel against wrong practices; to put in mind of a fault or a duty; with the particle of, or against, which is more rare, or the infinitive mood of a verb.

One of his cardinals, who better knew the intrigues of affairs, admonished him against that unskilful piece of ingenuity.

DECAY OF PIETY.

*He of their wicked ways
Shall them admonish, and before them set
The paths of righteousness.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. XI.

But when he was admonished by his subject to descend, he came down, gently circling in the air, and singing, to the ground.

DRYDEN'S DEDICATION OF VIRGIL'S PASTORALS.

ADOLE'SCENCE. n.s. [adolescencia, Lat.] The age succeeding childhood, and succeeded by puberty; more largely, that part of life in which the body has not yet reached its full perfection. See ADOLESCENCY.

The sons must have a tedious time of childhood and adolescence, before they can either themselves assist their parents, or encourage them with new hopes of posterity. BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

ADOLE'SCENCY. n.s. The same with adolescence.<sup>6</sup>

He was so far from a boy, that he was a man born, and at his full stature, if we believe Josephus, who places him in the last adolescence, and makes him twenty-five years old.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. V. C. 8.

ADRE'AD. adv. [from a and dread; as, aside, athirst, asleep.]

In a state of fear; frightened; terrified: now obsolete.

And thinking to make all men adread to such a one an enemy, who would not spare, nor fear to kill so great a prince.

SIDNEY, B. II.

ADVA'NTAGE-GROUND. n.s. Ground that gives superiority, and opportunities of annoyance or resistance.

This excellent man, who stood not upon the advantage-ground before, from the time of his promotion to the archbishoprick, or rather from that of his being commissioner of the treasury, exceedingly provoked, or underwent the envy, and reproach, and malice of men of all qualities and conditions; who agreed in nothing else.

CLARENDON.

A'DVENT. n.s. [from adventus; that is, adventus Redemptoris.] The name of one of the holy seasons, signifying the coming; that is, the coming of our Saviour; which is made the subject of our devotion during the four weeks before Christmas.<sup>7</sup>

A'DVERSARY. n.s. [adversaire, Fr. adversarius, Lat.] An opponent; antagonist; enemy: generally applied to those that have verbal or judicial quarrels; as, controvertists or litigants: sometimes to an opponent in single combat. It may sometimes imply an open profession of enmity; as we say, a secret enemy is worse than an open adversary.

*Yet am I noble, as the adversary
I come to cope.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

Those rites and ceremonies of the church, therefore, which were the self-same now that they were, when holy and virtuous men maintained them against profane and deriding adversaries, her own children have in derision. HOOKER, B. I. § 1.

Mean while th' adversary of God and man, Satan, with thoughts inflam'd, of highest design,

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. II. L. 620.

An adversary, on the contrary, makes a stricter search into us, and discovers every flaw and imperfection in our tempers. A friend exaggerates a man's virtues; an enemy inflames his crimes.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO 399.

ADVE'RSATIVE. adj. [adversativus, Lat.] A term of grammar, applied to a word which makes some opposition or variety; as in this sentence: This diamond is orient, but it is rough. But is an adversative conjunction.

To ADVERTI'SE. v.a. [advertir, Fr.]

It is now spoken with the accent upon the last syllable; but appears to have been anciently accented on the second.

1. To inform another; to give intelligence; with an accusative of the person informed.

*The bishop did require a respite, Wherein he might the king his lord advertise,
Whether our daughter were legitimate.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

*As I by friends am well advertised, Sir Edmund Courtney, and the haughty prelate,
Bishop of Exeter, his elder brother,
With many more confederates are in arms.* SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

2. To inform; to give notice; with of before the subject of information.

The death of Selymus nothing suspected, Ferhates, understanding that Solyman expected more assured advertisement, sent unto the other Bassas; unto whom he declared the death of the emperor: of which they, by another messenger, advertised Solyman; firming those letters with all their hands and seals.

KNOLLES'S HISTORY OF THE TURKS.

They were to advertise the chief hero of the distresses of his subjects, occasioned by his absence, to crave his succour, and solicit him to hasten his return.

DRYDEN'S PREFACE TO DUFRESNOY.

3. To give notice of any thing, by means of an advertisement in the publick prints; as, He advertised his loss.

ADU'LT. n.s. A person above the age of infancy, or grown to some degree of strength; sometimes full grown: a word used chiefly by medicinal writers.

The depression of the cranium, without a fracture, can but seldom occur; and then it happens to children, whose bones are more pliable and soft than those of adults.

SHARP'S SURGERY.

To ADU'LTRER. v.a. [adulterer, Fr. adultero, Lat.] To commit adultery with another: a word not classical.

*His chaste wife
He adulterers still: his thoughts lye with a whore.* BEN JONSON.

ADU'LTRERANT. n.s. [adulterans, Lat.] The person or thing which adulterates.

To ADU'LTRERATE. v.a. [adulterer, Fr. adultero, Lat.]

1. To commit adultery.

*But fortune, oh!
Adulterates hourly with thine uncle John;
And with her golden hand hath pluckt on France.* SHAKESPEARE'S KING JOHN.

2. To corrupt by some foreign admixture; to contaminate.

Common pot-ashes, bought of them that sell it in shops, who are not so foolishly knavish, as to adulterate them with salt-petre, which is much dearer than pot-ashes. BOYLE.

*Could a man be composed to such an advantage of constitution, that it should not at all adulterate the images of his mind; yet this second nature would alter
the crasis of his understanding.*

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA,
C. XVI.

The present war has so adulterated our tongue with strange words, that it would be impossible for one of our great grandfathers to know what his posterity have been doing. SPECTATOR.

ADU'LTRERER. n.s. [adulter, Lat.] The person guilty of adultery.

*With what impatience must the muse
behold,
The wife by her procuring husband sold;
For tho' the law makes null th' adulterer's
deed
Of lands to her, the cuckold may succeed.*
DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

ADU' LTERESS. n.s. [from adulterer.] A woman that commits adultery.

The Spartan lady replied, when she was asked, What was the punishment for adulteresses? There are no such things here.

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE, §3.

*A robe of tissue, stiff with golden wire;
An upper vest, once Helen's rich attire;
From Argos by the fam'd adult'ress brought;
With golden flow'rs and winding foliage wrought.* DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

ADU' LTERINE. n.s. [adulterine, Fr. adulterinus, Lat.] A child born of an adulteress: a term of canon law.

ADU' LTEROUS. adj. [adulter, Lat.] Guilty of adultery.

*Th' adulterous Antony, most large
In his abominations, turns you off,
And gives his potent regiment to a trull,
That noses it against us.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND
CLEOPATRA.

An adulterous person is tied to restitution of the injury, so far as it is reparable; and to make provision for the children, that they may not injure the legitimate.

TAYLOR.

Think on whose faith th' adult'rous youth rely'd;

Who promis'd, who procur'd the Spartan bride? DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

ADU' LTERY. n.s. [adulterium, Lat.] The act of violating the bed of a married person.

*All thy domestic griefs at home be left,
The wife's adult'ry, with the servant's theft;
And (the most racking thought, which can intrude)*

Forget false friends, and their ingratitude.
DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

To ADU' MBRATE. v.a. [adumbro, Lat.] To shadow out; to give a slight likeness; to exhibit a faint resemblance, like that which shadows afford of the bodies which they represent.

Heaven is designed for our reward, as well as rescue; and therefore is adumbrated by all those positive excellencies, which can endear or recommend.

DECAY OF PIETY.

AFFIDA' VIT. n.s. [affidavit signifies, in the language of the common law, he made oath.] A declaration upon oath.

*You said, if I return'd next 'size in Lent,
I should be in remitter of your grace;
In th' interim my letters should take place
Of affidavits.* DONNE.

Count Rechteren should have made affidavit, that his servants had been affronted, and then Monsieur Mesnager would have done him justice. SPECTATOR, NO 481.

A' FFLUENCE. n.s. [affluence, Fr. affluentia, Lat.]

1. The act of flowing to any place; concourse. It is almost always used figuratively.

I shall not relate the affluence of young nobles from hence into Spain, after the voice of our prince being there had been noised. WOTTON.

2. Exuberance of riches; stream of wealth; plenty.

Those degrees of fortune, which give fulness and affluence to one station, may be want and penury in another. ROGERS.

*Let joy or ease, let affluence or content,
And the gay conscience of a life well spent,
Calm ev'ry thought, inspirit ev'ry grace.*

POPE.

To AFFRO' NT. v.a. [affronter, Fr. that is, ad frontem stare; ad frontem & contumeliam allidere, to insult a man to his face.]

1. To meet face to face; to encounter. This seems the genuine and original sense of the word, which was formerly indifferent to good or ill.

*We have closely sent for Hamlet hither,
That he, as 'twere by accident, may here Affront Ophelia.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

The seditious, the next day, affronted the king's forces at the entrance of a highway; whom when they found both ready and resolute to fight, they desired enterparlance, and in the meantime they began to fortify.

SIR JOHN HAYWARD.

2. To meet, in an hostile manner, front to front.

*His holy rites and solemn feasts profan'd,
And with their darkness durst affront his light.* PARADISE LOST.

3. To offer an open insult; to offend avowedly. With respect to this sense, it is observed by Cervantes, that, if a man strikes another on the back, and then runs away, the person so struck is injured, but not affronted; an affront always implying a justification of the act.

*But harm precedes not sin only our foe,
Tempting affronts us with his foul esteem
Of our integrity.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. IX.

I would learn the cause, why Torrismond, Within my palace walls, within my hearing,

*Almost within my sight, affronts a prince,
Who shortly shall command him.*

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRIAR.

*This brings to mind Faustina's fondness for the gladiator, and is interpreted as satire.
But how can one imagine, that the Fathers would have dared to affront the wife of Aurelius.* ADDISON.

A'FTER. adv.

1. In succeeding time. It is used of time mentioned as succeeding some other. So we cannot say, I shall be happy after, but hereafter; but we say, I was first made miserable by the loss, but was after happier.

Far be it from me, to justify the cruelties which were at first used towards them, which had their reward soon after.

BACON.

The chief were those who, from the pit of hell

Roaming to seek their prey on earth, durst fix

Their seats long after next the seat of God.

PARADISE LOST.

2. Following another.

Let go thy hold, when a great wheel runs down a hill, lest it break thy neck with following it; but the great one that goes upward, let him draw thee after.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

AFTER is compounded with many words, but almost always in its genuine and primitive signification; some, which occurred, will follow, by which others may be explained.

A'FTER ACCEPTATION. [from after and acceptation.] A sense afterwards, not at first admitted.

*'Tis true, some doctors in a scantier space,
I mean, in each apart, contract the place:
Some, who to greater length extend the line,
The church's after acceptance join.*

DRYDEN'S HIND AND PANTHER.

A'FTER ALL. When all has been taken into the view; when there remains nothing more to be added; at last; in fine; in conclusion.<sup>8</sup>

They have given no good proof in asserting this extravagant principle; for which, after all, they have no ground or colour, but a passage or two of scripture, miserably perverted, in opposition to many express texts. ATTERBURY'S SERMONS.

But, after all, if they have any merit, it is to be attributed to some good old authors, whose works I had leisure to study.

POPE ON PASTORAL POETRY.

A'FTERCROP. n.s. [from after and crop.] The second crop or harvest of the same year.

Aftercrops I think neither good for the land, nor yet the hay good for cattle.

MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

A'FTER-DINNER. n.s. [from after and dinner.] The hour passing just after dinner, which is generally allowed to indulgence and amusement.

*Thou hast nor youth nor age,
But, as it were, an afterdinner's sleep,
Dreaming on both.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

A'FTERMATH. n.s. [from after, and math, from mow.] The latter math; the second crop of grass mown in autumn. See AFTERCROP.

A'FTERWARD. adv. [from after, and wearð, Sax.] In succeeding time; sometimes written afterwards, but less properly.

Uses not thought upon before, may afterward spring up, and be reasonable causes of retaining that, which former considerations did formerly procure to be instituted.

HOOKE.

An anxious distrust of the divine goodness, makes a man more and more unworthy of it; and miserable beforehand, for fear of being so afterward. L'ESTRANGE.

A'GARICK. n.s. [agaricum, Lat.] A drug of use in physick, and the dying trade. It is divided into male and female; the male is used only in dying, the female in medicine: the male grows on oaks, the female on larches.

There are two excrescences which grow upon trees; both of them in the nature of mushrooms: the one the Romans call boletus, which groweth upon the roots of oaks, and was one of the dainties of their table; the other is medicinal, that is called agarick, which groweth upon the tops of oaks; though it be affirmed by some, that it groweth also at the roots. BACON.

AGA'ST. adj. [This word, which is usually, by later authours, written aghost, is, not improbably, the true word derived from agaze, which has been written aghost, from a mistaken etymology. See AGHAST.] Struck with terrour; amazed; frighted to astonishment.

*Thus roving on In confus'd march forlorn, th' advent'rous bands,
With shudd'ring horrour pale, and eyes
agast,
View'd first their lamentable lot, and found

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. II. L. 616.

TO AGA'ZE. v.a. [from a and gaze, to set a gazing; as, amaze, amuse, and others.] To strike with amazement; to stupify with sudden terrour. The verb is now out of use.

*So as they travell'd, so they gan espy
An armed knight toward them gallop fast,
That seemed from some feared foe to fly,
Or other grisly thing that him agast.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

AGHA'ST. adj. [either the participle of agaze, (see AGAZE.) and then to be written agazed, or agast, or from a and gast, a ghost, which the present orthography favours; perhaps they were originally different words.] Struck with horrour, as at the sight of a spectre; stupified with terrour. It is generally applied to the external appearance.

*Who sighing sore, as if her heart in twaine
Had riven been, and all her heart-strings
brast,
With dreary drooping eyne look'd up like one aghost.* SPENSER.

*The aged earth aghost,
With terrour of that blast,*

Shall from the surface to the centre shake.

MILTON'S CHRIST'S NATIVITY.

Aghast he wak'd, and, starting from his bed,

Cold sweat in clammy drops his limbs o'erspread. DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

I laugh to think how your unshaken Cato Will look aghast, while unforeseen destruction

Pours in upon him thus from every side. ADDISON'S CATO.

AGITA'TOR. n.s. [from agitate.] He that agitates any thing; he who manages affairs: in which sense seems to be used the agitators of the army.

A'GUE. n.s. [aigu, Fr. acute.] An intermitting fever, with cold fits succeeded by hot. The cold fit is, in popular language, more particularly called the ague, and the hot the fever.

Our castle's strength Will laugh a siege to scorn. Here let them lie, Till famine and the ague eat them up. SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

Though He feels the heats of youth, and colds of age, Yet neither tempers nor corrects the other; As if there were an ague in his nature, That still inclines to one extreme. DENHAM'S SOPHY.

AHA', AHA! interjection. A word intimating triumph and contempt.

They opened their mouth wide against me, and said, Aha, aha! our eye hath seen it. BIBLE PSALMS, XXXV. 21.

To AIL. v.a. [eglan, Sax. to be troublesome.]

1. To pain; to trouble; to give pain.

And the angel of God called to Hagar out of heaven, and said unto her, what aileth thee, Hagar? fear not: for God hath heard the voice of the lad where he is.

BIBLE GENESIS, XXI. 17.

2. It is used, in a sense less determinate, for to affect in any manner; as, something ails me that I cannot sit still; what ails the man that he laughs without reason?

Love smil'd, and thus said, Want join'd to desire is unhappy; But if he nought do desire, what can Heraclitus ail? SIDNEY.

What ails me, that I cannot lose thy thought!

Command the empress hither to be brought, I, in her death, shall some diversion find, And rid my thoughts at once of woman-kind.

DRYDEN'S TYRANNICK LOVE.

3. To feel pain; to be incommoded.

4. It is remarkable, that this word is never used but with some indefinite term, or the word nothing; as, What ails him? What does he ail? He ails something; he ails nothing. Something ails him; nothing ails him. Thus we never say, a fever ails him, or he ails a fever, or use definite terms with this verb.

A'IRLING. n.s. [from air, for gayety.] A young, light, thoughtless, gay person.

Some more there be, slight airings, will be won

With dogs, and horses, and perhaps a whore. BEN JONSON'S CATILINE.

AISLE. n.s. [Thus the word is written by Addison, but perhaps improperly; since it seems deducible only from either aile, a wing, or allée, a path; and is therefore to be written aile.] The walks in a church, or wings of a quire.

The abbey is by no means so magnificent as one would expect from its endowments. The church is one huge nef, with a double aisle to it; and, at each end, is a large quire.

ADDISON.

To AKE. v.n. [from ἄχος, Gr. and therefore more grammatically written ache. See ACHE.]

1. To feel a lasting pain, generally of the internal pains; distinguished from smart, which is commonly used of uneasiness in the external parts; but this is no accurate account.

*To sue, and be deny'd, such common grace,
My wounds ake at you!*

SHAKESPEARE'S TIMON.

*Let our finger ake, and it endues
Our other healthful members with a sense Of pain.* SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

*Were the pleasure of drinking accompanied,
the very moment, with that sick stomach and aking head, which, in some men, are sure to follow, I think, no body would ever let wine touch his lips.* LOCKE.

*His limbs must ake, with daily toils
opprest,*

Ere long-wish'd night brings necessary rest. PRIOR.

2. It is frequently applied, in an improper sense, to the heart; as, the heart akes; to imply grief or fear. Shakespeare has used it, still more licentiously, of the soul.

*Here shame dissuades him, there his fear prevails,
And each, by turns, his aking heart assails.*

ADDISON'S OVID'S METAMORPHOSES.

My soul akes

*To know when two authorities are up,
Neither supreme, how soon confusion
May enter.*

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

ALAMO'DE. adv. [à la mode, Fr.] According to the fashion: a low word. It is used likewise by the shopkeepers for a kind of thin silken manufacture.

A'LEBERRY. n.s. [from ale and berry.] A beverage made by boiling ale with spice and sugar, and sops of bread: a word only used in conversation.

A'LECONNER. n.s. [from ale and con.] An officer in the city of London, whose business is to inspect the measures of publick houses. Four of them are chosen or rechosen annually by the common-hall of the city; and whatever might be their use formerly, their places are now regarded only as sine-cures for decayed citizens.

A'LEHOUSE. n.s. [from ale and house.] A house where ale is publicly sold; a tipling-house. It is distinguished from a tavern, where they sell wine.

*Thou most beauteous inn,
Why should hard-favour'd grief be lodg'd
in thee,*

*When triumph is become an alehouse
guest?* SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD II.

One would think it should be no easy matter to bring any man of sense in love with an alehouse; indeed of so much sense, as seeing and smelling amounts to; there being such strong encounters of both, as would quickly send him packing, did not the love of good fellowship reconcile to these nusances. SOUTH.

*Thee shall each alehouse, thee each gilhouse mourn,
And answ'ring ginshops sower sighs return.* POPE'S DUNCIAD.

ALE'MBICK. n.s. A vessel used in distilling, consisting of a vessel placed over a fire, in which is contained the substance to be distilled, and a concave closely fitted on, into which the fumes arise by the heat; this cover has a beak or spout, into which the vapours rise, and by which they pass into a serpentine pipe, which is kept cool by making many convolutions in a tub of water; here the vapours are condensed, and what entered the pipe in fumes, comes out in drops.

Though water may be rarefied into invisible vapours, yet it is not changed into air, but only scattered into minute parts; which meeting together in the alembick, or in the receiver, do presently return into such water as they constituted before. BOYLE.

A'LGATES. adv. [from all and gate. Skinner. Gate is the same as via; and still used for way in the Scottish dialect.] On any terms; every way: now obsolete.

*Nor had the boaster ever risen more,
But that Rinaldo's horse ev'n then down fell,
And with the fall his leg oppress'd so sore,
That, for a space, there must he algates dwell.* FAIRFAX.

A'LIAS. adv. A Latin word, signifying otherwise; often used in the trials of criminals, whose danger has obliged them to change their names; as, Simpson alias Smith, alias Baker; that is, otherwise Smith, otherwise Baker.

ALL FOURS. n.s. [from all and four.] A low game at cards, played by two; so named from the four particulars by which it is reckoned, and which, joined in the hand of either of the parties, are said to make all fours.

A'LLEGORY. n.s. [ᾠλληγορία.] A figurative discourse, in which something other is intended, than is contained in the words literally taken; as, wealth is the daughter of diligence, and the parent of authority.

Neither must we draw out our allegory too long, lest either we make ourselves obscure, or fall into affectation, which is childish.

BEN JONSON'S DISCOVERY.

This word nymphæ meant nothing else but, by allegory, the vegetative humour or moisture that quickeneth and giveth life to trees and flowers, whereby they grow.

PEACHAM.

ALLE'GRO. n.s. A word, denoting one of the six distinctions of time. It expresses a sprightly motion, the quickest of all, except Presto. It originally means gay, as in Milton.

ALLO'DIUM. n.s. [A word of very uncertain derivation, but most probably of German original.] A possession held in absolute independence, without any acknowledgment of a lord paramount. It is opposed to fee, or feudum, which intimates some kind of dependance. There are no allodial lands in England, all being held either mediately or immediately of the king.

ALLU'SION. n.s. [allusio, Lat.] That which is spoken with reference to something supposed to be already known, and therefore not expressed; a hint; an implication. It has the particle to.

Here are manifest allusions and footsteps of the dissolution of the earth, as it was in the deluge, and will be in its last ruin.

BURNET'S THEORY.

This last allusion gall'd the Panther more,

Because indeed it rubb'd upon the sore.

DRYDEN.

Expressions now out of use, allusions to customs lost to us, and various particularities, must needs continue several passages in the dark.

LOCKE'S ESSAY ON ST. PAUL'S EPISTLES.

1. This word is seldom used but with the word let, if even then it be an adverb, and implies sometimes an ironical prohibition, to help a man who is able to manage the affair himself.<sup>9</sup>

Let us alone to guard Corioli,
If they set down before's; 'fore they remove,
Bring up your army.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

Let you alone, cunning artificer;
See how his gorget peers above his gown,
To tell the people in what danger he was.

BEN JONSON'S CATILINE.

2. To let alone; to forbear; to leave unfinished.

His client stole it, but he had better have let it alone; for he lost his cause by his jest.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO 408.

To A' LTER. v.a. [alterer, Fr. from alter, Lat.]

1. To change; to make otherwise than it is. To alter, seems more properly to imply a change made only in some part of a thing; as, to alter a writing, may be, to blot or interpolate it; to change it, may be, to substitute another in its place.<sup>10</sup>

Do you note

How much her grace is alter'd on the sudden?

How long her face is drawn? how pale she looks,

And of an earthly cold?

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

Acts appropriated to the worship of God by his own appointment, must continue so, till himself hath otherwise declared: for who dares alter what God hath appointed?

STILLINGFLEET'S DEFENCE OF DISCOURSE ON ROMISH IDOLATRY.

2. To take off from a persuasion or sect.

For the way of writing plays in verse, I find it troublesome and slow; but I am no way altered from my opinion of it, at least with any reasons which have opposed it.

DRYDEN.

ALTI' LOQUENCE. n.s. [altus and loquor, Lat.] High speech; pompous language.

A. M. Stands for artium magister, or master of arts; the second degree of our universities, which, in some foreign countries, is called doctor of philosophy.

AMA'RITUDE. n.s. [amaritudo, Lat.] Bitterness.

What amaritudo or acrimony is deprehended in choler, it acquires from a commixture of melancholy, or external malign bodies.

HARVEY ON CONSUMPTIONS.

AMATO'RCULIST. n.s. [amatorculus, Lat.] A little insignificant lover; a pretender to affection.

A' MAZON. n.s. [α and μάζος.] The Amazons were a race of women famous for valour, who inhabited Caucasus; they are so called from their cutting off their breasts, to use their weapons better. A warlike woman; a virago.

Stay, stay thy hands, thou art an amazon, And fightest with the sword.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

AMBA'GES. n.s. [Lat.] A circuit of words; a circumlocutory form of speech; a multiplicity of words; an indirect manner of expression.

They gave those complex ideas names, that they might the more easily record and discourse of things they were daily conversant in, without long ambages and circumlocutions; and that the things, they were continually to give and receive information about, might be the easier and quicker understood. LOCKE.

AMBER DRINK. n.s. Drink of the colour of amber, or resembling amber in colour and transparency.

All your clear amber drink is flat.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

A' MBIGU. n.s. [French.] An entertainment, consisting not of regular courses, but of a medley of dishes set on together.

*When straiten'd in your time, and servants few,
You'd richly then compose an ambigu;
Where first and second course, and your desert,*

All in our single table have their part.

KING'S ART OF COOKERY.

A'MBRY. n.s. [a word corrupted from almonry.]

1. The place where the almoner lives, or where alms are distributed.
2. The place where plate, and utensils for housekeeping, are kept; also a cupboard for keeping cold victuals: a word still used in the northern counties, and in Scotland.

To AME'ND. v.a. [amender, Fr. emendo, Lat.]

1. To correct; to change any thing that is wrong to something better.
2. To reform the life, or leave wickedness. In these two cases we usually write mend. See MEND.

Amend your ways and your doings, and I will cause you to dwell in this place.

BIBLE JEREMIAH, VII. 3.

To AME'ND. v.n. To grow better. To amend differs from to improve; to improve supposes or not denies that the thing is well already, but to amend implies something wrong.

As my fortune either amends or impairs, I may declare it unto you. SIDNEY.

At his touch

*Such sanctity hath heaven given his hand,
They presently amend.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

AME'NDE. n.s. [French.] This word, in French, signifies a fine, by which recompense is supposed to be made for the fault committed. We use, in a cognate signification, the word amends.

A'MICABLE. adj. [amicabilis, Lat.] Friendly; kind. It is commonly used of more than one; as, they live in an amicable manner; but we seldom say, an amicable action, or an amicable man, though it be so used in this passage.

*O grace serene! oh virtue heav'nly fair,
Divine oblivion of low-thoughted care!
Fresh blooming hope, gay daughter of the sky!*

*And faith, our early immortality!
Enter each mild, each amicable guest;
Receive and wrap me in eternal rest.*

POPE'S ELOISE TO ABELARD.

A'MITY. n.s. [amitie, Fr. amicitia, Lat.] Friendship, whether publick between nations, opposed to war, or among the people, opposed to discord, or between private persons.

The prophet David did think, that the very meeting of men together, and their accompanying one another to the house of God, should make the bond of their love insoluble, and tie them in a league of inviolable amity. HOOKER, B. V. §38.

The monarchy of Great Britain was in league and amity with all the world.

SIR JOHN DAVIES ON IRELAND.

*You have a noble and a true conceit
Of godlike amity; which appears most strongly*

In bearing thus the absence of your lord.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF
VENICE.

*And ye, oh Tyrians, with immortal hate Pursue this race, this service dedicate
To my deplored ashes; let there be
'Twixt us and them no league nor amity.*

SIR JOHN DENHAM.

A'MNESTY. n.s. [ἀμνηστία.] An act of oblivion; an act by which crimes against the government, to a certain time, are so obliterated, that they can never be brought into charge.

I never read of a law enacted to take away the force of all laws, by which a man may safely commit upon the last of June, what he would infallibly be hanged for, if he committed it on the first of July; by which the greatest criminals may escape, provided they continue long enough in power, to anti-quate their crimes, and, by stifling them a while, deceive the legislature into an amnesty. SWIFT.

AMO'UR. n.s. [amour, Fr. amor, Lat.] An affair of gallantry; an intrigue: generally used of vicious love. The ou sounds like oo in poor.

No man is of so general and diffusive a lust, as to prosecute his amours all the world over; and let it burn never so outrageously, yet the impure flame will either die of itself, or consume the body that harbours it. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

*The restless youth search'd all the world around;
But how can Jove in his amours be found?*

ADDISON'S OVID'S METAMORPHOSES.

A'MPER. n.s. [ampre, Sax.] A tumour, with inflammation; bile: a word said, by Skinner, to be much in use in Essex; but, perhaps, not found in books.

AMPHITHE'ATRE. n.s. [of 'αμφιθέατρον, of 'αμφι and θέαμαι.] A building in a circular or oval form, having its area encompassed with rows of seats one above another; where spectators might behold spectacles, as stage-plays, or gladiators. The theatres of the ancients were built in the form of a semicircle, only exceeding a just semicircle by one fourth part of the diameter; and the amphitheatre is two theatres joined together; so that the longest diameter of the amphitheatre, was to the shortest, as one and a half to one.

*Within, an amphitheatre appear'd
Rais'd in degrees; to sixty paces rear'd,
That when a man was plac'd in one degree,
Height was allow'd for him above to see.*

DRYDEN'S FABLES.

Conceive a man placed in the burning iron chair at Lyons, amid the insults and mockeries of a crouded amphitheatre, and still keeping his seat; or stretched upon a grate of iron, over coals of fire, and breathing out his soul, among the exquisite sufferings of such a tedious execution, rather than renounce his religion, or blaspheme his Saviour.

ADDISON ON THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

A'MPLIFIER. n.s. [from To amplify.] One that enlarges any thing; one that exaggerates; one that represents any thing with a large display of the best circumstances; it being usually taken in a good sense.

Dorillaus could need no amplifier's mouth for the highest point of praise.

SIDNEY, B. II.

TO A'MPUTATE. v.a. [amputo, Lat.] To cut off a limb: a word used only in chirurgery.

Amongst the cruizers in private frigates from Dunkirk, it was complained, that their surgeons were too active in amputating those fractured members.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

TO AMU'SE. v.a. [amuser, Fr.]

1. To entertain with tranquillity; to fill with thoughts that engage the mind, without distracting it. To divert implies something more lively, and to please, something more important. It is therefore frequently taken in a sense bordering on contempt.

They think they see visions, and are arrived to some extraordinary revelations; when, indeed, they do but dream dreams, and amuse themselves with the fantastick ideas of a busy imagination.

DECAY OF PIETY.

I cannot think it natural for a man, who is much in love, to amuse himself with trifles. WALSH.

2. To draw on from time to time; to keep in expectation; as, he amused his followers with idle promises.

A'NA. n.s. Books so called from the last syllables of their titles; as Scaligerana, Thuaniana; they are loose thoughts, or casual hints, dropped by eminent men, and collected by their friends.

ANA'CHRONISM. n.s. [from 'ανά and χρόνος.] An error in computing time, by which events are misplaced with regard to each other. It seems properly to signify an error by which an event is placed too early; but is generally used for any error in chronology.

This leads me to the defence of the famous anachronism, in making Æneas and Dido contemporaries: for it is certain, that the hero lived almost two hundred years before the building of Carthage.

DRYDEN'S VIRGIL, DEDICATION.

A'NAGRAM. n.s. ['ανά and γράμμα.] A conceit arising from the letters of a name transposed; as this, of W,i,l,l,i,a,m, N,o,y, attorney-general to Charles I. a very laborious man, I moyl in law.<sup>11</sup>

*Though all her parts be not in th' usual place,
She hath yet the anagrams of a good face:
If we might put the letters but one way,
In that lean dearth of words, what could we say?* DONNE.

*Thy genius calls thee not to purchase fame
In keen iambicks, but mild anagram.*

DRYDEN.

ANA'LYSIS. n.s. ['ανάλυσις.]

1. A separation of a compound body into the several parts of which it consists.

There is an account of dew falling, in some places, in the form of butter, or grease, which grows extremely fetid; so that the analysis of the dew of any place, may, perhaps, be the best method of finding such contents of the soil as are within the reach of the sun. ARBUTHNOT.

2. A consideration of any thing in parts, so as that one particular is first considered, then another.

Analysis consists in making experiments and observations, and in drawing general conclusions from them by induction, and admitting of no objections against the conclusions, but such as are taken from experiments, or other certain truths.

NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

3. A solution of any thing, whether corporeal or mental, to its first elements; as, of a sentence to the single words; of a compound word, to the particles and words which form it; of a tune, to single notes; of an argument, to simple propositions.

We cannot know any thing of nature, but by an analysis of its true initial causes; till we know the first springs of natural motions, we are still but ignorants.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

A'NCIENT. adj. [ancien, Fr. antiquus, Lat.]

1. Old; that happened long since; of old time; not modern. Ancient and old are distinguished; old relates to the duration of the thing itself, as, an old coat, a coat much worn; and ancient, to time in general, as, an ancient dress, a habit used in former times. But this is not always observed; for we mention old customs; but though old be sometimes opposed to modern, ancient is seldom opposed to new.<sup>12</sup>

Ancient tenure is that whereby all the manours belonging to the crown, in St. Edward's or William the Conquerour's days, did hold. The number and names of which manours, as all others belonging to common persons, he caused to be written in a book, after a survey made of them, now remaining in the exchequer, and called doomsday book; and such as by that book appeared to have belonged to the crown at that time, are called ancient demesnes.

COWELL.

2. Old; that has been of long duration.

With the ancient is wisdom, and in length of days understanding.

BIBLE JOB, XII. 12.

Thales affirms, that God comprehended all things, and that God was of all things the most ancient, because he never had any beginning.

RALEIGH'S HISTORY OF THE WORLD.

Industry

Gave the tall ancient forest too his axe.

THOMSON'S SUMMER.

3. Past; former.

*I see thy fury: if I longer stay,
We shall begin our ancient bickerings.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

AND. conjunction.

1. The particle by which sentences or terms are joined, which it is not easy to explain by any synonymous word.

Sure his honesty

*Got him small gains, but shameless flattery
And filthy beverage, and unseemly theft,
And borrow base, and some good lady's gift.* SPENSER'S HUBBERD'S TALE.

*What shall I do to be for ever known,
And make the age to come my own?*

COWLEY.

The Danes unconquer'd offspring march behind;

And Morini, the last of human kind.

DRYDEN.

It shall ever be my study to make discoveries of this nature in human life, and to settle the proper distinctions between the virtues and perfections of mankind, and those false colours and resemblances of them that shine alike in the eyes of the vulgar. ADDISON'S TATLER.

2. And sometimes signifies though, and seems a contraction of and if.

It is the nature of extreme self-lovers, as they will set an house on fire, and it were but to roast their eggs. BACON.

3. In and if, the and is redundant, and is omitted by all later writers.

I pray thee, Launce, an' if thou seest my boy,

Bid him make haste.

SHAKESPEARE'S TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

ANE'NT. prep. A word used in the Scotch dialect.

1. Concerning; about; as, he said nothing anent this particular.

2. Over against; opposite to; as, he lives anent the market-house.

A'NGLICISM. n.s. [from Anglus, Lat.] A form of speech peculiar to the English language; an English idiom.

ANIMO'SITY. n.s. [animositas, Lat.] Vehemence of hatred; passionate malignity. It implies rather the disposition to break out into outrages, than the outrage itself.

They were sure to bring passion, animosity, and malice enough of their own, what evidence soever they had from others.

CLARENDON, B. VIII.

If there is not some method found out for allaying these heats and animosities among the fair sex, one does not know to what outrages they may proceed.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER, NO 23.

No religious sect ever carried their aversions for each other to greater heights than our state parties have done; who, the more to inflame their passions, have mixed religious and civil animosities together; borrowing one of their appellations from the church.

SWIFT ON THE SENTIMENTS OF A CHURCH OF ENGLAND MAN.

A'NNO DOMINI. [Lat.] In the year of our Lord; as, anno domini, or A.D. 1751; that is, in the seventeen hundred and fifty first year from the birth of our Saviour.

ANO'MALOUS. adj. [α priv. and 'άμαλος.] Irregular; out of rule; deviating from the general method or analogy of things: It is applied, in grammar, to words deviating from the common rules of inflection; and, in astronomy, to the seemingly irregular motions of the planets.

There will arise anomalous disturbances not only in civil and artificial, but also in military officers.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

He being acquainted with some characters of every speech, you may at pleasure make him understand anomalous pronunciation.

HOLDER'S ELEMENTS OF SPEECH.

Metals are gold, silver, copper, tin, lead, and iron: to which we may join that anomalous body, quicksilver or mercury.

LOCKE'S ELEMENTS OF NATURAL PHILOSOPHY.

ANO'THERGUESS. adj. [This word, which though rarely used in writing, is somewhat frequent in colloquial language, I conceive to be corrupted from another guise; that is, of a different guise, or manner, or form.] Of a different kind.

Oh Hocus! where art thou? It used to go in anotherguess manner in thy time.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

A'NSWER-JOBBER. n.s. [from answer and jobber.] He that makes a trade of writing answers.

What disgusts me from having any thing to do with answer-jobbers, is, that they have no conscience. SWIFT.

ANTA'LGICK. adj. [from 'αντί, against, and 'άλγος, pain.] That which softens pain; anodyne.

ANTAPHRODI'TICK. adj. [from 'αντί, against, and 'άφροδίτη, Venus.] That which is efficacious against the venereal disease.

ANTAPOPLE'CTICK. adj. ['αντί, against, and 'αποπληξίς, an apoplexy.] Good against an apoplexy.

ANTARTHRI'TICK. adj. ['αντί, against, and 'άρθρις, the gout.] Good against the gout.

ANTASTHMA'TICK. adj. [from 'αντί and 'άσθμα.] Good against the asthma.

ANTECE'DENT. adj. [antecedens, Lat.]

1. Going before; preceding. Antecedent is used, I think, only with regard to time; precedent, with regard both to time and place.

To assert, that God looked upon Adam's fall as a sin, and punished it, when, without any antecedent sin of his, it was impossible for him not to fall, seems a thing that highly reproaches essential equity and goodness. SOUTH.

2. It has to before the thing which is supposed to follow.

No one is so hardy as to say, God is in his debt; that he owed him a nobler being: for existence must be antecedent to merit.

COLLIER OF ENVY.

Did the blood first exist, antecedent to the formation of the heart? But that is to set the effect before the cause. BENTLEY.

ANTHROPOPHAGI'NIAN. n.s.

A ludicrous word, formed by Shakespeare from anthropophagi, for the sake of a formidable sound.

Go, knock, and call; he'll speak like an anthropophaginian unto thee; knock, I say.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

A'NTICK. adj. [probably from antiquus, ancient, as things out of use appear old.]

Odd; ridiculously wild; buffoon in gesticulation.

*What! dares the slave Come hither cover'd with an antick
face,*

And fleer and scorn at our solemnity?

SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO AND JULIET.

*Of all our antick fights, and pageantry,
Which English idiots run in crouds to see.*

DRYDEN.

The prize was to be conferred upon the whistler, that could go through his tune without laughing, though provoked by the antick postures of a merry Andrew, who was to play tricks.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO 179.

ANTI'PODES. n.s. It has no singular. [from 'αντί, against, and πόδες, feet.] Those people who, living on the other side of the globe, have their feet directly opposite to ours.

*We should hold day with the antipodes,
If you would walk in absence of the sun.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF VENICE.

So shines the sun, tho' hence remov'd, as clear

When his beams warm th' antipodes, as here. WALLER.

ANTI'QUITY. n.s. [antiquitas, Lat.]

1. Old times; time past long ago.

I mention Aristotle, Polybius, and Cicero, the greatest philosopher, the most impartial historian, and the most consummate statesman of all antiquity.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER, NO 51.

2. The people of old times; the ancients.

That such pillars were raised by Seth, all antiquity has avowed.

RALEIGH'S HISTORY OF THE WORLD.

3. The works or remains of old times.

As for the observation of Machiavel, traducing Gregory the Great, that he did what in him lay, to extinguish all heathen antiquities: I do not find that those zeals last long; as it appeared in the succession of Sabinian, who did revive the former antiquities. BACON'S ESSAYS.

4. Old age: a ludicrous sense.

Is not your voice broken? your wind short? your chin double? your wit single? and every part about you blasted with antiquity? and will you yet call yourself young? SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

5. Ancientness; as, this ring is valuable for its antiquity.

APE. n.s. [ape, Icelandish.]

1. A kind of monkey remarkable for imitating what he sees.

*I will be more newfangled than an ape,
more giddy in my desires than a monkey.*

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

Writers report, that the heart of an ape worn near the heart, comforteth the heart, and increaseth audacity. It is true, that the ape is a merry and bold beast.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

*With glittering gold and sparkling gems
they shine,*

But apes and monkeys are the gods within. GRANVILLE.

2. An imitator; used generally in the bad sense.

Julio Romano, who, had he himself eternity, and could put breath into his work, would beguile nature of her custom: so perfectly he is her ape.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

APE'RITIVE. adj. [from aperio, Lat. to open.] That which has the quality of opening the excrementious passages of the body.

They may make broth, with the addition of aperitive herbs.

HARVEY ON CONSUMPTIONS.

API'TPAT. adv. [a word formed from the motion.] With quick palpitation.

O there he comes — Ay, my Hector of Troy, welcome my bully, my back; agad my heart has gone apitpat for you.

CONGREVE'S OLD BATCHELOR.

APO'STLE. n.s. [apostolus, Lat. ᾠπόστολος.] A person sent with mandates by another. It is particularly applied to them whom our Saviour deputed to preach the gospel.

But all his mind is bent to holiness; His champions are the prophets and apostles. SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

I am far from pretending infallibility; that would be to erect myself into an apostle: a presumption in any one that cannot confirm what he says by miracles.

LOCKE.

We know but a small part of the notion of an apostle, by knowing barely that he is sent forth. WATTS'S LOGICK.

APPARA'TUS. n.s. [Latin.] Things provided as means to any certain end, as the tools of a trade; the furniture of a house; ammunition for war; equipage; show.

There is an apparatus of things previous, to be adjusted before I come to the calculation itself.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

Ourselves are easily provided for; it is nothing but the circumstantials, the apparatus or equipage of human life, that costs so much. POPE'S LETTERS TO GAY.

To APPE'AR. v.n. [appareo, Lat.]

1. To be in sight; to be visible; sometimes with the particle in.<sup>13</sup>

As the leprosy appeareth in the skin of the flesh. BIBLE LEVITICUS, XIII. 43.

*And half her knee, and half her breast appear,
By art, like negligence, disclos'd and bare.*
PRIOR.

2. To become visible as a spirit.

For I have appeared unto thee for this purpose, to make thee a minister and a witness. BIBLE ACTS, XXVI. 16.

3. To stand in the presence of another; generally used of standing before some superiour.

When shall I come and appear before God? BIBLE PSALMS, XLII. 2.

4. To be the object of observation.

Let thy work appear unto thy servants, and thy glory unto their children.
BIBLE PSALMS, XC. 16.

5. To exhibit one's self before a court of justice.

Keep comfort to you, and this morning see You do appear before them.
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

6. To be made clear by evidence.

Egfrid did utterly waste and subdue it, as appears out of Beda's complaint against him; and Edgar brought it under his obedience, as appears by an ancient record.
SPENSER'S IRELAND.

7. To seem in opposition to reality.

His first and principal care being to appear unto his people, such as he would have them be, and to be such as he appeared.
SIDNEY, B. II.

*My noble master will appear
Such as he is, full of regard and honour.*
SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

8. To be plain beyond dispute.

From experiments, useful indications may be taken, as will appear by what follows.
ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

APPLI'ABLE. adj. [from apply.] That which may be applied. For this word the moderns use applicable; which see.

Limitations all such principles have, in regard of the varieties of the matter whereunto they are applicable.

HOOKER, B. V.

All that I have said of the heathen idolatry is applicable to the idolatry of another sort of men in the world. SOUTH.

A'PPLICABLE. adj. [from apply.] That which may be applied, as properly relating to something.

What he says of the portrait of any particular person is applicable to poetry. In the character, there is a better or worse likeness; the better is a panegyrick, and the worse a libel.

DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY, PREFACE.

It were happy for us, if this complaint were applicable only to the heathen world.

ROGERS.

To APPO'SE. v.a. [appono, Lat.] To put questions to. This word is not now in use, except that, in some schools, to put grammatical questions to a boy is called, to pose him; and we now use pose for puzzle.<sup>14</sup>

Some procure themselves to be surprised at such times as it is like the party that they work upon, will come upon them: and to be found with a letter in their hand, or doing somewhat which they are not accustomed; to the end they may be apposed of those things which of themselves they are desirous to utter.

BACON.

APPRO'OF. n.s. [from approve, as proof from prove.] Approbation; commendation: a word rightly derived, but old.

*O most perilous mouths,
That bear in them one and the self-same tongue*

Either of condemnation or approof!
SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

To A'PRICATE. v.n. [apricor, Lat.] To bask in the sun. Dictionaries.

APRI' CITY. n.s. [apricitas, Lat.] Warmth of the sun; sunshine. Dictionaries.

APRIL. n.s. [Aprilis, Lat. Avril, Fr.] The fourth month of the year, January counted first.

April is represented by a young man in green, with a garland of myrtle and hawthorn buds; in one hand primroses and violets, in the other the sign Taurus.

PEACHAM ON DRAWING.

Men are April when they woo, December when they wed: Maids are May when they are maids, but the sky changes when they are wives.

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

A'PRON. n.s. [A word of uncertain etymology, but supposed by some to be contracted from afore one.] A cloth hung before, to keep the other dress clean.

Give us gold, good Timon: hast thou more? —

*— Hold up, you sluts,
Your aprons mountant.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TIMON.

The nobility think scorn to go in leather aprons. SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

How might we see Falstaff, and not ourselves be seen? —

Put on two leather jerkins and aprons, and wait upon him at his table as drawers.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

In both these figures the vest is gathered up before them, like an apron, which you must suppose filled with fruits, as well as the cornucopiæ. ADDISON ON MEDALS.

APRON. [in gunnery.] A piece of lead which covers the touchhole of a great gun.

APRON of a goose. The fat skin which covers the belly.

A'PRON-MAN. n.s. [from apron and man.] A man that wears an apron; a workman; an artificer.

*You have made good work,
You and your apron-men, that stood so much*

Upon the voice of occupation, and The breath of garlick eaters.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

AQUA MIRABILIS. [Latin.] The wonderful water, is prepared of cloves, galangals, cubebs, mace, cardomums, nutmegs, ginger, and spirit of wine, digested twenty four hours, then distilled. It is a good and agreeable cordial.<sup>15</sup>

A'QUEDUCT. n.s. [aquæductus, Lat.] A conveyance made for carrying water from one place to another; made on uneven ground, to preserve the level of the water, and convey it by a canal. Some aqueducts are under ground, and others above it, supported by arches.

Among the remains of old Rome, the grandeur of the commonwealth shews itself chiefly in temples, highways, aqueducts, walls and bridges of the city.

ADDISON'S REMARKS ON ITALY.

*Hither the rills of water are convey'd
In curious aqueducts, by nature laid
To carry all the humour.*

BLACKMORE, CREATION.

A.R. anno regni; that is, the year of the reign: as, A.R.G.R. 20. Anno regni Georgii regis vigesimo, in the twentieth year of the reign of king George.

ARBITRA'TION. n.s. [from arbitror, Lat.] The determination of a cause by a judge mutually agreed on by the parties contending.

ARCH. adj. [from 'ἀρχος, chief.]

1. Chief; of the first class.

*The tyrannous and bloody act is done;
The most arch deed of piteous massacre,
That ever yet this land was guilty of.*

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

*There is sprung up
An heretick, an arch one, Cranmer.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

2. Waggish; mirthful; triflingly mischievous. This signification it seems to have gained, by being frequently applied to the boy most remarkable for his pranks; as the arch rogue, &c.<sup>16</sup>

*Eugenio set out from the same university, and about the same time with Corusades;
he had the reputation of an arch lad at school.* SWIFT'S FATES OF CLERGY.

ARCH, in composition, signifies chief, or of the first class, [from 'ἀρχος, or 'ἀρχι.] as, archangel, archbishop. It is pronounced variously with regard to the ch, which before a consonant sound as in cheese, as arch-deacon; before a vowel like k, as archangel.

A'RCHIVES. n.s. without a singular. [archiva, Lat.] The places where records or ancient writings are kept. It is perhaps sometimes used for the writings themselves.

Though we think our words vanish with the breath that utters them, yet they become records in God's court, and are laid up in his archives, as witnesses either for or against us.

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE, §1.

I shall now only look a little into the Mosaick archives, to observe what they furnish us with upon this subject.

WOODWARD.

A'REA. n.s. [Latin.]

1. The surface contained between any lines or boundaries.

The area of a triangle is found by knowing the height and the base.

WATTS'S LOGICK.

2. Any open surface, as the floor of a room; the open part of a church; the vacant part or stage of an amphitheatre. An inclosed place, as lists, or a bowling-green, or grass-plot.

Let us conceive a floor or area of goodly length, with the breadth somewhat more than half the longitude. WOTTON.

The Alban lake is of an oval figure, and, by reason of the high mountains that encompass it, looks like the area of some vast amphitheatre.

ADDISON ON ITALY.

*In areas vary'd with Mosaic art,
Some whirl the disk, and some the jav'lin
dart.* POPE'S ODYSSEY.

A'RGUER. n.s. [from argue.] A reasoner; a disputer; a controvertist.

Men are ashamed to be proselytes to a weak arguer, as thinking they must part with their reputation as well as their sin.

DECAY OF PIETY.

A'RGUTE. adj. [arguto, Ital. argutus, Lat.]

1. Subtile; witty; sharp.
2. Shrill.

A'RIA. n.s. [Ital. in musick.] An air, song, or tune.

To ARI'ETATE. v.n. [arieto, Lat.]

1. To butt like a ram.
2. To strike in imitation of the blows which rams give with their heads.

ARIETA'TION. n.s. [from arietate.]

1. The act of butting like a ram.
2. The act of battering with an engine called a ram.

The strength of the percussion, wherein ordnance do exceed all arietations and ancient inventions. BACON'S ESSAYS.

3. The act of striking, or conflicting in general.

Now those heterogeneous atoms, by themselves, hit so exactly into their proper residence, in the midst of such tumultuary motions, and arietations of other particles.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

ARIE'TTA. n.s. [Ital. in musick.] A short air, song, or tune.

ARISTO'CRACY. n.s. [ἄριστος, greatest, and κρατέω, to govern.] That form of government which places the supreme power in the nobles, without a king, and exclusively of the people.

The aristocracy of Venice hath admitted so many abuses through the degeneracy of the nobles, that the period of its duration seems to approach. SWIFT.

ARM'S END. n.s. A phrase taken from boxing, in which the weaker man may overcome the stronger, if he can keep him from closing.

Such a one as can keep him at arm's end, need never wish for a better companion.

SIDNEY'S ARCADIA.

For my sake be comfortable, hold death awhile at the arm's end.

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

ARMI'SONOUS. adj. [armisonus, Lat.] Rustling with armour.

A'RMLET. n.s. [from arm.]

1. A little arm; as, an armlet of the sea.
2. A piece of armour for the arm.
3. A bracelet for the arm.

And, when she takes thy hand, and doth seem kind,

Doth search what rings and armlets she can find. DONNE.<sup>17</sup>

A'RQUEBUSE. n.s. [Fr. spelt falsely harquebuss.] A hand gun. It seems to have anciently meant much the same as our carabine, or fusee.

A harquebuse, or ordnance, will be farther heard from the mouth of the piece, than backwards or on the sides.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY NO 204.

A'RRANT. adj. [a word of uncertain etymology, but probably from errant, which being at first applied to its proper signification to vagabonds, as an errant or arrant rogue, that is, a rambling rogue, lost, in time, its original signification, and being by its use understood to imply something bad, was applied at large to any thing that was mentioned with hatred or contempt.] Bad in a high degree.

Country folks, who hallooed and hooted after me, as at the arrantest coward that ever shewed his shoulders to the enemy.

SIDNEY, B. II.

A vain fool grows forty times an arranter sot than before.

L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

*And let him every deity adore,
If his new bride prove not an arrant whore.*

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

A'RRROW. n.s. [arewe, Sax.] The pointed weapon which is shot from a bow. Darts are thrown by the hand, but in poetry they are confounded.

I swear to thee by Cupid's strongest bow,

By his best arrow with the golden head.

SHAKESPEARE'S MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM.

Here were boys so desperately resolved, as to pull arrows out of their flesh, and deliver them to be shot again by the archers on their side. SIR J. HAYWARD.

ARSE. n.s. [earse, Sax.] The buttocks, or hind part of an animal. To hang an ARSE. A vulgar phrase, signifying to be tardy, sluggish, or dilatory.

*For Hudibras wore but one spur,
As wisely knowing, could he stir
To active trot one side of 's horse,
The other would not hang an arse.*

HUDIBRAS, CANT. 1.

ART. n.s. [arte, Fr. ars, Lat.]

1. The power of doing something not taught by nature and instinct; as, to walk is natural, to dance is an art.

Art is properly an habitual knowledge of certain rules and maxims, by which a man is governed and directed in his actions.

SOUTH.

Blest with each grace of nature and of art.

POPE.

*Ev'n copious Dryden wanted, or forgot,
The last and greatest art, the art to blot.*

POPE.

2. A science; as, the liberal arts.

Arts that respect the mind were ever reputed nobler than those that serve the body. BEN JONSON'S DISCOVERY.

3. A trade.

This observation is afforded us by the art of making sugar. BOYLE.

4. Artfulness; skill; dexterity.

*The art of our necessities is strange,
That can make vile things precious.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

5. Cunning.

6. Speculation.

I have as much of this in art as you;

But yet my nature could not bear it so.

SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

ARTI'ULATE. adj. [from articulus, Lat.]

1. Distinct,<sup>18</sup> as the parts of a limb by joints; not continued in one tone, as articulate sounds; that is, sounds varied and changed at proper pauses, in opposition to the voice of animals, which admit no such variety. An articulate pronunciation, a manner of speaking clear and distinct, in which one sound is not confounded with another.

In speaking under water, when the voice is reduced to an extreme exility, yet the articulate sounds, the words, are not confounded.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY NO 195.

The first, at least, of these I thought deny'd To beasts; whom God, on their creation-day,

Created mute to all articulate sound.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

2. Branched out into articles. This is a meaning little in use.

His instructions were extreme curious and articulate; and, in them, more articles touching inquisition, than negotiation: requiring from his ambassadors an answer in distinct articles to his questions.

BACON'S HENRY VII.

ASCE'NSION. n.s. [ascensio, Lat.]

1. The act of ascending or rising; frequently applied to the visible elevation of our Saviour to heaven.

Then rising from his grave, Spoil'd principalities, and pow'rs, triumph'd

In open shew; and, with ascension bright, Captivity led captive through the air.

PARADISE LOST, B. X.

2. The thing rising, or mounting.

Men err in the theory of inebriation, conceiving the brain doth only suffer from vaporous ascensions from the stomach.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

ASCE'NSION, in astronomy, is either right or oblique. Right ascension of the sun, or a star, is that degree of the equinoctial, counted from the beginning of Aries, which rises with the sun or star in a right sphere. Oblique ascension is an arch of the equator intercepted between the first point of Aries, and that point of the equator which rises together with a star in an oblique sphere.

ASCE'NSION DAY. The day on which the ascension of our Saviour is commemorated, commonly called Holy Thursday; the Thursday but one before Whitsuntide.

A'SHLAR. n.s. [with masons.] Free stones as they come out of the quarry, of different lengths, breadths, and thicknesses.

ASPE'RITY. n.s. [asperitas, Lat.]

1. Unevenness; roughness of surface.

Sometimes the pores and asperities of dry bodies are so incommensurate to the particles of the liquor, that they glide over the surface. BOYLE.

2. Roughness of sound; harshness of pronunciation.

3. Roughness, or ruggedness of temper; moroseness; sourness; crabbedness.

The charity of the one, like kindly exhalations, will descend in showers of blessings; but the rigour and asperity of the other, in a severe doom upon ourselves.

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE.

Avoid all unseemliness and asperity of carriage; do nothing that may argue a peevish or froward spirit. ROGERS.

To ASPE'RSE. v.a. [aspergo, Lat.]

To bespatter with censure or calumny.

In the business of Ireland, besides the opportunity to asperse the king, they were safe enough. CLARENDON, B. VIII.

*Curb that impetuous tongue, nor rashly
vain,*

And singly mad, asperse the sov'reign reign. POPE'S ILIAD.

*Unjustly poets we asperse,
Truth shines the brighter clad in verse.*

SWIFT.

ASPHA'LTOS. n.s. [ἄσφαλτος, bitumen.] A solid, brittle, black, bituminous, inflammable substance, resembling pitch, and chiefly found swimming on the surface of the Lacus

Asphaltites, or Dead sea, where anciently stood the cities of Sodom and Gomorrah. It is cast up from time to time, in the nature of liquid pitch, from the earth at the bottom of this sea; and, being thrown upon the water, swims like other fat bodies, and condenses gradually<sup>19</sup> by the heat of the sun, and the salt that is in it. It burns with great vehemence. The Arabs use it for pitching their ships; and much of it was employed in the embalming of the ancients.

To A'SPIRATE. v.a. [aspiro, Lat.] To pronounce with aspiration, or full breath; as we aspirate horse, house, and hog.

To A'SPIRATE. v.n. [aspiro, Lat.] To be pronounced with full breath.

Where a vowel ends a word, the next begins either with a consonant, or what is its equivalent; for our w and h aspirate.

DRYDEN'S DEDICATION TO ÆNEID.

ASQU'INT. adv. [from a and squint.] Obliquely; not in the strait line of vision.

A single guide may direct the way better than five hundred, who have contrary views, or look asquint, or shut their eyes.

SWIFT'S PROJECT FOR THE ADVANCEMENT OF RELIGION.

ASS. n.s. [asinus, Lat.]

1. An animal of burden, remarkable for sluggishness, patience, hardiness, coarseness of food, and long life.

*You have among you many a purchas'd slave,
Which, like your asses, and your dogs and mules,*

*You use in abject and in slavish part,
Because you bought them.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF VENICE.

2. A stupid, heavy, dull fellow; a dolt.

I do begin to perceive that I am made an ass.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

That such a crafty mother Should yield the world to this ass! — a woman that

*Bears all down with her brain; and her son Cannot take two from twenty for his heart,
And leave eighteen.*

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

ASSE'MBLAGE. n.s. [assemblage, Fr.] A collection; a number of individuals brought together. It differs from assembly, by being applied only, or chiefly, to things; assembly being used only, or generally, of persons.

All that we amass together in our thoughts is positive, and the assemblage of a great number of positive ideas of space or duration. LOCKE.

*O Hartford, fitted or to shine in courts
With unaffected grace, or walk the plains,
With innocence and meditation join'd
In soft assemblage, listen to my song.*

THOMSON'S SPRING.<sup>20</sup>

A'SSHEAD. n.s. [from ass and head.] One slow of apprehension; a blockhead.

Will you help an asshead, and a coxcomb, and a knave, a thin-faced knave, a gull.

SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.<sup>21</sup>

ASSIGNA'TION. n.s. [assignation, French.]

1. An appointment to meet; used generally of love appointments.

The lovers expected the return of this stated hour with as much impatience as if it had been a real assignation. SPECTATOR.

*Or when a whore, in her vocation,
Keeps punctual to an assignation.*

SWIFT.

2. A making over a thing to another.

ASSI'STANT. n.s. [from assist.]

1. A person engaged in an affair not as principal, but as auxiliary or ministerial.

Some young towardly noblemen or gentlemen were usually sent as assistants or attendants, according to the quality of the persons.

BACON'S ADVICE TO SIR GEORGE VILLIERS.

2. Sometimes it is only a softer word for an attendant.

*The pale assistants on each other star'd,
With gaping mouths for issuing words
prepar'd.* DRYDEN.

ASSI'ZE. n.s. [assise, a sitting, Fr.]

1. An assembly of knights and other substantial men, with the bailiff or justice, in a certain place, and at a certain time.

2. A jury.

3. An ordinance or statute.

4. The court, place, or time, where and when the writs and processes of assize are taken. Cowel.

The law was never executed by any justices of assize, but the people left to their own laws. SIR J. DAVIES ON IRELAND.

*At each assize and term we try
A thousand rascals of as deep a dye.*
DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

5. Any court of justice.

*The judging God shall close the book of fate,
And there the last assizes keep,
For those who wake, and those who sleep.*
DRYDEN.

6. Assize of bread, ale, &c. Measure, or quantity. Thus it is said, when wheat is of such a price, the bread shall be of such assize.

7. Measure; rate: for which we now use size. See SIZE.

*On high hill's top I saw a stately frame,
An hundred cubits high by just assize,*

With hundred pillars.

SPENSER'S VISION OF BELLAY.

To ASSO'T. v.a. [from sot; assoter, Fr.] To infatuate; to besot: a word out of use.

*But whence they sprung, or how they were begot,
Uneath is to assure, uneath to weene That monstrous error which doth some assot.* FAIRY QUEEN.

ASSUEFA'CTION. n.s. [assuefacio, Lat.] The state of being accustomed to any thing.

Right and left, as parts inservient unto the motive faculty, are differenced by degrees from use and assuefaction, or according whereto the one grows stronger.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

A'STERISM. n.s. [asterismus, Lat.]

1. A constellation.

Poetry had filled the skies with asterisms, and histories belonging to them; and then astrology devises the feigned virtues and influences of each.

BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

2. An asterisk, or mark. This is a very improper use.

*Dwell particularly on passages with an asterisk *; for the observations which follow such a note, will give you a clear light.* DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

To ASTO'UND. v.a. [estonner, Fr.] To astonish; to confound with fear or wonder. This word is now somewhat obsolete.

*These thoughts may startle well, but not astound
The virtuous mind, that ever walks attended
By a strong siding champion, conscience.*
PARADISE REGAIN'D.

To ASTRI'CT. v.a. [astringo, Lat.] To contract by applications, in opposition to relax: a word not so much used as constringe.

The solid parts were to be relaxed or astricted, as they let the humours pass either in too small or too great quantities.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

ASTRI'NGENCY. n.s. [from astringe.] The power of contracting the parts of the body; opposed to the power of relaxation.

Astriction prohibiteth dissolution; as, in medicines, astringents inhibit putrefaction: and, by astringency, some small quantity of oil of vitriol will keep fresh water long from putrefying.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO 342.

Acid, acrid, austere, and bitter substances, by their astringency, create horreur, that is, stimulate the fibres. ARBUTHNOT.

ASTRO'LOGY. n.s. [astrologia, Lat.] The practice of foretelling things by the knowledge of the stars; an art now generally exploded, as without reason.<sup>22</sup>

I know it hath been the opinion of the learned, who think of the art of astrology, that the stars do not force the actions or wills of men. SWIFT.

ASTRO-THEOLOGY. n.s. [from astrum, a star, and theologia, divinity.] Divinity founded on the observation of the celestial bodies.

That the diurnal and annual revolutions are the motions of the terraqueous globe, not of the sun, I shew in the preface of my Astro-Theology.

DERHAM'S PHYSICO-THEOLOGY.

ATHLE'TICK. adj. [from athleta, Lat. 'αθλητής, a wrestler.]

1. Belonging to wrestling.
2. Strong of body; vigorous; lusty; robust.

Seldom shall one see in rich families that athletick soundness and vigour of consti- tution, which is seen in cottages, where nature is cook, and necessity caterer.

SOUTH.

Science distinguishes a man of honour from one of those athletick brutes, whom undeservedly we call heroes. DRYDEN.

ATI'LT. adv. [from a and tilt.]

1. In the manner of a tilter; with the action of a man making a thrust at an antagonist.

In the city Tours,

*Thou ran'st atilt, in honour of my love,
And stol'st away the ladies hearts from*

France. SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

*To run atilt at men, and wield
Their naked tools in open field.*

HUDIBRAS, P. I. C. I.

BLACKMORE.

Bodies act by the attractions of gravity, magnetism, and electricity; and these instances make it not improbable but there may be more attractive powers than these.

NEWTON'S OPTICS.

2. Inviting; alluring; enticing.

Happy is Hermia, wheresoe'er she lies; For she hath blessed and attractive eyes.

SHAKESPEARE'S MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM.

I pleas'd, and with attractive graces won, The most averse, thee chiefly.

PARADISE LOST, B. II.

ATTRITION. n.s. [attritio, Lat.]

1. The act of wearing things, by rubbing one against another.

This vapour, ascending incessantly out of the abyss, and pervading the strata of gravel, and the rest, decays the bones and vegetables lodged in those strata; this fluid, by its continual attrition, fretting the said bodies.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

The change of the aliment is effected by attrition of the inward stomach, and dissolvent liquor assisted with heat.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

A'VENUE. n.s. [avenue, Fr. It is sometimes pronounced with the accent on the second syllable, as Watts observes; but it is generally placed on the first.]

1. A way by which any place may be entered.

Good guards were set up at all the avenues of the city, to keep all people from going out. CLARENDON, B. VIII.

Truth is a strong-hold, and diligence is laying siege to it: so that it must observe all the avenues and passes to it. SOUTH.

2. An alley, or walk of trees before a house.

AULD. adj. [ald, Sax.] A word now obsolete; but still used in the Scotch dialect.

*'Tis pride that pulls the country down;
Then take thine auld cloak about thee.*
SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

AVO'IDANCE. n.s. [from avoid.]

1. The act of avoiding.

It is appointed to give us vigour in the pursuit of what is good, or in the avoidance of what is hurtful. WATTS'S LOGICK.

2. The course by which any thing is carried off.

For avoidances, and drainings of water, where there is too much, we shall speak of.
BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO 600.

AVO'IDER. n.s. [from avoid.]

1. The person that avoids or shuns any thing.

2. The person that carries any thing away.

3. The vessel in which things are carried away.

A'WFUL. adj. [from awe and full.]

1. That which strikes with awe, or fills with reverence.

So awful, that with honour thou may'st love

Thy mate; who sees, when thou art seen least wise.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. VIII.
L. 577.

*I approach thee thus, and gaze
Insatiate; I thus single; nor have fear'd
Thy awful brow, more awful thus retir'd, Fairest resemblance of thy Maker fair!*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. IX.

2. Worshipful; in authority; invested with dignity. This sense is obsolete.

*Know then, that some of us are gentlemen,
Such as the fury of ungovern'd youth
Thrust from the company of awful men.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

3. Struck with awe; timorous; scrupulous. This sense occurs but rarely.

It is not nature and strict reason, but a weak and awful reverence for antiquity, and the vogue of fallible men.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

A'WFULLY. adv. [from awful.] In a reverential manner.

It will concern a man, to treat this great principle awfully and warily, by still observing what it commands, but especially what it forbids. SOUTH.

A'WFULNESS. n.s. [from awful.]

These objects naturally raise seriousness; and night heightens the awfulness of the place, and pours out her supernumerary horrors upon every thing.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR NO 110.

2. The state of being struck with awe.<sup>26</sup>

An help to prayer, producing in us reverence and awfulness to the divine majesty of God.

TAYLOR'S RULE OF LIVING HOLY.

To AWHA'PE. v.a. [This word I have met with only in Spenser, nor can I discover whence it is derived; but imagine, that the Teutonick language had anciently wapen, to strike, or some such word, from which weapons, or offensive arms, took their denomination.] To strike; to confound.

*Ah! my dear gossip, answer'd then the ape,
Deeply do your sad words my wits awhape,
Both for because your grief doth great appear,*

And eke because myself am touched near. HUBBERD'S TALE.

AWK. adj. [a barbarous contraction of the word awkward.] Odd; out of order.

We have heard as arrant jangling in the pulpits, as the steeples; and professors ringing as awk as the bells to give notice of the conflagration. L'ESTRANGE.

A'WLESS. adj. [from awe, and the negative less.]

1. Without reverence.<sup>27</sup>

Against whose fury, and th' unmatched force,

The awless lion could not wage the fight. SHAKESPEARE'S KING JOHN.

He claims the bull with awless insolence,

And having seiz'd his horns, accosts the prince.

DRYDEN.

2. Without the power of causing reverence.

*Ah me! I see the ruin of my house;
The tyger now hath seiz'd the gentle hind:*

*Insulting tyranny begins to jut
Upon the innocent and awless throne.*

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

AY. adv. [perhaps from aio, Lat.]

1. Yes; an adverb of answering affirmatively.

Return you thither? —

— Ay, madam, with the swiftest wing of speed.

SHAKESPEARE'S ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

What say'st thou? Wilt thou be of our consort?

Say ay; and be the captain of us all.

SHAKESPEARE'S TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

2. It is a word by which the sense is enforced; even; yes, certainly; and more than that.

*Remember it, and let it make thee
crest-fall'n;*

Ay, and allay this thy abortive pride.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

B

The second letter of the English alphabet, is pronounced as in most other European languages, by pressing the whole length of the lips together, and forcing them open with a strong breath. It has a near affinity with the other labial letters, and is confounded by the Germans with P, and by the Gascons with V; from which an epigrammatist remarks, that bibere and vivere are in Gascony the same. The Spaniards, in most words, use B or V indifferently.

BABO'ON. n.s. [babouin, Fr. It is supposed by Skinner to be the augmentation of babe, and to import a great babe.] A monkey of the largest kind.

You had looked through the grate like a geminy of baboons.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

He cast every human feature out of his countenance, and became a baboon.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR NO 174.

BA'CHELOR. n.s. [This is a word of very uncertain etymology, it not being well known what was its original sense. Junius derives it from βάκιλος, foolish; Menage, from bas chevalier, a knight of the lowest rank; Spelman, from baculus, a staff; Cujas, from buccella, an allowance of provision. The most probable derivation seems to be from bacca laurus, the berry of a laurel or bay; bachelors being young, are of good hopes, like laurels in the berry.<sup>28</sup> In Latin, baccalaureus.]

1. A man unmarried.

Such separation

Becomes a virtuous bachelor and a maid.

SHAKESPEARE'S MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM.

The haunting of those dissolute places, or resort to courtesans, are no more punished in married men than in bachelors.

BACON'S NEW ATLANTIS.

A true painter naturally delights in the liberty which belongs to the bachelor's estate. DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

Let sinful bachelors their woes deplore, Full well they merit all they feel, and more. POPE.

2. A man who takes his first degrees at the university in any profession.

Being a boy, new bachelor of arts, I chanced to speak against the pope.

ASCHAM'S SCHOOLMASTER.

I appear before your honour, in behalf of Martinus Scriblerus, bachelor of physick.

ARBUTHNOT AND POPE'S MARTIN
SCRIBLERUS.

3. A knight of the lowest order. This is a sense now little used.

BA'CKFRIEND. n.s. [from back and friend.] A friend backwards; that is, an enemy in secret.

Set the restless importunities of talebearers and backfriends against fair words and professions. L'ESTRANGE.

Far is our church from encroaching upon the civil power; as some who are back-friends to both, would maliciously insinuate. SOUTH.

BADGER. n.s. [bedour, Fr.] An animal that earths in the ground, used to be hunted.

That a brock, or badger, hath legs of one side shorter than the other, is very generally received not only by theorists and unexperienced believers, but most who behold them daily.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. III.

BADGER LEGGED. adj. [from badger and legged.] Having legs of an unequal length, as the badger is supposed to have.

*His body crooked all over, big-bellied, badger legged, and his complexion
swarthy.* L'ESTRANGE.

BA'LDERDASH. n.s. [probably of bald, Sax. bold, and dash, to mingle.] Any thing jumbled together without judgment; rude mixture; a confused discourse.

To BA'LDERDASH. v.a. [from the noun.] To mix or adulterate any liquor.

BALL. n.s. [bal, Fr. from ballare, low Lat. from βαλλίζειν, to dance.] An entertainment of dancing, at which the preparations are made at the expence of some particular person.

*If golden sconces hang not on the walls,
To light the costly suppers and the balls.*

DRYDEN.

He would make no extraordinary figure at a ball; but I can assure the ladies, for their consolation, that he has writ better verses on the sex than any man. SWIFT.

BA'LLIARDS. n.s. [from ball and yard, or stick to push it with.] A play at which a ball is driven by the end of a stick; now corruptly called billiards.<sup>29</sup>

With dice, with cards, with balliards, far unfit,

With shuttlecocks misseeming manly wit.
HUBBERD'S TALE.

BALLO'N, BALLO'ON. n.s. [ballon, Fr.]

1. A large round short-necked vessel used in chymistry.

2. In architecture; a ball or globe placed on the top of a pillar.

3. In fireworks; a ball of pasteboard, stuffed with combustible matter, which, when fired, mounts to a considerable height in the air, and then bursts into bright sparks of fire, resembling stars.

BA'LUSTER. n.s. [according to Du Cange, from balastrium, low Lat. a bathing place.] A small column or pilaster, from an inch and three quarters to four inches square or diameter. Their dimensions and forms are various; they are frequently adorned with mouldings; they are placed with rails on stairs, and in the fronts of galleries in churches.

*This should first have been planched over,
and railed about with balusters.*

CAREW'S SURVEY OF CORNWAL.

BA'LUSTRADE. n.s. [from baluster.] An assemblage of one or more rows of little turned pillars, called balusters, fixed upon a terras, or the top of a building, for separating one part from another.

BA'MBOO. n.s. An Indian plant of the reed kind. It has several shoots, much larger than our ordinary reeds, which are knotty, and separated from space to space by joints. They are said by some, but by mistake, to contain sugar; the bamboo being much larger than the sugar-cane. The leaves grow out of each knot, and are prickly. They are four or five inches long, and an inch in breadth, somewhat pointed, and ribbed through the whole length with green and sharp fibres. Its flowers grow in ears, like those of wheat.<sup>30</sup>

To BAMBO'OZLE. v.a. [a cant word not used in pure or in grave writings.] To deceive; to impose upon; to confound.

After Nick had bamboozled about the money, John called for counters.

ARBUTHNOT'S JOHN BULL.

BA'NDOG. n.s. [from ban or band, and dog. The original of this word is very doubtful. Caiux, De Canibus Britannicis, derives it from band, that is, a dog chained up. Skinner inclines to deduce it from bana, a murderer. May it not come from ban a curse, as we say a curst cur; or rather from baund, swelled or large, a Danish word; from whence, in some counties, they call a great nut a ban-nut.] A kind of large dog.

The time of night when Troy was set on fire,

The time when screech-owls cry, and bandogs howl.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI. P. II.

Or privy, or pert, if any bin,

We have great bandogs will tear their skin. SPENSER'S PASTORALS.

BA'NK-BILL. n.s. [from bank and bill] A note for money laid up in a bank, at the sight of which the money is paid.

Let three hundred pounds be paid her out of my ready money, or bank-bills.

SWIFT'S LAST WILL.

BA'NKER. n.s. [from bank.] One that trafficks in money; one that keeps or manages a bank.

Whole droves of lenders croud the banker's doors,

To call in money.

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRIAR.

By powerful charms of gold and silver led, The Lombard bankers and the change to waste. DRYDEN.

BA'NNOCK. n.s. A kind of oaten or pease meal cake, mixed with water, and baked upon an iron plate over the fire; used in the northern counties, and in Scotland.

BA'NTLING. n.s. [if it has any etymology, it is perhaps corrupted from the old word bairn, bairnling, a little child.] A little child: a low word.

If the object of their love

Chance by Lucina's aid to prove,

They seldom let the bantling roar,

In basket, at a neighbour's door. PRIOR.

BA'RBARISM. n.s. [barbarismus, Lat.]

1. A form of speech contrary to the purity and exactness of any language.

The language is as near approaching to it, as our modern barbarism will allow; which is all that can be expected from any now extant.

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL, DEDICATION.

2. Ignorance of arts; want of learning.

I have for barbarism spoke more

Than for that angel knowledge you can say.

SHAKESPEARE'S LOVE'S LABOUR LOST.

The genius of Raphael having succeeded to the times of barbarism and ignorance, the knowledge of painting is now arrived to perfection.

DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY, PREFACE.

3. Brutality; savageness of manners; incivility.

Moderation ought to be had in tempering and managing the Irish, to bring them from their delight of licentious barbarism unto the love of goodness and civility.

SPENSER'S STATE OF IRELAND.

Divers great monarchies have risen from barbarism to civility, and fallen again to ruin. SIR J. DAVIES ON IRELAND.

4. Cruelty; barbarity; un pitying hardness of heart.<sup>31</sup>

They must per force have melted, And barbarism itself have pity'd him.

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD II.

To BA'RBEQUE. v.a. A term used in the West-Indies for dressing a hog whole; which, being split to the backbone, is laid flat upon a large gridiron, raised about two foot above a charcoal fire, with which it is surrounded.

Oldfield, with more than harpy throat endu'd,

Cries, send me, gods, a whole hog barbecu'd. POPE.

BARBER-CHIRURGEON. n.s. A man who joins the practice of surgery to the barber's trade; such as were all surgeons formerly, but now it is used only for a low practiser of surgery.

He put himself into barber-chirurgeons hands, who, by unfit applications, rarified the tumour. WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

BARBER-MONGER. n.s. A word of reproach in Shakespeare, which seems to signify a fop; a man decked out by his barber.

Draw, you rogue; for though it be night, the moon shines; I'll make a sop of the moon-shine of you; you whoreson, cullionly, barber-monger, draw.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

BARGAINEE'. n.s. [from bargain.] He or she that accepts a bargain.

BA'RGAINER. n.s. [from bargain.] The person who profers, or makes a bargain.

BARLEY BROTH. n.s. [from barley and broth.] A low word, sometimes used for strong beer.

*Can sodden water,
A drench for surreyn'd jades, their barley
broth, Decoct their cold blood to such valiant heat?* SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

BARLEY CORN. n.s. [from barley and corn.] A grain of barley; the beginning of our measure of length; the third part of an inch.

*A long, long journey, choak'd with brakes and thorns,
Ill measur'd by ten thousand barley
corns.* TICKELL.

BA'RREL. n.s. [baril, Welch.]

1. A round wooden vessel to be stopped close.

It hath been observed by one of the ancients, that an empty barrel knocked upon with the finger, giveth a diapason to the sound of the like barrel full.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO 186.

*Trembling to approach
The little barrel, which he fears to broach.*
DRYDEN'S PERSIUS.

2. A particular measure in liquids. A barrel of wine is thirty one gallons and a half; of ale, thirty two gallons; of beer, thirty six gallons, and of beer vinegar, thirty four gallons.

3. In dry measure. A barrel of Essex butter contains one hundred and six pounds; of Suffolk butter, two hundred and fifty six. A barrel of herrings should contain thirty two gallons wine measure, holding usually a thousand herrings.

Several colleges, instead of limiting their rents to a certain sum, prevailed with their tenants to pay the price of so many barrels of corn, as the market went. SWIFT.

4. Any thing hollow, as the barrel of a gun; that part which holds the shot.

Take the barrel of a long gun perfectly bored, set it upright with the breech upon the ground, and take a bullet exactly fit for it; then if you suck at the mouth of the barrel ever so gently, the bullet will come up so forcibly, that it will hazard the striking out your teeth.

DIGBY ON BODIES.

5. A cylinder; frequently that cylinder about which any thing is wound.

Your string and bow must be accommodated to your drill; if too weak, it will not carry about the barrel.

MOXON'S MECHANICAL EXERCISES.

6. Barrel of the ear, is a cavity behind the tympanum, covered with a fine membrane. Dictionaries.

BASILICK. n.s. [basilique, Fr. βασιλική.] A large hall, having two ranges of pillars, and two isles or wings, with galleries over them. These basilicks were first made for the palaces of princes, and afterwards converted into courts of justice, and lastly into churches; whence a basilick is generally taken for a magnificent church, as the basilick of St. Peter at Rome.

BAT-FOWLING. n.s. [from bat and fowl.] A particular manner of birdcatching in the night time, while they are at roost upon perches, trees, or hedges. They light torches or straw, and then beat the bushes; upon which the birds flying to the flames, are caught either with nets, or otherwise.

You would lift the moon out of her sphere, if she would continue in it five weeks without changing. — We should so, and then go a bat-fowling.

SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

Bodies lighted at night by fire, must have a brighter lustre given them than by day; as sacking of cities, bat-fowling, &c.

PEACHAM ON DRAWING.

BATTA'LION. n.s. [bataillon, Fr.]

1. A division of an army; a troop; a body of forces. It is now confined to the infantry, and the number is uncertain, but generally from five to eight hundred men. Some regiments consist of one battalion, and others are divided into two, three or more.

When sorrows come, they come not single spies,

But in battalions.

SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

In this battalion there were two officers, called Thersites and Pandarus.

TATLER, NO 56.

*The pierc'd battalions disunited fall,
In heaps on heaps: one fate o'erwhelms them all.* POPE.

2. An army. This sense is not now in use.

Six or seven thousand is their utmost power.

— Why, our battalion trebles that account.

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

BA'TTEN. n.s. A word used only by workmen.

A batten is a scantling of wooden stuff, two, three or four inches broad, seldom above one thick, and the length unlimited.

MOXON'S MECHANICAL EXERCISES.

BA'UBEE. n.s. A word used in Scotland, and the northern counties, for a halfpenny.

*Tho' in the draw'rs of my japan bureau,
To lady Gripeall I the Cæsars show,
'Tis equal to her ladyship or me,
A copper Otho, or a Scotch baubee.*
BRAMSTON'S MAN OF TASTE.

BA'WBLING. adj. [from bawble.]

Trifling; contemptible: a word not now in use, except in conversation.

*A bawbling vessel was he captain of,
For shallow draught and bulk unprized;
With which such scathful grapple did he make,
With the most noble bottom of our fleet.*
SHAKESPEARE'S TWELFTH NIGHT.

BA'YONET. n.s. [bayonette, Fr.] A short sword or dagger fixed at the end of a musket, by which the foot hold off the horse.

One of the black spots is long and slender, and resembles a dagger or bayonet.
WOODWARD ON FOSSILS.

BE'ACON. n.s. [beacon, Sax. from becn, a signal, and becnan, whence beckon, to make a signal.]

1. Something raised on an eminence, to be fired on the approach of an enemy, to alarm the country.

*His blazing eyes, like two bright shining shields,
Did burn with wrath, and sparkled living
fire;
As two broad beacons set in open fields,
Send forth their flames.*

FAIRY QUEEN, B. I.

*Modest doubt is called
The beacon of the wise.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

The king seemed to account of the designs of Perkin as a may-game; yet had given order for the watching of beacons upon the coasts, and erecting more where they stood too thin. BACON'S HENRY VII.

No flaming beacons cast their blaze afar,

The dreadful signal of invasive war.

GAY'S RURAL SPORTS.

2. Marks erected, or lights made in the night, to direct navigators in their courses, and warn them from rocks, shallows and sandbanks.

BEAR-GARDEN. n.s. [from bear and garden.]

1. A place in which bears are kept for sport.

Hurrying me from the playhouse, and the scenes there, to the bear-garden, to the apes, and asses, and tygers.

STILLINGFLEET.

I could not forbear going to a place of renown for the gallantry of Britons, namely to the bear-garden.

SPECTATOR, NO 436.<sup>32</sup>

2. Any place of tumult or misrule.

BEAR-GARDEN. adj. A word used in familiar or low phrase for rude or turbulent; as, a bear-garden fellow; that is, a man rude enough to be a proper frequenter of the bear-garden. Bear-garden sport, is used for gross inelegant entertainment.

BEAST. n.s. [beste, Fr. bestia, Lat.]

1. An animal distinguished from birds, insects, fishes, and man.

The man that once did sell the lion's skin, While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting him. SHAKESPEARE.

Beasts of chase are the buck, the doe, the fox, the martern, and the roe. Beasts of the forest are the hart, the hind, the hare, the boar, and the wolf. Beasts of warren are the hare and cony. COWEL.

2. An irrational animal, opposed to man; as man and beast.

*I dare do all that may become a man;
Who dares do more, is none. ———
——— What beast was't then That made you break this enterprize to me?* MACBETH.

*Medea's charms were there, Circean feasts,
With bowls that turn'd enamour'd youths to beasts.* DRYDEN.

3. A brutal savage man, a man acting in any manner unworthy of a reasonable creature.

BE'ASTINGS. See BEESTINGS.

BE'ATER. n.s. [from beat.]

1. An instrument with which any thing is comminuted or mingled.

Beat all your mortar with a beater three or four times over, before you use it; for thereby you incorporate the sand and lime well together.

MOXON'S MECHANICAL EXERCISES.

2. A person much given to blows.

The best schoolmaster of our time, was the greatest beater.

ASCHAM'S SCHOOLMASTER.

BEAU. n.s. [beau, Fr. It is sounded like bo, and has often the French plural beaux.] A man of dress; a man whose great care is to deck his person.

What, will not beaux attempt to please the fair? DRYDEN.

*The water nymphs are too unkind
To Vill'roy; are the land nymphs so?
And fly they all, at once combin'd
To shame a general, and a beau?*

PRIOR.

You will become the delight of nine ladies in ten, and the envy of ninety-nine beaux in a hundred.

SWIFT'S DIRECTIONS TO FOOTMEN.

BE' AVER. n.s. [bievre, Fr.]

1. An animal, otherwise named the castor, amphibious, and remarkable for his art in building his habitation; of which many wonderful accounts are delivered by travellers. His skin is very valuable on account of the fur.

The beaver being hunted, biteth off his stones, knowing that for them only his life is sought. HAKEWELL ON PROVIDENCE.

They placed this invention upon the beaver, for the sagacity and wisdom of that animal; indeed from its artifice in building.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, C. 4.

2. A hat of the best kind; so called from being made of the fur of beaver.

You see a smart rhetorician turning his hat, moulding it into different cocks, examining the lining and the button during his harangue: A deaf man would think he was cheapening a beaver, when he is talking of the fate of a nation.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

*The broker here his spacious beaver wears,
Upon his brow sit jealousies and cares.*

GAY'S TRIVIA.

3. The part of a helmet that covers the face. [baviere, Fr.]

*His dreadful hideous head
Close couched on the beaver, seem'd to throw,
From flaming mouth, bright sparkles fry red.* FAIRY QUEEN.

Big Mars seems bankrupt in their beggar'd host,

And faintly through a rusty beaver peeps.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

He was slain upon a course at tilt, the splinters of the staff going in at his beaver.

BACON'S ESSAYS, NO 36.

BEAUTY-SPOT. n.s. [from beauty and spot.] A spot placed to direct the eye to something else, or to heighten some beauty; a foil; a patch.

The filthiness of swine makes them the beauty-spot of the animal creation.

GREW'S COSMOLOGIA SACRA, B. III.
C. 2. §49.

To BECA'LM. v.a. [from calm.]

1. To still the elements.

The moon shone clear on the becalmed flood. DRYDEN.

2. To keep a ship from motion.

A man becalmed at sea, out of sight of land, in a fair day, may look on the sun, or sea, or ship, a whole hour, and perceive no motion. LOCKE.

3. To quiet the mind.

*Soft whisp'ring airs, and the lark's mattin
song,
Then woo to musing, and becalm the mind
Perplex'd with irksome thoughts.*

PHILIPS.

*Banish his sorrows, and becalm his soul
With easy dreams.*

ADDISON'S CATO.

4. To becalm and to calm differ in this, that to calm is to stop motion, and to becalm is to with-hold from motion.

To BEDA'BBLE. v.a. [from dabble.]
To wet; to besprinkle. It is generally applied to persons, in a sense including inconvenience.

Never so weary, never so in woe, Bedabbled with the dew, and torn with briars,

I can no further crawl, no further go.

SHAKESPEARE'S MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM.

To BEDA'GGLE. v.a. [from daggle.]
To bemire; to soil cloaths, by letting them reach the dirt in walking.

BE'DPRESSER. n.s. [from bed and press.] A heavy lazy fellow.

This sanguine coward, this bedpresser, this horseback-breaker, this huge hill of flesh. SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV. P. I.

BEDSWE'RVER. n.s. [from bed and swerve.] One that is false to the bed; one that ranges or swerves from one bed to another.

*She's a bedswerver, even as bad as those,
That vulgars give bold'st titles to.*

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

BEE. n.s. [beo, Saxon.]

1. The animal that makes honey, remarkable for its industry and art.

*So work the honey bees,
Creatures that, by a ruling nature, teach*

The art of order to a peopled kingdom.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

*From the Moorish camp,
There has been heard a distant humming noise,*

Like bees disturb'd, and arming in their hives. DRYDEN.

A company of poor insects, whereof some are bees, delighted with flowers, and their sweetness; others beetles, delighted with other viands. LOCKE.

2. An industrious and careful person. This signification is only used in familiar language.

BE'EMOL. n.s. This word I have found only in the example, and know nothing of the etymology, unless it be a corruption of bymodule, from by and modulus, a note; that is, a note out of the regular order.

There be intervenient in the rise of eight, in tones, two beemols, or half notes; so as, if you divide the tones equally, the eight is but seven whole and equal notes.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

BEER. n.s. [bîr, Welch.] Liquour made of malt and hops. It is distinguished from ale, either by being older or smaller.

Here's a pot of good double beer, neighbour; drink.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI. P. II.

It were good to try clarifying with almonds in new beer.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO 768.

Flow, Welsted! flow, like thine inspirer, beer;

Tho' stale, not ripe; tho' thin, yet never clear;

So sweetly mawkish, and so smoothly dull;

Heady, not strong; and foaming, tho' not full. POPE.

BE'ESTINGS. See BIESTINGS.

BEE TLEHE' ADED. adj. [from beetle and head.] Loggerheaded; wooden headed; having a head stupid, like the head of a wooden beetle.

A whoreson, beetleheaded, flap-ear'd knave.

SHAKESPEARE'S TAMING OF THE SHREW.

To BEFO' OL. v.a. [from be and fool.] To infatuate; to fool; to deprive of understanding; to lead into error.

Men befool themselves infinitely, when, by venting a few sighs, they will needs persuade themselves that they have repented. SOUTH.

Jeroboam thought policy the best piety, though in nothing more befooled; the nature of sin being not only to defile, but to infatuate. SOUTH.

To BEGI'N. v.n. I began, or begun; I have begun. [beginnan, Sax. from be, or by to, and gangan, gaan, or gan, to go.]

1. To enter upon something new: applied to persons.

Begin every day to repent; not that thou shouldst at all defer it; but all that is past ought to seem little to thee, seeing it is so in itself. Begin the next day with the same zeal, fear, and humility, as if thou hadst never begun before. TAYLOR.

*I'll sing of heroes and of kings;
Begin my muse.* COWLEY.

2. To commence any action or state; to do the first act, or first part of an act; to make the first step from not doing to doing.

They began at the ancient men which were before the house.

BIBLE EZEKIEL, IX. 6.

*Of these no more you hear him speak;
He now begins upon the Greek:
These rang'd and show'd, shall, in their turns,*

Remain obscure as in their urns. PRIOR.

*Beginning from the rural gods, his hand
Was lib'ral to the pow'rs of high command.* DRYDEN'S FABLES.

*Rapt into future times, the bard begun,
A virgin shall conceive.*

POPE'S MESSIAH.

3. To enter upon existence; as, the world began; the practice began.<sup>33</sup>

4. To have its original.

And thus the hard and stubborn race of man,

From animated rock and flint began.

BLACKMORE.

From Nimrod first the savage chase began;

A mighty hunter, and his game was man.

POPE.

5. To take rise.

Judgment must begin at the house of God.

BIBLE 1 PETER, IV. 17.

The song begun from Jove. DRYDEN.

All began,

All ends in love of God, and love of man.

POPE.

6. To come into act.

Now and then a sigh he stole,

And tears began to flow. DRYDEN.

To BEGI'RD. v.a. I begirt, or begirded; I have begirt. [from be and gird.]

1. To bind with a girdle.

Or should she confident,

As sitting queen ador'd on beauty's throne,

Descend, with all her winning charms

begirt,

T' enamour.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. II.

L. 213.<sup>34</sup>

2. To surround; to encircle; to encompass.

Begird th' almighty throne,

Beseeking, or besieging.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. V. L. 868.

At home surrounded by a servile croud,

*Prompt to abuse, and in detraction loud:
Abroad begirt with men, and swords, and spears;
His very state acknowledging his fears.*
PRIOR.

3. To shut in with a siege; to beleaguer; to block up.

It was so closely begirt before the king's march into the west, that the council humbly desired his majesty, that he would relieve it. CLARENDON, B. VIII.

To BEGI'RT. v.a. [This is, I think, only a corruption of begird; perhaps by the printer.] To begird. See BEGIRD.

*And, Lentulus, begirt you Pompey's house,
To seize his sons alive; for they are they Must make our peace with him.*
BEN JONSON'S CATILINE.

To BEGRE'ASE. v.a. [from be and grease.] To soil or dawb with unctuous or fat matter.

To BEGRI'ME. v.a. [from be and grime. See GRIME and GRIM.] To soil with dirt deep impressed; to soil in such a manner that the natural hue cannot easily be recovered.

*Her name, that was as fresh As Dian's visage, is now begrim'd, and black
As my own face.*
SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

BEHI'NDHAND. adv. [from behind and hand.]

1. In a state in which rents or profits, or any advantage, is anticipated; so that less is to be received, or more performed, than the natural or just proportion.

Your trade would suffer, if your being behindhand has made the natural use so high, that your tradesman cannot live upon his labour. LOCKE.

2. Not upon equal terms, with regard to forwardness. In this sense, it is followed by with.

Consider, whether it is not better to be half a year behindhand with the fashionable part of the world, than to strain beyond his circumstances. SPECTATOR, NO 488.

3. Shakespeare uses it as an adjective, but licentiously, for backward; tardy.

*And these thy offices,
So rarely kind, are as interpreters
Of my behindhand slackness.*
SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

BEHO'LD. interject. [from the verb.] See; lo: a word by which attention is excited, or admiration noted.

Behold! I am with thee, and will keep thee.
BIBLE GENESIS, XXVIII. 15.

*When out of hope, behold her! not far off,
Such as I saw her in my dream, adorn'd With what all earth or heaven could bestow,
To make her amiable.*
MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. VIII.
L. 481.

BEHO'VEFUL. adj. [from behoof.] Useful; profitable; advantageous. This word is somewhat antiquated.

It is very behooveful in this country of Ireland, where there are waste deserts full of grass, that the same should be eaten down. SPENSER ON IRELAND.

Laws are many times full of imperfections; and that which is supposed behooveful unto men, proveth oftentimes most pernicious. HOOKER, B. IV. §14.

*Madam, we have culled such necessaries
As are behooveful for our state tomorrow.*
SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO AND JULIET.

It may be most behooveful for princes, in matters of grace, to transact the same publicly: so it is as requisite, in matters of judgment, punishment, and censure, that the same be transacted privately.

CLARENDON.

BE'LAMIE. n.s. [bel amie, Fr.] A friend; an intimate. This word is out of use.

Wise Socrates

*Pour'd out his life, and last philosophy,
To the fair Critias, his dearest belamie.*

FAIRY QUEEN B. II. C. VII.

BE'LAMOUR. n.s. [bel amour, Fr.] Gallant; consort; paramour: obsolete.

*Lo, lo, how brave she decks her bounteous
bow'r,*

With silken curtains, and gold coverlets, Therein to shrowd her sumptuous belamour. FAIRY QUEEN B. II.

BELA'TED. adj. [from be and late.] Benighted; out of doors late at night.

Fairy elves,

*Whose midnight revels, by a forest side,
Or fountain, some belated peasant sees,
Or dreams he sees.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. I. L. 781.

Or near Fleetditch's oozy brinks, Belated, seems on watch to lie. SWIFT.

BELDA'M. n.s. [belle dame, which, in old French, signified probably an old woman, as belle age, old age.]

1. An old woman; generally a term of contempt, marking the last degree of old age, with all its faults and miseries.

*Then sing of secret things that came to pass,
When beldam nature in her cradle was.*

MILTON.

2. A hag.

Why, how now, Hecat, you look angery? —

— Have I not reason, beldams, as you are?

Saucy and overbold?

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*The resty sieve wagg'd ne'er the more;
I wept for woe, the testy beldam swore.*

DRYDEN.

To BELO'WT. v.a. [from be and lowt, a word of contempt.] To treat with opprobrious language; to call names.<sup>35</sup>

Sieur Gaulard, when he heard a gentleman report, that, at a supper, they had not only good cheer, but also savoury epigrams, and fine anagrams, returning home, rated and belowted his cook, as an ignorant scullion, that never dressed him either epigrams or anagrams. CAMDEN'S REMAINS.

BELSWA'GGER. n.s. A cant word for a whoremaster.

You are a charitable belswagger; my wife cried out fire, and you called out for engines. DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRIAR.

BENE'FICENT. adj. [from beneficus, beneficentior, Lat.] Kind; doing good. It differs from benign, as the act from the disposition; beneficence being kindness, or benignity, exerted in action.

Such a creature could not have his origination from any less than the most wise and beneficent being, the great God.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

But Phœbus, thou, to man beneficent, Delight'st in building cities. PRIOR.

BENEFI'CIARY. adj. [from benefice.] Holding something in subordination to another; having a dependent and secondary possession, without sovereign power.

The duke of Parma was tempted by no less promise, than to be made a feudatory, or beneficiary king of England, under the seignory in chief of the pope.

BACON'S WAR WITH SPAIN.

BENEFI'CIARY. n.s. He that is in possession of a benefice.

A benefice is either said to be a benefice with the cure of souls, or otherwise. In the first case, if it be annexed to another benefice, the beneficiary is obliged to serve the parish church in his own proper person. AYLIFFE'S PARERGON.

BENGA'L. n.s. [from Bengal in the East Indies.] A sort of thin slight stuff, made of silk and hair, for womens apparel.

To BENU'M. v.a. [benumen, Saxon.]

1. To make torpid; to take away the sensation and use of any part by cold, or by some obstruction.

*So stings a snake that to the fire is brought,
Which harmless lay with cold benumm'd before.* FAIRFAX, B. II. STANZA 85.

The winds blow moist and keen, which bids us seek

Some better shroud, some better warmth, to cherish

Our limbs benumm'd.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. X.

L. 1069.

*My sinews slacken, and an icy stiffness
Benums my blood.* DENHAM'S SOPHY.

It seizes upon the vitals, and benums the senses; and where there is no sense, there can be no pain. SOUTH.

Will they be the less dangerous, when warmth shall bring them to themselves, because they were once frozen and benumbed with cold?

L'ESTRANGE, FABLES IX.

2. To stupify.

*These accents were her last: the creeping
death*

Benumm'd her senses first, then stopp'd her breath. DRYDEN.

To BEPI'SS. v.a. [from piss.] To wet with urine.

One caused, at a feast, a bagpipe to be played, which made the knight bepiss himself, to the great diversion of all then present, as well as confusion of himself.

DERHAM'S PHYSICO-THEOLOGY.

BE'RGMASTER. n.s. [from berg, Sax. and master.] The bailiff, or chief officer, among the Derbyshire miners.

BERLI'N. n.s. [from Berlin, the city where they were first made.] A coach of a particular form.

Beware of Latin authors all!

Nor think your verses sterling,

Though with a golden pen you scrawl,

And scribble in a berlin. SWIFT.

To BESHRE'W. v.a. [The original of this word is somewhat obscure; as it evidently implies to wish ill, some derive it from beschryen, Germ. to enchant. Topsel, in his Book of Animals, deduces it from the shrew mouse, an animal, says he, so poisonous, that its bite is a severe curse. A shrew likewise signifies a scolding woman; but its origin is not known.]

1. To wish a curse to.

Nay, quoth the cock; but I beshrew us both,

If I believe a saint upon his oath.

DRYDEN'S FABLES.

2. To happen ill to.

Beshrew thee, cousin, which did'st lead me forth

Of that sweet way I was in to despair.

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD II.

Now much beshrew my manners, and my pride,

If Hermia meant to say Lysander lied.

SHAKESPEARE.

To BESI'EGE. v.a. [from siege.] To beleague; to lay siege to; to beset with armed forces; to endeavour to win a town or fortress, by surrounding it with an army, and forcing the defendants, either by violence or famine, to give admission.

And he shall besiege thee in all thy gates, until thy high and fenced walls come down.

BIBLE DEUTERONOMY, XXVIII. 52.

The queen, with all the northern earls and lords,

Intend here to besiege you in your castle.
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

BESTRA'UGHT. particip. [Of this participle I have not found the verb; by analogy we may derive it from bestract; perhaps it is corrupted from distraught.] Distracted; mad; out of one's senses; out of one's wits.

Ask Marian, the fat alewife, if she knew me not. What! I am not bestraught.
SHAKESPEARE'S TAMING OF THE SHREW.

BET. n.s. [weddian, to wager; wed, a wager, Sax. from which the etymologists derive bet. I should rather imagine it to come from betan, to mend, encrease, or better, as a bet encreases the original wager.] A wager; something laid to be won upon certain conditions.

*The hoary fool, who many days
Has struggl'd with continu'd sorrow,
Renews his hope, and blindly lays
The desp'rate bet upon tomorrow.*
PRIOR.

*His pride was in piquette,
Newmarket fame, and judgment at a bet.*
POPE.

BE'TTY. n.s. [probably a cant word, without etymology.] An instrument to break open doors.

Record the stratagems, the arduous exploits, and the nocturnal scalades of needy heroes, describing the powerful betty, or the artful picklock.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

To BEWI'LDER. v.a. [from wild.] To lose in pathless places; to confound for want of a plain road; to perplex; to entangle; to puzzle.

*We parted thus; I homeward sped my way,
Bewilder'd in the wood till dawn of day.*
DRYDEN'S FABLES.

We no solution of our question find;

Your words bewilder, not direct the mind.
BLACKMORE.

*Our understanding traces 'em in vain,
Lost and bewilder'd in the fruitless search.*
ADDISON'S CATO.

It is good sometimes to lose and bewilder ourselves in such studies.
WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

BIB. n.s. A small piece of linen put upon the breasts of children, over their cloaths.

I would fain know, why it should not be as noble a task, to write upon a bib and hanging-sleeves, as on the bulla and prætexta.
ADDISON ON ANCIENT MEDALS.

To BIB. v.n. [bibo, Lat.] To tipple; to sip; to drink frequently.

He playeth with bibbing mother Meroë, as though she were so named, because she would drink mere wine without water.
CAMDEN.

To appease a froward child, they gave him drink as often as he cried; so that he was constantly bibbing, and drank more in twenty four hours than I did. LOCKE.

BIBA'CIOUS. adj. [bibax, Lat.] Much addicted to drinking.
Dictionaries.<sup>36</sup>

BIBA'CITY. n.s. [bibacitas, Lat.] The quality of drinking much.

BI'BBER. n.s. [from to bib.] A tippler; a man that drinks often.

BI'BLE. n.s. [from βιβλιον, a book; called, by way of excellence, The Book.] The sacred volume in which are contained the revelations of God.

If we pass from the apostolic to the next ages of the church, the primitive christians looked on their bibles as their most important treasure.

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE, §3.

We must take heed how we accustom ourselves to a slight and irreverent use of the name of God, and of the phrases and expressions of the holy bible, which ought not to be applied upon every slight occasion. TILLOTSON, SERMON I.

In questions of natural religion, we should confirm and improve, or connect our reasonings, by the divine assistance of the bible. WATTS'S LOGICK.

BIBLIO'GRAPHER. n.s. [from βιβλός, and γράφω, to write.] A writer of books; a transcriber.
Dictionaries.

BIBLIOTHE'CAL. adj. [from bibliotheca, Lat.] Belonging to a library.
Dictionaries.

BI'BULOUS. adj. [bibulus, Lat.] That which has the quality of drinking moisture; spongy.

*Strow'd bibulous above, I see the sands,
The pebbly gravel next, and guttur'd rocks.* THOMSON.

BICA'PSULAR. adj. [bicapsularis, Lat.] A plant whose seed vessel is divided into two parts.

BICE. n.s. The name of a colour used in painting. It is either green or blue.

Take green bice, and order it as you do your blue bice, you may diaper upon it with the water of deep green.

PEACHAM.

BIDE'NTAL. adj. [bidens, Lat.] Having two teeth.

*Ill management of forks is not to be helped,
when they are only bidental.* SWIFT.

BI'ESTINGS. n.s. [bysting, Saxon.] The first milk given by a cow after calving, which is very thick.

*And twice besides, her biestings never fail
To store the dairy with a brimming pale.*

DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

BI'GLY. adv. [from big.] Tumidly; haughtily; with a blustering manner.

*Would'st thou not rather choose a small renown,
To be the may'r of some poor paltry town;
Bigly to look, and barb'rously to speak;
To pound false weights, and scanty measures break?*

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL, SATIRE X.

BI'LINGSGATE. n.s. [A cant word, borrowed from Bilingsgate in London, a place where there is always a croud of low people, and frequent brawls and foul language.] Ribaldry; foul language.

There stript, fair rhet'rick languish'd on the ground,

And shameful bilingsgate her robes adorn.

DUNCIAD, B. IV.

BILI'NGUOUS. adj. [bilinguis, Lat.] Having, or speaking two tongues.

BI'LLIARDS. n.s. without a singular. [billard, Fr. of which that language has no etymology; and therefore they probably derived from England both the play and the name; which is corrupted from balyards; yards or sticks with which a ball is driven along a table. Thus Spenser:

Balyards much unfit,

HUBBERD'S TALE.]

A game at which a ball is forced against another on a table.

Let it alone; let's to billiards.

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND

CLEOPATRA.

Even nose and cheek, withal,

Smooth as is the billiard ball.

BEN JONSON'S UNDERWOODS.

Some are forced to bound or fly upwards, almost like ivory balls meeting on a billiard table. BOYLE.

When the ball obeys the stroke of a billiard stick, it is not any action of the ball, but bare passion. LOCKE.

BIN. n.s. [binne, Sax.] A place where bread, or corn, or wine, is repositied.

The most convenient way of picking hops, is into a long square frame of wood, called a bin. MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

*As when from rooting in a bin,
All powder'd o'er from tail to chin,
A lively maggot sallies out,
You know him by his hazel snout.*
SWIFT.

BIO'GRAPHER. n.s. [βίος and γράφω.] A writer of lives; a relator not of the history of nations, but of the actions of particular persons.

Our Grubstreet biographers watch for the death of a great man, like so many undertakers, on purpose to make a penny of him.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER, NO 35.

BI'RTHDAY. n.s. [from birth and day.]

1. The day on which any one is born.

*Orient light,
Exhaling first from darkness, they beheld Birthday of heaven and earth.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. VII.

2. The day of the year in which any one was born, annually observed.

*This is my birthday; as this very day
Was Cassius born.*

SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

*They tell me, 'tis my birthday, and I'll keep it
With double pomp of sadness:
'Tis what the day deserves, which gave me
breath.* DRYDEN.

*Your country dames,
Whose cloaths returning birthday claims.*
PRIOR.

BI'RTHNIGHT. n.s. [from birth and night.]

1. The night in which any one is born.

*Th' angelick song in Bethlehem
field,*

*On thy birthnight, that sung the Saviour
born.* PARADISE REGAIN'D.

2. The night annually kept in memory of any one's birth.

A youth more glitt'ring than a birthnight beau. POPE.

BIT. n.s. [from bite.]

1. As much meat as is put into the mouth at once.

How many prodigal bits have slaves and peasants

This night englutted?

SHAKESPEARE'S TIMON OF ATHENS.

*Follow your function, go and batten on cold
bits.* SHAKESPEARE.

The mice found it troublesome to be still climbing the oak for every bit they put in their bellies. L'ESTRANGE.

*By this the boiling kettle had prepar'd,
And to the table sent the smoaking lard,
A sav'ry bit, that serv'd to relish wine.*

DRYDEN'S FABLES.

John was the darling; he had all the good bits, was crammed with good pullet, chicken, and capon.

ARBUTHNOT'S JOHN BULL.

2. A small piece of any thing.

*Then clap four slices of pilaster on't,
That, lac'd with bits of rustick, makes a front.* POPE.

*He bought at thousands, what with better
wit*

You purchase as you want, and bit by bit.
POPE'S EPISTLES.

His majesty has power to grant a patent for stamping round bits of copper, to every subject he hath. SWIFT.

3. A Spanish West Indian silver coin, valued at sevenpence halfpenny.

4. A bit the better or worse. In the smallest degree.

There are few that know all the tricks of these lawyers; for aught I can see, your case is not a bit clearer than it was seven years ago.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

BLAB. n.s. [from the verb.] A teltale; a thoughtless babbler; a treacherous betrayer of secrets.

The secret man heareth many confessions; for who will open himself to a blab, or babbler? BACON, ESSAY 6.

*To have reveal'd
Secrets of man, the secrets of a friend,
Contempt and scorn of all, to be excluded
All friendship, and avoided as a blab.*

MILTON'S AGONISTES.

Whoever shews me a very inquisitive body, I'll shew him a blab, and one that shall make privacy as publick as a proclamation. L'ESTRANGE.

I should have certainly gone about shewing my letters, under the charge of secrecy, to every blab of my acquaintance.

SWIFT'S LETTERS.

BLACK-GUARD. adj. [from black and guard.] A cant word amongst the vulgar; by which is implied a dirty fellow; of the meanest kind.

Let a black-guard boy be always about the house, to send on your errands, and go to market for you on rainy days. SWIFT.

BLACK-LEAD. n.s. [from black and lead.] A mineral found in the lead-mines, much used for pencils; it is not fusible, or not without a very great heat.

You must first get your black-lead sharpened finely, and put fast into quills, for your rude and first draught.

PEACHAM.

BLA'CKSMITH. n.s. [from black and smith.] A smith that works in iron; so called from being very smutty.

The blacksmith may forge what he pleases. HOWEL.

Shut up thy doors with bars and bolts; it will be impossible for the blacksmith to make them so fast, but a cat and a whoremaster will find a way through them.

SPECTATOR, NO 205.

BLADE. n.s. [blæð, bleð, Sax. bled, Fr.] The spire of grass before it grows to seed; the green shoots of corn which rise from the seed. This seems to me the primitive signification of the word blade; from which, I believe, the blade of a sword was first named, because of its similitude in shape; and, from the blade of a sword, that of other weapons or tools.

There is hardly found a plant that yieldeth a red juice in the blade or ear, except it be the tree that beareth sanguis draconis.

BACON.

*Sends in his feeding flocks betimes, t'
invade*

The rising bulk of the luxuriant blade.

DRYDEN'S GEORGICKS.

If we were able to dive into her secret recesses, we should find that the smallest blade of grass, or most contemptible weed, has its particular use.

SWIFT ON THE FACULTIES OF THE MIND.

*Hung on every spray, on every blade
Of grass, the myriad dewdrops twinkle round.* THOMSON.

To BLAME. v.a. [blâmer, Fr.]

1. To censure; to charge with a fault: it generally implies a slight censure.

Our pow'r

Shall do a court'sy to our wrath, which men

May blame, but not controul.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

*Porphyrius, you too far did tempt your fate;
'Tis true, your duty to me it became;
But praising that, I must your conduct blame.* DRYDEN'S TYRANNICK LOVE.

Each finding, like a friend, Something to blame, and something to commend. POPE.

2. To blame has usually the particle for before the fault.

The reader must not blame me for making use here, all along of the word sentiment. LOCKE.

3. Sometimes, but rarely, of.

Tomoreus he blam'd of inconsiderate rashness, for that he would busy himself in matters not belonging to his vocation.

BLAME. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. Fault; imputation of a fault.<sup>37</sup>

In arms, the praise of success is shared amongst many; yet the blame of misadventures is charged upon one.

SIR J. HAYWARD.

They lay the blame on the poor little ones, sometimes passionately enough, to divert it from themselves. LOCKE.

2. Crime; that which produces or deserves censure.

Who would not judge us to be discharged of all blame, which are confest to have no great fault, even by their very word and testimony, in whose eyes no fault of ours hath ever hitherto been accustomed to seem small. HOOKER, B. V. §27.

I unspeak mine own detraction; here abjure

The taints and blames I laid upon myself,

For strangers to my nature.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

3. Hurt.

*Therewith upon his crest,
With rigour so outrageous he smit,
That a large share it hew'd out of the rest,
And glancing down his shield, from blame him fairly blest.*

FAIRY QUEEN, B. I. CANT. II.

STANZA 18.

4. There is a peculiar structure of this word, in which it is not very evident whether it be a noun or a verb; but I conceive it to be the noun. To blame, in French, à tort.

You were to blame, I must be plain with you,

To part so slightly with your wife's first gift.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF VENICE.

I do not ask whether they were mistaken; but, on supposition they were not, whether they were to blame in the manner.

STILLINGFLEET.

Now we should hold them much to blame, If they went back before they came.

PRIOR.

TO BLA'NDISH. v.a. [blandior, Lat.] To smooth; to soften. I have met with this word in no other passage.

Must'ring all her wiles,

*With blandish'd parleys, feminine assaults,
Tongue-batteries, she surceas'd not day nor night,*

To storm me over-watch'd, and weary'd out. MILTON'S AGONISTES, L. 402.

BLI'NDMAN'S BUFF. n.s. A play in which some one is to have his eyes covered, and hunt out the rest of the company.

Disguis'd in all the mask of night,

We left our champion on his flight:

At blindman's buff to grope his way,

In equal fear of night and day.

HUDIBRAS, P. III. C. II.

He imagines I shut my eyes again; but surely he fancies I play at blindman's buff with him; for he thinks I never have my eyes open.

STILLINGFLEET'S DEFENCE OF

DISCOURSE ON ROMISH IDOLATRY.

BLI'NDWORM. n.s. [from blind and worm.] A small viper, the least of our English serpents, but venomous.<sup>38</sup>

You spotted snakes, with double tongue,

Thorny hedgehogs, be not seen;

Newts and blindworms, do no wrong;

Come not near our fairy queen.

SHAKESPEARE'S MIDSUMMER NIGHT'S DREAM.

The greater slow worm, called also the blindworm, is commonly thought to be blind, because of the littleness of his eyes.

GREW'S MUSÆUM.

BLI'NKARD. n.s. [from blink.]

1. One that has bad eyes.
2. Something twinkling.

In some parts we see many glorious and eminent stars, in others few of any remarkable greatness, and, in some, none but blinkards, and obscure ones.

HAKEWELL ON PROVIDENCE.

BLO'BBER. n.s. [from blob.] A word used in some counties for a bubble.

There swimmeth also in the sea a round slimy substance, called a blobber, reputed noisome to the fish. CAREW.

BLO'CKHEAD. n.s. [from block and head.] A stupid fellow; a dolt; a man without parts.

Your wit will not so soon out as another man's will; it is strongly wedged up in a blockhead.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

We idly sit like stupid blockheads, Our hands committed to our pockets.

HUDIBRAS, P. III. C. II.

A blockhead rubs his thoughtless skull, And thanks his stars he was not born a fool. POPE.

BLOOD-LETTER. n.s. [from blood-let.] A phlebotomist; one that takes away blood medically.

This mischief happening to aneurisms, proceedeth from the ignorance of the blood-letter, who, not considering the error committed in letting blood, binds up the arm carelessly.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

BLOODY-MINDED. adj. [from bloody and mind.] Cruel; inclined to bloodshed.

I think you'll make me mad: truth has been at my tongue's end this half hour, and I have not the power to bring it out, for fear of this bloody-minded colonel.

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRIAR.

BLO'OMY. adj. [from bloom.] Full of blooms; flowery.

O nightingale! that on yon bloomy spray Warblest at eve, when all the woods are still. MILTON.

Departing spring could only stay to shed Her bloomy beauties on the genial bed, But left the manly summer in her stead.

DRYDEN.

Hear how the birds, on ev'ry bloomy spray, With joyous musick wake the dawning day. POPE.

BLO'SSOM. n.s. [blosme, Sax.] The flower that grows on any plant, previous to the seed or fruit. We generally call those flowers blossoms, which are not much regarded in themselves, but as a token of some following production.

Cold news for me:

Thus are my blossoms blasted in the bud, And caterpillars eat my leaves away.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

Merrily, merrily shall I live now, Under the blossom that hangs on the bough. SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

The pulling off many of the blossoms of a fruit tree, doth make the fruit fairer.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO 449.

To his green years your censure you would suit,

Not blast the blossom, but expect the fruit. DRYDEN.

Sweeter than spring,

Thou sole surviving blossom from the root, That nourish'd up my fortune.

THOMSON'S AUTUMN.

To BLOTE. v.a. To smoke, or dry by the smoke; as bloted herrings, or red herrings.

BLO'WER. n.s. [from blow.] A melter of tin.

Add his care and cost in buying wood, and in fetching the same to the blowing-house, together with the blowers, two or three months extreme and encreasing labour.

CAREW'S SURVEY.

BLU'NDERBUSS. n.s. [from blunder.] A gun that is charged with many bullets, so that, without any exact aim, there is a chance of hitting the mark.

There are blunderbusses in every loop-hole, that go off of their own accord, at the squeaking of a fiddle. DRYDEN.

BLU'NDERER. n.s. [from blunder.] A man apt to commit blunders; a blockhead.

Another sort of judges will decide in favour of an authour, or will pronounce him a mere blunderer, according to the company they have kept.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

To BOARD. v.n. To live in a house, where a certain rate is paid for eating.

*That we might not part,
As we at first did board with thee,
Now thou wouldst taste our misery.*

HERBERT.

We are several of us, gentlemen and ladies, who board in the same house; and, after dinner, one of our company stands up, and reads your paper to us all.

SPECTATOR, NO 961.

BOARD-WAGES. n.s. [from board and wages.] Wages allowed to servants to keep themselves in victuals.

*What more than madness reigns,
When one short sitting many hundreds drains,
And not enough is left him, to supply
Board-wages, or a footman's livery.*

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL'S SATIRES I.

BOAT. n.s. [bat, Saxon.]

1. A vessel to pass the water in. It is usually distinguished from other vessels, by being smaller and uncovered, and commonly moved by rowing.

I do not think that any one nation, the Syrian excepted, to whom the knowledge of the ark came, did find out at once the device of either ship or boat, in which they durst venture themselves upon the seas.

RALEIGH'S ESSAYS.

*An effeminate scoundrel multitude!
Whose utmost daring is to cross the Nile,*

In painted boats, to fright the crocodile.

TATE'S JUVENAL'S SATIRES XV.

2. A ship of a small size; as, a passage boat, pacquet boat, advice boat, fly boat.

BOB. n.s. [from the verb neuter.]

1. Something that hangs so as to play loosely; generally an ornament at the ear; a pendant; an ear-ring.

*The gaudy gossip, when she's set agog,
In jewels drest, and at each ear a bob.*

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL'S SATIRES VI.

2. The word repeated at the end of a stanza.

To bed, to bed, will be the bob of the song. L'ESTRANGE.

3. A blow.

I am sharply taunted, yea, sometimes with pinches, nips, and bobs.

ASCHAM'S SCHOOLMASTER.<sup>39</sup>

BO'BCHERRY. n.s. [from bob and cherry.] A play among children, in which the cherry is hung so as to bob against the mouth.

Bobcherry teaches at once two noble virtues, patience and constancy; the first, in adhering to the pursuit of one end; the latter, in bearing a disappointment.

ARBUTHNOT AND POPE'S MARTIN SCRIBLERUS.

BO' BWIG. n.s. [from bob and wig.]

A short wig.

A young fellow riding towards us full gallop, with a bobwig and a black silken bag tied to it, stopt short at the coach, to ask us how far the judges were behind.

SPECTATOR, NO 129.

BO' ILARY. n.s. [from to boil.] A place at the salt-works where the salt is boiled.

BOLD. adj. [bald, Saxon.]

1. Daring; brave; stout; courageous; magnanimous; fearless; intrepid.

The wicked flee when no man pursueth; but the righteous are bold as a lion.

BIBLE PROVERBS, XXVIII. 1.

I have seen the councils of a noble country grow bold, or timorous, according to the fits of his good or ill health that managed them. TEMPLE.

2. Executed with spirit, and without mean caution.

These, nervous, bold; those, languid and remiss. ROSCOMMON.

The cathedral church is a very bold work, and a masterpiece in Gothick architecture. ADDISON ON ITALY.

3. Confident; not scrupulous; not timorous.

We were bold in our God to speak unto you the gospel of God with much contention.

BIBLE 1 THESSALONIANS, II. 2.

I can be bold to say, that this age is adorned with some men of that judgment, that they could open new and undiscovered ways to knowledge. LOCKE.

4. Impudent; rude.

In thy prosperity he will be as thyself, and will be bold over thy servants. If thou be brought low, he will be against thee.

BIBLE ECCLESIASTICUS, VI. 11.

5. Licentious; such as shew great liberty of fiction.<sup>40</sup>

Which no bold tales of Gods or monsters swell,

But human passions, such as with us dwell. WALLER.

6. Standing out to the view; striking to the eye.

Catechreses and hyperboles are to be used judiciously, and placed in poetry, as heightenings and shadows are in painting, to make the figures bolder, and cause it to stand off to sight.

DRYDEN'S STATE OF INNOCENCE, PREFACE.

7. Open; smooth; even; level: a sailor's term.

Her dominions lie scattered, and have bold accessible coasts.

HOWEL'S VOCAL FOREST.

8. To make bold. To take freedoms: a phrase not grammatical, though common. To be bold is better; as, I was bold to speak.

To BO' LSTER. v.a. [from the noun.]

1. To support the head with a bolster.

2. To afford a bed to.

Mortal eyes do see them bolster, More than their own.

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

3. To hold wounds together with a compress.

The practice of bolstering the cheeks forward, does little service to the wound, and is very uneasy to the patient.

SHARP.

4. To support; to hold up; to maintain. This is now an expression somewhat coarse and obsolete.

We may be made wiser by the publick persuasions grafted in men's minds, so they be used to further the truth, not to bolster error. HOOKER, B. III. §4.

The lawyer sets his tongue to sale for the bolstering out of unjust causes.

HAKWELL ON PROVIDENCE.

It was the way of many to bolster up their crazy, doating consciences with confidences. SOUTH.

BO'LTHEAD. n.s. A long strait-necked glass vessel, for chymical distillations, called also a matrass, or receiver.

This spirit abounds in salt, which may be separted, by putting the liquour into a bolt-head, with a long and narrow neck.

BOYLE'S SCEPTICAL CHYMISTRY.

BO'LUS. n.s. [βόλος.] A form of medicine, in which the ingredients are made up into a soft mass, larger than pills, to be swallowed at once.

Keep their bodies soluble the while by clysters, lenitive boluses of cassia and manna, with syrup of violets. WISEMAN.

*By poets we are well assur'd,
That love, alas! can ne'er be cur'd;
A complicated heap of ills,*

Despising boluses and pills. SWIFT.

BO'NESETTER. n.s. [from boneset.] A chirurgeon; one who particularly professes the art of restoring broken or luxated bones.

BO'NNY. adj. [from bon, bonne, Fr. It is a word now almost confined to the Scottish dialect.]

1. Handsome; beautiful.

*Match to match I have encounter'd him,
And made a prey for carrion kites and crows,
Ev'n of the bonny beast he lov'd so well.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

*Thus wail'd the louts in melancholy strain,
Till bonny Susan sped across the plain.*

GAY'S PASTORALS.

2. Gay; merry; frolicksome; cheerful; blithe.

*Then sigh not so, but let them go,
And be you blithe and bonny.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

3. It seems to be generally used in conversation for plump.

BOOKLE'ARNED. adj. [from book and learned.] Versed in books, or literature: a term implying some slight contempt.

*Whate'er these booklearn'd blockheads say,
Solon's the veri'st fool in all the play.*

DRYDEN'S PERSIUS.

He will quote passages out of Plato and Pindar, at his own table, to some book-learned companion, without blushing.

SWIFT.

BO'OTCATCHER. n.s. [from boot and catch.] The person whose business at an inn is to pull off the boots of passengers.

The ostler and the bootcatcher ought to partake. SWIFT.

BO'OTY. n.s. [buyt, Dutch; butin, Fr.]

1. Plunder; pillage; spoils gained from the enemy.

*One way a band select from forage drives
A herd of beeves, fair oxen, and fair kine,
Their booty.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. XI.

L. 650.

His conscience is the hue and cry that pursues him; and when he reckons that he has gotten a booty, he has only caught a Tartar. L'ESTRANGE.

*For, should you to extortion be inclin'd,
Your cruel guilt will little booty find.*
DRYDEN'S JUVENAL'S SATIRES, VIII.

2. Things gotten by robbery.<sup>41</sup>

If I had a mind to be honest, I see, fortune would not suffer me; she drops booties in my mouth.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

3. To play booty. To play dishonestly, with an intent to lose. The French use, Je suis botte, when they mean to say, I will not go.

We understand what we ought to do; but when we deliberate, we play booty against ourselves: our consciences direct us one way, our corruptions hurry us another.

L'ESTRANGE.

I have set this argument in the best light, that the ladies may not think I write booty. DRYDEN.

BOPE'EP. n.s. [from bo and peep.]

To look out, and draw back as if frightened,<sup>42</sup> or with the purpose to fright some other.

*Then they for sudden joy did weep,
And I for sorrow sung,
That such a king should play bopeep,
And go the fools among.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

*Rivers,
That serve instead of peaceful barriers,
To part th' engagements of their warriors,
Where both from side to side may skip,
And only encounter at bopeep.*

HUDIBRAS, P. III. C. III.

There the devil plays at bopeep, puts out his horns to do mischief, then shrinks them back for safety.

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRIAR.

BOTCH. n.s. [bozza, pronounced botza, Ital.]

1. A swelling, or eruptive discoloration of the skin.

Time, which rots all, and makes botches pox,

*And, plodding on, must make a calf an ox,
Hath made a lawyer.*

DONNE.

*Botches and blains must all his flesh
imboss,
And all his people.*

L. 180.

It proves far more incommodious, which, if it were propelled in boils, botches, or ulcers, as in the scurvy, would rather conduce to health.

HARVEY ON CONSUMPTIONS.

2. A part in any work ill finished, so as to appear worse than the rest.

With him,

*To leave no rubs or botches in the work,
Fleance, his son, must embrace the fate.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

3. An adscititious, adventitious part clumsily added.

If both those words are not notorious botches, I am much deceived; though the French translator thinks otherways.

DRYDEN'S DEDICATION, ÆNEID.

*A comma ne'er could claim
A place in any British name;
Yet, making here a perfect botch,
Thrusts your poor vowel from his notch.*
SWIFT.

BO'TTLESCREW. n.s. [from bottle and screw.] A screw to pull out the cork.

A good butler always breaks off the point of his bottlescrew in two days, by trying which is hardest, the point of the screw, or the neck of the bottle. SWIFT.

BO'UNCER. n.s. [from bounce.] A boaster; a bully; an empty threatner.

BOURN. n.s. [borne, Fr.]

1. A bound; a limit.

Bourn, bound of land, tilth, vineyard,
none. SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

That undiscover'd country, from whose
ourn

No traveller e'er returns.

SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

False,

As dice are to be wish'd, by one that fixes
No bourn 'twixt his and mine.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

I know each lane, and every alley green,
And every bosky bourn from side to side.

MILTON.

2. [from burn, Saxon.] A brook; a torrent: whence many towns, seated near brooks, have names ending in ourn. It is not now used in either sense; though the second continues in the Scottish dialect.

Ne swelling Neptune, ne loud thund'ring
Jove,

Can change my cheer, or make me ever
mourn;

My little boat can safely pass this perilous
ourn. FAIRY QUEEN.

BO'UTISALE. n.s. [I suppose from bouty, or booty, and sale.] A sale at a cheap rate; as booty or plunder is commonly sold.

To speak nothing of the great boutisale of colleges and chantries. SIR J. HAYWARD.

BOWL. n.s. [buelin, Welch; which signifies, according to Junius, any thing made of horn, as drinking cups anciently were. It is pronounced bole.]

1. A vessel to hold liquids, rather wide than deep; distinguished from a cup, which is rather deep than wide.

Give me a bowl of wine;

I have not that alacrity of spirit,

Nor cheer of mind, that I was wont to have. RICHARD III.

If a piece of iron be fastened on the side of a bowl of water, a loadstone, in a boat of cork, will presently make into it.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. II.

C. III.

The sacred priests, with ready knives,
bereave

The beasts of life, and in full bowls receive
The streaming blood.

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

While the bright Sein, t' exalt the soul,
With sparkling plenty crowns the bowl,
And wit and social mirth inspires.

FENTON TO LORD GOWER.

2. The hollow part of any thing.

If you are allowed a large silver spoon for the kitchen, let half the bowl of it be worn out with continual scraping.

SWIFT'S DIRECTIONS TO THE COOK.

3. A basin, or fountain.

But the main matter is so to convey the water, as it never stay either in the bowl or in the cistern. BACON'S ESSAYS.

BRAID. adj. [To brede, in Chaucer, is to deceive.] An old word, which seems to signify deceitful.

Since Frenchmen are so braid,

Marry 'em that will. I'll live and die a maid.

SHAKESPEARE'S ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

BRA'INSICK. adj. [from brain and sick.] Diseased in the understanding; addleheaded; giddy; thoughtless.

Nor once deject the courage of our minds,
Because Cassandra's mad; her brainsick
raptures

Cannot distaste the goodness of a quarrel.
TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

They were brainsick men, who could neither endure the government of their king, nor yet thankfully receive the authours of their deliverance.

KNOLLES'S HISTORY OF THE TURKS.

BRA'INSICKLY. adv. [from brain-sick.] Weakly; headily.

*Why, worthy thane,
You do unbend your noble strength to think
So brainsickly of things.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

BRA'INSICKNESS. n.s. [from brainsick.] Indiscretion; giddiness.

BRA'NGLE. n.s. [uncertainly derived.] Squabble; wrangle.

The payment of tythes in this kingdom, is subject to many frauds, brangles, and other difficulties, not only from papists and dissenters, but even from those who profess themselves protestants. SWIFT.

To BRA'NGLE. v.n. [from the noun.] To wrangle; to squabble.

When polite conversing shall be improved, company will be no longer pestered with dull story-tellers, nor brangling disputers.
SWIFT'S INTRODUCTION TO GENTEEL CONVERSATION.

BRA'NGLEMENT. n.s. [from brangle.] The same with brangle.

BRASS. n.s. [bras, Sax. pres, Welch.]

1. A yellow metal, made by mixing copper with lapis calaminaris. It is used, in popular language, for any kind of metal in which copper has a part.

Brass is made of copper and calaminaris.
BACON.

Men's evil manners live in brass, their virtues

We write in water.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

*Let others mold the running mass
Of metals, and inform the breathing brass.* DRYDEN.

2. Impudence.

BRA'VO. n.s. [bravo, Ital.] A man who murders for hire.

For boldness, like the bravoës and banditti, is seldom employed, but upon desperate services.

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE.

Nor is the church the murd'rer's refuge made. GAY'S TRIVIA.

BRAWN. n.s. [of uncertain etymology.]

1. The fleshy or muscular part of the body.

The brawn of the arm must appear full, shadowed on one side, then shew the wrist-bone thereof. PEACHAM.

But most their looks on the black monarch bend,

His rising muscles and his brawn commend;

*His double biting ax, and beamy spear,
Each asking a gigantick force to rear.*

DRYDEN'S FABLES.

2. The arm, so called from its being muscular.

*I'll hide my silver beard in a gold beaver,
And in my vantbrace put this wither'd brawn.* SHAKESPEARE.

I had purpose

*Once more to hew thy target from thy
brawn.* SHAKESPEARE.

3. Bulk; muscular strength.

*Thy boist'rous hands are then of use,
when I,*

*With this directing head, those hands
apply;*

Brawn without brain is thine.

DRYDEN'S FABLES.

4. The flesh of a boar.

The best age for the boar is from two years to five years old, at which time it is best to geld him, or sell him for brawn.

MORTIMER.

5. A boar.

BREAD-CHIPPER. n.s. [from bread and chip.] One that chips bread; a baker's servant.<sup>43</sup>

No abuse, Hal, on my honour; no abuse.

— Not to dispraise me, and call me pantler, and bread-chipper, and I know not what?

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV. P. II.

BRE'AKNECK. n.s. [from break and neck.] A fall in which the neck is broken; a steep place endangering the neck.

I must

Forsake the court; to do't or no, is certain

To me a breakneck.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

BRE'AKPROMISE. n.s. [from break and promise.] One that makes a practice of breaking his promise.

I will think you the most atheistical break-promise, and the most hollow lover.

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

BRE'ASTCASKET. n.s. [from breast and casket.] With mariners. The largest and longest caskets, which are a sort of strings placed in the middle of the yard.

BRE'ASTKNOT. n.s. [from breast and knot.] A knot or bunch of ribbands worn by women on the breast.

Our ladies have still faces, and our men hearts, why may we not hope for the same achievements from the influence of this breastknot?

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER, NO 11.

BREED. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. A cast; a kind; a subdivision of species.

*I bring you witnesses,
Twice fifteen thousand hearts of England's breed.* SHAKESPEARE.

The horses were young and handsome, and of the best breed in the north.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

Walled towns, stored arsenals, and ordnance; all this is but a sheep in a lion's skin, except the breed and disposition of the people be stout and warlike.

BACON'S ESSAYS, NO 30.

Infectious streams of crowding sins began,

And through the spurious breed and guilty nation ran. ROSCOMMON.

Rode fair Ascanius on a fiery steed, Queen Dido's gift, and of the Tyrian breed. DRYDEN.

A cousin of his last wife's was proposed; but John would have no more of the breed.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

2. Progeny; offspring.

*If thou wilt lend this money, lend it not
As to thy friend; for when did friendship take*

A breed of barren metal of his friend?

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF
VENICE.

3. A number produced at once; a hatch.

She lays them in the sand, where they lie till they are hatched; sometimes above an hundred at a breed. GREW'S MUSÆUM.

BRE'EDBATE. n.s. [from breed and bate.] One that breeds quarrels; an incendiary.

An honest, willing, kind fellow, as ever servant shall come in house withal; and, I warrant you, no teltale, nor no breedbate.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF
WINDSOR.

BRIBE. n.s. [Bribe, in French, originally signifies a piece of bread, and is applied to any piece taken from the rest; it is therefore likely, that a bribe originally signified, among us, a share of any thing unjustly got.] A reward given to pervert the judgment, or corrupt the conduct.

You have condemn'd and noted Lucius Pella,

For taking bribes here of the Sardians.

SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

*Nor less may Jupiter to gold ascribe,
When he turn'd himself into a bribe.*

WALLER.

If a man be covetous, profits or bribes may put him to the test. L'ESTRANGE.

*There's joy when to wild will you laws prescribe,
When you bid fortune carry back her bribe.* DRYDEN.

BRI'DEMEN, BRI'DEMAIDS. n.s. The attendants on the bride and bridegroom.

BRI'DLEHAND. n.s. [from bridle and hand.] The hand which holds the bridle in riding.

In the turning, one might perceive the bridlehand something gently stir; but, indeed, so gently, as it did rather distil virtue than use violence. SIDNEY, B. II.

The heat of summer put his blood into a ferment, which affected his bridlehand with great pain. WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

BRI'LLIANT. adj. [brillant, Fr.] Shining; sparkling; splendid; full of lustre.

*So have I seen in larder dark
Of veal a lucid loin,
Replete with many a brilliant spark,
As wise philosophers remark,
At once both stink and shine.* DORSET.

BRI'LLIANT. n.s. A diamond of the finest cut, formed into angles, so as to refract the light, and shine more.

*In deference to his virtues, I forbear
To shew you what the rest in orders were;
This brilliant is so spotless and so bright,
He needs not foil, but shines by his own proper light.* DRYDEN.

BRI'MMER. n.s. [from brim.] A bowl full to the top.

*When healths go round, and kindly brimmers flow,
Till the fresh garlands on their foreheads glow.* DRYDEN.

BRI'MSTONY. adj. [from brimstone.] Full of brimstone; containing sulphur; sulphureous.

BRISK. adj. [brusque, Fr.]

1. Lively; vivacious; gay; sprightly; applied to men.

*Pr'ythee, die, and set me free,
Or else be Kind and brisk, and gay like me.*

SIR J. DENHAM.

A creeping young fellow, that had committed matrimony with a brisk game-some lass, was so altered in a few days, that he was liker a sceleton than a living man. L'ESTRANGE.

*Why shou'd all honour then be ta'en
From lower parts, to load the brain:
When other limbs we plainly see,
Each in his way, as brisk as he?* PRIOR.

2. Powerful; spirituous.

*Our nature here is not unlike our wine;
Some sorts, when old, continue brisk and fine.* DENHAM.

*Under ground, the rude Riphæan race
Mimick brisk cyder, with the brake's product wild, Sloes pounded, hips, and servis' harshest juice.* PHILIPS.

It must needs be some exteriour cause, and the brisk acting of some objects without me, whose efficacy I cannot resist. LOCKE.

3. Vivid; bright.<sup>44</sup>

Objects appeared much darker, because my instrument was overcharged; had it magnified thirty or twenty five times, it would have made the object appear more brisk and pleasant. NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

BRI'STOL STONE. A kind of soft diamond found in a rock near the city of Bristol.

Of this kind of crystal are the better and larger sort of Bristol stones, and the Kerry stones of Ireland. WOODWARD.

To BRO'ADEN. v.n. [from broad.] To grow broad. I know not whether this word occurs, but in the following passage.

*Low walks the sun, and broadens by degrees,
Just o'er the verge of day.*
THOMSON'S SUMMER, L. 1605.

BRO'KEN MEAT. Fragments;
meat that has been cut.

*Get three or four chairwomen to attend you constantly in the kitchen, whom you pay at small charges; only with the broken meat,
a few coals, and all the cinders.* SWIFT.

BRO'WNBILL. n.s. [from brown and bill.] The ancient weapon of the English foot; why it is called brown, I have not discovered; but we now say
brown musket from it.

*And brownbills, levied in the city,
Made bills to pass the grand committee.*
HUDIBRAS.

BRO'WNSTUDY. n.s. [from brown and study.] Gloomy meditations; study in which we direct our thoughts to no certain point.

*They live retired, and then they doze away their time in drowsiness and brownstudies;
or, if brisk and active, they lay themselves out wholly in making common places.*
NORRIS.

To BROWSE. v.a. [brouser, Fr.] To eat branches, or shrubs.

*And being down, is trod in the durt
Of cattle, and broused, and sorely hurt.*
SPENSER'S PASTORALS.

*Thy palate then did deign
The roughest berry on the rudest hedge:
Yea, like the stag, when snow the pasture sheets,
The barks of trees thou browsedst.*
SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND
CLEOPATRA.

To BRUISE. v.a. [briser, Fr.] To crush or mangle with the heavy blow of something not edged or pointed; to crush by any weight; to beat into gross powder; to beat together coarsely.

*Fellows in arms, and my most loving friends,
Bruis'd underneath the yoke of tyranny.*
SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

*And fix far deeper in his head their stings, Than temporal death shall bruise the victor's heel,
Or theirs whom he redeems.*
PARADISE LOST, B. XII. L. 433.

*As in old chaos heav'n with earth confus'd,
And stars with rocks together crush'd and bruis'd.* WALLER.

*They beat their breasts with many a bruising blow,
Till they turn'd livid, and corrupt the snow.* DRYDEN'S FABLES.

BRUISE. n.s. [from the verb.] A hurt with something blunt and heavy.

*One arm'd with metal, th' other with wood,
This fit for bruise, and that for blood.*
HUDIBRAS.

*I since have labour'd
To bind the bruises of a civil war,
And stop the issues of their wasting blood.*
DRYDEN.

BRUNE'TT. n.s. [brunette, Fr.] A woman with a brown complexion.

Your fair women therefore thought of this fashion, to insult the olives and the brunettes.
ADDISON'S GUARDIAN, NO 109.

To BRUSH. v.n.

1. To move with haste: a ludicrous word, applied to men.

*Nor wept his fate, nor cast a pitying eye,
Nor took him down, but brush'd regardless by.* DRYDEN.

*The French had gather'd all their force,
And William met them in their way;
Yet off they brush'd, both foot and horse.*
PRIOR.

2. To fly over; to skim lightly.

Nor love is always of a vicious kind,

*But oft to virtuous acts inflames the
mind,
Awakes the sleepy vigour of the soul,
And, brushing o'er, adds motion to the pool.* DRYDEN'S FABLES.

BRU'TENESS. n.s. [from brute.] Brutality; a word not now used.

*Thou dotard vile,
That with thy bruteness shend'st thy comely age.* FAIRY QUEEN.

To BRU'TIFY. v.a. [from brute.] To make a man a brute.

O thou salacious woman! am I then brutified? Ay; feel it here; I sprout, I bud, I blossom, I am ripe horn mad.
CONGREVE'S OLD BATCHELOR.

BUB. n.s. [a cant word.] Strong malt liquor.

*Or if it be his fate to meet
With folks who have more wealth than wit,
He loves cheap port, and double bub,
And settles in the humdrum club.*
PRIOR.

To BU'BBLE. v.n. [from the noun.]

1. To rise in bubbles.

*Alas! a crimson river of warm blood,
Like to a bubbling fountain stirr'd with wind,
Doth rise and fall.*
SHAKESPEARE'S TITUS ANDRONICUS.
*Adder's fork, and blindworm's sting,
Lizard's leg, and owlet's wing:
For a charm of pow'rful trouble,
Like a hellbroth boil and bubble.*
SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

Still bubble on, and pour forth blood and tears. DRYDEN.

2. To run with a gentle noise.

*For thee the bubbling springs appear'd to mourn,
And whispering pines made vows for thy return.* DRYDEN.

The same spring suffers at some times a very manifest remission of its heat: at others, as manifest an increase of it; yea,

sometimes to that excess, as to make it boil and bubble with extreme heat.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

*Not bubbling fountains to the thirsty
swain,*

*Not show'rs to larks, or sunshine to the bee,
Are half so charming as thy sight to me.*

POPE.

To BU'BBLE. v.a. To cheat: a cant word.

He tells me, with great passion, that she has bubbled him out of his youth; and that she has drilled him on to five and fifty.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO 89.

Charles Mather could not bubble a young beau better with a toy.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

BU'BBLER. n.s. [from bubble.] A cheat.

What words can suffice to express, how infinitely I esteem you, above all the great ones in this part of the world; above all the Jews, jobbers, and bubbleers.

DIGBY TO POPE.

BUCANI'ERS. n.s. A cant word for the privateers, or pirates, of America.

To BUDGE. v.n. [bouger, Fr.] To stir; to move off the place: a low word.

*All your prisoners
In the lime grove, which weatherfends your cell,
They cannot budge till your release.*
SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

The mouse ne'er shun'd the cat, as they did budge

From rascals worse than they.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

*I thought th' hadst scorn'd to budge
For fear.* HUDIBRAS, CANT. II.

BUDGE. adj. [of uncertain etymology.] Surly; stiff; formal.

*O foolishness of men! that lend their ears
To those budge doctors of the stoicks.*

MILTON.

BU'DGET. n.s. [bogette, Fr.]

1. A bag, such as may be easily carried.

*If tinkers may have leave to live,
And bear the sowskin budget;
Then my account I well may give,
And in the stocks avouch it.*

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

Sir Robert Clifford, in whose bosom, or budget, most of Perkin's secrets were laid up, was come into England. BACON.

*His budget with corruptions cramm'd,
The contributions of the damn'd.*

SWIFT.

2. It is used for a store, or stock.

It was nature, in fine, that brought off the cat, when the fox's whole budget of inventions failed him. L'ESTRANGE.

BU'FFLEHEADED. adj. [from buffle and head.] A man with a large head, like a buffalo; dull; stupid; foolish.

BULL, in composition, generally notes the large size of any thing, as bull-head, bulrush, bull-trout; and is therefore only an inclusive particle, without much reference to its original signification.

BULL-BAITING. n.s. [from bull and bait.] The sport of baiting bulls with dogs.

What am I the wiser for knowing that Trajan was in the fifth year of his tribuneship, when he entertained the people with a horse-race or bull-baiting?

ADDISON ON ANCIENT MEDALS.

BULL-BEGGAR. n.s. [This word probably came from the insolence of those who begged, or raised money by the pope's bull.] Something terrible; something to fright children with.

These fulminations from the Vatican were turned into ridicule; and, as they were called bull-beggars, they were used as words of scorn and contempt.

AYLIFFE'S PARERAGON.

BULL-DOG. n.s. [from bull and dog.] A dog of a particular form, remarkable for his courage. He is used in baiting the bull; and this species is so peculiar to Britain, that they are said to degenerate when they are carried to other countries.

All the harmless part of him is no more than that of a bull-dog; they are tame no longer than they are not offended.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO 438.

BU'LLY. n.s. [Skinner derives this word from burly, as a corruption in the pronunciation; which is very probably right: or from bulky, or bull-eyed; which are less probable. May it not come from bull, the pope's letter, implying the insolence of those who came invested with authority from the papal court?] A noisy, blustering, quarrelling fellow: it is generally taken for a man that has only the appearance of courage.

Mine host of the garter. — What says my bully rook? Speak scholarly and wisely.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

All on a sudden the doors flew open, and in comes a crew of roaring bullies, with their wenches, their dogs, and their bottles.

L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

*'Tis so ridic'lous, but so true withal,
A bully cannot sleep without a brawl.*

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL'S SATIRES, III.

A scolding hero is, at the worst, a more tolerable character than a bully in petticoats.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER, NO 38.

The little man is a bully in his nature, but,

when he grows cholerick, I confine him till his wrath is over.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

BU'MPKIN. n.s. [This word is of uncertain etymology; Henshaw derives it from pumpkin, a kind of worthless gourd, or melon. This seems harsh.<sup>45</sup> Bump is used amongst us for a knob, or lump; may not bumpkin be much the same with clodpate, loggerhead, block, and blockhead.] An awkward heavy rustick; a country lout.

The poor bumpkin, that had never seen nor heard of such delights before, blessed herself at the change of her condition.

L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

*A heavy bumpkin, taught with daily care,
Can never dance three steps with a becoming air.* DRYDEN.

*In his white cloak the magistrate appears,
The country bumpkin the same liv'ry wears.* DRYDEN.

*It was a favour to admit them to breeding;
they might be ignorant bumpkins and clowns, if they pleased.* LOCKE.

BU'NTER. n.s. A cant word for a woman who picks up rags about the street; and used, by way of contempt, for any low vulgar woman.

BUREAU'. n.s. [bureau, Fr.] A chest of drawers.<sup>46</sup> It is pronounced as if it were spelt buro.

*For not the desk with silver nails,
Nor bureau of expence,
Nor standish well japan'd, avails
To writing of good sense.* SWIFT.

BU'RNING-GLASS. n.s. [from burning and glass.] A glass which collects the rays of the sun into a narrow compass, and so increases their force.

The appetite of her eye did seem to scorch me up like a burning-glass.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF
WINDSOR.

*Love is of the nature of a burning-glass, which, kept still in one place, freth;
changed often, it doth nothing.*

SUCKLING.

*O diadem, thou centre of ambition,
Where all its different lines are reconciled,
As if thou wert the burning-glass of glory.*

DRYDEN AND LEE.

BU'RSAR. n.s. [bursarius, Lat.]

1. The treasurer of a college.
2. Students sent as exhibitioners to the universities in Scotland by each presbytery, from whom they have a small yearly allowance for four years.

BU'RSTENESS. n.s. [from burst.]

A rupture, or hernia.

BU'TTER. n.s. [buttere, Sax.

butyrum, Lat.]

1. An unctuous substance made by agitating the cream of milk, till the oil separates from the whey.

And he took butter and milk, and the calf which he had dressed, and set before them. BIBLE GENESIS, XVIII. 8.

2. Butter of antimony. A chymical preparation, made by uniting the acid spirits of sublimate corrosive with regulus of antimony. It is a great caustick. Harris.

3. Butter of tin, is made with tin and sublimate corrosive. This preparation continually emits fumes. Harris.

BU'TTERFLY. n.s. [butterflege, Saxon.] A beautiful insect, so named because it first appears at the beginning of the season for butter.

*Eftsoons that damsel, by her heav'nly might,
She turned into a winged butterfly,
In the wide air to make her wand'ring flight.* SPENSER.

*Tell old tales, and laugh
At gilded butterflies; and hear poor rogues*

Talk of court news.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

*And so befel, that as he cast his eye
Among the colworts on a butterfly,
He saw false Reynard.*

DRYDEN'S FABLES.

That which seems to be a powder upon the wings of a butterfly, is an innumerable company of extreme small feathers, not to be discerned without a microscope.

GREW.

BU'XOM. adj. [bucsum, Sax. from bugan, to bend. It originally signified obedient, as John de Trevisa, a clergyman, tells his patron, that he is obedient and buxom to all his commands. In an old form of marriage used before the Reformation, the bride promised to be obedient and buxom in bed and at board; from which expression, not well understood, its present meaning seems to be derived.]

1. Obedient; obsequious.

He did tread down, and disgrace all the English, and set up and countenance the Irish; thinking thereby to make them more tractable and buxom to his government.

SPENSER'S IRELAND.

*He, with broad sails,
Winnow'd the buxom air.* MILTON.

2. Gay; lively; brisk.

I'm born

*Again a fresh child of the buxom morn,
Heir of the sun's first beams.* CRASHAW.

*Zephyr, with Aurora playing,
As he met her once a maying,
Fill'd her with thee, a daughter fair,
So buxom, blithe, and debonnair.*

MILTON.

*Sturdy swains,
In clean array, for rustick dance prepare,
Mixt with the buxom damsels, hand in hand,
They frisk and bound.* PHILIPS.

3. Wanton; jolly.

Almighty Jove descends, and pours Into his buxom bride his fruitful show'rs.

DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

She feign'd the rites of Bacchus! cry'd aloud,

And to the buxom god the virgin vow'd.

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

BY, in composition, implies something out of the direct way; and, consequently, some obscurity, as a by-road; something irregular, as a by-end; or something collateral, as a by-concernment; or private, as a by-law. This composition is used at pleasure, and will be understood by the examples following.

BY-COFFEEHOUSE. n.s. A coffeehouse in an obscure place.

I afterwards entered a by-coffeehouse, that stood at the upper end of a narrow lane, where I met with a nonjuror.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO 403.

BY-CONCERNMENT. n.s. An affair which is not the main business.

Our plays, besides the main design, have under-plots, or by-concernments, or less considerable persons and intrigues, which are carried on with the motion of the main plot.

DRYDEN ON DRAMATICK POETRY.

BY-END. n.s. Private interest; secret advantage.

All people that worship for fear, profit, or some other by-end, fall within the intendement of this fable. L'ESTRANGE.

BY-LAW. n.s.

By-laws are orders made in court-leets, or court-barons, by common assent, for the good of those that make them, farther than the publick law binds. COWEL.

There was also a law, to restrain the by-laws and ordinances of corporations.

BACON'S HENRY VII.

In the beginning of this record is inserted

the law or institution; to which are added two by-laws, as a comment upon the general law.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO 608.

BY-NAME. n.s. A nickname; name of reproach, or accidental appellation.

Robert, eldest son to the Conquerour, used short hose, and thereupon was by-named Court-hose, and shewed first the use of them to the English.

CAMDEN'S REMAINS.

BY-PAST. adj. Past; a term of the Scotch dialect.

Wars, pestilences, and diseases, have not been fewer for these three hundred years by-past, than ever they have been since we have had records.

CHEYNE'S PHILOSOPHICAL PRINCIPLES.

BY-ROAD. n.s. An obscure unfrequented path.

*Through slipp'ry by-roads, dark and deep,
They often climb, and often creep.*

SWIFT.

BY-SPEECH. n.s. An incidental or casual speech, not directly relating to the point.

When they come to allege what word and what law they meant, their common ordinary practice is to quote by-speeches in some historical narration or other, and to use them as if they were written in most exact form of law.

HOOKE, B. III. §4.

BY-WORD. n.s. A saying; a proverb.

*Duke of York, be king;
And bashful Henry be deposed; whose cowardice
Hath made us by-words to our enemies.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI. P III.

I knew a wise man, that had it for a by-word, when he saw men hasten to a conclusion, Stay a little, that we may make an end the sooner.

BACON'S ESSAYS, NO 26.

We are become a by-word among the nations for our ridiculous feuds and animosities.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER, NO 50.

It will be his lot often, to look singular, in loose and licentious times, and to become a by-word and a reproach, on that account, among the men of wit and pleasure.

ATTERBURY.

C

The third letter of the alphabet, has two sounds; one like k, as, call, clock, craft, coal, companion, cuneiform; the other as s, as, Cæsar, cessation, cinder. It sounds like k before a, o, u, or a consonant; and like s, before e, i, and y.

CA' BARET. n.s. [French.] A tavern.

Suppose this servant passing by some cabaret, or tennis-court, where his comrades were drinking or playing, should stay with them, and drink or play away his money.

BRAMHALL AGAINST HOBBS.

CA' CKEREL. n.s. A fish, said to make those who eat it laxative.

CA' DGER. n.s. A huckster; one who brings butter, eggs, and poultry, from the country to market.

CÆSU' RA. n.s. [Lat.] A figure in poetry, by which a short syllable after a complete foot is made long.

CAG. n.s. A barrel or wooden vessel, containing four or five gallons.

To CAJO' LE. v.a. [cageoller, Fr.] To flatter; to sooth; to coax: a low word.

Thought he, 'tis no mean part of civil State-prudence, to cajole the devil.

HUDIBRAS, CANT. II. P. III.

The one affronts him, while the other cajoles and pities him; takes up his quarrel, shakes his head at it, clasps his hand upon his breast, and then protests and protests.

L'ESTRANGE.

CA' LDRON. n.s. [chauldron, Fr. from calidus, Lat.] A pot; boiler; a kettle.

*In the midst of all
There placed was a caldron wide and tall,
Upon a mighty furnace, burning hot.*

FAIRY QUEEN, B. II.

Some strip the skin, some portion out the spoil;

The limbs, yet trembling, in the caldrons boil;

Some on the fire the reeking entrails broil.

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

In the late eruptions, this great hollow was like a vast caldron, filled with glowing and melted matter, which, as it boiled over in any part, ran down the sides of the mountain.

ADDISON'S REMARKS ON ITALY.

CALM. adj. [calme, Fr. kalm, Dutch.]

1. Quiet; serene; not stormy; not tempestuous; applied to the elements.

Calm was the day, and, through the trembling air,

Sweet breathing Zephyrus did softly play

A gentle spirit, that lightly did allay

Hot Titan's beams, which then did glister fair. SPENSER.

2. Undisturb'd; unruffled; applied to the passions.

It is no ways congruous, that God should be frightening men into truth, who were made to be wrought upon by calm evidence, and gentle methods of persuasion.

ATTERBURY.

The queen her speech with calm attention hears,

Her eyes restrain the silver-streaming tears. POPE'S ODYSSEY.

CA'LMY. adj. [from calm.] Calm; peaceful.<sup>47</sup>

*And now they nigh approached to the sted,
Where as those mermaid's dwelt: it was a still*

*And calmy bay, on th' one side sheltered
With the broad shadow of an hoary hill.*

FAIRY QUEEN, B. II.

CA'MERADE. n.s. [from camera, a chamber, Lat.] One that lodges in the same chamber; a bosom companion. By corruption we now use comrade.

Camerades with him, and confederates in his worthy design.

RYMER'S TRAGEDIES OF LAST AGE.

CAMISA'DO. n.s. [camisa, a shirt, Ital. camisium, low Lat.] An attack made by soldiers in the dark; on which occasion they put their shirts outward, to be seen by each other.

They had appointed the same night, whose darkness would have encreased the fear, to have given a camisado upon the English.

HAYWARD.

CAN. v.n. [konnen, Dutch. It is sometimes, though rarely, used alone; but is in constant use as an expression of the potential mood; as, I can do, thou canst do, I could do, thou couldest do. It has no other terminations.]

1. To be able; to have power.

In place there is licence to do good and evil, whereof the latter is a curse; for, in evil, the best condition is not to will; the second not to can. BACON'S ESSAYS, NO 11.

O, there's the wonder!

*Mecænas and Agrippa, who can most With Cæsar, are his foes. His wife Octavia, Driv'n from his house, sollicit her revenge,
And Dolabella, who was once his friend.*

DRYDEN'S ALL FOR LOVE.

He can away with no company, whose discourse goes beyond what claret and dissoluteness inspires. LOCKE.

2. It expresses the potential mood; as, I can do it.

*If she can make me blest? She only can:
Empire, and wealth, and all she brings beside,*

Are but the train and trappings of her love. DRYDEN.

3. It is distinguished from may, as power from permission; I can do it; it is in my power: I may do it; it is allowed me: but, in poetry, they are confounded.<sup>48</sup>

4. Can is used of the person with the verb active, where may is used; of the thing, with the verb passive; as, I can do it; it may be done.

CA'NCELLATED. particip. adj. [from cancel.] Cross-barred; marked with lines crossing each other.

The tail of the castor is almost bald, though the beast is very hairy; and cancellated, with some resemblance to the scales of fishes. GREW'S MUSÆUM.

CA'NCER. n.s. [cancer, Lat.]

1. A crabfish.
2. The sign of the summer solstice.

*When now no more th' alternate twins are fir'd,
And Cancer reddens with the solar blaze,
Short is the doubtful empire of the night.*
THOMSON.

3. A virulent swelling, or sore, not to be cured.

Any of these three may degenerate into a schirrus, and that schirrus into a cancer.
WISEMAN.

*As when a cancer on the body feeds,
And gradual death from limb to limb
proceeds;
So does the chilness to each vital part,
Spread by degrees, and creeps into the heart.* ADDISON'S OVID.

To CA'NCERATE. v.n. [from cancer.] To grow cancerous; to become a cancer.

But striking his fist upon the point of a nail in the wall, his hand cancerated, he fell into a fever, and soon after died on't.
L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

CA'NDLE. n.s. [candela, Lat.]

1. A light made of wax or tallow, surrounding a wick of flax or cotton.

*Here burns my candle out, ay, here it dies,
Which, while it lasted, gave King Henry light.* SHAKESPEARE.

We see that wax candles last longer than tallow candles, because wax is more firm and hard.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

Take a child, and, setting a candle before him, he shall find his pupil to contract very much, to exclude the light, with the brightness whereof it would otherwise be dazzled. RAY.

2. Light, or luminary.

By these bless'd candles of the night,

Had you been there, I think you would have begg'd

The ring of me, to give the worthy doctor.
SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF
VENICE.

CANDLEWA'STER. n.s. [from candle and waste.] That which consumes candles; a spendthrift.

Patch grief with proverbs, make misfortune drunk

With candlewasters.

SHAKESPEARE'S MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

CA'NNON. n.s. [cannon, Fr. from canna, Lat. a pipe, meaning a large tube.]

1. A great gun for battery.
2. A gun larger than can be managed by the hand. They are of so many sizes, that they decrease in the bore from a ball of forty-eight pounds to a ball of five ounces.

*As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks,
So they redoubled strokes upon the foe.*
SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*He had left all the cannon he had taken;
and now he sent all his great cannon to a garrison.* CLARENDON.

The making, or price, of these gunpowder instruments, is extremely expensive, as may be easily judged by the weight of their materials; a whole cannon weighing commonly eight thousand pounds; a half cannon, five thousand; a culverin, four thousand five hundred; a demi-culverin, three thousand; which, whether it be in iron or brass, must needs be very costly.
WILKINS'S MATHEMATICAL MAGICK.

CANT. n.s. [probably from cantus, Lat. implying the odd tone of voice used by vagrants; but imagined by some to be corrupted from quaint.]

1. A corrupt dialect used by beggars and vagabonds.
2. A particular form of speaking peculiar to some certain class or body of men.

I write not always in the proper terms of navigation, land service, or in the cant of any profession. DRYDEN.

If we would trace out the original of that flagrant and avowed impiety, which has prevailed among us for some years, we should find, that it owes its rise to that cant and hypocrisy, which had taken possession of the people's minds in the times of the great rebellion.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER, NO 37.

Astrologers, with an old paltry cant, and a few pot-hooks for planets, to amuse the vulgar, have too long been suffered to abuse the world.

SWIFT'S PREDICTIONS FOR THE YEAR 1701.

A few general rules, with a certain cant of words, has sometimes set up an illiterate heavy writer, for a most judicious and formidable critick.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO 291.

3. A whining pretension to goodness, in formal and affected terms.

Of promise prodigal, while pow'r you want, And preaching in the self-denying cant.

DRYDEN'S AURENGZEBE.

4. Barbarous jargon.

The affectation of some late authours, to introduce and multiply cant words, is the most ruinous corruption in any language.

SWIFT.

5. Auction.

Numbers of these tenants, or their descendants, are now offering to sell their leases by cant, even those which were for lives.

SWIFT.

To CANT. v.n. [from the noun.] To talk in the jargon of particular professions, or in any kind of formal affected language, or with a peculiar and studied tone of voice.

Men cant endlessly about materia and forma; hunt chimeras by rules of art, or dress up ignorance in words of bulk or sound, which may stop up the mouth of enquiry.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

That uncouth affected garb of speech, or canting language rather, if I may so call it, which they have of late taken up, is the signal distinction and characteristical note of that, which, in that their new language, they call the godly party. SANDERSON.

The busy, subtile serpents of the law, Did first my mind from true obedience draw;

While I did limits to the king prescribe, And took for oracles that canting tribe.

ROSCOMMON.

Unskill'd in schemes by planets to foreshow, Like canting rascals, how the wars will go.

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

CA'NTER. n.s. [from cant.] A term of reproach for hypocrites, who talk formally of religion, without obeying it.

CANTERBURY GALLOP. [In horsemanship.] The hard gallop of an ambling horse, commonly called a canter; and probably derived from the monks riding to Canterbury on easy ambling horses.

CAPU'CHED. adj. [from capuce, Fr. a hood.] Covered over as with a hood.

They are differently cucullated and capuched upon the head and back, and, in the cicada, the eyes are more prominent.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. IV. C. III.

CAPUCHI'N. n.s. A female garment, consisting of a cloak and hood, made in imitation of the dress of capuchin monks; whence its name is derived.

CAR. n.s. [car, Welch; karre, Dut. cræt, Sax. carrus, Lat.]

1. A small carriage of burden, usually drawn by one horse or two.

*When a lady comes in a coach to our shops, it must be followed by a car loaded with
Mr. Wood's money.* SWIFT.

2. In poetical language, a chariot;<sup>49</sup> a chariot of war, or triumph.

*Henry is dead, and never shall revive:
Upon a wooden coffin we attend,
And death's dishonourable victory,
We with our stately presence glorify,
Like captives bound to a triumphant car.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

*Wilt thou aspire to guide the heav'nly car,
And with thy daring folly burn the world.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*And the gilded car of day,
His glowing axle doth allay
In the steep Atlantick stream.* MILTON.

*See, where he comes, the darling of the war!
See millions crowding round the gilded car!* PRIOR.

3. The Charles's wain, or Bear; a constellation.

*Ev'ry fixt and ev'ry wand'ring star,
The Pleiads, Hyads, and the Northern Car.* DRYDEN.

CA'RABINE, CA'RBINE. n.s. [carabine, Fr.] A small sort of fire-arm, shorter than a fusil, and carrying a ball of twenty-four in the pound, hung by the light horse at a belt over the left shoulder. It is a kind of medium between the pistol and the musket, having its barrel two foot and a half long.

CA'RDINAL. n.s. One of the chief governours of the Romish church, by whom the pope is elected out of their own number, which contains six bishops, fifty priests, and fourteen deacons, who constitute the sacred college, and are chosen by the pope.

A cardinal is so stiled, because serviceable to the apostolick see, as an axle or hinge on which the whole government of the church turns; or as they have, from the pope's grant, the hinge and government of all the affairs of the Romish church.

AYLIFFE'S PARERAGON.

*You hold a fair assembly;
You are a churchman, or, I'll tell you,
cardinal,
I should judge now unhappily.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

CA'RDMATCH. n.s. [from card and match.] A match made by dipping pieces of card in melted sulphur.

Take care, that those may not make the most noise who have the least to sell; which is very observable in the venders of cardmatches.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO 251.

CA'RECRAZED. adj. [from care and craze.] Broken with care and solicitude.

*These both put off, a poor petitioner,
A carecraz'd mother of a many children.*

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

Knowing that if the worst befall them, they shall lose nothing but themselves; whereof they seem very careless.

SPENSER'S IRELAND.

*Nor lose the good advantage of his grace,
By seeming cold, or careless of his will.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

A woman the more curious she is about her face, is commonly the more careless about her house. BEN JONSON.

A father, unnaturally careless of his child, sells or gives him to another man.

LOCKE.

2. Cheerful; undisturbed.

*Thus wisely careless, innocently gay,
Cheerful he play'd.* POPE.

*In my cheerful morn of life,
When nurs'd by careless solitude I liv'd,
And sung of nature with unceasing joy, Pleas'd have I wander'd through your rough domain.*

THOMSON'S AUTUMN, L. 5.

3. Unheeded; thoughtless; unconsidered.

The freedom of saying as many careless things as other people, without being so severely remarked upon. POPE.

4. Unmoved by; unconcerned at.

My only omens from your looks I take.

GRANVILLE.

CA'ROL. n.s. [carola, Ital. from choreola, Lat.]

1. A song of joy and exultation.

*And let the Graces dance unto the rest,
For they can do it best:
The whiles the maidens do their carol sing,
To which the woods shall answer, and their echo ring.*

SPENSER'S EPITHALAMIUM.

Even in the old testament, if you listen to David's harp, you shall hear as many herse-like airs as carols. BACON.

*Oppos'd to her, on t' other side advance
The costly feast, the carol, and the dance,
Minstrels and musick, poetry and play,
And balls by night, and tournaments by day.* DRYDEN'S FABLES.

2. A song of devotion.

No night is now with hymn or carol blest. SHAKESPEARE.

*They gladly thither haste; and, by a choir
Of squadron'd angels, hear his carol sung.*

PARADISE LOST, B. XII.

3. A song in general.

*The carol they began that hour,
How that a life was but a flower,
In the spring time.*

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

CA'RPENTER. n.s. [charpentier, Fr.] An artificer in wood; a builder of houses and ships. He is distinguished from a joiner, as the carpenter performs larger and stronger work.

*This work performed with advisement good,
Godfrey his carpenters, and men of skill,
In all the camp, sent to an aged wood.*

FAIRFAX, B. III.

In building Hiero's great ship, there were three hundred carpenters employed for a year together. WILKINS'S DÆDALUS.

*In burden'd vessels, first with speedy care,
His plenteous stores do season'd timbers send,*

*Thither the brawny carpenters repair,
And, as the surgeons of maim'd ships, attend.* DRYDEN.

CA'RRY-TALE. n.s. [from carry and tale.] A talebearer.

Some carry-tale, some pleaseman, some slight zany,

1. To geld.

2. To take away the obscene parts of a writing.

CAT. n.s. [katz, Teuton. chat, Fr.] A domestick animal that catches mice, commonly reckoned by naturalists the lowest order of the leonine species.

'Twas you incens'd the rabble:

Cats, that can judge as fitly of his worth,

As I can of those mysteries, which heav'n Will not have earth to know.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

Thrice the brinded cat hath mew'd.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

A cat, as she beholds the light, draws the ball of her eye small and long, being covered over with a green skin, and dilates it at pleasure.

PEACHAM ON DRAWING.

[καταστροφή.]

1. The change or revolution, which produces the conclusion or final event of a dramattick piece.

Pat! — He comes like the catastrophe of the old comedy.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

That philosopher declares for tragedies, whose catastrophes are unhappy, with relation to the principal characters.

DENNIS.

2. A final event; a conclusion generally unhappy.

Here was a mighty revolution, the most horrible and portentuous catastrophe that nature ever yet saw; an elegant and habitable earth quite shattered.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

CA'TCAL. n.s. [from cat and call.] A squeaking instrument, used in the play-house to condemn plays.

A young lady, at the theatre, conceived a passion for a notorious rake that headed a party of catcals. SPECTATOR, NO 602.

CA'TER. n.s. [quatre, Fr.] The four of cards and dice.

CA'TER-COUSIN. n.s. A corruption of quatre-cousin, from the ridiculousness of calling cousin or relation to so remote a degree.

His master and he, saving your worship's reverence, are scarce cater-cousins.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Poetry and reason, how come these to be cater-cousins?

RYMER'S TRAGEDIES OF THE LAST AGE.

CATERPI'LLAR. n.s. [This word Skinner and Minshew are inclined to derive from chatte peluse, a weasel; it seems easily deducible from cates, food, and piller, Fr. to rob; the animal that eats up the fruits of the earth.] A worm which, when it gets wings, is sustained by leaves and fruits.

The caterpillar breedeth of dew and leaves; for we see infinite caterpillars breed upon trees and hedges, by which the leaves of the trees or hedges are consumed. BACON.

Auster is drawn with a pot pouring forth water, with which descend grasshoppers, caterpillars, and creatures bred by moisture. PEACHAM ON DRAWING.

CATHE'TER. n.s. [καθετήρ.] A hollow and somewhat crooked instrument, to thrust into the bladder, to assist in bringing away the urine, when the passage is stopped by a stone or gravel.

A large clyster, suddenly injected, hath frequently forced the urine out of the bladder; but if it fail, a catheter must help you. WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

CA'TPIPE. n.s. [from cat and pipe.] The same with catcal; an instrument that makes a squeaking noise.

Some songsters can no more sing in any chamber but their own, than some clerks can read in any book but their own; put them out of their road once, and they are mere catpipes and dunces.

L'ESTRANGE.

CA'UDLE. n.s. [chaudeau, Fr.] A mixture of wine and other ingredients, given to women in childbed, and sick persons.

Ye shall have a hempen caudle then, and the help of a hatchet.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI. P. II.

He had good broths; caudle, and such like; and I believe he did drink some wine.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

CAVALI'ER. n.s. [cavalier, Fr.]

1. A horseman; a knight.

2. A gay sprightly military man.

For who is he, whose chin is but enrich'd With one appearing hair, that will not follow These cull'd and choice drawn cavaliers to France? SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

3. The appellation of the party of king Charles the first.

Each party grows proud of that appellation, which their adversaries at first intend as a reproach: of this sort were the Guelfs and Gibelines, Huguenots, and Cavaliers.

SWIFT.

CAVALI'ER. adj. [from the subst.]

1. Gay; sprightly; warlike.

2. Generous; brave.

The people are naturally not valiant, and not much cavalier. Now it is the nature of cowards to hurt, where they can receive none. SUCKLING.

3. Disdainful; haughty.

CAVILLA'TION. n.s. [from cavil.] The disposition to make captious objection; the practice of objecting.

I might add so much concerning the large odds between the case of the eldest churches, in regard of heathens, and ours, in respect of the church of Rome, that very cavillation itself should be satisfied.

HOOKER, B. IV. §7.

CA'VILLER. n.s. [cavillator, Lat.] A man fond of making objections; an unfair adversary; a captious disputant.

The candour which Horace shews, is that which distinguishes a critick from a caviller; he declares, that he is not offended at those little faults, which may be imputed to inadvertency.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN, NO 110.

There is, I grant, room still left for a caviller to misrepresent my meaning.

ATTERBURY'S PREFACE TO HIS SERMONS.

CA'USEY, CAUSEWAY. n.s. [chaussee, Fr. This word, by a false notion of its etymology, has been lately written causeway.] A way raised and paved; a way raised above the rest of the ground.

To Shuppim the lot came forth westward by the causey.

BIBLE 1 CHRONICLES, XXVI. 16.

*Th' other way Satan went down,
The causeway to hell-gate.*

PARADISE LOST, B. X. L. 415.

But that broad causeway will direct your way,

And you may reach the town by noon of day. DRYDEN.

Whose causeway parts the vale with shady rows;

Whose seats the weary traveller repose.

POPE.

To make her certain of the sad event.*

DRYDEN..<sup>53</sup>

CERULI'FICK. adj. [from ceruleous.] Having the power to produce a blue colour.

The several species of rays, as the rubifick, cerulifick, and others are separated one from another.

GREW'S COSMOLOGIA SACRA.

CESS. n.s. [probably corrupted from cense; See CENSE; though imagined by Junius to be derived from saisire, to seize.]

1. A levy made upon the inhabitants of a place, rated according to their property.

The like cess is also charged upon the country sometimes for victualling the soldiers, when they lie in garrison.

SPENSER.

2. The act of laying rates.

3. [from cesse, Fr.] It seems to have been used by Shakespeare for bounds, or limits.

I pr'ythee, Tom, beat Cutts's saddle, put a few flocks in the point; the poor jade is wrung in the withers out of all cess.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV. P. I.

CH has, in words purely English, or fully naturalized, the sound of tch; a peculiar pronunciation, which it is hard to describe in words. In some words derived from the French, it has the sound of sh, as chaise; and, in some derived from the Greek, the sound of k, as choleric.

CHAFE. n.s. [from the verb.] A heat; a rage; a fury; a passion; a fume; a pett; a fret; a storm.

When Sir Thomas More was speaker of the parliament, with his wisdom and eloquence, he so crossed a purpose of cardinal Wolsey's, that the cardinal, in a chafe, sent for him to Whitehall.

CAMDEN'S REMAINS.

*At this the knight grew high in chafe,
And staring furiously on Ralph,
He trembled.* HUDIBRAS, P. II. C. II.

To CHA'FFER. v.n. [kauffen, Germ. to buy.] To treat about a bargain; to haggle; to bargain.

*Nor rode himself to Paul's, the publick fair,
To chaffer for preferments with his gold,
Where bishopricks and sinecures are sold.*

DRYDEN'S FABLES.

The chaffering with dissenters, and dodging about this or t'other ceremony, is but like opening a few wickets, and leaving them a-jar. SWIFT.

In disputes with chairmen, when your master sends you to chaffer with them, take pity, and tell your master that they will not take a farthing less. SWIFT.

To CHA'FFER. v.a. [The active sense is obsolete.]

1. To buy.

*He chaffer'd chairs in which churchmen were set,
And breach of laws to privy farm did let.*
SPENSER.

ceous chalky matter, but not a cheesy substance.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

CHESS. n.s. [echec, Fr.] A nice and abstruse game, in which two sets of men are moved in opposition to each other.

*This game the Persian magi did invent,
The force of Eastern wisdom to express;
From thence to busy Europeans sent,
And styl'd by modern Lombards pensive chess.* DENHAM.

*So have I seen a king on chess,
(His rooks and knights withdrawn,
His queen and bishops in distress)
Shifting about, grow less and less,
With here and there a pawn.* DRYDEN.

CHICA'NE. n.s. [chicane, Fr. derived by Menage from the Spanish word chico, little.]

1. The art of protracting a contest by petty objection and artifice.

The general part of the civil law concerns not the chicane of private cases, but the affairs and intercourse of civilized nations, grounded upon the principles of reason.

LOCKE ON EDUCATION.

His attornies have hardly one trick left; they are at an end of all their chicane.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

2. Artifice in general. This sense is only in familiar language.

*Unwilling then in arms to meet,
He strove to lengthen the campaign,
And save his forces by chicane.* PRIOR.

The CHI'CKENPOX. n.s. An exanthematous distemper, so called from its being of no very great danger.

CHI'EFRIE. n.s. [from chief.] A small rent paid to the lord Paramount.

They shall be well able to live upon those lands, to yield her majesty reasonable chiefrie, and also give a competent maintenance unto the garrisons.

SPENSER'S IRELAND.

Would the reserved rent at this day be any more than a small chiefrie. SWIFT.

CHILBLA'IN. n.s. [from chill, cold, and blain; so that Temple seems mistaken in his etymology, or has written it wrong to serve a purpose.] Sores made by frost.

I remembered the cure of childblanes when I was a boy, (which may be called the children's gout) by burning at the fire.

TEMPLE.

CHI'LDERMAS DAY. [from child and mass.] The day of the week, throughout the year, answering to the day on which the feast of the holy Innocents is solemnized, which weak and superstitious persons think an unlucky day.

So you talk not of hares, or such uncouth things; for that proves as ominous to the fisherman, as the beginning of a voyage on the day when childermas day fell, doth to the mariner.

CAREW'S SURVEY OF CORNWALL.

CHIMNEY-CORNER. n.s. [from chimney and corner.] The fireside; the seat on each end of the firegrate; usually noted in proverbial language for being the place of idlers.

Yet some old men

Tell stories of you in their chimney-corner. DENHAM'S SOPHY.

CHI'NCOUGH. n.s. [perhaps more properly kincough, from kincken, to pant, Dut. and cough.] A violent and convulsive cough, to which children are subject.

I have observed a chincough, complicated with an intermitting fever.

FLOYER ON THE HUMOURS.

CHIRA'GRICAL. adj. [chiragra, Lat.] Having the gout in the hand; subject to the gout in the hand.

Chiragrical persons do suffer in the finger

as well as in the rest, and sometimes first of all.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. IV. C. 5.

CHIRO'GRAPHER. n.s. [χείρ, the hand, γράφω, to write.] He that exercises or professes the act or business of writing.

Thus passeth it from this office to the chirographer's, to be engrossed.

BACON'S OFFICE OF ALIENATION.

CHIRO'GRAPHIST. n.s. [See CHIROGRAPHER.] This word is used in the following passage, I think improperly, for one that tells fortunes, by examining the hand: the true word is chirosophist, or chiromancer.

Let the physiognomists examine his features; let the chirographists behold his palm; but, above all, let us consult for the calculation of his nativity.

ARBUTHNOT AND POPE'S MARTIN SCRIBLERUS.

CHIRO'MANCER. n.s. [See CHIROMANCY.] One that foretells future events by inspecting the hand.

*The middle sort, who have not much to spare,
To chiromancers' cheaper art repair,
Who clap the pretty palm, to make the lines more fair.*

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL, SATIRE VI.

CHI'ROMANCY. n.s. [χείρ, the hand, and μάντις, a prophet.] The art of foretelling the events of life, by inspecting the hand.

There is not much considerable in that doctrine of chiromancy that spots in the top of the nails, do signify things past; in the middle, things present; and at the bottom, events to come.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. V. C. 22.

CHIRU'RGEON. n.s. [χείρουργος, from χείρ, the hand, and ἔργον, work.]

One that cures ailments, not by internal medicines, but outward applications. It is now generally pronounced, and by many written, surgeon.

When a man's wounds cease to smart, only because he has lost his feeling, they are nevertheless mortal, for his not seeing his need of a chirurgion.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

CHI'TCHAT. n.s. [corrupted by reduplication from chat.] Prattle; idle prate; idle talk. A word only used in ludicrous conversation.

I am a member of a female society, who call ourselves the chitchat club.

SPECTATOR, NO. 560.

CHI'VALROUS. adj. [from chivalry.] Relating to chivalry, or errant knighthood; knightly; warlike; adventurous; daring. A word now out of use.

And noble minds of yore allied were In brave pursuit of chivalrous emprise.

FAIRY QUEEN, B. I.

CHO'COLATE-HOUSE. n.s. [chocolate and house.] A house where company is entertained with chocolate.

Ever since that time, Lisander has been twice a day at the chocolate-house.

TATLER, NO. 54.

CHOIR. n.s. [chorus, Latin.]

1. An assembly or band of singers.

*They now assist the choir
Of angels, who their songs admire.*

WALLER.

2. The singers in divine worship.

*The choir,
With all the choicest musick of the kingdom,
Together sung Te Deum.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

3. The part of the church where the choristers or singers are placed.

The lords and ladies, having brought the queen

*To a prepar'd place in the choir, fell off
At distance from her.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

CHOKE-PEAR. n.s. [from choke and pear.]

1. A rough, harsh, unpalatable pear.
2. Any aspersion or sarcasm, by which another is put to silence. A low term.

Pardon me for going so low as to talk of giving choke-pears. CLARISSA.

CHOP-HOUSE. n.s. [chop and house.] A mean house of entertainment, where provision ready dressed is sold.

I lost my place at the chop-house, where every man eats in publick a mess of broth, or chop of meat, in silence. SPECTATOR.

CHO'PIN. n.s. [French.]

1. A French liquid measure, containing nearly a pint of Winchester.
2. A term used in Scotland for a quart, of wine measure.

CHO'PPING. participial adj. [In this sense, of uncertain etymology.] An epithet frequently applied to infants, by way of ludicrous commendation: imagined by Skinner to signify lusty, from cas, Sax. by others to mean a child that would bring money at a market. Perhaps a greedy, hungry child, likely to live.

*Both Jack Freeman and Ned Wild,
Would own the fair and chopping child.*

FENTON.

CHORO'GRAPHER. n.s. [from χωρῆ, a region, and γράφω, to describe.] He that describes particular regions or countries.

CHORO'GRAPHY. n.s. [See CHOROGRAPHER.] The art or practice of describing particular regions, or laying down the limits and boundaries of particular provinces. It is less in its object than geography, and greater than topography.

CHRISM. n.s. [χρίσμα, an ointment.] Unguent; or unction: it is only applied to sacred ceremonies.

One act never to be repeated, is not the thing that Christ's eternal priesthood, denoted especially by his unction or chrisom, refers to.

HAMMOND'S PRACTICAL CATECHISM.

CHRI'SOM. n.s. [See CHRISM.] A child that dies within a month after its birth. So called from the chrisom-cloath, a cloath anointed with holy unguent, which the children anciently wore till they were christened.

When the convulsions were but few, the number of chrisoms and infants was greater.

GRAUNT'S BILLS OF MORTALITY.

A CHRISTMAS-BOX. n.s. [from christmas and box.] A box in which little presents are collected at Christmas.

When time comes round, a Christmas-box they bear,

And one day makes them rich for all the year. GAY'S TRIVIA.

CHUCK-FARTHING. n.s. [chuck and farthing.] A play, at which the money falls with a chuck into the hole beneath.

He lost his money at chuck-farthing, shuffle-cap, and all-fours.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

CHUM. n.s. [chom, Armorick, to live together.] A chamber fellow; a term used in the universities.

CHURCH-ALE. n.s. [from church and ale.] A wake, or feast, commemorative of the dedication of the church.

For the church-ale, two young men of the parish are yearly chosen to be wardens, who make collection among the parishioners of what provision it pleaseth them to bestow.

CAREW.

CHYLE. n.s. [χύλος.] The white juice formed in the stomach by digestion of the aliment, and afterwards changed into blood.

This powerful ferment, mingling with the parts,

The leaven'd mass to milky chyle converts.

BLACKMORE'S CREATION.

The chyle itself cannot pass through the smallest vessels.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

CHY'MIST. n.s. [See CHYMI-STRY.] A professor of chymistry; a philosopher by fire.

The starving chymist, in his golden views Supremely blest.

POPE'S ESSAY ON MAN, EPISTLE II.

CHY'MISTRY. n.s. [derived by some from χῦμος, juice, or χύω, to melt; by others from an oriental word, kema, black. According to the etymology, it is written with y or e.] An art whereby sensible bodies contained in vessels, or capable of being contained therein, are so changed, by means of certain instruments, and principally fire, that their several powers and virtues are thereby discovered, with a view to philosophy, or medicine. Boerhaave.

Operations of chymistry fall short of vital force: no chymist can make milk or blood of grass.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

CI'METER. n.s. [cimitarra, Span. and Portug. from chimeteir, Turkish.

Bluteau's Portuguese Dictionaries.] A sort of sword used by the Turks; short; heavy; and recurvated, or bent backward. This word is sometimes erroneously spelt scimitar, and scymeter; as in the following examples.

*By this scimitar,
That slew the sophy and a Persian
prince,
That won three fields of sultan Solyman.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF
VENICE.

*Our armours now may rust, our idle scymiters
Hang by our sides for ornament, not use.*
DRYDEN'S DON SEBASTIAN.

CINDER-WENCH, CINDER-WOMAN. n.s. [cinder and woman.] A woman whose trade is to rake in heaps of ashes for cinders.

*'Tis under so much nasty rubbish laid,
To find it out's the cinder-woman's trade.*
ESSAY ON SATIRE.

She had above five hundred suits of fine cloaths, and yet went abroad like a cinder-wench.
ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

*In the black form of cinder-wench she came,
When love, the hour, the place had banish'd shame.* GAY.

CIRCUMFORA'NEOUS. adj. [circumforaneus, Lat.] Wandering from house to house. As a circumforaneous fidler; one that plays at doors.

CIRCUMGYRA'TION. n.s. [from circumgyrate.] The act of running round.

The sun turns round his own axis in twenty-five days, which arises from his first being put into such a circumgyration.
CHEYNE'S PHILOSOPHICAL PRINCIPLES.

CIRCUMLOCU'TION. n.s. [circumlocutio, Latin.]

1. A circuit or compass of words; periphrasis.

Virgil, studying brevity, could bring these words into a narrow compass, which a translator cannot render without circumlocutions. DRYDEN.

I much prefer the plain Billingsgate way of calling names, because it would save abundance of time, lost by circumlocution.
SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

2. The use of indirect expressions.

These people are not to be dealt withal, but by a train of mystery and circumlocution.
L'ESTRANGE.

CIRCUMROTA'TION. n.s. [circum and roto, Lat.]

1. The act of whirling round with a motion like that of a wheel. Circumvolution.

2. The state of being whirled round.

CIRCUMSPE'CTION. n.s. [from circumspect.] Watchfulness on every side; cautious; general attention.

Observe the sudden growth of wickedness, from want of care and circumspection in the first impressions.
CLARENDON.

*So saying, his proud step he scornful turn'd,
But with sly circumspection.*
MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. IV.

To CIRCUMVE'ST. v.a. [circumvestio, Lat.] To cover round with a garment.

*Who on this base the earth did'st firmly found,
And mad'st the deep to circumvest it round.* WOTTON.

CI'RCUS, CIRQUE. n.s. [circus, Latin.] An open space or area for sports, with seats round for the spectators.

A pleasant valley, like one of those circuses, which, in great cities somewhere, doth give a pleasant spectacle of running horses.
SIDNEY, B. II.

The one was about the cirque of Flora, the other upon the Tarpeian mountain.

STILLINGFLEET.

See the cirque falls! th' unpillar'd temple nods;

Streets pav'd with heroes, Tyber choak'd with gods. POPE.

CIT. n.s. [contracted from citizen.] An inhabitant of a city, in an ill sense. A pert low townsman; a pragmatistical trader.

We bring you now to show what different things,

The cits or clowns are from the courts of kings. JONSON.

Study your race, or the soil of your family will dwindle into cits or squires, or run up into wits or madmen. TATLER.

Barnard, thou art a cit, with all thy worth;

But Bug and D—l, their honours, and so forth. POPE'S HORACE.

CI'TIZEN. n.s. [civis, Lat. citoyen, French.]

1. A freeman of a city; not a foreigner; not a slave.

All inhabitants within these walls are not properly citizens, but only such as are called freemen.

RALEIGH'S HISTORY OF THE WORLD.

2. A townsman; a man of trade; not a gentleman.

When he speaks not like a citizen, You find him like a soldier.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

3. An inhabitant; a dweller in any place.

Far from noisy Rome, secure, he lives; And one more citizen to Sibyl gives.

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

CI'TIZEN. adj. [This is only in Shakespeare.] Having the qualities of a citizen; as cowardice, meanness.

So sick I am not, yet I am not well; But not so citizen a wanton, as

To seem to die ere sick.

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

CIVI'LIAN. n.s. [civilis, Lat.] One that professes the knowledge of the old Roman law, and of general equity.

The professors of that law, called civilians, because the civil law is their guide, should not be discountenanced nor discouraged.

BACON'S ADVICE TO VILLIERS.

A depending kingdom is a term of art, unknown to all ancient civilians, and writers upon government. SWIFT.

CI'VILLY. adv. [from civil.]

1. In a manner relating to government, or to the rights or character of a member of a community; not naturally; not ecclesiastically; not criminally.<sup>54</sup>

Men that are civil lead their lives after one common law; for that a multitude should, without harmony amongst themselves, concur in the doing of one thing; for this is civilly to live; or should manage community of life, it is not possible.

HOOKER, B. I. P. 46.

That accusation, which is publick, is either civilly commenced for the private satisfaction of the party injured; or else criminally, that is, for some publick punishment.

AYLIFFE.

2. Politely; complaisantly; gently; without rudeness; without brutality.

I will deal civilly with his poems: nothing ill is to be spoken of the dead.

DRYDEN'S PREFACE TO HIS FABLES.

I would have had Almeria and Osmyn parted civilly; as if it was not proper for lovers to do so.

COLLIER'S VIEW OF THE STAGE.

He thought them folks that lost their way, And ask'd them civilly to stay. PRIOR.

3. Without gay or gaudy colours.

The chambers were handsome and cheerful, and furnished civilly.

BACON'S NEW ATLANTIS.

To CLA'TTER. v.a.

1. To strike any thing so as to make it sound and rattle.

*I only with an oaken staff will meet thee,
And raise such outcries on thy clatter'd iron,*

That thou oft' shalt wish thyself at Gath.

MILTON'S AGONISTES.

*When all the bees are gone to settle,
You clatter still your brazen kettle.*

SWIFT.

2. To dispute, jar, or clamour. Martin.

A low word.

A CLA'TTER. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. A rattling noise made by the frequent and quick collision of sonorous bodies.

A clatter is a clash often repeated with great quickness, and seems to convey the idea of a sound sharper and shriller than rattle. [See the verb.]

I have seen a monkey overthrow all the dishes and plates in a kitchen, merely for the pleasure of seeing them tumble, and hearing the clatter they made in their fall.

SWIFT TO LORD BOLINGBROKE.

2. It is used for any tumultuous and confused noise.

By this great clatter, one of greatest note Seems bruited.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*Grow to be short,
Throw by your clatter,
And handle the matter.*

BEN JONSON'S UNDER-WOODS.

*O Rourk's jolly boys
Ne'er dreamt of the matter,
'Till rous'd by the noise,
And musical clatter.* SWIFT.

*The jumbling particles of matter,
In chaos make not such a clatter.*

SWIFT.

A CLE'ANSER. n.s. [clænsere, Sax.]

That which has the quality of evacuating any foul humours; or digesting a sore; a detergent.

If there happens an imposthume, honey, and even honey of roses, taken inwardly, is a good cleanser.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

CLEAR. adj. [clair, Fr. klaer, Dut. clarus, Latin.]

1. Bright; transpicious; pellucid; transparent; luminous; without opacity or cloudiness; not nebulous; not opacous; not dark.

*The stream is so transparent, pure and
clear,*

*That had the self-enamour'd youth gaz'd
here,*

He but the bottom, not his face had seen.

DENHAM.

*A tun about was ev'ry pillar there;
A polish'd mirrour shone not half so clear.*

DRYDEN'S FABLES.<sup>55</sup>

2. Free from clouds; serene; as a clear day.

3. Without mixture; pure; unmingled.

4. Perspicuous; not obscure; not hard to be understood; not ambiguous.

We pretend to give a clear account how thunder and lightning is produced.

TEMPLE.

Many men reason exceeding clear and rightly, who know not how to make a syllogism. LOCKE.

5. Indisputable; evident; undeniable.

Remain'd to our almighty foe

*Clear victory; to our part loss, and rout
Through all the empyrean.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. II.

6. Apparent; manifest; not hid; not dark.

Unto God, who understandeth all their secret cogitations, they are clear and manifest. HOOKER, B. III. SECT. 1.

greater, by how much the consequences are more clear, and the chains of them more long.*

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

7. Unspotted; guiltless; irreproachable.

Duncan has been so clear in his great office. SHAKESPEARE.

Think that the clearest gods, who make them honours

Of mens impossibilities, have preserv'd thee. SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

Tho' the peripatetick philosophy has been most eminent in this way, yet other sects have not been wholly clear of it. LOCKE.

Statesman, yet friend to truth, in soul sincere,

In action faithful, and in honour clear.

POPE.

8. Unprepossessed; not preoccupied; impartial.

Leucippe, of whom one look, in a clear judgment, would have been more acceptable than all her kindness, so prodigally bestowed. SIDNEY, B. II.

9. Free from distress, prosecution, or imputed guilt.

The cruel corp'ral whisper'd in my ear, Five pounds, if rightly tipt, would set me clear. GAY.

10. Free from deductions or incumbrances.

Hope, if the success happens to fail, is clear gains, as long as it lasts.

COLLIER AGAINST DESPAIR.

Whatever a foreigner, who purchases land here, gives for it, is so much every farthing clear gain to the nation; for that money comes clear in, without carrying out any thing for it. LOCKE.

I often wish'd that I had clear, For life, six hundred pounds a year.

SWIFT.

11. Unincumbered; without let or hindrance; vacant; unobstructed.

Will be admitted.*

BEN JONSON'S CATILINE.

CLI'MATE. n.s. [κλίμα.]

1. A space upon the surface of the earth, measured from the equator to the polar circles; in each of which spaces the longest day is half an hour longer than in that nearer to the equator. From the polar circles to the poles climates are measured by the increase of a month.

2. In the common and popular sense, a region, or tract of land, differing from another by the temperature of the air.

Between th' extremes, two happier climates hold

The temper that partakes of hot and cold.
DRYDEN'S OVID.

On what new happy climate are we thrown? DRYDEN.

This talent of moving the passions cannot be of any great use in the northern climates. SWIFT.

CLINCH. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. A word used in a double meaning; a pun; an ambiguity; a duplicity of meaning, with an identity of expression.<sup>56</sup>

Such as they are, I hope they will prove, without a clinch, luciferous searching after the nature of light. BOYLE.

*Pure clinches the suburban muse affords,
And Panton waging harmless war with words.* DRYDEN.

Here one poor word a hundred clinches makes. POPE.

2. That part of the cable which is fastened to the ring of the anchor.

CLI'NICAL, CLINICK. adj.

[κλίνω, to lie down.] Those that keep their beds; those that are sick, past hopes of recovery. A clinical convert, one that is converted on his death-bed.
This word occurs often in the works of Taylor.

CLOCK. n.s. [clocc, Welsh, from clôch, a bell, Welsh and Armorick;
cloche, French.]

1. The instrument which, by a series of mechanical movements, tells the hour
by a stroke upon a bell.

If a man be in sickness or pain, the time will seem longer without a clock or hourglass than with it. BACON.

The picture of Jerome usually described at his study, is with a clock hanging by.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. V. C. 17.

I told the clocks, and watch'd the wasting light. DRYDEN.

2. It is an usual expression to say, What is it of the clock, for What hour is it? Or ten o'clock, for the tenth hour.

What is't o'clock? —

— Upon the stroke of four.

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

Macicaus set forward about ten o'clock in the night, towards Andrussa.

COACH-BOX. n.s. [coach and box.] The seat on which the driver of the coach sits.

Her father had two coachmen: when one was in the coach-box, if the coach swung but the least to one side, she used to shriek.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

CO'ALERY. n.s. [from coal.] A place where coals are dug.

Two fine stalactitæ were found hanging from a black stone, at a deserted vault in Benwell coalery.

WOODWARD ON FOSSILS.

To COAX. v.a. To wheedle; to flatter; to humour. A low word.

The nurse had changed her note; for she was then muzzling and coaxing the child; that's a good dear, says she. L'ESTRANGE.

I coax! I wheedle! I'm above it.

FARQUHAR'S RECRUITING OFFICER.

CO'CKFIGHT. n.s. [cock and fight.] A battle or match of cocks.

In cockfights, to make one cock more hardy, and the other more cowardly.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 990.

At the seasons of football and cockfighting, these little republicks reassume their national hatred to each other. ADDISON.

CO'CKHORSE. adj. [cock and horse.] On horseback; triumphant; exulting.

Alma, they strenuously maintain, Sits cockhorse on her throne the brain.

PRIOR.

CO'FFEEHOUSE. n.s. [coffee and house.] A house of entertainment where coffee is sold, and the guests are supplied with news papers.

At ten, from coffeehouse or play, Returning, finishes the day. PRIOR.

It is a point they do not concern themselves about, farther than perhaps as a subject in a coffeehouse. SWIFT.

CO'FFEEMAN. n.s. [coffee and man.] One that keeps a coffeehouse.

Consider your enemies the Lacedemonians; did ever you hear that they preferred a coffeeman to Agesilaus? ADDISON.

To COG. v.a. [A word of uncertain original, derived by Skinner from coqueliner, French.]

1. To flatter; to wheedle; to sooth by adulatory speeches.

I'll mountebank their loves, Cog their hearts from them, and come home below'd

Of all the trades in Rome.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

2. To obtrude by falsehood.

The outcry is, that I abuse his demonstration by a falsification, by cogging in the word. TILLOTSON, PREFACE.

I have cogged in the word to serve my turn. STILLINGFLEET.

Fustian tragedies, or insipid comedies, have, by concerted applauses, been cogged upon the town for masterpieces. DENNIS.

3. To COG a die. To secure it, so as to direct its fall; to falsify.

*But then my study was to cog the dice,
And dext'rously to throw the lucky sice.*

DRYDEN'S PERSIUS SATIRES.

*For guineas in other men's breeches,
Your gamesters will palm and will cog.* SWIFT.

Ye gallants of Newgate, whose fingers are nice

In diving in pockets, or cogging of dice.

SWIFT.

To COG. v.n. To lye; to wheedle.

Mrs. Ford, I cannot cog; I cannot prate, Mrs. Ford: now shall I sin in my wish.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

COG. n.s. The tooth of a wheel, by which it acts upon another wheel.

To COG. v.a. [from the noun.] To fix cogs in a wheel.

To CO'HOBATE. v.a. To pour the distilled liquor upon the remaining matter, and distill it again.

The juices of an animal body are, as it were, cohobated, being excreted and admitted again into the blood with the fresh aliment.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

COKE. n.s. [Perhaps from coquo, Skinner.] Fewel made by burning pit-coal under earth, and quenching the cinders; as charcoal is made with wood. It is frequently used in drying malt.

CO'LANDER. n.s. [colo, to strain, Lat.] A sieve either of hair, twigs or metal, through which a mixture to be separated is poured, and which retains the thicker parts.<sup>57</sup>

Take a thick woven osiar colander, Through which the pressed wines are strained clear. MAY.

All the viscera of the body are but as so many colanders to separate several juices from the blood.

RAY ON THE CREATION.

The brains from nose and mouth, and either ear,

*Came issuing forth, as through a colander
The curdled milk.* DRYDEN.

COLD. n.s. [from the adjective.]

1. The cause of the sensation of cold; the privation of heat; the figurifick power.

Fair lined slippers for the cold.

SHAKESPEARE.

Heat and cold are nature's two hands, whereby she chiefly worketh: and heat we have in readiness, in respect of the fire; but for cold we must stay 'till it cometh, or seek it in deep caves, or high mountains; and when all is done, we cannot obtain it in any great degree.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 69.

2. The sensation of cold; coldness; chilness.

*When she saw her lord prepar'd to part,
A deadly cold ran shiv'ring to her heart.*

DRYDEN'S FABLES.

3. A disease caused by cold; the obstruction of perspiration.

What disease hast thou? — A whorson cold, sir; a cough.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV. P. 2.

*Let no ungentle cold destroy
All taste we have of heav'nly joy.*

ROSCOMMON.

Those rains, so covering the earth, might providentially contribute to the disruption of it, by stopping all the pores, and all evaporation, which would make the vapours within struggle violently, as we get a fever by a cold. BURNET.

To COLLA'PSE. v.n. [collabor, collapsus, Latin.] To fall together; to close so as that one side touches the other.

In consumptions and atrophy the liquids are exhausted, and the sides of the canals collapse; therefore the attrition is increased, and consequently the heat.

ARBUTHNOT ON DIET.

COLLA'PSION. n.s. [from collapse.]

1. The state of vessels closed.
2. The act of closing or collapsing.

CO'LLEAGUE. n.s. [collega, Lat.] A partner in office or employment.

Anciently accented on the last syllable.

Easy it might be seen that I intend Mercy colleague with justice, sending thee. MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

*The regents, upon demise of the crown,
would keep the peace without colleagues.*

SWIFT.

COLLE'CTIBLE. adj. [from collect.] That which may be gathered from the premises by just consequence.

Whether thereby be meant Euphrates, is not collectible from the following words.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. VI. C. 8.

COLLE'CTIVELY. adv. [from collective.] In a general mass; in a body; not singly; not numbered by individuals; in the aggregate; accumulatively; taken together; in a state of combination or union.

Although we cannot be free from all sin collectively, in such sort that no part thereof shall be found inherent in us, yet distributively all great actual offences, as they offer themselves one by one, both may and ought to be by all means avoided.

HOOKER, B. V. SECT. 48.

Singly and apart many of them are subject to exception, yet collectively they make up a good moral evidence. HALE.

The other part of the water was condensed at the surface of the earth, and sent forth collectively into standing springs and rivers.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

CO'LON. n.s. [κόλον.]

1. A point [:] used to mark a pause greater than that of a comma, and less than that of a period. Its use is not very exactly fixed, nor is it very necessary, being confounded by most with the semicolon. It was used before punctuation was refined, to mark almost any sense less than a period. To apply it properly, we should place it, perhaps, only where the sense is continued without dependence of grammar or construction; as, I love him, I despise him: I have long ceased to trust, but shall never forbear to succour him.

2. The greatest and widest of all the intestines, about eight or nine hands breadth long. It begins where the ilium ends, in the cavity of the os ilium on the right side; from thence ascending by the kidney, on the same side, it passes under the concave side of the liver, to which it is sometimes tied, as likewise to the gall-bladder, which tinges it yellow in that place: then it runs under the bottom of the stomach to the spleen in the left side, to which it is also knit: from thence it turns down to the left kidney; and thence passing, in form of an S, it terminates at the upper part of the os sacrum, in the rectum. Quincy.

*Now, by your cruelty hard bound,
I strain my guts, my colon wound.*

SWIFT.

The contents of the colon are of a sower, fetid, acid smell in rabbits.

FLOYER ON THE HUMOURS.

CO' LONEL. n.s. [Of uncertain etymology. Skinner imagines it originally colonialis, the leader of a colony. Minsheu deduces it from colonna, a pillar; as patricæ columen; exercitus columen. Each is plausible.] The chief commander of a regiment; a field officer of the highest rank, next to the general officers. It is now generally sounded with only two distinct syllables, col'nel.

The chiefest help must be the care of the colonel, that hath the government of all his garrison. SPENSER ON IRELAND.

*Captain or colonel, or knight in arms,
Whose chance on these defenceless doors
may seize,
If deed of honour did thee ever please,
Guard them, and him within protect from harms.* MILTON.

CO' LUMN. n.s. [columna, Latin.]

1. A round pillar.

Some of the old Greek columns, and altars were brought from the ruins of Apollo's temple at Delos. PEACHAM.

Round broken columns clasping ivy twin'd. POPE.

2. Any body of certain dimensions pressing vertically upon its base.

The whole weight of any column of the atmosphere, and likewise the specifick gravity of its bases, are certainly known by many experiments.

BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

3. [In the military art.] The long file or row of troops, or of baggage, of an army in its march. An army marches in one, two, three, or more columns, according as the ground will allow.

4. [With printers.] A column is half a page, when divided into two equal parts by a line passing through the middle, from the top to the bottom; and, by several parallel lines, pages are often divided into three or more columns.

COMB. n.s. [camb, Saxon; kam, Dutch.]

1. An instrument to separate and adjust the hair.

*By fair Ligea's golden comb,
Wherewith she sits on diamond rocks,
Sleeking her soft alluring locks.*

MILTON.

I made an instrument in fashion of a comb, whose teeth, being in number sixteen, were about an inch and a half broad, and the intervals of the teeth about two inches wide. NEWTON.

2. The top or crest of a cock, so called from its pectinated indentures.

Cocks have great combs and spurs, hens little or none. BACON.

*High was his comb, and coral-red withal,
With dents embattl'd, like a castle-wall.*

DRYDEN.

3. The cantons in which the bees lodge their honey. Perhaps from the same word which makes the termination of towns, and signifies hollow or deep.

*This in affairs of state,
Employ'd at home, abides within the gate,
To fortify the combs, to build the wall,
To prop the ruins, lest the fabrick fall.*
DRYDEN'S VIRGIL'S GEORGICKS.

COMBINA'TION. n.s. [from combine.]

1. Union for some certain purpose; association; league. A combination is of private persons, a confederacy of states or sovereigns.

*This cunning cardinal
The articles o' th' combination drew,
As himself pleas'd.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

2. It is now generally used in an ill sense; but was formerly indifferent.

They aim to subdue all to their own will and power, under the disguises of holy combinations. KING CHARLES.

3. Union of bodies, or qualities; commixture; conjunction.

These natures, from the moment of their first combination, have been and are for ever inseparable. HOOKER, B. V. S. 52.

Resolution of compound bodies by fire, does not so much enrich mankind as it divides the bodies; as upon the score of its making new compounds by new combinations.

BOYLE.

Ingratitude is always in combination with pride and hard-heartedness.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

4. Copulation of ideas in the mind.

They never suffer any ideas to be joined in their understandings, in any other or stronger combination than what their own nature and correspondence give them.

LOCKE.

5. COMBINATION is used in mathemat-ticks, to denote the variation or alteration of any number of quantities, letters, sounds, or the like, in all the different manners possible. Thus the number of possible changes or combinations of the twenty-four letters of the alphabet, taken first two by two, then three by three, &c. amount to 1,391,724, 288,887,252,999,425,128,493,402,200.

CHAMBERS.

COME'DIAN. n.s. [from comedy.]

1. A player or actor of comick parts.
2. A player in general; a stage-player;
an actress or actor.

Melissarion, pretty honey-bee, when of a comedian she became a wealthy man's wife, would be saluted madam Pithias, or Prudence. CAMDEN'S REMAINS.

*Comedians on the stage shew all their skill,
And after do as love and fortune will.*<sup>58</sup>

3. A writer of comedies.

Scaliger willeth us to admire Plautus as a comedian, but Terence as a pure and elegant speaker.

PEACHAM OF POETRY.

CO'MEDY. n.s. [comedia, Lat.] A dramatick representation of the lighter faults of mankind.<sup>59</sup>

*Your honour's players
Are come to play a pleasant comedy.*
SHAKESPEARE'S TAMING OF THE SHREW.

*A long, exact, and serious comedy,
In every scene some moral let it teach,
And, if it can, at once both please and preach.* POPE.

CO'MELY. adj. [from become; or from cweman, Sax. to please.]

1. Graceful; decent; having dignity or grandeur of mien or look. Comeliness seems to be that species of beauty which excites reverence rather than pleasure.

If the principal part of beauty is in decent motion, no marvel though persons in years seem many times more amiable; for no youth can be comely but by pardon, and considering the youth as to make up the comeliness. BACON, ESSAY 44.

He that is comely when old and decrepit, surely was very beautiful when he was young. SOUTH.

Thou art a comely, young, and valiant knight. DRYDEN.

2. Used of things, decent; according to propriety:

Oh, what a world is this, when what is comely

Envenoms him that bears it!

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

This is a happier and more comely time, Than when these fellows ran about the streets,

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

CO'MICK. adj. [comicus, Lat. comique, French.]

1. Relating to comedy.

*When I venture at the comick stile,
Thy scornful lady seems to mock my toil.*

WALLER.

*A comick subject loves an humble verse,
Thyestes scorns a low and comick stile;*

Yet comedy sometimes may raise her voice. ROSCOMMON.

Thy tragick muse gives smiles, thy comick sleep. DRYDEN.

2. Raising mirth.

*Stately triumphs, mirthful comick shows,
Such as befit the pleasure.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI. P. III.

COMING-IN. n.s. Revenue; income.

Here's a small trifle of wives, eleven widows and nine maids is a simple coming-in for one man. SHAKESPEARE.

What are thy rents? what are thy comings-in?

O ceremony, shew me but thy worth:

What is thy toll, O adoration?

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

CO'MMA. n.s. [κόμμα.]

1. The point which notes the distinction of clauses, and order of construction in the sentence, marked thus [,].

Comma's and points they set exactly right. POPE.

2. The ninth part of a tone, or the interval whereby a semitone or a perfect tone exceeds the imperfect tone. It is a term used only in theoretical musick, to shew the exact proportions between concords. Harris.

COMMA'NDRESS. n.s. [from commander.] A woman vested with supreme authority.

To prescribe the order of doing in all things is a peculiar prerogative, which wisdom hath, as queen or sovereign commandress, over all other virtues.

HOOKER, B. V. SECT. 8.

Be you commandress therefore, princess, queen

Of all our forces, be thy word a law.

FAIRFAX, B. II.

COMMENSURABI'LITY. n.s. [from commensurable.] Capacity of being compared with another, as to the measure; or of being measured by another. Thus an inch and a yard are commensurable, a yard containing a certain number of inches. The diameter and circumference of a circle are incommensurable, not being reduceable to any common measure. Proportion.

Some place the essence thereof in the proportion of parts, conceiving it to consist in a comely commensurability of the whole unto the parts, and the parts between themselves. BROWN.

To CO'MMIGRATE. v.n. [con and migro, Latin.] To remove in a body, or by consent, from one country to another.

CO'MMON. n.s. [communis, Latin.]

1. Belonging equally to more than one.

Though life and sense be common to man and brutes, and their operations in many things alike; yet by this form he lives the life of a man, and not of a brute, and hath the sense of a man, and not of a brute.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

He who hath received damage, has, besides the right of punishment common to him with other men, a particular right to seek reparation. LOCKE.

2. Having no possessor or owner.

Where no kindred are to be found, we see the possession of a private man revert to the community, and so become again perfectly common, no body having a right to inherit them; nor can any one have a property in them, otherwise than in other things common by nature. LOCKE.

3. Vulgar; mean; not distinguished by any excellence; often seen; easy to be had; of little value; not rare; not scarce.

*Or as the man whom princes do advance,
Upon their gracious mercy-seat to sit,
Doth common things, of course and circumstance,*

To the reports of common men commit.

DAVIES.

4. Publick; general; serving the use of all.

He was advised by a parliament-man not to be strict in reading all the common prayer, but make some variation.

WALTON.

I need not mention the old common shore of Rome, which ran from all parts of the town, with the current and violence of an ordinary river. ADDISON ON ITALY.

5. Of no rank; mean; without birth or descent.

*Look, as I blow this feather from my face,
And as the air blows it to me again,
Such is the lightness of you common men.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

*Flying bullets now,
To execute his rage, appear too slow;
They miss, or sweep but common souls away,*

For such a loss Opdam his life must pay.

WALLER.

6. Frequent; usual; ordinary.

There is an evil which I have seen common among men.

BIBLE ECCLESIASTES, VI. 1.

The Papists were the most common place, and the butt against whom all the arrows were directed. CLARENDON.

Neither is it strange that there should be mysteries in divinity, as well as in the commonest operations in nature.

SWIFT.

7. Prostitute.

'Tis a strange thing, the impudence of some women! was the word of a dame, who herself was common. L'ESTRANGE.

Hipparchus was going to marry a common woman, but consulted Philander upon the occasion. SPECTATOR, NO. 475.

8. [In grammar.] Such verbs as signify both action and passion are called common; as aspornor, I despise, or am despised; and also such nouns as are both masculine and feminine, as parens.

COMMON LAW contains those customs and usages which have, by long prescription, obtained in this nation the force of laws. It is distinguished from the statute law, which owes its authority to acts of parliament.

CO'MMONAGE. n.s. [from common.] The right of feeding on a common; the joint right of using any thing in common with others.

COMMUNICA'TION. n.s. [from communicate.]

1. The act of imparting benefits or knowledge.

Both together serve completely for the reception and communication of learned knowledge.

HOLDER'S ELEMENTS OF SPEECH.

2. Common boundary or inlet; passage or means, by which from one place there is a way without interruption to another.

The map shews the natural communication providence has formed between the rivers and lakes of a country at so great a distance from the sea.

ADDISON ON ITALY.

The Euxine sea is conveniently situated for trade, by the communication it has both with Asia and Europe. ARBUTHNOT.

3. Interchange of knowledge; good intelligence between several persons.

Secrets may be carried so far, as to stop the communication necessary among all who have the management of affairs. SWIFT.

4. Conference; conversation.

Abner had communication with the elders of Israel, saying, ye fought for David in times past to be king over you: now then do it. BIBLE 2 SAMUEL, III. 17.

The chief end of language, in communication, being to be understood, words serve not for that end, when any word does not excite in the hearers the same idea which it stands for in the mind of the speaker.

LOCKE.

To COMMU'TE. v.a. [commuto, Latin.]

1. To exchange; to put one thing in the place of another; to give or receive one thing for another.

This will commute our tasks, exchange these pleasant and gainful ones, which God assigns, for those uneasy and fruitless ones we impose on ourselves.

DECAY OF PIETY.

2. To buy off, or ransom one obligation by another.

Some commute swearing for whoring; as if forbearance of the one were a dispensation for the other. L'ESTRANGE.

To COMMU'TE. v.n. To atone; to bargain for exemption.

Those institutions which God designed for means to further men in holiness, they look upon as a privilege to serve instead of it, and to commute for it.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

To COMPA'RE. v.a. [comparo, Latin.]

1. To make one thing the measure of another; to estimate the relative goodness or badness, or other qualities, of any one thing, by observing how it differs from something else.

I will hear Brutus speak. —

I will hear Cassius, and compare their reasons. SHAKESPEARE.

They measuring themselves by themselves, and comparing themselves among themselves, are not wise.

BIBLE 2 CORINTHIANS, X. 12.

No man can think it grievous, who considers the pleasure and sweetness of love, and the glorious victory of overcoming evil with good; and then compares these with the restless torment, and perpetual tumults, of a malicious and revengeful spirit.

TILLOTSON, SERMON VI.

He that has got the ideas of numbers, and hath taken the pains to compare one, two, and three to six, cannot chuse but know they are equal. LOCKE.

Thus much of the wrong judgment men make of present and future pleasure and pain, when they are compared together, and so the absent considered as future.

LOCKE.

2. It may be observed, that when the comparison intends only similitude or illustration by likeness, we use to before the thing brought for illustration; as, he compared anger to a fire.

Solon compared the people unto the sea, and orators and counsellors to the winds; for that the sea would be calm and quiet, if the winds did not trouble it.

BACON'S APOPTHEGMS.

3. When two persons or things are compared, to discover their relative proportion of any quality, with is used before the thing used as a measure.

Black Macbeth

Will seem as pure as snow, being compar'd

With my confineless harms.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

To compare

Small things with greatest.

MILTON'S PARADISE REGAIN'D, B. IV.

*He carv'd in iv'ry such a maid so fair,
As nature could not with his art compare.*

DRYDEN.

If he compares this translation with the original, he will find that the three first stanzas are rendered almost word for word.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 229.

4. To compare is, in Spenser, used after the Latin comparo, for to get; to procure; to obtain.

But, both from back and belly, still did spare

To fill his bags, and riches to compare.

FAIRY QUEEN, B. I.

COMPA'TIBLE. adj. [corrupted, by an unskilful compliance with pronunciation, from competible, from competo, Latin, to suit, to agree.

Competible is found in good writers, and ought always to be used.]

1. Suitable to; fit for; consistent with; not incongruous to.

The object of the will is such a good as is compatible to an intellectual nature.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

2. Consistent; agreeable.

*Our poets have joined together such qualities as are by nature the most compatible; valour with anger, meekness with piety,
and prudence with dissimulation.*

BROOME.

COMPE'NDIOUS. adj. [from compendium.] Short; summary;

abridged; direct; comprehensive; holding much in a narrow space; near; by which time is saved, and circuition cut off.

They had learned more compendious and expeditious ways, whereby they shortened their labours, and so gained time.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

COMPE'NDIUM. n.s. [Latin.] Abridgment; summary; breviate; abbreviature; that which holds much in a narrow room; the near way.

After we are grown well acquainted with a short system or compendium of a science, which is written in the plainest and most simple manner, it is then proper to read a larger regular treatise on that subject.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

COMPE'TIBLE. adj. [from competo, Latin. For this word a corrupt orthography has introduced compatible.] Suitable to; consistent with.

*It is not competible with the grace of God
so much as to incline any man to do evil.*

HAMMOND ON FUNDAMENTALS.

*Those are properties not at all competible to body or matter, though of never so pure
a mixture.* GLANVILLE.

CO'MPLIMENT. n.s. [compliment, Fr.] An act, or expression of civility, usually understood to include some hypocrisy, and to mean less than it declares.<sup>60</sup>

He observed few compliments in matter of arms, but such as proud anger did indite to him. SIDNEY, B. II.

My servant, sir? 'Twas never merry world Since lowly feigning was call'd

compliment:

Y' are servant to the duke Orsino, youth.

SHAKESPEARE.

*One whom the musick of his own vain
tongue*

Doth ravish, like inchanting harmony:

A man of compliments, whom right and wrong

Have chose as umpire of their meeting.

SHAKESPEARE.

What honour that,

But tedious waste of time, to sit and hear

So many hollow compliments and lies,

Outlandish flatteries?

MILTON'S PARADISE REGAIN'D, B. IV.

Virtue and religion, heaven and eternal happiness, are not trifles to be given up in a compliment, or sacrificed to a jest.

ROGERS, SERMON X.

COMPOTA'TION. n.s.

[compotatio, Lat.] The act of drinking or tipping together.

Secrecy to words spoke under the rose, only mean, in compotation, from the ancient custom in symposiack meetings, to wear chaplets of roses.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

If thou wilt prolong

Dire compotation, forthwith reason quits

Her empire to confusion and misrule,

And vain debates; then twenty tongues at once

Conspire in senseless jargon; naught is heard

But din and various clamour, and mad rant. PHILLIPS.

COMPRESSIBI'LITY. n.s. [from compressible.] The quality of being compressible; the quality of admitting to be brought by force into a narrower compass; as air may be compressed, but water can by no violence be reduced to less space than it naturally occupies.

To COMP'TRO'LL. v.a. [This word is written by some authors, who did not attend to the etymology, for controll; and some of its derivatives are written in the same manner.] To controll; to over-rule; to oppose.

COMPU'TER. n.s. [from compute.]

Reckoner; accountant; calculator.

The kalendars of these computers, and the accounts of these days, are different.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. VI. C. 4.

I have known some such ill computers, as to imagine the many millions in stocks so much real wealth. SWIFT.

CO'MPUTIST. n.s. [computiste, Fr.] Calculator; one skilled in the art of numbers or computation.

The treasurer was a wise man, and a strict computist. WOTTON.

We conceive we have a year in three hundred and sixty-five days exact: computists tell us, that we escape six hours.

BROWN.

CON. A Latin inseparable preposition, which, at the beginning of words, signifies union or association; as concourse, a running together; to convene, to come together.

CONCE'RNING. prep. [from concern: this word, originally a participle, has before a noun the force of a preposition.] Relating to; with relation to.

There is not any thing more subject to error than the true judgment concerning the power and forces of an estate.

BACON.

The ancients had no higher recourse than to nature, as may appear by a discourse concerning this point in Strabo.

BROWN.

None can demonstrate that there is such an island as Jamaica, yet, upon testimony, I am free from all doubt concerning it.

TILLOTSON, PREFACE.

To CONCOA'GULATE. v.a. [from con and coagulate.] To curdle or congeal one thing with another.

The saline parts of those, upon their solution by the rain, may work upon those other substances, formerly concoagulated with them. BOYLE'S EXPERIMENTS.

CONCO'CTION. n.s. [from concoct.] Digestion in the stomach; maturation by heat; the acceleration of any thing towards purity and perfection.

This hard rolling is between concoction and a simple maturation.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 324.

The constantest notion of concoction is, that it should signify the degrees of alteration of one body into another, from crudity to perfect concoction, which is the ultimity of that action or process.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 324.

He, though he knew not which soul spake, Because both meant, both spake the same, Might thence a new concoction take, And part far purer than he came.

DONNE.

CONCO'RDANCE. n.s. [concordantia, Latin.]

1. Agreement.

2. A book which shews in how many texts of scripture any word occurs.

I shall take it for an opportunity to tell you, how you are to rule the city out of a concordance.

SOUTH'S SERMONS, DEDICATION.

Some of you turn over a concordance, and there, having the principal word, introduce as much of the verse as will serve your turn. SWIFT.

An old concordance bound long since. SWIFT.

3. A concord in grammar; one of the three chief relations in speech. It is not now in use in this sense.

CO'NCREMENT. n.s. [from concreasco, Latin.] The mass formed by concretion; a collection of matter growing together.

There is the cohesion of the matter into a more loose consistency, like clay, and thereby it is prepared to the concrement of a pebble or flint.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

CONCRE'SCENCE. n.s. [from concreasco, Lat.] The act or quality of growing by the union of separate particles.

Seeing it is neither a substance perfect, nor inchoate, how any other substance should thence take concrecence hath not been taught.

RALEIGH'S HISTORY OF THE WORLD.

CONCU'SSION. n.s. [concussio, Lat.] The act of shaking; agitation; tremefaction.

It is believed that great ringing of bells in populous cities, hath dissipated pestilent air; which may be from the concussion of the air.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 127.

There want not instances of such an universal concussion of the whole globe, as must needs imply an agitation of the whole abyss.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY, P. III.<sup>61</sup>

The strong concussion on the heaving tide, Roll'd back the vessel to the island's side.

POPE'S ODYSSEY.

CONDI'GN. adj. [condignus, Latin.] Worthy of a person; suitable; deserved; merited: it is always used of something deserved by crimes.

*Unless it were a bloody murtherer,
I never gave them condign punishment.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

Consider who is your friend, he that would have brought him to condign punishment, or he that has saved him. ARBUTHNOT.

CO'NDIMENT. n.s. [condimentum, Latin.] Seasoning; sauce; that which excites the appetite by a pungent taste.

As for radish and the like, they are for condiments, and not for nourishment.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

Many things are swallowed by animals rather for condiment, gust, or medicament, than any substantial nutriment.

BROWN.

To CO'NDITE. v.a. [condio, Lat.] To pickle; to preserve by salts or aromatics.

Much after the same manner as the sugar doth, in the conditing of pears, quinces, and the like. GREW'S MUSÆUM.

The most innocent of them are but like condited or pickled mushrooms, which, carefully corrected, may be harmless, but can never do good.

TAYLOR'S RULE OF LIVING HOLY.

To CONDO'LE. v.n. [condoleo, Latin.] To lament with those that are in misfortune; to express concern for the miseries of others. It has with before the person for whose misfortune we profess grief.

*Your friends would have cause to rejoice,
rather than condole with you.* TEMPLE.

*I congratulate with the republick of beasts upon this honour done to their king; and must condole with us poor mortals, who,
by distance, are rendered incapable of paying our respects.*

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN, NO. 118.

To CONDO'LE. v.a. To bewail with another.

I come not, Sampson, to condole thy chance,

*As these perhaps, yet wish it had not been,
Though for no friendly intent.*

MILTON'S AGONISTES, L. 1076.

Why should our poet petition Isis for her safe delivery, and afterwards condole her miscarriage. DRYDEN.

CONDO'LENCE. n.s. [condolance, French.] The expression of grief for the sorrows of another; the civilities and messages of friends upon any loss or misfortune.

The reader will excuse this digression, due by way of condolence to my worthy brethren.

ARBUTHNOT'S PREFACE TO JOHN BULL.

To CONFA'BULATE. v.n. [confabulo, Lat.] To talk easily or carelessly together; to chat; to prattle.

CONFARREA'TION. n.s. [confarreatio, Lat. from far, corn.] The solemnization of marriage by eating bread together.

was by confarreation joined to the husband.* AYLIFFE'S PARERAGON.

To CONFE'R. v.n. [confero, Lat. conferer, French.] To discourse with another upon a stated subject; to ventilate any question by oral discussion; to converse solemnly; to talk gravely together; to compare sentiments.

You will hear us confer of this, and by an auricular assurance have your satisfaction.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

Reading makes a full man, conference a ready man, and writing an exact man; and therefore, if a man write little, he had need have a great memory; if he confer little, he had need have a present wit; and if he read little, he had need have much cunning, to seem to know that he doth not. BACON.

When they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, they conferred among themselves. BIBLE ACTS, IV. 15.

He was thought to confer with the lord Colepeper upon the subject; but had some particular thoughts, upon which he then conferred with nobody.

CLARENDON, B. VIII.

The Christian princess in her tent confers

With fifty of your learn'd philosophers; Whom with such eloquence she does persuade,

That they are captives to her reasons made. DRYDEN'S TYRANNICK LOVE.

CO'NFESSOR. n.s. [confesseur, French.]

1. One who makes profession of his faith in the face of danger. He who dies for religion is a martyr; he who suffers for it is a confessor.

The doctrine in the thirty-nine articles is so orthodoxly settled, as cannot be questioned without danger to our religion, which hath been sealed with the blood of so many martyrs and confessors.

BACON'S ADVICE TO VILLIERS.

Was not this an excellent confessor at least, if not a martyr in this cause?

STILLINGFLEET.

The patience and fortitude of a martyr or confessor lie concealed in the flourishing times of Christianity.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

It was the assurance of a resurrection that gave patience to the confessor, and courage to the martyr. ROGERS, SERMON VIII.

2. He that hears confessions, and prescribes rules and measures of penitence.

*See that Claudio
Be executed by nine to-morrow morning:
Bring him his confessor, let him be prepar'd;*

For that's the utmost of his pilgrimage. SHAKESPEARE.

If you find any sin that lies heavy upon you, disburthen yourself of it into the bosom of your confessor, who stands between God and you to pray for you. TAYLOR.

*One must be trusted; and he thought her fit,
As passing prudent, and a parlous wit:
To this sagacious confessor he went,
And told her.*

DRYDEN'S WIFE OF BATH.

3. He who confesses his crimes. Dictionaries.

CONFORMA'TION. n.s. [French; conformatio, Latin.]

1. The form of things as relating to each other; the particular texture, and consistence of the parts of a body, and their disposition to make a whole; as, light of different colours is reflected from bodies according to their different conformation.

Varieties are found in the different natural shapes of the mouth, and several conformations of the organs.

HOLDER'S ELEMENTS OF SPEECH.

Where there happens to be such a structure and conformation of the earth, as that the fire may pass freely unto these spiracles, it then readily gets out.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

2. The act of producing suitableness, or conformity to any thing.<sup>62</sup>

Virtue and vice, sin and holiness, and the conformation of our hearts and lives to the duties of true religion and morality, are things of more consequence than the furniture of understanding. WATTS.

CONFO'UNDED. participial adj. [from confound.] Hateful; detestable; enormous; odious: a low cant word.

A most confounded reason for his brutish conception. GREW.

*Sir, I have heard another story,
He was a most confounded Tory;
And grew, or he is much bely'd,
Extremely dull before he dy'd.* SWIFT.

To CONGLA'CIATE. v.n. [conglaciatus, Latin.] To turn to ice.

No other doth properly conglaciate but water; for the determination of quicksilver is properly fixation, and that of milk coagulation.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. II. C. 1.

To CO'NGLOBATE. v.a. [conglobatus, Latin.] To gather into a hard firm ball.

The testicle, as is said, is one large conglobated gland, consisting of soft fibres, all in one convolution.

GREW'S COSMOLOGIA SACRA.

To CONGLO'MERATE. v.a. [conglomerato, Lat.] To gather into a ball, like a ball of thread; to inweave into a round mass.

GREW'S COSMOLOGIA SACRA.

To CONGRA'TULATE. v.a. [gratulator, Latin.]

1. To compliment upon any happy event; to express joy for the good of another.

I congratulate our English tongue, that it has been enriched with words from all our neighbours. WATTS'S LOGICK.

2. It has sometimes the accusative case of the cause of joy, and to before the person.

An ecclesiastical union within yourselves, I am rather ready to congratulate to you.

SPRATT'S SERMONS.

The subjects of England may congratulate to themselves, that the nature of our government and the clemency of our king secure us.

DRYDEN'S PREFACE TO AURENGZEBE.

CONGRA'TULATE. v.n. To rejoice in participation.

I cannot but, with much pleasure, congratulate with my dear country, which hath outdone all Europe in advancing conversation.

SWIFT'S INTRODUCTION TO GENTEEL CONVERSATION.

To CONJO'BBLE. v.a. [from con, together, and jobberno, the head.] To concert; to settle; to discuss. A low cant word.

What would a body think of a minister that should conjobble matters of state with tumblers, and confer politicks with tinkers? L'ESTRANGE.

CO'NJURER. n.s. [from conjure.]

1. An enchanter; one that uses charms.

Good doctor Pinch, you are a conjurer; Establish him in his true sense again.

SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY OF ERROURS.

Figures in the book

Of some dread conjurer, that would enforce nature. DONNE.

Thus has he done you British consorts right,

Whose husbands, should they pry like mine to-night,

Would never find you in your conduct slipping,

Though they turn'd conjurers to take you tripping. ADDISON.

2. An impostor who pretends to secret arts; a cunning man.

From the account the loser brings,

The conj'rer knows who stole the things.

PRIOR.

3. By way of irony; a man of shrewd conjecture; a man of sagacity.

Though ants are very knowing, I don't take them to be conjurers; and therefore they could not guess that I had put some corn in that room.

ADDISON, GUARDIAN, NO. 156.

CONNOISSE'UR. n.s. [French.] A judge; a critick: it is often used of a pretended critick.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

CONSI'DERATE. adj.
[consideratus, Latin.]

1. Serious; given to consideration; prudent; not rash; not negligent.

*I will converse with iron-witted fools,
And unrespective boys: none are for me,
That look into me with consid'rate eyes.*

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

Æneas is patient, considerate, and careful of his people.

DRYDEN'S FABLES, PREFACE.

I grant it to be in many cases certain, that it is such as a considerate man may prudently rely and proceed upon, and hath no just cause to doubt of.

TILLOTSON, PREFACE.

*The expediency in the present juncture,
may appear to every considerate man.*

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER, NO. 16.

2. Having respect to; regardful.<sup>64</sup>

And empty heads console with empty sound.* POPE'S DUNCIAD.

CO'NSONANT. n.s. [consonans, Latin.] A letter which cannot be sounded, or but imperfectly, by itself.

In all vowels the passage of the mouth is open and free, without any appulse of an organ of speech to another: but in all consonants there is an appulse of the organs, sometimes (if you abstract the consonants from the vowels) wholly precluding all sound; and, in all of them, more or less checking and abetting it.

HOLDER'S ELEMENTS OF SPEECH.

He considered these as they had a greater mixture of vowels or consonants, and accordingly employed them as the verse required a greater smoothness.

POPE'S ESSAY ON HOMER.

CONSTERNA'TION. n.s. [from consterno, Latin.] Astonishment; amazement; alienation of mind by a surprise; surprise; wonder.

They find the same holy consternation upon themselves that Jacob did at Bethel, which he called the gate of heaven.

2. To stuff up, or stop by filling up the passages.

It is not probable that any aliment should have the quality of intirely constipating or shutting up the capillary vessels.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

3. To bind the belly; or make costive.

CONSU'MABLE. adj. [from consume.] Susceptible of destruction; possible to be wasted, spent, or destroyed.

It does truly agree in this common quality ascribed unto both, of being incombustible, and not consumable by fire; but yet there is this inconvenience, that it doth contract so much fuliginous matter from the earthy parts of the oil, though it was tried with some of the purest oil which is ordinary to be bought, that in a very few days it did choak and extinguish the flame.

WILKINS'S MATHEMATICAL MAGICK.

Our growing rich or poor depends only on, which is greater or less, our importation or exportation of consumable commodities.

LOCKE.

To CONSU'ME. v.a. [consumo, Latin.] To waste; to spend; to destroy.

Where two raging fires meet together, They do consume the thing that feeds their fury. SHAKESPEARE.

Thou shalt carry much seed out into the field, and shalt gather but little in; for the locusts shall consume it.

CONTABULA'TION. n.s. [contabulatio, Latin.] A joining of boards together; a boarding a floor.

CONTE'NT. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. Moderate happiness; such satisfaction as, though it does not fill up desire, appeases complaint.

Nought's had, all's spent, Where our desire is got without content. SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

One thought content the good to be enjoy'd;

This every little accident destroy'd.

DRYDEN.

A wise content his even soul secur'd;

*By want not shaken, nor by wealth
allur'd.* SMITH ON PHILIPS.

2. Acquiescence; satisfaction in a thing unexamined.

*Others for language all their care express,
And value books, as women men, for dress:
Their praise is still – the style is excellent;
The sense they humbly take upon content.*
POPE'S EPISTLES.

3. [From contentus, contained.] That which is contained, or included in any thing.

*Though my heart's content firm love doth
bear,
Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear.* SHAKESPEARE.

Scarcely any thing can be certainly determined of the particular contents of any single mass of ore by mere inspection.
WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY,
P. IV.

These experiments are made on the blood of healthy animals: in a lax and weak habit such a serum might afford other contents.
ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

4. The power of containing; extent; capacity.

This island had then fifteen hundred strong ships, of great content. BACON.
It were good to know the geometrical content, figure, and situation of all the lands of a kingdom, according to natural bounds.
GRAUNT'S BILLS OF MORTALITY.

5. That which is comprised in a writing. In this sense the plural only is in use.

*I have a letter from her
Of such contents, as you will wonder at.*
SHAKESPEARE.

I shall prove these writings not counterfeits, but authentick, and the contents true, and worthy of a divine original.

GREW'S COSMOLOGIA SACRA, B. IV.
C. 1. S. 1.

The contents of both books come before those of the first book, in the thread of the story.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 267.

CO'NTEXT. n.s. [contextus, Latin.]
The general series of a discourse; the parts of the discourse that precede and follow the sentence quoted.

That chapter is really a representation of one, which hath only the knowledge, not practice of his duty; as is manifest from the context.

HAMMOND ON FUNDAMENTALS.

CONTE'XT. adj. [from context.]
Knit together; firm.

Hollow and thin, for lightness; but withal context and firm, for strength.

DERHAM'S PHYSICO-THEOLOGY.

CONTE'XTURE. n.s. [from context.] The disposition of parts one amongst others; the composition of any thing out of separate parts; the system; the constitution; the manner in which any thing is woven or formed.

He was not of any delicate contexture; his limbs rather sturdy than dainty.
WOTTON.

Every species, afterwards expressed, was produced from that idea, forming that wonderful contexture of created beings.
DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY, PREFACE.

*Hence 'gan relax,
The ground's contexture; hence Tartarian
dregs,
Sulphur, and nitrous spume, enkindling
fierce,
Bellow'd within their darksome caves.*
PHILIPS.

*This apt, this wise contexture of the sea,
Makes it the ships, driv'n by the winds,
obey;
Whence hardy merchants sail from shore to shore.* BLACKMORE.

To CONTRADI'CT. v.a. [contradico, Latin.]

1. To oppose verbally; to assert the contrary to what has been asserted.

It is not lawful to contradict a point of history which is known to all the world, as to make Hannibal and Scipio contemporaries with Alexander.

DRYDEN'S DEDICATION, ÆNEID.

2. To be contrary to; to repugn; to oppose.

No truth can contradict any truth.

HOOKE, B. II. SECT. 7.

I contradict your banes:

If you will marry, make your loves to me.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

CO'NTRAST. n.s. [contraste, Fr.]

Opposition and dissimilitude of figures, by which one contributes to the visibility or effect of another.

To CO'NTRAST. v.a. [from the noun.]

1. To place in opposition, so that one figure shews another to advantage.
2. To shew another figure to advantage by its colour or situation.

The figures of the groups must not be all on a side, that is, with their face and bodies all turned the same way; but must contrast each other by their several positions.

DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

CONTRAVALLA'TION. n.s.

[from contra and vallo, Latin.] The fortification thrown up, by the besiegers, round a city, to hinder the sallies of the garrison.

When the late czar of Muscovy first acquainted himself with mathematical learning, he practised all the rules of circumvallation and contravallation at the siege of a town in Livonia. WATTS'S LOGICK.

CONTRISTA'TION. n.s. [from contristate.] The act of making sad; the state of being made sad; sorrow; heaviness of heart; sadness; sorrowfulness;

gloominess; grief; moan; mournfulness; trouble; discontent; melancholy.<sup>66</sup>

Incense and nidorous smells, such as were of sacrifices, were thought to intoxicate the brain, and to dispose men to devotion; which they may do by a kind of sadness and contristation of the spirits, and partly also by heating and exalting them.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 932.

CONTRI'TE. adj. [contritus, Latin.]

1. Bruised; much worn.
2. Worn with sorrow; harrassed with the sense of guilt; penitent. In the books of divines contrite is sorrowful for sin, from the love of God and desire of pleasing him; and attrite is sorrowful for sin, from the fear of punishment.

*I Richard's body have interred now;
And on it have bestow'd more contrite
tears,
Than from it issu'd forced drops of blood.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

With tears

*Wat'ring the ground, and with our sighs
the air
Frequenting, sent from hearts contrite, in sign
Of sorrow unfeign'd, and humiliation
meek.* MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

The contrite sinner is restored to pardon, and, through faith in Christ, our repentance is intitled to salvation.

ROGERS'S SERMONS.

CO'NTROVERSY. n.s. [controversia, Latin.]

1. Dispute; debate; agitation of contrary opinions: a dispute is commonly oral, and a controversy in writing.

How cometh it to pass that we are so rent with mutual contentions, and that the church is so much troubled? If men had been willing to learn, all these controversies might have died the very day they were first brought forth. HOOKE, B. I.

Without controversy great is the mystery of godliness. BIBLE 1 TIMOTHY.

*Wild controversy then, which long had slept,
Into the press from ruin'd cloisters leapt.*
DENHAM.

This left no room for controversy about the title, nor for encroachment on the right of others. LOCKE.

2. A suit in law.

If there be a controversy between men, and they come unto judgment, that the judges may judge them, then they shall justify the righteous and condemn the wicked.

BIBLE DEUTERONOMY, XXV. 1.

3. A quarrel.

The Lord hath a controversy with the nations. BIBLE JEREMIAH, XXV. 31.

4. Opposition; enmity: this is an unusual sense.

*The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it
With lusty sinews; throwing it aside,
And stemming it with hearts of controversy.*

SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

CO'NVENT. n.s. [conventus, Latin.]

1. An assembly of religious persons; a body of monks or nuns.

*He came to Leicester; Lodg'd in the abbey, where the reverend abbot,
With all his convent, honourably receiv'd him.* SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

2. A religious house; an abbey; a monastery; a nunnery.

One seldom finds in Italy a spot of ground more agreeable than ordinary, that is not covered with a convent. ADDISON.

CONVE'RSABLE. adj. [from converse. It is sometimes written conversible, but improperly; conversant, conversation, conversible.] Qualified for conversation; fit for company; well adapted to the reciprocal communication of thoughts; communicative.

That fire and levity which makes the young ones scarce conversible, when tempered by years, makes a gay old age.

GUARDIAN, NO. 101.

To CONVE'RSE. v.n. [converser, Fr. conversor, Latin.]

1. To cohabit with; to hold intercourse with; to be a companion to: followed by with.

Men then come to be furnished with fewer or more simple ideas from without, according as the objects they converse with afford greater or less variety. LOCKE.

By approving the sentiments of a person with whom he conversed, in such particulars as were just, he won him over from those points in which he was mistaken.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER.

For him who lonely loves To seek the distant hills, and there converse With nature.

THOMSON'S SUMMER, L. 130.

2. To be acquainted with; to be familiar to.<sup>67</sup>

*I will converse with iron-witted fools,
And unrespective boys: none are for me,
That look into me with considerate eyes.*

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

3. To convey the thoughts reciprocally in talk.

Go therefore half this day, as friend with friend,

Converse with Adam.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. V. L. 230.

Much less can bird with beast, or fish with fowl,

So well converse.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. VIII. L. 396.

4. To discourse familiarly upon any subject: with on before the thing.

We had conversed so often on that subject, and he had communicated his thoughts of it so fully to me, that I had not the least remaining difficulty.

DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

5. To have commerce with a different sex.

Being asked by some of her sex, in how long a time a woman might be allowed to pray to the gods, after having conversed with a man? If it were a husband, says she, the next day; if a stranger, never.

GUARDIAN, NO. 165.

CONU'NDRUM. n.s. A low jest; a quibble; a mean conceit: a cant word.

Mean time he smoaks, and laughs at merry tale,

Or pun ambiguous, or conundrum quaint. PHILIPS.

CO'NVOLUTED. part. [of the verb I have found no example.] Twisted; rolled upon itself.

This differs from Muscovy-glass only in this, that the plates of that are flat and plain, whereas these are convoluted and inflected. WOODWARD ON FOSSILS.

CO'NY. n.s. [kanin, Germ. connil or connin, Fr. cuniculus, Latin.] A rabbit; an animal that burroughs in the ground.

*With a short-legg'd hen,
Lemons and wine for sauce; to these a cony
Is not to be despair'd of, for our money.*

BEN JONSON'S EPIGRAMS.

The husbandman suffers by hares and conys, which eat the corn, trees.

MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

COOK-MAID. n.s. [cook and maid.] A maid that dresses provisions.

A friend of mine was lately complaining to me, that his wife had turned off one of the best cook-maids in England.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER, NO. 32.

COO'RDINATE. adj. [con and ordinatus, Latin.] Holding the same rank; not being subordinate. Thus shell-fish may be divided into two coordinate kinds, crustaceous and testaceous; each of which is again divided into many species, subordinate to the kind, but coordinate to each other.

The word Analysis signifies the general and particular heads of a discourse, with their mutual connexions, both coordinate and subordinate, drawn out into one or more tables. WATTS.

COP. n.s. [kop, Dut. cop, Sax.] The head; the top of any thing; any thing rising to a head. As a cop, vulgarly cock of hay; a cob-castle, properly cop-castle, a small castle or house on a hill. A cob of cherrystones for cop, a pile of stones one laid upon another; a tuft on the head of birds.

COPA'YVA. n.s. [It is sometimes written capivi, copivi, capayva, copayva, cupayva, cupayba.] A gum which distils from a tree in Brasil. It is much used in disorders of the urinary passages.

CO'PPED. adj. [from cop.] Rising to a top or head.

It was broad in its basis, and rose copped like a sugarloaf. WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

CO'PULA. n.s. [Latin.] The word which unites the subject and predicate of a proposition; as, books are dear.

The copula is the form of a proposition; it represents the act of the mind, affirming or denying. WATTS'S LOGICK.

To COQUE'T. v.a. [from the noun.] To entertain with compliments and amorous tattle; to treat with an appearance of amorous tenderness.

You are coquetting a maid of honour, my lord looking on to see how the gamesters play, and I railing at you both. SWIFT.

To COQU'ET. v.n. To act the lover.<sup>68</sup>

*Phyllis, who but a month ago
Was marry'd to the Tunbridge beau,
I saw coquetting t'other night,
In publick, with that odious knight.*
SWIFT.

COQU'ETTE. n.s. [coquette, Fr. from coquart, a prattler.] A gay, airy girl; a girl who endeavours to attract notice.

*The light coquettes in sylphs aloft repair,
And sport and flutter in the fields of air.*

POPE'S RAPE OF THE LOCK.

A coquette and a tinder-box are sparkled.

ARBUTHNOT AND POPE.

CO'RDIAL. n.s. [from cor, the heart, Latin.]

1. A medicine that increases the force of the heart, or quickens the circulation.

2. Any medicine that increases strength.

A cordial, properly speaking, is not always what increaseth the force of the heart; for, by increasing that, the animal may be weakened, as in inflammatory diseases. Whatever increaseth the natural or animal strength, the force of moving the fluids and muscles, is a cordial: these are such substances as bring the serum of the blood into the properest condition for circulation and nutrition; as broths made of animal substances, milk, ripe fruits, and whatever is endued with a wholesome but not pungent taste. ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

3. Any thing that comforts, gladdens, and exhilarates.

*Then with some cordials seek for to appease
The inward languor of my wounded heart,
And then my body shall have shortly ease;
But such sweet cordials pass physicians art.* SPENSER.

Comfort, like cordials after death, comes late. DRYDEN.

*Your warrior offspring that upheld the crown,
The scarlet honour of your peaceful gown,
Are the most pleasing objects I can find, Charms to my sight, and cordials to my mind.* DRYDEN.

CO'RMORANT. n.s. [cormoran, Fr. from corvus marinus, Latin.]

1. A bird that preys upon fish. It is nearly of the bigness of a capon, with a wry bill and broad feet, black on his body, but greenish about his wings. He is eminently greedy and rapacious.

*Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
Live register'd upon our brazen tombs;
When, spight of cormorant devouring time,
Th' endeavour of this present breath may
buy*

*That honour which shall 'bate his scythe's
keen edge.* SHAKESPEARE.

Those called birds of prey, as the eagle, hawk, puttock, and cormorant.

PEACHAM ON DRAWING.

*Thence up he flew, and on the tree of life
Sat like a cormorant.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. IV.

L. 194.

Not far from thence is seen a lake, the haunt

Of coots, and of the fishing cormorant.

DRYDEN'S FABLES.

2. A glutton.

CORN-FLAG. n.s. [corn and flag.]

It hath a fleshy double tuberose root: the leaves are like those of the fleur-de-lys: the flower consists of one leaf, shaped like a lily, open at the top, in two lips; the upper imbricated, the under divided into five segments: the ovary becomes an oblong fruit, divided into three cells, filled with roundish seeds wrapt up in a cover. Miller enumerates eleven species of this plant, some with red flowers, and some with white. It is a proper ornament for borders.<sup>69</sup>

CO'RONER. n.s. [from corona.] An officer whose duty is to enquire, on the part of the king, how any violent death was occasioned; for which purpose a jury of twelve persons is impannelled.

Go thou and seek the coroner, and let him sit o' my uncle; for he's in the third degree of drink; he's drowned.

SHAKESPEARE.

CO'RONET. n.s. [coronetta, Ital. the diminutive of corona, a crown.] An inferiour crown worn by the nobility. The coronet of a duke is adorned with strawberry leaves; that of a marquis has leaves with pearls interposed; that of an earl raises the pearls above the leaves; that of a viscount is surrounded with only pearls; that of a baron has only four pearls.

The rest was drawn into a coronet of gold, richly set with pearl. SIDNEY.

In his livery

Walk'd crowns and coronets, realms and islands were

As plates dropt from his pocket.

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

All the rest are countesses.

— Their coronets say so.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

*Under a coronet his flowing hair,
In curls, on either cheek play'd.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

Nor could our nobles hope their bold attempt,

Who ruin'd crowns, would coronets exempt. DRYDEN.

Peers and dukes, and all their sweeping train,

And garters, stars, and coronets appear.

POPE'S RAPE OF THE LOCK.

CO'RPORAL. n.s. [corrupted from caporal, French.] The lowest officer of the infantry, whose office is to place and remove the sentinels.

*The cruel corp'ral whisper'd in my ear,
Five pounds, if rightly tipt, would set me clear.* GAY.

CO'RPORAL of a Ship. An officer that hath the charge of setting the watches and sentries, and relieving them; who sees that all the soldiers and sailors keep their arms near and clean, and teaches them how to use them. He has a mate under him. Harris.

CO'RPORAL. adj. [corporel, Fr. corpus, Latin.]

1. Relating to the body; belonging to the body.

*To relief of lazars and weak age,
Of indigent faint souls, past corporal toil,
A hundred alms-houses, right well supplied.* SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

Render to me some corporal sign about her,

More evident than this.

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

That God hath been otherwise seen, with corporal eyes, exceedeth the small proportion of my understanding.

RALEIGH.

They enjoy greater sensual pleasures, and feel fewer corporal pains, and are utter strangers to all those anxious and tormenting thoughts, which perpetually haunt and disquiet mankind.

ATTEBURY.

2. Material; not spiritual. In the present language, when body is used philosophically in opposition to spirit, the word corporeal is used, as a corporeal being; but otherwise corporal. Corporeal is having a body; corporal relating to the body. This distinction seems not ancient.

Whither are they vanish'd?

Into the air: and what seem'd corporal Melted, as breath, into the wind.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*And from these corporal nutriments,
perhaps,*

Your bodies may at last turn all to spirit.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

CORPO'REAL. adj. [corporeus, Latin.]

1. Having a body; not immaterial. See CORPORAL.

*The swiftness of those circles attribute,
Though numberless, to his omnipotence,
That to corporeal substances could add*

Speed almost spiritual.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. VIII.

Having surveyed the image of God in the soul, we are not to omit those characters that God imprinted upon the body, as much as a spiritual substance could be pictured upon a corporeal.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

God being supposed to be a pure spirit, cannot be the object of any corporeal sense. TILLOTSON.

The course is finish'd which thy fates decreed,

And thou from thy corporeal prison freed.

DRYDEN'S FABLES.

*Fix thy corporeal and internal eye
On the young gnat, or new-engender'd fly.*

PRIOR.

2. It is used by Swift inaccurately for corporal.

I am not in a condition to make a true step even on Aimsbury Downs; and I declare, that a corporeal false step is worse than a political one. SWIFT.

CORPUSCULARIAN. adj. [from corpusculum, Lat.] Relating to bodies; comprising bodies. It is the distinguishing epithet of that philosophy which attempts the rational solution of all physical appearances by the action of one body upon another.

As to natural philosophy I do not expect to see any principles proposed, more comprehensive and intelligible than the corpuscu-larian or mechanical. BOYLE.

This may be said, that the modern corpuscularians talk, in most things, more intelligibly than the peripateticks.

BENTLEY.

The mechanical or corpuscular philosophy,

though peradventure the eldest, as well as the best in the world, had lain dead for many ages in contempt and oblivion.

BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

CORRE'CTIONER. n.s. [from correction.] One that has been in the house of correction; a jail-bird. This seems to be the meaning in Shakespeare.

*I will have you foundly swinged for this,
you blue-bottle rogue! you filthy famished correctioner.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

CO'RRODY. n.s. [from corrodo, Latin.] A defalcation from an allowance or salary for some other than the original purpose.

In those days even noble persons, and other meaner men, ordered corrodies and pensions to their chaplains and servants out of churches. AYLIFFE'S PARERGON.

To CO'RRUGATE. v.a. [corrugo, Latin.] To wrinkle or purse up; as the skin is drawn into wrinkles by cold, or any other cause. Quincy.

*The cramp cometh of contraction of sinews:
it cometh either by cold or dryness; for cold and dryness do both of them contract and corrugate.*

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 964.

COSMO'GRAPHY. n.s. [κόσμος and γράφω.] The science of the general system or affections of the world, distinct from geography, which delivers the situation and boundaries of particular countries.

*Here it might see the world without travel;
it being a lesser scheme of the creation, nature contracted, a little cosmography, or map of the universe.*

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

CO'TTAGE. n.s. [from cot.] A hut; a mean habitation; a cot; a little house.

The sea-coast shall be dwellings and cottages for shepherds, and folds for flocks. BIBLE ZEPHANIAH, II. 6.

They were right glad to take some corner of a poor cottage, and there to serve God upon their knees. HOOKER, B. IV. S. 2.

The self-same sun that shines upon his court,

Hides not his visage from our cottage, but Looks on both alike.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

Let the women of noble birth and great fortunes nurse their children, look to the affairs of the house, visit poor cottages, and relieve their necessities.

TAYLOR'S HOLY LIVING.

It is difficult for a peasant, bred up in the obscurities of a cottage, to fancy in his mind the unseen splendors of a court.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

Beneath our humble cottage let us haste, And here, unenvied, rural dainties taste.

POPE'S ODYSSEY.

CO'TTAGER. n.s. [from cottage]

1. One who lives in a hut or cottage.

*Let us from our farms,
Call forth our cottagers to arms.*

SWIFT.

The most ignorant Irish cottager will not sell his cow for a groat.

SWIFT'S ADDRESS TO PARLIAMENT.

2. A cottager, in law, is one that lives on the common, without paying rent, and without any land of his own.

The husbandmen and plowmen be but as their work-folks and labourers, or else mere cottagers, which are but housed beggars.

BACON'S HENRY VII.

The yeomenry, or middle people, of a condition between gentlemen and cottagers. BACON'S HENRY VII.

CO'UCHEE. n.s. [French.] Bedtime; the time of visiting late at night.

None of her sylvan subjects made their court;

Levees and couchees pass'd without resort. DRYDEN.

COVER-SHAME. n.s. [cover and shame.] Some appearance used to conceal infamy.

Does he put on holy garments for a cover-shame of lewdness?

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRYAR.

COUGH. n.s. [kuch, Dutch.] A convulsion of the lungs, vellicated by some sharp serosity. It is pronounced coff.

In consumptions of the lungs, when nature cannot expel the cough, men fall into fluxes of the belly, and then they die.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 63.

For his dear sake long restless nights you bore,

While rattling coughs his heaving vessels tore. SMITH.

To COUGH. v.n. [kuchen, Dutch.]

To have the lungs convulsed; to make a noise in endeavouring to evacuate the peccant matter from the lungs.

Thou didst drink

*The stale of horses, and the gilded puddle
Which beasts would cough at.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTHONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath wakened thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun.

SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO AND JULIET.

The first problem enquireth why a man doth cough, but not an ox or cow; whereas the contrary is often observed. BROWN.

If any humour be discharged upon the lungs, they have a faculty of clearing themselves, and casting it up by coughing.

RAY ON THE CREATION.

There are who to my person pay their court,

I cough like Horace, and though lean, am short. POPE'S EPISTLES.

To COUGH. v.a. To eject by a cough; to expectorate.

If the matter be to be discharged by expectoration, it must first pass into the substance of the lungs, then into the aspera arteria, or weasand, and from thence be coughed up, and spit out by the mouth.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

CO'UGHER. n.s. [from cough.] One that coughs. Dictionaries.

COUNTERBU'FF. n.s. [counter and buff.] A blow in a contrary direction; a stroke that produces a recoil.

He at the second gave him such a counterbuff, that, because Phalantus was not to be driven from the saddle, the saddle with broken girths was driven from the horse.

SIDNEY.

*Go, captain Stub, lead on, and show
What house you come of, by the blow
You give sir Quintin, and the cuff
You 'scape o' th' sandbags counterbuff.*

BEN JONSON.

CO'UNTERCASTER. n.s. [from counter, for a false piece of money, and caster.] A word of contempt for an arithmetician; a book-keeper; a caster of accounts; a reckoner.

*I, of whom his eyes had seen the proof At Rhodes, at Cyprus, must be let and calm'd
By debtor and creditor, this countercaster.*

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

COUNTERMA'RCH. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. Retrocession; march backward; march in a different direction from the former.

How are such an infinite number of things placed with such order in the memory, notwithstanding the tumults, marches, and countermarches of the animal spirits?

COLLIER ON THOUGHT.

2. Change of measures; alteration of conduct.

They make him do and undo, go forward and backwards by such countermarches

and retractions, as we do not willingly impute to wisdom.

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

COUNTERNO'ISE. n.s. [counter and noise.] A sound by which any other noise is overpowered.

They endeavoured, either by a constant succession of sensual delights, to charm and lull asleep, or else, by a counternoise of revellings and riotous excesses, to drown the softer whispers of their conscience.

CALAMY'S SERMONS.

CO'UNTERPANE. n.s. [contrepoint, French.] A coverlet for a bed, or any thing else woven in squares. It is sometimes written, according to etymology, counterpoint.

*In ivory coffers I have stufft my crowns;
In cypress chests my arras counterpanes.*

SHAKESPEARE.

CO'UNTERPOINT. n.s. A coverlet woven in squares, commonly spoken counterpain. See COUNTERPANE.

To COUNTERRO'L. v.a. [counter and roll.] This is now generally written as it is spoken, control.] To preserve the power of detecting frauds by a counter account.

COUPLE-BEGGAR. n.s. [couple and beggar.] One that makes it his business to marry beggars to each other.

*No couple-beggar in the land,
E'er join'd such numbers hand in hand.*

SWIFT.

CO'URIER. n.s. [courier, French.] A messenger sent in haste; an express; a runner.

I met a courier, one mine ancient friend.

SHAKESPEARE'S TIMON.

This thing the wary bassa well perceiving, for more assurance, by speedy couriers

advertised Solyman of the taking of Tauris, and of the enemy's purpose, requesting him with all speed to repair with his army to Tauris. KNOLLES'S HISTORY.

To COURT. v.a. [from the noun.]

1. To woo; to solicit a woman to marriage.

*Follow a shadow, it flies you;
Seem to fly it, it will pursue:
So court a mistress, she denies you;
Let her alone, she will court you.*

BEN JONSON'S FOREST.

*Fir'd with her love, and with ambition led,
The neighb'ring princes court her nuptial bed.* DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

*Alas! Sempronius, wouldst thou talk of love
To Marcia, whilst her father's life's in danger?
Thou might'st as well court the pale trembling vestal,*

While she beholds the holy flame expiring.
ADDISON'S CATO.

*Ev'n now, when silent scorn is all they gain,
A thousand court you, though they court in vain.* POPE.

2. To solicit; to seek.

Their own ease and satisfaction would quickly teach children to court commendation, and avoid doing what they found condemned.

LOCKE ON EDUCATION, SECT. 59.

3. To flatter; to endeavour to please.

COURT-DRESSER. n.s. [court and dresser.] One that dresses the court, or persons of rank; a flatterer.

There are many ways of fallacy; such arts of giving colours, appearances and resemblances, by this court-dresser, fancy.

LOCKE.

CO'USIN. n.s. [cousin, Fr. con-sanguineus, Lat.]

1. Any one collaterally related more remotely than a brother or sister.

*Macbeth unseam'd him from the nape to
th' chops,
And fix'd his head upon our battlements.*

— Oh, valiant cousin! worthy gentleman.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*Tybalt, my cousin! O, my brother's child!
Unhappy sight! alas, the blood is spill'd
Of my dear kinsman.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO AND JULIET.

*Thou art, great lord, my father's sister's son,
And cousin german to great Priam's seed.*
SHAKESPEARE'S TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

2. A title given by the king to a nobleman, particularly to those of the council.

COXCO'MICAL. adj. [from coxcomb.] Foppish; conceited: a low word unworthy of use.

Because, as he was a very natural writer, and they were without prejudice, without prepossession, without affectation, and without the influence of coxcomical, senseless cabal, they were at liberty to receive the impressions which things naturally made on their minds. DENNIS.

CRACK. n.s. [kraeck, Dutch.]

1. A sudden disruption, by which the parts are separated but a little way from each other.

2. The chink, fissure, or vacuity made by disruption; a narrow breach.

Contusions, when great, do usually produce a fissure or crack of the skull, either in the same part where the blow was inflicted, or in the contrary part. WISEMAN.

*At length it would crack in many places;
and those cracks, as they dilated, would appear of a pretty good, but yet obscure and dark sky-colour.*

NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

3. The sound of any body bursting or falling.

If I say sooth, I must report, they were As cannons overcharg'd with double cracks. SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*Now day appears, and with the day the
king,
Whose early care had robb'd him of his
rest:
Far off the cracks of falling houses ring,
And shrieks of subjects pierce his tender breast.* DRYDEN.

4. Any sudden and quick sound.

*A fourth? – start eye!
What will the line stretch out to th' crack of doom?* SHAKESPEARE.

Vulcan was employed in hammering out thunderbolts, that every now and then flew up from the anvil with dreadful cracks and flashes.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN, NO. 103.

5. Any breach, injury, or diminution; a flaw.<sup>70</sup>

And let us, Paladour, though now our voices Have got the mannish crack, sing him to th' ground. SHAKESPEARE.

I cannot Believe this crack to be in my dread
mistress,

So sovereignly being honourable.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

6. Craziness of intellect.

7. A man crazed.

I have invented projects for raising millions, without burthening the subject; but cannot get the parliament to listen to me, who look upon me as a crack and a projector.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

8. A whore; in low language.

9. A boast.

*Leasings, backbitings, and vain-glorious cracks,
All those against that fort did bend their batteries.* SPENSER.

10. A boaster. This is only in low phrase.

CRA'MBO. n.s. [a cant word, probably without etymology.] A play at which one gives a word, to which another finds a rhyme; a rhyme.

*So Mævius, when he drain'd his skull
To celebrate some suburb trull,
His similes in order set,
And ev'ry crambo he could get.* SWIFT.

CRASS. adj. [crassus, Latin.] Gross; coarse; not thin; not comminuted; not subtle; not consisting of small parts.

Metals are intermixed with the common terrestrial matter, so as not to be discoverable by human industry; or, if discoverable, so diffused and scattered amongst the crasser and more unprofitable matter, that it would never be possible to separate and extract it.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

CRA'VER. n.s. [from crave.] A weak-hearted spiritless fellow. It is used in Clarissa.

TO CRAUNCH. v.a. [schrantsen, Dutch; whence the vulgar say more properly to scaunch.] To crush in the mouth. The word is used by Swift.

CRA'YON. n.s. [crayon, French.]

1. A kind of pencil; a roll of paste to draw lines with.

Let no day pass over you without drawing a line; that is to say, without working, without giving some strokes of the pencil or the crayon. DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

2. A drawing or design done with a pencil or crayon.

CREDE'NDA. n.s. [Latin.] Things to be believed; articles of faith; distinguished in theology from agenda, or practical duties.

These were the great articles and credenda of Christianity, that so much startled the world. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

CREDE'NTIAL. n.s. [from credens, Latin.] That which gives a title to credit; the warrant upon which belief or authority is claimed.

A few persons of an odious and despised country could not have filled the world with believers, had they not shown undoubted credentials from the Divine Person who sent them on such a message.

ADDISON ON THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

CRE'EPER. n.s. [from creep.]

1. A plant that supports itself by means of some stronger body.

Plants that put forth their sap hastily, have bodies not proportionable to their length; therefore they are winders or creepers; as ivy, briony, and woodbine.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

2. An iron used to slide along the grate in kitchens.

3. A kind of patten or clog worn by women.

CREE'PHOLE. n.s. [creep and hole.]

1. A hole into which any animal may creep to escape danger.

2. A subterfuge; an excuse.

CREE'PINGLY. adv. [from creeping.] Slowly; after the manner of a reptile.

The joy, which wrought into Pygmalion's mind, was even such as, by each degree of Zelmane's words, creepingly entered into Philoclea's. SIDNEY, B. II.

CREE'PLE<sup>71</sup> n.s. [from creep.] A lame person, a cripple.

*She to whom this world must itself refer
As suburbs or the microcosm of her,
She, she is dead, she's dead when thou
know'st this,
Thou know'st how lame a creeple this world is.* DONNE.

CREMA'TION. n.s. [crematio, Latin.] A burning.

CRE'MOR. n.s. [Latin.] A milky substance; a soft liquor resembling cream.

The food is swallowed into the stomach, where, mingled with dissolvent juices, it is reduced into a chyle or cremor. RAY.

CRE'NATED. adj. [from crena, Latin] Notched; indented.

The cells are prettily crenated, or notched quite round the edges; but not straited down to any depth.

WOODWARD ON FOSSILS.

CRI'CKET. n.s. [krekel, from kreken, to make a noise, Dutch.]

1. An insect that squeaks or chirps about ovens and fireplaces.

*Didst thou not hear a noise? —
— I heard the owl scream, and the crickets cry.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*Far from all resort of mirth,
Save the cricket on the hearth.*

MILTON.

*The solemn death-watch click'd the hour
she dy'd,
And shrilling crickets in the chimney
cry'd.* GAY'S PASTORALS.

2. [from cryce, Saxon, a stick.] A sport, at which the contenders drive a ball with sticks in opposition to each other.

*The judge, to dance, his brother serjeant
call;*

The senator at cricket urge the ball.

POPE'S DUNCIAD, B. IV.

3. [from kriechen, Germ. to creep.] A low seat or stool.

CRI'NCUM. n.s. [a cant word.] A cramp; a contraction; whimsy.

For jealousy is but a kind Of clap and crincum of the mind.

HUDIBRAS, P. III. CANT. 1.

CRINI'GEROUS. adj. [criniger, Latin.] Hairy; overgrown with hair. Dictionaries.

CRI'SIS. n.s. [κρίσις.]

1. The point in which the disease kills, or changes to the better.

*Wise leeches will not vain receipts obtrude; Deaf to complaints, they wait upon the ill,
'Till some safe crisis authorize their skill.*
DRYDEN.

2. The point of time at which any affair comes to the height.

*This hour's the very crisis of your fate;
Your good or ill, your infamy or fame,
And all the colour of your life depends
On this important now.*

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRYAR.

The undertaking, which I am now laying down, was entered upon in the very crisis of the late rebellion, when it was the duty of every Briton to contribute his utmost assistance to the government, in a manner suitable to his station and abilities.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER, NO. 55.

CRI'TICK. n.s. [κριτικός.]

1. A man skilled in the art of judging of literature; a man able to distinguish the faults and beauties of writing.

This settles truer ideas in men's minds of several things, whereof we read the names in ancient authors, than all the large and laborious arguments of criticks. LOCKE.

*Criticks I saw, that other names deface,
And fix their own with labour in their place.* POPE.

Where an author has many beauties consistent with virtue, piety, and truth, let not little criticks exalt themselves, and shower down their ill-nature. WATTS.<sup>72</sup>

2. A censurer; a man apt to find fault.

My chief design, next to seeing you, is to be a severe critick on you and your neighbour. SWIFT.

CRI'TICK. adj. Critical; relating to criticism; relating to the art of judging of literary performances.

*Thence arts o'er all the northern world advance,
But critick learning flourish'd most in France.* POPE.

CRI'TICK. n.s.

1. A critical examination; critical remarks; animadversions.

I should be glad if I could persuade him to continue his good offices, and write such another critick on any thing of mine.

DRYDEN.

I should as soon expect to see a critique on the poesy of a ring, as on the inscription of a medal. ADDISON ON MEDALS.

2. Science of criticism.

*If ideas and words were distinctly weighed,
and duly considered, they would afford us another sort of logick and critick than what we have been hitherto acquainted with.*

LOCKE.

What is every year of a wise man's life, but a censure and critique on the past?

POPE.

*Not that my quill to criticks was confin'd,
My verse gave ampler lessons to mankind.*

POPE.

To CRI'TICK. v.n. [from critick.] To play the critick; to criticise.

They do but trace over the paths that have been beaten by the antients; or comment, critick, and flourish upon them.

TEMPLE.

To CROSS-EXAMINE. v.a. [cross and examine.] To try the faith of evidence by captious questions of the contrary party.

If we may but cross-examine and interrogate their actions against their words, these will soon confess the invalidity of their solemnest confessions.

DECAY OF PIETY.

The judges shall, as they think fit, interrogate or cross-examine the witnesses.

SPECTATOR, NO. 608.

To CRO'SSBITE. v.a. [from the noun.] To contravene by deception.

No rhetorick must be spent against cross-biting a country evidence, and frighting him out of his senses. COLLIER.

*That many knotty points there are,
Which all discuss, but few can clear;
As nature slyly had thought fit,
For some by-ends, to cross-bite wit.*

PRIOR.

CROWD. n.s. [cruð, Saxon.]

1. A multitude confusedly pressed together.
2. A promiscuous medly, without order or distinction.

He could then compare the confusion of a multitude to that tumult he had observed in the Icarian sea, dashing and breaking among its crowd of islands.

ESSAY ON HOMER.

3. The vulgar; the populace.

*He went not with the crowd to see a shrine,
But fed us by the way, with food divine.*

DRYDEN'S FABLES.

4. [from crwth, Welsh.] A fiddle.

*His fiddle is your proper purchase,
Won in the service of the churches;
And by your doom must be allow'd
To be, or be no more, a crowd.*

HUDIBRAS, P. I. CANT. 2.

CRU'CIAL. adj. [crux, crucis, Latin.]

Transverse; intersecting one another.

Whoever has seen the practice of the crucial incision, must be sensible of the false reasoning used in its favour. SHARP.

To CRU'CIATE. v.a. [crucio, Latin.]

To torture; to torment; to excruciate.

CRU'CIBLE. n.s. [crucibulum, low Latin.] A chymist's melting pot, made of earth; so called, because they were formerly marked with a cross.

Take a quantity of good silver, and put it in a crucible or melting cruse, and set them on fire, well covered round about with coals. PEACHAM ON DRAWING.

CRU'ET. n.s. [kruicke, Dutch.] A vial for vinegar or oyl, with a stopple.

Within thy reach I set the vinegar!

And fill'd the cruet with the acid tide, While pepper-water worms thy bait supply'd. SWIFT.

CRUISE. n.s. [kruicke, Dutch.] A small cup.

I have not a cake, but an handful of meal in a barrel, and a little oil in a cruise.

BIBLE 1 KINGS, XVII. 12.

The train prepare a cruise of curious mold,

A cruise of fragrance, form'd of burnish'd gold. POPE'S ODYSSEY.

A CRUISE. n.s. [croise, Fr. from the original cruisers, who bore the cross, and plundered only infidels.] A voyage in search of plunder.

To CRUISE. v.n. [from the noun.] To rove over the sea in search of opportunities to plunder; to wander on the sea without any certain course.

CRUSTA'CEOUS. adj. [from crusta, Lat.] Shelly, with joints; not testaceous; not with one continued uninterrupted shell. Lobster is crustaceous, oyster testaceous.

It is true that there are some shells, such as those of lobsters, crabs, and others of crustaceous kinds, that are very rarely found at land.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

CU'CKOO. n.s. [cwccw, Welsh; cocu, Fr. kockock, Dutch.]

1. A bird which appears in the Spring; and is said to suck the eggs of other birds, and lay her own to be hatched in their place; from which practice, it was usual to alarm a husband at the approach of an adulterer by calling cuckoo, which, by mistake, was in time applied to the husband. This bird is remarkable for the uniformity of his note, from which his name in most tongues seems to have been formed.

Finding Mopsa, like a cuckoo by a nightingale, alone with Pamela, I came in.

SIDNEY.

*The merry cuckoo, messenger of Spring,
His trumpet shrill hath thrice already sounded.* SPENSER.

*The plainsong cuckoo gray,
Whose note full many a man doth mark,
And dares not answer, nay.*

SHAKESPEARE.

*Take heed, have open eye; for thieves do foot by night:
Take heed ere Summer comes, or cuckoo birds affright.* SHAKESPEARE.

I deduce,

*From the first note the hollow cuckoo sings,
The symphony of Spring; and touch a theme*

Unknown to fame, the passion of the grove. THOMSON'S SPRING.

2. It is a name of contempt.

Why, what a rascal art thou then, to praise him so for running? —

— A horseback, ye cuckoo; — but a-foot, he will not budge a foot.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV. P. I.

CUE. n.s. [queue, a tail, French.]

1. The tail or end of any thing; as, the long curl of a wig.

2. The last words of a speech which the player who is to answer catches, and regards as intimation to begin.

Pyramus, you begin: when you have spoken your speech, enter into that brake; and so every one according to his cue.

DREAM.

3. A hint; an intimation; a short direction.

What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba, That he should weep for her? What would he do,

*Had he the motive and the cue for passion
That I have? He would drown the stage with tears.* SHAKESPEARE.

Let him know how many servants there are,

of both sexes, who expect vails; and give them their cue to attend in two lines, as he leaves the house. SWIFT.

4. The part which any man is to play in his turn.

*Hold your hands,
Both you of my inclining, and the rest:
Were it my cue to fight, I should have known it*

Without a prompter.

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

Neither is Otto here a much more talking gentleman: nothing appears in his cue to move pity, or any way make the audience of his party.

RYMER'S TRAGEDIES OF THE LAST AGE.

5. Humour; temper of mind: a low word.

CU'LPBIT. n.s. [about this word there is great dispute. It is used by the judge at criminal trials, who, when the prisoner declares himself not guilty, and puts himself upon his trial, answers; Culprit, God send thee a good deliverance. It is likely that it is a corruption of Qu'il paroît, May it so appear, the wish of the judge being that the prisoner may be found innocent.] A man arraigned before his judge.

The knight appear'd, and silence they proclaim;

*Then first the culprit answer'd to his name;
And, after forms of law, was last requir'd To name the thing that woman most desir'd.* DRYDEN.

*An author is in the condition of a culprit;
the publick are his judges: by allowing too much, and condescending too far, he may injure his own cause; and by pleading and asserting too boldly, he may displease the court.*

PRIOR'S PREFACE TO SOLOMON.

CU'LTURE. n.s. [cultura, Latin.]

1. The act of cultivation; the act of tilling the ground; tillage.

Give us seed unto our heart, and culture to our understanding, that there may come fruit of it. BIBLE 2 ESDRAS, VIII. 6.

These three last were slower than the ordinary wheat of itself, and this culture did rather retard than advance. BACON.

The plough was not invented 'till after the deluge; the earth requiring little or no care or culture, but yielding its increase freely, and without labour and toil.

WOODWARD.

Where grows? – Where grows it not? If vain our toil,

We ought to blame the culture, not the soil. Fix'd to no spot is happiness sincere.

POPE'S ESSAY ON MAN.

*They rose as vigorous as the sun;
Then to the culture of the willing glebe.*

THOMSON'S SPRING.

2. Art of improvement and melioration.

One might wear any passion out of a family by culture, as skilful gardeners blot a colour out of a tulip that hurts its beauty. TATLER, NO. 75.

CU'NNINGMAN. n.s. [cunning and man.] A man who pretends to tell fortunes, or teach how to recover stolen goods.

*He sent him for a strong detachment
Of beadle, constable, and watchmen,
T' attack the cunningman, for plunder
Committed falsly on his lumber.*

HUDIBRAS, P. III. CANT 1.

To CUP. v.a. [from the noun.]

1. To supply with cups: this sense is obsolete.

*Plumpy Bacchus, with pink eyne,
In thy vats our cares be drown'd:
With thy grapes our hairs be crown'd!
Cup us, 'till the world go round.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

2. To fix a glass-bell or cucurbite upon the skin, to draw the blood in scarification.

*The clotted blood lies heavy on his heart,
Corrupts, and there remains in spite of art:
Nor breathing veins, nor cupping will prevail;*

All outward remedies and inward fail.

DRYDEN'S FABLES.

You have quartered all the foul language upon me, that could be raked out of the air of Billingsgate, without knowing who I am; or whether I deserve to be cupped and scarified at this rate. SPECTATOR, NO. 595.

Blistering, cupping, and bleeding are seldom of use but to the idle and intemperate.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 195.

Him the damn'd doctors and his friends immur'd;

They bled, they cupp'd, they purg'd; in short they cur'd. POPE.

CU'PPER. n.s. [from cup.] One who applies cupping-glasses; a scarifier.

CUPPING-GLASS. n.s. [from cup and glass.] A glass used by scarifiers to draw out the blood by rarefying the air.

A bubo, in this case, ought to be drawn outward by cupping-glasses, and brought to suppuration. WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

CU'RRANT. n.s.

1. The tree hath no prickles; the leaves are large: the flower consists of five leaves, placed in form of a rose: the ovary, which arises from the center of the flower-cup, becomes a globular fruit, produced in bunches.

2. A small dried grape, properly written corinth.

They butter'd currants on fat veal bestow'd,

*And rumps of beef with virgin honey stew'd;
Insipid taste, old friend, to them who Paris know,*

*Where rocombole, shallot, and the rank
garlick grow.* KING.

CU'RRENCY. n.s. [from current.]

1. Circulation; power of passing from hand to hand.

The currency of those half-pence would, in the universal opinion of our people, be utterly destructive to this kingdom.

SWIFT.

2. General reception.

3. Fluency; readiness of utterance; easiness of pronunciation.

4. Continuance; constant flow; uninterrupted course.

The currency of time to establish a custom, ought to be with a continuando from the beginning to the end of the term prescribed. AYLIFFE'S PARERGON.

5. General esteem; the rate at which any thing is vulgarly valued.

He that thinketh Spain to be some great over-match for this estate, assisted as it is, and, may be, is no good mintman, but takes greatness of kingdoms according to their bulk and currency, and not after intrinsick value.

BACON'S WAR WITH SPAIN.

6. The papers stamped in the English colonies by authority, and passing for money.

CU'RRISH. adj. [from cur.] Having the qualities of a degenerate dog; brutal; sour; quarrelsome; malignant; churlish; uncivil; untractable; impracticable.

Sweet speaking oft a currish heart reclaims. SIDNEY, B. II.

*No care of justice, nor no rule of reason,
No temperance, nor no regard of season,
Did thenceforth ever enter in his mind,
But cruelty, the sign of currish kind.*

HUBBERD'S TALE.

*In fashions wayward, and in love unkind;
For Cupid deigns not wound a currish mind.* FAIRFAX, B. IV.

I would she were in heaven, so she could

Entreat some pow'r to change this currish Jew. SHAKESPEARE.

She says your dog was a cur; and tells you, currish thanks is good enough for such a present.

SHAKESPEARE'S TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

CU'RTAIN. n.s. [cortina, Latin.]

1. A cloath contracted or expanded at pleasure, to admit or exclude the light; to conceal or discover any thing; to shade a bed; to darken a room.

Their curtains ought to be kept open, so as to renew the air.

ARBUTHNOT ON DIET.

*So through white curtains shot a tim'rous
ray,*

And op'd those eyes that must eclipse the day. POPE.

Thy hand, great dulness! let's the curtain fall,

And universal darkness buries all.

POPE'S DUNCIAD, B. III.

2. To draw the CURTAIN. To close it so as to shut out the light, or conceal the object.

I must draw a curtain before the work for a while, and keep your patience a little in suspence, 'till materials are prepared.

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

Once more I write to you, and this once will be the last: the curtain will soon be drawn between my friend and me, and nothing left but to wish you a long good night. POPE.

3. To open it so as to discern the object.

*Had I forgot thee? Oh, come in, Æmilia:
Soft, by and by; let me the curtains draw.
Where art thou? What's the matter with thee now?* SHAKESPEARE.

So soon as the all-cheering sun Should in the farthest East begin to draw

The shady curtain from Aurora's bed.

SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO AND JULIET.

*Peace, the lovers are asleep:
They, sweet turtles! folded lie
In the last knot that love could tie:
Let them sleep, let them sleep on,
'Till this stormy night be gone;
And th' eternal morrow dawn,
Then the curtain will be drawn,
And they waken with that light,
Whose day shall never sleep in night.*

CRASHAW.

4. [In fortification.] That part of the wall or rampart that lies between two bastions. Military Dictionaries.

The governour, not discouraged, suddenly of timber and boards raised up a curtain twelve foot high, at the back of his soldiers.

KNOLLES'S HISTORY OF THE TURKS.

CURTAIN-LECTURE. n.s. [from curtain and lecture.] A reproof given by a wife to her husband in bed.

*What endless brawls by wives are bred!
The curtain-lecture makes a mournful bed.* DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

She ought to exert the authority of the curtain-lecture, and, if she finds him of a rebellious disposition, to tame him.

ADDISON.

CU'STARD. n.s. [cwstard, Welsh.] A kind of sweetmeat made by boiling eggs with milk and sugar, 'till the whole thickens into a mass. It is a food much used in city feasts.

*He cram'd them 'till their guts did ake,
With cawdle, custard, and plumb cake.*

HUDIBRAS, CANT. II.

*Now may'rs and shrieves all hush'd and
satiated lay;*

Yet eat, in dreams, the custard of the day.

POPE'S DUNCIAD.

CU'TTER. n.s. [from cut.]

1. An agent or instrument that cuts any thing.

2. A nimble boat that cuts the water.

3. <sup>73</sup> The teeth that cut the meat.

The molares, or grinders are behind, nearest the center of motion, because there is a greater strength or force required to chew the meat than to bite a piece; and the cutters before, that they may be ready to cut off a morsel from any solid food, to be transmitted to the grinders.

RAY ON THE CREATION.

4. An officer in the Exchequer that provides wood for the tallies, and cuts the sum paid upon them; and then casts the same into the court to be written upon. Cowel.

CYCLOPÆDI'A. n.s. [κύκλος and παδεία.] A circle of knowledge; a course of the sciences.

D

Is a consonant nearly approaching in sound to T, but formed by a stronger appulse of the tongue to the upper part of the mouth. The sound of D in English is uniform, and it is never mute.

To DAB. v.a. [dauber, Fr.] To strike gently with something soft or moist.

A sore should never be wiped by drawing a piece of tow or rag over it, but only by dabbing it with fine lint. SHARP.

A DAB. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. A small lump of any thing.
2. A blow with something moist or soft.
3. Something moist or slimy thrown upon one.
4. [In low language.] An artist; a man expert at something. This is not used in writing.

Of flat fish there are rays, flowks, dabs, plaice. CAREW.

DA'DAL.<sup>74</sup> adj. [dædalus, Latin.]

1. Various; variegated.
2. Skilful: this is not the true meaning, nor should be imitated.

Nor hath

*The dædal hand of nature only pour'd
Her gifts of outward grace.* PHILIPS.

DA'GGERSDRAWING. n.s.

[dagger and draw.] The act of drawing daggers; approach to open violence.

*They always are at daggersdrawing,
And one another clapperclawing.*

HUDIBRAS, P. II. CANT. 2.

I have heard of a quarrel in a tavern, where all were at daggersdrawing, 'till one desired to know the subject of the quarrel.

SWIFT.

DA'MNABLE. adj. [from damn.]

1. Deserving damnation; justly doomed to never-ending punishment.

It gives him occasion of labouring with greater earnestness elsewhere, to entangle unwary minds with the snares of his damnable opinion.

HOOKER, B. 5. SECT. 42.

*He's a creature unprepar'd, unmeet for
death;*

*And, to transport him in the mind he is,
Were damnable.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR
MEASURE.

As he does not reckon every schism of a damnable nature, so he is far from closing with the new opinion of those who make it no crime. SWIFT.

2. It is sometimes indecently used in a low and ludicrous sense; odious;
pernicious.

Oh thou damnable fellow! did not I pluck thee by the nose for thy speeches?

SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

To DA'MNIFY. v.a. [from damnifico, Latin.]

1. To endamage; to injure; to cause loss to any.

He, who has suffered the damage, has a right to demand in his own name, and he alone can remit satisfaction: the damnified person has the power of appropriating the goods or service of the offender, by right of self-preservation. LOCKE.

2. To hurt; to impair.

*When now he saw himself so freshly rear,
As if late fight had nought him damnify'd,
He was dismay'd, and 'gan his fate to fear.* FAIRY QUEEN.

DA'MPY. adj. [from damp.]

Dejected; gloomy; sorrowful.

The lords did dispel dampy thoughts, which the remembrance of his uncle might raise, by applying him with exercises and disports. HAYWARD.

DA'NDIPRAT. n.s. [dandin, French.] A little fellow; an urchin: a word used sometimes in fondness, sometimes in contempt.

DA'NGLER. n.s. [from dangle.] A man that hangs about women only to waste time.

A dangler is of neither sex.

RALPH'S MISCELLANY.

To DAP. v.n. [corrupted from dip.]

To let fall gently into the water: a word,
I believe, only used by anglers.

I have taught him how to catch a chub, by dapping with a grasshopper.

WALTON'S ANGLER.

DA'PPER. adj. [dapper, Dutch]

Little and active; lively without bulk. It is usually spoken in contempt.

*And on the tawny sands and shelves,
Trip the pert fairies and the dapper elves.*

MILTON.

A pert dapper spark of a magpye, fancied the birds would never be governed 'till himself should sit at the helm.

L'ESTRANGE.

DA'RING. adj. [from dare.] Bold; adventurous; fearless; courageous;
intrepid; brave; stout.

The last Georgick has indeed many metaphors, but not so daring as this; for human thoughts and passions may be more naturally ascribed to a bee than to an inanimate plant.

ADDISON'S ESSAYS ON THE GEORGICKS.

The song too daring, and the theme too great. PRIOR.

Grieve not, O daring prince! that noble heart. POPE.

DA'RINGLY. adv. [from daring.]

Too daringly upon the foe did press.*

HALIFAX.

DATE. n.s. [datte, Fr. from datum,
Latin.]

1. The time at which a letter is written, marked at the end or the beginning.

2. The time at which any event happened.

3. The time stipulated when any thing shall be done.

*His days and times are past,
And my reliance on his fracted dates
Has smit my credit.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TIMON.

*My father's promise ties me not to time;
And bonds, without a date, they say are void.* DRYDEN.

4. End; conclusion.

*What time would spare, from steel receives its date;
And monuments, like men, submit to fate.*

POPE.

5. Duration; continuance.

*Could the declining of this fate, O friend,
Our date to immortality extend?*

DENHAM.

*Then raise,
From the conflagrant mass, purg'd, and refin'd,
New heav'ns, new earth, ages of endless
date,
Founded in righteousness.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

6. [from dactylus.] The fruit of the date-tree.

Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

— *They call for dates and quinces in the
pastry.* SHAKESPEARE.

To DAWN. v.n. [supposed by the etymologists to have been originally to dayen, or advance towards day.]

1. To grow luminous; to begin to grow light.

*I have been troubled in my sleep this night;
But dawning day new comfort hath inspir'd.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TITUS ANDRONICUS.

As it began to dawn, towards the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene to see the sepulchre.

Aurora dawn'd, and Phæbus shin'd in vain. POPE'S ODYSSEY.

2. To glimmer obscurely.

A Romanist, from the very first dawning of any notions in his understanding, hath this principle constantly inculcated, viz. that he must believe as the church. LOCKE.

3. To begin, yet faintly; to give some promises of lustre or eminence.

*While we behold such dauntless worth appear
In dawning youth, and souls so void of fear.* DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

*Thy hand strikes out some free design,
When life awakes and dawns at every line.* POPE.

DAWN. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. The time between the first appearance of light and the sun's rise, reckoned from the time that the sun comes within eighteen degrees of the horizon.

*Then on to-morrow's dawn your care employ,
To search the land, and where the cities lie,
And what the men; but give this day to joy.* DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

2. Beginning; first rise.

These tender circumstances diffuse a dawn of serenity over the soul. POPE.

*But such their guiltless passion was,
As in the dawn of time inform'd the heart
Of innocence, and undissembling truth.*

THOMSON'S SUMMER.

To DAZE. v.a. [dwæes, Saxon.] To overpower with light; to strike with too strong lustre; to hinder the act of seeing by too much light suddenly introduced.

*They smote the glistening armies as they stand,
With quiv'ring beams, which daz'd the wond'ring eye.*

FAIRFAX, B. I. STANZA 73.

Poor human kind, all daz'd in open day,

Err after bliss, and blindly miss their way.
 DRYDEN.

DEAD-DOING. participial adj. [dead and do.] Destructive; killing; mischievous; having the power to make dead.

*Hold, O dear lord, your dead-doing hand;
 Then loud he cry'd, I am your humble
 thrall.* FAIRY QUEEN.

*They never care how many others
 They kill, without regard of mothers,
 Or wives or children, so they can Make up some fierce, dead-doing man.*
 HUDIBRAS, P. I. CAN. 11.

DEAD-RECKONING. n.s. [a sea-term.] That estimation or conjecture which the seamen make of the place where a ship is, by keeping an account of her way by the log, by knowing the course they have steered by the compass, and by rectifying all with allowance for drift or lee-way; so that this reckoning is without any observation of the sun, moon, and stars, and is to be rectified as often as any good observation can be had.

DEALBA'TION. n.s. [dealbatio, Lat.] The act of bleaching or whitening; rendering things white, which were not so before: a word which is now almost grown into disuse.

ibility of our decayed natures.*

GLANVILLE.

DECE'PTIBLE. adj. [from deceit.] Liable to be deceived; open to imposture; subject to fraud.

The first and father cause of common error, is the common infirmity of human nature; of whose deceptible condition,

perhaps, there should not need any other eviction than the frequent errors we shall ourselves commit. BROWN.

DECE'PTION. n.s. [deceptio, Latin.]

1. The act or means of deceiving; cheat; fraud; fallacy.

Being thus divided from truth in themselves, they are yet farther removed by advenient deception.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

All deception is a misapplying of those signs, which, by compact or institution, were made the means of mens signifying or conveying their thoughts.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

2. The state of being deceived.

*Reason, not impossibly, may meet
Some specious object by the foe suborn'd,
And fall into deception unaware.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

DECE'PTIOUS. adj. [from deceit.] Deceitful; apt to deceive.

*Yet there is a credence in my heart,
That doth invert th' attest of eyes and
ears;*

oratory, and declaim aloud on the praise of goodness.* WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT.

DECLINA'TION. n.s. [declinatio,
Latin.]

1. Descent; change from a better to a worse state; decay.<sup>75</sup>

The queen, hearing of the declination of a monarchy, took it so ill, as she would never after hear of his suit.

BACON, ESSAY 23.

*Hope waits upon the flow'ry prime;
And Summer, though it be less gay,
Yet is not look'd on as a time
Of declination or decay.* WALLER.

2. The act of bending down; as, a decli-nation of the head.

3. Variation from rectitude; oblique motion; obliquity.

Supposing there were a declination of atoms, yet will it not effect what they intend; for then they do all decline, and so there will be no more concourse than if they did perpendicularly descend.

RAY ON THE CREATION.

This declination of atoms in their descent, was itself either necessary or voluntary.
BENTLEY.

4. Variation from a fixed point.

There is no declination of latitude, nor variation of the elevation of the pole, notwithstanding what some have asserted.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

5. [In navigation.] The variation of the needle from the true meridian of any place to the East or West.

plane, if accounted from the North or South. Harris.

DECO'RUM. n.s. [Latin.] Decency; behaviour contrary to licentiousness,
contrary to levity; seemliness.

*If your master
Would have a queen his beggar, you must tell him,
That majesty, to keep decorum, must
No less beg than a kingdom.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND
CLEOPATRA.

I am far from suspecting simplicity, which is bold to trespass in points of decorum.
WOTTON.

*Beyond the fix'd and settled rules
Of vice and virtue in the schools,
The better sort should set before 'em
A grace, a manner, a decorum.* PRIOR.

*Gentlemen of the army should be, at least,
obliged to external decorum: a profligate life and character should not be a means of advancement.* SWIFT.

*He kept with princes due decorum;
Yet never stood in awe before 'em.*
SWIFT.

DECO'YDUCK. n.s. A duck that

Of God ordain'd them: his creating hand
Nothing imperfect or deficient left.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

Figures are either simple or mixed: the simple be either circular or angular; and of circular, either complete, as circles, or deficient, as ovals.

WOTTON'S ARCHITECTURE.

Neither Virgil nor Homer were deficient in any of the former beauties.

DRYDEN'S FABLES, PREFACE.

Several views, postures, stands, turns, limitations and exceptions, and several other thoughts of the mind, for which we have either none, or very deficient names, are diligently to be studied. LOCKE.

DEFI'CIENT Verbs. See DEFEC-TIVE Verbs.

That no man go beyond and defraud his brother in any matter, because that the Lord is the avenger of all such, as we also have forewarned you and testified.

BIBLE THESSALONIANS, IV. 6.

*My son, defraud not the poor of his living,
and make not the needy eyes to wait long.*

BIBLE ECCLESIASTICUS, IV. 1.

*They seem, after a sort, even to mourn, as being injured and defrauded of their right, when places, not sanctified as they are,
prevent them unnecessarily in that pre-eminence and honour.*

HOOKE, B. V. S. 16.

*Then they, who brothers better claim
disown,*

*Expel their parents, and usurp the throne;
Defraud their clients, and, to lucre sold,
Sit brooding on unprofitable gold.*

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID, 6.

*But now he seiz'd Briseis' heav'nly charms,
And of my valour's prize defrauds my arms.* POPE'S ILIAD.

There is a portion of our lives which every wise man may justly reserve for his own particular use, without defrauding his native country.

DRYDEN'S DEDICATION TO KING ARTHUR.

To DEGRA'DE. v.a. [degrader, French.]

1. To put one from his degree; to deprive him of his office, dignity, or title.

He should

Be quite degraded, like a hedgeborn swain, That doth presume to boast of gentle blood. SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

2. To lessen; to diminish the value of.

Nor shalt thou, by descending to assume Man's nature, lessen or degrade thine own.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

Degraded.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. VIII.

L. 551.

DEGRE'E. n.s. [degré, French, from gradus, Latin.]

1. Quality; rank; station; place of dignity.

Surely men of low degree are vanity, and men of high degree are a lie: to be laid in the balance, they are altogether lighter than vanity. BIBLE PSALMS, LXII. 9.

*It was my fortune, common to that age,
To love a lady fair, of great degree,
The which was born of noble parentage,
And set in highest seat of dignity.*

FAIRY QUEEN, B. II. CANT. 4.

I embrace willingly the ancient received course and conveniency of that discipline, which teacheth inferior degrees and orders in the church of God.

HOOKER'S DEDICATION.

Well then, Coleville is your name; a knight is your degree, and your place the dale.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV. P. II.

Degree being vizarded,

Th' unworthiest shews as fairly in the mask. SHAKESPEARE.

*This noble youth to madness lov'd a dame
Of high degree, Honoria was her name.*

DRYDEN.

Farmers in degree,

He a good husband, a good housewife she.

DRYDEN.

But is no rank, no station, no degree,

From this contagious taint of sorrow free?

PRIOR.

2. The state and condition in which a thing is.<sup>76</sup>

The book of wisdom noteth degrees of idolatry, making that of worshipping petty and vile idols more gross than simply the worshipping of the creature.

BACON'S HOLY WAR.

3. A step or preparation to any thing.

Her first degree was by setting forth her beauties, truly in nature not to be disliked, but as much advanced to the eye as abased to the judgment by art. SIDNEY, B. II.

Which sight the knowledge of myself might bring,

Which to true wisdom is the first degree.

DAVIES.

4. Order of lineage; descent of family.

*King Latinus, in the third degree,
Had Saturn author of his family.*

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID. B. VII. L. 72.

5. The orders or classes of the angels.

The several degrees of angels may probably have larger views, and be endowed with capacities able to set before them, as in one picture, all their past knowledge at once.

LOCKE.

6. Measure; proportion.

If you come to separate them, and that all the parts are equally heard as loud as one another, they will stun you to that degree, that you would fancy your ears were torn in pieces. DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

Poesy

Admits of no degrees; but must be still Sublimely good, or despicably ill.

ROSCOMMON.

7. [In geometry.] The three hundred and sixtieth part of the circumference of a circle. The space of one degree in the heavens is accounted to answer to sixty miles.

In minds and manners, twins oppos'd we see;

In the same sign, almost the same degree.

DRYDEN'S PERSIUS SATIRES.

To you who live in chill degree,

As map informs, of fifty-three.

DRYDEN'S EPISTLES.

8. [In arithmetick.] A degree consists of three figures, viz. of three places comprehending units, tens and hundreds; so three hundred and sixty-five is a degree.

COCKER'S ARITHMETICK.

9. The division of the lines upon several sorts of mathematical instruments.

10. [In musick.] The intervals of sounds, which are usually marked by little lines. Dictionaries.

11. [In physick and chymistry.] The vehemence or slackness of the hot or cold quality of a plant, mineral, or other mixt body.

The second, third, and fourth degrees of heat are more easily introduced than the first: every one is both a preparative and a step to the next. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

DE'LICES. n.s. pl. [deliciæ, Latin.] Pleasures. This word is merely French.

And now he has pour'd out his idle mind

*In dainty delices and lavish joys,
Having his warlike weapons cast behind,
And flowers in pleasures and vain pleasing toys.* FAIRY QUEEN.

DELI'NQUENCY. n.s. [delinquentia, Latin.] A fault; a failure in duty; a misdeed.

They never punish the greatest and most intolerable delinquency of the tumults, and their excitors. KING CHARLES.

Can

*Thy years determine like the age of man,
That thou should'st my delinquencies
exquire,*

And with variety of tortures tire?
SANDYS'S PARAPHRASE OF JOB.

A delinquent ought to be cited in the place or jurisdiction where the delinquency was committed by him.

AYLIFFE'S PARERGON.

DEMI-DEVIL. n.s. [demi and devil.] Partaking of infernal nature; half a devil.

Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil, Why he hath thus ensnar'd my soul and body? SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

DEMI-MAN. n.s. [demi and man.] Half a man. A term of reproach.

We must adventure this battle, lest we perish by the complaints of this barking demi-man.

KNOLLES'S HISTORY OF THE TURKS.

DEMI'SE. n.s. [from demetre, demis, demise, French.] Death; decease. It is seldom used but in formal and ceremonious language.

About a month before the demise of queen Anne, the author retired. SWIFT.

DEMO'CRACY. n.s. [δημοκρατία.] One of the three forms of government; that in which the sovereign power is neither lodged in one man, nor in the nobles, but in the collective body of the people.

While many of the servants, by industry and virtue, arrive at riches and esteem, then the nature of the government inclines to a democracy. TEMPLE.

The majority having the whole power of the community, may employ all that power in making laws, and executing those laws; and there the form of the government is a perfect democracy. LOCKE.

DEMONO'LOGY. n.s. [δαίμων and λόγος.] Discourse of the nature of devils. Thus king James entitled his book concerning witches.

DEMONSTRA'TION. n.s. [demonstratio, Latin.]

1. The highest degree of deducible or argumental evidence; the strongest degree of proof; such proof as not only evinces the position proved to be true, but shews the contrary position to be absurd and impossible.

What appeareth to be true by strong and invincible demonstration, such as wherein it is not by any way possible to be deceived, thereunto the mind doth necessarily assent. HOOKER.

Where the agreement or disagreement of any thing is plainly and clearly perceived, it is called demonstration. LOCKE.

2. Indubitable evidence of the senses or reason.

Which way soever we turn ourselves, we are encountered with clear evidences and sensible demonstrations of a Deity.
TILLOTSON.

DENSE. adj. [densus, Latin.] Close; compact; approaching to solidity; having small interstices between the constituent particles.

The cause of cold is the density of the body;

for all dense bodies are colder than most other bodies, as metals, stone, glass; and they are longer in heating than softer bodies. BACON.

In the air the higher you go, the less it is compressed, and consequently the less dense it is; and so the upper part is exceedingly thinner than the lower part which we breathe. LOCKE.

To DE'NSHIRE. v.a. A barbarous term of husbandry.

Burning of land, or burn-bating, is commonly called denshiring, that is, Devenshiring or Denbighshiring, because most used or first invented there.

MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

DEO'BSTRUENT. n.s.

[deobstruens, Latin.] A medicine that has the power to resolve viscidities, or to open by any means the animal passages.

We have an enumeration of the several acts of worship required to be performed to images, viz. processions, genuflections, thurifications and deosculations.

STILLINGFLEET.

DEPA'RTMENT. n.s. [departement, French.] Separate allotment; province or business assigned to a particular person.<sup>77</sup>

The Roman fleets, during their command at sea, had their several stations and departments: the most considerable was the Alexandrian fleet, and the second was the African. ARBUTHNOT.

DEPE'NDANT. adj. [from depend.] In the power of another.

On God, as the most high, all inferior causes in the world are dependant.

HOOKER, B. V. S. 23.

DEPE'NDANT. n.s. [from depend.] One who lives in subjection, or at the discretion of another; a retainer.

A great abatement of kindness appears as well in the general dependants, as in the duke himself also, and your daughter.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

For a six-clerk a person recommended a dependant upon him, who paid six thousand pounds ready money.

CLARENDON.

His dependants shall quickly become his proselytes.

SOUTH.

DEPE'NDENCE, DEPE'NDENCY. n.s. [from depend, Latin. This word, with many others of the same termination, are indifferently written with ance or ence, ancy or ency, as the authors intended to derive them from the Latin or French.]

1. A thing or person at the disposal or discretion of another.

We invade the rights of our neighbours, not upon account of covetousness, but of dominion, that we may create dependencies. COLLIER ON PRIDE.

2. State of being subordinate, or subject in some degree to the discretion of another; the contrary to sovereignty.

*Let me report to him
Your sweet dependency, and you shall find A conqu'ror that will pray in aid for kindness,
Where he for grace is kneel'd to.*
SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND
CLEOPATRA.

At their setting out they must have their commission, or letters patents from the king, that so they may acknowledge their dependency upon the crown of England.
BACON TO VILLIERS.

3. That which is not principal; that which is subordinate.

We speak of the sublunary worlds, this earth, and its dependencies, which rose out of a chaos about six thousand years ago.
BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

4. Concatination; connexion; rise of consequents from premises.

*Her madness hath the oddest frame of sense;
Such a dependency of thing on thing,
As e'er I heard in madness.*
SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

5. Relation of any thing to another, as of an effect to its cause.

I took pleasure to trace out the cause of effects, and the dependence of one thing upon another in the visible creation.
BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

6. Trust; reliance; confidence.

The expectation of the performance of our desire, is that we call dependence upon him for help and assistance.
STILLINGFLEET.

DEPE'NDENT. adj. [dependens, Latin. This, as many other words of like termination, are written with ent or ant, as they are supposed to flow from the Latin or French.]<sup>78</sup> Hanging down.

In the time of Charles the Great, and long since, the whole furs in the tails were dependent; but now that fashion is left, and the spots only worn, without the tails.
PEACHAM.

DEPE'NDENT. n.s. [from dependens, Latin.] One subordinate; one at the discretion or disposal of another.

We are indigent, defenceless beings; the creatures of his power, and the dependents of his providence. ROGERS.

DEPORTA'TION. n.s. [deportatio, Latin.]

1. Transportation; exile into a remote part of the dominion, with prohibition to change the place of residence.
2. Exile in general.

An abjuration, which is a deportation for ever into a foreign land, was ancientsly with us a civil death. AYLIFFE'S PARERGON.

To DEPU'RE. v.a. [depurer, French.]

1. To cleanse; to free from impurities.
2. To purge; to free from some noxious quality.

It produced plants of such imperfection and harmful quality, as the waters of the general flood could not so wash out or depure, but that the same defection hath had continuance in the very generation and nature of mankind. RALEIGH.

To DEQUA'NTITATE. v.a. [from de and quantitas, Latin.] To diminish the quantity of.

This we affirm of pure gold; for that which is current, and passeth in stamp amongst us, by reason of its allay, which is a proportion of silver or copper mixed therewith, is actually dequantitated by fire, and possibly by frequent extinction.
BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. II. C. 2.

DE'SCANT. n.s. [discanto, Italian.]

1. A song or tune composed in parts.

*Nay, now you are too flat,
And mar the concord with too harsh a descant.* SHAKESPEARE.

*The wakeful nightingale
All night long her amorous descant sung.*
MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

2. A discourse; a disputation; a disquisition branched out into several divisions or heads. It is commonly used as a word of censure, or contempt.

*Look you get a prayer-book in your hand,
And stand between two churchmen, good
my lord;
For on that ground I'll build a holy descant.*

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

Such kindness would supplant our unkind reportings, and severe descants upon our brethren.

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE.

DESE'RVER. n.s. [from deserve.] A man who merits rewards. It is used, I think, only in a good sense.

*Their love is never link'd to the deserver,
'Till his deserts are pass'd.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND
CLEOPATRA.

Heavy, with some high minds, is an overweight of obligation; or otherwise great deservers do perchance grow intolerable presumers. WOTTON.

Emulation will never be wanting amongst poets, when particular rewards and prizes are proposed to the best deservers.

DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY, PREFACE.

DESI'GNEDLY. adv. [from design.] Purposely; intentionally; by design or purpose; not ignorantly; not inadvertently; not fortuitously.

The next thing is sometimes designedly to put them in pain; but care must be taken that this be done when the child is in good humour. LOCKE.

Uses made things; that is to say, some things were made designedly, and on purpose, for such an use as they serve to.

RAY ON THE CREATION.

DESK. n.s. [disch, a table, Dutch.] An inclining table for the use of writers or readers, made commonly with a box or repository under it.

*Tell her in the desk,
That's cover'd o'er with Turkish tapestry,
There is a purse of ducats.*

SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY OF ERROURS.

He is drawn leaning on a desk, with his bible before him. WALTON'S ANGLER.

I have also been obliged to leave unfinished in my desk the heads of two essays.

POPE.

*Not the desk with silver nails,
Nor bureau of expence,
Nor standish well jappann'd, avails
To writing of good sense.* SWIFT.

DESPI'SABLE. adj. [from despise.] Contemptible; despicable; regarded with contempt. A word scarcely used but in low conversation.

I am extremely obliged to you for taking notice of a poor old distressed courtier, commonly the most despicable thing in the world. ARBUTHNOT TO POPE.

DE'SPOT. n.s. [δήσποτις.] An absolute prince; one that governs with unlimited authority. This word is not in use, except as applied to some Dacian prince; as, the despot of Servia.

To DESPU'MATE. v.n. [despumo, Latin.] To throw off parts in foam; to froth; to work.

DESPUMA'TION. n.s. [from despumate.] The act of throwing off excrementitious parts in scum or foam.

DESTINA'TION. n.s. [from destinate.] The purpose for which any thing is appointed; the ultimate design.

The passages through which spirits are conveyed to the members, being almost infinite, and each of them drawn through so many meanders, wherein other spirits are a journeying, it is wonderful that they should perform their regular destinations without losing their way.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

There is a great variety of apprehensions and fancies of men, in the destination and application of things to several ends and uses. HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

DE'SULTORY, DESULTORIOUS. adj. [desultorius, Lat.]

Roving from thing to thing; unsettled; immethodical; unconstant.<sup>79</sup>

'Tis not for a desultory thought to atone for a lewd course of life, nor for any thing but the superinducing of a virtuous habit upon a vitious one, to qualify an effectual conversion. L'ESTRANGE.

Let but the least trifle cross his way, and his desultorious fancy presently takes the scent, leaves the unfinished and half-mangled notion, and skips away in pursuit of the new game. NORRIS.

Take my desultory thoughts in their native order, as they rise in my mind, without being reduced to rules, and marshalled according to art.

FELTON ON THE CLASSICKS.

To DET'ER. v.a. [deterreo, Latin.] To discourage from any thing;<sup>80</sup> to fright from any thing.

I never yet the tragick strain assay'd, Deterr'd by thy inimitable maid.

WALLER.

Many and potent enemies tempt and deter us from our duty, yet our case is not hard, so long as we have a greater strength on our side. TILLOTSON, SERMON 6.

Beauty or unbecomingness are of more force to draw or deter imitation, than any discourses which can be made to them.

LOCKE.

The ladies may not be deterred from corresponding with me by this method.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN, NO. 114.

*My own face deters me from my glass;
And Kneller only shews what Celia was.*

PRIOR.

DETE'RMENMENT. n.s. [from deter.]

Cause of discouragement; that by which one is deterred.<sup>81</sup>

This will not be thought a discouragement unto spirits, which endeavour to advantage nature by art; nor will the ill success of some be made a sufficient determent unto others.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. VI. C. 8.

These are not all the determents that opposed my obeying you. BOYLE.

To DETE'RGE. v.a. [detergo, Latin.]

To cleanse a sore; to purge any part from feculence or obstructions.

Consider the part and habit of body, and add or diminish your simples as you design to deterge or incarn. WISEMAN.

Sea salt preserves bodies, through which it passeth, from corruption, and it detergeth the vessels, and keeps the fluids from putrefaction.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

DETE'RGENT. adj. [from deterge.]

That which cleanses.

The food ought to be nourishing and detergent. ARBUTHNOT.

DETERRA'TION. n.s. [de and terra, Latin; deterrer, French.]

Discovery of any thing by removal of the earth that hides it; the act of unburying.

This concerns the raising of new mountains, deterrations or the devolution of earth down upon the valleys, from the hills and higher grounds.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

DEUCE. n.s. [deux, French.]

1. Two: A word used in games.

*You are a gentleman and a gamester; then,
I am sure, you know how much the gross sum of deuce ace amounts to.*

SHAKESPEARE.

2. The devil. See DEUSE.

To DEVE'LOP. v.a. [developer, French.] To disengage from something that enfolds and conceals; to disentangle; to clear from its covering.

*Take him to develop, if you can,
And hew the block off, and get out the man.* DUNCIAD.

DE'VIOUS. adj. [devious, Latin.]

1. Out of the common track.

*Creusa kept behind: by choice we stray
Through ev'ry dark and ev'ry devious way.* DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

In this minute devious subject I have been necessitated to explain myself in more words, than to some few may seem needful.

HOLDER'S ELEMENTS OF SPEECH.

2. Wandering; roving; rambling.

*Every muse,
And every blooming pleasure, wait without
To bless the wildly devious morning walk.*
THOMSON'S SUMMER.

3. Erring; going astray from rectitude.

One devious step, at first setting out, frequently leads a person into a wilderness of doubt and error. CLARISSA.<sup>82</sup>

DEUSE. n.s. [more properly than deuce, Junius, from Dusius, the name of a certain species of evil spirits.] The devil: a ludicrous word.

*'Twas the prettiest prologue, as he wrote it;
Well, the deuce take me if I ha'nt forgot it.* CONGREVE.

DEW-BURNING. adj. [from dew and burning.] The meaning of this compound is doubtful. Perhaps it alludes to the sparkling of dew.

He, now to prove his late renewed might,

*High-brandishing his bright dew-burning blade,
Upon his crested scalp so sore did smite,
That to the scull a yawning wound it made.* FAIRY QUEEN.

DIABE'TES. n.s. [διαβάτης.] A morbid copiousness of urine; a fatal colliquation by the urinary passages.

An increase of that secretion may accompany the general colliquations; as in fluxes, hectic sweats and coughs, diabetes, and other consumptions.

DERHAM'S PHYSICO-THEOLOGY.

DI'AL. n.s. [diale, Skinner.] A plate marked with lines, where a hand or shadow shews the hour.

*O, gentlemen, the time of life is short:
To spend that shortness basely were too
long,*

*Though life did ride upon a dial's point,
Still ending at th' arrival of an hour.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

If the motion be very slow, we perceive it not: we have no sense of the accretive motion of plants or animals; and the sly shadow steals away upon the dial, and the quickest eye can discover no more but that it is gone.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA,
C. 11.

DIAL-PLATE. n.s. [dial and plate.]
That on which hours or lines are marked.

He tells us that the two friends, being each of them possessed of one of these needles, made a kind of dial-plate, inscribing it with the four and twenty letters, in the same manner as the hours of the day are marked upon the ordinary dial-plate.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 241.

DIALE'CT. n.s. [διάλεκτος.]

1. The subdivision of a language; as the Attic, Doric, Ionic, Æolic dialects.

2. Stile; manner of expression.

When themselves do practise that whereof

they write, they change their dialect; and those words they shun, as if there were in them some secret sting.

HOOKER, B. V. S. 22.

3. Language; speech.

In her youth

*There is a prone and speechless dialect,
Such as moves men.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

If the conferring of a kindness did not bind the person, upon whom it was conferred, to the returns of gratitude, why, in the universal dialect of the world, are kindnesses still called obligations?

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

DIA'LLING. n.s. [from dial.] The sciaterick science; the knowledge of shadow; the act of constructing dials on which the shadow may shew the hour.

DIA'LIST. n.s. [from dial.] A constructor of dials.

Scientifick dialists, by the geometrick considerations of lines, have found out rules to mark out the irregular motion of the shadow in all latitudes, and on all planes.

MOXON.

DI'APER. n.s. [diapre, French, of uncertain etymology.]

1. Linen cloth woven in flowers, and other figures.<sup>83</sup>

*Not any damsel, which her vaunteth most
In skilful knitting of soft silken twine;
Nor any weaver, which his work doth boast
In diaper, in damask, or in lyne,
Might in their diverse cunning ever dare
With this so curious net-work to compare.*

SPENSER.

2. A napkin; a towel.

Let one attend him with a silver bason Full of rose-water, and bestrew'd with flowers;

Another bear the ewer, a third a diaper.

SHAKESPEARE.

To DI'APER. v.a. [from the noun.]

1. To variegate; to diversify; to flower.

For fear the stones her tender foot should wrong,

The ground he strew'd with flowers all along,

And diaper'd like the discoloured mead.

SPENSER.

Flora useth to cloath our grand-dame earth with a new livery, diapered with various flowers, and chequered with delightful objects. HOWEL'S VOCAL FORREST.

2. To draw flowers upon cloaths.

*If you diaper upon folds, let your work be broken, and taken, as it were, by the half;
for reason tells you, that your fold must cover somewhat unseen.*

PEACHAM ON DRAWING.

DI'BSTONE.<sup>84</sup> n.s. A little stone which children throw at another stone.

I have seen little girls exercise whole hours together, and take abundance of pains to be expert at dibstones, as they call it.

LOCKE.

DI'CKENS. A kind of adverbial exclamation, importing, as it seems, much the same with the devil; but I know not whence derived.

*Where had you this pretty weathercock?
— I cannot tell what the dickens his name is my husband had him of.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

What a dickens does he mean by a trivial sum?

But han't you found it, sir?

CONGREVE'S OLD BATCHELOR.

DI'CTION. n.s. [diction, French; dictio, Latin.] Stile; language; expression.

There appears in every part of his diction, or expression, a kind of noble and bold purity. DRYDEN.

DI'CTIONARY. n.s. [dictionarium, Latin.] A book containing the words of any language in alphabetical order, with explanations of their meaning; a lexicon; a vocabulary; a word-book.

Some have delivered the polity of spirits, and left an account that they stand in awe of charms, spells, and conjurations; that they are afraid of letters and characters, notes and dashes, which, set together, do signify nothing; and not only in the dictionary of man, but in the subtler vocabulary of satan.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. I. C. 10.

Is it such a horrible fault to translate simulacra images? I see what a good thing it is to have a good catholick dictionary.

STILLINGFLEET.

An army, or a parliament, is a collection of men; a dictionary, or nomenclature, is a collection of words. WATTS.

DIET-DRINK. n.s. [diet and drink.] Medicated liquors; drink brewed with medicinal ingredients.

The observation will do that better than the lady's diet-drinks, or apothecary's medicines. LOCKE.

DI'FFICIL. adj. [difficilis, Latin.]
1. Difficult; hard; not easy; not obvious.
Little used.

That that should give motion to an unwieldy bulk, which itself hath neither bulk nor motion, is of as difficil apprehension as any mystery in nature.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA, C. 4.

*Latin was not more difficil,
Than to a blackbird 'tis to whistle.*
HUDIBRAS.

2. Scrupulous; hard to be persuaded.

The cardinal finding the pope difficil in granting the dispensation, doth use it as a principal argument, concerning the king's merit towards that see, that he had touched none of those deniers which had been levied by popes in England. BACON.

DI'FFICILNESS. n.s. [from difficil.] Difficulty to be persuaded; incomppliance; impracticability.<sup>85</sup>

There be that in their nature do not affect the good of others: the lighter sort of malignity turneth but to a crossness, or forwardness, or aptness to oppose, or difficilness, or the like; but the deeper sort, to envy and mere mischief. BACON'S ESSAYS.

DI'FFICULT. adj. [difficilis, Latin.]

1. Hard; not easy; not facil.

It is difficult in the eyes of this people.
BIBLE ZACHARY.

2. Troublesome; vexatious.

3. Hard to please; peevish; morose.

DI'FFICULTLY. adv. [from difficult.] Hardly; with difficulty.

A man who has always indulged himself in the full enjoyment of his station, will difficultly be persuaded to think any methods unjust that offer to continue it.
ROGERS'S SERMONS.

DI'FFICULTY. n.s. [from difficult; difficultè,<sup>86</sup> French.]

1. Hardness; contrariety to easiness or facility.

The religion which, by this covenant, we engage ourselves to observe, is a work of labour and difficulty; a service that requires our greatest care and attention to the discharge of it. ROGERS, SERMON 13.

2. That which is hard to accomplish; that which is not easy.

They mistake difficulties for impossibilities: a pernicious mistake certainly; and the more pernicious, for that men are seldom convinced of it, 'till their convictions do them no good. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

3. Distress; opposition.

*Thus, by degrees, he rose to Jove's imperial seat:
Thus difficulties prove a soul legitimately great.* DRYDEN.

4. Perplexity in affairs; uneasiness of circumstances.

They lie at present under some difficulties, by reason of the emperor's displeasure, who has forbidden the importation of their manufactures. ADDISON ON ITALY.

5. Objection; cavil.

Men should consider, that raising difficulties concerning the mysteries in religion, cannot make them more wise, learned, or virtuous. SWIFT.

DI'FFORM. adj. [from forma, Latin.] Contrary to uniform; having parts of different structure; dissimilar; unlike; irregular; as a difform flower, one of which the leaves are unlike each other.

The unequal refractions of difform rays proceed not from any contingent irregularities; such as are veins, an uneven polish, or fortuitous position of the pores of glass. NEWTON.

DIGLADIA'TION. n.s. [digladiatio, Latin.] A combat with swords; any quarrel or contest.

Aristotle seems purposely to intend the cherishing of controversial digladiations, by his own affection of an intricate obscurity. GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA, C. 19.

DI'GNITARY. n.s. [from dignas, Latin.] A clergyman advanced to some dignity; to some rank above that of a parochial priest.

If there be any dignitaries, whose preferences are perhaps not liable to the accusation of superfluity, they may be persons of superior merit. SWIFT.

DI'LATORY. adj. [dilatoire, French; dilatorius, Lat.] Tardy; slow; given to procrastination; addicted to delay; sluggish; loitering.

An inferior council, after former tedious suits in a higher court, would be but dilatory, and so to little purpose.

HAYWARD.

What wound did ever heal but by degrees? Thou know'st we work by wit, and not by witchcraft;

And wit depends on dilatory time.

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

These cardinals trifle with me: I abhor This dilatory sloth, and tricks of Rome.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

Dilatory fortune plays the jilt

With the brave, noble, honest, gallant man, To throw herself away on fools and knaves. OTWAY'S ORPHEUS.

A dilatory temper commits innumerable cruelties without design.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 469.

DILE'MMA. n.s. [διλημμα.]

1. An argument equally conclusive by contrary suppositions. A young rhetorician applied to an old sophist to be taught the art of pleading, and bargained for a certain reward to be paid, when he should gain a cause. The master sued for his reward, and the scholar endeavoured to elude his claim by a dilemma: If I gain my cause, I shall withhold your pay, because the judge's award will be against you; if I lose it, I may withhold it, because I shall not yet have gained a cause. On the contrary, says the master, if you gain your cause, you must pay me, because you are to pay me when you gain a cause; if you lose it, you must pay me, because the judges will award it.

A dilemma, that bishop Morton the chancellor used, to raise benevolence, some called his fork, and some his crutch.

BACON'S HENRY VII.

Hope, whose weak being ruin'd is Alike if it succeed, and if it miss; Whom good or ill does equally confound, And both the horns of fate's dilemma wound. COWLEY.

2. A difficult or doubtful choice; a vexatious alternative.

*A strong dilemma in a desp'rate case!
To act with infamy, or quit the place.*

SWIFT.

*A dire dilemma; either way I'm sped;
If foes, they write, if friends, they read me dead.* POPE.

DIMI'NUTIVE. n.s. [from the adjective.]

1. A word formed to express littleness; as lapillus, in Latin, a little stone; maisonette, in French, a little house; manniken, in English, a little man.

He afterwards proving a dainty and effeminate youth, was commonly called, by the diminutive of his name, Peterkin or Perkin. BACON'S HENRY VII.

Sim, while but Sim, in good repute did live;

Was then a knave, but in diminutive.

COTTON.

2. A small thing: a sense not now in use.

*Follow his chariot; monster-like, be shewn
For poor'st diminutives, for doits!*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND
CLEOPATRA.

To DINE. v.n. [diner, French.] To eat the chief meal about the middle of the day.

*Perhaps some merchant hath invited him,
And from the mart he's somewhere gone to dinner:*

Good sister, let us dine, and never fret.

SHAKESPEARE.

*Myself, he, and my sister,
To-day did dine together.*

SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY OF ERRORS.

He would dine with him the next day.

CLARENDON.

*Thus, of your heroes and brave boys,
With whom old Homer makes such noise,
The greatest actions I can find,*

Are, that they did their work and din'd.

PRIOR.

DINING-ROOM. n.s. [dine and room.] The principal apartment of the house; the room where entertainments are made.

He went out from the dining-room before he had fallen into error by the intemperance of his meat, or the deluge of drink.

TAYLOR'S RULE OF LIVING HOLY.

DI'NNER. n.s. [diner, French.] The chief meal; the meal eaten about the middle of the day.

Let me not stay a jot for dinner:

Go, get it ready.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

Before dinner and supper, as often as it is convenient, or can be had, let the publick prayers of the church, or some parts of them, be said publickly in the family.

TAYLOR.

*The jolly crew, unmindful of the past,
The quarry share, their plenteous dinner
haste.* DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

Did place them all in order, and compel
To keep themselves within their sundry reigns,*

Together link'd with adamantine chains.

SPENSER.

Your dislikes to whom I would be pleasing,

Do cloud my joys with danger and with sorrow. SHAKESPEARE.

God's grace, that principle of his new birth, gives him continual dislike to sin.

HAMMOND'S PRACTICAL CATECHISM.

Sorrow would have been as silent as thoughts, as severe as philosophy. It would have rested in inward senses, tacit dislikes. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

Our likings or dislikes are founded rather upon humour and fancy than upon reason. L'ESTRANGE.

The jealous man is not angry if you dislike another; but if you find those faults which are in his own character, you discover not only your dislike of another, but of himself. ADDISON.

2. Discord; dissent; disagreement.
This sense is not now in use.

This said Aletes, and a murmur rose That shew'd dislike among the christian peers. FAIRFAX.

To DISLI'KE. v.a. [dis and like.] To disapprove; to regard without affection; to regard with ill-will or disgust.

DISLI'KENESS. n.s. [dis and likeness.] Dissimilitude; not resemblance;
unlikeness.

That which is not designed to represent any thing but itself, can never be capable of a wrong representation, nor mislead us from the true apprehension of any thing by its dislikeness to it; and such, excepting those of substances, are all our own complex ideas. LOCKE.

DISLI'KER. n.s. [from dislike.] A disapprover; one that is not pleased.

There is a point, which whoever can touch, will never fail of pleasing a majority, so great that the dislikers will be forced to fall in with the herd. SWIFT.

To DISMO'RTGAGE. v.a. [dis and mortgage.] To redeem from mortgage.

Lat.] The act of disploding; a sudden burst or dispersion with noise and violence.

To DISPRE'AD. v.a. [dis and spread.] To spread different ways. In this word, and a few others, dis has the same force as in Latin composition, and means, different ways; in different directions.<sup>88</sup>

*As morning sun her beams dispreaden clear,
And in her face fair truth and mercy doth appear.* FAIRY QUEEN.

*Over him, art striving to compare
With nature, did an arbour green dispread,
Framed of wanton ivy, flowing fair,
Through which the fragrant eglantine did spread
His pricking arms, entrail'd with roses red.*
FAIRY QUEEN.

*Above, below, around, with art dispread,
The sure inclosure folds the genial bed.*
POPE'S ODYSSEY.

DISPU'NISHABLE. adj. [dis and punishable.] Without penal restraint.

No leases of any part of the said lands shall ever be made, other than leases for years not exceeding thirty-one, in possession, and not in reversion or remainder, and not dispunishable of waste.
SWIFT'S LAST WILL.

To DISPU'RSE. v.a. [dis and purse.]
To pay; to disburse. It is not certain that the following passage should not be written disburse.

*Many a pound of my own proper store,
Because I would not tax the needy commons,
Have I dispursed to the garrisons,
And never ask'd for restitution.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

DISRE'LISH. n.s. [dis and relish.]

1. Bad taste; nauseousness.

*Oft they assay'd,

acquisition, by varying the object: the same dissatisfaction pursues us through the circle of created goods.* ROGERS, SERMON 5.

DISSA'TISFACTORINESS. n.s. [from dissatisfactory.] Inability to give content.

DISSATISFA'CTORY. adj. [from dissatisfy.] That which is unable to give content.

To DISSE'VER. v.a. [dis and sever.]
In this word the particle dis makes no change in the signification, and therefore the word, though supported by great authorities, ought to be ejected from our language.] To part in two; to break; to divide; to sunder; to separate; to disunite.

Shortly had the storm so dissevered the company, which the day before had tarried together, that most of them never met again, but were swallowed up.

SIDNEY, B. II.

The dissevering of fleets hath been the overthrow of many actions.

RALEIGH'S ESSAYS.

All downright rains dissever the violence of outrageous winds, and level the mountainous billows. RALEIGH.

*Dissever your united strengths,
And part your mingled colours once again.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING JOHN.

*The meeting points the sacred hair dissever
From the fair head, for ever and for ever.*

POPE.

To DI'SSIPATE. v.a. [dissipatus, Latin.]

Of dissipated wealth the poor remains.*

LONDON.

DI'SSOLUTENESS. n.s. [from dissolute.] Looseness; laxity of manners; debauchery.

If we look into the common management, we shall have reason to wonder, in the great dissoluteness of manners which the world complains of, that there are any footsteps at all left of virtue. LOCKE.

To DISSU'NDER. v.a. [dis and sunder. This is a barbarous word. See DISSEVER.] To sunder; to separate.

*But when her draught the sea and earth
dissunder'd,*

The troubl'd bottoms turn'd up, and she thunder'd. CHAPMAN.

DI'STANCE. n.s. [distance, French; distantia, Latin.]

1. Distance is space considered barely in length between any two beings, without considering any thing else between them. LOCKE.

It is very cheap, notwithstanding the great distance between the vineyards and the towns that sell the wine.

ADDISON ON ITALY.

As he lived but a few miles distance from her father's house, he had frequent opportunities of seeing her. ADDISON.

thy stock, thy reverse, thy distance.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF
WINDSOR.

4. Contrariety; opposition.

*Banquo was your enemy,
So is he mine; and in such bloody distance,
That every minute of his being thrusts
Against my near'st of life.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

5. A space marked on the course where horses run.

This was the horse that ran the whole field out of distance, and won the race.

L'ESTRANGE.

6. Space of time.

You must do it by distance of time.

BIBLE 2 ESDRAS, V. 47.

I help my preface by a prescript, to tell that there is ten years distance between one and the other. PRIOR.

7. Remoteness in time either past or future.

We have as much assurance of these things, as things future and at a distance are capable of. TILLOTSON'S SERMONS.

To judge right of blessings prayed for, and yet at a distance, we must be able to know things future. SMALRIDGE'S SERMONS.

8. Ideal disjunction; mental separation.

The qualities that affect our senses are, in the things themselves, so united and blended, that there is no separation, no distance between them. LOCKE.

9. Respect; distant behaviour.

I hope your modesty

Will know, what distance to the crown is due. DRYDEN.

'Tis by respect and distance that authority is upheld. ATTERBURY.

Anger, and just rebuke, and judgment
giv'n.* MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

DISTE'NTION. n.s. [distentio, Latin.]

1. The act of stretching in breadth.

Wind and distention of the bowels are signs of a bad digestion in the intestines; for in dead animals, when there is no digestion at all, the distention is in the greatest extremity. ARBUTHNOT.

2. Breadth; space occupied by the thing distended.

3. The act of separating one part from another; divarication.

Our leggs do labour more in elevation than in distention.

WOTTON'S ARCHITECTURE.

DISVALUA'TION. n.s. [dis and valuation.] Disgrace; diminution of reputation.

What can be more to the disvaluation of the power of the Spaniard, than that eleven thousand English should, within two months, have marched into the heart of his countries?

BACON'S WAR WITH SPAIN.

To DISVA' LUE. v.a. [dis and value.] To undervalue; to set a low price upon.

Her reputation was disvalu'd In levity.

SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

How does your patient, doctor?

— Not so sick, my lord,

As she is troubl'd with thick coming fancies. SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

Children will not take those medicines from the doctor's hand, which they will from a nurse or mother.

GOVERNMENT OF TONGUE.

*To 'pothecaries let the learn'd prescribe,
That men may die without a double bribe:
Let them, but under their superiors, kill,
When doctors first have sign'd the bloody bill. DRYDEN.*

He that can cure by recreation, and make pleasure the vehicle of health, is a doctor at it in good earnest. COLLIER.

In truth, nine parts in ten of those who recovered, owed their lives to the strength of nature and a good constitution, while such a one happened to be the doctor.

SWIFT.

4. Any able or learned man.

The simplest person, that can but apprehend and speak sense, is as much judge of it as the greatest doctor in the school.

DIGBY OF BODIES.

DO'DKIN. n.s. [duytken, Dutch.] A doitkin or little doit; a contemptuous name for a low coin.

I would not buy them for a dodkin.

LILY'S GRAMMAR CONSTRUED.

DOG. n.s. [dogghe, Dutch.]

1. A domestick animal remarkably various in his species; comprising the mastiff, the spaniel, the bulldog, the greyhound, the hound, the terrier, the cur, with many others. The larger sort are used as a guard; the less for sports.

Such smiling rogues as these sooth every passion:

Renegs, affirm, and turn their halcyon beaks

With ev'ry gale and vary of their masters, As knowing nought, like dogs, but following.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

Why should we not think a watch and pistol as distinct species one from another, as a horse and a dog. LOCKE.

The clamour roars of men and boys, and dogs,

Ere the soft fearful people, to the flood Commit their woolly sides.

THOMSON'S SPRING, L. 375.

2. A constellation called Sirius, or Canicula, rising and setting with the sun
during the canicular days, or dog days.

*Among the southern constellations two there are who bear the name of the dog;
the one in sixteen degrees latitude, containing on the left thigh a star of the first magnitude, usually called Procyon, or Anticanus.*

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. IV.

*It parts the twins and crab, the dog divides,
And Argo's keel that broke the frothy tides. CREECH.*

3. A reproachful name for a man.

*I never heard a passion so confus'd,
So strange, outrageous, and so variable,*

As the dog Jew did utter in the streets.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF VENICE.

Beware of dogs, beware of evil workers.

BIBLE PHILIPPIANS, III. 2.

4. To give or send to the DOGS; to throw away. To go to the DOGS; to be ruined, destroyed, or devoured.

Had whole Colepeper's wealth been hops and hogs,

Could he himself have sent it to the dogs?

POPE'S EPISTLES.

5. It is used as the term for the male of several species; as, the dog fox, the dog otter.

If ever I thank any man, I'll thank you; but that they call compliments is like the encounter of two dog apes.

SHAKESPEARE.

6. Dog is a particle added to any thing to mark meanness, or degeneracy, or worthlessness; as dog rose.

DOG-TRICK. n.s. [dog and trick.]

An ill turn; surly or brutal treatment.

Learn better manners, or I shall serve you a dog-trick: come, down upon all four immediately; I'll make you know your rider. DRYDEN'S DON SEBASTIAN.

DO'GBOLT. n.s. [dog and bolt.] Of this word I know not the meaning, unless it be, that when meal or flower is sifted or bolted to a certain degree, the coarser part is called dogbolt, or flower for dogs.

*His only solace was, that now
His dogbolt fortune was so low,
That either it must quickly end,
Or turn about again, and mend.*

HUDIBRAS, P. I. CANT. 3.

DOGCHEAP. adj. [dog and cheap.]

Cheap as dogs meat; cheap as the offal bought for dogs.

Good store of harlots, say you, and dogcheap? DRYDEN.

DOGKE'NNEL. n.s. [dog and kennel.] A little hut or house for dogs.

*A certain nobleman, beginning with a dogkennel, never lived to finish the palace
he had contrived.* DRYDEN.

I am desired to recommend a dogkennel to any that shall want a pack.

TATLER, NO. 62.

DOLL. n.s.

1. A contraction of Dorothy.<sup>89</sup>

2. A little girl's puppet or baby.

DO'LLAR. n.s. [daler, Dutch.] A Dutch and German coin of different value, from about two shillings and sixpence to four and sixpence.

*He disburs'd, at St. Colmeskill isle,
Ten thousand dollars for our gen'ral use.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

DOMI'NICAL. adj. [dominicalis, Latin.] That which notes the Lord's day, or Sunday.

The cycle of the moon serves to shew the epacts, and that of the sun the dominical letter, throughout all their variations.

HOLDER ON TIME.

DOOMSDAY-BOOK. n.s.

[doomsday and book.] A book made by order of William the Conqueror, in which the estates of the kingdom were registered.

The Danes also brought in a reckoning of money by ores, per oras, which is mentioned in doomsday-book.

CAMDEN.

DO'RNICK. n.s. [of Deornick in Flanders, where first made.] A species of linen cloath used in Scotland for the table.

To DORR. v.a. [tor, stupid, Teutonic.] To deafen or stupify with noise. This word I find only in Skinner.

DORR. n.s. [so named probably from the noise which he makes.] A kind of flying insect, remarkable for flying with a loud noise.

The dorr, or hedge-chafer's chief marks are these: his head is small, like that of the common beetle: this and his eyes black: his shoulder-piece, and the middle of his belly, also black; but just under the wing-shells spotted with white. His wing-shells, legs, and the end of his tail, which is long and flat-pointed, of a light chesnut: his breast, especially, covered with a downy hair.

GREW'S MUSÆUM.

DORSI' FEROUS, DORSI-

PAROUS. n.s. [dorsum and fero, or pario, Latin.] Having the property of bearing or bringing forth on the back. It is used of plants that have the seeds on the back of their leaves, as fern; and may be properly used of the American frog, which brings forth young from her back.

DOSE. n.s. [δόσις.]<sup>90</sup>

1. So much of any medicine as is taken at one time. Quincy.

*The too vig'rous dose too fiercely wrought,
And added fury to the strength it brought.*

DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

In a vehement pain of the head he prescribed the juice of the thapsia in warm water, without mentioning the dose.

ARBUTHNOT.

2. As much of any thing as falls to a man's lot.

*No sooner does he peep into
The world, but he has done his doe;
Married his punctual dose of wives,
Is cuckolded, and breaks, or thrives.*

HUDIBRAS, P. II.

3. It is often used of the utmost quantity of strong liquor that a man can swallow. He has his dose, that is, he can carry off no more.

DO'SSIL. n.s. [corrupted from dorsel, something laid upon the part.] A pledget; a nodule or lump of lint, to be laid on a sore.

Her complaints put me upon dressing with such medicaments as basilicon, with præcipitate, upon a dossil. WISEMAN.

DO'TARD. n.s. [from dote.] A man whose age has impaired his intellects; a man in his second childhood; called in some provinces a twichild.

*Dotard, said he, let be thy deep advise,
Seems that through many years thy wits thee fail,*

*And that weak old hath left thee nothing
wise,*

Else never should thy judgement be so frail. FAIRY QUEEN.

*The sickly dotard wants a wife,
To draw off his last dregs of life.* PRIOR.

DOUBLE is much used in composition, generally for doubly, two ways; as double edged, having an edge on each side; or for twice the number or quantity, as double died, twice died.

To DOUBLE-DIE. v.a. [double and die.] To die twice over.

Yes, I'll to the royal bed,

Where first the mysteries of our love were acted,

And double-die it with imperial crimson.

DRYDEN AND LEE'S OEDIPUS.

DOUBLE-MINDED. adj. [from double and mind.] Deceitful; insidious.<sup>91</sup>

A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways. BIBLE JAMES, I. 8.

DOUBLE-TONGUED. adj. [double and tongue.] Deceitful; giving contrary accounts of the same thing.

The deacons must be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre.

BIBLE 1 TIMOTHY, III. 8.

*For much she fear'd the Tyrians,
double-tongu'd,
And knew the town to Juno's care
belong'd.* DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

DO'VETAIL. n.s. [dove and tail.] A form of joining two bodies together, where that which is inserted has the form of a wedge reversed, and therefore cannot fall out.

DO'WNFAL. n.s. [down and fall.]

1. Ruin; calamity; fall from rank or state.

*Why do'st thou say king Richard is depos'd?
Dar'st thou, thou little better thing than earth,
Divine his downfal?*

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD II.

We have seen some, by the ways by which they had designed to rise uncontrollably, to have directly procured their utter downfal.
SOUTH'S SERMONS.

2. A sudden fall, or body of things falling.

*Each downfal of a flood the mountains pour
From their rich bowels, rolls a silver stream.* DRYDEN'S INDIAN EMPEROR.

3. Destruction of fabricks.

*Not more aghast the matrons of renown,
When tyrant Nero burn'd th' imperial
town,
Shriek'd for the downfal in a doleful cry,
For which their guiltless lords were doom'd to die.* DRYDEN.

DO'WNHIL. n.s. [down and hill.] Declivity; descent.

*Heavy the third, and stiff, he sinks apace;
And though 'tis downhil all, but creeps along the race.* DRYDEN.

DO'WNLOOKED. adj. [down and look.] Having a dejected countenance; gloomy; sullen; melancholy.

Jealousy suffus'd, with jaundice in her eyes,

*Discolouring all she view'd, in tawney
dress'd;*

Downlook'd, and with a cuckow on her fist. DRYDEN'S FABLES.

DO'WNSITTING. n.s. [down and sit.] Rest; repose; the act of sitting down, or going to rest.

Thou knowest my downsitting and mine uprising; thou understandest my thoughts afar off. BIBLE PSALMS, CXXXIX. 2.

DRAD. adj. [for dread, or the preterit of To dread.] Terrible; formidable; dreaded.

*Th' utmost sand-breach they shortly fetch,
Whilst the drad danger does behind remain.* FAIRY QUEEN.

DRA'MA. n.s. [δράμα.] A poem accommodated to action; a poem in which the action is not related, but represented; and in which therefore such rules are to be observed as make the representation probable.

Many rules of imitating nature Aristotle drew from Homer, which he fitted to the drama; furnishing himself also with observations from the theatre, when it flourished under Eschylus, Euripides, and Sophocles.
DRYDEN'S ÆNEID, DEDICATION.

DRAMA'TICAL, DRAMATICK. adj. [from drama.]

Represented by action; not narrative.

I hope to make it appear, that in the great dramatick poem of nature, is a necessity of introducing a God. BENTLEY.

DRA'STICK. adj. [δράστικος.] Powerful; vigorous; efficacious.

It is used of a medicine that works with speed; as jalap, scammony, and the stronger purges. Quincy.

DRAUGHTHOUSE. n.s. [draught and house.] A house in which filth is deposited.

And they brake down the image of Baal,

and brake down the house of Baal, and made it a draughthouse.

BIBLE 2 KINGS, X. 27.

DRAWBACK. n.s. [draw and back.] Money paid back for ready payment, or any other reason.

In poundage and drawbacks I lose half my rent;

Whatever they give me, I must be content.

SWIFT.

DRA'WBRIDGE. n.s. [draw and bridge.] A bridge made to be lifted up, to hinder or admit communication at pleasure.

Half the buildings were raised on the continent, and the other half on an island, continued together by a drawbridge.

CAREW'S SURVEY OF CORNWAL.

DRA'WINGROOM. n.s. [draw and room.]

1. The room in which company assembles at court.

What you heard of the words spoken of you in the drawing-room was not true: the sayings of princes are generally as ill related as the sayings of wits. POPE.

2. The company assembled there.

DRA'YPLOUGH. n.s. [dray and plough.] A plough of a particular kind.

The drayplough is the best plough in Winter for miry clays.

MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

DRA'ZEL. n.s. [perhaps corrupted from drossel, the scum or dross of human nature; or from droslesse, French, a whore.]

A low, mean, worthless wretch.

As the devil uses witches,

To be their cully for a space,

That, when the time's expir'd, the drazels For ever may become his vassals.

HUDIBRAS, P. III. CANT. 1.

DRE'GGY. adj. [from dregs.]

Containing dregs; consisting of dregs; muddy; feculent.

These num'rous veins, such is the curious frame,

Receive the pure insinuating stream;

But no corrupt or dreggy parts admit,

To form the blood, or feed the limbs unfit.

BLACKMORE'S CREATION.

SWIFT'S RULES TO SERVANTS.

DRI'BLET. n.s. [from dribble.] A small sum; odd money in a sum.

*Twelve long years of exile born,
Twice twelve we number'd since his blest return:*

*So strictly wert thou just to pay,
Even to the dribblet of a day.* DRYDEN.

DRILL. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. An instrument with which holes are bored. It is pressed hard against the thing bored, and turned round with a bow and string.

The way of tempering steel to make gravers, drills, and mechanical instruments, we have taught artificers. BOYLE.

Drills are used for the making such holes as punches will not conveniently serve for; as a piece of work that hath already its shape, and must have an hole or more made in it.

MOXON'S MECHANICAL EXERCISES.

2. An ape; a baboon.

Shall the difference of hair be a mark of a different internal specifick constitution between a changeling and a drill, when they agree in shape and want of reason?

LOCKE.

3. A small dribbling brook. This I have found no where else, and suspect it should be rill.

Springs through the pleasant meadows pour their drills,

Which snake-like glide between the bordering hills. SANDYS.

DRI'NKMONEY. n.s. [drink and money.] Money given to buy liquor.

My old dame will be undone for one to do her husbandry, and her drudgery.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV. P. II.

Were there not instruments for drudgery as well as offices of drudgery? Were there not people to receive orders as well as others to give and authorize them? L'ESTRANGE.

*You do not know the heavy grievances,
The toils, the labours, weary drudgeries,
Which they impose.*

SOUTHERN'S OROONOKO.

To thee that drudgery of pow'r I give;

Cares be thy lot: reign thou, and let me live. DRYDEN'S AURENGZEBE.

Paradise was a place of bliss, as well as immortality, without drudgery, and without sorrow. LOCKE.

*Even drudgery himself,
As at the car he sweats, or dusty hews
The palace-stone, looks gay.*

THOMSON'S SUMMER, L. 1445.

NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

2. Dark; gloomy.

Come, thick night!

*And pall thee in the dunnest smoke of hell,
That my keen knife see not the wound it makes;*

Nor heav'n peep through the blanket of the dark,

To cry hold! hold!

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

He then survey'd

Hell, and the gulph between, and Satan there

*Coasting the wall of heav'n on this side,
In the dun air sublime.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. III. L. 69.

To DUN. v.a. [dunan, Saxon, to clamour.] To claim a debt with vehemence and importunity.

Borrow of thy back, and borrow of thy belly: they'll never ask thee again. I shall be dunning thee every day. BACON.

I remember what she won:

And hath she sent so soon to dun? SWIFT.

*When thou dun'st their parents, seldom they,
Without a suit before the tribune, pay.*

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

DUN. n.s. [from the verb.] A clamorous, importunate, troublesome creditor.

Thus, while my joyless minutes tedious flow,

*With looks demure, and silent pace, a dun,
Horrible monster! hated by gods and men,
To my aerial citadel ascends.* PHILLIPS.

It grieves my heart to be pulled by the sleeve by some rascally dun, Sir, remember my bill.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

DU'NNER. n.s. [from dun.] One employed in soliciting petty debts.

They are ever talking of new silks, and serve the owners in getting them customers, as their common dunnings do in making them pay. SPECTATOR, NO. 454.

To DWAULE. v.a. [dwelian, Sax. to wander; dwaelen, Dut.] To be delirious: a provincial word mentioned by Junius.

DY'SPHONY. n.s. [δυσφωνία.] A difficulty in speaking, occasioned by an ill disposition of the organs.

Dictionaries.

E

Has two sounds; long, as scēne, and short, as men. E is the most frequent vowel in the English language; for it not only is used like the rest in the beginning or end of words, but has the peculiar quality of lengthening the foregoing vowel, as cān, cāne; mān, māne; gāp, gāpe; glād, glāde; brēd, brēde; chīn, chīne; whīp, wīpe; thīn, thīne; nōd, nōde; tūn, tūne; plūm, plūme. Yet it sometimes occurs final, where yet the foregoing vowel is not lengthened; as gōne, knowlĕdge, ĕdge, gīve. Anciently almost every word ended with e; as for can, canne; for year, yeare; for great, greate; for need, neede; for flock, flocke. It is probable that this e final had at first a soft sound, like the female e of the French; and that afterwards it was in poetry either mute or vocal, as the verse required, 'till at last it became universally silent.

Ea has the sound of e long: the e is commonly lengthened rather by the immediate addition of a than by the apposition of e to the end of the word; as mĕn, mĕan; sĕll, sĕal; mĕt, mĕat; nĕt, nĕat.

EA'GLESPEED. n.s. [eagle and speed.] Swiftmess like that of an eagle.

Abrupt, with eaglespeed she cut the sky, Instant invisible to mortal eye.

POPE'S ODYSSEY, B. I.

EA'GRE. n.s. [æger, in Runick, is the ocean; eggia, in Islandick, is to agitate, to incite.] A tide swelling above another tide, observable in the river Severn.

For as an eagre rides in triumph o'er the tide,

*The tyrant passions, hope and fear,
Did in extremes appear,*

And flash'd upon the soul with equal force. DRYDEN.

EAME. n.s. [eam, Saxon; eom, Dutch] Uncle: a word still used in the wilder parts of Staffordshire.

Daughter, says she, fly, fly; behold, thy dame

*Foreshows the treason of thy wretched
eame!* FAIRFAX.

EA'RWITNESS. n.s. [ear and witness.] One who attests, or can attest any thing as heard by himself.

All present were made earwitnesses, even of each particular branch of a common indictment. HOOKER, B. V. S. 36.

The histories of mankind, written by eye or earwitnesses, are built upon this principle.

WATTS'S LOGICK.

EA'RLY. adj. [ærl, Saxon, before] Soon with respect to something else: as, in the morning, with respect to the sun; in time, with respect to creation; in the season, in comparison with other products.

*I am a tainted wether of the flock,
Meetest for death: the weakest kind of fruit Drops earliest to the ground, and so let me.* SHAKESPEARE.

It is a curiosity to have several fruits upon one tree; and the more when some of them come early, and some come late, so that you may have upon the same tree ripe fruits all Summer.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 501.

God made all the world, that he might be worshipped in some parts of the world; and therefore, in the first and most early times of the church, what care did he manifest to have such places erected to his honour?

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

*And yet my numbers please the rural throng,
Rough satyrs dance, and Pan approves the
song;*

The nymphs, forsaking ev'ry cave and spring,

Their early fruit and milk-white turtles bring. POPE.

Sickness is early old age: it teaches us a diffidence in our earthly state, and inspires us with the thoughts of a future. POPE.

Oh soul of honour!

Oh early heroine!

SMITH'S PHÆDRA AND HIPPOLITUS.

EA'RLY. adv. [from the adjective.]

Soon; betimes.

*Early before the morn with crimson ray
The windows of bright heav'n opened had.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

*None in more languages can show
Those arts, which you so early know.*

WALLER.

The princess makes her issue like herself, by instilling early into their minds religion, virtue and honour.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER.

EA'RTHLING. n.s. [from earth.]

An inhabitant of the earth; a mortal; a poor frail creature.

To earthlings, the footstool of God, that stage which he raised for a small time, seemeth magnificent. DRUMMOND.

EAST. n.s. [eost, Saxon; heos, Erse.]

1. The quarter where the sun rises.<sup>92</sup>

They counting forwards towards the East, did allow 180 degrees to the Portugals eastward. ABBOT.

2. The regions in the eastern parts of the world.

I would not be the villain that thou thinkest,

For the whole space that's in the tyrant's grasp,

And the rich East to boot.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

EA'TINGHOUSE. n.s. [eat and house.] A house where provisions are sold ready dressed.

An hungry traveller stept into an eatinghouse for his dinner.

L'ESTRANGE.

To EA'VEDSDROP. v.a. [eaves and drop.] To catch what comes from the eaves; in common phrase, to listen under windows.

EBRI'ETY. n.s. [ebrietas, Latin.] Drunkennes; intoxication by strong liquors.

Bitter almonds, as an antidote against ebriety, hath commonly failed.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. II. C. 6.

ECCOPRO'TICKS. n.s. ['έκ and κόπρος.] Such medicines as gently purge the belly, so as to bring away no more than the natural excrements lodged in the intestines.

The body ought to be maintained in its daily excretions by such means as are eccoprotick.

HARVEY ON THE PLAGUE.

ECLE'CTICK. adj. ['εκλέκτικος.]
Selecting; chusing at will.

Cicero gives an account of the opinions of philosophers; but was of the eclectic sect, and chose out of each such positions as came nearest truth.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

ECO'NOMY. n.s. ['οικονομία. This word is often written, from its derivation, æconomy; but æ being no diphthong in English, it is placed here with the authorities for different orthography.]

1. The management of a family; the government of a household.

By St. Paul's economy the heir differs nothing from a servant, while he is in his minority; so a servant should differ nothing from a child in the substantial part.

TAYLOR'S RULE OF LIVING HOLY.

2.<sup>93</sup> Frugality; discretion of expence; laudable parsimony.

Particular sums are not laid out to the greatest advantage in his economy; but are sometimes suffered to run waste, while he is only careful of the main.

DRYDEN'S STATE OF INNOCENCE, PREFACE.

I have no other notion of economy, than that it is the parent of liberty and ease.

SWIFT TO LORD BOLINGBROKE.

3. Disposition of things; regulation.

All the divine and infinitely wise ways of economy that God could use towards a rational creature, oblige mankind to that course of living which is most agreeable to our nature. HAMMOND.

4. The disposition or arrangement of any work.

In the Greek poets, as also in Plautus, we shall see the economy and disposition of poems better observed than in Terence.

BEN JONSON'S DISCOVERIES.

If this economy must be observed in the minutest parts of an epick poem, what soul, though sent into the world with great advantages of nature, cultivated with the liberal arts and sciences, can be sufficient to inform the body of so great a work?

DRYDEN'S DEDICATION TO THE ÆNEID.

5. System of motions; distribution of every thing active or passive to its proper place.

*These the strainers aid,
That, by a constant separation made,*

*They may a due economy maintain,
Exclude the noxious parts, the good retain.*

BLACKMORE'S CREATION.

E'CURIE. n.s. [French; equus, Latin.] A place covered for the lodging or housing of horses.

EDA'CIOUS. adj. [edax, Latin.] Eating; voracious; devouring; predatory; ravenous; rapacious; greedy.

E'DGETOOL. n.s. [edge and tool.] A tool made sharp to cut.

There must be no playing with things sacred, nor jesting with edgetools.

L'ESTRANGE.

Nurses from their children keep edgetools.

DORSET.

I shall exercise upon steel, and its several sorts; and what sort is fittest for edgetools, which for springs.

MOXON'S MECHANICAL EXERCISES.

EFFE'CT. n.s. [effectus, Latin.]

1. That which is produced by an operating cause.

You may see by her example, in herself wise, and of others beloved, that neither folly is the cause of vehement love, nor reproach the effect. SIDNEY, B. II.

Effect is the substance produced, or simple idea introduced into any subject, by the exerting of power. LOCKE.

We see the pernicious effects of luxury in the antient Romans, who immediately found themselves poor as soon as this vice got footing among them.

ADDISON ON ITALY.

2. Consequence; event.

No man, in effect, doth accompany with others, but he learneth, ere he is aware, some gesture, or voice, or fashion.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 236.

To say of a celebrated piece that there are faults in it, is, in effect, to say that the author of it is a man.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN.

3. Purpose; intention; general intent.

They spake to her to that effect.

BIBLE 2 CHRONICLES, XXXIV. 22.

4. Consequence intended; success; advantage.

Christ is become of no effect unto you.

BIBLE GALATIANS, V. 4.

He should depart only with a title, the effect whereof he should not be possessed of, before he had very well deserved it.

CLARENDON, B. VIII.

The custom or institution has hitherto proved without effect, and has neither extinguished the practice of such crimes, nor lessened the numbers of such criminals.

TEMPLE.

5. Completion; perfection.

*Semblant art shall carve the fair effect,
And full atchievement of thy great designs.*

PRIOR.

6. Reality; not mere appearance.

In shew, a marvellous indifferently composed senate ecclesiastical was to govern, but in effect one only man should, as the spirit and soul of the residue, do all in all. HOOKER.

State and wealth, the business and the crowd,

*Seems at this distance but a darker cloud;
And is to him, who rightly things esteems,
No other in effect than what it seems.*

DENHAM.

7. [In the plural.] Goods; moveables.

What form of prayer

Can serve my turn? Forgive me my foul murther!

*That cannot be, since I am still possest
Of those effects for which I did the
murther,*

My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen. SHAKESPEARE.

The emperor knew that they could not convey away many of their effects.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 499.

To EFFO'RM. n.s. [efformo, Latin.]

To make in any certain manner; to shape; to fashion.

*Merciful and gracious, thou gavest us being, raising us from nothing, and efforming us
after thy own image.* TAYLOR.

EFFO'SSION. n.s. [effosumo, Latin.]

The act of digging up from the ground; deterration.

He set apart annual sums for the recovery of manuscripts, the effosion of coins, and the procuring of mummies.

ARBUTHNOT.

E'FFRONTERY. n.s. [effronterie,

Fr.] Impudence; shamelessness; contempt of reproach.

They could hardly contain themselves within one unworthy act, who had effrontery enough to commit or countenance it. KING CHARLES.

Others with ignorance and insufficiency have self-admiration and effrontery to set up themselves.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

A bold man's effrontery, in company with women, must be owing to his low opinion of them, and his high one of himself.

CLARISSA.

EFFU'MABILITY. n.s. [fumus,

Latin.] The quality of flying away, or vapouring in fumes.<sup>94</sup>

They seem to define mercury by volatility, or, if I may coin such a word, effumability.

BOYLE'S SCEPTICAL CHYMISTRY.

E. G. [exempli gratia.] For the sake of an instance or example.

E'GOTISM. n.s. [from ego, Latin.]

The fault committed in writing by the frequent repetition of the word ego, or I; too frequent mention of a man's self, in writing or conversation.

The most violent egotism which I have met with, in the course of my reading, is that of cardinal Wolsey's; ego & rex meus, I and my king. SPECTATOR, NO. 562.

TO E'GOTIZE. v.n. [from ego.] To talk much of one's self.

EJE'CTMENT. n.s. [from eject.] A legal writ by which any inhabitant of a house, or tenant of an estate, is commanded to depart.

EIGH. interj. An expression of sudden delight.

EIGHT. adj. [eahta, Saxon; ahta, Gothick; acht, Scottish.] Twice four. A word of number.

This island contains eight score and eight miles in circuit. SANDYS'S JOURNEY.

EIGHTH. adj. [from eight.] Next in order to the seventh; the ordinal of eight.

*Another yet? – A seventh! I'll see no more;
And yet the eighth appears!*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

In the eighth month should be the reign of Saturn. BACON.

*I stay reluctant seven continu'd years,
And water her ambrosial couch with tears;
The eighth, she voluntary moves to part,
Or urg'd by Jove, or her own changeful heart.* POPE'S ODYSSEY.

ELA'STICAL, ELASTICK. adj. [from 'ελάω.] Having the power of returning to the form from which it is distorted or withheld; springy; having the power of a spring.

*By what elastick engines did she rear
The starry roof, and roll the orbs in air.*

BLACKMORE'S CREATION.

If the body is compact, and bends or yields inward to pression, without any sliding of its parts, it is hard and elastick, returning to its figure with a force rising from the mutual attraction of its parts.

NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

The most common diversities of human constitutions arise from the solids, as to their different degrees of strength and tension; in some being too lax and weak, in others too elastick and strong.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

A fermentation must be excited in some assignable place, which may expand itself by its elastical power, and break through, where it meets with the weakest resistance.

BENTLEY.

ELBOWCHA'IR. n.s. [elbow and chair.] A chair with arms to support the elbows.

Swans and elbowchairs, in the opera of Dioclesian, have danced upon the English stage with good success. GAY.

E'LBOWROOM. n.s. [elbow and room.] Room to stretch out the elbows on each side; perfect freedom from confinement.

*Now my soul hath elbowroom;
It would not out at windows nor at doors.*

SHAKESPEARE.

The natives are not so many, but that there may be elbowroom enough for them, and for the adventives also. BACON.

A politician must put himself into a state of liberty, so to provide elbowroom for his conscience to have its full play in.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

ELE'CTRE. n.s. [electrum, Latin.]

1. Amber; which, having the quality when warmed by friction of attracting bodies, gave to one species of attraction the name of electricity, and to the bodies that so attract the epithet electrick.

2. A mixed metal.

Change silver plate or vessel into the compound stuff, being a kind of silver electre, and turn the rest into coin.

BACON.

ELECTRI'CITY. n.s. [from electrick. See ELECTRE.] A property in some bodies, whereby, when rubbed so as to grow warm, they draw little bits of paper, or such like substances, to them. Quincy.

Such was the account given a few years ago of electricity; but the industry of the present age, first excited by the experiments of Gray, has discovered in electricity a multitude of philosophical wonders. Bodies electrified by a sphere of glass, turned nimbly round, not only emit flame, but may be fitted with such a quantity of the electrical vapour, as, if discharged at once upon a human body, would endanger life. The force of this vapour has hitherto appeared instantaneous, persons at both ends of a long chain seeming to be struck at once. The philosophers are now endeavouring to intercept the strokes of lightning.

ELOQUE'NCE. n.s. [eloquentia, Latin.]

1. The power of speaking with fluency and elegance; oratory.

Action is eloquence, and the eyes of th' ignorant

More learned than the ears.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

2. Elegant language uttered with fluency.

*Say she be mute, and will not speak a
word;*

Then I'll commend her volubility,

And say she uttereth piercing eloquence.

SHAKESPEARE.

*Fit words attended on his weighty sense,
And mild persuasion flow'd in eloquence.*

POPE'S ODYSSEY, B. VII.

ELY'SIUM. n.s. [Latin.] The place assigned by the heathens to happy souls; any place exquisitely pleasant.

To have thee with thy lips to stop my mouth,

*So should'st thou either turn my flying soul,
Or I should breathe it so into thy body,*

And then it liv'd in sweet Elysium.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

E'MBASSAGE, E'MBASSY. n.s.

[It may be observed, that though our authors write almost indiscriminately ambassador or ambassador, embassage or ambassage; yet there is scarcely an example of ambassy, all concurring to write embassy.]

1. A publick message; a message concerning business between princes or states.

Fresh embassy and suits,

*Nor from the state nor private friends,
hereafter,*

Will I lend ear to.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

When he was at Newcastle he sent a solemn embassage unto James III. king of Scotland, to treat and conclude a peace with him. BACON'S HENRY VII.

*The peace polluted thus, a chosen band
He first commissions to the Latian land,
In threat'ning embassy.*

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

2. Any solemn message.

He sends the angels on embassies with his decrees. TAYLOR.

3. An errand in an ironical sense.

A bird was made fly with such art to carry a written embassy among the ladies, that one might say, if a live bird, how taught? If dead, how made? SIDNEY, B. II.

*Nimble mischance, that art so light of foot,
Doth not thy embassy belong to me?*

And am I last that know it.

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD II.

E'MBOLISM. n.s. [ἔμβολισμός.]

1. Intercalation; insertion of days or years to produce regularity and equation of time.

*The civil constitutions of the year were after different manners in several nations; some using the sun's year, but in divers fashions;
and some following the moon, finding out*

embolisms or equations, even to the addition of whole months, to make all as even as they could. HOLDER ON TIME.

2. The time inserted; intercalatory time.

To EMBRO'THEL. v.a. [brothel, brodel.] To inclose in a brothel.

*Men, which chuse
Law practice for mere gain, boldly repute, Worse than embrothel'd strumpets prostitute.* DONNE.

E'MISSARY. n.s. [emissarius, Latin.]

1. One sent out on private messages; a spy; a secret agent.

Clifford, now become the state informer, was an emissary and spy of the king's, and he fled over into Flanders with his consent and privity. BACON'S HENRY VII.

*You shall neither eat nor sleep,
No, nor forth your window peep,
With your emissary eye,
To fetch in the forms go by.*

BEN JONSON'S UNDERWOODS.

The Jesuits send over emissaries, with instructions to personate themselves members of the several sects amongst us.
SWIFT.

2. One that emits or sends out. A technical sense.

Wherever there are emissaries, there are absorbent vessels in the skin; and, by the absorbent vessels, mercury will pass into the blood. ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

To EMPE'OPLE. v.a. [from people.]
To form into a people or community.

*He wonder'd much, and 'gan enquire
What stately building durst so high extend
Her lofty towers unto the starry sphere,
And what unknown nation there empeopled were.* FAIRY QUEEN.

E'MPHASIS. n.s. ['ἐμφασις.] A remarkable stress laid upon a word or sentence; particular force impressed by stile or pronunciation.

Oh, that brave Cæsar!

— Be choak'd with such another emphasis.

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND
CLEOPATRA.

Emphasis not so much regards the time as a certain grandeur, whereby some letter, syllable, word, or sentence is rendered more remarkable than the rest, by a more vigorous pronunciation, and a longer stay upon it.

HOLDER'S ELEMENTS OF SPEECH.

*These questions have force and emphasis, if they be understood of the antediluvian
earth.*

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

EMPI'RICAL, EMPIRICK. adj.
[from the noun.]

1. Versed in experiments.

By fire

*Of sooty coal, the empirick alchymist
Can turn, or holds it possible to turn,
Metals of drossiest ore to perfect gold.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

2. Known only by experience; practised only by rote, without rational grounds.

The most sovereign prescription in Galen is but empirick to this preservative.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

*In extremes, bold counsels are the best;
Like empirick remedies, they last are try'd,
And by th' event condemn'd or justify'd.*

DRYDEN'S AURENGZEBE.

EMPI'RICALLY. adv. [from empirical.]

1. Experimentally; according to experience.

We shall empirically and sensibly deduct the causes of blackness from originals, by which we generally observe things denigrated.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. VI.
C. 12.

2. Without rational grounds; charlat-anically; in the manner of quacks.

EMPI'RICISM. n.s. [from empirick.] Dependence on experience without knowledge or art; quackery.

EMPLA'STER. n.s. [ἔμπλαστρον.] This word is now always pronounced, and generally written plaster.] An application to a sore of an oleaginous or viscous substance, spread upon cloth. See PLASTER.

All emplasters, applied to the breasts, ought to have a hole for the nipples.
WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

To EMPU'ZZLE. v.a. [from puzzle.] To perplex; to put to a stand.

It hath empuzzled the enquiries of others to apprehend, and enforced them unto strange conceptions to make out.
BROWN.

E'MULOUS. adj. [æmulus, Latin.]

1. Rivalling; engaged in competition.

What the Gaul or Moor could not effect, Nor emulous Carthage, with their length of spite, Shall be the work of one.
BEN JONSON'S CATILINE.

She is in perpetual diffidence, or actual enmity with her, but always emulous and suspectful of her.
HOWEL'S VOCAL FORREST.

2. Desirous of superiority; desirous to rise above another; desirous of any excellence possessed by another. With of before the object of emulation.

By strength
They measure all, of other excellence Not emulous, nor care who them excels.
MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

By fair rewards our noble youth we raise To emulous merit, and to thirst of praise.
PRIOR.

Good Howard, emulous of the Grecian art. PRIOR.

3. Factious; contentious.

Whose glorious deeds, but in these fields of late, Made emulous missions 'mongst the gods themselves, And drave great Mars to faction.
SHAKESPEARE'S TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

To ENA'MBUSH. v.a. [from ambush.] To hide in ambush; to hide with hostile intention.

They went within a vale, close to a flood, whose stream Us'd to give all their cattle drink, they there enambush'd them.
CHAPMAN'S ILIADS, B. I.

ENCO'MPASSMENT. n.s. [from encompass.] Circumlocution; remote tendency of talk.

Finding
By this encompassment and drift of question, That they do know my son, come you more near. SHAKESPEARE.

ENCO'RE. adv. [French.] Again; once more. A word used at publick shows when a singer, or fiddler, or buffoon is desired by the audience to do the same thing again.

To the same notes thy sons shall hum or snore, And all thy yawning daughters cry encore. DUNCIAD, B. IV.

ENCYCLOPE'DIA, ENCYCLOPE'DY. n.s. [ἔγκυκλοπáidia.] The circle of sciences; the round of learning.

Every science borrows from all the rest, and we cannot attain any single one without the encyclopædy.
GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA, C. 25.

This art may justly claim a place in the encyclopædia, especially such as serves for a model of education for an able politician.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

ENDE' ARMENT. n.s. [from endear.]

1. The cause of love; means by which any thing is endeared.

Her first endearments, twining round the soul. THOMSON.

2. The state of being endeared; the state of being loved.

Is not the separate property of a thing the great cause of its endearment amongst all mankind? SOUTH'S SERMONS.

When a man shall have done all that he can to make one his friend, and emptied his purse to create endearment between them, he may, in the end, be forced to write vanity and frustration. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

E'NDLESS. adj. [from end.]

1. Without end; without conclusion or termination.

Nothing was more endless than the common method of comparing eminent writers by an opposition of particular passages in them.

POPE'S PREFACE TO THE ILIAD.

2. Infinite in longitudinal extent.

As it is pleasant to the eye to have an endless prospect, so it is some pleasure to a finite understanding to view unlimited excellencies. TILLOTSON.

3. Infinite in duration; perpetual.

None of the heathens, how curious soever in searching out all kinds of outward ceremonies, could ever once endeavour to resemble herein the church's care for the endless good of her children.

HOOKE, B. V. S. 18.

But after labours long, and sad delay, Brings them to joyous rest, and endless bliss. FAIRY QUEEN.

All our glory extinct, and happy state, Here swallow'd up in endless misery!

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

4. Incessant; continual.

All the priests and friars in my realm, Shall in procession sing her endless praise.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

Each pleasing Blount shall endless smiles bestow,

And soft Belinda's blush for ever glow.

POPE.

E'NEMY. n.s. [ennemi, French; inimicus, Latin.]

1. A publick foe.

All these statutes speak of English rebels and Irish enemies, as if the Irish had never been in condition of subjects, but always out of the protection of the law.

DAVIES ON IRELAND.

The enemy thinks of raising threescore thousand men for the next Summer.

ADDISON ON THE STATE OF THE WAR.

2. A private opponent; an antagonist.

3. Any one who regards another with malevolence; not a friend.

Kent, in disguise, Follow'd his enemy king, and did him service

Improper for a slave.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

4. One that dislikes.

He that designedly uses ambiguities, ought to be looked on as an enemy to truth and knowledge. LOCKE.

Bold is the critick, who dares prove These heroes were no friends to love;

And bolder he who dares aver,

That they were enemies to war. PRIOR.

5. [In theology.] The fiend; the devil.

Defend us from the danger of the enemy.

COMMON PRAYER.

E'NERGY. n.s. [ἐνέργεια]

1. Power not exerted in action.

They are not effective of any thing, nor leave no work behind them, but are energies merely; for their working upon mirrours, and places of echo, doth not alter any thing in those bodies. BACON.

2. Force; vigour; efficacy; influence.

*Whether with particles of heav'nly fire
The God of nature did his soul inspire;
Or earth, but new divided from the sky,
And pliant still, retain'd th' ethereal energy.* DRYDEN.

God thinketh with operation infinitely perfect, with an omnipotent as well as an eternal energy.

GREW'S COSMOLOGIA SACRA.

Beg the blessed Jesus to give an energy to your imperfect prayers, by his most powerful intercession.

SMALRIDGE'S SERMONS.

What but God!
*Inspiring God! who, boundless spirit all,
And unremitting energy, pervades,
Adjusts, sustains, and agitates the whole.*
THOMSON'S SPRING.

3. Faculty; operation.

Matter, though divided into the subtlest parts, moved swiftly, is senseless and stupid, and makes no approach to vital energy.

RAY ON THE CREATION.

How can concussion of atoms beget self-consciousness, and other powers and energies that we feel in our minds?

BENTLEY.

4. Strength of expression; force of signification; spirit; life.

*Who did ever, in French authors, see
The comprehensive English energy.*
ROSCOMMON.

*Swift and ready, and familiar communication is made by speech; and, when animated by elocution, it acquires a greater life and energy, ravishing and captivating
the hearers.* HOLDER.

Many words deserve to be thrown out of our language, and not a few antiquated to be restored, on account of their energy and sound. SWIFT.

E'NGINE. n.s. [engin, French; ingegno, Italian.]

1. Any mechanical complication, in which various movements and parts concur to one effect.

2. A military machine.

*This is our engine, towers that overthrows;
Our spear that hurts, our sword that wounds our foes.* FAIRFAX.

3. Any instrument.

The sword, the arrow, the gun, with many terrible engines of death, will be well employed. RALEIGH'S ESSAYS.

*He takes the scissars, and extends
The little engine on his fingers ends.*
POPE'S RAPE OF THE LOCK.

4. Any instrument to throw water upon burning houses.

*Some cut the pipes, and some the engines
play;
And some, more bold, mount ladders to the fire.* DRYDEN.

5. Any means used to bring to pass, or to effect. Usually in an ill sense.

Prayer must be divine and heavenly, which the devil with all his engines so violently opposeth.

DUPPA'S RULES FOR DEVOTION.

6. An agent for another. In contempt.

*They had th' especial engines been, to rear
His fortunes up into the state they were.*
DANIEL.

ENGINE'ER. n.s. [enginier, French.] One who manages engines; one who directs the artillery of an army.

For 'tis the sport to have the engineer Hoist with his own petard.
SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

*Him thus enrag'd,
Descrying from afar, some engineer,
Dext'rous to guide th' unerring charge,
design'd
By one nice shot to terminate the war.*
PHILLIPS.

An author, who points his satire at a great man, is like the engineer who signalized himself by this ungenerous practice.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER, NO. 19.

E'NGINERY. n.s. [from engine.]

1. The act of managing artillery.

They may descend in mathematicks to fortification, architecture, enginery, or navigation. MILTON ON EDUCATION.

2. Engines of war; artillery.

Approaching, gross and huge, in hollow cube
Training his dev'lish enginery.*
MILTON.

E'NGLISH. adj. [engles, Saxon.]

Belonging to England; thence English is the language of England.

He hath neither Latin, French, nor Italian; and you may come into the court, and swear that I have a poor pennyworth in the English.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF
VENICE.

Of English talc, the coarser sort is called plaister, or parget; the finer, spoad.
WOODWARD.

To E'NGLISH. v.a. [from the noun.] To translate into English.

*We find not a word in the text can properly be rendered anise, which is what the Latins
call anethum, and properly Englished dill.*

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. VII.
C. 7.

To ENJO'IN. v.a. [enjoindre, French.] To direct; to order; to prescribe. It is more authoritative than direct, and less imperious than
command.

*To satisfy the good old man,
I would bend under any heavy weight
That he'll enjoin me to.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MUCH ADO ABOUT NOTHING.

Monks and philosophers, and such as do continually enjoin themselves.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 292.

It endeavours to secure every man's interest,

by enjoining that truth and fidelity be inviolably preserved.

TILLOTSON'S SERMONS.

ENODA'TION. n.s. [enodatio,
Latin.]

1. The act of untying a knot.

2. Solution of a difficulty. Dictionaries.

ENO'RMOUS. adj. [enormis,
Latin.]

1. Irregular; out of rule; not regulated by any stated measures; excursive beyond the limits of a regular figure.

Nature here

Wanton'd, as in her prime; and plaid at will

Her virgin fancies, pouring forth more sweets,

Wild above rule, or art, enormous bliss!

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

The enormous part of the light in the circumference of every lucid point, ought to be less discernible in shorter telescopes than in longer, because the shorter transmit less light to the eye. NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

2. Disordered; confused.

I shall find time

From this enormous state, and seek to give Losses their remedies.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

3. Wicked beyond the common
measure.

4. Exceeding in bulk the common measures: always used with some degree of dislike, or horror, or wonder.

*A giant-shepherd here his flock maintains,
Far from the rest, and solitary reigns,*

*A form enormous! far unlike the race
Of human birth, in stature, or in face.*

POPE'S ODYSSEY.

ENO'UGH. adj. [genoh, Saxon;
ganah, Gothick; genoeg, Dut. It is not easy to determine whether this word be an adjective or adverb; perhaps, when it is joined with a substantive, it is an adjective, of which enow is the plural.

In other situations it seems an adverb; except that after the verb to have, or to be, either expressed or understood, it may be accounted a substantive. It is pronounced as if it were written enuf.] In a sufficient measure; so as may satisfy; so as may suffice.

*Why wou'dst thou go, with one consent
they cry,
When thou hadst gold enough, and Emily.* DRYDEN.

When there was not room enough for their herds, they by consent separated, and enlarged their pasture. LOCKE.

ENO'W. The plural of enough. In a sufficient number.

The earth hath since born enow bleeding witnesses, that it was no want of true courage. SIDNEY, B. II.

The walls of the church there are enow contented to build, and to underset it with goodly pillars: the marbles are polished, the roofs shine with gold, the altar hath precious stones to adorn it, and of Christ's ministers no choice at all.

HOOKER, B. V. S. 15.

As if

*Man had not selfish foes enow besides,
That, day and night, for his destruction wait.* MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

*My conquering brother will have slaves
enow,
To pay his cruel vows for victory.*
DRYDEN'S DON SEBASTIAN.

There are at Rome enow modern works of architecture to employ any reasonable man.

ADDISON ON ANCIENT MEDALS.

ENSU'RANCE. n.s. [from ensure.]

1. Exemption from hazard, obtained by the payment of a certain sum.
2. The sum paid for security.

ENSU'RANCER. n.s. [from ensurance.] He who undertakes to exempt from hazard.

*The vain ensurancers of life,
And they who most perform'd, and promis'd less,
Ev'n Short and Hobbes, forsook th' unequal strife.* DRYDEN.

ENTERPA'RLANCE. n.s. [entre and parler, French.] Parley; mutual talk; conference.

During the enterparlance the Scots discharged against the English without harm, but not without breach of the laws of the field. HAYWARD.

E'NTERPRISER. n.s. [from enterprise.] A man of enterprise; one who undertakes great things; one who engages himself in important and dangerous designs.

They commonly proved great enterprisers with happy success.

HAYWARD ON EDWARD VI.

ENTHU'SIASM. n.s. [ἔνθουσιασμός.]

1. A vain belief of private revelation; a vain confidence of divine favour or communication.

Enthusiasm is founded neither on reason nor divine revelation, but rises from the conceits of a warmed or overweening brain. LOCKE.

2. Heat of imagination; violence of passion; confidence of opinion.
3. Elevation of fancy; exaltation of ideas.

Imaging is, in itself, the very height and life of poetry, which, by a kind of enthusiasm, or extraordinary emotion of soul, makes it seem to us that we behold those things which the poet paints.

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL, PREFACE.

E'NTIERTY. n.s. [entiertè, French.] The whole; not barely a part.

Sometime the attorney thrusteth into the writ the uttermost quantity; or else setteth down an entierty, where but a moiety was to be passed.

BACON'S OFFICE OF ALIENATION.

ENTI'RENESS. n.s. [from entire.]

1. Totality; compleatness; fulness.

In an arch where each single stone, which, if severed from the rest, would be perhaps defenceless, is sufficiently secured by the solidity and entireness of the whole fabrick, of which it is a part. BOYLE.

2. Honesty; integrity.

ENTREME'TS. n.s. [French.] Small plates set between the main dishes.

Chards of beet are plants of white beet transplanted, producing great tops, which, in the midst, have a large white main shoot, which is the true chard used in pottages and entremets.

MORTIMER'S ART OF HUSBANDRY.

To ENVE'NOM. v.a. [from venom]

1. To tinge with poison; to poison; to impregnate with venom. It is never used of the person to whom poison is given, but of the draught, meat, or instrument by which it is conveyed.

The treacherous instrument is in thy hand, Unbated and envenom'd.

SHAKESPEARE.

*Alcides, from Oechalia, crown'd
With conquest, felt th' envenom'd robe,
and tore,
Through pain, up by the roots Thessalian pines.* MILTON.

Nor with envenom'd tongue to blast the same

Of harmless men. PHILLIPS.

2. To make odious.

Oh, what a world is this, when what is comely

Envenoms him that bears it!

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

3. To enrage.

*With her full force she threw the pois'nous
dart,
And fix'd it deep within Amata's heart;
That thus envenom'd she might kindle
rage,*

And sacrifice to strife her house and husband's age. DRYDEN.

EPHE'MERA. n.s. [ἑφήμερος.]

1. A fever that terminates in one day.

2. An insect that lives only one day.

E'PIC. adj. [epicus, Latin; ἑπος.]

Narrative; comprising narrations, not acted, but rehearsed. It is usually supposed to be heroick, or to contain one great action atchieved by a hero.

Holmes, whose name shall live in epic song, While music numbers, or while verse has feet. DRYDEN.

*The epic poem is more for the manners,
and the tragedy for the passions.*

DRYDEN.

From morality they formed that kind of poem and fable which we call epic.

POPE'S VIEW OF EPIC POEMS.

EPIDE'MICAL, EPIDEMICK.

n.s. [ἑπί and δῆμος.]

1. That which falls at once upon great numbers of people, as a plague.

It was conceived not to be an epidemick disease, but to proceed from a malignity in the constitution of the air, gathered by the predispositions of seasons.

BACON'S HENRY VII.

As the proportion of acute and epidemical diseases shews the aptness of the air to sudden and vehement impressions, so the chronical diseases shew the ordinary temper of the place.

GRAUNT'S BILLS OF MORTALITY.

2. Generally prevailing; affecting great numbers.

The more epidemical and prevailing this evil is, the more honourable are those who shine as exceptions.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

He ought to have been busied in losing his money, or in other amusements equally laudable and epidemick among persons of honour. SWIFT.

3. General; universal.

They're citizens o' th' world, they're all in all;

Scotland's a nation epidemical.

CLEAVELAND.

EQUINE'CESSARY. adj. [æquus and necessarius, Latin.] Needful in the same degree.

1. Destruction; devastation.
2. Expunction; abolition.

ERO'SION. n.s. [erosio, Latin.]

1. The act of eating away.
2. The state of being eaten away; canker; corrosion.

As sea-salt is a sharp solid body, when taken in too great quantities, in a constant diet of salt meat, it breaks the vessels, produceth erosions of the solid parts, and all the symptoms of the sea-scurvy.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

E'RRAND. n.s. [ærend, Saxon; arend, Danish.] A message; something to be told or done by a messenger; a mandate; a commission. It is generally used now only in familiar language.

Servants being commanded to go, shall stand still, 'till they have their errand warranted unto them.

HOOKER, B. II. S. 8.

*But hast thou done thy errand to Baptista?
— I told him that your father was in Venice.*

SHAKESPEARE.

*A quean! have I not forbid her my house?
She comes of errands, does she?*

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

When he came, behold the captains of the host were sitting, and he said, I have an errand to thee, O captain.

BIBLE 2 KINGS IX. 5.

*From them I go
This uncouth errand sole.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. II.

*His eyes,
That run through all the heav'ns, or down to th' earth,
Bear his swift errands, over moist and dry,
O'er sea and land.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. III.

L. 652.

*Well thou do'st to hide from common sight
Thy close intrigues, too bad to bear the light;*

*Nor doubt I, but the silver-footed dame,
Tripping from sea, on such an errand came.* DRYDEN'S HOMER.

ERRA'NT. adj. [errans, Latin; errant, French.]

1. Wandering; roving; rambling.
- Particularly applied to an order of knights much celebrated in romances, who roved about the world in search of adventures.

There are just seven planets, or errant stars, in the lower orbs of heaven; but it is now demonstrable unto sense, that there are many more.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. IV. C. 12.

Chief of domestick knights and errant, Either for chartel or for warrant.

HUDIBRAS.

2. Vile; abandoned; completely bad. See ARRANT.

Any way, so thou wilt do it, good impertinence:

Thy company, if I slept not very well A-nights, would make me an errant fool with questions. JONSON'S CATILINE.

ERRA'TA. n.s. [Latin.] The faults of the printer inserted in the beginning or end of the book.

If he meet with faults, besides those that the errata take notice of, he will consider the weakness of the author's eyes. BOYLE.

ESCO'T. n.s. [French.] A tax paid in boroughs and corporations towards the support of the community, which is called scot and lot.

To ESSA'Y. v.a. [essayer, French.]

1. To attempt; to try; to endeavour.

While I this unexampled task essay, Pass awful gulphs, and beat my painful way,

Celestial dove, divine assistance bring.

BLACKMORE'S CREATION.

No conquest she, but o'er herself desir'd; No arts essay'd, but not to be admir'd.

POPE, EPISTLE 5.

2. To make experiment of.

3. To try the value and purity of metals.

The standard in our mint being now settled, the rules and methods of essaying suited to it should remain unvariable.

LOCKE.

ESTA'BLISHMENT. n.s. [from establish; etablissement, French.]

1. Settlement; fixed state.

All happy peace, and goodly government, Is settled there in sure establishment.

FAIRY QUEEN, B. II. C. 11.

2. Confirmation of something already done; ratification.

He had not the act penned by way of recognition of right; as, on the other side, he avoided to have it by new law; but chose rather a kind of middle way, by way of establishment. BACON'S HENRY VII.

3. Settled regulation; form; model of a government or family.

Now come unto that general reformation, and bring in that establishment by which all men should be contained in duty.

SPENSER'S STATE OF IRELAND.

4. Foundation; fundamental principle; settled law.

The sacred order to which you belong, and even the establishment on which it subsists, have often been struck at; but in vain.

ATTERBURY'S SERMONS.

5. Allowance; income; salary.

His excellency, who had the sole disposal of the emperor's revenue, might easily provide against that evil, by gradually lessening your establishment.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS.<sup>95</sup>

E'STRICH. n.s. [commonly written ostrich.] The largest of birds.

To be furious,

Is to be frighted out of fear; and, in that mood,

The dove will peck the estridge.

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTHONY AND CLEOPATRA.

The peacock, not at thy command, assumes His glorious train; nor estrich her rare plumes. SANDYS.

ETCH. n.s. A country word, of which I know not the meaning.

When they sow their etch crops, they sprinkle a pound or two of clover on an acre. MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

Where you find dunging of land makes it rank, lay dung upon the etch, and sow it with barley.

MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

E'THER. n.s. [æther, Latin; 'ἀιθηρ.]

1. An element more fine and subtle than air; air refined or sublimed.

If any one should suppose that ether, like our air, may contain particles which endeavour to recede from one another; for I do not know what this ether is; and that its particles are exceedingly smaller than those of air, or even than those of light, the exceeding smallness of its particles may contribute to the greatness of the force, by which those particles may recede from one another. NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

The parts of other bodies are held together by the eternal pressure of the ether, and can have no other conceivable cause of their cohesion and union. LOCKE.

2. The matter of the highest regions above.

There fields of light and liquid ether flow, Purg'd from the pond'rous dregs of earth below. DRYDEN.

E'THICK. adj. ['έθνικος.]

Heathen; Pagan; not Jewish; not Christian.

Such contumely as the ethnick world durst not offer him, is the peculiar insolence of degenerated Christians.

GOVERNMENT OF TONGUE.

I shall begin with the agreement of profane, whether Jewish or ethnick, with the Sacred Writings.

GREW'S COSMOLOGIA SACRA.

ETHOLO'GICAL. adj. ['ήθος and λόγος.] Treating of morality.

ETYMOLO'GICAL. adj. [from etymology.] Relating to etymology; relating to the derivation of words.

Excuse this conceit, this etymological observation. LOCKE.

ETYMO'LOGIST. n.s. [from etymology.] One who searches out the original of words; one who shows the derivation of words from their original.

ETYMO'LOGY. n.s. [etymologia, Lat. 'έτυμος and λόγος.]

1. The descent or derivation of a word from its original; the deduction of formations from the radical word; the analysis of compound words into primitives.

Consumption is generally taken for any universal diminution and colliquation of the body, which acception its etymology implies. HARVEY ON CONSUMPTIONS.

When words are restrained, by common usage, to a particular sense, to run up to etymology, and construe them by Dictionaries, is wretchedly ridiculous.

COLLIER'S VIEW OF THE STAGE.

Pelvis is used by comick writers for a looking-glass, by which means the etymology of the word is visible, and pelvidera will signify a lady who looks in her glass. ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

If the meaning of a word could be learned by its derivation or etymology, yet the original derivation of words is oftentimes very dark. WATTS'S LOGICK.

2. The part of grammar which delivers the inflections of nouns and verbs.

EVERDU'RING. adj. [ever and during.] Eternal; enduring without end.

Our souls, piercing through the impurity of flesh, behold the highest heavens, and thence bring knowledge to contemplate the everduring glory and termless joy.

RALEIGH.

*Heav'n open'd wide
Her everduring gates, harmonious sound!
On golden hinges moving.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. VII.

EVERMO'RE. adv. [ever and more.] Always; eternally. More seems an expletive accidentally added, unless it signified originally from this time: as, evermore, always henceforward; but this sense has not been strictly preserved.

It govern'd was, and guided evermore, Through wisdom of a matron grave and hoare. FAIRY QUEEN.

*Sparks by nature evermore aspire,
Which makes them now to such a highness flee.* DAVIES.

Religion prefers those pleasures which flow from the presence of God for evermore, infinitely before the transitory pleasures of this world. TILLOTSON, SERMON I.

E'VESDROPPER.<sup>96</sup> n.s. [eves and dropper.] Some mean fellow that skulks about a house in the night.

What makes you listening there? Get farther off; I preach not to thee, thou wicked evesdropper.

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRYAR.

Do but think how decent a habit you have on, and how becoming your function it is to be disguised like a slave, and an evesdropper, under the women's windows.

DRYDEN'S DON SEBASTIAN.

EUGH. n.s. [This word is so written by most writers; but since the original iw, Saxon, or Welsh ywen, more favours the easier orthography of yew, I have referred it thither.] A tree.

*At the first stretch of both his hands he drew,
And almost join'd the horns of the tough
eugh.* DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

EVILSPE'AKING. n.s. [evil and speaking.] Slander; defamation; calumny; censoriousness.

Wherefore laying aside all malice and all guile, and hypocrisies and envies, and all evilspeakings. BIBLE 1 PETER, II. 1.

EVILWI'SHING. adj. [evil and wish.] Wishing evil to; having no good will.

*They having heard of this sudden going out with so small a company, in a country full of evilwishing minds towards him, followed
him.* SIDNEY, B. II.

EX. A Latin preposition often prefixed to compounded words; sometimes meaning out, as exhaust, to draw out; sometimes only enforcing the meaning, and sometimes producing little alteration.

EXA'CTLY. adv. [from exact.] Accurately; nicely; thoroughly.

Both of 'em knew mankind exactly well; for both of 'em began that study in themselves.

DRYDEN'S DON SEBASTIAN.

The religion they profess is such, that the more exactly it is sifted by pure unbiassed reason, the more reasonable still it will be found. ATTERBURY'S SERMONS.

EXAMINA'TION. n.s. [examinatio, Latin.] The act of examining by questions, or experiment; accurate disquisition.

I have brought him forth, that, after examination had, I might have somewhat to write. BIBLE ACTS, XXV. 26.

Different men leaving out or putting in several simple ideas, according to their various examination, skill, or observation of the subject, have different essences.

LOCKE.

EXCANTA'TION. n.s. [excanto, Latin.] Disenchantment by a countercharm.

EXCARNIFICA'TION. n.s. [excarnifico, Latin.] The act of taking away the flesh.

LENCY. n.s. [excellence, French;
excellencia, Latin.]

1. The state of abounding in any good quality.

2. Dignity; high rank in existence.

Is it not wonderful, that base desires should so extinguish in men the sense of their own excellency, as to make them willing that their souls should be like to the souls of beasts, mortal and corruptible with their bodies? HOOKER, B. V. S. 2.

I know not why a fiend may not deceive a creature of more excellency than himself, but yet a creature.

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL, DEDICATION.

3. The state of excelling in any thing.

I have, amongst men of parts and business, seldom heard any one commended for having an excellency in musick. LOCKE.

4. That in which one excels.

The criticisms have been made rather to discover beauties and excellencies than their faults and imperfections.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

5. Purity; goodness.

*She loves him with that excellence,
That angels love good men with.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

6. A title of honour. It is now usually applied to generals of an army, ambassadors, and governors.

*They humbly sue unto your excellence,
To have a goodly peace concluded of.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

EXCI'SE. n.s. [accijs, Dutch; excisum, Latin.] A hateful tax levied upon commodities, and adjudged not by the common judges of property, but wretches hired by those to whom excise is paid.

The people should pay a ratable tax for their sheep, and an excise for every thing which they should eat. HAYWARD.

Ambitious now to take excise

Of a more fragrant paradise.

CLEAVELAND.

Excise,

With hundred rows of teeth, the shark exceeds,

And on all trades like Cassawar she feeds.

MARVEL.

*Can hire large houses, and oppress the poor,
By farm'd excise.*

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL, SATIRE 3.

EXCLAMA'TION. n.s. [exclamatio, Latin]

1. Vehement outcry; clamour; outrageous vociferation.

The ears of the people are continually beaten with exclamations against abuses in the church. HOOKER, DEDICATION.

*Either be patient, and intreat me fair,
Or with the clamorous report of war
Thus will I drown your exclamations.*

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

2. An emphatical utterance; a pathological sentence.

O Musidorus! Musidorus! but what serve exclamations, where there are no ears to receive the sound? SIDNEY, B. II.

3. A note by which a pathological sentence is marked thus !

To EXCO'GITATE. v.a. [excogito, Latin.] To invent; to strike out by thinking.

If the wit of man had been to contrive this organ for himself, what could he have possibly excogitated more accurate?

MORE'S ANTIDOTE AGAINST ATHEISM.

The tradition of the origination of mankind seems to be universal; but the particular methods of that origination, excogitated by the heathen, were particular.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

We shall find them to be little else than excogitated and invented models, not much arising from the true image of the things themselves.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

EXCU'SE. n.s. [from the verb. The last syllable of the verb is sounded as if written excuze, that of the noun with the natural sound.]

1. Plea offered in extenuation; apology.

I was set upon by some of your servants, whom because I have in my just defence evil entreated, I came to make my excuse to you. SIDNEY.

Be gone, I will not hear thy vain excuse; But, as thou lov'st thy life, make speed from hence. SHAKESPEARE.

As good success admits no examination, so the contrary allows of no excuse, how reasonable or just soever. RALEIGH.

We find out some excuse or other for deferring good resolutions, 'till our intended retreat is cut off by death. ADDISON.

2. The act of excusing or apologising.

Heav'n put it in thy mind to take it hence, That thou might'st win the more thy father's love,

Pleading so wisely in excuse of it.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

3. Cause for which one is excused.

Let no vain hope your easy mind seduce; For rich ill poets are without excuse.

ROSCOMMON.

Nothing but love this patience could produce;

And I allow your rage that kind excuse.

DRYDEN'S AURENGZEBE.

EXCU'SELESS. adj. [from excuse.]

That for which no excuse or apology can be given.

The voluntary enslaving myself is excuseless. DECAY OF PIETY.

EXE'MPTION. n.s. [from exempt.]

Immunity; privilege; freedom from imposts or burdensome employments.

The like exemption hath the writ to enquire of a man's death, which also must be granted freely.

BACON'S OFFICE OF ALIENATION.

The Roman laws gave particular exemp- tions to such as built ships, or traded in corn. ARBUTHNOT ON COINS.

EXE'QUIES. n.s. without a singular.

[exequiæ, Lat.] Funeral rites; the ceremony of burial; the procession of burial. For this word obsequies is often used, but not so properly.

Let's not forget

The noble duke of Bedford late deceas'd, But see his exequies fulfill'd in Roan.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

The tragical end of the two brothers, whose exequies the next successor had leisure to perform.

DRYDEN'S DEDICATION TO ÆNEID.

To EXFO'LIATE. v.n. [ex and folium, Latin.] To shell off; separate, as a corrupt bone from the sound part. A term of chirurgery.

Our work went on successfully, the bone exfoliating from the edges.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

EXHIBI'TION. n.s. [from exhibit.]

1. The act of exhibiting; display; setting forth.

What are all mechanick works, but the sensible exhibition of mathematick demonstrations?

GREW'S COSMOLOGIA SACRA, B. II.

2. Allowance; salary; pension.<sup>97</sup>

I crave fit disposition for my wife, Due preference of place and exhibition, As levels with her breeding.

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

What maintenance he from his friends receives,

Like exhibition thou shalt have from me.

SHAKESPEARE.

All was assigned to the army and garrisons there, and she received only a pension or exhibition out of his coffers. BACON.

He is now neglected, and driven to live in exile upon a small exhibition. SWIFT.

E'XIGENT. n.s. [exigens, Latin.]

1. Pressing business; occasion that requires immediate help.

In such an exigent I see not how they could have staid to deliberate about any other regiment than that which already was devised to their hands.

HOOKER, PREFACE.

*The council met, your guards to find you sent,
And know your pleasure in this exigent.*

WALLER.

2. [A law term.] A writ sued when the defendant is not to be found, being part of the process leading to an outlawry. Shakespeare uses it for any extremity. Hanmer.

3. End.

These eyes, like lamps whose wasting oil is spent,

Wax dim, as drawing to their exigent.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

E'XIT. n.s. [exit, Latin.]

1. The term set in the margin of plays to mark the time at which the player goes off the stage.

2. Recess; departure; act of quitting the stage; act of quitting the theatre of life.

*All the world's a stage,
And all the men and women meerly players:*

*They have their exits and their entrances,
And one man in his time plays many parts.* SHAKESPEARE.

A regard for fame becomes a man more towards the exit than at his entrance into life. SWIFT.

*Many of your old comrades live a short life,
and make a figure at their exit.* SWIFT.

3. Passage out of any place.

In such a pervious substance as the brain, they might find an easy either entrance or exit, almost every where. GLANVILLE.

4. Way by which there is a passage out.

The fire makes its way, forcing the water

forth through its ordinary exits, wells, and the outlets of rivers. WOODWARD.

EXO'RBITANT. adj. [ex and orbito, Latin.]

1. Going out of the prescribed track; deviating from the course appointed or rule established.<sup>98</sup>

What signifies the fiction of the tortoise riding upon the wings of the wind, but to prescribe bounds and measures to our exorbitant passions? L'ESTRANGE.

These phenomena are not peculiar to the earthquakes which have happened in our times, but have been observed in all ages, and particularly those exorbitant commotions of the waters of the globe.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

2. Anomalous; not comprehended in a settled rule or method.

The Jews, who had laws so particularly determining in all affairs what to do, were notwithstanding continually inured with causes exorbitant, and such as their laws had not provided for.

HOOKER, B. III. S. 11.

3. Enormous; beyond due proportion; excessive.

Their subjects would live in great plenty, were not the impositions so very exorbitant; for the courts are too splendid for the territories. ADDISON'S REMARKS ON ITALY.

So endless and exorbitant are the desires of men, that they will grasp at all, and can form no scheme of perfect happiness with less.

SWIFT ON THE DISSENTIONS IN ATHENS AND ROME.

EXPE'NSE. n.s. [expensum, Latin.]

Cost; charges; money expended.

*Hence comes that wild and vast expense,
That hath enforc'd Rome's virtue thence,
Which simple poverty first made.*

BEN JONSON'S CATILINE.

A feast prepar'd with riotous expense,

Much cost, more care, and most magnificence. DRYDEN.

I can see no reason by which we were obliged to make those prodigious expenses. SWIFT.

EXPE'NSEFUL. adj. [expense and full.] Costly; chargeable; expensive.

No part of structure is either more expendeful than windows or more ruinous, as being exposed to all violence of weather.
WOTTON'S ARCHITECTURE.

EXPE'NSELESS. adj. [from expense.] Without cost.

A physician may save any army by this frugal and expenseless means only.
MILTON ON EDUCATION.

*What health promotes, and gives unenvy'd
peace,
Is all expenseless, and procur'd with ease.*
BLACKMORE'S CREATION.

EXPE'NSIVE. adj. [from expense.]

1. Given to expense; extravagant; luxurious.

Frugal and industrious men are friendly to the established government, as the idle and expensive are dangerous. TEMPLE.

2. Costly; requiring expense: as, expensive
dress; an expensive journey.

3. Liberal; generous; distributive.

This requires an active, expensive, indefatigable goodness, such as our apostle calls a work and labour of love. SPRATT.

E'XPLETIVE. n.s. [expletivum,
Latin.] Something used only to take up room; something of which the use is only to prevent a vacancy.

These are not only useful expletives to matter, but great ornaments of style.
SWIFT.

*Oft the ear the open vowels tire,
While expletives their feeble aid do join.*
POPE'S ESSAY ON CRITICISM.

Another nicety is in relation to expletives,

whether words or syllables, which are made use of purely to supply a vacancy: do, before verbs plural, is absolutely such; and future refiners may explode did and does.
POPE.

To EXPLO'DE. v.a. [explodo, Latin.]

1. To drive out disgracefully with some noise of contempt; to treat with open contempt; to treat not only with neglect, but open disdain or scorn.

*Him old and young Exploded, and had seiz'd with violent hands,
Had not a cloud descending snatch'd him thence Unseen amid' the throng.*
MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. XI.

*Thus was th' applause they meant, Turn'd to exploding hiss, triumph to shame,
Cast on themselves from their own mouths.* MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

Old age explodes all but morality.
ROSCOMMON.

There is pretended, that a magnetical globe or terrella, being placed upon its poles, would have a constant rotation; but this is commonly exploded, as being against all experience. WILKINS'S DÆDALUS.

Shall that man pass for a proficient in Christ's school, who would have been exploded in the school of Zeno or Epictetus. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

Provided that no word, which a society shall give a sanction to, be afterwards antiquated and exploded, they may receive whatever new ones they shall find occasion for.

SWIFT'S LETTER TO THE LORD HIGH TREASURER.

2. To drive out with noise and violence.

*But late the kindled powder did explode
The massy ball, and the brass tube unload.* BLACKMORE.

EXPLO'DER. n.s. [from explode.] An hisser; one who drives out any person or thing with open contempt.

To EXPO'STULATE. v.n. [expostulo, Latin.] To canvass with another; to altercate; to debate without open rupture.

*More bitterly could I expostulate,
Save that for reverence of some alive
I give a sparing limit to my tongue.*

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

The emperor's ambassador did expostulate with the king, that he had broken his league with the emperor. HAYWARD.

It is madness for friendless and unarmed innocence to expostulate with invincible power. L'ESTRANGE.

Durst I expostulate with providence, I then might ask. COTTON.

The bishop will expostulate, and the tenant will have regard to the reasonableness of the demand, rather than engage in a suit.

SWIFT.

To EXPROBRA'TE. v.a. [exprobro, Latin.] To charge upon with reproach; to impute openly with blame; to upbraid.

To exprobrate their stupidity, he induces the providence of storks: now, if the bird had been unknown, the illustration had been obscure, and the exprobration not so proper. BROWN.

To EXPRO'PRIATE. v.a. [ex and proprius, Latin.] To make no longer our own; to hold no longer as a property. Not in use.

*When you have resigned, or rather consigned, your expropriated will to God, and thereby entrusted him to will for you,
all his dispensations towards you are, in effect, the acts of your own will.*

BOYLE'S SERAPHICK LOVE.

EXPU'RGATORY. adj. [expurgatorius, Latin.] Employed in purging away what is noxious: as, the expurgatory index of the Romanists directs the abolition or expunction of passages admitted by any authors contrary to popery.

There wants expurgatory animadversions, whereby we might strike out great numbers of hidden qualities; and having once a conceded list, we might with more safety attempt their reasons.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. II. C. 7.

EXQU'ISITELY. adv. [from exquisite.] Perfectly; completely: in either a good or ill sense.

We see more exquisitely with one eye shut than with both open; for that the spirits visual unite themselves, and become stronger.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 86.

A collection of rare manuscripts, exquisitely written in Arabick, and sought in the most remote parts by Epenius, the most excellent linguist. WOTTON.

*The soldier then, in Grecian arts unskill'd, Returning rich with plunder from the
field,*

*If cups of silver or of gold he brought,
With jewels set, and exquisitely wrought,
To glorious trappings strait the plate he turn'd,*

*And with the glitt'ring spoil his horse
adorn'd.* DRYDEN.

The poetry of opera's is generally as exquisitely ill as the musick is good.

ADDISON'S REMARKS ON ITALY.

EXTE'NDLESSNESS. n.s. [from extend.] Unlimited extension. In this sense it is once found; but, I think, with little propriety.

Certain moleculæ seminales must keep the world from an infinitude, and extendless-ness of excursions every moment into new figures and animals.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

EXTI'NGUISHER. n.s. [from extinguish.] A hollow cone put upon a candle to quench it.

If it should ever offer to flame out again, I would use the conicum as an extinguisher to smother it.

MORE'S DIVINE DIALOGUES.

*Of it a broad extinguisher he makes,
And hoods the flames that to their quarry strove.* DRYDEN.

*'Tis better to cover the vital flame with an extinguisher of honour, than let it consume
'till it burns blue, and lies agonizing within the socket.*

COLLIER ON THE VALUE OF LIFE.

EXTO'RTION. n.s. [from extort.]

1. The act or practice of gaining by violence and rapacity.

*That goodness
Of gleaning all the land's wealth into one,
Into your own hands, cardinal, by extortion.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

Oppression and extortion did maintain the greatness, and oppression and extortion did extinguish the greatness of that house.

DAVIES ON IRELAND.

2. Force by which any thing is unjustly taken away.

Because the lords had power to impose this charge, the freeholders were glad to give a great part of their lands to hold the rest free from that extortion.

DAVIES ON IRELAND.

A succeeding king's just recovery of rights from unjust usurpations and extortions, shall never be prejudiced by any act of mine.

EXTRADI'CTIONARY. adj.

[extra and dictio, Latin.] Not consisting in words but realities.

Of these extradictionary and real fallacies, Aristotle and logicians make six; but we observe men are commonly deceived by four thereof.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. I. C. 4.

EXTRAO'RDINARY. adj. [extraordinarius, Lat. This word and its derivatives are generally pronounced extrordinary, whereby the a is liquified into the o.]

1. Different from common order and method; not ordinary.

*Evils must be judged inevitable, if there be no apparent ordinary way to avoid them;
because where council and advice bear rule of God's extraordinary power, without extraordinary warrant, we cannot presume.* HOOKER, B. V. S. 9.

*At that time Spain had no other wars, save those which were grown into an ordinary:
now they have coupled therewith the extraordinary of the Valtoline and the Palatinate.*

BACON'S WAR WITH SPAIN.

Let us see what extraordinary armies have been transmitted thither, and what ordinary forces have been maintained there.

DAVIES'S STATE OF IRELAND.

2. Different from the common course of law.

If they proceeded in a martial or any other extraordinary way, without any form of law, his majesty should declare his justice and affection to an old faithful servant.

CLARENDON.

3. Eminent; remarkable; more than common.

The house was built of fair and strong stone, not affecting so much any extraordinary kind of fineness, as an honourable representing of a firm stateliness.

SIDNEY.

The Indians worshipped rivers, fountains, rocks, or great stones, &c. and all things which seemed to have something extraordinary in them.

STILLINGFLEET'S DEFENCE OF
DISCOURSE ON ROMISH IDOLATRY.

EXTRAVERSION. n.s. [extra and versio, Latin.] The act of throwing out; the state of being thrown out.

Nor does there intervene heat to afford them any colour to pretend that there is made an extraversion of the sulphur, or of any of the two other supposed principles.

BOYLE.

EXTREME. adj. [extremus, Latin.] This word is sometimes corrupted by the superlative termination, of which it is by no means capable, as it has in itself the superlative signification.]

1. Greatest; of the highest degree.

He that will take away extreme heat by setting the body in extremity of cold, shall undoubtedly remove the disease; but together with it the diseased too.

HOOKER, B. IV. S. 8.

The Lord shall smite thee with a fever, an inflammation, and an extreme burning.

BIBLE DEUTERONOMY, XXVIII. 22.

They thought it the extremest of evils to put themselves at the mercy of those hungry and disorderly people. BACON.

2. Utmost.

The hairy fool

Stood on th' extremest verge of the swift brook,

Augmenting it with tears.

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

*Miseno's cape and Bauli last he view'd,
That on the sea's extremest borders stood.*

ADDISON ON ITALY.

3. Last; that beyond which there is nothing.

*Farewel, ungrateful and unkind! I go, Condemn'd by thee, to those sad shades
below:*

*I go th' extremest remedy to prove,
To drink oblivion, and to drench my love.*

DRYDEN.

4. Pressing in the utmost degree.

Cases of necessity being sometime but urgent, sometime extreme, the consideration of publick utility is urged equivalent to the easier kind of necessity.

HOOKER, B. V. S. 9.<sup>99</sup>

TO EXTRICATE. v.a. [extrico, Latin.] To disembarrass; to set free any one in a state of perplexity; to disentangle.

We run into great difficulties about free created agents, which reason cannot well extricate itself out of. LOCKE.

These are great reliefs to nature, as they give her an opportunity of extricating herself from her oppressions, and recovering the several tones and springs of her distended vessels.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 195.

EXUBERANCE. n.s. [exuberatio, Latin.] Overgrowth; superfluous shoots; useless abundance; luxuriance.

Men esteem the overflowing of gall the exuberance of zeal, and all the promises of the faithful combatant they confidently appropriate. DECAY OF PIETY.

Though he expatiates on the same thoughts in different words, yet in his similes that exuberance is avoided.

GARTH.

EYSE'RVANT. n.s. [eye and servant.] A servant that works only while watched.

EYSE'RVICE. n.s. [eye and service.] Service performed only under inspection.

Servants, obey in all things your master; not with eyeservice, as men pleasers, but in singleness of heart.

BIBLE COLOSSIANS, III.

EY'ESHOT. n.s. [eye and shot.] Sight; glance; view.

I must carry off my prize as others do; and not think of sharing the booty before I am

free from danger, and out of eyeshot from the other windows.

DRYDEN'S DON SEBASTIAN.

I have preserved many a young man from her eyeshot by this means.

SPECTATOR, NO. 284.

EY'EWINK. n.s. [eye and wink.] A wink, as a hint or token.

*They would have won any woman's heart;
and, I warrant you, they could never get an eyewink of her.* SHAKESPEARE.

F

A consonant generally reckoned by authors, and admitted by Scaliger, among the semi-vowels, and according to that opinion distinguished in the enumeration of the alphabet by a name beginning with a vowel, yet has so far the nature of a mute, that it is easily pronounced before a liquid in the same syllable. It has in English an invariable sound, formed by compression of the whole lips and a forcible breath. Its kindred letter is V, which, in the Islandick alphabet, is only distinguished from it by a point in the body of the letter.

To FA'BRICATE. v.a. [fabricor, Latin.]

1. To build; to construct.
2. To forge; to devise falsely. This sense is retained among the Scottish lawyers; for when they suspect a paper to be forged, they say it is fabricate.

FABULO'SITY. n.s. [fabulositas, Latin.] Lyingness; fulness of stories; fabulous invention.

In their fabulosity they would report, that they had observations for twenty thousand years.

ABBOT'S DESCRIPTION OF THE WORLD.

FA'BULOUS. adj. [fabulosus, Latin.] Feigned; full of fables, or invented tales.

A person terrified with the imagination of spectres, is more reasonable than one who thinks the appearance of spirits fabulous and groundless.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 110.

FACEPAI'NTER. n.s. [face and painter.] A drawer of portraits; a painter who draws from the life.

FACE'TIOUS. adj. [facetieux, French; facetiæ, Lat.] Gay; cheerful; lively; merry; witty. It is used both of persons and sentiments.

Socrates, informed of some derogating speeches used of him behind his back, made this facetious reply, Let him beat me too when I am absent.

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE, S. 6.

FA'CTIOUS. adj. [factieux, French.]

1. Given to faction; loud and violent in a party; publickly dissensious; addicted to form parties and raise publick disturbances.

*He is a traitor; let him to the Tower,
And crop away that factious pate of his.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

Be factious for redress of all these griefs.

SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

2. Proceeding from publick dissensions; tending to publick discord.

*Grey-headed men and grave, with warriors
mix'd,*

Assemble; and harangues are heard; but soon

In factious opposition.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. XI.

L. 664.

Factious tumults overbore the freedom and honour of the two houses.

KING CHARLES.

Why these factious quarrels, controversies, and battles amongst themselves, when they were all united in the same design?

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL, DEDICATION.

FA'CTORY. n.s. [from factor.]

1. A house or district inhabited by traders in a distant country.

2. The traders embodied in one place.

FAIN. adj. [feagn, Saxon.]

1. Glad; merry; chearful; fond. It is still retained in Scotland in this sense.

*And in her hand she held a mirroure bright,
Wherein her face she often viewed fain.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

*My lips will be fain when I sing unto thee,
and so will my soul whom thou hast delivered.* BIBLE PSALM LXXI.

2. Forced; obliged; compelled. [This signification seems to have arisen from the mistake of the original signification in some ambiguous expressions; as, I was fain to do this, would equally suit with the rest of the sentence, whether it was understood to mean I was compelled, or I was glad to do it for fear of worse. Thus the primary meaning seems to have been early lost.]

*Every weight to shroud it did constrain,
And this fair couple eke to shroud themselves were fain.*

FAIRY QUEEN, B. I. CANT. 1. STAN. 6.

*Whosoever will hear, he shall find God;
whosoever will study to know, shall be also fain to believe.*

HOOKE, B. V.

I was fain to forswear it; they would else have married me to the rotten medlar.

SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

*When Hildebrand had accursed Henry IV.
there were none so hardy as to defend their lord; wherefore he was fain to humble himself before Hildebrand.*

RALEIGH'S ESSAYS.

The learned Castalio was fain to make trenchers at Basle, to keep himself from starving. LOCKE.

FA'INTING. n.s. [from faint.]

Deliquium; temporary loss of animal motion.

These faintings her physicians suspect to proceed from contusions.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

FA'INTLING. adj. [from faint.]

Timorous; feeble-minded. A burlesque or low word.

There's no having patience, thou art such a faintling silly creature.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

FA'INTNESS. n.s. [from faint.]

1. Languour; feebleness; want of strength.

If the prince of the lights of heaven, which now as a giant doth run his unwearied courses, should through a languishing faintness begin to stand.

HOOKE, B. I. S. 3.

This proceeded not from any violence of pain, but from a general languishing and faintness of spirits, which made him think nothing worth the trouble of one careful thought. TEMPLE.

2. Inactivity; want of vigour.

This evil proceeds rather of the unsoundness of the counsels laid for the reformation, or of faintness in following and effecting the same, than of any such fatal course appointed of God.

SPENSER'S STATE OF IRELAND.

3. Timorousness; dejection.

The paleness of this flow'r Bewray'd the faintness of my master's heart. SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

FA'INTY. adj. [from faint.] Weak;
feeble; languid; debilitated; enfeebled.

When Winter frosts constrain the field with cold,

The fainty root can take no steady hold.

DRYDEN'S VIRGIL'S GEORGICKS.

*The ladies gasp'd, and scarcely could
respire;*

*The breath they drew, no longer air, but
fire:*

The fainty knights were scorch'd, and knew not where

To run for shelter; for no shade was near.

DRYDEN.

FAIR. n.s. [foire, French; feriæ, or forum, Latin.] An annual or stated meeting of buyers and sellers; a time of traffick more frequented than a market.
The privilege of holding fairs in England is granted by the king.

With silver, iron, tin and lead they traded in thy fairs.

BIBLE EZEKIEL, XXVII. 12.

*His corn, his cattle, were his only care,
And his supreme delight a country fair.*

DRYDEN.

The ancient Nundinæ, or fairs of Rome, were kept every ninth day: afterwards the same privileges were granted to the country markets, which were at first under the power of the consuls.

ARBUTHNOT ON COINS.

FA'LDSTOOL. n.s. [fald or fold and stool.] A kind of stool placed at the south-side of the altar, at which the kings of England kneel at their coronation.

FALLA'CIOUS. adj. [fallax, Latin;
fallacieux, French.]

1. Producing mistake; sophistical. It is never used of men, but of writings, propositions, or things.

They believed and assented to things neither evident nor certain, nor yet so much as probable, but actually false and fallacious; such as were the absurd doctrines and stories of their rabbies.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

2. Deceitful; mocking expectation.

*Soon as the force of that fallacious fruit,
That with exhilarating vapour bland
About their spirits had play'd, and inmost pow'rs*

Made err, was now exhal'd.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. IX.

False philosophy inspires

Fallacious hope. MILTON.

FA'LLINGSICKNESS. n.s. [fall and sickness.] The epilepsy; a disease in which the patient is without any warning deprived at once of his senses, and falls down.

Did Cæsar swoon? — He fell down in the market-place, and foam'd at mouth, and was speechless. — He hath the fallingsickness.

SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

The dogfisher is good against the fallingsickness. WALTON.

FA'LSIFIER. n.s. [from falsify.]

1. One that counterfeits; one that makes any thing to seem what it is not.

It happens in theories built on too obvious or too few experiments, what happens to falsifiers of coin; for counterfeit money will endure some one proof, others another, but none of them all proofs. BOYLE.

2. A liar; one that contrives falshoods.

*Boasters are naturally falsifiers, and the people, of all others, that put their shams
the worst together.*

L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

To FA'LTER. v.n. [faltar, to be wanting, Spanish; vaulttur, a stammerer, Islandick, which is probably a word from the same radical.]

1. To hesitate in the utterance of words.

With faltering tongue, and trembling ev'ry vein,

Tell on, quoth she. FAIRY QUEEN, B. I.

*The pale assistants on each other star'd,
With gaping mouths for issuing words prepar'd;*

*The still-born sounds upon the palate hung,
And dy'd imperfect on the falt'ring tongue.* DRYDEN.

He changes, gods! and falters at the question:

His fears, his words, his looks declare him guilty. SMITH.

2. To fail in any act of the body.

This earth shall have a feeling; and these stones

Prove armed soldiers, ere her native king Shall falter under foul rebellious arms.

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD II.

3. To fail in any act of the understanding.

How far ideots are concerned in the want or weakness of any or all faculties, an exact observation of their several ways of faltering would discover. LOCKE.

To FA'LTER. v.a. To sift; to cleanse. This word seems to be merely rustick or provincial.

Barley for malt must be bold, dry, sweet, and clean faltered from foulness, seeds and oats. MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

FANA'TICISM. n.s. [from fanatic.] Enthusiasm; religious frenzy.

A church whose doctrines are derived from the clear fountains of the Scriptures, whose polity and discipline are formed upon the most uncorrupted models of antiquity, which has stood unshaken by the most furious assaults of popery on the one hand, and fanaticism on the other; has triumphed over all the arguments of its enemies, and has nothing now to contend with but their slanders and calumnies.

ROGERS'S SERMONS.

FANA'TICK. adj. [fanaticus, Latin; fanatique, Fr.] Enthusiastick; struck with a superstitious frenzy.

After these appear'd

*A crew, who, under names of old renown,
Osiris, Isis, Orus, and their train,
With monst'rous shapes and sorceries abus'd*

Fanatick Egypt, and her priests, to seek Their wand'ring gods disguis'd in brutish forms. MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

FANA'TICK. n.s. [from the adjective.] An enthusiast; a man mad with wild notions of religion.

The double armature of St. Peter is a more destructive engine than the tumultary weapon snatcht up by a fanatick.

DECAY OF PIETY.

FANCYMO'NGER. n.s. [from fancy.] One who deals in tricks of imagination.

There is a man haunts the forest, that abuses our young plants with carving Rosalind on their barks; hangs odes upon hawthorns, and elegies on brambles; all, forsooth, deifying the name of Rosalind. If I could meet that fancymonger, I would give him some good counsel; for he seems to have the quotidian of love upon him.

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

FA'NCYSICK. adj. [fancy and sick.] One whose imagination is unsound; one whose distemper is in his own mind.

'Tis not necessity, but opinion, that makes men miserable; and when we come once to be fancysick, there's no cure for it.

L'ESTRANGE.

FA'NGLED. adj. [from fangle.] This word seems to signify gaudy; ridiculously shewy; vainly decorated. This is still retained in Scotland: as, he's new fangled, or whimsical, and very fond of novelty.<sup>100</sup>

Quick wits be in desire new fangled, and in purpose unconstant. ASCHAM.

*A book! oh, rare one!
Be not, as in this fangled world, a garment
Nobler than that it covers.*

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

FAR-FE'TCH. n.s. [far and fetch.]
A deep stratagem. A ludicrous word.

*But Jesuits have deeper reaches,
In all their politick farfetches;
And from their Coptick priest, Kircherus, Found out this mystick way to jeer us.*

HUDIBRAS, P. III.

FAR-FE'TCHED. adj. [far and fetch.]

1. Brought from places remote.

*Of these things others quickly will dispose,
Whose pains have earn'd the farfetch'd spoil.* MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

*By his command we boldly cross'd the line,
And bravely fought where southern stars arise:*

*We trac'd the farfetch'd gold unto the
mine,
And that which brib'd our fathers made our prize.* DRYDEN.

2. Studiously sought; elaborately strained; not easily or naturally introduced.

York, with all his farfetch'd policy.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

For farfetch'd rhymes make puzzled angels strain,

And in low prose dull Lucifer complain.

SMITH.

Under this head we may rank those words, which signify different ideas, by a sort of an unaccountable farfetched analogy, or distant resemblance, that fancy has introduced between one thing and another; as when we say, the meat is green when it is half roasted. WATTS'S LOGICK.

FARCE. n.s. [from the verb; or from farcer, French, to mock.] A dramatick representation written without regularity, and stuffed with wild and ludicrous conceits.

There is yet a lower sort of poetry and painting, which is out of nature; for a farce is that in poetry which grotesque is in a picture: the persons and actions of a farce are all unnatural, and the manners false; that is, inconsistent with the characters of mankind: grotesque painting is the just resemblance of this.

DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

What should be great, you turn to farce.

PRIOR.

They object against it as a farce, because the irregularity of the plot should answer to the extravagance of the characters, which they say this piece wants, and therefore is no farce. GAY.

FA'RTHHER. adv. [This word is now generally considered as the comparative degree of far; but by no analogy can far make farther or farthest: it is therefore probable, that the ancient orthography was nearer the true, and that we ought to write further and furthest, from forth, forther, forthest, forðor, furðer, Saxon; the o and u, by resemblance of sound, being first confounded in speech, and afterwards in books.] At a greater distance; to a greater distance; more remotely; beyond; moreover.

To make a perfect judgment of good pictures, when compared with one another, besides rules, there is farther required a long conversation with the best pieces.

DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

They contented themselves with the opinions, fashions and things of their country, without looking any farther.

LOCKE.

FA'RTHINGALE. n.s. [This word has much exercised the etymology of

Skinner, who at last seems to determine that it is derived from vertu garde: if he had considered what vert signifies in Dutch, he might have found out the true sense.] A hoop; circles of whale-bone used to spread the petticoat to a wide circumference.

*With silken coats, and caps, and golden rings,
With ruffs, and cuffs, and farthingales, and things.* SHAKESPEARE.

*Tell me,
What compass will you wear your farthingale?* SHAKESPEARE.

*Arthur wore in hall
Round table, like a farthingal.*
HUDIBRAS, P. 1. CANT. 1.

Some will have it that it portends the downfal of the French king; and observe, that the farthingale appeared in England a little before the ruin of the Spanish monarchy. ADDISON.

*She seems a medley of all ages,
With a huge farthingale to swell her fustian stuff,
A new commode, a topknot, and a ruff.*
SWIFT.

FA'SHIONIST. n.s. [from fashion.] A follower of the mode; a fop; a coxcomb. Dictionaries.

FASTI'DIOUS. adj. [fastidiosus, Latin; fastidieux, fastidieuse, French.] Disdainful; squeamish; delicate to a vice; insolently nice.

Reasons plainly delivered, and always after one manner, especially with fine and fastidious minds, enter but heavily and dully.

BACON'S COLLECTION OF GOOD AND EVIL.

*Let their fastidious vain
Commission of the brain, Run on and rage, sweat, censure, and condemn,
They were not made for thee, less thou for them.* BEN JONSON.

A squeamish fastidious niceness, in meats and drinks, must be cured by starving.
L'ESTRANGE.

All hopes, raised upon the promises or supposed kindnesses of the fastidious and fallacious great ones of the world, shall fail. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

FA'TAL. adj. [fatalis, Latin; fatal, French]

1. Deadly; mortal; destructive; causing destruction.

O fatal maid! thy marriage is endow'd With Phrygian, Latian, and Rutilian blood. DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

*A palsy in the brain is most dangerous;
when it seizeth the heart, or organs of breathing, fatal.*

ARBUTHNOT ON DIET.

2. Proceeding by destiny; inevitable; necessary.

Others delude their trouble by a graver way of reasoning, that these things are fatal and necessary, it being in vain to be troubled at that which we cannot help.

TILLOTSON'S SERMONS.

3. Appointed by destiny.

It was fatal to the king to fight for his money; and though he avoided to fight with enemies abroad, yet he was still enforced to fight for it with rebels at home.

BACON'S HENRY VII.

*Fatal course
Had circled his full orb.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. V.

*It was Still fatal to stout Hudibras,
In all his feats of arms, when least
He dreamt of it, to prosper best.*

HUDIBRAS, P. 1. CANT. 3.

*Behold the destin'd place of your abodes;
For thus Anchises prophecy'd of old,
And this our fatal place of rest foretold.*

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID, B. VII.

*O race divine!
For beauty still is fatal to the line.*

DRYDEN.

FA'UCET. n.s. [fausset, French; fauces, Latin.] The pipe inserted into a vessel to give vent to the liquor, and stopped up by a peg or spigot. It is sometimes improperly written fosset.

You were out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a cause between an orange-wife and a fosset-seller, and adjourned a controversy of three-pence to a second audience.
SHAKESPEARE.

If you are sent down to draw drink, and find it will not run, blow strongly into the faucet, and it will immediately pour into your mouth.

SWIFT'S DIRECTIONS TO THE BUTLER.

FAULT. n.s. [faut, faute, Fr. faltar, to be deficient, Spanish. The l is sometimes sounded, and sometimes mute. In conversation it is generally suppressed.]

1. Offence; slight crime; somewhat liable to censure or objection.

The prophet chuseth rather to charge them with the fault of making a law unto themselves, than the crime of transgressing a law which God had made.

HOOKER, B. III. S. 6.

He finds no fault with their opinion about the true God, but only that it was not clear and distinct enough. STILLINGFLEET.

*He that but conceives a crime in thought,
Contracts the danger of an actual fault:
Then what must he expect that still proceeds*

To commit sin, and work up thoughts to deeds. DRYDEN.

*If you like not my poem, the fault may possibly be in my writing; but more probably
'tis in your morals, which cannot bear the truth of it.* DRYDEN.

They wholly mistake the nature of criticism, who think its business is principally to find fault. DRYDEN.

*To be desirous of a good name, and careful to do every thing, that we innocently may,
to obtain it, is so far from being a fault,*

even in private persons, that it is their great and indispensable duty.

ATTERBURY'S SERMONS.

*Before his sacred name flies ev'ry fault,
And each exalted stanza teems with thought.* POPE.

Which of our thrum-cap'd ancestors found fault,

For want of sugar-tongs or spoons for salt?
KING.

Being void of all friendship and enmity, they never complain, nor find fault with the times. SWIFT.

2. Defect; want; absence.

I could tell to thee, as to one it pleases me, for fault of a better, to call my friend, I could be sad, and sad indeed too.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV. P. II.

There is no straw given unto thy servants, and they say unto us, make brick; and behold, thy servants are beaten; but the fault is in thine own people.

BIBLE EXODUS, V. 16.

3. Puzzle; difficulty: as, the enquirer is at a fault.

To FEAGUE. v.a. [Gower uses To feige, free to censure; fegen, German, to sweep; fyken, Dutch, to strike.] To whip; to chastise; to beat. In Scottish feake, to slutter; to be idly or officiously busy.<sup>101</sup>

FE'ASTRITE. n.s. [feast and rite.] Custom observed in entertainments.

*His hospitable gate,
Unbarr'd to all, invites a numerous train
Of daily guests; whose board with plenty crown'd,
Revives the feastrites old.* PHILLIPS.

FE'ATHERDRIVER. n.s. [feather and drive.] One who cleanses feathers by whisking them about.

A featherdriver had the residue of his lungs filled with the fine dust or down of feathers.

DERHAM'S PHYSICO-THEOLOGY.

FE'ATHERSELLER. n.s. [feather and seller.] One who sells feathers for beds.

FE'CULENT. adj. [fæculentus, Lat. feculent, French.] Foul; dreggy; excrementitious.

*But both his hands, most filthy feculent,
Above the water were on high extent,
And fain'd to wash themselves incessantly,
Yet nothing cleaner were for such intent.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

We may affirm them to be to the body as the light of a candle to the gross and feculent snuff, which as it is not pent up in it, so neither doth it partake of its stench and impurity. GLANVILLE'S APOLOGY.

FEET. n.s. The plural of foot.

His brother's image to his mind appears, Inflames his heart with rage, and wings his feet with fears. POPE'S STATIUS.

FELLOW-CO'MMONER. n.s.

1. One who has the same right of common.

He cannot appropriate, he cannot inclose, without the consent of all his fellowcom-moners, all mankind. LOCKE.

2. A commoner at Cambridge of the higher order, who dines with the fellows.

FELLOW-HE'LPER. n.s.

Coadjutor; one who concurs in the same business.

We ought to receive such, that we might be fellowhelpers to the truth.

BIBLE 3 JOHN, VIII.

FE'MALE. n.s. [femelle, French; femella, Latin.] A she; one of the sex which brings young.<sup>102</sup>

God created man in his own image, male and female created he them.

BIBLE GENESIS, I. 27.

*Man, more divine,
Lord of the wide world, and wide wat'ry seas,*

*Indu'd with intellectual sense and soul,
Are masters to their females, and their lords.* SHAKESPEARE.

FE'NDER. n.s. [from fend]

1. An iron plate laid before the fire to hinder coals that fall from rolling forward to the floor.

2. Any thing laid or hung at the side of a ship to keep off violence.

FENERA'TION. n.s. [fæneratio, Latin.] Usury; the gain of interest; the practice of increasing money by lending.

The hare figured not only pusillanimity and timidity from its temper, but feneration and usury from its fecundity and superfetation.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. III.

C. 17.

FERIA'TION. n.s. [feriatio, Lat.]

The act of keeping holiday; cessation from work.

As though there were any feriation in nature, this season is commonly termed the physicians vacation.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

To FERME'NT. v.a. [fermento, Latin; fermenter, French.] To exalt or rarify by intestine motion of parts.

Ye vig'rous swains! while youth ferments your blood,

*And purer spirits swell the sprightly flood,
Now range the hills, the thickest woods
beset,*

Wind the shrill horn, or spread the waving net. POPE.

To FERME'NT. v.n. To have the parts put into intestine motion.

FE'RULA. n.s. [ferule, Fr. from ferula, giant fennel, Lat.] An instrument of correction with which young scholars are beaten on the hand: so named because anciently the stalks of fennel were used for this purpose.

These differ as much as the rod and ferula. SHAW'S GRAMMAR.

TO FE'RULE. v.a. To chastise with the ferula.

FESCUE. n.s. [veese, Dutch; festu, French.] A small wire by which those who teach to read point out the letters.

Teach him an alphabet upon his fingers, making the points of his fingers of his left hand both on the inside to signify some letter, when any of them is pointed at by the forefinger of the right hand, or by any kind of fescue. HOLDER.

*Teach them how manly passions ought to move;
For such as cannot think, can never love;
And since they needs will judge the poet's art,
Point 'em with fescues to each shining part.* DRYDEN.

FE'STIVE. adj. [festivus, Latin.] Joyous; gay; befitting a feast.

*The glad circle round them yield their souls
To festive mirth and wit that knows no gall.* THOMSON.

FESTI'VITY. n.s. [festivitas, Latin, from festive.]

1. Festival; time of rejoicing.

The daughter of Jephtha came to be worshipped as a deity, and had an annual festivity observed unto her honour. BROWN.

There happening a great and solemn festivity, such as the sheep-shearing used to be, David condescends to beg of a rich man some small repast. SOUTH.

2. Gaiety; joyfulness; temper or behaviour befitting a feast.

To those persons there is no better instrument to cause the remembrance, and to endear the affection to the article, than the recommending it by festivity and joy of a holyday. TAYLOR.

TO FE'TTLE. v.n. [A cant word from feel.] To do trifling business; to ply the hands without labour.

When your master is most busy in company, come in and pretend to fettle about the room; and if he chides, say you thought he rung the bell.

SWIFT'S DIRECTIONS TO THE FOOTMAN.

FE'VEER. n.s. [fievre, French; febris, Latin.] A disease in which the body is violently heated, and the pulse quickened, or in which heat and cold prevail by turns. It is sometimes continual, sometimes intermittent.

*Think'st thou the fry fever will go out
With titles blown from adulation?
Will it give place to flexure and low bending?* SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

*Duncan is in his grave;
After life's fitful fever he sleeps well.* SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*Should not a ling'ring fever be remov'd,
Because it long has rag'd within my blood?* DRYDEN.

He had never dreamed in his life, 'till he had the fever he was then newly recovered of. LOCKE.

FE'UTERER. n.s. A dogkeeper: perhaps the cleaner of the kennel.

FE'WEL. n.s. [feu, French.] Combustible matter; materials for keeping fire: as firewood, coal.

If a spark of error have thus far prevailed, falling even where the wood was green, and farthest off from any inclination unto furious attempts, must not the peril thereof be greater in men, whose minds are as dry fewel, apt beforehand unto tumults, seditions and broils?

HOOKE, DEDICATION.

*Others may give the fewel or the fire;
But they the breath, that makes the flame, inspire.* DENHAM.

A known quantity of fewel, all kindled at once, will cause water to boil, which being lighted gradually will never be able to do it. BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

FI'DDLEFADDLE. adj. Trifling; giving trouble, or making a bustle about nothing.

She was a troublesome fiddlefaddle old woman, and so ceremonious that there was no bearing of her.

ARBUTHNOT'S JOHN BULL.

To FIDGE, To FI'DGET. v.n. [A cant word.] To move nimbly and irregularly. It implies in Scotland agitation.

Tim, thou'rt the Punch to stir up trouble in;

*You wriggle, fidge, and make a rout,
Put all your brother puppets out;*

Run on in a perpetual round,

To teaze, perplex, disturb, confound.

SWIFT.

FI'ELDMARSHAL. n.s. [field and marshal.] Commander of an army in the field.

FI'ELDOFFICER. n.s. [field and officer.] An officer whose command in the field extends to a whole regiment: as the colonel, lieutenant-colonel, and major.

FI'ERCENESS. n.s. [from fierce.]

1. Ferocity; savageness.

The same defect of heat which gives a fierceness to our natures, may contribute to that roughness of our language.

SWIFT'S LETTER TO THE LORD HIGH TREASURER.

2. Eagerness for blood; fury.

Suddenly there came out of a wood a monstrous lion, with a she-bear not far from him, of little less fierceness.

SIDNEY.

3. Quickness to attack; keenness in anger and resentment.

The Greeks are strong, and skilful to their strength,

Fierce to their skill, and to their fierceness valiant. SHAKESPEARE.

4. Violence; outrageous passion.

His pride and brutal fierceness I abhor;

But scorn your mean suspicions of me more. DRYDEN'S AURENGZEBE.

FI'GURABLE. adj. [from figuro, Latin.] Capable of being brought to certain form, and retained in it. Thus lead is figurable, but not water.

The differences of impressible and not impressible, figurable and not figurable, scissible and not scissible, are plebeian notions. BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

FI'GURATIVE. adj. [figuratif-ve, Fr. from figura, Latin.]

1. Representing something else; typical; representative.

This, they will say, was figurative, and served by God's appointment but for a time, to shadow out the true everlasting glory of a more divine sanctity; where into Christ being long since entered, it seemeth that all these curious exornations should rather cease. HOOKER, B. V. S. 15.

2. Changed by rhetorical figures from the primitive meaning; not literal.

How often have we been railed at for understanding words in a figurative sense, which cannot be literally understood without overthrowing the plainest evidence of sense and reason.

STILLINGFLEET'S DEFENCE OF DISCOURSE ON ROMISH IDOLATRY.

This is a figurative expression, where the words are used in a different sense from what they signify in their first ordinary intention. ROGERS, SERMON 14.

3. Full of figures; full of rhetorical exornations; full of changes from the original sense.

Sublime subjects ought to be adorned with the sublimest and with the most figurative expressions.

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL, PREFACE.

Quacks, figure-flingers, pettifoggers, and republican plotters cannot well live without it. COLLIER OF CONFIDENCE.

To FILE. v.a. [from filum, a thread.]

1. To string upon a thread or wire. Whence to file a bill is to offer it in its order to the notice of the judge.

From the day his first bill was filed he began to collect reports.

ARBUTHNOT AND POPE'S MARTIN SCRIBLERUS.

2. [from feolan, Saxon.] To cut with a file.

They which would file away most from the largeness of that offer, do in more sparing terms acknowledge little less.

HOOKE, B. V. S. 27.

His humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory, his tongue filed, and his eye ambitious.

SHAKESPEARE'S LOVE'S LABOUR'S LOST.

Let men be careful how they attempt to cure a blemish by filing or cutting off the head of such an overgrown tooth. RAY.

3. [from filan.] To foul; to sully; to pollute. This sense is retained in Scotland.<sup>103</sup>

*For Banquo's issue have I fil'd my mind,
For them the gracious Duncan have I murder'd.* SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*His weeds, divinely fashioned,
All fil'd and mangl'd.*

CHAPMAN'S ILIADS, B. XVIII.

To FILE. v.n. [from the noun.] To march in a file, not abreast, but one behind another.

All ran down without order or ceremony,

'till we drew up in good order, and filed off. TATLER, NO. 86.

*Did all the grosser atoms at the cell
Of chance file off to form the pond'rous ball,
And undetermin'd into order fall?*

BLACKMORE'S CREATION.

To FI'LLIP. v.a. [A word, says Skinner, formed from the sound. This resemblance I am not able to discover, and therefore am inclined to imagine it corrupted from fill up, by some combination of ideas which cannot be recovered.] To strike with the nail of the finger by a sudden spring or motion.

If I do, filip me with a three-man beetle.
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

*Then let the pebbles on the hungry beach
Fillip the stars: then let the mutinous winds Strike the proud cedars 'gainst the fiery sun.* SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

We see, that if you fillip a lutestring, it sheweth double or treble.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 183.

FI'LLIP. n.s. [from the verb.] A jerk of the finger let go from the thumb.

FINDFA'ULT. n.s. [find and fault.] A censurer; a caviller.

We are the makers of manners, Kate; and the liberty that follows our places, stops the mouth of all findfaults. SHAKESPEARE.

To FINEDRA'W. v.a. [fine and draw.] To sow up a rent with so much nicety that it is not perceived.

FINEFI'NGERED. adj. [fine and finger.] Nice; artful; exquisite.

*The most finefinger'd workman on the
ground,
Arachne, by his means was vanquished.*
SPENSER.

FINE'SSE. n.s. [French.] Artifice; stratagem: an unnecessary word which is creeping into the language.

*A circumstance not much to be stood upon,
in case it were not upon some finess.*

HAYWARD.

F'INGLEFANGLE. n.s. [from fangle.] A trifle: a burlesque word.

*We agree in nothing but to wrangle,
About the slightest finglefangle.*

HUDIBRAS, P. III. CAN. 3.

FI'REBALL. n.s. [fire and ball.] Grenado; ball filled with combustibles, and bursting where it is thrown.

*Judge of those insolent boasts of conscience, which, like so many fireballs, or mouth
grenadoes, are thrown at our church.*

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

The same great man hath sworn to make us swallow his coin in fireballs. SWIFT.

FI'REBRUSH. n.s. [fire and brush.] The brush which hangs by the fire to sweep the hearth.

*When you are ordered to stir up the fire, clean away the ashes from betwixt the bars
with the firebrush.* SWIFT.

FI'RECROSS. n.s. [fire and cross.] A token in Scotland for the nation to take arms: the ends thereof burnt black, and in some parts smeared with blood. It is carried like lightning<sup>104</sup> from one place to another. Upon refusal to send it forward, or to rise, the last person who has it shoots the other dead.

He sent his heralds through all parts of the realm, and commanded the firecross to be carried; namely, two firebrands set in fashion of a cross, and pitched upon the point of a spear. HAYWOOD.

FI'REMAN. n.s. [fire and man.] 1. One who is employed to extinguish burning houses.

*The fireman sweats beneath his crooked
arms;
A leathern casque his vent'rous head
defends,*

Boldly he climbs where thickest smoke ascends. GAY.

2. A man of violent passions.

I had last night the fate to drink a bottle with two of these firemen.

TATLER, NO. 61.

FI'RESHOVEL. n.s. [fire and shovel.] The instrument with which the hot coals are thrown up in kitchens.

Nim and Bardolph are sworn brothers in filching; and in Calais they stole a fireshovel. SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

Culinary utensils and irons often feel the force of fire; as tongs, fireshovels, prongs, and irons.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

The neighbours are coming out with forks and fireshovels, and spits, and other domestick weapons.

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRYAR.

To FISH. v.n.

1. To be employed in catching fishes.
2. To endeavour at any thing by artifice.

*While others fish, with craft, for great opinion,
I, with great truth, catch meer simplicity.*
SHAKESPEARE.

To FISH. v.a. To search water in quest of fish, or any thing else.

Some have fished the very jakes for papers left there by men of wit. SWIFT.

*Oft, as he fish'd her nether realms for wit,
The goddess favour'd him, and favours
yet.* POPE'S DUNCIAD.

FI'SHERTOWN. n.s. [fisher and town.] A town inhabited by fishermen.

Others of them, in that time, burned that fishertown Mousehole.

CAREW'S SURVEY OF CORNWAL.

Lime in Dorsetshire, a little fishertown.
CLARENDON, B. VII.

FI'SH KETTLE. n.s. [fish and kettle.] A caldron made long for the fish to be boiled without bending.

It is probably that the way of embalming amongst the Egyptians was by boiling the body, in a long caldron like a fishkettle, in some kind of liquid balsam.

GREW'S MUSÆUM.

FIT. n.s. [from fight, Skinner, every fit of a disease being a struggle of nature; from viit, in Flemish, frequent, Junius.]

1. A paroxysm or exacerbation of any intermittent distemper.

Small stones and gravel collect and become very large in the kidneys, in which case a fit of the stone in that part is the cure.

SHARP'S SURGERY.

2. Any short return after intermission; interval.

*Sometimes 'tis grateful to the rich to try
A short vicissitude, and fit of poverty.*

DRYDEN'S HORACE.

Men that are habitually wicked may now and then, by fits and starts, feel certain motions of repentance. L'ESTRANGE.

*By fits my swelling grief appears,
In rising sighs and falling tears.*

ADDISON ON ITALY.

*Thus o'er the dying lamp th' unsteady
flame*

Hangs quivering on a point, leaps off by fits,

And falls again as loth to quit its hold.

ADDISON'S CATO.

Religion is not the business of some fits only and intervals of our life, to be taken up at certain days and hours, and laid aside for the rest of our time; but a system of precepts to be regarded in all our conduct.

ROGERS'S SERMONS.

All fits of pleasure we balanced by an equal degree of pain or languor: 'tis like spending this year part of the next year's revenue.

SWIFT.

3. Any violent affection of mind or body.

*The life did flit away out of her nest,
And all his senses were with deadly fit
opprest.* FAIRY QUEEN.

An ambitious man subjects himself to others, and puts it in the power of every malicious tongue to throw him into a fit of melancholy. ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

4. Disorder; distemperature.

*For your husband,
He's noble, wise, judicious, and best knows
The fits o' th' season.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

5. It is used, without an epithet of discrimination, for the hysterical disorders of women, and the convulsions of children; and by the vulgar for the epilepsy.

Mrs. Bull was so much enraged, that she fell downright into a fit.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN
BULL.<sup>105</sup>

FITZ. n.s. [Norman, from fil, a son, Fr.] A son. Only used in law and genealogy: as Fitzherbert, the son of Herbert; Fitzthomas, the son of Thomas; Fitzroy, the son of the king. It is commonly used of illegitimate children.

FIVE. adj. [fif, Saxon.] Four and one; half of ten.

And five of them were wise, and five were foolish. BIBLE MATTHEW.

No person, no incident, but must be of use to carry on the main design: all things else are like six fingers to the hand, when nature, which is superfluous in nothing, can do her work with five.

DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

*Five herds, five bleating flocks, his pastures
fill'd;*

His lands a hundred yoke of oxen till'd.

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

Our British youth lose their figure by that time they are five and twenty.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN, NO. 111.

FI'ZGIG. n.s. A kind of dart or harpoon with which seamen strike fish.

Can'st thou with fizgigs pierce him to the quick,

Or in his skull thy barbed trident stick.

SANDYS'S JOB.<sup>106</sup>

FLAM. n.s. [A cant word of no certain etymology.] A falsehood; a lye; an illusory pretext.

*A flam more senseless than the rog'ry
Of old aruspicy and aug'ry.*

HUDIBRAS, P. II. CANT. 3.

'Till these men can prove the things, ordered by our church, to be either intrinsically unlawful or indecent, all pretences or pleas of conscience to the contrary are nothing but cant and cheat, flam and delusion. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

What are most of the histories of the world but lyes? Lyes immortalized and consigned over as a perpetual abuse and flam upon posterity. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

To FLAM. v.a. [from the noun.] To deceive with a lye. Merely cant.

*For so our ignorance was flamm'd,
To damn ourselves t' avoid being damn'd.*

HUDIBRAS, P. III.

*God is not to be flammed off with lyes, who knows exactly what thou can'st do,
and what not.* SOUTH'S SERMONS.

To FLAP. v.a. [from the noun.]

1. To beat with a flap, as flies are beaten.

A hare, hard put to it by an eagle, took sanctuary in a ditch with a beetle: the eagle flapt off the former, and devoured the other. L'ESTRANGE.

*Yet let me flap this bug with gilded wings,
This painted child of dirt, that stinks and stings.* POPE.

2. To move with a flap or noise made by the stroke of any thing broad.

*With fruitless toil
Flap filmy pinions oft, to extricate*

Their feet in liquid shackles bound.

PHILLIPS.

*Three times, all in the dead of night,
A bell was heard to ring;*

And shrieking at her window thrice

The raven flapp'd his wing. TICKELL.

To FLAP. v.n.

1. To ply the wings with noise.

'Tis common for a duck to run flapping and fluttering away, as if maimed, to carry people from her young. L'ESTRANGE.

The dira flapping on the shield of Turnus, and fluttering about his head, disheartened him in the duel.

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID, DEDICATION.

2. To fall with flaps, or broad parts depending.

When suffocating mists obscure the morn, Let thy worst wig, long us'd to storms, be worn;

This knows the powder'd footman, and with care

Beneath his flapping hat secures his hair.

GAY'S TRIVIA.

FLA'PDRAGON. n.s. [from a dragon supposed to breathe fire.]

1. A play in which they catch raisins out of burning brandy, and, extinguishing them by closing the mouth, eat them.

2. The thing eaten at flapdragon.

He plays at quoits well, and eats conger and fennel, and drinks candles ends for flapdragons, and rides the wild mare with the boys.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV. P. II.

FLASK. n.s. [flasque, French.]

1. A bottle; a vessel.

*Then for the Bourdeaux you may freely ask;
But the Champagne is to each man his flask.* KING.

2. A powder-horn.

*Powder in a skillless soldier's flask
Is set on fire.* SHAKESPEARE.

FLA'SKET. n.s. [from flask.] A vessel in which viands are served.

*Another plac'd
The silver stands, with golden flaskets grac'd.* POPE'S ODYSSEY.

To FLA'TTER. v.a. [flater, French.]

1. To sooth with praises; to please with blandishments; to gratify with servile obsequiousness; to gain by false compliments.

*When I tell him he hates flatterers,
He says he does; being then most flattered.*
SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

*His nature is too noble for the world;
tHe would not flatter Neptune for his trident,
Or Jove for's power to thunder: his heart's his mouth;*

What his breast forges, that his tongue must vent. SHAKESPEARE.

He that flattereth his neighbour, spreadeth a net for his feet.

BIBLE PROVERBS, XXIX. 5.

He flattereth himself in his own eyes, until his iniquity be found hateful.

BIBLE PSALMS, XXXVI. 2.

After this way of flattering their willing benefactors out of part, they contrived another of forcing their unwilling neighbours out of all their possessions.

DECAY OF PIETY.

Averse alike to flatter or offend. POPE.

They flatter'd ev'ry day, and some days eat. POPE.

I scorn to flatter you or any man.

DR. NEWTON'S DEDICATION TO
MILTON.

2. To praise falsely.

*Flatter'd crimes of a licentious age,
Provoke our censure.* YOUNG.

3. To please; to sooth. This sense is purely Gallick.

A consort of voices supporting themselves by their different parts make a harmony, pleasingly fills the ears and flatters them.

DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

4. To raise false hopes.

*He always vacant, always amiable,
Hopes thee, of flatt'ring gales
Unmindful.* MILTON.

FLEA. n.s. [flea, Saxon; vloye, Dutch; fleach, Scottish.] A small red insect remarkable for its agility in leaping, which sucks the blood of larger animals.

While wormwood hath seed, get a handful or twain,

To save against March to make flea to refrain:

Where chamber is sweeped, and wormwood is strown,

No flea for his life dare abide to be known. TUSSEY'S HUSBANDRY.

Fleas breed principally of straw or mats, where there hath been a little moisture.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

A valiant flea, that dares eat his breakfast on the lip of a lion.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

FLEET. n.s. [flota, Saxon.] A company of ships; a navy.

Our pray'rs are heard; our master's fleet shall go

As far as winds can bear, or waters flow.
PRIOR.

FLEET. n.s. [fleot, Saxon, an estuary, or arm of the sea.] A creek; an inlet of water. A provincial word, from which the Fleet-prison and Fleet-street are named.

They have a very good way in Essex of draining of lands that have land-floods or fleets running through them, which make a kind of a small creek.

MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

FLESH. n.s. [flæc, flæsc, Saxon; vleesch, Dutch; fêol, Erse.]

1. The body distinguished from the soul.

*As if this flesh, which walls about our life,
Were brass impregnable.*

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD II.

*A disease that's in my flesh,
Which I must needs call mine.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

And thou, my soul, which turn'st with curious eye

To view the beams of thine own form divine,

Know, that thou can'st know nothing perfectly,

While thou art clouded with this flesh of mine. DAVIES.

2. The muscles distinguished from the skin, bones, tendons.

A spirit hath not flesh and bones.

BIBLE NEW TESTAMENT.

3. Animal food distinguished from vegetable.

Flesh should be forborne as long as he is in coats, or at least 'till he is two or three years old. LOCKE.

Flesh, without being qualified with acids, is too alkalescent a diet.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

Acidity in the infant may be cured by a flesh diet in the nurse.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

4. The body of beasts or birds used in food, distinct from fishes.

There is another indictment upon thee, for suffering flesh to be eaten in thy house, contrary to the law.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

*We mortify ourselves with the diet of fish;
and think we fare coarsely, if we abstain from the flesh of other animals.*

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

5. Animal nature.

The end of all flesh is come before me.

BIBLE GENESIS, VI. 13.

6. Carnality; corporal appetites.

Name not religion; for thou lov'st the flesh. SHAKESPEARE.

Fasting serves to mortify the flesh, and subdue the lusts thereof.

SMALRIDGE'S SERMONS.

7. A carnal state; worldly disposition.<sup>107</sup>

They that are in the flesh cannot please God. BIBLE ROMANS, VIII. 8.

The flesh lusteth against the spirit, and the spirit against the flesh.

BIBLE GALATIANS, V. 16.

8. Near relation.

Let not our hand be upon him; for he is our flesh. BIBLE GENESIS.

When thou seest the naked, cover him; and hide not thyself from thine own flesh.

BIBLE ISAIAH, LVIII. 7.

9. The outward or literal sense. The Orientals termed the immediate or literal signification of any precept or type the flesh, and the remote or typical meaning the spirit. This is frequent in St. Paul.

Ye judge after the flesh.

BIBLE JOHN, VIII. 15.

FLE'SHMONGER. n.s. [from flesh.] One who deals in flesh; a pimp.

Was the duke a fleshmonger, a fool, and a coward, as you then reported him?

SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

FLE'SHPOT. n.s. [flesh and pot.] A vessel in which flesh is cooked; thence plenty of flesh.

If he takes away the fleshpots, he can also alter the appetite.

TAYLOR'S RULE FOR LIVING HOLY.

FLE'SHQUAKE. n.s. [flesh and quake.] A tremor of the body: a word formed by Jonson in imitation of earthquake.

They may, blood-shaken then,

Feel such a fleshquake to possess their powers,

As they shall cry like ours:

In sound of peace or wars,

No harp e'er hit the stars.
BEN JONSON'S NEW-INN.

FLI'ER. n.s. [from fly.]

1. One that runs away; a fugitive; a runaway.

Cam'st thou from where they made the stand?

— I did;

Though you, it seems, came from the fliers. SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

The gates are ope, now prove good seconds; 'Tis for the followers fortune widens them, Not for the fliers.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

Now the fliers from and forsakers of their places, carry the parliamentary power along with them. KING CHARLES.

2. That part of a machine which, by being put into a more rapid motion than the other parts, equalizes and regulates the motion of the rest; as in a jack.

*The flier, tho't had leaden feet,
Turn'd so quick, you scarce could see't.*

SWIFT.

FLI'MSY. adj. [Of this word I know not any original, and suspect it to have crept into our language from the cant of manufacturers.]

1. Weak; feeble; without strength of texture.

2. Mean; spiritless; without force.

Proud of a vast extent of flimsy lines.

POPE, EPISTLE II.

FLIPP. n.s. [A cant word.] A liquor much used in ships, made by mixing beer with spirits and sugar.

The tarpawlin and swabber is lolling at Madagascar, with some drunken sunburnt whore, over a can of flip. DENNIS.

To FLIRT. v.a. [Skinner thinks it formed from the sound.]

1. To throw any thing with a quick elastic motion.

Dick the scavenger Flirts from his cart the mud in Walpole's face. SWIFT.

2. To move with quickness.

*Permit some happier man
To kiss your hand, or flirt your fan.*

DORSET.

To FLIRT. v.n.

1. To jeer; to gibe at one.

2. To run about perpetually; to be unsteady and fluttering.

FLIRT. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. A quick elastic motion.

In unfurling the fan are several little flirts and vibrations, as also gradual and deliberate openings.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

*Before you pass th' imaginary sights
While the spread fan o'ershades your closing eyes,
Then give one flirt, and all the vision flies.*

POPE.

2. A sudden trick.

*Have licence to play,
At the hedge a flirt,
For a sheet or a shirt.*

BEN JONSON'S GYPSIES.

3. A pert young hussey.

Scurvy knave, I am none of his flirt gills; I am none of his skains mates.

SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO AND JULIET.

Several young flirts about town had a design to cast us out of the fashionable world.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN, NO. 109.

FLIRTA'TION. n.s. [from flirt.] A quick sprightly motion. A cant word among women.

A muslin flounce, made very full, would give a very agreeable flirtation air.

POPE.

To FLIT. v.n. [from To fleet; or from flitter, Danish, to remove.]

1. To fly away.

*Likest it seemeth, in my simple wit,
Unto the fair sunshine in Summer's day,
That when a dreadful storm away is flit,
Through the broad world doth spread his goodly ray.* SPENSER.

*His grudging ghost did strive
With the frail flesh; at last it flitted is, Whither the souls do die of men that live
amiss.* FAIRY QUEEN.

2. To remove; to migrate. In Scotland it is still used for removing from one place to another at quarter-day, or the usual term.

*So hardly he the flitted life does win,
Unto her native prison to return.*
FAIRY QUEEN, CANT. 7.

It became a received opinion, that the souls of men, departing this life, did flit out one body into some other. HOOKER.

3. To flutter; to rove on the wing.

*He made a glancing shot, and miss'd the dove;
Yet miss'd so narrow, that he cut the cord
Which fasten'd, by the foot, the flitting bird.* DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

*Fear the just gods, and think of Scylla's
fate!
Chang'd to a bird, and sent to flit in air.*
POPE.

4. To be flux or unstable.

*Himself up high he lifted from the ground,
And with strong flight did forcibly divide
The yielding air, which nigh too feeble
found
Her flitting parts, and element unsound.*
FAIRY QUEEN, B. I.
*He stopt at once the passage of his wind,
And the free soul to flitting air resign'd.*
DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

FLO'REN. n.s. [so named, says Camden, because made by Florentines.] A gold coin of Edward III. in value six shillings.

FLO'RIN. n.s. [French.] A coin first made by the Florentines. That of Germany is in value 2 s. 4 d. that of Spain 4 s. 4 d. halfpenny; that of Palermo and Sicily 2 s. 6 d. that of Holland 2 s.

In the Imperial chamber the proctors have half a florin taxed and allowed them for every substantial recess. AYLIFFE.

FLO'TSON. n.s. [from flote.] Goods that swim without an owner on the sea.

FLUE. n.s. [A word of which I know not the etymology, unless it be derived from flew or fly.]

1. A small pipe or chimney to convey air, heat, or smoke.
2. Soft down or fur, such as may fly in the wind.

FLU'ENT. adj. [fluens, Latin.]

1. Liquid.

It is not malleable; but yet is not fluent, but stupified. BACON.

2. Flowing; in motion; in flux.

Motion being a fluent thing, and one part of its duration being absolutely independent upon another, it doth not follow that because any thing moves this moment, it must necessarily continue to do so the next. RAY ON THE CREATION.

3. Ready; copious; voluble.

Those have some natural dispositions, which have better grace in youth than in age, such as is a fluent and luxurious speech. BACON.

*I shall lay before you all that's within me,
And with most fluent utterance.*
DENHAM'S SOPHY.

FLU'MMERY. n.s. A kind of food made by coagulation of wheatflower or oatmeal.

Milk and flummery are very fit for children. LOCKE.

To FLU'STER. v.a. [from To flush.]
To make hot and rosy with drinking; to make half drunk.

*Three lads of Cyprus, noble swelling spirits,
Have I to-night fluster'd with flowing cups,
And they watch too.*

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

To FLUX. v.a.

1. To melt.

2. To salivate; to evacuate by spitting.

He might fashionably and genteelly have been duelled or fluxed into another world.

SOUTH.

FOAL. n.s. [folā, Saxon.] The offspring of a mare, or other beast of burthen. The custom now is to use colt for a young horse, and foal for a young mare; but there was not originally any such distinction.

Also flew his steed,

*And with his winged heels did tread the
wind,*

As he had been a foal of Pegasus's kind.

FAIRY QUEEN, B. I.

Twenty she-asses and ten foals.

BIBLE GENESIS, XXXII. 15.

FOH. interject. [from fah, Saxon, an enemy.] An interjection of abhorrence: as if one should at sight of any thing hated cry out a foe!

*Not to affect many proposed matches
Of her own clime, complexion and degree,
Whereto we see in all things nature tends,
Foh! one may smell in such a will most rank,*

Foul disproportions, thoughts unnatural.

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

FOO'DFUL. adj. [food and full.]

Fruitful; full of food; plenteous.

*There Tityus was to see, who took his birth
From heav'n, his nursing from the foodful earth.* DRYDEN.

FOO'DY. adj. [from food.] Eatable; fit for food.

To vessels, wine she drew;

And into well sew'd sacks pour'd foody meal. CHAPMAN.

FOOLHA'PPY. adj. [fool and happy.] Lucky without contrivance or judgment.

*As when a ship, that flies fair under sail,
An hidden rock escaped unawares,
That lay in wait her wreck for to bewail;
The mariner, yet half amazed, stares
At perils past, and yet in doubt ne dares
To joy at his foolhappy oversight.*

FAIRY QUEEN, B. I. CANT. 6.

FOOLHA'RDY. adj. [fool and hardy.] Daring without judgment; madly adventurous; foolishly bold.

*One mother, when as her foolhardy child Did come too near, and with his talons
play,*

*Half dead through fear, her little babe
reuil'd.* FAIRY QUEEN.

Some would be so foolhardy as to presume to be more of the cabinet-council of God Almighty than the angels. HOWEL.

*If any yet be so foolhardy,
T' expose themselves to vain jeopardy;
If they come wounded off, and lame,
No honour's got by such a maim.*

HUDIBRAS, P. I. CANT. 1.

FOO'LTRAP. n.s. [fool and trap.] A snare to catch fools in: as a flytrap.

Betts, at the first, were fooltraps, where the wise

Like spiders lay in ambush for the flies.

DRYDEN.

FOOT. n.s. plural feet. [fot, Saxon; voet, Dutch; fut, Scottish.]

1. The part upon which we stand.

*The queen that bore thee,
Oft'ner upon her knees than on her feet,
Died ev'ry day she liv'd.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

His affection to the church was so notorious, that he never deserted it 'till both it and he were over-run and trod under foot. CLARENDON.

2. That by which any thing is supported in the nature of a foot.<sup>108</sup>

3. The lower part; the base.

*Yond' towers, whose wanton tops do buss
the clouds,
Must kiss their own feet.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Fretting, by little and little, washes away and eats out both the tops and sides and feet of mountains.

HAKEWILL ON PROVIDENCE.

4. The end; the lower part.

*What dismal cries are those?
— Nothing; a trifling sum of misery,
New added to the foot of thy account:
Thy wife is seiz'd by force, and born away.*

DRYDEN'S CLEOMEN.

5. The act of walking.

Antiochus departed, weening in his pride to make the land navigable, and the sea passable by foot.

BIBLE 2 MACCABEES, V. 21.

6. On FOOT. Walking; without carriage.

Israel journeyed about six hundred thousand on foot. BIBLE EXODUS, XII.

7. A posture of action.

The centurions and their charges distinctly billeted, already in the entertainment, and to be on foot at an hour's warning.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

8. Infantry; footmen in arms. In this sense it has no plural.

Lusias gathered threescore thousand choice men of foot, and five thousand horsemen.

BIBLE 1 MACCABEES, IV. 28.

*Himself with all his foot entered the town,
his horse being quartered about it.*

CLARENDON, B. VIII.

*Thrice horse and foot about the fires are led,
And thrice with loud laments they wail the dead.* DRYDEN.

9. State; character; condition.

*See on what foot we stand; a scanty shore,
The sea behind, our enemies before.*

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

In specifying the word Ireland, it would seem to insinuate that we are not upon the same foot with our fellow subjects in England.

SWIFT'S DRAPIER'S LETTERS.

What colour of excuse can be for the contempt with which we treat this part of our species, that we should not put them upon the common foot of humanity, that we should only set an insignificant fine upon the man who murders them?

ADDISON.

10. Scheme; plan; settlement.

There is no wellwisher to his country without a little hope, that in time the kingdom may be on a better foot.

SWIFT.

I ask, whether upon the foot of our constitution, as it stood in the reign of the late king James, a king of England may be deposed? SWIFT.

11. A state of incipient existence.

If such a tradition were at any time set on foot, it is not easy to imagine how it should at first gain entertainment; but much more difficult how it should come to be universally propagated.

TILLOTSON'S SERMONS.

12. It seems to have been once proverbially used for the level, the square, par.

Were it not for this easy borrowing upon interest, men's necessities would draw upon them a most sudden undoing, in that they would be forced to sell their means, be it lands or goods, far under foot.

BACON'S ESSAYS.

13. A certain number of syllables constituting a distinct part of a verse.

Feet, in our English versifying, without quantity and joints, be sure signs that the verse is either born deformed, unnatural, or lame. ASCHAM'S SCHOOLMASTER.

Did'st thou hear these verses?

— O yes, I heard them all, and more too; for some o' them had in them more feet than the verses would bear.

SHAKESPEARE.

14. Motion; action.

While other jests are something rank on foot,

Her father hath commanded her to slip Away with Slender to marry.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

In the government of the world the number and variety of the ends on foot, with the secret nature of most things to which they relate, must make a distinct remark of their congruity, in some cases very difficult, and in some unattainable. GREW.

15. A measure containing twelve inches. When it signifies measure it has often, but vitiously, foot in the plural.

An orange, lemon, and apple, wrapt in a linnen cloth, being buried for a fortnight's space four foot deep within the earth, came forth no ways mouldy or rotten.

BACON.

16. Step.

This man's son would, every foot and anon, be taking some of his companions into the orchard. L'ESTRANGE.

FOO'TPAD. n.s. [foot and pad.] A highwayman that robs on foot, not on horseback.

FOO'TPATH. n.s. [foot and path.] A narrow way which will not admit horses or carriages.

*Know'st thou the way to Dover?
—— Both stile and gate, horseway and footpath.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

FOP. n.s. [A word probably made by chance, and therefore without etymology.] A simpleton; a coxcomb; a man of small understanding and much ostentation; a pretender; a man fond of show, dress, and flutter; an imper-tinent.

*A whole tribe of fops,
Got 'tween asleep and wake.*
SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

*When such a positive abandon'd fop,
Among his numerous absurdities,
Stumbles upon some tolerable line,
I fret to see them in such company.*

ROSCOMMON.

*The leopard's beauty, without the fox's wit,
is no better than a fop in a gay coat.*

L'ESTRANGE.

*In a dull stream, which moving slow,
You hardly see the current flow;
When a small breeze obstructs the course,
It whirls about for want of force,
And in its narrow circle gathers Nothing but chaff, and straws, and
feathers:*

*The current of a female mind
Stops thus, and turns with ev'ry wind;
Thus whirling round, together draws Fools, fops, and rakes, for chaff and straws.* SWIFT.

FO'PDOODLE. n.s. [fop and doodle.] A fool; an insignificant wretch.

*Where sturdy butchers broke your noddle,
And handled you like a fopdoodle.*

HUDIBRAS, P. II.

FO'PPLING. n.s. [from fop.] A petty fop; an under-rate coxcomb.

*Thy works in Chloe's toilet gain a part,
And, with his tailor, share the foppling's heart.* TICKELL.

FO'RCER. n.s. [from force.]

1. That which forces, drives, or constrains.

2. The embolus of a pump working by pulsion, in contradistinction to a sucker, which acts by attraction.

The usual means for the ascent of water is either by suckers or forcers.

WILKINS'S DÆDALUS.

FORD. n.s. [ford, Saxon, from faran, to pass.]

1. A shallow part of a river when it may be passed without swimming.

Her men the paths rode through made by her sword;

They pass the stream, when she had found the ford. FAIRFAX.

2. It sometimes signifies the stream, the current, without any consideration of passage or shallowness.

*Medusa with Gorgonian terror guards
The ford, and of itself the water flies
All taste of living wight.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. II.

*Rise, wretched widow! rise; nor undeplor'd Permit my ghost to pass the Stygian ford:
But rise, prepar'd in black to mourn thy perish'd lord.* DRYDEN.

FORE. adv.

1. Anteriorly; in the part which appears first to those that meet it.

Each of them will bear six demiculverins and four saikers, needing no other addition than a slight spar deck fore and aft, which is a slight deck throughout.

RALEIGH'S ESSAYS.

2. Fore is a word much used in composition to mark priority of time, of which some examples shall be given.<sup>109</sup>

FO'RECAST. n.s. [from the verb.] Contrivance beforehand; scheme; plan; antecedent policy.

*Alas! that Warwick had no more forecast,
But while he thought to steal the single ten,
The king was slily finger'd from the deck!*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

He makes this difference to arise from the forecast and predetermination of the gods.

ADDISON ON ANCIENT MEDALS.

*The last, scarce ripen'd into perfect man,
Saw helpless him from whom their life began:
Mem'ry and forecast just returns engage;
That pointed back to youth, this on to age.*

POPE.

FORECA'STER. n.s. [from fore-cast.] One who contrives beforehand.

FOREIMA'GINE. v.a. [fore and imagine.] To conceive or fancy before proof.

We are within compass of a foreimagined possibility in that behalf.

CAMDEN'S REMAINS.

To FOREJU'DGE. v.a. [fore and judge.] To judge beforehand; to be prepossessed.

FORE'NSICK. adj. [forensis, Latin.] Belonging to courts of judicature.

Person is a forensick term, appropriating actions and their merit; and so belongs only to intelligent agents, capable of a law, and happiness and misery. This personality extends itself beyond present existence to what is past, only by consciousness.

LOCKE.

The forum was a publick place in Rome, where lawyers and orators made their speeches before the proper judges in matters of property, or in criminal cases: thence all sorts of disputations in courts of justice, where several persons make their distinct speeches, may come under the name of forensick disputes.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

To FORESA'Y. v.a. [fore and say.] To predict; to prophesy; to foretell.

Let ordinance

Come as the gods foresay it.

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

To FORESE'E. v.a. [fore and see.] To see beforehand; to see what has not yet happened; to have prescience; to foreknow.

With Cupid she foresees and goes god Vulcan's pace. SIDNEY.

The first of them could things to come foresee;

The next, could of things present best advise;

The third, things past could keep in memory. FAIRY QUEEN.

If there be any thing foreseen that is not usual, be armed for it by any hearty though a short prayer, and an earnest resolution beforehand, and then watch when it comes. TAYLOR.

*At his foreseen approach, already quake
The Caspian kingdoms and Meotian lake:
Their seers behold the tempest from afar,
And threat'ning oracles denounce the war.*
DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

FO'RESKIRT. n.s. [fore and skirt.] The pendulous or loose part of the coat before.

*A thousand pounds a year for pure respect!
No other obligation?
That promises more thousands: honour's train
Is longer than his foreskirt.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

FORETO'OTH. n.s. [fore and tooth.] The tooth in the anterior part of the mouth; the incisor.

The foreteeth should be formed broad, and with a thin sharp edge like chizzles.
RAY ON THE CREATION.

FOREVOU'CHED. part. [fore and vouch.] Affirmed before; formerly told.

*Sure her offence
Must be of such unnatural degree,
That monsters it; or your forevouch'd affection
Fall'n into taint.*
SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

FORK. n.s. [furca, Latin; fforch, Welsh; fourche, French.]

1. An instrument divided at the end into two or more points or prongs, used on many occasions.

*At Midsummer down with the brembles
and brakes,
And after abroad with thy forks and thy rakes.* TUSSER'S HUSBANDRY.
*The vicar first, and after him the crew,
With forks and staves the felon to pursue,
Ran Coll our dog.*
DRYDEN'S NUN'S PRIEST.
I dine with forks that have but two prongs. SWIFT.

2. It is sometimes used for the point of an arrow.

*The bow is bent and drawn: make from the shaft.
— Let it fall rather, though the fork
invade
The region of my heart.*
SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

3. A point of a fork.

Several are amazed at the wisdom of the ancients that represented a thunderbolt with three forks, since nothing could have better explained its triple quality of piercing, burning, and melting.
ADDISON ON ANCIENT MEDALS.

FO'RKY. adj. [from fork.] Forked; furcated; opening into two parts.

*The smiling infant in his hand shall take
The crested basilisk and speckled snake;
Pleas'd the green lustre of the scales survey,
And with their forky tongue and pointless
sting shall play.* POPE'S MESSIAH.

FO'RMALIST. n.s. [formaliste, French, from form.] One who practises external ceremony; one who prefers appearance to reality; one who seems what he is not.

It is a ridiculous thing, and fit for a satyr to persons of judgment, to see what shifts formalists have, and what prospectives to make superficies to seem a body that hath depth and bulk. BACON, ESSAY 27.

A grave, stanch, skilfully managed face, set upon a grasping aspiring mind, having got many a sly formalist the reputation of a primitive and severe piety.
SOUTH'S SERMONS.

TO FO'RMALIZE. v.a. [formaliser, French, from formal.]

1. To model; to modify. A word not now in use.

The same spirit which anointed the blessed soul of our Saviour Christ, doth so formalize, unite, and actuate his whole

race, as if both he and they were so many limbs compacted into one body.

HOOKER, B. V. S. 56.

2. To affect formality; to be fond of ceremony.

FORNICA'TOR. n.s. [fornicateur, French, from fornix, Latin.] One that has commerce with unmarried women.

A fornicator or adulterer steals the soul as well as dishonours the body of his neighbour.

TAYLOR'S RULE OF LIVING HOLY.

FORNICA'TRESS. n.s. [from fornicator.] A woman who without marriage cohabits with a man.

*See you the fornicatress be remov'd;
Let her have needful but not slavish means.* SHAKESPEARE.

FORT. n.s. [fort, French.] A fortified house; a castle.

They erected a fort, which they called the fort de l'or; and from thence they bolted like beasts of the forest. BACON.

*Now to their fort they are about to send
For the loud engines which their isle defend.* WALLER.

He that views a fort to take it, Plants his artillery 'gainst the weakest part. DENHAM'S SOPHY.

My fury does, like jealous forts, pursue With death, ev'n strangers who but come to view. DRYDEN.

FO'RTLET. n.s. [from fort.] A little fort.

FO'RTUNEBOOK. n.s. [fortune and book.] A book consulted to know fortune or future events.

*Thou know'st a face, in whose each look Beauty lays ope love's fortunebook;
On whose fair revolutions wait
The obsequious motions of love's fate.*
CRASHAW.

FORTUNEHU'NTER. n.s.
[fortune and hunt.] A man whose employment is to enquire after women with great portions to enrich himself by marrying them.

We must, however, distinguish between fortunehunters and fortunestealers.

SPECTATOR, NO. 312.

FO'SSEWAY. n.s. [fosse and way.] One of the great Roman inroads through England, so called from the ditches on each side.

FO'ULFACED. adj. [foul and faced.] Having an ugly or hateful visage.

*If black scandal, or foulfac'd reproach,
Attend the sequel of your imposition,
Your mere enforcement shall acquittance
me*

From all the impure blots and stains thereof. SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

FOULMOU'THED. adj. [foul and mouth.] Scurrilous; habituated to the use of opprobrious terms and epithets.

My lord, he speaks most vilely of you, like a foulmouth'd man as he is, and said he would cudgel you.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

It was allowed by every body, that so foulmouthed a witness never appeared in any cause. ADDISON.

My reputation is too well established in the world to receive any hurt from such a foulmouthed scoundrel as he.

ARBUTHNOT.

Now singing shrill, and scolding oft between,

Scolds answer foulmouth'd scolds; bad neighbourhood I ween. SWIFT.

FO'ULNESS. n.s. [from foul.]

1. The quality of being foul; filthiness; nastiness.

The ancients were wont to make garments that were not destroyed but purified by fire;

and whereas the spots or foulness of other cloaths are washed out, in these they were usually burnt away.

WILKINS'S MATHEMATICAL MAGICK.

2. Pollution; impurity.

*It is no vicious blot, murder, or foulness,
No unchaste action, or dishonour'd step,
That hath depriv'd me of your grace and favour.* SHAKESPEARE.

There is not so chaste a nation as this, nor so free from all pollution or foulness: it is the virgin of the world. BACON.

3. Hatred; atrociousness.

He by an affection sprung up from excessive beauty, should not delight in horrible foulness. SIDNEY.

*Consul, you are too mild:
The foulness of some facts takes thence all mercy:*

Report it to the senate.

BEN JONSON'S CATILINE.

It is the wickedness of a whole life, discharging all its filth and foulness into this one quality, as into a great sink or common shore. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

4. Ugliness; deformity.

He's fallen in love with your foulness, and she'll fall in love with my anger.

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

*The fury laid aside
Her looks and limbs, and with new methods tried*

The foulness of th' infernal form to hide.

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

5. Dishonesty; want of candour.

Piety is opposed to hypocrisy and insincerity, and all falseness or foulness of intentions; especially to that personated devotion, under which any kind of impiety is wont to be disguised.

HAMMOND'S FUNDAMENTALS.

FOXHU'NTER. n.s. [fox and hunter.] A man whose chief ambition is to shew his bravery in hunting foxes. A term of reproach used of country gentlemen.

The foxhunters went their way, and then out steals the fox.

L'ESTRANGE, FABLE 104.

John Wildfire, foxhunter, broke his neck over a six-bar gate.

SPECTATOR, NO. 561.

FRA'GMENTARY. adj. [from frag-ment.] Composed of fragments. A word not elegant, nor in use.

*She, she is gone; she's gone: when thou
know'st this,*

*What fragmentary rubbish this world is,
Thou know'st, and that it is not worth a
thought;*

He knows it too too much that thinks it nought. DONNE.

FRAISE. n.s. [French, the caul of an animal.] A pancake with bacon in it.

FRA'NION. n.s. [Of this word I know not the derivation.] A paramour; a boon companion.

*First, by her side did sit the bold Sansloy, Fit mate for such a mincing minion,
Who in her looseness took exceeding joy,
Might not be found a franker franion.*

FAIRY QUEEN, B. II.

FRA'NKLIN. n.s. [from frank.] A steward; a bailiff of land. It signifies originally a little gentleman, and is not improperly Englished a gentleman servant.<sup>110</sup>

*A spacious court they see,
Both plain and pleasant to be walked in,
Where them does meet a franklin fair and free.* FAIRY QUEEN.

FREAK. n.s. [frech, German, saucy, petulant; fræc, Saxon, fugitive.]

1. A sudden and causeless change of place.

2. A sudden fancy; a humour; a whim; a capricious prank.

*O! but I fear the fickle freaks, quoth she,
Of fortune, and the odds of arms in field.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

When that freak has taken possession of a fantastical head, the distemper is incurable. L'ESTRANGE, FABLE 100.

She is so restless and peevish that she quarrels with all about her, and sometimes in a freak will instantly change her habitation. SPECTATOR, NO. 427.

*To vex me more, he took a freak
To slit my tongue, and make me speak.* SWIFT.

To FREAK. v.a. [A word, I suppose, Scotch, brought into England by Thomson.] To variegate; to checquer.

*There furry nations harbour:
Sables of glossy black, and dark embrown'd,
Or beauteous, freak'd with many a mingled hue.* THOMSON.

FRE'AKISH. adj. [from freak.] Capricious; humoursome.

It may be a question, whether the wife or the woman was the more freakish of the two; for she was still the same uneasy fop. L'ESTRANGE, FABLE 173.

FREESCHO'OL. n.s. [free and school.] A school in which learning is given without pay.

To give a civil education to the youth of this land in the time to come, provision was made by another law, that there should be one freeschool at least erected in every diocess. DAVIES.

Two clergymen stood candidates for a small freeschool in —shire, where a gentleman of interest in the country, who happened to have a better understanding than his neighbours, procured the place for him who was the better scholar. SWIFT.

FREETHI'NKER. n.s. [free and think.] A libertine; a contemner of religion.

Atheist is an old-fashion'd word: I'm a free-thinker, child. ADDISON'S DRUMMER.

Of what use is freedom of thought, if it will not produce freedom of action, which is the sole end, how remote soever in appearance, of all objections against Christianity? And therefore the freethinkers consider it as an edifice, wherein all the parts have such a mutual dependance on each other, that if you pull out one single nail, the whole fabrick must fall to the ground.

SWIFT'S ARGUMENT AGAINST ABOLISHING CHRISTIANITY.

To FRE'NCHIFY. v.a. [from French.] To infect with the manner of France; to make a coxcomb.

They misliked nothing more in king Edward the Confessor than that he was Frenchified; and accounted the desire of foreign language then to be a foretoken of bringing in foreign powers, which indeed happened. CAMDEN'S REMAINS.

*Has he familiarly dislik'd
Your yellow starch, or said your doublet
Was not exactly Frenchified.* SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

FRE'SCO. n.s. [Italian.]

1. Coolness; shade; duskiness, like that of the evening or morning.

*Hellish sprites
Love more the fresco of the nights.* PRIOR.

2. A picture not drawn in glaring light, but in dusk.

*Here thy well-study'd marbles fix our eye;
A fading fresco here demands a sigh.* POPE.

FRESHWA'TER. [A compound word of fresh and water, used as an adjective.] Raw; unskilled; unacquainted. A low term borrowed from the sailors, who stigmatise those who come first to sea as freshwater men or novices.

The nobility, as freshwater soldiers which had never seen but some light skirmishes, in their vain bravery made light account of the Turks.

KNOLLES'S HISTORY OF THE TURKS.

To FRI'BBLE. v.n. To trifle.

*Though cheats, yet more intelligible
Than those that with the stars do fribble.*

HUDIBRAS, P. II.

FRI'BBLER. n.s. [from the verb.] A trifler.

A fribbler is one who professes rapture for the woman, and dreads her consent.

SPECTATOR, NO. 288.

FRICASSE'E. n.s. [French.] A dish made by cutting chickens or other small things in pieces, and dressing them with strong sauce.

*Oh, how would Homer praise their dancing
dogs,*

Their stinking cheese, and fricacy of frogs!

He'd raise no fables, sing no flagrant lye,

Of boys with custard choak'd at

Newberry. KING.

FRIEND. n.s. [vriend, Dutch; freond, Saxon. This word, with its derivatives, is pronounced frend, frendly: the i totally neglected.]

1. One joined to another in mutual benevolence and intimacy: opposed to foe or enemy.

Friends of my soul, you twain Rule in this realm, and the gor'd state sustain. SHAKESPEARE.

Some man is a friend for his own occasion, and will not abide in the day of thy trouble.

BIBLE ECCLESIASTICUS, VI. 8.

God's benison go with you, and with those That would make good of bad, and friends of foes. SHAKESPEARE.

Wonder not to see this soul extend The bounds, and seek some other self, a friend. DRYDEN.

2. One without hostile intentions.

Who comes so fast in silence of the night?

— A friend.

— What friend? your name?

SHAKESPEARE'S THE MERCHANT OF
VENICE.

3. One reconciled to another: this is put by the custom of the language somewhat irregularly in the plural number.

*He's friends with Cæsar,
In state of health thou say'st, and thou say'st free.* SHAKESPEARE.

My son came then into my mind; and yet my mind

Was then scarce friends with him.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

4. An attendant, or companion.

The king ordains their entrance, and ascends

His regal seat, surrounded by his friends.

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

5. Favourer; one propitious.

Aurora riding upon Pegasus, sheweth her swiftness, and how she is a friend to poetry and all ingenious inventions.

PEACHAM.

6. A familiar compellation.

Friend, how camest thou in hither?

BIBLE MATTHEW, XXII. 12.

What supports me, do'st thou ask?

The conscience, friend, t'have lost mine eyes o'erply'd

In liberty's defence. MILTON.

FRI'GAT. n.s. [frigate, French; fregata, Italian.]

1. A small ship. Ships under fifty guns are generally termed frigats.

The treasure they fought for was, in their view, embezzled in certain frigats.

RALEIGH'S APOLOGY.

On high-rais'd decks the haughty Belgians ride,

Beneath whose shade our humble frigats go. DRYDEN.

2. Any small vessel on the water.

*Behold the water work and play
About her little frigat, therein making way.* FAIRY QUEEN.

FRI'GHTFULLY. adv. [from frightful.]

1. Dreadfully; horribly.

*This will make a prodigious mass of water,
and looks frightfully to the imagination;
'tis huge and great.* BURNET.

2. Disagreeably; not beautifully. A woman's word.

*Then to her glass; and Betty, pray,
Don't I look frightfully to-day?* SWIFT.

FRIGORI'FICK. adj. [frigorificus, frigus and facio, Lat.] Causing cold. A word used in science.

Frigorifick atoms or particles mean those nitrous salts which float in the air in cold weather, and occasion freezing.

QUINCY.

FRI'PPERER. n.s. [from frippier, French.] One who deals in old things vamped up.

FRISK. n.s. [from the verb.] A frolick; a fit of wanton gaiety.

FRI'SKER. n.s. [from frisk.] A wanton; one not constant or settled.

Now I will wear this, and now I will wear that;

*Now I will wear I cannot tell what:
All new fashions be pleasant to me:
Now I am a frisker, all men on me look;
What should I do but set cock on the hoop?* CAMDEN.

FRITH. n.s. [fretum, Latin.]

1. A strait of the sea where the water being confined is rough.

*What desp'rate madman then would venture o'er
The frith, or haul his cables from the shore?* DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

Batavian fleets

Defraud us of the glittering finny swarms That heave our friths, and crowd upon our shores. THOMSON.

2. A kind of net. I know not whether this sense be now retained.

The Wear is a frith, reaching through the Ose, from the land to low water mark, and having in it a bunt or cod with an eye-hook; where the fish entering, upon their coming back with the ebb, are stopt from issuing out again. CAREW.

FROG. n.s. [frogga, Saxon.]

1. A small animal with four feet, living both by land and water, and placed by naturalists among mixed animals, as partaking of beast and fish.<sup>111</sup> There is likewise a small green frog that perches on trees, said to be venomous.

Poor Tom, that eats the swimming frog, the toad, the todpole.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

Auster is drawn with a pot or urn, pouring forth water, with which shall descend frogs. PEACHAM ON DRAWING.

2. The hollow part of the horse's hoof.

FROISE. n.s. [from the French froisser, as the pancake is crisped or crimped in frying.] A kind of food made by frying bacon inclosed in a pancake.

FRO'NTBOX. n.s. [front and box.] The box in the playhouse from which there is a direct view to the stage.

*How vain are all these glories, all our pains,
Unless good sense preserve what beauty gains!
That men may say, when we the frontbox
grace,
Behold the first in virtue, as in face.*
POPE'S RAPE OF THE LOCK.

FRO'NTIER. n.s. [frontiere, French.] The marches; the limit; the utmost verge of any territory; the border: properly that which terminates not at the sea, but fronts another country.

Draw all the inhabitants of those borders away, or plant garrisons upon all those frontiers about him.

SPENSER ON IRELAND.

*I upon my frontiers here
Keep residence,
That little which is left so to defend.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

FRO'NTLET. n.s. [from frons, Latin; fronteau, French.] A bandage worn upon the forehead.

*How now, daughter, what makes that frontlet on? You are too much of late i' th'
frown.* SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

They shall be as frontlets between thine eyes. BIBLE DEUTERONOMY, VI. 8.

To the forehead frontlets were applied, to restrain and intercept the influx.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

FRONTROO'M. n.s. [from front and room.] An apartment in the forepart of the house.

*If your shop stands in an eminent street,
the frontrooms are commonly more airy than the backrooms; and it will be inconvenient to make the frontroom shallow.*

MOXON'S MECHANICAL EXERCISES.

To FROUNCE. v.a. [from the noun.] To frizzle or curl the hair about the face. This word was at first probably used in contempt.

*Some frounce their curled hair in courtly
guise,
Some prank their ruffs, and others timely
dight
Their gay attire.*

FAIRY QUEEN, B. I. CANT. 4.

Some warlike sign must be used; either a slovenly buskin, or an overstarting frowned head. ASCHAM'S SCHOOLMASTER.

*Thus, night, oft see me in thy pale career,
'Till civil suited morn appear;
Not trick'd and frounc'd as she was wont,
With the Attick boy to hunt.* MILTON.

F. R. S. Fellow of the Royal Society.

*Who this profess,
Shine in the dignity of F. R. S.* POPE.

FRUITGRO'VES. n.s. [fruit and groves.] Shades, or close plantations of fruit trees.

The faithful slave,

*Whom to my nuptial train Icarus gave,
To tend the fruitgroves?*

POPE'S ODYSSEY, B. IV.

FRUIT-TIME. n.s. [fruit and time.]
The Autumn; the time for gathering fruit.

FRUME'NTY. n.s. [frumentum, corn, Latin.] Food made of wheat boiled in milk.

FRUSTRA'NEOUS. adj. [frustra, Latin.] Vain; useless; unprofitable;
without advantage.

Their attempts being so frustraneous, and the demonstrations to the contrary so perspicuous, it is a marvel that any man, virtuously and piously disposed, should be so partially and zealously affected in a cause that has neither truth nor any honest usefulness in it.

MORE'S DIVINE DIALOGUES.

He timely withdraws his frustraneous baffled kindnesses, and sees the folly of endeavouring to stroke a tyger into a lamb, or to court an Ethiopian out of his colour.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

FU'LCIMENT. n.s. [fulcimen, fulci-mentum, Latin.] That on which a body rests, which acts or is acted upon at each end, as a balance or a lever.

The power that equiponderates with any weight, must have the same proportion unto it as there is betwixt their several distances from the center or fulciment.

WILKINS.

FU'LHAM. n.s. A cant word for false dice. Hanmer.

*Let vultures gripe thy guts, for gourd and Fulham's hold,
And high and low beguile the rich and poor.* SHAKESPEARE.

FULL is much used in composition to intimate any thing arrived at its highest state, or utmost degree.

FULL-EY'ED. [full and eye.]
Having large prominent eyes.

FULL-FE'D. [full and fed.] Sated; fat; saginated.

*All as a partridge plump, full-fed and fair,
She form'd this image of well-bodied air.*
POPE'S DUNCIAD.

FU'LLINGMILL. n.s. [full and mill.] A mill where the water raises hammers which beat the cloath 'till it be cleansed.

By large hammers, like those used for paper and fullingmills, they beat their hemp.
MORTIMER.

FU'LSOME. adj. [from fulle, Saxon, foul.]

1. Nauseous; offensive.

*The skilful shepherd peel'd me certain wands;
And in the doing of the deed of kind,
He stuck them up before the fulsome ewes.* SHAKESPEARE.
*He that brings fulsome objects to my view,
With nauseous images my fancy fills,
And all goes down like oxymel of squills.*
ROSCOMMON.

*Now half the youth of Europe are in
arms,
How fulsome must it be to stay
behind,
And die of rank diseases here at home?*
OTWAY'S ORPHAN.

2. Of a rank odious smell.

White satyrion is of a dainty smell, and bean-flowers: again, if the plant puts forth

white flowers only, and those not thin or dry, they are commonly of rank and fulsome smell.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 507.

3.<sup>112</sup> Tending to obscenity.

*A certain epigram, which is ascribed to the emperor, is more fulsome than any passage
I have met with in our poet.* DRYDEN.

FUME'TTE. n.s. [French.] A word introduced by cooks, and the pupils of cooks, for the stink of meat.

*A haunch of ven'son made her sweat,
Unless it had the right fumette.* SWIFT.

FU'MID. adj. [fumidus, Latin.]
Smoky; vaporous.

A crass and fumid exhalation is caused from the combat of the sulphur and iron with the acid and nitrous spirits of aquafortis.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. II. C. 5.

FUN. n.s. [A low cant word.] Sport; high merriment; frolicksome delight.

*Don't mind me, though, for all my fun and jokes,
You bards may find us bloods good-natur'd folks.* MOORE.

FUNK. n.s. A stink. A low word.

FU'RNITURE. n.s. [furniture,
Fr. from furnish.]

1. Moveables; goods put in a house for use or ornament.

No man can transport his large retinue, his sumptuous fare, and his rich furniture into another world. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

*There are many noble palaces in Venice:
their furniture is not commonly very rich, if we except the pictures from the hands of the best masters.* ADDISON.

2. Appendages.

By a general conflagration mankind shall be destroyed, with the form and all the furniture of the earth. TILLOTSON.

3. Equipage; embellishments; decorations.

*Young Clarion, with vauntful lustyhed,
After his guise did cast abroad to fare,
And thereto 'gan his furnitures prepare.*

SPENSER.

The duke is coming: see, the barge be ready,

*And fit it with such furniture as suits
The greatness of his person.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

The ground must be of a mixt brown, and large enough, or the horse's furniture must be of very sensible colours. DRYDEN.

FU'SIL. n.s. [fusil, French.]

1. A firelock; a small neat musquet.

2. [In heraldry, from fusus, Latin.]

Something like a spindle.

Fusils must be made long, and small in the middle, in the ancient coat of Mountague, argent three fusils in sesse gules.

PEACHAM ON BLAZONING.

FUSS. n.s. [A low cant word.] A tumult; a bustle.

*End as it befits your station;
Come to use and application;
Nor with senates keep a fuss:
I submit, and answer thus.* SWIFT.

FU'TILE. adj. [futile, French; futilis,
Latin.]

1. Talkative; loquacious.

One futile person, that maketh it his glory to tell, will do more hurt than many that know it their duty to conceal. BACON.

2. Trifling; worthless; of no weight.

FUTI'LITY. n.s. [futilité, French, from futile.]

1. Talkativeness; loquacity.

This fable does not strike so much at the futility of women, as at the incontinent levity of a prying humour.

L'ESTRANGE.

2. Triflingness; want of weight; want of solidity.

Trifling futility appears in their signs of the zodiack, and their mutual relations and aspects. BENTLEY.

To FUZZ. v.n. [without etymology.]

To fly out in small particles.

FY. interj. [fy, French and Flemish;
φῆν, Greek; vah, Lat.] A word of blame and disapprobation.

*And fy on fortune, mine avowed foe,
Whose wrathful wreaks themselves do now
allay.* FAIRY QUEEN.

Fy, my lord, fy! a soldier, and afraid? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account?

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

A bawd, sir, fy upon him!

SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

But fy, my wand'ring muse, how thou do'st stray!

Expectance calls thee now another way.
MILTON.

Nay, fy, what mean you in this open place?

*Unhand me, or, I swear, I'll scratch your
face:*

Let go, for shame; you make me mad for spite:

My mouth's my own; and if you kiss, I'll bite. DRYDEN.

Fy, madam, he cried, we must be past all these gaities. TATLER, NO. 54.

G

Has two sounds, one from the Greek Γ, and the Latin, which is called that of the hard G, because it is formed by a pressure somewhat hard of the forepart of the tongue against the upper gum. This sound G retains before a, o, u, l, r; as, gate, go, gull. The other sound, called that of the soft G, resembles that of J, and is commonly, though not always, found before e, i; as, gem, gibbet. Before n, at the end of a word, g is commonly melted away; as in the French, from which these words are commonly derived: thus, for benign, malign, condign, we pronounce benine, maline, condine. It is often silent in the middle of words before h; as, might. The Saxon g seems to have had generally the sound of y consonant; whence gate is by rusticks still pronounced yate.

GA'FFER. n.s. [gefere, companion, Saxon.] A word of respect now obsolete, or applied only in contempt to a mean person.

For gaffer Treadwell told us by the bye, Excessive sorrow is exceeding dry.

GAY'S PASTORALS.

GALA'XY. n.s. [γαλαξία; galaxie, Fr.] The milky way; a stream of light in the sky.

A broad and ample road, whose dust is gold,

*And pavement stars, as stars to thee
appear,*

Seen in the galaxy.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. VII.

*A brown, for which heaven would disband
The galaxy, and stars be tann'd.*

CLEAVELAND.

*Men doubt, because they stand so thick i'
th' sky,*

If those be stars that paint the galaxy.

COWLEY.

We dare not undertake to shew what advantage is brought to us by those innumerable stars in the galaxy.

BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

GALE. n.s. [gahling, hasty, sudden, German.] A wind not tempestuous, yet stronger than a breeze.

*What happy gale
Blows you to Padua here, from old Verona?* SHAKESPEARE.

Winds

*Of gentlest gale Arabian odours fann'd
From their soft wings, and Flora's earliest smells.* MILTON.

Fresh gales and gentle air. MILTON.

Umbria's green retreats,

Where western gales eternally reside.

ADDISON.

GALLE'ON. n.s. [galion, French.] A large ship with four or sometimes five decks, now in use only among the Spaniards.

I assured them that I would stay for them at Trinidado, and that no force should drive me thence, except I were sunk or set on fire by the Spanish galleons.

RALEIGH'S APOLOGY.

The number of vessels were one hundred and thirty, whereof galleasses and galleons seventy-two, goodly ships, like floating towers or castles.

BACON'S WAR WITH SPAIN.

GA'LLERY. n.s. [galerie, French, derived by Du Cange from galeria, low Latin, a fine room.]

1. A kind of walk along the floor of a house, into which the doors of the apartments open; in general, any building of which the length much exceeds the breadth.

In most part there had been framed by art such pleasant arbors, that, one answering another, they became a gallery aloft from tree to tree, almost round about, which below gave a perfect shadow.

SIDNEY, B. I.

High lifted up were many lofty towers, And goodly galleries fair overlaid.

FAIRY QUEEN, B. I.

*Your gallery
Have we pass'd through, not without much content.* SHAKESPEARE.

The row of return on the banquet side, let it be all stately galleries, in which galleries let there be three cupola's. BACON.

A private gallery 'twixt th' apartments led, Not to the foe yet known. DENHAM.

Nor is the shape of our cathedral proper for our preaching auditories, but rather the figure of an amphitheatre, with galleries gradually overlooking each other; for into this condition the parish-churches of London are driving apace, as appears by the many galleries every day built in them. GRAUNT.

There are covered galleries that lead from the palace to five different churches.

ADDISON ON ITALY.

2. The seats in the playhouse above the pit, in which the meaner people sit.

*While all its throats the gallery extends,
And all the thunder of the pit ascends.*

POPE'S EPISTLE OF HORACE.

GA'LLICISM. n.s. [gallicisme, French, from gallicus, Latin.] A mode of speech peculiar to the French language: such as, he figured in controversy; he held this conduct; he held the same language that another had held before: with many other expressions to be found in the pages of Bolinbroke.

In English I would have Gallicisms avoided, that we may keep to our own language, and not follow the French mode in our speech.

FELTON ON THE CLASSICKS.

GA'LLIPOT. n.s. [gleye, Dutch, shining earth. Skinner. The true derivation is from gala, Spanish, finery. Gala, or gallypot, is a fine painted pot.] A pot painted and glazed, commonly used for medicines.

Plato said his master Socrates was like the apothecary's gallipots, that had on the outsides apes, owls, and satyrs; but within, precious drugs.

BACON, APOPHTHEGM 227.

*Here phials in nice discipline are set;
There gallipots are rang'd in alphabet*
GARTH'S DISPENSATORY.

Alexandrinus thought it unsafe to trust the real secret of his phial and gallipot to any man. SPECTATOR, NO. 426.

*Thou that do'st Æsculapius deride,
And o'er his gallipots in triumph ride.*

FENTON.

GA'MBLER. n.s. [A cant word, I suppose, for game or gamester.] A knave whose practice it is to invite the unwary to game and cheat them.

GAOL. n.s. [geol, Welsh; geole, French.] A prison; a place of confinement. It is always pronounced and too often written jail, and sometimes goal.

Then am I the prisoner, and his bed my gaol. SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

*Have I been ever free, and must my house
Be my retentive enemy, my gaol?*
SHAKESPEARE'S TIMON.

If we mean to thrive and do good, break open the gaols, and let out the prisoners.
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI. P. II.

GA'OLDELIVERY. n.s. [gaol and deliver.] The judicial process, which by condemnation or acquittal of persons confined evacuates the prison.

*Then doth th' aspiring soul the body leave,
Which we call death; but were it known to all,
What life our souls do by this death receive,
Men would it birth or gaoldelivery call.*
DAVIES.

These make a general gaoldelivery of souls, not for punishment. SOUTH.

To GAR. v.a. [giera, Islandick.] To cause; to make.<sup>113</sup> It is still in use in Scotland.

*Tell me, good Hobbinol, what gars thee greet?
What! hath some wolf thy tender lambs
ytorn?
Or is thy bagpipe broke, that sounds so
sweet?
Or art thou of thy loved loss forlorne.*
SPENSER'S PASTORALS.

To GARGARI'ZE. v.a. [γαργαριζω; gargariser, French.] To wash the mouth with medicated liquors.

Vinegar, put to the nostrils, or gargarized, doth ease the hiccough; for that it is astringent, and inhibiteth the motion of the spirit. BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

This being relaxed, may make a shaking of the larynx; as when we gargarize.
HOLDER'S ELEMENTS OF SPEECH.

GA'RRAN. n.s. [Erse. It imports the same as gelding. The word is still retained in Scotland.] A small horse; a hobby. A Highland horse which when brought into the North of England takes the name of galloway.

When he comes forth he will make their cows and garrans to walk, if he doth no other harm to their persons. SPENSER.

Every man would be forced to provide Winter-fodder for his team, whereas common garrans shift upon grass the year round; and this would force men to the enclosing of grounds, so that the race of garrans would decrease. TEMPLE.

GAS. n.s. [A word invented by the chymists.] It is used by Van Helmont, and seems designed to signify, in general, a spirit not capable of being coagulated: but he uses it loosely in many senses, and very unintelligibly and inconsistently. Harris.

To GASP. v.n. [from gape, Skinner; from gispe, Danish, to sob, Junius.]
1. To open the mouth wide to catch breath.

The sick for air before the portal gasp.
DRYDEN'S VIRGIL'S GEORGICKS.

*They rais'd a feeble cry with trembling
notes;
But the weak voice deceiv'd their gasping throats.* DRYDEN.

The gasping head flies off; a purple flood Flows from the trunk.
DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

*The ladies gasp'd, and scarcely could
respire;
The breath they drew no longer air, but
fire.* DRYDEN.

A scantling of wit lay gasping for life, and groaning beneath a heap of rubbish.
DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRYAR.

*Pale and faint,
He gasps for breath; and, as his life flows
from him,*

Demands to see his friends.

ADDISON'S CATO.

2. To emit breath by opening the mouth convulsively.

*I lay me down to gasp my latest breath;
The wolves will get a breakfast by my death.* DRYDEN.

*He staggers round, his eyeballs roll in
death,
And with short sobs he gasps away his breath.* DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

3. To long for. This sense is, I think, not proper, as nature never expresses desire by gasping.

The Castilian and his wife had the comfort to be under the same master, who, seeing how dearly they loved one another, and gasp'd after their liberty, demanded a most exorbitant price for their ransom.

SPECTATOR, NO. 198.

GAUDE. n.s. [The etymology of this word is uncertain: Skinner imagines it may come from gaude, French, a yellow flower, yellow being the most gaudy colour. Junius, according to his custom, talks of ἀγαθος; and Mr. Lye finds gaude, in Douglass, to signify deceit or fraud, from gwawdio, Welsh, to cheat. It seems to me most easily deducible from gaudium, Latin, joy; the cause of joy; a token of joy: thence aptly applied to any thing that gives or expresses pleasure. In Scotland this word is still retained, both as a showy bawble, and the person fooled. It is also retained in Scotland to denote a yellow flower.] An ornament; a fine thing; any thing worn as a sign of joy.

*He stole th' impression of her fantasy,
With bracelets of thy hair, rings, gaudes,
conceits,*

Knacks, trifles, nosegays, sweetmeats.

SHAKESPEARE.

*The sun is in the heav'n, and the proud
day,*

*Attended with the pleasures of the world,
Is all too wanton, and too full of gaudes,
To give me audience.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

*My love to Hermia
Is melted as the snow; seems to me now
As the remembrance of an idle gaude,
Which in my childhood I did doat upon.*

SHAKESPEARE.

*Some bound for Guiney, golden sand to find,
Bore all the gaudes the simple natives wear;
Some for the pride of Turkish courts
design'd,*

For folded turbants finest holland bear.

DRYDEN'S ANNUS MIRABILIS.

GAWK. n.s. [geac, Saxon.]

1. A cuckow.

2. A foolish fellow. In both senses it is retained in Scotland.

GA'ZETTE. n.s. [gazetta is a Venetian halfpenny, the price of a news paper, of which the first was published at Venice.] A paper of news; a paper of publick intelligence. It is accented indifferently on the first or last syllable.

*And sometimes when the loss is small,
And danger great, they challenge all;
Print new additions to their seats,
And emendations in gazettes.*

HUDIBRAS, P. III. CANT. 3.

An English gentleman, without geography, cannot well understand a gazette.

LOCKE.

One cannot hear a name mentioned in it that does not bring to mind a piece of a gazette. ADDISON'S GUARDIAN.

All, all but truth, falls dead-born from the press;

Like the last gazette, or the last address.

POPE.

GAZETTE'ER. n.s. [from gazette.]

1. A writer of news.

2. It was lately a term of the utmost infamy, being usually applied to wretches who were hired to vindicate the court.<sup>114</sup>

*Satire is no more: I feel it die:
No gazetteer more innocent than I.*
POPE.

GA'ZINGSTOCK. n.s. [gaze and stock.] A person gazed at with scorn or abhorrence.

These things are offences to us, by making us gazingstocks to others, and objects of their scorn and derision. RAY.

GEE. A term used by waggoners to their horses when they would have them go faster.

GE'MMARY. adj. [from gem.] Pertaining to gems or jewels.

The principle and gemmary affection is its translucency: as for irradiancy, which is found in many gems, it is not discoverable in this.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. I. C. 2.

GE'NERAL. adj. [general, French; generalis, Latin.]

1. Comprehending many species or individuals; not special; not particular.

To conclude from particulars to generals is a false way of arguing.

NOTES TO POPE'S ODYSSEY.

2. Lax in signification; not restrained to any special or particular import.

Where the author speaks more strictly and particularly on any theme, it will explain the more loose and general expressions.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

3. Not restrained by narrow or distinctive limitations.

A general idea is an idea in the mind, considered there as separated from time and place, and so capable to represent any particular being that is conformable to it.

LOCKE.

4. Relating to a whole class or body of men, or a whole kind of any being.

They, because some have been admitted

without trial, make that fault general which is particular. WHITGIFTE.

5. Publick; comprising the whole.

*Nor would we deign him burial of his men,
'Till he disburs'd, at Saint Colmeskill isle,
Ten thousand dollars to our gen'ral use.*
SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*Nor sail'd they to express how much they prais'd,
That for the general safety he despis'd
His own.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. II.

6. Not directed to any single object.

If the same thing be peculiarly evil, that general aversion will be turned into a particular hatred against it. SPRATT.

7. Extensive, though not universal.

8. Common; usual.

*I've been bold,
For that I knew it the most general way.*
SHAKESPEARE'S TIMON.

9. General is appended to several offices: as, Attorney General, Solicitor General, Vicar General.

GE'NIO. n.s. [genio, Italian; genius, Latin.] A man of a particular turn of mind.

Some genio's are not capable of pure affection; and a man is born with talents for it as much as for poetry, or any other science. TATLER, NO. 53.

GE'NTRY. n.s. [gentlery, gentry, from gentle.]

1. Birth; condition.<sup>115</sup>

*You are certainly a gentleman,
Clerk-like experienc'd, which no less adorns
Our gentry than our parents' noble name,
In whose success we are gentle.*
SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

2. Class of people above the vulgar; those between the vulgar and the nobility.

They slaughtered many of the gentry, for whom no sex or age could be accepted for excuse. SIDNEY.

Let states, that aim at greatness, take heed how their nobility and gentry multiply too fast. BACON.

*How chearfully the hawkers cry
A satire, and the gentry buy.* SWIFT.

3. A term of civility real or ironical.

*The many-colour'd gentry there above,
By turns are rul'd by tumult and by love.*
PRIOR.

4. Civility; complaisance. Obsolete.

*Shew us so much gentry and good-will,
As to extend your time with us a-while.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

GE'NUS. n.s. [Latin.] In science, a class of being, comprehending under it many species: as quadruped is a genus comprehending under it almost all terrestrial beasts.

*A general idea is called by the schools genus, and it is one common nature agreeing to several other common natures:
so animal is a genus, because it agrees to horse, lion, whale, and butterfly.*
WATTS'S LOGICK.

If minerals are not convertible into another species, though of the same genus, much less can they be surmised reducible into a species of another genus.

HARVEY ON CONSUMPTIONS.

GEORGE. n.s. [Georgius, Latin.]

1. A figure of St. George on horseback worn by the knights of the garter.

*Look on my George, I am a gentleman;
Rate me at what thou wilt.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI. P. II.

2. A brown loaf. Of this sense I know not the original.

*Cubb'd in a cabbin, on a mattress laid,
On a brown george, with lousy swobbers, fed.* DRYDEN'S PERSIUS.

GI'BBERISH. n.s. [Derived by Skinner from gaber, French, to cheat; by others conjectured to be formed by corruption from jabber. But as it was anciently written gebrish, it is probably derived from the chymical cant, and originally implied the jargon of Geber and his tribe.] Cant; the private language of rogues and gipsies; words without meaning.

Some, if they happen to hear an old word, albeit very natural and significant, cry out straitway, that we speak no English, but gibberish. SPENSER.

*Some of both sexes writing down a number of letters, just as it came into their heads; upon reading this gibberish, that which the men had wrote sounded like High Dutch,
and the other by the women like Italian.*
SWIFT.

GI'DDY. adj. [gidig, Saxon. I know not whether this word may not come from gad, to wander, to be in motion, gad, gid, giddy.]

1. Vertiginous; having in the head a whirl, or sensation of circular motion, such as happens by disease or drunkenness.

*Them rev'ling thus the Tentyrites invade,
By giddy heads and stagg'ring legs
betray'd.* TATE'S JUVENAL.

2. Rotatory; whirling; running round with celerity.

*As Ixion fix'd, the wretch shall feel
The giddy motion of the whirling mill.*
POPE.

3. Inconstant; mutable; unsteady; changeful.

*Our fancies are more giddy and unfirm,
More longing, wavering, sooner lost and won,
Than womens are.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TWELFTH NIGHT.

It may be gnats and flies have their imagination more mutable and giddy, as small birds likewise have.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

*Thanks to giddy chance, which never bears
That mortal bliss should last for length of years,*

*She cast us headlong from our high estate,
And here in hope of thy return we wait.*
DRYDEN'S FABLES.

*The giddy vulgar, as their fancies guide,
With noise say nothing, and in parts
divide.* DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

You are as giddy and volatile as ever, the reverse of Pope, who hath always loved a domestick life. SWIFT TO GAY.

4. That which causes giddiness.

*The frequent errors of the pathless wood,
The giddy precipice, and the dang'rous flood.* PRIOR.

*The sylphs through mystick mazes guide
their way,
Through all the giddy circle they pursue.*
POPE.

5. Heedless; thoughtless; uncautious;
wild.

*Too many giddy foolish hours are gone,
And in fantastick measures danc'd away.*
ROWE'S JANE SHORE.

How inexcusable are those giddy creatures, who, in the same hour, leap from a parent's window to a husband's bed. CLARISSA.

6. Tottering; unfix'd.

*As we pac'd along
Upon the giddy footing of the hatches, Methought that Glo'ster stumbled.*
SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

7. Intoxicated; elated to thoughtlessness; overcome by any overpowering enticement.

Art thou not giddy with the fashion too, that thou hast shifted out of thy tale into telling me of the fashion?
SHAKESPEARE.

*Like one of two contending in a prize,
That thinks he hath done well in people's eyes;
Hearing applause and universal shout,
Giddy in spirit, gazing still in doubt,
Whether those peals of praise be his or no.*
SHAKESPEARE.

GI'DDYBRAINED. adj. [giddy
and brain.] Careless; thoughtless.

Turn him out again, you unnecessary, useless, giddybrain'd ass!

OTWAY'S VENICE PRESERVED.

GI'DDYHEADED. adj. [giddy and head.] Without thought or caution;
without steadiness or constancy.

*And sooner may a gulling weather spy,
By drawing forth heav'n's scheme descry
What fashion'd hats or ruffs, or suits, next year,*

Our giddyheaded antick youth will wear.

DONNE.

That men are so misaffected, melancholy, giddyheaded, hear the testimony of Solomon. BURTON ON MELANCHOLY.

To GI'GGLE. v.n. [gichgelen, Dutch.]
To laugh idly; to titter; to grin with merry levity. It is retained in Scotland.

GI'NGERBREAD. n.s. [ginger and bread.] A kind of farinaceous sweetmeat made of dough, like that of bread or biscuit, sweetened with treacle, and flavoured with ginger and some other aromatick seeds. It is sometimes gilt.

An' I had but one penny in the world, thou should'st have it to buy gingerbread.

SHAKESPEARE'S LOVE'S LABOUR LOST.

Her currans there and gooseberries were spread,

With the enticing gold of gingerbread.

KING'S COOKERY.

'Tis a loss you are not here, to partake of three weeks frost, and eat gingerbread in a booth by a fire upon the Thames.

SWIFT.

To GIRN. v.n. Seems to be a corruption of grin. It is still used in Scotland, and is applied to a crabbed, captious,
or peevish person.

GI'ZZARD. n.s. [gesier, French;
gigeria, Latin. It is sometimes called gizzern.]

1. The strong muscular stomach of a fowl.

Fowls have two ventricles, and pick up stones to convey them into their second ventricle, the gizzerne. MORE.

In birds there is no mastication in the mouth; but in such as are not carnivorous, it is immediately swallowed into the crop, a kind of antestomach, where it is moistened by some proper juice from the glandules distilling in there, and thence transferred into the gizzard, or muscular stomach.

RAY.

*Flutt'ring there they nestle near the throne,
And lodge in habitations not their own;
By their high crops and corny gizzards known. DRYDEN.*

2. It is proverbially used for apprehension or conception of mind: as, he frets his gizzard, he harrasses his imagination.

*But that which does them greatest harm,
Their spiritual gizzards are too warm;
Which puts the overheated sots
In fevers still.*

HUDIBRAS, P. III. CANT. 11.

Satisfaction and restitution lie so cursedly hard upon the gizzards of our publicans, that the blood in their veins is not half so dear to them as the treasure they have in their coffers. L'ESTRANGE.

GLAIRE. n.s. [glær, Saxon, amber; glar, Danish, glass; glaire, French; glarea, Latin.]

1. The white of an egg.

Take the glaire of eggs, and strain it as short as water.

PEACHAM ON DRAWING.

2. A kind of halbert. Dictionaries.

To GLAIRE. v.a. [glairer, French; from the noun.] To smear with the white of an egg. This word is still used by the bookbinders.

GLASS. n.s. [glæs, Saxon; glas, Dutch, as Pezon imagines from glâs,

British, green. In Erse it is called klânn, and this primarily signifies clean or clear, being so denominated from its transparency.]

1. An artificial substance made by fusing fixed salts and flint or sand together, with a vehement fire.

The word glass cometh from the Belgick and High Dutch: glass, from the verb glansen, which signifies amongst them to shine; or perhaps from glacies in the Latin, which is ice, whose colour it resembles.

PEACHAM ON DRAWING.

Glass is thought so compact and firm a body that it is indestructible by art or nature, and is also of so close a texture that the subtlest chymical spirits cannot pervade it. BOYLE.

Show'rs of granadoes rain, by sudden burst Disploding murd'rous bowels, fragments of steel

And stones, and glass and nitrous grain adust. PHILLIPS.

2. A glass vessel of any kind.

I'll see no more;

*And yet the eighth appears, who bears a glass
Which shews me many more.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

3. A looking-glass; a mirrour.

*He was the mark and glass, copy and book,
That fashion'd others.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV. P. II.

*He spreads his subtile nets from sight,
With twinkling glasses, to betray
The larks that in the meshes light.*

DRYDEN'S HORACE.

4. An Hour GLASS. A glass used in measuring time by the flux of sand.

Were my wife's liver

*Infected as her life, she would not live
The running of one glass.*

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

5.<sup>116</sup> A cup of glass used to drink in.

*To this last costly treaty,
That swallow'd so much treasure, and like a glass*

Did break i' th' rinsing.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

When thy heart

Dilates with fervent joys, and eager soul Prompts to pursue the sparkling glass, besure

'Tis time to shun it. PHILLIPS.

6. The quantity of wine usually contained in a glass; a draught.

While a man thinks one glass more will not make him drunk, that one glass hath disabled him from well discerning his present condition.

TAYLOR'S RULE OF LIVING HOLY.

The first glass may pass for health, the second for good-humour, the third for our friends; but the fourth is for our enemies.

TEMPLE.

7. A perspective glass.

Like those who have surveyed the moon by glasses, I can only tell of a new and shining world above us; but not relate the riches and glories of the place. DRYDEN.

To GLAVER. v.n. [glave, Welsh, flattery; gliwan, Saxon, to flatter. It is still retained in Scotland.] To flatter; to wheedle. A low word.

Kingdoms have their distempers, inter-missions, and paroxysms, as well as natural bodies; and a glavering council is as dangerous on the one hand as a wheedling priest, or a flattering physician is on the other. L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

GLE'BY. adj. [from glebe.] Turfy; perhaps in the following passage fat or fruitful, if it has indeed any meaning.

*Pernicious flatt'ry! thy malignant seeds
In an ill hour, and by a fatal hand
Sadly diffus'd o'er virtue's gleby land,
With rising pride amidst the corn
appear,
And choke the hopes and harvest of the year.* PRIOR.

GLEED. n.s. [from glowan, Saxon, to glow.] A hot glowing coal. A provincial and obsolete word.

To GLEEK. v.a. [gligman, in Saxon, is a mimick or a droll.]

1. To sneer; to gibe; to droll upon.

I can gleek upon occasion.

DREAM.

I have seen you gleeking or galling at this gentleman twice or thrice.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

2. In Scotland it is still retained, and signifies to fool or spend time idly, with something of mimickry or drollery.

GLI'TTERAND. Shining; sparkling. A participle used by Chaucer and the old English poets. This participial termination is still retained in Scotland.

To GLOSS. v.n. [gloser, Fr. from the noun.]

1. To comment.

*Thou detain'st Briseis in thy bands,
By priestly glossing on the gods commands.* DRYDEN'S FABLES.

2. To make sly remarks.

*Her equals first observ'd her growing zeal,
And laughing gloss'd, that Abra serv'd so well.* PRIOR.

To GLOSS. v.a.

1. To explain by comment.

*No woman shall succeed in Salique land;
Which Salique land the French unjustly gloss
To be the realm of France.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

In parchment then, large as the fields, he draws Assurances, big as gloss'd civil laws.
DONNE.

2. To palliate by specious exposition or representation.

Is this the paradise, in description whereof so much glossing and deceiving eloquence hath been spent? HOOKER'S SERMONS.

*Do I not reason wholly on your conduct?
You have the art to gloss the foulest cause.*
PHILLIPS'S BRITON.

3. To embellish with superficial lustre.

*But thou, who lately of the common strain
Wert one of us, if still thou do'st retain
The same ill habits, the same follies too,
Gloss'd over only with a saint-like show,
Then I resume the freedom which I gave,
Still thou art bound to vice, and still a slave.* DRYDEN'S PERSIUS.

GLO'SSARY. n.s. [glossarium, Latin;
glossaire, French.] A dictionary of obscure or antiquated words.

According to Varro, the most learned of the Romans, when delubrum was applied to a place, it signified such a one, in quo dei simulachrum dedicatum est; and also in the old glossaries. STILLINGFLEET.

I could add another word to the glossary.
BAKER.

To GLOUT. v.n. [A low word of which I find no etymology.] To pout; to look sullen. It is still used in Scotland.

*She lurks in midst of all her den, and streaks
From out a ghastly whirlpool all her necks, Where, glowing round her rock, to fish she falls.* CHAPMAN.

Glouting with sullen spight, the fury shook Her clotted locks, and blasted with each look. GARTH.

GLUM. adj. [A low cant word formed by corrupting gloom.] Sullen;
stubbornly grave.

*Some, when they hear a story, look glum,
and cry, Well, what then?* GUARDIAN.

GNA'RLED. adj. [gnar, nar, or nurr, is in Staffordshire a hard knot of wood which boys drive with sticks.]
Knotty.

Merciful heav'n!

*Thou rather with thy sharp and sulph'rous
bolt*

*Split'st the unwedgeable and gnarled oak,
Than the soft myrtle.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

To GNAW. v.a. [gnagan, Saxon;
knaghen, Dutch.]

1. To eat by degrees; to devour by slow corrosion.

To you such scabb'd harsh fruit is giv'n, as raw

Young soldiers at their exercisings gnaw.
DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

2. To bite in agony or rage.

*Alas, why gnaw you so your nether lip?
Some bloody passion shakes your very frame.* SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

They gnawed their tongues for pain.
BIBLE REVELATION, XVI. 10.

He comely fell, and dying gnaw'd the ground. DRYDEN.

3. To wear away by biting.

*Gnawing with my teeth my bonds asunder,
I gain'd my freedom.*

SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY OF ERROURS.

*Like rotten fruit I fall, worn like a cloth
Gnawn into rags by the devouring moth.*
SANDYS.

A lion, hampered in a net, called to a mouse to help him out of the snare: the mouse gnawed the threads to pieces, and set the lion at liberty. L'ESTRANGE.

4. To fret; to waste; to corrode.

5. To pick with the teeth.

His bones clean pick'd; his very bones they gnaw. DRYDEN.

GO-BY. n.s. Delusion; artifice; circumvention; over-reach.

Except an apprentice is instructed how to adulterate and varnish, and give you the go-by upon occasion, his master may be charged with neglect.

COLLIER ON PRIDE.

GO-CART. n.s. [go and cart.] A machine in which children are inclosed to teach them to walk, and which they push forward without danger of falling.

*Young children, who are try'd in Go-carts, to keep their steps from sliding,
When members knit, and legs grow
stronger,
Make use of such machine no longer.*

PRIOR.

GOAL. n.s. [gaule, French, a long pole set up to mark the bounds of the race.]

1. The landmark set up to bound a race; the point marked out to which racers run.

*As at the Olympian games, or Pythian fields,
Part curb their fiery steeds, or shun the goal
With rapid wheels.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. II.

*And the slope sun his upward beam
Shoots against the dusky pole,
Pacing toward the other goal.* MILTON.

2. The starting post.

*Hast thou beheld, when from the goal they start,
The youthful charioteers with heaving heart
Rush to the race?*

DRYDEN'S VIRGIL'S GEORGICKS.

3. The final purpose; the end to which a design tends.

Our poet has always the goal in his eye, which directs him in his race: some beautiful design, which he first establishes, and then contrives the means, which will naturally conduct him to his end.

DRYDEN'S OVID, PREFACE.

*Each individual seeks a sev'ral goal;
But heav'n's great view is one, and that the whole.* POPE.

*So man, who here seems principal alone,
Perhaps acts second to some sphere
unknown;*

Touches some wheel, or verges to some goal;

'Tis but a part we see, and not a whole.

POPE'S ESSAY ON MAN.

4. It is sometimes improperly written for gaol, or jail.

GOB. n.s. [gobe, French.] A small quantity. A low word.

Do'st think I have so little wit as to part with such a gob of money?

L'ESTRANGE.

To GO'BBLE. v.a. [gober, to swallow, old French.] To swallow hastily with tumult and noise.

The sheep were so keen upon the acorns, that they gobbled up now and then a piece of the coat along with them.

L'ESTRANGE.

*Of last year's corn in barn great store;
Fat turkeys gobbling at the door.*

PRIOR.

*The time too precious now to waste,
And supper gobbled up in haste,
Again afresh to cards they run.* SWIFT.

GO'DLING. n.s. [from god.] A little divinity; a diminutive god.

Thy puny godlings of inferior race, Whose humble statues are content with brass. DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

GO'LDFINCH. n.s. [goldfinc, Saxon.] A singing bird, so named from his golden colour. This is called in Staffordshire a proud taylor.

Of singing birds they have linnets, gold-finches, ruddocks, Canary-birds, blackbirds, thrushes, and divers others.

CAREW.

A goldfinch there I saw, with gaudy pride Of painted plumes, that hopp'd from side to side. DRYDEN.

GO'LDFINDER. n.s. [gold and find.] One who finds gold. A term ludicrously applied to those that empty jakes.

*His empty paunch that he might fill,
He suck'd his vittels through a quill;*

*Untouch'd it pass'd between his grinders,
Or't had been happy for goldfinders.*

SWIFT.

GOO'D-CONDITIONED. adj.

Without ill qualities or symptoms.
Used both of things and persons, but not elegantly.

No surgeon, at this time, dilates an abscess of any kind by injections, when the pus is good-conditioned. SHARP'S SURGERY.

GOOD-NOW. interjection.

1. In good time; a la bonne heure. A gentle exclamation of intreaty. It is now
a low word.

*Good-now sit down, and tell me, he that knows,
Why this same watch?*

SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

2. A soft exclamation of wonder.

Good-now, good-now, how your devotions jump with mine!

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRYAR.

GOOSE. n.s. plural geese. [gos, Saxon;
goes, Dutch, gawe, Erse, sing. gewey, plural.]

1. A large waterfowl proverbially noted,
I know not why, for foolishness.

*Thou cream-faced lown,
Where got'st thou that goose look?*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

Since I pluckt geese, play'd truant, and whipt top, I knew not what 'twas to be beaten 'till lately. SHAKESPEARE.

*Smile you my speeches, as I were a fool?
Goose, if I had you upon Sarum plain,
I'd drive ye cackling home to Camelot.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

*Birds most easy to be drawn are waterfowl;
as the goose and swan.*

PEACHAM ON DRAWING.

*Nor watchful dogs, nor the more wakeful
geese,*

Disturb with nightly noise the sacred peace. DRYDEN'S FABLES.

2. A taylor's smoothing iron.

Come in, taylor: here you may roast your goose. SHAKESPEARE.

To GO'SPEL. v.n. [from the noun.]
To fill with sentiments of religion. This word in Shakespeare, in whom alone I have found it, is used, though so venerable in itself, with some degree of irony: I suppose from the gospellers, who had long been held in contempt.

Are you so gossell'd

To pray for this good man, and for his issue,

Whose heavy hand hath bow'd you to the grave? SHAKESPEARE.

GO'SPELLER. n.s. [from gospel.]
A name of the followers of Wicklif, who first attempted a reformation from popery, given them by the Papists in reproach, from their professing to follow and preach only the gospel.

These gospellers have had their golden days,

Have troden down our holy Roman faith.
ROWE'S JANE SHORE.

To GO'VERN. v.a. [gouverner,
French; guberno, Latin.]

1. To rule as a chief magistrate.

This inconveniencie is more hard to be redressed in the governor than the governed; as a malady in a vital part is more incurable than in an external.

SPENSER ON IRELAND.

*Slaves to our passions we become, and then
It grows impossible to govern men.*

WALLER.

2. To regulate; to influence; to direct.

The welfare of that is the chief point, which he is to carry always in his eye, and by which he is to govern all his counsels, designs, and actions.

ATTERBURY'S SERMONS.

3. To manage; to restrain.

Go after her, she's desperate; govern her.
SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

4. [In grammar.] To have force with regard to syntax: as, amo governs the accusative case.

5. To pilot; to regulate the motions of a ship.

GO'VERNANTE.<sup>117</sup> n.s. [gouvernante, French.] A lady who has the care of young girls of quality. The more usual and proper word is governess.

GO'VERNESS. n.s. [gouverneresse, old French, from govern.]

1. A female invested with authority.

*The moon, the governess of floods,
Pale in her anger, washes all the air,
That rheumatick diseases do abound.*

SHAKESPEARE.

2. A tutoress; a woman that has the care of young ladies.

He presented himself unto her, falling down upon both his knees, and holding up his hands, as the old governess of Danae is painted, when she suddenly saw the golden shower. SIDNEY.

His three younger children were taken from the governess in whose hands he put them. CLARENDON, B. VIII.

3. A tutoress; an instructress; a directress.

Great affliction that severe governess of the life of man brings upon those souls she seizes on. MORE AGAINST ATHEISM.

GOUT. n.s. [goutte, French.]

1. The arthritis; a periodical disease attended with great pain.

*The gout is a disease which may affect any membranous part, but commonly those which are at the greatest distance from the heart or the brain, where the motion of the fluids is the slowest, the resistance, friction, and stricture of the solid parts the greatest,
and the sensation of pain, by the dilacera-tion of the nervous fibres, extreme.*

ARBUTHNOT ON DIET.

One that's sick o' th' gout, had rather Groan so in perplexity than be cur'd

By th' sure physician death.

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

This very rev'rend lecher, quite worn out With rheumatisms, and crippled with his gout,

*Forgets what he in youthful times has done,
And swings his own vices in his son.*

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

2. A drop. [goutte, French; gutta, Latin.] Gut for drop is still used in Scotland by physicians.

I see thee still,

And on the blade o' th' dudgeon gout's of blood,

Which was not so before.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

GO'WNMAN. n.s. [gown and man.]

A man devoted to the acts of peace; one whose proper habit is a gown.

Let him with

pedants

Pore out his life amongst the lazy gownmen. ROWE.

Thus will that whole bench, in an age or two, be composed of mean, fawning gownmen, dependants upon the court for a morsel of bread. SWIFT.

To GRA'BBLE. v.n. [probably corrupted from grapple.] To grope; to feel eagerly with the hands.

My blood chills about my heart at the thought of these rogues, with their bloody hands grabbling in my guts, and pulling out my very entrails.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

GRA'MMAR. n.s. [grammaire, French; grammatica, Latin; γραμματική.]

1. The science of speaking correctly; the art which teaches the relations of words to each other.

We make a countryman dumb, whom we will not allow to speak but by the rules of grammar. DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

Men, speaking language according to the grammar rules of that language, do yet speak improperly of things. LOCKE.

2. Propriety or justness of speech; speech according to grammar.

Varium & mutabile semper femina, is the sharpest satire that ever was made on woman; for the adjectives are neuter, and animal must be understood to make them grammar. DRYDEN.

3. The book that treats of the various relations of words to one another.

GRA'MMAR School. n.s. A school in which the learned languages are grammatically taught.

Thou hast most traitorously corrupted the youth of the realm in erecting a grammar school. SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

The ordinary way of learning Latin in a grammar school I cannot encourage. LOCKE.

GRAMMA'RIAN. n.s. [grammairien, French, from grammar.] One who teaches grammar; a philologer.

Many disputes the ambiguous nature of letters hath created among the grammarians.

HOLDER'S ELEMENTS OF SPEECH.

They who have called him the torture of grammarians, might also have called him the plague of translators. DRYDEN.

GRAMMA'TICAL. adj. [grammatical, Fr. grammaticus, Latin.]

1. Belonging to grammar.

The beauty of virtue still being set before their eyes, and that taught them with far more diligent care than grammatical rules. SIDNEY, B. II.

I shall take the number of consonants, not from the grammatical alphabets of any language, but from the diversity of sounds framed by single articulations with appulse. HOLDER.

2. Taught by grammar.

They seldom know more than the gram- matical construction, unless born with a poetical genius.

DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

GRAMMA'TICALLY. adv. [from grammatical.] According to the rules or science of grammar.

When a sentence is distinguished into the nouns, the verbs, pronouns, adverbs, and other particles of speech which compose it, then it is said to be analysed grammatically. WATTS.

As grammar teacheth us to speak properly, so it is the part of rhetorick to instruct how to do it elegantly, by adding beauty to that language that before was naked and grammatically true.

BAKER'S REFLECTIONS ON LEARNING.

GRAMMATICA'STER. n.s. [Latin.] A mean verbal pedant; a low grammarian.

I have not vexed their language with the doubts, the remarks, and eternal triflings of the French grammaticasters.

RYMER'S TRAGEDIES OF THE LAST AGE.

GRA'SHOPPER. n.s. [grass and hop.] A small insect that hops in the Summer grass. The cicada of the Latins, or cicala of the Italians, is often by the poets translated grashopper, but improperly.

Her waggon spokes made of long spinners legs,

The cover of the wings of grashoppers.

SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO AND JULIET.

Grashoppers eat up the green of whole countries. BACON.

Where silver lakes, with verdant shadows crown'd,

*Disperse a grateful chilness all around;
The grashopper avoids the untainted air,
Nor in the midst of Summer ventures there.* ADDISON.

The women were of such an enormous stature, that we appeared as grashoppers before them. ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

GRASS. n.s. [græs, Saxon.] The common herbage of the field on which cattle feed; an herb with long narrow leaves.

Ye are grown fat as the heifer at grass, and bellow as bulls.

BIBLE JEREMIAH, L. 11.

The trade of beef for foreign exportation was prejudiced, and almost sunk; for the flesh being young, and only grass fed, was thin, light and moist, and not of a substance to endure the salt, or be preserved by it, for long voyages, or a slow consumption. TEMPLE.

*You'll be no more your former you;
But for a blooming nymph will pass,
Just fifteen, coming Summer's grass.*

SWIFT.

GRATE. n.s. [crates, Latin.]

1. A partition made with bars placed near to one another, or crossing each other: such as are in cloysters or prisons.

I have grated upon my good friends for three reprieves for you, and your couch-fellow, Nim; or else you had look'd through the grates, like a geminy of baboons.

SHAKESPEARE.

*Out at a little grate his eyes he cast
Upon those bord'ring hills, and open plain.* DANIEL'S CIVIL WAR.

A fan has on it a nunnery of lively black-eyed vestals, who are endeavouring to creep out at the grates. ADDISON.

2. The range of bars within which fires are made.

My dear is of opinion that an old fashioned grate consumes coals, but gives no heat.

SPECTATOR, NO. 30.

GRATIFICA'TION. n.s. [gratificatio, Latin.]

1. The act of pleasing.

They are incapable of any design above the present gratification of their palates.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

2. Pleasure; delight.

ROGERS'S SERMONS.

3. Reward; recompence. A low word.

GRA'VEYER. n.s. [graveur, French, from grave.]

1. One whose business is to inscribe or carve upon hard substances; one who copies pictures upon wood or metal to be impressed on paper.

If he makes a design to be graved, he is to remember that the gravers dispose not their colours as the painters do; and that, by consequence, he must take occasion to find the reason of his design in the natural shadows of the figures, which he has disposed to cause the effect.

DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

2. The stile or tool used in graving.

With all the care wherewith I tried upon it the known ways of softening gravers, I could not soften this. BOYLE.

*The toilsome hours in diff'rent labour slide,
Some work the file, and some the graver guide.* GAY.

GRA'VY. n.s. The serous juice that runs from flesh not much dried by the fire.

They usually boil and roast their meat until it falls almost off from the bones; but we love it half raw, with the blood trickling down from it, delicately terming it the gravy, which in truth looks more like an ichorous or raw bloody matter.

HARVEY ON CONSUMPTIONS.

There may be a stronger broth made of vegetables than of any gravy soup.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

GREAVES. n.s. [from gréves, French.] Armour for the legs; a sort of boots. It wants the singular number.

He had greaves of brass upon his legs.

BIBLE 1 SAMUEL, XVII. 6.

A shield make for him, and a helm, fair greaves, and curets such

As may renown thy workmanship, and honour him as much.

CHAPMAN'S ILIADS, B. XVIII.

GRE'CISM. n.s. [gnæcismus, Latin.]

An idiom of the Greek language.

GRE'EDY. adj. [gædig, Sax. graadig, Dan. gretig, Dutch.]

1. Ravenous; voracious; hungry.

As a lion that is greedy of his prey.

BIBLE PSALMS, XVII. 12.

Be not unsatiable in any dainty thing, nor too greedy upon meats.

BIBLE ECCLESIASTICUS, XXXVII. 29.

He made the greedy ravens to be Elias's caterers, and bring him food.

KING CHARLES.

2. Eager; vehemently desirous. It is now commonly taken in an ill sense.

*Greedy to know, as is the mind of man,
Their cause of death, swift to the fire she ran.* FAIRFAX.

The ways of every one that is greedy of gain. BIBLE PROVERBS.

*Stern look'd the fiend, as frustrate of his
will,*

Not half suffic'd, and greedy yet to kill.

DRYDEN.

*While the reaper fills his greedy hands,
And binds the golden sheaves in brittle bands.* DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

GRE'ENWOOD. n.s. [green and wood.] A wood considered as it appears in the Spring or Summer. It is sometimes used as one word.

Among wild herbs under the greenwood shade. FAIRFAX.

*It happen'd on a Summer's holiday,
That to the greenwood shade he took his
way;*

For Cymon shunn'd the church.

DRYDEN'S CYMON AND IPHIGENIA.

GRE'NADIER. n.s. [grenadier, Fr. from grenade.] A tall foot soldier, of whom there is one company in every regiment: such men being employed to throw grenades.

Peace allays the shepherd's fear

GAY'S PASTORALS.

GRE'YHOUND. n.s. [grighund, Saxon.] A tall fleet dog that chases in sight.

First may a trusty greyhound transform himself into a tyger. SIDNEY, B. I.

*So on the downs we see, near Wilton fair,
A hast'ned hare from greedy greyhounds go.* SIDNEY.

Th' impatient greyhound, slipt from far, Bounds o'er the glebe to catch the fearful hare. DRYDEN.

GRIM. adj. [grimma, Saxon.]

1. Having a countenance of terrour; horrible; hideous; frightful.

The innocent prey in haste he does forsake, Which quit from death, yet quakes in every limb,

With change of fear to see the lion look so grim. FAIRY QUEEN.

*Thou hast a grim appearance, and thy face
Bears a command in't.*

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

*Their dear causes
Would to the bleeding and the grim alarm Excite the mortified man.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

What if the breath that kindled those grim fires,

Awak'd, should blow them into sevenfold rage? MILTON.

*Expert to turn the sway
Of battle, open when and where to close
The ridges of grim war.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. VI.

*He that dares to die,
May laugh at the grim face of law and scorn,*

The cruel wrinkle of a tyrant brow.

DENHAM'S SOPHY.

Their swarthy hosts would darken all our plains,

*Doubling the native horror of the war,
And making death more grim.*

ADDISON'S CATO.

2. Ugly; ill-looking.

Grim visag'd war hath smooth'd his wrinkl'd front. SHAKESPEARE.

Venus was like her mother; for her father is but grim.

SHAKESPEARE.

GRIME. n.s. [from grim.] Dirt deeply insinuated; sullyng blackness not easily cleansed.

Swart, like my shoe, but her face nothing so clean kept; for why? she sweats: a man may go over shoes in the grime of it.

SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY OF ERRORS.

Collow is the word by which they denote black grime of burnt coals or wood.

WOODWARD ON FOSSILS.

To GRIME. v.a. [from the noun.] To dirt; to sully deeply.

*My face I'll grime with filth,
Blanket my loins, elf all my hair in knots.*

SHAKESPEARE.

GRIPE. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. Grasp; hold; seizure of the hand or paw.

*Therefore still on high
He over him did hold his cruel claws, Threatning with greedy gripe to do him
dy.* FAIRY QUEEN.

*They put a barren sceptre in my gripe,
Thence to be wrench'd with an unlineal hand.* SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

Should I

*Slaver with lips, as common as the stairs
That mount the Capitol; join gripes with hands
Made hardy with hourly falshood as with labour.* SHAKESPEARE.

*He gave me his hand,
And, with a feeble gripe, says, dear, my lord,*

Command my service.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

*I fell; and with my weight the helm
constrain'd,*

*Was drawn along, which yet my gripe
retain'd.* DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

2. Squeeze; pressure.

*Fir'd with this thought, at once he strain'd
the breast;*

'Tis true, the harden'd breast resists the gripe,

And the cold lips return a kiss unripe.

DRYDEN'S FABLES.

3. Oppression; crushing power.

*I take my cause
Out of the gripes of cruel men, and give it To a most noble judge, the king my master.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

4. Affliction; pinching distress.

*Adam, at the news
Heart-struck with chilling gripe of sorrow
stood,*

That all his senses bound!

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. XI.

Can'st thou bear cold and hunger? Can these limbs,

*Fram'd for the tender offices of love,
Endure the bitter gripes of smarting poverty?* OTWAY.

5. [In the plural.] Belly-ach; colick.

In the jaundice the choler is wanting; and the icterical have a great sourness and gripes, with windiness. FLOYER.

GRI'PER. n.s. [from gripe.]

Oppressor; usurer; extortioner.

Others pretend zeal, and yet are professed usurers, gripers, monsters of men, and harpies. BURTON ON MELANCHOLY.

GRO'CER. n.s. [This should be written grosser, from gross, a large quantity; a grocer originally being one who dealt by wholesale; or from grossus, a fig, which their present state seems to favour.]

A grocer is a man who buys and sells tea, sugar and plumbs and spices for gain.
WATTS'S LOGICK.

*But still the offspring of your brain shall prove
The grocer's care, and brave the rage of Jove.* GARTH.

GRO'CERY. n.s. [from grocer.] Grocers ware, such as tea; sugar; raisins; spice.

His troops, being now in a country where they were not expected, met with many cart-loads of wine, grocery, and tobacco.
CLARENDON, B. VIII.

GRO'TTO. n.s. [grotte, French; grotta, Italian.] A cavern or cave made for coolness. It is not used properly of a dark horrid cavern.

*Their careless chiefs to the cool grotto's run,
The bow'rs of kings, to shade them from the sun.* DRYDEN.

This was found at the entry of the grotto in the Peak. WOODWARD ON FOSSILS.

GRO'UND-BAIT. n.s. [from ground and bait.] A bait made of barley or malt boiled; which, being thrown into the place where you design to angle, sinks to the bottom, and draws the fish to it.

Take the depth of the place where you mean after to cast your groundbait, and to fish. WALTON'S ANGLER.

GROUND-RENT. n.s. Rent paid for the privilege of building on another man's ground.

A foot in front, and thirty-three five sevenths deep, would bring in a ground-rent of five pounds.
ARBUTHNOT ON COINS.

GROUND-ROOM. n.s. A room on the level with the ground.

I beseeched him hereafter to meditate in a ground-room; for that otherwise it would be impossible for an artist of any other kind to live near him. TATLER, NO. 88.

To GROWL. v.n. [grollen, Flemish.]
1. To snarl or murmur like an angry cur.

*They roam amid' the fury of their heart,
And growl their horrid loves.*

THOMSON'S SPRING.

Dogs in this country are of the size of common mastiffs, and by nature never bark, but growl when they are provoked.
ELLIS'S VOYAGE.

2. To murmur; to grumble.

Othello, neighbours – how he would roar about a foolish handkerchief! and then he would growl so manfully. GAY.

To GRU'BBLE. v.n. [grubelen, German, from grub.] To feel in the dark.

*Thou hast a colour;
Now let me rowl and grubble thee:
Blind men say white feels smooth, and black feels rough:
Thou hast a rugged skin; I do not like thee.* DRYDEN.

GRUEL. n.s. [gruau, gruelle, French.] Food made by boiling oatmeal in water; any kind of mixture made by boiling ingredients in water.

*Finger of birth-strangl'd babe,
Ditch-deliver'd by a drab;
Make the gruel thick and slab.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*Was ever Tartar fierce or cruel
Upon the strength of water gruel?*
PRIOR.

Gruel made of grain, broths, malt-drink not much hopped, posset-drinks, and in general whatever relaxeth.
ARBUTHNOT.

GUBERNA'TION. n.s. [gubernatio, Lat.] Government; superintendency; superiour direction.

Perhaps there is little or nothing in the government of the kingdoms of nature and grace, but what is transacted by the man Jesus, inhabited by the divine power and wisdom, and employed as a medium or conscious instrument of this extensive gubernation.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

GU'DGEON. n.s. [goujon, French.]

1. A small fish found in brooks and rivers, easily caught, and therefore made a proverbial name for a man easily cheated.

*'Tis true, no turbets dignify my boards;
But gudgeons, flounders, what my Thames affords.* POPE.

This he did to draw you in, like so many gudgeons, to swallow his false arguments.
SWIFT.

2. Something to be caught to a man's own disadvantage; a bait; an allure-ment: gudgeons being commonly used as baits for pike.

*But fish not with this melancholy bait,
For this fool's gudgeon, this opinion.*
SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF
VENICE.

To GUGGLE. v.n. [gorgoliare, Italian.] To sound as water running with intermissions out of a narrow mouthed vessel.

GUI'NEA. n.s. [from Guinea, a country in Africa abounding with gold.] A gold coin valued at one and twenty shillings.

By the word gold I must be understood to design a particular piece of matter; that is, the last guinea that was coined. LOCKE.

GUINE'ADROPPER. n.s. [guinea and drop.] One who cheats by dropping guineas.

*Who now the guineadropper's bait regards,
Trick'd by the sharper's dice, or juggler's cards.* GAY.

GU'LLYHOLE. n.s. [from gully and hole.] The hole where the gutters empty themselves in the subterraneous sewer.

GULO'SITY. n.s. [gulosus, Latin.] Greediness; gluttony; voracity.

They are very temperate, seldom offending in ebriety, or excess of drink; nor erring in gulosity, or superfluity of meats.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. IV.
C. 10.

GUMMO'SITY. n.s. [from gummosus.] The nature of gum; gumminess.

Sugar and honey make windy liquors, and the elastick fermenting particles are detained by their innate gummosity.

FLOYER.

GUN. n.s. [Of this word there is no satisfactory etymology. Mr. Lye observes that gun in Iceland signifies battle; but when guns came into use we had no commerce with Iceland.] The general name for firearms; the instrument from which shot is discharged by fire.

*These dread curses, like the sun 'gainst glass,
Or like an overcharged gun, recoil
And turn upon thysself.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI. P. II.

The emperor, smiling, said that never emperor was yet slain with a gun.

KNOLLES'S HISTORY OF THE TURKS.

The bullet flying, makes the gun recoil.
CLEAVELAND.

*In vain the dart or glitt'ring sword we shun,
Condemn'd to perish by the slaught'ring gun.* GRANVILLE.

GU'NPOWDER. n.s. [gun and powder.] The powder put into guns to be fired. It consists of about twenty parts of nitre, three parts of sulphur, and three of charcoal. The proportions are not exactly kept.

Gunpowder consisteth of three ingredients, saltpetre, small-coal and brimstone.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. II.

Burning by gunpowder frequently happens at sea. WISEMAN.

GU'STO. n.s. [Italian.]

1. The relish of any thing; the power by which any thing excites sensations in the palate.

Pleasant gustos gratify the appetite of the luxurious. DERHAM.

2. Intellectual taste; liking.

In reading what I have written, let them bring no particular gusto along with them. DRYDEN.

To GU'TTLE. v.n. [from gut.] To feed luxuriously; to gormandise. A low word.

His jolly brother, opposite in sense, Laughs at his thrift; and, lavish of expence, Quaffs, crams, and guttles in his own defence. DRYDEN.

To GU'TTLE. v.a. [from gut.] To swallow.<sup>118</sup>

The fool spit in his porridge, to try if they'd hiss: they did not hiss, and so he guttled them up, and scalded his chops.

L'ESTRANGE.

GYMNA'STICALLY. adv. [from gymnastick.] Athletically; fitly for strong exercise.

Such as with agility and vigour have not the use of either, who are not gymnastically composed, nor actively use those parts.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. IV. C. 5.

GYMNA'STICK. adj. [γυμναστικός; gymnastique, French.] Pertaining to athletic exercises; consisting of leaping, wrestling, running, throwing the dart, or quoit.

The Cretans wisely forbid their servants gymnasticks as well as arms; and yet your modern footmen exercise themselves daily, whilst their enervated lords are softly lolling in their chariots.

ARBUTHNOT AND POPE'S MARTIN SCRIBLERUS.

GY'MNICK. adj. [γυμνικός; gymnique, French.] Such as practise the athletic or gymnastick exercises.

Have they not sword-players, and ev'ry sort

Of gymnick artists, wrestlers, riders, runners. MILTON.

H

Is in English, as in other languages, a note of aspiration, sounded only by a strong emission of the breath, without any conformation of the organs of speech, and is therefore by many grammarians accounted no letter. The h in English is scarcely ever mute at the beginning of a word, or where it immediately precedes a vowel; as house, behaviour: where it is followed by a consonant it has no sound, according to the present pronunciation: but anciently, as now in Scotland, it made the syllable guttural; as right, bought.

HA. interject. [ha, Latin.]

1. An expression of wonder, surprise, sudden question, or sudden exertion.

*You shall look fairer ere I give or hazard:
What says the golden chest? ha! let me see.*

SHAKESPEARE.

Ha! what art thou! thou horrid headless trunk!

It is my Hastings!

ROWE'S JANE SHORE.

2. An expression of laughter.<sup>119</sup>

He saith among the trumpets ha, ha, and he smelleth the battle afar off.

BIBLE JOB, XXXIX. 25.

Ha, ha, 'tis what so long I wish'd and vow'd;

Our plots and delusions

Have wrought such confusions,

That the monarch's a slave to the crowd.

DRYDEN'S ALBION.

HA'BNAB. adv. [hap ne hap, or nap; as would ne would, will ne will; that is, let it happen or not.] At random; at the mercy of chance; without any rule or certainty of effect.

He circles draws and squares,

With cyphers, astral characters;

Then looks 'em o'er to understand 'em,

Although set down habnab at random.

HUDIBRAS, P. II.

HA'GGESS. n.s. [from hog or hack.] A mass of meat, generally pork chopped, and inclosed in a membrane. In Scotland it is commonly made in a sheep's maw of the entrails of the same animal, cut small, with suet and spices.

To HA'GGLE. v.a. [corrupted from hackle or hack.] To cut; to chop; to mangle.<sup>120</sup>

Suffolk first died, and York all haggled o'er Comes to him where in gore he lay

insteep'd. SHAKESPEARE HENRY V.

TO HA'GGLE. v.n. To be tedious in a bargain; to be long in coming to the price.

HAIRLA'CE. n.s. [hair and lace.] The fillet with which women tie up their hair.

Worms are commonly resembled to a woman's hairlace or fillet, thence called tenia. HARVEY ON CONSUMPTIONS.

*If Molly happens to be careless,
And but neglects to warm her hairlace,
She gets a cold as sure as death.* SWIFT.

HALF-PENY. n.s. plural half-pence. [half and peny.] A copper coin, of which two make a peny.

There shall be in England seven half-peny loaves sold for a peny.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI. P. II.<sup>121</sup>

Bardolph stole a lute-case, bore it twelve leagues, and sold it for three half-pence.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

I thank you; and sure, dear friend, my thanks are too dear of a half-peny.

SHAKESPEARE.

He cheats for half-pence, and he doffs his coat

To save a farthing in a ferryboat.

DRYDEN'S PERSIUS.

Never admit this pernicious coin, no not so much as one single half-peny. SWIFT.

You will wonder how Wood could get his majesty's broad seal for so great a sum of bad money, and that the nobility here could not obtain the same favour, and make our own half-pence as we used to do. SWIFT.

HALF-SCHOLAR. n.s. Imperfectly learned.

We have many half-scholars now-a-days, and there is much confusion and inconsistency in the notions and opinions of some persons.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

HALF-SIGHTED. adj. [half and sight.] Seeing imperfectly; having weak discernment.

The officers of the king's household had need be provident, both for his honour and thrift: they must look both ways, else they are but half-sighted.

BACON'S ADVICE TO VILLIERS.

HALLUCINA'TION. n.s. [hallucination, Latin.] Errour; blunder; mistake; folly.

A wasting of flesh, without cause, is frequently termed a bewitched disease; but questionless a meer hallucination of the vulgar. HARVEY ON CONSUMPTIONS.

This must have been the hallucination of the transcriber, who probably mistook the dash of the I for a T.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

HA'LSER. n.s. [from hals, neck, and seel, a rope. It is now in marine pronunciation corrupted to hawser.] A rope less than a cable.

*A beechen mast then in the hollow base
They hoisted, and with well-wreath'd halsers hoise*

Their white sails.

CHAPMAN'S ODYSSEY, B. II.

No halsers need to bind these vessels here, Nor bearded anchors; for no storms they fear. DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

HA'MMOCK. n.s. [hamaca, Saxon.] A swinging bed.

Prince Maurice of Nassau, who had been accustomed to hammocks, used them all his life. TEMPLE.

HA'MPER. n.s. [Supposed by Minshew to be contracted from hand panier; but hanaperium appears to have been a word long in use, whence hanaper, hamper.] A large basket for carriage.

What powder'd wigs! what flames and darts!

What hampers full of bleeding hearts.

SWIFT.

HA'NAPER. n.s. [hanaperium, low Latin.] A treasury; an exchequer. The clerk of the hanaper receives the fees due to the king for the seal of charters and patents.

The fines for all original writs were wont to be immediately paid into the hanaper of the Chancery. BACON.

Your own handwriting would tell you what I think. SHAKESPEARE.

To no other cause than the wise providence of God can be referred the diversity of handwritings. COCKBURN.

HA'NDYDANDY. n.s. A play in which children change hands and places.

See how yond justice rails upon yond simple thief! Hark in thine ear: change places, and, handydandy, which is the justice, which is the thief.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

Neither cross and pile, nor ducks and drakes, are quite so ancient as handydandy.

ARBUTHNOT AND POPE'S MARTIN SCRIBLERUS.

HAN'T, for has not, or have not.

That roguish leer of your's makes a pretty woman's heart ake: you han't that simper about the mouth for nothing. ADDISON.

HAP-HAZARD. n.s. Chance; accident.<sup>123</sup>

The former of these is the most sure and infallible way; but so hard that all shun it, and had rather walk as men do in the dark by hap-hazard, than tread so long and intricate mazes for knowledge sake.

HOOKER, B. I. S. 7.

We live at haphazard, and without any insight into causes and effects.

L'ESTRANGE.

We take our principles at hap-hazard upon trust, and without ever having examined them; and then believe a whole system, upon a presumption that they are true.

LOCKE.

HARA'NGUE. n.s. [harangue, French. The original of the French word is much questioned: Menage thinks it a corruption of hearing, English; Junius imagines it to be discours au rang, to a circle, which the Italian arringo seems to favour. Perhaps it may be from orare, or orationare, orationer, oraner, aranger, haranguer.] A speech; a popular oration.

Gray-headed men, and grave, with warriors mix'd,

Assemble, and harangues are heard; but soon

In factious opposition.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. XI.

Nothing can better improve political school-boys than the art of making plausible or implausible harangues, against the very opinion for which they resolve to determine. SWIFT.

A multitude of preachers neglect method in their harangues.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

TO HARA'NGUE. v.n. [haranguer, French.] To make a speech; to pronounce an oration.

HARA'NGUER. n.s. [from harangue.] An orator; a public speaker: generally with some mixture of contempt.

HARDHA'NDED. adj. [hard and hand.] Coarse; mechanick; one that has hands hard with labour.

— Hardhanded men that work in Athens here,

Which never labour'd in their minds 'till now. SHAKESPEARE.

HA'RDHEAD. n.s. [hard and head.] Clash of heads; manner of fighting in which the combatants dash their heads together.

I have been at hardhead with your butting citizens; I have routed your herd, I have disperst them.

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRYAR.

HARDLA'BOURED. adj. [hard and labour.] Elaborate; studied; diligently wrought.

*How chearfully the hawkers cry
A satire, and the gentry buy!
While my hardlabour'd poem pines;
Unfold upon the printer's lines.* SWIFT.

HA'RDWARE. n.s. [hard and ware.] Manufactures of metal.

HA'RDWAREMAN. n.s. [hardware and man.] A maker or seller of metalline manufactures.

SWIFT.

HARE. n.s. [hara, Saxon; karh, Erse.]

1. A small quadruped, with long ears and short tail, that moves by leaps, remarkable for timidity, vigilance, and fecundity; the common game of hunters.

Dismay'd not this

Our captains Macbeth and Banquo?

— Yes,

As sparrows, eagles; or the hare, the lion.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

We view in the open champaign a brace of swift greyhounds coursing a good stout and well breathed hare. MORE.

Your dressings must be with Galen's powder and hare's fur.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

Poor is the triumph o'er the timid hare.

THOMSON'S AUTUMN.

2. A constellation.

*The hare appears, whose active rays supply
A nimble force, and hardly wings deny.*

CREECH.

HA'RLEQUIN. n.s. [This name is said to have been given by Francis of France to a busy buffoon, in ridicule of his enemy Charles le quint. Menage derives it more probably from a famous comedian that frequented M. Harlay's house, whom his friends called Harlequino, little Harley. Trevoux.] A buffoon who plays tricks to divert the populace; a Jack-pudding; a zani.

The joy of a king for a victory must not be like that of a harlequin upon a letter from his mistress. DRYDEN.

The man in graver tragick known,

*Though his best part long since was done,
Still on the stage desires to tarry;
And he who play'd the harlequin,
After the jest still loads the scene,
Unwilling to retire, though weary.*

PRIOR.

HA'RNESS. n.s. [harnois, French, supposed from iern or hiern, Runnick; hiairn, Welsh and Erse, iron.]

1. Armour; defensive furniture of war.<sup>124</sup>

A goodly knight, all dress'd in harness meet,

That from his head no place appeared to his feet. FAIRY QUEEN.

Doff thy harness, youth:

I am to-day i' th' vein of chivalry.

SHAKESPEARE'S TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

*Of no right, nor colour like to right,
He doth fill fields with harness.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV. P. I.

Were I a great man, I should fear to drink: Great men should drink with harness on their throats. SHAKESPEARE.

2. The traces of draught horses, particularly of carriages of pleasure or state: of other carriages we say geer.

Or wilt thou ride? Thy horses shall be trapp'd,

Their harness studded all with gold and pearl. SHAKESPEARE.

*Their steeds around,
Free from their harness, graze the flow'ry
ground.* DRYDEN.

HA'RPING. Iron. n.s. [from harpago, Latin.] A bearded dart with a line fastened to the handle, with which whales are struck and caught.

*The boat which on the first assault did go,
Struck with a harping iron the younger foe;
Who, when he felt his side so rudely gor'd, Loud as the sea that nourish'd him he roar'd.* WALLER.

HARPONE'ER. n.s. [harponeur, French, from harpoon.] He that throws the harpoon in whalefishing.

HARPO'ON. n.s. [harpon, French.] A harping iron.

HASK. n.s. This seems to signify a case or habitation made of rushes or flags.

Established hath his steeds in lowly lay,
And taken up his inn in fishes hask.*

SPENSER'S PASTORALS.

HA'SSOCK. n.s. [haseck, German. Skinner.]

1. A thick mat on which men kneel at church.

*He found his parishioners very irregular;
and in order to make them kneel, and join in the responses, he gave every one of them a hassock and common prayer book.*

ADDISON.

2. In Scotland it is applied to any thing made of rushes or privet, on which a person may sit: it is therefore probable that hassock and hask are the same.

HA'STY-PUDDING. n.s. A pudding made of milk and flower, boiled quick together; as also of oatmeal and water boiled together.

*Sure hasty-pudding is thy chiefest dish,
With bullock's liver, or some stinking fish.*

DORSET.

HA'TCASE. n.s. [hat and case.] A slight box for a hat.

I might mention a hatcase, which I would not exchange for all the beavers in Great Britain. ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

HATCH. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. A brood excluded from the egg.
2. The act of exclusion from the egg.
3. Disclosure; discovery.

*Something's in his soul,
O'er which his melancholy sits on brood;*

And, I do doubt, the hatch and the disclose

Will be some danger.

SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

4. [Hæca, Saxon; hecke, Dutch, a bolt.] The half door; the opening over the door.<sup>125</sup>

*Something about, a little from the right,
In at the window, or else o'er the hatch.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING JOHN.

5. [In the plural.] The doors or openings by which they descend from one deck or floor of a ship to another.

*To the king's ship, invisible as thou art,
There shalt thou find the mariners* asleep

Under the hatches.

SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

There she's hid;

The mariners all under hatches stow'd.

SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

pow'r,*

Assault the sides, and o'er the hatches

tow'r. DRYDEN.

A ship was fasten'd to the shore;

The plank was ready laid for safe ascent,

*For shelter there the trembling shadow
bent,*

And skip'd and sculk'd, and under hatches went. DRYDEN.

6. To be under HATCHES. To be in a state of ignominy, poverty, or depression.

He assures us how this fatherhood began in Adam, continued its course 'till the flood, got out of the ark with Noah, made and supported all the kings of the earth, 'till the captivity in Egypt, and then the poor fatherhood was under hatches. LOCKE.

7. Hatches. Floodgates. Ainsworth.

HA'TCHET-FACE. n.s. An ugly face; such, I suppose, as might be hewn out of a block by a hatchet.

*An ape his own dear image will embrace;
An ugly beau adores a hatchet-face.*

DRYDEN.

To HA'TTER. v.a. [Perhaps corrupted from batter.] To harass; to weary; to wear out with fatigue.

He's hatter'd out with pennance.

DRYDEN.

HA'TTER. n.s. [from hat.] A maker of hats.

A hatter sells a dozen of hats for five shillings a piece. SWIFT.

HA'VEN. n.s. [haven, Dutch; havre, French.]

1. A port; a harbour; a safe station for ships.

L'ESTRANGE.

2. An excrescence in the eye.

3. [haga, Saxon; haw, a garden, Danish.] A small piece of ground adjoining to an house. In Scotland they call it haugh.

Upon the haw at Plymouth is cut out in the ground the portraiture of two men, with clubs in their hands, whom they term Gog and Magog.

CAREW'S SURVEY OF CORNWAL.

HAZE. n.s. [The etymology unknown.] Fog; mist.

HA'ZY. adj. [from haze.] Dark; foggy; misty.

Our clearest day here is misty and hazy; we see not far, and what we do see is in a bad light.

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

Oft engender'd by the hazy North, Myriads on myriads, insect armies waft.

THOMSON.

HE. pronoun. gen. him; plur. they; gen. them. [hy, Dutch; he, Saxon. It seems to have borrowed the plural from ðis, plural ðas, dative ðisum.]

1. The man that was named before.

*All the conspirators, save only he,
Did that they did in envy of great Cæsar.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*If much you note him,
You shall offend him, and increase his
passion;
Feed and regard him not.*
SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

I am weary of this moon; would he would change. SHAKESPEARE.

*Adam spoke;
So cheer'd he his fair spouse, and she was cheer'd.* MILTON.

When Adam wak'd, he on his side Leaning half rais'd hung over her.
MILTON.

*Thus talking, hand in hand along they pass'd
On to their blissful bow'rs.* MILTON.

*Extol
Him first, him last, him midst.*
MILTON.

2. The man; the person. It sometimes stands without reference to any foregoing word.

*He is never poor
That little hath, but he that much desires.*
DANIEL.

3. Man or male being.

*Such mortal drugs I have; but Mantua's law
Is death to any he that utters them.*
SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO AND JULIET.

*Ay, crook-back, here I stand to answer thee,
or any he the proudest of thy sort.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI. P. III.

*Tros and his race the sculptor shall employ,
And he the god who built the walls of Troy.* DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

4. Male: as, a he bear, a he goat. It is used where the male and female have not different denominations.

The he's in birds have the fairest feathers.
BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

5. In the two last senses he is rather a noun than pronoun.

HE'ADACH. n.s. [head and ach.]
Pain in the head.

From the cruel headach, Riches do not preserve. SIDNEY, B. I.

catarrhs, and coughs, than keeping the head
warm.* LOCKE.

In the headach he orders the opening of the vein of the forehead. ARBUTHNOT.

*At some dear idle time,
Not plagu'd with headachs, or the want of rhyme.* POPE.

HE'ADLONG. adv. [head and long.]

1. With the head foremost. It is often doubtful whether this word be adjective or adverb.

*I'll look no more,
Lest my brain turn, and the deficient sight
Topple down headlong.*
SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

*Who, while he steering view'd the stars,
and bore
His course from Africk to the Latian shore, Fell headlong down.*
DRYDEN'S ÆNEID. B. VI.

*Headlong from thence the glowing fury springs,
And o'er the Theban palace spreads her wings.* POPE.

2. Rashly; without thought; precipitately.

To give Ahab such warning, as might infallibly have prevented his destruction, was esteemed by him evil; and to push him on headlong into it, because he was fond of it, was accounted good.
SOUTH'S SERMONS.

Some ask for envy'd pow'r, which publick hate

*Pursues and hurries headlong to their fate;
Down go the titles.*

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL'S SATIRES, X.

3. Hastily; without delay or respite.

*Unhappy offspring of my teeming womb!
Dragg'd headlong from thy cradle to thy tomb.* DRYDEN.

4. It is very negligently used by Shakespeare.

*Hence will I drag thee headlong by the heels
Unto a dunghill, which shall be thy grave.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

HE'ADWORKMAN. n.s. [head, work and man.] The foreman, or chief servant over the rest.

Can Wood be otherwise regarded than as the mechanick, the headworkman, to prepare his furnace, metal, and stamps?
SWIFT'S ADDRESS TO PARLIAMENT.

HEARSE. n.s. [of unknown etymology.]

1. A carriage in which the dead are conveyed to the grave.

2. A temporary monument set over a grave.

*To add to your laments, Wherewith you now bedew king Henry's hearse,
I must inform you of a dismal fight.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

HEART-BREAKER. n.s. A cant name for a woman's curls, supposed to break the heart of all her lovers.

Like Sampson's heartbreakers, it grew In time to make a nation rue.
HUDIBRAS, P. I.

HEART-FELT. adj. Felt in the conscience.

*What nothing earthly gives, or can destroy,
The soul's calm sun-shine, and the heartfelt joy,
Is virtue's prize.*
POPE'S ESSAY ON MAN.

HEART-STRUCK. adj.

1. Driven to the heart; infixed for ever in the mind.

Who is with him?

— None but the fool who labours to out-jest

His heart-struck injuries.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

2. Shocked with fear or dismay.

*He added not; for Adam, at the news
Heart-struck, with chilling gripe of sorrow
stood,
That all his senses bound!*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. XI.

HE'ATER. n.s. [from heat.] An iron made hot, and put into a box-iron, to smooth and plait linnen.

HE'ATHEN. n.s. [heyden, German.] The gentiles; the pagans; the nations unacquainted with the covenant of grace.

Deliver us from the heathen, that we may give thanks to thy holy name.

BIBLE I CHRONICLES, XVI. 35.

If the opinions of others, whom we think well of, be a ground of assent, men have reason to be heathens in Japan, mahome-tans in Turkey, papists in Spain, and protestants in England. LOCKE.

In a paper of morality, I consider how I may recommend the particular virtues I treat of, by the precepts or examples of the ancient heathens.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

HE'BDOMAD. n.s. [hebdomas, Latin.] A week; a space of seven days.

ARBUTHNOT AND POPE'S MARTIN SCRIBLERUS.

HE'BRAISM. n.s. [hebraisme, French; hebraismus, Latin.] A Hebrew idiom.

Milton has infused a great many Latinisms, as well as Græcisms, and sometimes Hebraisms, into his poem. SPECTATOR.

HE'BRAIST. n.s. [hebræus, Latin.] A man skilled in Hebrew.

HE'BRICIAN. n.s. [from Hebrew.] One skilful in Hebrew.

The words are more properly taken for the air or ether than the heavens, as the best Hebricians understand them. RALEIGH.

The nature of the Hebrew verse, as the meanest Hebrician knoweth, consists of uneven feet. PEACHAM.

HECTICAL, HE'CTICK. adj. [hectique, French, from 'ἕξις.]

1. Habitual; constitutional.

This word is joined only to that kind of fever which is slow and continual, and ending in a consumption, is the contrary to those fevers which arise from a plethora, or too great fulness from obstruction, because it is attended with too lax a state of the excretory passages, and generally those of the skin; whereby so much runs off as leaves not resistance enough in the contractile vessels to keep them sufficiently distended, so that they vibrate oftener, agitate the fluids the more, and keep them thin and hot. Quincy.

A hectick fever hath got hold

Of the whole substance, not to be controul'd. DONNE.

2. Troubled with a morbid heat.

No hectick student scars the gentle maid. TAYLOR.

HEDGE, prefixed to any word, notes something mean, vile, of the lowest class: perhaps from a hedge, or hedge-born man, a man without any known place of birth.

There are five in the first shew: the pedant, the braggart, the hedge-priest, the fool, and the boy. SHAKESPEARE.

The clergy do much better than a little hedge, contemptible, illiterate vicar can be presumed to do. SWIFT.

A person, who, by his stile and literature, seems to have been the corrector of a hedge-press in Little Britain, proceeded gradually to an author. SWIFT.

HEDGE-NOTE. n.s. [hedge and note.] A word of contempt for low writing.

When they began to be somewhat better bred, they left these hedge-notes for another sort of poem, which was also full of pleasant raillery.

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL, DEDICATION.

HE'EL-PIECE. n.s. [heel and piece.] A piece fixed on the hinder part of the shoe, to supply what is worn away.

To HE'EL-PIECE. v.a. [heel and piece.] To put a piece of leather on a shoe-heel.

Some blamed Mrs. Bull for new heel-piecing her shoes. ARBUTHNOT.

1. An expression of slight languour and uneasiness.

Heigh-ho! an't be not four by the day, I'll be hang'd. SHAKESPEARE.

2. It is used by Dryden, contrarily to custom, as a voice of exultation.

*We'll toss off our ale 'till we cannot stand,
And heigh-ho for the honour of old England.* DRYDEN.

HE'IRLOOM. n.s. [heir and geloma, goods, Sax.] Any furniture or moveable decreed to descend by inheritance, and therefore inseparable from the freehold.

*Achilles' sceptre was of wood,
Transmitted to the hero's line;
Thence through a long descent of kings
Came an heirloom, as Homer sings.*
SWIFT.

HELTER-SKELTER. adv. [As Skinner fancies, from heolster sceado, the darkness of hell; hell, says he, being a place of confusion.] In a hurry; without order; tumultuously.

*Sir John, I am thy Pistol, and thy friend;
And helter-skelter have I rode to England,
And tidings do I bring.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

He had no sooner turned his back but they were at it helter-skelter, throwing books at one another's heads. L'ESTRANGE.

HEM. n.s. [hem, Saxon.]

1. The edge of a garment doubled and sewed to keep the threads from spreading.

Rowlers must be made of even cloth, white and gentle, without hem, seam, or thread hanging by. WISEMAN.

2. [Hemmen, Dutch.] The noise uttered by a sudden and violent expiration of the breath.

I would try if I could cry hem, and have him. SHAKESPEARE.

He loves to clear his pipes in good air, and is not a little pleased with any one who takes notice of the strength which he still exerts in his morning hems.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

3. interject. Hem! [Latin.]

HE'NCHMAN. n.s. [hync, a servant, and man, Skinner; hengst, a horse, and man, Spelman.] A page; an attendant. Obsolete.

*Why should Titania cross her Oberon?
I do but beg a little changeling boy,
To be my henchman.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MIDSUMMER'S NIGHT'S DREAM.

*Three henchmen were for ev'ry knight
assign'd,
All in rich livery clad, and of a kind.*

DRYDEN.

HERD. n.s. [heord, Saxon.]

1. A number of beasts together. It is peculiarly applied to black cattle. Flocks and herds are sheep and oxen or kine.

*Note a wild and wanton herd,
Or race of youthful and unhandled colts,
Fetching mad bounds.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF
VENICE.

There find a herd of heifers, wand'ring o'er The neighbouring hill, and drive them to the shore. ADDISON.

2. A company of men, in contempt or detestation.

Survey the world, and where one Cato shines,

Count a degenerate herd of Catilines.

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

I do not remember where ever God delivered his oracles by the multitude, or nature truths by the herd. LOCKE.

3. It anciently signified a keeper of cattle, and in Scotland it is still used. [hyrd, Saxon.] A sense still retained in composition: as goatherd.

HEREA'FTER. adv. [here and after.]

1. In time to come; in futurity.

How worthy he is, I will leave to appear hereafter, rather than story him in his own hearing.

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

The grand-child, with twelve sons increas'd, departs

From Canaan, to a land hereafter call'd Egypt.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. XII.

*Hereafter he from war shall come,
And bring his Trojans peace.* DRYDEN.

2. In a future state.

HEREA'T. adv. [here and at.] At this.

One man coming to the tribune, to receive his donative, with a garland in his hand, the tribune, offended hereat, demanded what this singularity could mean.

HOOKER, B. II.

HEREBY'. adv. [here and by.] By this.

In what estate the fathers rested, which were dead before, it is not hereby either one way or other determined. HOOKER.

Hereby the Moors are not excluded by beauty, there being in this description no consideration of colours. BROWN.

The acquisition of truth is of infinite concernment: hereby we become acquainted with the nature of things.

WATTS.

HEREO'UT. adv. [here and out.]

1. Out of this place.

*A bird all white, well feather'd on each wing,
Here-out up to the throne of God did fly.*
SPENSER.

2. All the words compounded of here and a preposition, except hereafter, are obsolete, or obsolescent; never used in poetry, and seldom in prose, by elegant writers, though perhaps not unworthy to be retained.

HE'RESIARCH. n.s. [heresiarque, French; ἡρεσις and ἡρχή.] A leader in heresy; the head of a herd of hereticks.

The pope declared him not only an heretick, but an heresiarch.

STILLINGFLEET.

HE'RIOT. n.s. [heregild, Saxon.]

A fine paid to the lord at the death of a landholder, commonly the best thing in the landholder's possession.

*This he detains from the ivy; for he should be the true possessory lord thereof, but the olive dispenseth with his conscience to pass it over with a compliment and an heriot
every year.* HOWEL'S VOCAL FOREST.

*Though thou consume but to renew,
Yet love, as lord, doth claim a heriot due.*

CLEAVELAND.

I took him up, as your heriot, with intention to have made the best of him, and then have brought the whole produce of him in a purse to you.

DRYDEN'S DON SEBASTIAN.

HE'RO. n.s. [heros, Latin; ἦρώς.]

1. A man eminent for bravery.

*In which were held, by sad decease,
Heroes and heroesses.*

CHAPMAN'S ODYSSEY.

*I sing of heroes and of kings,
In mighty numbers mighty things.*

Heroes in animated marble frown.

POPE.

In this view he ceases to be an hero, and his return is no longer a virtue.

POPE'S ODYSSEY, NOTES.

These are thy honours, not that here thy bust

Is mix'd with heroes, or with kings thy dust. POPE.

Heroes, kings,

Joy thy wish'd approach to see.

WELSTED.

2. A man of the highest class in any respect.

HE'ROESS. n.s. [from hero; herois, Latin.] A heroine; a female hero.<sup>127</sup>

In which were held, by sad decease,

Heroes and heroesses.
CHAPMAN'S ODYSSEY.

HE'ROINE. n.s. [from hero; heroine, French.] A female hero. Anciently, according to English analogy, heroess.

*But inborn worth, that fortune can controul,
New-strung, and stiffer bent her softer soul;
The heroine assum'd the woman's place, Confirm'd her mind, and fortify'd her face.* DRYDEN.

*Then shall the British stage
More noble characters expose to view,
And draw her finish'd heroines from you.*
ADDISON.

HE'RONRY, HERONSHAW.
n.s. [from heron; commonly pronounced hernry.] A place where herons breed.

They carry their load to a large heronry above three miles.
DERHAM'S PHYSICO-THEOLOGY.

HERSE. n.s. [hersia, low Latin; supposed to come from herian, to praise.]<sup>128</sup>

1. A temporary monument raised over a grave.
2. The carriage in which corpses are drawn to the grave.

*When mourning nymphs attend their Daphnis' herse,
Who does not weep that reads the moving verse?* ROSCOMMON.

*Crowds of dead in decent pomp are born;
Their friends attend the herse, the next relations mourn.*
DRYDEN'S VIRGIL'S GEORGICKS, B. IV.

*On all the line a sudden vengeance waits,
And frequent hereses shall besiege your gates.* POPE.

HEY. interj. [from high.] An expression of joy, or mutual exhortation; the contrary to the Latin hei.

Shadwell from the town retires,

*To bless the wood with peaceful lyrick;
Then hey for praise and panegyrick.*
PRIOR.

HE'YDAY. interj. [for high day] An expression of frolick and exultation, and sometimes of wonder.

*Thou'lt say anon he is some kin to thee, Thou spend'st such heyday wit in praising
him.* SHAKESPEARE.

*'Twas a strange riddle of a lady,
Not love, if any lov'd her, heyday!*
HUDIBRAS, P. I.

HICCIUS DOCCIUS. n.s. [corrupted, I fancy, from hic est doctus, this or here is the learned man. Used by jugglers of themselves.] A cant word for a juggler; one that plays fast and loose.

*An old dull sot, who told the clock
For many years at Bridewell dock,
At Westminster and Hicks's hall,
And hiccius doccius play'd in all;
Where, in all governments and times,
H' had been both friend and foe to crimes.*
HUDIBRAS, P. III.

HICCO'UGH. n.s. [hicken, Danish.] A convulsion of the stomach producing sobs.

*So by an abbey's skeleton of late
I heard an eccho supererogate
Through imperfection, and the voice restore,
As if she had the hiccough o'er and o'er.*
CLEAVELAND.

Sneezing cureth the hiccough, and is profitable unto women in hard labour.
BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

If the stomach be hurt, singultus or hiccough follows, with vomiting and nausea. WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

To HI'CCOUGH. v.n. [from the noun.] To sob with convulsion of the stomach.

To HI'CKUP. v.n. [corrupted from hiccough.] To sob with a convulsed stomach.

*Quoth he, to bid me not to love,
Is to forbid my pulse to move,
My beard to grow, my ears to prick up,
Or, when I'm in a fit, to hickup.*

HUDIBRAS, P. II.

HIDE and SEEK. n.s. A play in which some hide themselves, and another seeks them.

The boys and girls would venture to come and play at hide and seek in my hair.

GULLIVER'S TRAVELS.

To HI'GGLE. v.n. [of uncertain etymology; probably corrupted from haggle.]

1. To chaffer; to be penurious in a bargain.

In good offices and due retributions we may not be pinching and niggardly: it argues an ignoble mind, where we have wronged, to higgle and dodge in the amends. HALE.

Base thou art!

*To higgle thus for a few blows,
To gain thy knight an op'lent spouse.*

HUDIBRAS, P. II.

Why all this higgling with thy friend about such a paultry sum? Does this become the generosity of the noble and rich John Bull?

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

2. To go selling provisions from door to door. This seems the original meaning.

HIGGLEDY-PIGGELDY. adv. A cant word, corrupted from higgle, which denotes any confused mass, as higglers carry a huddle of provisions together.

HI'GGLER. n.s. [from higgle.] One who sells provisions by retail.

HIGH-FLI'ER. n.s. One that carries his opinions to extravagance.

She openly professeth herself to be a high-flier; and it is not improbably she may also be a papist at heart. SWIFT.

HIGH-RE'D. Deeply red.

Oil of turpentine, though clear as water, being digested upon the purely white sugar of lead, has in a short time afforded a high-red tincture.

BOYLE ON COLOURS.

HIGH-VI'CED. Enormously wicked.

*Be as a planetary plague, when Jove Will o'er some high-vic'd city hang his poison
In the sick air.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TIMON OF ATHENS.

HINGE. n.s. [or hingle, from hangle or hang.]

1. Joints upon which a gate or door turns.

*At the gate
Of heav'n arriv'd, the gate self-open'd wide,
On golden hinges turning.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. V.

*Then from the hinge their strokes the gates divorce,
And where the way they cannot find, they force.* DENHAM.

*Heav'n's imperious queen shot down from high;
At her approach the brazen hinges fly,
The gates are forc'd.* DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

2. The cardinal points of the world, East, West, North, and South.

*If when the moon is in the hinge at East,
The birth breaks forward from its native
rest;*

*Full eighty years, if you two years abate,
This station gives.*

CREECH'S MANILIUS.

*And these being hinges of the world, create
New powers in stars.*

CREECH'S MANILIUS.

3. A governing rule or principle.

The other hinge of punishment might turn upon a law, whereby all men, who did not marry by the age of five and twenty, should pay the third part of their revenue.

TEMPLE.

4. To be off the HINGES. To be in a state of irregularity and disorder.

The man's spirit is out of order and off the hinges; and 'till that be put into its right frame, he will be perpetually disquieted.

TILLOTSON, SERMON 4.

To HIP. v.a. [from hip.]

1. To sprain or shoot the hip.

His horse was hipp'd, with an old motly saddle, and the stirrups of no kindred.

SHAKESPEARE'S TAMING OF THE SHREW.

2. HIP-HOP. A cant word formed by the reduplication of hop.

*Your different tastes divide our poets cares;
One foot the sock, t'other the buskin wears:
Thus while he strives to please, he's forc'd
to do't,*

Like Volscius hip-hop in a single boot.

CONGREVE.

To HISS. v.n. [hissen, Dutch.] To utter a noise like that of a serpent and some other animals. It is remarkable, that this word cannot be pronounced without making the noise which it signifies.

In the height of this bath to be thrown into the Thames, and cool'd glowing hot, in that surge, like a horseshoe; think of that; hissing hot.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

The merchants shall hiss at thee.

BIBLE EZEKIEL, XXVII. 36.

*See the furies arise;
See the snakes that they rear,
How they hiss in their hair.*

DRYDEN'S ALEXANDER'S FEAST.

*Against the steed he threw
His forceful spear, which, hissing as it flew,
Pierc'd through the yielding planks.*

DRYDEN.

To HISS. v.a. [hiscean, Saxon.]

1. To condemn by hissing; to explode.

Every one will hiss him out to his disgrace.

BIBLE ECCLESIASTICUS, XXII. 1.

Men shall pursue with merited disgrace; Hiss, clap their hands, and from his country chase. SANDYS.

She would so shamefully fail in the last act, that, instead of a plaudite, she would deserve to be hissed off the stage. MORE.

I have seen many successions of men, who have shot themselves into the world, some bolting out upon the stage with vast applause, and others hissed off, and quitting it with disgrace. DRYDEN.

*Will you venture your all upon a cause, which would be hissed out of all the courts
as ridiculous?* COLLIER ON DUELLING.

2. To procure hisses or disgrace.

Thy mother plays, and I Play too; but so disgrac'd a part, whose issue

Will hiss me to my grave.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

*What's the newest grief?
— That of an hour's age doth hiss the speaker,*

Each minute teems a new one.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

HISS. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. The voice of a serpent, and of some other animals.

2. Censure; expression of contempt used in theatres.

*He heard
On all sides, from innumerable tongues,
A dismal universal hiss, the sound
Of publick scorn!*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. X.

Fierce champion fortitude, that knows no fears

Of hisses, blows, or want, or loss of ears.

POPE'S DUNCIAD.

HIST. interj. [Of this word I know not the original: probably it may be a corruption of hush, hush it, husht, hist.<sup>129</sup>] An exclamation commanding silence.

*Hist! Romeo, hist! O for a falc'ner's voice,
To lure this tassel gentle back again.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO AND JULIET.

*Mute silence hist along!
'Less Philomel will deign a song,
In her sweetest saddest plight,
Smoothing the rugged brow of night.*

MILTON.

Hist, hist, says another that stood by, away, doctor; for here's a whole pack of dismals coming. SWIFT.

HI'STORY. n.s. [ἱστορία; historia, Latin; histoire, French.]

1. A narration of events and facts delivered with dignity.

*Justly Cæsar scorns the poet's lays;
It is to history he trusts for praise.*

POPE.

2. Narration; relation.

The history part lay within a little room.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

*What histories of toil could I declare?
But still long-weary'd nature wants repair.*

POPE'S ODYSSEY.

3. The knowledge of facts and events.

History, so far as it relates to the affairs of the Bible, is necessary to divines.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

HISTRIO'NICAL, HISTRI-ONICK. adj. [from histrion, Latin; histrion, Fr.] Befitting the stage; suitable to a player; becoming a buffoon; theatrical.

To HITCH. v.n. [hiegan, Saxon, or hocher, French. Skinner.] To catch; to move by jerks. I know not where it is used but in the following passage.<sup>130</sup>

*Whoe'er offends, at some unlucky time
Slides in a verse, or hitches in a rhyme;*

*Sacred to ridicule his whole life long,
And the sad burthen of some merry song.*

POPE'S HORACE.

HO'BNOB. This is probably corrupted from habnab by a coarse pronunciation. See HABNAB.

His incensement at this moment is so implacable, that satisfaction can be none, but pangs of death and sepulchre: hobnob is his word; give't, or take't.

SHAKESPEARE'S TWELFTH NIGHT.

HOGWA'SH. n.s. [hog and wash.] The draff which is given to swine.

Your butler purloins your liquor, and the brewer sells you hogwash.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

HOLDERFO'RTH. n.s. [hold and forth.] An haranguer; one who speaks in publick.

*Whence some tub holdersforth have made
In powd'ring tubs the richest trade.*

HUDIBRAS, P. III.

He was confirmed in this opinion upon seeing the holderforth.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER.

HO'LLY. n.s. [holeyn, Saxon.] A plant.

The leaves are set about the edges with long, sharp, stiff prickles: the berries are small, round, and generally of a red colour, containing four triangular striated seeds in each. Of this tree there are several species; some variegated in the leaves, some with yellow berries, and some with white. Miller.

*Fairest blossoms drop with every blast;
But the brown beauty will like hollies last.*

GAY.

*Some to the holly hedge Nestling repair, and to the thicket some;
Some to the rude protection of the thorn.*

THOMSON'S SPRING.

HO'MELY. adv. Plainly; coarsely; rudely.

*Thus like the god his father, homely drest,
He strides into the hall a horrid guest.*

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

HO'MER. n.s. A measure of about three pints.

An homer of barley-seed shall be valued at fifty shekels of silver.

BIBLE LEVITICUS, XXVII. 16.

HO'MICIDE. n.s. [homicide, French; homicidium, Latin.]

1. Murder; manquelling.

The apostles command to abstain from blood: construe this according to the law of nature, and it will seem, that homicide only is forbidden; but construe it in reference to the law of the Jews, about which the question was, and it shall easily appear to have a clean other sense, and a truer, when we expound it of eating, and not of shedding blood. HOOKER, B. IV.

2. Destruction. In the following lines it is not proper.

*What wonder is't that black detraction thrives!
The homicide of names is less than lives.*

DRYDEN.

3. [Homicide, Fr. homicida, Lat.] A murderer; a manslayer.

*Your beauty, that did haunt me in my sleep,
To undertake the death of all the world,
So might I live one hour in your sweet bosom.*

— If I thought that, I tell thee,

*homicide,
These nails should rend that beauty from my cheeks.* SHAKESPEARE.

*Hector comes, the homicide, to wield
His conqu'ring arms, with corps to strew
the field.* DRYDEN.

HOMO'NYMOUS. adj. [homonyme, Fr. ὁμώνυμος.] Denominating different things; equivocal; ambiguous.

As words signifying the same thing are called synonymous, so equivocal words, or those which signify several things, are called

homonymous, or ambiguous; and when persons use such ambiguous words, with a design to deceive, it is called equivocation.

WATTS'S LOGICK.

HOMO'NYMY. n.s. [homonymie, French; ὁμωνυμία.] Equivocation; ambiguity.

To HONE. v.n. [hongian, Saxon.] To pine; to long for any thing.

HON'EY-COMBED. adj. [honey and comb.] Spoken of a piece of ordnance flawed with little cavities by being ill cast.

A mariner having discharged his gun, which was honey-combed, and loading it suddenly again, the powder took fire.

WISEMAN.

HO'NEY-MOON. n.s. [honey and moon.] The first month after marriage, when there is nothing but tenderness and pleasure.

A man should keep his finery for the latter season of marriage, and not begin to dress 'till the honey-moon is over. ADDISON.

To HOOP. v.n. [from wopgan or wopyan, Gothick; or houpper, French, derived from the Gothick. This word is generally written whoop, which is more proper, if we deduce it from the Gothick; and hoop, if we derive it from the French.] To shout; to make an outcry by way of call or pursuit.

HO'OPING-COUGH. n.s. [or whooping-cough, from hoop, to shout.] A convulsive cough, so called from its noise; the chine cough.

HO'PEFUL. adj. [hope and full.]
1. Full of qualities which produce hope; promising; likely to obtain success; likely to come to maturity; likely to gratify desire, or answer expectation.

He will advance thee:

I know his noble nature, not to let

Thy hopeful service perish.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

You serve a great and gracious master, and there is a most hopeful young prince whom you must not desert. BACON.

What to the old can greater pleasure be, Than hopeful and ingenious youth to see?

DENHAM.

They take up a book in their declining years, and grow very hopeful scholars by that time they are threescore. ADDISON.

2. Full of hope; full of expectation of success. This sense is now almost confined to Scotland, though it is analogical, and found in good writers.

Men of their own natural inclination hopeful and strongly conceited, whatsoever they took in hand. HOOKER, B. V.

I was hopeful the success of your first attempts would encourage you to make trial also of more nice and difficult experiments. BOYLE.

Whatever ill the friendless orphan bears, Bereav'd of parents in his infant years, Still must the wrong'd Telemachus sustain,

If hopeful of your aid, he hopes in vain. POPE'S ODYSSEY.

HORI'ZON. n.s. ['oɹiζɔv.] The line that terminates the view. The horizon is distinguished into sensible and real: the sensible horizon is the circular line which limits the view; the real is that which would bound it, if it could take in the hemisphere. It is falsely pronounced by Shakespeare hórizon.

When the morning sun shall raise his car Above the border of this horizon, We'll forward towards Warwick and his mates. SHAKESPEARE.

She began to cast with herself from what coast this blazing star should first appear, and at what time it must be upon the horizon of Ireland.

BACON'S HENRY VII.

Far in th' horizon to the North appear'd, From skirt to skirt, a fiery region.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

In his East the glorious lamp was seen, Regent of day; and all th' horizon round Invested with bright rays.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. VII.

The morning lark, the messenger of day, Saluted in her song the morning gray; And soon the sun arose with beams so bright,

That all th' horizon laugh'd to see the joyous sight. DRYDEN.

When the sea is worked up in a tempest, so that the horizon on every side is nothing but foaming billows and floating mountains, it is impossible to describe the agreeable horror that rises from such a prospect. ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

HO'ROLOGE, HOROLOGY.

n.s. [horologium, Latin.] Any instrument that tells the hour: as a clock; a watch; an hourglass.

'Tis evermore the prologue to his sleep; He'll watch the horologue a double set, If drink rock not his cradle.

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

Before the days of Jerome there were horologies, that measured the hours not only by drops of water in glasses, called clepsydra, but also by sand in glasses, called clepsammia. BROWN.

HO'RRID.

adj. [horridus, Latin.]

1. Hideous; dreadful; shocking.

Oh!

Give colour to my pale cheek with thy blood, That we the horrider may seem to those Which chance to find us.

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

Not in the legions Of horrid hell can come a devil more damn'd, In evils to top Macbeth.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

2. Shocking; offensive; unpleasing: in womens cant.

Already I your tears survey, Already hear the horrid things they say.

POPE.

3. Rough; rugged.

Horrid with fern, and intricate with thorn, Few paths of human feet or tracks of beasts were worn. DRYDEN.

HORRI'SONOUS. adj. [horrisonus, Latin.] Sounding dreadfully. Dictionaries.

HO'RSELITTER. n.s. [horse and litter.] A carriage hung upon poles between two horses, in which the person carried lies along.

He that before thought he might command the waves of the sea, was now cast on the ground, and carried in an horselitter.

BIBLE 2 MACCABEES, IX. 8.

HO'SPITAL. n.s. [hospital, French; hospitalis, Latin.]

1. A place built for the reception of the sick, or support of the poor.

They who were so careful to bestow them in a college when they were young, would be so good as to provide for them in some hospital when they are old. WOTTON.

I am about to build an hospital, which I will endow handsomely for twelve old husbandmen. ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

2. A place for shelter or entertainment.<sup>131</sup>

*They spy'd a goodly castle, plac'd Foreby a river in a pleasant dale,
Which chusing for that evening's hospital,
They thither march'd.*

FAIRY QUEEN, B. II.

HOSPITA'LITY. n.s. [hospitalité, French.] The practice of entertaining strangers.

The Lacedemonians forbidding all access of strangers into their coasts, are, in that respect, deservedly blamed, as being enemies to that hospitality which, for common humanity sake, all the nations on earth should embrace. HOOKER, B. I.

*My master is of a churlish disposition,
And little reckes to find the way to heav'n
By doing deeds of hospitality.*

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

How has this spirit of faction broke all the laws of charity, neighbourhood, alliance, and hospitality? SWIFT.

HO'STLER. n.s. [hosteller, from hostel.] One who has the care of horses at an inn.

The cause why they are now to be permitted is want of convenient inns for lodging travellers on horseback, and hostlers to tend their horses by the way.

SPENSER ON IRELAND.

HO'STRY. n.s. [corrupted from hostelry.] A place where the horses of guests are kept.

*Swift rivers are with sudden ice constrain'd,
And studded wheels are on its back sustain'd;
An hostry now for waggons, which before
Tall ships of burden on its bosom bore.*

DRYDEN'S GEORGICKS.

HO'TBED. n.s. A bed of earth made hot by the fermentation of dung.

The bed we call a hotbed is this: there was taken horsedung, old and well rotted; this was laid upon a bank half a foot high, and supported round about with planks, and upon the top was cast sifted earth two fingers deep.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

Preserve the hotbed as much as possible from rain. EVELYN.

HOTCO'CKLES. n.s. [hautes coquilles, French.] A play in which one covers his eyes, and guesses who strikes him.

The chytindra is certainly not our hotcockles; for that was by pinching, not by striking.

ARBUTHNOT AND POPE'S MARTIN
SCRIBLERUS.

*As at hotcockles once I laid me down,
And felt the weighty hand of many a clown,
Buxoma gave a gentle tap, and I Quick rose, and read soft mischief in her eye.* GAY'S PASTORALS.

HO'THOUSE. n.s. [hot and house.]

1. A bagnio; a place to sweat and cup in.

Now she professes a hothouse, which, I think, is a very ill house too.

SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

2. A brothel.

*Where lately harbour'd many a famous whore,
A purging bill, now fix'd upon the door,
Tells you it is a hothouse; so it may,
And still be a whorehouse: th' are synonyma.* BEN JONSON.

HOU'SEholdSTUFF. n.s.

[household and stuff.] Furniture of an house; utensils convenient for a family.

In this war that he maketh, he still flieth from his foe, and lurketh in the thick woods, waiting for advantages: his cloke is his bed, yea and his housholdstuff.

SPENSER ON IRELAND.

A great part of the building was consumed, with much costly housholdstuff.

BACON'S HENRY VII.

The poor woman had her jest for her housholdstuff, and paid her physician with a conceit for his money. L'ESTRANGE.

HOU'SEKEEPER. n.s. [house and keep.]

1. Householder; master of a family.

To be said an honest man and a good housekeeper, goes as fairly as to say a graceful man and a great scholar.

SHAKESPEARE.

If I may credit housekeepers and substantial tradesmen, all sorts of provisions and commodities are risen excessively.

LOCKE.

2. One who lives in plenty.<sup>132</sup>

The people are apter to applaud housekeepers than house-raisers. WOTTON.

3. One who lives much at home.

How do you both? You are manifest housekeepers. What are you sewing here?

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

4. A woman servant that has care of a family, and superintends the other maid servants.

*Merry folks, who want by chance
A pair to make a country-dance,
Call the old housekeeper, and get her
To fill a place for want of better.* SWIFT.

5. A housedog.

Distinguish the housekeeper, the hunter.
SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

HO'USEWIFE. n.s. [house and wife. This is now frequently written
huswife, or hussy.]

1. The mistress of a family.

You will think it unfit for a good housewife to stir in or to busy herself about her housewifry. SPENSER ON IRELAND.

I have room enough, but the kind and hearty housewife is dead.

POPE TO SWIFT.

2. A female œconomist.

Fitting is a mantle for a bad man, and surely for a bad housewife it is no less convenient; for some of them, that be wandering women, it is half a wardrobe.

SPENSER ON IRELAND.

Let us sit and mock the good housewife, fortune, from her wheel, that her gifts may henceforth be disposed equally.

SHAKESPEARE.

*Farmers in degree,
He a good husband, a good housewife
she.* DRYDEN.

*Early housewives leave the bed,
When living embers on the hearth are spread.* DRYDEN.

The fairest among the daughters of Britain shew themselves good stateswomen as well as good housewives. ADDISON'S FREEHOLD.

3. One skilled in female business.

He was bred up under the tuition of a tender mother, 'till she made him as good an housewife as herself: he could preserve apricocks, and make jellies.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

HOWD'YE. [Contracted from how do ye.] In what state is your health. A message of civility.

Years make men more talkative, but less writative; so that I now write no letters but of plain business, or plain howd'ye's, to those few I am forced to correspond with.

POPE.

HU'GGERMUGGER. n.s.

[corrupted perhaps from hug er morcker, or hug in the dark. Morcker in Danish is darkness, whence our murky. It is written by Sir Thomas More, hoker moker. Hoker, in Chaucer, is peevish, crossgrained, of which moker may be only a ludicrous reduplication. Hooke is likewise in German a corner, and moky is in English dark. I know not how to determine.] Secrecy; bye-place.

Now hold in huggermugger in their hand,

And all the rest do rob of goods and land.

HUBBERD'S TALE.

*But if I can but find them out,
Where e'er th' in huggermugger lurk,
I'll make them rue their handy-work.*

HUDIBRAS, P. I.

There's a distinction betwixt what's done openly and barefaced, and a thing that's done in huggermugger, under a seal of secrecy and concealment.

L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

To HUM. v.a. [hommelen, Dutch.]

1. To make the noise of bees.

The humming of bees is an unequal buzzing. BACON.

*An airy nation flew,
Thick as the humming bees that hunt the golden dew*

In Summer's heat.

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID, B. VI.

*So weary bees in little cells repose;
But if night-robbers lift the well-stor'd hive,
An humming through their waxen city grows.* DRYDEN.

2. To make an inarticulate and buzzing sound.

*I think he'll hear me: yet to bite his lip,
And hum at good Cominius, much unhearts me.* SHAKESPEARE.

*Upon my honour, sir, I heard a humming,
And that a strange one too, which did awake me.* SHAKESPEARE.

*The cloudy messenger turns me his back,
And hums; as who should say, you'll rue.* SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

3. To pause in speaking, and supply the interval with an audible emission of breath.

*Having pump'd up all his wit,
And humm'd upon it, thus he writ.*

HUDIBRAS, P. III.

*I still acquiest,
And never humm'd and haw'd sedition,
Nor snuffled treason.*

HUDIBRAS, P. III. CANT. 2.

The man lay humming and hawing a good while; but, in the end, he gave up himself to the physicians. L'ESTRANGE.

*Still humming on, their drowsy course they keep,
And lash'd so long, like tops, are lash'd asleep.* POPE.

4.<sup>133</sup> To sing low.

The musical accents of the Indians, to us, are but inarticulate hummings; as are ours to their otherwise tuned organs.

GLANVILLE'S APOLOGY.

Hum half a tune. POPE.

5. To applaud. Approbation was commonly expressed in publick assemblies by a hum, about a century ago.

HUM. interject. A sound implying doubt and deliberation.

*Let not your ears despise the heaviest sound
That ever yet they heard.*

— Hum! I guess at it.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

See sir Robert — hum!

And never laugh for all my life to come.

POPE.

HU'MANIST. n.s. [humaniste, French.] A philologist; a grammarian.

HUMA'NITY. n.s. [humanité, French; humanitas, Latin.]

1. The nature of man.

Look to thyself; reach not beyond humanity. SIDNEY.

A rarer spirit never did steer humanity.

SHAKESPEARE.

The middle of humanity thou never knewest, but the extremity of both ends.

SHAKESPEARE'S TIMON OF ATHENS.

To preserve the Hebrew intire and uncorrupt, there hath been used the highest caution humanity could invent.

BROWN.

2. Humankind; the collective body of mankind.

If he can untie those knots, he is able to teach all humanity, and will do well to oblige mankind by his informations.

GLANVILLE.

3. Benevolence; tenderness.

All men ought to maintain peace, and the common offices of humanity and friendship in diversity of opinions. LOCKE.

How few, like thee, enquire the wretched out,

And court the offices of soft humanity?

Like thee reserve their raiment for the naked,

Reach out their bread to feed the crying orphan,

Or mix their pitying tears with those that weep? ROWE.

4. Philology; grammatical studies.<sup>134</sup>

HUMECTA'TION. n.s. [humectation, Fr. from humectate.] The act of wetting; moistening.

Plates of brass, applied to a blow, will keep it down from swelling: the cause is repercussion, without humectation, or entrance of any body.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

That which is concreted by exsiccation, or expression of humidity, will be resolved by humectation, as earth and clay.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

HUMICUBA'TION. n.s. [humi and cubo, Latin.] The act of lying on the ground.

Fasting and sackcloth, and ashes and tears, and humicubations, used to be companions of repentance. BRAMHALL.

HUNKS. n.s. [hunskur, sordid, Islandick.] A covetous sordid wretch; a miser; a curmudgeon.

The old hunks was well served, to be tricked out of a whole hog for the securing of his puddings. L'ESTRANGE.

She has a husband, a jealous, covetous, old hunks. DRYDEN.

Irus has given all the intimations of being a close hunks, worth money.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

HU'RLY, HURLYBURLY. n.s. [I have been told that this word owes its original to two neighbouring families named Hurly and Burly, or Hurleigh and Burleigh, which filled their part of the kingdom with contests and violence. If this account be rejected,<sup>135</sup> the word must be derived from hurl, hurly, and burly, a ludicrous reduplication. Hurlade, French; hurlub-relu, inconsiderately.] Tumult; commotion; bustle.

*Winds take the ruffian billows by the top,
That with the hurly death itself awakes.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

*Poor discontents,
Which gape and rub the elbow at the news
Of hurlyburly innovation.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV, P. I.

Methinks, I see this hurly all on foot.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING JOHN.

All places were filled with tumult and hurly-burly, every man measured the danger by his own fear; and such a pitiful cry was in every place, as in cities presently to be besieged. KNOLLES.

HUSH. interj. [Without etymology.]
Silence! be still! no noise!

*The king hath done you wrong; but hush!
'tis so.* SHAKESPEARE.

There's something else to do; hush and be mute,

Or else our spell is marr'd.

SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

HU'SHMONEY. n.s. [hush and money.] A bribe to hinder information;
pay to secure silence.

A dext'rous steward, when his tricks are found,

*Hushmoney sends to all the neighbours
round;*

His master, unsuspecting of his pranks,

Pays all the cost, and gives the villain thanks. SWIFT.

HU'SSY. n.s. [corrupted from housewife: taken in an ill sense.] A sorry or bad woman; a worthless wench. It is often used ludicrously in slight disapprobation.

*Get you in, hussy, go: now will I personate
this hopeful young jade.*

SOUTHERN'S INNOCENT ADULTERY.

HU'SWIFE. n.s. [corrupted from housewife.]

1. A bad manager; a sorry woman. It is common to use housewife in a good,
and huswife or hussy in a bad sense.

Bianca,

A huswife, that, by selling her desires,

Buys herself bread and cloth.

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

2. An œconomist; a thrifty woman.

Why should you want?

The bounteous huswife, nature, on each bush

Lays her fulness before you.

SHAKESPEARE.

HUZZA'. interj. A shout; a cry of acclamation.

The huzzas of the rabble are the same to a bear that they are to a prince.

L'ESTRANGE.

It was an unfair thing in you to keep a parcel of roaring bullies about me day and night, with huzzas and hunting horns never let me cool.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

*All fame is foreign, but of true desert;
Plays round the head, but comes not to the heart:*

*One self-approving hour whole years
outweighs*

Of stupid starers and of loud huzzas.

POPE'S ESSAY ON MAN.

To HUZZA'. v.n. [from the interjection.] To utter acclamation.

*A caldron of fat beef, and stoop of ale,
On the huzzaing mob shall still prevail.*

KING'S COOKERY.

To HUZZA'. v.a. To receive with acclamation.

He was huzzaed into the court by several thousands of weavers and clothiers.

ADDISON.

HY'PER. n.s. [A word barbarously curtailed by Prior from hypercritick.] A hypercritick; one more critical than necessity requires. Prior did not know the meaning of the word.

Criticks I read on other men,

And hypers upon them again. PRIOR.

HYPERCRI'TICK. n.s. [hypercritique, Fr. 'υπερ and κριτικός.] A critick exact or captious beyond use or reason.

Those hypercriticks in English poetry differ from the opinion of the Greek and Latin judges of antiquity, from the Italians and French, and from the general taste of all ages. DRYDEN.

HYPERCRI'TICAL. adj. [from hypercritick.] Critical beyond necessity or use.

We are far from imposing those nice and hypercritical punctilio's, which some astrologers oblige our gardeners to.
EVELYN.

Such hypercritical readers will consider my business was to make a body of refined sayings, only taking care to produce them in the most natural manner. SWIFT.

HYSTE'RICAL, HYSTERICK. adj. [hysterique, French; ὑστερικός.]
1. Troubled with fits; disordered in the regions of the womb.

In hysterick women the rarity of symptoms doth oft strike such an astonishment into spectators, that they report them possessed with the devil.

HARVEY ON CONSUMPTIONS.

Many hysterical women are sensible of wind passing from the womb.

FLOYER ON THE HUMOURS.

2. Proceeding from disorders in the womb.

*Parent of vapours, and of female wit,
Who gave th' hysterick or poetick fit.*

POPE'S RAPE OF THE LOCK.

This terrible scene made too violent an impression upon a woman in her condition, and threw her into a strong hysterick fit.

ARBUTHNOT AND POPE'S MARTIN SCRIBLERUS.

HYSTE'RICKS. n.s. [ὑστερικός.]
Fits of women, supposed to proceed from disorders in the womb.

I

Is in English considered both as a vowel and consonant; though, since the vowel and consonant differ in their form as well as sound, they may be more properly accounted two letters.

I vowel has a long sound, as fine, thine, which is usually marked by an e final; and a short sound, as fin, thin. Prefixed to e it makes a diphthong of the same sound with the soft i, or double e, ee: thus field, yield, are spoken as feeld, yeeld; except friend, which is spoken frend. Subjoined to a or e it makes them long, as fail, neigh; and to o makes a mingled sound, which approaches more nearly to the true notion of a diphthong, or sound composed of the sounds of two vowels, than any other combination of vowels in the English language, as oil, coin. The sound of i before another i, and at the end of a word, is always expressed by y.

J consonant has invariably the same sound with that of g in giant; as jade, jet, jilt, jolt, just.

To JA'BBER. v.n. [gabberen, Dutch.] To talk idly; to prate without thinking; to chatter.

*We scorn, for want of talk, to jabber
Of parties.* SWIFT.

JACK Pudding. n.s. [jack and pudding.] A zani; a merry Andrew.

Every jack pudding will be ridiculing palpable weaknesses which they ought to cover. L'ESTRANGE.

A buffoon is called by every nation by the name of the dish they like best: in French jean pottage, and in English jack pudding. GUARDIAN.

*Jack pudding, in his party-colour'd jacket,
Tosses the glove, and jokes at ev'ry packet.*
GAY.

JAGG. n.s. [from the verb.] A protuberance or denticulation.

The figure of the leaves is divided into so many jags or escallops, and curiously indented round the edges. RAY.

Take off all the staring straws, twigs, and jags in the hive, and make them as smooth as possible.

MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

JA'GGY. adj. [from jagg.] Uneven; denticulated.

*His tow'ring crest was glorious to behold;
His shoulders and his sides were scal'd with
gold;*

Three tongues he brandish'd when he charg'd his foes;

His teeth stood jaggy in three dreadful rows. ADDISON.

*Amid' those angles, infinitely strain'd,
They joyful leave their jaggy salts behind.*

THOMSON'S AUTUMN.

JAIL. n.s. [geol, French.] A gaol; a prison; a place where criminals are confined. See GAOL. It is written either way; but commonly by latter writers jail.

Away with the dotard, to the jail with him. SHAKESPEARE.

A dependant upon him paid six pound ready money, which, poor man, he lived to repent in a jail. CLARENDON.

He sigh'd and turn'd his eyes, because he knew

'Twas but a larger jail he had in view.

DRYDEN.

One jail did all their criminals restrain, Which now the walls of Rome can scarce contain. DRYDEN.

JAKES. n.s. [Of uncertain etymology.] A house of office.

I will tread this unbolted villain into mortar, and daub the walls of jakes with him. SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

Their sordid avarice rakes In excrements, and hires the very jakes.

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

Some have fished the very jakes for papers left there by men of wit. SWIFT.

IA'MBICK. n.s. [iambique, French; iambicus, Latin.] Verses composed of iambick feet, or a short and long syllable alternately: used originally in satire, therefore taken for satire.

In thy felonious heart though venom lies, It does but touch thy Irish pen, and dies: Thy genius calls thee not to purchase fame In keen iambicks, but mild anagram.

DRYDEN.

JA'NNOCK. n.s. [probably a corruption of bannock.] Oatbread. A northern word.

JA'NTY. adj. [corrupted from gentil, French.] Showy; fluttering.

This sort of woman is a janty slattern: she hangs on her cloaths, plays her head, and varies her posture. SPECTATOR.

To JA'VEL, or Jable. v.a. To bemire; to soil over with dirt through unnecessary traversing and travelling. This word is still retained in Scotland and the northern counties.

JAUNT. n.s. [from the verb.] Ramble; flight; excursion. It is commonly used ludicrously, but solemnly by Milton.

Our Saviour meek, and with untroubled mind,

After his airy jaunt, though hurry'd sore, Hungry and cold, betook him to his rest.

MILTON'S PARADISE REGAIN'D.

He sends me out on many a jaunt, Old houses in the night to haunt.

HUDIBRAS, P. III.

They parted, and away posts the cavalier in quest of his new mistress: his first jaunt is to court. L'ESTRANGE.

If you are for a merry jaunt, I'll try for once who can foot it farthest.

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRYAR.

Thus much of the scheme of my design in this part have I run over, and led my reader a long and tedious jaunt, in tracing out these metallick and mineral bodies.

WOODWARD.

I'CEHOUSE. n.s. [ice and house.] A house in which ice is repositied against the warm months.

I'D. Contracted for I would.

I'DIOM. n.s. [idiome, French; 'ιδίωμα.] A mode of speaking peculiar to a language or dialect; the particular cast of a tongue; a phrase; phraseology.

He did romanize our tongue, leaving the words translated as much Latin as he found them; wherein he followed their language, but did not comply with the idiom of ours. DRYDEN.

Some that with care true eloquence shall teach,

And to just idioms fix our doubtful speech. PRIOR.

I'DIOTISM. n.s. [idiotisme, French; 'ιδιωτισμός.]

1. Peculiarity of expression; mode of expression peculiar to a language.

Scholars sometimes in common speech, or writing, in their native language, give terminations and idiotisms suitable to their native language unto words newly invented. HALE.

2. Folly; natural imbecillity of mind.

JE'OPARDY. n.s. [This word is supposed to be derived from j'ai perdu, or jeu perdu. Skinner and Junius.]

Hazard; danger; peril. A word not now in use.

*And would ye not poor fellowship expel,
Myself would offer you t' accompany,
In this adventure's chanceful jeopardy.*

HUBBERD'S TALE.

Thy rage shall burn thee up, and thou shalt turn

*To ashes ere our blood shall quench that
fire:*

Look to thyself, thou art in jeopardy.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING JOHN.

This colour will be reprehended or encountered, by imputing to all excellencies in compositions a kind of poverty, or at least a casualty or jeopardy. BACON.

I'GNIS FA'TUUS. n.s. [Latin.]

Will with the wisp; Jack with the lanthorn.

Vapours arising from putrified waters are usually called ignes fatui.

NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

IGNI'VOMOUS. adj. [ignivomus, Latin.] Vomiting fire.

Vulcanos and ignivomous mountains are some of the most terrible shocks of the globe.

DERHAM'S PHYSICO-THEOLOGY.

To IGNO'RE. v.a. [ignoror, French; ignoro, Latin.] Not to know; to be ignorant of. This word Boyle endeavoured to introduce; but it has not been received.

I ignored not the stricter interpretation, given by modern critics to divers texts, by me alleged. BOYLE.

Philosophy would solidly be established, if men would more carefully distinguish those things that they know from those that they ignore. BOYLE.

To JIG. v.n. [from the noun.] To dance carelessly; to dance. Expressed in contempt.

As for the jiggling part and figures of dances, I count that little. LOCKE.

J'IGGUMBOB. n.s. [A cant word.]

A trinket; a knick-knack; a slight contrivance in machinery.

*He rifled all his pokes and fobs
Of gimcracks, whims, and jiggumbobs.*

HUDIBRAS, P. III.

ILK. adv. [ealc, Saxon.] Eke; also. It is still retained in Scotland, and denotes each: as, ilk ane of you, every one of you. It also signifies the same; as, Macintosh of that ilk, denotes a gentleman whose surname and the title of his estate are the same.

*Shepherds, should it not yshend
Your roundels fresh, to hear a doleful verse
Of Rosalind, who knows not Rosalind,
That Colin made? ilk can I you rehearse.*

SPENSER.

To ILLA'QUEATE. v.a. [illaqueo, Latin.] To entangle; to entrap; to ensnare.

I am illaquated, but not truly captivated into an assent to your conclusion.

MORE'S DIVINE DIALOGUES.

ILLI'TERATE. adj. [illiteratus, Latin.] Unlettered; untaught; unlearned; unenlightened by science.

The duke was illiterate, yet had learned at court to supply his own defects, by the drawing unto him of the best instruments of experience. WOTTON.

Th' illiterate writer, empirick like, applies

*To minds diseas'd unsafe chance remedies:
The learn'd in schools, where knowledge
first began,
Studies with care th' anatomy of man;
Sees virtue, vice, and passions in their cause,
And fame from science, not from fortune
draws.* DRYDEN.

In the first ages of Christianity not only the learned and the wise, but the ignorant and illiterate embraced torments and death.
TILLOTSON'S SERMONS.

ILLNA'TURE. n.s. [ill and nature.] Habitual malevolence; want of humanity.

Illnature inclines a man to those actions that thwart and sour and disturb conversation, and consists of a proneness to do ill turns, attended with a secret joy upon the sight of any mischief that befalls another, and of an utter insensibility of any kindness done him. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

IMA'GINER. n.s. [from imagine.]
One who forms ideas.

The juggler took upon him to know that such an one should point in such a place of a garter that was held up; and still he did it, by first telling the imaginer, and after bidding the actor think.
BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

IMBE'CILE. adj. [imbecilis, Latin;
imbecille, French.] Weak; feeble; wanting strength of either mind or body.

To IMBE'CILE. v.a. [from the adjective. This word is corruptly written embezzle.] To weaken a stock or fortune by clandestine expences or unjust appropriations.

Princes must in a special manner be guardians of pupils and widows, not suffering their persons to be oppressed, or their states imbeciled.
TAYLOR'S RULE OF LIVING HOLY.

To IMBI'BE. v.a. [imbibo, Latin;
imbiber, French.]

1. To drink in; to draw in.

A pot of ashes will receive more hot water than cold, forasmuch as the warm water imbibeth more of the salt. BROWN.

The torrent merciless imbibes Commissions, perquisites, and bribes.
SWIFT.

*Illumin'd wide,
The dewy-skirted clouds imbibe the sun.*
THOMSON'S AUTUMN.

2. To admit into the mind.

Those, that have imbibed this error, have extended the influence of this belief to the whole gospel, which they will not allow to contain any thing but promises.

HAMMOND.

It is not easy for the mind to put off those confused notions and prejudices it has imbibed from custom. LOCKE.

Conversation with foreigners enlarges our minds, and sets them free from many prejudices we are ready to imbibe concerning them.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

3. To drench; to soak. This sense, though unusual, perhaps unexampled, is necessary in the English, unless the word imbue be adopted, which our writers seem not willing to receive.

Metals, corroded with a little acid, turn into rust, which is an earth tasteless and indissolvable in water; and this earth, imbibed with more acid, becomes a metallick salt. NEWTON.

IMBRI'CATED. adj. [from imbrex, Latin.] Indented with concavities; bent and hollowed like a roof or gutter-tile.

To IMBRO'WN. v.a. [from brown.]
To make brown; to darken; to obscure;
to cloud.

*Where the morning sun first warmly smote
The open field, and where the unpierc'd shade*

Imbrown'd the noontide bow'rs.
MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

*The walking crew,
At thy request, support the miry shoe;
The foot grows black that was with dirt
imbrown'd,
And in thy pocket gingling half-pence sound.* GAY.

Another age shall see the golden ear Imbrown the slope, and nod on the parterre. POPE.

Imbrown'd with native bronze, lo! Henly stands. POPE.

To IMBU'E. v.a. [imbuo, Latin. This word, which seems wanted in our language, has been proposed by several writers, but not yet adopted by the rest. Imbu, French, the participial adj. is only used.] To tincture deep; to imbibe with any liquor or die.

I would render this treatise intelligible to every rational man, however little versed in scholastick learning; among whom I expect it will have a fairer passage, than among those that are deeply imbued with other principles. DIGBY.

Cloaths which have once been thoroughly embued with black, cannot well afterwards be dyed into lighter colour. BOYLE.

Where the mineral matter is great, so as to take the eye, the body appears imbued and tintured with the colour. WOODWARD.

IMITA'TION. n.s. [imitatio, Latin; imitation, French.]

1. The act of copying; attempt to resemble.

Since a true knowledge of nature gives us pleasure, a lively imitation of it, either in poetry or painting, must produce a much greater; for both these arts are not only true imitations of nature, but of the best nature. DRYDEN.

2. That which is offered as a copy.

3. A method of translating looser than paraphrase, in which modern examples and illustrations are used for ancient, or domestick for foreign.

In the way of imitation, the translator not only varies from the words and sense, but forsakes them as he sees occasion; and, taking only some general hints from the original, runs division on the groundwork. DRYDEN.

IMME'DIACY. n.s. [immediateté, French, from immediate.] Personal greatness; power of acting without dependance. This is a harsh word, and sense peculiar I believe to Shakespeare.

*He led our pow'rs, Bore the commission of my place and person;
The which immediacy may well stand up,
And call itself your brother.* SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

IMMO'MENT. adj. [in and moment.] Trifling; of no importance or value. A barbarous word.

*I some lady-trifles have reserv'd,
Immoment toys, things of such dignity
As we greet modern friends withal.* SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

IMMU'SICAL. adj. [in and musical.] Unmusical; inharmonious.

All sounds are either musical, which are ever equal, or immusical, which are ever unequal, as the voice in speaking, and whisperings. BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

When we consider the immusical note of all swans we ever beheld or heard of, we cannot consent. BROWN.

IMPA'RTIBLE. adj. [impartible, Fr. from impart.] Communicable; to be conferred or bestowed. This word is elegant, though used by few writers.

The same body may be conceived to be more or less impartible than it is active or heavy. DIGBY.

IMPE'RTINENT. adj. [impertinent, Fr. in and pertinens, Latin.]

1. Of no relation to the matter in hand; of no weight.

The law of angels we cannot judge altogether impertinent unto the affairs of the church of God. HOOKER.

The contemplation of things that are impertinent to us, and do not concern us, are but a more specious idleness. TILLOTSON.

2. Importunate; intrusive; meddling.

'Tis not a sign two lovers are together, when they can be so impertinent as to enquire what the world does. POPE.

3. Foolish; trifling.<sup>136</sup>

IMPE'RTINENT. n.s. A trifler; a meddler; an intruder.

Governours would have enough to do to trouble their heads with the politicks of every meddling officious impertinent.

L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

I'MPETRATION. n.s.

[impetration, Fr. impetratio, from impetro, Latin.] The act of obtaining by prayer or intreaty.<sup>137</sup>

The blessed sacrament is the mystery of the death of Christ, and the application of his blood, which was shed for the remission of sins, and is the great means of impetration, and the meritorious cause of it. TAYLOR.

It is the greatest solemnity of prayer, the most powerful liturgy, and means of impetration in this world. TAYLOR.

IMPLE'X. adj. [implexus, Latin.]

Intricate; entangled; complicated.<sup>138</sup>

Every poem is either simple or implex: it is called simple when there is no change of fortune in it; implex, when the fortune of the chief actor changes from bad to good, or from good to bad. SPECTATOR.

IMPO'ROUS. adj. [in and porous.]

Free from pores; free from vacuities or interstices; close of texture; completely solid.

It has its earthly and salinous parts so exactly resolved, that its body is left imporous, and not discreted by atomical terminations.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

If atoms should descend plumb down with equal velocity, being all perfectly solid and imporous, they would never the one overtake the other. RAY ON THE CREATION.

To IMPO'RT. v.a. [importo, Latin.]

1. To carry into any country from abroad: opposed to export.

For Elis I would sail with utmost speed, T' import twelve mares, which there luxurious feed. POPE.

2. To imply; to infer.

Himself not only comprehended all our necessities, but in such sort also framed every petition as might most naturally serve for many; and doth, though not always require, yet always import a multitude of speakers together. HOOKER.

The name of discipline importeth not as they would fain have it construed; but the self-same thing it signifieth, which the name of doctrine doth. HOOKER.

This question we now asked, imported, as that we thought this land a land of magicians. BACON.

3. To produce in consequence.

Something he left imperfect in the state, Which since his coming forth is thought of, which

Imports the kingdom so much fear and danger,

That his return was most requir'd.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

4. [Importer, importe, French. Impersonally.] To be of moment: as, it imports, it is of weight or consequence.

Her length of sickness, with what else more serious

Importeth thee to know, this bears.

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

Let the heat be such as may keep the metal perpetually molten; for that above all importeth to the work. BACON.

Number in armies importeth not much, where the people is of weak courage. BACON'S ESSAYS.

This to attain, whether heav'n move, or earth,

Imports not, if thou reckon right.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

It may import us in this calm to hearken more than we have done to the storms that are now raising abroad. TEMPLE.

If I endure it, what imports it you?

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRYAR.

IMPO'RTLESS. adj. [from import.] Of no moment or consequence. This is a word not in use, but not inelegant.

We less expect

That matter needless, of importless

burthen,

Divide thy lips.

SHAKESPEARE'S TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

I'MPOST. n.s. [impost, impôt, French; impositum, Latin.] A tax; a toll; a custom paid.

Taxes and imposts upon merchants do seldom good to the king's revenue; for that that he wins in the hundred, he loseth in the shire. BACON'S ESSAYS.

IMPREJU'DICATE. adj. [in, præ, and judico, Latin.] Unprejudiced; not prepossessed; impartial.

The solid reason of one man with imprejudicate apprehensions, begets as firm a belief as the authority or aggregated testimony of many hundreds. BROWN.

IMPREPARA'TION. n.s. [in and preparation.] Unpreparedness; want of preparation.

Impreparation and unreadiness when they find in us, they turn it to the soothing up of themselves. HOOKER.

IMPROBABI'LITY. n.s. [from improbable.] Unlikelihood; difficulty to be believed.

The difficulty being so great, and the improbability of attempting this successfully, it was but reason that a solid foundation should be laid. HAMMOND.

As to the improbabilities of a spirit appearing, I boldly answer him, that a heroick poet is not tied to the bare representation of what is true, or exceeding probable. DRYDEN.

IMPRO'PER. adj. [impropre, Fr. improprius, Latin.]

1. Not well adapted; unqualified.

As every science requires a peculiar genius, so likewise there is a genius peculiarly improper for every one. BURNET.

2. Unfit; not conducive to the right end.

The methods used in an original disease would be very improper in a gouty case. ARBUTHNOT ON DIET.

3. Not just; not accurate.

*He disappear'd, was rarify'd;
For 'tis improper speech to say he dy'd:
He was exhal'd.* DRYDEN.

IMPRO'VABLE. adj. [from improve.] Capable of being advanced from a good to a better state; capable of melioration.

Adventures in knowledge are laudable, and the essays of weaker heads afford improvable hints unto better. BROWN.

We have stock enough, and that too of so improvable a nature, that is, capable of infinite advancement. DECAY OF PIETY.

Man is accommodated with moral principles, improvable by the exercise of his faculties.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

Animals are not improvable beyond their proper genius: a dog will never learn to mew, nor a cat to bark.

GREW'S COSMOLOGIA SACRA.

I have a fine spread of improvable lands, and am already planting woods and draining marshes.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

I'MPUDENT. adj. [impudent, Fr. impudens, Latin.] Shameless; wanting modesty.

It is not a confident brow, nor the throng of words that come with such more than impudent sawciness from you, can thrust me from a level consideration.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

When we behold an angel, not to fear, Is to be impudent.

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRYAR.

INA'CCURATE. adj. [in and accurate.] Not exact; not accurate. It is used sometimes of persons, but more frequently of performances.

INA'NITY. n.s. [from inanis, Latin.] Emptiness; void space.

This opinion excludes all such inanity, and admits no vacuities but so little ones as no body whatever can come to, but will be bigger than they, and must touch the corporal parts which those vacuities divide. DIGBY ON BODIES.

INA'PPETENCY. n.s. [in and appetentia, Latin.] Want of stomach or appetite.

INARTI'ULATE. adj. [inarticulé, Fr. in and articulate.] Not uttered with distinctness like that of the syllables of human speech.

Observe what inarticulate sounds resemble any of the particular letters.

WILKINS'S MATHEMATICAL MAGICK.

By the harmony of words we elevate the mind to a sense of devotion; as our solemn musick, which is inarticulate poesy, does in churches. DRYDEN.

To INAUGURATE. v.a. [inauguro, Latin.] To consecrate; to invest with a new office by solemn rites; to begin with good omens; to begin.

Those beginnings of years were propitious to him, as if kings did chuse remarkable days to inaugurate their favours, that they may appear acts as well of the time as of the will. WOTTON.

To INCA'RCERATE. v.a. [incarcerero, Latin.] To imprison; to confine. It is used in the Scots law to denote imprisoning or confining in a gaol; otherwise it is seldom found.

The pestilent contagion may be propagated by those dense bodies, that easily incarcerate the infected air; as woollen cloaths.

HARVEY ON CONSUMPTIONS.

INCA'RNATE. participial adj. [incarnat, Fr. from the verb.]

1. Cloathed with flesh; embodied in flesh.

Undoubtedly even the nature of God itself, in the person of the son, is incarnate, and hath taken to itself flesh. HOOKER.

They say he cried out of women.

— Yes, that he did, and said they were devils incarnate. SHAKESPEARE.

A most wise sufficient means of redemption and salvation, by the satisfactory death and obedience of the incarnate son of God, Jesus Christ, God blessed for ever.

SANDERSON.

Here shalt thou sit incarnate, here shalt reign

Both God and man.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. III.

2. It may be doubted whether Swift understood this word.

But he's possest,

Incarnate with a thousand imps.

SWIFT.

3. In Scotland incarnate is applied to any thing tinged of a deep red colour, from its resemblance to a flesh colour.

INCH. n.s. [inceaxon; uncia, Latin.]

1. A measure of length supposed equal to three grains of barley laid end to end; the twelfth part of a foot.

A foot is the sixth part of the stature of man, a span one eighth of it, and a thumb's breadth or inch one seventy-second. HOLDER ON TIME.

2. A proverbial name for a small quantity.

The plebeians have got your fellow tribune;

They'll give him death by inches.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

*As in lasting, so in length is man,
Contracted to an inch, who was a span.*

DONNE.

Is it so desirable a condition to consume by inches, and lose one's blood by drops?

COLLIER.

*He should never miss, in all his race,
Of time one minute, or one inch of space.*

BLACKMORE.

The commons were growing by degrees into power and property, gaining ground upon the patricians inch by inch. SWIFT.

3. A nice point of time.

Beldame, I think, we watch'd you at an inch. SHAKESPEARE.

INCLI'NATORY. adj. [from incline.] Having a quality of inclining to one or other.

If that inclinatory virtue be destroyed by a touch from the contrary pole, that end which before was elevated will then decline. BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

INCLI'NATORILY. adv. [from inclinatory.] Obliquely; with inclination to one side or the other; with some deviation from North and South.

Whether they be refrigerated inclinatorily, or somewhat equinoxially, that is, toward the eastern or western points, they discover some verticity.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

INCO'G. adv. [corrupted by mutilation from incognito, Latin.]

Unknown; in private.

*But if you're rough, and use him like a dog,
Depend upon it, he'll remain incog.*

ADDISON.

INCO'GNITO. adv. [incognitus, Latin.] In a state of concealment.

'Twas long ago

Since gods came down incognito.

PRIOR.

INCO'MPARABLY. adv. [from incomparable.]

1. Beyond comparison; without competition.

A founder it had, whom I think incomparably the wisest man that ever the French church did enjoy, since the hour it enjoyed him. HOOKER.

Self-preservation will oblige a man voluntarily to undergo any less evil, to secure himself but from the probability of an evil incomparably greater.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

2. Excellently; to the highest degree. A low phrase.

There are the heads of Antoninus Pius, the Faustina's, and Marcus Aurelius, all incomparably well cut. ADDISON ON ITALY.

INCOMPOSSIBI'LITY. n.s.

[from impossible.] Quality of being not possible but by the negation or destruction of something; inconsistency with something.

The manifold impossibilities and lubricities of matter cannot have the same fitnesses in any modification. MORE.

Though the repugnancy of infinitude be equally incompetent to continued or successive motion, and depends upon the impossibility of the very nature of things successive or extensive with infinitude, yet that impossibility is more conspicuous in discrete quantity, that ariseth from individuals already actually distinguished.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

INCOMPREHENSIBI'LITY.

n.s. [incomprehensibilité, Fr. from incomprehensible.] Unconceivableness; superiority to human understanding.

INCONSPI'CUOUS. adj. [in and conspicuous.] Indiscernible; not perceptible by the sight.

When an excellent experimenter had taken pains in accurately filling up a tube of mercury, we found that yet there remained store of inconspicuous bubbles. BOYLE.

INCONSU'MPTIBLE. adj. [in and consumptus, Lat.] Not to be spent; not to be brought to an end; not to be destroyed by fire. This seems a more elegant word than inconsumable.

Before I give any answer to this objection of pretended inconsumptible lights, I would gladly see the effect undoubtedly proved.
DIGBY ON BODIES.

INCO'NTINENT. adj. [incontiens, Lat. in and continent.]

1. Unchaste; indulging unlawful pleasure.

In these degrees have they made a pair of stairs to marriage, which they will climb incontinent, or else be incontinent before marriage.

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

Men shall be lovers of their own selves, false accusers, incontinent, fierce.

BIBLE 2 TIMOTHY, III. 3.

2. Shunning delay; immediate. This is a meaning now obsolete.

*They ran towards the far rebounded noise,
To weet what wight so loudly did
lament;*

Unto the place they came incontinent.

FAIRY QUEEN.

*Come, mourn with me for what I do
lament,*

And put on sullen black incontinent.

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD II.

He says he will return incontinent.

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

INCONVE'RSABLE. adj. [in and conversable.] Incommunicative; ill qualified by temper for conversation; unsocial.

He is a person very inconvertible.

MORE.

INCO'RRIGIBLE. adj. [incorrigible, Fr. in and corrigible.] Bad beyond correction; depraved beyond amendment by any means; erroneous beyond hope of instruction.<sup>139</sup>

The loss is many times irrecoverable, and the inconvenience incorrigible.

MORE'S DIVINE DIALOGUES.

What are their thoughts of things, but variety of incorrigible error?

L'ESTRANGE.

*Provok'd by those incorrigible fools,
I left declaiming in pedantick schools.*

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

Whilst we are incorrigible, God may in vengeance continue to chastise us with the judgment of war.

SMALRIDGE'S SERMONS.

The most violent party-men are such as have discovered least sense of religion or morality; and when such are laid aside, as shall be found incorrigible, it will be no difficulty to reconcile the rest. SWIFT.

I'NCUBUS. n.s. [Latin; incube, Fr.] The night-mare.

The incubus is an inflation of the membranes of the stomach, which hinders the motion of the diaphragma, lungs, pulse, and motion, with a sense of a weight oppressing the breast.

FLOYER ON THE HUMOURS.

To INCU'RVATE. v.a. [incurvo, Latin.] To bend; to crook.

Sir Isaac Newton has shewn, by several experiments of rays passing by the edges of bodies, that they are incurvated by the action of these bodies.

CHEYNE'S PHILOSOPHICAL PRINCIPLES.

INDAGA'TION. n.s. [from indagate.] Search; enquiry; examination.

Paracelsus directs us, in the indagation of colours, to have an eye principally upon salts. BOYLE.

Part hath been discovered by himself, and some by human indagation.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

INDE'CENCY. n.s. [indecence, French.] Any thing unbecoming; any thing contrary to good manners; something wrong, but scarce criminal.

He will in vain endeavour to reform indecency in his pupil, which he allows in himself. LOCKE.

INDEFI'NITUDE. n.s. [from indefinite.] Quantity not limited by our understanding, though yet finite.

They arise to a strange and prodigious multitude, if not indefinitude, by their various positions, combinations, and conjunctions.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

INDEPE'NDENT. adj. [independant, Fr. in and dependent.]

1. Not depending; not supported by any other; not relying on another; not controlled. It is used with on, of, or from before the object; of which on seems most proper, since we say to depend on, and consequently dependent on.

Creation must needs infer providence, and God's making the world irrefragably proves that he governs it too; or that a being of dependent nature remains nevertheless independent upon him in that respect.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

Since all princes of independent govern- ments are in a state of nature, the world never was without men in that state.

LOCKE.

The town of St. Gaul is a protestant republick, independent of the abbot, and under the protection of the cantons. ADDISON.

2. Not relating to any thing else, as to a superiour cause or power.

The consideration of our understanding, which is an incorporeal substance independent from matter; and the contemplation of our own bodies, which have all the stamps and characters of excellent contrivance; these alone do very easily guide us to the wise Author of all things.

BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

INDEPE'NDENT. n.s. One who in religious affairs holds that every congregation is a complete church, subject to no superiour authority.

We shall, in our sermons, take occasion to justify such passages in our liturgy as have been unjustly quarrelled at by presbyterians, independents, or other puritan sectaries. SANDERS.

A very famous independent minister was head of a college in those times.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

INDIGITA'TION. n.s. [from indigitate.] The act of pointing out or showing.

Which things I conceive no obscure indigitation of providence.

MORE AGAINST ATHEISM.

INDISTU'RBANCE. n.s. [in and disturb.] Calmness; freedom from disturbance.

What is called by the stoicks apathy, and by the scepticks indisturbance, seems all but to mean great tranquillity of mind.

TEMPLE.

To INDO'CTRINATE. v.a. [endoc-triner, old French.] To instruct; to tincture with any science, or opinion.

Under a master that discoursed excellently, and took much delight in indoctrinating his young unexperienced favourite, Buckingham had obtained a quick conception of speaking very gracefully and pertinently.

CLARENDON.

They that never peep beyond the common belief, in which their easy understandings were at first indoctrinated, are strongly assured of the truth and co-operative excellency of their receptions.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

INDOCTRINA'TION. n.s. [from indoctrinate.] Instruction; information.

Although postulates are very accommodable unto junior indoctrinations, yet are these authorities but temporary, and not to be embraced beyond the minority of our intellectuals. BROWN.

INDRA'UGHT. n.s. [in and draught.]

1. An opening in the land into which the sea flows.

Ebbs and floods there could be none, when there was no indraughts, bays, or gulphs to receive a flood. RALEIGH.

2. Inlet; passage inwards.

Navigable rivers are so many indraughts to attain wealth.

BACON'S ADVICE TO VILLIERS.

INDU'BIOUS. adj. [in and dubious.] Not doubtful; not suspecting; certain.

Hence appears the vulgar vanity of reposing an indubious confidence in those antipestiferous spirits. HARVEY.

INDU'LGENCE, INDULGENCE. n.s. [indulgence, Fr. from indulge.]

1. Fondness; fond kindness.

*Restraint she will not brook;
And left to herself, if evil thence ensue,
She first his weak indulgence will accuse.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

*The glories of our isle,
Which yet like golden ore, unripe in beds,
Expect the warm indulgency of heaven.*

DRYDEN'S KING ARTHUR.

2. Forbearance; tenderness; opposite to rigour.

They err, that through indulgence to others, or fondness to any sin in themselves, substitute for repentance any thing less.

HAMMOND ON FUNDAMENTALS.

*In known images of life, I guess
The labour greater, as th' indulgence less.*

POPE.

3. Favour granted.

If all these gracious indulgences are without any effect on us, we must perish in our own folly. ROGERS.

4. Grant of the church of Rome, not defined by themselves.

*Thou, that giv'st whores indulgences to sin,
I'll canvas thee.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

*Indulgences, dispenses, pardons, bulls,
The sport of winds.* MILTON.

In purgatory, indulgences, and supererogation, the assertors seem to be unanimous in nothing but in reference to profit.

DECAY OF PIETY.

Leo X. is deservedly infamous for his base prostitution of indulgences.

ATTERBURY.

INDU'STRIOUS. adj. [industrieux, Fr. industrius, Lat.]

1. Diligent; laborious; assiduous.

Opposed to slothful.

He himself, being excellently learned, and industrious to seek out the truth of all things concerning the original of his own people, hath set down the testimony of the ancients truly. SPENSER ON IRELAND.

Let our just censures Attend the true event, and put we on Industrious soldiership.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*His thoughts were low:
To vice industrious; but to nobler deeds
Timorous and slothful.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

2.<sup>140</sup> Designed; done for the purpose.

*The industrious perforation of the tendons of the second joints of fingers and toes, draw the tendons of the third joints
through.* MORE'S DIVINE DIALOGUES.

Observe carefully all the events which happen either by an occasional concurrence of various causes, or by the industrious application of knowing men.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

I'NDUSTRY. n.s. [industrie, Fr. industria, Lat.] Diligence; assiduity.<sup>141</sup>

*The sweat of industry would dry and die,
But for the end it works to.*

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

*See the laborious bee
For little drops of honey flee,
And there with humble sweets content her industry.* COWLEY.

*Providence would only initiate mankind
into the useful knowledge of her treasures, leaving the rest to employ our industry,
that we might not live like idle loiterers.*

MORE'S ANTIDOTE AGAINST ATHEISM.

I'NFANCY. n.s. [infantia, Latin.]

1. The first part of life. Usually extended by naturalists to seven years.

Dare we affirm it was ever his meaning, that unto their salvation, who even from their tender infancy never knew any other faith or religion than only Christian, no kind of teaching can be available, saving that which was so needful for the first universal conversion of Gentiles, hating Christianity? HOOKER.

*Pirithous came t' attend
This worthy Theseus, his familiar friend:
Their love in early infancy began,
And rose as childhood ripen'd into man.*

DRYDEN.

The insensible impressions on our tender

infancies have very important and lasting consequences. LOCKE.

2. Civil infancy, extended by the English law to one and twenty years.

3. First age of any thing; beginning; original; commencement.

In Spain our springs, like old mens children, be

Decay'd and wither'd from their infancy.

DRYDEN'S INDIAN EMPEROR.

The difference between the riches of Roman citizens in the infancy and in the grandeur of Rome, will appear by comparing the first valuation of estates with the estates afterwards possessed.

ARBUTHNOT ON COINS.

INFATUA'TION. n.s. [from infatuate.] The act of striking with folly; deprivation of reason.

Where men give themselves over to the defence of wicked interests and false propositions, it is just with God to smite the greatest abilities with the greatest infatuations. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

INFUA'USTING. n.s. [from infaustus, Lat.] The act of making unlucky. An odd and inelegant word.

As the king did in some part remove the envy from himself, so he did not observe that he did withal bring a kind of malediction and infausting upon the marriage, as an ill prognostick.

BACON'S HENRY VII.

INFESTI'VITY. n.s. [in and festivity.] Mournfulness; want of cheerfulness.

INFI'RMARY. n.s. [infirmierie, French.] Lodgings for the sick.

These buildings to be for privy lodgings on both sides, and the end for privy galleries, whereof one should be for an infirmary, if any special person should be sick.

BACON.

INFI'RMITY. n.s. [infirmité, French.]

1. Weakness of sex, age, or temper.

Infirmity,

Which waits upon worn times, hath something seiz'd

His wish'd ability.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

Discover thine infirmity,

That warranteth by law to be thy privilege:

I am with child, ye bloody homicides.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

If he had done or said any thing amiss, he desired their worships to think it was his infirmities.

SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

Are the infirmities of the body, pains, and diseases his complaints? His faith reminds him of the day when this corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal immortality. ROGERS.

2. Failing; weakness; fault.

A friend should bear a friend's infirmities; But Brutus makes mine greater than they are. SHAKESPEARE.

Many infirmities made it appear more requisite, that a wiser man should have the application of his interest. CLARENDON.

How difficult is it to preserve a great name, when he that has acquired it, is so obnoxious to such little weaknesses and infirmities, as are no small diminution to it, when discovered.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

3. Disease; malady.

General laws are like general rules of physick, according whereunto, as now, no wise man will desire himself to be cured, if there be joined with his disease some special accident, in regard that thereby others in the same infirmity, but without the like accident, may. HOOKER.

INFLE'CTION. n.s. [inflectio, Latin.]

1. The act of bending or turning.

Neither the divine determinations, persuasions, or inflexions of the understanding or will of rational creatures, doth deceive the understanding, pervert the will, or necessitate either to any moral evil.

HALE.

2. Modulation of the voice.

His virtue, his gesture, his countenance, his zeal, the motion of his body, and the inflection of his voice, who first uttereth them as his own, is that which giveth the very essence of instruments available to eternal life. HOOKER.

3. Variation of a noun or verb.

The same word in the original tongue, by divers inflections and variations, makes divers dialects. BREREWOOD.

INFO'RMER. n.s. [from inform.]

1. One who gives intelligence.

This writer is either byassed by an inclination to believe the worst, or a want of judgment to chuse his informers.

SWIFT.

2. One who discovers offenders to the magistrate.

There were spies and informers set at work to watch the company. L'ESTRANGE.

Let no court sycophant pervert my sense, Nor sly informer watch these words to draw

Within the reach of treason. POPE.

Informers are a detestable race of people, although sometimes necessary. SWIFT.

INFO'RMOUS. adj. [informe, Fr. informis, Latin.] Shapeless; of no regular figure.

That a bear brings forth her young informous and unshapen, which she fashioneth after by licking them over, is an opinion not only common with us at present, but hath been delivered by ancient writers. BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

INGANNA'TION. n.s. [ingannare, Italian.] Cheat; fraud; deception; juggle; delusion; imposture; trick; slight. A word neither used nor necessary.

Whoever shall resign their reasons, either from the root of deceit in themselves, or inability to resist such trivial ingannations from others, are within the line of vulgarity. BROWN.

INGENU'ITY. n.s. [ingenuité, Fr. from ingenuous.]

1. Openness; fairness; candour; freedom from dissimulation.

Such of high quality, or other of particular note, as shall fall under my pen, I shall not let pass without their due character, being part of my professed ingenuity.

WOTTON.

*My constancy I to the planets give;
My truth, to them who at the court do live;
Mine ingenuity and openness
To jesuits; to buffoons my pensiveness.*

DONNE.

I know not whether it be more shame or wonder, that men can so put off ingenuity, and the native greatness of their kind, as to descend to so base, so ignoble a vice.

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE.

If a child, when questioned for any thing, directly confess, you must commend his ingenuity, and pardon the fault, be it what it will. LOCKE.

2. [From ingenious.] Wit; invention; genius; subtilty; acuteness.

These are but the frigidities of wit, and become not the genius of manly ingenuities.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

The ancient atomical hypothesis might have slept for ever, had not the ingenuity of the present age recalled it from its urn and silence.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

Such sots have neither parts nor wit, ingenuity of discourse, nor fineness of conversation, to entertain or delight any one. SOUTH.

A pregnant instance how far virtue surpasses ingenuity, and how much an honest simplicity is preferable to fine parts and subtile speculations. WOODWARD.

INGE'STION. n.s. [from ingest.]
The act of throwing into the stomach.

It has got room enough to grow into its full dimension, which is performed by the daily ingestion of milk and other food, that's in a short time after digested into blood.

HARVEY.

INHE'RITOR. n.s. [from inherit.]
An heir; one who receives any thing by succession.

*You, like a letcher, out of whorish loins,
Are pleas'd to breed out your inheritors.*

SHAKESPEARE.

*The sole inheritor
Of all perfections that a man may owe.*

SHAKESPEARE.

The very conveyances of his lands will hardly lie in this box; and must the inheritor himself have no more?

SHAKESPEARE.

Marriage without consent of parents they do not make void, but they mulct it in the inheritors; for the children of such marriages are not admitted to inherit above a third part of their parents inheritance.

BACON'S NEW ATLANTIS.

INHE'RITRESS. n.s. [from inheritor.] An heiress; a woman that inherits.

Having given artificially some hopes to marry Anne, inheritress to the duchy of Bretagne. BACON'S HENRY VII.

INHE'RITRIX. n.s. [from inheritor.] An heiress. This is now more commonly used, though inheritress be a word more analogically English.

*Charles the great Establish'd then this law, to wit, No feme
Should be inheritrix in Salike land.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

I'NJURY. n.s. [injuria, Lat. injure, Fr.]

1. Hurt without justice.

The town of Bouline, and other places, were acquired by just title of victory; and therefore in keeping of them no injury was offered. HAYWARD.

*Riot ascends above their loftiest tow'rs,
And injury and outrage.* MILTON.

2. Mischief; detriment.

Many times we do injury to a cause by dwelling upon trifling arguments.

WATTS'S LOGICK.

3. Annoyance.

Great injuries such vermin as mice and rats do in the fields. MORTIMER.

4. Contumelious language; reproachful appellation.<sup>142</sup>

Casting off the respects fit to be continued between great kings, he fell to bitter invectives against the French king; and, by how much he was the less able to do, talking so much the more, spake all the injuries he could devise of Charles. BACON.

I'NKLING. n.s. [This word is derived by Skinner from inklincken, to sound within. This sense is still retained in Scotland: as, I heard not an inkling.] Hint; whisper; intimation.

Our business is not unknown to the senate: they have had inkling what we intend to do, which now we'll shew them in deeds.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

We in Europe, notwithstanding all the remote discoveries and navigations of this last age, never heard of any of the least inkling or glimpse of this island.

BACON'S NEW ATLANTIS.

They had some inkling of secret messages between the marquis of Newcastle and young Hotham. CLARENDON, B. VIII.

Aboard a Corinthian vessel he got an inkling among the ship's crew of a conspiracy. L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

To INLA'W. v.a. [in and law.] To clear of outlawry or attainder.

It should be a great incongruity to have them to make laws, who themselves were not inlawed. BACON'S HENRY VII.

I'NNINGS. n.s. Lands recovered from the sea. Ainsworth.

INNKE'EPER. n.s. [inn and keeper.] One who keeps lodgings and provisions for the entertainment of travellers.

Clergymen must not keep a tavern, nor a judge be an innkeeper.

TAYLOR'S RULE OF HOLY LIVING.

A factious innkeeper, in the reign of Henry VII. was hanged, drawn, and quartered. ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER.

We were not so inquisitive about the inn as the innkeeper; and provided our landlord's principles were sound, did not take any notice of the staleness of his provisions.

ADDISON.

INNUE'NDO. n.s. [innuendo, from innuo, Latin.] An oblique hint.

As if the commandments, that require obedience and forbid murder, were to be indicted for a libellous innuendo upon all the great men that come to be concerned.

L'ESTRANGE.

Mercury, though employed on a quite contrary errand, owns it a marriage by an innuendo. DRYDEN.

*Pursue your trade of scandal-picking,
Your hints that Stella is no chicken;
Your innuendo's, when you tell us,
That Stella loves to talk with fellows.*

SWIFT.

INQUINA'TION. n.s. [inquinatio, Lat. from inquinare.] Corruption; pollution.

Their causes and axioms are so full of imagination, and so infected with the old received theories, as they are mere inquinations of experience, and concoct it not.

BACON.

The middle action, which produceth such imperfect bodies, is fitly called by some of the ancients inquisition, or concoction, which is a kind of putrefaction.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

INSCRU'TABLE. adj. [inscrutabilis, Lat. inscrutable, Fr.] Unsearchable; not to be traced out by inquiry or study.

*A jest unseen, inscrutable, invisible,
As a weather-cock on a steeple.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

This king had a large heart, inscrutable for good, and was wholly bent to make his kingdom and people happy. BACON.

*O how inscrutable! his equity
Twins with his power.* SANDYS.

Hereunto they have recourse as unto the oracle of life, the great determinator of virginity, conception, fertility, and the inscrutable infirmities of the whole body.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

We should contemplate reverently the works of nature and grace, the inscrutable ways of providence, and all the wonderful methods of God's dealing with men.

ATTERBURY.

INSECTO'LOGER. n.s. [insect and λόγος.] One who studies or describes insects.<sup>143</sup>

The insect itself is, according to modern insectologers, of the ichneumon-fly kind.

DERHAM'S PHYSICO-THEOLOGY.

INSI'DIOUS. adj. [insidieux, French; insidiosus, Latin.] Sly; circumventive; diligent to entrap; treacherous.

Since men mark all our steps, and watch our haltings, let a sense of their insidious vigilance excite us so to behave ourselves, that they may find a conviction of the mighty power of Christianity towards regulating the passions.

ATTERBURY'S SERMONS.

*They wing their course
And dart on distant coasts, if some sharp rock,
Or shoal insidious, breaks not their career.* THOMSON.

To INSI'ST. v.n. [insister, French; insisto, Latin.]

1. To stand or rest upon.

The combs being double, the cells on each side the partition are so ordered, that the angles on one side insist upon the centers of the bottom of the cells on the other side.

RAY.

2. Not to recede from terms or assertions; to persist in.

*Upon such large terms, and so absolute,
As our conditions shall insist upon,
Our peace shall stand as firm as rocky mountains.* SHAKESPEARE.

3. To dwell upon in discourse.

Were there no other act of hostility but that which we have hitherto insisted on, the intercepting of her supplies were irreparably injurious to her. DECAY OF PIETY.

INSI'STENT. adj. [insistens, Latin.] Resting upon any thing.

The breadth of the substruction must be at least double to the insistent wall.

WOTTON.

INSI'TIENCY. n.s. [in and sitio, Latin.] Exemption from thirst.

What is more admirable than the fitness of every creature, for the use we make of him? The docility of an elephant, and the insitency of a camel for travelling in deserts.

GREW.

I'NSOLENCE, INSOLENCY. n.s. [insolence, Fr. insolentia, Latin.] Pride exerted in contemptuous and overbearing treatment of others; petulant contempt.

They could not restrain the insolency of O'Neal, who, finding none now to with- stand him, made himself lord of those few people that remained.

SPENSER ON IRELAND.

*Such a nature, Tickled with good success, disdains the
shadow*

Which he treads on at noon; but I do wonder

His insolence can brook to be commanded Under Cominius. SHAKESPEARE.

Flown with insolence and wine.

MILTON.

Publick judgments are the banks and shores upon which God breaks the insolency of sinners, and stays their proud waves.

TILLOTSON.

*The steady tyrant man,
Who with the thoughtless insolence of power,*

For sport alone, pursues the cruel chace.

THOMSON.

The fear of any violence, either against her own person or against her son, might deter Penelope from using any endeavours to remove men of such insolence and power.

BROOME.

TO I'NSOLENCE. v.a. [from the noun.] To insult; to treat with contempt. A very bad word.

The bishops, who were first faulty, insolenced and assaulted. KING CHARLES.

I'NSOLENT. adj. [insolent, Fr. insolens, Latin.] Contemptuous of others; haughty; overbearing.

We have not pillaged those rich provinces which we rescued: victory itself hath not made us insolent masters. ATTERBURY.

INSPE'CTOR. n.s. [Latin.]

1. A prying examiner.

*With their new light our bold inspectors
press,*

Like Cham, to shew their father's nakedness. DENHAM.

HAMMOND'S FUNDAMENTALS.

I'NSULATED. adj. [insula, Lat.]

Not contiguous on any side.

INTE'LLIGENCE, INTELLIGENCE. n.s. [intelligence, French; intelligentia, Latin.]

1. Commerce of information; notice; mutual communication; account of things distant or secret.

It was perceived there had not been in the catholicks, either at Armenia or at Seleucia, so much foresight as to provide that true intelligence might pass between them of what was done. HOOKER, B. V.

A mankind witch! hence with her, out of door!

A most intelligency bawd!

SHAKESPEARE.

He furnished his employed men liberally with money, to draw on and reward intelligences; giving them also in charge to advertise continually what they found.

BACON'S HENRY VII.

The advertisements of neighbour princes are always to be regarded, for that they receive intelligence from better authors than persons of inferior note. HAYWARD.

Let all the passages

*Be well secur'd, that no intelligence
May pass between the prince and them.*

DENHAM'S SOPHY.

Those tales had been sung to lull children asleep, before ever Berosus set up his intelligence office at Coos. BENTLEY.

2. Commerce of acquaintance; terms on which men live one with another.

Factionous followers are worse to be liked, which follow not upon affection to him with whom they range themselves; whereupon commonly ensueth that ill intelligence that we see between great personages. BACON.

He lived rather in a fair intelligence than any friendship with the favourites.

CLARENDON.

3. Spirit; unbodied mind.

How fully hast thou satisfied me, pure Intelligence of heav'n, angel!

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

There are divers ranks of created beings intermediate between the glorious God and man, as the glorious angels and created intelligences. HALE.

They hoped to get the favour of the houses, and by the favour of the houses they hoped for that of the intelligencies, and by their favour for that of the supreme God.

STILLINGFLEET.

The regularity of motion, visible in the great variety and curiosity of bodies, is a demonstration that the whole mass of matter is under the conduct of a mighty intelligence. COLLIER.

Satan, appearing like a cherub to Uriel, the intelligence of the sun circumvented him even in his own province. DRYDEN.

4. Understanding; skill.

*Heaps of huge words, up hoarded
hideously,*

*They think to be chief praise of poetry;
And thereby wanting due intelligence,
Have marr'd the face of goodly poesie.*

SPENSER.

INTELLIGE'NCER. n.s. [from intelligence.] One who sends or conveys news; one who gives notice of private or distant transactions; one who carries messages between parties.

His eyes, being his diligent intelligencers, could carry unto him no other news but discomfortable. SIDNEY.

Who hath not heard it spoken

How deep you were within the books of heav'n?

*To us, th' imagin'd voice of heav'n itself;
The very opener and intelligencer Between the grace and sanctities of
heav'n,*

And our dull workings.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

If they had instructions to that purpose, they might be the best intelligencers to the king of the true state of his whole kingdom. BACON.

They are the best sort of intelligencers; for they have a way into the inmost closets of princes. HOWEL.

They have news-gatherers and intelligencers, who make them acquainted with the conversation of the whole kingdom.

SPECTATOR.

INTE'NDANT. n.s. [French.] An officer of the highest class, who oversees any particular allotment of the publick business.

INTERCI'PIENT. n.s. [intercipiens, Latin.] An intercepting power; something that causes a stoppage.

They commend repellents, but not with much astringency, unless as intercipients upon the parts above, lest the matter should thereby be impacted in the part.

WISEMAN.

INTERCI'SION. n.s. [inter and cædo, Lat.] Interruption.

By cessation of oracles we may understand their intercision, not abcession, or consummate desolation.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

To INTERCLU'DE. v.n. [intercludo, Latin.] To shut from a place or course by something intervening; to intercept.

The voice is sometimes intercluded by a hoarseness, or viscuous phlegm cleaving to the aspera arteria. HOLDER.

[interclusus, Latin.] Obstruction; interception.

INTERCOLUMNIA'TION. n.s. [inter and columna, Latin.] The space between the pillars.

The distance or intercolumniation may be near four of his own diameter, because the materials commonly laid over this pillar were rather of wood than stone.

WOTTON.

To INTERCO'MMON. v.n. [inter and common.] To feed at the same table.

Wine is to be forborn in consumptions, for that the spirits of the wine do prey upon the roscid juice of the body, and intercommon with the spirits of the body, and so rob them of their nourishment.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

INTERJA'CENCY. n.s. [from interjacens, Latin.]

1. The act or state of lying between.

England and Scotland is divided only by the interjacency of the Tweed, and some desert ground. HALE.

2. The thing lying between.

Its fluctuations are but motions, which winds, storms, shoars, and every interjacency irregulates.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

INTERKNO'WLEDGE. n.s. [inter and knowledge.] Mutual knowledge.

All nations have interknowledge one of another, either by voyage into foreign parts, or by strangers that come to them.

BACON'S NEW ATLANTIS.

To INTERLE'AVE. v.a. [inter and leave.] To chequer a book by the insertion of blank leaves.

To INTERLI'NE. v.a. [inter and line.]

1. To write in alternate lines.

When, by interlining Latin and English one with another, he has got a moderate knowledge of the Latin tongue, he may then be advanced farther. LOCKE.

2. To correct by something written between the lines.

*He cancell'd an old will, and forg'd a new;
Made wealthy at the small expence of signing,
With a wet seal, and a fresh interlining.*
DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

Three things render a writing suspected: the person producing a false instrument, the person that frames it, and the interlining and rasing out of words contained in such instruments. AYLIFFE'S PARERGON.

*The muse invok'd, sit down to write,
Blot out, correct, and interline.* SWIFT.

To INTERLO'PE. v.n. [inter and loopen, Dutch, to run.] To run between parties and intercept the advantage that one should gain from the other; to traffick without a proper licence; to forestall; to anticipate irregularly.

The patron is desired to leave off this interloping trade, or admit the knights of the industry to their share. TATLER.

INTERLO'PER. n.s. [from interlope.] One who runs into business to which he has no right.

The swallow was a fly-catcher, and was no more an interloper upon the spider's right, than the spider was upon the swallow's.
L'ESTRANGE.

I'NTERLUDE. n.s. [inter and ludus, Latin.] Something plaid at the intervals of festivity; a farce.

When there is a queen, and ladies of honour attending her, there must sometimes be masques, and revels, and interludes.

BACON'S ADVICE TO VILLIERS.

The enemies of Socrates hired Aristophanes to personate him on the stage, and, by the insinuations of those interludes, conveyed a hatred of him into the people.

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE.

Dreams are but interludes, which fancy makes;

When monarch reason sleeps, this mimick wakes. DRYDEN.

INTERME'DDLER. n.s. [from intermeddle.] One that interposes officiously; one that thrusts himself into business to which he has no right.

There's hardly a greater pest to government and families, than officious tale-bearers, and busy intermeddlers. L'ESTRANGE.

Our two great allies abroad, and our stock-jobbers at home, direct her majesty not to change her secretary or treasurer, who, for the reasons that these officious intermeddlers demanded their continuance, ought never to have been admitted into the least trust. SWIFT.

Shall saucy intermeddlers say, Thus far, and thus, are you allow'd to punish? A. PHILLIPS.

INTERMIGRA'TION. n.s. [intermigration, Fr. inter and migro, Lat.] Act of removing from one place to another, so as that of two parties removing each takes the place of the other.

Men have a strange variety in colour, stature, and humour; and all arising from the climate, though the continent be but one, as to point of access, mutual intercourse, and possibility of intermigrations.
HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

I'NTERSTICE. n.s. [interstitium, Lat. interstice, Fr.]

1. Space between one thing and another.

The sun shining through a large prism upon a comb placed immediately behind the prism, his light, which passed through the interstices of the teeth fell upon a white paper: the breadths of the teeth were equal to their interstices, and seven teeth together with their interstices took up an inch in breadth. NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

The force of the fluid will separate the smallest particles which compose the fibres, so as to leave vacant interstices in those places where they cohered before.

ARBUTHNOT.

2. Time between one act and another.

I will point out the interstices of time which ought to be between one citation and another. AYLIFFE'S PARERGON.

INTERVI'EW. n.s. [entrevue, French.] Mutual sight; sight of each other. It is commonly used for a formal and appointed meeting or conference.

The day will come, when the passions of former enmity being allayed, we shall with ten times redoubled tokens of reconciled love shew ourselves each towards other the same, which Joseph and the brethren of Joseph were at the time of their interview in Egypt. HOOKER.

His fears were, that the interview betwixt England and France might, through their amity, Breed him some prejudice.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

Such happy interview, and fair event
Of love, and youth not lost, songs, garlands, flow'rs,

And charming symphonies, attach'd the heart

Of Adam.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. XI.

To INTERWI'SH. v.a. [inter and wish.] To wish mutually to each other.

The venom of all stepdames, gamester's gall,

What tyrants and their subjects interwish,
All ill fall on that man. DONNE.

To I'NTONATE. v.a. [intono, Lat.] To thunder. Dictionaries.

INTONA'TION. n.s. [intonation, Fr. from intonate.] The act of thundering. Dictionaries.

To INTO'NE. v.n. [from intono, or rather from tone; intonner, French.] To make a slow protracted noise.

So swells each wind-pipe; ass intones to ass
Harmonick twang.

POPE'S DUNCIAD, B. 11.

INTRENCHANT. adj. [This word, which is, I believe, found only in Shakespeare, is thus explained by one of his editors: The intrenchant air means the air which suddenly encroaches and closes upon the space left by any body which had passed through it. Hanmer. I believe Shakespeare intended rather to express the idea of indivisibility or invulnerableness, and derived intrenchant, from in privative, and trencher, to cut; intrenchant is indeed properly not cutting, rather than not to be cut; but this is not the only instance in which Shakespeare confounds words of active and passive signification.] Not to be divided; not to be wounded; indivisible.

As easy may'st thou the intrenchant air
With thy keen sword impress, as make me bleed. SHAKESPEARE.

INTRI'GUER. n.s. [intrigueur, Fr. from intrigue.] One who busies himself in private transactions; one who forms plots; one who persues women.

I desire that intriguers will not make a pimp of my lion, and convey their thoughts to one another. ADDISON.

INTROSPE'CTION. n.s. [from introspect.] A view of the inside.

The actings of the mind or imagination itself, by way of reflection or introspection of themselves, are discernible by man.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

I was forced to make an introspection into my own mind, and into that idea of beauty

which I have formed in my own imagination. DRYDEN.

INTROVE'NIENT. adj. [intro and venio, Latin.] Entering; coming in.

Scarce any condition which is not exhausted and obscured, from the commix-ture of introvenient nations, either by commerce or conquest.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

INTURGE'SCENCE. n.s. [in and turgesco, Latin.] Swelling; the act or state of swelling.

Not by attenuation of the upper part of the sea, but inturgescencies caused first at the bottom, and carrying the upper part of it before them.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

INVALIDITY. n.s. [in and validity; invalidité, French.]

1. Weakness; want of cogency.

2. Want of bodily strength. This is no English meaning.

He ordered, that none who could work should be idle; and that none who could not work, by age, sickness, or invalidity, should want. TEMPLE.

INVE'NTION. n.s. [invention, French; inventio, Latin.]

1. Fiction.<sup>145</sup>

*O for a muse of fire, that would ascend
The brightest heaven of invention!*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V, PROLOGUE.

*By improving what was writ before, Invention labours less, but judgment
more.* ROSCOMMON.

Invention is a kind of muse, which, being possessed of the other advantages common to her sisters, and being warmed by the fire of Apollo, is raised higher than the rest.
DRYDEN.

The chief excellence of Virgil is judgment, of Homer is invention. POPE.

2. Discovery.

Nature hath provided several glandules to separate this juice from the blood, and no less than four pair of channels to convey it into the mouth, which are of a late invention, and called ductus salivales.

RAY ON THE CREATION.

3. Excogitation; act of producing some-thing new.

*Mine is th' invention of the charming lyre;
Sweet notes and heav'nly numbers I inspire.* DRYDEN.

4. Forgery.

*We hear our bloody cousins, not confessing
Their cruel parricide, filling their hearers
With strange invention.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*If thou can'st accuse,
Do it without invention suddenly.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

5. The thing invented.

The garden, a place not fairer in natural ornaments than artificial inventions.

SIDNEY.

Th' invention all admir'd; and each how he

To be th' inventor miss'd, so easy it seem'd Once found, which yet unfound most would have thought

Impossible. MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

INVE'NTOR. n.s. [inventor, Latin.]

1. A finder out of something new.

We have the statue of your Columbus, that discovered the West Indies, also the inventor of ships: your Monk, that was the inventor of ordnance, and of gunpowder.

BACON.

*Studious they appear
Of arts that polish life; inventors rare, Unmindful of their maker.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

*Th' invention all admir'd, and each how he
To be the inventor miss'd.* MILTON.

Why are these positions charged upon me as their sole author and inventor, and the reader led into a belief that they were never before maintained by any person of virtue? ATTERBURY.

2. A contriver; a framer. In an ill sense.

In this upshot, purposes mistook, Fall'n on th' inventors heads.

SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

INVE'NTRESS. n.s. [inventrice, Fr. from inventor.] A female that invents.

The arts, with all their retinue of lesser trades, history and tradition tell us when they had their beginning; and how many of their inventors and inventresses were deified. BURNET.

*Cecilia came,
Inventress of the vocal frame:
The sweet enthusiast, from her sacred store,
Enlarg'd the former narrow bounds.*
DRYDEN.

I'NVOICE. n.s. [This word is perhaps corrupted from the French word envoyez, send.] A catalogue of the freight of a ship, or of the articles and price of goods sent by a factor.

I'NWARD. n.s.

1. Any thing within, generally the bowels. Seldom has this sense a singular.

*Then sacrificing, laid
The inwards, and their fat, with incense strew'd
On the cleft wood, and all due rites perform'd.* MILTON.

They esteem them most profitable, because of the great quantity of fat upon their inwards. MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

2. Intimate; near acquaintance.

Sir, I was an inward of his; a sly fellow was the duke; and I know the cause of his withdrawing. SHAKESPEARE.

JOB. n.s. [A low word now much in use, of which I cannot tell the etymology.]

1. Petty, piddling work; a piece of chance work.

He was now with his old friends in the state of a poor disbanded officer after peace, like an old favourite of a cunning minister after the job is over. ARBUTHNOT.

*No cheek is known to blush, no heart to throb,
Save when they lose a question, or a job.*
POPE.

Such patents as these never were granted with a view of being a job, for the interest of a particular person to the damage of the publick. SWIFT.

2. A low mean lucrative busy affair.

3. A sudden stab with a sharp instrument.

To JOB. v.a.

1. To strike suddenly with a sharp instrument.

As an ass with a galled back was feeding in a meadow, a raven pitched upon him, and there sat jobbing of the sore.

L'ESTRANGE.

2. To drive in a sharp instrument.

Let peacocks and turkey leave jobbing their bex. TUSSER.

The work would, where a small irregularity of stuff should happen, draw or job the edge into the stuff. MOXON.

To JOB. v.n. To play the stockjobber;
to buy and sell as a broker.

*The judge shall job, the bishop bite the
town,
And mighty dukes pack cards for half a crown.* POPE.

JOBBERNO'WL. n.s. [most probably from jobbe, Flemish, dull, and nowl, hnol, Saxon, a head.] Loggerhead; blockhead.

*And like the world, men's jobbernows
Turn round upon their ears, the poles.*
HUDIBRAS, P. III.

JO'GGER. n.s. [from jog.] One who moves heavily and dully.

They, with their fellow joggers of the plough. DRYDEN.

JOKE. n.s. [jocus, Latin.] A jest; something not serious.

*Link towns to towns with avenues of oak,
Inclose whole downs in walls, 'tis all a joke!
Inexorable death shall level all.* POPE.

Why should publick mockery in print, or a merry joke upon a stage, be a better test of truth than severe railing sarcasms and publick persecutions?

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

To JOLL. v.a. [from joll, the head.]
To beat the head against any thing; to clash with violence.

Howsoe'er their hearts are sever'd in religion, their heads are both one: they may joll horns together like any deer i' th' herd. SHAKESPEARE.

The tortoises envied the easiness of the frogs, 'till they saw them jolled to pieces and devoured for want of a buckler.

L'ESTRANGE.

JO'URNAL. n.s. [journal, French;
giornale, Italian.]

1. A diary; an account kept of daily transactions.

Edward kept a most judicious journal of all the principal passages of the affairs of his estate. HAYWARD ON EDWARD VI.

Time has destroyed two noble journals of the navigation of Hanno and of Hamilcar.

ARBUTHNOT ON COINS.

2. Any paper published daily.

JO'URNALIST. n.s. [from journal.]
A writer of journals.

I'RIS. n.s. [Latin.]

1. The rainbow.

Beside the solary iris, which God shewed unto Noah, there is another lunary, whose efficient is the moon. BROWN.

2. Any appearance of light resembling
the rainbow.

*When both bows appeared more distinct, I measured the breadth of the interior iris 2
gr. 10'; and the breadth of the red, yellow,*

and green in the exterior iris, was to the breadth of the same colours in the interior 3 to 2. NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

3. The circle round the pupil of the eye.

4. The flower-de-luce.

Iris all hues, roses and jessamine.

MILTON.

To IRK. v.a. [yrk, work, Islandick.]

This word is used only impersonally, it irks me; mihi pænæ est, it gives me pain; or, I am weary of it. Thus the authors of the Accidence say, tædet, it irketh.

*Come, shall we go and kill us venison?
And yet it irks me, the poor dappled fools
Should, in their own confines, with forked heads,*

Have their round haunches gor'd.

SHAKESPEARE.

It irks his heart he cannot be reveng'd.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

I'RON. adj.

1. Made of iron.

In iron walls they deem'd me not secure.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

Get me an iron crow, and bring it straight Unto my cell.

SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO AND JULIET.

Some are of an iron red, shining, and polite; others not polite, but as if powdered with iron dust. WOODWARD.

Poll-cats and weesels do a great deal of injury to warrens: the way of taking them is in hutches, and iron traps. MORTIMER.

2. Resembling iron in colour.

A piece of stone of a dark iron grey colour, but in some parts of a ferruginous colour.

WOODWARD ON FOSSILS.

Some of them are of an iron red, and very bright. WOODWARD.

3. Harsh; severe; rigid; miserable; calamitous: as, the iron age, for an age of hardship and wickedness. These ideas may be found more or less in all the following examples.

*Three vigorous virgins, waiting still behind,
Assist the throne of th' iron scepter'd king.*
CRASHAW.

*O sad virgin, that thy power
Might bid the soul of Orpheus sing
Such notes as warbled to the string,
Drew iron tears from Pluto's cheek,
And made hell grant what love did seek.*
MILTON.

*In all my iron years of wars and dangers,
From blooming youth down to decaying
age,
My fame ne'er knew a stain of dishonour.*
ROWE.

*Jove crush the nations with an iron rod,
And ev'ry monarch be the scourge of God.*
POPE'S ODYSSEY.

4. Indissoluble; unbroken.

*Rash Elpenor, in an evil hour,
Dry'd an immeasurable bowl, and thought
T' exhale his surfeit by irriguous sleep,
Imprudent: him death's iron sleep opprest.*
PHILLIPS.

5. Hard; impenetrable.

*I will converse with iron witted fools,
And unrespective boys: none are for me,
That look into me with consid'rate eyes.*
SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

I'RONY. adj. [from iron.] Made of iron; partaking of iron.

The force they are under is real, and that of their fate but imaginary: it is not strange if the irony chains have more solidity than the contemplative.

HAMMOND'S FUNDAMENTALS.

Some springs of Hungary, highly impregnated with vitriolick salts, dissolve the body of one metal, suppose iron, put into the spring; and deposite, in lieu of the irony particles carried off, coppery particles.

WOODWARD ON FOSSILS.

I'RONY. n.s. [ironie, Fr. 'ειρωνεία.] A mode of speech in which the meaning is contrary to the words: as, Bolingbroke was a holy man.

So grave a body, upon so solemn an occasion, should not deal in irony, or explain their meaning by contraries.

SWIFT.

IRRE'LATIVE. adj. [in and relativus, Latin.] Having no reference to any thing; single; unconnected.

Separated by the voice of God, things in their species came out in uncommunicated varieties, and irrelative seminalities.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

IRREPLE'VIABLE. adj. [in and replevy.] Not to be redeemed. A law term.

IRRESI'STLESS. adj. [A barbarous ungrammatical conjunction of two negatives.] Irresistible; resistless.

Those radiant eyes, whose irresistless flame Strikes envy dumb, and keeps sedition tame,

*They can to gazing multitudes give law,
Convert the factious, and the rebel awe.*

GRANVILLE.

IRRI'SION. n.s. [irrisio, Lat. irrisio, French.] The act of laughing at another.

This person, by his indiscreet and unnatural irrisio, and exposing of his father, incurs his indignation and curse.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

IS. [is, Saxon.]

1. The third person singular of to be: I am, thou art, he is.

He that is of God, heareth God's words.

BIBLE JOHN, VIII. 47.

Be not afraid of them, for they cannot do evil; neither is it in them to do good.

BIBLE JEREMIAH, X. 5.

My thought, whose murther yet is but fantastical,

Shakes so my single state of man, that function

*Is smother'd in surmise; and nothing is,
But what is not.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

2. It is sometimes expressed by 's.

There's some among you have beheld me fighting. SHAKESPEARE.

I' SICLE. n.s. [More properly icicle, from ice; but ice should rather be written ise; iss, Saxon.] A pendent shoot of ice.

Do you know this lady?

— The moon of Rome; chaste as the isicle

That's curdled by the frost from purest snow

Hanging on Dian's temple.

SHAKESPEARE.

*The frosts and snows her tender body spare;
Those are not limbs for isicles to tear.*

DRYDEN.

ITCH. n.s. [gicha, Saxon.]

1. A cutaneous disease extremely contagious, which overspreads the body with small pustules filled with a thin serum, and raised as microscopes have discovered by a small animal. It is cured by sulphur.

Lust and liberty

Creep in the minds and marrows of our youths,

That 'gainst the stream of virtue they may strive,

*And drown themselves in riot, itches,
blains.* SHAKESPEARE'S TIMON.

The Lord will smite thee with the scab and with the itch, whereof thou can'st not be healed.

BIBLE DEUTERONOMY, XXVIII. 27.

As if divinity had catch'd

The itch, on purpose, to be scratch'd.

HUDIBRAS.

2. The sensation of uneasiness in the skin, which is eased by rubbing.

3. A constant teasing desire.

A certain itch of meddling with other people's matters, puts us upon shifting.

L'ESTRANGE.

He had still pedigree in his head, and an itch of being thought a divine king.

DRYDEN.

From servants company a child is to be kept, not by prohibitions, for that will but give him an itch after it, but by other ways. LOCKE.

At half mankind when gen'rous Manly raves,

*All know 'tis virtue; for he thinks them
knaves:*

*When universal homage Umbra pays,
All see 'tis vice, and itch of vulgar praise.*

POPE.

JUG. n.s. [jugge, Danish.] A large drinking vessel with a gibbous or swelling belly.

You'd rail upon the hostess of the house, Because she bought stone jugs and no seal'd quarts. SHAKESPEARE.

*He fetch'd 'em drink,
Fill'd a large jug up to the brink.*

SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

To JU'GGLE. v.n. [jouglor or jongler, Fr. jocari, Lat.]

1. To play tricks by slight of hand; to show false appearances of extraordinary performances.

The ancient miracle of Memnon's statue seems to be a juggling of the Ethiopian priests. DIGBY ON BODIES.

2. To practise artifice or imposture.

Be these juggling fiends no more believ'd,

That palter with us in a double sense.
SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

Is't possible the spells of France should juggle

Men into such strange mockeries?
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

*They ne'er forswore themselves, nor lied,
Disdain'd to stay for friends consents;*

Nor juggl'd about settlements.

HUDIBRAS, P. III.

To JUKE. v.n. [jucher, French.]

1. To perch upon any thing: as, birds.
2. Juking, in Scotland, denotes still any complaisance by bending of the head.

Two asses travelled; the one laden with oats, the other with money: the money-merchant was so proud of his trust, that he went juking and tossing of his head.

L'ESTRANGE.

JU'NCATE. n.s. [juncade, French; gioncata, Italian.]

1. Cheesecake; a kind of sweetmeat of curds and sugar.
2. Any delicacy.

*A goodly table of pure ivory,
All spread with juncates, fit to entertain
The greatest prince.*

SPENSER, SONNET 77.

*With stories told of many a feat,
How fairy Mab the juncates eat.*

MILTON.

3. A furtive or private entertainment. It is now improperly written junket in this sense, which alone remains much in use. See JUNKET.

JU'NKET. n.s. [properly juncate. See JUNCATE.]

1. A sweetmeat.

You know, there wants no junkets at the feast. SHAKESPEARE.

2. A stolen entertainment.

JU'RIST. n.s. [juriste, Fr. jura, Lat.]
A civil lawyer; a man who professes the science of the law; a civilian.

This is not to be measured by the principles of jurists. BACON.

K

A letter borrowed by the English from the Greek alphabet. It has before all the vowels one invariable sound: as, keen, ken, kill; but is not much in use, except after<sup>146</sup> c at the end of words: as, knock, clock, crack, back, brick, stick, pluck, check, which were written anciently with e final: as, clocke, checke, tricke. It is also in use between a vowel and the silent e final: as, cloke, broke, brake, pike, duke, eke. It likewise ends a word after a diphthong: as, look, break, shock, beek. The English never use c at the end of a word. K is silent in the present pronunciation before n: as, knife, knee, knell.

KAM. adj. Crooked. Kam, in Erse, is squint-eyed, and applied to any thing awry: clean kam signifies crooked, athwart, awry, cross from the purpose. A-schembo, Italian, hence our English a-kimbo. Clean kam is, by vulgar pronunciation, brought to kim kam.

The blood he hath lost, he dropt it for his country:

*And what is left, to lose it by his country,
Were to us all that do't and suffer it,
A brand to th' end o' th' world.*

— This is clean kam.

— Meerly awry. SHAKESPEARE.

KAYLE. n.s. [quille, French.]

1. Ninepin; kettlepins, of which skittles seems a corruption.

And now at keels they try a harmless chance,

And now their cur they teach to fetch and dance. SIDNEY.

The residue of the time they wear out at coits, kayles, or the like idle exercises.

CAREW'S SURVEY OF CORNWALL.

2. A kind of play still retained in Scotland, in which nine holes ranged in three's are made in the ground, and an iron bullet rolled in among them.

KE'CKSY. n.s. [commonly kex, cigue, French; cicuta, Latin. Skinner.]

Skinner seems to think kecksy or kex the same as hemlock. It is used in Staffordshire both for hemlock, and any other hollow jointed plant.

Nothing teems

But hateful docks, rough thistles, kecksies, burs,

Losing both beauty and utility.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

To KE'ELHALE. v.a. [keel and hale.] To punish in the seamen's way, by dragging the criminal under water on one side of the ship and up again on the other.

KELL. n.s. A sort of pottage. Ainsworth. It is so called in Scotland, being a soupe made with shredded greens.

To KEMB. v.a. [cæmban, Saxon; kammen, German: now written, perhaps less properly, to comb.] To separate or disentangle by a denticulated instrument.

*Yet are the men more loose than they,
More kemb'd and bath'd, and rubb'd and trim'd,
More sleek.* BEN JONSON.

*Thy head and hair are sleek;
And then thou kemb'st the tuzzes on thy cheek.* DRYDEN.

KE'NNEL. n.s. [chenil, French.]

1. A cot for dogs.

A dog sure, if he could speak, had wit enough to describe his kennel. SIDNEY.

From forth the kennel of thy womb hath crept

A hell-hound, that doth hunt us all to death. SHAKESPEARE.

The seditious remain within their station, which, by reason of the nastiness of the beastly multitude, might be more fitly termed a kennel than a camp.

HAYWARD.

2. A number of dogs kept in a kennel.

A little herd of England's tim'rous deer, Maz'd with a yelping kennel of French curs. SHAKESPEARE.

3. The hole of a fox, or other beast.

4. [Kennel, Dutch; chenal, Fr. canalis, Latin.] The watercourse of a street.

Bad humours gather to a bile; or, as divers kennels flow to one sink, so in short time their numbers increased. HAYWARD.

He always came in so dirty, as if he had been dragged through the kennel at a boarding-school. ARBUTHNOT.

KE'TTLE. n.s. [cetl, Saxon; ketel, Dutch.] A vessel in which liquor is boiled. In the kitchen the name of pot is given to the boiler that grows narrower towards the top, and of kettle to that which grows wider. In authors they are confounded.

*The fire thus form'd, she sets the kettle on;
Like burnish'd gold the little seether shone.*
DRYDEN.

KI'CKSHAW. n.s. [This word is supposed, I think with truth, to be only a corruption of quelque chose, something; yet Milton seems to have understood it otherwise; for he writes it kickshoe, and seems to think it used in contempt of dancing.]

1. Something uncommon; fantastical; something ridiculous.

Shall we need the monsieurs of Paris to take our hopeful youth into their slight and prodigal custodies, and send them over back again transformed into mimicks, apes, and kickshoes? MILTON.

2. A dish so changed by the cookery that it can scarcely be known.

Some pigeons, a couple of short-legged hens, a joint of mutton, and any pretty little tiny kickshaws.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

In wit, as well as war, they give us vigour; Cressy was lost by kickshaws and soup-meagre. FENTON.

KI'MBO. adj. [a schembo, Italian.] Crooked; bent; arched.

*The kimbo handles seem with bears-foot
carv'd,*

And never yet to table have been serv'd.
DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

He observed them edging towards one another to whisper; so that John was forced to sit with his arms a kimbo, to keep them asunder.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

KI'NDLY. adj. [from kind; probably from kind the substantive.]

1. Homogeneous; congenial; kindred; of the same nature.

This competency I beseech God I may be able to digest into kindly juice, that I may grow thereby.

HAMMOND.

*These soft fires
Not only enlighten, but with kindly heat,
Of various influence, foment and warm,
Temper or nourish.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. IV.

2. The foregoing sense seems to have been originally implied by this word; but following writers, inattentive to its etymology, confounded it with kind.

3. Bland; mild; softening.

*Through all the living regions do'st thou move,
And scatter'st, where thou goest, the kindly seeds of love.* DRYDEN.

*Ye heav'ns, from high the dewy nectar pour,
And in soft silence shed the kindly show'r!*
POPE.

KI'SSINGCRUST. n.s. [kissing and crust.] Crust formed where one loaf in the oven touches another.

These bak'd him kissingcrusts, and those Brought him small beer.

KING'S COOKERY.

KIT. n.s. [kitte, Dutch.]

1. A large bottle. Skinner.

2. A small diminutive fiddle.

'Tis kept in a case fitted to it, almost like a dancing-master's kit.

GREW'S MUSÆUM.

3. A small wooden vessel, in which Newcastle salmon is sent up to town.

KI'TCHENSTUFF. n.s. [kitchen and stuff.] The fat of meat scummed off the pot, or gathered out of the dripping-pan.

*As a thrifty wench scrapes kitchenstuff,
And barreling the droppings and the snuff*

*Of wasting candles, which in thirty year,
Reliquely kept, perchance buys wedding cheer.* DONNE.

*Instead of kitchenstuff some cry
A gospel preaching ministry.* HUDIBRAS.

KI'TCHENWENCH. n.s. [kitchen and wench.] Scullion; maid employed to clean the instruments of cookery.

Laura to his lady was but a kitchenwench. SHAKESPEARE.

Roasting and boiling leave to the kitchenwench. SWIFT.

To KLICK. v.n. [from clack.]

1. To make a small sharp noise.

2. In Scotland it denotes to pilfer or steal away suddenly with a snatch.

KNACK. n.s. [cnec, Welsh, sly knavery; cnaringe, skill, Sax.]

1. A little machine; a petty contrivance; a toy.

*When I was young, I was wont
To load my she with knacks: I would have ransack'd
The pedlar's silken treasury, and have pour'd it
To her acceptance.*

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

*For thee, fond boy,
If I may ever know thou do'st but sigh
That thou no more shalt see this knack, as never
I mean thou shalt, we'll bar thee from success.* SHAKESPEARE.

*This cap was moulded on a porringer,
A velvet dish; fie, fie, 'tis lewd and filthy:
Why 'tis a cockle, or a walnut shell,
A knack, a toy, a trick, a baby's cap.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*But is't not presumption to write verse to you,
Who make the better poems of the two?
For all these pretty knacks that you compose,
Alas, what are they but poems in prose!*
DENHAM.

*He expounded both his pockets,
And found a watch, with rings and lockets;
A copper-plate, with almanacks
Engrav'd upon't, with other knacks.*
HUDIBRAS.

2. A readiness; an habitual facility; a lucky dexterity.

*I'll teach you the knacks
Of eating of flax,
And out of their noses
Draw ribbands and posies.*
BEN JONSON'S GYPSIES.

The knack of fast and loose passes with foolish people for a turn of wit; but they are not aware all this while of the desperate consequences of an ill habit.
L'ESTRANGE.

There is a certain knack in the art of conversation that gives a good grace to many things, by the manner and address of handling them. L'ESTRANGE.

*Knaves, who in full assemblies have the knack
Of turning truth to lies, and white to black.* DRYDEN.

*My author has a great knack at remarks:
in the end he makes another, about our refining in controversy, and coming nearer and nearer to the church of Rome.*
ATTERBURY.

*The dean was famous in his time,
And had a kind of knack at rhyme.*
SWIFT.

3. A nice trick.

*For how should equal colours do the knack?
Cameleons who can paint in white and black?* POPE.

KNA'CKER. n.s. [from knack.]

1. A maker of small work.

One part for plow-wright, cartwright, knacker, and smith.
MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

2. A ropemaker. [Restio, Latin.]
Ainsworth.

To KNIGHT. v.a. [from the noun.]
To create one a knight, which is done by the king, who gives the person kneeling a blow with a sword, and bids him rise up sir.

*Favours came thick upon him: the next
St George's day he was knighted.*
WOTTON.

The lord protector knighted the king; and immediately the king stood up, took the sword from the lord protector, and dubbed the lord mayor of London knight.
HAYWARD.

*The hero William, and the martyr
Charles,
One knighted Blackmore, and one pension'd Quarles.* POPE.

KNIGHT of the Post. A hireling evidence.

There are knights of the post, and holy cheats enough, to swear the truth of the broadest contradictions, where pious frauds shall give them an extraordinary call.
SOUTH'S SERMONS.

KNIGHT of the Shire. One of the representatives of a county in parliament: he formerly was a military knight, but now any man having an estate in land of six hundred pounds a year is qualified.

KNO'WLEDGE. n.s. [from know.]

1. Certain perception; indubitable apprehension.

Knowledge, which is the highest degree of the speculative faculties, consists in the perception of the truth of affirmative or negative propositions. LOCKE.

2. Learning; illumination of the mind.

Ignorance is the curse of God, Knowledge the wing wherewith we fly to heav'n. SHAKESPEARE.

3. Skill in any thing.

Do but say to me what I should do,

*That in your knowledge may by me be done,
And I am prest unto it.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF
VENICE.

4. Acquaintance with any fact or person.

The dog straight fawned upon his master for old knowledge. SIDNEY.

That is not forgot,
*Which ne'er I did remember; to my knowledge
I never in my life did look on him.*

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD II.

5. Cognisance; notice.

*Why have I found grace in thine eyes, that thou shouldst take knowledge of me, seeing
I am a stranger?* BIBLE RUTH, II. 10.

A state's anger should not take Knowledge either of fools or women.
BEN JONSON'S CATILINE.

6. Information; power of knowing.

I pulled off my headpiece, and humbly entreated her pardon, or knowledge why she was cruel. SIDNEY.

To KNU'CKLE. v.n. [from the noun.] To submit: I suppose from an odd custom of striking the under side of the table with the knuckles, in confession of an argumental defeat.

To KYD. v.n. [corrupted probably from cuð, Saxon.] To know.

But ah, unjust and worthless Colin Clout,

*That kydst the hidden kinds of many a
weed;*

*Yet kydst not one to cure thy sore heart
root,*

Whose rankling wound as yet doth rifely bleed. SPENSER.

L

A liquid consonant, which preserves always the same sound in English. In the Saxon it was aspirated; as hlaf, loaf; hlæfdig, lady. At the end of a monosyllable it is always doubled; as, shall; still; full, except after a diphthong; as, fail; feel; veal; cool. In a word of more syllables it is written single; as, channel; canal; tendril. It is sometimes put before e, and sounded feebly after it; as bible; title.

LA. interject. [corrupted by an effeminate pronunciation from lo.] See; look; behold.

*La you! if you speak ill of the devil,
How he takes it at heart.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TWELFTH NIGHT.

LA'BORATORY. n.s. [laboratoire, French.] A chemist's workroom.

It would contribute to the history of colours, if chemists would in their laboratory take a heedful notice, and give us a faithful account, of the colours observed in the steam of bodies, either sublimed or distilled. BOYLE ON COLOURS.

The flames of love will perform those miracles they of the furnace boast of, would they employ themselves in this laboratory.

DECAY OF PIETY.

LACE. n.s. [lacet, French; laqueus, Latin.]

1. A string; a cord.

*There the fond fly entangled, struggled long,
Himself to free thereout; but all in vain:
For striving more, the more in laces strong Himself he tied, and wrapt his winges
twain*

In limy snares, the subtil loops among.

SPENSER.

2. A snare; a gin.

The king had snared been in love's strong lace. FAIRFAX.

3. A platted string, with which women fasten their clothes.

O! cut my lace, lest my heart cracking, it Break too.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

*Doll ne'er was call'd to cut her lace,
Or throw cold water in her face.* SWIFT.

4. Ornaments of fine thread curiously woven.

Our English dames are much given to the wearing of costly laces; and, if they be brought from Italy, they are in great esteem.

BACON'S ADVICE TO VILLIERS.

5. Textures of thread, with gold or silver.

*He wears a stuff, whose thread is coarse and round,
But trimm'd with curious lace.*
HERBERT.

6. Sugar. A cant word.

*If haply he the sect pursues,
That read and comment upon news;
He takes up their mysterious face,
He drinks his coffee without lace.* PRIOR.

LA'CKLINEN. adj. [lack and linen.]

Wanting shirts.

I scorn you, scurvy companion; what? your poor, base, rascally, cheating, lacklinen mate; away, you mouldy rogue, away; I'm made for your master.
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

LACO'NICK. adj. [*laconicus, Lat.
laconique, Fr.*] Short; brief; from Lacones, the Spartans, who used few words.

I grow laconick even beyond laconicism; for sometimes I return only yes, or no, to questionary or petitionary epistles of half a yard long. POPE TO SWIFT.

LAD. n.s. [leode, Saxon, which commonly signifies people, but sometimes, says Mr. Lye, a boy.]

1. A boy; a stripling, in familiar language.

*We were
Two lads, that thought there was no more
behind,
But such a day to-morrow as to-day,
And to be boy eternal.*
SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

The poor lad who wants knowledge, must set his invention on the rack, to say something where he knows nothing.
LOCKE.

Too far from the ancient forms of teaching several good grammarians have departed, to the great detriment of such lads as have been removed to other schools. WATTS.

2. A boy, in pastoral language.

*For grief whereof the lad would after joy,
But pin'd away in anguish, and self-will'd annoy.* FAIRY QUEEN.

*The shepherd lad,
Whose offspring on the throne of Judah sat
So many ages.*
MILTON'S PARADISE REGAIN'D, B. II.
L. 439.

LAG. n.s.

1. The lowest class; the rump; the fag
end.

The rest of your foes, O gods, the senators of Athens, together with the common lag of people, what is amiss in them, make suitable for destruction.
SHAKESPEARE'S TIMON OF ATHENS.

2. He that comes last, or hangs behind.

The last, the lag of all the race.
DRYDEN'S VIRGIL'S ÆNEIS.
What makes my ram the lag of all the flock. POPE.

LAM'BATIVE. n.s. A medicine taken by licking with the tongue.

I stitch'd up the wound, and applied astrin-gents, with compress and retentive bandage, then put him into bed, and let him bleed in the arm, advising a lambative, to be taken as necessity should require.
WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

LAMBS-WOOL. n.s. [lamb and wool.] Ale mixed with the pulp of roasted apples.

*A cup of lambs-wool they drank to him
there.*
SONG OF THE KING AND THE MILLER.

LA'MMAS. n.s. [This word is said by Bailey, I know not on what authority, to be derived from a custom, by which the tenants of the archbishop of York were obliged, at the time of mass, on the first of August, to bring a lamb to the altar. In Scotland they are said to wean lambs on this day. It may else be corrupted from lattermath.] The first of August.

In 1578 was that famous lammas day, which buried the reputation of Don John of Austria. BACON.

LAMP. n.s. [lampe, French; lampas, Latin.]

1. A light made with oil and a wick.

*O thievish night,
Why should'st thou, but for some felonious
end,
In thy dark lanthorn thus close up the stars
That nature hung in heaven, and fill'd their lamps
With everlasting oil, to give due light
To the misled and lonely traveller?*
MILTON.

In lamp furnaces I used spirit of wine instead of oil, and with the same flame has melted foliated gold. BOYLE.

2. Any kind of light, in poetical language, real or metaphorical.

*Thy gentle eyes send forth a quick'ning spirit,
And feed the dying lamp of life within me.*
ROWE.

*Cynthia, fair regent of the night,
O may thy silver lamp from heaven's high
bow'r,
Direct my footsteps in the midnight hour.*
GAY.

LAMPO'ON. n.s. [Bailey derives it from lampons, a drunken song. It imports, let us drink, from the old French lamper, and was repeated at the end of each couplet at carousals. Trevoux.] A personal satire; abuse; censure written not to reform but to vex.

They say my talent is satire; if so, it is a fruitful age: they have sown the dragon's teeth themselves, and it is but just they should reap each other in lampoons.
DRYDEN.

Make satire a lampoon. POPE.

LANCEPE'SADE. n.s. [lance spezzate, French.] The officer under the corporal: not now in use among us.

*To th' Indies of her arm he flies,
Fraught both with east and western prize,
Which, when he had in vain essay'd,
Arm'd like a dapper lancepesade
With Spanish pike, he broach'd a pore.*
CLEVELAND.

To LANCH. v.a. [lancer, French. This word is too often written launch: it is only a vocal corruption of lance.] To dart; to cast as a lance; to throw; to let fly.

*See whose arm can lanch the surer bolt,
And who's the better Jove.*
DRYDEN AND LEE'S OEDIPUS.

*Me, only me, the hand of fortune bore,
Unblest to tread that interdicted shore:
When Jove tremendous in the sable deeps, Launch'd his red light'ning at our scatter'd ships.* POPE.

LA'NDING-PLACE. n.s. [from land.] The top of stairs.

Let the stairs to the upper rooms be upon a fair, open newel, and a fair landing-place at the top. BACON.

*The landing-place is the uppermost step of a pair of stairs, viz. the floor of the room
you ascend upon.* MOXON.

There is a stair-case that strangers are generally carried to see, where the easiness of the ascent, the disposition of the lights, and the convenient landing, are admirably well contrived.

ADDISON'S REMARKS ON ITALY.

What the Romans called vestibulum was no part of the house, but the court and landing-place between it and the street.

ARBUTHNOT ON COINS.

LA'NDLOPER. n.s. [land and loopen, Dutch.] A landman; a term of reproach used by seamen of those who pass their lives on shore.

LAND-TAX. n.s. [land and tax.]

Tax laid upon land and houses.

If mortgages were registered, land-taxes might reach the lender to pay his proportion. LOCKE.

LAND-WAITER. n.s. [land and waiter.] An officer of the customs, who is to watch what goods are landed.

Give a guinea to a knavish land-waiter, and he shall connive at the merchant for cheating the queen of an hundred.

SWIFT'S EXAMINER, NO. 27.

LA'NGUAGE. n.s. [language, French; lingua, Latin.]

1. Human speech.

We may define language, if we consider it more materially, to be letters, forming and producing words and sentences; but if we consider it according to the design thereof, then language is apt signs for communication of thoughts. HOLDER.

2. The tongue of one nation as distinct from others.

*O! good my lord, no Latin;
I am not such a truant since my coming,
As not to know the language I have liv'd in.* SHAKESPEARE.

*He not from Rome alone, but Greece,
Like Jason, brought the golden fleece;
To him that language, though to none
Of th' others, as his own was known.*
DENHAM.

3. Stile; manner of expression.

*Though his language should not be refin'd,
It must not be obscure and impudent.*
ROSCOMMON.

*Others for language all their care express,
And value books, as women, men, for dress:
Their praise is still – the stile is excellent;
The sense, they humbly take upon content.*
POPE.

LA'NGUAGED. adj. [from the noun.] Having various languages.

He wand'ring long a wider circle made,

And many languag'd nations has survey'd. POPE.

LA'NGUAGE-MASTER. n.s. [language and master.] One whose profession is to teach languages.

The third is a sort of language-master, who is to instruct them in the stile proper for a minister. SPECTATOR, NO. 305.

LA'RDER. n.s. [lardier, old French; from lard.] The room where meat is kept or salted.

This similitude is not borrowed of the larder house, but out of the school house.
ASCHAM'S SCHOOLMASTER.

Flesh is ill kept in a room that is not cool; whereas in a cool and wet larder it will keep longer. BACON.

*So have I seen in larder dark,
Of veal a lucid loin.* DORSET.

*Old age,
Morose, perverse in humour, diffident
The more he still abounds, the less content:
His larder and his kitchen too observes,
And now, lest he should want hereafter, starves.* KING.

LASS. n.s. [from lad is formed laddess, by contraction lass. Hickes.] A girl; a maid; a young woman: used now only of mean girls.

*Now was the time for vig'rous lads to show
What love or honour could invite them to;
A goodly theatre, where rocks are round
With reverend age, and lovely lasses crown'd.* WALLER.

A girl was worth forty of our widows; and an honest, downright, plain-dealing lass it was. L'ESTRANGE.

*They sometimes an hasty kiss
Steal from unwary lasses; they with scorn,
And neck reclin'd, resent.* PHILIPS.

LA'TIN. adj. [Latinus.] Written or spoken in the language of the old Romans.

Augustus himself could not make a new Latin word. LOCKE.

LA'TIN. n.s. An exercise practised by school-boys, who turn English into Latin.

In learning farther his syntaxis, he shall not use the common order in schools for making of Latins. ASCHAM.

LATI'NITY. n.s. [Latinité, French; latinitas, Latin.] Purity of Latin stile; the Latin tongue.

If Shakespeare was able to read Plautus with ease, nothing in Latinity could be hard to him. DENNIS'S LETTERS.

To LA'TINIZE. [Latiniser, French; from Latin.] To use words or phrases borrowed from the Latin.

I am liable to be charged that I latinize too much. DRYDEN.

He uses coarse and vulgar words, or terms and phrases that are latinized, scholastick, and hard to be understood. WATTS.

LA'TTER. adj. [This is the comparative of late, though universally written with tt, contrary to analogy, and to our own practice in the superlative latest. When the thing of which the comparison is made is mentioned, we use later; as, this fruit is later than the rest; but latter when no comparison is expressed; as, those are latter fruits. —

Quem penes arbitrium est, & vis, & norma loquendi.]<sup>147</sup>

1. Happening after something else.
2. Modern; lately done or past.

Hath not navigation discovered, in these latter ages, whole nations at the bay of Soldania. LOCKE.

3. Mentioned last of two.

The difference between reason and revelation, and in what sense the latter is superior. WATTS.

LA'VATORY. n.s. [from lavo, Latin.] A wash; something in which parts diseased are washed.

Lavatories, to wash the temples, hands, wrists, and jugulars, do potently profligate, and keep off the venom. HARVEY.

To LAUNCH. v.a.

1. To push to sea.

All art is used to sink episcopacy, and launch presbytery, in England.

KING CHARLES.

*With stays and cordage last he rigg'd the ship,
And roll'd on leavers, launch'd her in the deep.* POPE.

2. To dart from the hand. This perhaps, for distinction sake, might better be written lanch.

*The King of Heav'n, obscure on high,
Bar'd his red arm, and launching from the sky
His writhen bolt, not shaking empty smoke,
Down to the deep abyss the flaming fellow strook.* DRYDEN.

LAUREA'TION. n.s. [from laur-eate.] It denotes, in the Scottish universities, the act or state of having degrees conferred, as they have in some of them a flowery crown, in imitation of laurel among the antients.

LAWN. n.s. [land, Danish; lawn, Welsh; lande, French.]

1. An open space between woods,

Betwixt them lawns, or level downs, and flocks,

Grazing the tender herb, were interpos'd.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

His mountains were in a few years shaded with young trees, that gradually shot up into groves, woods, and forests, intermixed with walks, and lawns, and gardens.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 58.

Stern beasts in trains that by his truncheon fell,

Now grisly forms shoot o'er the lawns of hell. POPE.

Interspers'd in lawns and opening glades, Thin trees arise that shun each other's shades. POPE.

2. [Linon, French.] Fine linen, remarkable for being used in the sleeves of bishops.

*Should'st thou bleed,
To stop the wounds my finest lawn I'd tear, Wash them with tears, and wipe them with my hair.* PRIOR.

*From high life high characters are drawn,
A saint in crape is twice a saint in lawn.*
POPE.

*What awe did the slow solemn knell inspire:
The duties by the lawn rob'd prelate pay'd,
And the last words, that dust to dust
convey'd!* TICKELL.

LEADER. n.s. [from lead.]

1. One that leads, or conducts.
2. Captain; commander.

*In my tent
I'll draw the form and model of our battle,
Limit each leader to his several charge,
And part in just proportion our small strength.* SHAKESPEARE.

I have given him for a leader and commander to the people.

BIBLE ISAIAH, LV. 4.

Those who escaped by flight excused their dishonour, not without a sharp jest against some of their leaders, affirming, that, as they had followed them into the field, so it was good reason they should follow them out. HAYWARD.

*When our Lycians see
Our brave examples, they admiring say,
Behold our gallant leaders.* DENHAM.
The brave leader of the Lycian crew.
DRYDEN.

3. One who goes first.

Nay keep your way, little gallant; you were wont to be a follower now you are a leader. SHAKESPEARE.

4. One at the head of any party or faction: as the detestable Wharton was the leader of the whigs.

The understandings of a senate are enslaved by three or four leaders, set to get or to keep employments. SWIFT.

LEADING-STRINGS. n.s. [lead and string.] Strings by which children, when they learn to walk, are held from falling.

*Sound may serve such, ere they to sense are grown,
Like leading-strings, 'till they can walk alone.* DRYDEN.

Was he ever able to walk without leading-strings, or swim without bladders, without being discovered by his hobbling and his sinking? SWIFT.

LE'CTURE. n.s. [lecture, French.]

1. A discourse pronounced upon any subject.

Mark him, while Dametas reads his rustick lecture unto him, how to feed his beasts before noon, and where to shade them in the extreme heat. SIDNEY, B. II.

*Wrangling pedant,
When in musick we have spent an hour,
Your lecture shall have leisure for as much.* SHAKESPEARE.

When letters from Cesar were given to Rusticus, he refused to open them till the philosopher had done his lectures.

TAYLOR'S HOLY LIVING.

*Virtue is the solid good, which tutors should not only read lectures and talk of,
but the labour and art of education should furnish the mind with, and fasten there.*

LOCKE.

Numidia will be blest by Cato's lectures.
ADDISON'S CATO.

2. The act or practice of reading; perusal.

In the lecture of holy scripture, their apprehensions are commonly confined unto the literal sense of the text. BROWNE.

3. A magisterial reprimand.

LE'CTURER. n.s. [from lecture.] An instructor; a teacher by way of lecture;<sup>148</sup> a preacher in a church hired by the parish to assist the rector or vicar.

If any minister refused to admit into his church a lecturer recommended by them, and there was not one orthodox or learned man recommended, he was presently required to attend upon the committee.

CLARENDON.

LEECH. n.s. [læc, Saxon.]1. A physician; a professor of the art of healing: whence we still use cowleech.

*A leech, the which had great insight
In that disease of grieved conscience,
And well could cure the same; his name was patience.*

SPENSER'S FAIRY QUEEN, B. I.

*Her words prevail'd, and then the learned leach
His cunning hand 'gan to his wounds to lay,
And all things else the which his art did teach.* FAIRY QUEEN.

*Physick is their bane.
The learned leaches in despair depart,
And shake their heads, desponding of their art.* DRYDEN.

*Wise leeches will not vain receipts
obtrude;
Deaf to complaints they wait upon the ill,
Till some safe crisis.* DRYDEN.

*The hoary wrinkled leech has watch'd and toil'd,
Tried every health restoring herb and
gum,
And wearied out his painful skill in vain.*
ROWE'S JANE SHORE.

*A skilful leach,
They say, had wrought this blessed deed;
This leach Arbuthnot was yclept.*
GAY'S PASTORALS.

2. A kind of small water serpent, which fastens on animals, and sucks the blood: it is used to draw blood where the lancet is less safe, whence perhaps the name.

*I drew blood by leeches behind his ear.
WISEMAN'S SURGERY.*

*Sticking like leeches, till they burst with
blood,
Without remorse insatiably.*
ROSCOMMON.

LE'GEND. n.s. [legenda, Latin.]

1. A chronicle or register of the lives of saints.

Legends being grown in a manner to be nothing else but heaps of frivolous and scandalous vanities, they have been even with disdain thrown out, the very nests which bred them abhorring them.

HOOKER, B. V.

*There are in Rome two sets of antiquities, the christian and the heathen; the former,
though of a fresher date, are so embroiled with fable and legend, that one receives but little satisfaction.*

ADDISON'S REMARKS ON ITALY.

2. Any memorial or relation.

*And in this legend all that glorious
deed
Read, whilst you arm you; arm you whilst you read.* FAIRFAX, B. I.

3. An incredible unauthentick narrative.

*Who can show the legends, that record
More idle tales, or fables so absurd.*

BLACKMORE.

It is the way and means of attaining to heaven, that makes profane scorners so willingly let go the expectation of it. It is not the articles of the creed, but the duty to God and their neighbour, that is such an inconsistent incredible legend.

BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

4. Any inscription; particularly on medals or coins.

Compare the beauty and comprehensiveness of legends on ancient coins.

ADDISON ON MEDALS.

To LE'NIFY. v.a. [lenifier, old French; lenio, Latin.] To assuage; to mitigate.

It is used for squinancies and inflammations in the throat, whereby it seemeth to have a mollifying and lenifying virtue.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 554.

All soft'ning simples, known of sov'reign use,

He presses out, and pours their noble juice;

These first infus'd, to lenify the pain,

He tugs with pincers, but he tugs in vain.

DRYDEN.

LESS. A negative or privative termination. [leas, Saxon; loos, Dutch.] Joined to a substantive, it implies the absence or privation of the thing expressed by that substantive: as, a witless man, a man without wit; childless, without children; fatherless, deprived of a father; pennyless, wanting money.

LESS. adj. [leas, Saxon.] The comparative of little: opposed to greater.<sup>149</sup>

Mary, the mother of James the less.

BIBLE MARK, XV. 40.

Yet could he not his closing eyes withdraw,

Though less and less of Emily he saw.

DRYDEN.

He that thinks he has a positive idea of infinite space will find, that he can no more have a positive idea of the greatest than he has of the least space; for in this latter we are capable only of a comparative idea of smallness, which will always be less than any one whereof we have the positive idea.

LOCKE.

All the ideas that are considered as having parts, and are capable of increase by the addition of any equal or less parts, affords us, by their repetition, the idea of infinity.

LOCKE.

'Tis less to conquer, than to make wars cease,

And, without fighting, awe the world to peace. HALIFAX.

LE'SSER. adj. A barbarous corruption of less, formed by the vulgar from the habit of terminating comparatives in er; afterwards adopted by poets, and then by writers of prose.<sup>150</sup>

What great despite doth fortune to thee bear,

Thus lowly to abase thy beauty bright,

That it should not deface all other lesser light.

FAIRY QUEEN.

It is the lesser blot, modesty finds,

Women to change their shapes than men their minds.

SHAKESPEARE'S TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

The mountains, and higher parts of the earth, grow lesser and lesser from age to age: sometimes the roots of them are weakened by subterraneous fires, and sometimes tumbled by earthquakes into those caverns that are under them.

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

Cain, after the murder of his brother, cries out, Every man that findeth me shall slay me. By the same reason may a man, in the state of nature, punish the lesser breaches of that law. LOCKE.

Any heat whatsoever promotes the ascent of mineral matter, but more especially of that which is subtile, and is consequently moveable more easily, and with a lesser power.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

The larger here, and there the lesser lambs, The new-fall'n young herd bleating for their dams. POPE.

LEUCOPHLE'GMACY. n.s.

[from leucophlegmatick.] Paleness, with viscid juices and cold sweatings.

Spirits produce debility, flatulency, fevers, leucophlegmacy, and dropsies.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

LE'VEE. n.s. [French.]

1. The time of rising.
2. The concourse of those who croud round a man of power in a morning.

*The servile rout their careful Cæsar praise;
Him they extol, they worship him alone,
They croud his levees, and support his throne.* DRYDEN.

*Woud'st thou be first minister of state?
To have thy levees crouded with resort,
Of a depending, gaping, servile court.*
DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

*None of her Sylvan subjects made their
court,
Levees and couchees pass'd without resort.*
DRYDEN.

LEVEROOK. n.s. [lafere, Saxon.]

This word is retained in Scotland, and denotes the lark.

The smaller birds have their particular seasons; as, the leverook.
WALTON'S ANGLER.

If the lufft faa 'twill smoore aw the leverooks. SCOTCH PROVERB.

LEXICO'GRAPHER. n.s.

[λεξικόν and γράφω; lexicographe, French.] A writer of dictionaries; a harmless drudge, that busies himself in tracing the original, and detailing the signification of words.

Commentators and lexicographers acquainted with the Syriac language, have given these hints in their writings on scripture.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

LEXICO'GRAPHY. n.s. [λεξικόν and γράφω.] The art or practice of writing dictionaries.

LE'XICON. n.s. [λεξικόν.] A dictionary; a book teaching the signification of words.

Though a linguist should pride himself to have all the tongues that Babel cleft the world into, yet if he had not studied the solid things in them as well as the words and lexicons, yet he were nothing so much to be esteemed a learned man as any yeoman competently wise in his mother dialect only. MILTON.

LIAR. n.s. [from lie. This word would analogically be lier; but this orthography has prevailed, and the convenience of distinction from lier, he who lies down, is sufficient to confirm it.] One who tells falshood; one who wants veracity.

*She's like a liar, gone to burning hell!
'Twas I that kill'd her.*

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

*He approves the common liar, fame,
Who speaks him thus at Rome.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND
CLEOPATRA.

I do not reject his observation as untrue, much less condemn the person himself as a liar, whensoever it seems to be contradicted. BOYLE.

*Thy better soul abhors a liar's part,
Wise is thy voice, and noble is thy heart.*

POPE'S ODYSSEY.

LI'BERTINE. n.s. [libertin, French.]

1. One unconfined; one at liberty.

*When he speaks,
The air, a charter'd libertine, is still;
And the mute wonder lurketh in men's
ears,
To steal his sweet and honied sentences.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

2. One who lives without restraint or law.

*Man, the lawless libertine, may rove
Free and unquestion'd.*

ROWE'S JANE SHORE.

Want of power is the only bound that a libertine puts to his views upon any of the sex. CLARISSA.

3. One who pays no regard to the precepts of religion.

They say this town is full of couzenage,

*As nimble jugglers, that deceive the eye;
Disguised cheaters, prating mountebanks,
And many such like libertines of sin.*

SHAKESPEARE.

That word may be applied to some few libertines in the audience.

COLLIER'S VIEW OF THE STAGE.

4. [In law; libertinus, Lat.] A freedman; or rather, the son of a freedman.

Some persons are forbidden to be accusers on the score of their sex, as women; others on the score of their age, as pupils and infants; others on the score of their conditions, as libertines against their patrons. AYLIFFE'S PARERAGON.

LIBRA'RIAN. n.s. [librarius, Latin.]

1. One who has the care of a library.

2. One who transcribes or copies books.

Charybdis thrice swallows, and thrice refunds, the waves: this must be understood of regular tides. There are indeed but two tides in a day, but this is the error of the librarians.

BROOME'S NOTES ON THE ODYSSEY.

LICH. n.s. [lice, Saxon.] A dead carcase; whence lichwake, the time or act of watching by the dead; lichgate, the gate through which the dead are carried to the grave; Lichfield, the field of the dead, a city in Staffordshire, so named from martyred christians. Salve magna parens.<sup>151</sup> Lichwake is still retained in Scotland in the same sense.

LI'ER. n.s. [from to lie.] One that rests or lies down; or remains concealed.

There were liers in ambush against him behind the city.

BIBLE JOSHUA, VIII. 14.

LI'FESTRING. n.s. [life and string.] Nerve; strings imagined to convey life.

*These lines are the veins, the arteries,
The undecaying lifestrings of those hearts*

That still shall pant, and still shall exercise

The motion spirit and nature both impart.

DANIEL.

LIFT. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. The act of lifting; the manner of lifting.<sup>152</sup>

In the lift of the feet, when a man goeth up the hill, the weight of the body beareth most upon the knees. BACON.

In races, it is not the large stride, or high lift, that makes the speed.

BACON'S ESSAYS.

The goat gives the fox a lift, and out he springs. L'ESTRANGE.

2. [In Scottish.] The sky: for in a starry night they say, How clear the lift is!

3. Effect; struggle. Dead lift is an effort to raise what with the whole force cannot be moved; and figuratively any state of impotence and inability.

*Myself and Trulla made a shift
To help him out at a dead lift.*

HUDIBRAS, P. I.

*Mr. Doctor had puzzled his brains
In making a ballad, but was at a stand.
For you freely must own, you were at a dead lift.* SWIFT.

4. Lift, in Scotland, denotes a load or surcharge of any thing; as also, if one be disguised much with liquor, they say, He has got a great lift.

5. Lifts of a sail are ropes to raise or lower them at pleasure.

LIGHTHO'USE. n.s. [light and house.] An high building, at the top of which lights are hung to guide ships at sea.

He charged himself with the risque of such vessels as carried corn in winter; and built a pharos or lighthouse. ARBUTHNOT.

Build two poles to the meridian, with immense lighthouses on the top of them.

ARBUTHNOT AND POPE.

LIGHTMI'NDED. adj. [light and mind.] Unsettled; unsteady.

He that is hasty to give credit is lightminded.

BIBLE ECCLESIASTICUS, XIX. 4.

LI'GHTNESS. n.s. [from light.]

1. Levity; want of weight; absence of weight.

Some are for masts of ships, as fir and pine, because of their length, straightness, and lightness.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

Suppose many degrees of littleness and lightness in particles, so as many might float in the air a good while before they fell.

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

2. Inconstancy; unsteadiness.

*For, unto knight there is no greater shame,
Than lightness and inconstancy in love.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

Of two things they must chuse one; namely, whether they would, to their endless disgrace, with ridiculous lightness, dismiss him, whose restitution they had in so impfortunate manner desired, or else condescend unto that demand. HOOKER.

*As I blow this feather from my face,
Obeying with my wind when I do blow,
And yielding to another when it blows,
Commanded always by the greatest gust;
Such is the lightness of you common men.*

SHAKESPEARE.

3. Unchastity; want of conduct in women.

Is it the disdain of my estate, or the opinion of my lightness, that have emboldened such base fancies towards me?

SIDNEY, B. II.

*Can it be,
That modesty may more betray our sense,
Than woman's lightness.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

4. Agility; nimbleness.

LIGHTS. n.s. [supposed to be called so from their lightness in proportion to their bulk.] The lungs; the organs of breathing.

The complaint was chiefly from the lights, a part as of no quick sense, so no seat for any sharp disease. HAYWARD.

LI'KING. n.s. [from like.]

1. Good state of body; plumpness.

I'll repent, and that suddenly, while I am in some liking; I shall be out of heart shortly, and then I shall have no strength to repent. SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

Their young ones are in good liking; they grow up with corn.

BIBLE JOB, XXXIX. 4.

Cappadocian slaves were famous for their lustiness; and, being in good liking, were set on a stall when exposed to sale, to shew the good habit of their body.

DRYDEN'S NOTES TO PERSIUS.

2. State of trial.

*The royal soul, that, like the lab'ring moon,
By charms of art was hurried down;
Forc'd with regret to leave her native sphere,*

Came but awhile on liking here.

DRYDEN.

3. Inclination.

*Why do you longer feed on loathed light,
Or liking find to gaze on earthly mold.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

LI'MITARY. adj. [from limit.]

Placed at the boundaries as a guard or superintendent.

Then, when I am thy captive, talk of chains,

Proud limitary cherub!

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

LI'MOUS. adj. [limosus, Latin.]

Muddy; slimy.

That country became a gained ground by the muddy and limous matter brought down by the Nilus, which settled by degrees unto a firm land.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

They esteemed this natural melancholick acidity to be the limous or slimy fœculent part of the blood. FLOYER.

LI'NCTUS. n.s. [from lingo, Latin.]
Medicine licked up by the tongue.

To LI'NGER. v.n. [from leng, Saxon, long.]

1. To remain long in languor and pain.

Like wretches, that have linger'd long, We'll snatch the strongest cordial of our love. DRYDEN.

*Better to rush at once to shades below,
Than linger life away, and nourish woe.*
POPE'S ODYSSEY.

2. To hesitate; to be in suspense.

*Perhaps thou ling'rest, in deep thoughts
detain'd
Of th' enterprize so hazardous and high.*
PARADISE REGAIN'D.

3. To remain long. In an ill sense.

*Let order die,
And let this world no longer be a stage
To feed contention in a ling'ring act.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

*Ye breth'ren of the lyre, and tuneful voice,
Lament his lot; but at your own rejoice.
Now live secure, and linger out your days;
The gods are pleas'd alone with Purcel's lays.* DRYDEN.

*Your very fear of death shall make ye try
To catch the shade of immortality;
Wishing on earth to linger, and to save
Part of its prey from the devouring grave.*
PRIOR.

4. To remain long without any action or determination.

We have lingered about a match between Anne Page and my cousin Slender, and this day we shall have our answer.
SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF
WINDSOR.

5. To wait long in expectation or uncertainty.

I must sollicit

All his concerns as mine:

And if my eyes have pow'r, he should not sue

In vain, nor linger with a long delay.

DRYDEN'S CLEOMENES.

6. To be long in producing effect.

She doth think, she has strange ling'ring poisons. SHAKESPEARE.

LI'NGO. n.s. [Portuguese.]

Language; tongue; speech. A low cant word.

I have thoughts to learn somewhat of your lingo, before I cross the seas.

CONGREVE'S WAY OF THE WORLD.

LINGUA'CIOUS. adj. [linguax, Latin.] Full of tongue; loquacious; talkative.

LINGUADE'NTAL. adj. [lingua and dens, Latin.] Uttered by the joint action of the tongue and teeth.

The linguadentals f, v, as also the linguadentals th, dh, he will soon learn.

HOLDER'S ELEMENTS OF SPEECH.

LI'NGUIST. n.s. [from lingua.] A man skilful in languages.

Though a linguist should pride himself to have all the tongues that Babel cleft the world into, yet, if he had not studied the solid things in them, as well as the words and lexicons, he were nothing so much to be esteemed a learned man, as any yeoman or tradesman competently wise in his mother dialect only.

MILTON ON EDUCATION.

Our linguist received extraordinary rudiments towards a good education.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

LI'NKBOY. n.s. [link and boy.] A boy that carries a torch to accommodate passengers with light.

What a ridiculous thing it was, that the continued shadow of the earth should be broken by sudden miraculous disclussions of light, to prevent the officiousness of the linkboy. MORE'S DIVINE DIALOGUES.

Though thou art tempted by the linkman's call,

Yet trust him not along the lonely wall.

GAY.

*In the black form of cinder wench she came.
O may no linkboy interrupt their love.*

GAY'S TRIVIA.

LIP. n.s. [lippe, Saxon.]

1. The outer part of the mouth, the muscles that shoot beyond the teeth, which are of so much use in speaking, that they are used for all the organs of speech.

Those happiest smiles

That play'd on her ripe lip, seem'd not to know

What guests were in her eyes.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

*No falshood shall defile my lips with lies,
Or with a vail of truth disguise.*

SANDYS ON JOB.

Her lips blush deeper sweets.

THOMSON'S SPRING.

2. The edge of any thing.

In many places is a ridge of mountains some distance from the sea, and a plain from their roots to the shore; which plain was formerly covered by the sea, which bounded against those hills as its first ramparts, or as the ledges or lips of its vessel.

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

In wounds, the lips sink and are flaccid; a gleet followeth, and the flesh within withers. WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

3. To make a lip; to hang the lip in sullenness and contempt.

A letter for me! It gives me an estate of seven years health; in which time I will make a lip at the physician.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

LIPLA'BOUR. n.s. [lip and labour.] Action of the lips without concurrence of the mind; words without sentiments.

Fasting, when prayer is not directed to its own purposes, is but liplabour.

TAYLOR'S RULE OF HOLY LIVING.

LI'PWISDOM. n.s. [lip and wisdom.] Wisdom in talk without practice.

I find that all is but lipwisdom, which wants experience; I now, woe is me, do try what love can do. SIDNEY, B. I.

LI'QUOR. n.s. [liquor, Latin; liqueur, French.]

1. Any thing liquid: it is commonly used of fluids inebriating, or impregnated with something, or made by decoction.

Nor envy'd them the grape

Whose heads that turbulent liquor fills with fumes. MILTON.

Sin taken into the soul, is like a liquor poured into a vessel; so much of it as it fills, it also seasons.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

2. Strong drink; in familiar language.

To LISP. v.n. [plisp, Saxon.] To speak with too frequent appulses of the tongue to the teeth or palate, like children.

Come, I cannot cog, and say, thou art this and that, like a many of these lisping hawthorn buds, that come like women in mens apparel, and smell like Bucklersbury in simpling time.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

*Scarce had she learnt to lisp a name
Of martyr, yet she thinks it shame
Life should so long play with that breath,
Which spent can buy so brave a death.*

CRASHAW.

*They ramble not to learn the mode,
How to be drest, or how to lisp abroad.*

CLEAVELAND.

Appulse partial, giving some passage to breath, is made to the upper teeth, and causes a lisping sound, the breath being strained through the teeth.

HOLDER'S ELEMENTS OF SPEECH.

*As yet a child, nor yet a fool to fame,
I lisp'd in numbers, for the numbers came.* POPE.

LI'TTER. n.s. [litiere, French.]

1. A kind of vehicular bed; a carriage capable of containing a bed hung between two horses.

*To my litter strait;
Weakness possesseth me.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING JOHN.

He was carried in a rich chariot litterwise, with two horses at each end.

BACON'S NEW ATLANTIS.

*The drowsy frightened steeds,
That draw the litter of close curtain'd sleep.* MILTON.

*Here modest matrons in soft litters driv'n,
In solemn pomp appear.*

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

*Litters thick besiege the donor's gate,
And begging lords and teeming ladies wait*

The promis'd dole.

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

2. The straw laid under animals, or on plants.

To crouch in litter of your stable planks.

SHAKESPEARE.

Take off the litter from your kernel beds.

EVELYN.

Their litter is not toss'd by sows unclean.

DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

3. A brood of young.

I do here walk before thee like a sow that hath overwhelmed all her litter but one.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

Reflect upon that numerous litter of strange, senseless opinions, that crawl about the world. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

A wolf came to a sow, and very kindly offered to take care of her litter.

L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

Full many a year his hateful head had been For tribute paid, nor since in Cambria seen:

*The last of all the litter 'scap'd by chance,
And from Geneva first infested France.*

DRYDEN.

4. Any number of things thrown sluttishly about.

Strephon, who found the room was void,

*Stole in, and took a strict survey
Of all the litter as it lay.* SWIFT.

5. A birth of animals.

*Fruitful as the sow that carry'd
The thirty pigs at one large litter farrow'd.*

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

LI'VRE. n.s. [French.] The sum by which the French reckon their money, equal nearly to our shilling.

LI'ZARD. n.s. [lissarde, French; lacertus, Latin.] An animal resembling a serpent, with legs added to it.

There are several sorts of lizards; some in Arabia of a cubit long. In America they eat lizards; it is very probable likewise that they were eaten sometimes in Arabia and Judæa, since Moses ranks them among the unclean creatures. CALMET.

*Thou'rt like a foul mis-shapen stigmatick,
Mark'd by the destinies to be avoided,
As venomous toads, or lizards dreadful stings.* SHAKESPEARE.

*Adder's fork, and blind worm's sting,
Lizard's leg, and owlet's wing.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

LO. interject. [la, Saxon.] Look; see; behold. It is a word used to recall the attention generally to some object of sight; sometimes to something heard, but not properly; often to something to be understood.

Lo! within a ken our army lies.

SHAKESPEARE.

Now must the world point at poor Catharine,

And say, lo! there is mad Petruchio's wife.
SHAKESPEARE.

*Lo! I have a weapon,
A better never did itself sustain Upon a soldier's thigh.*
SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

*Thou did'st utter,
I am yours for ever.*
— Why lo you now, I've spoke to the purpose twice. SHAKESPEARE.

For lo! he sung the world's stupendous birth. ROSCOMMON.

*Lo! heav'n and earth combine
To blast our bold design.*
DRYDEN'S ALBION.

LOAF. n.s. [from hlal or laf, Saxon.]

1. A mass of bread as it is formed by the baker: a loaf is thicker than a cake.

*Easy it is
Of a cut loaf to steal a shive, we know.*
SHAKESPEARE.

The bread and bread corn in the town sufficed not for six days: hereupon the soldiers entered into proportion; and, to give example, the lord Clinton limited himself to a loaf a day. HAYWARD.

With equal force you may break a loaf of bread into more and less parts than a lump of lead of the same bigness. DIGBY.

2. Any mass into which a body is wrought.

Your wine becomes so limpid, that you may bottle it with a piece of loaf sugar in each bottle. MORTIMER.

LOB. n.s.

1. Any one heavy, clumsy, or sluggish.

*Farewel, thou lob of spirits, I'll be gone,
Our queen and all her elves come here
anon.* SHAKESPEARE.

2. Lob's pound; a prison. Probably a prison for idlers, or sturdy beggars.

Crowdero, whom in irons bound,

Thou basely threw'st into lob's pound.
HUDIBRAS.

3. A big worm.

For the trout the dew worm, which some also call the lob worm, and the brandling are the chief. WALTON'S ANGLER.

LO'CKET. n.s. [loquet, French.] A small lock; any catch or spring to fasten a necklace, or other ornament.

*Where knights are kept in narrow lists,
With wooden lockets 'bout their wrists.*
HUDIBRAS, P. II.

LOCOMO'TIVE. adj. [locus and moveo, Lat.] Changing place; having the power of removing or changing place.

I shall consider the motion, or locomotive faculty of animals.
DERHAM'S PHYSICO-THEOLOGY.

*In the night too oft he kicks,
Or shows his locomotive tricks.* PRIOR.

An animal cannot well be defined from any particular, organical part, nor from its locomotive faculty, for some adhere to rocks.
ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

LOFT. n.s. [lloft, Welsh; or from lift.]

1. A floor.

There is a traverse placed in a loft above.
BACON.

2. The highest floor.

*To lull him in his slumber soft,
A trickling stream from high rock tumbling
down,
And ever drizzling rain upon the loft,
Mixt with a murmuring wind.*
FAIRY QUEEN, B. I.

3. Rooms on high.

*Passing through the spheres of watchful fire,
And hills of snow, and lofts of piled thunder.* MILTON.

*A weasel once made shift to slink
In at a corn loft, through a chink.*
POPE.

LO'GOMACHY. n.s. [λογομαχία.]

A contention in words; a contention about words.

Forced terms of art did much puzzle sacred theology with distinctions, cavils, quiddities; and so transformed her to a meer kind of sophistry and logomachy. HOWEL.

To LOLL. v.n. [Of this word the etymology is not known. Perhaps it might be contemptuously derived from lollard, a name of great reproach before the reformation; of whom one tenet was, that all trades not necessary to life are unlawful.]

1. To lean idly; to rest lazily against any thing.

So hangs, and lolls, and weeps upon me; so shakes and pulls me.

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

*He is not lolling on a lewd love bed,
But on his knees at meditation.*

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

*Close by a softly murm'ring stream,
Where lovers us'd to loll and dream.*

HUDIBRAS, P. I.

*To loll on couches, rich with cytron steds,
And lay your guilty limbs in Tyrian beds.*

DRYDEN.

*Void of care he lolls supine in state,
And leaves his business to be done by fate.*

DRYDEN'S PERSIUS.

*But wanton now, and lolling at our ease,
We suffer all the invet'rate ills of peace.*

DRYDEN.

*A lazy, lolling sort
Of ever listless loit'ners.*

DUNCIAD, B. IV.

2. To hang out. Used of the tongue hanging out in weariness or play.

*The triple porter of the Stygian seat,
With lolling tongue lay fawning at thy feet.* DRYDEN.

With harmless play amidst the bowls he pass'd,

And with his lolling tongue assay'd the taste. DRYDEN.

LONGI'MANOUS. adj. [longue-main, French; longimanus, Lat.] Long-handed; having long hands.

The villainy of this Christian exceeded the persecution of heathens, whose malice was never so longimanous as to reach the soul of their enemies, or to extend unto the exile of their elysiums.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS, B. VII.

LONGI'METRY. n.s. [longus and μετρέω; longimetrie, French.] The art or practice of measuring distances.

Our two eyes are like two different stations in longimetry, by the assistance of which the distance between two objects is measured.

CHEYNE'S PHILOSOPHICAL PRINCIPLES.

LO'OBY. n.s. [Of this word the derivation is unsettled. Skinner mentions lapp, German, foolish; and Junius, llabe, a clown, Welsh, which seems to be the true original.] A lubber; a clumsy clown.

*The vices trace
From the father's scoundrel race.
Who could give the looby such airs?
Were they masons, were they butchers?*
SWIFT.

LOOK. interj. [properly the imperative mood of the verb: it is sometimes look ye.] See! lo! behold! observe.

Look, where he comes, and my good man too; he's as far from jealousy as I am from giving him cause. SHAKESPEARE.

*Look you, he must seem thus to the world:
fear not your advancement.*

SHAKESPEARE.

Look, when the world hath fewest barbarous people, but such as will not marry, except they know means to live, as it is almost everywhere at this day, except Tartary, there is no danger of inundations of people. BACON'S ESSAYS.

Look you! we that pretend to be subject to a constitution, must not carve out our own quality; for at this rate a cobbler may make himself a lord. COLLIER ON PRIDE.

LOON. n.s. [This word, which is now used only in Scotland, is the English word lown.] A sorry fellow; a scoundrel; a rascal.

Thou cream-fac'd loon!

Where got'st thou that goose look?

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*The false loon, who could not work his will
By open force, employ'd his flatt'ring skill:*

I hope, my lord, said he, I not offend;

Are you afraid of me that are your friend?

DRYDEN.

This young lord had an old cunning rogue, or, as the Scots call it, a false loon of a grandfather, that one might call a Jack of all trades.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

LOORD. n.s. [loerd, Dutch; from lourdant, French; lurdan, Erse; a heavy, stupid, or witless fellow. D. Trevoux derives lourdant from lorde or lourde, a village in Gascoigny, the inhabitants of which were formerly noted robbers, say they. But dexterity in robbing implies some degree of subtilty, from which the Gascoigns are so far removed, that, at this day, they are aukward and heavy to a proverb. The Erse imports some degree of knavery, but then it is used in a ludicrous sense, as in English, you pretty rogue; though in general it denotes reproachful heaviness, or stupid laziness. Spenser's Scholiast says, loord was wont, among the old Britons, to signify a lord; and therefore the Danes, that usurped their tyranny here in Britain, were called, for more dread than dignity, lurdans, i.e. lord Danes, whose insolence and pride was so outrageous in this realm, that if it fortun'd a Briton to be going over a bridge, and saw the Dane set foot upon the same, he must return back till the Dane was clean over, else he must abide no less than present death: but being afterward expelled, the name of lurdane became so odious unto the people whom they had long oppressed, that, even at this day, they use for more reproach to call the quartan ague the fever lurdane. So far the Scholiast, but erroneously. From Spenser's own words, it signifies something of stupid dulness rather than magisterial arrogance. Macbean.] A drone.

Siker, thou's but a lazy loord,

And rekes much of thy swinke,

That with fond terms and witless words

To bleer mine eyes do'st think.

SPENSER'S PASTORALS.

LOT. n.s. [hlaut, Gothick; hlot, Saxon; lot, Dutch.]

1. Fortune; state assigned.

*Kala at length concluded my ling'ring
lot;*

*Disdain me not, although I be not fair,
Who is an heir of many hundred sheep,
Doth beauty keep which never sun can burn,*

Nor storms do turn. SIDNEY, B. I.

Our own lot is best; and by aiming at what we have not, we lose what we have already. L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

*Prepar'd I stand; he was but born to try
The lot of man, to suffer and to die.*

POPE'S ODYSSEY.

2. A die, or any thing used in determining chances.

*Aaron shall cast lots upon the two goats;
one lot for the Lord, and the other lot for the scape-goat.*

BIBLE LEVITICUS, XVI. 8.

*Their tasks in equal portions she divides,
And where unequal, there by lots decides.*

DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

Ulysses bids his friends to cast lots, to shew,

that he would not voluntarily expose them to so imminent danger.

NOTES ON THE ODYSSEY.

3. It seems in Shakespeare to signify a lucky or wished chance.

*If you have heard your general talk of Rome,
And of his friends there, it is lots to blanks
My name hath touch'd your ears; it is Menenius.* SHAKESPEARE.

4. A portion; a parcel of goods as being drawn by lot: as, what lot of silks had you at the sale?

5. Proportion of taxes: as, to pay scot and lot.

LO'VELILY. adv. [from lovely.]

Amiably; in such a manner as to excite love.

Thou look'st Lovely dreadful.

OTWAY'S VENICE PRESERV'D.

LO'VER. n.s. [from love.]

1. One who is in love.

*Love is blind, and lovers cannot see
The pretty follies that themselves commit.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*Let it be never said, that he whose breast
Is fill'd with love, should break a lover's rest.* DRYDEN.

2. A friend; one who regards with kindness.

Your brother and his lover have embrac'd.
SHAKESPEARE.

*I tell thee, fellow,
Thy general is my lover: I have been
The book of his good act, whence men have read
His fame unparallel'd haply amplified.*
SHAKESPEARE.

3. One who likes any thing.

To be good and gracious, and a lover of knowledge, are amiable things.
BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

LO'VETALE. n.s. [love and tale.]

*Cato's a proper person to entrust
A lovetale with.* ADDISON'S CATO.

LO'VETHOUGHT. n.s. [love and thought.] Amorous fancy.

Away to sweet beds of flowers, Lovethoughts lie rich when canopied with bowers. SHAKESPEARE.

LO'VETOY. n.s. [love and toy.]

Small presents given by lovers.

Has this amorous gentleman presented himself with any lovetoys, such as gold snuff-boxes.

ARBUTHNOT AND POPE'S MARTIN
SCRIBLERUS.

LO'VETRICK. n.s. [love and trick.]

Art of expressing love.

*Other disports than dancing jollities;
Other lovetricks than glancing with the eyes.* DONNE.

LOUIS D'OR. n.s. [French.] A golden coin of France, valued at about seventeen shillings.<sup>153</sup>

If he is desired to change a louis d'or, he must consider of it.

SPECTATOR, NO. 305.

LO'WBELL. n.s. [laeye, Dutch; leg, Saxon; or log, Islandick, a flame, and bell.]

A kind of fowling in the night, in which the birds are wakened by a bell, and lured by a flame into a net. Lowe denotes a flame in Scotland; and to lowe, to flame.

LOWN. n.s. [liun, Irish; loen, Dutch, a stupid drone.] A scoundrel; a rascal.

*King Stephen was a worthy peer,
His breeches cost him but a crown,
He thought them sixpence all too dear,*

And therefore call'd the taylor lown.

SHAKESPEARE.

LOWTHOUGHTED. adj. [low and thought.] Having the thoughts with-held from sublime or heavenly meditations; mean of sentiment; narrow mindedness.

*Above the smoak and stir of this dim spot,
Which men call earth, and with*

lowthoughted care,

Strive to keep up a frail and feverish being. MILTON.

*O grace serene! Oh virtue heav'nly fair!
Divine oblation of lowthoughted care!
Fresh blooming hope, gay daughter of the
sky,*

And faith our early immortality! POPE.

LOWSPIRITED. adj. [low and spirit.] Dejected; depressed; not lively; not vivacious; not spritely.

Severity carried to the highest pitch breaks the mind; and then, in the place of a disorderly young fellow, you have a lowspirited moped creature. LOCKE.

LP. a contraction for lordship.

LU'BRICK. adj. [lubricus, Latin.]

1. Slippery; smooth on the surface.

*A throng
Of short thick sobs, whose thund'ring
volleys float*

And roul themselves over her lubrick throat,

In panting murmurs. CRASHAW.

2. Uncertain; unsteady.

I will deduce him from his cradle through the deep and lubrick waves of state, till he is swallowed in the gulph of fatality.

WOTTON.

3. Wanton; lewd. [lubrique, French.]

Why were we hurry'd down

This lubrick and adult'rate age;

Nay, added fat pollutions of our own,

T' encrease the steaming ordures of the stage. DRYDEN.

LU'BRICOUS. adj. [lubricus, Latin.]

1. Slippery; smooth.

The parts of water being voluble and lubricous as well as fine, it easily insinuates itself into the tubes of vegetables, and by that means introduces into them the matter it bears along with it.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

2. Uncertain.

The judgment being the leading power, if it be stored with lubricous opinions instead of clearly conceived truths, and peremptorily resolved in them, the practice will be as irregular as the conceptions.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

LUCUBRA'TION. n.s. [lucubratio, Latin.] Study by candlelight; nocturnal study; any thing composed by night.

Thy lucubrations have been perused by several of our friends. TATLER, NO. 78.

L'UDICROUS. adj. [ludicer, Lat.] Burlesque; merry; sportive; exciting laughter.

Plutarch quotes this as an instance of Homer's judgment; in closing a ludicrous scene with decency and instruction.

NOTES ON THE ODYSSEY.

LU'DICROUSLY. adv. [from ludicrous.] Sportively; in burlesque; in a manner that may excite laughter.

LUFF. n.s. [in Scotland.] The palm of the hand; as, clap me arles in my luff.

LU'GGAGE. n.s. [from lug.] Any thing cumbrous and unwieldy that is to be carried away; any thing of more weight than value.

Come bring your luggage nobly on your back. SHAKESPEARE.

What do you mean

To doat thus on such luggage?

SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

Think not thou to find me slack, or need

*Thy politick maxims, or that cumbersome
Luggage of war there shewn me.*

MILTON'S PARADISE REGAIN'D.

*How durst thou with that sullen luggage
O' th' self, old ir'n; and other baggage,
T' oppose thy lumber against us?*

HUDIBRAS, P. I.

The mind of man is too light to bear much certainty among the ruffling winds of passion and opinion; and if the luggage be prized equally with the jewels, none will be cast out till all be shipwrecked.

GLANVILLE.

*A lively faith will bear aloft the mind,
And leave the luggage of good works behind.* DRYDEN.

I am gathering up my luggage, and preparing for my journey.

SWIFT TO POPE.

LU'NACY. n.s. [from luna, the moon.] A kind of madness influenced by the moon; madness in general.

Love is merely madness, and deserves as well a dark house and a whip as madmen do; and the reason why they are not so punished and cured is, that the lunacy is so ordinary, that the whippers are in love too. SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

*Your kindred shun your house,
As beaten hence by your strange lunacy.*

SHAKESPEARE.

There is difference of lunacy: I had rather be mad with him, that, when he had nothing, thought all the ships that came into the haven his, than with you, who, when you have so much coming in, think you have nothing. SUCKLING.

L'UNATICK. adj. [lunaticus, Latin.] Mad; having the imagination influenced by the moon.

*Bedlam beggars, from low farms, Sometimes with lunatick bans, sometimes with prayers,
Enforce their charity.*

SHAKESPEARE.

LU'NATICK. n.s. A madman.

*The lunatick, the lover, and the poet,
Are of imagination all compact:*

One sees more devils than vast hell can hold;

The madman.

DREAM.

I dare ensure any man well in his wits, for one in the thousand that he shall not die a lunatick in Bedlam within these seven years; because not above one in about one thousand five hundred have done so.

GRAUNT'S BILLS.

*See the blind beggar dance, the cripple sing,
The sot a hero, lunatick a king.* POPE.

The residue of the yearly profits shall be laid out in purchasing a piece of land, and in building thereon an hospital for the reception of idiots and lunaticks. SWIFT.

LUNCH, LUNCHEON. n.s.

[Minshew derives it from louja, Spanish; Skinner from kleinken, a small piece, Teutonic. It probably comes from clutch or clunch.] As much food as one's hand can hold.

When hungry thou stood'st staring, like an oaf,

*I slic'd the luncheon from the barley loaf;
With crumbled bread I thicken'd well the mess.* GAY.

To LURCH. v.n. [loeren, Dutch; or rather from the noun.]

1. To shift; to play tricks.

I myself, sometimes leaving the fear of heav'n on my left-hand, and hiding mine honour in my necessity, am fain to shuffle, to hedge, and to lurch. SHAKESPEARE.

2. To lie in wait: we now rather use lurk.

While the one was upon wing, the other stood lurching upon the ground, and flew away with the fish. L'ESTRANGE.

To LURCH. v.a. [lurcor, Latin.]

1. To devour; to swallow greedily.

Too far off from great cities may hinder business; or too near lurcheth all provisions, and maketh every thing dear.

BACON'S ESSAYS.

2. To defeat; to disappoint. A word now used only in burlesque. [from the game lurch.]

He waxed like a sea;
And, in the brunt of seventeen battles since,

He lurcht all swords o' th' garland.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

*God never designed the use of them to be continual; by putting such an emptiness in them, as should so quickly fail and lurch
the expectation.* SOUTH'S SERMONS.

This is a sure rule, that will never deceive or lurch the sincere communicant.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

3. To steal privily; to filch; to pilfer.

LU' STRING. n.s. [from lustre.] A shining silk; commonly pronounced lutestring.

LY' RICK. n.s. A poet who writes songs to the harp.

The greatest conqueror in this nation, after the manner of the old Grecian lyrics, did not only compose the words of his divine odes, but set them to musick himself.

ADDISON.

M

Has, in English, one unvaried sound, by compression of the lips; as, mine, tame, camp: it is never mute.

MACARO'ON. n.s. [macarone, Italian.]

1. A coarse, rude, low fellow; whence macaronick poetry, in which the language is purposely corrupted.

*Like a big wife, at sight of lothed meat,
Ready to travail; so I sigh and sweat,
To hear this macaroon talk on in vain.*

DONNE.

2. [Macaron, French, from μάκαρ.] A kind of sweet biscuit, made of flower, almonds, eggs, and sugar.

MACHI'NE. n.s. [machina, Latin; machine, French. This word is pronounced masheen.]

1. Any complicated piece of workmanship.<sup>154</sup>

We are led to conceive this great machine of the world to have been once in a state of greater simplicity, as to conceive a watch to have been once in its first materials.

BURNET.

*In a watch's fine machine,
The added movements which declare
How full the moon, how old the year,
Derive their secondary pow'r
From that which simply points the hour.*

PRIOR.

2. An engine.

*In the hollow side,
Selected numbers of their soldiers hide;
With inward arms the dire machine they load,
And iron bowels stuff the dark abode.*

DRYDEN.

3. Supernatural agency in poems.

The marvellous fable includes whatever is supernatural, and especially the machines of the gods. POPE.

MACHI'NERY. n.s. [from machine.]

MAGAZI'NE. n.s. [magazine, French, from the Arabick machsan, a treasure.]

1. A storehouse, commonly an arsenal or armoury, or repository of provisions.

If it should appear fit to bestow shipping in those harbours, it shall be very needful that there be a magazine of all necessary provisions and munitions.

RALEIGH'S ESSAYS.

Plain heroick magnitude of mind; Their armories and magazines contemns.

MILTON'S AGONISTES.

Some o'er the publick magazines preside, And some are sent new forage to provide.

DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

Useful arms in magazines we place, All rang'd in order, and disposed with grace. POPE.

His head was so well stored a magazine, that nothing could be proposed which he was not master of. LOCKE.

2. Of late this word has signified a miscellaneous pamphlet, from a periodical miscellany named the Gentleman's Magazine, by Edward Cave.<sup>155</sup>

MA'GICK. n.s. [magia, Latin.]

1. The art of putting in action the power of spirits: it was supposed that both good and bad spirits were subject to magick; yet magick was in general held unlawful; sorcery; enchantment.

She once being looft, The noble ruin of her magick, Antony, Claps on his sea-wing.

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

What charm, what magick, can over-rule the force of all these motives. ROGERS.

2. The secret operations of natural powers.

The writers of natural magick do attribute much to the virtues that come from the parts of living creatures, as if they did infuse some immaterial virtue into the part severed. BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

MA'GNET. n.s. [magnes, Latin.] The lodestone; the stone that attracts iron.

Two magnets, heav'n and earth, allure to bliss,

The larger loadstone that, the nearer this.

DRYDEN.

and hoisted up the mainsail to the wind,
and made toward shore.*

BIBLE ACTS, XXVII.

MA'INSHEET. n.s. [main and sheet.] The sheet or sail of the mainmast.

*Strike, strike the top-sail; let the mainsheet fly,
And furl your sails.* DRYDEN.

MA'INYARD. n.s. [main and yard.] The yard of the mainmast.

With sharp hooks they took hold of the tackling which held the mainyard to the mast, then rowing they cut the tackling, and brought the mainyard by the board.

ARBUTHNOT.

MA'INTOP. n.s. [main and top.] The top of the mainmast.

*From their maintop joyful news they hear
Of ships, which by their mould bring new supplies.* DRYDEN.

*Dictys could the maintop-mast bestride,
And down the ropes with active vigour slide.* ADDISON.

MA'KEBATE. n.s. [make and debate.] Breeder of quarrels.

Love in her passions, like a right makebate, whispered to both sides arguments of quarrel. SIDNEY.

Outrageous party-writers are like a couple of makebates, who inflame small quarrels by a thousand stories. SWIFT.

MALECONTE'NT, MALE-CONTENTED. adj. [male and content.] Discontented; dissatisfied.

*Brother Clarence, how like you our choice,
That you stand pensive, as half malecontent.* SHAKESPEARE.

*Poor Clarence! Is it for a wife
That thou art malecontent? I will provide thee.* SHAKESPEARE.

The king, for the better securing his state against mutinous and malecontented

subjects, who might have their refuge in Scotland, sent a solemn ambassage unto James III. to conclude a peace.

BACON'S HENRY VII.

They cannot signalize themselves as malecontents, without breaking through all the softer virtues.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER.

The usual way in despotick governments is to confine the malecontent to some castle.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER.

MALEFA'CTOR. n.s. [male and facio, Latin.] An offender against law; a criminal; a guilty person.

Some monstrous malefactor.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

*Fear his word,
As much as malefactors do your sword.* ROSCOMMON.

It is a sad thing when men shall repair to the ministry, not for preferment but refuge; like malefactors flying to the altar, only to save their lives. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

*If their barking dog disturb her ease,
Th' unmanner'd malefactor is arraign'd.* DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

The malefactor goat was laid On Bacchus' altar, and his forfeit paid. DRYDEN.

MALVERSA'TION. n.s. [French.] Bad shifts; mean artifices; wicked and fraudulent tricks.

MAM, MAMMA. n.s. [mamma, Latin: this word is said to be found for the compellation of mother in all languages; and is therefore supposed to be the first syllables that a child pronounces.] The fond word for mother.

*Poor Cupid sobbing scarce could speak;
Indeed, mamma, I did not know ye:
Alas! how easy my mistake?*

I took you for your likeness Cloe.

PRIOR.

Little masters and misses are great impediments to servants; the remedy is to bribe them, that they may not tell tales to papa and mamma.

SWIFT'S RULES TO SERVANTS.

MA'NAGEMENT. n.s. [menagement, French.]

1. Conduct; administration.

Mark with what management their tribes divide;

Some stick to you, and some to t'other side. DRYDEN.

An ill argument introduced with deference, will procure more credit than the profoundest science with a rough, insolent, and noisy management.

LOCKE ON EDUCATION.

The wrong management of the earl of Godolphin was the only cause of the union. SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

2. Practice; transaction; dealing.

He had great managements with ecclesiasticks in the view of being advanced to the pontificate. ADDISON ON ITALY.

MA'NAGER. n.s. [from manage.]

A skilful manager of the rabble, so long as they have but ears to hear, needs never enquire whether they have any understanding. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

The manager opens his sluice every night, and distributes the water into the town.

ADDISON.

An artful manager, that crept between His friend and shame, and was a kind of screen. POPE.

2. A man of frugality; a good husband.

A prince of great aspiring thoughts: in the main, a manager of his treasure, and yet bountiful, from his own motion, wherever he discerns merit.

TEMPLE'S MISCELLANY.

The most severe censor cannot but be pleased with the prodigality of Ovid's wit; though he could have wished, that the master of it had been a better manager.

DRYDEN.

MA'NAGERY. n.s. [menagerie, French.]

1. Conduct; direction; administration.

They who most exactly describe that battle, give so ill an account of any conduct or discretion in the managery of that affair, that posterity would receive little benefit in the most particular relation of it.

CLARENDON, B. VIII.

2. Husbandry; frugality.

The court of Rome has, in other instances, so well attested its good managery, that it is not credible crowns are conferred gratis.

DECAY OF PIETY.

3. Manner of using.

No expert general will bring a company of raw, untrained men into the field, but will, by little bloodless skirmishes, instruct them in the manner of the fight, and teach them the ready managery of their weapons.

DECAY OF PIETY.

To MA'NCIPATE. v.a. [mancipo, Latin.] To enslave; to bind; to tie.

Although the regular part of nature is seldom varied, yet the meteors, which are in themselves more unstable, and less mancipated to stated motions, are oftentimes employed to various ends.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

MANCIPA'TION. n.s. [from mancipate.] Slavery; involuntary obligation.

MA'NGO. n.s. [mangostan, Fr.] A fruit of the isle of Java, brought to Europe pickled.

manner of outward advantages.*
ATTERBURY.

5. Mien; cast of the look.

Air and manner are often more expressive than words. CLARISSA.

Some men have a native dignity in their manner, which will procure them more regard by a look, than others can obtain by the most imperious commands.

CLARISSA.

6. Peculiar way.<sup>156</sup>

If I melt into melancholy while I write, I shall be taken in the manner; and I sit by one too tender to these impressions.

DONNE'S LETTERS.

It can hardly be imagined how great a difference was in the humour, disposition, and manner, of the army under Essex, and the other under Waller.

CLARENDON, B. VIII.

Some few touches of your lordship, which I have endeavoured to express after your manner, have made whole poems of mine to pass with approbation.

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

As man is known by his company, so a man's company may be known by his manner of expressing himself. SWIFT.

7. Way; sort.

The temptations of prosperity insinuate themselves after a gentle, but very powerful, manner. ATTERBURY.

8. Character of the mind.

His princes are as much distinguished by their manners as by their dominions; and even those among them, whose characters seem wholly made up of courage, differ from one another as to the particular kinds. ADDISON.

9. Manners in the plural. General way of life; morals; habits.

*The kinds of musick have most operation upon manners: as, to make them warlike;
to make them soft and effeminate.*

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 114.

Every fool carries more or less in his face the signature of his manners, though more legible in some than others.

L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

*We bring our manners to the blest abodes,
And think what pleases us must please the gods.* DRYDEN.

10. [In the plural.] Ceremonious behaviour; studied civility.

Our griefs and not our manners reason now. SHAKESPEARE.

*Ungracious wretch,
Fit for the mountains and the barbarous caves,*

Where manners ne'er were preach'd.

SHAKESPEARE.

*Dear Kate, you and I cannot be confined within the weak list of a country's fashion:
we are the makers of manners, Kate.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

Good manners bound her to invite The stranger dame to be her guest that night. DRYDEN.

None but the careless and the confident would rush rudely into the presence of a great man: and shall we, in our applications to the great God, take that to be religion, which the common reason of mankind will not allow to be manners?

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

*Your passion bends
Its force against your nearest friends;
Which manners, decency, and pride,
Have taught you from the world to hide.*

SWIFT.

MA'NUAL. n.s. A small book, such as may be carried in the hand.

CLERGY.

MESH. n.s. [maesche, Dutch; mache, old French: it were therefore better written, as it is commonly pronounced, mash.] The interstice of a net; the space between the threads of a net.

The drovers hang square nets athwart the tide, thorough which the shoal of pilchard passing, leave many behind entangled in the meashes.

CAREW'S SURVEY OF CORNWALL.

Such a hare is madness the youth, to skip o'er the meshes of good counsel the cripple.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF
VENICE.

*He spreads his subtle nets from sight,
With twinkling glasses to betray
The larks that in the meshes light.*

DRYDEN.

With all their mouths the nerves the spirits drink,

Which through the cells of the fine strainers sink:

*These all the channel'd fibres ev'ry way,
For motion and sensation, still convey:
The greatest portion of th' arterial blood,
By the close structure of the parts
withstood,*

Whose narrow meshes stop the grosser flood. BLACKMORE.

ME'SSAGE. n.s. [message, Fr.] An errand; any thing committed to another to be told to a third.

*She doth display
The gate with pearls and rubies richly
dight,*

*Through which her words so wise do make
their way,*

To bear the message of her spright.

SPENSER, SONNET 81.

*May one, that is a herald and a prince,
Do a fair message to his kingly ears!*

SHAKESPEARE.

*She is fair, and, fairer than that word,
Of wond'rous virtues; sometimes from her
eyes*

I did receive fair speechless messages.

SHAKESPEARE.

Gently hast thou told Thy message, which might else in telling wound,

And in performing end us.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. XI.

*Let the minister be low, his interest inconsiderable, the word will suffer for his sake;
the message will still find reception
according to the dignity of the messenger.*

SOUTH.

*The welcome message made, was soon
receiv'd;*

*'Twas to be wish'd and hop'd, but scarce
believ'd.* DRYDEN.

ME'TAPHOR. n.s. [metaphore, Fr. μετάφορα.] The application of a word to an use to which, in its original import, it cannot be put: as, he bridles his anger; he deadens the sound; the spring awakes the flowers. A metaphor is a simile comprized in a word; the spring putting in action the powers of vegetation, which were torpid in the winter, as the powers of a sleeping animal are excited by awaking him.

The work of tragedy is on the passions, and in a dialogue; both of them abhor strong metaphors, in which the epopœa delights.

DRYDEN'S DEDICATION TO VIRGIL'S ÆNEIS.

METEORO'LOGIST. n.s. [from meteorology.] A man skilled in meteors, or studious of them.

the realm to the mint, in making all clipt, minished, or impaired coins of silver, not to be current in payments.*

BACON'S HENRY VII.

MI'NISTRY. n.s. [ministerium, Lat.] Office; service. This word is now contracted to ministry, but used by Milton as four syllables.

They that will have their chamber filled with a good scent, make some odoriferous water be blown about it by their servants mouths that are dextrous in that ministry. DIGBY.

This temple to frequent

With ministeries due, and solemn rites.

MILTON, B. XII.

MI'NNOCK. n.s. Of this word I know not the precise meaning.<sup>158</sup> It is not unlikely that minnock and minx are originally the same word.

*An ass's nole I fixed on his head;
Anon his Thisbe must be answered,
And forth my minnock comes.*

SHAKESPEARE.

To MI'NORATE. v.a. [from minor, Lat.] To lessen; to diminish. A word not yet admitted into the language.

This it doth not only by the advantageous assistance of a tube, but by shewing in what degrees distance minorates the object.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

MI'NSTER. n.s. [minstere, Saxon.] A monastery; an ecclesiastical fraternity; a cathedral church. The word is yet retained at York and Lichfield.

MI'NUM. n.s.

1. [With printers.] A small sort of printing letter.

2. [With musicians.] A note of slow time, two of which make a semibrief, as two crotchets make a minum; two quavers a crotchet, and two semi-quavers a quaver. Bailey.

Oh, he's the courageous captain of compliments; he fights as you sing pricksongs, keeps time, distance, and proportion; rests his minum, one, two, and the third in your bosom.

SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO AND JULIET.

MI'NUTE. n.s. [minutum, Latin.]

1. The sixtieth part of an hour.

*This man so complete,
Who was enroll'd 'mongst wonders, and

Through air his momentary journey made.* DRYDEN.

Onions, garlick, pepper, salt and vinegar, taken in great quantities, excite a momentary heat and fever. ARBUTHNOT.

MO'NASTERY. n.s. [monastere, Fr. monasterium, Lat.] House of religious retirement; convent. It is usually pronounced, and often written, monastery.

*Then courts of kings were held in high
renown;
There, virgins honourable vows receiv'd,
But chaste as maids in monasteries liv'd.*
DRYDEN.

In a monastery your devotions cannot carry you so far toward the next world, as to make this lose the sight of you. POPE.

MO'NEYSKRIVENER. n.s. [money and scrivener.] One who raises money for others.

Suppose a young unexperienced man in the hands of moneyscriveners; such fellows are like your wire-drawing mills, if they get hold of a man's finger, they will pull in his whole body at last.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

MO'NITOR. n.s. [Latin.] One who warns of faults, or informs of duty; one who gives useful hints. It is used of an upper scholar in a school commissioned by the master to look to the boys in his absence.

You need not be a monitor to the king; his learning is eminent: be but his scholar, and you are safe. BACON.

It was the privilege of Adam innocent to have these notions also firm and untainted, to carry his monitor in his bosom, his law in his heart, and to have such a conscience as might be its own casuist.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

*We can but divine who it is that speaks;
whether Persius himself, or his friend and monitor, or a third person.* DRYDEN.

The pains that come from the necessities of nature, are monitors to us to beware of greater mischiefs. LOCKE.

MO'NKERY. n.s. [from monk.] The monastick life.

Neither do I meddle with their evangelical perfection of vows, nor the dangerous servitude of their rash and impotent votaries, nor the inconveniences of their monkery.

HALL.

MO'NSIEUR. n.s. [French.] A term of reproach for a Frenchman.

*A Frenchman his companion;
An eminent monsieur, that, it seems, much loves
A Gallian girl.*

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

MONTE'TH. n.s. [from the name of the inventor.] A vessel in which glasses are washed.

1. The state of corrupting, or losing the vital qualities; gangrene.

It appeareth in the gangrene, or mortifi- cation of flesh, either by opiates, or intense colds.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY NO. 333.

*My griefs ferment and rage,
Nor less than wounds immedicable,
Rankle and fester, and gangrene,
To black mortification.*

MILTON'S AGONISTES, L. 617.

2. Destruction of active qualities.

Inquire what gives impediment to union or restitution, which is called mortification; as when quicksilver is mortified with turpentine.

BACON'S PHYSICAL REMAINS.

3. The act of subduing the body by hardships and macerations.

A diet of some fish is more rich and alkalescent than that of flesh, and therefore very improper for such as practise mortification.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

4. Humiliation; subjection of the passions.

The mortification of our lusts has something in it that is troublesome, yet nothing that is unreasonable. TILLOTSON.

5. Vexation; trouble.

It is one of the most vexatious mortifications of a studious man, to have his thoughts disordered by a tedious visit.

L'ESTRANGE.

We had the mortification to lose the fight of Munich, Augsburg, and Ratisbon.

ADDISON ON ITALY.

MO'TTO. n.s. [motto, Italian.] A sentence added to a device, or prefixed to any thing written.

It may be said to be the motto of human nature, rather to suffer than to die.

L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

We ought to be meek-spirited, till we are assured of the honesty of our ancestors; for covetousness and circumvention make no good motto for a coat. COLLIER.

It was the motto of a bishop eminent for his piety and good works in king Charles the second's reign, Inservi Deo & lætare, Serve God and be cheerful.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER.

MOUNT. n.s. [mont, French; mons, Latin.]

1. A mountain; a hill.

Jacob offered sacrifice upon the mount.

BIBLE GENESIS, XXXI. 54.

*Behold yon mountain's hoary height,
Made higher with new mounts of snow.*

DRYDEN.

2. An artificial hill raised in a garden, or other place.

He might see what mounts they had in short time cast, and what a number there was of brave and warlike soldiers.

KNOLLES'S HISTORY OF THE TURKS.

3. A publick treasure; a bank. Now obsolete.

These examples confirmed me in a resolution to spend my time wholly in writing; and to put forth that poor talent God hath given me, not to particular exchanges, but to banks or mounts of perpetuity, which will not break. BACON.

MOUNTAINE'ER. n.s. [from mountain.]

1. An inhabitant of the mountains.

A few mountaineers may escape, enough to continue human race; and yet illiterate rusticks, as mountaineers always are.

BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

*Amiternian troops, of mighty fame,
And mountaineers, that from Severus came.* DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

2. A savage; a free booter; a rustick.

moyles; a beast which will fare hardly, live very long, draw indifferently well, carry great burthens, and hath also a pace swift and easy enough.* CAREW.

'Twould tempt a moyle to fury. MAY.

MU'CHWHAT. adv. [much and what.] Nearly.

The motion being conveyed from the brain of man to the fancy of another, it is there received; and the same kind of strings being moved, and muchwhat after the same manner as in the first imaginant.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA,
C. 24.

The bigness of her body and bill, as likewise the form of them, is muchwhat as swallows.

MORE'S ANTIDOTE AGAINST ATHEISM.

If we will disbelieve every thing, because we cannot certainly know all things, we shall do muchwhat as wisely as he who would not use his legs because he had no wings to fly. LOCKE.

Unless he can prove cœlibatum a man or a woman, this Latin will be muchwhat the same with a solecism. ATTERBURY.

MU'CKENDER. n.s. [mouchoir, French; mocadero, Spanish; muccinium, low Latin.] A handkerchief.

11. Physics; the science which teaches the qualities of things.

*Nature and nature's laws lay hid in night,
God said, let Newton be, and all was light.*

POPE.

NA'VELGALL. n.s. Navelgall is a bruise on the top of the chine of the back, behind the saddle, right against the navel, occasioned either by the saddle being split behind, or the stuffing being wanting, or by the crupper buckle sitting down in that place, or some hard weight or knobs lying directly behind the saddle.

NA'UGHTINESS. n.s. [from naughty.] Wickedness; badness. Slight wickedness or parvescuity, as of children.

No remembrance of naughtiness delights but mine own; and methinks the accusing his traps might in some manner excuse my fault, which certainly I loth to do.

SIDNEY, B. II.

NEAF. n.s. [nefi, Islandick.] A fist. It is retained in Scotland; and in the plural neaves.

Give me thy neaf, Monsieur Mustardseed.
SHAKESPEARE.

NEB. n.s. [nebbe, Saxon.]

1. Nose; beak; mouth. Retained in the north.

*How she holds up the neb! the bill to him,
And arms her with the boldness of a wife.*

SHAKESPEARE.

Take a glass with a belly and a long neb.
BACON.

2. [In Scotland.] The bill of a bird. See
NIB.

NE'BULA. n.s. [Lat.] It is applied to appearances, like a cloud in the human body; as also to films upon the eyes.

NE'CKBEEF. n.s. [neck and beef.]
The coarse flesh of the neck of cattle, sold to the poor at a very cheap rate.

They'll sell (as cheap as neckbeef) for counters at cards. SWIFT.

NE'CKCLOATH. n.s. [neck and cloath.] That which men wear on their neck.

*Will she with huswife's hand provide thy meat,
And ev'ry sunday morn thy neckcloath plait?* GAY.

NE'CKERCHIEF, NECK-ATEE. n.s. A gorget; handkerchief for a woman's neck.

To NEESE. v.n. [nyse, Danish; niesen, Dutch.] To sneeze; to discharge flatulencies by the nose. Retained in Scotland.

He went up and stretched himself upon him; and the child neesed seven times, and opened his eyes. BIBLE 2 KINGS, IV. 35.

By his neesings a light doth shine, and his eyes are like the eye-lids of the morning. BIBLE JOB, XLI. 18.

NE'POTISM. n.s. [nepotisme, French; nepos, Latin.] Fondness for nephews.

To this humour of nepotism Rome owes its present splendor; for it would have been impossible to have furnished out so many glorious palaces with such a profusion of pictures and statues, had not the riches of the people fallen into different families.

ADDISON ON ITALY.

NET. n.s. [nati, Gothick; net, Saxon.] A texture woven with large interstices or meshes, used commonly as a snare for animals.

*Poor bird! thoud'st never fear the net, nor lime,
The pitfall nor the gin.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

He made nets of chequer-work for the chapiters, upon the top of the pillars.

BIBLE 1 KINGS, VII. 17.

Impatience intangles us like the fluttering of a bird in a net, but cannot at all ease our trouble. TAYLOR'S HOLY LIVING.

*The vegetative tribes,
Wrapt in a filmy net, and clad with leaves.* THOMSON.<sup>165</sup>

NE'TWORK. n.s. [net and work.] Any thing reticulated or decussated, at equal distances, with interstices between the intersections.

*Nor any skill'd in workmanship
emboss'd;*

Nor any skill'd in loops of fing'ring fine;

*Might in their diverse cunning ever dare,
With this so curious network to compare.* SPENSER.

A large cavity in the sinciput was filled with ribbons, lace, and embroidery, wrought together in a curious piece of network.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

NEW-YEAR'S-GIFT. n.s. [new, year, and gift.] Present made on the first day of the year.

If I be served such a trick, I'll have my brains taken out and buttered, and give them to a dog for a new-year's-gift.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

When he sat on the throne distributing new-year's-gifts, he had his altar of incense by him, that before they received gifts they might cast a little incense into the fire; which all good christians refused to do.

STILLINGFLEET.

NIB. n.s. [ned, Saxon, the face; nebbe, Dutch, the bill.]

1. The bill or beck of a bird. See NEB.
2. The point of any thing, generally of a pen.

A tree called the bejuco, which twines about other trees, with its end hanging downwards, travellers cut the nib off it, and presently a spout of water runs out from it as clear as crystal. DERHAM.

NICE. adj. [nese, Saxon, soft.]

1. Accurate in judgment to minute exactness; superfluously exact. It is often used to express a culpable delicacy.

Such a man was Argalus, as hardly the nicest eye can find a spot in. SIDNEY.

*He that stands upon a slipp'ry place,
Makes nice of no vile hold to stay him up.* SHAKESPEARE'S KING JOHN.

*Nor be so nice in taste myself to know,
If what I swallow be a thrush or no.* DRYDEN'S PERSIUS.

Thus critics, of less judgment than caprice,

*Curious, not knowing, not exact, but nice,
Form short ideas, and offend in arts,
As most in manners, by a love to parts.*

POPE ON CRITICISM.

Our author, happy in a judge so nice, Produc'd his play, and begg'd the knight's advice. POPE.

2. Delicate; scrupulously and minutely cautious.

*The letter was not nice, but full of charge
Of dear import.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO AND JULIET.

*Dear love! continue nice and chaste;
For if you yield, you do me wrong;
Let duller wits to love's end haste,
I have enough to woo thee long.* DONNE.

*Of honour men at first like women nice,
Raise maiden scruples at unpractis'd vice.*

EARL HALLIFAX.

Having been compiled by Gratian, in an ignorant age, we ought not to be too nice in examining it. BAKER.

3. Fastidious; squeamish.

*God hath here
Varied his bounty so with new delights,
As may compare with heaven; and to taste,*

Think not I shall be nice.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

4. Easily injured; delicate.

With how much ease is a young muse betray'd?

How nice the reputation of the maid?

ROSCOMMON.

5. Formed with minute exactness.

*Indulge me but in love, my other passions
Shall rise and fall by virtue's nicest rules.*

ADDISON'S CATO.

6. Requiring scrupulous exactness.

Supposing an injury done, it is a nice point to proportion the reparation to the degree of the indignity. L'ESTRANGE.

My progress in making this nice and troublesome experiment, I have set down more at large. NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

7. Refined.

*A nice and subtile happiness I see Thou to thyself proposest, in the choice
Of thy associates, Adam; and wilt taste
No pleasure, tho' in pleasure solitary.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

8. Having lucky hits. This signification is not in use.

*When my hours
Were nice and lucky, men did ransom lives
Of me for jests.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND
CLEOPATRA.

NICHE. n.s. [French.] A hollow in which a statue may be placed.

Niches, containing figures of white stone or marble, should not be coloured in their concavity too black. WOTTON.

*They not from temples, nor from gods
refrain,
But the poor lares from the niches seize,
If they be little images that please.*

DRYDEN.

*On the south a long majestic race
Of Ægypt's priests, the gilded niches grace.*

POPE.

The heirs to titles and large estates are well enough qualified to read pamphlets against religion and high-flying; whereby they fill their niches, and carry themselves through the world with that dignity which best becomes a senator and a squire.

SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

NICKNA'ME. n.s. [nom de nique, French.] A name given in scoff or contempt; a term of derision; an opprobrious or contemptuous appellation.

The time was when men were had in price for learning; now letters only make men vile. He is upbraidingly called a poet, as if it were a contemptible nickname.

BEN JONSON.

My mortal enemy hath not only falsely surmised me to be a feigned person, giving me nicknames, but also hath offered large sums of money to corrupt the princes with whom I have been retained.

BACON'S HENRY VII.

So long as her tongue was at liberty, there was not a word to be got from her, but the same nickname in derision.

L'ESTRANGE.

NIDGET. n.s. [corrupted from nithing or niding. The opprobrious term with which the man was anciently branded who refused to come to the royal standard in times of exigency.] A coward; a dastard.

There was one true English word of greater force than them all, now out of all use; it signifieth no more than abject, baseminded, false-hearted, coward, or nidget.

CAMDEN.

NIDO'ROUS. adj. [nidoreux, from nidor.] Resembling the smell or taste of roasted fat.

Incense and nidorous smells, such as of sacrifices, were thought to intoxicate the brain, and to dispose men to devotion; which they may do by a kind of contristation of the spirits, and partly also by heating and exalting them. BACON.

The signs of the functions of the stomach being depraved, are eructations either with the taste of the aliment, acid, nidorose, or foetid, resembling the taste of rotten eggs.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

NI'DOROSITY. n.s. [from nidorous.] Eructation with the taste of undigested roast-meat.

The cure of this nidorosity is, by vomiting and purging.

FLOYER ON THE HUMOURS.

NIGHTBRA'WLER. n.s. [night and brawler.] One who raises disturbances in the night.

NI'NEPENCE. n.s. [nine and pence.] A silver coin valued at nine-pence.

*Three silver pennies, and a nine-pence
bent.* GAY'S PASTORALS.

NI'NNYHAMMER. n.s. [from ninny.] A simpleton.

Another vents her passion in scurrilous terms; an old ninny-hammer, a dotard, a nincompoop, is the best language she can afford me.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN, NO. 109.

Have you no more manners than to rail at Hocus, that has saved that clod-pated,

numskull'd, ninny-hammer of yours from ruin, and all his family.

ARBUTHNOT'S JOHN BULL.

NI'ZY. n.s. A dunce; a simpleton. A low word.

NOMENCLA'TOR. n.s. [Lat. nomenclateur, Fr.] One who calls things or persons by their proper names.

There were a set of men in old Rome called nomenclators; that is, men who could call every man by his name.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN, NO. 107.

Are envy, pride, avarice, and ambition, such ill nomenclators that they cannot furnish appellations for their owners?

SWIFT.

NO'MINATIVE. [in grammar, nominatif, Fr.] The case that primarily designates the name of any thing, and is called right, in opposition to the other cases called oblique.

NONCONFO'RMIST. n.s. [non and conformist.] One who refuses to join in the established worship.

On his death-bed he declared himself a non-conformist, and had a fanatic preacher to be his spiritual guide.

SWIFT.

NONJU'RING. adj. [non and juro, Latin.] Belonging to those who will not swear allegiance to the Hanoverian family.

This objection was offered me by a very pious, learned, and worthy gentleman of the nonjuring party. SWIFT.

NONNA'TURALS. n.s. [non naturalia.] Physicians reckon these to be six, viz. air, meat and drink, sleep and watching, motion and rest, retention and excretion, and the passions of the mind.

The six nonnaturals are such as neither naturally constitutive, nor merely destructive, do preserve or destroy according unto circumstance.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

NO'NPLUS. n.s. [non and plus, Latin.] Puzzle; inability to say or do more. A low word.

Let it seem never so strange and impossible, the nonplus of my reason will yield a fairer opportunity to my faith. SOUTH.

One or two rules, on which their conclusions depend, in most men have governed all their thoughts: take these from them and they are at a loss, and their understanding is perfectly at a nonplus.

LOCKE.

Such an artist did not begin the matter at a venture, and when put to a nonplus, pause and hesitate which way he should proceed; but he had first in his comprehensive intel- lect a compleat idea of the whole organical body. BENTLEY.

NO'NSENSE. n.s. [non and sense.]

1. Unmeaning or ungrammatical language.

*'Till understood, all tales,
Like nonsense, are not true nor false.*

HUDIBRAS, P. III.

*Many copies dispersed gathering new faults,
I saw more nonsense than I could have crammed into it.* DRYDEN.

This nonsense got into all the following editions by a mistake of the stage editors.

POPE'S NOTES ON SHAKESPEARE.

2. Trifles; things of no importance.<sup>166</sup>

*What's the world to him,
'Tis nonsense all.* THOMSON.

NOO'NING. n.s. [from noon.]

Repose at noon.

NO'STRUM. n.s. [Latin.] A medicine not yet made publick, but remaining in some single hand.

Very extraordinary, and one of his nostrums, let it be writ upon his monument, Hic jacet auctor hujus argumenti; for no body ever used it before.

STILLINGFLEET.

What drop or nostrum can this plague remove? POPE.

NO'TARY. n.s. [notaire, Fr. from notarius, Latin.] An officer whose business it is to take notes of any thing which may concern the publick.

There is a declaration made to have that very book, and no other set abroad, wherein their present authorised notaries do write those things fully and only, which being written and there read, are by their own open testimony acknowledged to be their own. HOOKER.

*Go with me to a notary, seal me there
Your bond.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF
VENICE.

*One of those with him, being a notary,
made an entry of this act.*

BACON'S NEW ATLANTIS.

*So I but your recorder am in this,
Or mouth and speaker of the universe,
A ministerial notary; for 'tis Not I, but you and fame that make this verse.* DONNE.

They have in each province, intendants and notaries. TEMPLE.

NOTORI'ETY. n.s. [notorieté, Fr. from notorious.] Publick knowledge; publick exposure.

We see what a multitude of pagan testimonies may be produced for all those remarkable passages: and indeed of several, that more than answer your expectation, as they were not subjects in their own nature so exposed to publick notoriety.

ADDISON ON THE CHRISTIAN RELIGION.

NOTO'RIOUS. adj. [notorius, Lat. notoire, Fr.] Publickly known; evident to the world; apparent; not hidden. It is commonly used of things known to their disadvantage; whence by those who do not know the true signification of the word, an atrocious crime is called a notorious crime, whether publick or secret.

What need you make such ado in cloaking a matter too notorious. WHITGIFTE.

*The goodness of your intercepted packets
You writ to the pope against the king; your goodness,*

Since you provoke me, shall be most notorious.

SHAKESPEARE.

*I shall have law in Ephesus,
To your notorious shame.*

SHAKESPEARE'S COMEDY OF ERRORS.

In the time of king Edward III. the impediments of the conquest of Ireland are notorious. DAVIES.

What notorious vice is there that doth not blemish a man's reputation?

TILLOTSON.

The inhabitants of Naples have been always very notorious for leading a life of laziness and pleasure, which arises partly out of the plenty of their country, and partly out of the temper of their climate.

ADDISON ON ITALY.

The bishops have procured some small advancement of rents; although it be notorious that they do not receive the third penny of the real value.

SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

NOTWITHSTA'NDING. conj.

[This word, though in conformity to other writers called here a conjunction, is properly a participial adjective, as it is compounded of not and withstanding, and answers exactly to the Latin non obstante; it is most properly and analogically used in the ablative case absolute with a noun; as, he is rich notwithstanding his loss; it is not so proper to say, he is rich notwithstanding he has lost much; yet this mode of writing is too frequent, Addison has used it: but when a sentence follows, it is more grammatical to insert that; as, he is rich notwithstanding that he has lost much. When notwithstanding is used absolutely, the expression is elliptical, this or that being understood, as in the following passages of Hooker.]

1. Without hindrance or obstruction from.

Those on whom Christ bestowed miraculous cures, were so transported that their gratitude made them, notwithstanding his prohibition, proclaim the wonders he had done for them. DECAY OF PIETY.

2. Although. This use is not proper.

A person languishing under an ill habit of body, may lose several ounces of blood, notwithstanding it will weaken him for a time, in order to put a new ferment into the remaining mass, and draw into it fresh supplies. ADDISON.

3. Nevertheless; however.

They which honour the law as an image of the wisdom of God himself, are notwithstanding to know that the same had an end in Christ. HOOKER, B. IV.

The knowledge is small, which we have on earth concerning things that are done in heaven: notwithstanding this much we know even of saints in heaven, that they pray. HOOKER, B. V. S. 23.

*He hath a tear for pity, and a hand
Open as day, for melting charity:
Yet notwithstanding, being incens'd, he's flint;*

As humourous as winter.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

NO'VEL. n.s. [nouvelle, French.]

1. A small tale, generally of love.

Nothing of a foreign nature; like the trifling novels which Ariosto inserted in his poems. DRYDEN.

*Her mangl'd fame in barb'rous pastime lost,
The coxcomb's novel and the drunkard's toast.* PRIOR.

2. A law annexed to the code.

By the civil law, no one was to be ordained a presbyter till he was thirty-five years of age: though by a later novel it was sufficient, if he was above thirty.

AYLIFFE'S PARERAGON.

NO'VELIST. n.s. [from novel.]

1. Innovator; assertor of novelty.

Telesius, who hath renewed the philosophy of Parmenides, is the best of novelists.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 69.

Aristotle rose,

*Who nature's secrets to the world did teach,
Yet that great soul our novelists impeach.*

DENHAM.

The fooleries of some affected novelist have discredited new discoveries.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

2. A writer of novels.

NOVE'RCAL. adj. [novercalis, from noverca, Latin.] Having the manner of a stepmother; beseming a stepmother.

When the whole tribe of birds by incubation, produce their young, it is a wonderful deviation, that some few families should do it in a more novercal way.

DERHAM.

NOUN. n.s. [nom, French; nomen, Latin.] The name of any thing in grammar.

A noun is the name of a thing, whether substance, mode or relation, which in speech is used to signify the same when there is occasion to affirm or deny any thing about it, or to express any relation it has in discourse to any other thing.

CLARKE'S LATIN GRAMMAR.

Thou hast men about thee, that usually talk of a noun and a verb, and such abominable words as no christian ear can endure to hear. SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

The boy, who scarce has paid his entrance down,

To his proud pedant, or declin'd a noun.

DRYDEN.

NOWADAYS. adv. [This word, though common and used by the best writers, is perhaps barbarous.] In the present age.

Not so great as it was wont of yore, It's nowadays, ne half so straight and sore. HUBBERD.

Reason and love keep little company together nowadays.

SHAKESPEARE'S MIDSUMMER'S NIGHT
DREAM.

It was a vestal and a virgin fire, and differed as much from that which passes by this name nowadays, as the vital heat from the burning of a fever.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

Such are those principles, which by reason of the bold cavils of perverse and unreasonable men, we are nowadays put to defend.

TILLOTSON, SERMON 1.

*What men of spirit nowadays,
Come to give sober judgment of new plays.*

GARRICK'S EPISTLES.

NO'WISE. n.s. [no and wise: this is commonly spoken and written by ignorant barbarians, noways.] Not in any manner or degree.

A power of natural gravitation, without contact or impulse, can in nowise be attributed to mere matter. BENTLEY.

NUGA'CITY. n.s. [nugacis, Latin.] Futility; trifling talk or behaviour.

NULL. n.s. Something of no power, or no meaning. Marks in ciphered writing which stand for nothing, and are inserted only to puzzle, are called nulls.

If part of the people be somewhat in the election, you cannot make them nulls or ciphers in the privation or translation.

BACON'S WAR WITH SPAIN.

NULLIBI'ETY. n.s. [from nullibi, Latin.] The state of being nowhere.

NU'NCHION. n.s. A piece of victuals eaten between meals.

*Laying by their swords and trunchions,
They took their breakfasts or their nunchions.* HUDIBRAS.

NUT. n.s. [hnut, Saxon; noot, Dutch; noix, Fr.]

1. The fruit of certain trees; it consists of a kernel covered by a hard shell. If the shell and kernel are in the center of a pulpy fruit, they then make not a nut but a stone.

*One chanc'd to find a nut
In the end of which a hole was cut,
Which lay upon a hazel-root,
There scatter'd by a squirrel;
Which out the kernel gotten had;
When quoth this Fay, dear queen be glad,
Let Oberon be ne'er so mad,
I'll set you safe from peril.*

DRAYTON'S NYMPHID.

Nuts are hard of digestion, yet possess some good medicinal qualities.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

2. A small body with teeth, which correspond with the teeth of wheels.

The force of this faculty may be more conveniently used by the multiplication of several wheels, together with nuts belonging unto each, that are used for the roasting of meat.

WILKIN'S MATHEMATICAL MAGICK.

Clocks and jacks, though the screws and teeth of the wheels and nuts be never so smooth, yet if they be not oiled, will hardly move. RAY ON THE CREATION.

O

Has in English a long sound; as, drone, groan, stone, alone, cloke, broke, coal, droll; or short, got, knot, shot, prong, long. It is usually denoted long by a servile a subjoined; as moan, or by e at the end of the syllable; as, bone: when these vowels are not appended, it is generally short, except before ll; as, droll, scroll, and even then sometimes short; as, loll.

1. O is used as an interjection of wishing or exclamation.

O that we, who have resisted all the designs of his love, would now try to defeat that of his anger! DECAY OF PIETY.

O! were he present, that his eyes and hands Might see, and urge, the death which he commands. DRYDEN.

2. O is used with no great elegance by Shakespeare for a circle or oval.

*Can this cockpit hold
The vasty field of France? or may we cram
Within this wooden O, the very casks
That did affright the air at Agincourt?*
SHAKESPEARE.

OAF. n.s. [This word is variously written; auff, ofe, and oph; it seems a corruption of ouph, a demon or fairy, in German alf, from which elf: and means properly the same with changeling; a foolish child left by malevolent ouphs or fairies, in the place of one more witty, which they steal away.]

1. A changeling; a foolish child left by the fairies.

*These, when a child haps to be got,
Which after proves an idiot,
When folk perceives it thriveth not,
The fault therein to smother:
Some silly doating brainless calf,
That understands things by the half,
Says that the fairy left this oaf,
And took away the other.*

DRAYTON'S NYMPHID.

2. A dolt; a blockhead; an idiot.

OATH. n.s. [aith, Gothick; að, Saxon. The distance between the noun oath, and the verb swear, is very observable, as it may shew that our oldest dialect is formed from different languages.] An affirmation, negation, or promise, corroborated by the attestation of the Divine Being.

Read over Julia's heart, thy first best love,

For whose dear sake thou then did'st rend thy faith

Into a thousand oaths; and all those oaths Descended into perjury to love me.

SHAKESPEARE.

He that strikes the first stroke, I'll run him up to the hilts as I am a soldier.

— An oath of mickle might; and fury shall abate. SHAKESPEARE.

We have consultations, which inventions shall be published, which not: and take an oath of secrecy for the concealing of those which we think fit to keep secret.

BACON.

Those called to any office of trust, are bound by an oath to the faithful discharge of it: but an oath is an appeal to God, and therefore can have no influence, except upon those who believe that he is.

SWIFT.

OATS. n.s. [aten, Saxon.] A grain, which in England is generally given to horses, but in Scotland supports the people.

It is of the grass leaved tribe; the flowers have no petals, and are disposed in a loose panicle: the grain is eatable. The meal makes tolerable good bread. Miller.

The oats have eaten the horses.

SHAKESPEARE.

It is bare mechanism, no otherwise produced than the turning of a wild oatbeard, by the insinuation of the particles of moisture. LOCKE.

For your lean cattle, fodder them with barley straw first, and the oat straw last.

MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

*His horse's allowance of oats and beans,
was greater than the journey required.*

SWIFT.

OBEQUITA'TION. n.s. [from obequito, Latin.] The act of riding about.

OBERRA'TION. n.s. [from oberro, Latin.] The act of wandering about.

OBLI'GEE. n.s. [from oblige.] The person bound by a legal or written contract.

OBLI'GER. n.s. He who binds by contract.

OBMUTE'SCENCE. n.s. [from obmutesco, Latin.] Loss of speech.

A vehement fear often produceth obmutescence. BROWN.

OBNO'XIOUS. n.s. [obnoxius, Latin.]

1. Subject.

I propound a character of justice in a middle form, between the speculative discourses of philosophers, and the writings of lawyers, which are tied and obnoxious to their particular laws.

BACON'S HOLY WAR.

2. Liable to punishment.

*All are obnoxious, and this faulty land,
Like fainting Hester, does before you stand,
Watching your sceptre.* WALLER.

We know ourselves obnoxious to God's severe justice, and that he is a God of mercy and hateth sin; and therefore that we might not have the least suspicion of his unwilling-ness to forgive, he hath sent his only begotten son into the world, by his dismal sufferings and cursed death, to expiate our offences. CALAMY'S SERMONS.

Thy name, O Varus, if the kinder pow'rs Preserve our plains, and shield the

Mantuan tow'rs,

Obnoxious by Cremona's neighb'ring crime,

The wings of swans, and stronger pinion'd rhyme

Shall raise aloft. DRYDEN.

3. <sup>167</sup> Liable; exposed.

Long hostility had made their friendship weak in itself, and more obnoxious to jeal-ousies and distrusts. HAYWARD.

*But what will not ambition and revenge
Descend to? who aspires, must down as low
As high he soar'd; obnoxious first or last,
To basest things.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

*Beasts lie down,
To dews obnoxious on the grassy floor.*
DRYDEN.

OBSE'SSION. n.s. [obsessio, Latin.]

1. The act of besieging.
2. The first attack of Satan, antecedent to possession.

OBSTETRICA'TION. n.s. [from obstetricor, Lat.] The office of a midwife.

OBSTIPA'TION. n.s. [from obstipo, Lat.] The act of stopping up any passage.

OBSTUPEFA'CTION. n.s. [obstupefacio, Latin.] The act of inducing stupidity, or interruption of the mental powers.

OBTENEBRA'TION. n.s. [ob and tenebræ, Latin.] Darkness; the state of being darkened; the act of darkening; cloudiness.

In every megrim or vertigo, there is an obtenebration joined with a semblance of turning round.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

OBTURA'TION. n.s. [from obturatus, Lat.] The act of stopping up any thing with something smeared over it.

OBVE'NTION. n.s. [obvenio, Latin.] Something happening not constantly and regularly, but uncertainly; incidental advantage.

When the country grows more rich and better inhabited, the tythes and other obventions, will also be more augmented and better valued.

SPENSER ON IRELAND.

OCCU'LT. adj. [occulte, Fr. occultus, Lat.] Secret; hidden; unknown; undiscoverable.

*If his occult guilt
Do not itself unkennel in one speech,
It is a damned ghost that we have seen.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

An artist will play a lesson on an instrument without minding a stroke; and our tongues will run divisions in a tune not missing a note, even when our thoughts are totally engaged elsewhere: which effects are to be attributed to some secret act of the soul, which to us is utterly occult, and without the ken of our intellects.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA, C. IV.

These instincts we call occult qualities; which is all one with saying that we do not understand how they work.

L'ESTRANGE.

These are manifest qualities, and their causes only are occult. And the Aristotelians gave the name of occult qualities not to manifest qualities, but to such qualities only as they supposed to lie hid in bodies, and to be the unknown causes of manifest effects. NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

O'CULIST. n.s. [from oculus, Latin.] One who professes to cure distempers of the eyes.

If there be a speck in the eye, we take them off; but he were a strange oculist who would pull out the eye. BACON.

I am no oculist, and if I should go to help one eye and put out the other, we should have but an untoward business of it.

L'ESTRANGE.

ODONTA'LGICK. adj. ['οδών and 'άλγος.] Pertaining to the tooth-ach.

O'DORATE. adj. [odoratus, Latin.] Scented; having a strong scent, whether foetid or fragrant.

Smelling is with a communication of the breath, or vapour of the object odorate.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

O'DOROUS. adj. [odorus, Lat.]
Fragrant; perfumed; sweet of scent.

Such fragrant flowers do give most odorous smell,

But her sweet odour did them all excel.

SPENSER.

Their private roofs on od'rous timber borne,

Such as might palaces for kings adorn.

WALLER.

We smell, because parts of the odorous body touch the nerves of our nostrils.

CHEYNE'S PHILOSOPHICAL PRINCIPLES.

OE. This combination of vowels does not properly belong to our language, nor is ever found but in words derived from the Greek, and not yet wholly conformed to our manner of writing: oe has in such words the sound of E.

OFF. adv. [af, Dutch.]

1. Of this adverb the chief use is to conjoin it with verbs: as, to come off; to fly off; to take off; which are found under the verbs.

2. It is generally opposed to on: as, to lay on; to take off. In this case it signifies, disunion; separation; breach of continuity.

Since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my cap than my heart, I will practice the insinuating nod, and be off to them most counterfitly.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

Where are you, Sir John? come, off with your boots. SHAKESPEARE.

See

*The lurking gold upon the fatal tree;
Then rend it off.* DRYDEN, ÆNEID. VI.

A piece of silver coined for a shilling, that has half the silver clipped off, is no more a shilling than a piece of wood, which was once a sealed yard, is still a yard, when one half of it is broke off. LOCKE.

3. It signifies distance.

*West of this forest, scarcely off a mile,
In goodly form comes on the enemy.*

SHAKESPEARE.

About thirty paces off were placed harquebusiers. KNOLLES.

4. In painting or statuary it signifies projection or relief.

'Tis a good piece;

This comes off well and excellent.

SHAKESPEARE.

5. It signifies evanescence; absence or departure.

Competitions intermit, and go off and on as it happens, upon this or that occasion.

L'ESTRANGE.

6. It signifies any kind of disappointment; defeat; interruption; adverse division: as, the affair is off; the match is off.

7. In favour.<sup>168</sup>

The questions no way touch upon puritanism, either off or on. SANDERSON.

8. From; not toward.

Philoclea, whose delight of hearing and seeing was before a stay from interrupting her, gave herself to be seen unto her with such a lightening of beauty upon Zelmane, that neither she could look on, nor would look off. SIDNEY, B. II.

9. Off hand; not studied.

Several starts of fancy off hand look well enough. L'ESTRANGE.

OFFE'NDER. n.s. [from offend.]

1. A criminal; one who has committed a crime; a transgressor; a guilty person.

All that watch for iniquity are cut off, that make a man an offender for a word.

BIBLE ISAIAH XXIX. 21.

*So like a fly the poor offender dies;
But like the wasp, the rich escapes and flies.* DENHAM.

*How shall I lose the sin, yet keep the sense,
And love th' offender, yet detest th'
offence?* POPE.

The conscience of the offender shall be sharper than an avenger's sword.

CLARISSA.

2. One who has done an injury.

*All vengeance comes too short,
Which can pursue th' offender.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

OFFE'NDRESS. n.s. [from offender.] A woman that offends.

Virginity murders itself, and should be buried in highways out of all sanctified limit, as a desperate offendress against nature.

SHAKESPEARE'S ALL'S WELL THAT ENDS WELL.

O'FFING. n.s. [from off.] The act of steering to a distance from the land.

To O'GLE. v.a. [oogh, an eye, Dutch.] To view with side glances, as in fondness; or with a design not to be heeded.

*From their high scaffold with a trumpet
cheek,
And ogling all their audience, then they speak.* DRYDEN.

If the female tongue will be in motion, why should it not be set to go right? Could they talk of the different aspects and conjunctions of the planets, they need not be at the pains to comment upon oglings and clandestine marriages.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN, NO. 155.

Whom is he ogling yonder? himself in his looking-glass. MARTINUS SCRIBLERIUS.

O'GLIO. n.s. [from olla, Spanish.] A dish made by mingling different kinds of meat; a medley; a hotchpotch.

*These general motives of the common good,
I will not so much as once offer up to your lordship, though they have still the upper end; yet, like great oglio's, they rather make a shew than provoke appetite.*

SUCKLING.

Where is there such an oglio or medley of various opinions in the world again, as those men entertain in their service, without any scruple as to the diversity of their sects and opinions?

KING CHARLES.

He that keeps an open house, should consider that there are oglio's of guests, as well as of dishes, and that the liberty of a common table is as good as a tacit invitation to all sorts of intruders.

L'ESTRANGE.

OH. interject. An exclamation denoting pain, sorrow, or surprise.

He,

*Like a full acorn'd boar, a churning on,
Cry'd, oh! and mounted.*

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

Oh me! all the horse have got over the river, what shall we do?

WALTON'S ANGLER.

*My eyes confess it,
My every action speaks my heart aloud;
But oh, the madness of my high attempt Speaks louder yet!*

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRIAR.

OI'LMAN. n.s. [oil and man.] One who trades in oils and pickles.

OI'LSHOP. n.s. [oil and shop.] A shop where oils and pickles are sold.

O'LDEN. adj. [from old; perhaps the Saxon plural.] Ancient. This word is not now in use.

Blood hath been shed ere now, i'th' olden time,

Ere human statute purg'd the gen'ral weal. SHAKESPEARE.

O'LIO. n.s. [olla, Span.] A mixture; a medly. See OGLIO.

Ben Johnson, in his Sejanus and Catiline, has given us this olio of a play, this unnatural mixture of comedy and tragedy.

DRYDEN ON DRAMATIC POETRY.

I am in a very chaos to think I should so forget myself.

But I have such an olio of affairs, I know not what to do.

CONGREVE'S WAY OF THE WORLD.

O'LITORY. n.s. [olitor, Latin.]

Belonging to the kitchen garden.

Gather your olitory seeds.

EVELYN'S KALENDAR.

O'MELET. n.s. [omelette, Fr.] A kind of pancake made with eggs.

OMNIFA'RIOUS. adj. [omnifa- riam, Lat.] Of all varieties or kinds.

These particles could never of themselves, by omnifarious kinds of motion, whether fortuitous or mechanical, have fallen into this visible system.

BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

*But if thou omnifarious drinks wou'dst
brew;*

Besides the orchard, ev'ry hedge and bush Affords assistance. PHILIPS.

O'NSET. n.s. [on and set.]

1. Attack; storm; assault; first brunt.

As well the soldier dieth, which standeth still, as he that gives the bravest onset.

SIDNEY, B. II.

*All breathless, weary, faint,
Him spying, with fresh onset he assail'd,
And kindling new his courage, seeming queint,*

Struck him so hugely, that through great constraint

He made him stoop.

FAIRY QUEEN, B. II.

The shout

Of battle now began, and rushing sound Of onset.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. VI.

Sometimes it gains a point; and presently it finds itself baffled and beaten off; yet still it renews the onset, attacks the difficulty afresh; plants this reasoning and that argument, like so many intellectual batteries, till at length it forces a way into the obstinate enclosed truth. SOUTH.

Without men and provisions it is impos- ible to secure conquests that are made in the first onsets of an invasion.

ADDISON.

Observe

*The first impetuous onsets of his grief;
Use every artifice to keep him stedfast.*

PHILIPS.

2. Something added by way of ornamental appendage. This sense, says
Nicholson, is still retained in Northumberland, where onset means a tuft.

*I will with deeds requite thy gentleness;
And for an onset, Titus, to advance
Thy name and honourable family,
Lavinia will I make my empress.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TITUS ANDRONICUS.

ONTO'LOGY. n.s. [ὄντα and λόγος.] The science of the affections of being in general; metaphysics.

The modes, accidents and relations that belong to various beings, are copiously treated of in metaphysics, or more properly ontology. WATTS'S LOGICK.

OPENEY'ED. adj. [open and eye.]
Vigilant; watchful.

While you here do snoring lie,

Openeyed conspiracy

His time doth take.

SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

OPERA'TOR. n.s. [opérateur, Fr. from operate.] One that performs any act of the hand; one who produces any effect.

An imaginary operator opening the first with a great deal of nicety, upon a cursory view appeared like the head of another.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 275.

To administer this dose, there cannot be fewer than fifty thousand operators, allowing one operator to every thirty.
SWIFT.

O'PIATE. n.s. A medicine that causes sleep.

They chose atheism as an opiate, to still those frightening apprehensions of hell, by inducing a dulness and lethargy of mind, rather than to make use of that native and salutary medicine, a hearty repentance.

BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

OPINA'TOR. n.s. [opinor, Lat.] One who holds an opinion.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

OPINIA'TRETY, OPINI-ATRY. n.s. [opiniatreté, French.] Obstinacy; inflexibility; determination of mind; stubbornness. This word, though it has been tried in different forms, is not yet received, nor is it wanted.

Lest popular opiniatry should arise, we will deliver the chief opinions.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. VII.

The one sets the thoughts upon wit and false colours, and not upon truth; the other teaches fallacy, wrangling and opiniatry.

LOCKE'S EDUCATION.

So much as we ourselves consider and comprehend of truth and reason, so much we possess of real and true knowledge. The floating of other men's opinions in our brains, make us not one jot the more knowing, though they happen to be true: what in them was science, is in us but opiniatrey. LOCKE.

I can pass by opiniatry and the busy meddling of those who thrust themselves into every thing. WOODWARD'S LETTERS.

I was extremely concerned at his opiniatrey in leaving me; but he shall not get rid so. POPE.

OPI'NIONATIVE. adj. [from opinion.] Fond of preconceived notions; stubborn.

Striking at the root of pedantry and opinionative assurance, would be no hindrance to the world's improvement.

GLANVILLE.

One would rather chuse a reader without art, than one ill instructed with learning, but opinionative and without judgment.

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

OPI'NIONIST. n.s. [opinioniste, Fr. from opinion.] One fond of his own notions.

Every conceited opinionist sets up an infalible chair in his own brain.

GLANVILLE TO ALBIUS.

O'PTICK. adj. [ὀπτική; optique, Fr.]

1. Visual; producing vision; subservient to vision.

May not the harmony and discord of colours arise from the proportions of the vibrations propagated through the fibres of the optic nerves into the brain, as the harmony and discord of sounds arise from the proportions of the vibrations of the air? NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

2. Relating to the science of vision.

Where our master handleth the contractions of pillars, we have an optic rule, that the higher they are the less should be always their diminution aloft, because the eye itself doth naturally contract all objects, according to the distance.

WOTTON'S ARCHITECTURE.

O'PTICK. n.s. An instrument of sight; an organ of sight.

Can any thing escape the perspicacity of those eyes which were before light, and in whose opticks there is no opacity.

BROWN.

Our corporeal eyes we find Dazzle the opticks of our mind.

DENHAM.

*You may neglect, or quench, or hate the
flame,*

Whose smoke too long obscur'd your rising name,

And quickly cold indiff'rence will ensue,

When you love's joys thro' honour's optick view. PRIOR.

*Why has not man a microscopick eye?
For this plain reason, man is not a fly.*

Say what the use, were finer opticks giv'n, T'inspect a mite, not comprehend the heav'n. POPE.

OPTI'MITY. n.s. [from optimus.]
The state of being best.

O'RANGEWIFE. n.s. [orange and wife.] A woman who sells oranges.

*You wear out a good wholesome forenoon
in hearing a cause between an orangewife
and a fosset seller.* SHAKESPEARE.

O'RATOIR. n.s. [orateur,
Fr. orator, Lat.]

1. A publick speaker; a man of eloquence.

*Poor queen and son! your labour is but lost;
For Warwick is a subtle orator.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

*As when of old some orator renown'd,
In Athens or free Rome, where eloquence Flourish'd, since mute! to some great cause
address'd,*

*Stood in himself collected; while each part,
Motion, each act, won audience.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

The constant design of both these orators in all their speeches, was to drive some one particular point. SWIFT.

I have listened to an orator of this species, without being able to understand one single sentence. SWIFT.

*Both orators so much renown'd,
In their own depths of eloquence were drown'd.* DRYDEN.

2. A petitioner. This sense is used in addresses to chancery.

ORBITY. n.s. [orbis, Latin.] Loss, or want of parents or children.

O'RCHESTRE. n.s. [French. ὄρχήστρα.] The place where the musicians are set at a publick show.

O'RDEAL. n.s. [ordal, Sax. ordalium, low Lat. ordalie, Fr.] A trial by fire or water, by which the person accused appealed to heaven, by walking blindfold over hot bars of iron; or being thrown, I suppose, into the water; whence the vulgar trial of witches.

Their ordeal laws they used in doubtful cases, when clear proofs wanted.

HAKEWILL ON PROVIDENCE.

In the time of king John, the purgation per ignem et aquam, or the trial by ordeal continued; but it ended with this king.

HALE.

O'RDINARY. n.s.

1. Established judge of ecclesiastical causes.

The evil will

*Of all their parishioners they had
constrain'd,*

Who to the ordinary of them complain'd.

HUBBERD.

If fault be in these things any where justly found, law hath refered the whole disposition and redress thereof to the ordinary of the place. HOOKER, B. V. S. 12.

2. Settled establishment.

Spain had no other wars save those which were grown into an ordinary; now they have coupled therewith the extraordinary of the Valtoline and Palatinate. BACON.

3. Actual and constant office.

Villiers had an intimation of the king's pleasure to be his cup-bearer at large; and the summer following he was admitted in ordinary.

WOTTON.

4. Regular price of a meal.

*Our courteous Antony,
Being barber'd ten times o'er, goes to the feast;*

*And for his ordinary pays his heart
For what his eyes eat only.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

5. A place of eating established at a certain price.

They reckon all their errors for accomplish- ments; and all the odd words they have picked up in a coffee-house, or a gaming ordinary, are produced as flowers of style.

SWIFT.

ORGANIZA'TION. n.s. [from organize.] Construction in which the parts are so disposed as to be subservient to each other.

Every man's senses differ as much from others in their figure, colour, site, and infinite other peculiarities in the organization, as any one man's can from itself, through divers accidental variations.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA,
C. XXVI.

That being then one plant, which has such an organization of parts in one coherent body, partaking of one common life, it continues to be the same plant, though that life be communicated to new particles of matter, in a like continued organization.

LOCKE.

ORGA'SM. n.s. [orgasme, Fr. ὄργασμος.] Sudden vehemence.

By means of the curious lodgment and inoculation of the auditory nerves, the orgasms of the spirits should be allayed, and perturbations of the mind quieted.

DERHAM'S PHYSICO-THEOLOGY.

ORNI'SCOPIST. n.s. [ὄρνις and ἔσκοπα.] One who examines the flight of birds in order to foretel futurity.

ORNI'THOLOGY. n.s. [ὄρνις and λόγος.] A discourse on birds.

O'RRERY. n.s. An instrument which by many complicated movements represents the revolutions of the heavenly bodies. It was first made by Mr. Rowley, a mathematician born at Litchfield, and so named from his patron the earl of Orrery: by one or other of this family almost every art has been encouraged or improved.

ORTS. n.s. seldom with a singular. [This word is derived by Skinner from ort, German, the fourth part of any thing; by Mr. Lye more reasonably from orda, Irish, a fragment. In Anglo Saxon, ord signifies the beginning; whence in some provinces odds and ends; for ords and ends signify remnants, scattered pieces, refuse; from ord thus used probably came ort.] Refuse; things left or thrown away.

He must be taught, and train'd, and bid go forth;

*A barren-spirited fellow, one that feeds
On abject orts and imitations.*

SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

*The fractions of her faith, orts of her love,
The fragments, scraps, the bits, and greasy
reliques*

Of her o'er eaten faith, are bound to Diomed. SHAKESPEARE.

Much good do't you then;

*Brave plush and velvet men,
Can feed on orts and safe in your stage-cloths,*

*Dare quit, upon your oaths,
The stagers, and the stage-wrights too.*

BEN JONSON.

ORTHO'GRAPHY. n.s. [ὀρθος and γράφω; orthographie, Fr.]

1. The part of grammar which teaches how words should be spelled.

This would render languages much more easy to be learned, as to reading and pronouncing, and especially as to the writing them, which now as they stand we find to be troublesome, and it is no small part of grammar which treats of orthography and right pronunciation.

HOLDER.

2. The art or practice of spelling.

In London they clip their words after one manner about the court, another in the city, and a third in the suburbs; all which reduced to writing, would entirely confound orthography. SWIFT.

3. The elevation of a building delineated.

You have the orthography or upright of this ground-plat, and the explanation thereof with a scale of feet and inches.

MOXON'S MECHANICAL EXERCISES.

O'RTOLAN. n.s. [French.] A small bird accounted very delicious.

Nor ortolans nor godwits. COWLEY.

OSCI'TANCY. n.s. [oscitantia, Lat.]

1. The act of yawning.

2. Unusual sleepiness; carelessness.

If persons of so circumspect a piety, have been thus overtaken, what security can there be for our wreckless oscitancy?

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE.

It might proceed from the oscitancy of transcribers, who, to dispatch their work the sooner, used to write all numbers in cyphers.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 470.

OTACOU'STICK. n.s. [ὠτα and ἀκούω; otacoustique, Fr.] An instrument to facilitate hearing.

In a hare, which is very quick of hearing, it is supplied with a bony tube; which, as a natural otacoustick, is so directed backward, as to receive the smallest and most distant sound that comes behind her.

GREW'S COSMOLOGIA SACRA, B. I.

O'THERGATES. adv. [other and gate, for way.] In another manner.

If sir Toby had not been in drink, he would have tickled you othergates than he did.

SHAKESPEARE'S TWELFTH NIGHT.

O'THERGUISE. adj. [other and guise. This is often mistaken, and sometimes written otherguess.] Of another kind.

O'THERWHERE. adv. [other and where.] In other places.

As Jews they had access to the temple and synagogues, but as Christians they were of necessity forced otherwhere to assemble themselves. HOOKER, B. V. S. 11.

His godlike acts, and his temptations fierce, And former sufferings, otherwhere are found. MILTON.

O'THERWHILE. adv. [other and while.] At other times.

O'THERWISE. adv. [other and wise.]

1. In an indifferent manner.

They only plead, that whatsoever God revealeth, as necessary for all Christian men to do and believe, the same we ought to embrace, whether we have received it by writing or otherwise, which no man denieth. HOOKER, B. I.

The whole church hath not tied the parts unto one and the same thing, they being therein left each to their own choice, may either do as others do, or else otherwise, without any breach of duty at all.

HOOKER, B. IV. S. 13.

In these good things, what all others should practise, we should scarce know to practise otherwise. SPRAT.

Thy father was a worthy prince, And merited, alas! a better fate; But heaven thought otherwise.

ADDISON'S CATO.

2. By other causes.

Sir John Norris failed in the attempts of Lisborn, and returned with the loss, by sickness and otherwise, of eight thousand men. RALEIGH.

3. In other respects.

It is said truly, that the best men otherwise, are not always the best in regard of society. HOOKER, B. I.

Men seldom consider God any otherwise than in relation to themselves, and therefore want some extraordinary benefits to excite their attention and engage their love. ROGER.

To O'VER-ACT. v.a. [over and act.] To act more than enough.

*You over-act, when you should underdo:
A little call yourself again, and think.*

BEN JONSON.

Princes courts may over-act their reverence, and make themselves laughed at for their foolishness and extravagant relative worship. STILLINGFLEET.

Good men often blemish the reputation of their piety, by over-acting some things in religion; by an indiscreet zeal about things wherein religion is not concerned.

TILLOTSON.

To O'VER-BALANCE. v.a. To weigh down; to preponderate.

Not doubting but by the weight of reason I should counterpoise the over-balancings of any factions. KING CHARLES.

*The hundred thousand pounds per annum, wherein we over-balance them in trade,
must be paid us in money.* LOCKE.

When these important considerations are set before a rational being, acknowledging the truth of every article, should a bare single possibility be of weight enough to over-balance them.

ROGERS, SERMON XII.

To O'VER-BUY. v.a. [over and buy.] To buy too dear.

*He, when want requires, is only wise,
Who slights not foreign aids, nor over-buys;*

*But on our native strength, in time of need,
relies.* DRYDEN.

To O'VER-DRIVE. v.a. [over and drive.] To drive too hard, or beyond strength.

The flocks and herds with young, if men should over-drive one day, all will die.

BIBLE GENESIS, XXXIII. 13.

To OVER-EMPTY. v.a. [over and empty.] To make too empty.

The women would be loth to come behind the fashion in new-fangledness of the manner, if not in costliness of the matter,

which might over-empty their husbands purses. CAREW.

O'VER-FORWARDNESS. n.s. [over and forwardness.] Too great quickness; too great readiness.

By an over-forwardness in courts to give countenance to frivolous exceptions, though they make nothing to the true merit of the cause, it often happens that causes are not determined according to their merits.

HALE.

O'VER-GREAT. adj. [over and great.] Too great.

Though putting the mind unprepared upon an unusual stress ought to be avoided; yet this must not run it, by an over-great shyness of difficulties, into a lazy sauntering about obvious things. LOCKE.

O'VER-HEAD. adv. [over and head.] Aloft; in the zenith; above; in the cieling.<sup>169</sup>

Over-head the moon Sits arbitress, and nearer to the earth Wheels her pale course.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. I.

The four stars over-head, represent the four children. ADDISON.

To OVERLA'BOUR. v.a. [over and labour.] To take too much pains on any thing; to harrass with toil.

*She without noise will over-see
His children and his family;
And order all things till he come,
Sweaty and over-labour'd home.*

DRYDEN.

OVERLA'SHINGLY. n.s. [over and lash.] With exaggeration. A mean word, now obsolete.

Although I be far from their opinion who write too overlashingly, that the Arabian tongue is in use in two third parts of the inhabited world, yet I find that it extendeth where the religion of Mahomet is professed. BREREWOOD.

OVERMU'CH. adj. [over and much.] Too much; more than enough.

It was the custom of those former ages, in their over-much gratitude, to advance the first authors of any useful discovery among the number of their gods. WILKINS.

An over-much use of salt, besides that it occasions thirst and over-much drinking, has other ill effects.

LOCKE.

OVERMU'CH. adv. In too great a degree.

The fault which we find in them is, that they over-much abridge the church of her power in these things. Whereupon they re-charge us, as if in these things we gave the church a liberty which hath no limits or bounds. HOOKER.

Perhaps

I also erred, in over-much admiring What seem'd in thee so perfect, that I thought

No evil durst attempt thee.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. IX.

*Deject not then so over-much thyself,
Who hast of sorrow thy full load besides.*

MILTON.

OVERMU'CH. n.s. More than enough.

*By attributing over-much to things
Less excellent, as thou thyself perceiv'st.*

MILTON.

With respect to the blessings the world enjoys, even good men may ascribe over-much to themselves. GREW.

OVERMU'CHNESS. n.s. [from over-much.] Exuberance; superabundance.

There are words that do as much raise a stile, as others can depress it; superlatation and over-muchness amplifies. It may be above faith, but not above a mean.

BEN JONSON.

OVERNI'GHT. n.s. [over and night.] This seems to be used by Shakespeare as a noun, but by Addison more properly, as I have before placed it, as a noun with a preposition.] Night before bed-time.

*If I had given you this at over-night,
She might have been o'erta'en.*

SHAKESPEARE.

Will confesses, that for half his life his head ached every morning with reading men over-night. ADDISON.

To OVERNA'ME. v.a. [over and name.] To name in a series.

Over-name them; and as thou namest them I will describe them.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF VENICE.

To OVERSE'E. v.a. [over and see.]

1. To superintend; to overlook.

And tutors nouriture to oversee.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

*She without noise will oversee
His children and his family.* DRYDEN.

2. To overlook; to pass by unheeded; to omit.

*I who resolve to oversee
No lucky opportunity,
Will go to council to advise
Which way t' encounter, or surprise.*

HUDIBRAS, P. III.

OVERSE'EN. part. [from oversee.] Mistaken; deceived.

A common received error is never utterly overthrown, till such times as we go from signs unto causes, and shew some manifest root or fountain thereof common unto all, whereby it may clearly appear how it hath come to pass that so many have been overseen. HOOKER, B. I. S. 8.

They rather observed what he had done, and suffered for the king and for his country, without farther enquiring what he had omitted to do, or been overseen in doing. CLARENDON.

OVERSE'ER. n.s. [from oversee.]

1. One who overlooks; a superintendent.

There are in the world certain voluntary overseers of all books, whose censure, in this respect, would fall sharp on us.

HOOKER, B. V. S. 31.

Jehiel and Azariah were overseers under Cononiah.

BIBLE 2 CHRONICLES, XXXI. 13.

*To entertain a guest, with what a care
Wou'd he his household ornaments prepare;
Harrass his servants, and as o'erseer stand,
To keep them working with a threat'ning wand.*

Clean all my plate, he cries. DRYDEN.

2. An officer who has the care of the parochial provision for the poor.

The church-wardens and overseers of the poor might find it possible to discharge their duties, whereas now in the greater out-parishes many of the poorer parishioners, through neglect, do perish for want of some heedful eye to overlook them.

GRAUNT'S BILLS OF MORTALITY.

OVERSO'ON. adv. [over and soon.]

Too soon.

The lad may prove well enough, if he oversoon think not too well of himself, and will bear away that he heareth of his elders.

SIDNEY, B. II.

OVERTHWA'RT. adj. [over and thwart.]

1. Opposite; being over against.

We whisper, for fear our overthwart neighbours

Should hear us, and betray us to the government. DRYDEN.

2. Crossing any thing perpendicularly.

3. Perverse; adverse; contradictory.

Two or three acts disposed them to cross and oppose any proposition; and that overthwart humour was discovered to rule in the breasts of many. CLARENDON.

O'VERTURE. n.s. [ouverture, French.]

1. Opening; disclosure; discovery.

I wish

You had only in your silent judgment try'd it,

Without more overture.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

2. Proposal; something offered to consideration.

Mac Murugh moved Henry to invade Ireland, and made an overture unto him for obtaining of the sovereign lordship thereof. DAVIES ON IRELAND.

All these fair overtures, made by men well esteemed for honest dealing, could not take place. HAYWARD.

We with open breast

Stand ready to receive them, if they like Our overture, and turn not back perverse.

MILTON.

The earl of Pembroke, who abhorred the war, promoted all overtures towards accommodation with great importunity.

CLARENDON.

If a convenient supply offers itself to be seized by force or gained by fraud, human nature persuades us to hearken to the inviting overture. ROGERS, SERMON 2.

Suppose five hundred men proposing, debating, and voting, according to their own little or much reason, abundance of indigested and abortive, many pernicious and foolish overtures would arise.

SWIFT.

OVERYEA'RED. adj. [over and year.] Too old.

Among them dwelt

A maid, whose fruit was ripe, not overyeared. FAIRFAX.

OUGHT. verb imperfect. [This word the etymologists make the preterite of owe, but it has often a present signification.]

1. [Preterite of owe.] Owed; was bound to pay; have been indebted.

Apprehending the occasion, I will add a continuance to that happy motion, and besides give you some tribute of the love and duty I long have ought you.

SPELMAN.

*This blood which men by treason sought,
That followed, sir, which to myself I ought.* DRYDEN.

2. To be obliged by duty.

Judges ought to remember, that their office is to interpret law, and not to make or give law. BACON.

Morals criticks ought to show. POPE.

*She acts just as she ought,
But never, never reach'd one generous thought.* POPE.

3. To be fit; to be necessary.

If grammar ought to be taught, it must be to one that can speak the language already. LOCKE.

OUT, in composition, generally signifies something beyond or more than another.

*Out-fawn as much, and out-comply,
And seem as scrupulously just,
To bait the hooks for greater trust.*

HUDIBRAS, P. II. CANT. 3.

To OUTBA' LANCE. v.a. [out and balance.] To over-weigh; to preponderate.

*Let dull Ajax bear away my right,
When all his days outbalance this one night.* DRYDEN.

OU'TERLY. adv. [from outer.]

OU'TMOST. adj. [out and most.] Remotest from the middle.

Chaos retir'd,

As from her outmost works a broken foe. MILTON.

If any man suppose that it is not reflected by the air, but by the outmost superficial parts of the glass, there is still the same difficulty. NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

The generality of men are readier to fetch a reason from the immense distance of the starry heavens, and the outmost walls of the world. BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

OUTPA'RISH. n.s. [out and parish.] Parish not lying within the walls.

In the greater outparishes many of the poorer parishioners, through neglect, do perish for want of some heedful eye to overlook them. GRAUNT'S MORTALITY.

OUTRA'GIOUS. adj. [outrageux, French. It should, I think, be written outrageous; but the custom seems otherwise.]

1. Violent; furious; raging; exorbitant; tumultuous; turbulent.

Under him they committed divers the most outragious villanies, that a base multitude can imagine. SIDNEY.

*As she went her tongue did walk,
In foul reproach and terms of vile
despight,
Provoking him by her outragious talk,
To heap more vengeance on that wretched
wight.* FAIRY QUEEN.

*They view'd the vast immeasurable abyss,
Outragious as a sea, dark, wasteful, wild.* MILTON.

*When he knew his rival freed and gone,
He swells with wrath; he makes outragious
moan:
He frets, he fumes, he stares, he stamps the
ground;
The hollow tow'r with clamours rings around.* DRYDEN.

2. Excessive; passing reason or decency.

My characters of Antony and Cleopatra, though they are favourable to them, have nothing of outragious panegyrick. DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

3. Enormous; atrocious.

*Think not, although in writing I prefer'd
The manner of thy vile outragious crimes,
That therefore I have forg'd.* SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

To OUTSI'T. v.a. [out and sit.] To sit beyond the time of any thing.

He that prolongs his meals and sacrifices his time, as well as his other conveniences,

*to his luxury, how quickly does he outsit
his pleasure?* SOUTH.

To OUTSTA'ND. v.a. [out and stand.]

1. To support; to resist.

English merchants, endeavouring sometimes to out-vie one another in such indulgencies.* ADDISON.

One of these petty sovereigns will be still endeavouring to equal the pomp of greater princes, as well as to out-vie those of his own rank. ADDISON.

OUTWA'LL. n.s. [out and wall.]

1. Outward part of a building.

2. Superficial appearance.

For confirmation that I am much more Than my out-wall, open this purse and take What it contains.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

OYE'S. n.s. [oyez, hear ye, French.] Is the introduction to any proclamation or advertisement given by the publick criers both in England and Scotland. It is thrice repeated.

*Fairies, black, grey, green, and white,
Attend your office and your quality.
Crier hobgoblin make the fairy O yes.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*O yes! if any happy eye
This roving wanton shall descry;
Let the finder surely know
Mine is the wag.* CRASHAW.

P

Is a labial consonant, formed by a slight compression of the anterior part of the lips; as, pull, pelt. It is confounded by the Germans and Welsh with b: it has an uniform sound: it is sometimes mute before t; as, accompt, receipt; but the mute p is in modern orthography commonly omitted.

PACK. n.s. [pack, Dutch.]

1. A large bundle of any thing tied up for carriage.

Themistocles said to the king of Persia, that speech was like cloth of Arras, opened and put abroad, whereby the imagery appears in figures; whereas in thoughts they lie but as in packs. BACON, ESSAYS 28.

*Had sly Ulysses at the sack
Of Troy, brought thee his pedlar's pack.*
CLEAVELAND.

*Our knight did bear no less a pack
Of his own buttocks on his back.*

2. A burden; a load.

PA'RAPHRAS'T. n.s. [paraphraste, Fr. παραφραστής.] A lax interpreter; one who explains in many words.

The fittest for publick audience are such, as following a middle course between the rigor of literal translators and the liberty of paraphrasts, do, with great shortness and plainness, deliver the meaning. HOOKER.

The chaldean paraphrast renders Gerah by Meath. ARBUTHNOT.

TO PARBREAK. v.n. [brecker, Dutch.] To vomit.

PARENTA'TION. n.s. [from parento, Latin.] Something done or said in honour of the dead.

PARE'NTHE'SIS. n.s. [parenthese, Fr. παρά, 'εν and τίθημι.] A sentence so included in another sentence, as that it may be taken out, without injuring the sense of that which incloses it: being commonly marked thus, ( ).

In vain is my person excepted by a parenthesis of words, when so many hands are armed against me with swords.

KING CHARLES.

In his Indian relations, are contained strange and incredible accounts; he is seldom mentioned, without a derogatory parenthesis, in any author.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

*Thou shalt be seen,
Tho' with some short parenthesis between,
High on the throne of wit.* DRYDEN.

Don't suffer every occasional thought to carry you away into a long parenthesis, and thus stretch out your discourse, and divert you from the point in hand.

WATTS'S LOGICK.

PA'RGET. n.s. Plaster laid upon roofs of rooms.

*Gold was the parget, and the cieling bright
Did shine all scaly with great plates of gold;
The floor with jasp and emerald was dight.* SPENSER.

Of English talc, the coarser sort is called plaster or parget; the finer, spaad.

WOODWARD.

PA'RGETER. n.s. [from pargeo.] A plasterer.

PA'RITOR. n.s. [for apparitor.] A beadle; a summoner of the courts of civil law.

You shall be summon'd by an host of paritours; you shall be sentenced in the spiritual court. DRYDEN.

PA'RKER. n.s. [from park.] A park-keeper. Ainsworth.

PA'RLOUR. n.s. [parloir, French; parlatorio, Italian.]

1. A room in monasteries, where the religious meet and converse.
2. A room in houses on the first floor, elegantly furnished for reception or entertainment.

Can we judge it a thing seemly for a man to go about the building of an house to the God of heaven, with no other appearance than if his end were to rear up a kitchen or a parlour for his own use? HOOKER.

*Back again fair Alma led them right,
And soon into a goodly parlour brought.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

It would be infinitely more shameful, in the dress of the kitchen, to receive the entertainments of the parlour. SOUTH.

*Roof and sides were like a parlour made,
A soft recess, and a cool summer shade.*

DRYDEN.

PA'RLOUS. adj. [This might seem to come from parler, Fr. to speak; but Junius derives it, I think, rightly, from perilous, in which sense it answers to the Latin improbus.] Keen; sprightly; waggish.

Midas durst communicate

*To none but to his wife his ears of state;
One must be trusted, and he thought her fit,*

As passing prudent, and a parlous wit.

DRYDEN.

To PARSE. v.a. [from pars, Latin.]

To resolve a sentence into the elements or parts of speech. It is a word only used in grammar schools.

Let him construe the letter into English, and parse it over perfectly.

ASCHAM'S SCHOOLMASTER.

Let scholars reduce the words to their original, to the first case of nouns, or first tense of verbs, and give an account of their formations and changes, their syntax and dependencies, which is called parsing.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

PARTI' CULARLY. v.a. [from particular.]

1. Distinctly; singly; not universally.

Providence, that universally casts its eye over all the creation, is yet pleased more particularly to fasten it upon some.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

2. In an extraordinary degree.

This exact propriety of Virgil, I particularly regarded as a great part of his character.

DRYDEN.

With the flower and the leaf I was so particularly pleased, both for the invention and the moral, that I commend it to the reader. DRYDEN.

PARTY-JU'RY. n.s. [in law.] A jury in some trials half foreigners and half natives.

PA'RTY-MAN. n.s. [party and man.] A factious person; an abettor of a party.

PA'SQUIL, PA'SQUIN, PA'S-QUINADE. n.s. [from pasquino, a statue at Rome, to which they affix any lampoon or paper of satirical observation.] A lampoon.

He never valued any pasquils that were dropped up and down, to think them worthy of his revenge. HOWEL.

The pasquils, lampoons, and libels, we meet with now-a-days, are a sort of playing with the four and twenty letters, without sense, truth, or wit. TATLER, NO. 92.

PA'SSENGER. n.s. [passager, French.]

1. A traveller; one who is upon the road; a wayfarer.

*All the way, the wanton damsel found
New mirth, her passenger to entertain.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

*What hollowing, and what stir is this?
These are my mates that make their wills their law,*

Have some unhappy passenger in chase.

SHAKESPEARE.

The nodding horror of whose shady brows Threats the forlorn and wand'ring passenger. MILTON.

Apelles, when he had finished any work, exposed it to the sight of all passengers, and concealed himself to hear the censure of his faults. DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

2. One who hires in any vehicle the liberty of travelling.

The diligent pilot in a dangerous tempest doth attend the unskilful words of a passenger. SIDNEY.

PA'SSINGBELL. n.s. [passing and bell.] The bell which rings at the hour of departure, to obtain prayers for the passing soul: it is often used for the bell, which rings immediately after death.

*Those loving papers,
Thicken on you now, as pray'rs ascend
To heaven in troops at a good man's passingbell.* DONNE.

A talk of tumult, and a breath

Would serve him as his passingbell to death. DANIEL.

*Before the passingbell begun,
The news through half the town has run.*
SWIFT.

PASTE. n.s. [paste, French.]

1. Any thing mixed up so as to be viscous and tenacious: such as flour and water for bread or pies; or various kinds of earth mingled for the potter.

Except you could bray Christendom in a mortar, and mould it into a new paste, there is no possibility of an holy war.

BACON'S HOLY WAR.

*With particles of heav'nly fire
The God of nature did his soul inspire;
Which wise Prometheus temper'd into paste,
And, mixt with living streams, the godlike
image cast.* DRYDEN.

*When the gods moulded up the paste of
man,
Some of their dough was left upon their hands.* DRYDEN.

*He has the whitest hand that ever you saw,
and raises paste better than any woman.*

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 482.

2. Flour and water boiled together so as to make a cement.

3. Artificial mixture, in imitation of precious stones.

PA'STEBOARD. n.s. [paste and board.] Masses made anciently by pasting one paper on another: now made sometimes by macerating paper and casting it in moulds, sometimes by pounding old cordage, and casting it in forms.

Tintoret made chambers of board and pasteboard, proportioned to his models, with doors and windows, through which he distributed, on his figures, artificial lights.
DRYDEN.

I would not make myself merry even with a piece of pasteboard, that is invested with a publick character. ADDISON.

PA'STRY. n.s. [pastisserie, Fr. from paste.]

1. The act of making pies.

*Let never fresh machines your pastry try,
Unless grandees or magistrates are by,
Then you may put a dwarf into a pye.*
KING.

2. Pies or baked paste.

*Remember
The seed cake, the pastries and the furmenty pot.* TUSSER.

*They call for dates and quinces in the
pastry.* SHAKESPEARE.

*Beasts of chase, or fowls of game,
In pastry built, or from the spit, or boil'd,
Gris amber steam'd.*

MILTON'S PARADISE REGAIN'D.

3. The place where pastry is made.

PAT. adj. [from pas, Dutch, Skinner.]

Fit; convenient; exactly suitable either as to time or place. This is a low word, and should not be used but in burlesque writings.

Pat pat; and here's a marvellous convenient place for our rehearsal.

DREAM.

Now I might do it pat, now he is praying.
SHAKESPEARE.

*They never saw two things so pat,
In all respects, as this and that.*

HUDIBRAS, P. II.

Zuinglius dreamed of a text, which he found very pat to his doctrine of the Eucharist. ATTERBURY.

*He was surely put to't at the end of a verse,
Because he could find no word to come pat
in.* SWIFT.

PATCH. n.s. [pezzo, Italian.]

1. A piece sewed on to cover a hole.

*Patches set upon a little breach,
Discredit more in hiding of the flaw,*

Than did the flaw before it was so patch'd. SHAKESPEARE.

*If the shoe be ript, or patches put;
He's wounded! see the plaister on his foot.*
DRYDEN.

They suffer their minds to appear in a piebald livery of coarse patches and borrowed shreds, such as the common opinion of those they converse with clothe them in.
LOCKE.

2. A piece inserted in mosaick or variegated work.

3. A small spot of black silk put on the face.

*How! providence! and yet a Scottish crew!
Then madam nature wears black patches too.* CLEAVELAND.

*If to every common funeral,
By your eyes martyr'd, such grace were
allow'd,
Your face wou'd wear not patches, but a cloud.* SUCKLING.

They were patched differently, and cast hostile glances upon one another, and their patches were placed in different situations as party-signals to distinguish friends from foes. ADDISON.

This the morning omens seem'd to tell; Thrice from my trembling hand the patch-box fell. POPE.

4. A small particle; a parcel of land.

*We go to gain a little patch of ground,
That hath in it no profit but the name.*
SHAKESPEARE.

5. A paltry fellow. Obsolete.

What a py'd ninny's this? thou scurvy patch! SHAKESPEARE.

PATH. n.s. [pað, Saxon.] Way; road; track. In conversation it is used of a narrow way to be passed on foot; but in solemn language means any passage.

*For darkness, where is the place thereof?
that thou shouldst know the paths to the house thereof.* BIBLE JOB, XXXVIII. 20.

On the glad earth the golden age renew,

And thy great father's path to heav'n pursue. DRYDEN.

*The dewy paths of meadows we will tread,
For crowns and chaplets.*
DRYDEN'S THEOCRITUS.

*There is but one road by which to climb up,
and they have a very severe law against any that enters the town by another path, lest any new one should be worn on the mountain.*

ADDISON'S REMARKS ON ITALY.

PATHE'TICAL, PATHETICK.

[παθητικός; pathetique, Fr.] Affecting the passions; passionate; moving.

*His page that handful of wit;
'Tis a most pathetic neat.*

SHAKESPEARE.

How pathetick is that expostulation of Job, when, for the trial of his patience, he was made to look upon himself in this deplorable condition. SPECTATOR, NO. 571.

Tully considered the dispositions of a sincere and less mercurial nation, by dwelling on the pathetick part. SWIFT.

*While thus pathetick to the prince he spoke,
From the brave youth the streaming passion broke.* POPE.

PA'TRON. n.s. [patron,
Fr. patronus, Latin.]

1. One who countenances, supports or protects. Commonly a wretch who supports with insolence, and is paid with flattery.

I'll plead for you, as for my patron.
SHAKESPEARE.

*Ne'er let me pass in silence Dorset's name;
Ne'er cease to mention the continu'd debt,
Which the great patron only would forget.*
PRIOR.

2. A guardian saint.

*Thou amongst those saints, whom thou do'st see,
Shall be a saint, and thine own nation's friend
And patron.* FAIRY QUEEN, B. I.

St. Michael is mentioned as the patron of the Jews, and is now taken by the Christians, as the protector general of our religion. DRYDEN.

3. Advocate; defender; vindicator.

We are no patrons of those things; the best defence whereof is speedy redress and amendment. HOOKER, B. II. S. 1.

Whether the minds of men have naturally imprinted on them the ideas of extension and number, I leave to those who are the patrons of innate principles. LOCKE.

4. One who has donation of ecclesiastical preferment.

PA'TTEN. n.s. [patin, Fr.] A shoe of wood with an iron ring, worn under the common shoe by women to keep them from the dirt.

Their shoes and pattens are snouted and piked more than a finger long, crooking upwards, which they call crackowes, which were fastened to the knees with chains of gold and silver. CAMDEN'S REMAINS.

*Good housewives
Underneath th' umbrella's oily shed, Safe through the wet on clinking pattens
tread.* GAY.

PAVI'LION. n.s. [pavillon, French.] A tent; a temporary or moveable house.

Flowers being under the trees, the trees were to them a pavillion, and the flowers to the trees a mosaical floor. SIDNEY.

*She did lie
In her pavilion, cloth of gold, of tissue.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*He, only he, heaven's blew pavilion spreads,
And on the ocean's dancing billows treads.*
SANDYS.

It was usual for the enemy, when there was a king in the field, to demand by a trumpet in what part of the camp he resided, that they might avoid firing upon the royal pavilion.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER, NO. 23.

The glowing fury springs, Once more invades the guilty dome, and shrouds

Its bright pavilions in a veil of clouds.

POPE.

PA'YDAY. n.s. [pay and day.] Day on which debts are to be discharged or wages paid.

Labourers pay away all their wages, and live upon trust till next payday.

LOCKE.

PEA'RLEYED. adj. [pearl and eye.] Having a speck in the eye.

PEAT. n.s. [from petit, Fr.] A little fondling; a darling; a dear play thing. It is now commonly called pet.

A pretty peat! it is best put finger in the eye,

An she knew why.

SHAKESPEARE'S TAMING OF THE SHREW.

*A citizen and his wife
Both riding on one horse, upon the way
I overtook; the wench a pretty peat.*

DONNE.

PECCADI'LLO. [Spanish; peccadille, French.] A petty fault; a slight crime; a venial offence.

He means those little vices, which we call follies and the defects of the human understanding, or at most the peccadillos of life, rather than the tragical vices to which men are hurried by their unruly passions.

DRYDEN.

'Tis low ebb with his accusers, when such peccadilos as these are put in to swell the charge. ATTERBURY.

PE'CCANT. adj. [peccant, Fr. peccans, Latin.]

1. Guilty; criminal.

*From them I will not hide
My judgments, how with mankind I proceed;*

As how with peccant angels late they saw.
MILTON.

That such a peccant creature should disapprove and repent of every violation of the rules of just and honest, this right reason could not but infer.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

2. Ill disposed; corrupt; bad; offensive to the body; injurious to health. It is chiefly used in medical writers.

*With laxatives preserve your body sound,
And purge the peccant humours that abound.* DRYDEN.

Such as have the bile peccant or deficient are relieved by bitters, which are a sort of subsidiary gall. ARBUTHNOT.

3. Wrong; bad; deficient; unformal.

Nor is the party cited bound to appear, if the citation be peccant in form or matter.
AYLIFFE'S PARERAGON.

PECU'LATION. n.s. [peculatus, Latin; peculat, Fr.] Robbery of the publick; theft of publick money.

PED. n.s.

1. A small packsaddle. A ped is much shorter than a pannel, and is raised before and behind, and serves for small burdens.

A pannel and wanty, packsaddle and ped.
TUSSER.

2. A basket; a hamper.

A hask is a wicker ped, wherein they use to carry fish. SPENSER.

PEDERE'RO. n.s. [pedrero, Spanish, from piedra, a stone with which they charged it.] A small cannon managed by a swivel. It is frequently written paterero.

PEDE'STRIOUS. adj. [pedestris, Latin.] Not winged; going on foot.

Men conceive they never lie down, and enjoy not the position of rest, ordained unto all pedestrious animals. BROWN.

PEE'PHOLE, PEEPINGHOLE. n.s. [peep and hole.] Hole through which one may look without being discovered.

*By the peepholes in his crest,
Is it not virtually confest,
That there his eyes took distant aim.*

PRIOR.

*The fox spied him through a peepinghole
he had found out to see what news.*

L'ESTRANGE.

PE'LTING. adj. This word in Shakespeare signifies, I know not why, mean; paltry; pitiful.

Could great men thunder, Jove could ne'er be quiet;

*For every pelting petty officer
Would use his heav'n for thunder.*

SHAKESPEARE.

*Fogs falling in the land,
Have every pelting river made so proud,
That they have overborn their continents.*

SHAKESPEARE.

They from sheepcotes and poor pelting villages

Enforce their charity. SHAKESPEARE.

A tenement or pelting farm.

SHAKESPEARE.

PENCE. n.s. The plural of penny; formed from pennies, by a contraction usual in the rapidity of colloquial speech.

The same servant found one of his fellow servants, which owed him an hundred pence, and took him by the throat.

BIBLE MATTHEW.

PENGUIN. n.s. [anser magellanicus, Latin.]

1. A bird. This bird was found with this name, as is supposed, by the first discoverers of America; and penguin signifying in Welsh a white head, and the head of this fowl being white, it has been imagined, that America was peopled from Wales; whence Hudibras:

British Indians nam'd from penguins.
Grew gives another account of the name, deriving it from pinguis, Lat. fat; but is, I believe, mistaken.

The penguin is so called from his extraordinary fatness: for though he be no higher than a large goose, yet he weighs sometimes sixteen pounds: his wings are extreme short and little, altogether unuseful for flight, but by the help whereof he swims very swiftly.

GREW'S MUSÆUM.

2. A fruit.

The penguin is very common in the West Indies, where the juice of its fruit is often put into punch, being of a sharp acid flavour: there is also a wine made of the juice of this fruit, but it will not keep good long. MILLER.

PENITE'NTIARY. n.s. [penitencier, Fr. pœnitentiarius, low Latin.]

1. One who prescribes the rules and measures of penance.

Upon the loss of Urbin, the duke's undoubted right, no penitentiary, though he had enjoined him never so straight penance to expiate his first offence, would have counselled him to have given over pursuit of his right, which he prosperously re-obtained. BACON.

The great penitentiary with his counsellors prescribes the measure of penance.

AYLIFFE'S PARERAGON.

2. A penitent; one who does penance.

A prison restrained John Northampton's liberty, who, for abusing the same in his unruly mayoralty of London, was condemned hither as a perpetual penitentiary. CAREW.

To maintain a painful fight against the law of sin, is the work of the penitentiary.

HAMMOND.

3. The place where penance is enjoined. Ainsworth.

PENKNIFE. n.s. [pen and knife.] A knife used to cut pens.

Some schoolmen, fitter to guide penknives than swords, precisely stand upon it.

BACON.

PE'NNER. n.s. [from pen.]

1. A writer.

2. A pencase. Ainsworth. So it is called in Scotland.

PE'NNY. n.s. plural pence. [penig, Saxon.]

1. A small coin, of which twelve make a shilling: a penny is the radical denomination from which English coin is numbered, the copper halfpence and farthings being only nummerum famuli, a subordinate species of coin.

She sighs and shakes her empty shoes in vain,

No silver penny to reward her pain.

DRYDEN.

*One frugal on his birth-day fears to dine,
Does at a penny's cost in herbs repine.*

DRYDEN.

2. Proverbially. A small sum.

You shall hear

*The legions, now in Gallia, sooner landed
In our not fearing Britain, than have tidings
Of any penny tribute paid.*

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

We will not lend thee a penny.

SHAKESPEARE.

Because there is a latitude of gain in buying and selling, take not the utmost penny that is lawful, for although it be lawful, yet it is not safe. TAYLOR'S LIVING HOLY.

3. Money in general.

*Pepper and Sabean incense take;
And with post-haste thy running markets
make;*

Be sure to turn the penny. DRYDEN.

It may be a contrivance of some printer, who hath a mind to make a penny.

SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

PE'NSION. n.s. [pension, Fr.] An allowance made to any one without an equivalent. In England it is generally understood to mean pay given to a state hireling for treason to his country.

A charity bestowed on the education of her young subjects has more merit than a thousand pensions to those of a higher fortune.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN, NO. 105.

He has liv'd with the great without flattery, and been a friend to men in power without pensions. POPE.

To PE'NSION. v.a. [from the noun.] To support by an arbitrary allowance.

One might expect to see medals of France in the highest perfection, when there is a society pensioned and set apart for the designing of them.

ADDISON ON ANCIENT MEDALS.

The hero William and the martyr Charles, One knighted Blackmore, and one pension'd Quarles. POPE.

PE'NSIONARY. adj. [pensionnaire, French.] Maintained by pensions.

*Scorn his household policies,
His silly plots and pensionary spies.*

DONNE.

They were devoted by pensionary obligations to the olive.

HOWEL'S VOCAL FOREST.

PE'NSIONER. n.s. [from pension.]

1. One who is supported by an allowance paid at the will of another; a dependant.

Prices of things necessary for sustentation, grew excessive to the hurt of pensioners, soldiers, and all hired servants.

CAMDEN.

*Hovering dreams,
The fickle pensioners of Morpheus' train.*

MILTON.

The rector is maintained by the perquisites of the curate's office, and therefore is a kind of pensioner to him. COLLIER.

2. A slave of state hired by a stipend to obey his master.

*In Britain's senate he a seat obtains,
And one more pensioner St. Stephen gains.* POPE.

PE'NSIVE. adj. [pensif, French; pensivo, Italian.]

1. Sorrowfully thoughtful; sorrowful; mournfully serious; melancholy.

Think it still a good work, which they in their pensive care for the well bestowing of time account waste. HOOKER.

*Are you at leisure, holy father, —
— My leisure serves me, pensive daughter, now.* SHAKESPEARE.

*Anxious cares the pensive nymph opprest,
And secret passions labour'd in her breast.* POPE.

2. It is generally and properly used of persons; but Prior has applied it to things.

*We at the sad approach of death shall know
The truth, which from these pensive numbers flow,
That we pursue false joy, and suffer real woe.* PRIOR.

PE'NTHOUSE. n.s. [pent, from pente, Fr. and house.] A shed hanging out aslope from the main wall.

This is the penthouse under which Lorenzo desir'd us to make a stand.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF VENICE.

*Sleep shall neither night nor day
Hang upon his penthouse lid.*

SHAKESPEARE.

The Turks lurking under their penthouse, laboured with mattocks to dig up the foundation of the wall. KNOLLES.

A blow was received by riding under a penthouse. WISEMAN.

Those defensive engines, made by the Romans into the form of penthouses to cover the assailants from the weapons of the besieged, would he presently batter in pieces with stones and blocks. WILKINS.

My penthouse eye-brows and my shaggy beard

Offend your sight; but these are manly signs. DRYDEN.

The chill rain Drops from some penthouse on her wretched head. ROWE.

PEREGRINA'TION. n.s. [from peregrinus, Lat.] Travel; abode in foreign countries.

It was agreed between them, what account he should give of his peregrination abroad. BACON'S HENRY VII.

That we do not contend to have the earth pass for a paradise, we reckon it only as the land of our peregrination, and aspire after a better country. BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

PERE'NNIAL. adj. [perennis, Latin.]

1. Lasting through the year.

If the quantity were precisely the same in these perennial fountains, the difficulty would be greater. CHEYNE.

2. Perpetual; unceasing.

The matter wherewith these perennial clouds are raised, is the sea that surrounds them. HARVEY.

PERE'NNITY. n.s. [from perennitas, Lat.] Equality of lasting through all seasons; perpetuity.

That springs have their origin from the sea, and not from rains and vapours, I conclude from the perennity of divers springs.

DERHAM'S PHYSICO-THEOLOGY.

PERFU'MER. n.s. [from perfume.] One whose trade is to sell things made to gratify the scent.

A moss the perfumers have out of apple trees, that hath an excellent scent.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

First issued from perfumers shops
A croud of fashionable fops. SWIFT.

PE'RILOUS. adj. [perileux, Fr. from peril.]

1. Dangerous; hazardous; full of danger.

Alterations in the service of God, for that they impair the credit of religion, are therefore perilous in common-weals, which have no continuance longer than religion hath all reverence done unto it.

HOOKER, B. V. S. 2.

Her guard is chastity,
She that has that is clad in compleat steel,
And like a quiver'd nymph with arrows keen

May trace huge forests and unharbour'd heaths,

Infamous hills and sandy perilous wilds.
MILTON.

Dictate propitious to my duteous ear,
What arts can captivate the changeful seer:
For perilous th' assay, unheard the toil
T' elude the prescience of a God by guile.
POPE.

Into the perilous flood Bear fearless. THOMSON.

2. It is used by way of emphasis, or ludicrous exaggeration of any thing bad.

Thus was th' accomplish'd squire endu'd
With gifts and knowledge per'lous shrewd.
HUDIBRAS.

3. Smart; witty. In this sense it is, I think, only applied to children, and probably obtained its signification from the notion, that children eminent for wit, do not live; a witty boy was therefore a perilous boy, or a boy in danger. It is vulgarly parlous.

'Tis a per'lous boy,
Bold, quick, ingenious, forward, capable;
He's all the mother's from the top to toe.
SHAKESPEARE.

PE'RIWIG. n.s. [perruque, Fr.] Adscititious hair; hair not natural, worn by way of ornament or concealment of baldness.

*Her hair is auburn, mine is perfect yellow,
If that be all the difference in his love,
I'll get me such a colour'd periwig.*

SHAKESPEARE.

It offends me to hear a robusteous periwigged fellow tear a passion to tatters, to split the ears of the groundlings.

SHAKESPEARE.

The sun's

*Dishevel'd beams and scatter'd fires
Serve but for ladies periwigs and tires
In lovers sonnets.* DONNE.

*Madam time, be ever bald,
I'll not thy periwig be call'd.*

CLEAVELAND.

For vailing of their visages his highness and the marquis bought each a periwig, somewhat to overshadow their foreheads.

WOTTON.

They used false hair or periwigs.

ARBUTHNOT ON COINS.

*From her own head Megara takes
A periwig of twisted snakes,
Which in the nicest fashion curl'd,
Like toupets.* SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

To PE'RIWIG. v.a. [from the noun.] To dress in false hair.

Now when the winter's keener breath began

BACON'S HENRY VII.

PE'RSPECTIVE. n.s. [perspectif, Fr. perspicio, Lat.]

1. A glass through which things are viewed.

If it tend to danger, they turn about the perspective, and shew it so little, that he can scarce discern it. DENHAM.

It may import us in this calm, to hearken to the storms raising abroad; and by the best perspectives, to discover from what coast they break. TEMPLE.

*You hold the glass, but turn the perspective,
And farther off the lessen'd object drive.* DRYDEN.

*Faith for reason's glimmering light shall give
Her immortal perspective.* PRIOR.

2. The science by which things are ranged in picture, according to their appearance in their real situation.

Medals have represented their buildings according to the rules of perspective. ADDISON ON ANCIENT MEDALS.

3. View; visto.

*Lofty trees, with sacred shades,
And perspectives of pleasant glades,
Where nymphs of brightest form appear.* DRYDEN.

PE'RSPECTIVE. adj. Relating to the science of vision; optick; optical.

We have perspective houses, where we make demonstrations of all lights and radiations; and out of things uncoloured and transparent, we can represent unto you all several colours. BACON.

PERT. adj. [pert, Welsh; pert, Dutch; appert, French.]

1. Lively; brisk; smart.

*Awake the pert and nimble spirit of mirth;
Turn melancholy forth to funerals.*

SHAKESPEARE.

*On the tawny sands and shelves,
Trip the pert fairies and the dapper elves.*

MILTON.

2. Saucy; petulant; with bold and garrulous loquacity.

*All servants might challenge the same liberty, and grow pert upon their masters;
and when this sauciness became universal,
what less mischief could be expected than an old Scythian rebellion?*

COLLIER ON PRIDE.

A lady bids me in a very pert manner mind my own affairs, and not pretend to meddle with their linnen. ADDISON.

Vanessa

*Scarce list'ned to their idle chat,
Further than sometimes by a frown,
When they grew pert, to pull them down.*

SWIFT.

To PERVE'RT. v.a. [perverto, Lat. pervertir, Fr.]

1. To distort from the true end or purpose.

Instead of good they may work ill, and pervert justice to extreme injustice.

SPENSER'S STATE OF IRELAND.

If thou seest the oppression of the poor, and violent perverting of justice in a province, marvel not.

BIBLE ECCLESIASTICUS, v. 8.

*If then his providence
Out of our evil seek to bring forth good,
Our labour must be to pervert that end,
And out of good still to find means of evil.*

MILTON.

He has perverted my meaning by his glosses; and interpreted my words into blasphemy, of which they were not guilty.

DRYDEN.

Porphyry has wrote a volume to explain this cave of the nymphs with more piety than judgment; and another person has perverted it into obscenity; and both allegorically. BROOME.

2. To corrupt; to turn from the right; opposed to convert, which is to turn from the wrong to the right.

*The heinous and spiteful act
Of Satan, done in Paradise, and how
He in the serpent had perverted Eve,
Her husband she, to taste the fatal fruit,
Was known in heav'n.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

PERVE'RTER. n.s. [from pervert.]

1. One that changes any thing from good to bad; a corrupter.

*Where a child finds his own parents his perverters, he cannot be so properly born,
as damned into the world.* SOUTH.

2. One who distorts any thing from the right purpose.

*He that reads a prohibition in a divine law, had need be well satisfied about the sense
he gives it, lest he incur the wrath of God, and be found a perverter of his law.*

STILLINGFLEET.

PERU'KE. n.s. [peruque, Fr.] A cap of false hair; a periwig that pesters or disturbs.

PE'STHOUSE. n.s. [from pest and house.] An hospital for persons infected with the plague.

PET. n.s. [This word is of doubtful etymology; from despit, Fr. or impetus, Lat. perhaps it may be derived some way from petit, as it implies only a little fume or fret.]

1. A slight passion; a slight fit of anger.

If all the world

Should in a pet of temperance feed on pulse,

*Drink the clear stream, and nothing wear
but freeze,*

Th' all-giver would be unthanked, would be unprais'd. MILTON.

If we cannot obtain every vain thing we ask, our next business is to take pet at the refusal. L'ESTRANGE.

Life, given for noble purposes, must not be thrown up in a pet, nor whined away in love. COLLIER.

They cause the proud their visits to delay,

And send the godly in a pet to pray.

POPE.

2. A lamb taken into the house, and water of springs. Woodward.

PETTIFO'GGER. n.s. [corrupted from pettivoguer; petit and voguer, Fr.]

A petty small-rate lawyer.

The worst conditioned and least cliented pettivoguers get, under the sweet bait of revenge, more plentiful prosecution of actions.

CAREW'S SURVEY OF CORNWALL.

Your pettifoggers damn their souls

To share with knaves in cheating fools.

HUDIBRAS.

*Consider, my dear, how indecent it is to abandon your shop and follow pettifoggers;
there is hardly a plea between two country esquires about a barren acre, but you draw yourself in as bail, surety or solicitor.*

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

Physicians are apt to despise empiricks, lawyers, pettifoggers, merchants and pedlars. SWIFT.

PE'WTER. n.s. [peauter, Dutch.]

1. A compound of metals; an artificial metal.

Coarse pewter is made of fine tin and lead. BACON.

The pewter, into which no water could enter, became more white, and liker to silver, and less flexible. BACON.

*Pewter dishes, with water in them, will not melt easily, but without it they will; nay, butter or oil, in themselves inflammable,
yet, by their moisture, will do the like.*

BACON.

2. The plates and dishes in a house.

The eye of the mistress was wont to make her pewter shine. ADDISON.

PHILO'LOGER. n.s. [φιλόλογος.] One whose chief study is language; a grammarian; a critick.

Philologers and critical discoursers, who look beyond the shell and obvious exteriors of things, will not be angry with our narrower explorations. BROWN.

You expect, that I should discourse of this matter like a naturalist, not a philologer. BOYLE.

The best philologers say, that the original word does not only signify domestick, as opposed to foreign, but also private, as opposed to common. SPRAT'S SERMONS.

PHILO'LOGICAL. adj. [from philology.] Critical; grammatical.

Studies, called philological, are history, language, grammar, rhetorick, poesy and criticism. WATTS.

He who pretends to the learned professions, if he doth not arise to be a critick himself in philological matters, should frequently converse with dictionaries, paraphrasts, commentators or other criticks, which may relieve any difficulties. WATTS.

PHILO'LOGIST. n.s. [φιλόλογος.] A critick; a grammarian.

PHILO'LOGY. n.s. [φιλολογία; philologie, Fr.] Criticism; grammatical learning.

Temper all discourses of philology with interspersions of morality. WALKER.

PHI'LOMOT. adj. [corrupted from feuille morte, a dead leaf.] Coloured like a dead leaf.

PHILO'SOPHER. n.s. [philosophus, Lat. philosophe, Fr.] A man deep in knowledge, either moral or natural.

Many sound in belief have been also great philosophers.

HOOKER'S ECCLESIASTICAL POLITY.

That stone

Philosophers in vain so long have sought. MILTON.

Adam, in the state of innocence, came into the world a philosopher, which sufficiently appeared by his writing the natures of things upon their names; he could view essences in themselves, and read forms without the comment of their respective properties. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

They all our fam'd philosophers defie, And would our faith by force of reason try. DRYDEN.

If the philosophers by fire had been so wary in their observations and sincere in their reports, as those, who call themselves philosophers, ought to have been, our acquaintance with the bodies here about us had been yet much greater. LOCKE.

PHI'LOSOPHY. n.s. [philosophie, Fr. philosophia, Latin.]

1. Knowledge natural or moral.

I had never read, heard nor seen any thing, I had never any taste of philosophy nor inward feeling in myself, which for a while I did not call to my succour. SIDNEY.

Hang up philosophy;

Unless philosophy can make a Juliet, Displant a town, reverse a prince's doom, It helps not. SHAKESPEARE.

The progress you have made in philosophy, hath enabled you to benefit yourself with what I have written. DIGBY.

2. Hypothesis or system upon which natural effects are explained.

We shall in vain interpret their words by the notions of our philosophy, and the doctrines in our schools. LOCKE.

3. Reasoning; argumentation.

Of good and evil much they argu'd then Vain wisdom all and false philosophy. MILTON.

His decisions are the judgment of his passions and not of his reason, the philosophy of the sinner and not of the man.

ROGERS'S SERMONS.

4. The course of sciences read in the schools.

PHIZ. n.s. [This word is formed by a ridiculous contraction from physiognomy, and should therefore, if it be written at all, be written physz.] The face, in a sense of contempt.

His air was too proud, and his features amiss,

As if being a traitor had alter'd his phiz.

STEPNEY.

PHLEME. n.s. [from phlæbotomus, Lat.] A fleam, so it is commonly written; an instrument which is placed on the vein and driven into it with a blow; particularly in bleeding of horses.

PHRASE. n.s. [φράσις.]

1. An idiom; a mode of speech peculiar to a language.

2. An expression; a mode of speech.

Now mince the sin,

*And mollify damnation with a phrase:
Say you consented not to Sancho's death,
But barely not forbad it.* DRYDEN.

To seat the Lord, and depart from evil, are phrases which the scripture useth to express the sum of religion. TILLOTSON.

3. Stile; expression.

Thou speak'st

In better phrase and matter than thou didst. SHAKESPEARE.

To PHRASE. v.a. [from the noun.] To stile; to call; to term.

*These suns,
For so they phrase them, by their heralds challenged*

The noble spirits to arms.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

PHRASEO'LOGY. n.s. [φράσις and λέγω.]

1. Stile; diction.

The scholars of Ireland seem not to have the least conception of a stile, but run on in a flat phraseology, often mingled with barbarous terms.

SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

2. A phrase book. Ainsworth.

PHYSIO'LOGY. n.s. [φύσις and λέγω; physiologie, Fr.] The doctrine of the constitution of the works of nature.

Disputing physiology is of no accommodation to your designs.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

Philosophers adapted their description of the deity to the vulgar, otherwise the conceptions of mankind could not be accounted for from their physiology.

BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

PICKAPACK. adv. [from pack, by a reduplication very common in our language.] In manner of a pack.

In a hurry she whips up her darling under her arms, and carries the other a pickapack upon her shoulders. L'ESTRANGE.

PI'CKBACK. adj. [corrupted perhaps from pickpack.] On the back.

*As our modern wits behold,
Mounted a pickback on the old,
Much farther off.* HUDIBRAS.

PI'CKLEHERRING. n.s. [pickle and herring.] A jack-pudding; a merry-andrew; a zany; a buffoon.

Another branch of pretenders to this art, without horse or pickleherring, lie snug in a garret. SPECTATOR, NO. 572.

The pickleherring found the way to shake him, for upon his whistling a country jig, this unlucky wag danced to it with such a variety of grimaces, that the countryman could not forbear smiling, and lost the prize. ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

PICKTOO'TH. n.s. [pick and tooth.] An instrument by which the teeth are cleaned.

If a gentleman leaves a picktooth case on the table after dinner, look upon it as part of your vails. SWIFT.

PICKTHA'NK. n.s. [pick and thank.] An officious fellow, who does what he is not desired; a whispering parasite.

*With pleasing tales his lord's vain ears he fed,
A flatterer, a pickthank, and a lyer.*
FAIRFAX.

*Many tales devis'd,
Oft the ear of greatness needs must hear,
By smiling pickthanks and base newsmongers.* SHAKESPEARE.

The business of a pickthank is the basest of offices. L'ESTRANGE.

If he be great and powerful, spies and pick-thanks generally provoke him to persecute and tyrannize over the innocent and the just. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

PICTO'RIAL. adj. [from pictor, Lat.] Produced by a painter. A word not adopted by other writers, but elegant and useful.

Sea horses are but grotesco delineations, which fill up empty spaces in maps, as many pictorial inventions, not any physical shapes. BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

To PIDDLE. v.n. [This word is obscure in its etymology; Skinner derives it from picciolo, Italian; or petit, Fr. little; Mr. Lye thinks the diminutive of the Welsh breyta, to eat; perhaps it comes from peddle, for Skinner gives for its primitive signification, to deal in little things.]

1. To pick at table; to feed squeamishly, and without appetite.

*From stomach sharp, and hearty feeding,
To piddle like a lady breeding.*
SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

2. To trifle; to attend to small parts rather than to the main. Ainsworth.

PI'EPOWDER court. n.s. [from pied, foot, and pouldre, dusty.] A court held in fairs for redress of all disorders committed therein.

PI'GGIN. n.s. In the northern provinces, a small vessel.

PI'GMY. n.s. [pigmée, Fr. pigmæus, Lat.] A small nation, fabled to be devoured by the cranes; thence any thing mean or inconsiderable.<sup>171</sup>

When cranes invade, his little sword and shield

The pigmy takes. DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

The criticks of a more exalted taste, may discover such beauties in the antient poetry, as may escape the comprehension of us pigmies of a more limited genius.

GARTH.

*But that it wanted room,
It might have been a pigmy's tomb.*

SWIFT.

PI'LLION. n.s. [from pillow.]

1. A soft saddle set behind a horseman for a woman to sit on.

*The housse and pillion both were gone;
Phyllis, it seems, was fled with John.*
SWIFT.

2. A pad; a pannel; a low saddle.

I thought that the manner had been Irish, as also the furniture of his horse, his shank pillion without stirrups. SPENSER.

3. The pad of the saddle that touches the horse.

PI'LSER. n.s. The moth or fly that runs into a candle flame. Ainsworth.

PI'NMONEY. n.s. [pin and money.] Money allowed to a wife for her private expences without account.

The woman must find out something else to mortgage, when her pinmoney is gone.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN.

PIO'NEER. n.s. [pionier, from pion, obsolete Fr. pion, according to Scaliger, comes from peo for pedito, a foot soldier, who was formerly employed in digging for the army. A pioneer is in Dutch, spagenier, from spage, a spade; whence Junius imagines that the French borrowed pagenier, which was afterwards called pioneer.] One whose business is to level the road, throw up works, or sink mines in military operations.

Well said, old mole, can'st work i' th' ground so fast?

A worthy pioneer?

SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

Three try new experiments, such as themselves think good; these we call pioneers or miners. BACON.

His pioneers

Even the paths, and make the highways plain. FAIRFAX.

Of labouring pioneers

*A multitude with spades and axes arm'd,
To lay hills plain, fell woods or vallies fill.* MILTON.

The Romans, after the death of Tiberius, sent thither an army of pioneers to demolish the buildings, and deface the beauties of the island.

ADDISON'S REMARKS ON ITALY.

PI'PING. adj. [from pipe. This word is only used in low language.]

1. Weak; feeble; sickly: from the weak voice of the sick.

*I, in this weak piping time of peace,
Have no delight to pass away the time,
Unless to spy my shadow in the sun.*

SHAKESPEARE.

2. Hot; boiling: from the sound of any thing that boils.

PI'PKIN. n.s. [diminutive of pipe, a large vessel.] A small earthen boiler.

A pipkin there like Homer's tripod walks.

POPE.

*Some officer might give consent
To a large cover'd pipkin in his tent.*

KING.

PI'RATE. n.s. [πειρατής; pirata, Lat. pirate, Fr.]

1. A sea-robber.

Wrangling pirates that fall out

In sharing that which you have pill'd from me. SHAKESPEARE.

Pirates all nations are to prosecute, not so much in the right of their own fears, as upon the band of human society. BACON.

*Relate, if business or the thirst of gain Engage your journey o'er the pathless main,
Where savage pirates seek through seas unknown*

The lives of others, vent'rous of their own.

POPE.

2. Any robber; particularly a bookseller who seizes the copies of other men.

PISH. interj. A contemptuous exclamation. This is sometimes spoken and written pshaw. I know not their etymology, and imagine them formed by chance.

*There was never yet philosopher
That could endure the toothach patiently;
However they have writ,*

And made a pish at chance or sufferance. SHAKESPEARE.

She frowned and cried pish, when I said a thing that I stole.

SPECTATOR, NO. 268.

PI'SSBURNT. adj. Stained with urine.

PISTE. n.s. [French.] The track or tread a horseman makes upon the ground he goes over.

PI'STON. n.s. [piston, Fr.] The movable part in several machines; as in pumps and syringes, whereby the suction or attraction is caused; an embolus.

PITAPAT. n.s. [probably from pas a pas, or patte patte, Fr.]

1. A flutter; a palpitation.

A lion meets him, and the fox's heart went pitapat. L'ESTRANGE.

2. A light quick step.

Now I hear the pitapat of a pretty foot through the dark alley: no, 'tis the son of a mare that's broken loose, and munching upon the melons.

DRYDEN'S DON SEBASTIAN.

PI'TCHFORK. n.s. [pitch and fork.]

A fork with which corn is thrown upon the waggon.

An old lord in Leicestershire amused himself with mending pitchforks and spades for his tenants gratis. SWIFT.

PI'TFALL. n.s. [pit and fall.] A pit dug and covered, into which a passenger falls unexpectedly.

Poor bird! thoud'st never fear the net nor lime,

The pitfall nor the gin.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

Thieves dig concealed pitfalls in his way. SANDYS.

These hidden pitfalls were set thick at the entrance of the bridge, so that throngs of people fell into them. ADDISON.

PI'TTANCE. n.s. [pitance, Fr. pietantia, Italian.]

1. An allowance of meat in a monastery.

2. A small portion.

*Then at my lodging,
The worst is this, that at so slender warning*

You're like to have a thin and slender pittance. SHAKESPEARE.

The ass saved a miserable pittance for himself. L'ESTRANGE.

I have a small pittance left, with which I might retire. ARBUTHNOT.

Many of them lose the greatest part of the small pittance of learning they received at the university. SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

PLACA'RD, PLACART. n.s. [plakaert, Dutch; placard, Fr.] An edict; a declaration; a manifesto.

To PLA'CATE. v.a. [placeo, Lat.] To appease; to reconcile. This word is used in Scotland.

That the effect of an atonement and reconciliation was to give all mankind a right to approach and rely on the protection and beneficence of a placated deity, is not deducible from nature. FORBES.

PLAGUILY. adv. [from plaguy.] Vexatiously; horribly. A low word.

This whispering bodes me no good; but he has me so plaguily under the lash, I dare not interrupt him. DRYDEN.

*You look'd scornful, and snift at the dean;
But he durst not so much as once open his lips,
And the doctor was plaguily down in the hips.* SWIFT.

PLA'GUY. adj. [from plague.] Vexatious; troublesome. A low word.

Of heats,

Add one more to the plaguy bill.

DONNE.

*What perils do environ
The man that meddles with cold iron,
What plaguy mischiefs and mishaps
Do dog him still with after-claps.*

HUDIBRAS.

PLA'INWORK. n.s. [plain and work.] Needlework as distinguished from embroidery; the common practice of sewing or making linen garments.

She went to plainwork, and to purling brooks. POPE.

PLANTA'TION. n.s. [plantatio, from planto, Latin.]

1. The act or practice of planting.
2. The place planted.

As swine are to gardens and orderly plantations, so are tumults to parliaments.
KING CHARLES.

*Some peasants
Of the same soil their nursery prepare,
With that of their plantation; lest the tree
Translated should not with the soil agree.*
DRYDEN.

*Whose rising forests, not for pride or show,
But future buildings, future navies grow:
Let his plantations stretch from down to
down,
First shade a country, and then raise a town.* POPE.

Virgil, with great modesty in his looks, was seated by Calliope in the midst of a plantation of laurel. ADDISON.

3. A colony.

Planting of countries is like planting of woods; the principal thing, that hath been the destruction of most plantations, hath been the base and hasty drawing of profit in the first years; speedy profit is not to be neglected, as far as may stand with the good of the plantation.

BACON'S ESSAYS.

4. Introduction; establishment.

Episcopacy must be cast out of this church, after possession here, from the first plantation of christianity in this island.

KING CHARLES.

PLA'NTER. n.s. [planteur, Fr. from plant.]

1. One who sows, sets or cultivates; cultivator.

There stood Sabinus, planter of the vines,

And studiously surveys his gen'rous wines.
DRYDEN.

*What do thy vines avail,
Or olives, when the cruel battle mows
The planters, with their harvest immature?* PHILIPS.

*That product only which our passions bear,
Eludes the planter's miserable care.*
PRIOR.

2. One who cultivates ground in the West Indian colonies.

A planter in the West Indies might muster up, and lead all his family out against the Indians, without the absolute dominion of a monarch, descending to him from Adam. LOCKE.

He to Jamaica seems transported, Alone, and by no planter courted.
SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

3. One who disseminates or introduces.

Had these writings differed from the sermons of the first planters of christianity in history or doctrine, they would have been rejected by those churches which they had formed. ADDISON.

PLA'STER. n.s. [plastre. Fr. from πλαζω.]

1. Substance made of water and some absorbent matter, such as chalk or lime well pulverised, with which walls are overlaid or figures cast.

In the same hour came forth fingers of a man's hand, and wrote upon the plaster of the wall. BIBLE DANIEL, V. 5.

*In the worst inn's worst room, with mat half-hung,
The floors of plaster, and the walls of dung.* POPE.

Maps are hung up so high, to cover the naked plaster or wainscot.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

2. [Emplastrum, Lat. in English, formerly emplaster.] A glutinous or adhesive salve.

Seeing the sore is whole, why retain we the plaster? HOOKER.

*You rub the sore,
When you should bring the plaster.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*An author, thus who pants for fame,
Begins the world with fear and shame,
When first in print, you see him dread
Each potgun levell'd at his head.*

SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

PO'THERB. n.s. [pot and herb.] An herb fit for the pot.

Sir Tristram telling us tobacco was a potherb, bid the drawer bring in t'other halfpint. TATLER, NO. 57.

*Egypt baser than the beasts they worship;
Below their potherb gods that grow in gardens.* DRYDEN.

Of alimentary leaves, the olera or potherbs afford an excellent nourishment; amongst those are the cole or cabbage kind.

ARBUTHNOT.

Leaves eaten raw are termed sallad; if boiled, they become potherbs: and some of those plants, which are potherbs in one family, are sallad in another. WATTS.

PO'TLID. n.s. [pot and lid.] The cover of a pot.

The columella is a fine, thin, light, bony tube; the bottom of which spreads about, and gives it the resemblance of a wooden potlid in country houses. DERHAM.

PO'TTAGE. n.s. [potage, Fr. from pot.] Any thing boiled or decocted for food. See PORRIDGE.

Jacob sod pottage, and Esau came from the field faint. BIBLE GENESIS.

POTVA'LIANT. adj. [pot and valiant.] Heated with courage by strong drink.

POU'NDAGE. n.s. [from pound.]

1. A certain sum deducted from a pound; a sum paid by the trader to the servant that pays the money, or to the person who procures him customers.

In poundage and drawbacks I lose half my rent. SWIFT.

2. Payment rated by the weight of the commodity.

Tonnage and poundage, and other duties upon merchandizes, were collected by order of the board. CLARENDON.

POU'NDER. n.s. [from pound.]

1. The name of a heavy large pear.

*Alcinous' orchard various apples bears,
Unlike are bergamots and pounder pears.*
DRYDEN.

2. Any person or thing denominated from a certain number of pounds: as, a ten pounder; a gun that carries a bullet of ten pounds weight; or in ludicrous language a man with ten pounds a year; in like manner, a note or bill is called a twenty pounder or ten pounder, from the sum it bears.

None of these forty or fifty pounders may be suffered to marry, under the penalty of deprivation. SWIFT.

3. A pestle. Ainsworth.

PO'WDER. n.s. [poudre, Fr.]

the fire, and ground it to powder.*
BIBLE EXODUS, XXXII. 20.

2. Gunpowder.

The seditious being furnished with artillery, powder and shot, battered Bishopsgate.
HAYWARD.

As to the taking of a town, there were few conquerors could signalize themselves that way, before the invention of powder and fortifications. ADDISON.

3. Sweet dust for the hair.

When th' hair is sweet through pride or lust,

The powder doth forget the dust.

HERBERT.

*Our humbler province is to tend the fair,
To save the powder from too rude a gale.*

POPE.

PO'WDERBOX. n.s. [powder and box.] A box in which powder for the hair is kept.

*There stands the toilette,
The patch, the powderbox, pulville, perfumes.* GAY.

PO'WDERHORN. n.s. [powder and horn.] A horn case in which powder is kept for guns.

You may stick your candle in a bottle or a powderhorn. SWIFT.

PO'WDERMILL. n.s. [powder and mill.] The mill in which the ingredients for gunpowder are ground and mingled.

Upon the blowing up of a powdermill, the windows of adjacent houses are bent and blown outwards, by the elastick force of the air within exerting itself. ARBUTHNOT.

POWDERING-TUB. n.s. [powder and tub.]

1. The vessel in which meat is salted.

When we view those large bodies of oxen, what can we better conceit them to be, than so many living and walking powderingtubs, and that they have animam salis.

MORE.

2. The place in which an infected lecher is physicked to preserve him from putrefaction.

*To the spital go,
And from the powd'ring-tub of infamy
Fetch forth the lazar kite Doll Tearsheet.*

SHAKESPEARE.

POX. n.s. [properly pocks, which originally signified a small bag or pustule; of the same original, perhaps, with powke or pouch. We still use pock, for a single pustule; poccas, Sax. pocken, Dutch.]

1. Pustules; efflorescencies; exanthematous eruptions.

2. The venereal disease. This is the sense when it has no epithet.

Though brought to their ends by some other apparent disease, yet the pox hath been judged the foundation. WISEMAN.

*Wilt thou still sparkle in the box,
Still ogle in the ring?
Can'st thou forget thy age and pox.*
DORSET.

PRA'VITY. n.s. [pravitas, Lat.] Corruption; badness; malignity.

*Doubt not but that sin
Will reign among them, as of thee begot;
And therefore was law given them, to evince*

Their natural pravity.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. XII.

More people go to the gibbet for want of timely correction, than upon any incurable pravity of nature. L'ESTRANGE.

I will shew how the pravity of the will could influence the understanding to a disbelief of Christianity. SOUTH.

PREA'CHMENT. n.s. [from preach.] A sermon mentioned in contempt; a discourse affectedly solemn.

*Was't you, that revell'd in our parliament,
And made a preachment of your high descent.* SHAKESPEARE.

*All this is but a preachment upon the text
at last.* L'ESTRANGE.

PRECA'RIOUS. adj. [precarius, Lat. precaire, Fr.] Dependent; uncertain, because depending on the will of another; held by courtesy; changeable or alienable at the pleasure of another. No word is more unskilfully used than this with its derivatives. It is used for uncertain in all its senses; but it only means uncertain, as dependent on others: thus there are authors who mention the precariousness of an account, of the weather, of a die.

*What subjects will precarious kings regard,
A beggar speaks too softly to be heard.*
DRYDEN.

Those who live under an arbitrary tyrannick power, have no other law but the will of their prince, and consequently no privileges but what are precarious.
ADDISON.

This little happiness is so very precarious, that it wholly depends on the will of others. ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

He who rejoices in the strength and beauty of youth, should consider by how precarious a tenure he holds these advantages, that a thousand accidents may before the next dawn lay all these glories in the dust. ROGERS'S SERMONS.

PRECA'RIOUSNESS. n.s. [from precarious.] Uncertainty; dependence on others. The following passage from a book, otherwise elegantly written, affords an example of the impropriety mentioned at the word precarious.

Most consumptive people die of the discharge they spit up, which, with the precariousness of the symptoms of an oppressed diaphragm from a mere lodgement of extravasated matter, render the operation but little adviseable.
SHARP'S SURGERY.

PRECI'NCT. n.s. [præcinctus, Latin.] Outward limit; boundary.

The main body of the sea being one, yet within divers precincts, hath divers names; so the catholick church is in like sort divided into a number of distinct societies.
HOOKER.

*Through all restraint broke loose, he wings his way
Not far off heav'n, in the precincts of light,*

Directly towards the new-created world.
MILTON.

PRECO'CIUS. adj. [præcocus, Lat. precose, Fr.] Ripe before the time.

Many precocious trees, and such as have their spring in the winter, may be found in most parts. BROWN.

PRECONCEI'T. n.s. [præ and conceit.] An opinion previously formed.

A thing in reason impossible, which notwithstanding through their misfashioned preconceit, appeared unto them no less certain than if nature had written it in the very foreheads of all the creatures.
HOOKER.

To PRECONCEI'VE. v.a. [præ and conceive.] To form an opinion beforehand; to imagine beforehand.

In a dead plain the way seemeth the longer, because the eye hath preconceived it shorter than the truth; and the frustrations of that maketh it seem so. BACON.

Fondness of preconceived opinions is not like to render your reports suspect, nor for want of sagacity or care, defective.
GLANVILL'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

The reason why men are so weak in governing is, because most things fall out accidentally, and come not into any compliance with their preconceived ends, but they are forced to comply subsequently. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

PRECONCE'PTION. n.s. [præ and conception.] Opinion previously formed.

Custom with most men prevails more than truth, according to the notions and preconceptions, which it hath formed in our minds, we shape the discourse of reason itself. HAKEWILL.

PREDIGE'STION. n.s. [præ and digestion.] Digestion too soon performed.

Predigestion, or hasty digestion, fills the body full of crudities and seeds of diseases.

BACON'S ESSAYS.

PRE'FACE. n.s. [preface, Fr. præfatio, Lat.] Something spoken introductory to the main design; introduction; something proemial.

*This superficial tale
Is but a preface to her worthy praise.*
SHAKESPEARE.

Sir Thomas More betrayed his depth of judgment in state affairs in his Utopia, than which, in the opinion of Budæus in a preface before it, our age hath not seen a thing more deep.

PEACHAM OF POETRY.

*Heav'n's high behest no preface needs;
Sufficient that thy pray'rs are heard, and
death
Defeated of his seizure.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. XI.

TO PRE'FACE. v.n. [prefari, Lat.]
To say something introductory.

Before I enter upon the particular parts of her character, it is necessary to preface, that she is the only child of a decrepid father. SPECTATOR, NO. 449.

TO PRE'FACE. v.a.

1. To introduce by something proemial.

*Thou art rash,
And must be prefac'd into government.*

SOUTHERN.

2. To face; to cover. A ludicrous sense.

*I love to wear cloaths that are flush,
Not prefacing old rags with plush.*

CLEAVELAND.

PRE'FACER. n.s. [from preface.]

The writer of a preface.

If there be not a tolerable line in all these six, the prefacer gave me no occasion to write better. DRYDEN.

PREFI'X. n.s. [præfixum, Lat.] Some particle put before a word, to vary its signification.

In the Hebrew language the noun has its prefixa and affixa, the former to signify some few relations, and the latter to denote the pronouns possessive and relative.

CLARKE.

It is a prefix of augmentation to many words in that language.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

PREGUSTA'TION. n.s. [præ and gusto, Lat.] The act of tasting before another.

PRE'JUDICE. n.s. [prejudice, Fr. prejudicium, Lat.]

1. Prepossession; judgment formed beforehand without examination. It is used for prepossession in favour of any thing or against it. It is sometimes used with to before that which the prejudice is against, but not properly.

The king himself frequently considered more the person who spoke, as he was in his prejudice, than the counsel itself that was given. CLARENDON, B. VIII.

My comfort is, that their manifest prejudice to my cause will render their judgment of less authority. DRYDEN.

There is an unaccountable prejudice to projectors of all kinds, for which reason, when I talk of practising to fly, silly people think me an owl for my pains.

ADDISON.

2. Mischief; detriment; hurt; injury.

This sense is only accidental or consequential; a bad thing being called a prejudice, only because prejudice is commonly a bad thing, and is not derived from the original or etymology of the word: it were therefore better to use it less; perhaps prejudice ought never to be applied to any mischief, which does not imply some partiality or prepossession. In some of the following examples its impropriety will be discovered.

I have not spake one the least word,

*That might be prejudice of her present
state,
Or touch of her good person.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

*England and France might, through their amity,
Breed him some prejudice; for from this league
Peep'd harms that menac'd him.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

Factions carried too high and too violently, is a sign of weakness in princes, and much to the prejudice of their authority and business. BACON.

How plain this abuse is, and what prejudice it does to the understanding of the sacred scriptures. LOCKE.

A prince of this character will instruct us by his example, to fix the unsteadiness of our politicks; or by his conduct hinder it from doing us any prejudice. ADDISON.

To PREJUDI'CE. v.a. [from the noun.]

1. To prepossess with unexamined opinions; to fill with prejudices.

*Half-pillars wanted their expected height,
And roofs imperfect prejudic'd the sight.*
PRIOR.

Suffer not any beloved study to prejudice your mind, so far as to despise all other learning. WATTS.

*No snares to captivate the mind he spreads,
Nor bribes your eyes to prejudice your heads.* ANONYMOUS.

2. To obstruct or injure by prejudices previously raised.

Companies of learned men, be they never so great and reverend, are to yield unto reason; the weight whereof is no whit prejudiced by the simplicity of his person, which doth alledge it. HOOKER, B. II. S. 7.

Neither must his example, done without the book, prejudice that which is well appointed in the book. WHITGIFTE.

I am not to prejudice the cause of my fellow-poets, though I abandon my own defence. DRYDEN.

3. To injure; to hurt; to diminish; to impair; to be detrimental to. This sense, as in the noun, is often improperly extended to meanings that have no relation to the original sense; who can read with patience of an ingredient that prejudices a medicine?

The strength of that law is such, that no particular nation can lawfully prejudice the same by any their several laws and ordinances, more than a man by his private resolutions, the law of the whole commonwealth wherein he liveth. HOOKER.

*The Danube rescu'd, and the empire sav'd,
Say, is the majesty of verse retriev'd?
And would it prejudice thy softer vein,
To sing the princes, Louis and Eugene?*
PRIOR.

To this is added a vinous bitter, warmer in the composition of its ingredients than the watry infusion; and, as gentian and lemon-peel make a bitter of so grateful a flavour, the only care required in this composition was to chuse such an addition as might not prejudice it. LONDON DISPENSATORY.

PRELU'DE. n.s. [prelude, Fr. prælu-dium, Lat.]

1. Some short flight of musick played before a full concert.
2. Something introductory; something that only shews what is to follow.

*To his infant arms oppose
His father's rebels and his brother's foes;
Those were the preludes of his fate,
That form'd his manhood, to subdue
The hydra of the many-headed hissing crew.* DRYDEN.

The last Georgick was a good prelude to the Æneis, and very well shewed what the poet could do in the description of what was really great. ADDISON.

One concession to a man is but a prelude to another. CLARISSA.

PRELU'DIOUS. adj. [from prelude.] Previous; introductory.

*That's but a preludious bliss,
Two souls pickeering in a kiss.*
CLEVELAND.

PRE'MISES. n.s. [præmissa, Lat. premisses, Fr]

1. Propositions antecedently supposed or proved.

They infer upon the premises, that as great difference as commodiously may be, there should be in all outward ceremonies between the people of God, and them which are not his people.

HOOKER, B. IV. S. 7.

This is so regular an inference, that whilst the premises stand firm, it is impossible to shake the conclusion. DECAY OF PIETY.

*She study'd well the point, and found Her foes conclusions were not sound,
From premises erroneous brought,
And therefore the deduction's nought.*

SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

2. In low language, houses or lands: as, I was upon the premisses.

PRE'MIUM. n.s. [præmium, Lat.] Something given to invite a loan or a bargain.

No body cares to make loans upon a new project; whereas men never fail to bring in their money upon a land-tax, when the premium or interest allowed them is suited to the hazard they run.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER, NO. 23.

People were tempted to lend, by great premiums and large interest; and it concerned them to preserve that government, which they had trusted with their money. SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

To PREMO'NISH. v.a. [præmoneo, Lat.] To warn or admonish beforehand.

PREMO'NISHMENT. n.s. [from premonish.] Previous information.

After these premonishments, I will come to the compartition itself.

WOTTON'S ARCHITECTURE.

PREMONI'TION. n.s. [from premonish.] Previous notice; previous intelligence.

What friendly premonitions have been spent

On your forbearance, and their vain event. CHAPMAN.

How great the force of such an erroneous persuasion is, we may collect from our Saviour's premonition to his disciples, when he tells them, that those who killed them should think they did God service.

DECAY OF PIETY.

PREPARA'TION. n.s. [preparatio, Lat. preparation, Fr. from prepare.]

1. The act of preparing or previously fitting any thing to any purpose.

Nothing hath proved more fatal to that due preparation for another life, than our unhappy mistake of the nature and end of this.

WAKE'S PREPARATION FOR DEATH.

2. Previous measures.

I will shew what preparations there were in nature for this great dissolution, and after what manner it came to pass.

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

3. Ceremonious introduction.

I make bold to press, with so little preparation, upon you. — You're welcome.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF WINDSOR.

4. The act of making or fitting by a regular process.

In the preparations of cookery, the most volatile parts of vegetables are destroyed.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

5. Any thing made by process of operation.

I wish the chymists had been more sparing, who magnify their preparations, inveigle the curiosity of many, and delude the security of most.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

6. Accomplishment; qualification. Out of use.

Sir John, you are a gentleman of excellent breeding, authentick in your place and person, generally allowed for your many warlike, courtlike and learned preparations. SHAKESPEARE.

PREPOSI'TION. n.s. [præposition, Fr. præpositio, Lat.] In grammar, a particle governing a case.

A preposition signifies some relation, which the thing signified by the word following it, has to something going before in the discourse; as, Cesar came to Rome.

CLARKE'S LATIN GRAMMAR.

PREPO'SITOR. n.s. [præpositor, Lat.] A scholar appointed by the master to overlook the rest.

PRESBYTE'RIAN. adj. [πρεσβύτερος.] Consisting of elders; a term for a modern form of ecclesiastical government.

Chiefly was urged the abolition of episcopal, and the establishing of presbyterian government. KING CHARLES.

PRE'SIDENT. n.s. [præsidents, Lat. president, Fr.]

1. One placed with authority over others; one at the head of others.

As the president of my kingdom, will I Appear there for a man.

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

The tutor sits in the chair as president or moderator, to see that the rules of disputation be observed. WATTS.

2. Governour; prefect.

How might those captive Israelites, under the oversight and government of Assyrian presidents, be able to leave the places they were to inhabit.

BREREWOOD ON LANGUAGES.

3. A tutelary power.

This last complaint th' indulgent ears did pierce

Of just Apollo, president of verse. WALLER.

PRE'SIDENTSHIP. n.s. [from president.] The office and place of president.

When things came to trial of practice, their pastors learning would be at all times of force to overpersuade simple men, who, knowing the time of their own presidentship to be but short, would always stand in fear of their ministers perpetual authority. HOOKER'S PREFACE.

PRE'SSGANG. n.s. [press and gang.] A crew that strolls about the streets to force men into naval service.

PRE'STO. n.s. [presto, Italian.] Quick; at once. A word used by those that show legerdemain.

Presto! begone! 'tis here again;

There's ev'ry piece as big as ten. SWIFT.

PRETERLA'PSED. adj. [præterlapsus, Lat.] Past and gone.

We look with a superstitious reverence upon the accounts of preterlapsed ages.

GLANVILL'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

Never was there so much of either, in any preterlapsed age, as in this. WALKER.

PRE'TERPERFECT. adj. [præteritum perfectum, Lat.] A grammatical term applied to the tense which denotes time absolutely past.

The same natural aversion to loquacity has of late made a considerable alteration in our language, by closing in one syllable the termination of our preterperfect tense, as drown'd, walk'd, for drowned, walked.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

PRE'TERPLUPERFECT. adj. [præteritum plusquam perfectum, Lat.]

The grammatical epithet for the tense denoting time relatively past, or past before some other past time.

PRETTY. adj. [præt, finery, Sax. pretto, Italian; prat, prattigh, Dutch.]

1. Neat; elegant; pleasing without surprise or elevation.

Of these the idle Greeks have many pretty tales. RALEIGH.

They found themselves involved in a train of mistakes, by taking up some pretty hypothesis in philosophy. WATTS.

2. Beautiful without grandeur or dignity.

The pretty gentleman is the most complaisant creature in the world, and is always of my mind. SPECTATOR.

3. It is used in a kind of diminutive contempt in poetry, and in conversation: as, a pretty fellow indeed!

A pretty task; and so I told the fool, Who needs must undertake to please by rule. DRYDEN.

He'll make a pretty figure in a triumph, And serve to trip before the victor's chariot. ADDISON.

4. Not very small. This is a very vulgar use.

A knight of Wales, with shipping and some pretty company, did go to discover those parts. ABBOT.

Cut off the stalks of cucumbers, immediately after their bearing, close by the earth, and then cast a pretty quantity of earth upon the plant, and they will bear next year before the ordinary time.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

I would have a mount of some pretty height, leaving the wall of the enclosure breast high. BACON'S ESSAYS.

Of this mixture we put a parcel into a crucible, and suffered it for a pretty while to continue red hot. BOYLE.

A weazle a pretty way off stood leering at him. L'ESTRANGE.

PRE'TTY. adv. In some degree. This word is used before adverbs or adjectives to intend their signification: it is less than very.

The world begun to be pretty well stocked with people, and human industry drained those uninhabitable places. BURNET.

I shall not enquire how far this lofty method may advance the reputation of learning; but I am pretty sure 'tis no great addition to theirs who use it. COLLIER.

A little voyage round the lake took up five days, though the wind was pretty fair for us all the while. ADDISON.

I have a fondness for a project, and a pretty tolerable genius that way myself.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN, NO. 107.

These colours were faint and dilute, unless the light was trajected obliquely; for by that means they became pretty vivid.

NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

This writer every where insinuates, and, in one place, pretty plainly professes himself a sincere christian. ATTERBURY.

The copper halfpence are coined by the publick, and every piece worth pretty near the value of the copper. SWIFT.

The first attempts of this kind were pretty modest. BAKER.

PRI'CKLOUSE. n.s. [prick and louse.] A word of contempt for a taylor. A low word.

PRI'ESTCRAFT. n.s. [priest and craft.] Religious frauds; management of wicked priests to gain power.

Puzzle has half a dozen common-place topicks; though the debate be about Doway, his discourse runs upon bigotry and priestcraft. SPECTATOR.

From priestcraft happily set free, Lo! ev'ry finish'd son returns to thee.

POPE.

PRIE'STRIDDEN. adj. [priest and ridden.] Managed or governed by priests.

Such a cant of high-church and persecution, and being priestridden.
SWIFT.

PRIG. n.s. [A cant word derived perhaps from prick, as he pricks up, he is pert; or from prickeared, an epithet of reproach bestowed upon the presbyterian teachers.] A pert, conceited, saucy, pragmatical, little fellow.

The little man concluded, with calling monsieur Mesnager an insignificant prig.
SPECTATOR, NO. 482.

*There have I seen some active prig,
To shew his parts, bstride a twig.*
SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

PRIME'VAL, PRIMEVOUS. adj. [primævus, Lat.] Original; such as was at first.

*Immortal dove,
Thou with almighty energy did'st move
On the wild waves, incumbent did'st display
Thy genial wings, and hatch primeval day.* BLACKMORE.

*All the parts of this great fabrick change;
Quit their old stations and primeval frame,
And lose their shape, their essence, and their name.* PRIOR.

PRI'SONBASE. n.s. A kind of rural play, commonly called prisonbars.

The spachies of the court play every friday at ciocho di canni, which is no other than prisonbase upon horseback, hiting one another with darts, as the others do with their hands. SANDYS'S TRAVELS.

PRIVA'DO. n.s. [Spanish.] A secret friend.

The lady Brampton, an English lady, embarked for Portugal at that time, with some privado of her own. BACON.

PRI'VITY. n.s. [privauté, Fr. from privy.]

1. Private communication.

I will unto you in privity discover the drift of my purpose; I mean thereby to settle an eternal peace in that country, and also to make it very profitable to her majesty.

SPENSER.

2. Consciousness; joint knowledge; private concurrence.

The authority of higher powers have force even in these things which are done without their privity, and are of mean reckoning.

HOOKER, B. I. S. 7.

Upon this French going out, took he upon him,

*Without the privity o' th' king, t' appoint
Who should attend him?*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

All the doors were laid open for his departure, not without the privity of the prince of Orange, concluding that the kingdom might better be settled in his absence.

SWIFT.

3. [In the plural.] Secret parts.

Few of them have any thing to cover their privities. ABBOT.

PRI'VY. n.s. Place of retirement; necessary house.

Your fancy

*Would still the same ideas give ye,
As when you spy'd her on the privy.*

SWIFT.

PRO. [Latin.] For; in defence of; pro and con, for pro and contra, for and against. Despicable cant.

*Doctrinal points in controversy had been agitated in the pulpits, with more warmth than had used to be; and thence the animosity increased in books pro and con.*

CLARENDON.

*Matthew met Richard, when
Of many knotty points they spoke,
And pro and con by turns they took.*

PRIOR.

PROBATUM EST. A Latin expression added to the end of a receipt, signifying it is tried or proved.

*Vain the concern that you express,
That uncall'd Alard will possess
Your house and coach both day and night,
And that Macbeth was haunted less
By Banquo's restless sprite:
Lend him but fifty louis d' or,
And you shall never see him more;
Take my advice probatum est?
Why do the gods indulge our store,
But to secure our rest.* PRIOR.

PROBE-SCISSORS. n.s. [probe and scissor.] Scissors used to open wounds, of which the blade thrust into the orifice has a button at the end.

The sinus was snipt up with probe-scissors. WISEMAN.

PROBO'SCIS. n.s. [proboscis, Lat.] A snout; the trunk of an elephant; but it is used also for the same part in every creature, that bears any resemblance thereunto.

*The elephant wreath'd to make them sport
His lithe proboscis.* MILTON.

PRO'CINCT. n.s. [procinctus, Lat.] Complete preparation; preparation brought to the point of action.

*When all the plain Cover'd with thick imbattl'd squadrons bright,
Chariots, and flaming arms, and fiery
steeds,
Reflecting blaze on blaze, first met his
view,
War he perceiv'd, war in procinct.*
MILTON.

PRODI'GIOUS. adj. [prodigiosus, Lat. prodigieux, Fr.] Amazing; astonishing; such as may seem a prodigy; portentous; enormous; monstrous; amazingly great.

If e'er he have a child, abortive it be,

Prodigious and untimely brought to light.
SHAKESPEARE.

An emission of immateriate virtues we are a little doubtful to propound, it being so prodigious; but that it is constantly avouched by many.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

It is prodigious to have thunder in a clear sky. BROWN.

*Then entring at the gate, Conceal'd in clouds, prodigious to relate,
He mix'd, unmark'd, among the busy throng.* DRYDEN.

The Rhone enters the lake, and brings along with it a prodigious quantity of water.

ADDISON'S REMARKS ON ITALY.

It is a scandal to christianity, that in towns, where there is a prodigious increase in the number of houses and inhabitants, so little care should be taken for churches.

SWIFT.

PROFE'SSOR. n.s. [professeur, Fr. from profess.]

1. Inclination or tendency of desire to any thing.

2. [From propendo, Lat. to weigh.] Preconsideration; attentive deliberation; perpendency.

An act above the animal actings, which are transient, and admit not of that attention, and propendency of actions. HALE.

To PROPO'RTION. v.a.

[proportionner, Fr. from the noun.]

1. To adjust by comparative relation.

Measure is that which perfecteth all things, because every thing is for some end; neither can that thing be available to any end, which is not proportionable thereunto: and to proportion as well excesses as defects, are opposite. HOOKER.

*Till body up to spirit work, in bounds
Proportion'd to each kind.* MILTON.

In the loss of an object, we do not proportion our grief to the real value it bears, but to the value our fancies set upon it. ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 256.

2. To form symmetrically.

Nature had proportioned her without any fault, quickly to be discovered by the senses; yet altogether seemed not to make up that harmony that Cupid delights in.

SIDNEY.

PROPO'RTIONABLE. adj. [from proportion.] Adjusted by comparative relation; such as is fit.

His commandments are not grievous, because he offers us an assistance proportionable to the difficulty.

TILLOTSON.

It was enlivened with an hundred and twenty trumpets, assisted with a proportionable number of other instruments. ADDISON.

PROSE. n.s. [prose, Fr. prosa, Lat.] Language not restrained to harmonick sounds or set number of syllables; discourse not metrical.

Things unattempted yet in prose or rhyme. MILTON.

The reformation of prose was owing to Boccace, who is the standard of purity in the Italian tongue, though many of his phrases are become obsolete. DRYDEN.

A poet lets you into the knowledge of a device better than a prose writer, as his descriptions are often more diffuse.

ADDISON.

*Prose men alone for private ends,
I thought, forsook their ancient friends.* PRIOR.

*I will be still your friend in prose:
Esteem and friendship to express,
Will not require poetick dress.* SWIFT.

My head and heart thus flowing through my quill,

Verse man and prose man, term me which you will. POPE.

PRO'SELYTE. n.s. [προσήλυτος; proselite, Fr.] A convert; one brought over to a new opinion.

*He that saw hell in's melancholy
dream,*

*Scar'd from his sins, repented in a fright,
Had he view'd Scotland, had turn'd proselyte.* CLEAVELAND.

Men become professors and combatants for those opinions they were never convinced of, nor proselytes to. LOCKE.

*Where'er you tread,
Millions of proselytes behind are led,
Through crowds of new-made converts still you go.* GRANVILLE.

What numbers of proselytes may we not expect. ADDISON.

TO PRO'SELYTE. v.a. To convert.
A bad word.

Men of this temper cut themselves off from the opportunities of proselyting others, by averting them from their company.
GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE.

PROSO'DIAN. n.s. [from prosody.]
One skilled in metre or prosody.

Some have been so bad prosodians, as from thence to derive malum, because that fruit was the first occasion of evil. BROWN.

PRO'SODY. n.s. [ prosodie, Fr.
προσωδία.] The part of grammar which teaches the sound and quantity of syllables, and the measures of verse.

PRO'STITUTE. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. A hireling; a mercenary; one who is set to sale.

At open fulsome bawdry they rejoice, Base prostitute! thus dost thou gain thy bread. DRYDEN.

No hireling she, no prostitute to praise.
POPE.

2. [Prostibula, Lat.] A publick
strumpet.

From every point they come,

Then dread no dearth of prostitutes at Rome. DRYDEN.

PROTU'BERANCE. n.s.
[protuber, Lat.] Something swelling above the rest; prominence;
tumour.

If the world were eternal, by the continual fall and wearing of waters, all the protuberances of the earth would infinite ages since have been levelled, and the superficies of the earth rendered plain.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

Mountains seem but so many wens and unnatural protuberances upon the face of the earth. MORE.

PROTU'BERANT. adj. [from protuberate.] Swelling; prominent.

One man's eyes are more protuberant and swelling out, another's more sunk and depressed.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

Though the eye seems round, in reality the iris is protuberant above the white, else the eye could not have admitted a whole hemisphere at one view. RAY.

PRO'VERB. n.s. [ proverbe, Fr.
proverbium, Lat.]

1. A short sentence frequently repeated by the people; a saw; an adage.

The sum of his whole book of proverbs is an exhortation to the study of this practick wisdom. DECAY OF PIETY.

It is in praise and commendation of men, as it is in gettings and gains; for the proverb is true, that light gains make heavy purses; for light gains come thick, whereas great come but now and then.

BACON'S ESSAYS.

The Italian proverb says of the Genoese, that they have a sea without fish, land without trees, and men without faith.

ADDISON.

2. A word,<sup>173</sup> name or observation commonly received or uttered.

Thou hast delivered us for a spoil, and a proverb of reproach.

BIBLE TOBIT, III. 4.

To PRO'VERB. v.a. [from the noun.] Not a good word.

1. To mention in a proverb.

*Am I not sung and proverb'd for a fool
In ev'ry street; do they not say, how well
Are come upon him his deserts?*

MILTON'S AGONISTES.

2. To provide with a proverb.

*Let wantons, light of heart,
Tickle the senseless rushes with their heels:
For I am proverb'd with a grandsire
phrase;
I'll be a candle-holder and look on.*

SHAKESPEARE.

PROVI'NCIAL. adj. [provincial, Fr. from province.]

1. Relating to a province.<sup>174</sup>

*The duke dare not more stretch
This finger of mine, than he dare rack his
own;*

His subject am I not, nor here provincial.

SHAKESPEARE.

2. Appendant to the provincial country.

Some have delivered the polity of spirits, and left an account even to their provincial dominions. BROWN.

3. Not of the mother country; rude; unpolished.

*They build and treat with such magnificence,
That, like th' ambitious monarchs of the
age,*

They give the law to our provincial stage.

DRYDEN.

A country 'squire having only the provincial accent upon his tongue, which is neither a fault, nor in his power to remedy, must marry a cast wench. SWIFT.

4. Belonging only to an archbishop's jurisdiction; not æcumenical.

A law made in a provincial synod, is properly termed a provincial constitution.

AYLIFFE'S PARERAGON.

To PROVI'NE. v.n. [provisner, Fr.]

To lay a stock or branch of a vine in the ground to take root for more encrease.

PRO'VOST. n.s. [prafast, Sax. provost, Fr. provosto, Ital. præpositus, Lat.]

1. The chief of any body: as, the provost of a college.

2. The executioner of an army.

Kingston, provost marshal of the king's army, was deemed not only cruel but inhuman in his executions. HAYWARD.

PRO'XIMATE. adj. [proximus, Lat.] Next in the series of ratiocination; near and immediate: opposed to remote and mediate.

Writing a theory of the deluge, we were to shew the proximate natural causes of it.

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

Substance is the remote genus of bird, because it agrees not only to all kinds of animals, but also to things inanimate; but animal is the proximate or nearest genus of bird, because it agrees to fewest other things. WATTS'S LOGICK.

PRUCE. n.s. [Pruce is the old name for Prussia.] Prussian leather.

Some leathern bucklers use Of folded hides, and others shields of pruce. DRYDEN.

PRUDE. n.s. [prude, Fr.] A woman over nice and scrupulous, and with false affectation.

The graver prude sinks downward to a gnome,

In search of mischief, still on earth to roam. POPE.

*Not one careless thought intrudes,
Less modest than the speech of prudes.*

SWIFT.

PRU'DERY. n.s. [from prude.] Overmuch nicety in conduct.

PRU'DISH. adj. [from prude.] Affectedly grave.

*I know you all expect, from seeing me,
Some formal lecture, spoke with prudish face.* GARRICK.

PSHAW. interj. An expression of contempt.

A peevish fellow has some reason for being out of humour, or has a natural incapacity for delight, and therefore disturbs all with pishes and pshaws.
SPECTATOR, NO. 438.

PTI'SAN. n.s. [ptisane, Fr. πιτισανή.] A medical drink made of barley decocted with raisins and liquorice.

*Thrice happy were those golden days of old,
When dear as Burgundy the ptisans sold;
When patients chose to die with better will,
Than breathe and pay the apothecary's bill.* GARTH.

In fevers the aliments prescribed by Hippocrates, were ptisans and cream of barley.
ARBUTHNOT.

PUBE'RTY. n.s. [puberté, Fr. pubertas, Lat.] The time of life in which the two sexes begin first to be acquainted.

*The cause of changing the voice at the years of puberty seemeth to be, for that when much of the moisture of the body, which did before irrigate the parts, is drawn down to the spermatical vessels, it leaveth the body more hot than it was, whence cometh
the dilatation of the pipes.* BACON.

All the carnivorous animals would have multiplied exceedingly, before these children that escaped could come to the age of puberty. BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

PUBLICAN. n.s. [from publicus, Lat.]

1. A toll gatherer.

As Jesus sat at meat, many publicans and sinners came and sat down with him.

BIBLE MATTHEW, IX. 10.

2. A man that keeps a house of general entertainment. In low language.

PU'BLISHER. n.s. [from publish.]

1. One who makes publick or generally known.

Love of you

Hath made me publisher of this pretence.
SHAKESPEARE.

The holy lives, the exemplary sufferings of the publishers of this religion, and the surpassing excellence of that doctrine which they published. ATTERBURY.

2. One who puts out a book into the world.

A collection of poems appeared, in which the publisher has given me some things that did not belong to me. PRIOR.

To PU'DDER. v.n. [from the noun.]
To make a tumult; to make a bustle.

Mathematicians, abstracting their thoughts from names, and setting before their minds the ideas themselves, have avoided a great part of that perplexity, puddering and confusion, which has so much hindered knowledge. LOCKE.

To PU'DDER. v.a. To perplex; to disturb; to confound.

He that will improve every matter of fact into a maxim, will abound in contrary observations, that can be of no other use but to perplex and pudder him. LOCKE.

PUDDING. n.s. [potten, Welsh, an intestine; boudin, French; puding, Swedish.]

1. A kind of food very variously compounded, but generally made of meal, milk, and eggs.

*Sallads, and eggs, and lighter fare
Tune the Italian spark's guitar;
And if I take Dan Congreve right,*

Pudding and beef make Britons fight.

PRIOR.

2. The gut of an animal.

He'll yield the crow a pudding one of these days; the king has kill'd his heart.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

As sure as his guts are made of puddings.

SHAKESPEARE.

3. A bowel stuffed with certain mixtures of meal and other ingredients.

Mind neither good nor bad, nor right nor wrong,

But eat your pudding, slave, and hold your tongue. PRIOR.<sup>175</sup>

PU'DDINGPIE. n.s. [pudding and pie.] A pudding with meat baked in it.

Some cry the covenant, instead Of puddingpies and gingerbread.

HUDIBRAS.

PU'DDINGTIME. n.s. [pudding and time.]

1. The time of dinner; the time at which pudding, anciently the first dish, is set upon the table.

2. Nick of time; critical minute.

*Mars that still protects the stout,
In puddingtime came to his aid.*

HUDIBRAS.

PUG. n.s. [piga, Saxon, a girl. Skinner.] A kind name of a monkey, or any thing tenderly loved.

Upon setting him down, and calling him pug, I found him to be her favourite monkey. ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

PU'LPIT. n.s. [pulpitum, Lat. pulpitre, pupitre, Fr.]

1. A place raised on high, where a speaker stands.

*Produce his body to the market-place,
And in the pulpit, as becomes a friend,
Speak in the order of his funeral.*

SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

2. The higher desk in the church where the sermon is pronounced; distinct from the lower desk where prayers are read.

We see on our theatres, the examples of vice rewarded, yet it ought not to be an argument against the art, any more than the impieties of the pulpit in the late rebellion. DRYDEN.

Sir Roger has given a handsome pulpit cloth, and railed in the communion table.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 112.

Bishops were not wont to preach out of the pulpit. AYLIFFE.

*Pulpits their sacred satyr learn'd to spare,
And vice admir'd to find a flatt'rer there.*

POPE.

To PU'LVIL. v.a. [from the noun.] To sprinkle with perfumes in powder.

Have you pulvilled the coachman and postilion, that they may not stink of the stable.

CONGREVE'S WAY OF THE WORLD.

PUN. n.s. [I know not whence this word is to be deduced: to pun, is to grind or beat with a pestle; can pun mean an empty sound, like that of a mortar beaten, as clench, the old word for pun, seems only a corruption of clink?] An equivocation; a quibble; an expression where a word has at once different meanings.

It is not the word, but the figure that appears on the medal: cuniculus may stand for a rabbit or a mine, but the picture of a rabbit is not the picture of a mine: a pun can be no more engraven, than it can be translated. ADDISON.

But fill their purse, our poet's work is done, Alike to them by pathos, or by pun.
POPE.

PUNCTI'LIO. n.s. A small nicety of behaviour; a nice point of exactness.

Common people are much astonished, when they hear of those solemn contests which are made among the great, upon the punctilios of a publick ceremony.
ADDISON.

Punctilio is out of doors, the moment a daughter clandestinely quits her father's house.
CLARISSA.

PUNCTUA'TION. n.s. [punctum, Lat.] The act or method of pointing.

It ought to do it willingly, without being forced to it by any change in the words or punctuation. ADDISON.

PUNK. n.s. A whore; a common prostitute; a strumpet.

She may be a punk; for many of them are neither maid, widow, nor wife.
SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

*And made them fight, like mad or drunk,
For dame religion as for punk.*
HUDIBRAS.

*Near these a nursery erects its head,
Where unfledg'd actors learn to laugh and cry,
Where infant punks their tender voices try.* DRYDEN.

PU'NSTER. n.s. [from pun.] A quibbler; a low wit who endeavours at reputation by double meaning.

His mother was cousin to Mr. Swan, gamester and punster of London.

ARBUTHNOT AND POPE.

To PUNT. v.n. To play at basset and ombre.

One is for setting up an assembly for basset, where none shall be admitted to punt, that have not taken the oaths. ADDISON.

*When a duke to Jansen punts at White's,
Or city heir in mortgage melts away,
Satan himself feels far less joy than they.*
POPE.

PU'PPETSHOW. n.s. [puppet and show.] A mock drama performed by wooden images moved by wire.

*Tim, you have a taste I know,
And often see a puppetshow.* SWIFT.
To induce him to be fond of learning, he would frequently carry him to the puppetshow. ARBUTHNOT AND POPE.
A president of the council will make no more impression upon my mind, than the sight of a puppetshow. POPE.

PURBLI'ND. adj. [corrupted from poreblind, which is still used in Scotland; pore and blind.] Nearsighted; shortsighted.

*Speak to my gossip Venus one fair word,
One nickname to her purblind son and heir.* SHAKESPEARE.

*The truth appears so naked on my side,
That any purblind eye may find it out.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*'Tis known to several
Of head piece extraordinary; lower messes
Perchance, are to this business purblind.*
SHAKESPEARE.

Like to purblind moles, no greater light than that little which they shun.
DRUMMOND.

Darkness, that here surrounded our purblind understandings, will vanish at the dawning of eternal day. BOYLE.

*Dropt in blear thick-sighted eyes,
They'd make them see in darkest night,
Like owls, though purblind in the light.*

HUDIBRAS.

*Purblind man Sees but a part o' th' chain, the nearest links;
His eyes not carrying to that equal beam,
That poises all above.*

DRYDEN AND LEE'S OEDIPUS.

PU'RIST. n.s. [puriste, Fr.] One superstitiously nice in the use of words.

PURL. n.s. [this is justly supposed by Minshew to be contracted from purfle.]

1. An embroidered and puckered border.

Himself came in next after a triumphant chariot made of carnation velvet, enriched with purl and pearl. SIDNEY.

The jagging of pinks is like the inequality of oak leaves, but they seldom have any small purls. BACON.

2. [I know not whence derived.] A kind of medicated malt liquor, in which wormwood and aromatics are infused.

To PURL. v.n. [of this word it is doubtful what is the primitive signification; if it is referred originally to the appearance of a quick stream, which is always dimpled on the surface, it may come from purl, a pucker or fringe; but if, as the use of authors seem to show, it relates to the sound, it must be derived from porla, Swedish, to murmur, according to Mr. Lye.] To murmur; to flow with a gentle noise.

Tones are not so apt to procure sleep, as some other sounds; as the wind, the purling of water, and humming of bees.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

*Instruments that have returns, as trumpets;
or flexions, as cornets; or are drawn up,
and put from, as sacbuts, have a purling*

sound; but the recorder or flute, that have none of these inequalities, give a clear sound. BACON.

*All fish from sea or shore,
Freshet, or purling brook, or shell or fin.*
MILTON.

*My flow'ry theme,
A painted mistress, or a purling stream.*
POPE.

*Around th' adjoining brook, that purls
along
The vocal grove, now fretting o'er a rock.*
THOMSON.

To PURL. v.a. To decorate with fringe or embroidery.

*When was old Sherewood's head more quaintly curl'd,
Or nature's cradle more enchas'd and purl'd.* BEN JONSON.

To PURR. v.a. To murmur as a cat or leopard in pleasure.

PU'RSY. adj. [poussif, Fr.] Short-breathed and fat.

*In the fatness of these pursy times,
Virtue itself of vice must pardon beg,
Yea courb and woo for leave to do it good.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*Now breathless wrong Shall sit and pant in your great chairs of ease,
And pursy insolence shall break his wind
With fear and horrid flight.*
SHAKESPEARE'S TIMON OF ATHENS.

By these, the Medes Perfume their breaths, and cure old pursy men. TEMPLE.

*An hostess dowager,
Grown fat and pursy by retail
Of pots of beer and bottl'd ale.*
HUDIBRAS, P. III.

PU'SHPIN. n.s. [push and pin.] A child's play, in which pins are pushed alternately.

Men, that have wandering thoughts at the voice of wisdom out of the mouth of a philosopher, deserve as well to be whipt, as boys for playing at pushpin, when they should be learning. L'ESTRANGE.

PUSS. n.s. [I know not whence derived; pusio, Lat. is a dwarf.]

1. The fondling name of a cat.

A young fellow, in love with a cat, made it his humble suit to Venus to turn puss into a woman. L'ESTRANGE.

Let puss practice what nature teaches.

WATTS.

I will permit my son to play at apodidras-cinda, which can be no other than our puss in a corner. ARBUTHNOT AND POPE.

2. The sportsman's term for a hare.

*Poor honest puss,
It grieves my heart to see thee thus;
But hounds eat sheep as well as hares.*

GAY.

PU'TAGE. n.s. [putain, Fr.] In law, prostitution on the woman's part.

PU'TANISM. n.s. [putanisme, Fr.] The manner of living, or trade of a prostitute. Dictionaries.

PY'GMY. n.s. [pygmée, Fr.

πυγμαίος.] A dwarf; one of a nation fabled to be only three spans high, and after long wars to have been destroyed by cranes.<sup>176</sup>

If they deny the present spontaneous production of larger plants, and confine the earth to as pygmy births in the vegetable kingdom, as they do in the other; yet surely in such a supposed universal decay of nature, even mankind itself that is now nourished, though not produced, by the earth, must have degenerated in stature and strength in every generation.

BENTLEY.

Q

Is a consonant borrowed from the Latin or French, for which, though q is commonly placed in the Saxon alphabet, the Saxons generally used cp, cw; as cpellan or cwellan, to quell: qu is, in English, pronounced as by the Italians and Spaniards cw; as quail, quench, except quoit, which is spoken, according to the manner of the French, coit: the name of this letter is cue, from queue, French, tail; its form being that of an O with a tail.

To QUACK. v.n. [quacken, Dutch, to cry as a goose.]

1. To cry like a duck. This word is often written quaake, to represent the sound better.

Wild-ducks quack where grasshoppers did sing. KING.

2. To chatter boastingly; to brag loudly; to talk ostentatiously.

*Believe mechanick virtuosi
Can raise them mountains in Potosi,
Seek out for plants with signatures,
To quack of universal cures.*

HUDIBRAS, P. III.

QUACK. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. A boastful pretender to arts which he does not understand.

The change, schools and pulpits are full of quacks, jugglers and plagiaries.

L'ESTRANGE.

Some quacks in the art of teaching, pretend to make young gentlemen masters of the languages, before they can be masters of common sense.

FELTON ON THE CLASSICKS.

2. A vain boastful pretender to physick; one who proclaims his own medical abilities in publick places.

*At the first appearance that a French quack made in Paris: a little boy walked before him, publishing with a shrill voice, "My father cures all sorts of distempers;" to which the doctor added in a grave manner,
"The child says true." ADDISON.*

3. An artful tricking practitioner in physick.

*Despairing quacks with curses fled the
place,*

And vile attorneys, now an useless race.

POPE.

QUA'CKSALVER. n.s. [quack and salve.] One who brags of medicines or salves; a medicaster; a charlatan.

Saltimbancoes, quacksalvers and charlatans deceive the vulgar in lower degrees;

were Æsop alive, the piazza and the pont neuf could not speak their fallacies.

BROWN.

Many poor country vicars, for want of other means, are driven to their shifts; to turn mountebanks, quacksalvers and empiricks. BURTON ON MELANCHOLY.

To QUAFF. v.a. [of this word the derivation is uncertain: Junius, with his usual idleness of conjecture, derives it from the Greek, κναφίζειν in the Eolick dialect used for κναφίθειν. I from go off, as go off, guoff, quoff, quaff. It comes from coefffer, Fr. to be drunk.]<sup>177</sup>

To drink; to swallow in large draughts. He calls for wine; a health, quoth he, as if H'ad been abroad carousing to his mates After a storm, quafft off the muscadel, And threw the sops all in the sexton's face.

SHAKESPEARE.

I found the prince,
With such a deep demeanour in great sorrow,
That tyranny, which never quafft but blood,
Would, by beholding him, have wash'd his knife
With gentle eye drops.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV. P. II.

On flow'rs repos'd, and with rich flow'rets crown'd,
They eat, they drink, and in communion sweet
Quaff immortality and joy.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. V.

To QUA'FFER. v.n. [a low word, I suppose, formed by chance.] To feel out. This seems to be the meaning.

Ducks, having larger nerves that come into their bills than geese, quaffer and grope out their meat the most. DERHAM.

QUA'RANTAIN, QUARANTINE. n.s. [quarantain, Fr.] The space of forty days, being the time which a ship, suspected of infection, is obliged to forbear intercourse or commerce.

Pass your quarantine among some of the churches round this town, where you may learn to speak before you venture to expose your parts in a city congregation. SWIFT.

To QUECK. v.n. To shrink; to show pain; perhaps to complain.

The lads of Sparta were accustomed to be whipped at altars, without so much as quecking. BACON.

QUEER. adj. [of this word the original is not known: a correspondent supposes a queer man to be one who has a quære to his name in a list.] Odd; strange; original; particular.

He never went to bed till two in the morning, because he would not be a queer fellow; and was every now and then knocked down by a constable, to signalize his vivacity. SPECTATOR.

QUERIMO'NIOUS. adj. [querimonia, Latin.] Querulous; complaining.

QUE'RIST. n.s. [from quæro, Lat.] An enquirer; an asker of questions.

I shall propose some considerations to my gentle querist. SPECTATOR.

The juggling sea god, when by chance trepan'd
By some instructed querist sleeping on the strand,
Impatient of all answers, strait became
A stealing brook.

SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

QUE'RPO. n.s. [corrupted from cuervo, Spanish.] A dress close to the body; a waistcoat.

I would fain see him walk in querpo, like a cased rabbit, without his holy furr upon his back. DRYDEN.

QUE'STMAN, QUEST-MONGER. n.s. [quest, man, and monger.] Starter of lawsuits or prosecutions.

Their principal working was upon penal laws, wherein they spared none, great nor small, but raked over all new and old statutes, having ever a rabble of promoters, questmongers, and leading jurors at their command. BACON.

QUI'BBLER. n.s. [from quibble.] A punster.

To QUI'CKSET. v.a. [quick and set.] To plant with living plants.

*In making or mending, as needeth thy ditch,
Get set to quickset it, learn cunningly which.* TUSSER.

A man may ditch and quickset three poles a day, where the ditch is three foot wide and two foot deep. MORTIMER.

QUI'CKSET. n.s. [quick and set.] Living plant set to grow.

Plant quicksets and transplant fruit trees towards the decrease.
EVELYN'S KALENDAR.

Nine in ten of the quickset hedges are ruined for want of skill.
SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

QUI'DDANY. n.s. [cydonium, cydoniatum, Lat. quidden, German, a quince.] Marmalade; confection of quinces made with sugar.

To QUINCH. v.n. [this word seems to be the same with queech, winch and queck.] To stir; to flounce as in resentment or pain.

Bestow all my soldiers in such sort as I have, that no part of all that realm shall be able to dare to quinch. SPENSER.

QUI'NTAIN. n.s. [quintain, Fr.] A post with a turning top. See QUINTIN.

*My better parts
Are all thrown down; and that, which here stands up,
Is but a quintain, a mere lifeless block.*
SHAKESPEARE.

QUI'NTIN. n.s. [I know not whence derived; Minshew deduces it from quintus, Lat. and calls it a game celebrated every fifth year; palus quintanus, Lat. Ainsworth. quintaine, Fr.] An upright post, on the top of which a cross post turned upon a pin, at one end of the cross post was a broad board, and at the other a heavy sand bag; the play was to ride against the broad end with a lance, and pass by before the sand bag coming round, should strike the tilter on the back.

*At quintin he,
In honour of his bridaltee,
Hath challeng'd either wide countee;
Come cut and long tail, for there be Six batchelors as bold as he,
Adjuting to his company,
And each one hath his livery.*
BEN JONSON.

QUIRE.<sup>178</sup> n.s. [choeur, Fr. choro, Italian.]

1. A body of singers; a chorus.

*The trees did bud and early blossoms bore,
And all the quire of birds did sweetly sing,
And told that garden's pleasures in their caroling.* FAIRY QUEEN.

*Myself have lim'd a bush for her,
And plac'd a quire of such enticing birds,
That she will light to listen to their lays.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*At thy nativity a glorious quire
Of angels in the fields of Bethlehem sung To shepherds watching at their folds by night,
And told them the Messiah now was born.*
MILTON.

*I may worship thee
For ay, with temples vow'd and virgin
quires.* MILTON.

*As in beauty she surpass'd the quire,
So nobler than the rest was her attire.*

DRYDEN.

2. The part of the church where the service is sung.

I am all on fire,

*Not all the buckets in a country quire
Shall quench my rage.* CLEVELAND.

*Some run for buckets to the hallow'd quire,
Some cut the pipes, and some the engines
play.* DRYDEN.

*The fox obscene to gaping tombs retires,
And wolves with howling fill the sacred quires.* POPE.

3. [Cahier, Fr.] A bundle of paper consisting of twenty-four sheets.

QUI'RISTER. n.s. [from quire.] Chorister; one who sings in concert, generally in divine service.

*The coy quiristers, that lodge within,
Are prodigal of harmony.*

THOMSON'S SPRING.

QUITS. interj. [from quit.] An exclamation used when any thing is repayed and the parties become even.

To QUOB. v.n. [a low word.] To move as the embrio does in the womb; to move as the heart does when throbbing.

R

Is called the canine letter, because it is uttered with some resemblance to the growl or snarl of a cur: it has one constant sound in English, such as it has in other languages; as red, rose, more, muriatick: in words derived from the Greek, it is followed by an h, rhapsody: r is never mute, unless the second r may be accounted mute, where two rr are used; as myrrh.

RA'CKET. n.s. [of uncertain derivation; M. Casaubon derives it, after his custom, from ραχία, the dash of fluctuation against the shore.]

1. An irregular clattering noise.

That the tennis court keeper knows better than I, it is a low ebb of linen with thee, when thou keepest not racket there.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV. P. II.

2. A confused talk, in burlesque language.

Ambition hath removed her lodging, and lives the next door to faction, where they keep such a racket, that the whole parish is disturbed and every night in an uproar.

SWIFT.

3. [Raquette, Fr.] The instrument with which players strike the ball. Whence perhaps all the other senses.

When we have matcht our rackets to these balls,

We will in France play a set,

Shall strike his father's crown into the hazard. SHAKESPEARE.

The body, into which impression is made, either can yield backward or it cannot: if it can yield backward, then the impression made is a motion; as we see a stroke with a racket upon a ball, makes it fly from it.

DIGBY ON THE SOUL.

He talks much of the motives to do and forbear, how they determine a reasonable man, as if he were no more than a tennis-ball, to be tossed to and fro by the rackets of the second causes.

BRAMHALL AGAINST HOBBS.

To RA'DICATE. v.a. [radicatus, from radix, Lat.] To root; to plant deeply and firmly.

Meditation will radicate these seeds, fix the transient gleam of light and warmth, confirm resolutions of good, and give them a durable consistence in the soul.

HAMMOND.

Nor have we let fall our pen upon discour- agement of unbelief, from radicated beliefs, and points of high prescription.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

If the object stays not on the sense, it makes not impression enough to be remembered; but if it be repeated there, it leaves plenty enough of those images behind it, to strengthen the knowledge of the object: in which radicated knowledge, if the memory consist, there would be no need of reserving those atoms in the brain.

GLANVILLE'S DEFENCE.

To RAFF. v.a. To sweep; to huddle; to take hastily without distinction.

Their causes and effects I thus raff up together. CAREW.

RA'FFLE. n.s. [rafle, Fr. from the verb.] A species of game or lottery, in which many stake a small part of the value of some single thing, in consideration of a chance to gain it.

The toy, brought to Rome in the third triumph of Pompey, being a pair of tables for gaming, made of two precious stones, three foot broad, and four foot long, would have made a fine raffle.

ARBUTHNOT ON COINS.

RAGAMU'FFIN. n.s. [from rag and I know not what else.] A paltry mean fellow.<sup>179</sup>

I have led my ragamuffins where they were pepper'd; there's not three of my hundred and fifty left alive; and they are for the town's end to beg during life.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

*Shall we brook that paltry ass
And feeble scoundrel, Hudibras,
With that more paltry ragamuffin,
Ralpho, vapouring and huffing.*

HUDIBRAS.

Attended with a crew of ragamuffins, she broke into his house, turned all things topsy-turvy, and then set it on fire.

SWIFT.

RA'GEFUL. adj. [rage and full.]

Furious; violent.

This courtesy was worse than a bastinado to Zelmane; so that again with rageful eyes she bad him defend himself; for no less than his life would answer it. SIDNEY, B. II.

A popular orator may represent vices in so formidable appearances, and set out each virtue in so amiable a form, that the covetous person shall scatter most liberally his beloved idol, wealth, and the rageful person shall find a calm. HAMMOND.

RA'GMAN. n.s. [rag and man.] One who deals in rags.

RAI'NDEER. n.s. [hranas, Saxon; rangifer, Latin.] A deer with large horns, which, in the northern regions, draws sledges through the snow.

RAKE. n.s. [rastrum, Lat. race, Sax. racche, Dutch.]

1. An instrument with teeth, by which the ground is divided, or light bodies are gathered up.

*At Midsummer down with the brembles
and brakes,
And after abroad with thy forkes and thy rakes.* TUSSER.

*O that thy bounteous deity wou'd please
To guide my rake upon the chinking sound Of some vast treasure hidden under ground.* DRYDEN.

He examines his face in the stream, combs his rufol locks with a rake. GARTH.

2. [Racaille, Fr. the low rabble; or rekel, Dutch, a worthless cur dog.] A loose, disorderly, vicious, wild, gay, thoughtless fellow; a man addicted to pleasure.

The next came with her son, who was the greatest rake in the place, but so much the mother's darling, that she left her husband for the sake of this graceless youth.

ADDISON.

Rakes hate sober grave gentlewomen.

ARBUTHNOT.

*Men, some to bus'ness, some to pleasure
take;*

But ev'ry woman is at heart a rake.

POPE.

*The sire saw smiling his own virtues wake;
The mother begg'd the blessing of a rake.*

POPE.

RA'KEHEL. n.s. [of this word the etymology is doubtful: as it is now written, it is apparently derived from rake and hell, and may aptly represent a wretch whose life is passed in places of lewdness and wickedness: Skinner derives it from racaille, French, the rabble; Junius, from rekel, Dutch, a mongrel dog.] A wild, worthless, dissolute, debauched, sorry fellow.

Out of the frie of these rakehell horse-boys, growing up in knavery and villainy, are their kern supplied. SPENSER.

The king, when he heard of Perkins's siege of Exeter, said in sport, that the king of rakehells was landed in the West, and that he hoped now to see him. BACON.

A rakehell of the town, whose character is set off with excessive prodigality, prophaneness, intemperance and lust, is rewarded with a lady of great fortune to repair his own, which his vices had almost ruined.

SWIFT.

RA'KEHELLY. adv. [from rakehell.] Wild; dissolute.

I scorn the rakehelly rout of our ragged rhimers, which without learning boast, without judgment jangle, and without reason rage and foam.

SPENSER'S PASTORALS.

No breaking of windows or glasses for spight,

*And spoiling the goods for a rakehelly
prank.* BEN JONSON.

RA'KISH. adj. [from rake.] Loose; lewd; dissolute.

There seldom can be peculiarity in the love of a rakish heart. CLARISSA.

RA'MOUS. adj. [from ramus, Latin] Branchy; consisting of branches.

Which vast contraction and expansion seems unintelligible, by feigning the particles of air to be springy and ramous, or rolled up like hoops, or by any other means than a repulsive power.

NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

A ramous efflorescence, of a fine white spar, found hanging from a crust of like spar, at the top of an old wrought cavern.

WOODWARD ON FOSSILS.

To RANT. v.n. [randen, Dutch, to rave.] To rave in violent or high sounding language without proportionable dignity of thought.

Look where my ranting host of the garter comes; there is either liquor in his pate, or money in his purse, when he looks so merrily.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF
WINDSOR.

Nay, an thou'lt mouth, I'll rant as well as thou. SHAKESPEARE.

They have attacked me; some with piteous moans, others grinning and only shewing their teeth, others ranting and hectoring, others scolding and reviling.

STILLINGFLEET.

RA'PPORT. n.s. [rappat, Fr.]

Relation; reference; proportion. A word introduced by the innovator, Temple, but not copied by others.

'Tis obvious what rapport there is between the conceptions and languages in every country, and how great a difference this must make in the excellence of books.

TEMPLE.

RA'REESHOW. n.s. [this word is formed in imitation of the foreign way of pronouncing rare show.] A show carried in a box.

The fashions of the town affect us just like a rareeshow, we have the curiosity to peep at them, and nothing more. POPE.

Of rareeshows he sung, and Punch's feats.

GAY.

RASP. n.s. [raspo, Italian.] A delicious berry that grows on a species of the bramble; a raspberry.

Sorrel set amongst rasps, and the rasps will be the smaller.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

*Now will the corinths, now the rasps supply
Delicious draughts, when prest to wines.*

PHILIPS.

To RASP. v.a. [raspen, Dutch; rasper, Fr. raspare, Italian.] To rub to powder with a very rough file.

Some authors have advised the rasping of these bones; but in this case it is needless.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

Having prepared hard woods and ivory for the lathe with rasping, they pitch it between the pikes. MOXON.

RASP. n.s. [from the verb.] A large rough file, commonly used to wear away wood.

Case-hardening is used by file-cutters, when they make coarse files, and generally most rasps have formerly been made of iron and case-hardened.

MOXON'S MECHANICAL EXERCISES.

RA'SPATORY. n.s. [raspatoir, Fr. from rasp.] A surgeon's rasp.

I put into his mouth a raspatory, and pulled away the corrupt flesh, and with cauteries burnt it to a crust.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

RA'THER. adv. [this is a comparative from rath; rað, Saxon, soon. Now out of use. One may still say, by the same form of speaking, I will sooner do this than that; that is, I like better to do this.]

1. More willingly; with better liking.

Almighty God desireth not the death of a sinner, but rather that he should turn from his wickedness and live.

COMMON PRAYER.

2. Preferably to the other; with better reason.

'Tis rather to be thought, that an heir had no such right by divine institution, than that God should give such a right, but yet leave it undeterminate who such heir is.

LOCKE.

3. In a greater degree than otherwise.

He sought through the world, but sought in vain,

And no where finding, rather fear'd her slain. DRYDEN.

4. More properly.

This is an art,

Which does mend nature, change it rather, but

The art itself is nature.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

5. Especially.

You are come to me in a happy time,

The rather for I have some sport in hand.

SHAKESPEARE.

6. To have RATHER. [this is, I think, a barbarous expression of late intrusion into our language, for which it is better to say will rather.] To desire in preference.

'Tis with reluctancy he is provoked by our impenitence to apply the discipline of severity and correction; he had rather mankind should adore him as their patron and benefactor. ROGERS'S SERMONS.

RAU' CITY. n.s. [raucus, Lat.]

Hoarseness; loud rough noise.

Inequality not stayed upon, but passing, is rather an encrease of sweetness; as in the purling of a wreathed string, and in the raucity of a trumpet.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

RA'WHEAD. n.s. [raw and head.]

The name of a spectre, mentioned to fright children.

Hence draw thy theme, and to the stage permit

Rawhead and bloody bones, and hands and feet,

Ragousts for Tereus or Thyestes drest.
 DRYDEN.

Servants awe children, and keep them in subjection, by telling them of rawhead and bloodybones. LOCKE.

To READ. v.a. pret. read, part. pass.
read. [ræd, Saxon.]

1. To peruse any thing written.

I have seen her take forth paper, write upon't, read it, and afterwards seal it.
 SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

The passage you must have read, though since slipt out of your memory. POPE.

If we have not leisure to read over the book itself regularly, then by the titles of chapters we may be directed to peruse several sections.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

2. To discover by characters or marks.

*An armed corse did lye,
 In whose dead face he read great magnanimity.* SPENSER.

3. To learn by observation.

Those about her From her shall read the perfect ways of honour. SHAKESPEARE.

4. To know fully.

 Submiss: he rear'd me.* MILTON.

3. To move upwards.

*Up to a hill anon his steps he rear'd,
 From whose high top to ken the prospect round.* MILTON.

4. To bring up to maturity.

No creature goeth to generate, whilst the female is busy in sitting or rearing her young. BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

They were a very hardy breed, and reared their young ones without any care.
 MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

*They flourish'd long in tender bliss, and rear'd
 A numerous offspring, lovely like themselves.* THOMSON.

5. To educate; to instruct.

*He wants a father to protect his youth,
 And rear him up to virtue.* SOUTHERN.

They have in every town publick nurseries, where all parents, except cottagers and labourers, are obliged to send their infants to be reared and educated. SWIFT.

6. To exalt; to elevate.

*Charity decent, modest, easy, kind,
 Softens the high, and rears the abject mind.* PRIOR.

7. To rouse; to stir up.

*Into the naked woods he goes,
 And seeks the tusky boar to rear,
 With well-mouth'd hounds and pointed spear.* DRYDEN.<sup>180</sup>

REA'WARD. n.s. [from rear.]

1. The last troop.

He from the beginning began to be in the rearward, and before they left fighting, was too far off. SIDNEY.

The standard of Dan was the rearward of the camp.

BIBLE NUMBERS.

2. The end; the tail; a train behind.

Why follow'd not, when she said Tybalt's dead,

Thy father or thy mother?

But with a rearward following Tybalt's death,

Romeo is banished.

SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO AND JULIET.

3. The latter part. In contempt.

He was ever in the rearward of the fashion. SHAKESPEARE.

To REBE'LOW. v.n. [re and bellow.] To bellow in return; to echo back a loud noise.

*He loudly bray'd with beastly yelling sound,
That all the fields rebellowed again.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

*The resisting air the thunder broke,
The cave rebellow'd, and the temple shook.* DRYDEN.

From whence were heard, rebellowing to the main,

The roars of lions. DRYDEN'S ÆNEIS.

REBOA'TION. n.s. [reboo, Lat.] The return of a loud bellowing sound.

REBU'KE. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. Reprehension; chiding expression; objurgation.

Why bear you these rebukes, and answer not? SHAKESPEARE.

If he will not yield,

*Rebuke and dread correction wait on us,
And they shall do their office.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

The channels of waters were seen; at thy rebuke, O Lord, at the blast of the breath of thy nostrils.

BIBLE PSALMS, XVIII. 15.

Thy rebuke hath broken my heart; I am full of heaviness.

BIBLE PSALM LXIX. 21.

The rebukes and chiding to children, should be in grave and dispassionate words. LOCKE.

Shall Cibber's son, without rebuke, Swear like a lord? POPE.

*Should vice expect to 'scape rebuke,
Because its owner is a duke?*

SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

2. In low language, it signifies any kind of check.

He gave him so terrible a rebuke upon the forehead with his heel, that he laid him at his length. L'ESTRANGE.

Some citizens, wanting arms, have coined themselves certain devices alluding to their names, which we call rebus: Master Juggle the printer, in many of his books, took, to express his name, a nightingale sitting in a bush with a scrole in her mouth, wherein was written juggle, juggle, juggle.

PEACHAM.

RE'CEPTIVE. adj. [receptus, Lat.] Having the quality of admitting what is communicated.

The soul being, as it is active, perfected by love of that infinite good, shall, as it is receptive, be also perfected with those supernatural passions of joy, peace and delight.

HOOKE.

The pretended first matter is capable of all forms, and the imaginary space is receptive of all bodies. GLANVILLE.

RE'CIPE. n.s. [recipe, Lat. the term used by physicians, when they direct ingredients.] A medical prescription.

I should enjoin you travel; for absence doth in a kind remove the cause, and answers the physicians first recipe, vomiting and purging; but this would be too harsh.

SUCKLING.

*Th' apothecary train is wholly blind,
From files a random recipe they take,
And many deaths of one prescription make.* DRYDEN.

RECI'PIENT. n.s. [recipiens, Latin.]

1. The receiver; that to which any thing is communicated.

Though the images, or whatever else is the cause of sense, may be alike as from the object, yet may the representations be varied according to the nature of the recipient. GLANVILLE.

2. [Recipient, Fr.] The vessel into which spirits are driven by the still.

*The form of sound words, dissolved by chymical preparation, ceases to be nutritive;
and after all the labours of the alembek,
leaves in the recipient a fretting corrosive.*
DECAY OF PIETY.

RECITA'TION. n.s. [from recite.]

Repetition; rehearsal.

If menaces of scripture fall upon men's persons, if they are but the recitations and descriptions of God's decreed wrath, and those decrees and that wrath have no respect to the actual sins of men; why should terrors restrain me from sin, when present advantage invites me to it?
HAMMOND.

He used philosophical arguments and recitations. TEMPLE.

RECI'TATIVE, RECITATIVO.

n.s. [from recite.] A kind of tuneful pronunciation, more musical than common speech, and less than song; chaunt.

He introduced the examples of moral virtue, writ in verse, and performed in recitative musick. DRYDEN.

*By singing peers upheld on either hand,
Then thus in quaint recitativo spoke.*
DUNCIAD, B. IV.

To RECI'TE. v.a. [recito, Lat. reciter, Fr.] To rehearse; to repeat; to enumerate; to tell over.

*While Telephus's youthful charms,
His rosy neck, and winding arms,
With endless rapture you recite,
And in the tender name delight.*

ADDISON.

*The thoughts of gods let Granville's verse recite,
And bring the scenes of op'ning fate to light.* POPE.

*If we will recite nine hours in ten,
You lose your patience.*
POPE'S EPISTLES OF HORACE.

To RECOGNI'SE. v.a. [recognosco, Lat.]

1. To acknowledge; to recover and avow knowledge of any person or thing.

*The British cannon formidably roars,
While starting from his oozy bed,
Th' asserted ocean rears his reverend head,
To view and recognise his ancient lord.*
DRYDEN.

*Then first he recognis'd th' æthereal guest,
Wonder and joy alternate fire his breast.*
POPE.

2. To review; to reexamine.

However their causes speed in your tribunals, Christ will recognise them at a greater. SOUTH.

RECO'RD. n.s. [record, Fr. from the verb. The accent of the noun is indifferently on either syllable; of the verb always on the last.] Register; authentic memorial.

Is it upon record? or else reported Successively, from age to age?
SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

*It cannot be
The Volscians dare break with us.
— We have record that very well it can;
And three examples of the like have been.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*The king made a record of these things,
and Mardocheus wrote thereof.*
BIBLE ESTHER, XII. 4.

*An ark, and in the ark his testimony,
The records of his covenant.* MILTON.

*Of such a goddess no time leaves record,
Who burn'd the temple where she was ador'd.* DRYDEN.

If he affirms such a monarchy continued to the flood, I would know what records he has it from. LOCKE.

Though the attested copy of a record be good proof, yet the copy of a copy never so well attested will not be admitted as a proof in judicature. LOCKE.

*Thy elder look, great Janus! cast
Into the long records of ages past;
Review the years in fairest action drest.*
PRIOR.

RE'CREMENT. n.s. [recrementum, Lat.] Dross; spume; superfluous or useless parts.

their colour;
As flowers by sprinkling revive with fresh odour.* GRANVILLE.

*This sun is set; but see in bright array What hosts of heavenly lights recruit the
day!*

Love in a shining galaxy appears Triumphant still. GRANVILLE.

Seeing the variety of motion, which we find in the world is always decreasing, there is a necessity of conserving and recruiting it by active principles; such as are the cause of gravity, by which planets and comets keep their motions in their orbs, and bodies acquire great motion in falling.

NEWTON.

2. To supply an army with new men.

He trusted the earl of Holland with the command of that army, with which he was to be recruited and assisted.

CLARENDON.

RECUBA'TION. n.s. [recubo,
Latin.] The act of lying or leaning.

*Whereas our translation renders it sitting,
it cannot have that illation, for the French

REFORMA'TION. n.s. [reformation, Fr. from reform.]

1. Change from worse to better.

*Never came reformation in a flood
With such a heady current, scow'ring faults;*

*Nor ever Hydra-headed wilfulness
So soon did lose his seat, as in this king.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

Satire lashes vice into reformation.

DRYDEN.

The pagan converts mention this great reformation of those who had been the greatest sinners, with that sudden and surprising change, which the christian religion made in the lives of the most profligate. ADDISON.

2.<sup>182</sup> The change of religion from the corruptions of popery to its primitive state.

The burden of the reformation lay on Luther's shoulders. ATTERBURY.

REFO'RMER. n.s. [from reform.]

1. One who makes a change for the better; an amender.

Publick reformers had need first practise that on their own hearts, which they purpose to try on others.

KING CHARLES.

The complaint is more general, than the endeavours to redress it: Abroad every man would be a reformer, how very few at home. SPRAT'S SERMONS.

It was honour enough, to behold the English churches reformed; that is, delivered from the reformers. SOUTH.

2. Those who changed religion from popish corruptions and innovations.

Our first reformers were famous confessors and martyrs all over the world. BACON.

To REFRI'GERATE. v.a. [refrigero, re and frigus, Lat.] To cool.

The great breezes, which the motion of the air in great circles, such as the girdle of the world, produceth, do refrigerate; and therefore in those parts noon is nothing so hot, when the breezes are great, as about ten of the clock in the forenoon.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

Whether they be refrigerated inclinatorily or somewhat equinoxically, though in a lesser degree, they discover some verticity.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

REFRIGERA'TION. n.s. [refrigeratio, Lat. refrigeration, Fr.] The act of cooling; the state of being cooled.

Divers do stut; the cause may be the refrigeration of the tongue, whereby it is less apt to move. BACON.

If the mere refrigeration of the air would fit it for breathing, this might be somewhat helped with bellows. WILKINS.

REFRI'GERATORY. n.s.

1. That part of a distilling vessel that is placed about the head of a still, and filled with water to cool the condensing vapours; but this is now generally done by a worm or spiral pipe, turning through a tub of cold water. Quincy.

The secret'st man of blood.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

4. Kindred; alliance of kin.

*Relations dear, and all the charities
Of fathers, son and brother first were known.* MILTON.

*Be kindred and relation laid aside,
And honour's cause by laws of honour try'd.* DRYDEN.

*Are we not to pity and supply the poor, though they have no relation to us? no relation? that cannot be: the gospel stiles them all our brethren; nay, they have a nearer relation to us, our fellow-members;
and both these from their relation to our Saviour himself, who calls them his brethren.* SPRAT.

5. Person related by birth or marriage; kinsman; kinswoman.

religion.] A bigot to any religious persuasion.

The lawfulness of taking oaths may be revealed to the quakers, who then will stand upon as good a foot for preferment as any other subject; under such a motly adminis- tration, what pullings and hawlings, what a zeal and biass there will be in each religionist to advance his own tribe, and depress the others. SWIFT.

RELI'NQUISHMENT. n.s. [from relinquish.] The act of forsaking.

Government or ceremonies, or whatsoever it be, which is popish, away with it: this is the thing they require in us, the utter relinquishment of all things popish. HOOKER.

That natural tenderness of conscience, which must first create in the soul a sense of sin, and from thence produce a sorrow for it, and at length cause a relinquishment of it, is took away by a customary repeated course of sinning. SOUTH.

To RELU'ME. v.a. To light anew; to rekindle.

Relume her ancient light, nor kindle new.
POPE.

To RELU'MINE. v.a. To light anew.

I know not where is that Promethean
heat,
That can thy light relumine.*
SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

To REMA'ND. v.a. [re and mando,
Lat.] To send back; to call back.

The better sort quitted their freeholds and fled into England, and never returned, though many laws were made to remand them back. DAVIES ON IRELAND.

Philoxenus, for despising some dull poetry of Dionysius, was condemned to dig in the quarries; from whence being remanded, at his return Dionysius produced some other of his verses, which as soon as Philoxenus had read, he made no reply, but, calling to the waiters, said, carry me again to the quarries.

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE.

REMA'RKABLE. adj. [remarkable,
Fr.] Observable; worthy of note.

This year a reservoir, to keep and spare;
The next, a fountain spouting through his heir.* POPE.

To RESI'DE. v.n. [resideo, Lat.
resider, Fr.]

1. To have abode; to live; to dwell; to be present.

How can God with such reside?

MILTON.

*In no fix'd place the happy souls reside;
In groves we live, and lie on mossy beds.*
DRYDEN'S ÆNEIS.

2. [Resido, Lat.] To sink; to subside; to fall to the bottom.

Oil of vitriol and petroleum, a drachm of each, turn into a mouldy substance; there residing in the bottom a fair cloud and a thick oil on the top. BOYLE.

RE'SIDENT. adj. [residens, Lat.
resident, Fr.] Dwelling or having abode in any place.

I am not concerned in this objection; not thinking it necessary, that Christ should be personally present or resident on earth in the millenium.

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

He is not said to be resident in a place, who comes thither with a purpose of retiring immediately; so also he is said to be absent, who is absent with his family.

AYLIFFE'S PARERGON.

RE'SIDENT. n.s. [from the adj.] An agent, minister, or officer residing in any distant place with the dignity of an ambassador.

The pope fears the English will suffer nothing like a resident or consul in his kingdoms. ADDISON.

RESIPI'SCENCE. n.s. [resipiscence, Fr. resipiscentia, low Lat.] Wisdom after the fact; repentance.

RESI'STANCE, RESISTENCE. n.s. [resistance, Fr. This word, like many others, is differently written, as it is supposed to have come from the Latin or the French.]

1. The act of resisting; opposition.

Demetrius, seeing that the land was quiet, and that no resistance was made against him, sent away all his forces.

BIBLE 1 MACCABEES.

2. The quality of not yielding to force or external impression.

The resistance of bone to cold is greater than of flesh; for that the flesh shrinketh, but the bone resisteth, whereby the cold becometh more eager. BACON.

Musick so softens and disarms the mind, That not an arrow does resistance find. WALLER.

The idea of solidity we receive by our touch, and it arises from the resistance which we find in body to the entrance of any other body into the place it possesses. LOCKE.

But that part of the resistance, which arises

from the vis inertiae, is proportional to the density of the matter, and cannot be diminished by dividing the matter into smaller parts, nor by any other means, than by decreasing the density of the medium.

NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

RESO'RT. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. Frequency; assembly; meeting.

Unknown, unquestion'd in that thick resort. DRYDEN.

2. Concourse; confluence.

SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

3. Act of visiting.

Join with me to forbid him her resort. SHAKESPEARE.

4. [Ressort, Fr.] Movement; active power; spring.<sup>184</sup>

Some know the resorts and falls of business, that cannot sink into the main of it. BACON'S ESSAYS.

*In fortune's empire blindly thus we go,
We wander after pathless destiny,
Whose dark resorts since prudence cannot know,
In vain it would provide for what shall be.* DRYDEN.

RESPIRA'TION. n.s. [respiration, Fr. respiratio, from respiro, Lat.]

1. The act of breathing.

Apollonius of Tyana affirmed, that the ebbing and flowing of the sea was the respiration of the world, drawing in water as breath, and putting it forth again.

BACON.

Syrups or other expectoratives do not advantage in coughs, by slipping down between the epiglottis; for, as I instanced before, that must necessarily occasion a greater cough and difficulty of respiration.

HARVEY ON CONSUMPTIONS.

The author of nature foreknew the necessity of rains and dews to the present structure of plants, and the uses of respiration to animals; and therefore created those correspondent properties in the atmosphere.

BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

2. Relief from toil.

Till the day

*Appear of respiration to the just,
And vengeance to the wicked.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. XII.

RESTA'GNANT. adj. [restagnans, Lat.] Remaining without flow or motion.

Upon the tops of high mountains, the air, which bears against the restagnant quicksilver, is less pressed by the less ponderous incumbent air. BOYLE.

RESTAURA'TION. n.s. [restauro, Lat.] The act of recovering to the former state.

Adam is in us an original cause of our nature, and of that corruption of nature which causeth death; Christ as the cause original of restauration to life.

HOOKE, B. V. S. 56.

O my dear father! restauration hang Thy medicine on my lips; and let this kiss Repair those violent harms, that my two sisters

Have in thy reverence made.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

Spermatical parts will not admit a regeneration, much less will they receive an integral restauration. BROWN.

RESTI'FF. adj. [restif, Fr. restivo, Ital.]

1. Unwilling to stir; resolute against going forward; obstinate; stubborn. It is originally used of an horse, that, though not wearied, will not be driven forward.

All, who before him did ascend the throne, Labour'd to draw three restive nations on.

ROSCOMMON.

This restiff stubbornness is never to be excused under any pretence whatsoever.

L'ESTRANGE.

*Some, with studious care,
Their restiff steeds in sandy plains prepare.* DRYDEN.

The archangel, when discord was restive, and would not be drawn from her beloved monastery with fair words, drags her out with many stripes.

DRYDEN'S DEDICATION TO JUVENAL.

*So James the drowsy genius wakes
Of Britain, long entranc'd in charms,
Restiff, and slumb'ring on its arms.*

DRYDEN.

The pamper'd colt will discipline disdain, Impatient of the lash, and restiff to the rein. DRYDEN.

2. Being at rest; being less in motion.
Not used.

the most vigorous part protecting itself, and protruding the matter upon the weaker and restive side.*

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

RESTORA'TION. n.s. [from restore; restauration, Fr.]

1. The act of replacing in a former state. This is properly restauration.

*Hail, royal Albion, hail to thee,
Thy longing people's expectation!
Sent from the gods to set us free
From bondage and from usurpation:
Behold the different climes agree,
Rejoicing in thy restoration.*

DRYDEN'S ALBION.

The Athenians, now deprived of the only person that was able to recover their losses, repent of their rashness, and endeavour in vain for his restoration. SWIFT.

2. Recovery.

The change is great in this restoration of the man, from a state of spiritual darkness, to a capacity of perceiving divine truth.

ROGERS.

RESTO'RATIVE. n.s. [from restore.] A medicine that has the power of recruiting life.

*I will kiss thy lips;
Haply some poison yet doth hang on them,
To make me die with a restorative.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ROMEO AND JULIET.

God saw it necessary by such mortifications to quench the boundless rage of an insatiable intemperance, to make the weakness of the flesh, the physick and the restorative of the spirit. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

Asses milk is an excellent restorative in consumptions. MORTIMER.

He prescribes an English gallon of asses milk, especially as a restorative.

ARBUTHNOT.

RE'STY. adj. [restiff, Fr.] Obstinate in standing still. See RESTIFF.

Come, our stomachs

Will make what's homely savoury, weariness

Can snore upon the flint, when resty sloth Finds the down pillow hard.

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

Men of discretion, whom people in power may with little ceremony load as heavy as they please, find them neither resty nor vicious. SWIFT.

RESUPINA'TION. n.s. [resupino,
Lat.] The act of lying on the back.

RETAI'LER. n.s. [from retail.] One who sells by small quantities.

From these particulars we may guess at the rest, as retailers do of the whole piece, by taking a view of its ends. HAKEWILL.

RETE'CTION. n.s. [retectus, Lat.]
The act of discovering to the view.

This is rather a restoration of a body to its own colour, or a retection of its native colour, than a change. BOYLE.

RE'TICLE. n.s. [reticulum, Lat.] A small net. Dictionaries.

RETI'ULAR. adj. [from reticulum,
Lat.] Having the form of a small net.

RETI'LATED. adj. [reticulatus, Lat.] Made of network; formed with interstitial vacuities.

*The intervals of the cavities, rising a little,
make a pretty kind of reticulated work.*

WOODWARD ON FOSSILS.

RE'TIFORM. adj. [retiformis, Lat.]
Having the form of a net.

*The uveous coat and inside of the choroides are blackened, that the rays may not be reflected backwards to confound the sight;
and if any be by the retiform coat reflected,
they are soon choaked in the black inside of the uvea.* RAY.

RETROCE'SSION. n.s. [retro-cessum, Lat.] The act of going back.

RETROCOPU'LATION. n.s.
[retro and copulation.] Post-coition.

ensueth a necessity of retrocopulation.*

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

RETROGRADA'TION. n.s. [retrogradation, Fr. from retrograde.] The act of going backward.

As for the revolutions, stations, and retrogadations of the planets, observed constantly in most certain periods of time, sufficiently demonstrates, that their motions are governed by counsel.

RAY ON THE CREATION.

RETROMI'NGENT. adj. [retro
and mingens, Lat.] Staling backward.

By reason of the backward position of the feminine parts of quadrupeds, they can hardly admit the substitution of masculine generations, except it be in retromingents.

BROWN.

RETROSPE'CTIVE. adj. [from retrospect.] Looking backwards.

*In vain the grave, with retrospective eye,
Would from the apparent what conclude the why.* POPE.

RETU'RNABLE. adj. Allowed to be reported back. A law term.

It may be decided in that court, where the verdict is returnable. HALE.

He shall have an attachment against the sheriff, directed to the coroner, and returnable into the king's bench. AYLIFFE.

RETU'RNER. n.s. [from return.] One who pays or remits money.

The chapmen, that give highest for this, can make most profit by it, and those are the returners of our money. LOCKE.

REVENUE. n.s. [revenu, Fr. Its accent is uncertain.] Income; annual profits received from lands or other funds.

They privily send over unto them the revenues, wherewith they are there maintained.

SPENSER'S STATE OF IRELAND.

She bears a duke's revenues on her back, And in her heart scorns our poverty.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

Only I retain

The name and all th' addition to a king; The sway, revenue, beloved sons, be yours.

SHAKESPEARE.

Many offices are of so small revenue, as not to furnish a man with what is sufficient for the support of his life. TEMPLE.

If the woman could have been contented with golden eggs, she might have kept that revenue on still. L'ESTRANGE.

His vassals easy, and the owner blest, They pay a trifle, and enjoy the rest: Not so a nation's revenues are paid; The servant's faults are on the master laid. SWIFT.

To REVE'RB. v.a. [reverbero, Lat.] To strike against; to reverberate. Not in use.

*Reserve thy state, with better judgment check
This hideous rashness:*

The youngest daughter does not love thee least;

Nor are those empty hearted, whose loud sound

Reverbs no hollowness.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

RE'VERENCER. n.s. [from reverence.] One who regards with reverence.

The Athenians quite sunk in their affairs, had little commerce with the rest of Greece, and were become great reverencers of crowned heads. SWIFT.

To REVE'RT. v.n. [revertir, old Fr.] To return; to fall back.

My arrows,

Too slightly timbred for so loud a wind, Would have reverted to my bow again.

SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

If his tenant and patentee shall dispose of his gift without his kingly assent, the lands shall revert to the king. BACON.

REVE'RT. n.s. [from the verb.] Return; recurrence. A musical term.

Hath not musick her figures the same with rhetorick? what is a revert but her antistrophe? PEACHAM OF MUSICK.

To REVE'ST. v.a. [revestir, revêtir, Fr. revestio, Lat.]

1. To clothe again.

Her, nathless,

Th' enchanter finding fit for his intents, Did thus revest, and deckt with due habiliments. SPENSER.

When thou of life renewest the seeds, The withered fields revest their chearful weeds. WOTTON.

2. To reinvest; to vest again in a possession or office.

REVE'STIARY. n.s. [revestiaire, Fr. from revestio, Lat.] Place where dresses are repositied.

miracles to a name, which was ingraved in the revestiary of the temple.

CAMDEN'S REMAINS.

REVI'CTION. n.s. [revictum, Lat.]
Return to life.

If the Rabines' prophecy succeed, we shall conclude the days of the phenix, not in its own, but in the last and general flames, without all hope of reviction. BROWN.

To REVI'CTUAL. v.a. [re and victual.] To stock with victuals again.

It hath been objected, that I put into Ireland, and spent much time there, taking care to revictual myself and none of the rest. RALEIGH'S APOLOGY.

REVIE'W. n.s. [reveue, Fr. from the verb.] Survey; re-examination.

We make a general review of the whole work, and a general review of nature; that, by comparing them, their full correspondency may appear.

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

The works of nature will bear a thousand views and reviews; the more narrowly we look into them, the more occasion we shall have to admire.

ATTERBURY'S SERMONS.

REVI'SAL. n.s. [from revise.]
Review; reexamination.

The revisal of these letters has been a kind of examination of conscience to me; so fairly and faithfully have I set down in them the undisguised state of the mind.

POPE.

REVI'SE. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. Review; reexamination.

The author is to be excused, who never, in regard to his eyes and other impediments, gives himself the trouble of corrections and revises. BOYLE.

2. Among printers, a second proof of a sheet corrected.

REVI'SION. n.s. [revision, Fr. from revise.] Review.

To REVIVI'FICATE. v.a. [revivifier, Fr. re and vivifico, Lat.] To recall to life.

REVO'LTR. n.s. [from revolt.]
One who changes sides; a deserter; a renegade.

Fair honour that thou dost thy God, in trusting

He will accept thee to defend his cause, A murderer, a revolter, and a robber.

MILTON'S AGONISTES.

He was not a revolter from the truth, which he had once embraced.

ATTERBURY'S SERMONS.

Those, who are negligent or revolters, shall perish. SWIFT.

REVU'LSION. n.s. [revulsion, Fr. revulsus, Lat.] The act of revolving or drawing humours from a remote part of the body.

Derivation differs from revulsion only in the measure of the distance, and the force of the medicines used: if we draw it to some very remote or contrary part, we call it revulsion; if only to some neighbouring place, and by gentle means, we call it derivation. WISEMAN OF TUMOURS.

There is a way of revulsion to let blood in an adverse part.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

I had heard of some strange cures of frenzies, by casual applications of fire to the lower parts, which seems reasonable enough, by the violent revulsion it may make of humours from the head.

TEMPLE'S MISCELLANIES.

RHABA'RBARATE. adj. [from rhabarbara, Lat.] Impregnated or tinctured with rhubarb.

The salt humours must be evacuated by the sennate, rhabarbarate, and sweet manna purgers, with acids added, or the purging waters. FLOYER ON THE HUMOURS.

RHA'BDOMANCY. n.s. [ῥάβδος and μαντεία.] Divination by a wand.

Of peculiar rhabdomancy is that which is used in mineral discoveries, with a forked hazel, commonly called Moses's rod, which, freely held forth, will stir and play if any mine be under it.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

RHA'PSODIST. n.s. [from rhapsody.] One who writes without regular dependence of one part upon another.

Ask our rhapsodist, if you have nothing but the excellence and loveliness of virtue to preach, and no future rewards or punishments, how many vicious wretches will you ever reclaim.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

RHA'PSODY. n.s. [ῥαψωδία; ῥάπτω, to sew, and ᾠδή, a song.] Any number of parts joined together, without necessary dependence or natural connection.

Such a deed, as sweet religion makes A rhapsody of words.

SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

This confusion and rhapsody of difficulties was not to be supposed in each single sinner. HAMMOND.

He, that makes no reflexions on what he reads, only loads his mind with a rhapsody of tales fit for the entertainment of others.

LOCKE.

The words slide over the ears, and vanish like a rhapsody of evening tales.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

RHE'TORICK. n.s. [ῥητορικὴ; rhetorique, Fr.]

1. The act of speaking not merely with propriety, but with art and elegance.

We could not allow him an orator, who had the best thoughts, and who knew all the rules of rhetoric, if he had not acquired the art of using them.

DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

Of the passions, and how they are moved, Aristotle, in his second book of rhetoric,

hath admirably discoursed in a little compass.

LOCKE'S THOUGHTS ON READING.

Grammar teacheth us to speak properly, rhetoric instructs to speak elegantly.

BAKER'S REFLECTIONS ON LEARNING.

2. The power of persuasion; oratory.

The heart's still rhetoric, disclos'd with eyes. SHAKESPEARE.

*His sober lips then did he softly part,
Whence of pure rhetoric whole streams
outflow.* FAIRFAX.

*Enjoy your dear wit and gay rhetoric,
That hath so well been taught her dazzling fence.* MILTON.

To RHETO'RICATE. v.n. [rhetoricor, low Lat. from rhetoric.] To play the orator; to attack the passions.

'Twill be much more seasonable to reform, than apologize or rhetoricate; not to suffer themselves to perish in the midst of such solicitations to be saved.

DECAY OF PIETY.

RHEU'MATISM. n.s. [ῥευματισμός; rheumatisme, Fr. rheumatismus, Lat.] A painful distemper supposed to proceed from acrid humours.

Rheumatism is a distemper affecting chiefly the membrana communis musculorum, which it makes rigid and unfit for motion; and it seems to be occasioned almost by the same causes, as the mucilaginous glands in the joints are rendered stiff and gritty in the gout. QUINCY.

*The throting quinsey 'tis my star appoints,
And rheumatism I send to rack the joints.* DRYDEN.

RHINO'CEROS. n.s. [ῥίν and κέρας; rhinocerot, Fr.] A vast beast in the East Indies armed with a horn in his front.

*Approach thou like the rugged Russian
bear,
The arm'd rhinoceros, or Hyrcanian tyger;*

Take any shape but that, and my firm nerves

Shall never tremble.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

If you draw your beast in an emblem, shew a landscape of the country natural to the beast; as to the rhinoceros an East Indian landscape, the crocodile, an Egyptian.

PEACHAM.

RI' BALD. n.s. [ribauld, Fr. ribaldo, Italian.] A loose, rough, mean, brutal wretch.

*That lewd ribbald, with vile lust advanced,
Laid first his filthy hands on virgin clean,
To spoil her dainty corse so fair and sheen.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

*Your ribauld nag of Egypt,
The breeze upon her, like a cow in June,
Hoists sails, and flies.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND
CLEOPATRA.

*The busy day,
Wak'd by the lark, has rous'd the ribald
crows,
And dreaming night will hide our joys no longer.* SHAKESPEARE.

*Ne'er one sprig of laurel grac'd these ribbalds,
From flashing Bentley down to pidling
Tibbalds.* POPE.

To RI' BROAST. v.n. [rib and roast.]
To beat soundly. A burlesque word.

*That done, he rises, humbly bows,
And gives thanks for the princely blows;
Departs not meanly proud, and boasting
Of his magnificent ribroasting.* BUTLER.

I have been pinched in flesh, and well ribroasted under my former masters; but I'm in now for skin and all. L'ESTRANGE.

RI' DDANCE. n.s. [from rid.]

1. Deliverance.

Deliverance from sudden death, riddance from all adversity, and the extent of saving mercy towards all men. HOOKER.

2. Disencumbrance; loss of something one is glad to lose.

*I have too griev'd a heart
To take a tedious leave: thus losers part.
— A gentle riddance.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF
VENICE.

By this, the cock had a good riddance of his rival. L'ESTRANGE.

3. Act of clearing away any encum-brances.

*Those blossoms, and those dropping gums,
That lie bestrown, unsightly and unsmooth, Ask riddance, if we mean to tread with ease.* MILTON.

RI' DINGCOAT. n.s. [riding and coat.] A coat made to keep out weather.

When you carry your master's ridingcoat in a journey, wrap your own in it.
SWIFT'S DIRECTIONS TO THE GROOM.

RI' DINGHOOD. n.s. [riding and hood.] A hood used by women, when they travel, to bear off the rain.

The palliolum was like our ridinghood, and served both for a tunick and a coat.
ARBUTHNOT ON COINS.

*Good housewives all the winter's rage
despise,
Defended by the ridinghood's disguise.*
GAY.

RIGHT. interject. An expression of approbation.

*Right, cries his lordship, for a rogue in need
To have a taste, is insolence indeed:
In me 'tis noble, suits my birth and state.*
POPE.

RING. n.s. [hring, Saxon.]

1. A circle; an orbicular line.

*In this habit
Met I my father with his bleeding rings,*

Their precious gems new lost.

SHAKESPEARE.

Bubbles of water, before they began to exhibit their colours to the naked eye, have appeared through a prism girded about with many parallel and horizontal rings.

NEWTON.

2. A circle of gold or some other matter worn as an ornament.

A quarrel.

— About a hoop of gold, a paltry ring.

SHAKESPEARE.

I have seen old Roman rings so very thick about, and with such large stones in them, that 'tis no wonder a fop should reckon them a little cumbersome in the summer.

ADDISON.

3. A circle of metal to be held by.

The rings of iron, that on the doors were hung,

Sent out a jarring sound, and harshly rung. DRYDEN.

Some eagle got the ring of my box in his beak, with an intent to let it fall, and devour it. GULLIVER.

4. A circular course.

Chaste Diana,

*Goddess presiding o'er the rapid race,
Place me, O place me in the dusty ring,
Where youthful charioteers contend for glory.* SMITH.

5. A circle made by persons standing round.

*Make a ring about the corps of Cæsar,
And let me shew you him, that made the will.* SHAKESPEARE.

The Italians, perceiving themselves almost environed, cast themselves into a ring, and retired back into the city. HAYWARD.

*Round my arbour a new ring they made,
And footed it about the secret shade.*

DRYDEN.

6. A number of bells harmonically tuned.

*A squirrel spends his little rage,
In jumping round a rowling cage;*

The cage as either side turn'd up,

Striking a ring of bells a-top. PRIOR.

7. The sound of bells or any other sonorous body.

Stop the holes of a hawk's bell, it will make no ring, but a flat noise or rattle. BACON.

Hawks bells, that have holes, give a greater ring, than if the pellet did strike upon brass in the open air. BACON.

Sullen Moloch fled,

Hath left in shadows dread

His burning idol all of blackest hue;

In vain with cymbals ring,

They call the grisly king. MILTON.

8. A sound of any kind.

The king, full of confidence, as he had been victorious in battle, and had prevailed with his parliament, and had the ring of acclamations fresh in his ears, thought the rest of his reign should be but play.

BACON'S HENRY VII.

RIVA'LITY, RIVALRY. n.s.

[rivalitas, Lat. from rival.] Competition; emulation.

It is the privilege of posterity to set matters right between those antagonists, who, by their rivalry for greatness, divided a whole age. ADDISON.

RI'VER. n.s. [riviere, Fr. rivus, Lat.]

A land current of water bigger than a brook.

It is a most beautiful country, being stored throughout with many goodly rivers, replenished with all sorts of fish. SPENSER.

The first of these rivers has been celebrated by the Latin poets for the gentleness of its course, as the other for its rapidity.

ADDISON'S REMARKS ON ITALY.

To ROB. v.a. [rober, old Fr. robbare, Italian.]

1. To deprive of any thing by unlawful force, or by secret theft; to plunder. To be robbed, according to the present use of the word, is to be injured by theft secret or violent; to rob, is to take away by unlawful violence; and to steal, is to take away privately.

*Is't not enough to break into my garden,
And, like a thief, to come to rob my grounds,
But thou wilt brave me with these sawcy
terms?* SHAKESPEARE.

Our sins being ripe, there was no preventing of God's justice from reaping that glory in our calamities, which we robbed him of in our prosperity.
KING CHARLES.

I have not here designed to rob him of any part of that commendation, which he has so justly acquired from the whole author, whose fragments only fall to my portion.
DRYDEN.

*The water nymphs lament their empty
urns,
Bœotia, robb'd of silver Dirce, mourns.*
ADDISON.

2. To set free; to deprive of something bad. Ironical.

*Our house is hell, and thou, a merry devil,
Did'st rob it of some taste of tediousness.*
SHAKESPEARE.

3. To take away unlawfully.

Better be disdained of all, than fashion a carriage to rob love from any.
SHAKESPEARE.

Procure, that the nourishment may not be robbed and drawn away.
BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

*Nor will I take from any man his due;
But thus assuming all, he robs from you.*
DRYDEN.

*Oh double sacrilege on things divine,
To rob the relick, and deface the shrine!*
DRYDEN.

of crying a wolf, and fooling the country with false alarms.* L'ESTRANGE.

ROI'STER, or roisterer. n.s. [from the verb.] A turbulent, brutal, lawless, blustering fellow.

RO'LLER. n.s. [rouleau, Fr. from roll.]

1. Any thing turning on its own axis, as a heavy stone to level walks.

When a man tumbles a roller down a hill, the man is the violent enforcer of the first motion; but when it is once tumbling, the property of the thing itself continues it.
HAMMOND.

The long slender worms, that breed between the skin and flesh in the isle of Ormuz and in India, are generally twisted out upon sticks or rollers.
RAY ON THE CREATION.

They make the string of the pole horizontal towards the lathe, conveying and guiding the string from the pole to the work, by throwing it over a roller.
MOXON'S MECHANICAL EXERCISES.

Lady Charlotte, like a stroller, Sits mounted on the garden roller.
SWIFT'S MISCELLANIES.

2. Bandage; fillet.

Fasten not your roller by tying a knot, lest you hurt your patient.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

Bandage being chiefly to maintain the due situation of a dressing, surgeons always turn a roller with that view. SHARP.

ROLLYPOOLY. n.s. A sort of game, in which, when a ball rolls into a certain place, it wins. A corruption of roll ball into the pool.

ARBUTHNOT.

2. Rough rude play.

Romp loving miss

Is haul'd about in gallantry robust.

THOMSON.

ROOMAGE. n.s. [from room.] Space; place.

Man, of all sensible creatures, has the fullest brain to his proportion, for the lodging of the intellective faculties: it must be a silent character of hope, when there is good store of roomage and receipt, where those powers are stowed. WOTTON.

ROO'MINESS. n.s. [from roomy.] Space; quantity of extent.

RO'PEDANCER. n.s. [rope and dancer.] An artist who dances on a rope.

Salvian, amongst other publick shews, mentions the Petaminarii; probably derived from the Greek πετάσθαι, which signifies to fly, and may refer to such kind of ropedancers.

WILKINS'S MATHEMATICAL MAGICK.

Staius, posted on the highest of the two summits, the people regarded with the same terror, as they look upon a daring rope-dancer, whom they expect to fall every moment. ADDISON'S GUARDIAN.

Nic bounced up with a spring equal to that of one of your nimblest tumblers or rope-dancers, and fell foul upon John Bull, to snatch the cudgel he had in his hand.

ARBUTHNOT.

RO'STRATED. adj. [rostratus, Lat.] Adorned with beaks of ships.

He brought to Italy an hundred and ten rostrated gallies of the fleet of Mithridates. ARBUTHNOT.

RO'TGUT. n.s. [rot and gut.] Bad beer.

RO'VEER. n.s. [from rove.]

1. A wanderer; a ranger.
2. A fickle inconstant man.
3. A robber; a pirate.

This is the case of rovers by land, as some cantons in Arabia. BACON'S HOLY WAR.

4. At ROVERS. Without any particular aim.

Nature shoots not at rovers: even inanimates, though they know not their perfection, yet are they not carried on by a blind unguided impetus; but that, which directs them, knows it.

GLANVILL'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

Providence never shoots at rovers: there is an arrow that flies by night as well as by day, and God is the person that shoots it.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

Men of great reading show their talents on the meanest subjects; this is a kind of shooting at rovers. ADDISON.

To ROU'GHWORK. v.a. [rough and work.] To work coarsely over without the least nicety.

Thus you must continue, till you have roughwrought all your work from end to end.

MOXON'S MECHANICAL EXERCISES.

ROU'NDABOUT. adj. [This word is used as an adjective, though it is only an adverb united to a substantive by a colloquial license of language, which ought not to have been admitted into books.]

1. Ample; extensive.

Those sincerely follow reason, but for want of having large, sound, roundabout sense, have not a full view of all that relates to the question.

LOCKE ON UNDERSTANDING.

2. Indirect; loose.

Paraphrase is a roundabout way of translating, invented to help the barrenness, which translators, overlooking in themselves, have apprehended in our tongue.

FELTON.

ROU'NDHOUSE. n.s. [round and house.] The constable's prison, in which disorderly persons, found in the street, are confined.

They march'd to some fam'd roundhouse. POPE.

RU'BRICK. n.s. [rubrique, Fr. rubrica, Lat.] Directions printed in books of law and in prayer books; so termed, because they were originally distinguished by being in red ink.

No date prefix'd,

Directs me in the starry rubrick set.

MILTON'S PARADISE REGAIN'D.

They had their particular prayers according to the several days and months; and their tables or rubricks to instruct them.

STILLINGFLEET.

Your first rudimental essays in spectator-

ship were made in my shop, where you often practised for hours.

SPECTATOR.

RU'FFIAN. n.s. [ruffiano, Italian; ruffien, Fr. a bawd; roffver, Danish, to pillage; perhaps it may be best derived from rough.] A brutal, boisterous, mischievous fellow; a cut-throat; a robber; a murderer.

*Ruffian, let go that rude uncivil touch,
Thou friend of an ill fashion!*

SHAKESPEARE'S TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

*Have you a ruffian that will swear? drink?
dance?*

Revel the night? rob? murder?

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

Sir Ralph Vane's bold answers termed rude and ruffian like, falling into ears apt to take offence, furthered his condemnation.

HAYWARD.

The boasted ancestors of these great men, Whose virtues you admire, were all such ruffians,

*This dread of nations, this almighty Rome,
That comprehends in her wide empire's
bounds*

All under heaven, was founded on a rape.

ADDISON'S CATO.

RUGO'SE. adj. [rugosus, Lat.] Full of wrinkles.

It is a relaxation of the sphincter to such a degree, that the internal rugose coat of the intestine turneth out, and beareth down.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

RU'MMER. n.s. [roemer, Dutch.] A glass; a drinking cup.

Imperial Rhine bestow'd the generous rummer. PHILIPS.

cannot be.* SHAKESPEARE.

RU'NAGATE. n.s. [corrupted from renegat, Fr.] A fugitive; rebel; apostate.

*The wretch compel'd, a runagate became,
And learn'd what ill a miser state doth breed.* SIDNEY.

*God bringeth the prisoners out of captivity;
but letteth the runagates continue in scarceness.* BIBLE PSALMS, LXVIII. 6.

*I dedicate myself to your sweet pleasure,
More noble than that runagate to your bed.* SHAKESPEARE.

As Cain, after he had slain Abel, had no certain abiding; so the Jews, after they had crucified the son of God, became runagates.

RALEIGH'S HISTORY OF THE WORLD.

RU'NNET. n.s. [gerunnen, Saxon, coagulated.] A liquor made by steeping the stomach of a calf in hot water, and used to coagulate milk for curds and cheese. It is sometimes written rennet.

The milk of the fig hath the quality of runnet to gather cheese.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

It coagulates the blood, as runnet turns milk. MORE.

The milk in the stomach of calves, coagulated by the runnet, is rendered fluid by the gall in the duodenum. ARBUTHNOT.

RUSE. n.s. [French.] Cunning; artifice; little stratagem; trick; wile; fraud; deceit. A French word neither elegant nor necessary.

I might here add much concerning the wiles and ruses, which these timid creatures use to save themselves. RAY.

RUSH-CANDLE. n.s. [rush and candle.] A small blinking taper, made by stripping a rush, except one small stripe of the bark which holds the pith together, and dipping it in tallow.

Be it moon or sun, or what you please;

*And if you please to call it a rush-candle,
Henceforth it shall be so for me.*

SHAKESPEARE.

*If your influence be quite dam'd up With black usurping mists, some gentle taper,
Though a rush-candle from the wicker hole
Of some clay habitation, visit us.*

MILTON.

RU'STICK. adj. [rusticus, Lat.]

1. Rural; country.

By Lelius willing missing was the odds of the Iberian side, and continued so in the next by the excellent running of a knight, though fostered so by the muses, as many times the very rustick people left both their delights and profits to harken to his songs.

SIDNEY, B. II.

2. Rude; untaught; inelegant.

An ignorant clown cannot learn fine language or a courtly behaviour, when his rustick airs have grown up with him till the age of forty. WATTS'S LOGICK.

3. Brutal; savage.

*My soul foreboded I should find the
bow'r
Of some fell monster, fierce with barb'rous
pow'r;
Some rustick wretch, who liv'd in heav'n's
despight,
Contemning laws, and trampling on the right.* POPE.

4. Artless; honest; simple.

5. Plain; unadorned.

An altar stood, rustick, of grassy sord.
MILTON.

*With unguents smooth the polish'd marble shone,
Where ancient Neleus sat, a rustick throne.* POPE.

RU'STICK. n.s. A clown; a swain;
an inhabitant of the country.

As nothing is so rude and insolent as a wealthy rustick, all this his kindness is overlooked, and his person most unworthily railed at. SOUTH.

S

Has in English the same hissing sound as in other languages, and unhappily prevails in so many of our words that it produces in the ear of a foreigner a continued sibilation.

In the beginning of words it has invariably its natural and genuine sound: in the middle it is sometimes uttered with a stronger appulse of the tongue to the palate, like z; as rose, roseate, rosy, osier, nosel, resident, busy, business. It sometimes keeps its natural sound; as loose, designation; for which I know not whether any rules can be given.

In the end of monosyllables it is sometimes s, as in this; and sometimes z, as in as, has; and generally where es stands in verbs for eth, as gives. It seems to be established as a rule, that no noun singular should end with s single: therefore in words written with diphthongs, and naturally long, an e is nevertheless added at the end, as goose, house; and where the syllable is short the s is doubled, and was once sse, as ass, anciently asse; wilderness, anciently wildernessse; distress, anciently distresse.

SA'CKPOSSET. n.s. [sack and posset.] A posset made of milk, sack, and some other ingredients.

Snuff the candles at supper on the table, because the burning snuff may fall into a dish of soup or sackposset. SWIFT.

SA'CRILEGE. n.s. [sacrilege, Fr. sacrilegium, Lat.] The crime of appropriating to himself what is devoted to religion; the crime of robbing heaven; the crime of violating or profaning things sacred.

*By what eclipse shall that sun be defac'd,
What mine hath erst thrown down so fair a tower!
What sacrilege hath such a saint disgrac'd?* SIDNEY.

*Then 'gan a cursed hand the quiet womb
Of his great grandmother with steel to
wound,
And the hid treasures in her sacred tomb
With sacrilege to dig.* FAIRY QUEEN.

We need not go many ages back to see the vengeance of God upon some families, raised upon the ruins of churches, and enriched with the spoils of sacrilege.
SOUTH'S SERMONS.

SAGA'CITY. n.s. [sagacité, French; sagacitas, Latin.]

1. Quickness of scent.
2. Acuteness of discovery.

It requires too great a sagacity for vulgar minds to draw the line nicely between virtue and vice. SOUTH.

Sagacity finds out the intermediate ideas, to discover what connection there is in each link of the chain, whereby the extremes are held together. LOCKE.

Many were eminent in former ages for their discovery of it; but though the knowledge they have left be worth our study, yet they left a great deal for the industry and sagacity of after-ages. LOCKE.

SA'ILER, SAILOR. n.s. [sailor is more usual, sailer more analogical;

from sail.] A seaman; one who practises or understands navigation.

They had many times men of other countries that were no sailors. BACON.

*Batter'd by his lee they lay;
The passing winds through their torn canvas play,
And flagging sails on heartless sailors fall.*
DRYDEN.

Young Pompey built a fleet of large ships, and had good sailors, commanded by experienced captains. ARBUTHNOT.

*Full in the openings of the spacious main
It rides, and, lo, descends the sailer train.*
POPE'S ODYSSEY.

SA'INTLIKE. adj. [saint and like.]

1. Suiting a saint; becoming a saint.

*If still thou do'st retain
The same ill habits, the same follies too,
Gloss'd over only with a saintlike show,
Still thou art bound to vice.*
DRYDEN'S PERSIUS.

2. Resembling a saint.

The king, in whose time it passed, whom catholicks count a saintlike and immaculate prince, was taken away in the flower of his age. BACON.

SA'INTLY. adj. [from saint.] Like a saint; becoming a saint.

I mention still
*Him whom thy wrongs, with saintly patience borne,
Made famous in a land and times obscure.* MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

SA'INTSHIP. n.s. [from saint.] The character or qualities of a saint.

He that thinks his saintship licenses him to censures, is to be looked on not only as a rebel, but an usurper. DECAY OF PIETY.
This savours something ranker than the tenents of the fifth monarchy, and of sovereignty founded upon saintship. SOUTH.
*The devil was piqu'd such saintship to
behold,
And long'd to tempt him.* POPE.

SALAMA'NDER. n.s. [salamandre, Fr. salamandra, Lat.] An animal supposed to live in the fire, and imagined to be very poisonous. Ambrose Parey has a picture of the salamander, with a receipt for her bite; but there is no such creature, the name being now given to a poor harmless insect.

The salamander liveth in the fire, and hath force also to extinguish it.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

According to this hypothesis the whole lunar world is a torrid zone, and may be supposed uninhabitable, except they are salamanders which dwell therein.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

Whereas it is commonly said that a salamander extinguisheth fire, we have found by experience, that on hot coals it dieth immediately.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

The artist was so encompassed with fire and smoke, that one would have thought nothing but a salamander could have been safe in such a situation.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN.

SA'LESMAN. n.s. [sale and man.] One who sells cloaths ready made.

*Poets make characters, as salesmen cloaths;
We take no measure of your fops and beaus.* SWIFT.

SA'LEWORK. n.s. [sale and work.] Work for sale; work carelessly done.

*I see no more in you than in the ordinary
Of nature's salework.*

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

SA'LIENT. adj. [saliens, Latin.]

1. Leaping; bounding; moving by leaps.

The legs of both sides moving together, as frogs, and salient animals, is properly called leaping. BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

2. Beating; panting.

*A salient point so first is call'd the heart,
By turns dilated, and by turns compress,*

Expels and entertains the purple guest.

BLACKMORE.

3. Springing or shooting with a quick motion.

Who best can send on high

The salient spout, far streaming to the sky. POPE.

SALI'VOUS. adj. [from saliva.]

Consisting of spittle; having the nature of spittle.

There happeneth an elongation of the uvula, through the abundance of salivous humour flowing upon it. WISEMAN.

SA'LMAGUNDI. n.s. [It is said to be corrupted from selon mon gout, or sale à mon goût.] A mixture of chopped meat and pickled herrings with oil, vinegar, pepper, and onions.

SALSOA'CID. adj. [salsus and acidus, Latin.] Having a taste compounded of saltness and sourness.

The alsoacids help its passing off; as sal prunel. FLOYER.

SALSU'GINOUS. adj. [salsugo, Latin.] Saltish; somewhat salt.

The distinction of salts, whereby they are discriminated into acid, volatile, or salsuginous, if I may so call the fugitive salts of animal substances, and fixed or alcalizate, may appear of much use in natural philosophy. BOYLE.

SALTA'TION. n.s. [saltatio, Latin.]

1. The act of dancing or jumping.

The locusts being ordained for saltation, their hinder legs do far exceed the others.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

2. Beat; palpitation.

If the great artery be hurt, you will discover it by its saltation and florid colour.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

SALTI'NBANCO. n.s. [saltare in banco, to climb on a bench, as a moun-tebank mounts a bank.] A quack or mountebank.

Saltinbancoes, quacksalvers, and charlatans deceive them: were Æsop alive, the Piazza and Pont-neuf could not speak their fallacies. BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

He play'd the saltinbanco's part, Transform'd t' a Frenchman by my art.

HUDIBRAS.

SALVABI'LITY. n.s. [from salvable.] Possibility of being received to everlasting life.

Why do we Christians so fiercely argue against the salvability of each other, as if it were our wish that all should be damned, but those of our particular sect.

DECAY OF PIETY.

SA'LVATORY. n.s. [salvatoire, French.] A place where any thing is preserved.

I consider the admirable powers of sensation, phantasy, and memory, in what salvatories or repositories the species of things past are conserved.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

SA'LVO. n.s. [from salvo jure, Latin, a form used in granting any thing: as salvo jure putei.] An exception; a reservation; an excuse.

They admit many salvoes, cautions, and reservations, so as they cross not the chief design. KING CHARLES.

It will be hard if he cannot bring himself off at last with some salvo or distinction, and be his own confessor. L'ESTRANGE.

If others of a more serious turn join with us deliberately in their religious professions of loyalty, with any private salvoes or evasions, they would do well to consider those maxims in which all casuists are agreed. ADDISON.

SA'LUTARY. adj. [salutaire, Fr. salutaris, Latin.] Wholesome; healthful; safe; advantageous; contributing to health or safety.

The gardens, yards, and avenues are dry and clean; and so more salutary as more elegant. RAY.

It was want of faith in our Saviour's countrymen, which hindered him from shedding among them the salutary emanations of his divine virtue; and he did not many mighty works there, because of their unbelief. BENTLEY.

SALUTI' FEROUS. adj. [salutifer, Latin.] Healthy; bringing health.

The king commanded him to go to the south of France, believing that nothing would contribute more to the restoring of his former vigour than the gentle salutiferous air of Montpellier.

DENNIS'S LETTERS.

SA'MLET. n.s. [salmonet, or salmonlet.] A little salmon.

Sir Francis Bacon observes the age of a salmon exceeds not ten years, so his growth is very sudden: after he is got into the sea he becomes from a samlet, not so big as a gudgeon, to be a salmon, in as short a time as a gosling becomes a goose.

WALTON'S ANGLER.

SA'NDBLIND. adj. [sand and blind.] Having a defect in the eyes, by which small particles appear to fly before them.

My true begotten father, being more than sandblind, high gravelblind, knows me not.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF VENICE.

SA'NDISH. adj. [from sand.] Approaching to the nature of sand; loose; not close; not compact.

Plant the tenuifolia's and ranunculus's in fresh sandish earth, taken from under the turf. EVELYN'S KALENDAR.

SANE. adj. [sanus, Latin.] Sound; healthy. Baynard wrote a poem on preserving the body in a sane and sound state.

SA'PID. adj. [sapidus, Latin.]

Tasteful; palatable; making a powerful stimulation upon the palate.

Thus camels, to make the water sapid, do raise the mud with their feet.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

The most oily parts are not separated by a slight decoction, 'till they are disentangled from the salts; for if what remains of the subject, after the infusion and decoction be continued to be boiled down with the addition of fresh water, a fat, sapid, odorous, viscous, inflammable, frothy water will constantly be found floating a-top of the boiling liquor. ARBUTHNOT.

SAPONA'CEOUS, SAPON-ARY. adj. [from sapo, Latin, soap.]

Sopy; resembling soap; having the qualities of soap.

By digesting a solution of salt of tartar with oil of almonds, I could reduce them to a soft saponary substance. BOYLE.

Any mixture of an oily substance with salt, may be called a soap: bodies of this nature are called saponaceous. ARBUTHNOT.

SA'VANNA. n.s. [Spanish, according to Bailey.] An open meadow without wood; pasture ground in America.

He that rides post through a country may tell how, in general, the parts lie; here a morass, and there a river; woodland in one part, and savanna's in another. LOCKE.

Plains immense,

And vast savanna's, where the wand'ring eye,

Unfix'd, is in a verdant ocean lost.

THOMSON'S SUMMER.

SAUCE. n.s. [sauce, saulse, French; salsa, Italian.]

1. Something eaten with food to improve its taste.

The bitter sauce of the sport was, that we had our honours for ever lost, partly by our own faults, but principally by his faulty using of our faults. SIDNEY.

To feed were best at home;
From thence the sauce to meat is ceremony;
Meeting were bare without it.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

Epicurean cooks

Sharpen with cloyless sauce his appetite.

SHAKESPEARE.

Such was the sauce of Moab's noble feast,
'Till night far spent invites them to their rest. COWLEY.

He that spends his time in sports, is like him whose meat is nothing but sauces; they are healthless, chargeable, and useless.

TAYLOR.

High sauces and rich spices are fetched from the Indies. BAKER.

2. To serve one the same SAUCE. A vulgar phrase to retaliate one injury with another.

SA'UCEBOX. n.s. [from sauce, or rather from saucy.] An impertinent or petulant fellow.

The foolish old poet says, that the souls of some women are made of sea-water: this has encouraged my saucebox to be witty upon me. ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

SAU'CER. n.s. [sauciere, Fr. from sauce.]

1. A small pan or platter in which sauce is set on the table.

Infuse a pugil of new violets seven times, and it shall make the vinegar so fresh of the flower, as, if brought in a saucer, you shall smell it before it come at you. BACON.

Some have mistaken blocks and posts
For spectres, apparitions, ghosts,
With saucer eyes and horns. HUDIBRAS.

2. A piece or platter of china, into which a tea-cup is set.

SA'VEALL. n.s. [save and all.] A small pan inserted into a candlestick to save the ends of candles.

SA'USAGE. n.s. [saucisse, French; salsum, Latin.] A roll or ball made commonly of pork or veal, and sometimes of beef, minced very small, with salt and spice; sometimes it is stuffed into the guts of fowls, and sometimes only rolled in flower.

To SAY. v.a. preter. said. [secgan, Saxon; seggen, Dutch.]

1. To speak; to utter in words; to tell.

Say it out, Diggon, for whatever it hight;
For nought but well mought him betight,
He is so meek. SPENSER.

In this slumbry agitation what have you heard her say? SHAKESPEARE.

Speak unto Solomon; for he will not say thee nay. BIBLE 1 KINGS.

2. To allege.<sup>185</sup>

After all can be said against a thing, this will still be true, that many things possibly are, which we know not of. TILLOTSON.

In vain shall we attempt to justify ourselves, as the rich young man in the gospel did, by appealing to the great duties of the law; unless we can say somewhat more, even that we have been liberal in our distributions to the poor. ATTERBURY.

3. To tell in any manner.

With flying speed, and seeming great pretence,
Came messenger with letters which his message said. FAIRY QUEEN.

To SAY. v.n.

1. To speak; to pronounce; to utter.<sup>186</sup>

He said moreover, I have somewhat to say unto thee; and she said, say on.

BIBLE 1 KINGS, II. 14.

Say nothing to any man, but go thy way.

BIBLE MARK, I. 44.

To the others he said, go ye after him.

BIBLE EZEKIEL, IX. 5.

The council-table and star-chamber hold, as Thucydides said of the Athenians, for honourable that which pleased, and for just that which profited. CLARENDON.

The lion here has taken his right measures, that is to say, he has made a true judgment. L'ESTRANGE.

He has left his succession as undetermined as if he had said nothing about it.

LOCKE.

This ought to weigh with those whose reading is designed for much talk and little knowledge, and I have nothing to say to it. LOCKE.

Of some propositions it may be difficult to say whether they affirm or deny; as when we say, Plato was no fool. WATTS.

2. In poetry, say is often used before a question; tell.

*Say first what cause
Mov'd our grand parents to fall off?*

MILTON.

Say, Stella, feel you no content, Reflecting on a life well-spent. SWIFT.

SAY. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. A speech; what one has to say.

*He no sooner said out his say, but up rises
a cunning snap.* L'ESTRANGE.

2. [For assay.] Sample.

*Since thy outside looks so fair and warlike,
And that thy tongue some 'say of breeding breathes,*

By rule of knighthood I disdain.

SHAKESPEARE.

*So good a say invites the eye,
A little downward to espy
The lively clusters of her breasts.*

SIDNEY.

3. Trial by a sample.

This gentleman having brought that earth to the publick 'say masters, and upon their being unable to bring it to fusion, or make it fly away, he had procured a little of it, and with a peculiar flux separated a third part of pure gold. BOYLE.

4. [Soie, French.] Silk. Obsolete.

5. A kind of woollen stuff.

SCALA'DE, SCALADO. n.s.
[French; scalada, Spanish, from scala,

Latin, a ladder.] A storm given to a place by raising ladders against the walls.

What can be more strange than that we should within two months have won one town of importance by scalado, battered and assaulted another, and overthrown great forces in the field? BACON.

Thou raisedst thy voice to record the stratagems, the arduous exploits, and the nocturnal scalade of needy heroes, the terror of your peaceful citizens.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

SCA'LARY. adj. [from scala, Latin.] Proceeding by steps like those of a ladder.

He made at nearer distances certain elevated places and scalary ascents, that they might better ascend or mount their horses. BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

SCA'LDHEAD. n.s. [skalladur, bald, Islandick. Hickes.] A loathsome disease; a kind of local leprosy in which the head is covered with a continuous scab.

The serum is corrupted by the infection of the touch of a salt humour, to which the scab, pox, and scaldhead are referable.

FLOYER.

To SCA'MBLE. v.n. [This word, which is scarcely in use, has much exercised the etymological sagacity of Meric Casaubon; but, as is usual, to no purpose.]

1. To be turbulent and rapacious; to scramble; to get by struggling with others.

*Have fresh chaff in the bin,
And somewhat to scramble for hog and for hen.* TUSSER.

Scambling, out-facing, fashion-mong'ring boys,

That lie, and cog, and flout, deprave and slander. SHAKESPEARE.

That self bill is urg'd, and had against us past,

*But that the scambling and unquiet time
Did push it out of further question.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

He was no sooner entered into the town but a scambling soldier clapt hold of his bridle, which he thought was in a begging or a drunken fashion. WOTTON.

2. To shift awkwardly.

Some scambling shifts may be made without them. MORE.

SCA'MBLER. n.s. [Scottish.] A bold intruder upon one's generosity or table.

SCA'NTLET. n.s. [corrupted, as it seems, from scantling.] A small pattern; a small quantity; a little piece.

While the world was but thin, the ages of mankind were longer; and as the world grew fuller, so their lives were successively reduced to a shorter scantlet, 'till they came to that time of life which they now have.

HALE.

SCA'NTLING. n.s. [eschantillon, French; ciantellino, Italian.]

1. A quantity cut for a particular purpose.

'Tis hard to find out a woman that's of a just scantling for her age, humour, and fortune, to make a wife of.

L'ESTRANGE.

2. A certain proportion.

*The success,
Although particular, shall give a scantling
Of good or bad unto the general.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

3. A small quantity.

Reduce desires to narrow scantlings and small proportions.

TAYLOR'S RULE OF LIVING HOLY.

A scantling of wit lay gasping for life, and groaning beneath a heap of rubbish.

DRYDEN.

In this narrow scantling of capacity, we enjoy but one pleasure at once. LOCKE.

SCA'RECROW. n.s. [scare and crow.] An image or clapper set up to fright birds: thence any vain terrour.

Thereat the scarecrow waxed wond'rous proud,

*Through fortune of his first adventure
fair,*

And with big thundering voice revil'd him loud. FAIRY QUEEN.

No eye hath seen such scarecrows: I'll not march through Coventry with them, that's flat. SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

We must not make a scarecrow of the l aw,

*Setting it up to fear the birds of prey,
And let it keep one shape, 'till custom make it*

Their pearch, and not their terrour.

SHAKESPEARE.

Many of those great guns, wanting powder and shot, stood but as cyphers and scarecrows. RALEIGH.

A scarecrow set to frighten fools away.

DRYDEN.

SCA'REFIRE. n.s. [scare and fire.] A fright by fire; a fire breaking out so as to raise terrour.

The drum and trumpet, by their several sounds, serve for many kind of advertisements; and bells serve to proclaim a scare-fire, and in some places water-breaches.

HOLDER.

SCA'RFSKIN. n.s. [scarf and skin.] The cuticle; the epidermis; the outer scaly integuments of the body.

The scarfskin, being uppermost, is composed of several lays of small scales, which lie thicker according as it is thicker in one part of the body than another: between these the excretory ducts of the miliary glands of the true skin open. CHEYNE.

To SCA'RIFY. v.a. [scarifico, Lat. scarifier, Fr.] To let blood by incisions of the skin, commonly after the application of cupping-glasses.

Washing the salts out of the eschar, and scarifying it, I dressed it.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

You quarter foul language upon me, without knowing whether I deserve to be cupped and scarified at this rate.

SPECTATOR.

SCATE. n.s. [skidor, Swedish; skid, Islandick.] A kind of wooden shoe, with a steel plate underneath, on which they slide over the ice.

SCATH. n.s. [sceað, Saxon.] Waste; damage; mischief; depopulation. Scath in Scotland denotes spoil or damage: as, he bears the scath and the scorn. A proverb.

She suborned hath

*This crafty messenger, with letters vain,
To work new woe and unprovided scath.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

*The ear that budded fair is burnt and blasted,
And all my hoped gain is turn'd to scath.*

SPENSER.

He bore a spiteful mind against king Edward, doing him all the scath that he could, and annoying his territories.

SPENSER.

*My proud one doth work the greater scath,
Through sweet allurements of her lovely hue.* SPENSER.

They placed them in Rhodes, where daily doing great scath to the Turk, the great warrior Soliman, with a mighty army, so overlaid them, that he won the island from them. KNOLLES.

Still preserv'd from danger, harm, and scath,

By many a sea and many an unknown shore. FAIRFAX.

SCA'Venger. n.s. [from scafan, to shave, perhaps to sweep, Saxon.] A petty magistrate, whose province is to keep the streets clean.<sup>187</sup>

Since it is made a labour of the mind, as to inform mens judgments, and move their affections, to resolve difficult places of Scripture, to decide and clear off controversies, I cannot see how to be a butcher, scavenger, or any other such trade, does at all qualify men for this work. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

Fasting's nature's scavenger. BAYNARD.

Dick the scavenger, with equal grace, Flirts from his cart the mud in Walpole's face. SWIFT.

SCE'LERAT. n.s. [French; sceleratus, Latin.] A villain; a wicked wretch. A word introduced unnecessarily from the French by a Scottish author.

Scelerats can by no arts stifle the cries of a wounded conscience. CHEYNE.

SCE'NARY. n.s. [from scene.]

1. The appearances of place or things.

He must gain a relish of the works of nature, and be conversant in the various scenary of a country life. ADDISON.

2. The representation of the place in which an action is performed.

The progress of the sound, and the scenery of the bordering regions, are imitated from Æn. vii. on the sounding the horn of Alecto. POPE.

3. The disposition and consecution of the scenes of a play.

To make a more perfect model of a picture, is, in the language of poets, to draw up the scenary of a play. DRYDEN.

SCE'NOGRAPHY. n.s. [σκηνή and γράφω; scenographie, Fr.] The art of perspective.

SCHE'MATIST. n.s. [from scheme.] A projector; one given to forming schemes.

SCHE'MER. n.s. [from scheme.] A projector; a contriver.

SCE'PTICK. n.s. See SKEPTICK.

SCI'ENCE. n.s. [science, French; scientia, Latin.]

1. Knowledge.

If we conceive God's sight or science, before the creation of the world, to be extended to all and every part of the world, seeing every thing as it is, his prescience or foresight of any action of mine, or rather his science or sight, from all eternity, lays no necessity on any thing to come to pass, any more than my seeing the sun move hath to do in the moving of it. HAMMOND.

2. Certainty grounded on demonstration.

So you arrive at truth, though not at science. BERKLEY.

3. Art attained by precepts, or built on principles.

Science perfects genius, and moderates that fury of the fancy which cannot contain itself within the bounds of reason. DRYDEN.

4. Any art or species of knowledge.

No science doth make known the first principles, whereon it buildeth; but they are always taken as plain and manifest in themselves, or as proved and granted already, some former knowledge having made them evident. HOOKER.

Whatsoever we may learn by them, we only attain according to the manner of natural sciences, which mere discourse of wit and reason findeth out. HOOKER.

*I present you with a man Cunning in musick and the mathematicks,
To instruct her fully in those sciences.*

SHAKESPEARE.

The indisputable mathematicks, the only science heaven hath yet vouchsafed humanity, have but few votaries among the slaves of the Stagirite.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

5. One of the seven liberal arts, grammar, rhetorick, logick, arithmetick, musick, geometry, astronomy.

*Good sense, which only is the gift of heav'n,
And though no science, fairly worth the sev'n.* POPE.

SCIO'LIST. n.s. [sciolus, Latin.] One who knows many things superficially.

'Twas this vain idolizing of authors which gave birth to that silly vanity of impertinent citations: these ridiculous fooleries signify nothing to the more generous discerners, but the pedantry of the affected sciolists.

GLANVILLE'S SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

These passages, in that book, were enough to humble the presumption of our modern sciolists, if their pride were not as great as their ignorance. TEMPLE.

SCIO'MACHY. n.s. [schiamachie, Fr. σχία and μαχή.] Battle with a shadow. This should be written skiamachy.<sup>188</sup>

To avoid this sciomachy, or imaginary combat of words, let me know, sir, what you mean by the name of tyrant?

COWLEY.

SCI'SSIBLE. adj. [from scissus, Latin.] Capable of being divided smoothly by a sharp edge.

The differences of impressible and not impressible, scissible and not scissible, and many other passions of matter, are plebeian notions. BACON.

SCI'SSILE. adj. [scissile, Fr. scissilis, Latin.] Capable of being cut or divided smoothly by a sharp edge.

Animal fat is a sort of amphibious substance, scissile like a solid, and resolveable by heat. ARBUTHNOT.

SCI'SSION. n.s. [scission, French; scissio, Latin.] The act of cutting.

Nerves may be wounded by scission or puncture: the former way they are usually cut through, and wholly cease from action. WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

SCI'SSOR. n.s. [This word is variously written, as it is supposed to be derived by different writers; of whom some write cisors, from cædo, or incido; others scissors, from scindo; and some

cisars, cizars, or scissars, ciseaux, Fr.] A small pair of sheers, or blades moveable on a pivot, and intercepting the thing to be cut.

His beard they have sing'd off with brands of fire;

And ever, as it blaz'd, they threw on him Great pails of puddled mire to quench the hair:

My master preaches patience to him, and the while

His man with scissars nicks him for a fool. SHAKESPEARE.

Wanting the scissars, with these hands I'll tear,

If that obstruct my flight, this load of hair. PRIOR.

When the lawyers and tradesmen brought extravagant bills, sir Roger wore a pair of scissars in his pocket, with which he would snip a quarter of a yard off nicely.

ARBUTHNOT.

SCI'SSURE. n.s. [scissum, Latin.] A crack; a rent; a fissure.

The breach seems like the scissures and ruptures of an earthquake, and threatens to swallow all that attempt to close it, and reserves its cure only for omnipotence.

DECAY OF PIETY.

SCONCE. n.s. [schantz, German.]

1. A fort; a bulwark.

Such fellows are perfect in the great commanders names, and they will learn you by rote where services were done; at such and such a sconce, at such a breach.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

2. The head: perhaps as being the acropolis, or citadel of the body. A low word.

Why does he suffer this rude knave now to knock him about the sconce with a dirty shovel, and will not tell him of his action of battery? SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

3. A pensile candlestick, generally with a looking-glass to reflect the light.

Golden sconces hang upon the walls, To light the costly suppers and the balls.

DRYDEN'S LUCRETIA.

Triumphant Umbriel, on a sconce's height, Clapp'd his glad wings, and sat to view the fight. POPE.

SWIFT'S DIRECTIONS TO THE BUTLER.

To SCONCE. v.a. [A word used in the universities, and derived plausibly by Skinner, whose etymologies are generally rational, from sconce, as it signifies the head; to sconce being to fix a fine on any one's head.] To mulct; to fine. A low word which ought not to be retained.

SCOTCH Hoppers. n.s. A play in which boys hop over lines or scotches in the ground.

Children being indifferent to any thing they can do, dancing and scotch hoppers would be the same thing to them. LOCKE.

To SCRA'MBLE. v.n. [The same with scrabble; scrasselen, Dutch.]

1. To catch at any thing eagerly and tumultuously with the hands; to catch with haste preventive of another; to contend tumultuously which shall catch any thing.

England now is left

To tug and scramble, and to part by th' teeth

The unow'd interest of proud swelling state. SHAKESPEARE.

Of other care they little reck'ning make, Than how to scramble at the shearer's feast,

And shove away the worthy bidden guest. MILTON.

It is not to be supposed, that, when such a tree was shaking, there would be no scrambling for the fruit. STILLINGFLEET.

They must have scrambled with the wild beasts for crabs and nuts.

RAY ON THE CREATION.

2. To climb by the help of the hands: as, he scrambled up that rock.

SCRA'MBLE. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. Eager contest for something, in which one endeavours to get it before another.

As they were in the middle of their gambols, some body threw a handful of apples among them, that set them presently together by the ears upon the scramble.

L'ESTRANGE.

Because the desire of money is constantly almost every where the same, its vent varies very little, but as its greater scarcity enhances its price and increases the scramble. LOCKE.

2. Act of climbing by the help of the hands.

To SCRANCH. v.a. [schrantzer, Dutch.] To grind somewhat crackling between the teeth. The Scots retain it.

SCRAPE. n.s. [skrap, Swedish.] Difficulty; perplexity; distress. This is a low word.

SCREEN. n.s. [escran, French.]

1. Any thing that affords shelter or concealment.

Now near enough: your leavy screens throw down,

And show like those you are.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

Some ambitious men seem as screens to princes in matters of danger and envy.

BACON.

Our people, who transport themselves, are settled in those interjacent tracts, as a screen against the insults of the savages.

SWIFT.

*My juniors by a year,
Who wisely thought my age a screen,
When death approach'd, to stand between,
The screen remov'd, their hearts are trembling.* SWIFT.

2. Any thing used to exclude cold or light.

When there is a screen between the candle and the eye, yet the light passeth to the paper whereon one writeth. BACON.

*One speaks the glory of the British queen,
And one describes a charming Indian screen.* POPE.

Ladies make their old cloaths into patch-work for screens and stools. SWIFT.

3. A riddle to sift sand.

To SCREEN. v.a. [from the noun.]

1. To shelter; to conceal; to hide.

*Back'd with a ridge of hills,
That screen'd the fruits of th' earth and seats of men,*

From cold Septentrion blasts.

MILTON'S PARADISE REGAIN'D.

A good magistrate's retinue of state screens him from the dangers, which he is to incur for the sake of it. ATTERBURY.

*This gentle deed shall fairly be set foremost,
To screen the wild escapes of lawless passion.* ROWE.

2. [Cerno crevi, Latin.] To sift; to riddle.

Let the cases be filled with natural earth, taken the first half spit, from just under the turf of the best pasture ground, mixed with one part of very mellow soil screened.

EVELYN.

SCRUB. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. A mean fellow, either as he is supposed to scrub himself for the itch, or as he is employed in the mean offices of scouring away dirt.

2. Any thing mean or despicable.

With a dozen large vessels my vault shall be stor'd;

No little scrub joint shall come on my board. SWIFT.

3. A worn out broom. Ainsworth.

SCRU'PLER. n.s. [from scruple.] A doubter; one who has scruples.

The scruples which many publick ministers would make of the worthiness of parents to have their children baptised, forced such questioned parents, who did not believe the necessity of having their children baptised by such scruplers, to carry their children unto other ministers.

GRAUNT'S BILLS OF MORTALITY.

SCRUTA'TOR. n.s. [scrutateur, Fr. from scrutor, Lat.] Enquirer; searcher; examiner.

In process of time, from being a simple scrutator, an arch-deacon became to have jurisdiction more amply. AYLIFFE.

To SCRUZE. v.a. [Perhaps from screw. This word, though now disused by writers, is still preserved, at least in its corruption, to scrouge, in the London jargon.] To squeeze; to compress.

*Though up he caught him 'twixt his puissant hands,
And having scruzed out of his carrion corse
The loathful life, now loos'd from sinful bands,
Upon his shoulders carried him.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

To SCULK.<sup>189</sup> v.n. [sculcke, Danish.] To lurk in hiding places; to lie close.

It has struck on a sudden into such a reputation, that it scorns any longer to sculk, but owns itself publickly.

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE.

*Fearing to be seen, within a bed
Of coleworts he conceal'd his wily head;
There sculk'd 'till afternoon, and watch'd his time.* DRYDEN.

*My prophets and my sophists finish'd here
Their civil efforts of the verbal war:
Not so my rabbins and logicians yield;
Retiring still they combat; from the field
Of open arms unwilling they depart,
And sculk behind the subterfuge of art.*

PRIOR.

No news of Phyl! the bridegroom came,

And thought his bride had sculk'd for shame;

*Because her father us'd to say
The girl had such a bashful way.*

SWIFT.

The immediate publishers thereof lay sculking under the wings of an act of parliament.

LETTER TO PUBLISHER OF THE DUNCIAD.

SCU'RRILOUS. adj. [scurrilis, Latin.] Grosly opprobrious; using such language as only the license of a buffoon can warrant; loudly jocular; vile; low.

Yet is not their goodness so intolerable, as, on the contrary side, the scurrilous and more than satyrical immodesty of Martinism. HOOKER.

Let him approach singing.

— Forewarn him that he use no scurrilous words in's tunes.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

How often is a person, whose intentions are to do good by the works he publishes, treated in as scurrilous a manner as if he were an enemy to mankind?

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER.

Their characters have been often treated with the utmost barbarity and injustice by scurrilous and enraged orators. SWIFT.

SEABRE'ACH. n.s. [sea and breach.] Irruption of the sea by breaking the banks.

To an impetuous woman, tempests and seabreaches are nothing. L'ESTRANGE.

SE'ACOAST. n.s. [sea and coast.] Shore; edge of the sea.

*The venturous mariner that way,
Learning his ship from those white rocks to save,
Which all along the southern seacoast lay;
For safety's sake that same his seamark made,
And nam'd it Albion.* FAIRY QUEEN.

Upon the seacoast are many parcels of land, that would pay well for the taking in. MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

SEAMA'RK. n.s. [sea and mark.] Point or conspicuous place distinguished at sea, and serving the mariners as directions of their course.

*Those white rocks,
Which all along the southern seacoast lay,
Threat'ning unheedy wreck and rash decay,
For safety's sake his seamark made,
And nam'd it Albion.* FAIRY QUEEN.

*Though you do see me weapon'd,
Here is my journey's end, here is my butt,
The very seamark of my utmost sail.*
SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

They were executed at divers places upon the seacoast, for seamarks or lighthouses, to teach Perkins's people to avoid the coast.
BACON'S HENRY VII.

They are remembered with a brand of infamy fixt upon them, and set as seamarks for those who observe them to avoid.
DRYDEN.

*The fault of others sway,
He set as seamarks for himself to shun.*
DRYDEN.

SE'APIECE. n.s. [sea and piece.] A picture representing any thing at sea.

Great painters often employ their pencils upon seapieces.
ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

SE'ARISQUE. n.s. [sea and risque.] Hazard at sea.

He was so great an encourager of commerce, that he charged himself with all the searisque of such vessels as carried corn to Rome in the Winter. ARBUTHNOT.

SE'ASHORE. n.s. [sea and shore.] The coast of the sea.

*That seashore where no more world is found,
But foaming billows breaking on the ground.* DRYDEN.
Fournier gives an account of an earthquake

in Peru, that reached three hundred leagues along the seashore. BURNET.

To say a man has a clear idea of any quantity, without knowing how great it is, is as reasonable as to say he has the positive idea of the number of the sands on the seashore. LOCKE.

SE'COND Sight. n.s. The power of seeing things future, or things distant: supposed inherent in some of the Scottish islanders.

As he was going out to steal a sheep, he was seised with a fit of second sight: the face of the country presented him with a wide prospect of new scenes, which he had never seen before. ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER.

SE'CRETARY. n.s. [secretaire, Fr. secretarius, low Latin.] One entrusted with the management of business; one who writes for another.

Call Gardiner to me, my new secretary.
SHAKESPEARE.

That which is most of all profitable is acquaintance with the secretaries, and employed men of ambassadors. BACON.

Cottington was secretary to the prince.
CLARENDON.

SE'CRETIST. n.s. [from secret.] A dealer in secrets.

Some things I have not yet thought fit so plainly to reveal, not out of any envious design of having them buried with me, but that I may barter with those secretists, that will not part with one secret but in exchange for another. BOYLE.

SE'CTARY. n.s. [sectaire, French; from sect.]

1. One who divides from publick establishment, and joins with those distinguished by some particular whims.

*My lord, you are a sectary,
That's the plain truth.* SHAKESPEARE.

Romish catholick tenets are inconsistent, on the one hand, with the truth of religion professed and protested by the church of England, whence we are called protestants; and the anabaptists, and separatists, and sectaries, on the other hand, whose tenets are full of schism, and inconsistent with monarchy. BACON.

The number of sectaries does not concern the clergy in point of interest or conscience. SWIFT.

2. A follower; a pupil.

*The sectaries of my celestial skill,
That wont to be the world's chief ornament,
And learned imps that wont to shoot up still,
They under keep.* SPENSER.

SECTA'TOR. n.s. [sectateur, Fr. sectator, Latin.] A follower; an imitator; a disciple.

Hereof the wiser sort and the best learned philosophers were not ignorant, as Cicero witnesseth, gathering the opinion of Aristotle and his sectators. RALEIGH.

To SEDU'CE. v.a. [seduco, Latin; seduire, French.] To draw aside from the right; to tempt; to corrupt; to deprave; to mislead; to deceive.

'Tis meet

*That noble minds keep ever with their likes;
For who so firm that cannot be seduc'd?*
SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

*Me the gold of France did not seduce,
Although I did admit it as a motive,
The sooner to effect what I intended.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

A beauty-waining and distressed widow, Seduc'd the pitch and height of all his thoughts

To base declension.

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

In the latter times some shall depart from the faith, giving heed to seducing spirits.
BIBLE 1 TIMOTHY, IV. 1.

I shall never gratify the spitefulness of a few with any sinister thoughts of all their allegiance, whom pious frauds have seduced. KING CHARLES.

*Subtle he needs must be who could seduce
Angels.* MILTON.

*Nor let false friends seduce thy mind to fame,
By arrogating Johnson's hostile name;
Let father Flecknoe fire thy mind with praise,
And uncle Ogleby thy envy raise.*
DRYDEN.

SEDU'CER. n.s. [from seduce.] One who draws aside from the right; a tempter; a corrupter.

Grant it me, O king; otherwise a seducer flourishes, and a poor maid is undone.
SHAKESPEARE.

There is a teaching by restraining seducers, and so removing the hindrances of knowledge. SOUTH.

*The soft seducer, with enticing looks,
The bellowing rivals to the fight provokes.*
DRYDEN.

*He whose firm faith no reason could remove,
Will melt before that soft seducer, love.*
DRYDEN.

SE'EDTIME. n.s. [seed and time.] The season of sowing.

While the earth remaineth, seedtime and harvest shall not cease.
BIBLE GENESIS, VIII. 22.

*If he would have two tributes in one year,
he must give them two seedtimes, and two harvests.* BACON.

*The first rain fell upon the seedtime about October, and was to make the seed to root;
the latter was to fill the ear.* BROWN.

Their very seedtime was their harvest, and by sowing tares they immediately reaped gold. DECAY OF PIETY.

*Day and night,
Seedtime and harvest, heat and hoary
frost,
Shall hold their course, 'till fire purge all things.* MILTON.

He that too curiously observes the face of the heavens, by missing his seedtime, will lose the hopes of his harvest.

ATTERBURY.

SEE'KSORROW. n.s. [seek and sorrow.] One who contrives to give himself vexation.

*Afield they go, where many lookers be,
And thou seeksorrow, Klaius, them among:
Indeed thou saidst it was thy friend to see,
Strephon, whose absence seem'd unto thee long.* SIDNEY.

SEMICO'LON. n.s. [semi and κῶλον.] Half a colon; a point made thus [;] to note a greater pause than that of a comma.

SEMIVO'WEL. n.s. [semi and vowel.] A consonant which makes an imperfect sound, or does not demand a total occlusion of the mouth.

When Homer would represent any agreeable object, he makes use of the smoothest vowels and most flowing semivowels.

BROOME'S NOTES TO THE ODYSSEY.

SE'NSUALIST. n.s. [from sensual.] A carnal person; one devoted to corporal pleasures.

Let atheists and sensualists satisfy themselves as they are able; the former of which will find, that, as long as reason keeps her ground, religion neither can nor will lose her's. SOUTH.

SE'NSUOUS. adj. [from sense.] Tender; pathetick; full of passion.<sup>190</sup>

To this poetry would be made precedent, as being less subtile and fine; but more simple, sensuous, and passionate. MILTON.

SE'NTENCE. n.s. [sentence, French; sententia, Latin.]

1. Determination or decision, as of a judge civil or criminal.

The rule of voluntary agents on earth is the sentence that reason giveth, concerning the goodness of those things which they are to do. HOOKER.

If we have neither voice from heaven, that so pronounceth of them, neither sentence of men grounded upon such manifest and clear proof, that they, in whose hands it is to alter them, may likewise infallibly, even in heart and conscience, judge them so; upon necessity to urge alteration, is to trouble and disturb without necessity.

HOOKER.

How will I give sentence against them.

BIBLE JEREMIAH, IV. 12.

If matter of fact breaks out with too great an evidence to be denied, why, still there are other lenitives, that friendship will apply, before it will be brought to the decretory rigours of a condemning sentence. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

Let him set out some of Luther's works, that by them we may pass sentence upon his doctrines. ATTERBURY.

2. It is usually spoken of condemnation pronounced by the judge; doom.

By the consent of all laws, in capital causes, the evidence must be full and clear; and if so, where one man's life is in question, what say we to a war, which is ever the sentence of death upon many?

BACON'S HOLY WAR.

What rests but that the mortal sentence pass? MILTON.

3. A maxim; an axiom, generally moral.

A sentence may be defined a moral instruction couched in a few words.

BROOME'S NOTES ON THE ODYSSEY.

4. A short paragraph; a period in writing.

An excellent spirit, knowledge, understanding, and shewing of hard sentences were found in Daniel.

BIBLE DANIEL, V. 12.

SENTENTIO'SITY. n.s. [from sententious.] Comprehension in a sentence.

Vulgar precepts in morality carry with them nothing above the line, or beyond the extemporary sententiousness of common conceits with us.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

SE'PARATIST. n.s. [separatiste, Fr. from separate.] One who divides from the church; a schismatick; a seceder.

The anabaptists, separatists, and sectaries tenets are full of schism, and inconsistent with monarchy. BACON.

Our modern separatists pronounce all those heretical, or carnal, from whom they have withdrawn. DECAY OF PIETY.

Says the separatist, if those, who have the rule over you, should command you any thing about church affairs, you ought not, in conscience, to obey them.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

SERA'GLIO. n.s. [Italian, perhaps of Oriental original. The g is lost in the pronunciation.] A house of women kept for debauchery.

There is a great deal more solid content to be found in a constant course of well living, than in the voluptuousness of a seraglio.

NORRIS.

SERENA'DE. n.s. [serenade, Fr. serenata, Italian, whence, in Milton, serenate, from serenus, Latin, the lovers commonly attending their mistresses in fair nights.] Musick or songs with which ladies are entertained by their lovers in the night.

Mixt dance, or wanton mask, or midnight ball,

*Or serenate, which the starv'd lover sings
To his proud fair; best quitted with disdain.* MILTON.

*Foolish swallow, what do'st thou
So often at my window do,
With thy tuneless serenade?* COWLEY.

*Shall I the neighbours nightly rest invade,
At her deaf doors, with some vile serenade?* DRYDEN.

Will fancies he never should have been the man he is, had not he broke windows, and disturbed honest people with his midnight serenades, when he was a young fellow.

ADDISON.

SE'RGEANT. n.s. [sergent, French; sergente, Italian, from servicus, Latin.]

1. An officer whose business it is to execute the commands of magistrates.

*Had I but time, as this fell sergeant, death,
Is strict in his arrest, oh, I could tell.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

When it was day the magistrates sent the sergeants, saying, let these men go.

BIBLE ACTS, XVI. 35.

2. A petty officer in the army.

*This is the sergeant,
Who, like a good and hardy soldier, fought.* SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

3. A lawyer of the highest rank under a judge.

None should be made sergeants, but such as probably might be held fit to be judges afterwards. BACON.

4. It is a title given to some of the king's servants: as, sergeant chirurgeons.

SERMOCINA'TION. n.s. [sermocinatio, Latin.] The act or practice of making speeches.

SE'RPENT. n.s. [serpens, Latin.] An animal that moves by undulation without legs. They are often venomous. They are divided into two kinds; the viper, which brings young, and the snake, that lays eggs.

*She was arrayed all in lily white,
And in her right hand bore a cup of gold,
With wine and water filled up to the height;
In which a serpent did himself enfold,
That horror made to all that did behold.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

*She struck me with her tongue,
Most serpent like, upon the very heart.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

They, or under ground, or circuit wide,

With serpent error wand'ring, found their way. MILTON.

*Haply piercing through the dark disguise,
The chief I challeng'd: he whose practis'd
wit*

*Knew all the serpent mazes of deceit,
Eludes my search.* POPE'S ODYSSEY.

SE'RVANT. n.s. [servant, French; servus, Latin.]

1. One who attends another, and acts at his command. The correlative of master.

We are one in fortune; both Fell by our servants, by those men we lov'd most. SHAKESPEARE.

*I had rather be a country servant maid,
Than a great queen with this condition.*
SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

He disdain'd not Thenceforth the form of servant to assume. MILTON.

*For master or for servant here to call
Was all alike, where only two were all.*
DRYDEN.

2. One in a state of subjection.
Unusual.

*Being unprepar'd,
Our will became the servant to defect,
Which else should free have wrong'd.*
SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

3. A word of civility used to superiours or equals.

This subjection, due from all men to all men, is something more than the compliment of course, when our betters tell us they are our humble servants, but understand us to be their slaves. SWIFT.

SETA'CEOUS. adj. [seta, Latin.] Bristly; set with strong hairs; consisting of strong hairs.

The parent insect, with its stiff setaceous tail, terebrates the rib of the leaf when tender, and makes way for its egg into the very pith. DERHAM.

SETTE'E. n.s. A large long seat with a back to it.

SETTLE. n.s. [setol, Sax.] A seat; a bench; something to sit on.

From the bottom to the lower settle shall be two cubits. BIBLE EZEKIEL, XLIII. 14.

*The man, their hearty welcome first exprest,
A common settle drew for either guest,
Inviting each his weary limbs to rest.*
DRYDEN.

SE'VENNIGHT. n.s. [seven and
night.]

1. A week; the time from one day of the week to the next day of the same denomination preceding or following; a week, numbered according to the practice of the old northern nations, as in fortnight.

Rome was either more grateful to the beholders, or more noble in itself, than just with the sword and lance, maintained for a sevensnight together. SIDNEY.

*Iago's footing here anticipates our thoughts
A se'nnight's speed.*
SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

Shining woods, laid in a dry room, within a sevensnight lost their shining.
BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

2. We use still the word sevensnight or se'nnight in computing time: as, it happened on Monday was sevensnight, that is, on the Monday before last Monday; it will be done on Monday
sevensnight, that is, on the Monday after next Monday.

This comes from one of those untucker'd ladies whom you were so sharp upon on Monday was se'ennight. ADDISON.

SE'VOCATION. n.s. [sevoco,
Latin.] The act of calling aside.

SEWER. v.n. [escuyer trenchant, French; or asseour, old French; from
asseoir, to set down; for those officers set the dishes on the table. Newton's Milton.]

1. An officer who serves up a feast.

Marshall'd feast, Serv'd up in hall with sewers and seneshals:

The skill of artifice or office mean.

MILTON.

*The cook and sewer, each his talent tries,
In various figures scenes of dishes rise.*

COWEL.

2. [From issue, issuer.] A passage for water to run through, now corrupted to shore.

The fenmen hold that the sewers must be kept so, as the water may not stay too long in the spring till the weeds and sedge be grown up. BACON.

Men suffer their private in judgment to be drawn into the common sewer, or stream of the present vogue. KING CHARLES.

As one who long in populous city pent, Where houses thick, and sewers annoy the air,

Forth issuing on a summer's morn, to breathe

Among the pleasant villages and farms Adjoin'd, from each thing met conceives delight. MILTON.

3. He that uses a needle.

SEX. n.s. [sexe, French; sexus, Latin.]

1. The property by which any animal is male or female.

These two great sexes animate the world.
MILTON.

*Under his forming hands a creature grew,
Manlike, but different sex.* MILTON.

2. Womankind; by way of emphasis.

*Unhappy sex! whose beauty is your snare;
Expos'd to trials; made too frail to bear.*

DRYDEN.

Shame is hard to be overcome; but if the sex once get the better of it, it gives them afterwards no more trouble. GARTH.

To SHAB. v.n. To play mean tricks; a low barbarous cant word.

SHA'BBY. adj. [A word that has crept into conversation and low writing; but ought not to be admitted into the language.] Mean; paltry.

The dean was so shabby, and look'd like a ninny,

That the captain suppos'd he was curate to Jenny. SWIFT.

SHADE. n.s. [scadu, Saxon; schade, Dutch.]

1. The cloud or opacity made by interception of the light.

*Spring no obstacle found here nor shade,
But all sunshine.* MILTON.

2. Darkness; obscurity.

*The weaker light unwillingly declin'd,
And to prevailing shades the murmuring world resign'd.* ROSCOMMON.

3. Coolness made by interception of the sun.

Antigonus, when told that the enemy had such volleys of arrows that hid the sun, said, that falls out well; for this is hot weather, and so we shall fight in the shade. BACON.

That high mount of God whence light and shade

Shine both. MILTON.

4. An obscure place, properly in a grove or close wood by which the light is excluded.

*Let us seek out some desolate shade, and
there*

Weep our sad bosoms empty.

SHAKESPEARE.

Regions of sorrow, doleful shades.

MILTON.

Then to the desert takes his flight;

Where still from shade to shade the son of God,

After forty days fasting, had remain'd.

MILTON.

*The pious prince then seeks the shade,
Which hides from sight his venerable maid.* DRYDEN.

5. Screen causing an exclusion of light or heat; umbrage.

*Let the arched knife
Well sharpen'd now assail the spreading shades
Of vegetables, and their thirsty limbs dissever.* PHILIPS.

In Brazil are trees which kill those that sit under their shade in a few hours.

ARBUTHNOT.

6. Protection; shelter.

7. The parts of a picture not brightly coloured.

*'Tis ev'ry painter's art to hide from sight,
And cast in shades what seen would not delight.* DRYDEN.

8. A colour; gradation of light.

White, red, yellow, blue, with their several degrees, or shades and mixtures, as green come in only by the eyes. LOCKE.

9. The figure formed upon any surface corresponding to the body by which the light is intercepted.<sup>191</sup>

Envy will merit as its shade pursue.
POPE.

10. The soul separated from the body; so called as supposed by the ancients to be perceptible to the sight, not to the touch. A spirit; a ghost; manes.

*To Trachin swift as thought the flitting
shade
Thro' air his momentary journey made.*
DRYDEN.
*Ne'er to these chambers where the mighty
rest,
Since their foundation, came a nobler guest;
Nor e'er was to the bow'rs of bliss convey'd
A fairer spirit or more welcome shade.*
TICKELL.

SHAGRE'EN. n.s. [chagrin, French.] The skin of a kind of fish, or skin made rough in imitation of it.

To SHA'GREEN. v.a. [chagriner, French] To irritate; to provoke. Both should be written chagrin.

SHALL. v. defective. [sceal, Sax. is originally I owe, or I ought. In Chaucer, the faithe I shall to God, means the faith I owe to God: thence it became a sign of the future tense. The French use devoir, dois, doit, in the same manner, with a kind of future signification; and the Swedes have skall, and the Islanders skal, in the same sense. It has no tenses but shall future, and should imperfect.

The explanation of shall, which foreigners and provincials confound with will, is not easy; and the difficulty is increased by the poets, who sometimes give to shall an emphatical sense of will: but I shall endeavour, crassa Minervâ,<sup>192</sup> to show the meaning of shall in the future tense.]

1. I SHALL love. It will so happen that I must love; I am resolved to love.

2. SHALL I love? Will it be permitted me to love? Will you permit me to love? Will it happen that I must love?

3. Thou SHALT love. I command thee to love; it is permitted thee to love: [in poetry or solemn diction] it will happen that thou must love.

4. SHALT thou love? Will it happen that thou must love? Will it be permitted to thee to love?

5. He SHALL love. It will happen that he must love; it is commanded him that he love.

It is a mind, that shall remain a poison where it is.

— Shall remain!

Hear you this triton of the minnows? Mark you

His absolute shall?

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

*See Romulus the great:
This prince a priestess of your blood shall
bear,
And like his sire in arms he shall appear.*
DRYDEN'S ÆNEIS.

That he shall receive no benefit from Christ, is the affirmation whereon all his despair is founded; and the one way of removing this dismal apprehension, is to convince him that Christ's death, and the benefits thereof, either do, or, if he perform the condition required of him, shall certainly belong to him.

HAMMOND'S FUNDAMENTALS.

6. SHALL he love? Is it permitted him to love? In solemn language, Will it happen that he must love?

7. The plural persons follow the signification of the singulars.

SHA'LOWBRAINED. adj. [shallow and brain.] Foolish; futile; trifling; empty.

It cannot but be matter of just indignation to all good men to see a company of lewd shallowbrained huffs making atheism, and contempt of religion, the sole badge of wit.
SOUTH.

SHA'MBLING. adj. [See SCAMBLING.<sup>193</sup>] Moving awkwardly and irregularly. A low bad word.

By that shambling in his walk, it should be my rich banker, Gomez, whom I knew at Barcelona. DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRYAR.

*So when nurse Nokes to act young Ammon tries,
With shambling legs, long chin, and foolish eyes,
With dangling hands he strokes th' imperial robe,
And with a cuckold's air commands the globe.* SMITH.

SHA'PESMITH. n.s. [shape and smith.] One who undertakes to improve the form of the body. A burlesque word.

*No shapsmith yet set up and drove a trade,
To mend the work that providence had made.* GARTH.

SHA'REBONE. n.s. [share and bone.] The os pubis; the bone that divides the trunk from the limbs.

The cartilage bracing together the two ossa pubis, or sharebones, Bartholine faith, is twice thicker and laxer in women than men. DERHAM.

SHARK. n.s. [canis charcharias, Latin.]

1. A voracious sea-fish.

*His jaws horrifick arm'd with threefold fate,
The direful shark.*
THOMSON'S SUMMER.

2. A greedy artful fellow; one who fills his pockets by sly tricks.<sup>194</sup>

David's messengers are sent back to him, like so many sharks and runnagates, only for endeavouring to compliment an ill-nature out of itself, and seeking that by petition which they might have commanded by their sword. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

3. Trick; fraud; petty rapine.

Wretches who live upon the shark, and other mens sins, the common poisoners of youth, equally desperate in their fortunes and their manners, and getting their very bread by the damnation of souls.
SOUTH'S SERMONS.

To SHARK. v.a. To pick up hastily or sily.

*Young Fortinbras,
Of unimproved mettle, hot and full,
Hath in the skirts of Norway, here and there,
Shark'd up a list of landless resolute.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

To SHARK. v.n.

1. To play the petty thief.

The fly leads a lazy, voluptuous, scandalous, sharking life, hateful wherever she comes. L'ESTRANGE.

2. To cheat; to trick. Ainsworth.

There are cheats by natural inclination as well as by corruption: nature taught this boy to shark, not discipline. L'ESTRANGE.

The old generous English spirit, which heretofore made this nation so great in the eyes of all the world, seems utterly extinct; and we are degenerated into a mean, sharking, fallacious, undermining converse, there being a snare and a trapan almost in every word we hear, and every action we see.

SOUTH.

SHA'RPER. n.s. [from sharp.] A tricking fellow; a petty thief; a rascal.

Sharpers, as pikes, prey upon their own kind. L'ESTRANGE.

He should retrench what he lost to sharpers, and spent upon puppet-plays, to apply it to that use. ARBUTHNOT.

I only wear it in a land of Hectors, Thieves, supercargo's, sharpers, and directors. POPE.

SHA'VER. n.s. [from shave.]

1. A man that practises the art of shaving.

2. A man closely attentive to his own interest.

My lord

*Was now dispos'd to crack a jest,
And bid friend Lewis go in quest;
This Lewis is a cunning shaver.* SWIFT.

3. A robber; a plunderer.

They fell all into the hands of the cruel mountain people, living for the most part by theft, and waiting for wrecks, as hawks for their prey: by these shavers the Turks were stript of all they had. KNOLLES.

SHAW. n.s. [scua, Saxon; schawe, Dutch; skugga, Islandick.] A thicket; a small wood. A tuft of trees near Lichfield is called Gentle shaw.

SHA'WFOWL. n.s. [shaw and fowl.] An artificial fowl made by fowlers on purpose to shoot at.

SHEE'PBITER. n.s. [from sheepbite.] A petty thief.

His gate like a sheepbiter fleering aside. TUSSER.

Wouldst thou not be glad to have the niggardly rascally sheepbiter come to some notable shame. SHAKESPEARE.

There are political sheepbiters as well as pastoral: betrayors of publick trusts, as well as of private. L'ESTRANGE.

SHEEPWA'LK. n.s. [sheep and walk.] Pasture for sheep.

He beheld a field,

*Part arable and tilth; whereon were sheaves
New reap'd; the other part sheepwalks and folds.* MILTON.

SHE'RUFF. n.s. [scyregepefa, Saxon, from scyre, a shire, and reve, a steward. It is sometimes pronounced shrieve, which some poets have injudiciously adopted.] An officer to whom is intrusted in each county the execution of the laws.

A great pow'r of English and of Scots Are by the sheriff of Yorkshire overthrown. SHAKESPEARE.

Concerning ministers of justice, the high sheriffs of the counties have been very ancient in this kingdom. BACON.

Now may'rs and shrieves all hush'd and satiated lay. POPE.

SHI'FTER. n.s. [from shift.] One who plays tricks; a man of artifice.

'Twas such a shifter, that, if truth were known, Death was half glad when he had got him down. MILTON.

SHI'LLING. n.s. [scylling, Sax. and Erse; schelling, Dut.] A coin of various value in different times. It is now twelve pence.

Five of these pence made their shilling, which they called scilling, probably from scilingus, which the Romans used for the fourth part of an ounce; and forty-eight of these scillings made their pound, and four hundred of these pounds were a legacy for a king's daughter, as appeareth by the last will of king Alfred.

CAMDEN'S REMAINS.

The very same shilling may at one time pay twenty men in twenty days, and at another rest in the same hands one hundred days. LOCKE.

SHILL-I-SHALL-I. A corrupt reduplication of shall I? The question of a man hesitating. To stand shill-I-shall-I, is to continue hesitating and procrastinating.

I am somewhat dainty in making a resolution, because when I make it, I keep it: I don't stand shill-I-shall-I then; if I say't, I'll do't.

CONGREVE'S WAY OF THE WORLD.

SHI'NESS. n.s. [from shy.] Unwillingness to be tractable or familiar.

An incurable shiness is the vice of Irish horses, and is hardly ever seen in Flanders, because the Winter forces the breeders there to house and handle their colts. TEMPLE.

They were famous for their justice in commerce, but extreme shiness to strangers: they exposed their goods with the price marked upon them, and then retired.

ARBUTHNOT.

SHIRE. n.s. [scir, from sciran, to divide, Sax. skyre, Erse.] A division of the kingdom; a county; so much of the kingdom as is under one sheriff.

*His blazing eyes, like two bright shining shields,
Did burn with wrath, and sparkled living fire;
As two broad beacons, set in open fields,
Send forth their flames far off to every shire.* FAIRY QUEEN.

The noble youths from distant shires resort. PRIOR.

SHI'TTLECOCK. n.s. [Commonly and perhaps as properly shuttlecock. Of shittle or shuttle the etymology is doubtful: Skinner derives it from schut-teln, German, to shake; or sceatan, Saxon, to throw. He thinks it is called a cock from its feathers. Perhaps it is properly shuttlecock, a cork driven to and fro, as the instrument in weaving, and softened by frequent and rapid utterance from cork and cock.] A cork stuck with feathers, and driven by players from one to another with battledoors.

You need not discharge a cannon to break the chain of his thoughts: the pat of a shittlecock, or the creaking of a jack, will do his business. COLLIER.

SHOE'BOY. n.s. [shoe and boy.] A boy that cleans shoes.

If I employ a shoeboy, is it in view to his advantage, or my own convenience?

SWIFT.

*How each the publick good pursues,
Make all true patriots up to shoeboys,
Huzza their brethren.* SWIFT.

SHOE'ING-HORN. n.s. [shoe and horn.]

1. A horn used to facilitate the admission of the foot into a narrow shoe.
2. Any thing by which a transaction is facilitated; any thing used as a medium. In contempt.

Most of our fine young ladies retain in their service supernumerary and insignificant fellows which they use like whifflers, and commonly call shoeing-horns.

SPECTATOR.

I have been an arrant shoeing-horn for above these twenty years. I served my mistress in that capacity above five of the number before she was shod. Though she had many who made their applications to her, I always thought myself the best shoe in her shop. SPECTATOR.

SHOE'TYE. n.s. [shoe and tye.] The ribband with which women tie their shoes.

*Madam, I do as is my duty,
Honour the shadow of your shoetye.*

HUDIBRAS.

SHOG. n.s. [from shock.] Violent concussion.

*Another's diving bow he did adore,
Which, with a shog, casts all the hair before.* DRYDEN.

He will rather have the primitive man to be produced, in a kind of digesting balneum, where all the heavier lees may subside, and a due æquilibrium be maintained, not disturbed by any such rude and violent shogs that would ruffle and break all the little stamina of the embryo. BENTLEY.

To SHOG. v.a. To shake; to agitate by sudden interrupted impulses.

After it is washed, they put the remnant into a wooden dish, the which they softly shog to and fro in the water, until the earthy substance be flitted away.

CAREW.

SHOP. n.s. [sceop, Saxon, a magazine; eschoppe, French; shopa, low Latin. Ainsworth.]

1. A place where any thing is sold.

*Our windows are broke down,
And we for fear compell'd to shut our shops.* SHAKESPEARE.

*Your most grave belly thus answer'd;
True is it, my incorporate friends,
That I receive the general food at first,
Which you do live upon; and fit it is,
Because I am the store-house and the shop
Of the whole body.* SHAKESPEARE.

*In his needy shop a tortoise hung,
An alligator stuft, and other skins
Of ill-shap'd fishes; and about his shelves
A beggarly account of empty boxes.*

SHAKESPEARE.

Scarce any sold in shops could be relied on as faithfully prepared. BOYLE.

His shop is his element, and he cannot with any enjoyment of himself live out of it. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

2. A room in which manufactures are carried on.

We have divers mechanical arts and stuffs made by them; and shops for such as are not brought into vulgar use. BACON.

SHOPBOA'RD. n.s. [shop and board.] Bench on which any work is done.

*That beastly rabble, that came down
From all the garrets in the town,
And stalls, and shopboards, in vast swarms,
With new-chalk'd bills, and rusty arms.*

HUDIBRAS.

It dwells not in shops or work-houses; nor till the late age was it ever known, that any one served seven years to a smith or a taylor, that he should commence doctor or divine from the shopboard or the anvil; or from whistling to a team, come to preach to a congregation. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

SHO'PMAN. n.s. [shop and man.] A petty trader.

*Garth, gen'rous as his muse, prescribes and gives,
The shopman sells, and by destruction lives.* DRYDEN.

SHO'RTHAND. n.s. [short and hand.] A method of writing in compendious characters.

*Your follies and debauches change
With such a whirl, the poets of your age Are tir'd, and cannot score them on the stage,
Unless each vice in shorthand they indite, Ev'n as notcht 'prentices whole sermons
write.* DRYDEN.

Boys have but little use of shorthand, and should by no means practise it, 'till they can write perfectly well. LOCKE.

In shorthand skill'd, where little marks comprise

Whole words, a sentence in a letter lies.

CREECH.

As the language of the face is universal, so 'tis very comprehensive: no laconism can reach it: 'tis the shorthand of the mind, and crowds a great deal in a little room.

COLLIER.

SHO'RY. adj. [from shore.] Lying near the coast.

There is commonly a declivity from the shore to the middle part of the channel, and those shory parts are generally but some fathoms deep.

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

SHOULD. v.n. [scude, Dutch; sceoldan, Saxon.]

1. This is a kind of auxiliary verb used in the conjunctive mood, of which the signification is not easily fixed.
2. I SHOULD go. It is my business or duty to go.
3. If I SHOULD go. If it happens that I go.
4. Thou SHOULD'ST go. Thou oughtest to go.
5. If thou SHOULD'ST go. If it happens that thou goest.
6. The same significations are found in all the other persons singular and plural.

Let not a desperate action more engage you Than safety should.

BEN JONSON'S CATILINE.

Some praises come of good wishes and respects, when by telling men what they are, they represent to them what they should be. BACON.

To do thee honour I will shed their blood, Which the just laws, if I were faultless, should. WALLER.

So subjects love just kings, or so they should. DRYDEN.

I conclude, that things are not as they should be. SWIFT.

7. SHOULD be. A proverbial phrase of slight contempt or irony.

The girls look upon their father as a clown, and the boys think their mother no better than she should be. ADDISON.

8. There is another signification now little in use, in which should has scarcely any distinct or explicable meaning. It should be differs in this sense very little from it is.

There is a fabulous narration, that in the northern countries there should be an herb that groweth in the likeness of a lamb, and feedeth upon the grass.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

SHO'ULDERSLIP. n.s. [shoulder and slip.] Dislocation of the shoulder.

The horse will take so much care of himself as to come off with only a strain or a shoulderslip. SWIFT.

SHRILL. [A word supposed to be made per onomatopœiam, in imitation of the thing expressed, which indeed it images very happily.] Sounding with a piercing, tremulous, or vibratory sound.

*Thy hounds shall make the welkin answer them,
And fetch shrill echoes from the hollow earth.* SHAKESPEARE.

*I have heard
The cock that is the trumpet to the morn,
Doth with his lofty and shrill sounding throat
Awake the god of day.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

*Have I fall'n,
From the dread summit of this chalky bourn!
Look up a height, the shrill gorg'd lark so far
Cannot be seen or heard.*
SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

Upsprings the lark, Shrill voic'd and loud, the messenger of morn. THOMSON.

To SHRUGG.<sup>195</sup> v.n. [schrichen, Dutch; to tremble.] To express horror or dissatisfaction by motion of the shoulders or whole body.

Like a fearful deer that looks most about when he comes to the best feed, with a shrugging kind of tremor through all her principal parts, she gave these words.

SIDNEY.

The touch of the cold water made a pretty kind of shrugging come over her body like the twinkling of the fairest among the fixed stars. SIDNEY.

Be quick, thou wert

best

To answer other business; shrug'st thou malice? SHAKESPEARE.

He grins, smacks, shrugs, and such an itch endures,

*As prentices or school boys which do know
Of some gay sport abroad, yet dare not go.*
DONNE.

They grin, they shrug,

They bow, they snarl, they scratch, they hug. SWIFT.

To SHRUG. v.a. To contract or draw up.

He shrugs his shoulders when you talk of securities. ADDISON.

Zealots will shrug up their shoulders.

BLOUNT.

*He shrug'd his sturdy back,
As if he felt his shoulders ake.*

HUDIBRAS.

SHU'FFLECAP. n.s. [shuffle and cap.] A play at which money is shaken in a hat.

He lost his money at chuck farthing, shufflecap, and all-fours.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

SHU'TTLECOCK. n.s. [See SHUTTLECOCK.] A cork stuck with feathers, and beaten backward and forward.

*With dice, with cards, with balliards far
unfit,*

With shuttlecocks misseeming manly wit.

HUBBERD'S TALE.

SI'CAMORE. n.s. [sicamorus, Latin.] A tree.

Of trees you have the palm, olive, and sicamore. PEACHAM.

SI'CCITY. n.s. [siccite, Fr. siccitas, from siccus, Latin.] Driness; aridity; want of moisture.

That which is coagulated by a fiery siccity will suffer coliquation from an aqueous humidity, as salt and sugar.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

The reason some attempt to make out from the siccity and driness of its flesh.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

In application of medicaments consider what degree of heat and siccity is proper.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

SICE. n.s. [six, French.] The number six at dice.

*My study was to cog the dice,
And dext'rously to throw the lucky sice;
To shun ames-ace, that swept my stakes away.* DRYDEN.

SI'DEBOARD. n.s. [side and board.] The side table on which conveniences are placed for those that eat at the other table.

*At a stately sideboard by the wine
That fragrant smell diffus'd.*

MILTON'S PARADISE REGAIN'D.

*No sideboards then with gilded plate were
dress'd,*

*No sweating slaves with massive dishes
press'd.* DRYDEN.

The snow white damask ensigns are display'd,

And glitt'ring salvers on the sideboard laid. KING.

The shining sideboard, and the burnish'd plate,

Let other ministers, great Anne, require.

PRIOR.

Scipio Africanus brought from Carthage to Rome, in silver vessels, to the value of 11966 l. 15 s. 9 d. a quantity exceeded afterwards by the sideboards of many private tables. ARBUTHNOT.

SI'DEBOX. n.s. [side and box.] Seat for the ladies on the side of the theatre.

Why round our coaches crowd the white-glov'd beaus?

Why bows the sidebox from its inmost rows? POPE.

SIDERA'TION. n.s. [sideration, French; sideratio, Latin.] A sudden mortification, or, as the common people call it, a blast; or a sudden deprivation of sense, as in an apoplexy.

The contagious vapour of the very eggs produce a mortification or sideration in the parts of plants on which they are laid.

RAY ON THE CREATION.

SIGN. n.s. [signe, French; signum, Latin.]

1. A token of any thing; that by which any thing is shown.

Signs must resemble the things they signify. HOOKER.

Signs for communication may be contrived from any variety of objects of one kind appertaining to either sense. HOLDER.

To express the passions which are seated in the heart by outward signs, is one great precept of the painters, and very difficult to perform. DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

When any one uses any term, he may have in his mind a determined idea which he makes it the sign of, and to which he should keep it steadily annexed. LOCKE.

2. A wonder; a miracle.<sup>196</sup>

If they will not hearken to the voice of the first sign, they will not believe the latter sign. BIBLE EXODUS, IV. 8.

Cover thy face that thou see not; for I have set thee for a sign unto Israel.

BIBLE EZEKIEL, XII. 6.

Compell'd by signs and judgments dire.

MILTON.

3. A picture hung at a door, to give notice what is sold within.

I found my miss, struck hands, and pray'd him tell,

To hold acquaintance still, where he did dwell;

He barely nam'd the street, promis'd the wine;

But his kind wife gave me the very sign.

DONNE.

Underneath an alehouse' paltry sign.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

True sorrow's like to wine,

That which is good does never need a sign. SUCKLING.

Wit and fancy are not employed in any one article so much as that of contriving signs to hang over houses. SWIFT.

4. A monument; a memorial.

The fire devoured two hundred and fifty men, and they became a sign.

BIBLE NUMBERS, XXVI. 10.

5. A constellation in the zodiack.

There stay until the twelve celestial signs Have brought about their annual reckoning. SHAKESPEARE.

Now did the sign reign, and the constellation was come, under which Perkin should appear. BACON'S HENRY VII.

After ev'ry foe subdu'd, the sun Thrice through the signs his annual race shall run. DRYDEN.

6. Note of resemblance.

7. Ensign.

The ensign of Messiah blaz'd,

Aloft by angels borne, his sign in heaven.

MILTON.

8. Typical representation; symbol.

The holy symbols or signs are not barely significative; but what they represent is as certainly delivered to us as the symbols themselves. BREREWOOD.

9. A subscription of one's name: as, a sign manual.

SI'GNAL. n.s. [signal, French; sennale, Spanish.] Notice given by a sign; a sign that gives notice.

*The weary sun hath made a golden set,
And, by the bright track of his fiery car,
Gives signal of a goodly day to-morrow.*
SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

*Scarce the dawning day began to spring,
As at a signal giv'n, the streets with clamours ring.* DRYDEN.

To SI'GNALIZE. v.a. [signaler, French.] To make eminent; to make remarkable.

Many, who have endeavoured to signalize themselves by works of this nature, plainly discover that they are not acquainted with the most common systems of arts and sciences. ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

Some one eminent spirit, having signalized his valour and fortune in defence of his country, or by the practice of popular arts at home, becomes to have great influence on the people. SWIFT.

SI'GNATURE. n.s. [signature, Fr. signatura, from signo, Lat.]

1. A sign or mark impressed upon anything; a stamp; a mark.

The brain being well furnished with various traces, signatures, and images, will have a rich treasure always ready to be offered to the soul. WATTS.

That natural and indelible signature of God, which human souls, in their first origin, are supposed to be stamped with, we have no need of in disputes against atheism. BENTLEY.

*Vulgar parents cannot stamp their race
With signatures of such majestic grace.*
POPE'S ODYSSEY.

2. A mark upon any matter, particularly upon plants, by which their nature or medicinal use is pointed out.

All bodies work by the communication of their nature, or by the impression and signatures of their motions: the diffusion of species visible, seemeth to participate more of the former, and the species audible of the latter. BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

Some plants bear a very evident signature of their nature and use.
MORE AGAINST ATHEISM.

*Seek out for plants, and signatures,
To quack of universal cures.* HUDIBRAS.
Herbs are described by marks and signatures, so far as to distinguish them from one another. BAKER ON LEARNING.

3. Proof; evidence.<sup>197</sup>

The most despicable pieces of decayed nature are curiously wrought with eminent signatures of divine wisdom.
GLANVILLE.

Some rely on certain marks and signatures of their election, and others on their belonging to some particular church or sect. ROGERS'S SERMONS.

4. [Among printers.] Some letter or figure to distinguish different sheets.

SI'LENCE. interj. An authoritative restraint of speech.

*Sir, have pity; I'll be his surety. —
— Silence: one word more Shall make me chide thee, if not hate thee.*
SHAKESPEARE.

SI'LLILY. adv. [from silly.] In a silly manner; simply; foolishly.

*I wonder, what thou and I Did, till we lov'd? were we not wean'd till then,
But suck'd on childish pleasures sillily?
Or slumber'd we in the seven sleepers den?*
DONNE.

We are caught as sillily as the bird in the net. L'ESTRANGE.

Do, do, look sillily, good colonel; 'tis a decent melancholy after an absolute defeat. DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRIAR.

SI'LLY. adj. [selig, German. Skinner.]

1. Harmless; innocent; inoffensive; plain; artless.

2. Weak; helpless.

*After long storms,
In dread of death and dangerous dismay,
With which my silly bark was tossed sore,
I do at length descry the happy shore.*

SPENSER.

3. Foolish; witless.

*Perhaps their loves, or else their sheep,
Was that did their silly thoughts so busy keep.* MILTON.

The meanest subjects censure the actions of the greatest prince; the silliest servants, of the wisest master. TEMPLE.

I have no discontent at living here; besides what arises from a silly spirit of liberty, which I resolve to throw off. SWIFT.

Such parts of writings as are stupid or silly, false or mistaken, should become subjects of occasional criticism. WATTS.

SI'LLYHOW. n.s. [Perhaps from selig, happy, and heoft, the head.] The membrane that covers the head of the foetus.

Great conceits are raised, of the membranous covering called the sillyhow, sometimes found about the heads of children upon their birth.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

SI'MILE. n.s. [simile, Latin.] A comparison by which any thing is illustrated or aggrandized.

*Their rhimes,
Full of protest, of oath, and big compare,
Want similes.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TROILUS AND
CRESSIDA.

*Lucentio slip'd me, like his greyhound,
Which runs himself, and catches for his master:*

A good swift simile, but something currish. SHAKESPEARE.

*In argument,
Similes are like songs in love,
They much describe; they nothing prove.*
PRIOR.

Poets, to give a loose to a warm fancy, not only expatiate in their similes, but introduce them too frequently. GARTH.

SIMPLE. n.s. [simple, French.] A single ingredient in a medicine; a drug. It is popularly used for an herb.

*Of simples in these groves that grow,
We'll learn the perfect skill;
The nature of each herb to know,
Which cures, and which can kill.*

DRAYTON'S QUEST OF CYNTHIA.

*Our foster nurse of nature is repose,
The which he lacks; that to provoke in him,
Are many simples operative, whose power
Will close the eye of anguish.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

*He would ope his leathern scrip,
And shew me simples of a thousand names,*

Telling their strange and vigorous faculties. MILTON.

What virtue is in this remedy lies in the naked simple itself, as it comes over from the Indies. TEMPLE.

*Around its entries nodding poppies grow,
And all cool simples that sweet rest bestow;
Night from the plants their sleepy virtue drains,*

And passing, sheds it on the silent plains.

DRYDEN.

Med'cine is mine: what herbs and simples grow

*In fields and forests, all their pow'rs I know,
And am the great physician call'd.*

DRYDEN.

To SIMPLE. v.n. To gather simples.

*As once the foaming boar he chas'd,
Lascivious Circe well the youth survey'd,
As simpling on the flow'ry hills he stray'd.*

GARTH.

SI'MPLER. n.s. [from simple.] A simplist. An herbarist.

SI'MPLIST. n.s. [from simple.] One skilled in simples.

A plant so unlike a rose, it hath been mistaken by some good simplists for amomum.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

SIMULA'TION. n.s. [simulation, French; simulatio from simulo, Latin.] That part of hypocrisy which pretends that to be which is not.

Simulation is a vice rising of a natural false-ness, or fearfulness; or of a mind that hath some main faults; which because a man must needs disguise, it maketh him practise simulation. BACON.

For the unquestionable virtues of her person and mind, he well expressed his love in an act and time of no simulation towards his end, bequeathing her all his mansion-houses, and a power to dispose of his whole personal estate. WOTTON.

For distinction sake, a deceiving by word is commonly called a lie; and deceiving by actions, gestures, or behaviour, is called simulation or hypocrisy.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

SI'NISTROUSLY. adv. [from sinistrous.]

1. With a tendency to the left.

Many in their infancy are sinistrously disposed, and divers continue all their life left-handed, and have but weak and imperfect use of the right.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

2. Perversely; absurdly.

SINK. n.s. [sinc, Saxon.]

1. A drain; a jakes

Should by the cormorant belly be restrain'd, Who is the sink o' th' body.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

Bad humours gather to a bile, or as divers

kennels flow to one sink, so in short time their numbers increased. HAYWARD.

Gather more filth than any sink in town. GRANVILLE.

Returning home at night, you'll find the sink

Strike your offended sense with double stink. SWIFT.

2. Any place where corruption is gathered.

What sink of monsters, wretches of lost minds,

Mad after change, and desperate in their states,

Wearied and gall'd with their necessities, Durst have thought it?

BEN JONSON'S CATILINE.

Our soul, whose country's heav'n and God her father,

Into this world, corruption's sink, is sent;

Yet so much in her travail she doth gather,

That she returns home wiser than she went. DONNE.

SI'NUS. n.s. [Latin.]

1. A bay of the sea; an opening of the land.

Plato supposeth his Atlantis to have sunk all into the sea: whether that be true or no, I do not think it impossible that some arms of the sea, or sinus's, might have had such an original.

BURNET'S THEORY OF THE EARTH.

2. Any fold or opening.

SI'ROP, SIRUP. n.s. [Arabick]

The juice of vegetables boiled with sugar.

Shall I, whose ears her mournful words did seize,

Her words in sirup laid of sweetest breath, Relent. SIDNEY.

Not poppy, nor mandragora,

Nor all the drowsy sirups of the world

Shall ever med'cine thee to that sweet sleep,

Which thou owed'st yesterday.

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

And first, behold this cordial jalap here,

*That flames and dances in his crystal
bounds,
With spirits of balm, and fragrant syrops
mixt.* MILTON.

Those expressed juices contain the true essential salt of the plant; for if they be boiled into the consistence of a syrup, and set in a cool place, the essential salt of the plant will shoot upon the sides of the vessels. ARBUTHNOT.

SITHE. n.s. [siðe, Saxon. This word is very variously written by authors: I have chosen the orthography which is at once most simple and most agreeable to etymology.] The instrument of mowing; a crooked blade joined at right angles to a long pole.

*Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives,
Live registred upon our brazen tombs;
And then grace us in the disgrace of death:
When, spight of cormorant-devouring time,
Th' endeavour of this present breath may
buy
That honour which shall 'bate his scythe's
keen edge;
And make us heirs of all eternity.*
SHAKESPEARE.

Time is commonly drawn upon tombs, in gardens, and other places, an old man, bald, winged with a sithe, and an hourglass. PEACHAM ON DRAWING.

*There rude impetuous rage does storm and fret;
And there, as master of this murd'ring
brood,
Swinging a huge scithe, stands impartial
death,
With endless business almost out of breath.* CRASHAW.

*The milk-maid singeth blithe,
And the mower whets his scithe.*
MILTON.

*The brazen trumpets kindle rage no more;
But useless lances into sythes shall bend,
And the broad faulchion in a plough-share end.* POPE.

*Grav'd o'er their seats the form of time was
found,
His scythe revers'd, and both his pinions bound.* POPE.

*But, Stella, say, what evil tongue
Reports you are no longer young?
That time sits with his sythe to mow
Where erst sat Cupid with his bow.*
SWIFT.

*Echo no more returns the chearful sound
Of sharpening scythe.*
THOMSON'S SUMMER.

SIX and seven. n.s. To be at six and seven, is to be in a state of disorder and confusion.<sup>198</sup>

*All is uneven,
And every thing is left at six and seven.*
SHAKESPEARE.

In 1588, there sat in the see of Rome a fierce thundring friar, that would set all at six and seven, or at six and five, if you allude to his name. BACON.

*What blinder bargain e'er was driv'n,
Or wager laid at six and seven.*
HUDIBRAS.

John once, turned his mother out of doors, to his great sorrow; for his affairs went on at sixes and sevens. ARBUTHNOT.

*The goddess would no longer wait;
But raising from her chair of state,
Left all below at six and seven,
Harness'd her doves and flew to heav'n.*
SWIFT.

SIZE. n.s. [perhaps rather cise, from incisa, Latin; or from assise, French.]

1. Bulk; quantity of superficies; comparative magnitude.

*I ever verified my friends,
With all the size that verity
Would without lapsing suffer.*
SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

If any decayed ship be new made, it is more fit to make her a size less than bigger.
RALEIGH.

The distance judg'd for shot of ev'ry size,

The linstocks touch, the pond'rous ball expires. DRYDEN.

Objects near our view are thought greater than those of a larger size, that are more remote. LOCKE.

*The martial goddess,
Like thee, Telemachus, in voice and size,
With speed divine, from street to street she flies;*

She bids the mariners prepare to stand.
POPE'S ODYSSEY.

2. [Assise, old French.] A settled quantity. In the following passage it seems to signify the allowance of the table: whence they say a sizer at Cambridge.

*'Tis not in thee
To cut off my train, to scant my sizes,
And, in conclusion, to oppose the bolt Against my coming in.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

3. Figurative bulk; condition.

This agrees too in the contempt of men of a less size and quality. L'ESTRANGE.

They do not consider the difference between elaborate discourses, delivered to princes or parliaments, and a plain sermon, intended for the middling or lower size of people.

SWIFT.

4. [Sisa, Italian.] Any viscous or glutinous substance.

SI'ZERS. n.s. See SCISSARS.<sup>199</sup>

A buttrice and pincers, a hammer and naile, An apron and sizers for head and for taile. TUSSER.

SK'EPTICK. n.s. [σκέπτομα, Gr. sceptique, French.] One who doubts, or pretends to doubt of every thing.

Bring the cause unto the bar; whose authority none must disclaim, and least of all those scepticks in religion.

DECAY OF PIETY.

Survey

*Nature's extended face, then scepticks say,
In this wide field of wonders can you find
No art.* BLACKMORE.

With too much knowledge for the scepticks side,

*With too much weakness for the stoicks
pride,*

Man hangs between.

POPE'S ESSAY ON MAN.

The dogmatist is sure of every thing, and the sceptick believes nothing.

WATTS'S LOGICK.

SKILT. n.s. [A word used by Cleveland, of which I know not either the etymology or meaning.]

Smeitymnus! ha! what art?

Syriack? Or Arabick? Or Welsh? What skilt?

Ape all the bricklayers that Babel built.

CLEVELAND.

SKI'MBLESKAMBLE. adj. [A cant word formed by reduplication from scamble.] Wandering; wild.

*A couching lion and a ramping cat,
And such a deal of skimbleskamble stuff,
As puts me from my faith.*

SHAKESPEARE.

SK'IMMILK. n.s. [skim and milk.] Milk from which the cream has been taken.

Then cheese was brought: says Slouch, this e'en shall roll;

This is skimmilk, and therefore it shall go.

KING.

SKONCE. n.s. [See SCONCE.]

Reinard ransacketh every corner of his wily skonce, and bestirreth the utmost of his nimble stumps to quit his coat from their jaws. CAREW.

SKREEN. n.s. [escran, escrein, French, which Minsheu derives from secerniculum, Latin. Nimis violenter ut solet,<sup>190</sup> says Skinner, which may be true as to one of the senses; but if the first sense of skreen be a kind of coarse sieve or riddle, it may perhaps come, if not from cribrum, from some of the descendants of cerno.]

1. A riddle or coarse sieve.

A skuttle or skreen to rid soil fro' the corn. TUSSER.

2. Any thing by which the sun or weather is kept off.

3. Shelter; concealment.

Fenc'd from day, by night's eternal skreen; Unknown to heav'n, and to myself unseen. DRYDEN.

To SKREEN. v.a. [from the noun.]

1. To riddle; to sift. A term yet used among masons when they sift sand for mortar.

2. To shade from sun or light, or weather.

3. To keep off light or weather.

The curtains closely drawn, the light to skreen:

Thus cover'd with an artificial night, Sleep did his office. DRYDEN.

The waters mounted up into the air: their interposition betwixt the earth and the sun skreen and fence off the heat, otherwise insupportable.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

4. To shelter; to protect.

Ajax interpos'd

His sevenfold shield, and skreen'd Laertes' son,

When the insulting Trojans urg'd him sore. PHILIPS.

He that travels with them is to skreen them, and get them out when they have run themselves into the briars. LOCKE.

His majesty encouraged his subjects to make mouths at their betters, and afterwards skreened them from punishment. SPECTATOR.

The scales, of which the scarf-skin is composed, are designed to fence the orifices of the secretory ducts of the miliary glands, and to skreen the nerves from external injuries. CHEYNE.

To SKULK. v.n. To hide; to lurk in fear or malice.

Discover'd, and defeated of your prey, You skulk'd behind the fence, and sneak'd away. DRYDEN.

SKY'ROCKET. n.s. [sky and rocket.] A kind of firework, which flies high and burns as it flies.

I considered a comet, or in the language of the vulgar a blazing star, as a skyrocket discharged by an hand that is almighty.

ADDISON.

To SLAM. v.a. [lema, Islandick; schlagen, Dutch.] To slaughter; to crush. A word not used but in low conversation.

SLA'PDASH. interj. [from slap and dash.] All at once: as any thing broad falls with a slap into the water, and dashes it about. A low word.

And yet, slapdash, is all again

In ev'ry sinew, nerve, and vein. PRIOR.

SLATE. n.s. [from slit: slate is in some counties a crack; or from esclate, a tile, French.] A grey fossile stone, easily broken into thin plates, which are used to cover houses, or to write upon.

A square cannot be so truly drawn upon a slate as it is conceived in the mind.

GREW'S COSMOLOGIA SACRA.

A small piece of a flat slate the ants laid over the hole of their nest, when they foresaw it would rain.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

SLEAVE. n.s. [Of this word I know not well the meaning: sleave silk is explained by Gouldman floccus sericus, a lock of silk; and the women still say sleave the silk, for untwist it. Ainsworth calls a weaver's shuttle or reed a slay. To sley is to part a twist into single fibres.]

*I on a fountain light,
Whose brim with pinks was platted,
The banks with daffadillies dight
With grass like sleeve was matted.*

DRAYTON'S CYNTHIA.

SLEAZY. adj. [often written 'sleezy.] Weak; wanting substance. This seems to be of the same race with sleave, or from to sley.

SLEE'VELESS. adj. [from sleeve.]

1. Wanting sleeves; having no sleeves.

*His cloaths were strange, though coarse,
and black, tho' bare;
Sleeveless his jerkin was, and it had been Velvet, but 'twas now, so much ground was seen,*

Become tufftaffaty. DONNE.

They put on long sleeveless coats of homespun cotton. SANDYS.

Behold yon isle by palmers, pilgrims trod, Grave mummers! sleeveless some, and shirtless others. POPE.

2. Wanting reasonableness; wanting propriety; wanting solidity. [This sense, of which the word has been long possessed, I know not well how it obtained; Skinner thinks it properly liveless or lifeless: to this I cannot heartily agree, though I know not what better to suggest. Can it come from sleeve, a knot, or skein, and so signify unconnected, hanging ill together? or from sleeve, a cover; and therefore means plainly absurd; foolish without palliation?]

This sleeveless tale of transubstantiation was brought into the world by that other fable of the multipresence. HALL.

My landlady quarrelled with him for sending every one of her children on a sleeveless errand, as she calls it.

SPECTATOR.

To SLI'DDER. v.n. [slidderen, Dutch.] To slide with interruption.

*Go thou from me to fate,
Now die: with that he dragg'd the trembling sire,
Slidd'ring through clotted blood.*

DRYDEN.

SLI'PPY. adv. [from slip.] Slippery; easily sliding. A barbarous provincial word.

The white of an egg is ropy, slippy, and nutritious. FLOYER.

SLI'PSHOD. adj. [slip and shod.] Having the shoes not pulled up at the heels, but barely slipped on.

*The slipshod 'prentice from his master's door
Had par'd the dirt, and sprinkled round
the floor.* SWIFT.

SLI'PSLOP. n.s. Bad liquor. A low word formed by reduplication of slop.

SLI'VER. n.s. [from the verb.] A branch torn off. Sliver, in Scotland, still denotes a slice cut off: as, he took a large sliver of the beef.

*There on the pendant boughs, her coronet
weed
Clamb'ring to hang, an envious sliver broke,
When down her weedy coronet and herself
Fell in the weeping brook.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

To SLOCK. v.n. [slock, to quench, Swedish and Scottish.] To slake; to quench.

SLOP. n.s. [from the verb.] Mean and vile liquor of any kind. Generally some nauseous or useless medicinal liquor.<sup>200</sup>

The sick husband here wanted for neither slops nor doctors. L'ESTRANGE.

But thou, whatever slops she will have bought,

Be thankful. DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

SLOUCH. n.s. [sloff, Danish, stupid.] 1. A downcast look; a depression of the head. In Scotland, an ungainly gait, as also the person whose gait it is.

Our doctor has every quality that can make a man useful; but, alas! he hath a sort of slouch in his walk. SWIFT.

2. A man who looks heavy and clownish.

*Begin thy carrols then, thou vaunting slouch;
Be thine the oaken staff, or mine the pouch.* GAY.

SLO'VENLINESS. n.s. [from slovenly.] Indecent negligence of dress; neglect of cleanliness.

Slovenliness is the worst sign of a hard student, and civility the best exercise of the remiss; yet not to be exact in the phrase of compliment, or gestures of courtesy.

WOTTON.

SLO'VENRY. n.s. [from sloven.] Dirtiness; want of neatness.

*Our gayness and our guilt are all besmirch'd
With rainy marching in the painful field:
There's not a piece of feather in our host,
And time hath worn us into slovenry.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

SLU'BBERDEGULLION. n.s. [I suppose a cant word without derivation.] A paltry, dirty, sorry wretch.

*Quoth she, although thou hast deserv'd,
Base slubberdegullion, to be serv'd
As thou did'st vow to deal with me,
If thou had'st got the victory.*

HUDIBRAS.

SLUG. n.s. [slug, Danish, and slock, Dutch, signify a glutton, and thence one that has the sloth of a glutton.]

1. An idler; a drone; a slow, heavy, sleepy, lazy wretch.

Fie, what a slug is Hastings, that he comes not! SHAKESPEARE.

2. An hindrance; an obstruction.

Usury dulls and damps all improvements, wherein money would be stirring, if it were not for this slug. BACON.

3. A kind of slow creeping snail.

4. [Slegc, an hammerhead, Saxon.] A cylindrical or oval piece of metal shot from a gun.

When fractures are made with bullets or slugs, there the scalp and cranium are driven in together.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

*As, forc'd from wind-guns, lead itself can fly,
And pond'rous slugs cut swiftly through the sky.* POPE.

To SLUG. v.n. [from the noun.] To lie idle; to play the drone; to move slowly.

*All he did was to deceive good knights,
And draw them from pursuit of praise and fame,*

*To slug in sloth and sensual delights,
And end their days with irrenowned shame.* FAIRY QUEEN.

He lay not all night slugging in a cabbin under his mantle, but used commonly to keep others waking to defend their lives.

SPENSER.

One went slugging on with a thousand cares. L'ESTRANGE.

SLU'GGARD. n.s. [from slug.] An idler; a drone; an inactive lazy fellow.

*Cry mercy, lords, and watchful gentlemen,
That you have ta'en a tardy sluggard
here.* SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

Up, up, says avarice; thou snor'st again, Stretchest thy limbs, and yawn'st, but all in vain:

*The tyrant lucre no denial takes;
At his command th' unwilling sluggard wakes.* DRYDEN.

Sprightly May commands our youth to keep The vigils of her night, and breaks their sluggard sleep. DRYDEN.

To SLU'GGARDIZE. v.a. [from sluggard.] To make idle; to make dronish.

*Rather see the wonders of the world abroad,
Than, living dully sluggardiz'd at home,
Wear out thy youth with shapeless idleness.* SHAKESPEARE.

SLU'TTERY. n.s. [from slut.] The qualities or practice of a slut.

*Slutt'ry, to such neat excellence oppos'd,
Should make desire vomit emptiness.*
SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

*Where fires thou find'st unrak'd, and hearths unswept,
There pinch the maids as blue as bilberry;
Our radiant queen hates sluts and slutt'ry.* SHAKESPEARE.

*These make our girls their sluttery rue,
By pinching them both black and blue;
And put a penny in their shoe,
The house for cleanly sweeping.*
DRAYTON.

A man gave money for a black, upon an opinion that his swarthy colour was rather sluttery than nature, and the fault of his master that kept him no cleaner.
L'ESTRANGE.

SMA'LLCOAL. n.s. [small and coal.] Little wood coals used to light fires.

A smallcoal man, by waking one of these distressed gentlemen, saved him from ten years imprisonment. SPECTATOR.

*When smallcoal murmurs in the hoarser
throat,
From smutty dangers guard thy threaten'd coat.* GAY.

SMA'LLCRAFT. n.s. [small and craft.] A little vessel below the denomination of ship.

*Shall he before me sign, whom t' other day
A smallcraft vessel hither did convey;
Where stain'd with prunes, and rotten figs,
he lay.* DRYDEN.

SMA'LLY. adv. [from small.] In a little quantity; with minuteness; in a little or low degree.

A child that is still, and somewhat hard of wit, is never chosen by the father to be made a scholar, or else when he cometh to the school, is smally regarded. ASCHAM.

SMA'LNES. n.s. [from small.]

1. Littleness; not greatness.

The parts in glass are evenly spread, but are not so close as in gold; as we see by the easy admission of light, and by the smalness of the weight.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

2. Littleness; want of bulk; minuteness; exility.

Whatsoever is invisible, in respect of the fineness of the body, or the smalness of the parts, or subtilty of the motion, is little enquired.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

The smalness of the rays of light may contribute very much to the power of the agent by which they are refracted.

NEWTON.

3. Want of strength; weakness.

SMART. n.s. A fellow affecting briskness and vivacity. A cant word.

SMA'TTERER. n.s. [from smatter.] One who has a slight or superficial knowledge.

These few who preserve any rudiments of learning, are, except one or two smatterers, the clergy's friends. SWIFT.

SME'LLFEAST. n.s. [smell and feast.] A parasite; one who haunts good tables.

The ant lives upon her own, honestly gotten; whereas the fly is an intruder, and a common smellfeast that sponges upon other people's trenchers. L'ESTRANGE.

SMOCKFA'CED. adj. [smock and face.] Palefaced; maidenly.

*Old chiefs reflecting on their former deeds,
Disdain to rust with batter'd invalids;
But active in the foremost ranks appear,
And leave young smockfac'd beaux to guard the rear.* FENTON.

To SMO'OTHEN. v.a. [A bad word among mechanicks for smooth.] To make even and smooth.

With edged grooving tools they cut down and smoothen the extuberances left.

MOXON'S MECHANICAL EXERCISES.

SMO'ULDERING, SMOUL-
DRY. [This word seems a participle;
but I know not whether the verb
smoulder be in use: smoran, Saxon, to smother; smoel, Dutch, hot.] Burning and smoking without vent.

*None can breathe, nor see, nor hear at will,
Through smouldry cloud of duskish
stinking smoke,*

That th' only breath him daunts who hath escap'd the stroke. FAIRY QUEEN.

*In some close pent room it crept along,
And, smould'ring as it went, in silence fed;
'Till th' infant monster, with devouring strong,*

Walk'd boldly upright with exalted head.

DRYDEN.

SMU'GGLER. n.s. [from smuggle.]
A wretch, who, in defiance of justice and the laws, imports or exports goods either contraband or without payment of the customs.

SNACK. n.s. [from snatch.] A share;
a part taken by compact.

If the master gets the better on't, they come in for their snack. L'ESTRANGE.

*For four times talking, if one piece thou
take,*

That must be cantled, and the judge go snack. DRYDEN.

*All my demurs but double his attacks;
At last he whispers, "Do, and we go snacks."* POPE.

SNAKE. n.s. [snaca, Saxon; snake,
Dutch.] A serpent of the oviparous kind, distinguished from a viper. The snake's bite is harmless. Snake in poetry is a general name for a viper.

Glo'ster's shew beguiles him;

*As the snake, roll'd in a flow'ry bank,
With shining checker'd slough, doth sting a child,*

That for the beauty thinks it excellent.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

*We have scotch'd the snake, not kill'd it:
She'll close, and be herself; whilst our poor malice*

Remains in danger of her former teeth.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

The parts must have their outlines in waves, resembling the gliding of a snake upon the ground: they must be smooth and even. DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

Nor chalk, nor crumbling stones, the food of snakes

That work in hollow earth their winding tracks. DRYDEN.

SNAP. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. The act of breaking with a quick motion.

2. A greedy fellow.

He had no sooner said out his say, but up rises a cunning snap, then at the board.

L'ESTRANGE.

3. A quick eager bite.

With their bills, thwarted crosswise at the end, they would cut an apple in two at one snap. CAREW.

4. A catch; a theft.

SNA'PDRAGON, or Calf's snout.
n.s. [antirrhinum, Latin.]

1. A plant.

2. A kind of play, in which brandy is set on fire, and raisins thrown into it, which those who are unused to the sport are afraid to take out; but which may be safely snatched by a quick motion, and put blazing into the mouth, which being closed, the fire is at once extinguished.

SNAST. n.s. The snuff of a candle.

It first burned fair, 'till some part of the candle was consumed, and the sawdust gathering about the snast; but then it made the snast big and long, and burn duskishly, and the candle wasted in half the time of the wax pure.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

SNE'AKER. n.s. A large vessel of drink.

I have just left the right worshipful and his myrmidons about a sneaker of five gallons. SPECTATOR.

SNIP. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. A single cut with scissars.

*What! this a sleeve?
Here's snip and nip, and cut, and slish and slash,*

Like to a censor in a barber's shop.

SHAKESPEARE.

The ulcer would not cure farther than it was laid open; therefore with one snip more I laid it open to the very end. WISEMAN.

2. A small shred.

Those we keep within compass by small snips of emplast, hoping to defend the parts about; but, in spite of all, they will spread farther. WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

3. A share; a snack. A low word.

He found his friend upon the mending hand, which he was glad to hear, because of the snip that he himself expected upon the dividend. L'ESTRANGE.

SNU'FFERS. n.s. [from snuff.] The instrument with which the candle is clipped.

When you have snuffed the candle, leave the snuffers open.

SWIFT'S DIRECTIONS TO THE BUTLER.

SOAP. n.s. [sape, Saxon; sapo, Latin.] A substance used in washing, made of a lixivium of vegetable alkaline ashes and any unctuous substance.

Soap is a mixture of a fixed alkaline salt and oil; its virtues are cleansing, penetrating, attenuating, and resolving; and any mixture of any oily substance with salt may be called a soap.

ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

He is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers soap. MALACHI.

A bubble blown with water, first made tenacious by dissolving a little soap in it, after a while will appear tinged with a great variety of colours.

NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

Soap-earth is found in great quantity on the land near the banks of the river Hermus, seven miles from Smyrna.

WOODWARD.

Soap-ashes are much commended, after the soap-boilers have done with them, for cold or sour lands. MORTIMER.

As rain-water diminishes their salt, so the moistening of them with chamber-lee or soap-suds adds thereto. MORTIMER.

SOAPBOI'LER. n.s. [soap and boil.] One whose trade is to make soap.

A soapboiler condoles with me on the duties on castle-soap.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

SOCK. n.s. [soccus, Latin; socc, Saxon; socke, Dutch.]

1. Something put between the foot and shoe.

Ere I lead this life long, I'll sow nether socks, and mend them, and foot them too.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

A physician, that would be mystical, prescribeth for the rheum to walk continually upon a camomile alley; meaning he should put camomile within his socks.

BACON.

2. The shoe of the ancient comick actors, taken in poems for comedy, and opposed to buskin or tragedy.

*Then to the well trod stage anon,
If Johnson's learned sock be on,
Or sweetest Shakespeare, fancy's child,
Warble his native wood-notes wild.*

MILTON.

*Great Fletcher never treads in buskins here,
Nor greater Johnson dares in socks appear;
But gentle Simkin just reception finds Amidst the monument of vanish'd minds.*

DRYDEN.

On two figures of actors in the villa Mathei at Rome, we see the fashion of the old sock and larva. ADDISON.

SO'FA. n.s. [I believe an eastern word.] A splendid seat covered with carpets.

The king leaped off from the sofa on which he sat, and cried out, 'tis my Abdullah!

GUARDIAN.

SOHO. interj. A form of calling from a distant place.

SOI'LINESS. n.s. [from soil.] Stain; foulness.

Make proof of the incorporation of silver and tin, whether it yield no soiliness more than silver. BACON.

SOI'LURE. n.s. [from soil.] Stain; pollution.

*He merits well to have her,
Not making any scruple of her soilure.*

SHAKESPEARE.

To SO'JOURN. v.n. [sejourner, French; seggionare, Italian.] To dwell any where for a time; to live as not at home; to inhabit as not in a settled habitation. Almost out of use.

*If, till the expiration of your month,
You will return and sojourn with my sister, Dismissing half your train, come then to
me.* SHAKESPEARE.

*Th' advantage of his absence took the king,
And in the mean time sojourn'd at my father's.* SHAKESPEARE.

*How comes it he is to sojourn with you?
how creeps acquaintance?*

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

Here dwells he; though he sojourn every where

In progress, yet his standing house is here.

DONNE.

The sojourning of Israel, who dwelt in Egypt, was four hundred and thirty years.

BIBLE EXODUS, XII. 40.

The soldiers first assembled at Newcastle, and there sojourned three days.

HAYWARD.

To sojourn in that land

He comes invited.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

He who sojourns in a foreign country, refers what he sees abroad to the state of things at home. ATTERBURY.

SO'JOURN. n.s. [sejour, French, from the verb.] A temporary residence; a casual and no settled habitation. This word was anciently accented on the last syllable: Milton accents it indifferently.

The princes, France and Burgundy, Long in our court have made their am'rous sojourn. SHAKESPEARE.

*Thee I revisit now, Escap'd the Stygian pool, though long
detain'd*

In that obscure sojourn.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

*Scarce view'd the Galilean towns,
And once a year Jerusalem, few days
Short sojourn.*

MILTON'S PARADISE REGAIN'D.

SO'LECISM. n.s. [σολοικισμός.] Unfitness of one word to another; impropriety in language. A barbarism may be in one word, a solecism must be of more.

There is scarce a solecism in writing which the best author is not guilty of, if we be at liberty to read him in the words of some manuscript. ADDISON.

SOLI'CITOR. n.s. [from solicit.]

1. One who petitions for another.

*Be merry, Cassio;
For thy solicitor shall rather die,
Than give thy cause away.*

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

Honest minds will consider poverty as a recommendation in the person who applies himself to them, and make the justice of his cause the most powerful solicitor in his behalf. ADDISON.

2. One who does in Chancery the business which is done by attorneys in other courts.

For the king's attorney and solicitor general, their continual use for the king's service requires men every way fit.

BACON.

SOLIDU'NGULOUS. adj. [solidus
and ungula, Latin] Wholehoofed.

It is set down by Aristotle and Pliny, that an horse and all solidungulous or whole-hoofed animals have no gall, which we find repugnant unto reason.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

SOLIFI'DIAN. n.s. [solus and fides, Latin.] One who supposes only faith,
not works, necessary to justification.

It may be justly feared, that the title of fundamentals, being ordinarily confined to the doctrines of faith, hath occasioned that great scandal in the church of God, at which so many myriads of solifidians have stumbled, and fallen irreversibly, by conceiving heaven a reward of true opinions. HAMMOND.

SOLI'LOQUY. n.s. [soliloque, Fr.
solus and loquor, Lat.] A discourse made by one in solitude to himself.

The whole poem is a soliloquy: Solomon is the person that speaks: he is at once the hero and the author; but he tells us very often what others say to him. PRIOR.

He finds no respite from his anxious grief,

Then seeks from his soliloquy relief.

GARTH'S DISPENSATORY.

If I should own myself in love, you know lovers are always allowed the comfort of soliloquy. SPECTATOR.

SO'LIPEDE. n.s. [solus and pedes, Lat.] An animal whose feet are not cloven.

Solipedes, or firm footed animals, as horses, asses, and mules, are in mighty number. BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

SOLITA'IRE. n.s. [solitaire, French.]

1. A recluse; a hermit.

Often have I been going to take possession of tranquillity, when your conversation has spoiled me for a solitaire. POPE.

2. An ornament for the neck.

SO'LVIBLE. adj. [from solve.] Possible to be cleared by reason or inquiry.

*Intellective memory I call an act of the intellective faculty, because it is wrought by it, though I do not inquire how or where,
because it is not solvible.*

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

SO'LUTIVE. adj. [from solvo,
Latin.] Laxative; causing relaxation.

Though it would not be so abstersive, opening, and solutive as mead, yet it will be more lenitive in sharp diseases.

BACON.

SO'MERSAULT, SOMERSET.

n.s. [Somerset is the corruption.
Sommer, a beam, and sault, French, a leap.] A leap by which a jumper throws himself from a beam, and turns over his head.

SOMNI'FEROUS. adj. [somnifere,
Fr. somnifer, Latin.] Causing sleep;
procuring sleep; soperiferous;
dormitive.

I wish for some somniferous potion, that might force me to sleep away the inter- mitted time, as it does with men in sorrow. WALTON'S ANGLER.

SOMNI'FICK. adj. [somnus and facio, Latin.] Causing sleep.

SON. n.s. [sunus, Gothick; suna, Saxon; sohn, German; son, Swedish; sone, Dutch; syn, Sclavonian.]

1. A male born of one or begotten by one; correlative to father or mother.

She had a son for her cradle, ere she had a husband for her bed.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

Cast out this bondwoman and her son.

BIBLE GENESIS, XXI. 10.

He compares the affection of the Divine Being to the indulgence of a wise father, who would have his sons exercised with labour and pain, that they may gather strength. ADDISON.

2. Descendant however distant: as, the sons of Adam.

I am the son of the wise, the son of ancient kings. BIBLE ISAIAH, XIX.

3. Compellation of an old to a young man, or of a confessor to his penitent.

Be plain, good son, and homely in thy drift;

Riddling confession finds but riddling shrift. SHAKESPEARE.

4. Native of a country.

Britain then

Sees arts her savage sons controul. POPE.

5. The second person of the Trinity.

If thou be the son of God, come down.

BIBLE MATTHEW, XXVII. 40.

6. Product of any thing.

Our imperfections prompt our corruption, and loudly tell us we are sons of earth.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

*Earth's tall sons, the cedar, oak, and pine,
Their parents undecaying strength declare.*

BLACKMORE.

7. In scripture, sons of pride, and sons of light, denoting some quality. 'Tis a Hebraism.

This new fav'rite

Of heav'n, this man of clay, son of despite. MILTON.

SONA'TA. n.s. [Italian.] A tune.

He whistled a Scotch tune, and an Italian sonata. ADDISON.

*Could Pedro, think you, make no trial
Of a sonata on his viol,*

Unless he had the total gut,

Whence every string at first was cut.

PRIOR.

SO'NGISH. adj. [from song.]

Containing songs; consisting of songs.

A low word.

The songish part must abound in the softness and variety of numbers, its intention being to please the hearing. DRYDEN.

SOONLY. adv. [from soon.] Quickly; speedily. This word I remember in no other place; but if soon be, as it seems once to have been, an adjective, soonly is proper.

*A mason meets with a stone that wants no cutting, and, soonly approving of it, places
it in his work.* MORE.

SO'OTERKIN. n.s. A kind of false birth fabled to be produced by the Dutch women from sitting over their stoves.

When Jove was, from his teeming head,

Of wit's fair goddess brought to-bed,

There follow'd at his lying-in,

For after-birth, a sooterkin. SWIFT.

SOPE. n.s. [See SOAP.]

SOPHISTICA'TION. n.s. [sophistication, Fr. from sophisticate.] Adulteration; not genuineness.

Sophistication is the act of counterfeiting or adulterating any thing with what is not so good, for the sake of unlawful gain.

QUINCY.

The drugs and simples sold in shops, generally are adulterated by the fraudulent avarice of the sellers, especially if the preciousness may make their sophistication very beneficial. BOYLE.

Besides easy submission to sophistications of sense, we have inability to prevent the miscarriages of our junior reasons.

GLANVILLE.

SOPORI' FEROUS. adj. [sopor and fero.] Productive of sleep; causing sleep; narcotick; opiate; dormitive; somniferous; anodyne; sleepy.

The particular ingredients of those magical ointments are opiate and soporiferous; for anointing of the forehead, neck, feet, and back-bone, procures dead sleeps. BACON.

While the whole operation was performing, I lay in a profound sleep, by the force of that soporiferous medicine infused into my liquor. GULLIVER'S TRAVELS.

SOPORI' FICK. adj. [sopor and facio.] Causing sleep; opiate; narcotick.

The colour and taste of opium are, as well as its soporifick or anodyne virtues, mere powers depending on its primary qualities.

LOCKE.

SORE. n.s. [sar, Saxon; saur, Danish.] A place tender and painful; a place excoriated; an ulcer. It is not used of a wound, but of a breach of continuity, either long continued or from internal cause: to be a sore, there must be an excoriation; a tumour or bruise is not called a sore before some disruption happen.

Let us hence provide

A salve for any sore that may betide.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

It is a bad exchange to wound a man's own conscience, to salve state sores.

KING CHARLES.

*Receipts abound; but searching all thy store,
The best is still at hand to launce the sore,
And cut the head; for till the core be found
The secret vice is fed and gathers ground.*

DRYDEN.

*By these all festring sores her councils heal,
Which time or has disclos'd, or shall reveal.* DRYDEN.

Lice and flies, which have a most wonderful instinct to find out convenient places for the hatching and nourishment of their young, lay their eggs upon sores. BENTLEY.

SO'RROW. n.s. [sorg, Danish.] Grief; pain for something past; sadness; mourning. Sorrow is not commonly understood as the effect of present evil, but of lost good.

Sorrow is uneasiness in the mind, upon the thought of a good lost, which might have been enjoyed longer; or the tense of a present evil. LOCKE.

*Sorrow on thee, and all the pack of you;
That triumph thus upon my misery!*

SHAKESPEARE.

A world of woe and sorrow. MILTON.

*Some other hour I will to tears allow;
But having you, can show no sorrow now.*

DRYDEN.

SO'RRY. adj. [sarig, Saxon.]

1. Grieved for something past. It is generally used of slight or casual miscarriages or vexations, but sometimes of greater things. It does not imply any long continuance of grief.

O, forget

What we are sorry for ourselves in thee.

TIMON OF ATHENS.

The king was sorry: nevertheless for the oath's sake he commanded the Baptist's head to be given her.

BIBLE MATTHEW, XIV. 9.

I'm sorry for thee, friend; 'tis the duke's pleasure. SHAKESPEARE.

We are sorry for the satire interspersed in some of these pieces, upon a few people,

from whom the highest provocations have been received. SWIFT.

2. [From saur, filth, Islandick.] Vile; worthless; vexatious.

*A salt and sorry rheum offends me:
Lend me thy handkerchief.*

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

*How now, why do you keep alone?
Of sorriest fancies your companions making,*

*Using those thoughts, which should, indeed,
have died*

With them they think on.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*If the union of the parts consist only in rest, it would seem that a bag of dust would be of as firm a consistence as that of marble;
and Bajazet's cage had been but a sorry prison.* GLANVILLE.

*Coarse complexions,
And cheeks of sorry grain will serve to ply
The sampler, and to teize the housewife's wool.* MILTON.

How vain were all the ensigns of his power, that could not support him against one slighting look of a sorry slave!

L'ESTRANGE.

If this innocent had any relation to his Thebais, the poet might have found some sorry excuse for detaining the reader.

DRYDEN.

If such a slight and sorry business as that could produce one organical body, one might reasonably expect, that now and then a dead lump of dough might be leavened into an animal. BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

SO'RTILEGE. n.s. [sortilege, Fr. sortilegium, Latin.] The act or practice of drawing lots.

To SOSS. v.n. [A cant word.] To sit lazily on a chair; to fall at once into a chair.

*The winter sky began to frown,
Poor Stella must pack off to town;
From wholesome exercise and air,
To sossing in an easy chair.* SWIFT.

SOU'LSHOT. n.s. [soul and shot.] Something paid for a soul's requiem among the Romanists.

In the Saxon times there was a funeral duty to be paid, called pecunia sepulchralis & symbolum animæ, and a Saxon soulshot.

AYLIFFE'S PARERAGON.

SOUP. n.s. [soupe, French.] Strong decoction of flesh for the table.

Spongy morells in strong ragousts are found,

And in the soup the slimy snail is drown'd. GAY'S TRIVIA.

Let the cook daub the back of the footman's new livery, or, when he is going up with a dish of soup, let her follow him softly with a ladle-full. SWIFT.

SO'UVENANCE. n.s. [French.] Remembrance; memory. A French word which with many more is now happily disused.

*If thou wilt renounce thy miscreance,
Life will I grant thee for thy valiance,
And all thy wrongs will wipe out of my souvenance.* SPENSER.

Gave wond'rous great countenance to the knight,

*That of his way he had no souvenance,
Nor care of vow'd revenge.* SPENSER.

SPA'DDLE. n.s. [Diminutive of spade.] A little spade.

Others destroy moles with a spaddle, waiting in the mornings and evenings for them. MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

SPARGEFA'CTION. n.s. [spargo, Lat.] The act of sprinkling.

SPARK. n.s. [spearca, Saxon; sparke, Dutch.]

1. A small particle of fire, or kindled matter

If any marvel how a thing, in itself so weak, could import any great danger, they must consider not so much how small the spark is that flieth up, as how apt things about it are to take fire. HOOKER.

I am about to weep; but thinking that We are a queen, my drops of tears I'll turn To sparks of fire. SHAKESPEARE.

I was not forgetful of the sparks which some mens distempers formerly studied to kindle in parliaments. KING CHARLES.

*In this deep quiet, from what source unknown,
Those seeds of fire that fatal birth disclose:
And first, few scatt'ring sparks about were blown,
Big with the flames that to our ruin rose.* DRYDEN.

*Oh, may some spark of your celestial fire
The last, the meanest of your sons inspire.* POPE.

2. Any thing shining.

*We have, here and there, a little clear light,
some sparks of bright knowledge.* LOCKE.

3. Any thing vivid or active.

*If any spark of life be yet remaining,
Down, down to hell, and say, I sent thee thither.* SHAKESPEARE.

4. A lively, showy, splendid, gay man. It is commonly used in contempt.

How many huffing sparks have we seen, that in the same day have been both the idols and the scorn of the same slaves? L'ESTRANGE.

*A spark like thee, of the mankilling trade
Fell sick.* DRYDEN.

As for the disputes of sharpers, we don't read of any provisions made for the honours of such sparks. COLLIER.

*The finest sparks, and cleanest beaux
Drip from the shoulders to the toes.* PRIOR.

*I who have been the poet's spark to day,
Will now become the champion of his play.* GRANVILLE.

*Unlucky as Fungoso in the play,
These sparks with aukward vanity display*

What the fine gentlemen wore yesterday. POPE.

SPA'RKISH. adj. [from spark.]

1. Airy; gay. A low word.<sup>201</sup>

Is any thing more sparkish and better humour'd than Venus's accosting her son in the desarts of Libya? WALSH.

2. Showy; well dressed; fine.

A daw, to be sparkish, trick'd himself up with all the gay feathers he could muster. L'ESTRANGE.

SPATTERDASHES. n.s. [spatter and dash.] Coverings for the legs by which the wet is kept off.

SPEA'KING Trumpet. n.s. A stentorophonick instrument; a trumpet by which the voice may be propagated to a great distance.

*That with one blast through the whole house does bound,
And first taught speaking trumpet how to sound.* DRYDEN.

SPECTA'TION. n.s. [spectatio, Latin.] Regard; respect.

This simple spectation of the lungs is differenced from that which concomitates a pleurisy. HARVEY.

SPE'CTRUM. n.s. [Latin.] An image; a visible form.

This prism had some veins running along within the glass, from the one end to the other, which scattered some of the sun's light irregularly, but had no sensible effect in encreasing the length of the coloured spectrum. NEWTON'S OPTICKS.

SPECULA'TOR. n.s. [from speculate.]

1. One who forms theories.

He is dexterous in puzzling others, if they be not through-paced speculators in those great theories. MORE.

2. [Speculateur, French.] An observer; a contemplator.

Although lapidaries and questuary enquirers affirm it, yet the writers of minerals, and natural speculators, conceive the stones which bear this name to be a mineral concretion. BROWN.

3. A spy; a watcher.

All the boats had one speculator, to give notice when the fish approached.

BROOME'S NOTES ON THE ODYSSEY.

SPEECH. n.s. [from speak.]

1. The power of articulate utterance; the power of expressing thoughts by vocal words.

There is none comparable to the variety of instructive expressions by speech, wherewith a man alone is endowed, for the communication of his thoughts.

HOLDER ON SPEECH.

Though our ideas are first acquired by various sensations and reflections, yet we convey them to each other by the means of certain sounds, or written marks, which we call words; and a great part of our knowledge is both obtained and communicated by these means, which are called speech.

WATTS.

2. Language; words considered as expressing thoughts.

In speech be eight parts. ACCIDENCE.

The acts of God to human ears
Cannot without process of speech be told.

MILTON.

3. Particular language as distinct from others.

There is neither speech nor language, but their voices are heard among them.

BIBLE PSALMS, COMMON PRAYER.

4. Any thing spoken.

A plague upon your epileptick visage!
Smile you my speeches as I were a fool.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

5. Talk; mention.

The duke did of me demand
What was the speech among the Londoners,

Concerning the French journey.

SHAKESPEARE.

Speech of a man's self ought to be seldom.

BACON'S ESSAYS.

6. Oration; harangue.

The constant design of these orators, in all their speeches, was to drive some one particular point. SWIFT.

7. Liberty to speak.<sup>202</sup>

I, with leave of speech implor'd, reply'd.

MILTON.

To SPET. v.a. To bring or pour abundantly. [Spet in Scotland is a superabundance of water: as, that tide or fresh was a high spet.]

Mysterious dame,
That ne'er art call'd, but when the dragon womb
Of Stygian darkness spets her thickest gloom,
And makes one blot of all the air,
Stop thy cloudy ebon chair. MILTON.

SPICK and SPAN. [This word I should not have expected to have found authorised by a polite writer. Span-new is used by Chaucer, and is supposed to come from spannan, to stretch, Sax. expandere, Lat. whence span. Span-new is therefore originally used of cloath new extended or dressed at the clothiers, and spick and span is newly extended on the spikes or tenters: it is however a low word.] Quite new; now first used.

While the honour, thou hast got,
Is spick and span new, piping hot,
Strike her up bravely. BUTLER.

They would have these reduced to nothing, and then others created spick and span new out of nothing. BURNET.

I keep no antiquated stuff;
But spick and span I have enough.
SWIFT.

SPI'NSTER. n.s. [from spin.]

1. A woman that spins.

*The spinsters and the knitters in the sun,
And the free maids that weave their thread
with bones,
Do use to chant it.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TWELFTH NIGHT.

2. [In law.] The general term for a girl or maiden woman.

*One Michael Cassio,
That never set a squadron in the field,
Nor the division of a battle knows
More than a spinster.*

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

I desire that a yearly annuity of twenty pounds shall be paid to Rebecca Dingley of the city of Dublin, spinster, during her life. SWIFT.

SPI'NSTRY. n.s. [from spinster.]

The work of spinning.

SPI'RE. n.s. [spira, Latin; spira, Italian; spira, Swedish.]

1. A curve line; any thing wreathed or contorted; a curl; a twist; a wreath.

*His head
Crested aloft, and carbuncle his eyes;
With burnish'd neck of verdant gold, erect Amidst his circling spires, that on the grass
Floated redundant.* MILTON.

*A dragon's fiery form belied the god,
Sublime on radiant spires he rode.*
DRYDEN.

*Air seems to consist of spires contorted into small spheres, through the interstices of which the particles of light may freely pass;
it is light, the solid substance of the spires being very small in proportion to the spaces
they take up.* CHEYNE.

2. Any thing growing up taper; a round pyramid, so called perhaps because a line drawn round and round in less and less circles, would be a spire; a steeple.

With glist'ring spires and pinnacles adorn'd. MILTON.

He cannot make one spire of grass more or less than he hath made.

HALE'S ORIGIN OF MANKIND.

*These pointed spires that wound the ambient sky,
Inglorious change! shall in destruction lie.*
PRIOR.

3. The top or uppermost point.

*'Twere no less than a traducement to silence, that Which to the spire and top of praises
vouch'd,
Wou'd seem but modest.* SHAKESPEARE.

SPI'SSITUDE. n.s. [from spissus, Latin.] Grossness; thickness.

Drawing wine or beer from the lees, called racking, it will clarify the sooner; for though the lees keep the drink in heart, and make it lasting, yet they cast up some spissitude.
BACON.

Spissitude is subdued by acrid things, and acrimony by inspissating.
ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

To SPI'TCHCOCK. v.a. To cut an eel in pieces and roast him. Of this word I find no good etymology.

*No man lards salt pork with orange peel,
Or garnishes his lamb with spitchcock eel.* KING.

SPLE'NDENT. adj. [splendens, Latin.] Shining; glossy; having lustre.

They assigned them names from some remarkable qualities, that is very observable in their red and splendent planets.
BROWN.

Metallick substances may, by reason of their great density, reflect all the light incident upon them, and so be as opake and splendent as it's possible for any body to be. NEWTON.

SPONK. n.s. A word in Edinburgh which denotes a match, or any thing dipt in sulphur that takes fire: as, any sponks will ye buy? Touchwood.

SPO'NSION. n.s. [sponsio, Latin.] The act of becoming surety for another.

SPO'NSOR. n.s. [Latin.] A surety; one who makes a promise or gives security for another.

In the baptism of a male there ought to be two males and one woman, and in the baptism of a female child two women and one man; and these are called sponsors or sureties for their education in the true Christian faith. AYLIFFE'S PARERGON.

The sponsor ought to be of the same station with the person to whom he becomes surety. BROOME.

SPO'ONMEAT. n.s. [spoon and meat.] Liquid food; nourishment taken with a spoon.

We prescribed a slender diet, allowing only spoonmeats. WISEMAN.

Wretched

*Are mortals born to sleep their lives away!
Go back to what thy infancy began,
Eat pap and spoonmeat; for thy gurgaws cry,*

Be sullen, and refuse the lullaby.

DRYDEN'S PERSIUS.

Diet most upon spoonmeats, as veal, or cock-broths. HARVEY.

SPO'RTULE. n.s. [sportule, French; sportula, Latin.] An alms; a dole.

*The bishops, who consecrated the ground,
had a spill or sportule from the credulous laity.* AYLIFFE'S PARERGON.

SPRUCE. adj. [Skinner derives this word from preux, French; but he proposes it with hesitation: Junius thinks it comes from sprout; Casaubon trifles yet more contemptibly. I know not whence to deduce it, except from pruce. In ancient books we find furniture of pruce a thing costly and elegant, and thence probably came spruce.] Nice; trim; neat without elegance.

The tree

That wraps that crystal in a wooden tomb, Shall be took up spruce, fill'd with diamond. DONNE.

*Thou wilt not leave me in the middle street,
Tho' some more spruce companion thou do'st meet.* DONNE.

*Along the crisped shades and bow'rs
Revels the spruce and jocund Spring;
The graces, and the rosy-bosom'd hours,
Thither all their bounties bring.*

MILTON.

I must not slip into too spruce a style for serious matters; and yet I approve not that dull insipid way of writing practised by many chymists. BOYLE.

*He put his band and beard in order,
The sprucer to accost and board her.*

HUDIBRAS.

He is so spruce, that he can never be genteel. TATLER.

This Tim makes a strange figure with that ragged coat under his livery: can't he go spruce and clean? ARBUTHNOT.

TO SPRUCE. v.n. [from the noun.] To dress with affected neatness.

SPRU'CEBEER. n.s. [from spruce, a kind of fir.] Beer tinctured with branches of fir.

In ulcers of the kidneys sprucebeer is a good balsamick. ARBUTHNOT.

SPRUNT. n.s. Any thing that is short and will not easily bend.

SPUD. n.s. A short knife.

*My love to Sheelah is more firmly fixt,
Than strongest weeds that grow these stones
betwixt:*

*My spud these nettles from the stones can part,
No knife so keen to weed thee from my heart.* SWIFT.

SPU'NGINGHOUSE. n.s. [spunge and house.] A house to which debtors are taken before commitment to prison, where the bailiffs sponge upon them, or riot at their cost.

A bailiff kept you the whole evening in a spunginghouse. SWIFT.

SPUNK. n.s. Rotten wood; touchwood. See SPONK.

To make white powder, the best way is by the powder of rotten willows: spunk, or touchwood prepared, might perhaps make it russet. BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

SPU'RWAY. n.s. [spur and way.] A horseway; a bridle-road; distinct from a road for carriages.

To SPU'TTER. v.n. [sputo, Latin.]

1. To emit moisture in small flying drops.

*If a manly drop or two fall down,
It scalds along my cheeks, like the green wood,
That, sputt'ring in the flame, works outward into tears.* DRYDEN.

2. To fly out in small particles with some noise.

*The nightly virgin, while her wheel she plies,
Foresees the storms impending in the skies,
When sparkling lamps their sputt'ring light advance,
And in the sockets oily bubbles dance.* DRYDEN.

3. To speak hastily and obscurely, as with the mouth full; to throw out the spittle by hasty speech.

A pinking owl sat sputtering at the sun, and asked him what he meant to stand staring her in the eyes. L'ESTRANGE.

They could neither of them speak their rage; and so fell a sputtering at one another, like two roasting apples. CONGREVE.

*Though he sputter through a session,
It never makes the least impression;
Whate'er he speaks for madness goes.* SWIFT.

To SPU'TTER. v.a. To throw out with noise and hesitation.

*Thou do'st with lies the throne invade,
Obtending heav'n for whate'er ills befall;
And sputt'ring under specious names thy gall.* DRYDEN.

In the midst of caresses, and without the least pretended incitement, to sputter out the basest accusations! SWIFT.

SPU'TTERER. n.s. [from sputter.] One that sputters.

SPY'BOAT. n.s. [spy and boat.] A boat sent out for intelligence.

Giving the colour of the sea to their spyboats to keep them from being discovered, came from the Veneti.

ARBUTHNOT.

SQUAB. adj. [I know not whence derived.]

1. Unfeathered; newly hatched.

*Why must old pigeons, and they stale, be drest,
When there's so many squab ones in the nest.* KING.

2. Fat; thick and stout; awkwardly bulky.

*The nappy ale goes round,
Nor the squab daughter nor the wife were nice,
Each health the youths began, Sim pledg'd it twice.* BETTERTON.

SQUAB. n.s. A kind of sofa or couch; a stuffed cushion.

*On her large squab you find her spread,
Like a fat corpse upon a bed.* SWIFT.

SQUAB. adv. With a heavy sudden fall; plump and flat. A low word.

*The eagle took the tortoise up into the air,
and dropt him down, squab, upon a rock,
that dashed him to pieces.* L'ESTRANGE.

SQUA'BPIE. n.s. [squab and pie.] A pie made of many ingredients.

*Cornwal squabpie, and Devon whitepot brings,
And Leister beans and bacon, food of kings.* KING.

To SQUAB. v.n. To fall down plump or flat; to squelsh or squash.

SQUA'BBISH. adj. [from squab.] Thick; heavy; fleshy.

Diet renders them of a squabbish or lardy habit of body. HARVEY.

SQUA'DRON. n.s. [escadron, Fr. squadrone, Italian, from quadratus, Latin.]

1. A body of men drawn up square.

*Those half rounding guards
Just met, and closing stood in squadron join'd.* MILTON.

2. A part of an army; a troop.

*Nothing the Moors were more afraid of,
than in a set battle to fight with squadrons
coming orderly on.* KNOLLES.

*Then beauteous Atys, with Iulus bred,
Of equal age, the second squadron led.*
DRYDEN.

3. Part of a fleet, a certain number of ships.

Rome could not maintain its dominion over so many provinces, without squadrons ready equipt. ARBUTHNOT.

To SQUALL. v.n. [squala, Swedish.]

To scream out as a child or woman frightened.

In my neighbourhood, a very pretty prattling shoulder of veal squalls out at the sight of a knife. SPECTATOR.

I put five into my coat pocket, and as to the sixth I made a countenance as if I would eat him alive. The poor man squalled terribly. SWIFT.

Cornelius sunk back on a chair; the guests stood astonished; the infant squawl'd.
ARBUTHNOT AND POPE.

SQUALL. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. Loud scream.

*There oft are heard the notes of infant woe,
The short thick sob, loud scream, and shriller squall.* SWIFT.

2. Sudden gust of wind. A sailor's word.

SQUA'LLER. n.s. [from squall.] Screamer; one that screams.

To SQUEAK. v.n. [sqwaka, Swedish.]

1. To set up a sudden dolorous cry; to cry out with pain.

2. To cry with a shrill acute tone.

*The sheeted dead
Did squeak and gibber in the Roman streets.* SHAKESPEARE.

Cart wheels squeak not when they are liquored. BACON.

*I see the new Arion sail,
The lute still trembling underneath thy nail:
At thy well sharpen'd thumb from shore to shore,*

The trebles squeak for fear, the bases roar.
DRYDEN.

Blunderbusses planted in every loop-hole, go off constantly at the squeaking of a fiddle and the thrumming of a guitar.
DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRIAR.

Who can endure to hear one of the rough old Romans squeaking through the mouth of an eunuch? ADDISON.

*How like brutes organs are to ours;
They grant, if higher pow'rs think fit,
A bear might soon be made a wit;
And that for any thing in nature,
Pigs might squeak love-odes, dogs bark satyr.* PRIOR.

*In florid impotence he speaks,
And as the prompter breathes, the puppet squeaks.* POPE.

Zoilus calls the companions of Ulysses the squeaking pigs of Homer.
POPE'S ODYSSEY.

3. To break silence or secrecy for fear or pain.

If he be obstinate, put a civil question to him upon the rack, and he squeaks, I warrant him.

DRYDEN'S DON SEBASTIAN.

SQUEAK. n.s. [from the verb.] A shrill quick cry; a cry of pain.

*Ran cow and calf, and family of hogs,
In panick horror of pursuing dogs:
With many a deadly grunt and doleful
squeak,
Poor swine! as if their pretty hearts wou'd break.* DRYDEN.

To SQUEAL. v.n. [sqwala, Swedish.] To cry with a shrill sharp voice; to cry with pain. Squeak seems a short sudden cry, and squeal a cry continued.

SQUIB. n.s. [schiehen, German, to push forward. This etymology, though the best that I have found, is not very probable.]

1. A small pipe of paper filled with wild-fire. Used in sport.

The armada at Calais, sir Walter Raleigh was wont pretily to say, were suddenly driven away with squibs; for it was no more than a stratagem of fire-boats manless, and sent upon them.

BACON'S WAR WITH SPAIN.

The forest of the south, compareth the French valour to a squib, or fire of flax, which burns and crackles for a time, but suddenly extinguishes.

HOWEL'S VOCAL FOREST.

Lampoons, like squibs, may make a present blaze;

But time, and thunder, pay respect to bays. WALLER.

*Furious he begins his march,
Drives rattling o'er a brazen arch;
With squibs and crackers arm'd to throw
Among the trembling crowd below.*

SWIFT.

2. Any petty fellow.<sup>203</sup>

*Asked for their pass by every squib,
That lift at will them to revile or snib.*
SPENSER.

The squibs, in the common phrase, are called libellers.

TATLER.

STAFF. n.s. plur. staves. [stæf, Saxon; staff, Danish; staff, Dutch.]

1. A stick with which a man supports himself in walking.

*It much would please him,
That of his fortunes you would make a staff
To lean upon.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND
CLEOPATRA.

Grant me and my people the benefit of thy chastisements, that thy rod as well as thy staff may comfort us. KING CHARLES.

Is it probable that he, who had met whole armies in battle, should now throw away his staff, out of fear of a dog. BROOME.

2. A prop; a support.

*Hope is a lover's staff; walk hence with that,
And manage it against despairing thoughts.* SHAKESPEARE.

The boy was the very staff of my age, my very prop. SHAKESPEARE.

3. A stick used as a weapon; a club; the handle of an edged or pointed weapon. A club properly includes the notion of weight, and the staff of length.

I cannot strike at wretched kernes, whose arms

Are hir'd to bear their staves.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

He that bought the skin ran greater risque than t'other that sold it, and had the worse end of the staff. L'ESTRANGE.

*With forks and staves the felon they
pursue.* DRYDEN.

4. Any long piece of wood.

*He forthwith from the glitt'ring staff
unfurl'd*

Th' imperial ensign. MILTON.

*To his single eye, that in his forehead glar'd
Like a full moon, or a broad burnish'd shield,
A forky staff we dext'rously apply'd,*

*Which, in the spacious socket turning
round,
Scoop out the big round gelly from its orb.* ADDISON.

5.<sup>204</sup> An ensign of an office; a badge of authority.

*Methought this staff, mine office-badge in court,
Was broke in twain.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

All his officers brake their staves; but at their return new staves were delivered unto them. HAYWARD ON EDWARD VI.

6. [Stef, Islandick] A stanza; a series of verses regularly disposed, so as that, when the stanza is concluded, the same order begins again.

Cowley found out that no kind of staff is proper for an heroick poem, as being all too lyrical; yet though he wrote in couplets, where rhyme is freer from constraint, he affects half verses. DRYDEN.

STAGE. n.s. [estage, French.]

1. A floor raised to view on which any show is exhibited.

2. The theatre; the place of scenick entertainments.

*And much good do't you then,
Brave plush and velvet men:
Can feed on ort; and, safe in your stage clothes,
Dare quit, upon your oaths,
The stagers and the stage wrights too.*
BEN JONSON.

Those two Mytilene brethren, basely born, crept out of a small galliot unto the majesty of great kings. Herein admire the wonderful changes and chances of these worldly things, now up, now down, as if the life of man were not of much more certainty than a stage play.

KNOLLES'S HISTORY OF THE TURKS.

I maintain, against the enemies of the stage, that patterns of piety, decently represented, may second the precepts.
DRYDEN.

One Livius Andronicus was the first stage player in Rome.

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL, DEDICATION.

Knights, squires, and steeds must enter on the stage. POPE.

Among slaves, who exercised polite arts, none sold so dear as stage players or actors. ARBUTHNOT ON COINS.

3. Any place where any thing is publicly transacted or performed.

When we are born, we cry that we are come

To this great stage of fools.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

4. A place in which rest is taken on a journey; as much of a journey as is performed without intermission.

[Statio, Latin.]

I shall put you in mind where it was you promised to set out, or begin your first stage; and beseech you to go before me my guide.

HAMMOND'S PRACTICAL CATECHISM.

Our next stage brought us to the mouth of the Tiber. ADDISON.

*From thence compell'd by craft and age,
She makes the head her latest stage.*

PRIOR.

By opening a passage from Muscovy to China, and marking the several stages, it was a journey of so many days.

BAKER.

5. A single step of gradual process.

The changes and vicissitude in wars are many; but chiefly in the seats or stages of the war, the weapons, and the manner of the conduct. BACON'S ESSAYS.

We must not expect that our journey through the several stages of this life should be all smooth and even. ATTERBURY.

To prepare the soul to be a fit inhabitant of that holy place to which we aspire, is to be brought to perfection by gradual advances through several hard and laborious stages of discipline. ROGERS'S SERMONS.

The first stage of healing, or the discharge of matter, is by surgeons called digestion.

SHARP'S SURGERY.

To STAGE. v.a. [from the noun.] To exhibit publicly. Out of use.

I love the people;

*But do not like to stage me to their eyes:
Though it do well, I do not relish well
Their loud applause.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MEASURE FOR MEASURE.

*The quick comedians
Extemp'rally will stage us, and present
Our Alexandrian revels.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

STA'GECOACH. n.s. [stage and coach.] A coach that keeps its stages; a coach that passes and repasses on certain days for the accommodation of passengers.

The story was told me by a priest, as we travelled in a stagecoach. ADDISON.

When late their miry sides stagecoaches show,

And their stiff horses through the town move slow,

Then let the prudent walker shoes provide.

GAY.

STA'GEPLAY. n.s. [stage and play.] Theatrical entertainment.

This rough-cast unhewn poetry was instead of stageplays for one hundred and twenty years.

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL, DEDICATION.

STA'GER. n.s. [from stage.]

1. A player.

*You safe in your stage clothes,
Dare quit, upon your oaths,
The stagers and the stage wrights too.*

BEN JONSON.

2. One who has long acted on the stage of life; a practitioner; a person of cunning.

I've heard old cunning stagers

Say, fools for argument use wagers.

HUDIBRAS.

One experienced stager, that had baffled twenty traps and tricks before, discovered the plot. L'ESTRANGE.

*Some stagers of the wiser sort
Made all these idle wonderments their sport:*

But he, who heard what ev'ry fool could say,

Would never fix his thought, but trim his time away. DRYDEN.

*One cries out, these stagers
Come in good time to make more work for wagers.* DRYDEN.

Be by a parson cheated!

Had you been cunning stagers,

You might yourselves be treated

By captains and by majors. SWIFT.

STALE. n.s. [from stælan, Saxon, to steal.]

1. Something exhibited or offered as an allurement to draw others to any place or purpose.

His heart being wholly delighted in deceiving us, we could never be warned; but rather one bird caught, served for a stale to bring in more. SIDNEY.

*Still as he went he crafty stales did lay,
With cunning trains him to entrap unwares;*

*And privy spials plac'd in all his way,
To weet what course he takes, and how he fares.* FAIRY QUEEN.

*The trumpery in my house bring hither,
For stale to catch these thieves.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

*Had he none else to make a stale but me?
I was the chief that rais'd him to the crown,
And I'll be chief to bring him down again.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

A pretence of kindness is the universal stale to all base projects: by this men are robbed of their fortunes, and women of their honour.

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE.

It may be a vizor for the hypocrite, and a stale for the ambitious.

DECAY OF PIETY.

This easy fool must be my stale, set up To catch the people's eyes: he's tame and merciful;

Him I can manage.

DRYDEN'S DON SEBASTIAN.

2. In Shakespeare it seems to signify a prostitute.

*I stand dishonour'd, that have gone about
To link my dear friend to a common stale.*

SHAKESPEARE.

3. [From stale, adj.] Urine; old urine.

4. Old beer; beer somewhat acidulated.

5. [Stele, Dutch, a stick.] A handle.

It hath a long stale or handle, with a button at the end for one's hand.

MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

STA'LLION. n.s. [ysdalwyn, an old Welch word: the one is derived from the other; but which from which I cannot certainly tell. Wotton. Estallion, French; stallone, Italian; stalhengst, Dutch. Junius thinks it derived from stælan, to leap.] A horse kept for mares.

The present defects are breeding without choice of stallions in shape or size.

TEMPLE.

*If fleet Dragon's progeny at last Prove jaded, and in frequent matches cast,
No favour for the stallion we retain,
And no respect for the degen'rate strain.*

DRYDEN.

*I will not ask him one of his Egyptians;
No, let him keep 'em all for slaves and stallions.* DRYDEN.

STA'MMEL. n.s. Of this word I know not the meaning.<sup>205</sup>

*Reedhood, the first that doth appear
In stammel: scarlet is too dear.*

BEN JONSON.

STA'NDISH. n.s. [stand and dish.] A case for pen and ink.

A grubstreet patriot does not write to secure, but get something: should the government be overturned he has nothing to lose but an old standish. ADDISON.

I bequeath to Dean Swift esq; my large silver standish, consisting of a large silver plate, an ink-pot, and a sand-box.

SWIFT.

STARGA'ZER. n.s. [star and gaze.] An astronomer, or astrologer. In contempt.

Let the astrologers, the stargazers, and the monthly prognosticators, stand up and save thee. BIBLE ISAIAH, XLVII. 13.

A stargazer, in the height of his celestial observations, stumbled into a ditch.

L'ESTRANGE.

STARK. adv. Is used to intend or augment the signification of a word: as stark mad, mad in the highest degree. It is now little used but in low language.

Then are the best but stark naught; for open suspecting others, comes of secret condemning themselves. SIDNEY.

*The fruitful-headed beast, amaz'd
At flashing beams of that sun-shiny shield, Became stark blind, and all his senses
doz'd,*

That down he tumbled. SPENSER.

Men and women go stark naked. ABBOT.

*He is stark mad, who ever says
That he hath been in love an hour.*

DONNE.

Those seditious, that seemed moderate before, became desperate, and those who were desperate seemed stark mad; whence tumults, confused hollowings and howlings. HAYWARD.

Who, by the most cogent arguments, will disrobe himself at once of all his old opinions, and turn himself out stark naked in quest of new notions? LOCKE.

In came squire South, all dressed up in feathers and ribbons, stark staring mad, brandishing his sword. ARBUTHNOT.

STA'RSHOOT. n.s. [star and shoot.] An emission from a star.

I have seen a good quantity of that jelly, by the vulgar called a starshoot, as if it remained upon the extinction of a falling star. BOYLE.

STA'RTUP. n.s. [start and up.] One that comes suddenly into notice.

That young startup hath all the glory of my overthrow. SHAKESPEARE.

STA'TESMAN. n.s. [state and man.]

1. A politician; one versed in the arts of government.

*It looks grave enough
To seem a statesman.*

BEN JONSON'S EPIGRAMS.

The corruption of a poet is the generation of a statesman. POPE.

2. One employed in publick affairs.

If such actions may have passage free, Bond-slaves and pagans shall our statesmen be.

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

It is a weakness which attends high and low; the statesman who holds the helm, as well as the peasant who holds the plough.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

A British minister must expect to see many friends fall off, whom he cannot gratify, since, to use the phrase of a late statesman, the pasture is not large enough.

ADDISON.

*Here Britain's statesmen oft the fall
foredoom*

Of foreign tyrants, and of nymphs at home. POPE.

STA'TESWOMAN. n.s. [state and woman.] A woman who meddles with publick affairs. In contempt.

How she was in debt, and where she meant To raise fresh sums: she's a great stateswoman! BEN JONSON.

Several objects may innocently be ridiculed, as the passions of our stateswomen.

ADDISON.

STA'TICAL, STATICK. adj. [from the noun.] Relating to the science of weighing.

A man weigheth some pounds less in the height of Winter, according to experience, and the statick aphorisms of Sanctorius.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

If one by a statical engine could regulate his insensible perspiration, he might often, by restoring of that, foresee, prevent, or shorten a fit of the gout. ARBUTHNOT ON DIET.

STA'TICKS. n.s. [στατική; statique, Fr.] The science which considers the weight of bodies.

This is a catholick rule of staticks, that if any body be bulk for bulk heavier than a fluid, it will sink to the bottom; and if lighter, it will float upon it, having part extant, and part immersed, as that so much of the fluid as is equal in bulk to the immersed part be equal in gravity to the whole. BENTLEY.

STA'TIONER. n.s. [from station.]

1. A bookseller.

Some modern tragedies are beautiful on the stage, and yet Tryphon the stationer complains they are seldom asked for in his shop. DRYDEN.

*With authors, stationers obey'd the call;
Glory and gain th' industrious tribe provoke,*

And gentle dulness ever loves a joke.

POPE'S DUNCIAD.

2. A seller of paper.

To STAVE and Tail. v.a. To part dogs by interposing a staff, and by pulling the tail.

*The conquering foe they soon assail'd,
First Trulla stav'd, and Cerdon tail'd.*

HUDIBRAS.

A staylace from England should become a topick for censure at visits. SWIFT.

STEE'LYARD. n.s. [steel and yard.] A kind of balance, in which the weight is moved along an iron rod, and grows heavier as it is removed farther from the fulcrum.

STE'LLIONATE. n.s. [stellionat, French; stellionatus, Latin.] A kind of crime which is committed [in law] by a deceitful selling of a thing otherwise than it really is: as, if a man should sell that for his own estate which is actually another man's.

It discerneth of crimes of stellionate, and the inchoations towards crimes capital, not actually committed. BACON.

STENCH. n.s. [from stencan, Saxon.]
1. A stink; a bad smell.

*Death, death; oh amiable and lovely death!
Thou odoriferous stench, sound rottenness,
Arise forth from thy couch of lasting night.*
SHAKESPEARE'S KING JOHN.

*So bees with smoke, and doves with noisome stench,
Are from their hives, and houses, driv'n away.* SHAKESPEARE.

*Physicians by the stench of feathers cure
the rising of the mother.*
BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

The ministry will be found the salt of the earth, the only thing that keeps societies of men from stench and corruption.
SOUTH'S SERMONS.

*The hoary Nar,
Corrupted with the stench of sulphur flows,
And into Tiber's streams th' infected current throws.* ADDISON.

2. I find it used once for a good smell.
*Black bulls and bearded goats on altars lie,
And clouds of sav'ry stench involve the sky.* DRYDEN.

STENTOROPHO'NICK. adj.
[from Stentor, the Homerial herald,

whose voice was as loud as that of fifty men, and φωνή, a voice.] Loudly speaking or sounding.

Of this stentorophonick horn of Alexander there is a figure preserved in the Vatican.
DERHAM'S PHYSICO-THEOLOGY.

STEP, in composition, signifies one who is related only by marriage. [Steop, Saxon, from stepan, to deprive or make an orphan: for the Saxons not only said a step-mother, but a step-daughter, or step-son; to which it indeed, according to this etymology, more properly belongs: but as it is now seldom applied but to the mother, it seems to mean, in the mind of those who use it, a woman who has stepped into the vacant place of the true mother.]

How should their minds chuse but misdoubt, lest this discipline, which always you match with divine doctrine as her natural and true sister, be found unto all kinds of knowledge a step-mother.
HOOKER.

*His wanton step-dame loved him the more;
But when she saw her offered sweets refuse,
Her love she turn'd to hate.*
FAIRY QUEEN.

*You shall not find me, daughter,
After the slander of most step-mothers,
Ill-ey'd unto you.*
SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

A father cruel, and a step-dame false.
SHAKESPEARE.

Cato the elder, being aged, buried his wife, and married a young woman: his son came to him, and said, Sir, what have I offended, that you have brought a step-mother into your house? The old man answered, Nay, quite the contrary, son; thou pleasest me so well, as I would be glad to have more such. BACON.

*The name of step-dame, your practis'd art,
By which you have estrang'd my father's
heart,
All you have done against me, or design,*

Shows your aversion, but begets not mine.
 DRYDEN'S AURENGZEBE.

*A step-dame too I have, a cursed she,
 Who rules my hen-peck'd sire, and orders me.* DRYDEN.

Any body would have guessed miss to have been bred up under the influence of a cruel step-dame, and John to be the fondling of a tender mother.

ARBUTHNOT HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

STERCORA'TION. n.s. [from stercora, Latin.] The act of dunging; the act of manuring with dung.

The first help is stercoration: the sheeps dung is one of the best, and next the dung of kine, and that of horses. BACON.

EVELYN'S KALENDAR.

The exterior pulp of the fruit serves not only for the security of the seed, whilst it hangs upon the plant, but, after it is fallen upon the earth, for the stercoration of the soil, and promotion of the growth, though not the first germination of the seminal plant. RAY ON THE CREATION.

STERNUTA'TION. n.s. [sternutatio, Latin.] The act of sneezing.

Sternutation is a convulsive shaking of the nerves and muscles, first occasioned by an irritation of those in the nostrils.

QUINCY.

Concerning sternutation, or sneezing, and the custom of saluting upon that motion, it is generally believed to derive its original from a disease wherein sternutation proved mortal, and such as sneezed died.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

STE'VEN. n.s. [stefen, Saxon.] A cry, or loud clamour.

*Ne sooner was out, but swifter than
 thought,*

*Fast by the hide, the wolf Lowder caught;
 And had not Roffy renne to the steven,
 Lowder had been slain thilke same even.*

SPENSER.

To STI'CKLE. v.n. [from the practice of prizefighters, who placed seconds with staves or sticks to interpose occasionally.]

1. To take part with one side or other.

*Fortune, as she's wont, turn'd fickle,
 And for the foe began to stickle.*

HUDIBRAS.

2. To contest; to altercate; to contend rather with obstinacy than vehemence.

*Let them go to't, and stickle,
 Whether a conclave, or a conventicle.*

CLEAVELAND.

*Heralds stickle, who got who,
 So many hundred years ago.* HUDIBRAS.

3. To trim; to play fast and loose; to act a part between opposites.

When he sees half of the Christians killed, and the rest in a fair way of being routed, he stickles betwixt the remainder of God's host and the race of fiends.

DRYDEN'S JUVENAL, DEDICATION.

STI'CKLER. n.s. [from stickle.]

1. A sidesman to fencers; a second to a duellist; one who stands to judge a combat.

Basilus came to part them, the stickler's authority being unable to persuade chol-erick hearers; and part them he did.

SIDNEY.

Basilus, the judge, appointed sticklers and trumpets, whom the others should obey.

SIDNEY.

*Our former chiefs, like sticklers of the war,
 First fought t' inflame the parties, then to poise:*

*The quarrel lov'd, but did the cause abhor;
 And did not strike to hurt, but made a noise.* DRYDEN.

2. An obstinate contender about any thing.

Quercetanus, though the grand stickler for the tria prima, has this concession of the irresolubleness of diamonds. BOYLE.

The inferior tribe of common women have,

in most reigns, been the professed sticklers for such as have acted against the true interest of the nation.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER.

The tory or high church clergy were the greatest sticklers against the exorbitant proceedings of king James II. SWIFT.

All place themselves in the list of the national church, though they are great sticklers for liberty of conscience. SWIFT.

STI'LLSTAND. n.s. [still and stand.] Absence of motion.

*The tide swell'd up unto his height,
Then makes a stillstand, running neither way.* SHAKESPEARE.

STI'NGO. n.s. [from the sharpness of the taste.] Old beer. A cant word.

STI'NGY. adj. [A low cant word. In this word, with its derivatives, the g is pronounced as in gem.] Covetous; niggardly; avaricious.

A stingy narrow hearted fellow that had a deal of choice fruit, had not the heart to touch it till it began to be rotten.

L'ESTRANGE.

He relates it only by parcels, and wont give us the whole, which forces me to bespeak his friends to engage him to lay aside that stingy humour, and gratify the publick at once.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

STI'NKARD. n.s. [from stink.] A mean stinking paltry fellow.

STI'NKER. n.s. [from stink.] Something intended to offend by the smell.

The air may be purified by burning of stink-pots or stinkers in contagious lanes.

HARVEY.

STI'NKPOT. n.s. [stink and pot.] An artificial composition offensive to the smell.

The air may be purified by fires of pitch-barrels, especially in close places, by burning of stinkpots. HARVEY.

STI'RIOUS. adj. [from stiria, Latin.] Resembling icicles.

Chrystal is found sometimes in rocks, and in some places not much unlike the stirious or stillicidious dependencies of ice.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

To STIVE. v.a. [Supposed of the same original with stew.]

1. To stuff up close.

You would admire, if you saw them stive it in their ships. SANDYS'S JOURNEY.

2. To make hot or sultry.

His chamber was commonly stived with friends or suitors of one kind or other.

WOTTON.

STO'CAH. n.s. [Irish; stochk, Erse.]

An attendant; a walletboy; one who runs at a horseman's foot; a horseboy.<sup>206</sup>

He holdeth himself a gentleman, and scorneth to work, which he saith is the life of a peasant; but thenceforth becometh an horseboy, or a stocah to some kern, inuring himself to his sword, and the gentlemanly trade of stealing. SPENSER.

STO'CKJOBBER. n.s. [stock and job.] A low wretch who gets money by buying and selling shares in the funds.

The stockjobber thus from 'Change-alley goes down,

And tips you the freeman a wink;

Let me have but your vote to serve for the town,

And here is a guinea to drink. SWIFT.

STO'OLBALL. n.s. [stool and ball.]

A play where balls are driven from stool to stool.

While Betty dances on the green,

And Susan is at stoolball seen. PRIOR.

STO'RYTELLER. n.s. [story and tell.] One who relates tales; An historian. In contempt.

*In such a satire all would seek a share,
And every fool will fancy he is there;
Old storytellers too must pine and die,
To see their antiquated wit laid by;
Like her, who miss'd her name in a lampoon,
And griev'd to find herself decay'd so soon.*
DRYDEN.

Company will be no longer pestered with dull, dry, tedious storytellers.
SWIFT'S POLITE CONVERSATION.

STOUND. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. Sorrow; grief; mishap. Out of use.
The Scots retain it.

*Begin and end the bitter baleful stound,
If less than that I fear.* FAIRY QUEEN.

*The fox his copesmate found,
To whom complaining his unhappy
    stound,
He with him far'd some better chance to find.* HUBBERD.

2. Astonishment; amazement.

*Thus we stood as in a stound,
And wet with tears, like dew, the ground.*
GAY.

3. Hour; time; season. Spenser.

To STRA'GGLE. v.a. [Of this word no etymology is known; it is probably a frequentative of stray, from stravviare, Italian, of extraviam, Latin.]

1. To wander without any certain direction; to rove; to ramble.

*But stay, like one that thinks to bring his friend
A mile or two, and sees the journey's end:
I straggle on too far.* SUCKLING.

Having passed the Syrens, they came between Scylla and Charybdis, and the stragglings rocks, which seemed to cast out great store of flames and smoke.
RALEIGH.

A wolf spied out a stragglings kid, and pursued him. L'ESTRANGE.

Children, even when they endeavour their *utmost, cannot keep their minds from

    way*

The waters with the sandy stratum rise.

THOMSON.

STRE'PEROUS. adj. [strepo, Latin.] Loud; noisy.

Porta conceives, because in a streperous eruption it riseth against fire, it doth therefore resist lightning. BROWN.

To STREW. v.a. [The orthography of this word is doubtful: it is generally written strew, and I have followed custom; but Skinner likewise proposes strow, and Junius writes straw. Their reasons will appear in the word from which it may be derived. Strawan, Gothick; stroyen, Dutch; streawian, Sax. strawen, German; strôer, Danish. Perhaps strow is best, being that which reconciles etymology with pronunciation.<sup>207</sup>]

1. To spread by being scattered.

*The snow which does the top of Pindus strew,
Did never whiter shew.* SPENSER.

Is thine alone the seed that strews the pain?

SU'RGEON. n.s. [Corrupted by conversation from chirurgeon.]<sup>212</sup> One who cures by manual operation; one whose duty is to act in external maladies by the direction of the physician.

The wound was past the cure of a better surgeon than myself, so as I could but receive some few of her dying words.
SIDNEY.

I meddle with no woman's matters; but withal, I am a surgeon to old shoes.
SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

He that hath wounded his neighbour, is tied to the expences of the surgeon, and other incidences. TAYLOR.

*Though most were sorely wounded, none were slain:
The surgeons soon despoil'd them of their arms,
And some with salves they cure.*
DRYDEN.

SU'RGEONRY, SU'RGERY. n.s. [for chirurgery.] The act of curing by manual operation.

It would seem very evil surgery to cut off every unsound part of the body, which, being by other due means recovered, might afterwards do good service. SPENSER.

*But strangely visited people,
The mere despair of surgery, he cures.*
SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

They are often tarr'd over with the surgery of our sheep, and would you have us kiss tar? SHAKESPEARE.

SURPRI'SAL, SURPRISE. n.s. [surprise, French; from the verb.]

1. The act of taking unawares; the state of being taken unawares.

Parents should mark heedfully the witty excuses of their children, especially at suddains and surprisals; but rather mark than pamper them. WOTTON.

To him that did but yesterday suspire,
There was not such a gracious creature
born.* SHAKESPEARE.

To SWAG. v.n. [sigan, Saxon; sweigia, Islandick.] To sink down by its weight; to lay heavy.

They are more apt, in swagging down, to pierce with their points, than in the jacent posture, and crevice the wall. WOTTON.

Being a tall fish, and with his sides much compressed, he hath a long fin upon his back, and another answering to it on his belly; by which he is the better kept upright, or from swagging on his sides. GREW.

To SWAGE. v.a. [from asswage.] To ease; to soften; to mitigate.

*Apt words have pow'r to swage
The tumours of a troubled mind,
And are as balm to fester'd wounds.*
MILTON.

*Nor wanting pow'r to mitigate and swage,
With solemn touches, troubled thoughts,
and chase
Anguish, and doubt, and fear from mortal minds.* MILTON.

*I will love thee,
Though my distracted senses should forsake
me,
I'd find some intervals, when my poor heart Should swage itself, and be let loose to thine.* OTWAY.

To SWALE, To SWEAL. v.a.
[swelan, Saxon, to kindle.] To waste or blaze away; to melt: as, the candle

From the large circle of the hemisphere,
As if the center of all sweets met here!*
BEN JONSON.

*Hail! wedded love,
Perpetual fountain of domestick sweets!*
MILTON.

*Taught to live
The easiest way; nor with perplexing
thoughts
To interrupt the sweet of life.*
MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

*Now since the Latian and the Trojan brood Have tasted vengeance, and the sweets of
blood,
Speak.* DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

*Can Ceyx then sustain to leave his wife,
And unconcern'd forsake the sweets of life?* DRYDEN.

*We have so great an abhorrence of pain,
that a little of it extinguishes all our pleasures;
a little bitter mingled in our cup leaves no relish of the sweet.* LOCKE.

*Love had ordain'd that it was Abra's turn
To mix the sweets, and minister the urn.*
PRIOR.

2. A word of endearment.

*Sweet! leave me here a while My spirits grow dull, and fain I would beguile
The tedious day with sleep.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*Wherefore frowns my sweet?
Have I too long been absent from these lips?* BEN JONSON.

3. A perfume.

*As in perfumes,
'Tis hard to say what scent is uppermost;
Nor this part musick or civet can we call,
Or amber, but a rich result of all:
So she was all a sweet.* DRYDEN.

*Flowers
Innumerable, by the soft south-west
Open'd, and gather'd by religious hands, Rebound their sweets from th' odoriferous pavement.* PRIOR.

them.* SHAKESPEARE.

There is that property in all letters of aptness to be conjoined in syllables and words, through the voluble motions of the organs from one stop or figure to another, that they modify and discriminate the voice without appearing to discontinue it.

HOLDER'S ELEMENTS OF SPEECH.

2. Any thing proverbially concise.

Abraham, Job, and the rest that lived before any syllable of the law of God was written, did they not sin as much as we do in every action not commanded?

HOOKER.

*To-morrow, and to-morrow, and
to-morrow,*

*Creeps in this petty pace from day to day,
To the last syllable of recorded time;
And all our yesterdays have lighted fools
The way to dusty death.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

He hath told so many melancholy stories, without one syllable of truth, that he hath blunted the edge of my fears. SWIFT.

wrong.* COWLEY.

2. Noting a consequence.

*That he should dare to do me this disgrace,
Is fool or coward writ upon my face?*

DRYDEN.

The custom and familiarity of these tongues do sometimes so far influence the expressions in these epistles, that one may observe the force of the Hebrew conjugations. LOCKE.

3. Noting indication.

We answered, that we held it so agreeable, as we both forgot dangers past and fears to come, that we thought an hour spent with him was worth years of our former life.

BACON'S NEW ATLANTIS.

4. Noting a final end.

Treat it kindly, that it may Wish at least with us to stay. COWLEY.

THE. article. [de, Dutch.]

1. The article noting a particular thing.

*Your son has paid a soldier's debt;
He only liv'd but till he was a man,
The which no sooner had his prowess
confirm'd,
In the unshrinking station where he fought,
But like a man he dy'd.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

He put him in mind of the long pretence he had to be groom of the bed chamber, for the which he could not chuse but say, that he had the queen's promise.

Thou noble thing! more dances my wrapt heart. SHAKESPEARE.

THIS. pronoun. [ðis, Saxon.]

1. That which is present; what is now mentioned.

Bardolph and Nim had more valour than this, yet they were both hang'd; and so would this be, if he durst steal.

SHAKESPEARE.

Come a little nearer this ways.

SHAKESPEARE.

Within this three mile may you see it coming;

I say a moving grove.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

Must I endure all this?

SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

This same shall comfort us concerning our toil. BIBLE GENESIS, V. 29.

This is not the place for a large reduction.

HALE.

There is a very great inequality among men as to their internal endowments, and their external conditions, in this life.

CALAMY'S SERMONS.

2. The next future.

Let not the Lord be angry, and I will speak yet but this once: peradventure ten shall be found there.

BIBLE GENESIS, XVIII. 32.

3. This is used for this time.

By this the vessel half her course had run.

DRYDEN.

4. The last past.

I have not wept this forty years; but now My mother comes afresh into my eyes.

DRYDEN.

5. It is often opposed to that.

As when two winds with rival force contend,

This way and that, the wav'ring sails they bend,

While freezing Boreas and black Eurus blow,

Now here, now there, the reeling vessel throw. POPE.

According as the small parts of matter are connected together after this or that determinate manner, a body of this or that denomination is produced. BOYLE.

Do we not often hear of this or that young heir? are not his riches and his lewdnesses talkt of together? SOUTH'S SERMONS.

This way and that the impatient captives tend,

And pressing for release the mountains rend. DRYDEN.

6. When this and that respect a former sentence, this relates to the latter, that to the former member.

Their judgment in this we may not, and in that we need not, follow. HOOKER.

7. Sometimes it is opposed to the other.

Consider the arguments which the author had to write this, or to design the other, before you arraign him. DRYDEN.

*With endless pain this man persues
What, if he gain'd, he could not use:
And t'other fondly hopes to see What never was, nor e'er shall be.*

PRIOR.

Lest thistle and docke fal a blooming and seed.* TUSSER.

TICK. n.s. [This word seems contracted from ticket, a tally on which debts are scored.]

1. Score; trust.

*If thou hast the heart to try't,
I'll lend thee back thyself awhile,
And once more for that carcass vile Fight upon tick.* HUDIBRAS, P. I.

When the money is got into hands that have bought all that they have need of, whoever needs any thing else must go on tick, or barter for it. LOCKE.

You would see him in the kitchen weighing the beef and butter, paying ready money, that the maids might not run a tick at the market.

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

2. [Tique, Fr. teke, Dutch.] The louse of dogs or sheep.

Would the fountain of your mind were clear again, that I might water an ass at it! I had rather be a tick in a sheep, than such a valiant ignorance.

SHAKESPEARE'S TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

3. The case which holds the feathers of a bed.

To TI'CKLE. v.a. [titillo, Lat.]

1. To affect with a prurient sensation by slight touches.

Dissembling courtesy! How fine this tyrant Can tickle where she wounds.

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

The mind is moved in great vehemency only by tickling some parts of the body.

BACON.

There is a sweetness in good verse, which tickles even while it hurts; and no man can be heartily angry with him who pleases him against his will. DRYDEN.

It is a good thing to laugh at any rate; and if a straw can tickle a man, it is an instrument of happiness. DRYDEN.

2. To please by slight gratifications.

Dametas, that of all manners of stile could best conceive of golden eloquence, being withal tickled by Musidorus's praises, had his brain so turned, that he became slave to that which he that sued to be his servant offered to give him. SIDNEY.

*Expectation tickling skittish spirits
Sets all on hazard.* SHAKESPEARE.

Such a nature

Tickled with good success, disdains the shadow

Which it treads on at noon.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

*I cannot rule my spleen;
My scorn rebels, and tickles me within.*

DRYDEN.

*Dunce at the best; in streets but scarce
allow'd*

To tickle, on thy straw, the stupid crowd.

DRYDEN.

A drunkard, the habitual thirst after his cups, drives to the tavern, though he has in his view the loss of health, and perhaps of the joys of another life, the least of which is such a good as he confesses is far greater than the tickling of his palate with a glass of wine. LOCKE.

To TI'CKLE. v.n. To feel titillation.

He with secret joy therefore

*Did tickle inwardly in every vein,
And his false heart, fraught with all
treason's store,
Was fill'd with hope, his purpose to obtain.* SPENSER.

To TI'DDLE, To TIDDER. v.a.
[from tid.] To use tenderly; to fondle.

TI'DEWAITER. n.s. [tide and wait.] An officer who watches the landing of goods at the customhouse.

Employments will be in the hands of Englishmen; nothing left for Irishmen but vicarages and tidewaiters places. SWIFT.

TIFF. n.s. [A low word, I suppose without etymology.]

1. Liquor; drink.

*I, whom griping penury surrounds,
And hunger, sure attendant upon want,
With scanty offals, and small acid tiff,
Wretched repast! my meagre corps sustain.*
PHILLIPS.

2. A fit of peevishness or sullenness; a pet.

TI'MEFUL. adj. [time and full.]
Seasonable; timely; early.

*If this arch-politician find in his pupils any remorse, any feeling of God's future judgments, he persuades them that God hath so great need of mens souls, that he will accept them at any time, and upon any condition;
interrupting, by his vigilant endeavours, all offer of timeful return towards God.*

RALEIGH'S HISTORY OF THE WORLD,
B. I.

TI'MELESS. adj. [from time.]

1. Unseasonable; done at an improper time.

Nor fits it to prolong the heav'nly feast Timeless, indecent, but retire to rest.
POPE'S ODYSSEY.

2. Untimely; immature; done before the proper time.

*A pack of sorrows, which would press you
down,*

If unprevented, to your timeless grave.

SHAKESPEARE.

Noble Gloster's death,

Who wrought it with the king, and who perform'd

The bloody office of his timeless end.

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD II.

TITILLA'TION. n.s. [titillation, French; titillatio, Lat. from titillate.]

1. The act of tickling.

Tickling causeth laughter: the cause may be the emission of the spirits, and so of the breath, by a flight from titillation.

BACON.

2. The state of being tickled.

In sweets the acid particles seem so attenuated in the oil as only to produce a small and grateful titillation. ARBUTHNOT.

3. Any slight or petty pleasure.

The delights which result from these nobler entertainments our cool thoughts need not be ashamed of, and which are dogged by no such sad sequels as are the products of those titillations, that reach no higher than the senses. GLANVILLE.

TI'TTLE. n.s. [I suppose from tit.] A small particle; a point; a dot.

In the particular which concerned the church, the Scots would never depart from a tittle. CLARENDON, B. VIII.

Angels themselves disdain

T' approach thy temple, give thee in command

*What to the smallest tittle thou shalt say
To thy adorers.*

PARADISE REGAIN'D, B. I.

They thought God and themselves linked together in so fast a covenant, that although they never performed their part, God was yet bound to make good every tittle of his.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

Ned Fashion hath been bred about court,

and understands to a tittle all the punctilios of a drawing-room. SWIFT.

TI'TTLETATTLE. n.s. [A word formed from tattle by a ludicrous reduplication.] Idle talk; prattle; empty gabble.

*As the foe drew near
With love, and joy, and life and dear,
Our don, who knew this tittletattle,
Did, sure as trumpet, call to battle.*

PRIOR.

*For every idle tittletattle that went about,
Jack was suspected for the author.*

ARBUTHNOT'S HISTORY OF JOHN BULL.

TOAD. n.s. [taðe, Saxon.] An animal resembling a frog; but the frog leaps, the toad crawls: the toad is accounted venomous, I believe truly.<sup>221</sup>

*From th' extreamest upward of thy head,
To the descent and dust below thy foot,
A most toad-spotted traitor.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

*I had rather be a toad,
And live upon the vapour of a dungeon,
Than keep a corner in the thing I love
For others use.*

SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

In the great plague there were seen, in divers ditches about London, many toads that had tails three inches long, whereas toads usually have no tails.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

*In hollow caverns vermin make abode,
The hissing serpent, and the swelling toad.*

DRYDEN.

To TOAST. v.a. [torreo, tostum, Lat.]

1. To dry or heat at the fire.

*Put up thy sword betime,
Or I'll so maul you and your toasting iron.* SHAKESPEARE.

His breath stinks with eating toasted cheese. SHAKESPEARE.

The earth whereof the grass is soon parched with the sun, and toasted, is commonly forced earth. BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

To allure mice I find no other magick, than to draw out a piece of toasted cheese.

BROWN.

2. To name when a health is drunk. To toast is used commonly when women are named.

Several popish gentlemen toasted many loyal healths. ADDISON.

We'll try the empire you so long have boasted;

And if we are not prais'd, we'll not be toasted. PRIOR.

TOE. n.s. [ta, Saxon; teen, Dutch.] The divided extremities of the feet; the fingers of the feet.

*Come all you spirits,
And fill me from the crown to th' toe,
topful*

Of direct cruelty.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*Sport that wrinkled care derides,
And laughter holding both his sides;
Come and trip it as you go,*

On the light fantastick toe. MILTON.

*Last to enjoy her sense of feeling,
A thousand little nerves she sends Quite to our toes, and fingers ends.*

PRIOR.

TO'ILET. n.s. [toilette, Fr.] A dressing table.

*The merchant from the exchange returns in
peace,*

And the long labours of the toilet cease.

POPE.

To TOLE. v.a. [This seems to be some barbarous provincial word.] To train; to draw by degrees.

*Whatever you observe him to be more frighted at than he should, tole him on to by insensible degrees, till at last he masters
the difficulty.* LOCKE.

To TOLL. v.a. [tollo, Lat.]

1. To ring a bell.

When any one dies, then by tolling or ringing of a bell the same is known to the searchers. GRAUNT.

2. To take away; to vacate; to annul. A term only used in the civil law: in this sense the o is short, in the former long.

An appeal from sentence of excommunication does not suspend it, but then devolves it to a superior judge, and tolls the presumption in favour of a sentence.

AYLIFFE.

3. To take away.<sup>222</sup> Obsolete.

The adventitious moisture which hangeth loose in a body, betrayeth and tolleth forth the innate and radical moisture along with it.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY, NO. 365.

TO'MBOY. n.s. [Tom a diminutive of Thomas, and boy.] A mean fellow; sometimes a wild coarse girl.

A lady

Fasten'd to an empery, to be partner'd With tomboys, hir'd with that self-exhibition

Which your own coffers yield!

SHAKESPEARE'S CYMBELINE.

TONG. n.s. [See TONGS.] The catch of a buckle. This word is usually written tongue, but, as its office is to hold, it has probably the same original with tongs, and should therefore have the same orthography.

Their hilts were burnish'd gold, and handle strong

Of mother pearl, and buckled with a golden tong. FAIRY QUEEN.

TONGS. n.s. [tang, Saxon; tang, Dutch.] An instrument by which hold is taken of any thing: as of coals in the fire.

*They turn the glowing mass with crooked
tongs;*

The fiery work proceeds.

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

Get a pair of tongs like a smith's tongs, stronger and toothed.

MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

TONGUE. n.s. [tung, Saxon; tonghe, Dutch.]

1. The instrument of speech in human beings.

*My conscience hath a thousand several
tongue,
And ev'ry tongue brings in a sev'ral tale,
And ev'ry tale condemns me for a villain.*

SHAKESPEARE.

Who with the tongue of angels can relate.

MILTON.

The terror of thy power or potent tongue.

MILTON.

They are tongue-valiant, and as bold as Hercules where there's no danger.

L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

*My ears still ring with noise, I'm vex't to
death,*

*Tongue kill'd, and have not yet recover'd
breath.* DRYDEN.

*Tongue-valiant hero, vaunter of thy might,
In threats the foremost; but the lag in fight.* DRYDEN.

There have been female Pythagoreans, notwithstanding that philosophy consisted in keeping a secret, and the disciple was to hold her tongue five years together.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN.

I should make but a poor pretence to true learning, if I had not clear ideas under the words my tongue could pronounce.

go together; for talking and thinking are two quite differing faculties.

L'ESTRANGE.

*Parrots, imitating human tongue,
And singing-birds in silver cages hung.*

DRYDEN.

*First in the council-hall to steer the state,
And ever foremost in a tongue debate.*

DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

Though they have those sounds ready at their tongue's end, yet there are no determined ideas. LOCKE.

4.<sup>223</sup> Speech, as well or ill used.

*Give me thy hand; I am sorry I beat thee:
but, while thou liv'st, keep a good tongue
in thy head.* SHAKESPEARE.

On evil days though fallen and evil tongues. MILTON.

5. A language.

The Lord shall bring a nation against thee, whose tongue thou shalt not understand.

BIBLE DEUTERONOMY, XXVII. 49.

*With wond'rous gifts endu'd,
To speak all tongues and do all miracles.*
MILTON.

An acquaintance with the various tongues is nothing but a relief against the mischiefs which the building of Babel introduced.

WATTS.

6. Speech as opposed to thoughts.

but in deed and in truth.*

BIBLE I JOHN, III. 18.

7. A nation distinguished by their language. A scriptural term.

The Lord shall destroy the tongue of the Egyptian sea. BIBLE ISAIAH.

8. A small point: as, the tongue of a balance.

9. To hold the TONGUE. To be silent.

'Tis seldom seen that senators so young Know when to speak, and when to hold their tongue. DRYDEN.

Whilst I live I must not hold my tongue,

And languish out old age in his displeasure. ADDISON.

TO'NGUEPAD. n.s. [tongue and pad.] A great talker.

*She who was a celebrated wit at London is,
in that dull part of the world, called a tonguepad.* TATLER.

To TOOT. v.n. [Of this word, in this sense, I know not the derivation: perhaps totan, Saxon, contracted from towetan, to know or examine.] To pry; to peep; to search narrowly and slyly. It is still used in the provinces, otherwise obsolete.

*I cast to go a shooting,
Long wand'ring up and down the land,
With bow and bolts on either hand,
For birds and bushes tooting.*

SPENSER'S PASTORALS.<sup>224</sup>

TO'OTHDRAWER. n.s. [tooth and draw.] One whose business is to extract painful teeth.

*Nature with Scots, as toothdrawers, hath dealt,
Who use to string their teeth upon their belt.* CLEAVELAND.

When the teeth are to be dislocated, a toothdrawer is consulted.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

TO'PPING. adj. [from top.] Fine; noble; gallant. A low word.

The topping fellow I take to be the ancestor of the fine fellow. TATLER.

TOPSYTU'RVY. adv. [This Skinner fancies to top in turf.] With the bottom upward.

All suddenly was turned topsyturvy, the noble lord eftsoons was blamed, the wretched people pitied, and new counsels plotted. SPENSER ON IRELAND.

*If we without his help can make a head
To push against the kingdom; with his help
We shall o'erturn it topsyturvy down.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

God told man what was good, but the devil surnamed it evil, and thereby turned the world topsy-turvy, and brought a new chaos upon the whole creation.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

Man is but a topsyturvy creature; his head where his heels should be, grovelling on the earth. SWIFT.

TORCH. n.s. [torche, French; torcia, Italian; intortitium, low Latin.] A wax light generally supposed to be bigger than a candle.

Basilus knew, by the wasting of the torches, that the night also was far wasted. SIDNEY.

Here lies the dusky torch of Mortimer, Choak'd with ambition of the meaner sort. SHAKESPEARE.

They light the nuptial torch, and bid invoke

Hymen. MILTON.

Never was known a night of such distraction;

Noise so confus'd and dreadful: torches gliding

Like meteors, by each other in the streets. DRYDEN.

*I'm weary of my part;
My torch is out; and the world stands
before me
Like a black desert at th' approach of
night.* DRYDEN.

TORE. v.a. [Of this word I cannot guess the meaning.]<sup>225</sup>

Proportion according to rowen or tore upon the ground; the more tore the less hay will do. MORTIMER'S HUSBANDRY.

TORREFA'CTION. n.s. [torrefaction, Fr. torrefacio, Latin.] The act of drying by the fire.

When torrefied sulphur makes bodies black, why does torrefaction make sulphur itself black. BOYLE ON COLOURS.

If it have not a sufficient insolation it

looketh pale; if it be sunned too long it suffereth torrefaction. BROWN.

TO'RSEL. n.s. [torse, Fr.] Any thing in a twisted form.

When you lay any timber on brickwork, as torsels for mantle trees to lie on, or lintols over windows, lay them in loam.

MOXON'S MECHANICAL EXERCISES.

TO'RTUOUS. adj. [tortueux, Fr. from tortuosus, tortus, Lat.]

1. Twisted; wreathed; winding.

*So vary'd he, and of his tortuous train
Curl'd many a wanton wreath.* MILTON.

Aqueous vapours, like a dry wind, pass through so long and tortuous a pipe of lead. BOYLE.

2. Mischievous. [Thus I explain it, on supposition that it is derived from tort, wrong; but it may mean crooked: as we say, crooked ways for bad practices, crooked being regularly enough opposite to right. This in some copies is tortious, and therefore from tort.]

Ne ought he car'd whom he endamaged By tortuous wrong, or whom bereav'd of right. FAIRY QUEEN.

TO'RY. n.s. [A cant term, derived, I suppose, from an Irish word signifying a savage.] One who adheres to the antient constitution of the state, and the apostolical hierarchy of the church of England, opposed to a whig.

The knight is more a tory in the country than the town, because it more advances his interest. ADDISON.

To confound his hated coin, all parties and religions join whigs, tories. SWIFT.

TO'UCH-HOLE. n.s. [touch and hole.] The hole through which the fire is conveyed to the powder in the gun.

In a piece of ordnance, if you speak in the touch-hole, and another lay his ear to the mouth of the piece, the sound is far better heard than in the open air.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

TOUPE' T. n.s. [Fr.] A curl; an artificial lock of hair.

Remember second-hand toupees and repaired ruffles. SWIFT.

To TOUSE. v.a. [probably of the same original with taw, teize, tose.] To pull; to tear; to haul; to drag; whence touser or towzer, the name of a mastiff.

*As a bear whom angry curs have touz'd,
Having off shak'd them and escap'd their hands,*

Becomes more fell, and all that him withstands

Treads down and overthrows. SPENSER.

Take him hence; to th' rack with him: we'll towze you

Joint by joint, but we will know his purpose. SHAKESPEARE.

To towze such things as flutter

To honest Bounce is bread and butter.

SWIFT.

If you tell the secret, in twelve hours it shall be towntalk. L'ESTRANGE.

TRA'GEDY. n.s. [tragedie, Fr. tragœdia, Lat.]

1. A dramattick representation of a serious action.

Thousands more, that yet suspect no peril,

Will now conclude their plotted tragedy.

SHAKESPEARE.

All our tragedies are of kings and princes; but you never see a poor man have a part unless it be as a chorus, or to fill up the scenes, to dance, or to be derided.

TAYLOR'S HOLY LIVING.

Imitate the sister of painting, tragedy; which employs the whole forces of her art in the main action. DRYDEN.

An anthem to their god Dionysus, whilst the goat stood at his altar to be sacrificed, was called the goat-song or tragedy.

RYMER'S TRAGEDIES OF THE LAST AGE.

*There to her heart sad tragedy address
The dagger, wont to pierce the tyrant's breast.* POPE.

2. Any mournful or dreadful event.

I shall laugh at this,

That they, who brought me in my master's hate,

I live to look upon their tragedy.

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

I look upon this now done in England as another act of the same tragedy which was lately begun in Scotland.

KING CHARLES.

TRAINBA'NDS. n.s. [train and band: I suppose for trained band.]

The militia; the part of a community trained to martial exercise.

He directed the trainbands of Westminster and Middlesex, which consisted of the most substantial housholders, to attend.

CLARENDON.

Give commission

*To some bold man, whose loyalty you trust,
And let him raise the trainbands of the city.* DRYDEN.

A council of war was called, wherein we agreed to retreat: but before we could give the word, the trainbands, taking advantage of our delay, fled first.

ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER.

To TRAIPISE. v.a. [A low word, I believe, without any etymology.] To walk in a careless or sluttish manner.

*Two slip-shod muses traipse along,
In lofty madness, meditating song.*

POPE.

TRAIT. n.s. [trait, Fr.] A stroke; a touch. Scarce English.

By this single trait Homer marks an essential difference between the Iliad and Odyssey; that in the former the people perished by the folly of their kings; in this by their own folly.

BROOME'S NOTES ON THE ODYSSEY.

TRALATI'TIOUS. adj. [from translatus, Lat.] Metaphorical; not literal.

TRA'NGRAM. n.s. [A cant word.] An odd intricately contrived thing.

What's the meaning of all these transgrams and gimcracks? what are you going about, jumping over my master's hedges, and running your lines cross his grounds?

ARBUTHNOT.

To TRANSCU'R. v.n. [transcurro, Lat.] To run or rove to and fro.

By fixing the mind on one object, it doth not spaiate and transcur. BACON.

TRANSFRETA'TION. n.s. [trans and fretum, Latin.] Passage over the sea.

Since the last transfretation of king Richard the second, the crown of England never sent over numbers of men sufficient to defend the small territory.

DAVIES ON IRELAND.

TRANSFU'SION. n.s. [transfusion, Fr. transfusus, Lat.] The act of pouring out of one into another.

The crooked part of the pipe was placed in a box, to prevent the loss of the quicksilver that might fall aside in the transfusion from the vessel into the pipe. BOYLE.

Poesy is of so subtile a spirit, that in the pouring out of one language into another it will all evaporate; and if a new spirit be not added in the transfusion, there will remain nothing but a caput mortuum.

DENHAM.

Something must be lost in all transfusion, that is, in all translations, but the sense will remain. DRYDEN.

What noise have we had about transplantation of diseases and transfusion of blood.

BAKER'S REFLECTIONS ON LEARNING.

TRANSLA'TION. n.s. [translatio, Lat. translation, Fr.]

1. Removal; act of removing.

His disease was an asthma; the cause a metastasis or translation of humours from his joints to his lungs. HARVEY.

Translations of morbifick matter arise in acute distempers. ARBUTHNOT.

2. The removal of a bishop to another see.

If part of the people be somewhat in the election, you cannot make them nulls or cyphers in the privation or translation.

BACON'S WAR WITH SPAIN.

The king, the next time the bishop of London came to him, entertained him with this compellation, my lord's grace of Canterbury, you are very welcome; and gave order for all the necessary forms for the translation. CLARENDON.

3. The act of turning into another language; interpretation.

A book of his travels hath been honoured with translation into many languages.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS, B. I.

Nor ought a genius less than his that writ, Attempt translation; for transplanted wit, All the defects of air and soil doth share, And colder brains like colder climates are.

DENHAM.

4. Something made by translation; version.

Of both translations, the better I acknowledge that which cometh nearer to the very letter of the very original verity.

HOOKER, B. V.

TRA'NSMIGRANT. adj. [transmigrans, Lat.] Passing into another country or state.

Besides an union in sovereignty, or a conjunction in pacts, there are other implicit confederations, that of colonies or transmigrants towards their mother nation. BACON'S HOLY WAR.

To TRANSPORT. v.a. [trans and porto, Latin; transporter, French.]

1. To convey by carriage from place to place.

I came hither to transport the tidings.

SHAKESPEARE.

Why should she write to Edmund! might not you

Transport her purposes by word.

SHAKESPEARE.

Impose upon men the transportation of rivers from one end of the world to the other, which, among other uses, were made to transport men.

RALEIGH'S HISTORY OF THE WORLD.

A subterranean wind transports a hill Torn from Pylorus. MILTON.

In the disturbances of a state, the wise Pomponius transported all the remaining wisdom and virtue of his country into the sanctuary of peace and learning.

DRYDEN.

2. To carry into banishment: as a felon.

We return after being transported, and are ten times greater rogues than before.

SWIFT.

3. To sentence as a felon to banishment.

4. To hurry by violence of passion.

You are transported by calamity

Thither where more attends you, and you slander

The helms o' th' state. SHAKESPEARE.

They laugh as if transported with some fit Of passion. MILTON.

I shew him once transported by the violence of a sudden passion. DRYDEN.

If an ally not immediately concerned contribute more than the principal party, he ought to have his share in what is conquered; or if his romantick disposition transport him so far as to expect little or nothing, they should make it up in dignity. SWIFT.

5. To put into ecstasy; to ravish with pleasure.

Here transported I behold, transported touch. MILTON.

Those on whom Christ bestowed miraculous cures were so transported with them, that their gratitude supplanted their obedience. DECAY OF PIETY.

To TRAPE. v.a. [commonly written to traipse: probably of the same original with drab.] To run idly and sluttishly about. It is used only of women.

TRA'PSTICK. n.s. [trap and stick.]

A stick with which boys drive a wooden ball.

A foolish swoop between a couple of thick bandy legs and two long trapsticks that had no calfs. SPECTATOR, NO. 559.

To TRAVAIL. v.n. [travailler, Fr.]

1. To labour; to toil.

2. To be in labour; to suffer the pains of childbirth.

I travail not, nor bring forth children.

BIBLE ISAIAH, XXIII. 4.

She being with child cried, travailing in birth, and pained to be delivered.

BIBLE REVELATIONS, XII. 2.

His heart is in continual labour; it travails with the obligation, and is in pangs till it be delivered. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

To TRAVEL. v.n. [This word is generally supposed originally the same with travail, and to differ only as particular from general: in some writers the word is written alike in all its senses; but it is more convenient to write travail for labour, and travel for journey.]

1. To make journeys: it is used for sea as well as land, though sometimes we distinguish it from voyage, a word appropriated to the sea.

In the forest shall ye lodge, O ye travelling companies of Dedanim.

BIBLE ISAIAH, XXI. 13.

Raphael deign'd to travel with Tobias.

MILTON.

*Fain wou'd I travel to some foreign shore,
So might I to myself myself restore.*

DRYDEN.

If others believed he was an Egyptian from his knowledge of their rites, it proves at least that he travelled there. POPE.

2. To pass; to go; to move.

*By th' clock 'tis day;
And yet dark night strangles the travelling lamp.* SHAKESPEARE.

Time travels in divers paces, with divers persons; I'll tell you who time ambles withal, who time trots withal.

SHAKESPEARE.

*Thus flying East and West, and North and South,
News travell'd with increase from mouth to mouth.* POPE.

3. To make journeys of curiosity.

Nothing tends so much to enlarge the mind as travelling, that is, making a visit to other towns, cities, or countries, beside those in which we were born and educated.

WATTS.

4. To labour; to toil. This should be rather travail.

If we labour to maintain truth and reason,

let not any think that we travel about a matter not needful. HOOKER.

I've watch'd and travell'd hard;

Some time I shall sleep out; the rest I'll whistle. SHAKESPEARE.

TRA'VELTAINED. adj. [travel and tainted.] Harrassed; fatigued with travel.

*I have foundered nine score and odd posts:
and here, traveltainted as I am, have, in my pure and immaculate valour, taken Sir John Coleville.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV. P. II.

TRA'VESTY. adj. [travesti, Fr.] Dressed so as to be made ridiculous; burlesqued.

TRAY. n.s. [tray, Swedish.] A shallow wooden vessel in which meat or fish is carried.

Sift it into a tray, or bole of wood.

MOXON'S MECHANICAL EXERCISES.

*No more her care shall fill the hollow tray,
To fat the guzzling hogs with floods of whey.* GAY.

TRE'ACLE. n.s. [triacle, Fr. triackle, Dutch; theriaca, Lat.]

1. A medicine made up of many ingredients.

The physician that has observed the medicinal virtues of treacle, without knowing the nature of each of the sixty odd ingredients, may cure many patients with it. BOYLE.

Treacle water has much of an acid in it.
FLOYER.

2. Molasses; the spume of sugar.

TREME'NDOUS. adj. [tremendus, Latin.] Dreadful; horrible; astonishingly terrible.

There stands an altar where the priest celebrates some mysteries sacred and tremendous. TATLER, NO. 57.

In that portal shou'd the chief appear,

Each hand tremendous with a brazen spear. POPE'S ODYSSEY.

TRE'NCHER. n.s. [from trench; trenchoir, Fr.]

1. A piece of wood on which meat is cut at table.

No more
I'll scrape trencher, nor wash dish.

SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

*My estate deserves an heir more rais'd,
Than one which holds a trencher.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TIMON OF ATHENS.

When we find our dogs, we set the dish or trencher on the ground.

MORE'S ANTIDOTE AGAINST ATHEISM.

Their homely fare dispatch'd; the hungry band

Invalidate their trenchers next, and soon devour. DRYDEN.

Many a child may have the idea of a square trencher, or round plate, before he has any idea of infinite. LOCKE.

2. The table.

How often hast thou, Fed from my trencher, kneel'd down at the board,

When I have feasted.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VI.

3. Food; pleasures of the table.

It could be no ordinary declension of nature that could bring some men, after an ingenuous education, to place their summum bonum upon their trenchers, and their utmost felicity in wine.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

TRE'NCHERFLY. n.s. [trencher and fly.] One that haunts tables; a parasite.

He found all people came to him promiscuously, and he tried which of them were friends, and which only trencherflies and spungers. L'ESTRANGE.

TRE'NCHERMATE. n.s. [trencher and mate.] A table companion; a parasite.

Because that judicious learning of the ancient sages doth not in this case serve the turn, these trenchermates frame to themselves a way more pleasant; a new method they have of turning things that are serious into mockery, an art of contradiction by way of scorn. HOOKER, B. V.

TRE'NDLE. n.s. [trendel, Saxon.]

Any thing turned round. Now improperly written trundle.

TRICE. n.s. [I believe this word comes from trait, Fr. corrupted by pronunciation.] A short time; an instant; a stroke.

*If they get never so great spoil at any time,
the same they waste in a trice, as naturally delighting in spoil, though it do themselves
no good.* SPENSER.

*Just in the nick the cook knock'd thrice,
And all the waiters in a trice
His summons did obey:*

*Each serving man with dish in hand,
March'd boldly up like our train'd band,
Presented, and away.* SUCKLING.

*He could raise scruples dark and nice,
And after solve them in a trice.*

HUDIBRAS, P. I.

*So when the war had rais'd a storm,
I've seen a snake in human form,
All stain'd with infamy and vice,
Leap from the dunghil in a trice.*

SWIFT.

It seems incredible at first, that all the blood in our bodies should circulate in a trice, in a very few minutes; but it would be more surprising if we knew the short periods of the great circulation of water.

BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

TRI'CKER. n.s. [This is often written trigger; I know not which is right.] The catch which being pulled disengages the cock of the gun, that it may give fire.

Pulling aside the tricker we observed, that the force of the spring of the lock was not sensibly abated by the absence of the air.

BOYLE.

As a goose

*In death contracts his talons close;
So did the knight, and with one claw
The tricker of his pistol draw.*

HUDIBRAS, P. I.

TRI'CKISH. adj. [from trick.]

Knavishly artful; fraudulently cunning; mischievously subtle.

All he says is in a loose, slippery, and trickish way of reasoning. POPE.

TRI'GGER. n.s. [derived by Junius from trigue, Fr. from intricare, Lat.]

1. A catch to hold the wheel on steep ground.

2. The catch that being pulled looses the cock of the gun.

The pulling the trigger of the gun with which the murder is committed, has no natural connection with those ideas that make up the complex one, murder.

LOCKE.

TRI'MMER. n.s. [from trim.]

1. One who changes sides to balance parties; a turncoat.

The same bat taken after by a weazel begged for mercy: no, says the weazle, no mercy to a mouse: well, says t'other, but you may see by my wings that I am a bird; and so the bat 'scaped in both by playing the trimmer. L'ESTRANGE'S FABLES.

*To confound his hated coin,
All parties and religions join,
Whigs, tories, trimmers.* SWIFT.

2. A piece of wood inserted.

Before they pin up the frame of ground-plates, they must fit in the summer and the girders, and all the joists and the trimmers for the stair-case.

MOXON'S MECHANICAL EXERCISES.

TROCHI'LICKS. n.s. [τροχίλιον, τροχός, a wheel.] The science of rotatory motion.

There succeeded new inventions and horologies, composed by trochilicks, or the artifice of wheels, whereof some are kept in motion by weight, others without.

BROWN.

It is requisite that we rightly understand some principles in trochilicks, or the art of wheel instruments; as chiefly the relation betwixt the parts of a wheel and those of a balance, the several proportions in the semi-diameter of a wheel being answerable to the sides of a balance.

WILKINS'S DÆDALUS.

To TROLL. v.a. [trollen, to roll, Dutch; perhaps from trochlea, Lat. a thing to turn round.] To move circularly; to drive about.

*With the phant'sies of hey troll,
Troll about the bridal bowl,
And divide the broad-bread cake,
Round about the bride's stake.*

BEN JONSON'S UNDERWOODS.

To TROLL. v.n.

1. To roll; to run round.

*How pleasant on the banks of Styx,
To troll it in a coach and six.* SWIFT.

2. To fish for a pike with a rod which has a pulley towards the bottom, which I suppose gives occasion to the term.

Nor drain I ponds the golden carp to take, Nor trowle for pikes, dispeplers of the lake. GAY.

TRO'OPER. n.s. [from troop.] A horse soldier. A trooper fights only on horseback; a dragoon marches on horseback, but fights either as a horseman or footman.

*Custom makes us think well of any thing:
what can be more indecent now than for any to wear boots but troopers and travellers? yet not many years since it was all the fashion.* GREW.

TRO'UBLE-STATE. n.s. [trouble and state.] Disturber of a community; publick makebate.

*Those fair baits these trouble-states still use,
Pretence of common good, the king's ill
course,
Must be cast forth.*
DANIEL'S CIVIL WAR.

To TROUL. v.n. [trollen, to roll, Dutch.] See TROLL.

1. To move volubly.

*Bred only, and completed, to the taste
Of lustful appetite; to sing, to dance,
To dress, and troul the tongue, and roll the eye.* MILTON.

2. To utter volubly.

Let us be jocund. Will you troul the catch You taught me while-ere.
SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

TRU'ANT. n.s. [truand, Old Fr.
treuwant, Dutch, a vagabond.] An idler;
one who wanders idly about, neglecting his duty or employment. To play the truant is, in schools, to stay from school without leave.

*For my part I may speak it to my shame,
I have a truant been to chivalry.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*Though myself have been an idle truant,
Omitting the sweet benefit of time,
To cloath mine age with angel-like perfection;
Yet hath Sir Protheus made fair advantage of his days.*
SHAKESPEARE'S TWO GENTLEMEN OF
VERONA.

*Providence would only initiate mankind
into the knowledge of her treasures, leaving the rest to our industry, that we might not live like idle loiterers and truants.*
MORE.

*Our ships are laden with the Trojan store,
And you like truants come too late ashore.*
DRYDEN'S ÆNEID.

To TRUCK. v.a. To give in exchange;
to exchange.

The Indians truck gold for glasses.
L'ESTRANGE.

*Go, miser! go; for lucre sell thy soul, Truck wares for wares, and trudge from pole to pole;
That men may say, when thou art dead
and gone,
See, what a vast estate he left his son.*
DRYDEN.

I see nothing left us, but to truck and barter our goods like the wild Indians, with each other. SWIFT.

TRUCK. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. Exchange; traffick by exchange.

It is no less requisite to maintain a truck in moral offices, than in the common business of commerce. L'ESTRANGE.

*Love is covetous; I must have all of you:
heart for heart is an equal truck.*
DRYDEN.

2. [τροχός] Wooden wheels for carriage of cannon. Ainsworth.

TRU'CKLEBED, or Trundlebed.
n.s. [properly troclebed; from trochlea, Latin, or τροχός.] A bed that runs on wheels under a higher bed.

*There's his chamber, his house, his castle,
his standing bed and trucklebed.*
SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF
WINDSOR.

*If he that is in battle slain,
Be in the bed of honour lain;
He that is beaten may be said,
To lie in honour's trucklebed.*
HUDIBRAS, P. I.

To TRU'CKLE.<sup>226</sup> v.n. [This word is,
I believe, derived from trucklebed, which is always under another bed.] To be in a state of subjection or inferiority;
to yield; to creep.

Shall our nation be in bondage thus Unto a land that truckles under us.
CLEAVELAND.

For which so many a legal cuckold

Has been run down in courts and truckl'd. HUDIBRAS.

Men may be stiff and obstinate upon a wrong ground, and ply and truckle too upon as false a foundation.

L'ESTRANGE.

Religion itself is forced to truckle to worldly policy. NORRIS.

*His zeal was not to lash our crimes,
But discontent against the times:
For had we made him timely offers,
To raise his post or fill his coffers:
Perhaps he might have truckled down,
Like other brethren of his gown.* SWIFT.

They were subdued and insulted by Alexander's captains, and continued under several revolutions, a small truckling state, of no name till they fell under the Romans. SWIFT.

To TRU'NDLE. v.n. [trondeler,
Picard French; trendl, a bowl, Saxon.]

To roll; to bowl along.

In the four first it is heaved up by several spondees intermixed with proper breathing places, and at last trundles down in a continued line of dactyls.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR, NO. 253.

TU'MBREL. n.s. [tombereau,
French.] A dungcart.

*Twifallow once ended, get tumbrel and
man,*

And compass that fallow as soon as ye can. TUSSER'S HUSBANDRY.

My corps is in a tumbrel laid, among The filth and ordure, and inclos'd with dung;

*That cart arrest, and raise a common cry,
For sacred hunger of my gold I die.*

DRYDEN.

*What shall I do with this beastly tumbrel?
go lie down and sleep, you sot.*

CONGREVE.

To convince the present little race how unequal all their measures were to an antediluvian, in respect of the insects which now appear for men, he sometimes rode in an open tumbrel. TATLER.

To TUME'FY. v.a. [tumefacio, Lat.]

To swell; to make to swell.

I applied three small causticks triangular about the tumified joint.

WISEMAN'S SURGERY.

A fleshy excrescence, exceeding hard and tumefied, supposed to demand extirpation. SHARP'S SURGERY.

TU'MOUR. n.s. [tumor, Latin.]

1. A morbid swelling.

Tumour is a disease, in which the parts recede from their natural state by an undue encrease of their bigness. WISEMAN.

Having dissected this swelling vice, and seen what it is that feeds the tumour, if the disease be founded in pride, the abating that is the most natural remedy.

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE.

2. Affected pomp; false magnificence; puffy grandeur; swelling mien; unsubstantial greatness.

His stile was rich of phrase, but seldom in bold metaphors; and so far from the tumour, that it rather wants a little elevation. WOTTON.

It is not the power of tumour and bold looks upon the passions of the multitude.

L'ESTRANGE.

TU'MOROUS. adj. [from tumour.]

1. Swelling; protuberant.

Who ever saw any cypress or pine, small below and above, and tumorous in the middle, unless some diseased plant.

WOTTON.

2. Fastuous; vainly pompous; falsely magnificent.

*According to their subject, these stiles vary;
for that which is high and lofty, declaring excellent matter, becomes vast and tumorous, speaking of petty and inferior things.* BEN JONSON.

His limbs were rather sturdy than dainty,

sublime and almost tumorous in his looks and gestures. WOTTON.

TU'NNEL. n.s.

1. The shaft of a chimney; the passage for the smoke.

*It was a vault ybuilt for great dispence,
With many rangès rear'd along the wall,
And one great chimney, whose long tunnel
thence*

The smoak forth threw. FAIRY QUEEN.

The water being rarified, and by rarification resolved into wind, will force up the smoke, which otherwise might linger in the tunnel, and oftentimes reverse.

WOTTON'S ARCHITECTURE.

2. A funnel; a pipe by which liquor is poured into vessels.

For the help of the hearing, make an instrument like a tunnel, the narrow part of the bigness of the hole of the ear, and the broader end much larger. BACON.

3. A net wide at the mouth, and ending in a point, and so resembling a funnel or tunnel.

TU'RKOIS. n.s. [turquoise, French, from turkey.] A blue stone numbered among the meaner precious stones, now discovered to be a bone impregnated with cupreous particles.

Those bony bodies found among copperores are tinged with green or blue: the turcois stone, as it is commonly stiled by lapidaries, is part of a bone so tinged.

WOODWARD.

TU'RNSICK. adj. [turn and sick.] Vertiginous; giddy.

*If a man see another turn swiftly and long;
or if he look upon wheels that turn, himself
waxeth turnsick.* BACON.

TU'RQUOISE. n.s. See TURKOIS.

One shew'd me a ring, he had of your daughter for a monkey. — Out upon her! it was my turquoise, I had it when I was a bachelor.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF
VENICE.

TUSH. interj. [Of this word I can find no credible etymology.] An expression of contempt.

*Tush, say they, how should God perceive it:
is there knowledge in the most high?*

BIBLE PSALMS, LXXIII.

Sir Thomas Moor found fault with his lady's continual chiding, saying; the consideration of the time, for it was sent, should restrain her. Tush, tush, my lord, said she, look, here is one step to heavenward, shewing him a friar's girdle. I fear me, quoth Sir Thomas, this one step will not bring you up a step higher.

CAMDEN'S REMAINS.

*Tush never tell me, I take it much unkindly
That thou, Iago, who hast had my purse,
As if the strings were thine, should know of this.* SHAKESPEARE.

TUT. interj. [This seems to be the same with tush.] A particle noting contempt.

*Tut, tut! grace me no grace, nor uncle me
no uncle.* SHAKESPEARE.

Tut, tut! here's a mannerly forbearance.
SHAKESPEARE.

TUZ. n.s. [I know not whether it is not a word merely of cant.] A lock or tuft of hair.

*With odorous oil thy head and hair are sleek;
And then thou kemp'st the tuzzes on thy
cheek;
Of these thy barbers take a costly care.*
DRYDEN.

To TWANG. v.n. [A word formed from the sound.] To sound with a quick sharp noise.

*A thousand twanging instruments
Will hum about mine ears.*
SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

*His quiver o'er his shoulders Phæbus threw,
His bow twang'd, and his arrows rattled as they flew.* DRYDEN.

*With her thund'ring voice she menac'd
high;
And every accent twang'd with smarting sorrow.* DRYDEN.

*The twanging bows
Send showers of shafts, that on their barbed points
Alternate ruin bear.* PHILIPS.

Sounds the tough horn and twangs the quiv'ring string. POPE.

To TWANG. v.a. To make to sound sharply.

A swaggering accent sharply twang'd off, gives manhood approbation.

SHAKESPEARE'S TWELFTH NIGHT.

To TWA'TTLE. v.n. [schwätzen, German.] To prate; to gabble; to chatter.

It is not for every twattling gossip to undertake. L'ESTRANGE.

TWI'STER. n.s. [from twist.] One who twists; a ropemaker. To this word I have annexed some remarkable lines, which explain twist in all its senses.

When a twister a-twisting will twist him a twist,

*For the twisting of his twist, he three twines
doth intwist;*

*But if one of the twines of the twist do
untwist,*

The twine that untwisteth untwisteth the twist.

*Untwirling the twine that untwisteth
between,*

*He twirls with his twister the two in a twine;
Then twice having twisted the twines of the twine,*

He twitcheth the twine he had twined in twain.

The twain that in twining before in the twine,

As twins were intwisted, he now doth untwine,

*'Twixt the twain intertwisting a twine more
between,*

He, twirling his twister, makes a twist of the twine. WALLIS.

TWITTLETWA'TTLE. n.s. [A ludicrous reduplication of twattle.]

Tattle; gabble. A vile word.

Inspid twittletwatles, frothy jests, and jingling witticisms, inure us to a misunderstanding of things. L'ESTRANGE.

TYMBAL. n.s. [tymbal, French.] A kind of kettle-drum.

*Yet gracious charity! indulgent guest!
Were not thy pow'r exerted in my breast;
My speeches would send up unheeded
pray'r:*

*he scorn of life would be but wild despair:
A tymbal's sound were better than my voice,*

My faith were form, my eloquence were noise. PRIOR.

TY'MPANY. n.s. [from tympanum, Lat.] A kind of obstructed flatulence that swells the body like a drum.<sup>227</sup>

Hope, the christian grace, must be proportioned and attemperate to the promise; if it exceed that temper and proportion, it becomes a tumour and tympany of hope. HAMMOND.

*He does not shew us Rome great suddenly,
As if the empire were a tympany,
But gives it natural growth, tells how and why*

The little body grew so large and high.
SUCKLING.

*Others that affect
A lofty stile, swell to a tympany.*
ROSCOMMON.

Pride is no more than an unnatural tympany, that rises in a bubble, and spends itself in a blast. L'ESTRANGE.

*Nor let thy mountain-belly make pretence
Of likeness; thine's a tympany of sense.
A tun of man in thy large bulk is writ,
But sure thou'rt but a kilderkin of wit.*
DRYDEN.

The air is so rarified in this kind of dropsical tumour as makes it hard and tight like a drum, and from thence it is called a tympany.

ARBUTHNOT.

TYPO'GRAPHY. n.s. [typographie,
Fr. typographia, Lat.]

1. Emblematical, figurative, or hiero-glyphical representation.

Those diminutive and pamphlet treatises daily published amongst us, are pieces containing rather typography than verity.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

2. The art of printing.

TYRO. n.s. [Properly tiro, as in the Latin.] One yet not master of his art;
one in his rudiments.

There stands a structure on a rising hill,

Where tyro's take their freedom out to kill. GARTH'S DISPENSATORY.

V

Has two powers, expressed in modern English by two characters, V consonant and U vowel, which ought to be considered as two letters; but as they were long confounded while the two uses were annexed to one form, the old custom still continues to be followed.

U, the vowel, has two sounds; one clear, expressed at other times by eu, as obtuse; the other close, and approaching to the Italian u, or English oo, as obtund.

V, the consonant, has a sound nearly approaching to those of b and f. With b it is by the Spaniards and Gascons always confounded, and in the Runick alphabet is expressed by the same character with f, distinguished only by a diacritical point. Its sound in English is uniform. It is never mute.

VA'CUIST. n.s. [from vacuum.] A philosopher that holds a vacuum: opposed to a plenist.

Those spaces, which the vacuists would have to be empty, because they are manifestly devoid of air, the plenists do not prove replenished with subtle matter.

BOYLE.

VA'CUUM. n.s. [Latin.] Space unoccupied by matter.

Our enquiries about vacuum, or space and atoms, will shew us some good practical lessons. WATTS.

VAIL. n.s. [voile, French. This word is now frequently written veil, from velum, Latin; and the verb veil, from the verb velo; but the old orthography commonly derived it, I believe rightly, from the French.]

1. A curtain; a cover thrown over any thing to be concealed.

While they supposed to lie hid in their secret sins, they were scattered under a dark vail of forgetfulness. WISDOM.

2. A part of female dress, by which the face and part of the shape is concealed.

3. Money given to servants. It is commonly used in the plural. See VALE.

VALE. n.s. [val, Fr. vallis, Latin.]

1. A low ground; a valley; a place between two hills. Vale is a poetical word.

*In Ida vale: who knows not Ida vale?
An hundred shepherds woned.* SPENSER.

Met in the vale of Arde.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY VIII.

Anchises, in a flow'ry vale, Review'd his muster'd race, and took the tale. DRYDEN.

2. [From avail, profit; or vale, farewell. If from avail, it must be written vail, as Dryden writes. If from vale, which I think is right, it must be vale.] Money given to servants.

*Since our knights and senators account
To what their sordid, begging vails amount;
Judge what a wretched share the poor attends,*

Whose whole subsistence on those alms depends. DRYDEN.

His revenue, besides vales, amounted to thirty pounds. SWIFT.

VA'LLANCY. n.s. [from valance.] A large wig that shades the face.

But you, loud Sirs, who through your curls look big,

Criticks in plume and white vallancy wig.
DRYDEN.

VA'LLLEY. n.s. [vallée, Fr. vallis, Latin.] A low ground; a hollow between hills.

*Live with me, and be my love,
And we will all the pleasure prove,
That hills and vallies yield.* RALEIGH.

Vallies are the intervals betwixt mountains. WOODWARD.

Sweet interchange of hill and valley.
MILTON.

VA'LUÉ. n.s. [value, Fr. valor, Lat.]

1. Price; worth.

Ye are physicians of no value.
BIBLE JOB, XIII.

2. High rate.

*Cæsar is well acquainted with your virtues,
And therefore sets this value on your life:
Let him but know the price of Cato's friendship,*

And name your terms.
ADDISON'S CATO.

3. Rate; price equal to the worth of the thing bought.

He sent him money; it was with this obliging testimony, that his design was not to pay him the value of his pictures, because they were above any price.

DRYDEN.

VALVE. n.s. [valva, Latin.]

1. A folding door.

Swift through the valves the visionary fair Repass'd. POPE'S ODYSSEY, B. IV.

2. Any thing that opens over the mouth of a vessel.

This air, by the opening of the valve, and forcing up of the sucker, may be driven out. BOYLE'S WORKS.

3. [In anatomy.] A kind of membrane, which opens in certain vessels to admit the blood, and shuts to prevent its regress.

The arteries, with a contractile force, drive the blood still forward; it being hindered from going backward by the valves of the heart. ARBUTHNOT ON ALIMENTS.

To VAMP. v.a. [This is supposed probably enough by Skinner to be derived from avant, Fr. before; and to mean laying on a new outside.] To piece an old thing with some new part.

You wish

To vamp a body with a dangerous physick, That's sure of death without.

SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

This opinion hath been vamped up by Cardan. BENTLEY.

I had never much hopes of your vamped play. SWIFT.

VA'MPER. n.s. [from vamp.] One who pieces out an old thing with something new.

VA'PORER. n.s. [from vapour.] A boaster; a braggart.

*This shews these vaporers, to what scorn
they expose themselves.*

GOVERNMENT OF THE TONGUE.

VA'SE. n.s. [vase, Fr. vasa, Latin.] A vessel; generally a vessel rather for show than use.

*The toilet stands unveil'd,
Each silver vase in mystick order laid.*

POPE.

VA'TICIDE. n.s. [vates and cædo, Latin.] A murderer of poets.

The caitiff vaticide conceiv'd a prayer.

POPE'S DUNCIAD.

VA'UDEVIL. n.s. [vaudeville, Fr.] A song common among the vulgar, and sung about the streets, Trevoux. A ballad; a trivial strain.

UBI'QUITARY. adj. [from ubique, Latin.] Existing every where.

*For wealth and an ubiquitary commerce,
none can exceed her.* HOWEL.

VE'HICLE. n.s. [vehiculum, Latin.]

1. That in which any thing is carried.

Evil spirits might very properly appear in vehicles of flame, to terrify and surprize.

ADDISON'S GUARDIAN.

2. That part of a medicine which serves to make the principal ingredient potable.

That the meat descends by one passage; the drink, or moistening vehicle by another, is a popular tenent. BROWN.

3. That by means of which any thing is conveyed.

The gaiety of a diverting word, serves as a vehicle to convey the force and meaning of a thing. L'ESTRANGE.

VEIL. n.s. [velum, Latin.]

1. A cover to conceal the face.

*To feed his fiery lustful eye,
He snatch'd the veil that hung her face
before.* FAIRY QUEEN.

*The Paphian queen from that fierce battle borne,
With gored hand, and veil so rudely torn,
Like terror did among the immortals breed.* WALLER.

*The famous painter cou'd allow no place
For private sorrow in a prince's face:*

*Yet, that his piece might not exceed belief,
He cast a veil upon supposed grief.*

WALLER.

*As veils transparent cover, but not hide,
Such metaphors appear when right apply'd.
When through the phrase we plainly see the
sense,*

Truth with such obvious meanings will dispense. GRANVILLE.

She accepts the hero, and the dame Wraps in her veil, and frees from sense of shame. POPE.

2. A cover; a disguise.

I will pluck the borrow'd veil of modesty from the so seeming Mrs. Page; divulge Page himself for a secure and wilful Acteon.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERRY WIVES OF
WINDSOR.

*Knock on my heart; for thou hast skill to
find*

*If it sound solid, or be fill'd with wind;
And thro' the veil of words thou view'st the naked mind.* DRYDEN.

The ill-natured man exposes those failings in human nature, which the other would cast a veil over. ADDISON.

VELLICA'TION. n.s. [vellicatio, Lat.] Twitching; stimulation.

All purgers have a kind of twitching and vellication, besides the griping, which cometh of wind. BACON.

There must be a particular motion and vellication imprest upon the nerves, else the sensation of heat will not be produced.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

TO VEND. v.a. [vendre, Fr. vendo, Lat.] To sell; to offer to sale.

He had a great parcel of glasses packed up, which not having the occasion he expected to vend, and make use of, lay by him.

BOYLE.

VENDEE. n.s. [from vend.] One to whom any thing is sold.

If a vicar sows his glebe, or if he sells his corn, and the vendee cuts it, he must pay the tithes to the parson. AYLIFFE.

VE'NDER. n.s. [vendeur, Fr. from vend.] A seller.

Where the consumption of commodity is, the venders seat themselves. GRAUNT.

Those make the most noise who have the least to sell, which is very observable in the venders of card-matches. ADDISON.

VE'NDIBLE. adj. [vendibilis, Latin.] Saleable; marketable.

Silence only is commendable
In a neat's tongue dried, and a maid not vendible. SHAKESPEARE.

This so profitable and vendible a merchandize, riseth not to a proportionable enhancement with other less beneficial commodities. CAREW.

The ignorant mine-man, aiming only at the obtaining a quantity of such a metal as may be vendible under such a determinate name, has neither the design nor skill to make nice separations of the heterogeneous bodies. BOYLE.

VE'NDIBLENESS. n.s. [from vendible.] The state of being saleable.

VE'NDIBLY.<sup>228</sup> adv. [from vendible.] In a saleable manner.

VENDITA'TION. n.s. [venditatio, from vendito, Latin.] Boastful display.

Some, by a cunning protestation against all reading, and venditation of their own naturals, think to divert the sagacity of their readers from themselves, and cool the scent of their own fox-like thefts; when yet they are so rank as a man may find whole pages together usurped from one author.

BEN JONSON.

VENDI'TION. n.s. [venditio, Fr. vendition, Latin.] Sale; the act of selling.

VE'NEFICE. n.s. [veneficium, Latin.] The practice of poisoning.

VENE'REAL. adj. [venereus, Latin.]

1. Relating to love.

These are no venereal signs;
Vengeance is in my heart, death in my hand. SHAKESPEARE.

Then swol'n with pride, into the snare I
fell,
Of fair fallacious looks, venereal trains,
Soften'd with pleasure and voluptuous life.
MILTON.

They are averse to venereal pleasure.
ADDISON.

2. Consisting of copper, called venus by chemists.

Blue vitriol, how venereal and unsophisticated soever, rubbed upon the whetted blade of a knife, will not impart its latent colour. BOYLE.

VENE'REOUS. adj. [from venery.] Libidinous; lustful.

The male is lesser than the female, and very venereous. DERHAM.

VE'NTIDUCT. n.s. [ventus and ductus, Latin.] A passage for the wind.

Having been informed of divers ventiducts, I wish I had had the good fortune, when I was at Rome, to take notice of these organs. BOYLE.

To VE'NTILATE. v.a. [ventilo, Latin.]

1. To fan with wind.

In close, low, and dirty alleys, the air is penn'd up, and obstructed from being ventilated by the winds. HARVEY.

Miners, by perflations with large bellows, letting down tubes, and sinking new shafts, give free passage to the air, which ventilates and cools the mines. WOODWARD.

2. To winnow; to fan.

3. To examine; to discuss.

Nor is the right of the party, nor the judicial process in right of that party so far perempted; but that the same may be begun again, and ventilated de novo. AYLIFFE.

VE'NTILATION. n.s. [ventilatio, Lat. from ventilate.]

1. The act of fanning; the state of being fanned.

The soul, worn with too frequent culture, must lie fallow, till it has recruited its exhausted salts, and again enriched itself by the ventilations of the air. ADDISON.

2. Vent; utterance. Not in use.

To his secretary Doctor Mason, whom he let lie in a pallet near him, for natural ventilation of his thoughts, he would break out into bitter eruptions.

WOTTON'S BUCKINGHAM.

3. Refrigeration.

VENTILA'TOR. n.s. [from ventilate.] An instrument contrived by Dr. Hale to supply close places with fresh air.

VENTRI'LOQUIST. n.s. [ventri-loque, Fr. venter and loquor, Lat.] One who speaks in such a manner as that the sound seems to issue from his belly.

VERB. n.s. [verbe, Fr. verbum, Lat.] A part of speech signifying existence, or some modification thereof, as action, passion. And withal some disposition or intention of the mind relating thereto, as of affirming, denying, interrogating, commanding. Clarke's Latin Grammar.

Men usually talk of a noun and a verb. SHAKESPEARE.

VE'RBAL. adj. [verbal, Fr. verbalis, Latin.]

1. Spoken, not written.

2. Oral; uttered by mouth.

*Made she no verbal quest? —
— Yes; once or twice she heav'd the name of father*

Pantingly forth, as if it prest her heart.

SHAKESPEARE.

3. Consisting in mere words.

*If young African for fame,
His wasted country freed from Punick rage,
The deed becomes unprais'd, the man at least;*

And loses, though but verbal, his reward. MILTON.

Being at first out of the way to science, in the progress of their inquiries they must lose themselves, and the truth, in a verbal labyrinth. GLANVILLE.

It was such a denial or confession of him as would appear in preaching: but this is managed in words and verbal profession. SOUTH.

4. Verbose; full of words. Out of use.

I am sorry

*You put me to forget a lady's manners,
By being so verbal.* SHAKESPEARE.

5. Minutely exact in words.

6. Literal; having word answering to word.

*Neglect the rules each verbal critick lays,
For not to know some trifles is a praise.* POPE.

Whosoever offers at verbal translation, shall have the misfortune of that young traveller, who lost his own language abroad, and brought home no other instead of it.

DENHAM.

The verbal copier is incumber'd with so many difficulties at once, that he can never disentangle himself from all. DRYDEN.

7. [verbal, Fr. in grammar.] A verbal noun is a noun derived from a verb.

VERBA'LITY. n.s. [from verbal.] Mere bare words.

Sometimes he will seem to be charmed with words of holy scripture, and to fly from the letter and dead verballity, who must only start at the life and animated materials thereof. BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

VE'RDANT. n.s. [verdoiant, Fr. viridans, Lat.] Green. This word is so lately naturalized, that Skinner could find it only in a dictionary.

*Each odorous bushy shrub
Fenc'd up the verdant wall.* MILTON.

VERSE. n.s. [vers, Fr. versus, Latin.]

1. A line consisting of a certain succession of sounds, and number of syllables.

*Thou hast by moonlight at her window sung,
With feigning voice, verses of feigning
love.* SHAKESPEARE.

2. [verset, Fr.] A section or paragraph of a book.

Thus far the questions proceed upon the construction of the first earth; in the following verses they proceed upon the demolition of that earth. BURNET.

3. Poetry; lays; metrical language.

*Verse embalms virtue: and tombs and thrones of rhymes
Preserve frail transitory fame as much As spice doth body from air's corrupt touch.* DONNE.

*If envious eyes their hurtful rays have cast,
More pow'rful verse shall free thee from the blast.* DRYDEN.

*Whilst she did her various pow'r dispose;
Virtue was taught in verse, and Athens'
glory rose.* PRIOR.

*You compose
In splay-foot verse, or hobbling prose.*
PRIOR.

4. A piece of poetry.

Let this verse, my friend, be thine.
POPE.

VETERINARIAN. n.s. [veterinarius, Lat.] One skilled in the diseases of cattle.

That a horse has no gall, is not only swallow'd by good veterinarians, and some who have laudably discoursed upon horses.

by good veterinarians, and some who have
laudably discoursed upon horses.

BROWN.

VICECHA'NCELLOR. n.s. [vicecancellarius, Latin.] The second magistrate of the universities.

VI'LLAIN. n.s. [vilain, Fr. villanus, low Latin.]

1. One who held by a base tenure.

The Irish inhabiting the lands fully conquered, being in condition of slaves and villains, did render a greater revenue, than if they had been made the king's free subjects. DAVIES.

2. A wicked wretch.

We were prevented by a dozen armed knights, or rather villains, who, using this time of their extreme feebleness, all together set upon them. SIDNEY.

O villain! villain! his very opinion in the letter. Abhorred villain! unnatural, detested, brutish villain! SHAKESPEARE.

*What in the world,
That names me traitor, villain-like he lies.*
SHAKESPEARE.

He was stabbed to the heart by the hand of a villain, upon the mere impious pretence of his being odious to the parliament.

CLARENDON.

*Calm thinking villains, whom no faith
could fix;
Of crooked counsels, and dark politicks.*
POPE.

VILLANY. n.s. [from villain; villonnie, old French.]

1. Wickedness; baseness; depravity.<sup>229</sup>

*Trust not those cunning waters of his eyes;
For villainy is not without such a rheum:
And he, long traded in it, makes it seem Like rivers of remorse and innocence.*
SHAKESPEARE.

He is the prince's jester; and the commendation is not in his wit, but in his villany.
SHAKESPEARE.

2. A wicked action; a crime.

No villany, or flagitious action was ever yet committed; but a lie was first or last the principal engine to effect it. SOUTH.

Such villainies rous'd Horace into wrath;
And 'tis more noble to pursue his path,
Than an old tale. DRYDEN.

VIRTUO'SO. n.s. [Italian.] A man skilled in antique or natural curiosities; a man studious of painting, statuary, or architecture.

Methinks those generous virtuosi dwell in a higher region than other mortals.

GLANVILLE.

Virtuoso, the Italians call a man who loves the noble arts, and is a critick in them. And amongst our French painters, the word vertueux is understood in the same signification. DRYDEN.

This building was beheld with admiration by the virtuosi of that time.

TATLER, NO. 52.

Showers of rain are now met with in every water-work; and the virtuoso's of France covered a little vault with artificial snow.

ADDISON.

VI'SAGE. n.s. [visage, Fr. visaggio, Italian.] Face; countenance; look. It is now rarely used but with some ideas of dislike or horror.

Phebe doth behold

*Her silver visage in the watry glass,
Decking with liquid pearl the bladed grass.*

SHAKESPEARE.

When she shall hear this of thee, with her nails

She'll flea thy wolfish visage.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

Whereto serves mercy,

But to confront the visage of offence.

SHAKESPEARE'S HAMLET.

With hostile frown,

And visage all inflam'd, first thus began.

MILTON.

*By the rout, that made the hideous roar,
His goary visage down the stream was sent;*

Down the swift Hebrus to the Lesbian shore. MILTON.

*Love and beauty still that visage grace;
Death cannot fright 'em from their wonted place.* WALLER.

VI'STA. n.s. [Italian.] View; prospect through an avenue.

In St. Peter's, when a man stands under the dome, if he looks upwards, he is astonished at the spacious hollow of the cupola, that makes one of the beautifullest vista's that the eye can pass through.

ADDISON'S REMARKS ON ITALY.

*The finish'd garden to the view
Its vista's opens, and its alleys green.*

THOMSON'S SPRING.

VITE'LLARY. n.s. [from vitellus, Latin.] The place where the yolk of the egg swims in the white.

A greater difficulty in the doctrine of eggs is, how the sperm of the cock attaineth into every egg; since the vitellary, or place of the yolk, is very high.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

VI'TIOUS. adj. [vicieux, Fr. vitiosus, Latin.]

1. Corrupt; wicked; opposite to virtuous. It is rather applied to habitual faults, than criminal actions.<sup>230</sup>

Make known

*It is no vitious blot, murder, or foulness
That hath depriv'd me of your grace.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

Witness th' irreverent son

Of him who built the ark; who, for the shame

Done to his father, heard his heavy curse,

'Servant of servants,' on his vitious race.

MILTON.

Wit's what the vitious fear, the virtuous shun;

By fools 'tis hated, and by knaves undone. POPE.

No troops abroad are so ill disciplin'd as the English; which cannot well be otherwise, while the common soldiers have before their eyes the vitious example of their leaders.

SWIFT.

2. Corrupt; having physical ill qualities.

When vitious language contends to be high, it is full of rock, mountain, and pointedness. BEN JONSON.

Here from the vicious air and sickly skies,
A plague did on the dumb creation rise.

DRYDEN.

VIVE. adj. [vif, Fr. vivus, Latin.]

Lively; forcible; pressing.

By a vive and forcible perswasion, he mov'd him to a war upon Flanders. BACON.

VIZ. n.s. [This word is videlicet, written with a contraction.] To wit; that is. A barbarous form of an unnecessary word.

That which so oft by sundry writers
Has been apply'd t' almost all fighters,
More justly may b' ascrib'd to this,
Than any other warrior, viz.
None ever acted both parts bolder,
Both of a chieftain and a soldier.

HUDIBRAS.

The chief of all signs which the Almighty endued man with, is humane voice, and the several modifications thereof by the organs of speech, viz. the letters of the alphabet, form'd by the several motions of the mouth. HOLDER.

Let this be done relatively, viz. one thing greater or stronger, casting the rest behind, and rendering it less sensible by its opposition.

DRYDEN'S DUFRESNOY.

U'MBREL, UMBRELLA. n.s.
[from umbra, Lat.] A skreen used in hot countries to keep off the sun, and in others to bear off the rain.

I can carry your umbrella, and fan your ladyship. DRYDEN.

Good housewives

Defended by th' umbrella's oily shed, Safe through the wet on clinking pattens
tread. GAY.

UN. A Saxon privative or negative particle answering to in of the Latins, and a of the Greeks, on, Dutch. It is placed almost at will before adjectives and adverbs. All instances of this kind of composition cannot therefore be inserted; but I have collected a number sufficient, perhaps more than sufficient, to explain it.<sup>231</sup>

The examples however, though numerous, might have easily been made more; for almost every adjective has a substantive and an adverb adhering to it, as unfaithful, unfaith-fulness, unfaithfully. Un is prefixed to adjectives with their derivatives, as unapt, unaptness, unaptly; and to passive participles as hurt, unhurt;
favoured, unfavoured: it is prefixed likewise to participial adjectives, as pleasing, unpleasing, but rarely in the verbal sense expressing action; we cannot say the dart flew unwounding, though we say the man escaped unwounded. In and un may be thus distinguished. To words merely English we prefix un, as unfit; to words borrowed in the positive sense, but made negative by ourselves, we prefix un, as generous, ungenerous. When we borrow both words we retain the Latin or French in, as elegant, inelegant; politick, impolitick. Before substantives if they have the English termination ness, as unfitness, ungraciousness; it is proper to prefix un
if they have the Latin or French terminations in tude, ice, or ence; and for the most part if they end in ty the negative in is put before them, as unapt, unaptness, inaptitude; unjust, injustice;

imprudence; unfaithful, unfaithfulness, infidelity.

UNABA'SHED. adj. [from abashed.] Not shamed; not confused by modesty.

*Earless on high, stood unabash'd Defoe,
And Tutchin flagrant from the scourge below.* POPE.

UNA'CCURATE. adj. [from accurate.] Not exact.

Gallileo using an unaccurate way, defined the air to be in weight to water but as one to four hundred. BOYLE.

UNA'ALTERABLE. adj. Unchangeable; immutable.

The law of nature, consisting in a fixed, unalterable relation of one nature to another, is indispensable. SOUTH.

*They fixt unalterable laws,
Settling the same effect on the same cause.*
CREECH.

The truly upright man is inflexible in his uprightness, and unalterable in his purpose. ATTERBURY.

To UNBE'D. v.a. To raise from a bed.

Eels unbed themselves, and stir at the noise of thunder. WALTON'S ANGLER.

UNBOO'KISH. adj.

1. Not studious of books.
2. Not cultivated by erudition.

*As he shall smile, Othello shall go mad;
And his unbookish jealousy must construe
Poor Cassio's smiles, gestures, and light behaviour,
Quite in the wrong.*
SHAKESPEARE'S OTHELLO.

UNCA'PABLE. adj. [incapable, Fr. incapax, Lat.] Not capable; not susceptible.<sup>232</sup>

*Thou art come to answer
A stony adversary, an inhuman wretch,
Uncapable of pity, void and empty*

From any dram of mercy.

SHAKESPEARE'S MERCHANT OF
VENICE.

He who believes himself incapable of pardon, goes on without any care of reforming. HAMMOND.

This, whilst they are under the deceit of it, makes them incapable of conviction; and they applaud themselves as zealous champions for truth, when indeed they are contending for error. LOCKE.

UNCI'VIL. adj. [incivil, Fr. incivilis, Lat.] Unpolite; not agreeable to rules of elegance, or complaisance.

Your undutiful, uncivil, and uncharitable dealing in this your book, hath detected you. WHITGIFT.

*They love me well, yet I have much to do,
To keep me from uncivil outrages.*
SHAKESPEARE.

My friends are so unreasonable, that they would have me be uncivil to him.
SPECTATOR, NO. 475.

UNCO'MEATABLE. adj. Inaccessible; unattainable. A low, corrupt word.

UNCONCE'IVABLE. adj. Not to be understood; not to be comprehended by the mind.

In the communication of motion by impulse, we can have no other conception, but of the passing of motion out of one body into another; which is as obscure and unconceivable, as how our minds move or stop our bodies by thought. LOCKE.

*Those atoms wond'rous small must be,
Small to an unconceivable degree;
Since though these radiant spoils dispers'd
in air,
Do ne'er return, and ne'er the sun repair.*
BLACKMORE.

UNCRO'UDED. adj. Not straitened by want of room.

*An amphitheatre,
On its publick shows, unpeopled Rome,*

And held uncrouded nations in its womb.
ADDISON.

UNDENI'ABLE. adj. Such as cannot be gainsaid.

That age which my grey hairs make seem more than it is, hath not diminished in me the power to protect an undeniable verity.
SIDNEY.

Of those of the second class, we have a plain and undeniable certainty.

WOODWARD'S NATURAL HISTORY.

UNDERBEA'RER. n.s. [under and bearer.] In funerals, those that sustain the weight of the body, distinct from those who are bearers of ceremony, and only hold up the pall.

UNDERFE'LOW. n.s. [under and fellow.] A mean man; a sorry wretch.

They carried him to a house of a principal officer, who with no more civility, though with much more business than those underfellows had shewed, in captious manner put interrogatories unto him.

SIDNEY.

U'NDERPLOT. n.s. [under and plot.]

1. A series of events proceeding collaterally with the main story of a play, and subservient to it.

In a tragi-comedy, there is to be but one main design; and though there be an underplot, yet it is subservient to the chief fable.

DRYDEN'S DEDICATION TO JUVENAL.

2. A clandestine scheme.

The husband is so misled by tricks, and so lost in a crooked intrigue, that he still suspects an underplot. ADDISON.

UNDERSO'NG. n.s. [under and song.] Chorus; burthen of a song.

So ended she; and all the rest around To her redoubled that her undersong.
SPENSER.

The challenge to Damætas shall belong;

Menalcas shall sustain his undersong; Each in his turn your tuneful numbers bring. DRYDEN.

UNDERSTRA'PPER. n.s. [under and strap.] A petty fellow; an inferior agent.

Every understrapper perk'd up, and expected a regiment, or his son must be a major. SWIFT.

UNDERWRI'TER. n.s. [from underwrite.] An insurer; so called from writing his name under the conditions.

UNDETE'RMINATENESS, UNDETERMINATION. n.s. [from undeterminate.<sup>233</sup>]

1. Uncertainty; indecision.

He is not left barely to the undetermination, incertainty and unsteadiness of the operation of his faculties, without a certain, secret, predisposition of them to what is right. HALE.

2. The state of not being fixed, or invincibly directed.

The idea of a free agent is undetermination to one part, before he has made choice. MORE'S DIVINE DIALOGUES.

To UNDRE'SS. v.a. [from dress.]

1. To divest of cloaths; to strip.

Undress you, and come now to bed.
SHAKESPEARE.

*All were stol'n aside,
To counsel and undress the bride.*
SUCKLING.

*Her fellows press'd,
And the reluctant nymph by force undress'd.* ADDISON'S OVID.

2. To divest of ornaments, or the attire of ostentation.

*Undress'd at evening, when she found
Their odours lost, their colours past,
She chang'd her look.* PRIOR.

U'NDRESS. n.s. A loose or negligent dress.

*Reform her into ease,
And put her in undress to make her please.* DRYDEN.

UNDRE'SSED. adj.

1. Not regulated.

Thy vineyard lies half prun'd, and half undress'd. DRYDEN.

2. Not prepared for use.

The common country people wore perones, shoes of undressed leather.

ARBUTHNOT ON COINS.

UNE'QUITABLE. adj. Not impartial; not just.

We force him to stand to those measures which we think too unequitable to press upon a murderer. DECAY OF PIETY.

UNFI'NISHED. adj. Incomplete; not brought to an end; not brought to perfection; imperfect; wanting the last hand.

*It is for that such outward ornament
Was lavish'd on their sex, that inward gifts
Were left for haste unfinish'd.* MILTON.

I dedicate to you a very unfinished piece.
DRYDEN.

His hasty hand left his pictures so unfinished, that the beauty in the picture faded sooner than in the person after whom it was drawn.

SPECTATOR, NO. 83.

This collection contains not only such pieces as come under our review, but many others, even unfinished. SWIFT.

UNFRE'QUENT. adj. Uncommon; not happening often.

*Part thereof is visible unto any situation;
but being only discoverable in the night,
and when the air is clear, it becomes unfrequent.*

BROWNE'S VULGAR ERRORS.

UNGE'NIAL. adj. Not kind or favourable to nature.

*The northern shires have a more cloudy,
ungenial air, than any part of Ireland.*

SWIFT TO POPE.

Sullen seas wash th' ungenial pole.

THOMSON.

[from un and grammatical.] Not according to grammar.

UNINDI'FFERENT. adj. Partial; leaning to a side.

His opinion touching the catholick church was as unindifferent, as, touching our church, the opinion of them that favour this pretended reformation is.

HOOKE, B. IV.

UNINTE'LLIGENT. adj. Not knowing; not skilful; not having any consciousness.

We will give you sleepy drinks, that your senses may be unintelligent of our insufficiency.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER TALE.

The visible creation is far otherwise apprehended by the philosophical enquirer, than the unintelligent vulgar. GLANVILLE.

*This conclusion, if men allow'd of, they would not destroy ill-formed productions.
Ay, but these monsters. Let them be so;
what will your drivelling, unintelligent,
untractable changeling be?* LOCKE.

*Why then to works of nature is assign'd
An author unintelligent and blind;
When ours proceed from choice?*

BLACKMORE.

The obvious products of unintelligent nature. BENTLEY.

U'NIVERSE. n.s. [univers, Fr. universum, Lat.] The general system of things.

*Creeping murmur, and the poring dark,
Fills the wide vessel of the universe.*

SHAKESPEARE.

God here sums up all into man; the whole into a part; the universe into an individual. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

*Father of heav'n!
Whose word call'd out this universe to birth.* PRIOR.

UNIVE'RSITY. n.s. [universitas, Lat.] A school, where all the arts and faculties are taught and studied.

While I play the good husband at home, my son and servants spend all at the university.

SHAKESPEARE'S TAMING OF THE SHREW.

*The universities, especially Aberdeen, flourished under many excellent scholars,
and very learned men.* CLARENDON.

UNI'VOCAL. adj. [univocus, Lat.]

1. Having one meaning.

Univocal words are such as signify but one idea, or but one sort of thing: equivocal words are such as signify two or more different ideas, or different sorts of objects.

WATTS.

2. Certain; regular; persuing always one tenour.

*This conceit makes putrefactive generations correspondent unto seminal productions;
and conceives unequivocal effects, and univocal conformity unto the efficient.*

BROWN.

To UNLOO'SE. v.a. To loose. A word perhaps barbarous and ungrammatical, the particle prefixed implying negation; so that to unloose, is properly to bind.

*York, unloose your long imprison'd
thoughts,
And let thy tongue be equal with thy heart.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*The weak, wanton Cupid, Shall from your neck unloose his am'rous fold;
And, like a dew-drop from the lion's mane,
Be shook to air.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TROILUS AND CRESSIDA.

Turn him to any cause of policy;

*The gordian knot of it he will unloose,
Familiar as his garter.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

*It rested in you,
T' unloose this tied-up justice, when you pleas'd.* SHAKESPEARE.

The latchet of his shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose.

BIBLE MARK, I. 7.

He that should spend all his time in tying inextricable knots, only to baffle the industry of those that should attempt to unloose them, would be thought not much to have served his generation.

DECAY OF PIETY.

UNME'RCHANTABLE. adj.

Unsaleable; not vendible.

They feed on salt, unmerchantable pilchard. CAREW.

UNO'BVIOUS. adj. Not readily occurring.

Of all the metals, not any so constantly discloseth its unobvious colour, as copper.

BOYLE ON COLOURS.

UNPE'NSIONED. adj. Not kept in dependance by a pension.

*Could pension'd Boileau lash in honest
strain*

*Flatt'ers and bigots, ev'n in Louis' reign;
And I not strip the gilding off a knave, Unplac'd, unpension'd, no man's heir or slave?* POPE.

UNPU'Blick. adj. Private; not generally known.

Virgins must be retired and unpublick: for all freedom of society is a violence done to virginity, not in its natural, but in its moral capacity; that is, it loses part of its severity and strictness, by publishing that person, whose work is religion, whose thoughts must dwell in heaven. TAYLOR.

UNPU'BLISHED. adj.

1. Secret; unknown.

*All blest secrets;
All you unpublish'd virtues of the earth,*

Spring with my tears.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

2. Not given to the publick.

Apply your care wholly to those which are unpublish'd. POPE.

To UNRI'DDLE. v.a. To solve an enigma; to explain a problem.

*Some kind power unriddle where it lies,
Whether my heart be faulty, or her eyes!*
SUCKLING.

The Platonick principles will not unriddle the doubt. GLANVILLE.

A reverse often clears up the passage of an old poet, as the poet often serves to unriddle the reverse. ADDISON.

To UNRI'P. v.a. [This word is improper; there being no difference between rip and unrip; and the negative particle is therefore of no force; yet it is well authorised.] To cut open.

Like a traitor

Didst break that vow, and, with thy treach'rous blade,

Unrip'dst the bowels of thy sov'reign's son. SHAKESPEARE.

He could not now, with his honour, so unrip, and put a lye upon all that he had said and done before, as to deliver him up.
BACON'S HENRY VII.

We are angry with searchers, when they break open trunks, and unrip packs, and open sealed letters. TAYLOR.

Cato well observes, that friendship ought not to be unripped, but unstitched.
COLLIER.

UNSINCE'RE. adj. [insincerus, Lat.]

1. Not hearty; not faithful.

2. Not genuine; impure; adulterated.

I have so often met with chymical preparations, which I have found unsincere, that I dare scarce trust any. BOYLE.

3. Not sound; not solid.

Each silver vase in mystick order laid.*
POPE.

To UNVE'IL. v.a. [See VEIL and VAIL.]

1. To uncover; to divest of a veil.

*The moon,
Apparent queen, unveil'd her peerless light.* MILTON.

*To the limpid stream direct thy way,
When the gay morn unveils her smiling
ray.* POPE.

2. To disclose; to show.

*The providence, that's in a watchful
state,
Knows almost every grain of Pluto's
gold;
Does ev'n our thoughts unveil in their dumb cradles.* SHAKESPEARE.

UNWA'RES. adv. Unexpectedly; before any caution, or expectation.

*She, by her wicked arts, Too false and strong for earthly skill or
might,
Unwares me wrought unto her wicked
will.* FAIRY QUEEN.

*His loving mother came upon a day
Unto the woods, to see her little son,
And chanc'd unwares to meet him in the
way,
After his sports and cruel pastime done.*
FAIRFAX, B. I.

*Still we sail, while prosperous blows the
wind,
Till on some secret rock unwares we light.*
FAIRFAX.

UNWA'YED. adj. Not used to travel; not seasoned in the road.

Beasts, that have been rid off their legs, are as much for a man's use, as colts that are unwayed, and will not go at all.

SUCKLING.

UNWRI'TING. adj. Not assuming the character of an author.

The peace of the honest unwriting subject was daily molested. ARBUTHNOT.

VOCA'BULARY. n.s. [vocabularium, Lat. vocabulaire, Fr.] A dictionary; a lexicon; a word-book.

*Some have delivered the polity of spirits,
and that they stand in awe of conjurations, which signify nothing, not only in the dictionary of man, but in the subtler vocabulary of Satan.*

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

Among other books, we should be furnished with vocabularies and dictionaries of several sorts. WATTS.

VO'CATIVE. n.s. [vocatif, Fr. vocativus, Lat.] The grammatical case used in calling or speaking to.

earthquakes, and cause furious eruptions of volcano's, and tumble down broken rocks.

BENTLEY'S SERMONS.

VO'LERY. n.s. [volerie, Fr.] A flight of birds.

An old boy, at his first appearance, is sure to draw on him the eyes and chirping of the whole town volery; amongst which, there will not be wanting some birds of prey, that will presently be on the wing for him.

LOCKE.

VO'LUBLE. adj. [volubilis, Lat.]

1. Formed so as to roll easily; formed so as to be easily put in motion.

Neither the weight of the matter of which a cylinder is made, nor its round voluble form, which, meeting with a precipice, do necessarily continue the motion of it, are any more imputable to that dead, choiceless creature in its first motion.

HAMMOND.

The adventitious corpuscles may produce stability in the matter they pervade, by expelling thence those voluble particles, which, whilst they continued, did by their shape unfit for cohesion, or, by their motion, oppose coalition. BOYLE.

2. Rolling; having quick motion.

*This less voluble earth,
By shorter flight to th' east, had left him there.* MILTON.

*Then voluble, and bold; now hid, now seen,
Among thick-woven arborets.*

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST, B. IV.

3. Nimble; active. Applied to the tongue.

A friend promised to dissect a woman's tongue, and examine whether there may not be in it certain juices, which render it so wonderfully voluble and flippant.

ADDISON.

These with a voluble and flippant tongue, become mere echo's.

WATTS'S IMPROVEMENT OF THE MIND.

4. Fluent of words. It is applied to the speech, or the speaker.

Cassio, a knave very voluble; no further conscionable, than in putting on the meer form of civil and humane seeming, for the better compassing of his loose affection.

SHAKESPEARE.

*If voluble and sharp discourse be marr'd,
Unkindness blunts it more than marble hard.* SHAKESPEARE.

VO'LUME. n.s. [volumen, Lat.]

1. Something rolled, or convolved.

2. As much as seems convolved at once; as a fold of a serpent, a wave of water.

*Threescore and ten I can remember well;
Within the volume of which time I've seen
Hours dreadful, and things strange.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*Unoppos'd they either lose their force,
Or wind in volumes to their former course.* DRYDEN.

*Behind the gen'ral mends his weary pace,
And silently to his revenge he sails:
So glides some trodden serpent on the grass,
And long behind his wounded volume trails.* DRYDEN.

*Thames' fruitful tides,
Slow through the vale in silver volumes play.* FENTON.

By the insinuations of these crystals, the volumes of air are driven out of the watery particles, and many of them uniting, form larger volumes, which thereby have a greater force to expand themselves.

CHEYNE.

3. [Volume, Fr.] A book; so called, because books were antiently rolled upon a staff.

*Guyon all this while his book did read,
Ne yet has ended; for it was a great
And ample volume, that doth far exceed My leisure, so long leaves here to repeat.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

*Calmly, I do beseech you. —
Aye, as an hostler, that for the poorest piece*

Will bear the knave by th' volume.

SHAKESPEARE.

I shall not now enlarge on the wrong judgments whereby men mislead themselves.

This would make a volume. LOCKE.

*If one short volume cou'd comprize
All that was witty, learn'd and wise:
How wou'd it be esteem'd and read?*

SWIFT.

To VOLUNTEER. v.n. To go for a soldier. A cant word.

Leave off these wagers, for in conscience speaking,

The city needs not your new tricks for breaking:

*And if you gallants lose, to all appearing,
You'll want an equipage for volunteering.*

DRYDEN.

VO'WEL. n.s. [voyelle, Fr. vocalis, Lat.] A letter which can be uttered by itself.

I distinguish letters into vowels and consonants, yet not wholly upon their reason, that a vowel may be sounded alone, a consonant not without a vowel; which will not be found all true; for many of the consonants may be sounded alone, and some joined together without a vowel, as bl. st. and as we pronounce the latter syllable of people, riffle. HOLDER.

Virgil makes the two vowels meet without an elision. BROOME.

VOWFE'LLOW. n.s. [vow and fellow.] One bound by the same vow.

Who are the votaries,

That are vowfellows with this virtuous king? SHAKESPEARE.

UPHO'LDER. n.s. [from uphold.]

1. A supporter.

U'RINAL. n.s. [urinal, Fr. from urine.] A bottle, in which water is kept for inspection.

These follies shine through you, like the water in an urinal.

SHAKESPEARE'S TWO GENTLEMEN OF VERONA.

A candle out of a musket will pierce through an inch board, or an urinal force a nail though a plank. BROWN.

*This hand, when glory calls,
Can brandish arms, as well as urinals.*

GARTH.

Some with scymitars in their hands, and others with urinals, ran to and fro.

SPECTATOR, NO 159.

URINA'TOR. n.s. [urinateur, Fr. urinator, Lat.] A diver; one who searches under water.

The precious things that grow there, as pearl, may be much more easily fetched up by the help of this, than by any other way of the urinators.

WILKINS'S MATHEMATICAL MAGICK.

Those relations of urinators belong only to those places where they have dived, which are always rocky. RAY.

U'SHER. n.s. [huissier, Fr.]

1. One whose business is to introduce strangers, or walk before a person of high rank.

*The wife of Antony Should have an army for an usher, and
The neighs of horse to tell her approach Long ere she did appear.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND
CLEOPATRA.

*You make guards and ushers march before,
and then enters your prince.*

TATLER, NO 53.

*Gay paid his courtship with the croud,
As far as modest pride allow'd;
Rejects a servile usher's place,
And leaves St. James's in disgrace.*

SWIFT.

2. An under-teacher; one who introduces young scholars to higher learning.

*Though grammar profits less than rhetorick's,
Yet ev'n in those his usher claims a share.*

DRYDEN.

USQUEBA'UGH. n.s. [An Irish and Erse word, which signifies the water of life.] It is a compounded distilled spirit, being drawn on aromatics; and the Irish sort is particularly distinguished for its pleasant and mild flavour. The Highland sort is somewhat hotter; and, by corruption, in Scottish they call it whisky.

USTO'RIOUS. adj. [ustum, Latin.] Having the quality of burning.

The power of a burning glass is by an ustorious quality in the mirror or glass, arising from a certain unknown substantial form. WATTS.

VU'LGAR. n.s. [vulgaire, Fr.] The common people.

I'll about;

Drive away the vulgar from the streets.

SHAKESPEARE.

Those men, and their adherents, were then looked upon by the affrighted vulgar, as greater protectors of their laws and liberties than myself. KING CHARLES.

The vulgar imagine the pretender to have been a child imposed upon the nation by the fraudulent zeal of his parents, and their bigotted counsellors. SWIFT.

W

Is a letter of which the form is not to be found in the alphabets of the learned languages; though it is not improbable that by our w is expressed the sound of the Roman v, and the Eolick s. Both the form and sound are excluded from the languages derived from the Latin. W is sometimes improperly used in diphthongs as a vowel, for u, view; strew: the sound of w consonant is uniform.

That I have much ado to know myself.

SHAKESPEARE.

WA'RDROBE. n.s. [garderobe, French; garderoba, low Lat.] A room where cloaths are kept.

*The third had of their wardrobe custody,
In which were not rich tires nor garments
gay,*

*The plumes of pride, and wings of vanity,
But cloaths meet to keep keen cold away.*

FAIRY QUEEN.

*I will kill all his coats,
I'll murder all his wardrobe piece by piece
Until I meet the king.*

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

Behold!

*What from his wardrobe her belov'd allows,
To deck the wedding day of his unspotted
spouse.* DRYDEN.

It would not be an impertinent design to make a kind of an old Roman wardrobe, where you should see toga's and tunica's, the chlamys and trabea, and all the different vests and ornaments so often mentioned in the Greek and Roman authors. ADDISON.

WA'REFUL. adj. [ware and full.] Cautious; timorously prudent.

in a warren.*

SHAKESPEARE'S MUCH ADO ABOUT
NOTHING.

The coney convenes a whole warren, tells her story, and advises upon a revenge.
L'ESTRANGE.

Men should set snares in their warrens to catch polcats and foxes.
DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRYAR.

WA'SHBALL. n.s. [wash and ball.] Ball made of soap.

I asked a poor man how he did; he said he was like a washball, always in decay.
SWIFT.

WA'TCHET. adj. [wæced, Saxon, weak. Skinner.] Blue; pale blue.

*Whom 'midst the Alps do hanging throats surprise?
Who stares in Germany at watchet eyes?*
DRYDEN'S JUVENAL.

WA'TCHWORD. n.s. [watch and word.] The word given to the centinels to know their friends.

All have their ears upright, waiting when the watchword shall come, that they should all arise into rebellion. SPENSER.
We have heard the chimes at midnight, master Shallow.

— That we have, sir John: our watchword, hem, boys. SHAKESPEARE.

Their application to trade has increased their shipping, which they found to be their weakside in their last attempts. TEMPLE.

WEA'THER. n.s. [weder, Saxon.]

1. State of air, respecting either cold or heat, wet or driness.

*Who's there, besides foul weather? —
One mended like the weather, most unquietly.*

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

*I am far better born than is the king;
But I must make fair weather yet a while,
Till Henry be more weak and I more strong.* SHAKESPEARE.

Men must content themselves to travel in all weathers, and through all difficulties.

L'ESTRANGE.

The sun

*Foretells the change of weather in the skies,
Through mists he shoots his sullen beams,
Suspect a drizzling day.* DRYDEN.

2. The change of the state of the air.

It is a reverend thing to see an ancient castle not in decay; how much more to behold an ancient family, which have stood against the waves and weathers of time?

BACON.

3. Tempest; storm.

What gusts of weather from that gath'ring cloud,

My thoughts presage. DRYDEN'S VIRGIL.

To WEA'THER. v.a. [from the noun.]

1. To expose to the air.

*He perch'd on some branch thereby,
To weather him and his moist wings to dry.* SPENSER.

the first whiff the tradesmen came jumping in. ARBUTHNOT.

WHIG. n.s. [hwæg, Saxon.]

1. Whey.

2. The name of a faction.

The southwest counties of Scotland have seldom corn enough to serve them round the year; and the northern parts producing more than they need, those in the west come in the Summer to buy at Leith the stores that come from the north; and from a word, whiggam, used in driving their horses, all that drove were called the whiggamors, and shorter the whiggs. Now in that year before the news came down of duke Hamilton's defeat, the ministers animated their people to rise and march to Edinburgh; and they came up marching on the head of their parishes with an unheard-of fury, praying and preaching all the way as they came. The marquis of Argyle and his party came and headed them, they being about six thousand. This was called the whiggamor's inroad; and ever after that, all that opposed the court came in contempt to be called whigs: and from Scotland the word was brought into England, where it is now one of our unhappy terms of disunion. BURNET.

Whoever has a true value for church and state, should avoid the extremes of whig for the sake of the former, and the extremes of tory on the account of the latter. SWIFT.

WHI'GGISH. adj. [from whig.]

Relating to the whigs.

*She'll prove herself a tory plain,
From principles the whigs maintain;
And, to defend the whiggish cause,
Her topicks from the tories draws.*
SWIFT.

WHI'GGISM. n.s. [from whig.] The notions of a whig.

I could quote passages from fifty pamphlets, wholly made up of whiggism and atheism. SWIFT.

WHI'RLIGIG. n.s. [whirl and gig.]

A toy which children spin round.

He found that marbles taught him percussion, and whirligigs the axis in peritrochio.

ARBUTHNOT AND POPE'S MARTIN
SCRIBLERUS.

*That since they gave things their beginning,
And set this whirligig a spinning.*

PRIOR.

WHI'RLPIT, WHIRLPOOL.

n.s. [hwyrfpole, Saxon.] A place where the water moves circularly, and draws whatever comes within the circle towards its center; a vortex.

Poor Tom! whom the foul fiend hath led through ford and whirlpool, o'er bog and quagmire.

SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

*In the fathomless profound Down sunk they, like a falling stone,
By raging whirlpits overthrown.*

SANDYS.

This calm of heaven, this mermaid's melody,

*Into an unseen whirlpool draws you fast,
And in a moment sinks you.*

DRYDEN'S SPANISH FRYAR.

*Send forth, ye wise! send forth your lab'ring
thought:*

*Let it return with empty notions fraught,
Of airy columns every moment broke,
Of circling whirlpools, and of spheres of smoke.* PRIOR.

There might arise some vertiginous motions or whirlpools in the matter of the chaos, whereby the atoms must be thrust and crowded to the middle of those whirlpools, and there constipate one another into great solid bodies. BENTLEY.

WHIST. [This word is called by Skinner, who seldom errs, an interjection commanding silence, and so it is commonly used; but Shakespeare uses it as a verb, and Milton as an adjective.]

1. Are silent.

*Come unto these yellow sands,
And then take hands;
Curt'sied when you have, and kist,
The wild waves whist.*

SHAKESPEARE'S TEMPEST.

2. Still; silent.<sup>237</sup>

*The winds, with wonder whist,
Smoothly the waters kiss'd,
Whispering new joys to the mild ocean.*

MILTON.

3. Be still.

WHIST. n.s. A game at cards, requiring close attention and silence.<sup>238</sup>

The clergyman used to play at whist and swobbers. SWIFT.

The widowhunters about town often afford them great diversion.

ADDISON'S SPECTATOR.

WILDGO'OSECHASE. n.s. A pursuit of something as unlikely to be caught as the wildgoose.

If our wits run the wildgoosechace, I have done; for thou hast more of the wildgoose in one of thy wits, than I have in my whole five. SHAKESPEARE.

Let a man consider the time, money, and vexation, that this wildgoosechace has cost him, and then say what have I gotten to answer all this expence, but loose, giddy frolick? L'ESTRANGE.

To WILL. v.a. [wilgan, Gothick; willan, Saxon; willen, Dutch.]

1. To desire that any thing should be, or be done.<sup>239</sup>

To will, is to bend our souls to the having or doing of that which they see to be good.

HOOKE.

*Let Richard be restored to his blood,
As will the rest; so willeth Winchester.*

SHAKESPEARE.

I speak not of God's determining his own will, but his predetermining the acts of our will. There is as great difference betwixt these two, as betwixt my willing a lawful thing myself, and my inducing another man to do that which is unlawful.

HAMMOND ON FUNDAMENTALS.

Whosoever wills the doing of a thing, if the doing of it be in his power, he will certainly do it; and whosoever does not do that thing, which he has in his power to do, does not properly will it. SOUTH.

A man that sits still, is said to be at liberty, because he can walk if he wills it.

LOCKE.

2. To be inclined or resolved to have.

*She's too rough for me;
There, there, Hortensio, will you any wife?*
SHAKESPEARE.

3. To command; to direct.

St. Paul did will them of Corinth, every man to lay up somewhat on the Sunday, and to reserve it in store for the church of Jerusalem, for the relief of the poor there.
HOOKER.

*How rarely does it meet with this time's
guise,
When man was willed to love his enemies.*
SHAKESPEARE.

*Our battle is more full of names than yours,
Our men more perfect in the use of arms,
Our armours all as strong, our cause the
best;
Then reason wills our hearts should be as good.* SHAKESPEARE.

He willed him to be of good comfort, promising to bestow upon him whatsoever he should win. KNOLLES.

If they had any business, his Majesty willed that they should attend. CLARENDON.

*'Tis your's, O queen! to will
The work, which duty binds me to fulfil.*
DRYDEN.

4. It has a loose and slight signification.

Let the circumstances of life be what, or where they will, a man should never neglect improvement. WATTS.

5. It is one of the signs of the future tense; of which it is difficult to show or limit the signification.

I will come. I am determined to come; importing choice.

Thou wilt come. It must be so that thou must come; importing necessity.

Wilt thou come? Hast thou determined to come? importing choice.

He will come. He is resolved to come; or it must be that he must come, importing either choice or necessity.

It will come. It must so be that it must come; importing necessity.

The plural follows the analogy of the singular.

WI'MBLE. n.s. [wimpel, old Dutch, from wemelen, to bore.] An instrument with which holes are bored.

*At harvest-home, trembling to approach
The little barrel, which he fears to broach:
He 'says the wimble, often draws it back,
And deals to thirsty servants but a smack.*
DRYDEN.

*As when a shipwright stands his workmen o'er,
Who ply the wimble some huge beam to bore;
Urg'd on all hands it nimbly spins about,
The grain deep-piercing till it scoops it out.* POPE.

The trepan is like a wimble, used by joiners. SHARP.

WI'NDEGG. n.s. An egg not impregnated; an egg that does not contain the principles of life.

Sound eggs sink, and such as are addled swim; as do also those termed hypenemia, or windeggs.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERRORS.

To WI'REDRAW. v.a. [wire and draw.]

1. To spin into wire.

2. To draw out into length.

A fluid moving through a flexible canal, when small, by its friction will naturally lengthen, and wiredraw the sides of the canal, according to the direction of its axis. ARBUTHNOT.

3. To draw by art or violence.

I have been wrongfully accused, and my sense wiredrawn into blasphemy.

DRYDEN.

WI'REDRAWER. n.s. [wire and draw.] One who spins wire.

He hath bid me to a calve's head and a capon; shall I not find a woodcock too.

SHAKESPEARE.

*Soon as in doubtful day the woodcock flies,
Her cleanly pail the pretty housewife bears.* GAY.

WOO'DHOLE. n.s. [wood and hole.] Place where wood is laid up.

*What should I do? or whither turn?
amaz'd,
Confounded to the dark recess I fly,
Of woodhole.* PHILIPS.

WOO'DMONGER. n.s. [wood and monger.] A woodseller.

WORD. n.s. [word, Saxon; woord, Dutch.]

1. A single part of speech.

If you speak three words, it will three times report you the three words. BACON.

As conceptions are the images of things to the mind within itself, so are words or names the marks of those conceptions to the minds of them we converse with.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

Amongst men who confound their ideas with words, there must be endless disputes, wrangling, and jargon. LOCKE.

*Each wight who reads not, and but scans and spells,
Each word catcher that lives on syllables.*
POPE.

2. A short discourse.

*Shall I vouchsafe your worship a word or two?
— Two thousand, and I'll vouchsafe thee
the hearing.* SHAKESPEARE.

A word, Lucilius, How he receiv'd you.
SHAKESPEARE'S JULIUS CÆSAR.

A friend who shall own thee in thy lowest condition, answer all thy wants, and, in a word, never leave thee. SOUTH.

In a word, the Gospel describes God to us in all respects such a one as we would wish him to be. TILLOTSON.

3. Talk; discourse.

*Why should calamity be full of words?
— Windy attorneys to their client woes!
Let them have scope, though what they do impart
Help nothing else, yet they do ease the heart.* SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

*If you dislike the play,
Pray make no words on't 'till the second
day,
Or third be past; for we would have you know it,
The loss will fall on us, not on the poet.*
DENHAM.

*Cease this contention: be thy words severe,
Sharp as he merits; but the sword forbear.*
DRYDEN.

If words are sometimes to be used, they ought to be grave, kind, and sober, representing the ill, or unbecomingness of the faults. LOCKE.

If I appear a little word-bound in my first solutions, I hope it will be imputed to the long disuse of speech. SPECTATOR.

4. Dispute; verbal contention.

*In argument upon a case,
Some words there grew 'twixt Somerset and me.* SHAKESPEARE.

5. Language.<sup>240</sup>

Found you no displeasure by word or countenance? SHAKESPEARE.

I'll write thee a challenge, or I'll deliver thy indignation to him by word of mouth.
SHAKESPEARE'S TWELFTH NIGHT.

He commanded the men to be ranged in battalions, and rid to every squadron, giving them such words as were proper to the occasion. CLARENDON.

An easy way, by word of mouth communicated to me. BOYLE.

6. Promise.

*Obey thy parents, keep thy word justly,
swear not.* SHAKESPEARE.

I take your princely word for these redresses.

— I give it you, and will maintain my word. SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY IV.

*The duke shall wield his conqu'ring sword,
The king shall pass his honest word.*
DRYDEN.

7. Signal; token.

*Every soldier, kill his prisoners;
Give the word through.*
SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

8. Account; tydings; message.

*Bring me word thither
How the world goes, that to the pace of it
I may spur on my journey.*
SHAKESPEARE'S CORIOLANUS.

*Why should she write to Edmund? Might not you
Transport her purposes by word?*
SHAKESPEARE'S KING LEAR.

*Two optick nerves she ties,
Like spectacles across the eyes;
By which the spirits bring her word,
Whene'er the balls are fix'd or stirr'd.*
PRIOR.

9. Declaration.

*I know you brave, and take you at your
word;
That present service which you vaunt, afford.* DRYDEN.

10. Affirmation.

Every person has enough to do to work out his own salvation; which, if we will take the apostle's word, is to be done with fear and trembling. DECAY OF PIETY.

I desire not the reader should take my word, and therefore I will set two of their discourses in the same light for every man to judge. DRYDEN.

11. Scripture; word of God.

They say this church of England neither hath the word purely preached, nor the sacraments sincerely ministred.

WHITGIFT.

12. The second person of the ever adorable Trinity. A scripture term.

Thou my Word, begotten son, by thee This I perform. MILTON.

To WORD. v.n. [from the noun.] To dispute.

He that descends not to word it with a shrew, does worse than beat her.

L'ESTRANGE.

To WORD. v.a. To express in proper words.

Let us blacken him what we can, said Harrison of the blessed king, upon the wording and drawing up his charge against approaching trial. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

Whether I have improved these fables or no, in the wording or meaning of them, the book must stand or fall to itself.

L'ESTRANGE.

The apology for the king is the same, but worded with greater deference to that great prince. ADDISON.

WO'RDY. adj. [from word.]

Verbose; full of words.

Phocion, beholding a wordy orator, while he was making a magnificent speech full of vain promises, said, I now fix my eyes upon a cypress-tree: it has all the pomp imaginable in its branches, leaves, and height; but it bears no fruit. SPECTATOR.

We need not lavish hours in wordy periods,

As do the Romans, ere they dare to fight.

PHILIPS'S BRITON.

Intemp'rate rage, a wordy war, began.

POPE.

WO'RLDLING. n.s. [from world.]

A mortal set upon profit.

Baseminded wretches! are your thoughts so deeply bemired in the trade of ordinary worldlings, as for respect of gain to let so much time pass. SIDNEY.

The one sort are nam'd the brethren, the godly; the other worldlings, timeservers, and pleasers of men more than pleasers of God. HOOKER.

God of the world and worldlings, Great Mammon! greatest god below the sky. FAIRY QUEEN.

For his weeping in the needless stream; Poor deer, quoth he, thou mak'st a testament

As worldlings do, giving thy sum of more To that which had too much.

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

That other on his friends his thoughts bestows:

The covetous worldling, in his anxious mind,

Thinks only on the wealth he left behind.

DRYDEN.

If we consider the expectations of futurity, the worldling gives up the argument.

ROGERS.

To WO'RRY. v.a. [worigen, Saxon: whence probably the word warray.]

1. To tear, or mangle, as a beast tears its prey.

If we with thrice such powers left at home, Cannot defend our own doors from the dog,

Let us be worried.

SHAKESPEARE'S HENRY V.

The fury of the tumults might fly so high as to worry and tear those in pieces, whom as yet they but play'd with in their paws.

KING CHARLES.

'Tis no new thing for the dogs that are to keep the wolves from worrying the sheep, to be deliver'd up to the enemy, for fear the sheep should worry the wolves.

L'ESTRANGE.

This revives and imitates that inhuman barbarity of the old heathen persecutors, wrapping up christians in the skins of wild beasts, that so they might be worried and torn in pieces by dogs.

SOUTH'S SERMONS.

2. To harrass, or persecute brutally.

Then embraces his son-in-law; then again worries he his daughter with clipping her.

SHAKESPEARE'S WINTER'S TALE.

For want of words, or lack of breath, Witness when I was worried with thy peals. MILTON.

It has pleased Providence at length to give us righteousness instead of exaction, and hopes of religion to a church worried with reformation. SOUTH'S SERMONS.

All his care
*Was to preserve me from the barbarous
rage,*
Which worried him only for being mine.
SOUTHERN.

I shall not suffer him to worry any man's reputation, nor indeed fall on any person whatsoever. ADDISON.

Let them rail,
And then worry one another at their pleasure. ROWE.

*Madam, contrive and invent,
And worry him out, 'till he gives his consent.* SWIFT.

WOU'LDING. n.s. [from would.]

Motion of desire; disposition to any thing; propension; inclination; incipient purpose.

It will be every man's interest to join good performances to spiritual purposes, to subdue the exorbitancies of the flesh, as well as to continue the wouldings of the spirit.
HAMMOND.

WREATH. n.s. [wreod, Saxon.]

1. Any thing curled or twisted.

The wreath of three was made a wreath of five: to these three first titles of the two houses, were added the authorities parliamentary and papal.

BACON'S HENRY VII.

Clouds began
To darken all the hill, and smoke to roll
In dusky wreaths reluctant flames.

MILTON'S PARADISE LOST.

*He of his tortuous train
Curl'd many a wanton wreath.*

MILTON.

Let altars smoak,
And richest gums, and spice, and incense roll
Their fragrant wreaths to heav'n.
SMITH'S PHÆDRA AND HIPPOLITUS.

2. A garland; a chaplet.

*Now are our brows bound with victorious wreaths,
Our bruised arms hung up for monuments.*

SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

Dropp'd from his head, a wreath lay on the ground. ROSCOMMON.

*The boughs of Lotos, form'd into a wreath,
This monument, thy maiden beauty's due,
High on a plane-tree shall be hung to
view.* DRYDEN.

*When for thy head the garland I prepare,
A second wreath shall bind Aminta's hair;
And when my choicest songs thy worth
proclaim,
Alternate verse shall bless Aminta's name.*
PRIOR.

To prince Henry the laurels of his rival are transferred, with the additional wreath of having conquered that rival.

SHAKESPEARE ILLUSTRATED.

To WREATH. v.a. preterite wreathed; part. pass. wreathed, wreathen. [from the noun.]

1. To curl; to twist; to convolve.

Longaville
*Did never sonnet for her sake compile,
Nor never laid his wreathed arms athwart*

His loving bosom, to keep down his heart.

SHAKESPEARE.

About his neck

A green and gilded snake had wreath'd itself,

Who, with her head, nimble in threats approach'd

*The opening of his mouth; but suddenly,
Seeing Orlando, it unlink'd itself,
And with indented glides did slip away.*

SHAKESPEARE'S AS YOU LIKE IT.

The beard of an oat is wreathed at the bottom, and one smooth entire straw at the top: they take only the part that is wreathed, and cut off the other. BACON.

2. It is here used for to writhe.

Impatient of the wound,

*He rolls and wreaths his shining body
round;*

Then headlong shoots beneath the dashing tide. GAY.

3. To interweave; to entwine one in another.

Two chains of pure gold of wreathen work shalt thou make them, and fasten the wreathen chains to the ouches.

BIBLE EXODUS, XXVIII.

As snakes breed in dunghills not singly, but in knots; so in such base noisome hearts you shall ever see pride and ingratitude indivisibly wreathed and twisted together.

SOUTH.

Here, where the labourer's hands have form'd a bow'r

Of wreathing trees, in singing waste an hour. DRYDEN.

4. To encircle as a garland.

In the flow'rs that wreath the sparkling bowl,

Fell adders hiss, and pois'nous serpents rowl. PRIOR.

5. To encircle as with a garland.

For thee she feeds her hair,

And with thy winding ivy wreathes her lance. DRYDEN.

The soldier, from successful camps returning,

With laurel wreath'd, and rich with hostile spoil,

Severs the bull to Mars. PRIOR.

WRE'ATHY. adj. [from wreath.]

Spiral; curled; twisted.

That which is preserved at St. Dennis, near Paris, hath wreathy spires, and cochleary turnings about, which agreeth with the description of an unicorn's horn in Ælian.

BROWN.

WRETCH. n.s. [wrecca, Saxon.]

1. A miserable mortal.

When I loved, I was a wretch.

ACCIDENCE.

*She weeps, and says her Henry is depos'd;
He smiles, and says his Edward is install'd;
That she, poor wretch, for grief can speak
no more.* SHAKESPEARE.

*The butcher takes away the calf,
And binds the wretch, and beats it when it strives.* SHAKESPEARE.

Illustrious wretch! repine not, nor reply: View not what heav'n ordains, with reason's eye;

For bright the object is, the distance is too high. PRIOR.

2. A worthless sorry creature.

Base-minded wretches, are your thoughts so deeply bemired in the trade of ordinary worldlings, as for respect of gain some poultry wool may yield you, to let so much time pass without knowing perfectly her estate? SIDNEY.

He now

Has these poor men in question: never saw I

*Wretches so quake; they kneel, they kiss the
earth,*

Forswear themselves as often as they speak. SHAKESPEARE.

*Title of honour, worth and virtue's right,
Should not be given to a wretch so vile.*

DANIEL'S CIVIL WAR.

When they are gone, a company of starved hungry wretches shall take their places.

L'ESTRANGE.

3. It is used by way of slight, or ironical pity, or contempt.

*When soon away the wasp doth go;
Poor wretch was never frightened so:
He thought his wings were much too slow,
O'erjoy'd they so were parted.*

DRAYTON'S NYMPHID.

*Then, if the spider find him fast beset,
She issues forth, and runs along her loom:
She joys to touch the captive in her net,
And drags the little wretch in triumph home.* DRYDEN.

4. It is sometimes a word of tenderness, as we now say poor thing.

*Chastened but thus, and thus his lesson taught,
The happy wretch she put into her breast.*

SIDNEY.

To WRITE. v.a. preterite writ or wrote; part. pass. written, writ, or wrote. [writan, awritan, Saxon; ad rita, Islandick; wreta, a letter, Gothick.]

1. To express by means of letters.

The time, the place, the manner how to meet,

Were all in punctual order plainly writ.

DRYDEN.

2. To engrave; to impress.

Cain was so fully convinced that every one had a right to destroy such a criminal, that he cries out, every one that findeth me shall slay me; so plain was it writ in the hearts of all mankind. LOCKE.

3. To produce as an author.

*When more indulgent to the writer's ease,
You are so good, to be so hard to please;
No such convulsive pangs it will require
To write — the pretty things that you admire.* GRANVILLE.

4. To tell by letter.

*I chose to write the thing I durst not speak
To her I lov'd.* PRIOR.

To WRITE. v.n.

1. To perform the act of writing.

I have seen her rise from her bed, take forth paper, fold it, and write upon't.

SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.

*Bassanio gave his ring away
Unto the judge that begg'd it; and his clerk,
That took some pains in writing, he begg'd mine.* SHAKESPEARE.

2. To play the authour.

*Hearts, tongues, figures, scribes, bards, poets, cannot Think, speak, cast, write, sing, number
His love to Antony.*

SHAKESPEARE'S ANTONY AND CLEOPATRA.

There is not a more melancholy object in the learned world than a man who has written himself down. ADDISON.

3. To tell in books.

With that grim ferryman which poets write of.* SHAKESPEARE'S RICHARD III.

4. To send letters.

He wrote for all the Jews, concerning their freedom. BIBLE 1 ESDRAS.

5. To call one's self; to be entitled; to use the stile of.

About it, and write happy when thou'st done. SHAKESPEARE.

*Let it not your wonder move,
Less your laughter that I love;
Though I now write fifty years,
I have had, and have my peers.*

BEN JONSON.

He writes himself divina providentia, whereas other bishops only use divina permissione. AYLIFFE.

6. To compose; to form compositions.

*Chaste moral writing we may learn from hence,
Neglect of which no wit can recompence;
The fountain which from Helicon proceeds,
That sacred stream, should never water weeds.* WALLER.

They can write up to the dignity and character of their authors.

FELTON ON THE CLASSICKS.

WRI'TER. n.s. [from write.]

1. One who practises the art of writing.
2. An authour.

All three were ruined by justice and sentence, as delinquents; and all three famous writers. BACON.

*Peaceable times are the best to live in,
though not so proper to furnish materials for a writer.* ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER.

Writers are often more influenced by a desire of fame, than a regard to the publick good. ADDISON'S FREEHOLDER.

Would a writer know how to behave himself with relation to posterity, let him consider in old books what he finds that he is glad to know, and what omissions he most laments. SWIFT.

WRI'TINGMASTER. n.s. One who teaches to write.

The facility of which I spoke consists not in bold strokes, if it makes not a great effect at a distance: that sort of freedom belongs rather to a writingmaster than a painter.
DRYDEN.

X

Is a letter, which, though found in Saxon words, begins no word in the English language.<sup>241</sup>

Y

At the beginning of words, is a consonant; at the end, and when it follows a consonant, is a vowel, and has the sound of i. It is used at the end of words, and whenever two i's would come together; and in words derived from the Greek, to express the u. Y was much used by the Saxons, whence y is found for i in the old English writers.

Y is in old English sometimes prefixed as an increasing syllable to preterites, and passive participles of verbs. It seems borrowed from ge, the Saxon augmentum of the preterite. It is sometimes put before present tenses, but, I think, erroneously.<sup>242</sup>

YACHT. n.s. A small ship for carrying passengers.

YELK. n.s. [from gealewe, yellow, Saxon.] The yellow part of the egg. It is commonly pronounced, and often written yolk.

The yolk of the egg conduceth little to the generation of the bird, but only to the nourishment of the same: for if a chicken be opened, when it is new hatched, you shall find much of the yolk remaining.

BACON'S NATURAL HISTORY.

That a chicken is formed out of the yelk of an egg, with some antient philosophers the people still opinion. BROWN.

*All the feather'd kind,
From th' included yolk, not ambient white arose.* DRYDEN.

YE' LLOWBOY. n.s. A gold coin. A very low word.

John did not starve the cause; there wanted not yellowboys to see council.

ARBUTHNOT'S JOHN BULL.

YES. adv. [gise, Saxon.] A term of affirmation; the affirmative particle opposed to no.

This were a fit speech for a general in the head of an army, when going to battle: yes, and it is no less fit speech in the head of a council, upon a deliberation of entrance into a war. BACON.

*Yes, you despise the man to books confin'd,
Who from his study rails at human kind,
Though what he learns he speaks.*

POPE.<sup>243</sup>

YEW. n.s. [iw, Saxon; yw, Welsh. This is often written eugh; but the former orthography is at once nearer to the sound and the derivation. See EUGH.] A tree of tough wood.<sup>244</sup>

It hath amentaceous flowers, which consist of many apices, for the most part shaped like a mushroom, and are barren; but the embryoes, which are produced at remote distances on the same tree, do afterward become hollow bell-shaped berries, which are full of juice, and include seeds somewhat like acorns, having, as it were, a little cup to each. Miller.

*The shooter eugh, the broad-leav'd sycamore,
The barren plantane, and the walnut
sound;
The myrrhe, that her soul sin doth still deplore,
Alder the owner of all waterish ground.*
FAIRFAX.

Slips of yew, Shiver'd in the moon's eclipse.
SHAKESPEARE'S MACBETH.
*They would bind me here
Unto the body of a dismal yew.*
SHAKESPEARE'S TITUS ANDRONICUS.

*He drew,
And almost join'd the horns of the tough
yew.* DRYDEN.

The distinguish'd yew is ever seen, Unchang'd his branch, and permanent his green. PRIOR.

YOLK. n.s. [See YELK.] The yellow part of an egg.

Nature hath provided a large yolk in every egg, a great part whereof remaineth after the chicken is hatched; and, by a channel made on purpose, serves instead of milk to nourish the chick for a considerable time.

RAY ON THE CREATION.

YOU'THY. adj. [from youth.]

Young; youthful. A bad word.

*The scribler had not genius to turn my age,
as indeed I am an old maid, into raillery, for affecting a youthier turn than is consistent with my time of day.*

SPECTATOR.

YUCK. n.s. [jocken, Dutch.] Itch.

YUX. n.s. [yeox, Saxon.] The hiccough.

Z

Is found in the Saxon alphabets, set down by Grammarians, but is read in no word originally Teutonic: its sound is uniformly that of an hard S. No word of English original begins with Z.<sup>245</sup>

ZA'NY. n.s. [Probably of zanci. The contraction of Giovanni or sanna, a scoff, according to Skinner.] One employed to raise laughter by his gestures, actions and speeches; a merry Andrew; a buffoon.

*Some carrytale, some pleaseman, some slight zany,
Some mumblenews, some trencher knight,
some Dick,*

Told our intents before. SHAKESPEARE.

*Then write that I may follow, and so be Thy echo, thy debtor, thy foil, thy zany,
I shall be thought, if mine like thine I shape,*

All the world's lion, though I be thy ape.

DONNE.

*Oh, great restorer of the good old stage,
Preacher at once, and zany of thy age.*

POPE'S DUNCIAD.

ZE'CHIN. n.s. [So named from zecha, a place in Venice where the mint is settled for coinage.] A gold coin worth about nine shillings sterling.

ZEST. n.s.

1. The peel of an orange squeezed into wine.
2. A relish; a taste added.

ZOO'GRAPHER. n.s. [ζωή and γράφω.] One who describes the nature, properties, and forms of animals.

One kind of locust stands not prone, or a little inclining upward; but a large erectness, elevating the two fore legs, and sustaining itself in the middle of the other four, by zoographers called the prophet and praying locust.

BROWN'S VULGAR ERROURS.

ZOO'GRAPHY. n.s. [of ζωή and γράφω.] A description of the forms, natures, and properties of animals.

If we contemplate the end of the effect, its principal final cause being the glory of its maker, this leads us into divinity; and for its subordinate, as it is designed for alimential sustenance to living creatures, and medicinal uses to man, we are thereby conducted into zoography.

GLANVILLE SCEPSIS SCIENTIFICA.

ZOO'LOGY. n.s. [of ζῶον and λογος.] A treatise concerning living creatures.

ZOO'TOMIST. n.s. [of ζωτομία.] A dissector of the bodies of brute beasts.

ZOO'TOMY. n.s. [ζωτομία, of ζῶον and τεμνω.] Dissection of the bodies of beasts.

Notes

The notes below chiefly refer to the changes made in the fourth edition.

1. ABOVE-BOARD The second example is assigned to a separate sense 2: 'Without disguise or concealment'.
2. ACCOUPLE Added: 'We now use couple'.
3. ACE Added: 'a particle; an atom'.
4. ACQUIESCE Added: an extra illustrative quotation.
5. ACQUIESCENCE Added: a further synonym, 'confidence'.
6. ADOLESCENCY The entry for ADOLESCENCE is combined with that for ADOLESCENCY.
7. ADVENT This definition is turned into a quotation, and attributed to the Book of Common Prayer.
8. AFTER ALL Added: 'upon the whole; at the most.'
9. ALONE Added: 'forbidding' before 'to help'.
10. ALTER The definition is expanded: 'With from and to; as, her face is altered from pale to red'.
11. ANAGRAM See MOIL 'toil, drudge', but spelled with an i.
12. ANCIENT Added: 'but when new means modern'.
13. APPEAR Omitted: 'sometimes . . . in'.
14. APPOSE Added: a second definition, 'A latinism. To apply to', with an illustrative quotation from Harvey.
15. AQUA MIRABILIS Omitted: the last sentence.
16. ARCH Added: 'unless it be derived from Archy, the name of the jester to Charles I'.
17. ARMLET Added: a second illustration, from Dryden.
18. ARTICULATE The definition begins: 'Distinct; divided, as . . .'
19. ASPHALTOS The definition stops at this point.
20. ASSEMBLAGE This quotation is assigned to a separate sense 2: 'The state of being assembled'.
21. ASSHEAD An unusual error: the quotation is from Twelfth Night.
22. ASTROLOGY Replaced: 'without reason' by 'irrational and false'.
23. ATTRITION Added: a new sense 2, 'The state of being worn', and sense 2 becomes sense 3.
24. AUSPICE Omitted: the phrase 'by prosperous men'.

25. AWARE Added as the first definition: 'excited to caution'.
26. AWFULNESS Added: the comment 'little used'.
27. AWLESS Altered: 'without' to 'wanting', in both definitions. Added to the first definition: 'void of respectful fear'.
28. BACHELOR The word came immediately from Middle French bachelor, Middle Latin baccalarius, 'tenant farmer, squire, advanced student', but the early Latin and pre-Latin sources remain unclear. In the fourth edition, Johnson adds as a penultimate sentence to the etymological note: 'Dr. Lawrence observed, that Menage's etymology is much confirmed by the practice in our universities of calling a Bachelor, Sir.'
29. BALLIARDS Compare the entry on BILLIARDS.
30. BAMBOO The definition is much reduced: 'An Indian plant of the reed kind. It has several shoots, much larger than our ordinary reeds, which are knotty, and separated from space to space by joints. The bamboo is much larger than the sugar-cane.'
31. BARBARISM Added: 'not in use'.
32. BEAR-GARDEN This quotation is moved to illustrate sense 2.
33. BEGIN Added: a quotation from Dryden.
34. BEGIRD This quotation is assigned to sense 2.
35. BELOWT Added: 'Obsolete'.
36. BIBACIOUS Lack of space in the line forces an unusual abbreviation in the original: Dictionaries to D.
37. BLAME Omitted in sense 1: the first use of 'fault'. Added in sense 3: 'Not now in use'. Added in sense 4: 'culpable; worthy of censure'.
38. BLINDWORM The definition is corrected: 'A small viper, called likewise a slow worm; believed not to be venemous'.
39. BOB Added: a fourth sense, 'A mode of ringing'.
40. BOLD Added to sense 5: 'or expression'. In sense 8, the example is replaced by: 'I was bold to tell the house that scandalous livings make scandalous ministers. Rudgerd.'
41. BOOTY Note the use of gotten, here and in the L'Estrange quotation at sense 1, soon to disappear from standard British (but not American) English.
42. BOPEEP The definition begins: 'The act of looking out, and drawing back as if frightened . . .'
43. BREAD-CHIPPER Added: 'an under-butler'.
44. BRISK Added: 'this is not used'.
45. BUMPKIN Added: 'yet we use the word cabbage-head in the same sense'.
46. BUREAU Added: 'with a writing board'.
47. CALMY Added: 'Not used'.

48. CAN Johnson notes the overlap in meaning between can and may, which prescriptive grammarians later attempted to eliminate.
49. CAR Replaced: 'a chariot' by 'any vehicle of dignity or splendour'.
50. CASTAWAY 'Providence' is given an initial capital. Added: 'anything thrown away'.
51. CAYMAN This word is omitted in the fourth edition.
52. CENSE Altered: 'Public rate'.
53. CERTAIN Added three extra senses: 'Unfailing; which always produces the expected effect'; 'Constant; never failing to be'; 'Regular; settled; stated'.
54. CIVILLY Altered: 'not criminally' is made a separate sense 2, along with the quotation from Ayliffe. Omitted: 'not ecclesiastically'.
55. CLEAR This quotation is assigned to a new sense 2: 'Perspicacious; sharp'. Added: a new sense 3, 'Cheerful; not clouded with care or anger' and a new sense 9, 'Quick to understand; prompt; acute', making twenty senses differentiated in the later edition.
56. CLINCH Expanded: 'How it obtains this meaning is difficult to find. A nail caught on the other side, and doubled, is a nail clinched: a word taken in a different meaning, and doubled in sense, is likewise a clinch.'
57. COLANDER Added: 'a strainer'.
58. COMEDIAN Omitted: this unattributed couplet.
59. COMEDY Added: 'with an intention to make vice and folly ridiculous: opposed to tragedy'.
60. COMPLIMENT Added: 'this is properly complement, something superfluous, or more than enough'.
61. CONCUSSION Altered: this quotation is placed under a separate sense 2, 'The state of being shaken'.
62. CONFORMATION Added: 'With to'.
63. CONSENT A quotation from Milton illustrates this first sense: 'Though what thou tell'st some doubt within me move, / But more desire to hear, if thou consent, / The full relation'.
64. CONSIDERATE Added: 'Little used'.
65. CONSOLATE Added: 'Not much used'. The usage eventually lost out to console (next entry).
66. CONTRISTATION Added: 'Not used' (despite all these synonyms).
67. CONVERSE Added: 'action'.
68. COQUET Added: 'To entice by blandishments'.
69. CORN-FLAG This encyclopedic characterization is reduced to 'A plant' plus the penultimate sentence.
70. CRACK Sense split into two: the first quotation is assigned to 'Change of the voice in puberty' and the second to 'Breach of chastity'.

71. CREEPLE This is an example of a word added in the fourth edition.
72. CRITIC Added: a new sense 2, 'An examiner; a judge', illustrated by an additional quotation from Pope; a new sense 3, 'A snarler; a carper; a caviller', illustrated by the quotations here shown from Pope and Watts.
73. CUTTER Added: '[Incisores.]' before this definition.
74. DADAL The headword is spelled DAEDAL.
75. DECLINATION Added to sense 1: 'diminution of vigour'. Added: a new sense 4, 'Deviation from moral rectitude'.
76. DEGREE This definition begins 'The comparative state . . .'. Omitted in sense 5: 'of the angels'. In sense 11 the definition stops at 'quality'.
77. DEPARTMENT Added (rather redundantly, given the etymology): 'A French term'.
78. DEPENDENT Johnson's own uncertainty is illustrated by his change of mind between the first and the fourth editions. In the former, adjectival dependent in the sense of 'in the power of another' is spelled with -ant, and in its sense of 'hanging down' with -ent, as shown here; in the fourth edition the latter is a separate entry dependant.
79. DESULTORY Added: 'Desultorious is not in use'.
80. DETER Altered: 'To discourage by terrour'.
81. DETERMENT Added: 'A good word, but not now used'.
82. DEVIOUS Added: a sense 4, 'It is used likewise of persons. Roving; idly vagrant; erring from the way'.
83. DIAPER Added: 'the finest species of figured linen after damask'.
84. DIBSTONE This entry is omitted.
85. DIFFICILNESS Added: 'A word not in use, but proper'.
86. DIFFICULTY The accent is represented as grave in the text.
87. DISEMBITTER Added: 'an unusual word'.
88. DISPREAD Added: 'This word is poetical'.
89. DOLL Added as an example: 'Doll Tearsheet' (from Shakespeare).
90. DOSE Added: new sense 2 ('Any thing nauseous') and sense 4 ('Quantity').
91. DOUBLE-MINDED Altered: 'Unsettled; undetermined'.
92. EAST Added: the antonym, 'opposite to the West'. An antonym is also added to the definition of SOUTH; but not for NORTH and WEST.
93. ECONOMY Added: a new sense 2, 'Distribution of expence'. Altered in sense 5 (sense 6 in the fourth edition), 'System of motions' to 'System of matter'.
94. EFFUMABILITY Added: 'An useful word but not adopted'.
95. ESTABLISHMENT Added: a sense 6, 'Settled or final rest'.
96. EVESDROPPER Johnson makes no reference to the spelling with EA-, which has its own entry.

97. EXHIBITION Added: 'it is much used for pensions allowed to scholars at the university'. Also added: a sense 3, 'Payment; recompence'.
98. EXORBITANT These two meanings are distinguished as separate senses, with the quotations assigned to sense 2.
99. EXTREME Added: a sense 5, 'Rigorous; strict'.
100. FANGLED Replaced: the second sentence by 'new fangled, is therefore new fashioned; dressed out in new decorations'.
101. FEAGUE Omitted: the Scottish allusion.
102. FEMALE Added: 'Not male'.
103. FILE Added: a new sense 3, 'To smooth; to polish'; sense 3 becomes sense 4.
104. FIRECROSS Omitted: 'like lightning'.
105. FIT Added: a sense 6, 'It was anciently used for any recommencement after intermission. The parts of a song, or cantos of a poem, were called fits'.
106. FIZGIG This quotation is added from the fourth edition.
107. FLESH Two stylistic comments are added: at sense 7, 'in theology'; at sense 8, 'a scriptural use'.
108. FOOT Added: an example, 'the foot of a table'. Altered: senses 15 and 16 are presented in reverse order.
109. FORE Added: 'A vitious orthography has confounded for and fore in composition.'
110. FRANKLIN Added: 'Not in use' .
111. FROG Added: 'famous in Homer's poem'.
112. FULSOME Added: a new sense 3, 'Lustful'. The Shakespeare quotation from sense 1 is used to illustrate it.
113. GAR Added: 'Obsolete'.
114. GAZETTEER This sense ameliorates to: 'An officer appointed to publish news by authority, whom Steele calls the lowest minister of state.'
115. GENTRY Added: 'rank derived from inheritance'.
116. GLASS Added: a new sense 5, 'The destined time of man's life.'
117. GOVERNANT The spelling is changed to governant.
118. GUTTLE Added: 'A low word', corresponding to the other use of this verb.
119. HA Added: 'Used with reduplication'.
120. HAGGLE Added: 'always in a bad sense'.
121. HALF-PENY This quotation is placed under a separate sense 2: 'It has the force of an adjective conjoined with any thing of which it denotes the price'.
122. HANDSEL Added: 'It is now not used, except in the dialect of trade.'
123. HAP-HAZARD Added: 'perhaps originally hap hazardè'.
124. HARNESS Added: 'Somewhat antiquated'.

125. HATCH Added: 'perhaps from hacher, to cut, as a hatch is part of a door cut in two'.
126. HAYER Added: 'perhaps properly aven, from avena, Latin'.
127. HEROESS Added: 'Not in use'.
128. HERSE The duplication with HEARSE is noted: 'This is likewise written hearse; see HEARSE.'
129. HIST Added: 'but I have heard that it is an Irish verb commanding silence'.
130. HITCH Adding ruefully: 'nor here know well what it means'.
131. HOSPITAL Added: 'Obsolete'.
132. HOUSEKEEPER Added to sense 2, 'one that exercises hospitality'. Added to sense 5: 'not in use'.
133. HUM Added: a new sense 4, 'To make a dull heavy noise'.
134. HUMANITY Added: 'In Scotland, humaniores literæ'.
135. HURLYBURLY The speculation is rejected; the etymology reads simply, 'from the French; hurlubrelu, inconsiderately'.
136. IMPERTINENT Added: 'negligent of the present purpose'. The noun definition following also adds: 'one who enquires or interposes where he has no right or call'.
137. IMPETRATION Added: 'Not much used'.
138. IMPLEX Added: 'opposed to simple'.
139. INCORRIGIBLE A distinction is drawn between 'of persons', added to sense 1, and a new sense 2, 'of things': 'Not capable of amendment'. The first two quotations are assigned to this second sense.
140. INDUSTRIOUS Added: a new sense 2, 'Laborious to a particular end: opposite to remiss'.
141. INDUSTRY Added: 'habitual or actual laboriousness'.
142. INJURY Added: 'A French mode of speech, not now in use'.
143. INSECTOLOGER Added: 'A word, I believe, unauthorised'.
144. INSTRUCTOR: Added: 'It is often written instructor'.
145. INVENTION Conflated: senses 1 and 4.
146. K Replaced: 'but is not much in use, except after' by 'It is used after'. The observation about the non-use of final c would soon prove to be out of date.
147. LATTER This quotation is from Horace's Ars Poetica: 'custom wills it, in whose power lie the arbitrament, the rule, and the standard of language'.
147. LECTURER The rest of this definition is separated as sense 2.
148. LESS Added: 'or to so great; not so much; not equal'.
150. LESSER Added: 'till it has all the authority which a mode originally erroneous can derive from custom'. See also note 147.
151. LICH 'Hail, great mother'. (Johnson was born in Lichfield.)
152. LIFT These two meanings are distinguished as senses 1 and 2, with the first

- two quotations illustrating 'the manner of lifting' and the third illustrating 'the act of lifting'; sense 2 in the first edition then becomes sense 5.
153. LOUIS D'OR The value is raised to twenty shillings.
154. MACHINE Expanded: 'Any complicated work in which one part contributes to the motion of another.'
155. MAGAZINE Added: 'and published under the name of Sylvanus Urban'.
156. MANNER Added: 'distinct mode of person.' The quotation from Donne is used to substantiate a new sense 11: 'To take in the MANNER: To catch in the actual commission of a crime.'
157. MECHANICK New ordering: sense 2 becomes sense 1, sense 3 becomes sense 2, and sense 1 becomes sense 3; also, sense 1 adds: 'bred to manual labour'.
158. MINNOCK Not surprisingly. Minnock (A Midsummer Night's Dream, III.ii.19) is a minim misreading in Q2 for mimic. For minim, see MINUM.
159. MISSIVE Added: 'Both obsolete'.
160. MISTRESS Replaced by: 'A woman who has something in possession.'
161. MITTENS Added: an etymological note, 'It is said that mit is the original word; whence mitten, the plural, and afterwards mittens, as in chicken.'
162. MORELAND Added (rather redundantly): 'from being hilly'.
163. NAPKIN Georgics IV: 'And they bring napkins of shorn pile'.
164. NATURE Added: a new sense 7, 'The constitution and appearances of things', with a quotation from Reynolds, and other senses renumbered. Added as a new sense 13: 'Of this word which occurs so frequently, with significations so various, and so difficultly defined, Boyle has given an explication, which deserves to be epitomised.' There then follows a long quotation from Boyle's 'Free Enquiry into the received Notion of Nature.'
165. NET Added: a more general sense 2, 'Any thing made with interstitial vacuities'.
166. NONSENSE Added: 'a low word'.
167. OBNOXIOUS Added: a new sense 3, 'Reprehensible; not of sound reputation', with this sense renumbered as 4.
168. OFF Replaced: 'On the opposite side of a question.' At the end of the entry, several idioms are added: to be off, to come off, to get off, to go off, well/ill off, along with a general observation: 'Off, whether alone or in composition, means either literally or figuratively, disjunction, absence, privation, or distance.'
169. OVER-HEAD The 'i before e except after c' representation of this vowel sound was not yet standard. Earlier in the dictionary, Johnson locates the entry at CEILING, but also has a cross-reference from CIELING.
170. PET Added: a cross-reference to PEAT.
171. PIGMY Added: 'it should be written with a y, pygmy'.
172. PLUMP Added: 'I believe it is now corrupted to clump'.

173. PROVERB Added: 'a by-word'.
174. PROVINCIAL Added: 'belonging to a province'.
175. PUDDING Added: a sense 4, 'A proverbial name for victuals'.
176. PYGMY Added: 'Any thing little'.
177. QUAFF In fact, the etymology is obscure; the Oxford English Dictionary suggests it is onomatopoeic in origin.
178. QUIRE The singing senses are also listed earlier in the dictionary under the spelling CHOIR.
179. RAGAMUFFIN The definition is taken from the fourth edition.
180. REAR Added: sense 8, 'To raise; to breed'.
181. REFINEMENT This quotation is used to illustrate a new sense 2: 'The state of being pure'.
182. REFORMATION Added: '[By way of eminence]'.
183. REReward Omitted entry, presumably because of the fuller entry under the spelling REARWARD.
184. RESORT Added: 'a gallicism'.
185. SAY Added: 'by way of argument'. Also added, two new senses:
 '4. To repeat; to rehearse: as, to say a part; to say a lesson.
 5. To pronounce without singing.
Then shall be said or sung as follows. COMMON PRAYER.'
186. Added: 'to relate'.
187. SCAVENGER Added: 'more commonly the labourer employed in removing filth'.
188. SCIOMACHY The recommendation is changed to sciamachy.
189. SCULK There is a separate entry under SKULK, with a broadly similar definition. Similarly, there are separate entries for several other items, such as SCULL and SKULL, SCREEN and SKREEN.
190. SENSUOUS Added: 'not in use'.
191. SHADE Added to sense 9: 'the shadow'. Deleted from sense 10: 'A spirit; a ghost; manes.'
192. SHALL 'Using plain homespun wit.'
193. SHAMBLING In fact there is no entry SCAMBLING. The cross-reference has to be to the verb, SCAMBLE.
194. SHARK Added at the end of senses 2 and 3 of the noun, and of senses 1 and 2 of the v.n. entry: 'A low word.' The v.n. also adds a sense 3: 'To fawn upon for a dinner'.
195. SHRUGG Although the following verb and the associated noun both end in a single G, the double G is kept in the fourth edition, and continues to precede SHRUG.
196. SIGN Added: 'a prodigy'. At sense 6, definition replaced by 'Note or token

- given without words.' At sense 7, definition replaced by 'Mark of distinction; cognizance.'
197. SIGNATURE Replaced by: 'Proof drawn from marks'.
198. SIX Added: 'A ludicrous expression that has been long in use'.
199. SIZERS There is no such entry: the correlative entry is SCISSOR.
200. SLOP Deleted: second sentence.
201. SPARKISH Added: 'It is commonly applied to men, rather than women'.
202. SPEECH Replaced by: 'Declaration of thoughts'
203. SQUIB Added: 'Not in use'.
204. STAFF Added: a new sense 5, 'Round or step of a ladder', with later senses renumbered.
205. STAMMEL Replaced by: 'A species of red colour.'
206. STOCAH Added: 'Not in use'.
207. STREW Added: 'See STROW.' The definitions in the two entries largely duplicate.
208. STYLE Added: a new sense 4, 'Style of painting', and sense 5, 'It is likewise applied to music', with subsequent senses renumbered. Sense 8 is relocated as sense 7.
209. SUBTILE Added to sense 4: 'Milton seems to have both. [See SUBTLE.]'. Replaced in sense 6: 'exactness' by 'necessity'.
210. SUBTILELY Added: a new sense 1, with subsequent senses renumbered: 'In a subtle manner; thinly; not densely.'

A JOURNAL OF THE PLAGUE YEAR DANIEL DEFOE

‘It was a most surprising thing, to see those Streets, which were usually so thronged, now grown desolate’

In 1665 the Great Plague swept through London, claiming nearly 100,000 lives. In A Journal, written nearly sixty years later, Defoe vividly chronicled the progress of the epidemic. We follow his fictional narrator through a city transformed: the streets and alleyways deserted; the houses of death with crosses daubed on their doors; the dead-carts on their way to the pits. And he recounts the horrifying stories of the citizens he encounters, as fear, isolation and hysteria take hold. A Journal is both a fascinating historical document and a supreme work of imaginative reconstruction.

This edition contains a new introduction, an appendix on the Plague, a topographical index and maps of contemporary London, and reproduces Anthony Burgess’s original introduction.

‘The most reliable and comprehensive account of the Great Plague that we possess’ Anthony Burgess

‘Within the texture of Defoe’s prose London becomes a living and suffering being’ Peter Ackroyd

CHRONICLES OF THE CANONGATE WALTER SCOTT

The Highland Widow / The Two Drovers / The Surgeon's Daughter

'Go, disown the royal Stuart, for whom your father, and his fathers, and your mother's fathers, have crimsoned many a field with their blood'

Ranging from the wilds of the Scottish Highlands to the dusty streets of Madras, these three masterly stories all show lives transformed – and, in some cases, destroyed – by worlds and cultures in conflict. In 'The Highland Widow', a mother is devastated when her son announces his intention to join the British army to fight in America, and uses all her cunning to keep him at home. 'The Two Drovers' is a tale of a prophecy fulfilled in which the Englishman Harry Wakefield is set against his Scottish friend Robin Oid in a destructive and ultimately tragic quarrel. 'The Surgeon's Daughter' follows the fortunes of three young Scots who attempt to settle in India during the early years of the British Empire.

Based on the authoritative Edinburgh edition, which follows the text of the Scott collection in its original form, this edition features a new introduction by Claire Lamont. It also includes a chronology of Scott's life and works, textual and historical notes and a glossary.

THE LIFE AND OPINIONS OF TRISTRAM SHANDY, GENTLEMAN LAURENCE STERNE

‘L—d! said my mother, what is all this story about? –
A COCK and a BULL, said Yorick – and one of the best of its kind I ever heard’

Laurence Sterne’s great masterpiece of bawdy humour and rich satire defies any attempt to categorize it. Part novel, part digression, its gloriously disordered narrative interweaves the birth and life of the unfortunate ‘hero’ Tristram Shandy, the eccentric philosophy of his father Walter, the amours and military obsessions of Uncle Toby, and a host of other characters, including Dr Slop, Corporal Trim and the parson Yorick. A joyful celebration of the endless possibilities of the art of fiction, Tristram Shandy is also a wry demonstration of its limitations.

The text and notes of this volume are based on the acclaimed Florida Edition, with a critical introduction by Melvyn New and Christopher Ricks’s introductory essay from the first Penguin Classics edition of the novel.

‘The excellent Florida Tristram Shandy . . . will be the definitive edition’
Studies in English Literature

‘The book that I would never tire of . . . Sterne was about 250 years ahead of his time’ Roy Porter

TRAVELS WITH A DONKEY AND THE AMATEUR EMIGRANT ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON

‘I was not only travelling out of my country in latitude and longitude, but out of myself in diet, associates, and consideration’

In 1878, Robert Louis Stevenson escaped from his numerous troubles – poor health, tormented love, inadequate funds – by embarking on a journey through the Cévennes in France, accompanied by Modestine, a rather single-minded donkey. The notebook Stevenson kept during this time became Travels with a Donkey, a highly entertaining account of the French people and their country. The Amateur Emigrant is a vivid journal of his travels to and in America – describing the crowded weeks in steerage with the poor and sick, as well as stowaways – and the train journey he took across the country. Filled with sharp-eyed observations, this work brilliantly conveys Stevenson’s perceptions of America and the Americans. Together, these two pieces are fascinating examples of nineteenth-century travel writing, revealing as much about the traveller as the places he travels to.

Christopher MacLachlan’s introduction places the works in their biographical and literary context. This edition also includes pieces from Stevenson’s original notebooks, a chronology, further reading, notes and maps of the journeys.

He just wanted a decent book to read ...

Not too much to ask, is it? It was in 1935 when Allen Lane, Managing Director of Bodley Head Publishers, stood on a platform at Exeter railway station looking for something good to read on his journey back to London. His choice was limited to popular magazines and poor-quality paperbacks – the same choice faced every day by the vast majority of readers, few of whom could afford hardbacks. Lane's disappointment and subsequent anger at the range of books generally available led him to found a company – and change the world.

'We believed in the existence in this country of a vast reading public for intelligent books at a low price, and staked everything on it'

Sir Allen Lane, 1902–1970, founder of Penguin Books

The quality paperback had arrived – and not just in bookshops. Lane was adamant that his Penguins should appear in chain stores and tobacconists, and should cost no more than a packet of cigarettes.

Reading habits (and cigarette prices) have changed since 1935, but Penguin still believes in publishing the best books for everybody to enjoy. We still believe that good design costs no more than bad design, and we still believe that quality books published passionately and responsibly make the world a better place.

So wherever you see the little bird – whether it's on a piece of prize-winning literary fiction or a celebrity autobiography, political tour de force or historical masterpiece, a serial-killer thriller, reference book, world classic or a piece of pure escapism – you can bet that it represents the very best that the genre has to offer.

*'When I took the first survey of my undertaking,
I found our speech copious without order,
and energetick without rules'*

Dr Johnson's Dictionary of the English Language (1755) was the most influential and idiosyncratic lexicon ever written. This is an anthology of 4,000 familiar, unusual and sometimes bizarre entries from it, covering subjects from fashion to food, philosophy to science. Replete with colourful definitions and quotations from Shakespeare to Milton, the selection fully conveys Johnson's passion for his native tongue – whether formal or 'low', deriving from Staffordshire or Scotland – and brings alive the innovations, fads and crazes of his day, from 'periwig' to 'tea'. It also shows how distinctive eighteenth-century vocabulary was – when, for example, a 'merrythought' was a wishbone – yet how it overlaps with ours in unexpected ways.

Renowned linguist David Crystal has assembled a broad range of the most historically fascinating, representative and entertaining dictionary entries, given in full with original spelling. This edition also includes an introduction discussing the work's significance, a biographical essay on Johnson, his Plan and Preface for the original Dictionary, James Boswell's account of the project, and notes.
