There is something oddly attractive about letterforms. The characters of an alphabet are invariably based on a collective idea of how each letter should look; they must be, in order to be recognized. And yet the variations are endless. There is a world of possibility between the bland functionality of a no-nonsense sans-serif typeface and the funky, provocative what-letter-am-I esthetics of an elaborate graffiti piece. But for the designer the challenge remains the same: devising shapes that, regardless of whatever message or mystery is embedded in the form itself, exist to be read. It is probably this tension between constraints and freedom that attracts more and more young designers to letters: in an age that lacks a dominant style or a philosophy of form, in a period in which literally everything (at least on a visual level) seems to be possible and permitted, making things that need to resemble a shared idea of how they should look at least offers something to hold on to. And it offers a different kind of fun as well—a game with some well-established rules that designers can choose to break at their own risk.

Type and typography have become hugely popular: as a subject in design schools, as something to share in online forums and as a product to sell or buy. Typographic products come in many guises—silkscreened posters, T-shirts, letter sculptures, calendars and much more. These are all finished artifacts, commodities to use or put on a shelf.

Fonts—digital typefaces—are something different. They are half-products, building blocks to be used to make something bigger. Like the good old dry transfer sheets from companies such as Letraset, fonts aren't just bought by professional designers and printers; there is a growing number of "civilian" computer users who also want their texts to look special. They have tens of thousands of typefaces to choose from, supplied by at least a thousand large and small type foundries worldwide. MyFonts alone acts as a retail platform for over 800 companies that design, produce and sell type. This vast typographic landscape is not easy to navigate. Students and budding designers—let alone non-professional users—are often overwhelmed by the number of internet addresses where fonts can be seen and bought. This book is aimed at the people who want to know more about fonts and the companies that make them.

Type culture

An interesting rhythm can be perceived in the development of audiovisual culture. Each medium or discipline seems to go through periods in which it is more relevant than others; then it takes a back seat again. Rock music and film took center stage in the sixties; theater in the seventies; product and furniture design in the eighties. Today, type design and lettering seem to have a privileged position. Type is the subject of hundreds of publications each year, it is a favorite among design students and is a theme of ever more conferences and seminars. It is not the first time this has happened. Two decades ago, type design made a sudden jump into prominence. What had, up to then, been a rather obscure occupation practised by a small elite, suddenly became a kind of popular art form. Affordable tools for making letterforms and producing fonts became available to anyone owning a computer, and young designers began exploring the peculiarities of these digital tools. Many post-modernist processes and strategies that were already common practice in other forms of art and design were adapted to type and typography: sampling and appropriation, layering and montage, ornament and exuberance, destruction and deconstruction. And many designers wanted to join in the fun. The number of fonts available went from hundreds to thousands in just a few years and a great many of the new fonts were experimental.

But that was then — the early 1990s — and this is now. The last few years have seen a renewed and rather frantic interest in all things typographic. However, there are some huge differences, and most of these are related to the web. In social networks, new ideas travel fast and are seen by many more people than any printed design magazine or book ever reached. Curiously, this doesn't imply that trends are more short-lived — visual ideas often stay online for a surprisingly long time and get forwarded and rediscovered for several years. They are discussed on several levels, from uncritical praise to thoughtful analysis, and inspire clueless amateurs as well as seasoned specialists. In type design, this means that trends are more visible than ever before, they are picked up by more people and they are more consciously processed — and some ideas are endlessly recycled.

Besides the above-mentioned post-modern, stylistic strategies, which have proved amazingly persistent, a different set of typographic concepts has emerged, or re-emerged. After a wild phase when everything had to be tried out, young type designers are now showing a renewed interest in functionality, technical sophistication and typographic tradition. Specialized type design courses fuel a movement that aims to innovate type design in the digital age while respecting time-honored criteria of conceptual and technical exactingness.

But possibly the most far-reaching change is on the distribution side. Just fifteen years ago, fonts were still quite literally a mail order product: they were ordered by telephone or e-mail, and supplied on diskettes or locked CD-ROMs from which single fonts could be unlocked using a code that the supplier would fax to the user. In other words, type designers would need a sound infrastructure to get their fonts out into the world. Some young visionaries ventured out on their own, but most type designers chose to contribute to one or more of the larger type libraries, from long-established companies such as Linotype to brand-new collections like FontFont or T26. All foundries depended largely on distributors such as the FontShop network to reach their retail customer base.

All of this has changed very quickly over the last decade under the influence of the web and its social networks. Hundreds of designers who published their earliest fonts with one of the major libraries ventured out on their own. Many of the newly-established “foundries” are one- or two-person companies, and offer just a small collection. Others have grown to include dozens or even hundreds of typeface families by several designers.

From founts to fonts

People sometimes ask why foundries are called foundries (that is the default term in English; in other languages, such as German and Dutch, the commonly used term can be translated as “type publishers”). Well, sometimes old names get carried over to new technologies. There are many examples of this. Judged solely by its name, a smart phone would be a thing for sound — in reality, of course, it is as much a thing for seeing.

Back in the days of metal type, founding was what foundries did. Type was made from a fluid mix of lead and other metals, either by hand or, after the introduction of Linotype and Monotype typecasting machines in the 1890s, mechanically. What the foundry produced was, in the original British spelling, founts: melted things. A fount was a complete set of glyphs, enough of each one to set a substantial piece of text, in one single size.

In the digital age, people use font, in the American spelling, to mean several different things. Sometimes it is taken to refer to a complete type family (such as Times New Roman, aka Times, the typeface you are reading now), sometimes it is used for just one weight, like Times Bold Italic. The correct way is to use the word typeface to designate the general design, and type family for all the varieties taken together. Weight or style are both good words to describe a specific variant of the typeface (e.g. Times Bold Italic), and font for the smallest entity that you can actually buy. In the age of the OpenType format, fonts are much larger than they used to be; a single font may contain small caps, special ligatures, diacritics (accents) for many languages, multiple numeral sets, and many more things for which one had to buy separate fonts ten years ago.

Before the advent of desktop typography, individual designers did not buy fonts at all. Until the mid to late 1980s, fonts were exclusively sold to specialized printing and typesetting companies that were equipped with one or more specific composition systems; a new font family represented a considerable investment. What a designer bought from the typesetting company was ready-made pieces of text on film or proofing paper. Depending on the total order, the price of a single page of typeset text could be in the same range as one font may cost today (say, 20–50 dollars or euros). For headlines, the alternative was to use dry transfer sheets from companies like Letraset or Mecanorma, which allowed a designer to “set” words by rubbing down the single letters from a thin plastic sheet. And of course, until well into the 1980s designers drew their own lettering — either freehand or geometrically constructed with a ruler and compass. Needless to say, non-professionals seldom ordered typeset text. Creative individuals who wanted to prepare a newsletter, invitation or leaflet resorted to dry transfer sheets, hand-drawn lettering and text from their home typewriter.

All this changed fast from 1990 onwards. Professional typesetting companies all but disappeared over the course of a decade. Those that survived, including the in-house design and typesetting departments of printing companies, were forced to write off their expensive high-end equipment and replace it with desktop computers (usually Apple Macs). These took up less space, were more cost-effective, were easier to update, and did not require much training. Buying new and fashionable fonts now cost a fraction of what platform-specific fonts had cost before, and prices kept dropping. The same equipment and fonts now became accessible to designers and regular folk alike. By the end of the 1990s, every new computer came with dozens of system fonts — as many different typefaces as a small typesetting or printing firm would have had on offer in the 1950s, or more.

With that in mind, it is fascinating to see how many non-designers now feel the urge (and the courage) to venture beyond the set of standard fonts that come with their computer system and buy some fonts of their own. Managers of small companies, scrapbookers, amateur designers of leaflets and invitations: the customer base for type has broadened in a way that until recently no type designer ever imagined. Among young designers and graphic design students, there is now also a growing awareness of type design as a discipline; not only do many of them want to try their hand at drawing letterforms, they also are more aware that fonts are products that represent a significant investment of time and talent, and are therefore worth paying for.

Paying for fonts

Which brings us to the subject of money: price policies, copyrights and the question of whether fonts are worth paying for at all.

To begin with the last question: there are several possible answers to this, and a couple of them are plain wrong. One of those is the pirates’ answer. Most fonts (like most songs, and many films) can be found online for free, and they are put out there by two kinds of people. On the one hand there are unethical businessmen who make money from the advertising on their sites; on the other, people who think of themselves as idealists and upload digital products because they are convinced that everything, or at least everything digital, should be free. A common assumption — which could be called the Robin Hood fallacy — is that fonts come from large anonymous companies that are already rich enough as it is. As this book shows, nothing could be further from the truth.

Most type designers and owners of so-called “microfoundries” are self-employed, and to them font sales represent an essential source of income. When a graphic designer or a fan of nice type decides to copy those fonts illegally, this implies a sincere “screw you” to the type designer. That’s not very fair. If everyone did the same there soon there would soon cease to be new fonts, or necessary updates.

The prices of digital fonts range from a few dollars to about €300 per weight, but make no mistake: compared to the cost of strips of text in the time of lead or photo-typesetting, prices are lower than ever.

Licenses and the EULA

Strictly speaking, fonts are not bought; what is acquired is a license to use them. In this sense fonts do not differ much from other types of software. The user acquires the right to adopt the fonts within well-defined restrictions. While typefaces that come with an operating system or program are not paid for separately, they too are commercial fonts that cannot be owned but for which the buyer receives a “permission to use.”

The rules for what the user can and cannot do with the fonts are laid down in the End User License Agreement (EULA). Some of these conditions vary from one foundry to the next. For instance, the number of computers that fonts may be installed on can vary, and so may the rules for embedding fonts in PDFs or websites. Special authorization is usually required for modifying fonts — like adding a character, for example. An organization that plans to use fonts on a larger number of computers needs a group license.

Most EULAs forbid “lending” fonts to third parties. Copying a font as part of a design job or sharing a license with fellow freelancers is, strictly speaking, illegal. Many professionals have a surprisingly relaxed attitude about these rules. Even large publishers have been known to give copies of the fonts used in books to their partners in international coproductions. Should they be caught (e.g. in a Business Software Alliance audit), then this might result in costly legal proceedings.

Until recently, EULAs were invariably worded in obscure legalese; today, more and more foundries strive to make these agreements understandable to users without the need to consult a lawyer. Not surprisingly, it is often small and young companies that take the lead in humanizing the license agreement.

— Types of type foundries —

Type foundries operate in many different ways. What exactly goes on behind the scenes will make little difference to casual users who acquire fonts through a distributor’s web shop. But for those who have more than a passing interest in type and type design, it may be useful to gain some insight into the various models that exist.

State of independence

The type world is a bit like the music world in that a large part of the most popular fonts are produced by a small number of “majors” who own a series of subsidiaries and are often characterized by slow decision-making and a strong link to the past. And just like in the music world, the “indies” are smaller companies that have a well-defined program and are often more flexible and forward-thinking. That, however, is more or less where the parallel stops. The music world is full of labels that have their own management or A&R staff but still have to report to the mother company; this label model hardly exists in the typographic world. Virtually all smaller foundries are really independent and only rely on larger companies for their distribution; and some foundries with an influential program and a large collection of fonts (such as FSI/Font Shop or Font Bureau) are run by a surprisingly small staff and are, for all intents and purposes, independent.

Through a series of successive acquisitions, much of what can be called “major” in font production has ended up in the hands of one company — Monotype Imaging. Apart from its own type library, which goes back to the early 1900s, Monotype now owns some of the most significant typographic companies of the past century, notably Linotype and ITC, and have also absorbed the type division of Agfa. More recently, Monotype acquired (or more precisely, bought back) Ascender, a company most widely known as the vendor of Microsoft’s system fonts and as a bunch of extremely capable technicians.

The quick transitions from one technology to the next during the 20th century (metal > photocomposition > digital systems > desktop) left many victims among historical type foundries. Apart from Monotype and Linotype, there are only a few companies that survived or were taken into the digital age by new owners. Neufville Digital in Barcelona inherited parts of the renowned German Bauer foundry; Berthold Types took the heritage of the Berlin Berthold foundry to Chicago. However, these companies that once employed hundreds and made millions manufacturing and selling huge machines (and to whom the fonts were a bit like machine parts), are now small offices run by a handful of people. Strictly speaking they are independent, but not necessarily “indies” as innovation is to be found elsewhere.

So in the digital age, it is not so easy to define “large” and “small” companies. Perceived size has become independent of the number of employees, or even the number of products. Internet-based companies, which is what most type foundries are today, can have a huge impact as well as an extensive, influential catalog of products and still be run by just two people. Producing and selling retail type may be the only thing that a company does; but in other cases, retail fonts may be the tip of the iceberg and most of a company’s income is made from different sources: custom fonts, software development, lettering or design work, and more.

The model of the independent foundry was pioneered by a few, mostly American companies in the early to mid-1980s. Arguably the first independent company — i.e. with no links to a historical type foundry — to specialize in digital type was Bitstream, established in 1981 by Matthew Carter and Mike Parker after having left Linotype, taking with them most of that company’s type design division (including David Berlow, who later co-founded the Font Bureau). Bitstream began doing what they thought Linotype should have been doing: developing fonts for the new digital hardware that was coming on the market (all of this is pre-standardization: each system came with its own specs and fonts). The Linotype management had refused to follow Carter’s and Parker’s reasoning that there was money to be made from producing type for third parties: as Linotype was still primarily a manufacturer of typesetting equipment, they did not see the point of selling fonts to competitors.

While Bitstream had its roots in established type production and was very much part of the industry, Emigre Graphics in California entered the market from left field — two graduates from Europe who started out editing, designing and publishing what was initially a (sub-)cultural magazine for outsiders and didn't become a platform for typographic theory until a few years later. After they began selling the fonts designed for Emigre magazine, they gradually became the model par excellence of the fiercely autonomous, designer-run foundry, inviting dozens of other designers over the years while staying true to a clear yet flexible vision of innovative typography.

Emigre's example inspired and empowered many designers who, from around 1990 onwards, began creating their own fonts. Many submitted their typefaces to Emigre or to one of the other emerging type libraries such as FontFont/FSI, or chose to go with established companies like Linotype, Berthold or software manufacturer Adobe. But several designers felt that they, like Emigre, would benefit from total independence and set up their own foundry. Needless to say, the emergence of the internet as a medium for promoting and selling type in the mid-1990s helped immensely. New platforms for retail, both online and off, helped young foundries reach an audience. We'll talk more about these distribution channels later.

Foundry models

Today, a type foundry can be many things. Some are created as spin-offs of graphic design studios, selling typefaces that were originally developed as part of larger design projects (identities, magazine and book designs, signage, etc). This book profiles several foundries in this category, many of them having entered the market only recently. To mention just a few, A2-Type from London, André Baldinger from Paris, Colophon from Brighton, Optimo from Geneva and Playtype from Copenhagen are cases in point.

There is a small number of graphic designers who began marketing their own fonts in the 1990s and have managed to pursue double careers to date. Jonathan Barnbrook (VirusFonts) and Rian Hughes (Device) are two prominent British designers who, apart from running successful studios for design and illustration, release new typefaces on a regular basis (as well as publishing books and writing articles). Both have committed to remaining small: although internationally in demand, they never worked with more than a couple of assistants and interns.

To grow or not to grow can be a dilemma for owners of foundries and type design studios once their work becomes successful. For studios whose work depends largely on the vision and talent of one person, hiring additional staff can be the best way for the principal to keep focusing on concepts and design, while assistants complete character sets, design additional weights, handle kerning and do other kinds of production work. Especially in the realm of text fonts, extensive typeface families are now the norm; and even though computer-enhanced methods like interpolation can help automate part of the process, creating large families requires attention to thousands of details, and hence often involves teamwork. Among the studios centered around a single designer but working with several assistants are LucasFonts in Berlin and Darden Studio in Brooklyn. Similarly, Hoefler & Frere-Jones in New York is headed by two renowned designers who have several very competent but largely anonymous designers on staff.

Many small companies like these are first and foremost type development studios, often working for clients in the corporate and editorial field. In London, both Fontsmith and Dalton Maag are examples of studios employing a number of designers, and specializing in bespoke fonts made directly for clients or for communications agencies, which can become retail fonts once the exclusivity period is over.

One- and two-person foundries can also decide to grow in a different way — by expanding their type libraries beyond the output of the founders and publishing work by other type designers as well. During the past few years, several microfoundries have actively sought to expand their collection of personal fonts into a library of a wider scope. TypeTogether, the foundry set up by University of Reading graduates Veronika Burian (Prague) and José Scaglione (Rosario, Argentina) has rapidly developed into one of the type world's most versatile and fastest-growing collections, even including work by Dutch veteran (and Reading teacher) Gerard Unger. Peter Biľák's Typotheque has also taken in work by a growing number of freelance designers, as has OurType, the foundry established to market Fred Smeijers' typefaces. P22 in Buffalo, New York, is a special case. Having originated in Richard Kegler's personal art type projects, it has organically grown into a conglomerate of several sub-foundries or labels, including IHOF (International House of Fonts), Lanston Type and the Rimmer Type Foundry.

However, as many of the profiles in this book will show, it is very well possible not to grow and still be successful: the typographic world is open to many models and with a product as immaterial and easy to distribute as digital type, the possibilities are endless.

Where to shop for fonts

The internet has become the default place to find and buy fonts. Several large type manufacturers have moved into the retail arena and set up their own online supermarkets, selling downloadable fonts from hundreds of foundries. A growing number of smaller foundries now have their own online store, while continuing to sell through larger or smaller distributors, with many offering their type through multiple vendors. Where a user decides to shop for fonts is a question of personal preference and habit.

Many newcomers to the typographic world are overwhelmed by the multiplicity of choices, and the following overview may help both users and aspiring type designers to get a general overview of the font retail landscape.

Large shops and small shops

The obvious place to go when shopping for fonts is to one of the large online distributors, who represent dozens if not hundreds of foundries. Some foundries, however, prefer not to work with outside distributors. These are, for the most part, small companies offering an exclusive collection of typefaces which they sell to the customers directly. Some of these are briefly described at the bottom of this article.

Discerning customers may find the offer of supermarket distributors such as MyFonts or Fonts.com a little overwhelming and inconsistent in quality, and opt for a boutique distributor that carries a more selective, scrupulously-monitored collection. For those who want to be able to buy a superbly drawn original font with their eyes closed, a boutique distributor like Veer or YouWorkForThem, or a small collection like that curated and sold by TypeTrust may be a better option. In between these extremes is FontShop, which offers a large but hand-picked selection of foundries and designers.

What customers don't always realize is that a font distributor (just like Amazon.com or other online shops) sells products made by other companies. It is the foundries themselves that control the quality of the fonts, which glyphs (characters and other signs) the fonts contain and what conditions of use are allowed in the EULA (the End-User Licensing Agreement, a sort of contract that governs the use of software). When a customer complains, most distributors can only transmit the complaint to the foundry, and in the worst case decide to give a refund, and discontinue the faulty font; they are not in a position to repair or alter it. For those font buyers who have special requirements or who want to use the font in special conditions, dealing directly with the foundry may be the better option. This book lists the foundry's own outlet, when available, for each featured foundry. The following is a description of the most popular and/or interesting retail websites for fonts.

MyFonts — myfonts.com

Founded in 2000 as an independent subsidiary of Bitstream, MyFonts is the marketplace where the largest number of independent foundries and labels can be found — around 800 at the time of writing, offering over 60,000 fonts (i.e. individual styles). The collections on offer range from large font libraries produced by Adobe, URW++, Berthold Types and Font Bureau, to one-person microfoundries with just one or two typefaces, and everything in between.

MyFonts is the only retailer that has absolutely no editorial filter: anyone who has produced a font that is technically usable and is not a copy of an existing font is admitted with no further ado. This means that new foundries get a quick start, without having to wait for decisions from type directors or committees. The no-frills approach also implies that fonts are made available with very little delay. A new family can be up and selling within days, where other distributors may need weeks or months. It also means that the quality of the typefaces MyFonts offers varies from mediocre to top-notch.

MyFonts positions itself as a "level playing field" where all fonts and foundries have the same chance of making it, and where promotion is based on a font's commercial success, not the staff's personal preference. Much of the online content, such as font descriptions and designers' biographies, is provided by the foundries and consequently varies heavily in both style and substance.

MyFonts is probably the place where fashions in type design can be most easily identified, through daily updated lists of bestsellers and "hot new fonts," as well as a monthly e-mail newsletter profiling current best sellers. The type designers themselves, when they are commercially inclined, also take their cues from these lists; a successful font is often followed by a string of products in a similar vein that eventually may find their way to other distributors as well.

From the start, MyFonts put an emphasis on ease of use and accessibility, putting in place an intuitive system of keywords or tags that users contribute to. For instance, in addition to searching for a specific typeface or genre (like "copperplate script"), users may instead search for a "wedding" or "invitation" font. MyFonts also developed WhatTheFont, an online application for recognizing typefaces from photos or scans the user can upload.

Monotype Imaging — fonts.com

Monotype's online retail wing Fonts.com represents about 350 type foundries and labels. It claims to have 150,000 "font products" for sale; as the various font formats (TrueType, OpenType) are apparently counted separately, this number cannot be easily compared to MyFonts' total.

Monotype, originally a manufacturer of typesetting equipment with a world-renowned selection of original typefaces, branched out into the wholesale market after the advent of digital desktop publishing. Before the surge of interest in and use of the web in the late 1990s, they were among the suppliers that used a system of locked CD-ROMs holding libraries of thousands of fonts, from which single fonts could be activated using codes that were faxed to the user after payment. At that time, Monotype still relied heavily on retail networks like FontShop, who had customer-friendly local sales offices in place. Having established Fonts.com in the early 2000s, Monotype moved into the online retail market, striking distribution deals with an increasing number of small foundries that may also sell through other channels.

Monotype also began to collaborate with Linotype, their biggest competitor in the hot-metal age. Both companies started selling each others fonts, and the collaboration eventually became a fusion with the already-mentioned acquisition of Linotype by Monotype Imaging in 2006. Both firms have maintained a separate online retail presence to date.

As the result of the 1990s distribution deals between Monotype and FontShop International (FSI), Fonts.com is still one of the very few online distributors that sells fonts from FSI's selectively curated FontFont type library that is otherwise exclusive to the FontShop network. Fonts.com's other advantage over MyFonts is that Fonts.com (as well as Linotype) offers the renowned Monotype and Linotype originals, which MyFonts was forced to discontinue.

In addition, Fonts.com functions as a portal to Monotype Imaging's font services for professional uses, which include the design of bespoke fonts, customization ("localization") for specific language support and platforms, and producing logo fonts.

Linotype — linotype.com

Although the Linotype website is structured differently from Monotype's Fonts.com, its collection of fonts and foundries has become very similar since the merger. While not as heavily populated with designer biographies and foundry presentations as MyFonts, the Linotype website is still quite content-rich. The Font Lounge section includes several sections featuring background information on typographic subjects and specific type designers. Much of this information focuses on Linotype's own font library; independent foundries are not presented on the same level. Linotype markets itself as "the source of the originals" and, in fact, holds the registered trademarks to many of the type world's classics, from Helvetica (the perpetual #1 bestseller) to Caecilia (the default Kindle typeface). This is partly the result of several decades of acquisitions, through which Linotype acquired the rights to many modern classics from now-defunct foundries such as Haas, Stempel, and Deberny & Peignot. Through such acquisitions, Linotype also became home to many modern classics by two of the greatest icons of late-twentieth century type, Hermann Zapf and Adrian Frutiger. Both designers have continued working with Linotype into their eighties, and have produced rigorously updated versions of their best known typefaces in collaboration with the company's Type Director, Akira Kobayashi, a gifted designer in his own right. The Linotype site offers lengthy articles on these designers, as well as articles on single type families, typographic tips and facts by Kobayashi, and more.

FontShop — fontshop.com

FontShop came into being in 1989, when German designer Erik Spiekermann and his wife at the time, Joan Spiekermann, realized there was no designer-oriented, Euro-centered distribution channel for the growing wave of digital typefaces that were being produced. Having established a distribution company based in Berlin, the Spiekermanns found independent partners in several countries, and set up a network of local retailers. This was very useful in pre-web days, when fonts were delivered on physical disks and most orders were taken by telephone or fax, or even over the counter in walk-in shops. Apart from digital fonts by historical foundries like Monotype, Linotype and Berthold, the FontShop network became the first international platform for new, independent foundries including Boston's Font Bureau, California's Emigre, Barcelona's Type-Ø-Tones (which doubled as the Spanish FontShop representative) and pioneering one-person ventures such as Judith Sutcliff's Electric Typographer.

From 1990 onwards FontShop has had its own type library, FontFont, founded by Spiekermann and London designer Neville Brody. FontFont, which spun off into a separate company, FontShop International (FSI), attracted dozens of young designers of cutting-edge fonts, from quality text type to wildly experimental faces, and became a hothouse for new type designing talents. Many designers, having acquired some renown with their early FontFonts, went on to start up their own independent foundry. Fred Smeijers (OurType), Jean-François Porchez (Typofonderie), Rian Hughes (Device), Nick Shinn (Shinn-Type), Veronika Burian (TypeTogether), Ole Schäfer (Primetype), Luc(as) de Groot (LucasFonts), Morten Rostgaard Olsen and Ole Søndergaard (Fontpartners) all published work at FontFont before venturing out on their own.

With the advent of online shopping, the local FontShops lost some of their reason for being. Those with a firm client base, such as FontShop Germany, Benelux and USA, survived. All operate through a central website, relaying customers to local affiliates where appropriate, so that buyers receive local invoices. In order to keep its retail network attractive, the FontShop network has struck distribution agreements with a growing number of independent foundries. In its selection of partner foundries FontShop is more rigorous than the large supermarket distributors, and can therefore be recommended to those who prefer a somewhat more selective collection to choose from.

Veer — veer.com

Veer was founded as a one-stop supplier for creative companies and has a strong client base among North American design and advertising agencies. Veer sells stock photography and illustration as well as fonts, and became a division of stock art seller Corbis in 2007. For several years the Veer Ideas section of the website allowed creatives to set up personal profiles, post on community blog the Fat, and read the latest design news on the Skinny blog. The community-oriented sections of Veer Ideas (Portfolio, Groups and Fat) were shelved in mid-2011.

Veer has a relatively small but well-curated selection of quality fonts. Among others, it introduced the sophisticated packaging-oriented script fonts of Alejandro Paul's Sudtipos foundry to the advertising world, having secured an exclusive distribution deal (Sudtipos is now available elsewhere as well). Besides approximately 35 hand-picked type libraries, Veer offers the work of a number of small foundries as part of their Cabinet and Umbrella collections. While individual designers are credited on the Veer website, the fact that these fonts are part of independent type libraries is never mentioned; the fonts are presented as having been designed for Veer's boutique collections.

Village — vllg.com

Created by Brooklyn based type designer Chester Jenkins, Village is a special case. Under the Village umbrella, Jenkins united a fine choice of micro-foundries (foundries, for the most part, operated by a single person) who decided "to go it alone together." In other words, these small foundries were wary of large-scale retailers because they found that their high-quality output was "getting lost in the shuffle," most of which is cheaper than theirs and which is often not nearly as good. Village is the chief outlet for a handful of interesting American, European and New Zealand foundries including Feliciano, Klim, LuxType and Kontour, plus Jenkins's own typefaces.

Other retail websites

Phil's Fonts — philfonts.com. Known mostly in the USA, Phil's Fonts is one of the best known remaining smaller retail companies for fonts, representing approximately 75 foundries which, for the most part, are available at the larger platforms mentioned above as well. Phil's Fonts also offers other services such as custom font design.

Faces — faces.co.uk. A UK based web retailer offering fonts, picture fonts and clip art. Owned by Monotype Imaging, it is more designer-oriented than Monotype's Fonts.com and represents almost 200 foundries. The list includes some collections that aren't easy to find elsewhere, such as Jeremy Tankard's sophisticated type library. Faces also offers services such as custom font design.

FontShop UK — www.fontshop.co.uk. Confusingly, FontShop UK has nothing to do with the international FontShop network; established as a supplier of phototype in 1979, it simply registered its name in the UK before Spiekermann's FontShop did. The site carries almost thirty well-known type collections, as well as some that are hard to find elsewhere, such as the mid-1990s fonts by now-famous Dutch studio Lust.

FontWorks/Type.co.uk — type.co.uk. The site is part of a group that also includes web shops FontShop.co.uk and Atomictype.co.uk, focusing on the UK market. Type.co.uk is evolved from popular 1990s distributor FontWorks. They carry a number of exclusive collections, such as the Heinemann collection of fonts designed for educational publishing.

FontHaus — fonthaus.com. Established in 1990 as one of the first font retailers, FontHaus is both a foundry offering fonts by individual designers and a distributor for several dozen microfoundries and larger collections, most of which are also available through other channels.

TypeTrust — typetrust.com. A digital font distribution partnership founded by designers Silas Dilworth and Neil Summerour. Besides being the outlet for Dilworth's typefaces, it offers a small selection of fonts from other designers and microfoundries, including Okay Type, DSType and Summerour's Positype.

Hype for Type — hypefortype.com. A new UK based foundry that doubles as a distributor for a small number of microfoundries. Their unique selling point is a collection of exclusive fonts by internationally-renowned graphic designers, illustrators and lettering artists including Alex Trochut, Ariel Di Lisio, Si Scott, Luke Lucas, Jon Burgerman and Non-Format.

T26 — t26.com. Founded in 1994 by maverick graphic designer Carlos Segura, whose participation in Neville Brody's FontShop-produced FUSE project popularized his work in the early 1990s, T26 Digital Type Foundry was long known for its eye-catching merchandise and packaging. When the font trade became purely web-based, Segura adjusted his concept and began including fonts by third parties in his internet offering. While the website makes no clear distinction between fonts that appear under the T26 label and those provided by other foundries, it offers fonts from URW++, Alias, FontFabric and Mark Simonson, among others.

Ascender Fonts — ascenderfonts.com. As a service provider, Ascender is known for superb technical font services like hinting and webfonts. As a foundry, it offers a growing collection of well-made originals by, mainly, its type director Steve Matteson. It is also the vendor of well-known system fonts originally designed for Microsoft, such as the ClearType collection (Calibri, Corbel, Consolas, et al.). Having recently been acquired by Monotype, Ascender is a retailer as well, carrying just over 40 collections, most of which are also available at other addresses mentioned on these pages.

YouWorkForThem — youworkforthem.com. Like Veer, YouWorkForThem is a boutique retailer that sells fonts as well as stock images (and, until recently, books as well). The company doubles as a foundry, with its own collection of display fonts.

This list is not complete, and does not include websites that cater exclusively to local markets. More and more typographic companies open their own online stores, and several have chosen to sell other collections in addition to their own work.

Exclusivity

There is a growing number of foundries that work largely or entirely without representation by third parties. These foundries can be reached via the URLs mentioned in the index.

Most North American type foundries rely heavily on the network of established distributors, but there are some exceptions. Hoefler & Frere-Jones believe in self-distribution, as does the new transatlantic joint venture of Christian Schwartz (USA) and Paul Barnes (UK), Commercial Type.

Several foundries in Britain prefer to work directly with their customers. The Foundry is home to typefaces by David Quay, Freda Sack and Wim Crouwel, which can only be ordered through via e-mail or telephone. Jeremy Tankard, too, likes to be in touch directly with his users; even the fonts ordered through the Faces retail platform are shipped from Tankard's own office. Of the younger foundries, Colophon is one that deals directly with customers on a basis of exclusivity.

The Enschedé Font Foundry in the Netherlands is home to fonts by Gerrit Noordzij, one of the world's most influential teachers of typography, and his son Christoph Noordzij. Its bestsellers are two modern classics by Bram de Does, Lexicon and Trinité. The exclusivity of the collection is underlined by the fact that the fonts can only be obtained directly from the foundry. Another Dutch foundry that is wary of distributors is Dutch Type Library (DTL). As they have a long-standing relationship with German digital pioneers URW++, the URW website is currently the only other place where DTL fonts can be found.

In Germany, veteran type designer Georg Salden has always been one of the type world's great individualists. Refusing to have anything to do with distributors, he has entrusted the maintenance of his exclusive online outlet TypeManufactur to his young colleague Ludwig Übele.

In recent years, several boutique foundries from Switzerland have won the hearts of cutting-edge graphic designers in Europe and elsewhere. True to Swiss tradition (remember, Switzerland is the only non-EU member nation in Western Europe), these foundries generally operate alone, without outside distribution. Optimo, B+P and Grilli Type are among the Swiss foundries featured in this book who work with no outside distributors.

Featured foundries

What follows is a personal selection of independent foundries active today, based on a loose set of criteria: variety in style and focus, quality, originality, and overall "interestingness." Some established independents whose work can be found in numerous publications were relegated to the Index; the same goes for a few foundries that were on our wishlist but chose not to contribute. In an area so extensive, it is impossible to be complete; but we hope our selection is representative, and we trust it will be useful to some.

—Why?

As a graphic design studio we have created many fonts over the years. It's a natural development for us to release these on to the commercial market.

A2-Type is a new type foundry set up by the London based design studio A2/SW/HK. Established to release and distribute over a decade's worth of specially crafted typefaces the foundry offers access to a unique collection of fonts. Launched in the fall of 2010 with a selection of fifteen font families specially created for print, screen and environment. The studio also provides customizing services.

—Why?

Initially our main goal was to create an online collaborative platform to publish our work and do research related to type design and type in public environments (urban epigraphy). Today our microfoundry combines lettering and handwriting expertise with the highest quality in font development and OpenType programming to offer a wide range of customized services as well as a distinctive collection of quality typefaces.

—Elena Albertoni is an independent type designer living in Berlin. After a thorough education in graphic and type design in Amiens and Paris, France, Italian-born Elena joined LucasFonts to perfect her type designing and programming skills. She is especially interested in the way OpenType technology can be used to enrich typographic performance. Among her own typefaces are the spirited script face Dolce and the Gregoria font for the notation of Gregorian chant, both of which won her awards in the TDC type design competition.

—Pascal Duez is a French designer and web developer. He co-founded Anatoletype with Elena in 2005 and currently runs the DZLV web design studio based in Paris, Brussels and Berlin.

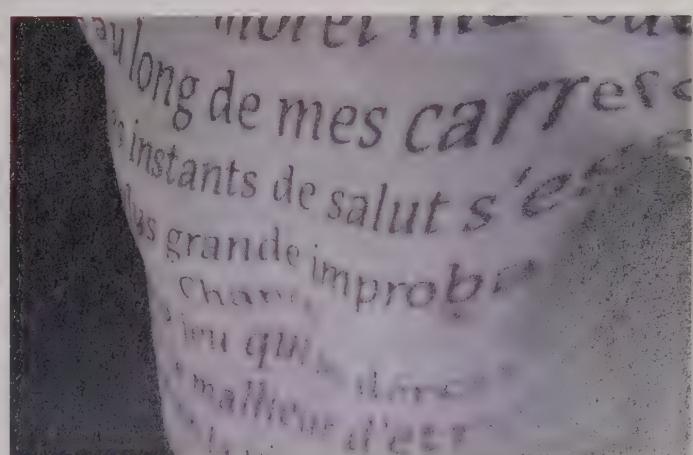

Based in Berlin, Anatoletype was founded in 2005 by Elena Albertoni (Italian) and Pascal Duez (French). They describe themselves as “enthusiastic collectors of many kinds of vernacular type and image-making.” They enjoy experimenting with manual techniques such as drawing, handwriting, calligraphy and silkscreen. In the digital realm, they explore the possibilities of OpenType to give form to their ideas and make their script and handwriting fonts come alive with natural spontaneity.

—André Baldinger

Swiss born, Baldinger studied typography and visual communication in Zurich and type design at the Atelier National de Création Typographique (ANCT) in Paris. After his graduation in 1994, he founded his own design studio. Type design is part of his professional practice; typefaces include Newut (New universal typeface), BDot, BLine, BaldingerPro, Eiffel and CitéInter. His work is regularly published, exhibited and awarded and can be found in the collections of the Design Museum Zurich, the National Library of France, the Toyama Museum of contemporary Arts in Japan and the Klingspor Museum Offenbach. In 2005, the Swiss National Bank invited him to take part in the competition for the design of the new Swiss banknotes.

Since 2006 he has been teaching typography and type design at the École Nationale Supérieure des Arts Décoratifs in Paris (ENSAD) and the Zürcher Hochschule der Künste in Zurich. He co-heads the type design unit of the Creation and Innovation Research Centre (EnsadLab) at ENSAD.

—Why?

As a graphic designer starting out in 1993, I didn't have much access to other fonts, so I started designing my own. Back then I didn't have a computer so at first everything was done by hand. The foundry began out of an increasing interest in and demand for these fonts. By then, the love of type design had already become deeply implanted.

—Angus R. Shamal (1972) is a multidisciplinary creative based in Amsterdam, Netherlands. With long-time experience in graphic design and advertising, Angus decided to shift his main interest to photography in 2007, working on editorial and advertising commissions as well as his own artistic projects. He has been running his one-person type foundry ARS Type since 1994, designing and publishing his own original typefaces. His type designs are always created from a designer/user's perspective, in terms of usability in a modern environment. In early 2011, ARS Type launched its new website with its own online shop.

Founded in 1994 by photographer and graphic designer Angus R. Shamal, ARS Type is an independent type foundry based in Amsterdam. Having made his first typefaces for personal use, Shamal developed a strong interest in form and legibility, leading to the production of a versatile library of high-quality text and display faces. In addition to the retail library, ARS Type specializes in developing custom type solutions for a variety of applications.

Lausanne,
Switzerland

Since
2006

"b+p is a foundry that makes Swiss typefaces. Traditional? Only on our own terms. Swiss? If we say so. Of course, the reigns of tradition don't come free. We took them piece by piece: hours in archives, models discovered and heroes destroyed. We learned to see in the past what speaks to the present; we learned to take without reverence and to impose our will. As the field of typography has diversified, we have stayed true to the vision of Swiss type that we developed. Conquering tradition gave us the skills and courage to experiment."

—Michael Mischler and Niklaus Thoenen

Thoenen founded the company in 2007 to make their font development public and to initiate an exchange about typography. The fonts are designed specifically for graphic work or just for the sake of experiment and typographic challenge. Mischler and Thoenen try to explore typographic conventions without being restricted by typographic conditions. In their early days they were tracing structural ordering principles for designing typefaces and shaping individual characters, whereas more recently they have been observing and picking up errors and different kinds of imprecision in the technical environment for developing new fonts.

Today they are furthering investigations into typographic rules concerning the manufacturing process.

Typeface selection

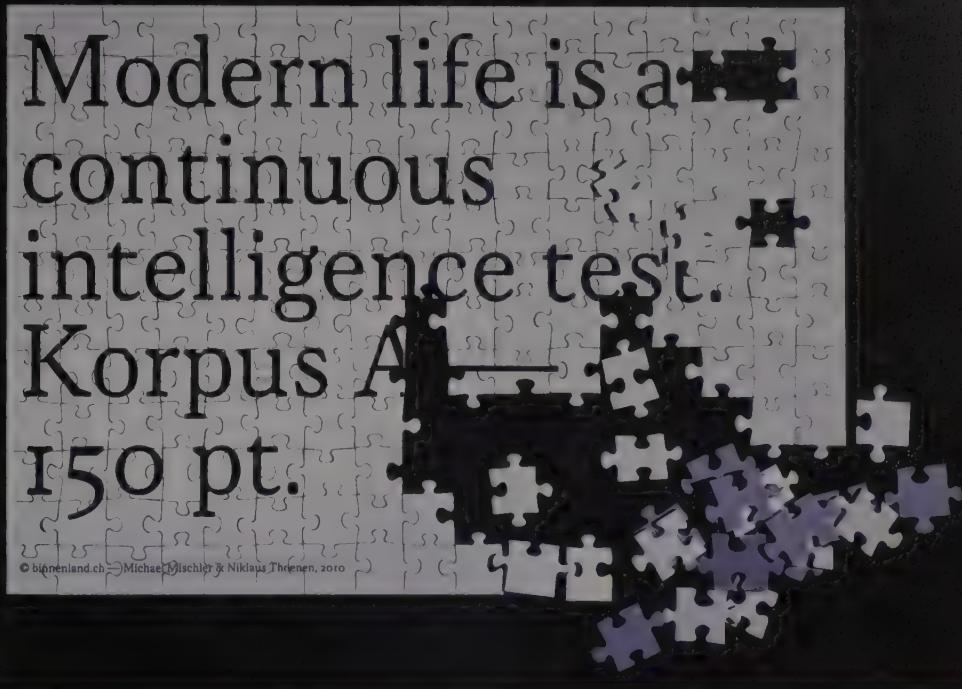

Founded by independent designers Michael Mischler and Niklaus Thoenen, Binnenland includes research, development and the design of practical and theoretical typographic content. The name comes from the ancient German binnen, interior, evolved from “bi innen”, within. Binnenland. English “inland”, refers to areas of land away from the coast or shore line. It usually means the interior part of a country or region.

Modern life is a continuous intelligence test, a puzzle designed by Mischler & Thönen, Binnenland, using the Korpus typeface. Photography: Thierry Kleiner.

In 1939, Britain declared war on Germany. What gave Winston Churchill the initial cause for concern was the British prime minister's particular cause for concern: German U-boats. They used torpedoes to attack not only the battleships of the Royal Navy, but especially civilian cargo ships, of which they sank hundreds in a brief period. Their main operational bases were ports in occupied France, in particular Brest, Lorient, and Saint-Nazaire. With growing British defensive action, the defenses of those U-boat bases were continually increased. The U-boat bunker in Saint-Nazaire, constructed from 1941 to 1943 by forced laborers, has a reinforced concrete roof 4 m to 9 m thick. With a length of 295 meters and containing 14 U-boat cells, it is amongst the largest U-boat bunkers in Europe. Whereas the town of Saint-Nazaire was 85% destroyed during the war, the bunker survived largely unscathed—ever since which it has stood as a monstrous and indescribable monument between the city and its harbor. As far as small areas that were spared from the like, the bunker is a good example of its central location and its function as a quest of a new kind of architecture. In the years following the war, the bunker was converted into a music hall, a theater, and a cultural center. It is now a 16 m-wide folding door. Visitors enter through a service corridor. This passage through the thickness of the bunker connects the different parts of the bunker and its visitors. A 16 m-wide folding door. Visitors enter through a service corridor. Nitti typeface used for the titles of Sag es, a short movie by Mathias Kohl and Georg Baumann. Graphic design by Georg Baumann.

Oskar Carré Poster is a custom typeface by Bold Monday for the Royal Carré Theater in Amsterdam. The typeface, designed to be compatible with the existing logo, draws its inspiration from early 20th-century advertising lettering. Graphic design based on a template by Thonik.

2. WRITING TYPOGRAPHY If you look at text as an interface, typography is its usability. Common text editors are typographically weak (small font, tight leading, random measure, lack of whitespace). In addition, few people have the professional skills to design digital text. In Writer, font type, text size, column width, leading and contrast are carefully set for the best writing experience both in portrait and landscape mode.

(Writer uses a monospaced font called Nitti Light created and optimized for iPad by the type wizards at Bold Monday. The font transports the provisory character of drafting and forces you to read slowly and precisely without being tedious to look at.)

3. READING TIME gives you an approximation of how long it will take to read your text. Cursor time shows you in minutes and seconds up to where the cursor is.

4. KEYBOARD EXTENSIONS provides arrow keys and punctuation. We disabled smart quotes to keep you focused on what you say and not how you type.

5. DROPBOX allows web synchronization of your documents from iPad to the cloud.

In addition, few people have the professional skills to design digital text. In Writer, font type, text size, column width, leading and contrast are carefully set for the best writing experience both in portrait and landscape mode.

(Writer uses a monospaced font called Nitti Light created and optimized for iPad by the type wizards at Bold Monday. The font transports the provisory character of drafting and forces you to read slowly and precisely without being tedious to look at.)

Focus Mode creates a noise free writing space. No auto-correction, spelling errors, toolbars, scrolling, editing, cut/copy/paste to distract you moving forward in your text. Focus Mode blurs out everything except the latest three lines of text you were working in. The idea is to activate it when you get stuck, blinding out everything else.

Writer has no graphic settings or formatting features. It avoids all distracting glitz in the user interface and puts all the beauty in the shape of the text. It uses an interactive logic that helps you concentrate, find your orientation and express yourself. For the iPad version we also added Dropbox synchronization, punctuation and arrow keys.

—Why?

After finishing the first typeface, I was considering going to an established label. But what frightened me a bit was the idea they could just pick what they thought would sell or would set up their promotion adjusted to politics. My idea was to establish a small collection of typefaces that I would enjoy working with.

Christoph Dunst, type specimens for Novel Pro and Novel Sans Pro.

Karin Bucher, Matthias Kuhn: Die Mona Lisa von Trogen. In the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries the textile trade was huge in the eastern part of Switzerland. A large collection of portraits from this era formed the foundation of this book. The designers, GG Hafen Senn Stieger from St.Gallen, used Novel Pro for their award-winning design. Appenzeller Verlag, 2010.

Novel Pro and Novel Sans Pro were used throughout Typoversity, edited by Nadine Roßa, Andrea Schmidt, Patrick Marc Sommer. Design by Andrea Schmidt and Patrick Marc Sommer. Norman Beckmann Verlag, 2011.

Info

—Why?

Canada Type was originally founded as a specialty type design resource for creative firms, as well as an outlet to retail a few fonts we had designed previously. We still work every day under the same aims of our founding, but the operation is much more efficient and on an entirely higher level now.

People

—Patrick Griffin: Worked in film production design for 16 years before finally following his heart and giving in to a lifelong obsession with the alphabet. Co-founder in 2004.

—Rebecca Alaccari: Worked at a variety of design agencies around Toronto before coming up with the idea of founding Canada Type in 2004.

—Kevin King: Graduated from the extended design program at Humber College, as part of which he studied type design under Patrick Griffin. Joined Canada Type in 2010.

—Philip Bouwsma: American calligraphy maestro who studied under the legendary Arthur Baker in the 1970s, and came into his own brilliant individualism over four decades of inimitable alphabet design. With Canada Type since 2005.

—Hans van Maanen: Dutch science writer and lifelong type enthusiast. Specializes in reviving early- to mid-20th century Dutch type treasures. With Canada Type since 2006.

Typeface selection

Canada Type is an independent digital type design and development firm based in Toronto. After its humble artistic start with a few retail typefaces and some custom publishing work in early 2004, the quality and affordability of Canada Type's work made it popular with graphic designers all around the world. The foundry continues to expand its library on a monthly basis, as well as to provide custom work, technical support, and multiple type licensing to a large list of publishing clients.

THE LIVES THEY LIVED

With a new year in sight, we have another opportunity to take note of some of the lives that ended in the past 12 months. This is our 15th annual Lives They Lived issue, and as always, we do not try to be comprehensive or definitive in our choices of the people evoked within these pages. Instead, this is an unabashedly idiosyncratic collection, driven by the interests, passions and whims of our editors and writers. These essays tell stories about individuals, but they also capture moments in history — the Patty Hearst trial (Harry Kozol), the deadly Munich Olympics (Jim McKay) — and moments in our personal histories — adolescence (Will Elder), romance (Mildred Loving, Lew Spence), the terminal illness of a loved one (Jason Shinder). Most of all, we hope you are moved, tickled, intrigued and provoked by reading about these 24 very different lives, all memorably lived.

Colophon is an independent type foundry set up by the Brighton based design studio The Entente (Anthony Sheret & Edd Harrington). As well as distributing and acting as a platform for fonts designed by The Entente, it selects fonts designed by other designers to distribute and create products for. Working in a similar way to a publisher, some of Colophon's typefaces will be limited edition releases.

Info

—Why?

The foundry was set up as an addition to our main studio practice. We wanted to initially release our typefaces that we had created for projects, as well as our for our friends. From there we started to develop the esthetic and catalog of the foundry.

—Joshua Darden, Chief Designer.

Born and raised in suburban Los Angeles, Joshua Darden published his first typeface at the age of 15. He spent the next decade assisting in the development and production of typefaces for a broad range of commercial and cultural institutions. Since establishing his Brooklyn based studio in 2004, he has collaborated with clients in dozens of markets to invent rich, communicative typography.

Joshua has developed custom typefaces for Latin-based, Cyrillic, and Greek alphabets. He has taught the history, design, & use of typography at Parsons the New School for Design & the School of Visual Arts, lectured at the University of California, Santa Barbara, sat on panels at the TypeCon and South by Southwest Interactive conferences, juried the Type Directors Club Type Design Competition, and visited the Rhode Island School of Design as a Guest Critic.

In addition to guiding the creative work of the studio, Joshua is an avid amateur photographer, commuter by bicycle, and tireless collector, accumulating and cataloging books, small objects, and awesomely bad pop music.

—Nick Kwiatek, Tech Director. Nick (aka Bachelor Number Four), has thus far enjoyed an extraordinarily fascinating life, the details of which are still being proofread and/or censored.

—Noam Berg, Senior Draftsman.

Born in Los Angeles and raised in Israel, Noam's type career began with an aborted port of Kid Pix's blackletter font to IBM's Storyboard Live. It picked up years later with a family of stencil fonts designed for easy cutting. He's been a printmaker and programmer, guitar player and singer in less-than-seminal Israeli Punk band Fishyboom, and managed to get court martialled not once but twice during his service as a medic in the IDF. Having recently completed his MFA thesis, Noam aspires to be a crotchety old man who hits people over the head with his cane for using inferior typefaces.

Since
2004

The Darden Studio produces and publishes the typeface designs of Joshua Darden and his collaborators. Housed in a former telephone switching station in Greenpoint, Brooklyn, New York, they create new typefaces and lettering for publications, institutions, corporate brands and private clients. “Working closely with our clients, we pursue typography that is the result of earnest inquiry, appropriate for current editorial standards and technology, and rooted in the values and practices of five centuries of type founding.”

Since

DSType was founded in late 1994 by Dino dos Santos and since then has designed typefaces for several corporations, magazines and cultural projects. The studio specializes in creating custom typefaces, including completely new typefaces as well as improving and finetuning existing typefaces and logotypes.

Info

—Why?

I began designing typefaces in the early 1990s because there was not much available to us in those days, just the Macintosh system fonts and dry transfer sheets from Letraset and Mecanorma. So I started designing fonts that matched the new typographic experience.

—Dino dos Santos graduated in Graphic Design from ESAD, Escola Superior de Artes e Design in Matosinhos, and obtained an MA in Multimedia Arts at FBAUP, Porto. He teaches Typographic Studies at ESAD. His work has been featured in many international design magazines. Several of Dino dos Santos's typefaces have been internationally successful, such as Andrade, winner of the Creative Review Type Design Awards, for the Best Revival/Extension Family in 2005 and Ventura, awarded with the Certificate of Excellence in Type Design from the Type Directors Club of New York in 2008. The studio's work was selected for the Schrift in Form exhibition at the Klingspor-Museum in Offenbach, Germany. Dos Santos regularly contributes to conferences, seminars and publications. His typefaces are used in prestigious Portuguese and international magazines.

Emtype

Eduardo Manso

Barcelona,
Spain

Since
1997

Having published a number of typefaces through T26, ITC, Bitstream and Linotype, Argentinian-born Eduardo Manso founded Emtype as a one-person type foundry in 1997.

—Why?

In the past, a type designer had to go to a large foundry to publish a typeface, convince them that your project was commercially viable and in some cases you had to accept changes to fit in with their marketing strategies. The popularization of the internet allowed many independent authors like me to get in touch directly with the customers, either through distributors or our own websites. As a result of that, type design became more dignified. I do not publish fonts to get a bestseller, I publish because I believe in what I do and want to share it with people who think in the same way. That is the real difference between an independent type foundry and a huge font company, and this was the main reason I created Emtype.

—Born in Argentina, Eduardo Manso has been living in Barcelona since 2000. He studied graphic design at the Martín Malharro School of Visual Arts in Mar del Plata and completed a postgraduate degree in visual communication at the National University of Mar del Plata. Among other awards, his Bohemia typeface won first prize in the text category of the International Type Design Contest 2003 organized by Linotype. He has received a Certificate of Excellence from the Type Directors Club of New York on three occasions. He currently gives typography classes at several schools in Barcelona and works as a freelance type designer.

exljbris is the personal foundry of self-taught type designer Jos Buivenga. Before launching his first commercial typeface in 2008, Buivenga shared his explorations in type with a growing circle of online friends and fans for fifteen years, allowing them to follow the development of his typefaces and download the results at no cost.

People

—Jos Buivenga can be passionate about a lot of things. He loves to paint, listen to music, brew an almost perfect espresso... but nothing challenges and rewards him more than designing type. If ever he was stranded on a desert island he would still draw alphabets in the sand, even if there was no one else to see them. He is the founder of exljbris, the one-man Dutch font foundry through which he releases and offers his typefaces. In 2008, while still working as an art director at an advertising agency, he released his first commercial typeface, Museo, with several weights offered for free. That strategy paid off and Museo became a huge bestseller. Partly thanks to that success he now calls himself a full time type designer.

FaceType

Marcus Sterz

Vienna,
Austria

Since
2008

Founded in 2008, the FaceType foundry is constantly working on expanding its library. “Our goal is to provide high quality fonts at a reasonable price. Although interested in digitizing old type gems like Ivory, Aeronaut and Letterpress, our primary focus is to develop new designs such as Lignette, Brilliant and Marlowe.”

—Why?

Marcus Sterz: “I was fed up with the conditions in the field of ‘normal’ graphic design. Making fonts is like paradise: No negotiations with clients, no meetings — in short: I finally felt really independent.”

Family prices depend on complexity of designs, Single fonts $8 and up (some free); 3-style families $38–$90, etc.

—Marcus Sterz

Marcus Sterz, one of FaceType’s founders, is following his passion: designing typefaces. With a background in graphic design he loves to see his work being transformed into something new through the hands of others.

—Georg Herold-Wildfellner

“What I would set my heart on is graphic design, what I would sell my soul for is type design. Thank God I have a family who occupies both.”

—Igor Labudovic

Igor Labudovic is an Austrian graphic design student with a passion for typefaces. He is currently studying at the ‘die Graphische’ masterclass for graphic design in Vienna. He created Brilliant as a graduation project in 2009–10.

—Why?

I was running a design company but I wanted to concentrate more on type design. Being able to do things on my own terms was one of the reasons to start a foundry alone. But it was also maybe down to being relatively isolated.

—Mário Feliciano drew his first fonts in the early 1990s for two Portuguese surf magazines which he art-directed, under the influence of cutting-edge typography by David Carson, Emigre and others. Having decided to become a type designer he went through a long process of investigation. Between 1997 and 1999 he released his first typefaces through Chicago-based foundry T26 and Adobe. He got involved in the world-wide typographic association ATypI, becoming its Portuguese delegate. His meetings with renowned type designers such as Peter Matthias Noordzij, Matthew Carter and Gerard Unger were crucial to his evolution as a type designer and radically changed his perspective of typography, urging him to deepen his studies of type design history. In 1999 Feliciano became the Portuguese agent for The Enschedé Font Foundry. Shortly thereafter, he launched the Feliciano Type Foundry with two very different concepts, a large type family — The Morgan Project — and a collection of small display families and single fonts — the B-sides modular series.

—Jason Smith

Jason Smith is the founder of Fontsmith, with a background in hand-lettering and calligraphy. His work has a distinct quality that combines warmth and modernity with an intense eye for finely crafted letter-forms.

—Phil Garnham

Phil is the typeface design director at Fontsmith, with a penchant for asymmetric doodles and alphabets of all shapes and sizes. A creator of type to use and type to admire, Phil designs functional forms from abstract ideas.

—Fernando Mello

Fernando Mello joined Fontsmith in the summer of 2008. His background in multiple visual areas — architecture, typography, graphic design and illustration — influences his search for creating innovative and original, yet functional and well-constructed typefaces.

—Emanuela Conidi

Manu joined Fontsmith in 2008 after studying typeface design. With a background in graphic design, experience in hot-metal type hand composition and letterpress printing, she is passionate about typographic history, 19th century typefaces and Arabic typography.

Fountain

Peter Bruhn

Malmö, Sweden

Since 1993

Fountain started out as the personal foundry of type and graphic designer Peter Bruhn. As one of the first one-man foundries in Europe, it soon grew to accommodate work by over 20 type designers.

Info

—Why?

In the early 90s there were almost no small foundries around, and the fonts I wanted weren't there. So I started making the ideas in my head a reality.

People

—Peter Bruhn, born in Malmö, Sweden, founded Fountain in 1993. MFA&D graduate, 1997. "I am possessed with type, and I love browsing through the second-hand book shops for old type books and specimens."

—Stefan Hattenbach is an espresso-fueled art director and graphic designer specializing in type and logo solutions. After two decades in the industry, a third of that running his own studio, he has managed to keep his work strong and compelling via a dynamic balance of experimentation and traditionalism: a blend which has worked to the benefit of clients such as Greenpeace, Amnesty International, Telia, and Hennes & Mauritz.

—Göran Söderström is a self-taught Swedish type designer and font developer. His obsession with type began in 1994 when doing the initial sketches for his first typeface, Exemplar, but it was not until 2006 that he took this obsession seriously and started his own type studio, Autodidakt.

—Gábor Kóthay is a multi-disciplinary artist and type designer from Hungary. He is a graduate of the Academy of Fine Arts, Budapest, and has been designing professionally since 1991. His work has been showcased in several books, annuals and magazines and he has won multiple awards for his installations.

—Rui Abreu is a Portuguese type and graphic designer. He graduated in 2003 from the FBAUP (Faculdade de Belas Artes da Universidade do Porto), where he studied graphic design. He has been working as an interactive media designer in different design and advertising agencies alongside his type design activity.

—Martin Lexelius (alias Martin Fredriksson) was born in Gothenburg, Sweden. Having started out as a graffiti and comic book artist, he pursued a career as an artist and freelance illustrator in the mid-1990s and rapidly became fascinated by typography and type design. Under Peter Bruhn's mentorship Martin has developed numerous fonts.

—Randy Jones is a California based freelance graphic designer and principal of Aquatoad Design. Having learned to draw letters under the guidance of Ed Benguiat at the School of Visual Arts, he now spends much of his time hunched over his Mac adjusting kerning pairs. Fortunately it is a laptop so he can get his fix of mountains and trees as needed.

—Lucas Brusquini, born in Sweden, was a calligraphy and type geek as early as the age of 10. Later he moved on to study graphic communication at The Graphic Arts Institute of Denmark. As a designer and art director he has worked in the UK, Denmark and Sweden.

—Why?

Gestalten specializes in developing content for aficionados of cutting-edge visual culture worldwide. Keeping with the Gestalten philosophy, firmly committed to presenting design excellence in visual culture, Gestalten Fonts was founded in 2003 to offer a versatile selection of contemporary typefaces by designers for designers. Handpicked by the in-house graphic design and editorial team, the independent font foundry now features over 120 contemporary typefaces that range in style from refined, elegant, and minimal text fonts to more experimental display, ornamental, script, blackletter, monospaced, stencil and typewriter fonts.

—Robert Klanten, founder. As publisher and editor-in-chief of Gestalten, Klanten founded Gestalten Fonts as an offshoot of the publishing house. Klanten has always kept a sharp eye on choosing typography for his own publications—even designing bespoke fonts by in-house designers at times. At a time when there were few foundries offering cutting-edge and experimental fonts and with many book buyers inquiring about where they can purchase these fonts, starting a small foundry to sell and distribute fonts was a logical step.

—Michael Mischler, co-founder. Hailing from Bern, Switzerland, Michael Mischler is a graduate of Schule für Gestaltung Biel where he studied graphic design. One of the first graphic designers and editors at Gestalten, Mischler conceived, edited, and designed over 20 publications on graphic design, typography and visual culture while working at Gestalten between 1998 and 2006. Mischler co-founded Gestalten Fonts in 2003 and continues to scout fresh type designing talent for the foundry. In 2006, together with Nik Thönen, he also founded the independent font platform Binnenland.ch. He currently lives and works in Bern.

—Critzla, co-founder. Critzla started out as a sign and poster painter in East Germany. Deeply rooted in the Berlin music scene, he became an independent designer in 1994 — designing flyers, record sleeves, and posters, not to mention the first 12 issues of Flyer, a magazine about Berlin's club scene. Critzla is a founding member of Pfadfinderei, a graphic and motion design studio that doubles as one of the world's most popular groups of VJs. Having designed the typeface Localizer for the book of the same name — Gestalten's first release — Critzla released many other fonts through Gestalten Fonts, for which he has been a contributing editor since 2003.

—Laure Afchain is a graphic designer and type designer living in Paris. Having graduated from the Fine Arts School of Toulouse, she went on to study Type & Media at the Royal Academy (KABK) in The Hague.

—Martin Aleith is a contemporary graphic designer whose fonts, design work and video installations are closely associated with music. Since 1998, he has been a founding member of the Berlin-based collective Pfadfinderei.

—Sofie Beier is a designer, researcher, and lecturer currently employed at the Danish Design School, where she teaches graphic and type design. She has written extensively on the subject of typeface legibility.

—Matthieu Cortat is a typographer currently working at the Museum of Print and Banking in Lyon and is also on the graphic design team at the Swiss publisher Éditions de la Société jurassienne d'Émulation.

—Boris Dworschak is a graphic designer whose main focuses are corporate design, editorial, poster and type design. He describes his approach as clear, conceptual, multi-disciplinary and type-oriented.

—S. W. Bugten & S. P. Egli. Stian Ward Bugten lives in Trondheim, Norway, working as an art director at HK Reklamebyra. His main areas of work are in advertising and developing concepts in film, web, and print. Simon Egli graduated from Central Saint Martins in London and subsequently worked for clients including MTV, TESS supermodel agency and Studio Achermann. He works and lives in London and in Zürich.

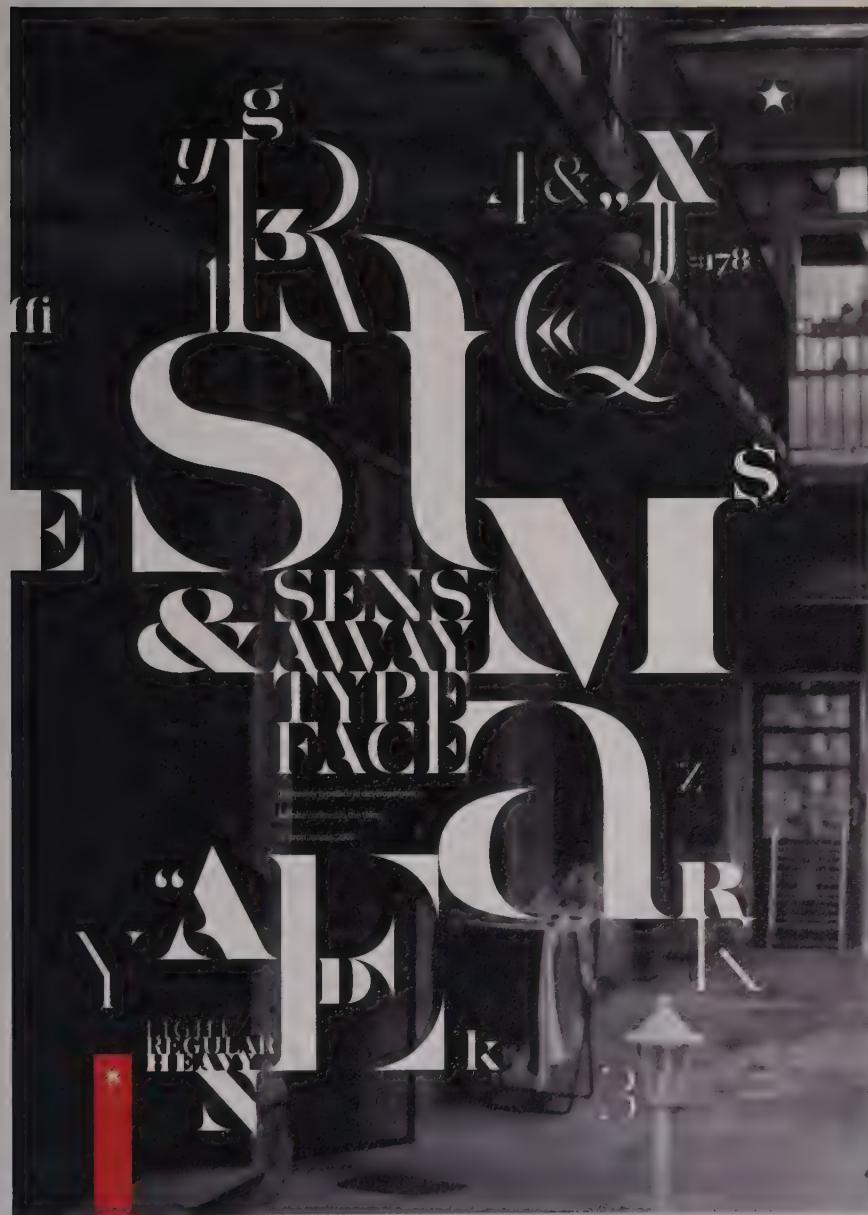

—Benjamin Gomez studied in Valence and Strasbourg before graduating from the Ecole Nationale Supérieure des Arts Décoratifs in Paris. In 2007 he founded the design collective Dépli Design Studio with Aurelie Gasche and Vadim Bernard.

—Aron Jancso was scouted by Gestalten Fonts as an amazingly fresh talent from Budapest. A self-confessed type addict, he devotes his time to meticulously drawing and designing alphabets.

—Joerg Schmitt is constantly searching for new ideas for typefaces. At the moment he is working for the global branding agency Interbrand Zintzmeyer & Lux in Cologne.

—Nik Thönen is a member of the Vienna-based design collective Re-P. ORG. His work for cultural institutions for the contemporary art sector, film and architecture betrays his interest in functional graphic design reduced to pragmatic language.

—In the early 1980s, at the start of his career, Hubert Jocham worked in a print shop with classic metal typesetting. He studied graphic design in Augsburg (Germany) and Preston (England). His graduation project dealt with the history of the italic types of the Renaissance and the relationship between roman and italic.
In 1998 Jocham moved to London to work for Henrion, Ludlow & Schmidt in corporate branding. He designed brandmarks and logotypes for international companies and designed corporate manuals. He got to know the art directors of lifestyle magazines such as Frank and Arena, where he worked as a type consultant and type designer.

Today Hubert Jocham is a freelance designer. He develops brandmarks and logotypes for leading brand agencies like Interbrand, Landor, The Brand Union and Futurbrand. He designs text and headline systems for international magazines like GQ in London, Russian Vogue, L'Officiel in Paris, Details in New York and German publishers like Milchstraße and Gruner & Jahr. He developed corporate typography for Bally in Switzerland, the Kunsthaus Graz in Austria, Agfa Photo and Vattenfall.

—Why?

I wasn't really happy with the promotional opportunities the bigger foundries gave me. I wanted more control over what would happen to my fonts after finishing them, I decided to go my own way.

— Born in Berlin, Hannes von Döhren worked in an advertising agency in Hamburg after completing his studies in graphic design. He has run his own type foundry, HVD Fonts, since 2005. Within the last few years he has published several type families like Brevia, Livory, ITC Chino, FF Basic Gothic, Reklame Script and Brandon Grotesque, which became the most successful release at MyFonts in 2010. In 2011 he received a Certificate of Excellence in Type Design from the Type Directors Club NY.

—Since graduating from the Royal College of Art Jeremy Tankard has gained a worldwide reputation for the high quality and unique designs of his typefaces. He initially worked with major consultancies, advising and creating typography for some of the best known international brand names.

When Jeremy Tankard Typography was established in 1998, the idea was to design new typefaces and offer a service for typographic design to suit clients' own requirements.

From the outset the aim of the company was to create, manufacture and license high quality digital type, whilst always keeping in touch with current standards and techniques.

The typeface collection from JTT includes many internationally recognized typefaces, which are being used around the world for a variety of editorial, publishing and corporate related work. In addition to the standard collection, some companies are benefiting from specially commissioned typefaces.

Jeremy Tankard is a member of the Wynkyn de Worde Society, iSTD and Letter Exchange and has lectured on typography and given workshops at a number of colleges.

Since
2010

Just Another Foundry started off as a one-man project. Recently, JAF has also published fonts designed in collaboration with Brian Jaramillo and with Shoko Mugikura. Since May 2010, JAF has been offering its fonts as one of the first webfont services.

—Why?

The foundry was started up to publish Tim Ahrens' designs while having full control over font production, marketing and finances. The foundry's size and independence makes it easier to react to new technological developments quickly.

—Why?

Kimera Type Foundry started as a side business for my graphic design studio Kimera. I have always loved original typography and KTF was a way to develop this passion, and make it a characteristic feature of our work. Since then, we have designed original fonts and wide-ranging custom type projects for many clients.

—Gabriel Martínez Meave is a Mexican graphic and typographic designer, illustrator, calligrapher and author working in Mexico City. He is the founder and principal of Kimera studio. He has received numerous design awards, including five from the Type Directors Club of New York and two from the Association Typographique Internationale (ATypI). He also won the first prize at the 2001 National Design Biennial in Mexico, as well as the a!Diseño award in Typography in 2002, 2003 and 2008. His work at Kimera has been shown in several exhibitions and reviewed in many international design magazines and books. He was selected as one of 100 important emerging designers for the book Area2 by Phaidon. Gabriel designed the official type system for the Mexican government, now in use. He has given lectures and workshops in the USA, Latin America and Spain. He is professor at the Universidad Anahuac in Mexico City, and a member of the ATypI and the Type Directors Club of New York.

—Isaías Loaiza and José Luis Acosta, both Mexican graphic and type designers, have collaborated with Gabriel in some KTF type projects.

—Kris Sowersby graduated from the Wanganui School of Design in 2003. After brief employment as a graphic designer he started the Klim Type Foundry in 2005, currently based in Wellington, New Zealand. His first retail typeface, Feijoa, was released onto the international market in 2007. National, Sowersby's second retail release, won a Certificate of Excellence from the Type Directors Club, New York in 2008. Since then he has received two more Certificates of Excellence (Serrano, Hardys) and worked on various custom and retail typefaces including FF Meta Serif, the serifed sibling of the renowned FF Meta. Sowersby's reputation for typeface design has lead to his working with, and for, contemporary typographic luminaries such as Christian Schwartz, Erik Spiekermann, Chester Jenkins, House Industries, DNA Design and Pentagram. In 2010 Sowersby was named an ADC Young Gun. Sowersby's typefaces combine historical knowledge with contemporary craftsmanship & finish. The Klim Type Foundry markets its typefaces exclusively through Village.

Typeface selection

Klim is the one-man foundry of New Zealand type designer Kris Sowersby. Kim's type library has been described as "a succession of finely crafted typefaces that have been as notable for their range and engagement with typographic history as for their immaculate execution." (Mark Thomson in Eye)

The Christchurch Art Gallery was the only New Zealand venue to host an international exhibition by renowned sculptor Ron Mueck. Christchurch design and advertising agency Strategy created a major publicity campaign using Klim's typeface National. Boldly designed billboards, posters and magazine ads were strategically placed as continual reminders of the show. The campaign helped bring in record numbers with over 135,000 people attending — the gallery's biggest show ever.

Kombinat- Typefounders

Hannes Famira

Berlin,
Germany

Since
2001

Having been set up as the type founding department of Hannes Famira's design company Kombinat ten years ago, the foundry relaunched in 2011 with a new website and the release of Martin Wenzel's Realist family.

—Why?

After having sold his fonts to friends and acquaintances for a while it occurred to Hannes that it might make sense to build a website and do the same thing with a larger pool of clients.

—Hannes Famira is founding principal of the Kombinat-Typefounders. He is a graphic designer, a type designer and a teacher of both disciplines.

After twenty years in the Netherlands, Switzerland and the United States he now lives in Berlin, Germany, where he freelances part-time for Lucas-Fonts, FontShop International and House Industries. He studied graphic and typographic design at the KABK (Royal Academy of Fine Arts) in The Hague, Netherlands. After apprenticeships at Studio Dumbar and the Font Bureau he worked at Meta Design, at Buro Petr van Blokland + Claudia Mens and House Industries. Hannes started his own design studio, Das Kombinat, in 1999 and Kombinat-Typefounders in 2001. He taught typography and type design classes at the SfG, School for Design in Basel (CH), Cooper Union for the Advancement of Science and Art School of Art, the New Jersey City University and the City University of New York.

—Martin Wenzel had his first typeface (FF Marten) published in the early nineties and has been designing new fonts ever since. In 1993 he moved from his native Berlin to The Hague to study type and communication design at the KABK. His first text typeface, FF Profile, received an award from the Type Directors Club New York in 2000. Besides his type design expertise and teaching he has been working as a communication designer and web developer for clients in Germany, the Netherlands, Denmark, India and the US. After his degree and working in the Netherlands for eight additional years (at Buro Petr van Blokland + Claudia Mens) he moved back to Berlin in 2005. Martin's approach to type design is usually based on the principles of writing with the various writing tools. He has no interest in designing revivals but instead uses basic typographic design and construction principles as inspiration for new designs.

Luc(as) de Groot

Berlin, Germany

Since 2000

LucasFonts is the foundry established by Dutch designer Luc(as) de Groot in 2000. Today, LucasFonts is a bustling type design studio with a small, international team of designers. LucasFonts aims to produce original typefaces that meet the needs of complex typographic design and multilingual office environments. Many of the foundry's type families were originally designed for specific clients in response to well-defined demands — leading to a very practical and user-oriented approach.

People

—Luc(as) de Groot , born in Noordwijkerhout, Netherlands, studied at the KABK (Royal Academy of Fine Arts) in The Hague. He then spent four years with the Dutch design group BRS Premsela Vonk, mainly on corporate identity work. In the meantime he taught at the Art Academy in Den Bosch and freelanced before moving to Berlin in 1993 to join MetaDesign for another four years. As typographic director at MetaDesign in Berlin, he worked on a variety of corporate design projects, from logos, magazine concepts and custom typefaces to fine-tuning and implementing type. Luc(as)' first well known type family was Thesis. It grew out of dissatisfaction with the availability of good typefaces for corporate identities. Thesis was first conceived about 1989 and first published in 1994. Since then it has grown into one of the largest and most comprehensive digital type families available on the market. Luc(as)' most widely distributed typeface is Calibri, the new default font in Microsoft Office. In the beginning of 1997 Luc(as) accepted a part-time teaching position in Potsdam. In 1997 he founded FontFabrik, where he has been offering services such as type and logo development and digital implementation to design and advertising agencies. He keeps on designing new and custom typefaces as well as extending his own type families (Thesis, Sun, Taz, CorpId, etc.). He is devoted to type by day and night. In 2000 the font foundry LucasFonts was established, where Luc(as) now sells and distributes his own typefaces directly.

The numbers in the TheSansHair package refer to stroke thickness. In H10, the vertical stroke weight is 10 units, i.e. 1 percent of the font size.

SET IN THEANSAMONO OFFICE

To get equal vertical strokes of 1 point, use the following sizes:

—Why?

I never thought much about it. I had designed some fonts, and started to offer them on my webpage. After the release of Marat in 2008 more and more people ordered my fonts, so it became a “serious business”.

„Schichtung, Zeichnung und Symbole in Europa 1800 – 1815 bis in die gegenwärtige Mode“

Masterarbeit bedarf einer gewissen Universalität; was hier über die Uniform mit all ihren Zeichen und Symbolen konstatiert wird, gilt auch für die zivile Kleidung. Auf beiden Seiten der Karteien sind die Zeichen und Symbole konzentriert, was hier über die Sachverhalte kommuniziert. Die Wissenschaft, die sich formen beschäftigt, sie zum Sprechen bringt, hat nicht thematisiert. Sie ist nicht ethnologisch, nicht thematisch, nicht historisch, nicht geographisch und sonst.

Biographies

—Timo Gaessner, Berlin based graphic designer and typographer, studied at Gerrit Rietveld Academie in Amsterdam and launched studio 123buero after graduating in 2002. The studio's approach is defined by research and analytic thinking, focusing on printed matter, identity programs, exhibition and type design. In 2010, he co-founded Zürich based independent type foundry MilieuGrotesque, through which he has published most of his recently developed typefaces. Timo has lectured and given workshops at the École nationale supérieure des Arts Décoratifs in Paris, Hochschule für Künste in Bremen and Staatliche Hochschule für Gestaltung in Karlsruhe, among others.

—Alexander Meyer, Zürich based graphic designer and typographer, studied Visual Communication at Zurich University of the Arts and launched studio xyz.ch after graduating in 2003. His work focuses on typography and is influenced by the manual aspects of old typesetting techniques. Inspired by vintage typewriters, he started to design the slab-serif typeface family Lacrima and Generika. As result, he co-founded Zürich based independent type foundry MilieuGrotesque in 2010. Alex has lectured at F+F School of Art and Media Design in Zurich and run letterpress workshops at the Berufsschule für Gestaltung Zürich.

—Why?

For Fred Smeijers flexibility is very important, as the versatility of his oeuvre testifies. The wish to operate in a more open and flexible way encouraged Fred Smeijers and Rudy Geeraerts of FontShop Benelux to launch OurType.

—Fred Smeijers, co-founder and creative director of OurType, is a type designer specializing in typographic research and development for product manufacturers. Born in the Netherlands, Smeijers studied graphic design at the Academy of Art in Arnhem. In 2000, Smeijers's achievements in the field of practice, research and education were formally recognized with the award of the Gerrit Noordzij Prize. He wrote the influential Counterpunch; his second book Type now was published in 2003. Smeijers lectures on type design and type history at the leading European type design colleges: Royal Academy of Arts (KABK, The Hague), Hochschule für Grafik und Buchkunst (HGB, Leipzig), University of Reading (Reading, UK), and Ecole cantonale d'art de Lausanne (ECAL).

—Peter Verheul is a first generation digital type designer. His FF NewBerlin (1991), one of the first FontFont releases, was followed by FF Sheriff in 1996. Verheul studied graphic and typographic design at the Royal Academy of Art (KABK) in The Hague, where he has been teaching since 1991. He designed the Dutch government's typefaces Rijksoverheid Serif and Rijksoverheid Sans.

—Merel Matzinger was born in the Netherlands and studied at the Art Center College of Design in Switzerland and the USA, from where she graduated in Graphic & Packaging Design. This led to a year of study at the postgraduate course in Type Design and Typography at the KABK in The Hague.

—André Leonhardt studied graphic design in Dessau. Being interested in type, he attended the type design classes given by Lucas de Groot in Potsdam and Fred Smeijers in Leipzig, which led to what is now OurType NeueSans.

—Maurice Göldner is a typographic designer from Germany. He studied communication and graphic design at Burg Giebichenstein-Hochschule für Kunst und Design in Halle, and type design at the Hochschule für Grafik und Buchkunst in Leipzig, where he graduated in 2009.

—Hendrik Weber is a typographic designer from Germany. He studied at the University of Applied Sciences (FH) in Potsdam and the Hochschule für Grafik und Buchkunst in Leipzig, from where he holds a degree in Type Design. His graduation thesis Kursiv, a study of the italic, was published by Verlag Niggli in 2010. Hendrik currently works and lives in Berlin.

—Peter Mohr is a graphic designer from Germany. He studied at the Academy for Information and Communication Design (AIK) in Dresden and the Hochschule für Grafik und Buchkunst in Leipzig, graduating in Type Design in 2009. During his time at HGB Leipzig Peter has been developing a special interest in historical, economical and technical aspects of Latin printing types. Peter currently lives and works in Leipzig.

—Frederik Berlaen is a typographic designer with a love for programming and scripting. After studying graphic design at Sint-Lucas in Ghent, he went to the KABK in The Hague to study type design, completing his Master's degree in 2006. His final project at KABK was an application — Kalliculator — which studies the broad nib and pointed pen and enables the user to generate thousands of typefaces. Berlaen's multidisciplinary practice TypeMyType is based in Gent, Belgium, where he also teaches.

—Valentin Brustaux from Switzerland graduated from the Ecole des arts décoratifs de Genève in 2000. He went on to work as an independent graphic designer, exploring his passion for graphic design but also increasingly getting involved with type. In 2007 he completed his MA in Typeface Design at the University of Reading, UK.

Swiss design company B.u.l.b grafix (Mathien Christe & Nicholay Baker) used OurType Arnhem in combination with Apex Sans from Village and Maple from Process Type throughout their print and web design for 50JPG (Fifty Days for Photography), an event in Geneva, 2010.

MR. dr. J.W.M. Engels

De publieke opinie oefent regelmatig kritiek uit op de hoogte van de lokale lasten, die per gemeente verschillen. Kunnen gemeentelijke belastingen maar beter worden afgeschafft? Zeker niet. Verschillen in de lokale belastingdruk zijn namelijk

DEN HAAG - De gemeentelijke belastingen hebben een slechte pers. Elk jaar worden lijstjes geplaatst met de gemeenten die de hoogste en de laagste lasten hebben. De gemeenten worden door gaan verweten dat zij de burger meer onverantwoord uitgaagendragt geld uit de zak kloppen. Belastingvermindering is de raamtafel van de Vierde gang. Eigen huis, man ook. Kamerdeinen, ministers en andere betrokkenen hameren er vooropdat op verschillen tussen gemeenten wat betreft belastingdruk worden mogelijk dienen te zijn, zodat de publieke opinie lijkt lokale verschillen steeds lateren financieren. De lokale lasten moeten dan verdelen, en heel erg schaamt zijn lastenvoorstel niet worden om verschillende redenen in zijn verdedigen niet voor alternatief gekozen in de eerste plaats is het verdeelingsmechanisme van het gemeentefonds niet perfect in praktijk. Het is een goed bedoeld maar beschikbaar geld immers een miljard per jaar, zo tussen de gemeenten te verdelen, dat elijke staat zijn bij eenzelfde belastingdruk en gelijktijdig voorzieningengenomen. De gemeenten kunnen dan maar weer ongeveer eveneens verschillen in deelbelastingsgehademmerd, van de lokale heffingskosten en heffingscapaciteit moeten wachten. Hoewel dit systeem onlangs nog is ingevoerd, is nog lang niet alles wat een gemeente moet kunnen (nog) doen. En dat is natuurlijk een illustratie dat het mogelijk is om met alle relevante factoren rekening te houden. Het gemeentelijke belastingfonds moet dus een goede basis kunnen vormen voor andere middelen te verenigen. Een tweede angaam van voor een gemeentencommissie is om deze toetsvoering van deelbelastingen mogelijk te maken. Daarbij moet de gemeenschappelijkheid worden uitgedrukt in de druk op de lokale lasten niet te uitoefenen, wellicht ook in de gemeentelijke lasten, waaronder afnamebelasting (bijvoorbeeld met marktwaarde verrelijsting) van diensten. De brengt ons bij misschien wel de langstekende reden voor het bestaan van het gemeentelijke belastingfond: de mogelijkheid om ongelijke lasten te voorkomen. Deelbelastingen zijn uiteraard belangrijk, maar de gemeentebelasting moet ook een lokale bevoegdheid zijn. Om dat te bereiken moet de lokale bevoegdheid worden uitgedrukt in de lokale lasten, maar dat kan alleen in de steden blijven: er gelijke lasten voor de gemeenten in de steden in verhouding tot de lokale bevoegdheid. Belastingvermindering moet de burgemeesters en gemeenten zelf mede de lokale bevoegdheid kunnen toepassen. Deelbelastingen kunnen in de steden wellicht een goede basis vormen voor deelbelastingen in de andere gemeenten.

Het voorstel voor de lokale lasten moet deelbelastingen mogelijk maken. Deelbelastingen kunnen in de steden wellicht een goede basis vormen voor deelbelastingen in de andere gemeenten.

The Arnhem typeface was originally designed for the Staatcourant, the Dutch government's official newspaper. Redesign proposal by Werkplaats Typografie Arnhem, 1999.

Buffalo,
NY, USA

Since
1994

P22 is a foundry specializing in typefaces related to art and type design history. Its founders, Richard Kegler and Carima El-Behairy, also run a number of labels to accommodate specific typeface collections: IHOF (International House of Fonts), Lanston Type Company, Rimmer Type Foundry, and Sherwood Type. They have published books and music CDs, and are involved in the WNY Book Arts Center in downtown Buffalo.

—Why?

P22 started as a venue to create digital fonts based on historical lettering styles that may have never been fonts originally. Artists' handwriting became a specialty, but many famous styles of art and design history have been adapted for modern use as well as contemporary designs.

—Richard Kegler is the senior partner and founder of P22 type foundry. For years before P22 became a "real" type designing entity, Mr. Kegler had been involved in various aspects of the book arts ranging from hand-binding and hand printing to hypertext. His varied interest in the history and processes of art and design initially seemed to have little in common with interests in up-and-coming technologies, but more and more there seemed to be much common ground that could be found. This meeting of old and new has become the premise of P22's collection of fonts. With so much history overlooked and so much potential for new technologies, Mr. Kegler sees no limit to future projects.

Since
2001

PampaType is a digital foundry set up in 2001 with the idea of developing high quality typefaces with a Latin flavor. PampaType is run by Argentinian type and information designer Alejandro Lo Celso. After a decade in Mexico the foundry relocated to Argentina in 2010.

Info

—Why?

To create high quality types with a particularly Latin flavor.

People

—Alejandro Lo Celso is an independent information and type designer born in Cordoba, Argentina. He holds a MA in type design from the University of Reading (UK) and a postgraduate from the Atelier National de Recherche Typographique (Nancy, France). In 2001 he founded the PampaType foundry which pioneered the type design wave in Latin America. His internationally awarded type families are usually large, and they include both text and display fonts. Alejandro is regularly invited to give talks and workshops, and he is a visiting lecturer at a number of schools in Argentina, Mexico, and France. He is a member of ATypI and the Círculo de Tipógrafos in Mexico.

Greece

2001

The Parachute foundry was set up in 1999 by Panos Vassiliou after he decided to turn his passion for design and typography into a profession. Since then, twelve designers have joined in to form a select group of open-minded, free-spirited individuals. Apart from being the major font supplier to most publishing houses and advertising agencies in Greece, Parachute has built a strong network of valuable relationships with international clients such as Disney, Ikea, MTV Networks, Nike, Penguin Group, PepsiCo, Random House, Samsung, Time Warner and many more.

Info

People

—Why?

There was a lack of professional contemporary typefaces in Greece. Combined with a great demand from the advertising and publishing industry, this allowed us to eventually turn a hobby into a profession.

—Panos Vassiliou studied Applied Science and Engineering at the University of Toronto. In the years transitioning from engineering to typography, he became involved with a theater company, founded a design studio and pursued a teaching career. A few years later he started a publishing company. He has designed typefaces since 1993, including commercial fonts as well as custom solutions for national and international companies. He is regularly invited as a guest speaker to conferences and seminars, to speak on typography and related topics. His design work has won him several international awards.

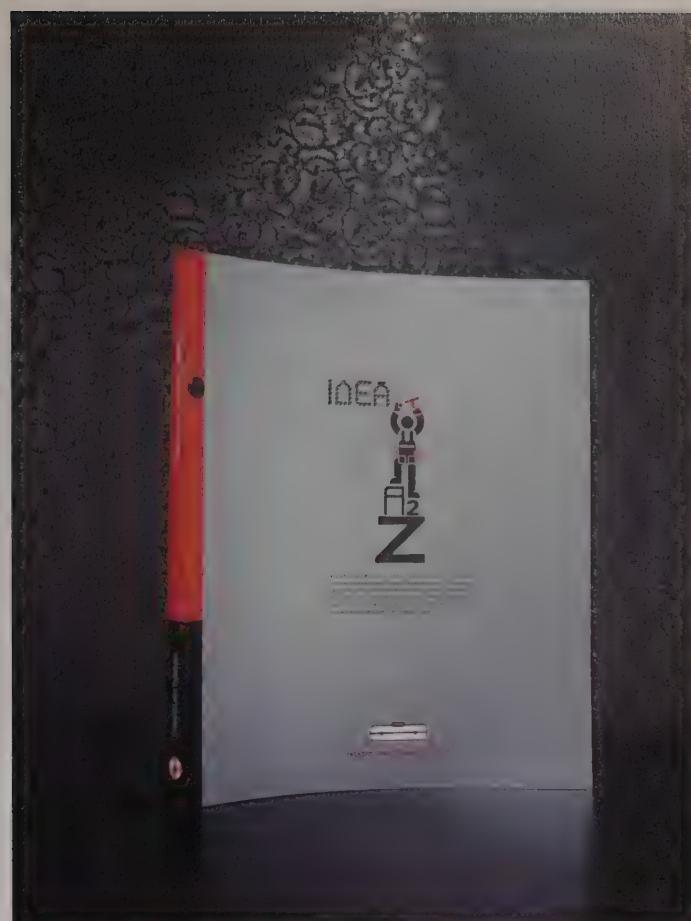

—Charis Tsevis holds a Diploma of Graphic Design from the Akademie für das Grafische Gewerbe, Munich, and an MA in Visual Design from the Scuola Politecnica di Design, Milano. His client list includes Toyota, Time, Fortune, Los Angeles Times, Panorama, Epoca and many more. Charis has been an associate professor of Editorial Design and Typography at the AKTO College of Art and Design in Athens since 1996. His awards include ED (Europe), NPSA (USA) and EBGE (Greece).

Since
2002–2010

Playtype is the type foundry set up by e-Types, a Copenhagen agency for brand strategy, graphic design and image campaigns. The font collection is the result of over 20 years of type design, with many typefaces never having been publicly available until recently. Originally formed in 2002 as e-Types' platform for font development, Playtype relaunched in 2010, opening the temporary PLAYTYPE™ concept store in Copenhagen.

—Why?

Because we love typography. We want to spread the love for type, and we believe there is a need to spread type on platforms that are not just purely functional sites for geeks, but make type attractive, accessible & playful. Typography is a way of living.

—Jonas Hecksher, partner and creative director of e-Types, holds a degree from Danmarks Designskole (Denmark's School of Design) and École supérieure d'arts graphiques et d'architecture, Paris, where he specialized in graphic and typographic design. He co-founded e-Types in 1997, where he has worked ever since with a wide range of projects within corporate visual identity, typography, newspaper and magazine design as well as art-related projects and catalogs. Recently he has been responsible for a wide range of corporate identity and other large-scale design projects. He has won numerous awards, and Denmark's leading business weekly has ranked him among Denmark's 100 most talented people under the age of 35.

—Jens Kajus, partner and creative director of e-Types, graduated from Danmarks Designskole (Denmark's School of Design) in 1996, specializing in graphic and typographic design. He joined e-Types in 1998, where he has worked ever since with a wide range of projects within corporate visual identity, typography, newspaper and magazine design as well as art-related projects and catalogs. Recently he has been responsible for a wide range of corporate identity and other large-scale design projects. He has won numerous awards and is one of the few Danish designers that have been nominated for a silver award at the British D&AD.

—Jean François Porchez

As a type designer, then a type director, Jean François Porchez's expertise covers both the design of bespoke typefaces and logotypes as well as the distribution of his fonts. As honorary President of the Association Typographique Internationale, he regularly conducts type design workshops and is a frequent speaker at conferences. He founded the French-language community website Le Typographe in 2003. He was awarded the Prix Charles Peignot in 1998 and has won numerous other prizes for his typefaces.

The Retiro typeface was designed to lend a unique voice to Madriz, a city magazine distributed in high class places in Madrid. The layout takes its cues from women's magazines with a touch of Iberian vernacular. Porchez drew a hispanic Didot-style alphabet enhanced by flourishes that recall ornamental styles from Southern Spain. 2006–2009.

Different from anything Jean François Porchez has designed in the past. Allumi is a sleek sans-serif designed with technology in mind. Pushed to the extreme, the Allumi shapes are neither perfectly round or geometrically square. It's a human design with a high tech touch. Porchez describes Allumi as "the Eurostyle of the new century, mixed with Frutiger."

Ambroise is Porchez' interpretation of various types belonging to the late Didot style. It borrows some of its peculiar details from typefaces conceived circa 1830 by the Didots' punchcutter Vibert. Each variation of the typeface carries a name in homage to a member of the illustrious Didot family.

The Apolline typeface family was created in 1993 by Jean François Porchez as a means to study the transition from Renaissance writing to the first printing types. Since its first inception, the family has been updated and expanded more than once.

—Ramiro Espinoza became interested in type design while studying at the Universidad Nacional del Litoral in Santa Fe, Argentina. After graduation he taught Typography at the Universidad de Buenos Aires under the direction of Silvia González. In 2003 he moved to the Netherlands and studied at the KABK in The Hague. Since then he has been a contributor to TipoGráfica and Tiyo design magazines, researched vernacular Dutch lettering and worked on numerous freelance assignments for FontShop International. In 2007 he founded the ReType type foundry to market his typefaces.

—David Quay studied graphic communication at Ravensbourne College of Art & Design from 1963-67. For the next seven years he worked in various leading London design companies as a packaging and graphic designer. In 1975 he became a freelance designer specializing in lettering and logotypes. In 1987 he formed his own company David Quay Design to concentrate on graphic and typographic design. He also began to design his first text typefaces which were subsequently released by The International Typeface Corporation in New York and Berthold in Germany. Since 1989 he has worked closely with Freda Sack on a broad range of type projects. In 1990 they co-founded The Foundry to design, manufacture and market their own exclusive typefaces.

David Quay lectures extensively in typography and type design both in the UK and internationally. He now works from his studio in Amsterdam as an independent type and graphic designer.

—Yomar Augusto is one of the brightest stars on the new Latin American graphic design scene. He has a Bachelor's degree from the University of Rio de Janeiro and an MA in Type Design from the KABK in The Hague. He has been involved in two Rojo ArtStorm projects and been published by Taschen in Contemporary Graphic Design, which showcases 100 of the world's most progressive designers. He took part in the Letter Forest art show held at Nanzuka Underground Gallery in Tokyo, Japan, which featured experiments in calligraphy, painting, drawing and printmaking. He runs his studio in Rotterdam and teaches design at the WDKA Academy in the same city.

ReType is an independent type foundry run by Ramiro Espinoza. The company has a keen interest in Dutch vernacular alphabets and lettering, and correspondingly, the first typefaces released related to these styles. Since then, more complex and ambitious projects have been completed, and the library has grown with the addition of classic type families oriented to editorial and corporate markets. ReType's philosophy pays tribute to type design traditions, with a hint of humor.

Shinntype

Nick Shinn,
Karey Shinn

Orangeville,
Canada

1998

Shinntype is the type foundry run by designer Nick Shinn in close collaboration with his partner, artist Karey Shinn. Besides the collection of retail fonts, Shinntype undertakes custom work, most notably a typeface to commemorate the author Mordecai Richler, and custom types for newspapers such as the Birmingham News (Alabama), Daily Mail (London), Chicago Tribune and Globe and Mail (Toronto).

Info

—Why?

By the mid 1990s, several of my type designs had been published by companies such as FontFont and Agfa (now Monotype), earning a modest sum in royalties which, along with some teaching and writing assignments, supplemented my main income as graphic designer. But I also had a number of rejections, of faces that I considered to be perfectly acceptable. So I determined in 1999 to start my own foundry and publish whatever I saw fit. This was feasible due to two recent inventions, Dreamweaver, which enabled me to design the Shinntype site and establish a web presence, and Makambo, the original online font distributor, which sold licenses for any font I chose to upload (this was before the launch of MyFonts).

People

—Nick Shinn was born in London, England, and acquired a Dip.AD in Fine Art from Leeds Polytechnic, Yorkshire in 1974. He lived in Toronto from 1976 to 2009, before moving to Orangeville, 60 km north of that city. During the 1980s he was an art director and creative director at a number of advertising agencies, and a founding partner in the environmental marketing company Earthmark from 1988 to 1990. He went digital in 1989 and started the Shinn Design studio, which specialized in publication and marketing design during the 1990s. Between 1980 and 1998 he designed seven type families for a variety of foundries, most notably Fontesque, Merlin and Oneleigh for FontFont. In 1998 he went into the font business full time, launching Shinntype to publish and market his fonts worldwide. Shinn's background as an artist, writer, art director and graphic designer informs his eclectic type designs, which run the gamut from revivals to experimental work exploring new technology. As a departure from designing original types, Shinn worked from 2004 to 2008 designing the Modern Suite, a set of 19th century revivals extended into the 21st century with massive OpenType features and language support, including Polytonic Greek and Cyrillic.

Shinn has written for magazines such as Applied Arts, Druk, Eye, Graphic Exchange, Marketing and Typographic, has spoken at the ATypI, TypeCon, Graphika and TypoBerlin conferences, and taught at Seneca College, Humber College and York University in Toronto. From 2002 to 2006 he served as a board member of the Society of Typographic Aficionados (SOTA), which puts on the international conference TypeCon every year, helping bring it to Toronto in 2002.

—Karey Shinn (néé Asselstine) has a BA in Fine Art from Leeds Polytechnic, and an MA in Art from Norwich University. She is an artist, designer and environmental activist. Nick and Karey frequently collaborate with their son Eric and daughter Zoë on Karey's art projects, most recently In Bitu, a couture/art/dance work that premiered at FAT (Toronto Alternative Arts & Fashion Week) in 2010, which featured couture designed by Karey, graphics and typography by Nick, music by Eric, and choreography by Zoë.

Nick Shinn's Panoptica type family is a series of stylistically diverse fonts based on the same principle — a skeleton that is monospaced as well as unicase. In other words, all fonts have characters which occupy the same width and mix upper- and lowercase. The original version of Panoptica was designed for Diamonds, a book of concrete poetry by Christian Bök, for which the author needed a monospaced typeface to obtain a regular grid that was vertical as well as horizontal.

Storm Type

František Štorm

Prague,
Czech Republic

Since
1993

František Štorm founded the Storm Type foundry with the aim of restoring the values of classical typography for the benefit of digital technologies. “We started by drawing alphabets which could be used in book printing, then we proceeded to alphabets for film- and photosetting and nowadays, in the era of computers, we use the experience we have gained to make digital typefaces more human.” When digitizing original Czech typefaces, Storm Type collaborates with experienced designers Otakar Karlas, Jan Solpera and Josef Tyfa.

—Why?

In 1993 I got my first computer, and the fonts on it were all wrong and I had no budget for buying good new ones. Hence, I had to create my own for my graphic design jobs.

—František Štorm graduated in 1991 at the Academy of Arts, Architecture and Design in Prague, under professor Jan Solpera. Between 2003–2008 he taught at the same school, and now freelances. Štorm’s passion is Baroque Typography (sometimes referred to as “transitional”, which is misleading. After spending a decade in libraries studying ancient prints, he designed Regent, Antique Ancienne and Jannon. His later serious projects are based on this initial research and have the same focus: the substantial development of beautiful Latin alphabets finished in the late 18th century — all later “improvements” are only minor technological and esthetic variations.

František Štorm, griffins (woodcuts). Štorm cut countless variations of this mythical beast, making it an ever-evolving symbol of his foundry.

—Why?

We founded Sudtipos shortly after the big Argentinian economical crisis of 2001, as an alternative to our graphic design work for which there was a very low demand.

—Ale Paul is one of the founders of the Sudtipos project, the first Argentinian type foundry collective. Ale's career as an art director landed him in some of Argentina's most prestigious studios, handling such high-profile corporate brands as Arcor, Procter & Gamble, SC Johnson, Danone and others. With the founding of Sudtipos in 2002, Ale shifted his efforts to typeface design, creating fonts and lettering for several top packaging agencies, along with producing retail typefaces.

—Diego Giaccone graduated as a graphic designer from the Architecture Design and Urbanism University of Buenos Aires (FADU-UBA). In 2002 he won the Konex Award, one of Argentina's most prestigious design prizes. Diego also speaks on design, typography and packaging. He was design director at the major Argentinian branding agencies and is currently running his own firm SureBranding.

—Angel Koziupa has been a lettering artist for the past 40 years, creating type and designing dozens of logos. His handiwork is behind nearly every important packaging logotype in Argentina. He worked for McCann Erickson for 35 years and has produced work as a freelancer for other major agencies like Interbrand, Futurebrand and others.

The Clash en concierto, lo mejor del Punk Rock en River.

Gothic Revival architecture became increasingly significant in the period, leading to the Battle of the Styles between Gothic & Classical ideals. I know there are tons of great apartment buildings in Park Slope and other neighborhoods. Some of them are quite impressive, some historic, and some by major architects. Ale Paul designed Piel Script in reaction to requests he received to adapt his earlier script fonts for use in tattoos. The result is a sensitive and stylish script for "personal branding". Piel is Spanish for skin.

—Why?

Originally I licensed my fonts to foundries like T26, Monotype, Linotype and ITC, but then figured that I should sell them myself. But I'm way too lazy to build a site with an online purchasing function, so I've licensed my fonts through sites like MyFonts, YWFT, Fonts.com and FontHouse.

—Tomi Haaparanta studied Graphic Design at the University of Industrial Arts in Helsinki, and at the National College of Art and Design in Dublin, where he discovered type design during a short course held by Phil Baines. He still holds a grudge against Baines for that.

Haaparanta has been making typefaces for the past twenty years now, and his computer now holds some three to four hundred typefaces and families, some of which are a great embarrassment to the designer. He has a background as an art director in various agencies, and as a type designer at HEL, where he designed numerous typefaces for Finnish and international clients, including Protokid for Diesel Industries Kids wear department. HEL also produced a few typefaces of their own: the War font set and Denim set are distributed by T26.

Tomi Haaparanta has taught type design at the University of Industrial Arts in Helsinki for the past four years. He works as a graphic designer at Taivas Design, a brand design agency in Helsinki.

Tomi Haaparanta Helsinki, Finland

Since
2004

Having released typefaces through Linotype, Monotype, ITC, T26 and Psy/Ops, Tomi Haaparanta launched his own foundry in January 2004, naming it after his country — Suomi, Finland. The philosophy of Suomi Type Foundry is to make extensive type families to give users a wide range of weights to choose from. “In order not to exclude any users, we try to keep the range of our type library as versatile as possible, from comfortable types for text setting, to signage type families, to more evocative fonts for brand design. And sometimes stuff just for fun.”

Since
2006

Veronika Burian and José Scaglione, who met at the University of Reading whilst completing their MAs in Type Design, joined forces in 2006 to set up their independent type foundry TypeTogether. Besides their own designs they have published typefaces by Eduardo Berliner, Bart Blubaugh, David Březina, Pilar Cano, Nicolien van der Keur, Gerard Unger and others. In 2010 they launched a side project with David Březina: Rosetta type foundry, specializing in multi-script fonts that include non-Latin scripts such as Arabic and Cyrillic.

Info

—Why?

TypeTogether developed out of the desire to publish high quality typefaces and work on new type projects together (hence the name). Our main interest was and still is to find innovative and stylish solutions to old problems for the professional market of text typefaces, with a focus on editorial use. This is where the greatest challenges are faced: creating typefaces that perform well in continuous reading, and that also have a high degree of personality.

People

—Veronika Burian, born in Prague, got her first degree in Industrial Design in Munich, Germany, before she moved on to Austria and Italy to work as a mix between a product and graphic designer. Discovering her true passion for type, she graduated with distinction from the MA in Typeface Design in Reading, UK, in 2003 and started to work as full-time type designer at DaltonMaag in London.

After a 3-year stay in Boulder, Colorado, she is currently living and working in Prague and dedicates her time fully to TypeTogether. She continues to give lectures and workshops at international conferences and universities. Her typeface Maiola received, among others, the TDC Certificate of Excellence in Type Design 2004. Several other typefaces by TypeTogether have also been recognised by international competitions.

—José Scaglione is an Argentinian graphic and multimedia designer, and a graduate from the MA in Typeface Design at the University of Reading, UK. He has been working in branding, editorial design and multimedia projects since 1995. He was co-founder of the Vision Media Design Studio in Argentina and art director at Multiplicity Advertising and The Prepaid Press in USA. In addition to his work for TypeTogether, José runs his own design studio, and consults and lectures on typography and graphic communication matters. He also teaches typography at post-graduate level at the National University of Rosario. José is a board member of ATypI (Association Typographique Internationale) and was appointed Chairman of Letter.2, the second international typeface design competition by ATypI.

family. Although he never digitized all of them, he used them as a base for a large Czech typeface project.

Several years ago, a short film directed by Jan Šelplář, one of the most famous designers working in Czechoslovakia at the time, showed the contradiction created by modern type designers working in a medieval environment. The film's title was Medieval Type. The contradiction created the framework for many of the typefaces that appear in the exhibition. Pavel Jedlicka's Medieval runs low, Marek Pistora's Merkur is a Merkur typeface from a child's toy toolkit, and Plastic, where inspiration comes from a typical boy's hobby of the 1980s: building plasticine faces inspired by an alert that pops up on a Macintosh screen.

Other typefaces by Pistora left the academy and were produced by the authors Petr Krejzek, Klára Kvízová, and later on Radim Peško. Zivé magazine was part of the alternative visual culture in the Czech Republic in the 1990s. Like the magazine Reflex mentioned earlier, Zivé was a communication platform for a younger generation, devoted to articles about artificial intelligence, new technologies, the beauty of the abject, street culture, sex, alcohol, drug culture, consumer culture and other subjects relevant to life. There was a visible contrast to the subterranean style of previous design generation, and the Zivé group often compensated this difference by playing with a fascination with what was aboveground.

Tempera Biblio is a serif text typeface with a difference. Instead of offering contrasting weights such as Light and Bold, it comes in three variations of the book weight: Book A, Book B and Book C. These are subtly different in color, so that they can be varied according to technical circumstances and point sizes.

—Why?

We evolved from a graphic design studio which was working increasingly on type related issues. Typolar builds on the Scandinavian tradition of sturdy functionalism and hands-in-mud craftsmanship.

—Jarno Lukkarila, founder: "My interest in fonts started just from working with type and eventually moved into font design. Somehow there was no turning back for me; it dragged me in. I went to study at the Royal Academy of Art in The Hague where my class was spoiled, for instance with a lettering workshop by Gerrit Noordzij in 2000. After graduation in The Hague and studies in the University of Industrial Arts in Helsinki (now Aalto University), I set up my own studio. With some encouraging push from customers and font users, it has gradually evolved into type designers' collective."

—Saku Heinänen lives in Helsinki and works as a graphic designer and type designer. In the past years, he has been involved in many editorial designs, magazine launches and redesigns. He has created visual identities for companies, organizations and events.

Saku has been teaching at the Graphic Design faculty of Aalto University, Helsinki, Finland. His responsibilities are typography, type design and publication design. Saku also lectures and runs workshops elsewhere for educational purposes.

Calypso E is an updated interpretation of a Neo-grotesque model Egyptian with a hint of humanist lightness in its forms. This lends the typeface an authoritative tone without an authoritarian tang. Its seriously big x-height, square basic form and sturdy serifs create firm text regardless of the weight.

"The Northern European type collaboration Typolar builds on the Scandinavian tradition of sturdy functionalism. For us it means clever type families built on fresh ideas. Working closely with the publishing industry has made our fonts ideally suited for editorial work. Moreover, many have found them a great fit in branding and identities. And that's how we like it. Besides design, our members also teach, run workshops, and write. At the moment we are based in London and Helsinki."

Altis combines geometric regularity and soulfulness into one font family. It resembles the traditional sans-serif of the early twentieth century, which communicates in a friendly tone and reads extremely well. Altis has been developed to fit present-day editorial conditions and publishing models.

Typotheque is a type foundry based in The Hague, Netherlands, developing and marketing original fonts for Mac and PC. Typotheque aims to continue the tradition of independent type foundries, contributing its tiny bit to the continuous sequence of type history, creating quality typefaces that respond to needs. In addition to developing the retail library, Typotheque specializes in creating custom type solutions for a variety of applications and languages. The Typotheque website is made to inspire and provide valuable information on type, design, and related matters.

For more than ten years the pan-European design collective Underware has been creating versatile fonts, surfing the waves, conducting type workshops, running the radio station Typeradio, throwing cannon balls, experimenting with blood, practicing kamikaze chess; but mostly, they gave flowers to their mothers and turned them into cover girls. Which resulted in everlasting smiles on their faces.

Underwear invited Orange Sunshine to record a 7-inch rock record, inspired by the typeface Fakir. For the sleeve, designers and rockers were invited to propose a design. Out of 80 entries, an international jury selected Supergabi's design as the official Fakir Rock sleeve winner.

Ambiguity poster (Yes-No) designed using Liza.

Underwear had its early specimens designed by renowned Dutch designers Wout de Vringer (Dolly, previous page) and Piet Schreunders (Sauna, above and right).

—Why?

A long time ago Donald® sold his soul to the devil and went commercial. Donald® started earning big money, as you could tell from his weight, his body becoming fatter and fatter. His love for type designing followed him, caught up with him then brought him back to earth. Inspired by his weight and his fascination for cheap (fast food) restaurants, Donald® founded VetteLetters.

Single weights mostly $35 and $15 for every next weight.

—Donald® Roos (founder/boss)

After a wonderful career as a dishwasher, assistant cook, some kind of designer, and last but not least type designer, Donald is now one of the CEOs of VetteLetters. VetteLetters is the tastiest font foundry in the universe. Donald enjoys working together with the other Donald (also CEO of VetteLetters).

—Donald DBXL Beekman is “the other Donald” as well as the other CEO of VetteLetters.

Donald Beekman produces as many typefaces as Prince makes records. Well, maybe not that many, but a lot. Too many to handle for VetteLetters alone. So he has also published fonts at FontFont and Gestalten Fonts, but the big money comes from VetteLetters. That’s why he is a partner!

—Jacques “Sardines” Le Bailly, also known as the Baron von Fonhausen. Before becoming a Baron he worked for Linotype designing and implementing the euro sign in over 300 fonts. The Baron likes working on large-scale projects. This is probably why he came up with NeueSardines after Sardines. NeueSardines is the biggest monospaced type family in the world. NeueSardines consists of 11 weights, 4 styles and 42 fonts!

—Martin “Martini” Lorenz is a German designer, working in the lovely climate of Barcelona, Spain. He enjoys paella and other fresh seafood. He also runs a design office called TwoPoints, together with his wife Lupi Asensio. The good thing is, TwoPoints make their own fonts for their projects. The best news is — VetteLetters will release the TwoPoints collection!

Chester Jenkins, Tracy Jenkins

New York

Since 2008

Village was founded in 2004 by Tracy Jenkins, graphic designer, and Chester Jenkins, type designer. Launched four years later, the Incubator is the place for promising unpublished designers' work. Several of the types Village is publishing through the Incubator were thesis projects at the type design courses in The Hague or Reading, and needed a little bit of technical tightening and gentle design guidance. Incubator designers receive advice and sometimes collaboration from Village members.

Info

—Why?

When Tracy was completing her Master's degree in New Haven, Connecticut, we knew we would be moving to New York. It was a perfect time to put together an idea Chester had had several years before for a kind of union of young-ish (sub-35-year-old) independent 1-person foundries. We would be a kind of loose co-operative, with sharing of technical knowledge and decision-making. The Incubator was created to allow us to work with a larger group of upcoming designers within the Village structure.

Since graduating with distinction in Graphic Design from Saint Martin's School of Art and the Royal College of Art in London, Jonathan Barnbrook has developed a multifaceted practice that includes activism, graphic design, typeface design, industrial design and motion graphics. Barnbrook founded his design studio, Barnbrook Design, in 1990. His typefaces were originally released through Californian innovators Emigre. In 2010 his best known typeface, Mason, released by Emigre, became one of the first digital acquisitions of the Museum of Modern Art, New York. Additionally his stone carving is on permanent display at the 20th century gallery in the Victoria and Albert Museum. In 1997 he established his own font company VirusFonts, releasing well-known fonts such as Bastard and Tourette. In 2007, his contribution to British graphic design was recognized with a major retrospective exhibition at the Design Museum in London entitled Friendly Fire. At the same time, a monograph of his work, Barnbrook Bible, was published by Booth-Clibborn Editions. In 2008 he was given a honorary doctorate by Staffordshire University for services to typography. During 2009, the exhibition Collateral Damage presented a retrospective of Barnbrook's more political design output, travelling to multiple countries including France, Slovenia and Croatia.

Stone carving by Barnbrook.

Double-page spread from Barnbrook Bible, Booth-Clibborn Editions, 2007. Edited and designed by Barnbrook, the book is the most complete survey of the studio's work.

In his 1942 essay THE MYTH OF SISYPHUS, Albert Camus conducts a philosophical exploration of the absurd using the analogy of Sisyphus who, in Greek mythology, was condemned to forever repeat the same meaningless task of pushing a rock up a mountain, only to see it roll down again. Camus is interested in whether or not Sisyphus knows and understands his fate, leading the reader to extrapolate that consciousness of the futility of our actions, in a world devoid of meaning and God, inevitably requires suicide. Camus concludes his essay, however, with an image of Sisyphus at the foot of his underworld mountain that is unmistakably hopeful. "This universe henceforth without a master seems to him neither sterile nor futile," Camus writes. "Each atom of that stone, each mineral flake of that night-filled mountain, in itself forms a world. The struggle itself toward the heights is enough to fill a man's heart. One must imagine Sisyphus happy."

Retrospective exhibition Friendly Fire at the Design Museum, London, 2007. The exhibition title Friendly Fire reflected the studio's often political design output, and their passionate vision created from a desire to formulate a critique of their own profession and society.

—Why?

We were developing several custom headline fonts for projects and clients. We wanted to bring these fonts to the public and to give interested people the opportunity to work with them. As our interest in typography grew even bigger we began to publish those of other designers too, so Volcano Type is a platform for a lot of people now.

— Lars Harmsen was born in Hanover, Germany, and spent the first four years of his life in Chicago. His parents then moved to Geneva, Switzerland, where he learned to speak French, and then to Karlsruhe. He completed his schooling at the French section of the European School. He first studied history and Germanics in Freiburg before studying design at Basel, Boston, Saarbrücken and Pforzheim. In 1996 Harmsen founded MAGMA [Büro für Gestaltung] together with Ulrich Weiβ. He is also the co-founder of STARSHOT GmbH, a design company for sports products, now based in Munich. MAGMA created Type Foundry Volcano Type and the internet forum Slanted.de. In the meantime, Slanted has become the most active German typography forum.

— Boris Kahl (Dipl. Des.) has been art director at MAGMA Brand Design GmbH & Co. KG since 2001. Besides the daily work, he manages the font label Volcano Type and in recent years has designed some fonts for it. As co-founder of the German blog Slanted, he also contributes to the printed magazine of the same name. Since 2008, he has been art director of the type calendar "Typodarium".

— Peter Brugger trained as a screen and offset printer. He studied visual communication at the School of Design in Basel, Pforzheim University of Design and the Nova Scotia College of Art and Design in Halifax, Canada. During his studies he came into contact with MAGMA. Through this encounter, his interest in fonts was awakened. Today, he teaches typography and type design at the State Academy of Fine Arts in Stuttgart. In addition to teaching at the academy, he works as a freelance designer. Peter Brugger's work has won him numerous awards.

— Jörg Herz, originally a painter and sculptor, studied visual communication at the universities of Pforzheim and Leeds. In his graduation thesis in 1996 he studied the theme of "the chair", developing the headline font DasSitzt (Linotype), which was followed by many more fonts. His work for agencies like MetaDesign, Kochan & Partners, Argonauten and Syzygy has won him numerous awards. Since 2005 he has run the Munich agency, Coma AG.

DESIGNED BY TOBIAS GUTMANN

The GELI typeface is a mixture of digital exactness and analog freedom.

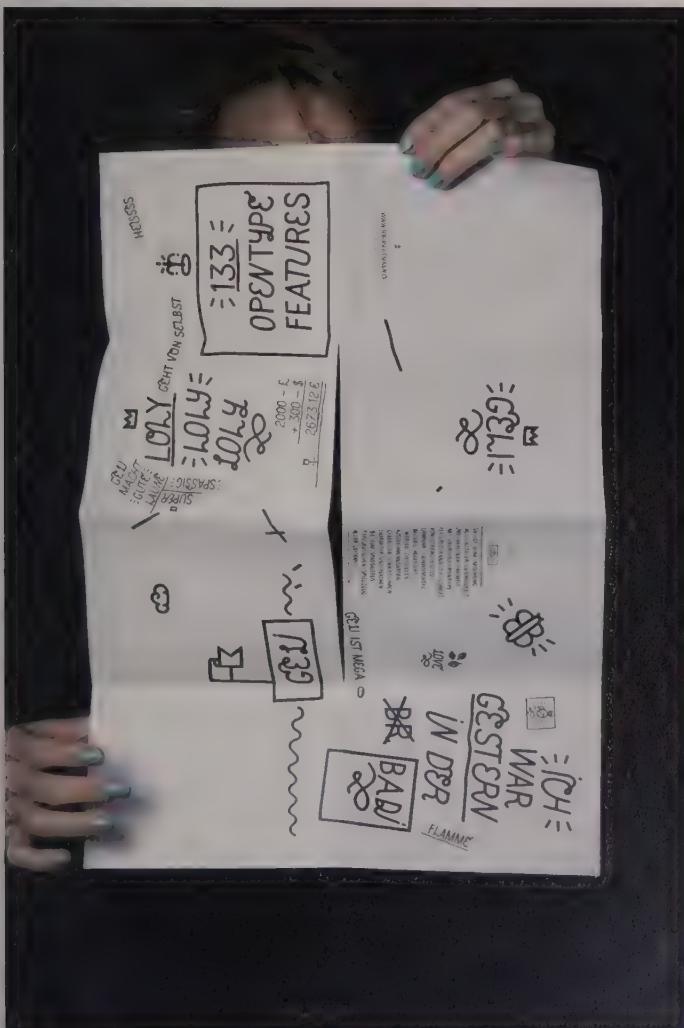

The first course, served in 1996: youthful fast food, created by chance, with thirteen organic fonts. Quickly whisked up and devoured. Uncouth forms, erupted from the bowels of the earth. Shattered letters, stressed, roughly hewn. Raw. Imperfect. The second course formed a strong contrast: tight concept, linear work, disciplined preparation. In most cases the font was formed by a matrix. Digital cool, sober, reduced. Carefully thought out, one masterminded brainchild after another. Dessert: mathematical severity is rounded off and smoothed down. Fonts between digital and analogue. Straightened rivers — the surfaces of our times.

Improvised poster made with GELI.

Left

Peter Brugger's Matryoshka is a display type family inspired by the Russian wooden doll. The design is based on an elaborate and complex grid, so that all fonts can be layered on top of each other in multiple colors.

Fraktendor by Boris Kahl, a cheeky mixture of Fraktur (blackletter) and Clarendon, used for the identity of the Tchabod Vintage Culture fashion label.

GELI offers many different ways to highlight words, which gives the font a personal character and makes it a powerful tool to play with.

The rapidly expanding online market for digital typefaces is exciting and diverse. With new fonts and type foundries launching on almost a daily basis, it has been difficult to keep track of notable developments—until now. Type Navigator is a useful current handbook of modern fonts, independent foundries, and innovative type designers, providing an overview of today's vast market.

This comprehensive publication offers a valuable overview of international sources for quality fonts as well as an annotated index of independent foundries across the globe. In addition to concise profiles of type foundries and recent typefaces, Type Navigator features abundant visuals of useful specimens and inspirational examples of fonts in use.

A free digital collection of typeface variations from choice foundries accompanies this essential reference, which has been compiled by typography experts Jan Middendorp and TwoPoints.Net.
