It was this king, who, in the ninth year of his reign, first gave by charter to the city of London, the right of electing annually a mayor out of its own body, an office which was till now held for life. He gave the city also power to elect and remove its sheriffs at pleasure, and its common councilmen annually. London bridge was finished in this reign: The former bridge was of wood. Maud the empress was the first that built a stone bridge in England.

O ye! whom Science chose to guide
Her unpolluted stream along,
Adorn with flowers its cultur'd side,
And to its taste allure the young:
O say, what language can reveal
Th' exalted pleasures you must feel,
When, fir'd by you, the youthful breast
Disdains to court inglorious rest.
And to the world's admiring gaze,
Each precept into action brought,
In full reality displays
The liberal maxims you have taught!

Antiquity, like every other quality that attracts the notice of mankind, has undoubtedly votaries that reverence it, not from reason, but from prejudice. Some seem to admire indiscriminately whatever has been long preserved, without considering that time has sometimes co-operated with chance; all perhaps are more willing to honour past than present excellence; and the mind contemplates genius through the shades of age, as the eye surveys the sun through artificial opacity. The great contention of criticism is to find the faults of the moderns, and the beauties of the ancients. While an author is yet living, we estimate his powers by his worst performance; and when he is dead, we rate them by his best.

Mr. Dempster having endeavoured to maintain that intrinsic excellence ought to make the only distinction amongst mankind. JOHNSON: "Why, Sir, mankind have found that this cannot be. How shall we determine the proportion of intrinsic merit? Were all distinctions abolished, the strongest would not long acquiesce, but would endeavour to obtain a superiority by their bodily strength. But, Sir, mankind have settled it upon a plain invariable principle. A man is born to hereditary rank; or, his being appointed to certain offices, gives him a certain rank. Were we all upon an equality, we should have no other enjoyment than mere animal pleasure."

Fir'd at first sight with what the Muse imparts,
In fearless youth we tempt the heights of Arts,
While from the bounded level of our mind,
Short views we take, nor see the lengths behind;
But more advanc'd, behold with strange surprize
New distant scenes of endless science rise!
So pleas'd at first, the tow'ring Alps we try,
Mount o'er the vales, and seem to tread the sky
Th' eternal snows appear already past,
And the first clouds and mountains seem the last:
But, those attain'd, we tremble to survey
The growing labours of the lengthen'd way,
Th' increasing prospect tires our wand'ring eyes,
Hills peep o'er hills, and Alps on Alps arise!

The Constituency as settled by the Reform Bill is complicated and unsatisfactory. Corruption and intimidation still too much influence the motley mass of Freeholders, Copyholders, Leaseholders, Tenants at Will, Householders, Liverymen, Freemen, Trustees, Shareholders, &c. to which the political destinies of the nation are confided. The Ballot, so ably proposed by the Hon. Member for London, and resisted by such strength of numbers and weakness of argument in the House of Commons, would unquestionably be conducive to purity of Election, combined with an arrangement which would exclude from the suffrage all who could not reasonably be expected to give an intelligent and disinterested open vote. Republican privileges and institutions can alone be properly exercised and administered by those who possess Republican virtue.

The Roman world was deeply interested in the education of its master. A regular course of study and exercise was judiciously instituted; of the military exercise of riding, and shooting with the bow; of the liberal studies of grammar, rhetoric, and philosophy: the most skilful masters of the East ambitiously solicited the attention of their royal pupil; and several noble youths were introduced into the palace, to animate his diligence by the emulation of friendship. Pulcheria alone discharged the important task of instructing her brother in the arts of government; but her precepts may countenance some suspicion of the extent of her capacity, or of the purity of her intentions. She taught him to maintain a grave and majestic deportment; to walk, to hold his robes, to seat himself on his throne, in a manner worthy of a great prince; to abstain from laughter; to listen with condescension; to return suitable answers; to assume, by turns, a serious or a placid countenance; in a word, to represent with grace and dignity the external figure of a Roman emperor.

Shakspeare is above all writers, at least above all modern writers, the poet of nature; the poet that holds up to his readers a faithful mirror of manners and of life. His characters are not modified by the customs of particular places, unpractised by the rest of the world; by the peculiarities of studies or professions, which can operate but upon small numbers; or by the accidents of transient fashions or temporary opinions: they are the genuine progeny of common humanity, such as the world will always supply, and observation will always find. His persons act and speak by the influence of those general passions and principles by which all minds are agitated, and the whole system of life is continued in motion. In the writings of other poets a character is too often an individual; in those of Shakspeare it is commonly a species. It is from this wide extension of design so much instruction is derived. It is this which fills the plays of Shakspeare with practical axioms and domestic wisdom.

At two o'clock precisely her Majesty, having been robed, entered the house, preceded by the heralds and officers of state, accompanied by the Duchess of Kent, and attended by the Duchess of Sunderland, mistress of the robes, and Lady Barham, lady in waiting, the Master of the Horse, the Treasurer, and other members of her household. Her Majesty, who appeared in excellent health, wore a white satin gown, over which was a splendid crimson velvet robe trimmed with gold lace. On her head was a tiara of diamonds; she also wore a diamond necklace and earrings, and on her arm the order of the Garter. When her Majesty took her seat on the throne she was supported on the right by the Earl of Shaftesbury, holding the cap of maintenance, the Lord Chancellor, Earl Marshal (the Duke of Norfolk), and the Duke of Somerset, bearing the crown upon a cushion; and on the left by Lord Melbourne, holding the sword of state, the lady in waiting, and the members of the household. Behind the throne stood the Duchess of Kent and the Mistress of the Robes, and at the foot the Dukes of Sussex and Cambridge.

The heroic exploit of the gallant NAPIER has filled with exultation and enthusiasm all the partisans of DONNA MARIA the legitimate Sovereign of Portugal and the Miguelites with astonishment and dismay. Unparalleled in bravery and audacity, this achievement stands alone in the annals of Naval History. Even the heroic NELSON could not boast of having captured a ship of the line with a frigate, nor will the long and glorious annals of our maritime conflict with the French Republic and the Empire of NAPOLEON afford a parallel. May the speedy restoration of order, the downfall of usurpation and the recompense of the patriotic and paternal cares of DON PEDRO result from the valour of our illustrious countryman and his ever memorable companions in arms! Let us hope that the reign of Superstition and Tyranny will be speedily annihilated and the Standard of Liberty float on the banks of the Tagus as triumphantly as on those of the Seine and the Thames.

There are two considerations, chiefly, to be met with in books of philosophy, from which any important effect is to be expected, and that because these considerations are drawn from common life, and occur upon the most superficial view of human affairs. When we reflect on the shortness and uncertainty of life, how despicable seem all our pursuits of happiness? And even, if we would extend our concern beyond our own life, how frivolous appear our most enlarged and most generous projects; when we consider the incessant changes and revolutions of human affairs, by which laws and learning, books and government are hurried away by time, as by a rapid stream, and are lost in the immense ocean of matter? Such a reflection certainly tends to mortify all our passions: but does it not thereby counterwork the artifice of nature, who has happily deceived us into an opinion, that human life is of some importance? And may not such a reflection be employed with success by voluptuous reasoners, in order to lead us, from the paths of action and virtue, into the flowery fields of indolence and pleasure.

Quousque tandem abutere, Catilina, patientia nostra? quamdiu nos etiam furor iste tuus eludet? quem ad finem sese effrenata jactabit audacia? nihilne te nocturnum præsidium palatii, nihil urbis vigiliæ, nihil timor populi, nihil consensus bonorum omnium, nihil hic munitissimus habendi senatus locus, nihil horum ora vultusque moverunt? patere tua consilia non sentis? constrictam jam omnium horum conscientia teneri conjurationem tuam non vides? quid proxima, quid superiore nocte egeris, ubi fueris, quos convocaveris, quid consilii ceperis, quem nostrum ignorare arbitraris? It had been observed by the ancients, that all the arts and sciences arose among free nations; and that the Persians and Egyptians, notwithstanding all their ease, opulence, and luxury, made but faint efforts towards those finer pleasures which were carried to such perfection by the Greeks, amidst continual wars, attended with poverty and the greatest simplicity of life and manners. It had also been observed, that as soon as the Greeks lost their liberty, though they increased mightily in riches by the means of the conquest of Alexander, yet the arts, from that moment, declined among them, and have never since been able to raise their head in that climate. Learning was transplanted to Rome, the only free nation at that time in the universe; and, having met with so favourable a soil, it made prodigious shoots for above a century, till the decay of liberty produced also a decay of letters and spread a total barbarism over the world. From these two experiments, of which each was double in its kind, and shewed the fall of learning in despotic governments, as well as its rise in popular ones, Longinus thought himself sufficiently justified in asserting, that the arts and sciences could never flourish but in a free government.

ON MINION.

After I had observed these things, I turned my eye towards the multitudes who were climbing the steep ascent, and observed amongst them a youth of a lively look, a piercing eye, and something fiery and irregular in all his motions. His name was Genius. He darted like an eagle up the mountain, and left his companions gazing after him with envy and admiration: but his progress was unequal and interrupted by a thousand caprices. When Pleasure warbled in the valley he mingled in her train. When Pride beckoned towards the precipice he ventured to the tottering edge. He delighted in devious and untried paths; and made so many excursions from the road, that his feeble companions often outstripped him. I observed that the muses beheld him with partiality; but Truth often frowned, and turned aside her face. While Genius was thus wasting his strength in eccentric flights, I saw a person of a very different appearance, named Application. He crept along at a slow and unremitting pace, his eyes fixed on the top of the mountain, patiently removing every stone that obstructed his way, till he saw most of those below him who had at first derided his slow and toilsome progress. Indeed there were few who ascended the hill with equal and uninterrupted steadiness; for, besides the difficulties of the way, they were continually solicited to turn aside by a numerous crowd of Appetites, Passions, and Pleasures, whose importunity, when they had once complied with, they became less and less able to resist; and though they often returned to the path, the asperities of the road were more severely felt, the hill appeared more steep and rugged, the fruits which were wholesome and refreshing seemed harsh and ill tasted, their sight grew dim, and their feet tripped at every little obstruction.

When the gay sun first breaks the shades of night,
 And strikes the distant eastern hills with light,
 Colour returns, the plains their livery wear,
 And a bright verdure clothes the smiling year;
 The blooming flowers with opening beauties glow:
 And grazing flocks their milky fleeces show;
 The barren cliffs with chalky fronts arise,
 And a pure azure arches over the skies.
 But when the gloomy reign of Night returns,
 Stript of her fading pride all Nature mourns:
 The trees no more their wonted verdure boast;
 But weep in dewy tears their beauty lost:
 No distant landscapes draw our curious eyes;
 Wrapt in Night's robe the whole creation lies.
 Yet still ev'n now, while darkness clothes the land,
 We view the traces of th' Almighty hand.
 Millions of stars in Heaven's wide vault appear,
 And with new glories hangs the boundless sphere;
 The silver moon her western couch forsakes,
 And o'er the skies her nightly circle makes;
 Her solid globe beats back the sunny rays,
 And to the world her borrow'd light repays.

CHAP. I.

1 The creation of heaven and earth, &c. 20 Of man in the image of God. 28 The appointment of food.

IN the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

3 And the earth was without form, and void, and darkness was upon the face of the deep: and the Spirit of God moved upon the face of the waters.

4 And God said, Let there be light: and there was light.

5 And God saw the light, that it was good: and God divided the light from the darkness.

6 And God called the light Day, and the darkness he called Night: and the evening and the morning were the first day.

7 And God said, Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters.

8 And God made the firmament, and divided the waters which were under the firmament, from the waters which were above the firmament: and it was so.

9 And God called the firmament Heaven: and the evening and the morning were the second day.

10 And God said, Let the waters under the heaven be gathered together unto one place, and let the dry land appear: and it was so.

11 And God called the dry land Earth, and the gathering together of the waters called he Seas: and God saw that it was good.

12 And God said, Let the earth bring forth grass, the herb yielding seed, and the fruit-tree yielding fruit after his kind, whose seed is in itself, upon the earth: and it was so.

13 And the earth brought forth grass, and the herb yielding seed after his kind, and the tree yielding fruit, whose seed was in itself, after his kind: and God saw that it was good.

14 And the evening and the morning were the third day.

THE first Act for erecting Turnpikes was passed in 1662. The stations for them at that time being Wadesmill, Caxton, and Stilton. The general and permanent improvement of Roads did not ensue till the reign of George II, and was opposed by the ignorant and prejudiced. Nocturnal meetings of the misguided peasantry for the destruction of Toll-Bars, were, at this period, frequently punished by the arm of the Law.

On Friday afternoon, at the Zoological Gardens, Regent's Park, a lady was holding a biscuit to the elephant from the top of her reticule, when the animal, mistaking the extent of the lady's generosity, seized the reticule with his trunk, and conveyed it with its contents, consisting of a £10 note, some loose money, and a bunch of keys, into his stomach, to the dismay of the lady and amusement of the bystanders.

Great Primer Script, No. 2.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Permit me to solicit the honour of your votes and interest at the approaching election for the office of President to your estimable and useful Association. My claim to your notice is founded on age, long practice in the usages, customs and routine of the Society, ardent wishes for its successful continuance, and, I hope I shall be allowed to add, a disinterested desire to promote its welfare and diffuse the objects of its foundation by my humble efforts. United in the cause of benevolence, virtue and religion, long may our noble and patriotic establishment continue to prosper. No selfish, vain, or ostentatious motive prompts me to request your support. The favour of your suffrages and my elevation to the chair will be flattering to my feelings, but want of success will not diminish my ardour for the glorious cause in which we are all embarked.

I remain, with profound respect,

Ladies and Gentlemen,

Your most obedient and devoted

Charles Mandeville.
